President and Mrs. Reagan, jointly addressing the nation Sunday night, used a patriotic appeal to launch a new anti-drug program.

Reagan orders agencies to implement drug testing

■ Government anti-drug handbook 'points to policies that worked' — 7A

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today ordered the heads of each government agency to establish mandatory drug-testing programs for "employees in sensitive positions" and endorsed a House-passed measure that provides the death penalty for some drug-related offenses.

"This is the federal government's way of just saying 'no' to drugs," the president said, taking a line from his wife as he signed an executive order and sent his own legislative package to Congress, which is rushing to enact new measures to combat drug abuse before the November elections.

Officials said they could not estimate how many of the government's 2.8 million civilian employees would be affected, but some published reports have put the number as high as 1.1 million.

Reagan, unveiling his own plan for combating drug use as Congress rushes to enactment legislation of its own before the November elections, said he would allocate $500 million in additional spending for law enforcement and drug interdiction efforts in the Southwest border region and in the Southeast. He earmarked $100 million to help local schools eradicate drug use and a like amount in grants to the states to enhance drug abuse treatment facilities.

One day after joining his wife, Nancy, in exhorting Americans to "rise up together in defiance against this cancer of drugs," Reagan proposed legislation and administrative steps that would add nearly $900 million in additional resources to combat drub abuse, bringing the cost of all federal anti-drug programs to $3.2 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The president said that all the money would be redirected from other federal projects and that no new appropriations would be necessary.

The House has approved a $2 billion package of antidrug measures, including establishment of the death penalty for some drug-related crimes and assignment of a bigger role for the military in combatting the flow of illegal drugs into the country.

Reversing his position as announced by a spokesman last week, Reagan endorsed the provision in the House bill providing for the death penalty "for those who intentionally cause death while committing an offense" under what is known as the "drug kingpin" law.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes had said Reagan favored use of the death penalty for some drug-related crimes but would not propose it in order to avoid controversy that could block adoption of his other proposals.

The bill Reagan submitted today also would increase the maximum prison term for large-scale drug trafficking to life for a second offense and broaden the scope of existing legislation to include the sale of cocaine and marijuana.

The bill contains mandatory prison terms for large-scale drug traffickers if a person dies as a result of using drugs supplied by them, and it would toughen the Controlled Substances Act to provide mandatory fines for offenders convicted of drug possession and mandatory prison terms for those convicted of second or subsequent offenses.

Announcing his commitment to "a drug-free federal workplace," Reagan said, "The use of illegal drugs by current or prospective federal employees will not be tolerated."

He said those caught using drugs will be subject to penalties ranging from private reprimands to suspension. Federal employees in "sensitive positions," as defined by their agency heads, "will not be permitted to remain on duty" if they are found to use illegal drugs.

All employees found to be using drugs will be referred for counseling, treatment or rehabilitation under an executive order issued by the president.

The order establishes some restrictions on mandatory testing but leaves it to the agency head to decide who may be ordered to undergo urinalysis or other examinations to check for drug use.

"Testing procedures must include notification 60 days prior to the start of a drug testing program, an opportunity to submit documentation to support legitimate medical use of drugs and procedures to protect the confidentiality of test results and medical records," a White House statement said. "Testing procedures must allow individual privacy, unless the agency has reason to believe that a particular individual may alter or substitute the specimen."

Loren Siegel, special assistant to the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, predicted that Reagan's order will be challenged quickly and successfully.

MISD to again appeal Bunton's order

MISD Board President Bill Jackson explains the decision to appeal Judge Lucius Bunton's ruling, saying the board believes the seven single-member district system "is not in the best interest of Midland."

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District, for the second time this year, will appeal U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's order to implement a seven single-member district school board, trustees said today.

Bunton last Wednesday ordered that the MISD implement a seven single-member district plan for electing school trustees.

The case now will be returned to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans for reconsideration.

The decision to appeal followed an executive session with MISD Attorney Charles Tighe.

The district currently has seven at-large positions.

In his judgment, Bunton ordered abandonment of the multi-member district and rejected the MISD's proposed 4-3 plan for four single-member districts and three at-large positions.

The judge also rejected MISD's alternate 2-5 plan for two single-member districts and five at-large positions.

The judgment stemmed from a lawsuit filed against the school district by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council.

The groups claim that the school district's present election set-up and its proposals were unconstitutional and diluted the voting power of minorities and denied them effective representation.

MISD Board President Bill Jackson explained the decision to appeal, saying the board believes the seven single-member district system "is not in the best interest of Midland, its schools or its citizens" and that the electoral system "is for the legislative body, that is, the (MISD) to determine, rather than the Plaintiffs and/or the Courts."

He said trustees believe "the 7-0 system is a throw back to the ward system and will encourage geographic factionalization and special interests instead of a broad view based on what it best for all."

LULAC President Edia Hernandez said she is "disappointed that we'll have to wait, heaven knows, indefinitely" for a decision.

But she added she is confident that the appellate court will affirm Bunton's decision.

Cuban prisoners arrive in Miami

(AP) — A plane carrying more than 100 Cubans, including some jailed since Fidel Castro seized power 27 years ago, arrived here today on a flight to freedom that followed two years of negotiations.

The 111 people, among them the nephew of a former president, made up one of the largest single groups of Cubans to arrive in the United States in years. Many seemed on the verge of tears as they went through the Miami International Airport terminal.

"I can say I'm in my country," said Rene Gonzalez Herrera, an elderly man in a wheelchair, after getting off the chartered plane. "I feel very happy after 28 years in prison."

Domingo Suarez Espinosa, whose 28-year imprisonment in a Havana prison ended just hours before the flight left Cuba, said it was hard to express the joy of being in the United States. He recalled sending his wife and two children away after Castro took over the island.

"I preferred never seeing them again rather than seeing them subjected to such a horrible system," he said.

Immigration officials had expected 117 people, 71 former or current prisoners, and the rest relatives, to arrive.

But one unidentifed prisoner died today in Havana and his wife elected to stay behind, said George Waldroup, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service here.

Another person was kept behind because he was of military age, two people were inadvertently listed twice and one name was an erroneous entry, he said.

Explosion at police headquarters fourth in Paris in a week

PARIS (AP) — A bomb exploded at police headquarters in the center of Paris today, the fourth bombing in the French capital in a week, and fire department officials said 36 people were injured, six seriously.

The explosion, which came one day after the government spelled out new anti-terrorist measures, rocked an area where driver's licenses are issued.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

President Francois Mitterrand said today the fight against terrorism is "the business of the entire nation." He praised three men who risked their lives Sunday to remove a bomb from a crowded cafe on the Champs-Elysees, one dying in the attempt and the other two suffering serious wounds.

After a wave of attacks, France announced anti-terrorism measures that include stricter visa requirements and the use of soldiers at airports, to help process visitors, and at border crossings.

The police headquarters bombed today is on the Ile de la Cite, not far from Notre Dame cathedral.

The cafe bomb Sunday exploded after being taken to an underground parking lot, killing a policeman and badly injuring another policeman and a tavern employee.

This morning, police raided Lebanese districts of the capital and its suburbs and arrested 20 people, French news reports said, citing unidentified sources. Police refused to comment.

After last week's bombings, 12 people were arrested, mostly Lebanese citizens. On Friday, the government ordered all 12 expelled from France, although attorneys for some contended their clients had no connection with terrorists or radical causes.

Mitterrand said in a statement that the courage of the three men who removed the bomb from the Pub Renault a greater tragedy.

Daniloff goes to work for first time since arrest

■ Reagan administration warns that a planned U.S.-Soviet summit may be jeopardized unless Daniloff is allowed to return home — 2A

MOSCOW (AP) — American newsman Nicholas Daniloff returned to work in his office today for the first time since he was jailed on espionage charges 16 days ago. He said negotations will go on to try to resolve his case.

Daniloff has lived at the U.S. Embassy since his conditional release from Lefortovo Prison on Friday into the custody of Charge d'Affaires Richard Combs.

The 51-year-old correspondent for U.S. News & World Report told reporters outside the embassy that he spoke today to the KGB secret police colonel handling his case.

"We had a pleasant conversation on the telephone, I mean, as pleasant as such things can be," Daniloff said. "He said I was not needed today. I promised to call tomorrow. That's the agreement, and I'll call tomorrow.

"I believe there will be active negotiations going on aimed at securing my release.

"I continue, obviously, to be a hostage for (Gennadiy) Zakharov."

He was referring to the Soviet U.N. employee arrested in New York on Aug. 23 and indicted on a spying charge roughly similar to charges the Soviets have filed against Daniloff.

The American reporter was arrested by KGB agents in a Moscow park on Aug. 30.

Daniloff visited his home Sunday night for dinner for the first time since his arrest, said his colleague at the weekly news magazine, Jeff Trimble.

WHAT IS PREVENTIVE MEDICINE TODAY?
1. It is much more than the prevention of contagious diseases!
2. It is involved in treating the patient as well as the disease; it is much easier to treat the patient before the disease occurs.
3. It is improving the immune system to make it competent through dietary control, lifestyle programs, exercise programs, relief from mental stress, and early detection of disease & malignancy.
4. A competent immune system that can be maintained will avoid most of the degenerative diseases, allergic and auto immune diseases, and many forms of cancer.
5. Lifespan can be increased along with a better quality lifestyle.
6. Lenghty illnesses and pro-longed hospitalization can be avoided.

DRUGS

"Almost every court that has looked at the constitutionality of mandatory drug-testing has ruled that at least there has to be a reasonable suspicion that a person is using drugs before urinalysis can be administered," Ms. Siegel said.

"The nation's drug problem should not be an excuse for trampling individual privacy rights," she said.

Ms. Siegel said it was ridiculous to contend that 1.1 million federal employees, nearly one-half the federal civilian workforce, hold "sensitive positions" and should be required to undergo drug tests.

"What's that say about classified information in this country — how classified is it if more than a million people have access?" she asked.

Earlier, House Majority Leader Jim Wright said, "We don't want to degenerate into some petty quarrel about who hates drugs more than the other person does.

"The president said last night that you can't just throw money at the problem. That's true. You can't just throw words at the problem either. You've got to have some money to do it right."

Both the president and first lady, in a 22-minute nationally broadcast talk Sunday night from an upstairs living room at the White House, invoked the pride in country that has been a hallmark of Reagan's rhetoric.

"In this crusade, let us not forget who we are," the president said. "Drug abuse is a repudiation of everything America is. The destructiveness and human wreckage mock our heritage."

Mrs. Reagan, speaking directly to the young in the television and radio audience, said, "Our country needs you. But it needs you to be clear-eyed and clear-minded."

The Democratic-controlled House passed an anti-drug bill with a price tag of $2 billion last week, and leaders of the Republican-controlled Senate are working on a proposal of their own. Reagan said his proposals would bring federal spending in the war on drugs to $3 billion, most of it for programs already on the books.

"As much financing as we commit, however, we would be fooling ourselves if we thought that massive new amounts of money alone will provide the solution," he said.

"Your government will continue to act aggressively, but nothing would be more effective than for Americans simply to quit using illegal drugs."

"What an insult it will be to what we are — and whence we came — if we do not rise up together in defiance against this cancer of drugs," the president said.

Attorney General Edwin Meese, appearing on the "CBS Morning News," said Reagan would seek additional penalties for drug trafficking and more controls on chemicals used in the production of drugs. He said drug testing "will be one element but it's by no means the premier element of the president's program."

White House chief of staff Donald Regan, on ABC's "Good Morning America," said testing for federal employees would involve people in sensitive positions, and that the decision on who is tested would be left up to administrative heads of agencies and departments.

"But in general that will mean law enforcement, people who have safety jobs related to that, or people who have access to classified information. They will have to be tested," Regan said.

Regan said the president's programs would cost $900,000 in new spending, and Meese said Congress had failed to give the administration all it asked for to fight drugs. But Wright countered that Reagan's budget proposals have sought to eliminate thousands of Customs Service jobs over the last four years, and that Congress rejected those moves and increased Customs and Coast Guard personnel to fight drug smuggling.

After introductory remarks by the president, Mrs. Reagan told their audience, "Many of you may be thinking: 'Well, drugs don't concern me.'"

"It does concern you — it concerns us all because of the way it tears at our lives and because it is aimed at destroying the brightness and life of the sons and daughters of the United States."

Mrs. Reagan has made the campaign against drug abuse her principal focus in the White House for five years. The president also has spoken on the issue, but has placed increasing emphasis on it in recent weeks.

Both the president and first lady posed the challenge in moral terms.

"There is no moral middle ground," said Mrs. Reagan. "Indifference is not an option. We want you to help us create an outspoken intolerance for drug use. For the sake of our children, I implore each of you to be unyielding and inflexible in your opposition to drugs."

Said the president: "We Americans have never been morally neutral against any form of tyranny. Tonight, we are asking no more than that we honor what we have been and what we are by standing together."

"I'm mindful that drugs are a constant temptation for millions," Reagan said. "Please remember this when your courage is tested: you are Americans...No one — ever — has the right to destroy your dreams and shatter your life."

CUBANS

The plane took off from Havana about an hour late and arrived at Miami at 7:00 a.m., said Waldroup.

"Glory to God, thanks to God," said Nery Tejera, whose 44-year-old brother, Samuel Tejera Milian, was among those listed as being on the flight.

The Cuban government kept Tejera Milian behind bars for 18 years before his release in May, she said. His wife and young son are accompanying him, she said.

The permission for the emigres to leave Cuba came after two years of negotiations among the Cuban government, the White House and the Roman Catholic church.

The Reagan administration had long refused to take more Cuban refugees because Castro has refused to take back criminals who immigrated to Miami during the 1980 Mariel boatlift.

But three weeks ago, President Reagan announced that all Cuban political prisoners jailed for more than 10 years could seek entrance to the United States.

There were 71 former or current prisoners on the release list, and some have been incarcerated for up to 27 years, U.S. officials said.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams and Deputy Commissioner of Immigration Thomas Ferguson were at the airport to welcome the group, as were Roman Catholic Archbishop Edward A. McCarthy of Miami; Dade County Republican Chairman Jeb Bush, son of Vice President George Bush; and Miami Mayor Xavier Suarez.

"We share the joy of relatives and friends who will be welcoming these valiant individuals who have suffered in Cuban prisons," said State Department spokesman Charles Redman.

Among those in the group was Ramon Pedro Grau Alsina, nephew of former Cuban president Ramon Grau San Martin. As the head of a five-man committee, Grau San Martin lead Cuba from 1933 to 1934 and served as the elected president from 1944 to 1948.

Fulgencio Batista ruled as dictator in the years in between Grau San Martin's leadership and again from 1952 until Castro overthrew his government in 1959.

The Roman Catholic Church on Thursday obtained and released a list of the political refugees, most of whom were on a list the U.S. Catholic Conference asked the Cuban government to release last year.

Most of the freed Cubans will settle in the Miami area, said George Lezcano, a spokesman for the Archdiocese of Miami.

"They all have a place to stay, either with relatives or acquaintances," Lezcano said.

BLAST

"They showed that the struggle against terrorism is the business of the whole nation," he said. "Whoever attacks human lives must be pursued in an implacable manner."

Less than an hour after Sunday's bombing, Premier Jacques Chirac announced the new anti-terrorism measures.

He said visas would be required of all visitors except those from Switzerland and France's 11 partners in the European Common Market, and that soldiers would help immigration officers with the extra burden of inspection to try to keep terrorists out of France.

Chirac said the visa requirement would be effective immediately, but passengers arriving from the United States and Canada on the first international flights this morning were allowed to enter without visas at Paris' Charles de Gaulle airport.

"These things take time to put into effect," said Penton Spring, a spokesman for Air France, who said the airline was boarding passengers without visas on international flights to France while awaiting clarification.

Sunday's cafe explosion was the third terrorist bombing in Paris in a week.

As in the previous attacks, there were two competing claims of responsibility. The Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners, which has been issuing threats and claiming bombings since last winter, mailed a statement to the news agency Agence-France Presse, postmarked Sunday and received this morning, claiming responsiblity for the Champs-Elysees bombing.

A separate statement from the same group, also received today by AFP, claimed responsiblity for a cafeteria bombing Friday that injured 41 people just outside Paris.

In Beirut, Lebanon, a group calling itself the Partisans of Right and Freedom today claimed responsibility for planting the Champs-Elysees bomb, and said it was behind all 10 explosions in Paris since December. That group was first heard from last week.

Chirac's radio appearance to announce the new anti-terrorism measures had been announced several days earlier, and Sunday's explosion seemed timed as a further challenge to the policies.

In the first official reaction to the visa requirements, Swedish Foreign Minister Sten Andersson said today he did not believe the measure would contribute to curbing terrorism.

Swedish citizens previously did not need visas to enter France.

"The freedom of movement between countries, which we have worked so hard for and which has meant so much for trade and the possibilities to travel and study, will be much limited by this, and that is negative," Andersson told Swedish national radio.

U.S. citizens, who previously could visit France without visas, are among those now required to obtain the documents.

Reagan warns summit may be in jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration today warned that a planned U.S.-Soviet summit may be jeopardized unless American journalist Nicholas Daniloff is allowed to return home, and said the longer he is held the more it will hurt superpower relations.

White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, appearing on ABC's "Good Morning America" program, said the administration would continue to keep negotiations for Daniloff's full release "on a different track" from talks about a summit between leaders of the two countries.

"But if Daniloff isn't settled, it may put the summit in jeopardy," Regan said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Daniloff's detention would be the first item on the agenda when Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze confer late this week on what was to have been a summit-planning meeting.

"I think that to discuss summit arrangements is premature until we have further discussions on the Daniloff matter," Speakes said.

He said he was not aware of any progress in the case in negotiations over the weekend.

"Until Nick Daniloff is free the U.S.-Soviet relationship will be businesslike but it will not be business as usual," Speakes said. "We will in every forum raise the Daniloff mater and continue to raise it until Nick Daniloff is free. We will examine each of our contacts and arrangements with the Soviets in light of the Daniloff case."

U.S. officials will bring it up at nuclear arms talks in Geneva, and at a cultural gathering in Latvia, he said.

"The longer Nick Daniloff is held in the Soviet Union, the more it will affect our relationship with the Soviets," Speakes said.

Two senators called Sunday for tough measures against the Soviet Union unless Daniloff is released, including a halt in discussions of a superpower summit, a cutoff of subsidized grain sales and expulsion of Soviet spies. Speakes said Reagan is studying a wide range of options and "will do what's in our best interests."

Sen. Richard Lugar, calling for "retaliatory action" against the Soviets, said Sunday the Reagan administration should refuse to discuss anything but the Daniloff case at a pre-summit planning meeting with the Soviets this week unless Moscow frees Daniloff.

Attorney General Edwin Meese, appearing on the "CBS Morning News" program, said of the Soviets' arrest of Daniloff: "This is nothing new for them. These bullying tactics are what they've done in the past."

Lugar, R-Ind., speaking on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," did not specify what he meant by retaliation other than refusing further discussions with Moscow about a summit.

But Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., appearing with Lugar on the same show, said it should include curtailing subsidized grain sales to and cultural exchanges with the Soviets and arrests of more Soviet spies in the United States.

"We could pick up 500 of those people in the next week, and if we have to, we should," Moynihan said.

"We expect Daniloff to come out," Lugar said. "That would be the purpose of our taking retaliatory action, of our saying before Shevardnadze arrives here, if he does arrive this week, that we anticipate the situation is going to be cleared up or the agenda for the meeting would be Daniloff alone."

Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said negotiations were continuing and "we're continuing to insist that Daniloff be set free."

He declined to discuss details of the talks, but insisted there would be no trade. "You can be sure if Daniloff is not free by the time that meeting begins that this subject will be very high on the agenda."

Whitehead added: "If they refuse to set him free, the world must go on. This is an important issue, but of course it's not the only issue...If we terminate all discussions with the Soviet Union, then we can't make progress on this case or on anything else."

DANILOFF

Zakharov has been released into the custody of Yuri Dubinin, the Soviet ambassador in Washington, pending his trial.

Asked what he thought about

The official news agency Tass today reiterated the Soviet contention that Daniloff signed "of his own free will his testimony admitting at least some of the charges against him." news media reports that the U.S. administration has ruled out a swap with Zakharov, Daniloff said, "Well, I would not expect a direct swap. These two cases are not equivalent. If there's some kind of negotiated solution, it's one that would have differentiated elements."

"The inescapable fact is that the Soviet investigators have in their possession proof of Daniloff's engagement in espionage activities and that when confronted with this proof he admitted without coercion or any other kind of 'abuse' his involvement in CIA activities," Tass said.

The Tass report was read to Daniloff over the telephone and he replied, "I don't want to dignify the story by commenting."

Daniloff has denied working for the CIA or any other intelligence agency and said he engaged in only normal journalistic activities in Moscow.

The correspondent said today he is anxious "not to escalate the public furor over this issue," adding that "diplomats should go to work and try to find a solution."

Daniloff said earlier today, before going to his office, "I'm going to answer some of my mail and do a few other boring things."

On Sunday, Daniloff held his first full news conference since he was released from prison and said he was impatient to return home.

He told reporters at the U.S. Commercial Office that his release "is a great relief from the sort of mental torture that I have had to bear over the last two weeks.

"I am terribly anxious to get back to the United States, to be back with my children...Frankly, I feel like a sneaker that's been through a wringer," Daniloff said.

He noted he still faces a three-count espionage indictment, must be available for questioning and is not permitted to leave the Moscow area.

Similar restrictions apply to Zakharov.

Daniloff repeated his contention that he was set up by the KGB in an attempt to gain Zakharov's release.

Referring to the circumstances of his arrest, Daniloff said Soviet acquaintance Mikhail A. Luzin, called Misha, gave him a packet, and that he did not know what was in it. He said eight KGB agents then grabbed him and bundled him off to Lefortovo Prison, where the package was opened shown to contain photographs of military objects and maps marked secret.

Soviet national television on Sunday night carried an interview with former CIA agent Edward Lee Howard, who defected to the Soviet Union, but the Daniloff case was not mentioned. The program appeared to be part of a campaign in the state-controlled Soviet media against U.S. intelligence.

MISD

In early August, the court "vacated" Bunton's ruling and ordered he "reconsider" in light of the Supreme Court opinion in the Thornburg v. Gingles case.

Mrs. Hernandez said MISD trustees are "forgetting that the administration is getting paid with tax dollars and they represent all the people.

"Judge Bunton declared this was unconstitutional, therefore it's not just our will," she said.

Charlie Jackson, Black Advisory Council president, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Medical examiner identifies woman's body

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County Medical Examiner Robert Bux has confirmed that a partially clad body found floating face-down in Hondo Creek was that of 18-year-old Tracy Lynn Allen, who was reported missing last Tuesday.

Investigators said Miss Allen had been strangled with part of her skirt. The decomposed body, which investigators said had been in the water for several days, was found Saturday.

Bexar County Sheriff Harlan Copeland said Sunday there are no suspects in the slaying. Investigators were trying to determine whether the woman may have been killed by an acquaintance, he said.

Another strong quake injures 37 in Greek port city

KALAMATA, Greece (AP) — A strong earth tremor today rolled through the same area of southern Greece where an earthquake two days ago killed at least 18 people. Police said the latest temblor injured 37 people in this port city.

The Athens Seismological Institute said today's quake measured 5.6 on the Richter scale and occurred at 2:41 p.m. (6:41 a.m. CDT). It had the same epicenter as Saturday's quake, which registered 6.2 on the Richter scale.

Two aftershocks from the weekend quake rattled Kalamata before dawn today, preceding the stronger afternoon tremor, and a four-story apartment building damaged on Saturday collapsed. Police said no one was in the building and there were no injuries.

The building fell during the first aftershock, which measured 4.1 on the Richter scale. The second aftershock measured 3.8 on the Richter scale.

Police said the afternoon tremor knocked down two other damaged apartment buildings, and that 37 people were being treated for minor injuries.

Thousands of residents of Kalamata spent a second night in the open Sunday, fearing a recurrence of the devastating weekend quake.

Defense Minister Yiannis Haralambopoulos had cautioned people not to return to their homes. He said the government was providing tents to shelter up to 10,000 people at campsites in parks and vacant lots around the city.

A government spokesman said the death toll from Saturday's quake rose to 18 when rescue workers pulled the body of an unidentified woman from the ruins of her home today. The spokesman, who declined to be identified by name, said 82 people remained hospitalized.

Prof. Yiannis Dracopoulos, a seismologist, said Sunday that a new quake could match the one that struck shortly after nightfall Saturday.

"Everyone should stay away from damaged buildings for the next 10 days. There could be an aftershock of the same strength as the original earthquake," Dracopoulos said on state-run television.

Saturday's quake measured 6.2 on the open-ended Richter scale as it rumbled through the mountainous Messenia region 180 miles southwest of Athens.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said Saturday's quake destroyed 112 houses in Kalamata, including a five-story apartment building near the waterfront, and damaged another 1,150 homes. About 42,000 people live in Kalamata.

President Christos Sartzetakis visited the city on Sunday.

Streets were strewn with rubble, plaster and shattered glass. Two brothers identified as Yiannis and Theodoros Paladinos died when their car was flattened by chunks of debris tumbling from the apartment building.

Saturday's quake sent a boom echoing through the city.

"I got real frightened. You could feel the ground moving underneath you. I ran with my sister all the way back home to see if everyone was OK," said 11-year-old Steven Geros, from the New York City borough of the Bronx. He was staying with relatives in Kalamata.

Saturday's tremor destroyed 117 of 120 homes in the village of Elaiochori on the slopes of Mount Taygetos, 12 miles east of the city, the Defense Ministry spokesman said.

Walesa to meet with Solidarity activists

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa said he would meet with Solidarity activists and underground leaders just freed from jail to discuss how to respond to the sweeping amnesty declared by the communist government.

"There is much that we have to talk to each other about...There is a new situation and I would ask that you give us time and not pressure us," Walesa said Sunday, speaking to supporters who filled a church courtyard in the Baltic port of Gdansk after a Roman Catholic Mass celebrating the prisoners' release.

Walesa, the former chairman of the outlawed Solidarity free trade movement, welcomed more than a dozen union activists released in the amnesty, which the government said applied to 225 political prisoners and is scheduled to end today.

About 5,000 worshipers filled St. Brygida's church in Gdansk, applauding loudly and waving their fingers in V-for-victory signs as the freed prisoners were introduced, witnesses said.

The amnesty did not cover those accused of terrorism, espionage or betraying state secrets, but no prominent Solidarity activist had been jailed on those charges.

All of the dozen or more prominent jailed opposition activists, including Solidarity underground leader Zbigniew Bujak, were freed by Sunday.

Among the ex-prisoners who joined Walesa, the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize laureate, were two former Gdansk Solidarity underground leaders, Bogdan Borusewicz and Bogdan Lis, and dissident historian Adam Michnik, a senior union adviser.

Borusewicz, in his first public appearance since he went into hiding following the December 1981 military crackdown that suppressed Solidarity, declared that the first free labor federation in the East bloc was still alive.

"I want to thank all those who worked during our absence, who published and distributed (underground) literature, because it showed that Solidarity is not just an idea but an organization," said Borusewicz, who was freed Saturday, eight months after he was captured by police.

The ex-prisoners were given flowers as the crowd serenaded them with the Polish song "Sto Lat" (May He Live a Hundred Years).

The church's provost, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski, praised the amnesty and urged Solidarity supporters to exercise restraint in response to it.

"This amnesty is not an act of mercy but an act of honest justice," said Jankowski, a close adviser to Walesa.

Ex-CIA agent says defection didn't hurt U.S. security

MOSCOW (AP) — Former CIA agent Edward Lee Howard said his defection to the Soviet Union did not jeopardize U.S. security or make him a traitor.

"I never did anything that would damage or threaten my country's security," Howard said in an interview broadcast Sunday on Soviet television. "I may have been unloyal to the CIA or the FBI, but not to my country."

Howard, who eluded arrest in the United States on espionage charges for almost a year, said he asked for asylum in the Soviet Union because he was tired of running.

His request was granted last month, when the Kremlin said he was a victim of persecution by the FBI and CIA.

Howard worked for the CIA from January 1981 to June 1983, and at one time was trained for an assignment in Moscow.

Commentator Genrykh Borovik, who often produces television shows about the CIA, said he interviewed Howard in an unspecified Moscow suburb where the defector lives. He said Howard was the first CIA employee to have sought asylum in the Soviet Union.

Howard was portrayed during the program as a loyal American embittered by what was termed the Central Intelligence Agency's "militarist spirit."

U.S. wants to base Delta Force in Britain, paper says

LONDON (AP) — The United States has requested permission to base about 50 anti-terrorist Delta Force troops at a U.S. military facility in Britain, the Sunday Telegraph reported.

The newspaper, citing unidentified British and U.S. government sources, said the U.S. Defense Department hopes basing a Delta Force unit in Britain would reduce by up to 16 hours the reaction time to terrorist incidents in Europe and the Middle East.

The paper said the U.S. request follows the failure of the elite force to arrive in Pakistan in time to influence the outcome of the Sept. 5 hijacking of a Pan Am jet in Karachi in which 20 people were killed and scores wounded.

It said that if the request is approved, the Delta Force unit would form part of a joint anti-terrorist planning and control staff at the London headquarters of the Special Air Services, Britain's elite undercover force.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Cmdr. Richard Schram declined comment on the report, citing U.S. policy not to discuss activities of special forces units.

President visits bomb site

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan today visited the Seoul airport site where a powerful explosive device killed five people, and called for increased security precautions for the Asian Games, an official said.

Kimpo International Airport, where the blast occurred Sunday, is the main arrival point for foreign visitors to the games, which are scheduled to begin Saturday. However, all of the people killed in the blast, as well as the 29 injured, were said by police to be Koreans.

A special prosecution unit set up earlier to deal with possible crimes related to the Asian Games said it was believed the explosion in the Kimpo terminal building was caused by a time bomb placed in a trash can.

No other details were immediately available, but the unit was said to have ruled out a remote-controlled device.

Rebels pull out of talks

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador pulled out of scheduled negotiations aimed at ending the nearly 7-year-old civil war.

Rebel spokeswoman Ana Guadalupe Martinez announced the pullout Sunday after the breakdown of discussions on an agenda and security measures for the talks.

Representatives of the government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte said they would stay in the Panamanian capital, where they have been been meeting with rebel officials, until Tuesday in an effort to salvage the talks.

The negotiations, agreed to in Mexico last month by both sides, had been scheduled to begin Friday in the Salvadoran town of Sesori, 95 miles northeast of San Salvador, the capital.

Mob storms into Soweto

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — A mob of "comrades" firing guns and throwing stones stormed into a squatter camp in this black township this morning, residents said, continuing a four-day battle that has killed at least three people and injured 11.

In Sharpeville black township, 31 miles south of Soweto, residents reported that soldiers fired tear gas at 800 people marching to the municipal offices to protest eviction of rent boycotters.

The government's official Bureau for Information reported no injuries in Sharpeville. But residents said one man died after he was shot and old women were trampled by the crowd fleeing the tear gas.

Residents of the Mzimhlope squatter camp next to a hostel for migratory workers in Soweto told about waking today to the sound of breaking glass and gunfire when a mob rushed into the camp.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your work is likely to require extra travel in the year ahead. Look for opportunities to combine business with pleasure. Your strong will helps you turn a defeat into a victory. You attract the attention of a power broker. Love may turn your head. If married, work at strengthening your relationship with mate. A desire to have children grows stronger.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Lauren Bacall, Peter Falk, Montreal speedster Tim Raines, the Milwaukee Brewers' Robin Yount, Dodgers ace Orel Hershiser, tennis' Rosemary Casals, jazz guitarist B.B. King, author John Knowles, "Candid Camera's" Allen Funt, pioneer merchant J.C. Penney.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A new stability at work reduces the tension in your personal life. Any financial problems should be discussed openly with family members. Use original methods to stimulate business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do everything possible to beat a deadline. You could meet the person of your dreams! Friends and family members encourage you to claim what should be yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your goals could change in a major way. Test the waters at work before trying to make a big splash. Take advantage of the changes going on around you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You could be caught off-guard when someone from your past reappears. Do not let this person change your present plans. Stop trying to please people who do not really know you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Check and double-check everything put in front of you today. Court an old flame and you will have a wonderful evening. Keep track of your keys and wallet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain an advantage if you go out of your way to help others today. Take care of your financial obligations without being reminded. A good credit rating is a valuable asset.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could be bitten by the acting bug. Socialize and travel with those who share your ideals and interests. Romance may be sensitive. Reduce some everyday pressures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep some of your abundant energy in reserve. You will want to be there for those who need your assistance. Investigate further before making a financial commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Travel and paperwork use up your free time. Make a phone call if you are running late. Promptness could affect the terms of a deal. Romance makes concentration difficult.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone who has been out of your life tries to return. Go slow. Be sure an associate really understands what you are telling her. Postpone making a major move.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuition keeps you on the right track, telling you what you need to know about certain people. Someone could tease you this evening. Be a good sport.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Children will appreciate whatever time you can give them today. You enjoy a highly successful day at work. Stay flexible and you will wind up on top.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K762 ♡K95 ◇83 ♣J752
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—It is true that, should partner hold a maximum one no trump opening with four-card spade support, you might have a play for game. However, if he has a minimum, even three spades could be in jeopardy. And there is no guarantee that he has a spade suit. Since game is unlikely, pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ2 ♡Q107 ◇KJ83 ♣K65
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—Even if partner has a maximum 18 points, you are still a point short of slam. Bid three no trump and be happy that you are giving partner a hand that should prove easy to play.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9823 ♡82 ◇Q10652 ♣65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 NT Dbl ?
What action do you take?
A.—East's double is for penalties. At no trump your hand might not produce a single trick for partner. At diamonds, you are bound to score two or three tricks even if partner has only a doubleton. Bid two diamonds.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠983 ♡J762 ◇J1062 ♣65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 NT Dbl ?
What action do you take?
A.—Your side is in trouble. However, don't try to "improve" matters when you have a weak, balanced hand with no five-card or longer suit. Pass, and hope that partner can scrounge a trick or two from your meager holding.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K75 ♡K876 ◇Q103 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♡ Pass
1 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—With no particular liking for either of partner's suits and a stopper in the unbid suit, rebid one no trump. That does not show any additional values to speak of.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K76 ♡K876 ◇1093 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♡ Pass
1 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—This hand is going nowhere, fast. There is no point to bidding one no trump—partner's hand is quite likely unbalanced. Your 4-3 fit in spades should provide an adequate trump suit, so get out now. Pass.

Ground broken for rose garden to be dedicated to Rose Kennedy

Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — The Kennedy family and city officials gathered to break ground for a rose garden dedicated to Rose Kennedy.

"My mother's life will stamp the character of this park," said her daughter Eunice Kennedy Shriver. "So it must always serve families old and young."

Also attending Sunday's ceremony under a blue-and-white striped tent were Rose Kennedy's grandson Joseph P. Kennedy II.

Mrs. Kennedy, 96, is in frail health and lives at the family compound at Hyannis Port. She did not attend.

The small waterfront park planned near Faneuil Hall Marketplace is several blocks from the North End house in which Mrs. Kennedy was born in 1890.

"It will be in memory of a woman and a family who have given not only to this city but to this whole country," Mayor Raymond L. Flynn said.

Jackson

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Michael Jackson sings, dances and moon-walks in his return to entertainment as "Captain EO" in a musical space adventure.

The 17-minute video is an assault on the senses with 3-D, lasers, explosions and smoke. Cost estimates range from $15 million to $20 million.

"We're not telling how much it cost," Disney board chairman Michael Eisner said after a preview skipped by Jackson, who sent sisters Janet and Latoya and brothers Jackie and Marlon.

Co-star Anjelica Huston, executive producer George Lucas and director Francis Ford Coppola appeared for Saturday's ribbon cutting.

Fans wanting to see Jackson, who hasn't entertained for two years, must travel to Disneyland or Walt Disney World's Epcot Center in Florida because "Captain EO" will be shown in "no other place in the universe," Disney officials said.

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Former astronaut James B. Irwin says it's now up to someone else to find the remains of Noah's Ark.

"The Lord may have some other mission for me," said Irwin, who has made several unsuccessful trips to Mount Ararat in eastern Turkey.

Irwin, 56, who is an ordained minister from Colorado Springs, Colo., was in Overland Park on Saturday to speak to the Wellspring Mission Volunteers Foundation, which sets up short-term missionary trips for Southern Baptists.

"I think I've done all I can to attract attention to the ark. I think it is time others take up the search," said Irwin, who walked on the moon in 1971.

He and seven companions were detained by Turkish officials for one day last month, accused of an illegal flight and taking illegal pictures even though they had approval to explore Mount Ararat. The pictures were later returned to them.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi is sending his two children to the Soviet Union to study in a school run by the Vatican, a newspaper reports.

Rahul, 16, and Priyanka, 14, will study in the Spanish Embassy in Moscow and will be looked after by their aunt, Nadia, sister of their Italian-born mother, Sonia, the Free Press Journal reported Sunday.

The two were taken from exclusive schools in New Delhi and put under private tutors following death threats from Sikh terrorists. Their grandmother, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, was gunned down by two Sikh security guards on Oct. 31, 1984.

The Bombay-based newspaper said Rahul and Priyanka originally were to be sent to the American school in Moscow but that "obviously Moscow did not want the privilege to be claimed by the United States."

There was no immediate comment from the prime minister's residence.

Cash

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss America 1987 says she's "basically a conservative, Southern gal" who won't answer questions about her views on abortion, marijuana and sex.

"I don't think Miss America should be a controversial subject," said 21-year-old Kellye Cash of Memphis, Tenn., grandniece of country music star Johnny Cash.

"I need to maintain that girl-next-door image and the girl next door is not a controversial figure," she said Sunday, the first full day of her reign.

Miss Cash, a senior majoring in communications at Memphis State University, says she wants to become a talk-show hostess.

She said she counts on "very high Christian moral standards" to guide her through life.

"Like I said last night, I'm basically a conservative, Southern gal, so all those questions I think you can figure out the answers to," said Miss Cash when asked to comment on sensitive subjects.

"It would just be easier if you would all stop asking," she said.

Becoming Miss America was always a goal for her, she said, but she did not enter a pageant until this past spring because she thought her growing-up years were better spent on piano and voice lessons.

Johnny Cash, reached in Los Angeles after his grandniece's victory, said, "We're so proud of her. I think they made a fine choice."

"Just as soon as I can, I want to hug her neck and congratulate her."

When Miss America 1986 Susan Akin pinned the rhinestone-encrusted crown on her head, Miss Cash waved into the television camera and mouthed the words, "I love you, Dad" to Capt. Roy Cash Jr., who was aboard the USS El Paso somewhere off the coast of Norway.

She said she heard Sunday morning from her father, who wrote Johnny Cash's hit, "I Still Miss Someone."

"He was very excited," she said. "He said all the men on the ship dressed up as women and had a mock pageant."

DALLAS (AP) — Gordon B. McLendon, who co-founded the Liberty Broadcasting System and captivated audiences on the radio network with his studio re-creations of sports events, died Sunday night. He was 65.

McLendon, who was known as "The Old Scotchman," was a multimillionaire who in recent years spent much of his time on his ranch 25 miles north of Dallas.

McLendon and his father, B.R. McLendon, founded the Liberty Broadcasting System in 1947. They owned the radio network, which had 458 affiliates around the country, until 1952, when it folded.

Steering Pinochet

Hopes for a peaceful transition to democracy in Chile darkened the other day under a state of siege reimposed by Gen. Augusto Pinochet moments after he survived an assassination attempt in his bullet-proof limousine.

The military ruler's growing number of opponents could take no encouragement from the ambush on his motorcade. He used the incident, which left five of his bodyguards dead and the dictator with only a scratched hand, as a pretext to widen a government crackdown on dissent.

Under pressure from the Reagan administration, Gen. Pinochet had lifted the state of siege last year. Now he again relies on the suspension of civil liberties to cling to power against the wishes of his countrymen.

To stifle opposition, Gen. Pinochet promptly closed six magazines critical of his regime, and ordered two foreign news agencies, Britain's Reuters and Italy's ANSA, to halt disseminating news in Chile or abroad. Meantime, scores of dissidents were arrested, including priests, journalists and political figures.

Magazine editor Jose Carrasco Tapia was dragged from his home by men believed to be government-security forces. His body was discovered later with 10 bullet holes in the head. Several hundred mourners at the editor's funeral were attacked by riot police with nightsticks, tear gas and water cannons.

Declaring that Chile faces a choice between "democracy and chaos," Gen. Pinochet seems intent on making his repressive rule the closest thing to democracy that Chile will know in his lifetime. His current eight-year term expires in 1989 but the dictator appears set to make himself the sole candidate in a plebiscite for another term that would not end until 1997.

The Reagan administration may have less influence with the Chilean leader than it did with Ferdinand Marcos in the Philippines, but stronger American pressure is needed to avert an increase in civil strife that will ensue if Gen. Pinochet does not step down.

During recent weeks the State Department has threatened to withhold U.S. support for $550 million in loans sought by Chile from the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank. The time has come to make good on that threat and to make future American economic support contingent on progress toward democracy, beginning with the legalization of political parties.

The Reagan administration has scored successes in steering rightist regimes in Haiti, the Philippines, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras toward democratic rule. Similar results in Chile likely will be more difficult, but not beyond reach.

Another View: Handle with care

The trouble with the drug problem is that there are no quick fixes. Surely, after all these years, members of Congress know that. What, then, is going on in the House this week? A mammoth bill and a set of amendments full of all sorts of proposals — some good, some doubtful and some really awful — are up for consideration. Yes, the war on narcotics is a hot political issue, but before this package is pushed through on the eve of national elections, legislators should take a deep breath, count to 10 and look critically at this legislation.

The rush to legislate began only six weeks ago when Speaker O'Neill announced a major bipartisan initiative on the drug problem. Each House committee with narcotics jurisdiction — there are at least nine — was asked to report a package of drug bills before the Labor Day recess. These bills were then rolled together into a single proposal and sent, via the Rules Committee, to the floor. It's a wish list, really. It contains a little something for everyone who has a plan for fighting drugs. Some of these ideas, such as long mandatory prison sentences for pushers, have been tried in the states and failed. Others look like window dressing. Do we really need a new White House Conference, a study by DOT on the relationship between drugs and highway safety (yes, a study) or a federal Advisory Commission on the Comprehensive Education of Intercollegiate Athletes? Then there are the "beefing-up" proposals: more coordination, more confiscation of assets, more pressure on drug-producing countries. Is any of this in response to a thoughtful and considered analysis of what is already being done?

Some zealots believe that even this package isn't enough. They propose to offer amendments on the floor that would bring the armed forces into the law enforcement effort, create a good-faith exception to the exclusionary rule and institute a federal death penalty to deal with traffickers. The fear of more reasonable members is that in this can-you-top-this atmosphere, just about anything will be passed and quickly considered by the Senate, where a comprehensive bill was introduced yesterday.

There is no doubt that narcotics are a major national problem in our society and that much can be done to address it. Education programs seem to be making a dent, for example, and should be continued. Results will be slow in coming, but we believe they will be steady. Activities in support of this trade by banks and individuals who handle the enormous amounts of money involved must be curbed. And law enforcement must be firm, well funded and well organized. There is much that is good in the House package, but the pressures of time and politics behind this rush are dangerous. It may take some political courage to challenge any part of it, but if legislators aren't careful, an awful lot of bad law could slip through in the guise of a tough and popular assault on narcotics.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1789, the U.S. Department of Foreign Affairs was renamed the Department of State.

In 1821, independence was proclaimed for Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

In 1857, William Howard Taft, who would serve as president of the United States and as chief justice, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio.

In 1935, the Nuremberg Laws deprived German Jews of their citizenship and made the swastika the official symbol of Nazi Germany.

In 1940, during the Battle of Britain in World War II, the tide turned as Royal Air Force planes inflicted heavy losses on the Luftwaffe.

In 1959, Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev arrived in the U.S. to begin a 13-day visit.

In 1963, four children died when a bomb went off in a black Baptist church in Birmingham, Ala.

Ten years ago: On Capitol Hill, House and Senate negotiators voted to outlaw most Medicaid abortions, except in cases where the pregnancy endangered a mother's life.

Five years ago: The Senate Judiciary Committee voted unanimously to approve the nomination of Judge Sandra Day O'Connor to the U.S. Supreme Court.

One year ago: The nation's Roman Catholic bishops, in a report for Pope John Paul II, recommended that the role of women in the church be expanded.

Today's Birthdays: Country music star Roy Acuff is 83. Actor-director Jackie Cooper is 64. Comedian Norm Crosby is 59. Former baseball player Gaylord Perry is 48. Football player-turned-sportscaster Merlin Olsen is 46. Actor Tommy Lee Jones is 40.

Philippines needs Uncle Sam's help

WASHINGTON — It should surprise no one that Philippine President Corazon Aquino will come to Washington this week with her hand out. She desperately needs aid to keep the Philippines from breaking apart.

Jack Anderson

Her ousted predecessor, Ferdinand Marcos, left the economy in ruins from 20 years of cronyism, bad loans and industrial chaos. His family and friends drained the profits out of every company they could lay their hands on. They squeezed money out of the populace to support their own lavish lifestyle.

Now Aquino must pay the price. She faces a massive debt burden and economic stagnation for years to come. Internal figures of the World Bank show a current outstanding Philippine debt of $26 billion, which will climb to more than $38 billion in the next decade. "In other words," states a confidential World Bank assessment, "(the Philippines) cannot ... be expected to repay its debt."

These confidential figures were obtained by the San Francisco-based Philippine Support Committee. We have also had access to other classified intelligence reports and economic analyses. And in July, we visited the Philippines and spoke to its top leaders, including President Aquino.

Our conclusion: Despite her personal popularity, she cannot possibly satisfy the expectations of the people. The Philippines must be given emergency aid, or the impoverished majority will sink deeper into poverty until they become desperate enough to rebel.

The World Bank report places most of the blame for the debt crisis on incredibly bad investments that "took place with guarantees or loans from government-owned banks." These loans, the study charges, were "ill-conceived, overpriced and proved unprofitable." In plain language, this means Marcos' associates misused government-backed funds.

The report also lays some of the blame on the "substantial capital flight" that began in 1983 at the first signs of Marcos' political troubles.

Aquino brings with her the backbone of her administration: the Cabinet officers responsible for the uphill struggle of pulling their country out of its economic quagmire. Our associate Donald Goldberg has obtained a series of candid, internal World Bank appraisals of each Cabinet member, based on confidential interviews, economic analyses and staff visits to the Philippines.

In general, according to one high-level memo, World Bank officials have found "a somewhat confused situation, in which most senior officers are either completely new, or 'holdovers' who do not expect to be retained for long." The memo points out that "the new senior officials have many different preoccupations, among which making new appointments and exposing the misdeeds of the past regime have higher immediate priority than forming a consensus on a development plan for the future."

The memo then warns: "Moreover, Cabinet members have not yet adopted the discipline of an agreed policy line — on the contrary, they frequently make mutually incompatible statements based on their personal views and political constituencies. Perhaps none of this is surprising in the circumstances."

Here are the World Bank's confidential assessments of Aquino's top economic Cabinet officials and the problems they face:

— Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin, point man in the hoped-for economic recovery, has expressed doubts that increased exports could provide the needed stimulus. The reason is that the traditional Philippine exports — sugar, coconuts and copra — are bringing depressed prices on the world market.

— Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez is frantically trying to capitalize on both the domestic and international good will Aquino has won to make economic changes before the good feelings wear off. He doesn't consider the large budget deficit too worrisome, but he has predicted that many Philippine private banks are weaker than they're letting on, and "there would be a need for financial rescue packages for these banks in the future."

— Jose Concepcion, minister for trade and industry, views his office as "a living government organization that feels, listens, cares and therefore prepares programs that are responsive to the aspirations of the people." He predicts that if the high unemployment situation in the Philippines is not corrected quickly, "there will be an escalation of the extreme left in about two years."

COST OF U.S. "CHERNOBYL"

The computers at the General Accounting Office recently produced estimates of what a Chernobyl-type disaster at a U.S. nuclear plant would cost. The cost, reasonably enough, would depend on the plant's location. For example, if there were a similar accident at the Indian Point plant just north of New York City, the cost would be $15 billion, the GAO estimated, while a similar accident at the Yankee nuclear plant in Maine would cost only $300 million.

Robertson nixes announcement to seek funds

WASHINGTON — Instead of announcing as promised whether he would run for president, television evangelist Pat Robertson on Wednesday will call for coaxing from three million voters before he becomes a candidate.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

A letter, signed by Robertson and dated "Thursday morning" of next week but readied for mailing last week, says: "When at least three million registered voters sign petitions committing to pray, to work and to give toward a campaign effort, I will seek the nomination of the Republican Party .... It is very literally up to you." Petitions and "Robertson '88" bumper stickers are enclosed.

The letter appeals for a $100 "gift" to Americans for Robertson as a sign of "tangible support." Although presidential campaign giving is not tax-deductible, the letter asks for a "tax-credit contribution of $100" — seemingly impossible under the law.

JACK KEMP'S FINGER

The strategy by Rep. Tony Coelho, Democratic congressional campaign chairman, to make it so tough for Rep. Jack Kemp to get re-elected that it would get under his skin worked last week when the former NFL quarterback thumped an inquiring reporter in the chest.

A local television newsman had asked Kemp why he was "ducking" a debate with his Democratic opponent, Buffalo city councilman James Keane. Angered, Kemp declared he never had ducked a debate, using his index figner to poke the newsman in the chest for emphasis. He later telephoned to apologize.

A footnote: His Buffalo race has not kept Kemp from fishing Washington waters. He hosted some 40 fellow Republican House members and their wives Wednesday night. He hopes to recruit from that base the hard core of support for his presidential campaign.

GEORGE & FRITZ SHOW

Two years after their long-distance jousting, Vice President George Bush and former vice president Walter F. Mondale engaged in a long, private political bull session aboard Air Force II from Washington to Kennebunkport, Me.

Bush, who has a summer home there, read in the newspapers that Mondale would be going there to attend the wedding of longtime political adviser John Reilly. So, Bush offered his political foe a ride on the vice presidential plane.

What's more, the vice president invited several other prominent Democrats, who were also there for the wedding, to his house for coffee. They included Ethel Kennedy and political columnist Mark Shields, who was Reilly's best man.

FLOWER FOR PILLSBURY

Demonstrating his confidence in Senate aide Michael Pillsbury, accused last spring of leaking Pentagon secrets to the press, senior arms negotiator Max Kampelman invited the former Defense Department official to lunch at a very prestigious — and public — eatery: the State Department's executive dining room.

Kampelman, just returned from the Geneva talks as President Reagan's chief negotiator, made his point. Ambassador Paul Nitze and Under Secretary of State Michael Armacost were two of a dozen top diplomats who saw the two lunching together.

Now working on arms control matters for several conservative Republican senators, Pillsbury hopes to be exonerated of the leaking charges when a Justice Department probe is finished.

POLISH LOVE NEST

Arriving incognito on a regular tourist visa for a clandestine visit with his paramour, former Polish foreign minister Stefan Olszowsky has been staying in Manhattan despite the embarrassment of the Polish strongman, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

Recently eased out of his top-drawer perch on the Polish Communist Party's politburo, Olszowsky has been in the bad graces of Jaruzelski for months as an anti-regime hardliner. The general has been fearful the news of the New York tryst will get out.

His exact whereabouts in Manhattan are not known, but Olszowsky's mission there has titillated the few sophisticated New Yorkers who know about it.

CHARLEY REESE

Seat belt laws aren't real irritating 'issue'

In my state, we recently passed a mandatory seat belt law. You would have thought, from the reactions of some, that the legislature had burned the Bill of Rights.

Charley Reese

I do not wish to argue if mandatory seat belt laws are or are not an unwarranted intrusion on individual liberty. Rather, I want to point out what seems to me the oddity of picking on this particular issue to make the case for individual freedom.

Government in our times intrudes on personal liberty in thousands of ways. We cannot drive our cars without government permission. Cars cannot be manufactured in the United States without the manufacturer's conforming to thousands of government rules and regulations.

Every law, every rule, every regulation imposes a limitation on individual liberty. That's the nature of laws, rules and regulations. We only enact them to forbid or to mandate certain behaviors. Every time you require a behavior or forbid a behavior you are necessarily reducing the freedom of individuals to choose.

Thus it strikes me as strange that people living in a welfare state that since 1933 has progressively encroached on individual liberty would become outraged when a government, which already tells them 10,000 things to do or not do, adds that they must also fasten their seat belts.

It's as if an American in colonial times had decided to rebel because the British government mandated that ships must carry lifeboats or that guns carried into public places must be unloaded.

Inappropriate responses seem to be a growing phenomenon. I have commented in the past that the outrage over South Africa is disproportionate to the offense. It is bad to segregate people because of their race but it is not nearly as bad as murdering them for their political beliefs. Yet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev receives far less abuse than South African President P.W. Botha.

Another example is the fanaticism of anti-smokers. Smoking may or may not be a health problem but even if it is, it is far from the top 10 — regardless of what the U.S. surgeon general claims.

Inappropriate responses are, in an individual, a sign of mental illness. Perhaps, on a national level, they also indicate a problem. Perhaps someone is playing distraction games with our minds: Think about South Africa so you won't think about the horrors of the Soviet Union with whom we want to make a deal. Think about cigarettes so you won't think about industrial pollution. Let's argue about seat belts so you won't think about the crippling regulation of American business in general.

That's one possibility. Another may be that people are just afraid these days and only speak out when the subject of criticism has been declared socially acceptable. Mandatory seat belt laws, cigarettes and South Africa are socially acceptable subjects for criticism. You can be against all three and still be accepted by the Establishment. In fact, it helps to be accepted by the Establishment if you are against them. They are safe controversies. They are "in" outs.

Either way, sensible folks must set priorities. It is the Soviet Empire's expansionism, not South Africa's flawed internal policies, that threatens America's future. It is the drift toward a completely government-controlled economy that threatens our freedom, not seat belt laws. It is the banking industry, not the tobacco industry, that causes considerable human misery. The massive debt and the political explosions it will cause are much more likely to prove hazardous to your health than smoke from someone else's cigarette.

Industrial pollution, particularly in the developing countries, represents a major world health problem because of its effect on the environment and the difficulty of controlling it in countries where people are desperate for jobs.

Let's not swat flies when we are being charged by cape buffalo.

Government anti-drug handbook 'points to policies that worked'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said today a new government handbook relies on effective strategies for keeping drugs away from young people, but it is not a quick fix for the drug problem in the nation's schools.

"We point to policies that have worked. Schools that have managed to solve this problem. Schools where there was a very serious drug problem, but now that problem is on the decline," Bennett said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "That's what we're looking at, effective strategies for keeping drugs away from kids."

The department is opening up toll-free telephone lines today for the public to call for its new handbook, "Schools Without Drugs." The Education Department has printed 1 million copies of its handbook at a cost of 40 cents each and will spend as much as 30 cents more to mail each copy free to parents and others who request them.

Bennett said the handbook is a response to Americans who understand the seriousness of the drug problem and have asked what steps they can take to protect their children.

"The book is addressed to adults," Bennett said. "Of course, children should say no, but adults have to help them say no."

The secretary conceded that the handbook is "not a quick fix. This isn't magic."

But, he said, "we point to examples that work. We point to situations where someone looking at them might have just gone into despair and said there's nothing we can do — schools where 60 or 70 percent of the kids were using drugs, but schools where they managed to get the use down to 15 or 20 percent."

Bennett also was holding a news conference today to discuss the department's role in President Reagan's government-wide initiative to fight drug abuse.

"We have to get tough, and we have to do it now," Bennett said in his introduction to the 78-page guide.

Bennett already has put copies in the mail to every public and private elementary and secondary school and to every school superintendent.

The public can call 1-800-624-0100 for copies of the handbook. The local Washington, D.C., number is 659-4854. People also can write for copies to: Schools Without Drugs, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Bennett said use of drugs, including alcohol, is "the most serious threat to the health and well-being of our children."

The problem cuts across class lines and geographic boundaries, Bennett said. "In some schools, drug deals at lunch are common. In others, intruders regularly enter the building to sell drugs to students. Even schools with strict drug policies on paper do not always enforce them effectively."

The handbook "tells how drug use starts, how it progresses, and how it can be identified. Most important, it tells how it can be stopped," he said.

First Lady Nancy Reagan, who joined President Reagan on Sunday night in a nationally broadcast address against drugs, wrote in a foreword, "Only if our schools are free from drugs can we protect our children and insure that they can get on with the enterprise of learning."

The booklet is aimed at educators, parents and students themselves, laying out basic facts about drugs, providing a detailed explanation of educators' rights to search students for drugs and suspend or expel offenders, and listing tell-tale signs of drug use.

The latter include bloodshot eyes, conversation and jokes preoccupied with drugs, hostility about discussing drugs, possession of large amounts of money and "distinct downward turns in student's grades."

The handbook capsulizes how several schools, including Atlanta's Northside High School and Eastside High School in Paterson, N.J., have turned the corner on drugs, and it spells out a 12-point "plan for achieving schools without drugs."

Peres begins two-day visit to Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres, opening a two-day visit today, is seeking U.S. support for the international conference the Israeli leader and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak have agreed is the best next step in the search for a Middle East peace.

But Peres, who will switch jobs with hard-line Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir next month, lacks support of the Israeli coalition Cabinet.

"What do we need this trouble for?" Shamir said Sunday after Peres reported to the Cabinet on last week's summit meeting with Mubarak that produced the idea of working toward an international peace conference.

The Reagan administration, in principle, wants to provide Jordan's King Hussein with the broad international reassurance he demands as a back-drop for one-on-one peace talks Israel.

But U.S. officials are lukewarm about according the Soviet Union a prominent and potentially meddlesome role. Also, the United States will bar participation by the Palestine Liberation Organization unless it accepts the Jewish state's right to exist.

"Our policy has not changed," Charles E. Redman, a State Department spokesman, said last week, while echoing the reservations of other officials toward the Soviet Union.

"We do not see a helpful Soviet role in a peace conference unless their policies and attitudes change," said another official, who demanded anonymity in briefing reporters Friday at the White House.

"We do not see any breakthroughs on the horizon," the official said.

Before seeing President Reagan today, Peres was to call on Secretary of State George P. Shultz. He also was due to confer with Vice President George Bush, who made a recent trip to the Middle East, and to meet on Tuesday with Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and members of the House Foreign Affairs and the Senate Foreign Relations committees.

Peres' summit meeting with Mubarak in Alexandria appeared to bring the two countries closer than at any time since they signed a peace treaty in 1979.

But when Peres vowed at the Cabinet meeting to pursue an international peace conference, Shamir objected. The Likud leader told reporters after the two-hour session he could not understand why Peres sought "to hand Israel's fate into the hands of countries whose interests do not run parallel to those of Israel."

He and other Israeli hard-liners are worried that the country would be outnumbered by Arabs and under pressure to make territorial concessions.

Survey: More than three in 10 pupils pondered suicide

CHICAGO (AP) — More than three in 10 of the nation's top high school students who responded to a survey said they have considered suicide and 27 percent said they knew classmates who use drugs.

The study of teens' opinions on education, social issues and government also said that 23 percent of the high achievers acknowledged having had sex, but fewer said they were using birth control devices than last year.

The students surveyed were selected among the 450,000 teen-agers featured in the current edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students," a book that recognizes top juniors and seniors.

The Who's Who organization, based in suburban Lake Forest, conducts a yearly survey of the students who carry an 'A' or 'B' average. The 1986 survey, the 17th compiled, was mailed to 5,000 students in the spring and returned by 1,943. Results were released Sunday.

In response to questions about suicide, 46 percent said they knew a young person who has tried to commit or committed suicide and 31 percent said they had contemplated suicide. Last year, 28 percent said they had considered suicide.

Poll: Many favor drug tests

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly 70 percent of the respondents to a poll said they favor a drug screening program at work, and more than eight in 10 said they would submit to such tests.

Seventy-five percent of the 1,014 people surveyed in the Time magazine poll agreed that drug use in the United States is a serious problem, but only 35 percent said it was serious in their community.

The nationwide poll was performed between Sept. 8 and 10 by Yankelovich, Clancy, Shulmann. Results were released Sunday.

Sixty-nine percent said they would favor a drug testing program in their company. Eighty-one percent said they submit to drug tests and 17 percent said they wouldn't.

Although most said they favored drug testing, 58 percent said they agreed that people had a right to refuse to be tested. And 44 percent said they agreed that problems with the accuracy of drug tests made the screenings unreliable.

Jet barely avoids collision

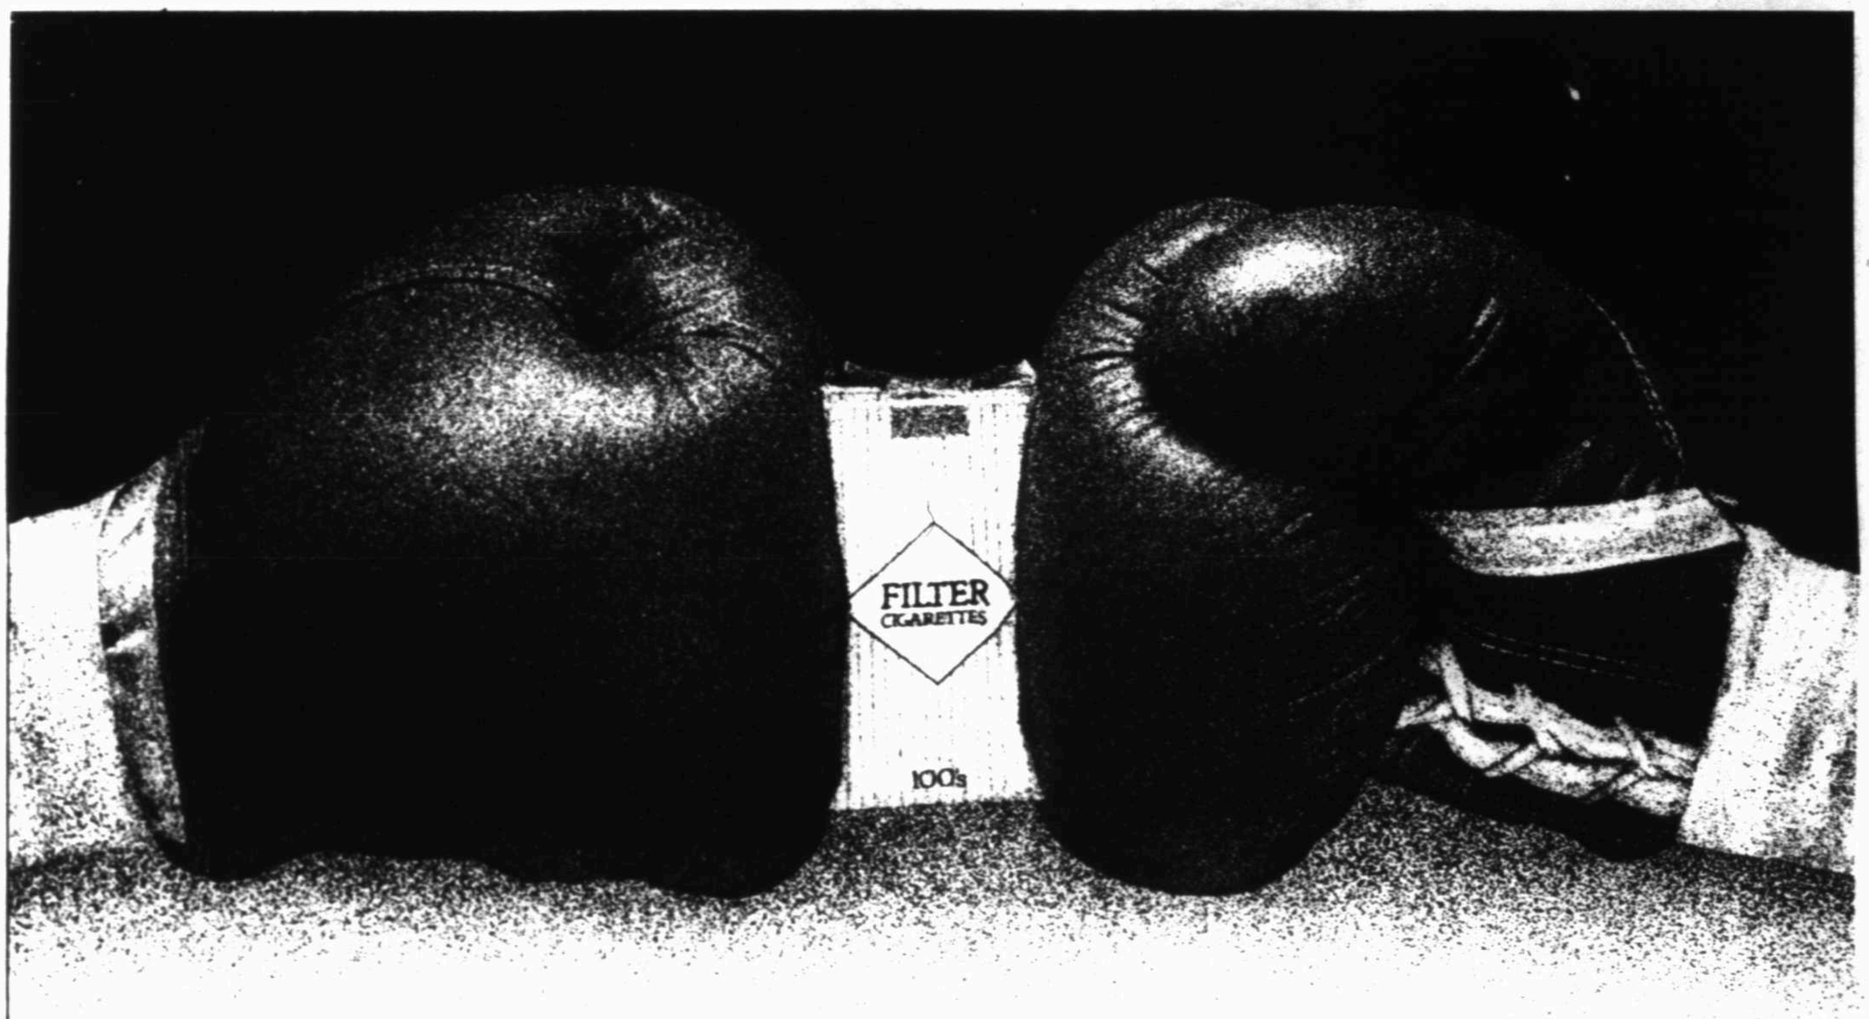

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — An American Airlines jet narrowly avoided another aircraft about 30 miles east of the spot where an Aeromexico jet collided with a light plane in a crash that killed at least 81 people, officials said.

An American Airlines DC-9, carrying 109 passengers and a crew of six to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, was about 10 miles out of Ontario International Airport on Thursday when air traffic controllers warned the pilot about another plane one mile straight ahead, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said Saturday from Washington, D.C.

The jetliner pilot, who had received permission to climb to 9,000 feet, reported making a climbing right turn at 7,500 feet to miss what appeared to be a single-engine Cessna by 200 feet, Farrar said.

The airliner landed safely in Texas without further incident, American Airlines spokesman Joe Stroop said.

The planes were four miles southeast of Norco, 45 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles.

Rain forecast for Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a 30 percent chance of rain tonight, and isolated thunderstorms for Tuesday with the chance of rain less than 20 percent.

The NWS forecast for Tuesday also calls for a high in the middle 80s with winds out of the south at 10-15 mph. For tonight, the service is calling for a low in the middle 60s and southerly winds at five to 10 mph.

Sunday's high of 85 was 14 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1965. This morning's low of 66 was 16 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1961.

STATE

Moist Gulf air brought showers and thunderstorms to coastal areas of Southeast Texas and the lower Rio Grande valley today and forecasters expected more rainfall later.

A land breeze drove moist, unstable air over the Gulf of Mexico inland, the National Weather Service said. Most of the state had cloudy skies today, except North Texas with clear skies.

Winds were south to southeast at 5 to 10 mph across most of the Lone Star State, the weather service said.

The weather service said skies should be generally partly cloudy to cloudy statewide with a slight chance of isolated showers and thunderstorms. Highs were expected to be mostly low 80s to mid 90s.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms should form mainly in western sections of North Texas on Tuesday. Highs were expected in the lower to mid 90s, with lows in the lower 70s.

Partly cloudy and warm conditions were expected through Tuesday in South Texas with widely scattered mainly daytime thundershowers in the Coastal Plains and Southeast Texas.

NATION

Rain that was scattered from the Midwest to the Northwest today added more water to already-soaked sections of Michigan.

Showers and thunderstorms ranged across Wisconsin, the upper Mississippi Valley, the northern Plains, northern Rockies, Oregon and northern California as well as northwest Texas and central Florida.

Rain and a few thundershowers were scattered across southern Michigan, where at least four people died and three others were presumed drowned after thunderstorms and floodwaters swamped broad sections last week. At least 52 other people were injured, and six dams were breached, officials said.

No second fiddle for Tony Dorsett

Cowboys

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — While NFL fans have gone ga-ga over the intramural duel between Herschel Walker and Tony Dorsett, the Dallas Cowboys have quietly become a pretty good football team.

The Cowboys handed the Detroit Lions a 31-7 thrashing Sunday with solid performances from a lot of people — including the celebrated running backs.

Dorsett, playing on a badly sprained left ankle, ran the ball 23 times for 117 yards and a touchdown. Walker ran only six times but still got 51 yards and a TD on the ground. He also caught five passes for 35 yards.

But there were plenty of other Cowboy heroes in this one-sided contest.

Quarterback Danny White completed 20 of 31 passes for 184 yards and a TD with two interceptions. He also ran 1 yard for a score.

On defense, Dallas linebacker Jessie Penn recovered both of James Jones' fumbles while tackle Jim Jeffcoat made the hit that caused Garry James' fumble and had two quarterback sacks.

"It surprised me a little bit to be able to do some of the things as well as we did," Dorsett said. "But, you know, we're not a bad football team. We're going to get better as the weeks go by."

The Lions contributed greatly to their own downfall by losing three of four fumbles and taking eight penalties for 70 yards. As a result, Dallas controlled the ball for 37:13, leaving Detroit 22:47 to get something going.

"The team we were playing wasn't anywhere near what I saw them play last week" on film, Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "You don't expect a game like this. I'm sure the Lions thought they were ready."

The Cowboys improved to 2-0 while the Lions slipped to 1-1.

"I expect more from my team," Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers said. "We had terrible field position. As it kept going, it got worse.

"Those poor (Detroit defensive) guys weren't supposed to be on the field that long."

The Cowboys took advantage of two key Detroit mistakes for 17 points in the second quarter.

Dorsett swept around right end for a 5-yard touchdown one minute into the second quarter after the Cowboys had recovered a Jones fumble.

"Dorsett is a tough, tough running back," Rogers said. "Some of our guys go down with a sprained ankle and they come back in two or three weeks. Dorsett sprains his ankle and he's back up in seven days.

"He has never been given credit for how tough he is."

RUSHING—Dallas, Dorsett 23-117, Walker 6-51, Clack 3-17, Newsome 3-11, White 1-1. Detroit, Jones 14-46, James 8-42, Black 1-(minus 8).

PASSING—Dallas, White 20-31-2-184. Pelluer 1-1-0-18. Detroit, Hipple 10-16-0-91, Ferguson 4-12-0-32.

RECEIVING—Dallas, Hill 6-66, Walker 5-35, Newsome 4-34, Banks 2-24, Cosby 2-21, Clack 1-18, Dorsett 1-4. Detroit, Jones 5-17, Chadwick 3-55, Bland 2-22, Lewis 2-17, Thompson 1-12, James 1-0.

MISSED FIELD GOALS—None.

White hooked up with Timmy Newsome on a 15-yard TD pass play.

"We pretty much executed the game plan," White said. "We never threw the ball deep. We were patient. We were able to maintain ball-control, which was important."

Moments later, Detroit punter Mike Black fumbled at the Lions' 9 yard line and Rafael Septien kicked a 27-yard field goal with one second remaining in the half.

"When you play that way, you can't do much about it," Landry said. "That's the way we played here last year."

Dorsett appeared to have scored on a 34-yard run with 12:41 remaining in the game, but officials ruled he was stopped inside the 1 after checking a television replay. White dived in for the score on the next play.

Walker, who was used sparingly in the contest, scored on a 7-yard run with 8:07 remaining for a 31-0 lead.

"Herschel is good," Landry said. "Herschel helps us because when Tony's not there, they still gotta worry."

Jones scored on a 1-yard dive for Detroit with 3:00 left in the game.

The Lions started with Eric Hipple at quarterback and switched to Joe Ferguson at the start of the second half, but neither could solve the tough Dallas defense.

Hipple hit 10 of 16 for 91 yards while Ferguson was 4 of 12 for 23.

'I felt we were able to get up and down the field," Hipple said. "It was just us making mistakes. We did it to ourselves."

Rogers said Hipple would remain the No. 1 quarterback.

Despite their advantage in possession time, the Cowboy's longest scoring drive was only seven plays. That was late in the second quarter when White hit second-down passes of 11, 9 and 11 yards to Hill, Newsome and Doug Cosbie, respectively, before finding Newsome open and alone in the right flat for the score that made it 14-0.

Walker had a 34-yard run in the five-play drive that ended with his touchdown run.

The Cowboys rolled up 388 net yards, compared with Detroit's 184.

Tony Hill was White's favorite target, catching six passes for 66 yards.

Tackle Jim Jeffcoat and linebacker Jesse Penn led the Dallas defense which was largely responsible for the Cowboys enjoying a 37:13 to 22:14 advantage in possession time.

"I'm trying to become a leader, because we need new leadership on this team," Jeffcoat said. "That's what I'm looking forward to doing."

Jeffcoat made the hit which caused one fumble and was credited with two sacks for losses of 6 and 9 yards respectively.

A crowd of 73,812 saw the game in the Silverdome.

TCU's Jeffrey rewrites SWC's record book

SWC Football

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas Christian's Tony Jeffery had the kind of day a running back dreams about but the state of Louisiana wasn't as kind to Texas A&M, which may have left its national championship aspirations in a nightmare there.

It was a wild second Saturday for Southwest Conference teams who took bigger lumps than they dished out in non-conference games. Southern Methodist opened SWC play by giving new Rice Coach Jerry Berndt a 45-3 lesson.

Baylor ripped Louisiana Tech 38-7, Arkansas blanked Ole Miss 21-0 and TCU blasted Tulane 48-31 for the SWC's good news.

THE BAD tidings included LSU's 35-17 shocker of defending SWC champion Texas A&M, ranked No. 7 and thought to be a contender for the national title; No. 2 Miami's 61-11 slaughter of Texas Tech and new Red Raider Coach David McWilliams; and Stanford's 31-20 dissection of Texas where Coach Fred Akers is under fire.

Houston was idle and probably glad of it.

Jeffery, a 5-11, 200-pound junior from Gladewater, Texas broke the SWC rushing record of 342 yards by one yard. He gained eight yards on his final carry to eclipse the record set by Texas' Roosevelt Leaks in 1973 against SMU.

However, Leaks carried 37 times. Jeffery rushed only 16 times, averaging 21.4 yards per run.

"I had been dreaming about having a good day," Jeffery said. "I couldn't sleep the night before the game. I was going over the plays in my mind. Then it just came true. I was surprised because I didn't know how many yards I had."

TCU COACH Jim Wacker said, "It was an incredible, incredible performance."

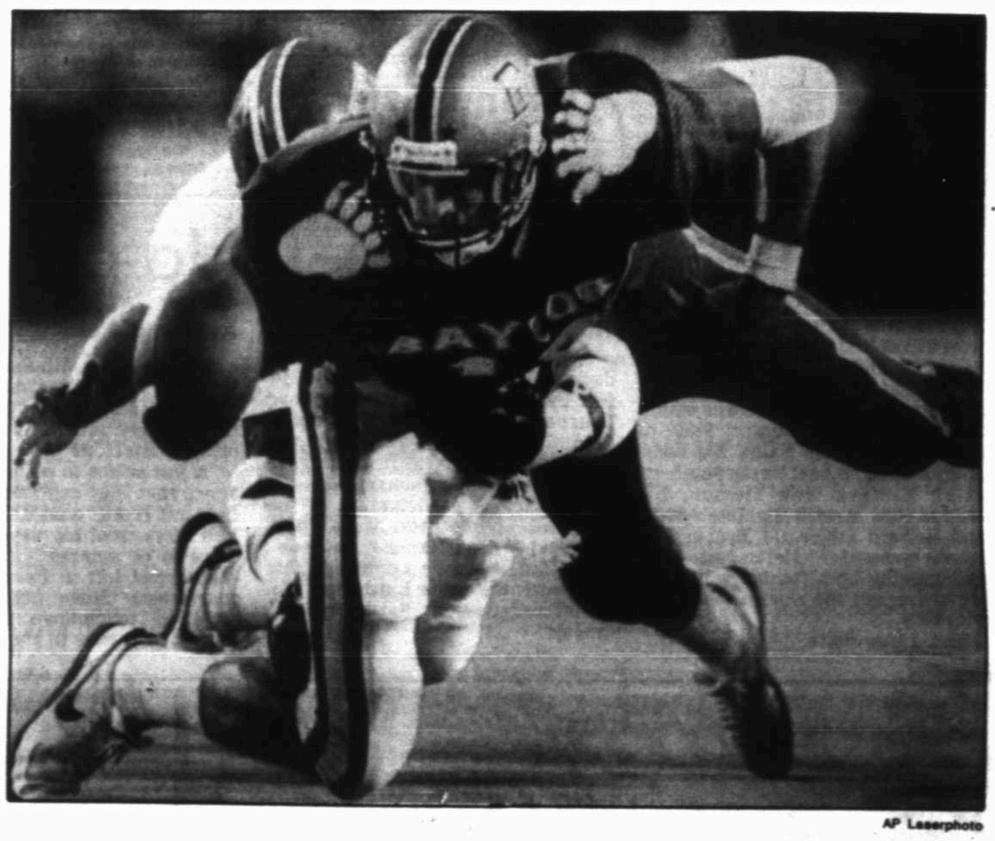

Wacker was unaware Jeffery was just 13 yards short of the NCAA single game rushing record of 357 by Washington State's Rueben Mayes in 1984 until late in the game.

Wacker decided not to stop the clock.

"I don't think you call a timeout to set records," Wacker said. "I'm very happy for T.J."

Jeffery scored on runs of 11, 38, 32, 81, and 67 yards in the sixth best rushing day on record.

Baylor quarterback Cody Carlson loses ball after being hit by tackler as Bears scored second victory of the season at the expense of Louisiana Tech.

Kosar's rescue mission sinks Oilers, 23-20

HOUSTON (AP) — The Cleveland Browns finally discovered an answer to the question of what to do about the Houston Oiler blitz.

It took them until the fourth quarter, but there still was time for Bernie Kosar to complete a 55-yard touchdown bomb to Reggie Langhorne with 2:10 left to rally the Browns to a 23-20 victory Sunday.

"We tried to get the big play all day and they stopped us," Kosar said. "It wasn't until the fourth quarter that we got the job done. We showed a lot of character out there by coming back in the fourth quarter."

The Oilers remained in the game despite five turnovers and took a 13-9 lead on Larry Moriarty's 8-yard run and field goals of 35 and 36 yards by Tony Zendejas.

But after Langhorne's touchdown catch, Houston's Willie Drewrey fumbled the kickoff and D.D. Hoggard recovered at the 20 to set up Earnest Byner's 1-yard dive with 1:30 to play.

"They took a lot of chances on defense with all their blitzing," Byner said. "They held us until the end. On that touchdown pass, I was to pick up one of the blitzing linebackers and give Bernie time to throw. If he's got time, he'll get you."

Houston's Warren Moon, who suffered three intereeptions, hit Butch Woolfolk with a 20-yard touchdown pass with six seconds to play for the final score.

But it was too little too late for the Oilers, who now have lost five straight games to their AFC Central Divison rival and seven of their last eight.

The Browns and Oilers have 1-1 records.

"We couldn't overcome our errors," Oiler guard Mike Munchak said. "It's tough to be able to come to life after almost three quarters of being inactive and then lose at the end."

Langhorne's touchdown catch was a play that wasn't originally in the Browns' game plan.

"It was a play we've been using all year, but we didn't have it in the script for this game," Kosar said of the winning touchdown.

"We put it in at halftime. It's designed to beat the blitz. Reggie has the option of hooking or going deep. He made a nice move to the outside then he had the whole field to work with. I just laid it up and he ran to it. I knew he'd catch it if anyone could."

Cleveland cornerback Hanford Dixon, who recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass, said the Oilers' offense was predictable.

"We knew on first and 10 that they'd run a lot," Dixon said. "If we stopped them on second down, they would pass. That's the type of coach they have. He's a blue collar, grind it out guy."

Fans were booing the Oilers' play-calling in the fourth quarter.

"That's our philsophy, and it's won six games," quarterback Warren Moon said. "You just have to pass more if you don't complete the pass on first down. I think we'll look back next week and see some good things on film."

"They have a great offense, but we had time to overcome it," Munchak said.

"When you're down by three it's okay, but when you're down by 10, it's too late."

The Oilers had led throughout the game until Moon threw two interceptions in the third quarter, allowing the Browns, 1-1, to get back into the game.

Moon hit rookie Ernest Givins with an 11-yard pass prior to Zendejas' first field goal. Givins caught a 17-yard pass to set up Zendejas' 36-yarder with 3:26 left in the game.

The Browns capitalized on two third-quarter interceptions to take a 9-7 lead on 29- and 45-yard field goals by Matt Bahr. Cleveland safety Chris Rockins returned an interception 24 yards and Clay Matthews picked off another Moon pass and returned it six yards.

The Oilers emerged from a defense-dominated first half to a 7-3 lead on fullback Larry Moriarty's 8-yard run. Moriarty broke through two tacklers into the end zone for the score with 9:16 left in the first quarter.

TED BATTLES

Anyone for basketball, yet?

After Saturday's football returns, the question everyone is asking around the Southwest Conference concerns Texas Tech. Can the Red Raiders, folks want to know, win a third straight SWC basketball title.

And the cage season isn't too far off, less than three months and the SWC will be heading into non-conference action.

That's what happens when the football season is suddenly terminated, which may be the kindest way to describe the SWC's late and lamented national championship aspirations.

Texas A&M, the leading contender, was dismantled by LSU, the defeat perhaps not as surprising as the margin.

Fans hopeful that Texas could turn it around with a more rounded offense this year were shocked when Stanford toyed with the Longhorns.

The only consolation for Texas Tech in losing 61-11 to Miami is that they fared better than Notre Dame did last year.

Even Baylor's win over Louisiana Poly, or whomever, did not erase the memory of last week's scary finish at Wyoming. Of course, the Bears could restore shaken faith by beating USC this week, but the Trojans appeared to be in the throes of a revival against Illinois last week and it won't be easy.

Certainly, Texas and Texas A&M can come back and salvage respectable seasons. The Aggies did so last year and Texas needs only a victory over Oklahoma Oct. 11 to make Orange the in color again.

Meanwhile, Texas Christian, a team that was supposed to be just going through the motions this year while waiting for 1987, provided the league with its lone source for optimism. True, the opposition was only Tulane, but the Frogs were the same offensive circus they were two years ago in catching a nation's imagination.

And in five-TD Tony Jeffrey, who ran for a SWC record 343 yards in one game, they have an offensive back who could quickly make Horned Frogs fans forget the name of last year's Heisman Trophy candidate, the ill-fated Kevin David, who is playing somewhere in the NFL.

As for Texas Tech, there were no milling thousands waiting to welcome the team home from the Orange Bowl, just a few ambulances for the survivors, and more bad news.

A week ago, New Mexico looked like a comfortable old slipper, something to relax in while waiting for the SWC race to begin. That was before UNM almost gave BYU a lesson at its own game before losing 31-30.

As for the national championship, it appears cut and dried. If Ohio State was one of the contenders, you can forget the Big 10 and Oklahoma summarily disposed of the Pac-10's leading candidate, UCLA, like they were playing Iowa State or Kansas State.

Miami passed a major test a week ago in defeating cross-state rival Florida, one of the saltier teams around the last few years, even if stocked with a bunch of wringers.

So, on the evidence in to date, sketchy as it may be, Oklahoma vs. Miami a week hence looms as big a game as any on the schedule in determing who's No. 1

Puckett, Woods lead Twins over Rangers

American

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Pinch-hitter Al Woods and Kirby Puckett delivered key hits in a two-run eighth inning to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 7-6 victory over the Texas Rangers Sunday.

Jeff Reed singled and Woods lined a two-out double into the right field corner which was misplayed by Texas right fielder Pete Incaviglia for an error, allowing Reed to score the tie-breaking run.

Puckett followed with a single to score Woods with the Twins' seventh run.

The rally made a winner of George Frazier, 1-1, who pitched the final two innings. Dale Mohorcic, 2-3, was the loser.

Texas' Don Slaught had tied the game 5-5 in the top of the eighth with a solo homer off Frazier, his 13th of the season.

Yankees 11, Red Sox 5

NEW YORK — Designated hitter Mike Easler drove in three runs with a home run and single, and Rickey Henderson and Dan Pasqua each added solo home runs in a 14-hit New York attack to pull within nine games of the American League East Division-leading Red Sox.

Ron Guidry, 8-10, allowed four runs and eight hits in six innings. Dave Righetti got the final four outs for his 39th save, breaking John Hiller's record for left-handers, set in 1973.

Tigers 7, Orioles 0

DETROIT — Frank Tanana and Bill Campbell combined on a five-hitter and Pat Sheridan hit a two-run homer as the Tigers swept the three game series.

Indians 5, A's 2

CLEVELAND — Ken Schrom, 13-7, scattered seven hits in 8 1-3 innings and Tony Bernazard homered and singled and drove in four runs as Cleveland beat Oakland winning for the 10th straight time.

White Sox 3, Angels 1

CHICAGO — Ron Hassey's second-inning double keyed a two-run rally and Joe Cowley pitched a six-hitter in besting California's Kirk McCaskill, 16-8, who threw two run-scoring wild pitches. Cowley had given up just one run in his last 21 innings before the Angels ruined his shutout bid in the seventh on consecutive doubles by Devon White and Dick Schofield.

Royals 10, Mariners 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jorge Orta drove in four runs and rookie Bo Jackson hit the longest home run in Royals' Stadium history for his first major league homer. Right-hander Mark Gubicza, 10-6, won for the 10th time in his last 12 decisions.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 0

MILWAUKEE — Cecil Cooper went 4-for-4, Dale Sveum hit a two-run homer and left-hander Teddy Higuera, 10-9, pitched a five-hitter, his fourth shutout and 12th complete game of the season.

Bears spoil Ryan's return

NFL Roundup

Associated Press

To the players on the Chicago Bears defense, it was the return of a hero. Those same defenders made sure that Buddy Ryan did not come back to Chicago as a conquering hero.

It wasn't easy. The Bears were forced to overtime before recording a 13-10 NFL victory over the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday. Ryan, who devised the 46 Defense that the Bears mastered in winning the Super Bowl last year, left in January to become head coach of the Eagles.

Before the game, several Bears stopped to chat with Ryan. Afterward, middle linebacker Mike Singletary and Ryan embraced in the corridor outside the locker rooms.

"I wish you'd let that Buddy thing rest," linebacker Otis Wilson said. "I'm glad it's over with. We beat him. He's 0-2 and we're 2-0."

Barely.

Kevin Butler, who missed four of five field goal tries in regulation time, kicked a 23-yarder 5:56 into the extra period after Charles Crawford fumbled the kickoff to begin the overtime.

Walter Payton rushed 34 times for 177 yards and scored the Bears' only touchdown on a 1-yard dive. It was his 100th career touchdown, putting him behind only John Riggins with 106 and Jim Brown with 104 among NFL rushers. He now has 75 100-yard games in his career and 15,150 yards overall.

"We don't like to rely on him that much, but we had to today," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, who has shown no special love for Ryan. "I thought we ran the ball down their throats."

The Eagles forced overtime with a scoring pass from Ron Jaworski to Mike Quick.

"It doesn't hurt me," Ryan said of the defeat. "But I feel sorry for my guys in there. They played their hearts out and if we had gotten a break, we might have won it."

Bengals 36, Bills 33, OT

Buffalo lost for the 18th straight time on the road as the Bengals staged a comeback. Quarterback Boomer Esiason sneaked 2 yards for the tying touchdown with 22 seconds left in regulation, then Jim Breech kicked a 20-yard field goal in overtime.

Esiason guided the Bengals 74 yards in less than two minutes for the tying score. Jim Kelly, in his second NFL game, threw a pass right to linebacker Carl Zander on the first play of overtime, giving Cincinnati the ball on Buffalo's 17-yard line. Two plays later, Breech won it.

Saints 24, Packers 10

Dave Waymer had two of New Orleans' seven interceptions and wide receiver Eric Martin accounted for 156 yards and a touchdown on his first two catches.

Redskins 10, Raiders 6

Washington rallied late in the game to drop the Raiders to 0-2. Quarterback Jay Schroeder hit tight end Clint Didier on a 59-yard pass play to set up George Rogers' game-winning 3-yard touchdown run with 7:27 left. It was the longest pass completion of Schroeder's career and Didier's biggest gain ever.

Tight end Todd Christensen made four catches for 64 yards as Los Angeles moved to the Washington 28 with 54 seconds remaining. But Marc Wilson overthrew Dokie Williams twice in the end zone, then was sacked. Defensive back Darrell Green intercepted Wilson's fourth-down desperation pass in the end zone.

Los Angeles running back Marcus Allen gained 104 yards on the ground to extend his NFL-record streak of consecutive 100-yard games to 11.

Falcons 33, Cardinals 13

David Archer threw two touchdown passes and William Andrews, back on the field after missing more than two seasons with a knee injury, scored his first touchdown of the year as Atlanta moved to 2-0.

Giants 20, Padres 7

The high-voltage San Diego offense, which struck for 50 points last week, was held to one touchdown by the Giants, who forced seven turnovers. Joe Morris scored on a 1-yard run and Phil Simms tossed a 12-yard TD pass to Lionel Manuel for the Giants.

Rams 16, 49ers 13

Mike Lansford's 18-yard field goal with two seconds to play won it after quarterback Steve Bartkowski came alive in the waning minutes to guide the Rams on a 92-yard drive. Bartkowski completed only nine of 20 passes for 54 yards prior to the winning drive, but was 4-for-4 for 60 yards as he took the Rams downfield.

Bartkowski hit Bobby Duckworth on a 35-yard pass to the 4 with 1:11 left. On that pass, the officials initially ruled that Duckworth, who rolled into the end zone, had scored, but the decision was reversed.

Vikings 23, Bucs 10

Linebacker Chris Doleman returned an interception of a Steve DeBerg pass 59 yards for a touchdown and Tommy Kramer passed 10 yards to Mike Mularkey for another TD.

Dolphins 30, Colts 10

Lorenzo Hampton scored twice and Dan Marino passed for 254 yards as Miami rebounded from a 50-28 loss at San Diego last week.

Hampton, a second-year running back starting only his second game, ran for touchdowns of five and 21 yards. Rookie linebacker John Offerdahl intercepted a pass, caused a fumble and made a team-high seven tackles. Rookie James Pruitt returned one punt for a 71-yard touchdown and went 35 yards with another to set up a field goal.

Seahawks 23, Chiefs 17

Field goals of 53, 35 and 34 yards by Norm Johnson and touchdowns of one yard by Curt Warner and a 6-yard throw from Dave Krieg to Daryl Turner helped Seattle move to 2-0. Ken Easley picked off a Todd Blackledge pass on the Kansas City 29 and ran it to the 5 before Warner's third-quarter score.

Four teams stay unbeaten

Lone Star

Associated Press

Texas A&I's running game and Abilene Christian's passing attack continued to pile up the points and yards as four Lone Star Conference teams remain undefeated in 1986 football.

The Javelinas, 2-0, defending league champions, outscored North Dakota 67-44 Saturday afternoon in Grand Forks, and Abilene Christian, 2-0, defeated former LSC foe Southwest Texas State 38-24 in San Marcos Saturday night.

Also, league newcomer West Texas State, 1-1, got its first win with a 35-28 victory over Central State of Oklahoma; Angelo State, 2-1, came from behind to beat Texas Southern 31-27; Eastern New Mexico, 2-0, topped New Mexico Highlands 30-23; and Howard Payne, 0-1, dropped its season opener to Tarleton State 22-21 by coughing up a fumble while trying to run out the clock in the final minute.

East Texas State, 1-0, was open.

And A&I's Heath Sherman, last year's LSC Freshman of the Year with 1,111 yards, added 216 yards and also scored four times.

Cassidy's takes first in Floyd polo tourney

Cassidy's emerged from Saturday's round-robin mixmaster to defeat Evans Ranch for the Jay Floyd Tournament title at the Midland Polo Club Sunday. Although the teams tied, 7-7, a tie breaker gave Cassidy's the championship.

Other teams participating in the weekend competition were Ibex, BTA and Wilson Ranch.

The fall schedule continues this week with the Gene Linthicum Memorial tournament Saturday and Sunday.

No panic as BYU pulls out victory over Lobos

Associated Press

Trailing 30-17 with 9 minutes left, Brigham Young University's football players had many thoughts running through their minds. But panic, obviously, wasn't one of them.

"It just seems to be in their confidence that they can move down the field and score," said BYU Coach LaVell Edwards of his players. "I never cease to be amazed."

With 5:51 left in Provo Saturday, quarterback Steve Lindsley threw his third touchdown pass of the game, a 21-yarder to Mark Bellini on a fourth-and-nine play.

The Cougar defense, which had given up large chunks of real estate all afternoon, then stopped UNM on three plays and forced a punt. Lindsley's 47-yard pass to Richard Zayas got BYU inside the Lobo 10, and Lakei Heimuli scored the tying touchdown from the 1 three plays later.

Joe Bibbo's extra-point attempt following the last New Mexico touchdown hit the right upright, and that miss proved to be crucial. Quarterback Billy Rucker ran for two fourth-quarter touchdowns and earlier threw a TD pass to spark the Lobos, now 0-2.

Dunn was especially upset about a fourth-quarter call on a BYU pass play. Lindsley's pass to Robert Parker appeared to be complete at the UNM 21-yard line, and the football then popped loose. After a discussion among the officials, the ball was awarded to BYU.

In the only other WAC action of the weekend, surprising San Diego State went to 2-0 overall with a 37-30 decision in Salt Lake City that spoiled Utah's season opener. In non-league games, Texas-El Paso raised its record to 2-1 with a 47-33 defeat of New Mexico State in Las Cruces, Wyoming edged Pacific 23-20 in Laramie, and Colorado State bowed to Arizona 37-10 in Tucson.

UTEP, off to its best start since 1971, built a 27-10 halftime lead, then rallied for two scores in the final 47 seconds to break a 33-33 deadlock. Sammy Garza threw for 300 yards and a TD and ran for two other scores, and John Harvey rushed for 125 yards and two TDs. The Aggies scored two touchdowns just 17 seconds apart to draw into the tie, but Garza's 6-yard run put UTEP back ahead.

Ex-Midland Cubs team to beat Astros

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Houston's Mike Scott would have gladly traded in a few of his career-high strikeouts Sunday for a couple of fly balls in the ninth inning against San Diego.

"An out's an out — you still have to get 27 ot them to win," Scott said after yielding a two-run homer to pinch-hitter Carmelo Martinez, a former Midland Cub, in the ninth inning as the Padres beat Houston 3-2.

The loss cut the Astros' lead in the National League West to seven games over Cincinnati, which beat Los Angeles 4-3.

Scott, 16-10, had 14 strikeouts through eight innings against a San Diego lineup that featured four players appearing in their first major-league game.

Scott, leading the major leagues in earned run average and strikeouts, took a six-hitter into the ninth. Martinez, batting for Randy Asadoor, who had struck out three times in his major-league debut, homered over the left-field wall on a 1-1 pitch.

The loss was the second straight for the Astros in the ninth inning. On Saturday night, San Diego scored three times in the ninth for a 4-3 victory.

Former Midland Cub Craig Lefferts, 9-7, pitched the final two innings for his second victory in two days.

National

Phillies 6, Mets 0

PHILADELPHIA — Kevin Gross pitched a six-hit shutout and tripled home two runs Sunday as Philadelphia and completed a three-game sweep that prevented the Mets from clinching the National League East championship. The Mets lost for the fifth time in six games. New York still leads the runnerup Phillies by 19 games and needs a combination of two victories or Philadelphia losses to win their third division title and first since 1973.

Pirates 9, Cubs 2

PITTSBURGH — Sid Bream's two-run single highlighted a six-run fifth inning as the Pirates sent 12 batters to the plate. Reuschel, 9-16, worked seven innings for the victory.

Cardinals 10, Expos 2

ST. LOUIS — Mike Laga hit a two-run homer during a five-run first inning and Willie McGee went 4-for-5 with a solo home run and RBI double. Danny Cox, 10-12, pitched a six-hitter for his staff-leading sixth complete game.

McGee opened the seventh with his eighth homer and Tommy Herr hit an RBI double later in the inning. Van Slyke singled home a run in the eighth.

Coleman stole his major league-leading 95th and 96th bases, but was thrown out by Tejada, a rookie catcher, while trying for No. 97.

Giants 7, Braves 6

SAN FRANCISCO — Bob Brenly atoned for a major-league record-tying four errors in an inning by hitting two home runs, including a solo shot with two outs in the ninth Sunday.

Brenly, a veteran catcher, made his four errors at third base in the fourth inning. He became the first player to make four errors in an inning since Lenny Merullo of the Chicago Cubs on Sept. 13, 1942, and also tied the major-league record for most errors by a third baseman in game. The misplays led to the four unearned runs.

Reds 4, Dodgers 3

LOS ANGELES — Eric Davis, robbed of a home run earlier in the game, capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning with an RBI single as the Reds won their third straight game and pulled within seven games of first-place Houston in the National League West.

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill refused to concede that his team was out of the race for a national championship.

"You're not in the national title hunt until the end of the year," Sherrill said after quarterback Kevin Murray served up four interceptions to the alert LSU defense. "Nobody's in it now. Not even Oklahoma."

Sherrill did concede A&M played poorly.

"We made a lot of mistakes," he said. "We were never consistent defensively. We weren't aggressive like we usually are."

Baylor only allowed Louisiana Tech 54 yards total offense to set up a nationally televised showdown of unbeatens with Southern California in Waco on Saturday.

"It will be the biggest intersectional game I've ever had a part of in Waco," Teaff said. "USC has a much better team than the one we beat last year in Los Angeles."

For Texas, it was the first time in 10 seasons the 'Horns had lost a September game under Akers.

BMX rider Scott Yearwood returns to earth against the background of a blue sky after a speedy leap over one of the many jumps on the Chaparral BMX Racetrack at Ulmer Park.

Motocross

Every Saturday afternoon, riders of all ages descend on Midland's Ulmer Park to participate in a sport so popular it recently drew contestants here from as far away as El Paso.

BMX, or bike motocross, racing is held at the Chaparral BMX racetrack nearly year-round.

The dirt track here, banked with tires, was built several years ago by interested riders and their parents. The first BMX track in the area was located between Midland and Odessa near Regional Air Terminal before it was moved to Ulmer Park.

"It's a real competitive sport — it's rough, but not to a serious degree," said Vern Williams, whose 15-year-old son Jeff is a regular racer. "If you don't think it's scary, just try going around that track one time."

According to Jeff Williams, the sport originated in 1975 when motocross riders would take their motorcycles around the track to test it before a race. Track officials, however, were upset about the damage done to a track when that happened. So, riders decided to make test-runs using bicycles, and BMX racing was born.

Kathy Yearwood of El Paso spent a recent Saturday on the road with her son, Scott, 14, and two other El Paso riders — Jason Bunn, 13, and Greg Rogers, 15.

The group traveled to Carlsbad for a race, and then on to Midland for a 6 p.m. race. After the Midland race, they had to travel back straight to El Paso to get ready for a 1 p.m. race the next day.

"My son got involved by going to another race with someone; when he got home he was so excited about the race and that was it — he was hooked," Mrs. Yearwood said. "It really spreads by word-of-mouth."

BMX riders are classified by the United States Bicycle Association into three classes — novice, advanced and expert. Jeff Williams said he races regularly against a 20-year-old, and said there is an over 30 class at the nationals, which will be held this year Oct. 28 at the Mesquite Championship Rodeo Arena.

The younger Williams said regulations require that riders wear helmets, long sleeve shirts and armpads; the bikes, which vary in size but usually have 20-inch frames, also have to have pads on the handlebars.

Jason Bunn of El Paso maintains his lead over Greg Rogers as the two come spinning out of a wide turn on the track at Ulmer Park.

Greg Rogers of El Paso, left, and Jeff Williams, 15, a junior at Midland Lee High School, stay neck-and-neck as they fly over the Chaparral BMX Racetrack at Ulmer Park. BMX riders spend a good deal of their time airborne.

Amy Whitley

Amy Whitley, 74, of Midland, died last Wednesday in a local hospital following a brief illness.

Services were to be at 1:30 p.m. today at the Lee Street Church of Christ with L.H. Alexander officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

She was born Feb. 14, 1911, in Coleman. She had been a Midland resident for 42 years and was a member of the Lee Street Church of Christ.

Survivors include four sons, Rudolph Whitley and Mark Whitley, both of San Diego, Calif., and Roosevelt Whitley and Sceib Whitley, both of Midland; four daughters, Mrs. Wilma Perry and Mrs. Ella W. Stramebler, both of Midland, Mrs. Christell Cornett of Houston and Mrs. Jeanell Williams of Denver; 45 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

Morris Bryan

Services for Morris Bryan of Midland will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Rev. Pete Adcock of the Four Square Church officiating. Interment will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Resthaven Memorial Park in Lubbock under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Bryan died Saturday.

He was born Nov. 11, 1902, in Mount Vernon. He married Erma Lay on July 13, 1922 in Russellville, Ark. The couple lived in Mount Vernon until 1932 when they moved to Sweetwater. In 1948, they resided in Lubbock until 1953 when they moved to Midland. He was employed with Oliver Construction, retiring in 1974.

He was a member of the Four Square Church.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Corine Waldie of Las Vegas, Nev., Estelle Oliver of Midland and Bernice Bryan of Lubbock; one brother, Farris Bryan of Baton Rouge, La.; three sisters, Ila May Jackson of Mount Vernon, Alma Curtis of Madara, Calif., and Audra Jennings of Lubbock; six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Valley girl gets her trip to Disneyland

By DAVID SEDENO

MISSION (AP) — Mia Mireles smiled from ear to ear as she talked about always wanting to see Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse at Disneyland.

Today, the 5-year-old kindergarten student will get her wish, which could be one of her last.

Mia suffers from cystic fibrosis, the nation's No. 1 genetic killer of children.

Most children with cystic fibrosis, a disease that attacks the respiratory system, never reach their 18th birthday.

Mia is not in pain, but, according to statistics, she will be in the next few years as she begins to grow.

"My IVs hurt and it hurts when I cough," Mia said as her mother, Norma Mireles, held her in her lap in a rocking chair.

"She really doesn't know what she has. All she knows is that when she gets sick she has to go see the doctor," said Mia's father, David Mireles, a junior high school teacher.

For the past five years, the Mireleses, like countless other parents, have watched as their child's condition deteriorated.

Mireles holds down two jobs to make ends meet for his family, which also includes another daughter, 7-year-old Irene. The family rarely gets to leave the Rio Grande Valley.

But today, the Mireleses will begin spending a week at Disneyland and other attractions in California, courtesy of the Make-A-Wish Foundation, which has granted hundreds of terminally ill children their wishes.

"This trip came just in time," Mireles said, adding that his wife, who takes care of the children, needed a vacation. "Everyone has been so wonderful to us."

Mireles said the Make-A-Wish Foundation representative asked his daughter three questions.

"They asked her where she wanted to go. First, she said she wanted to go to Disneyland; the second one was Houston, because we always go there for her checkups and her third wish was Brownsville, because that's the only other place she knows," Mireles said with a laugh.

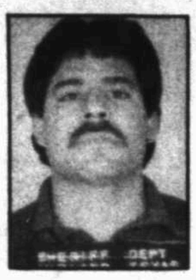

Mia's name was referred to a recently formed local division of the Make-A-Wish Foundation.

The local group, made up mostly of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. employees, recently coordinated the wishes of another cystic fibrosis victim, Joey Campos, a 10-year-old who got his first birthday party and who visited relatives in Washington D.C.

Professor's thesis on Santa Ana's time as prisoner to be published

LONGVIEW (AP) — After the Battle of San Jacinto, Mexican Gen. Santa Anna became a prisoner of the Republic of Texas only to become a liability, says a college professor's master's thesis, which was published as a book.

Kenneth Durham, a history professor at LeTourneau College, first wrote "Santa Anna — Prisoner of War In Texas" two decades ago. So when Skipper Steely of the Wright Press in Paris said he wanted to publish Durham's master's thesis, Durham was shocked.

"I was real surprised and delighted," said Durham.

He said the casual observer might consider Santa Anna's capture at San Jacinto a benefit for those fighting for Texas' independence, but he turned out to be more of a liability than an asset.

"He could have been killed at San Jacinto and Texas would have been better off," the author said.

Steely said he is a history buff who has made his interest into a publishing business.

He had been doing some research at East Texas State University in Commerce when he came across a copy of Durham's 1963 thesis on Santa Anna.

Durham said Steely felt that the renewed interest statewide in Texas history, due in part to the Texas Sesquicentennial, could make Durham's thesis topic a marketable book.

Durham said his work is one of the few studies focusing solely on the time the Mexican leader spent imprisoned by the Republic of Texas.

Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna Perez de Labron, Santa Anna's full name, was the source of much debate among independent Texans, said Durham. The treaty agreed upon by Mexico and the Republic of Texas called for the prisoner to be returned to his country.

But Durham said many Texans, including a number that were armed, remembered Goliad and the Alamo and wanted to see Santa Anna shot or hanged. Others thought keeping Santa Anna alive would give Texas an edge in negotiations for the recognition of independence from Mexico, he said.

"Santa Anna was an opportunist who would say whatever was to his advantage in a particular situation."

HISD enrollment declines little

HOUSTON (AP) — Enrollment in the Houston Independent School District surpassed the steep decline district officials were projecting.

The latest statistics show the district is down fewer than 100 students from 191,218 enrolled during the same period last year.

District officials had been predicting as many as 4,000 fewer students would show up because of the oil-related recession.

"The enrollment decline that was projected certainly did not happen," Superintendent Joan Raymond said. "It will help us on the revenue side, but more than that, we will not have to alter the program" and consider further cutbacks.

She said she expects the numbers to keep increasing over the next couple of weeks.

The official enrollment figures will be taken in October. The state uses those statistics to award money to school districts.

Odessans jailed on murder charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A man and a woman accused of the early Saturday fatal shooting of a 25-year-old southside Odessa man remained in the Ector County jail today in lieu of bond.

Ramona Delgaillo, 22, and Benney Bitolas, 25, both of 1459 S. Jackson, were arraigned before Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly on charges of murder. Weatherly set bond for each at $25,000.

George Luis Ramirez, 1118 W. Clifford St., was found lying on the curb in front of his home early Saturday morning. Ramirez had been shot once in the chest with a gun of unknown caliber, according to police spkesman Sgt. Frank Beam.

Ramirez was pronounced dead about 3:45 a.m. by Peace Justice Jimmy Harris, who ordered an autopsy.

Beam said the investigation of the killing of Ramirez is continuing in an effort to find a motive for the shooting.

Bitolas, in addition to being held on the murder charge, is also held on an Ector County grand jury indictment alleging theft from a person. Bond on the indictment was set at $10,000.

Odessa girl critical after mishap

From Staff Reports

A 10-year-old Odessa girl was listed in critical condition at Odessa Medical Center Hospital early today after she was hit by a vehicle Saturday evening.

Angela Wilkerson, 400 S. Tripp, was hospitalized in intensive care with head injuries she sustained in the accident, which occurred about 6:40 p.m. five miles west of Odessa in Ector County.

According to the Department of Public Safety, the girl had just exited a vehicle on the south shoulder of 42nd St. and ran across the street, when she saw a pickup truck which was driven by Alfred Knapp of Odessa. Reports said the girl fell down and was struck by the truck.

Police Roundup

The Midland Police Department is investigating the robbery of a local donut shop that occurred early today.

According to reports, a man entered the Bosa Donut shop, 700 N. Big Spring, about 2:05 a.m. this morning, and demanded money. He left with about $60 in cash and change. The suspect is described as a black male in his 30s, five feet nine inches tall, weighing approximately 175 pounds with black hair, brown eyes and a mustache.

Police said the man had a short, cropped haircut. He wore a white shirt, dark pants, and a gold down-filled vest.

Police are also searching for a suspect in the burglary of a residence in the 1100 block of N. Carrizo St. According to reports, earrings valued at $315, gold beads valued at $300, jade beads and ear clips valued at $150, and a gold ladies' watch valued at $150 were stolen Saturday, apparently sometime between 6:45 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The suspect in the burglary is described as a Hispanic male, five feet nine inches tall and approximately 160 pounds. The suspect had black collar-length straight hair and no facial hair, reports said.

A residence in the 500 block of Holmsley was also burglarized, according to reports. The complainant, Amy Allen, told police a turntable valued at $1,300, a stereo receiver valued at $900, a cassette deck valued at $800, a set of speakers valued at $500, a bicycle valued at $350 and an air brush and compressor valued at $250 were stolen. Reports said the items were taken between Sept. 5 and Sunday.

Police are investigating the theft of an automobile valued at nearly $30,000. The auto, a 1986 Lincoln Town Car valued at $28,155, was reported stolen from Village Lincoln Mercury, 3915 W. Wall St. The theft occurred sometime between 8 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday, reports said.

In other reports, police are investigating the burglary of a residence in the 1700 block of Bryant St. The victim, Joe Martinez, told police a .45 caliber pistol valued at $450, martial arts equipment valued at $500 and two power saws valued at $186 were reported stolen. The items were taken Saturday, sometime between 10 p.m. and 11:40 p.m.

A 16-foot trailer valued at $1,000 was reported stolen from a residence in the 2400 block of S. Midkiff. According to reports, the trailer was stolen sometime between 8 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

A videocassette recorder valued at $800 was also reported stolen, police said. According to reports, the VCR was stolen from a residence at 3300 Whitney Dr., sometime between 10:30 a.m. Friday and 2 a.m. today.

MOTOCROSS

Williams said the expense of one of the bikes is staggering; the frames of high-quality bikes is titanium, light and strong; the cranks and gears are also heavy-duty.

The lowest bike for serious racing runs about $250, Williams said. With additions in equipment, he said $1,000 can easily be spent on a bike.

The pedals on a BMX, which look just like and are called "bear traps," cost about $90 a set.

In a typical race, the young riders, who much prefer riding to talking, get three qualifying races, or "motos." Those who qualify then race once around the track, which takes an average of 45 seconds, depending on the experience of the riders and the length and configuration of the track.

Riders are awarded points depending on order of finish; the local sponsor of the race, then sends in points that have been awarded to the USBA. Riders' annual standings in each class are determined by the number of points accumulated.

"There's a lot more to this than people realize," Williams said. "A lot of people think it's just kids riding around. It's anything but that."

Woman, fiance killed in robbery

MANSFIELD (AP) — Police say two college students who planned to marry were shot to death in a $15 robbery at a lovers' lane area, and two men were arrested in connection with the shootings.

Friends say Janet Louise Hancock, 21, and her fiance, Army Lt. Daniel Brennon Meyer Jr., 22, planned to marry before the end of this year. But they were shot several times in the head early Sunday by assailants, police said.

The Tarrant County medical examiner's office scheduled autopsies today for the victims.

Steps to healthier living may lead to longer life span

King Features Syndicate

If your family doctor phoned to tell you that he had just obtained a remarkable formula which would add 10 years to your life span, how much would you be willing to pay for it? Probably every cent you have.

All of us want to live as long as we possibly can, but we are usually too busy with our daily interests to devote any real time or interest to our personal longevity.

Theoretically, you can live to age 146 — which was reportedly reached by Christen Jacobsen Drakenberg, a Dane born in 1626.

Many people belive, fatalistically, that "you go when your number is up." That's another way of saying that it doesn't matter how well you look after yourself, because heredity decides how long you will live.

Dr. Louis I. Dublin, health authority of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, denies that.

"Environment has a greater influence on length of life than inheritance," he declares flatly. "Studies on the inheritance of longevity show only a relatively small difference between those with long-lived parents and other groups."

THAT LEAVES the number of candles on your final birthday cake largely up to you. There is no single magic formula which can add 10 years to your life span. But you can increase your life expectancy easily that much by gradually changing your daily life in 19 beneficial ways.

■ Get married and stay married. Apparently you live a more regular life, and get better care, when you're married. Whatever the reason, over twice as many divorced and widowed men die before married men. And one and a half times as many single men.

Marriage is favorable for longevity in women, too. Some 10 percent more wives outlive single women, and 50 percent more outlive divorcees and widows. Humans obviously last longer in pairs.

■ Learn a less strenous trade. The longest-lived men are clergymen, lawyers, engineers, teachers, doctors and farmers. Next to them are business executives, white-collar workers and skilled workers. Those with poorest longevity are unskilled workers, miners, quarry men and granite workers.

The moral would seem to be that the more you depend on sheer muscle to earn your living, the less likely you are to see out the future decades.

■ Live north, if you can. California and Florida may be mecca to older folks, but they actually die somewhat earlier in those states than in the rest of the country. The South may be a place for gracious living, but the longevity of Southerners is also lower than the national average. Poorest life expectancy of all is found in the Southwest, notably Arizona and New Mexico.

Americans with the longest life spans are found in the North Central West — Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota and Kansas.

According to actuary tables, a white male born in Nebraska has actually a 10-year greater life expectancy than a white male born in Arizona.

SO IT ISN'T the pleasant climate that adds years to your life. If anything, it seems to be the other way around. Your best bet to become an octogenarian is as a resident of the snow belt.

■ Forget about death. The morbid person who dwells on thoughts of death tends to sicken and die more quickly than those of cheerful disposition. Doctors freely admit that the positive influence of mind and will power can help prevent disease and postpone death. Concentrate upon zestful living and you'll last longer.

■ Slow down. The pace of our atomic age is killing. The price of success is often heart disease — our No.1 murderer, responsible for one in every three deaths.

You have a much better chance of escaping this killer if you're calm and easygoing, rather than excitable and in a hurry. Take the high tension out of your work, travel and play.

Change your job for one which lets you whistle while you work. Do you speed home at 70 mph to save 10 minutes? Slow down to 40 and save 10 years. Were you a tennis whiz at 20? Now that you're 35 or 40, switch from singles to doubles.

Don't race your engine. You can't buy a new one. Slow and easy as you go will carry you all the way to the end of the line.

■ Buy health insurance. Chronic disease hits millions of Americans because they fail to see their doctors in time prevent it. They ignore symptoms because they'd rather not "waste money on a doctor."

The result is that they develop fatal ailments which kill them at a much earlier age than those who are not afraid of hospital expenses, if hospitalization is necessary.

Join a health program like Blue Cross and Blue Shield. If you assure yourself that hospitalization and surgery will not mean crippling bills, you will not hesitate to seek medical assistance early enough to cure disease while it is preventable.

OTHER GOOD programs of health insurance may be available to you through your local bank, the company you work for, your fraternal order or insurance company.

■ Think well of yourself. Accidents kill more people than illness in the age brackets 3 to 38. Insurance studies show that 83 percent of all accidents are suffered by accident-prone people. One worker in four, for example, has two out of three of the industrial accidents of the nation.

Psychologists describe the accident-prone person as one who feels guilty about himself and unconsciously seeks punishment. If you appreciate your good points instead of dwelling on your failings, you're less likely to fall off a ladder or bang your head — accidentally on purpose.

■ Don't ignore "cigarette cough." Dr. J. De Witt Fox warns that smokers are too prone to attribute a persistent cough to cigarettes. Cigarette cough may actually be a tumor in the mniddle bronchus, or air passage, of the right lung.

An X-ray diagnosis in time can prevent lung cancer. Men past 40 are susceptible. If you bring up sputum with your cough and feel chest pains, don't take chances. See your doctor at once.

■ Have a check-up every birthday. Would you like to escape being one of the 100,000 people who die every year of cancer? Would you prefer not to be one of the 1,000,000 diabetes cases?

Then celebrate every birthday by going to your family doctor for a complete physical check-up. Disease caught early can be halted or cured. Disease caught late may mean premature death.

You may have to insist upon a complete physical. Some doctors are too busy or too bored to give you anything but a cursory examination.

IF YOU REALLY want to guarantee yourself a long life, ask specifically for an electrocardiogram, chest X-ray, tests for high blood pressure, blood test, urine analysis, skin and rectal examinations. Women should also request breast and pelvic examinations.

In some cities there are clinics set up on an assembly-line basis. In a half hour, you are checked up for the nine leading chronic diseases. This new development in preventive medicine is called "multi-test health screening."

■ Don't emote yourself into an ulcer. Many people allow themselves to get highly upset and suffer stomach disorders. Then they begin to worry whether they are developing ulcers or cancer. Constant anxiety can produce the very ulcers you are worried about.

"By emotional stress and an obsession with his stomach," explains Dr. Leo Smollar, "a person can apparently provoke an ulcer which could not, by the natural chain of physical events, have occurred." Don't fret. If you're worried about your stomach, see your doctor at once.

■ Keep those pounds down. Persons who are 25 percent or more overweight have a 50 percent higher death rate than those of average weight. They also have the highest cancer rate, poorest general health, lowest energy.

They are more susceptible to gall bladder trouble, ruptures, heart and circulation troubles. Diabetes hits them twice as much as it does people of normal weight.

If you're considerably overweight now, don't try to reduce your poundage by drastic methods. Your best bet is to see your doctor and let him give you a safe diet and prescription for exercise. He knows how fast you ought to lose how much, and how.

■ Don't insult your stomach. Too many Americans die young because they what "tastes good," regardless of what it does to their health. If your philosophy is a short life but a merry one, then hot dogs, carbonated soda, unidentified hamburgers, yards of candy, etc. are properly your dish.

BUT IF YOU HOPE to see the century out, your diet will contain a proper balance of milk, eggs, meat, fish, fresh fruit, vegetables, cereals and water — all digested at leisurely meals. You might eat more fish in the future. Scientists have found fish rich in phosphorus — which repairs damaged tissues.

■ Skip that late show on TV. Excitement-seeking Americans tend to stay up too late at night. Most of us don't get enough sleep, which is nature's time to repair the ravages of the body incurred during the day.

Make it a point to get to bed earlier a few nights a week. If you're a boss, manager, self-employed person or housewife, invest time in an after-lunch nap. It's an investment that will pay off dividends in longevity.

■ Walk there — don't drive. One reason so many people are overweight and have poor blood circulation is the failure to get a normal amount of exercise. A walk in the fresh air and sunshine is a daily ticket to both good health and long life.

Activities like golf, mild tennis or gardening are ideal for the middle years. To help you stay in the pink of health, try this prescription for week-ends, holidays and vacations: exercise, followed by massage, shower and nap.

■ Let off that steam. Studies at the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis reveal that when you swallow your anger, you may do serious damage to your arteries. Choked anger over a period of time may result in high blood pressure, hypertension and colitis.

AVOID GETTING angry when you can. But when you do grow wrathful, find a way of letting off steam. If you can't tell off your boss to his face, let your anger explode against a punching bag, or call him every name you want — when you tell your wife about it. You'll feel a lot better afterward — and you won't be damaging your health by inner tensions.

■ Avoid heart hypochondria. The majority of heart complaints won't kill you. Two out of three "attacks" are not physically induced, but are actually caused by emotional upset. If a doctor has given your heart a clean bill of health, be skeptical of "heart pains."

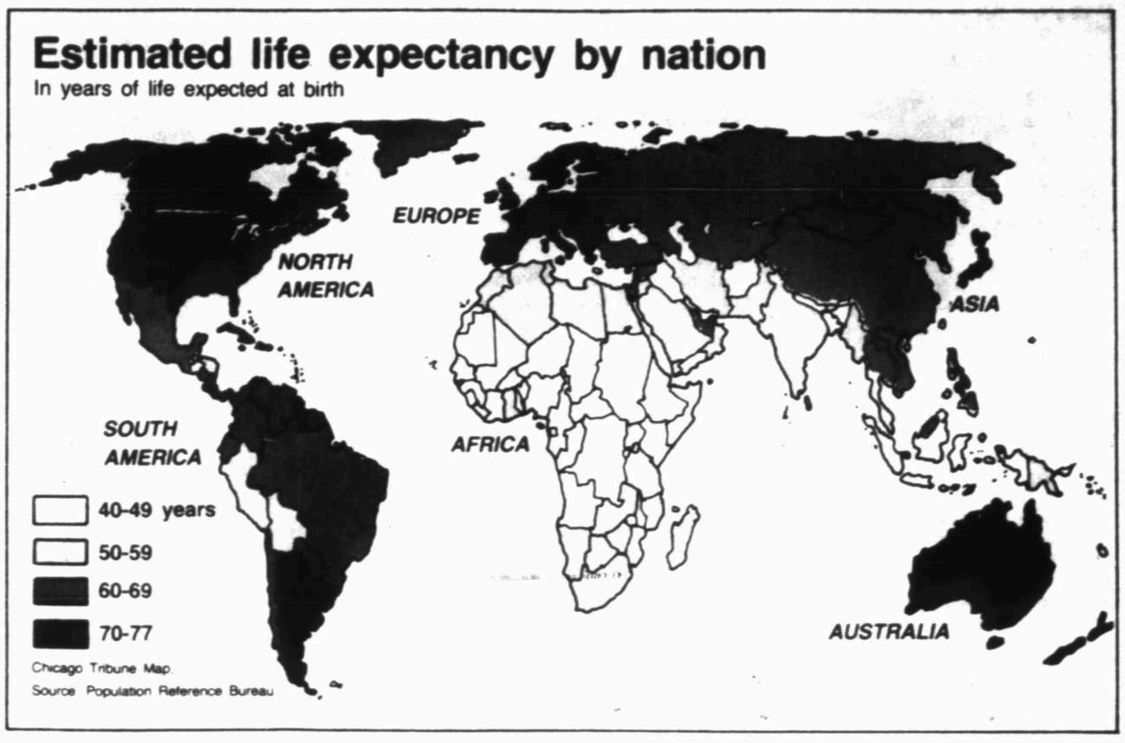

You can actually talk yourself into "functional" heart disease — which can shorten your life as well as the real thing. Leave the diagnosis of your heart entirely up to your doctor!

■ Learn to relax at work. Nervous tension on the job is a killer. Don't be too ambitious or drive yourself too hard. Make your goal resonably obtainable. Work in company, if possible.

Don't be sloppy in your work — efficient habits make a job less fatiguing. Finish what you have to do — you get tired more quickly if you have a number of uncompleted tasks nagging your conscience.

■ Take the enjoyable job at less pay. Dr. Frank N. Allan of Boston's Lahey Clinic made a study of 300 men and women who complained of chronic weakness and tiredness. He found that in fully 80 percent of these cases, fatigue was not caused by overwork or illness, but was psychological.

■ Get yourself a dog. Dr. James H.S. Bossart of the University of Pennsylvania, after several years of study, found that owning a dog plays a very important part in maintaining mental health. You benefit from walking the dog (exercise, fresh air); teaching him tricks (hobby, relaxation); having a constant companion (avoid loneliness); and enjoying the feelings of being loved (love and reassurance).

DEAR ABBY

Vivisection not only choice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have always been a big fan of yours, but we have come to the parting of the ways on the subject of vivisection.

If operations on a dozen or so live animals might reveal the key to curing thousands of human beings who are afflicted with a fatal disease, would you save the animals and let the people die?

Closer to home, suppose it is a question of your very own adored son, condemned to die of a disease if a cure cannot be found. Medical authorities know that a certain enzyme may effect that cure and the only probable source, outside of living human donors, is in the spleens of living tortoise-shell cats. You have a tortoise-shell cat whom you love as your own flesh. What is your choice? — MRS. P.C., SANTA BARBARA

DEAR MRS. C.: I take it you read my column urging my readers to write to their elected representatives and ask them to support the Humane Product Testing Bill (H.R. 1877).

In response to your question: I would, of course, value the life of a human (relative or not) over that of an animal, but that's not the issue. Bill H.R. 1877 does not eliminate the use of animals for product testing. It would promote the use of non-animal alternatives to the cruel lethal-dose 50 percent test used by companies to test household products and cosmetics. That test requires that animals be force-fed products such as bleach until the lethal dose that will kill 50 percent of the group is reached! Prominent toxicologists agree that the results of this test hold no comparison to the effect of a substance on a human being. Yet companies continue to use it.

The animal rights movement is growing, and one of its prime concerns is the use of animals for cruel and inhumane testing. I share this concern for the needless suffering of millions of animals each year.

If this Bill H.R. 1877 is passed, it would pave the way for revolutionary changes in the testing methods.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you never had a problem like this. You have my permission to put this in the paper, but don't use my name. I am 80 years old. I had a brother (four years younger), and we loved and respected each other. He passed away last week after a long illness. His funeral happened to fall on the same day as the wedding of one of my favorite grandsons. I was torn between going to my brother's funeral and my grandson's wedding. The funeral was in town, but I had to travel to another state for my grandson's wedding, so I couldn't go to both.

Well, I chose to go to the wedding, and now my name is you-know-what with some of my relatives. They said that out of respect to my brother I should have gone to his funeral.

Please tell me if you think I did wrong by going to my grandson's wedding instead of to my brother's funeral. — ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: The time to show respect for people is while they're living. Congratulations for having the courage to do what you wanted to do. I think you made the right choice.

DEAR ABBY: Some friends and I were having a discussion about what (if anything) should be said upon seeing a friend (friendly, but not close) for the first time after she obviously has had a face-lift. — "US" IN BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR US: First I'll tell you what NOT to say: "What have you done to yourself? I hardly recognized you! I thought you were your daughter." Or, "Who did it?"

It is, however, permissible to say, "My, you're looking marvelous." Period.

Reasearchers find powerful pain-killer in coral

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN DIEGO — A new group of potential pain-killers — more powerful than morphine but apparently non-toxic and non-addictive — may be hidden beneath the surface of the Caribbean, according to research by two University of California scientists.

They said that the sea whip, a soft coral that lives in warm waters, yields analgesic compounds that may play a role in the treatment of arthritis and other degenerative diseases.

The researchers — William Fenical of UC San Diego and Robert Jacobs of UC Santa Barbara — said the compounds, called "pseudopterosins," are derived from the coral's chemical defense system.

In limited experiments involving mice, Fenical said, the compounds seem to work by restricting the release of prostaglandins, powerful hormones that can trigger pain, inflammation and fever.

"The compounds have two responses: they reduce inflammation and they eliminate pain," he said. "We still don't know exactly how they act — we're still working on that — but we do know that they're quite unique and different."

A major difference between pseudopterosins and other powerful pain killers is that the new compounds do not appear to be narcotic or addictive despite their powerful analgesic and anti-inflammatory properties.

"They're surprisingly non-toxic considering the powerful biological reactions they cause," Fenical, an organic chemist with Scripps Institute of Oceanography, said.

They kept their discovery a secret for six months, Fenical said, to give the University of California time to prepare an application for a patent on the new compounds. UCSD's announcement of the finding coincided with the publication of their article in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Fenical cautioned that it could be as long as 10 years before drugs containing pseudopterosins are fully tested.

Clear directions may help elderly

Older Americans fail to comply with prescriptions about 50 percent of the time according to a researcher at the University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy. But patients over age 65 appear far more likely to take their medicines if spouses, relatives or friends help them remember their therapy.

Abraham Hartzema, assistant professor of pharmacy practice, conducted a two-year study of drug compliance. "Compliance is now the weakest link" in patient management, he concluded.

Dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against all other major currencies in brisk European trading early today. Gold bullion prices were mixed.

The dollar opened lower in Europe, extending last week's losses, and fell further in the early stages of trading.

The currency's fall on Friday was linked to disappointment over U.S. economic performance and to market intervention by West Germany's central Bundesbank.

A trader in Frankfurt, West Germany, said today there appeared to be no fundamental or technical reason for buying dollars at the moment. Another agreed that market sentiment for the dollar remained bearish.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Friday:

—2.0455 West German marks, down from 2.0650

—1.6560 Swiss francs, down from 1.6740

—6.6945 French francs, down from 6.7600

—2.3080 Dutch guilders, down from 2.3315

—1,413.00 Italian lire, down from 1,425.00

—1.3860 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3870

The British pound was quoted at $1.4860, up from $1.4780.

Tokyo markets were closed for a public holiday. The dollar was quoted at 154.80 yen in London, down from 156.65 yen in Tokyo late Friday.

Gold bullion gained $5 at the London opening and $5.50 in Zurich. The metal fell in later trading, but remained above levels reached late Friday.

At midmorning, London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $416 a troy ounce, up from $413 late Friday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $414, up from $413.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $413.19, down from $414.22.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.82, up from $5.78.

Texas Commerce Bancshares said to be courting buyers

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Texas Commerce Bancshares, one of the largest banks in Texas, has put itself up for sale, and several large banks in New York and California have begun sifting through its books to determine what price, if any, they should offer, banking sources said Sunday.

Among the prospective buyers are the Chase Manhattan Corp. and the Chemical New York Corp., both of New York, and the Security Pacific Corp. and the First Interstate Bancorporation, both of Los Angeles, according to the sources. None of the potential acquirers would confirm the reports publicly. In Houston, Bruce LaBoon, vice chairman and general counsel of Texas Commerce, declined to comment on the reports, but did not deny them.

Last week, top officials of both Security Pacific and First Interstate publicly said they wanted to acquire banks in Texas. Chase Manhattan's stated policy is to buy banks across the country. Although Chemical's strategy is to concentrate its expansion in the New York-New Jersey-Connecticut area, it has said it would consider acquisitions elsewhere in the country.

Texas Commerce also is reported to have held talks with Sun Trust Banks, which resulted from the 1985 merger of the Trust Co. of Georgia and the Sun Banks of Florida. As a result of that merger, Sun Trust has emerged as the 24th-largest bank holding company in the United States, with $19.4 billion in assets at the end of 1985.

Despite its recent problems, Texas Commerce is still considered one of the stronger banking companies in Texas, and, with assets of $18.6 billion, is the third largest, following the RepublicBank Corp. and MCorp. Texas Commerce deals primarily with corporations and has a strong trust department that caters to the financial needs of many wealthy Texans. Its borrowers are considered stronger than most, but the loan problems and the recession in Texas have caused its assets to decline from a peak of almost $20 billion at the end of the first quarter of 1985.

Texas Commerce reported a $28.8 million loss in last year's fourth quarter, but since then has bounced back to profitability, earning $20.6 million in the first quarter and $10.5 million in the second quarter, down from $31.1 million in the 1985 period. In addition to its earnings still being far below what they had been, Texas Commerce has lost its triple-A rating that, among financial companies, it shared only with J.P. Morgan & Co.

Not only has Texas Commerce been hurt by rising loan losses and non-performing assets, but the cost of its deposits has been rising, too. The reason is fierce competition for consumer deposits among the state's troubled banks, which fear a loss of large, uninsured deposits from institutions. "There's a rate war going on in Texas," said James J. McDermott Jr., senior vice president of Keefe, Bruyette & Woods, a New York-based securities firm that specializes in bank stocks.

In a period of deregulation when banks are merging across state lines, it is a particularly unfortunate time for a big bank to stumble. Ordinarily, Texas Commerce would be considered an acquirer, but its current problems make that virtually impossible, analysts say. Yet, Ben F. Love, the bank's chairman and chief executive officer, who built up Texas Commerce from a small institution, is said to be seeking a high price for his franchise in the Texas market. Some banking sources have indicated that he is seeking one-and-a-half times the book value, which would be about $1.5 billion.

Analysts said a hint of a change in attitude and a willingness to be sold came only a few months ago, when Texas Commerce suddenly reversed its position regarding an interstate banking bill in the Texas Legislature.

Originally Texas Commerce sought a bill that would have barred banks in New York and California from acquiring banks in Texas. That would have positioned Texas Commerce to be an acquirer, since few banks outside of New York and California could afford to take over a bank as large as Texas Commerce.

But in a sudden change, Texas Commerce put its weight behind a bill that allows New York and California banks as well to buy banks in Texas.

Head of failed thrift will fight closure

DALLAS (UPI) — The chairman of a $2 billion savings and loan association declared insolvent last week by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Sunday he will go to court to fight the agency's "totally unbelievable" decision.

Jarrett E. Woods Jr. of Dallas, chairman of Western Savings Association, said he will amend a pending lawsuit against the bank board to allege that the agency acted unfairly in shutting down Western and its 18 branches on Friday.

Federal regulators said Western, which will reopen Monday under new management, specialized in high-risk lending and had violated federal guidelines concerning paperwork and business practices.

Woods, however, said federal regulators who had been at the thrift's Dallas headquarters since January had failed to tell anyone there that they believed Western was on the brink of being declared insolvent.

Friday's closing ended a two-year battle with the Home Loan Bank Board that included two lawsuits filed by Woods against the federal agency.

The second suit claims the Asset Classification Act, which regulators used to declare Western Savings insolvent, is illegal and gives too much power to federal regulators. Woods said the suit, which is still pending, will be amended to cover Friday's actions by the bank board.

Woods said he also will amend his suit to seek the return of Western Savings to the control of Western Capital, a holding company owned by Woods. He said he owns all the stock in the holding company, which had estimated assets of $50 million earlier this year.

Western's assets grew from $34 million in 1982, the year of the Woods takeover, to $2 billion in the middle of this year, a 5,782 percent increase, regulators said. More than 80 percent of Western's mortgage portfolio was in high-risk loans and more than 20 percent was delinquent, they added.

Woods disputed the bank board's statements, saying the agency had "sensationalized our growth, wich has always been within the permitted regulations."

He also disagreed with the 20 percent delinquency rate, saying that while the Texas economy may have caused some customers to fall behind on loans up to 60 days, he believes the loans are still good.

Western Savings was scheduled to reopen Monday as Western Federal Savings and Loan Association of Dallas, a new federal mutual association, said Rebecca Vail, director of corporate communications for the Home Loan Bank Board.

Texas Air Corp. agrees to buy People Express

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Air Corp. today announced that it has agreed to buy financially ailing People Express Inc. for about $125 million in securities.

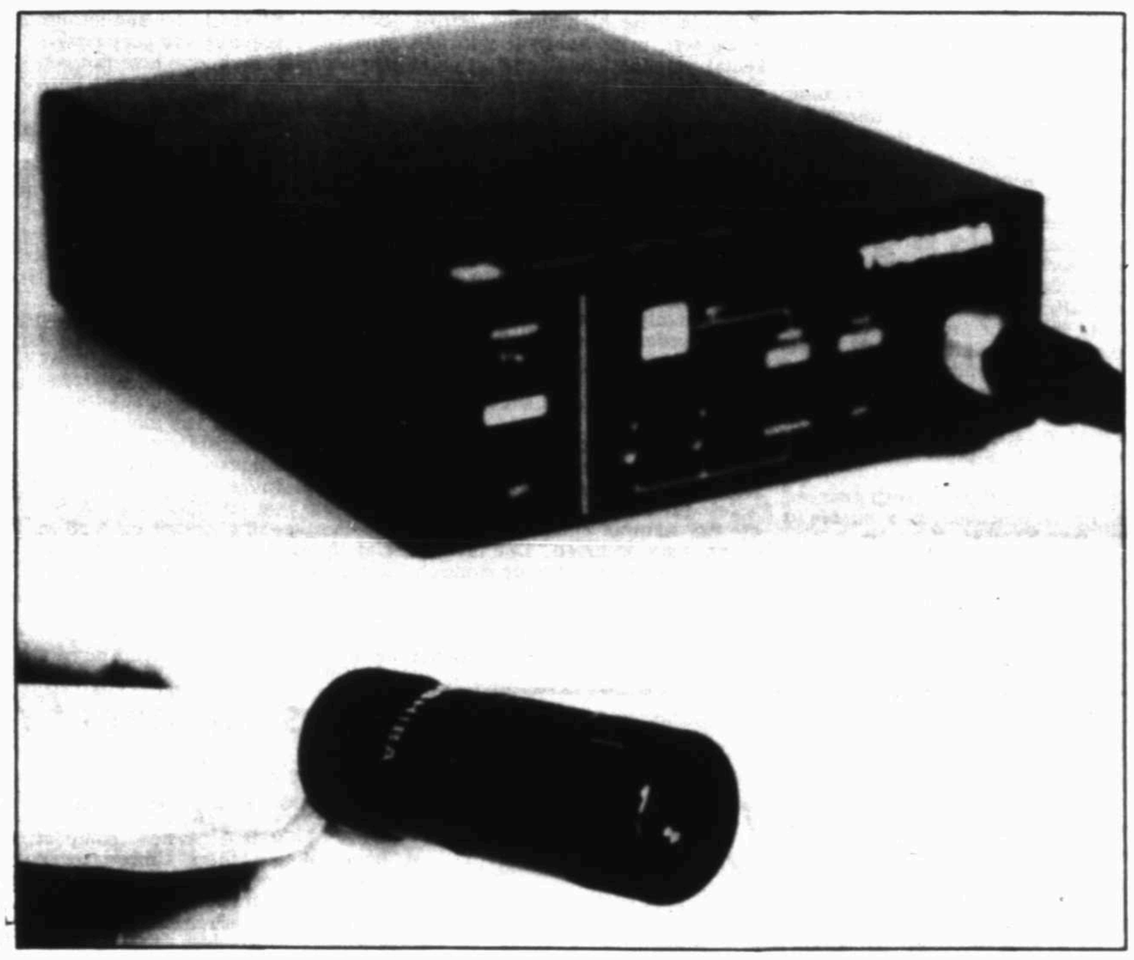

Texas Air also said it agreed to acquire the assets of Frontier Airlines, a subsidiary of People Express that has been shut down and put into bankruptcy court reorganization.

Texas Air said it would try to find work for laid-off Frontier employees, but no details were immediately available.

Texas Air also is in the process of trying to acquire Eastern Airlines. The Department of Transportation rejected the first merger agreement, saying it was concerned about competition on the Northeastern air shuttle route. However, Texas Air announced an agreement Friday to sell more of its airport slots in the Northeast to Pan American World Airways for use in Pan Am's planned shuttle business.

The announcement came at a news conference in New York called by Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air, and Donald Burr, head of People Express.

They said the agreement called for People Express stockholders to receive $2.25 worth of Texas Air common stock and $2.50 of Texas Air preferred stock for each share of People Express.

Smallest camera

Japan's Toshipa Corp. has unveiled a tiny color video camera which, the company said can be connected to a standard TV monitor screen or to an independent video cassette recorder. The thumb-sized camera, foreground, 16.5mm in diameter and 45mm long, incorporates a small wide-angle lens and an image sensor. Toshiba claims this is the world's smallest color video camera.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

TWA gets go-ahead to buy Ozark Airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Transportation has given Trans World Airlines the go-ahead for its $250 million takeover of Ozark Air Lines.

In approving the purchase, the department said in a statement Friday that it agreed with findings by an administrative law judge that the merger would not lessen competition in 68 cities emanating from St. Louis, a region where TWA has a major hub and Ozark is based.

Together they control more than 75 percent of the air-traffic there.

Campeau bids directly to Allied stockholders

NEW YORK (AP) — Campeau Corp., a Canadian developer whose takeover offer was rebuffed by Allied Stores Corp.'s board, has put a $1.74 billion offer for a controlling interest directly to Allied shareholders.

But Campeau also said Friday it would be willing to talk with the huge U.S. retailer on friendlier terms about possibly raising the purchase price.

Under its tender offer, Campeau would pay $58 a share in cash for up to 30 million Allied shares, or about 64 percent of Allied's stock outstanding.

IBM announces new retirement incentives

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines Corp., striving to cut costs in a period of weak demand for its computers, has announced new retirement incentives for its U.S. work force.

IBM said Friday that the incentives, along with normal attrition and limited hiring, should help cause the company's U.S. employment to fall by at least 8,000 next year.

The early retirements should add roughly $200 million to the company's profits next year and roughly $300 million each year thereafter, said analyst Rick Martin of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co.

GM plans to reduce its salaried work force

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. plans to reduce the salaried work force of its sprawling Chevrolet-Pontiac-Canada group by 10 percent in the next year, according to a memo obtained by a newspaper.

Officials of the nation's largest automaker previously had said the company's goal was to reduce its salaried staff by 25 percent overall by 1989. GM has about 133,000 salaried workers in the United States and 9,000 in Canada.

"By Aug. 31, 1987, a reduction in salary employment of 10 percent from April 30, 1985, has been mandated by corporated management," said an internal GM memo published Friday by the Detroit Free Press.

Talks with Coca-Cola caused chairman's ouster

NEW YORK (AP) — Former CBS Inc. Chairman and CEO Thomas H. Wyman's downfall was sparked by his suggestion that CBS's board consider a friendly takeover by interested Coca-Cola Co., according to a source.

The board, which had maintained that CBS should remain independent and hadn't been informed of or authorized Wyman's talks with Coca-Cola, was flabbergasted at his proposal at the day-long board meeting on Wednesday, the source said Friday.

The 10½-hour gathering culminated in Wyman's forced resignation and the installation of Laurence A. Tisch, CBS's largest shareholder, as acting chief executive officer, and of CBS founder and director William S. Paley, as chairman, until a permanent replacement for Wyman could be found.

Mid-America Petroleum issues new stock

From Staff Reports

In a new and integral move to reorganize the company, Wade D. Althen, president and chief executive officer of Mid-America Petroleum, Inc., a publicly-held firm, has announced the issuance of 3.5 million shares of common stock and warrants to acquire an additional 17.5 million shares to Dr. Gary P. Wilson, an international financier from Naples, Fla.

Current management at Mid-America, which has offices in Midland and Dallas, further said litigation concerning the cancelation of stock and damages relating to transactions of previous management could result in the reorganization move.

Six shareholders of the bankrupt petroleum company had earlier sold the equivalent off 50.1 percent of the company's common stock to Intramerican Oil & Minerals, Inc. of Dallas. The six shareholders are Jesse G. Edwards, Gordon and Mary Knox, Peizer Trust and two Midland companies: Lyn-Kay Corp. and Knox Industries.

At the time, Intramerican reported in documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission that it had paid out 317,173 shares of its common stock and warrants to purchase an additional 634,349 shares, in exchange for about 7.1 million common shares of Mid-America Petroleum, and warrants to buy an additional 150,000 shares.

The company also reported at the time of purchase that it intended to replace at least a majority of Mid-America's board of directors with its own nominees and would file a plan of reorganization for the company with a federal bankruptcy court in Fort Worth by Dec. 31, or March 31 at the latest.

If Intramerican does not file a reorganization plan, or if the plan isn't approved the court, the warrants will be canceled, but the selling shareholders will keep the Intramerican shares issued to them.

Mid-America declared bankruptcy in 1985 and is presently operating under bankruptcy laws as a debtor-in-possession.

Firm won't insure loans in parts of Louisiana

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A major national insurer of home mortgages has notified lenders that it no longer will underwrite conventional loans in more than half the state's parishes because of declining economic conditions and rising defaults, a company spokesman says.

Effective Wednesday, VEREX Assurance Co. of Madison, Wis., stopped accepting new applications for mortgage insurance in 34 Louisiana parishes.

"We had to make a decision because of economic conditions there," said Patricia Hoopes, eastern regional marketing manager for VEREX. "The decline in the oil industry in those parishes has caused our underwriting to no longer be profitable.

"However, we are very carefully monitoring the situation, and we expect to be able to re-enter the market as soon as business becomes profitable again," Hoopes said.

VEREX, the oldest and largest mortgage insurer in the country, will continue to service current accounts, process claims and pay off claims as soon as possible, Hoopes said.

The company has imposed the same policy in the entire states of Wyoming and Oklahoma, she said. The company also has imposed "restrictive underwriting guidelines" in Texas, which means VEREX will insure mortgages in areas deemed economically healthy.

VEREX spokesman Dan Prueher said the company would not release figures for the volume of loan defaults in Louisiana.

"Everyone in the marketplace is taking a hard look at trouble spots in the country. I don't think it's a secret that this is a record-breaking claim year for everyone," Prueher said.

"This simply means we have one less source for getting mortgage insurance on conventional loans," said Don MacGregor, a Baton Rouge branch manager of Cameron-Brown Co. mortgage bankers.

"For the time being, we can still continue to operate as usual."

Lending institutions and insurers have begun to scrutinize loan applications more closely for signs of economic instability in the buyer, MacGregor said.

Grain

CHICAGO (UPI) — Weaker basis levels and an increase in harvest activity pressured grain and soybean futures on the Chicago Board of Trade. There was a general lack of buying interest across the floor and volume was very light.

At midmorning, corn was down ½ to 2, soybeans off 1 to 3 ½ and wheat down ½ to 2 ½.

The corn and bean harvest picked up steam during the weekend as fair weather covered the Grain Belt. Basis levels declined as farmer selling increased.

Late Friday, the Agriculture Department set the permanent soybean loan rate at $4.77 per bushel. That news had little, if any, effect on the market early today, although the rate was criticized by the American Soybean Association.

The USDA also said it would not change the subsidy on wheat sales to the Soviet Union under the export bonus program. The government has offered a subsidy of $15 per metric ton.

There was widespread selling across the floor, but losses in the grains were tempered by light commercial buying, light delivery notices and talk of upcoming export business.

Soybeans were the weakest commodity on the floor. Most of the selling was linked to sharply lower basis levels at the Gulf and harvest pressure.

The European markets were inactive despite a weaker dollar.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Sep 1.52 ¼ off ½; Dec 1.61 ¾ off ¾; Mar 1.72 ¼ off 1.

Soybeans Sep 4.76 ¼ off 3 ½; Nov 4.74 off 2 ½; Jan 4.83 off 1 ½; Mar 4.91 ¾ off 1.

Wheat Sep 2.57 ½ off ½; Dec 2.50 off 1 ½; Mar 2.52 ¾ off 2 ½.

Stock Market Rallies

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a mild rally today, bouncing back from last week's trouncing as investors took a more optimistic view of the interest-rate outlook.

Trading slowed from the record-setting pace of last Thursday and Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down an unprecedented 141.03 points last week, recovered 11.25 to 1,769.97 by noontime on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 4 to 3 in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said talk had revived that the Federal Reserve might cut its discount rate again this fall, perhaps acting in coordination with central banks in Japan and West Germany.

Prices rose and interest rates fell this morning in the bond market, which also had taken a battering lately.

Among actively traded blue chips, Exxon rose ⅛ to 66⅛; Sears Roebuck ⅛ to 40⅝; International Business Machines ⅝ to 138; Ford Motor ½ to 53¼, and American Telephone & Telegraph ⅜ to 23⅜.

Detroit Edison was the volume leader, down ⅛ at 17⅝ on turnover of more than 8 million shares. The activity was attributed to trading by investing institutions seeking to capture the company's forthcoming quarterly dividend.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .54 to 133.35. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .23 at 257.47.

Volume on the Big Board came to 76.46 million shares at noontime, against 136.15 million at the same point Friday.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Three-for-two split similar to 50 percent stock dividend

By BILL DOYLE

Q. A company in which I own stock recently had a three-for-two stock split. I had 471 shares before the split. I received certificates for 235 shares and a check for the value of half a share as a result of the split.

To me, that would have been a 50 percent stock dividend.

I think I should have received 235.5 shares plus 117.25 shares, for a total of 353.75 additional shares. Is my comprehension of this correct?

Doyle

A. No. You received the proper number of shares.

As the words imply, the three-for-two split made three shares out of two shares. Stated another way, every two shares you owned before that split became three shares. Your 471 shares became 706.5 shares.

The company sent you certificates for the 235 additional shares to which you were entitled. And, because certificates are not issued for fractional shares, you got a check for the market value of the half share.

You are correct about the three-for-two stock split being similar to a 50 percent stock dividend. The two accomplish the same purpose. Although handled by different accounting methods, a stock split and a stock dividend have the same result as far as stockholders are concerned.

For instance, a two-for-one split is the same as a 100 percent stock dividend, a four-for-three split the same as a 33⅓ percent stock dividend, a five-for-four split the same as a 25 percent stock dividend, ad infinitum.

Q. My husband owned 50 shares of stock when he died. I had the stock transferred to my son's name. Now, when a dividend check arrives, my daughter-in-law picks up the mail and cashes the check.

My son is in the process of getting a divorce. I told him to transfer the stock to my daughter's name. Wouldn't that be the wise thing?

A. There's really no need to do so, if the stock is registered in your son's name alone. In that case, your daughter-in-law can't cash the dividend checks without forging your son's signature.

If the stock is in your son's name and his wife's name, she still can't legitimately cash the checks without his signature. Dividend checks from jointly owned stocks are made out to both owners, with "and" between the names. Both owners are required to endorse the checks.

Perhaps your daughter-in-law is endorsing the checks "for deposit" in a joint bank account she has with your son. That's OK. Then, of course, she can take money out of the joint bank account.

If the stock is in your son's name alone, he owns it. If it's in his name and his wife's name, they both own it. Who ends up owning the stock will, no doubt, be determined by the divorce proceedings. It's out of your hands.

Q. I placed an open order to sell 400 shares of stock at "5" — $5 a share. The stock trades in the over-the-counter market in the NASDAQ national market system. On a day while my order was in force, newspaper tables showed 22,500 shares of that stock traded, with a high of 5⅛, a low of 4½ and a 4½ close.

Should my order have been filled?

A. Not necessarily. The 5⅛ quotation undoubtedly was the highest price at which a brokerage firm acting as "market-maker" in that stock sold shares that day. The highest price at which a market-maker was willing to buy might have been lower than 5.

Published quotations for the over-the-counter market are "inter-dealer prices" brokerage firms quote to one another. Brokerages acting as dealers in that O-T-C stocks mark up prices on sales to customers and mark down prices on purchases from customers.

Boiled down, this means the public often cannot sell or buy at published O-T-C prices. Also, brokers are not required to accept "limit orders" — to sell or buy at specified prices — on O-T-C stocks.

'87 economy expected to expand at only half rate forcasted earlier

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The level and direction of the stock market is generally viewed as a forecaster of economic things to come.

So why is the market hot and the forecast only lukewarm at best?

The gap between market and economic expectations seems even wider when you consider some of the specifics.

Economic weakness is documented by recalcitrant budget and trade deficits, falling factory utilization, declining employment in energy and manufacturing and retail sales that need discounts and rebates as supports.

In all, forecasts for next year have been shaved throughout 1986, and some now anticipate the economy will expand in 1987 at only half the rate forecast earlier.

Meanwhile, the Dow Jones industrial average flirts with new highs, having advanced from just over 1,000 points in 1983 to 1900 or so in 1986.

What gives?

"Falling interest rates," says Professor William Dunkelberg, an economist at Purdue University.

Consider how a stock is priced, asks the professor, who often interprets the economic world for business organizations and explains the intricacies of credit to state legislatures.

Three basic pieces of information are needed in pricing a stock: 1. the earnings expected each year in the future; 2. how certain one can be about receiving those earnings; 3. the return available on other investments.

To simplify, assume the returns on a stock are certain and that a bank deposit is the only alternative investment. And furthermore, that the return from the bank is certain.

A stock certificate is a paper entitling the owner to the earnings associated with it. Putting $1,000 in the bank would result in a similar piece of paper as a claim on the funds and the interest they earn.

Suppose, said the professor, that the company is expected to earn and pay out as dividends $100 a share for the indefinite future. What is the stock worth?

"The answer is about $1,000. Why? Because $100 a year is what the bank will pay you on $1,000."

If you paid $1,200 for the stock your return would be only 8.33 percent, and you could do better at the bank. If you bought for $800 you'd have a good deal at 12.5 percent. Chances are, however, it would be seen as a good deal by others, who would buy into the stock and boost the price back to $1,000.

Suppose now that interest rates fall to 5 percent at the bank, the only alternative investment, while expected earnings on the stock remain at $100.

"Since the stock pays $100 a year," the professor continues, "it must have the same value as a bank account with $2,000 deposited in it. Thus, with no change in expected profits, the value of the stock doubles to $2,000."

That is, the earnings associated with the stock are more valuable when interest rates fall.

Indeed, the professor explains in a reference specifically relevant to today's market, "the market could rise — in this instance from $1,000 a share — even as investors revised downward their views of expected profits."

It is conceivable, and even probable, that something of this sort occurred in the pricing of stocks over the past couple of years.

The professor notes that interest rates on one-year Treasury bonds have declined from more than 11 percent in 1983 to under 6 percent today, a decline that would suggest an industrial index rise to about 2,000 points from 1,050.

No, he says, the stock market hasn't lost its forecasting effectiveness, but astute investors would be wise to know just what aspect of the economy the market is analyzing.

To Dunkelberg, "it is clear that falling interest rates have played a major role in the rising stock market."

The lesson to be learned is this: Recent stock market gains might be more dependent on declines in interest rates than on expected improvements in profits. And that might apply to the future too.

Class dismissed.

Wall Street economist touting series EE bonds as 'good buy'

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — What special investment is one of Wall Street's most famous economists talking up as a "good buy" right now?

Series EE U.S. savings bonds, that's what.

The authority in question is Henry Kaufman of Salomon Bros. Inc., best known for his interest-rate analyses and the influence they can exert in both the financial world and in Washington.

As it turns out, Kaufman isn't the only one to have noticed that an uncommon situation has arisen involving savings bonds — and that time may soon run out on the opportunity it presents.

He notes that sales of savings bonds approached $1.3 billion in August, about double what they had been averaging just a few months ago.

The sudden attraction arises from the guaranteed minimum 7.5 percent annual return available on EE bonds held for five years or more. On a comparable investment, five-year Treasury notes, the yield stood early this week at about 6.8 percent.

Holders of savings bonds need pay no income tax on them until they cash them in. That puts some extra zip in their sales boom at a time when many other tax-favored means of saving for long-term needs such as college tuition and retirement are about to be curtailed by the new tax law.

The urgency to buy has been heightened by repeated hints from the Treasury that it may soon lower the 7.5 percent minimum on newly sold bonds, while preserving it for existing bonds.

In late 1982, when the savings bond program was overhauled, 7.5 percent didn't look like anything special. At the time, you could get 10.5 percent or 11 percent in a five-year Treasury note.

The overhaul was done, in the first place, because savings bonds had come to be seen as an outmoded investment in a time of high inflation and high interest rates.

Indeed, in current conversations with active investors, it is still common to draw nothing more than a blank stare when you raise the subject.

But the long decline of interest rates in the past few years has cast savings bonds in a different light. Today, as Kaufman says, the 7.5 percent minimum has become "somewhat obsolete" not because it is too low, but because it is too high.

A skeptic may argue that the current circumstances are only temporary. There has been much talk lately of a revival of inflation, and interest rates have been rising so far this month.

If this marks the start of any trend, 7.5 percent won't look so great a few months from now, especially with the requirement that you keep your money locked up for five years to get it.

That is a distinct possibility. But 7.5 percent is a floor, not a ceiling, on EE bonds. The yield can float upward to 85 percent of the rate on five-year Treasury notes if that calculation produces a number greater than 7.5 for any six-month period over which savings bond yields are computed.

That provides some cushion if inflation and interest rates should run wild again. And the safety factor is high.

To guard against the possibility of offering too much of a good thing, the Treasury limits purchases of EE bonds to $30,000 in face value for any one person per year. People who want to buy bonds in the larger denominations may find that their local bank or other financial institution doesn't keep them in stock.

But the institution can at least provide you with an order form and the address of you nearest Federal Reserve bank or branch, from which the bonds can be bought. Alternatively, you can deal directly with the Federal Reserve bank or branch.

STATE

Judge to hear TDC request to move inmates to armory

TYLER (AP) — To state officials, a National Guard armory in North Texas seemed ideal relief for Texas' overcrowded prisons, but inmates say the temporary housing plan violates prison reforms initiated five years ago.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler blocked the transfers Friday through a temporary order and called a hearing for 11:30 a.m. today to consider the request of the Texas Department of Corrections to move the prisoners.

Attorneys for inmates say the transfer of about 300 minimum-security prisoners to Fort Wolters National Guard Armory at Mineral Wells would violate reforms ordered in a lawsuit against the Texas prison system.

In an opinion issued Friday, Justice agreed, saying the transfer would deny prisoners "adequate medical treatment, academic and vocational education, adequate space for visiting, outdoor recreation, and arts and crafts recreation."

The proposal also has drawn criticism from Mineral Wells residents. Mineral Wells Mayor H. Arthur Zappe said many residents are unhappy about plans to put convicted criminals in barracks only five miles from the community.

Mineral Wells is 50 miles west of Fort Worth.

Meanwhile, House and Senate negotiators trying to write a compromise spending cuts bill turned a deaf ear Sunday to Gov. Mark White's pleas for quick action to help the state in the prison case.

White asked the 10-member conference committee to approve $33.7 million in spending for prison buildings to show at federal court today that Texas was trying to comply with court orders.

The Fort Wolters facility, which during the Vietnam War was the chief training site for U.S. Army helicopter crews, would be used until 10 trusty camps being built at existing prison sites are completed, TDC officials said. The camps are designed to hold up to 2,000 inmates.

The armory has been used before to relieve overcrowding. In 1981-82, then Gov. Bill Clements ordered almost 4,000 inmates to the armory complex for 18 months.

Alleged rapes ignite racial tensions

KOUNTZE (AP) — At least three crosses have been burned since the arrest of three blacks in connection with the alleged rapes of two white teen-aged girls, and officials said that for the suspects' safety they would try to move them out of this Southeast Texas town today.

Tensions were high over the weekend, but eased on Sunday, and Hardin County Sheriff H.R. "Mike" Holzapfel said he had ended extra patrols by officers. He also lifted a ban that he had imposed Saturday on sales of liquor after 10 p.m.

However, black residents expressed concern that the Ku Klux Klan or others might cause problems, and the sheriff said he would attempt to move all three suspects today from Kountze, which is about 25 miles northwest of Beaumont.

Holzapfel said he would request a hearing to revoke the probation of one of the suspects and bring charges of parole violation against a second. If successful, both would bring a prison sentence, allowing him to move the two Kountze men to Huntsville today, Holzapfel said.

The sheriff said he planned to move the third suspect — a juvenile from Jasper with no previous conviction — to a jail in another county.

After the three were arrested in connection with the Sept. 7 rapes, three reports of cross burnings were investigated. Beefed-up patrols of city, county and state law officers were ordered in the town, particularly in predominantly black neighborhoods.

"The whole incident pretty much defused after last night," Holzapfel said Sunday. He lifted his earlier ban on liquor sales after 10 p.m. and said as long as everything stayed peaceful, he would not reinstitute it.

Hardin County Sheriff Michael Holzapfel, standing, and Kountze Mayor W.R. Overstreet, seated, meet with about 100 black residents Saturday night to quell rumors following reports of burning crosses in the town.

Many blacks, however, remained on guard against violence. About 100 blacks attended a meeting Saturday night with Holzapfel and Mayor W.R. Overstreet at Green Pine Baptist Church.

"We need the crosses to quit burning. When you see crosses burning, that means one thing — the Ku Klux Klan — and the Klan has made it known around the world that we are nothing to them. That's enough to arouse us as citizens," said Doris McDaniel, one of the black residents at the meeting.

She said she was concerned about the safety of children and elderly people.

"We wanted to find out what's going on about these cross burnings," said Ms. McDaniel.

Holzapfel refused to comment on any cross-burnings and said minutes after the meeting that "it was just to discuss what was going on and to settle rumors. Everybody's going about their normal business, and I'm going to do my job."

Ms. McDaniel said she noticed "a change" in the city following the meeting.

"We don't know if and when something else is going to happen," she said. "Although it's been quiet since the meeting, you can sense that people are still worried and wondering what's going to happen next."

Ruth Malone, a clerk at Jean's Drive-In, said business had slowed tremendously Sunday. "It practically came to a halt," she said.

One local resident, Earnest Young, said he was visiting with a friend at a local store Monday night when he saw a cross ablaze in the middle of a street.

"We went down to the cross. I'd say it was about four to five feet high in the middle of the street," he said. "They put the fire out in two to three minutes. But when we got there, there was nobody there black or white."

The alleged rape victims told police they were assaulted repeatedly at a residence during the early morning hours of Sept. 7.

Budget negotiators deny White's prison request

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With one lawmaker accusing private prison lobbyists of having "greed in their hearts," House-Senate budget negotiators Sunday denied Gov. Mark White's request to immediately restore $33.7 million cut from prison appropriations.

In a move unprecedented in recent history, White appeared before the conference committee in person, issuing a public request for prompt action and fielding questions from the conferees. Reinstating the cuts, the governor said, "would be of great assistance to the state's position" in a federal court hearing today.

Texas Department of Corrections officials will appear before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice in Tyler today to explain their proposal to move about 300 non-violent, minimum-security prisoners to a temporary prison at a Texas National Guard barracks near Mineral Wells. Justice, who has overseen Texas prison reforms since the early 1970s, issued a temporary restraining order Friday stopping the transfer until he approves.

The conferees never discussed higher education, where the House has recommended cutting about $160 million more than the Senate. No further action on the state's $2.8 billion budget deficit — including a possible tax increase — will come until the differences in cuts are resolved.

"Funds need to be put in that are placed where they will do the most good today...and that is to expand (prison) capacity," White told the budget negotiators. "This would show good faith on the part of the state" in meeting court-ordered prison reforms.

The committee discussed a Senate option to reinstate the cuts for about an hour before adjourning for the day with no decision. The Senate proposal would have designated $24.9 million for compliance with federal court orders and $8.8 million for expanding prison capacity, including contracts with other public agencies such as the parole board and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Three of the five House negotiators objected to the plan, calling it a "sophisticated back-door approach" to permitting TDC to contract for privately built and operated prisons without legislative approval.

"I know why all these private people want in, they've got greed in their hearts and they want to make a profit," said Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline. "Some lobbyists out there, who are very close to the power structure of this state, are trying to get this passed."

Hollowell said House negotiators would prefer giving the entire $33.7 million back to the prison system, letting TDC officials spend it to comply with court orders.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said his plan would allow TDC to deal with prison overcrowding in the most efficient way possible.

"If you can do something more efficiently, more quickly and more cheaply, then you shouldn't preclude yourself from doing it when the building is burning down around you," Farabee told Hollowell. "You're saying, 'Let's just do it the old way.'"

White said he would prefer the entire Legislature — not the 10-man conference committee — decide the issue of private prisons.

The original House plan cut $33.7 million from the 1987 TDC budget. The Senate retained $30.8 million, sending the rest to the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Mexican envoy offers audit of quake relief aid

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Mexico envoy said officials in his country will begin a penny by penny audit of earthquake relief aid from San Antonio to document where the contributions went.

Mexico's Comptroller Geral Francisco Rojas said Saturday he will present the Mexican consulate with a computerized list of how every package of earthquake relief aid was received, where it was stored, and who signed for it in receipt.

Rojas, head of a mammoth "moral renovation" campaign, was in San Antonio as the personal envoy of President Miguel De La Madrid to the Mexican Independence Day festivities this weekend.

The Israel-trained budget planner and productivity expert was chosen by De La Madrid in 1983 to rid the government of corruption.

"It is the least we can do to say 'thank you' to the generous people of San Antonio," he said. "It's so that San Antonians know that we did have crystal-clear accounting and no-nonsense management.

"It is also a way of fostering our friendship and brotherhood. We are forever neighbors," said Rojas.

Officials said South Texas and San Antonio residents donated more than $200,000 in cash plus two special trainloads of goods, tools and machinery.

Rojas, after the Fiestas Patrias parade on Saturday, presented a summary of an outside audit conducted by the Mexican College of Public Accountants into relief aid.

The summary listed the San Antonio aid among the 296 cargo flights and 99 overland shipments received from 44 nations after the quakes.

The first big quake hit Sept. 19, 1985, followed by an aftershock the following day.

Rojas said a sophisticated system of accounting devised by his cabinet-level office was in place the moment the first two flights arrived from abroad the day of the shock, the first from Colombia, the second from the Ford Motor Co.

Expressing concern about government corruption, he said the administration and the Mexican Congress undertook a complete reform of legislation dealing with public officials' responsibility.

He said to crack open a bureaucratic system that for decades had enjoyed secrecy and lack of accountability, officials created auditing agencies from within and outside the government.

"It would be Utopian to think that in only three years we could organize a legislative package to generate an entity of this nature (the inspector or comptroller general) and then make corruption disappear like magic," Rojas said.

"We have to go step by step," he said. "Corruption has always existed and probably will always exist to some degree, in my country and everywhere else."

Moody Foundation grants probed

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Attorney General's office is investigating the possible misappropriation of about $1.1 million in Moody Foundation grants that may have bypassed standard screening procedures, officials said.

State officials are focusing on eight grant applications considered between late 1984 and early 1985, said John Vasquez, chief of the attorney general's charitable trusts division.

Investigators will meet Tuesday and Wednesday with foundation staff members in Galveston, he said.

Aquino to discuss country's economy with Reagan

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino left today for a nine-day visit to the United States, and the army chief of staff said the military was on full alert to foil any coup attempt while she was gone.

In a brief departure statement, the president said she would try to convince U.S. leaders that the economic, social and political problems of her strategic country were "as much their concern as ours."

She dismissed widespread rumors of a possible attempt to bring down her seven-month-old government during the U.S. visit, her first since the Feb. 25 ouster of Ferdinand E. Marcos. She said democracy in the Philippines "will never be lost."

"For democracy is not held up by me alone, but by the power of the people that won it," she said.

The armed forces chief of staff, Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, told reporters the army was "fully prepared...to keep the government stable and safe from armed threats" during her absence.

Ramos later told state television that security precautions were similar to the alert in effect during Mrs. Aquino's visit last month to Indonesia and Singapore, "plus a little extra."

The regularly scheduled Philippine Airlines Boeing 747 flight with Mrs. Aquino aboard was followed by a truckload of commandos, three fire trucks and three ambulances as it taxied to Manila airport's runway.

Soldiers with automatic rifles stood along the runway as the plane took off.

Rumors of a possible U.S.-inspired military coup during Mrs. Aquino's absence swept Manila following news reports that the Reagan administration had misgivings about her peace overtures to Communist insurgents.

In an interview today with the English-language daily The Tribune, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile dismissed such fears as exaggerated. "You're giving them (the Americans) too much importance," Enrile was quoted as saying.

There has been speculation that Enrile, who was also Marcos' defense minister but took part in the uprising that brought Mrs. Aquino to power, backed an abortive revolt by pro-Marcos forces in July. He has asked to remain in Manila during her absence to show his loyalty.

Mrs. Aquino's jet was bound for San Francisco, where the Philippine leader was to transfer to a U.S. presidential jet for the flight to Washington. She was expected to arrive in the U.S. capital tonight.

In an interview with Philippine Television, Mrs. Aquino said her main goal will be to forge "a personal friendship" with President Reagan "so that relations between the two countries will not only proceed well but proceed very well and at a much faster rate."

Mrs. Aquino, 53, will try to capitalize on the prestige won by her "People Power Revolution" against Marcos to gain more U.S. aid and private investment and increase Reagan administration support.

Mrs. Aquino is expected to tell Reagan that her overtures to the Communist rebels, as well to as Moslem insurgents fighting in the Asian nation's south, offer the best hope for stability despite calls inside her own government for tougher military action.

She said last week that she would respond to any U.S criticism of her peace strategy by telling the Americans "that this is a Filipino problem."

Manila newspapers quoted unidentified delegation sources as saying Mrs. Aquino would also press for an increase in the quota for Philippine sugar exports to the United States from 13.5 percent of the total U.S. allotment to 26.9 percent.

The sources said she will seek lower interest rates on loans, and additional cash to cope with a projected $558 million budget deficit this year.

The Philippine leader also plans meetings with officials of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund as well as appearances before business and civic groups in New York, Boston and San Francisco.

Her schedule calls for her to address a joint session of Congress on Thursday.

Mrs. Aquino is also expected to face administration questions about the future of U.S. military bases in the Philippines after 1991, when the current lease agreement expires.

During a rally in Manila Sunday, about 5,000 Marcos supporters cheered as speakers boasted that the deposed leader would return from exile in Hawaii while Mrs. Aquino is in the United States.

Speakers at the rally included former Foreign Minister Arturo Tolentino, who led the unsuccessful July revolt against Mrs. Aquino while she was visiting the southern island of Mindanao.

Aquino finds it hard to return to Boston, which family once called 'second home'

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

Aquino

BOSTON (AP) — When Corazon Aquino returns to Boston for the first time since becoming Philippines president, it may be the happiest and most difficult stop on her U.S. tour, which starts today.

It was the city, she has said, that she and her husband, Bengino S. Aquino Jr., the assassinated foe of former President Ferdinand E. Marcos, "had come to love and consider our second home."

"It's really been emotionally very difficult for me to go back to Boston," Mrs. Aquino, 53, said in an interview earlier this year in her Malacanang Palace office in Manila. "It reminds me of the time I was happy."

Across from her desk, where she could see it every time she lifted her eyes, was a portrait of her husband.

From 1980 to 1983, the couple and their five children lived in a large house in suburban Newton, near the gates of Boston College.

It was the house Aquino left on Aug. 13, 1983, for the journey that brought him to Manila Airport, where he was shot dead while being led from a plane by Philippine soldiers. The killing set in motion the events that led to the ouster of Marcos last February and to Mrs. Aquino assuming the presidency.

She and her children left for the Philippines two days after the killing, but she returned to her Newton home twice before becoming president.

"I did not realize it would be so hard," she said, recalling one visit to her husband's favorite men's store. "I knew each time he would go there, it would take him so long. Then it dawned on me, 'Oh, it's so different now. It's so sad.'

"I told my daughter, 'I think we'd better go.' It's things like that. As far as our house is concerned, I really can't stay there."

No public appearance is scheduled this trip at her former residence, although Boston College will honor Mrs. Aquino on Sunday at a Mass across the street at St. Ignatius Roman Catholic Church, which the Aquino family attended.

Mrs. Aquino was scheduled to arrive this afternoon in the United States. Her first stop was to be a brief one in San Francisco before continuing to Washington, D.C.

When she arrives in Boston on Saturday from New York City, she will receive an honorary degree from Boston University, attend a luncheon at Harvard University, where her husband spent two years as a fellow, and speak in the evening at Faneuil Hall as part of a municipal welcome.

Her Boston visit also includes a dinner and reception expected to be attended by more than 1,000 friends from the area's Philippine community.

The dinner will be held at the Westin Hotel, operated by a group that also runs the Philippine Plaza Hotel in Manila, owned by Imelda Marcos, wife of the former president.

It was at another dinner, at the Downtown Harvard Club in May 1984, that she heard for the first time the suggestion that she run for president of her country.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

Dodge Dakota, new for 1987, is Chryslers new entrant for the mini-truck market. Basically a mid-size pickup, the Dakota will offer a few new twists to the pickup truck industry.

Yet another coup for Chrysler?

By Tom Cooper

It appears that Chrysler may be on the verge of another coup. Several years ago when the corporation introduced its Voyager/Caravan mini-vans the industry was left reeling. The competition quickly launched their own versions but Chrysler had the jump, and it would prove to be an almost insurmountable head start.

And now, as the mini-truck business is 25 years old, Chrysler is adding a few new twists with its Dodge Dakota. Plans for this vehicle began about 4 years ago as the company was considering a replacement for the foreign made Ram 50 mini-pickup. Corporate officials could forsee a diminishing popularity for the full-size V8 monsters, but at the same time must have realized the lack of practicality in the mini-pickups. And so, the Dakota was born, bigger than the mini, but smaller than the 'BIGGY'. In fact, it falls almost exactly between the Dodge full size and mini pickups.

The base engine for the vehicle is the tried-and-true 2.2 liter used in the company's K-cars. The optional engine, designated only for pickups, is a 3.9 liter V6. To save time and money on development Chrysler basically took the 5.2 liter V8 and chopped off 2 cylinders. A few modifications were made but it is essentially similar to its predesessor. The standard transmission for both engines is an all new five speed manual that is reportedly a model of crisp, positive gear engagement. The optional 3 speed automatic is the same unit as that on the full size Dodge pickups.

The Dakota offers two wheelbases, 111.9 and 123.9 inches, and two bed lengths, 6½ and 8 feet. The Dakota can be purchased with payload ratings of 1250, 1800 or 2550 lbs. All of these figures are pretty impressive when compared to what the foreign and domestic competition has to offer. In addition, the company likes to point out that this truck can carry four by eight sheets of plywood with the tailgate up. It appears that no other mini-truck can match that.

If the company's track record is anything to go by the Dakota should be headed for the same success the mini-vans have enjoyed. And with the kind of numbers Dakota has on its side, it may not be long before Mr. Iacocca makes an appearance asking you, not to buy on faith, but to compare.
