Top band: Spring

AUSTIN — Brownfield High School in Conference 3A and Spring High School in Conference 5A took top honors at the 1992 University Interscholastic League State Marching Band contest Monday. Spring, making its second trip to the state contest, was rated first on all five judges' scorecards while Spring Westfield grabbed all second-place votes for the runner-up title. Pearland finished third, Duncanville fourth and Fort Worth Haltom was fifth. Also competing in Conference 5A were Midland Lee and Odessa High.

Baylor funds

CORPUS CHRISTI — Delegates to the Baptist General Convention of Texas have brushed aside an attempt to remove $4 million worth of funding from Baylor University. On Monday, an ongoing clash between fundamentalists and moderates erupted once again when pastor Bill Sluder of the First Baptist Church of Cotulla introduced a motion to delete the conventions allocation to Baylor./1B

Court's AIDS rule

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court refused Monday to let AIDS sufferers use a federal pension-protecting law to sue when self-insured employers cut health-care benefits for the disease. The court, over two dissenting votes, left intact rulings that said the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) does not bar cost-cutting employers who insure themselves from curtailing or ending coverage for any ailment./7A

FBI portrait of obsession shatters judge's career

By Dana Kennedy
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — As the state's top judge, Sol Wachtler seemed to have it all: a brilliant career and a happy, 41-year marriage.

But the FBI painted a darker portrait — a man so obsessed with an attractive socialite he may have ruined his life for her.

Within two days, Wachtler, 62, went from respected jurist, prominent Republican politician and admirable family man to tabloid headliner. He was arrested Saturday on charges of trying to blackmail his mistress after she ended their affair.

He remained in a hospital Monday, under psychiatric care

Richards warns school officals on funding plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards and top legislative leaders told Texas school superintendents Monday that lawmakers are running out of time, options and money as they scramble to find a constitutional school-finance plan.

In a stern warning to hundreds of superintendents, Richards said the plan to be considered in the special session beginning today is the only one they have found that is a realistic answer to Supreme Court objections.

It recognizes the public's reluctance to pay more taxes and still meets the high court's demand for equity in funding of property rich and property poor districts, the three leaders said.

Bill Clinton, Al Gore confer Monday.

■ President-elect dismisses signs of recovery, says focus must be on 'gravity of situation.'

By Michael Kelly
N.Y. Times News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Laying groundwork for a pre-Christmas economic conference intended as part shock therapy and part consensus-building, President-elect Bill Clinton on Monday dismissed signs of economic recovery, insisted that the economy remained weak and said that the focus must be "on the gravity of the situation."

While acknowledging that the unemployment rate has dipped, Clinton painted an insistently bleak picture of the overall state of the nation's economic health.

"The unemployment rate has held steady, even gone down a little bit, but the underlying reality is that unemployment is up, production is down," Clinton said in a brief talk with reporters as he left the Statehouse in Little Rock. "There are a lot of very troubling signs in the economy."

The economic conference, which Clinton's strategists say will be a two- or three-day meeting of business executives, labor leaders, economists and congressional figures, is shaping up as the focal point of the transition process.

The tone of Clinton's statements Monday reflected a conclusion by his advis-

PLAINS, Ga.— Sixteen years after Jimmy Carter's presidency came to symbolize a resurgent South, Bill Clinton and Al Gore have gone him one better, becoming the first all-Southern ticket to win election since Andrew Jackson and John C. Calhoun in 1828.

But after the Southern pageant of Billy Beer, boiled peanuts and Grits and Fritz, which played out here in the late 1970s, what is most telling in Clinton and

New food-label rules kick in, leave fat dispute unresolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — New rules for labeling non-meat foods go into effect today, but they're not the ones health officials, the Food and Drug Administration and many in the food industry wanted.

Nor are they expected to be the final word on the new labels that eventually will find their way on to food packages.

The rules, which lack revisions recommended by health officials over the past year, were allowed to go into effect after the Bush administration failed to resolve an internal dispute over how fat content should be noted on labels.

The rules set standardized definitions for nine commonly used terms like "light", "low-fat" and "healthy" and require

Council to dig into street-repair, pothole-patching issue

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The city street department hopes to secure more than $85,000 for street repairs, nearly half of which will be used to plug potholes across Midland.

The City Council today will consider the purchase of 1,200 tons of hot mix used solely to fill the potholes and 1,800 tons of cold mix — a thin overlay used to smooth ruts and cracks, said Harvey Hansen, director of engineering.

The potholes are a result of traffic and water — including residential sprinkler systems.

"We have potholes all over town, generally 3 to 4 inches deep and 1 or 2 feet in diameter," Hansen said. "There is no specific area of town we're concentrating on for the work."

The hot mix of emulsion, gravel and sand will cost the city $34,200.

By contrast, the cold mix overlay will be used mostly in southeast Midland and will cost an additional $51,300, according to Mark Phillips, director of purchasing.

Both projects are to be funded for one year only.

The cold mix project will precede the city's extensive $1 million seal-coating effort — which will target streets east of Big Spring Street and south of Golf Course Road.

"We will spread the overlay over the entire roadway about a half-inch thick, then we'll proceed with the seal-coat," Hansen said.

The thin-blade overlay of cold mix will cost the city about three times less than using hot mix, Hansen said.

"It's much more cost-effective to do a thin-blade overlay with seal-coating than to put a new one-to-two inch layer of hot mix," Hansen said. "There's a lot less material involved. We're talking about a half-inch or less of cold (mix) as opposed to 1½ (inches) of hot mix."

Hansen said the cold mix also helps reduce the potential for drainage problems.

"As flat as our streets are, if we raised the surface another 2 inches it would block drainage for several blocks in some places," Hansen said.

Many of the streets in southeast Midland are deteriorating quickly and need immediate work, Hansen has said.

The street department had requested

Clouds to break for upper 70s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for brief low cloudiness in the morning, then turning partly cloudy. The high will be in the upper 70s with southwest to south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight calls for increasing cloudiness with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy and cooler with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 52, Monday's high reached 78, compared to the record high for that date of 86 set in 1942. The record low was 20 set in 1950.

STATE

Strong southerly winds pushed moist tropical air into North Texas Monday. A dry line defined the western edge of a large area of cloud cover that dominated the region.

By afternoon, the cloud mass began to erode, allowing for higher temperatures. As nighttime fell, the clouds re-emerged.

The rest of North Texas had highs in the 70s, except Sherman and Denison, where rains and cloudy skies kept readings in the 60s.

West Texas was mostly sunny except for cloudy skies across the Concho Valley. Temperatures ranged from 80 degrees at Childress to 65 degrees at Guadalupe Pass. Winds were generally 15 to 25 mph with gusts past 35 mph.

NATION

Heavy snow fell over the Cascade and Olympic mountain ranges in the Northwest on Monday. South Florida had a brief tornado scare. Scattered rain and snow ranged across the country, with high winds in Wyoming and Alaska.

Overnight temperatures dipped below across much of the country, with the north Atlantic coast reporting lows in the teens. The low in Key West, Fla., was 76 degrees.

Showers and thunderstorms hit extreme southern Florida. A tornado in Richmond Heights damaged a grass-covered hut but caused no injuries or serious damage.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SUMMIT: Clinton dismisses signs of recovery

ers that, after a campaign in which candidate Clinton made many promises of economic betterment, it is essential that President Clinton focus the discussion. more sharply on what can realistically be achieved in a short time.

The economic conference will be a vehicle for doing that, a three-day cold shower of ill economic tidings. Although the meeting remains largely unplanned — advisers say they hope to hold it before Christmas — Clinton's strategists say the essential point will be to focus a heavy burst of national attention on what is wrong with the American economy, a notion that some likened to a "national audit."

The emerging point of the conference seems to be in great measure to frame the discussion of economic revival in such a way that Americans will not expect miracles from Clinton. His advisers said the state of the economy would be presented in dire terms, suggesting that it is considerably worse than either the voters or Clinton had previously been aware.

One Clinton transition official, speaking on a condition of anonymity, suggested that the conference would also try to build a case that President Bush's economists underestimated the true scope of the nation's economic problems.

"There is some concern among economists that the country's economic condition may be somewhat worse than previously reported," the official said.

In making this case, Clinton would be resuming an argument that was at the center of the campaign, in which he said the economy was doing worse than Bush cared to admit and the president said the Democrats were painting a dire picture simply to drive him from office.

On the record, Clinton transition aides hint at the same thing.

"I don't think the summit will be a time of study in terms of prescriptions," said Dee Dee Myers, a spokeswoman for Clinton. "The idea in calling it an audit is that it will be an honest description of where the country is."

She added, "Governor Clinton wants to have as honest an accounting as possible of the country's economic situation, and he feels that the best way to do it is to pull together some of the nation's top economists and business leaders to discuss it."

Ms. Myers suggested an additional, more acutely political reason for the conference.

"One of the reason George Bush was not re-elected is that people felt he was not connected to them, to their problems," she said. "One of the first messages Bill Clinton wants to get across is: 'I get it.' "

George Stephanopoulos, Clinton's director of communications, said the president-elect intended to focus a "tempered" view on the economy that will "keep expectations in check."

"The only way you can build a consensus towards solution is to make sure the people understand the scope of the problem and that they feel they are part of the solution from the beginning," he said.

STEREOTYPE: Ticket symbolizes changing South

(From 1A)

Gore is how little of the stereotyped image of the South they seem to carry with them.

The difference reflects different men, different locales and different generations: Carter's is the last to grow up with segregation, Clinton's and Gore's the first to grow up while Southerners, white and black, were being freed from it.

But if Carter symbolized the passing of the old order in the South, Clinton and Gore reflect the complexities of an evolving one that is neither cartoonish Old South nor neutered New South, but a sometimes-baffling blend of the two that is certain to shape the style and the content of the Clinton-Gore administration.

"The thing about the South is that it's finally multiple rather than singular in almost every respect," said Hodding Carter, the Southern journalist and the State Department spokesman during the Carter administration. "You've got to say about eight different things about each subject to say what it is, whereas before you could always say just a couple."

Clinton and Gore, two Ivy Leaguers steeped in policies and programs, would never be confused with the denizens of William Faulkner's mythical Yoknapatawpha County. But even they bear out Faulkner's famous description of the South as a place where: "The past is not dead. It isn't even past."

From their "yes m'am, no m'am" demeanor and their Southern Baptist upbringing to their centrist, eager-to-please campaign, both Clinton and Gore reflect the degree to which the religiosity and manners of Plains, Ga., Hope, Ark., and Carthage, Tenn., still dominate Atlanta, Little Rock and Nashville.

"I'm very skeptical of the notion that the South is disappearing," said Edward L. Ayers, professor of history at the University of Virginia. "People have been saying that for 100 years."

Even if Southerners want to forget their past, it is not likely that the rest of the nation will let them. When Jay Leno joked about the Democrats' "trying to get the all-important 'Hee-Haw' vote," and reporters referred to the Democratic candidates, who studied at Yale Law School and Harvard, as the "double bubba" ticket, it reflected the degree to which the South remains the nation's most caricatured region.

Tom Smith, a social scientist with the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago, said the center's 1990 survey of ethnic images found that Americans view Southerners almost like a separate ethnic group.

Professor John Shelton Reed of the University of North Carolina said, "A fellow named Jack Kirby at Miami University in Ohio once wrote about the Southern 'Catch 22', which is that if you're not picturesque or grotesque or conspicuously rustic, people stop thinking of you as Southern."

Reed, a sociologist, added: "The Waltons on television were located in the Virginia mountains, but they weren't the Dukes of Hazzard, so as time went by they lost their accents. I don't believe that non-Southerners' repertoire of stereotypes really has space for middle-class Southern folks."

The toned-down regional imagery surrounding Clinton, and particularly Gore, partly reflects the degree to which the Southern stereotypes do not fit them. It also results in part from Arkansas's being less definably Southern than a Deep South state like Georgia.

But beyond that, the transition from Carter to Clinton and Gore also mirrors the social and economic evolution of the South.

PLAN: Lawmakers to try again on school finance to perform on behalf of the taxpayers and the school kids of this state. And we're going to do our job," Richards said.

"Neither the lieutenant governor, the speaker nor I are unreasonable people. If you have a better solution under the constraints that we face, we are anxious and ready to hear them," she said.

Despite the tough talk, many superintendents said they would have trouble convincing their school boards to back a plan that some estimated could cause local property taxes to rise by $3 billion.

"I don't see a bright side. I think as a school administrator, I'm extremely frustrated over the lack of someone to recognize that education is an investment and is not an expenditure when you consider what we spend to keep someone in prison," said Dick Parker, superintendent of Lampasas ISD.

The lame duck session convening today will consider a proposal advanced by Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis. They recommend a method of shifting about $400 million in local tax property tax money from school districts with high property wealth to poorer ones.

Their plan includes a proposed constitutional amendment, which would require voter ratification, to set a standard for school equity. The leaders have said that the enabling legislation to spell out details could even wait for the regular legislative session that starts in January.

"The first priority for this session is the passage of a constitutional amendment that will clarify exactly what is required for equity and allow us to put that question behind us," Richards said.

The governor emphasized that the court threat to close public schools on June 1 is real. That's the biggest difference between the current crisis and the two previous efforts at writing a school finance plan, she said.

"The only thing that's changed is the prospect that the courts are going to close the public schools of Texas on June 1," Richards said.

The governor noted that there is no support for the other possible solutions — a state income tax, consolidation of some of the 1,050 school districts or having the state collect taxes on business property.

Her warnings were echoed by Bullock and Lewis. They said it was easy to complain but difficult to solve the problem.

"If it was so easy to solve, why is it we're talking about only one plan here?" Bullock asked the superintendents.

Solving the finance crisis would be simple, Bullock said, if the state had an extra $3.5 billion to pump into public education. But the cupboard is bare, he said.

"I wish I had $3.5 billion to put into this plan. If I did, I've got a feeling everyone of you would have a big smile on his face ... I don't have $3.5 billion," he said.

LABELS: Rules leave fat-content flap unresolved labels to carry a nutritional chart listing calories, cholesterol, sodium and fat.

But health officials had wanted the chart to list each nutrient as a percentage of that nutrient consumed in a daily diet. For example, the label on a 200-calorie candy bar would show that it contains 10 percent of a 2,000-calorie daily diet.

They rules also lack countless other refinements sought by the food industry to enable them to comply with health concerns without giving away trade secrets on ingredients or damaging marketing strategies.

Under the Nutrition Labeling Education Act, the White House had to provide its revisions to the Federal Register, which publishes all federal regulations, by 5 p.m. Monday, or the proposals put forth a year ago would become law.

This doesn't mean any food labels will be changed soon, however. In fact, it's doubtful that any label changes will be made using the proposed rules.

The White House is expected to ask for more time to make the revisions it missed, including resolving the fat issue, and members of Congress think the whole thing may be put off until Bill Clinton becomes president.

The impasse arose because the Food and Drug Administration had insisted that labels show how much fat should be included in a daily diet, but the Agriculture Department opposed the idea.

A senator who helped write the law requiring more extensive labeling blamed the meat industry for the impasse, saying it didn't want the public to know how much fat is in meat.

The American Meat Institute said his accusations were "flat-out wrong."

It's unclear, however, whether changes can be made before Bush leaves office.

"As of 12:01 a.m. Tuesday the proposed rules become law," said John Gibbons, spokesman Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan who oversaw the rule-making process.

"This is not a good result," said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., House sponsor of the legislation

Heart disease and cancer both have been linked to diets that contain too much fat, so information about it is considered key to the relabeling effort.

JUDGE: FBI complaint details stalking, harassment and in the custody of federal marshals. He was under 24-hour guard for fear he might kill himself, said Flip Lorenzoni, chief deputy U.S. marshal in New York City.

Wachtler's colleagues on the Court of Appeals decided to keep him as the state's chief judge Monday and continue to pay him. He could have been suspended from his $120,000-a-year post.

Wachtler "is naturally upset and concerned about the allegations," said Matthew Crosson, chief administrator of the state court system, who said he had spoken to family members. "He is lucid, articulate and assisting in his situation."

Wachtler was scheduled for a bail hearing today in federal court in Manhattan.

His accuser was identified as Joy Silverman, 45, a Republican Party fund-raiser. She is estranged from her husband, an industrialist, and lives in a Park Avenue apartment with her teen-age daughter. She has a weekend house in affluent Southampton.

The FBI complaint detailed stalking and harassment that resulted from passion gone sour, a plot that could have been lifted from the pages of a new Danielle Steel novel.

"SOL'S TWO LIVES," blared the New York Daily News. "I'M SORRY — Judge Speaks From Hosp Room On Scheme to Torment Ex-Lover," screamed the New York Post. "WACHTLER'S OBSESSION," said New York Newsday.

Wachtler, frequently described as witty, charming and erudite, was charged with making telephoned threats and sending obscene letters to his ex-mistress from all over the country.

Some of the calls were made with a voice-disguising device, investigators said.

The father of four sent a lewd letter containing a wrapped condom to Silverman's 14-year-old daughter and demanded $20,000 from Silverman in exchange for embarrassing tapes and photographs of her and her new lover, authorities said.

He also is accused of threatening to kidnap Silverman's daughter.

The calls to Silverman taped by the FBI don't sound like a man who was considered a potential gubernatorial candidate and mentioned as a possible U.S. Supreme Court justice. Nor did they illustrate Wachtler's famed skills as an orator.

"I'll tell you what you are getting back, lady," went one taped call. "If you don't do that, if you (expletive) me at all, I promise you it will cost you $200,000 to get your daughter back."

Many powerful state officials were stunned by Wachtler's arrest and his alleged double life.

Peter Affatato, who heads a state court character committee and is a former president of Nassau County Bar Association, interviewed Wachtler before his admission to the New York bar.

"This is a man who I would almost give up my entire career for," said Affatato, who has known Wachtler for 40 years. "I know him as a lawyer, judge and friend. I am in total shock over the news."

Federal Judge Francis X. Altimari said it was hard for him to believe the news.

"We were like brothers for 25 years," said Altimari, Wachtler's former law partner. "Sol is the most loved member of the judiciary — a brilliant, extraordinary lawyer."

Judge James J. Leff said he believes Wachtler did not deserve his reputation as a brilliant jurist, but no one ever thought of Wachtler as crazy.

"He never missed a day on the bench and he was forever running around to dinners picking up plaques," Leff said. "I think he had a fragile ego and when this woman said no, he just snapped."

One source in Republican circles described Silverman as a woman who "has everything — charm, beauty and real money." Her New York and Southampton phone numbers are unlisted and she could not be located for comment Monday.

Silverman was nominated to be ambassador to Barbados by President Bush in 1989 but the Senate Foreign Relations Committee shelved the plan, saying she had no job history.

moved to the Intensive Care Unit, where he continued to experience chest pain. A cardiac catheterization revealed blockage in the main left artery and two other vessels, doctors said.

The sheriff underwent quintuple-bypass surgery for approximately five hours. He was then moved to the Cardiac Care Unit.

Deputy Sheriff Jim Chancellor, who has assumed the sheriff's duties until he returns, said operations at the sheriff's office have being running smoothly.

"We have a lot of experience in all the supervisory positions," he said. "We're just looking at this as if he was at a conference or school."

Chancellor said anytime the sheriff is gone from the office, he assumes Painter's duties. But, he said, Painter is still the county's sheriff, if he is at the office or not.

"I'm not the sheriff, he is," Chancellor said. "He normally calls in every day or so and we keep him informed as to what is going on. I certainly can't do as good a job as he can. I'm just standing in."

World in brief

■ Refinery explosion kills five, injures eight

MARSEILLE, France — Pre-dawn explosions, probably caused by a gas leak, razed buildings at a major refinery Monday, killing five workers, injuring at least eight and leaving one missing, authorities said.

The blasts shattered windows in nearby towns and was felt in Marseille, 18 miles away.

Officials of the state-controlled oil company Total SA, which runs La Mede refinery, said the plant would be shut down for weeks. Those killed were working in a control room, officials said.

Total officials said initial indications were that a gas leak in a gas treatment unit caused the explosions.

■ Italians find one-ton U.S. bomb from WWII

Fabrizio Ardizoni, chief of the Civil Protection ministry in this city 30 miles north of Bologna, said the 7-foot long, 33-inch wide bomb was found Saturday by construction workers clearing the ground for new housing on the city's northern outskirts.

Ardizoni said about 60 families would be evacuated from their homes while a military team defuses the bomb. He said the nearby bridge over the Po River on the Bologna-Venice line, a prime target for Allied bombers during World War II, would be closed to rail and highway traffic for an hour as well.

■ Former Czech leader to be buried Saturday

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Former Czechoslovak leader Alexander Dubcek will be buried Saturday in his hometown of Bratislava, the official CSTK news agency reported Monday.

A committee headed by the speaker of the federal parliament, Michal Kovac, was named to organize the funeral and farewell ceremony for the former Communist Party chief. Earlier reports had indicated the funeral would be Friday.

Dubcek, 70, died Saturday of heart, kidney and lung failure related to injuries he suffered in a car crash Sept. 1.

He was best known for his 1968 "Prague Spring" reforms, which were crushed by Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces that same year, ushering in two decades of orthodox Communism.

Dubcek had remained largely in political exile until the fall of the Communist regime in 1989.

■ Argentinian general strike affects few

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Organized labor's first general strike against the government it helped elect three years ago received a lukewarm response Monday in the country's largest city.

The General Labor Confederation is demanding a quadrupling of the minimum wage from $97 a month and a nearly 200 percent increase in the average $150 retirement pension.

Menem had threatened to fire workers and withdraw the legal status of unions that did not carry out a minimal level of "essential services." Unions reluctantly complied.

Commuter trains were sidelined by the absence of conductors and the central post office was nearly deserted. Banks and factories opened despite manpower shortages. Some public schools held classes.

The strike was significant politically because the confederation has been staunchly Peronist for five decades.

36,000 refugees flee Russian fighting

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 36,000 refugees have fled ethnic warfare in southern Russia and reports have surfaced of widespread atrocities, including children who lost their ears and a 4-year-old girl whose tongue was cut out.

President Boris Yeltsin on Monday relieved a deputy prime minister as head of the provisional government in North Ossetia, where at least 200 people have died in fighting in the past week.

Georgy Khizha was replaced by Sergei Shakhrai, a former Yeltsin adviser. Khizha, who remained a deputy prime minister, told a news conference that Russian troops now control North Ossetia, the Caucasus Mountains area where a territorial dispute has escalated into violence between Ingush and Ossetian militants.

It has been the worst outbreak of ethnic fighting on Russian soil since the Soviet Union collapsed. Several thousand Russian soldiers moved in last week to separate the warring sides.

About 100,000 Ingush live in the region. The Ingush, who are Sunni Muslims, claim the Prigorodny region of North Ossetia as their homeland. They are battling some of the estimated 400,000 Ossetians — who are Orthodox Christians.

Khizha said more than 36,000 Ingush had fled North Ossetia. About 30,000 went to neighboring Ingushetia and 6,000 to Russian military bases in the area.

The North Ossetians turned over 877 hostages to the Ingush on Monday in return for the 383 Ingush hostages, the Interfax news agency said, quoting a North Ossetian parliamentary commission.

Reporters who returned Monday from a three-day trip to the area accused the Ossetians of raping and killing many Ingush, saying they kidnapped teen-age girls and raped mothers in front of their children.

There was no independent confirmation of the reports.

Yevgeny Gudikov, a journalist with the newspaper Kuranty, published by the Moscow City Council, said he visited a camp in Ingushetia where Ossetians were holding Ingush — mainly women — as hostages without feeding them. The captives got some handouts from Russian soldiers, but the troops did not free them, he said. About 15 corpses were lying in the camp, he said.

Oleg Lysenko, a political observer for the Moscow City Council's press service, said he visited a hospital housing about 400 wounded Ingush. Some had their ears cut off by Ossetians, he said. One 4-year-old girl was shot in the forehead and had her tongue cut out, he said.

Elsewhere in the former Soviet Union, 30 Abkahzian and North Caucasian militants died after they were bombed by Georgian troops near the Abkhazian capital of Sukhumi, ITAR-Tass reported Monday.

Abkhazian rebels have been battling Georgian troops since mid-August, with scores of people killed. Abkhazia, which has many ethnic groups, seeks greater autonomy or independence from Georgia.

Germany remembers 'Crystal Night' attacks

BERLIN (AP) — Nearly 100,000 Germans demonstrated across the country on Monday to mark the 54th anniversary of the Nazis' "Crystal Night" attacks on Jews and to protest a wave of neo-Nazi violence.

Monday also was the third anniversary of the Berlin Wall's fall. But the German celebration of that watershed was sombre after violence by anarchists on Sunday disrupted a huge Berlin rally against right-wing extremism.

The violence prompted Chancellor Helmut Kohl's chief of staff, Friedrich Bohl, to urge tougher laws allowing police to act against troublemakers in advance.

But Bohl conceded a lack of political concensus for such laws. Kohl's conservative coalition partner, the Christian Social Union, boycotted Sunday's rally and demanded the government take steps to stem the flood of refugees.

President Richard von Weizsaecker, who was splattered with eggs by the anarchists, said in a national television appearance Monday that he was ready to be in more protests to show his solidarity with foreigners.

Nazi thugs attacked synagogues and Jewish homes and businesses throughout Germany on Nov. 9, 1938, killing more than 90 Jews, arresting 30,000 and leaving so much broken glass it became known as "Crystal Night." It marked the start of open persecution of Jews and ushered in the Holocaust, which claimed the lives of 6 million European Jews.

Commemorative marches were held in Rome, where about 10,000 people beneath flickering torches wound through the old Jewish ghetto. At the head of the column were seven concentration camp survivors locked arm-in-arm.

In Tel Aviv, dozens of Israelis, including children of Holocaust survivors, marched outside the German Embassy to protest rising anti-foreigner violence.

In Bremen, about 1,000 people at a ceremony heard Ignatz Bubis, the head of the Central Council of Jews in Germany, admonish political leaders to stand up to extreme rightists, who have been attacking foreign refugees and defacing Jewish memorials.

Bubis said weak leadership was a prime cause of the collapse of Germany's post-World War I democracy, the Weimar Republic.

But Berlin Mayor Eberhard Diepgen said the important thing was the huge turnout at Sunday's rally — not the leftist protests.

On Monday, more than 50,000 thousand people attended a "Rock Against Rightists" concert in Cologne.

Yeltsin seeks help on debt from British

LONDON (AP) — Boris Yeltsin on Monday appealed for help in rescheduling Russia's debt, and urged British business to invest in a new capitalist Russia.

The Russian president and his aides signed six agreements Monday with British Prime Minister John Major, including the first Russo-British friendship treaty since one signed in 1766 under Russian Empress Catherine the Great and the British monarch George III.

The pacts covered trade, defense, civil aviation and cooperation on nuclear energy.

Before leaving today, Yeltsin was to address the joint Houses of Parliament, an honor previously accorded only to Western leaders, and have lunch with Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace.

He flew into London on a rainy Monday morning and met with Major for more than four hours before addressing business executives at the Stock Exchange.

"Our business relations seem to be locked in the past. They still suffer significantly from stereotypes and notions about Russia as a totalitarian nation," he told them.

He said the market reforms he introduced last January already had produced positive results, adding, "The worst is behind us."

He said he was planning steps to attract Western investors to Russia, including lower taxes on profits and more opportunity to repatriate profits.

In the most intriguing part of the speech, he proposed "conversion of debt into property." He did not explain that brief phrase — only four words in Russian. Foreign Trade Minister Pyotr Aven said disputes with Ukraine over responsibility for financial obligations were delaying the plan.

Yeltsin and Major, appearing at a joint news conference at Major's 10 Downing Street office, said after meeting that there were no disagreements between them.

Yeltsin apparently won Major's support in focusing the United Nations' attention on ethnic Russians who have been denied the right to vote in the Baltic republics of Latvia and Lithuania.

Yeltsin appealed for British help in rescheduling the $70 billion debt left by the Soviet government when it collapsed last year.

South Lebanon violence overshadows peace talks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Muslim guerrillas and Israeli border gunners dueled with rockets and artillery Monday as Mideast peace talks resumed in Washington.

After Katyusha multiple-launch rockets fell harmlessly for a second night on south Lebanon, and also in the Galilee region of northern Israel, Israeli TV quoted unnamed army officials as threatening an escalation, which could mean a ground incursion or heavy bombing raids.

Earlier, officials said an Israeli F-16 accidentally hit a house in south Lebanon with a flare bomb Monday night. Three women were wounded after a rocket or bomb from the jet hit the house in Jowaya, eight miles southeast of Tyre, police said.

Timur Goskel, commander of U.N. peace-keeping forces in Lebanon, said Israel blamed "a technical fault" and apologized for any casualties.

Guerrillas of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, had fired two rockets that exploded harmlessly in Israel's self-styled "security zone" after Israeli tanks and 155mm howitzers poured rounds on eight Shiite villages.

Israeli chief negotiator Uri Lubrani, in Washington, told the Lebanese delegation, "If there is no security on our side of the border, life will become intolerable on your side ... The latest attack will not pass unnoticed."

Lebanon said the rocket firings followed an Israeli air raid on the Bekaa Valley which killed four Lebanese.

Iran and Hezbollah have vowed to wreck the peace process, launched a year ago under U.S. and Russian sponsorship. Violence erupts in south Lebanon almost every time talks resume.

Foreign Minister Faris Bweiz said he was awakened before dawn Monday by a telephone call from U.S. Ambassador Ryan Crocker "to tell me about U.S endeavors to curb the security deterioration in south Lebanon."

Bweiz said he told Crocker there could be no justification for any Israeli attack in Lebanon as long as Israel continues to occupy Lebanese soil.

Israel carved out the 10-mile-wide security zone in 1985 to protect its northern flank from guerrilla raids.

The new violence could hurt chances of Prime Minister Rafik Hariri's newly formed governent to rebuild Lebanon after 15 years of civil war.

Hariri, who presented his Cabinet on Monday, pledged to support resistance against Israeli occupation in the south.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Romance will provide many exciting and tender moments. You know instinctively how to win the hearts of the opposite sex. Early in 1993 your inherent optimism, combined with your business acumen, brings fresh financial successes. Once the money starts rolling in, guard against buying things on impulse. The employment outlook is especially promising in the summer of 1993. Your loyalty to your family draws you and loved ones closer together.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Roy Scheider, actress MacKenzie Phillips, singer Donna Fargo, dancer Ann Reinking.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Discord still lingers. Overreacting will only make a difficult situation worse. Be calm and courteous. Joining a club or self-help group puts you in touch with new friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Capitalize on an exuberant mood! You can be a real dynamo at work and the force that brings people together for business or pleasure. Be more aggressive on the financial front.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Amorous feelings are worth a closer look today. At work, things could be in disarray; double-check all details and contracts. You could be taken in by someone with designs on your resources.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good will abounds! Open up the lines of communication and create new rapport with potential allies. With children, use words of praise and support.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is no time to let whim influence your love and financial affairs. Avoid taking foolish chances. Redesign your diet along more healthful lines.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Reach out to your co-workers, creating an atmosphere of friendship and trust. You can get other people to agree with you, and also learn a thing or two. Trust your hunches.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotions run high. We forget that we are friends or loved ones and lose our cool. Be more patient and cooperative. A special gift or loving touch may strike the right note.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Watch your money today. Extravagance, whim or romance could cause cash to slip through your fingers. You will be much better off immersed in duties than in flights of fancy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Superior reasoning gives you an edge today. Apply your high energy to a special work or home project. You should be able to attain satisfying results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Enphasize shared resources today — they could be the key to new employment and financial success. Change is healthy; welcome it! Get out and socialize this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could be on shaky ground today. Strong desires are one thing, impatience is another. Do not put love, property or money at risk. Hunt for antiques, buy paintings or collect memorabilia.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There may be certain complications regarding a piece of property. Do not remain on the sidelines. Making your views known may prevent someone from causing further difficulties.

TODAY'S CHILDREN like the excitement of conducting a science experiment or building a puppet theater but may show disdain for the nitty gritty of learning basic skills. Reading is these youngsters' passport to adventure. They often accept a situation that others bemoan and turn it to their advantage. They recognize the value of economic self-reliance at an early age.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2 ♡	Dbl	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♣

There is an old bridge axiom: "Cover an honor with an honor," to which can almost surely be added, "especially if the queen is led and you hold the K J." But every hand must be treated on its own merits, as this deal from the 9th World Bridge Olympiad demonstrates.

Sitting East-West, respectively, for the U.S. were Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell, playing against Alain Levy and Herve Mouiel of France, North-South. At this vulnerability, the U.S. pair use very undisciplined weak two-bids, which accounts for both West's opening bid and East's failure to raise with what was likely to be the best hand at the table. Since the diamond holding was over the doubler, East felt his hand was better suited for defense.

West led the seven of clubs, taken with the ace. The contract was surely going down—barring a defensive collapse, declarer must lose two hearts, a club and at least two trumps. Mouiel tried to limit the damage by making the fine play of the queen of trumps from dummy at trick two.

We know many defenders who would cover with the king reflexively. Great would have been the fall thereon, and declarer would later lead toward the ten to escape with two trump losers and a one-trick set.

However, Meckstroth worked out that there was no way that covering with the king could possibly gain. If declarer held the ace-ten of trumps, the defenders would be limited to one trump trick either way. So East ducked, and declarer had to concede three trump tricks—down two.

Glamour honors Hillary Clinton

NEW YORK — The nation's incoming first lady, the first black female U.S. senator and the Navy pilot who revealed the Tailhook sex scandal are among Glamour magazine's Women of the Year.

Hillary Clinton was honored Monday "for bringing our country's First Relationship into the nineties."

Carol Moseley Braun, who upset the incumbent Democratic senator in a primary and will be the first black woman to serve in the U.S. Senate, also was named, as was Lt. Paula Coughlin.

The magazine said that by coming forward and telling officials about the Tailhook scandal, Coughlin risked her career while inspiring others to detail sexual harassment charges, forcing the Navy to order all personnel to get sensitivity training.

The seven others are: Charlotte Beers, chairman and CEO of Ogilvy & Mather; "Today" show co-anchor Katie Couric; "Backlash" author Susan Faludi; actress-comedian Whoopi Goldberg; Dr. Bernadine Healy, director of National Institutes of Health; Olympic gold medalist Jackie Joyner-Kersee; and Ellen Malcolm, president and founder of EMILY (Early Money Is Like Yeast), a political action committee that supports women candidates.

NEW YORK — Public television is going to rock its sedate image by rolling out some contemporary musicians such as Keith Richards.

The cable network VH-1, which programs music videos aimed at young adults, is joining forces with Chicago's WTTW public television station to produce a music performance series beginning early next year, it was announced Monday.

The series, "Center Stage," will be taped at WTTW's studio, introduced on VH-1 starting Feb. 14, then rerun on public television stations coast-to-coast next summer.

Ten programs are planned initially. In addition to Richards, others featured include Neil Young, Michael Bolton and k.d. lang.

LONDON — Norma Major, wife of the British prime minister, was left cooling her heels for 25 minutes Monday waiting for her luncheon guest — Naina Yeltsin.

The wife of Russian President Boris Yeltsin was full of apologies when she finally arrived after a morning visit to Kensington Palace, which houses part of the royal picture and costume collection.

"They tried to shoo us away because we were out of time, but I wanted to stay a little bit because it was a beautiful place," Mrs. Yeltsin, an engineer, told Mrs. Major. "It's a very cozy one and so very warm, so I liked it very much."

They smiled nervously for the media before going into the Savoy Hotel for lunch with Lady Fall and Lady Braithwaite, wives of the present and previous British ambassadors to Russia, and Valentina Pankin, wife of Russia's ambassador to Britain.

LOS ANGELES — Mary Fisher, the latest appointee to the National Commission on AIDS, pleaded for church support of those living with the AIDS virus.

"For the HIV-AIDS community in America, the voice of God heard from communities of faith has been terribly muted," Ms. Fisher told Sunday worshipers at the Church of the Valley in suburban Van Nuys.

"Temples should have raised high the roof beams to bring them in; churches should have shouted messages of grace from the rooftop," she said. "But what most members of the HIV-AIDS family have heard is whispers about their mortality and the hope that — like modern-day lepers — they will not get too close."

Ms. Fisher, who spoke before the Republican National Convention last summer, was a longtime party activist chosen by President Bush to replace Earvin "Magic" Johnson when he resigned from the National Commission on AIDS.

NEW ORLEANS — Former hostage Thomas M. Sutherland says he's amazed to find that some people need to be reminded of who he is and what happened to him — even though he's been free less than a year.

"It's less urgent for most people," he said Sunday, while in New Orleans. "Some of them have even forgotten who the hostages were and what it was all about."

Sutherland, former dean of agriculture for American University in Beirut, spent six years and five months as a captive, chained in a series of dank Lebanese rooms. He was freed Nov. 18, 1991.

During an address before the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, Sutherland said he's doing all he can to make sure Americans don't forget what the hostages went through.

Besides lecturing, the retired animal sciences professor is working with the U.S. Agriculture Department and writing a book with his wife, Jean, about his captivity and its effect on his family.

NEW YORK — A daughter has been born to TV talk show host Geraldo Rivera and his wife, C.C. Dyer, who had shared their infertility problems with viewers, their spokesman said Sunday.

The 9-pound, 8-ounce baby was born Saturday at a Manhattan hospital. She was named Isabella Holmes, said publicist Jeff Erdel.

Both mother and daughter were doing well. Rivera, in a statement, called himself "the happiest man in America."

UTPB choice holds promise for future

Charles A. Sorber, selected Friday by The University of Texas Board of Regents as new president of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin (UTPB), appears from his background and academic qualifications particularly well suited to lead the university in the challenging future years of this decade.

Now serving as dean of engineering at the University of Pittsburgh, Sorber has been described as both a dynamic individual and an engineer who is positive and supportive of engineering programs and technology so vital to the future of both UTPB and the Permian Basin. His positive attitude and expertise should help lead UTPB into the forefront of engineering technology in coming years.

Warren Gardner, UTPB vice president of academic affairs, said Sorber will serve as "a very strong advocate for higher education in West Texas, especially with this campus." That's important in this region where so many jobs require higher education because of the demands of the oil and gas industry.

We were also impressed with Sorber's immediate goal, announced when his selection was revealed, of listening to "various constituents of the institution" to help him "put together some planning to deal with the issues." Sorber obviously is not coming to the Permian Basin with the high-handed intention of showing the "locals" how higher education is supposed to be accomplished, but rather of relying on input from local business professionals and others to assist him in determining the needs of this region.

Nothing could benefit this region more than development of UTPB into a top-flight engineering technology institution with an emphasis on oil and gas production. Obviously, UT's Board of Regents were thinking along the same lines when they chose Sorber for the school's next president. His leadership will be important to shaping not only the future of UTPB, but also of this entire region.

Sorber's appointment is another indication that exciting years are in store for the Permian Basin!

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Be of good cheer, fellow cavepersons

Murchison

Are we downhearted?

Nooooooooo!

Not we right-wing fanatics, we conniving cavepersons who think virtue and the sabre-toothed tiger exited the world together. True, George Bush — for whom most, if not nearly all, of us voted on Nov. 3 — is out. This presages a leftward shift in Washington, financed by higher taxes and regulatory costs for everyone. But tears and pleadings will not avail, my brethren, my sistren. We have been run over like an armadillo.

And so have we been handed gifts that should not be despised. One such gift is freedom from political anxiety. That monkey today, for the first time in 12 years, sits on others' backs. Bryant Gumbel, Andrea Mitchell, Nina Totenberg, Bill Moyers, Tom Brokaw, Barbra Streisand and like sages won't have George Bush to kick around anymore, to blame for everything that goes wrong. Who anymore will laugh uproariously at Quayle-potato jokes? Have you wondered what mission Garry Trudeau can contrive for himself in the Clinton Era, when, theoretically, all the horrors of Reaganism are scheduled for solution? Next to a battle lost, the duke of Wellington observed wisely, nothing is so melancholy as a battle won.

Won? What the Democratic ticket won was a plurality — 43 percent of the popular vote. Almost certainly Boss Ross Perot tipped the election to Clinton. The boss must be henceforth accounted a major player in national affairs. He can be help or hindrance to Clinton, depending on whether the president sees and does things his own way or the boss'. I wouldn't be surprised if Ross, with his customary modesty, insisted on a partnership with Clinton in shaping and implementing economic policy.

Fine with us cavepersons, given that Ross' policies are more pro-capitalistic than were Clinton's campaign proposals. But it may not be so fine with that large faction of the Clinton movement that wants to redistribute the wealth — such wealth as the government hasn't already redistributed.

It's going to be an interesting four years. We cavepersons will be outside looking in at the candy store, rapping on the glass with our stone axes. Inside will be Andrea and Bill and Nina, all warm and snug, telling why the world suddenly looks hunky-dory.

CHARLEY REESE

The graying of America's baby boomers

We're getting old. That simple fact drives a lot of so-called political issues such as the growth of government, health care costs, and pressure on educational and infrastructure spending.

Reese

It's a new phenomenon, too. I interviewed a world expert on geriatrics once and he said it's the first time in history that such a large percentage of the population of countries have reached advanced age. It's happening to the U.S., Canada, and Israel and maybe some others I don't know about.

It's probably due to sanitary engineering and antibiotics. Infectious diseases used to kill off so many people in their teens, 20s, 30s, 40s and 50s that there were relatively few left to hit 65. It's important to understand that lifespans are not being extended beyond normal. It's just that fewer people are dying younger than in the past, so more people are left to live their normal lifespans.

When Social Security was passed, the people who passed it assumed: 1. Not many people would reach 65; and 2. Of those who did, most would not live much beyond it. When Medicare was passed, talk was that it would never cost more than $3 billion to $7 billion a year. As so often happens, our minds were stuck in the past. We were assuming that the future would be pretty much the same as the past. Not many lived to advanced age in the past. Not many would in the future.

It was a wrong assumption. To use a $2 word this aging of the population has created a new paradigm–a model or pattern–and we still have not fully accepted the consequences of it.

Most medical schools, for example, still train doctors in acute care medicine. Most elderly people, however, have long-term care health problems. To use one example, an AIDS patient is usually dead within 11 months of diagnosis of full-blown AIDS. An Alzheimer's Disease patient, however, can live an average of 18 years after diagnosis. Which is more expensive–11 months of treatment or 18 years of treatment and care?

Somehow we have to shift discussion in this country to the issues created by the present demographics. We have to shift it from organized screaming and selfish grabs at short-term benefits to long-term solutions.

It might help if we in journalism spent less time on politicians, crime, entertainment and sports figures and devoted more resources to issue-stories.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

A hayfield of dreams that'll knock you out

GREENSBORO, Ga. -- The Herald-Journal of Green County, an hour-and-a-half drive out Interstate 20 from Atlanta, recently carried what I consider to be one of the all-time news stories. Maybe the all-time news story.

Grizzard

Keep in mind, The Herald-Journal is no National Inquirer. It doesn't carry stories about Hitler being alive and well on Neptune, nor stories about a woman giving birth to a duck, although the story I refer to earlier, to me, is even a bigger eye-popper.

I'll give the article's headline first:

"The Lord Speaks to Pep Stone Warning Him Not to Go to Hay Field Where Over $30,000 in Machinery Was Stolen in the Early Morning."

Long headline, I realize, but the reader got all the facts in a hurry.

Local citizen, Pep Stone, the article stated, has been in the hay business in Green County since 1948.

He awakened one recent morning at two o'clock. It was raining. Pep Stone had a hayfield he hadn't covered the day before.

He decided he'd better go to the field and cover it. The article quoted Pep: "I was still in bed, fixing to put on my overalls when a voice came to me and said, 'Don't go, you will get hurt.' "

Pep went back to bed. When he awakened again he and a friend drove to the hayfield 10 miles away.

At the gate they found the lock had been shot away.

"My eyes got big and my heart skipped fast when I realized that someone had stolen my tractor and hay baler. I had paid $30,000 for this equipment," Pep was quoted further.

Tough break, but Pep put it all in perspective.

"I am living today," he said, because of my religious belief. It was a voice that spoke loud and clear. I honestly believe if I had gone down to the hayfield, I would have been killed.

"I can buy some more equipment," he went on, "but I can't replace my life."

A friend here who knows Pep well told me, "Pep's in church every time the door opens. If he says the Lord spoke to him, I'm not going to doubt it one bit."

Obviously The Herald-Journal didn't, either. Refer back to the headline and realize it didn't say, "Pep Stone Says the Lord Spoke to Him..."

It said, "The Lord Speaks to Pep Stone...."

There is a huge difference.

Most newspapers would have used the first headline, casting some degree of doubt on the Lord's personal warning. Did the Lord actually speak to Pep, or did Pep just say the Lord did?

Do you realize the news of the Lord speaking to a mortal is bigger than news Hitler is alive and well, a woman has given birth to a duck, or that Elvis is running a car wash on the outskirts of Little Rock?

Of course it is. It says to atheists they'd better make an immediate turnaround. It says maybe Jimmy Swaggart wasn't just making all that stuff up about his conversation with the Lord.

It also says there's a small town out there with a newspaper that has cast away the cynical nature of most other newspapers, so that if a God-fearing local citizen says the Lord spoke to him, who is the local newspaper to cast any doubt as to the veracity of his words?

Most other newspapers could use a little of that, too. Verily, verily, double-verily.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

Overcrowding a problem for MISD

I am a parent who resides in the Quanah Parker Elementary School area. My two children attend school there. I have attended all three of the Midland Independent School District (MISD) community meetings in regard to the junior high boundary proposal.

MISD offered a proposal which places 1,041 students at Alamo which has a maximum capacity of 900-950. It places 808 students at Abell, maximum capacity of 950-1,000. MISD says we need to save room at Abell for kids they project will be at Abell in three to five years (all from upper income, non-minority growth areas). Because of this obvious discrepancy, Michael Dobey admirably studies alternatives to correct the burden on Alamo and advantage to Abell. Please keep in mind that San Jacinto and Goddard schools were very evenly divided in every respect. Dobey then offered the idea of separating all 7th graders and 8th graders into their own schools so that all four junior high schools would be treated fairly.

Remember the bottom line on the bond proposal that we passed in May 1991? Overcrowding.

Of course, since under the separate 7th and 8th grade proposal we would be faced with even more busing, all four junior high parents became involved.

No, I wasn't brave enough to speak up at the meetings. Yes, a few people brought up the issue of property values declining around Parker. I am proud to be a Parker parent. I am proud to work side by side with the majority of terrific parents at Parker. I worked to pass the bond issue to alleviate overcrowding. The least of my concerns is my property value. My overwhelming concern is for my two kids. I don't want my children to be sardines when a privileged few get all the elbow room they could ever want or need. Abell or Alamo? I don't care. Just make it fair.

Can we get some support from Abell, San Jacinto and Goddard parents who can see that Alamo is being singled out to suffer?

Can we get some support for us Parker parents who just want equal facilities for all of our children?

Can we stop using Parker as a whipping boy? Do we have a monopoly only in our area on materialists or something?

I am not asking for your children to suffer for mine. I'm asking for you to support me in asking MISD to find a better population distribution for Abell and Alamo.

MC offers seniors new horizon

One of the delights of College Classics, a series of classes for those willing to admit to being 50 or older, at Midland College is being able to choose classes.

Since the beginning of the series world history has enlightened and intrigued, economics enriched, and music choices have enthralled us. Now in its second offering is Public Expression, an expose of journalistic overviews. It's been a delight, an eye-opener and thoroughly pleasureable.

Thank you Will Morris, Tom Vannaman, Chloice Shofner, Betty Morris, Walter Osadchuk and Bill Modisett.

Government waste hurts area

I was reminded of the fiasco of the House banking process and other perks on the "Hill" in Washington when I watched Channel 2's evening news report Oct. 20 following the meeting wherein the new airport board recommended to the city council that the VIP Parking list be cut by approximately one-half. If this procedure only eliminates the extra stickers that are allocated to an individual, nothing will be accomplished as the same select individuals remain on the list. It will give the appearance to the public that another backroom deal has been made in an attempt to can the taxpayers. On the "plains" of Midland, we are aware of the fiasco at city hall and the lost revenue as a result of VIP parking. An ordinary taxpayer cannot obtain a parking sticker unless he is a member of the "establishment" or the "buddy system." Individuals from Odessa, Big Spring, Monahans, Stanton, Carlsbad, Hobbs, etc., are on this favored list. The list also includes former mayors, council members, judges, the Midland County judge and commissioners, county attorneys, chamber of commerce individuals, etc.

Pat Schneider's Oct. 25th letter offers a practical solution to this very controversial problem by immediately eliminating the VIP parking program and running the airport like a business. Parking tickets would be validated only for those on official business. In so doing, the mayor and council would display a sense of responsibility. If you think the free parking doesn't cost the taxpayer, you are mistaken as it takes away taxpayer revenue regardless of the amount.

In the Reporter-Telegram I see that County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer and county commissioners continue to harass Sheriff Gary Painter with another lawsuit covering issues that have been decided. By filing another lawsuit, additional legal expenses will be incurred in addition to approximately $140,000 which has previously been charged to the Midland County taxpayers. To defend himself against this harassment, Painter is again forced to pay all of his own legal expenses. It is evident that Judge Seltzer and the commissioners did not understand the decision from the previous trial nor will they accept the mandate from the people in the recent sheriff's election. Waste of tax dollars by any taxing entity, whether city or county, must immediately cease.

Air Force sergeant pleads guilty to desertion, bigamy

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press writer

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — An Air Force sergeant who faked his death in 1987 pleaded guilty Monday to desertion and bigamy, telling a military judge he was ready to end his double life as it crumbled around him.

With family members and television producers looking on, Douglas Pou, 32, said he knew in his last days of freedom in June that he was under surveillance and close to being arrested. By then, his second wife had discovered his real identity and found out he had impregnated a neighbor.

"I was ready for this to happen," Pou said in a court-martial at March Air Force Base. "I was scared but I was ready. It was difficult living the way I did."

In a plea bargain, Pou admitted to bigamy and desertion and the government agreed to drop a count of larcency that was based on his first wife's collection of $500,000 in insurance money after he was pronounced dead. It wasn't immediately clear what would happen to that money or who turned Pou in.

The agreement called for Pou to be sentenced to three years in prison and to be given a dishonorable Air Force discharge. He could have been sentenced to five years.

The judge ordered evidence and testimony to be presented before deciding whether he will accept the plea bargain.

Before the proceedings, Pou came out on the front steps of the courthouse and posed for pictures clad in his sergeant's uniform and wearing the red beret of the elite parachute rescue team that he served with before leaving his first wife and their two young sons.

In addition to the lawyers representing him on the criminal charges, Pou has hired an agent and an entertainment lawyer. Last December, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that state laws barring people from profiting from crimes through book and movie deals were unconstitutional limits on free speech.

Representatives of seven television production companies seeking to buy the rights to his story watched as Pou recounted for the judge the morning of May 12, 1987, when he set out for his daily bicycle ride in Albuquerque, N.M., where he was stationed.

"When I crossed the bridge (over the Rio Grande River) I jumped off my bicycle and crashed and fell on the ground," he said. "I took off my shoes, jumped from the bridge, and worked my way in the water upstream until I reached a sparse wooded area where I got out."

He said he made his way to a bus station, used $60 to take a bus to San Diego and learned from newspapers later about a massive search for him.

"What was your intent?" Judge Willard Pope asked.

"I really hadn't given it any thought at that time. But I did have an intent later to go away," Pou responded. "I can only describe it as an instinct. I relied a lot on instinct and kept a very low profile."

In San Diego, Pou said he took a new name, Christopher Riggs, and married a woman who bore him two children.

Asked when he decided not to come back, Pou said: "It's really still not clear to me. But after I recognized that the Air Force thought that I was dead I thought that was the best way it could be. I had a conscious thought that I would never go back."

In the small courtroom, Pou's mother, Mary Ann, of Garrettsville, Ohio, and three sisters embraced him and patted him on the back.

His first wife, Suzanne, was not present. She divorced Pou after she discovered he was alive and had remarried.

Pou's second wife, who gave her name as Monica Riggs, testified that the sergeant showed up at her home after he disappeared, carrying no luggage and looking disheveled, with only 87 cents in his pocket. She had met him months before when he visited San Diego and they dated and corresponded occasionally.

Describing Pou as "fun" and a "great guy," she said he claimed he had just concluded a dangerous, secret mission and was now out of the military. She said he soon was doing odd jobs and supporting himself and that they married in September 1987.

Mrs. Riggs broke down in tears as she tried to describe Pou's effect on her life. She said he told her in October of 1988 about his true identity and "was absolutely shocked."

Their neighbor has given birth to Pou's child, a girl.

Family says Russians have airman's remains

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) — The family of an airman killed on a reconnaissance mission during the Korean War said the Defense Department told them Russia acknowledges it has the American flier's remains.

Dunham

Roy Dunham of Ashland said the family received word about the remains of his brother, Capt. John Dunham of Easton, Md., during a telephone call Friday.

"As I understand it, it's the first positive identification they've been able to make (of American pilots' remains)," John Dunham's daughter, Suzanne Fong of Holland, Mich., said by telephone Monday. "They've turned over some documents which indicated that they recovered the body of my father ... in 1952."

The Pentagon wouldn't confirm the report, saying any official communications with military families are kept private.

Dunham, a B-29 navigator, died Oct. 7, 1952, when his plane crashed in Soviet waters.

A U.S. Senate panel is expected to hear testimony Tuesday and Wednesday from Russian and U.S. officials working together to find information on Americans who fell into Soviet hands during World War II and the Cold War.

Heather Grimsley, an assistant to the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs, said Monday the Defense Department was required to notify relatives if a missing person's name could come up during a hearing.

But Grimsley said "that doesn't mean that it will."

In June, Russian President Boris Yeltsin told Congress the Soviets had taken 12 American airmen prisoner after downing their planes in the 1950s.

The joint U.S.-Russian POW-MIA Committee has been searching for more information since then.

Dunham was flying with the 91st Strategic Air Command Reconnaissance Squadron when he was shot down. The last time Roy Dunham saw him was in Yokosuka, Japan, at a Navy hospital where Roy was recovering from a back injury.

Dunham, 67, said his brother told him he had finished his duty assignment in Korea and was scheduled to return to the United States as soon as he finished photo surveys of air fields around Japan.

New senators arrive to learn ropes of new job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bathed in television lights and looking a bit awe-struck, eleven new senators arrived at the Capitol Monday to learn the nuts and bolts of their new jobs.

Among the vital lessons: How they and their staffs will get paid, ethics rules governing senators, where to go for computers and telephones — and just who those marble busts are surrounding the historic chamber. (They're former vice presidents.)

"I'm a little overwhelmed right at this moment," said Dianne Feinstein, a new Democratic senator from California who was at the center of a mob of reporters and TV cameras.

Driving to the Capitol past the city's monuments, "all of a sudden I looked at them a little differently," she said. As the car passed the Lincoln Memorial, "I said, 'Hello, Abe,' and someone in the car said, 'Welcome, Dianne.'"

The daylong orientation, behind closed doors, included a visit from Vice President-elect Al Gore. Participants said he told the new class "we are on the same new adventure" in trying to make the government work better.

Gore, who as vice president will also be president of the Senate, is expected to be an important liaison between the new Clinton White House and the lawmakers it will rely on to get its policies enacted.

Asked about the big issues facing them, many of the new senators mentioned reducing the federal budget deficit, stimulating the economy and revamping health care as top legislative priorities.

Newly-elected Senators gather for coffee on Capitol Hill Monday.

The new lawmakers ran into an early barrier when handed a thick book of the Senate's arcane rules, in small type. The job of breaking government gridlock may be "more of a job than I reckoned," said Feinstein. "It seems to me the Senate is set up to do the opposite."

For all their newness, the freshmen are hardly novices. Most come from local elected offices, and one — Robert Bennett, a Republican from Utah — is the son of a former senator, Wallace Bennett.

The eleven sat through a succession of meals and speakers, most of them the low-profile people who make the Capitol run.

Capitol physician Dr. Robert Krasner told them not to neglect their health in a new job that will mean a grueling travel schedule and sometimes long hours. "Don't send your administrative assistant to take your physical" as one senator did years ago, he joked, according to one participant.

Parliamentarians spoke about the complex ways of the Senate floor, a place where senators in debate speak not to each other, but to the chair, and where elaborate "trees" of amendments are built to keep other senators from rewriting a bill's provisions.

And old hands gave a few words of friendly advice. "Somebody will be putting a microphone under your snoot and asking about world affairs in Bosnia, and you won't be ready yet," cautioned Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

He also advised the newcomers to "let your staff know how you live," and not to succumb to the temptation to go home for every invitation that comes in the mail. "You have to pull them out of campaign mode, and into Senate mode," he suggested. "These are vital things."

A few in the group sounded like they were still on the campaign trail.

"My goal is to bring the politics of this country back home a little bit, and not be so Washington-oriented," said Sen.-elect Russell Feingold, a Democrat who defeated Wisconsin incumbent Republican Robert Kasten.

Barbara Boxer, a former House member and newly elected Democrat from California, said coming to the Senate as part of a new class with four women, including Carol Moseley Braun, the first black female senator, "is a very special moment." There also is an American Indian, Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo.

Court says no to protections in AIDS cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused Monday to let AIDS sufferers use a federal pension-protecting law to sue when self-insured employers cut health-care benefits for the disease.

The court, over two dissenting votes, left intact rulings that said the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) does not bar cost-cutting employers who insure themselves from curtailing or ending coverage for any ailment. Two-thirds of employees work for companies that are self-insured.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor voted to hear arguments in the case, but four votes are needed to grant such review.

"It's a tragedy," said Suzanne Goldberg, a lawyer with the Lambda Legal Defense Fund, a homosexual rights advocacy group. "The court has left American workers hanging, not knowing whether their health-care plans can be counted on to help them."

Gregory King of the Human Rights Campaign, another gay rights group, said the court's action "will undermine our nation's ability to cope with the growing AIDS problem."

King blasted the Bush administration, saying, "Rather than provide alternatives for the court to consider, the administration sought to justify the denial of benefits to a person who is ill."

Government lawyers noted that newer federal laws such as the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, may forbid such practices. That law took effect for most employers last July.

The law says employers cannot discriminate against AIDS victims by changing pay and "other terms, conditions and privileges of employment."

But Ms. Goldberg said the 1990 law doesn't make explicitly clear whether "disease-specific caps on insurance benefits" are outlawed.

The case acted on Monday dates from 1987, when John McGann, a warehouse employee for H&H Music Co. in Houston, learned he had contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

He told his employer, which at the time provided for lifetime medical benefits of up to $1 million for all employees. Months later, H&H Music reduced from $1 million to $5,000 the ceiling on AIDS-related costs.

■ Navy refuses to reinstate gay airman

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The Navy on Monday refused to give a homosexual sailor his job back, despite a court order against the military's ban on gays.

Meinhold, 30, is a petty officer who trained radar crewmen aboard P-3 submarine hunters. A 12-year Navy veteran, he was given an honorable discharge in August after telling a television news program he is gay.

After he was discharged, Meinhold filed a lawsuit seeking reinstatement, arguing that the Navy violated his constitutional rights by discharging him because he is gay.

On Friday, U.S. District Court Judge Terry J. Hatter Jr. in Los Angeles issued a temporary order reinstating Meinhold to his former rank.

The Navy said in a statement: "Mr. Meinhold's current status remains unchanged pending evaluation of possible responses to the judge's ruling."

■ Environmental VP, wife gets lost in woods

BERKELEY SPRINGS, W.Va. — The environmental vice president-elect lost touch with his environment during a weekend trip.

Al Gore and his wife, Tipper Gore, were hiking Saturday at Coolfont Resort, in woods about 50 miles northwest of Washington.

"It's a wilderness atmosphere here and they actually got lost," said Sam Ashelman, co-owner of the 1,500-acre resort. "It got dark Saturday afternoon and they were out hiking, so they had to use Secret Service ... to find their way back down again."

The two were never in danger and they were helped down the trail by agents, Ashelman said Monday.

"It's one of the few places close to Washington where you can get lost and still not get hurt," Ashelman said.

■ Arkansas' public health is nation's worst

WASHINGTON — The United States is lagging behind other developed nations in public health, and Arkansas, home state of the president-elect, is the worst example, the American Public Health Association said Monday.

"State governments across the country are cutting back on basic services, due in part to reduced federal support and a depressed economy," the organization said in its report.

The study listed Arkansas as the only state whose public health was ranked as consistently poor. The report considered such factors as access to care, environment, behavior, education, poverty and government spending.

States scoring well in the report card included Hawaii, Maryland, New York, Vermont, Virginia and Washington.

The group said the United States ranked 19th in the world in infant mortality, 28th in low-birthweight infants, 15th in maternal mortality and ninth in life expectancy.

The organization looked at 25 public health factors in each state that included per capita spending, smoking and drinking habits, pollution and violent crime. These factors were then lumped into five categories and the results were averaged.

Arkansas came in fourth in all five general categories.

General Electric agrees to shed light on dim bulbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Electric Co. agreed Monday to tell customers that the light bulbs it promotes as more energy-efficient and cost-effective than regular bulbs also are dimmer.

The company settled charges filed with the Federal Trade Commission, which had accused GE of misleading customers by claiming that its Energy Choice incandescent bulbs generated the same amount of light as ordinary bulbs.

In fact, the FTC said, the Energy Choice bulbs are cost- and energy-efficient because they have a lower wattage. They use less electricity and, hence, are not as bright.

"Anytime you use a light bulb of less watts, you're going to get less light," said Lee Peeler, associate director of the FTC's advertising practices division. "They'll get some energy saving as opposed to the bulb that it's compared to. But they'll also get less light."

The agreement bars GE from "misrepresenting the relative light output or wattage" of the Energy Choice bulbs. It also requires that in future claims of cost savings or environmental benefit, GE "clearly and prominently disclose to consumers that the bulbs provide less light."

Along with Monday's FTC settlement, GE reached similar agreements with 32 states.

In a statement, GE said it does not admit breaking any laws or regulations and defended the integrity of its product.

"These products provide significant energy savings when used in place of ordinary incandescent products," the company said. "Products in this line have been used by several utility companies as a means of reducing energy demand by shifting customers away from higher wattage incandescent light bulbs."

According to the FTC complaint, the Energy Choice bulb packaging prominently displays, "in large, bold print," the wattage of regular bulbs it suggests be replaced with Energy Choice bulbs.

"Below, in smaller and less prominent print, the actual wattage of the bulbs in the package is listed," the FTC said. "They do not adequately disclose that the bulbs provide less light than the bulbs they are to replace."

Under the settlement, GE would be allowed to use its leftover packaging for up to 120 days. The action does not affect GE's Energy Choice fluorescent bulbs.

The 32 states with which GE reached agreements:

Alabama, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, Wisconsin and West Virginia.

Mom worries about child after alleged abuse

GERING, Neb. (AP) — A woman accused of causing her 2-year-old's coma by throwing him into a desk is fighting to make sure a hospital doesn't let him die.

Susan Cross pleaded innocent Monday to assault and child abuse. She lost temporary custody of the hospitalized boy and is seeking court assurance that her request for life-sustaining treatment is honored.

Her wishes weren't followed last week by the Nebraska Department of Social Services or Children's Hospital in Denver, where the toddler was taken after he was injured Sept. 30.

The department was given temporary custody of the boy, Jerald Stubby Jr., on Oct. 15, two days after his mother and stepfather were charged. Jerald has been in a persistent vegetative state since Oct. 6.

Based on recommendations of physicians and the hospital's ethics committee, the department authorized he be disconnected from a respirator.

The toddler was taken off the breathing machine Friday, despite Ms. Cross's objections and a judge's ruling that her wishes should prevail until the criminal charges against her are resolved.

Ms. Cross could be charged with murder if the child dies, but Peters said that wasn't a factor in Ms. Cross' decision to fight to keep the boy alive.

"She's not some sort of sophisticated criminal who knows the consqeuqences or know the way the law works," Peters said. "She is a mother concerned about her child."

A state lawyer, doctors and a hospital spokesman said there is no meaningful hope for his recovery.

"The child's personality does not exist anymore," said department lawyer Lisa Swinton. "All that the medical community can do is maintain the shell, the body of the child."

Rhonda Flower, an attorney appointed for Jerald, supported taking him off the respirator.

Scotts Bluff County Judge G. Glenn Camerer ruled Friday he couldn't sanction an end to life support if the mother opposed it. Until charges against Ms. Cross and the boy's stepfather are resolved, "the natural parent has a strong voice in determining medical care for her child," Camerer said.

Jerald was taken off the machine anyway, and the state took the issue to a higher judge, Alfred J. Kortum. Kortum backed up the lower court judge and issued a temporary order barring the state from giving the hospital a "do-not-rescuscitate order."

Cross was charged with child abuse and providing false information to prevent prosecution of a felony. He pleaded innocent.

The Crosses are accused of not providing essential medical care. The boy had untreated injuries when he was hospitalized.

Council to review YMCA's fund contract

■ Agency could receive $10,000 in CDBG moneys for youth programs.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

John Singleton believes the volunteer coaches of the YMCA youth basketball program are excellent role models for the children.

"The kids need someone to listen to and respect. We choose our coaches carefully and hope that they will be positive influences," said Singleton, director of the Northeast YMCA. "I feel our program has made people realize what the YMCA stands for and gives the kids an opportunity to learn from their elders."

The program — for children in kindergarten through sixth grade — begins in January and organizers expect to attract more than 1,100 children from across the city. But the target area is southeast Midland.

"We expect to have 300 kids from that area. We want to mainstream them with the others," said Durwood Owen, president of the Metropolitan YMCA. "But a lot of these children come from poor families and need assistance to be in the programs."

The City Council today plans to review a contract with the YMCA that would grant $10,000 in Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds for youth programs, including $2,000 specifically for the basketball program.

"We want to do a better job of getting participation out of those areas of town. The money will go solely toward sponsoring those kids in the program. These are young people from many families who simply can't pay," Owen said.

Last year, there were more than 100 teams participating in the program, each playing once or twice a week.

"It was a logistical nightmare. We had games at the junior high school gyms — San Jacinto, Goddard and Alamo — and we utilized our facilities as well," Owen said. "We hope to accommodate any additional children this year."

There were four girls' teams last year. Singleton anticipates as many as 10 this year.

Owen said the program emphasizes sportsmanship while downplays competition.

"We don't keep standings, we don't have a champion, nothing like that. But we do try to teach them skills necessary for them to play," Owen said.

The coaches, many of whom are parents of participating children, are trained to emphasize sportsmanship and are instructed to play every child in each game.

The teams generally are grouped by grades and schools.

The remaining $8,000 of the YMCA's allocated CDBG money will go to the summer recreation day-camp program at the Northeast YMCA.

ECISD student drug use down, survey shows

■ Superintendent praises parents, counselors and 'Just Say No' sponsors.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

ODESSA — Students in Odessa public schools are doing more than just mouthing the words "Just say no," they are taking action by declining alcoholic drinks and taking drugs, according to a recent survey.

Tobacco, alcohol and drug use among Odessa students is on the decline, according to the Public Policy Resources Laboratory survey conducted by Texas A&M University.

Midland Independent School District was not included in the survey.

"The results show substance abuse is down significantly in this community," said Gene Buinger, superintendent of Ector County Independent School District. "You are making a difference," he said to an audience of parents, counselors and sponsors at a late afternoon news conference Monday.

"In this room we have the corps or the front line who are fighting adolescent substance abuse," Buinger said, congratulating persons attending the conference at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center.

Two years ago, Buinger said Texas A&M conducted its first survey on substance abuse in ECISD. "The results were pitiful," the superintendent said. "The survey indicated drug and alcohol abuse was widespread. Some people in the community thought the results were exaggerated. Two years later, we show a significant decline."

The survey — given to 1,500 secondary students in grades six through 10 — showed the number of students who admitted to drinking alcohol in the past 30 days — declined from 51 percent in 1990 to 37 percent in 1992.

Students who admitted to drinking some alcohol, in the course of their lives, declined to 70 percent from 82 percent two years ago.

Students who said they had used marijuana in the past 30 days declined from 12 percent to 8 percent, and tobacco use in the past 30 days declined from 26 percent to 20 percent.

Any experience with smoking also declined, from 58 to 51 percent of the students surveyed.

Buinger said substance abuse "was down in all categories except steroids."

ECISD spokesperson Chuck Hornung, said steroid use amounted to less than 2 percent. "And some of that use may be for medical reasons," he said.

The most dramatic decreases were evident in the use of tobacco, alcohol and marijuana.

Inhalants showed a 2 percent decrease, cocaine use decreased 3 percent; hallucinogens, 1 percent; uppers, 2 percent; downers, 1 percent; and the drug "ecstasy," 1 percent.

Adela Vasquez, supervisor for the Student Assistance Services (SAS), said that the strong drive against substance abuse by all agencies has had an impact on the declining drug usage.

"On-campus projects across the board have made the difference," Ms. Vasquez said. She said core teams of about 10 adults — including the school counselor and a Just Say No sponsor — meet on a regular basis to prevent drug and alcohol use.

The SAS program, implemented in 1987, has 10, rather than one counselor assisting an entire campus. The SAS staff has grown from four staff members and one secretary, to 19 staff members, one secretary, and volunteers on every secondary campus and 12 elementary school campuses.

"Our efforts have made the community aware of the fact that we all have to help each other out," Ms. Vasquez said.

Just Say No sponsor Lori Fredenberg said the the Just Say No clubs offer activities for students to participate in before they leave the campus for the day. "We have parades and assemblies," she said. "We make it fun."

Buinger said the good news is that the surveys indicate drug use is not happening often inside the school buildings.

"School administrators have to take a tough stand. They may have to see a young person taken off in handcuffs for marijuana possession. But their efforts and no-tolerance policy is making a difference. The efforts of Just Say No, MADD (Mothers Against Drunk

INTRODUCING ...

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Ebony, Midland County's newest deputy sheriff, stands with her handler outside the sheriff's office. The 2½-year-old black labrador retriever has been with the department for two weeks.

Deputy doggone happy about job

EDITOR'S NOTE: The sheriff's office requested that Ebony's handler, a deputy sheriff, not be identified because the dog lives with him and the department thought someone might find out where they lived and try to harm the dog.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Midland County's newest sheriff's deputy was giving a photographer fits — not sitting still, looking the other way and jerking when the camera clicked.

No amount of whistling, cajoling or badgering could get the subject to pose correctly.

Call it being camera-shy or hitting the terrible twos, but Ebony, a sleek black labrador retriever, was not willing to cooperate with her handler, the photographer or the sheriff, who was whistling and calling to no avail behind the photographer.

"I don't think she has gotten used to cameras yet," her handler said. "I think they still spook her."

The newest member of the sheriff's office will have plenty of opportunity to warm up to cameras. Being the only canine deputy sheriff should give 2½-year-old Ebony plenty of publicity.

In fact, her first big drug bust, which came only days after she joined the department, resulted not only in thousands of dollars in drugs being seized, but it got Ebony's face on television.

"The TV people really focused on her, you know," her handler said. "I don't know if she liked all those lights or not."

Ebony seems more at home in the office that she has shared with her partner for three weeks. She drinks from her water bowl and then sits contently, her deputy sheriff's badge twinkling in the overhead lights. She appears to be listening intently as her partner describes their training.

"She's been in training since she was a pup," he said. "She was at Specialty Service Canine in Austin. She was already about 70-80 percent trained when I went down. Then, I spent three weeks training with her. You know, learning how to handle her, how to work the lease, watching her.

"There is a big bonding process that goes on," he added. "If the dog doesn't like you, she won't work with you. It will probably be another three to four months before we really get to know each other well."

Ebony's job is in narcotics and tracking, two areas that Sheriff Gary Painter felt would benefit from having a canine.

"We have run across many instances where a canine that specialized in narcotics and tracking would have helped," he said. "The police canine units have offered their services at times, but, we didn't want to interfere with their jobs."

Painter said the sheriff's office had been considering getting a canine for the past two or three years and the opportunity to purchase one arose in October.

"She has already paid for herself as far as I'm concerned," said her partner. "She found about three-fourths of the marijuana in the big bust we had. She found all that was in the house."

Her handler said that she is a passive dog, which means when she finds the drugs, she sits instead of tearing into it.

"If she is sniffing the back of a car and the dope is in the front, she'll kind of move her head sideways and walk until she finds the drugs," he explained. "Then, she will

BGCT votes to continue funding Baylor

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Delegates to the Baptist General Convention of Texas have brushed aside an attempt to remove $4 million worth of funding from Baylor University.

On Monday, an ongoing clash between fundamentalists and moderates erupted once again when pastor Bill Sluder of the First Baptist Church of Cotulla introduced a motion to delete the conventions' allocation to Baylor. He suggested the money be distributed among other Texas Baptist institutions, including colleges, hospitals, and children's homes.

The motion, which would have required a three-quarters majority vote for passage, failed by a margin of about 3-1.

"The fundamentalists basically hate Baylor University," said Mike Bishop, Baylor's vice president for communications and marketing.

Vest campaign raises 75 percent of its goal

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A campaign aimed at outfitting Midland police officers with bullet-proof vests has raised more than 75 percent of the money needed.

The three-month "Invest in a Vest" campaign which ends Dec. 8 has received 312 donations from individuals, businesses, organizations and schools that range from $5 to $1,500.

That totals $61,510 of the $80,000 goal necessary to buy the protective gear for 156 officers.

The city of Midland has pledged to donate up to $40,000 to reach the goal for the purchase and an additional amount for maintenance, a city official said. Vests must be replaced about every five years.

Individuals or corporations donating $500 can have their name put on the police vehicle of their choice. Certificates will be given for donations of $100-$500.

Youngsters at Alamo Junior High — about 1,130 students — were among the groups to make a recent donation. They collectively donated $527.

"This was raised by the entire student body. They did it through the student council," said Herman Gunter, seventh-grade assistant principal.

"They collected this money in four days. That's pretty phenomenal for seventh- and eighth-grade kids," he said. "I was surprised they raised it in such a short time."

Students came up with the idea themselves while school administrators chose to have a specific of-

Pickling okra is all in the family

By Carol Rust
Hearst News Service

SAN ANGELO — The letter arrived from the friend of a homesick Peace Corps volunteer stationed in West Africa: "Please send me tapes of the David Letterman show and some Talk o' Texas pickled okra," the volunteer wrote.

That may have been the first request from Africa for okra, but the pickled pods show up on grocery shelves in Europe and all over the United States. And when store managers forget to reorder or a shipment is delayed, the folks at Talk o' Texas Brand Inc. hear directly from their customers.

They have a file folder bulging with such appeals. And on the wall is a framed letter from Hawthorne, N.Y.

Written in inch-high letters, it says: "GOD LOVE YOU! Your Talk o' Texas okra is the only blessed thing that has kept me going ..."

All this might seem grandiose praise for a culinary item many Southerners and Southwesterners take for granted. Okra — pickled, stewed or fried — barely shoulders out the turnip for the title of "most humble vegetable."

The site of all this tastebud-teasing creativity — the Olympus of hibiscus esculentus' pickled incarnation — is a nondescript yellow warehouse of corrugated metal in San Angelo.

Here, nestled in a thicket of scrubby mesquites, the tiny pickle factory churns out 180,000 jars a week.

Outside — beneath its splintered wooden sign with faded letters — the structure is unremarkable. But inside it's filled with a cacophony of whirring, whooshing, clanging machinery and the zing of vinegar.

This is a family-owned business, 40 years old, that has never spent a dime on advertising.

Al Ricci, 75, is head pickle master and chairman of the board.

He bought the place from a bankrupt couple in the late 1940s. Their last act before hitting the highway was to teach Ricci the art of pickling okra.

Ricci's 44-year-old son, Larry, is the chief executive officer. And his 17-year-old son, Albert II, works there, too.

Since Ricci took over the company, it has outgrown four buildings.

Ricci didn't grow up in the pickle business, nor in Texas. Rather, he was a hair stylist, musician and athlete in Pennsylvania.

When he developed painful arthritis, he and his wife moved to Texas and when the drier climate eased his pain, he decided to stay.

First he styled hair.

Then along came okra.

In the United States, a pickle business isn't a bad bet.

Americans consume 29 billion pickles — $1.45 billion worth — a year, said Richard Hentschel, executive vice president of Pickle Packers International, a St. Charles, Ill.-based trade group.

That figure comes to 9 pounds of pickles a person each year, but that is largely pickled cucumbers.

"Okra is such a small part of it, that word never comes out in conversation," Hentschel said.

The Riccis get their okra thrice-weekly from Mexico in lots of 36,000 pounds from mid-May to the end of July. Pods with worm holes or other blemishes are culled, as well as those that are too large. Only pods 4 inches or shorter are used, because okra gets tougher the longer it grows.

As the jars rattle down the assembly line, an employee whose job title is "okra squasher" whacks the top of each jar with a flat wooden mallet to firmly pack the pods. Then spices, vinegar and brine are added and tops screwed on the jars before they go into the pasteurizer.

The younger Ricci speaks cautiously about expanding the business to pickle other kinds of vegetables.

"We don't have the kind of money it takes to promote a new product; we can't go up against some of these big companies and expect to break into the market," he said.

But that's OK. The Riccis are content to stick with the product that draws greetings and thanks from all over the country.

Smugglers can evade radar, informant says

HOUSTON (AP) — Customs Service officials claim a $2 billion radar fence has virtually closed off the nation's southwestern border to airborne drug traffic. But a federal informant says the system can be penetrated easily.

Informant Michael Camp told the Houston Chronicle the most common smuggling technique is to fly over the border at a low altitude, drop bundles of cocaine at a designated spot and return to Mexico before customs agents can react.

Camp worked as a drug-smuggling pilot for the federal agency, the Chronicle said Monday in a copyright story.

"What good does it do for them to see you if they can't catch you?" Camp asked. The radar network successfully stops only the most inexperienced pilots, he said.

While steadfastly defending the anti-drug radar network, customs officials concede it is almost impossible to catch pilots who cross the border and then return to Mexico.

"There is not much we can do to stop that airplane," said customs spokesman Vince Bond. "We don't shoot airplanes down."

Bond acknowledges that customs radar cannot detect an airplane when it drops something to the ground but said his agency relies heavily on ground sources as part of the anti-smuggling system.

If an airplane is spotted making a drop, he said, customs personnel respond immediately.

Camp said that as part of his undercover work, he had occasion to fly drugs undetected across the border without the knowledge of the Customs Service and is familiar with members of international drug groups that do so regularly.

Camp has been a paid informant for the Texas Department of Public Safety and federal drug agencies since 1987.

Principal creates positive environment

EL PASO (AP) — Celia Salazar turns denim scraps into pumpkins and old tires into flower pots. She makes autumn leaves out of material ends and apple orchards out of mesquite trees.

With a wave of her chalk, teachers become storybook characters and the library is transformed into fantasyland.

Salazar sounds like a fairy godmother. She's actually the principal of the Ysleta schools' Pre-Kindergarten Center.

Her students don't know the difference.

The same imagination that creates art from leftovers annualy transforms 700 at-risk 4-year-olds into maturing and motivated kindergarten students.

"When kids go to the schools from here, the teachers notice right away these kids are from Ysleta Pre-K," said Celia Campos, mother of two former Pre-K students. "They listen. They follow directions."

Salazar's secret?

She lets kids be kids. They learn by singing, dancing, coloring and creating.

She lets teachers teach. Each month, staff members brainstorm on what and how they want to teach. Every idea is valid.

And she helps parents with their parenting. Once a month, moms and dads are required to volunteer at the school. Three times a semester, they have to attend parenting classes.

"Many of these children's families don't have the needed parenting skills," said Salazar, herself the mother of two young adults. "Many of them are raised by single parents. These are our potential dropouts here. We're working with the entire family, not just the child."

Salazar knows this is an unorthodox way to run a school. But then, she gets unorthodox results.

"At first, kids come in crying because they don't want to be left here," she said. "After a while, they're crying because they don't want to go home."

As if on cue, a waist-high line of bobbing heads passes in front of her. One by one, the kids look up and grin: "Hi, principal." "Look what I did." "Hi, principal."

Salazar smiles back.

"This is their first experience with school," she said. "If it's positive, they'll want to continue learning. They will keep going to school and stay at the top of their class."

'We're working with the entire family, not just the child.'
— Celia Salazar

The Ysleta Pre-K began seven years ago when the state was pushing for more early education. The district took an empty middle school, hired Salazar — a Ysleta teacher for 27 years — and told her to create a successful program. Today, it's the only school of its kind in Texas. It's recognized nationally as an example of what works.

"It takes a lot of knowledge and energy to put a school like this together," said Pre-K assistant principal Martha Murguia. "She put it together. I admire her. She's my mentor."

Salazar still puts in 10 to 12 hours a day at the Pre-K. Her motivation for working with disadvantaged kids is personal.

She once was one of them.

The principal grew up in a South El Paso barrio. Her parents, neither of whom finished high school, encouraged her education. Her peers didn't.

"If you decided to try to make something of yourself or improve yourself you were looked at as trying to be better than everyone else," she said. "'You're not one of us now,' they would say."

Outside the barrio, ethnicity became an issue.

"(Hispanics) were treated differently," she said. "The expectations of us were not as high as they should have been. We were not expected to achieve as much.

"I set out to prove that wrong."

At 14, she got a scholarship to Loretto Academy. The teen-ager rode two public buses to get to school. Later, she graduated from Texas Western College, now the University of Texas at El Paso.

"It's been a good challenge," she said. "I can finally say, 'I did it.' I worked for it. Now I can help the people out here.

"I do not condone feeling sorry for myself. I tell everyone 'If I can do it, you can do it.'"

BGCT: Delegates approve continued funding for Baylor

(From 1B)

"Their animosity is unabated. They think that Baylor is a liberal school which we are not. We are conservative, we are thoroughly Baptist, but we are also a university and we have respected academic programs and we are not a school of indoctrination, which they (fundamentalists) are more comfortable with."

Baylor president Herbert Reynolds said he is "grateful" that the convention will continue its allocation to the university.

Even if the motion had succeeded, Baylor officials say the university's $140 million operating budget would not have been significantly handicapped.

"The point is not the money, it's the principle of the relationship between Baptists and Baylor. It is a partnership and we intend to maintain our part of the relationship," Bishop said.

At last year's meeting of the Baptist General Convention, delegates ratified the BGCT-Baylor affiliation agreement, which affirmed the organization's money allocation to the university. Bishop said he expects recurring challenges.

"Every year they (fundamentalists) are going to try to oppose Baylor in some manner," Bishop said.

Another challenge to moderates came when conservative minister Rudy A. Hernandez of San Antonio placed his name on the ballot for president of the Baptist General Convention. Hernandez was hoping to unseat moderate president Dick Maples.

But Maples defeated Hernandez by a vote of 4,326 to 1,572.

Hernandez, a San Antonio evangelist who became an ordained minister at the age of 19, said he will work with the re-elected president.

"I'm willing to work with all of the groups out there if all of us are willing to yield," Hernandez said.

Hernandez charges that the convention's moderate wing is exerting undue influence on Baylor University, the state's largest Baptist college.

Maples resumed his duties as president Monday with a speech before the assembled delegates. He exhorted Texas Baptists to improve race relations and reach out to ethnic populations.

"We must be servants of our people," Maples said. "Not superstars on a pedestal." Maples is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Bryan.

More than 6,000 Southern Baptists are attending the annual two-day meeting.

"That's an exhaustive program. About 40 to 50 kids a day in the summer, with as many as 80 to 100 on any given day show up," Owen said.

The children stay at the daycamp from as early as 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The YMCA provides transportation for many children from designated points and teaches numerous recreational skills, including swimming and arts and crafts.

"We also take them on field trips. We use to go to Water Wonderland, or we've taken them to the Monahans Sandhills, the Petroleum Museum, the Museum of the Southwest," Owen said. "Many parents use the program as a daycare program."

The summer daycamp program lasts the entire summer vacation.

ficer receive the vest — Dan Walkenshaw, a detective in the juvenile division and the police-schools liaison.

Walkenshaw said he was "real impressed" by the students' accomplishment in the short period of time.

Gunter attributed the youngsters' motivation to previous relations with police in DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) classes in elementary school, and a money-raising contest where the winning class had an ice cream party.

In addition to Alamo Junior High, St. Ann's School has donated $500 for a vest for Officer Robert Carouth, and Washington Elementary School has donated $500 for Officer David Beatty.

The fund-raising campaign was patterned after a successful one in El Paso. After an officer was killed in September 1991, television stations there raised enough money to buy bullet-proof vests for all El Paso police officers.

The local campaign is sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram and television station KTPX, Channel 9.

Anyone wanting to contribute may send their donation to the Midland Police Department, 601 N. Loraine St., Midland, 79701, or Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs (NAB'D), P.O. Box 2424, Midland, 79702.

State in brief

■ Four teens arrested in fatal shooting

RICHARDSON — Four teen-agers have been arrested in the fatal shooting of a 17-year-old high school student after a football game Friday night.

Police on Monday arrested Aubrey Jones, 17, and Michael Whaley, 18, both of whom were charged with capital murder and aggravated assault.

On Sunday, police arrested Michael's brother, Terrell Whaley, 17, and a female juvenile. Whaley was charged with capital murder and aggravated assault and the girl was placed in custody of juvenile authorities.

Sean Patrick Cooper was shot once in the chest after assailants forced him from his car near the Berkner High School parking lot, police said.

A passenger in his car also was beaten and the vehicle was stolen. It was later found stripped in the Pleasant Grove area of Dallas.

Richardson police Captain Dennis Moeller said the shooting took place after the suspects drove up to the school in two cars looking for a rival gang member.

■ Africanized bees enter Pecos County

COLLEGE STATION — Africanized bees have made their way into Pecos County now on a list of Texas counties under quarantine, agriculture officials say.

The quarantine, effective Tuesday, restricts movement of commercial bee operations from that county.

The addition brings to 51, the total of counties now under a quarantine, according to Paul Jackson, of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in College Station.

An Africanized honey bee swarm was located in a Fort Stockton bush. A sample from the hive was confirmed as Africanized by the Experiment Station's Honey Bee Identification Lab in College Station.

Fort Stockton is about 300 miles northwest of San Antonio.

Other counties included in the quarantine are: Aransas, Atascosa, Bandera, Bastrop, Bee, Bexar, Brewster, Brooks, Caldwell, Calhoun, Cameron, Comal, Crane, Dimmit, Duval, Edwards, Fayette, Frio, Goliad, Guadalupe, Hays, Hidalgo, Jim Hogg, Jim Wells, Karnes, Kenedy, Kerr, Kinney, Kleberg, La Salle, Live Oak, Maverick, Matagorda, McMullen, Medina, Nueces, Real, Refugio, San Patricio, Starr, Terrell, Travis, Uvalde, Val Verde, Victoria, Webb, Willacy, Wilson, Zapata and Zavala.

■ Agency orders high-tech trash cans

AUSTIN — Austin's transit authority is treating its trash first-class.

Unhappy with plastic lined waste bins that fill up with water when it rains and with holes so big people dump household items in them, Capital Metro is planning to pay a Houston firm $280,000 for new, high-tech trash containers.

The high-rent bins will cost $350 apiece.

Capital Metro was so concerned about designing the perfect trash container that it shunned an offer from a locally based nonprofit group which produces heavy-duty waste cans for about $200, a savings of about $120,000.

The new cans are expected to bring up the cost of pickup.

Capital Metro will pay 20 percent of the new $279,200 trash removal costs, while a federal grant will cover the rest, officials said.

■ Lawmakers file bills for 1993 session

AUSTIN — State lawmakers have begun filing bills for the 1993 regular legislative session, including a measure to extend the death penalty to those convicted of killing children under age 6.

That measure, introduced Monday by Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, was one of several bills filed in advance of the legislative session that convenes Jan. 12.

Brown said he also had introduced bills to increase criminal penalties for drug dealers who use children as delivery agents or lookouts, and to allow anyone harmed by illegal drugs to sue the drug dealer for such damages as the costs of rehabilitation.

Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, also filed bills Monday, including one to prohibit hunting of certain endangered or exotic animals and place controls on private ownership and breeding of such animals.

Lotto start is success, officials say

■ Gambling expert thinks quick picks would have led to higher ticket sales.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A gambling expert said Monday that the state made a crucial mistake in Lotto Texas that led to low sales, but lottery officials said the game's start was a success.

Ticket sales Saturday — the first day of the pick-six numbers game — reached $775,740, which is far below the $1.2 million worth of tickets sold in 1986 on the first day of California's lotto.

In fact, Lotto Texas sales for Saturday and Sunday combined was only $1,139,400.

In another comparison, about $1 million worth of instant-winner, scratch-card tickets were sold each hour on the first day of sales May 29.

Lotto Texas also was plagued by people complaining about not knowing how to play, and some retailers who said they spent a lot of time giving instructions.

When promoting the Lotto Texas, officials guaranteed that the first jackpot would be at least $2 million, and maybe more if wagering took off.

On Monday, officials were not saying whether the jackpot would exceed $2 million.

But Lottery Director Nora Linares said she was not disappointed by the Lotto Texas sales.

Lotto sales traditionally start slow, compared with scratch-card games, but accelerate as the jackpots grow, she said.

In addition, Ms. Linares said that it was unfair to compare Texas' start with California, because California had a drawing for the lotto three days after tickets went on sale.

The first drawing in Lotto Texas will be Saturday, one week after the first tickets were sold. Lottery officials say that lotto sales increase the closer to the drawing.

Ms. Linares praised the start of the game for having no technical problems.

"Everything went so well. We literally had no glitches in start up. It was obviously better than expected," she said.

But others said the slow purchasing was because Lotto Texas does not offer "quick-picks" option that other state lottos have. The quick-picks allows the customer to let the lotto machine randomly pick the numbers.

Turk Pipkin, the author of "The Winner's Guide to the Texas Lottery" said quick-picks make it easier to play, and can enhance payoffs to players that do win.

"I think they made one big serious error — no quick picks," said Pipkin. "It's the critical piece of mistaken thinking they (state lottery officials) have taken so far."

Since most people pick their "lucky" numbers or birthdates, the lower numbers are usually the most used, he said. If these numbers are drawn, then the likelihood is that there will be many more winners to share the payoff.

In quick-picks, the numbers are chosen at random and there is little chance that anyone else would have those numbers. Therefore if those numbers hit, the payoff would be greater, Pipkin said.

He said he is urging people to write lottery officials asking them to institute quick-picks.

Ms. Linares said the state did not offer that option because she believed that players would want to learn how to play and pick their own numbers.

"It's really up to people to learn how play the game," she said.

But, she said, quick-picks will be available some time in the future.

Gramm seeks to retain senate post

Associated Press

'I want to win control of the Senate back and I think in this job that I can maximize our chances of doing that.'

— Sen. Phil Gramm

WASHINGTON — Sen. Phil Gramm said Monday he's the best man to shape the Republican Party's re-election and fund-raising fortunes in the Senate as the GOP contends with a Democrat in the White House for the first time in a dozen years.

Gramm confirmed Monday he will seek reappointment as chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, a position he has held since 1990.

Senate Republicans will meet Tuesday to cast secret ballots for the NRSC post and a conference secretary.

In a repeat of 1990, Kentucky Sen. Mitch McConnell is challenging Gramm for the job. Gramm, who has raised a record $16 million for GOP Senate candidates over two years, defeated McConnell 26-17.

"I'm running for re-election for one and only one reason and that is I want to win control of the Senate back and I think in this job that I can maximize our chances of doing that," Gramm said.

"It's going to be very hard to raise money with a Democrat in the White House and that's another reason that I'm doing it. I think I can get the job done. I don't know if McConnell could."

Gramm's $16 million in contributions raised far outpaces the NRSC's previous record best of $10.8 million funneled to candidates in 1988.

McConnell's challenge predates the Republican convention in August. But until Monday, his office had refused to confirm McConnell was running.

"The phone calls have been very encouraging and the senator is definitely running," spokesman Scott Sowry said.

Gramm's likely run for the White House in 1996 has been an unspoken issue in the campaign, with McConnell contending that Gramm improperly is using the NRSC to forge ties and build a power base.

"Being in the leadership increases your national profile," Gramm said.

"Given the choice of jobs other than (Senate Minority Leader Bob) Dole's job, I think it's likely the most influential position that a Republican will hold in the government after January."

Gramm said his chances were boosted by the GOP's better-than-expected showing in the Senate.

The GOP will manage to retain its current margin in the Senate if Georgia Democratic incumbent Wyche Fowler is defeated in a Nov. 24 runoff. Democrats currently have a 57-43 lead and had appeared poised to add as many as four more seats.

"Is this victory? No, but it's not disaster," Gramm said. "I think, everything considered, we were very fortunate to in essence hold our own in these races since the president got 38 percent of the vote."

Gramm said his campaign is not being hamstrung by his prediction last year that Republicans could retake the Senate. "That was when the president had an 82 percent approval rating. Had that held up, we would have," Gramm said.

'Pompon mom:' Movie is one-sided fiction

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — A TV movie about a woman charged with trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival got a critical review from one viewer — the accused.

"The movie is one-sided fiction," Wanda Holloway said of "Willing to Kill: the Texas Cheerleader Story," which aired Sunday night on ABC.

Mrs. Holloway, portrayed by Leslie Ann Warren, watched the movie with friends at her home in this Houston suburb.

"Despite what the movie projects, not everyone from Channelview is an illiterate hick with an accent," she said in a statement released by her attorney.

Mrs. Holloway gained international attention after she was charged with trying to hire a hitman to kill Verna Heath, the mother of junior high school student Amber Heath.

Prosecutors claim Mrs. Holloway hoped Amber would be so distraught over her mother's death she would drop out of the competition.

Mrs. Holloway was convicted last year and sentenced to 15 years in prison, but the conviction was overturned because one juror was a felon. A retrial is pending.

Sunday's movie was based on the testimony of Mrs. Heath's mother and Terry Harper, Mrs. Holloway's main accuser.

Mrs. Heath said the film was inaccurate in many respects, including the way it characterized the girls' friendship.

"For the most part, it was not factual," Mrs. Heath said.

Mrs. Holloway tried to block the film's broadcast, but she agreed to an undisclosed settlement with ABC.

Home Box Office has filmed its own version, a black comedy titled "The Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas Cheerleader Murdering Mom."

Arranged marriages may be the answer to the dating game

By Erma Bombeck

At a time when women like me should have billfolds bulging with pictures of grandchildren, we're walking around with snapshots of our kids with their dogs and cats.

Bombeck

Today's generation changed the rules. Instead of performing the mating dance of panic in high school and college, they formed pods of friendships. Now, they're in their 30s and looking for a permanent, monogamous relationship.

Forget Mr. Right. Mr. Will Try is viable.

I know some anxious mothers who refuse to sit by and wait for their kids to get off the dime. If Sarah's brother's sister-in-law has a nephew with a pulse, she arranges a date.

I can't do that. I'd be looking for a nice girl who had read all my books and helped me clear the table after dinner. My kids would be looking for someone who looks like a centerfold and owns her own Nordic Track.

A few weeks ago, Time magazine offered a look into the future of the Dating Game. Humorist Merrill Markoe predicts that during the next century sex and dating will be so dangerous (due to communicable diseases and personality disorders) that only the thrill-seekers will try it. "They'll be the same people today," she writes, "who do things like bungee jumping, sky surfing or eating at Denny's."

That's depressing.

So what's the answer? Maybe we should take a second look at arranged marriages. Look at all the time singles could save by not hanging around bars, Laundromats or church mixers.

Expectations have always run too high in the minds of unmarrieds. Why not try no expectations? That used to work. I remember the great scene from "Fiddler on the Roof" where Tevye asked Golde, the wife who was chosen for him, "Do you love me?"

She couldn't believe he had to ask after 25 years. Love wasn't something you declared in the dark beneath the sheets; it was daily. It was sharing, forgiving, understanding and sacrificing. It was tolerance, patience and gentleness toward one another.

I asked one of my kids the other night if he would trust his father and me to "arrange" something between a girl who would bring her own car and her own medical coverage to the marriage.

He thought a moment. "If she looks like Sharon Stone — we'll talk."

Pig trouble

Debbie Gallagher of Guilford, Conn., visits her 750-pound pig, Dolly, who lives on a farm near her home. Last week, charges against Gallagher of violating the public health code were dropped, but the town is suing for damages because she allegedly violated an order instructing her to get the pig out of the back yard.

Whooping cranes to be freed in Florida

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — A dozen captive-bred whooping cranes will be brought to a Central Florida prairie next month in an experiment to help preserve one of the world's most endangered species.

The cranes' arrival will begin a 10-year program to boost the population of the large graceful birds, which has teetered on extinction for almost a century.

The young birds — raised in captivity from eggs collected from the wild — will be serving as a genetic safeguard in case an existing wild flock of only 148 birds elsewhere is wiped out by disaster or disease.

The Florida program "is a great step forward for the cranes," said John F. Turner, director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, who toured the Three Lakes Wildlife Management Area on Thursday.

But the project is no guarantee for survival.

The birds will be exposed to the elements, to predators, viruses and people. They must learn to live in the wilderness without being taught survival skills by parents.

If the first phase of the program succeeds, biologists will bring 200 cranes to the prairie, not far from Walt Disney World, during the next decade. They estimate that 60 to 70 percent will survive to reproduce.

Robert M. Brantly, executive director of the Florida Game and Fresh water Fish Commission, said state officials expect tourists from around the world to visit the Kissimmee River to watch the majestic whooping cranes.

State Fair's clown insults upset couple

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Maybe it's just their job. After all, insults of the personal variety are a proven method of getting people to patronize the dunking booth.

Just the same, the clowns at the State Fair have been told to tone back the smart comments.

T. Wilson Sparks, the fair's interim executive director, told booth owner Kenneth Roach that the clowns must cease abusive remarks. Sparks said he acted at the insistence of an outraged couple.

Kathy Beck said she and her husband, John were walking arm-in-arm toward the exhibit buildings about 8:30 p.m. last week when a clown in the caged booth lit into them.

"The guy said, 'Look at potbelly in the sweater!' and just kept it up," Mrs. Beck said. "People were turning, staring and laughing. It was embarrassing."

DEAR ABBY

Moms, kids agree: Motherhood comes better late than never

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Found Love Late" who wonders if she's too old to have a child in her mid-40s:

I was 45 and my husband was 50 when I became pregnant. We had been childless for 22 years and it was a great shock, to put it mildly. My husband was an executive in a large corporation, and I had never worked outside the home. I had an active social life and kept busy with volunteer projects. My doctor assured me that my age was no problem because my health was excellent. I had an uneventful and easy pregnancy, and was thrilled when I delivered a beautiful baby girl. We named her Chris.

Van Buren

We had some adjustments to make in our lifestyle, but we handled them well. Chris has been the joy of my life. She is 32 now, happily married and has given me four beautiful grandchildren — two boys and two girls. I am now a widow — 78 years young.

Would I do it again? Yes!

Is it fair for a child to have a menopausal mom? I will let my daughter answer that question. I'm enclosing her letter. — IDA PFOHL, VERO BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: My mother gave me an "assignment" which I am accepting happily.

She asked me what it was like having a menopausal mother. I never knew I had one. I suppose most kids think their parents are "old" — but I never thought mine were any older than the rest.

In fact, I always thought my parents were pretty cool — especially my mom. She was always up on the latest fashions, styles and trends, and she dressed accordingly. (She still does.)

My mom is my best friend. We talk on the phone every day and get together at least once a week to go shopping. She can run circles around me. I have to ask her to stop so I can rest.

I want to tell those women who found love late and had children later than most women:

Don't worry about looking like a grandmother at PTA meetings. You will see women of all ages, shapes, sizes and colors there. Lots of moms are also grandmothers from their older children. Besides, with today's lifestyles, many children are being raised by their grandparents, so I doubt that you will be the oldest mother there.

But most of all, please don't worry about what your children "might" think about having an older mom. I had one, and it never even crossed my mind at the time. I had the most wonderful childhood a kid could have, and the best parents in the world, and your children will probably think the same. — IDA'S DAUGHTER: CHRIS KNIGHT, VERO BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old boy whose mother's hair turned gray when she was around 35 or 36 years old. A few times I've been asked if she was my mom or grandma, but I never worried about it because it didn't bother me.

"Found Love Late" shouldn't worry about looking like a grandma, either. It isn't the color of the lady's hair that's important; it's what's inside that counts. — VINCENT YOUNG IN MALABAR, FLA.

DEAR VINCENT: You have a pretty good head on those 13-year-old shoulders. Thanks for writing.

Canseco to stay

ARLINGTON — Jose Canseco will return to the Taxas Rangers next season because he decided not to exercise an option to demand a trade.

Canseco

Because Canseco was in the middle of a multi-year contract when he was obtained from the Oakland Athletics in August, he could make the request.

He would have become a free agent and forfeited the remainder of his contract, $13.6 million through 1995, had the Rangers not been able to deal him.

"The Rangers' organization has been nothing but accommodating," Canseco's agent, Dennis Gilbert, said Sunday. "Jose likes everything about the situation here. He wants to make them a winner."

Canseco will be paid $4.1 million in 1993. He hit .244 with 26 homers and 87 RBIs last season as he struggled with back and shoulder ailments.

No toss?

NEW YORK — ABC Sports said Monday it's unlikely the network will televise the coin toss to determine who will go first in the major league expansion draft on Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Last week, The Associated Press reported that ABC would televise the toss at halftime of the Buffalo-Miami NFL game the night before. The toss will determine whether the Florida Marlins or Colorado Rockies pick first in the draft.

An ABC Sports spokesman said the network was considering televising the coin toss but would not reach a decision until the day of the footall game.

"At this point, it's unlikely we'll do it," the spokesman said.

Maxwell fined

NEW YORK — Vernon Maxwell of the Houston Rockets was fined $7,000 on Monday for a flagrant foul against Nate McMillan of Seattle last week.

The foul occured during Friday night's season-opener between the Rockets and Sonics in Yokohama, Japan.

Maxwell was ejected after the foul, which occured with 50 seconds left in the game.

Surgery for Spud

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Sacramento Kings guard Spud Webb tore ligaments in his left wrist during a 124-114 victory Sunday over the Los Angeles Lakers and he will be sidelined at least two months, the Kings announced Monday.

Webb, formerly of Midland College, suffered multiple ligament tears in his left wrist and will be "placed in a cast for a minimum of six weeks," said team physician Dr. Richard Marder.

He said Webb will be out 8-12 weeks.

Free-falling Oilers must take to road

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The list of questions about the Houston Oilers grows more alarming each week.

How far have the free-falling Oilers fallen?

It's the distance between a Super Bowl contender in pre-season and a 5-4 also-ran following Sunday's 24-14 loss to Cleveland. They've lost three of their last four games and now they go on the road three weeks, starting Sunday at Minnesota.

"We know what our job is," coach Jack Pardee said Monday. "Everything has been so negative, we've got to get over that."

How futile was their 24-14 loss to Cleveland on Sunday?

The Oilers had two first downs at the first half. The had two first downs in their first nine possessions and didn't get their third until 5:30 remained in the third quarter.

"We could move the ball better than that in our sleep," Pardee said.

When the Oilers finally got into scoring position, Ernest Givins fumbled and Stevon Moore returned it 73 yards for a touchdown that made it 17-0.

It gets worse.

Warren Moon played despite feeling the aftershocks of a concussion suffered Nov. 1 against Pittsburgh. He possibly should have sat out the week. He passed for 70 yards, a four-year low.

The Astrodome's diamond vision screen advertised Pardee's post-game show during a timeout and the crowd booed lustily.

"It was one of those days when you couldn't get anything right," Pardee explained. "We had nine or 10 people making the play and one person not and

No advance warning

Chaps blind-side SW Christian in near-record style

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Yes, there was a basketball game at Midland College Monday night. But it was not basketball as usual.

MC's 111-64 roll over Southwestern Christian College, of Terrell, may have looked more like a one-sided scrimmage, but in reality the 47-point win was the sixth-widest margin of victory in MC history.

Six Chaparral reserves took advantage of ample scoring opportunities, accounting for 50 of MC's total points and 33 of the team's season-high 60 rebounds.

Southwestern Christian, hobbled by the absence of six regulars suspended by coach Herb Evans last summer for disciplinary reasons, shot a mere 33 percent from the floor (28-of-84) and snatched just 38 rebounds on the night, only 15 of which came from the offensive end. In addition, MC recorded 26 steals — 14 in the first half — compared to just eight for the Rams.

"They're very talented as always," Evans said of the Chaps. "I knew we weren't going to be very strong, I just wanted us to come out here and do our best."

The Chaps were led by Demeitreus Drew (26.2 ppg, 9.0 rpg), who popped in 29 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. Terrance Rone had 12 points as six Chaps finished in double figures. Freshman Kirk Ford was MC's leading scorer off the bench, with 11.

SwCC's James Jackson had a team-high 20 points.

SwCC threatened only briefly when MC's reserves entered the game with 15:50 left in the first half. With the Chaps' leading 13-6, the Rams closed the margin to 17-16 before MC head coach Steve Green re-inserted his starters in order to regain some momentum.

"At that particular juncture in the game, (our players) weren't good enough," Green said. "We didn't stop them and we didn't score. We didn't do either one very well so I made another mass substitution."

Ten minutes later, the Chaps had regained control of the game and took a 23 point lead at halftime.

The Rams briefly appeared rejuvenated at the beginning of the second half, but the Chaps made no concessions, increasing their lead to 51 points with three minutes remaining.

"I think we got across the importance of containing their point," Green said. "If we're ever going to be any kind of team we have to step forward and contain their dribbler."

Evans said the six players who replaced the ones suspended were all walk-ons. By the time he had pointed his problem players off campus, Monday's game against MC was already on the schedule.

"I feel terrible," Evans said. "I really thought that when I planned this game that I'd have had those six guys. I was

Mariners sign Lou Piniella

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Lou Piniella, who managed the Cincinnati Reds to a World Series title in 1990, on Monday became manager of the Seattle Mariners, a club that had the worst record in the American League last season.

Piniella

Piniella, 49, signed a three-year contract worth $2.5 million. The Mariners have the option of picking up Piniella's contract for the 1996 season.

Piniella resigned as the Cincinnati manager last month after managing the Reds to 90 victories despite a number of injuries to key players there. Cincinnati finished eight games behind Atlanta in the NL West, and Piniella left after the season when he could not reach a deal with Reds owner Marge Schott.

In Seattle, Piniella will take over a franchise that has had only one winning season in 16 years. He rejoins Mariners general manager Woody Woodward, whom he managed under with the New York Yankees in the 1980s.

"It's a tremendous challenge for me," Piniella said. "I hope this is my last managing job.

"I don't know why this organization has lost 15 out of 16 years. But like Bill Clinton said, we can do better than that and we're going to do better than that."

After the Mariners' 64-98 record last season, the team fired first-year manager Bill Plummer and his six-man

Eric Green suspended

■ Steeler tight end to miss six games for substance abuse.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Tight end Eric Green, the Pittsburgh Steelers' biggest and often most prolific weapon, drew a six-game suspension Monday after becoming the third Steeler in two seasons to violate the NFL's drug policy.

An NFL spokesman said Green's suspension was not for using steroids. The NFL's substance abuse policy has clearly defined suspensions for those caught abusing steroids, street drugs or alcohol.

The league wouldn't confirm it, but this is apparently the second time Green has broken the NFL's drug rules. A player receives treatment and counseling for a first offense, and no announcement is made. The penalty for a second violation is a six-game suspension.

Green was apologetic in a statement issued by the Steelers, saying he

Cowboys exorcise yet another demon

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys are running out of challenges.

So far this year they've knocked off the defending world champion Washington Redskins, defeated Philadelphia to avenge an earlier loss on Monday Night Football, and got revenge for two 1991 beatings in the Silverdome by defeating the Detroit Lions 37-3 on Sunday.

"We exorcised another demon," was the way public relations director Rich Dalrymple put it.

Dallas is an NFL-best 8-1 and off to its best start since 1983. Next up is the Los Angeles Rams 3-6 on Sunday in Texas Stadium. Oddsmakers have made the Cowboys early 14-point favorites.

The Cowboys got to rest quarterback Troy Aikman and running back Emmitt Smith in the fourth period because of the runaway over the Lions.

"When Emmitt and Troy aren't in there in the fourth quarter, then you know something has happened either real good or real bad," said wide receiver Michael Irvin.

Irvin was more reserved than usual after the game because he had missed the team charter flight Saturday and was fined $1,000. He didn't get to play until the second series.

"I'm not saying why I was late," said Irvin, who also had to pay his own plane fare to Detroit. "I'm just thankful we won."

Johnson said he got mad at Irvin "because he's one of my favorites and it's disappointing for one of the team leaders to miss the plane or a meeting."

Johnson used the incident to help rally the team.

"Jimmy loves a good crisis every now and then," said Dalrymple, who was sports information director at the University of Miami during the Johnson era. "It helped get the team refocused."

Smith, who scored three touchdowns to entertain some 80 friends and family in the stands, said, "I think America's Team is definitely back. If we stay focused we can remain there for a while.

"We weren't looking for revenge from Detroit. We just wanted to get the second half of the season started the right way," Smith said.

The Cowboys have three straight road games — at Denver, Washington and Atlanta — following the Thanksgiving Day game in Texas Stadium against the New York Giants.

Dallas closes the season Dec. 27 at home against Chicago.

49ers stomp Falcons, 41-3

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The San Francisco 49ers made sure there wouldn't be an end-of-the-game "Hail Mary" winner for Atlanta this time.

Steve Young passed for three touchdowns and the 49ers defense came up with six turnovers Monday night to crush the Falcons 41-3 for the second time in three weeks.

The 49ers (7-2) climbed back into a tie with New Orleans for first place in the NFC West and the Falcons fell to 3-6.

Young's scoring passes covered 12 yards to Odessa Turner in the first quarter, 21 yards to Ricky Watters in the second and 19 yards to Jerry Rice in the final period.

Merton Hanks fielded a bouncing punt less than two minutes after the Rice touchdown and returned it 48 yards for another score.

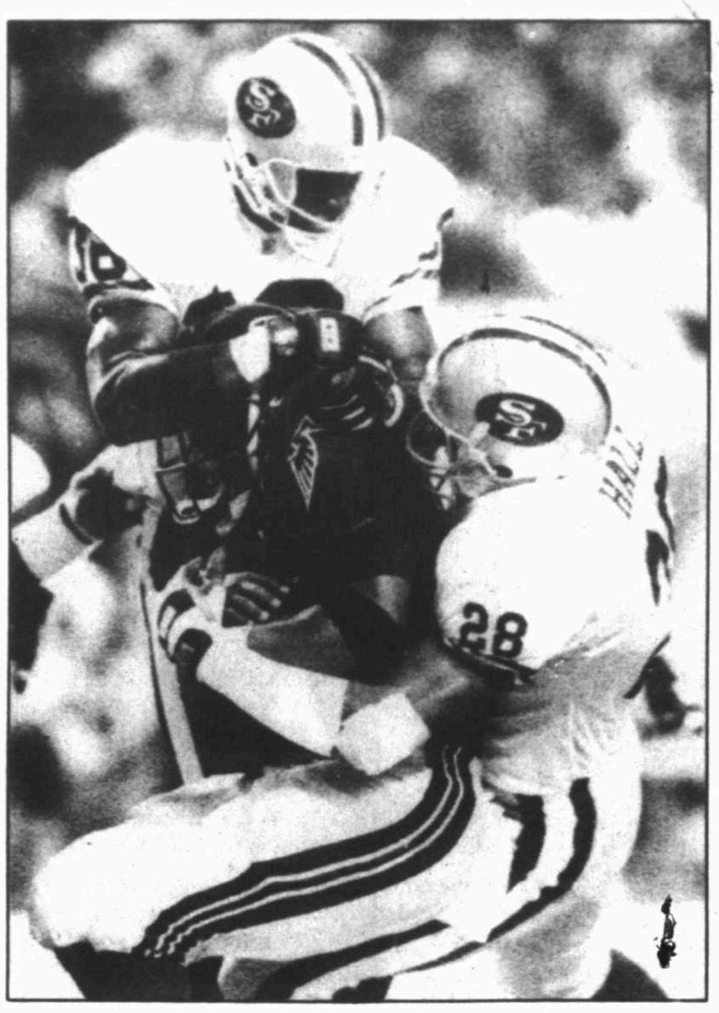
The Niners, who buried Atlanta 56-17 three weeks earlier in San Francisco, have twice been victims of "Hail Mary" passes in Atlanta — losing 17-14 last year and 28-24 in 1983.

Tom Rathman scored the other touchdown on a 2-yard run and Mike Cofer kicked field goals of 40 and 32 yards.

Atlanta got a 33-yard field goal from Norm Johnson with two seconds left in the half, cutting the lead to 14-3. It capped a 75-yard drive in which Billy Joe Tolliver accounted for all the yardage while completing six of eight passes.

The tone was set early when Keith Jones took in a short pass from Tolliver and fumbled it away, Bill Romanowski claiming it for the 49ers on the Atlanta 48.

It took nine plays for Young to convert it into a lead the 49ers never lost. Young completed four passes for 34 yards and Watters ran for 17 yards in the drive that ended with the 12-yard pass to Turner with 4:54 left in the first period.



AP Laserphoto

San Francisco defenders Morton Hanks (36) and Dana Hall (28) swarm over Steve Broussard of the Falcons during NFL action Monday night.

The 49ers failed to convert another first-quarter turnover into points.

Three plays after the Young to Turner touchdown, Don Griffin intercepted a Tolliver pass off Andre Rison's hands at the Atlanta 43. San Francisco failed to move and had to punt.

San Francisco also wasted a 43-yard run by Watters to its 48 after Johnson had punted 37 yards on a fake field goal, out of bounds on the 49ers 2.

Young set up his 21-yard scoring pass to Watters with a 20-yarder to Brent Jones at the Atlanta 31 late in the second quarter.

Jordan leads late rally as Bulls beat Indiana, 102-97

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 10 of his 24 points in the final 2:57 Monday night, enabling the Chicago Bulls to avoid their second consecutive home loss with a 102-97 decision over the Indiana Pacers.

NBA

A basket by Reggie Miller, a free throw from Vern Fleming and Sam Mitchell's three-point play with 6:20 left in the game gave the Pacers a 91-84 advantage.

Indiana led 97-90 with 3:11 left before a dunk by Jordan, an 18-foot jumper by B.J. Armstrong and a bank shot by Jordan with 1:28 remaining closed the Bulls to 97-96.

Then Mitchell grabbed a missed Indiana shot that appeared to graze off the rim with 1:06 left. He called timeout, but officials said the ball did not touch the rim, and gave the Pacers only two seconds to shoot instead of a new 24 seconds.

The Bulls gained possession after Detlef Schrempf's rushed shot, and Jordan hit a 12-footer with 51 seconds left for a 98-97 lead.

Jordan then was fouled by Schrempf with 19 seconds to go while making a reverse layup. He converted the free throw for a 101-97 advantage, and he added another free throw with seven seconds left.

Scottie Pippen finished with 21 points and Horace Grant 16 for the Bulls, who lost 100-99 to Atlanta at Chicago Stadium on Saturday night. Schrempf scored 19 points and Miller 17 for Indiana.

The Pacers trailed by 12 in the second period and 56-46 at halftime before a 17-7 spurt to start the second half tied the game 63-63 with 6:08 left. Indiana led 81-76 after three quarters behind nine points each from Schrempf and Miller in the period.

Pippen had 17 points in the first half, including 13 in the opening quarter when the Bulls had 10 points on free throws to one by Indiana.

Pride at stake in Grand Slam of Golf

Associated Press

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Pride and $1 million are at stake for the four major-tournament winners playing in the Grand Slam of Golf.

"I know we all want to win," U.S. Open champion Tom Kite said Monday.

But winning, he added, is not the primary goal for the foursome that also includes Masters champion Fred Couples, British Open title-holder Nick Faldo and PGA champ Nick Price.

"Most important, I think, is that nobody wants to finish last. You really don't want that," Kite said.

And that is a definite, dreadful possibility, Kite said before the starry foursome went out for a practice session on the Jack Nicklaus course at PGA West.

"I'm not playing too sparkly right now," said Kite, a marked contrast to the other three men who will compete in a two-day, 36-hole event beginning Tuesday.

"Obviously, Nick Price and Freddy are playing great," Kite said, "and Nick Faldo has had a fabulous year in Europe and around the world."

The English ace, who acquired his third British Open title in July, won five European titles this season — including the World Match Play championship last month — and about $1.8 million in prize money.

Both Couples and Price are coming off victories last weekend. Couples and partner Davis Love III made up the United States' winning team in the World Cup competition in Spain.

At the same time, on the other side of the world, Price was winning in New Zealand, giving him two victories in his last three starts.

"With only four of us here, instead of 140, I like my chances," said Price, who won $1,135,773 this season and took the Texas Open in addition to his PGA title.

Couples, who scored his third victory of the season in the Masters, echoed Price. "I like my chances ... but I'd be a lot more comfortable if I was playing three rookies instead of these guys."

Moments later he was presented the PGA Player of the Year award and the Vardon Trophy, for the low stroke average on the tour, by PGA president Gary Schaal.

Couples also led the PGA Tour in earnings with $1,344,188, becoming the first man since Tom Watson in 1979 to sweep all three year-long races.

"I never thought I'd be that good," Couples said.

Kite, who won two titles and $957,445 this year, has not played at the level of his opponents in recent weeks, but could have a small advantage.

His was a relatively short journey from his home in Austin, Texas.

Couples made an overnight flight from Spain, arriving at 2 a.m. Monday.

"I'm fine now, but I know I'll be zonked before the day is over," he said.

Price also had an overnight flight from New Zealand, but played down the long trip.

"It's only a three-hour time difference," he said.

Faldo broke up the trip from his home in England to this desert playground with a stopover in Florida.

"No problems," he said and, tongue in cheek, confidently predicting how he will fare in the four-man competition.

"Another top-10 finish," he said.

The format for the event is precisely that of the old World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio: the winners of the four major championships playing 36 holes over two days.

But there is one major difference. When Arnold Palmer, winner of two major titles that year, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player got together in the first World Series of Golf in 1962, they were playing for a total purse of $77,500, with $50,000 to the winner.

The $1 million purse for the Grand Slam includes $400,000 to the winner, $250,000 for second, $200,000 for third and $150,000 to the last-place finisher.

The event will be televised on a tape-delayed basis in prime time by TBS both Tuesday and Wednesday.

Magic knew he had AIDS before acknowledgement, accuser says

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman who accuses Magic Johnson of infecting her with the AIDS virus says that two months before he publicly acknowledged having the disease, she told him she was infected and only he could have done it.

Newsweek magazine, in its latest issue dated Nov. 16, has obtained a copy of a letter to Johnson from the woman, known only as Jane Doe. She says she wrote the letter on Aug. 29, 1991, eight weeks before Johnson tested positive for the HIV virus and two weeks before he married his longtime sweetheart, Cookie.

The woman has filed a $2 million lawsuit against the former Los Angeles Lakers player.

Newsweek also quotes a friend of the woman as saying Jane Doe personally confronted Johnson with the news on Sept. 12, at which time Johnson said he had read the letter. The woman found Johnson at Jenison Fieldhouse at Michigan State, where he went to school and first met Jane Doe.

Johnson has admitted having sex with the woman once in June 1990, but he denied he ever got the letter.

The Newsweek story, written by Frank Deford, said the letter was three pages, single-spaced.

"I have no idea when the bottom will fall out, so I must prepare now," writes the woman, a health-office worker, divorced with a 4-year-old daughter. "So you see, I can't be a silent voice any longer, not even for you, Baby Boy."

The woman said she tested negative for AIDS three times since 1986 and had not had sex with anyone for eight months before sleeping with Johnson, Newsweek said. The magazine said that Howard Weitzman, Johnson's lawyer, has suggested the woman was promiscuous and could have contracted the virus "from any number of men."

Johnson told the world of his HIV infection on Nov. 7, 1991, when he also retired from the NBA. After playing in the Olympics, he decided to return to basketball, then changed his mind on Nov. 2, when he issued a brief statement announcing his re-retirement.

McLane takes Astros' helm

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Drayton McLane Jr. jumped into major league baseball as the owner of the Houston Astros on Monday, pledging to have a winning team and a winning bottom line.

"We've just had a delightful experience today," McLane said after signing the final papers to take control of the team from John J. McMullen. "We didn't acquire the team to keep the status quo. We want to be successful on the field and to have a sound financial base."

McLane made several references to keeping a sound financial organization but he also said he expects the Astros to help themselves through free agency, something McMullen was unwilling to do in the final years of his ownership.

McLane acknowledged he's not a baseball expert, referring most questions to General Manager Bill Wood.

He was ready, however to comment on the new fraternity of owners he's joined.

"I've been to one meeting and I see how they got in trouble," he said. "You've got 28 owners and they are all used to getting their way."

McLane, whose McLane Company is the world's largest distributor to convenience stores, said he does know about catering to the public.

"I am totally oriented to customer service," McLane said. "Fan service will be our new motto. We want it to be a happy experience coming out to the ballpark."

McLane has divided his organization into two units, the Houston Astros Baseball Club and the Astrodome Corp., which will maintain the Astrodome lease through the year 2023.

Holiday Bowl has until Sunday to decide on Big Ten

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Holiday Bowl and the Big Ten Conference agreed on Monday to give bowl officials until 6 p.m. EST Sunday to decide whether they will invite a Big Ten team to the 1992 game.

The Holiday Bowl has an agreement to match the Big Ten's third-place team against the Western Athletic Conference champion. However, the bowl can opt out of that agreement if no eligible Big Ten team has at least eight victories against Division I-A opponents or is not ranked among the top 20 in the CNN-USA Today coaches poll.

The Holiday Bowl's original deadline for making that decision was Monday.

No Big Ten team currently meets the criteria. Michigan (8-0-1) can clinch the conference championship and a berth in the Rose Bowl with a victory against Illinois on Saturday.

Ohio State (7-2) and Michigan State (4-5) are tied for second place at 4-2, followed by a three-way tie for third among Illinois (5-4), Indiana (5-4) and Iowa (4-6).

"In the long-term best interests of the relationship between our bowl and the Big Ten, both parties agreed that the deadline extension was the appropriate action at this time," said Dick Howard, Holiday Bowl president.

Thurman Thomas relates to new, outspoken crop of heroes

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Most pro athletes voice their public comments through a filter as thick as a Sunday paper. Thurman Thomas' filter is single-sheet thin.

"I just say whatever comes out of my mouth," Thomas, the NFL's MVP last year, said Monday. "People ask me questions. I give them honest answers. I tell them how it is."

That straightforward approach moved Thomas back into the limelight again this week, as did his starring performance in the Buffalo Bills' 28-20 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday.

Thomas was quoted in a magazine article last week as calling himself "the biggest hit in the NFL" and that he was "Barry Bonds, Jose Canseco and Charles Barkley rolled into one."

Thomas insisted Monday he was either misquoted or misinterpreted.

"Sometimes I say a lot of crazy things," he admitted, "but I never said I was the biggest hit in the NFL."

Thomas did say he brought up the names of Bonds, Canseco and Barkley, but only because he feels he's a kindred spirit with those outspoken athletes.

Bonds, Canseco and Barkley have all spoken their minds in the past and their images have suffered. Thomas suffered the same consequences after last year's Super Bowl, when he said he was the Michael Jordan of the Bills.

"After the Super Bowl, you read all this stuff in the offseason, and it seemed like everybody thinks I'm a bad person," he said. "So I just changed my three (heroes) from Magic (Johnson), Michael (Jordan) and Earl (Campbell) to Barkley, Canseco and Bonds — guys I can relate to. Because they get the same thing."

Thomas said he really doesn't care about his public image.

"As long as I'm playing and having fun and my teammates and family know what kind of person I am, it doesn't bother me," he said. "They're going to write and say what they want anyway."

The reviews Sunday were flattering. Thomas had his best day of the season, running a career-high 37 times for 155 yards and a touchdown. He also caught four passes for 30 yards. The 185 yards moved him back into the NFL lead in all-purpose yards, a title he's won the past three seasons.

"The guy is fantastic, not just as a player, but he's some competitor," coach Marv Levy said.

That was apparent Sunday, when Thomas dodged, darted and deked his way for extra yardage. Thomas said the quality Steelers defense and the importance of the game in the AFC made him realize he would have to be at his best.

"It was a big game for us and a big game for them and those are the type of games I like to get real emotional over," he said. "I was just pumped. It was one of those games where I felt I may get three yards a gain, but I'm going to try and get four yards."

Thomas, the NFL's third-leading rusher, wants to become the only player in NFL history to win the all-purpose yardage title four straight years.

He'd also like another shot at the MVP award, but knows winning that honor in consecutive years will be tough.

"I think it's kind of hard to repeat," he said. "Barry Foster is having a good year. Emmett Smith is having a very good year. You've got a lot of different players doing a lot of different things, so that's not really in the back of my mind right now."

Neither is the public's perception of him. Thomas said he will continue to speak his mind. "What's wrong with that?" he asked.

Giants try to adjust to loss of LT

N.Y. Times News Service

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — For 12 seasons, the New York Giants had Lawrence Taylor, and for 12 seasons, opposing offenses used a great deal of energy to worry about him.

"The offenses never allowed a back to block him one on one, ever," the linebackers' coach, Dave Brazil, explained on Monday. But now the Giants will be without that leverage, and will have to adjust.

Brazil's first order of business on Monday was to take part in the process of replacing Taylor, who ruptured his right Achilles' tendon against the Green Bay Packers, for Sunday night's game against the Broncos in Denver. After that, attention will turn to a longer-term solution.

The heirs apparent are both second-year players: Corey Miller and Kanavis McGhee. Miller is a run stopper; McGhee is a pass rusher. They saw action in those respective situations Sunday in the victory over Green Bay. Even used as a tandem, they do not have the intimidating presence of Taylor. And each is slightly injured. Miller has a sore ankle and McGhee has a sore shoulder.

"No one is going to replace L.T.," said Brazil.

Still, Miller recalled on Monday that when Taylor was being carted off the field Sunday afternoon, the veteran star told him, "It's up to you to step in now."

> 'The offenses never allowed a back to block him one on one, ever.'
> — Dave Brazil

Miller was a sixth-round draft choice out of South Carolina in 1991. He is 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 255 pounds and has what the football business calls a "quick twitch." He can slip blocks to get to the runner.

"I'm not really trying to fill his shoes," Miller said. "Nobody can fill his shoes. I was thinking in terms of next season getting a starting job. Now I've got to be ready to step in."

He is aware of how opposing offenses played Taylor, how opposing linemen "slid" over to Taylor's side to make sure someone would take care of him.

"I'm sure," said Miller, "the offense won't do that to me. They always put two guys on him. I've got to make it happen now."

McGhee has been listed as Carl Banks' backup while Miller was second-string behind Taylor. Brazil contends that was just a bookkeeping entry.

"They're both outside linebackers," he explained. "I didn't want to put one behind the other."

McGhee was the club's second pick of the 1991 draft following an honor-filled career at Colorado.

He is 6-4 and weighs 257 pounds. He is noted for his ability to handle opposing tight ends, and is more athletic than Miller.

McGhee has seen more action than Miller this season, because he has replaced Banks when the Giants are in a pass-defense "nickel" mode.

Even as a tandem, and even in what had been a season of diminished production until recent weeks, Miller and McGhee will need their combined strengths to try to replace Taylor. This season, the Giants' defense has produced 13 sacks; Taylor had 5 of them. The defense has forced 10 fumbles; Taylor accounted for 2. It has had eight fumble recoveries; he produced one of them.

"Until three weeks ago, Lawrence wasn't allowed to do some of the things he could do," Banks said on Monday.

If this is, indeed, Taylor's final season, then the last memories will be of his last few games, sacking quarterbacks again, causing fumbles again.

Don't look for the youngsters to do the same things just now.

"We were able to try things with L.T.," said Brazil. "Our three-four defense was designed to keep him in the rush. Now we'll spread it around here."

OILERS: Pardee's post-game show booed

that's how it was all day."

Moon, still slowed by a concussion he suffered a week earlier, suffered again with his worst day since 1989, and leaving the game to thunderous boos late in the third quarter.

It was a day of discontent.

"That's about all I've heard for a long time," Pardee said. "It seems like we've started believing it. We're a pretty good football team. We weren't good enough to win that game.

"I really do think we can move the ball on anyone. We had a chance at four interceptions and didn't get any. The ball was on the ground three times. We started three times from inside our 10-yard line."

The Oilers were even confused about their press clippings. Some thought negative press had caused a lack of confidence. Others said the fans and media expected too much.

"People are always saying that we're a Super Bowl team and I think that's part of the problem," safety Bubba McDowell said. "We have to take it game-by-game. This is a game of four quarters and we have to play each one down by down."

Defensive end Sean Jones thinks the Oilers have started to believe negative stories in the media.

"People keep wishing and praying around here that they'll get a losing team and sooner or later, they'll have one," Jones said.

Pardee says the Oilers have been trying too hard to meet expectations.

"I like to have high expectations and have to live up to them," Pardee said. "Maybe we've been too tight. Guys worry about having to make the big plays.

"At this point we're down to reality. Nobody is putting us in the Super Bowl now."

Moon was still affected by the concussion he suffered when Steelers cornerback Rod Woodson mashed him to the turf. Pardee started Moon and stayed with him until the final play of the third quarter when Cody Carlson came on and played the rest of the game.

"I don't think Warren was himself," Carlson said. "In practice last week, it was apparent that he wasn't all the way back. That had to have something to do with us not being able to move the ball."

GREEN: Steelers lose tight end for 6 weeks

(From 1C)

"made a mistake." Steelers president Dan Rooney said "we will do everything we can for Eric to get well."

"I apologize to my teammates, the Steelers' organization, my family and my friends," Green said. "I am looking forward to returning in six weeks."

The suspension couldn't have come at a worse time for the division-leading Steelers (6-3), who are trying to win their first AFC Central Division title since 1984. The Steelers play five of their last seven games at home, where they are 3-0, but won't have Green back until the final week of the season.

"I am very disappointed," Rooney said. "This is not good for anyone, especially not for Eric Green. I am concerned for him, for all of our players, for their well-being. Their lives are more important than anything.

"We will do everything we can for Eric to get well. He must take the first step to accept help, which is available. Our players are good people. When one has a problem, all of us suffer. As part of this community, we must be determined to eliminate drugs. The Steelers continue to support those efforts."

The Steelers hadn't had a drug-related suspension until guard Terry Long and running back Tim Worley became the only NFL players suspended last season.

Long, who flunked a steroids test, is now out of football. Worley twice failed tests for cocaine, then was suspended for this season after skipping two mandatory drug tests last winter.

Green's absence creates a huge void in offensive coordinator Ron Erhardt's two-tight-end offense. When Green missed three full games and all but one play of a fourth due to a knee injury earlier this season, Erhardt scrapped most of his multiple tight-end sets.

"No question it's going to be a big adjustment," Erhardt said. "We're going to have to do some things on the fly. I guess we'll see how good the coaching staff is now."

Adrian Cooper, the Steelers' other starting tight end, said there is no question the 6-foot-5, 280-pound Green will be difficult to replace.

Green, who has 15 touchdown catches in 29 NFL games, has made 14 receptions for 152 yards and two touchdowns this season. He had four catches for 41 yards in the Steelers' 28-20 loss Sunday at Buffalo.

The news "is killing our football team," Cooper said. "We have a god football team and we'll work through this, but this will be real tough on me. I feel a lot more comfortable with Eric out there. This puts more pressure on everyone."

Coach Bill Cowher said the Steelers can't let the suspension become a distraction.

"We are all very disappointed," Cowher said. "We hope that Eric will overcome this. While we share our concern for him, we also recognize that this is a team game. We must move on, and we will move on."

The suspension means the Steelers will play most of the season without him.

Supreme Water Treatment protects deterioration of plumbing

Protect your investment! While you're asleep at night, the hard minerals may be eating away at your plumbing, water heater and water appliances.

Supreme Water Treatment can put a stop to the deterioration of your hard-earned investments with a water softening system; and from now until December 15, the basic water softening system is available for lease for just $22.50 per month with free normal installation - the free installation is a $35 savings while the water softening system is a savings for months to come!

"Anything over 10.5 grains of hardness is considered very hard, and the water in Midland/Odessa contains 40-50 grains per gallon of hardness," said Brad Hamilton, manager at Supreme Water. Imagine using that water to clean your skin, dishes and clothes every day.

For just $22.50 per month, there will be a noticeable difference in your water system. Take a look at some of the advantages:

- Machine-washed clothes last longer, come out fresher, cleaner and softer. Colors stay brighter too.
- The cost of cleaning supplies drops dramatically with conditioned water because less soap is needed.
- Conditioned water eliminates streaks and spots on glassware and dishes, and dishwashers last longer.
- Water heaters last longer because conditioned water minimizes the scale build up created by hot water minerals.
- Shampooing with conditioned water revives hair color and makes it more radiant and manageable.
- All bathroom fixtures benfit from conditioned water. It eliminates unsightly rings, stains and mineral build up that darkens porcelain.

With all these benefits, a water softening system saves energy too! According to Brad, a recent study conducted by the New Mexico State University indicated a 22% savings of energy costs when a system is converted to a water softening system.

Don't get stuck with hard water this winter. Call Supreme Water Treatment at 689-8868 and mention this article to receive a special rental rate.

The water softening system is the first step to a healthier, cleaner lifestyle. Supreme Water is also your supplier for the state-of-the-art reverse osmosis water system. Enjoy pure drinking water from the convenience of your own tap while ridding your water system of hard minerals by choosing a complete EcoWater system.

As your exclusive EcoWater system dealer, factory-trained technicians are on hand to service all brands of water equipment including Lindsey, Culligan and King water systems.

Let the friendly, professional staff at Supreme Water help you protect your investment and avoid those embarrasing water spots by installing the water softening system. (Look for their ad in todays Midland Reporter Telegram.) Call today or stop by their new location at 3113 W. Industrial.

Van Pearcy (with cap) visits with some retired oil company employees at his booth in the '92 Permian Basin Oil Show. Many people had questions concerning retirement, interest rates and energy stocks during the show.

Van Pearcy plans retirement funds

Does your employer offer a company sponsored retirement plan such as a profit-sharing or 401(k)? Are you using the plan to it's full potential?

The unique advantage of profit-sharing and 401(k) plans is that many employers will match your voluntary contributions or a percentage of your contributions up to a certain amount. That's virtually free money! For example, if your employer matches half your contribution, you earn a 50 percent return on your money up front.

"You can increase that return by wisely selecting the securities into which your contributions are invested," said Van Pearcy, one of the top investment planners in our area.

Pearcy's conservative philosophy, hard work ethic and personal service has earned his office a reputation as one of the best with Edward D. Jones & Co., a well-known national investment firm. A native of West Texas and having received an Economics and Masters degree in business from the University of Notre Dame, Pearcy offers sound investment advice in planning for your future.

"If your retirement plan offers the option of investing in stocks or stock mutual funds, over the long term, that could be the wisest choice. Quality stocks and top performing stock mutual funds offer the potential for growth that can outpace inflation and the opportunity for rising income through increasing dividends, " Pearcy said.

Most employees will invest their retirement and plan contributions in low-yielding, fixed-income investments such as certificates of deposit and money market accounts, according to a recent article in Investor's Business Daily.

"The reason for this is workers' concerns over the safety of their principal. Investments like C.D.s and bonds are often insured as to the timely repayment of your principal, which adds an extra degree of safety," Pearcy stated. "However, in return, employees sacrifice the higher potential returns available with quality growth investments."

Of course, fixed-income securities have a place in most portfolios because they provide a stable, dependable stream of interest income. They are particularly important to retired investors who often need a predicatable level of income to supplement Social Security.

Van Pearcy offers the following tips that provide some additional ideas for making your employer-sponsored retirement plan or I.R.A work hardest for you:

- Start Early - The earlier you begin investing in retirement, the greater the benefits of compounding.
- Systematic Investing - If you wait to begin investing until you have a lump sum, you'll probably wait forever. Most employer-sponsored retirement plans allow you to automatically deduct a certain amount per paycheck. Even $25 per paycheck is a good start.
- Invest for the Long Term - Stock prices will go up and down on a daily, weekly and even a monthly basis. Over time, however, they have provided the highest long-term results of any financial investment. In fact, stock returns have never been negative in any 10-year period since the Depression era.

"Most folks do not realize they will likely need 80 percent of their final salary to maintain their current lifestyle after retirement," Pearcy summarized. "Social Security may provide about 38 percent of that, and it's up to you to provide the rest. By using IRAs and employer sponsored retirement plans, they can be the ticket to securing the retirement lifestyle of your dreams."

If you'd like to visit with Van Pearcy about these and other "money problems," please call 683-1516 or stop by his office at 2020 W. Cuthbert for a free consultation and start planning for your future.

New Phenomena

Troll dolls stock shelves at Graham's

Remember the good old days when children could run up to the local drug store for a soda after school; and when the pharmacists took the care and the time to answer all your questions about prescriptions? Well, at Graham's Pharmacy folks are just as friendly as they were yesteryear, and the soda fountain still remains.

The Pharmacy's legendary personalized service has been the heart of the business through the dual ownership of Wes and Doris Graham and Kevin and Kris Keele.

"That's what keeps us going is our service," said Doris.

And according to Wes, pharmacists at Graham's still go to whatever extent to fulfill orders, including free delivery within the city limits and counseling on prescriptions and over-the-counter medication.

However, the owners realize that a full personalized service pharmacy is not the only attraction that continues to draw customers. Over the years, the shelves have been stocked with quality giftware and cards while the old-fashioned soda fountain has continued to serve the best ice-cream sodas in Midland!

The soda fountain recently added some mouthwatering real cream and butter fudge made on the premises to it's delectable menu.

After you've enjoyed a delightful treat at the soda fountain, take advantage of the unique gift selections and get some of your holiday shopping out of the way.

For starters, Graham's features a full line of Carlton cards; or choose from a wide selection of personalized Christmas cards.

Once the cards have been sent out, it's time to start thinking about gifts for the children. Russ trolls have replaced the cabbage patch dolls in popularity this year, and Graham's has stocked their shelves with this new phenomena - ranging from jewelry cases, straws, glitter pens, troll clothes and babies with bottles. As your "friendly Russ store," Graham's also stocks a wonderful supply of cuddly stuffed animals.

Nitey-Nite Russ Troll* is just one of many Troll dolls featured at Graham's Pharmacy. Besides being a Legend Pharmacy, Graham's offers a wide assortment of gift items.

Children of all ages will delight in the latest trend in leather moccasins recently added to Graham's collection of Southwestern wear. Made in Taos, New Mexico, the selection is complete with leather purses and marble and jack pouches.

As your "friendly Russ store," Graham's also stocks a wonderful supply of cuddly stuffed animals.

When adding to your Southwestern wear, don't forget Graham's resplendent selection of Southwestern jewelry. According to Doris, they recently added a new supply of slave bracelets, bolo ties, mens and womens rings and feather earrings all handcrafted in Albequerque.

Next on your Christmas list might be to choose from an extensive line of collectibles like the Precious Moments dolls, Laura's Attic, Miss Martha's collection or Hummel figurines. For collectors of Hummel figurines, the Christmas nativity set has been completed. Christmas keepsakes will be treasured for years to come, so while you're here, also choose from a variety of collectible Christmas ornaments from Enesco.

While the pharmacists try to fill all your prescription orders, the owners do their best to fulfill all your shopping needs. Kris Keele has added her talents to the already large floral display by designing extraordinary silk floral arrangements. "If anyone ask for a special design, Kris is always willing accomodate," Doris said.

And that goes for the entire staff at Graham's; folks at Graham's will do whatever it takes to make customers happy. Be sure to stop in and register for a gift certificate during the open house at the Old Town Midland Historical Shopping Center on November 20 & 21. As one of the Old Town Merchants, the folks at Graham's will be serving refreshments throughout the day while particpating in the drawing put on by the cooperative effort of all the Old Town Merchants.

Graham's Pharmacy store hours are from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices rose Monday, in part due to a report that Saudi Arabia might be willing to cut production to support prices.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $20.62 per barrel, up 32 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. That was a reversal of the recent trend, in which the contract price for delivery in the next month has fallen more than $2 per barrel since Oct. 15.

The market reacted to a report that the Saudis would be willing to support production cuts if other Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members go along and if the reductions are equitable, said analysts.

Also Monday, Iraq reported new oil finds that it said could give it larger crude reserves than Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil producer. However, several oil experts doubted the claim.

Natural gas for delivery in December settled at $2.354 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.9 cent from Friday.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in December settled at $18.57 per barrel, up 32 cents.

T-bills gain

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to the highest level since summer.

The Treasury Department sold $11.8 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.10 percent, up from 3.05 percent last week. Another $11.8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.31 percent, up from 3.27 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the highest since they sold for 3.17 percent on Aug. 31. The six-month bill rate was the highest since they averaged 3.32 percent on July 6.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly higher in choppy dealings on world currency markets Monday.

In New York the dollar settled at 124.25 Japanese yen, up from 123.40 yen on Friday.

In New York it cost $1.5120 to buy one British pound, less expensive than Friday's $1.5295.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's rates included: 1.5995 German marks, up from 1.5973; 1.4350 Swiss francs, unchanged; 5.4055 French francs, up from 5.4025; 1,367.50 Italian lire, up from 1,267.28, and 1.2569 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2550.

Fuel-oil industry expects cold winter

By Matthew L. Wald
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — People coming home from work in the dark in the last week or so may have started to wonder what divides "crisp autumn weather" from just plain cold. It is not just the imagination; winter has a headstart this year and so has heating-fuel consumption.

So far this heating season, which began July 1, the weather in New York and much of the Northeast has been almost 37 percent colder than usual. That may not mean much now for the fuel-oil industry, because the bulk of the heating season is still ahead, but many forecasters are predicting a colder-than-usual winter.

And while fuel suppliers say they have not forgotten how to cope with a normal winter, one that is colder than normal by the same amount that some recent winters have been warmer than normal could have severe effects on prices and availability of heating fuel.

Consumers and heating-fuel suppliers have become accustomed to mild winters in recent years. The last colder-than-normal winter month was December 1989. But even that winter, taken as a whole, was milder than normal.

Last winter was warmer than usual in New York City and was generally warm in the East. And the previous heating season, the winter of 1990-'91, was extraordinarily mild.

Winters rarely vary from normal by more than 16 percent, but the winter of 1990-'91 was 18 percent warmer than normal. The two before that were warm, too. So if this winter is merely normal, it will seem cold, weather experts say.

"People do get conditioned, and have been accustomed over the past few years to warm winters," said Edward O'Lenic, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service.

It will not have to be extra cold for this winter to feel that way, said Arthur T. Anderson, the official responsible for short-term predictions of heating fuel demand at the Energy Department.

If this winter is "normally cold," that would be "quite a bit cooler than what we've experienced in the last couple of years," he said.

The department's Energy Information Administration predicted earlier this month that demand for distillate fuel oil, a category that includes heating oil, would be at the highest level since the frosty winter of 1979-1980.

Nearly all the homes heated with oil are in New England and the Middle Atlantic states; elsewhere, natural gas or electricity dominate.

Forecasters measure demand for home heating by averaging each day's high temperature with its low temperature, and then comparing that number with 65 degrees. For each degree that this high-low average is below 65 degrees, the forecasters count one "degree day." Of course, a single cold calendar day could represent dozens of degree days.

For example, if the high was 75 degrees and the low 55 degrees, then the average was exactly 65 degrees and there were no "degree days" added to the season total; if the high was 65 and the low was 45, the average was 55 and there were 10 degree days.

The higher the number of degree days in a season, the colder the winter — and the greater the demand for heating.

As of Monday, since July 1, the beginning of the heating year, New York City has seen 529 degree days, compared with a normal number at this point in the season of 387.

That statistic has been reflected in fuel demand. "We've definitely sold more oil," said Alfred Allegretti, president of the Bayside Fuel Oil Corp. of Brooklyn.

Continental deal might jell three-way global alliance

LONDON (AP) — Air Canada's deal to rescue Continental Airlines from bankruptcy court could create a three-way global alliance that also includes Air France.

The Canadian airline hopes to broker an arrangement that would help the three carriers compete with larger rivals in an industry that analysts believe will soon be dominated by a handful of airline superpowers.

Continental Airlines Holdings Inc., Continental's parent, said Monday it chose a $450 million buyout offer by Air Canada and an investor group to help it emerge from bankruptcy court.

The deal would benefit Air Canada by giving it access to Continental passengers in the United States, the world's largest aviation market. But Air Canada and Continental have their sights set on even bigger prizes.

Air Canada president Hollis L. Harris, who got his job after being forced out as Continental chairman in August 1991, said his carrier's role in the Continental rescue package was "an important component of our corporate strategy to develop a global network of airlines."

Continental chief executive Robert R. Ferguson III called the deal "the first of several possible alliances that will enable Continental to establish its global presence."

Many aviation executives and analysts believe that over the next decade or two, the industry will be whittled down to just a few big international carriers.

The apparent survivors include the "Big Three" airlines from the United States — American, United and Delta — as well as several carriers from Europe and Asia.

Air Canada follows the lead of other foreign carriers trying to increase their business by linking up with American carriers.

In another pending deal, British Airways is trying to buy a major stake in USAir for $750 million. That investment would give British Airways access to millions of U.S. passengers and give USAir needed cash as well as new business from incoming foreign travelers.

KLM Royal Dutch Airlines has held a stake since 1989 in U.S. carrier Northwest Airlines, which has a big route system in America and holds onto lucrative trans-Pacific routes.

Amid the scramble to go global, Air Canada previously agreed to an alliance with Air France through which the two carriers cooperate by selling tickets under each other's name and making it easier for passengers to make connecting flights.

AT&T-McCaw alliance might have huge impact in local U.S. markets

By Edmund L. Andrews
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — AT&T's bold announcement Wednesday that it is negotiating to team up with the nation's largest cellular company goes a long way toward slaughtering a sacred cow of telecommunications policy: the separation of local and long-distance service.

If it succeeds in acquiring a third of McCaw Cellular Communications Inc., the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. will suddenly have a significant presence in local telephone markets around the country and could soon begin muscling into the core businesses of its own offspring, the seven regional Baby Bell companies.

While the deal will not resurrect the monolithic Bell System, which was dissolved by an antitrust decree in 1984, it demonstrates how the torrid pace of change in telecommunications is rapidly undermining the assumptions behind that decision.

The antitrust settlement to dissolve the Bell System, an agreement overseen by Federal District Judge Harold H. Greene in Washington, was based on the notion that the long-distance business had become competitive and could be freed from most regulation, while local phone service was still a monopoly and needed to be regulated. Now, however, the local phone companies are facing a host of new assaults for different segments of their markets — and their former parent is leading the charge.

Koch adds natural-gas pipeline system

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Koch Industries has added a 9,600-mile natural gas pipeline system to its holdings.

Koch spokesmen Monday announced the purchase of United Gas Pipe Line Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston-based United Gas Holding Corp.

Both Koch and United are private companies. The financial terms of the deal weren't disclosed.

United owns and operates an interstate natural gas transmission system in the Gulf Coast region. It serves 467 communities and has 120 connections.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

CDs a good bet for investor's only savings

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am a very poor 49-year-old woman. I live from payday to payday and have never been able to save much, but I have managed to put aside $1,000. I would like very much to put the $1,000 to work making more money. But I do not know how.

Please help me. But do not tell me to put my $1,000 in a savings account. I want to do something big with something small.

Doyle

A: There are many places you could put the $1,000 and hope to turn it into big bucks. But I emphasize the word "hope." Every place where a small amount of money might snowball into wealth is loaded with risk — meaning you might lose your $1,000.

Attempts to, as you so aptly put it, do something big with something small are generally referred to as "speculating." And that's a polite word for gambling.

Speculations are fine for people who are financially able and temperamentally suited to take on big risks. But most people can't afford to speculate. You certainly can't.

Don't take any chances of losing the $1,000 you have managed to put aside.

Your reluctance to place the modest amount you now have in a savings account is understandable. Because interest rates now are way down, you might get 3 percent or less in a savings account.

Nevertheless, you should not stray from absolute safety with your nest egg. My advice is to keep it in a bank or savings and loan association, where it will be fully protected by Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage. Take a look at certificates of deposit. Rates vary at different banks and S&Ls. However, by shopping around, you should be able to get about 3.25 percent on a one-year CD, 4 percent on a 30-month CD and 5.8 percent on a five-year CD.

You won't get rich in a hurry. But collecting moderate interest is far better than losing the $1,000 you evidently struggled to accumulate. And, at 5.8 percent compounded annually, your money will double in a bit more than 12 years.

Q: We invested $10,000 in a GNMA mutual fund in 1986. Our shares are now worth $17,000. They tell me my annual return has averaged 8 percent, although I'm not smart enough to confirm this.

The rest of our savings — about $30,000 — is in CDs, paying 3 percent and maturing in April.

Considering the GNMA fund's performance, should we transfer all our money there when the CDs mature? Or would putting all our eggs in one basket be a bad idea?

A: I advise against going all out with the GNMA fund, and not just because of the risk involved with having all your wealth in one investment.

A GNMA fund invests in Government National Mortgage Association pass-through securities, which are conservative investments backed by pools of mortgages.

However, between the time those securities are issued and paid off, their market values can rise or fall — taking the value of GNMA fund shares up and down. Don't take on that risk with all your savings. Keep some in CDs.

Q: I have a large CD on which interest is due on the 12th of each month and mailed to me by check. When the 12th falls on a weekend or holiday, the interest check is delayed two or three days. Most likely, the checks are cut on Friday.

I do not have a checking account at that bank to which the CD interest could be deposited automatically. The bank refuses to consider my requests for adjustments. The interest is $22 per day. What can I do?

A: You could go to that bank on the 12th of each month and get the check for your interest. But you would have to make advance arrangements to do that, and it would be a bother.

An easier way would be to open a money market deposit account with check-writing privileges at the bank. Then, you would know exactly when the CD interest would reach the money market deposit account and when you could write checks.

The bank is going by the book in its check-mailing schedule. It's more than unlikely you'll be able to change that or get any "adjustments" for lost interest.
