Reveals Plans

Governor Dolph Briscoe today revealed plans for an indepth job creation campaign to offset the recession and curb a climbing unemployment rate across Texas.

The Governor announced plans for his new "TEXAS FIRST" program, and set forth a goal to create 4,000 new jobs during the next 12 months. "I'm sure you all remember when I took office I made a pledge to make Texas first in agriculture," Governor Briscoe said. "We are gaining ground on that goal.

"Now, I am asking my fellow Texans to join me in the second phase of my pledge. I want to make TEXAS FIRST in businessness and industrial development, and more importantly during these troubled times, in job creation."

He said the goal of the program is to identify and generate more than 4,000 new, permanent and unsubsidized jobs in Texas.

"We estimate the program will cause the expansion of approximately 160 companies in the next 12 months," he said. "That would mean a total economic impact of $277 million annually."

He said the program will ask businesses to pledge to hire more workers. "Once a company makes this pledge, the State will train Texans to meet the skills required for the new jobs."

The Governor named Reagan Brown of his staff to chair the Governor's Job Creation Task Force, which will oversee the effort. He also named the Texas Industrial Commission as the primary agency contact, and appointed TIC Executive Director Jim Harwell to the Task Force.

He said the training of workers would be carried out through the already successful Texas Start up Training Program, working through the Industrial Commission, the Texas Education Agency and local training institutions. He noted the program is already generating four dollars for everyone invested.

Letter

Dear Jere:

Your editorial (May 7, 1975) really hit the nail on the head!

It looks to me like H.E.W. is doing all it can to eliminate small town and rural doctors, hospitals and nursing homes, by arbitrary, unreasonable and discriminatory regulations, requirements and reduced Medicare-Medicaid payments for medical services rendered to patients in doctors offices, hospitals and nursing homes in such locations.

The whole Medicare mess seems to me to be a colossal rip-off of the United States citizenry. When you count the cost of "premiums", the deductible amount the patient must first pay before any reimbursement the amount "allowable", less the 20% program will not pay, and all they refuse to pay for at all, added all together very few of those covered would need to spend that amount for medical care annually.

Quite obviously, if medical care is made impossibly inconvenient for rural and small town patients by eliminating their doctors, hospitals, and nursing homes, H.E.W. could effect a tremendous "saving"--at the cost of the people the program is supposed to help.

Why not send a copy of your editorial to your Congressmen and Senators?

/s/ Harry A. Tubbs, M.D.-F.A.A.F.P.

No New Taxes

A resolution, asking that no new state taxes be originated in the 64th Session of the Texas Legislature, has been adopted by the Board of Directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. Copies have been sent to all members of the Texas Legislature representing portions of West Texas.

"The job and profit opportunities have in a large measure been severely curtailed by unwise and imprudent federal agency and congressional actions," says E. Bruce Street of Graham, Chairman of WTCC's State Affairs Committee.

"The Legislative and Executive Branches of the government of the State of Texas can exert leadership and influence to reverse this onerous federal government direction of more and more spending and more and more taxes by setting an example in accomplishing their duties without demanding new state taxes," points out Mr. Street.

In the resolution, WTCC commends and concurs with Governor Dolph Briscoe for his stated position that he will veto any legislation that will demand new taxes upon the citizens and business of the State of Texas.

Jere's Gottings

I have found another one! Some of my family and most of my friends chide me for looking for Socialists and even Communists behind every bush and under my bed. Well, sir, I think I really found one beside a pump jack this time.

U.S. Representative Bob Eckhardt had the timidity to stand up in the middle of the oil patch and tell listeners that oil price regulations and controls must become effective. And he's from Houston--a town supported in large part by the energy industry. If anyone should know better, it is he.

Not only did Eckhardt take on the oil industry, he lumped all of industry in his vendetta. He really showed his colors by stating that the U.S. could not have national policy dictated by free enterprise--that government must act to protect the nation's interest. Believing that the market system is less than "pure", government controls and regulations become necessary.

Eckhardt didn't stand alone though. He had a friend at the forum--one college professor--wouldn't you know. Young prof, blatantly said, "The capitalist system of this country has never worked. It has produced only atrocious policies under the guise of the free enterprise system". When asked what market system he thought would be more workable than the capitalistic one, Professor McIntyre avoided an answer by saying, "I will not give you a name to call me". Umhmm--wouldn't you agree that I have found two spooks this week?

These two must be bucking for chairman/co-chairman of the proposed White House Office of National Economic Planning. This ominous sounding committee isn't functioning yet (openly, at least) but it is seriously being proposed and promoted by a whole spook house full. Leonard Woodcock, John K. Galbraith, Wassily Leontief are three of the more infamous.

National Economic Planning is to be a White House level advisory committee. The function is to make long range economic plans for the entire business community of the U.S. It will decide "the number of cars, the number of generators and the quantity of frozen foods we need in, say, 5 years". Then the committee would "induce" industries to produce accordingly.

All laid out on paper, the plan looks very much like the many Kremlin 5 year plans we've watched flounder and fail. It looks pretty obvious that blueprints for this plan have originated in Russia and / or Great Britain. Russia is Communist--Great Britain is Socialist, therefore, I am not ashamed to assume that I'm not wrongly identifying boogey men.

WASHINGTON

"As it looks from here"

OMAR BURLESON
Congressman
17th District

Wash. D.C.—Hopefully, it will be a little relief for the reader of these lines (and it is for the writer) to dwell for a moment on something other than all the problems which beset the Country and about which we constantly think.

This is about Smokey the Bear. For 25 years, he has been a fixture at the National Zoo here in Washington. A few days ago, he turned in his hat and shovel to be taken over by Smokey Jr. Smokey has done a great service for the Nation with his warnings about fire prevention and, of course, his advice comes from first-hand knowledge. As everyone will remember, as a cub he was rescued from a devastating fire by a forest ranger in the mountains of Northern New Mexico. His feet were badly burned but his recovery was complete except for the scars. He is now heading back to New Mexico for retirement and was given a festive farewell on his departure.

By his fame and publicity, Smokey was a favorite attraction at the National Zoo. The Chinese pandas may be more popular at the time but Smokey still has a loyal following. Over the years he has received thousands of letters and all sorts of presents. He has accumulated sufficient wealth to comfortably support himself and his wife Goldie who doubles as his personal secretary.

If he could talk, and he almost can it seems, in a reminiscent mood he might be saying, "I am really looking forward to getting back to more peace and quiet. With four million two legged gawkers tripping by my cage year after year, I get a little tired at times. I have to carry out my assignment and be pleasant to everyone. At least I can't growl and throw things back at visitors who sometimes toss me unusable objects."

"I know very well that I had an assignment and was being fed to do a job. I found that being famous was not always a bear's garden of roses."

"By now, at zoo closing time, I feel a little weary by giving the old 'up on the back feet' bit. When I was younger, I even enjoyed flash bulbs exploding in my eyes and those choruses of penetrating childish shrieks but now I am a little weary of it all. My arthritis and some backache have been making the days pretty long. I like to think of the fame and recognition which have come my way over the years but right now I am beginning to think that it is not worth one trout out of the mountain brook."

These might be the musings of Smokey the Bear who, if he really knew, and he may, realize a great satisfaction out of a career made famous by a one liner, "Only you can prevent forest fires."

In our Big Country, we don't have many places to accommodate what might be called forest fires, but we are susceptible to grass fires which, in dry weather, can cause real damage.

New Location

Lubbock--Comptroller Bob Bullock said today that the Lubbock field office would open its doors on June 2nd in a new location, Suite 400 of the Terrace Shopping Center at 4902 34th St.

Bullock said the move was necessary to make room for additional Comptroller Department employees to serve the 20 - county South Plains region which has more than 7,100 taxpayer accounts.

The new office telephone number is area code 806-795-0691

"The people in our field offices are our direct contact with the taxpayers in this state and this move will help the taxpayers in Lubbock and this area to be able to get their questions and problems in state taxes taken care of much more easily," Bullock said.

Bullock said the new location would be more convenient to reach for much of the growing business community of the area plus providing much better parking facilities.

Counties served by the Lubbock field office are Bailey, Cochran, Yoakum, Gaines, Dawson Terry, Hockley, Lamb, Hale, Lubbock, Lynn, Borden, Garza, Crosby, Floyd, Motley, Dickens, Kent, Cottle and King.

Manager of the Compliance Section of the Lubbock field office is Jimmie Taylor. Manager of the audit section is Dick Ambrus.

College Station--Each year 4-H Boys and girls face the challenge of preparing for judging contests, method demonstrations and other areas of competition. Their ultimate aim is to qualify to attend State 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University and to be the best in Texas.

Some 1,800 4-H'ers are now preparing for that trek to Texas A&M where they will compete June 3-4 in more than 30 events ranging from public speaking to livestock judging to demonstrations on safety and emergency preparedness. The State 4-H Food Show is also apart of the overall Roundup activities and will be held June 3, with judging beginning at 9 a.m. The remainder of the competition will be the following day, with some events starting as early as 6:30 a.m. Roundup headquarters is the Rudder Center.

According to Dr. Don Stormer, state 4-H and youth leader for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, State 4-H Roundup is one of the oldest annual statewide 4-H events in the nation. In addition to the throngs of youth, it also brings together some 600 adults, including county Extension agents, 4-H leaders, friends of 4-H, mass media representatives, contest donors and members of the board of directors of the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation, the service organization of 4-H in the state.

Roundup activities will officially get under way with an opening assembly at 5:30 on June 3 in the Rudder Center Auditorium, announces Stormer. A special feature of the assembly will be the introduction of Mrs. Jeanetta Probasco of Longview, a national winner in the 4-H Alumni Recognition Program. Awards will be presented to 10 individuals, businesses and organizations that have made outstanding contributions to 4-H. Winners of ten $4,000 Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Scholarships will also be announced, and several other scholarship winners will be presented.

Twenty-six outstanding 4-H adult leaders (two from each of the 13 Extension Service districts) will be recognized at a luncheon on June 4.

Winners of the various contests and demonstrations along with the donors for the particular events will be honored at a special recognition program at 8 o'clock that evening in the Rudder Center Auditorium.

"4-H Roundup annually highlights the 4-H year in Texas," points out Stormer. "It provides an opportunity for youth to grow and develop and to share learning experiences. After all that's what 4-H is all about."

Resolution Approved

The Board of Directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has approved a resolution requesting the Federal Power Commission to restore the use of natural gas for farm irrigation to the higher commercial priority. It now has a lower industrial priority unless alternate fuels are not available to certain suppliers.

Under the present ruling alternate fuels, if available, would require tremendous additional capital outlay to farmers in the form of motor exchange, etc. and, in most cases, it would be impossible to keep alternate fuel sufficiently supplied at the irrigation well and would increase tremendously the cost to the consumer of food and fiber if the farm products were available at all.

This ruling now applies only to certain customers, but it is anticipated that such a ruling could be placed on other supplies at any time. This would eliminate this fuel to additional farm customers across West Texas during the stress period of the irrigation season and could take place after most of the cost to produce a crop already has been expended.

"Irrigation water is a necessity if West Texas continues to produce quality food and fiber for this nation and other nations of the world," says Dick Yeager of Vernon, Chairman of WTCC's Agriculture and Ranching Committee.

"Financial institutions will be reluctant to advance credit to irrigation farmers if the reduction in priority causes further curtailment of natural gas as a fuel and increases production costs."

"Natural gas as fuel to pump irrigation water is the heart for many West Texas communities as we know them today," says Yeager. "Any costs added to agriculture production as a result of this priority change cannot be passed on to the consumer as they are in other industries simply by increasing prices."

High Ceilings

College Stat.--High ceilings make an extra room possible for the family who cannot afford more costly remodeling, a housing and home furnishings specialist suggests.

"Addition of overhead galleries, lofts and balconies are some of the ways a family can use exceptionally high ceilings in both old and new houses for more space," Mrs. Jane Berry with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service explained.

"Adding a gallery, loft or balcony--instead of another full story--uses only a small portion of overhead space.

"That way, the family can retain the home's spacious feeling and achieve a really unique architectural feature, while, perhaps, easing the space 'crunch.'"

"Few new homes today are built with galleries or lofts, because architects tend to think it more thrifty and sensible to build a full second story," the specialist observed.

"However, when homes with two-story rooms are remodeled, sometimes a gallery or loft can solve an architectural problem or create new space.

"When the rooms of town houses are made into apartments, for example, very tall rooms often are given a sleeping gallery or a dining-kitchen gallery.

"And roomy Victorian houses with high ceilings can be remodeled easily to include such features."

The specialist also pointed to a feeling of "spaciousness, flow and elegant detachment" achieved with a gallery or loft, because it provides space set off from the rest of a room.

Concerning functions of a gallery, loft or balcony, Mrs. Berry said each structure is suitable for use as a study, playroom, dining or sleeping room, library or storage area.

"This new space also adds to the overall square footage of a house, while it gives the family more room," the specialist said.

Crop Reports

Needed

During the last half of May, a random sample of some 24,000

Texas farmers will receive a crop acreage questionnaire from Charles E. Caudill, Agricultural Statistician in Charge of the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, Austin, Texas.

This information will be the basis for determining the planted acreage for the state of Texas and for each county. Texas covers such a wide area that state totals alone do not provide adequate information on Texas' most basic industry--agriculture. The Texas Legislature has provided a program of estimates for each county. This is a cooperative effort of USDA's Statistical Reporting Service and the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Accurate estimates are of great importance to farmers in planning production and marketing and in providing an unbiased picture of Texas agriculture. Farmers who receive questionnaires are urged to complete and return them by mail. All individual reports are confidential and are used only for state and county totals.

Scientists Tell Me

Are you sometimes confused by the claims made for foods called "health foods" or "natural foods" or "organic foods"? If so, you're not alone; lots of people confuse the meaning of these names.

A study of consumer understanding of these foods was made last year by the Consumer Research Center of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) in cooperation with the Market Research and Development Center. Dr. Alice Stubbs who heads the Consumer Research and Development Center, says that these terms have often been used interchangeably. All have been used to designate diet supplements (such as vitamins, wheat germ or granola), foods grown without the use of chemical fertilizers or pesticides, and foods which are in their original state or have minimal refinement and minimal processing with preservatives or additives.

Stubbs says this has compounded the confusion. Consumers receive an abundance of information through mass media about food products that are "good for good health and better nutrition."

Many readers or listeners have relatively little background knowledge on which to make selections of foods or judge the accuracy of the available information. This study was designed to determine the consumer's understanding of the advertised products.

The true extent of the use of these foods is very difficult to assess, Stubbs says, due to the many different retail outlets from which they may be purchased. However, the total market in 1971 was estimated to have been three hundred million dollars, and projection for 1975 is over a billion dollars. So usage is big and growing.

The survey was made by TAES researchers in Dallas and Houston. Answers in both cities were similar. Those surveyed were divided into two groups: 1. the general public or those people who sometimes bought these special foods either in a health food store or regular good store, and 2. those who regularly used these foods and most often bought them from stores designated as health food stores.

It was found that the confirmed users of the foods were most likely to be between the ages of 25 and 65, to have an educational level higher than high school and to have a total family income of more than $10,000 per year. However, persons spending the highest percentage of their food dollar for these foods were lower income homemakers. Stubbs concludes that the middle-class homemaker-buyer is trying to find those foods that will provide the greatest protection, in terms of health and good nutrition, for her family.

The most important finding in the study according to Stubbs was that more than one-half of the regular users of these foods did so because they believed the foods would help them and their family to stay healthy. Also, almost three-fifths of the users felt that pesticides used in the production of food affects the natural nutritional value of products.

These two findings are of major importance to the consumer since they reflect an acceptance of general statements about the native nutrient content of food without a true understanding of this subject. All research on nutrient content of foods as produced in the field has shown that the food material provided the plant in the form of fertilizer, either from an organic source or a chemical form before it can be used by the plant.

Thus, the source or form of fertilizer provided to the plant makes no difference in the final nutrient content of the plant products produced. This point is of major importance to consumers, according to Stubbs. Paying premium prices in special outlet stores or special sections of regular supermarkets for foods that may be bought for less in the regular market, is poor money management.

A third finding of this research is that principal items purchased are mineral and vitamin supplements. The mass media advertising has given many the impression that a little of these nutrients is good and a lot is better. The purchaser is unaware that these nutrients is good and a lot is better. The purchaser is unaware that these nutrients can also be toxic or that an imbalance of one is the body can destroy another that is essential to good health. Thus, Stubbs says, the axiom that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing can be applied to the use of specialized or organic health foods.

From this research Stubbs has concluded that nutritionists need to develop educational methods that are as effective in selling the use of commercially available foods from each of the basic four food groups as those methods the promoters of organic health foods use. In short, a balanced diet from commercially available foods needs to be made as attractive as the foods being sold under titles such as "organic, health or food supplements."

Look For "Copy"

Consumers with the Bicentennial spirit who collect coins, political memorabilia and other symbols from the past need to remember to look for the word "copy" on the item and in the advertising. Items not original must be marked "copy," and consumers who may feel they have bought an item that was not what they expected may report their problem to HOBBY, Division of Special Statutes, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C., 20580, Lynn Bourland, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, reports.

Crude Oil Production

Dallas--Another 12 months of crude oil production at 100-percent of the maximum effective recovery rate in nearly all Texas fields has resulted in the second consecutive yearly dropoff in crude oil production in the nation's No. 1 energy state.

An output of less than 1.3-billion barrels of crude in 1974 was almost 32.5 million barrels below the 1973 figure and over 38.7-million barrels short of Texas' all-time record production year of 1972.

Texas' production last year continued to set the pace among the nation's oil producing states, representing approximately 39.4-percent of total U.S. production, according to statistics compiled by Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association.

In 85 years, Texas' oil fields have produced over 39.1 billion barrels of crude oil, approximately 36.2 percent of total recorded U.S. production.

"The continuing and accelerating decline in production from Texas fields again points up a national crisis--an almost inevitable increase in U.S. dependence on insecure, higher-priced foreign crude oil for this country's basic energy needs," said the Association's president Sherman Hunt, an independent Dallas oilman.

"With about 63-percent of U.S. production under strict federal price control, producers are caught in the squeeze between an arbitrary price ceiling far below the price of foreign oil and the skyrocketing cost of finding and developing domestic reserves. It remains the Congress' responsibility to adopt economic reserves. It remains the Congress' responsibility to adopt economic policies which will encourage rather than hinder the search for new supplies of energy. Only in this way can this downward trend in domestic crude oil production in Texas and elsewhere be reversed," Hunt said.

THE REAGAN COLUMN

When the Socialists came out ahead in Portugal elections, many in the West breathed a sigh of relief that the "moderates" had won. Everything seemed rosy, but it's turned out rosy Red.

The Communist Party ran a poor third--about 12 per cent of the vote--behind the Socialists and the Popular Democratic Party (PDP), but all are essentially different denominations of the same religion--socialism. The young officers of the ruling Armed Forces Movement (AFM) had already outlawed the potentially most effective centrists and conservatives (and a few Maoists).

The AFM allowed the election to take place only after extracting promises from the remaining parties to abide by its forthcoming constitution, and to enforce AFM rules for at least five years. In other words, the AFM made sure the election would be meaningless. It was, instead, a sort of pacifier for the people; a nationwide public opinion poll. No doubt some supporters of the banned center-right parties voted for the Socialists or the PDP over the Communists on the grounds they were "least worst."

The Soviet Union has been pouring an estimated $10 million a month into Portugal to support its small but well organized Communist Party. With this horn of plenty the Communists hired brigades of street fighters to intimidate non-Communist voters and break up their rallies and meetings.

The Soviet investment is paying off: the Communist Party has gained control of the press and the labor union movement--classic Red strategy.

As if to further nullify the election (the results of which they must surely have been able to predict) the Soviets have had their local party sonorously warn the Socialists to heed the word of the AFM. The AFM, in turn, they hope to dominate from within, using their supporters among its 200 or so members as stalking horses.

Recently in London, one well-placed observer of the Portuguese scene told me that the NATO nations should encourage the more moderate members of the AFM to assert themselves. Give them a chance to let democracy flower, he seemed to be saying, it's been a long time coming. But, it's probably too late.

Already, the banks and insurance companies have been nationalized and more businesses are likely to follow. The United States has been told its base in the Azores may not be used to resupply the Israelis in the event of Mideast conflict. The Soviets have gained permission for their "fishing trawler" fleet to use a Madeira seaport. Can Soviet naval base rights be far behind?

Perhaps all this is part of a national intoxication following last year's coup against the decade-old dictatorship, but the Portuguese seem to be heading, perhaps unwittingly, toward another one--a Red one.

Looking ahead, two likely scenarios add up to a bad news--bad news version of the good news--bad news story. In one the USSR does a Czechoslovakia type takeover, through subversion, to make Portugal a satellite.

That would be bad, but the second scenario is even worse, and current evidence suggests it's the more probable one. In it, Portugal remains ostensibly independent, with a left-wing military dictatorship, but with the USSR acting as stage manager. Communists already hold several key government posts. On stage, Portugal, appearing independent, would remain in NATO--our first line of defense--but in reality an ally not of the West but of the USSR.

This would have a profound effect among NATO allies. Italy is shaking already, with a large, powerful Communist Party. Spain would face the prospect of internal strife with guerrillas infiltrating from Portugal.

Meanwhile, the United States does nothing to encourage the majority of Portuguese who don't want to be Communists. Indeed, the climate in the United States seems to be dominated by "liberals" who find American support of right-wing dictators intolerable but have yet to utter a peep about the left-wing military dictators in Portugal.

Save Money

Col. Stat.--Homeseewing of clothing is definitely a savings--it saves an average of two-thirds the cost of comparable ready-to-wear items, according to Mrs. Becky Culp, area clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

She suggested some money saving ideas to help homesewers reap additional benefits.

--Take time to study fashion trends for fabrics, designs and trims.

"If in doubt concerning whether a certain design or fabric will be becoming, try on similar ready-to-wear items before investing."

--Use as much accumulated fabric and notions as possible before buying more.

"Hoarding or stockpiling costs extra since fashion and fabric trends change often, rapidly dating past year's purchases. Add currently fashionable trims and companion fabrics in current design lines to up date what is on hand," the specialist advised.

--Buy multi-design patterns. Patterns that contain several garment pieces and variations are often the same price as those with only one.

--Modify well-fitting and fashionable patterns already on hand by varying with unique fabric or trim selections. Pattern pieces may be switched in the same size, brand and basic shape.

"For example, switch sleeve pattern pieces that are stitched into the same basic armseye seam. If in doubt, compare pattern pieces for similarities by lining up one on the other."

--Make maximum use of the sewing machine by regularly following manufacturer's instructions for cleaning and oiling. Machine life will be prolonged and repair bills reduced.

--Know your sewing abilities. Abandoned projects due to selecting too difficult to sew patterns or fabrics cost money.

--Plan ahead. Be flexible. Think before acting.
