Bosnia update

- Fighting continued unabated in the north-central Muslim town of Maglaj. Bosnian radio said seven civilians had been killed by Serb artillery fire and 16 wounded.
- U.N. officials acknowledge problems monitoring a NATO-mandated pullout of Serb heavy weapons around Sarajevo. Reports of machine-gun fire have been cited, northwest of the city and a significant increase in sniper fire from Bosnian Serb positions elsewhere.
- Muslim and Croat rivals in Mostar took advantage of a 4-day-old truce to exchange prisoners.

Around the world:

- Under pressure from Russia, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic agreed today to open the airfield at Tuzla and said the first relief plane to the city would be Russian.

Israel coaxes; PLO scoffs

Rabin frees 500 prisoners, offers concessions

■ Violence touched off by massacre abates, but some fear Arab 'revenge attacks.'

Associated Press

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank — Israel released more than 500 Palestinian prisoners Tuesday to coax the PLO back to peace talks suspended after the Hebron mosque massacre, and said another 500 will be freed by the weekend.

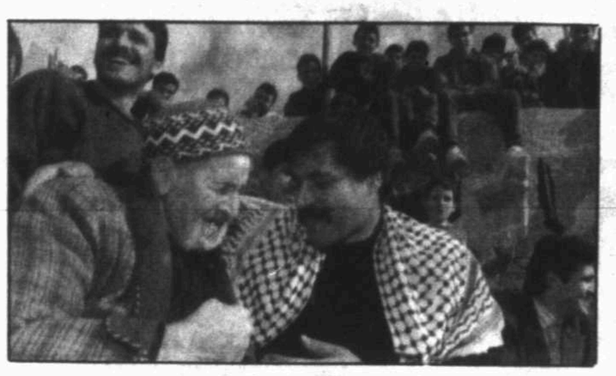

Palestinians scoffed at the gesture.

"I think the Israelis are releasing us now to make the Palestinians happy," freed prisoner Wael Salameh, 38, said when he arrived in Hebron, where dozens of Muslim worshipers were slain by a Jewish settler Friday. "This is not a real step for peace."

That was the PLO line, too. Samir Ghosheh, a member of the PLO's ruling Executive Committee, dismissed the release as "irrelevant to the real issue of providing protection for our people."

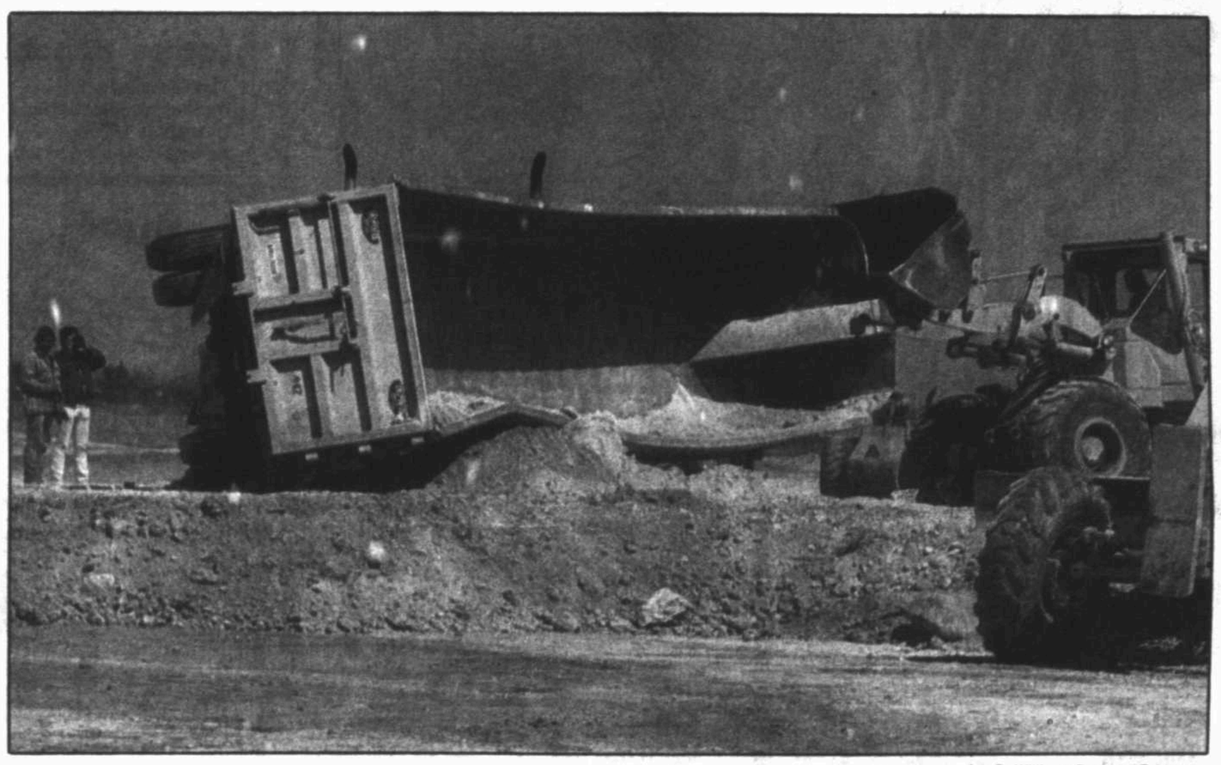

He called it "cosmetic surgery" to

FBI agent: Spy suspect admits taking millions

■ U.S. reveals wealth of details about espionage case against couple.

By Dan Freedman
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — After first telling federal investigators she and her husband got rich from helping a friend with investments, Rosario Ames confessed that she and her husband, CIA official Aldrich Ames, received millions by spying for Moscow, an FBI agent said Tuesday.

U.S. magistrate orders Aldrich Ames and his wife, Rosario, held without bail.

In a bail hearing for the alleged spies, FBI agent Leslie Wiser testified that Mrs. Ames at first told FBI interviewers that the money, estimated at $2.5 million, came from helping a "friend in Chicago" in making investments.

Then, Wiser said, she changed her story and acknowledged that the money came from passing information about CIA penetration of Soviet and later Russian intelligence to Moscow, Wiser said. The agent added that even though Ames began spying for the former Soviet Union in 1985 — the year he married Maria Del Rosario Casas — the CIA veteran did not tell his wife of his activities until 1991.

German premiere of 'Schindler' stirs tears, praise

By Craig R. Whitney
N.Y. Times News Service

FRANKFURT, Germany — Tuesday night, 800 people — Germans and Jews, diplomats and artists, filmmakers and people who had known Oskar Schindler when he lived here — came solemnly together in the municipal theater under the patronage of President Richard von Weizsacker to see the German premiere of an American film many Germans thought one of their own should have made long ago: "Schindler's List" by Steven Spielberg.

The reactions at the end were tears, stunned silence and a smattering of applause that was cut short as if somehow out of place. "It needed you to do it," von Weizsacker told Spielberg when the lights came up.

Dieter Trautwein, a Protestant minister who befriended Schindler in the 1960s, said, "On the whole, it succeeded in getting across a sense of what those events were really like, and posing the most important question: Where was everybody else?"

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who was in Frankfurt on Monday night to honor the Rothschild family, did not attend Tuesday night's showing. "I would have loved to have bent Kohl's ear," the director said. "There's no hard feelings."

Mexican citizens jailed on weapons charges appear before magistrate

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

U.S. Customs Service officials declined to comment Tuesday on whether they believe five Mexican nationals arrested Sunday on weapons charges had been smuggling guns to Mexico previously to that listed in the current charges.

The resident agent in charge of the San Angelo office said the investigation, which resulted in the arrests, was ongoing.

U.S. Customs agents arrested five suspects and seized 53 handguns, two vehicles and almost $1,800 in U.S. currency, according to the agent.

The five suspects arrested were Alberto Reyes-Rodriguez, 48, of Odessa; his wife, Maria Los Angeles Varela-Castaneda, 39, of Odessa; Rodriguez's son, Jose Alberto Reyes Varela, 33, of Odessa; Angeles' brother and his wife,

Legal experts reject Reno's assessment of Davidian trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal experts are rejecting Attorney General Janet Reno's argument that the voluntary manslaughter convictions of five Branch Davidians prove the government acted properly against the Texas cult.

They point to the fact that none of the 11 cult members on trial were convicted of murder or murder conspiracy in the deaths of four Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents on Feb. 28, 1993.

"The one thing that's very clear is that it was not a victory for the government, and no matter how Reno may try to spin it at least one jury rejected (the government's) version of the events," said Harvard law professor Alan Dershowitz.

A San Antonio jury on Saturday convicted five of the 11 defendants on lesser charges of voluntary manslaughter and two oth-

For "I Will Always Love You," Houston takes best pop female vocalist, record of year awards.

Torch song carries Whitney to 2 Grammys; 'Aladdin's' big

NEW YORK (AP) — Awards voters will always love Whitney Houston — at least this year. And the magic carpet for the music to "Aladdin" was riding high again at Tuesday night's 36th annual Grammys.

For her single "I Will Always Love You," Miss Houston took the awards for best pop female vocalist and record of the year, which she shared with producer David Foster. The album of the year Grammy went to the soundtrack to the movie, "The Bodyguard."

Just three weeks ago, she collected eight trophies at the American Music Awards for the single and the soundtrack.

"I think everyone can dig and understand 'I Will Always Love You'," she said backstage.

Dolly Parton, who wrote the torch song two decades ago, presented the Grammy to Miss

South African foes leave door open for accord

DURBAN, South Africa (NYT) — In a concession that at least postponed the threat of a violent election boycott, Chief Mangosuthu G. Buthelezi of the Inkatha Freedom Party agreed Tuesday that his mainly Zulu party would "provisionally" register for the country's first free elections.

In exchange, Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress endorsed an Inkatha proposal to submit the parties' deep differences about a new Constitution to international mediation.

The bargain the two men forged in more than seven hours together was no assurance that Inkatha would foresake its sworn course of resistance.

Buthelezi said the meeting brought the two men no closer to agreement on his conditions for taking part in the elections, and an ANC participant in the talks said chances of a successful international mediation in the eight weeks left before the elections were extremely remote.

Buthelezi said Inkatha would register to keep its options open, but asked if Inkatha was any closer to taking part in the elections, Buthelezi said, "Not at all."

But by committing themselves to more talks and still more talks, the two men stepped back from the brink of a battle that many feared would bring new carnage to Natal, the battle-scarred, predominantly Zulu province that contains Durban, South Africa's third-largest.

And some Inkatha officials who have argued all along that the party erred by deciding to defy the elections were freshly optimistic Tuesday night that they might yet change Inkatha's course.

"It's a huge step in that direction," said Ziba Jiyane, an Inkatha spokesman who tends to be more optimistic than his bosses.

Mandela and Buthelezi said they had also agreed to "work together" to assure that campaign canvassers have free access to each other's enclaves, whether Inkatha is soliciting votes or promoting a boycott.

Similar promises in the past have had little influence on the two men's followers in township streets and rural villages, where intimidation of political dissidents is commonplace.

The deadline for parties to put their names on the April ballot passed on Feb. 12, with Inkatha and an array of white separatist parties failing to register.

Parliament has convened this week to extend the deadline until next Friday, and to enact several constitutional amendments aimed at appeasing the holdout parties.

JAILED: 5 Mexican citizens appear in court

(From 1A)

Miguel Daniel Varela, 29, of Juarez, Mexico, and Beatris Morales de Varela, 28, of Juarez.

"The investigation focused on large quantities of handguns, which were being purchased in Odessa by Mexican nationals, who then smuggled the guns out of the United States and into Mexico," according to a press release from the Houston office of the U.S. Customs Service.

However, a spokesman for the San Angelo office — which coordinated the investigation — declined to say if he believed the five suspects were involved in gun-smuggling other than that for which they were charged.

U.S. Customs officials allege in a court complaint that the five conspired to export 50 semiautomatic weapons from the United States and attempted to export the guns.

They made an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola Jr. in Midland Monday afternoon.

According to the court information, on Feb. 18 a U.S. Customs confidential informant told officials that Rodriguez had solicited for the acquisition of weapons for illegal exportation.

A U.S. customs agent said that between Feb. 22 and 25, a U.S. Customs undercover agent spoke several times with Rodriguez, his wife and his son in Odessa. The agent was posing as a gun salesman.

According to the charges, during conversations all three defendants expressed interest in the guns and negotiated for the purchase.

On Feb. 25, a meeting with the same three defendants and an agent was videotaped. During the meeting, they purchased 50 semiautomatic handguns, the complaint indicated.

An agent said that during the same meeting the three defendants said they intended to export the guns to Mexico. He said they also negotiated for a future purchase of 51 more guns.

A U.S. Customs supervisor said earlier reports that all five were arrested at the same time were incorrect. He said three were arrested on the road and two were arrested at a home in Odessa.

On Sunday night, three of the suspects — Varela and his wife and Ms. Varela-Castaneda — were in a vehicle westbound from Odessa on Interstate 20, according to the complaint.

According to the court complaint, Department of Public Safety troopers who stopped the vehicle said the driver told them they were on their way to Mexico.

During a search of the vehicle, the weapons were found in a hidden compartment that was created within the lower bench portion of the rear seat and concealed by a solid metal sheet attached to the bottom of the seat by bolts, according to the charges.

They were stopped near Monahans and arrested. Law-enforcement officials found 52 guns in the vehicle. The guns and two vehicles were seized.

Later that night, Rodriguez and Reyes Varela were arrested at their home in Odessa. An additional handgun and another vehicle were seized.

All five suspects were placed in the Midland County Detention Center under federal weapons smuggling charges. Following the Monday hearing, the defendants were temporarily detained. They will have a preliminary examination and detention hearing Friday morning.

The undercover operation, which lasted several days, was coordinated by Customs agents in conjunction with the intelligence and patrol divisions of the Texas Department of Public Safety, the detective and patrol divisions of the Odessa Police Department and the Midessa Auto Theft Task Force.

dampen the violence that has swept the occupied territories and parts of Israel since Friday's massacre.

The PLO won't resume peace talks with Israel unless "certain guarantees are provided" to protect Palestinians living under occupation, he said.

But, amid intense diplomatic maneuvering, there were signs that these may now be forthcoming. Israeli sources were optimistic the suspended talks will resume following Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's offer of a package of concessions that go partway toward meeting PLO demands.

Western and Arab diplomats in Tunis, Tunisia, the PLO's headquarters, said Israel's concessions, offered this week, include strengthening a Palestinian police force being deployed under the Sept. 13 PLO-Israeli peace accord in what will be self-rule areas in Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho. Israel also would disarm settlers in those areas.

Rabin also offered to allow international observers into the territories for the first time since Israel captured them in the 1967 Mideast War.

The PLO Executive Committee, the organization's ruling body, rejected the package early Tuesday in Tunis, saying it did not go far enough, said PLO Executive Committee member Ali Ishak.

The worst stumbling block, said Ishak, was the offer of observers. The PLO wants an armed multinational protection force in the occupied lands.

Israeli officials indicated the observers would be empowered only to supervise Israel's military withdrawal from Gaza and Jericho and oversee the handover of authority to Palestinians.

"They won't have a military presence or have the power to interfere," Gad Yaacobi, Israel's U.N. ambassador, told Israel radio.

Rabin has ruled out putting the future of Jewish settlements on the agenda now, a key PLO demand.

ADMITS: U.S. reveals details in spy case to what I'm doing in a very supportive way," Ames said in a letter to his Moscow handlers, according to Wiser.

(From 1A)

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Hulkower, who is in charge of prosecuting the case against the pair, depicted Mrs. Ames as an increasingly integral part of her husband's alleged spying.

"Mrs. Ames knew she was riding the Russian gravy train and jumped on it with both feet," Hulkower said.

Wiser's testimony about Mrs. Ames' confession capped an afternoon hearing in which lawyers working separately for Rosario and Aldrich ("Rick") Ames sought to have the couple released on bond.

The U.S. magistrate hearing the case, Barry Poretz, turned the couple down and ruled that there was enough evidence to send the case to a grand jury. Poretz said there was an unacceptable risk that the couple would flee the country if allowed to post bail. He said Ames, if freed, would pose a danger to the nation because he possessed valuable intelligence information.

Throughout the hearing, Ames sat quietly in a jumpsuit that was khaki on top and green on the trousers. The word "prisoner" was marked on the back. Rosario Ames' prison jumpsuit was all green.

As the hearing concluded, the basic parameters of the thriller-like spy charges remained the same. But Wiser's testimony added new details to the tale of what may prove to be the deepest penetration yet of U.S. intelligence.

He said:

■ The FBI did not open its investigation of Ames until May 12, 1993, much later than previous reports placed it. Wiser called the investigation a "hybrid" criminal and counterintelligence probe. Wiser did not say how long Ames had been suspected by the CIA before a formal investigation was opened, but other reports have said the year was 1991.

■ The official of an Eastern European internal security service that Ames allegedly betrayed was code-named "GT Motorboat." Ames recruited the official while working for the CIA in Rome. A 9-page letter from Ames' Soviet handlers, discovered in a closet at his home after his arrest, said Ames told them of the official's cooperation with the CIA. Wiser said the CIA has looked for the East European official "to no avail," suggesting that he was executed.

■ The same letter set up a "communications" schedule for contact between Ames and his handlers and gave him a "tasking" list. Top priority: The identities of CIA "penetrations" into three Russian intelligence services.

■ After the pair were arrested last week, agents found in the Ames house an accounting of his finances, dated May 1, 1989, which said the "balance" of his "account" was valued at $2.7 million.

ers of weapons charges. Four were acquitted of all charges.

Hours after the verdicts were announced, Reno said the jury sent a clear message that the killings of the four ATF agents during the botched raid were not justified.

"The findings that these deaths were not justified makes clear that the government had a responsibility to act," Reno said at a Justice Department news conference.

Several legal experts, including Dershowitz, found fault with Reno's conclusion and said the voluntary manslaughter convictions suggest the jury found some justification for self-defense on the part of the Davidians.

Voluntary manslaughter carries a penalty of up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. A murder conviction could have meant life in prison.

Six Davidians also died as federal agents raided the sect's Mount Carmel compound to serve weapons warrants. Cult leader David Koresh and 78 others perished when their 51-day siege ended April 19 as the compound burned to the ground in a final, apocalyptic confrontation with authorities.

"It seems to me you get to voluntary manslaughter from murder by accepting it was self-defense, but there was excessive force in self-defense," said Georgetown University law professor John Copacino.

But Assistant Treasury Secretary Ronald Noble, whose duties include oversight of the ATF, viewed the verdict as a repudiation of the self-defense claim.

"Although the defendants were not convicted of conspiracy to commit murder or of murder, their defense that they had a 'self-defense' right to kill federal agents was obviously rejected," Noble said Saturday.

University of Texas law professor Robert Dawson said it appears the jury sought compromise.

"I think the jury found fault and excesses on both sides and that's reflected in the fact they cut four of the people loose and the most they returned was voluntary manslaughter," Dawson said Monday.

The lack of murder convictions is a clear blow to the government, which mounted a lengthy prosecution costing taxpayers at least $1.3 million, Dawson and others said.

"I think anything else is really whistling in the dark," Dawson said. "You can bet if you talk to an ATF agent it's not viewed as a victory."

There was little doubt about the outcome for South Texas College of Law Assistant Dean T. Gerald Treece.

"When you see the prosecutor crying and the prosecution team terribly upset at the press conference and you see the defense lawyers doing victory laps around the press conference room, I don't think you have to know a whole lot more," Treece said.

"If this is a victory, then the government has its own unique definition of victory."

Dershowitz had his own take on Reno's statements.

"I was quite surprised," he said. "It sounded to me like she had gotten badly briefed by her staff."

FILM: 'List' opens in Germany

(From 1A)

Each guest was asked to donate 100 marks, about $60, to a German charity called Against Forgetting to restore a deteriorating memorial at the former Nazi concentration camp in Auschwitz, where Schindler's employees would have gone to the ovens if he had not saved them from the SS.

One of them was Michael Friedmann, a 38-year-old son of two Schindler Jews who is a lawyer in Frankfurt. He saw the film with his mother.

"I saw my parents, and I was crying," he said of the film. "I saw the millions who didn't survive, and I was crying. I saw the Germans who saved some of them, and I was crying, and I saw the Germans who murdered, and I was crying too. I hope a lot of Germans, particularly young Germans, will go see this film, which helps us to feel the Holocaust."

His mother, Evgenia Friedmann, told Spielberg, "I wish you had done the film 10 years earlier, but nobody who sees it will ever forget it."

The Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, a conservative daily, ran a front-page editorial about it. "All indications are that Spielberg's film will move and excite this country," it said. "Everybody should see this film."

But nearly 50 years after the disappearance of the Nazi death machinery, fear was not entirely absent for this occasion. Spielberg, who also plans to present the picture on Wednesday in Krakow, the site of Oskar Schindler's ceramics factory and of many scenes in the film, was worried that German right-wing extremists and neo-Nazis would try to spoil the German opening and asked for tight security.

The city authorities and the U.S. consulate, which helped with the arrangements and with the publicity, complied.

Spielberg, who is Jewish, signed the book of honor at Frankfurt City Hall on Tuesday and proceeded from reception to reception, including one given by the U.S. ambassador, Richard C. Holbrooke.

Schindler, who was honored several times in Israel by those he saved and is buried in the Roman Catholic cemetery in Jerusalem, is no longer obscure in his own country.

There have been new television documentaries, old television documentaries, interviews with his widow, Emilie, who still lives in Argentina, where he left her in 1957, and almost as many newspaper articles as there are about the war in Bosnia, whose horrors were one of the reasons Spielberg said he had made the film.

Toward the end of his life, Schindler lived in a shabby furnished room overlooking the Frankfurt railroad station, having lost or gambled away $100,000 in German government compensation for the loss of his factory.

The only honor his own government bestowed on him for his deeds was a simple merit cross; Jewish charities and the local city and state governments provided him with a collection of small pensions that added up to subsistence.

Schindler died in a hospital in Hildesheim in October 1974, almost unknown except in Israel and among those who still called themselves Schindler's Jews. Frankfurt later named a small street in a housing project after him.

GRAMMYS: Voters will always love Whitney

(From 1A)

Houston. The single has been one of the fastest-selling in music history, and the movie soundtrack has sold more than 10 million copies.

The "Aladdin" soundtrack received four Grammys before the telecast began. During the CBS-TV special, "A Whole New World (Aladdin's Theme)" won for song of the year, a prize that went to the composers, Alan Menken and Tim Rice. Last year, the movie's music won two Academy Awards (for original score and song).

"I would like to thank the Everly Brothers who got me going on American music," said Rice, an Englishman.

Peabo Bryson and Regina Belle won the award for best pop performance by a duo or group for singing "A Whole New World (Aladdin's Theme)."

The other awards for "Aladdin": best musical album for children, and best instrumental composition written for a motion picture or for television. The theme song also won as best song written for a movie or television.

Besides sharing the record of the year prize with Miss Houston, Foster won the Grammy as producer of the year for "I Will Always Love You" and for best instrumental arrangement of "When I Fall In Love" from the soundtrack of "Sleepless in Seattle."

"I just can't even believe that I'm up here at this point in my career," Foster said. "This is the greatest night of my life."

Tony Bennett and country star Mary-Chapin Carpenter also won Grammys as the recording industry honored its top performers. Other winners were Aerosmith for best rock group, and U2 for alternative music.

Bono of U2 was greeted with cheers and gasps during his acceptance speech when he used a four-letter word in delivering "a message to the young people of America."

He returned a short while later to present a lifetime achievement award to Frank Sinatra and apparently didn't stray from his prepared introduction.

After a standing ovation, a tearful Sinatra said: "That's the best welcome I ever had."

He took a couple of deep breaths trying to regain his composure, then said: "This is like being in baseball; the bases are loaded and you're at bat — you don't know what you're going to do."

Carpenter, the country singer who grew up in New Jersey, won the best female country vocal performance. Lucinda Williams' "Passionate Kisses," which Carpenter covered, received the award for best country song.

Dwight Yoakam won the Grammy for best country male vocal performance with "Ain't that Lonely Yet."

Bennett's "Steppin' Out," beat Barbra Streisand's "Back to Broadway" for best traditional pop vocal performance.

"What a thrill," Bennett said. "I don't know what Barbra's going to say about this."

Outside Radio City Music Hall, a group of protesters that included Kim Gordon of Sonic Youth and members of the Breeders criticized the elimination of the award for best female rock vocal.

Sting picked up two technical Grammys — best engineered album and best music video (long form) — as well as the award for best pop male vocalist.

The best new artist Grammy went to Toni Braxton, while multiple nominees Billy Joel, R.E.M. and Neil Young were shut out.

Winners were determined by the ballots of 6,500 voting members of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Yeltsin insists he's in control

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin said Tuesday the freeing of his hard-line enemies under a parliamentary amnesty posed no danger of a revolt, and he insisted he was firmly in control of the country.

Yeltsin was trying to limit the political damage from the amnesty, which has thrown his administration into confusion and made him appear weak.

He also is facing a coal miners strike and a dispute with Washington over spying that threatens to chill relations with the United States.

"At this time, I don't see any real danger to civic accord and I fully control the social-political situation," Yeltsin told parliament leaders at the Kremlin.

The State Duma, the lower house of parliament that contains many Communists and extreme nationalists who oppose Yeltsin's reforms, passed the amnesty a week ago. It was a political attack on Yeltsin, barely disguised by rhetoric about the need for national reconciliation.

While the president's staff was still considering a legal challenge to the amnesty, it was suddenly carried out Saturday.

Former Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, former parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov and other hard-liners walked out of Lefortovo Prison, where they were held for inciting the street battles that terrorized Moscow last October.

On Tuesday, the second half of the amnesty also was carried out. The Supreme Court dismissed the treason trial of the leaders of the 1991 Communist coup that briefly toppled former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

A dozen alleged conspirators — including former KGB Chairman Vladimir Kryuchkov, Soviet Defense Minister Dmitry Yazov and Vice President Gennady Yanayev — had faced a possible death penalty if convicted.

They accepted the amnesty while continuing to declare their innocence. They claim the August 1991 takeover was not really a coup, but a patriotic effort to save the Soviet Union from disintegration at the hands of Gorbachev and Yeltsin.

It's about time for Texas celebration!

Texas Independence Day is always an important event in Midland, but it will take on special significance in the Tall City today when what is believed to be the first community-wide observance of the declaration of the Republic of Texas is held. The event, sponsored by the Midland Downtown Lions Club, is appropriately called a Celebration of Texas Pride.

It shouldn't be difficult for the Lions to generate either good attendance or abundant pride at the celebration, which is to be held at Midland Center beginning at noon. Texans are widely known for unabashed pride in their state and much of it stems from the way in which early settlers in the land region that was then controlled by Mexico rose up on March 2, 1836 to declare their independence from the Republic of Mexico. That pride was turned to bloody vengeance after William Barret Travis and his band of Texans were slaughtered by Santa Anna's hordes at the San Antonio mission known as the Alamo. The Texans sealed their revolt at the Battle of San Jacinto and even today, with the state as one of the 50 United States of America, there is undying pride among the descendants of the state's forefathers.

No doubt the fire of that pride will be stoked today by Clayton W. Williams Jr., the Midland oilman and rancher who says it's "about time Midland had a celebration to honor our Texas heritage."

He's absolutely correct. And we can't think of a finer time to begin celebrating our heritage as Texans than on the day our state's forefathers arose in arms to declare the Republic of Texas. That is a day which shaped the Texas of today and keeps alive that spirit of independence so abundant in the people of Texas!

Is Zhirinovsky crazy, ambitious or both?

WASHINGTON — A spy scandal and the spread of ultra-nationalism are chilling U.S.-Russian relations and prompting some U.S. officials to contemplate the unthinkable: the triumph of Vladimir Zhirinovsky.

Anderson

Zhirinovsky, the man who would be king of a new Russian empire, threatens to bring Europe and Asia under Russian domination with nuclear force and mass extermination of non-white and non-Russian ethnic groups. While the temptation is to dismiss some of Zhirinovsky's most inflammatory discourse as mere rhetoric, the consistency of his threats is compelling evidence of his real thinking.

With the recent release of an English translation of Zhirinovsky's autobiography, his version of Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf," we have compiled a record of "Mad Vlad's" speeches and statements on the United States and Russian domination:

As Zhirinovsky sent off soldier-volunteers to defend Iraq from its "enemies" in January 1993, he borrowed a phrase once used by President Ronald Reagan to describe the Soviet Union by declaring the United States was really the "evil empire." In defense of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein months earlier, Zhirinovsky told the press, "We (Russia) have the same enemies as Iraq — America, Israel and Turkey. America and Israel are both conducting wars against Russia and Iraq."

The democratic reforms in Russia, he once declared, have been "an Anglo-Saxon and Israeli plan to destroy the Soviet Union. We were in the way. We were their only competitors, and the United States doesn't want a competitor."

He muses on the Russian reaction to his predicted collapse of the United States: "We Russians won't gloat when several of your states break away..... We won't gloat when California becomes part of Mexico and a black republic of Miami is established, when the Russians take back Alaska." But then in 1991, Zhirinovsky also portrayed the United States as "a melting pot of Negroes and Hispanics which will collapse in five years' time."

On ethnics, Zhirinovsky, a believer that the Russian is a superior being, promises to "eradicate" non-white Russians starting in the Russian capital. "Dark-skinned street vendors in Moscow make it look like a non-Russian city," he wrote. "This is a black stain."

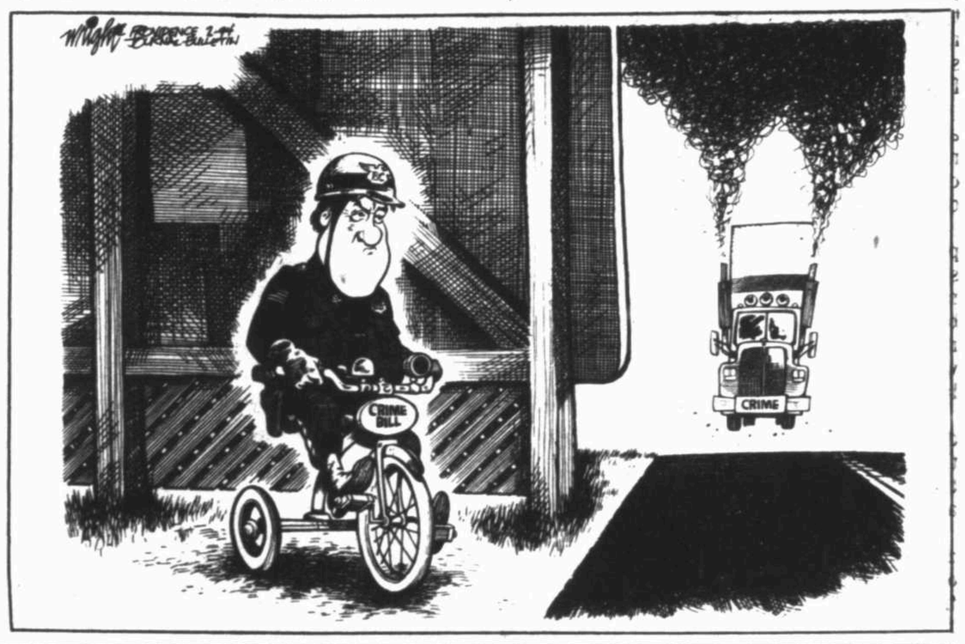

When President George Bush became sick at a Japanese summit in January 1992, Zhirinovsky took the opportunity to throw support behind former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke's presidential campaign. "Look at that smiling, sick American president," Zhirinovsky said of Bush. "He should resign, . . . since he is going to lose the presidency anyway to David Duke . . . there is a man we can really support."

If elected president, Zhirinovsky threatens to "nuke" the Japanese; overrun Afghanistan, Iran, Pakistan and Turkey on his way to the shores of the Indian Ocean and Mediterranean Sea; and divide Poland and Finland with what he assumes will be an eager Germany. This desire to establish peace by Russian dominance may meet with resistance.

Zhirinovsky would also turn the winds of hatred toward the United States with a plan to force it into submission from outer space.

Zhirinovsky may also think he has some supernatural right to exterminate his enemies. "I am a God," he once told the world. "I am a tyrant!"

Horror of Hebron must not lead to ethnic cleansing

WASHINGTON — The fanatical doctor from Brooklyn who murdered scores of Muslims at prayer was the best ally of the Hezbollah and the worst enemy of Jewish settlers in Israel's disputed West Bank.

Safire

Perhaps he thought he was avenging the Arab massacre of Jews at Hebron seven decades ago; or the murder of his mentor, the extremist Rabbi Kahane, a few years ago; or killings of a couple of Israelis he treated a few weeks ago.

But his premeditated slaughter of innocents was more than vengeance; it was, as Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev called it, "a provocation" — an invitation to bloody reprisal by his Arab fellow warriors in what they agree is a "holy war."

The real conflict is between warmakers and peacemakers. Until now, terror was the weapon of Arab organizations; now, thanks to the Jewish gunman at Hebron and the bloodthirsty few who praised his act, many profess to see a rough balance of Israeli and Palestinian terrorists.

The goal of the warmakers is not lunatic: each seeks the expulsion of the other from "their" territory. The Hebron killer's Kach faction wants Arabs driven across the Jordan River, while Hamas, the Hezbollah and Fatah hawks want Jews driven out of the West Bank and ultimately into the sea.

The goal of peacemakers should be some compromise, allowing West Bank Arabs and Jews to live together, or at least next to one another, with self-rule for each.

Until recently, the compromise in the minds of many moderate Israelis, both Labor and Likud, was one that ultimately divided the disputed territory: the great majority of land to Palestinians, but with strategic points now populated by 130,000 Israeli settlers to help defend the territorially vulnerable and often-invaded Israel.

That has changed. The Rabin-Peres government seems to be planning to turn the entire West Bank over to Palestinian rule. That would strand Israeli settlers, who believe they live on the land of Israel, and were encouraged to settle there over decades by a democratically elected government.

These settlers are now being demonized — castigated as zealots, obstacles to peace — for daring to object to being cut off, with the land under their homes ceded to a foreign power.

This demonization was given a boost by the Hebron fanatic's bloody invitation to more war. All the embattled pioneers, often attacked and necessarily armed to protect themselves, are today unfairly lumped together with the extremist faction that wants to drive out the Arab residents.

The Israeli government, which failed to foresee the extent of the fear that would pass through the isolated outposts at the prospect of sellout, is properly moving to assuage the anguish of Palestinians by disarming and restricting the extremist factions associated with the killer.

The condolence visit to Hebron by Israeli President Ezer Weizman expressed his nation's sorrow and shame.

The U.S. government moved correctly to avert victory for the warmakers by inviting Palestinians and Israelis to Washington for rejuvenation of the talks. This was a concession to the PLO, which wants the talks here; Israel acceded immediately, leaving it to the PLO to decide when it can come. Palestinians, aggrieved and bereaved, can now set the timing of negotiation renewal.

PLO peacemakers cannot help but exploit the tragedy in negotiations; to do otherwise would invite attack from Arab warmakers. That is why it ritually called for "international protection" of Palestinians — Israeli surrender to the U.N. that Chairman Arafat knows is unrealistic.

Winter storm makes daytime TV shine

People who work in the daytime don't know what they are missing on television. It took a mammoth snowstorm to make me realize what homemakers are watching these days.

Buchwald

Talk shows are replacing soap operas, and the subjects range from "Wives who run away with their children's school bus drivers" to "Teenagers who live with their parents but haven't talked to them in five years."

I was clicking along the channels when I saw a talk show host with a microphone say, "Today we will discuss mothers who prefer pets to their children. Joining our panel are mothers who have decided to devote whatever psychic energy they have to their French poodles, and children who feel that they have been ignored by their parents whenever they ran out of movie money. First of all, Mrs. Davidson, what made you love animals more than your own children?"

She replied, "I find that every time I want to hug my daughter she says, 'Do we have to do the mother bit again?' When I pet my dog he wags his tail and barks. I'm getting more stroking out of Alonzo."

Wanda, sitting next to her mother, said, "Ever since I was a child my mother brushed the dog's hair before mine. Is it any wonder that I'm on this show?"

"Thank you both, and now Mrs. Claxton, you have a cat."

"Yes, I have a beautiful Siamese and three daughters. If I had my way, I would have three cats and one daughter."

"Your daughters, who are sitting next to you, maintain that you speak softly to the cat but use a big stick when you talk to them."

"That cat doesn't give me any back talk the way my daughters do."

One of the daughters said, "I'm allergic to cats."

Mrs. Claxton retorted, "You just say that because I won't allow you to bring boys up to your bedroom."

Another daughter said, "You sit there with the cat on your lap and pet it and whisper things like, 'If you are not a good cat you will wind up like one of my daughters.' "

"OK, let's take some calls. Spokane, Wash."

"Thank you very much. I have a different situation in that my son and his dog are constantly ganging up on me. I don't like the dog and he knows it. My son says that if I don't like the dog I don't have to stay in the house. I pointed out that it was my house and he responded, 'In that case I'm going to hire a lawyer.' "

"Thank you very much. Fort Lauderdale, Fla."

"I would like to ask the first mother if she and her daughter ever sought counseling over the dog?"

Mrs. Davidson answered, "We were willing to do it, but the dog wouldn't go. Alonzo feels that it's our problem, not his."

"Thank you, Fort Lauderdale. We have on the line Dr. Flauberman who specializes in dysfunctional pets in dysfunctional families. Dr. Flauberman, what is your solution to the problem when a parent spends more time with her pet that she does with her children?"

"Goldfish."

We're lucky to have leadership of Williams

In response to your article of Feb. 15 on the disciplinary action of our County Road and Bridge Superintendent Johnny Williams:

First, an article of this length indicates to me as has been the case for many years that the paper has to grasp for anything other than ads and local sports to publish a paper.

As a person living in the county all I have to do is look on a daily basis to see the improvement in our county infrastructure since the employment of Williams.

If we must take potshots to publish a newspaper, let's also publish how well spent our tax dollars are since we have been lucky enough to have the leadership of Johnny Williams.

There is not such thing as gay rights

Item: Gay-rights activists group to protest "injustice" of murderer's sentencing. One gets a little weary of activists, in particular gay-rights activists.

There is no such thing as gay rights. That is to say, those who are citizens have the same rights as all other citizens. There are no special rights set aside for them to be called gay rights because of their lifestyle and sexual preferences.

As for me I will accept the Lord's law as given to Moses when He said they are an abomination and shall be cut off from among their peoples. Lev. 18: 22,29.

We need to enforce drunk-driving laws

To me, of all the tragedies that happen in our society, the way we treat drunken drivers seems most senseless.

It has come to our attention that a substantial number of individuals who have been arrested and charged with D.W.I. by some of our skilled law-enforcement officers have, for no apparent reason, had their charges reduced to reckless driving. Thus, a lesser charge results in lesser fines, does not require attendance at D.W.I. school, probation, driver's license suspension and does not cumulate to a felony charge or conviction in the event of repeat arrests and charges. A third charge with two prior convictions becomes a felony with very serious consequences. Hence this reduction to reckless driving can be of major importance to the party arrested and charged with the offense of D.W.I.

Drunken driving is the most frequently committed violent crime in our city. In our state 1,222 people died and 33,499 were injured in alcohol related crashes in 1993.

It doesn't matter that the drunk, when sober, might be a responsible member of society. Dead is dead. It can't be acceptable for certain members of our society to walk away from D.W.I. arrests. When we stand for nothing less than the enforcement of our laws, that is when we are likely to get them enforced. The public has got to demand strict enforcement and prosecution, and the courts have got to comply.

Desperate nation to try to give peace a chance

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Peace seems so near, so utterly within reach that people in this desperate nation finally believe that four cruel years of civil war will, incredibly, end next week.

On Monday, under a delicate framework forged by a series of fitful talks, tens of thousands of guerrillas are supposed to come out of the bush and give up their guns in exchange for two T-shirts, a pair of slacks, sneakers, a bag of rice and a bus ride back to their villages.

On the same day, a coalition government comprised of the three main combatants is to convene with the sole purpose of steering the nation toward multiparty elections on Sept. 7.

The twisting borders and battlefronts fashioned by the factions and their free-lancing splinter groups are to disappear. The myriad roadblocks and checkpoints set up to control the shellshocked populace are to be taken over by a multinational African force overseen by U.N. peacekeepers.

For a nation in which more than half the 2.6 million people have been driven from their homes — tens of thousands of whom starved to death in the rain forest or were massacred by militias — the stakes seem far too high for failure.

"It's no maybe. It's sure. People are just waiting for the hour to come," said Diane Williams, 34, a civil servant in the immigration department.

"I will not tolerate an ounce of pessimism. It's our last chance," said Myrtle Gibson, head of a women's activist group whose members have crossed battlefronts in a risky show of unity with other women in a nation raped and pillaged by armed men.

Even the main players seem driven by the collective will to end this ugly war, bending their positions into a series of 11th-hour accommodations.

Never has peace seemed so clearly at hand in Liberia, a sliver of coastal West Africa settled by freed American slaves in the early 19th century.

Liberia was ruled by descendants of the original slaves until Master Sgt. Samuel Doe, a member of the indigenous Krahn people, seized power in a bloody 1980 coup and ruled brutally with blatant tribal bias.

Charles Taylor, a U.S.-educated former Doe cohort who fell out of favor, launched a rebellion from Ivory Coast on Christmas Eve 1989.

Taylor's rebellion splintered into gruesome ethnic warfare marked by hideous massacres. Doe himself was tied to a chair by another rebel group and tortured to death; at one point his captors tried to make him eat his severed ear.

A seven-nation West African coalition army dominated by Nigeria landed in 1991 to take on Taylor's army, allying itself with Doe's old army and an anti-Taylor rebel faction and installing educator Amos Sawyer as president.

A series of peace plans collapsed until July 25, 1993, when Taylor, Sawyer, and the anti-Taylor faction agreed to a U.N.-sponsored accord.

Disagreements over disarmament threatened to wreck the plan until two weeks ago, when the commander of the West African army, Nigerian Maj. Gen. John Inienger, and U.N. Special Envoy Trevor Gordon-Somers met with the factions and finessed the final details.

China shows video of four prisoners to refute abuse claims

BEIJING (AP) — China on Tuesday showed a videotape of four well-known political prisoners celebrating Chinese New Year, an attempt to refute Western reports that they are in poor health and have been abused.

The screening to five American reporters coincided with the visit of the United State's top human rights official, John Shattuck. Shattuck, assistant secretary of states for human rights, is holding three days of meetings in Beijing with Chinese leaders on human rights.

He was expected to remind them that China is in danger of losing its most-favored nation trading status this year because it has failed to show significant improvement in human rights, as called for by President Clinton.

The prisoners shown on the videotape all were imprisoned for their roles in the 1989 Tiananmen Square democracy movement and have been at the top of lists of cases that Western governments and human rights groups are most concerned with. The screening was arranged by the State Council, China's cabinet.

The tape showed Chen Ziming and Ren Wanding celebrating Chinese New Year in prison last month with their families. It also showed Wang Juntao in his hospital room visiting with his family for the holiday, and Liu Gang celebrating his birthday on Jan. 30 with inmates and playing pool and bridge on Chinese New Year.

In the past two years, China has periodically released footage or photographs of well-known dissidents in an effort to refute reports that they are in poor health or have been abused. Family members have said the photos and videotapes are staged and do not show how the prisoners are normally treated.

Elect Jim Prince, County Judge

Since Midland County spends 21-plus million dollars, the county judge needs extensive experience in investigating expenditures and developing economic plans limited to necessary expenditures. As former CEO of two major real estate firms, and now principal of a successful Midland business, I have many years of proven experience in budget planning and expense control.
Proven leadership, ability to organize, lead and compromise is required. I have more than a quarter century of successful experience doing this.
Conducting arraignments is best done by someone with the maturity and sound judgment that I possess and have used successfully for decades.

More JOBS = A Better Economy for Midland
SAVE TAXPAYERS MONEY by:
Work camps, not expensive jails, inmates performing community duties in print shops, laundries, landscaping and janitorial, by secure supervision of our capable law enforcement
Diversification = A Brighter Future & JOBS

Midland County deserves and could have a brighter future, but only if diversification is undertaken and accomplished. For years it has been unrealistic to depend economically exclusively on the oil industry. To grow, Midland, new industries and businesses must be attracted that create jobs. This can occur only with an organized professional plan, budgeted and undertaken by local government. I am the only candidate with years of direct involvement and participation in successfully relocating numerous major and small business firms.
Midland County is long overdue for a complete study of the activities that devour the citizens' ad valorem taxes, and after this thorough investigation, programs with policies, and procedures like that of a successful business need to be initiated. No other candidate has the experience and proven ability to accomplish this all-important task.
The overcrowded conditions of the jail could be solved immediately by the creation of boot camps and work facilities at much less cost than building additional jails. Why are we waiting? There should be printing shops, laundries, facilities for automotive, office equipment and furniture repairs, landscaping and janitorial duties all performed by inmates under careful and secure supervision of our very capable law-enforcement agencies. I will strive to accomplish this with the cooperation and assistance I have been promised.
Midland could be recognized as one of the most progressive and best communities in the USA, thereby better able to attract new businesses. Midland County needs a successful business leader not another attorney.

Senate falls short of two-thirds majority for amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Falling four votes shy of a two-thirds majority, the Senate on Tuesday rejected a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution that supporters said would end the government's staggering run-up of red ink.

The 63-37 vote capped a debate that blended Constitutional and economic arguments on an issue that Congress has wrestled with for more than a decade.

"We must not feed the nation this poison pill," Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said shortly before the final vote. He said the amendment would damage the Constitution's balance of powers and undermine majority rule without necessarily erasing deficits.

But Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., countered that for "25 years in a row we have had deficits," and said the national debt has grown steadily in his two decades in Congress. Sooner or later, he warned, the government would resort to printing "funny money" to sustain that debt. "We ought to stop this before we get to the edge of the cliff."

Forty-one Republicans and 22 Democrats voted in favor of the amendment. Thirty-four Democrats and three Republicans were opposed.

There was one surprise: Sen. Harlan Mathews, D-Tenn., who was appointed to fill Vice President Al Gore's seat and is not a candidate for re-election. Although he was a co-sponsor of the amendment, he voted against, saying he was fearful of its possible impact on Social Security.

The House is expected to vote on an identical amendment at midmonth, and supporters there are within striking distance of a two-thirds majority. Regardless of the outcome, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said the issue would "absolutely not" return to the Senate floor this year.

Although close, the final Senate vote was largely drained of suspense. Sponsors said in advance they were likely to lose, despite a $4.5 trillion debt, to opposition that included the White House, Mitchell and Byrd, the 76-year-old chairman of the Appropriations Committee who patrolled the Senate floor for a week countering each argument made by supporters.

On a vote of 78-22, the Senate earlier brushed aside a milder version of the amendment, sponsored by Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., that would have sheltered Social Security from budget-cutters and permitted borrowing for permanent government projects such as highways and buildings. It also would have made it easier to run a deficit in a time of recession.

Many Republicans scorned it as a loophole-ridden proposal that would do little to rein in deficits, and charged it was designed to siphon off support from their own proposal. "It is not a serious balanced-budget amendment," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

Seven Democrats voted for Reid's alternative and then opposed the other version. They included Joseph Biden of Delaware, Kent Conrad of North Dakota; Barbara Boxer of California; Russell Feingold of Wisconsin; Tom Harkin of Iowa, Reid and Mathews.

The amendment would forbid a deficit unless three-fifths of both houses of Congress vote otherwise. The proposal would take effect in 2001, and Congress could waive the requirements in wartime.

With a vote approaching, President Clinton expressed opposition. "It runs the risk of endangering our economic recovery by requiring excessive tax increases, or very damaging cuts in defense or investments in technology and job training, or Medicare and Social Security," he told reporters at the White House.

Since last Tuesday, said Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, "we've paid $3.2 billion in interest. That $3.2 billion could have reduced taxes $40 . . . for every taxpaying family. We're talking real money."

Panel ponders potent painkillers for children

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A panel of scientists, torn between doctors' pleas for help and a mother's tearful story of her son's death, spent Tuesday trying to figure out how to get safe but potent painkillers to children about to undergo medical treatment.

Those patients often are called "therapeutic orphans," because no sedatives or painkillers have been proven safe for children. The only such product ever approved by the Food and Drug Administration is a "narcotic lollipop" that isn't yet on the market.

The FDA considers the situation so critical that Commissioner David Kessler sat through daylong deliberations before an advisory committee, hearing a series of doctors testify they brew up dangerous cocktails of adult drugs for children because they have no alternative.

"I don't have a good selection of drugs to use" said Nashville nurse-anesthesiologist Suzanne Brown. "I'm getting to use . . . cookbook combinations and hope I get it right."

Medical professions often don't. Nobody knows how many children die from these painkillers because doctors are not required to report problems. Some do voluntarily; the FDA discovered 133 cases where children died or were disabled or hospitalized by these adult drugs.

Donna Schilling's son died because a dentist gave him a powerful adult drug meant for chronic pain sufferers. Chris Schilling was a healthy 17-year-old who died from a painkiller given after his wisdom teeth were removed.

The drug was a patch called Duragesic that delivered high doses of the painkiller Fentanyl through the skin. It was never intended for children or even adults suffering mild pain. The FDA discovered so many abuses that it recently issued a warning about the product.

Fentanyl in intravenous form is very popular among pediatricians, and a drug company recently won FDA approval for a raspberry-flavored lollipop form of the drug, called Oralet.

Mrs. Schilling cautioned that just as a dentist improperly used the Fentanyl patch on her son, doctors can misuse Oralet. "If this lollipop ends up in the wrong hands — and it will — children will die," she said.

But Dr. John Ryan of Harvard University said Oralet has drug doses 12 to 25 times lower than Duragesic. It's important because it enables children to get relief without undergoing a shot, an enema or an inhalant of adult drugs as they do now.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Citizen consumer advocacy group asked the FDA to reverse approval of Oralet. He cited evidence showing that when given various doses, children are at risk of respiratory arrest and pre-surgical vomiting.

Kessler asked Wolfe what he would use instead. "This is the wrong thing," Wolfe replied.

The FDA advisory committee is spending two days trying to decide how Oralet and future children's painkillers can be safely used.

Kessler tried to assure Mrs. Schilling that strong warnings on drug packages and a plan by Oralet's distributor, Abbott Laboratories, to allow only specially trained doctors to get it will provide adequate safeguards.

The panel noted that doctors prescribe drugs for off-label uses now for everything from calming a frightened child before a CAT scan, to sedating before an operation, to numbing children against the horrific pain of a spinal tap.

The scientists argued over whether only anesthesiologists should deliver these kinds of drugs. They agreed the drugs should be given only in a hospital to save a child who has a dangerous side effect.

They urged Abbott to closely study Oralet and report back to them on how doctors actually use it once it goes to market.

After two months of hard work and planning, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce is revitalized and ready to move ahead, said newly appointed chairman Mike Flores.

Flores was appointed to the office in December, and shortly thereafter organized a retreat, where he and the board of directors met to share ideas and information. In this forum, Flores and the directors were able to develop goals and objectives for the Economic Development Committee, the Education Committee and the new Conventions and Tourism Committee.

"The board members have worked hard to finalize business plans for the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce," he said. "I really appreciate the dedication and hard work of our board members during the last 60 days," he said.

Flores, 31, has lived in Midland for 10 years and is vice-president for Coca-Cola Southwest's Permian Basin Division. He and his wife, Tracey, have two sons.

Flores said there was some division in the ranks of the chamber when he assumed the post.

Midlanders honor, remember birth of Texas republic

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

It takes nine months for a baby to be born. In about the same length of time, during the later part of 1835 and early 1836, a new republic was born — the Republic of Texas.

Today, March 2, 1994, Midland celebrates Texas Independence Day — 157 years since a handful of Texans gathered at Washington on the Brazos on March 1, 1836, to announce the birth of the new republic.

The event is being celebrated beginning at 11 a.m. today at Midland Center, in the city's first community-wide Texas Independence Day celebration.

But many people will celebrate without knowing the full particulars of Texas independence.

For those who wish to brush up on Texas history, here is a brief chronology of the events that led to the birth of the Republic of Texas.

■ Mexico won its independence from Spain in 1814, and immediately began its long history of revolutions. In 1832, Gen. Antonio Lopez Santa Anna led a revolt against the centralist government in Mexico and installed himself as president.

In a crackdown on the American colonists in Texas, he suspended the Constitution of 1824 under which Texas and Coahuila were colonized. By January 1835 he sent troops to Texas to disarm the Texans and collect taxes, and created open rebellion. In August 1835, Santa Anna issued a formal proclamation of invasion against the Texas colony.

■ Oct. 2, 1835 — The first shot in the revolution is fired at Gonzales, when Mexican troops attempted to reclaim a cannon the Texans were using to defend themselves against Comanches. The Texans hoisted a flag with the words "Come And Take It." A skirmish followed and a handful of Texans easily defeated 180 Mexican troops.

■ November 1835 — The Texans realized they were at war and had to decide what they were fighting for — the overthrow of Santa Anna or an independent and free Republic of Texas. A council of representatives from around the state voted 53-13 not to declare independence but to remain loyal to Mexico and try to oust Santa Anna, restore the Constitution of 1824 and "lay the cornerstone of liberty in the great Mexican Republic."

The Texans were hopeful that people in

Grant puts UTPB's fund drive over top

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin surpassed its 1993-94 goal of $200,000 for its Partners for UT Permian Basin fund drive with the help of a $20,000 grant from the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation, according to the school's public information officer.

Collections in the fund drive, which began in April and ended in December, totaled $220,235, Terri Brooks said.

"The Davidson foundation continues to show leadership in the Permian Basin through its support for the university," said Charles Sorber, president of UTPB.

"It embodies the kind of support every institution of higher education would like to have."

Echoing Sorber's sentiments, UTPB Development Director Mike Barker said, "Once again, the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation put us over the top. Their friendship and support helped Partners have another successful year."

The Midland foundation was established in 1961 and has a history of supporting higher education, Ms. Brooks said.

Foundation Vice Chairman Steve Davidson said, "We congratulate the Permian Basin communities on their efforts in making the campaign successful and encourage them to continue to work together in supporting the university.

"We look on our contribution as an investment in the region," Davidson said.

A recent contribution of $20,000 from the Burlington Foundation — representing Meridian Oil Inc. of Midland — was not added to the 1993 campaign total, since it was received after the first of the year, Ms. Brooks said.

These funds were earmarked for use in faculty development, providing continu-

Midlander celebrates with family, friends at her 107th birthday party

By Michael Kashgarian

Mary Docket speaks what's on her mind. And that was the case at her 107th birthday party Tuesday at Terrace West Nursing Home.

"I want everything I can get," she replied when asked what she wanted for her birthday.

But "Momma Docket" — as her friends, family and caretakers call her — didn't need a pile of presents to spark some cheer. Singing her favorite song, "Amazing Grace," and a few other tunes brought a twinkle to her eye.

Asked about her favorite past-times during her century-plus life, Ms. Docket reminisced about singing and dancing.

"I love to dance. Men loved to look at

Convicted killer receives death sentence in Austin slaying

By Scott Rothschild
Associated Press Writer

SEGUIN — Kenneth Allen McDuff, one of the most brutal killers in Texas history who has been dubbed "the devil himself" by one victim's mother, was sentenced to die Tuesday for the murder of an Austin woman.

McDuff, 47, displayed no emotion when State District Judge Wilford Flowers sentenced him for the slaying of Colleen Reed, who was abducted from an Austin carwash Dec. 29, 1991.

McDuff also received two terms of life in prison for aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault in the disappearance of Ms. Reed, a 28-year-old secretary for the Lower Colorado River Authority whose body has never been found.

It was the third death sentence for McDuff, who has spent about half of his life in prison.

His escape of a 1968 death sentence, his subsequent parole in 1990 and killings since then have become a symbol of a criminal justice system gone haywire.

McDuff's case led to changes in state parole practices that are designed to make it more difficult for violent criminals to win release.

Ms. Reed's sister, Lori Bible, who has aggressively championed prosecution of McDuff, said he got what he deserved.

"She died a horrible death . . . and the guys who did this to her are going to pay for it," Ms. Bible said.

McDuff's chief accuser in the Reed case was his accomplice, Alva Hank Worley, 36, who faces capital murder charges but has not been tried yet.

Worley testified that he and McDuff abducted Ms. Reed. As they drove north to Bell County, Worley said Ms. Reed was repeatedly raped, beaten and tortured by being burned with cigarettes.

He said he last saw Ms. Reed when McDuff placed her in the trunk of his car and said he was going to "use her up."

Worley said he confessed to police because he had a guilty conscience. McDuff's attorneys accused Worley of testifying against McDuff to try to get a reduced charge.

McDuff denied killing Ms. Reed.

Donations

When the Saint Vincent de Paul truck comes to collect clothes and other castoff items for the needy, sometimes intended donations are already gone.

"This is so sad because those donations are to help people who would otherwise be without anything," said Bru Meach of Saint Vincent de Paul's Thrift store.

"Lately donations are being picked up from porches and driveways by someone else," Ms. Meach said. She encourages people calling the society to not set things out too far in advance of the intended arrival of the collection truck.

"Whenever possible, we can call before we come to collect," she said, allowing that there will be times when people who work must leave items outside hours in advance of a truck arriving.

The Saint Vincent de Paul Society gives freewill gifts of food, clothing, shelter, household appliances, furniture and the payment of utility bills.

"We just want people to be watchful of their donations if possible. We are losing too many," Ms. Meach said.

New hotline

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Health is offering a new telephone hotline for parents and care providers who are having a hard time getting the services they need for "medically fragile" children.

Such children, with complex and chronic medical conditions, require sophisticated medical procedures or devices to stay alive.

Health Commissioner David Smith stressed Tuesday that the number is to help families find resources. It should not be used to discuss medical treatment or for medical emergencies, he said.

The hotline number is 1-800-252-8023.

Volunteers

LUFKIN — College students bored with fun in the sun or skiing over spring break can volunteer their labor to the U.S. Forest Service.

Green Spring Fling allows students to work with the agency on trail maintenance, restoration of campgrounds, plant surveys and even an archaeological dig.

Forest Service official Alan Newman said students will receive $11 per day for food and will be reimbursed for job-related transportation costs.

The federal agency also will provide free camping, tools and safety equipment, plus future job references, said Newman.

Green Spring Fling began in 1993.

Interested students should call 409-639-8574.

BIRTH: City commemorates state's birth

other Mexican states would join the revolt against Santa Anna, but when that did not happen they would declare independence.

Historians speculate that if a revolution shared by Texans and Mexicans had been successful in planting the seeds of American-style democracy in Mexico, it might have altered the course of history for North America. Mexico may not have lost Texas, California, Arizona and New Mexico and may have become a world power.

Instead, Mexico has struggled from the effects of dictators, despots, juntas, revolutions and corruption. The present conflict in Chiapas is a reminder that the struggle for dignity for the ordinary citizen continues.

■ Dec. 5, 1835 — Ben Milam and a force of 300 volunteers waged house to house combat with a force of 1,000 Mexican troops in San Antonio and forced their surrender. Gen. Martin Perfecto de Cos was paroled to Mexico on his promise that he not fight again against Texas. By the end of 1835 all Mexican troops had been driven out of Texas.

■ Feb. 23, 1836 — Learning that Santa Anna is much closer than expected, Texas forces take refuge in the Alamo.

■ Feb. 24, 1836 — William Travis sends his passionate plea for reinforcements to: "The People of Texas and all American in the World." In the letter he pledges "victory or death."

■ March 1, 1836 — The Consultation of the Chosen, which had elected in November to remain loyal to Mexico, meets again upon hearing of Santa Anna's atrocities in northern Mexico. The group fears that death might be in store for all Texans, including women and children. This time the mood is for independence and war.

Borrowing heavily from the U.S. Declaration of Independence, member George C. Childress quickly forms a committee and frames the Texas Declaration of Independence.

■ March 2, 1836 — Childress and the committee present the declaration to the 59 delegates meeting at Washington on the Brazos and all sign it. Stephen F. Austin was not present; he was in the United States trying to raise funds and an army.

■ March 6, 1836 — Having been surrounded by Santa Anna's army of 5,000, the 182 Texans at the Alamo were awakened at dawn by the chilling "Dueguello" — the Spanish bugle call of fire and death.

When the fighting was over, 1,500 of Mexico's finest fighting men had been killed, along with the 182 defenders of the Alamo. All inside the Alamo died thinking they were fighting for the liberation of Mexico, because word of the Texas Declaration of Independence had not yet reached them.

■ March 17, 1836 — The Constitutional Convention, still meeting at Washington on the Brazos, hammers out a constitution for the Republic of Texas. Again much of it was based on the U.S. Constitution. David G. Burnet, becomes the first president of Texas; Lorenzo de Zavala, vice president; Samuel Carson, secretary of state; Thomas Rush, secretary of war; Robert Potter, secretary of navy and Davis Thomas, attorney general.

■ March 21, 1836 — After butchering James Fannin's army at Goliad, Santa Anna chases Sam Houston's forces across Texas for six weeks, burning and looting all along the way, in what has been called the Runaway Scrape. Texas familes actually left food on the table, fleeing in front of Santa Anna.

However, on this date, it was to be payback time. As the Mexican army took an afternoon siesta at San Jacinto, Sam Houston and his army slipped to within 200 yards of the enemy camp then charged. In only 18 minutes, 1,000 Texans had killed 630 Mexicans and captured 730. Only nine Texans were killed in what military historians have described as one of the classic battles of history.

In the battle, Sam Houston was wounded. Santa Anna was captured and used as a pawn to remove Mexican troops from Texas.

Texas remained an independent republic until Feb. 16, 1846, when it became the 28th state in the Union. Then the authority of the Republic of Texas was transferred to the Union and the Lone Star flag was lowered and given to Sam Houston. Anson Jones, the last president of the Republic finalized the ceremony: "The Republic of Texas is no more."

Standoff ends with Austin man's death

AUSTIN (AP) — A 32-year-old man was killed in a gunbattle with police Tuesday, ending a 9-hour standoff in which the armed man holed up in his apartment with his 2½-year-old daughter, authorities said.

The child and lawmen surrounding the apartment weren't injured, according to Austin Police spokeswoman Gail Phillips.

Police were standing by after negotiations had broken off when the man suddenly exited his apartment shortly after 6 a.m. and fired at authorities, Ms. Phillips said.

The gunman was hit with a single shot and pronounced dead at the scene, Ms. Phillips said.

The man had been holed up in his apartment since about 9 p.m. Monday, when police responded to a 911 call reporting an attempted suicide at the man's residence, Ms. Phillips said.

He fired several shots at police early in the siege, but never threatened his daughter, Ms. Phillips said.

The girl was returned to her mother Tuesday.

"He had fired several rounds at officers responding to a reported suicide attempt," she said. "Throughout the negotiations, he was firing erratically at adjoining apartments. At least three shots were fired through the walls."

No other residents were injured, Ms. Phillips said.

A hostage negotiator and a SWAT team were called to the scene, and the 372-unit apartment complex where the man lived was evacuated.

Police said a dispute erupted between the man and his wife and that she went to a neighbor's apartment where a 911 call reporting an attempted suicide was placed.

The man's wife told police that her husband had been unemployed and was despondent for some time.

Ms. Phillips said two officers who fired their weapons during the standoff, including the one who shot the gunman, had been placed on administrative leave as a formality while the incident is investigated.

Journalist files slander lawsuit against reporters

WACO, Texas (AP) — A Waco television reporter who covered last year's botched raid of David Koresh's home has filed a $15 million libel lawsuit against two other journalists and their employers.

John McLemore, a reporter for KWTX-TV, alleges that statements made on television by reporters Kathy Fair of the Houston Chronicle and Valeri Williams of WFAA-TV in Dallas implied he was to blame for the deaths of four federal agents killed in the raid.

Also named in the lawsuit filed in state court Monday are the Hearst Corp., which owns the Chronicle; the A.H. Belo Corp., which owns WFAA-TV; and Belo Productions Inc., which operates the Dallas station.

The suit alleges that Ms. Fair libeled McLemore during a March 1993 appearance on ABC's "Nightline," claiming she "stated or otherwise inferred" that a Waco television reporter intentionally alerted Branch Davidians of the impending raid.

McLemore was the only television reporter present when Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents assaulted the religious sect's compound near Waco. Six Davidians also died in the raid.

Ms. Williams "republished and elaborated upon" Ms. Fair's comments for WFAA-TV, the ABC affiliate in Dallas, the suit said.

Belo attorney Michael J. McCarthy said Tuesday he had not seen the lawsuit and would not comment until he reviewed it. Neither the Chronicle nor McLemore had any immediately comment Tuesday.

KWTX news director Rick Bradfield said he "didn't really have anything to say about it." McLemore is acting alone and the station is not involved, he said.

A Treasury Department review of the raid said a chance meeting that morning between KWTX photographer Jim Peeler and a mailman, who turned out to be a Davidian, alerted Koresh of the raid.

Scott Lovett, Texas National Bank, with Neill McClung, Southwest Royalties Real Estate

In mid-December, Neill McClung came to Scott Lovett at Texas National Bank with a loan request to finance the acquisition of Plaza Center, a Midland retail establishment located on Wadley at Garfield. Neill proposed an aggressive marketing plan to be executed by an energetic new management team. At Texas National we saw a great opportunity to "change things for the better". Within ten days of listening to Neill's plans, the purchase was closed. Plaza Center will soon have a new name, a new look, and new retail opportunities, but we'll let Neill surprise you with those. Meanwhile, come see us at Texas National Bank, and let us listen to your business ideas. We're Midland's Banker.

A Midland teen-ager was back in custody after escaping briefly from officers Monday, according to a police report.

The 16-year-old black male escaped at 3:30 p.m. from custody of a Midland police detective who was transporting the juvenile to Culver Youth Home, according to the report. The juvenile was in custody for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, according to the report.

The juvenile was recaptured after a few minutes inside the juvenile probation office, 602 N. Baird. He will now be charged with escape and resisting arrest in addition to the first charge, according to the report.

handle it and move forward," he said.

A new area being tackled by the chamber is international trade, Flores said. Hispanic chamber officials have hired Fernando DeLarosa, an international trade specialist who will focus on ways to further Midland's economic development through trade with other countries.

Chamber officials are working with people in the Mexican government, attempting to establish airline flights between that country and Midland International Airport.

If successful, this could eventually establish Midland as a hub for Mexican flights and could enhance the Interstate 27 project. Midland officials are fighting to extend that highway to Interstate 20, connecting in Midland. "That's something important to us," Flores said.

Work is in the first phase on a chamber project to build Unity Park on Lamesa Road. The park is expected to be completed in about a year, Flores said.

Flores intends to work closely with the Midland Independent School District, identifying ways to assist in MISD plans.

"We try to focus on MISD's direction so we can provide assistance. We definitely don't want to go in different directions," he said.

The Hispanic chamber's membership drive has been very successful in its first 60 days; several members have been added to assist in chamber projects, he said.

Flores and others also are evaluating some property that was donated to the chamber. One option is to establish a nursing center to serve part of the city with large minority population.

Flores said he is pleased with the chamber's new-found cohesion and sense of purpose. "It's good to get back on track . . . we had a difficult year last year," he said.

me. They thought I was the cutest little woman and I did too," she said.

But Ms. Docket's life wasn't all song and dance.

Family members said she began working as a young child and continued into her 90s. During her younger years, she chopped and picked cotton. More recently, she worked as a cook for local families.

Born March 1, 1887, near Calvert where she was raised, Ms. Docket has lived more than 40 years in Midland. She attributes her longevity to clean living and being an honest Christian.

Ms. Docket lived on her own until 102 when she moved in the nursing home.

"I'm going to be honest, this lady's strong," said her grandson Roy Dell Johnson of Arlington.

In addition to Johnson, Ms. Docket has 14 other grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren, 16 great-great-grandchildren and a few great-great-great-grandchildren.

Her caretakers said Ms. Docket is in good health and maintains a spicy spirit.

Maria Enriquez, a restorative aide, said Ms. Docket will participate in exercises "when we've got some good music."

Overall, Ms. Docket maintains a friendly relationship with those around her, although she does talk her mind, caregivers agreed.

"She doesn't hold back nothing," nurse Willie Mae Hayes said. "She talks about the women more. She'll tell you in a minute 'Look at that big butt.'" ing education opportunities for instructors.

A great number of organizations and individuals from communities around the Permian Basin provided funds for the Partners drive, Ms. Brooks said.

These funds will be used for student scholarships, faculty development, student recruitment and other UTPB programs.

Funds raised in the previous year provided $30,000 in scholarships last year, she said.

U.S., Russia broker pacts for peace

WASHINGTON — Working on parallel diplomatic fronts, the United States and Russia brokered separate agreements Tuesday that were meant to move Bosnia-Herzegovina closer to peace.

In Moscow, Russia succeeded in persuading the leader of the Bosnian Serbs to permit the reopening of the airfield near the Bosnian Muslim town of Tuzla for relief flights of food and medicine.

In Washington, negotiators for the Muslim-dominated Bosnian government and the Bosnian Croats signed a framework agreement to unite the parts of the country that are under their control.

While the United States and Russia have a general agreement that Washington will pursue the Bosnian Muslims and Moscow will work on its Serbian friends, the separate diplomatic negotiations do not a represent a carefully orchestrated effort to end the 23-month war in Bosnia, which has cost more than 200,000 lives.

Indeed, senior American officials acknowledged that the United States was not even aware of the details of the latest Russian plan that was accepted in Moscow on Tuesday by Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic after Russia promised to send its own observers to the Tuzla airfield.

While the two initiatives reflect the common desire in both capitals to find a formula for peace, the Russians are also motivated by a determination to foreclose any use of military force against the Serbs, who share the Orthodox Christian religion with the Russians.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has threatened air strikes against the Serbs if they refuse to allow the airport to open by next Monday.

Karadzic, announced the concession on Tuzla after meeting Tuesday with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev. The decision came a day after NATO fighter jets shot down four Serbian airplanes that the Western alliance said had violated a U.N.-appointed no-flight zone.

It was the second time in less than a month that the Bosnian Serbs have made major concessions under the protective arm of Russia, in the face of Western threats of force. Last week, Russia persuaded them to remove their heavy guns from hills ringing Sarajevo before NATO carried out its threat to bomb them.

But senior administration officials said that Russia would be allowed to send observers to the airport only under the auspices of the U.N. peacekeeping force.

In a last-minute, but elaborately choreographed signing ceremony held by Secretary of State Warren Christopher in the State Department, Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic of Bosnia, Foreign Minister Mate Granic of Croatia and Kresimir Zubak, the political leader of the Bosnian Croats, signed an accord to create a Swiss-like federation of cantons or municipalities made up of areas where the majority of the population is either Muslim or Croat.

The cantons will have authority over police, education, culture, housing, public services, tourism and radio and television.

Both populations would enjoy equal protection under the law, with a central government responsible for foreign affairs, national defense and commerce.

In a separate signing, Silajdzic also accepted a preliminary accord with Granic to join the joint Muslim-Croatian entity in Bosnia in a financial and economic confederation with the Republic of Croatia.

Although Christopher and the negotiators heralded the accord as a breakthrough, its obvious deficiency is that it does not deal with the Serbian faction in Bosnia.

Farming officials: Killer bees head to Southern California

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — Floods. Wildfires. Earthquakes. And now, killer bees.

Just when California doesn't need another natural disaster, farming officials say Africanized honeybees should be buzzing into Southern California any day now.

Their first stop will be Imperial County, the remote desert and farm region just across the Colorado River from Yuma, Ariz., where the bees were last spotted.

They could arrive in neighboring San Diego County by summer and complete the 210-mile journey northwest to Los Angeles by fall.

"It's very possible they're already on the California side," said Gary Reece, chief of agricultural services for San Diego County. "There's only the Colorado River to stop them and that's not much of a barrier."

The killer bees, a mix of African and more common European strains, were brought to Brazil from Africa in 1956 by an entomologist. They escaped and have been working their way from South America to North America ever since.

The first swarm reached the United States in 1990, in the small town of Hidalgo, Texas. The bees also have been spotted in Arizona and Nevada.

In 1985, a small swarm was found inside an oil-well pipe in Kern County, north of Los Angeles. Officials killed the bees, and later determined they were an isolated group, brought into the United States on the pipe, imported from South America. Unlike the new swarm, those bees were not part of a natural northward migration, scientists said.

Despite the bees' fearsome name, experts say their venom is nearly identical to that of the more common European honeybee.

But killer bees are much more aggressive. They are more likely to attack in swarms if a nest is disturbed, and to pursue human intruders for greater distances.

Killer bees have caused at least one death in the United States. Last summer, an 82-year-old Texas man was attacked by a swarm after pouring gasoline on a hive.

EPA orders cuts in toxic pollutants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chemical plants will have to sharply reduce the release of toxic pollutants into the air under regulations issued Tuesday by the Environmental Protection Agency.

EPA Administrator Carol Browner called the new rules "a landmark for public health" that will reduce the amount of toxic air releases from chemical plants by 88 percent below 1990 levels.

Anticipating the new requirement, which stems from the 1990 Clean Air Act, major companies already have moved toward the reduction goals. The companies have three years to meet the requirements.

"This is the most far-reaching effort ever taken to reduce air toxics," said Browner, because it attacks "the single biggest industrial source of toxic air pollution in America — emissions from chemical plants."

The regulations, which are 15 months overdue, call on the industry to install the best available pollution-control equipment at 370 chemical plants. The companies also have to better monitor equipment leaks and take other precautions to reduce air releases during production, storage and transportation.

"Virtually every chemical facility will have at least some processes affected by this," said Ted Cromwell of the Chemical Manufacturers Association.

The EPA estimates the tighter emission controls will capture 506,000 tons of toxic chemicals once fully installed, based on 1990 chemical release estimates. The new requirements will affect chemical plants in 38 states, but the greatest impact will be in Louisiana, Texas and New Jersey where chemical manufacturing facilities are concentrated.

He's One Effective Crime Fighter.

Since violent criminals only serve an average of 1/3 of their sentences, Lamar Smith believes we need more prisons and Washington can help us build them.

He's our Congressman, Lamar Smith – the only Texas Republican on the House Crime Subcommittee.

Where he's fighting for new programs to crack down on crime.

Like help from Washington to help states and communities build more prisons.

So violent offenders have a place to go and can stay there longer, without the opportunity for early release.

He's working for tougher federal sentences for violent crime and a workable federal death penalty.

And pushing hard to reform the exclusionary rule so violent criminals don't get off on technicalities.

Lamar is leading the fight to keep the Clinton Administration from closing down 500 anti-drug task forces which coordinate efforts of law enforcement to stop drug trafficking.

And he's been a leader in stiffening penalties for illegal aliens who commit crimes.

Somewhere in America, a murder is committed every 21 minutes, a rape every 5 minutes, a robbery every 46 seconds, and an aggravated assault every 29 seconds.

The horror will not stop until the message to criminals is clear — if you commit a crime, you'll do the time...all the time.

Prices rebound

Crude oil futures rebounded Tuesday after a two-day slide on the New York Mercantile Exchange as Arab members of OPEC prepared for a weekend meeting that could yield progress toward cutting production.

West Texas Intermediate for April delivery rose 19 cents to $14.67 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $13 a barrel.

April contracts for natural gas fell 2.8 cents to $2.18 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Oil rallied on "vague hopes and even vaguer fears," said Peter Beutel, president of Cameron Hanover Inc., a Bronxville, N.Y., investment research firm.

Hopes included the prospect that oil ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council, a subset of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, will make progress toward reducing crude production at their meeting Saturday.

Some OPEC members have recently indicated support for production cuts, but only if all 13 nations cooperate.

The rally also reflected expectations for a seasonal rise in heating oil and gasoline prices and fears that Middle East tensions could rise to the point of affecting oil production, Beutel said.

A weekly American Petroleum Institute report released after the close of trading showed a steeper-than-expected decline in U.S. crude stocks last week. Stocks fell 7.8 million barrels to 325.67 million, the trade group said.

Distillate stocks, which include heating oil, also fell more than had been expected. Gasoline stocks rose, contrary to market expectations for a decline.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar closed higher against most major European currencies Tuesday after the government reported the economy grew much faster than expected in the last quarter of 1993.

In late trading in New York, the dollar was quoted at 104.595 yen, down from 104.60 yen late Monday.

In New York, the British pound was quoted at $1.4894, more expensive than $1.4865 late Monday.

Stocks tumble

NEW YORK — The stock market ended broadly lower Tuesday as investors worried about rising interest rates and inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 22.79 to 3,809.23.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Among other major market indicators, the Standard & Poors index of 500 stocks fell 2.70 to 464.44, while the NYSE's composite index fell 1.42 to 257.81. The Nasdaq composite index, meanwhile, lost 3.86 to 788.64.

Growth pace renews inflation fear

■ Gross Domestic Product rose a torrid 7.5 percent during final quarter of 1993, government reports.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy showed more strength in the last three months of 1993 than it has in nearly 10 years, helping to renew inflation jitters that the Clinton administration tried to calm.

The Gross Domestic Product rose at a torrid 7.5 percent rate during the final quarter last year, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday as it revised its own 5.9 percent estimate of a month ago.

The recent slide in stock prices accelerated with the news. The Dow Jones industrial average had lost nearly 42 points by midafternoon.

The government's latest measure of the nation's total output of goods and services easily exceeded the projection of most economists and was the best performance since a 7.9 percent advance in the first three months of 1984.

"The economy looks terrific, maybe too good," said Allen Sinai, economist with Lehman Brothers in New York City. "More quickly than expected, the gap between demand and supply is being wiped out, setting up the potential for higher inflation."

But President Clinton said there is little reason to fear the economy is overheating.

"What we've got to try to do is to keep working to bring the deficit down, to keep interest rates down ... to try to keep the economy going to have more investment so we can create more jobs," he said.

Added Commerce Secretary Ron Brown: "This gain in GDP suggests dramatic improvements in the economy's productivity and unit labor costs, good signs indicating inflation will remain low."

Contributing to inflation concerns, a survey of purchasing managers showed manufacturing prices rose more rapidly in February than in over three years. Manufacturing output expanded for the sixth straight month.

Analysts said the Federal Reserve Board, which nudged short-term interest rates from 3 percent to 3¼ percent a month ago, probably will push them up another quarter point soon — perhaps this week.

But many economists said growth already is slowing this year, held back by harsh winter weather in much of the nation and the Los Angeles earthquake.

Providing fresh evidence Tuesday that the pace is slackening, the National Association of Realtors said sales of existing homes fell 3 percent in January due to the weather and rising mortgage rates.

In another report, the Commerce Department said construction spending slipped in January by 1.2 percent, the first decline in nine months.

The fourth-quarter GDP surge was fueled largely by a consumer spending spree encouraged by low interest rates, and a better-than-expected rise in exports that is not likely to be duplicated soon.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill in Lexington, Mass., predicted consumers will pull back because workers' incomes are rising only moderately.

"We just don't think the buying power is out there," she said. "The savings rate is nearly at a record low."

The administration and many private economists continue to predict moderate growth this year of around 3 percent to 3.5 percent and a similar rise in inflation, only slightly worse than last year's 2.7 percent jump in the cost of living.

Despite jitters on Wall Street and in the bond markets, the latest government reports show inflation in check.

An inflation index tied to the GDP rose at an annual rate of 1.3 percent in the fourth quarter, the smallest gain since 1 percent in the summer of 1992.

Pogo Producing drills course to prosperity

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

If ever a self-improvement book is written for oil companies, a chapter or two would deal with Pogo Producing Co.

Following the crash of 1986, the company has managed to do a lot of things that have gone straight to the bottom line. In less than six years it has managed — through a combination of smart moves, good management and spending restraint — to transform itself from being debt-heavy and unbalanced in reserves to being one of the leanest, most successful and well-balanced large independents in the business.

The company has reduced debt from $432 million to $134 million. In the process, it has scored consistently in big exploration plays, while replacing reserves year after year. Last year, it replaced 204 percent of reserves; this year it has replaced 143 percent.

Part of that growth and success came in the Delaware Sands of New Mexico, where the company has put together one of the longest-running success stories.

In January, the company drilled its 154th Delaware well on the New Mexico side of the Permian Basin and it was a dry hole. The other 153, however, were all producers — not a single dry hole in three years.

"I don't know if the drilling of 153 straight producers is a record or not," said Paul Van Wagenen, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of the Houston-based company.

"But I do know that to drill that many wells with a division office of only 10 has to be some kind of record."

Van Wagenen and a contingent of Pogo executives were in Midland Tuesday for a Wildcat Committee Reception at the Petroleum Club.

Van Wagenen said the Delaware streak was indicative of what a small, flexible, hard-working staff could do for an oil company.

He said the Western Division office in Midland only had 10 people. In addition to Jerry Cooper, vice president and Western Division manager, the Midland office has two geologists, two engineers, two landmen and three technical support people.

Executives said the company has a healthy appreciation for the Permian Basin and said they are in the process of looking for even more opportunities and would probably get involved in several major 3-D shoots.

Despite low oil prices, Van Wagenen said Pogo has committed to go forward in 1994 with a capital budget of $75 million — about what the company spent last year. In that budget is 54 wells in the Permian Basin.

"We hope maybe to even increase that a little later in the year," said Van Wagenen, who is one of a handful of lawyers who are running large oil companies.

He graduated magna cum laude from Brigham Young University in Bad weather, rates chill buys of used homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harsh winter weather and rising interest rates slowed sales of previously owned homes in January, but they remained at the second highest level ever, a real estate trade group reported Tuesday.

Every region in the nation posted declining sales, including the West where analysts said the effects of the Los Angeles earthquake had offset more temperate temperatures.

Analysts believe housing activity slipped again in February because of continuing inclement weather but will regain strength as spring approaches.

"What we lose in terms of activity now, we'll make up later in the year," maintained John A. Tuccillo, an economist with the National Association of Realtors.

The Realtors said sales of existing homes slipped 3 percent, to 4.22 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate from December's record 4.35 million.

In another report illustrating the effects of the harsh winter, the Commerce Department said construction spending on private and government projects was off 1.2 percent in January, the first decline in nine months.

Residential, non-residential and government spending totaled $505.5 billion, down from a record $511.7 billion in December and the first drop since a similar 1.2 percent fall in April 1993.

The value of residential construction was up just 0.5 percent, including a 0.7 percent increase in single-family homes. But spending on multi-family construction plunged 7.1 percent.

Union Pacific acquires Amax for $725 million

Associated Press

Union Pacific Corp. said Tuesday that its oil and gas subsidiary, Union Pacific Resources Co., has agreed to acquire Amax Oil & Gas for about $725 million.

The purchase, which represents all the gas and oil assets of Cyprus Amax Minerals Co., is expected to close in about 30 days.

Union Pacific will pay $819 million in cash for the Amax shares, but will then sell Amax's northern division to Questar Corp.'s Universal Resources subsidiary for $94.5 million.

Bethlehem, Pa.-based Union Pacific said it will retain Amax's natural gas producing properties in Texas and Louisiana.

Denver-based Cyprus Amax Minerals was created in November when Cyprus Minerals Co. and Amax Inc. merged.

Wal-Mart begins staying open 24 hours a day

By Mella McEwen

Effective March 1, WAL-MART at 4715 Billingsley Blvd. has begun staying open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Store officials note, however, that some special divisions such as the jewelry counter and pharmacy will keep their regular hours.

As construction on a new 200,000-square-foot Wal-Mart Superstore continues, the current location has received supercenter status, officials said, and extended its hours in preparation for staying open 24 hours when the new store opens.

Just opened at 310 W. Texas Ave., in the former Kountry Burger location in the Building of the Southwest, is PATTY'S PLACE.

Patty Poole, who owns the restaurant with husband Ronny, said it is "your basic cafe-type restaurant," open Monday through Friday.

It serves breakfast from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m., then lunch from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The lunch menu includes a wide variety of sandwiches, hamburgers, soups, and there is a salad bar. Desserts include cookies, pies and Blue Bell ice cream.

Dine-in is available — the restaurant seats 86 — and carry-out also is available.

To serve Midland's central business district, Poole said, delivery is available from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and catering of breakfast items such as coffee and danishes or lunch items is available with a day's advance notice.

Midland High School students get a 15 percent discount.

Coming soon to Midland Park Mall is NINA B's.

The store, going into the former Stuart's location next to Casual Corner, is part of a national chain carrying women's fashions.

On the move is NEW CASTLE GAP JEWELRY INC., which has moved from the Courtyard shopping center to 4703 N. Midkiff Road, the former Lee Reese Applances location between Burger King and Avis Lube.

Owner Dean Powell said the new location is three times larger than the old and is more visible.

The move allows New Castle Gap not only to sell its traditional line of Indian jewelry but to add lines of minerals, fossils, lapidary equipment and tools.

Powell added that he also offers classes in silversmithing, bead stringing, making gem trees, "a variety of things associated with the lapidary and rock and gem area."

Service businesses live, die on job commitment

By Jim Barlow
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Service businesses live and die on the commitment of their employees.

Few know that better than Southwest Airlines. Their employees are the prime reason the airline's been the only consistently profitable U.S. airline in the past decade.

Through design — and luck — Southwest developed a unique culture: a willingness to get the job done combined with an irreverent attitude.

An example of that attitude came from the Southwest flight attendant who told me and my fellow passengers during the mandatory safety briefing, "Now, for the benefit of those of you who have not ridden in a car in the last 20 years — this is a seat belt."

Southwest hires very carefully for that attitude and then works hard to keep it going.

Colleen Barrett, one of three executive vice presidents of the company and its director of passenger services, also heads the company's formal culture committee.

As the airline grows and its reach gets farther away from its Dallas headquarters, it becomes harder to keep everyone singing on the same page. It's the job of the culture committee — composed of members from all ranks and locations — to keep those pages turned.

The airline's long and complicated hiring process looks for the obvious things, Barrett says.

"But we have a far heavier emphasis (then most companies) on a sense of humor. We want a person who doesn't take himself too seriously and can roll with punches."

Potential hires may be interviewed four or five times before a decision is made. Usually one of those interviews includes three people with whom the new hire will work to see if the new person would mesh with the group.

"That's paid handsome dividends for us," Barrett says. "Three heads are better than one."

And when the company does make a mistake in hiring, it's fellow employees who usually come to the boss and say the guy isn't fitting in, Barrett says.

But that long interviewing process is creating some problems as Southwest tidies up the details of its recent purchase of Salt Lake City-based Morris Air for $134 million worth of Southwest stock.

Herb Kelleher, chairman of Southwest, says the airline will hire about three-fourths of the 2,000 employees at Morris. As part of the contract with Southwest's unionized pilots, the Morris pilots have already been hired — and placed at the bottom of Southwest's pilot seniority list.

DRILLS: Pogo Producing transforms itself

(From 1C)

Following the Delaware play and other moves, reserves are now balanced at about 58 percent for oil and 42 percent for gas. "That's about where we want to be," Van Wagenen said.

One successful project that has added to the reserve balance and increase is a major discovery in Thailand on the Tantawan structure, in which Pogo owns 31.6 percent. Three wells in the discovery have completed for: 8,860 bopd and 40.6 Mmcfd in one well; 70 Mmcfd and 1,720 bcpd in a second well and 6,260 bopd and 25.75 Mmcfd in the discovery well.

Part of the success of the company has come from a strategy of a better balance between oil and gas reserves.

Founded in 1970 as Pennzoil Offshore Gas Operators, Pogo later spun off in 1977 as an independent company. Van Vagenen said the company looked around in the late 1980s and saw that it was heavily unbalanced for gas, with gas reserves about twice that of oil.

Cooper described the gas production in the wells as being "equal to about 80 Delaware Basin wells."

Pogo is excited about the opportunity in Thailand and plans additional exploratory drilling this year on its 2.6 million-acre tract.

The company has also scheduled more drilling in the Gulf of Mexico, where the company has 68 percent of its reserves.

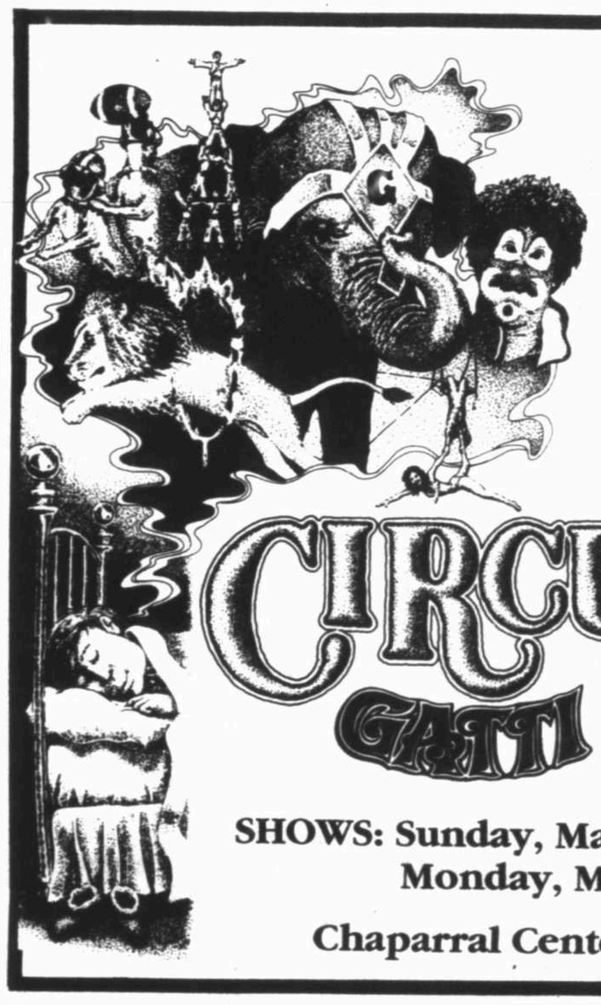

"Pogo was in the gulf in the early '70s and bought tracts that could not be bought today," Van Wagenen said. "We have many places to look for oil and gas in the gulf."

One 20-year-old block, recently developed with a drilling program, is expected to net Pogo 45-50 Mcfd beginning this month, he said.

'Stangs sweep past 'Dogs

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

One rally fell short and another never materialized as the Midland High baseball team fell in a double header, 11-7 and 9-0, to Lubbock Coronado Tuesday at Angel Stadium.

With the losses, Midland fell to 1-2 for the season while Coronado improved to 4-1.

The Bulldogs fell behind early in both games behind the strong Mustang bats but they rallied in the first game in what was clearly their best effort.

MHS coach Rick Wood said his team may be young but it doesn't give up.

"First off, they (Coronado) hit the ball well but when they jumped out to that big lead (7-0 in the top of the third) I was really proud that our kids were able to come back. They're a young team and for them to show that kind of fight is important."

The Mustangs took a 2-0 lead early but could not manage to pull farther ahead as the Bulldog defense stopped the next three Coronado hitters in timely fashion in the second.

But a deadly third inning was the undoing of Midland sophomore pitcher Keith Lant. He walked the first batter, Coronado's Barry Ledbetter who then stole second. Brian Fox and Chad Reed both had singles for Coronado, with Reed scoring Ledbetter.

Bears knock off Aggies in double OT

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Jerome Lambert scored a game-high 20 points and Nelson Haggerty hit a key 3-pointer and provided 12 assists to lead Baylor to a 95-92 victory over Texas A&M in double overtime Tuesday night.

Texas A&M (17-7 overall, 10-2 in the Southwest Conference) led 44-38 at halftime and kept a slight lead until Baylor (14-10, 5-7) tied it at 72 with a free throw by Doug Brandt.

David Edwards answered with a field goal and free throw for a 75-72 A&M lead. Aundre Branch scored a free throw and Lambert banked in a field goal with 31 seconds left to tie at 75. Lambert then blocked an Edwards shot with five seconds left to send the game into overtime.

The Aggies jumped out to a four-point lead as Lance Broderson hit a jumper and McGinnis hit two free throws.

Lambert dunked on a feed from Haggerty to make it 79-77. Haggerty then fouled Edwards with 22 seconds left and Edwards got only one free throw for an 80-77 lead. Haggerty came back with a 3-pointer with 15 seconds left to bring up a second overtime at 80-80.

'Dogs find net, victory

■ After a first half of missed opportunities, Midland High gets two second-half goals to beat Abilene Cooper 3-0 and maintain a two-game lead in District 5-5A soccer.

Midland High missed a net full of chances to score Tuesday against Abilene Cooper. But after a 3-0 victory, the Bulldogs have yet to miss a chance to win this season.

The District 5-5A leaders got two second-half goals from senior forward Ross Hunter and moved closer to the district soccer championship in the game played at Midland High. The Bulldogs now cling even more tightly to first place at 9-0, 14-0 overall. They lead Abilene High, 3-2 winners over Midland Lee Tuesday, by two games with three games remaining. It was the Bulldogs fourth straight shutout.

"We played kind of sluggish in the first half," Bulldogs coach Tom Esikhati said. "We didn't score be-

Oilers want new dome to roam

■ $235 million stadium would be convertible like Alamodome.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams said Tuesday it's time for the city that built the world's first indoor stadium — the Astrodome — to add another dome to its skyline.

He also wants reluctant Houston residents to ante up $160 million for a $235 million downtown facility while the Oilers contribute $75 million for their new home.

"I call this a significant day in Houston sports history," Adams said before showing reporters schematic plans for the new dome. "You're going to see the unveiling of the stadium of the 21st century."

Ron Labinski of the Kansas City, Mo., architectural firm Hellmuth, Obata and Kassaburm, Inc., which designed the Alamodome in San Antonio, said the proposed Houston facility represents a new generation of domes.

Like the Alamodome, where the NBA San Antonio Spurs play, the Houston dome would be convertible.

It would seat 75,000 for football. For other events, seating could be reduced and a ceiling would drop down from the roof to give the arena a more intimate atmosphere, Labinski said.

Seats could also be easily rearranged, and the entire conversion would take no longer than eight hours, he said.

Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams displays his model of a proposed Houston dome stadium.

"It will be the first stadium in the world to feature this high-tech convertibility providing for the ultimate in versatility," Labinski said. "If you were sitting in this arena, there is no way you would feel that you were anywhere but in an arena."

The basketball and hockey configuration would normally seat 24,000, Labinski said. The ceiling could be raised to include seating for up to 40,000 for such events as the NCAA Final Four tournament.

Adams said he is dissatisfied with the Astrodome, a round stadium construct-

Shining Monday lights 4-5A honor

You could almost call Monday night's high school basketball playoff games double overtime with mixed results.

Williamson

Midland High landed a berth for Friday's Region I tournament at Chaparral Center with a 64-62 overtime win over Amarillo Tascosa while Midland Lee lost to Abilene Cooper 74-72 in overtime before close to 3,000 fans in Abilene to fall from the playoffs.

It was a night that will be long remembered around the District 4-5A camp fires. It was a night the district was an apt overall overtime winner.

To be quite honest, District 4-5A basketball has not been a dominant force in Region I play in almost two decades. Prior to Monday, only two teams (Midland High in 1981 and Abilene High in 1988) have ever gotten to the Region I tournament since it moved to Chaparral Center.

Suddenly that number has doubled with Midland High and Cooper gaining half the Region I berths this year. In another history making move, Midland High becomes the first 4-5A second place team ever to reach the heights of Region I glory.

And history was written again when Lee and Cooper met Monday in the region quarterfinals. That was the first playoff game ever played between 4-5A opponents. You know when that happens, the district has had a successful year.

Of course, Lee is the odd man out in this scenario. Two Region I berths by one district is the maximum that can be earned. And history would be further served if Cooper and MHS were to meet in the Region I finals at 11 a.m. Saturday. That would be the first time in 4-5A sports history that two playoff games between league opponents had taken place in the same year in any sport.

It's only natural that Lee will feel the pain of watching MHS and Cooper reap the Region I awards this weekend, but what a great season they had, producing back-to-back region quarterfinal berths and giving us one of the greatest high school basketball games to be played in 4-5A history. It may not have been the best, but it had to be close.

People will talk for years about the game between Cooper star Andrae Patterson (32 points and 18 rebounds) and Lee's Sean Low (a career high 39 points). Lee will never have to hang the head over this loss. To be part of that game will be a lasting memory, whether you came out a winner or loser.

And the Bulldogs had their own stars in exacting revenge over Tascosa. Tascosa is the team that eliminated MHS from the playoffs in the very first round last year. Now MHS has turned the tables with its own stable of stars. Post Jason Kopp had a key block in overtime to preserve the victory while junior Jumon Hailey had 25 points and Donald Carter 10 rebounds.

Midland High has been a heart attack waiting to happen, winning three playoff games by an average of 3.3 points per outing.

MHS and Cooper have the chance to move on down glory road, but Monday night alone was worth the season. District 4-5A as a whole never stood taller on one single night of play.

Abilene High clips Lee boys

ABILENE — Abilene High withstood a late Midland Lee rally to take a 3-2 win in District 5-5A soccer action here Tuesday afternoon.

Abilene is now 7-2 in district while Lee drops to 3-7 and 8-8 overall. But with third-place San Angelo falling to Odessa High 2-1, Lee is still not mathematically eliminated from the playoff race.

Trailing 2-0 early in the second half, Lee's Jeremy Warren scored at the 50 minute mark to trim Abilene High's lead to 2-1.

K.C. Gore tied up the match at the 74 minute mark, but Abilene High rallied late with three minutes to play to give the Eagles the victory.

"We played hard, we just came up short," said Lee coach Eddie Bull. "I thought we played very well under the conditions. Adam Morris played exceptionally well."

The Rebels return home Saturday against Odessa Permian at 2 p.m.

Lee girls outpoint AHS

Jamie Welch scored two goals Tuesday to lead the Midland Lee girls to a 3-1 District 5-5A soccer win over Abilene High. The win, coupled with Odessa Permian's off day, puts Lee (7-3, 11-4) alone in third place in the district.

Welch scored twice in the first 14 minutes of the game, first on a corner kick and then with an assist from Stephanie Smith. Abilene cut the Lee lead to one before halftime on a breakaway by Jackie Sapp. In the 28th minute of the second half Smith took a hard shot from inside the box that rebounded off the goalie. Rochelle Roberts scored off the rebound.

"They (AHS) had the wind in the second half and I'm real proud of the girls being able to shut them out in the second half," Lee coach Van Gravitt said.

Lee plays at Permian Saturday. A win there would clinch a tie for third.

Hayes 3-hits Midland High

Emily Hayes pitched a three-hitter Tuesday at the MUGS Complex to lead Midland Lee to a 13-1 softball win over Midland High. Hayes ran her record to 3-0. Lee is now 3-1. The Lady Rebels pitcher struck out eight Lady Bulldogs.

Hayes also had a grand slam home run in Lee's five-run fifth inning. Amy Pullen had two of Lee's 11 hits on a single and a double. Barbara Thompson had a solo home run for the Lady Rebels in the second inning. Hayes had two hits in the game and limited MHS to three singles.

Alamo Red top SJ Green

Alama Red, led by 20 points from Ritha Belizaire, beat San Jacinto Green Tuesday in eighth grade girls basketball. Krystal Mehaffey had nine points for Red and Casey Gomez had eight. Red is 4-2 going into the Odessa-Midland Postseason Tournament. Green was led by Jackie Brockington's 13 points.

In other action, Alamo Gray defeated SJ White 51-43. Camille Marshall led Gray, now 5-1, with 17 points, while Marissa Underwood had six points.

In seventh-grade girls play, San Jacinto Gold defeated Alamo White 29-14. Sara Holland scored eight points, Clarissa Leonard added six for Gold, now 6-3 on the year.

In other action, Abell Blue used 15 points from Maurion Strambler to improve to 9-0 with a 27-13 win over Alamo Gray.

Abell White topped Goodard Red 46-45 to ends its season at 9-0. Tiffani Zachary and Tamika Thurman led White with 11 points each. Crystal King had nine. Top defenders for White were Sarah Buchanan and Bonnie McMillion. Goddard's top scorer was Kelly Scarbauer.

Abell girls seventh grade soccer team defeated San Jacinto 7-0 Monday.

Katie McLane, Holly Neely, Erin King, Brett Best, Suzy Prucka, Misti Johnson and Amanda Guzman all scored for Abell, now 5-1 on the year.

Abell won a shootout with Goodard 3-2 to claim the seventh grade girls title.

Miller sets record for Spence bass

Gardendale's David Miller caught a fish that didn't get away Saturday while fishing in a Permian Bass Club tournament at Lake E.V. Spence and landed in the record books.

Miller hauled in a black bass weighing 14.13 pounds, breaking the old Spence record of 11.83 by over two full pounds.

Miller becomes a member of the Lone Star Lunker Club with the catch. He used a Nichols spinner bait on ½-ounce size and a double willow lead with white on white. He was fishing with a Quantum rod and reel.

He was fishing with his father, Gene Miller of Midland.

MHS: Hunter helps keep MHS perfect cause we were too impatient. We were passing the ball too late and the balls were getting intercepted."

From 1D

The undefeated Bulldogs had ten shots on goal and some attacks that looked like gimme goals before finally scoring with three minutes to go in the half. While they were missing chance after chance, Cooper (3-7, 8-10) was scrounging for any offense, getting only one shot in the first half.

"We dominated (the first half)," said Bulldog forward Tyler Krueger, who assisted on one of Hunter's scores and got his own goal for the first half's only score. "We kept the ball on their end of the field, we just didn't get it in the net. It was frustrating more than a concern. We knew we should be scoring."

Cooper had few chances to score and finished with only two shots on goal. But the Bulldogs still only led by one goal at 28 minutes of the second half.

Cooper goal keeper Jimmy Payne had plenty to do with Midland High's failure to complete scoring chances in the first half. Payne had six saves in the first 40 minutes and nine for the game. He made two one handed, diving saves in the first half, one on a free kick and another on a shot at the post by Sergio Mansuque.

"They were quick up front and they were getting through balls all day," Cooper coach Joel Bundick said. "We were missing our marks the first half and it caught up with us."

Midland High's offense didn't get into scoring position in the second half as much as it did the first. The Bulldogs had eleven shots before halftime and six shots after. But two of those six shots found the net and the first score virtually put the game away.

Hunter, the Bulldogs leading scorer, had a total of four shots in the second half. His second came at 68 minutes on an assist by Jason Faught. The Midland High captain broke free, dribbled for about 15 yards and shot and scored to put MHS up 2-0. Krueger assisted Hunter's second score with three minutes to go, turning what had been a close game into a near rout.

"Ross played extremely well today," Esikhati said. "He should have had more than two goals today but he held the middle, he attacked and I think he held the team together."

Krueger's score came on the Bulldogs eleventh shot on goal of the first half. He made a short run after getting an assist from Mansuque.

Midland High closes out the season on the road against last-place Odessa and at home against third-place San Angelo and second-place Abilene High.

Sports commissioners worry over player talks

BOSTON (AP) — The commissioners of the National Basketball Association and National Hockey League signaled their anxiety Tuesday about looming collective bargaining talks with their respective players unions.

"It makes more sense to spend our efforts growing the pie and sharing it rather than destroying the pie," NBA Commissioner David Stern told a group of business leaders.

"We need to have stability, we need to have prosperity that our players can share in, but most importantly that means we need to serve our fans," said Stern's NHL counterpart, Gary Bettman.

It was the first time the two men have appeared together since Bettman became NHL commissioner in late 1992. He previously was an NBA executive.

The NBA Players Association begins labor negotiations with the league this month.

Rockets break Magic's spell

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 26 points and Sam Cassell had all of his 16 points in the second half as Houston held off Orlando 97-85 Tuesday night, snapping the Magic's seven-game winning streak.

Cassell didn't score his first basket until 1:19 remained in the third quarter before equaling his season high as the Rockets ended a two-game losing streak.

Anfernee Hardaway and Dennis Scott each scored 21 points for Orlando, which remained winless in The Summit at 0-7. Olajuwon also helped hold NBA leading scorer Shaquille O'Neal to 19 points on 8-for-19 shooting and was aided underneath by Otis Thorpe's 19 rebounds.

The Rockets quickly took the lead and led 50-37 at the half, aided by the Magic's cold-shooting.

Orlando hit 50 percent in the third period, but did little to cut into Houston's lead. The Rockets took a 78-67 lead into the fourth quarter.

The Magic closed to 84-75 with 8:17 left and to 88-79 with 4:48 to go, but couldn't get closer.

Heat 110, Bucks 102

MILWAUKEE — Glen Rice scored 25 points, including 16 in the first quarter, and Grant Long had a season-high 22 as the Miami Heat went five games over the .500 mark for the first time in franchise history.

Vin Baker, who led the Bucks with 26 points, converted a three-point play that pulled Milwaukee to 108-98 with 2:11 left. After Todd Day, who finished with 23 for the Bucks, scored on a dunk, Brian Shaw answered for the Heat with a jumper that ended the surge.

Hawks 102, Timberwolves 99

ATLANTA — Danny Manning, in his home debut for the Atlanta Hawks, hit a 12-foot jumper with eight seconds left, salvaging a win over comeback-minded Minnesota.

Christian Laettner led Minnesota with 21 points, while Person finished with 16.

Mookie Blaylock set a franchise-record for steals in a quarter with six in the first period. He finished with a season-high eight to go with 14 points and 10 assists.

Bullets 109, 76ers 103

PHILADELPHIA — Pervis Ellison had season highs of 25 points and 12 rebounds as Washington beat Philadelphia, ending the Bullets' six-game losing streak and extending the 76ers' loss skid to 10.

Pacers 106, Blazers 94

INDIANAPOLIS — Rik Smits had 24 points and 13 rebounds, his fifth straight game with double figures in both, as Indiana ended Portland's six-game winning streak.

Reggie Miller scored 20 points for the Pacers, who Robinson led Portland with 17 points, Tracy Murray had 16 and Rod Strickland 14 points and 13 assists.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Chris Morris continued his tear from 3-point range by hitting a team-record six as New Jersey overcame a slow start and beat Detroit.

Morris finished with 23 points and Derrick Coleman 25 points and 15 rebounds as the Nets won their 16th game in 22 starts and went three games over .500 for the first time this season.

Isiah Thomas had 16 points and 14 assists and Joe Dumars 19 points as the Pistons lost their fourth straight and their 36th in the last 45. Detroit's 13-42 record is their worst ever after 55 games.

Hoosiers rebound with win over Illini

■ Top 25 Roundup

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Humiliated in a 50-point loss to Minnesota on Sunday, No. 17 Indiana responded Tuesday night with an 82-77 victory over Illinois.

Damon Bailey and Alan Henderson, two of the four starters who spent most of Sunday's game on the bench for reasons coach Bob Knight did not explain, led an inspired Indiana team as it extended the nation's longest home winning streak to 43 games.

Bailey, who had 22 points, made all 12 of his free throws as the Hoosiers made the Illini pay for fouling. Indiana (18-6, 11-4 Big Ten) hit 26 of 31 free throws, compared to eight of 20 by Illinois (15-9, 8-7).

Henderson, who didn't score and was pulled early in the 106-56 loss at Minnesota, had 20 points, 11 rebounds, four blocks and four assists. The only problem he had was at the free throw line where he accounted for all of Indiana's misses.

No. 18 Syracuse 71, Miami 69

MIAMI — Lawrence Moten's three-point play with 42 seconds left helped No. 18 Syracuse hold off Miami, the Hurricanes' 15th consecutive loss.

The Hurricanes, winless in 17 Big East games this season, led 69-67 until Moten made a layup as he was fouled by Jamal Johnson. Moten, who finished with 18 points, hit the free throw. The Hurricanes (7-18) missed two shots that could have won the game or forced overtime.

No. 23 Boston College 95, St. John's 76

BOSTON — Bill Curley scored 30 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in his final home game and No. 23 Boston College cruised past St. John's.

Cougs pull away from Cardinals, 95-81

HOUSTON (AP) — Tim Moore made 31 points and 11 rebounds Tuesday night, one of four Houston players who scored in double-digits to beat Lamar 95-81.

Browne led Lamar with 23 points and Keith Veney scored 17 for the Cardinals.

It was the third victory in four games for the Cougars (7-18). Lamar (10-16) has lost 21 of 23 meetings with Houston.

Playing to a 39-39 halftime tie, the Cardinals stayed close at the beginning of the second half. Lamar pulled within 64-62 on a Browne jumper, but Houston closed with a 31-19 run over the final eight minutes to put the game away.

COWBOYS: Clinton praises 'Pokes

From 1D

for the traditional ceremony honoring the NFL champion.

Quarterback Troy Aikman, running back Emmitt Smith, receiver Michael Irvin and defensive tackle Russell Maryland represented the team, joined by owner Jerry Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson.

"I think that it is just the beginning of what will doubtless be years and years and years of stunning achievement if they can just keep their goals high and keep working for them," the president said during a brief ceremony in the Roosevelt Room.

"Coach Johnson, your team has a knack for coming to the White House."

It's a knack the Cowboys will repeat if Jones has any say in the matter.

More Sports/8D

As he handed Clinton a copy of the Lombardi Trophy given to the Super Bowl winner, Jones said: "We'd like to put on this trophy 1993 Super Bowl champions, 1994 Super Bowl champions, and we're going to leave a little space open."

Jones also presented the president a fist-sized replica of the Cowboys' diamond-studded Super Bowl ring.

"If you can find someone that it fits, send him to the Dallas Cowboys," Jones told his fellow Arkansan.

Clinton admitted to "a bit of parochial pride" that the team is owned by a native of Arkansas. The Arkansas ties don't end there. Johnson, like Jones, played on the 1964 national champion Arkansas team.

A year ago the entire team was greeted in the East Room, which had been decorated for the occasion with a vast expanse of Astro-Turf complete with hash marks. A fake goal post hung between the ornate portraits of George and Martha Washington.

This time, the Cowboys chose to bring only a few players. And Clinton received them in the much smaller Roosevelt Room, which was free of Cowboys' paraphernalia.

Jones said he wanted an "intimate" ceremony this year. But he conceded that with 23 of his players free agents — many crisscrossing the country to visit other teams — scheduling conflicts arose.

DOME: Oilers propose new venue

From 1D

ed for baseball. He said it has too many seats in the end zones and not enough seats between the goal lines.

The proposed new stadium would have 40,000 seats between the goal lines, twice as many as the Astrodome.

The Houston oilman said his team can't stay in the Astrodome even if it gets a better deal on rent from Harris County, which owns the facility.

"Even if we didn't pay rent, it wouldn't work," Adams said. "It's an antiquated stadium and we have a viable plan here and we're willing to step up and put down a considerable amount of money.

"The Astrodome is a fine stadium but it's not state of the art."

Adams has plenty of selling to do before his dream dome becomes reality.

Taxpayer reaction to a new downtown stadium funded mostly with public money has been lukewarm.

Houston Astros owner Drayton McLane Jr., who operates the Astrodome for Harris County, is also opposed to Adams' idea, as is developer Kenneth Schnitzer, who manages the city-owned Summit.

Mayor Bob Lanier, who has not taken a position on the issue, said he doesn't want tax dollars used, although he hasn't ruled out using such sources as hotel taxes or gambling revenues.

Adams is courting support for the facility from Houston Rockets owner Leslie Alexander, who has been noncommittal thus far. The two owners have scheduled a meeting for later this week.

The Rockets play in the Summit, which recently announced a renovation after Adams began pitching his idea for a football-basketball dome.

The Oilers expect to propose ways of financing the project in the next two months.

BULLDOGS: CHS takes two from MHS

From 1D

Then Lant walked Mustang Cody McDonald and a single by Randy Norman scored Fox. A balk as Lant was trying to keep Norman from stealing second advanced him to third and Coronado's McDonald, who was already on third, scored. Another walk by the young Bulldog pitcher scored Norman.

The Bulldog defense finally got the second out of the inning and Lant was relieved by Shane Denson. But the damage was done as the Mustangs scored five runs in the inning to boost their score to 7-0.

Wood said two factors caused the tough third inning for Lant.

"It's early in the season so he was a little tired but he's a sophomore and this was just his first start in a varsity game."

Lant did pitch two strikeouts before the fatal third inning.

Midland did rally and pulled within 9-7 with a five-run sixth inning.

Midland's Chris Ward got things started in the sixth with a single followed by another single by Kyle Carrasco than an error by CHS's third baseman Lantz Bowman off a shot by Scott Riley scored Ward. Clay Johnson and Denson also scored in that inning.

Coronado then relieved with Bowman, who pitched the final 1⅓ innings and gave up three hits, but Midland could not capitalize as they left all three stranded.

In the second game, Midland lacked the intensity it showed in the first and only got four hits off Mustang pitcher Stephen Mullican.

Mullican, who improved to 2-1 for the season, struck out four while walking only three and scattering the four hits over seven innings as he went the distance.

"Why do most column hands feature rubber bridge instead of duplicate?" asks a reader. Since rubber bridge players are not as concerned with unessential tricks, they are more likely to take chances to make or break a contract, which is good material for a column. This hand is typical.

As a passed hand, South had just enough to respond two hearts to North's one-spade opening bid. Despite a minimum opening, North's two heart honors and distribution merited a raise, but South did not have enough to bid on.

West led the top of a doubleton club, won by East with the queen after declarer played low from the table. East returned a trump, ducked by declarer and taken by West with the king. Back came a club and South rose with dummy's ace.

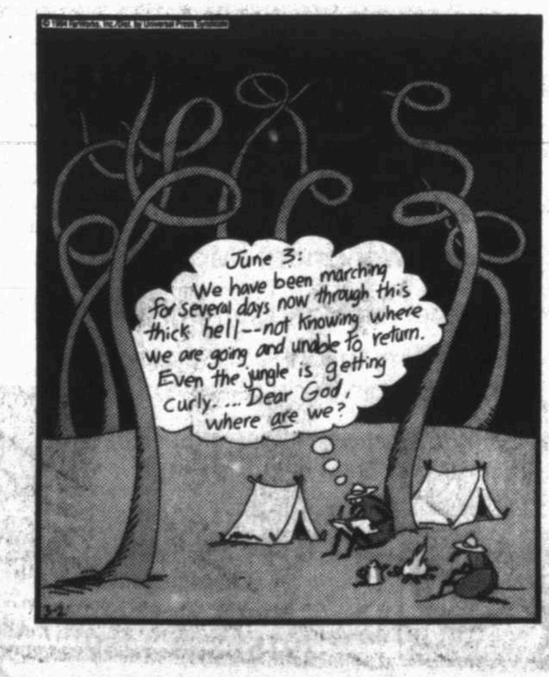

To get home, it was obvious to one and all that declarer would have to develop spades. A low spade was led to the king and West ducked! Declarer continued with a spade and, not unnaturally, finessed the ten. East raked in the jack, cashed the king of clubs and persisted with another club. Declarer ruffed with the ace, drew trumps with the ten and queen and was at the crossroads.

The queen of spades was led and, when East produced the six, declarer not surpisingly elected not to ruff—after all, the earlier play in spades had "marked" East with the ace. So the defenders collected two spade tricks, two clubs and a trump to sink an "unbeatable" contract.

Nobel laureate Solzhenitsyn says goodbye to his Vermont neighbors

CAVENDISH, Vt. — Alexander Solzhenitsyn said goodbye to his Vermont neighbors and thanked them for respecting his privacy during his years of exile from Russia.

"You forgave me my unusual way of life, and even took it upon yourselves to protect my privacy," the Nobel laureate told residents Monday at their annual town meeting.

"For this, I have been truly grateful throughout all these years; and now, as my stay here comes to an end, I thank you," he said during the rare public appearance.

Solzhenitsyn, 75, and his wife, Natalya, plan to return to Russia at the end of May, but his sons will continue to live in Cavendish. He spoke in Russian and his son, Stephan, translated.

He and his family have lived in this small, south-central Vermont town since 1976, two years after his expulsion from the Soviet Union.

RALEIGH, N.C. — Ben Vereen is grateful for Black History Month, but says blacks won't need it when they realize their true worth.

All people struggle against adversity, Vereen says.

"It's my Passover. During this time we remember the tears, the bitterness, the pain," the black entertainer said Monday night during a Black History Month event at Meredith College.

Vereen reminded his mostly white audience that all people struggle against adversity.

"When we realize our true worth, we won't need Black History Month," he said. "We'll be worried about making everything good for all people."

Vereen returned to work in April 1993, just 10 months after he was hit by a car as he walked along a dark highway near his home in Malibu, Calif.

NEW YORK — Yes David, you can go home again.

Forget the hard feelings, the "intellectual property dispute," the threats of a lawsuit. David Letterman returned Monday to NBC's Studio 6A, only this time he was a guest on his old show, now known as "Late Night with Conan O'Brien."

His old "Late Night" theme music welcomed Letterman back onstage for his first official visit to the set where he spent 11 years as "Late Night" host before moving crosstown to CBS.

"I love what you've done with the place," a relaxed, gracious Letterman told O'Brien, who was a writer-producer for "The Simpsons" before moving to "Late Night" last September.

His appearance marked a shift in his relations with NBC, which angrily claimed Letterman's "Late Night" comedy bits as its "intellectual property" when he left the network in early 1993 after being passed over to replace Johnny Carson as host of the "Tonight" show.

Letterman, whose CBS show has displaced NBC's "Tonight" show as the top-rated late-night program, was effusive in his praise for O'Brien and the new "Late Night."

LONDON — A couple with an overheated car got a hand from a royal good Samaritan, Princess Diana.

The princess was on her way home to London on Sunday after lunch with her sons when she spotted the car broken down on a busy highway, newspapers said.

Diana, traveling alone, pulled over and lent the couple her portable phone to call for help. A passing police car stopped and the princess continued on to Kensington Palace.

The newspapers didn't identify the couple. Diana was driving home after visiting her two sons at their boarding school west of the city.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Garrett Morris is slowly recovering from gunshot wounds he suffered during a robbery attempt.

The comic actor's condition was upgraded to fair Tuesday, but he was expected to remain in Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital for another two weeks.

Morris, a founding cast member of "Saturday Night Live" and a star of the television comedy "Martin," was shot in the arm and chest Thursday when he was walking to his car in South Central Los Angeles. The two gunmen escaped.

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Phillip can expect a smooth ride in Jamaica, now that the British commonwealth has repaved many of its streets in honor of their visit.

A cheering crowd welcomed the royal couple when they docked in Jamaica on Tuesday on the sixth stop of their Caribbean tour.

Jamaica repaved many of its long-neglected streets in preparation for the queen's visit, her first since 1983.

The queen went to National Heroes Park, where she laid a wreath at a monument to Jamaica's war dead. She plans to address Parliament on Wednesday and travel to Montego Bay on Thursday.

PGA commissioner Beman decides to step down

MIAMI (AP) — Deane Beman will step down as commissioner of the PGA Tour no later than December, 1995.

Beman's decision was announced today in a latter, dated March 1, to the PGA Tournament Policy Board. It was delivered to a board meeting at the Doral Resort.

The action came on the 20th anniversary of his appointment to the chief executive position for the pro golf tour.

"I have a strong desire to return to 'civilian' life; and if the old bones are willing, I expect to play some competitive golf," Beman, 55, said in his letter to the board.

The board "has regretfully accepted Deane's decision not to pursue another term," board chairman Richrd J. Ferris said.

Ferris said Beman "has been called the most visionary and successful commissioner of any professional sport.

"We could not agree more. Through his dedication and effort, Commissioner Beman has led the Tour through an amazing record of growth and accomplishment."

Ferris said a selection committeee has been appointed and will begin immediately the search for a new commissioner.

"It is the desire of the Tournament Policy Board that we proceed in a manner that is thorough and businesslike, but also expeditious," Ferris said.

Ferris said the selection committee will consist of himself, independent board member Hugh Culverhouse and two player-directors, Rick Fehr and Jay Haas.

Beman, a former U.S. and British Amateur champion and winner of four titles as a touring pro, succeeded the late Joeseph C. Dey, the Tour's first commissioner, March 1, 1974.

Golf for lungs

In an effort to help fight lung disease, the American Lung Association of Texas announces the 1994 Golf Privilege Card. The card provides golfers with savings at over 100 golf courses and driving ranges throughout the state.

For a $35 donation to help fight lung disease the Golf Privilege Card gives the cardholder the oppourtunity to play one free round of golf without the usual green fees. The card is valid through Dec. 31. To order a brochure/order form call (800) 252-5864.

The mission of the American Lung Association is the prevention, control and cure of lung disease, the third leading cause of death in Texas. The association fights lung disease and promotes lung health through statewide programs of research, health education, advocacy and community service. Its life-saving programs are made possible by public contributions and community volunteers.

New raves

Eating oatmeal can do more than improve your cholesterol. Oats may also help save you from infections, according to new research by Stig Bengmark, M.D., professor of surgery at Lund University in Sweden.

Dr. Bengmark explains that the thin layer of mucus covering the lining of the large intestine forms a barrier to keep toxins and infectious agents, such as E. coli, from infiltrating the body to cause disease. Thus, it is essential to keep this mucus layer intact and healthy.

A unique food to help do that is oats, Dr. Bengmark finds. The reasons: Oats are rich in a type of fermentable fiber that promotes mucus functioning. But more important, oats are full of fatty compounds called phospholipids needed to form the mucus layer.

If you are healthy, eating oatmeal - preferably cooked on top of the stove, and the gummier the better - offers protection, says Dr. Bengmark. To help those already ill fight off potentially deadly infections, he has formulated a special fermented oats "soup," now being tested in Europe and the U.S.

No cave-man cooking

Don't eat the charred parts of grilled meat and fish cooked over a naked flame, warns Japanese researcher Takashi Sugimura, M.D., writing in a recent Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

Indeed, if you do eat grilled or barbecued meat, poultry or fish, simply remove the charred parts, he urges. That way, he says, you will avoid a major dietary source of a carcinogen called HCAs -heterocyclic amines.

Dr. Sugimura discovered these HCAs on the surface of fried and grilled meats 18 years ago. Since then, they have produced nearly every type of cancer in laboratory animals. Also, a recent study found that people who eat meat grilled or fried have higher rates of colon cancer.

Still, this does not mean you are likely to develop cancer from a single high dose of HCAs. Instead, Dr. Sugimura explains, the HCAs join other environmental carcinogens to cause enough cumulative damage in cells to eventually trigger cancer.

The safest way to cook meat and fish to minimize HCAs is in the microwave, advises Dr. Sugimura.

Nursing vs. cancer

To nurse a baby for a short time is better than never to have nursed at all. That's the surprising conclusion of a couple of new studies. And the beneficiary in this case is not just the baby, but the mother.

Women who nurse their babies have a 20 percent lower risk of getting breast cancer before menopause than non-nursing mothers, according to Polly A. Newcomb at the University of Wisconsin Comprehensive Cancer Center in Madison.

Her study of over 14,000 women also found that very young women benefited most. Women age 19 or under who nursed an infant for six months slashed their chances of premenopausal breast cancer in half.

Even breast-feeding an infant for a shorter period can mean a "substantial" drop in premenopausal breast cancer chances. So found both Newcomb and another research team at Canada's British Columbia Cancer Agency in Vancouver. Women who breast-feed for only two months or longer are less apt to get early breast cancer, the Canadians reported.

Implants inserted through navel

By Sandra Skowron

BALTIMORE (AP) — It's been embellished by belly dancers and flaunted by hard bodies. Now plastic surgeons have found an unusual use for the lowly navel — breast implants.

By cutting inside the belly button and fashioning a "tunnel" under the skin to the mammary glands, plastic surgeons can insert implants without incisions on the breast.

"You have no scars on the breast. No. 2, you have very little loss of sensation. This ... goes up between the nerve supply and pushes it apart rather than destroys it. And I have had zero or no hematomas or bleeding," said Dr. Gerald W. Johnson, a Houston plastic surgeon who devised the technique and has applied for a patent.

While this may appeal to scar-skittish women, many doctors are not convinced that the benefits overcome the risks. Some, like Dr. John Bostwick, chairman of plastic surgery at Emory University in Atlanta, who have tried the technique say they prefer conventional incisions, which can be hidden in the fold of the breast, nipple or armpit.

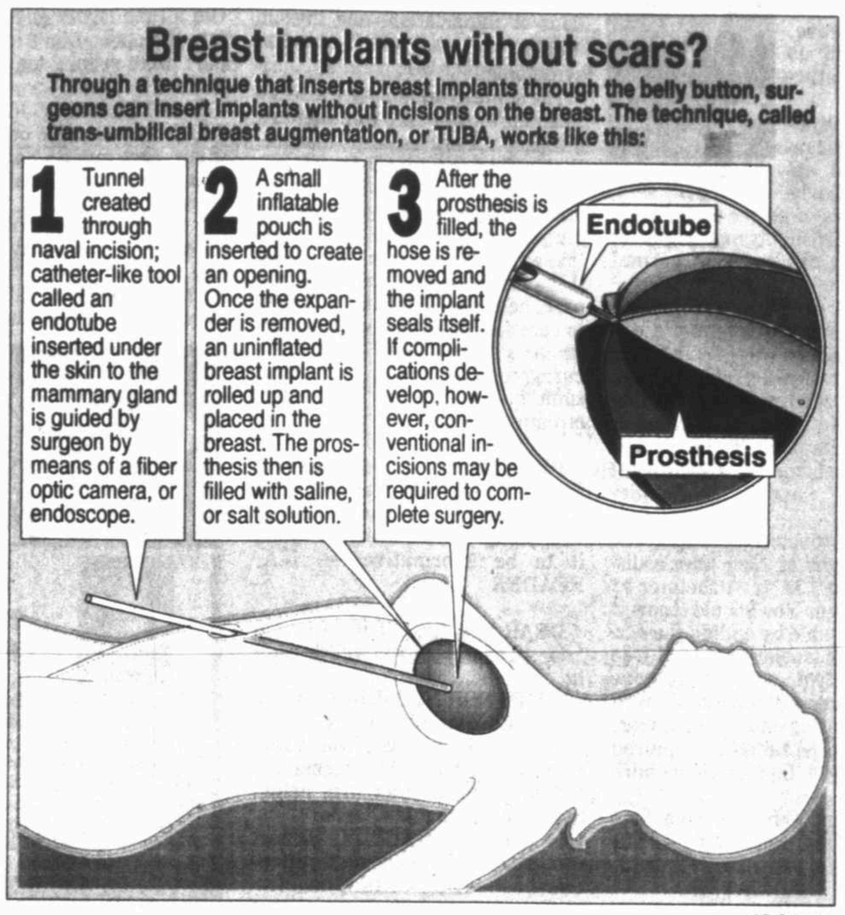

"We feel we have more accurate placement and surgical visualization and more precise creation of the implant," Bostwick said.

Patients, though, are drawn to the surgery's main selling point.

"I was real pleased because I didn't have any scars," said Deborah Payne, who sought out Dr. Bernard Chang, an assistant professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, after she heard he did the procedure.

"The way he did it was real natural. I was on the beach this past summer, and no one could tell," said the 36-year-old hairdresser and mother of two.

Chang, who has performed the surgery for about 10 months, has completed about a dozen such implants.

AP Graphic

"From the people I talk to who are using the technique, I think there is a place for it, but I don't think everyone is going to want to work this way," he said.

The technique, called trans-umbilical breast augmentation, or TUBA, uses a hollow metal rod called an endotube to tunnel under the skin. By inserting a tiny fiber optic camera called an endoscope, the surgeon has a picture of what is happening inside the breast.

Originally, the implant was used to create its own pocket inside the breast. But manufacturers objected because of potential damage to the implant. Johnson said he uses a small inflatable pouch to create an opening.

Once the pouch is deflated and removed, the uninflated implant is rolled up and placed into the endotube. From there it is positioned in the breast and inflated with saline, or salt water, through a tiny hose. After the prosthesis is filled, the hose is removed and the implant seals itself.

Surgeons said they tell patients beforehand that if uncontrolled bleeding develops or if the pocket does not open properly they will make conventional incisions.

The implant surface may be smooth-surfaced or textured. Each has its drawbacks. Smooth-surfaced implants have been criticized for creating scar tissue. Textured implants can ripple or wrinkle.

Johnson uses smooth-surfaced implants but said, with his technique, there is less cutting inside the breast and therefore less scarring.

And with medication to inhibit scarring, "we have no problems with scarring at all," he said.

But the surgery has other drawbacks. Because the belly button implants lie on top of the pectoral muscle, rather than underneath it, mammograms have a tougher time detecting problems, critics say.

"It's going in the face of what the mammographers are telling us in regard to doing a good breast examination," said Dr. James Wells, a Long Beach, Calif., plastic surgeon and chairman of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons' public education committee.

Dr. Edwin Pound III, an Atlanta plastic surgeon who has performed more than 100 belly button implants, disagrees.

"I don't believe it interferes with mammograms because the breast tissue is still on top of the implant," he said.

Adolescence tough on parents

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Adolescence is a time of pronounced physical and psychological change.

Rapid physical growth occurs, as does maturation of reproductive features, separation and individuation from parents, rebelliousness and antisocial behavior, sarcasm and negativism, strong identification with peers, self-centeredness, sensation seeking behaviors, re-evaluation of previously held values and moral systems.

All of these changes are part of the years of adolescence, some to a greater and some to a lesser degree. Parents, especially those rearing their first adolescent, often are bewildered and even panicky. Their response to their children can be inappropriate and unproductive, with the potential for making this difficult time even worse.

Following are some stress-provoking situations found in the adolescent and the adolescent's family:

■ Increased arguments and disagreements erupt between parent and adolescent over duties and responsibilities in the home. Adolescents are often very messy and getting them to keep their rooms straight and clean is often difficult. Their self-centeredness and tendency to challenge parental authority often make getting them to help around the house a major challenge.

■ Adolescents frequently begin to resist being involved in family activities. They frequently act embarrassed or ashamed of their parents, especially in public places. Many parents tend to personalize these situations and have difficulty in accepting this phase of psychological development, which passes with maturity.

■ An increase in arguments and disagreements over the adolescent's choice of friends and activities normally develops during this time. The adolescent's need to display individuality often leads to unusual hairstyles, dress and language.

■ Increased arguments and disagreements over such issues as use of the family car, the value and relevancy of academic achievement, curfews, and time spent on the telephone with peers.

■ Pressure associated with the beginning of junior and senior high school.

■ Death or illness of family members, such as grandparents, which often occurs during teen-age years.

Knowledgeable and caring parents recognize not only the need to set limits and boundaries but also to impart unconditional love to their children.

They tend to reserve their inflexibility for major issues such as drug and alcohol use, premarital sexual activity, health-related issues and parental respect.

They recognize that this time in their child's growth and development can be stressful, but they know it can also provide the opportunity to help mold and shape their child's life into that of a happy, healthy and successful young adult.

The opportunities and challenges are there for parents who see them as such.

Research studies metabolism

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women run more to fat than men do, and a new study offers a possible reason — females burn fat more slowly, by a rate equivalent to a chocolate chip cookie a day.

The analysis of data on 194 women and 328 men looked at the resting metabolic rate, the rate at which you burn calories as you lie in bed right after you wake up. It's the amount of calories your body burns just to keep itself alive.

The study finds that, after other factors are taken into consideration, the resting metabolic rate of women is three percent lower than in men.

"That's about 50 calories per day, like a chocolate chip cookie," said researcher Eric T. Poehlman of the Baltimore Veterans Affairs Medical Center. His study is in the American Physiological Society's Journal of Applied Physiology.

Three percent may not seem to be a lot, but it adds up "over the period of a lifetime," Poehlman said. Exercise is a good way to burn off the caloric difference, he said. Exercise can increase metabolic rate 15- to 20-fold, which would "eat up that cookie and then some," he said.

Other metabolic differences between men and women are larger than the one he and his colleagues found in the base rate, Poehlman said. For instance, men have proportionately more muscle than women, and muscle cells burn calories faster than fat cells. Also, he said, men tend to be bigger than women, and larger bodies tend to burn more calories.

The overall resting metabolic rate of the women was 1,348 calories a day, while the rate for men was 23 percent higher, the report said.

The researchers compared men and women at the same fitness levels and with the same proportion of fat and muscle, Poehlman said.

The subjects took a treadmill exercise test to determine how fit they were. The amount of fat on their bodies was estimated by underwater weighing, a technique based on the principle that fat is lighter than muscle in water.

All women were tested at the same point in their menstrual cycles, because metabolic rate varies at different points in the cycle, Poehlman said. Exercisers were tested 36-48 hours after the last time they worked out, so any resid-

Start dental care early

By Dr. Edward G. Kaufman
Associated Press

Maintaining healthy teeth during children's early years can help them lessen the risk of dental problems, including gum decay, later in life. All it takes is a few basic preventive steps to help keep a child's teeth healthy.

First of all, a baby's teeth should be cleaned after each feeding to prevent cavities and tooth decay. To safely reach the infant's teeth, parents can position the baby's head in their laps and support the baby's head with their hands. The teeth can then be wiped clean with a damp cloth or gauze pad.

Filling a baby's bedtime bottle with water instead of milk or juice also may help prevent infant tooth decay. Milk and juice contain sugars that when mixed with oral bacteria form an acid that causes tooth decay.

Bring children to the dentist after their first tooth erupts — usually between the ages of 6 to 13 months. In addition to cleaning, these visits may allow dentists to detect possible future problems and devise early intervention strategies.

Selecting the proper toothbrush can also be important. Many dentists recommend small toothbrushes with soft, round-ended bristles. Buy two toothbrushes at a time and alternate their use. This will allow each brush to dry out before it is reused.

Healthy hearts have no gender preference

Associated Press

Staying healthy and feeling good are important to everyone. But many folks think heart disease is something only men have to guard against. Although there are some gender differences, Mature Outlook magazine reports heart disease is now an official nonsexist ailment — statistically speaking.

It's a myth that men and women develop heart disease differently, says Dr. Lynda Rosenfeld, associate professor of medicine and pediatrics at Yale University School of Medicine. "The process is the same in both men and women," she says. It happens when one or more of the coronary arteries become clogged or blocked, cutting off the flow of oxygen-rich blood to the heart and thus causing severe damage — or even death — to the surrounding areas of heart tissue.

Women have one advantage, however. Heart disease develops according to a different biological time clock. "Its onset is delayed in women by the estrogen 'umbrella,' " Rosenfeld says. The female hormone estrogen helps to keep high-density lipoprotein (HDL) or "good" cholesterol levels high and offers women about 10 more years of protection than men, she explains. But when estrogen levels begin to drop after menopause, women gradually catch up to men, and around the age of 65, their risk of heart attack is equal to men, she says.

Regardless of when heart disease is likely to happen, both men and women can take steps to prevent it from happening at all. Though no one can change risk factors such as age or family history of heart disease, four major modifiable risk factors that set the stage for heart disease — smoking, high blood pressure, inactivity and high blood cholesterol levels — can be reduced or eliminated.

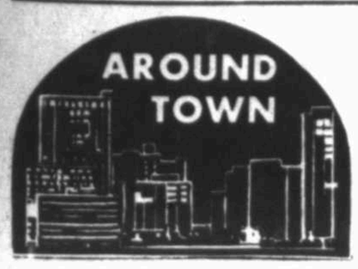

■ Smoking has long been recognized as a major risk factor for men, but it is a significant risk for women, too, because it negates their two most important natural protective mechanisms — estrogen and HDL, Rosenfeld says.

That may sound like a convincing reason to quit, but it's not enough for many women, says Dr. Millicent Higgins of the National Heart and Blood Institute. Women are quitting smoking at a slower pace than men, possibly because many women smoke to control their weight, she says. "But if you had to choose between smoking and a little extra weight, the health consequences of smoking are much worse," she warns.

■ High blood pressure is often called the silent killer because it can wreak havoc on the heart, brain and kidneys without making you feel sick — and women are not immune, Higgins says. More than half of women 55 and over have high blood pressure, and among African-American women, high blood pressure is even more common and more severe. African-American women are

Alzheimer's symptoms may differ from aging signs

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: According to a Gallup Poll conducted for the Alzheimer's Association in 1993, one out of three American adults say they know someone with Alzheimer's disease, and one in 10 say a relative has it.

Van Buren

With physicians now reporting an increase of "early onset" cases of people in their 40s and 50s, distinguishing signs of Alzheimer's disease from normal aging is of utmost importance.

To assist people in recognizing the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease, and to encourage them to see their doctors for a proper diagnosis, the Alzheimer's Association has launched a major educational campaign that includes public service announcements, educational materials and community outreach.

A free brochure outlining the warning signs of Alzheimer's disease, titled "Is It Alzheimer's? Warning Signs You Should Know," is now available by calling the Alzheimer's Association's toll-free number: (800) 272-3900. Anyone who is concerned because a loved one is exhibiting unusual behavior, such as disorientation or impaired memory, will find this brochure helpful.

Thank you, Abby, for your help in getting the word out. — ED TRUSCHKE, PRESIDENT, ALZHEIMER'S ASSOCIATION

DEAR MR. TRUSCHKE: I found your brochure to be very informative, as will many of my readers. Some excerpts many people will relate to:

"Your wife always misplaces her keys. But last Tuesday, she couldn't remember what they were for." ... "Your grandfather likes to take daily strolls around the neighborhood. But four times in the past month he got lost, and couldn't find his way home without help from a neighbor." ... "Your favorite uncle can't remember your name, or the names of your husband or children."

Everyone has a bad day once in a while, but someone with Alzheimer's can exhibit rapid mood changes — from laughter to tears, or calm to tears to anger — for no apparent reason. Also, a person with Alzheimer's will put things in inappropriate places: an iron in the freezer, or a wristwatch in the sugar bowl.

The memory loss, confusion and disorientation described in these examples are common symptoms of dementing illness — the most common of which is Alzheimer's disease. However, depression, nutritional deficiencies, drug interactions or intoxication, and thyroid imbalances can cause similar symptoms.

The same symptoms are also associated with stroke, Huntington's disease, Parkinson's disease, Pick's disease and AIDS.

It is important to consult a physician if you recognize these symptoms. Sometimes they are reversible with a physician's care. Even if the diagnosis is Alzheimer's disease, help is available to learn how to care for the person with dementia, as well as finding help for the caregivers in coping with these sometimes stressful circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will find this item I clipped from the Los Angeles Times worth sharing with your readers. I know I found it to be informative. — L.A. READER

DEAR L.A. READER: It is and I do. All of us would do well to copy it:

TIPS FOR NEIGHBORLY COMMUNICATION

Community Boards of San Francisco offers these 10 suggestions for managing conflict with neighbors, strangers and friends:

1. TALK DIRECTLY. Direct conversation is much more effective than sending a letter, banging on the wall, throwing a rock, or complaining to everyone else.

2. CHOOSE A GOOD TIME. Try to talk in a quiet place where you can both be comfortable and undisturbed for as long as the discussion takes. Don't approach the other person as he or she is leaving for work, or after you've had a terrible day.

3. PLAN AHEAD. Think out what you want to say ahead of time. State clearly what the problem is and how it affects you.

4. DON'T BLAME OR NAME-CALL. Antagonizing the other person only makes it harder for him or her to hear you.

5. GIVE INFORMATION. Don't judge or interpret the other person's behavior. Instead, give information about your own situation and feelings and how the person's behavior affects you.

6. LISTEN. Give the other person a chance to tell his or her side of the conflict completely. Relax and listen; try to learn how the other person feels.

7. SHOW THAT YOU ARE LISTENING. Although you may not agree with what is being said, tell the other person that you hear him or her, and are glad that you are discussing the problem together.

8. TALK IT ALL THROUGH. Get all the issues and feelings out into the open. Don't leave out the part that seems too difficult to discuss.

9. WORK ON A JOINT SOLUTION. Two or more people cooperating are much more effective than one person telling another to change. Be specific. "I will turn my music off at midnight" is better than "I won't play loud music anymore."

10. FOLLOW THROUGH. Agree to check with each other at specific times to make sure that the agreement is still working. — SUSAN KUCHINSKAS

DEAR ABBY: I cured my husband of 37 years of walking ahead of me instead of taking my arm.

When he would go ahead of me, I would start quacking like a little lost duck. People would stare.

Every now and then he needs a little reminder. — JULIE MANN, SPRINGFIELD VA.

DEAR JULIE: At least there was no question about which spouse was quacking up — which reminds me of a joke I just heard:

"What does a duck do when he flies upside down? He quacks up." (Get the hook.)

Bottled tea passes test, but barely

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

In the 10-plus years I've been writing this column, many people have given me many suggestions for products to taste test. Some of these items have become family favorites — others have not.

The most recent suggestion came from a coworker who wanted me to try the new bottled iced tea drinks from Nestea. Since I'm always grateful for suggestions, I took him up on it and bought a bottle of Nestea Natural Raspberry flavored iced tea. These teas are bottled and marketed in the soft drink section of the supermarket, so they aren't too hard to find.

A 18-ounce bottle of Nestea Natural Raspberry iced tea cost 55 cents, which makes it close in price to soft drinks too.

Label advertising is limited. In fact, all I could find by way of advertising was the fact that the drink is a "flavored iced tea with other natural flavors" and it is "sweetened."

On the side you learn that the tea is "Nestea pure iced tea"with "no preservatives, artificial colors or flavorings." And "no juice."

The ingredients list is a little more revealing. The first ingredient listed is water (ingredients are listed greatest to least), and the second is high fructose corn syrup, which is a form of sugar. Then we have citric acid, concentrated tea, maltodextrin, natural flavors and potassium citrate. Sounds like a chemistry class, doesn't it.

The Nestea people also included a consumer information line to call if you have any questions or comments: 1-800-488-2267.

My children don't like tea, so I got to do this taste-test all by myself. I discovered that high fructose corn syrup doesn't sweeten as much as my favorite artificial-sweetener-in-a-packet, and that bottled iced tea tastes a lot like instant tea made from a powder. The only difference I could taste was that this one had a hint of raspberry in it, which was a nice change.

I don't know — iced tea in a bottle may be a wonderful idea for some people, but I still prefer my canned diet soda.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

IMPLANT: Procedure controversial

(From 1E)

The sacs, critics say, also face a greater chance of leaks or breakage because of the way they are inserted, particularly when used to create their own pocket.

"By putting an implant in through the belly button, there is increased risk of unsatisfactory outcomes or events either during surgery or after surgery," said Dr. Scott Spear, professor of surgery at Georgetown University in Washington. "I'm withholding judgment about its value."

More than 1 million American women have received breast implants, about 80 percent of them for cosmetic reasons. Three major companies have announced that they will contribute more than $3 billion to a $4.75 billion settlement with thousands of women who claim to have been injured by implants.

The belly button technique is not regulated by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, since it has no jurisdiction over medical procedures, said spokeswoman Susan Cruzan. However, the FDA has asked manufacturers of saline implants to submit data about their safety and effectiveness as part of its review of breast implants. Among the complaints about saline implants are infection, hardening of scars and interference with mammography.

The implant shell is made of hard silicone, which does not pose the hazard of silicone gel. Should it rupture, it would release salt water, which is not thought to be harmful, according to the FDA.

The FDA has imposed a moratorium on sales and use of silicone gel implants, which can react with the body's immune system in the event of leakage.

HEART: Strategies can help preserve health

(From 1E)

24 percent more likely to die of coronary heart disease than Caucasian women, she reports.

But even if your blood pressure is normal, you'd be wise to practice simple preventive strategies such as keeping your weight under control and exercising regularly, says Dr. Donald Wesson, associate professor of medicine at Baylor College of Medicine. And everyone can benefit from cutting back on salt — especially African-Americans, since they seem to have a higher proportion of salt-sensitive hypertension.

■ A prudent low-fat diet and exercise can help to keep cholesterol levels under control, says Higgins. Exercise raises protective HDL levels, while a low-fat diet lowers total cholesterol and the levels of the harmful low-density lipoprotein. But don't give up dairy products in an effort to reduce fat, she cautions women. Simply switch to low-fat or nonfat dairy foods, which still contain healthy levels of bone-strengthening calcium necessary to prevent osteoporosis.

Your goal is a total cholesterol reading of 200 points or less. But premenopausal women need to be aware of one little hitch. Cholesterol measurements taken at the mall or with an at-home test kit reveal only one number — total cholesterol. They don't take into account the higher levels of HDL that all women possess before menopause. This higher level of HDL may contribute to a high total cholesterol. This means that on paper such women may appear to be at greater risk of heart disease, but in actuality, because of the higher HDL, are at lower risk. Premenopausal women with high or borderline high cholesterol readings should check with their doctors to see if further testing is needed.

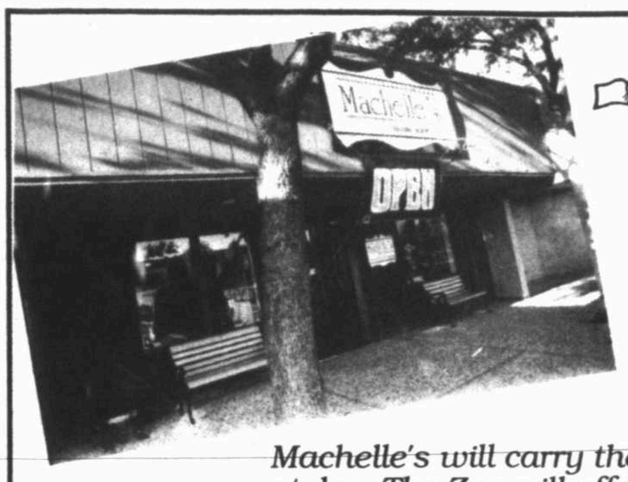

■ You may not associate lack of exercise with heart disease, but there is overwhelming evidence that inactivity can damage the heart, says Rosenfeld. Inactive people are almost twice as likely to suffer a heart attack as people who exercise regularly.

Exercise also helps take off excess pounds, helps control blood pressure, is known to boost the levels of HDL and may help prevent diabetes. Diabetes elevates the risk of heart disease in men and women, but after the age of 45, about twice as many women develop diabetes as men. And diabetic women have lower HDL levels than diabetic men, Rosenfeld says.

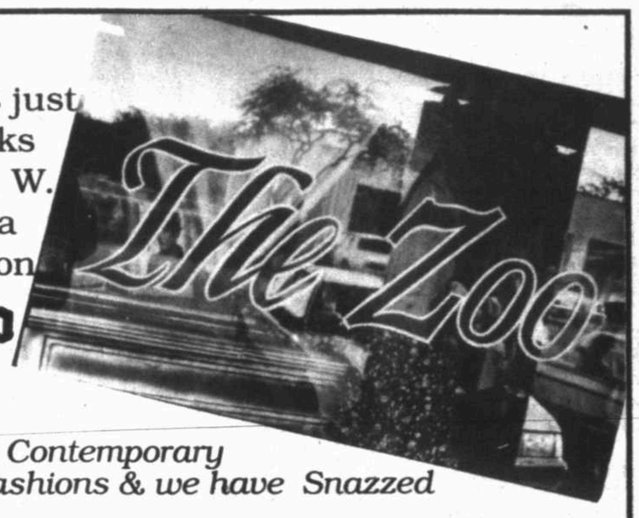

If you haven't been exercising regularly, Rosenfeld advises seeing your doctor about developing a plan appropriate to your health status. She also suggests phasing into your new activities slowly. Experts recommend 30-60 minutes of aerobic activity three or four times per week to keep your heart healthy.

Excluded from some heart disease research in the past, women recently have become the focus of new studies. But until the results are known, women will have to be active caretakers of their own hearts, says Rosenfeld.

ual metabolic increase caused by exercise would have spent itself.

The volunteer participants, who ranged in age from about 17 to 81, slept at the test center and were tested in the morning. Their resting metabolic rates were measured by the proportion of carbon dioxide, a product of metabolism, as they exhaled.

The large number of participants, 522, gives the study added authority, Poehlman said. Larger total numbers make the study's averages less likely to be skewed by unusual differences in individuals, and so make the finding of a small average difference more likely to be valid.

The study does not explain the reason for the approximate 50-calorie gap between the sexes. One possibility is that women are more likely than men to diet, and restrictions on calories taken in trigger the body to compensate by lowering the rate it uses calories up, Poehlman said.

Another researcher has an alternative possible explanation.

Women could have a lower metabolic rate because they carry more fat around the buttocks and thighs than men do, and fat in these areas is less metabolically active, said Rudy Dressendorfer of New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas, N.M.

But Dressendorfer does not consider the study's finding conclusive.

The formulas used in underwater weighing don't distinguish between men and women, because most of the bodies used to develop the formulas were male, Dressendorfer said. If women have more muscle than the formulas supposed, then researchers could have underestimated metabolic rates, he said.

Another researcher says the study seems to have been carefully done, and the findings could be important in weight control. However, Jack H. Wilmore of the University of Texas wants to see other scientists duplicate the work, to make sure the findings stand up when repeated.

'Old wives' tales' could be fact

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

Eat your carrots; you'll see better in the dark. Don't go swimming until an hour after you eat. Fish is brain food.

It's my mother's voice exhorting me. It could be your mother's voice, too. Or maybe she made you wear garlic around your neck to ward off colds, or insisted that you have chicken soup if the cold arrived.

Old wives' tales are still being told, but they are also being subjected to scientific scrutiny. And it turns out that some of the things old wives intuited, perhaps through observation, have now been proven by scientists.

Years ago, for instance, manufacturers of cranberry juice were frustrated because they could not claim the juice helped prevent urinary tract infections, even though thousands of people swore by its efficacy. In 1991, a group of Israeli scientists found that cranberry juice as well as blueberry juice did inhibit the bacteria that causes the infections from clinging to the walls of the bladder. And a recent study at the Harvard Medical School offers additional backup of that claim.

ANOTHER STUDY does not prove that carrots prevent night blindness, but shows that they may prevent macular degeneration, an eye disease that can eventually cause blindness. The protective aspect comes from beta carotene, which is also present in lots of other fruits and vegetables. A study of 3,000 older Americans done by the University of Chicago in 1988 showed that eating just one carrot a day, or some other food rich in beta carotene, reduced the chances of macular degeneration by 40 percent.

Is fish a brain food? It depends on whether there is a zinc deficiency in the diet, according to "Food — Your Miracle Medicine," by Jean Carper (Harper-Collins, 1993). The book mentions a study done at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston that found a marginal lack of zinc "can mildly impair mental functioning, including memory." The study said that when women with a slight zinc deficiency ate adequate amounts of zinc, their recall of words jumped 12 percent and their recall of visual design jumped 17 percent.

Ms. Carper quotes A.E. Bender, a professor emeritus at the University of London, who said there was a theory "that man evolved in areas bordering seas and lakes because fish provided material for brain development, which other species lacked. So the folklore that said fish is food for the brain may be vindicated."

Mama would be pleased to know that eating chicken soup really works. In 1978, the Mount Sinai Medical Center in Miami Beach published a study that proved "Jewish penicillin" worked better than hot or cold water in fighting the congestion that accompanies a cold.

FURTHER PROOF of its effectiveness came more recently when Dr. Irwin Ziment of UCLA found that because chicken is a protein food it contains an amino acid called cysteine, which is chemically similar to a drug called acetylcysteine. Acetylcysteine is prescribed for people with respiratory infections because it thins the mucous in the lungs.

Wearing cloves of garlic may keep people at a distance in the winter, when close contact in an enclosed space over a long period leads to shared infections.

But eating garlic is a more surefire way to stay well, scientists have found. In her book, Ms. Carper quotes James North, chief of microbiology at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, who confirmed that "garlic extract killed nearly 100 percent of both a human rhinovirus, which causes colds and parainfluenza 3, a flu and respiratory virus. Eating garlic cloves or onion is just the ticket when a sore throat signals the beginning of a cold, North said.

Other old wives' tales have been conclusively disproved or are hanging by a thread.

You can, after all, go swimming right after eating. When I think of all the hours I wasted hanging out in the sand, waiting to go in the water while my tuna-fish sandwich digested ...

Normal meals should not cause problems for swimmers, according to the August 1992 issue of a publication called The Berkeley Wellness Letter. Dr. Ernest Maglischo, the swimming coach at California State University at Bakersfield, said in the newsletter that marathon swimmers often eat high-carbohydrate meals before swimming.

AND CHOCOLATE doesn't cause acne. Numerous studies have failed to show that any amount of chocolate causes an outbreak of acne. In fact, there appears to be little evidence that diet affects acne at all.

As for candy and tooth rot, it depends on the candy. Jelly beans and caramels won't do it but peanut-butter crackers, potato chips and salted crackers are just a few of the foods that are most likely to cause tooth decay.

Here's how it works. Simple carbohydrates — sugars — are easily washed out of the mouth by saliva, while complex carbohydrates, found in crackers and potato chips, stick between the teeth for several hours, a source for the bacteria that causes tooth decay.

In addition to potato chips and crackers, other offenders include oatmeal cookies, cereal flakes coated with sugar, puffed oat cereal and cream-filled cookies.

The least sticky foods, and therefore the least likely to cause tooth decay, are apples, bananas, hot-fudge sundaes and milk-chocolate bars.

One old wives' tale was suggested for years in advertisements in Britain — that nursing mothers should drink a pint of beer a day because it was good for the baby. The ads are no longer allowed to make the claim, but the idea that a little beer is good for the mother and the baby, which dates back to the first century, lingers, presumably because it relaxes Mom and increases the infants' milk consumption.

The February, 1992 issue of the Tufts University Diet & Nutrition Letter reports that: "Scientists at the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia found that breast-fed infants drank an average of 22 percent less milk after their mothers consumed orange juice mixed with the amount of alcohol in a can of beer than when the women drank the same amount of juice straight on a different day."

THE NEWSLETTER acknowledges that the study was brief, but one of the researchers said: "If someone tells a woman that drinking alcohol will help her nurse the baby, she should be aware that the advice is not based on scientific fact."

TEETH: Dental care for children begins at home

(From 1E)

Children under the age of 3 tend to swallow toothpaste after brushing. Remember to apply toothpaste sparingly: a pea-sized dab on the toothbrush is plenty for a small mouth.

Permanent teeth must last a lifetime, taking a few preventive measures can help ensure a healthy mouth.

For example, sealants can provide protection against decay for permanent teeth for up to 10 years. Dentists commonly place these clear or opaque materials on the chewing surfaces of all newly-erupted back permanent teeth.

Mouthguards are essential for all children who are active in sports. These form-fitted plastic pieces cover the upper teeth and can help prevent injuries to the teeth, lips, cheek and gums.

If a permanent tooth is accidentally knocked out, retrieve it and get to the dentist immediately.

In many cases these teeth can be saved and replaced by the dentist. Handle the tooth only by the crown, or top part. Rinse, but do not swab it, and replace the tooth in its socket.

If repositioning the tooth is impossible, place it in a container of milk or water until you can reach the dentist.

Dr. Edward G. Kaufman is the dean of the New York University College of Dentistry.

Vitamin C helps dental healing

CHICAGO (AP) — Vitamin C, touted by some medical researchers as an aid in fighting colds, also can help speed dental healing, says the Academy of General Dentistry.

Reporting on a study of 161 patients who had tooth extractions, the academy noted 81 were given a daily, three-week supply of 1,500 milligrams of vitamin C while the remaining 80 patients received an inactive pill.

Nearly 80 percent of those receiving the vitamin supplements reported rapid healing after surgery, compared to only 63 percent of the patients who received the inactive placebo.

"Most people are aware of the healing properties of vitamin C when it comes to treating a cold," said Dr. Jonathan Scharf, academy spokesman. "But after undergoing a tooth extraction, patients should consider taking vitamin C as a safe, inexpensive supplement."

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
