Reagan asked to help oil industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Larry Combest has issued President Reagan an urgent plea to intervene and restore stability to the oil and gas industry, saying national security is at risk.

"We must look at the future needs of the United States to grasp the significance of this tragedy," he told the president Wednesday in a four-page letter.

"If, in the future, OPEC countries decide to suddenly increase the price of oil, they would have America over a barrel," the Lubbock Republican wrote. "We would not be able to mobilize our oilfield crews and equipment in time to ensure that we had a steady, dependable flow of domestic oil to fuel our nation."

Combest asked Reagan to declare that the failing energy industry threatens national security and places the nation at risk.

"The lack of domestic oil production could compromise this nation's security," Combest told the president. "To see all of your accomplishments in building our national defense negated for want of domestic oil would be shameful."

He said the only beneficial industry proposal enacted during the 100th Congress was repeal of the windfall profits tax on oil, but while symbolic the rollback is not having much of an impact because the tax doesn't kick in until oil prices reach about $20 a barrel

Prices fluctuated around $13 a barrel this week, while working rotary rigs are at a low of around 900 nationwide, down from the 3,970 in use when oil prices were peaking in the early 1980s.

Combest said rapidly dropping prices and estimates from industry experts that the situation might worsen prompted the letter, in which he suggests the president impose a variable import fee on foreign oil.

A similar plea has also been sent by the Independent Petroleum Association of America, Combest said.

He said he is seeking a flexible fee that would change based on fluctuations in the price of OPEC oil.

"This would transfer control over the industry and its pricing methods from the Middle East to our own nation," Combest told the president.

Combest said rippling effects from the oil crisis have been felt across the country, and have had an impact on the crisis in the savings and loan industry, and the collapse in real estate and steel industries.

"Studies indicate by the year 2010, this country will be importing 73 percent of our total demand for oil. The cost of all this oil will send our trade deficit skyrocketing," he said. "Once again, lines of cars and trucks at gas stations, reminiscent of the 1970s, would be commonplace. Fuel costs for energy-dependent industries would increase dramatically, and American competitiveness would suffer."

Reagan will sign welfare overhaul bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Impoverished parents are going to learn that welfare is a different bargain under the terms of an ambitious overhaul that becomes law today and that is aimed at turning the Depression-era system into a gateway to the workforce.

For the first time, under the bill President Reagan is signing this afternoon, states will be required to offer people on welfare a broad variety of education, training and work programs.

Mothers of young children will be required to participate. They'll retain medical coverage for a year if they find a job. And they'll be far more likely to get child support payments.

All states will have to provide at least some cash benefits to families with unemployed fathers living at home. And non-custodial fathers will face new pressure for child support payments, with states required to identify more of them and automatically withhold payments from their wages.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., its chief architect, has called the bill "the most important legislation of its kind and the first legislation of its kind since the welfare system was established in the 1930s."

Even boosters concede there are many potential obstacles to the success of the Family Support Act: day care shortages, sagging economies in some states, work requirements that will cover only a fraction of welfare parents by 1995 — about 400,000 people in any given month, 20 percent of those who would be eligible.

But with $3.3 billion flowing to the states over a five-year phase-in period, they think they can make fundamental improvements in Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the existing federal-state welfare program serving 3.7 million families.

The new deal: the government will provide training and support services, and the parent must strive for independence.

"For the past 30 years, the job of the (state) welfare department has been to get the checks out to eligible families in the right amount on a timely basis," said Stephen Heintz, Connecticut's income maintenance commissioner and head of an American Public Welfare Association welfare reform task force.

"This legislation says that kind of income support system is not enough to help families overcome the many barriers they face," Heintz said. "The welfare system has to become a much more aggressive force."

Those most likely to feel the immediate effects of the welfare bill are able-bodied women with children aged 3 and over. They are the prime targets of the new Job Opportunities and Basic Skills programs to be developed by each state.

While there already are a few small work programs for welfare mothers of children over 6, they operate on relatively little money.

Magazine ranks Odessa 7th most stressful city

From Staff and Wire Reports

Odessa Chamber of Commerce officials aren't too upset by a national magazine's opinion their city is the seventh most stressful in the nation.

The Psychology Today article, written by California State University psychologist Robert Levine for its November issue, ranked 286 metropolitan areas based on rates of crime, suicide, alcoholism and divorce.

In the study, Midland was cited as the 150th most stressful city in which to live.

"With a boy 9 and a boy 6, I consider any place stressful," mused Odessa Chamber President Steve Lay.

Among the other cities making the "top 10" stress list were West Palm Beach, Fla.; Las Vegas, Nev.; Miami, Fla., and San Francisco, Calif.

"I think we're in pretty good company...most of those places I like to go to get away," Lay continued. "I think it's pretty comical."

"I love being ranked with Disneyland," added the Odessa Chamber's Chief Executive Officer Russell Autry, referring to the Los Angeles area's rank.

Autry believed that perhaps the brunt of the oil patch's woes were dumped in the lap of Odessa, resulting in its rank.

"On page 58 of Psychology Today I think they summarize it very well," Autry said quoting the article's statement that "clearly there is no simple connection between objective living conditions and the psychological quality of your life."

Archbishop says shroud not burial cloth of Christ

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Scientific tests on the Shroud of Turin indicate it is no more than 728 years old and cannot be the burial cloth of Christ, the archbishop of Turin announced today.

The scientists are "95 percent" sure of the accuracy of the tests, Cardinal Anastasio Ballestrero told a news conference.

Carbon-14 tests conducted by three laboratories put the date between 1260 and 1390, Ballestrero said.

"I see no reason for the church to put these results in doubt," Ballestrero said.

The shroud — 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide — bears a faint yellowish negative image of the front and back of a man whipped, speared, nailed to a cross and crowned with thorns.

For centuries it has been revered by some as the burial cloth of Jesus and dismissed by others as a clever forgery.

Ballestrero stressed the importance of the symbolism of the image but repeated that the Roman Catholic Church never claimed the shroud to be a holy relic. He said he personally saw the shroud as the "revelation of the face and the body of Christ."

"The church believes in the image and not in the history because this image of Jesus Christ in fact is very interesting and the people believe deeply in Jesus," Ballestrero said.

Jessica to unveil bronze that will honor rescuers

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The selfless devotion of Midlanders is manifested in many forms: A town closes ranks to rescue a little girl, residents can be counted on resoundingly to open their wallets and their hearts to charities in need.

But Saturday at 11 a.m. in Centennial Plaza, the volunteer spirit in Midland will take on a new form.

Bronze.

Jessica McClure, with a little help from a grown-up, will unveil a bronze relief commissioned to honor the plethora of people who helped save her from the clutches of an abandoned water well one year ago next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cocke of South Padre Island were on safari in Africa when they read about the rescue in Time Magazine.

The two were so moved by the episode, they made an initial contribution of $5,000 toward the cost of building a permanent memorial.

"Jessica is a wonderful fringe benefit of this...especially that she lived through" the ordeal, explained Darlene Gifford, co-chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's spirit committee.

August's trade deficit increases to $12.8 billion, government says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit swelled to $12.18 billion in August as a record level of American exports was swamped by an all-time high in imports, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that the imbalance between what the United States imports and what it sells abroad climbed by $2.7 billion over a July deficit of $9.47 billion.

The July figure, which followed a $13.22 billion June imbalance, had been the smallest monthly deficit in more than three years. Economists had expected an increase for August, but the actual result was worse than the $11.3 billion many forecasters had predicted.

Financial markets had been tensed waiting for the trade report, remembering that a worse-than-expected August deficit a year ago had prompted a 95-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average just a few days before the Black Monday stock crash of Oct. 19.

Today, however, the markets appeared to be riding out the bad news.

The dollar tumbled briefly in foreign exchange markets but soon rebounded. The Dow Jones average climbed through the morning with analysts saying the market appeared to have taken the news largely into account with its decline on Wednesday.

The Reagan administration moved quickly to put the best face on the new trade figures, insisting that the August increase was only a brief interruption to the downward trend in the deficit figures evident for most of this year.

Commerce Secretary C. William Verity said that if the wide swings in July and August were averaged, the result would be a monthly deficit of $10.8 billion for the two months, down from an average of $11.8 billion in the first six months of the year.

"I have been saying for some time that we can hope for an improvement of about $30 billion in our trade deficit this year. The figures for the first eight months show that we are on target at an annual rate of $139 billion," Verity said in a statement.

Letter will rescind flood insurance rate maps

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Midland City officials are waiting on a letter they say will temporarily remove threatening federal regulations aimed at homeowners living in identified floodplains.

According to city engineers, the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Army Corp of Engineers have agreed to rescind flood insurance rate maps which would cost homeowners and developers plenty.

The controversial maps — which drew the rath of engineers and real estate and insurance agents — would have forced harsh regulations on future residential and commercial development by making it more costly to purchase flood insurance protection.

But local engineers saw through the calculations and determined that the corp had flawed in projections aimed at measuring the extent of damage in a 100-year flood scenario.

"The Corp discovered an error in their calculations," said City Engineering Director Harvey Hanson, "We're back under the existing (flood) program now."

The corp's mistake was a costly one. Besides errors contained in their projections, the corp spent three years and $100,000 to develop the maps at a cost to FEMA, which reportedly is unhappy with the outcome.

"All things considered, Midland is better off than before," said Councilman Bill Williams. "I'll feel a lot better when I see that letter."

That letter — a reported apology to the city for the inconvenience — is expected to arrive from FEMA shortly.

STRESS

Added Midland Chamber of Commerce Chief Executive Officer Steve Davidson: "All of us need to be cognizant of the fact there are people out there who need help. We all know that this economic situation that's very volatile has caused a lot of shake up in people's lifestyles."

Davidson remained proud that "We always have been a city that responded to human need."

Officials of cities cited by Psychology Today magazine as the most stressful in the country reacted angrily to the ranking, while the mayor of the nation's least stressed burg, State College, Pa., was pleased.

"That's ridiculous," responded Little Rock, Ark., Chamber of Commerce President Paul Harvel on Wednesday to his city's ranking as the fifth most stressful place.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Assistant City Manager Pete Witschenhe said: "I've lived in other areas of the country. My impression is there isn't any more stress here than any other urban area." The Fort Lauderdale area was ranked 12th most stressful, joining several other Florida cities on the list.

"I think people got a charge out of this," said State College Mayor Arnold Addison. He attributed the low-stress rating of the small city, known by its residents as Happy Valley, to the fact that it's the home of Penn State University.

Reno, Nev., was portrayed as the stress capital of the nation.

Sgt. Karl Schmidt of the Reno Police Department said the "divorce capital of the world" was being unfairly penalized for a high burglary rate resulting from tourists leaving valuables in cars or hotel rooms.

Levine said the 10 lowest-stress places were: State College; Grand Forks, N.D.; St. Cloud, Minn.; Rochester, Minn.; McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, Texas; Altoona, Pa.; Bloomington, Ind.; Provo-Orem, Utah; Utica, N.Y.; and Akron, Ohio.

The 10 most stressful were: Reno; Las Vegas, Nev.; Miami; Lakeland-Winter Haven, Fla.; North Little Rock-Little Rock; Panama City, Fla.; Odessa, Texas; Jacksonville, Fla.; San Francisco-Oakland; and Los Angeles-Long Beach, Calif.

Levine and fellow researchers Kuni Miyake and Marta Lee said the criteria they used to rank the cities are "both causes and effects of social stress, clearly an important element in psychological well-being," he said.

Previous studies unfairly "assume that people who live under better environmental, economic and cultural conditions are more satisfied with their lives," he said.

But psychologists, he said, "have long recognized that favorable living conditions don't always produce subjective well-being."

He noted that "the West and South, known for their mild climates and easy living, ranked highest and second highest respectively on all four types of pathology."

Art Ellick, executive director of Community Service Council of Broward County, Fla., a human service umbrella agency, said parts of Florida have earned the stressful ranking. Many whose lives are on the brink of crisis are lured to south Florida by its of mild climate and economic prosperity, he said.

But when they arrive, without the support of family or friends, their problems explode, he said.

Others agreed that south Florida's mix of new arrivals, low wages, high housing costs and rootlessness add up to trouble for many and could lead to higher rates of alcoholism, divorce, crime and suicide.

"It's really different down here, and I can understand why there are suicides and alcoholism," said Todd Barton, who moved to the Fort Lauderdale area from Alabama six months ago.

"There are so many pressures down here," he said. "It forces people into social disorder and deviant behavior."

Darlene Bowling, 18, a restaurant cook in Altoona, which was ranked the sixth least-stressful city, said a little more stress might do the western Pennsylvania town good.

"I don't like it," she said of Altoona's relaxed atmosphere. "I want something more wild."

FLOOD

City officials immediately disputed claims made by FEMA when the study was concluded.

In fact, according Williams, the city plans to "appeal" other aspects of the study that were geologically incorrect to begin with, such as corp flow calculations based on soil formations found in Fort Worth.

However, the corp did agree with Hansen and others that it's projected flood range was clearly out of line from what Midland knew to be fact.

For example, during a major flood, the city and other private engineers calculated a maximum effected area of 525 square miles compared to 725 miles figured in the Corp study.

"They just covered an awful wide area up and down those draws," said City Manager Fred Poe. "Unless they're (maps) modified, half the people in town would have to get flood insurance."

Poe said rescinding the maps is certain to throw Midland into a "real quandry" as far as issuing new building permits. However, he said he was certain FEMA's letter would address some of those concerns.

Hansen said it was the city's intent to set up a meeting with the Corp to determine just what criteria was used in the study. At the same time, engineers want a say on how the new maps are prepared.

Williams says there's still a lot of "unknown factors" that the city will now have to investigate. "The bottom line is, this has to be extremely good for us."

TRADE

Despite the administration's assurances, the widening deficit was certain to provide ammunition for Michael Dukakis, who has charged that the soaring trade deficits of the 1980s have cost America millions of lost jobs and represent one of the greatest failures of the Reagan administration.

Vice President George Bush has sought to minimize month-to-month variations in the deficit, pointing instead to the fact that the deficit for the entire year is headed lower.

For the first eight months of the year, the trade deficit is running at an annual rate of $138.2 billion, a substantial improvement from the record deficit of $170.3 billion suffered in 1987.

Indeed, the shrinking of the deficit has been the principal reason for the better-than-expected economic growth so far this year. Economists attribute about half of overall growth to the improving trade deficit.

U.S. exports rose to a record level of $27.55 billion in August, an increase of $1.03 billion over the July level.

After suffering hard times from mid-1984 through 1986, American industry has been enjoying a boom as the lower value of the dollar has made U.S. goods competitive once again on overseas markets.

But, unfortunately, the weaker dollar has not had much impact in slowing Americans' appetite for imported goods, even though they now cost more.

WELFARE

Under JOBS, by contrast, only parents of children under 3 are exempt, and states can lower that to age 1. Also, services must be much more extensive.

Parents will be offered basic and remedial education, literacy classes, job skills training, job readiness activities, job placement, child care and transportation. States must also provide two of the following: job search, on-the-job training, community work experience and work supplementation, in which a welfare grant subsidizes an individual's private wages. Parents under 20 must earn a high school diploma or its equivalent.

"The bill really puts the states in the lead. It provides them with a great deal of flexibility and it doesn't give them a road map," said Judith Gueron, president of the Manpower Demonstration Research Corp.

But while states may vary in their approaches, she said, their message to parents will be the same: "Welfare is a different bargain."

The impact of this shift will depend on several things. For example, states are required to put up a substantial amount of their own money. How much will they want to invest, and how well will they handle their new responsibilities?

There also is the question of the parents themselves. Will they welcome or resent this change in the traditional welfare bargain?

Kevin Aslanian, spokesman for a coalition of 25 welfare rights groups, called the new policies "an assault against poor women who are trying to raise a child." He said mothers shouldn't be forced out of their homes during "the most precious years" of childhood.

BRONZE

"But this is not to honor Jessica. It's to honor the volunteers...the heroes," Ms. Gifford explained. "When they knew at the well they needed help, they called on outsiders."

The First Baptist Church of Midland's orchestra and choir will kick off the proceedings Saturday. Following the patriotic music to be played, master of ceremonies and judge Pat Baskin will introduce such luminaries as Salvation Army Maj. Harvey Harwell, Jessica, her mother, Cissy McClure and Midland Police Sgt. Andy Glasscock, Ms. Gifford said.

Mayor Carroll Thomas has a "special" announcement chamber officials are keeping hush-hush until the day, Ms. Gifford said.

"Cissy will have a few words to say and address the questions she knows the media wants to know," the co-chairman added.

The chamber urges all residents to attend the event Saturday, she said.

SHROUD

News reports for some weeks have said the tests dated the shroud to the Middle Ages and therefore it could not be the burial cloth of Christ.

Professor Luigi Gonella, scientific adviser to the Cardinal of Turin, said late last month he was told the news reports were correct.

But he said at the time that Roman Catholic Church officials still had not seen the results and were angry because they were being "accused of trying to hide the results, accused of taking part in a conspiracy to hide the truth, of being afraid of the truth."

Laboratories at the University of Arizona, the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at the University of Zurich and Oxford University conducted the carbon-14 tests on post-age-stamp size pieces of linen snipped from the shroud in April.

The tests give a scientific basis for the age of the shroud but do nothing to solve the enduring riddle of how the image was created.

American scientists who subjected the linen to its most rigorous chemical, computer and photographic analysis concluded in 1981 that it was "a real human form of a whipped and crucified man and not the product of an artist."

They speculated it resulted from chemical changes in the linen while it was in contact with a body. Such changes could be duplicated to a degree in the laboratory, they said. But they added no method could adequately explain the shroud's image.

West Texas drought has decreased cotton harvest

FORT WORTH (AP) — The drought that parched West Texas this year also cut into the estimated cotton harvest, as gin operators expect shorter lines than usual when farmers bring their crops in for processing and baling.

Farmers are blaming the shortfall on rains that came too late. A regional cotton crop at 25 percent to 40 percent below the historical average is expected to produce cuts in jobs, income and consumer spending in rural communities from the Snyder-Sweetwater area to Eastland and Wichita Falls. Virtually none of the region's cotton is irrigated.

Last year, more than 1,000 cotton modules, each weighing about 4,500 pounds, were waiting to be prcessed at the Farmers' Cooperative Gin in Anson, just north of Abilene.

But Mark Holloway, Farmers Co-op Gin manager, said with less than half the output this year, the area harvest won't produce long waits for ginning.

Statewide, agriculture officials expect this year's cotton crop to be the fourth-largest in 10 years, down 7 percent from last year's harvest. But the crop around Anson and other West Central Texas areas won't be that good.

On farms in Jones County, the difference between the 1987 and 1988 harvests is like day and night, said Holloway.

He said the Farms Co-op Gin processed about 15,000 bales last year, but probably won't turn out more than 6,000 bales this season.

"The rains came too late," he said.

Austin teen honored for quick thinking that saved brother

By JOHN HARRIS

AUSTIN (AP) — Heather Lopez-Cepero discovered the flames in the hallway after the power to her tape player shut off.

She dashed outside and ran to a neighbor for help. But it was her quick decision to smash a window with her hands and rescue her brother, Tony, that earned her a certificate of commendation from the Austin Fire Department.

During a ceremony Monday to announce promotions and present other certificates for outstanding service, Fire Chief Bill Roberts honored the 15-year-old Austin High School student for heroic actions that saved the life of her brother, who turned 7 Tuesday.

Heather's mother was working late, and her brother was asleep in their mother's room of their South Austin home when the fire was discovered about 10:30 p.m. on April 10.

"I opened the hall door, and flames were all in the hallway," Heather said. "I went outside and got a neighbor. They thought I was saying that a robber had gotten back in the window."

But her brother's safety was what occupied Heather's mind.

"I was trying to find a rock to punch the window with," she said. "I couldn't find it. I punched it with my hand" and pulled Tony outside.

Jean Lopez-Cepero, their mother, said her bedroom door was described as "framed in flames" and fire had spread into a bathroom. The door was next to the window where Heather rescued her brother, she said.

"I didn't notice it till about 10 minutes afterward," Heather said. "They said if Tony had been in 10 minutes more, he would have been done in from smoke inhalation."

The fire damaged 60 percent of the house, which has been rebuilt. Firefighters said the blaze started in a hallway furnace.

Fire Lt. Stephen Cook, whose job includes teaching about fire prevention, said few firefighters knew of Heather's heroism until her school principal called him about her actions, having overheard talk from students. Cook said Tony actually would not have survived for two or three more minutes, rather than 10, before Heather rescued him.

"There's no doubt in my mind that she saved his life through her actions, and that's why we recognized her for this award," Cook said.

Poll shows GOP leads as candidates prepare for debate

NATION

George Bush and Michael Dukakis tended to last-minute preparations for the second and final round of their presidential campaign debates as polls suggested that the Democratic nominee must deliver a solid punch tonight to overcome his Republican rival.

The two White House contenders, in a day filled with sports metaphors — and even a sporting event — hinted Wednesday at their strategy for their face-to-face confrontation.

"Fastball, curve, slider — maybe a knuckler," Dukakis said when asked what he planned to toss at Bush tonight.

The vice president said he hoped to show the American people "what my heartbeat is, what I really care about."

Neither Bush nor Dukakis planned any campaign appearances today. The two candidates were conducting walk-throughs of the debate area before their 9 p.m. EDT clash at Pauley Pavilion, better known as the home of the University of California at Los Angeles basketball team.

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle was campaigning in Montana, Oklahoma and Arkansas while his counterpart, Lloyd Bentsen, was on Capitol Hill, urging Democrats in Congress to wrap up their session quickly and hit the campaign trail for the Democratic ticket.

Polls released Wednesday showed the GOP nominee leading solidly in the state-by-state race for Electoral College votes, although nationwide surveys suggest a close race.

An ABC News-Washington Post 50-state poll found Bush leading firmly in 21 states with 220 electoral votes — 50 shy of the total needed to win the presidency. Dukakis led in three states and the District of Columbia for 30 electoral votes.

The poll of 9,778 likely voters was conducted from Sept. 21 through Monday. Margins of error ranged from five to 10 percentage points in each state where 100 to 500 voters were interviewed.

States in Bush's column included Texas and its electoral prize of 29 votes, and New Jersey, with 16 electoral votes. California, with the biggest electoral prize of 47 votes, was leaning toward Bush as was New York and its 36 electoral votes, according to the ABC-Post poll.

However, a survey released today by The Buffalo News found Dukakis holding a 9 percent lead over Bush — 49 percent to 40 percent — in New York state, including a commanding 62 percent to 28 percent lead in the New York City area.

Political-Media Research Inc. of Washington, D.C., conducted the survey of 850 registered voters Monday and Tuesday. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus four percentage points.

The ABC-Post poll also conducted a standard national survey of 1,187 likely voters and found Bush leading Dukakis 51 percent to 45 percent. The survey, conducted Oct. 5 through Tuesday, had a margin of error of four percentage points.

A CBS News-New York Times poll had nearly the same result: 47-42 for Bush. That survey of 1,009 probable voters was done Oct. 8 through Monday and also had a four-point margin of error.

Bush called the state-by-state survey "interesting and encouraging," but said he would stick to his strategy. Dukakis adviser Ron Brown disputed GOP claims that Bush has the backing of the South, West and Rocky Mountain states, and said the Electoral College race is still close.

"I think you see a scenario, a very reasonable, rational scenario, that indicates this thing is nowhere near over," Brown said.

Aides to Dukakis believe a solid showing by the Democratic nominee in the 90-minute, prime-time encounter with Bush will help propel their candidate to the lead in the close race.

Unlike the first presidential debate on Sept. 25, when candidates and aides tried to set low expectations, Dukakis was predicting a win.

"We're ahead 2-0 and we're going to make it a clean sweep," Dukakis said, referring to his debate with Bush and Bentsen's confrontation with Quayle.

Bush also expressed confidence heading into the dbate, telling reporters on Wednesday: "We do seem to be looking a little stronger politically these days."

Quayle, campaigning in Montana, advised his running mate to "hit it over centerfield," and added, "He'll do very well." Bentsen said Dukakis should "hang loose."

The vice president said he would cite fewer statistics in the debate and talk more about "how I would like to lead this country, where I'd like to see us be in the '90s if I'm elected president."

Bush then headed off to Dodger Stadium where he watched the Los Angeles Dodgers defeat the New York Mets 6-0 to capture the National League pennant and win a spot in baseball's World Series.

"Great night. I'll tell you, once in awhile you luck into something really fun," Bush told reporters who accompanied him to the game. "Can't say that, once in awhile, we don't get a break in life."

Reagan may call special session over military aid to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to summon Congress into a special session to vote on renewed military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras if he believes the Sandinista government is moving to mop up remnants of the rebel forces.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, speaking with reporters Wednesday evening, confirmed earlier reports by sources that Reagan had settled on a special session as his conditional plan for seeking new military aid for the Contras.

Fitzwater described it as a fall-back position to ensure the Contras' survival into the next U.S. administration, should Nicaragua's leftist government attack the remnants of the rebel movement in an effort to eradicate it.

The White House spokesman acknowledged that there is no chance to obtain further money for the rebels before the 100th Congress adjourns. Lawmakers are eager to return home to campaign, and hope to complete their regular session by the week's end.

Reagan has the power under the Constitution to call Congress back to Washington after adjournment. If he thought it necessary to save the Contras, he would ask Congress to release $16.5 million in stockpiled weaponry now stored in Honduran warehouses, Fitzwater said.

Reagan is expected to make the threat in a statement as early as today, according to well-placed sources who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said it is intended as a dual message to Congress and to the Sandinistas that the president will be scrutinizing activities in Nicaragua during the remainder of the year when Congress will not be in session.

"The point is to send the message, 'Don't you try anything, 'cause I ain't leaving town," said one source familiar with White House planning.

Under a Pentagon money bill Reagan signed earlier this month, a procedure was established for expedited congressional consideration of a new request for military aid for the rebels.

Despite the gestures, support for the Contras remains at a low ebb in Congress and even their strongest supporters question whether the rebels could ever be regrouped into an effective fighting force.

From a peak of nearly 18,000 rebel troops inside Nicaragua early this year, the number has dwindled to fewer than 2,000, according to intelligence estimates.

"They are now reduced to refugee status," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill.

Many of the rebels have fled to camps just inside neighboring Honduras, and others have scattered elsewhere.

Reagan's hope is to keep up Contra morale and preserve the potential for reviving the rebels if vice president George Bush wins his presidential campaign and wants to continue to make the Contras an arm of his Central America policy, according to the sources. Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis opposes use of the Contras as a foreign policy tool.

The Contras have been without U.S. military support since February, when it was ended in deference to efforts to forge a long-term cease-fire between the two sides. The rebels now are receiving some $27 million in humanitarian aid under the Pentagon appropriations measure.

Under the law, Reagan could trigger an expedited vote on the stockpiled weaponry if he certifies to Congress that two of three conditions are met: that the Soviet Union continues to funnel unacceptable levels of military hardware to the Sandinistas; that the leftist government is violating terms of a regional peace accord; or that the Sandinistas have launched an unprovoked attack on the rebels.

Administration officials maintain that the first two of those conditions already exist. "The president will say if anything approaching the third (condition) occurs, I will call Congress back into session," said one source familiar with the White House planning.

Drug bill may delay Congress going home

Despite growing election pressures to get home and campaign, Congress may have to remain in town into next week to deal with the year's hottest campaign topic — drug abuse and the war against it.

House Majority Leader Tom Foley, D-Wash., delivered the bad news to anxious-to-campaign colleagues Wednesday night. "It is doubtful the drug bill will be ready to be voted on before next Tuesday or Wednesday," he told groaning House members at a night session.

Over in the Senate, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., tried late Wednesday night to get agreement on how to proceed with the bill. His plan wasn't even out of his mouth before Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., interrupted to say he would be "dumbfounded" if Byrd could get everyone to agree to any single plan of attack.

Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas warned that at the rate the Senate was moving, "we're going to need a week and half more on the drug bill."

"I'm not running this year. I'll be right here," Dole added.

"The best thing we can do for the country is to shut the Congress down and go home and make the people safe until next January," said Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

Even if the Senate passes the massive bill by Friday, Foley said it would take days to iron out differences between the Senate and House versions. That would propel the Congress into the third week of October.

Election Day for all 435 House seats, and 33 Senate seats, will be only three weeks away next Tuesday. Members of the House and Senate had hoped to be back home by early October, or this coming weekend at the latest.

Instead, with the weekend approaching, the Senate spent much of the day in repeated recesses and time-eating quorum calls. That left the Senate floor free for senators to come in and talk about issues dear to their hearts, their states or both.

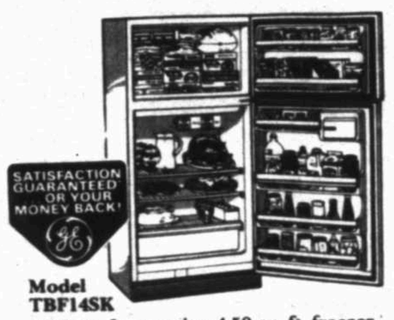

But the session resumed the following week, working on what members refer to as "cats and dogs," nonpressing bills of particular interest to individual members.

Despite arrest, town with 16 suspicious fires remains uneasy

JEFFERSON, N.H. (AP) — The arrest of a former volunteer firefighter in connection with 16 suspicious fires did not reassure many residents of this New England hamlet that their six months of terror had ended.

Sloper

"We'll sit up at night 'til we hear more. We'll go on the way we have been," said Donna Hartford, whose family narrowly escaped a fire that destroyed their home in July.

"This is at least something. They have done something, but I don't feel comfortable."

Her unease was echoed by others in the community of 850, despite the arrest Wednesday of Lance Lalumiere, 23, of Jefferson, a former volunteer firefighter who was charged with setting fire to his brother's house in August.

State Safety Commissioner Richard Flynn, appearing at a news conference in Concord, said the state will seek indictments against Lalumiere charging him with setting 15 other fires.

Five of the town's 21 suspicious or confirmed arson fires since May apparently were set by others, said state Police Lt. Gary Sloper, who added, "We do anticipate further arrests."

Sloper declined to give details, including the number of suspects and whether any acted in concert. He also refused to speculate on a motive.

No one has been killed or seriously injured in the fires that have blackened pockets of Jefferson's 52 square miles of scenic meadows, woods and hills. But there have been close calls among the village's 363 residences.

The fires began with a grass fire on May 5; a barn was the next target, and by late May the first occupied building had been struck.

As the toll of destruction mounted, many families began sleeping in shifts and abandoned vacation plans. Some residents began night patrols. Police feared vigilante violence. One child packed all her precious possessions and mailed them to relatives in other states, afraid her home would be next to burn.

Sloper said Lalumiere, a restaurant dishwasher, had been a suspect for some time.

"It's taken a great deal of time and effort to ... make sure (we had) more than a reasonable amount of evidence to present," he said.

Lalumiere reported the fire at his brother's home and was there trying to put it out when firefighters arrived, authorities said. The fire damaged the front of the building.

Lalumiere was asked to resign from the fire department after he moved to another town briefly. Jefferson requires volunteer firefighters to live within its borders.

He entered no plea during his arraignment in Lancaster, routine in felony cases in New Hampshire. He was being held in Belknap County jail in lieu of $50,000 cash bail.

But in an interview two days after the fire at his brother's house, Lalumiere told the weekly Coos County Democrat: "All I tried to do was save my brother's house and this is the thanks I get."

"I have nothing to hide," he added.

Some townspeople who know Lalumiere said they do not believe he is capable of single-handedly setting the fires and eluding the elaborate police surveillance in the town since summer.

Also, some point out that at least two fires occurred after Lalumiere was under constant police surveillance.

"Explain the two fires that happened after Lance was under 24-hour surveillance," Hartford said. "We've all been up today, thinking there might be something more than (Lalumiere's arrest), but now it's kind of blah."

Lalumiere has been staying at a motel in Jefferson since August. William Perkins, who has lived there since his home burned in May, said he also doubts Lalumiere is involved.

"I think they've got the wrong fish in a cage," Perkins said.

Lalumiere's parents, who live in Jefferson, did not answer knocks at their door Wednesday afternoon.

One resident who spoke under condition of anonymity out of fear of reprisals, said she would not rest easy until every fire is explained and every arsonist convicted.

Army's ban of gays called unjustified

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Army's exclusion of homosexuals from service is unjustified and caters to "private bigotry," a lawyer for a discharged gay soldier told a federal appeals panel in a historic discrimination case.

But the government, defending the ban, said the Army had the right to follow "society's moral judgments" against homosexuals.

In a packed courtroom, an 11-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals heard more than an hour of arguments Wednesday in reconsidering a decision by a smaller panel of the court that the Army's ban on homosexuals was invalid.

The 11-member panel did not issue any decision Wednesday.

In its 2-1 decision, the three-judge panel declared that homosexuals, as a historically persecuted group, were entitled to the same strict constitutional protections against discrimination given to racial and religious minorities. It was the first federal appellate court to reach those conclusions.

The lawyer for former soldier Perry Watkins of Tacoma, Wash., told the 11 judges Wednesday that the Army has no more justification in barring homosexuals than it did in locking up Japanese-Americans in World War II.

"There was no evidence to support the Army's assertion that all Japanese-Americans were not loyal. There is no evidence to support the Army's assertion that all homosexuals cannot effectively serve the military," said James Lobsenz, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer.

The Army's goal in excluding homosexuals, Lobsenz said, is "to cater to private bigotry."

But Justice Department attorney E. Roy Hawkens said the Army had the right to follow "society's moral judgments" against homosexuals.

Allegations against fired police chief shakes town

HOMINY, Okla. (AP) — During the past week, the black police chief who faces a paternity suit by a white employee was fired, and two officers and a judge resigned, but officials say the worst may be yet to come.

This once-quiet rural northeast Oklahoma town's City Council is seeking a grand jury investigation into months of claims of misconduct by ex-Police Chief Charles Crawford and counterclaims of racial bias.

"I'm sure that this thing is not over yet," said Mayor Steve Tilley, whose town of 3,000 residents includes about 150 blacks. "It may drag on for years."

Crawford, who has been married 11 years, said city officials who opposed having a black chief conspired to oust him, using allegations that he had affairs with white police dispatchers to raise the ire of the City Council.

"The only difference in these days and the old days is that people don't use ropes anymore," said Crawford, referring to lynchings in the old South. "They use a lot of trickery and politics to keep you exactly where they want you."

No criminal charges have been filed against Crawford, who was police chief for nine years, but allegations in testimony to city investigators included sexual involvement with dispatchers, sexual harassment of other female employees, preferential treatment for some residents and harsh handling of others.

Fired Police Chief Charles Crawford says he is not guilty of accusations of personal and professional misconduct, which led to his ouster last week.

City Manager Paul O'Keefe, who serves at the council's discretion, fired Crawford last Thursday, saying only that he did it "for the good of the service." O'Keefe is out of town and unavailable for comment until Friday, officials said.

A day after Crawford's firing, police Lt. Dave Pillars and Officer Randy Walling were forced to resign, leaving a police force of two. Tilley said the resignations were accepted because "they went along with what their chief said and did."

On Monday, Municipal Judge Bill Hall resigned after acknowledging he had signed blank warrants later used by police in arrests.

Contractor agrees to $115 million settlement for defrauding Pentagon

CHICAGO (AP) — A defense contractor agreed to a $115 million fine in the largest Pentagon fraud settlement after admitting it billed the Defense Department for things like babysitting, country clubs and servants for its executives, officials said.

In agreeing to plead guilty to defrauding the Pentagon by overbilling for airplane parts, Sundstrand Corp. also said its employees wined and dined Defense Department officials and then submitted those expenses for reimbursements, U.S. prosecutors said Wednesday.

No company or Pentagon employee has been charged in the overbillings, which spanned from 1980-86, but Sundstrand agreed to cooperate with investigators, said U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas. The investigation should be completed by January, said Valukas, who declined to estimate how much Sundstrand's actions cost the government.

"It was the object of the conspiracy to improve Sundstrand's ability to market hardware to the Defense Department by giving gratuities to Defense Department personnel and their spouses while concealing (their) identity," the government said.

Sundstrand employees gave an estimated $100,000 worth of liquor, meals, motel rooms, golf outings and tickets to the theater, hockey, football and baseball games, the government said. They then submitted expense reports identifying the Defense Department workers they entertained only as a "customer" or "government employee," the complaint said.

Some government employees are being investigated for allegedly accepting the gratuities, said Larry Wilson, a spokesman for the department's Defense Logistics Agency.

The company also admitted it submitted fraudulent claims to the Defense Department for what it called "general and administrative costs" on its contracts.

These claims included millions of dollars in unallowable costs for such things as "liquor, babysitting, gifts, travel by executives' spouses, cigarettes, candy, saunas, golf, tennis, country club dues, movies, jewelry, clothes,...snowplowing at executives' homes, radar detectors,...entertainment,...and servants for executives and their spouses," the government said.

Delays in restarting nuclear reactors may hurt security

WASHINGTON (AP) — A prolonged delay in restarting nuclear weapons reactors could jeopardize national security, say Pentagon officials who expressed relief at an Energy Department announcement that it planned to resume production of tritium early next year.

"Obviously, the sooner the better as far as we are concerned," a Pentagon official said Wednesday. "Tritium is absolutely essential for the production of warheads" on modern thermonuclear weapons, said the official, speaking on condition that his name not be used.

"If (the reactors) are not started for several years, then we might begin to have trouble," said the source. Officials at the Defense and Energy Departments said that for security reasons they could not specify the exact amount of tritium that the government has and needs, or when a shortage would become critical.

In a related development, Energy Department spokeswoman Gail Bradshaw said tests showed no health threat to three workers exposed to radiation at a nuclear weapons facility, the Rocky Flats plutonium processing plant in Golden, Colo., on Sept. 29. The plant has been closed by the government for safety reasons.

Energy Secretary John S. Herrington, seeking to defuse criticism of lax safety standards at nuclear facilities, announced Tuesday that one of three tritium-producing reactors at the Energy Department's Savannah River Plant, in Aiken, S.C., will begin "a phased start-up" in December, culminating in January.

The three reactors at Savannah River, first brought into operation in 1954, have been closed down since August for safety and maintenance checks, and Herrington announced new operating procedures to reduce the danger of a mishap.

The Energy Department manufactures nuclear warheads for the Pentagon, and its Savannah River reactors are the sole source of plutonium and tritium for bombs.

Herrington told a congressional panel last Feb. 23 that "we are awash in plutonium."

A delay of several years in renewing the production of tritium is possible because of problems at Savannah River. The government does not plan to start construction of a new generation of nuclear weapons reactors until the early 1990s for completion around the turn of the century.

Due to safety problems, the Savannah River reactors will be operated only at half power, energy officials say.

Tritium, a radioactive form of hydrogen, is used to increase the efficiency of nuclear warheads, allowing engineers to produce smaller and lighter weapons, said Tom Cochran, a physicist and co-author of "The Nuclear Weapons Handbook," a detailed analysis of the U.S. arsenal.

Tritium, however, has a short halflife. Half of any quantity of tritium will degrade in 12.3 years, meaning that 5.5 percent of the sample will degrade per year.

That means the government needs to replenish the tritium modules on each of its estimated 22,000 warheads to assure that they have the anticipated explosive power, said Cochran.

The tritium module on each warhead is replenished every eight to 10 years, said a Pentagon source.

Tritium is so important for modern thermonuclear weapons that a group of physicists recently suggested banning its production as a means of forcing arms cuts by the United States and the Soviet Union.

"Tritium is unique among nuclear weapons materials in its potential to drive nuclear arms reductions if both sides agreed to a halt in its production," said the proposal.

Methadone substitute may have been found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yale University researchers working with the National Institutes of Health say they are optimistic that a methadone substitute they discovered will prove more effective in getting heroin addicts off all drugs.

If true, it could have a significantly help curb the spread of AIDS among drug abusers and their sexual partners.

Thomas R. Kosten and associates at the university's school of medicine are conducting a six-month study with 120 subjects to see whether they can duplicate the promising results from a one-month, pilot study involving 41 addicts.

"I think this can be a major treatment advance for us in working with these drug addicts who are spreading AIDS on the streets," Kosten said Wednesday at a seminar.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is a contagious disease that attacks the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections. The virus most often is spread through close contact with blood, blood products or semen from infected persons.

The drug Kosten is working with is buprenorphine, which has been used in Europe for about 10 years as a prescription pain reliever, although not in drug treatment programs.

30 hurt in bus accident

NORTH LOGAN, Utah (AP) — A school bus ran off a road, jumped into a ditch and landed in a field Wednesday, sending 30 children to a hospital, authorities said.

No serious injuries were reported, but Cache County School District spokesman Keith Hansen said three children suffered fractures and one sustained a concussion.

The bus was carrying 64 children between Newton and Trenton and was en route to the Lewiston Elementary School when the driver was distracted by a child asking a question, Hansen said.

"The bus went off the shoulder of the road and in order to keep it from rolling over, the driver jumped a canal and the bus landed in a field," Hansen said.

He said the driver, Ned Phelps, has driven school buses for many years.

Many of the children were released from the hospital Wednesday afternoon, and Hansen said it was not immediately known how many were admitted.

Hansen said Phelps was "extremely shaken" and was kept at the hospital for observation.

Couple trapped 8 days

SARATOGA, Calif. (AP) — A 77-year-old woman spent eight days trapped in a ravine beside her dead husband after their vehicle plunged off a highway, but she managed to survive the ordeal.

Helen Heinrich was listed in critical condition Wednesday, three days after she was rescued by three men who were looking for crayfish in a nearby creek.

Heinrich was driving home from breakfast in Santa Cruz with her husband of 55 years, Rudolph, when the brakes failed and their car plunged off the highway into a wooded ravine, she told Highway Patrol officers in a bedside interview.

Rudolph Heinrich, 83, died of massive internal injuries shortly after the crash, authorities said.

Before she was rescued, Helen Heinrich managed to survive without food or water for eight days, lapsing in and out of consciousness.

Witness tells of torment

NEW YORK (AP) — The daughter of a judge charged with conspiring to fix Bess Myerson's lover's divorce said she tried to wreck her car out of despondency during a 1½-year job search before the former Miss America hired her.

More than 100 spectators crowded into the courtroom Wednesday to see Sukhreet Gabel testify for the prosecution at the conspiracy trial of her mother, former state Supreme Court Justice Hortense Gabel, 75; Miss Myerson, 64, and her lover, Carl "Andy" Capasso, 43.

Ms. Gabel, 39, speaking about her 18-month job search, said she was "despondent, despairing and depressed" until being hired in August 1983 by Miss Myerson, the city's then-cultural affairs commissioner.

Prosecutors claim Miss Myerson circumvented normal city hiring procedures to give Ms. Gabel the $19,000-a-year job as her special assistant. In return, they charge Ms. Gabel's mother cut Capasso's temporary alimony and child support payments to his estranged wife, Nancy.

Snake act under fire

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A snake-swallowing act has come under fire from the Utah Humane Society, which says it may ask the Legislature to outlaw the practice.

Ron Stewart's reptile-gobbling performance came five months ago during the "What's the Craziest Thing You Would Do for a Motorcycle" contest. The competition was sponsored by the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of Logan-Ogden, KJQ Radio and Newgate Yamaha.

In its fall newsletter, the society denounced Stewart's act, which placed third. The contest was won by 21-year-old Jenise Merrill of Ogden, who covered herself in liquid cow manure and rolled in cornflakes.

EPA to disregard clause outlawing some food additives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency says it will define a one-in-million chance of getting cancer as effectively zero, permitting it to sometimes disregard a legal provision that outlaws cancer-causing additives in food.

Paradoxically, the agency says this could reduce the pesticide threat in the diet by speeding the introduction of pesticides that are weak causes of cancer but safer than those being used today.

Though EPA doesn't regulate most food additives, it does regulate pesticides. Federal law defines as an additive any pesticide residue on food that is concentrated by processing.

A cancer-causing residue may be permitted on raw food if EPA finds that the benefit of pesticide use outweighs the risk.

When the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1958 was passed, it included a provision, called the "Delaney clause" after the bill's main sponsor, then-Rep. James J. Delaney, D-N.Y., banning any food additive shown to cause cancer in man or animal.

Up to now, EPA has interpreted the clause to require it to refuse to establish a permitted residue level for new cancer-causing pesticides that become more concentrated in processing, and to refuse to issue pesticide licenses for such new chemicals.

But in the early 1980s the agency became aware that new data gathered in its massive review of old pesticides licensed under looser standards would forbid the licensing of those chemicals if they were to come up again.

Jack Moore, the agency's acting deputy administrator, admitted to reporters Wednesday that the agency was reluctant to face the implications of the new data at first.

Even today, a "zero risk (policy) is totally infeasible as we sit here...There would be so many pesticide uses being curtailed we'd cause dramatic and deep disruption in the food supply," Moore said.

Moore said the policy change will permit EPA to decide the fate of 73 currently licensed old pesticides for which there is some evidence of cancer-causing power. At least 50 concentrate residues in processing.

There are at least a dozen chemicals known to be weak causes of cancer that have been proposed for new or additional uses on food, though not all have current license applications pending, he said.

"If you don't let (the new chemical) on the market there'll never be an opportunity" to retire the old one, either through regulations or competitive pressure, Moore said.

Janet Hathaway, an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council, and Jay Feldman, coordinator of the National Campaign Against the Misuse of Pesticides, both said EPA was indeed obliged to use the Delaney clause against old pesticides if new data justified it.

"We are horrified," said Ms. Hathaway, who accused EPA of "completely gutting the Delaney clause."

"You need legislation if you're going to go this route," she said. In fact, her group supported in principle an unsuccessful bill this summer aimed at similar changes in the law.

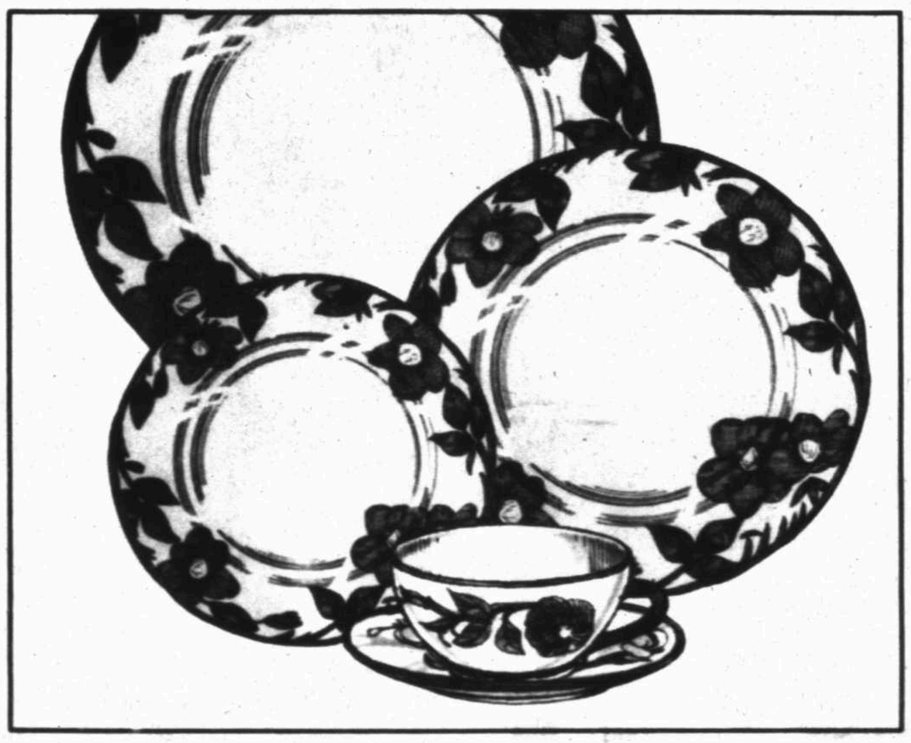

Feldman said EPA's new policy failed to consider the cumulative risk from all pesticides.

If a pesticide has a better than one-in-a-million chance of causing cancer, EPA will not permit any residue in processed food. If the only residue is on the raw crop, EPA will apply risk-benefit calculations, giving greater weight to benefits to the food supply as a whole than it did in the past.

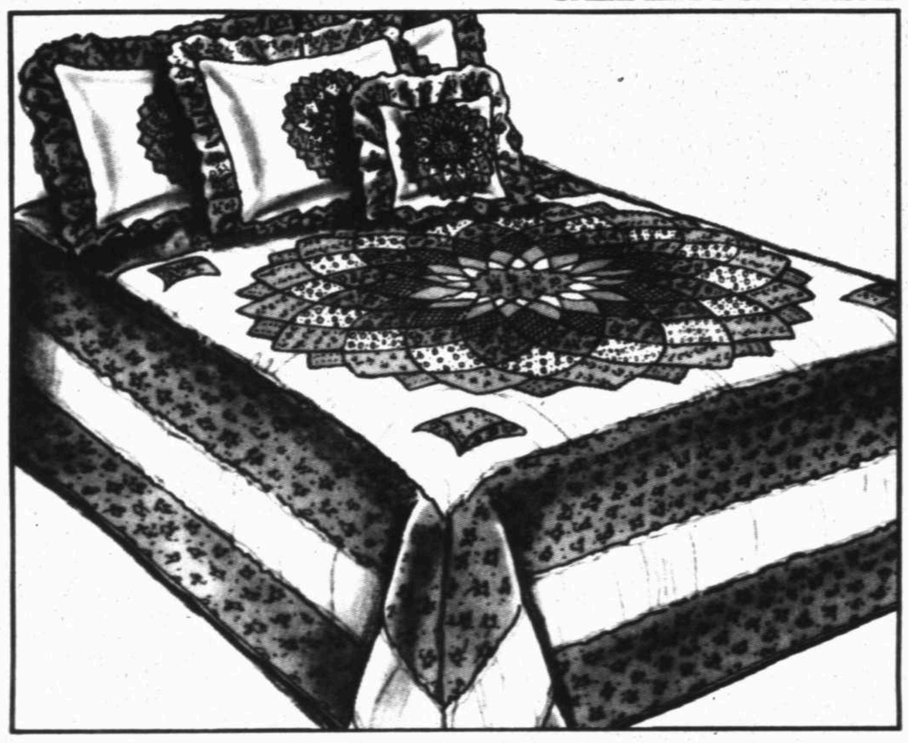

If the maximum risk of cancer is one in a million or less, the agency will treat the chemical as if it were not a cause of cancer.

Ozone agreement needs timely push

Two facts point to the need for nations to work together on such environmental dangers as depletion of the ozone layer around the earth. One is the fact that scientific evidence of the destruction of the protective ozone layer is accumulating rapidly. Secondly is the fact that even when the ball is started rolling to bring about change through government action, that change usually is excruciatingly slow.

It took several years to put together the international agreement signed last year in Montreal, which calls for a 50 percent cut by 1998 in worldwide production of the chemicals that seem to be causing the ozone depletion.

Yet, since then, researchers have found the problem to be even more severe than previously estimated, and they have produced even more conclusive evidence that the culprits are chloroflurocarbons (CFCs), chemicals used in refrigeration fluids, as foam-blowing agents, as solvents and, outside the United States, as aerosol propellants. Estimates now are that ozone-detroying chlorine concentrations in the stratosphere will double or triple over the next century, even if every nation in the world follows the Montreal treaty scrupulously.

While doing what is best concerning the environment isn't always politically simple, the constituency regarding this danger is large. Every man, woman and child on this planet will be at greater risk if nations fail to act as quickly as possible. Skin cancers could increase dramatically if ozone depletion continues, scientists warn.

American CFC producers have not ignored these newest warnings. The DuPont Co. recently announced it has found a safe substitute for one of its most widely used CFCs, although further tests are needed before it can be marketed. Other companies also have stepped up their research and are talking about recycling CFCs to avoid spewing new amounts into the atmosphere. But welcome as these private efforts are, they're not enough. As the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency announced the other day, what is needed to avert an environmental catastrophe is an immediate worldwide ban on new CFC production and a 200 percent reduction in worldwide use of the more powerful CFC compounds.

The EPA is not known as alarmist, and rightly so. Until its most recent reassessment, it was urging a go-slow approach and arguing that there was plenty of time to strengthen the Montreal treaty, if needed, as further evidence came in. Thus, the agency's new stance should have a significant impact in Europe and elsewhere, where earlier warnings from environmentalists were often dismissed as hyperbole. The task now is to turn the EPA influence into action.

The Montreal treaty provides for reconvening its signatories if stronger CFC-control measures seem warranted. As the EPA has urged, the United States should set that process in motion immediately.

Animal rights execs dispute findings

WASHINGTON — Top dogs in the animal rights business have rallied around the Humane Society of the United States since we hinted at how much money there is to be made in the top ranks of animal charities.

Jack Anderson

We reported that national Humane Society President John Hoyt and Treasurer Paul Irwin were reaping far more compensation for their work than even their own board members knew. Last year, in lieu of a portion of his compensation, the Humane Society bought Hoyt a $310,000 home in Maryland. It also allowed Irwin to write himself $85,000 in checks for another real-estate venture, which was later considered by the board to be a loan.

The Humane Society gets its money with heart-tugging pleas to donors that "The animals need it now," and contributions will be "put into action on the front line immediately."

The questionable financial transactions for Hoyt and Irwin prompted the Humane Society board to hire two Washington law firms to conduct separate investigations of the dealings.

But, respected presidents of two of the wealthiest animal organizations in the country wrote letters defending Hoyt, and complaining that we were out of line to question the financial dealings.

Frederick J. Davis, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, defended Hoyt: "I am confident that future disclosures of all the facts will document his integrity."

John F. Kullberg, president of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, wrote there was nothing unusual about Hoyt's salary. Kullberg said the average salary for the president of a non-profit organization is about $119,000, although he was careful to add a "disclaimer," that his own salary is less than Hoyt's and "I am not given a house to live in."

We reported that Hoyt's and Irwin's compensation did not stop with salaries. In all, their salaries and benefits amounted to more than $139,000 and $114,000 respectively.

Maybe our report on the money to be made in animal charities hit too close to home. Davis and Kullberg run wealthy non-profit organizations themselves. A 1983 report published by an Ohio animal rights group, Mobilization for Animals, noted that Davis' Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was the wealthiest animal welfare group in the country, with more than $40 million in assets. Kullberg's American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was in ninth place with $6 million in assets. Hoyt's Humane Society of the United States placed fourth with assets of more than $11 million.

Peter Paul, a San Francisco journalist, recently finished a four-year study of charities in the United States and abroad. His upcoming book, "Easy Pickings," includes a chapter on animal organizations. Paul told our associate Jim Lynch, "I tell people if you want to get rich, get into AIDS, animal rights or missing children."

Paul thinks Humane Society literature should include a disclaimer that the national society is not connected with local humane societies that must raise their own funds to run animal shelters and other projects. The Humane Society of the United States is not an umbrella organization for local humane societies, he noted.

PENSION SKIMMING — Congress is looking into increased skimming from corporate pension funds. A company can legally skim excess pension funds when it terminates a pension plan. The only requirement is that enough is left in the plan to pay pensions at current levels. But the skimming wipes out any hope of future cost-of-living increases for pensioners. Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., reports that nationwide, more than $18 billion has been taken out of pension funds in the past eight years. The practice appears to contradict a 1974 law that says pension plans are supposed to managed for the welfare of the pensioners, not the convenience of corporations looking for quick cash.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, borrowed the Meese defense when he was put on the spot in the vice presidential debate. Bentsen was criticized for his $10,000 "breakfast club" and he responded that it was "legal." Shame on the Democratic senator for stooping to the ethical standard of too many in the Reagan era. That standard says anyone who leaves office without being indicted is clean. To Bentsen's credit, he admitted the breakfast club was a "mistake," but only after reminding the voters that he didn't break the law.

Arts Assembly vital

In response to Joanie Holt's column in "Speaking Out" on Sept. 25, I want to endorse the Arts Assembly of Midland's role in bringing the best of the arts to Midland youth in east and south side neighborhoods. Through KidsArt and Company, another "arm" of this fine organization, all of our children find out how stimulating life is and how important their own contributions are.

The Midland community has been most generous in sharing its resources with all of its citizens. Both corporate and individual donations to the Arts Assembly of Midland assure that future artists are enabled to develop, regardless of their economic backgrounds and that current artists have showcases and support for their talents.

The "umbrella" agency is necessary to foster the cooperation needed for the arts to flourish here in Midland where richness of spirit and diversity of opportunities rather than exterior "scenery" are our community's strengths.

Going to the dogs

When we were voting bonds, why didn't we vote for a larger police force? In my area there are several elderly people. We have so many big dogs, some jump fences, some dig under. I have two neighbors who are afraid to go to their dumpster.

One is afraid to go in her backyard, so she hauls her trash around to the alley in her car. I walk for my heart condition. I am afraid to walk by some houses as the dogs lunge against the fences. I've one neighbor who keeps small children. She can no longer let them out in the sunshine because of the mean dogs next door. The children are too young to know not to put their hands through the wire fence.

Let's not let Midland go to the dogs.

No stiff upper lips

Am I the only one who was disgusted by the behavior of the spoiled, crybaby American tourists on Yucatan? Perhaps the TV news cameras focused on the dramatic, but I didn't see a stiff upper lip in the lot. I know these people went through a terrifying hurricane, but their complaints about conditions afterwards were ridiculous. I heard one say that he had been forced to drink warm beer for four days! Poor baby!

The topper was when our local TV news people told me that the planeload of supplies from Midland was going to aid the tourists. The tourists were all going to be home in a few days. I think the Mexican people who have to stay and clean up the mess could have used the aid more than the "me first" people I saw on TV.

Bush is less taxing

About the last thing we need is another federal tax increase. I'm having a tough time keeping ends met right now, without another politician handing me a tax increase.

George Bush says "no tax increase." Michael Dukakis says he would approve a tax increase as a "last resort." My guess is that is one resort Dukakis will check into. The state of Massachusetts got the nickname "Taxachusetts" during Dukakis' first term as governor.

Dukakis is sure to raise taxes, there's not doubt about it. We don't need him. Vote for George Bush. It's less taxing.

GEORGE F. WILL

'The Candidate' not the one handlers see

McLEAN, Va. — Why is this man smiling, this man in the Indianapolis Colts V-neck sweater, faded slacks and ancient sneakers? Yes, he has spent a pleasant Sunday with his children. But it is dusk and another week of bear-baiting is about to begin, with him cast as the bear? So why is Dan Quayle sipping 7-Up, not something more fortifying?

George F. Will

He is a human eye of a hurricane, preternaturally tranquil. But elsewhere this has been just another manic Sunday.

The newspapers are full of stories about how Quayle is Dukákis' last, best hope. On a morning interview program he has been compared, not for the first or even just the 101st time, to Bob Forehead, an airhead congressman in a comic strip. On the same program there was comment on a Vanity Fair magazine article quoting a former classmate of Quayle remembering Quayle as a law student.

Quayle and he, said the classmate, saw Robert Redford's movie, "The Candidate," together. Afterwards, over a steak dinner and for 11 hours, they discussed the movie. Quayle, according to the classmate, said he is more handsome than Redford and that with skilled packaging, he, Quayle, could go far in politics.

Quayle says the story, like much written about him, is rubbish. He did not see the movie until years later, a few weeks before he won election to the Senate.

Does the constant drizzle of criticism, to which I have contributed, bother him? "Sure it does, but these people do not know me." But actually what bothers many, like me, who know Quayle, and know him to be better than he has seemed, is that he seems to have passively allowed himself to be putty in the hands of handlers. The Quayle of the campaign trail and the debate with Bentsen is not the Quayle of the armed services committee on the Senate floor during the INF Treaty ratification.

Regarding direction from the top of the ticket, a running mate's duty is clear: take direction. But the diminution of Dan Quayle has been accentuated by the operatives in the Bush campaign.

Quayle is weary of the "handwringers" in the Bush campaign and has told his wife, Marilyn, "We're just going to have fun these last four weeks." Too much fun has been wrung from politics by handlers who snuff out a candidate's confidence.

Politics is like a sport in that a politician, like an athlete, needs room for the spontaneous, instinctive action that is a sign of confidence. The Bush campaign, after being terrified in New Orleans, surrounded Quayle with hordes of hired guns, like a piece of glass packed in styrofoam peanuts. This is a good way to convince the candidate, and the public, that he is fragile.

A vignette: Wednesday evening, New Orleans convention. The press is baying in pursuit of Quayle concerning the National Guard. Jim Baker, Bush's head handler, is in ABC's anchor booth with David Brinkley and Peter Jennings, waiting to be interviewed. ABC's cameras are covering Quayle's arrival at the Superdome. Baker, off camera, tells Brinkley and Jennings that when Quayle walks past the waiting journalists, he will say...and Baker recites virtually syllable for syllable what Quayle does say moments later. The pupil on the short leash gets a gold star.

Handlers relish the role of intermediaries between the candidates and reality, meaning the media. Candidates fade into the wallpaper as handlers and journalists feed each other's self-esteem, the handlers handing out bits of inside baseball, the journalists interpreting these nuances which attest the cleverness of the handlers. Journalists have privileged insight into the working of the little motor of history, and the handlers are portrayed as the rubber bands that make the motor whir.

If this is Tuesday, this must be Toledo, and if this is 1988, this must be Quayle's plane. However, four years from now, just as four years ago, the candidates will be different (they are almost dispensible), but the permanent part of the process, the handlers and the media, will be back at the same stand, doing business together.

Quayle anticipates a Bush victory and time for "rehabilitation" (his word). But for now the nagging question is: Did his campaign have to be so diminishing? Could he have done worse if, instead of being handed over to rented handlers who are not inclined to respect the people who rent them, he had been sent out to be more than an echo of Bush's dismal campaign for the office of national sheriff?

When on his own in the Senate (where he does not employ a speechwriter), he has shown more mastery than Bush has of arms control and other national-security matters. But instead of allowing us to hear the best of him, he has been sent baying after Dukakis in the Bush-league manner, "helped" by handlers who have taken too much to heart a famous movie — no, not "The Candidate," "The Manchurian Candidate."

Getting appointment critical to a father!

A group of us was having lunch the other day when Beeman came hurrying in. He was flushed with what seemed like victory.

"I think I've got it," he exclaimed.

"What is that?"

"I just made an appointment with my daughter. I haven't been able to see her for two months, but she informed me that she could fit me in at 6 o'clock on Thursday."

Art Buchwald

"That's neat," I said. "How did you do it?"

"It wasn't easy. I kept leaving messages at her dorm saying that I would be grateful to simply meet with her and talk over how things were going.

"The first time she turned me down was because she was going to Vermont to look at the leaves. The second time she actually made a date with me, but then canceled it as she had been invited to wash her boyfriend's car. And three weeks ago, she called to say that she couldn't see me on her birthday because she wanted to enter a 26-mile marathon where you could meet a lot of neat guys."

"How can you be sure that she will show up for the appointment she's made now?" I wanted to know.

"She sounded as if she was serious. But it's not firmed up yet. There is some talk about her floating down the Delaware River in a rubber tube or going to Ohio for a touch football game with the League of Women Voters — but I'm optimistic that she'll keep the date with me."

"You're a lucky man, Beeman," one of the group said. "I haven't been able to arrange a meeting with my son for two years. He's one busy fellow."

"They all are," Beeman said. "And you can't fault them for refusing to put us on their calendars. You know what's really funny. I wanted to talk to George Shultz the other day, and it was arranged in an hour. I called Lee Iacocca and he said he would see me as soon as I arrived. It's been like that all month. The only one I am unable to make contact with is my own flesh and blood."

"What are you planning to talk about when you do see her?" I inquired.

"I am going to ask her if she loves me. And if she says she does, I'll start to wonder why she doesn't answer the calls I leave on her answering machine. I'll try to find out if I'm the father she really wanted."

"I wouldn't do that," one of the men said. "You'll only make her feel guilty."

Beeman remarked, "If I could make her feel guilty I would consider our meeting a big success."

"Have you decided what to wear?" I asked.

"What difference does it make?"

"Seeing your daughter isn't an everyday occurrence, and you should at least be dressed for it."

"I'm not applying for a job," Beeman yelled.

"Don't get so excited. There are five of us at this table and, if you added it all up, we haven't seen our children for a total of 90 years."

Beeman said, "I'm sorry, guys, I don't want you to think I've got it made. Just because my daughter gave me this appointment doesn't mean she'll give me another one. If she gets a better offer she will cancel this date just like that."

"If she did, would you take away her school allowance?"

"Of course not. What kind of father takes away his daughter's allowance just because she doesn't return his calls?"

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 13, 1792, the cornerstone of the executive mansion, later to be known as the White House, was laid during a ceremony in the District of Columbia.

On this date:

In 1845, Texas ratified a state constitution.

Leader says China, U.S.S.R. likely to hold summit next year

BEIJING (AP) — Senior leader Deng Xiaoping said today China and the Soviet Union are likely to hold a summit next year, according to diplomatic sources. It would be the first such meeting in 30 years.

Deng, in a meeting with Finnish President Mauno Koivisto, also expressed confidence that long-strained relations between China and the Soviet Union will improve, sources in the Finnish delegation said.

China's Foreign Minister Qian Qichen is to travel to Moscow later this year to discuss the proposed summit between Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Chinese leaders, and it is generally believed Gorbachev will visit Beijing next year.

Deng's statement was the first by a Chinese to predict that the summit, the first since Nikita Khrushchev came to China in 1959, will likely take place next year.

Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Li Jinhua said at a briefing today that it was still too early to name a time or place for the summit.

"The timing for the meeting between the top leaders of the two countries depends on whether the conditions are ripe or not," she said. "Now is the time for the creation of the conditions."

She said Deng and the Foreign Ministry held similar views on the summit, but declined comment on Deng's prediction that the meeting would take place next year.

WORLD

The Finnish sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Deng also brought up the "three obstacles" China has cited as holding up the normalization of Sino-Soviet relations and said Soviet support for Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia remains the most serious.

The other two are the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan and the heavy Soviet troop concentration on the Sino-Soviet border.

The two sides met to discuss the Cambodian question in Beijing in August, and Qian is expected to take up the issue again in Moscow in a bid to narrow differences on how to bring peace to Cambodia.

The sources said Deng did not say whether Qian will set a date for the summit during his talks in the Soviet Union.

A Xinhua News Agency report on the meeting today made no mention of the summit.

It only quoted Deng as saying political and economic relations between China and the Soviet Union will never be the same as those of the 1950s, when Moscow dominated Beijing. Deng said a new type of relation with the Soviet Union will be based on principles of peaceful coexistence, equality and mutual benefit and will not harm the interests of any other country.

China and the Soviet Union split over ideological differences in 1960 and have remained at political odds despite improving economic, academic and cultural relations in recent years.

Gorbachev has urged China to bury past differences and called for dialogue between the two sides.

The summit is likely to take place in Beijing because Deng, 84, no longer travels abroad. Deng has retired from most of his party and government posts, but is still the undisputed leader of the nation in terms of setting policies.

Gorbachev would also hold talks with Premier Li Peng and Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, the two men responsible for the day-to-day running of the government and the ruling party.

Egyptian wins Nobel for literature

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Naguib Mahfouz of Egypt won the 1988 Nobel Prize for literature today for forming "an Arabian narrative art that applies to all mankind." He is the first Arabic-language writer to win the award.

The Swedish Academy said the 76-year-old author's works were "rich in nuance — now clear-sightedly realistic, now evocatively ambiguous."

Mahfouz, a novelist and short story writer for 40 years, produced literature which "has meant a powerful upswing for the novel as genre and for the development of the literary language in Arabic-speaking cultural circles," the academy said.

"The range is, however, greater than that. His work speaks to us all," said the 18-member academy.

Mahfouz was the first Arabic-language writer to win the coveted award in its 87-year history. The prize carries a cash stipend of $390,000.

Mahfouz set his early novels in the time of the pharaohs, but with a sidelong look at today's society. His later works move to the crowded alleys of modern Cairo, where he lives, said the academy.

"If the urge to write should ever leave me, I want that day to be my last," Mahfouz said in a recent interview.

His major work was the Trilogy, completed in 1957, a semi-autobiographical work that "relates very clearly to intellectural, social and political conditions," the academy said.

The academy singled out Mahfouz's 1959 work "Children of Gebelawi," which was banned in his own country.

The book's characters were thinly disguised take-offs of Adam and Eve, Moses, Jesus Mohammed and a modern scientist, in a story of good and evil.

Speculation had included South African novelist and apartheid critic Nadine Gordimer; American author Joyce Carol Oates; V.S. Naipaul, a writer of Indian origin; and the perennially mentioned Graham Greene of Britain.

There were calls for the elite 18-member panel of the Swedish Academy to break new ground. Last year's winner was exiled Soviet poet Joseph Brodsky.

But the decision failed to respond to critics who sought a woman laureate. Only six women have won since the first prize in 1901, most recently Swedish poetess Nelly Sachs in 1966.

The literature prize is one of five established by the estate of Alfred Nobel, who left a fortune from his invention and marketing of explosives. A sixth, the economics prize, was added by the Bank of Sweden in 1968.

Other Nobel prizes will be announced next week: medicine on Monday, economics on Tuesday, and physics and chemistry on Wednesday. The peace prize was given Sept. 29 to the U.N. peacekeeping forces.

Official says hostage release chances better

LONDON (AP) — Kidnappers in Lebanon have increasingly fewer reasons to hold British hostages and the prospects for their release continue to improve, Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe said today.

Howe said an easing of tensions in the Middle East should improve the climate for the release of the hostages.

"I think that if we continue to see progress towards a calmer state of affairs in all the troubled areas in the Middle East, then the reason — and there is no justifiable reason — that people are being held hostage, begins to disappear," Howe said.

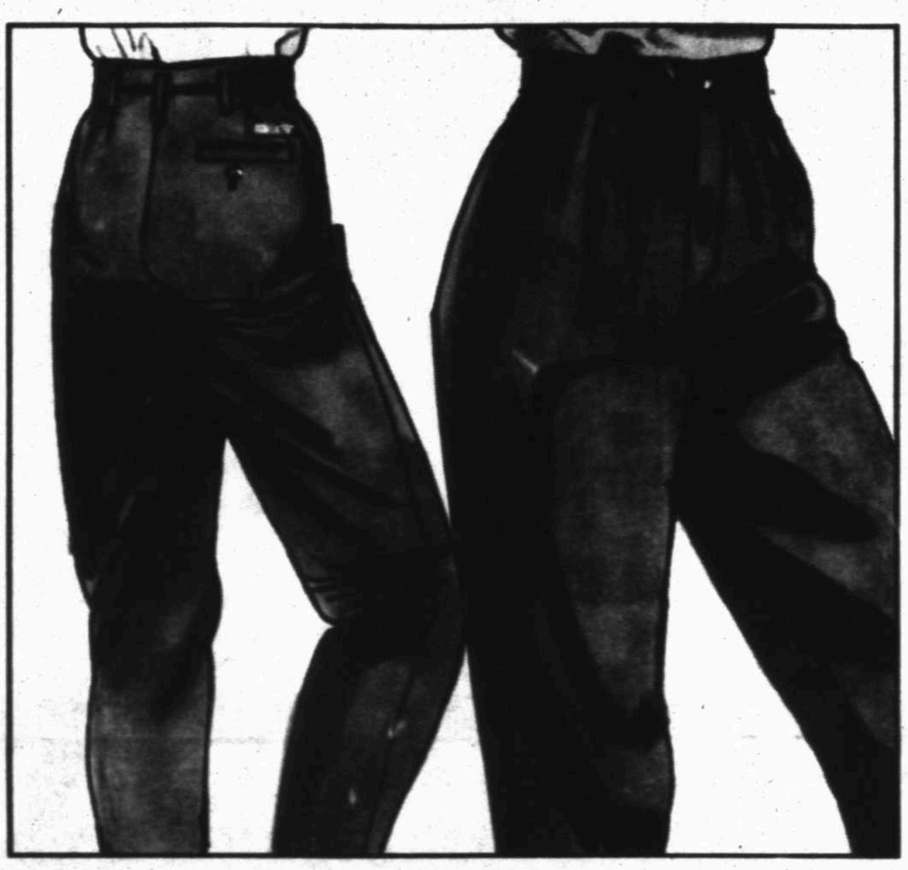

Howe met four former French hostages Wednesday in Brighton, where his Conservative Party is holding its annual convention. He spoke today on British Broadcasting Corp. television.

"There are reasons to believe that the prospects (of release) are getting better rather than worse," he said. "But I don't want to raise false hopes. I have no news today or tomorrow of any significant change in the position."

Britain seeks the release of three of its nationals believed held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian Islamic fundamentalists: Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, journalist John McCarthy and teacher Brian Keenan. Keenan, from Belfast, Northern Ireland, has dual British and Irish nationality.

Kindergarten students ready to try 'byte-size' learning

By VANESSA CURRY

NEW LONDON, Texas (AP) — A small hand is raised in the air and moves frantically from side to side to get the teacher's attention.

"Is it time yet?" asks a little girl.

"Almost," is the reply.

The same scene is being repeated several times a day in the West Rusk School District, as hundreds of students anxiously wait their turn for a 30-minute session new to the curriculum this year.

And as the time finally arrives the line of fidgety youngsters snakes its way down the hallway with hushed voices and scuffling feet. Their thoughts are focused, not on monkey bars and swings, but keyboards and screens — computers.

The dawning of the byte-size era for bite-size students came this fall on both New London and Gaston Elementary campuses.

"Knowing we were going to be required by the state to have a computer program, we decided to get a complete system now," said district Superintendent Douglas Moore. "One that will not only help our students with basic learning skills, but to strengthen their overall education."

Board members in June approved a $275,000 five-year purchase plan from WICAT computer Systems in Dallas, an IBM product in a national system.

Within two months, the system, including two main computers and 80 terminals, was installed on both campuses. Administrators and teachers spent nearly three weeks training to be ready for the first day of school.

WHAT DID THE students think when it was announced that this year they would work on computers?

"I thought it was going to be fun," said Jennifer Morris, 10. However, her classmate Karen Mitchell responded with a sound not found in the dictionary, but roughly translated to mean "yuck."

They both aspire to be teachers when they grow up and knowing computer language will be a definite must by the time they graduate and prepare for college.

"No matter what profession or even the type of work a student will choose in the future, they will have to deal with computers at some time," Moore said, "Typewriters are almost obsolete. They have been replaced with a word processor."

But the idea behind an extensive program for the district is more than just a computer literacy program, it is an educational tool, he explained.

"It will help in teaching math, reading, and writing skills," Moore said, "and I emphasize the word help, because the WICAT system does not replace normal teaching techniques."

Instead it enhances classroom learning based upon the type of books the district uses with programs that are constantly updated, he said.

According to district curriculum director Billie Ogden, students from kindergarten through sixth grade have been introduced to the system.

About 610 students currently are using the system, divided between the two campuses, and eventually all the students within the district will be involved, Mrs. Ogden said.

IN ORDER TO become familiar with the computers, students began working on typing skills — learning where all the letters and command keys are on the control board.

That lesson can be quite a task for the kindergarteners who have just learned the alphabet.

"Surprisingly they are still doing a good job," said Debby Pickering, Learning Center coordinator at the Gaston campus.

The West Rusk system offers 11 different programs for different grade levels and grows as the child's learning ability improves.

At the beginning of each class period, Ms. Pickering will program the day's lesson into the main computer and when a child keys in his or her name it will appear on the screen.

One program may contain a number of separate assignments, allowing the student to advance as a previous lesson is completed.

However, the student also has the choice of repeating a lesson, slowing or quickening a lesson, or changing its difficulty.

"This is not the type of computer that does the work for you. The students have to think...with its help they are developing thinking skills," Moore said.

For example: one task may ask the student to type a row of letters for practice. Later, the student will play a simple game typing words during a certain time limit.

The system is so sophisticated it will monitor a child's performance and possibly make adjustments to the lesson.

"In other words, it will not let the child always perform the easy lessons and therefore avoid advancing to a harder task," Moore said.

MEANWHILE THE teachers, who also monitor their students, can receive a computerized "report card" for each student for evaluation purposes.

"It will tell them how much time it took a student to solve a certain problem or average grades," he added.

Programs also are available for non-English speaking and special education students.

School officials hope education levels, supported by the extra help from the computer system, will improve this year.

"Last year our TEAMS scores increased 43 points for the school average and by the end of this year I hope to see better results in the areas we are working in," Moore said.

The computer system should have the added benefit of reducing costs, Moore said.

"It will certainly benefit specialization such as ESL (English as a second language) and summer school classes," he said.

Jury to decide punishment in assault trial

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A jury was to decide punishment today for a Midland man who admitted sexually assaulting his niece, but who witnesses said has made a remarkable transformation into a Christian, a Sunday school teacher and loving father.

The eight-man, four-woman jury was scheduled to hear closing arguments after Wednesday's grueling session fueled by heated exchanges between attorneys and testimony that painted different portraits of 33-year-old Donald Ray Watters.

The day's testimony also was marked by a claim by one of the girl's aunts that at one point the niece, now 15, was tied up with belts by the defendant. But when she was recalled to the stand, the girl denied that ever happened.

Watters, who lives at a 4715 Wadley Ave. apartment complex, on Tuesday pleaded guilty to aggravated sexual assault and is asking the jury in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court to assess his punishment.

The defendant, dressed in a blue pinstripe suit and blue tie, took the stand Wednesday and told his attorney, Chris McCormack, the first contact with the girl occurred in 1981.

Speaking softly, Watters said although the incidents continued over several years "I told her that we needed to quit and that it was wrong."

During each encounter, the girl "responded" to his advances, and on at least one occasion she agreed to have sex with him after he inquired, Watters said.

He also rebutted her Tuesday testimony that he forced the girl into the acts, and denied he ever threatened her.

The encounters continued until January 1984, when Watters said he became increasingly bothered.

"I knew what I was doing was wrong," he told jurors.

"Why didn't you tell anyone?" McCormack asked.

"I guess my fear, my shame of what's happening now, and of losing my family," he replied.

He joined Midland's Calvary Baptist Church in early 1984 and is now a regular Sunday school teacher and activity director there.

On cross-examination, prosecutor Ralph Petty asked Watters to repeat his accounts of the attacks.

At one point, the defendant said marital problems with his wife, Ginger, may have contributed to his interest in the girl.

"You're not offering that as some kind of excuse, are you?" Petty asked sharply.

"There's no excuse for what I've done," Watters said.

He repeatedly told Petty he never threatened the girl.

Earlier, 31-year-old Ginger Watters told jurors that the girl often wore skimpy clothes around "Uncle Donnie," and she claimed the girl frequently wanted to sit on his lap.

"I just didn't think it looked good," Mrs. Watters said. "It didn't look right," she said of the lap-sitting.

She also told McCormack that as the girl became older, she began to visit the Watters family more often.

Petty pressed the witness about her implication that the girl's clothing also may have contributed to the sexual encounters.

Funding of school districts 'sleeper issue'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

If the Texas Supreme Court validates a lower court decision requiring equal funding for public schools, Texans will face four inescapable consequences, State Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston, warned Wednesday.

"Edgewood vs. Kirby is the real sleeper issue not only of the (legislative) session but of the decade," the Houston lawmaker told guests of the Midland County Republican Women's Club attending a luncheon at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Because the Texas school finance system harbors both terrible poverty and spectacular wealth, State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin ruled that the whole system is unfair and unconstitutional.

His judgment in Edgewood vs. Kirby gives the Legislature a deadline of Sept. 1, 1989, to create a school finance system that guarantees equality in access to state and local tax dollars.

However, Culberson said Texans should recognize that since 1984, average state aid per student has increased over 23 percent, and total state aid to the very poorest school districts has increased by more than 77 percent.

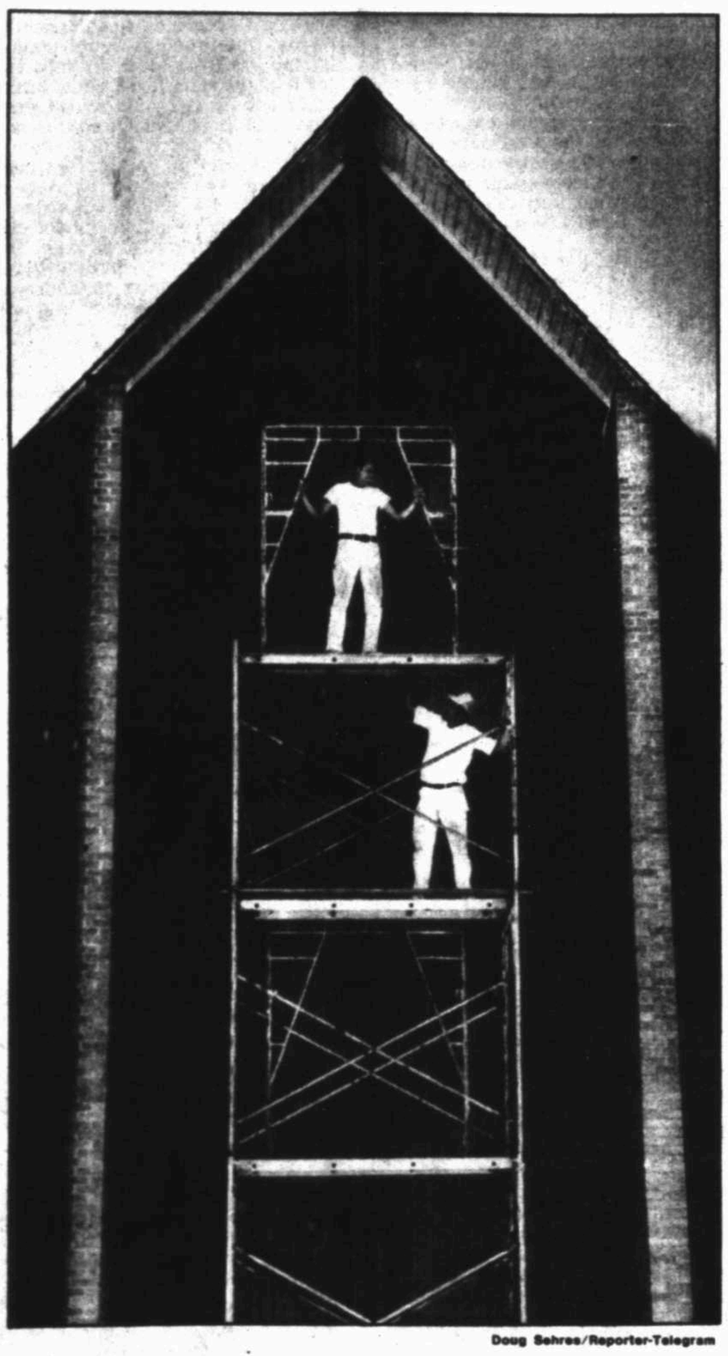

At the same time, he noted that the wealthiest districts took a 28 percent cut in state aid. As a group, the poorest districts received an average increase of 65 percent in total state aid, while the wealthiest districts took an average cut of 4 percent.

Culberson said Edgewood vs. Kirby makes two points: Education is a fundamental right entitled to protection and regulation by the courts instead of the Legislature, and equal protection means every student must be given equal access to state and property taxes.

To achieve court-ordered equality in public school funding, Culberson said Texas faces four unavoidable consequences:

- A tax increase. In Judge Clark's opinion, at least $3,600 in spending per student is necessary to provide an adequate education. To reach this minimum level, the state must double current public education spending, an increase of over $11 billion.

Man convicted of income-tax evasion could get 16-year term

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Cal B. Wright, who currently is serving a 10-year prison term in the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp for dealing in cocaine, could be sentenced to an additional 16 years for income-tax evasion and fraud.

Wright, 51, was convicted in federal court in Midland Wednesday by a 10-man, two-woman jury which deliberated for 2½ hours before finding Wright guilty on four counts.

United States District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton is to sentence Wright at 8:30 a.m. on Oct. 28 in federal court in Midland.

Wright was convicted last year on the cocaine charge.

Wright, who had dealt in oil-field pipe and equipment in Jal, N.M., in and Midland during the oil boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s, had paid the Internal Revenue Service only $4 in six years but had grossed "hundreds of thousands of dollars" in receipts, said the prosecuting attorney, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jake Snyder of San Antonio.

"The motive is money," Snyder said.

At one time, Wright's net worth had been pegged at $1.4 million, he said.

Snyder noted that many people "made excellent money in a short period of time" during the boom. And federal-government auditors are "extremely happy when people make money and "clap their hands with joy" because they know that the government is going to take a share of the wealth through taxation.

But Wright didn't share his wealth with the IRS, Snyder said.

"No one is in love with the Internal Revenue Service," the prosecutor said. But Wright, like other American taxpayers, should have paid money due to the IRS to support the government and its programs.

"The problem with any financial crime is that you leave paper behind," Snyder said, "and that paper will come back to haunt him."

And that's what set Wright up for getting caught, Snyder said in closing arguments to the jury. Snyder had evidence of a $225,000 Wright wire transfer to Midland from Houston, of $140,000 paid for a Midland house for Wright's family, $50,000 in stock purchases, $28,000 for an airplane, $20,000 for a sports cars and other expenditures which reflected a person of means in the early 1980s.

"The man had a good year — a very good year," Snyder said. "He became extremely wealthy and made sure the government got nothing."

Other evidence indicated Wright stashed more than a quarter of a million dollar in his Midland house and locked up other cash in a bank vault.

Court-appointed defense attorney Woody Leverett of Midland noted that "the defendant does not have to testify" in his own defense, and Wright opted not to take the witness stand. He remained silent throughout the 1½-day trial in which about 20 witnesses, including IRS agents, testified.

"His burden is not to come forth and prove his innocence," Leverett said.

Leverett said that a person, such as Wright, "may appear wealthy."

However, "If you owe the bank, you are not as rich as you look."

Leverett said that if "the IRS folks get their stinger after you, you're in trouble." Leverett said that Wright, whose business and tax records apparently were in short supply, had "not been able to satisfy the IRS."

Leverett said that the prosecutor attacked Wright's character.

Local roughneck who cheated U.S. out of $16,000 awarded probation

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland roughneck who rooked the United States treasury out of more than $16,000 by way of rigged W-2 wage-and-tax statements got caught.

And United States District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton put the 31-year-old man on notice after he pleaded guilty in federal court on Wednesday to income-tax fraud.

"Your honor," Darwin Clarence Bell told the judge, "I know I was wrong, and I'll do anything in my power to correct that — to pay back. I know I shouldn't have never done it in the first place."

The judge placed Bell on probation for five years and ordered him to make restitution.

The indictment charged Bell and a co-conspirator with rigging up false W-2 forms for the 1986 and 1987 tax years and naming drilling companies as employers. Refunds totaled more than $16,000.

Bell's court-appointed attorney, Woody Leverett, told Bunton that Bell's court appearance Wednesday likely would be "the one and only" time he would appear in court "as evidenced by his knees knocking."

"He's a steady worker," Leverett said. "He's a good hand, and he's not a lay-about."

Bunton agreed with Bell that his so-called friend, the co-conspirator who was involved with Bell in the tax-fraud scheme, "certainly was no friend of yours."

"I think probably this is the one and only time you'll appear before a judge," Bunton said.

The judge did not impose a fine.

"You still owe a bunch of money to the federal government without the imposition of a fine," Bunton said.

"Thank you, your honor," Bell said.

MCH's financial condition improves

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital's critical financial condition improved, at least temporarily, to reasonably stable late Wednesday afternoon with the reluctant infusion of another $1.5 million by Ector County Commissioners Court, to further reduce a more than $1.3 million bank overdraft.

Monday, commissioners agreed to advance the county-owned hospital a $1 million cash advance of the total $1.8 million approved for indigent care that would have been paid in equal monthly payments through the current fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

Wednesday morning, County Judge Jan Fisher received a letter from William Quillen, MBank Odessa board chairman and chief executive officer, advising that the bank is carrying an overdraft in the amount of $1,337,717.14 as of Oct. 11, 1988 for Medical Center Hospital operations.

"We respectfully request," Quillen went on to say in the letter dated Oct. 12, "the County Commissioners Court take such necessary and appropriate action to reduce this overdraft." A copy of the letter also was sent to Tom Pace, county fiscal services director and temporary MCH caretaker of administration.

The judge immediately contacted commissioners and MCH board members and set an emergency joint meeting of the two bodies for 3 p.m. to discuss "the overdraft position" of the hospital's account at MBank.

"There are many ways to solve this problem," Pace said after the judge opened the emergency meeting.

"One way would be for the court, as it did two years ago, to advance the hospital one full year's indigent health care a year in advance. That would be for FY (fiscal year) 1990," he stated.

Another area where funds also might be available, Pace said, concerns the $3.5 million the MCH board had asked commissioners court to approve for a capital equipment purchase at the hospital.

"I think it is much more critical at this time to have part of that cash in hand and we would ask the court to allow us to use $500,000 of that money to put in the checking account" to further help reduce the bank overdraft, he said.

The critical financial condition of MCH came to light Oct. 4 when Pace informed board members of the discovery of about a $3 million overdraft in its MBbank account.

Pace also said that, unless the MCH budget is revised, the hospital faces a potential deficit of as much as $5 million by next Sept. 30 because patient revenues in the 1988-89 fiscal year budget have been overestimated by about $7 million and expenses have been underestimated. Judge Fisher and Commissioners Joe Hernandez and Gerrid Bowen were in attendance at that meeting.

Turning to County Treasurer Susie Quinn, the judge asked if the county had the funds to advance the hospital $1.5 million against its anticipated 1989-90 indigent care allowance.

Ms.Quinn said the county's current fund balance, invested with MBank, is $3,221,000. It would be necessary to liquidate these investments to obtain cash for any fund transfer, although the county would lose interest income.

County Auditor Bill Hicks, concurring with Ms. Quinn, said, "It looks like we can come up with the money. But we can't stand another $2.5 million hickey."

Hicks' comment prompted the judge and commissioners to question if Pace anticipates continued cash shortfalls. Pace was unable to alleviate their concern.

"Yes," he said, "we will be in an overdraft position again because (patient) revenues are not sufficient to meet expenditures." He went on to explain that September and October are historically "low census" months.

Because of this, "it will be more difficult to operate in the next three months than it has in the past three months," said David Meisell, an MCH finance committee member who has been on the board since July 22. He noted it is "critical that we tie operational expenses to revenues."

Bartender says he can't profit from sobering thoughts

Todd

It had been a l-o-n-g time since I last bellied up to the bar. But last Saturday night I did. And it was my privilege to be with this gorgeous blonde, who happens to be my friend. No more, folks.

So, here we are — a couple of seasoned veterans of Saturday night life.

And the lady orders a couple of drinks — 100 percent water.

The bartender said he was out of bottled spring mineral water. Just sold and served the last one.

"Listen," he said, "you people cost me money. We don't make any money off of you."

Go away, huh?

Meanwhile, a big, ugly scaly albino fish was swimming around in an aquarium and making uglier faces.

And the beauty of this ravishing woman didn't faze the bartender or take his mind off of profits.

What's the matter with him?

I guess we didn't come across as the friendly spendthrift town drunks, since we weren't drunk at all and had no cause or, until then, temptation to booze it up.

The bartender said the bar would go through a case of mineral water in a month. But, he observed, when that sober bunch comes through and orders the dollar-a-bottle water, the bar will run through a case of spring water in a night.

Poor dear. Raise your prices, then.

Besides, he said, the sober bunch didn't tip enough or tip generously, and the waitress refused to grace the non-boozers' tables.

Well, then, how about soda water from the bar?

With less enthusiasm than a fat and satiated drifting turtle, the barkeeper poured soda water over ice in a couple of water glasses.

What do you want us to do, start drinking beer, wine and booze like that ugly fish runs water through its gills?

Yep.

The bartender apparently preferred high-tipping, hard-core drinkers at his bar.

Which is understandable if a high-dollar profit is to be made off of those who belly up to the bar.

So, after the bartender returned change from a sawbuck, we sauntered over to the subdued lighting of the lounge and listened to big-band music from the Dorsey-Miller-Ellington era. We yakked a spell about the virtues of imbibing pure water and gleaned, for us, a questionable benefit, however temporal, from elbow-bending drinking and high-dollar tipping.

The bartender might get friendlier.

I suppose we were a tad too tight with our dough.

But not being tipsy in the least, the teetotalers dropped off respectable, but not particularly generous, tips, headed for the egress, blew a kiss into the wind, and the big, ugly albino fish continued to make uglier faces.

So, all I've got say is this: If you're going to belly up, you might ought to be prepared for a good laugh. It's cured more ails that it has caused.

MCH

To this end, Pace said, he has limited hospital purchases to those items necessary for medical care. Additionally, no purchases are authorized without his approval.

While Pace believes significant cuts in operating expenses can — and will — be made at the hospital, he claimed there are no areas where "big cuts" can be made. Instead, cuts will be made in every possible area, including a more efficient use of overtime hours.

The judge asserted that the public "needs to be assured that patient care is not being sacrificed because of financial problems."

Responding to Meisell's claims that there were indications of financial trouble as much as nine months ago, Judge Fisher said six months ago she had asked MCH administrators if the hospital needed supplemental help. She was told that if the county would help with the purchase of needed equipment, then the hospital would be able to "end the year with a bank balance about $2 million in the black."

The judge said if the court had known of the hospital's true financial condition at that time, it would have been possible to consider adjusting the tax rate to raise additional funds.

Meisell said a review of the hospital's financial records for the past nine months indicates "we are not being paid for the medical care we provide."

He went on to note that the hospital's financial problems are not attributable solely to indigents treated at the facility, that providing care for "those not considered indigent who can't pay their bills" is a major part of the problem." A large part of MCH's financial problem is due to the hospital "being paid for only 40 percent of the care it provides," he claimed.

In addressing whether indigent care is fully funded, the judge said the problem at MCH does not appear to be indigent care.

"Indigent care is fully funded," she said, following an exchange between Pace and Meisell. "The problem is bad debt. Maybe we are not supplementing operations and should be," the judge said, observing that commissioners courts in Pecos, Andrews, Winkler and other area counties not only pay for indigent care, but also supplement the cost of operations. She indicated it is likely Ector County will have to consider doing this, too.

Meisell and Pace indicated the new interim administrator selected by the board, Michael Stephans of Oklahoma City, is due to be in Odessa today and Meisell said, indicated in a phone conversation Tuesday night, that he is "looking forward to the challenge" of resolving the financial problems at MCH.

Meisell and Pace estimated it could be six months, perhaps more, before financial problems at the hospital can be turned around.

As to what options might be available should the hospital need additional cash, Hicks said it would be possible to issue time warrants with the understanding they would be paid off in the succeeding fiscal year with tax revenues.

TRIAL

Mrs. Watters called the girl's dress "inappropriate around men."

"Did she have seductive and alluring clothing on when she came over to your house?" the prosecutor quizzed.

"Yes she did," Mrs. Watters said.

McCormack finally objected when Petty asked the woman what the girl's bra size was at the time she said she had worn "seductive and alluring clothing."

Midland psychiatrist Dr. Robert Denton — who has counseled Watters and his wife — told jurors that he was not psychotic.

He said the defendant was suffering from "anxiety, depression and fear pretty much related to what might be happening in his future."

The physician also saw "no indication" the defendant had a sexual attraction to children, but he said he suffered from an "immature personality."

Petty quizzed Denton about the reasons for the attacks on the girl, but when the doctor denied knowledge of the motivations, the prosecutor persisted until McCormack objected. Baskin then urged Petty to continue.

"I think he felt such strong sexual desire for her it got out of control," Denton finally reasoned.

But, he added "There is a difference in what happened then and what occurs now."

Tuesday, the girl testified she never cooperated with Watters, and fought him unsuccessfully when he made advances to her.

Since he has no criminal record, the defendant is eligible for probation, but he could receive a maximum of life imprisonment.

GUILTY

"I'm not here to defend Cal Wright's lifestyle," Leverett said. He suggested that the prosecutor's ploy in bringing up Wright's wealth and his flaunting of gold and diamonds was to prejudice the jurors and to make them resentful of Wright.

The prosecutor painted Wright as a "low-down fellow who cheated on his wife" and was a "free spender," Leverett said. "They painted him as a high roller, wearing this ostentatious jewelry."

SCHOOL

If all of the new money were raised through sales tax, the current rate would have to go from 6 percent to at least 12 percent.

■ A redistribution of property taxes to ensure that all property owners are taxed according to their ability to pay. One proposal would remove oil and gas from local tax rolls and tax it at the state level, while under other options the state would guarantee all school districts a minimum tax yield per penny or a minimum spending level by recapturing local tax revenue in wealthy districts to redistribute the money statewide.

■ A mediocre public school system. If the judgment is valid, the quality of education will drift down to the lowest common denominator until all schools are leveled at a uniform statewide standard of mediocrity. Until now, the Texas Constitution and the Legislature have permitted school districts to spend their own tax dollars at a rate their taxpayers will allow.

■ Taxpayers will have no one to hold accountable for any monumental changes. The Legislature and local school boards will not long control taxes. The court will.

Culberson said the solution to Edgewood vs. Kirby must include a constitutional amendment that gives the Legislature final authority over the school finance system.

Without this amendment, he warned that the voters will lose control of their tax dollars and the Legislature will lose control over nearly half of the state's budget.

"All the progress we've made in equalizing funding while protecting the quality of education in the best school districts will go out the window," Culberson said.

FRAUD

"Good luck," the prosecuting attorney, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said, as he shook Bell's hand.

In another case, Bunton sentenced Alma Delia Hernandez Oca-Silva, 25, of Midland to a three-year probated term after she had pleaded guilty to selling a false Texas birth certificate to an federal undercover agent.

The agent, posing as an illegal alien from Mexico, paid the woman and her friend, Raul Velez, $300 for the certificate and a rigged Social Security card, according to court records.

"I would like to apologize to you and to the United States," Ms. Oca-Silva told the judge through an interpreter. "I appreciate all the help I got. I apology for offending you, because I did not know what I was doing."

The woman said that she would return to Eagle Pass and "start educating my daughters."

Her court-appointed attorney, Windel "Hoot" Gibson, said "the wrong she had done was done on the spur of the moment."

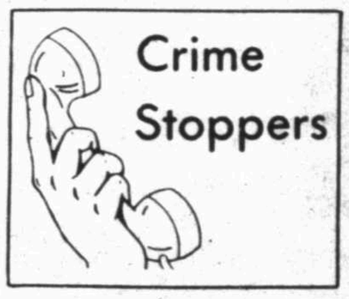

The woman's family ties "are strong," as is the case for most Mexican families, Gibson said. "Alma is a good mother. She is going to church."

Bunton told the woman she would be "a lot better off" and that her children "are going to be better served" if she stays away from her man friend, Raul Velez.

"You go back to Eagle Pass, get yourself a job, and don't get into any more trouble," Bunton said.

In a third case, Bunton sentenced David A. Williams, 34, of Odessa, to probation for four years and ordered him to live in an Odessa halfway house, Alternative House II, for not more than 60 days and to undergo an after-care drug-treatment program. Williams had pleaded guilty to use of a telephone to facilitate a crime in 1987.

Crime Stoppers seeks information on assault

This week Crime Stoppers is asking for information about the assault of a Midland woman.

At 1:20 a.m. on August 31, a black man described as 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighing 160 pounds went to the home of Cynthia Haskins, who lived at 3306 Roosevelt Ave. She let him in her home after the man apparently asked to use the telephone. He told her they had a mutual friend that had been injured.

Once inside, the man began dialing the telephone. When she took the phone to dial the number for him, the man pulled out a knife, put it to her throat and threatened to kill her if she didn't turn over her money.

He dragged her to the bedroom, and she at one point hit him and bloodied his nose. She then ran to a neighbors' house for help.

The suspect may have left the scene in a 1986 gray Pontiac, according to investigators.

Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 cash reward this week only for information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the suspect.

Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers can remain anonymous.

Hispanics could give Democrats the edge

AUSTIN (AP) — If Republicans don't have more than a 5 percent lead among Anglos and blacks in Texas in the 1988 presidential race, Mexican-Americans will give Democrats a victory in the state, an analyst predicted.

Dr. Rodolfo de la Garza, director of the Center for Mexican American Studies at the University of Texas, also said if Republicans don't have more than a 3 percent lead in California, the Mexican-American vote will probably enable Democrats to carry California.

Dallas police department agrees to release reports

DALLAS (AP) — A lawsuit against a newspaper, a county commissioner and the Texas Attorney General's office has been dropped by the Dallas Police Department which has agreed to release reports previously kept from the public.

The city plans to file motions in an Austin court today to drop its suit against the Dallas Times Herald, Dallas County Commissioner John Wiley Price and Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Dallas Police Chief Mack M. Vines said the department also plans to release all available Internal Affairs Division documents sought by the newspaper and Price under the Texas Open Records Act.

"Based on the legal ramifications, it's the only thing we can do," Vines said.

"In light of the attorney general's ruling in this matter and similar cases, I agree with the City Attorney's Office that the release of these documents is the correct and proper thing to do," Vines said in a prepared statement.

"I've said on many occasions that we have an obligation to be as open as legally and ethically possible," said Vines, who took over as chief in August. "We have one of the best police departments in the United States and the decision to open these records represents another step towards making us even better."

The decision epitomizes the philosophy of openness Vines brought to Dallas when he took the chief's job in August, City Attorney Analeslie Muncy said.

"We, as attorneys, represent our clients, and we give them advice," Ms. Muncy said. "Chief Vines chose to take our advice in a different way than the chiefs before him."

The police chief acknowledged last week that two police officers had been accused of purging and destroying internal documents "without authorization." One officer, Capt. Roger Duncan of the Internal Affairs Division, is no longer with the department, while the other, Capt. Dwight Walker, head of the division, has been placed on administrative leave.

The Dallas newspaper reported Oct. 8 that some of the missing documents were those requested under the Open Records Act by the newspaper, Price and Mattox, regarding Dallas police shootings. The police department filed suit against the three in an attempt to keep the records secret.

Times Herald Editor Roy E. Bode commended the city attorney's office and Vines for dropping the suit, which he called "frivolous and in bad faith."

"Unfortunately, a substantial amount of time and money has been required to ensure that the public's rights were protected," Bode said. "We are studying our posture on further litigation concerning this subject."

Commissioner Price had asked for copies of all complaints against Dallas police officers since 1980. Department sources said most of the complaints filed before September 1986 were found to have been destroyed when the city was preparing to surrender them to the county commissioner's attorney.

Although the investigation into the purging of documents has been in progress for at least a week, Vines said last week he did not know what records were missing.

City Attorney Edward Perry publicly denied knowing which records were purged, but privately told police officials and lawyers involved in the lawsuit that some documents requested by Price may be missing, the Times Herald reported last week.

Inmate's lawyers ask for stay of his execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Lawyers for a Texas death row inmate, convicted in the 1974 slayings of a Port Arthur couple, have asked a federal appeals court to halt his execution, which is scheduled for early Friday.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans is scheduled to consider the appeal of Walter Bell Jr. today.

Attorney Eden Harrington of the University of Texas Capital Punishment Clinic in Austin, who is helping represent Bell, says the inmate should not be executed because he is mentally retarded.

At the time of his arrest, Bell — one of 13 children in his family — said he could neither read nor write and never had any schooling except for some special education classes in his home state of Louisiana.

Texas attorney general's office spokesman Bob Walt, however, said the mentally retarded issue should have been brought up before.

Bell's 13 years and four months on death row ranks him third in seniority among the approximately 280 condemned inmates in Texas.

A federal judge and the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin refused to halt Bell's execution earlier this week.

Bell, 34, was first sentenced to die in December 1974 for the rape-slaying of Irene Chisum, a Port Arthur housewife. Mrs. Chisum, 59, and her husband, Ferd, 50, were killed July 19, 1974, after being tied up in their home and robbed.

Bell and some other death row inmates are relying on a case pending before the U.S. Supreme Court involving the legality of executing mentally retarded people.

The nation's high court agreed to review the case of Texas death row inmate Johnny Penry after attorneys contended executing the 32-year-old would be cruel and unusual punishment banned by the Eighth Amendment.

Penry, whose IQ has been estimated at between 50 and 60 and who had the reasoning capacity of a 7-year-old, was sentenced to death for the 1979 rape-slaying of a Livingston woman in her home.

Clements tries to take bite out of Big Apple

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements visited New York to roll out the "Texas welcome mat" to GTE Corp., which is considering moving its national headquarters to Dallas.

Clements met Wednesday with GTE Corp. chairman James "Rocky" Johnson and discussed the state's business climate and economic base, according to a press release from the governor's office.

"Any company considering relocating to Texas will find a solid foundation and a positive business climate in which to grow and prosper. Texas wants GTE."

Archaeologists excavate community built by freed slaves

New York Times News Service

HARRISON, N.Y. — Archaeologists are sifting through the remnants here of the largest known community of freed slaves in Westchester County.

The finds so far — from the stone foundation of a house built in the 1850s — have included shards of ceramic pottery, a 1902 coin, a brass button of a uniform from the New York Central-Harlem River Railroad and the bones of goats and cows.

The discoveries are expected to help fill the gaps of historical knowledge of this once cohesive neighborhood, which was created in the late 1700s when the town's Quakers, Methodists and Episcopalians freed their slaves.

The community continued until the 1930s, when housing and jobs lured blacks elsewhere and the county began acquiring some of the land for its burgeoning parks system.

Some of the descendants of the families now live in nearby White Plains.

The excavation is being sponsored by a local developer who will soon transform the rocky 23-acre plot into million-dollar homes.

At its peak, the 19th-century black enclave covered some 400 acres and had about 190 people in 44 households in Harrison, as well as neighboring North Castle and White Plains.

Attention has turned in recent years to the life and culture of freed blacks in such communities.

"The period surrounding the Civil War represents an important transition for blacks in America, a time when they started to develop an identity that is apart from the experience of slavery," said Eugene J. Boesch, an archaeologist who is leading a team of six others in the week-long dig.

This is the first excavation of its kind in Westchester. The other towns where freed slaves lived include Scarsdale, Bedford and Rye.

The search of soil samples and century-old garbage deposits for artifacts culminates four years of surface digging and mapping by a group of amateur archeologists.

At the suggestion of Harrison's town historian and with an 1867 map of the neighborhood, known as the Hills, the amateur archaeologists had identified 20 house foundations — four on the development site and 16 on an adjoining county-owned nature preserve.

When it was revealed to the developer, Ken Rubinstein, president of Edgemont Co. of Scarsdale, N.Y., that his land held major clues to a largely unwritten history, he volunteered to finance the professional dig, which is expected to cost $5,000 to $10,000.

Only one of the four house foundations is threatened by construction of the new homes; that one is being studied.

"It would be unethical to bulldoze over a site that has such historical significance," Rubinstein said, adding that it also would not be "good community relations."

"There's enough work for 50 of my lifetimes," said Jay McMahon, an amateur archaeologist and chairman of the county's Archaeological Review Board.

"The histories of Westchester are, often the histories of the rich, and they were white. People only think of digs in Peru, Mexico and Israel as significant, but here we have one of the most fascinating stories right under our feet in lower Westchester County."

Equally helpful in understanding the community has been the archival research by the former town historian in Harrison, Edythe Quinn Caro, for her master's thesis.

The 184-page account of the Hills was printed this month by the Westchester County Historical Society and will be distributed to the county's public libraries.

Stricter rules on Medigap insurance sought

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Consumer advocates Wednesday asked for stricter regulations to protect the elderly from being ripped off when buying insurance coverage to supplement Medicare benefits.

"At a time in their lives when people are most concerned about health care costs, Texans who buy 'Medigap' policies find that they don't have the coverage they thought they had, or that an agent has sold them a duplicate or worthless policy," said Charlotte Flynn of the Gray Panthers.

The elderly are bombarded with direct mail advertisements urging them to buy additional policies to fill in gaps in Medicare coverage, Flynn said. About 20 percent of health care costs are not covered under Medicare.

"Purchase of multiple policies is wasteful as most of what is covered under one policy is also covered under another," she said.

Elderly consumers often are encouraged to switch one supplemental policy for another, increasing an insurance agent's commission but leaving policyholders without adequate coverage during waiting periods, she said.

The elderly also are getting a bad deal because of all Medigap policies for sale in Texas, less than one-third meet minimum State Board of Insurance requirements on the ratio between premiums collected and losses paid. That means the insurer is making too much profit in relation to the amount of claims paid, said Rob Schneider of Consumers Union.

The consumer advocates place the blame on unscrupulous insurance agents and inadequate regulation of the Medigap industry, which generates more than a half billion dollars in premium sales annually.

In 1982, several years after the problems were first identified, the Insurance Board developed rules to better regulate the supplemental insurance industry. In 1987, based on recommendations from a citizens group, the board adopted additional rules requiring a warning on Medigap policies and a toll-free complaint number.

But those regulations don't go far enough, said Carol Barger of Consumers Union.

Consumers Union and Gray Panthers want the insurance board to adopt rules requiring all Medigap benefits be sold under three standard policies, called basic, expanded and comprehensive.

Today, more than 500 different Medigap policies are approved for sale in Texas, and few offer comprehensive protection, Flynn said.

The board should adopt stricter standards for licensing insurance agents, and commit more money for monitoring agent conduct, Barger said.

Scientists peel back super onion's secrets

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Researchers at Texas A&M University used tissue culture techniques to develop a way to clone a female version of the softball-sized "1015 super onion."

The process is expected to improve profits for growers in a matter of years and also improve the quality and yield of the onions.

The team of researchers, which has been perfecting the onion for more than 15 years, now can use tissue culture techniques for developing thousands of identical plants from one flower head. A flower head normally contains 300 to 400 tiny flowers and each can be used to regenerate about five plants, each eventually transplanted into the field for seed production, said Leonard Pike of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

"We've just brought the onion industry into the 21st century and now can develop new strains in a matter of years," Pike said. "It once took up to 12 years. In my career I might have developed three or four new strains. Now someone can literally develop hundreds."

Candidates' stand-ins take to the stump

AUSTIN (AP) — From political officeholders to celebrities, candidates' children to their in-laws, the campaign trail across Texas is heavily traveled this autumn by surrogates stumping for the presidential hopefuls.

Stand-ins show up when candidates can't, spend more time in the state than any candidate could while running nationwide and carry the message to voters and news media in places the campaigns might otherwise bypass.

"They're going where the presidential ticket has gone and where it has not gone. They're going all over the state, into areas that have big media markets and small ones, places that have three network (television) affiliates and places that have one weekly newspaper," said Reggie Bashur of George Bush's Texas campaign.

"You use surrogates primarily in smaller markets, where they can dominate the news and help carry your message. And there are certain surrogates who have specialities on one issue or another who can speak to those," added Tom Cosgrove, director of Michael Dukakis' campaign in the state.

Among the Republicans who have served as Bush stand-ins are son George W. Bush, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos, Gov. Bill Clements, former Sen. John Tower and former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach.

Staubach, Gramm's wife, Wendy, and Columba Bush, the vice president's daughter-in-law, launched a 14-city South Texas campaign tour on Wednesday.

Mrs. Bush said she hoped her presence would attract Hispanic voters to the GOP ticket. "I'm one of them. I've had the same feelings, the same background. We share a lot of things," she said at the first stop, Cisco's Restaurant in Austin.

Across town to visit a senior citizen's center, meanwhile, was Andrea Dukakis, eldest daughter of the Democratic nominee. She also was scheduled to campaign in Corpus Christi.

"Before it's over, we'll have had just about every Dukakis family member here," said Cosgrove.

Dukakis' surrogate campaigners have included vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen's children, several elected officials from Massachusetts, and a host of Texas Democrats including Attorney General Jim Mattox, Railroad Commissioner John Sharp, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

The battle of the stand-ins is being waged almost daily now, and it appears that will only intensify as Election Day approaches.

"We have people out there all the time. Every day, there are people on the road," Cosgrove said.

"They help carry the message. They help to generate local interest, and they generate local and regional news," Republican Bashur said.

To spread the Dukakis word on education, for example, the chairmen of two state legislative education committees, the heads of two teacher organizations and a University of Houston regent held a news conference to blast Bush.

Dig proposed for sunken dredger

SURFSIDE (AP) — An extensive excavation was proposed on the site where a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers dredger sank in 1913, although the wreck is blocking the progress of a $17 million jetty project, Corps officials said.

The wreck, identified as the Comstock, was located in August when a crane operator preparing the Gulf bottom for the laying of a granite stone dug into its copper-covered wooden hull.

"Our proposal is to preserve as much of it as practical and keep it to study were technology was at the turn of the century," Corps spokesman Ed White said Tuesday.

Much of the exploring will involve the ship's mid-deck, which has remained nearly intact over the years, White said.

Diving to recover artifacts from the wreck will probably begin in early November, after the Corps' proposal clears state and federal historical agencies regulating such finds, he said.

The recovery phase probably will take several months.

The Corps has proposed to the Port of Freeport, the local sponsor of the jetty project, that construction continue with a gap where the wreck is located to be filled later.

Port officials said the proposal probably represents the most logical course of action, but a decision whether to begin implementing the plan has not been reached.

Built in 1985 for $86,000, the Comstock was the Corps' first electric dredger. It sank when a fire broke out on its mid-deck.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column is condensed from "The Battle Over Insurance," published Sept. 26 in Fortune Magazine.

Health insurance has emerged as an issue in the presidential campaign with respect to who has it, who doesn't, who should have it, and who will pay for it. These concerns are significant: 35 million Americans are without health insurance coverage, 23 million of whom are employed.

Humphreys

The subject of health care for the uninsured, the evolution of the present health care system in the U.S., and even the candidates' perceptions of the health care issues all are too extensive to be dealt with in a short column. What follows is a brief overview of the issue of uncompensated health care, how the candidates perceive it, and some of the complexities inherent in trying to resolve it.

A tradition evolved in the U.S. of employer-paid coverage for workers evolved from the days of World War II. Wage and price controls were in effect which prevented companies from raising salaries, so they gave insurance instead. With the advent of Medicare and Medicaid in 1965, it appeared that the government would take care of the elderly and poor if the private sector would take care of the elderly and poor if the private sector would take of the working.

Obviously the health care system is not perfect. Besides not covering the aforementioned 35 million Americans, the U.S. health care system is the most expensive in the world, presently consuming 11 percent of the gross national product and on its way toward 13 percent by 1992. Had the system not evolved as it did, the U.s. would now have a universal health system controlled by the government (socialized medicine) as do other Western nations, according to Uwe E. Reinhardt, professor of economics at Princeton.

By contrast, Canada and Great Britain supply health care to their citizens with 8.5 percent and 6 percent of their GNP, respectively, through what essentially are government-controlled systems. Recipients of service in these countries are forced to contend with long waits and scarce resources, however. For example, few patients older than mid-50s are allowed to begin kidney dialysis in Great Britain, while in the U.S., Medicare pays for dialysis for all who need it, regardless of age.

Employed Americans who lack health care coverage are those who work part time, or who work full time for companies with fewer than 25 employees which are engaged principally in agriculture, construction and retailing. These employees without insurance themselves nevertheless are obligated to purchase insurance via the payroll tax for the elderly currently receiving Medicare. Worse still, they may be ineligible for Medicare and other benefits which would be available if they were unemployed.

Access to health care for the uninsured is not cut off. Hospitals still provide treatment to those seeking it, and in fact are required to do so. However, the uninsured lack access to medical treatment which is more appropriately rendered outside the hospital setting, and failure to obtain it often results in more expensive care in the hospital. A well-known example is prenatal care, lack of which in early pregnancy often contributes to a premature or low-birth-weight baby whose hospital costs easily can exceed $100,000.

Since hospitals no longer can be expected to bear the expense of caring for the uninsured because of soaring costs and inability to spread them among other insurance payers (including Medicare), what is the solution to this problem? The presidential candidates have differing views, as one would expect.

Vice President George Bush believes that the private sector should deal with uncompensated care (estimated to be $8 billion per year for hospitals alone) on its own without government mandates to insure workers. Assistance from his administration might take the form of making it easier for small businesses to form insurance pools.

Gov. Michael Dukakis and the Democrats are in favor of a much broader program which goes beyond reimbursing hospitals for uncompensated care. Besides being instrumental in Massachusetts becoming the second state to mandate health insurance, Dukakis has tentatively endorsed a health insurance bill designed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

The cost of the Kennedy bill is estimated to be $27 billion a year (or more), some of which is not new cost, but a shift from companies who provide insurance to those who do not. If the bill becomes law, it would impose an expense of approximately 50 cents per hour per employee. Should a bill to raise minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 per hour also pass, the imposed expense would increase payroll costs for minimum wage earners by 50 percent, undoubtedly forcing many of the minimum wage earners out of jobs.

The Dukakis plan for Massachusetts offers some advantages over the Kennedy bill in that businesses with more than six employees have the option of spending $1,680 per employee per year for health insurance, or paying a tax of that same amount on the first $14,000 of each employees' income into a state-managed insurance pool. Additionally, all companies with more than six employees would pay $16.80 per year per employee to fund the 27,000 in that state who are temporarily unemployed and have no health insurance. Such a scheme would give businesses the right to determine what coverage they wished to purchase and enable them to control their costs somewhat. Those businesses choosing the tax option would be relieved of the current federally-mandated obligation of 18 month coverage to former employees, a potentially ruinous expense for companies with high labor turnover.

Coverage of temporarily unemployed/uninsured for only $16.80 per employee per year seems like an attractive concept, but would be practical only where unemployment is low, as it is in Massachusetts at 3.2 percent. For this and other reasons, the Dukakis plan may well be too expensive for the country as a whole.

Lack of health insurance coverage for such a large segment of the U.S. population is a national issue which rivals the spread of AIDS in scope and difficulty of resolution. Attempts to expand such coverage have many economic ramifications which mandate caution and frugality. On the other hand, there are moral and ethical considerations involved in not attempting to resolve the issue, thereby continuing to allow so little access to medical care for so many.

Dr. James Humphreys is Executive Director of the Midland City-County Health Department.

Corn variety packs better protein

NEW YORK (AP) — A new variety of corn provides higher quality protein than common types and could greatly help many of the world's undernourished people, a National Research Council committee says.

The "quality-protein maize" looks and tastes like common corn but is nearly as good a protein source as skim milk, the committee said.

Modern Plastic Surgery

by Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., ASPRS

DOUBLE DARE

Although most patients associate liposuction with the buttocks and thighs, it is a very effective technique for contouring a "double chin." Liposuction employs the use of a "suctioning wand" to remove fat through a minimal incision in the skin. This technique is excellent for those localized areas of accumulated fat that are disproportionately larger than surrounding areas of the body. In other words, exercise may sometimes reduce a person's overall profile, but does nothing at all to reduce certain areas of fat. Under the chin is one such area. Liposuction permanently removes fat in an effort to contour the chin more closely to the natural jawline. Such localized surgery can often produce dramatic results.

A candidate for liposuction is someone with good skin tone, who is not more than 20 pounds overweight, is in good health, and is under the age of 40. If you have considered liposuction or other plastic surgery procedures, contact a board certified member of the ASPRS for a confidential consultation. PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER is located at 848 Central in Odessa. Liposuction, fat transfer, and cosmetic facial surgery are performed. Computer imaging is also available. Hours: M-F 8-5. Tel. 335-8711, 563-3110. Member ASPRS.

HINT:

Auschwitz shouldn't be compared to other atrocities, leader says

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — President Richard von Weizsaecker is urging fellow West Germans to recall the horrors of Auschwitz, rejecting attempts to compare the Nazi Holocaust with other atrocities in human history.

"What is it supposed to mean for us, whether Auschwitz can stand up to a comparison of the horrifying destruction of other peoples?" Weizsaecker said in the northern Bavarian city of Bamberg on Wednesday.

"Auschwitz remains unique. It happened in the name of the Germans, by Germans. This truth is irrefutable, and it won't be forgotten," he said.

In recent years, West Germans have come to use the name of the Nazis' Auschwitz death camp synonymously with the Holocaust.

Weizsaecker addressed a national conference of prominent historians, as towns and cities across West Germany plan solemn ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the infamous 1938 "Crystal Night" violence aimed against Jews.

The comments by the highly popular West German president on Wednesday marked the first time he has entered a bitter public debate over whether the Nazi killings of 6 million Jews and hundreds of thousands of others stand alone in history.

Conservative historians led by Ernst Nolte of West Berlin argue the Holocaust can be "relativized" by comparisons with Stalinist-era atrocities and other mass-killings in history.

Jewish leaders angrily claim the conservative historians' ultimate goal is to diminish the horrors of Adolf Hitler's Nazi regime in the eyes of future generations.

Speaking of the Nazi era, the 68-year-old president said: "It (Germany) was led by criminals, and it let itself be led by criminals."

"It (the German people) knows this, especially where it would rather not know," he said in a copy of the speech distributed to the news media by his office in Bonn.

During the Nazi era, Weizsaecker's father, Ernst von Weizsaecker, was the No. 2 official in the Foreign Ministry and was sent to prison for his conviction at one of the Nuremberg war crimes trials. However, the president often has defended his father in public, saying he did his best to head off World War II.

The West German president spoke exactly four weeks before the 50th anniversary of "Crystal Night," when hundreds of Jewish synagogues were burned down, thousands of Jewish homes and businesses plundered, and 30,000 Jews sent to concentration camps.

It took the name "Crystal Night" because of the shards of broken glass during the action Nov. 9-10, 1938. German Jewish leaders have begun referring to it as the "Pogrom Night," saying that is a more appropriate word for it.

Commemorative plaques are being erected at important Jewish buildings, panel discussions are being held and a major ceremony is scheduled in Frankfurt to mark the 50th anniversary.

Welcome!

Nuclear power plant in Mexico to be fired up

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government says it will fire up Mexico's first nuclear power plant next week, but critics are demanding a national referendum on the twin-reactor project.

Jose Luis Alcudia, the assistant energy secretary, told the Chamber of Deputies on Wednesday that the Laguna Verda reactor is ready for low-level operational testing.

Officials maintained that the plant poses no threat to the environment and that testing would begin next week.

"The environmental controls of the nuclear plant are guaranteed," assistant ecology secretary Sergio Reyes Lujan told the chamber.

But opposition lawmakers disputed their testimony and called on the government to hold a referendum.

The plant, 200 miles east of Mexico City in Veracruz state, has been ready for the loading of radioactive fuel since December, according to the federal Electricity Commission.

But President Miguel de la Madrid postponed the start-up in an apparent attempt to calm protests by environmental groups and to minimize the issue during Veracruz state's municipal elections.

The elections, held Oct. 2, were largely won by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

Officials of the Energy Department, state-owned Federal Electricity Commission and Urban Development and Ecology Department spoke to senators on Tuesday and testified in the Chamber of Deputies on Wednesday.

Sen. Porfirio Munoz Ledo of the leftist National Democratic Front and leaders of the Group of 100, an ecological group of artists and intellectuals, walked out of Tuesday's session, the newspaper La Jornada said.

Haitian mayor suspected as mastermind of massacre

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Authorities say they are investigating the former mayor of Port-au-Prince for allegedly masterminding the massacre of worshipers during a Sept. 11 church service.

The slaughter at the St. Jean Bosco Roman Catholic Church came shortly before a coup by soldiers against the government of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, who is in exile.

Coup leaders said they were revolted by the massacre and accused Romain and Namphy of engineering it. St. Jean Bosco's pastor was a frequent critic of the Namphy regime.

Hospital officials say at least 12 parishoners were killed and 70 wounded when thugs armed with knives and guns randomly shot and stabbed parishioners. The government and radio stations have put the number of dead at 13.

Yves Barbot, second-in-command at the Ministry of Justice, said Wednesday that the government had "initiated penal action against Franck Romain and his accomplices." But he said it was premature to say whether Romain would be tried.

Barbot said the magistrate handling the case had three months to decide to indict Romain.

Romain was elected mayor in fraud-ridden elections run by Namphy on Jan. 17. During the 29-year Duvalier family dictatorship, Romain served as police chief.

Papers allowed to print parts of agent's memoirs

LONDON (AP) — The government today lost its 2½-year battle to stop three London newspapers from publishing excerpts from "Spycatcher," the memoirs of former intelligence agent Peter Wright.

For the press, the ruling was a victory after prolonged legal wrangling that turned "Spycatcher" — a best-seller in the United States and Australia — into a test case of freedom of speech versus national security.

The five judges of the Law Lords, Britain's highest court, unanimously upheld a ruling by the Court of Appeal that The Guardian, The Observer and The Sunday Times could publish the excerpts.

The judges lifted temporary injunctions barring publication, but only after criticizing Wright for violating the lifetime secrecy oath he took when he joined MI5, Britain's counterintelligence agency.

They said he "flagrantly" breached his oath and was "as guilty of treachery as heinous as that of the spies" he wrote about. Only the fact that the book was so widely available elsewhere convinced them to allow publication in Britain, they said.

Publishers William Heinemann said they will notify the government they plan to publish 200,000 paperback copies of the book in Britain. The publishers earlier agreed to provide such notice to allow the government time to intervene.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd said the government felt vindicated by the decision because it upheld its view that former security agents remain bound by their secrecy oath.

But opposition Labor Party spokesman Ray Hattersley said the government "made Britain a laughingstock from America to Australia" by pursuing the case.

Lord Keith of the Court of Appeal said he voted for publication primarily because the book is available outside Britain and its contents are widely known.

"It is absolutely terrific," said Peter Preston, editor of the Guardian. "This has gone on for 2½ years and been heard by 23 judges. It is smashing to win hands down at the end."

The government estimates its legal battle has cost $994,750, but legal experts say it could be as much as $5 million.

The book describes Wright's experiences during 20 years with MI5, Britain's counterintelligence agency. Among other things, Wright claims that the late Roger Hollis, an MI5 chief, was a double agent working for the Soviets — a claim the government says has never been substantiated.

It alleges the security service eavesdropped on foreign embassies, bungled operations, stole documents, plotted to assassinate Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and to destabilize Harold Wilson's Labor Party government in the 1970s.

Wright retired to Tasmania, Australia, in 1976 and could not immediately be reached for comment. An attempt by the British government to suppress publication in Australia failed, and it has been published there.

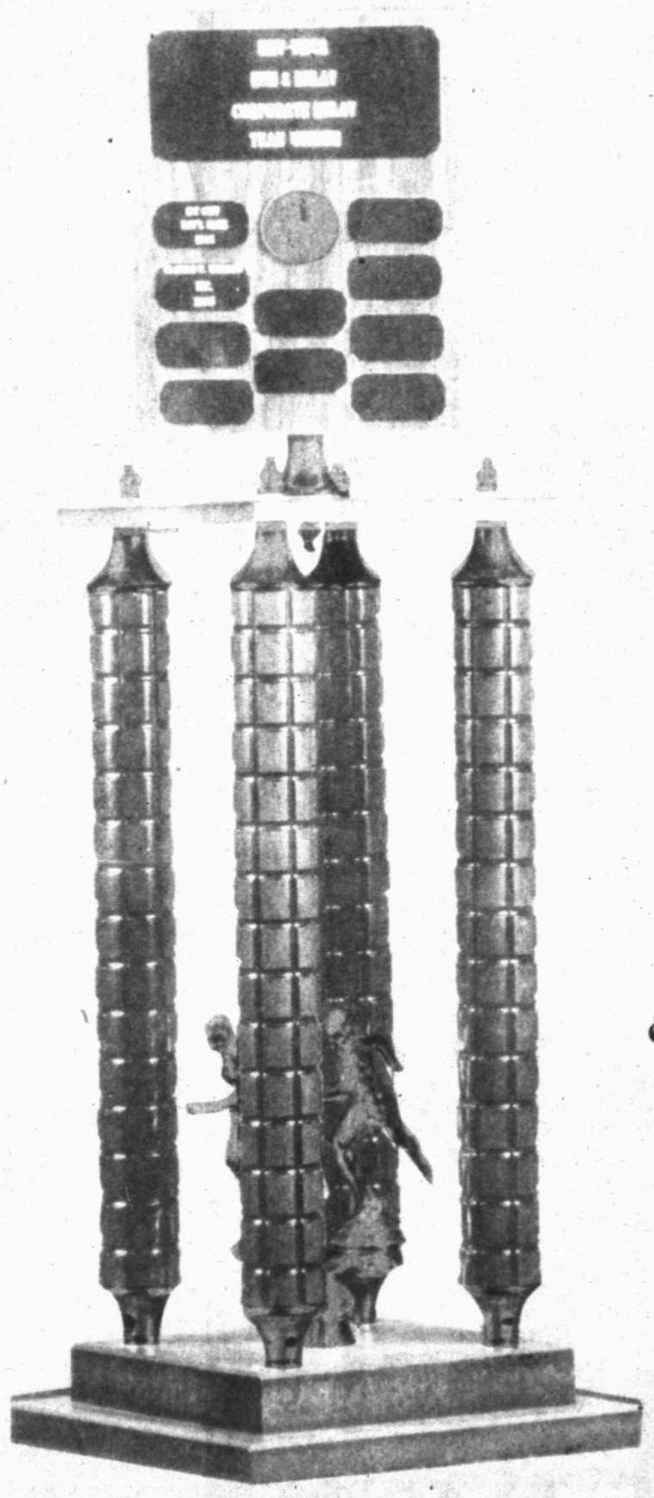

Wright, 73, has said that his book, which has sold 1.4 million copies in 40 countries, revealed nothing that could jeopardize national security.

The British government maintains it has pursued its case to uphold the principle that former intelligence agents are bound by their lifetime oath of secrecy and to prevent similar books from being published.

Midland Lee vs. Abilene High, a lesson in history

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Earl Miller hopes history doesn't repeat itself.

For the Midland Lee Rebels, Friday's 8 p.m. matchup at Abilene's Shotwell Stadium against the AHS Eagles will be just another in a long line of must wins this season.

For Abilene High, it's come to just "cross another week off the calendar and we're that much closer to beginning preparations for next season." Those are no one's exact words, but one gets the feeling that the Eagles are just kind of muddling through what has become a highly disappointing season.

Picked to be a strong team this season and possibly battle for second-place, the Eagles have suffered five losses while downing only lowly-regarded Fort Worth Eastern Hills.

FOR MIDLAND Lee, with the trip will come an eerie feeling, at least for Miller and his coaching staff.

The last time such a large question mark existed this late in the season concerning the second playoff team from 4-5A was 1983 when the Rebs lost their last two games, including a final stop at Abilene Cooper. Lee did make the playoffs, but didn't find out until after they returned from the lengthy road trip after the loss.

"We lost to Cooper in '83 in the last game of the year," Miller recalled, "and Cooper had about the same type of team Abilene High has this year. You can go to Abilene and get beat if you're not ready. I just hope history doesn't repeat itself."

For what it's worth, '83 was also the last time — and the only time — that the Rebs have made it as far as the state championship game, losing that season to Converse Judson, 25-21.

ABILENE High's problem this year? It's not as simple as just one problem, unfortunately. For starters, the Eagles are inexperienced and inconsistent at skill positions. Add to that their almost total lack of both offense and defense and you've got a team that has been devastated each week, a surprise to most coaches in the district.

"It surprises me," Miller said, "because they were supposed to have the strongest returning team aside from Permian."

"Those preseason predictions will get people in trouble," AHS coach Larry Pullin said. "We are getting better, but it's hard to see that because of the tough competition."

In all honesty, AHS has had to face an extremely tough schedule. Examples? There are five: The Eagles lost to Odessa Permian 49-0 last Friday and Duncanville 42-6 the week before; crosstown rival Cooper defeated AHS 20-6 and Sweetwater handed down a 34-7 loss. The Eagles opened the season with a 21-0 loss to Wichita Falls Rider to open the season.

The Eagles are last in the district in total offense (141 avg. per game) and last in total defense (allowing 334.3 yards per contest). They have scored just four touchdowns all season and were outscored 166-19 in their defeats.

SOPHOMORE quarterback Robbie Duran will be starting his third game this week against Lee and despite everything, Pullin said he is pleased with Duran's progress. Duran is eighth in the district in passing (19-61, 179 yards).

Trey Forkerway, who appeared the team's best bet to be awarded an All-District position at the outset of the season has suffered because he has not had a chance at getting the ball often. The senior split end has only 153 yards receiving and nine yards rushing. Forkerway also started once at quarterback and completed 5-of-17 for 63 yards. He also doubles on defense as a free safety.

The Rebels have one question mark, but it is a big one: halfback Farris Strambler has been slowed by illness, a flu-type infection that has even his doctor puzzled. Strambler twice missed practice earlier in the week and missed class until Wednesday.

Claire fools the critics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Claire's stylish wire-rimmed glasses were clouded by champagne, he was squinting through stinging eyes, and his normally all-in-place silver hair was dripping wet and slightly askew.

The Dodgers' vice president, who looks more like an accountant than a hardened baseball man, seemed somehow out of character.

But the former sports writer has fooled people before; at his first baseball meetings as a top Dodger official, last winter, some said he was indecisive and too timid to make deals.

His critics were wrong.

"HEY, architect," someone yelled to Claire across the jubiliant celebration in the Dodgers' clubhouse after they beat the New York Mets 6-0 Wednesday to move into the World Series against the Oakland Athletics.

Claire, who has toiled 20 years in the Dodger organization and moved into Al Campanis' player personnel role after Campanis' infamous remarks about blacks early last year, indeed has been a prime builder as the Dodgers made a dramatic turnaround this year from two nightmarish seasons.

Orel Hershiser, who shut out the Mets in the deciding game and finished the National League playoffs with three starts, one save and one warmup for another possible relief appearance and was named the playoffs' MVP, credited Claire with quickly rebuilding the club.

"I PITCHED the same way in '86 and '87, but I was just a .500 pitcher," said Hershiser, who was 23-8 this year and had a major league record streak of 59 consecutive shutout innings. "But if you put a ballclub behind a pretty decent pitcher, you can put some numbers on the board."

Asked about the Dodgers' comeback from two losing campaigns, second baseman Steve Sax said, "I thought the front office were, very, very aggressive in the offseason and the addressed the problems at hand — the bullpen, defense and what-not.

"They acquired the guys through free agency and went out and made a couple of trades.

"In spring training I saw it on paper, I knew we had a good club," added Sax, who had three hits, drove in a pair of runs and scored twice in Los Angeles' Game 7 victory over New York.

THE 53-YEAR-old Claire made bold moves during the offseason, including signing slugger Kirk Gibson and acquiring shorstop Alfredo Griffin and relievers Jay Howell and Jesse Orosco.

Each was instrumental as the Dodgers roared back from records of 73-89 in both 1986 and 1987 — the club's first consecutive losing seasons in two decades — to win the West this year with a 94-67 record.

"It's a great experience to be back at the top, for the organization to be back," commented Claire, who had said going into the season that he personally was troubled by the organization's two down years.

"It's a great story," Claire added in the kind of remark he might have made during his newspaper career.

"We came a long way in a short period of time," Dodgers right fielder Mike Marshall said. "It's a real tribute to Mr. O'Malley, Fred Claire and Tommy Lasorda.

"NOBODY thought we could win the West, then nobody thought we could beat the Mets. I guess they believe in us now."

LA makes it look so easy

By JOSEPH DURSO
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Six months after they set out to "dominate" the National League, the New York Mets took the mightiest tumble of all Wednesday night to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Tommy Lasorda's "team of destiny," led by Orel Hershiser's shutout pitching, swept past them in the seventh game of the playoff and won the National League pennant.

It was ninth time the Dodgers had won the pennant since they left Brooklyn for Los Angeles 30 years ago, and the first they had won in seven years. And it was a night when the Mets, baseball's masters of survival, did not survive the second inning.

It was the night when they were hammered for one run in the first inning and five in the second, and took a 6-0 beating just when they were reaching for their second pennant in three years.

IT WAS the night when the Dodgers, who had lost 10 of 11 games to the Mets during the regular season, rose up and toppled Davey Johnson's stars and stepped past them to open the World Series this Saturday against the Oakland Athletics.

And the Mets fell with all the symbols of their past success in strange new roles, with Ron Darling gone inside two innings, with Dwight Gooden pitching in relief for the first time in his professional career, with their hitters shackled by Hershiser, with their world unraveling.

When it was over, the Mets headed home for the long winter without trophies or titles. They won 100 games, lost 60 and won the Eastern Division by 15 games over the Pittsburgh Pirates, and they were solid favorites to defeat the Dodgers and win the pennant for the second time in three years.

The Mets and Dodgers had played a combined total of 321 games in six months during the regular season and six more in the playoff, which the Mets tied Tuesday night, and this was the final roll of the dice, winner take all.

IT WAS also a return match between two pitchers who had worked to no decision last Saturday in New York in the third game: Darling, the 28-year-old right-hander from Honolulu and Yale, and Hershiser, the 30-year-old right-hander from Buffalo, who pitched 6⅔ shutout innings in a row until the Mets scored on him in the opening game.

"Every pitch, every play, every batter, you have to concentrate," Darling said, describing the urgency of the moment. "You can't make a mistake."

"You pitch a seventh game like every inning is the ninth inning," Hershiser said. "You are exposing everything and showing everything on every pitch."

From the start Wednesday night, before a chanting, roaring crowd of 55,693 in Dodger Stadium, they played it just as they had described it: with all due caution and deliberation, every pitch calculated, every pitch almost aimed. But the Dodgers were waiting in ambush.

He hit a hard two-hopper to Steve Sax, who fired to Alfredo Griffin for one out and Griffin fired to first trying for two. But Strawberry flew down the line and beat the throw in a photo finish. Still, the Mets had runners on first and third, and the batter was Kevin McReynolds, who had five hits in his last five times at bat. He lined out to third base, and the Mets subsided.

BUT THE Dodgers wasted no time striking for the lead in the home half of the first, and they did it with stunning effect. Sax lined Darling's second pitch to center for a single. He was running on Darling's second pitch to Mickey Hatcher, who ripped a double past third base, and the Dodgers had men on second and third with nobody out.

Next came Kirk Gibson, who had mystified the Mets and sabotaged the Dodgers by popping out on a bunt in Tuesday night's game. This time, he unloaded a 400-foot fly to center that Lenny Dykstra caught near the fence. Sax tagged and crossed, and the Mets were one run down.

It might have been worse, but Darling stabilized things by striking out Mike Marshall and John Shelby. Then, one inning later, the roof caved in on him.

Mike Scioscia opened the bottom of the second with a single to right. Jeff Hamilton followed with a single to left and Griffin bunted. It was a pop fly between the mound and first base and, with the pitcher coming up next, it caught Hernandez playing back. The ball dropped untouched for a single, and the Dodgers had the bases loaded with nobody out and a pennant waiting.

They also had Hershiser batting, and he hit a chop up the third-base line to Gregg Jefferies, who fumbled it in his haste to throw home. Scioscia scored, the Dodgers led by two and the bases were still loaded.

It was already a harrowing start for Darling, and it promptly became a debacle. Sax lined a single to center, two more runs crossed, the Dodgers led by four with nobody out that they got the lead in six of the seven games," Mets catcher Gary Carter said. "It made it tough to come back every time out."

Mets just didn't have it

The Mets fell behind Hershiser 2-0 in Game 1 and came back to beat the Dodgers 3-2 with three runs in the ninth. In Game 3 against Hershiser, the Mets trailed 3-0 but rallied for an 8-4 victory.

During the season, the Mets won 19 games in their last at-bat and rallied for 45 of their 100 victories, including 27 from the ninth inning on.

"Hey, when you give him six runs he gets even tougher," Mets rookie third baseman Gregg Jefferies said. "He is a great pitcher and with that many runs, he becomes that much tougher. But even with his outing, we didn't score any runs. We couldn't win without any runs."

Ron Darling started Game 7 for the Mets and allowed six runs in one-plus innings.

"I'd love to say they beat me without good stuff but it wouldn't be true," Darling said. "I felt wonderful."

Darling also started Game 7 of the 1986 World Series and left after 3 2-3 innings trailing 3-0. The Mets rallied to win that game 8-5 for the world championship.

In Game 6 against Boston, the Mets were down to their last strike in the 10th inning when they rallied for three runs.

New York led the NL with 152 homers, 703 runs and a 2.91 earned-run average. But for much of the summer, they struggled and only shook off the pesky Pittsburgh Pirates in the last few weeks of the season.

"The Mets are the best team in the National League," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said. "But sometimes in a fight the best man doesn't always win, sometimes the man with the biggest heart wins."

Along with comebacks, another trademark for the Mets has been off-field controversy and that didn't take long to develop in the playoffs.

After Game 1, pitcher David Cone wrote in a first-person article for the New York Daily News that Hershiser was "lucky" to shut the Mets out for eight innings and Jay Howell "looked like a high school pitcher."

Stanton, McCamey take aim on 2A grid playoffs

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Judging from the first four weeks of the season, it didn't look as though either Stanton or McCamey would have a banner season.

Stanton was 2-2, but the Class 2A Buffs were nearly blanked by Garden City in the fourth week. McCamey, meanwhile, suffered through a meatgrinder non-district schedule (four Class 3A teams) in which they finished 1-4.

Now they're among the favorites in District 5-2A. Say what?

The winner of Friday's game between the two schools at Stanton will have taken a giant step toward playoff opportunities. Neither Stanton coach Dale Ruth nor McCamey coach Danny Wilhelm have any illusions that Friday's game will be anything but tough.

IN OTHER area action Friday, Andrews travels to Monahans in a key District 4-4A matchup; Big Spring is at San Angelo Lake View in an effort to stay out of the 4-4A cellar; Lamesa visits winless Lubbock Roosevelt; Greenwood journeys to Fabens; Crane plays at Clint; Iraan hosts Van Horn; Reagan County hosts Winters; Rankin visits Water Valley and Garden City hosts Irion County.

Area Football

Stanton, 4-2, is coming off consecutive wins over Forsan and Presidio, while McCamey, 2-4, goes Buff-hunting after a 55-0 win over Van Horn in a 5-2A opener last week.

The Buffs got a lift when Ruth switched back to a Wishbone offense in order to take better advantage of quarterback Randy Nevarez and right halfback Steve Scurlark, neither of whom played regularly during the first four games under the Wing-T formation.

"We switched to the Wing-T because of a lack of depth," Ruth said. "That has been more or less our trouble. We'd get somebody hurt, and we've had nobody left to take over."

INDEED, the Buffs have been dogged by the loss of fullback Kevin Barnes to a twisted knee. But Jeff Hall and George Reyna filled in during the Buffs' 32-0 win over Presidio last week, while Scurlark and Robert Jones have excelled at the halfbacks.

Jones has rushed for more than 400 yards despite a slow start, while Scurlark has rushed for more than 300 yards, including consecutive 100-yard games against Garden City and Forsan.

Meanwhile, Nevarez has edged into a draw with Brad Holland at quarterback. Holland had been the starter during the Buffs' Wing-T days, but Nevarez came through for two rushing touchdowns against Presidio.

THE BUFFS will need all the horses they can muster against McCamey, for the Badgers have been rock-solid on defense in wins over Alpine and Van Horn. McCamey defenders have an average yield of only 70 yards in their wins. And, the Badgers held vaunted Reagan County to 14 points and trailed Kermit only 7-6 at the half.

"From our standpoint, this game is for the district championship," he said. "Next week (against Marfa) will be the same thing.

"And, there's a chance that it could come down to the last game of the year against Iraan."

Wilhelm feels his defense has a head start on the Stanton wishbone based on their experience with the Kermit and Greenwood 'bones earlier this season. Kermit features running back Billy Ray Thompson, while Greenwood is keyed by quarterback Randy Donnell.

Much has been said about the Badgers' strong interior defensive line of Anatascio Dominguez, Will Kennedy and Ivan Borrego. But the Badgers got a special lift when tailback Daniel Flores recovered from a knee injury earlier than feared and sophomore Stephen Terry came through as a backup.

Flores scored four touchdowns in only one quarter against Van Horn, gaining 113 yards on nine carries. Terry finished up with 103 yards and two TD's on 12 carries, while fullback Servando Venegas also scored twice. The Badgers rolled up 417 rushing yards against hapless Van Horn, which had been beaten 68-0 by Alpine the previous week.

NOTES: It's big game week in the area. Andrews and Monahans are battling for the second playoff spot in District 4-4A, both with 2-0 district marks. The Mustangs are coming off

Robin Givens, pro divorcee, tops 10 Richest list, 2001

Oct. 13, 2001: Forbes Magazine today released its list of the 10 richest Americans. Note: There are only 10 'rich' Americans this year. Ironically, they are all figures related in some way to the world of sports:

Patterson

1. Robin Givens, professional divorcee. Est. worth: $3 billion. Givens has made a sport out of hiring and firing husbands who have made their fortunes in professional athletics. She began with Mike Tyson in the late 1980s and, through numerous divorce proceedings, has since collected a fortune from such exhusbands as Danny Manning, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Dave Winfield and Alysheba.

2. Senator Roger Staubach, R-Tex. Est. worth: $2 billion. Real estate investments in North Dallas, Plano and the newly annexed Rogerville has pushed Staubach's worth through the roof. The former Cowboy quarterback said the wisest business decision he ever made was to not buy his former team. (The Cowboys, now 0-6, are in the depths of yet another losing season as 80-year-old coach Tom Landry continues his undying faith in 18-year veteran quarterback Steve Pelluer.)

3. Brent Musberger, network executive. Est. worth: $1.5 billion. Owner and founder of The B.M. Company, otherwise known as "B.M.C., The Brent Channel," the former CBS anchor now has exclusive broadcast rights to all games in The Musberger Football League.

4. Mary Lou Retton, businesswoman. Est. worth: $100 million. After a lifetime of endorsing fast food restaurants and breakfast foods, the 300-pound former Olympic gold medalist has made her fortune in dessert treats. Not many Americans have been able to resist the temptation of "Mary Lou-berry Ice Cream."

5. Frank and Cathy Lee Gifford, authors/speakers. Est. worth: $100 million. The only husband and wife combination on our list, Frank and Cathy Lee made their fortune on the speaker's tour following their highly successful book, "How to Look Happy When You're Really Not." The Giffords have delighted thousands of depressed Americans with their truly inspirational lectures.

6. Michael Jordan, professional athlete. Est. worth: $90 million. Jordan, owner/player of the Chicago Bulls, is now the highest paid athlete in the history of organized sports. His other earnings come from his sole ownership of Mikey Shoes. Ironically, Jordan made more money in endorsements in the '80s and '90s than he does as owner of the company today.

7. Michael Jordan, Jr., professional athlete. Est. worth: $85 million. Dad's generosity made it possible for Little Mike to become the highest paid rookie in the history of organized sports. Just 20 years old, Mike, Jr., could retire after just one year in the NBA, spend $1 million dollars a year for the rest of his life and still have money on his 104th birthday.

8. John Madden, author. Est. worth: $84 million. Madden's latest book was an unheralded success, although a bit intimidating. The book, entitled "Hey, You Better Read My *&¢%$ Book Right This Minute or I'll Force You To Watch Me Diagram *&¢%$ Instant Replays for a Year" stayed on the New York Times Bestseller list for three years, giving Madden enough money to purchase his own airline.

9. Donald Trump, developer/real estate magnate. Est. worth: $63 million. Trump almost moved out of the Top 10 after his purchase of the state of New Jersey brought him to the brink of bankruptcy.

10. Herschel Walker, ballet star. Est. worth: $50 million. The former Georgia-New Jersey-Dallas Cowboy speedster has turned to the world of stage fulltime, making a fortune in the process. Walker's next appearance should keep bringing in the bucks as he stars with Mikhail Barishnikov and Tony Dorsett in the Hoboken Ballet production of "My Little Tailback."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Navy silent on Robinson's dismissal bid

DALLAS (AP) — Secretary of the Navy William Ball was noncommital when asked about a request made on behalf of David Robinson that he be granted an early dismissal from his military duty. The 7-foot center taken by the San Antonio Spurs in the 1987 NBA draft, is on assignment with the Navy at the King's Bay, Ga., Trident submarine training facility. His naval commitment runs until May 1989.

Lee Fentress, Robinson's Washington-based agent, asked in a letter sent on the player's behalf that Robinson be dismissed early from the commitment.

"He wrote a personal letter to me, and it was a private communication," said Ball, in Dallas to address a joint session of the Dallas Council on World Affairs and the Rotary Club of Dallas. "I'll respect his request for privacy. I'll respond to him directly.

Kosar works out

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Injured Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar put on shoulder pads and a helmet and threw passes to his receivers Wednesday, and the Browns' team doctor said Kosar may be able to resume playing at Phoenix a week from Sunday. "There's a reasonable chance of him possibly being able to play in the Phoenix game" on Oct. 23, Dr. John Bergfeld said after examining Kosar and watching him throw. "But that could change at any time. He has to be able to throw under game conditions, which is different than throwing here."

Orioles add AA team

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles will affiliate with a Class AA team being purchased by owners of the Hagerstown Suns, Orioles GM Roland Hemond said. The Suns owners announced plans to buy the Williamsport, Pa., Bills, a Class AA team in the Eastern League. The sale is hinged on approval by the Eastern League. It is still unclear where the Class AA team would play.

The team could remain in Williamsport. However, Suns President Terry Randall is exploring the possibility of moving the team to Frederick or Hagerstown, which already is the home of the Suns, a Class A team in the Carolina League.

Lohn, Christoval best

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Lohn and Christoval had little trouble keeping up District 8-A's domination of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal's weekly high school six-man football poll. A 54-6 whipping of Novice left defending state champion Lohn atop the poll of West Texas sports writers. The Eagles claimed all six first-place votes for 60 total points.

Christoval, which beat Paint Rock 52-6, was second in the rankings with 52 points.

Zephyr, which fended off Harper for a 12-6 victory, remained third and Trent was fourth after receiving a forfeit victory over Hermleigh.

Lazbuddie hammered Carlsbad, N.M., Bethel Christian, 64-16, and moved past Fort Hancock into the No.5 spot. Fort Hancock eased past Sierra Blanca 58-47.

New Home, idle last week, remained seventh.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal weekly high school six-man football poll with first-place votes in parentheses, season's record and points (based on 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1):

1. Lohn (6) 5-0 60 1
2. Christoval 5-0 52
3. Zephyr 5-0 42
4. Trent 6-0 41
5. Lazbuddie 6-0 35
6. Fort Hancock 6-0 24
7. New Home 6-0 23
8. Cherokee 5-1 15
9. Harrold 6-0 13
10. Milford 5-0 8

Other teams receiving votes: Strawn 5, Silverton 4, Rochester 3, Loraine 2, Aquilla 1.

Cowboys sign FA Cornell Burbage

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Free agent wide receiver Cornell Burbage, who also returns punts, was signed by the Dallas Cowboys on Wednesday to shore up their injured receiving corps.

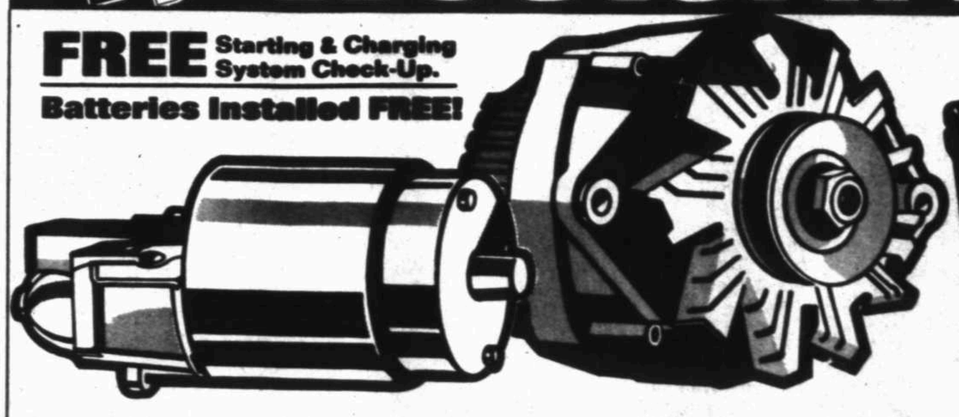

Burbage was with the team through preseason but failed to make the final cut.

Wide receiver Kelvin Martin, who also returns punts, suffered a fractured wrist in Sunday's 35-17 National Football League loss to the Washington Redskins.

Also nursing leg injuries are wide receivers Michael Irvin and Kelvin Edwards.

Mario Lemieux is "a little angry" that the Pittsburgh Penguins haven't renegotiated his contract as promised, but said he will concentrate on hockey, not money, now that the NHL season has started. Lemieux, the league's leading scorer and MVP, said the eight-year, $20 million contract the Los Angeles Kings recently gave Wayne Gretzky "changed a lot of things around here."

Dallas Mavericks Mark Aguirre showed up late for a team practice earlier this week, but the denied his tardiness is an indication that he is unhappy with his contract. Aguirre was late for the NBA team's practice Monday night and received the mandatory fine of $250. Sources reported Aguirre, $600,000 per year, actually was ill and showed up late because he was unhappy with the value of his contract.

Los Angeles Lakers owner Jerry Buss has said he is interested in the Dallas Cowboys franchise, but an NFL rule prohibiting cross-ownership could prevent him from purchasing the team. Buss, 55, has made preliminary inquiries about the Cowboys, which owner Bum Bright is trying to sell for $100 million. The buyer also would have to purchase Texas Stadium, the Cowboys home, for $50 million. Cowboys President Tex Schramm said Buss would probably have to sell the Lakers to buy the football team.

RB Johnny Bailey, Texas A&I, and LB Henry Alsbrooks, Angelo State, are Lone Star Conference players of the week. Bailey gained 217 yards in a 42-35 loss to East Texas State and Alsbrooks set up two TDs in a 49-18 triumph over Eastern New Mexico.

Texas A&M's Darren Lewis rushed for 201 yards in 27 carries against Houston last week to earn AP Offensive Player of the Week honor while A&M LB John Roper and Safety Brent Smith shared defensive player laurels, contributing five of the eight QB sacks against Baylor....

Gretzky still rules Bruins

Associated Press

Last season, the Boston Bruins had their hands full with Wayne Gretzky in the Stanley Cup finals.

Things haven't changed, even though Gretzky has changed teams.

NHL

"(Gretzky's) the greatest offensive threat in the league right now. It really sparks the offense when he gets the puck," Boston Coach Terry O'Reilly said after the Los Angeles Kings beat the Bruins 6-2 Wednesday night with Gretzky's help.

Gretzky, whose brilliance led Edmonton to a four-game sweep over the Bruins in last season's finals, picked up where he left off against Boston. The new kingpin of the Kings scored two goals at the Forum to spark a five-goal third period.

"Right now we have beaten three divisional champs and one conference champ, but we've still got a long way to go," said Gretzky, referring to the Kings' fast 4-0 start with wins over Detroit, Cal

Holtz just wants to make it close

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Miami-Notre Dame just another game? Not quite.

It may be, as Duffy Daugherty once said about a particular game, "not life and death. It's more important than that."

For understatement, we give you Miami coach Jimmy Johnson: "I think in the last few years the Notre Dame-Miami rivalry has stirred interest on a national basis as much as any other game in the country."

For overstatement, we give you Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz: "You look at the record and Notre Dame has had trouble even staying on the field with Miami the last four times they've played. Miami has just dominated the football games, and I don't know if we're capable of making it close this time."

The last two games are the ones that stick in Notre Dame's craw. There was the 58-7 massacre in 1985 in Gerry Faust's swan song. Notre Dame tried to get even last year and got whipped again, 24-0.

Those games were in Miami. This one's in South Bend, where No. 1 Miami is a 3½-point favorite over No. 4 Notre Dame. Miami has had two weeks to prepare for Notre Dame's option and remember how the Hurricanes stuffed Oklahoma's wishbone. The pick is ... Miami 24-17.

Last week's prediction record was 38-12-1—.760; for the season, 216-77-2—.737. Against the point spread, last week's mark was 18-17-1-.514; on the year, 88-95-1-.481.

REGARDLESS of what Notre Dame does, it won't be a good day for Faust, whose Akron team visits No. 12 Auburn. There is no line on the game. Here's why ... Auburn 56-0.

No. 16 Washington at No. 3 Southern California (favored by 14): After this, the Trojans can relax until they meet UCLA and Notre Dame back-to-back in late November ... Southern Cal 31-14.

No. 10 Oklahoma State at No. 7 Nebraska (by 9): The Cowboys are for real, but how real? They won the first two games of the series in 1960-61, but are 0-25-1 since ... Nebraska 31-21.

No. 2 UCLA (by 20) at California: This was a close series until the Bruins won the last 16 meetings ... UCLA 42-14.

East Carolina at No. 5 Florida State (by 29): Both teams are looking ahead to November — Florida State because it plays South Carolina, East Carolina because it stops playing people like West Virginia, Miami and ... Florida State 42-10.

No. 8 South Carolina (by 14½) at Georgia Tech: Tech hasn't beaten a Division I-A team in two years and this week won't be any different ... South Carolina 30-13.

Oakland A's anything but smug

By STEVE WILSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — One look at the dark, fiery eyes of Tony La Russa or a view of the Oakland Athletics' workout is enough to wipe out any notion the American League champs are settling into smugness before the World Series.

No team in 19 years of major league playoffs has had five days off before the start of the World Series — five days to get bloated with self-satisfaction and stale on the field.

The Athletics worked out for the second straight day Wednesday, determined to keep the edge that enabled them to win eight of 11 after they clinched the division title Sept. 19, then swept the Red Sox in four straight.

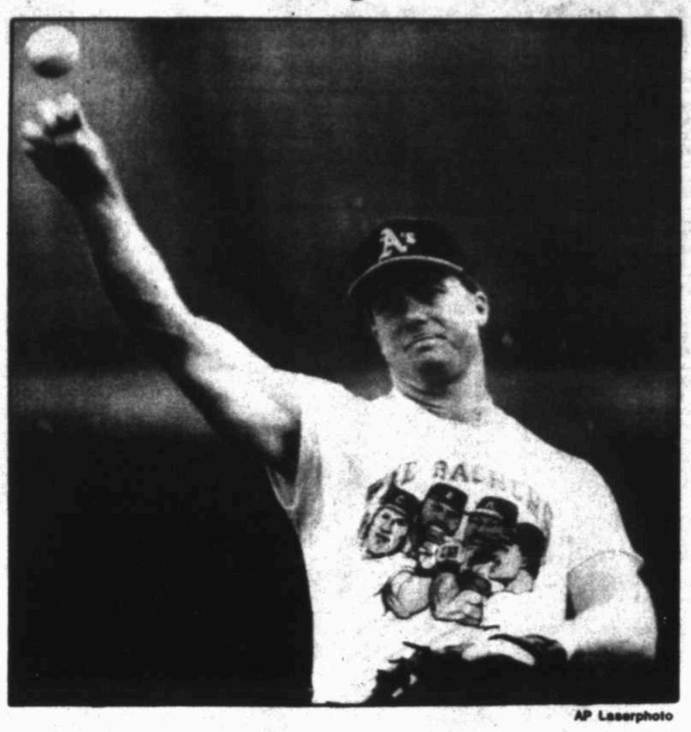

The team is relaxed and loose. No one is pressing or looking anxious. But there is no mistaking the determination to complete the goal La Russa and the players set early in the season: to win the World Series and not just the division or pennant.

Or, as La Russa describes it, to negotiate the final side of "the pyramid."

La Russa never let this team ease up, not when it won 14 straight and 18 of 19 early in the season and not when it was breezing to the AL West championship.

His players maintain the same focus on winning the World Series and proving they are the best in baseball.

The champagne party after the victory over Boston was brief and somewhat restrained. Jose Canseco had a few sips of bubbly and declined another round. Carney Lansford sat by his locker, utterly happy but holding back a little.

Slugger Mark McGwire keeps loose.

"I can remember winning a division title with the '79 (California) Angels," said Lansford. "We were so satisfied with that, we died in the playoffs (against the Baltimore Orioles).

"This year, nobody has said anything about being satisfied. That includes right now. We still have a job to do."

Canseco is working out this week as if he still had a lot to prove, despite his three homers in the playoffs, 42 during the season and 40 stolen bases.

"I think our confidence level has been extremely high, but we don't try to get so high to the point where we get arrogant or we come in and take everything for granted," Canseco said.

"We're going to work hard. We're going to come out here every day, running, taking batting practice, the whole works. We're not going to lay off just because we're in the World Series. There's still a lot of work to be done."

The A's pitchers are going through their first serious batting practices in preparation for playing under National League rules in the Series with no designated hitter.

Dave Stewart, who will open the Series, is looking forward to taking his turn at bat, as is reliever Dennis Eckersley.

However, the coaches aren't too keen on heavy batting practice for the pitchers and are keeping down the number of their swings.

"I think the dangers of having full-fledged batting practice for pitchers far outweigh the advantages," said pitching coach Dave Duncan. "And you can't expect to teach hitting in three days. We swung the bat all right in spring training without b.p."

"We don't want to have the pitchers work so much they wind up pulling one of those muscles they haven't used all year," said batting coach Jim Lefebvre. "Besides, you see all those National League pitchers spend all that time working on it and they still can't hit."

Eckersley said his last year in Chicago in 1986 he had two homers and 10 runs batted in.

"That's pretty good for a pitcher," he said proudly. "I hit better than I pitched that year."

"I got a hit in spring training," said Stewart. "I swing the bat OK, but basically the pitcher in the National League is wasted. He'll either bunt or strike out."

Report two Buckeyes failed test for steroids

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — If two Ohio State football players tested positive for use of steroids, as a newspaper has reported, then "two is too many," Coach John Cooper says.

The Dayton Daily News reported Wednesday that Ohio State team physician Robert Murphy said two players failed a test for anabolic steroids last spring and that one of them failed a test again this fall.

"We are not taking a win-at-all-costs stance, or we wouldn't be testing," Cooper said. "I don't want to see any of them test positive. That's why we spend this much money and time to make sure we have a drug-free football team and a drug-free athletic department. We're sincere about it."

Anabolic steroids are banned by both the NCAA and Ohio State. They are said to produce greater muscle mass and strength, but also cause side effects ranging from moodiness to cancer.

"Ask me if we have an anabolic steroid problem — yes, we all do." Murphy said of the use of steroids in college athletics.

Murphy said 23 football players were tested last spring. This fall, 32 players were tested. Murphy is awaiting results from a recent test and is about to test some athletes again.

Croudip had severe habit

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Falcons defensive back David Croudip was a "habitual user" of cocaine, according to an investigator studying the player's death.

Croudip collapsed and died Monday because he ingested a "large amount" of the drug, said Robert Tressel, an investigator for Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph L. Burton.

"It is apparent from the investigation that he was not a random user of the drug, but he was a habitual user," Tressel said.

A toxicology report by the Georgia Crime Lab, released Wednesday, showed Croudip, 29, still had 84 milligrams of cocaine in his stomach and 0.26 milligrams per deciliter of cocaine in his blood.

"It's a large amount," said Tressel, who performed the autopsy. "He ingested it by eating it or drinking it. That's what we call an acute overdose."

Dewey Brown, another medical examiner's investigator, said, "The fact that there is still unaltered cocaine in the blood indicates recent usage."

He said the results of the report indicated that it could have been ingested within minutes to an hour of Croudip's death. Brown said that overdoses have been reported from greater — and smaller — amounts of cocaine.

The report said a quantity of cocaine in the stomach indicates the cocaine was taken orally, but that does not preclude the possibility of nasal ingestion.

Andrews, 4-1 overall, has already surpassed its 1987 win total despite a series of nagging injuries that has hampered an already thin squad.

AND HOW 'BOUT RANKIN: The Red Devils are finally knocking on the door of a state ranking after five weeks without a loss. Coach Troy Kennedy's team gained 15 points in the latest Associated Press prep football poll.

Sudan is 10th with 23 points. Surprisingly, none of the other three undefeated District 8-A teams earned points. That may change after this week, because Rankin plays Water Valley and Garden City hosts Irion County. All are undefeated, and all four could probably advance a couple of rounds in the playoffs.

LEE

Not only could Lee use his offensive firepower, but Strambler would love to have the chance at breaking the 1,000-yard barrier against the generous Eagle defense. Strambler, first in the district in rushing, needs 222 yards to become the sixth rusher in LHS history to break that mark, although accomplishing the task quite likely won't come until Oct. 28 against Permian.

"We've got to win this week if we want to have a chance to get in the playoffs," Miller said. "It's easy to underestimate Abilene, but any team with their talent can beat anybody."

"There's no way I can downgrade Midland Lee," Pullin said. "They've got a world of talent, tons of speed and tradition. They've had two real good victories back to back. That kind of stuff bothers us. We'll have plenty of problems Friday night."

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Nature will express itself in great and glorious ways, affecting your health, moods and relationships in a positive manner. Your social connections are a source of continuing pleasure. You find innovative ways to advance your career. Put any extra funds in the bank. Travel will lead to new friends, maybe even marriage. Keep in touch with family members in other cities. Creative ventures prosper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your attitude makes a major difference in determining your success in the marketplace today. A potentially valuable relationship should be nurtured. A weekend trip proves invigorating. Cut spending.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look more closely at a proposition. You could find that there is something fishy about certain claims. You will feel better once you settle down in a new routine. Travel for family reasons.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Loyalty is the most important thing to mate and to the future of your relationship. Greater opportunities exist in the work arena now. Do not let a venture lose its momentum over the weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have the power to put a smile on the face of a member of the opposite sex. Customers, clients think you are great! Use your wonderful charm to advance your career goals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family harmony gives you greater peace of mind. Try to give everything you do that special personal touch. Past relationships are a good yardstick for measuring a new one. Romance is lively.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid rash decisions at all cost. Stick to tried-and-true methods. Bridge the distance by calling or writing someone who is very much on your mind. You could be thinking about marriage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Profits increase but so do expenses. Friends are willing to help out but there could be strings attached. Renewing an old friendship will lead to new insights, perhaps even a new relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An argument could be brewing at home. Diplomacy will help avert an ugly confrontation. Postpone making major financial decisions. Conserve funds. Seek understanding from college-bound teen-agers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Responsibilities continue to be heaped upon your capable shoulders. Curb a tendency to gamble or take unnecessary risks. A bold career move could prove beneficial if the timing is right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hard work is excellent therapy for those feeling down in the dumps. Get estimates in writing if making home repairs. Loved one could act in a mysterious fashion. Be generous and reserve judgment.

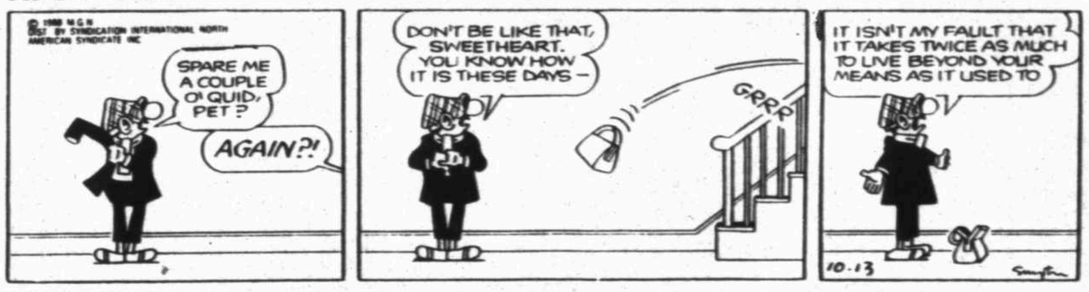

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conduct business in person. Careful handling of finances is essential now. Get agreements in writing. Promises come quickly and easily but may not be carried out. Know who you are dealing with.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your workload could be heavier than usual. Take short rest breaks from time to time and you will accomplish more. Keep your schedule flexible in case of unforeseen developments.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

Follow the play of this hand. At the end, decide who, if anyone, is guilty of an error.

With his balanced hand, South elected not to bid his weak major suit in favor of the descriptive jump to two no trump. North's raise to game was automatic.

West led the top of his spade sequences. To preserve an entry to dummy, declarer won in the closed hand. He had eight fast tricks, and the obvious place to establish a ninth was in diamonds. So he cashed the king-queen, crossed to the king of spades and tried the ace of diamonds. Since these maneuvers did not drop the jack, declarer had no way to fulfill his contract.

Have you reached a verdict?

Declarer was guilty of a major lapse in technique. His line was correct if he needed five tricks in diamonds, but he required only four. With but one side entry to dummy, there was a far superior line to establish a fourth trick.

At trick two, declarer should cash the king of diamonds, then overtake the queen with the ace to lead a third round of the suit. That gives declarer three chances to set up a fourth trick in the suit: 1. If the diamonds are 3-3; 2. if either defender holds a singleton or doubleton jack; or 3. if either defender holds a singleton or doubleton 9! In the latter two cases, declarer simply forces out the defenders' remaining high card in the suit and he still has the king of spades as a dummy entry to cash the established cards in the suit.

Mondale not interested in being University of Minnesota president

Mondale

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Walter Mondale says he may have been qualified to be president of the country, but couldn't see himself as president of the University of Minnesota.

"I've told the selection committee that I will not be a candidate," the former vice president said Wednesday. "You know, I love our university, what it's meant to me and to so many of us...but I just could not persuade myself that this was the best role I could play. It's a different world, you know, administering an academic community, and it just didn't seem the right thing for me to do."

Gov. Rudy Perpich had promoted Mondale as the successor to Kenneth Keller, who resigned as university president in March. The governor said persuading lawmakers to approve his budget requests for the university would have been easier with Mondale at the helm.

Mondale, who returned to Minnesota to practice law after his unsuccessful 1984 Democratic presidential bid, said he has no plans to run for political office in the future.

LONDON (AP) — An auction of neckties and other neckwear, including some donated by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and President Reagan, raised $67,553 for a charity for cancer victims.

Mrs. Thatcher's contribution, a black speckled jabot, and Reagan's, a blue and gold necktie, were bought for $7,266 each by Roy Bishko, chairman of a British chain of neckwear stores.

The 120 items up for sale included neckwear donated by Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones, former Beatle Paul McCartney and West German tennis ace Boris Becker.

MADRID, Spain (AP) — As King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia looked on, a military parade passed through the center of the Spanish capital to celebrate the national holiday that coincides with the date Christopher Columbus set foot in the New World 496 years ago.

Earlier Wednesday, the king, dressed in his army uniform as commander in chief of the Spanish armed forces, placed a laurel wreath before a monument dedicated "to all those who have given their lives for Spain."

CHICAGO (AP) — Geraldo Rivera and the Tribune Co., which distributes his TV talk show, have been sued for $65 million by a California father who contends he was wrongly accused of child sexual abuse on the program.

Brian Otter accused Rivera and the Chicago-based Tribune Co. of aiding and abetting Otter's ex-wife, April Curtis, in concealing the whereabouts of their daughter and subjecting him to severe emotional distress.

Otter's attorneys, Jeffrey Leving and Elliot Zinger, filed a lawsuit Monday in San Bernadino County Superior Court, the California county in which the father lives, Leving said Tuesday.

Tribune Co. spokeswoman Martha Lindeman and Rivera spokeswoman Lynn Lazaroff declined to comment Wednesday on the lawsuit, saying they hadn't received a copy of it.

The lawsuit states that Otter has been cleared by San Bernardino courts of his ex-wife's allegation that he sexually abused their daughter, Leving said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "I'll Still Be Loving You," written by Todd Cerney, was honored by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers as the ASCAP country song of the year.

The song was recorded by the group Restless Heart, but Wednesday night's award went to the songwriter.

Don Schlitz was chosen the group's country songwriter of the year. Among his top songs during the past year was "Forever and Ever, Amen," which was a No. 1 hit by Randy Travis.

The honors were announced at ASCAP's annual awards banquet. ASCAP licenses music and collects royalties for songwriters.

ALAMOSA, Colo. (AP) — Malcolm Forbes, board chairman of Forbes magazine as well as a philanthropist, art collector and record-setting balloonist, will receive an honorary degree at Adams State College, school officials said.

Forbes accepted an invitation to be the distinguished business executive in residence for the School of Business for one day. In conjunction with that honor today, he was to be awarded an honorary doctorate of human service and business leadership, said college spokesman Lloyd Engen.

Forbes planned to drive to the college from the Forbes Trinchera Ranch east of Alamosa, Engen said, adding, "and, no, Elizabeth Taylor won't be with him."

PARIS (AP) — A book and drawings by 19th century French poet Charles Baudelaire sold at an auction for a total of $1.6 million, the Druout auction house announced.

The National Library bought the book "My Naked Heart" for $350,000 at Salle Druout, the premier French art auction house.

Several drawings with China ink and feather issued by Baudelaire were sold to the Orsay Museum. They included "Portrait de Jeanne Duval," sold for $99,000, "A Wife for Asselineau" for $104,000 and another "Jeanne Duval" for $72,000.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Ken Murray, an actor whose 30-year career spanned the vaudeville stage and motion pictures, including the 1962 film "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance," died Wednesday of natural causes at age 85.

Murray is best remembered for his Hollywood stage appearances in "Ken Murray's Blackout," which ran from 1942 to 1949. He produced "Bill & Coo," a feature-length fantasy film about birds that received a special Academy Award in 1947 for "novel and entertaining use" of the film medium.

Murray also starred, produced and directed television's "The Ken Murray Show." Other television credits include "Hollywood Without Makeup," "Hollywood, My Home Town," and "El Coyote."

Jobs unveils Next computer system

By ANDREW POLLACK
New York Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Steven P. Jobs is back.

The personal computer industry's boy wonder, who founded Apple Computer when he was 21 years old, Wednesday introduced the new machine on which he hopes to once again ascend to the top of the computer world.

Jobs and his Palo Alto, Calif., company, Next Inc., have been working on the machine in great secrecy since 1985, when Jobs was ousted from Apple in a power struggle.

"I think I speak for everyone at Next saying it's great to be back," Jobs said. "Together we're going to experience one of those times that is experienced only once or twice a decade in computing."

To a hushed crowd of 3,000 at Davies Symphony Hall here, Jobs introduced the machine — a black magnesium cube housing the electronics, accompanied by an optical disk storage device and a large black-and-white screen capable of displaying photographic quality images.

Jobs is known for his dramatic product introductions and he and his company took advantage of intense interest in the computer community about both him and his new machine.

He stood alone on a dark stage with just the computer and a vase of flowers, a huge screen behind him, and took the new machine through its paces.

He demonstrated how it could record and send voice messages, play music with the quality of a compact disk and instantly retrieve quotes from the complete works of Shakespeare stored on its optical disk.

After the two-hour demonstration, capped by a duet featuring the machine and a violinist for the San Francisco Symphony, the audience gave Jobs a standing ovation.

The machine, known as the Next Computer System, is intended primarily for use in university education and will be sold for $6,500, a price that includes the optical disk, monitor and several software programs.

"My gut feeling is that it is going to have a big impact on higher education, not only by what it is, but by the signal it sends to the rest of the industry," said Douglas Van Houweling, vice provost for information technolgy at the University of Michigan.

Still, those who have been waiting so long expressed some disappointment.

The machine, which already has taken a year longer to bring to market than Jobs expected, is not ready for final production.

While some machines will be shipped in November to some universities and software developers, widespread shipments will not begin until the second quarter of 1989.

And while the price is low for all those features, it is still far higher than the $3,000 that is considered the upper limit for university students.

"The machine turned out better than I expected," Van Houweling said. "We wish it had been sooner and we wish it would be cheaper."

Moreover, the general public will not be able to buy the machines. They will be sold only to universities. It is considered likely that eventually the computer will be marketed to businesses and the general public as well, though for a higher price.

Oil price crash conspiracy discredited

By CLAY ROBISON
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN – A Washington-based consumer group has issued a report accusing the Reagan administration, major oil companies and Saudi Arabia of orchestrating the plunge in world oil prices that devastated the Texas economy in 1986.

The study was viewed with skepticism by some independent producers, who were hit hard when Texas oil prices plummeted from an average $27 a barrel in December 1985 to $11 a barrel seven months later.

The Citizen/Labor Energy Coalition, which represents labor unions and consumer groups in 25 states, accuses the Reagan administration, Aramco, and Saudi Arabia of a conspiracy to reduce the price of oil.

"These powerful forces worked together because of mutual economic interests and because each desired lower prices for a variety of economic and political reasons," said the report.

Aramco is a Saudi-owned oil company that has an operating arrangement with four major U.S. firms – Mobil Oil Corp., Exxon, Texaco Inc. and Chevron. Spokesmen for Aramco, Mobil and Exxon declined to comment on the allegations. A Texaco spokesman called them "patently absurd," and a Chevron spokesman said they were "beyond ridiculous."

The coalition based its conclusions on a circumstantial string of government documents, interviews with industry officials and newspaper, magazine and trade press accounts of the period.

Department of Energy spokesman Phil Keif said he hadn't seen the report, but he denied the agency would be involved in manipulating oil prices.

A spokesman for Secretary of the Interior Donald Hodel, who was energy secretary during part of the period covered by the study, said the report's conclusions were "ridiculous."

According to the study, "the Reagan administration wanted to boost economic growth, even if it meant damaging the domestic oil industry," and the Saudis wanted to increase oil production. Both governments, for "geopolitical purposes," also may have wanted to reduce Iranian oil revenues, the report suggested.

Aramco's four American partners saw an opportunity to purchase oil and gas properties made less costly by the crash and to increase sales and profits in oil refining and marketing, even if they suffered lower short-term profits, the report said.

Edwin S. Rothschild, the coalition's assistant director and author of the report, attempted to tie the administration to the oil price crash by referring to occasions when administration representatives spoke publicly in favor of lower prices. He said then-Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, in a memorandum to Hodel in August 1984, said "lower oil prices would bring benefits to almost everybody."

A Houston independent operator, Marvin C. Zeid, noted it was well known that Regan believed the economy would be better with lower oil prices.

"But as far as a conspiracy is concerned," he said, "I find it difficult to see there would be much of a gain since much of the administration's support came from the oil industry."

Transit study will look at compressed natural gas

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and mass transit represenatives announced Wednesday an $80,000 study of how alternate fuels such as natural gas can be used to power transit vehicles.

The study will be funded by the Texas Transit Association and conducted by Southwest Research Institute of San Antonio.

The transit association is made up of the state's 33 public transportation systems, which have a combined yearly ridership of 210 million.

"This is a big step toward the acceptance of natural gas as a vehicular fuel," Mauro told a news conference. "This study will open the way to cleaner skies and an improved economy for Texas."

It was also announced that Brazos Transit System of Bryan, the largest rural bus system in Texas, will convert 15 40-foot coaches to compressed natural gas beginning this winter.

Chief executive John McBeth of Brazos Transit said 15 to 20 mid-size coaches will be converted next after the first buses prove themselves.

The buses will be used mainly on Bryan-College Station city routes and in the Lufkin and Huntsville areas.

McBeth recently visited Canada, which uses natural gas to power fleet vehicles, and said, "If Canada can do it, so can we. Plus, we have a lot more natural gas than they do. Remember, oil won't stay $10 a barrel forever."

Mauro said by converting fleet vehicles to natural gas, operators can help their cities meet federal standards for air quality and also should save 40 percent on fuel costs and 50 percent in maintenance costs.

Trump buys shuttle

Prize goes for $365 million

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines' decision to sell its profitable Northeast shuttle to developer Donald Trump raises more questions about the future of the money-losing carrier, analysts said Wednesday.

"There's no question that within the Eastern structure, the shuttle is certainly the crown jewel," said Robert Joedicke, airline analyst for Sherson Lehman in New York. "Obviously, they've been having difficulties at Eastern and if you take out a highly profitable facet, it certainly makes it much harder to survive."

Robert V. Callahan, former head of the Eastern flight attendants union, was blunter about the sale. "If it clears all the legal hurdles, it signals the end of Eastern Airlines as an independent entity," he said, referring to the vow by Eastern's unions to try to block the sale in the courts.

However, Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said the deal "absolutely does not mean the end of Eastern."

"There's no reason to draw that conclusion," he said. "If anything, it strengthens Eastern enormously."

Matell said Eastern would gain badly needed cash to pay bills while maintaining marketing relationships and route tie-ins. Also, the shuttle would not go to an existing competitor, he noted.

Trump agreed to pay $365 million in cash for the shuttle operation, which he said would be renamed the Trump Shuttle.

AUTOMOTIVE

U.S. to crash 34 cars in safety test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-four 1989-model autos will be slammed into a barrier at 35 mph to help the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration judge how the occupants would fare in the event of an actual crash.

All auto models are crash-tested by their manufacturers to ensure they comply with federal safety standards, but the results are held secret by the companies.

The 35 mph test conducted under the government's public crash-test program, intended as a guide to consumers, is 5 mph faster than the speed required for compliance with the safety standards, the agency said Wednesday.

The results will be measured by dummies wired with instruments that show the force on the head, chest and upper legs. The dummies will be protected by seat belts or air bags.

Passenger cars to be tested under the public crash-test program are the Audi 80, Chevrolet Caprice, Chrysler Fifth Avenue, Dodge Daytona, Dodge Spirit, Eagle Medallion, Eagle Premier, Ford Probe, Ford Thunderbird, Geo Metro 2-door and 4-door, Honda Civic CRX, Hyundai Sonata, Lincoln Continental, Mercury Tracer, Mitsubishi Galant, Mitsubishi Mirage, Nissan 240 SX, Nissan Maxima, Peugeot 505, Plymouth Acclaim, Toyota Corolla, Toyota Cressida and Volkswagen Fox.

Pickups, vans and multi-purpose passenger vehicles to be tested are the Chevrolet Astro, Chevrolet S-10 Blazer, Ford Bronco II, Isuzu Trooper II, Jeep Cherokee, Mazda van, Mitsubishi van, Suzuki Sidekick, Toyota pickup and Toyota van.

Crude prices hover near $14 mark

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil futures lost ground today after surging above $14 a barrel Wednesday. Contracts for November delivery were down 18 cents to $13.92 at midmorning.

Prices had surged above $14 a barrel Wednesday for the first time in two weeks amid growing speculation that OPEC may be moving toward an agreement to restrain its production.

Analysts said some late buying was triggered by a rumor, promptly denied at the State Department, that the U.S. embassy in Saudi Arabia had been bombed.

The price for the November contract for West Texas Intermediate oil, the benchmark U.S. crude, climbed 56 cents to settle at $14.11 a barrel.

Reports that several members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have been producing well in excess of their quotas drove prices down to last week's lows.

But prices have moved higher since then, as some traders say signs have emerged of a more conciliatory attitude among OPEC members.

"There is a growing perception that prices had gotten low enough to force OPEC to do something," said Peter Beutel, assistant director of the energy group at Elders Futures Inc. in New York.

Beutel said the approach of the Oct. 20 meeting of the OPEC price monitoring and long-term strategy committees was making some traders nervous about the risks of agreements they might have previously made to sell borrowed oil contracts in expectations prices would fall further.

As speculation about production restraint grows, Beutel said, some of those traders are buying contracts to square those positions before the committee meetings occur.

He said some traders also think that this weekend's meeting of the Gulf Cooperation Council, which includes four nations who are members of OPEC, could provide the OPEC members a chance to "patch something together" that could be discussed at the OPEC price and strategy committee meetings.

Trade deficit concerns lower dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell today in Europe as foreign currency dealers said they waited for the release of U.S. trade figures for August later in the day.

Gold prices were mixed.

"People are unwilling to take any positions ahead of the numbers," said one dealer for a major West German bank in Frankfurt.

Traders said that the upcoming U.S. presidential election also was creating uncertainty in the market.

In Tokyo, the dollar plunged for the third straight trading day because of what dealers said was uncertainty about the U.S. economy.

The dollar closed at 127.98 yen, down 1.67 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 128.25 yen.

—1.5465 Swiss francs, down from 1.5587

—6.2390 French francs, down from 6.2770

—2.0667 Dutch guilders, down from 2.0760

—1,365.00 Italian lire, down from 1,379.00

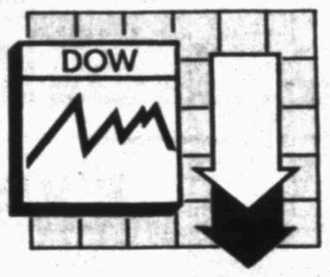

—1.2100 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2118

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.7365 to buy one pound, dearer than $1.7305 Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $409.00 an ounce, down from $409.25 bid late Wednesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $408.60.

Stock market dives 30.2 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took their sharpest drop in nearly two months Wednesday as traders uneasily awaited the latest monthly report on the nation's international trade position.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 30.23 points to 2,126.24, for its largest loss since it dropped 33.25 points on Aug. 15.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 397 up, 1,114 down and 450 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 154.84 million shares, against 140.90 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 184.05 million shares.

Analysts also said there was some disappointment among traders over the market's inability to extend the rally that carried the Dow Jones industrial average to its highest closing level of the year on Monday.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $32.46 billion, or 1.18 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 2.00 to 154.77.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 4.70 to 314.92, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 3.92 at 273.98.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Shamrock raises pressure on Polaroid

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Shamrock Holdings Inc. has intensified the pressure in its battle to acquire Polaroid Corp., charging in newspaper ads that the instant camera giant is fanning "fear and concern" among its employees.

Full-page advertisments in two Boston papers Wednesday followed a sharply worded exchange between the presidents of the two companies over Polaroid's rejection of Shamrock's request to meet with stockholders about its $2.6 billion, $42-a-share tender offer.

Haft family reported eyeing Walgreens

CHICAGO (AP) — The Haft family, a takeover clan already bidding for one of the largest supermarket chains, apparently also is gunning for the nation's biggest drugstore chain.

Executives of drug giant Walgreen Co. disclosed Wednesday that the Hafts are interested in acquiring a substantial stake of their company. The Hafts, well-known for takeover forays, have been seeking grocery giant Kroger Co.

House kills bill increasing FSLIC funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Rules Committee has killed a bill that would have pumped $5 billion into the fund that insures deposits in the nation's 3,000 savings institutions.

The committee decided Wednesday to indefinitely postpone floor debate on the measure by the full House after members argued that any attempt to bring more money into the ailing insurance fund should wait until early next year when a study of the industry is completed.

TRUMP

The shuttle has been Eastern's most profitable operation. But said it provides only about 4 percent of Eastern's revenues and therefore should not be considered crucial to its survival.

He said Eastern obviously would have prefered to keep the shuttle but was prevented by "the reality of our economics."

Eastern's unions, which have been blamed by management for fighting cost-cutting moves, vowed to fight the sale in court. They blocked an attempt in February by Eastern's parent, Texas Air Corp., to spin the shuttle service off into a new subsidiary and Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo later dropped the plan.

"I don't think anyone should consider this a done deal," Ron Cole, spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association local representing Eastern pilots, said of the sale to Trump. "Mr. Lorenzo has been systematically dismantling Eastern Airlines. We've been fighting the loss of any Eastern assets and we're going to keep fighting."

The agreement with Trump came amid reports Lorenzo also has been discussing the possible sale of the rest of Eastern to Carl Icahn, chairman of Trans World Airlines. Unions sources reported Icahn had talked with Eastern labor representatives about making salary concessions.

NEXT

Jobs, now 33, is hoping that by offering the power of an engineering workstation with the friendliness of a personal computer, there will still be room for a new machine. But he and others say he must offer something new that no one else has.

There is a difference of opinion on whether he does. William H. Gates, chairman of the Microsoft Corp.,a major supplier of personal computer software, derided the machine, saying it has nothing truly innovative and is just "another microprocessor in a box."

Others seem to suggest it has flash, but that other machines might be more powerful. Bill Joy, Sun Microsystems founder and technical guru, has called it "the first workstation for yuppies."

Others said that while the machine contained nothing dramatically new, it advanced the state of technology quantitatively in many areas at once and exemplified several trends.

"All the vendors are moving in that direction, but he's gotten there first," said Steve Christensen, a research scientist at the Supercomputer Center at the University of Illinois.

One trend exemplified by the Next machine is the move toward what is called multi-media machines. Instead of merely displaying text and graphics on the screen, such computers would be able to incorporate sound, animation and full-motion video as well.

The Next machine is particularly strong on sound. Users can record voice messages and send them to one another by electronic mail. Text documents on the screen can be annotated with voice commentary. And educational programs can be accompanied by voice, music and realistic sound effects.

The machine does not go as far in the video area. There is no color machine as yet, though Jobs said color would be available next year. Nor can the computer display video images, like those from a videotape.

Another area in which Next is pioneering is in the use of erasable optical disks, a long-awaited technology just starting to appear on the market.

The Next disk will carry 256 megabytes of information, equivalent to dozens or hundreds of books and about 10 times the capacity of many personal computer hard disks. The optical disks, which sell for about $50, are removable.

That will allow students to store personal digital libraries of reference works, musical scores or images of photographic quality.

Included with the Next machine is a dictionary, thesaurus, the Oxford Dictionary of Quotations and the complete works of Shakespeare. Software will allow particular definitions or quotes to be retrieved instantly from the disk by typing in key words.

Still, despite the advances, many analysts think Next faces an uphill battle. The education market is filled with competitors like Apple, Sun and Apollo, which are prepared to offer deep discounts to attact customers.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Insider trading reports helpful, but not foolproof

By BILL DOYLE

Q. There often are stories about "insider trading" by people who are in positions to have detailed knowledge about the companies whose stocks they are buying or selling.

Are these stories reliable indications for "outsiders," such as myself, to use for investment decisions?

Doyle

A. Reports of insider trading can be helpful when deciding whether to buy or sell. But they do not provide a surefire method of stock picking.

Every corporate insider — officer, member of the board of directors or owner of at least 10 percent of a company's stock — must file a report with the Securities and Exchange Commission whenever he or she buys or sells that stock.

Naturally, a corporation's insiders know a great deal more about the company's operations than other folks, whom you aptly call outsiders. It's assumed — not always correctly — that insiders have a better feel for the future price of the stock.

If insiders are making large purchases of XYZ stock, that's a pretty good indication — again, not foolproof — that XYZ Corp. is doing well and the market price of its stock should rise.

Conversely, if insiders are big sellers of XYZ, that's a fair indication the company and the market price of XYZ stock are headed downhill.

You'll note I'm using "hedge" words. Don't base your investment decisions strictly on insider trading reports. There normally is more insider selling than insider buying. That's because corporate officers often have accumulated shares in relatively small amounts over a long period of time, through such things as stock purchase plans. Insider sales often are in larger amounts.

Also, an insider's sale might not indicate the seller has turned sour on the stock. The sale might be for a personal reason — to diversify investments, buy a home, pay for a child's education or meet bills. There's always a lot of insider selling shortly before April 15 tax time.

As a final kicker, insiders are not required to make their SEC filings until the tenth day of the month following the month in which they bought or sold. And some reports are filed late. So an insider's trade could have taken place six weeks or more before you read about it.

Q. Isn't insider trading illegal?

A. Not unless it's based on material inside information. Don't confuse insider trading with trading on inside information.

A corporate insider — officer, director or holder of 10 percent or more of a company's stock — has just as much right to buy and sell that stock as does anyone else, providing he or she isn't privy to some nonpublic information that will affect the stock's price.

Material information is broadly defined as anything that will cause the market price of a stock to go up or down. It could be a rise of fall in company earnings, an increase or decrease in the dividend, a merger and a host of other items.

Nonpublic is a self-explanatory word. It's anything that has not yet been disclosed. Corporations are required to make public announcements of all material information.

Anyone who possesses material nonpublic information and who trades in the stock violates Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act, as well as the Securities and Exchange Commission's Rule 10b-5. That's been the crux of Wall Street's insider trading scandals.

The prohibition on trading based on material nonpublic information extends well beyond corporate insiders. The SEC and the U.S. Attorney's office have nabbed brokers, lawyers and others for misuse of inside information.

Q. My broker advises me to ignore tips supposedly based on inside information. Do you agree?

A. Yes, indeed! Most tips turn out to be false. Even if true, the stock's price probably has moved — before the tip reaches you.

'Heart-healthy,' nutritious eating important

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Most parents don't have to worry about much more than when to start their babies on solid foods and trying to get their children to eat their vegetables. Most children just eat when they get hungry.

Now, however, national health organizations and the media are telling parents they also should be concerned about whether their children are eating a "heart-healthy" diet. Medical research studies of adults have clearly shown that eating a diet high in saturated fats and high in cholesterol directly increases the risk of heart disease. Other factors, especially smoking, high blood pressure, diabetes and a family history of heart disease add to that risk.

Heart-healthy eating, a term coined by the American Heart Association, means reducing total fat intake in the diet to 30 percent of calories, reducing saturated fats to about 10 percent of calories and reducing total dietary cholesterol intake to 300 milligrams a day or less.

Since most people don't count every calorie, let alone know the percentage of calories devoted to each type of fat, this gets translated into a generally low-fat, low-cholesterol diet, and a diet which may not be the best for young children in the family.

All this diet advice has left many parents confused. Many questions are being asked by parents who are concerned about fat in their children's diets. A balanced diet is still most appropriate for all ages.

There is some disagreement among medical authorities as to the exact age when children should start eating a low-saturated fat diet, but they all agree that it shouldn't be before the age of 2.

Medical studies of babies under age 2 whose parents put them on low-fat diets by giving them skim milk, for example, have been found to suffer from slow growth and failure to thrive.

Since children need fat for normal growth and development, diets that are extremely low in fat are not desirable.

Severly restricting the amount of fat or cholesterol children eat would mean less meat, milk and cheese in their meals, which reduces excellent sources of calcium and iron that children need.

Parents can begin to instill heart-healthy eating habits in their children when they are preschoolers, but changes should be moderate.

In a family where adults are trying to cut down on total fat and cholesterol, this means eating lean meats with external fat trimmed, poultry with fat and skim removed, low-fat milk, cheese and other dairy products, and fewer eggs within a regular balanced diet that includes daily servings of vegetables, fruits and grain products.

Parents can stick with this lower fat menu while still providing whole milk for children under 2. For older children, switching to 2 percent milk is acceptable.

Parents sometimes deny children snacks in the belief they're bad for them, but nutritious snacks are necessary for growing children to keep up their energy levels and can be part of a heart-healthy diet.

The following are ways to reduce saturated fat in the family diet, without sacrificing nutrition and adequate snacks for children:

- Keep healthy snacks on hand, such fresh fruit, peanut butter spread on apple slices, unbuttered popcorn, low-fat yogurt and pudding made with low-fat milk.
- Choose lean cuts of red meat, usually labeled "select," and trim visible fat. Also prepare chicken without the skin.
- Try low-fat cheeses. Children typically like American cheese, and there are lower-fat versions available in supermarkets.
- Keep ice cream for a special treat. Instead, offer children fruit juice bars, sorbet, sherbet, ice milk or frozen yogurt for regular snacks.
- Choose lower fat cookies, such a fruit or raisin bars, ginger snaps or oatmeal cookies. Check the labels on cookie packages and avoid those that use the highly saturated coconut and palm kernel oils or animal fats.
- Also read labels on other prepared foods to avoid saturated oils or animal fats.
- Use a tub varieties of margarine that lists a liquid vegetable oil first on the list of ingredients.

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

As advertised in supermarket tabloids across the country, "Fat Magnet" was touted as a miracle diet pill that was developed by two Beverly Hills physicians. According to the firm's claims, this product — which sold for $22 a bottle — would help consumers lose weight without dieting or exercise by "... breaking up and trapping fat, and flushing it naturally out of the body." The Federal Trade Commission, however, found that the firm had no scientific evidence to support its claims.

Another advertising claim, which promises consumers to "snooze while you lose," also has come to the attention of the FTC. Jan. 11, 1988, in fact, the commission charged that advertising claims that "dream away" diet pills will cause users to lose weight while sleeping and without exercise or diets are false and deceptive. A federal district court has issued a temporary restraining order putting an immediate stop to such claims and froze the assets of four companies and three individuals.

The commission's complaint alleges that, in television ads and in promotional materials, the defendants made such claims for Dream Away and "Advanced" Dream Away as: "Just take Dream Away before going to bed. You will wake up the next morning slimmer, trimmer and looking better than you did."

The complaint charges, however, that Dream Away:

- Does not cause a loss of weight or fat at all, while sleeping, or in a short period of time' and,
- Does not cause weight loss without dieting or exercise and does not contribute to the weight loss effects of dieting or exercising.

In addition, the complaint alleges that the defendants did not have a reasonable basis for the advertising and promotional claims they made. The complaint names Kingsbridge Media and Marketing, Inc., and Frank E. Robinson, both of Van Nuys, Calif.; and Highcliff Inc., Nutri Marketing, Vista Advertising, Mel Korey and Steve Korey, all of Scottsdale, Ariz.

CONSUMING INTEREST

'New and Improved' true for some products

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

We've all seen the signs — New! and Improved! — on some of our favorite products, which usually means the manufacturer has taken extra steps to ruin a good thing. But sometimes a food manufacturer will actually make some changes in a product to fit the changing needs of the consumers.

Bisquick is an old favorite. It is a useful baking mix that makes pancakes, biscuits, dumplings and even strawberry shortcake easier to prepare. For years, this product has been a staple in millions of homes.

Now, Betty Crocker (which is part of General Mills Inc.) has made some changes in this old favorite — changes which reflect changing lifestyles of consumers.

Bisquick now advertises on its label "No cholesterol," "Made with all-vegetable shortening" but having the "Same great taste." The small taste-testers and I checked this out and found that biscuits and pancakes made with Bisquick taste the same as they always did. (And, I have to add, are just as easy to make.)

Ingredient label listing reveals that the vegetable shortening now in Bisquick is "one or both of the following partially hydrogenated oils: soybean, cottonseed."

In addition to switching to no-cholesterol, all-vegetable shortening, Bisquick is now certified kosher (K), which means the company is trying to meet a whole new set of consumer needs.

Another food manufacturer that is doing the same thing is Pepperidge Farm. Long known for its tasty frozen pastry products (I can't afford them very often — Pepperidge Farm tends to be priced out of my price range — but when I do I'm never disappointed. I'm especially fond of the turnovers), the company has recently announced that all its "cookies, frozen carrot cakes and pound cakes, frozen Old Fashioned muffins, and most frozen puff pastry products ... will be classified either as 'OU Dairy' or 'OU Pareve.'" This means that the products have "received kosher certification from the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America."

Consumers can even send for a free listing of Pepperidge Farm's kosher products by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelop to Kosher Products, Consumer Services Dept., Pepperidge Farm Inc., 595 Westport Avenue, Norwalk, Conn., 06856.

I don't know, it just seems to me like a good sign that some of the food manufacturers are trying to meet more of the consumers' needs more of the time.

Hotline offers recipe tips for diabetics

Sweet 'N Low will offer a toll-free hotline for advice on making traditional holiday recipes suitable for diabetics during the month of November. The hotline, (800) 231-1123, is being offered in honor of National Diabetes Month.

Nutritionists will staff the hotline and will suggest ways to reduce or eliminate sugar, sodium, fat and cholesterol without sacrificing taste. Hotline nutritionists recommend such tips as substituting evaporated skim milk for evaporated whole milk in pies.

The hotline will be operated 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, Monday-Friday in November.

From Staff Reports

Apparently Midlanders like to dine out.

According to the Texas Restaurant Association, Midland ranks 24th in Texas in its share of dining out dollars spent on fast food with the average Midland area consumer spending approximately $213 a year on fast food.

However, Midland ranks quite a bit higher when it comes to tableservice restaurants.

Not too far down the road, Odessa ranked sixth in fast food services with the average Odessan spending approximately $247 a year and a 23rd on tableservice restaurants with an estimated $282 spent each year.

The study was released by the TRA in conjunction with Texas Restaurant Month.

"Dining out is a favorite activity, with area residents spending more than 37 percent of their food budget dining out," said Steve Kempton, president of the Permian Basin Restaurant Association. "The percentage show that our consumers are choosing dining out for their meals."

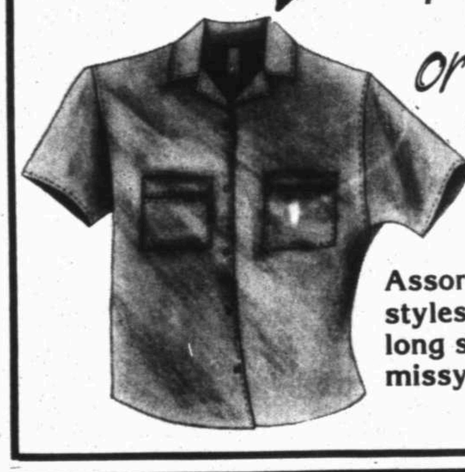

Kempton, of Luigi's Italian Restaurant in Midland, said the restaurant industry is a viable part of the community, with Midland restaurants expected to contribute $70 million to the Midland economy.

Texas Restaurant Month was proclaimed for October by Gov. William P. Clements Jr. in a ceremony with TRA President Fred Dollar, director emeritus of the Food Service Planning Division with the Texas A&M University System.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: While visiting a family in Santa Fe, we were enjoying a luscious meal of locally caught trout when we got into a discussion about how to eat corn on the cob.

Four of our party ate the corn in even rows — left to right. The fifth person ate the corn in a 360-degree movement, turning it round and round. Then ensued a serious discussion concerning the "socially acceptable" way to eat corn on the cob.

So, Dear Abby, please tell us: Should one eat corn on the cob straight across or round and round? I am sure there are far more pressing worldly matters, but we would like a little input from you, if possible. — MAY AND DON, SANTA FE, N.M.

DEAR MAY AND DON: Those who are sticklers for socially acceptable table manners are not likely to serve corn on the cob. (It's wonderful for picnics and outdoor barbecues, however.)

I can speak only for myself, but I gnaw the kernels off the cob beginning at the far left — and proceed across the cob. Then I rotate the cob and sink my teeth into the kernels above the "row" already eaten. (Something like playing a harmonica.)

I don't know about the folks in Santa Fe, but that's the way we Iowans eat it.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am being deluged with "get well" wishes from friends and fans ever since The Associated Press put out a release saying, "Christine Jorgensen, the ex-GI whose sex-change operation nearly 40 years ago led to a career as an author, lecturer and nightclub performer, is dying of cancer."

That paragraph appeared adjacent to the obituaries in the San Francisco Chronicle!

Abby, I had cancer surgery last year, but to paraphrase Mark Twain: "The reports of my imminent demise are greatly exaggerated." Will you please help me spread the word? Thank you. — CHRISTINE JORGENSEN

DEAR CHRISTINE: I just did. Good luck and God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend I see quite often. Whenever she sees me, she asks, "Is that new?" — referring to my dress, purse, shoes or a piece of costume jewelry, just anything I happen to be wearing.

I really like her, so I always tell her whether it's new or not, even though I find that question very irritating. Is there something I could say to get her to stop asking this annoying question? — ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: A few suggestions. Choose one. (If it doesn't work, try another.)

Her: "Is that new?"

You: (1) "I really like you, but what difference does it make?"

(2) "I really like you, but why do you want to know?"

(3) "I really like you, but I wish you wouldn't keep asking me that question."

DEAR ABBY: You said you were interested in "unusual" names: I had a friend in school whose name was Bertha Mae Leake. Her brother was Raymond Will Leake.

They were both nice kids and deserved better. — MRS. RUSSELL DIXON, WILLOW STREET, PA.

Inventors can minimize risk of ideas being stolen

By JOSEPHINE NOVAK
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — If you've got a bright idea that you think is marketable, you're part of a long American tradition of kitchen-table inventors. But many people end up keeping their ideas to themselves, for fear they will be stolen.

There are, however, ways to minimize this risk. Some are long established; others are relatively new.

The first step, according to Thomas E. Headrick, a professor at the University of Buffalo Law School, is to have notes and sketches of any concept or logo notarized. This establishes when the idea was conceived.

Then the invention should be patented, trademarked or copyrighted. Sometimes all three processes are desirable.

Patenting protects a new, non-obvious and useful invention. William O. Craig, director of the Office of Public Affairs of the Patent and Trademark Office in Washington, said the value of applying for a patent, which costs $140 in the general design category likely to cover most individuals' designs, is both the legal protection and the fact that the Patent Office will assume the task of ascertaining whether the item is indeed new.

Making that determination takes about 22 months, and if no evidence of a pre-existing item turns up, the inventor is entitled, for $200 more, to a patent.

From the time the first filing fee is paid, the invention is covered by the words "patent pending," and, once patented, remains protected for 14 years. In 1987, the Patent Office issued 89,385 patents, of which 17,563 were granted to individuals, Craig said.

Trademarking, also done by the Patent Office, protects a name or logo; it costs $200.

Copyrighting is the cheapest protection of all — $10 — but protects only the written expression of an idea, not the idea itself. It is obtained through the Copyright Office in Washington.

Julie Winston of Rockville, Md., who invented Sealed-With-a-Kiss care packages for children at camp, acknowledges there is no way to stop copycats. But she believes she has slowed them down by obtaining a copyright of all the material describing the concept, and four trademarks.

Other inventors may choose to seek the help of a patent attorney. Edwin T. Bean Jr., a Buffalo patent attorney with the firm of Christel, Bean & Linihan, said a consultation costs $50 to $75, and is probably the most useful step in the process, since it provides an opportunity for a lawyer to advise the client whether to proceed at all.

Patent lawyers will handle the filing process, including search and application, for about $4,000 to $5,000. This approach may be one to consider if the invention seems likely to be very lucrative. The value of the patent, Bean said, depends on the language, drawings and phrasing of the application.

Gary Dahl, the Northern California inventor of the Pet Rock, which burst onto the American market in time for Christmas 1975, is cynical about legal protection.

"I wish I had all the legal fees back that I spent to trademark the Pet Rock worldwide," he said.

He won a huge judgment against a Canadian firm that copied his idea, he said, but he never collected; the company simply folded, having made its profit.

Because Dahl had experience in advertising and marketing, he said, he believed he had a great advantage over the kitchen-table inventor.

Patricia Vine of San Diego fits this description. Seven years ago, she had a brainstorm about a jewelry design and is trying to save enough money to pursue it. She consulted with a lawyer and the local branch of the Service Corps of Retired Executives, which is financed by the Small Business Administration.

"They thought I had a great idea," she said, "but would need $10,000 to $20,000 to market it."

The Small Business Administration, together with the Economic Development Administration and state and local agencies, also sponsors Small Business Development Centers, usually run from colleges and chambers of commerce.

The centers offer advice to entrepreneurs and inventors, and some have an arrangement with patent lawyers who will provide their services at a reduced cost. To find the office near you, call the Administration's answer desk at 800-368-5855.

A free source book is "A Guide to Intellectual Property Protection," from the Minnesota Small Business Assistance Office. It can be obtained by calling 612-296-3871.

William F. Severini of Ideas Unlimited in San Diego described the services his company officers, which sounded similar to that of a patent attorney, but would not discuss fees.

Craig of the Patent Office said people should be cautious about such services.

"Check with the Better Business Bureau," he said. "And ask the firm for the names of inventors they have helped in the past and check with them."

Copley News Service

That's because the high-tech collar keeps the pesky dogs from yipping via behaviorial conditioning.

Here's how it works: A microphone mounted on the inside of the collar hears the dog bark. When the dog quits yipping, it triggers a high frequency blast that mimics the sound of a cracking whip or a bolt of lightning. Supposedly, the dog finds the noise interesting and keeps quiet.

WORLD IN BRIEF

British government bans home-testing kits for AIDS

LONDON (AP) — The government has banned the sale of home-testing kits for AIDS to ensure that potential patients are treated by medical professionals, the Department of Health said.

Health Minister David Mellor cautioned Wednesday that only registered medical practitioners should be allowed to carry out AIDS tests "so that necessary counseling can be given and confirmatory tests carried out."

The kits can detect the presence of AIDS antibodies in a person's blood, meaning the individual has been exposed to the AIDS virus but may not necessarily have the disease.

The kits will be banned in Britain under a clause in the government's Health and Medicines Bill, which because of the government majority in the House of Commons is assured of passage when Parliament reconvenes later this month.

It is most often transmitted through sexual contact with an infected partner, but can also be passed on through transfusions of contaminated blood or blood products and the sharing of contaminated hypodermic needles or syringes by drug abusers.

RAF base being shut down

LONDON (AP) — The military is shutting down the Biggin Hill air base in southern England, which played a key role in repelling Nazi air attacks during the Battle of Britain.

On Wednesday, Roger Freeman, a junior undersecretary at the Defense Ministry, said the Royal Air Force will close the base in the next few months.

The RAF stopped flying at Biggin Hill in 1959 and turned it into an officer and aircrew selection center. Freeman said the center would move to the RAF College at Cranwell in eastern England "as part of our continuing search for economy and efficiency."

From July to October 1940 Nazi Germany tried but failed to wipe out British air defenses ahead of an anticipated sea-borne invasion.

Despite major losses, heavily outnumbered British fighters from Biggin Hill and other bases wore down the Germans in daily battles over southern England as crowds on the ground gathered outdoors in bright summer sunshine to watch the savage dogfights overhead.

Reagan to meet with Korean leader

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo will meet with President Reagan later this month in Washington, the government announced today.

Presidential spokesman Lee Soo-jung said Reagan has invited Roh to lunch at the White House on Oct. 20 to discuss world and East Asian situations, including the Korean peninsula.

The two are expected to discuss a wide range of subjects such as South-North Korean relations following the Olympics, and U.S.-South Korean security cooperation, Lee said.

The United States maintains about 42,000 troops in the south under a mutual defense pact.

Lee said Roh will go to Washington after addressing the U.N. General Assembly on Oct. 18.

Roh, the first South Korean chief executive to address the United Nations, will focus on Seoul's increased peace efforts with North Korea following the successful staging of the Olympics from Sept. 17 to Oct. 2.

Seven gold miners killed in fire

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Fire broke out inside a gold mine today, killing seven miners underground, a management spokesman said.

Paul Clothier of Anglo American Corp., the country's largest mining conglomerate, said the fire occurred at the Western Deep Levels mine near Carletonville, about 25 miles west of Johannesburg.

He said the fire appeared to have been caused by a problem at an electrical sub-station.

No further details were immediately available, Clothier said.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A boat capsized in a river in the northern state of Punjab and at least 13 people drowned, United News of India reported today.

The accident occurred in Ferozpure district late Wednesday, the news agency said. The boat carrying 35 people overturned in a river between the villages of Khidar Pindi and Casuwala, about 220 miles northwest of New Delhi, the agency said.

The remaining passengers were rescued, the agency said.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Street rallies were banned today in a southern republic as officials adopted "urgent measures" to prevent further unrest sparked by an economic crisis and ethnic conflict.

The ouster of three top leaders was reportedly imminent as Communist party officials prepared for a national meeting next week during which party chiefs have promised a shake-up aimed at ending the crisis.

Inflation currently stands at 217 percent, unemployment at 15 percent and the foreign debt at $21 billion. Living standards have fallen by at least one-half since 1980, according to official figures.

In the southern republic of Montenegro, where nationalist rallies turned into anti-government protests last weekend, all further demonstrations were banned today.

"The state presidency of Montenegro has introduced urgent measures to stop all gatherings which could jeopardize the security situation, property and lives of citizens," the state news agency Tanjug said, quoting Marko Orlandic, a Montenegrin member of the national Communist Party Politburo.

Security has been stepped up among police, army and civilian defense units in at least some regions of the country, according to sources who asked not to be identified.

Belgrade dailies today reported at least two scheduled nationalist rallies were called off in Serbia and Montenegro this week. This appeared to be a reaction to a warning from President Raif Dizdarevic on Sunday that further unrest could provoke unspecified emergency measures.

The Communist leadership is meeting in each of Yugoslavia's six republics and two autonomous provinces this week to prepare for Monday's Central Committee session in Belgrade.

The announcement of the probable ouster of three top leaders from the national Communist party Central Committee was made during a meeting of top Communists in the northern republic of Slovenia on Wednesday, Belgrade newspapers reported today.

of the Great American Investor

Daryl Tanner has put out 48 fires, rescued more than his share of neighborhood cats, and on July 4th lets all the kids ride on the fire truck. While Daryl spends his life helping others, there's one thing he does to help himself—he invests in U.S. Savings Bonds.

More than 30 million people like Daryl invest in America while helping themselves. They buy U.S. Savings Bonds. Bonds pay competitive rates, like money market accounts, when held for five years or more. They're free from state and local income tax. And they're one of the safest investments around.

You can purchase Bonds for as little as $25. So no matter how much you're investing, buy U.S. Savings Bonds. The Great American Investment. Find out more, call 1-800-US-BONDS.
