Crews clear crash debris

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Dozens of onlookers, some of them in lawn chairs, watched as wrecking crews Saturday afternoon began the task of cleaning up the parking lot at Warwick Apartments, where a twin-engine Beechcraft Baron crashed on takeoff from Midland Air Park Friday afternoon.

The fiery crash injured five men, three of them critically, shortly before 2 p.m. It also destroyed a 12-unit apartment building and seven vehicles parked in a parking lot of the complex, which is located at the intersection of Garfield Street and Whitmire Boulevard.

The injured men's conditions remained unchanged Saturday. In critical condition in the burn unit at Lubbock General Hospital, where they were flown Friday following initial treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital, were 21-year-old Randy Sellars of Midland, 41-year-old Ken Hornsby of Baton Rouge, La. and 56-year-old Alex Sheets, also of Baton Rouge.

All three suffered third-degree burns to at least 70 percent of their bodies, according to police department reports.

In fair condition at MMH were George Gibbs and Bernell Bell, both 30 years old and both of Louisiana. They suffered burns to 20 percent of their bodies.

Gibbs and Bell were prisoners being transported from California and Nevada, respectively, to Louisiana on probation and parole violation charges. Hornsby was the co-pilot and Sheets was the pilot of the prop-driven plane, which is owned by the Louisiana Department of Corrections.

Prison officials said the plane departed Baton Rouge Wednesday and was returning to Louisiana when it stopped in Midland to refuel. According to witnesses, the plane took off in a northerly direction and had gained about 50 feet of altitude before banking sharply to the left, apparently with engine trouble.

"You could hear the engines go ka-choong, ka-choong, ka-choong," said 37-year-old Bob Aldrich of Midland. Aldrich, a former Army medic, said he ran over to see if he could help after the plane struck the roof of the apartment building and cartwheeled into the parking lot, where it hit belly down and exploded moments later, touching

Something new has been added: Washington Bureau

We've had an Austin Bureau for a long time. Now, we have one in Washington.

What happens there can be as important to an agricultural area as the weather...to Midland and the Permian Basin, decisions in the nation's capital can be of even more consequence.

As part of a program to improve and broaden coverage of news that can have impact on our area, The Reporter-Telegram has added a bureau in Washington through special arrangement with States News Service.

In addition to providing a daily report, including stories not carried by other national news wires, the bureau will receive specific news assignments from editors of The Reporter-Telegram, emphasizing those issues related to the oil industry and the Permian Basin's petrolem-related economy.

In providing specialized coverage from Washington, States News joins an already impressive list of news sources serving The Reporter-Telegram...Long News Service (our Austin Bureau), The Associated Press, The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service, Copley News Service and Hearst Feature Service.

We believe the result will be not only a new dimension in our report but more complete and comprehensive coverage of the news that can affect Midland...and you...the most.

Israelis protest Beirut massacre

Resignations of Begin, Sharon demanded

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of people jammed the Square of the Kings of Israel Saturday night, expressing outrage over the Beirut massacre in the largest anti-government demonstration Israeli has ever known.

Organizers of the rally said 350,000 attended the protest. Police refused to estimate the crowd size, but the throng looked at least as big as the crowd that attended a pro-government rally in July for which organizers said 250,000 people turned out.

Speakers demanded the resignations of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, as well as an independent judicial inquiry into the conduct of the army and the government during the slaughter of hundreds of men, women and children in the west Beirut Palestinian refugee camps of Chatilla and Sabra.

"Never have we stood before such a string of wretched decisions arousing such doubt, sorrow and distrust among the citizens," opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres said in his address.

He claimed Begin had not uttered "a word of sorrow or of condemnation of the killers," and asked the prime minister, "Why do you describe it as a natural disaster instead of a policy disaster?

"You kept silent Mr. Begin and you wanted us to keep silent too as if to prove that the highest patriotism is a conspiracy of silence."

Peres told reporters the demonstrators "came because they felt they had to express their shock at the terrible massacre, to raise their voices against the government's policy, and I am very proud of my country and people that they felt it necessary to come and express their feelings."

The mass rally climaxed a week of almost daily demonstrations against Begin and Sharon, who is accused of failing to act promptly to stop the slaughter Sept. 17-18.

It has been blamed on Christian Phalangist militiamen who were allowed by the Israeli army to enter the Chatilla camp in what was to have been a limited action against PLO guerrillas.

The rally began after the Jewish Sabbath ended, in hopes of attracting religious Jews who have tended to support government policy so far.

The opposition Labor Party, other smaller political factions and Peace Now, the leading anti-war movement, openly joined forces for the first time in organizing the rally, busing in participants and providing them with placards.

Acting alone in the first month of the Lebanon invasion, Peace Now massed some 70,000 Israelis at the same square for an anti-war rally.

Sharon reiterated in an Israel television interview Friday night that the army took action as soon as it had solid suspicions of a massacre.

Begin and Sharon have been deluged with a torrent of outrage from abroad and at home for not preventing the killing with the troops it sent into west Beirut Sept. 15 in what was described as a peacekeeping move.

Dr. Mina Tzemach, a public opinion researcher, said raw data from her latest soundings indicated what could be a "significant" drop in Begin's popularity, which had been riding unprecedentedly high during the war. But she stressed that her samplings had not yet been properly processed.

The immediate focus of attention was the campaign for an inquiry into the massacre.

Begin's Cabinet bowed to pressure Friday and asked Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan to head an investigating panel. But Labor and Peace Now said this was not enough, because Kahan would not have the power to subpoena witnsses and make them testify under oath.

In any case, Kahan said he could not consider the government request because the issue already was in the Supreme Court in the form of two petitions — one in favor of an investigation and one indirectly against — that are expected to be heard in a week to 10 days.

Neighbors still opposed to plant

"We must bind together. Stand up and say, 'You're coming out against me, my family and my future and I won't have it.'"
— David Hail

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"There is a bastion of defiance being built over here. They are defying the law, shaking their fists in the face of city ordinances and saying 'I don't care what the city wants.'"

With those words from Neil Hail, weakened from a gunshot wound to the eye three weeks ago, residents of Kniffen Estates on Saturday morning decided to form their own wall of resistance to an asphalt plant east of their homes by hiring an attorney and continuing the battle in a public hearing before the Texas Air Control Board.

Meeting across the street from the home of organizer Jim Logan, about 40 residents showed up on the warm autumn morning to decide their next course of action in trying to stop the asphalt plant from continuing its construction.

Situated on a slight rise, Kniffen Estates is located on County Road 1160 North and adjacent to what will become Loop 250. From the yards of these $100,000-plus homes, the skyline of Midland can be viewed to the southwest. And to the east, the view includes the beginning stages of the asphalt plant, where construction was stopped last week on orders of the city's building inspections department.

ADDED INTO THE battle is the question of annexation. While numerous residents in Kniffen Estates oppose being taken into the city, land on which the asphalt plant is going up also is included in the city's latest annexation move. The asphalt plant is being put up by Petroplex Land and Development Co., Inc.

On Sept. 14, the City Council passed a resolution prohibiting construction of any building not a single family residence on land considered for annexation. However, an assistant city attorney acknowledged that construction had continued until early last week when a building inspector and code enforcement officer requested the owners to stop. The company has since applied for a building permit and a temporary use permit — both of which must be approved by the council before the plant can be completed. They should appear on the council's Oct. 12 agenda.

Referring to the owners' continued work on the plant after the Sept. 21 resolution, Hail said that action "shakes at the foundation of our society. No two men can set themselves up and say 'I will defy the law.' If they fire that up over there, the first dust that settles on my trees will mean another lawsuit."

With his wife helping him to stand, Hail continued his speech, noting that the people had moved to Kniffen Estates because they wanted a clean atmosphere. But the asphalt plant would destroy that, he contended.

Allies and agonies

NEW YORK — A pleasant experience this week was renewing acquaintance with President of the Philippines Ferndinand Marcos, whom you may recall I visited in Manila last April.

The Philippines' leader, who fought so heroically with the Americans in World War II and who has been such a staunch ally of our country since he became president 17 years ago, was in New York following his meetings in Washington with President Reagan, other government officials and members of Congress.

A cold kept me from attending a dinner in his honor, but I sniffled and coughed my way to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to chat with him for a few minutes.

Outside the hotel was a typical gang of radicals chanting Marxist jargon protests against President Marcos for refusing to allow political anarchy in the Philippines and, of course, accusing him of violating human rights. The president said there have been some cases of torture but those responsible had been severely punished. Since his body still bears the scars of having been tortured five different times by the Japanese for fighting for us, I believe him when he says he will not tolerate torture. During his visit in Washington, President Reagan praised him for having made "great progress" in the area of human rights.

What burns me up is that these naive or communist-manipulated people are quick to protest human rights violations by pro-American authoritarian governments but do little demonstrating against flagrant violations

Temperatures climb today, Monday

After a high of 85 degrees Saturday, afternoon temperatures are expected to continue to climb today and Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Today's high is expected to reach the low 90s, but it's supposed to be even warmer Monday — with a high in the upper 90s. The next cool front is not expected in the area until Tuesday, so afternoon temperatures should remain hot for the next 48 hours, the weatherman said.

Tonight's low should be in the mid-60s. Winds are expected to be southwesterly at 15-20 mph today.

Saturday's high of 86 fell shy of the record 102 recorded in 1977, while the low of 59 also missed the record of 46 set back in 1940.

The fire department's Jaws of Life had to be used to extricate the unidentified driver of this Corvette sports car after it and another car collided at the intersection of Texas 158 and FM 1213 early Saturday evening. He and a passenger suffered facial lacerations and possible leg injuries in the accident. The unidentified driver and passengers of the other car appeared to have also suffered facial lacerations. The injured were taken to Midland Memorial Hospital. It was not immediately known if anyone was admitted.

One killed, two injured in one-car mishap

One man was killed and two others were injured when their car left Interstate 20 near mile marker 142 in Midland County and rolled over shortly after 2 a.m. Saturday.

Killed was Ben Lozano, no age or address available, of Mexico. He died later at Midland Memorial Hospital and an autopsy has been ordered by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. The body was taken to the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

In critical condition with a severed left foot and internal injuries was Felipe Montemayor, no age available, also of Mexico. In critical condition with internal injuries was 30-year-old Rodney McDougal of Route 4, Midland.

According to the Department of Public Safety, McDougal was driving a 1979 Ford west on the Interstate when he apparently lost control of the vehicle. It rolled over several times, ejecting all three occupants.

Midland teen-ager shot after argument

A Midland teen-ager was released from Midland Memorial Hospital following treatment for two small caliber gunshot wounds to the back early Saturday morning.

Junior Romero of 504 E. Cowden allegedly was shot by an Odessa youth outside a residence in the 500 block of East Illinois Avenue about 1 a.m. Saturday, according to police. The shooting followed an argument with several other youths who were released after questioning.

The 16-year-old who allegedly shot Romero was being held for juveniie authorities, however. The argument began during a party, police said.

"Ladies and gentlemen, you see they have defied the law. We must bind together. Stand up and say, 'You're coming out against me, my family and my future and I won't have it.'"

Dressed in a blue jogging suit, Hail sat down amid applause from the residents. He was injured in a freak hunting accident when a bullet intended for a rattlesnake richoted off a rock and struck him in the eye. He has been in a Dallas hospital, where he has undergone surgery twice, until Friday night when he flew back to Midland.

"I was inspired to speak and I just couldn't stay inside," he explained.

When the decision came for hiring an attorney, the response was unanimous. Logan said within 15 minutes about half the people had pledged $2,600. And the three Hail families had started the ball rolling by putting up $500.

Logan told the group that residents needed to appear at an Oct. 4 Planning and Zoning Commission hearing to oppose the plant's request for a building permit, and at the Oct. 12 City Council session.

THE PUBLIC HEARING before the TACB, for which a date has to be set, will be held in accordance with court rules. "We need an attorney," said Logan, "who will know legally what to do. We also need an attorney for advice on how to work with the council and the Planning and Zoning Commission."

Attorney Jerry Prothro, who was contacted about the job, said the price would range from $2,000 to $4,000. "With all the houses out here, it should only be $50 to $100 per household," Logan said.

One resident interjected that a Realtor had told him his property already has dropped 10 to 15 percent because of the asphalt plant.

"So $100 isn't much to save the value of your property," Logan added.

But the group couldn't agree on whether or not to continue its earlier stance of not wanting to be annexed.

Neil Hail remarked, "I think now it would be benenficial to be pro-annexation in light of what we're having to fight."

While some agreed, others objected on the theory they wouldn't get any benefits from the city.

After listening to arguments pro and con on annexation, Logan proposed they try fighting the plant on the basis of not being annexed. If they lose the fight on Oct. 12, "we still have another month to reconsider annexation" before the Nov. 2 second reading when it becomes finalized.

Five persons were selected as a liaison group to work with the attorney: Jim Logan, Neil Hail, Sue Moseley, Peter Haas and Barbara Dalton.

About 40 residents of Kniffen Estates northeast of Midland gathered Saturday morning to contemplate their next move in the fight against construction of an asphalt plant adjacent to the housing development. Jim Logan, left, was organizer of the meeting.

Prison guard goes on rampage, killing 13 people

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A prison guard went on a shooting rampage in two communities Saturday, killing seven children and six adults before surrendering to police who had surrounded him in a vacant house, officials said.

Five of the victims apparently were his own children, and all the others except for two men were either related or known to him, police said.

One man was critically wounded in the attack on two homes in Wilkes-Barre and nearby Jenkins Township. Two boys managed to escape unharmed.

The gunman, identified as 40-year-old George Banks, had once served time for attempted robbery.

Banks told three police officer friends, "Don't shoot," as he surrendered after a seven-hour standoff. Dressed in olive-drab military-style coveralls and a fatigue cap, Banks handed a rifle out of a window of a vacant house where he had been holed up since dawn.

He was to be arraigned later Saturday.

"It's like something out of a horror movie," said Luzerne County District Attorney Robert Gillespie.

Dr. George Hudock, county coroner, described it as the "worst tragedy since the 1897 massacre at Lattimer Mines," referring to the shootings of striking miners by sheriff's deputies.

Police said the motive was in doubt, but Wilkes-Barre Mayor Thomas McLaughlin said police were looking into reports the shooting may have been prompted by a child custody dispute.

Joseph Shaver, chief deputy coroner for Luzerne County, said all the victims apparently "were interrelated" to the suspect, except for two men.

Seven children ranging in age from 1 to 11 and six adults, five of them women, died of multiple gunshot wounds to the head and body at the residences about five miles apart.

Jenkins Township police received a domestic-dispute call from a mobile home court at 2:29 a.m., followed a minute later by a report of a shooting there. The second shootings were reported to Wilkes-Barre police at 3 a.m.

Police used no force during the siege, which ended at 11:17 a.m. Fifty officers surrounded the house and evacuated residents nearby. Banks' mother, an unidentified close friend and police had pleaded over a bullhorn for the surrender.

According to Harry Hyman, assistant chief deputy coroner for Luzerne County, five children and three women were shot at a house on Schoolhouse Lane in a blue-collar neighborhood of south Wilkes-Barre. One man was killed outside the house and a companion was wounded.

Two women and two children were killed at the Heather Highlands Mobile Home Village in Jenkins Township, Hyman said.

Ray McGarry, Jenkins Township police detective, said two more children, "I guess their ages at 8 and 11, were unharmed."

Banks served a 7½ year prison term at Pennsylvania's Graterford prison for a 1961 attempted robbery conviction, according to state corrections spokesman Ken Robinson. The state knew of Banks' record when he was hired as a guard in February 1980.

Robinson said the state Bureau of Corrections "felt he was going to be good for the job," adding that such decisions are made on an individual basis and that hirings of ex-offenders are "rare."

John A. Palakovich, administrative assistant at the state prison at Camp Hill, said Banks had been employed as a tower guard and had been on vacation since Sept. 2.

Elaine Monahan of Wilkes-Barre, who lived across from the house where the shootings occurred, said Banks "was a very good father. I think he lived for his children.

Police Officer Dale Minnick, one of three officers who stood on the porch of the vacant house and waited for Banks to surrender, said he had been a lifelong friend.

"I knew him all my life. In fact, most of the patrolmen my age did. We grew up with him," Minnick said.

Mary Straub, a nearby resident, said she woke up as police moved in.

"I woke up and heard all this commotion and went out and saw what was going on," said Mrs. Straub.

At mid-morning, the only sounds to broach the silence were the pleas by police over the bullhorn:

"George come on out, come on out. We'll take you down to the hospital. Come on out. We're not going to hurt you. What more do you want from us? Come on, George. Come on out."

The sole survivor of the spree, James Olson, 22, of Plains Township, who was shot outside the house in Wilkes-Barre, was taken by helicopter to the Geisinger Medical Center in Danville.

EDITOR'S REPORT

of such rights by the Soviet regime in Afghanistan, Poland, and within Russia itself.

That the anti-Marcos demonstration in New York was, in part, at least, Moscow-orchestrated was clearly evident in one of the placards held high by a witless stooge of the Soviets. It read: "Get out of the bases in the Philippines," a reference to our great naval base in Manila Bay, the only base we have between Taiwan, Southeast Asia and the Indian Ocean. It is vitally important to our warships which protect the oil supply routes from the persian Gulf to the west and Japan. Even the Chinese communist leaders have urged us to retain that base to counterbalance the Soviet naval presence in the Ameican-built base in Vietnam's Cam Ranh Bay. Calling for withdrawal from our base in the Phillipines is straight communistic jargon.

A United Press International dispatch from Manila this week reported the three major opposition parties issued a joint statement accusing the Marcos regime of bringing the country to the brink of economic and political disaster. In his welcoming address to the Philippines leader in Washington, President Reagan said that under President Marcos' leadership, "the Philippines can boast a record of solid economic growth over the past decade." I am more inclined to believe our president than the power-hungry political opponents of Marcos.

Furthermore, the dangerously anti-American attitudes of those three major opposition parties was reflected in the joint statement charge that President Marcos was doing a good job for his "imperialist masters." Like the call for abandonment of our base in the Philippines, that is blatant blabbing of Moscow propaganda.

What we could clearly expect from the Philippines if those opposition parties controlled the country should make us realize how fortunate we are that Marcos is president.

He does not deny that he runs an authoritarian regime, but he points out, as have intelligent western observers, that many of those developing Third World countries need strong, stable governments to facilitae economic progress.

President Marcos is accused of maintaining a military dictatorship because he has the support of the armed forces. However he lifted martial law last year and after doing so was re-elected to a new six-year term by over 80 percent of the voters. Allowing for some rigging of elections, as is common in most of those Third World countries, and not entirely unknown in western democracies, it is surprising that no more than 20 percent of the electorate in the Philippines managed to vote against him if the majority of the people are opposed to his leadership.

Our own diplomats believe that if there were completely free, internationally supervised elections in the Philippines, Marcos would be re-elected easily. So don't be misled by what Moscovites have to say about him.

On the other side of the world our marines landed for the second time in a month and rapidly deployed alongside French and Italian troops to help preserve peace in war-torn Beirut. The cries of bereft women and children, mourning those massacred in two Palestinian refugee camps, reverberated throughout the already-shattered capital city, whose newly-elected president, Amin Gemayel, had only a couple of days earlier been unanimously elected in place of his assassinated brother.

The anguish of the mourners was in large measure shared by a shocked outside world. In a major manner, the outrage was felt inside Israel, where demonstrations against the administration of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his defense chief, Gen. Ariel Sharon, rocked the government. Two key members of the Begin administration resigned in protest against the Israeli government's inadequacies to safeguard the camps.

While Prime Minister Begin and Gen. Sharon defended their policies — suggesting they knew next-to-nothing of the Christian gunmen permitted to enter the camps — evidence accumulates from even Israeli army sources that the government is trying to cover-up. Christian forces long allied to Israel were allowed inside the unarmed camps. In revenge for past PLO brutalities against Christians — Lebanon is nearly half Christian, half Moslem — the gunmen slaughtered camp inmates.

The Moslems and Christians of Lebanon have been waging relentless war against each other since 1975 when the PLO massacred a busload of Christians and created a state within a state of once free and thriving Lebanon. With Soviet-supplied weapons, the PLO ran roughshod over the nation until the Israeli invasion last June.

I recall being in Beirut about a decade ago, watching its bustling people, twinkling lights and crowded hotel lobbies. A Lebanonese acquaintance with whom I had been chatting, watched in silence at all the activity that swirled past, and softly observed: "This is the capital of a Middle East Switzerland. We can only pray it remains that way."

Unfortunately, factionalism and greed didn't permit so idyllic a dream to last. Beirut and all Lebanon became a battleground. Neighboring Israel, in the name of security, invaded Lebanon to drive out PLO terrorists. Killing became the norm and the massacres of revenge revolted the world. Americans cannot comprehend such hatred.

Those killings have pitted Israelis against their government. Prime Minister Begin rejected a government investigation. His president, Yitzhak Navon, demanded one. Faced with mounting pressure from his own cabinet and senior diplomats, the prime minister named the chief of the Israeli supreme court to conduct an investigation. But the justice temporarily declined the offer, at least until the government responds to two suits challenging its earlier refusal to open a full-scale state inquiry into the affair. In this turbulent situation, it would be a task for the U.N., if it wasn't so militantly stacked against Israel. Perhaps a group of moderate nations customarily sympathetic to Israel like those in Scandinavia could be impartial judges.

As a democratic state, Israel believes in the rule of law. Prime Minister Begin cannot and should not be spared the consequences.

off explosions in the seven parked vehicles.

"Three guys were fighting to get out of the plane," said Aldrich. "You could see flames on their clothes."

Sellars, an Albertson's supermarket computer technician who lived in the building just south of the one hit by the plane, ran from his apartment onto the parking lot and, said one witness, was hit with "a wall of flaming gasoline."

No one who lived in the burning, two-story building was home at the time. But Midland County Assistant District Attorney Jack Chappell lived in a lower apartment and was on his way home when he heard about the crash on the car radio.

"I was working and had started home to pick up something," he said as he watched the cleanup operation Saturday afternoon. "My apartment was still burning when I got there. Everything is a total loss."

Chappell came to Midland from Lubbock March 1. He left his furniture in storage there and rented the apartment furnished at first. But he took the furniture out of storage and moved it into his apartment last Sunday. "I don't think I've got insurance," he said, shaking his head. "I'm still trying to get over the shock."

As a crane began lifting pieces of the charred plane onto a flatbed truck after federal authorities had finished their preliminary investigation, a city police officer recalled the hectic scene on the parking lot just 24 hours earlier and said:

"It was do or die. You had to bust your butt. But everything went surprisingly smooth. Our disaster plan really works."

One fireman, Gary Huckabay, suffered a broken wrist battling the blaze, which took 140,000 gallons of water to extinguish. But he stayed at the scene and didn't seek medical attention until he got back to the station, according to dispatcher Sheryl Kellogg, who said 43 firemen — including 23 off-duty firemen — responded to the 1:59 p.m. call.

An off-duty fireman was injured after his pickup truck was demolished in a traffic accident as he was returning home after being called out to help fight the conflagration. Reggie Rankin was treated for back injuries after the accident, which occurred in the 300 block of East Wadley.

Ms. Kellogg, a 24-year-old former police dispatcher, said the fire department had to call in two extra dispatchers because "everything was going on at once. There was the plane crash, a shooting and stabbing, transporting burn victims, car accidents, minor fires, phone calls from reporters all over the country. It was crazy in here. We really had our hands full."

With their "field testing" out of the way, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board said other tests would be conducted to determine what caused the crash and that it could take up to four months for a final report to emerge.

He said analysis of a fuel sample taken from the plane did not disclose the presence of jet fuel in its tanks, which caused the crash landing of a prop-driven Piper Navajo on an east-side street moments after it had taken off from Air Park on a flight to Dallas May 2.

No one was injured in that accident, but the plane was destroyed and a $473,000 lawsuit has been filed against Basin Aviation Inc., the firm that fueled the plane before it took off.

The NTSB investigator said the agency hasn't been able to talk to the pilot of Friday's crash yet, but he reportedly told doctors his port engine failed during takeoff. It is not known if he was trying to get back to the airport or if the craft began "torquing" to the left when the engine stalled.

A firefighter carries a small four-year-old boy, a victim of an early morning apartment fire in El Paso, Texas, that claimed the lives of five people. The downtown fire trapped residents of the third floor of apartments at 1024 N. Oregon. Manuel Martinez, left, saw the fire from a nearby freeway and entered the building to help residents escape.

Apartment fire kills five in El Paso

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A fire that killed five people when it roared through a downtown-area apartment building constructed at the turn of the century is the worst blaze in the city's history, authorities said Saturday.

One person was hospitalized in critical condition and an injured firefighter was kept overnight for observation, fire department officials said.

Deputy Fire Chief Glen Watson said three people were found dead at the scene and two others died after arriving at the hospital.

Authorities did not expect to find any more bodies, said Watson.

"It's the worst fire we've ever had in El Paso in terms of the loss of life," Waston said.

Fire Chief M.L. Coleman said the victims were all adults found in various parts of the Alexandria Apartments, a multi-storied brick structure.

Most were on the third floor, where the fire apparently started, Coleman said.

"It appears the fire started in a hallway," the chief said. "It went up the walls and through the ceilings and in some places through the doors, asphyxiating those in rooms and in some case, those in halls."

Watson said the cause of the fire had not been determined and investigators were running tests on material recovered from the blaze.

The fire was reported shortly after 11 p.m. Friday and quickly went to several alarms as 40 firefighting units and four ambulances responded, Watson said.

Firemen had the blaze under control in 30 minutes. Flames could be seen for several miles.

Phil Ramos, a resident of the building, said he and his wife were watching television in their second-floor apartment when the blaze broke out.

"All of a sudden, my wife smelled smoke," Ramos said. "I opened the door, there was a rush of smoke. I remembered it was best to wait. I closed the door."

Firefighters rescued the couple through a window, Ramos said.

Watson said rescuers avoided smoke-filled hallways and saved many residents by hoisting ladders up to windows.

One witness, Paul Daniels, said he stopped to help the rescue effort.

"I thought 'Oh, my God, there's old people in there up on the third floor,'" Daniels said.

El Paso lawyers to donate services

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Some of this border city's poorest people soon will get the legal services of the highest-paid lawyers around at rates even they can afford.

All 10 state district judges in El Paso approved a program Friday designed by the local Bar Association that will require the city's 700 lawyers to donate family court services to the poor twice a year or risk being cited for contempt.

"Our silk stocking law firms will be representing some people who may have never thought they'd ever step into one of those building spires," said Royal Furgeson, president-elect of the El Paso Bar Association.

He said the program is necessary because of drastic cuts in legal services funding by the Reagan Administration.

The cuts had a disproportionate effect in this city of 480,000 because of its large numbers of poor people and relatively small number of lawyers, he said.

"We were faced with a dwindling legal service program serving a large number of poor people," he said.

The legal service staff in El Paso had dropped from a high of 14 lawyers in 1978 to six this summer, he said.

"We don't have the bodies to handle run-of-the-mill divorce cases," said Furgeson, who estimated legal services turned away 1,200 to 1,400 such cases last year.

State Bar Association spokesman Larry Fitzgerald in Austin said the program is the first of its kind in Texas and perhaps the first in the nation. He said a spokesman for the American Bar Association knew of no other such program.

"It's kind of risky because it may not work...We are taking a risk, but in this border town if we don't do something as a group, our people are just not going to get legal services," said Furgeson.

A Bar Association committee appointed last July determined a voluntary program would not work in El Paso because it would place too heavy a burden on the lawyers who volunteered. But it decided a mandatory program of two cases a year would be fair to every lawyer.

"It didn't meet with universal acceptance...the fact it was mandatory did cause some concern to a number of lawyers," he said.

But he said the program was approved by the association Sept. 14 and approved by the judges Friday.

Under the program, a judge will appoint an attorney to represent, free of charge, a person determined to be eligible for the program by a legal services screening.

If the lawyer is in trial or has other conflicts, a Bar Association committee will examine each request for exemption on a per case basis.

He said the association estimated the program represents at least $400,000 to $600,000 a year in free legal service for the indigent.

But Furgeson cautioned the program could not be continued if the federal government continued to cut legal service funding.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Arthur Price of Big Spring has been sentenced to two years probation and a $50,000 fine for rigging bids on a state highway project.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin assessed the penalty Friday on Price, who, along with his company, was convicted in March of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Price was the first Texan convicted as a result of a nationwide investigation that spread into Texas in 1980.

Price had no comment after his sentencing.

During pre-sentencing testimony he said, "I didn't realize there was any wrongdoing until this whole thing happened. There was never any outlandish profit made."

Texas pot major cash crop

DALLAS (AP) — Cotton is still king and sorghum, corn and wheat are top cash crops, too, but marijuana may soon join those commodities as leading agricultural moneymakers here in Texas.

Exactly how much pot grows commercially in Texas is a matter of conjecture among narcotics investigators.

But it is clear, they say, that the incentive is so high, the commodity so in demand, that the state's marijuana production has become a multimillion-dollar business over the past two years. It's too early to tell whether a statewide eradication program began this year has signficantly cut into this summer's marijuana harvest, officials say.

According to U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration figures, Texas law enforcement agencies have seized 25,600 marijuana plants over the past year.

Each plant yields a pound to two pounds of marijuana. Harvested pot sells on the street for $300 to $2,000 a pound, depending on its potency, officials say.

SO IF INVESTIGATORS only seize a tenth of the pot grown commercially in Texas, as one Texas DEA official guesses, then the state's crop this year could be worth at least $75 million to $150 million.

Commercial marijuana farming, while not new in other parts of the country, has only recently become popular in Texas, said Larry Hahn, a DEA spokesman in Dallas.

Midwesterners began growing pot for wholesale in the 1960s and California and Florida emerged in the 1970s as the nation's clear leaders in marijuana production.

But the weed also flourishes in the hot, muggy climate of the East Texas pineywoods and the rolling scrub oak-covered Hill Country, a fact some agricultural entrepreneurs have taking advantage of.

"In California, it just has to do with the popularity of the drug," Hahn said.

"In Florida, of course, there's a lot of open land and there are more people involved in the wholesale distribution of drugs there."

In Texas, Hahn said, "It's just becoming the thing to do.

"FOR A LONG TIME, everyone thought you had to have a mountain or tropical mountain climate for marijuana," Hahn said. "Now everyone has learned that it (the marijuana yield) has to do with seeds...wherever you can grow corn you can grow marijuana."

Most of Texas' crop grows in East Texas, where producers can hide the stalks in pine forest clearings, away from roads and out of view. The higher grades of the weed — and therefore higher priced crops — are grown in Central Texas, said Bill Pruitt, assistant commander for narcotics services with the Department of Public Safety.

An average plot consists of 500 to 1,000 plants, Pruitt said.

"I dare say that a man could clear $50,000...on a big garden," said Lt. Bob Simpson, commander of the Greater Austin Area Organized Crime Control Unit. "A 100-by-100 feet is a pretty good field. You don't have much overhead. I doubt that many of them pay taxes on it."

SIMPSON SAID HIS agency has harvested more marijuana in the past two years than in the previous five, some in plants "16-feet tall and as big at the bottom as your arm."

Simpson said he believes Texans began growing their own marijuana when Mexican and Central American governments began spraying crops there with the herbicide paraquat, a poison that makes the weed dangerous to users.

And now, having found how well marijuana grows in Texas, producers are starting to plant better-yielding, more potent hybrids.

"They're experimenting in growing stuff that sells for $600 to $1,200 and $1,300 a pound. It takes the same amount of land so why grow the stuff that brings in $150 a pound?"

In Central Texas, pot producers generally buy secluded, creekside plots for the crops, but East Texas growers usually hide their plants among windrows in clearcuts on timber company land, officials say.

Two women finally released from 'torture chamber'

DALLAS (AP) — One woman was held for nine months and another for a week in a "torture chamber" where they were chained at the neck, beaten and repeatedly raped, police said Saturday.

A neighbor said she knew the women were being held captive, but never called police.

"You could hear her hollering and him beating them," said Zona Minnieweather, whose apartment faces Williams' across a vacant lot. "You could hear them women all through the day."

Police found the boarded-up apartment after the older of the two women managed to escape. Police said they then rescued the younger one, who was naked and "almost crazy" from nine months of torture.

A 39-year-old man was arrested a short time later.

The women, one 37 and the other 20 years old, were covered with cuts and bruises and were treated at Parkland Memorial Hospital and released. "We've provided a place for them to stay," police spokesman Bob Shaw said.

"It's amazing. It's pitiful," Sgt. E.L. Whitfield said. "In my nine years of experience, when I walked in, all I could say was, 'Oh, my God.' It was such a shock."

Investigators found logging chains, an 18-inch piece of pipe and bloody sticks when they entered the apartment Friday in the rundown and poor section of town called South Dallas.

The apartment was decorated with pornographic photographs and souvenirs of the Dallas Cowboys football team. Trash and homemade sex devices were strewn about, police said.

Mingled in with the pornography were pictures of Elvis Presley and Jesus Christ.

Boards had been nailed across the apartment's three windows making it "almost impossible to escape," Whitfield said, and the hall was decorated with women's underwear.

Texans vote on school prayer, federal debt, rail strike

Washington Bureau

The Senate this week killed the efforts of conservatives to reinstate voluntary prayer in public schools. The school prayer measure, attached to a bill that would raise the ceiling on the amount the government can borrow, would have stripped the Supreme Court of its jurisdiction over school prayer. The court disallowed school prayer in 1962.

By a 53-45 vote Thursday, an attempt to end a filibuster by liberals on the issue fell seven votes short of the 60 needed to limit debate. The debt limit bill, which the government needs if it is to continue operating, then passed on a 50-41 vote.

Supporters, such as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said that public school students should have a right to pray if they chose to do so. But leaders of the liberal effort, including Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said the measure was unconstitutional because it attempted to limit the Supreme Court's jurisdiction.

THE HOUSE VOTED 383-17 Wednesday to impose a settlement on striking railraod engineers. The measure was then signed by President Reagan. The four-day-old nationwide railroad strike, which could have paralyzed the national economy if it continued, was then ended.

Supporters of the measure said the strike must be stopped because its effect was devastating. But opponents said the government should not become involved in the labor matters of private industry.

THE HOUSE VOTED 268-119 to approve a $11.2 billion 1983 appropriation bill for the Department of Transportation. The bill faces a possible veto by the president, whose advisers have called it a "budget buster."

Opponents said the funding provided by the bill would increase the federal deficit more than neccesary. Supporters said the legislation was needed to aid mass transit and other important transportation programs.

Jury finds man unfit for trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man charged with holding a nurse hostage for 17 hours in a hospital psychiatric ward has been ruled incompetent to stand trial at the present time.

A jury found Jimmy Franklin Brown incompetent Friday after a psychiatrist testified Brown suffers from paranoia and schizophrenia and believes that rock singer Deborah Harry sends him mental messages.

Dr. Sandford Lehrer, who examined the 24-year-old defendant, said Brown told him that he heard voices and had violent fantasies about women.

Lehrer also said that although Brown could differentiate between right and wrong, he could not rationally consult with his attorneys and prepare a defense.

Prosecutors did not challenge the incompetence plea and the jury ordered Brown sent to the Rusk State Hospital.

Lehrer said that Brown, with treatment, should be able to stand trial later on kidnapping charges.

Under state law, Brown cannot be held at the state hospital for more than 18 months without another competency hearing.

Woman gets 15 years in prison

DALLAS (AP) — A 44-year-old Dallas woman, convicted of running her boyfriend down with a car in 1977, has been assessed a 15-year prison term.

Mildred Kearney was found guilty Friday of voluntary manslaughter. She had been accused of murder in the death of Norman Marshall.

Marshall, 31, died April 24, 1977 after being struck by Mrs. Kearney's car in front of a South Dallas motel, police said.

The first form of collective protection devised by man was property protection. Property insurance is older than life insurance. Basically, you can protect your home against fire and nature's castastrophies and insure your possessions against fire, nature and theft. Complete plans will usually include personal liability for injuries to others as well. All of this coverage may be acquired through individual policies or in a package known as a "homeowner's policy". While purchasing individual policies could possibly lead to overlapping coverages, package policies may include some coverage that is not required. Careful scrutiny of your particular insurance needs with us is recommended.

Though the true test of adequate coverage is when a loss occurs, it is hoped you need not put your policies "to the test" However, your insurance portfolio should be prepared with that eventuality in mind. A thorough review considers many factors including most coverage for the dollar, proper coverage versus exposure, consideration of current and future needs analysis of the insuring company, etc. For the insurance attention you deserve call the POWELL INSURANCE AGENCY, 601 N. 'Pool' reporter: Eyes, ears of White House press corp

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — I was a "pool" reporter the other day, and as the eyes and ears of the White House Press Corps from morning to night got to see President Reagan exactly twice.

If you stretch it a bit, you could say thrice. But then you would have to include a distant, fleeting glimpse of the president getting into a limousine when he attended a reception at the State Department.

As the eyes of the press corps, during that trip to the State Department, I saw very little. As the ears, I heard nothing. The reason was that the "pool" — I, representing the newspapers, a Time magazine writer, an ABC television correspondent and several technicians and cameramen — was left outside while Reagan par tied within.

That's the way it is when you draw the glamorous assignment of White House "pool" reporter.

A couple of weeks ago, I was named "pool" reporter on Air Force I on a flight from Des Moines, Iowa, to Hartford, Conn. Imagine the responsibility that falls upon the shoulders of a lone journalist when he boards the president's luxurious jet as a representative of the entire press contingent.

Imagine no more. It was an easy assignment.

Reagan was in the front compartment of Air Force I. The "pool" was in the rear of the plane munching cheese and crackers and entreating his top aides to ask the president to join the group. He never did.

A colleague, part of the 70-member press entourage that accompanied Reagan to New Jersey a week ago, found herself even more cut off from the president. During a seven hour trip, she saw him briefly and distantly only twice.

Why is the press kept so remote from the president? The answer lies with the rash of assassinations and assassination attempts of the past 20 years and with the fact that the number of reporters assigned to the White House has increased greatly.

Those factors have changed the way the White House is covered.

Back in the days of John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, reporters had more access to the president. They could chat with him informally and, in the case of Johnson, take long walks with him around the White House grounds or his ranch in the Texas hill country.

There were "pools" in those days. But their task was often negligible since all reporters covering the president were privy to the drama and color which today are often seen only by the "pool."

In today's anxious, busy White House, the "pool" rather than the entire press corps is admitted to receptions, meetings, parties, state ceremonies and other such affairs where the president is on stage, or, in the case of the Gipper, on camera.

When the president speaks to a group in the East Room or the State Dining Room, his remarks are piped back into the White House press room for reporters to hear. But usually only the "pool" is on hand to see him and his guests and determine the state his mood and his physical appearance.

If the president trips over a carpet or spills wine on his luncheon partner, it is the "pool" that records the event and reports it to other reporters.

Once the "pool" members return to the press room, their duty is to share every detail of the events and personalities they saw. What sort of chit-chat did Reagan indulge in? What did the First Lady wear? Which guests got priority over others? How long did the ceremony last?

Before a pool reporter can begin to write his or her own story, he or she must type a "pool" report for other reporters. And, God help the naive or devious "pool" reporter who tries to hold back information for his or her exclusive use.

The "pool" reports can be acerbic, humorous, informational or just plain dull, depending on the reporters and the events they witness.

Although most of Reagan's activities are "pooled" and he has had far fewer press conferences that other recent presidents, he has of late adopted a new procedure to help dispel the criticism that he is remote or uncommunicative.

He has adopted the practice of making a once-a-week, unannounced appearance in the press room to chat with reporters and answer questions. Each session lasts about 15 minutes.

In addition, White House reporters are afforded the opporunity twice each day to parry questions witth press aide Larry Speakes.

When the White House has important decisions to announce or information to reveal, it often has a cabinet officer or other government official appear before the White House press corps.

When Reagan is accused of being inaccessible or aloof, White House aides counter that the press corps has grown so large as to be unmanageable. In addition, some of them point out that Reagan, like other recent presidents, has wearied of the rudeness and brashness of some reporters, especially those on-camera types who seem to by vying for the "toughest TV reporter of the week" award.

'New' Democratic party unveiled

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — It was 20 months in the making, and once the task was finished, House Democratic leaders proudly proclaimed they had discovered the path to a "bold, new policy direction for our party and our country."

The tenents of the election-year manifesto for "a new Democratic party" were unveiled last week with much fanfare to attract public attention. Despite the claims of its significance, however, many Democratic congressmen and their key aides attached little significance to the 135-page document.

"We make new proposals that represent a break from the policies of the past, and offer new strategies to meet the challenge of the 1980s," proclaimed Louisiana congressman Gillis Long, head of the Democratic task force.

The Committee on Party Effectiveness, Long said proudly, was "made up of 37 members representing all philosophies in our party, from very liberal to very conservative."

That was the problem.

When two liberals get together, there won't be total agreement on every issue. Add one conservative and you have a stalemate. Bring in a few more people and you have a compromise — which satisfies no one.

IN THE CASE of the Democrats, who have always tried to agree to a broad base of supporters, their master plan for the future became a running list of generalities.

The party experts' "new" policy included a commitment "to equal opportunity, to economic growth and full employment, and to a strong national defense."

The legislative assistant to a Midwest congressman who served on the panel said the project was "part of many different efforts in the party to try and get out of the old ruts and start thinking through the new ways to attack the old problems.

"This is part of the Democrats search for a distinguishing policy," he said. "In a sense the Democrats are looking for a Kemp-Roth," the three year tax cut plan that became a key element of the Republican crusade for the White House in 1980.

Discussing the House Democratic outline for the future, he said "the idea going into it was not that it just be a piece of garbage thrown out to the media. We're being attacked for not having ideas, for just running the same old stuff through the 1980s that we ran through the '70s and '60s. A tired old party with tired old ideas."

He paused and thought for a moment. "Right now, within the Democratic party we have the feeling that we're weary, we're tired, we do have worn out ideas. The criticism is right. The criticism stings because it rings true."

THAT'S WHY "going into it, the idea was to come up with something, to produce something useful."

Did the panel succeed?

"I haven't had a chance to read the report," he replied diplomatically.

When several Northern California congressional Democrats were asked for their thoughts, the opportunity for comment was passed up.

Several aides said their bosses hadn't had a chance to sit down and read it yet.

Not all were so tactful.

"Who cares?" replied one assistant. "It's really sort of irrelevant. I certainly don't give it much weight. It's something relatively soon forgotten.

"Democrats are going to be leary about embracing something, parts of which are going to be hung around their necks during a campaign," he pointed out. "Endorsing the whole package is something most are going to shy away from."

The fourth paragraph of the preface to the document acknowledges that the contents "are not ironclad positions which every Democrat must follow in lockstep."

The political leadership realizes that the report, entitled "Rebuilding The Road To Opportunity," may have a few potholes in it.

Two Iowa papers merge

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — With a banner headline reading "So Long! It's Been Good to Know You" printed over replicas of front pages from the past, the Des Moines Tribune published its final edition Saturday.

"I guess it feels like I lost an old friend," said Bill Maurer, managing editor of the afternoon newspaper that on Monday merges with its corporate colleague, the morning Register.

"Some believe that newspapers are in decline. This is not the truth," publisher Gary Gerlach wrote in the final edition. "Newspapers are rapidly changing, as are many other things, but, overall, newspapers have never been stronger."

Officials of the parent Des Moines Register and Tribune Co. said they decided to merge the two papers because shrinking profits and a changed marketplace made publishing both dailies impractical.

The Tribune had a peak circulation of 147,000 in 1947, but had dropped to 68,000 by this year. The morning Register had a circulation of 220,000 in 1947 and the latest Audit Bureau of Circulation figures show its daily circulation as 218,893. About 27,000 people subscribe to both papers and the Sunday Register has a circulation of 400,000.

The combined paper will have an initial circulation of 248,000, newspaper officials said.

"You know, well, people are going to die, but you don't expect an institution to die," said Tribune copy editor Robert Kolarik. "And the Tribune is an instutition."

In an effort to revive the Tribune last year, officials converted the Saturday edition to a tabloid format featuring entertainment and consumer news.

For the final edition, however, the paper was switched back to a full format and much of the edition was devoted to stories about the paper.

Among all the stories about the newspaper's history, there was a tiny tribute set in agate type in the newspaper's daily listing of deaths in the Des Moines area.

Daily News, unions reach agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — The Daily News, the nation's largest general-interest daily newspaper, and its 11 labor unions agreed Saturday to extend contracts through March 1987 as part of a cost-cutting package to keep the paper alive.

Union officials hailed the accord as the end of uncertainty that had plagued News workers since last December, when the parent Tribune Co. of Chicago offered to sell the financially ailing newspaper, which sells 1.5 million copies a day.

Gregory L. Thornton, News vice president and director of industrial relations, and George E. McDonald, Mailers Union president and spokesman for all the unions, jointly announced the agreement to extend contracts three years beyond the March 1984 expiration. The announcement came three hours after a "final deadline" that management had set for midnight Friday.

The Tribune Co. ended its attempt to sell the paper last April when chief executive officer Stanton R. Cook announced that the company would continue publishing the Daily News if workers cooperated in a $94 million rescue plan.

Ratification of the agreement was expected to signal a go-ahead for the News' plan to invest $44 million in modernizing its printing facilities.

Reagan says inflation rate 5.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Saturday his administration was winning the war against inflation and castigated Democrats for "exploiting helpless people" by pushing for government solutions to the nation's economic problems.

In his weekly radio broadcast from the Oval Office, the president bragged that the latest Consumer Price Index figures released earlier this week showed inflation was running at an annual rate of 5.1 percent, less than half of what it was in 1980.

He said the decline "spells real hope for everyone," and was a dramatic change from the "desperate situation" he faced when he took office.

"We're winning the war the experts said was hopeless," Reagan said.

Though he added, "I know it isn't easy for people to see," Reagan said that real after-tax income was increasing."

Rep. Peter A. Peyser, D-N.Y., gave the Democratic reply to Reagan's speech, declaring: "It's unbelievable that President Reagan can brag about the worst economic catastrophe since the Great Depression. Today we suffer from the highest unemployment rate and the worst rate of business bankruptcy in 40 years.

"Of course prices aren't rising as fast as they were — no one is buying anything," Peyser said. "The sad fact is that prices always slow down when you're entering a depression."

He accused the administration of aggravating the economic situation by blocking Democratic-backed programs intended to create hundreds of thousands of jobs in the public works and housing construction areas.

Battleship renovation drydocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee has drydocked plans to reactive the battleship USS Missouri, third of the four World War II battlewagons the Navy wants to return to sea duty, a committee staff official said Saturday.

Dwight E. Dyer, a majority Republican staff assistant to the Senate panel, said that deletion of $94 million proposed in the defense budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 for first-year renovation work on the Missouri means an indefinite delay in the Navy's plans.

"Unless that gets changed (in the Senate or House), there's no money to reactivate the Missouri," Dyer said.

The deletion came in a session Thursday at which the committee recommended a Pentagon appropriation of $201.3 million.

Dyer noted that renovation of two other battleships now under way, the New Jersey at Long Beach, Calif., and the Iowa at Pascagoula, Miss., was not affected by the committee action.

"All we're saying is that we want to see how the first two ships come along before we go with a third," Dyer said.

On Thursday, California Republican Senate candidate Pete Wilson announced in Washington that the Navy had chosen Long Beach for work on the Missouri, a $470 million project overall.

Youth killed by freight train

MARTINSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — A 15-year-old who apparently couldn't hear warning whistles because he was wearing stereo headphones was struck and killed by a freight train as he crossed railroad tracks Saturday, police said.

Martin Smith, of Martinsburg, was killed instantly when struck by the Chessie System train at about 7:30 a.m.

Two convicted in bank robbery

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men were convicted of conspiracy in the theft of $180,000 from a bank after an accomplice testified they failed to keep a promise to kill him during the burglary.

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated 10 hours Friday before convicting John C. Greichunos, 32, of Marco Island, Fla., and John Coulopoulos, 58, of Portage, Ind.

The key prosecution witness was the First National Bank of Skokie's former security director, Crist R. Christopoulos, who said he provided keys and the safe combination in the May 1977 plot so the burglars could kill him and allow his family to collect $135,000 in life insurance.

Doctor ordered to help raise child

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — A doctor has been ordered to pay $70,000 to help raise a child born after he performed an unsuccessful sterilization.

A county jury also ruled Friday that Dr. Thomas W. Jones showed "negligence" in performing the sterilization procedure on the child's mother. The jury decision to hold the physician liable in such a case was believed to be a first in Maryland.

According to lawyers for Leon and Juanita Malinowski, the surgery was performed because the couple could not afford to have a fourth child and because their youngest child at the time had had heart problems at birth. The fourth child, a healthy daughter, is now 3 years old.

Woman looses custody of kids

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — A woman whose 11 children died in a house fire 20 months ago has temporarily lost custody of two children born since the blaze.

St. Clair County Juvenile Court Judge Milton Wharton ordered the 20-day-old and 1-year-old sons of Virginia Williams, 29, of East St. Louis, placed in foster homes Friday after the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services said the boys had been found unattended.

Mrs. Williams, 29, was charged with one count of contributing to the delinquency of a minor by neglect, a misdemeanor, after the fatal fire. She was sentenced to a year's probation in January 1981.

The 11 children ranged in age from 10 months to 11 years.

Two die in truck-train wreck

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Two people were killed and two others critically injured early Saturday when the pickup truck they were riding in was struck by a Santa Fe train near downtown.

Flagstaff police Sgt. Don Johnson said four people in the cab of the truck escaped serious injury. The dead and injured had been riding in the truck bed, he said.

Police quoted witnesses as saying the vehicle had stopped at a railroad gate, then attempted to go around the barrier.

Names of the dead and injured were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Two arrested in train wrecking

LINDSAY, Calif. (AP) — Two brothers have been arrested in connection with a freight train derailment in which the engine plowed into an abandoned manufacturing plant.

Edgar Stokes, 24, and Grady Stokes, 21, both of Lindsay, were booked Friday for investigation of train wrecking. Bail was set at $75,000 each.

A six-car Santa Fe train, traveling about 40 mph, was diverted from a line onto the siding for a motor home company that closed in 1981.

Publicized murder trial begins in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — It has been the talk of Little Rock all summer, a murder tale so intriguing that judges and lawyers worry people may lie to get a front-row seat in the jury box.

The murder of Alice McArthur, the wife of a prominent lawyer and the mother of two, is the most celebrated case most folks here can remember.

Jury selection from a list of 300 prospects begins Thursday and prosecutors, police and judges agree that finding unprejudiced members will be difficult. This city rarely been so saturated with the details of a crime.

Mrs. McArthur, 41, was found shot to death in her house the afternoon of July 2. Police found at her feet a freshly delivered floral arrangment with a card that read "Have a Nice Day."

On trial is Mary "Lee" Orsini, 35, a widow, who is charged with capital murder and accused of having two ex-convicts carry out the killing.

Capital murder carries a death sentence in Arkansas, but prosecutors say that, for tactical reasons, they will not ask for Mrs. Orsini's execution if she is convicted.

Booked by police, but not charged by prosecutors, on a count of conspiracy to commit capital murder, is Mrs. McArthur's husband, prominent Little Rock lawyer William C. McArthur. He has not had the required municipal court hearing on whether he should be bound over for trial.

Pulaski County Sheriff Tommy Robinson, meanwhile, says officials have not closed the file on the slaying 18 months ago of insurance man Ron Orsini, 38, whose body was found by his wife in a locked bedroom. He had been shot once in the head.

Mrs. Orsini hired McArthur to represent her during a grand jury investigation of her husband's slaying. No indictments were produced and Mrs. Orsini celebrated with champagne, inviting reporters.

The state's star witness in Mrs. Orsini's trial is ex-convict Eugene "Yankee" Hall, 43. Hall says he and ex-con Larry Darnell McClendon, 27, posed as florist delivery men to enter Mrs. McArthur's house as she packed for a weekend trip with her husband. He alleged that McClendon pulled the trigger.

Hall, in a tape-recorded statement that was splashed across a local newspaper, said Mrs. Orsini told him that Mrs. McArthur had threatened to wreck her husband's law practice and that McArthur couldn't stand to spend another weekend with his wife.

Mrs. Orsini told him that McArthur was offering $25,000 for the job of killing his wife, Hall said.

Hall said McClendon chased Mrs. McArthur into her bedroom and shot her once in the head. The pot containing the flowers bore Hall's fingerprints.

In return for his testimony and a guilty plea, the charges against Hall were reduced from capital murder, and the possibility of the electric chair, to first-degree murder and a life sentence.

McClendon will be tried separately and still faces a possible sentence of the electric chair.

McArthur was freed on a $50,000 signature bond. He pleaded innocent Thursday in municipal court and is to to appear at a probable cause hearing Nov. 22 on whether special prosecutor W.H. Dillahunty will charge him in Circuit Court, where Mrs. Orsini is being tried.

Dillahunty was appointed after Prosecutor Wilbur Bentley asked to be excused because he considers McArthur innocent and doesn't think Robinson has enough evidence.

Bentley's withdrawal followed similar moves by three judges, who said they could not hear the case because they knew either McArthur or his wife. Some even said they went to the McArthur home the evening of the murder.

Mrs. Orsini also is accused of trying to kill Mrs. McArthur on May 21. Mrs. McArthur escaped serious injury then when a bomb planted in her car partially detonated. Hall said he helped Mrs. Orsini get the explosives and stood lookout when she planted the device.

Pretrial news coverage peaked Sept. 2 after the Arkansas Democrat and the Arkansas Gazette gained access to Hall's lengthy confession.

Both published articles based on its contents and the Democrat printed most of it verbatim in a spread that covered more than two pages of the newspaper.

Circuit Judge Wilbur Hendricks, one of the officials subpoened by defense lawyers in an effort to move the trial, said he and his colleagues worried about cases of this kind in which prospective jurors might lie just to be associated with the trial.

Hall said the pistol used to kill Mrs. McArthur was stolen from a veterinarian who had befriended Mrs. Orsini and had moved to Arkansas after being acquitted of killing his own wife.

Mrs. Orsini told city advertising agencies a year ago that she was to be a silent partner in a country music disco in which McArthur was part owner.

Reagan actively supports prayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Saturday decried the "drive to eliminate God" from the classroom and then lit three candles in support of voluntary prayer in public schools.

"No one is suggesting that others should be forced into any religious activity," said Reagan, urging the Senate to act on a constitutional amendment to allow prayer in schools.

"But to prevent those who believe in God from expressing their belief is an outrage. And the relentless drive to eliminate God from our schools can and should be stopped," he told about 50 people gathered in the State Dining Room.

"If the president of the United States can pray with others in the Oval Office — and I have on a number of occasions — then let's make certain that our children have the same right as they go about preparing for their futures and the future of this country," he said.

Asked when Reagan prays in the Oval Office, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said he thought the president had once prayed with an anti-abortion group that visited him. Reagan very rarely attends Sunday church services.

The candles that Reagan lit were to be used Saturday during a rally near the Capitol for School Prayer Day.

After he finished speaking, the president and his wife, Nancy, spent several minutes informally shaking hands and, chatting with the audience, which included singer Pat Boone, former football player Rosie Grier, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and the Rev. Jerry Falwall, head of the Moral Majority.

Helms had led a long but unsuccessful Senate fight for school prayer legislation.

Reagan, who had pledged Friday to stick with the New Right in its crusade for anti-abortion and prayer legislation, said the school prayer issue was "as vital to the future of this country as any we face."

The president turned aside arguments that allowing voluntary prayer in public schools would violate the rights of those who did not wish to pray.

Instead, he said, it "infringes on the freedom of those who choose to pray, a freedom taken for granted since the time of our founding fathers."

"We believe that permitting voluntary prayer in the public schools is in the finest tradition of this country and consistent with the principles of American liberty."

He advised politicians to "keep their hands off of the relgious freedom of our people, and especially our children."

Speakes said Reagan's decision to invite participants in the rally to the White House had been planned in advance and was not triggered by criticism from Helms, who has accused the White House of not producing a single vote in any of the battles over social issues.

Man arrested for attempted extortion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 48-year-old unemployed man was arrested Saturday for investigation of trying to extort $400,000 from American Airlines by planting a bomb in luggage destined for one of its planes, the FBI said.

Wallace Conklin of Los Angeles was arrested about 12:15 a.m. "in the area where the payoff was to take place," said Richard T. Bretzing, special agent in charge of the FBI's Los Angeles area.

The bomb was discovered about 7 p.m. Friday — eight hours after American Airlines received a call saying a bomb had been placed at its terminal at Los Angeles International Airport.

Conklin was arrested about five hours later next to a motel in North Hollywood, the site designated for the payoff, officials said.

The FBI agent said the extortion demand was made in the first call to the airline and that instructions on where to deliver the money were given in a number of subsequent calls.

Bretzing declined to comment on reports that a wire leading from the timer to the explosive had not been connected, rendering it harmless.

Deputy Los Angeles Police Chief Ron Franco, whose bomb squad spent an hour defusing the device, said it would have caused "substantial" damage if it had gone off.

Conklin faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and $10,000 fine if convicted in the extortion case. Bretzing said Conklin is to be arraigned before a federal magistrate Monday.

The luggage with the bomb in it had reached the loading area and was waiting for the American Airlines plane to arrive so it could be put aboard, said Dale Harris, director of airport operations.

Begin facing serious political challenge

By LARRY THORSON

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — After riding high on the ouster of PLO guerrillas from Beirut only a month ago, Prime Minister Menachem Begin is now facing his most serious political challenge since his re-election in June 1981.

In the week since the massacre in Beirut, the combative prime minister has had to face a wave of public revulsion, resignations and threats of resignations within his Cabinet and ruling coalition, and calls for his ouster and that of Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, architect of the Lebanon invasion.

He also is faced with a newly unified and stronger opposition — the Labor Party.

"We didn't really want to benefit from this crisis," said Labor Party spokesman Yossi Beilin. "It's a real disaster for Israel. But our revival is part of what happened in the past few weeks, the way the war went."

An AP News Special

Labor's resurgence began with President Reagan's Middle East peace plan, which is much closer to its oft-stated proposal for a territorial compromise with Jordan than to Begin's desire to annex the occupied West Bank.

BEGIN WAS SHARPLY attacked for his bitter rejection of the U.S. initiative, announced just as he was exulting at the "expulsion" of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from Beirut.

The prime minister's entire Lebanon policy was threatened two weeks later with the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel, whom Begin saw as a potential ally in the violent world of Lebanese politics.

Begin had argued that the cost of the invasion — lives, money, political strife — would be justified if Israel could help restore a stable government in Lebanon, and perhaps win a peace treaty with its northern neighbor.

But Gemayel's murder seemed to shatter that hope, and Sharon rushed Israeli troops into west Beirut, saying it was essential to prevent bloody vengeance after Gemayel's death.

Two days later, according to the Israeli account, Lebanese Christians from Gemayel's Phalange Party militia went into the Chatilla and Sabra Palestinian refugee camps and massacred hundreds of Lebanese and Palestinian civilians, including women, children, babies and old people.

SHARON SAID LATER that the Phalangists were allowed in for what was to be a move against PLO guerrillas. He said the Israeli army had no idea what was going on and when it found out, it moved to stop the killing.

But Sharon still faced a chorus of resignation demands from Israeli newspapers and the political opposition, and Labor leader Shimon Peres charged that the decision to allow the Phalangists into the camps was "stupid," considering the long history of massacres in Lebanon.

The camp massacre opened a torrent of world outrage, and triggered a wave of revulsion in this nation born in the ashes of the Holocaust.

Energy Minister Yitzhak Berman quit his Cabinet post and Menachem Milson resigned as civilian governor of the West Bank.

Palestinians and Israelis march together through the streets of Tel Aviv on Saturday to protest the war in Lebanon and the massacre of refugees in Beirut. The march was organized by an anti-war committee in Israel. Signs read "Stop the war" and "Negotiate with the PLO."

Zeev Chafetz, head of the government press office, and Brig. Gen. Amram Mitzna, head of the staff training college in the army, went on extended leave, and left no doubt of their criticisms of the government's conduct.

BEGIN'S COALITION partners — the National Religious Party and the North African ethnic faction TAMI — threatened to defect if a satisfactory probe were not conducted into the slaughter.

Thousands of Israelis demonstrated around the country last week, including marches on Begin's Jerusalem residence.

Police also opened fire on Israeli Arab demonstrators in northern Israel, where many Arabs have relatives in the Lebanese refugee camps. At least 12 suffered gunshot wounds and another 20 civilians and 25 police officers were hurt in violent clashes.

The massacre galvanized the Peace Now movement, Israel's leading anti-war group.

"There's an outrage, and we hope it leads to something," says Galia Golan of Peace Now. "We don't know if we can bring down the government, but we will try."

Begin has been accused of "stonewalling" because of his refusal to authorize an inquiry commission with powers to subpoena witnesses and take testimony under oath.

HIS CABINET DECIDED Friday to ask Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan, a 69-year-old veteran of 10 years on the high court, to investigate the Beirut slaughter without such powers. But Kahan refused because the court already was considering two petitions for a full-powered inquiry.

It was not known whether Kahan might accept the offer to investigate with limited powers if the Supreme Court dismisses those petitions.

Cabinet ministers who were insisting on an investigation said they were happy with the decision to appoint Kahan. But after Kahan's initial refusal, Israel radio reported some ministers again are asking for a full judicial inquiry.

Begin has landed on his feet after numerous political crises, but observers now wonder whether he can pull off another miracle.

Arabs still interested in peace plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior U.S. official says Arab interest in President Reagan's Mideast peace plan remains high despite anguish over the "inflammatory and embittering" events in Beirut, including the massacre of Palestinians.

"I think it shows that there is a tremendous vitality to these ideas," said the official, who asked to be identified only as having senior rank in the administration and State Department.

The official said it is "entirely possible" that Jordan may eventually join peace negotiations aimed at giving self-government to the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip following an Israeli withdrawal from the territories.

Some Arab leaders also have indicated they might be willing to negotiate with the Begin government, although there hasn't been "any public declaration on anybody's part that they are willing to do that, but they are obviously thinking about it," he said. "That's what we are looking for; let's talk."

IN A MEETING WITH reporters Friday, the official said Israel's move into west Beirut following the assassination of Bashir Gemayel and the subsequent massacre in Palestinian refugee camps did not divert attention from Reagan's peace initiative.

"The president's initiative...is very much alive and very much on people's minds," said the official.

The plan envisions Jordan negotiating with Israel — along with the United States and Egypt — on the future of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, home to 1.3 million Palestinians.

It also calls on Israel to stop building settlements in the occupied territories at once and to withdraw entirely as part of a peace settlement. The Palestinians would have self-government in the West Bank and Gaza, which would be linked to Jordan.

The U.S. official said discussions on the peace plan are being conducted at the ambassadorial level between the United States and Jordan and other nations.

SECRETARY OF STATE George P. Shultz also will discuss the Reagan plan during meetings with Israeli and Arab foreign ministers during his visit to New York this week for a meeting of the U.N. General Assembly, according to the official.

"Our basic objective is to help arrange things so that there is a peace table, let's say, and the key people involved are sitting around talking to each other, and we are one of them," he said.

The official said the initiative was greeted in all but a "very few places" as a "positive and constructive contribution to peace in the Middle East." One of those few place was Israel.

Israelis to withdraw from Beirut this week

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib on Saturday that Israel's withdrawal from Beirut would be completed by the second half of this week, Defense Ministry spokesman Uri Dan said.

Dan described the five-hour meeting between Sharon and Habib as having taken place "in good spirit."

"Concerning the deployment of the multinational force, some subjects arose which needed coordination," he said, apparently referring to Italian objections to the presence of Israeli troops in the Beirut port and Israel's reported demand for an Israeli presence at the Beirut airport.

Dan vehemently denied reports that Habib had delivered an ultimatum to Sharon on the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Lebanese capital prior to the deployment of multinational forces in the area. "This information is groundless," he said.

Israeli forces moved into west Beirut Sept. 15, the day after the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel. The troops began withdrawing last week, but Israel had set no timetable for a total pullback.

The first contingents of what is to be a 3,000-man U.S.-Italian-French peace force have started arriving in Beirut. About 680 French paratroops have landed but hundreds of U.S. Marines and Italian infantrymen were waiting offshore.

U.S. group visits Laos to search for servicemen missing in action

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A U.S. group seeking information on Americans missing in action visited a cave and a crash site in northeastern Laos but did not find any remains of U.S. war dead, reporters traveling with the mission said Saturday.

The four-member group from the National League of Families of Americans Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia was flown to the town of Viengsay in northeastern Laos on Friday and returned to the Laotian capital of Vientiane Saturday.

Ronald Miller of the ABC televison network, contacted by telephone in Vientiane, said the group was taken to a cave where Laotian officials told them two unidentified Americans had died during the war while in captivity. The Laotians reportedly said that the grave site was later destroyed in a U.S. bombing raid.

The group, Miller said, was also escorted to the site of a 1968 crash of a U.S. aircraft, shown a cave where 16 Laotians reportedly died during a U.S. napalm attack and a complex of caves which served as a key headquarters area of the Communist Pathet Lao during the war.

The group is scheduled to meet for the last time with Laotian officials Sunday and return to Bangkok Monday. The mission, which arrived in Laos Sept. 13 and returned to Vientiane Sept. 23 after a stay in Vietnam, is led by the organization's chairman George L. Brooks, of New Windsor, N.Y.

Civil strife consuming Honduras

EDITOR'S NOTE — Although attention in strife-filled Central America has focused on fighting elsewhere, Honduras, surrounded by civil war, is now simmering with conflicts of its own. Here is a report.

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER

SAN PEDRO SULA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras, Central America's poorest nation, is slowly being drawn into civil conflicts like those plaguing the lands that surround it.

The recent hostage-taking by leftist guerrillas in this business center 110 miles northwest of Tegucigalpa, the capital, was the latest in a growing list of threats to the usual tranquility of this nation of 3.7 million people.

Many of the guerrillas' 82 hostages were Honduran business and political leaders, including the treasury and economy ministers. The gunmen demanded the release of political prisoners.

President Roberto Suazo Cordoba's conservative government has been receiving increasing aid from the United States in its attempt to halt the spread of anti-government violence and to bolster its economy.

The Honduran leaders are also trying to counteract what they perceive as a serious threat on the border with Nicaragua. Honduras also has common borders with San Salvador and Guatemala.

THE SUAZO CORDOBA government blames Salvadoran guerrillas and leftist-led Nicaragua for the increased terrorist activity here. The rebels who seized the San Pedro Sula hostages are members of the Cinchonero Popular Liberation Movement, one of four clandestine leftist groups operating in Honduras.

In July, a terrorist attack on two power stations killed six workmen and knocked out electricity in most of Tegucigalpa for a week. Guerrilla groups have also set off bombs in downtown buildings and have tried to seize a police barracks in the capital.

Suazo Corboba went to Washington in July for meetings with President Reagan and other officials. The United States, keenly interested in maintaining Honduran stability, has set military aid at $10.6 million this year, mostly in credits for weaponry.

The Honduran president, elected last November as the first civilian leader here after almost 20 years of military rule, wants the armaments to offset a Nicaraguan military buildup.

In recent bloody clashes, Honduras-based insurgents opposed to Nicaragua's Sandinista government have battled Nicaraguan troops along the remote 400-mile Honduran-Nicaraguan frontier. Many of the guerrillas operating against Nicaragua are believed to be former members of the Nicaraguan national guard, defeated when the Sandinistas overthrew dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

NICARAGUA CLAIMS MORE of these old Somoza supporters are training in the United States. The extent of Honduran government complicity, if any, has not been proved.

He said there have been 38 cases of ground infiltration from Honduras this year and more than 200 Nicaraguans were killed.

Honduran officials claim Nicaraguans have entered Honduras 27 times, killing one Honduran and wounding six. They say more than 100 Hondurans have been kidnapped, most of them fishermen seized in Honduran territorial waters.

This building conflict has not pitted Honduran troops against Nicaraguans. In fact, border patrols of each country are supposed to be in radio contact with their counterparts. But tensions remain.

"We are certain there is the possibility of an armed invasion launched or promoted by the United States from Honduras," Rafael Cordova Rivas, a member of Nicaragua's three-man governing junta, said in an interview in the Nicaraguan capital of Managua.

In Tegucigalpa, Carlos Flores, a key presidential aide, said an invasion of his country by Nicaraguan troops is possible "but the truth is that the aggression is of another kind."

"Terrorist activity and subversion are a Central American reality and someone has to be behind it," he told a reporter.

Honduras moved about 3,000 troops along the border area this summer and reportedly is building a fort or military base at Mocoron, some 25 miles from Nicaragua near the Atlantic coast.

The Nicaraguan government has, by American intelligence estimates, from 12,000 to 15,000 troops in the region on its side of the poorly marked border.

As evidence of what he says is a pending invasion, Cordova Rivas points to a recent American-Honduran military exercise, an American grant to improve three Honduran runways, and an estimated 100 American military advisers now in Honduras.

Honduran aide Flores counters that his country's army, about 17,000 strong, is only one-fourth the size of Nicaragua's, and that Honduras, one of the world's poorest countries, could not afford to fight its neighbor even if it wanted to.

Guerrillas release hostages, leave Honduras

SAN PEDRO SULA, Honduras (AP) — Leftist guerrillas who held two Cabinet ministers and dozens of businessmen hostage for eight days in the Chamber of Commerce building were flown out of the country Saturday after releasing their last 32 hostages, the government said.

The guerrillas, believed to number 10, left aboard a twin-engine Panamanian air force plane. Their destination was not disclosed but they were apparently bound for Panama en route to Cuba. The government said 32 hostages, the last of the captives held in the siege, were released at the airport.

Local radio stations reported earlier that some of the hostages were aboard the plane when it took off at 12:41 p.m. local time (2:41 p.m. EDT), but the government denied the reports.

Amilcar Santamaria, spokesman for President Roberto Suazo Cordova, said government negotiators had agreed with the guerrillas that the hostages would accompany the rebels to the airport but would not leave with their captors.

The plane lifted off 55 minutes after the guerrillas and their hostages left the Chamber of Commerce building in a military bus and two ambulances and were taken to the airport under military escort. Some of the captives were seen waving from the bus windows.

At the airport, troops in camouflage and army sharpshooters stayed 300 yards from the plane as the leftists boarded the plane.

Santamaria said the government had guaranteed the guerrillas safe conduct from Honduras, but he did not reveal where they would go.

The guerrillas, who identify themselves as members of the Cinchonero Popular Liberation Movement, had demanded the release of about 60 people they described as political prisoners in exchange for freeing the hostages.

Santamaria denied that the government had agreed to release the prisoners, and repeated previous government contentions that there are no political prisoners in Honduras.

The hostages included Economy Minister Gustavo Adolfo Alfary, Treasury Minister Arturo Corleto Moreira, Central Bank President Gonzalo Carias Pineda and Rafael Pastor Zayala, president of the National Industrial Association.

They were among more than 100 people taken captive when about 10 heavily armed guerrillas blasted their way into the Chamber of Commerce building Sept. 17 during an economic conference in this industrial and commercial center of 250,000 people. A guard was shot dead during the takeover and two businessmen were wounded.

The Cinchoneros, who take their name from a 19th century Honduran peasant leader, freed more than two-thirds of their captives throughout last week, but retained their most important hostages as bargaining chips.

Indian party heads charged with murder

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Three leaders of the new political party founded by Maneka Gandhi, the out-of-favor daughter-in-law of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, were arrested Saturday and charged with murder, reports from Lucknow said.

Seized were Akbar Ahmed, national convenor of the Sanjay Gandhi Vichar Manch (Platform Party), party organizer J.N. Mishra and Kalpnath Sonkar, a member of Parliament and party supporter, the reports said.

The three were arrested in connection with the Sept. 19 shooting death of party worker Tikori Singh at the government guest house in Guari Ganj, 195 miles southeast of here. United News of India reported the three told police Singh's death was accidental. Maneka Gandhi, widow of the late Sanjay Gandhi, the Prime minister's politically powerful son who died in a plane crash in June 1980, also was at the guest house when Singh was shot, UNI said, but was not arrested.

Maneka openly broke with Mrs. Gandhi last spring after appearing at a rally of Sanjay's old supporters, who had fallen from power following his death. She recently formed the Vichar Manch to carry on Sanjay's ideals, and announced she would challenge Mrs. Gandhi's eldest son Rajiv for a Parliament seat.

Koreans arrested for illegal protests

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Seven students from three universities in Seoul were arrested Saturday on charges of leading illegal demonstrations.

The students were accused of instigating demonstrations on their campuses last Wednesday by scattering leaflets denouncing Japan for revising textbooks to gloss over its activities before and during World War II. Anti-government slogans were chanted.

It was earlier reported that three students of Yonsei University in Seoul were arrested on charges of playing lead roles in an anti-government and anti-Japanese demonstration Wednesday. More than 80 students are known to have been arrested in connection with demonstrations this year.

Ugandans charged with armed robbery

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Five Ugandan soldiers have been arrested as suspects in a string of armed robberies in a Kampala suburb, Uganda state radio said Saturday. Residents of the Ugandan capital in recent months have complained that soldiers rob motorists at gunpoint and commit other crimes.

Meanwhile, 22 Ugandans described as former rebels were given three bulls as a reward for surrendering to authorities, the radio said. Brig. David Oyite-Ojok, army chief of staff, was present when the livestock was handed over in Kakiri, 20 miles west of Kampala, it said.

Civil servants dismissed in Nepal

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Nepal's Secretary for Public Works and Transport Ministry, Gyan Prashad Sharma, and 19 other senior civil servants have been dismissed from their posts, the government announced Saturday.

Although the government announcement did not give any specific reason for their dismissal, official sources here said they were fired on various charges of irregularities including corruption.

The officials who were fired were employed in such services as administrative, forestry, and engineering.

Galunggung volcano erupts again

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The Galunggung volcano in West Java erupted again Friday, officials in the Volcanology office in Bandung said Saturday.

The 7,154-foot volcano, about 72 miles from Bandung, has erupted 300 times since April 5, killing at least 50 people and driving 150,000 others from their homes.

Hijackers seize Alitalia jet flying from Algiers to Rome

ROME (AP) — Hijackers seized an Alitalia Boeing 727 Saturday on a flight from Algiers to Rome and forced it to land on Sicily, where they released all 101 passengers but kept eight crew members hostage, an airline official said.

The number of hijackers, their nationalities and motive were not immediately known.

Airport officials in Catania, on the east coast of Sicily, said the plane landed at 8:30 p.m. (2:30 p.m. EDT), but probably would leave soon for an unknown destination. The officials asked not to be identified.

An airline spokesman, who also requested anonymity, said the Boeing 727 was first diverted to Tripoli by the hijackers but Libyan official refused to allow it to land. The spokesman said there were 101 passengers and eight crew members on board the flight, No. AZ871.

The Italian news agencies AGI and ANSA said the hijackers then tried to land at Valletta, Malta, 60 miles south of Sicily, but again were refused permission to do so. That report could not be immediately confirmed with airline officials.

Airport officials said the flight was taken over about 20 minutes after it left Algiers at 5:25 p.m. (11:25 a.m. EDT) on a direct flight to Rome. Air traffic controllers tried to make contact with the plane but were unsuccessful, they said.

The airport officials said they heard the pilot of the hijacked flight radio for landing clearance at Tripoli, saying he was being threatened with a gun. Landing permission was denied.

The most recent hijacking of an Alitalia airliner occurred June 30, when Sepala Ekanayaka, a Sri Lankan, commandeered one of the airline's Boeing 747s and forced its crew to fly to Bangkok, where he threatened to blow it up on the ground with 263 people aboard.

Ekanayaka freed his hostages in return for a $300,000 ransom, a reunion with his estranged son and wife and safe passage to Colombo, Sri Lanka, where he was later arrested and his booty frozen in a bank account.

Palestinian refugees fear returning to Beirut camps

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thousands of refugees have fled from the Chatilla and Sabra camps where hundreds of people were massacred earlier this month. Many of those who left are living in horrible conditions, sometimes 10 to a room, with no toilets or running water.

"I am afraid to return to my house," said Raya Hassan Kassim, who fled from her home in the Sabra camp with her husband and two sons during the massacre. "It is not safe. Maybe they will commit another massacre."

Mrs. Kassim is living in an abandoned school in west Beirut with nine other families. In one room, a woman and her five children sleep on a single blanket spread out on the floor. Twenty people are staying in another room. Some sleep on pads, most lie on the cold tile floor.

Flies swarm around as the women cook on portable camping gas burners on the floor. There is no running water and no bathroom. The refugees use three smelly latrines in the school courtyard as their only toilets.

Most of the refugees in the school are children, dirty from playing in the dusty courtyard or the muddy street.

There were an estimated 20,000 people, Palestinians and Lebanese, living in the two camps before the war. Many fled during the Israeli air raids that followed Israel's invasion of Lebanon June 6, while others left the camps during the two-day massacre by Christian militias that began Sept. 16.

Red Cross officials said 320 corpses have now been found, including that of a baby and two other people on Saturday. The Lebanese government put the toll at more than 500.

There are no precise figures on how many have fled, but Chatilla, once a bustling shantytown, is now abandoned except for a few people who come during the day to collect their belongings or watch the grim work of bulldozers digging more bodies from the rubble. The sickening smell of rotting corpses pervades the air.

The adjoining camp of Sabra, also hit by the gunmen in the massacre, suffered less destruction. The smell of death pervades a few streets, but the main street is almost normal, with shoppers buying food from fruit vendors on the streets and butcher shops selling lambs and live chickens.

Some of the refugees who fled the camps are staying with relatives or friends, others in a nearby mosque. Many have moved into bombed-out buildings abandoned by their owners. A few are staying at hospitals.

The women try to keep the place clean, sweeping with a worn-out broom and washing clothes in water hauled from a hospital a mile and a half away.

The group took over the private school building without permission of the owner, who they say is now trying to evict them.

Midland County: FARM & RANCH country

Staff Artist: Jan Drake

"This is one of the most innovative approaches to grazing," said Hagelstein. At the center of each of the delta-shaped, eight-pasture cells is the corral, where the cattle feed and water. Cattle graze on each pasture for five days to 10 days before they are herded to another pasture, which had been "resting." The method allows the land to rest, permits grasses to be replenished, and avoids overgrazing.

The Faudree Ranch, which has been keen on Brahman and Angus cattle, is experimenting with the Longhorn in a crossbreeding program, noted Dusty Morrison, ranch foreman. The Longhorn influence allows for "ease in calving," he said.

At another stop, on the Braun Ranch, Allan McGinty, range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, showed tour participants results of experiments in controlling mesquite.

"What we're concerned with is controlling mesquite," said McGinty. "Mesquite is the No. 1 brush problem." One of the more recent mesquite-fighters is Velpar-L, a liquid herbicide. Just a 10-cent squirt of the $40-a-gallon liquid at the base of the brush will get into the ground at the next rain and into the root system and so kill the tree.

Though a curse to the rancher and to his cattle, the pesty mesquite nevertheless gives color and flavor to the landscape. In addition to not being fit for fodder, the shrub competes with grasses for moisture.

McGinty also pointed to other mesquite-control methods: pouring diesel oil at the base of the brush, root plowing, aerial spraying, dropping of Velpar gridballs, and spraying of 2,4,5-T and other foliar sprays.

Due to the cost and varying effectiveness of mesquite control, mesquite control is most effective if done systematically. Aerial spraying costs about $15 per acre but is only 15 to 30 percent effective, he said. The diesel-oil treatment runs about $90 an acre. In Midland, root plowing costs about $50 an acre but on top of that cost is the re-seeding expense.

After root plowing, said McGinty, "You're left with nothing on the ground — no grass, no seed." Velpar-L effects a 90 percent root kill at a cost of a dime per shrub. But it's quite toxic: "It'll kill everything for a year or two."

"It'll drift over, and get you some irate neighbors," he said.

Over at the Faudree ranch house, cutting and Western pleasure horses were in training. Sonny Rice of Corsicana is the Faudrees' cutting horse adviser, and Laurel Raether works with the pleasure horses.

"It's the high-dollar babies that we are trying to breed," Ms. Raether said just before she mounted a three-year gray roan mare, Wide Awake Again, which developed into a fine Western pleasure mare after Rice culled her from the cutting-horse ranks. "She's really turned out to be dynamite."

"The Faudrees are pretty much into the cutting horse industry," said Ms. Raether, who noted that she's "not good on that subject."

Ms. Raether said she leaves the breaking in and training of steeds to the cowboys. "I don't think a woman has a place trying to manhandle a stallion."

Ms. Raether noted the chance-taking in futurity racing. "You're just taking a gamble; you're betting your horses are better than the others."

While putting the gray roan mare through her paces, she addessed the spectators: "I know it's boring (just watching her and the horse). I think it's boring, too, unless you're on her."

Just before the onlookers left the arena and went to feed on a barbecue lunch sponsored by The Midland National Bank, Ms. Raether demonstrated the obedience of the mare.

"When I say 'Whoa!', she better stop," she said and issued the command.

"Whoa!"

Wide Awake Again kept going but finally pulled to a halt.

"She didn't stop (on command). She'll get reprimanded for it." Ms. Raether got the mare moving again and issued another "Whoa!" The mare stopped.

"We're going to go down through a little cotton country," said Charlie Welch, as two bus loads of city folks headed out to the farm, the dairy, the ranch and to the ranch house on the annual Midland County Farm and Ranch Tour.

For the most part, the cotton looked scrawny; the range was infested with the tenaciously hardy mesquite shrub; the cattle seemed somewhat curious but not particularly concerned about the clothed bipeds walking by, talking and gawking; the Quarter Horses were in their usual high-strung form; and the milk cows were contented to be milked and fed in unrelenting cycles.

Tour guide Dick Hagelstein, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (SCS) for Midland County, glanced over the cotton fields and made note of the housing developments which used to be planted in solid cotton.

"We've had a combination of wind, rain, hail and pests," Hagelstein said, "and I really doubt that we're going to make one-half bale to the acre." This year in Midland County, 34,487 acres were planted in cotton. "It looks pretty bleak. I'd like to give you some better news."

The ranching economy isn't faring much, if any,

Crockett Elementary offers Positive Action Plan, Super Kids Program

A Positive Action Plan was adopted at Crockett Elementary School and a Super Kids Program was set up at the beginning of the school year.

The plan was developed to guarantee the teaching climate to meet the expectations of each teacher, who needs to carry out his or her responsibilities throughout the year.

Students and parents were informed of the rules, the negative consequences for breaking them and the positive reinforcements for following them.

Behavior is evaluated every two weeks and the Super Kids are recognized by their Super Kid ribbons. Every Super Kid is rewarded with a special treat every other Friday afternoon for about an hour. Special treats include performances by the Origins from Lee High School, the Pickwick Players from the Midland Community Theatre and many other groups.

Retired teachers now volunteers

Twelve retired teachers, all senior citizens living at Trinity Towers, are returning to the classroom this year as volunteers at Sam Houston Elementary School.

The retired teachers will meet with first, second and third grade students Monday, Wednesday and Friday each week from 8:40 to 10:40 a.m. These enthusiastic, energetic people will read to the children, tell stories and share the past with the citizens of the future.

Each session involves a small number of students pulled from their regular classrooms, lessening the load on the teachers and giving them more time to spend wth each student remaining in the classroom. At the same time, it provides enrichment for those children who meet with the "Trinity Teachers."

The program, developed by Joe Rubin, MISD elementary language arts coordinator, and Keller Stamy, Houston prinicpal, begins Monday.

Trinity School's test scores rising

The Rev. P.D. Peterson, headmaster of Trinity School, announced that the school's test scores were up for the sixth consecutive year during opening remarks to parents at Trinity's Open House.

Following the introduction of faculty and staff, parents visited the classrooms and were served refreshments on the patio, provided by the Parents' Association.

Trinity has an enrollment of 485 students this year.

Bowie offers course on parenting

The first Parent Education project for the 1982-83 school year at Bowie Elementary will be a five-hour course on parenting in the Bowie Cafetorium, 805 Elk St., beginning at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Guest speakers will be Steve Partlow, director of Young Life in Midland; the Rev. Richard Bales, associate minister of the First United Methodist Church of Midland as well as a Bowie parent; and counselors from Family Services of Midland.

Bowie will sponsor additional Parent Education programs throughout the school year including first aid, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, personal motivation, Midlanders Against Drugs and others.

Parent Education is the arm of PTA which reaches out into both the school and the community to provide opportunities for new learning experiences for adults.

The public is invited to attend any and all of these sessions.

MISD enrollment up 8.7 percent

Enrollment in the Midland Independent School District is up 8.7 percent from the same time last year. Even though there has been a dramatic student increase, school administrators say that the pupil/teacher ratio remains reasonable.

According to Garland Chapman, assistant superintendent of administration, the pupil/teacher ratio for kindergarten through third grades remains at about 24 to 1. Fourth through sixth grades show a pupil/teacher ratio of about 27 to 1.

Ten additional temporary classrooms were put to use across the district this month to accommodate the large enrollment while construction continues on two new elementary schools.

VIPS slates volunteer workshop

VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools) will conduct a volunteer workshop from 8:45 to 11:30 a.m. Oct. 6, at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Dr. I. Carl Candoli, superintendent of the Fort Worth Independent School District, will speak on "It's a Team Effort." Registration and coffee will begin at 8:45 a.m. and tuberculosis tests will be administered. First session workshops will be from 10 to 10:45 a.m. and second sessions will be from 10:45 until 11:30 a.m.

Dr. Joseph B. Rubin, MISD coordinator of elementary reading and Language Arts, will conduct a workshop on the Partners-in-Reading program; Yvonne Black, coordinator of elementary math and science, will speak on Focus on Math; Vernon Stokes, Region 18 Education Service Center, will speak on Finding Time to Volunteer; and Nell Furgeson, volunteer, will address Making Stories Come to Life.

Tax workshop to be held at MC

Midland College, in cooperation with Texas A&M and the Internal Revenue Service, is conducting a Small Business Tax Workshop at the MC campus Oct. 9.

The six-hour workshop will introduce participants to the basic types of business organizations, business tax returns recordkeeping and IRS functions. Participants also determine proper income and expense items of Schedule C business income tax returns.

The second section is a practical application session focusing on employment taxes. Designed for those who plan to prepare their own business tax returns, participants are first introduced to employment taxes. Practical exercises provide opportunities for participants to prepare the Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, Form 941; the Employers Unemployment Tax Return, Form 940; and, if necessary, the Employer's Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees, Form 943.

Persons interested in attending the workshop should contact Henry D. Pope, Liberal Arts-Continuing Education, Texas A&M University, College Station 77843-4234, or call 1-713-845-7814.

San Jacinto PTA hosts open house

Former Midland resident honored

NORMAN, Okla. — A Midlander is among 26 "pioneer advisers" who have made significant contributions to scholastic journalism in the state and were honored Friday at the fall conference of the Oklahoma Interscholastic Press Association at the University of Oklahoma.

Mary J. Sparks, formerly of Midland and now a teacher at U.S. Grant High School in Oklahoma City, Okla., was one of the 26, all of whom have taught journalism for 20 or more years. The honoring of the pioneer advisers is an official event sanctioned by the Diamond Jubilee Commission in celebration of Oklahoma's 75th anniversary.

Trustees to attend convention

Five Midland Independent School District trustees and administrators are planning to attend the 1982 joint annual convention of the Texas Association of School Administrators and the Texas Association of School Boards next weekend in San Antonio.

About 5,000 school board members and administrators are expected to attend. The convention theme, "Education: Society's Partner for Success," will be reflected throughout the program, which will feature the most comprehensive list of topic sessions ever assembled for this joint meeting. The theme signifies the importance of the school administrator's and school board member's respective roles in ensuring that Texas students receive the best possible education.

Attending from Midland will be superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr.; Dr. James H. Mailey, consultant for school planning and construction; and trustees Gary Hopper, Bill Jackson and Joe Golding.

Leadership awards available

Midland high school seniors have an opportunity to enter the 1982-83 Century III Leaders program, which awards local, state and national prizes to students who demonstrate the leadership abilities and social awareness necessary to help meet America's needs during our third century.

One outstanding senior eventually will collect the $10,000 scholarship which is awarded to the Century III national winner. The student will be selected at the leadership conference in March in Williamsburg, Va.

Two winners from each state and the District of Columbia receive $1,500 scholarships and expense-paid trips to the conference. Two state alternatives receive $500.

Students may apply for the scholarship through their local FFA chapter or 4-H club.

Safety patrol on duty at Crockett

The safety patrol at Crockett Elementary now is in operation from 8:10 to 8:40 a.m. and from 2:55 to 3:15 p.m. every school day.

The five students elected to the patrol, under the supervision of Crockett teacher Art Hotz, will serve three-week terms. Albert Espinoza was elected captain and Ann Sullivan, Irma Villa, Roman Duran and Chon Ramirez were elected as patrolmen.

Other students elected to serve on the board throughout the school year are Rico Enriquez, Mingo Lujan, Sylvia Muniz, Joey Hernandez, Denise Barron, Robert Johnson, Vanessa Thomas, Kathy Gutierrez and Gilbert La Torrey.

Duties include making street crossing safe for primary pupils, trying to prevent auto accidents nearby, and helping K-3 students learn and obey safety crossing rules.

Hotz has requested that parents of Crockett students stop at cross walks when picking up and delivering their children.

She will go to the Odessa Phone Center, 213 E. 8th St., and leave there about 6 p.m. for Austin.

Fitness class focuses on conditioning

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The music went round and round for 30 minutes while the women pushed weights to tone and stretch many of their muscles.

To the side, 1-2-3-swoop down and over to the other side. Combining a few dance steps, the next song sees the women raising and lowering the weights. Toward the end of the session, they begin to stretch the back, side and stomach muscles.

It's the Ladies Keep-Fit exercise class but with a different twist — this conditioning program is geared toward the "more mature woman." Sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department, it is a combination of years of practice, exercise and technique tried out by the instructor, Em Carnett.

Recognizing that most younger women today are working during the daytime, Ms. Carnett designed the course for the women whose children are in school or grown and gone from the home.

"These are not skinny, beautiful women," she said of the students whose average age is over 30.

She doesn't weigh the women or measure them or tell them how much weight they should lose. If they want to do that, it's up to them. But what she wants to see is the women get into shape, or rather into the proper conditioning. From there, the women can go directly into any sports program, or simply enjoy the benefits of being in condition, such as good health and very little illness.

THE CLASS, WHICH is $11 through the end of the session in December, meets from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Monday and Wednesday and 9 to 10:30 a.m. Friday at the city's gymnasium, 300 Baldwin St.

The first 15 minutes, related Ms. Carnett, involves warmup exercises, such as walking and body movement. The next 30 minutes is spent walking or jogging. Although she has been a jogger for 16 years, most of the women are walkers. After a short rest, it's to the weights and the music for the final 30 minutes.

"These routines are not structured like aerobic dances," Ms. Carnett said.

Each woman can keep track of her progress on a card in a small file box. They can weigh themselves, "although I suggest they don't weigh every time they come. Your weight varies too much each day."

The women can write down their measurements on the card and watch for a change as the months pass.

"And we keep track of the number of miles they're walking," she added.

BUT THAT measuring business is not what her class is about, she said. "Some spas do all these measurements, and it's too technical. When you lose enough weight to make a difference, you can see it."

Continuing, she noted that the class is "not to lose weight. The only answer to that problem is to not eat as much."

The program followed in the Ladies Keep Fit class has evolved over the years and is a combination of the best of the popular programs, including jazzercise, walking and aerobic dancing.

Back in 1973-74, one of the first aerobic dance classes in the country was designed by Jackie Sorenson, who was on the President's Counil on Physical Fitness. A dancer by trade, she patented her style. Ms. Carnett took the course about that time and brought it back to the city recreation program.

But these dances were technical and strenuous, and women just starting back into an exercise program after years of rest found them difficult. From there, Ms. Carnett devised an easier program to follow.

She retained the music, and the idea of exercising to music is the newest fad rolling across the country.

"WITH MUSIC, your movements are smoother, your timing is better. But you still can't get away from the fact that you have to do the exercises," Ms. Carnett said.

With the thrust on physical fitness grabbing the country, Ms. Carnett said people are realizing that exercising is "as important a part of your life as eating and sleeping.

"I do not advocate diets. Experts prove that it's the amount of calories you put in and the amount you take out that helps you to lose," and not the type of food consumed. Additionally, "heredity and genetics play important roles in people's body makeup."

While some people get the urge one day to take up an active sport, they often hurt themselves because they don't get in shape first. The Ladies Keep Fit class provides the necessary conditioning, according to Ms. Carnett.

"Once you get in condition, you can do anything and you're not inclined to hurt yourself."

Fitness means development of the heart, lung and blood system and using the body for which it was designed, she stated. "It leads to endurance; you can do more, feel better."

BUT IT TAKES a long time to build that endurance. Women beginning the conditioning class shouldn't get discouraged after a few sessions, she said, warning that it takes about a year before the participant can get past that tired feeling that comes at the end of the class.

For the last third of each class, women use three-pound weights in each hand to build strength and endurance, but not muscles. "You can build up faster by using the weights, but you have to be careful so you don't put too much weight on a bad joint."

But another long-range benefit of continued exercising she pointed out is better health. At 54, Ms. Carnett said, she hasn't been sick in years.

"I'm just not sick. When you're exercising, you're running your body like it was designed to do. And there's a psychological effect that you are doing something to maintain your health."

Repeating one excuse often heard from women for not exercising is that they'll mess up their hair, Ms. Carnett laughed and added, "The hair's not going to do you any good when you're an invalid."

LET'S TALK

Let's Talk. You've probably heard about changes coming to Southwestern Bell. You may have questions about those changes. If so, we want to make sure you get answers.

Q. I've heard stories about "divestiture" and the telephone company splitting up. What's happening?

A. AT&T has agreed with the Department of Justice to separate itself from the local operations of 22 Bell telephone companies. So within 18 months of when the agreement goes into effect, Southwestern Bell will become an independent company.

Q. If Southwestern Bell is "on its own"—without AT&T behind it—won't the quality of my telephone service be affected?

A. No. You can expect the same dependable service you have now. And you'll have the same dedicated people standing behind it.

Q. What will happen to my local rates? Is it true they're going to skyrocket?

A. Rates are not going to skyrocket, but they will go up. Local rates will rise because of many factors, among them inflation and changes in accounting and financial procedures. In addition, Southwestern Bell has been subsidizing local telephone service with profits from long distance and other services. In the future, local service will have to pay more of its own cost.

If you've got other questions, let's talk. Just call 1-800-555-5000 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday-Friday.

There'll be someone to talk to. Somebody to get you information.

"Of course, prices are down on cattle," the conservationist said. "I hate to start on bad news, but I know most of you know that agriculture is in sort of a bind."

Urbanization, particularly on the fringes of Midland, is encroaching on fertile farm land. Just in the past five or six years, an additional 11,000 acres have been taken over by housing developers, said Hagelstein.

"We're getting a tremendous amount of crop land being developed for housing."

While the agricultural land is being plastered by concrete, asphalt, rock, lawns and houses, the water table in the immediate Midland area "is not dropping," he said. "But in Midkiff, where they are irrigating with (many) small wells, the water table is declining." Midkiff, which is about 35 miles southeast of Midland, is over the Edwards Aquifer, while Midland is seated on the Ogallala Aquifer.

AS THE BUSES headed farther into the country, Hagelstein noted that many farmers are participating in a cutback program: They're reducing their cotton acreage by 15 percent due to the cotton surplus and in hopes of driving the depressed cotton prices upward. If not in milo sorghum, the farmers are sowing their non-cotton acreage in Sudan and other grasses, which in many cases will be plowed under to improve the soil.

"This is good. It enables farmers to get their land into something besides cotton. Couldn't in the past due to the economic situation," said Hagelstein, who relented for awhile and let Welch give the commentary.

"Once upon a time," said Welch, who heads up the Midland Chamber of Commerce's farm-and-ranch committee, "you could buy a good tractor for $2,800, sell cotton for 45 cents a pound and hire labor at $4 a day."

No more. Today, a good but far larger tractor will cost about $50,000, labor is up $50 a day and "cotton will bring about 43½ cents a pound if it's good."

The tour groups drove past the cotton fields and on to Roy Neely Jr.'s Roy-Roy Dairy operation. There, 16 workers milk about 450 Holstein cows, which daily are yielding about 29,000 pounds — 3,400 gallons — of milk per day or about 7½ gallons per cow. Top producers reach daily peaks of 15 to 18 gallons. Much of the Roy-Roy milk goes to creameries such as Gandy's Dairies and The Borden Co. Milk wholesales for about $13.10 per hundredweight or $1.13 per gallon.

CHARLIE GREEN, Midland's retired agricultural agent who joined with the Midland Chamber of Commerce in putting the tour together, noted the efficiency of the dairy.

"They don't spend anything on frills," he said. The operation is set up to "ride out the lean years, and I'll just bet he (Neely) will be a survivor."

Neely processes and sacks his own feed grain, made up of corn, whole cottonseed, cottonseed meal and hulls, beet pulp, vitamins and minerals. The dairy's annual feed requirement is about 2,500 tons of grain and 2,200 tons of New Mexico alfalfa hay. "Mr. Neely was very, very particular about his hay quality," Green said of the late Roy Neely Sr. The son is just as particular, according to Green.

Since 1981, the Roy-Roy operation has employed the embryonic transfer method in producing top-rated replacement heifers, as dairy cows peak out in from four to six years and then are shipped to the auction barn and replaced with young heifers. Fertilized eggs are transferred from "a few genetically superior" cows to other cows in the herd for development and birth. The dairy's veterinarian is Mark Steele, and Logan Hohle manages the dairy.

In a pen next to the milkers, pigeons were pecking around the lot for brunch. "First National Bank pigeons come out here to eat," quipped Barbara Larsen, who was on the outing. "They've got a direct run." The skyline of the Tall City was visible from the dairy.

"This is one of the most innovative approaches to grazing," said Hagelstein. At the center of each of the delta-shaped, eight-pasture cells is the corral, where the cattle feed and water. Cattle graze on each pasture for five days to 10 days before they are herded to another pasture, which had been "resting." The method allows the land to rest, permits grasses to be replenished, and avoids overgrazing.

The Faudree Ranch, which has been keen on Brahman and Angus cattle, is experimenting with the Longhorn in a crossbreeding program, noted Dusty Morrison, ranch foreman. The Longhorn influence allows for "ease in calving," he said.

At another stop, on the Braun Ranch, Allan McGinty, range specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, showed tour participants results of experiments in controlling mesquite.

"What we're concerned with is controlling mesquite," said McGinty. "Mesquite is the No. 1 brush problem." One of the more recent mesquite-fighters is Velpar-L, a liquid herbicide. Just a 10-cent squirt of the $40-a-gallon liquid at the base of the brush will get into the ground at the next rain and into the root system and so kill the tree.

McGINTY ALSO pointed to other mesquite-control methods: pouring diesel oil at the base of the brush, root plowing, aerial spraying, dropping of Velpar gridballs, and spraying of 2,4,5-T and other foliar sprays.

Due to the cost and varying effectiveness of mesquite control, mesquite control is most effective if done systematically. Aerial spraying costs about $15 per acre but is only 15 to 30 percent effective, he said. The diesel-oil treatment runs about $90 an acre. In Midland, root plowing costs about $50 an acre but on top of that cost is the re-seeding expense. After root plowing, said McGinty, "You're left with nothing on the ground — no grass, no seed." Velpar-L effects a 90 percent root kill at a cost of a dime per shrub. But it's quite toxic: "It'll kill everything for a year or two."

"It'll drift over, and get you some irate neighbors," he said.

Over at the Faudree ranch house, cutting and Western pleasure horses were in training. Sonny Rice of Corsicana is the Faudrees' cutting horse adviser, and Laurel Raether works with the pleasure horses.

"It's the high-dollar babies that we are trying to breed," Ms. Raether said just before she mounted a three-year gray roan mare, Wide Awake Again, which developed into a fine Western pleasure mare after Rice culled her from the cutting-horse ranks. "She's really turned out to be dynamite."

"The Faudrees are pretty much into the cutting horse industry," said Ms. Raether, who noted that she's "not good on that subject."

MS. RAETHER said she leaves the breaking in and training of steeds to the cowboys. "I don't think a woman has a place trying to manhandle a stallion."

Ms. Raether noted the chance-taking in futurity racing. "You're just taking a gamble; you're betting your horses are better than the others."

While putting the gray roan mare through her paces, she addessed the spectators: "I know it's boring (just watching her and the horse). I think it's boring, too, unless you're on her."

Just before the onlookers left the arena and went to feed on a barbecue lunch sponsored by The Midland National Bank, Ms. Raether demonstrated the obedience of the mare.

"When I say 'Whoa!', she better stop," she said and issued the command.

"Whoa!"

Wide Awake Again kept going but finally pulled to a halt.

"She didn't stop (on command). She'll get reprimanded for it." Ms. Raether got the mare moving again and issued another "Whoa!" The mare stopped.

The 450 cows on the Roy-Roy Dairy operation are milked thrice daily. The dairy's top producers average almost 100 pounds of milk per day and reach daily peaks of 15 to 18 gallons.

Ranch field day to be held Tuesday at Blackmon Ranch Headquarters

ANDREWS — Persons interested in the latest developments in range management may attend the range field day Tuesday at the Blackmon Ranch Headquarters 25 miles west of Andrews off Texas Highway 176.

The field day is co-sponsored by the Elanco Range Products, the Texas Section of the Society for Range Management, the Andrews Soil and Water Conservation District, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Andrews County Beef Cattle Committee.

The tour, which begins at 8:30 a.m., will include examples of the cell-grazing system and areas treated for control of shinnery oak.

Tour speakers will include Dub McWhorter, Blackmon Ranch general manager; Wyatt Lipscomb, Odessa-based range consultant; Mike Simpson of Elanco Range Products; Russell Pettit, Texas Tech University range-wildlife associate professor who will speak on the shinnery oak; J.R. Bell, U.S. Soil Conservation Services range specialist in Big Spring; and Dr. Allan McGinty, Texas Agricultural Extension Service range specialist.

AAM pleased by loan moratorium

WASHINGTON — The American Agriculture Movement has applauded the U.S. House of Representatives for passing a one-year moratorium on the Farmers Home Administration loans.

The legislation was a good "half-step" toward helping the economy of agriculture and thus of the nation, said Marvin Meeks, national AAM chairman.

"We are extremely pleased that the House has seen the wisdom of Rep. Ed Jones' bill and overwhelmingly approved the concept of a year's moratorium on FmHA loans," Meek said. "Those loans have been placed in jeopardy by mismanagement, misconception, and mistakes by the past Administrations and Congresses for decades.

"However," he said, "this is only half a loaf. A moratorium for one year or five years won't change the future of this country unless the farmer gets a price for his product. Without a price, all the forgiveness in the world won't turn this country around."

Meek urged the Senate to enact HR 5831. The proposal calls for a case-by-case review prior to FmHA foreclosure.

He said that government policies, bi-lateral trade agreements, unfair trade restrictions and action and inaction by Democratic and Republican administrations which have taken control of acreages, markets, prices, and even selection of crops from the farmer.

"If these are not items beyond a farmer's control, I don't know what is," Meek said. "We all love to talk about a free market, but there is no such thing and hasn't been for over a generation. The farmer has more control over the weather than he does where, when, why and for what price he can plant or market his crop. I have yet to see a farmer who could control a hail storm."

Mesquite utilization to be discussed

LUBBOCK — Ranchers who want to rid their rangeland of mesquite and making money at the same time may learn how in a Mesquite Utilization Symposium at The Museum of Texas Tech University Oct. 29-30.

"This symposium culminates five years of Texas Tech research specifically on uses for mesquite," according to Dr. Robert C. Albin, associate dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences. "In no way do we advocate growing mesquite for beneficial use. Rather, the symposium will show ways to defray the costs of cleanup and control of mesquite."

Registration for the symposium will begin at 7:45 a.m. Oct. 29. Cost of participating in the symposium is $30 and includes meals.

Area farming couple among finalists

WACO — Three farming couples, including Paul and Cindy Hopper of the Knott community near Big Spring in Howard County, are finalists in the Texas Farm Bureau's 1982 Outstanding Young Farmer and Rancher competition.

The winning couple will be honored in the TFB's state convention Nov. 28-Dec. 1 in Dallas.

The candidates are Hopper, 27, and his wife, Cindy, who farm 2,425 acres of dryland cotton; Ben Dieterich Jr., 29, and his wife, Lou Ann, who farm 1,250 acres of milo, corn and wheat in Falls County; and Roger Drewry, 29, and his wife, Peggy, who farm 1,600 acres of milo and corn in Hidalgo County.

Americans eating more pork, chicken

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are eating less beef and switching to chicken or pork as concerns about food costs and health grow, a national consumer group says.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, in a report drawn largely from government statistics, said that annual consumption of beef fell by 19 pounds, or more than 19 percent, to 78.8 pounds per person from 1976 to 1981.

At the same time, poultry consumption jumped by 10.6 pounds, or more than 20 percent, to 62.8 pounds per person.

Rising prices and declining production were partially responsible for beef's falling out of favor, said the center, but it attributed some of the drop to concern about the health effects of eating fatty red meats.

But the group said about half the beef decline was made up by increased consumption of pork. The average American ate 65 pounds of pork in 1981, up by 10 pounds, or 19 percent, from 1976.

Poultry, especially chicken, is both leaner and cheaper than red meats and this accounts for its increasing popularity, the center said. Pork is cheaper than beef.

The report was the latest installment of an extensive examination of American eating habits since 1910. The center, a non-profit group funded by membership donations and foundation grants, first published the study in 1978. It drew most of the figures from the U.S. Agriculture Department, along with some data from other federal agencies and industry.

"Americans in 1980 consumed 34 percent more fat, 43 percent less complex carbohydrates and 45 percent more refined sweeteners than their 1910 counterparts," the center said.

Some changes were a mixed blessing, the report said.

Coffee consumption dropped 18 percent since 1976, with consumption falling from 690 six-ounce cups to 567 annually. The group attributed part of this drop to uncertainty about caffeine, which has been linked to a number of adverse health conditions.

However, consumption of soft drinks, which contain lots of sugar or artificial sweeteners, shot up 25 percent in six years. Americans now drink 412 12-ounce sodas each year, or slightly more than one a day, up from 329 six years ago.

Farmers less likely to have heart trouble

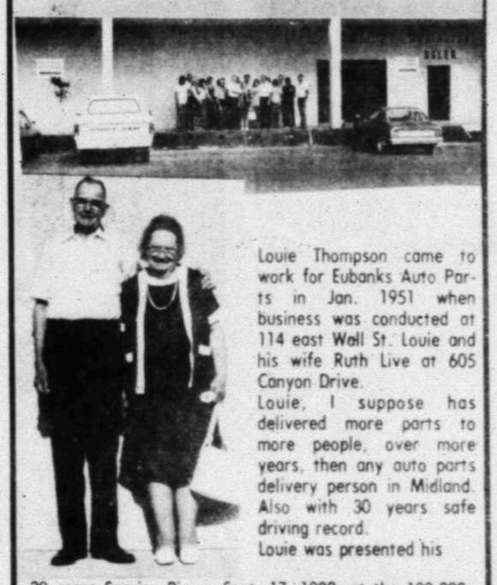
CHICAGO (AP) — Farmers are less likely to die of heart disease than other rural residents, largely because life on the farm includes more exercise and less consumption of alcohol and tobacco, a new study says.

The study, published in an early September edition of Journal of the American Medical Association, found that Iowa farmers below the age of 65 have a fatality rate for heart disease about 10 percent less than death rates for other men in the state.

Compared to other residents of rural communities, fewer farmers smoked or drank alcohol, and they got more exercise, the study said, noting these factors appeared to contribute to the reduced risk of death.

The findings supported other studies with similar results, showing "living what is called a healthy lifestyle does make a difference in real numbers," Dr. Paul Pomrehn, an author of the study, said.

100,000 AUTO PARTS



Louie Thompson came to work for Eubanks Auto Parts in Jan. 1951 when business was conducted at 114 east Wall St. Louie and his wife Ruth live at 605 Canyon Drive.

Louie, I suppose has delivered more parts to more people, over more years, then any auto parts delivery person in Midland. Also with 30 years safe driving record.

Louie was presented his 30 years Service Pin on Sept. 17, 1982; at the 100,000 Auto Parts store, while several of his fellow workers and close friends were present, with congratulations. Louie also received a Dine-out certificate. Congratulations Louie! They always say the first 30 years are the hardest.

Midland City Council will consider effluent

Midland City Council will consider a response from the Glasscock County Underground Water District concerning effluent disposal when the panel meets at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

Representatives of the district have asked to take some of the city's primary treated sewage water for irrigating farm land. The city is attempting to get a permit from the Texas Water Commission that would allow them to pump the water for irrigating land of J. "Timber" Floyd's about 15 miles southeast of the city.

At 5 p.m., the council will hold a public hearing to discuss fare increases for MidTran, the public transporation service.

And at 4 p.m., there will be a public hearing on changing traffic on Cuthbert Street between Ward and Garfield from westbound to eastbound. This means that instead of turning and going west on Cuthbert, all the traffic from that street will spill out onto Garfield.

The council will look at the proposed student housing units for Midland College and see if they conform to a specific use permit for the school.

After failing to reach a conclusion at its Sept. 14 meeting on Al McGuire's request to become a fixed base operator at Midland Air Park, the concil will attempt to reach a decision this time.

The agenda includes items on the Midland Center budget, changing a street name to Northmeadow, allowing a mural, a request from the Eagles to sponsor a carnival in Ulmer Park, a lease with the Soil Conservation District in Hogan Park, and a 1:35 p.m. public hearing on air space zoning around Midland Regional Airport.

MISD Board of Trustees

A summary of the Midland Independent School District recruiting and staffing efforts for the 1982-83 school year will be given during the regular meeting of the MISD board of trustees at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the administration building, 702 N. N St.

Trustees also will review preliminary architectural plans for the Carver Occupational Development Lab and an addition to Travis Elementary School.

The board is expected to authorize the employment of Geren Associates to design additions to elementary schools and an addition to the Lee High School band hall.

Other items on the agenda include the appointment of members to the 1982-83 textbook selection committee, the second reading on consideration of job description for supervisor of school security, consideration of a proposal to set limits for the preparation of the 1983-84 budget, bids on new vehicles and game reports.

Trustees are scheduled to meet in an executive session to discuss matters pertaining to personnel and real estate.

Lee band begins sale of turkeys

Robert E. Lee High School Band and Orchestra students will be knocking on doors and promoting a Turkey Sale, in cooperation with Safeway stores, at major locations around town beginning Monday. Money raised in the bargain bird sale will be used for the band and orchestra spring trips.

The 100 percent butter-basted 12-pound turkeys cost about $12.50 while the smoked turkeys run about $20. All are Grade A young hens and come with a pop-up turner.

Although the sale ends Oct. 22, pick-up dates will be Nov. 13-14 and Dec. 11-12 at the Westwood Village Safeway parking lot, corner of Illinois Avenue and Midland Drive. Large-quanity orders for holiday gifts for employees are welcome.

To order the turkeys, contact any LHS band or orchestra student, or call 697-5997.

Pupil's 'lofty goal' seems to pay off

When first grader Tim Arnold pledged to enrich his mind, he never dreamed it would also improve his financial status.

Tim and 519 other Long Elementary School students launched balloons at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 15 to signify the beginning of this year's personal reading program.

Attached to his balloon was a card that identified Tim, asked the finder to contact him and, sparked by the way his balloon climbed, explained the lofty goal he had set of reading 92 books by May 1983.

A week after the launching, Tim received some strong encouragement as well as a $5 bill by mail. Apparently Ted Gentry of Lubbock found the remains of the balloon Sept. 18 while on the playground of the R.C. Martin Elementary School in Lubbock, "with my golf clubs brushing up on my swing and picked up your card after ignoring it on two passes by it.

"I admire your courage and want you to always feel that you can reach any goal you set," Gentry wrote.

At the end of his letter, Gentry pointed out several coincidences, including the balloon traveled from one elementary school to another, from address 4300 to 3300 and from zip code 79703 to 79403.

Gentry will get a thank you note from Long principal Clinton Adams, and probably one from Tim Arnold as well.

Medicare insurance can provide supplies

ODESSA — Medicare medical insurance can help pay for a variety of services and supplies, a Social Security spokesperson said recently.

For example, medical insurance can pay for diagnostic tests performed by independent laboratories if the laboratory is certified by Medicare for the particular service.

Medical insurance can also help pay for transportation by ambulance if the ambulance, equipment and personnel meet Medicare standards and if transportation by ambulance is necessary for the patient's health. Medical insurance cannot pay for transportation by ambulance between the patient's home and a doctor's office.

Prosthetic devices and medical equipment may also be covered under Medicare. Medical insurance will help pay for such devices as cardiac pacemakers and the corrective lenses needed after a cataract operation or for braces or artificial limbs.

However, the cost of dentures is not covered.

And medical insurance will help pay for equipment such as wheelchairs, home dialysis systems and other equipment prescribed by a doctor for home use.

Additional information about Medicare-covered services may be obtained from the Social Security Office, 516 Interfirst Bank Building, 700 N. Grant St., Odessa, Texas 79761. Telephone 1-332-9423.

Aerobatic pilot still climbing toward his high-flying goal

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

And his progressive climb toward the ultimate in flying and in his brand of freedom is in aerobatic flying. To date, Beggs, 39, has earned two national aerobatic championships — the intermediate in 1978 and the advanced in 1979 — and next Oct. 4 in Sherman he is intent on winning and prepared to win the unlimited category in aerobatic flying. Unlimited is comparable to the Olympics's gold medal. "It's the top of the heap," said Beggs.

"That airplane will win the national championship if I do my part," Beggs said of his red bi-wing, 200-horsepower Pitts Special S-1T.

"The Pitts has literally dominated the sport of aeorbatics, since it came out in about 1947." The original Pitts, which was powered by an 85-hp engine and which featured a fixed-pitch propeller, today is powered by the 200hp engine and a constant-speed propeller and zips along at 200mph and beyond. Beggs decided to buy the new Pitts after he had test flown the new model at the Pitts's factory at Afton, Wyo., last-year.

Beggs' previous championship wins were in his home-built, 180-hp Pitts Special S-1S, which he built in the mid-1970s and which last year won the Wright Brothers trophy for the best Pitts in the country. The airplane, like Beggs himself, has won several national and regional awards. Today, Beggs estimates that between 300 and 350 of the Pitts biplanes are flying.

Aerobatic pilot Gene Beggs is primed to win the U.S. Nationals in the unlimited — the ultimate — category in aerobatic competition Oct. 4 in Sherman.

"IN UNLIMITED competition," said Beggs, an Odessan who owns and operates Beggs Aviation, a flight school at Midland Regional Airport, "eight out of 10 (airplanes) will be the Pitts Special. The Pitts Special literally has dominated unlimited competition this past year."

Beggs will be competing for the national unlimited aerobatic title, sanctioned by the International Aerobatic Club, at Sherman only in the wake of his runner-up finish for IAC champion this year at Fond duc Lac, Wisc. He missed the club championship by a gossamer's thread — 35 points out of 18,000.

Taking the unlimited win at the IAC air show was Jim Rossi, 45, an American Airlines pilot, who, like Beggs, was flying the Pitts.

"I'm not discouraged in any way," Beggs said. "I'm more determined than ever to win the national championship. It's something I set out to do a long time ago, and it's something I've got to do."

BEGGS' NEXT next "immediate goal" is to earn a place on the U.S. World Aerobatic Team in 1984. "I'm very confident I can do that.

"I set out a long time ago in my aviation career to reach the top. It's rewarding. At times, I sense utter frustration, and at other times I experience sheer ecstasy when I've won the nationals. It's taking a little longer than I anticipated, but I'm convinced I can reach the top."

Though his interest in flying was whetted at age 4, Beggs didn't start flying until he was 25. He was born in Wichita Falls in 1943 and grew up in Odessa.

"I always wanted to fly from the time I was 4 years old, and it was then when I began to notice airplanes."

His father bought him balsa-wood kits for making rubberband-powered airplanes. From there, he eventually graduated into radio-controlled airplanes and learned aerodynamic theories and skills which enabled him to build the Pitts in the mid-1970s. "That (model building) was a real good learning experience and good preparation."

AFTER FINALLY making enough money by working in an M-System supermarket to finance his flying, Beggs soloed in his 1946 Taylorcraft, a high-wing tail-dragger, in November 1968 — two weeks after he first started taking flying lessons from Doug Stelter. In two months, he earned his private pilot's license.

Since then, Beggs has logged 13,000 hours as the pilot in command, opened his pilot-training school at Midland Regional Airport in 1973, is qualified as private pilot examiner, commercial and instrument ratings examiner, flight instructor examiner and is an airline transport flight instructor. "I'm qualified to fly any of the single light to medium multi-engine airplanes."

He has logged 10,000 hours as a fight instructor. "I feel like this qualifies me as the highest time flight instructor in the Permian Basin."

In leading up to the national finals, Beggs flies aerobatics regularly and uses as his mentor and critic Midland's Mike Sharp, who is a championship aerobatic pilot. Sharp flies a clipped-wing 1946 Taylorcraft.

"Mike has been my coach and critic," said Beggs. "Actually, I taught Mike his basic aerobatics in 1978. He's been a very valuable asset to me."

In turn, Beggs is Sharp's mentor and critic, and, like Beggs, Mike will be flying his airplane in the National Finals at Sherman. Sharp, who already has won the sportsman championship, will be going for the intermediate championship in his T-craft.

"THE UNLIMITED category is very strenuous physically," said Beggs, who keeps fits so that he can match the performance of his Pitts Special. In the various loops, rolls and spins turns, the Pitts, like the pilot, regularly undergoes a force of six positive and negative Gs; the Pitts is stressed for up to nine Gs.

In his free-style maneuver in unlimited competition, Beggs does "Andy's Loop," an eight-sided loop with half rolls, which was conceived by Sharp's 14-year-old son. "It's an original maneuver and to our knowledge, it has never been done by another. It takes an extremely powerful airplane to begin to perform that maneuver and a lot of practice, I guess."

Just as Antoine de Saint-Exupery, the great French aviator who brought flight and flying into literature, and Richard Bach, the American writer who equates flying with freedom, Beggs sees a "progression in aviation."

"To me, aerobatics is the ultimate form of flying. It enables you to express yourself and to experience freedom in ways others do in gymnastics, dancing, figure-skating, writing poetry, painting. To me, aerobatics is my way of expressing myself, and it's a way of showing what my mind has learned to do with the airplane. It's a form of aerial ballet."

Big Spring State Park: It's the 'high point' of recreation in neighboring Howard County

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING STATE PARK — They came here and left their marks, a century of settlers, passersby and picnickers who found in the limestone a ready recipient for their names and drawings.

Today, under the scrutinization of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, their century-old graffiti bears testimony to the feeble attempts of man at immortality.

Here, the visitor of 1982 can take a stroll through the past along limestone bedrock bearing the signatures of persons long dead. And, although state law prohibits it, some cannot but keep from adding their own names beside, perhaps in the hope that another century would see a bit of themselves still perserved.

"It seemed like everybody that came through here would carve their names on the hill," said park manager Charles Gray. "There's dates back in the 1880s."

Several of the drawings are so unusual that all sorts of wild speculation surround their origin. Although one supposed authority examined the scrawlings several years ago and opined that all were made in the past 100 years and not by Indians, the strange resemblance of one drawing known as the "Medicine Man" to an ancient Spanish mark has led some persons to wonder if it were left by Coronado.

"One woman here in town has a copy of Coronado's mark," said Gray. "(The Medicine Man) resembles it to a great extent. It looks a whole lot older than the rest of (the drawings). It's possible that the name Medicine Man meant that it could be a mark the Indians made. It might have not been made with metal tools."

Big Spring State Park was developed by the Civilian Conservation Corps in the early 1930s after the City of Big Spring donated 344 acres atop Scenic Mountain to the state in 1926. Virtually all structures in the present park were constructed by the CCC, possibly from limestone taken from a quarry in the mountain. With the closure of Webb Air Force Base in 1979, the park received 38 additional acres, making its present size 382 acres.

"It has been used ever since there was a settlement here," noted Gray. "This is where they had their Sunday picnic.... They'd ride their horses up here, have their picnic, and write their names in the rock."

Local speculation abounds concerning the drawings, which include supposed treasure marks, some of which "have not been explained," said Gray.

Another unexplained feature of the park is "the cave," neither promoted by the state nor open for public display.

"I've heard a thousand different stories: that it's a natural cavern...or a mining venture, even by the Spanish," said Gray. "Of course, everybody thinks there's gold down there."

The cave, which is kept locked by a steel cover, consists of a single shaft, 40-60 feet deep and 4-6 feet in diameter. At one time it was almost filled to the top with caliche and tin cans — perhaps done by the CCC — but excavation by volunteers and scout groups over the years has revealed jagged, sheer rock walls extending in three levels down into the mountain.

"The department thinks there might be a slight possibility that it was a cavern, but not enough to drill holes all over the hill," said Gray. "They didn't feel like there was very much of a possiblity it would be of interest."

What has been of interest to the 130,000 who enter the park at 50 cents per vehicle annually are the drawings, a prairie dog town, consisting of 25-30 animals, a quarter-mile nature trail, site of a legendary "Spanish soldier's grave," and a 2.4-mile scenic drive.

Open for day use only from 8 a.m.-8 p.m. beginning in October, the park also sports picnic sites and ample opportunities for walkers and joggers to strengthen their cardiovascular systems.

Lacking the scenic qualities of Perdenales State Park or the recreational opportunities of Garner State Park, this expanse atop scenic mountain still finds its own niche in the hearts of those who trod it.

"It's kind of a place that's real nice for the people of the area to come up and get away from things," said Gray.

Michael Brown of Midland studies for one of his Angelo State University courses through tapes provided by the Midland Tape Lending Library, a United Way agency. Brown is a victim of osteopretosis and is almost blind but, with the help of the Tape Lending Library and other voluntary agencies, he has accomplished much in his 21 years.

With UW, he 'lives up to potential'

Michael Brown has needed the United Way and many other types of voluntary assistance all his life. The articulate young man is almost blind and fights a constant battle against infection, anemia and broken bones as a result of the disease he's outdistanced so far.

For the first 19 years of his life, Michael's doctors predicted annually that he wouldn't live until Christmas. His leukemia-like symptoms meant he needed a blood transfusion every three weeks just to stay alive. In addition, Michael has developed osteomyelitis in his jaw. But he knows his situation could be a lot worse. No other known victim of osteopretosis has lived past age 11, and Michael has rounded the corner on 21.

United Way of Midland

What has made the difference in Michael's case? His doctors don't offer a scientific conclusion, said his mother, Naomi Brown. But some combination of factors has made Michael a textbook case.

Michael's mother says voluntary services too have played a major role in Michael's life. Not only have volunteers eased his many hospital stays, but voluntary groups in California, where the family lived until 1½ years ago, provided him with a Braille writer and a large type typewriter. And, after the Browns moved to Midland, the Tape Lending Library, a United Way agency, helped Michael with pre-college testing and continues to provide tape recordings of textbooks he can't obtain through the Angelo State University library.

Michael often uses phrases such as "living up to my potential" as if he had no handicap at all. He says the handicap, in fact, is in other people's perception of him rather than in the way he sees himself.

Despite repeated hospital stays and gloomy predictions of his future, Michael and his parents, William and Naomi Brown, decided he should attend public school in California where they lived when Michael was a child. He not only attended regular classes, but graduated from high school with a 3.8 average.

Before his family moved to Midland, Michael completed eight hours of college work. He also has worked as a receptionist for an asphalt paving equipment firm and as a switchboard operator. But his determination to go into counseling or rehabilitation work directed him back toward college.

After several weeks of vocational testing by the State Commission for the Blind in Austin, Michael was referred to the Tape Lending Library in Midland for further assistance. Library Director Betty Flora and the agency's volunteers began early this summer to help Michael complete the testing necesary to receive advance placement credit when he entered college.

Vic Rogers, who has volunteered at the Tape Lending Library for more than 11 years, was allowed to assist Michael by reading the test questions to him and recording Michael's answers. The pair finished the history examination in only 15 minutes more than the prescribed testing time, and as a result of his performance, Michael received advanced standing in history.

He subsequently was accepted by Angelo State and received sufficient grant funds to enable him to attend classes there this fall. Michael said he prefers not to use readers which might be available to him on campus, as "the responsibility (for covering class material) is mine and no one else's." He explained he also has found tape recordings of class sessions are difficult to use as refresher material, because he must start and stop the tape so many times to find the section he needs. As a result, he has come to rely on his memory of lectures as his primary method of study.

When Michael needs outside material that is not already on tape, the Tape Lending Library records it for him. This fall, Michael has requested a Spanish text be taped, and Mrs. Flora said the Library already has assigned a volunteer the job of recording the book for him.

What has made the difference in Michael's case? The doctors may not have an answer, but meeting Michael and hearing him talk about the care and love he has grown up knowing say it all. He's just living up to his potential.

Tiger offense has trouble with Texas' D

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Flanker Herkie Walls raced 80 yards on an end around and a striking defense led by linebacker Jeff Leiding scored another touchdown and shutout Missouri's potent offense Saturday night as No. 17 Texas grabbed a 21-0 intersectional victory.

Both quarterbacks, Robert Brewer of Texas and Marlin Adler of Missouri, were sacked repeatedly by blitzing defenders.

Texas got two big offensive plays, however, and they were enough to extend Texas' record to 2-0 before 76,438 spectators.

Walls, a 154-pounder who is a sprinter on the Texas track team, took a reverse handoff and streaked 80 yards untouched for Texas' first touchdown with 3:36 remaining in the first quarter. Split end Brent Duhon had a clearing block on Walls' run.

Texas' swarming defense controlled Missouri's offense, which ranked third nationally, and forced a punt to the Texas 49 at the end of the third quarter.

Brewer, who was intercepted three times, lofted a 30-yard pass to Duhon at the Missouri 11. John Walker ran wide to the right for eight yards and a score on second down.

Missouri, 2-1, never got closer to the Texas goal than the 14, and with 2:30 remaining Longhorn defenders chased Adler into the end zone, stripped him of the ball and defensive end Ed Williams recovered for Texas' final touchdown.

Duhon's catch setting up Texas' second touchdown and the fierce pass rush on Adler saved Texas Coach Fred Akers from a possible costly decision in the third quarter.

After Raul Allegre had kicked a 45-yard field goal for an apparent 10-0 Texas lead, Akers elected to accept a 14-yard penalty for Missouri having 12 players on the field, rather than the field goal.

The penalty pushed the ball to the Missouri 14, but on first down Brewer's pass for Duhon was tipped and intercepted by Missouri linebacker Ken Harlan.

ONCE AGAIN the Texas defense refused to yield and Missouri punted on fourth down.

The touchdown by Williams was set up when several Longhorn defenders chased Adler into the end zone, and defensive tackle John Hanes, a 265-pounder who was demoted to second team in practice this week, knocked the ball out of Adler's hands.

Missouri had two big first-half plays as Adler hit tight end Andy Gibler on a short toss, and he tore loose from two tacklers for a 65-yard gain before cornerback-sprinter Fred Acorn ran him down at the Texas 32.

Later, a 29-yard Adler to Gibler pass carried to the Missouri 49, but cornerback Mossy Cade jarred the ball loose and freshman safety Richard Peavy made the first of his two fumble recoveries for Texas.

Missouri, which was averaging 520 yards-a-game in victories over Colorado State and Army, had only 204 yards against Texas. The victory raised Texas' overall record against Missouri to 8-4. In the last meeting between the two teams in Columbia, Mo., in 1979, Texas also shutout the Tigers 21-0.

Missed two-pointer saves Baylor, 24-23

Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Grant Teaff said his 100th victory as Baylor football coach, "felt more like my 100th birthday," after the Bears foiled a two-point conversion attempt by Texas Tech in the final seconds to salvage a 24-23 victory here Saturday night.

Texas Tech, a 6-point underdog, looked that and more in the first half as Baylor methodically rolled up a 17-3 intermission lead.

The second half was all Tech as the Raiders left 46,049 Jones Stadium faithful limp. Only a 61-yard interception return by Jeff Gandy, a three-letter middle linebacker from San Antonio, in the third quarter and a laborious drive that consumed eight minutes of the final period kept the Raiders at bay.

Tech quarterback Jim Hart, who completed 12 of 20 passes for 98 yards, skittered 17 yards with 43 seconds left to wrap up a 67-yard drive that began with 4:30 left and inched Tech to within one point of the Bears.

"They shifted to the side we wanted to go and Charles Denson (Baylor defensive end) played the outside well, but I was able to cut it inside. After I made my cut, I was surprised at how open it was," Hart described his touchdown.

There was no question of a tie. Tech wanted two and the big victory. A relieved Teaff analyzed, "We flushed him (Hart) out of the pocket. He had a man open temporarily, but he couldn't throw, because he couldn't see him. I think it was our pressure rather than any mistake in their execution that kept them from scoring."

Tech drove 80 yards in the third quarter with Leonard Harris, an exciting 5-foot-8 scooter from McKinney, taking a deep reverse and racing 33 yards for the touchdown behind path clearing blocks by tight end Buzz Tatom and Hart. That left Tech behind 17-10 with seven minutes left in the third period.

The Raiders, moments later, were driving at the Baylor 42 when Gandy picked off a deflected pass and returned it 61 yards for what amounted to Baylor's only offensive production of the third period.

It was good enough to beat everybody to the goal line. "I know what to do with the ball when I get it. I was a tight end in high school, but I don't know what my speed for 40 yards is. I haven't been timed since then."

Tech refused to buckle and came back with a 75-yard drive on which Anthony Hutchinson covered the final 20 yards on the first play of the final quarter. That narrowed Baylor's lead to seven, 24-17.

When Baylor drove from its 15 to the Tech 35, winding the clock down some 12:33 to 4:30, it looked like Tech wouldn't have enough time. Still, the Raiders marched 66 yards in 12 plays, all but two on the ground.

The Bears struck again with 8:26 left in the half on a one-yard sneak by Allen Rice. This came after a hike of 67 yards in eight plays, following a seven-yard punt by Dennis Vance.

The field goal that made it 17-3 at intermission came with 3:24 to go from 34 yards out by Marty Jimmerson. The drive covered 56 yards in nine plays and came after Vic Vines' interception of a Hart pass.

The win gives Baylor a 2-1 record after the SWC opener while Tech slipped to 1-2.

Edwards' four TD's helps Northwestern end streak

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Ricky Edwards raced for 177 yards in 29 carries and scored four touchdowns and quarterback Sandy Schwab completed 16 of 28 passes for 212 yards and two touchdowns as Northwestern snapped its record losing streak at 34 games Saturday with a 31-6 non-conference victory over Northern Illinois.

Edwards, a senior, tied a school mark with the four scores, which also were the first touchdowns of his career. He caught a 20-yard pass from Schwab in the opening quarter and then scored on runs of 2, 1 and 80 yards, in tying the school record held by Otto Graham and Mike Adamle.

The scoreboard flashed "Sweet!!!," "Euphoria!!" and "Goodbye Streak!!" in the closing moments as a large number of the 22,078 fans stormed on the field with 30 seconds left to play and tore down the north goal post. When the final gun sounded, the goal post collapsed and they carried it to the Northwestern bench.

NORTHWESTERN SCORED on its first three possessions in winning its first game since it defeated Wyoming 27-22 in September 1979. The Wildcats surpassed the record losing skein of 28 games held jointly by Virginia and Kansas State.

Edwards' first touchdown came on the Wildcats' first possession, following an interception by linebacker Alex Moyer at Northern's 25-yard line. In that drive, Schwab completed all four of his passes and capped the 75-yard, 13-play drive with a quick flare to Edwards.

It was the Wildcats' first lead since they led Wisconsin in the first quarter of the final game of the 1980 season.

Schwab again completed all four of his passes for 58 yards in the Wildcats' second scoring drive. After marching to the Northern Illinois 4-yard line, Edwards ran twice for 2 yards, striking paydirt at 13:27 of the second quarter.

TCU gives SMU scare before falling 16-13 in SWC play

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Unbeaten and No. 6 ranked Southern Methodist rallied from a touchdown deficit behind All-American tailback Eric Dickerson's slashing runs Saturday night to subdue tenacious Texas Christian 16-13 in a bruising Southwest Conference opener.

Placekicker Jeff Harrell's 19-yard field goal with 9:31 left after Dickerson had run 5 yards for a touchdown finally put away the scrappy Horned Frogs, who have now lost 11 consecutive games to the Mustangs.

TCU, 1-2, trailed 6-3 at halftime but scored 10 third quarter points for a 13-6 lead.

Ken Ozee booted a 49-yard field goal to tie the game 6-6 and Mike Flynn recovered Blane Smith's fumble to setup Reuben Jones' 4-yard touchdown run.

Then Dickerson, who rushed for 160 yards on 27 carries, starred in an 84 yard drive in which he picked up 58 yards himself, scoring from 5 yards out.

The extra point tied the game 13-13. On TCU's next possession, J.C. Morris fumbled and Gary Moten recovered at the Horned Frog 30 to put Harrell in position for his chip shot field goal.

SMU IS now 3-0 for the year and tied for the lead atop the SWC standngs.

Craig James, who shares tailback duties with Dickerson, rushed for 122 yards on 22 carries as the Mustangs finally worn down the outmanned Horned Frogs, who were 22-point underdogs.

The Horned Frogs jumped to a 3-0 lead in the second quarter on freshman Ken Ozee's 34-yard field goal after a bristling goalline stand.

SMU's Gary Smith had recovered a Dwayne May fumble on the TCU 8 yard line but the Horned Frogs held and Jeff Harrell missed 34-yard field goal attempt.

TCU then charged to the Mustang 13-yard line helped along by a 26-yard Reuben Jones run and a 10-yard Jones to Stanley Washington pass.

The Mustangs cashed in the next time TCU fumled. Keneth Davis fumbled and safety Wes Hopkins claimed the ball for the Mustangs at the SMU 27.

With quarterback Lance McIlhenny making adroit use of the option, the Mustangs rolled 67 yards in 12 plays with All-American Eric Dickerson slashing the final 7 steps for the touchdwn.

THE GAME was a costly on to both sides. TCU sophomore linebacker Gary Spann suffered a broken ankle, and offensive tackle Keith Hall hurt a knee. SMU lineman Mitch Willis bruised a shoulder.

The win gave the Mustangs their 18th consecutive conference opening victory and moved the alltime series record to 30-28-7. The Horned Frogs have not won an SWC game since 1964. the Horned Frogs their

Razorback defense stops tying attempt

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Quarterback Brad Taylor, making his first start of the season, ran for one touchdown and threw for another and ninth-ranked Arkansas hung on to beat Mississippi 14-12 Saturday night.

Because Arkansas was penalized 15 yards for having 12 players on the field, Todd Gatlin got an opportunity to kick a 48-yard field goal on the final play of the game, but the kick was wide right.

Taylor, a sophomore, scored on third-and-goal from the 3 and completed a 13-yard scoring pass to Eddie White on third-and-9. Taylor, after being knocked wobbly, came back in the game for Arkansas' final possession and hit two passes for 23 yards as the Razorbacks made two important first downs.

Houston 48, Lamar 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Lionel Wilson lobbed a 20-yard touchdown pass and keyed three other scoring drives with long throws to lead the University of Houston past the Lamar Cardinals 48-3.

Tight end Carl Hilton ran under Wilson's toss deep in the end zone to cap a two-play, 25-yard drive in the third quarter.

Wilson's throws of 52 yards to split end Milton Watson and 53 yards to flanker David Roberson were followed by scoring runs of one and 20 yards by running back Dallas Wiggins in the second quarter.

Texas A&M 38, Louisiana Tech 27

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M quarterback Gary Kubiak passed for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth to win a scoring duel with Louisiana Tech's Matt Dunigan Saturday night and lead the Aggies to a 38-27 victory, their second consecutive runaway triumph.

Kubiak connected on first-half touchdown shots of 14 yards to Thomas Sanders and 20 yards to Tommy Sugg and ran two yards for another score as the Aggies rolled up a 31-14 halftime lead.

Dunigan, who became the No. 2 all-time school passer behind former Tech quarterback Terry Bradshaw, had TD passes of 12 yards to Ronnie Williams, five yards to Austin Kattenbraker in the first half and 77 yards to Mike Sherman late in the third quarter.

Kubiak came back early in the fourth period with a 73-yard touchdown pass to Jimmy Williams as the Aggies ran their record to 2-1

Louisiana St. 52, Rice 13

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Senior quarterback Alan Risher threw for three touchdowns — two to freshman standout Dalton Hilliard — and ran for a fourth Saturday night at Louisiana State whipped winless Rice 52-13 in a non-conference college football game.

LSU, 2-0, broke the game open with 17 points in a little more than five minutes early in the second quarter to jump to 31-0 lead. Losing to a Louisiana team for the third straight week, Rice fell to 0-3.

Risher threw touchdown passes of 16 and 18 yards to tailback Hilliard and flipped an 18-yard scoring pass to freshman backup tailback Garry James. He finished 17 of 29 for 202 yards passing.

Penn State upsets Nebraska, 27-24

The Nittany Lions marched 80 yards on 10 plays after falling behind 24-21 on a 1-yard touchdown plunge by Nebraska quarterback Turner Gill with 1:18 to play, capping a 13-play, 80-yard Cornhuskers' drive.

Blackledge hit Skeeter Nichols with on a 15-yard screen pass to midfield.

On second down, he connected with flanker Kenny Jackson for 17 and another first down at the Nebraska 33.

Faced with a fourth-and-11 situation, Blackledge again hit Jackson for a first down at the Cornhusker 23. The quarterback ran for 5 yards, passed 16 to Mike McCloskey for a first down at the 2-yard line.

UCLA rallies to beat Michigan, 31-27

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — UCLA, behind the deadly passing of quarterback Tom Ramsey, roared back from a 21-0 deficit to defeat Michigan 31-27 in a non-conference football battle Saturday.

Ramsey completed 22 of 36 passes for 311 yards, including touchdown tosses of 46 and 6 yards to keep the 12th-ranked Bruins undefeated after three games, while No. 20 Michigan dropped to 1-2.

UCLA's go-ahead touchdown in the third quarter was set up by a 65-yard kickoff return by Dokie Williams to the Michigan 35 following a 48-yard Ali Haji-Sheikh field goal that had put the Wolverines on top 27-21.

The Bruins moved in to score on six plays with fullback Kevin Nelson slanting over the final 2 yards for the touchdown and John Lee's conversion put UCLA ahead 28-27 for the first time.

Trailing 21-0 in the second quarter, Ramsey hooked up with Williams for a 46-yard touchdown pass play with 4:34 remaining, then plunged 1-yard himself a couple of minutes later.

Ramsey tossed a 6-yard TD strike to tailback Jojo Townsell early in the third quarter following an interception — one of three by the Bruins' defense — and Lee added a 26-yard insurance field goal in the fourth quarter.

USC 12, Oklahoma 0

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Southern California, buoyed by a back-breaking touchdown pass from flanker Timmy White to split end Jeff Simmons and a rugged defense, ended Oklahoma's NCAA record of 181 games without a shutout Saturday, topping the Sooners 12-0 in college football.

The 18th-ranked Trojans, who got their first points on a 1-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Sean Salisbury to fullback John Kamana, repeatedly stopped Oklahoma drives, including a last-ditch effort in the fourth quarter that ended on the Southern Cal 3.

White's second quarter pass came on a reverse when he hit Simmons on a 67-yard scoring play down the right sideline.

Southern Cal, 2-1 for the season, in beating Oklahoma claimed the nation's longest scoring streak of 168 consecutive games.

The last time Oklahoma, now 1-2 and entering Big Eight Conference action next week, failed to score was in 1966 when Notre Dame beat the Sooners 38-0.

The Trojan defense was lifted by a pair of interceptions, one in the second quarter by Joey Browner and another in the final period by Darrel Hopper.

The first interception was immediately followed by White's deep pass to Simmons for a touchdown.

Oklahoma, number five in the nation with an average of 342 yards per game in rushing, was held to just 43 yards by the Trojan defense and 168 yards in the air. The Sooners had just 18 yards rushing in the first half.

Stanford 23, Ohio State 20

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback John Elway's passing led Stanford 80 yards in the final moments Saturday, giving the Cardinals a 23-20 nationally televised college football upset of 13th ranked Ohio State.

Elway, the total yardage leader in major college ranks this week, connected on four of six passes in the 1:38 after the Cardinals had intercepted Ohio State's Mike Tomczak in their own end zone.

Ohio Stadium's largest crowd ever of 89,436 fans sat stunned as Ohio State appeared headed for a victory when the Buckeyes scored midway through the final quarter.

Arizona St. 15, California 0

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Jimmy Williams and Mario Montgomery made key defensive plays and Todd Hons threw a 43-yard touchdown pass during a 12-point second quarter, pacing the 14th-ranked Arizona State Sun Devils to a 15-0 Pacific-10 football victory over California Saturday.

Arizona State, 2-0 in the conference and 4-0 overall, has allowed only two touchdowns this season. Linebacker Vernon Maxwell and safety Paul Moyer, with four sacks apiece, led a hard rush on Cal quarterbacks.

Cal's offense never reached the ASU 35-yard line. The Bears, playing their first Pac-10 game under Coach Joe Kapp, dropped to 2-1 for the season.

Washington 37, Oregon 21

SEATTLE (AP) — Sterling Hinds ran for three touchdowns, two of them in the fourth quarter, and No. 1-ranked Washington struggled from behind twice to defeat winless Oregon 37-21 in a Pacific 10 Conference football game Saturday.

Hinds capped a 76-yard, 10-play drive early in the fourth quarter to put Washington in front for good with a 14-yard touchdown run after the Ducks had moved ahead on a 22-yard run by Terrance Jones.

Oregon reserve quarterback Kevin Lusk, who had led the Ducks from a 17-7 deficit to a 21-17 lead early in the fourth period, then threw passes that were intercepted by Chris O'Connor and Mark Stewart.

The Huskies cashed in the interceptions with a 3-yard touchdown run by Hinds after an eight-play, 27-yard drive and a 27-yard field goal by Chuck Nelson.

The Ducks, who had not scored a touchdown from scrimmage in three earlier losses this season, shocked the Huskies by taking the opening kickoff and driving 80 yards in 10 plays for a 7-0 lead.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Junior quarterback John Lastinger passed for two touchdowns and ran for another Saturday night leading the seventh-ranked Georgia Bulldogs to a 34-18 college football victory over South Carolina.

The Gamecocks were able to contain Heisman candidate Herschel Walker in the first half to 33 yards on 15 attempts, but Lastinger ran one yard for Georgia's first touchdown early in the second quarter.

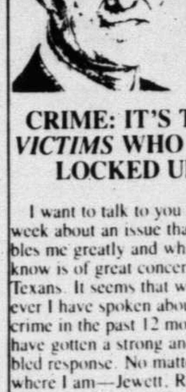
Gophers bury WSU, 41-11

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota quarterback Mike Hohensee passed for 281 yards and two touchdowns as the Gophers trounced Washington State 41-11 Saturday night in a non-conference college football game.

Hohensee completed 20 of 31 passes as the Gophers boosted their record to 3-0. Washington State fell to 1-2. Running back Valdez Baylor, playing for the injured Tony Hunter, rushed for 59 yards and two touchdowns.



Strake Talk

CRIME: IT'S THE VICTIMS WHO ARE LOCKED UP

I want to talk to you this week about an issue that troubles me greatly and which I know is of great concern to Texans. It seems that whenever I have spoken about crime in the past 12 months I have gotten a strong and troubled response. No matter where I am—Jewett, Roma or Dalhart—people tell me they are angry and afraid about crime in our state.

This anger and fear concerns me for two reasons. First, because this kind of anger and fear serves as a sort of "jail" for innocent people. They are the ones locked in their homes at night while criminals go free. The second reason I am concerned is because unless something is done to stop the crime epidemic, people will be ripe for the kind of politician who will play on citizens' fears. The result could be that Texans lose their liberty in return for their "safety". In that sense, the crime problem is like a cancer gnawing at democracy.

The incumbent Lt. Governor's response to the crime issue has been shameful. While he has been in office the crime rate has risen 131%. He has done nothing to attack crime in a substantial way. In fact, he has fought stronger anti-crime measures. He openly opposed the new wiretapping law designed to catch drug dealers. He openly opposed the Governor's anti-crime package by putting it in a legislative committee run by a hostile Senator, who promptly bottled it up. Much of the package passed anyway and now Mr. Hobby has the gall to go around the state taking credit for it!

His sympathies in the fight against crime are evident. Not long ago he allowed the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) to hold a fundraiser in his Houston mansion and he proudly defends it. The ACLU has consistently opposed laws that would make it easier to deal with the crime problem.

I think such two-faced maneuvering is disgraceful. It is obvious that if we are going to attack the crime problem, if we are ever going to give law officers, judges and prison guards the tools they need to make us safer, Bill Hobby will have to go.

If you have thoughts about this, I'd like to hear from you. Please write me at 1213 W. 34th, Austin, 78705.

'Bama escapes Vanderbilt rally, 24-21

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Craig Turner scored two touchdowns to lead fourth-ranked Alabama to a 24-21 Southeastern Conference victory over Vanderbilt Saturday, but the Crimson Tide had to fight for its life to turn back a second half rally.

Alabama, now 3-0, and 2-0 in SEC play, held a 24-7 halftime lead and seemed on the way to its third rout before Vandy's second string quarterback, Kurt Page, tossed to Allama Matthews for two third quarter scores to put the Commodores within 3 points.

Miami-Florida 25, Michigan State 22

MIAMI (AP) — Senior running back Mark Rush, who fumbled twice to set up Michigan State scores, dived 1 yard for a touchdown with 1:04 remaining Saturday night to lift 16th-ranked Miami of Florida to a 25-22 college football victory over the Spartans.

Rush's dive, on fourth down, capped a nine-play, 41-yard drive engineered by senior quarterback Mark Richt. The winning score came five minutes after Michigan State had staged a goal-line stand that denied the Hurricanes a go-ahead touchdown.

The victory was Miami's 15th in 16 games at home under Coach Howard Schnellenberger and boosted the Hurricanes' record to 3-1. Michigan State is 0-3.

Maryland 23, North Carolina St 6

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Boomer Esiason's touchdown pass launched a 17-point spurt in the opening 3:38 of the second quarter, and Maryland rolled to a 23-6 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State Saturday.

It was the home opener for the Terps, following narrow losses to nationally-ranked Penn State and West Virginia. State, which had won its first three games at home, lost for the sixth straight time at Maryland.

Esiason passed for 183 yards and Willie Joyner rushed for 111 in Maryland's ACC opener. State, now 1-1, scored on Larmount Lawson's one-yard run with 6:33 left.

North Carolina 62, Army 8

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Ethan Horton and Tyrone Anthony scored two touchdowns each as No. 11 North Carolina whipped Army 62-8 Saturday in college football, but the Tar Heels lost the services of quarterback Rod Elkins.

Elkins had completed 12 of 16 passes for 176 yards before tearing cartilage in his left knee midway through the second quarter. It was the same knee he injured two years ago.

Florida 27, Mississippi State 17

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lorenzo Hampton scored three times in the fourth period — a pair of 2-yard dives plus a 69-yard run — as fifth-ranked Florida came alive after a sputtering first half and defeated Mississippi State 27-17 Saturday in the Southeastern Conference opener for both teams.

It was the third victory of the season for the unbeaten Gators, while Mississippi State lost for the first time in four games.

Florida managed only 113 yards offensively in the first half, and trailed 3-0 on a 37-yard field goal by Dana Moore late in the first period. But quarterback Wayne Peace got the offense on track in the third quarter and the Gators had things all their own way thereafter.

Duke 51, Virginia 17

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke quarterback Ben Bennett passed for three touchdowns and set up two others as the Blue Devils roared past Virginia 51-17 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

Bennett connected on 21 of 30 passes before sitting out the four quarter with Duke ahead 37-10.

Duke's 51 points were the most it has scored since 1962 when it overpowered Wake Forest, 50-0. Duke is now 3-0, its best start since 1971.

Wake Forest 31, Appalachian St. 22

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Freshman running back Mike Ramseur rushed for 191 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead Wake Forest to a 31-22 win over visiting Appalachian State in a nonconference college football game Saturday.

Ramseur carried 42 times and scored on a pair of one-yard runs in the second quarter as the Demon Deacons jumped to a 17-7 halftime lead.

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Tailback Cyrus Lawrence rushed for 169 yards and scored four touchdowns Saturday to lead Virginia Tech's Hokies to a 47-3 football victory over William & Mary's Indians.

Georgia Tech 24, Memphis State 20

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Running back Robert Lavette cranked out 148 yards and rushed for three touchdowns Saturday afternoon as Georgia Tech's "Ramblin' Wreck" sputtered to a 24-20 college football victory over Memphis State.

The Yellow Jackets' offense raced to a 24-0 lead, but it was the defense that threw up a fourth-quarter road block to stop the fast-closing Tigers and preserve the victory.

The Tigers are 0-4 and have lost 11 games in a row dating back to last season. Memphis State's last victory was over Georgia Tech last year in Atlanta, 28-15.

Auburn 24, Tennessee 14

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Lionel James rushed for second half touchdowns of 32 and two yards as Auburn's wishbone offense ground out a 24-14 victory Saturday over Tennessee's long-bomb aerial attack.

The Volunteers' fleet wide receiver, senior Willie Gault, blazed past the Auburn secondary for touchdown bombs of 39 and 78 yards from quarterback Alan Cockrell, pulling Tennessee to within 17-14.

Auburn's victory in the Southeastern Conference opener for both clubs gave the Tigers a 3-0 mark as they await powerful Nebraska's arrival here Saturday. Tennessee fell to 1-2.

West Virginia 43, Richmond 10

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Quarterback Jeff Hostetler ran for three first half touchdowns and passed for another as 15th-ranked West Virginia built an early lead and breezed to a 43-10 college football victory over Richmond Saturday.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) - An awesome Pittsburgh defense, sparked by Dave Puzzuoli's interception and 95-yard touchdown run, led the third-ranked Panthers to a 20-3 victory over 19th-ranked Illinois Saturday.

Pitt stopped the Illini running game cold, and sacked quarterback Tony Eason nine times and intercepted five passes to control Illinois' usually potent aerial attack.

Puzzuoli's touchdown came in the second quarter with Pitt trailing 3-0, and Illinois on the verge of scoring.

Pittsburgh then put the game out of reach as quarterback Dan Marino threw 15 yards to John Brown for a touchdown, and Eric Schubert booted a pair of field goals.

The Illinois defense was strong, too, intercepting Marino four times, including twice in the end zone.

Notre Dame 28, Purdue 14

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) -Phil Carter ripped off second half touchdown runs of 6 and 10 yards Saturday to lead 10th-ranked Notre Dame to a 28-14 victory over winless Purdue.

Carter, who gained 154 in 27 rushes, started his assault late in the third quarter with the score tied 14-14 after Scott Campbell had lifted Purdue into the tie with a pair of second quarter touchdown passes.

Carter took off on runs of 35 and 10 yards before slamming over from the 6-yard line to break the tie with 2:34 left in the third quarter to give the Irish a 21-14 lead.

Midway in the fourth quarter, Notre Dame got a big break when Campbell completed9 passes for 278 yards, but Purdue suffered its third loss this season and seventh straight while Notre Dame hiked its record to 2-0.

Boston Coll 31, Navy 0

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Quarterback Doug Flutie threw touchdown passes of 45, 13 and 8 yards Saturday, leading fumble-plagued Boston College to a 31-0 victory over Navy.

An 8-yard pass to tight end Scott Nizolek early in the second period gave Boston College a 7-0 halftime lead. The play capped an 87-yard drive, with much of the yardage coming on four Flutie passes.

The first, for 45 yards, came early in the second half on a 55-yard drive set up by a short Navy punt.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

It can be said that fishermen are truly an interesting lot. These weirdly clad, strangely odoriferous persons have been the focal point of a ton of satirical humor.

Fishing is America's No. 1 sport. However, just ask any fisherman where he caught his fish and what he caught it on and you'll quickly see it's a sport shared by darn few.

In contrast, there is a humorous side to fishing too. The instructors at Triline University offered fishermen a unique opportunity recently by letting them poke fun at themselves.

Triline sponsored a national cartoon caption contest. Triline judges encountered difficulty selecting winners. The caption chosen as the national winner was submitted by Lee Russel of Mill Hall, Penn., with, "Next year we're taking two days vacation!" Honorable mention captions included: "I know you told me to keep both hands on the wheel, but this is where Harry caught that lunker last week." "Believe me Harry, if they're biting, you'll be the first to know!" "You are without a doubt, the biggest, most stubborn catch of my lifetime and all without the luxury of being able to throw you back."

Do you remember the warm summer days as a kid and fun times with the gang, or time spent fishing and sharing dreams and problems with Dad.

That may have been the formula 20 years ago, but today you better paint Mom into that picture. Why? Take a look at the 1980 U.S. census figures. Out of every five households is a single parent family. Ninety percent of those single parent families are ramrodded by Mom.

Streaking Cards blank Cubs, 5-0

Victory brings magic number to three

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joaquin Andujar fired a two-hitter for his seventh straight win, leading streaking St. Louis to a 5-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs and reducing the Cardinals' magic number in the National League East to three games.

The victory, the Cardinals' 11th in the last 13 games, gave them a 5½-game lead over Philadelphia, which lost 2-1 to New York. Any combination of St. Louis wins and Philly defeats totaling three will give the Cardinals the division title.

Andujar, 15-10, gave up only Mel Hall's clean single to center with one out in the first inning and Ron Sandberg's infield single with two out in the ninth. He retired 25 of the last 27 batters, struck out four and walked none and hit a batter enroute to his N.L.-leading sixth shutout and his ninth complete game.

Giants 5, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Morgan's RBI single, his third hit of the game, capped a two-run, eighth-inning rally that gave the San Francisco Giants a 5-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and tightened the National League West race.

The loss cut the front-running Dodgers' lead to one game over the Atlanta Braves, who beat San Diego 12-6 while the third-place Giants moved up to two games off the pace. The Dodgers have lost four straight games while San Francisco has won nine of its last 11.

San Francisco capitalized on two Los Angeles errors to overturn a 4-3 deficit in the eighth against Dodger starter Fernando Valenzuela, 19-13, in a game watched by a crowd of 49,634 that let the Dodgers set an all-time major league season attendance record of 3,378,718.

Astros 3, Reds 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tim Tolman and Phil Garner each had a pair of doubles to supply the punch and Mike LaCoss and Frank LaCorte held Cincinnati to four hits as the Houston Astros defeated the Reds 3-1 Saturday.

LaCoss, 6-6, won his first career start against his former teammates after a streak of wildness in which the Reds stranded five batters who reached on walks in the first two innings.

Scott Loucks started the Astros' attack in the first inning with a double off starer Bill Scherrer, 0-1. After one out, Tolman hit an RBI double to left, and Garner's double to right made it 2-0.

The Reds scored in the third when Dave Concepcion reached on a walk, stole second, and scored on Cesar Cedeno's double.

Expos 9, Pirates 4

MONTREAL (AP) — Scott Sanderson fired a seven-hitter and the Montreal Expos took advantage of a sloppy Pittsburgh defense to beat the Pirates 9-4 Saturday and eliminate them from the National League East race.

Mets 2, Phillies 1

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets' right-hander Craig Swan pitched a seven-hitter and escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the seventh inning to outduel Steve Carlton and the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 Saturday.

Swan, 11-7, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions while handing Carlton, 21-11, only his third loss in 12 decisions. Swan struck out two and did not walk a batter, while Carlton, who left for a pinch-hitter aftrer seven innings, stfuck out 11, walked one, and yielded six hits.

Braves 12, Padres 6

ATLANTA (AP) — Claudell Washington belted a home run among three hits, knocked in four runs and scored three and Dale Murphy also homered Saturday as the Atlanta Braves routed the San Diego Padres 12-6.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Eddie Murray slammed a three-run homer and Cal Ripken Jr. slammed a solo shot, while Jim Palmer pitched a four-hitter for his 13th victory in his last 14 decisions, leading the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday night.

The victory pulled Orioles to within three games of the first-place Brewers in the American League East.

The Orioles, who had lost their last three games, took a 4-0 first-inning lead behind Murray's blast off Pete Vukovich, 18-5, who had won his previous eight decisions.

The Brewers, who had won eight of their previous nine games, kept their magic number at six, meaning any combination of Milwaukee victories or Baltimore losses totalling six would clinch the division championship.

The two teams have eight games remaining, five against each other.

Last January Dallas Theatre On Tour, a professional touring group, brought "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon" to Midland's Yucca Theatre stage. Friday the group opened another play, "The Owl and the Pussycat," at the Yucca Theatre.

Opening night for "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon" saw 27 (Maybe it was 29? Let's say 29, it sounds better) hearty and inquisitive souls who, valiantly throwing caution to the winds, ventured forth to see the show. (At that time daring the perils of traveling Midland's pothole-riddled, detour-infested downtown streets after dark could be considered valiantly throwing caution to the winds.)

Friday night there were nine. (Perhaps there were more who headed for the downtown theater and this time got permanently side-tracked on the new one-way streets, which are of course only one-way part of the way. For all we know, they are still circling, but may find the theatre, which is located at 208 N. Colorado St., in time for the 8 p.m. performances this Friday and Saturday. Then again, they may be lost forever.)

IT WAS SUGGESTED that most Midlanders were at one of two football games Friday night. Possibly. (Both Midland teams lost to Odessa schools.)

Also, there were other plays being performed in the area Friday — "Jesus Christ Superstar" onstage at Midland Community Theatre and "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" at Odessa's Permian Playhouse.

Plus private clubs, private parties, etc.

However Midland's population is not 10,000 but closer to 80,000. Odessa's is 100,000 plus. The common complaint I hear is, "There's nothing to do here." And Midlanders enjoy a reputation for supporting the arts, especially theater.

So what happened?

Economic conditions? Lack of publicity? (In fact DTOT's director, Bill Rhoten said most of his Friday interviews were canceled due to a plane crash in Midland. We know which crash that was.)

Felix (Martin Williams) is consoled by the new co-tenant of his apartment, Doris (Connie Hearn), in this scene from Dallas Theatre On Tour's production of "The Owl and The Pussycat." The show, which opened last Friday, is set to be staged again at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado St. Reservations may be made by calling Midland Community Theatre's box office at 682-4111.

A Review

THIS BRINGS us to the next problem. Is it even fair to review a comedy, which depends so much on audience laughter, when there is no audience? This was not a dress rehearsal; it was a performance.

The Yucca Theatre is not a small house, nor is it designed for a micro-audience. The downstairs will hold 400 and when the balcony is fully operational it will hold 200, which makes a total seating capacity of 600. (Of course, it wasn't necessary to use the balcony Friday night.)

The nine of us tried. We laughed loud and often. And we applauded until our hands tingled. As audiences go, (the reviewer must exclude herself in this matter) the eight souls there certainly rated a 10 for effort, attention and support.

One member did make the comment that the whole evening had a "bizarre" feeling to it. Amen.

Ah, but now it's time to get serious. (Is that possible? Probably not.)

Can the play be reviewed?

It can be said that the two-member cast worked as hard as the audience.

TRY TO visualize the scene: Two people onstage playing to a house with a capacity of 600 only occupied by nine. If it sounds a little like the "Twilight Zone," it felt that way Friday night. Counting thespians, stage crew, audience and bar workers, there were not over 20 people in the Yucca, if that many.

The role of the owl was played by Martin Williams. Williams had good body control, projected well and did the best he could with what he had. He was more believable as the shy intellectual with his glasses on than off.

Williams may be slightly miscast for the role, but then again the weakness may lay in the script.

The play has numerous funny one liners, but the transition between Act II and Act III is weak, thus the audience is not prepared for what happens in the third act. It seems to come out of left field and left this reviewer cold.

The author, Bill Manhoff, writes about two supposed stereotypes. One is the intellectual writer with his head buried in his work who is all thought and no emotion. The other is the once nice girl turned prostitute who is not bad, just dumb. Both are straight from the '60s, which is when this play takes place. Neither characterization convinced me that the author really knew his subject matter.

IT'S NOT A great play, nor is it a bad play. It's more a mediocre play with a few high points and some good one liners.

The role of the pussycat was played by Connie Hearn, who played the lead, Elizabeth, in DTOT's January's production of "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon."

Perhaps the best scene in the play for Miss Hearn came when she dropped behind the sofa and demonstrated the sun's spitting capabilities. (You have to have seen the play or the movie to understand the importance of the sun spitting.) She played it to the hilt. I still laugh when I think about it.

The two kept the action going, the pace was lively and they're timing was good. It's not easy to keep the timing going in a comedy when there is no audience to respond to the laugh lines. But they did.

If playing to almost empty houses doesn't discourage DTOT, the troupe will stage "The Owl and the Pussycat" again Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. Reservations may be made by calling Midland Community Theatre's box office at 682-4111. (If you find anybody out there aimlessly driving the streets, please tell 'em where the Yucca Theatre is. Thanks. Eight may be enough on television, but nine in the audience is just not enough.)

MCT's show 'Tintypes' opens Friday

Such well known songs as "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," "Bill Bailey," "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage" and "Toyland," are blended with such lesser known pieces as "Nobody," "Satisfied with Life" and "Fifty-Fifty."

Director for the show is Michael Spicer with musical direction by Shirley Hansen. The five-member cast includes Norma Short, Patrice Zapovivarsky, Bob Fennell, Paula Butts and Myke Mengert. Miss Short and Miss Zapovivarsky are making their MCT stage debut.

Fennell, a drama teacher at Midland High School, last appeared in MCT's "Godspell." He was also the Hamhock's 1981 Hammy award winner.

Mengert, a student at Midland College, was last seen on MCT's stage portraying the orderly in "Whose Life Is It Anyway?"

These thespians will portray a number of U.S. public figures from the 1895-1918 years including Teddy Roosevelt, as he tries to get the Panama Canal built, Anna Held, as she performs in her husband's Ziegfeld Follies, and Emma Goldman, as she speaks at her first rally.

The changes in the American scene during these years are reflected in the music and acting. Roosevelt goes off to fight in the Spanish American War, immigrants come to the U.S. to find a better life for themselves, socialism creeps in and vaudeville thrives.

Sets and costumes for MCT's production are being designed by Elizabeth Spicer, lighting is by John Michael Warburton, set construction is by Frank Petty, with stage management by Dottie Fox.

"Tintypes" is scheduled to be MCT's entry into the Festival of American Community Theatres.

Reservations may be made by calling MCT's box office at 682-4111.

Wrestling John Irving's novel "The World According to Garp," to the mat was no easy task for movie director George Roy Hill ("The Sting") and screenwriter Steve Tesich. In fact, some movie industry analysts said it couldn't be done.

So, it comes as no surprise that up against the cult popularity generated by the 1978 best-seller, Tesich (who won an academy award for "Breaking Away"), went for the highlights. And though the movie stops short of the novel's ending, leaves the short stories and changes the locations, the main characters are intact, even if the details aren't always.

"Garp" stars Robin Williams (TV's Mork of "Mork and Mindy") as the son of a World War II nurse (Glenn Close) who takes advantage of a dying tail-gunner's infirmity long enough to set up the rest of her life as a "sexual suspect," and produce a son, T.S. Garp (after Technical Sergeant Garp).

It is from this precarious begining that young Garp hereafter tries to play the hand that Fate has dealt him — introducing himself as "Terribly Sexy Garp," and "Terribly Shy Garp." And though Garp makes a kind of uneasy peace with himself, the whimsy that originally inspired his mother never leaves her.

Jenny Fields takes to wearing her nursing uniform exclusively — more like a second skin than clothing — and though Irving's novel tells us why she does this, the movie never does, making the symbolism perverse and obscure. Instead of being merely eccentric, Jenny is an iron maiden, humorless and cold. That lapse alone makes it difficult to appreciate the fine line that Close walks so expertly between the hard and sensitive Jenny Fields.

In Jenny Fields' world there are enough extremes for several movies, as she draws about her the misunderstood and misfits of society. One group, the "Ellen Jamesians," cut off their tongues to protest the rape and mutilations of little Ellen James. And then there is Roberta Muldoon (John Lithgow), a former tight end for the Philadelphia Ealges — now transexual Roberta Muldoon. They all live together in Jenny's house by the sea and commiserate about being female.

Meanwhile, Garp tries to live a "normal" life. He marries the wrestling coach's intellectual daughter, has kids and writes a novel that few read but criticals hail. And that bitter pill chokes all the more by Jenny's best-selling feminist manifesto, "Sexual Suspect," based on her life.

Accepting Williams as Garp is not hard, but overlooking his vocal mannerisms fostered through years of comic impersonations and an abundance of comedic talent is. A little bit too much Mork from Ork. But, those moments aside, Williams is effective as a man perplexed by events and torn between being a good writer and a good father.

As his wife, Mary Beth Hurt does a fine job of spanning the years from adolescence to adulthood and as his transexual friend, Lithgow is marvelous, warm and witty. Upon the failure of another romance, Muldoon tells Garp, "He said I make him feel sexually ambiguous!"

Look for the cameo roles as well and you will spot John Irving as a wrestling match referee and director Hill as the pilot who "disaster proofs" Garp's house by crashing a plane into it.

"Garp," rated R, is a curious movie, made from a zany novel, that succeeds in the early years of Garp's life but, unlike the novel, is unable to buoyant, sinking gradually into the tragedies that befall the "bastard son of Jenny Fields."

Irving would have us believe that successive generations of Garps will carry on in the tradition of Jenny, T.S. and the tail gunner, but Tesich suggests "it's all over but the crying."

MCT's 'Jesus Christ Superstar' held over

Midland Community Theatre's production of the rock opera "Jesus Christ Superstar" has been held over for three performances this week. The production will be onstage at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., in Theatre I Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"Superstar" is one of the few, if not the only, musicals based on a record album. The album sold 2.5 million records, toured various parts of the world in concert form and did a million dollar's worth of business at the box office before it opened on Broadway. The first concert version earned $3.5 million in the first three months.

"Superstar" tells the story of the last seven days of Jesus Christ's life entirely through song. The theme is meant to be religious, adhering to the New Testament accounts yet told in terms of today's youth-oriented rock fever.

MCT's production is directed by Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director. It includes an onstage cast of 30 performers and an offstage chorus of 40 members. The production is funded in part by a grant from Wagner and Brown.

Reservations for the additional shows may be made by calling MCT's box office at 682-4111.

Also onstage at Theatre Midland beginning Friday is the musical revue "Tintypes," being staged in Theatre II. The production is directed by Michael Spicer.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 9⅞% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14⅞% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16⅞%.

GAS, CLEAN ENERGY FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW. FHA/VA financing availble.

SCENIC COLORADO MOUNTAIN PROPERTIES

Auction—October 14, 1982

On the western slope of the Rocky Mountains lies the unspoiled pagentry of 12,736 acres of mountain splendor—The Marie Scott Estate in Colorado. Part of a once vast empire near Ouray in southwestern Colorado, this awesomely beautiful land will be sold in parcels of from several hundred acres to several thousand.

It's easy to see why Marie Scott—a feisty and stubborn vestige of a now-extinct pioneer breed—loved this land so intensely. Ranging in elevation from 7,800 feet to 11,000 feet, it offers a breathtaking view of the San Juan Mountains, superb grazing, abundant big game, aspen and evergreen trees, and quiet solitude. Yet, you're within 30 minutes of the Montrose airport, and when the powder beckons, you're just miles from some of the best skiing in the world at Telluride.

Much of the land abuts several national forests, and numerous springs, ponds and streams are to be found.

All mineral rights and water rights that are owned by the estate are included in the sale.

This auction is being held on a cash only basis at the Red Arrow Motel in Montrose, Colorado, October 14, 1982, at 1:00 p.m.

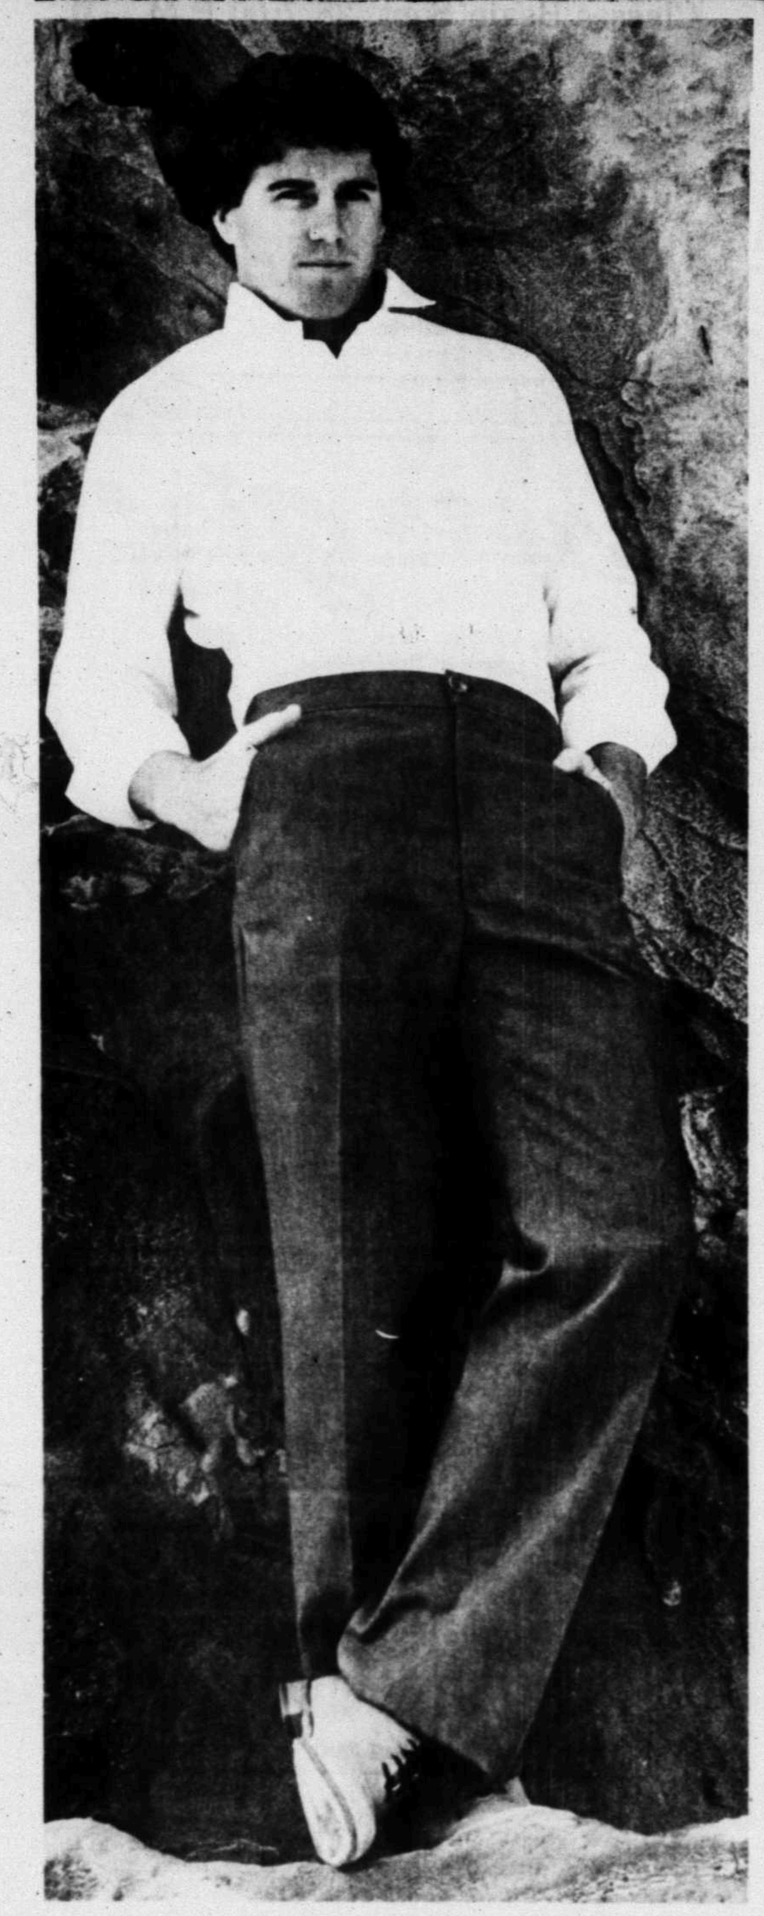
Easy-care fashions for men, boys



Above, Angel's Flight's slacks in a blended fabric of 50 percent polyester and 50 percent cotton are comfortable looking and easy to wear. Below, Spire's smart-looking two-tone fleecy sweatshirt in a blend of polyester and cotton has two extremely important ingredients: comfort and ease of care.

A three-piece suit by Levi Strauss, one of the most famous names in American apparel, can be worn all year. It's made of 100 percent polyester fabric that is luxurious and practical at the same time.

The great strides made in synthetic fibers, especially in polyesters, are very evident in the wide variety of men's and boys' clothes which will be available in stores soon: suits, slacks, leisure sweaters and sweatshirts are among the broad range of men's wear styles which utilize both 100 percent polyester and blended fabrics.

Famous apparel manufacturers such as Jantzen, Levi Strauss, Spire and Angel's Flight, whose garments are shown here, now use polyester for these reasons: the style factor is present; the price is right; the practicality and ease of care is self-evident; and most important, the comfort factor is there.

Slacks by Angel's Flight, shown top left, are made of 50 percent polyester and 50 percent cotton. These slacks are available in straw, hickory, olive, brown, chambray and charcoal, and in sizes 27 — 36, short to extra long.

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Get a move on, cowboy boots. The newest shoes for men are sleeker, dressier and a whole lot sexier.

What's happened is that the "Urban Cowboy" flash of 1980 is flickering out, and the lights are up on more sophisticated footwear reflecting the refinement in such films as "Chariots of Fire" and the ruggedness in "Raiders of the Lost Ark." Really, podners, Western anacondas don't make it with natty tweed suits and bow ties.

Another reason for the switch is that after several years of squeezing into sharp-toed boots, men are seeking relief for their squished-up toes. "Comfort is the single biggest change in shoes," says Roy Houston, buyer for Gentlemen's Footgear, the popular West Hollywood shoe salon owned by former NBA star Charles Scott and frequented by a roster of celebrities including Richard Pryor, Donald Sutherland, Elton John and Lou Gossett.

Houston said an improved fit is enhanced by the use of buttery "nappa" leather and suede, which not only feel soft to the touch but also look good in shades like Bordeaux, mustard, teal, olive and black.

A man's footwear, of course, should complement the clothes on his back. Lace-up shoes work best, for example, when wearing a suit, the one notable exception being the black patent slip-on when the invitation reads "black tie."

French designer adds fragrance to line

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Bon jour. Avon appellant.

Come November, that's how the neighborhood Avon lady just might greet you. And even if she doesn't take to speaking French, she will have a French product to offer — Louis Feraud's Fantasque, one of the latest designer fragrances to hit that lucrative market.

The fragrance, according to the Parisian couturier, is a natural extension of his career, a career very much centered on what appears to be his absolute delight in those for whom he designs. "The Man Who Loves Women" has long been his advertising slogan in France. With his silver-haired good looks and his charming habit of kissing a woman's hand the moment she is introduced, Feraud knows how to make a woman feel, if not loved, certainly appreciated.

"Jaime les femmes," he explained simply, slipping into the French he is clearly more comfortable conversing in. "I feel you have to love women in order to dress them," he elaborated through an interpreter in an interview earlier this summer. Feraud was in town to complete plans for the party Avon threw at the Plaza Hotel in August to officially launch the fragrance.

BUT AS MUCH as it is a chance to do something more for the customers he loves, the new perfume is also an opportunity for Feraud to expand his American market. Admittedly, his high-priced clothing, available here for only three years, appeals to a limited audience and does not rack up enormous annual sales — about $650,000 retail. So in November, when the 435,000 American Avon representatives start pitching Fantasque, Feraud hopes millions of women who could never afford his clothes will want to sample his perfume.

The fragrance will be much easier on the pocketbook than one of his designs. The 1.7-ounce spray cologne will sell for $22; the perfume (which won't be available until early next year) for $42 a half-ounce — relatively inexpensive when compared to other designer fragrances, which can retail for as much as $200 an ounce.

Even though Avon is attempting to keep prices down to a mass-market level, the company did feel it important to enter the designer market. "It is a market that we have not been able to tap," said Joane Jaeger, director of product marketing, adding that the designer market represents $400 million annually in the $1.5 billion fragrance market. As to the selection of Feraud, she pointed to that elusive allure of French fashion: "Now every woman can afford her own Paris original."

LOUIS FERAUD said he has put as much, if not more, research into this project as he has into any of his design work. It took him two years to develop the fragrance with Avon. He not only worked on selecting the florals to be included and deciding how the product would be packaged, but also studied all the material he could find on the psychology of fragrance. "The perfume starts with flowers and through very mysterious ways reaches the brain," he said, passing on information he had learned from reading a doctoral thesis on how perfume is accepted by the brain. "The selection must appeal to people's memories," he said.

Did he have any special memories in mind when creating his fragrance? "I was interested in creating a perfume that would be mysterious," he said with an ever-so-slight smile, "a little bit erotic and at the same time deep enough to make sort of an energy.

"Of course," he went on, "the notion of why a perfume affects someone is also more than a scientific explanation. I feel that they're unconciously looking for a state of grace, sort of an aura which perfume often has."

SUCH A ROMANTIC philosophy is not surprising from a man who designs the kind of things Feraud does. Since 1948, his Paris couture house has been turning out feminine, graceful clothes that never really go out of style.

Care program for elderly tested

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A different kind of hospital care for the elderly is being tested by Strong Memorial Hospital of the University of Rochester Medical Center.

The hospital's three-year Long-Term Care Demonstration Program provides a new level of care, more intensive than that of a skilled nursing facility but less intensive than acute hospital care.

The aim is the rapid improvement of the ability of patients to take care of themselves, so that they can return home or to a less intensive level of care than otherwise would be needed.

Study of stroke surgery begins

NEW YORK (AP) — A surgical treatment for stroke victims is becoming more widely used, even though it is unclear whether the surgery is effective, doctors say.

The National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke, a branch of the National Institutes of Health, is sponsoring a study of 1,500 people at 65 medical centers to determine whether the surgery works.

The surgery involves linking an artery outside the skull to an artery in the brain, through a hole in the skull, to increase blood supply to the brain, according to a report in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The procedure is called extracranial-intracranial arterial bypass.

The journal said that 30 percent of stroke victims will have another stroke or die from stroke-related problems within five years of the first stroke.

"The only data on long-term effectiveness are reports from individual institutions where surgeons have tried the procedure," the institute said.

DEAR ABBY

Guests' feeble excuses invite anger

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Having just put on a wedding for our daughter, I have had it with people who do not respond to a R.S.V.P., even though they've been sent a stamped, addressed envelope. And, Abby, you wouldn't believe the idiotic answers you get when you call. For instance:

Affluent twerp: "My secretary always takes care of that kind of thing — she must have goofed."

Close relative: "But, darling, I thought you knew I'd be there."

Vague friend: "Gee, we aren't sure yet." (They've had only six weeks to make up their minds.)

Social butterfly: "We may be out of town, but I guess you have to know, don't you?" (At $70 a head, you'd better believe I have to know!)

And finally, the jerks who respond in the affirmative and don't show up. — S.E., LOS ANGELES

DEAR S.E.: Judging from the number who have written to express their fury and frustration at having their R.S.V.P.'s ignored, perhaps it's time to drop the fancy R.S.V.P. and say in plain English, "Hey, please let me know whether you plan to attend!"

DEAR ABBY: My fiance is going into the hospital for surgery next week. He has informed me that he does not want me to come to the hospital to visit him after the surgery, and he does not want me to go to his apartment to nurse him back to health when he is released from the hospital.

Do you think he has a Florence Nightingale to nurse him back to health, or does he just want to recuperate alone? — ONE WHO CARES

DEAR ONE: It is entirely possible that he prefers to recuperate alone. But if you really suspect there's a "nightingale" in the picture, you'd have to be out of your tree to marry a man you have to watch like a hawk.

DEAR ABBY: My father passed away last year. My sister and I are the sole beneficiaries of the estate. My first check arrived last month, and it is causing a great deal of tension between my husband and me.

Now that I have come into this inheritance, my husband thinks it is half his. I don't feel that way. I view my inheritance as a gift from my father to me alone, to spend, save or invest as I see fit. (It was left to "me" — not to "us.")

My husband is resentful, bitter and hurt. I feel guilty because he has always supported me and I have never earned a dime. (I did provide a lovely home for him and our two children, however.)

How should I handle this, Abby? The inheritance is an impressive amount. — LONE STAR STATE

DEAR LONE: Since the inheritance was left specifically to you and not to you and your husband, your father clearly intended it for you alone. Give your husband an outright gift, and enjoy the rest as you see fit.

Family sit-down dinners unusual

By ERMA BOMBECK

I met a woman last week who had a sit-down dinner with her family on a weekday night. Is that crazy?

Have you any idea what the odds are of that happening in this country? Eighty thousand to one and climbing.

She has five children: one in swimming competition, one on the football team, one in junior varsity basketball, one in band, and one on the pompon squad. They had not sat around a table together on a school night in three years.

My first reaction was, "Why the reunion?"

She said she just got tired of tossing up food and having kids catch it in mid-air. She was sick of having kids lean over her shoulder and eat out of the skillet. She wanted to see a bowl of potato salad without a hole in the middle one last time before she went.

Besides, she had never seen her son who was on the swimming team without pink eyes and wet hair.

Her family is not unique. Most women don't work in kitchens these days. They work in drive-ins. They're shrines to quick foods where candles are lit to microwaves, the chant is "just add water" and the blessing is "Have a Twinkie. Go in peace."

I used to have a set of recipes from September through June that I served my peripatetic family.

My son came in late one night after ball practice and said, "What'd you have for dinner?"

I said, "Chicken Supreme."

He slammed the refrigerator door and said, "Didn't you save me any?"

"I couldn't," I said. "Your father ate the chicken before he went bowling, your sister had the mushroom and black olive on a salad before she went to Scout meeting, and your brother had the cream of mushroom soup after he got home from play-practice. It never got to the casserole."

We ate everything that way in bits and pieces; sukiyaki, chili, beef stroganoff and stews. I had a son who graduated from high school without ever knowing that spaghetti and meatballs were not finger food served cold.

I asked my friend if the family that meets and eats together is such a treat together.

She reported that as soon as they were seated around the table, the father seized the opportunity to deliver his lecture on lights and how no one turned them off and how their electricity bill was second only to the Las Vegas strip and everyone left early and ate in their rooms.

ATLANTA (AP) — Exercises can relieve much of the stress placed on damaged joints if begun in the early stages of arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

"Hands, feet, hips and knees affected by arthritis can't endure the same exertion that is placed on healthy joints," said Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the foundation.

He suggests following a prescribed exercise program to maintain range of motion in joints, and avoiding tasks that force inflamed joints to work too hard.

'Wellness' directors hold conference

By BETH ANN KRIER
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SAN DIEGO — Was this the convention of the future? A conference with scheduled yoga breaks, aerobics classes, complimentary yogurt and participants described by one speaker as "the most revoltingly healthy group of people I've ever spoken to?"

That the American Association of Fitness Directors in Business and Industry would like their health and meeting habits to catch on was obvious in the title of their eighth annual conference: "Skills for Creating Healthy Lifestyles."

Indeed, there was so much physical activity woven into this conference that most of the participants attended the meetings in running shorts and T-shirts or other casual garb. One lecturer, University of California, Los Angeles' Dr. Jonathan Fielding, remarked, "You can tell the speakers here. We're the ones with suits on."

The participants — who included not only fitness directors but also academics, physicians, nurses, hospital administrators, students majoring in health sciences and other members of the so-called "wellness" industry — could survey everything from mind-body methods of relaxation to "positive nutrition" approaches.

AS THE NATION'S corporate fitness directors met here last week, they came to unite as they challenged old beliefs and current financial budgets favoring traditional medical care over their ideas of disease prevention and health promotion. Their meeting was not set up as an "us versus the medical profession" event but at times it certainly sounded like it.

Opening speaker Willis Goldbeck's remarked that the public has bought such ideas as hospitals equal good, medicine equals health and the physician has the answers.

"You (fitness directors and related health professionals) are a testament to the fact that we no longer accept those myths," said Goldbeck, executive director of the Washington Business Group on Health.

"In your commitment to wellness, you hold the keys to unlocking America's crisis in medical-care costs. The time has come for the wellness movement to stop being defensive ... and to lay to rest any question as to whether wellness pays off."

GOLDBECK SAID that the United States does have the world's best medical system, but as measured by yesterday's criteria. As many of the conference's speakers would point out, medical science has gloriously conquered infectious diseases such as tuberculosis or diphtheria. Those diseases have been so well eradicated that people rarely die of them any more. Now, however, people die of cardiovascular diseases, cancer, diabetes, respiratory ailments: non-infectious, life-style-related illnesses that are addressed by the work of fitness directors.

"Today, now, we know more about the value of wellness than we have ever known about the value of high-tech medical intervention that we have so blindly accepted," Goldbeck told the assembly of about 1,000 people from the United States, Europe, Australia and Japan.

"And goodness knows we have enough anecdotes about our success," Goldbeck added, "and occasionally someone suggests that the wild claims of 50 percent or 75 percent success by a given employer (and his employee fitness program) may not be proven to be totally accurate, especially if there was great academic vigor applied to the evaluation. Let me assure you that in today's climate, there is not an employer that I've ever met that wouldn't be tickled to get a 10 percent savings in any case."

WHAT'S MORE, Goldbeck enthused, the public under standing and support for the fitness industry is remarkably strong. He referred specifically to a recent Harris poll which showed that 92.5 percent of respondents across the nation agreed with the statement that "If Americans lived healthier lives — ate more nutritious foods, smoked less, maintained proper weight and exercised regularly — it would do more to improve their health than anything doctors and medicine could do for them."

"That is an incredibly explicit statement. That is a wellness attitude, a winning attitude," insisted Goldbeck. "Only the doctors fail to understand it. Or perhaps they understand too well the bottom-line implication in Dr. Lou Mayo's statement of purpose of medicine. He said the aim of medicine is to prevent disease and to prolong life. But the ideal of medicine is to eliminate the need for physicians."

WHILE GOLDBECK acknowledged that there is phenomenal support for the corporate fitness industry ("Yours is probably the fastest-growing industry in the United States at a time when we're not exactly abundant in fast-growing industries"), he noted its "totally undue" emphasis on executives "as if for some reason the rest of us had no reason to be concerned with wellness."

This theme of misplaced or exaggerated emphasis on executive workers was expanded by Rick Carlson, an attorney who serves as chairman of the California Governor's Council on Wellness and Physical Fitness and also as president of the Health Resource Group, an organization through which he consults with companies on the different types of health-promotion programs.

"It's now clearly understood that the line employee with fixed wages and the threat of losing his or her job and with boredom on the job is under far more stress than an executive," Carlson reported. "That doesn't mean that the costs to the company are as great if something happens to the line employee as if something happens to the executive. But to presume or pretend that stress affects only executives is absurd based on what we know on the subject."

HEALTH-PROMOTION programs of the future, Carlson predicted, will help their employees become better self-managers, because of the recognition that productivity may have more to do with what happens off the job than on it. "It seems to me that most of the reasons why people show up for work at 8 or 9 in the morning ill-prepared to work hard, effectively and productively have very little to do with what happened on the job the day before but a whole lot to do with what happened between 5 o'clock the day before and that morning. It has to do with alcohol abuse, substance abuse, money problems, marriage problems, relationship problems ... just having teen-age kids alone is enough to do it to you."

"The money for these programs is there," he insisted. "It's just being burned up and wasted in medical care."

Find right tool for job

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst Feature Service

With a few basic, inexpensive, easy-to-use tools, even a self-confessed fumble-fingers can accomplish many fix-it jobs in or around the house. The secret is in using the right tool for the right task.

So says Al Ubell, columnist, author of home improvement books and former household hints and safety reporter for ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

"When you think of owning tools, you may think of complicated power drills, expensive table saws and massive tool chests filled with gizmos and gadgets," says Ubell. "There is indeed a tool for every job, but what every homeowner or apartment dweller should know is that all you need are a few basic tools."

Ubell says that tools and gadgets that "wear more than one hat" can be used for a variety of purposes. These multi-purpose tools can become the basics of your fix-it kit, saving money, time and headaches with their handy design. Most tools fall into one of three categories, says Ubell: Cutting or shaping, fastening and measuring.

Here's what you need for most home fix-it jobs:

CUTTING AND SHAPING TOOLS: All you really need are five basic ones: Two hand saws, a drill, a shaper and a single-edge. There are two types of materials to be cut — soft, such as wood and plastic, and hard, such as metal. You'll need two different saws: a wood crosscut saw for cutting wood and plastic and a hacksaw for metal and other plastics.

For making small holes, a hand drill will do the job with relative ease. Such a drill, sometimes called a hurdy-gurdy, looks like an egg beater without beaters. You adjust the size of the holes by the size of the bit that you insert in the brace.

Another relatively inexpensive tool in the cutting-shaping category is called a "Surform." This 5 1/2-inch device acts like a file and plane, cutting, contouring, and smoothing wood and plastic to the desired shape. It's ideal for finishing a surface or filing down sticky doors.

FASTENING TOOLS: After cutting and shaping your materials, the next step is to fit the pieces together by fastening them with nails or screws. For these jobs, you need a hammer, a screwdriver, pliers, a wrench and a stapler.

The claw hammer, a classic combination tool, has a head for driving nails and a claw for extracting them. A 13-ounce claw hammer will do most of your fastening jobs around the house.

Instead of collecting many different size screwdrivers for each job, Ubell says to concentrate your efforts with a combination screwdriver that comes with a common handle and interchangeable bits. He suggests a No. 1 and No. 2 Phillips and small and medium size flat blade bits.

The fastening and holding jobs that pliers, a wrench and a vice do are all wrapped up into one tool — a clamp wrench. It will cut wire, clamp pieces togther and extend your grip on your other tools in hard-to-reach places.

The staple gun is a utility tool that does only one job, but can be used for anything from repairing a loose screen to upholstering a small chair. Also, it's great for tacking loose wires to base boards and walls.

MEASURING TOOLS: Ubell says remember the rule: Measure twice and cut once. Measurement before and during the job ensures the proper fit and placement of your work.

Women often are do-it-yourselfers

By JIMMY THORNTON
Copley News Service

LOVELY HANDY HANDS — A General Electric survey has shown that 45 percent of American consumers are do-it-yourselfers in the home appliance field, and more and more women, often known for "lovely hands," are becoming handy hands around the household.

More and more women are living as singles and don't have "a man around the house" to turn to when, say, the fridge goes on the fritz, says Katie Hamilton, a media consultant for GE.

In recent years she and her husband Gene have made a living knocking down walls and renovating old houses. They found that many of the houses had appliances in need of repair.

When the housing market went flat, she and Gene decided to write about what they did best, so now they are making a living as do-it-yourself writers.

Katie Hamilton recently toured the states on behalf of GE to introduce its new manual-hotline service that makes fixing appliances easier. If you have a GE product, you can obtain a manual that shows in detail how to repair it. Replacement parts come complete with instructions and are color-guided to help make the jobs easier.

The GE plan starts by listing a number of symptoms of what might be wrong with your appliance. Once the handyperson has diagnosed the problem, he or she can turn to a chart to determine the degree of difficulty. The chart will indicate whether or not a repairman is needed.

While textbooks can say a lot, there's often the unclear sentence or two that can baffle you when you are in the middle of replacing the motor for, say, a dishwasher. With the parts scattered around the floor and the clock nearing midnight, you may need an interpretation pronto.

For such instances, GE has made available specially trained repair people who have made repairs described in the manuals as part of their education.

So dialing a 24-hour hotline, you can get personal advice, and if necessary, a technician with advanced skills can assist you.

The hotline is 1-800-626-2000, and is toll-free. The manuals may be purchased at repair centers for $7.

HOW ABOUT THAT? — Things you may not have even wondered about

... Ernest von Feuchtersleben once said, "The secret of prolonging life consists of not shortening it."

... It took almost 17 pounds of spuds to supply the average American with potato chips in 1980 (anyone for munchies?)

... The government has finally approved a flip safety cap for prescription drugs; flip it to one side and it is child (and adult) resistant, flip it over and it allows people who have handicaps easy access to the drugs inside

... An American Council on Science and Health publication cautions consumers should regard practitioners who rely on hair analysis to detect nutritional deficiencies with suspicion; that scientifically oriented nutritionists do not use hair analysis as a primary method of detecting problems.

WAYS TO CUT BACK ON SALT — Everyone, whether or not he has a health problem, should cut back on ingesting salt, says Carol Courser, nutritionist with the University of New Hampsire.

Speaking on behalf of the Health Insurance Association of America, she said people can avoid salt by not having shakers on the dining table or kitchen counter top. Use half the salt recommended in recipes and substitute herbs for salt when possible. Avoid processed foods like luncheon meats, which she said have extraordinarily high sodium levels.

Lecture series on midlife concerns

NEW YORK (AP) — The Midlife Institute, established last spring at Marymount Manhattan College to focus on the concerns of women in their middle years, has scheduled a lecture series this fall, "Midlife Transitions."

It will deal with problems women face during the transition period, such as health questions, financial planning, changing family relationships and elderly parents.

Get vaccine for flu now

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control recommends that people at high risk of contracting influenza be vaccinated against the disease before winter.

Health officials are unsure whether a flu epidemic will strike the United States this year or what strains of the disease will predominate, the CDC said Thursday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

"This underscores the desirability of immunizing the high-risk population before winter ...," the CDC said.

Bermuda ideal for vacation

By BRIAN OWENS

HAMILTON, Bermuda — Sunworshipers flock every year to Bermuda where pink sand, warm water and sunny skies combine to make the beaches among the best in the world.

Pink beaches are one of Bermuda's oddities. The pinkish color is caused by the erosion of seashells once inhabited by marine animals called "foraminifera." Tourists take home bottlesful of the sand as a reminder of Bermuda.

The island's warm waters are caused by another geological phenomenon, the Gulf Stream. This warm flow puts ocean temperatures at Bermuda in the mid-80s during the summer, and also keeps the water warm enough for hardy bathers throughout the remainder of the year.

The most-used beaches are located along Bermuda's south shore, only minutes from Hamilton. Others, private beaches among them, are spread throughout the island, hidden among the many nooks and crannies of the meandering coastline.

While there are enough public beaches to satisfy a normal beach lover, it is often the exclusivity of a private beach which arouses an explorer instinct among the adventurous. Be warned: most private beaches are not directly accessible by land unless you are prepared to trespass. It is generally recognized, however, that it's lawful to get to them from the waterside, although you are technically trespassing if you step above the mean line between high and low tide. But rarely are easy-going Bermudians likely to be bothered by the shenanigans of beachgoers.

Some 20 public beches, swept daily by government-operated cleaning machines, cover the south shore coastline. These have such names as Grape Bay, Elbow Beach, Warwick Long Bay, Horseshoe Bay, Jobson's cove, Stonehole Bay, Chaplin Bay and Church Bay.

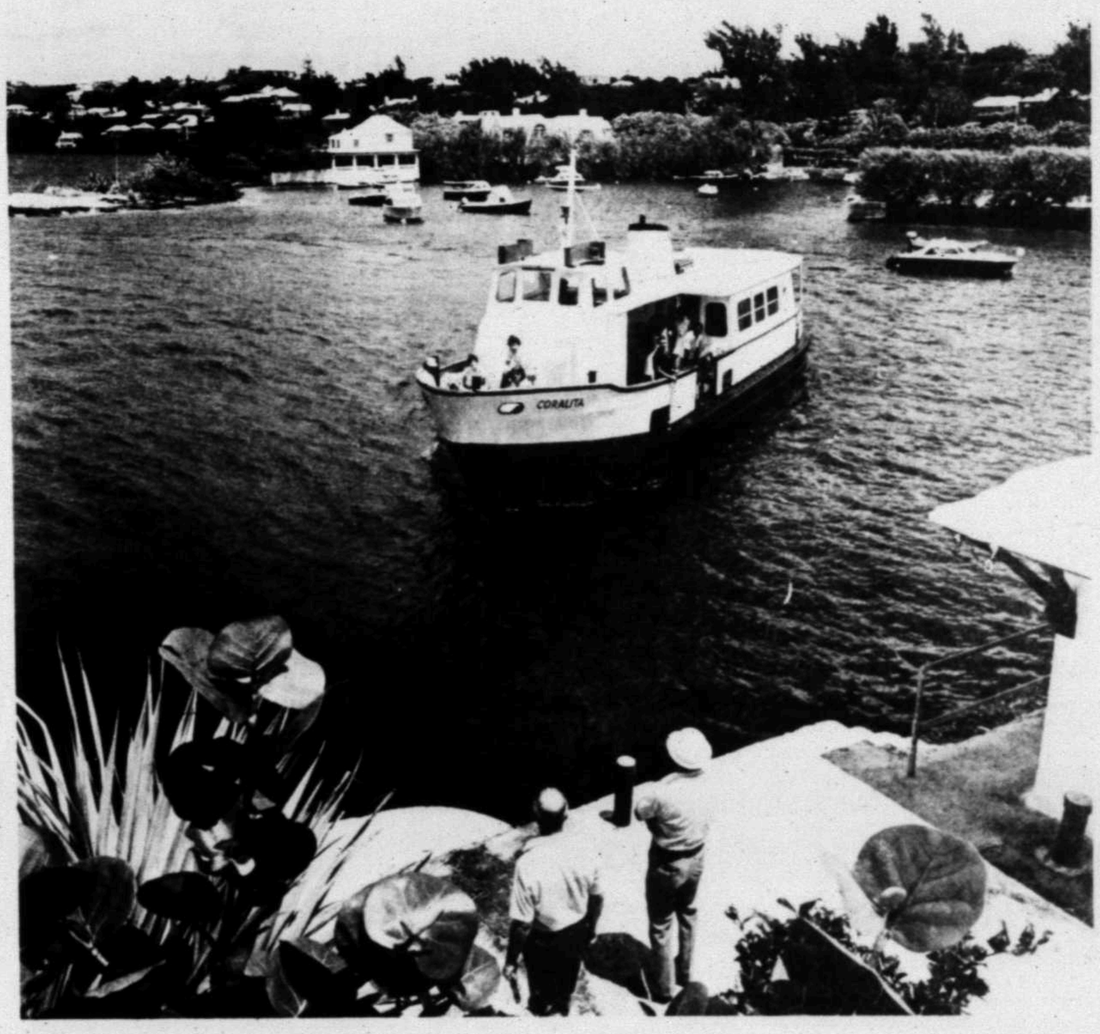
The most popular seems to be Horseshoe Bay, a crescent-shaped strip of beach about half a mile long and protected at both ends by huge, craggy rocks. Beyond the statuesque rocks at the eastern end and out of range of frisbee throwers, there is a maze of beautiful, hidden beaches, perfect for honeymooners.

Closer to town is Elbow Beach, a long stretch of lovely public beach shared at each extremity with private establishments. Here, on some days the surf can be as high as two or three feet, excellent for body surfing.

A fairly reliable rule is the further west you travel in Bermuda to reach a beach the more likely you will find solitude. A case in point is West Whale Bay, where there's a tiny but secluded beach at the foot of some bluffs. Compared to the rolling swells east of here, West Whale bay is calm and so clear that coral reefs can be seen for long distances out to sea.

Somerset Long Bay, further west, is adjacent to well-groomed lawns and tall, shady trees, and is ideal for picnics. The beach is excellent for children learning to swim, as bathers must walk far to reach deep water.

Beaches east of Hamilton include Shelly Bay, a small but extremely popular beach on the north side of the island. In the St. George's area, Tobacco Bay has a clean and quaint beach, within view of historic Fort St. Catherine.



From sunrise to sundown, Bermuda's toy-like ferryboats scury non-stop between Hamilton and public wharfs in the harbor area and Great Sound, taking tourists, school children, shoppers and commuters to their destinations.

By ART BERMAN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

GYOR, Hungary — It was 2 o'clock on a Sunday morning and the cavernous, once-elegant railroad station was alive with young Hungarians, some slightly tipsy, on their way home from a Saturday night on the town.

A few older people and olive-uniformed soldiers also were waiting for early morning trains.

The crowd of about 100 was weary but mellow. These were our fellow travelers, non-politically speaking; all of us would have a long wait for a train here in northeast Hungary.

If the Hungarians thought that odd, they were kind enough not to stare except, perhaps, for an occasional furtive glance. But, then, people had been glancing all night at these strange Americans whose clothes were a little brighter and better fitting and whose luggage came in different sizes but still matched.

IF I HAD BEEN ABLE to speak Hungarian I might have told these folks that Gyor wasn't on our itinerary. In fact, we'd never heard of Gyor, which is near the Czechoslovakian border.

But our trip had become a bit complicated nine hours earlier when my wife and I were kicked off the Orient Express on the other side of the Austrian border.

Let me describe that first because there is a moral to this story for any traveler, especially an inexperienced one like me: When approaching strange countries, be sure to comply with visa regulations.

We had inadvertently accepted the assurance of a well-intentioned American that our Romanian visas would get us across Hungary because we didn't plan to leave the train from Vienna to Bucharest. (Relatives were waiting for us in Romania.)

We should have asked a Hungarian.

WHEN WE BOARDED the Orient Express, best known as a setting for spy stories and intrilue (but really just an old train), we expected an interesting overnight trip across Hungary.

But not that interesting.

Within a few minutes of settling into our sleeping compartment we were approached by a burgundy-uniformed porter who spoke little English but managed to ask for our Hungarian visas. We quickly realized we were up the Danube without the proper papers.

Within an hour, despite an impassioned discussion joined by several multilingual passengers, the porter was depositing us at a tiny depot a few miles from the Hungarian border.

We had two choices: Catch a train back to Vienna and wait for the Hungarian Consulate to open Monday morning, wasting 48 hours, or take a cab to the border, try to get a visa there and, if we were quick enough, catch the Orient Express 56 minutes later at a brief layover just inside Hungary.

We chose to try the border; we also weren't quick enough.

A CAB DRIVER with an old Ford understood our plight and, for about $50, raced down an asphalt country road (by then it was raining, too) and in half an hour reached the border station. It turned out to be a low building bustling with activity, and delays.

The cabbie, a small, cheerful man with a gold tooth and a wool cap, nursed us through the bureaucracy, stopping occasionally to shake hands with various soldiers and officials. (We had a feeling he had been there before.)

For another $30 or so we had our pictures taken by a Polaroid camera, filled out several forms and were issued the proper documents, in triplicate.

The cabbie then drove us through two military checkpoints without fanfare and into the Hungarian countryside. The rain stopped as we motored through a little old village, Hegyeshalom, where a bride in white standing outside a church helped soften our sense of unreality.

AFTER AN INTENSE consultation with a chubby woman train official in a gray uniform, our driver told us the train to Gyor would be leaving in about three hours. From Gyor we could get to Budapest and points east.

For three hours my wife and I sat on a wooden bench in a dingy waiting room, sharing it with an old woman and mother with three children. The women chatted in Hungarian. The children, two girls and a boy, showed off for us.

Frayed posters on the wall exhorted everyone to try harder for dear old communism. (Only part of one word, socialis, made any sense, but we got the idea.)

As night fell, the room darkened. It was almost pitch-black when the energy-scarce Hungarians turned on a bare bulb.

At about 10 p.m. a railroad worker was kind enough to motion to our train, which was even older and moldier then the Orient Express. We climbed aboard, again into darkness; when the train started, the lights came on. Less than two hours later, after a conductor frowned at our Orient Express ticket but finally relented, we were in the spacious station in Gyor.

THE WAITING ROOM had a vaulted ceiling and a balcony along three sides. It had granite floors and marble walls and huge windows looking out into darkness. But it was dingy, chipped, scarred and smelly.

A young blonde woman was selling cigarettes and candy from a small kiosk, and, having missed out on the dining car, I tried to buy some candy.

One complication: I had no Hungarian money.

So I offered a handful of Austrian schillings, and an animated conversation in sign language began. Eventually, a bargain was almost struck: two candy bars for a lot of Austrian bills.

"That's too much," a female voice said.

I turned to see a young English-speaking woman. She was in a crowd that had gathered quietly to watch my negotiations.

SHE QUICKLY CONCLUDED the deal, cutting the price to a reasonable amount before shunning our efforts to ask some questions — no one else there spoke English — and hurrying away on the arm of her boyfriend with a nervous "Thank you. Good night."

As we nibbled our candy, a soldier began pacing in front of us, adding to our feeling of unease.

But after a few minutes we realized his interest was in the blonde in the kiosk. And it was purely social. After buying candy and cigarettes — more than he seemed to need — he left to catch a train.

Around 1 a.m. the young people started arriving. They talked, laughed, dozed on benches and horsed around much like Americans of college age. Most were dressed in baggy, drab clothes, Some, however, sported a brighter look. And one Hungarian dude had on jeans and cowboy boots, so we weren't the only oddballs around.

Our foreign look did not discourage several young people from approaching us with bills in hand, seeking change for a bank of nearby vending machines. We could only politely wave them away, unable to tell them the machines didn't work.

Advice about cruises

By JERRY HULSE
Los Angeles Times Washington Post News Service

With fall just starting, dozens of ships are sailing to the Mexican Riviera, the Caribbean, the Bahamas and other destinations with exotic-sounding names. (Rio, Sydney, Tangier, Nice, Istanbul). Everything from weekend trips to around-the-world voyages. Millions of dollars have been spent on four brand-new ships: the Tropicale, the Atlantic, the Song of Norway and the Scandinavia. They'll be joined by other well-known liners offering a number of tempting packages (including fly-drive combinations).

Your travel agent can fill you in on the details.

A handy new booklet provides "answers to the most-asked questions about cruises." Tips on what to wear, traveling alone, dining, etc. Free copies by sending a self-addressed (stamped) business-size envelope to Cruise Lines International Association, Pier 35, Suite 200, San Francisco, Calif. 94133.

Several cruise lines are offering free air travel to ports of departure. Among them: Sitmar Cruises, Royal Caribbean Cruise Line, Cunard Line, Norwegian Caribbean Line, Carnival Cruise Lines, Norwegian American Cruises, Paquet Cruises, Home Lines Cruises. Other companies are providing cash rebates, money-saving certificates. Example: Princess Cruises offers $1,000 credit on future trips to passengers sailing on its South Pacific-Orient cruise. (A similar deal is available from Norwegian American Cruises.) Cunard Line is offering complimentary hotel accommodations (seven days) at Cunard hotels in Barbados and St. Lucia; Royal Viking Line is passing out $750 and $1,500 certificates good for future cruises.

Cost of cruising varies ship to ship. Location is a big factor. You'll pay more for a cabin with a porthole, for example.

Sundance Square in downtown Fort Worth is a fascinating collection of 12 turn-of-the century buildings that have been restored to their historical appearance. Today, they are sites for restaurants, shops, boutiques and galleries. These three buildings date to 1906, 1900 and 1880.

Sundance Square brings Fort Worth history to life

FORT WORTH — amidst the towering skyscrapers and construction transforming downtown Fort Worth is Sundance Square, a collection of 12 turn-of-the-century buildings that have been restored to their historical appearance.

The two-square-block area, along Houston, Main and Commerce and between Second and Third streets, brings alive an important part of Fort Worth's colorful history.

During the early 1900s Fort Worth was experiencing a transition from a rural frontier town to a major urban center of oil, cattle and commercial trade. Main Street was still the scene of boisterous cowboys and saloons, yet flower parades were becoming popular and the automobile was making its debut.

Today these buildings in Sundace Square are sites for restaurants, boutiques, specialty shops, galleries, The Sid Richardson Collection of Western Art and offices. From Stetson cowboy hats and Texas chili to the latest designer fashions and exotic flowers, Sundance Square has something to offer everyone. Landscaped courtyards and red-bricked sidewalks lined with trees and period-style lampposts enhance the nostalgic appeal.

The Sid Richardson Collection of Western Art will exhibit paintings from the late prominent oilman's personal art collection, comprised primarily of works by Frederic Remington and Charles M. Russell.

Hall Galleries displays a collection of oil painting by American and French masters of the 19th and early 20th centuries as well as special exhibitions. Sundance Gallery offers Americana folk art and collectibles including rare handmade quilts, concha belts, carved and stuffed animals and other handcrafted objects.

Among the most well-known and historically significant buildings in Sundance Square are the Knights of Pythias Building and the Plaza Hotel. The original Knights of Pythias Building was built in 1881, but after it was destroyed by fire it was rebuilt in 1901. The three-story, turreted structure is known as the first Pythian temple erected in the world.

One of its most notable tenants was Staley T. McBrayer, who invented the rotary offset press. The Knights of Pythias Building is listed in the National Register of Historic Places and is a Texas Historic Landmark.

The Plaza Hotel was built in 1908 by Winfield Scott, one of Fort Worth's leading citizens and richest entrepreneurs. The restaurant that resides on the building's first floor is named Winfield's '08 in his honor.

The building that is occupied by Cowboy Culture dates back to 1880 and is believed to be one of the oldest existing structures in Fort Worth.

For those buildings that could not be restored because they were not structurally sound, replicas have been contructed. Sundance Square is part of City Center, a nine-block development project.

New England town has much to offer

By BILL PEEPLES
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ROCKPORT, Mass.-Thirty miles northeast of Boston, as the sea gull wings it, Cape Ann doffs her bonnet to the Atlantic. At the cape's easternmost harbor, Rockport keeps vigil on the ocean shore with more ease than larger towns.

Massachusetts folks call Cape Ann and the area north toward Newburyport the North Shore. The North Shore's Rockport citizen ensured a slow pace for their town more than a hundred years ago by closing every tavern.

The visitor may take his own setup to a restaurant, but if you want something peppy at home you'll have to go next door, to Gloucester, or buzz a liquor store there for a delivery.

The European who got things going around here generally is credited as Capt. John Smith of Plymouth fame. He mapped this territory in 1614, named it New England, and published a colorful account of his findings in England. That's why the Pilgrims hired him six years later. A soldier of fortune, Smith not only knew the land but could train the settlers to defend themselves in the new, hostile country. He already had fought in the Balkans and had been a prisoner of the Turks.

Nowadays the excitement in Rockport centers on artists and galleries. Downtown at the harbor, on Bearskin Neck, an old fisherman's shanty painted dark red is called Motif No. 1. That's because it is billed as a theme for more artists than any other building in the United States. Colorful lobster pot buoys hang in rows on the side of the shanty, and you may see an artist recording his or her impression of it all from a vantage point on the next pier.

BROWSE AT THE Pewter Shop dating from Revolutionary War time, look for specialties at Ross Candle House. Shops abound. You'll find that many former boat-building spaces, chandleries and a cod-liver-oil rendering plant are the private homes and studios of artists.

A couple of the wharves have rounded ends, one of them Bradley Wharf where Motif No. 1 stands. The granite-block piers were built that way so large ships could make fast, broadside to the ends, then be pulled around into the tight channel alongside the piers. Too risky to sail right in.

Among the many shops of Bearskin Neck you'll find fresh cooked lobster for $3.79, but it's probably the art galleries that attract most visitors. Seasonal or all year, they offer oils and watercolors of local artists as well as others.

Even the Rockport Art Association displays art from all over. True to the dry preference of Rockporters, the association is housed in what used to be a tavern, built in 1770.

Just a couple of blocks up from Rockport's harbor, turn left on Norwood Avenue. No. 3 is on the left, a roomy bed-and-breakfast place called the Cable House. The harbor view appears again inside. Down the front hall and through the long living room you come to a glass doorway onto a deck large enough to entertain a social club, or have your breakfast.

Owner Mrs. Melissa Smith used to operate a restaurant. You'll see her in the kitchen rustling up special treats. Breakfast may be called continental, but it's served at a table where the coffee and rolls and juice keep coming until you've had your fill. You can have it in the living room or on the big deck.

THE LIVING ROOM used to be an office. It was the nerve center, the American terminus of the trans-Atlantic cable that was laid in 1884. Now Cable House is making visitors comfortable in a setting graced by Victorian furnishings, and that harbor view. (Rates about $35 double.)

Down the hill from Cable House, past Bearskin Neck, the white Colonial Peg Leg Restaurant and Inn will catch your eye. Offerings in its main dining room or the Greenhouse will catch your appetite. A friend who lives in Rockport says it's the best restaurant in town.

Restaurants seldom list a price for lobster on their menus. The price depends upon what the lobster fishermen charged that day. And at Peg Leg, be assured that the lobster you order came out of the sea that day. It didn't spend a few days in a tank ashore, as many do. Order a fine steak, if you prefer. It will be done to perfection.

Upstairs and across the street in three other Colonial buildings Peg Leg Inn offers 31 rooms, all with private bath. No phones, but they have TV sets. Many room views look out to sea past the public beach. You might spend the night in a 200-year-old building that has sliding shutters that can close over its windows as protection against Indian attacks. But the comfort is 1982. (Room rates: up to $55 double.)

Up a few streets, the Addison Choate Inn is neat as you'd wish, with breakfast in bed, flowers in your room, antiques all around in its cheery rooms. Even a diving board for the swimming pool. Addison Choate is one of those places you like right away, because of its innkeepers, Margot and Brad Sweet. You can tell they like what they're doing.

At Addison Choate your continental breakfast most likely will include home-baked delicacies. At $45 for the room, you can't go wrong. A separate gardener's cottage is $60 for two or $75 for four. It's just a short walk to the center of town.

THEN THERE'S the Captain's House at 109 Marmion Way. It's right by the ocean, and your continental breakfast will be on the porch facing the sea. Its living room has fireplaces at each end, in case the evening gets nippy. A neat place of few rooms run by Carole and George Dangerfield. (Rates $32 to $46, depending upon the season and the room.)

Up the shore road toward Pigeon Cove and Halibut Point, the Yankee Clipper's three spacious buildings are planted on both sides of the road, two of them on the sea side. You'll find pineapple-motif four-poster beds, bedrooms and suites, large public rooms, a no-smoking policy in some public rooms and a large, heated saltwater pool. The main house was built in 1840, and its furnishings fit the Victorian period. They'll send you rates. It's P.O. Box 520, Rockport 01966.

While in Rockport find time to drive a few miles down the road to Gloucester. Much more famous than Rockport, Gloucester has many of Rockport's attractions, and in profusion. Gloucester has scheduled its Waterfront Festival this year for Aug. 21-22.

Gloucester has a much bigger harbor than Rockport. That means more boats, more shops, more places to eat. Of the many reasons for a jaunt to Gloucester, a visit to Hammond Castle Museum will amuse and mystify you.

The garish castle is a mishmash of several periods of medieval architecture. John Hays Hammond Jr. had it thrown together in the late 1920s to be his home. Always fascinated by castles, when he put lots of money into the bank from his electronics patents, he built his castle.

The building's Great Hall houses an electric organ whose pipes (8,600 of them) rise several stories high, one of the reasons Hammond built the towers so tall. Electronic gadgets, always concealed behind a wall or under a floor, operated a rainstorm in the courtyard swimming-pool area, for instance, when Hammond entertained notables of business and the theater. It was a quick way to water all the plants around the pool.

Peninsulas such as Cape Ann, offering everything from deep-sea fishing to schooner sailing, is why travelers visit New England. Glaciers and blizzards have scoured the landscape, molding its granite. But in spring and summer, wildflowers and greenery soften the scene, awaiting the color artistry of leaf-changing time in the fall.

Video whiz turns hobby into money-maker

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Leo Daniels has zapped his way to five national records for video games, making him one of the most successful video game players in the country.

And Daniels has parlayed his talent into a successful business. He has coached two other national video game champions and is part of the reason North Carolina is becoming known as the home of video game champions.

There are 10 video game champions living in North Carolina, according to Walter Day, who runs the Twin Galaxies International Scoreboard in Ottumwa, Iowa, the only service in the country that logs video game scores certified by video arcade owners.

Daniels' passion for video games has become a business — he manages the Light Years Amusement Center in Wrightsville Beach. Eight of North Carolina's 15 records have been set at Light Years.

"When we opened, we advertised for people to come down and try to break records or challenge me," said Daniels, who is vice president of the firm owned by businessmen Andy Howell and Louten Hedgteth.

Daniels has played as many as 42 hours, 10 minutes in an attempt to set a record on Asteroids. He had to quit with a nervous stomach. He played 27 hours, 13 minutes to set the national record on another game, Robotron.

He began planning a video career in 1978, while a sophomore at Hoggard High School in Wilmington. He spent $700 to $1,200 in quarters during the summers of 1979 and 1980 to learn his trade.

The investment paid off this year when the 21-year-old Daniels won five national records, making him perhaps the most successful video game player in the nation, according to Day.

One of Daniels' students is the youngest video game champion in the country — 11-year-old Charles Brown. Brown, a champion at a game called Looping, says he spends $50 a week honing his skills. He earns his money mowing lawns and cleaning the glass on video games for Daniels.

"He taught me a lot of things, strategies to most of these games," said Scotty Williams, 15, who holds the national record on Vanguard.

Warren: man behind hostages' release

By MARYLOUISE OATES
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Warren and Marie Christopher are at home, back in the California ranch house that sits high in the hills, behind a picket fence.

It is a quiet, domestic scene, backgrounded by the red-and-white quilt that Marie Christopher says set her off on Americana collecting.

The westside of Los Angeles is far from the Iranian hostage crisis, where his successful role as the chief American negotiator made corporate attorney Warren Christopher, the No. 2 man in the State Department, an overnight hero, a symbol of loyalty and determination and just plain old American pluck.

In the traces of the North Dakota accent he still carries at 56, he is telling how people even now stop him on the street, struck by his familiar face, insisting that they have met him somewhere before.

It is a problem. "I can't tell them that I'm the guy that did X," he says. It is only later that you realize that he is reticent about using words like Iran and hostages and negotiations.

Of her husband's new-found fame, Marie Christopher is certain but not surprised. First, because "I knew what kind of a person he was."

THEY MET in the fall of 1956, and, after two weeks of dating, sat talking in a French restaurant. "Chris was talking about going skiing in Aspen in Januarynan- he said we would be married by then.' And I said, 'Yes.' " And did they go skiing on their honeymoon?

Yes, "but we had to stop in Washington first, because he had worked on a case in the Supreme Court."

She is tan with a tennis-thin body and blond, her hair in a new, very short cut. "My daughter talked me into it. She said I had the same haircut for 30 years."

It is that haircut that is visible in the dozen-plus pictures that line the den in their home. The pictures are the only indication of their public life; shots of the Christopher family with Lyndon Johnson (he served in the latter part of that administration as the No. 2 man in the Department of Justice); a picture of Christopher, Henry Kissinger and Averell Harriman strolling down a Washington street; a warmly autographed shot of Marie Christopher with Edmund Muskie at a dinner planned for both the Christophers and held even though he was settling the hostage crisis.

The pictures show the smooth faces of a couple that seem used to being public. Yet Christopher says he and his wife are "not very self-confident. We are both shy."

She overcame her shyness in Washington, she says, and also her stage fright at state dinners by being prepared — with questions. She would have 10 or so questions ready, and her dinner partner would then keep things going, she said.

"Boy, I learned to make small talk," she says.

ONE THING she mentioned; Christopher is known in the Los Angeles legal and political circles as "Chris." And that is what his wife usually called him. Until they went to Washington, and the "Warren" became necessary "so people would know who I was talking about."

In the years he has gone between private practice and public life — in Los Angeles, he headed the County Bar Association in the early 1970s and served on the McCone Commission investigating the Watts riots — Christopher has constructed a mosaic image of distance and objectivity. For his wife, it is most bothersome when people say he has no sense of humor. "He has a wonderful sense of humor. But it only comes out with best friends that he can be relaxed with."

And Christopher himself is aware that he does not invite easy intimacy. "I don't suppose all that many people get to know me underneath," he said. "We all erect certain barriers or defenses .... I would prefer it another way, but I suppose my personality makes it that way."

Perhaps that is why, when he talks about his law firm, O'Melveny & Myers, which he currently chairs, the terms are more like the ones expected from a Midwest banker.

He insists that a law firm provides the chance for what he calls a "horizontal relationship," as opposed to what he terms corporations' "vertical relationships." Then, citing reasons that he is happy to be back in Los Angeles, he said that he felt a special closeness to his partners, since "these are the men I grew up with."

That small-town, Americana style comes through when both Christophers discuss their lives together, even to the fact that they prefer "American-style" food, finding a restaurant that they like and going there regularly and that he avoids both spicy dishes and pasta. He credits his wife with being a wonderful cook.

"ONE OF THE special things that keeps our life so happy is that every night we will have an outstanding dinner," Christopher said, smiling at his wife. He is "not a hearty eater," she said, and the ultraslim figure that, with his penchant for neatness, gives him an impeccable look, comes without effort.

At dinner time, with the children growing up, the family engaged in constant debates about grammar. "Many people in our family have a thing for English and for words," Christopher said. They would debate definitions, with someone rushing to get a dictionary or a grammar book, looking up secondary meanings to the word under scrutiny.

Marie Christopher spent most of her married life working in the home, raising their three children, Scott, Thomas and Kristen, now all away at school. Christopher "never had a lot of time" with the children, "but he certainly took a lot of interest," she said. Those years she kept busy with volunteer work.

"Washington is a difficult town for spouses, whether it is a man or a woman," he said.

"I knew how long my days were. Long. And when I came home I was preoccupied. It wasn't that I refused to talk ... so much was going on in my head," he said. Even though friends were surprised that a high-ranking official's wife was working in a boutique, "I loved it," she said.

"I had done so much volunteer work. And I wanted to do something different." Although she had taught school for two years after graduation from the University of Southern California, a few months after she married, she stopped working. Going back, "I was really scared ... but I wanted to be paid for what I was doing."

SHE VIEWED the tennis shop job as a great success — despite having to hide in the stock room several times when wives of ambassadors would show up. But when she returned to Los Angeles her plans to continue working went awry.

Christopher is abroad several times a month and with the children grown, his wife is free to accompany him. She gave up the idea of working, even part time. "I always have my suitcases mentally packed," she said.

The constant travel, the emphasis on foreign affairs is the major change that Washington produced in their lives.

"I hope that Warren will have the chance to just do something in foreign affairs," she said, echoing the thoughts of many political observers who see Christopher as the logical choice for secretary of state if a Democrat takes the White House in 1984.

Is he eager for that? Yes. And no.

"I really like my life the way it is. I'm really challenged," said Christopher, who currently chairs the management committee at his prestigious firm. And, "by now I know how tough Washington is .... how unforgiving, how heartbreaking it can be for people."

As far as that very public role, "I don't crave it. I don't yearn for it."

ASKED ABOUT public service, he said, "I don't want to be too Boy Scoutish about it. I feel a sense of having been extremely lucky .... It's fair to say that my excursions into public life have made life much more interesting."

For himself, government service was the "chance to stretch your ability." He pauses for a moment. For his children, he adds, there was the chance to meet the influential, the important people of their times, yet there was "the disability of the prominence of the father."

As usual, Christopher has presented both sides of the question, bearing out his reputation as a supreme negotiator, as a man who presents all the options.

Marie Christopher said the couple, married 25 years, has never had an argument.

"We would much rather give in to each other," he agreed. "That's the tranquillity of the relationship .... Alphonse and Gaston." She interjects, nodding, "Yes, after you. No, after you."

"We would prefer to do what the other wanted to do," he said.

Confrontation is always avoided. " 'You never argue,' the children have complained," she said. They say they "don't know how to deal with situations in which people argue."

FALL 82 • A TOUCH OF Adventure

DINNER FROM THE DELI

Delicatessens have been flourishing for two hundred years. They originated in Germany where hundreds of smoked meat items were produced. The shops became known for their fine array of ready-to-eat foods, and soon cheeses, robust salads, specialty breads and a variety of mustards were added to please customer tastes.

During the 1900's emigrant butchers and shopkeepers brought their special recipes to America and started the first delicatessens here, mostly in larger cities. Deli pastrami sandwiches, corned beef on rye sandwiches, dill pickles and macaroni salad have long been popular in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. Travelers often sought out these items when visiting the cities.

It wasn't until the mid 1970's that deli departments started cropping up in supermarkets. Shoppers told their grocers they wanted a place where they could buy quality cheese and meats and other specialty foods. Shoppers added that they were also looking for personal attention, good service and the opportunity to order just the quantity of food they wanted.

To answer that need, the supermarket deli was born. In 1977 only 34% of newly opened stores had delis. By 1980 the service deli was included in most new supermarkets and many older stores were installing them. Today virtually all large supermarkets, stores with sales of $1,000,000 or more a year, are equipped with deli counters. It's easy to understand why they're so popular.

The deli stocks a mouth-watering array of products not always found on the store's grocery shelves. The quality is consistently high. And the person behind the counter provides plenty of old-fashioned service—such as letting you sample a cheese before you buy, or giving advice on how to serve a product that's new to you.

Quality and service, however, aren't the only benefits. Add convenience and getting just the amount you want, and you can see how neatly the supermarket deli fits today's lifestyles.

For example, the growing number of one-member and two-member households often find it hard to buy small portions. Not so at the grocery deli. You can buy single servings of salads and pastas or just a few slices of meat or cheese.

Working wives and mothers also find delis an invaluable source for quick, delicious meals. And, since the kitchen is no longer solely a woman's domain—men and teenagers also shop and cook—the deli offers an ideal way for any busy cook to put together a meal or party in a hurry.

Remember the deli at party time, too. There are special platters with a variety of meats and cheeses, breads and crackers. Or you can buy the foods and arrange them yourself. Deli foods and sandwiches travel well on picnics, camping or hiking outings and on boat trips.

Deli food also meets the needs of today's nutrition-conscious consumer. The breads, from spicy rye to dark pumpernickle, are high in B-vitamins. The salads provide roughage and a wide variety of vitamins; meats and cheese are excellent sources of protein. The condiments that go with deli foods such as mustard and pickles are low in calories. And, if you have a special dietary concern, the deli department has many options. For example, Louis Rich oven roasted turkey breast contains only 30 calories per ounce, Oscar Mayer ham is 95% fat-free and unique Lorraine Cheese is 99% sodium and cholesterol free.

The next time you stop at the grocery to pick up something for dinner, head straight for the deli department. Get a loaf of crusty bread, cheese, ham, turkey breast and salad for a side dish. Then, since spicy mustard is a "must" for sandwiches and cold cuts, pick up Gulden's brown mustard. When you get home you can build a sensational sandwich, or put together an appetizing cold plate in a matter of minutes.

FOUR LAYER FEAST

Slice a large round loaf (1-1/2 lbs.) of cracked wheat, light or dark rye bread horizontally into four layers. Spread each layer with Gulden's brown mustard and assemble:

Close sandwich with top crust. Insert 8 long skewers through top crust to bottom of sandwich. Garnish each skewer with cherry tomatoes, olives, pickles or cocktail onions. Cut sandwich into 8 wedges between skewers. Eat like a watermelon. Makes 8 servings.

FAMILY STYLE CHEF'S SALAD

- 1 head green or red leafy lettuce
- 2 eggs, hard cooked, sliced into quarters
- 10-12 cherry tomatoes
- 1/2 lb. Lorraine cheese, cut into 1x2x1/4-inch pieces
- 1/2 lb. ham, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 1/2 lb. Louis Rich roasted turkey breast, cut into 1-inch cubes
- salt and pepper

Tear greens into bite-sized pieces in salad bowl. Add remaining ingredients and toss with Sesame Curry Dressing. Makes 8 servings.

Note: This main dish salad may be made into smaller portions by cutting down amounts of lettuce and other ingredients. If desired add sliced green pepper and sliced onions.

SESAME CURRY DRESSING

- 1-1/2 cups salad oil or
- 1/2 cup olive oil and 1 cup salad oil
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon Gulden's brown mustard
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- dash of nutmeg
- 2 tablespoons of Sherry (optional)
- 3 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds

Combine all ingredients in blender except sesame seeds. Blend for one minute. Makes 2-1/4 cups. Add sesame seeds. Use 3/4 cup on Chef's Salad. Store remaining in refrigerator for use on other salads.

DELI CORDON BLEU

Spread each thin slice of ham with Gulden's brown mustard; top with a turkey slice and a slice of Lorraine cheese. Roll; place seam side down on a shallow baking pan and bake in 350° oven or toaster oven about 10 minutes.

For microwave, place one roll on plate. Microwave about 2 minutes on HIGH power or until cheese just begins to melt.

MUSTARD BUTTER

- 1/4 lb. butter, softened
- 1/4 cup Gulden's brown mustard

Mix by hand or in food processor. Use for making sandwiches. Keeps well in refrigerator. Makes about 1/2 cup.

MONTE CRISTO SANDWICH

- 1 slice ham
- 1 slice Lorraine cheese
- 1 slice Louis Rich turkey breast
- 2 slices French toast

Layer ham, cheese and turkey breast between French toast. Place on ungreased baking pan and heat in 400° oven for 15 minutes. Makes 1 sandwich.

FRUITY MUSTARD SAUCE

- 1 jar (12 oz.) damson plum or apple jelly
- 1 jar (8-1/2 oz.) mango chutney
- 1 cup Gulden's brown mustard

Combine all ingredients in medium saucepan, and simmer gently for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Delicious served warm or chilled over generous slices of turkey breast or ham.

Jayceettes soon to hold 'M' night

You can catch a falling star and put it in your pocket. Or you can see a shooting star and make a wish upon it. Or you can come to the Sept. 28 "M" Night being held by the Midland Jayceettes.

A Jayceette "M" night is an open invitation to women between the ages of 18 and 35 who would like to learn first-hand about the Jayceette organization.

During the evening, there will be a film, "The Jayceette Story," refreshments and informal visiting.

According to Maureen Dotson-Wall, publicity chairperson for the Midland chapter, the Midland Jayceettes are a member of the United States Jayceettes and share in working for nationally sponsored programs as well as local, close-to-home needs.

"On a national and state level, the Jayceettes work for St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., Muscular Dystrophy Association, March of Dimes, Cystic Fibrosis, Juvenile Diabetes and the Rocky Mountain Muscular Sclerosis Research Center in Denver, Colo.

"On a local level, the Midland Jayceettes support Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, Midland Animal Control, Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center and serve as an Auxiliary to the Midland Jaycees," Ms. Dotson-Wall said.

The Midland Jayceettes offer leadership training and personal development for women through community service, she added.

"There is no limit to what you can become, so come light the way with us. To become all you can be and give it away is really love in action," said Ms. Dotson-Wall.

The "M" Night is set for Sept. 28 at 7 p.m. at the Girl Scout Hut, 901 W. Dengar.

"Jayceettes might just be that something special for your pocket that you've been wishing for."

Therapy breeds career

Personality types 'A', 'B' studied

By RICHARD SALTUS
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — It's been more than four years since a pioneering study began here to find out whether "Type A" heart patients — competitive, hostile people who always are in a hurry — could change their ways and avoid heart attacks.

The verdict is still out, but preliminary results show that many Type A people can indeed learn to reduce their "coronary-prone" behavior.

What's not yet clear — but should be known in another year or so — is whether adopting a calmer approach to life will by itself lessen the chances of heart attacks.

DR. MEYER FRIEDMAN, a San Francisco cardiologist who believes that reducing Type A behavior can avert heart attacks, said that statistical trends "look pretty good" — meaning there is a good chance that his point will be proved when all the data are analyzed. Only two years' worth of data on the subjects — 1,035 patients who had suffered a prior heart attack — has been fully analyzed. Friedman said the third year's results should go a long way toward answering the key question of the study.

The researchers already have discovered that patients who were taught to reduce their Type A behavior have shown a lower rate of second heart attacks than patients who simply got regular checkups. But another group of patients in the study also had a lower rate of recurrent heart attacks, and this clouds the picture.

These patients got no advice specifically directed at Type A behavior, but received unusually thorough counseling from heart specialists on other steps they could take to protect their hearts, including guidance about diet, exercise and new medical advances in heart disease.

If Type A treatment really is superior to the cardiology counseling alone, then this difference may become apparent after more time has elapsed in the study.

THE STUDY SHOWS that Type A modifiers had the lowest heart attack rate of all, but this rate is not significantly lower by statistical standards than among the patients who received only counseling from cardiologists.

The Recurrent Coronary Prevention Project is funded primarily by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, with support by the San Francisco Bay Area business community. The outcome will be the proof of the pudding for the theories advanced by Friedman and Dr. Ray Rosenman in their 1974 book, "Type A Behavior and Your Heart."

The doctors said that they believe that the sort of behavior they labeled Type A is the major cause of coronary heart disease — the No. 1 killer in America. A Type A person is driven by a constant sense of "time urgency" — trying to get more and more done in less time. He also is aggressive and has a deep-seated hostility that can pop out in a hundred little ways.

FRIEDMAN and Rosenman identified a long list of traits of the Type A person. He eats quickly, talks explosively, blows up in a traffic jam, shaves while reading or driving, is preoccupied with work, can't relax without guilt and crams too much into his schedule.

Friedman believes that more than half of a typical urban population is Type A. He classifies Alexander Haig, who resigned as secretary of state following a series of political power struggles and who had coronary bypass surgery for severe heart disease, as a classic Type A.

Type B people, on the other hand, may be just as ambitious but don't suffer from chronic time urgency. They can play and relax without guilt and are not hostile or excessively competitive.

THE CURRENT study is the first to systematically try and change Type A behavior. Therapists taught the 614 patients in the behavior-modification group how to physically and mentally relax.

Professor dismisses age as identity factor

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "Age is irrelevant" to adults' self-perceptions, says a University of Rochester professor who is studying the development of adult identity.

"How people view themselves has nothing to do with age," says Susan K. Whitbourne, associate professor of education and of psychology. "Identity is a function of life events, usually related to family and work, and how people perceive them over time.

"It builds up cumulatively," she explains, "starting with some event in childhood or adolescence. Elements of an identity start to cluster around this event like fragments of iron around a magnet. Identity evolves gradually, and can't be predicted by age or stage."

By CECELIA GOODNOW
Hearst Feature Service

No one would argue against immunizing babies against disease, and everyone agrees that it's a good idea for all children to have periodic physical checkups. But when it comes to paying for these services, most insurance companies head for the door.

The reluctance to cover preventive health care for babies and children has been labeled "a national shame" by the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Coalition of Labor Union Women. The groups recently co-published a booklet urging labor unions to seek such coverage in company health insurance plans. The booklet is entitled "Bargaining for Your Child's Health."

"It is difficult to understand why preventive health care and treatment are not provided in all health insurance plans," argue Glenn Austin, president of the pediatrics association, and Joyce Miller, president of the women's labor coalition in the booklet. "After all, early recognition of diseases and chronic conditions will improve care and reduce costs."

THE BOOKLET recommends that newborn infants be examined at least twice by a physician before leaving the hospital and that pediatricians attend high-risk or Caesarean section deliveries.

Few major health-insurance providers offer so-called "well baby" coverage in their standard group plans, although many firms will offer such coverage if the employer is willing to pay a higher rate for the special benefit.

However, "Bargaining for Your Child's Health" argues that preventive care will save dollars in the long run. "The cost of just one average hospital stay could cover the cost of 100 preventive-care visits by children to a pediatrician," the booklet says. "This care, in turn, could prevent other hospital stays. But, unfortunately, insurance companies only understand how to pay bills for illnesses."

A STUDY by the National Centers for Disease Control shows that vigorous immunization programs have caused a dramatic reduction in disease outbreak. Diphtheria declined from 206,939 cases in 1921 to four cases in 1981, while measles dropped from 834,134 cases in 1941 to 3,032 last year and mumps declined from 152,209 cases in 1968 to 4,729 last year.

Many insurance companies are skeptical of the economic benefit, however.

"They'd raise the rates and add a charge for bureaucratic handling," said one insurer. "It wouldn't cost the insurance companies anything."

The only way such coverage would come about, he added, is through legislation, because there is no incentive for one company to go out on a limb and provide coverage.

Ernest Bernard, director of group claims at the corporate office of Prudential Insurance Company of America, suggested that the pediaricians' support of "well-baby" insurance may be a self-serving ploy to stimulate business.

"THERE IS AN overabundance of pediatricians," Bernard said.

Doctor devotes study to foot problems

By DOROTHY CRYDER
Copley News Service

The philosopher Socrates said it more than 2,300 years ago:

"If your feet hurt, everything hurts."

That sentiment has not changed over the years.

He is director of Podiatric Training at the University of Chicago Hospitals and Clinics.

Gudas had planned to follow in his uncle's footsteps and become an oral surgeon, but while he was in college he had a foot severly burned.

From that time on he has been preoccupied with feet.

GUDAS WAS AWARDED an international fellowship from January through March by a group of general and orthopedic surgeons in Switzerland who designed a high-compression bone fixation system for fractures and surgeries.

They designed the system because they were having poor results with casts. Sometimes the foot would drift inside the cast and end up in a deviated position that caused problems.

"The surgeons actually designed a procedure using screws and plates to hold the bone rigidly in place," Gudas explained. "The foot doesn't move but the technique allows the joints in the foot to move.

"This method reduces the swelling tremendously and lets the patient walk almost immediately after surgery," Gudas said.

He and his associates have been working with this technique since 1976 at the clinics at the University of Chicago. He was awarded the fellowship to study it further with the surgeons in Switzerland and also to do a research project on ankle fractures.

GUDAS HAS IMPLANTED 866 artificial joints since 1971. He was granted $100,000 from the National Institute of Health last year to study diabetes and foot complications as a three-year pilot project.

Gudas, who is chief of the podiatry residency program at the university, said they had some very sophisticated tests for diabetes.

"Diabetic patients have 61 percent of all foot amputations. We can find out where the blockage is through ultrasound and pressure readings at different levels," he explained.

He and his associates do all the diabetic surgery and amputations at the university hospitals and clinics.

What is the most common foot problem?

"Bunions," answered Gudas. He said they do 135 different bunion procedures.

A bunion is defined as a swelling in the form of a bursa (a fluid-filled sac) that overlies the inside and top of the great toe joint. With continued shoe pressure, this area may become inflamed and very tender and make normal walking difficult.

BUNIONS CAN HAVE a variety of causes, including arthritis, cysts, injury or an enlarged joint.

Gudas said the most common cause of bunions is the formation of hallux valgus (angulation of the great toe away from the middle of the body toward the other toes).

This is one of the most common afflictions of the adult foot, he said. The deformity may appear at any age, but becomes more prevalent after the age of 30. It is more common in women, about a 4-to-1 ratio of women to men.

Gudas said the problem may be hereditary. There are many causes including a flat foot, a long great toe, laxity of ligaments or muscle imbalance and underlying diseases such as arthritis, osteoarthritis and gout.

"Ill-fitting or narrow shoes will aggravate the condition, but rarely cause it," he said, adding that statistics show people who have never worn shoes sometimes develop bunions.

Gudas said other common foot problems include corns, calluses, plantar warts, heel spurs, ingrown toenails and athlete's foot.

He stresses the importance of wearing proper shoes. Hammertoes, another common foot problem, is definitely a factor in causing this disformity, he said. A hammertoe occurs when the first joint becomes prominent and begins to rub against the inner surface of the shoe.

Cuts reduce heart disease risk

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although results of a major federal study on heart disease are somewhat confusing, doctors say men can cut their risk by reducing smoking, dietary fats and high blood pressure.

The seven-year, $115 million study released Thursday confirms that men who curb smoking and take other measures reduce their risk of dying from heart disease.

But the results showed only a small difference in mortality between men who were given special counseling to control risk factors and those in a "usual care" group.

The death rates from coronary disease were 17.9 deaths per 1,000 in the group given special counseling and 19.2 per 1,000 in the other group.

Study leaders said the small difference showed that the general population was heeding health warnings and cutting its risks.

Some new information did come out of the study, including a potential problem in treating those with mild high blood pressure. The study found that drug treatments may unexpectedly imperil some suffering with mild hypertension.

In light of the findings, scientists advised doctors to use renewed caution in prescribing antihypertensive drugs for some patients.

The study, called MRFIT or "Mister FIT" for Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial, involved two groups totaling 12,866 men aged 35 to 57. The project involved 28 institutions in the United States and Canada and 250 investigators.

Dr. William Friedewald of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which sponsored the study, noted that there has been a general 27 percent reduction in heart and blood vessel disease deaths since 1968.

He and others speculated that the usual care group benefitted from this decline like the rest of the population and that this could be a reason for the smaller than expected difference between the study groups.

"The three major modifiable risk factors of coronary heart disease are high blood pressure, elevated cholesterol levels and cigarette smoking," Friedewald said after a news briefing.

"No one should interpret the results of this study to mean that it doesn't make a difference what they do," he continued. "We continue to recommend that people reduce these risk factors because there is amble evidence from other studies that it works."

Dr. Oglesby Paul, a Harvard Medical School professor emeritus and chairman of the study's steering committee, said small subgroups in the study did reveal more differences in results and some new information.

One such subgroup was men with with slightly elevated blood pressure who received antihypertensive drugs as part of their therapy.

There were two groups of these so-called mild hypertensives, those who showed various abnormalities on their electrocardiograms and those who did not. The men with abnormal electrocardiograms in the treatment group had a 66 percent higher death rate than those in the usual care group, the study found.

Couple calls finding twin 'miracle'

By KATHY EYRE
AP Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — When Mike and Cheri Tillman adopted their Korean daughter two and one-half years ago, they said she would be their "one and only" child. But the Omaha couple's plans changed drastically after they came across a photo of her twin sister who suffers from cerebral palsy.

The Tillmans said both girls, 3 years old in October, had entered the care of Holt Children's Services, an international adoption agency based in Eugene, Ore. Holt has a strict policy prohibiting separation of siblings and no one knows why the twins were not adopted as a pair.

"Of all the hundreds and hundreds of children in Holt's care, for us to see the picture is a miracle," Mrs. Tillman says of their discovering that their daughter, Kristin, has a twin sister.

As president of Intercultural Families, an Omaha group of families with adopted children from other countries, Mrs. Tillman had helped Holt open an office in Nebraska at the beginning of the year.

One day Holt's Nebraska representative, JoAnn Worden, told Mrs. Tillman about several hard-to-place and handicapped children whom she might mention to her group.

"I said, 'That's all I need — another 2½-year-old.' So we talked a little while and I didn't think any more about it. All day I kept thinking about the 12-year-old. And I don't know why because we had never talked about adopting another child," Mrs. Tillman said.

Ms. Worden said the Tillmans couldn't adopt the 12-year-old because of a Holt rule requiring parents to be at least 20 years older than their adopted child.

Mrs. Tillman said she then commented on how the girl in the photo looked exactly like Kristin. It didn't occur to her that they might be twins.

Mrs. Tillman took the entire packet of photos home for her husband to browse through. When Tillman saw the 2½-year-old's photo, he immediately said, "That's Kristin's sister."

And the long process of trying to bring the twin sister to Omaha began.

Apparently, Holt workers didn't know the two children placed under their care were twins. Mrs. Tillman said officials at the Oregon office told them Holt had no records of the parents of the two girls, so no one could prove they were twins.

But she said the adoption agency would accept them as twins since the Tillmans pointed out the girls' almost identical features and noted they entered the Holt program on the same day.

The South Korean government has yet to release the girl's exit papers, so the Tillmans don't know when they will receive their new daughter.

"As far as we can tell, they're twins. And as far as I'm concerned, they belong together. And no matter what it takes, we're going to get them together," Tillman said.

'Marina Men:' L.A.'s answer to Vals

Copley News Service

"Marina men, Marina men
Sergio Valente is your only friend"
— A song sung by The Valley Girls

LOS ANGELES — "Marina Men" may be one of the newest songs on the radio but they're not listening to it in Marina del Rey, near here.

Few of the sun worshipers, boaters or restaurant customers questioned in the marina had heard the tune, they said, but all were familiar with the stereotypical male Marina resident the song heralds.

The song is being labeled the answer to Frank Zappa's zany record, "Valley Girls," which panned the vernacular of teenage girls in the nearby San Fernando Valley.

"Marina Men," in fact, was recorded by three "Vals" who named their trio The Valley Girls.

"'VALLEY GIRLS' is cute but it's not social commentary," said Bronson, who owns Rhino Records and formed the group after auditioning singers. "We wanted to express certain areas of depth not really prevalent in today's rock music."

If the record is successful, The Valley Girls might record an album, he said.

The portrait painted by the song is, to say the least, critical of the swinging Marina lifestyle, the male attraction to nubile teenagers and the excesses of cocaine it describes.

"If someone called me a Marina man, I'd be insulted," said John Seykoski, a physical fitness expert dressed in a safari shirt open at the navel, gold chains, designer jeans and dark glasses. Eyeing his empty Margarita glass at an outdoor Marina cafe, he emphasized, "That's not me."

Most men questioned were adamant they were not the "Aqua Velva Geek, frequently divorced and on the make" male the record's cover describes.

Self-confessed "Marina men" Jeremy Simmons, 32, and Brian Mace, 24, relax on a yacht in Marina del Rey in Los Angeles.

"I'm not the Marina man," said Tom Rearden, who gave his occupation as Christmas tree and bear trap salesman. "I'm only here (at the Marina beach) because I just got up too late to go to Topanga or Malibu."

ONE LIFELONG Marina female stalking the perfect tan at the same beach said, "The guys in the Marina are the most phoniest jerks I've ever met. Most of them are in debt. They scam; they use anybody they can. The guys are nothing here. Most of them are not even real.

Rearden, who had joined her for some idle conversation, agreed.

The Marina men the song describes aren't easy to find during the day and only emerge from their condominiums at night, said the people questioned.

Marina men don't congregate in the Marina harbor, but prefer to stay inside a hotel bar during the day, said a West Los Angeles bank employee who took a day off to relax on his father's yacht.

"The sailors are really mellow but they (Marina men) are a different class of people," Scott Gardner said. Gardner's brother, Greg, said most Marina men would prefer a powerboat because they convey a more macho image.

SURE ENOUGH, just across the channel, two self-confessed Marina men were installing radar equipment on a 70-foot cruiser.

"You just missed two beautiful girls here," one called out to an approaching newspaper photographer. "I could get on the phone and get five over here right away," he proclaimed later.

Brian Mace and Jeremy Simmons, who run a yacht remodeling and refinishing service in the Marina, are proud to admit they enjoy the fast life but are equally quick to repudiate the song's claims.

"We both have a good education. I don't associate with drug dealers," Simmons said, countering the song's claims that Marina men are empty-headed cocaine addicts.

"I like professional women, doctors and lawyers, because you can talk to them," Mace volunteered, disproving the song's claim that Marina men are only interested in younger flesh.

The two aren't shy when it comes to discussing their Jordache jeans, their girlfriends or their cars — Mace owns a Porsche and Simmons drives a BMW. "I just bought my girl an RX-7 (sportscar). See, I know how to treat my kids right," Mace said.

MACE, WHO moonlights as a manager of The Jockey Club, volunteered his VIP number there. Placing his arm around a reporter, he said, "Just ask for me."

At 24, Mace doesn't worry about his fast life catching up with him. "I get money and then I spend it. Play now, pay later. It's so much fun that I don't worry about it."

Simmons, a twice-divorced, former Newport Beach, Calif., hairdresser, is now "into real estate." He is careful to remind his audience that he is still a youthful 32.

Mace and Simmons freely admit they fit the Marina-man mold, although they are a little young to fit the song's description of the Hollywood hustler beginning his mid-life crisis.

"I always have a good day," Simmons said.

Mace quickly added, "But the nights are better. But the mornings are horrible."

FDA criticized for TB-test solution

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
AP Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is defending its decision to leave a tuberculosis-test solution on the market, even though a consumer group contends it should have been recalled because some doses were defective.

The Public Citizen's Health Research Group complained that the agency should have recalled more than one million doses of Aplisol made by Parke-Davis of Detroit after some doses were found to give a false reading.

The consumer group said some Aplisol doses indicated the presence of tuberculosis four times as often as it should when the patient does not have the disease.

Z But FDA spokesman Bill Rados said the agency considered recalling supplies of the Aplisol but rejected the idea.

"If there had been a recall it is very doubtful that the other manufacturer, Connaugt, could have met the demand (for test solutions)," he said. "You would not have been able to treat people for TB who needed it, particularly people who had come in contact with TB patients.

"That risk appeared to FDA to be greater than the risk of having a product with a somewhat higher rate of false-positive than you would expect," he said.

Connaugt Laboratories of Toronto makes Tubersol, a similar testing solution, which has a false-positive rate of 0.5 percent. The batches of Aplisol with which there have been problms have false positive rates of 2 percent.

Rados said the Aplisol test materials did not pose an immediate public health threat. He said the American company makes 80 percent of the test solutions.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the consumer group, also criticized FDA and the Centers for Disease Control for not having issued a wider warning to patients, doctors and hospitals about problems with the testing solution.

CDC did alert health departments and other large health agencies that conduct tubercular screenings in mid-July not to use Aplisol if the Canadian substitute was available.

Color can be a most effective decorating tool when it comes to creating the illusion of expanded space. One way to visually enlarge a small room is through the use of a monochromatic color scheme. This technique is based on the repetition of one color throughout a room in its various color gradations from pale to deep. In this way, a smooth harmonious feeling is created. There are no sharp color or pattern contrasts to impede the eye's flow through the room's elements. Obviously, it is necessary to choose a single color that will not become boring or overpowering.

Velveteen and corduroy are good examples of nbap fabrics. Each has small fibers on their surface. Such materials must be cut with the top of each pattern piece laid in the same direction. The pattern envelope should give yardage requirements for "fabric with nap". If not, buy an extra 1/2 to 3/4 yards. Determine the direction of the nap by moving your hand down over the fabric. If it appears darker and feels smooth, the nap runs up. With the nap running down, the fabric will look light and shinier, and will feel rough.

At Loggetts Fabrics you will find a magnificent selection of fabrics including velveteens and corduroys in all the latest colors. Our staff is very knowledgeable when it comes to sewing so whether you have a question about "fabric with nap" or would like some assistance in actually laying out your pattern feel frge to ask. New fall fashions soft, graceful

By ELEANOR ROBERTS
Hearst Feature Service

The new fall fashions had to be made in heaven and floated straight down to the designing board — they're that beautiful.

Imaginative and versatile, flirty and flattering, there is a fashion for everyone. Many, many options, from hemlines to silhouettes.

The long, lean, lithe line is the newest and one of the most important looks of the season. Seductively body-skimming.

It's there in the No. 1 suit of the season, Calvin Klein's man-tailored, slim-skirted suit with its softly-indented hip-length jacket. Marvelous in charcoal pinstripe, jet black or racy black-and-white checks.

Never is the line harsh. There's a softness about suits, a femininity about the pure silk blouses with frilly jabots worn with black silk poets' ties. And there is a wealth of choices, incfuding Oscar de la Renta's charming "Gigi" suit.

Red is not far behind in popularity. Flame red, fantastic fuschia as in a Calvin Klein silk gabardine blouson jacket, burgundy with brown in a Geoffrey Beene plaid tube of a dress.

COATS: Huge grandfather's coats in Irish tweed by Perry Ellis are the last word in chic. So is the oversize steamer coat of beige Donegal tweed reversing to a brushed white solid by Bill Blass. And for show-stopping elegance nothing tops Pauline Trigere's black, full-skirted fitted coat with a wide red cape collar.

THE TUXEDO: It has infiltrated the world of women's fashion — though it may be a one-season trend.

AFTER-DARK: Black velvet for short and long dresses; the fireworks of Bill Blass' hand-sequinned beauties in geometric designs, his purple silk chiffon threaded with gold, silver and copper – its neckline plunging down to THERE.

The joy and practicality of the little black dress and the dinner suit for cocktails and theater. The glamour of Halston's silver-studded T-shaped dress is in direct contrast to Caroline Herrera's back-bowed Audrey Hepburn short black velvet dress.

THE KEY TO FASHION: Total-look dressing!

FOCUS: Jamie Thompson

She finds computerized geologic maps, data fascinating

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Fifteen years ago Jamie Thompson first saw a computer demonstration. The technological marvels have fascinated her ever since. Today, her livelihood, and that of her 18 employees, depends on her ability to use computers as a predictive tool in the search for oil and gas.

Apparently, the innovations she and her clients have come up with since 1975, when she founded Exploration Graphics Inc., have created a successful company.

Jamie Thompson

EGI stores data from log libraries, scout tickets, Railroad Commission records and every other possible source, including data on geologic formation tops, for over 25,000 wells in the Permian Basin.

A few months ago, the Small Business Administration awarded EGI as the most innovative small business in a multi-state region for 1982. Thompson, who is on an SBA advisory board, has often been a speaker at SBA seminars on small business management.

Her company, through computer technology, provides extensive geological data bases and several types of maps to her 60-odd clients, who range from major oil companies to one-man independents.

IT WAS WHILE SHE was on vacation at HemisFair in San Antonio that Thompson was first introduced to computers. This was back in 1965, when new applications of the technology were in their infancy compared to today, when personal or home computers are threatening to become as commonplace as microwave ovens.

"I saw a display of a computer running a loom to weave cloth. You could design your pattern on a CRT (visual display terminal similar to a television), and the loom would weave it. I thought it was really something and I wanted to do something like that someday."

At the time, Thompson worked at Mobil Oil Corporation in Midland. She had started in the mail room right after high school and progressed to the steno pool in the data processing section. At night, she was taking computer courses at Odessa College.

All the Mobil engineers were scheduled to be tested for their aptitude with computers, and her boss "really went to battle" for her so that she could be tested also. The company planned to select two people, and she came out with one of the top scores.

Thompson was sent to Dallas for extensive training, and returned to Mobil to work with geological applications in the DP department.

SHE BECAME particularly fascinated with computer-drawn maps, which are the core of EGI's business today.

"It was an exciting field, but I got frustrated after a few years because without a degree, I wasn't being promoted as fast as the others. The guys who weren't working in computers were upset that I had gotten as far as I had, since I wasn't an engineer, and the girls were upset that I had been promoted out of the steno department.

"I kind of felt like I didn't have anything in common with anybody. I was young, and it hurt my feelings that I couldn't have coffee with anyone, or they'd leave the room."

Thompson laughs at the memory today, and says she has become friends with those people, but at the time, it was a problem.

In 1969, she left Mobil and started data processing in her own home, forming Deco Data Processing Company. Later, she moved to an office, and one of her first employees was her mother, Bettie Davidson, who has always done the bookkeeping and accounting for Deca and EGI.

THOMPSON WAS SOON bored by it because the bulk of the work was accounting and record keeping. She missed the geological aspect, and the demand was there for more geological data bases, so by 1975, the company outgrew its quarters and she moved to an office on North Big Spring and started Exploration Graphics Inc.

"My husband, Doyle, has been very supportive, but at first, he probably had a hard time understanding me. He thought I was weird — a lot of wives want all kinds of things, and here I was wanting a computer," she says laughing.

Thompson has mostly given up programming in favor of management and long-rang planning for EGI.

"I've got a lot of people and they can't follow me unless I have a direction to go. But it was difficult to give it (programming) up."

When she looks back, Thompson doesn't remember many problems associated with being a young mother of two girls and starting her own computer business. She says "a lot of blood, sweat and tears went into," getting EGI off the ground, "but not much money"

"THE PEOPLE I approached as potential clients accepted me well and I had no trouble there. I was very pleased with that."

The biggest problem was, and still is, raising capital. Part of the problem, she feels, was that bankers were more hesitant to loan money to a woman seven years ago than they are today, although she admits it may have been, in part, her fault for failing to adequately explain her business to them.

"They're just uneasy, and I have to put myself in their place. They've been very strict. It's been hard. Originally, it was a one-man show, and that scared the bankers also. Well, it scared me, too."

The SBA has a discount-loan lending program for women in business, but the upper limit on loans is about $25,000. "That won't even start a shop in the house, and when you go in with capital needs as large as what we are working with now," it's not adequate for a computer business.

In spite of these problems, EGI has grown. In 1981 it doubled its office space and added some updated hardware.

Its growth is mostly attributed to word of mouth, always a mainstay of business growth in the oil industry.

EGI IS A UNIQUE business. As far as she knows, there is no other service company in the country which provides such a complete set of computerized geological data for oil and gas exploration, Thompson says.

Others may have developed the software, but EGI develops new applications for it, she says. In addition, EGI experiments with "wild ideas" from clients and its own people, to invent new software programs that meet individual clients' needs.

Thompson would like to see the company live beyond her lifetime, and hopes her daughters take an interest in the business when they are older. She believes strongly in family — her father works for her full time as a management and planning consultant, and her sister and brother-in-law also work at EGI full time.

The breathing space provided EGI by the exploration slowdown in recent months has been beneficial, she says. Programs and data have been examined and goals for EGI have been refined.

Employees ran statistical data on the business, and found that their predictions of where to find oil and gas are right in excess of 70 percent of the time.

"IT'S A UNIQUE BLEND of science — geology and geophysics — and computer technology. But you can't take the people out of the exploration process. With our methods, you can yield a target or a prospect that has a higher-than-industry average chance of success."

Recently, EGI's computers predicted there would be 28 successful wildcats in a certain field — 22 came in as predicted.

How has she raised a family, established a business, managed to serve on the board of the Better Business Bureau, raise registered Welch ponies and run a household?

"If I have any quality, it's persistence to the point of being stubborn," she says. "And, the computer frees you to think, and you let it do the work."

Petroleum industry must wonder; 'Who are those guys?'

By WILLIAM GARLAND

WASHINGTON — To members of the oil industry, the Energy Action Project might resemble the band of persistent trackers in the movie "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

Looking over their collective shoulders, members of the industry must occasionally wonder, "Who are those guys?"

From Our Washington Bureau

On virtually every issue in which the industry has an interest, the Energy Action Project and its companion Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition are the most vocal Washington opponents of the oil and gas industrial complex. They attract broad media coverage for their many analyses and reports, some of which are aimed directly and without apology at the oil and gas industry.

"I'm sure our members would like to throw darts at them," said a representative of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, perhaps summing up the industry attitude toward the consumer advocacy groups. IPAA consists of approximately 12,000 independent oil and gas producers.

Energy Action Executive Director Edwin Rothschild, 35, acknowledged that actor Paul Newman had the original idea for the project in 1975, and that Newman and a handful of wealthy Californians still provide substantial money for the organization.

The group's leading objective is to stop natural gas decontrol in any form, either through the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (which enforces those controls) or Congress.

Energy Action and the coalition were credited in part for helping to block decontrol in Congress this year. President Reagan announced in March that he would not push for gas decontrol after what was reported as considerable internal White House debate.

Rothschild said his group had begun gathering "grassroots" momentum against decontrol as early as a year before the announcement, using the many state-based organizations affiliated with the Washington coalition. They went door-to-door, sponsored petitions and forced some pro-decontrol congressmen, especially in the Northeast, into public promises that they would not vote in favor of a bill loosening current price controls.

On the pro-decontrol side, Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, worked diligently last year, and has continued to work to develop legislatin that could be supported by most of the natural gas industry, from the producers to the pipeline and distribution companies.

"One reason Gramm is going to fail is that he won't bring together a consensus," said Rothschild.

He listed three reasons why, on the other hand, he believes his organization will win: successful experience from last year (giving momentum to those people working within the states), the presence of grassroots efforts in more states this year and the rise in gas prices from last year.

Surprisingly, Rothschild does not support the idea of a windfall profits tax on natural gas if it is decontrolled.

"We're right in there with the producer," said Rothschild. "We agree there shouldn't be any windfall profits tax."

The reason? He believes the tax would be used to mollify critics of decontrolled prices, and that the revenues from such a tax would not be earmarked to help those who can't afford higher energy bills.

Rothschild disagrees sharply with the claim by producers that higher prices would mean the drilling of more wells.

"They would be drilling their eyeballs out were there not a (natural gas) glut," he said.

If Energy Action drew up a "Ten Most Wanted" list of influential Washingtonians, FERC Chairman Charles M. Butler III would be on top. Butler, a former high-ranking aide to Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, has advocated the complete decontrol of gas prices since he took over under the Reagan administration.

"I think Mr. Butler doesn't see his role as chairman of FERC as someone who balances the different interests, particularly on the consumer side," said Rothschild. "That attitude is best described as cold-hearted."

"It's not a matter of them being short-sighted," said Peter Wellish, a spokesman for IPAA. "It's a matter of them being out-and-out wrong. They have totally distorted the issue (on natural gas). They have created with large segments of the public a totally erroneous impression of what natural gas decontrol can accomplish."

Wellish also criticized the Washington press. "The media has picked up their news releases and their stories and they print it as though it is gospel truth. In reality it is not the truth."

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid the uncertainties of Wall Street, one thing is sure about the tumultuous trading spree this summer — when buying and selling is heavy in stock exchanges, the nation's brokerage houses are big winners.

The July-September quarter, which ends next week, already has turned into the busiest quarter in the history of the New York Stock Exchange, providing a bonanza in trading commissions and related profits for securities firms.

"They're doing very, very well," said analyst Charles Vincent, who follows the fate of the securities industry for Provident National Bank.

Vincent said big investment firms, such as Merrill Lynch & Co., are set up to handle heavy volume trading. "This (trading spurt) just eats up the overhead," he said.

The implications of feverish trading have not been lost on investors.

As trading volume began surging to new records in mid-August, prices of the stock of leading investment houses also took off.

Merrill Lynch, which traded as low as $21 a share the week before trading exploded, finished this past week at $37.125. Paine Webber, at $16.875 in the second week of August, finished Friday at $24. E.F. Hutton, at $22 the week before average daily trading jumped from 50 million shares to 91 million shares, stands at $33.25.

Volume for the year to date already has reached 10.6 billion shares, more shares than changed hands in any full year before 1980, and closing in on the 1981 volume record of nearly 11.9 billion.

The three biggest trading weeks in NYSE history occurred between Aug. 16 and Sept. 3.

Weekly Big Board volume grew to the uncharted level of 455 million shares in the first week of the stampede, only to climb to 549.9 million shares the next week before slipping to 434 million shares the following week. That was still more than 100 million shares more than the previous weekly record of 329 million shares in the week ended last March 5.

Daily volume surpassed 100 million shares on seven separate occasions since Aug. 18, reaching a record 137.33 million on Sept. 3.

This past week saw a rekindling of trading excitement Wednesday, when 113.15 million shares changed hands, the fifth-busiest day in exchange history. The four busier days all occurred since Aug. 18.

The buying spree propelled the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks to a 13-month high of 934.79 on Tuesday, up 158 points from Aug. 12, when the blue-chip average stood at its lowest level since April 21, 1980.

But by Friday, the Dow Jones industrials stood at 919.52, a net gain of 2.58 points for the week.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed stocks rose .40 to 70.75, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 1.51 at 290.64.

With four more trading days left in the third quarter, NYSE volume totaled 4.1 billion shares, well above the 3.3 billion shares that changed hands in the previous three months, the previous record for a quarter. The second quarter surpassed the record of 3.2 billion shares traded in the first three months of this year.

"When you have a strong market, such as we've had in terms of volume ... it means the environment is good for other parts of the business as well as basic commission earnings," said Vincent.

Basin, national counts down; Bright spots seen

Spotters tallied 267 active rotary rigs around the Permian Basin last week, according to Reed Rock Bit Co. That's six fewer than the previous week's total of 273.

The rig count in past weeks was: 265, Sept. 10; 257, Sept. 9; and 271, August 27.

The International Association of Drilling Contractors reports 2,466 rigs were cutting new hole nationwide Sept. 20; down from 2,499 one week earlier.

The IADC figures show 710 rigs working inland Texas Sept. 20. Another 73 were spotted out in the Gulf.

The naitonal rig count Sept. 21, 1981 was 4,249.

There are some bright spots hidden amongst the drab count statistics. For instance: Hawaii has enjoyed a 100 percent increase in drilling activity over tha past year; the Illinois rig count has mushroomed compared to last year; and things are apparently booming in Indiana where the rig count compared to last year is 700 percent higher.

One year ago the Hawaiian rig count was zero; Sept. 20 it was one. Last year there were 49 active rigs in Illinois; last week there were 76. There were no rigs in Indiana last year; but last week there were seven.

Rig counts in New York and Washington appear to be holding up well. Last week there were 12 rigs in New York; one year ago 11. And there is still one rig active in Washington, the same as a year ago.

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Intrastate air carriers in Texas are "feeling the effects of the recession," but aren't having the problems being experienced by operators in many other states, the Texas Aeronautics Commission reports.

Harry Rogers, TAC, says the carriers aren't enjoying "the healthiest situation," and continue to battle high fuel prices and a decrease in passengers.

But it appears, he says, that passenger traffic is "slowly coming back," although a number of smaller cities appear to continue to have low levels of use.

"I think it's safe to say that the recession's impact was delayed in Texas; it's just now beginning to roll in on us," he comments.

Currently, the TAC has nine certificated carriers, including Southwest Airlines, which operates interstate as well as intrastate.

Some carriers, Rogers says, are looking at "hold-in subsidies" from the Civil Aeronautics Board, under which the CAB pays the carriers for continuing service to particular points.

Rio Airlines has filed for such a subsidy for Temple, Rogers says, and at least one other carrier is looking at requesting such payments.

The Texas Credit Union Department has submitted its request to Attorney General Mark White for a ruling on authority of credit unions to issue securities, and is pre-parting to seek a ruling from White on the handling of school district activity funds.

Earlier, the department had indicated plans to seek a ruling on the authority of credit unions to own and operate subsidiary corporations, but that request has been deferred "indefinitely."

The department also is awaiting rulings by White regarding the authority of credit unions to serve as depositories for hospital districts, and on application of loan limits for business entities.

Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has asked White to rule on several questions related to requirements that group health insurance policies offer the option of alcohol and drug dependency coverage.

Those requirements were enacted by the Legislature in August, 1981.

Lewis reported that a hospital specializing in treatment of alcoholism has encountered problems with denial of coverage by some insurers.

The questions posed by Lewis for White involve the level of benefits to be provided, and alternate benefits which may be offered.

One specific question involves whether an insurer may require that each new member of a covered group be "medically underwritten" prior to full coverage as a condition on the ability the group to select full benefit coverage.

The Policy Advisory Committee of the Industrial Accident Board has recommended that the IAB develop its "own data base" to be used in determining what are "fair and reasonable charges" for medical and hospital treatment in worker's compensation cases.

The committee, which is assisting the IAB with a view towards possible legislative changes in 1983, also has recommended that the IAB work more closely, and "at an early date," on disputed claims to resolve questions between doctors and insurers.

The panel also suggests limiting examinations to eliminate "additional and repetitive tests," and developing a "separate medical advisory committee... to assist... from time to time on medical questions involving occupational disease."

The State Depository Board has raised the interest rate charged banks for use of State funds from 8.25 percent, set August 31, to 9.5 percent, as of September 21.

State Treasurer Warren G. Harding reports interest earned on state funds in Texas banks hit a record high of $337,963,165 for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, and increase of 32.5 percent, or $82,963,624, over the prior fiscal year, with 99 percent of the available state funds invested.

Savings and loan associations are continuing their battle with the economy with some new approaches being developed.

The Texas Savings and Loan Department is being asked to approve a request by Charter Savings and Loan association, Corpus Christi, to purchase six branch offices in various cities from Gibraltar Savings Association, Houston.

Normal procedure is for associations to request permission to establish branches on their own, so the purchase of existing branch locations is unusual, the department reports.

Strong dollar embarasses European politicians

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Correspondent

PARIS — American interest rates have come down, but to the intense embarassment of European politicians, the dollar has stayed up.

In recent weeks, the loud assertions made over many months by French, West German and British officials that the Reagan administration's monetary policy was the principal cause of their economic troubles have been exposed as almost wholly false.

What is now clear, as former French government economist Jacques Dumesne admitted, is that "the dollar's strength in relation to European currencies is only marginally linked to interest rates, as such. It has much more to do with the structural weakness of European economies and widespread lack of confidence in their ability to recover soon."

For more than 18 months, the high level of U.S. interest rates led to fierce, almost daily recriminations between Washington and its European allies. Figures like German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt became close to apoplectic on the subject.

As recently as last June's Western Summit at Versailles, the Europeans insisted a drop in U.S. interest rates was the open sesame to their swift economic recovery. The failure of President Reagan and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker to move fast to bring them down was viewed as just as much of a threat to allied relations as the Soviet gas pipeline dispute.

Then, in August, U.S. rates started falling rapidly and little more was heard of the matter. But to European consternation, the dollar's international exchange value did not decline in tandem with interest rates. Indeed, in some countries, it rose further.

Nor was there any sign of the economic pickup leaders like French President Francois Mitterrand promised.

In the good old days, when the Europeans could blame practically all their woes on the Reagan administration's machinations, their argument was that excessive U.S. interest rates were forcing them to keep their own rates too high to allow economic expansion. The too-strong dollar was also attracting too much investment capital away from Europe.

Economist Dumesne, who recently quit government service over the issue, called this an "illusion." He explained that "the true problem isn't lack of investment but impossibly high European production costs, resulting from social spending and indexed wages, which have led to a disastrous loss of overseas markets to lower-cost producers like Japan, South Korea and Singapore."

His argument is supported by statistics which seem all but unanswerable. Major exporting nations like France and Italy will, this year, suffer trade deficits twice as large as any in their history. Even West Germany's share of world markets has substantially declined.

"It's the graphic evidence of the loss of Western European competivity and the inevitably accompanying high rates of inflation," Dumesne said. "That, in turn, is what is causing the pressure on European currencies. To claim otherwise is little more than political sloganeering. But, I'm afraid that is what many European politicians have been engaged in."

He and some other observers believe it is slowly dawning on European public opinion where the fault really lies. The French economist said that this month's resignation of German economics minister Otto Lambsdorf in protest of the Schmidt government's refusal to reduce social costs and that government's subsequent collapse may prove a turning point.

"When the Germans say the benefits to workers are too costly under present world economic conditions and must be reduced to give industry a chance to recover, the rest of Europe must sit up and take notice," he said. "After all, West Germany has been Europe's most consistently successful trading nation."

He added, "It's no longer open hunting season on the Americans. We are faced with recognizing that the fault rests within ourselves.

Positive thinker thinks positive thinking needed

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

The only reason the Permian Basin continues to endure the hardships of an economic slump is because people with negative attitudes are not taking positive action to reverse it, says a local management consultant.

"A negative attitude breeds negativism. A positive attitude will stop us from going into a deep, deep depression," says Dr. Eugene Nini.

Nini, chairman of the accountancy department at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, is a management consultant with clients all over the country. His specialty is giving positive, motivational seminars.

He made his remarks earlier this week at a meeting of the Permian Basin Personnel Association.

Nini told the group there is "unequivocally, no reason, in any way, shape or form, for the decline we are suffering in the Permian Basin right now.

"It's a self-fulfilling prophecy," Nini says of the slump, "and it's got to turn down, because everyone is saying it was going to turn down, and we did action to cause it to turn down."

Nini says he is not a "pollyanna" about economics, although he realizes many will have that opinion of him. "Why can't I be positive? Why can't the glass be half full, instead of half empty?" Unfortunately, Nini says, most Americans are brought up to believe or respect negativism more than optimism.

"I'm aware there's no drilling; I'm aware of the economic facts we face today, but we are sitting in a peak situation."

Nini firmly believes today can be the first day of the biggest boom the Permian Basin has ever experienced — only negative attitudes, and the resultant hesitation they bring, are holding it back.

He challenged the group to prove otherwise. "Can you prove to me that it (a boom) didn't start this morning?"

He said the bankruptices which are occurring lately are not a result of current conditions so much as they are caused by economic forces which started a year ago. When companies have lay-offs or go out of business, the general public and businessmen in particular become negative thinkers and the vicious cycle of gloom and doom begins all over again. The cycle must be broken by a consicous effort to have a positive attitude and take positive steps, Nini implied.

"Until somebody, somewhere, says it's over (the recession), and they go out and borrow some money and buy a new tractor and some seed, and plant it, then it 'ain't going to be over.'"

Negativism pervades the Permian Basin, Nini said. If every place a person goes, he hears that business is bad and will probably get worse, he begins to believe it and backs off from expansion plans, or decides he must lay off some employees, or postpone business deals.

Nini said he realizes that supposedly knowledgeable businessmen say the economy is bad and that they aren't going to be the ones to make any moves to start a recovery, but again, that cautious attitude contributes to the self-fulfilling prophecy.

"If somebody doesn't do it, we're going down the tubes."

Nini said he gave a similar speech to two corporate clients recently, and both of the businesses have "sky-rocketed to 1981 levels in the last three and a half weeks," since Nini spoke to them.

The consultant told them to find out who the customers are of the salesmen who sit around complaining there is no business. While the doomsayers sit around being negative, the positive-thinking person can "go out and sell them."

Economic experts have long been saying that consumer confidence is a key factor in the United States getting itself out of the recession, he pointed out. Consumer buying was supposed to lead the country out of the economic downturn, so the theory goes.

The upturn was expected to begin this summer after the personal tax cut took effect July 1, but it, and the traditional back-to-school spurt in buying, did not occur.

The reason was negative attitude, Nini says.

"With all these fine economic theories, nobody spent their money," he told the group.

API reports gasoline supply up

WASHINGTON —The amount of gasoline supplied for the domestic market in August was marginally higher than a year ago, the American Petroleum Institute reported recently.

The levels of gasoline supplied in August increased 0.4 percent, from 6,637,000 barrels per day (bpd) in the same month of 1981 to 6,661,000 bpd in 1982, API said in its Monthly Statistical Report.

The API also reported that as of the end of August, gasoline pump prices — when adjusted for inflation — had dropped almost 20 cents per gallon from their early 1981 levels.

The amount of domestic petroleum products supplied in August was four percent lower than a year ago, down from 15,267 bpd to 14,650,000 bpd. API said weak demand for distillation and residual fuel oil accounted for the decline.

Distillates (diesel fuel and home heating oil) supplied were down 9.7 percent, or 232,000 bpd, in August compared with a year ago. The Monthly Report cited an apparent continued slowdown in inventory build-up by distributors and end-users as a significant cause for the lower level of products supplied.

Residual fuel oil supplied fell 275,000 bpd, or 14.8 percent, compared to August, 1981. Price-induced fuel switching by utilities and the general decline in industrial production due to the recession were the major factors contributing to the drop, API said.

Domestic crude oil production in August increased one percent (86,000 bpd) compared to a year ago, mainly as the result of supplies from Alaska's Kuparuk field, which went into production last December.

While total inventories were 12 percent lower at the end of August compared to the same month a year ago, the Monthly Report noted that they represented 34 days' supply, well within the normal 26 to 38 day range for this time of year.

Total imports (crude oil and petroleum products) trailed last August's level by 15.1 percent or 848,000 bpd. Total imports for the first eight months of 1982 were 18 percent below those for the same period of 1981.

Refinery utilization was 70.5 percent of 17,382,000 bpd of operable capacity, about the same as the 70.6 percent of 18,685,000 bpd level in August 1981.

Gas price decontrol should have little effect on NGLs

HOUSTON (SWN) — Adverse effects on the natural gas liquids industry from the removal of federal price controls on natural gas should be "temporary and minimal," says Bruce M. Withers Jr., president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp.'s Transmission and Processing Division.

Speaking on a panel at the Texas LP-Gas Association convention here today, Withers predicted that when gas prices are decontrolled, the resulting higher cost of natural gas will lead to an adjustment period during which the prices of ethane, propane and other liquid products extracted from gas will catch up. Historical cycles in the industry indicate this sequence of events, Withers stated.

Committee votes to cut lease funds

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Thursday to cut off federal funds for processing or issuing oil and gas leases in wilderness areas starting Oct. 1, a move that environmentalists hailed as a major victory.

The vote climaxed several days of determined lobbying by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and other supporters of a popular wilderness protection bill that has run into opposition in the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

That committee's leaders have serious reservations about the wilderness protection bill, which would permanently prohibit oil and gas leasing on 33 million acres of unspoiled lands in the lower 48 states, and have not yet scheduled a vote on it.

The funding ban passed Thursday by the Appropriations panel would have essentially the same effect, except that it probably would expire in December.

The ban was introduced as an amendment to the continuing resolution to finance the government after Oct. 1. The House passed the same amendment last week.

The wilderness protection bill before the Energy Committee passed the House last month, 340-58, and is co-sponsored by 54 senators, including 20 Republicans. Environmentalists have termed it "the most important public lands conservation bill of this Congress," and virtually every major environmental group is lobbying for its passage.

The bill is a direct response to Interior Secretary James G. Watt's announcement last year that he would consider granting leases in wilderness areas, a break with the policies of his predecessors, who routinely rejected them. Watt agreed to a moratorium on wilderness leasing until the end of this congressional session, calling on Congress to pass legislation to clarify the issue.

Hours before the funding ban was passed, the wilderness bill encountered grave skepticism in a hearing before the Senate Energy panel. Chairman James A. McClure, R-Idaho, and several other senators said they feared the protections in the bill would hinder the drive for energy independence.

Microcomputers as tools

By JAY DAVISON

It is no longer a surprise to enter the office of a corporate executive, business manager, or staff analyst and find a microcomputer close at hand. These small computers, costing $5,000-15,000, can often help these people improve the quality of their decisions and increase their personal productivity.

Microcomputers are able to capture, store, and process business information in a manner similar to the larger business data processing computers. What makes microcomputers different is their limited capacity and low cost. What makes them valuable to business people are the many programs (software) available to help analyze and manipulate the stored information.

With appropriate software, it is practical to use microcomputers to assist in preparing business plans and project the financial results of varying business strategies. Technical managers, such as engineers or geologists, also use these systems to analyze technical information and to project the results of alternative design decisions and equipment configurations.

Most microcomputers use a visual display terminal to display information so that individuals can quickly see the results of their calculations. Some systems allow one to print reports and prepare graphic presentations on a plotter. With the proper system, an analyst can easily prepare multi-color pie charts, bar charts, and linear graphs with the results either displayed or plotted.

Thus, business and technical people find these microcomputers useful in analyzing historical data and preparing business or technical projections. Such machines are even more valuable if the information must be presented in a graphical form to help communicate the results to non-financial or non-technical personnel. For such executives,the primary value is obtaining a better understanding of the technical and business environment.

How does someone without a computer background select the correct microcomputer and learn to use it effectively? First, identify a business decision that could be improved through better data analysis or projections. Discuss how you would use the microcomputer with someone that has experience with these systems and also has business judgement that you respect. Such an individual can help you define the special features and unique capabilities to meet your needs.

When selecting a particular microcomputer brand, remember that the software and service must be considered as part of the whole system. If you are uncertain that a system will satisfy your needs, then spend the time to try it out.

Either use one in the dealer's office or borrow one for use in your own office. The intent is to select a system that is easy to use and quickly produces the results you need.

The technology is available for business and technical personnel to improve the quality of their analysis and to better understand the risks and projected impacts of their decisions. By applying their imagination, and a few days time, an increasing number of business and technical personnel will find themselves putting microcomputers to productive use.

Two-income families earn more but seem to have less; Planning helps

By CECELIA GOODNOW
Hearst Feature Service

More than half the married couples in the United States today face an unsettling paradox: As two-income families, they earn 50 percent more than their one-income counterparts, but somehow the cash never seems to stick around.

The culprit, according to financial expert Ann Benson, is lack of planning, which allows precious dollars to slip through a couple's fingers.

"A lot of couples get a false sense of security, but at the end of the month they don't understand why there isn't more left over," Benson said, adding that working couples often fail to consider the extra overhead of child care, gasoline, restaurant meals and other time-saving services. "If one breadwinner made that much money, they'd probably live much more comfortably," she said.

Benson, investor information specialist with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc., has compiled 10 questions designed to measure a couple's "financial communications quotient." They are:

— Do you and your spouse know your combined net worth?
— If either of you died, could the survivor locate the family's important legal and financial papers?
— Have you met jointly with a family attorney, accountant or banker to discuss your financial future?
— Do you discuss major purchases or investments with your spouse before laying out the money?
— Is it clear who is to assume responsibility for bill-paying chores?
— Can both spouses estimate the amounts spent on food, clothing and housing?
— If you keep separate checking accounts, can you estimate how much money is in your spouse's account?
— Do you both know how much you paid in taxes last year?
— In the past six months, have you discussed long-term financial goals?
— Do you clip financial articles from newspapers and magazines to discuss jointly?

If you answered yes to at least seven questions, you're on the right track, Benson said. Five or six yes answers means you should work a little harder.

If you had fewer than five, you need help.

Oil Show enthusiasm catching on; Attendance record expected to be set

The petroleum industry may be going through a flat period at the present time, but a person couldn't tell it by the enthusiasm reflected in the staging of the Permian Basin Oil Show.

With less than two months to go before the oil show, slated Oct. 20-23 at the Ector County Coliseum complex in Odessa, Texas, E. G. (Eddie) Durrett, president of D&R Drilling, Inc., and president of the Odessa oil exposition, is predicting this year's show will break all attendance records despite the slowdown in the industry.

"There are a number of reasons for this," Durrett said. "First of all, the Permian Basin Oil Show is the oldest oil show in the world, it is the largest oil show in the world devoted to the inland petroleum industry, it is the 14th largest trade exposition in the U. S. (the Houston oil show ranks eighth), and there have been fewer cancellations for exhibit space this year than for any show we have staged since the first one in 1940.

"The number of companies wanting exhibit space in this year's oil show has just been phenomenal. There were about 300 companies we couldn't handle for this year's Permian Basin Oil Show, and we probably have about that same number on a standby list for the 1984 Odessa oil show and a lesser number for the 1986 show.

"We started building a backlog of companies when we expanded the Permian Basin Show in 1976 when we opened the coliseum and another large building to exhibitors," Durrett said," and in looking at the time-honored companies who make up the industry, they are either already exhibitors in Odessa or want to be here."

Durrett said the slowdown in the petroleum industry will probably help attendance at this year's show because those potential exhibitors on the waiting list will most certianly have someone here to look over the show to see what the competition has to offer, some who have lost their jobs in the oil patch have gone back to college to further their eduction will be here to "test the waters" for future employment and keeping abreast with new technology and developments, and those with jobs will be in attendance to keep up with what is going on in the business.

"We bill the Permian Basin Oil Show as "the working man's oil show," Durrett said," and therein we appeal to the production foremen, drilling superintendents, tool pushers and farm bosses because they are the business community which buys about 95 percent of all the items that are used on a day-to-day basis, so the Odessa show is a better sales vehicle and offers better sales opportunities to the exhibitor than a show whose primary appeal is to the purchasing agent."

Durrett also attributes the success of the Odessa oil show and its companion show at Lafayette, La., as being the only non-profit oil shows around.

"We plan, stage and manage our own show through a 150-member board of directors who give freely of their time and talents," Durrett noted, "and we do not use the professional management services of any company. We do it all ourselves."

"Our primary concerns are to the exhibitors who are the life's blood of the show because without them there would be no show, so therefore we give them the greatest exposure to the people who buy their goods and services," he said, " and we try to do the job at the lowest cost to the exhibitor."

Durrett said he doubted he would ever see the day when the Permian Basin Oil Show would be staged on a yearly basis although the demand for exhibit space was there.

"Technological changes are not that fast in coming and as a technological showcase, I feel that every two years is right for our show," he said. "There is a lag time from the idea to the finished product which is certainly more than 12 mobnths in most cases and two years crowds them a lot of the time."

The oil show president said one big change has been made of the staging of this year's Odessa oil show. There will be no children admitted to the oil show grounds for the first two days of the show.

"Anyone entering the oil show grounds on the first two days must be old enough to hold a job with an oil company and be associated with the industry in some way," Durrett stated. "And anyone on the grounds must be registered as an exhibitor or visitor or they will be asked to leave."

The oil show president said he doubted the new rule would hurt attendance, adding it could even help the attendance for the first two days, and would most certainly be of benefit to the exhibitor.

"We do not charge admission to our show," he concluded," but the no children rule for the two closed days will be enforced with a member of the registration committee stationed at every entrance to the oil show grounds."

Economic change is return to normal

By MICHAEL E. WILLIAMS

As interest rates have declined drastically during the last couple of months, the words from the Bob Dylan song which was popular in the late '60's, "The Times are A-Changin'", have been going through my head. However, the words of this song don't actually apply to what is going on in today's economy since we are experiencing a return to more normal economic conditions. Short-term interest rates are now lower than long-term interest rates, a situation that is the historical norm but has not been the case for most of the last three years. The stock market has recently experienced a tremendous rally, but stocks in general have been undervalued for some time due to the pessimistic psychology prevailing in the market. The energy business is in what has been called a "non-boom" mode, a situation quite different from the last half of 1981 but an economic climate quite familiar to long-time residents of the Permian Basin.

We have seen some basic changes - primarily a personal income tax rate reduction. However, we have recently seen the federal government act in the more traditional role of raising taxes under the label of "revenue enhancement".

Numerous reasons for the recent changes in the economic environment are, as always, being suggested. In fact, the reasons are probably as plentiful as the number of economists, including those self-proclaimed economists whose ranks have been growing more rapidly than any other occupation in the last few years.

Interest rates dropped because inflation along with the expected rate of future inflation is increasing less rapidly. As we celebrated inflation being "brought under control" in the 6 percent range, it is interesting to note that eleven years ago on August 15, 1971 President Nixon enacted wage and price conrols because inflation was rising at the unacceptable rate of about 4 1/2 percent per year.

Inflation has been reduced by lower average long-term growth in the money supply even though short-term money supply growth has been extremely volatile. Many report that the Federal Reserve, the institution in charge of controlling the money supply, has been too "tight" while others claim that the Federal Reserve has been too "loose". The proper characterization of Federal Reserve policy is not really "tight" or "loose", but rather "erratic". The difference between interest rates and the rate of inflation remained high for a prolonged period of time because of psychological factors which were greatly influenced by predictions of even higher rates by "noted" Wall Street economists. The recent decline in interest rates proved their predictions to be incorrect.

The stock market rallied as interest rates came down. The rally was aided by a pronouncement that interest rates had actually declined from Henry Kaufman, the most vocal of the Wall Street economists who had been claiming that higher interest rates were just around the corner. Although his announcement was released as a "revised forecast", it was more of a confirmation of actions which had already occurred rather than a prediction of future events. What his announcement did do was demonstrate the tremendous influence that psychology has on the market.

Another less talked about reason for the rise in the stock market, but nonetheless as important, was evidence that the U. S. economy was recovering from the recession. Economic statistics for the month of July generally showed positive signs although the economy was still far from robust. As I read predictions that this recovery period will not be as strong as the past, I am reminded that during most previous recoveries, the same prediction was the consensus forecast. Yet, the recoveries usually turned out to be typical; showing strong growth after the upswing had begun.

Unfortunately, the "revenue enhancement" measures enacted by Congress will probably be remembered as a reason for the rise in the stock market. The tax increase was sold on the basis that it would help reduce the size of the federal deficit and bring interest rates down. The theory cited by most of those advocating the tax increase states that the federal government credit demands will "crowd out" the private borrowers and send inerest rates up to "new record highs". The theory sounds reasonable but like a number of other economic theories, it is not supported by the evidence. In the last twenty years interest rates have been low when deficits were large. Those who used the Federal deficit to forecast interest rates made the wrong prediction. Interest rates started down just after the heaviest Treasury financing began.

Historically, the Federal Reserve has expanded money supply rapidly in order to accomodate large deficits. After a lag, this rapid expansion of the money supply has led to increased inflation and finally to higher interest rates. A reduction in government expenditures would have been the preferable path to a sustained economic recocvery rather than the "revenue enchancement" measures recently enacted.

The personal tax rate reductions did not make it through the recent Congressional actions intact. The so-called "tax cut" should be called what it actually is - a slowdown in the automatic tax increases caused by inflation induced bracket creep and increases in Social Security taxes. Even so, the tax rate reductions will allow personal income after adjusting for inflations to rise for the first time since the early 1970's.

An Analysis

The tax rate reductions also played an instrumental role in creating the energy boom of 1981. Since the top tax bracket was lowered from 70 percent to 50 percent on January 1, 1982, there existed a strong incentive to drill during 1981 rather than wait until 1982. As a result, some inefficient drilling rigs and crews were called into service during the last half of 1981. While the number of wells and footage drilled has increased in the first half of 1982 over the last half of 1981, the number of rigs in use has declined sharply. Increased drilling efficiency is the only way to produce such a result. Also, the world-wide recession has caused a decreased demand for energy products and a softening in prices. Thus, the recession has helped create the "non-boom" economic environment our local economy is now clearly experiencing.

What do all these changes mean to the residents of the Permian Basin? Since short-term interest rates have declined more rapidlty than long-term interest rates, those people with some money to invest in financial instruments such as bank certificates of deposit will find they are rewarded for obligating their funds for longer periods of time rather than investing in short-term instruments. Also, the incentive to place money in money market funds, which are able to lock in higher interest rates when rates are declining, will diminish as rates stabilize or increase slightly. Lower interest rates along with the recent rise in the stock market may increase the incentive to invest in equities rather than debt instruments.

For those people on the borrowing side of the market, consumers will experience lower borrowing costs for auto and home improvement loans. Since most credit card purchases have a fixed borrowing rate of 21 percent, a loan automatically extended when the credit card is used will be higher relative to other means of borrowing.

The interest rate on short-term securities has declined while the rate paid on NOW and savings accounts has remained the same. Hence, the difference between the amount of interest earned on NOW or savings accounts and short-term securities is much smaller than it was just a few months ago, particularly for small sums invested. The liquidity and ease of use provided by NOW and savings accounts may be worth more to the saver than the additional interest earned on alternative forms of investments.

The tax increase means that the price of some consumer products, such as cigarettes and aviation fuel, will rise. The withholding of income tax on interest and dividends will greatly increase administrative costs for numerous companies and prevent the taxpayer from using his money until income tax time.

A recovery in the U. S. economy appears to be underway even though its start seems to be somewhat shakey at present. Although some would like to think that the U. S. economy has no effect on our area, the belated appearance of the current economic slowdown in the Permian Baisn is increasing interest in the national economic situation. The U. S. recovery will increase the demand for energy products and increase the capacity utilization of many of the energy intensive industries who are now experiencing extremely low operating rates. This should lead to a forming of energy prices and increased economic activity in the local area. According to a recent study performed by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, a recovery in drilling activity has historically lagged the economic recovery by three to five months.

Although the local business climate currently calls for some caution, planning should be underway now in determining what actions should be taken when the recovery arrives. The positive signs in the local economy must not be ignored. Most studies show that while crude oil prices have leveled off, they still provide adequate incentive to drill, especially in light of the reduced drilling costs brought on by increased rig efficiency. A recent editorial in the Oil and Gas Journal predicts the suppliers of drilling equipment and services who are able to ride-out the current slowdown will emerge "stronger than ever". While the Permian Basin is not expected to return to the boom time of 1981 in the near future, we must avoid simply extrapolating current conditions indefinitely.

Thus, while it may seem that "Times are A-Changin'", what is currently underway in the economic environment is a return to more normal times. However, a return to more normal times will necessitate changes in the way we have done business, made investments and purchased goods during the past few years when the economic environment was anything but normal.

Mexican company has no right to Texas gas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A natural gas company in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, has no rights to gas from a Texas supplier who cut off sales when the foreign company defaulted on payments, a federal appeals court ruled Friday.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a district judge's ruling against Compania de Gas de Nuevo Laredo, which sued Entex Inc.

Entex cut off the gas to the Mexican firm in 1976, saying Compania de Gas de Nuevo Laredo was deep in arrears on payments.

CGNL had been supplied by Entex, or its predecessor companies, since 1948. But in recent years, costs of the gas skyrocketed. Entex said it was simply passing along increased costs from its own suppliers, as permitted in its contract with CGNL.

In its suit, CGNL said the cost increases were unfair, and also accused Entex of corruption and conspiring with the Mexican government to have CGNL's assets seized.

Adobe hits big in Wyoming

Adobe Oil and Gas Corporation recently reported a significant discovery confirmation in its 50 percent owned Oxy Offutt-Rourke No. 2-14 in Campbell County, Wyoming. The well is completed in the Minnelusa formation through 8,712 to 8,717 feet perforations and flowed natural 2,782 barrels oil per day through one inch choke opening. Core analysis of the Minnelusa on the confirmation test indicates 68 feet of pay zone. Logs on the initial well indicated 42 feet of pay zone and tested 1,240 barrels oil per day. Occidental Petroleum and McCormick Oil & Gas each own 25 percent working interest.

Adobe has 1,260 net acres under 1,500 gross acres in the immediate area of the discovery and confirmation wells, and additionally, 3,744 net acres under 3,844 gross acres in the area of interest of the completions.

Resolving Air Park

While the investigation into the crash of the light plane was still under way at the time this edition went to press, some observations seem obvious at this point. Increased construction of commercial and residential structures in the vicinity of Air Park — particularly the number of apartment complexes — has drastically increased in the past couple of years and the odds are better now for more accidents like the one on Friday.

Noting the construction activity in that part of Midland and the corresponding increase in air traffic at Air Park, a number of Midlanders became particularly concerned some months back and began considering the possibility of moving the small, business-oriented airport to another location. In fact, relocation of Air Park was listed as one of the "secondary objectives" in the "design of the city" section of goals covered by Objectives for Midland: The Eighties, Midland's private cooperative long and short-range planning forum. The Objectives group said a primary concern in relocating Air Park was a "safer and more functional location."

That strong consideration should be given to the topic was graphically demonstrated Friday when the twin-engine craft crashed into Warwick Apartments and burst into flames, critically burning its four passengers and an apartment tenant.

True, emergency personnel both at the scene and at Midland Memorial Hospital responded to the challenge before them in an orderly, courteous and commendable manner. News personnel at the scene and at the hospital had only praise for emergency workers and police.

But the human suffering resulting from this crash makes it paramount that the issue of relocation of Midland Air Park be renewed and on a higher priority basis than now exists.

Protecting society

Ironic as it is, one of the best things that Ronald Reagan may have done for the United States during his first two years in office was getting shot. Tragic though it was, that event and its repercussions, appear to have focused national attention on crime and punishment.

In a law-and-order society like the one that exists in Midland, it goes without saying that President Reagan's recently announced proposals to revise the insanity defense and to take other steps to make it tougher on criminals to escape punishment would find ready acceptance.

But that mind-set against crime apparently does not exist throughout the country. That likely is one of the reasons crime has continued to grow as a plague on society while the punishment aspect has become weaker and weaker. President Reagan submitted his crime package to Congress with the purpose of simplifying the justice system and "to make it more likely that those who commit crimes pay a price."

While the president said the verdict handed down to his assailant, John W. Hinckley Jr,, played no role in his submission of the proposal to revise the insanity defense, it's naive to not assume that consideration was given to that incident and to the possibility of such future attacks.

But all that aside, what is important is that attention is now being focused on various aspects of society's inability to address the rising crime problem. And the insanity defense that allowed Hinckley to escape conviction for shooting Reagan and others is only one part of the problem.

No one in his right mind would support revisions that would threaten the integrity of the criminal justice system. But neither should anyone support laws that allow criminals to go free before paying their debt to society. We must not forget in our haste to provide adequate protection for those charged with crimes that the victims of crimes have rights, too.

— Increasing the penalties for narcotics offenses and giving police officials greater authority to confiscate the proceeds of illegal activities such as drug smuggling.

— Allowing courts to consider evidence illegally obtained when shown it was gotten in a "reasonable and good belief" that it was lawfully acquired.

These revisions and others would go a long way toward putting punishment in line with crime, and giving society a way in which to protect itself against the lawless.

Another View:

A stroke of genius

William Gladstone, a British statesman of the Victorian era, once called the U.S. Constitution "the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man." Some might think such praise swept too far. Still, the U.S. Constitution was written by 55 men of unquestionably rare genius for government. Their wisdom should be remembered amid current efforts to change the nation's basic law.

The document that was signed in Philadelphia on Sept. 17, 1787, is the world's oldest written national Constitution still in force. It has survived partly because its authors clearly understood that a nation's fundamental law ought to set forth general principals of government, not detailed legislative enactments.

Unfortunately, that wise perception seems lacking on the part of those who today would clutter the Constitution with single-interest propositions. For example, President Reagan unwisely has called for troublesome amendments to require a balanced federal budget and to permit "voluntary" prayer in public schools.

The budget amendment is little more than a gimmick, designed to give the impression that something is being done to reduce deficits when, in fact, Mr. Reagan is increasing the flow of red ink, largely through misguided calls for massive defense spending. To the extent that the balanced-budget amendment would have practical effect, it would introduce unnecessary rigidity into budget making.

Equally troubling is the proposed amendment to permit "voluntary" prayer in public schools. Its proponents may be impelled by sincere concern about the nation's moral tone. Yet, they embark on a wrong course when they seek to have the state — through its schools — become entangled with forms of religious expression.

Of course, the Constitution is a living document subject to change, by both judicial interpretation and formal amendment. However, its framers understood that it should be a loose garment, not a straight jacket. They understood too, that it should not be a tinker toy of transient political concerns. Their heirs should be so discerning.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Military risks lives hunting publicity

WASHINGTON — Last January, four members of the Thunderbirds, the Air Force's precision flying team, were killed practicing aerial acrobatics. Five weeks later, one of the Navy's Blue Angels died in another crash. These skilled pilots didn't die in combat or on a rescue mission. To be brutally blunt, they were casualties of the military's multimillion-dollar publicity effort.

Jack Anderson

There is, of course, no way to place a dollar value on the lives of these expert fliers. But it is possible to compute the cost of the thriller-diller program in which they died. The Air Force spends more than $6.3 million a year to present its daredevil pilots to the American public, hoping to put stars in the eyes of young men who will supposedly rush to the nearest recruiting center. This doesn't include the cost of the multimillion-dollar planes.

Is the publicity game worth the candle? The stunt programs, whose costs are estimated at well over $50 million a year, have taken 39 lives since the programs' inception. Yet the tragedy of skilled personnel sacrificed on the altar of Pentagon puffery is only the most dramatic evidence of a public-relations enthusiasm that has gotten out of hand.

The reason for the publicity campaigns is obvious: If the armed services look good, the public will complain less about the Pentagon's multibillion-dollar budget. So image-making is important at the Pentagon. Officials insist on drawing a distinction between "public affairs" (providing information to the press and public) and "public relations" (portraying the military in the most favorable light) — in other words, between facts and flacks. But this is baloney. By any name they choose, it's publicity.

It's a cold day in August when the Pentagon news bureaus provide any information that could be remotely construed as derogatory. Unpleasant examples of waste, fraud and incompetence may be extracted painfully by investigative reporters or congressional committees; they are never offered voluntarily.

It's hard to put an exact pricetag on the Pentagon's press agentry. Individual programs are hidden in the jungle of budgetary underbrush that has grown up over the years. "Public affairs" alone costs an estimated $28 million a year. But that's just for the straight-out informational programs. It doesn't include the stunt-flying capers or other image-polishing programs. Nor does it include expenditures that are charged off to recruiting — such as the sponsorship of basketball games on commercial television.

Curiously enough, the Pentagon's public-affairs machine got a high-octane infusion after the Vietnam War. This was intended to boost public esteem for the armed forces. But, of course, it wasn't their performance in Vietnam, but the public-affairs people's lying about Vietnam, that caused the unfortunate loss of faith in the military.

The Pentagon's solution, predictably, was to hire more public-affairs people. The Worldwide Public Affairs Directory for 1982 — the Who's Who of press agents — lists more than 400 public-affairs offices in the continental United States for the Army alone. Of course, the Navy, Air Force and Marines don't want to be outdone by the Army in puffery and have built up equivalent flack forces.

Henry E. Catto Jr., assistant secretary of defense for public affairs insists that every military installation needs its own information staff. "You have to have somebody," he explained, "to deal with the mayor or the police chief, or to listen to outraged complaints from citizens."

It takes 60 officers, enlisted men and civilians to handle these chores in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. The cost to the taxpayers for the three flackeries comes to more than $2 million a year. Their official purpose is to handle press inquiries, promote better community relations and offer assistance to traveling officials, who apparently are incapable of changing trains or planes without the help of wetnurses.

In fact, the last role often seems to be the most important. The Defense Department press agencies are comfortable, convenient stopover spots for junketing brass hats. That would help to explain the high-rent locations of the three offices: at 633 Fifth Ave., in midtown Manhattan; on Dearborn Street in downtown Chicago, and on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles. They are suspiciously handy to the fancy stores, restaurants and theaters that make the three cities such glittering tourist attractions.

My sources tell me it's standard operating procedure for a Pentagon poohbah to cook up some flimsy excuse for a visit to the Fifth Avenue flack tower, spend a few minutes there and then go on a shopping spree or take in a Broadway show.

As a matter of fact, Catto himself — the earnest defender of the big-city flackeries — pulled that very stunt last year, when he flew up to the Fifth Avenue office, ostensibly to consider whether it should be kept or closed. According to my sources, Catto spent all of 25 minutes in the Manhattan public-affairs office, then zipped off to a birthday party for former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Catto defended his junket by pointing out that at least he had used his own car to drive around Manhattan. Asked what he might have learned about the three offices in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, Catto responded: "I don't know how they're used."

The Fifth Avenue address is rented at $25 a square foot, despite the fact that the General Services Administration has plenty of cheaper space available in Manhattan. Offices in the GSA building in the Battery area cost about $15 a square foot.

Most of the personnel at the "Big Three" press palaces are high-paid senior officers. The assignments are considered a cushy final tour of duty with which to close out a military career.

With President Reagan's proposed $1.6 trillion five-year Defense Department budget, every part of the military establishment will be pushing for more money, not less. And the Pentagon's press agents are not only numerous and well-entrenched, they are, by definition, past masters in the promotional arts.

GEORGE F. WILL

Simpson-Mazzoli bill would stem illegal tide

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. William Clements is like a football nose guard: a high ratio of force to nuance. When he clothes his thoughts in words, sparks fly, as they did when he recently explained why Texas, with 500,000 unemployed, needs workers from Mexico:

George F. Will

"(There) are a lot of jobs here in Texas that our so-called unemployed people will not accept, and I am talking about in heavy construction. I am talking about in the service industries, in our hotels and our restaurants and things like this, and all these people are receiving above the minimum wage, but our people just won't take those jobs....Only about 15 percent of (Mexican workers in America) now work in agriculture...."

Leaving aside the nose guard's provocative phrase ("so-called unemployed"), this much is clear:

Immigrants always have been hewers of American wood and drawers of American water. But now half of our immigrants are illegal. Now there is a welfare state that eases the pain of unemployment for American citizens, and entitles (or so courts are saying) illegal immigrants to many benefits. Now government is held politically accountable for aggregate economic activity. Now every president is committed, as the country is (in the Employment Act of 1946), to pursuing full employment.

By providing for "guest workers," the nation is almost acknowledging the existence of a category of jobs considered "beneath" Americans. That is but one difficulty as the nation struggles to establish an essential element of sovereignty: control of its borders.

This "nation of immigrants" — an open society with open borders — is experiencing a tide of illegal immigrants. Such immigrants often are desperate, courageous — and better citizens than many citizens. But the tide must be slowed, and a bill to do that — a bill drafted by Sen. Alan Simpson (R-Wyo.) and Rep. Romano Mazzoli (D-Ky.) — has passed the Senate. However, it may break like a bubble on the sharp edges of the House of Representatives, where interests are many and time is short.

That would be unfortunate. The bill refutes those who say that every day in every way the government knows less and less about more and more. The bill as based on a lot of looking at facts. Like most important bills, passage depends on a reasonable division of legislative labor. A few legislators have done months of work becoming specialists. Such diligence should earn the deference of the majority.

The bill adopts the most efficient approach to limiting illegal immigration: sanctions against employers who hire "undocumented" workers. It provides several kinds of amnesty for illegal immigrants.

The amnesty provisions pose administrative nightmares for officials who can only guess how many millions of illegal immigrants there are. Amnesty is a national policy imposing burdens on states. The bill does not solve the problem of sharing the burdens equitably. The bill would restrict even legal immigration. (The problem of youth unemployment, especially among black youth, makes it urgent to restrict competition for "entry level" jobs.) But in doing so the bill would limit the number of persons admitted each year for the purpose of family reunification. The bill would be better if it did not.

But the clock is running out on this Congress. If the House pursues perfection — if members will not defer to the judgment of those who have earned deference — the good of all the labor may be largely lost.

The House is the only thing in Washington the Democrats run. The House has one fundamental task: originating appropriations bills. Two weeks before the planned adjournment, only two of 13 appropriations bills had been sent to the Senate. Such incompetence (or cynicism — Democrats may prefer slapdash government to the orderly involvement of the Republican-controlled Senate) should be punished at the polls.

Meanwhile, bills such as Simpson-Mazzoli may be stalled, and then dumped into the post-election session. One problem with announcing "lame duck" sessions is that those sessions become dumping grounds — and then burial grounds — for everything controversial.

Many illegal immigrants contribute more in taxes than they receive in benefits, and they work the way our immigrant ancestors did: hard. I am told that you can spot illegal immigrants driving on Los Angeles freeways: They are conspicuously careful because they cannot risk a run-in with the law. The only immigration bill that can pass this year would, through amnesty, enable some immigrants to become as reckless as the rest of us. The rest of us might try being as industrious as immigrants.

ART BUCHWALD

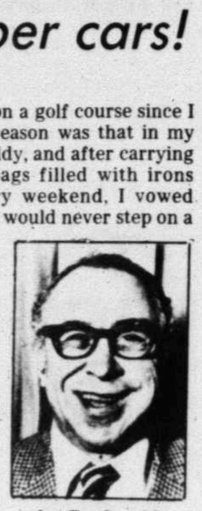
I hadn't been on a golf course since I was a kid. The reason was that in my youth I was a caddy, and after carrying around heavy bags filled with irons and woods every weekend, I vowed when I grew up I would never step on a fairway again.



Art Buchwald

But the other day a friend named Riley, who plays every week, persuaded me to go out with him. "You'll love it," he said. "It's great exercise and the most relaxing sport in the world."

"I'll go along with you," I said, "but I won't play."

"But if you drive around the 18 holes, how do you get any exercise?"

"Looking for your ball. They permit you to get out of the cart to look for it. But they don't want you to look too long because the people playing behind you will get sore."

"How long do they let you look for your ball?"

"Three minutes."

"That long?"

"It gives you just enough time to stretch your legs, but at the same time it doesn't tire you out. Here come the other three guys we're playing with." I was introduced to Hal, Chris and George. They each had their own golf cart.

"Why do you each need a golf cart?" I asked.

"We like to race each other up and down the hills," Hal said. "And besides, if you have your own golf cart you can block the view of your ball and kick it to a better lie."

Chris said, "Sometimes if one of the other players gets a real good shot and you can get to his ball first, you can run over it, so he can't find it."

The foursome teed off and then we all got into our carts and raced to our respective balls. Since I wasn't playing, Riley let me drive his vehicle. "Park as close to the ball as possible," he told me, "so I don't have to walk."

Riley hit his second shot into a sand trap and started cursing. "I knew I should have used a seven iron instead of a five."

It took him three shots to get out of the sand trap, two to get on the green, and three to putt into the hole.

"But we could hurt somebody seriously."

"So?"

"Look, Riley, I haven't been on a course in many years and I just remembered why. Golf is the most frustrating game in the world. I've never seen anyone on a course who had any fun while he was playing."

"Shut up and drive," he said.

The next 17 holes went about the same way with each player cussing and gritting his teeth after he hit the ball. But for the most part we just kept driving from one shot to another. I figured that if you counted how many steps they took to measure their ball to the flag, each player had actually walked the equivalent of two city blocks for the entire 18 holes. The rest of their exercise came from carrying their golf bags from their cars to the locker room.

I'm not trying to put down golf because I know millions of people play it. Actually it's a great contact sport. It's like auto racing, and it takes a heck of a lot more skill than driving the bumper cars on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City.

SPEAKING OUT

Citizen involvement needed by judiciary

By J. SCOTT HENDERSON

Midland County Attorney Scott Henderson was appointed to his current position Nov. 1, 1981. At that time he had been an assistant county attorney since Jan. 1 that year. Previously he was in private practice in Dallas. Henderson received his law degree from Baylor Law School in 1979.

The County Attorney's Office is charged with the prosecution of all misdemeanor offenses, including cruelty to animals and, among others, driving while intoxicated. With The Reporter-Telegram, I welcome the input of concerned citizens and I encourage my constituents to use all the "ways in which a community can make its sentiments known to judicial officials, prosecutors and members of the law enforcement community."

Through letters to editors, presence at court proceedings, and other, more direct means, the citizens of Midland County let prosecutors know how they want criminal laws enforced in the community. This is not simply a right of the citizenry; it is a duty. Without such active participation of the public, our "system," from the U.S. Constitution to local ordinances, can become little more than a charade played out by independent lawyers and judges without reference to community standards, values and desires.

The duty of community citizens does not end with a letter to the editor or a quick protest at the courthouse, though. The very heart of our legal system is the jury. Both the U.S. and Texas Constitutions envision the citizens of a community, not the judges, prosecutors and peace officers, determining both the guilt/innocence and the proper punishment of those accused of crimes. Use of a jury for every criminal case would, obviously, result in the law's being enforced as the community wished, every time.

Unfortunately, the sheer volume of cases filed in all our criminal courts requires that "plea bargaining" be used to dispose of the vast majority of those cases. In plea bargaining, when a case is filed, an experienced trial attorney in the prosecutor's office reviews the case and the evidence he can present. He then estimates, based on his experience with local juries, what could be expected from a jury if the case were tried. He then negotiates with the defense attorney, offering the accused, for a plea of guilty, a punishment based on his estimate of the probable jury verdict. Thus the punishment imposed by a jury in one case will directly affect the dispositions of many other cases which do not go to trial.

Without this process, Midland County would need, and have to pay for, several times the present number of courts, judges and prosecutors. Virtually every registered voter in the county could expect to be called several times each year for jury duty (at an additional expense of $10 per day per juror). Until an affordable alternative is presented which permits direct jury input in every case, we must try to achieve the same result with plea bargaining.

A prosecutor's only direct reference to the feelings of the community regarding punishment in criminal cases is his experience with local juries in similar cases. A plea bargain offer from a prosecutor must be based on his evaluation of the case in light of previous jury verdicts. If previous juries have done their duty and expressed the feelings of the community, then the prosecutor, the defense attorney, and the judge know how a jury would respond in a particular case. The law is then applied as the public desires, the defendant receives a sentence fair to both him and the community and the taxpayers are spared the expense of a jury trial.

If, in fact, "the outrage expressed by a number of Midlanders to a crime is more than ample evidence of a consensus against that crime," as editorialized in The Reporter-Telegram, then that consensus should be reflected by the verdicts of local jurors in criminal cases.

Unfortunately, letters to editors and jury verdicts do not always correlate. The growing public and media outrage over drunk driving and DWI manslaughter provides an example. Midland County juries are notorious for sympathizing with defendants, second-guessing police officers and, above all, applying what prosecutors call the "there but for the Grace of God" rationale in DWI cases. While these same juries would not hesitate to deal harshly with animal torturers, thieves, burglars and child molesters, DWI defendants in our country are, more often than not, told that drunk driving will be winked at! New and harsher laws, orchestrated outrage, editorials, television specials and Presidential commissions cannot, in and of themselves, stop the 26,000 deaths which result annually from drunk driving. Juries alone have the opportunity and duty to speak for entire communities; by telling prosecutors and judges what sentences are proper in the plea bargaining process.

A jury, as the voice of the community in which a crime has occurred, must consist of citizens willing to do their duty to correlate "consensus" with the verdicts rendered in criminal cases. Without such citizen participation, our system cannot respond to public outcry or to spiraling crime rates.

Most public prosecutors are competent, dedicated and responsive to the desires of the public. We read the editorials and the news, and seek all the input available from our constituencies. But the real "bottom line" in a particular case or type of case is our knowledge of how a Midland County jury will deal with the case.

Citizens called for jury duty must recognize that they, rather than prosecutors and judges, determine how and to whom the criminal laws are applied in our community. These citizens must realize that this responsibility far outweighs the inconvenience of a day or a week in the courthouse; they must realize that this responsibility must push aside natural human emotion, whether of outrage or sympathy; they must realize that their acceptance of this responsibility defines the term "law enforcement" in Midland County.

College conversation 'majors' on funds

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In most places at this time of year, if one says "college" the response is likely to be "football."

But in some legislative offices, the response likely will be "funding."

That may be particularly true in the office of Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, who chairs the House Committee on Higher Education.

As in years past, higher education is shaping up as one of the major issues for the 1983 legislative session, due in part to the failure of lawmakers to agree on a new plan for funding construction at public colleges which aren't part of the Permanent University Fund.

Earlier this year, lawmakers approved a constitutional amendment, to be voted on Nov. 2, abolishing the State ad valorem tax which has been used to fund construction at the non-PUF schools, along with legislation appropriating $151 million to those 17 schools for construction projects.

Recently, the Council of Presidents and Chancellors of Public Senior Colleges and Universities of Texas agreed in principle to a college construction funding plan, which would include expanding the Permanent University Fund to all University of Texas and Texas A&M University system components, and creating a constitutionally dedicated fund for the non-PUF schools.

That idea is basically the same as that proposed by the Governor's Task Force on Higher Education earlier this year.

But the bedeviling problem of where to get the money for that constitutionally dedicated fund still remains, and that difficulty isn't likely to be overcome without a great deal of soul- and pocketbook-searching by the Legislature.

Ms. Delco is likely to be active in that search, whether she returns as head of the Higher Education Committee or not (at least four members of the panel aren't returning to the Legislature, and Senate Education Committee Chairman Pete Snelson, D-Midland, also will be gone in 1983.)

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

"I think the construction issue will be critical," Ms. Delco agrees. "We have only deferred the problem; it isn't going to go away."

The money appropriated in the special session was "only a stop-gap," and the Legislature must "look at a long-term commitment," she says.

Colleges, Ms. Delco argues, should be competing against one another for funds, rather than having to "stand in the long line behind senior citizens and young children...and all the other needs, to dip into general revenue."

That, she adds, isn't to say that there shouldn't be legislative oversight of construction and other college spending.

But, as Ms. Delco notes, construction funding isn't the only issue involving higher education which will be facing the 1983 session.

"Texas has been fortunate enough to have been in a period of growth in higher education for a long time," she comments. "But now we are in a time of retrenchment."

"We have some institutions with declining enrollments...as well as some that are growing. What we have to do is to make some decisions on what we want higher education to look like...in the 1990s, and beyond."

"One of the interesting things," she comments, is the role business and business needs will play in higher education in coming years.

In the past, she says, the State and Federal governments, and the military, have had a significant impact, and "now we see the role of business picking up."

Ms. Delco, who will chair the education committee for the National Conference of State Legislatures, sees the next several years as involving other changes in the overall educational system in Texas and the nation — including the role of vocational-technical education, and the role of private education.

There will also be decisions on how Texas responds to changes created by the "New Federalism," she says.

In many instances, programs have been begun by the federal government, and "the critical point is whether Texas will take the lead in some of these programs or support them, financially and philosophically."

Needs of professional education — including medical schools — are shaping up as a major concern — along with a renewed argument over tuition and student fees.

Then there's the question of state-supported research — which Ms. Delco thinks must be considered as Texas develops, and hopes to keep developing, as a high-technology center.

"I think," Ms. Delco concludes, "we're going to have to have questions about priorities...and about cost as related to those priorities...We are definitely going to have to look at costs."

And, she admits, that job isn't likely to be any easier next year than it has been in years past.

Figures, please

To The Editor:

Sir — If you or any member of your staff could publish a "reasonable estimate" in an actual figure of the amount Ed Garvay will get from the proposed football player pay increase, then we the viewing public can better understand what goes on.

Why should any one man fix the pay for some 1,500 or so players, when only 45 or so are on any one team?

He would tell the owners and coaches what to pay any player regardless of position or performance.

To The Editor:

In the few remaining weeks in this session, Congress may consider revisions to the Clean Air Act that will chart the nation's pollution control course over the next several years. The League of Women Voters strongly supports legislation developed by the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee under the leadership of its chairman, Robert Stafford.

The current Clean Air Act has been a tremendous success. Progress has been made in cleaning up our cities, and the grandeur of our national parks has been protected. The Council on Environmental Quality has estimated that cleaner air translates into benefits in excess of $21 billion each year, including countless illnesses averted and more than 13,000 lives saved. In public opinion polls, fully 85 percent of the public supports the Clean Air Act.

However, problems still remain. Air pollutants known or suspected to cause cancer or other serious diseases go uncontrolled. Acid rain economic damage totals more than $5 billion each year and hundreds of lakes in the Northeast have been killed and/or threatened by acid rain. The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee bill would deal with these problems. It calls for a modest reduction in eastern and midwestern emissions of sulfur dioxide — the principal cause of acid rain — by 35 percent by 1995.

The bill also directs EPA within the next five years to decide whether to control at least 40 airborne chemicals known or suspected to cause cancer or other serious diseases. In addition, the bill provides regulatory relief to industry and shifts appropriate responsibility back to the states. The bill streamlines current law and provides flexibility while keeping basic and successful programs largely intact.

The League of Women Voters urges all citizens to contact your senator to urge his support for the bill. A commitment to this legislation would be a commitment for a strong, enforceable Clean Air Act — one that would provide for a clean environment and a healthy, growing society.

Telephone tales

To The Editor:

This is concerning those who have written complaining about rural telephone service.

We have lived on County Road 1130 N. in the Greenwood district for 7½ years. We applied for a private line in March, 1975, and to date are still on a four party line. We've been promised dozens of times we would soon be getting a private line, and know for a fact new neighbors who received private lines years after our application. One telephone man even told us it is all in who you know. My husband is self-employed and there's no telling the amount of business he has lost from busy and out of service lines (the latter being a big problem).

If anyone knows who's in charge of this whole mess I would love to know their names so I can call and complain one more time. That is if the telephone is working.

Private sector

To The Editor:

The news media reported that Midland Memorial Hospital was approved by the local bureaucracy to add some 15 million dollars to the tax bill of the citizens by their selection of MMH over the proposal by a private group to construct a like facility. We in the oil and gas industry are very critical, and rightly so, of the government involvment in our business. The same people that are pushing for the feds to remove controls from oil and gas, having made trips to Washington to work in that effort, are now working against private industry at the local level.

The local doctors have gone on record saying both facilities are needed, while the MMH management states that their's is the one and only one that should be built. An addition to the 15 million dollars for the additional beds and expansion program. MMH has not given up the effort for the construction of the alcohol and drug dependency unit, also estimated to cost some 3 and ½ million dollars of tax dollars. How much can you stand? Eighteen and one half million.

I restate my previous stand, and I feel that the majority of the people feel the same way. "No service or facility should be constructed or furnished by a Governmental body, either on a local or national level, when that service, or facility, can be furnished by private industry." Will you vote a bond issue and obligate you and your heirs for years to come to construct anything in competition with private industry? I for one being a firm believer in the continued operation of the private sector, will not do so. The government should not compete with either you or I in any facet of our lives.

Somewhere along the line, at some point in time, I think we relied on the Government to protect our borders and our life and limb from evil influences that were a threat to us as individuals and our country as a Great Nation. Are we to sit back and say the Government should furnish this or that, under the guise that "we are going to do it with tax dollars, so I know we can do it better and cheaper?" That concept will not work, has never worked, regardless of any accounting procedure that may be used in order to solicit your support. What did MMH do from one week to the next to wipe out their competition; neither unit was approved in the first go-round. We should never support any encroachment upon private industry by a tax supported entity.

The argument has been given, the tax dollars are a very small part of our budget, in fact they are so small when you take into account the overall program, that you should not be concerned that we are spending tax dollars.... The type of reasoning used in this attempt in justification is ridiculous; show me the difference in "little tax dollars versus big tax dollars." Any additional taxes that we may be asked to vote are "big tax dollars" and especially so, if and when private companies are ready to supply the same service with their own money. MMH has said "little tax dollars"...HOGWASH!!!!!!

I do thank The Midland Reporter-Telegram for their objective reporting of the hospital. The people of the hospital district need to know what is taking place.

Consumer recourse

To The Editor:

I have been abused and taken advantage of by a local area merchant, one of those counter set ups in the middle of a mall. At this particular counter I was so badly treated in trying to resolve a problem over faulty merchandise that I felt compelled to notify the world!

Yet, as a Christian I must not seek revenge by trying to hurt his business. I have received an education though, in what is available recourse in such a matter to receive restitution and to help prevent others from experiencing the same injustices. I would like to take this opportunity to pass that information along to the public as many of you may have experienced or will experience similar instances, possibly with the same vendor.

First, the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin at the Midland Regional Air Terminal may be contacted by writing P.O. Box 6006, Midland, Texas 79701 or calling 563-1881. Please include three loose postage stamps to help with their overhead. Inform them of any facts of faulty merchandise such as a 10 kt. yellow gold baby ring turning green and turning out to only be gold plated, over a silver-colored metal base. They will write the business and give them a chance to make amends. They will send a copy of your complaint, write again to the merchant and contact you to see if action has been taken. They can do nothing about personalities, no matter how rude the merchant.

The Chamber of Commerce in Midland is at 109 N. Main or can be written to at P.O. Box 1890, Midland, Texas 79702 to the attention of Mr. Paul Harvel or call 683-3381. There is little they can do, but they are good listeners.

If you happen to be doing business at the Midland Park Mall, Jim Ellis in the Mall Management Office and Pam Leach with the Merchants Association are good places to start. They can be reached at 694-1663 or 697-4821 respectively or by writing 4511 Midkiff Rd. N., Midland, Texas 79701. They too are good listeners. They seem to be an excellent compliment to the BBB Attitude, courtesy, merchandise quality and reliability are all covered between the two.

Need for balance

To The Editor:

The Reporter-Telegram published an article by Charley Reese (Sept. 21, 1982, Page 8A) entitled "Psychopaths Don't Know Joy of Love," in which he stated, "If we had the guts, we would...identify psychopaths and shoot them." If we legalized the hunting and shooting down of "psychopaths," I'll bet we would have a group of psychopaths doing the hunting. What they do well illegally, they would do even better legally.

There appears to be aggression in the best of us and love in the worst of us. The need for a balance between these two powerful drives or instincts is addressed by Jesus' combined statements: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one; and you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind and with all your strength... You shall love your neighbor as yourself... do this, and you will live."

I believe that when the aggressive or survival instinct and the instinct or need to love and be loved oppose each other, in a personality where adequate intelligence and honesty are present, the result is a reasonable human being. This person does not neglect his own needs, but at the same time has respect and concern for the other fellow, most of the time.

The parent-child relationship is important in this process, but it does not function in a vacuum. Enough guilt has been cast upon parents. Every adult encountered by a child may leave a mark of influence. The society has its own effect.

We cannot shoot people who may be the result of our own combined mistakes. Instead, we can pray and work for the birth of a more domesticated human.

Lifesavers

To The Editor:

This is concerning the fire that broke out at the Haystack Apartments on Sept. 2, 1982. What the tenants don't know is that thanks to my husband and his friend they probably saved some lives that night. And I at least think they should be thanked for it.

According to the two young men, everyone was asleep when the fire started, and had no idea what was happening. So both of them tried to put the fire out (where the fire originally started) and they also had to bang and beat on a lot of tenants' doors to get them awake and out of their apartments. If these two men hadn't of driven by just at the right time, it might have been too late. And the reason for that is that they both saw what a long time it took the police department and fire department to arrive at the scene.

In other words I would like the people that were in those apartments to think about it real hard. It might just be that these two guys saved their lives.

Rhizome raves

To The Editor:

Thanks to excellent publicity the public was well informed about the annual rhizome sale held recently by the West Texas Iris Society.

Accolades to Linda Anderson, who with The Midland Reporter-Telegram gave the society such good coverage the rhizomes were all sold by noon of the day of the sale.

Tom and Donna Manning allowed the members of WTIS to literally take over their nursery and we thank them for their hospitality.

Without the public though, we would have never had such success. The society apologizes to those of you who arrived too late to purchase any rhizomes. Because of so many who went home disappointed a repeat sale will be held Saturday, October 2, at Manning's Garden Center, 2820 W. Golf Course Road. The time for the sale will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. or until we well out.

Parents' group

To The Editor:

I would like to pass on the following information to parents of public school students.

There is an organization which can help parents who have any educational problem or who wish to stay advised of decisions affecting their children in school. It's the National Committee For Citizens On Education, Suite 410, Wilde Lake Village Green, Columbia, Maryland 21044.

NCCE is a national public interest non-profit organization which works to improve the quality of education by involving parents and other citizens in the policies and decisions of the U.S. public schools.

It publishes information handbooks and NETWORK, a newspaper for parents, and has a toll-free hot line (800-NETWORK) that parents can call when they need help with educational problems or questions.

Prompt attention

To The Editor:

Recently I fell in my home and broke my hip. My husband dialed 911 and immediately the paramedics were there.

I can't praise them enough for the efficient and careful way they performed their duties with a minimum of pain to me. The attention I received at the emergency room of Midland Memorial Hospital was superb. I think we are fortunate in Midland to have the emergency medical service that we have and a fine staff of doctors.

The nursing staff on 3 East at Midland Memorial Hospital are to be highly commended for the dedication, skill and cheerful attitude with which they do their work.

There's no doubt about it, we have high quality health care in Midland.

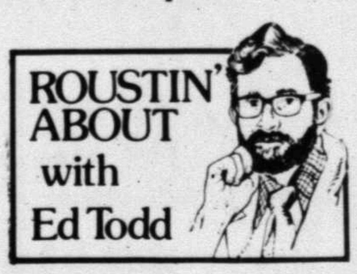
BIBLE VERSE

Train up a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it. Prov. 22:6

The care and feeding of work relationships



"The problem with running the office," the supervisor said, "is the people. If they would just do their jobs the way they're supposed to and not bother me with their pettiness, everything would just be dandy. Then I could act like an executive."

The boss turned aside, downed a martini, gnashed his teeth where the olive was and swallowed hard. He headed for the golf greens and looked forward to the 19th hole and to another double take of the dry drink.

Across town, one of the supervisor's employees popped open a beer can, flopped into the easy chair and seethed. "The problem with work," he told his buddy, "is the fool boss. Instead of minding his own business, he piddles in mine. Hired me to do a job, and now he's trying to tell me how to do it. He ought to stick to his own business. Nerd."

The American work ethic calls for the worker to be industrious, faithful to his task, loyal to the employer and to say no ill-will about the boss and not to disparage him or the work institution, lest, as Elbert Hubbard wrote, "at the first high wind that comes along, you will be uprooted and blown away and probably will never know the reason why."

The problem with that is that the burden of work and loyalty is on the workers — both meek and outspoken. Obedience is demanded by the boss as surely as the worker demands his reward on payday for showing up for work. The worker has to prove his worth.

Now, the boss's worth is innate; it comes with the title and is bolstered by the paycheck. The proof is in his aura. The boss — he or she — is a godling. The boss speaks, and the masses tremble in fear and trepidation. They are so fearful.

That, of course, is hardly the case in this country today, though many entertain themselves with the fantasy of boss supremacy.

The problem, it seems, in the boss-worker relationship is the usual conflict of personalities and the usual game-playing. By his prodding, the dishonest boss seeks to control by intimidation; he can hardly bind, strap, whip and lash his people without bringing the indignity of the law, labor and courts on him. And the worker can ill afford to lash out at the boss and say unkind things without undergoing stress from several quarters. Momentary relief of that ilk may be a high price to pay for recurring pain.

One chance for an amicable, if not amiable, boss-worker relationship is for the supervisor and the employee to set aside their titles and job descriptions and to remember that they are on the same planet in an infinite universe. What's important is today and their common destiny.

Arrtco Tennis Systems, Inc. has a proven record of superiority and excellence in the tennis courts in which they build; not only commercially, but residential as well. Rusty Abell, president of Arrtco, is one of only 14 certified tennis court builders in the world. Every court which his company builds is given the meticulous attention, even down to the smallest detail, needed to insure you of an absolutely perfect job every time. And now Arrtco, known worldwide for being first in service and quality, introduces another first to the United States and to Midland: the ultimate tennis court...Omnicourt.

Yes, Midland is very special, and is being introduced for the first time to Omnicourt. Omnicourt is already being used around the world and has been proclaimed far and wide as the ultimate tennis court. The highly adaptable playing surface consists of a combination of specially designed synthetic grass and formulated granular top dressing. It is specially cushioned, making it easy on a player's legs. Omnicourt stays cool underfoot, making it excellent to play on even during those fiery West Texas summer days. And for those rare instances when West Texas gets that strange visitor we call rain, Omnicourt drains naturally, allowing puddle-free playing only minutes after a rainfall.

The Omnicourt surface provides surefooted traction, allows good lateral movement, and is very low in abrasion, helping both tennis balls and shoes to last longer. Although Omnicourt is a synthetic court, special formulation gives it a natural, grass-like appearance, it responds to spin with true bounce, it can be adapted to play either fast or slow, and it helps to absorb those annoying echoes that normally accompany indoor tennis court installation. And since it is immune to even the most severe climatic conditions, Omnicourt is perfect for outdoor installation as well as indoors.

Omnicourt can also save you thousands of dollars in maintenance costs. There is no need for daily sweeping, raking, watering, or leveling that all grass courts require. The lines are permanently inlaid in the material, eliminating painting and restriping. Omnicourt may be installed over an existing court if so desired. For new court construction, the base preparation for Omnicourt is low-cost. But for all the money saved on other maintenance costs(as well as the wear and tear on both balls and shoes), the most important feature of Omnicourt is that it is so durable that it never needs resurfacing! A conventional court must be resurfaced every four to five years, but Omnicourt will last you a bare minimum of twelve years!

Omnicourt is a quality surface that provides exceptional comfort, durability, and affordability. It is installed with a comprehensive five year warranty, and may be relocated, if desired. The court is so advanced that people around the world in the tennis profession have termed it the ultimate court, including professional tennis star Ken Rosewall. He says that Omnicourt is "simply the best there is." And like Omnicourt, Arrtco Tennis Systems is considered by many to be the best. So, for the best tennis court available, call on Arrtco Tennis Systems, and ask for Omnicourt. Arrtco features superior workmanship and outstanding products, along with that all-important factor which has been all but lost in today's world: personal supervision. The ultimate court by the ultimate builder, Arrtco Tennis Systems. Call Rusty Abel at 683-7798. "Simply the best there is."

Electronic Typewriters Available at Faulkner's

In this day and age, everything has gone to the world of electronics. Electronics has several distinct advantages, one of the most prominent being that with less moving parts to break or wear out, electronic devices need less service and maintenance. Better performance with less time spent in the repair shop and greater efficiency makes an electronic typewriter the intelligent choice for your office. Don't buy any typewriter until you have compared it with the line of Royal electronic typewriters available at Faulkner's Office Machine Corp. in Midland. Faulkner's invites you to move up to the world of electronics and experience the ease and efficiency with which an electronic typewriter operates.

The Royal 5030 utilizes microprocessor technology. Royal replaced hundreds of moving parts with advanced electronics. What this means to you is reliability, productivity, and simplicity.

The 5030 has an electronic memory with an incredible 8000 character memory. You can store up to four pages of information, and at any time make quick and easy revisions, eliminating costly and time-consuming retyping. Up to 100 blocks of information or phrases such as names, addresses, or short letters may be stored in the memory. A unique 3-character LED display lets you know when you have 250 characters or less left in the memory. And in case of a power outage, or if the plug is accidentally pulled on your machine, a battery keeps your memory alive for over 500 hours so that you are not likely to ever lose the memory.

The Royal 5030 is a simple, one-step operation machine. To activate a function, simply press the function key and start typing, unlike most electronic typewriters which require two keys being depressed simultaneously. Some of the automatic keys the 5030 has are: automatic carrier return, automatic centering between margins and tabs, and automatic decimal alignment.

The Royal 5030 gives you total typing simplicity. Error correction is the easiest you could ask for, with no "whiting out" the error. After correction of an error or editing, the 5030 sends you directly back to where you left off by use of a relocate key. This amazing machine also features automatic paragraph indention, stop-code key, a 32 character buffer memory, a perfect print wheel that is also interchangeable, and best of all for those of you who spend hours every day typing out forms, the Royal 5030 lets you program into it the design of the form you are typing for quick and easy completion. It's that simple!

Yet, for all of the features of the Royal 5030, perhaps the most important features of all are that, even though it is extremely advanced in it's functions, it is so simple to use that anyone who can type can use the Royal 5030. And with all of the convenience, a combination of microprocessor electronics and print wheel technology makes the 5030 one of the most silent typewriters you can buy! The Royal 5030 is...simply perfect!

Call Faulkner's Office Machine Corp. today at 684-6625 or 563-0030 for an in-office demonstration or a free trial. Or you can stop by their office at 2612 W. Front St. in Midland. So you got home from the office late and your wife has already fed the cold dinner to the Doberman, the kids are crying because they are hungry, your wife is crying because she spent all afternoon in a kitchen as hot as the Sahara on a mid-July afternoon for nothing, her surprise didn't come off because YOU didn't make it home, and... well, what else can go wrong? Now your wife is sobbing that everything is ruined, or is it? You can very quickly transform yourself from a goat to a hero by treating your family, and yourself, to a pleasant eveing meal at Cattleman's Steak House.

One trip to Cattleman's and you'll love what owners Bill and Pat Henkel have done to serve you. The pleasant, relaxed atmosphere and the friendly, efficient staff will make you want to come back again and again. But perhaps the best experience you'll have at Calleman's is the delicious food.

Appetizers at Cattleman's range from a extra large or regular size mountain of onion rings to shrimp cocktail, fried zucchini, or fried mushrooms. Maybe you would prefer a hot bowl of homemade soup, steaming chili, or frito pie. The salad bar is a work of art.

To complement your dinner, Bill and Pat have included a good selection of wines, champagnes, and sherry, ranging from inexpensive to exquisite. They serve only premium beers, those generally considered to be the best.

Now comes the steak, cooked to your order of perfection. Dinner steak, ribeye, or club steak would be the perfect way to fill that hole in your tummy. Sirloins come in all sizes, ranging from sirloin for one to sirloin for eight. T-Bone steak, an old favorite, comes in three sizes to satisfy even the hungriest appetite. Prime rib is the prime choice of many hungry appetites when it is available.

Maybe instead of steak, you would prefer seafood. You can go to Cattleman's for delicious fried shrimp, oysters, scallops, catfish, and even froglegs. And even though every item on the menu may be considered special at Cattleman's, you owe it to yourself to try Cattleman's specialty: Chicken fried steak. Other menu items include fried chicken strips, hamburger steak, and Virginia ham steak. All entrees include a hearty baked potato and a trip to the salad bar.

For those of you who are not quite so hungry, Bill and Pat provide the all-American favorites: the hamburger or cheeseburger. Both come in two sizes. If you really want to spice it up, try one of the jalapeno burgers. Grilled cheese, ham and cheese, steak sandwiches, and turkey,ham and cheese sandwiches are waiting for those with only a light appetite. A trip to the salad bar may be made without a dinner order.

Kids are welcome at Cattleman's Steak House,too. Special child's plates are available for your little ones. Non-alcoholic beverages include tea, coffee, milk and soft drinks. And now that you have finished that delicious steak and are sitting back relaxed and contented, how about desert? Top it all off with scrumptious cherry or bluberry cheesecake or delicious pecan pie. Hours at Cattleman's are from 10:00 to 2:00 and 5:00 to 9:30, Monday through Friday and 5:00 to 10:00 on Saturdays. Cattleman's is closed on Sunday. And if the parking lot is full when you get there, go on in anyway. The parking lot is almost always full, and you very rarely have more than a five minute wait to be seated.

Congress loses oil tax momentum

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — When Penn Square Bank died a sudden death this summer, so did some of the momentum in Congress for new taxes on oil and gas.

Headlines in Washington heralded recession in the oil patch. Stories detailed the thinning of rigs in Texas and how the boom of 1981 had turned into the bust of 1982.

Earlier in the year Congress was discussing whether an energy tax would be necessary to offset glutinous federal spending and the resultant deficit. Northeastern congressmen latched onto the theme and proposed their Crude Oil Profit Sharing Act of 1982.

The proposal had been drafted by the powerful Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition with its more than 200 members. Backers of the bill said they were laying the foundation for a permanent tax on crude oil, one that would last beyond the phasing out of the windfall profits tax in the early 1990s.

They were vocal in their opposition to an oil import fee, and they wanted to strike back with the tax on domestic production since a high percentage of imported oil is consumed in the Northeast.

Also bandied about was the idea of a tax on all forms of energy production (much of which would have fallen on domestic oil and gas production) and of doing away with the income tax deduction for intangible drilling costs.

But, by late summer, those same congressmen who pushed the oil sharing act appeared less enthused with the taxation schemes, and they passed up at least one chance to build momentum for such taxation next year.

When they took the floor for an hour-long series of speeches on energy, they talked about tax credits related to energy conservation and alternative energy production.

Both of those are favorite Northeastern themes. But there was no mention of intensifying the battle for taxation.

Last week, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, apparently felt comfortable enough with the anti-taxation climate in Congress to attack the windfall profits tax.

"Indeed, it is an appropriate time for us to re-evaluate the merits of the windfall tax," said Bentsen. "With the price of oil down significantly, the justification offered by some for the tax -- that undue returns are flowing to the oil industry -- does not hold water. All that tax is doing now is stealing funds needed for capital expenditures and drilling exploration, the source of the industry's future growth."

A congressional aide, who did not want to be named, said a new bill for revision of the windfall profits tax probably could not pass.

"I think it's going to be hard to pass that kind of legislation because the administration needs that money to make a dent in the deficit," he said.

While there might be little chance of diluting the windfall profits tax, there is less chance that new taxes will be levied.

"At this point, I don't see any momentum for any energy tax," said Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, a principal player in the attempt to decontrol prices of natural gas. "And I think we'll be successful in beating back any energy tax in the next Congress."

He predicted that the next fight would be over a new windfall profits tax on natural gas, which is opposed even by some consumer groups, who argue it would make it easier to pass decontrol legislation in Congress.

J.R. Prestidge, the Northeast-Midwest coalition staff member who helped draft the crude oil sharing bill, said there would be no slacking off by its members on three principles:

-- The federal government has the "legitimate right to tax energy, be it oil, gas, coal or whatever."

--All states should receive a share of the taxes on energy, unlike the windfall profits tax.

-- Severance taxes imposed by the states on energy, such as the Texas severance tax on oil and gas, should be capped. (A severance tax is levied when oil is removed from the ground.)

Prestidge and an aide to Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., a major sponsor of the crude oil sharing act, said the tax would be reintroduced next year.

"We're not in any way backing away from the earlier bill," said Wolpe aide Keith Laughlin. "It will be reintroduced, but probably not in the same form."

But Prestidge said the change might involve concentrating on the severance tax cap rather than the new tax on crude oil.

Industry will long lick wounds

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While the Reagan administration is hailing the arrival of an economic revival, it is increasingly clear that much of American industry will be licking its wounds long after the recession.

Economists are in general agreement that any recovery will be slow, and financially distressed companies are not likely to see a surge in sales and profits any time soon.

Signs of struggle were seen in several key industries this past week:

—F.W. Woolworth Co. said Friday it was closing all of its 336 Woolco discount stores in the United States in one of the biggest corporate retrenchments of the year. The company said it wanted to focus on its profitable businesses. Woolco had an operating loss of $19 million last year and $21 million in the first six months of its fiscal 1982.

—Du Pont Co., the chemicals and energy giant, agreed to sell interests in 29 U.S. oil and natural gas fields to Petro-Lewis Corp. for $772 million. Du Pont, which acquired the properties in its takeover last year of Conoco Inc., said proceeds would be used to reduce its mountainous debt as a result of the Conoco buyout.

—Bethlehem Steel Corp. said it would end its steelmaking operations on the West Coast and put up for sale its plants in Los Angeles and Seattle. Company executives said the "depressed level of operations" contributed to its decision.

—Chrysler Corp., the struggling car maker, said chances are growing slimmer that it will make a profit in the current business quarter. Chairman Lee Iacocca said he had abandoned his prediction that Chrysler would make a $150 million profit for the full year, saying "we're just muddling through."

Those are not the only examples of companies fighting to cope with the recession that has gripped most of the industrialized world. In fact, statistics show more and more companies are losing the battle against recession.

Dun & Bradstreet Corp., which monitors the financial health of U.S. companies, reported this past week that the previous week was the second-worst this year for business failurues.

It said 657 businesses either closed shop or were forced to seek reorganization under the federal Bankruptcy Code. That was the second-highest weekly total of 1982, surpassed only by the 696 businesses that failed in the last week of August.

That latest batch pushed the failure total for the year to 17,052, which Dun & Bradstreet said was more than during any full year since the Depression year of 1933.

But at the same time, the nation received more favorable news on inflation. And that gave the White House a chance to suggest that the economic hard times are coming to an end.

Donald Regan, the Treasury secretary, said the government's report that inflation slowed last month to a 3.3 percent annual rate was evidence "we're on the road to recovery."

Earlier in the week, the Commerce Department said the economy appeared to be growing at a 1.5 percent annual rate in the current business quarter. And it increased its estimate of growth in the previous quarter to 2.1 percent.

Normally, economists might say two consecutive quarters of growth in the economy was a sure sign of an end to the recession. But these are not normal times.

Interest rates remain at abnormally high levels, despite sharp declines earlier this month. Most interest rates were little changed this past week.

And the poor financial condition of many companies and governments raises the grim possibility of a major default creating a domino effect among lending institutions that hold large chunks of public and private debt.

In other economic and business developments this past week:

—Xerox Corp. agreed to acquire Crum & Forster for $55 a share, or about $1.65 billion in cash and securities. Xerox said its proposed purchase of the insurance holding company would not change its commitment to the office-automation market.

—Striking rail workers went back to work on orders from Congress. The four-day strike by the Brotherhoood of Locomotive Engineers, which began Sunday and cost the national economy millions of dollars in lost production, ended after President Reagan signed the emergency legislation.

—The Commerce Department reported that new orders for durable goods fell 4 percent in August from the month before. The orders had risen 2.5 percent in July, and some economists said the August decline was evidence of continued weakness in industrial production.

—The nation's major automakers reported that new car sales rose 14.7 percent in mid-September, reflecting aggressive dealer-incentive and advertising campaigns to move 1982 models out of dealer lots. At the same time, the five companies reported 232,500 U.S. workers on indefinite layoff, up from 231,390 last week. Temporary layoffs were at 42,400, compared with last week's 18,800.

—The Commerce Department reported that the personal income of Americans rose a weak 0.3 percent in August, following a 1 percent gain in July. The August increase was the smallest monthly gain since last March when personal income rose 0.2 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge natural gas pipeline supplying much of the Midwest was ordered Friday to justify its purchase of expensive liquified natural gas from Algeria.

Critics have claimed that consumers in five Midwestern states will see their gas bills rise by up to 16 percent this winter because of the purchase of the high-cost gas.

In the order, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission gave Houston-based Panhandle Eastern Corp. seven days to explain how the purchase is "in the public interest."

"We believe that the original action of the Federal Power Commission in 1977 provided valid authority for the LNG project which is now being implemented," said Stan Wallace, Panhandle Eastern vice president for corporate communications.

Panhandle is due to receive its first shipment of Algerian gas this weekend at its new $567 million reprocessing plant in Lake Charles, La.

"We have persuaded the commission that there are serious questions about these increases that need to be answered," said Rep. Tom Corcoran of Illinois, one of five Republican congressmen who petitioned to block the increase. The state of Michigan and 28 of the state's largest industries also petitioned to block the increases.

Under Panhandle's request, its rates would go up on Nov. 1 by 78 cents per thousand cubic feet on its Trunkline pipeline and 28 cents on its Panhandle pipeline to pay for the Algerian gas — costs which would be passed on to customers of the 130 local utility companies served by the pipelines.

Critics have charged that Panhandle cannot justify paying $7.13 per thousand cubic feet for LNG from Algeria when the average wellhead price of gas in this country is $2.27 and thousands of domestic wells are shut in because of oversupply.

Wallace, however, said the current surplus is temporary and his company needs the 20-year-contract with Algeria to assure supplies for the long term.

Darn the recession; Full speed ahead

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

There may be fewer drilling rigs working the Permian Basin this month than there were a year ago, but that's not the whole story.

The rig count is just one of many indicators of oil patch action. For example, the Texas Railroad Commission reports that more new holes were spudded, and more wells had been completed, through August 1982 than were recorded at that point in time last year.

Another indication of "business as usual" is there are also service companies and manufacturers in the Midland-Odessa area which are expanding their operations at this time, even while other companies are cutting back.

Commitments to expand were made months ago during the so-called boom and are now coming to fruition after months of planning, financing, design and construction.

This past week, two such companies moved into new and expanded quarters. AMF Scientific Drilling International (SDI) celebrated the opening of its new facility in Midland, and Meter Service Company moved into a new $2 million manufacturing complex west of Odessa.

SDI's new facility, which is triple the size of its previous Midland site, is located at 2034 Trade Drive. The company, a subsidiary of AMF International, and a sister of AMF Tuboscope, provides proprietary orientation and survey equipment and a variety of directional drilling services to the oil industry.

SDI has been in Midland for a bit more than 11 years and was formerly known as Scientific Drilling Controls. In 1981 it was acquired by the AMF group.

Single-shot and gyroscopic surveys, single- and multi-data surface recording gyros, wireline services and the company's proprietary EYE orientation and survey system are among the services SDI offers, said Sam Smith, new district manager of the Midland office. Smith has been with SDI for four years, and has been associated with the West Texas oil industry for the past 14 years.

The EYE system gives drillers real-time indications of downhole direction. The steering tool is lowered into the hole by wireline and sits above the drill bit to monitor its direction and inclination, according to Neil Zielinski, field sales manager in Midland.

SDI's new Midland facility will allow the company to expand its services throughout West Texas and New Mexico, rather than in the immediate Permian Basin area, according to Jim Gillock, vice president of marketing at SDI's home office in Irvine, California.

"The new facility is large enough to allow for future expansion," as the oil industry downturn ends, he said. "We had made the commitment prior to the downturn and we felt this was an oppotune time to show our customers how to save money. With the economy the way it is, they are very cost-conscious now."

Executives from Irvine were in Midland Friday to attend the grand opening, along with about 1,200 local oil field guests.

In Odessa, Meter Service Company moved into its new manufacturing facility on North Iola Street Sept. 23.

The company formerly concentrated on sales and service of gas meters, but with the decision to expand into manufacturing of its own meters, construction on the new 30,000 square-foot plant began about two years ago. It was completed in January.

First, a machine shop was built so that the company could manufacture parts, which complemented its previous sales and service business. Pressure recorders were manufactured first, and as the construction progressed, orifice meters, also known as differential pressure recorders, were added to the line.

Meter Service was founded in 1957 by Ray DeWitt and Al Tullos. DeWitt was president from 1969 to 1980 and now serves as a consultant to the company. Milton Allen is the current president of the firm, which has grown to include around 130 employees.

"We were servicing meters and had sales, but we decided to manufacture our own meter systems, to have a better control of the products," said vice president Saul Duress. "We built the company strictly on service. Even though the economy is in a recession, we feel this is a good time to move and we think we'll be able to get a good control of the market."

Meter Service is the only manufacturer of these type of meters in the Permian Basin. The company now has 13 distributors in 24 states, and also does business with Pemex in Mexico and with some Canadian companies.

Volcker is real winner

By WARREN BROOKES
Hearst Feature Service

The sudden drop in interest rates and the roaring bull stock market that followed congressional passage of the Dole-Reagan tax bill suggested that the real "winner" in this political-economic round was Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker.

For more than a year now, Volcker has made it clear that he believed the 1981 tax cut package was too large, and that something had to be done, either in the form of much larger spending cuts, or "revenue enhancement," before he could afford to "accommodate" President Reagan's deficits, even though at least half of those deficits are the result of Volcker's policies.

Realizing that Volcker meant business, Reagan finally capitulated in July and accepted the Dole tax package as the "hush money" the Fed was demanding. Some $20 billion to $30 billion in new taxes per year seemed a small price to pay for a 4 to 5 point drop in the short term interest rates.

Suddenly, as the passage of the tax bill became more and more likely, the Fed began to respond encouragingly, lowering the discount rate in quick successive moves, and allowing the Fed Funds rate to drift into single digits.

Once again, we find out who really runs the U.S. economy, and it isn't the president.

Already the "gold bugs" are arguing that the inflation war is over, and it's back to double-digits and $800 an ounce gold. The problem with that scenario is that it is about as good as most of Henry Kaufman's forecasts. That is, it will soon be debunked by the facts.

One fact is that money is still growing very slowly

The two best proofs of that are the low annual growth rates of bank reserves, and of Reserve Bank Credit (both in the 4 percent range) and low level of growth in the biggest component of MI, namely the checking account deposits (also less than 4 percent.)

Today's interest rates are finally back down to where they were after Volcker and the Fed deliberately opened up the money gates in May and June of 1980, and held them open right through Nov. 6, 1980.

So much so that not only did interest rates plummet to single digit levels by July and August of 1980, but the U.S. economy took off for the skies in the first quarter of 1981, when to everyone's amazement our gross national product grew at a 9 percent real rate.

Unfortunately, Ronald Reagan's monetarists quickly gave Volcker the excuse and the support he needed to get back to the restoration of the bank's long lost credibility and, by the summer of 1981, financial policy was so dead set against the business sector recession was the only possible outcome.

The irony of all this is that today the pundits give all the blame for the recession to Reagan, and all the credit for inflation control to Volcker.

While Volcker clearly tried to help out Carter from May to November of 1980, he has been fighting Reagan all the way to the brink of bankruptcy (not to mention the passage of a big tax program.)

That, of course, is the real reason why interest rates have tumbled. The weak economy, coupled with a strong growth in personal savings, has eased the credit crunch, and as Volcker himself admitted, the Fed has merely followed the downward path of the rates with alacrity.
