LULAC schedules meeting in C-City

COLORADO CITY — District 5 members and state officials of the League of United Latin American Citizens, including members of the Sammy Gomez Committee, will meet at 5 p.m. Saturday at the Housing Authority building to discuss how they will proceed with a civil lawsuit filed in Abilene federal court against the city.

The meeting is open to the public.

John Garcia, of El Paso, LULAC's state director, is expected to attend. At the conclusion of the meeting, Attorney Reuben Sandoval will discuss publicly the status of the lawsuit.

Sammy Gomez died after being shot at his aunt's residence by a former police officer as he attempted to serve an arrest warrant in May 1988. Family members, who maintain that Gomez was executed, have filed a civil suit against Colorado City officials.

Hazardous waste seminar offered

A workshop on handling hazardous materials is planned at Howard College tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., sponsored by American Medical Transport.

The goal of the seminar is to enable participants to recogize and identify hazardous materials and to better handle accidents and emergencies involving the materials, according to college information. The public is invited to attend.

The course will take place in the science building, room S-150. The course fee of $20 may be paid at the door.

Accident knocks out electric service

Over 1,200 Big Spring TU Electric customers were temporarily without electricity Thursday afternoon when a trailer broke away from a rig and severed a telephone poll, officials said.

Bob Goodwin, TU Electric district customer and service operations manager, said the collision tripped a main feeder at 1402 E. Second St., knocking out power to 1,217 customers at 2:34 p.m.

TU employees restored electricity to 484 customers 13 minutes later and to the remaining 733 homes in 42 minutes, Goodwin said.

Big Spring police reported that the tractor-trailer driven E.B. Thomason, 53, was traveling eastbound in the 1400 block of East Second Street when his vehicle hit a bump in the road, causing the trailer to break away.

Thomason, who was not cited by police, was driving a vehicle owned by Tompkins Oil Co. in Big Spring, according to police reports.

Damage to the electric power was estimated at $800, reports state.

President will tape TV appeal to Iraqi people

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush is appealing directly to the Iraqi people for support to end the Persian Gulf crisis as he renews a blistering attack on their president and prepares for a weekend superpower summit.

"We Americans should make something very clear — our argument is not with the people of Iraq," Bush told a Republican rally in Tallahassee, Fla., on Thursday night. "Rather it is with Iraq's dictator who uses innocent travelers as shields, who now, in direct contravention of international law, holds hostage civilians from many countries."

He said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "must know that our policy . . . will not be altered by this brazen blackmail" and that the United States will maintain its military buildup in the region and enforcement of the international economic sanctions against Iraq.

However, Bush told reporters traveling with him on a one-day political trip that he was glad for Saddam's offer of airtime to televise a message to the Iraqi people.

The president called it "a real opportunity." He has previously voiced a desire to take his case to the Iraqi people, as Saddam has done to Americans, with hours of his speeches and appearances broadcast live on U.S. news programs.

White House officials said Bush will tape a message of about 10 minutes, probably next Wednesday after his address Tuesday to a joint session of Congress on the Persian Gulf situation.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the White House would put together the tape and then have a State Department translation made. "We'll do the whole thing ourselves," he said in reference to the Iraqi offer of a TV crew to

Red Cross offers military assistance

By DEBBIE LINCECUM

Patriotism, packages, preparation and pigs were all discussed as important concepts to families of military service personnel at a support-information meeting in Stanton Thursday.

Representatives of three local chapters of the American Red Cross participated in the meeting to make the families aware of servies available. The Red Cross sponsors a 24-hour emergency contact program for military families.

Patriotism was symbolized at the meeting by yellow ribbons, given to all in attendance by the Stanton High School Future Homemakers of America. Virginia Martin of the Stanton Red Cross said the yellow color relates to the song "Tie a Yellow Ribbon ('Round the Old Oak Tree)" and shows support for the military effort.

Packages, though not official sanctioned yet, will be allowed in the near future. They must not weigh more than 12 ounces. Marianne Brown-Esquilin of the Howard-Glasscock County Red Cross said she will organize care package assembly with local service groups in the next few weeks.

Preparation for an emergency will make the location process much easier, said Sarah Boering, emergency services coordinator for the area.

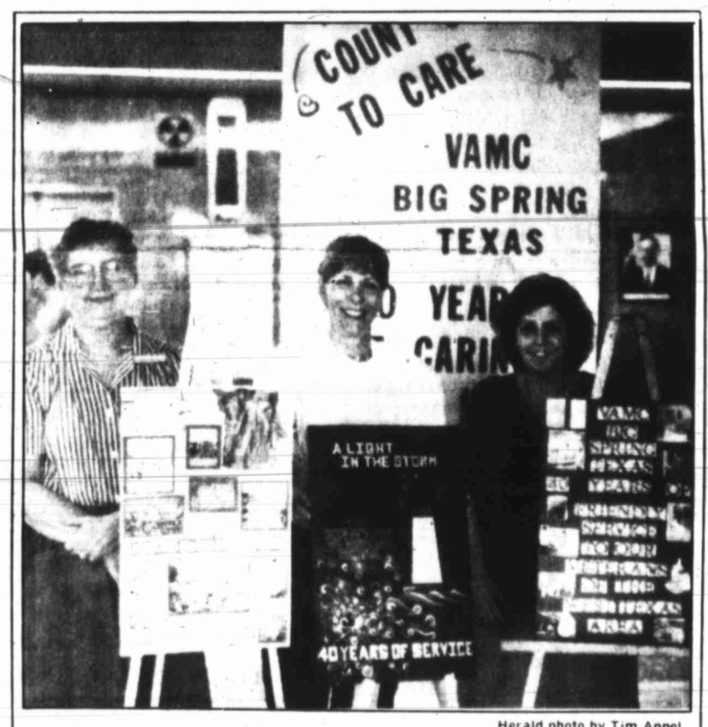

Boering urged the families of all service personnel to write down information about the soldier, including social security number, unit number and address. Keeping that item handy in case of an emergency will make locating the person easier, she said.

Pigs, even Miss Piggy, should not appear on cards or pictures sent to servicepersons because the animals are considered unclean by the religion of Islam and may not be allowed to reach their destination, said former Saudi Arabia resident Margaret Rogers. She discussed the effect of cultural and religious customs in the Arab country.

"Don't worry about your sons' . . . safety over there," she said. "The (Arab) people are not heathens or barbarians as some people think. It's just that you are in their country and so you do what they say, that's it."

She also advised against sending cards or pictures with Christian religious symbols. She said the cards, if opened by postal workers

Chemist paints bleak picture

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

COLORADO CITY — A New York waste management expert painted a bleak health picture of hazardous waste incinerators Thursday night. Mitchell County commissioners are assisting a Pittsburgh company to locate a facility here to solve trash problems and help boost the economy.

Paul Connett, an associate professor of chemistry at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y., deluged an audience of more than 300 people at the Colorado High School auditorium with information on problems that other facilities are suspected of causing, such as high rates of rare cancer, birth defects and breathing problems in children.

"There's no need why Colorado City should go down on its knees to a company from Pittsburgh and say rape me," said Connett, the national coordinator for Work on Waste and a member of the ad-

United Way kicks off drive

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

United Way funding drive volunteer Murray Murphy said the group's goal of $220,000 is about $80,000 too short at the group's kickoff luncheon Thursday.

Murphy, first vice president of the campaign cabinet, was one of several speakers to address a large crowd of contributors, volunteers and supporters of the social service organization. Its annual funding drive began officially Thursday.

"We will raise $220,000," Murphy, also assistant superintendent of Big Spring schools, said. "But I'm not going to be satisfied."

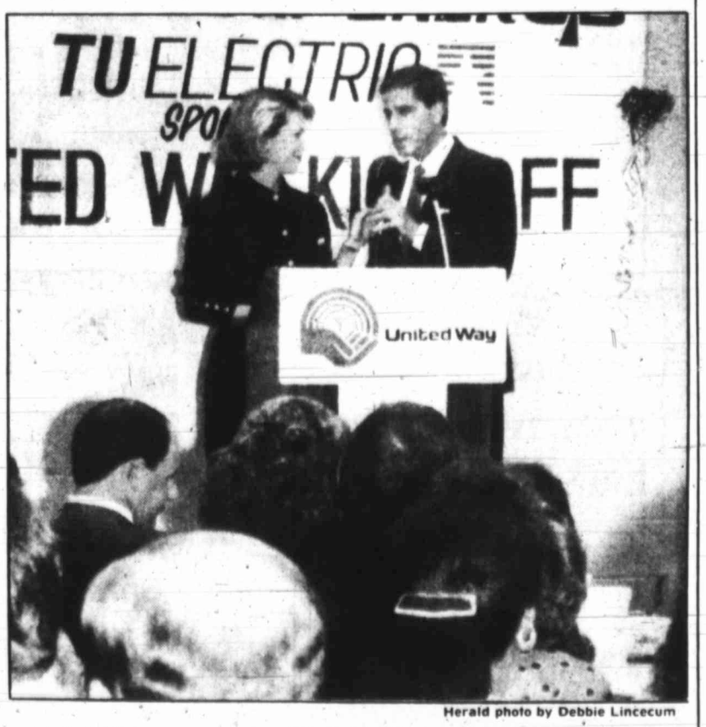

Of the group's motto, "See the need," Murphy said he would like to add a second phrase.

"We are not going to be just seeing the need, we are going to meet it," he said. "Get ready, because we're going to hit you up (for donations). . . . Everybody is going to know that maybe just 'no' is not enough."

Murphy noted that the agency already has 14.91 percent of its goal, a total of $32,804 in donations. He credited agency director Sherry Bordofske for educating the public about "the need."

Herald introduces new sports edition

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
Publisher

The Big Spring Herald will deliver a "Friday extra edition" of its newspaper to subscribers' homes Saturday morning.

The very first Saturday Sports Special will hit the streets before dawn Saturday, with coverage of Friday night Crossroads Country football and other fall sports. The move is being made to broaden sports coverage to Herald readers during the football season, when West Texas sports interest is traditionally the highest.

The price of a subscription will not increase as a result of this new venture, and a copy will be delivered to all subscribers. Initially, the product is being planned for the length of the football season.

The Sports Special will have a different look than the typical Big Spring Herald. It will be published in tabloid format, rather than the daily broadsheet.

This is not the Herald's first venture into a Saturday publication, although it is the first regular sports-concentrated product the newspaper has planned. The Herald published a Saturday edition of its daily newspaper for approximately three years. The publication was stopped in July 1987 as a result of a lack of advertising.

However, broad acceptance and participation from area businesses has been displayed thus far. Readers, whose comments have been received from initial discussion and review of a prototype produced last week, have shown enthusiastic reaction.

Sports Editor Steve Belvin also met the proposal of the Saturday edition with enthusiasm, pleased that Friday night sports news — particularly heavy during football season — can be delivered fresher to Herald readers. "It sure seems to be what they want. And all writers I know want to get their words to readers as quickly as possible."

Another of the advantages of the change will be seen in the Sunday sports section, which formerly carried Friday night high school coverage. Sunday's sports pages will now more broadly cover the Saturday college sports scene, as well as more adequately preview Sunday's NFL action.

The Herald staff will cover Big

Man charged in double homicide

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso man has been charged with capital murder in the slayings of his lover and her husband after their bodies were found dumped in the southern New Mexico desert, police say.

Police Lt. Paul Saucedo said Paul Gregory Robinson, 25, was charged Thursday in connection with the Aug. 25 slayings of Gayle Sealy Mathews, 18, and Carl Mathews, whose age was not available. Robinson is being held in lieu of $500,000 bond today.

Saucedo said the slayings occurred when Carl Mathews walked into Robinson's home and found Robinson and Gayle Mathews there.

Saucedo said officers found Carl Mathews' body after Robinson led officers to a spot in New Mexico in Otero County, about 7 miles north of the Texas line.

Gayle Mathews' body was discovered by hunters Saturday in the same area, on Fort Bliss property, authorities said.

Four indicted for bank fraud

EL PASO (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted the former president of Western Bank and three businessmen on charges they fraudulently secured large loans from the now-defunct bank.

Richard Schwein, special agent in charge of the FBI office here, said Thursday their alleged actions "directly contributed to the failure of the bank" in March 1987.

The indictments named Barbara Chaney, who in 1977 became El Paso's first woman bank president, El Paso developer Chris Cummings, El Paso businessmen Lawrence Bower and George Wallace of California.

An unindicted co-conspirator is also named in the indictments, Assistant U.S. Attorney Debra Kanof said.

Advocates decry Lewis letter

AUSTIN (AP) — Two social service advocates who were critical of the Texas Legislature say they consider a letter they received from House Speaker Gib Lewis a threat of possible retaliation.

In a copyright story, the Austin American-Statesman reported today that Lewis sent letters to advocates for elderly, disabled and mentally ill Texans telling them they shouldn't criticize the speaker and the legislature.

The three advocates had been quoted in a recent newspaper article as saying that the Texas Legislature has more pressing needs than keeping the Southwest Conference intact.

Lewis told The Associated Press late Thursday that it was "a story fabricated by the Austin American-Statesman" and the quotes from his letter were taken out of context.

Crisis means good business for firm

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Texas business has doubled its sales of first-aid kits and anti-chemical weapons supplies to Persian Gulf countries since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, company officials said.

"They are extremely tense in these areas. There is no doubt in our mind they are stocking up on medical supplies," Paul Newham, director of international sales for RannMed International, said Thursday.

RannMed started distributing medical supplies to a handful of Middle Eastern countries about 18 months ago. Among its products are sterilized, disposable kits for treating combat wounds and other injuries, Newham said.

The San Antonio-based company also distributes chemical warfare items, including protective clothing and atropine sulfate, an injectable antidote.

Lt. Gov. hopefuls continue charges

AUSTIN (AP) — Lieutenant governor candidate, Democrat Bob Bullock, said his Republican opponent, Rob Mosbacher Jr., wants to increase administrative spending at the financially troubled Texas Department of Human Services by 158 percent.

Bullock said Thursday that Mosbacher, who is DHS board chairman, has requested an increase for administration positions from $44 million to $113.5 million "in spite of an audit that found the welfare agency was top-heavy in administration."

Mosbacher responded with a charge that Bullock, the state comptroller, has used taxpayer money to send Texans "self-promotional mailings."

"When a taxpayer receives one of Bob's publications, I think he would like to know how much it cost and how many of them were mailed," Mosbacher said.

He said Bullock has spent $13.4 million since 1984 on producing thousands of publications. John Bender, of the Bullock campaign, disputed the figures.

Bender said in the last fiscal year, the state comptroller's office spent $1 million in publication costs and $800,000 of that amount was to provide Texans with tax information, forms and instructions.

In other political developments:

- Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips, a Republican, and Justice Oscar Mauzy, a Democrat, agreed to debate twice on television. Mauzy is challenging Phillips for chief justice.

The first debate will appear during the regular broadcast of "State of Texas," which will run from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sept. 20 on Public Broadcast Stations. The second debate, sponsored by St. Mary's School of Law and the San Antonio League of Women Voters, will run on PBS stations at 7 p.m. on Sept. 25.

- Republican Oliver Kitzman, a state district judge from Brookshire who is running for Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, received the endorsement of a statewide crime victims rights group. Kitzman faces incumbent Judge Sam Houston Clinton.

Funeral held for C-5 crash victims

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Three of nine Kelly Air Force Base reservists killed in a cargo plane crash at a West German air base were buried Thursday with full military honors.

Funeral services were held Thursday for Tech. Sgt. Daniel Perez, Maj. John Gordon and Tech. Sgt. Lonty Knutson. The three were among 13 who died when their C-5 crashed and burned on takeoff at Ramstein Air Base as it was taking part in Operation Desert Shield. A team of military officials is investigating the accident.

An Air Force memorial service at Kelly is planned Saturday for all 13 victims of last week's crash. All were members of the 433rd Military Airlift Wing at Kelly.

The three reservists who were buried Thursday were honored with a 21-gun salute, jet fly overs and taps played by military guards.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at 9 a.m. Thursday for Perez at Holy Rosary Catholic Church in San Antonio, followed by interment at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery.

Services for Gordon of the Houston suburb of Spring were conducted at Champion Forest Baptist Church at 10 a.m., with burial at Houston National Cemetery.

Funeral services for Knutson of San Antonio were held at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church at 2:30 p.m., with burial at Mission Burial Park South.

"Daniel had talked to his family about what would happen if he should die," said the Rev. Rudy Vela, pastor of Holy Rosary who celebrated the Mass for Perez along with two other priests and Archbishop Patrick Flores. "He had love for his country and his family and friends, and he touched your hearts, for you are here."

SAN ANTONIO — Olga Perez places her hand over her heart as the coffin of her husband, Daniel Perez, is carried to its bier at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery here Thursday. Perez was killed in a plane crash last week at Ramstein Air Base, West Germany.

Gordon's friends and family members wore red, white and blue to his funeral to celebrate his commitment to the U.S. military.

"The mere fact that he volunteered would seem heroic to us, but it wasn't to John," said Gordon's friend, Clayton Smear.

His widow, Judy Gordon, said she wanted the services to honor Gordon's commitment.

Mrs. Gordon said she and her husband had talked about his trip to Saudi Arabia.

"When we talked about it, he said, 'Judy, this is what I've been trained to do,'" she recalled. "I never worried when he was flying a plane."

"He believed in his country," said a friend who attended the services.

Rev. Richard McLean, who served as an Army chaplain during the Vietnam War, eulogized Knutson as a loving father and devoted worker.

"He seemed so proud of being associated with the Air Force, and he was excited about the possibility of going to Germany. He was proud of what he did for a living," McLean said.

A rosary for Senior Master Sgt. Carpio Villareal Jr. was recited at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in St. Joseph South San Catholic Church at San Antonio.

Services for three other reservists who died in the C-5 cargo plane crash will be Friday, followed by burials at the national cemetery, said Maj. Larry Furphy at Fort Sam Houston.

Furphy said a funeral for Staff Sgt. Daniel Garza was scheduled for 11:30 a.m. Friday at Cornerstone Church in San Antonio, with burial in the national cemetery. Mass for Maj. Richard Chase was to be said at 10 a.m. Friday at St. Matthew's Catholic Church in San Antonio.

Mass for Master Sgt. Rosendo Herrera was scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Friday at St. Luke's Catholic Church, said Furphy, with burial at Fort Sam Houston.

A funeral Mass was planned for 8:45 a.m. Friday at San Luis Rey Catholic Church in Laredo for Staff Sgt. Edward Sheffield, followed by burial in the Catholic Cemetery with military honors.

Consortium backs offshore port

HOUSTON (AP) — A proposed offshore port for oil supertankers has gained the support of an energy consortium headed by Phillips Petroleum Co. and a member of the Texas Railroad Commission.

"It looks favorable so far," said George Minter, a spokesman for Phillips in Bartlesville, Okla. "We're basically trying to get some things moving here. We're still very interested or we wouldn't have decided to move on."

The TexPort project, strikingly similar to a 10-year-old Phillips proposal called SeaDock and an existing tanker port off the Louisiana coast, calls for establishing a deepwater port for tankers 27 miles offshore from Freeport.

The $1.2 billion project would be capable of moving 2 million barrels of imported oil a day from foreign tankers through undersea pipelines already crossing the Gulf of Mexico to utilities and refineries on the Gulf Coast.

The port would cut down on tanker traffic in Galveston Bay and the Houston Ship Channel, lowering the risk of accidents and oil spills, backers said.

"Local, state and federal officials must all commit to doing whatever is possible to facilitate the construction of the deepwater port," said Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp on Thursday.

"We cannot allow an opportunity like this to pass us by because of bureaucratic red tape. We should try and expedite any necessary licensing requirements or other government interference."

Minter said the 18 energy companies backing the project decided to proceed with plans for the port Wednesday after reviewing a $100,000 consultants' study that analyzed the projected revenue for the venture and the likely demand for its services.

Officials involved in the project have refused to identify the other companies participating in the venture and declined to discuss the findings of the study or the name of the consultant who did the work.

Minter said a final decision on the project probably won't be made until next year.

Minter said the companies will spend the next six months drawing up more detailed financial models for the port and compiling the information needed to receive government approval of the project.

Teen charged and sent to hospital

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — A high school sophomore who held nine classmates hostage at gunpoint for five hours surrendered and was taken to a psychiatric hospital. No one was injured during the ordeal.

"I just wanted to leave the country," a smiling Randy Floyd Addis, 17, said as authorities led him away Thursday from the South Forsyth high school and middle school.

Addis had demanded $3,000 before becoming dizzy and giving up the siege. He was taken to Central State Hospital in Milledgeville for evaluation.

Sheriff Wesley Walraven of Forsyth County said Addis was charged as an adult with kidnapping and weapons violations. Addis has a juvenile arrest record, and suffers from epilepsy, among other health problems, he said.

Addis entered the school about 40 miles north of Atlanta with a 30.06 semiautomatic deer rifle, a single-shot 12-gauge shotgun, a .25 caliber automatic pistol and black powder concealed in a duffel bag as a science project.

Health claims disputed by FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is targeting six companies for its first action to enforce a policy barring food makers from labeling their products with cholesterol-lowering claims.

In letters to the six released Thursday, the agency said the claims for bran products are not backed by scientific evidence and must be removed from the product labels.

The food-labeling policy, proposed last February but being enforced as an interim rule until one is formally adopted, allows companies to make only limited health claims about their products.

Linking bran's dietary fiber to lower cholesterol is not among the permitted claims. But an official of one of the companies warned says the claim is scientifically legitimate.

"We feel the excellent studies that have been done more than qualify these products" to make cholesterol-lowering claims, said Curt Rocca, chairman of Pacific Rice Products of Woodland, Calif.

Officials of his company plan to discuss the studies with the FDA in hopes of persuading the agency to allow claims that eating "Vita Fiber Rice Bran" daily can reduce cholesterol levels in the blood.

The companies have 10 days to respond to the FDA's warning.

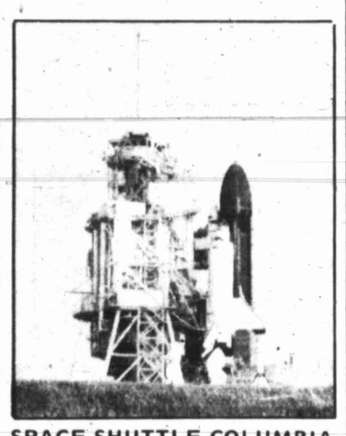

The FDA told the companies that if corrective action is not taken, it could seek court action to remove the products from stores.

Columbia to receive new fuel pump

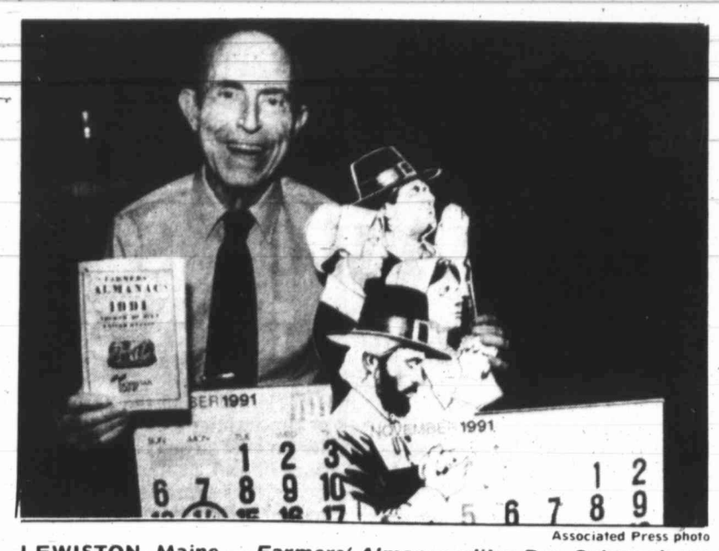

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA plans to replace a softball-sized fuel pump this weekend to get shuttle Columbia ready for a fourth try at carrying an astronomical observatory into space in mid-September.

The new target date for the thrice-scrubbed launch will be early in the week of Sept. 17. That, Truly said, will let the Astro mission proceed without affecting the next flight, which must begin between Oct. 5 and Oct. 23.

Space engineers, following a vapor trail of clues, said the pump was the leading suspect for the hydrogen leaks that canceled Thursday's scheduled launch.

LEWISTON, Maine — Farmers' Almanac editor Ray Geiger shows off the 1991 edition, Thursday, along with a calendar to propose a change in celebrating Thanksgiving. The 79-year old editor says the almanac suggests moving Thanksgiving from the fourth Thursday in November to the second Monday in October, the date when Canada celebrates the holiday.

Almanac suggests an earlier Thanksgiving

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — Not one to tamper lightly with tradition, the Farmers' Almanac suggests nonetheless that the date designated for Thanksgiving is a turkey.

In its 1991 edition, just off the presses, the venerable publication says Americans should consider celebrating the holiday, now the fourth Thursday in November, earlier in the fall.

An earlier date would rid Thanksgiving of pre-Christmas overtones, allow for more favorable travel weather and line it up more closely with the harvest whose bounty it is meant to celebrate, the almanac says.

The almanac says the second Monday in October, the date on which Canada celebrates Thanksgiving, might be an appropriate alternative. Almanac editor Ray Geiger invites readers to offer their own ideas.

"We're only suggesting that we examine this thing. We're not bold enough to say 'do it!'" Geiger said in an interview.

Thanksgiving, commemorating the feast held by members of the Plymouth Colony in Massachusetts in December 1621 to celebrate that year's harvest, has been observed at various dates over the years. It has remained at its current date since 1863, except for a brief period when President Franklin D. Roosevelt reset it for the third Thursday in November.

"Thanksgiving is a sacred holiday. What makes it sacrosanct is not that it is observed on a certain date each year, but rather what it means," the almanac says. "When one ponders the real reason for Thanksgiving, the date of celebration seems immaterial."

Geiger said the principal reason for change would be to separate Thanksgiving from the overlapping demands posed by the start of the Christmas season:

"You've got football, you've got Christmas pressing and you don't know whether you're celebrating Thanksgiving or Christmas," he said.

An earlier holiday would reduce the chances that travelers would encounter ice or snow while heading to family gatherings, Geiger said. And it would shift the holiday to a time closer to the end of the harvest, when the woods still are ablaze with colorful foliage, he said.

De Klerk to visit U.S. this month

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk will meet President Bush on Sept. 24 in the first U.S. visit by a South African leader in decades, a government official said today.

De Klerk, who has launched wide-ranging reforms since assuming power a year ago, was scheduled to meet Bush in June.

But the visit was canceled after anti-apartheid groups in the United States protested, saying Bush should first hold talks with African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

Mandela, who saw Bush in June, said it did not matter who met first with the U.S. president. Mandela has said his movement has no objections to a Bush-de Klerk meeting.

A South African government source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said an official announcement of de Klerk's visit would be made this afternoon.

No South African leader has visited the United States since the apartheid system of racial segregation was formally implemented in the late 1940s, officials said.

Pro-democracy leaders arrested

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Burma's military rulers have arrested the country's remaining opposition leaders who led a landslide victory of pro-democracy forces in May's elections, officials said today.

The deputy head of military intelligence, Col. Than Tun, told reporters six members of the National League for Democracy, including acting leader Kyi Maung and his deputy Chit Hlaing, were arrested Thursday.

Kyi Maung has led the National League since co-leaders Aung San Suu Kyi and Tin Oo were put under house arrest in July 1989. Both Kyi Maung and his deputy are members of the group's Central Executive Committee and won parliamentary seats in the May 27 election.

The league swept the polling, but the military government has refused to hand over power.

Speaking at the news briefing with the intelligence official, Gen. Saw Maung, Burma's leader who heads the ruling State Law and Order Restoration Council, warned against any unrest and ordered the Buddhist clergy not to meddle in politics.

Saw Maung reportedly told a visiting Japanese official late last month that Ms. Suu Kyi, the most popular opposition leader, would be released from house arrest if she agreed to leave Burma.

Summit preparations under way

ROAD TO THE SUMMIT

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Finnish police say they were caught off guard when they were told less than a week ago to prepare for Sunday's superpower summit, but U.S. and Soviet security agencies have joined forces to help them.

Police Chief Olli Urponen said the summit, while a surprise, was made easier by the experience of other recent visits to Helsinki by U.S. and Soviet leaders.

"Of course it's been a great help to have worked with the Americans and Soviets before on similar occasions," he said.

"No direct threats have been made against this summit. There is no threat ... apart from the general threat of terrorism," Tiitinen said.

Fight drug war with treatment

A House Government Operations Committee report concludes that U.S. anti-drug efforts are making little headway in disrupting cocaine traffic in Peru and Bolivia due to corruption in the armed services of both countries. Meanwhile, poor cocaine addicts in some cities are being turned way from drug-treatment centers because no slots are available.

These contrasting scenes demonstrate the federal government's mismatched anti-drug priorities. It continues to put too much emphasis on strategy that is least effective and spends too little on programs that could make a difference.

The House report casts further doubts on Operation Snowcap, the federal drug agency's 3½-year effort to rid the jungles of Bolivia and Peru of airstrips and other facilities that are used to process and transport cocaine. The report urges federal drug agents to shift their emphasis away from useless jungle raids. That's good advice in light of their minuscule impact on the flow of cocaine to the United States.

Drug treatment isn't always successful either. But the fact that drug users are being turned away at some treatment centers points to the need for more programs to offer hope to addicts who want to kick their cocaine habit.

Fortunately, the Bush administration intends to spend far more for treatment than has been appropriated in the past. At the same time, it needs to put additional dollars into research to cure drug addiction. It should even consider diverting to research part of the $33.7 million in aid it wants to give to the Bolivian military this year.

A case could be made for this shift since the House report quotes a U.S. official as saying there was no guarantee that Bolivia would use the aid for narcotic-control purposes. If this money must be spent for risky anti-drug ventures, then it is better to use it for treatment than to send it to Bolivia where it might never be used for the intended purpose, however ineffective.

The law of interstate succession

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Last year an attorney in Portland wrote an article, "Estate Planning for Seniors," in the Retirement Life News. She advised her elderly readers: "If you do not have a will (or living trust), your property is distributed according to specific provisions set out in Oregon law. This is called the 'law of interstate succession.'"

Ah, me. The law of course applies only to Oregonians who die during a prolonged stay in Seattle. Why did the lawyer write "interstate" when she intended "intestate"? Probably it was only a typographical error. Maybe her mind wandered. But this is the kind of thing that happens when we do not pay attention. Therefore, Pay Attention!

Do not, kind sir, write in the Denver Rocky Mountain News that NBC will offer "'The Odd Couple,' a reprisal of the Neil Simon comedy . . ." This wasn't a reprisal, for goodness' sake; it was a reprise, a return to an original theme.

Do not, I pray you, write in the Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald that planning and stealth will help a hunter "satisfy a fetish for spring turkey." Fetish? True, "fetish" means "an object of unreasonably excessive attention or reverence," but "fetish" is too much word for hunting a turkey.

And do not, please, write in the Miami Herald about the time pitcher Jim Palmer was pinned under an overturned car in Arizona: "And, as incredulous as it seems, that same day, about 12 hours later, Palmer signed a contract with the Baltimore Orioles."

It didn't seem incredulous; it seemed incredible. Both words are rooted in the Latin "credere," to believe, but there's a heap of difference. Those of us who work out of Washington listened to Mayor Barry denying that he ever touched cocaine, and we were incredulous, i.e., we were incapable of believing what he said. Our credulity was tested. His denials were incredible; they were unbelievable.

It is pleasant to see a reporter trying to provide a touch of alliteration in a pedestrian piece, but . . .In March an Associated Press writer turned in a weather story out of Los Angeles: "A potpourri of precipitation pelted Southern California on Monday as rain, hail, snow, sleet and even sunshine were reported throughout the region."

Aw, knock it off! Alliteration is a nice device, and "potpourri" is a nice word for a mixture of incongruous elements, but a "potpourri of precipitation" is trying too hard. Let us reserve "potpourri" for more suitable occasions than an unpredictable day in California.

James J. Kilpatrick

That's the trouble with expensive words. We want to trot them out, diamond pendants in a pizza parlor, and sometimes we come up with paste. A writer for the London Observer, of all publications, wrote eloquently last year about the Vikings and "the terror they caused to the indigent population by their raiding parties." Five will get you 25 that the writer meant "indigenous," but she wasn't Paying Attention!

Sometimes it is difficult to figure out what a writer means to say. This past Christmas the Omaha World-Herald carried an ad for window decorations. These were described as "invisible from inside or outside." They sold for $1.49 each. I never saw a window decoration that was invisible from inside or outside, but at that price let me have three, along with change from an invisible $5 bill.

This clipping from the Las Vegas Review-Journal has been lying in the files for four years and it still baffles me: "Murderer Stuart Goldstein was described Tuesday as a model inmate who fouled up his life 16 years ago when he inscrutably killed a Caesar's Palace cocktail waitress." How does one kill inscrutably? Inexplicably, maybe, but not inscrutably. There is something not quite scrutable here.

A similar confusion overcame the ad writer for a restaurant in West Seneca, N.Y. Customers were invited to try the cafe's "Infamous 16 South Specialty Sandwich." How did it get to be infamous? Do we really want to know?

A staff writer for the Port Arthur (Texas) News last year reached for a brass ring word and missed it cold. His story had to do with the arrest of Hector Javier Morales on a murder charge: "Morales, a Mexican, was arrested by Mexican authorities and expedited to the United States to face the capital charge." Extradited, sir! Extradited!

Evidently the extradition was expeditious, which was the word the Alamo Rent a Car people wanted in defending a charge in Consumer Reports that the company had ignored a letter of complaint: "We stand behind our guarantee that all correspondence will get an expedient reply." It's the very best kind. Pay Attention! Pay Attention!

Cop hits sour note at concert

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I will spare the names because a cooler head kept the incident from getting out of hand. But the story's worth telling.

There are all sorts of cops, of course. Good cops. Bad cops. Smart cops and stupid cops. Just like in any other line of work.

This one was a cop who apparently became overcome with his authority.

The Frank Sinatra concert had ended. It was an older crowd, of course. They came with their wines and cheeses and Ol' Blue Eyes put on a show that brought them to their feet on a number of occasions. He lit up a smoke and crooned in a manner one wouldn't expect of a 74-year-old.

I was standing outside Gate One waiting for a friend to join me for a ride home. That's when I heard the cop yelling.

He was directly in a man's face. I'd say the man was in his 70s,too.

The cop screamed at the man: "I'll take your ass to jail. You understand me?"

The man was ashen. "I don't believe this is happening," he said.

The man's elderly wife, who was walking with the help of a cane, was crying.

What could the man have done?

Lewis Grizzard

I was asking myself that and so were others leaving the concert.

Surely, he hadn't sneaked any dope in. He obviously wasn't a member of a street gang. Did he jaywalk?

I couldn't keep my nose out of it. I went to the cop and I announced my affiliation with the newspaper, hoping he wouldn't decide to take me downtown with his desperados.

He let the man talk to me. The man said he and his wife had driven all the way from Panama City, Fla., to see the concert. He said they had arrived early so that he could find the handicap parking. He had a handicap parking sticker on his car because of his wife's crippled condition.

When he came out of the concert, holding to his wife as they walked to their car, the cop was waiting. The cop said they were illegally parked in the handicap parking space.

The man's handicap sticker, you see, had expired.

"I didn't even know the things went out of date," he told me. "I never even thought of checking it."

The cop told the man he was illegally parked and was going to write him a ticket.

The man argued. The cop got mad.

I recognized a city councilman walking out of the concert. I called to him. I told him what I had determined the situation to be.

He handled the matter marvelously. He took the young cop aside. They talked.

He calmed the cop. He calmed the elderly couple. There were no tickets, no trips to jail. But you ask: How can a policeman lose his cool with an elderly out-of-town couple over an expired handicap sticker?

The cop could see the woman was walking with a cane.

They're shooting each other on the streets and this guy's hassling old people at a Frank Sinatra concert?

I hope the elderly couple will visit our city again.

But I doubt they will.

Firefighters do good work

To the editor:

I wanted to take a moment and express in writing my appreciation to the fireman of Howard County and Big Spring. I am employed as a Deputy Sheriff and last week I responded to two house fires in which units of the Howard County Volunteer Fire Department and Big Spring Fire Departments were called. I was reminded of the time the fire fighters spend training and preparing for their role.

I wanted to extend my thanks to these fireman and a very special thank you to the fire fighters of the Howard County Volunteer Fire Department for the many hours of their own time they spend training, servicing equipment, and fighting fires without any pay or reward. I regret that space does not allow me to list the names of the some 80 volunteers and their battalions, as they provide a vital link in the protection of county residents from fire and other emergencies.

OXNARD, Calif. — Lupe Vasquez, 18, hugs her mother Maria Leyva at a homeless shelter in the agricultural community of Oxnard, Calif., as her half-brother Ramon Leyva plays on an old mattress. In a few weeks, Vasquez will return to Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., where she hopes to maintain her B-plus average as a sophomore studying science and engineering.

Child of homeless family will be returning to college

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Lupe Vasquez is spending the waning days of summer with her family — farm workers who live in a ramshackle homeless shelter on the edge of town.

This fall, she'll return to Stanford University, where she hopes to maintain her B-plus average as a sophomore studying science and engineering.

"I'd like to think the second year will be easier. But I don't think so," the 18-year-old said. "I'm going to have harder classes and a heavier load."

When she graduated second in a class of 397 students from Oxnard High School in June 1989, she was accepted by six California universities. She chose Stanford because she thought it had the best science program.

Stanford, with annual costs topping $21,000, also is the most expensive university in the state. She's using private scholarships, state and federal grants and loans to pay for her education, and she's saving money from her two summer jobs.

On a recent weekday, the teenager sat at a table in the enclosed patio of a family friend's home, studying calculus and listening to Spanish pop music.

"I don't even want to remember my first year, it was so hard," she recalled with a grimace. "My brain was just going all the time. I could never get to sleep before 3 in the morning. And finals were just awful.

"The first two to three weeks I really felt homesick," said Ms. Vasquez. "I wanted to see my mom. I wanted to go back to the Zoe."

That's the Zoe Christian Center, a former Japanese internment camp that is now a homeless shelter.

Ms. Vasquez's mother, stepfather and four younger siblings have shared crowded rooms there for two years, struggling to save enough to rent an apartment in town.

Ms. Vasquez spent the first few weeks of summer at the shelter, home to about 150 people, mostly couples and single mothers with children.

She found it hard to concentrate and took a room in her former high school counselor's home. She finds time to visit her family almost daily.

"I lived in an unsettled situation for years," Ms. Vasquez said. "And I just found I couldn't return to an unstable condition."

That lack of balance began when Ms. Vasquez was 2 years old and her mother and father separated. The mother, Maria Leyva, left Chihuahua, Mexico, bringing her two eldest daughters, Lupe and Virginia, with her to Mirage, Ariz.

Mrs. Leyva, 39, said Lupe has loved school ever since she entered kindergarten at age 4. Mrs. Leyva's schooling ended with fifth grade.

"Even when Lupe was sick she forced herself to go to her classes," Mrs. Leyva said in Spanish. "She was born to study."

Soon, little Lupe was carrying armfuls of library books home to the succession of crowded apartments and boarding house rooms her family shared.

Mrs. Leyva met her second husband in the onion fields. The couple had three children together.

For years, the family of seven moved with the crops throughout Arizona. They eventually landed about 60 miles northwest of Los Angeles in Oxnard, where Ms. [illegible]quez spent her last two years of high school.

This summer, Ms. Vasquez works at a bank in the afternoons. In the mornings, she works for the California Rural Legal Assistance doing research on the effects of pesticides on farm workers.

"She's bright and talkative and has a good, incisive mind," said CRLA staff attorney Marco Antonio Abarca. "It's funny. I went to Yale and then Stanford Law School and Lupe is one of the smartest people I know."

Ms. Vasquez said that even though her freshman year was difficult, it also was intellectually invigorating and filled with new experiences.

She took karate classes. She went to parties. She visited San Francisco. She heard her first symphony.

"Getting my independence was the best part," she said, echoing the sentiments of many 18-year-olds who've left home for the first time. "Now I can come and go as I please."

Survey reveals lack of sex knowledge

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans would flunk a test of basic knowledge about sex, says a new survey that's old news to sex experts.

Fifty-five percent of people surveyed could not get at least 10 of the 18 questions right in the test, designed by the Kinsey Institute.

Half didn't know that a woman can become pregnant while having her period, the report said. Half also did not know that oil-based lubricants, like petroleum jelly, shouldn't be used with condoms or diaphragms. Such substances can erode microscopic holes in condoms or diaphragms, the Kinsey report said.

Half the respondents incorrectly believed anal intercourse itself can cause AIDS, even if neither partner is infected by the virus; nearly 30 percent incorrectly said that menopause causes most women to lose interest in sex; and only 35 percent knew that problems with achieving erections usually begin with physical causes.

"I'm not surprised at all" by the poor showing, Virginia Johnson Masters, director of the Masters & Johnson Institute in St. Louis, said in a telephone interview.

She said people just do not seem to absorb factual information they hear about sex, unless a sex-related problem affects them or a family member or friend, or they are health professionals who deal with sexual problems, or they have a good understanding of sexual function and behavior.

The results also made sense to Debra Haffner, executive director of the Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S., a nonprofit organization that promotes sex education.

The group "believes that until there is comprehensive sexuality education for all people from childhood through adulthood, that we will continue to see this alarming degree of sexual ignorance that causes both personal pain as well as significant disease and dysfunction," she said.

Kinsey institute director June Reinisch said Wednesday the questions were drawn from those most often asked of the institute. They represent facts that "people need to know for both their physical health and their mental health," she said.

Nearly every question "affects people's feelings about themselves, their self-esteem," she said. A recurring theme in questions asked of her, she said, is "'Am I normal? ... The reason we don't know what's normal is that we're not taught what's going on."

Among the poll's other findings: Only about 25 percent knew that the typical American has first intercourse at age 16 to 17, or that an estimated 30 percent to 40 percent of married men have had an extramarital affair.

And only 21 percent knew that more than a quarter of American men have had a sexual experience with another male as a teen-ager or adult.

Poll results emphasize a need for sex education of pre-teen children and of medical school students, because the poll found people turn to doctors for sex information, Reinisch said.

Less than 20 percent of poll participants got at least 12 questions right, and only five people out of the 1,974 polled answered at least 16 questions correctly, Reinisch said.

Participants from the Midwest generally scored best, with 55 percent passing, followed by 47 percent in the West and 40 percent in the South and Northeast, she said.

Overall there were no differences in accuracy by sex, but men did better in questions about rates of sexual behavior and women in questions about sexual health care and contraception, Reinisch said.

The poll involved face-to-face interviews with a nationally representative sample of Americans, done last October as part of a larger Roper survey. Twelve questions were answered on a questionnaire that a person slipped into an envelope before returning to the interviewer.

The margin of error was plus or minus 3 percentage points. The overall percentages exclude 263 participants who answered 10 or fewer of the 18 items.

Sample questionnaire

NEW YORK (AP) — Here are the questions about sexual knowledge asked in a new national survey designed by the Kinsey Institute.

The questions were multiple choice or true-false. They are followed by the correct answer.

1. Nowadays, what do you think is the age at which the average or typical American first has sexual intercourse? Answer: 16 or 17.

2. Out of every 10 married American men, how many would you estimate have had an extramarital afair — that is, have been sexually unfaithful to their wives? Answer: three or four.

3. There are over-the-counter spermicides people can buy at the drugstore that will kill the AIDS virus. Answer: True.

4. Petroleum jelly, Vaseline Intensive Care, baby oil and Nivea are not good lubricants to use with a condom or diaphragm. Answer: True.

5. More than one out of four (25 percent) of American men have had a sexual experience with another male during either their teens or adult years. Answer: True.

6. It is usually difficult to tell whether people are or are not homosexual just by their appearance or gestures. Answer: True.

7. A woman or teen-age girl can get pregnant during her menstrual flow (her "period"). Answer: True.

8. A woman or teen-age girl can get pregnant even if the man withdraws his penis before he ejaculates (before he "comes.") Answer: True.

9. Unless they are having sex, women do not need to have regular gynecological examinations. Answer: False.

10. Teen-age boys should examine their testicles ("balls") regularly just as women self-examine their breasts for lumps. Answer: True.

11. Problems with erections are most often started by a physical problem. Answer: True.

12. Almost all erection problems can be successfully treated. Answer: True.

13. Menopause, or change of life as it is often called, does not cause most women to lose interest in having sex. Answer: True.

14. Out of every 10 American women, how many would you estimate have masturbated either as children or after they were grown up? Answer: Six to eight.

Note: Score one point for every correct answer. Any answer earned a point on question 3 because some people may have misinterpreted it, the poll report said.

People scoring 13 or better get an "A," 10 to 12 a "B," 8 to 9 a "C," 6 or 7 a "D," and fewer points an "F," according to the poll.

Lottery winner meets tragic fate

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A man who may have blown $188,000 in lottery winnings on drink, limousine rides and real estate was found crushed to death at a dump after apparently falling asleep in a trash bin, police say.

A pauper's burial was planned for Roy Clark, who detectives said had less than $10 in his pockets when his body was discovered Friday.

"Poof!" sheriff's Detective Tom McCann said of the lottery money. "I guess he just blew it."

Clark's body was compacted by a garbage truck and found at the Orange County dump after he earned $40 the day before as a day laborer. Police could not locate any relatives.

Clark, 39, won $188,000 in the Florida lottery last September. Detectives said they have not been able to trace all his winnings but know he spent some riding around in limousines and buying rounds of drinks for friends.

They said they also heard he invested in several businesses and bought a condominium in Hawaii and land in California.

Friends said Clark carried a picture of a girl he claimed was his daughter, Brandy, a student at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque. But detectives found that no one named Brandy Clark was registered as a student.

Clark had worked for a sod company and lived at a Winter Park apartment complex in 1989, when he befriended neighbors Chuck and Sandy Herbert.

He moved from the complex after he won the lottery and saw the couple only occasionally until April, when he told them he was having legal problems getting his lottery winnings and needed a place to stay, the couple said.

The medical examiner determined that Clark suffocated. He had alcohol in his system, but detectives don't know whether he was drunk.

Obscure Holocaust hero lauded

WASHINGTON (AP) — An elderly Italian man has been plucked from 45 years of obscurity to be toasted at a black-tie dinner as an unsung World War II hero who rescued thousands of Hungarian Jews from death in the Holocaust.

Unlike Raoul Wallenberg, the celebrated Swedish diplomat who saved tens of thousands of Jews in wartime Budapest, retired businessman Giorgio Perlasca and his perilous exploits were virtually unknown in the United States until very recently.

Last night, all that changed. Hundreds of Italian-Americans gathered to watch Perlasca, 80, receive the Medal of Remembrance from the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council. The council, a federal agency, is overseeing construction of a privately financed, $147 million Holocaust museum near the National Mall.

Perlasca, who made his first trip to the United States from his modest home in Padua, Italy, for the occasion, received the medal from Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia.

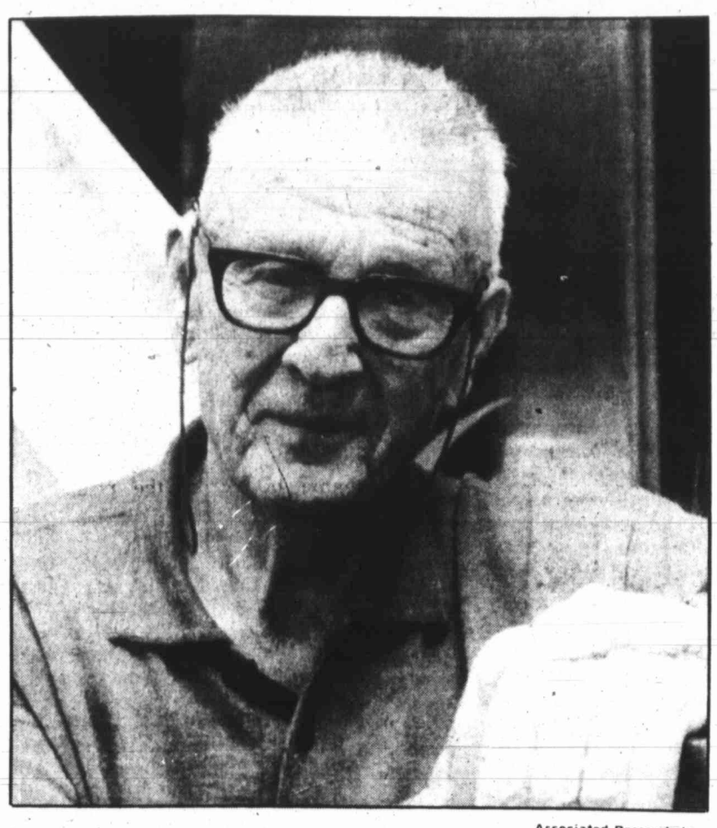

He is the first recipient of the award, established to honor individuals who displayed extraordinary heroism and acts of courage during the Holocaust, in which 6 million Jews were slaughtered by Nazi Germany.

"In this sea of darkness, there were flickers of light from a few people," said Miles Lerman, the council's chairman for international relations, who learned of Perlasca during a visit to Budapest last year.

"There weren't many who cared to step forward while other good people stood idly by and did nothing," Lerman said. "But their choices made the difference between life and death. In the total darkness of cruelty and indifference, they found that goodness has a power of its own, and they became beacons of light who redeemed mankind."

Perlasca, who dislikes publicity and dismisses any mention of his personal heroism, speaks modestly of his wartime mission of mercy. Others would have done the same, he said.

"I always say, the opportunity makes a thief," Perlasca said, speaking through an interpreter. "My opportunity was there, and I took it. Maybe those who remained silent didn't have the opportunity."

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Giorgio Perlasca was plucked from 45 years of obscurity to be toasted at a black-tie dinner in Washington Thursday night. Perlasca, a former Italian businessman, rescued thousands of Hungarian Jews from death in the Holocaust.

During the three months from October 1944 until Soviet troops liberated Budapest in January 1945, Perlasca masqueraded as a Spanish diplomat and arranged safe haven for an estimated 5,200 Jews who had been given phony "letters of protection" by the Spanish legation in the Hungarian capital.

Some experts say Perlasca was responsible for saving more than 10,000 Jews, most of them women, children and the elderly, from certain death by Hungarian Nazi thugs until Soviet liberators arrived.

Perlasca was the Budapest representative of an import-export company in Rome that supplied meat to the Italian army. When dictator Benito Mussolini was overthrown in 1943 and Italy abandoned its alliance with Nazi Germany, Perlasca sought protection from reprisals by obtaining a diplomatic passport from the Spanish legation.

The Spanish were friendly to Perlasca because he had fought with Francisco Franco's forces in the Spanish civil war. Later, when the Spanish minister fled to Switzerland, Perlasca convinced Hungarian officials that he was the legal representative of Spain in Budapest.

Perlasca, then 34, was appalled at the sight of Jews being shot, beaten and herded aboard cattle cars at the Budapest train station for deportation to German death camps.

"So much agony reinforced in me the will to do as much as possible to help those unfortunate people," he later told a Hungarian writer. "The cattle loaded by my company ... were treated better than the deportees."

Repeatedly, Perlasca harangued senior Hungarian officials to assure the safety of Jews crowded into the sanctuary of apartment houses flying the Spanish flag, and personally rescued Jews who had been arrested in violation of agreements.

He spent his dwindling funds to buy scraps of meat, powdered eggs and other scarce foods, and delivered them to the starving inhabitants of his "safe houses" in the Spanish diplomat's black limousine.

Perlasca vividly recalled snatching twin children from a throng of Jewish deportees at the Budapest train station and hustling them to safety in the Spanish limousine. "I thought to myself, why do these two have to go to die?" he said.

When a Gestapo major tried to pull the children from the car at gunpoint, Perlasca physically barred him at the door, claiming diplomatic immunity. The confrontation escalated, with Perlasca's friend Wallenberg joining the argument along with representatives of other neutral countries, the Vatican and the International Red Cross.

A German colonel intervened. The major explained the situation. "Let them go. Their time will come, too," the colonel said. The Germans walked away, and Perlasca kept the twins.

Perlasca asked Wallenberg who the colonel was. Wallenberg, surprised, replied that he was Adolf Eichmann.

Eichmann, the Nazi engineer of the Holocaust, was captured by Israeli agents in 1960 and convicted by a Jerusalem court of crimes against humanity. He was hanged in 1962.

"His time came, too," Perlasca said.

Apparent mushroom poisoning puts botany student in coma

CHICAGO (AP) — A donor liver has been found for a woman in need of emergency surgery after she apparently picked and ate poisonous mushrooms despite having studied botany, hospital officials said today.

Roberta Rogala, 55, was in extremely critical condition at the University of Chicago Hospitals, said hospital spokesman John Easton.

Easton said a donor liver was found Wednesday night and surgery scheduled for later today.

Doctors believe Mrs. Rogala and her husband, William, ate poisonous mushrooms last week at their cottage in Dewey Lake, Mich.

Mrs. Rogala, who studied botany in college, picked mushrooms and cooked them to put on hamburgers, said her husband, who also got sick but recovered.

"They were the purest white, pristine-looking mushrooms," Rogala said. "I remember because she said to me, 'Anything this pure can't be bad.' "

Mrs. Rogala went into a coma Friday and doctors said had gone into complete liver failure.

"She's a person who came name you 55 different plants by their names, so I really just went along with her," Rogala said. "It doesn't matter at this point what it was — the damage is done. Right now, we need either a miracle or a liver transplant."

Healthy living, prevention set as health goals for 1990s

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials today unveiled goals for improving Americans' health over the next decade, to be achieved largely by encouraging healthy living and preventing disease.

"We must assume more responsibility for our own good health and the health of others," Dr. Louis Sullivan, secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, told a conference where the report was released.

"We can no longer afford to ignore the fact that, individually and as a nation, prevention is the single most important factor in maintaining good health," he said, noting that Americans spent $600 billion on health care in 1989.

The 671-page report identifies 298 specific health objectives covering a range of areas, including fitness, nutrition, tobacco, alcohol, drugs, family planning, mental health, occupational and environmental health, food safety, cancer, heart disease, AIDS, infant health and sexually transmitted diseases.

Although he stressed the importance of personal behavior, Sullivan said the nation must find ways to make health care more accessible to "the most vulnerable among us." He made no new proposals, however.

Among the turn-of-the-century goals were:

—Increasing to 30 percent the proportion of people who engage in regular, moderate physical activity for at least 30 minutes a day. In 1985, an estimated 22 percent of people were doing this.

—Reducing the prevalence of overweight adults to no more than 20 percent from the current 26 percent.

—Cutting to 15 percent the proportion of adults who smoke. In 1987, an estimated 29 percent of the population smoked.

—Reducing pregnancies to 50 per 1,000 girls under 18. In this age group, 71 per 1,000 girls became pregnant in 1985.

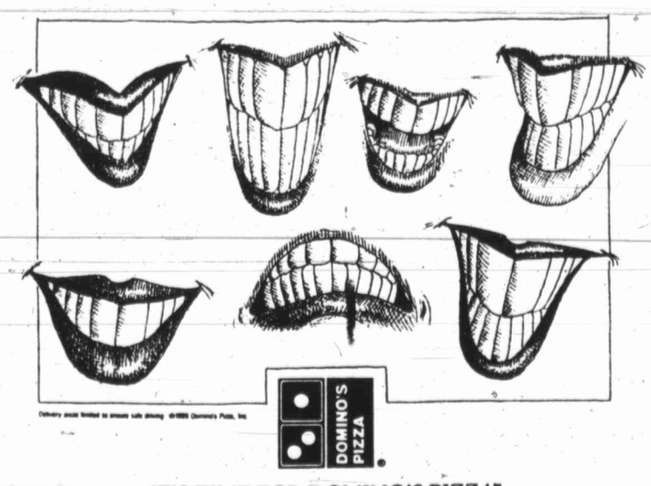

—Increasing use of automobile safety restraints to 85 percent of occupants from the current 42 percent who report using them.

—Eliminating elevated blood lead levels in children under age 5. Currently, 10 percent of these children have levels above 25 micrograms per deciliter.

Wolves introduced at Pigskin Preview

By BARBIE LELEK
Colorado City Correspondent

The annual Pigskin Preview was held Aug. 23. This is the time when anyone interested in the Wolves Football program can gather together while being introduced to the football players. Other important members that make a football season more fun were also introduced: The cheerleaders, flag corps and twirlers. The CHS Band also was on hand to provide musical entertainment.

Wolf season ready to begin

The 1990 Colorado Wolves are growling and ready to prowl. They have entered a new district this year with Kermit, Crane, Reagan County, Midland Greenwood, and Sonora. Crane is the preseason favorite to win district. The Wolves will meet perhaps their toughest match of the season tonight as they battle the Ballinger Bearcats who are state ranked.

It looks like it will be an uphill battle for the Wolves this year, as they have only a few returning starters. Five transfers should supply some needed power. Robbie and Mark Smith are transfers from Sweetwater. The brothers are said to be starter caliber for the Wolves. Robbie will most likely play tailback on offense and cornerback on defense. Mark will play fullback offensively and cornerback defensively. Also new to the Wolves this year is Chris Williams at middle linebacker, moving in from Odessa Permian.

Darron Emerson, who played last year but moved to California later in the year, is now back and could also play running back and kick returner. Laron Miles also should supply some new blood for the Wolves.

Booster club

The Booster Club for the Colorado City Wolves is off and rolling with a strong membership drive. Membership is $5 and the club draws most of its funding from the sale of memberships. It is not necessary to have a child playing football. Anyone can become a member.

During Booster meetings, held each Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the cafeteria, the coaches discuss how the previous games took place and also shed insight into what might be expected during the next contest. This is not only done with the varsity. Grades 7 through junior varsity are also covered. Refreshments are served at each meeting and there is usually a special speaker. The group also gets to meet the players as the varsity is presented first; and other weeks during the season, other teams are presented through the seventh grade.

Also each week, a football autographed by the players is given away in a drawing from all present. Head coach and athletic director Tom Ramsey talks about the varsity each week and, the game film from the previous week is watched.

Photo buttons of the freshman through varsity are available at $3 each. Call 728-8051 for further details. Also, if you would like to become a member, contact a Booster member or President Phil Anderson at 728-5973.

A special request to all who are remotely interested in attending the meetings. You do not have to be a member to come to the Booster Club meetings. If you like your high school football, come on over to the Middle School Cafeteria each Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Rotary action

The Rotary Club of Colorado City once again set out flags on Second and Hickory streets on Labor Day. Flags also were put out at individual homes.

The club rents the flags to people and businesses along on major holidays. They are distributed to pole holders on light poles on both streets. Also flags are distributed to individuals homes on other streets. Flags may be rented for an annual cost of $30. This is the major fundraiser for the group.

The holidays that the Rotary Club has scheduled to put out flags are Presidents Day in February, Memorial Day in May, Flag Day in June, Independence Day July 4, Labor Day in September, Columbus Day in October, and Veterans Day in November. For each of these days, the Club sets out the flags in the morning and then retrieves them each evening.

If you are interested in renting a flag at your home or perhap placing one on Second or Hickory Street, please contact Don Wood at phone 728-3497, or Lynn Hargrove at phone 728-2018. Also either may be contacted at Woods Boots & Shoes at the Fort Wood Complex, Phone 728-3722. If you know a Rotary member, he or she will also be able to help you. There is a shortage of flags on Second Street, and you would be more than welcome to rent a flag to be placed there. The Rotary Club will do the work if you supply the funding.

Man says wine is not a forbidden fruit

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: To say — unequivocally — that giving a child sips of beer and wine is "child abuse" is preposterously irresponsible. My father, one of the kindest, most loving men I know, used to let us kids try a sip of his wine at the dinner table when we were very small, and when we were somewhat bigger, we were allowed tiny glasses of wine for ourselves.

I am convinced that it was as a result of his attitude and teachings that not one of us ever abused alcohol in any way — not even when we were teen-agers — and every other kid in our high school was routinely getting plastered on weekends because it was the "cool" thing to do. We knew better because our father had taught us that there was no forbidden magic attached to alcohol.

We are adults now, and we all use alcohol as it was intended to be used, in modest amounts, chiefly to be sociable. I wish every kid in the United States could be as "abused" as we were. There'd be a lot fewer alcoholics, I'm certain. — JOSEPH D. O'BRIAN, N.Y.

DEAR JOSEPH: In the interest of fairness, I'm printing your letter. May I add: "Moderation is essential to the enjoyment of everything." (Emerson)

DEAR ABBY: Because of all the weddings and anniversaries in my family, this question has been coming up a lot lately. We were wondering what the phrase "No gifts, please" means on an invitation. Does this mean give money only, or give nothing at all? — WALLINGFORD, CONN.

DEAR WALLINGFORD: It means give nothing at all. A congratulatory card would be appropriate.

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for as long as I can remember, and I love it. I'm 61 years old. In response to "Looking Beyond Looks," dealing with the weight problem: As a bride, I weighed 105 pounds. Now I weigh exactly twice that much!

Please don't think I don't care how I look; I've been on every diet I ever heard about. I joined Weight Watchers 12 times. I've had my jaws wired shut, had a staple in my ear, enrolled in an exercise class — you name it, I've done it.

I was married for 32 years to a man who married me when I was thin and loved me when I became overweight. I'm a widow now. I'm always neat and clean, dress attractively, and I don't worry about my weight. I love myself because I'm a good person. I get up every morning and thank God for a new day. I'm going to be around for a long time because I'm needed. I love life and doing for others.

As for being ridiculed and insulted by total strangers because I'm obviously overweight, I feel sorry for them because they are the ones who are obviously overweight — in their heads. They're fatheads! — ENJOYING LIFE IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY: Concerning graves that are neglected and void of flowers: I wonder how many people would go to the trouble and spend the time and money to keep up a grave if they were sure nobody else would see it? — NASHVILLE CRITIC

Jews change American names back to original Israeli, or biblical titles

BY DAVID GOODMAN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — When Murray Friedman was at college in the 1940s and '50s, Jewish students would sometimes Americanize their names to avoid being considered outsiders. Nowadays, he said, a few are even changing back to Israeli, or biblical names.

"We've seen a re-ethnicization of American life," said Friedman, director of the Temple Center for the Study of American Jewish History recently established here.

"This re-ethnicization has had a positive and some negative effects," he said. "In general, more positive, because the nation has always been a nation of groups. The multiplicity of groups really goes back a long way in American life."

The center, part of Temple University's College of Arts and Sciences, aims to encourage systematic research and organize conferences on American Jewish life.

"The creation of a center reflects a community re-examining its history and traditions," said Friedman. "It's a relatively new field of study. American Jewish history has not been probed very deeply."

A small Jewish community existed in America from the country's beginnings, he said. When the Constitution was celebrated in 1787, Philadelphia's Jewish community was invited to the celebration and created a "kosher table."

When Jews fled pogroms in Europe and poured into the United States in the 1880s, the Philadelphia Jewish community functioned "as a cohesive force during a period when several million Jews needed to be integrated into society, both as Jews and Americans," Friedman said.

In tandem with Jewish settlers in New York, the Philadelphians "provided intellectual leadership" and in the 1920s helped create what became the central institutions of American Jewish life, he said.

"During a period of intense bigotry overseas and to a lesser extent in the United States, the basic model was to disappear into the melting pot, to assimilate," Friedman said.

However, that pattern is changing, as a result of greater tolerance toward Jews, and a rise in pride in being one, he said.

"Much of American Jewish history is made up of crises," Friedman said, citing the problems of immigration and adjustment, the Ku Klux Klan in the 1920s, the Great Depression and the rise of Adolf Hitler.

"At the end of World War II, perhaps for the first time, the Jewish community of America could breathe easier," he said. "We rushed headlong into the opportunities that opened up in American life. By the '50s we were moving up very rapidly."

"In general American life has been very good to Jews," he said.

Jews played an active role in the earliest stages of the civil rights movement and helped found the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Friedman, who was a civil rights worker in 1954-59 in Richmond, Va.

"In the '50s and '60s, political liberalism was the secular religion of U.S. Jews. Beginning in 1967 up to the present period, Israel has been the secular religion of American Jews," Friedman said.

Friedman said he felt American Jews were becoming increasingly uncomfortable with Israel's response to Palestinian unrest in the West Bank. But he added: "I see no diminution of fundamental Jewish support for Israel."

Church briefs

Women to host celebration Saturday

The Big Spring Unit of Church Women United, under the leadership of President Anna Smith, will kickoff its celebration of the release of the new revised standard version of the Bible with a "Get-Acquainted Coffee" Saturday at 10 a.m. in the parlor of the First Presbyterian Church.

Literature will be available at this time describing the major changes in the new translation as well as the need for this new revision. Among significant changes is the elimination of archaic pronouns (thee, thou and thine) and verb forms (art, hast and hadst) in the Psalms and other prayers addressed to God. In this the translating committee followed the pattern of the original languages of the Old and New Testaments, which make no distinction between addressing a human being or a deity, according to a news release.

Basic in all translation work was the intent to "introduce such changes as are warranted on the basis of accuracy, clarity, euphony, and current English usage." Since the Bible speaks clearly to every generation, this might well be the "most important publication of 1990," the release stated.

The Big Spring Unit will continue the celebration Sept. 24 when copies of the new translation will be presented to elected Howard County Commissioners. On Sept. 25, members will present a copy to County Judge John Coffee; members of the Big Spring City Council, and Mayor Max Green. The instructor of the Bible Class at Big Spring High School will receive a copy on Sept. 26.

The letter announcing the celebration was read to the Translation Committee of the National Council of Churches in New York City and was awarded a $100 grant to purchase presentation Bibles. Only 50 grants were awarded through the nation, the release stated.

Sunday School Convention set

DALLAS — A Texas Baptist Regional Sunday School Convention is scheduled for Sept. 17 at Crestview Baptist Church, Midland.

"Breakthrough: Reach to Win Texas" is the theme of the convention to motivate and provide information to help Sunday School workers "breakthrough" barriers in reaching people for Bible study.

Featured speaker will be Jim Denison, pastor of First Baptist Church, Midland.

Age-group, general officer and a variety of special-interest conferences will be offered during the convention including conferences for Sunday School leaders who attend Hispanic congregations.

Schedule for the convention is 2-4:45 p.m. and from 6:45-9:20 p.m. There is no registration fee and pre-registration is not required.

Odd drama surrounds 'Amazing Grace'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An unlikely history and lingering mystery mingle in a song that infused the old, rural South, emerged in the civil rights movement, gained popularity and now has advanced into the loftiest hymnals.

Aspects of the song, "Amazing Grace," are somewhat amazing themselves, and haunting.

"There's a kind of wonderful calm that I feel when I sing this, a kind of uncomplicated feeling, the way one felt as a child," says operatic contralto Jessye Norman.

Country singer Johnny Cash says it's "a song with no guile, straight-ahead, honest, gut-level and heart-level. When I sing that song, I could be in a dungeon, or I could have chains all over me, but I'd be free as a breeze."

The lyrics were by a reformed 18th-century slave trader, the variable melody clouded in folk origins, conceivably among slaves. It imbued their ensuing culture and later spread through a sophisticated world.

Now a favorite American hymn, "Amazing Grace" also turns up occasionally in rock concerts, and has been rendered in some foreign languages.

"There is a power of reconciliation that takes place when I hear it," says broadcaster Bill Moyers, who depicts the story and impact of the hymn in an 80-minute show being presented Wednesday by the Public Broadcasting Service.

The first verse goes: "Amazing grace! How sweet the sound, that saved a wretch like me! I once was lost but now am found, was blind but now I see."

The words were by John Newton, skipper of a British slave ship who traded for human cargo in West Africa. A storm at sea sparked religious faith and he later became an Anglican minister in Olney, England.

"I was once an active instrument in a business at which my heart now shudders," Newton wrote in his journals. "A common drunkard or profligate is a petty sinner to what I was . . . . Oh, to grace how great a debtor."

Newton became an advocate for abolishing the slave trade. His journals describing its brutality helped an ally, William Wilberforce, win British abolition of it.

"'Twas grace that taught my heart to fear, and grace my fears relieved," goes the second verse. "How precious did that grace appear the hour I first believed."

In the film, singer Judy Collins says:

"It was always the song that gave me an inner experience of another dimension. I always feel that there's a mystical territory between me and the audience.

"It's not just me singing . . . Somewhere or other, there is some experience going on which gives something to them and gives something to me, that's more than the sum of any of us."

The third verse goes, "The Lord has promised good to me, his word my hope secures; he will my shield and portion be as long as life endures."

An aged black "wiregrass" song leader, Dewey Williams, says at his 91st birthday party in Ozark, Ark.: "I feel good, I just can't help it when I get to singing (that song). It just do something to me."

The show ranges over many settings, from 18th-century sailing ships to concert halls, from prisons to Mississippi voter registration drives, from cemeteries to "shape note" singing in Holly Springs, Ga.

Women host monthly meeting

Women of First Church of God met Monday at the home of Anna Smith for their regular monthly meeting.

Betty Reagan, Missions Resource coordinator, directed the first study on the Philippines, titled "Bought With A Price," written by Karen Helsel. The study was introduced with history, culture and people of the 7,102 islands that comprise the Philippine islands. All of this area of 115,831 square miles lies in the South West Pacific and have an estimated population of 58 million. The people are even now continuing to struggle for political and economic freedom.

After 375 years under Spanish rule the Filipino people defeated Spain in 1898 with the help of the United States, and declared themselves a republic. This republic was not recognized by Spain, instead surrendered the islands to the United States for $20 million dollars, which gave considerable economic benefits to the United States.

Fear of the future continues to hold it's grip as freedom remains a future hope for the Filipinos.

Linda Lindell, Spiritual Life coordinator, gave the worship using II Cor. 3:17 and I John 3:17 "If anyone has the world's goods and sees his brother in need, yet closes heart against him, how does God's love abide in him"?

The question considered, is it possible that we underestimate the value of freedom for other people of the world?

The next meeting will be Oct. 1 at the church sanctuary.

Officials seek leads on Gray

Two and a half months have passed since convicted murderer Travis Dale Gray escaped from a Snyder minimum security prison and authorities apparently have few leads related to his whereabouts.

Travis Gray

Texas Ranger John Billings said this morning he received two leads last week through the Crimestoppers program, however, both failed to produce helpful information.

He is also seeking the public's assistance in capturing the escapee and is asking that anyone who has information about Gray to contact the Department of Public Safety office in Snyder at 573-5631 or the Scurry County sheriff's department at 573-3551.

Billings said he met with representatives of the television show "America's Most Wanted" in Odessa this week and a 30-second spot on Gray will be re-broadcast during next week's segment.

Gray escaped from the Price Daniel Unit on June 20 by hiding in a truck and later cutting his way out of the roof when the vehicle stopped in Abilene.

Gray, 31, was convicted of first-degree murder by a Mitchell County jury in connection with the death of his (then) wife, Tammy Lynn Gray. He was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Police beat

Big Spring police reported the following incidents:

- Ricky Len Murphy, 30, 306 NW Fifth St., was arrested for aggravated assault on a police officer. Patrol Officer Steve Sasser suffered cuts and abrasions while attempting to arrest Murphy for public intoxication about 6:30 p.m. in the 1200 block of North Scurry Street, according to police reports.

Sasser was treated for minor injuries and later released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center, reports state.

- Wilma Gail Potter, 46, McCauley, was arrested for reckless driving.
- The theft of a refrigerator was reported by the owner of Garcia's Cafe, 1509 W. Fourth St; the loss was estimated at $200.
- The theft of an air conditioner was reported in the 1300 block of Madison; the loss was estimated at $500.
- Criminal mischief to property was reported at the Northcrest Apartments, 1002 N. Main St; the loss was estimated at $355.
- The theft of property was reported in the 1600 block of Bluebird Ave.; the loss was estimated at $825.

GOP committee has good, bad words for candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're an ambitious Republican, a conservative group suggests using "children," "common sense" and "reform" when talking about yourself.

Use "sick," "permissive" and "traitor" when referring to your opponent.

GOPAC, a political action committee that boasts former President Ford as its honorary chairman and Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., as its general chairman, has put together a list of key words that could be helpful in campaigns.

The list from the Washington-based group was distributed this week to some 6,000 GOP officeholders and candidates around the country.

The recipients aren't yet running for Congress. But GOPAC hopes they will.

"This list is prepared so that you might have a directory of words to use in writing literature and mail, in preparing speeches, and in producing electronic media," GOPAC tells its members in introducing the key words.

"The words and phrases are powerful. Read them. Memorize as many as possible. And remember that, like any tool, these words will not help if they are not used."

In all, there are 131 selections to choose from. Half are called "Positive Governing Words" that candidates can use to outline their vision of the future and of their own philosophy: "Flag," "prosperity," "hard work," and "toughness."

The others are called "contrasting words" that attempt to identify and label the Democratic enemy in terms voters can understand, words like "waste," "corruption" and "decay."

Democratic National Committee spokeswoman Ginny Terzano used few words in responding to the GOPAC circular.

"While the Democrats are dealing with issues, Republicans are playing Scrabble," Terzano said.

GOPAC offers a whole host of "anti-" words handy for use against opponents — "anti-flag," "anti-family," "anti-child," "anti-jobs." In fact, candidates are invited to take anti- and then just fill in the blank with the issue of their choice.

The word list is the product of months of research by GOPAC staffers in focus groups across the country, according to Gingrich.

Not one to ignore his own preachings, Gingrich is adept at incorporating the suggested words and phrases into his own speeches.

In one paragraph of a speech Gingrich delivered Aug. 22 to the Heritage Foundation, Gingrich managed to work in four words from the GOPAC list. They are indicated in capital letters:

"Congress is a broken system. It is increasingly a system of CORRUPTION in which money politics is defeating and driving out CITIZEN politics. Congress is a SICKer and sicker institution in an imperial capital that wallows in the American people's TAX money."

GOPAC Chairman Howard "Bo" Callaway said the group hopes the vocabulary list; instructional speaking tapes, forums and other programs it offers will help correct a flaw in the political system. Conservatism, he said, is popular, but that isn't being reflected in the results of local elections. Sometimes conservatives lose because they don't use the right buzz words.

"Language really does matter — how you say things and the semantics," Callaway said.

Other times conservatives lose because, as Callaway puts it, "while they swim, the Democrats steal their clothes."

In other words, Democrats are effectively borrowing some of these same phrases and concepts and using them to win elections.

Waste

visory panel of the Office of Technological Assessment for the study of solid waste in Washington D.C.

The answer, he said, lies in recycling, exchange of wastes between companies for further use, waste reduction and above ground storage of what cannot be re-used until solutions are found. "It requires organization," he said. "If you allow this sloppy (incineration) kind of disposal to continue then it'll never get solved."

Following Connett's talk, Barret Lyne, of Environmental Process Management of Bryan, said they would help the county with a recycling center at no cost. "We will pay you money, in fact, for your permit and landfill," he said.

Connett, whose airfare to come here was paid for by the local group Texans Against Pollution, said there are several technical problems with toxic waste incinerators.

They cause even more dangerous by-products such as dioxins which build up in the food chain, he said. Heavy metals cannot be destroyed by burning. The dozen commercial facilities in this country are seldom monitored by regulatory agencies —for as long as 10 years in some cases — and they have a bad track record on pollution.

He said that since the 1930s, dioxin, a by-product of chlorine, is being found more frequently in the environment. "That is the use of chlorine in the petro-chemical industry," he said.

In a study released in July, 1989, it was found that cows down wind of an incinerator in Holland had three times the amount of dioxin in their milk as cows in other parts of the country. As a result, he said, farmers have to skim the milk and the fat is incinerated. "It's quite devastating," he said, noting the country's reputation for cheese. "Ultimately it's the farmer who's going to suffer."

Using videos and an overhead projecter, Connett outlined numerous health problems that incinerators are suspected of causing.

In Lenoir, N.C., parents said their children suffered respiratory problems only when the smoke blew in their direction from a Caldwell Systems Inc. facility, one videotape showed. One woman talked of the increased cancer rates, including 10 new cases in a six month period.

A previous handler of the waste, whose hands were shaking uncontrollably, told how the waste got underneath his mask on two occasions, causing a rash from head to toe and sores which bled. Now the 27-year-old cannot walk heel to toe.

Connett showed pictures of children born without one eye or with one small eye and said the cause of the defects are suspected to be the pollutants from incinerators in Wales and Scotland. Four cases near the two facilities are a higher incidence than the country's national average, he said.

One video showed some Louisiana residents who suspect a facility owned by Marine Shale Processors is the cause of five cases of a "rare" cancer diagnosed in children over a two year period.

The firm, touted as a recycling firm, is an example of the difference between theory and practice, said Connett who produced figures showing that the company in 1987 brought in $22 million in waste and sold only $11,000 in aggregate products.

Another video showed people complaining of health problems they believe are caused by a facility in El Dorado, Ark., which Connett said has been described as "a state of the art facility."

Encouraging people in the audience to support TAP, he said, "What you're really looking at is turning this planet around in the next 10 years and that's exciting and fun."

Other speakers included George Ellis, associate deputy commissioner with the Texas Department of Agriculture and former County Judge Bill Carter. Both supported TAP's efforts to seek information.

Ellis said TDA Commissioner Jim Hightower is concerned that Texas may have been targeted as a national dumpground for hazardous waste. "We believe it's because you're not populated enough to stand against them," he said.

The Mitchell County proposal raises "grave concerns," he said. "(Hightower) has consistently taken a stand against hazardous waste sites that affect our agricultural lands, our water and our ability to produce wholesale food."

In the audience were:

- Annette Lovoi, president of the Texas Consumer Association in Austin, who, speaking in behalf of Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards, also said there is a concern that Texas is becoming a national dumpground.
- Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, who said local citizens should decide the issue and he would support either side.
- And representatives from the offices of Sen. Temple Dickson, D-Sweetwater, and Rep. David Counts, D-Knox City, who were seeking information.

travel to Washington and interview Bush.

Iraqi Ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat said that "of course" Iraqi TV would air Bush's message "in its entirety without editing. Here you edit, in Iraq we do not edit."

Bush will explain on the tape why the United States has sent thousands of troops and air and sea power to the gulf in the wake of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, officials said.

The president's statements Thursday about having no quarrel with Iraqis were reminiscent of the language he used in remarks about Panama before the December U.S. invasion to oust dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Bush leaves tonight for Helsinki, Finland, to discuss the Persian Gulf and other matters with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Sunday. He also will press the Soviet leader for a quick resolution to strategic arms reduction talks that have been going on for eight years.

Preparing for the summit, Bush consulted Thursday morning with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad, Turkish President Turgut Ozal, French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Fitzwater said.

The president also met Thursday with Israel's visiting foreign minister, David Levy before embarking on a day of politicking in Florida and Kansas.

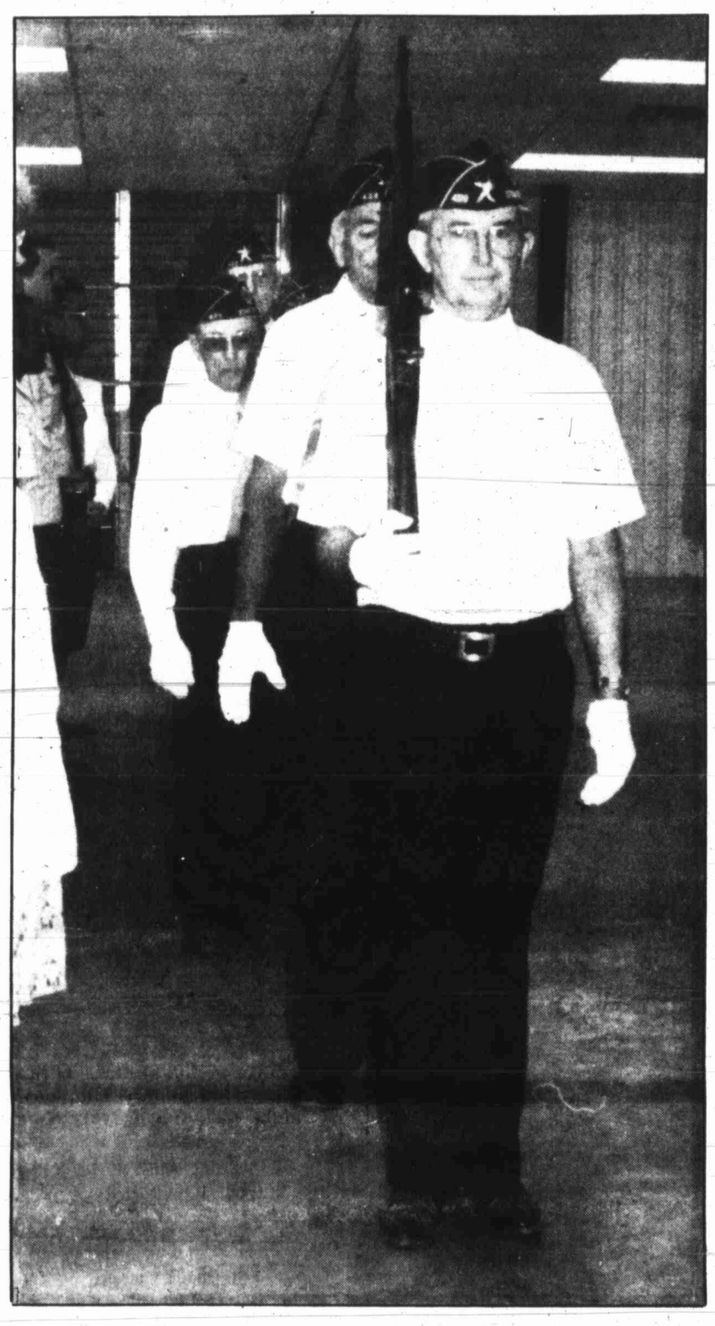

He used the political swing to issue a rallying cry for his Middle East policy as well as raise money for Republican candidates and praise U.S.-Soviet cooperation, which he said can deepen with this Sunday's summit.

"The world is united against this aggression," by Iraq, Bush told the Florida rally for Rep. Bill Grant. "And I'm glad the Soviet Union is on our side on this one."

"And there is no substitute for the support of the American people," he said. "I need your support and I hope I have it as we continue to stand up against aggression in the Middle East."

Earlier he told a Kansas luncheon for Gov. Mike Hayden that the United States will see through its goal of forcing Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait.

"There is nothing I want more than for our American servicemen and women to come home — and they will once we've completed a mission that does right by America, and the world," Bush said.

Members of the Stanton American Legion Color Guard execute a turn as they present the American and Texas flags to families of military servicepersons at a support-information meeting Thursday. The meeting drew about 25 participants to learn about Red Cross services and hear advice from military recruiters and a former Saudi Arabian resident.

there, may be discarded as well.

Boering said the group is looking ahead to planning a Christmas mail and package operation.

"I hate to think about Christmas now, everyone does," she said. "But we have to."

Local chapter director Brown said Big Spring families should call her if they want more information. She plans to organize support group meetings and other activities for the families and volunteers if there is interest in the community, she said.

Brown can be reached at 267-3779. The after-hours emergency number is 267-3701.

United Way

Purcell illustrated the motto with two allegories in story form. Purcell, also president of State National Bank and a member of the Moore Development for Big Spring, Inc. board, stressed that "giving" to the organization does not mean only donating money.

"We all have abilities," he said. "Giving time and abilities is as valuable as giving money. . . . Seeing the need is the beginning, filling those needs is where it ends."

Other speakers included former United Way campaign president Scott McLaughlin, who introduced new president Steve Fraser. Fraser is also vice president of Fraser Industries and a member of the Moore Development for Big Spring board.

Co-hosts for the event were two Midland newscasters, former Big Springer Mary Katherine Matthews of KMID and Randy Jackson of KTPX. They presented two attendees with cash door prizes of $25.

Both Lynette Miller of Fina Oil and Chemical Company and Doug Morris, youth minister at 14th and Main Church of Christ, gave their winnings immediately to Murphy to add to the campaign fund.

Raul Marquez, manager of two Marquez and Sons businesses in Big Spring, was given the Small Business Award. Marquez volunteers time with many agencies in the area, including Northside Community Center, the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Scenic Mountain Medical Center and the League of United Latin American Citizens.

An open house the same evening gave the public a chance to see the new United Way office at 406-B Runnels. Some basic renovations were completed by the Big Spring Firemen's Union. All materials were donated. Much of the work was designed by Bordofske.

After working as director of the agency for 12 years, Bordofske said she was "very excited" about the new building. She had been working out of the Permian Building until it was closed last spring when flooding and a fire threatened offices there.

"We had to do very little just to move in (to the new building), and the space is just what we need," she said.

The new building, as well as the quality and dedication of this year's group of volunteer administrators, are the fulfillment of a long-term goal, she said.

"I am right now where I dreamed of being when I started 12 years ago," Bordofske said, "and it feels good to be here. We are going to do some great things this year."

Amarillo Caprock (0-0) at Big Spring (0-0)

The Caprock Longhorns will get their first official taste of Class 4A football. They face a formidable foe in the Steers, last year's state semifinalist team.

Big Spring is rebuilding its offense, and it's slowly, but surely coming around. Except for the front four, the defense remains intact.

This is Caprock's first game under new coach Preston Smith so they are learning a new system. The Longhorns return quite a few members from their defense last year, but the offense has sputtered because of the new system and inexperienced players.

The defenses will control this one, but the Steers bruising running game will eventually wear the Caprock defense down.

BIG SPRING 20, CAPROCK 7

On paper this one looks like a rout. The state-ranked Garden City Bearkats are loaded, while the under-sized, under-manned Forsan Buffaloes are picked near the bottom of their district.

The Bearkats have owned this series the past two years and revenge will definitely be on the Buffaloes' minds.

The temptation will be strong for Garden City to overlook Forsan, and the home field advantage will account for something, but not enough to overcome the Bearkats.

Greenwood (0-0) at Coahoma (0-0)

This might be the best game in the area as far as 11-man games go.

The Coahoma Bulldogs get their first official taste of Class 2A ball. The Bulldogs return a horde of lettermen and starters from a pretty decent club last year.

The 3A Greenwood Rangers fielded a 5-6 record last season, but they made the state playoffs. Greenwood doesn't have as many starters returning as Coahoma, but last year's playoff experience will make a difference.

It's a new era for the Bulldogs and the home field advantage will make the difference.

COAHOMA 14, GREENWOOD 13

This is a good opening-season battle for two teams that made the playoffs last year.

Both teams return a fairly-strong foundations from last year's squads. Both have adequate defenses, and experienced people at the skill positions. But one major question for both are inexperienced quarterbacks.

Last year Seagraves won 20-0. This year, with the game being played in Stanton it will be closer, but it won't be enough for the Batlin' Buffs.

SEAGRAVES 14, STANTON 6

Colorado City (0-0) at Ballinger (0-0)

Usually records don't mean anything in this game, which is a rivalry from ways back. These two teams used to be in the same district, and have played for quite a few district championships.

This year the C-City Wolves will be playing for survival against the state-ranked Bearkats. Too much Jamie Gibbs and Co. for the young Wolves.

BALLINGER 38, COLORADO CITY 13

The Hermleigh Cardinals picked a tough season-opening foe when they chose the Sands Mustangs. The Mustangs are coming off a superb seson, where it took the state's No. 2 team to barely beat them in the state playoffs.

Sands has the majority of that team coming back, and Hermleigh didn't finish the season last year because of too many injuries.

The Cardinals will get plucked.

SANDS 55, HERMLEIGH 12

Midland Christian (0-0) at Grady (0-0)

The Grady Wildcats are coming off two years of being in the playoffs, and Coach Leandro Gonzales is hoping the carry-over will be evident in game one.

Midland Christian is a big team, it will overpower Grady in the first half; but the Wildcats' quickness will prevail in the second half.

GRADY 31, MIDLAND CHRISTIAN 25

The Klondike Cougars will be much-improved with the return of five starters on both sides of the ball. Ropes will also be more improved with the same numbers of starters returning.

Ropes will play Klondike tough, But the Coogs have more artillery.

KLONDIKE 40, ROPESVILLE 28

New Home (0-0) at Borden County (0-0)

This will be a great opening test for the Coyotes and new coach Bobby Avery. New Home is projected to be a playoff team because of six senior lettermen from last year's 9-1-1 team.

The Coyotes have an abundance of returning lettermen themselves. But it will take a while to get used to a new system.

Power players advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Power is the name of the game, and Boris Becker and Andre Agassi are its major proponents.

And the power game is not confined to the men.

Today, top-seeded Steffi Graf, with the biggest forehand in the women's game, took on No. 6 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in the opening semifinal at the U.S. Open. Gabriela Sabatini, the fifth seed, was scheduled to play No. 8 Mary Joe Fernandez in a later semifinal.

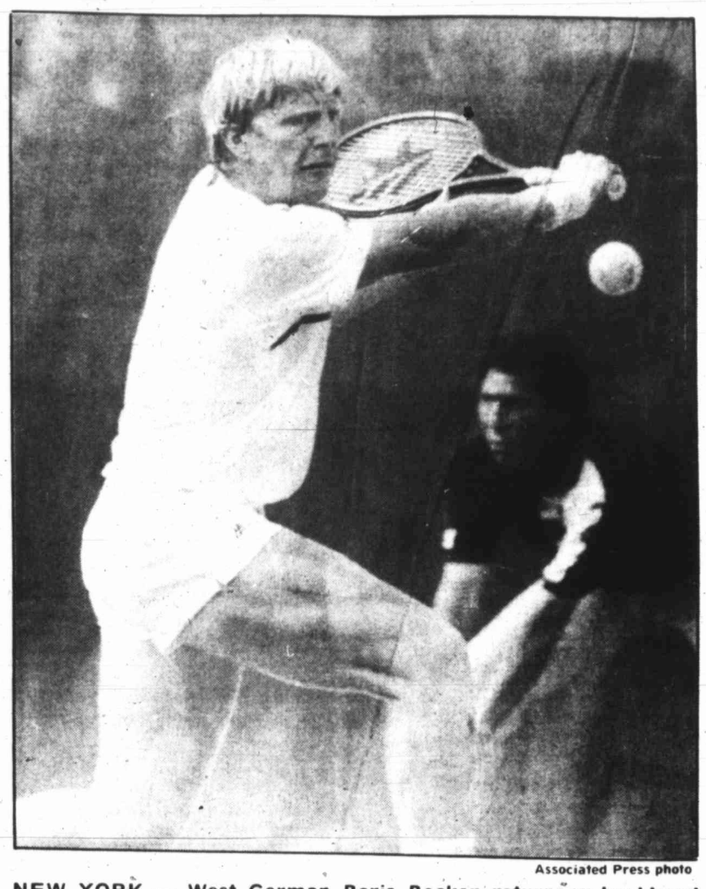

Becker, the defending champion, and Agassi will battle in the men's semifinal Saturday after posting convincing victories on Thursday. Becker shifted into high gear in the second set to overpower ninth-seeded Aaron Krickstein 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. No. 4 Agassi used his long-range baseline game to bombard unseeded Andrei Cherkasov 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

The other semi pits John McEnroe, a four-time U.S. Open champion who is unseeded this year and making his first semifinal appearance at the National Tennis Center since 1985, against 12th-seeded Pete Sampras.

Agassi says his battle with Becker will be power personified.

"I don't think either of us have any tricks up our sleeve. We're just going to come out firing our guns and see who gets shot," he said.

It was Cherkasov who got shot down Thursday night. The Soviet never was really in the game as Agassi did everything Cherkasov did, only better.

"He has powerful groundstrokes. He's the best in the world," Cherkasov said. "He was too good. He was always quicker."

Cherkasov, who beat baseliner Michael Chang in the third round, just couldn't keep up with Agassi's big groundstrokes. Time and again, Agassi would send Cherkasov sprinting from side to side, just trying to stay in the point. And time and again, the Soviet finished the point by hitting wide or long.

The second and third sets were more of the same as Agassi kept up his relentless assault.

Becker dropped the first set to Krickstein, another big-hitting baseliner, especially from the forehand side. But he moved into high gear in the second set and bullied his way past Kriekstein.

The first-set loss could be directly attributed to Becker's own sloppy play. The West German made 14 unforced errors and sprayed his serves all over the court.

Krickstein, 23, seemed delighted to stay on or behind the baseline, keeping the ball in play and letting Becker make the mistakes. It changed when Becker finally found the court with his groundstrokes.

"He plays the ball deep, and then I have to wait," Becker said, explaining why he spent so much time trading baseline strokes with Krickstein, just like a long-range artillery battle. "He was playing all the time deep, so I had to wait a

Buffaloes sneak by Stanford

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Frustrated at missing the season opener because of a disciplinary suspension, Eric Bieniemy couldn't be denied when he saw his first action of 1990.

Bieniemy, Colorado's senior tailback, rushed for 149 yards and all three of his team's touchdowns Thursday night, including a 1-yard dive with 12 seconds left, as the sixth-ranked Buffaloes squeaked past Stanford 21-17.

"No question, we were going to go for it (the touchdown), If it were fourth-and-eight, we still would have gone for it. We had it in our minds to give it to Bieniemy at least once over the top when we were down there," — Colorado coach Bill McCartney.

The Buffs spotted Stanford a 14-0 first-quarter lead, bounced back to tie on Bieniemy's touchdown runs of 18 and 36 yards in the third quarter, then fell behind again 17-14 on a 27-yard field goal by John Hopkins with 4:17 to play.

Colorado responded with an 80-yard, 15-play drive for the clinching score. And faced in the closing seconds with the choice of a sure field goal for a tie or going for the winning touchdown, the Buffs did not hesitate. Colorado, after all, had already been tied by Tennessee 31-31 in its opener, and found that experience unsavory.

"There was nothing pretty about it," said Colorado Coach Bill McCarthy. "This team showed a lot of grit in coming back. We made just enough plays to win. We've never had a defense stop our option game the way Stanford did. They gave us problems we never were able to solve right up through the end of the game."

The Cardinal shocked Colorado early, using a long punt return and a turnover to forge a 14-0 lead.

After Bieniemy's two scores, Colorado (1-0-1) needed several big plays on its final drive to deny upset-minded Stanford, which was opening its season.

Tight end Jon Boman caught a tipped pass from Darian Hagan for a 30-yard gain. After reaching the Cardinal 25-yard line, Bieniemy slashed off the left side and fumbled the ball ahead of him, but guard Russ Heasley recovered at the 11.

On third-and-six from the 7, Hagan appeared stopped for a loss but spun away from two defenders and ran to the 2.

Facing fourth-and-one from the 2, Colorado passed up a sure field-goal opportunity, and Hagan sneaked for the first down to the 1. But two subsequent plunges by fullback George Hemingway produced nothing, and a third-down pass fell incomplete. On fourth down, Bieniemy went airborne off the left side for his third TD.

"We knew we could march it right down the field," Hagan said of the final drive.

"If we get down there close, I want the call," Bieniemy said.

Bieniemy wasn't surprised at the competitiveness of Stanford, which was 3-8 last season. "When you get ranked up near the top, it's going to be tough every game," he said. "Everybody takes their best shot at you."

Stanford coach Dennis Green questioned whether Bieniemy's fourth-down leap was a score, saying he wanted to see game film.

"In my opinion, if we were at home, they don't get that call," he said.

He said his defense "had a lot of tackles for losses. We allowed a couple of big plays, but they're a good team and good teams have a tendency to make big plays."

Stanford scored two touchdowns less than two minutes apart in taking a 14-0 halftime lead that could have been bigger.

Tarpley pleads guilty

DALLAS (AP) — Roy Tarpley's life in the fast lane is being slowed by a two-year probation for drunken driving.

Tarpley was scheduled to go on trial Monday, but pleaded guilty Thursday. He was fined $1,000 and ordered to pay court and probation costs.

As part of the plea bargain, prosecutors agreed to drop a misdemeanor charge of resisting arrest. Tarpley agreed not to pursue litigation against the city for his scrapes and bruises when he was arrested.

"I felt like I didn't need any more distractions," Tarpley said. "I just wanted to put this behind me."

Attorney Bill Alexander said Tarpley also would have to serve 100 hours community service. He said attorneys decided to enter a guilty plea because "you can't tie up an $18,000-a-game basketball player in court."

Tarpley was arrested Nov. 15 on a Dallas freeway and charged with drunken driving and resisting arrest, an incident which led to his third suspension from the Dallas Mavericks.

Mavericks spokesman Kevin Sullivan said the probation would have no impact on Tarpley's status with the team, because Tarpley, one of the league's top forwards, already served a 33-game suspension following his arrest.

Tarpley was suspended in 1987 and again in 1989 for drug use. He has undergone treatment and has since tested negative for drug or alcohol use.

Tarpley returned to the team Jan. 22, but was suspended again for two games in April after missing practice.

He averaged 16.8 points and 13.1 rebounds in 45 games last season.

Spurs want Moe as assistant

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Spurs coach Larry Brown says he'll talk with owner Red McCombs about possibly hiring former Denver Nuggets coach Doug Moe as his assistant.

But, Brown said, it's likely McCombs won't have to make a decision on hiring Moe, who was fired Thursday by Denver after being head coach there for 10 seasons.

"The bottom line is I don't think too much time will pass before someone else picks him (Moe) up," Brown told the San Antonio Light in today's editions.

Brown and Moe have been friends since they played basketball together in college at North Carolina. They also were teammates on three American Basketball Association teams.

The two have coached together, most recently in the mid 1970s, when Moe was Brown's assistant at Denver.

Moe was head coach for San Antonio between 1976 and 1980.

"He's the best," Brown said. "I mean, the guy is the best. It just goes to show you it's a tough business."

The Spurs have had only three assistant coaches since June, when Alvin Gentry left the team to become an assistant coach for the Los Angeles Clippers.

Spurs officials had not planned to fill that opening. But Brown said he'll approach McCombs with the proposal.

"I'm going to ask Red," he said. "We lost Alvin. I know it's tough (budgetwise) for Red, and I understand the situation.

Steers sweep Pecos gridders

FRESHMEN STEERS 22, PECOS 0

PECOS — The Big Spring Steers freshmen football team won their season-opening game by whitewashing the Pecos Eagles here Thursday night.

The Steers got the win via the air as they passed for three touchdowns. Big Spring scored twice in the second quarter to take a 16-0 halftime lead.

The first Big Spring TD came on a 28-yard pass from quarterback Richie Thompson to tight end Ricky Gonzales. The two-point conversion was run in by tailback Josh Jones.

The second Big Spring TD came on a reverse pass from Gonzales to wingback Chris Cruz. Again Jones ran in the two-point conversion.

The final score of the game occured in the third quarter. Thompson and Mike Oliva hooked-up on a 55-yard scoring pass.

Recovering fumbles for the Steers were defensive tackles Jeremy Smith and Brandon Hamblin.

"We were real pleased with our first game performance," said Steers Coach Mike Ritchey. "It was a real team effort, and they never threatened our defense. Our defense really shut them down."

The freshmen Steers will play a doubleheader in Monahans Thursday. The B team plays at 4:30 p.m., followed by A team action at 6.

JV STEERS 20, PECOS 0

Thursday night at Blankenship Field the Big Spring Steers junior varsity pitched a shutout against the Pecos Eagles.

After spending most of the first quarter keeping Pecos out of the end zone, the Steer offense finally got into gear. Following a Big Spring turnover in the first quarter, the Eagles drove to the Big Spring one-foot line. But the Steers answered with a goal line stand, preserving the shutout.

Big Spring scored in the second quarter when tailback Dewayne Edmonds scored on a one-yard run. The extra point attempt failed.

Also in the second quarter quarterback Clay Klatt passed 25-yards to split end Pat Martinez for a score. The two-point conversion was good when Klatt passed to Oscar Valencia.

The final score of the night came in the third quarter when Klatt passed eight-yards to wingback Billy Sumpter.

Defensively, strong safety Martinez picked off two passes. Linebacker Shawn Boyd also intercepted a pass.

"The defense played really well," said Big Spring Coach Tim Tannehill. "It took our offense a while; we sputtered at first. But we came around in the second quarter."

The JV will host Monahans here Thursday at 7 p.m.

COAHOMA JV 14, GREENWOOD 6

GREENWOOD — The Coahoma Bulldogs junior varsity won its season-opener by downing the Greenwood Rangers here Thursday night.

Coahoma started the scoring off in the first quarter as Steve Garcia rumbled 55-yards on a fullback trap. The extra point attempt was no good.

In the second quarter the Bulldogs struck again when Bryan Sledge scrambled seven yards for a touchdown. Coahoma led 12-0 at halftime.

Greenwood's only score came in the third quarter on a long pass.

The final points of the contest was scored when the Greenwood center snapped the ball over the punter's head out of the end zone, giving Coahoma a safety.

Coahoma Coach Kim Nichols said he was pleased with his team's defensive play. "Defensively, we played pretty good," said Nichols. "They've (team) improved a bunch in each scrimmage. But you never know how they'll do when you're not out there on the field with them. They did a good job."

Coahoma's leading rusher was tailback Isa Castellano, who gained 135 yards on 26 carries. Nichols said other offensive standouts were tackle Dave Park, center Kirby Brown and wingback Greg Atkinson. Defensive standouts were tackle Eric Gang, strong safety Wes Rowell, linebacker Juan Moran and free safety Brian Moore.

Coahoma will play Tahoka Thursday at 6:30 in Coahoma.

Witt wins record 12th straight

ARLINGTON (AP) — Bobby Witt chasing Roger Clemens? There's more than just a full moon at Arlington Stadium these days.

Witt set a club record with his 12th consecutive victory on Thursday night in a 12-1 decision over the Kansas City Royals.

AL

It the longest winning streak by a pitcher in the majors since Clemens won 14 for the Boston Red Sox in 1986.

The American League record is 16 wins in a row by Walter Johnson of Washington in 1912, Smokey Joe Wood of Boston in 1912, Lefty Grove of Philadelphia in 1931 and Schoolboy Rowe of Detroit in 1934.

The National League mark is 19 by Tim Keefe of New York in 1888 and Rube Marquard of New York in 1912.

His earned run average over the last 14 games is 1.97.

Witt became the 38th pitcher in major league history to win at least 12 consecutive games.

He was tied at 11 games for the Rangers record with Ferguson Jenkins.

Kansas City manager John Wathan said it was just one of those nights.

Texas had 17 hits off four Kansas City pitchers. Codiroli took his first loss in only his second start since 1988.

Brian McRae summed up the night for the Royals: "Witt's on a roll and when someone gets on a roll they are tough."

Witt, who went seven innings and give up just three hits, agreed.

Angels 12, Yankees 6

California's Dante Bichette, who tied the game with a ninth-inning homer, doubled home the go-ahead run in a six-run 11th.

Bichette's double off Lee Guetterman (9-5) broke a 6-6 tie and the Angels poured across five more runs on a bases-loaded walk to Rich Schu, two-run single by Johnny Ray and RBI singles by Devon White and Luis Polonia.

The rally made a winner of Bob McClure (1-0), the fifth California pitcher.

California built a 5-0 lead in the first two innings but the Yankees knocked out Mark Langston in a four-run fourth, and tied the game in the fifth.

Pirates complete sweep over Mets

By The Associated Press

All summer long, the Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Mets thought the National League East race would come down to which team would beat the other in the final month.

NL

This week, the Pirates showed what they could do. The Mets, meanwhile, showed nothing.

The Pirates finished off their first three game sweep of the Mets since 1978 by winning 7-1 Thursday night behind rookie Randy Tomlin's three-hitter. The victory completed a startling three-day turnaround in which Pittsburgh went from a half-game deficit to a 3½-game lead.

Bobby Bonilla went over the 100-RBI mark as Pittsburgh matched its longest winning streak of the season at six. The Mets lost their fourth straight.

The Pirates play two games next week in New York. The Mets end the season with three games in Pittsburgh.

Once again, a left-hander left the Mets helpless. This time it was Tomlin, who dropped the Mets to 21-26 against lefties this season. On Wednesday, left-handers Zane Smith and Neal Heaton pitched the Pirates to their doubleheader sweep.

The Mets have scored only two runs on 16 hits during their four-game skid. Darryl Strawberry, Kevin McReynolds, Gregg Jefferies and Johnson are a combined 5-for-50.

Tomlin (2-2) struck out six and walked none in his second complete game in the majors. The Mets' only run came in the fifth on Tim Teufel's two-out double and Johnson's single.

Julio Valera (1-1) made his second major-league start, and it wasn't good. The Pirates chased him in the third with five straight hits that made it 5-0.

Bonilla grounded into a double play with the bases loaded in the first, but later drove in two runs that gave him a career-high 101 RBIs. Barry Bonds drove in one run, also giving him 101 RBIs.

The defeats did more than drop the Mets in the standings. The losses got some players grousing more than ever about the team's front office.

Giants 6, Reds 2

In San Francisco, Scott Garrelts beat Cincinnati for the third time this season and Matt Williams increased his league-leading RBI total to 105 with a two-run double.

The Reds won only one of nine games at Candlestick Park this year. Cincinnati, leading the NL West by 6½ games over Los Angeles, begins a three-game series tonight at Dodger Stadium.

Garrelts (11-10) is 3-1 against the Reds. He gave up two runs on eight hits in seven innings and Steve Bedrosian struck out all four batters he faced for his 11th save.

Will Clark doubled with two outs in the first against Rick Mahler (7-6), Kevin Mitchell walked and Williams doubled off the centerfield fence. Terry Kennedy followed with an RBI single. Bedrosian and Brett Butler broke it open with run-scoring singles in the eighth.

Dodgers 5, Braves 0

Rookie Mike Hartley pitched a three-hitter and Eddie Murray and Kal Daniels hit home runs as Los Angeles stopped Atlanta's six-game winning streak.

Hartley (6-2) struck out six and walked one in his first major-league complete game. Rookie Paul Marak (0-1) took the loss.

Murray hit his three-run homer, his 22nd, in the first inning. Daniels hit a solo home run, his 24th, for a 4-0 lead in the third.

Padres 3, Astros 0

Bip Roberts hit a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning, lifting San Diego over Houston.

Cubs 5, Phillies 2

Mark Grace and Jerome Walton drove in two runs apiece as Chicago won at Philadelphia.

lot before coming in."

As champions so often do, Becker raised the level of his game when necessary, mixing up strong groundstrokes with a net attack that Krickstein couldn't blunt at all. Becker approached the net 45 times in the match, three times as many as Krickstein, and won 28 of those points.

Becker's serves also got faster and more accurate. He made only 48 percent of his first serves in the opening set and had just one ace. In the second and third sets, he got in 70 percent of his first serves and had a total of eight aces to Krickstein's two.

At the end of the match, Becker said, "I thought he had no energy. His legs were tired, I think. Aaron played very well for a set and a half."

The match went four sets.

Becker predicted a long match against Agassi.

"He puts so many balls back. You have to run down so many balls," Becker said.

Asked to forecast the outcome, Becker said, "Six-four in the fifth set for me."

Agassi also sounded confident, but cautious.

"You can never count Boris out. He'll have tough matches and squeak through them, and then later in the tournament play the best tennis of his life," Agassi said. "Hopefully, I'll keep him out there all day long. Then I think things will go better for me. I feel pretty good the way I'm playing."

Agassi said Becker "is known for some great tennis at the right time. Hopefully, after Saturday I'll be known for that, too.

"I respect his ability . . . I'm going to fear in his game what he's going to fear in mind, and that's our strength.

"If he stays at the baseline, you'll see a big smile on my face."

"Hot Rod" a rich dude

CLEVELAND (AP) — John Williams will become the nation's highest-paid team athlete with a blockbuster $26.5 million, seven-year contract with the Cleveland Cavaliers, who kept him by matching an offer from the Miami Heat.

"The good Lord helps good people," Williams said after the Cavaliers matched the Miami offer Thursday night.

"I'm definitely surprised," Williams said. "Early this season, Cleveland made an offer and my lawyer, Mark Bartelstein, put an offer on the table of $13.5 (million) and Cleveland said, 'Go out and get offer sheets.' So I didn't think they'd match the offer."

The contract catapults the 6-foot-11 forward's first-year salary of $5 million ahead of NBA superstars Akeem Olajuwon ($4.1 million).

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Meryl Streep says Hollywood won't start producing better movies until moviegoers start complaining.

"Until then, we'll get more of the same," Miss Streep said in an interview this week for the syndicated television show "Personalities."

The star of the new movie "Postcards From the Edge" called for people unhappy about violent, shoot-'em-up Hollywood fare "to make some noise about what they want to see."

"I think we who don't go to 'Die Hard II' and 'Robocop' and 'Days of Thunder' and 'Terminator' and

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boxing promoter Don King compared himself and Mike Tyson to two black Muslim heroes when he accepted an award from the nation's largest black Christian church.

The National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Inc. gave King The Cross and Crown Humanitarian Award on Thursday at its 110th annual meeting.

"The Cross and Crown is the highest award I could ever receive," said King, who promotes Tyson's fights.

"I'm a Baptist. Mike Tyson's a Baptist. We're going to do for the Baptists what Muhammad Ali and Elijah Muhammad did for the Muslims," King said.

Nuggets fire Doug Moe

DENVER (AP) — Doug Moe, the guy who somehow just didn't fit the mold as an NBA head coach, is out after a decade of seasons with the Denver Nuggets, and Loyola Marymount's Paul Westhead is in, the team is expected to announce.

Moe, alternately laughing and choking back tears, announced his firing at a news conference on Thursday morning.

On Thursday night, Westhead flew to Denver and was to attend a news conference today at Nuggets' headquarters.

Although no team official would confirm Westhead's selection, Nuggets co-owner Bob Wussler admitted that a decision may already have been made.

"It's my understanding we have already decided on our coach," Wussler told reporters. Broadcast sources in Los Angeles and Denver reported Westhead was the choice.

His 10-year record in Denver was 432-357, and he led the Nuggets to two Midwest Division titles, winning Coach of the Year honors in 1987-88. Last March, he became the 11th coach in NBA history to win 600 games.

Moe — whose baggy sweatsuits and boisterous, frequently profane courtside manner aggravated NBA bigshots, fellow coaches, players and fans — conceded his style never seemed to fit with the new ownership of the Nuggets.

"When a new ownership group comes in, I think they need their own identity," he said.

"Personally, I don't think this is a bad move for them. We weren't able to work things out and the organization decided to go another way.

"I wish them the best of luck. I have no regrets whatsoever, no animosity. It was a very, very friendly parting. But after 10 years, it's tough to leave the people you're close to.

"Taking everything into consideration, I think it's best it turned out this way."

At one point when the tears started to take over, Moe said: "Hey gang ... a toast. The hard part is leaving the people. I've already gone through an emotional morning with the ..."

DENVER — While his wife pours champagne, Denver Nuggets head coach Doe Moe offers a toast during a news conference Thursday at which the coach announced he was fired by the NBA team.

While Moe struggled for words, his wife, Jane, poured champagne and joked with reporters about the remainder of her husband's contract.

"Do we pick up the check, or do you mail it?" she asked Nuggets officials.

Moe's departure was no surprise. During the search for a general manager, the Nuggets ownership said Moe's future was in doubt.

At a news conference, called by co-owner Peter Bynoe to report that Georgetown's John Thompson had turned down the general manager's post, Moe's future was questioned by Bynoe.

Moe took Bynoe's remarks in good humor, and responded with his patented profanity.

"If I called him a ... do you suppose he would fire me?" Moe joked to reporters while the Harvard-educated Bynoe sat next to him, laughing.

On Thursday, Bynoe said, "I don't think it was inevitable that he was fired, but that's how it evolved."

Westhead's collegiate team grabbed headlines with its breakneck style of play and the death of its star player, Hank Gathers, who collapsed during a game in March.

Westhead has NBA experience, having led the Los Angeles Lakers to the league title in his first season as coach in 1979-1980. He started the season as Jack McKinney's assistant, but took over after 13 regular-season gmes when McKinney was injured in a bicycle accident.

Westhead compiled a 51-18 mark after taking over, and stayed with the Lakers through the 1980-1981 season and the first 11 games of 1981-1982, when he was fired and replaced by Pat Riley.

Westhead took over the Loyola Marymount program in 1985, bringing with him his run-run-run philosophy.

Just eleven months after new owners took over the Nuggets, Moe was ousted in a major restructuring.

Moe will be paid for the remainder of his contract, which extends through the 1992-93 season and is worth about $700,000 a year.

Sixty-five Future Homemakers of America students held a meeting Sept. 4 to participate in making over 400 yellow ribbons in remembrance of members of the U.S. military serving in the Persian Gulf.

The ribbons were distributed at the military support group meeting held Thursday at the Martin County Community Center.

President will tape TV appeal to Iraqi people

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush is appealing directly to the Iraqi people for support to end the Persian Gulf crisis as he renews a blistering attack on their president and prepares for a weekend superpower summit.

"We Americans should make something very clear — our argument is not with the people of Iraq," Bush told a Republican rally in Tallahassee, Fla., on Thursday night. "Rather it is with Iraq's dictator who uses innocent travelers as shields, who now, in direct contravention of international law, holds hostage civilians from many countries."

He said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "must know that our policy . . . will not be altered by this brazen blackmail" and that the United States will maintain its military buildup in the region and enforcement of the international economic sanctions against Iraq.

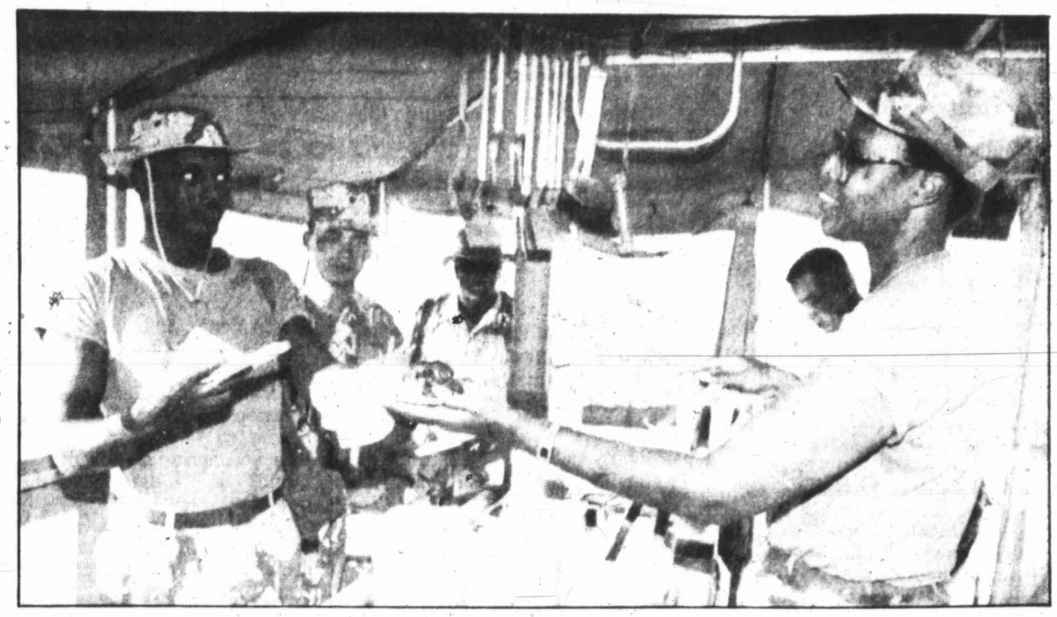

However, Bush told reporters traveling with him on a one-day political trip that he was glad for Saddam's offer of airtime to televise a message to the Iraqi people.

The president called it "a real opportunity." He has previously voiced a desire to take his case to the Iraqi people, as Saddam has done to Americans, with hours of his speeches and appearances broadcast live on U.S. news programs.

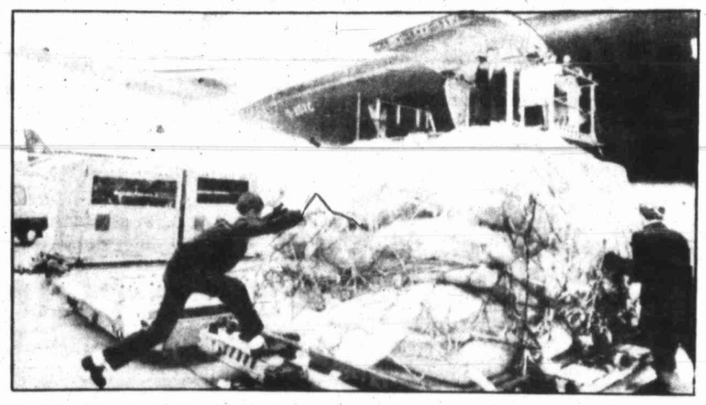

White House officials said Bush will tape a message of about 10 minutes, probably next Wednesday after his address Tuesday to a joint session of Congress on the Persian Gulf situation.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the White House would put together the tape and then have a State Department translation made. "We'll do the whole thing ourselves," he said in reference to the Iraqi offer of a TV crew to travel to Washington and interview Bush.

Markets abuzz over possible credit line

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

Farm scene

WASHINGTON — Commodity markets have been buzzing for days about the possibility of a credit arrangement for Moscow when President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev meet this weekend.

The administration favors liberalized trade and would like to see the United States grant most-favored-nation, or low tariff, status to the Soviet Union. But this would depend on Moscow changing policies to allow free emigration of its citizens.

For nearly two decades, the Soviet Union has been a major force in U.S. agriculture — a lucrative but sometimes erratic customer.

Japan is a larger buyer of total U.S. commodities, but the Soviets' annual grain orders stir excitement around the world. Farm exports to Japan last year were valued at nearly $8.2 billion, compared with $3.6 billion for the Soviet Union.

Many farm leaders want most-favored-nation, or MFN, status for the Soviet Union and a solution to the hangup over immigration. New credit deals would sprout, helping sell more U.S. wheat, corn and soybeans.

Whether this comes up between Bush and Gorbachev at their meeting in Helsinki, Finland on Sunday is conjecture at this point. The crisis in the Mideast is paramount.

But just in case the recent bread shortages in Moscow prompt Gorbachev to ask about an emergency loan to buy U.S. grain, it would be warmly applauded by American wheat farmers who have seen prices plummet in the wake of a bumper harvest this summer.

Don Lipton of the American Farm Bureau Federation's office here said Thursday the organization favors MFN status for the Soviet Union and realizes that emigration policies are a stumbling block.

However, he said, if the White House works out a special arrangement for Bush to present in Helsinki, it would be "something we would support" conditionally if it met all the legal specifications.

Leland Swenson, president of the National Farmers Union, said from his Denver office that his members support MFN for the

Herald introduces new sports edition

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
Publisher

The Big Spring Herald will deliver a "Friday extra edition" of its newspaper to subscribers' homes Saturday morning.

The very first Saturday Sports Special will hit the streets before dawn Saturday, with coverage of Friday night Crossroads Country football and other fall sports. The move is being made to broaden sports coverage to Herald readers during the football season, when West Texas sports interest is traditionally the highest.

The price of a subscription will not increase as a result of this new venture, and a copy will be delivered to all subscribers. Initially, the product is being planned for the length of the football season.

The Sports Special will have a different look than the typical Big Spring Herald. It will be published in tabloid format, rather than the daily broadsheet.

This is not the Herald's first venture into a Saturday publication, although it is the first regular sports-concentrated product the newspaper has planned. The Herald published a Saturday edition of its daily newspaper for approximately three years. The publication was stopped in July 1987 as a result of a lack of advertising.

However, broad acceptance and participation from area businesses has been displayed thus far. Readers, whose comments have been received from initial discussion and review of a prototype produced last week, have shown enthusiastic reaction.

Sports Editor Steve Belvin also met the proposal of the Saturday edition with enthusiasm, pleased that Friday night sports news — particularly heavy during football season — can be delivered fresher to Herald readers. "It sure seems to be what they want. And all writers I know want to get their words to readers as quickly as possible."

Another of the advantages of the change will be seen in the Sunday sports section, which formerly carried Friday night high school coverage. Sunday's sports pages will now more broadly cover the Soviet Union.

But Swenson added that many other factors come to bear over the longer pull, including the question of long-term credit, subsidized sales of grain and other issues that affect U.S.-Soviet relations.

The United States has been selling millions of tons of grain to Moscow at cut-rate prices under the Agriculture Department's Export Enhancement Program, or EEP, since it was authorized five years ago.

As of Aug. 30, the Soviet Union had bought 21.3 million metric tons of wheat under the EEP subsidy arrangement.

No dollar estimate was available, but the monthly report showed the Soviet wheat deals under the program accounted for 28 percent of the five-year total sold to all eligible foreign countries.

The Soviet Union banged into the world grain market as a major importer in 1971 with a $150 million purchase of U.S. corn, barley and oats.

Traditionally, except for a few times in the mid-1960s, the Soviet Union had been a net exporter of grain. Suddenly, Russia was on the loose as a major buyer.

The conventional wisdom in USDA at the time proved correct. The Soviets indeed wanted to boost food production and needed to import more grain to do it. But the department grossly underestimated the magnitude of Moscow's needs.

On July 8, 1972, then-President Nixon announced a $750 million credit arrangement for the Soviet Union to buy U.S. wheat and feed grains. It was only the tip of an export iceberg.

Secretly, private grain traders sold millions of tons of U.S. grain, mostly wheat, to Moscow, for cash while the Nixon credit deal was being worked out. By August, it was apparent that the Russians had bought about 19 million tons of grain during the summer of 1971 — and at subsidized prices in effect at the time.

The transactions, carried out by large multinational grain companies, led to congressional investigations and accusations that USDA insiders had worked with the private trade in the dealings.

Grain prices soared, contributing to higher food costs for American consumers. Eventually, Congress insisted on daily and weekly public reporting of larger commodity sales to foreign buyers, a system in effect today.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union used most of its $750 million line of credit announced on July 8, 1972, but the authorization ran out with about $200 million left on the books — the equivalent of around $600 million at current prices.

Iraqi Ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat said that "of course" Iraqi TV would air Bush's message "in its entirety without editing. Here you edit, in Iraq we do not edit."

Bush will explain on the tape why the United States has sent thousands of troops and air and sea power to the gulf in the wake of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, officials said.

The president's statements Thursday about having no quarrel with Iraqis were reminiscent of the language he used in remarks about Panama before the December U.S. invasion to oust dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Bush leaves tonight for Helsinki, Finland, to discuss the Persian Gulf and other matters with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Sunday. He also will press the Soviet leader for a quick resolution to strategic arms reduction talks that have been going on for eight years.

Preparing for the summit, Bush consulted Thursday morning with Syrian President Hafez al-Assad, Turkish President Turgut Ozal, French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Fitzwater said.

The president also met Thursday with Israel's visiting foreign minister, David Levy before embarking on a day of politicking in Florida and Kansas.

He used the political swing to issue a rallying cry for his Middle East policy as well as raise money for Republican candidates and praise U.S.-Soviet cooperation, which he said can deepen with this Sunday's summit.

"The world is united against this aggression," by Iraq, Bush told the Florida rally for Rep. Bill Grant.
