CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — He's 11 years old, locked in a psychiatric unit for two weeks at a stretch. His face is tense, with dark circles under angry eyes. A therapist brings out a rabbit. He strokes the rabbit's ears. Kisses its forehead. The interaction was arranged by therapist Rebecca Reynolds, who has just written a book about the benefits of bringing animals, plants and other bits of nature into institutions ranging from mental hospitals to schools for the handicapped. Page 14A

Murders censored

TORONTO — The sex slayings of two teen-agers in 1991 and 1992 were among the most horrific in recent Canadian history — but that's about all most people have been told due to judicial censorship.Paul Bernardo, 30, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the abductions and killings of the two southern Ontario girls. Unlike the O.J. Simpson case, where millions of Americans were reading of bloody gloves, melting ice cream and white Broncos over their corn flakes long before the trial began, Canadians have been kept in the dark by a series of court-ordered publication bans. Page 9A

From entrepreneur to administrator, pastor sees church through 34 years

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

All ministers are called to teach the word of God. Frank Johnson of Kelview Heights Baptist Church was called to build as well.

In 1961, Johnson, a new seminary graduate with a wife and three children, moved to Midland from Arlington because he had heard of a group of people here trying to start an independent Baptist church.

"Some people had gotten together and were about to give up because they couldn't find a pastor," Johnson said.

Johnson and his handful of dedicated Christians began meeting in a tiny one-room church that didn't have plumbing. From this trifling beginning has been built a multi-million dollar complex that today serves a membership of more than 2,000 Midland Baptists.

The average Sunday service draws 1,300 to 1,400. Johnson said he relies on six assistants who are ordained ministers to help deal with the needs of his congregation.

Video shows possible getaway car

McVeigh's missing plate appears on vehicle, sources say

Investigators meticulously sift through the rubble on the ground at the federal building in Oklahoma City, Friday.

■ Security tape shows Ryder truck, vehicle with McVeigh's license plate; investigators say car may be in possession of missing suspect.

Associated Press

Timothy McVeigh's missing Arizona license plate appears on a mystery vehicle in a videotape taken just before the Oklahoma City bombing, and authorities believe the elusive "John Doe 2" may have used that vehicle for his getaway, a source told The Associated Press on Friday.

The FBI has asked for help finding Arizona plate LZC646, which was on McVeigh's yellow 1977 Mercury Marquis five days before the bombing but was missing from the car when he was stopped by a state trooper 75 minutes after the blast.

The videotape from a security camera shows another vehicle with the plate — not the Mercury — and also shows the Ryder truck believed to have carried the 4,800-pound bomb, said the source, a federal law enforcement official in Washington.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, would not describe the vehicle. But investigators suspect it was used in the getaway and even now may be in the possession of the missing suspect, the source said.

A third, more detailed sketch of the second bomber may be released within the next few days, the source added, as the investigation continues into the the worst act of terrorism in U.S. history.

Permian Basin to hold somber remembrance of fall of Saigon

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A short ceremony in memory of the fall of Saigon 20 years ago is planned at the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

During the ceremony, some existing flags are to be retired and replaced.

"We're going to bring the tattered flags down and put new flags back up," said John Philbeck, memorial committee president.

The old flags, which have been flying since the memorial's dedication on Nov. 12, 1994, will be returned to those who originally donated them for the memorial.

Specifically, it is the POW/MIA flags that will be replaced with new banners. "This is a means to keep the POW/MIA issue before the public," Philbeck said.

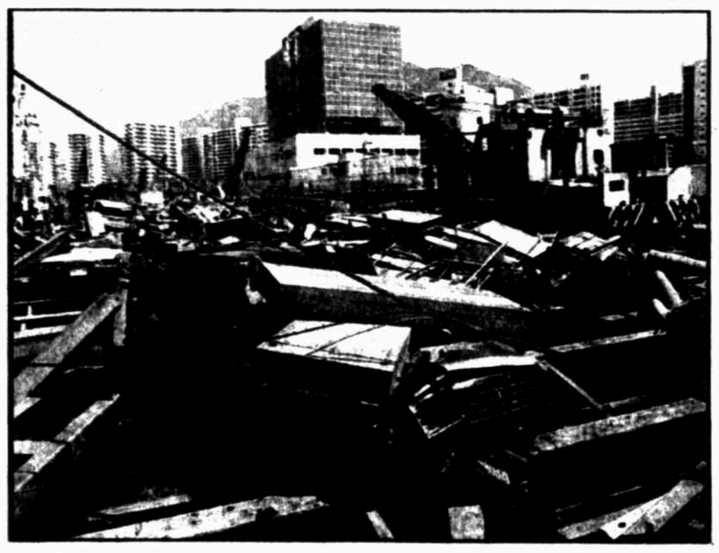

The ceremony will be "nothing flamboyant," Philbeck said. Rather,

South Korea explosion's death toll climbs to 103, 60 of them children

Associated Press

TAEGU, South Korea — Dozens of children arriving for school were caught in a tower of flame or tossed into the air in cars and buses hit by a powerful underground gas explosion on Friday.

Their bloodied navy blue uniforms, schoolbags and textbooks lay scattered among the wreckage.

Of the 103 people killed, officials said 60 of them were students in their early teens heading to seven area middle schools during the morning rush hour. As many as 200 people were injured and others were trapped in the debris.

"There are torn limbs, blood everywhere," said rescue worker Choi Hong. "A lot of the people down there are kids, kids who were crushed to death."

He was among some 3,900 soldiers, police, firefighters and volunteers working to rescue survivors, using bright lights after dark fell.

Police said a spark from the subway construction site set off natural gas leaking from a broken pipeline in Taegu,

Mercury astronauts challenge children to achieve goals

By Terry Wallace
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — They're older. They're grayer. And the men and women who have followed them into space no longer rate ticker-tape parades.

But former Mercury astronauts Alan Shepard, Wally Schirra, Gordon Cooper and Scott Carpenter still believe in the importance of space travel to the Earth, and in finding challenges after returning to earth.

"All of us are super achievers," said Schirra, 72, the only astronaut to fly in the Mercury, Gemini and Apollo programs. "You set an attainable goal, and if you attain it, then you find a new goal."

At ceremonies to open a new flight-simulator attraction at the Six Flags Over Texas amusement park, the four talked about their earthbound lives after their space flights, the continued importance of space research, and the need to encourage youngsters to keep reaching for the stars.

The attraction, called "The Right Stuff" after the book and movie about the events leading up to the Mercury program, uses an aerobatic film, a five-story tall screen and 50 computer-controlled pairs of seats to convey to viewers the sensations of supersonic flight.

The space pioneers also collected a $25,000 check from Six Flags for the Mercury 7 Foundation, a scholarship fund for distinguished graduate science students.

Space flights are not the show stoppers they were during the Mercury program in the early 1960s, but the space pioneers insisted the space program is still relevant to the Earth's future, they said.

"The (proposed) space station would be a great observation platform for finding out, on a worldwide bases, the effects of pollution on weather, ozone, and how they mix together and don't mix together," said Carpenter, 70, the second American to orbit the Earth in the 1962 Aurora 7 mission.

The Mercury men hoped that exhibits like the Six Flags attraction would inspire a new generation of boys and girls to follow the trail back to the cosmos.

"We're going to go to Mars. People have been exploring for thousands and thousands of years on this planet. Just the sense of exploration, the desire to get there ... we're going to go," said Shepard, 72, the first American in space.

"But we'll go there — there's no question about it — some day, some of the youngsters that take this ride may be going to Mars," he said.

"That's something I see that's important for us today," said Carpenter. "A young boy over here on his father's shoulders should be told, and all of his comrades the same age, that they are the right age to go to Mars. We have that technology. It is only a question of when."

As for Shepard, Schirra, Carpenter and Cooper, their space exploits may lie far in their past, but they retain the cocksure attitudes that helped make them heroes to a generation of American youngsters in the early 1960s.

Who's the greatest fighter pilot you ever saw? "You're looking at him!" said Cooper, 68, who set an early U.S. record of 22 Earth orbits during his Faith 7 flight in 1963, the final Mercury mission.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio and the only other Mercury astronaut still living, did not attend the event. Virgil "Gus" Grissom died on the launch pad with two other astronauts in a Jan. 27, 1967, flash fire aboard Apollo I. Donald K. "Deke" Slayton died of cancer on June 13, 1993.

Senate committee approves sobriety checkpoints bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Criminal Justice Committee has approved a bill aimed at establishing sobriety checkpoints on Texas roadways.

The bill by Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, was approved 4-1 late Thursday and now goes to the full Senate for consideration.

"People are being slaughtered on the highways," Sibley said. "In 1994, more than 1,100 people were killed in drunk driving accidents. We owe it to Texans to stop the slaughter."

Under Sibley's bill, officers at temporary checkpoints could stop vehicles on a predictable and nonarbitrary basis. An officer could conduct a field sobriety test only if there was reasonable suspicion or probable cause to believe the driver committed an offense.

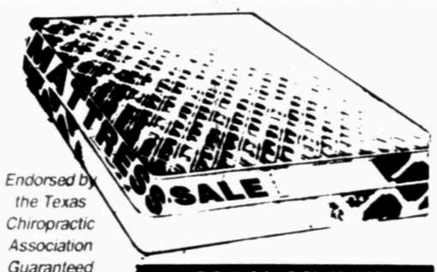

Drivers should not be stopped for more than two minutes and total time to pass through a checkpoint should not be longer than 10 minutes, according to the bill.

Checkpoints couldn't be operated in one location for more than four hours at a time and not more than twice within a seven-day period, according to the bill.

Today to be sunny, mid-80s

Staff Report

Today's forecast is mostly sunny with a high in the mid-80s and winds west to northwest 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is expected to be fair with a low in the low 50s.

Sunday's forecast is mostly sunny with a high in the low 80s.

Yesterday's high was 87, compared to the record high of 98, set in 1992. The record low for today's date is 31, set in 1934, the NWS said.

STATE

It was windy in West Texas on Friday as mostly cloudy to cloudy skies prevailed statewide. Temperatures warmed into the 70s and 80s.

At 3 p.m., readings ranged from 75 degrees at Guadalupe Pass in West Texas to 88 in McAllen.

As high pressure moved east out of the state, low pressure centered in Colorado was developing as it moved onto the Great Plains. An upper level disturbance was tracking across New Mexico and a weak warm front developed across North Texas.

Widespread low level clouds in West Texas were replaced by high level clouds by afternoon. Moderate to strong southwest winds prevailed from the Permian Basin northward into the Panhandle.

The North Texas forecast is for mostly cloudy today with scattered morning thunderstorms in the west, becoming mostly sunny and windy by afternoon. Mostly cloudy and windy central with scattered thunderstorms. Patchy early morning fog in the east, becoming mostly cloudy with widely scattered thunderstorms. Highs from 80 northeast to 89 southwest. Fair in the west today night and thunderstorms ending early in central portions. Otherwise partly cloudy. Mostly cloudy in the east with scattered thunderstorms. Lows from 54 in the west to 62 in the southeast. Mostly sunny in central and western portions of North Texas on Sunday. Decreasing clouds in the east. Highs from 78 in the northeast to 86 in the southwest. Fair Sunday night with lows in the 50s.

South Texas is expected to have partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of thunderstorms today. Temperatures will be in the upper 80s to near 90 with southeast winds near 15 mph and gusty. Lows in the low to mid 60s.

Forecasters said West Texas will be partly to mostly cloudy through Sunday. There's a chance of showers and thunderstorms in most sections east of the mountains this morning, with some possibly severe. Highs today and Sunday in the 70s and 80s, except for 90s along the Rio Grande. Lows tonight mainly in the 40s and 50s.

BOMBING: Officials suspect 2nd getaway car including 15 children.

During a preliminary hearing Thursday for McVeigh, FBI agent John Hersley testified that the agency is racing to find the second man because of fears he may strike again. He also said that one of several witnesses spotted a yellow car carrying McVeigh and another man speeding away from a parking lot near the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building before the blast.

At that hearing, McVeigh, 27, the only person charged so far in the April 19 bombing, was being held without bail based on what a federal magistrate called "an indelible trail of evidence."

McVeigh has refused to talk to police, but when he was first jailed in Perry, Okla., before he was identified as a bombing suspect, he told other prisoners that the charge he faced involved a gun he bought in New York, a senior federal official said.

"He was trying to throw people off his Kansas connections," the official said.

At the building, a major part of the search was held up after a slab of concrete broke loose and slid into the area that held a Social Security office and day care center, Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen said.

Workers spent the afternoon rigging orange safety nets on the edges of the crumbled floors to keep debris from falling on searchers.

The Oklahoma bombing occurred on the two-year anniversary of the fiery end to the siege of the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas. McVeigh, known to hold extreme right-wing views, was particularly agitated by the conduct of the federal government at Waco, an FBI affidavit said.

On Friday morning, about seven people from Waco brought three flower-covered crosses to the demolished federal building. "We all have a common bond now, and it's terrible that it had to happen like this," said Amber King, who works at the Waco Wal-Mart.

In Washington, a senior federal official said investigators believe the bomb was composed of 20 to 25 plastic 55-gallon drums of "ANFO," ammonium nitrate and fuel oil, using detonating cord as a booster and a safety fuse.

Detonating cord is a powerful explosive used as a cutting tool; a safety fuse can be lit with a match and burns at a known rate of speed so a bomber can give himself time to get away.

Investigators also found fragments of metal high-pressure gas cylinders, which may have been filled with acetylene or hydrogen to add to the explosive power, the official said on condition of anonymity.

The official said the bomb probably would have cost at most $5,000 to make. Investigators are focusing on Kingman, Ariz., where McVeigh formerly lived, to discover how the money was raised. McVeigh was known to attend gun shows, and one possibility was that the plotters sold replica weapons and key chains with defensive sprays attached, the official said.

AP Laserphoto

Police officers from Oklahoma City pose behind a banner made by students of Head Start at St. Stephens Elementary in Norman, Okla. The banner praises the officers' efforts in the aftermath of the bombing.

A Kingman motel manager said Friday that McVeigh had stayed there from March 31 to April 12. Helmut Hofer said McVeigh stayed by himself at the Imperial Motel and received no phone calls.

Hersley testified that a witness had seen McVeigh in Oklahoma City on April 13. On April 14, McVeigh checked into a motel in Junction City, Kan., where the government contends the Ryder truck was rented.

A crumpled business card from an Antigo, Wis., military supply store that was found in the police car that carried McVeigh to jail was also providing new leads.

Investigators were looking into whether Ed Paulsen and his son David, of Melrose Park, Ill., had supplied the small explosive devices needed to set off the Oklahoma City bomb, the Los Angeles Times reported. Ed Paulsen co-owns Paulsen's Military Supply with his wife, Linda.

Sources in Antigo told the AP telephone records show McVeigh made calls to the Paulsens and their son as far back as nine months ago. The sources were unable to say how many calls were made or how recently.

Richard Jorzak, the son's lawyer, said Thursday that David Paulsen's name and phone number had been found on the card. He said all three Paulsens had been subpoenaed to testify May 2 to a federal grand jury in Oklahoma City.

"We're going down as witnesses and that is it," Mrs. Paulsen said. "We're not being accused of anything. We are not being involved in anything."

In Milan, Mich., a bail hearing for James Nichols, a material witness in the case who is being held without bail, was recessed until Tuesday with no change in Nichols' status. Both brothers have also been charged with conspiring with McVeigh to build and detonate homemade bombs at James Nichols' farm in Decker, Mich. Nichols' brother Terry is being held in Kansas as a material witness.

In other developments:

■ In Milan, Mich., a bail hearing for James Nichols, a material witness in the case who is being held without bail, was recessed until Tuesday with no change in Nichols' status. James Nichols' hearing also featured the surprise appearance of a lawyer hired without his knowledge. Robert Elsey said he was hired by a group called Sanilac Concerned Citizens for Justice, formed by some of Nichols' neighbors. Nichols was given until Tuesday to choose between being represented by Elsey or by court-appointed lawyers.

■ Sources in Buffalo, N.Y., told the AP on Friday that friends of McVeigh's sister Jennifer remembered her making statements earlier this year to the effect that "something big is going to happen in March or April and Tim's involved.'

a provincial capital of 2.2 million people about 140 miles south of Seoul.

The force of the blast scattered heavy steel sheets that were serving as a temporary four-lane road for a 300-yard stretch of the construction site. The sheets, each weighing more than 600 pounds, were found strewn atop buildings and houses as far as 150 feet away.

High school student Kim Dong-duk said he saw metal beams fly as high as a nearby 15-story apartment complex. Some landed atop buildings, cars and passersby.

Kim also watched from across the street as buses and cars carrying classmates were thrown in the air.

As many as 100 cars and city buses tumbled 30 feet into the exposed excavation site. Several buildings were gutted, and a dozen more were blackened by the explosion. Witnesses reported a tower of flame up to 150 feet high.

Huge cranes were used to lift beams trapping survivors. Passers-by cried and hugged each other as rescue workers carried out unconscious victims.

Rescue efforts were hindered by a broken water main that officials feared could drown survivors trapped underground.

Schools closed early Friday and students headed for hospitals to look for friends and teachers.

They found virtual morgues. Sounds of suffering and mourning echoed in the hallways. Relatives sat next to covered bodies, beating the floor with their hands. Volunteers lined up to donate blood after hearing of shortages.

Police and gas company workers were practically chased out of one hospital as mothers and relatives beat and shouted at them.

"Kill me too!" one mother shouted.

"Return my son to me!" yelled another.

Investigators were trying to determine what caused the broken gas pipe. The subway, under construction for three years, was near completion.

The national news agency Yonhap, reporting that excavators were being used near the gas line, suggested workers may have accidentally damaged it.

Construction worker Suh Mankyo heard a loud boom and was thrown in the air.

"When I regained consciousness, my co-workers were crying out for help," he said from his hospital bed. "Many were pinned under beams."

South Korean President Kim Young-sam called the explosion the result of "carelessness." Prime Minister Lee Hong-koo visited the site and apologized to the victims, their relatives, the city and the nation.

The government called up soldiers and reservists for the rescue efforts, and also ordered safety checks of gas pipes in other large cities.

But opposition parties called the accident evidence of government incompetency, pointing to a string of recent disasters.

Last December, 12 people were killed, dozens more injured and 150 left homeless when a natural gas-holding tank exploded in a Seoul residential neighborhood. Thirteen other, smaller explosions were reported last year.

A bridge collapsed in Seoul in October, killing 32 people. Three days later, a fire swept through a crowded sightseeing ship south of Seoul, killing 30 people.

Gas accidents have become more frequent in recent years, as more and more homes receive gas through underground pipes. Previously, customers bought gas in huge tanks.

Critics say the government gas monopoly has haphazardly added more pipes, rushing to expand its network at the expense of safety.

CHURCH: Kelview to honor minister's 34th anniversary

(From 1A)

Sunday, the Kelview Heights congregation will honor Johnson's 34 years of service to the church. It is highly unusual for a preacher to stay in one place for so long, he said. The average stay for a Baptist preacher in the southern part of the nation is about two years.

"I had it settled in my heart that the Lord wanted me to stay here," Johnson said.

In honor of the church's anniversary, the Dixie Melody Boys, a southern gospel group out of Nashville, will be featured at the 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. services, said assistant preacher Jerry Barry. The band will also perform a concert at 6:30 p.m. at the church.

Johnson derives great satisfaction from seeing the congregation thrive over the years, he said.

"This year I baptized a fourth generation — which not many preachers are privileged to do.

The job has changed over the years, from the earliest times when his late wife taught Sunday school on concrete blocks outside of the one-room church, Johnson said.

The original church building is still part of the Kelview complex, though it is now complete with plumbing and air conditioning.

The church — located off North Big Spring Street at Scharbauer Drive — is financially solvent and debt free. A new 140,000-square-foot addition was paid for in cash, he said. During the life of the church, Johnson has been forced to make the transition from being a entrepreneur to assuming the role of administrator.

"Usually, one person is not those two things," he said.

Johnson credits the success of the church to God and the dedicated membership.

"For some reason, the Lord sought to bless us in this manner," he said.

CEREMONY: Permian Basin to hold memorial

a more subtle, somber remembrance is planned.

The memorial is dedicated to the service of Vietnam-era veterans in 30 counties in the Permian Basin. The names of those who died in this service — including 26 from Midland County — are engraved on the memorial.

Philbeck wants to let interested Midlanders know that a deadline is approaching for those wishing to have an engraved brick placed on the memorial's Walk of Honor.

"We are still in need of funds to add a driveway, parking and landscaping for the area," Philbeck said. "One of the on-going ways for us to raise funds and allow individuals to have a tangible connection with the memorial is through the sale of inscribed bricks for the Walk of Honor."

Members of the memorial board of directors hope all orders for engraved bricks are in by May 10, so that all bricks will be in place for Memorial Day ceremonies.

The Walk of Honor is for veterans of any war, Philbeck said. There are bricks inscribed in honor of veterans from World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam and Desert Storm.

"It's something that has really taken off," Philbeck said.

The inscribed bricks cost $100 for a standard eight-inch by four-inch brick, $200 for an eight-by-eight-inch brick and $300 for an eight-by 16-inch brick.

For more information, contact Philbeck at 682-046, or write to the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee, Inc., at P.O. Box 2178, Midland, 79702.

Officials charge father with murder of son who wouldn't stop crying

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Only 3, John-John Torres cried a lot after his mother went to jail. His father admittedly "couldn't take it" and now he's charged with brutally killing the child.

Anthony John Torres, 37, is being held without bond at the Bexar County jail after confessing to sedating the boy, slashing his throat and leaving him soaking in his blood for six days before returning and dumping the body in a trash bin.

The gruesome details come from a statement by Torres and a police affidavit used to search his apartment Thursday. He was then taken into custody and he appeared before a magistrate Thursday afternoon.

Killing a child under age 6 is a capital offense, meaning a conviction could result in the death penalty.

Police said the child's aunt told them she had been told of the possibility of danger in a letter from the boy's mother, who has been jailed for theft.

Torres was interviewed Wednesday by a child protective services specialist.

When asked to produce the child, Torres stammered "I can't! I can't!" and he refused to answer when asked if the child was safe, the affidavit states.

A search warrant was executed at Torres' apartment early Thursday and police found what appeared to be blood spatters on a wall adjacent to a bed, apparent blood stains on a blanket and a section of the bedspring cut out.

Confronted with the items, Torres then gave his statement to police. He also admitted to having bought a hunting knife and to giving the boy a prescription medication so he would go to sleep on or about March 28, police said.

Torres claimed he slit the child's throat and left him in bed, police said. Torres left the apartment and spent three nights at a motel and another three nights under a bridge.

Parker & Parsley to sell properties

From Staff Reports

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. said Friday it had entered into agreements with various purchasers to sell all of its interest in the Hamilton Dome Field in Wyoming, the Panhandle West Field and the East Texas Field for $54.3 million.

Parker & Parsley owns interests in approximately 394 wells and operates approximately 275 of the wells.

The sale proceeds will be used to reduce its bank debt, which as of Thursday was $464 million. It is anticipated that the closings will be on or before June 15.

Scott D. Sheffield, the company's chairman, president and chief executive officer, stated: "So far this year, the company has sold or entered into agreements to sell over $130 million of non-strategic properties. The company has achieved substantial progress in accomplishing its goals of selling at least $150 million of non-strategic oil and gas properties and reducing indebtedness this year."

Group files lawsuit against Department of Agriculture to end 'wasteful' subsidies

AUSTIN (AP) — The Sierra Club filed a lawsuit Friday against the U.S. Department of Agriculture, seeking to end subsidies it calls "economically wasteful and ecologically damaging."

The subsidies benefit farmers who irrigate crops with water from the Edwards Aquifer.

"The USDA spends $8 million in taxpayers' money each year subsidizing Edwards pumping by big irrigators," said Ken Kramer, director of the club's Texas chapter.

"It threatens to poison San Antonio's water supplies. It threatens to ruin the tourism economies on New Braunfels and San Marcos, which are far more valuable than, say, sorghum for hog feed," Kramer said. "It also threatens to kill off irreplaceable endangered species."

The aquifer is the sole source of drinking water for San Antonio, and it feeds the natural springs in New Braunfels and San Marcos that many tourists visit.

Jim Petterson, deputy press secretary at the USDA in Washington, said he was unaware of the lawsuit and had no comment.

The lawsuit, filed in Midland's federal court, claims the USDA is violating four federal laws that require the department to develop and carry out plans and programs to prevent subsidized irrigation practices from poisoning human water supplies and killing wildlife.

"The USDA needs to obey the law," Kramer said.

The aquifer is the sole source of drinking water for San Antonio, and it feeds the natural springs in New Braunfels and San Marcos that many tourists visit.

The lawsuit targets subsidized farms in Bexar, Medina and Uvalde counties.

"We are not singling out individual agricultural users and filing suit against them. We are filing suit against a federal agency for what we consider to be an ineffective and inappropriate policy on the part of that agency," Kramer said.

Pete Schenkkan, one of the attorneys who filed the suit, said irrigation of the crops grown in those counties was unnecessary. He said more acres are cultivated in all three counties without irrigation.

The lawsuit claims the USDA "has failed or refused to pursue reasonable and prudent alternatives to economically wasteful and ecologically destructive irrigation agriculture" in the counties.

Schenkkan advocated irrigation systems more efficient than a standard sprinkler method.

Teen receives life prison term for 1993 murder

BEAUMONT (AP) — A teenager has received a life prison term for his role in the 1993 shooting death of Bill Simpson, a key figure in the Vidor integration effort.

Jurors took less than 2 1/2 hours Thursday to convict David Jarone Brown, 18, of capital murder.

State District Judge Charles Carver issued an automatic life sentence for Brown. Prosecutors declined to seek the death penalty because Brown was only 17 and had no criminal record at the time of the Simpson killing.

The teen-ager won't be eligible for parole until he is 58 years old.

Prosecutors said Brown shot Simpson, 37, during an attempted robbery in Beaumont on Sept. 1, 1993, less than 12 hours after Simpson fled a housing project in nearby Vidor. Simpson had been part of a small group of blacks who moved into the all-white apartments as part of a failed integration effort.

The slaying was not related to that integration effort, police said.

Three teens are still awaiting trial in the murder. Brown's cousin, Benjamin Brown, was being tried simultaneously last week when his attorney was hospitalized. Also charged with capital murder are Clinton Leon Cheeks Jr., 19, and Kamal Dumaka Leday, 19.

Fighting continues in Chechnya despite declared cease-fire

MOSCOW, Russia (AP) — Scattered fighting on the first day of Moscow's cease-fire in Chechnya on Friday left little hope the truce would lead to a quick end to the conflict.

The Russian military blamed Chechen guerrillas for the continued violence in the breakaway republic, saying the rebels had fired first.

The Chechens were not party to the 14-day truce President Boris Yeltsin declared in advance of a visit by dozens of world leaders celebrating the 50th anniversary of the victory over Nazism.

Despite President Clinton's call to make the truce permanent and pleas for peace from the pope, a Russian military spokesman said Friday the truce is not likely to be extended.

It is set to expire on May 12, the day after Yeltsin's two-day summit with Clinton.

"If there is no political solution by May 12, of course the fighting will resume," said Col. Gen. Leonty Shevtsov, spokesman for the armed forces general staff.

Defense Minister Pavel Grachev said Chechen fighters opened fire in two districts overnight, killing one Russian soldier and wounding at least four others. Russian forces shot back.

A Russian general and a rebel leader met in Chechnya to discuss the truce. In Grozny, the Chechen capital, Russian Maj. Gen. Gennady Troshev told the ITAR-Tass news agency that Aslan Maskhadov, a high-ranking rebel leader, agreed to observe the truce.

Debate rages over Rwandan victims' numbers in refugee camp slaughter

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — "Truth is the first casualty of war," reads the sign posted Friday at a headquarters for U.N. troops. To many here, the slaughter at a refugee camp over the weekend is proof of that.

A week after the shooting and stampedes at the Kibeho camp, the debate over the number of victims and how they died still rages. Rwanda's new government says about 300 were killed, the United Nations is sticking by 2,000, while some put the number as high as 8,000.

The embarrassed government's attempt to quell the controversy Thursday by opening mass graves for viewing seems to have made things worse. When it proclaimed the dig over and announced a body count of 338, critics alleged a cover-up.

"My belief is that there are more bodies on that hillside, because I'm convinced I saw more bodies on that Sunday morning," British Army Maj. Mark Cuthbert-Brown said Friday. He was at a U.N. peacekeepers' post at Kibeho during the weekend shooting and ensuing stampede.

Mass graves have yet to be dug up, hundreds of bodies were stuffed into pit latrines, many people were buried alive and corpses may have been taken away in the night, he and other officials said.

Although they can give no firm figure because of the chaotic situation, they agree it is far more than 338. Many of the dead, they contend, were killed in cold blood by Rwandan soldiers who shot them like rabbits as they fled across the hills.

"A lot of people died — it numbered some thousands, either two, four, six, eight or whatever," said Maj. Pete Seaman, spokesman for the Australian military contingent. "The true figure will probably never be known."

The Australians, who had the "truth" slogan at their headquarters, took part in the body count last weekend but would not give a firm estimate after some soldiers initially said 8,000.

The government figure is "wrong — it's completely wrong," said Alex Castanias, a human rights monitor for the European Union who also counted bodies and believes at least 1,000 died. A U.N. human rights monitor who was with him, Annick Van Looker-en Campagne, agreed.

Even the United Nations, which dropped its figure from 5,000 to 2,000, expressed shock Friday at the government's figure. U.N. spokesman Ismael Diallo said in Kigali the exhumations appeared to have been just for show. "They stopped after they counted 338," he said.

The government says Rwandan troops fired in self-defense Saturday and Sunday when anti-government militants shot at them from within the camp as they tried to close it down. The shooting sparked a panic, and scores of people died in the stampede.

President Pasteur Bizimungu announced an international inquiry Thursday, saying, "We need the truth to come out."

Cuthbert-Brown agrees that most of the victims he saw appeared to have been crushed. He and others also say they're confident there was no planned slaughter by Rwandan troops — that the situation simply blew out of control after soldiers fired shots to control an unruly crowd.

But once the panic began, they say, individual soldiers began gunning people down in cold blood, and mortars, grenades, and automatic weapons were fired into the crowd.

Ninety percent of the wounded taken to a hospital run by the aid agency Doctors Without Borders had been shot from behind, said spokeswoman Samantha Bolton.

The deaths drew international condemnation and prompted threats of a cutoff of financial aid. Government officials say they have been unfairly condemned.

"They've been rather hasty in their decision," said Interior Minister Seth Sendashonjwa. However, if an international inquiry finds the massacre was premeditated or the soldiers over-reacted, commanders at the scene will be prosecuted, he said.

Most of those in the camp were from Rwanda's Hutu majority. They fled last July to camps set up by the French as a rebel army led by the Tutsi minority swept through Rwanda on its way to victory. The French left last year and the new Tutsi-led government has been trying to persuade people to go home.

Trial to begin in Canadian double-murder case; courts ban media coverage

TORONTO (AP) — The sex slayings of two teen-agers in 1991 and 1992 were among the most horrific in recent Canadian history — but that's about all most people have been told due to judicial censorship.

Paul Bernardo, 30, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the abductions and killings of the two southern Ontario girls. He also is charged with kidnapping, forcible confinement, aggravated sexual assault and indignity to a body.

Jury selection in his trial begins Monday.

Unlike the O.J. Simpson case, where millions of Americans were reading of bloody gloves, melting ice cream and white Broncos over their corn flakes long before the trial began, Canadians have been kept in the dark by a series of court-ordered publication bans.

The key witness in the trial is expected to be Bernardo's ex-wife, Karla Homolka, 24. She was convicted of manslaughter in 1993 in the same killings and sentenced to 12 years in prison.

In Homolka's trial, the judge prohibited publication of any details, testimony, or even her plea, saying it was necessary to ensure a fair trial for Bernardo later.

Pretrial motions in Bernardo's case, under way for about a year, have likewise fallen under the ban.

Consequently rumors have run rife. Lacking news reports, people have relied on word of mouth from the few members of the public who actually attended earlier court sessions. Others avidly surf through computer networks which have been filled with gruesome details, some true, some not, ranging from gory scenes of torture to tales that the couple was making "snuff films."

A few reports from American news organizations, which were barred from the Homolka proceedings and which consequently did not feel bound by the court orders, also filtered back to Canada. Attempts to stop editions of certain newspapers or to black out television stations had limited success.

Lacking news reports, people have relied on word of mouth from the few members of the public who actually attended earlier court sessions.

Canadian reporters were allowed to attend the trial, but not publish or broadcast reports.

What Canadians do know is that the concrete-encased body parts of Leslie Mahaffy, 14, were pulled from a lake two weeks after she disappeared in 1991. She had been sexually assaulted before she was killed. Less than a year later, the body of Kristen French, 15, was found. She too had been sexually assaulted.

Beyond that, only reporters who have followed the case and the hundred or so members of the public who were been able to get seats at the various hearings in the southern city of St. Catharines know the details first hand.

The trial has been moved to Toronto where officials believe it will be easier to find a jury.

A pool of 1,500 potential jurors — 10 times the usual number — will gather Monday in a hotel ballroom to fill out a preliminary questionnaire. The process will later move to a 200-seat courtroom in Toronto's main courthouse.

Jury selection is expected to take about two weeks.

During the proceedings, policemen will be stationed outside the building for crowd control, and the sixth floor, where the trial will take place, will be sealed off to all but those with special passes.

One of the important issues to be handled during the trial by Judge Patrick LeSage is whether to allow spectators and reporters to see videotapes expected to be introduced into evidence.

Judge LeSage has described these films as "very graphic portrayals" that may shock the jury. The families of the victims oppose showing these tapes publicly.

Girl Scouts organization keeps up with times

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Girl Scouts may still hold onto its traditional code of ethnics, but the organization has kept up with changing times, according to its national executive director.

"We are very contemporary," said Mary Rose Main, National Executive Director of Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. "We have revamped the organization. We had begun to emphasize computers and math and science. And, we deal with sensitive issues such as pregnancy and drug abuse in an educational manner."

Ms. Main is in Midland to attend today's Permian Basin Girl Scout Council annual meeting, where she will be the guest speaker. The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

The council will install a new board of directors and outstanding volunteer and Girl Scout member awards will be given. The event will also include listening forums and reports on national and international trips.

Emphasizing the importance of Girl Scouts in young girls' lives and in the community is the message that Ms. Main will present to the council.

"We help girls build their self-esteem and self-confidence," she said. "And, volunteers are very important as role models. Girl Scouts helps all of us be the very best we can be."

Ms. Main can speak from experience, having been a Girl Scout herself. She joined the Girl Scout executive staff in Iowa after college and has served in Girl Scouts since then.

"My entire career has been Girl Scouts," she said.

She became national executive director in 1990, after serving as assistant national executive director for 13 years.

In the years she has participated in Girl Scouts, she said the values have not changed, but the challenges have.

"Our values are still very much the same," she said. "Our promise and law are our code of ethics. It teaches the girls to be honest, fair, respectful and to help others."

She said formal research on the impact that Girl Scouts makes on young women's lives is significant.

"Girls who had participated in Girl Scouts said they weren't as prone to cheat or do other bad things," she said.

Promoting good values is especially important in today's society.

"We teach values in the fun activities we have," Ms. Main said. "We teach girls to share and to work together. That is something that is missing in a lot of today's kids."

In the United States there are 327 Girl Scouts councils with 3.5 million members.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Mary Rose Main, national executive director of Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., is in Midland for today's Permian Basin Girl Scout Council meeting.

Japanese cult had two informants in military, officials announce

TOKYO (AP) — The cult suspected in the nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways had two informants in the army who tipped off the sect to police raids, the military disclosed Friday.

One of the soldiers also admitted to staging a firebomb attack on the headquarters of the Aum Shinri Kyo (Supreme Truth) cult the day before the subway killings to disrupt a police investigation of the sect, officials said.

Fears of another terrorist attack grew, meanwhile, as the country prepared for a holiday week that begins today. A quarter of the country's police force was put on duty for the week.

Concern is high that whoever carried out the deadly subway gassing may strike again during the holidays, when millions use the nation's trains and highways to visit their hometowns or resort areas.

The discovery of cult moles within the military was a new shock for authorities already under fire for the slow-moving investigation into the sect. And it was a major embarrassment for the military, which had secretly trained and equipped the police before a series of raids on the cult.

Police have yet to make an arrest or name a suspect in the March 20 subway attack, which killed 12 people and sickened 5,500.

A squad of riot police enter No. 2 satian, one of the Aum Shinri Kyo facilities, in Kamikuishiki, southwest of Tokyo, Friday.

Cult leaders have repeatedly denied any involvement. But raids at a cult commune have turned up tons of chemicals that could be used to make sarin, the nerve gas released on the subways.

"It is highly likely that sarin was made at Aum Shinri Kyo facilities," Kazuhiro Sugita, director of the National Police Agency's Security Bureau, told government officials Friday, according to the Kyodo News Service. "And the possibility cannot be denied that sarin is still being stored."

More than a month after the attack, police are still looking for Shoko Asahara, the cult's self-proclaimed messiah and guru.

Police searched for a third day Friday at a cult commune for a trap door that might lead them to Asahara.

When thousands of police raided cult facilities two days after the subway gassing, the cult's leaders had already vanished, along with carloads of important documents and other potential evidence.

Officials began searching for an informant shortly afterward, when a cult magazine carried an article containing information only an active-duty soldier could have provided, they said.

The Defense Agency said the two sergeants leaked word to cult members that 400 airborne troops were mobilizing in advance of the March 22 police raids, officials said.

Sgt. Takahisa Shirai, 25, was expelled from the army for the firebomb attack on the cult headquarters and arrested on a related charge, officials said. The other informant, Sgt. Shinya Asano, 26, resigned, and it was unclear if police planned to arrest him.

Friday's actions against the two may not end the military's troubles. According to several Japanese media reports, the cult has more than 50 active or retired military personnel among its ranks.

Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama went on national television Friday to try to assure Japanese they could feel safe during the coming holiday week and to announce that 60,000 police will be on special duty.

"We have come to the final stages of the investigation," he said. "We are taking the utmost security measures."

Vatican library starts transferral of manuscripts onto database

By Daniel J. Wakin
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — In the musty, hushed corridors of the Vatican Library, the light of technology is shining on ancient parchment.

The library, founded in 1451, has embarked on a pilot project with IBM to scan some of its priceless manuscripts for storage in a computer database. The ancient pages can be downloaded in seconds to a scholar with a personal computer.

The library's riches include 4th and 5th century manuscripts of the works of Virgil — the oldest surviving manuscripts of the Roman poet; the oldest Bible manuscript, written in 350 A.D. in Constantinople; and Ptolemy's Geography, dating back five centuries.

All told 150,000 manuscripts and 1.5 million books inhabit the shelves of the Biblioteca Apostolica — visited by barely 2,000 scholars a year.

'The Vatican library is a repository of learning, and the more it can be made available to the public, the better.'
— the Rev. Leonard Boyle, scholar

Digital copying will save scholars the time and expense of travelling to Rome, said library prefect the Rev. Leonard Boyle.

"The Vatican library is a repository of learning, and the more it can be made available to the public, the better," said Boyle, a scholar with a doctorate from Oxford University in paleography — the study of manuscripts.

A few steps from the 6-inch steel door protecting the manuscripts, technicians are scanning pages of medieval printing and vivid illumination. It takes about four minutes to copy a page that a scribe spent most of the day to create.

One of the scholars taking part in the project, Renaissance historian Anthony Grafton of Princeton University, said there aren't yet enough manuscripts in the system to make it valuable for research.

But he praised the results so far and called it a "great teaching tool."

If the Vatican decides to go forward, the next step would be to scan a much larger batch of pages, said Fabio Schiattarella, the IBM expert supervising the project.

Other question marks are how to pay for the service — by image, by time, by subscription, for example, who would have access and how the images would be made available.

Boyle acknowledges that nothing can replace the feel, the smell, of parchment. Computer images won't reveal what kind of parchment is used or the ruling on it, important for dating texts.

"A manuscript is unique. It was written by people who breathed on it, who scribbled in the margins, who tested their pen to see if it was sharp," Boyle said.

Many Protestant churches experience power shift from headquarters to local leadership

By Gustav Niebuhr
N.Y. Times News Service

Guided by the conviction that churches must change their cultural styles to reach out to contemporary American society, some of the largest megachurches are writing their own music, publishing their own religious education books and holding training conferences for pastors of smaller churches who want to learn their techniques.

Among America's Protestant churches, a shift of power and influence is under way that is slowly, but profoundly, changing the way in which an increasing number of the nation's 80 million Protestants worship.

For decades, church pastors — Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Southern Baptists and others — looked to their denominations' headquarters for leadership and the basics of Sunday worship. Whether in upper Manhattan or downtown Nashville, those headquarters provided hymnbooks, Sunday school curriculums, blueprints for church buildings and ideas for services.

But since the 1980s, megachurches have gathered tens of thousands of worshipers into their folds and millions of dollars onto their collection plates, becoming in the process competitive new centers of religious influence in the world of Protestantism.

Guided by the conviction that churches must change their cultural styles to reach out to contemporary American society, some of the largest megachurches are writing their own music, publishing their own religious education books and holding training conferences for pastors of smaller churches who want to learn their techniques. Lately, they have formed networks of smaller churches, insuring that their operating principles will filter down to local congregations nationwide.

"It's revolutionary," said the Rev. Lyle Schaller, a United Methodist minister and nationally known parish consultant. "We were trained since the Civil War to look to denominational headquarters for help." Now, he said, "the model of how you do church is coming out of the megachurches."

Megachurches even pose a challenge to seminaries in that many train lay people to be ministers at all levels of congregational life. "These megachurches are becoming teaching churches, just as you have teaching hospitals," said Leonard I. Sweet, chancellor of United Theological Seminary in Dayton, Ohio.

They are "mini-denominations," said Bill Leonard, chairman of the religion department at Samford University in Birmingham, Ala.

The rise of the megachurch comes at a telling moment — what some call a "post-denominational" era, when the influence of many Protestant denominations in America is falling, the result of stagnant membership and declining donations to the churches' headquarters.

Some scholars hail the megachurch movement as evidence of American religious vitality, of Christianity reinventing itself to engage secular society. But others worry that the movement offers more technique than substance, and risks presenting a shallow version of the faith.

One of the most influential of the behemoths is Willow Creek Community Church in South Barrington, Ill., a 20-year-old independent congregation about 40 miles northwest of Chicago. Its distinctly nontraditional services target "seekers," the spiritually searching but unaffiliated. Worship at Willow Creek features amplified pop-style music and dramas acted by well-rehearsed church staff members. More than 15,000 people attend weekly.

About four years ago, the Rev. Roger Kok, a pastor in Grand Rapids, Mich., became one of the many ministers who decided to have a look at Willow Creek. He returned to change Sunday mornings in his Shawnee Park Christian Reformed Church.

These days the church has a traditional service at 9:15 a.m. But two hours later, it holds worship that "basically clones Willow Creek," Kok said, with Christian rock music, dramas and sermons like a series started on Sunday on how to resist temptation, overcome loneliness, get out of a rut and (for Mother's Day) be a good mother.

With about 150 people at the new service, Sunday attendance is up one-third, to 600. "The response has really been terrific," Kok said.

Megachurches are influencing new congregations as well — like the Lutheran couple who recently started a church in rented space in Rochester, Minn.

The two ordained pastors, Mary and Gary Dreier, consider themselves missionaries to secular society. When preaching, she wears a jacket and dress pants, not a robe. Rather than hymnbooks, the worshipers use new and traditional music, often chosen by church members.

"I try to avoid the term 'user-friendly,' but it does fit in some ways," Mrs. Dreier said. "Our informality is an invitation on behalf of Jesus."

When it came to choosing the church's name, the Dreiers let public opinion decide, stopping about 200 people on the street and asking them to choose among five alternatives. The winner: People of Hope.

MC inducts about 170 students into Abell-Hanger Society

From Staff Reports

About 170 students were inducted into Midland College's Abell-Hanger Society Friday night. The students were honored during the college's "Celebration of Volunteerism" event at the Chaparral Center.

Students qualify for induction into the society by completing 24 semester hours with a minimum of a "C" average. They must also complete 40 hours of volunteer service. Students inducted received an emerald and gold pin, and a certificate.

Guest speakers at the induction ceremony were Pat and Joan Baskin.

MC President David E. Daniel said, "We would like to celebrate volunteerism and the Abell-Hanger Foundation's unique contributions to the entire community as well as the achievements of Midland College students."

Many Midland students have benefitted from the Abell-Hanger Scholarship. At one time it was offered to all local high school graduates. Now the scholarship is limited and, in 1993, the Abell-Hanger Foundation began requiring students on the scholarship to complete community service hours.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation has assisted in paying for tuition and books for almost 4,000 local high school graduates since 1986. Since 1993, when community service hours were required, Midland College students have completed more than 14,000 volunteer hours with more than 40 community agencies.

On Friday night five Midland College students were named winners in the Abell-Hanger essay contest. Carolyn Broome, Roxanne Furrow, Andrea Houghton, Melissa Kleinhans and Lei-Lani Wood each received $500 scholarships for their winning essays on their experiences in performing community service.

Midland College President David E. Daniel spoke at Friday night's ceremony at which students were inducted into the Abell-Hanger Society.

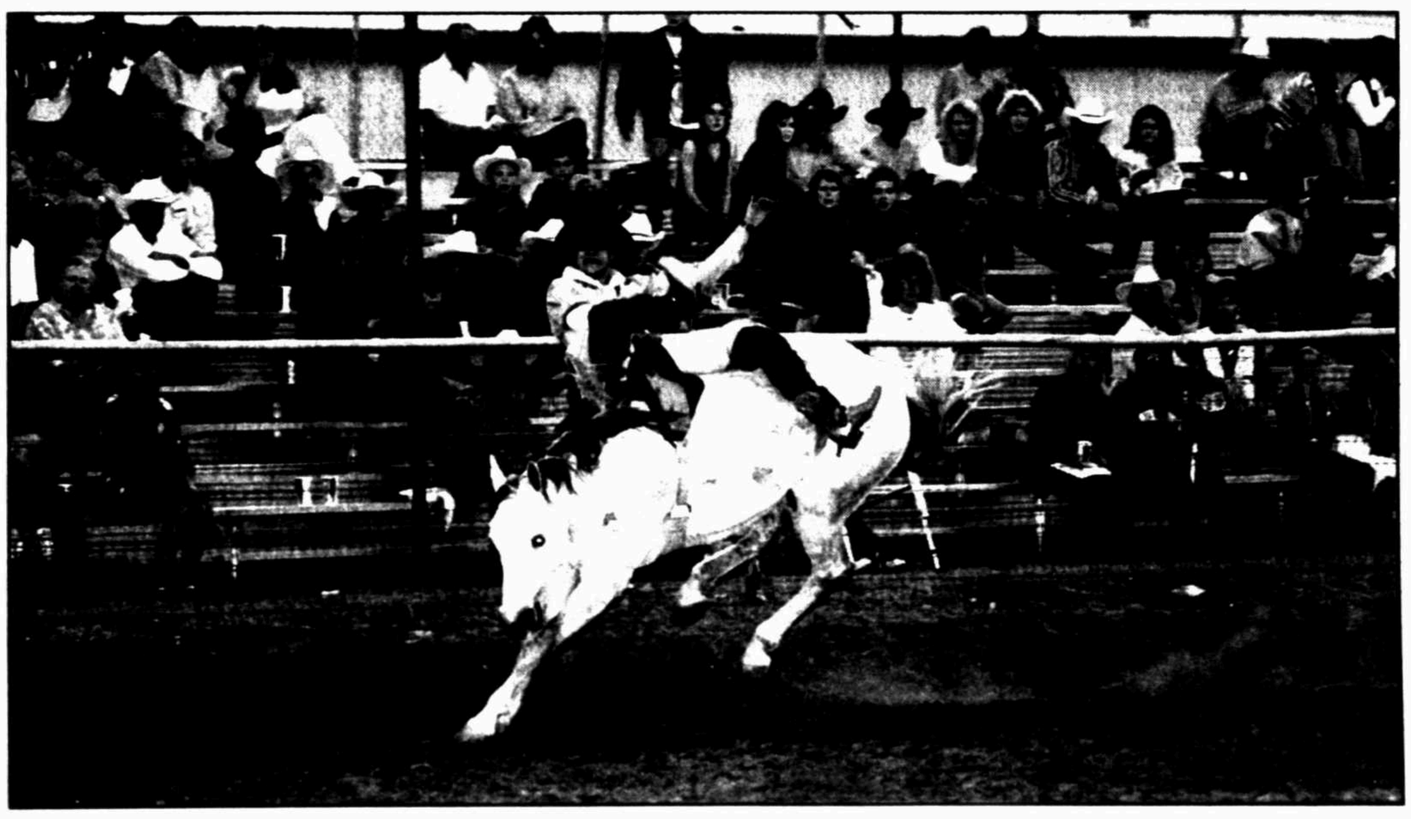

Abell-Hanger Society 1995 honorees are:

Officials clear federal building; bomb squad inspects vehicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Police briefly evacuated a downtown federal building and closed streets for blocks around Friday while a bomb squad inspected a suspicious-looking vehicle later found to pose no danger.

The building was reopened less than an hour after authorities were called to the scene. Police towed away the vehicle, parked on the street just behind the federal building.

FBI spokesman Jim Conway said authorities were notified about the suspicious vehicle, a blue Ford Bronco, about 2:30 p.m. The Bronco was left with its two front doors open in a row of official vehicles.

Conway said building security officers saw a man getting out of the car and approached him, but the man ran away. The evacuation was ordered after the officers spotted a box draped with an American flag in the vehicle.

Police cordoned off streets for several blocks around until the bomb squad determined the box contained a stereo speaker.

The Bronco's driver was apprehended later, but it wasn't immediately clear what he told officers about his car or why he ran, Conway said.

Houston police spokesman Alvin Wright said the department was taking extra precautions in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing.

The building that was evacuated, near Houston City Hall, houses mostly federal courtrooms and clerks' offices. It's one of two major federal office buildings in downtown Houston.

The Nation in brief

■ Fire forces evacuation of Boston City Hall

BOSTON — City Hall was evacuated Friday after an electrical fire spread acrid fumes through the building, sending 20 people to the hospital.

Some employees ordered out of the building had to use cigarette lighters to see in stairwells darkened when the electricity went out and some emergency lights failed.

The fire closed down several major streets at the peak of rush hour, tangling traffic throughout downtown.

The blaze began when an electrical transformer on the second floor short-circuited, cutting power, Fire Chief Martin Pierce said.

The 20 people were treated at the hospital for smoke inhalation. Fifteen others were treated at the scene.

■ Science fair explosion injures students

SIDNEY, Ohio — A glass bottle of alcohol exploded during a science fair demonstration Friday, injuring more than 20 elementary and high school students.

Two high school students were conducting a demonstration in front of a group of fourth graders in the Sidney High School gymnasium, about 30 miles north of Dayton, said Bob Brazel, assistant principal.

"The bottle shattered and some of the pieces of broken glass cut some students," Brazel said.

The fourth graders from Whittier Elementary School were sitting about 25 feet away from the demonstration, he said.

A small plastic shield separated most of the youngsters from the explosion, but glass ricocheted off a wall and struck some of them.

Twenty-two students were treated at a hospital, officials said. None of the injuries were serious. The two high school students had leg and arm cuts.

■ Robbery suspect chokes on stolen money

BUFFALO, N.Y. — A robbery suspect who tried to swallow some incriminating evidence choked to death on a $50 bill.

The man collapsed in the back seat of a patrol car Thursday about an hour after he was caught in a robbery, police said.

Before collapsing, the robber complained of asthma. He was taken to the hospital, where he died.

An autopsy Friday found the cause of death to be accidental due to asphyxiation.

"He ingested a $50 bill that was taken from the victim," Lt. William Conwall said. "The bill apparently lodged in his throat, causing him to suffocate."

The robber, who wasn't identified, attacked a woman in a supermarket parking lot, authorities said.

■ Students go on rampage after frat party

OSHKOSH, Wis. — A student rampage that caused an estimated $100,000 in damage began as a demonstration against drinking laws after about 170 underage drinkers were cited at a frat house beer party.

About 1,000 University of Wisconsin students marched several blocks early Friday, some smashing windows, tearing down traffic lights and rocking parked cars, police said.

"We were pelted with everything from rocks to bottles," Lt. David Rapp said. "They were throwing stuff out the dorms at us."

Police in riot gear quelled the disturbance within an hour and made 18 arrests, Capt. Randy Van Ness said.

Nature therapy can reach troubled children, expert says

By Anne Thompson
Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — He's 11 years old, locked in a psychiatric unit for two weeks at a stretch. His face is tense, with dark circles under angry eyes.

A therapist brings out a rabbit. "Oooh. I want to hold him," the boy says, his face softening just a little. He strokes the rabbit's ears. Kisses its forehead.

The interaction was arranged by therapist Rebecca Reynolds, who has just written a book about the benefits of bringing animals, plants and other bits of nature into institutions ranging from mental hospitals to schools for the handicapped.

Animals can reach troubled people in ways that doctors can't, she says.

In the locked psychiatric ward of Cambridge City Hospital, therapists pass around plants, rocks and seashells so the 15 children can touch and smell them.

Slowly, Reynolds brings out two collies. Next comes the rabbit and a dove. The program ends with Reynolds showing them a hawk with a deformed wing that keeps it grounded.

Children, she says, are fascinated by the hawk because of its wildness.

"We all recognize wildness," Reynolds says. "Particularly in a psychiatric ward, where the children are here because of violence. It's really the kids learning about themselves through the animals."

Using plants and animals as therapy is not new. At McLean Hospital in Belmont, doctors bring dogs and cats to elderly patients with psychiatric disorders. McLean has a greenhouse for schizophrenic and manic depressive patients who are learning to live outside the hospital.

"Just being in contact with nature is very relaxing. And when we're put in contact with the process of helping things grow, it really connects with our own process of growth and change," says Joanne Keir, a counselor who runs McLean's greenhouse.

Reynolds, 32, describes her technique in her recently published book "Bring Me the Ocean." The title comes from her experience of bringing buckets of sea water to a paralyzed man who could not speak. When he saw the water, he used letters to spell out for his doctors that he was once a lobsterman.

At the Cambridge hospital, the youngsters are aggressive and depressed. Some are homicidal and prone to set fires. Doctors say if the children can be gentle with animals, they can learn to behave better with people. Animals also can give them an outlet for talking about their problems.

Dr. Nancy Rappaport, a child psychiatrist, tells of a 15-year-old boy in the unit who had spent time petting some dogs. Afterward, he reminisced about his family once picking out a dog from the pound.

"By talking about the dog, he could be talking about his own feelings of rejection or about his family," she says.

Kids stay on the Cambridge hospital's locked ward for two weeks at a time, sent there by parents, schools or social workers. Afterward, they go home or to other hospitals or special schools. A few come back for a second or third time.

"Everything's locked," says counselor Ed Santana, jiggling the handles of the toy closet and the laundry room. "They need intense supervision. There's laundry detergent in here, they may try to ingest it."

Station takes Koernke off the air

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The right-wing Michigan militia leader who has played a bit part in news stories about the Oklahoma City bombing was taken off the air Friday by the shortwave station that broadcast his speeches.

"We've got to get the gasoline off the fires," said George McClintock, general manager of World Wide Christian Radio, which aired Mark Koernke's "The Intelligence Report" five days a week on air time purchased by Viking International Trading.

He said the show would be off the air indefinitely.

Koernke, 37, was drawn into the Oklahoma case when an assistant faxed a document to a Texas congressman that appeared to have described the bombing before it happened.

Government can't require corn additive in gasoline, ruling says

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a blow to farmers, a federal appeals court ruled Friday that the government can't require corn-based ethanol as an additive in a cleaner-burning gasoline now sold in 17 states.

The cleaner, reformulated gasoline has been on the market since January under an Environmental Protection Agency directive to help reduce smog-causing pollution from motor vehicles.

The gasoline burns cleaner and emits 20 percent less pollution because of higher levels of oxygen. But there has been a bitter dispute over what kind of oxygen additive should be used — ethanol from corn or the petroleum-based methanol derivative MTBE.

At stake are hundreds of billions of dollars.

Agriculture groups estimate that a 30 percent market share of the oxygen additive — as the EPA had sought to impose — would require 650 million gallons of ethanol a year with revenue to farmers and related industries of as much as $1.5 billion annually.

The EPA had wanted to assure that ethanol, an environmentally friendly and renewable product, be allowed a substantial market share even though refiners generally favor the petroleum-based MTBE. The EPA rule issued last year would require ethanol to be at least 30 percent of the oxygenate.

But the U.S. Court of Appeals, which last September put a temporary hold on the EPA's ethanol mandate, ruled Friday that the agency had gone beyond its authority in setting a minimum market share for ethanol.

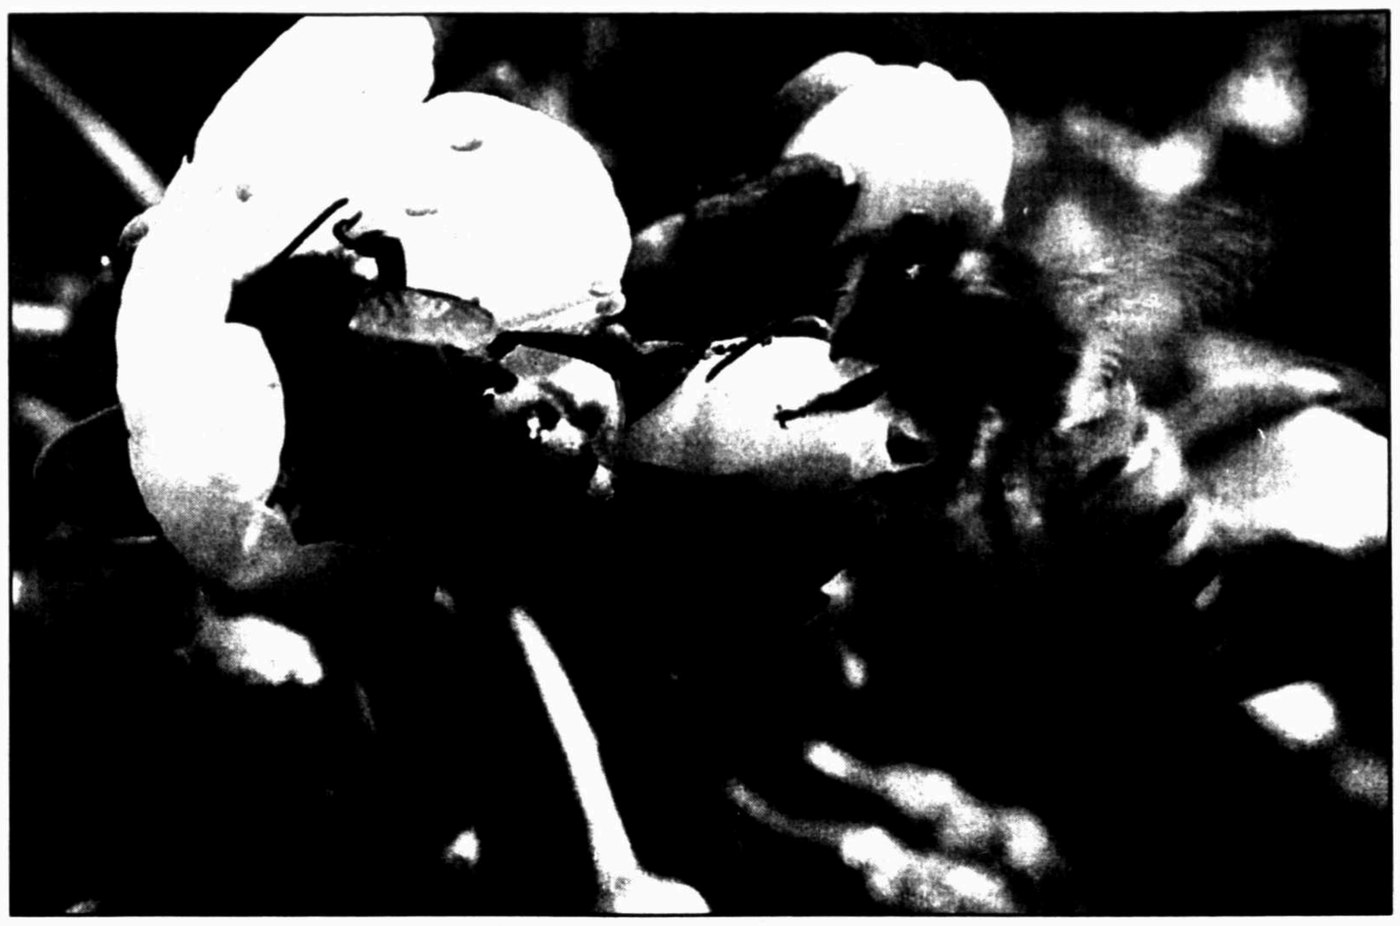

The three-judge panel concluded that while the EPA had "the authority to set a standard" for cleaner gasoline under the 1990 Clean Air Act, it could not "mandate the manner of compliance or the precise formula" for the fuel.

The ruling was in response to a lawsuit filed by the petroleum industry, which had argued that the Clinton administration had bowed to political pressures from farm states to promote the ethanol industry while providing no additional environmental benefits. Ethanol, the suit argued, also is more expensive because of higher transportation costs.

EPA Administrator Carol Browner said in a statement that she was disappointed by the court decision. "Renewable energy sources like ethanol offer important environmental benefits," said Browner. She said no decision had been made on whether to appeal to the Supreme Court, but legal experts said an appeal is unlikely.

Farm and ethanol industry groups said the decision would not mean an end to ethanol as a gasoline additive. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said the administration planned to examine whether the farm bill in Congress might be used to help the ethanol industry.

Even without the EPA's mandate, "ethanol marketshare has significantly increased ... and has created a choice for consumers unhappy with MTBE," said Eric Vaughn, president of the Renewable Fuels Association, an ethanol trade group. He said ethanol is used in about 11 percent of the nation's fuel, both reformulated gasoline and as motor fuel used in farm regions.

Foster hearing hinges on three votes, some say

By Nita Lelyveld
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General nominee Henry Foster's fate could hinge on three Republican senators in next week's confirmation hearing — Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, James Jeffords of Vermont and fellow doctor and Tennessean Bill Frist.

Even if they support him, pressures from presidential politics and abortion-related interest groups promise a tough battle in the full Senate for the Nashville obstetrician-gynecologist and educator.

"Even if the nomination gets through committee, there will be holds placed on the floor," said Kassebaum, the chairwoman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, which will hold its hearing Tuesday.

"It can go on for months. It certainly has an uncertain future at this point," she said.

Two GOP presidential contenders, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, separately threaten to block Foster's way.

But approval from the committee's nine Republicans and seven Democrats would carry weight.

Jeffords, who often votes with Democrats, is probably the most likely Foster supporter.

"I like him. I think he's a dedicated servant," Jeffords said.

But, like many, the Vermont Republican has a reservation about Foster's credibility. That goes back to the White House saying first that Foster performed one, then fewer than 12, and finally 39 abortions.

The differing numbers make some supporters jumpy. More significantly, they give lawmakers a way to oppose Foster without focusing on the volatile abortion issue itself.

Take Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., a conservative committee member who did not support former Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, and who opposes abortion.

"I am one who feels that the position of surgeon general is an important position and needs to occupied by one who enjoys the same level of trust and degree of candor that a family doctor does," said Coats. "Because in a sense, he's the nation's doctor."

Or Republican Sen. Mike DeWine of Ohio. He's a solid abortion opponent but says abortion is not the key issue.

Of the job of surgeon general, DeWine says: "The person who occupies that position has to have a great deal of credibility."

Kassebaum does not oppose abortion. But she has unique pressures — as only the second woman to head a committee in the Senate's history and as Dole's fellow Kansan.

"I think it's unfortunate he has been placed in a very difficult position and has somewhat become a pawn in the abortion debate, and is being used by both sides," she said of Foster. "That shouldn't be a litmus test, but it is, and it has become an important part of the hearing."

But she added: "I think the question will be his own ability to serve with the credibility and the commitment to address public health issues, and what he determines as public health issues."

Frist, too, is leaving his options open.

On the one hand, the cardiologist says: "I certainly come to the table wanting to support Dr. Foster as a Tennessean and a physician."

On the other hand, the freshman senator — who must feel the dangers of breaking party ranks — says, "Credibility will be an issue."

Foster's backers next week will surround him with former students and patients who can talk about his talents as doctor and teacher. They say all the talk about credibility is just a front.

Old flames rekindled give people more satisfaction, professor says

By John Howard
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Apparently it is better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all. Especially if you hook up later with your old flame.

Old flames burn the hottest, says Nancy Kalish, a Sacramento State University psychology professor who has been studying long lost lovers.

People who years later rekindle romances with lost loves often experience the most intense emotional satisfaction of their lives, she said.

And most of those in renewed love relationships become permanent partners, despite separations of decades, changes in appearance and even years of marriage to others.

"These people are romantic and they are risk-takers. They talk about finding their soul mates, they talk about finding the love of their lives," Kalish said.

Kalish calls her preliminary, informal study the Lost Love Project.

She developed a questionnaire and solicited replies from second-time-around couples through conventional media, computer networks and elsewhere. So far, she has comments from more than 60 people, ranging from 20 to 83 years of age.

Gunman opens fire, kills 3 at Colorado supermarket

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — A gunman possibly distraught over marital problems opened fire at a supermarket Friday and killed three people, including his wife and a sheriff's sergeant, authorities said. One person was wounded.

A construction worker tackled the gunman outside the store and helped Jefferson County sheriff's deputies subdue him.

Albert L. Petrosky, 35, was being held at the Jefferson County Jail for investigation of first-degree murder and assault.

The gunman, wearing a bullet-proof jacket or vest, walked into an Albertson's store in this Denver suburb during the morning with a pistol, an assault rifle equipped with a bipod and a rifle fitted with a telescopic sight, Undersheriff Doug Matthews said.

"He fatally shot his 37-year-old wife, Terry, who managed the store's deli, and store manager Dan Suazo, 39. He then walked outside and fired randomly, hitting a woman in the leg.

"The gunman next turned his weapons on Sgt. Timothy Mossbrucker, 36, who was getting out of his patrol car, killing him with shots in the chest, face and abdomen, Matthews said.

The wounded woman, Misty Hudnall, 23, was treated at a hospital and released.

"People were screaming and yelling and they were crouched down," witness Kelly McCormick said.

"It was just a very frightening scene," said John O'Hanesian, who lives behind the Albertson's. "I could see people running in every direction."

About 30 employees and 15 customers were in the store at the time, Albertson's spokesman Michael Read said. Some of the employees were in a back room having a birthday party.

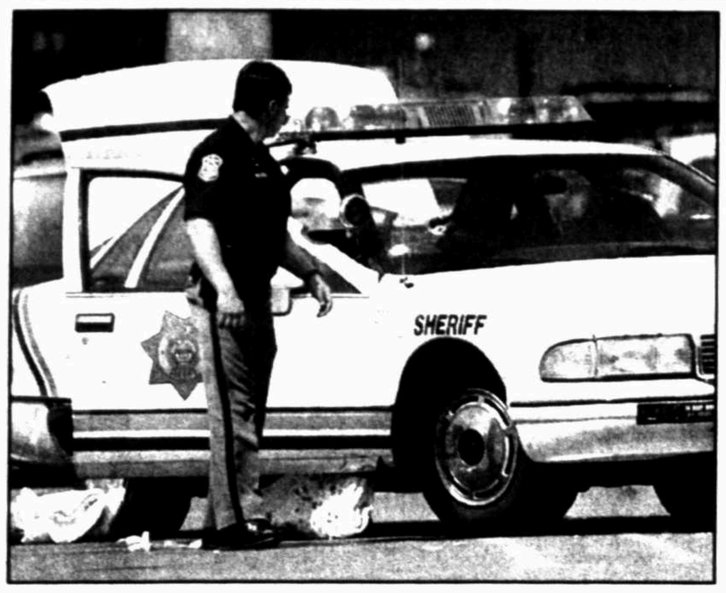

The shootings may have stemmed from domestic problems between Petrosky and his wife, authorities said.

She had obtained a restraining order against her husband on Monday after telling a Denver County judge that Petrosky verbally and physically abused her, authorities said. The restraining order directed Petrosky to stay 100 yards away from his wife and their 8-year-old son.

Store workers said Petrosky had threatened his wife in a telephone call to the store Thursday night.

"He said he was going to kill her," Shannon Cousing said.

Outside the store, witnesses said iron worker Kairk Billings ran up behind the gunman and knocked him to the ground as the man was on his knees firing. Billings then helped deputies subdue the gunman, witnesses said.

Mormons promise to stop posthumous baptism of Jewish Holocaust victims

N.Y. Times News Service

Ernest W. Michel, a survivor of the Holocaust, said that until last summer, he was unaware of a practice within the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in which dead people are baptized as Mormons by living church members who stand in as their proxies.

That changed when Michel, chairman of the World Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors in 1981, discovered that his parents and several other family members, who had died in Nazi concentration camps, had been so baptized in ceremonies many years after their deaths. The discovery led to a formal complaint last November by the American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors, an organization of about 100,000 members of which Michel is a founder.

Friday, Mormon authorities said they would reissue a four-year-old order prohibiting church members from including Jewish Holocaust victims in baptismal ceremonies. In addition, the church agreed to seek out and remove the names of an estimated 380,000 Jewish Holocaust victims for whom such ceremonies have been performed from its International Genealogical Index, which lists 147 million names.

Posthumous baptism by proxy of Jewish Holocaust victims who are not ancestors of living church members is "counter to our doctrine," said Elder Monte J. Brough, a member of the church's Presidency of the Seventy, one of its top executive bodies. Brough said that church authorities issued an order against it in March 1991, when they learned that it was occurring, but that some members continued the practice.

Economic growth slows because of consumer spending decrease

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp downshift in consumer spending, particularly on interest-sensitive big-ticket items, slowed the economy dramatically this winter to its lowest growth rate since mid-1993.

The Commerce Department said Friday that gross domestic product, the government's broadest measure of economic activity, expanded at a 2.8 percent annual rate in the first three months of the year. That amounted to little more than half the booming 5.1 percent surge in the last quarter of 1994.

GDP increased 4.1 percent for all of last year — the economy's strongest showing in a decade.

While some analysts fretted about a growing threat of a recession, many said the economy is strong and even predicted it will regain momentum later this year.

"Jobs and incomes are rising. Consumer confidence is high," said economist Eugene Sherman of the Wall Street investment firm M.A. Schapiro & Co. "I'm very confident there will be a snapback in consumer spending this spring."

GDP, the value of all goods and services produced in the United States, increased $37.9 billion at an annual rate in January through March. That compares to a $66.8 billion increase in the final three months of 1994.

The government's initial look at first-quarter growth fell a little shy of analysts' expectations. They credited seven interest rate hikes by the Federal Reserve since February 1994 for the downturn.

But there was a wide divergence of predictions for the rest of the year.

"The risk of a recession is growing. I think the Fed overdid it," said Lawrence Chimerine of the Economic Strategy Institute, a think tank in Washington.

Others said there is little cause for concern.

"There was a significant slowing from the overheated pace of the fourth quarter. We're not worried," said Cynthia Latta of DRI-McGraw Hill in Lexington, Mass., a forecasting service. But she said a mild increase in inflation could trouble investors.

The Commerce Department said one measure of inflation tied to GDP rose 2.8 percent in the first quarter, up from 2.6 percent the previous three months.

Additional signs of a possible consumer bounceback were provided by the widely followed Chicago Purchasing Agents report, which showed greater-than-expected strength.

Financial markets, concerned that more rapid growth could mean higher inflation, were lower in early trading but recovered to close with a modest gain. The Dow Jones industrial average posted its third record high this week, climbing 6.57 points to 4,321.27.

The Clinton administration hailed the GDP report. "The economy is moving to a more sustainable long-term growth path," said Commerce Secretary Ron Brown.

Growth in consumer spending in the January-March quarter, accounting for about two-thirds of GDP, was about one-fourth what it was the previous three months as the housing market and car sales tailed off sharply.

All final sales, including consumer spending, net exports and government purchases, climbed a mere 1.8 percent compared to 5.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1994.

Vitamin C vs. asthma

Does too little vitamin C make for too much asthma? There's mounting evidence that vitamin C may protect against the wheezing, chest tightness and recurrent coughing known as asthma, says Gary E. Hatch of the Environmental Protection Agency.
In a recent review of the evidence, Dr. Hatch notes that vitamin C is the main antioxidant in the fluid lining of the lung, thus the main protector against free radical chemicals, such as air pollutants that worsen asthma symptoms. One study shows that Americans who eat foods low in vitamin C tend to have increased symptoms of bronchitis and wheezing and decreased pulmonary function. Asthmatic children and adults have abnormally low vitamin C — about half as much of the vitamin in their blood as non-asthmatics. At least seven studies have shown that taking 1,000 to 2,000 milligrams of vitamin C improved breathing in those with asthma.
The message: If you have asthma, get lots of vitamin C.

Herb-tea alternative

If you have a tendency to form kidney stones, drinking ordinary black and green tea may not be a good idea. Such tea is high in oxalate, which can increase oxalate in the urine, promoting formation of kidney stones in those who are prone to them, said Donald W. McKay and colleagues at Memorial University in Newfoundland. The alternative? Herbal teas, which are very low in oxalates, according to his new tests. Dr. McKay analyzed the oxalate content of 14 popular herbal teas, as well as coffee and black and green tea. He found that most herbal teas have from seven to 32 times less oxalate than black tea. For example, one cup of herbal peppermint tea had 1.7 milligrams of oxalate compared with 20.8 milligrams of oxalate in a cup of black tea steeped five minutes.
Steeping black tea for only a minute cut the oxalate to only 10.8 milligrams per cup. But if you vigorously stir the tea, you get about the same oxalate as if the tea were steeped five minutes. Green tea contained about one-third as much oxalate as black tea. Coffee had about the same low oxalate as herbal teas.

Apple or grape juice?

Parents' alert! Infants and toddlers are three times more likely to have trouble absorbing the sugar in apple juice as in grape juice. Thus, young apple-juice drinkers are more prone to tummy aches and other gastrointestinal problems than grape-juice drinkers are. So found a recent study by Melanie M. Smith of the Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn. Specifically, 54 percent of the 18 infants and 10 toddlers tested showed malabsorption reactions after drinking apple juice, compared with only 19 percent of the children given white grape juice. The apple-juice makers were upset because the study was funded by Welch Foods, Inc., which makes grape juice. However, previous studies have found that apple juice in particular is hard for young stomachs to digest. A committee of pediatric professors a few years ago designated another juice as safest — least likely to cause chronic diarrhea in an infant or toddler. It's orange juice.

Best fast-food bites

Yes, you can get a decent meal at a fast-food restaurant. So says the Center for Science in the Public Interest, the same group that does those analyses of fat in ethnic-restaurant foods.
Here are some of the "best bites" in fast-food, according to CSPI:
■ McDonald's McGrilled Chicken Classic, which has much less fat than Burger King BK Broiler Chicken Sandwich. Burger King recently switched from a light mayo dressing to a full-fat one, raising the fat to 29 grams.
■ Rax Cheese-Broccoli Baked Potato. Rax uses a cheese-flavored sauce instead of real cheese, keeping the fat to zero. Wendy's Cheese-Broccoli Potatoes have 14 grams of fat and Arby's, 16 fat grams.
■ Chick-fil-A Grilled 'n Lites (2 grams of fat).

After the disaster comes the trauma

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

The wounds from the Oklahoma City bombing last week are far more than physical ones, for the minds of many of the people directly and indirectly involved have suffered damage that can linger long after injuries to the body heal.

Those who escaped harm and those who took part in rescue and recovery efforts may be as severely affected emotionally as the surviving victims and the families of the dead and injured.

Experts say witnesses to death and destruction, such as rescuers at a disaster site like the federal building in Oklahoma City, are especially vulnerable to lasting emotional injury when children are harmed and the element of horror is pronounced.

The wound is called post-traumatic stress disorder, but long before 1980, when it first received official psychiatric recognition, it was known as battle fatigue, shell shock or war neurosis.

Pressure from veterans of the Vietnam War, in which as many as 800,000 service men and women were left with severe emotional scars, finally led the psychiatric profession to include the disorder in its official diagnostic manual.

IN THE YEARS since, therapists have come to realize just how widespread and potentially crippling the disorder can be. It can affect not only those who narrowly escape death in accidents, assaults and natural disasters but also those who witness accidents, those who try to save victims and those whose family members or close friends are involved in fatal or potentially fatal episodes or who develop a life-threatening disease.

Dr. Richard D. Allen, director of the Counseling Center at the University of California at Santa Cruz, an editor of the "Handbook of Post-Disaster Interventions," says the best way to protect against post-traumatic stress disorder is to set up professionally run debriefing sessions immediately after the incident to allow people to talk about their feelings and to understand that acute stress reactions like flashbacks, nightmares and suddenly being overwhelmed by feelings are "normal reactions to an abnormal event."

Allen said people were often empowered by such debriefing sessions, emerging with an ability to initiate activities that once more give them a sense of usefulness and control over their lives.

Without intervention, post-traumatic stress disorder can have devastating, long-lasting and even life-long consequences.

AMONG THE common symptoms are nightmares and insomnia, anxiety or panic attacks, sudden vivid memories so strong that the person thinks the incident is happening again, outbursts of irritability or explosive anger and avoidance of any place or thing or person that is a reminder of the traumatic event. Other symptoms are persistent depression because of an inability to come to terms with the impact of the trauma, self-medication with alcohol or drugs to counter distressing feelings, and thoughts and guilt over having survived when others died.

Perhaps the most perplexing symptom to relatives and friends is emotional numbness: a withdrawal of affection and avoidance of close emotional ties with family members, friends and colleagues, the very people who can best help to ease the pain.

Other common aftermaths include being always on guard for danger and being very easily startled. Another common symptom is panic attack in which the throat tightens, the heart races, the breathing rate rises and nausea and dizziness occur.

SYMPTOMS OF post-traumatic stress disorder can start weeks, months, even years after the upsetting event. Sometimes they emerge only after a second relatively innocuous incident that reminds the person of a previous, more traumatic event. That is believed to be the case with some people who were physically or sexually abused as children and whose feelings had been suppressed until a trauma in adult life brought them to the fore. When symptoms of the disorder occur long after the traumatic event, people often fail to recognize the connection, which can seriously delay the diagnosis and result in futile doctor-hopping

Many traumatic situations can set off the disorder. Among them are being

Vitamin E may provide protection from disease

By Jean Carper
Associated Press

What can you expect from taking vitamin E? Definite immune-system and heart benefits and maybe a little protection from cancer. That's what a majority of studies suggest so far, according to a recent review of the evidence by Moshen Meydani, Ph.D., a vitamin-E investigator at Tufts University.

Specifically, he notes, taking at least 100 IU (international units) of vitamin E for two years reduced the risk of major heart disease in both middle-aged women and men. Further, a new study has found that giving heart-attack patients a daily dose of 325 milligrams of aspirin plus 400 IU of vitamin E was better at reducing future heart attacks and deaths than standard aspirin alone. One probable reason: Vitamin E reduces blood platelet "stickiness" that can lead to artery-clogging and clots.

Solid research also finds that both 800 IU and 400 IU of vitamin E boosts immune responses, particularly in older people. Theoretically, vitamin E should protect against cancer and it does in laboratory animals, but human studies find questionable benefit.

It's nearly impossible to get protective doses of vitamin E from food alone. Dr. Meydani takes 400 IU of vitamin E daily.

Citrus fruits found to be good sources of dietary fiber

By Jean Carper
Associated Press

When you think of fiber, you may think of bran cereals, whole-grain bread, vegetables and beans, but chances are, you don't think of oranges and grapefruit. Yet these citrus fruits are super sources of fiber, says Dr. Oliver Alabaster, director of the Institute of Disease Prevention at George Washington University.

In fact, half a grapefruit or one orange contains 5 grams of fiber. According to one calculation, you get just as much fiber in one medium orange or half a grapefruit as you get in a raw vegetable salad made with one-sixth of a head of lettuce, a medium tomato, one-third of a cucumber, seven radishes, five medium mushrooms, one-quarter cup chopped green onions and half a medium carrot.

Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the El Paso City/County Health and Environmental District, examines a young patient at a county-run clinic in El Paso. Although his duties are mostly administrative, the pediatrician uses his medical background to help out and give medical advice to his staff.

'Health warrior' battles border illness

By Lydia Villalva Lijo
Associated Press

EL PASO — Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the city-county health district, is El Paso's health warrior. Lately, his battles have received national recognition.

Since becoming the area's top public health official in 1983, Nickey has fixed his attention on public health threats that would make even a dedicated soldier flinch: tuberculosis, cholera, polio, actual and suspected cases of botulism, rabies and deadly amoebas in the Rio Grande.

One of Nickey's top-priority crusades is to strengthen El Paso's smoking ordinance. Given the health problems found along the border that El Paso shares with Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, Nickey remains cool in the heat of battle and optimistic that the war will be won.

"You deal with them because they're there," said Nickey of the daunting job he has faced for 12 years. "If we can get a man on the moon and bring him back, we can do anything we set our minds to do.

"You have got to have a positive attitude. You do not give up. You keep working at it if it's for the good of the whole."

Earlier this year, Nickey was one of eight doctors nationwide to receive the American Medical Association's Dr. Nathan Davis Award, which recognizes public-service officials who have been outstanding in their efforts to promote health. Nickey was named a career public servant by the AMA.

Roy Pfautch, director of the medical association's awards secretariat, said Nickey stood out on several levels: his accomplishments, his nomination by three independent organizations — which Pfautch said was very unusual — and the number of highly regarded medical professionals who endorsed the nomination.

"He seemed to us to typify the ideal public servant," Pfautch said. "We were just awed by him."

By turns relaxed, then dramatic, Nickey's high-profile job keeps him in the public eye. In the current debate over whether the city's smoking ordinance should be tightened, Nickey's visibility as an advocate of a stricter ordinance has attracted criticism.

El Paso restaurateur Anthony Duncan said he generally respects Nickey, but thinks Nickey is wrong to focus on efforts to limit smoking in restaurants and other public places.

"I really feel he's overstepped the bounds on this one," Duncan said. "I don't think he should use his position to further the cause," he said, adding he did not think smoking is an issue that has an impact on "the overall health of the community."

Nickey's chubby stature, his relaxed manner and his flair for the whimsical — such as a Mickey Mouse gold watch he wears — give him an air that is at times more childlike than warlike. But he becomes nearly ferocious on the subject of cigarette smoking — his mother died of heart disease brought on by years of heavy cigarette smoking.

During a recent interview, Nickey wore a blue tie covered with a pattern of circles with cigarettes inside and lines drawn through them.

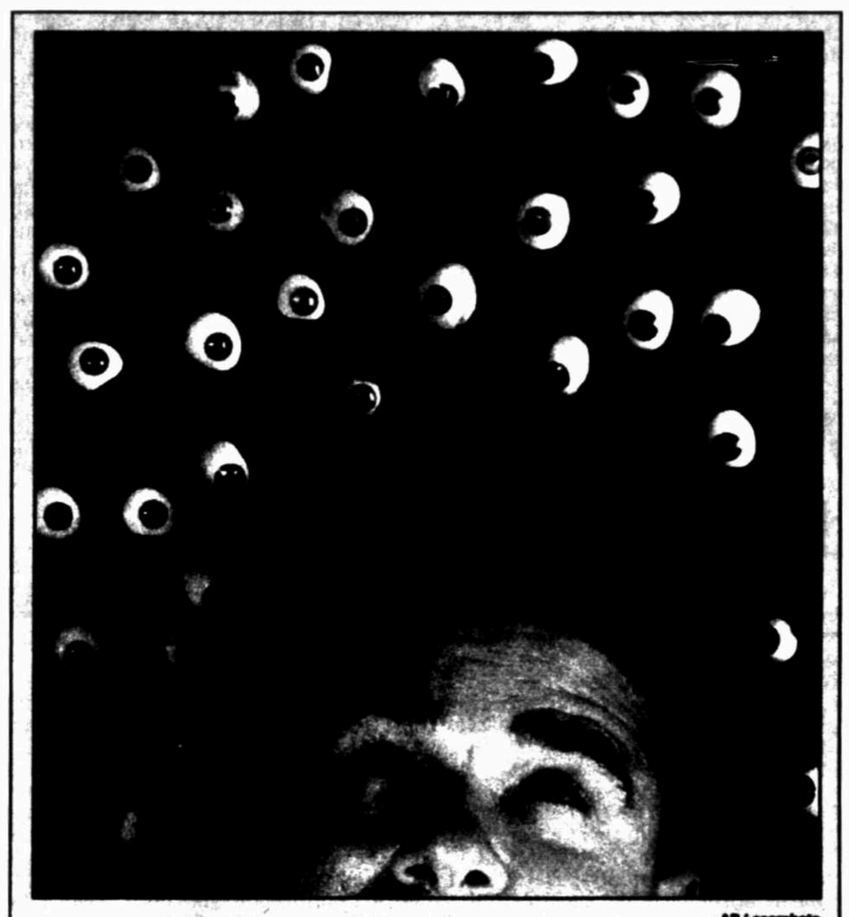

Nickey uses a dramatic analogy to illustrate his opinion: Just over 2,200 U.S. servicemen died in the Dec. 7, 1941, attack on Pearl Harbor, plunging Americans into war. More than 400,000 Americans, including more than 500 El Pasoans, died last year of cigarette-related illnesses "and we did nothing," Nickey said.

"Where are people's thoughts? Where are their priorities? I mean, my gosh."

One of Nickey's allies in the campaign to tighten smoking regulations is Kathrin Berg, a spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society in El Paso who met Nickey nearly two years ago during the launching of the Tobacco/Smoke-Free Coalition.

"He has a true passion for public health ... for the normal, everyday, common Joe," Ms. Berg said. And Nickey is able to translate that passion into a language that most El Pasoans can understand, by remaining calm when there's a crisis or by being dramatic in front of television cameras and reporters if that is what works,

Richard Abda, owner of the Artificial Eye and Facial Center in Kenner, La., is surrounded by artificial eyeballs he has made in this illustration taken April 4. Abda is a maxillofacial prosthesist and ocularist. He creates artificial ears and noses — and eyes — for patients, who are generally cancer patients, accident victims or people born with facial defects.

Ocularist recreates 'an eye for an eye'

By Lattice Bacon-Blood

KENNER, La. (AP) — Richard Abda considers himself an artist who specializes in making the artificial look real.

Unlike most artists, Abda's work isn't framed behind glass but behind hair — eyelashes mostly.

Abda is a maxillofacial prosthetist and ocularist. He creates artificial ears and noses — and eyes.

People who come to him are generally cancer patients, accident victims or people born with facial defects, all of whom have been referred by their doctors for prosthetics.

"It's very rewarding when you see patients walk out of here happy and confident," said Abda, who owns the Artificial Eye and Facial Center. "A lot of people don't like dealing with cancer patients or people who've had this type of trauma, so you don't see a lot of people going into this business."

Abda estimates about 15 maxillofacial prosthetists practice in the state.

Prosthesis wasn't Abda's first career choice. As a college student in Scranton, Pa., he set out to become a dentist. But after seeing doctors create an artificial ear, he changed his mind.

"I never knew this type of work was being done," said Abda. "I thought it was the most fascinating thing. I always liked working with my hands."

Abda, like an artist, must start with a blank canvas each time.

There is no standard eye color or nose shape, but there is a road map of sorts. He can take an impression from the undamaged portion of the patient's face to make a matching mold.

But he spends more than 80 percent of his time creating eyes for patients, using brushes, oil-based paints and plastic.

"The eyes are made of acrylic resin — plastic," said Abda. "Years ago, they were made of glass, but plastic is more comfortable and durable."

For missing eyes, he makes a cast of the muscles and tissues to design a plastic shell that emulates the sclera — the white ball — and fits comfortably in the socket. After the molding, he hand-paints the patient's natural eye color over a small black disc that becomes the iris and pupil.

"Just to look, you wouldn't believe that there's about 12 different colors in the eye," said Abda.

The disk is mounted on the shell and is heat cured to a marble-like orb. The final touches — sanding and polishing a coat of clear acrylic paint — give the eye a natural-looking shine.

The entire process takes about a day.

"It is artistic. You have to have depth perception, color coordination and manual dexterity," said Abda, who also paints pictures in his spare time.

"If the color is not accurate, it could look artificial. You want it to look as real as possible."

raped or criminally assaulted, witnessing a murder or severe beating, being a victim of or witness to a vehicular or industrial accident, being a victim of child or spouse abuse, being a hostage or prisoner of war, having a child struck by an automobile or found to have cancer or being involved in a natural disaster like a flood or hurricane or one inflicted by humans, like the Oklahoma City bombing.

The disorder is more common than even most experts realize. For example, in a recent national survey of 4,008 women, Dr. Dean G. Kilpatrick of the National Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston found that nearly one woman in five had been the victim of a completed rape or aggravated assault or both. Over all, nearly 13 percent of those surveyed had experienced post-traumatic stress disorder. Projected to the country as a whole, that would mean the lives of 12.3 million women could be impaired by the disorder.

In another survey of 12,500 households, Dr. Kilpatrick reported that nearly 10 percent had lost a family member to homicide or drunken driving and that one in five family members had developed post-traumatic stress disorder as a result.

AT A NATIONAL conference held this month by the Anxiety Disorders Association of America, Dr. Terence M. Keane, a psychologist who is director of the National Center for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Boston, reported that "cognitive behavioral" treatment, a kind of systematic desensitization, had been the most successful approach to date for this and other anxiety disorders.

Patients are taught deep relaxation techniques, and while they are in a relaxed state, they are gradually exposed to the circumstances that provoke their trauma-induced symptoms, at first through their imagination and eventually in the real world.

Thus, a person traumatized by a automobile accident might first envision sitting in a car, then riding in one, then driving one. After several sessions have occurred without inducing symptoms, the sequence would be repeated in a real car.

Talk therapy, an integral part of the treatment, helps patients understand and master their trauma reactions and to get on with their lives. In many cases, therapy in groups of people with the same or similar traumas can be very helpful. Sometimes, when anxiety or depression is especially severe, medication is used temporarily to enable patients to respond better to the therapy.

Dr. Sally Winston, a psychologist who is co-director of the Anxiety and Stress Disorders Institute of Maryland in Towson, cautioned relatives, friends and acquaintances against saying unhelpful things like "it's God's will," "bad things happen to good people" and "you should be over that by now." Untreated, post-traumatic stress syndrome often gets worse, not better.

WEDNESDAY IS National Anxiety Disorders Screening Day. Free screenings for the full spectrum of anxiety disorders — including post-traumatic stress syndrome, panic disorder, phobias and obsessive-compulsive disorder — are being offered by hospitals, clinics, institutes and psychotherapists throughout the country. For a nearby facility, call (800) 442-2020.

Those that offer screening can also provide treatment, if needed, usually for a fee.

The American Psychiatric Association has published a pamphlet, "Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder," which can be obtained free, along with 15 others, by writing to the association, Dept. NYT, 1400 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

Another pamphlet, "Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder," is available for $2.50 from the Anxiety Disorders Association of America, 6000 Executive Boulevard, No. 513, Rockville, Md. 20852.

For those concerned about panic disorder, the National Institute of Mental Health offers free brochures and resource information to those who call (800) 64-PANIC (647-2642) or write to the institute, Panic Disorder Education Program, Parklawn Building, Room 799, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20857.

Finally, Jerilynn Ross, president of the Anxiety Disorders Association of America, has produced a helpful new paperback book, "Triumph Over Fear" (Bantam), that discusses the diagnosis and treatment of anxiety, panic attacks and phobias.

she said.

Nickey's style — sometimes criticized as exaggerated — "is an effective way of educating people and grabbing the attention of political leaders," said Dr. Miguel Escobedo, city-county health district director of preventive health services. "In the past, this health department never received any kind of support. He really pushes for the health department and uses every opportunity to educate the community and educate the civic leaders.

"The other thing that sets him apart from other health professionals is he has a very kind heart. If I have a situation where I need his medical skills as a pediatrician, he won't hesitate. ... If one of our patients has a particular need ... he does not hesitate to spend his own money to help out," said Escobedo, an eight-year city-county health district employee.

Nickey generally draws praise from those who work for him and with him, but one employee in 1992 filed a federal sexual discrimination and harassment lawsuit, alleging she was denied a promotion because she is a woman. The employee, Beverly Bogle, said Nickey embarrassed her by asking her to kiss him and said she was subjected to retaliation for voicing her opposition. The lawsuit was settled several years ago, but terms weren't disclosed, Assistant City Attorney Laura Gordon said. The settlement didn't acknowledge any wrongdoing by Nickey. Bogle continues to work for the health district.

Escobedo credits Nickey for bringing national attention to border health problems. "He has always been an advocate for El Paso and the border. He has managed to attract and to bring national attention to the border," Escobedo said.

U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, agreed. Coleman likens Nickey to a family physician whose patients include everyone in the El Paso area. It was Nickey who proposed a United States-Mexico Border Health Commission and his efforts that made it happen, Coleman said. The commission was signed into law in October. Nickey also has steered public health efforts into a cooperative relationship with Mexican health officials, the congressman said.

"He deals with the people in both communities. It's personal. ... It's on a people level," Coleman said.

Nickey is 64 this year but said he isn't nearing retirement. Pointing out that previous city-county health directors did the job well past the traditional age for retirement, Nickey said, "We'll see how it works out."

Nickey does acknowledge at least one concession to age — he needs six hours of sleep now. Before, he could work an 18-hour day on just four hours of sleep. As he has done for many years, Nickey rises at 4 a.m. and works until 6 or 7 p.m.

In addition to his fight against smoking, Nickey said wants "to make this health department as responsive as we can," to stop the spread of infectious diseases on both sides of the border and to continue aggressive efforts to immunize children.

As director of the El Paso City-County Health and Environmental District, Nickey oversees 464 employees who work in 32 facilities and a host of programs that range from maternal and child health to communicable diseases, from dental care to mosquito control, from consumer health protection to monitoring nursing homes.

Nickey, who earns $108,000 annually, is the city's highest-paid public servant.

The health department's current budget is $19 million, and 57 percent of that amount is provided by the state. El Paso contributes 25 percent while El Paso County gives 15 percent. The federal government supplies the remaining 3 percent.

"We have less positions funded by city and county dollars than we did in 1974," Nickey said. "Without the Texas Department of Health contracts and grants, we could not operate the health department, period."

Children learn healthy dietary habits instead of 'junk' foods

By Joan Cirillo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A second-grader now prefers broccoli to candy, and youngsters are asking parents for whole grains and low-fat, ethnic foods. Such healthy eating habits resulted from an outgrowth of children studying cooking and food history in the classroom, according to Cornell University's Antonia Demas.

Demas, who designed the culinary course, said the project was very effective in influencing family eating habits. "The kids were proud of what they cooked and would share it with their families," she said at a conference of food professionals held here recently.

In a year-long study for her doctoral research in agricultural and nutritional education, Demas said she set out to learn if a food-based classroom experience would affect food acceptance and eating habits and teach multiculturalism and social studies.

Demas taught cooking along with food and cultural history to a group of kindergarten through fourth-grade students at the Trumansburg Elementary School in upstate New York. Their cafeteria-lunch eating habits were then tracked and compared with students without food training when the classroom foods were introduced on the lunch line.

"The kids who did not have the class experience basically didn't touch the foods," Demas said. By contrast, the culinary students ate the new foods up to 20 times as much as their untrained classmates, she said.

Parents, who participated as classroom volunteers and reported changes at home, told Demas their children were requesting whole grains, low-fat milk and ethnic foods.

"Children need to learn that their eating habits now can really affect them later," Demas said. "You can get children to eat low-fat foods. Food has got to be part of public education."

Demas went into 12 classrooms for one hour, every other week, during the 1993-94 school year. Studies were integrated with geography or cultural lessons and calendar events, such as Halloween and Thanksgiving, when children learned the agricultural roots of these holidays.

Youngsters kept food journals, entering recipes they developed, reactions to foods and facts about projects, such as creating a compost heap.

Demas, who continued to track students' food choices during the current academic year, said the study showed how one could change eating habits and school curriculum. In the fall, the classes will be reintroduced at Trumansburg and another upstate New York school, she said. The curriculum received the Society for Nutrition Education Excellence in Nutrition Education Award and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Most Creative Implementation of the Dietary Guidelines Award.

Lawn chemicals may be linked to some forms of cancer in children

By Ann Hardie and Amanda Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

Herbicides and insecticides sprayed on lawns are associated with childhood soft-tissue cancers, researchers at the School of Public Health at the University of North Carolina say. They studied 252 children diagnosed with cancer and 222 healthy children.

The researchers found that children who had soft-tissue cancers were four times more likely to live in homes where herbicides and insecticides had been used. They also found an up to three-fold increased risk of leukemia in homes where pest strips were used.

The chemicals most often used by the families in the study were chlordane, heptachlor, Diazinon, chlorpyrifos (Dursban), 2,4-D, carbaryl and Dichlorvos. Researchers said more study is needed to clarify which chemicals and what type of exposure might be most associated with cancers.

When planning pregnancy, take special precautions with health

N.Y. Times News Service

Better prenatal care in recent years has improved the health of babies and their mothers, and yet, the rate of birth defects has not changed dramatically in the past 20 years.

The paradox may be because of the sophistication of diagnostic tests and better tracking systems, says Larry Edmonds, chief of state services in the birth defects branch of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

If the rate of heart defects and fetal alcohol syndrome has actually increased, that's because doctors can detect the problems with equipment that wasn't available a generation ago, and hospital charts now have codes for recording alcohol- related problems.

The good news is that because problems such as heart defects can be diagnosed in utero, doctors can treat babies earlier and improve their chances of surviving. And the rate of neural tube defects — spina bifida, where the bones in the spine do not form properly and can result in paralysis, and anencephaly, where the brain and skull do not fully form — has declined in recent years.

If prevention is part of the cure, here are some things to remember:

■ Some vitamin supplements, such as folic acid, are essential.

Folic acid, a B vitamin, is important to take even if you are just planning your pregnancy, according to the March of Dimes. About 0.4 milligrams daily, but no more than 1 milligram, is recommended. Natural sources include green leafy vegetables, beans, asparagus and citrus fruits.

CDC researchers estimate that about 50 percent of neural tube defects can be prevented by using folic acid supplements.

■ Keep eating, but choose healthful snacks:

Cheese, peanut butter, yogurt, fruit and vegetables are good sources of vitamins and calcium and help keep the calories coming. Your body also needs some salt when you're pregnant.

It's just as important to know what not to do while pregnant or planning a pregnancy:

■ Although vitamin supplements are helpful, don't overdo it.

"One of the concerns is that just because a small amount of a particular vitamin is good does not mean that women should be consuming large amounts of vitamin supplements in general," says Dr. Joseph Mulinare of the CDC's birth defects division. Large doses of some vitamins, such as vitamin A, can be harmful to the baby.

The same goes for over-the-counter medications, including aspirin, the March of Dimes says. Check with your doctor before taking any medication.

■ Watch your cooking methods.

Undercooked meats, fish or other foods that can harbor bacteria may be dangerous for the fetus. That also means storing food properly and keeping food preparation areas clean to prevent food-borne illnesses.

- Be careful of herbal teas, and be wary of home-brewed "cures" for sickness.

"No drug, no matter how 'natural' its origins, should be used during pregnancy and lactation unless under the advice of a physician," according to "What to Eat When You're Expecting." "Stay away from unprescribed herbs or herbal teas that contain any ingredient not ordinarily found in your diet (orange rind and dried apples would be OK, but hibiscus and chamomile might not be)."

■ Stop smoking.

Must we say it? If the hazards of smoking haven't made you quit yet, consider that the nicotine and carbon monoxide that enter your mouth and nose also invade the placenta, and can cause low birthweight babies and congenital defects, among other serious problems. Get a new habit.

■ Avoid alcohol.

Although some women have imbibed with no detriment to their baby's health, there is risk involved. Fetal alcohol syndrome can cause mental retardation, facial abnormalities and nervous system disorders, according to the authors of "What to Eat When You're Expecting."

Because it's still unclear at what stage of pregnancy and how much alcohol can cause these problems, why risk it? Save the celebrating for after pregnancy — and preferably, after nursing.

Get diet in proper shape before baby is on the way

By Kristin Eddy
N.Y. Times News Service

Don't wait until the congratulations start pouring in to begin eating right for pregnancy.

Eating for two has far more serious implications than sneaking in extra doughnuts or indulging in a sitcomlike craving for pickles and ice cream.

Getting ready to bear a healthy child needs to begin at least three months before conception, according to Bridget Swinney, a registered dietitian and author of the new book "Eating Expectantly."

That includes reducing exposure to pesticides in food, extermination chemicals in the kitchen and lead from drinking water or handpainted ceramic plates and cups, Swinney says.

Once the baby is on the way, food plays a critical — and often devilish — role. Apart from the natural stages a growing baby goes through, some women may experience food-related "trimesters" such as these:

■ Too sick to eat:

Some fortunate mothers pass through pregnancy without turning green. Others experience morning sickness all day long, and for weeks, in the first three months of pregnancy.

Rising hormone levels also affect saliva and taste buds, making some favorite foods taste metallic or otherwise intolerable, according to "Conception, Pregnancy and Birth." And prenatal vitamins may make some women nauseous.

Many mothers will tell you that bland foods, such as saltines, pretzels and macaroni, are the easiest to handle during sick times.

Still another problem for newly pregnant women is extreme fatigue.

"You don't feel like doing much of anything, and that includes cooking and eating," Swinney says. "In that case, it's important to pick meals that are easy to assemble or that a family member can prepare for you."

That doesn't have to mean fatty fast food. Take advantage of precut vegetables, low-fat and low-sodium canned soups; canned fish, such as salmon, sardines, oysters and tuna; burritos with drained, canned beans, preshredded cheese and salsa; or precut meats such as chicken tenders and scaloppine.

You will need to eat additional nutrient-rich calories, above your normal recommended intake. If you're not up to eating much for the next few weeks, only about 100 extra calories a day are needed in the first few months.

■ Eating enough for two (and three and four):

"With some women, pregnancy is like a free for all," says Swinney. "They think, 'Wow, I can eat anything I want.'"

But though you may rationalize that you're eating for two, and supposed to gain weight anyway, pregnancy isn't a license to eat daily doses of bacon-cheeseburgers and milkshakes.

"You only need about 300 extra calories a day," says Swinney, "and when you look at all the nutrients you need, you have to choose very carefully. Just adding the milk you need could give you those calories."

Excessive weight gain can make delivery more difficult.

■ Too fat to eat anymore:

By the last months of pregnancy, swelling bellies, hands and ankles may cause some women to think about losing weight, especially as the post-pregnancy slim-down looms.

In spite of the discomfort, pregnancy is not the time to start dieting.

"You never want to stop gaining weight," says Swinney, but you can cut out the extra treats you've been indulging in and stick to a basic food plan. Realize too, that the baby gains most of its weight in the last trimester, putting on fat and building bones.

The brain, especially, has its greatest growth spurt during this time, and protein and calories need to be kept at optimum levels during this stage, write the authors of "What to Eat When You're Expecting." Even if target weight gain has been achieved by the second trimester, cutting back on calories in the final months can result in a too-small baby.

Sometimes best treatment for back pain is nothing

Hearst News Service

The most important thing to know about lower back pain is that if you do nothing about it you probably will get better anyway.

Next to the common cold, lower back pain is the leading cause in this country for a visit to the doctor, Michael Segell wrote in an article in the current issue of Sports Afield, and treatments consume $24 billion annually.

People whose backs tend to "go out" know it can happen while performing the simplest tasks. There are ways to prevent back problems. A regular sit-up routine will strengthen abdominal muscles and take some of the burden off your back.

Lifting heavy objects properly — bending at the knees with your back straight and using your legs to raise the weight — also is key. Keeping your waistline trim will help to avoid taxing your back.

Unfortunately, if back pain strikes anyway, people often do the wrong thing. A back pain sufferer may see a doctor who recommends a specialist who runs a bunch of expensive tests, including a magnetic resonance imaging machine or MRI. They yield pictures of vertebrae the doctor calls "abnormal." The specialist says the only way to correct the abnormalities is surgery. What should you do? Nothing.

The tests clearly reveal a herniated, protruded or degenerated disc. But your chances are better than even that the problem disc is not causing your particular problem. A study done last summer showed that among 98 people with no back pain who had been scanned by MRI, two-thirds had a spinal abnormality. Such abnormalities do not necessarily cause pain.

Even if the deformity in your disc is causing pain, try to avoid surgery. Another study of back-pain treatment found that the rate at which doctors recommend back operations varies widely from state to state. Surgery to relieve back pain is frequently unsuccessful.

The first thing you should know is that even if you do nothing, you will get better. Ninety-five percent of back-pain sufferers recover enough to resume their jobs within three months. With surgery, they could be out longer.

If you are lucky, you will recover fully. In the event of chronic back pain, a therapist can teach you stretches and exercises that will keep your aches to a minimum.

If your doctor prescribes prescription drugs and bed rest, get a second opinion. More than a day or two in bed will just make you more crippled. Prescription drugs — usually powerful painkillers — will make you want to stay there.

Take such over-the-counter painkillers as aspirin, naproxen or ibuprofen. Acetaminophen will do little to ease your pain, and studies show that the stronger dosages of ibuprofen or naproxen, sold only by prescription, are no more effective then the OTCs.

Walk as soon as, and as much as, you can. Once you are up and moving around, you will realize you feel better than you do when sitting. You can then start working on strengthening your back.

Consider a well-recommended chiropractor. Research shows chiropractic care is very effective at relieving back pain in the short term. Do not agree to extensive workups and X-rays, as many chiropractors request.

Do not agree to traction, which is not beneficial to lower-back pain.

Finally, make an effort to lose your belly. As you get older, gravity compresses your spine and places pressure upon your discs. Carrying around an extra 20 pounds in your gut puts added pressure on your infostructure. Slouching also stresses the lower back.

How to Sponsor Education and Enjoy Your Vacation...
WHEN YOU CALL IN YOUR VACATION STOP, OFFER TO DONATE YOUR OFFICE-PAID SUBSCRIPTION FOR THE PERIOD YOU'LL BE AWAY TO A SCHOOL IN YOUR AREA.
Many thousands of area students benefit each school year through exposure to newspapers in education. Whether used as a library resource, as a "living textbook" to support classroom skills, or as a special project, the newspaper adds a powerful and exciting dimension to learning. Unfortunately, in these difficult economic times, teachers and school boards are finding it increasingly hard to fund the purchase of newspapers. As a Spectator subscriber, you can help by donating your vacation credit to sponsor newspapers for classroom use.
The daily newspaper is one of the most practical and versatile teaching resources available. It's real-world relevance promotes practical literacy and offers young minds the opportunity to develop a lasting sense of social and civic responsibility.
Best of all, newspapers are fun! Students enjoy newspaper based activities while they build curriculum skills and develop good reading habits.
Help support education while you're on vacation, and help give young people a good reason to read.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Exercise the authority that has already been given to you. A serious, practical approach to problems helps you make the right decisions. Self-employment activities boost your income. November could feature a nice bonus or tidy windfall. A relationship with a thoughtful romantic partner enriches your personal life. Efforts to help others bring you new respect and popularity.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Kate Mulgrew, actress Michelle Pfeiffer, comedian Jerry Seinfeld, legendary composer Duke Ellington.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take pride in your achievements. Positive thinking will chase away the blues. Do not let the romantic merry-go-round leave you too dizzy to think straight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Routine tasks are favored during morning hours. Creative ventures will dominate later in the day. A new romantic attachment could mean lasting happiness. Family approval adds to your sense of well-being. Follow your heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look forward to doing things with people you truly care about. A romantic relationship takes an exciting new turn. You will be held to any promises you make now. Trust your judgment in money matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Think about how successful you really are. Getting completely out of debt will require some thought. Make practical decisions. A festive gathering demands your presence. Take along a small gift.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A neighbor admires you and at the same time is envious. Do not take on so much work that your health is endangered. Regular periods of rest and relaxation will boost your productivity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you could not sidestep a hostile entanglement yesterday, expect to spend part of today dealing with the fallout. Better organization on the home front will help things go better. Put away your credit cards.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Direct your energies to your financial interests and personal relationships. You need to consult experts before making investments. Your career enters a more promising phase. Cultivate your psychic powers. Delve into music, singing or dance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your finances benefit from a bit of good luck. Family members continue to be cooperative. Romance is real but a little confusing. You feel a need to perfect certain routines.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for physical fitness, sports and assisting VIPs. Your gift for merging funds for business ventures brings new rewards. Give key relationships special attention now. Attending a weekend seminar opens your eyes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone you meet socially likes your style. Discussing important current events intelligently will win you an influential person's approval. Watch expenditures carefully, eliminating unnecessary spending. A long-sought goal moves within reach. Stay alert!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New success could mean additional burdens now. Relax. You are ready! Maintaining a positive attitude will bring rich rewards. Be enthusiastic about work, home and romance. Steady effort will produce a fine harvest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trim grocery bills and your waistline, too, by purchasing more fruits and vegetables. If you encounter communication and travel snags, go with the flow. Focus on self-improvement activities rather than strictly social pastimes.

Ronstadt takes on shock jock's sidekick on 'The Tonight Show'

LOS ANGELES — It was Linda Ronstadt vs. Robin Quivers on "The Tonight Show."

First, Jay Leno asked Howard Stern's sidekick, who is black, if she thought she should stand up for women and black people, two frequent targets of the shock jock's jokes.

Linda Ronstadt speaks her mind on "The Tonight Show."

"People tell me I'm supposed to, but I don't find it necessary," Quivers responded Thursday night.

When Quivers moved over a chair, and Ronstadt took her seat next to the host after singing a song, she told Leno, "It's not my place to take issue with one of your guests, but I felt deeply upset about what she said."

The audience booed Ronstadt and cheered Quivers, who defended Stern.

"Do you listen to the show, Linda? I think people who listen to the show understand what we're doing," Quivers said.

Rondstadt said she didn't listen to it and added: "I think you're shilling for him and I think he's taking advantage of you."

Leno stepped in after that one, telling the two, "I like you both coming on and speaking your mind."

LOS ANGELES — Where else but on the range could Anjelica Huston fall in love and kill people in the same miniseries?

The co-star of the "Addams Family" movies and "Prizzi's Honor" plays Calamity Jane in "Buffalo Girls" Sunday and Monday on CBS.

The miniseries gave her the chance to explore the rough-and-tumble world of the Old West.

"The best that one can possibly hope for is something like this, in which you get to do so many things," she said. "You get to fall in love, you get to ride the range, you get to miss your friends, you get to kill people."

BEDFORD, N.Y. — The horsey set is whinnying about all the "no riding" signs put up on private trails by Ralph Lauren, Carl Icahn, Mariah Carey and other celebrities.

Icahn, former head of TWA and a thoroughbred horse breeder, said he put up fences after a horse was spooked by his dogs and the rider threatened to sue him.

"Here I was on my own property ... and a woman threatened to sue me because I was walking my dogs without a leash," he said in Friday's editions of The New York Times.

Dan Klores, a spokesman for Sony Music Entertainment President Tommy Mottola — Carey's husband — said it's a matter of security.

"It's just unfortunate that in this day and age you have to be security conscious," Klores said. "They can't afford to allow strangers to ride across their property."

Fashion designer Lauren seems willing to discuss reopening his trails. He closed them in 1989 for construction on his estate. By the time it was finished in 1992, his neighbors were used to the no-horse policy and refused to open their trails, which provide an exit from Lauren's property.

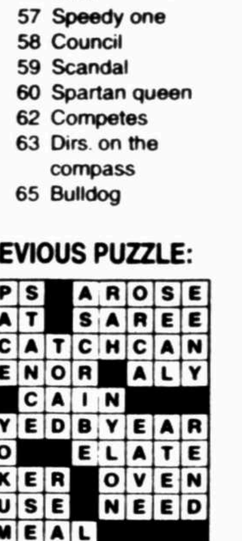

"We would reopen the trails now, but unfortunately our neighbors don't agree," said Lauren's property manager, Michael Farina.

SEATTLE — You'll never guess: "It's deep. You know? ... It's a very cerebral movie."

Sylvester Stallone, on "Assassins."

He took a break from shooting in the Seattle area to tell reporters Thursday it's an "existential action film." By that he meant: "You THINK it goes boom, but it doesn't. Screenplay by Sartre. Dialogue by Camus."

Sylvester Stallone works on "existential action" film.

Directing by Richard Donner ("Free Willy" and "Lethal Weapon").

Stallone plays a Cold War assassin who runs into two other assassins, Antonio Banderas and Julianne Moore, and winds up in a deadly cat-and-mouse game.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Pianists to play

Duo pianists Stephen Nielson and Ovid Young will present a concert of sacred music at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at First Baptist Church, corner of Louisiana Avenue and Garfield Street.

They also will perform at the church's morning services Sunday.

Nielson is a sought-after piano soloist who has played concerts with national orchestras from Europe to Asia. Young is a pianist and organist as well as an arranger and published composer whose works have been performed in hundreds of churches and on university and college campuses.

Child care will be provided for birth through 3 years old. No admission will be charged.

■ Tuba player in concert

Tubist Gary S. Press and pianist Shari Santorelli will be presented in concert at 7:30 p.m. Friday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Press is the principal tuba of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and tubist with the Lone Star Brass Quintet.

Ms. Santorelli is the principal keyboardist for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale and maintains a piano studio here.

Child care will be provided. A reception honoring the artists will follow the performance. No admission will be charged.

■ Church dedication set

Harvest Time Church dedication services are set for Sunday.

The Rev. Robert Slaton will speak at 10:15 a.m. and at the 2:30 p.m. dedication ceremony. Slaton is the West Texas District superintendent of the Assemblies of God.

Recording artist Greg Winn will perform at 2:30 p.m. The Harvest Time Choir will sing at both services.

Harvest Time Church began as a home missions project less than four years ago. The project began with seven members. Now, more than 200 people attend the church.

The church is located at 8300 W. Highway 191, three-and-a-half miles west of Loop 250 on the north side of the serviceroad.

■ Forum hosts speaker

David Rosen, the district vice president of B'nai B'rith, will be the guest speaker at the 9:45 a.m. forum Sunday at the Unitarian Universalist Church, 3301 Neely at Midkiff Road.

Rosen will show slides and speak about his experiences in Cuba. He was there in December 1994 as part of a mission trip under the auspices of B'nai B'rith International. The group's purpose was to establish communication with the Jewish communities, discover their needs and maintain communication.

The public is invited to attend.

■ Founder feast day set

Members of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul will celebrate the feast day of the founder of the organization, Frederic Ozanam, Sunday.

Local members of the society will meet following a Mass at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

In its evaluation of Ozanam's heroism, the Catholic Church has moved him a step closer to sainthood by the recent declaration of him as "Venerable." This year, the St. Vincent de Paul Society is celebrating the 150th anniversary of its founding in the United States.

The organization has grown from a small beginning at the Old Cathedral in St. Louis, Mo., in 1845 to a nationwide social service agency with more than 60,000 members. Last year alone the Society in the United States provided more than $100,000,000 in direct aid to the poor.

For more information call 687-2343 or go by 701 N. Fort Worth St.

■ Servantship theme set

Servantship will be the theme of the Sunday worship at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave. During the service, a painting will be dedicated to the memory of the late Jack C. Howard, who retired from Gulf and became a full-time volunteer at First Presbyterian.

Remembering that the greatest shall be a servant of all, the Session of First Presbyterian commissioned a painting in memory of Howard and his love of the church. The painting reflects Christ washing the disciples' feet and was painted by the well-known western and religious artist, Kenneth Wyatt, whose works are owned by such personalities as former President Reagan and entertainer Carol Burnett.

Services at First Presbyterian are at 8:15 and 11 a.m.

■ Concert planned

ODESSA — Unity Church of Texas, 210 E. 12th St., is sponsoring a "Farewell Concert" at 1:30 p.m. Sunday for its minister Cornplanter (his complete name), who will be leaving Odessa.

Sunday's program, will feature Cornplanter's "Transformation Suite," plus newer works including "Lamentations Before the Gates of Paradise."

■ Center open for prayer

Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St., will open the doors of its Christian Life Center at 5:30 a.m. and during the lunch hours Thursday for all those wanting to participate in the National Day of Prayer.

The church will serve coffee, juice, milk and donuts for those coming before work. Those coming during the lunch hour are asked to bring a sack lunch.

Prayer guides will be provided.

■ Pastor to speak

The Rev. Vera Clay, pastor of St. Paul I.M.E. Church of Abilene, will be the guest speaker for the Women's Day Program at Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church, 401 S. Adams St., at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Clay has pastored at Sims Chapel A.M.E. Church, Stamford, and Bethel A.M.E. Church, Sweetwater. She is the wife of Elder Ardell Clay, a retired Baptist minister.

She was on the board of examiners for the Northwest Texas Conference.

■ Appreciation set

The church council of Grace Lutheran Church has declared today and Sunday as Pastor Hafemann Appreciation Weekend.

Church members will gather Saturday at the Hafemann residence to clean the house and yard.

After worship services Sunday, Hafemann will be the guest of honor at a pot-luck dinner at the church and will be presented with a gift collected from members of the congregation.

Hafemann, who retired from the ministry in January 1984, has been serving as vacancy pastor at Grace Lutheran since February 1994. Before his retirement, Hafemann served as pastor at Grace for more than 17 years.

The Rev. Larry Krueger, will be installed as pastor on May 7.

■ Sermon topic set

"On Being Like Peter" is the title of the Rev. David Marx's sermon at 10:55 a.m. Sunday at Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Trinity's Sunday School, which has classes for 18 months through 12th grade and three adult classes, starts at 9:30 a.m.

■ Service scheduled

Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church is holding a special ordination service at 7 p.m. Sunday to ordain Abel Candenas as a deacon.

Those seeking transportation may call 694-1645 Sunday afternoon. The public is invited to attend.

■ Workshops planned

"Healing Relationships," a workshop based on the concepts taught in "A Course in Miracles," will be presented from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Sunday by Burt Hotchkiss at the Permian Church of Religious Science, 2311 Elizabeth Ave.

Hotchkiss has been leading workshops for more than 20 years and is the author of "Have Miracles Will Travel" and "Your Owners Manuel."

For more information call the church's pastor, the Rev. Merilyn Chilleen, 684-4230.

Also, Lee Gibson, the creator of the PEAKE Experience, will bring his latest workshop to Midland May 5-6 at the church.

Gibson is the director of the Masterpeace Foundation, Huntington Beach, Calif., where he conducts a private practice.

In his workshop, Gibson will relate that the quality of the relationships people have are based on the ability to communicate effectively. Fee for the workshop is $75.

For more information or to register, call Jo Anne Richards, 687-0391 days, or 682-2786 evenings.

■ Assembly planned

Jehovah's Witnesses are holding a two-day Spanish Circuit Assembly entitled "Stay Awake, Stand Firm, Grow Mighty," taken from Corinthians 16:13.

The assembly is from 9:50 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and Sunday at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

Topics to be discussed include "It is time for a spiritual evaluation." "Why is it beneficial for Jehovah to examine us?," and "Are you growing mighty in your spiritual progress?"

Raul Cavasos, a traveling district overseer and a representative of the Watchtower Bible & Tract Society of New York, will be the featured speaker for the assembly. He will speak Sunday afternoon on "What is your position before Jehovah God?"

■ Presentation set

The music department of Faith Temple of God in Christ, 1605 N. Terrell at Jax Street, is presenting its annual musical at 8 p.m. today.

Special guest is David Smith of Tulsa, Okla. Smith is a graduate of

The class is specifically for visitors and new members.

■ Day of Prayer set

President Clinton has proclaimed Thursday as a National Day of Prayer.

"I call upon every citizen of this great nation to gather together on that day to pray, each in his or her own manner, for God's continued guidance and blessing," Clinton said.

Each year since 1952, the president has issued such a proclamation, and since 1988, this special day of prayer has taken place the first Thursday in May.

In observance of this year's National Day of Prayer, First Church of Christ, Scientist will have a special display on prayer at the Christian Science Reading Room, 201 W. Wall Ave., Suite 107, Monday through Friday.

■ Services scheduled

Country Chapel, formerly Country Chapel Ministries, holds Sunday morning worship services at 10:30 a.m. in Prescott's Cafe near Water Wonderland between Midland and Odessa. Bible study there is at 7 p.m. each Tuesday.

For more information, please call the Rev. Leonard Cotten, 561-8993.

■ Arnold to minister

Shirley Arnold will be ministering at St. Paul United Methodist Church at 7 p.m. today.

Ms. Arnold is a teacher, minister and singer. Her recording of "Love's Holy Fire" features songs by Paul Baskin and Dennis Jernigan.

All are invited to attend.

■ Conference scheduled

Living in Greater Heights Together Ministries is conducting a Spiritual Military Conference, which continues at 8:30 a.m. today in the Best Western Motel, 3100 W. Wall Ave.

Sessions today are at 9 a.m., 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

Praise and worship will be led by Jody Dortch and the Hosanna Christian Fellowship Praise Team.

Ministers for the second annual conference are Jannie Linney of Stanton, Paul Burt from Wichita Falls, and Carolyn Redic of El Paso. Ms. Linney is the conference director.

For more information call Ms. Linney, 1-915-756-3688.

■ Film showing set

ODESSA — The last part of the two-hour film, "Jesus," based on the Gospel of Luke, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. today at Permian High School Auditorium.

A free will offering will be taken. The event includes quartet music, photograph display and a talk given by the Rev. Dewey Merritt of Midland. Merritt is a former missionary to Africa.

For more information call the Rev. Thomas Kennedy, 1-915-367-2724.

■ Revival scheduled

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church is hosting a revival that continues at 7 p.m. today and at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday.

Preaching ministers include L.D. Green, retired pastor, Odessa, at 7 p.m. today, and J.B. Hennigan, Odessa retired pastor, 11 a.m. Sunday, and Leon Green, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, 7 p.m. Sunday.

For more information and directions to the church call 697-4471 or 683-1947.

The program is aired locally on KCRS 550 AM.

Student revival spreads across nation from start in Brownwood, Texas

Associated Press

In Illinois, Wheaton College students lined up until 6 a.m. to publicly confess their sins. Drugs, alcohol and pornography were symbolically dumped in garbage bags as young men and women spoke of the difference between their public and private lives as Christians.

At Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy, Mass., students who normally fidgeted through the 40-minute morning chapel service sat spellbound for nearly six hours as classmate after classmate felt impelled to make public confessions. That night, the service ran from 9 p.m. until 1:30 a.m.

In a rejection of the Generation X label characterizing them as cynics who blame the sins of baby boomers for their own perceived apathy, students at evangelical college campuses across the nation are embracing a revival calling them to repentance.

"The call that's going out is a call to return to the Lord," said Chris Robeson, 21, a senior at Howard Payne University in Brownwood, Texas. "People are hurting, and we really don't know one another. What I've been seeing at amazing levels in places that I've been is people have been set free."

The origin of the national revival is traced back to a Jan. 22 service at Coggin Avenue Baptist Church in Brownwood in which Robeson unexpectedly got up at the end of a serivce and confessed his sins of complacency and apathy.

An older woman joined him at the altar and, in the following weeks, many members of the congregation — which includes a number of Howard Payne students — came forward with their own confessions in services that lasted up to three-and-a-half hours.

Then, at a revival at the college, a number of students rose to give public confessions. From there, students at Howard Payne and the Rev. John Avant, the pastor at Coggin Avenue Church, visited other campuses telling of their experiences.

The revival has now spread to at least 30 campuses, according to Avant.

"I've never seen anything like it, except in history," he said. "We haven't seen a student revival since the Jesus movement days of the late '60s and early '70s."

During the revival at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas, a white student who confessed to the sin of racism was immediately embraced by two black students, as others at the service applauded and wept, Avant said. One of the black students is now his prayer partner.

At Eastern Nazarene College, junior Amy Zimmerman said after the chapel service of public confessions that she went out and mended a friendship she never thought would be mended. Although the dispute was over "big, serious stuff," the two friends kept telling each other they were sorry.

"It was unbelievable," she said.

After the revival began at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School in Deerfield, Ill., a student came to church historian John Woodbridge's office and confessed he had cheated on an exam.

"I have never seen anything quite like it in 25 years of teaching here," Woodbridge said of the revival.

Even some school officials who were initially skeptical say they have been impressed by the sincerity of the movement. They say students are not trying to outdo one another with sensational confessions and that few youths are exhibiting the emotional cries and movements of some earlier revivals in U.S. history.

"What I have been sort of touched by, very moved by in this phenomenon, is the soberness, the propriety, the orderliness if you will, of what is taking place," said Kent Hill, president of Eastern Nazarene College.

"The reason that I felt that it was genuine and it was Christian and it was biblical was the depth and breadth of what the students were sharing," said the Rev. Stephen Kellough, Wheaton chaplain. "It was clearly a genuine expression of sorrow."

But some school officials say it is premature to call the movement a significant revival.

"Quite frankly, on our campus, by and large it's business as usual," said the Rev. Don Auvenshine, dean of the School of Christian Studies at Howard Payne.

And historian Mark Noll of Wheaton said it is too early to gauge the significance of the movement in relation to other revivals in American religious history.

"I would say that the thing to do is to call back in 40 years," he said.

Coaches give salaries

HAMLER, Ohio — Thirty-eight coaches are giving up their salaries so students won't have to pay to play.

Earlier this month, the Patrick Henry school board approved a policy which would charge each student $150 to play in one sport, $120 for the second and $90 for a third.

Coaches agreed to give up next year's pay, ranging from $1,300 to $4,000, as long as voters pass a $7 million operating levy Tuesday. The total savings from their offer was not available.

Dave Krauss, athletic director and basketball coach, said the decision was unanimous.

The district faces a $427,000 budget deficit in part because increased property valuations caused state funding to decrease.

Oglesby out

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech men's track coach Corky Oglesby has resigned, effective at the end of the season.

Hayes plays with Richland batters, Lee rolls to 3-1 win

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ABILENE - All questions about the Midland Lee softball team — its schedule and its pitcher Emily Hayes — can now be laid to rest.

With its 3-1 win over the District 8-5A Richland here Friday in the Area playoffs, the Tall City's Lady Rebels can not only stake claim as the best team in District 6-5A, but one of the best teams in Texas.

"They have a legitimate shot to go to Austin," said Richland High coach Hank Fulkerson. "They are an excellent ball club. They moved the ball better than us and pitched better than us. And that pitcher (Hayes) is the best we've seen this year."

Lee's Lady Rebels went into the game after a three week rest, but not that you could tell. Lee took charge early, taking advantage of good hitting and Richland mistakes.

With one out in the top of the first, Susanna Reed singled to center and moved to second on Christian Lance's sacrifice bunt. Lance was safe on Richland pitcher Lisa Pringle's errant throw.

After Nobles grounded into a fielder's choice to put runners on second and third, Hayes helped her own cause by driving a single off Pringle (13-4) to the right center gap. The two-out hit on a 3-2 count drove in two, giving Lee a 2-0 lead. For Hayes, helping her own cause, was an unexpected surprise.

"I'm not out there to get a hit," said Hayes. "But if I do and help the team then I'm happy about it."

Lee, 26-0, then gave the ball to its senior lefthander, who was on top of her game. Hayes, 16-0 for the season, struck out 13 on the night while throwing 91 pitches (72 of which were strikes) and allowing no walks. Richland, 27-9, didn't come close to its .331 batting average as the other Lady Rebels went 2-for-23.

"Emily was dominant," said Lee coach J.C. Gotcher. "They (Richland) couldn't get anything going."

Lee, who is competing in its first year at the UIL level, also had great plays from a defense that was reshuffled due to a Wednesday accident where Amee Pullen was hit by a pitch from Lee baseball coach and fast pitch entusist Jesse Benevidez.

The bruise on her throwing arm forced Pullen to settle for a designated hitter spot (where she went 2-for-

Spurs chisel Nuggets

■ Sean Elliott leads San Antonio to early series lead, 104-88 win over Denver.

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Sean Elliott scored 13 of his 21 points in the third quarter as the Spurs defeated the Denver Nuggets 104-88 Friday to take a 1-0 lead in their Western Conference playoff series.

The teams play Game 2 Sunday in the best-of-5 series.

The Spurs ended the third quarter on a 19-4 run launched when Elliott sunk a 3-pointer and followed with a dunk. His 5-of-6 shooting in the period, including two 3-pointers, boosted the Spurs to a 78-60 lead going into the final period.

Denver fell even further behind in the fourth quarter as San Antonio increased its lead to more than 20 points at times.

David Robinson scored 14 points in 30 minutes — his third lowest total of the season — and rested most of the fourth quarter, along with other San Antonio starters. Robinson also grabbed eight rebounds.

Four other Spurs players scored in double figures: Vinny Del Negro had 18 points, J.R. Reid 14, Chuck Person 10 and Avery Johnson 15 points and eight assists.

Bryant Stith led the Nuggets with 16 points, while Reggie Williams had 12 points and Brian Williams finished with 12 points and 12 rebounds before fouling out with 8:38 left to play.

Denver led 29-25 at the end of the first period, but San Antonio moved in front at the half 48-43 after an 11-3 run.

The Spurs entered the playoffs with the NBA's best regular-season record, 62-20, while the eighth-seeded Nuggets barely slipped into postseason play.

The Nuggets played without guard Robert Pack, who is recovering from surgery on his left knee in March.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf, who is recovering from a bruised a bone in his lower right leg, scored eight points for Denver.

Late in the second quarter, Dennis Rodman and Jalen Rose confronted each other with angry words after Rose fouled Avery Johnson. Rodman and Rose were called for a double technical and Rose was assessed a flagrant foul.

Both coaches also were called for technicals in the game.

Suns 129, Trail Blazers 102

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley scored 29 points and had 11 of his 16 rebounds in the second half, shoring up Phoenix's weakest area, as the Suns opened the playoffs by beating the Portland Trail Blazers 129-102 Friday night.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 series will be played Sunday afternoon in Phoenix.

The Suns, who swept their Pacific Division rivals this season without being able to outrebound them in any of the five games, turned the trick in Game 1, 45-37, with A.C. Green collecting 11.

Dan Majerle made 7 of 10 3-point attempts and finished with 25 points for the Suns, who also got 21 from Wayman Tisdale and had three other players in double figures.

Jordan works overtime, Bulls win

By Mike Wise
N.Y. Times News Service

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — In more desperate times, Scottie Pippen picking up his fifth foul midway through the third quarter was cause for great concern in Chicago. Alonzo Mourning taking over the fourth quarter was a major worry.

Yet because this new No. 45 guy picks up the slack quite well, these are no longer desperate times.

Never fear, say the Bulls, Michael is here.

Jordan again made a masquerade of the matchups and the subplots Friday night, willing the Chicago Bulls past the Charlotte Hornets in overtime of Game 1 in their playoff series, 108-100. He did this in front of a Charlotte Coliseum crowd that was like the rest of America these days: in awe.

In his 18th game back from baseball exile, Jordan scored 48 points, including 10 in overtime as the Bulls seized the home-court advantage in the best-three-of-five-game Eastern Conference series that resumes here Sunday.

"Since Pippen was out of the game, that's why I did a little free-lancing tonight," Jordan said. "I know it's not in the team concept, but. . . . I guess I got that extra wind somewhere. In the overtime, I felt sort of like a shark smelling blood. I felt I had to attack because Pippen had fouled."

Jordan was uncanny, hitting 18 of 32 from the field and all 11 of his free throws. He added 9 rebounds and 8 assists and basically took over the Bulls' offense after Pippen picked up his fifth foul with 5 minutes left in the third quarter.

Pippen, who fouled out with 1 minute 47 seconds to go in overtime and sat out much of the second half, finished with only 8 points on 2 of 3 field goals — and the Bulls still won.

Mourning finished with 32 points, including three of seven 3-pointers. He added 13 rebounds.

Cowboys play fan role

■ Three dozen Dallas Cowboys show their admiration of the heros of Oklahoma City.

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Dallas Cowboys came to town to sign autographs and shake hands and wish people well. But this was an appearance different from most.

The handshakes were heartfelt. The players signed their autographs, then took a minute to chat. And they were the ones who walked away impressed.

"We're the fans today," Emmitt Smith said. "These guys are the heroes, the ultimate role models."

The Cowboys — three dozen players, coach Barry Switzer and owner Jerry Jones — spent about three hours in Oklahoma City on Friday to visit with rescue workers, law enforcement officers and volunteers who have been part of the recovery from

Midlanders march on at Region I meet

■ Lee, Midland High tracksters move one step closer to a trip to Austin with qualifying times.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK - There were a few tense moments here Friday afternoon at R.P. Fuller Track but at the end of the day all but one of Midland's qualifiers ran well enough to make today's finals in the Class 5A Region I Track and Field Championships.

Midland Lee's Roderick Mayfield and John McAfee both qualified for the finals in the 110-meter hurdles while Mayfield will also run the 300 hurdles today when the finals begin at 1:30 p.m. The meet begins at 9 a.m. with the finals in the final five field events. The top two finishers in each final advance to the UIL State Track and Field Meet two weeks from now in Austin.

The Midland High entries did almost as well. The Lady Bulldogs qualified both the 400 and 800 relays to the finals and one of those relay members, sophomore Shelly Ray, will also compete in the 100 finals. MHS senior Roy Coats, who qualified to regionals as a alternate, did not make the finals in the 100.

But Mayfield and McAfee, a senior and junior team that went 1-2 at the district meet two weeks ago, teetered on the edge of not making today's finals.

Parchman opts to take spring off to rest injured Rebels

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

New Midland Lee head football coach John Parchman has opted not to hold spring training, joining San Angelo Central as the only two teams from District 4-5A to make that decision.

But Parchman's Rebels aren't sitting still on the spring front. Some heavy duty work is being done as a new system gets underway in the post-Earl Miller era.

"I have nothing against spring training, but we haven't had spring training at Lee in the last five years or so, and I would say that Lee has had a reasonable amount of success," Parchman said. "Still, you have to look at your situation with each year. Things change. But when we look at the whole package, we feel that starting earlier in August is to our benefit."

If Lee were to hold spring training this season, Parchman would be missing at least four key members of his squad.

"Our quarterback, John Thurman, is coming off knee surgery, and isn't ready to go. Also, B.J. Honeyman, a fullback, is coming off a shoulder injury. Alex Strambler, a running back, is also injured and hasn't gotten his release. Then we have a linebacker in Steven Westphal, who has had shoulder surgery," Parchman said. "That's four key people who wouldn't be able to participate this spring.

"We're putting in a new offense and it doesn't make much sense to do that with some of the key people out. Naturally, there are times when we would like to suit up and see how some of our offensive linemen are doing, but you just have to look at the whole picture. We also have the normal amount of (academic) failures who wouldn't be with us. We just think it's better to start earlier next August."

Earlier next August is Aug. 9 when Lee can hold two-a-day workouts in shorts through Aug. 12. Lee will then don pads on Aug. 14 when school starts. The Rebels will be in pads when the other district teams start in shorts.

Lee will also have the benefit of an extra scrimmage. Those, too, have been set. Lee will scrimmage El Paso Eastwood and El Paso Socorro at times and dates still to be determined.

But that doesn't mean there won't be work this spring.

"We still get to work out in shorts for one hour a day during our athletic period," Parchman said. "We are getting a lot

Rockies stay unbeaten with 2-1 win

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros fell 10,000 fans and two runs short of their goals for Friday night's home opener in the Astrodome as the Colorado Rockies remained undefeated with a 2-1 victory.

The Astros hoped for a victory and a crowd of more than 40,000 but they announced a paid attendance of 30,405, their lowest opener since they drew 25,318 in 1982. The Astros' opening-day record low was 14,959 in 1975.

The fans seemed in a forgiving mood during pregame introductions, greeting the players with warm applause as they lined up along the first base line.

But the mood didn't last.

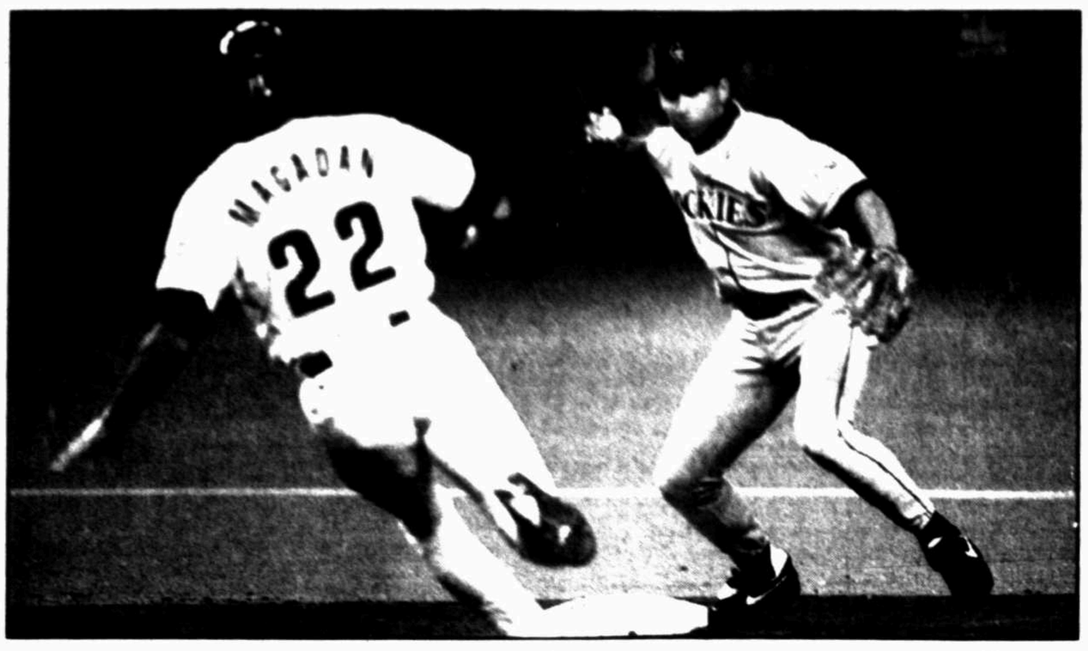

Jason Bates hit Darryl Kile's first pitch of the third inning over the right-field fence, and after Vinny Castilla flied out, Kile hit starter Kevin Ritz with a pitch.

Ritz then stole second base and scored the Rockies' second run on Joe Girardi's single.

Bates' homer brought out a few boos, and when center fielder Derek Bell made a wide throw to home plate after Girardi's hit that scored Ritz, the crowd rained boos on the Astros.

Bell, obtained from San Diego in the offseason, was cheered, however, with diving catches in the sixth and seventh innings, and Luis Gonzalez got a big ovation with his seventh-inning homer for Houston's only run.

The Astros missed a chance to rally in the fifth inning when Phil Plantier struck out for the third time in the game, with two outs and the bases loaded.

Colorado Rockies shortstop Walt Weiss forces out Houston's Dave Magadan during the Astros win on Friday night.

Cubs 4, Expos 3

CHICAGO — Losers in their first 12 games at Wrigley Field last season, Chicago won its 1995 home opener Montreal Expos, before a supportive albeit undersized crowd.

Kevin Foster allowed three hits in six innings and Sammy Sosa hit a two-run homer as Chicago improved to 3-0 and handed Montreal its first loss in three games.

Foster (1-0) allowed solo home runs to Rondell White leading off the game and Shane Andrews leading off the fifth. The only other hit he gave up was Wil Cordero's fourth-inning single.

Phillies 5, Pirates 2

PHILADELPHIA — Paul Quantrill pitched six shutout innings and Kevin Stocker drove in three runs as Philadelphia beat Pittsburghin its home opener.

Quantrill, who had a 2.25 ERA in three spring training appearances, scattered five hits to get the win. He struck out three and walked one. Heathcliff Slocumb worked the ninth to pick up the save.

The Phillies opened the scoring in the second. Charlie Hayes walked, moved to second on Dave Gallagher's single and scored on Stocker's single.

Starter and loser Denny Neagle walked the bases loaded in the sixth and Stocker delivered a two-out, two-run single to increase the lead to 3-0.

Giants 4, Marlins 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Before their smallest opening-day crowd in two decades, the Giants got six scoreless innings from Leiter in a victory over Florida. The Marlins not only dropped their third straight, but may have lost oft-injured closer Bryan Harvey again.

Glenallen Hill hit a three-run homer and Darren Lewis had a run-scoring single on a soggy day that included light showers during much of the game. The Marlins' only two hits were on bunts.

Harvey was limited to 12 appearances last year because of three stints on the disabled list — once with a strained muscle in the right elbow. Marlins manager Rene Lachemann said the extent of the injury was unclear.

Mets 10, Cardinals 8

NEW YORK — Three men in "Greed" T-shirts added a new twist to baseball's fan backlash Friday night.

The three ran onto the Shea Stadium field in the fourth inning, threw 150 $1 bills at the players and then stood at second base with their fists raised and got a loud ovation from the paid crowd of 26,604 — almost 16,000 less than last year's opening-day attendance.

The Mets came back from an early five-run deficit and beat the St. Louis Cardinals 10-8.

"That was a great stunt. Very ingenious. If they had thrown 50s out, we might have picked them up," Mets starter Bret Saberhagen said.

"We were trying to think of a good fan protest, and I remembered Abby Hoffman throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange," said Vincent DeCrescenzo, 27, a waiter.

The game was interrupted five other times by fans running on the field. One man yanked third base out of the ground and tried to climb back into the stands with it. Another ran to deep center field, took a small camera out of his pocket and took two snapshots.

"They were idiots. What do you want me to say, that they're nice guys?" Mets manager Dallas Green said.

As for the game, Todd Hundley's bases-loaded double in the seventh inning capped New York's comeback from a five-run deficit.

The Mets, who trailed 7-2 after Bret Saberhagen was pounded for 10 hits in the first five innings, rallied for four runs in the fifth, three in the seventh and one in the eighth.

Bobby Bonilla went 3-for-4 with two doubles and three RBIs, and Carl Everett and Rico Brogna hit solo homers for New York, which has scored 26 runs in its three games.

The winning rally came against Rene Arocha (1-1) in the seventh. After Brogna led off with a homer, Bonilla doubled, Jeff Kent was hit by a pitch, Everett was walked intentionally and Hundley doubled to the base of the wall in right-center to drive in two runs.

Blas Minor (1-0), the third of five Mets pitchers, got the victory.

Guerrero's three-run homer lifts Angels to 6-4 victory

Staff Report

EL PASO — Former major leaguer Pedro Guerrero hit a three-run homer in the third inning to stake the Midland Angels to a 6-4 win over the El Paso Diablos Friday night in Texas League action.

The two teams are now tied in the series at 1-1 and meet again at 8 p.m. CDT.

Tim Harkrider, George Arias and Todd Greene hit consecutive singles in the big four-run third. Harkrider scored on Greene's hit and Guerrero followed with his big bang for a 5-0 lead, one the Angels never surrendered.

Guerrero has now hit two homers for Midland. The other was a grand slam, so he has seven RBIs with his two homers.

Ryan Hancock (3-1) got the victory, but he had some great help from newcomer Anthony Chavez, who just joined the pitching staff. Chavez came on in the eighth inning when El Paso had the tying runs on base, but Chavez struck out Todd Landry, one of the hottest Diablos, to get out of that jam and then pitched in 1-2-3 order in the ninth to get his first save.

El Paso still owns a 4-3 advantage over the Angels this year, but Midland could tie up the season series with a win tonight.

Tettleton's homers hold off late Tribe rally, 10-9

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Mickey Tettleton homered twice and knocked in four runs Friday night, carrying the Texas Rangers to a 10-9 victory over Cleveland in front of the smallest crowd in the two-year history of their new stadium.

The game had an attendance of 22,179, the smallest crowd at The Ballpark at Arlington. The previous low was 22,995 on April 26 last year against Detroit. The Rangers only drew 32,161 in their opener Thursday night.

Tettleton, picked up as a free agent by Texas, hit a three-run homer in the second inning and knocked the first pitch from reliever Jim Poole (0-1) over the center field fence with two outs in the bottom of the eighth. That gave the Rangers and interim manager Jerry Narron their first victory in three games this season.

Matt Whiteside picked up the victory with two innings of one-hit relief, and Jeff Russell earned the save by pitching the ninth. Albert Belle hit a three-run homer for Cleveland and Mark McLemore hit a three-run shot for Texas.

Texas designated hitter Mickey Tettleton is congratulated by Will Clark for one of his two home runs during the Rangers' 10-9 win over Cleveland Friday.

Red Sox 10, White Sox 4

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox capitalized on Chicago's continuing control and fielding problems — 14 walks and four errors — for their second straight lopsided win.

Frank Thomas hit his second home run of the season for the White Sox and also doubled. Lee Tinsley hit a two-run homer for Boston.

The announced crowd of 23,199 was subdued on a chilly, breezy night with a game-time temperature of 54 degrees.

Jason Bere (0-1) walked five in three innings, Scott Ruffcorn walked six in 1 2-3 innings, Tim Fortugno walked one and threw a wild pitch in 1 1-3, and Jose DeLeon and Scott Radinsky each walked one in one inning.

Rheal Cormier (1-0) allowed two runs and two hits in five innings.

Brewers 8, Athletics 7 (10)

MILWAUKEE — Pinch-runner Fernando Vina barely scored on B.J. Surhoff's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning, giving the Milwaukee Brewers a victory over Oakland.

Oakland manager Tony La Russa ran on the field to argue that Vina left third too early, but was denied by third base umpire Bruce Ravan.

Angels 7, Blue Jays 6 (10)

TORONTO — Tim Salmon hit a solo home run with two outs in the 10th inning, and the California Angels beat Toronto.

The crowd of 36,208 was an improvement over Thursday's attendance of 31,070, the smallest ever at the stadium's seven-season history. Still, it was well below last year's average of 46,373..

Mitch Williams gave up the tying run in the Blue Jays eighth on Lance Parrish's single. In Williams' previous appearance in Toronto, he gave up a three-run homer to Joe Carter in the ninth inning of Game 6 of the 1993 Series, giving the Blue Jays their clinching, 8-6 win over Philadelphia.

Salmon hit his second homer of the season, connecting on a 1-2 pitch from Tony Castillo (0-1). Mike Butcher (1-0) was the winner and Lee Smith earned his first save.

Yankees 4, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Before a disappointing crowd of 15,026, Don Mattingly drove in all four runs and Jack McDowell won in his New York debut.

The Royals, who drew fewer than 25,000 for their season opener Wednesday against Baltimore, did not even have takers for all 5,000 of their general admission seats, which are free for the first four games of the season.

McDowell, the lanky right-hander who won 83 games the past five years with the Chicago White Sox, gave up six hits, struck out two and walked none in seven innings.

John Wetteland worked the ninth for his second save in as many games.

Twins 12, Orioles 9

MINNEAPOLIS — Pat Meares' two-run single capped a five-run rally in the eighth inning as the Minnesota Twins kept the Baltimore Orioles winless.

Cal Ripken, Andy Van Slyke and Matt Nokes homered as Baltimore built a 6-0 lead. After the Orioles blew that edge, Rafael Palmeiro's three-run homer gave them a 9-6 lead in the seventh.

Longhorns double up Aggies

The Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Pitcher Mark Senterfitt handcuffed Texas A&M to lead the Texas Longhorns to a 10-5 victory Friday night.

Senterfitt (8-3) allowed only five hits in seven innings before giving way to the Texas bullpen.

Danny Peoples hit his 10th home run of the year as he went 3-for-4 at the plate.

Texas sent 11 men to the plate and scored six runs in the second inning off starter Justin Atchley, who suffered his first loss of the season after an 8-0 start.

Texas improved to 40-13 overall and 13-9 in the Southwest Conference. The Aggies fell to 34-16-1 overall and 12-7 in the SWC.

Murphy awarded humanitarian award

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Retired major leaguer Dale Murphy, NBA Hall of Famer Julius Erving and the late Roberto Clemente are going into the World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame.

They will be inducted at ceremonies in October, joining inaugural inductees Arthur Ashe, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Rafer Johnson as those who had positive influences in the sports world.

"I'm just thrilled with this group," said Myron Finkbeiner, founder and president of the Humanitarian Hall, which has yet to be built.

Murphy, 39, who attended a news conference announcing the selections on Thursday, was a seven-time All Star and two-time National League MVP who won five Gold Gloves with the Atlanta Braves. He finished his career with 298 home runs and 1,266 runs batted in.

Murphy retired from the Colorado Rockies in 1993 after playing for the Braves from 1976-90 and Philadelphia for two seasons.

Erving, or Dr. J, is regarded by many as one of basketball's greatest players. He was a four-time MVP in the NBA and ABA.

LEE: Rebels now face El Paso Hanks in semis

(From 1C)

4 for the night). The injury also forced Gotcher to shuffle his line up.

A result of that switch was the move of Susanna Reed to first base. That move made Gotcher look like a genius. Reed gave Lee a handful of fantastic plays and stretches that proved in the end to be as valuble as Hayes' control.

"It (the change) turned out good because Reed made a couple outstanding plays that really saved us," Gotcher said.

Up 2-0, the Rebels got some insurance as Hayes led off with an infield single. Michelle Primeaux, who pinch ran for Hayes, moved to second on April Rice's single to center and to third when Richland picked Rice off first base.

Primeaux would then take advantage of a Richland error, scoring on a wild throw by Richland shortstop Stacy Lipper, who was attempting to throw out Jessica Garcia on an infield hit.

Richland, who lost in the first round of the playoffs last season to Lewisville, would get the run back in the bottom of the inning, capitalizing on a Lee error, but it would not be enough as Lee's ride to Austin will keep going.

"We got up early and never looked back," said Reed, who along with her teammates are already preparing for Lee's next game versus El Paso Hanks. "Everybody was telling us how good they were, and we were ready to play someone hard. I can't wait for next weekend because we're ready for it."

Lee's game versus Hanks will be one regional semifinal with El Paso Bellaire and Haltom, who beat Abilene Cooper 6-5 Thursday, being the other.

NBA PLAYOFFS

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal guaranteed the Orlando Magic wouldn't be swept in the first round of the playoffs again and kept his word Friday night.

The Atlantic Division champions buried memories of last year's three-and-out showing against Indiana, riding O'Neal's inspired play and improved free throw shooting to a 124-77 rout of the Boston Celtics.

The victory relieved the Magic of a burden that even the best record in the Eastern Conference couldn't lift during the regular season. Orlando won 57 games but struggled down the stretch, losing seven of its last 11.

No one felt the pressure more than O'Neal, whose poor foul shooting is the team's biggest weakness. He was a different player at the line Friday night, much more deliberate in his approach in making 11 of 14 and scoring 23 points.

Nick Anderson added 20 points for Orlando and, like O'Neal and the rest of the Magic's starters, sat out the fourth quarter while the bench completed the most lopsided game in Boston's storied history.

The Celtics' previous worst loss was by 44 points to Portland in 1977. Dee Brown led Boston with 20 points, but Dino Radja was held to 10 — 17 below his season average against Orlando.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 series will be played Sunday at Orlando Arena, where the Magic won 39 of 41 regular-season games.

Orlando stressed defense in practice all week, placing extra emphasis on doing a better job against the pick-and-roll — Boston's bread-and-butter offensive play.

The Celtics averaged nearly nine points above their season average in five regular-season games between the teams with Radja scoring 27.2 points per game — 10 above his average — and Sherman Douglas averaging 18.3.

Boston won two of those games, but was never in it Friday night.

JORDAN: Bulls forward scores 48 in win

(From 1C)

Even the play of Larry Johnson (18 points, 6 rebounds, 6 assists in 47 minutes) and Muggsy Bogues (10 assists but only 8 points on 2 of 10 shooting) did little to stall Jordan's ascent.

After the second quarter, no team led by more than 5 points until the Bulls pulled away a bit in the overtime.

Both teams had a chance to win in regulation. The Hornets controlled the ball for a final shot, but Bogues missed a short baseline jumper. The Bulls called timeout with 1.1 seconds left and designed a play for Toni Kukoc, who scored 17 points but badly missed this shot.

So much for decoys. "Michael bailed us out tonight with his offense," said Bulls Coach Phil Jackson.

Jordan was not only tough on the Hornets. He was as animated as he has been since his return, barking in the ear of Luc Longley after the reserve center allowed Kenny Gattison to snatch a rebound away and dunk over Longley in the final minutes. Earlier, he admonished Kukoc for not going stronger to the basket.

And, in overtime?

"In overtime, it was the Michael Jordan show," Charlotte Coach Allan Bristow said. "Maybe we were a little down because we had a chance to win it in regulation and didn't. But Michael just had a terrific overtime."

He opened the final 5 minutes by giving the Bulls the lead on a 17-footer from just left of the free-throw line. Moments later, he went through the Hornets defense as if they players were pylons, finally banking a 12-footer off the glass along the right wing.

And then, the hammer: After feeding Longley underneath for a dunk, he lulled the Hornets to sleep on his next possession, gliding slowly down the right side with the ball. Suddenly, he exploded to the basket, tongue wagging, and dunked over everyone on the right side with 1:12 remaining.

Much of the 23,859 headed for their cars.

"Awesome, isn't he?" said Bill Wennington, the Bulls reserve center, afterward. "He just keeps doing it."

Rockets enter familiar territory down 1-0 to Utah

By Eddie Sefco
N.Y. Times News Service

SALT LAKE CITY — This is familiar territory for the Rockets.

Yep, they're back in a jam, stuck in a situation where they have to fight from behind to survive.

"We've seen bigger holes than this one," Kenny Smith said. "But we still don't like being in them. We'd like to take the shovel out of their hands."

They actually think the first-round series against Utah is still theirs for the taking. Down 1-0 in the best-of-five match, the Rockets will try to level the playing field Saturday night.

The way the Rockets see it, if they were dangerous before this then Houston ought to be doubly tough Saturday night.

If anything, the disheartening loss in Game 1 only made the Rockets more certain that they are capable of stealing a victory in Utah and winning back the home-court advantage they lost during the regular season.

"I've been around this game for a long time and I know the key is staying positive and believing," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "It works.

"I'm always going to believe. That fat lady isn't around here."

It's way too early for her to be singing any songs about the Rockets. Why? There are many reasons why they feel they still can return to Houston on Sunday with the hammer in this series.

Three stand out: The Rockets don't believe Utah is capable of playing much better than it did in Game 1, when the Jazz needed John Stockton's layup with less than 3 seconds showing to secure a 102-100 victory.

The defensive job they did on Karl Malone has the Rockets believing they can keep Utah's potent leader under control.

And it would be surprising to everybody if Clyde Drexler doesn't snap back with a much-improved outing over his 7-point, 4-rebound, 4-assist game on Thursday. It was arguably Drexler's worst playoff game since his rookie season in 1983-84 with Portland.

Mainly, the Rockets are skeptical that Jazz players like Adam Keefe, Antoine Carr, Tom Chambers and Stockton can repeat their quality showings of Game 1.

Carr and Chambers each had 10 points and Keefe had 11 to lead a strong Jazz effort off the bench. Stockton had 28 points.

"I haven't seen them play too much better than that," said Smith. "All the guys who came in off the bench contributed and played well...We still feel we can win."

While it's probably true that the Jazz's reserve corps was on top of its game on Thursday, the same cannot be said of Jeff Hornacek or David Benoit. Either of those players is capable of better production tonight.

Defensively, the Rockets viewed Game 1 as a good news, bad news situation. They were thrilled to hold Malone to 25 points on 8-of-19 shooting. But there were other bothersome areas.

Pete Chilcutt led a spirited effort against Malone. Chilcutt, in fact, was the Rockets' second-best player in Game 1 behind Olajuwon.

"I couldn't be happier with our offense," Tomjanovich said. "My concern is at the other end of the floor and with the rebounding, not on offense."

Robert Horry said it was a case of the Rockets being good on defense, but not good enough.

"We played an OK game defensively," said Horry. "There were just a couple of possessions here and there where we let them come away with the ball.

"It was a pretty good effort, but not a great effort."

Sort of like the Rockets' play on the decisive possesion of the game. John Stockton wheeled into the paint and lobbed a short shot over Horry and Olajuwon. Both had their arms extended, but couldn't quite get the block.

"We were both just a tad too slow," Horry said.

DALLAS: Cowboys embrace Oklahoma City

last week's bombing at the federal building.

The players and staff started their trip with a visit to a command post at the Myriad Convention Center, where they were greeted by Gov. Frank Keating and briefed by Assistant Fire Chief Jon Hansen.

The visit also included stops at local hospitals, most of which were off-limits to the media, as well as trips to a YMCA day care and a Red Cross volunteer center.

The players distributed Cowboys caps and T-shirts to the workers at the Myriad. They had teddy bears for the young victims.

"I'm a big San Francisco 49er fan, but after today, I don't know," said Maj. Rick Williams with the Oklahoma City Fire Department.

Like most of his teammates, wide receiver Michael Irvin was wearing a Cowboys windbreaker when he arrived at the Myriad. When he left, the windbreaker was gone — he had traded it for the blue sweatshirt worn by Don Boyd, a member of the Montgomery County, Md., Collapse Rescue Team.

"You come in and see the way they feel," Irvin said. "You walk up to somebody and you offer them a handshake and they say, 'Can I get a hug?' That's crucial.

"That lets you know they want support and they just want a little love. The thing is, they don't realize the kind of love that they're giving."

Boyd worked the trade by just mentioning that he liked Irvin's jacket.

"I think they're here because they really understand what's going on," he said, wearing his new memento.

Boyd's unit was preparing to return home Friday after spending eight days on the job. The group spent its 12-hour days on "the pit," a part of the federal building deep within all the rubble.

Irvin said the stories he heard from rescue workers were enough to make his eyes well with tears at times.

"When they talk to you and explain it to you, you can see it on their face," he said. "It's almost like you're right there with 'em."

At the Red Cross center, Nate Newton directed traffic as a group of teammates handed out goodies. "Please, just take one," he said. "I know you might want one for your kids but we have to give out a lot of these."

No one argued with the 330-pound Newton, who praised the workers as he made his way through the building.

"I think it's pretty cool," said Bobbie Partlow, who came up from Sarasota, Fla., to volunteer her time. "We support them and now they're out supporting their community."

Switzer, Jones, Smith, Troy Aikman, Russell Maryland and Charles Haley made a stop at the federal building, where they signed autographs and had their pictures taken with rescue workers.

"Everyone said thank you for coming and said all the right things, but one guy said it better than all," Switzer said, referring to a rescue worker. "He said 'Coach, this is the most smiles I've seen on this many faces in 10 days.'"

REGION I: Quimby points out error

(From 1C)

Mayfield, who owns a fourth-place finish at state last year in the 300 hurdles, was leading his preliminary but got hung up on the seventh hurdle.

"I did, I hit it hard," said Mayfield. "I started leaning to one side. I thought they were going to all pass me, but they didn't."

Mayfield ended up second in his heat with a time of 14.33 seconds — way off his season's best of 13.8 — but the top two finishers in each of the two heats, along with the next four-best times, make the finals.

McAfee, however, had a scarier ride to the finals. In his first regional meet, McAfee finished second in his heat which would have automatically qualified him. But when the P.A. announcer called out the times of the heat, McAfee was listed as finishing eighth in his heat with a time of 19.0.

Only quick thinking by Lee coach Mike Quimby saved McAfee's season.

"Yeah, we filed a protest and they looked at the film (Accutrack timing device) and they saw where they went wrong," said a relieved Quimby. "The kid beside him fell down and they just got them switched when they were picking them out."

McAfee's time was eventually changed to a 14.20. He will run in lane seven while Mayfield will take up lane three.

In the 300s, Mayfield took a huge lead early but slowed a little at the end when it was apparant he would get either first or second. Odessa Permian's Andrae Gibson passed him and has the best qualifying time at 37.79. Mayfield was second in 38.08 but owns the district championship over Gibson.

"I know I ran sorry (in the 300s)," said Mayfield. "But I hadn't eaten anything all day. I usually don't like to eat during a track meet."

For the Lady Bulldogs, Friday was a day to work out the big-meet jitters. The team of Shelly Ray, Talitha Belcher, Toya Zachery and Ogonna Merritt had decent handoffs on the 400 relay to finish third in its heat in a time of 48.48. They will run in lane seven today while Abilene High had the best time of 47.52 and will take up lane five.

In the 800 relay — the one in which the Lady Bulldogs probably have the better chance of getting to state — all three handoffs were on the shaky side.

"I think we still have a great chance to get out in it," said MHS coach Susan Nix. "We can cut two full seconds off our time if we get those handoffs down."

Merritt, Toya Zachery, Ray and Belcher finished second in their heat behind Abilene High with a time of 1:44.36. They will run in lane three with the fifth-best time. Their best time of 1:42.8, which they ran at district, compares favorably with all but Abilene's 1:40.59. No team except the Lady Eagles ran faster than 1:42.03.

"What happened was the wind was blowing in pretty strong on both curves and each of my incoming runners faded a little bit at the end and they ran away from them," said Nix. "But we needed the prelims. I think it will help us tomorrow."

Friday was a disappointing day for MHS' Coats. He had a fast heat that could have helped him into the finals, but at third place he was two-tenths of a second behind first and second places. His time of 11.04 was easily his worst of the season.

"I haven't run an 11 since I was a sophomore," said the senior who will play football for SMU in the fall.

As expected, the San Angelo Central boys took the first-day team lead after four events with 15 points on a first-place finish by Brandon Avants in the shot put and a fourth-place finish by O'Keith Weatherspoon in the high jump. El Paso Coronado is second with 14 points while Lubbock Coronado is third with 11. Odessa Permian is tied for fourth with Crowley with 10 points each.

In the girls race after only two field events, Abilene High and Abilene Cooper are stuck at the top with 10 points each. Abilene's Farah Banks won the long jump with a regional record of 19 feet, 7 3/4 inches while Cooper's Ann Rhiddlehoover threw a personal-best 127-7 to win the discus. Burleson and Plainview are tied for third with eight.

In the boys high jump, Crowley's Jud Bryant broke a regional meet record with a winning jump of 6-10 1/2. Bryant, however, stands less than 6-feet tall.

Final results Friday from the first day of the Class 5A Region I Track and Field Championships at R.P. Fuller Track:

Colts hand Erickson reigns

■ NFL News

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Craig Erickson, who recently signed a $6 million contract with the Indianapolis Colts, was named the team's starting quarterback on Friday.

Coach Ted Marchibroda announced the decision as the club opened its annual three-day minicamp.

Erickson, a restricted free agent obtained in trade with Tampa Bay, agreed this week to a three-year, $6 million contract with the Colts.

Dolphins Camp

DAVIE, Fla. — The Miami Dolphins announced the signing of linebacker Chuck Bullough to a one-year contract.

Bullough, 26, started in one game for Miami in 1994 and had five tackles, but missed the remainder of the season because of an abdominal injury.

Also, the club said it signed seven free agents: receivers Robert Amir-Rashad, Burt Thornton and Mark Whittemore; kicker Craig Fayak; safety Larry Kennedy; fullback Tarrant Lynch and running back Brent Moss.

Steelers Camp

PITTSBURGH — Just when it seemed the Pittsburgh Steelers already had too many potential 1,000-yard running backs to keep happy, they went out and signed another.

Hello, Erric Pegram.

Goodbye, Barry Foster?

The Steelers all but sent Foster packing on Thursday, signing Pegram — the Atlanta Falcons' feature back in 1993 — to complement emerging running back Bam Morris.

Pegram rushed for 1,185 yards in 1993, but dropped off to 358 yards last season while sharing a position with Craig "Ironhead" Heyward.

REBELS: New head coach juggles staff

done with our offense. We are able to run plays, so we're getting a lot of work done in that area."

Parchman has also completed the makeup of his new coaching staff. Newcomers include Randy Smith of San Antonio Madison, who will coach the offensive line; and Mike Meeks, the former defensive coordinator at Fort Stockton who will coach the defensive secondary.

None of the other Lee coaches are newcomers to the Lee football program, giving Parchman a lot of carryover experience, including himself, a former Lee defensive assistant coach under Miller. But there are job changes.

Kelvin Ratliff, who was a finalist for the Lee job and one at Amarillo Palo Duro during the off-season, has been named as the defensive coordinator. Greg McClendon is moving from the defensive side of the ball to coach the wide receivers. Randy Josey is moving to the defensive line and Mike Quimby is moving from offensive coordinator to coaching the offensive backs.

'I'm taking the position of offensive coordinator. Since we are putting in a new offense, I just felt that the heat should be on my shoulders with that move.'

— John Parchman, Midland Lee football coach.

"I'm taking the title of offensive coordinator," Parchman said. "Since we are putting in a new offense, I just felt that the heat should be on my shoulders with that move. The buck stops here, so to speak."

Another area Parchman is already heavily involved with is working with the coaches at Abell and Alamo junior highs.

"Our success at Lee is how we handle Abell and Alamo," Parchman said. "We are working with those coaches three times a week and I hope it's becoming more of a Lee family thing. We're trying to make the whole system easier to learn from top to bottom. For instance, we want the kids in the seventh and eighth grades to know what plays we are running on the field when they come to the games on Friday night. You have to have that kind of thing through the whole system if you want it to work."

But with new coach and a new offense, fans may be expecting far-flung changes for Rebel football. Parchman says that isn't the case.

"Lee is still going to be a physical football team, the same brand of ball that was here long before I came," Parchman said. "The core of Rebel football won't change.

"Some of our terminology might be different, but I don't think most of our fans will be able to tell much difference with our new I-formation. Actually, Lee hasn't run much wishbone since the year we had Farris Strambler, the first year I was here. We will have a multiple offensive package and I've been looking at film and Lee was already doing a lot of the things we will be doing. We're not going to be some kind of Run and Shoot team."

Hoch takes guesswork out of Houston Open course

The Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — Scott Hoch says golf often is a matter of guesswork.

"Today, I guessed right quite a bit," he said Friday following an 8-under-par 64 that gave him a two-shot lead after two rounds of the Houston Open.

"It was just a well-played round. I didn't miss many greens. I hit a lot of good shots and took advantage of those shots. In this game, you're only as good as your next shot."

Hoch had six birdies and an eagle in getting to 132, 12-under par for two rounds over the Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands.

Willie Wood, who's been playing on the Nike tour this year after losing his PGA Tour card, was two shots back after a second-round 66.

Justin Leonard, a former University of Texas star, was at 136 after a 67 Friday, tying him with first-round leader Steve Rintoul, who added a 70 to an opening 66.

The lowest scores were put up early Friday, before the damp greens dried as the temperature topped 80 and a 20 mph breeze kicked up.

Hoch, whose best finish this year was a tie for seventh in the Masters, opened with consecutive birdies, dropped a 40-foot putt for birdie on No. 5, then made a 12-footer at No. 7 to turn at 4-under 32.

"It's just obvious when you're playing well," said Hoch, whose last win came more than a year ago at the Bob Hope Classic. "It's a snowball effect. And I guess when you're playing poorly, it's kind of the same thing too, just going the opposite way.

After a birdie attempt at the 11th hole lipped out, he rolled in a 15-footer for birdie at No. 12 to go to 9-under.

A second shot of better than 200 yards on the par-5 15th left him just 6 feet away and he dropped the putt for eagle to reach 11-under. He closed with a birdie at 17 and a par at 18.

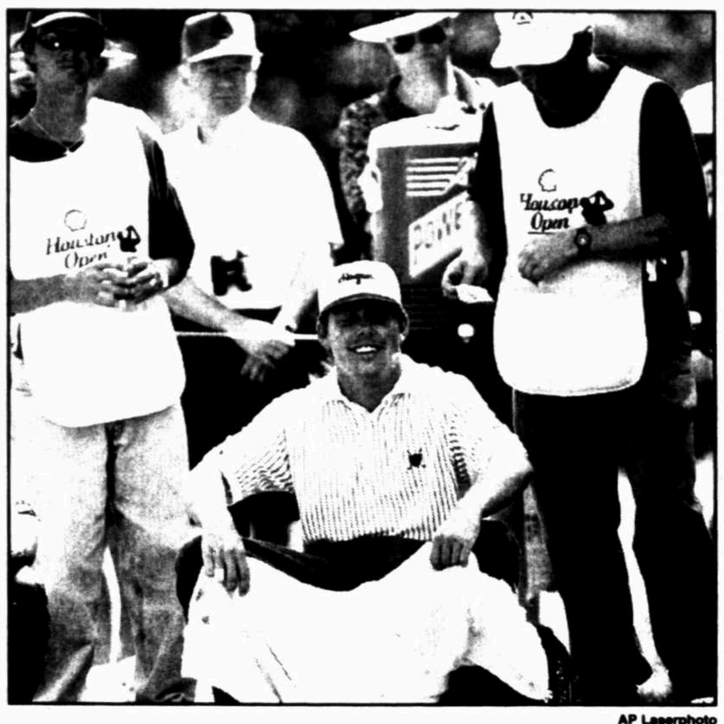

"That was big," he said. "Those eagles are always nice."

Wood, who got into the field with a sponsor's exemption, began with a 40-foot birdie putt on his first hole, the first of six birdies in a bogey-free round.

"I wanted to play aggressively," he said. "That was a good start.

"I played great. Looking back, I think I only missed one green."

Leonard, in his first full year on the tour after winning the NCAA golf title last June, had an eagle to go with five birdies and two bogeys en route to his low round of the year. The eagle, on the par-4 11th hole, came when his second shot from 139 yards hit 3 feet from the hole and bounced in.

Justin Leonard of Dallas takes a break on the No. 15 during the second round of the Houston Open Friday. Leonard sits at five-under-par at the halfway point, three shots behind leader Scott Hoch.

"I've been close to playing really well," Leonard said after posting his lowest round of the year. "Hopefully, I'm turning the corner."

Brian Kamm had a 66, Brett Ogle a 69 and John Cook a 70 in completing 36 holes at 7-under 137, five shots behind Hoch. Payne Stewart, who opened with a 73, rebounded with a 7-under 65 Friday to pull into contention at 138.

LPGA Sprint

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Dottie Mochrie says she's not quite recovered from a rotator cuff injury that sidelined her for six weeks earlier this year.

That hasn't stopped her from winning or contending in this week's $1.2 million Sprint Championship.

Mochrie, who won the PING-Welch's Championship in Tucson, Ariz., in March in her first start since Jan. 22, shot a 6-under-par 66 on Thursday for a share of the first-round lead with Colleen Walker and Kris Tschetter.

"I'm obviously very playable, but I'd like it to be better," said Mochrie, one of 62 players to break par in the first competitive round on the new Rees Jones-designed LPGA International course at the tour's headquarters.

Mochrie relied on strong iron play, with only two of her seven birdies coming on putts longer than 15 feet, and one of those — from 25 feet — came after a 4-iron from a fairway bunker.

Walker, who had offseason surgery to remove a cyst from her left knee, also had seven birdies and a bogey. She made two 20-foot birdie putts, two more from 15 feet and another from 10 feet.

Marta Figueras-Dotti and Dawn Coe-Jones opened with 67s and Lisa Walters, Nancy Ramsbottom, Amy Benz, Kristi Albers, Kelly Robbins, Florence Descampe and Denise Baldwin shot 68s.

Laura Davies, who won last week's Chick-fil-A Charity Championship and leads the money list with $282,040, is skipping the event to play in Japan.

The tournament also includes the $200,000 Sprint Senior Challenge, with Sandra Palmer trying for her fifth straight title in the 36-hole event that begins today.

Vegas Seniors

LAS VEGAS — Jim Colbert, taking advantage of near pefect conditions on a course he knows well, didn't miss a green Friday in shooting a 7-under-par 65 and took a one-shot lead over champion Raymond Floyd and two others in the Las Vegas Senior Classic.

Colbert, a Las Vegas resident, had eight birdies and a lone bogey on the Tournament Players Club course at Summerlin, where he plays regularly when in town.

Joining Floyd a shot back at 66 were rebounding Jerry McGee and Bob Murphy. Jim Dent was at 67, while Chi Chi Rodriguez and Jay Sigel were another shot back at 68.

Ranger Purser wins shot put

ODESSA — Greenwood's Rusty Purser won the shot put and a state berth in the Region I-3A track meet at Ratliff Stadium Friday.

Purser had a toss of 53-feet and four inches to beat Zach Abshier of Floydada, who had a 52-4 1/2. Both will advance to the state meet in Austin on May 12-13.

Purser also scored a sixth place finish in the discus with a 154-5. David Towner of Perryton won that event with a 164-0.

In all, Purser scored 11 points for the Rangers.

Greenwood's T.J. Pfannenstiel also qualified for today's finals in the 100 meters where he posted a fifth best time of 11.08. The best time turned in was an 11.01 by Ruben Martinez of Littlefield.

Purser, who landed all-state honors in football, is completing a highly successful senior season. He also won a state berth this year in weight lifting.

Stanton takes 12th in golf

ABILENE — The Stanton girls placed 12th here in the Region I-2A girls golf tournament Friday.

The Stanton girls had a team score of 881, two strokes behind Spearman. Post won the title with a 742 while Anson took second place at 783 and Ozona owns a 784 in third. The top two teams go to state.

Stanton was led by Robyna Dean with a 94-99-189. Other Stanton players were Shanna Butler, 110-127-237; Sally Chapa, 112-110-222; and Dana Fryar, 121-123-244.

Baird and Memphis took the top two state berths in the boys division with 624 and 629 respectively.

Midland AAU team wins tourney

AMARILLO — Midland's under 14 AAU basketball team won the Crown of Texas Classic here last weekend. The team of Brent Lawlis, Brooks Stevens, Ryan Klatt, Endre Nary, Derrick Walker, Eric Neatherlin, Greg Fisher, Blake Hinsley, Jamar Christian, Josh Ralston and Matt Winston beat Albuquerque in the finals 76-49. They also beat El Paso 78-46, Lubbock Outlaws 74-45 and Albuquerque again 67-57.

Hass, Harshbarger win tennis

Laurie Hass of Lee Freshmen beat Audra Wagner of Nimitz 1-6, 7-5, 6-4 to win the Midland Invitational ninth-grade tennis tournament Friday. David Harshbarger of Midland Freshman won the boys singles by beating Douglas Prieto also of MFHS 6-2, 6-1.

Wagner beat Jennifer Melton of Nimitz in one semifinal and Hass beat Bonham's Kelly Moore in the other. Harshbarger topped Jonah LaMonica in a boys semifinal and Prieto beat Kevin Hinshaw in the other semifinal.

In doubles play Randi Gortney and Courtney Crew beat D'nett Sharp and Katie Kidd 6-1, 6-2 in the girls finals. In the boys finals Spencer Ritchie and Bobby Jones of Midland Freshman beat Justin Ford and Rick Polanco of Hood 6-0, 7-5.

In other sub-varsity tennis, San Jacinto won five matches and Abell won four in girls play Monday. Here are those results:

Eighth-grade Megan Hand, Abell def. Anna Koch, SJ 8-6. Lili Vo, Abell def. Elizabeth Cannon, SJ 8-2. V0-Hand def. Emily Rucker-Megan Hawkes, SJ 8-7.

Seventh grade Jennifer Sponberg, SJ def. Kathryn Burke, Abell 8-2. Elizabeth Webb, SJ def. Beth Anne Kahleich, Abell 8-2. Dana Giles, SJ def. Susan Birkelback, Abell 8-4. Rebecca Inerarity, SJ def. Jennifer Conner, Abell 8-2. Burke-Amanda Jimenez def. Margaret Davis-Kristen Knight, SJ 8-7; Rebecca Nobles-Katie Gilmour, SJ def. Kahleich-Birkelback 8-2.

Greenwood wins over Van Horn

VAN HORN — The Greenwood Rangers climbed to 13-9-1 on the season here Friday with a 12-2, five-inning win over Van Horn in a non-conference baseball game.

Michael Otho led a big Ranger hitting attack with a three-run homer in the fifth. Casey Otho had three hits, including a double and triple while Bucky Smith and Andy Watzl both doubled in the game. David Curry had a three-hit game while Matt Gilly had two.

Greenwood will host Sonora in a district game Tuesday at 4:30 p.m.

Correction

It was reported that the Midland Christian softball team would play Canyon Creek Christian of Dallas in TAPPS 1-A playoff action at 10:30 a.m. on Friday. The game will actually take place May 5 at 10:30 a.m. at the Bill Williams Softball complex. The Midland Reporter Telegram regrets the error.

Silent killer preys on hearts of young athletes

By Ken Berger
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Rosalyn Lanier's heart always seemed so strong, thumping powerfully as she drove for a layup or twirled in the air as a cheerleader.

But a silent disease lurked inside her athletic, 16-year-old body and claimed her life in the cruelest of ways, right in front of her family and friends as she performed on a high school basketball court.

Lanier was one of three young athletes who died within two months while playing sports this year in Alabama, an uncommonly high cluster for a single state. Doctors say their deaths are part of a rare phenomenon in which people in seemingly top condition are shooting jumpers or breaking tackles one moment and crashing into cardiac arrest the next.

The young victims — about 15 a year nationally, according to a doctor who tracks the deaths — leave behind horrible evidence of disease in the heart, even though it may never show up in physicals and rarely causes any symptoms. Most victims never so much as have chest pains or shortness of breath.

The silent killer festers for months, maybe years, and goes undetected by parents, teachers, coaches and doctors until it is too late.

"The mysterious aspect is in a way that an athlete can train for many years and harbor a potentially lethal disease and not be aware of it," said Dr. Barry J. Maron of the Minneapolis Heart Institute Foundation.

Lanier, a 16-year-old basketball player for Carrollton High School in rural west Alabama, collapsed during a game at Tuscaloosa County High School on Jan. 30.

"I noticed that she was lagging. The other girl was beating her," said father Donald Lanier, who was in the stands with his wife. "Something in my mind sensed that something was very wrong with her.

"I was looking at her and all of a sudden she went limp and her legs went out."

A sickening silence fell over the crowd. Trainers rushed to the girl's side and began CPR while someone called 911. They put up sheets so the other kids couldn't see that a girl was dying.

"The coaches were trying to talk to her. 'Breathe, Rosalyn, breathe!'" her father said. "She took two or three deep, deep breaths and then she lost it right there and I panicked."

Lanier died of subvalvular aortic stenosis, a form of hypertrophic cardiomyopathy, the most common culprit in sudden athlete death, said Dr. James Lauridson, a state medical examiner in Montgomery.

Victims of this genetically transmitted ailment suffer thickening of the wall that separates the chambers of the heart. During intense exercise, the difference in pressure inside and outside the heart becomes too great, and the heart can't supply itself with enough blood. The victim is susceptible to erratic contractions of the heart called arrhythmias, which in Lanier's case were fatal.

Lanier's family said the girl never showed any signs of heart trouble.

"Everybody was wondering what was happening," said Katina Lanier, Rosalyn's 22-year-old cousin. "She seemed so healthy and everything. That's why everybody was wondering."

The answers may not be forthcoming, said Dr. Gerald Pohost, head of the cardiology department at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

Young horses, owners chomping at bit for Derby Trials

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — California-based trainer Neil Drysdale gave a tongue-in-cheek answer when asked why he took Muhtafal to New Orleans to begin the talented 3-year-old colt's career.

"We needed an excuse to go down there and have some fun," Drysdale said.

Well, Drysdale had fun with Muhtafal's career debut, a 4 1/2-length victory in a six-furlong allowance race at the Fair Grounds. He had even more fun at Keeneland, when Muhtafal won another six-furlong allowance by five lengths in 1:08 1-5 on April 14.

If Drysdale has more fun with Muhtafal in Saturday's one-mile Derby Trial at Churchill Downs, the colt could end up in the Preakness on May 20.

None of the eight 3-year-olds entered Thursday for the Trial is expected to start in the 1 1/4-mile Kentucky Derby on May 6, but as many of five of them are possible for the Preakness.

Drysdale, who didn't race Mutafal as a 2-year-old because of the colt's immaturity, won't talk about the Preakness until after Saturday.

One who will talk about the second jewel in the Triple Crown is Nick Zito, trainer of Mr. Greeley.

AP Laserphoto

Kentucky Derby hopeful Timber Country goes through Friday's workout at Churchill Downs.

"If he wins, he's headed for the Preakness," Zito said.

Zito, who won the Kentucky Derby with Strike the Gold in 1991 and with Go For Gin last year, will try this year with Suave Prospect.

Mr. Greeley has three wins and a second in four starts this year. In his last two races, each at seven furlongs, he won the Swale on March 11 at Gulfstream Park and the Lafayette on April 12 at Keeneland. The Preakness is 1 3-16 miles.

Other Preakness possibles are Houston Sunrise, winner of an allowance race and the 6 1/2-furlong San Pedro at Santa Anita in two starts this year; Our Gatsby, winner of the Great West over one mile, 70 yards and second in the 1 1-16 mile Remington Park Derby; and Peaks And Valleys, second to Mr. Greeley in the Lafayette in his only 1995 start.

Completing the field are Stark Ridge, Strategic Interest and Adams Trail.

The field in post-position order is Our Gatsby, 122, Willie Martinez; Stark Ridge, 117, Garrett Gomez; Strategic Interest, 114, Charles Woods Jr.; Muhtafal, 114, Mike Smith; Peaks And Valleys, 122, Pat Day; Houston Sunrise, 117, Shane Sellers; Adams Trail, 114, Adam Gryder; and Mr. Greeley, 122, Julie Krone.

Becker's blistering serves defeat Krajicek at Monte Carlo

The Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Boris Becker and Goran Ivanisevic, better-known for success on fast surfaces, won on clay Friday to advance to a semifinal matchup at the Monte Carlo Open.

Becker, seeded second, continued his strong play with a 6-2, 7-5 victory over Richard Krajicek. Both were serving at more than 125 mph.

Goran Ivanisevic survived an outburst of temper to beat Gilbert Schaller of Austria 4-6, 7-6 (7-4), 7-5. Ivanisevic, the No. 4 seed, blew a 5-2 lead in the third set before finally beating Schaller.

In the other quarterfinals, ninth-seeded Thomas Muster eliminated David Wheaton 6-4, 6-4 for his 20th consecutive win on clay, and Italian Andrea Gaudenzi defeated fifth-seeded Sergi Bruguera 7-6 (7-4), 6-2.

Becker and Ivanisevic have met 12 times, with Becker winning eight. They have split two matches on clay.

Becker knows what it will take to beat Ivanisevic.

"Unfortunately, he has got one of the biggest serves in the game," Becker said. "Even though it is clay, it is a still a big weapon and I have to make sure that I am able to hold my serve and take those few opportunities I may have."

■ Tennis Roundup

So far in the tournament, Becker has raced through his matches without losing a set, averaging just over an hour.

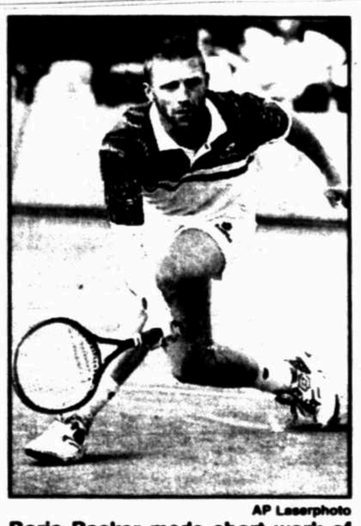

Becker is not surprised at the way he is playing.

"For the past 12 months I have been playing really good tennis," he said. "Each month, basically, a tournament final or a tournament win and that helps your confidence ..."

Muster has won three tournaments on clay this year and 25 in his career. He had some trouble with Wheaton, who lost in the first round of his other two clay tournaments this year.

Boris Becker made short work of Richard Krijicek, winning 6-2, 7-5 at the Monte Carlo Open Friday.

Sanchez Vicario's opponent in the semifinals will be Amanda Coetzer of South Africa, who beat sixth-seeded Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-2, 7-5.

Katarzyna Nowak defeated No. 8-seed Ruxandra Dragomir of Romania 6-3, 6-1 to become the only unseeded player in the semifinals.

Nowak will play second-seeded Iva Majoli of Croatia, an easy 6-3, 6-0 winner over Ines Gorrochategui of Argentina.

The 26-year-old Nowak has reached only her second semifinal since turning pro seven years ago.

The tournament's official name is the Ford Open.

Croatia Open

ZAGREB, Croatia — Silke Meier of Germany breezed past countrywoman Marketa Kochta 6-1, 6-0 in the quarterfinals of the Croatia Open.

Second-seeded Irina Spirlea of Romania defeated eighth-seeded Japan's Ai Sugiyama 6-2, 7-5 in what may have been the toughest match of the day.

Belgium's fifth-seeded Sabine Appelmans also made it to the semifinals, beating Barbara Rittner of Germany, the No. 4 seed, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Slovakia's Denisa Szabova earned a berth against Meier by defeating Laura Golarsa of Italy 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Marlin edges closer to million dollar payday

■ Sterling Martin needs two wins to cash in a $1 miilion bonus as he enters Sunday's Winston Select 500.

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Now that Sterling Marlin has proven he can win something besides the Daytona 500, he's hoping to parlay his newfound success into some big money.

By virtue of his February victory in the Daytona 500, Marlin enters Sunday's Winston Select 500 at Talladega Superspeedway with a chance to put himself within a victory of a $1 million bonus.

The Talladega event is the second leg of the Winston Million, a four-race contest within the Winston Cup series that pays $100,000 for two victories and $1 million for winning three.

Only Bill Elliott has won the big prize, accomplishing that in 1985, the first year it was offered, by winning Daytona, Talladega and the Southern 500 at Darlington after falling short in the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte.

Marlin had the same opportunity a year ago, but finished eighth at Talladega after breaking an 11-year winless streak with his first Daytona triumph. The rest of 1994 was nightmarish for Marlin, who was never in the hunt at Charlotte and Darlington and wound up 14th in the season points.

His second career win came in February at Daytona. Then the big breakthrough came March 26 when he won the TranSouth 500, the less prestigious of the two Darlington events and his first win outside Daytona.

After the first eight events of the 31-race schedule, Marlin is off to by far the best start of his Winston Cup years, standing second. He is just eight points behind leader and two-time defending series champion Dale Earnhardt, the man he beat in dramatic fashion this year at Daytona.

"It feels good when you go somewhere now and people don't keep asking you when you're going to win a race, or why can't you win any place but Daytona," Marlin said.

"There's a lot at stake," Marlin said of Sunday's race. "The race pays about $100,000 to win, and there's $200,000 worth of bonus money up for grabs (including $100,000 to the series point leader following the race).

"That sure would help me pay for the new house we're building (in Columbia, Tenn.)."

Corpus Christi's Terry Labonte climbs out of his car following Friday's qualifying run for Sunday's Winston Select 500.

Marlin, driving one of the new Chevrolet Monte Carlos that have won seven of the first eight races this season, is certainly among the favorites for the 500-mile event. He comes well equipped for the task.

"We haven't run this car since Daytona," he said. "It's just been sitting in the corner covered up.

"Once you start the race, it'll be pretty much like it was when we started Daytona. You can't lay the spoiler down, so you try to soften it up as much as you can to take the drag off the car. ... I hope it comes down to me and Earnhardt again."

■ Auto Racing

If Marlin sounds confident, it's no coincidence. Victories will do that for you.

"I felt like when I got with the right team, I could win, and the Kodak team gives me everything I need to win," he said. "We've got another year's worth of experience together, and we're having some luck for a change.

"After Daytona last year, it seemed like we were always at the wrong place t the wrong time. We'd cut a tire down or have some mechanical problems. You'd break a rod one week and the next you'd break a valve.

"We try to win now everywhere we go, but if we can't win and we've got a third-place car, we'll finish third and go on to the next track. We're just trying to be consistent now and trying to be there at the end. We really hope we can be there at the end Sunday."

Talladega kind to stock car alumni

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — All those stock car guys look real comfortable on Talladega's 2.66-mile oval, even if they are in unfamiliar cars.

An IROC Dodge Avenger isn't a Winston Cup car, but it's more like a stock car than it is like a World Sports Car or an Indy-car.

■ IROC Series

So that makes guys like Mark Martin, the defending International Race of Champions series champion and current points leader, as well as fellow NASCAR stock car stars Dale Earnhardt, Rusty Wallace, Jeff Gordon, Ken Schrader and Ricky Rudd, the ones to beat in Saturday's 38-lap, 101-mile race.

Steve Kinser, the 14-time sprint car champion shocked the racing world by winning the Talladega race last year as an IROC rookie and a virtual novice on superspeedways.

Scott Pruett, the current IndyCar PPG Cup point leader and last year's SCCA Trans-Am champion, has won two IROC races previously.

Lincoln Continental emerges as sophisticated understatement

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to The Reporter-Telegram

In our nation's capital recently, where Ford Chairman Alex Trottman unwrapped a new generational successor to Lincoln Continental, the courtly full-size 4-door sedan twirled on a turntable under a cascade of spotlights which reflected the gleam of bright chrome grille, a boldly raked windshield and slinky side panels that together conveyed an aggressive stance with wedge-like profile and fat tires pushed to the limits of a broad rectangular plan.

Continental, we were told, carried a muscular new V8 engine to pitch it into power contention with all comers.

It stocked every conceivable safety system, plus sophisticated mechanical hardware so it could perform agile tricks through turns and curves, and it also contained enough luxury trappings to sate a potentate.

Its techno-electronic wizardry extended beyond a dazzling electronic display of instruments in the dashboard to a computer-based command system that remembers and regulates driver preferences for steering and suspension settings, seat and steering wheel positions, even adjustments to mirrors and radio dials.

Despite these internal bells and whistles, my first impression of Continental as it spun around on that Washington stage was less than enthusiastic. To me, its lines vaguely resembled an inflated Mercury Grand Marquis.

That understated styling, the car's chief designer informed me, was intentional to appeal to Continental's traditional market but also entice new, younger buyers.

Several weeks and the miles across a continent passed before I got to drive Continental on California freeways and twisty mountain roads through breath-taking Big Sur.

Let me tell you: After successfully steering it for 3,000 vertical feet down a narrow snake route to reach the Pacific Coast Highway, my opinion of this car soared. For a big car, it performs awesome pavement maneuvers and at the same time, it swamps you with luxury elements.

Adding those computerized commands becomes the ultimate bonus, both tool and toy for the kid in you to play.

Mounted on driver's door, two buttons bring commands for first and second drivers. Punch button one and you set preferences for seat position, steering wheel level, internal and external mirrors and various ride functions, even presets for favorite radio stations.

A second driver — such as a spouse, perhaps — may set similar preferences by using the second button.

Then, anytime you slip behind the steering wheel, simply tap your designated button and the car automatically adjusts everything the way you want it.

To turn the steering wheel, do you prefer firm, normal or easy effort? To manage the suspension system, would you want a ride quality that's soft, normal or solid? When you shift into reverse gear, should exterior mirrors tilt so you may see rear wheels more clearly?

How about intensity of instrument lighting? Should doors automatically lock when you move in forward gears Do you desire lights on as you exit, and if so for how long? Which radio stations will you punch up? When doors lock by remote fob, should the system chirp to tell you it's set?

The list of choices is long, but the effect is like having a magical genie on-board to attend to your desires.

When I first heard of this incredible system of commands and options, I imagined I'd need a crash course in computers to learn to operate it, yet I quickly discovered its user-friendly nature.

Push-button controls to the right of the instrument panel lead you through commands displayed with easy-to-read LED instructions.

Once I ventured beyond the delights of playing with that dashboard genie, I discovered the cushy realm of luxury that Continental provides: Plush leather seating, power everything, conveniences positioned at every angle, plus an unmatched level of quietness inside.

One of the car's few options has to do with front seat configuration.

Specify sporty twin buckets and you end up with center-mount gear shifter and a console with armrest that flips to reveal an optional cellular phone.

A 3-person bench with column-mounted shift lever also stocks a fold down armrest which conceals a cellular telephone.

Continental's new powertrain also impressed me.

The new all-aluminum 4.6-liter V8 engine, with 4-cam configuration and 32-valve format, features sequential port electronic fuel injection and an output of 260 horsepower.

The 4-wheel road calibrated suspension with front struts and rear SLA produces a responsive ride quality for such a big car. Severe hairpin twists navigated on a narrow blacktop strip in my descent to the California coast produced only minimal body roll. Those three quality selections (firm/normal/plush) puts the driver in control for cushy or even sporty driving techniques.

In my final analysis, Continental's computerized handling systems and muscular powertrain merged with all those luxury features to capture my attention.

By then, though, I also began to appreciate that subtle styling for Continental's exterior. It's an understatement, which in itself is such an elegant concept.

Check it out in black with big chrome wheels: Wow.

New Mazda Protege re-engineered for '95

IRVINE, Calif. — The Mazda Protege sedan has been completely re-engineered and redesigned for 1995. The all-new Protege compact sedan boasts the largest interior in its class, as well as a host of features normally associated with more expensive midsize vehicles. This can be attributed in part to the fact that the Protege's design process emulated the process used for the Millenia luxury sedan.

The new Protege features 95.5 cubic feet of EPA interior volume, equal to the much larger Infiniti Q45. This gives the Protege a solid advantage in overall space and rear-seat headroom and legroom when compared to the Honda Civic, Toyota Corolla, Nissan Sentra and Dodge Neon. The Protege offers one of the largest trunks in its class, particularly useful for young couples or families who represent the primary target buyers in this segment.

When development of the Protege began, Mazda had adopted a design philosophy, called Hibiki, aimed at promoting the company's originality and identity. The Mazda Millenia luxury sedan was the first product to be introduced in the U.S. using this Hibiki design philosophy. Some of the positive attributes found in the Millenia luxury sedan, such as designing a car to exceed the needs of consumers, delivering maximum value, providing exceptional quality and refinement, balanced fuel economy and performance and offering world-class safety features are also found in the new Protege. Similarly, the Protege is designed to make a significant impact in its segment, not only in terms of quality, performance and refinement, but also in terms of real-world value.

Development of the Protege, Mazda's best-selling model in the U.S., marked a departure from that of previous Mazda models. A core group of stylists, engineers and product planners, called the "Trinity Team," oversaw all facets of the vehicle's development.

As with the Millenia luxury sedan, an additional step - a verification drawing — was added to the product design process to ensure optimal manufacturing quality. By subjecting this verification drawing for review by Mazda's testing and manufacturing engineers, as well as parts suppliers, potential problems could be identified and corrected on the drawing before production of the first prototype.

This has since become a part of the development of every new Mazda.

A key element of the Protege design process —dubbed OptiSpace Design — was to maximize the overall space efficiency of the vehicle. Going a step further than the recently touted cab-forward design process, OptiSpace encompasses all aspects of the vehicle's design: styling; interior spaciousness and packaging; engine compartment design; overall vehicle safety; and the functionality of the space within the vehicle.

There are three Protege models for 1995: the economical DX, the well equipped LX and the powerful ES. The DX and LX are equipped with an all-new 1.5-liter dual overhead camshaft 16-valve four-cylinder engine that delivers exceptional fuel economy and impressive performance. The ES is powered by a refined version of the 1.8-liter dual overhead camshaft 16-valve engine used in Mazda's popular Miata sports car. This engine benefits from the same free-revving, fun-to-drive characteristics as the Miata.

The 1.5-liter ECO (economy and ecology) engine used in the Protege DX and LX is an all-new design, created to be one of the most efficient engines in its class. This engine provides 92 horsepower at 5,500 rpm and 96 pound-feet of torque at 4,000 rpm.

Sequential multi-port electronic fuel injection and numerous friction- and weight-saving details help this engine deliver fuel economy ratings of 31 mpg City/39 mpg Highway with the five-speed manual transmission, a nine-percent improvement over the 1.8-liter engine in the previous model.

The 1.8-liter engine that powers the Protege ES model is retained from the previous model, but with substantial refinements that result in greater efficiency and reduced noise. Both engines are available with either five-speed manual or electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmissions. Both transmission choices have gearing designed to optimize each engine's performance and efficiency objectives.

The body of the Protege was engineered to be as rigid and strong as possible. Mazda used extensive computer modeling and simulations to help engineer the Protege's body. The Protege's body is 1.9 times more rigid in bending and 1.5 times more rigid in torsion than the previous model. In fact, for its weight, the body of the Protege has the highest bending and torsional rigidity of any vehicle in its class. As was done with the RX-7 sports car, real world testing of the platform's stiffness occurred on one of the world's most challenging race tracks, the famed Nurburgring road course in Germany.

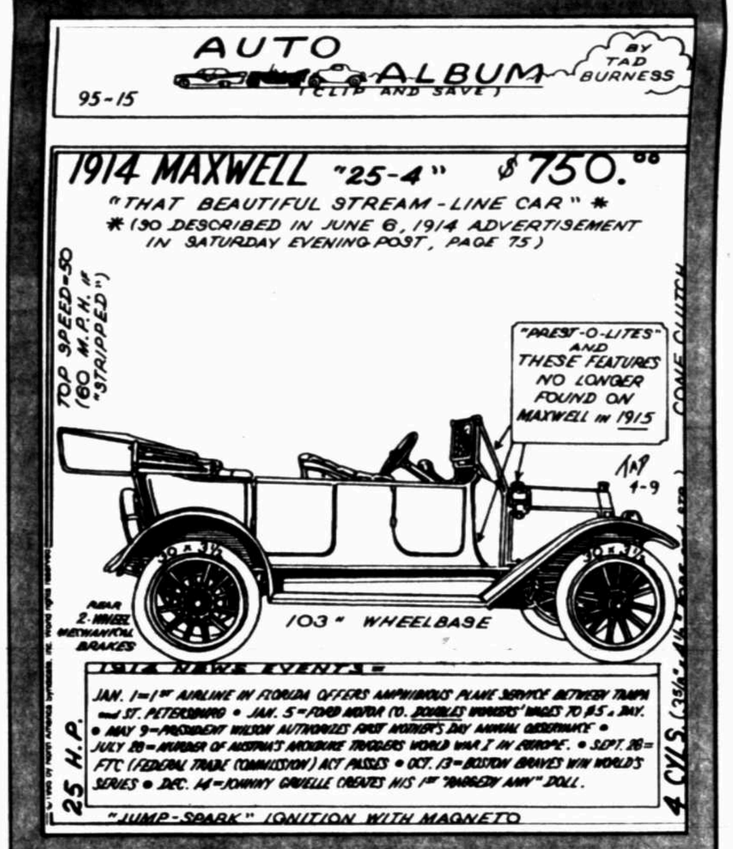

Substantial improvements to the Protege suspension result in improved handling and reduced vibration and harshness. The front suspension is a MacPherson strut design, with a stabilizer bar standard on all models. The Protege ES also uses a liquid-filled bushing for the rear mount of the lower A-arm that helps reduce harshness and minimize road noise. The rear suspension is a modified version of Mazda's proven Twin Trapezoidal Link design. The lateral links have been extended almost to the centerline of the vehicle, resulting in better road holding and improved ride comfort. The rear stabilizer bar is mounted with ball joints, replacing the previous rubber bushings.

Both front and rear suspensions are carried on reinforced cross members that now attach to the body at six points, rather than four. This helps create a more stable platform for the suspension and adds to the overall rigidity of the vehicle.

The redesigned and reengineered 1995 Mazda Protege offers the largest interior in its class. The three Protege models: the DX, LX and ES, all offer new dual overhead camshaft, 16-valve engines.

1914 MAXWELL

Imagine this boxy old thing being advertised as "that beautiful streamline car!" However, when compared with the flimsy, primitive horseless carriages built 10 or 15 years earlier, the 1914 Maxwell may well indeed have seemed streamlined.

In the mid-teens, any touring car (open four-door convertible) that had straight-line body sides (tops of side doors even with a level belt line) was considered new and streamlined in design. Few people then could visualize how the shapes of automobiles would change during the 1920s and again during the 1940s.

This was the final Maxwell to have the old-fashioned acetylene gas lights. Acetylene was a flammable gas made with calcium carbide and water. In recent years, it has continued to be used as a fuel for welding or cutting torches, but before the mid-teens it was frequently used to illuminate headlamps, cowl lamps, and dash lamps of automobiles. A gasoline supply was carried in a cylindrical tank, fastened to the running board or elsewhere. But the coming of electrical lighting made gas and oil lamps obsolete
