Second federal prison may be in city's future

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Big Spring could have another prison in operation within a year, City Councilman Johnny Rutherford announced today at a morning news conference.

The proposed prison, a privately-operated detention center for illegal aliens, could provide 150-175 local jobs, he said.

Big Spring City Council is expected to address the issue at a special 4 p.m. Monday meeting, where it could formulate a resolution to be passed on final reading Tuesday giving the project city approval.

Once city approval is granted, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service is expected to follow suit with a letter of intent that will give coordinators federal permission to construct the prison.

Between the time the letters of intent are signed and a final agreement is reached the public will have an opportunity to debate the issue, Rutherford said.

Construction of the $10-12 million prison could begin in 30 to 45 days and the facility could be operational by early 1988, Rutherford said.

Private operators Ed Davenport, former mayor of Brady, and Roy Burnes, president of Eden Detention Center, will present a proposal to lease approximately 18 acres at the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark for the 100,000-square-foot building.

"We definitely want to hire the local labor force for construction," Burnes said today during a telephone interview.

Burnes said local subcontractors would be employed, along with an engineer from Nashville, Tenn.

The prison would be designated a Level 2 detention center with the potential of being upgraded to a Level 4 and is projected to house a total of 512 prisoners — illegal aliens serving one- to two-year terms while awaiting deportation, Burnes said.

The federal prison camp is a Level 1 facility, officials said.

Additional details of the proposal will be discussed with the Council Monday, Burnes said.

Burnes and Davenport had initially expressed interest in locating the prison in Midland, but couldn't obtain permission to locate the facility near the airport, Rutherford said.

Big Spring will benefit in several ways if construction of the prison is approved, Rutherford said.

The city will receive $1 per day per inmate, or approximately $180,000 a year if the facility is at capacity level, he said.

It would in turn provide administrative and accounting services that will cost an estimated $20,000, he said.

It's possible the service could be provided for less if present city employees provide the service, he added.

Rutherford said he planned to meet today with Howard College President Bob Riley about organizing a college program for prospective jailers and guards to earn necessary certification.

"Bob Riley is excited about the economic impact it could have on Howard College," Rutherford said. The training program could lead to additional contracts throughout West Texas and possibly a police academy, he said.

According to federal requirements, jailers and guards are required to have 40 hours of annual training, he said.

Rutherford estimated the prison would have a $30 million yearly profit.

Big Spring City Councilman Johnny Rutherford points to the location of a proposed privately-operated prison during a news conference at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce today. Rutherford said the prison would be located west of the airport manager's office at the Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark. Council members are scheduled to discuss the proposed prison at 4 p.m. Monday.

Board names West Texan school principal

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Independent School District Board of Trustees named native West Texan Kent Bowermon the new high school principal after emerging from closed session Thursday.

Currently the assistant principal at Arlington Sam Houston High School, Bowermon will begin his duties with Big Spring in July with an annual salary of $46,200.

District Superintendent Bill McQueary said Bowermon's rapport with students and faculty and counseling background were factors in his selection. The biggest factor to McQueary, though, is Bowermon's commitment to education.

"When I asked Kent what his major goal as principal at Big Spring High School would be," McQueary said, "he told me he'd like to see the number of National Merit Scholars at the school triple." That comment convinced McQueary that Bowermon was committed to improving the quality of education.

He replaces Murray Murphy, who was recently named assistant superintendent for personnel and instruction for the district.

Board Vice-President Ford Farris added to McQueary's comments by saying that Bowermon had a reputation of being "tough, but fair" with students — a quality Farris said the board sought.

"We're looking forward to having him on board," Farris said.

Bowermon was unavailable for comment this morning, but Bud Remyne, principal at Arlington Sam Houston, said "Kent is a fine young man. He's done a very fine job here and I hate to see him go."

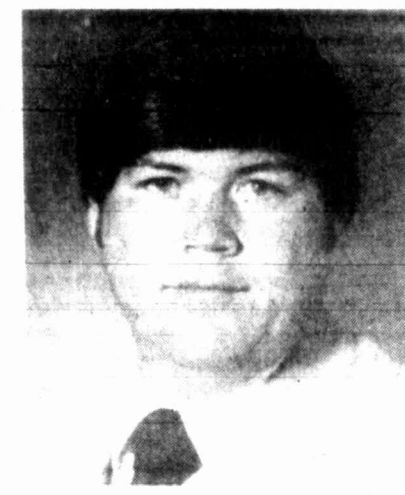

"He will be an asset to the Big Spring school district," Remyne added.

A Lubbock native, Bowermon graduated from Coronado High School in 1967 where he was a member of the National Honor Society, Who's Who and Honorable Mention All-State in football. He attended Texas Tech University — receiving his bachelor's degree in education in 1971 and his master's degree in guidance and counseling in 1973.

He has had 13 years experience in the education field, starting with the Lubbock school district as a teacher and coach before the same duties with the Arlington school district.

He has been an assistant principal for the past few years, first at Shackelford Junior High in Arlington, then at Sam Houston High School. Bowermon, 38, and his wife Kathryn have two children, Keely, 11, and Kade, 8.

Big Spring Assistant Principal Craig Fischer and teacher Roland Atkins were among the 33 candidates considered for the position, school officials announced.

State Hospital rated well in panel's study

Herald staff and wire reports

A recent study graded Big Spring State Hospital's treatment at acceptable levels, although not all Texas facilities did as well.

Some patients in Texas' community facilities and eight mental hospitals are not getting adequate care and treatment, a member of a court-appointed mental health panel says.

Texas is 47th or 48th among states in mental health funding, "and it's difficult to do a great deal when you're that far behind. I think we have been attempting for years to develop an adequate program with just minimal resources," David Pharis said Thursday.

Pharis summarized a three-volume report to U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas on the state's compliance with a 1981 settlement of a lawsuit filed by parents of mental health patients.

Robert von Rosenberg, acting superintendent of the local facility, said today that there are always differences of opinion on record keeping, the aspect cited as needing improvement locally.

"What they said is that our care is better than our records show," he explained.

Officials conducting the study visited the facility several months ago, according to von Rosenberg.

He said that outside reviewers typically indicate that "if the information is not in the records, you didn't do it." One goal, he said, has been more objective goals to establish progress — "It's always difficult when dealing with (treatment) of human behavior."

Another factor, he said, is a simple difference of opinion of what needs to be included in the records. The report for the period December through April is the 10th since the three-member R.A.J. Review Panel began monitoring compliance in 1982.

MHMR's budget request for 1988-89 is only "minimally adequate" for compliance with the settlement agreement, Pharis said.

"The problem is still very bad because you have conditions in the hospitals where people are not getting decent care, and there are programs in communities that are inadequate to meet the needs

Brauns prepare for departure

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

Sorry to leave, but willing to go where the Lord sends them.

That's how Captains Carroll and Helen Braun, directors of the Salvation Army in Big Spring, summarize their impending departure from Big Spring, Helen said.

Saturday is their final day of duty here, she said. Carroll leaves town Monday to attend a conference in Chicago, and Helen leaves Wednesday for their new home in Texarkana.

They are being replaced by Lt. and Mrs. Tex Ellis of the North Carolina, said Bob Crowell, Army board president.

Advisory Board member Bob Crowell said the two should arrive near July 1.

A farewell reception for the Brauns will be conducted from 4 to 6 p.m. today at the Salvation Army Corps Community Center at Fifth and Aylford Streets. Citizens are invited to drop by for refreshments and a visit with the couple. A money tree will be a parting gift.

"It's almost like leaving home, we've been here so long," Helen Braun said. The couple has directed the Big Spring organization for the past six years.

"We felt this is where the Lord sent us. We're sorrowful about leaving, but we're going to the next place with the same attitude," she said.

The Salvation Army program in Texarkana is larger than the one here, and includes a halfway house for recently released convicts, she said.

Helen said the highlight of the couple's career in Big Spring has been the construction of the new building at Fifth and Aylford Streets, dedicated in May.

The project began soon after the Brauns arrived from West Virginia in 1981, she said. A feasibility study was conducted about 5½ years ago to determine the community's needs.

The campaign to finance and build the new facility was what kept the couple in Big Spring longer than the usual tenure, she said — usually, the Salvation Army moves couples every three to four years.

The local Advisory Board requested they stay because of the building campaign, and the Army leaders agreed, she Captains Carroll and Helen Braun, directors of the Salvation Army, are to be honored at a farewell reception this afternoon at the Army's new building at Fifth and Aylford Streets. The couple, stationed in Big Spring the past six years, have been transferred to Texarkana.

Although the board asked that they be allowed to stay another year, the request was refused, she added.

The couple would have liked to stay another year to accomplish more, she said, such as establishing a shelter for battered wives, renovating the old shelter and finding a purpose for the Citadel on Fourth Street.

Big Spring "has been an easy community to work with," because the people are so supportive of the Army, she said, adding that she believes the goals will be addressed by the new directors.

City officials busily bent on balancing the budget

Herald staff report

City officials are busy developing a 1987-88 budget and narrowing the field of candidates for fire marshal.

Finance Director Tom Ferguson said this morning that he finished two days of examining proposed departmental budgets with department heads.

The officials worked Wednesday and Thursday on the project, determining anticipated revenues and expenses, and balancing each departmental budget, he said.

"We will have a balanced budget to take to the Council," in an all-day work session, probably June 29 or 30, he said. Revenues equal or exceed expenditures in each department, he said.

City expenditures for fiscal year 1986 exceeded by $267,000 the $6.6 million received in revenues, an audit revealed. But Ferguson said the city was not in debt, because it was able to use money carried forward from last year.

However, only $25,000 will be left in the general fund from this year's budget, at the end of the fiscal year this fall, he said, calling that amount "very, very insignificant."

Officials prefer leaving a balance of two months operating expense — about $500,000, he said.

Ferguson said that although totals haven't been developed, he expects revenues to continue to be low. He anticipates a $90,000 ending balance in the general fund at the end of the 1987-88 fiscal year.

City Manager Mack Wofford continues to consider 11 candidates for fire marshal, a position recently vacated when Jim Ryals retired

Clements releases 10-item agenda

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers formally summoned back for a special legislative session next week will work from a 10-item agenda that includes proposed income tax bans along with a still-missing state budget.

Gov. Bill Clements issued the official call for a special session to begin at 2 p.m. Monday. "The primary issue before us is to maintain the current level of spending with budget increases only for selected priority programs," Clements said Thursday.

The 140-day regular session that ended June 1 without a 1988-89 budget was the first since 1961 in which lawmakers failed to pass a spending plan for state government.

Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis have met since adjournment in search of a compromise plan. Hobby proposed a $39.3 billion budget, Lewis a $38.4

billion budget and Clements has indicated support for a plan totaling approximately $38.1 billion.

Clements, who vowed during the regular session to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, said he still opposes substantial increases in government spending.

"We not only must agree on a responsible budget for the next two years, but we also must be vehement in our commitment against tax-and-spend philosophies," he said.

Clements also listed on the session's agenda consideration of proposed constitutional amendments that would place before voters a ban on corporate and personal state income taxes.

He said such prohibitions are vital to the continued economic growth of the state.

Under the constitution, a governor sets the agenda for special sessions. Besides the budget and tax bans, Clements listed seven other issues, including legislation that would:

- Create a select committee to study judicial reform in Texas, including examining the way judges are selected.
- Give the governor and a panel of other officials "budget execution authority," or increased power to shift funds between agencies during times of fiscal trouble.
- Require full financial disclosure to the public by governmental subdivisions.
- Form a state personnel office.
- Create special committees to study the effectiveness of state government management and to look at state and local retirement systems.
- Consolidate some state and federal funds coming into state government.

Weather

Severe thunderstorms were expected over much of West Texas and Northwest Texas tonight and Saturday.

A severe thunderstorm watch covered northern portions of the Panhandle early today and the National Weather Service said intense thunderstorms were moving towards Texas from southern Colorado and western Kansas.

Forecasts called for fair to partly cloudy skies statewide with a chance of thunderstorms through Saturday. A few of the storms may reach severe levels tonight and Saturday over much of West Texas and Northwest Texas.

Teaching creationism not required by court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, invoking the constitutionally required separation of church and state, ruled today that states may not require public schools that teach evolution to teach creationism also.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, struck down a Louisiana law requiring that teaching the theory of evolution be balanced by teaching the theory of creation-science, also called creationism.

Creation-science states that the earth and most life forms came into existence suddenly about 6,000 years ago, in a process similar to a literal translation of the Book of Genesis.

Proponents of creation-science say the theory is not based on religion, and that the Louisiana law was an attempt to provide academic freedom. Today the court rejected that argument.

Critics of creation-science have attacked it as religion masquerading as science.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan said the purpose of the Louisiana law "was to restructure the science curriculum to conform with a particular religious viewpoint."

Sheriff's log

Weaponry taken from truck

Brent Nichols, HC 76 Box 307, reported to the Howard County Sheriff's Office $1,000 damage to his pickup truck and $934 in stolen goods.

Nichols told sheriff deputies that the theft and vandalism occurred between 9-11 p.m. Thursday while his truck was parked one-fourth mile west of Elbow School.

The windshield, rear window, two side windows and two side mirrors were smashed, according to a criminal mischief report filed at the sheriff's office.

Two rifles valued at a total of $500, a 22-caliber pistol valued at $250, two stereo speakers valued at $120 and two skinning knives valued at $64 were reported stolen.

In addition, all four tires appeared to have been punctured.

No footprints were found around the vehicle.

The case is under investigation, according to the sheriff's office.

• Jesus Abreo Ramirez III, 21, 1002 N. Main St. Apt. 68, was released Thursday on bonds totaling $1,500. He was arrested Wednesday by city police in the 200 block of West Eighth Street on suspicion of carrying a prohibited weapon and failure to maintain financial responsibility.

• Clarence Dewayne Trawick, 28, Route 1 Box 683, was arrested Thursday on suspicion of driving while license suspended and failure to maintain financial responsibility. He was released on bonds totaling $1,000.

Anguish

Truck driver Daniel Hurst is shaken after his vehicle struck 8-year-old Frank James Warwick of Blaine, Tenn., Thursday. Witnesses say the boy rode his bicycle into the path of the truck. The child died hours later at a local hospital after the Knoxville accident.

Police beat

Somone stole a 1976 gray Buick Limited owned by Lou Goode, 1215 Lindbergh St., from Highland Mall Saturday, she told police Thursday. The doors were unlocked and the keys inside.

• A man's $150 gold ring owned by Dan Day, 1002 Wood St., was stolen from 300 S. Owens St. between 9:30 p.m. Wednesday and 10:30 a.m. Thursday, police reports said.

• Vandals caused $200 damage to two walls owned by Kidde Corp., 2514 Albrook St., manager Thomas Minding told police.

• Thieves stole two tires and two wheels, valued at $168, from the bed of a 1979 tan Chevrolet pickup owned by Samuel Wayne Weirich of Tyler, according to police reports. The theft occurred at 1000 W. Fourth St. between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 6:50 a.m. Thursday.

• A man's and a woman's blue Huffy 10-speed bicycles, valued at $60, were taken from the yard at 1101 E. 16th St., the residence of Rodney Sanders, between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

• Police arrested two Big Spring males in the 2000 block of South Gregg Street early this morning. Duane Scott Cadzow, 24, 538 Westover Road, was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated and driving with a defective headlight, police reports said.

Timothy Lee Threats, 17, 511 S. Goliad St., was arrested on a charge of failure to identify himself, according to police reports.

• Steven Eugene Willis, 30, of Fort Worth was arrested at the 401 S. Johnson St. 7-Eleven store early this morning on suspicion of theft over $20 and on a Fort Worth sheriff's office warrant.

Hospital

in terms of numbers," he said. "Texas patients not getting adequate care, and this public system is particularly aimed at providing services to the poor, so it is Texas poor who are being underserved," he said.

W. Kent Johnson, director of legal services for the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said many of the report's criticisms "deal purely with questions of professional judgment."

"Mental health professionals will differ on their approach to various issues and such differences are to be expected," Johnson said.

"The panel and its consultants have not only attempted to substitute their professional judgment for that of department staff, they have attempted to substitute incorrect judgments."

Pharis, a social worker and panel coordinator, said two issues concerned him most — individual care in the hospitals and long-term community care.

"We're not trying to prevent people from being discharged to appropriate facilities in the community, but we feel it is necessary that there are adequate standards and program descriptions in place and mechanisms in place aimed at protecting people's rights," Pharis said.

The report said the panel and consultants had found that Big Spring State Hospital, Austin State Hospital, Kerrville State Hospital's geriatric section and Wichita Falls State Hospital are providing acceptable levels of individualized treatment.

Five hospitals were identified as having continuing problems with individualized treatment planning and programs — San Antonio State Hospital, Vernon State Hospital, Terrell State Hospital, Rusk State Hospital and the general psychiatric unit at Kerrville State Hospital.

Also, the report said, six of the eight hospitals "are having little or no trouble" in meeting new patient-staff ratio requirements. San Antonio and Rusk state hospitals have had some trouble but are currently hiring staff, the report said.

Among other items of documented progress, the report said, is the proper use of mind-altering medications, renovation of buildings, fewer patients and improved protection for patients.

One of the more "exciting findings" is that although the number of aggressive incidents went up slightly over the six-month period, the number of injuries that stemmed from them decreased about 28 percent, Pharis said.

Over easy

An unidentified worker unloads the grain cargo of an 18-wheeler that turned over on a median and blocked an east bound and a west bound lane, slowing traffic on I-20 west of Big Spring for four hours this morning, Highway Patrolman Weldon Jones said. The driver, Billy Prock, 30, of Abilene, was treated and released at Scenic Mountain Hospital after the accident involving his truck, Jones said. An investigation into the cause of the accident is pending, he said.

City budget

No interviews have yet been conducted, he said.

Wofford said he expects to have narrowed the field by Monday or Tuesday, with a goal of naming a new fire marshal about the first of July.

The fire marshal is responsible for inspecting buildings for fire safety and enforcing codes concerning weedy lots and dilapidated buildings, Fire Department Capt. Alex Calvio has said.

Wofford has said he expects 70 percent of the new fire marshal's time will be devoted to the latter duty.

Theft rise concerns officials

During the past two months there have been residential burglaries in northern and southern Howard County, the Howard County Sheriff's Office reported in a Crime Stoppers report.

Rifles, hand guns, jewelry and clothing have been stolen.

Anyone having information on these or other burglaries should call Crime Stoppers at 263-1151 or the Howard County Sheriff's Office at 263-7654 and ask for Deputies George Quintero or Jack Howard.

All information will be checked and will be strictly confidential. Persons calling need not identify themselves. Rewards will be offered for information leading to the arrest and indictment of anyone responsible for these burglaries.

College to sponsor national teleconference on illiteracy

Howard College will be the local host of a national teleconference on adult illiteracy and its impact on the work force.

The conference is set for 6:30 to 10 p.m. Tuesday in the East Room of Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. For reservations, contact the office of President Bob Riley, 267-6311, Ext. 315.

The conference's goal is to bring together leaders of literacy action programs with leaders from industry, government, labor and community groups from 1,000 communities to develop a coordinated literacy education program, Riley said.

The conference will be broadcast live from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington, D.C. as a town hall-type meeting, he said.

Models of exemplary literacy plans will be showcased, and substantial time blocks devoted to questions and comments from participants around the country, Riley said.

Chief talks

Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill says he has no intention of seeking resignations from two justices rebuked by a state commission, even though the disciplinary action hurt the court's reputation. Hill asked Gov. Bill Clements Thursday to place merit election of Texas appeals judges on the agenda for the special legislative session starting Monday. Clements' legislative agenda includes the creation of a special committee on judicial reform.

Jury may be deadlocked

FORT WORTH — Jurors appeared seriously, if not hopelessly, deadlocked today and raised the specter of a mistrial in the $16.5 million wrongful death suit against industrialist Cullen Davis.

Judge Claude Williams summoned the panel from the jury room shortly before 10 a.m. and issued the Allen charge, a so-called "dynamite charge" designed as a final step in imploring jurors to arrive at a verdict.

Attorneys for Davis vehemently opposed the action and demanded a mistrial. Williams overruled the motion and instructed jurors to resume deliberations.

Trailways to be bought

WASHINGTON — Greyhound Lines Inc. today said it had reached agreement to take over the financially ailing Trailways Corp. in an $80 million deal that will leave the nation with only one national inter-city bus company.

Greyhound chairman Fred Currey said that Greyhound will guarantee continued bus service to the cities and towns served exclusively by Trailways.

He said the precarious financial position of Trailways, a privately held company, had endangered service to those cities and towns. Trailways, a smaller line than Greyhound, predominantly serves the South and East Coast as far north as New York.

Trial records may be used

AUSTIN — The state can use the 1966 court records of James Cross' first murder trial in his retrial on charges that he strangled a University of Texas student, a judge has ruled.

State District Judge Mace Thurman Jr. ruled Thursday that the plastic records used by the court reporter 21 years ago could be played for the current jury.

Defense attorneys argued that the state should be allowed to use only direct testimony from surviving witnesses. Ten of the original witnesses are dead.

The trial, which is expected to last at least a week, was to continue today.

Cross, now 44, pleaded innocent Thursday on a new indictment that accuses him of strangling Susan Rigby with his hands and her clothing.

Cross confessed in 1966 to killing both Ms. Rigby and her sorority sister, Shirley Stark.

Mother tries to kill children

HOUSTON — A woman accused of throwing six of her seven children into a downtown bayou has been sentenced to 10 years probation after pleading no contest to charges of murder and attempted capital murder, attorneys say.

Juana Leija, 30, entered the pleas Thursday in the death of her son and the attempted capital murder of a daughter. As part of a plea bargain arrangement, three remaining charges of attempted capital murder were dismissed, said her attorney, Dick DeGuerin.

Visiting State District Judge Jimmy James then sentenced Mrs. Leija to 10 years deferred adjudication, meaning her record will be cleared if she successfully completes the probation terms.

Two of Mrs. Leija's children, 5-year-old Juana and 6-year-old Judas Dimas, drowned in the muddy waters of the bayou on April 18, 1986, but nearby workers heard the children's screams and rescued four others.

Their mother said at the time that the world was a terrible place and she thought her children would be better off dead.

Clements signs open meetings revisions

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements has signed into law legislation that strengthens the Open Meetings Act, saying it will help make government more accountable to the public.

"The people have a right to know what goes on in state government," Clements said, noting that the bill will help guarantee that governmental bodies "discuss the public's business in public."

Clements said the legislation he endorsed Thursday has benefits for both the public and governmental officials.

"This bill will force governmental bodies to think twice before going into closed sessions, while at the same time protecting them from frivolous lawsuits," he said.

Signing of the bill, which Clements' aides said takes effect immediately, capped efforts begun in 1977 to close the law's loopholes.

The current law allows governmental bodies to meet in private, "executive" sessions to discuss a variety of matters, including personnel matters, litigation and property acquisition. The bill would require them to keep certified agendas or tape recordings of such closed meetings.

Bulldogs earn special victory

The Rockdale County High School basketball team of Conyers, Ga., won 21 games and lost five this past season and, in a dramatic finish, won the state championship in March. But since the Rockdale County Bulldogs took that title, they've won a far more significant victory.

After the championship tournament was over, school officials discovered that a student who had played for 45 seconds in the first of the team's post-season games was academically ineligible because he had passed only four of six courses in the fall semester, not five of six as required under state eligibility rules.

The player's participation in the game made no difference in the outcome, he played in the last minute of the game, when his team was ahead by 23 points.

Nonetheless, the school reported itself and, because it did, the team was officially stripped of the championship and the trophy it had won.

There was never a doubt about the school's decision to report the ineligible player.

"Some people have said we should just have kept quiet about it," said Coach Cleveland Stroud. "But you got to do what's honest and right and what the rules say. I told my team that people forget the scores of basketball games; they don't forget what you're made of."

It ought not to be surprising that the community has rallied around the school and its coach; nor ought it to be disappointing that the state athletic association yanked the trophy, even for such a minor self-reported infraction.

The decision, rather than demeaning the school's act of integrity, honors it.

At a time when competitive sports — in college and often in high school — is associated with a very different set of ethics, what Rockdale did won the school a lot more than the trophy it lost.

The school's principal, Henry Gibbs, said he went on the loudspeaker to tell the student body what had happened, "then I hurried out of there (because) I didn't want them to see me crying."

Three cheers for the Bulldogs and one cheer more.

Citizen lauds museum exhibition

To the editor:

If you visited the Heritage Museum History Exhibit Thursday (June 11), I'm sure you left with a great sense of pride!

Our curator, Angie Way and the assistant curator Melody Darden, with the help of several outstanding citizens, took the visitors back to happier days in Big Spring. The coming of the railroad, the building of the round house, the cattle ranches and the oil boom were great days for our city!

If the pioneers whose names are written on the wall, could speak to us today, I am sure they would say "Hang in there, stand tall, better times are coming!"

We must strive to build up our city so that our children and our grandchildren will not be forced to settle elsewhere.

We are proud of our museum and the summer programs that they offer to our youth.

Paper told not to butter up City Hall

To the editor:

I would like to find out who wrote the article in June 17th Herald — that City Hall is listening. Whoever it is aren't attending the same meetings the rest of the people are or they are trying to butter up to City Hall.

Did they think City Hall listened to the people on the high water bills or even to the committee appointed to check into the problem? No.

Are they listening to the taxpayers in Jones Valley who have been begging for help for years on their streets and flooding problems? No.

Have they listened to the firefighters on their rights on retirement pay? No. They are taxpayers and citizens just like the rest of the people in town, and have a right to be represented.

They didn't listen to the taxpayers on the 3.2 million dollar sewer plant that we are saddled with paying off now.

They sure didn't listen to the Herald on the ambulance device reports you published or pay heed to them.

They sure didn't listen when it was discovered the $2 month extra sewage charge wasn't going into a fund to retire the $3.2 million dollar note as it was supposed to be.

I can go on and on, but I do agree with you that the past has got to be put aside and look forward to the future, but we also have to learn from our mistakes.

This is not true in Big Spring, Texas. Our leaders have got to put their differences aside and help our city.

Our city needs to take the "can do" attitude of the county commissioners. Even though Midway Road has a lower elevation than Jones Valley, they have a definite plan to open this area up to help solve drainage problems in our city.

If our city hall is listening — it is only one problem out of hundreds and the paper has the obligation to its readers to print the truth and not try to butter up City Hall.

Arafat reconciles with Syria

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Yasir Arafat, the bristly Palestine Liberation Organization chieftain, has been given an ultimatum he can't refuse: He has been told to make up with his archenemy, Syrian President Hafez Assad — and he's going to.

What makes the rapprochement all the more bizarre is the source of the pressure on Arafat: Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, with the formidable backing of the Soviet Union. Hussein himself is a longstanding enemy of Assad, yet he's the one who ordered Arafat to get along with the Syrian dictator.

It was Assad-supported Palestinians who split the PLO four years ago and tried to assassinate Arafat in the process. But Arafat will cozy up to the hated Assad, in deference both to Iraq and to the Soviets, who are too powerful to turn down.

The Soviet strategy, according to intelligence reports, is to create a united, pro-Soviet, Arab front against Israel.

At Soviet prompting, the Palestine National Council, the PLO's "parliament-in-exile," met from April 20 to 26 in Algeria and achieved stunning progress toward unity. At the previous meeting more than two years ago, Syrian-supported radical factions boycotted the council.

This time they not only showed up, but actually reunited with Arafat's more moderate elements. There were occasions when the rapprochement seemed doomed, but each time the Soviet ambassador to Algeria, Vasily Taratuta, secretly intervened to pacify the squabbling Palestinians.

Arafat thought things were going swimmingly — until he got word from the Iraqi leader to "go easy on the Syrians" at the conference. "Arafat hit the roof at that," an intelligence source told us. "He was appalled."

Arafat shouldn't have been surprised. His own intelligence sources — probably the Saudis — had warned him that Iraq and Syria were on the verge of patching up their long and bitter hostility.

After a brief display of pique, Arafat went along with Hussein's order. Declarations by the conference that would have antagonized Syria were dropped. (Arafat later dispatched radical PLO leader George Habash to Damascus for talks with Assad.)

While the PLO meeting was going on, Assad flew to Moscow on April 23 for a two-day visit — his first in two years. In the backrooms of Moscow, our sources understand, the Soviets leaned heavily on the Syrian leader to talk things out with Iraqi President Hussein.

Just as Arafat had to pay attention to his patron, Hussein, Assad had to heed the advice of his Soviet benefactors. Syria owes the Kremlin more than $11 billion for weapons supplied over the years, and doesn't have the money to pay up. Assad's trip to Moscow was ostensibly to discuss rescheduling this huge debt, and the Soviets used it as leverage to move Syria closer to Iraq.

The Soviet pressure appears to have been decisive. The day after his return from Moscow, April 26, Assad secretly flew off to the Royal Jordanian Air Force base at Al Jafir for a dramatic meeting with Iraq's Hussein.

As we reported, the two old enemies met head-to-head for 12 hours on April 27, interrupted only occasionally by another Hussein, the Jordanian king who had arranged the meeting with the help of Saudi Crown Prince Abdallah.

The two neighbors resolved several issues outstanding between their two countries. But the most important difference — Syria's support of Iran in its war against Iraq — remained unsettled at the end of the meeting.

Jack Anderson's investigative report from Washington is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Fan bids farewell to companion

"A Prairie Home Companion" ended Saturday night and fans like myself spent the day thinking, "Tonight's the last night."

I was shocked a few months ago when Garrison Keillor, star of the popular radio show, announced he was leaving the program to pursue — with his wife — the life of a shy person in Denmark.

Fondly referred to as PHC by its fans, it has been the most popular entertainment public radio program, with an estimated weekly audience of 4 million. Keillor's book, "Lake Wobegon Days," was a 1985 best-seller and a show based on the book recently completed a 13-week stint on cable television's Disney Channel.

The success of his radio program and book put Keillor on the cover of Time magazine in 1985, and his personal life took a dramatic turn that same year with his marriage to Ulla Skaerved of Denmark — an exchange student at Keillor's high school in Anoka, Minn.

His decision to depart the show was compared by another writer to "the untimely death of a close friend."

Although seemingly exaggerated, it rang true for ardent followers of the show.

Broadcast from the World Theater in St. Paul, Keillor each week told listeners the news of his imaginary hometown Lake Wobegon, Minnesota, "the little town time forgot and the decades cannot improve."

He always began, "It's been a quiet week in Lake Wobegon." He would ramble on in his quiet, hypnotic voice about the people and events in a town "where all the women are strong, all the men are good-looking and all the children are above average."

And the music was always great, from Chet Atkins and Leo Kottke on guitar, to Jean Redpath's Scottish ballads, and Stevie Beck on the autoharp. I'll never forget the Butch Thompson Trio's polkas.

Around the rim

After I moved to Big Spring, I had to rely on the collection of recordings I'd made from shows on the radio to give me my PHC fix since I couldn't receive the Dallas PBS station.

I made several converts among family and friends and the programs were often a topic of conversation.

The show was successful for several reasons, not least of all because it was uniquely funny.

The supposed advertisements by the local Wobegon patrons, for example, were tongue-in-cheek mockeries of radio ads.

The local grocery store said, "If we don't have it, you probably can live without it." Raw Bits cereal, made from wheat chaff, is available only to those who qualified. And a PHC chorus sang "Has your family tried 'em — Powdermilk Biscuits? Well, if your family's tried 'em, then you know you've satisfied 'em. They're a real hot item."

But as much as the humor, entwined in the stories, ads and music, was a clear message: America.

While in South America I was often asked about our national food, national dance and national music.

The answer was elusive. But as I listened to "A Prairie Home Companion" I felt a part of the answer emerging. The stories reflected a way of life and thinking to which we all relate.

As a follower, I could imagine myself living in Lake Wobegon and the stories of Keillor's family sounded like my own.

An example came in the final show. Keillor, in his baritone voice, sang a three-part farewell song set to the music of Handel, and elaborated on the Minnesota method: Stand at the backdoor and say goodbye, then stand around the car and say goodbye, and finally get in the car, open the windows and say goodbye.

And the stories of small town life, where everybody knows your name, were a comfort in a world where my driver's license number often seems more important than my name.

The show also focused on evangelical church roots, the simple faith that has helped generations of Americans survive rough times.

The show touched my heart many times.

The tale of a Norwegian bachelor farmer (the original Wobegon settlers) would often bring as many tears of sadness as it did of laughter.

The program lived up to its name: It was a companion to all who listened.

While it made us laugh at our idiosyncrasies, it also helped us understand who we are and reinforced the need we have of God and each other to get through life.

And so, from my back door I say goodbye, as I stand around the car I say goodbye and finally, from inside the car and with windows open, I say goodbye to Garrison, Howard Mohr, and rest of the PHC crew.

I miss you already.

Some things just seem black, white

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

I'm a black and white man. I've always been that way, and I'm not about to change now.

I think television was better back when it was all in black and white. You knew somehow Perry Mason was wearing a blue suit in the courtroom, despite the fact it looked black on the screen.

I even prefer my newspapers to be in mostly black and white. If I wanted to read a comic book, I would have gone out and bought one.

I don't like any newspaper that looks like a third-grader got loose in the paste-up department with a box of crayons.

It also concerns me when I see a color weather map in a newspaper and Florida is yellow and poor Minnesota is blue.

People who live in Minnesota have enough problems just trying not to freeze to death without some newspaper weather map showing how blue everything is where they live compared to all the warm, yellow, Floridians.

I like black and white movies a lot better than color movies, too. When movies started showing up in color, that's when movies got out of hand and stopped making a lot of sense.

Nobody ever got naked in a movie until there was color. And nobody made stupid movies you couldn't understand like "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

I said all that to say I agree with Woody Allen, who has complained to Congress that colorizing old black and white movies by computer is a terrible thing that must be stopped.

I don't want to see John Wayne in "Sands of Iwo Jima" in any other colors besides black and white.

That has to do with the fact that World War II, itself, was a good, old-fashioned black and white war. Good versus Evil. Everybody knew where they stood.

Throw a bunch of greens and purples and reds and yellows into "Sands of Iwo Jima" and World War II, and what you come out with is John Wayne in "The Green Berets," which was in color and was a terrible movie; and Vietnam, which also was in color, and was a terrible war.

What are they going to do next with old movies? Dub in Bob Newhart's voice in Charlie Chaplin movies? Let the bad guy take over the ranch in those old westerns?

We should stop colorization of old films right now before it gets out of hand, and if Congress doesn't do anything about it, you can.

Do what I did. I was watching James Cagney in "Yankee Doodle Dandy" the other night and some fool had colorized it.

I calmly walked over to my television and found a knob marked "one-color button." I pushed that little button and then found the knob marked "brite" and turned that, too.

You know that happened? "Yankee Doodle Dandy" was back in black and white, as the Lord obviously intended it to be.

Your set will probably allow you to do the same thing, and I think that is the simplest solution to this entire matter.

Let Congress get involved and John Wayne will show up some night on a late show wearing pink.

Jews upset by visit

MIAMI — Jewish leaders said they may follow the American Jewish Congress in boycotting a meeting here with Pope John Paul II because of the pontiff's plans to receive Austrian President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican.

"It might endanger our visit to Miami," said Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America. "Everything is an option. We will be considering the matter very seriously."

On Thursday, the 50,000-member American Jewish Congress said its leaders will boycott the Sept. 11 conference. Waldheim has been accused of taking part in Nazi war crimes during World War II.

King day denounced

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Gov. Evan Mecham's decision to recognize Martin Luther King with a proclamation instead of a holiday will only intensify a "boycott Arizona" campaign already estimated to have cost the state $18 million, say backers of a full-fledged holiday.

Mecham, who earlier this year rescinded a King holiday declared by his predecessor, announced Thursday that he would honor the slain civil rights leader with a Martin Luther King Jr. Civil Rights Day on the third Sunday in January.

The Republican governor said the original holiday was declared illegally, and the proclamation was the best he could do.

Blacks celebrate day

The 112th celebration of Juneteenth finds rural and city blacks in Texas both fighting new battles with old roots.

For Dallas, which has been experiencing racial tension since police shot two elderly black residents in separate incidents, Juneteenth has taken on special meaning and has brought hope that strength will spring from unity, community leaders said.

Meanwhile, descendants of a freed slave who are suing to regain thousands of acres of Freestone County land they say was stolen from him have enlisted the support of the widow of Martin Luther King at their annual family reunion.

Reagan opposes bill

WASHINGTON — President Reagan vowed anew today to veto congressional legislation containing provisions requiring mandatory retaliation against U.S. trading partners using unfair trading practices.

At the outset of a meeting with congressional Republicans, Reagan delivered a statement in which he reiterated his opposition to legislation that recently passed the House by a narrow margin.

Reagan said that the Gephardt bill "would move us exactly in the wrong direction, toward high tariffs and trade barriers, trade-distorting subsidies and slow growth and shrink world markets, destroy jobs."

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., left, and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, second from left, talk with singers Willie Nelson, second from right, and John Cougar Mellencamp, right, shortly before a meeting of a Senate Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry subcommittee on Capitol Hill Thursday. Nelson called on lawmakers for action to aid suffering farmers.

Farm aid

Nelson, Mellencamp testify in D.C.

WASHINGTON — Texas music legend Willie Nelson stepped into the political arena Thursday and received a brusque lecture from a senator who suggested he should stick to singing.

The exchange came during congressional testimony by Nelson and rock musician John Cougar Mellencamp, organizers of a series of "Farm Aid" benefit concerts.

But before Nelson could deliver his impassioned plea for additional government aid to struggling farmers, a conservative Republican senator delivered a stern message about the merits of the free-enterprise system and limited government.

"I'd like to point out to you, Willie, the marketplace has been pretty good to you in your endeavors," said Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn. "And just as the marketplace works in entertainment, I would suggest that the marketplace will work in other areas as well."

Nelson, wearing his hair in a ponytail and sporting a cap from his hometown Abbott (Texas) Fighting Panthers, appeared undaunted by the political broadside. Disputing the statements of several lawmakers, Nelson said the farm economy had worsened in the two years since he first testified on Capitol Hill. In Texas, 14,000 full-time farmers went bankrupt last year, Nelson said.

"I'm not a farm-policy expert," conceded Nelson, who defied the Senate's formality by wearing his traditional T-shirt, faded blue jeans and tennis shoes. "I'm just saying the people out there — the farmers of this country — are dropping out, dropping like flies. Something has to be done to save them. You guys are the smart guys. You tell them how it can be done because they need to know."

Nelson, who has raised $8 million for struggling farmers in two previous Farm Aid concerts, said a third has been scheduled for Sept. 19 in Lincoln, Neb.

Assessing the state of U.S. agriculture in the two years since the passage of the 1985 farm bill, Nelson told the committee that Farm Aid's crisis hot lines, food-distribution centers and counseling services are busier than ever.

"The people who have come up to me after the show, before the show, have told me the farm crisis is getting worse, not better," Nelson said. "One hundred percent of the people have said this."

Nelson praised family-farm legislation proposed by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., but he declined to take sides in the politically volatile legislative battle between Harkin and conservative farm groups.

Sen. Kit Bond, R-Mo., said retorted that the reform measure praised by Nelson was a disaster that would "destroy ... much of rural America."

After criticizing Nelson, Boschwitz excused himself to attend another hearing.

"I thought I was going to come here to hear Willie Nelson sing, and all I hear is the senator from Iowa, whose song I've heard before," Boschwitz said before departing.

Releases demanded

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanon's defense minister today accused the Shiite Moslem group Hezbollah of kidnapping his son and American journalist Charles Glass, and sources said Syria demanded the immediate release of both men.

CHARLES GLASS

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Syrian officers contacted the leadership of Hezbollah, or Party of God, overnight and "firmly demanded" the quick release of Glass, 36, and Ali Osseiran, 40.

Bahamians vote today

NASSAU, Bahamas — Prime Minister Lynden Pindling faced his toughest political challenge since 1967 as voters weighing opposition charges of government corruption and complicity in the drug trade cast ballots today.

At stake were the 49 seats in the House of Assembly, which will in turn determine whether Pindling, 57, is retained or forced to give way to challenger Kendal Isaacs, 61, a wealthy Nassau lawyer.

The election was considered a toss-up, and both sides predicted victory.

Pope told to cancel

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc today demanded that Pope John Paul II cancel his invitation to Kurt Waldheim because of the Austrian president's alleged Nazi past.

"You should admit your mistake and change your mind," Likud spokesman Ronit Ekstein quoted a telegram sent to the pope as saying. "This is a true test of your moral mission. Hundreds of millions of people in the world are watching you and expecting this of you."

Victims' lawyer talks

LYON, France — A lawyer for alleged Nazi victims urged a jury Thursday to "wipe the unacceptable smile" off Klaus Barbie's face by convicting the former Lyon Gestapo chief of crimes against humanity.

Joe Nordmann was one of three lawyers, all former members of the French Resistance, speaking on behalf of Barbie's alleged victims. They said there could be no forgetting and no pardon for the man called "The Butcher of Lyon."

Barbie, 73, is accused of arresting, torturing and deporting hundreds of Jews and Resistance members to Nazi extermination or concentration camps when he was an SS lieutenant heading the Gestapo in Lyon from 1942 to 1944.

"In doing justice you will wipe the unacceptable smile ... from the face of Barbie," Nordmann, 77, said.

Grandfather's sexual sins weigh heavily on his victim

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've been struggling with for years. During my childhood I was sexually abused repeatedly by my grandfather — he's my mother's father. I realize that I was a victim, but I still carry a lot of guilt and shame. Although my mother and I have always been very close, I never could bring myself to tell her. I know that Mom thinks the world of her father so I kept it from her to spare her feelings. (How do you tell your mother that her father molested you? He is still alive.)

I think I may need counseling to get over my feelings of anger and guilt. But should I involve my mother? Would it make me feel better or worse? I am terribly confused. What should I do?

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE
DEAR CAUGHT: You need counseling. Perhaps the person who should be confronted is your grandfather. He needs to know that you are still hurting and feeling guilty for something that he did. It's also possible that there are others in your family who were also abused by your grandfather, and need help as much as you. Call a social service agency in your area and inquire about counseling. There are also support groups for adults who have been sexually abused as children. Please get pro-essional help today, and then decide who should be involved.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I saw a young woman slip a pack of cigarettes into her purse while shopping at a market. She did this quite openly, so we thought she intended to pay for them, but after she unloaded her groceries, she didn't bring out the cigarettes. The cashier rang up her groceries, dog food, etc., which she paid for with food stamps, then she left with the cigarettes in her purse — unpaid for.

We asked the cashier if that woman shopped there often, and she said, yes, she had seen her before. Then we told her about the cigarettes and she said we should have said something to the woman before she got to the checkout counter.

Abby, if we had said something to her before we got to the checkout counter, she could have said she intended to pay for them. Or should we have told the cashier about it before the woman got to the checkout counter? What would you have done?

HUNTINGTON BEACH COUPLE

DEAR COUPLE: I would have quietly "reminded" the absent-minded shopper to pay for the cigarettes as soon as I saw her put them in her purse.

Single father considers family typical

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Adolph Labbe scoffs at the idea that his is not "a typical family."
"The so-called 'Ozzie Nelson' family is not so typical anymore," he said. "What is typical now is not having one of the parents present."
He does admit, however, that his wife's death has brought about changes in the way he deals with his children — Teresa, 8, Dolph, 13 and Kim, 17.
"The biggest difference is the readjustment in assuming total responsibility for the family," he said, explaining that he and his wife shared tasks together, instead of delegating them.

Currently music director at Howard College, Labbe has been in Big Spring for four years. He came here after holding a similar position at Henderson County Junior College for six years.
He is guarded about the affects the death of his wife had on his family, concentrating instead on the children themselves, whom he calls an independent group.
"Everybody's their own individual, and I encourage that," he said, "even the little one has her own friends." He added that more responsibilities have been delegated to his children, which he considers normal. "The older they get, the more responsibility they should have," he said.

His children are a diverse group, he said. The youngest, Teresa, is "very observant" and, says Labbe, is much more mature at her age than her siblings. "She's learned a lot from observing her older brother and sister," her father said.
Dolph is "... in a different situation from the girls," Labbe said. "He's independent in the sense that the girls have more in common, while he has more outside interests." Those interests include Scouting, which he has been involved with for the past few years.

The oldest child, Kim, is also the most reflective, according to her dad. "She's very independent and extremely meticulous," he said. "She's also shy and introverted."
He said that the typical week during school months moves very quickly. To keep track of his individualistic brood, Labbe makes use of a family calendar so that he is aware of each child's projects and activities.
Summer is a different matter, he said. "Summer gives me a chance to get reorganized," he said, explaining that the break from school gives him and the children a chance to do things around the house that were postponed.

Garden City teen awarded $8,000 college scholarship

Charlene Jo Schrader, daughter of Dennis and Deborah Schraeder, Box 45-E Garden City, was recently awarded a four-year, $8,000 scholarship from the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo.
Charlene, a recent graduate of Garden City High School, also received the Gold Star and J.T. Rutherford awards.
She exhibited the champion Chester White hog at the 1986 Houston Livestock Show.
While in high school, Charlene received academic honors and competed successfully in UIL literary contests. She was a senior class officer and served as school mascot for four years. Charlene was an active community and church volunteer.

An outstanding 4-H member for eleven years, Charlene plans to major in agricultural journalism at South Plains College. She was one of 50 scholarship recipients at the Texas 4-H Roundup in College Station.
Selected by members of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the 4-H scholarship recipients were chosen for their strong academic backgrounds and solid leadership abilities. These recipients, as with all show scholarship winners, must major in some field of agriculture at a Texas college or university.

Fort Worth bank weary of frequent bank robber

Dallas Times Herald Bureau
The River Oaks branch of First Texas Savings Association west of Fort Worth is a bright, airy building with skylights, wood beams and large windows. It seems a pleasant place to work except for one thing: Every few months, weeks, a brown-haired man with a baseball cap and sunglasses comes in and robs the two tellers.
Five times in the past year, the same man has walked into the lobby carrying a pistol and ordered tellers to fill his sack with money. Five times he has escaped, even though on one occasion a police officer was parked in the lot outside while the holdup man was inside.
"We're tired of it," River Oaks police Sgt. Dan Chisholm said. "But it's just one of those things where the guy is just in and out so quickly."
The tellers are tired of it, too. They have come to recognize the man the moment he walks through the door. And though they sound a holdup alarm, and though River Oaks police have cut their response time to less than a minute, the gunman has fled with barely a trace.
One clue that has been left behind is a profile photo taken by the savings and loan's security camera. In it the man wears jeans, a print shirt, a dark ball cap and sunglasses and carries a pistol. He has collar-length brown hair and sometimes has several days' growth of beard, Chisholm said.
Employees say the man is in his late 20s or early 30s, is between 5-foot-6 and 5-foot-10 and weighs 140 to 160 pounds.
And he doesn't joke about his return visits.
"He's very abrasive, very abrupt," said Chip Imrie, First Texas' senior vice president in charge of corporate security.

"There's no question in our minds that if they don't do as he demands, he's capable of hurting someone."
Last year, the man struck on June 26, Sept. 5 and Oct. 9. This year he hit on Jan. 22 and May 27. The FBI office in Tarrant County said the man is believed to be responsible for several other savings and loan robberies in the county. The River Oaks branch is the only one of First Texas' 17 Tarrant County branches to be hit.
Imrie said the man usually strikes on a day when business is relatively light, so few customers are in the building. He said the man probably lives or works in the River Oaks area.
Last week, First Texas began offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the suspect, and Crime Stoppers, a television public service program, is offering another $1,000.
The offers have generated some response but no concrete leads, Chisholm said.
He said it's frustrating for officers to arrive at the S&L branch within a minute after being notified of a holdup alarm only to come up empty.
"The last time (May 27), there was a patrolman sitting in the parking lot," Chisholm said. "But of course, there's time between when the alarm is sounded and when officers get the word."
He said the gunman drives a different vehicle each time and has removed the license plates each time. Because the town of River Oaks is only 4 square miles in size, Chisholm said, it's easy for the man to flee outside his department's jurisdiction.
"He's not getting that much money from them," Chisholm said, "but he just keeps doing it."

Geoffrey Baumer and family wish to express to their many friends, their heartfelt thanks for the tokens of sympathy tendered them during their recent bereavement.
A special thanks to Nalley-Pickle.

A&M student designs AIDS hospital

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Designing a place to die was no easy matter, says a Texas A&M University graduate student who has come up with plans for an AIDS-victim hospital.

"Most hospitals are places to get well, but an AIDS hospital is a place to die," said student David Liao, whose specialization is in health facilities architecture. "Since curing is impossible, I had to emphasize the caring."

Liao's design of the AIDS hospital, a semester-long project, involved intense research that took him to New York in December to meet with Dr. Gerald H. Friedland, leader of an AIDS care team at Montefiore Medical Center in New York. Friedland was his medical consultant for the design.

Liao said Thursday that existing hospitals have been remodeled to accommodate AIDS patients, but the facilities have not completely satisfied the special needs of AIDS victims.

Liao said his goal was to create an environment appropriate for AIDS patients, their family members and medical staff.

He approached the project with the intention of creating a home-like atmosphere in the hospital, he said. Each patient's room has space for one family member so relatives can spend time there, alleviating the feeling of isolation many AIDS patients have. Liao said. Nature played an important role in his design. He chose a heavily wooded site overlooking Lake Austin, and the hospital was integrated into that environment.

"I wanted to put the facility on a human scale, so I broke the hospital into several different buildings, all with easy access to nature," he said.

Interior gardens and natural lighting also contribute to the design.

A village of seven buildings connected by covered passageways includes a chapel for meditating, a recreational building with a library, TV rooms, pool room and music room. Protruding above the water is a restaurant with a boat dock and fishing deck.

"I wanted to avoid a feeling of confinement or abandonment for the patient," Liao said. "My design lightens the institutional image to create a pleasant atmosphere."

Professor George Mann, an expert in health facilities architecture at Texas A&M, helped Liao with his project.

"I hope that this exploratory architectural research project will help give direction to humanized architectural responses to the growing and very serious problem of AIDS," Mann said. "David's architecture, although not able to cure, is his statement of trying to care."

Teens becoming worried about contracting AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Becky Adler is only 17, but she has talked to a teen-ager who is worried about contracting AIDS from her college boyfriend and a man who's afraid his sexual past may have led to his pregnant wife being infected.

Adler, a high school senior, spoke with those people while taking calls on the "Teen AIDS Hotline," which is staffed by teen-agers for teen-agers in the greater Washington, D.C., area. She said the line received 4,100 calls last month.

"If there is such a thing as a high-risk group, it is teen America. And we at the Teen AIDS Hotline are working to save our generation," Adler told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families at a hearing Thursday on teen-agers and AIDS.

Adler said other AIDS efforts in her suburban Washington community, all financed by contributions and candy sales, include weekend teen and family conferences on AIDS sponsored by churches and synagogues; AIDS nights for parents, teachers and students; a video discussion guide for parents, teachers and clergy; and "The AIDS Movie," the first AIDS prevention film for adolescents.

"Teach your children the facts on AIDS and how they can protect themselves," Adler urged the committee. "Then help us show other teens throughout the country how they can stop the AIDS epidemic in their communities."

The hearing, chaired by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., examined the AIDS risk to teen-agers. Many witnesses noted that teen-agers are particularly vulnerable because they are prone to experimentation with sex, drugs and alternative lifestyles.

Miller, Surgeon General Koop and other witnesses said the low number of teen-agers diagnosed with AIDS — 148 as of June 8 — is misleading because 7,500 people between 20 and 29 have AIDS and may have contracted the virus during their teen-age years.

Koop didn't mention condoms in his prepared statement to the committee, prompting some lawmakers to wonder if Education Secretary William Bennett and others who advocate an abstinence-only approach had influenced his views.

Koop said he has not altered his message at all. He said he always has advocated abstinence first, monogamy second and — failing those two options — the use of condoms, far from failsafe but the only protection available.

Southern Baptists meet, vote

ST. LOUIS — Southern Baptists wrapped up a three-day meeting by voting to distance themselves from the PTL ministry and the Moral Majority, but failed to resolve differences between their own conservative and moderate factions.

The resolution to disassociate the 14.6 million member denomination from Jim and Tammy Bakker and current PTL leader Jerry Falwell was one of several passed Thursday, the final day of the 130th annual gathering of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The Southern Baptists also approved resolutions praising full-time homemakers, calling for elasticity to prevent the spread of AIDS, calling for a tougher anti-abortion stance, asking its agencies and institutions to use their influence to "promote the sanctity of human life," and condemning the spread of pornography.

The effort to sever any connection between the denomination and the troubled PTL ministry came in an amendment to a resolution deploring the mishandling of church funds.

The amendment said Baptists serving on the PTL board, including Falwell and the Rev. Bailey Smith, "in no way officially connects the Southern Baptist Convention with either the PTL or the Moral Majority."

UT given leader's papers

AUSTIN (AP) — Civil rights leader James Farmer, who helped found the Congress of Racial Equality, says he hopes the donation of his personal papers to the University of Texas helps further the study of nonviolent protest.

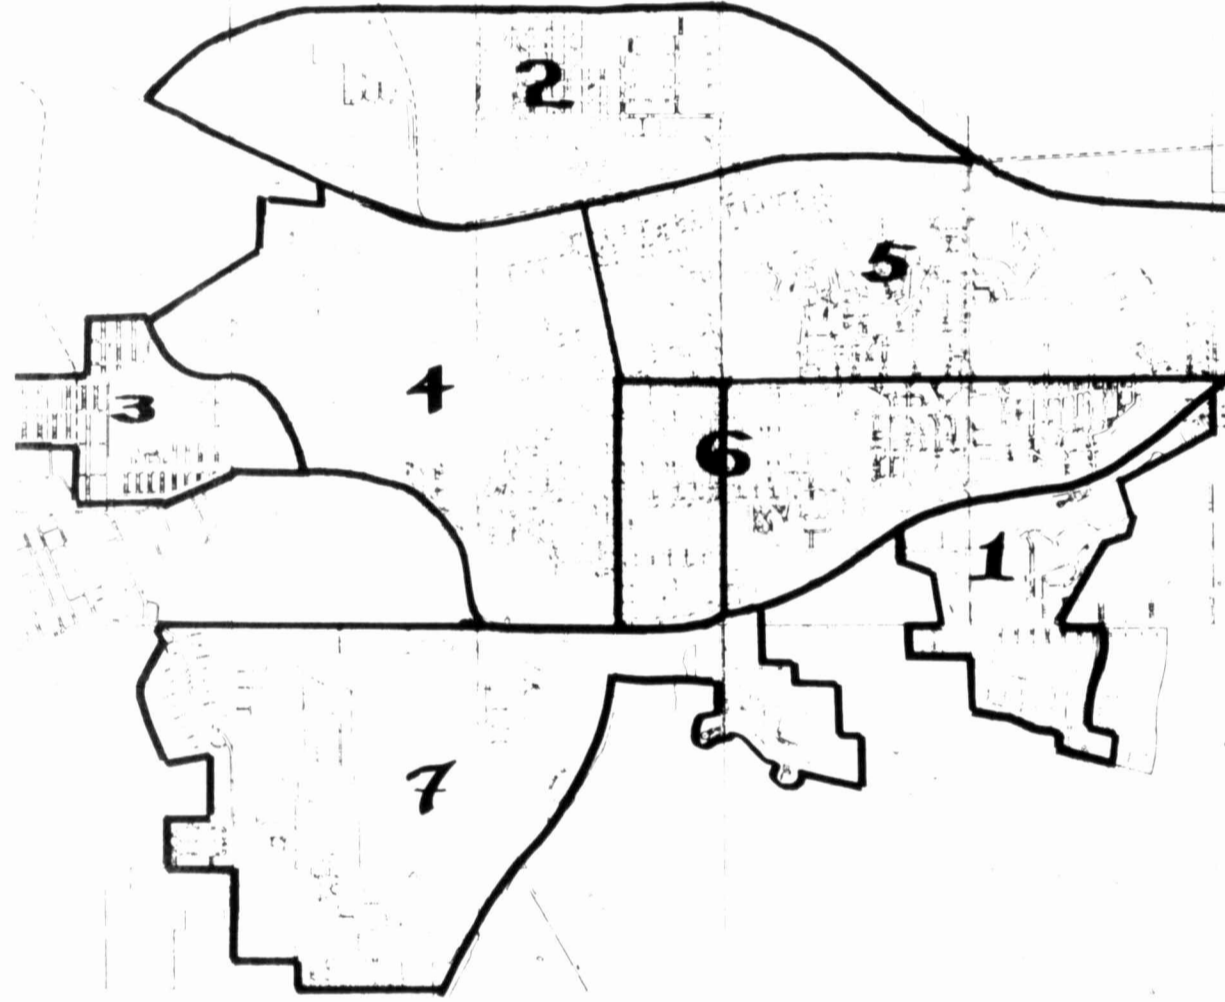

"To be perfectly realistic, very little has been done on the study of nonviolence before the '50s and '60s in this country," Farmer said Thursday. "The papers may help to shed a little light on what was done then."

Farmer donated letters, notes, speeches, civil rights related pamphlets, handbills, photographs and posters.

The collection also includes the original manuscript of his 1985 book, "Lay Bare the Heart: An Autobiography of the Civil Rights Movement."

In donating the papers to UT's Barker Texas History Center, Farmer credited his late wife, Lula, who kept documents he said he probably would have thrown away.

"A lot of things, I lost," he said.

Cleanup Day

Monday is Spring Clean day for residents of Area 7, which covers the Coronado, Highland, Capehart and Douglass additions, from FM 700 south to the city limits, and from the western city limits east to Highway 80. Residents of that area should place large trash items by the curb for collection. This collection will end the city's Spring Clean effort.

SMU upset with UT reprimand

Dallas Times Herald Bureau
SMU boosters and former players reacted with anger Wednesday when informed that Texas' football program did not receive bowl or television sanctions for violating NCAA rules. Many called the penalties "a slap on the wrist."

However, a member of the NCAA's Committee on Infractions, an SMU official and officials from Southwest Conference schools did not view the sanctions as "a slap on the wrist." They said Texas received fair penalties.

But a member of the NCAA's Committee on Infractions and officials from Southwest Conference schools, including SMU, said Texas received fair penalties.

The NCAA placed Texas on two years' probation with a year of sanctions, including the loss of five scholarships for 1988-89 and a reduction in the number of official visits recruits may make to the Austin campus, from 95 to 75.

SMU boosters and players reacted bitterly because they feel Texas was let off lightly.

SMU received severe penalties in 1985 for recruiting violations, and in February 1987 their football program was canceled. Later, its '88 season was canceled, because SMU officials didn't believe the Mustangs could be competitive a year after the NCAA's harsh sanctions.

The school expected Texas to lose a year of bowl game eligibility and television appearances.

"They always seem to get off," said Corpus Christi businessman Reid Ryan, one of nine boosters banned from SMU's athletics program. "It's not fair the way the game is played. It's fair for some to cheat and not fair for others to cheat."

"(Running back) Edwin Simmons was right there in the NCAA's face. He's driving a BMW and you know the money wasn't there to pay for it. (Head Coach) David McWilliams admitted to giving players loans, but that's just the same as paying them. I wonder how many of the loans were paid back. Texas is just as guilty as SMU and look at their penalty."

Dallas businessman George Owen, another banned booster, said, "You can imagine what I think. I'm amazed they even got that. It's nothing. It's a slap on the wrist. Amazing."

"It's ridiculous," said Dick Anderson, a former SMU player.

"It doesn't anger me but it's not fair. They (NCAA) must not have investigated it well. They did the same things SMU did. And I'm sitting home not playing and all they get is a loss of five scholarships."

"No bowl games? No TV? Well, I'll be damned," said Mark Vincent, a former SMU player now at Georgia. "I can't believe it. I thought they'd at least get no bowls and no TV."

The boosters are also upset, they said, because they believe the NCAA ignored a detailed report made to the organization by SMU in 1985 documenting rules violations by other SWC schools, including Texas. SMU spent as much time investigating other schools as it did its own program before appearing in front of the Committee on Infractions in August 1985.

"A lot of (alleged) violations they didn't follow up on," said Dallas businessman George Wilmut, another banned SMU booster.

"There are a lot of strong people at the University of Texas in the NCAA," Owen said. "The numbers count in high places, and we didn't have enough people in high places. We did not fight it. We surrendered."

"Little ol' SMU comes up with the best won-loss record over six years and no one will stand for it. But when it's Michigan or Texas or Arkansas it's, 'Oh, no, they're not doing anything wrong.'"

Wisconsin law professor and faculty athletic representative Frank Remington, chairman of the NCAA's Committee on Infractions, said the penalties were appropriate to the violations found. Remington said he doesn't agree that the sanctions were a "slap on the wrist."

"Our job is to assess penalties appropriate to the seriousness of the violations," Remington said. "We believe these penalties are appropriate. Of course, everyone has the right to assess their view of seriousness in different terms. We did what we thought was right."

"We viewed the violations seriously, but with only one exception they did not involve recruiting. And, therefore, they did not result in a large competitive advantage for Texas. The penalties given were with the understanding that if we saw Texas again, they wouldn't get off as easy."

SMU faculty athletic representative Lonnie Kliever said the sanctions were what he expected. He said the university doesn't think Texas got off lightly.

"From what I've been told by members of the NCAA Committee on Infractions and members of the enforcement staff, there has been a move away from no bowl games and no television when there is a reduction in scholarships," Kliever said.

"At least two members of the infractions committee have said to me they feel it's being viewed as a less useful way of penalizing a program."

"I think the NCAA structured the penalties in two ways. One is that they try to tailor the penalties to the infractions. The other is that to impose a television sanction is often a penalty to other programs, particularly in a conference where there is a sharing of TV revenues and a TV package," he said.

SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby said, "Texas got a just punishment for the rules they violated."

Officials from SWC schools said the penalties probably fit Texas' crimes.

"I think it was fair and equitable," said SWC President Robert Sweazy, a faculty athletic representative at Texas Tech. "The allegations were not that

City LL tourney begins Saturday

The city Little League tournament will get started Saturday with a new twist for the first time in tournament play.

Texan takes first round Open lead

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ray Floyd began the defense of his U.S. Open title with a dream round of golf.

But, still, he fell one stroke short of matching Ben Crenshaw's 3-under-par 67, a score which was posted early in Thursday's first round and remained atop the leader board at day's end.

"I set a target of 70. But when I went to the practice tee and the wind was light, I knew I had to take advantage of an early starting time," Crenshaw said. "I was three ahead of my target."

He did it with the help of two monstrous birdie putts, from 60 and 35 feet, on the back nine and despite a double-bogey 6 at the 14th hole.

Crenshaw labeled both big putts "no-brainers" and added, "You don't expect those things in a U.S. Open. They negated my double bogey."

The 35-year-old Texan, who won the 1984 Masters title, got off to his best start ever in a U.S. Open. The closest he's come to winning was a third-place finish in 1975.

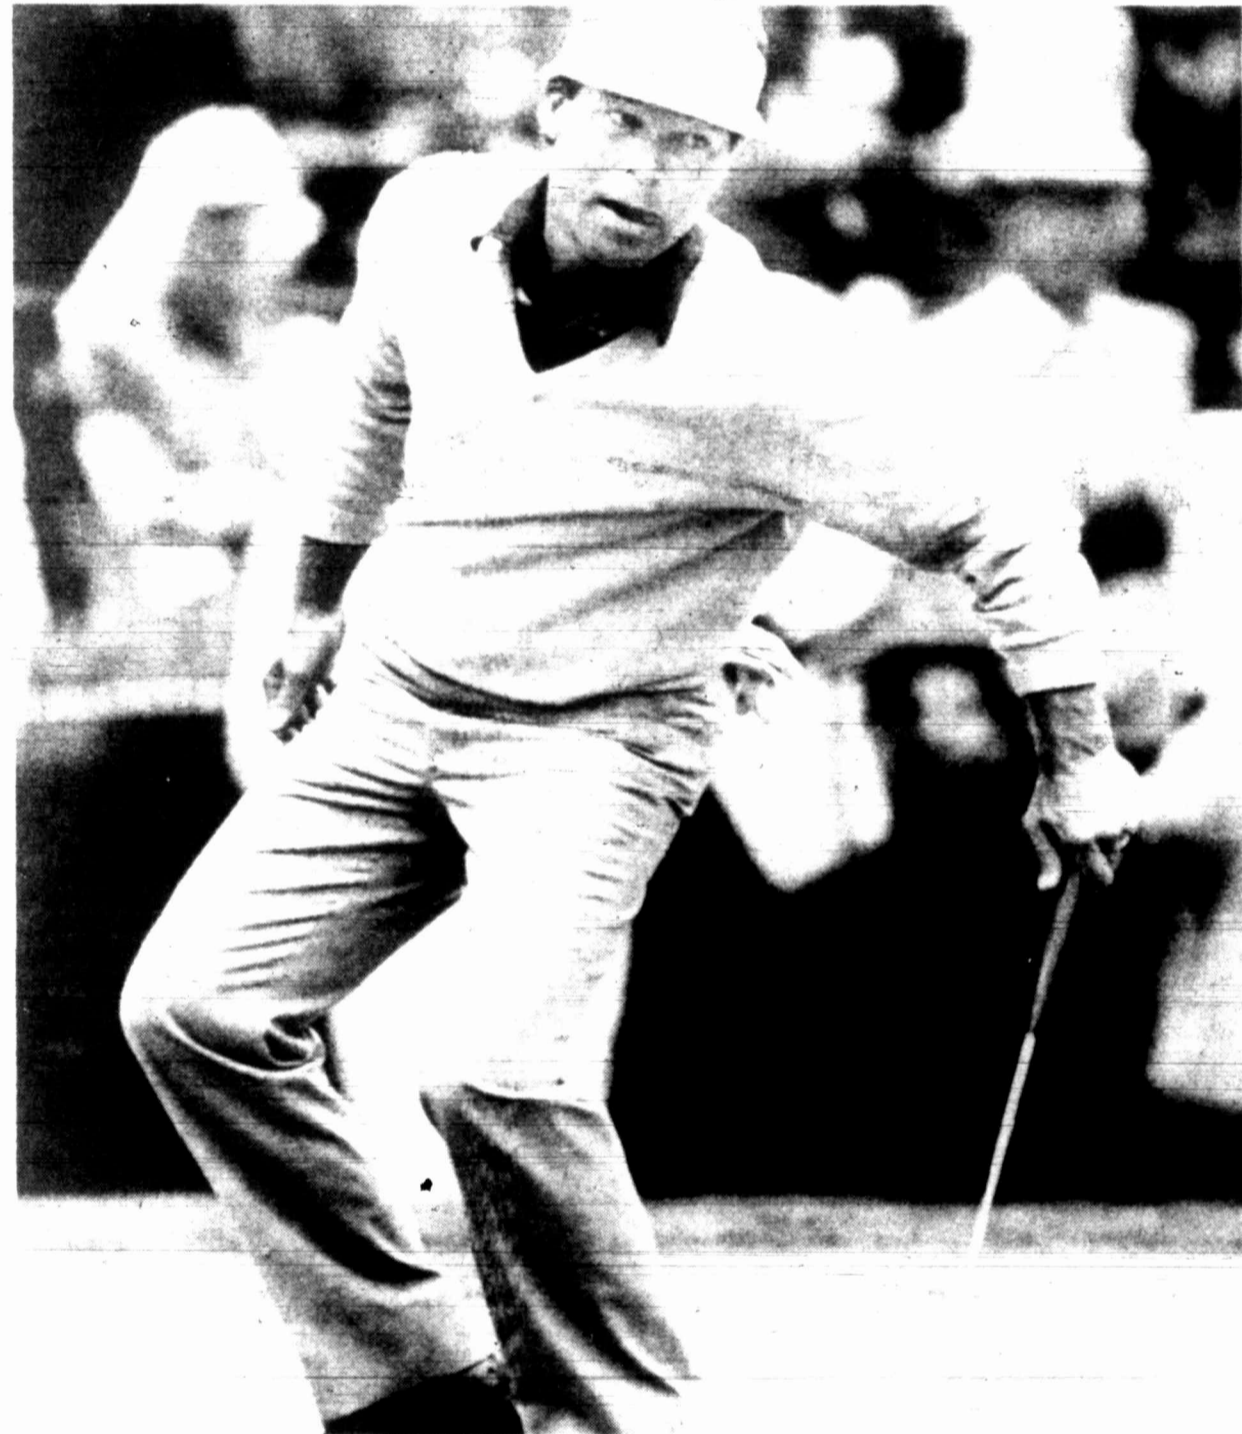

He begins the second round over the Olympic Club's 6,709-yard Lake Course with a one-stroke lead over Floyd, Spain's Seve Ballesteros and Japanese star Tommy Nakajima. Foreign golfers Denis Watson (Zimbabwe), Nick Price (South Africa) and Bernhard Langer (West Germany) were at 69, and four-time champion Jack Nicklaus was with Bob Tway, Scotland's Sandy Lyle and six others at 70.

"I played the kind of round you dream about in a U.S. Open. I reached 16 greens in regulation," Floyd said.

"I went out there with the idea that, no matter what, I was going to enjoy my walk around the Olympic Club as the defending champion."

"It was more enjoyable than I could have imagined, because I haven't played as good a round of golf since last year's Open."

The weather, cool and calm, remained virtually unchanged through the opening round.

Ben Crenshaw of Austin, Tx. urges his birdie putt to the cup on the 13th hole of San Francisco's Olympic Club Thursday in the first round of the U.S. Open Championship. Crenshaw took the first round lead with a three-under-par performance.

"The course was very forgiving, after those practice rounds in the wind and sun. We got lucky with the overcast and fog," Floyd said.

Neither Floyd, 44, nor Nicklaus, 47, have come close to winning a tournament this year.

A three-putt bogey-5 on the closing hole prevented Nicklaus from joining the group under 70.

"I didn't really object to that much. I had made my fair share of putts," said Nicklaus, who in hope of regaining his winning touch on the greens switched recently to a putter he'd put away a few years ago.

He made several birdie and par-saving putts ranging from five to 20 feet Thursday.

"After I made a 15-footer for a birdie at the 15th, I said, 'This is someone I'm not familiar with.'"

Crenshaw's 67 was his fourth consecutive Open round under 70. He opened with a 75 on a stormy Thursday last year at New York's Shinnecock Hills, then posted 69s the last three days to finish in a tie for sixth, four strokes behind Floyd.

Crenshaw had never seen the Olympic layout before arriving over the weekend to begin practice.

"I'm still trying to get to know the course. It's a very stern test. Gosh, it's difficult," Crenshaw said Thursday.

Those finding it a lot more difficult were such former Open champs as Johnny Miller, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino and Fuzzy Zoeller. Miller had two double-bogeys in a round of 71 while Watson came in at 72, Trevino 73 and Zoeller 78.

Australia's Greg Norman, the reigning British Open champ, opened with a 72.

Crenshaw has won over $2.5 million in 15 years on the pro tour, but the Masters title is his only one in one of golf's major championships.

"I couldn't describe how important it would be to me to win another," he said Thursday. "Doing it once was tremendous, but I'd love to do it again."

Seve hopes to start the way he finished

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Seve Ballesteros was asked for a hole-by-hole account of his opening-round 68 Thursday at the U.S. Open.

As Ballesteros detailed the first nine holes, it seemed like nothing exceptional, little more than a standoff between him and the Olympic Club's Lake Course.

"Don't worry," he said as he rattled off the parade of pars. "It gets better."

And it did.

Ballesteros birdied No. 10, No. 12 and No. 13, then gave back a stroke with a bogey at No. 16 to finish with a 2-under 68. That left him one stroke behind early leader Ben Crenshaw.

"I am very pleased to start with a 68," Ballesteros said. "Usually, I start slow. This is my best first round ever in the Open. I'm very happy. I feel I played very good. The ups and downs are difficult on this course. I'm happy with my game."

The only hole that troubled Ballesteros was the par-5 No. 16.

"I shot a par-6 there," he said. Par-6?

"Yes," he said. "I didn't feel like I made any bogeys today."

Ballesteros said he had tried to play the course short, rather than challenge the 6,709-yard layout. "Every putt was uphill," he said. "This is a tough, difficult course. It's difficult to hit the fairways here. The ball rolls off. You need a good touch to get close to the pin."

Ballesteros, who twice has won the Masters and the British Open, said this tournament holds special significance for him.

Why is that, he was asked.

"Because," he said, "it is the U.S. Open."

That made his strong start all the more gratifying.

Nine straight start-of-round pars is pretty consistent.

Ballesteros benefitted from an early tee-off time, when weather conditions were calm. "A 30 or 40 mph wind this afternoon would be nice," he said.

Sidekicks win marathon game

DALLAS (AP) — If the previous six Major Indoor Soccer League championship series games between Dallas and Tacoma are any barometer, the Sidekicks are in a world of trouble at the Stars' Tacoma Dome on Saturday night.

The home team prevailed again as it has in every game of the series on Thursday night with the Sidekicks winning 5-4 in the second overtime in the longest MISL playoff game in history.

"Every game has been close so we're looking forward to beating them at home," said Tacoma's Preki. "They are tired and we are tired but we are playing at home. We've got the advantage and we are going to use it."

Mark Karpun's goal 5:30 deep into the second overtime gave the Sidekicks the sixth game.

The teams battled 20 minutes and 30 seconds after regulation play, the longest MISL playoff game in the league's nine-year history. The previous longest game was 14:06 of overtime between Baltimore and Cleveland in 1981.

Karpun said "They call me a garbage man but that was a nice goal. It's nice to score a big goal like that in this situation."

Dallas Coach Gordon Jago said "we feel great going back there. We've gotten better and better each time we've played them there."

"There are no psychological barriers. I just don't know where we keep getting the energy." Stars' Coach Alan Hinton said "It was a wonderful game of soccer. Neither team dominated. It's just good for the MISL. Now we have to regroup."

He wasn't surprised the series was going back to Tacoma.

"They are dancing in the streets of Dallas right now," Hinton said. "Before the series started, the stats showed me this would go to seven games."

Steve Zungul tied the game with 40 seconds to play in regulation on an assist by Preki after the Stars had pulled their goalie in an all-out attack.

"We're tired and exhausted but they are too and now we have the home field advantage," Zungul said.

After a scoreless first overtime, Karpun broke free and his low, hard shot found the net to delight the sellout crowd of 16,824 fans in Reunion Arena.

Tatu scored twice in the fourth period within a two-minute span to give Dallas leads of 3-2 and 4-3.

Preki, on an assist by Zungul, locked the match at 3-3.

Kevin Smith tied the game 2-2 just before the halftime intermission with a shorthanded goal during a Tacoma power play. A clever give-and-go touch pass from Mike Uremovich setup the goal.

Tacoma held a 2-1 lead on goals by Gary Heale and Zungul, who was playing in his 60th consecutive playoff match.

Gerry Gray stole a ball at midfield and made a 20-foot pass to the wide-open Heale for the goal that tied the game at 1-1.

Zungul gave the Stars a 2-1 lead after Dallas jumped ahead 1-0 on Doc Lawson's goal off an assist by Smith at 11:07 in the first quarter.

"The home field advantage doesn't mean anything in the seventh game," Smith said. "It is negated. We'll be OK."

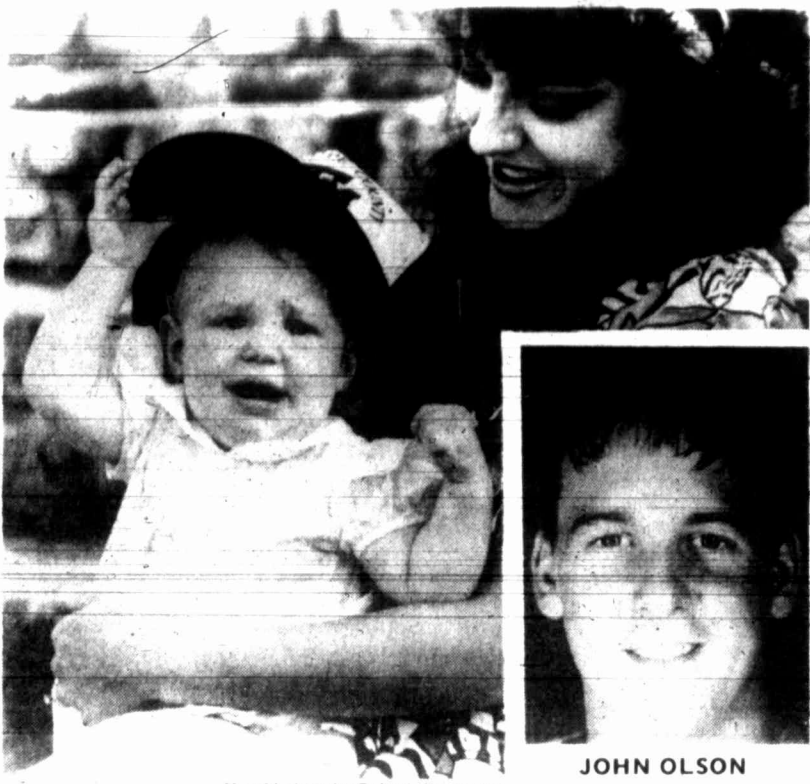

Dallas' Eddie Radwanski said "There's no advantage. It was draining to play in the longest playoff game in league history but we'll recover. We'll be fine."

Tip of the hat

Seven-month-old Rachel Marie Dean tipped her hat to Texas A&M supporters Thursday night at the Big Spring A&M Club's renewal of the longstanding annual barbecue at the Comanche Trail Park Amphitheatre.

The barbecue, conducted for 25 years, had been in a hiatus for the past several years. John Olson (inset photo), son of Ann Olsen and grandson of A&M alumnus John Saunders, was named recipient of a four-year, $750 per semester scholarship to attend A&M, based on his academic performance as a Big Spring student, officials said. Others considered for the scholarship were Ron Brooks and Todd McKinney.

Miss Dean, the daughter of J.W. and Lucy Dean of Dallas and the granddaughter of Garner and Eunice Thixton of Big Spring, was one of an estimated 450 who attended the event. She's sitting on the lap of relative LaRhodna Stanley of Big Spring. Her Quadelupe County hat was provided by Ford Martin, Saquine who attended while visiting his son, Greg Martin of Big Spring. Olson, an All-Crossroads Country selection as kicker, plans to walk-on at A&M this August and try to either kick or punt for the Aggies.

Frenchman coming on strong on race circuit

DETROIT (AP) — Alain Prost's star has risen dramatically in the last four years.

In 1983, the Frenchman, then 28, was considered a competent driver with championship potential. Suddenly, that potential was realized.

He won four races in 1983, finishing second to Brazil's Nelson Piquet in one of the closest driver's championship battles in Grand Prix history, 59 points to 57.

A year later, Prost tied the late Jimmy Clark's single-season record of seven Formula One victories, only to lose the title by the narrowest margin in history. McLaren teammate Niki Lauda of Austria won it, 72 points to 71 1/2.

Prost got five more victories and, finally, his first series title in 1985. And last year, with four more victories, Prost became the first Formula One driver since Australia's Jack Brabham in 1960 to win consecutive championships. He won the last race of the season at Adelaide, Australia, to edge Britain's Nigel Mansell 72-70.

In four starts this season, Prost has won twice to tie the retired Scotsman Jackie Stewart's career victory record of 27. He also holds an 18-15 lead in points over Brazilian Ayrton Senna in a bid for his third consecutive driving title.

"Alain is at the height of his driving skills," Stewart said Thursday at the Detroit Press Club as final preparations were being made blocks away for Sunday's Detroit Grand Prix.

"I think he's the finest Grand Prix driver in the world today and maybe the finest race driver," added Stewart, a three-time Formula

One champion who retired 14 years ago.

"He's very deserving of the record (for all-time victories). It's not a question of if he will break it, only when he will do it."

"I can think of Alain Prost going on to win as many as 40 races," Stewart added. "He's only 32 and, even if he retires at 34, as I did, he should win many more."

Stewart thinks the record could fall in the sixth Detroit Grand Prix, the only Formula One event in the United States.

"Detroit is my kind of racetrack," said Stewart, who works as a part-time television commentator, does commercials and tests and evaluates cars for Ford.

"I won Monte Carlo three or four times, and this is the same kind of track, a narrow, street circuit. You have to be neat and precise here, and that was my style. And it's also Alain's style."

Prost, while flattered by Stewart's praise, says the 28th victory isn't likely to happen on the 2.5-mile course that winds through the streets of downtown Detroit.

"Our car is specifically better on faster circuits," Prost said. "I enjoy this track maybe less because it is very bumpy and our car is usually not one of the best, at least in practice."

"I have led this race, but I have not been able to win it. I will just try to run the best I can and get as many points as possible."

After Prost, the active driver with the most victories is Piquet, Mansell's Williams teammate, with 17. Senna, the hot new star at age 27, has only six.

Giants continue to skid

By The Associated Press The Padres have won six straight games, their longest winning streak since May 1985, but the smile on Manager Larry Bowa's face only lasts a little while.

"I remember," Bowa said Thursday night recalling San Diego's worst start. "There are scars everywhere, scars that will last forever. I'll remember that start for as long as I live."

Carmelo Martinez hit two homers and Storm Davis pitched a three-hitter giving San Diego a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants. But despite all the Padres' recent success, they still have baseball's worst record, 21-46, and are 10 games behind the fifth-place Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

Unlike San Diego, Roger Craig's San Francisco Giants have lost six straight, but are only 3 1/2 games out of first place behind Cincinnati.

That's not much comfort to Craig.

"I know it's supposed to turn around, but when?" Craig asked rhetorically. "It's tough on a manager when you're doing everything you can. You've got to keep battling. I'm trying different lineups and different things."

The Giants have scored just eight runs in their last seven games and have struck out 43 times, including nine Thursday.

Cubs 9, Phillies 7

Rafael Palmeiro and Keith Moreland both hit two-run homers and Jerry Mumphrey hit a three-run shot, powering the Cubs to their third straight win.

Elia replaced John Felske, who was fired earlier in the day. The Phillies' three-run seventh inning chased Rick Sutcliffe, 9-3. Mike Jackson, 1-5, took the loss.

Mumphrey's homer in the eighth gave Chicago a 9-5 lead but Philadelphia scored twice in the ninth.

Dodgers 6, Astros 4

Steve Sax drove in three runs in the final two innings, including a two-run single off Ron Mathis, 0-1, in the 11th, for Los Angeles.

Sax's 10th-inning, run-scoring double gave the Dodgers a 4-3 lead, but Kevin Bass' RBI single tied the game. Sax's double broke Dave Smith's streak of 27 2-3 scoreless innings.

Alejandro Pena, 1-6, entered in the ninth inning and pitched two innings before Brian Holton worked the 11th for his second save.

Cardinals 8, Pirates 6

Jack Clark hit a pair of two-run homers, the second in the bottom of the 10th inning, leading St. Louis over Pittsburgh.

Tom Herr singled to open the inning off Don Robinson, 5-5, and Clark homered to left, his 20th, on a 1-2 pitch for his fourth two-homer game this season. Bill Dawley, 4-4, the fifth St. Louis pitcher, earned the victory after entering the game in the tenth. Clark's four RBI gave him 64 and the major league lead.

Mets 10, Expos 7

New York hit five home runs, two by Darryl Strawberry — including a three-run shot in the first inning.

Gary Carter hit a two-run homer, and Howard Johnson and Kevin McReynolds added solo shots for New York. Doug Sisk, 3-1, gave up four hits and two runs in three innings, winning in relief of Ron Darling, who stretched his winless streak to 11 games since last winning on April 22.

Roger McDowell pitched two innings for his seventh save.

Tim Wallach and Mitch Webster homered for the Expos.

Reds 8, Braves 4

Eric Davis hit a three-run homer, his 21st of the season, but first since June 3, to cap a four-run fourth inning that paced Cincinnati over Atlanta.

Guy Hoffman, 6-1, won his sixth straight game, allowing nine hits and four runs before leaving with two outs in the sixth inning. Frank Williams worked two innings before John Franco pitched the final 1 1/3 for his 14th save.

Dale Murphy also hit his 21st homer in the second inning, tying him with Davis for the league lead. David Palmer, 4-8, lost his fourth consecutive game.

Yankees 6, Orioles 3

New York moved within four percentage points of first-place Toronto in the East by winning its sixth of seven games since being swept by the Blue Jays and falling from the top spot.

Henry Cotto had a double and home run and knocked in three runs. Rick Rhoden got the win even though he crumpled to the ground after Mike Young's hard-hit ball leading off the fourth inning caromed off the inside of his left knee. Rhoden left after five innings.

Scott McGregor, 2-7, allowed all of the Yankees' runs and eight hits in 3 2/3 innings. McGregor hasn't won since May 16. In his last five starts, McGregor is 0-2 with a 10.70 earned run average and has allowed 34 hits in 17 2/3 innings.

Baltimore has lost 14 of the last 15 games and its pitchers have given up six runs or more 17 times in the last 22 games.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 3

At Toronto Jim Gantner's two-run bloop single sparked a five-run sixth inning for Milwaukee.

Billy Jo Robidoux singled and Glenn Braggs walked with one out. B.J. Surhoff grounded into a forceout, stole second and both runners scored on Gantner's single to left field. Juan Castillo's double scored Gantner and Paul Molitor hit reliever Mark Eichhorn's first pitch for a single that scored Castillo. Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper singled for another run.

Juan Nieves, 5-4, who was 0-2 with a 7.15 ERA in his previous three starts, allowed six hits and two runs and struck out seven in 7 1/3 innings. Dan Plesac got his 15th save.

Royals 10, Angels 4

Mark Gubicza, who hadn't won in a month, pitched a six-hitter and Frank White had three RBI for the visiting Royals. Danny Tartabull hit a two-run homer and Willie Wilson had a solo shot for the Royals.

Gubicza, 4-8, went all the way for the second time this season, walking four and striking out five.

Jack Howell had a two-run homer for California.

Angels down Diablos in long nine inning game

By The Associated Press

The Midland Angels and El Paso Diablos locked up for what may have been the longest nine-inning game in Texas League history. And what a game it was, featuring seven errors, four home runs, triples, doubles, wild pitches, double plays, arguments and ejections.

When it was all over, 4 hours and 9 minutes later, the Angels took a 16-13 victory over the Diablos.

In other Texas League action Thursday night, Shreveport edged Tulsa, 2-0, Wichita defeated San Antonio, 5-0, and Arkansas edged Jackson, 8-7, in a 10-inning game.

Mark Brouhard's two-run single in the top of the ninth gave the Angels a 13-12 lead and the Angels had 3 more runs moments later when Stan Holmes hit a three-run homer, his second homer of the night to give the Angels a 16-12 lead.

Brouhard finished with two hits and four RBI. Holmes had three hits, four RBI. John Hotchkiss had five hits and three RBI.

El Paso also had some hitting stars as Todd Brown went 3-for-5 with a triple and 5 RBI. Tim Casey had a two-run homer and Lavell Freeman got two singles, marking the 33rd time this season he's had more than one hit in a game.

Midland Manager Max Oliveras was ejected for arguing strikes and balls in the Diablos' seven-run seventh. Relief pitcher Vincencio Cedeno, after having already been knocked out by the Diablos in the seventh, was ejected in the eighth for remarks offered from the dugout.

Tulsa Drillers pitcher Rick Knapp had a perfect game going into the seventh inning, but things fell apart rapidly as the Shreveport Captains used an error, a single, a wild pitch and a double to score the game's only runs in a 2-0 victory.

Dean Freeland, 8-3, was the winning pitcher.

Upset

Continued from page 1B "They got a fair hearing, and now they have a chance to make sure something like this doesn't happen again," he said.

But SWC officials agreed that no matter what the penalties were, additional sanctions hurt the conference's image.

"It's damaging," Broyles said. "Any time something like this happens, it hurts."

"It doesn't do any of us any good," Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones said. "None of us wants the other schools to be put on probation because it makes us all look bad."

severe, and I'm glad to find out that neither were the penalties," Arkansas Athletic Director

Frank Broyles said it was a good sign that the NCAA gave Texas credit for cooperating in the investigation.

"(The NCAA) has shown that it will reward self-disclosure, which is apparently what happened in this case," Broyles said. "I admire the way Texas uncovered the violations."

Jacoby said Texas should take advantage of the opportunity to correct the problems that may exist.

Howser took disease in stride

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Never once in his losing battle against brain cancer did Dick Howser ask, "Why me," says an official of the Kansas City Royals.

"He said, 'Why not me?'" Royals president Joe Burke told about 1,300 mourners Thursday who gathered for a memorial service to the former Royals manager. Burke, who named Howser as Royals' manager in 1981, said he spent his final months counting his blessings, not cursing his fate.

Howser died Wednesday at 51, almost 11 months after doctors partially removed a malignant tumor from the left side of his brain.

"Dick said, 'I have lived a good life. God has blessed me,'" said Burke, one of several speakers at the 45-minute service. "He said, 'I have so much to be thankful for. God has blessed me.'" As Howser neared the end, Burke said, "He once told me, 'Joe, keep laughing. Keep smiling. I am not afraid to die.'" American League President Dr. Bobby Brown; Howser's widow, Nancy, and twin daughters Jana and Jill; and Royals' co-owners Ewing Kauffman and Avron Fogelman were among those in attendance.

Funeral services and burial will be Saturday in Howser's hometown of Tallahassee, Fla.

"Dick's fight is over," said Paul Splittorff, a retired Royals' pitcher who represented the players. "We can all take comfort in knowing that tonight, our skipper is safe at home."

Several speakers noted the courage Howser showed in his ordeal, which began last July 22 when doctors partially removed a malignant brain tumor. The operation was just one week after Howser, suffering persistent headaches and memory lapses, guided the American League to victory in the All-Star Game in what turned out to be his final appearance.

"Dick Howser learned in these last eleven months what life and life's priorities are all about," Burke said. "He went from baseball, family and God, to God, family and baseball. Burke noted that Howser became deeply religious in his final months.

"He was ready for the final road trip," Burke said. "He was tired. He was ready to go home."

Serving as pallbearers for Thursday night's service were Royals broadcaster Fred White; public relations director Dean Vogelaar; general manager John Schuerholz; trainer Mickey Cobb; Howser's neighbor Gerry Winship and Burke.

"There is no doubt that Dick left us too soon, and that's very difficult to understand," White said. "God, we commit to you the soul of a precious friend."

Howser's clergyman, the Rev. Jim Wells, read several passages from Howser's own Bible.

"Good guys occasionally do finish first," Wells said. "Dick finished first. He was a winner."

Wells noted that more than 14,000 cards and letters had come in from all over the world for Howser and said the stricken manager frequently prayed "for all the people who had sent him cards."

"He once told me 'Jim, I'm going to be okay. One way or another, I'm going to be a winner in this thing. But please take care of Nancy.'"

"Every Christian knows that because of Dick's faith, he's in a better place tonight than he was yesterday morning," Splittorff said.

The Royals were in California Thursday night for a game with the Angels.

Veterinarian suspended for injecting drugs into horses

DALLAS (AP) — A veterinarian at the Louisiana Downs Race Track in Bossier City, La., was suspended for allegedly accepting money from trainers to illegally inject narcotics into thoroughbreds before they race, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Louisiana State Police said a report by track stewards, who suspended Dr. Charles R. Butler, will be sent to the Louisiana Racing Commission.

The report claims that beginning in 1981, Butler accepted money from several trainers to inject Dilaudid and Numorphan into horses before races. The pain-killing drugs also act as stimulants in thoroughbreds.

"It is apparent that Butler is in clear violation of the rules of racing as it pertains to unnatural stimulation of horses," said the track stewards' report, read by police.

C.L. Webb, a Louisiana Downs state steward, said Butler was suspended Wednesday, and on Thursday was granted a suspensory appeal pending a commission hearing on July 16. Webb said under Louisiana racing rules, Butler's wife, Louisiana Downs trainer Marcia Lee Butler, also is suspended.

Butler admitted to using narcotics frequently himself in March testimony before the Louisiana Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners, according to the track stewards' report.

The news quoted the report as saying it also said Butler sometimes bet on the horses he treated. Butler, in the report, did not say which trainers paid him to inject horses.

Dr. Randy Thayer, president of the veterinary examiners' board, said Butler admitted to frequent use of illegal narcotics, the newspaper reported. He said Butler's license to prescribe narcotics for animals was revoked permanently and he was to enroll in a drug rehabilitation program with quarterly reports to be made to board for three years.

Butler began practicing at Louisiana Downs in 1980 and is one of about 20 veterinarians at the track. He could not be reached for immediate comment.

Lt. Frank Tridico, head of the Louisiana State Police Horse Racing Investigative Task Force, said Butler was charged administratively with using drugs to affect performance. He said no criminal charges will be filed against the veterinarian.

Bicycle shop

Couple's tool to minister to youngsters

HALTOM CITY (AP) — It's also a bike shop. Mostly, it's a youth ministry.

And, in three years, Tom Williams hopes that Action Cycles will be the profit-making support of his family.

There are about 60 new, shiny bicycles on display in the storefront across the street from the American Association of Retired Persons pharmacy at the intersection of Haltom Road and East Belknap Street in this Fort Worth suburb.

"Action Cycles" say the signs in the storefront windows — and the logo on Tom Williams' sweatshirt. Also on the logo: a bicycle wheel decorated with the letters "A" and "C" and split diagonally by a bolt of lightning.

On each side of the cash register in the front of the store, slightly out of the customers' line-of-sight, are posters with color photographs of unspoiled wilderness and quotes praising God as the creator of nature and sustainer of life.

"By 'Action Cycles,' I mean mountain bikes and touring bikes and bikes that will take you into the countryside," Williams says. He is working to true a bent wheel as he talks. "But we also sell street bikes and beginning bikes for small kids. Now our line of merchandise is aimed at the middle of the market. Our bikes sell from $125 for a little kid's bike to $450 for something pretty sporty from Red Line or Hutch or Diamond Back."

Williams, 36, and his wife, Sue, 34, bought the shop in October. Until the purchase, for about $30,000, Williams had been in charge of Radio Shack's national repair depot and his wife was — and still is — a data systems analyst for American Airlines' computerized reservations system.

"Sue is smarter, more intelligent than I am," Williams says. "We decided that she ought to go to college and be the primary breadwinner. Right now, she's supporting this bike shop; we're not taking anything out of it."

"Two adolescent boys walk into Action Cycles. They inspect Mongoose BMX bikes. They discuss gears and handlebars with Williams. When he talks with the boys, Williams gains in animation and expressiveness. One of the boys buys a sticker. The boys leave the shop."

"We bought a bike shop because I love working with young people and I know bicycles," Williams says. "And young people — particularly adolescent boys with time on their hands — are into bikes. Really, what this bike shop is, is a way of continuing my and Sue's ministry to youngsters."

Tom and Sue Williams and daughter, Amanda Sue, recently bought Action Cycles bicycle shop in Fort Worth. The Williams hope to use the bike shop to continue their ministry with youth in the area.

Then Williams tells the story of his life and how he and his wife found Jesus Christ and became born-again Christians. There was not a beeline approach to salvation, and Williams' description of their course is likewise discursive.

The conversion of Tom and Sue Williams occurred in 1976, while they were hiking along the Appalachian Trail after they each had quit a tiresome job. Before that, there was the Vietnam War, when Tom was in the Air Force. And after that there was wandering around, living in California and on Cape Cod and doing drugs and being confused and thinking they were hippies.

And long before that there was growing up in Terre Haute, Ind., where Sue was the daughter of a well-to-do family in the grocery business and Tom's people weren't so prosperous. And after the Air Force, but before their conversion, they went to work as houseparents in a foster home for trouble and wayward youth and ...

"And we discovered that working with kids was our vocation," Williams says, his face lighting up again. "But we never expected to have children of our own — or, in some ways, wanted to, because we'd seen how difficult youngsters could be — but, thank the Lord, our daughter, Amanda Sue, was born to us 10 months ago. Bringing up a baby is much different than ministering to troubled kids."

A group of four adolescent boys enters Action Cycles. Williams waits on them and talks with them enthusiastically. The boys leave without buying anything.

"The biggest trouble around here is single-parent families," Williams says. "I want this shop to be a wholesome place for the kids who live around here, a safe place to hang out. And often I do more than that. When I get to know the youngsters who come in here, I invite them to the youth group that Sue and I have at Bethel Temple."

"And we have and are paying the mortgage on 160 acres of land in the Kiamichi Mountains in southeastern Oklahoma and that's our wilderness ministry. We take kids there; we all work on making it into a camp. We get kids away from peer pressures and from the bad effects of city life."

Williams proudly shows photographs of the latest expedition to the site of his Wilderness Ministries. He and his wife and about eight youngsters from Bethel Temple are hard at work hacking and hewing trees. He cannot say what, exactly, the camp will look like.

"We don't know where the Lord will lead us in this," Williams says. "We go up on weekends and on spring breaks and on parts of vacations and when we can."

It is Sunday morning, and Tom and Sue Williams are in the congregation at Bethel Temple in east Fort Worth. The choir and the congregation sing an old gospel song. The melody rises and falls; so do hands and arms. Tom Williams' hands rise; Sue's hands float up to join his. They grasp hands, praising God, praying for health, wholeness, healing.

On a Sunday afternoon when she is resting from her job at American Airlines and spending time with their daughter, Sue Williams reflects on where her husband's projects are leading them.

FORT WORTH — The pastor of a predominantly black Methodist congregation has been appointed to a mainly white church, the first such appointment in the history of the Central Texas Conference, officials say.

The Rev. J.D. Phillips, senior minister of Fort Worth's Morningside United Methodist Church, said he is pleased at his appointment to St. Andrew's United Methodist Church in Killeen.

"I had butterflies at first, but now, I feel real good about the move," he said.

MONTICELLO, N.Y. — A Jewish fraternal group at its annual convention called on all Jews to refrain from visiting Austria and to boycott all products made there in protest of the presidency of Kurt Waldheim.

"By electing Waldheim, Austria has shown its identification with all that is beastly, all that is horrible in the world's history," said Ernest Zelig, president of Bnai Zion, based in New York City.

Waldheim, former secretary-general of the United Nations, was elected president of Austria last year in a campaign marked by allegations he aided in the persecution of Jews and partisans while serving as an officer in the German army in the Balkans in World War II.

WASHINGTON — Sociologist Robert N. Bellah says modern culture's emphasis on self-reliance and "radical individualism" undermines basic Christian belief in mutual community responsibility.

Bellah of the University of California at Berkeley, Calif., told professors from the nation's Episcopal seminaries the test of good preaching should not be what "feels good" to people but "what is good."

Citing Gallup poll findings that 80 percent of Americans feel they should develop their own religious beliefs independently of church, he said that if "we go to the church of our choice, we do the choosing, not God choosing us."

During the 1930s several women formed the Ladies Aid of St. Paul Lutheran Church. They are, left, Mrs. Gust Oppegard, Mrs. Adolph Jaren, Mrs. W.G. Buchschacher, Mrs. D.M. Trassier, Mrs. Ed Lange with her two granddaughters. The children are

Ladies Aid celebrates 56 years of service

After 56 years of service, the Ladies Aid of St. Paul Lutheran Church is still a vital part of the church.

On Nov. 4, 1931 Ladies Aid was formed under the guidance of Rev. W.G. Buchschacher. The church was located on the northside during this period of time.

The ladies, although small in number, did a variety of things to raise money for the church. They sold Christmas cards and hosted a chili supper — chili and pie were 5 cents each and coffee was free.

They paid for water to be piped into the church, bought new altar hangings and cleaned and kept the church repaired.

The name was later changed to Concordia Ladies Aid until it became the Parish Workers. The Lutheran's Women's Missionary League was formed throughout the United States in the early 1940s and united the efforts of all Lutheran Women all over the world.

These women will meet in Fort Worth for the International Lutheran Women's Missionary League beginning June 22-25.

More than 5,000 Lutheran women will be present at the convention.

Attending from Big Spring will be Joy Cowan, president of the local organization, Cindy Braaten, Dolline Budke, Ruth Budke, Phyllis Graumann, Suzanne Haney, Lela Hansen, Leighrene Kohl, Diane Moses, Ruth Oppegard and Evelyn Pachall. Rev. Carroll

Kohl, pastor of St. Paul, will also attend.

The convention will begin with a festive service at the Fort Worth Convention Center with the Rev. Glenn O'Shoney, speaker and president of the LCMS Texas District.

Each day prior to the beginning of the convention meetings a Bible study will be conducted by Rev. Dennis Glick, International LWML counselor.

Five business meetings are scheduled with international president Alberta Barnes.

Other speakers will be Dr. Jean Garton and Mrs. Marie Meyer, both of the LCMS president's commission on women, Dr. Ralph Bohlmann, president, of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod.

Entertainment will be Wednesday evening with a barbecue and singer-composed Don Edwards performing.

The theme of the convention will be "Radiant with God's Love" with interest conference June 24 with 42 topics to choose from among which will be one Radiant with God's Love as Hostage by Rev. Christian Zimmerman and Care-Giving by Dr. Shirley Bergman.

During the business meetings the Mite Box Projects will be selected. The last two years $845,000 was raised for the projects through the mite boxes. The election of officers will also be conducted during the meetings.
