■ The crew of the shuttle Discovery today will launch the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope from a record-high flight path.

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Seven years late, the Hubble Space Telescope is where it belongs: out of this world and in search of others so distant that they may have been formed at the beginning of time.

Less than five hours after it rode into space aboard the shuttle Discovery on Tuesday, the $1.5 billion telescope sent its first test radio signal. At the sign of life, applause and cheers erupted at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland where astronomers monitored their spacecraft.

"As near as we can tell, everything looks perfect," said astronaut Steve Hawley from the shuttle. Hawley's job on Wednesday will be to drop the telescope overboard for a 15-year stay in space.

Discovery, trailing an arc of white smoke into a brilliant blue sky, carried the silver-colored telescope to an orbit 380 miles above Earth — higher by 70 miles than any previous shuttle. There, the Hubble will stay to search for yet-unseen wonders of creation with instruments that can look 14 billion years back-

Each trip around the Earth was taking the Discovery crew 97.3 minutes, longer than on any previous shuttle flight because of the altitude. The view was different, too.

"I've got to tell you, I just made it up to the flight deck for a first look out the window," said mission specialist Kathryn Sullivan, who flew the shuttle once before, in 1984. "Three-thirty is a whole lot higher than 120 was," she said, referring to the altitude in nautical miles. "I don't know how much longer it takes you to get here, but every second of the wait is worth every second that you get."

"Our window on the universe!" NASA launch commentator George Diller exulted as the Discovery rose off its seaside launch pad.

"It's a beautiful day to have Hubble Space Telescope in orbit instead of here on Earth like it's been for so many years," said NASA administrator Richard Truly. "Hubble's in its element and I'm delighted."

The telescope was supposed to be launched in 1983, but technical problems and the Challenger accident delayed its deployment. It suffered a further delay two weeks ago when the countdown was stopped at the four-minutes-to-go point

Offshore shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department said Tuesday it will shift its offshore oil development policies in an effort to open more areas for development and ease congressional opposition that has blocked lease sales.

"We need to do things differently," Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan said in an interview after being asked about the new policy at a House appropriations subcommittee hearing.

If the policy is not changed, Lujan said the offshore leasing program would continue to be hampered by congressional roadblocks.

The approach would move away from the Reagan administration policy that opened all 1.4 billion acres of the nation's Outer Continental Shelf for potential development.

No meat?

WASHINGTON (AP) — So you thought you did your part on Earth Day by picking up litter? Now the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine claims that if you are going to be an environmentalist (76 percent of Americans say they are), you've got to be a vegtarian (that's 3 percent).

In other words, chew vegetables and eschew hot dogs to save the world.

"If you're a meat eater, you are contributing to the destruction of the environment, whether you know it or not, says Neal D. Bernard, 36, a 1985 graduate of George Washington University Medical School and president of the 30,000-member committee.

Bowing out

Johnson

HOUSTON (AP) — Lady Bird Johnson, whose name has been synonymous with highway beautification for years, is bowing out of a state landscape award program she has overseen for two decades.

The former first lady established and funded the Highway Maintenance Foreman's Awards, which presented cash to highway workers responsible for stretches of Texas roads judged to have the best wildflowers, picnic areas and landscaping.

Mrs. Johnson said she had accomplished much of what she intended in the program and wants to spend more time with her family.

Skating will roll to stop in 3 parks

■ In a 3-2 vote, Midland's City Council opts to end the wear and tear on three city parks — and fears of liability for injuries — by prohibiting roller-skating and skateboarding.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

"Sliding," "ollies" and "grinding" will soon be outlawed in three city of Midland parks, city councilmen decided Tuesday.

But councilmen who opposed banning these tricks and all other skateboarding and roller-skating in the parks said police officers have better things to do than enforce the ordinance.

Councilmen voted 3-2 to outlaw skating in Centennial Plaza, Volunteer Park and Dennis the Menace Park as of next Tuesday. Councilmen Jose Cuevas and John Castro opposed the ordinance.

George Logan, parks and recreation director, said skateboarders have caused up to $4,000 in damage a year to Centennial Plaza, located at the Loraine-Wall streets intersection. The skaters have torn up wooden benches and broken concrete tiles in the plaza, Logan said.

"The benches look awful," he said. "You can't even use them."

Skaters have terrorized other users of Dennis the Menace Park, at the South Garfield-Indiana avenues intersection, and Volunteer Park, at Big Spring and Marienfeld streets, he said.

"They are colliding with other people," Logan said. "They're running over people and small children."

Police will be looking out for the skaters, who may be fined up to $500 if caught in the parks, he said.

However, Cuevas said the city has gone too far in regulating park activities.

"Sometimes I think we get over-ordinanced in the parks," Cuevas said. "I think police have better things to do than monitor skating."

Councilman John Castro said the ordinance will force skaters into using more dangerous areas.

"There's no place for them to use their skateboards," Castro said. "I don't want them in the streets."

But Logan said the city could be held liable if a skater was injured in a city park. He suggested that skaters get together and build a skateboard park on private property.

"They can challenge themselves and get radical," Logan said. "They want to skate some half-pipes and get some air."

A "half-pipe" is a semicircular-shaped structure on which skaters roll back and forth and perform numerous tricks.

Though it has no half-pipe, Centennial Plaza has been one of John Evans' favorite skateboard hangouts for the past eight months.

"This is a nice place," said John, 16, a Midland High School junior. "There's a lot of benches to grind and slide."

John said he is disappointed to hear that he soon will have to skate elsewhere.

"I really don't think it's fair," he said. "We're not destroying anything or hurting anybody."

John added that area skaters probably

Plainview officer shot after chase

PLAINVIEW (AP) — A police officer was shot Tuesday afternoon after a chase that began when he stopped a car on a tip from juvenile authorities, and five suspects were arrested in the attack.

Gilbert Garcia was in critical condition at a Lubbock hospital with a gunshot wound to the middle of his back. The suspects were taken to the Hale County jail, where charges were pending.

Garcia, 42, had pulled over the suspects' vehicle at about 3 p.m. after an advisory had been issued for one juvenile.

"The juvenile authorities had an 'attempt to locate' advisory on one of the people in the car," said Police Chief Roy L. Osborne. "The officer recognized him and attempted to stop him, and that's when a pursuit ensued."

Garcia chased the car to about seven miles west of Plainview, where it was wrecked on a rural dirt road.

Atlanta, Ga., mall gunman released by mental hospital

ATLANTA (AP) — A smiling gunman who was released from a mental hospital despite homicidal and suicidal tendencies opened fire in the food court of a suburban shopping mall Tuesday, killing one man and wounding four people.

The man tried to reload the .38 caliber revolver but tossed it into a trash can before calmly walking out and surrendering, police said.

James Calvin Brady, 31, surrendered to DeKalb County police outside the mall just after shootings, said police spokesman Chuck Johnson.

"He held up his hands and said, 'I'm the one you're looking for,' " said police Col. M.F. Ferguson.

Police said Brady was charged Tuesday night with one count of murder and four counts of aggravated assault. He was being held without bond, and other charges may be filed.

Midland's job picture improves

■ Local unemployment figures follow seasonal trend, declining 1.2 to 5.2 percent in Midland and 6.1 percent in Odessa.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

The weather has warmed up, and so too, apparently, has the Midland job market.

Figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission show a sharp improvement in Midland's job picture, with the total unemployment rate falling 1.2 percent in March, to 5.2 percent from 6.4 percent. A year ago, the rate was 5.4 percent.

Odessa showed a similar improvement, with the unemployment rate falling to 6.1 percent from 7.4 percent.

Equally significant was the growth in total employment from February to March. There were 46,000 employed in the Tall City in March, up from 45,500 in February. In March 1989, total employment was 46,900.

Total unemployment dropped from 3,100 in February to 2,500 in March. Total unemployment last year was 2,700.

The civilian labor force slipped slightly, to 48,500 from 48,600 and is still down from March 1989's total of 49,600.

Labor Market Analyst John Kruse in the TEC's Austin office attributed the improvement — which was seen in all metropolitan statistical areas (MSAs) — to the change in seasons.

"Oftentimes as you come out of winter and into spring, you pick up outdoor activity and the employment associated with it," Kruse said. "Also, there is a gradual improvement in the economy, which I think is reflected in these figures."

The improvement in unemployment rates also helped Midland and Odessa's rankings among the TEC's MSAs. Midland moved from 14th to 10th overall, tied with Wichita Falls and Tyler. Odessa moved from 18th in February to 14th last month.

The lowest rate was in Bryan-College Station with 3.2 percent, followed by Lubbock with 3.9 percent and Austin with 4.1 percent. The highest rate was McAllen-Edinburgh-Mission's at 21.4 percent unemployment.

The state's urban unemployment rate dropped from 7 percent in February to 5.7 percent in March.

A total of approximately 7.87 million Texans were working last month, representing an increase of 86,100 over the 7.78 million working in February.

The major industry categories showing the biggest growth were trade, with 4,500 new jobs, and services, with 11,500 jobs added from February to March.

Iranian resistance leader assassinated

GENEVA (AP) — A leading member of an Iranian opposition movement was shot to death Tuesday outside a lakeside town near Geneva as he was driving home, the movement said in a communique.

Kazem Rajavi of the Mujahedeen Khalq, a Baghdad-based Iranian exile group, was killed by one or two assailants in Coppet, 7 miles east of Geneva, the movement said. He was the brother of Massoud Rajavi, leader of the Mujahedeen resistence movement.

Swiss police did not immediately identify the victim, but said several 9mm shells were found at the scene.

In a communique from the Iraqi capital, the Mujahedeen claimed Dr. Kazem Rajavi, the organization's Geneva representative, was assassinated by "the (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini regime's terrorist agents."

Rajavi had been in Geneva several years to publicize Iranian human rights violations. He often appealed to U.N. representatives to investigate Iran's rights situation and held several press conferences during a February-March session of the U.N. Human Rights Commission.

Massoud Rajavi in a statement from Baghdad charged that "the Khomeini regime's embassy in Switzerland, acting on direct instructions from (Iranian leader Hashemi) Rafsanjani, carried out this crime."

In a statement from Washington, Reza Pahlavi, son of Iran's deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, said the assassination "once again illustrates the unchanged and continuing terrorist nature of the regime in Tehran."

A February report issued by U.N. Special Representative Reynaldo Galndo Pohl listed the names of 700 people allegedly executed by Iran but also listed 39 people believed killed by the Mujahedeen. The report also cited evidence of torture and other violations along with government denials.

The report was denounced by the Mujahedeen as a "whitewash."

The Mujahedeen were first allied with Khomeini in the struggle to topple the late Shah. But in 1980-81, a year after Khomeini took power, he turned on the group and other leftist factions, killing and imprisoning tens of thousands of people.

The Mujahedeen and their military wing, the National Liberation Army, receive training and support from Iraq. The group is estimated to have 20,000 fighters.

Sudan government executes coup officers

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan's military government on Tuesday executed more than half of the participants in an alleged coup attempt less than 24 hours after their coup was crushed.

A statement broadcast by official Radio Omdurman said 28 officers, including three retired generals and a brigadier, were executed by firing squad after a summary court-martial.

Military tribunals continued to work. A colonel was acquitted but the trial of other officers alleged to be involved in the coup was still going on.

Lt. Gen. Omar Hassan el-Bashir's ruling junta, which took power in its own coup last June 30, said the coup attempt crushed Monday was the second phase of a coup plot originally put down in March.

Government spokesmen said 30 officers were brought before the court-martial after their arrest Monday, and that 20 officers and civilians arrested after the March incident also were on trial.

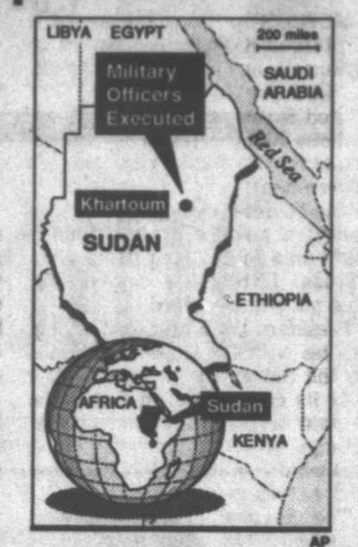

The statement did not specify how many suspects remained awaiting trial.

On Monday, el-Bashir said the abortive coup was masterminded by "the alliance in coalition with the outlaws."

The government has often used the term "outlaws" to refer to the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army, which has been waging a seven-year insurgency seeking autonomy and greater economic reforms for the country's three southern provinces.

The government statement Tuesday also did not make clear why Col. Hassan Abdalla Atta, a pilot, was acquitted. There were reports he was granted clemency in exchange for testifying against the others.

"Death by firing squad has been implemented, and the trials are still going on for the rest of the participants" said the statement read on Radio Omdurman and distributed by the Sudan News Agency.

Beijing, Moscow sign economic, scientific pact

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — China and the Soviet Union signed a 10-year agreement on Tuesday for economic and scientific cooperation that is to focus on developing the high-technology proficiency that both nations badly need.

The pact was signed by the Chinese premier, Li Peng, at the close of a delicate Kremlin visit in which the Soviet government strictly maintained its policy of not criticizing China's crushing of pro-democracy demonstrators last June.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev set the policy in pursuit of ending three decades of hostile or frozen relations with the Beijing government.

The pact Li signed with Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov of the Soviet Union was described as an ambitious, decade-long commitment to cooperation on a score of problems and projects, including possible further reductions in border troops, improved credit relations and construction of a nuclear power plant in China.

Li, who was reportedly deeply involved in his government's decision to use lethal military force to stop the democracy demonstrations, was quoted as telling Gorbachev Tuesday that while his nation is determined to make complex internal improvements and greater openness toward the outside world, it would do so by "preserving social stability."

Gorbachev, whose visit to Beijing last May was considered one of the inspirations of pro-democracy student demonstrators, replied that he was working to stay "on the path of reform, of legal processes and to avoid confrontation fraught with violence."

"This is the main thing now," the Soviet leader said.

While Li was agreeing to a series of pacts at the Kremlin, the fledgling Soviet political opposition made its first venture into foreign policy with a minority protest petition in the Moscow City Council.

It cited Li's role in the repression of the demonstrators and said he was unwelcome in the capital. It was signed by 25 of the 465 council members.

Lithuania's president accuses U.S. of selling out

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin reinforced KGB border guards in Lithuania on Tuesday, and Lithuania's president accused the United States of selling out his rebellious Baltic republic in its confrontation with the Soviet government.

The Soviet news agency Tass reported a gunfire attack Monday night on a Soviet army barracks in Vilnius, Lithuania's capital, but said no one was hurt.

President Bush said in Washington he will not impose sanctions on the Soviet Union at this time over its crackdown on Lithuania. He said he feared sanctions might prompt Moscow "to take action that would set back the whole case of freedom around the world."

The Soviets have cut off oil, drastically curtailed natural gas and curbed other supplies to Lithuania in trying to force the republic to halt its six-week-old drive for independence.

Earlier, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vadim Perfiliev warned that U.S. sanctions could have "negative consequences."

Perfiliev did not state directly that the Soviet Union might retaliate but said "any actions taken which could pull apart the sides of the argument of course could have negative consequences, not only for the Soviet Union but for the international situation."

After Bush's announcement, President Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania issued an angry statement from Vilnius.

"Can the freedom of one group of people be sold for the freedom of another? What then is the idea of freedom itself?" he said.

"This is another Munich."

He was referring to the 1938 Munich Pact, in which France and Britain allowed Nazi Germany to take control of Czechoslovakia. The treaty was widely viewed as caving in to Adolf Hitler. The pact became a symbol of appeasement.

Tass and Soviet TV's nightly newscast reported Bush's announcement.

Tass also quoted Soviet army Maj. Alexei Kirichenko as saying a shot was fired at an open window at about 10 p.m. when soldiers were already inside the barracks. It said the bullet smashed a window on the opposite wall, and that ballistics experts believe a combat weapon, and not a hunting rifle was used.

The agency also reported from Vilnius that the Lithuanian parliament on Tuesday set up a commission to "prepare anti-blockade measures" and named Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene as commission chief.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's advisers refused on Tuesday to receive a five-member Lithuanian delegation sent to Moscow to discuss the plight of the republic after a week of enduring the Kremlin economic blockade.

Lithuania hopes to make up for some of the supplies Moscow has cut with imports from abroad. But the KGB's announcement that it was adding personnel and equipment to guard the republic's border appeared designed as a warning against such a step.

Lt. Anatoly Parakhin of the KGB, whose forces are responsible for Soviet borders, did not specify in a Moscow briefing what the secret police were looking for, but indicated weapons were on the list.

"Control has been established over possible contacts between Soviet and foreign ships in territorial waters and within the borders of the economic zone of the U.S.S.R. to avert the transfer of weapons and ammunition to Lithuania," Tass quoted Parakhin as saying.

"The movement through the border of all cargo and means of transportation is being most carefully controlled.

"All coastal fishing ships, without exception, are being inspected by border details."

He said the stepped-up control was justified by an April 12 incident in which 240,000 rounds of hunting ammunition were found aboard the Soviet ship Marat Kozlov, Tass said. It was sailing to Lithuania from West Germany.

The increased border patrols were in line with a March 21 Kremlin statement calling for increased security on the Lithuanian section of the Soviet border.

Moscow began tightening its economic vise last week after Lithuania refused to rescind laws bolstering its March 11 declaration of independence.

V. Mosolov, an official of the State Supplies Committee in Moscow, told the news agency that railroad tanker cars needed to transport imported oil in Lithuania belong to the Soviet Railways Ministry, and not the republic.

South African blacks protest

N.Y. Times News Service

CATHCART, South Africa — The patchwork of tensions in this tiny town symbolizes a remarkable revolt sweeping through rural towns and villages in the Eastern Cape, indicating that protests against apartheid are spreading to some of the most isolated parts of South Africa.

Two months ago, blacks in Cathcart launched a boycott of white-owned stores, which forced white businesses to take their grievances seriously for the first time.

Blacks in eight nearby towns — Barclay East, Tarkastad, Jamestown, Maclear, Elliot, Ugie, Stutterheim and Komga — have also begun consumer boycotts to focus attention on a wide range of concerns.

These protests, which have gone almost totally unreported because they are so far from major urban areas, are taking place in towns that even most South Africans have barely heard about.

Rather than focusing on broad political issues, the protests are aimed at addressing local problems. They also appear to be uncoordinated — leaders of the Cathcart protest, for example, said they have had no contact with protesters in nearby towns.

"What we're seeing is a social movement in the region on a scale not seen before," said Mike Kenyon, a field worker with the Grahamstown Rural Committee, a nonprofit organization that helps black communities resist removal and displacement.

Chamorro tribute set

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Violeta Barrios de Chamorro is an unlikely president, a slim, elegant homebody thrust into public life by widowhood and civil war.

One of her first official acts as president will be a tribute to her slain husband, Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, whose assassination helped spark the 1979 revolution that brought the outgoing Sandinista government to power.

Directly after her inauguration as Nicaragua's president on Wednesday, Mrs. Chamorro will place flowers on her husband's grave.

The gesture sums up Mrs. Chamorro's political biography: a martyr's widow, a woman whose divided family symbolizes the conflicts that have split this nation of 3.5 million.

Peace and reconciliation are Mrs. Chamorro's promise to Nicaragua, which is emerging from nine years of civil war that claimed 30,000 lives and left the economy in tatters.

Mrs. Chamorro, 60, was chosen to run against leftist President Daniel Ortega because of her powerful symbolic value. She was the one person on whom all sectors of the loose opposition coalition could agree.

Americans threatened

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A group calling itself Islamic Jihad Movement-Jerusalem said Tuesday it would launch attacks against Americans unless the U.S. Senate reverses a motion endorsing a united Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

The group made the threat in an Arabic-language typewritten statement delivered to Beirut's An-Nahar newspaper.

"The American Senate should reverse its decision in 10 days, or else every American inside and outside Moslem countries will be a target of terrorism and revenge," said the statement.

The U.S. Senate, on a voice vote, passed a motion March 22 endorsing a united Jerusalem as the capital of Israel.

WEATHER SUMMARY

High near 80 anticipated

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The high should be near 80 and 15 to 25 mph and gusty southwest winds.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-50s, NWS said. Thursday be partly cloudy with a high near 88.

Tuesday's high of 85 was 10 degrees short of the record 95 was set in 1943. The overnight low was 61. The record low for today of 39 was set in 1937.

STATE

A tornado dipped down Tuesday in the Panhandle, accompanied by large hail, and flooding stranded vehicles in East Texas as a dry line triggered heavy thunderstorms in a march across the state.

The twister moved across open fields about 5 miles south of McLean, where marble- and golfball-size hail fell. No damage or injuries were reported.

"It came down twice and then went back up" into clouds, said J.D. Barnard, a Gray County sheriff's dispatcher.

The twister was moving northeast at 20 mph.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning for Caldwell in East Texas, where several people were stranded in their vehicles and water rose into the city jail. Flooding was also reported on State Highway 95 near Temple.

"The chief deputy is saying there's about three feet of water all over roads here," said Gloria Prazak, a Caldwell police dispatcher. "It is raining here bad."

NATION

More thunderstorms developed over the central part of the nation Tuesday after a night of severe storms, and deep snow headed for the mountains of Colorado and Wyoming.

Thunderstorms developed along a cold front mainly over South Dakota during the afternoon. A severe thunderstorm watch was issued for parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Showers were widely scattered from southeastern Kansas to northeastern Texas, and from the upper Great Lakes to the central high Plains.

Thunderstorms over Minnesota during the morning produced hail an inch in diameter at Royalton, about 20 miles north of St. Cloud.

From late Monday into early Tuesday, thunderstorms produced severe weather in the southern Plains with 36 reports of severe weather in western Texas and western Oklahoma, the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Offshore oil policy changes sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department said Tuesday it will shift its offshore oil development policies in an effort to open more areas for development and ease congressional opposition that has blocked lease sales.

"We need to do things differently," Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan said in an interview after being asked about the new policy at a House appropriations subcommittee hearing.

If the policy is not changed, Lujan said the offshore leasing program would continue to be hampered by congressional roadblocks.

The approach would move away from the Reagan administration policy that opened all 1.4 billion acres of the nation's Outer Continental Shelf for potential development.

Instead, officials said, only areas where there is geological evidence of significant oil or gas potential would be considered for lease sales and some of the most environmentally sensitive areas would be eliminated from consideration.

Lujan told the subcommittee that the proposal is expected to be sent to President Bush after the president decides on whether to allow oil development on three of the most controversial offshore areas off Florida and California.

A decision on those sites is expected "within a few weeks," Lujan said.

A presidential task force has suggested that oil exploration could proceed under some circumstances in the areas off California, but that environmental concerns were considerably greater in the area off the Florida Everglades, where there are environmentally sensitive coral reefs.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the decision on the California and Florida leases was not related to the overall policy question as outlined in the Interior proposal.

Since Reagan opened the Outer Continental Shelf, Congress has repeatedly blocked lease sales along most of the nation's coastlines except for the Gulf of Mexico, where most of the offshore drilling is concentrated.

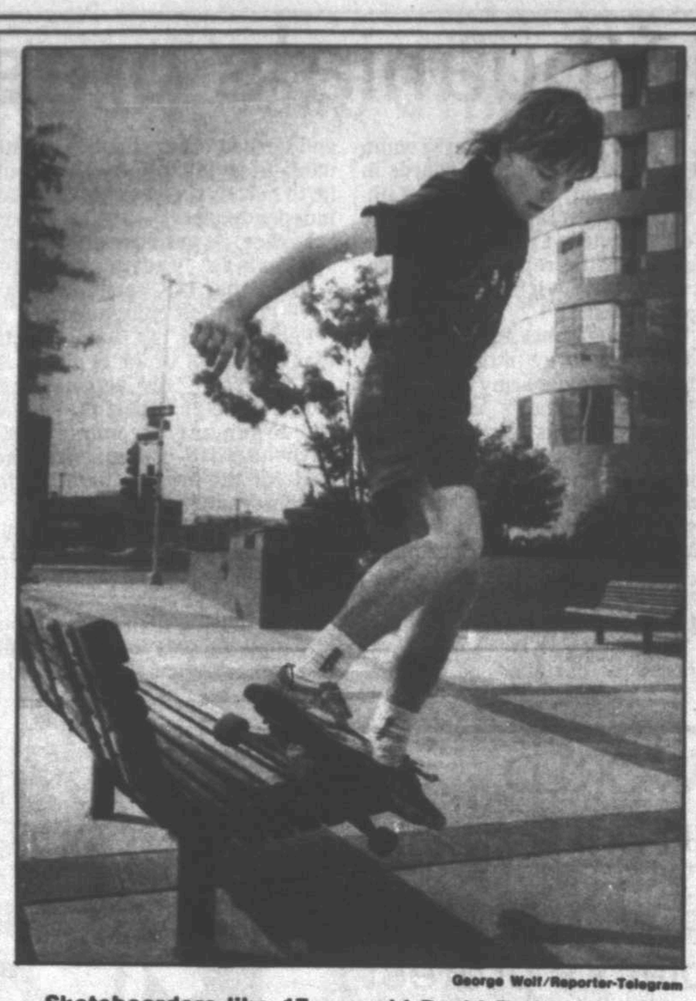

The oil industry has shown significant interest in exploration off the California and Alaska coasts as well as off the Atlantic coast from Georges Banks to near Cape Hatteras.

Lujan has said repeatedly that offshore oil development is essential to meet the country's energy needs and reduce the reliance on imported petroleum.

"We're basically trying to keep the (offshore leasing) program alive," said Interior spokesman Steve Goldstein.

Details of the proposal have not emerged, but the plan was greeted with skepticism on Capitol Hill.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the Interior subcommittee on water, power and offshore energy resources, said he didn't believe Congress would accept the new leasing strategy.

Skateboarders like 17-year-old David Prater have less than a week to pursue their hobby in three city parks. "Rail sliding" like this and other manuevers involving city property prompted city councilmen Tuesday to outlaw skating at Centennial Plaza, Volunteer Park and Dennis the Menace Park.

SKATING: Council split on limiting park activity could not pool enough money to build their own skateboard park.

Skateboarder Adam Bailey, 13, an Alamo Junior High School pupil, said the city should build a park for skaters.

"If they would like to keep kids out of trouble, maybe they ought to give us a place to go, like a skate park," Adam said.

In other action Tuesday, councilmen unanimously approved an agreement with Midland County to house Midland Police Department prisoners in the new county jail, scheduled to open sometime in May.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the county will employ the city's five jailers, while the city will employ the county's five dispatchers.

Mayor Carroll Thomas was out of town and did not attend the meeting. Councilman Robert Monaghan was undergoing surgery at a Lubbock hospital and also could not attend.

HUBBLE: Seven years late, telescope reaches space

because of a faulty hydraulic unit on the shuttle.

While it remained on Earth, the telescope cost $7 million a month to exercise and keep in readiness. In its first day in space, that checkout and testing continued remotely under control of the Goddard center.

On hand to watch the Discovery launching was a contingent of scientists who have hailed the Hubble as the greatest advance in astronomy since Galileo raised a small telescope to his eyes nearly 400 years ago.

Truly referred to the early-day astronomer when he was asked about the long delays in getting the telescope to its working station.

"Somebody the other day said, 'Who remembers the day that Galileo picked up his telescope to look at the stars?'" said Truly, a former shuttle astronaut. "It doesn't matter what day we launch Hubble, it matters that we do it right."

The telescope is 43 feet long and 14 feet in diameter, about the size of a railroad tank car. When it flies free, it will receive electrical power for its six scientific instruments from two wing-like solar arrays that extend outward on each side.

It is named after the late astronomer Edwin P. Hubble, who theorized that the universe was expanding and that the farther away a galaxy is, the faster it is traveling. That gave support to the theory that a massive explosion — the Big Bang — created the universe 10 to 20 billion years ago.

The Hubble is expected to help provide the answer to two major questions: How old is the universe? How big is it?

The telescope has two mirrors, one 94.5 inches in diameter, the other 12 inches. Two of the instruments are cameras, two are spectrometers and one is a photometer. In addition, the fine pointing system acts as a sixth instrument by providing precise measurement of distances.

On Wednesday, Hawley is to grapple the 12½-ton telescope with the shuttle's mechanical arm, lift it out of the cargo bay, point it, and — after a long checkout — drop it overboard to orbit on its own.

In the cargo bay, the telescope receives electrical power from the shuttle. But the juice is cut when the instrument is lifted out and it will depend on internal batteries until the solar panels are extended to receive light from the sun.

Landmark Texas bar burns

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Arson is suspected in a fire that caused $10,000 damage to the P-2 bar, nicknamed "The Deuce," a landmark saloon and restaurant here.

The fire call came at 2:57 a.m. Tuesday, 27 minutes after owner Raymond Nipper closed the bar to go home, officials said. Damage was set at $15,000.

Throughout the day hundreds of patrons came by to offer their support and help. "I'm visiting a sick friend," said District Judge Keith Nelson as he watched the cleanup at 10 a.m. "This is really sad."

Investigator Janie Ellis declined to elaborate on the cause of the fire pending more investigation by the fire marshal. Employees said it appeared someone broke the back window and broke a container of flammable liquid on the floor inside the back door.

Fire Marshal Mike Johnson said he has some suspects in the case.

The bar and restaurant was well known for its stag atmosphere inside and its family atmosphere outside was featured in an Associated Press article that appeared in the Times Record News on Monday morning.

"It's really strange that this would happen right after that article," said Tim Phillips, a longtime patron and oil lease man from Dallas, formerly of Wichita Falls.

GUNMAN: One killed, four injured

(From 1A)

A document found in Brady's pocket said he was released Monday from Georgia Regional Hospital in Atlanta. He was admitted to the state hospital April 13, but the document did not say why he was released, said DeKalb police Col. M.F. Ferguson.

The document "said he had homicidal and suicidal tendencies, and suffered from delusions," Ferguson said. Brady "can be hostile, threatening, and has a history of alcohol abuse," he quoted it as saying.

Marchant Roach, a spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources, which runs the state hospital system, said the department would not comment on any patient.

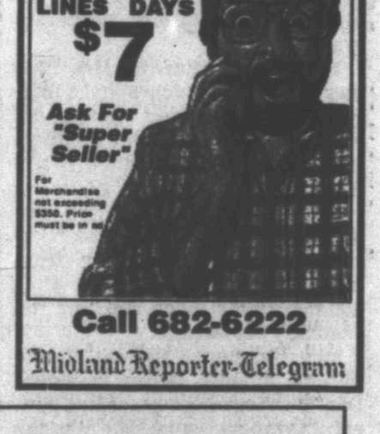

During questioning, police said Brady talked of God and about a "mechanical device" inside him that controls his actions.

"He's suffering from hallucinations. He was probably having one when he fired," Ferguson said.

Officers said Brady bought the revolver and 12 rounds of hollow-point ammunition, a type designed to expand on impact and cause particularly severe wounds, for $129 at a pawn shop in Atlanta on Monday.

"He looked like a businessman with his left hand in his pants pocket," said Carol Gravdahl, manager of Sweaters Etc. at Perimeter Mall, a few miles north of the city. "His right arm was straight out with a pistol, shooting it off randomly."

After emptying his gun, Brady walked to a table, unloaded the empty shells and was about to reload when an unidentified person standing nearby talked him out of it, Johnson said.

SHOT: Policeman's condition 'critical;' Five suspects arrested

(From 1A)

Osborne said details of the shooting were still sketchy, but it occurred when Garcia, who was alone in his squad car, emerged at the wreck scene. A weapon was recovered. The officer did not fire his gun, the chief said.

Garcia was given cardiopulmonary resuscitation and taken to Central Plains Regional Hospital in the Northwest Texas city. He was transferred by helicopter to St. Mary's of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock, where he was in intensive care, said Marnette Winner, a nursing supervisor.

Four of the suspects were apprehended at the scene. Officers from the Texas Department of Public Safety and sheriff's office, using planes, found the fifth suspect in a field west of the city limits, said Osborne.

He said it was the first shooting of a Plainview police officer since 1962.

Plainview is located about 50 miles north of Lubbock.

$2.6 million worth of 'good news' going with Quayle to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will invoke emergency authority to send $2.6 million in medical aid to Nicaragua in time for the presidential inauguration today of Violeta Chamorro, congressional and administration sources said.

The move was timed to give Vice President Dan Quayle the chance to deliver good news when he represents Bush at the swearing-in ceremony in Managua, the sources said. Quayle also will report progress toward sending previously promised food and other aid for the new government, the sources said.

Bush's request for $300 million to begin economic recovery in Nicaragua, part of an $870 million aid request that also includes Panama, had been stalled on Capitol Hill by a dispute over unrelated legislation. That snarl was resolved late Tuesday, but it remained unlikely the full aid package would be approved immediately.

Failure to approve the full aid package by Chamorro's inauguration should not be seen as an embarrassment, said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

"It is a matter of procedures here," he told reporters. "We have procedures that obviously have to go forward, and I think eventually that aid package will be voted."

The administration aid request for Nicaragua is designed to help that country — now among the poorest in the hemisphere — recover from a decade of civil war and U.S. trade sanctions. It includes money to meet immediate needs for planting of crops and for fuel.

Officials of the new government acknowledge they face a thorny challenge in meeting the expectations of the electorate for a better standard of living.

Mrs. Chamorro was elected overwhelmingly in February elections to replace President Daniel Ortega of the leftist Sandinista party. Her coalition was supported by the United States.

The medical assistance would be the first direct U.S. aid to the Central American country in nine years.

SSC debate framed by doubts, limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deals with Japan and other foreign partners to absorb cost overruns of the $8 billion superconducting super collider could kill the project, the chairman of the Senate Energy Committee warned on Tuesday.

"The way to get this thing in political trouble is to give away the cream of the technology," Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said of the high-energy physics particle accelerator that President Bush wants to build near Waxahachie, Texas, about 35 miles south of Dallas.

Johnston made the remarks as House leaders postponed until next week action on a bill that would cap federal spending on what would be the world's largest and most powerful accelerator at $5 billion and require foreign partners, Texas or private money to cover any cost above that level.

The bill by Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the House Science Committee, is a response to opponents in Congress who claim the $1 billion a year the government anticipates spending on the collider when construction gets into full swing will squeeze out other worthy science endeavors.

The project essentially involves building two circular underground tunnels 54 miles around to accelerate beams of protons in opposite directions at nearly the speed of light and then make them collide.

Through the collisions, scientists hope to find previously unobservable subatomic particles that could provide clues on how the cosmos was created.

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, in whose district the project would be located, said that Roe's bill — over opposition from the Bush administration — would limit foreign participation in any aspect of the project to 50 percent.

Johnston quoted senior officials in the Energy Department as telling him, that because of the limit, the administration is looking at contracting with Japan to supply the 10,000 supermagnets for the project.

"I would hate for us to give away the most valuable thing in the project, the supermagnets ... and let somebody else develop the manufacturing technology," he said. "That's what we did with the auto industry."

Meanwhile, northern lawmakers opposed to the project said they will offer amendments when Roe's bill comes before the House floor to increase the foreign funding share from 20 percent to 25 percent and require annual reviews by congressional auditors of spending and changes in cost estimates.

Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, said the audits would provide an "objective, independent assessment to back up our claims" that the project will be plagued by continuing cost overruns and should be scuttled.

"This is an incremental process," Eckart said. "As a trial lawyer I know I have to have an arsenal of evidence to refute the claims of opponents. Clearly last year, they had more evidence than we had."

The administration said Tuesday it would support changes in the bill to require the successful testing of 10 prototype magnets before allowing construction of the tunnels to begin.

In a statement of policy, the White House Budget Office also said it wants deleted from the bill a provision that would refund to Texas — if the project is canceled in the future — the $1 billion it has pledged toward its costs.

Blood centers fight threat of AIDS-infected supply

CHICAGO (AP) — Despite efforts to discourage them, drug abusers who are infected with the AIDS virus are still selling blood plasma to commercial collection centers, and more needs to be done to stop them, a study says.

But a spokesman for plasma collection centers says they are doing a good job of excluding such donors and keeping the AIDS infection out of blood products. These include clotting factor used by hemophiliacs and immune globulin taken by people who need protection against hepatitis.

"The current products that are out there are considered to be 100 percent safe," said James Reilly, spokesman for the American Blood Resources Association, the trade group representing the approximately 400 U.S. for-profit plasma-collection centers.

"There are no known cases of (AIDS) transmission from products currently on the market," he said in a telephone interview from Annapolis, Md.

The study found that more than 23 percent of 2,921 intravenous drug abusers contacted in the Baltimore area in 1988 and 1989 said they had sold plasma or donated blood after they began injecting illegal drugs.

Tests revealed 24.1 percent of those contacted were infected with HIV, the AIDS virus, said researchers at Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health in Baltimore. They reported their findings in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The AIDS virus is believed to be spread mainly through sexual intercourse, shared hypodermic needles and from infected mothers to their babies before or during birth.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control says 126,127 adult AIDS cases had been reported as of March 31, including 26,883 cases among IV drug users and 8,711 cases among homosexual IV drug users. Transfusion associated AIDS cases total 3,040.

Since March 1985, all U.S. blood and blood components have been screened to detect AIDS antibodies, which indicate the presence of the virus, the researchers noted. In addition, plasma from commercial centers is subjected to processing designed to kill the AIDS virus, but in isolated cases in other countries, the virus has survived in treated plasma products, said Dr. Kenrad E. Nelson, lead researcher.

"This does not mean the (U.S.) blood supply is unsafe," Nelson said in a telephone interview. "But the fact is that there have been cases where hemophiliacs have gotten infected despite screening and heat treatment. I think donor exclusion is vital."

Efforts so far have paid off, the study found. While 24.1 percent of the study subjects were infected overall, the prevalence of infections among blood or plasma donors fell from 17.1 percent in 1985 to 3.6 percent in 1988-89.

Most of the subjects said they were paid $10 to $15 for giving plasma at commercial centers, and about 10 percent said they had donated blood at non-profit blood banks.

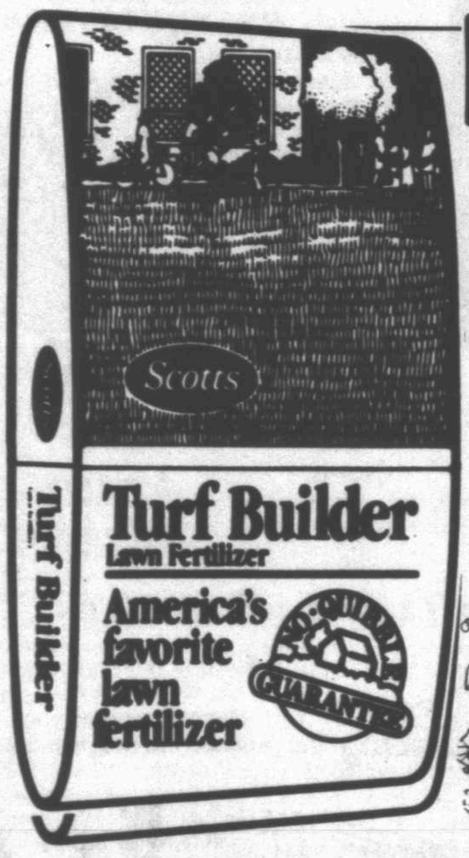

But the American Association of Blood Banks said in a statement "it is typical for people who donate plasma to confuse blood banks with plasma centers. Hence, any conclusions drawn from the study must be restricted to plasma donors receiving payment for their donation."

The approximately 2,400 U.S. non-profit blood banks, including those run by the American Red Cross, primarily draw whole blood and rely entirely on unpaid donors.

'Anti-family' policy axed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration has rejected a proposal that it collect income taxes on many Social Security benefits paid to children claimed as dependents by their parents.

The agency rejected the proposal, made by the inspector general of the Health and Human Services Department, as "anti-family" and contrary to President Bush's goal of a "kinder, gentler America."

Inspector General Richard Kusserow recommended, in an audit released Tuesday, that the taxes be paid by most of the 334,000 middle- and upper-income families whose children now receive tax-free benefits.

Even as the children were receiving the tax-free benefits, about 4.5 million retirees and disabled beneficiaries and their spouses at the same income levels were paying income taxes on as much as one-half of their Social Security benefits.

Kusserow's report was based on a study of benefits and taxes in 1986. He called the present Social Security policy "inequitable" and said it will cost the government more than $1 billion in lost revenues over the next five years.

Children pay no income tax on their Social Security benefits unless their income exceeds $25,000 a year.

Drug czar criticized by mayors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic mayors blasted federal drug policy chief William Bennett on Tuesday, accusing him of ignoring treatment, education and poverty in the federal war on drugs.

Boston Mayor Raymond L. Flynn called Bennett "a little bit hypocritical" for focusing on law enforcement and failing to address the hopelessness that drives inner-city youths to drug abuse and the drug trade.

New York Mayor David Dinkins said Bennett had "sent exactly the wrong signal" by suggesting drug education programs don't work.

"Bennett's repudiation of drug education was cynical statement from the man who ran the education department through the era of 'just say no,'" Dinkins said. "But it was a typical example of the type of leadership we're getting from Washington — leadership that says we have more needs and then gives us less."

Bennett was secretary of education during much of the Reagan administration. First lady Nancy Reagan made the slogan "just say no" the centerpiece of her anti-drug efforts.

Dinkins and Flynn spoke as the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the organization of big-city mayors, concluded a two-day meeting with police chiefs on the drug problem.

Their comments came a day after Bennett addressed the gathering and encountered only gently challenging questions.

"What's with these guys?" Bennett said in an interview after their later remarks Tuesday. "I was there yesterday ... Did they wait until I leave and then snipe at me? ... Some of these folks think leadership is coming to Washington twice a year and complaining."

Bennett called Dinkins' remarks "New York bull."

The mayors issued a closing statement urging the Bush administration to reverse itself on its opposition to providing federal aid directly to the cities to fight drugs, rather than routing it through the states. Mayors contend states have kept the drug-enforcement money for themselves or delayed in passing it on.

Houston Mayor Kathryn Whitmire said the mayors want more money for Head Start, the program for disadvantaged preschoolers, for job training for drug abusers, and for drug treatment programs for anyone who wants to enroll in one.

"We are fighting the war on drugs in America today in large part because our nation has not prevailed in the war on poverty," said Whitmire, president of the Conference of Mayors.

Bennett claimed progress in the fight against drugs in his Monday address.

U.S. must seek more releases

The release Sunday of hostage Robert Polhill by the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militants in Beirut, Lebanon, who had been holding him should not spark hope that other hostages will soon be released.

Terrorists typically do not release their hostages until those individuals become of no value.

Although Polhill was freed after 39 months in captivity, 17 others from Western nations, including seven Americans, are still held.

One reason that other releases are unlikely now is the fact that the hostages are held by different factions who hope to achieve different results through their terrorism.

President Bush thanked both Syria and Iran for their help in gaining the release of Polhill, called for the release of all the other hostages and reiterated that the United States will make no deals with hostage takers.

That must remain the United States policy if hostage diplomacy is not to become the routine in that corner of the world.

Already three U.S. presidents — Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and now George Bush — have had to confront this delicate and yet dangerous dilemma. From time to time a hostage is released, but for the most part they are unwilling pawns in an international chess match.

What can be done?

Unfortunately, little of consequence. It is a "game" without rules and the players only know their ultimate intentions.

Americans certainly must not forget the captives, nor must they allow their elected representatives to forget them. The United States government should continue pressing Syria, Iran and Lebanon to release the hostages. The pressure occasionally pays off as was seen in the release of Polhill.

The injustice of holding innocent hostages must never be condoned.

ANOTHER VIEW

Budgetary talk corrupts process

Congress uses a planning tool that promotes the misconception that it cut spending over the past decade. Called the "current services budget," it automatically presumes spending increases.

When the president or a congressman proposes raising the spending on some particular federal program or agency, but the raise is less than the current services budget estimated it to be, the increase is called a "cut" in spending.

For example, the president's 1989 budget, submitted to Congress in January 1988, requested $1.094 trillion, a $38 billion hike over the previous year. But as the "current services budget" estimated that 1989 spending should have been $1,102 billion, President Bush's requested $38 billion increase was called an $8.2 billion cut.

In this example what was cut, of course, was not spending in an absolute amount, but rather, the rate of increase in spending. For a simple example of this semantic sham, imagine that every year you double your donation to your favorite charity. One year you give, $100, the next year $200, the next $400. Then the following year you donate $600 — a $200 increase, though only half the rate of increase of previous years, and the charity claims you "cut" your contribution.

Unfortunately, many vested interest groups complain that taxpayer's funds they have received for their programs have been "cut" over the past 10 years. A Citizens for a Sound Economy study shows that virtually all "cuts" made during President Reagan's years were merely reductions in the rates of increase for such programs.

If the budget mess is to ever be cleaned up, the place to start is the elimination of this and other double-talk and deceit in the budget-making process.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 25, the 115th day of 1990. There are 250 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Ten years ago, on April 25, 1980, the White House announced that an attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran had failed, and that eight U.S. servicemen had died in the fiery collision of two aircraft.

On this date:

In 1792, a highwayman named Nicolas-Jacques Pelletier became the first person under French law to be executed by the guillotine.

In 1859, ground was broken for the Suez Canal.

In 1874, radio pioneer Guglielmo Marconi was born in Bologna, Italy.

In 1898, the United States formally declared war on Spain.

In 1901, New York became the first state to require automobile license plates. The fee was one dollar.

In 1908, broadcast journalist Edward R. Murrow was born in Pole Creek, N.C.

In 1915, during World War I, Allied soldiers invaded the Gallipoli Peninsula in an unsuccessful attempt to take the Ottoman Turkish Empire out of the war.

In 1945, delegates from 45 countries met in San Francisco to organize the United Nations.

In 1945, U.S. and Soviet forces met at Torgau, Germany, on the Elbe River.

In 1959, the St. Lawrence Seaway opened to shipping.

In 1978, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down all pension plans requiring women to contribute larger portions of their salaries than men.

In 1982, Israel withdrew its remaining soldiers from the Sinai, leaving the peninsula under Egyptian control as agreed to under the Camp David accords.

In 1983, Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov invited Samantha Smith to visit his country after receiving a letter from the Manchester, Maine, schoolgirl that had expressed fears about nuclear war.

Five years ago: 257 members of the U.S. House sent a letter to President Reagan, urging him to cancel his planned visit to the German military cemetery at Bitburg.

One year ago: Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita announced his resignation in order to take responsibility for his involvement in Japan's "Recruit" stock scandal.

Inspector generals losing powers

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department has given crooks an across-the-board reprieve and a good reason to laugh.

Thousands of criminal investigations have been thrown into permanent limbo because the Justice Department has usurped the authority of the inspectors general in all federal agencies. Inspectors general are assigned as watchdogs to each agency, looking for fraud, abuse and waste. Over the years, they have become accustomed to a wide range of investigative powers.

Anderson

But, in a shrewdly worded ruling, the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel has handed many of those investigative powers over to the FBI.

"It's a power grab," one Senate investigator told us. "This is about power."

No longer can inspectors general probe allegations of fraud in the food and health industry. No longer can they nail construction companies that endanger their workers by ignoring safety laws. No longer can they pursue passport and visa fraud. No longer can they freely probe into any area that does not have a tax dollar or an agency employee tied up in the crime.

At least, not without taking a number at the Justice Department and asking for permission to investigate. In other words, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh wants to be the only cop in town.

The consequence is that leads will be abandoned and investigations will grow old and die of neglect. In the Labor Department alone, investigators have had to abandon more than ',000 leads.

The developments haven't escaped the notice of Congress. Today the Senate Committee on Government Affairs, chaired by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, is scheduled to hold a hearing. Expect to see a long line of inspectors general seeking help.

Until this point, they have grumbled quietly and privately about the Justice Department's limited view of their mission. Our associate Jim Lynch has seen the complaints submitted to Glenn's committee.

State Department Inspector General Sherman Funk wrote that the Justice Department unfairly treats the inspectors general as "rogue cops." Funk added that the ruling has "disheartened the IG community."

Health and Human Services Inspector General Richard Kusserow wrote that the decision "will continue to impair criminal enforcement in HHS operations."

The Justice Department ruling came in response to a Labor Department investigation, and now Justice officials claim that the ruling only applies to the Labor Department. But the inspectors general aren't buying it, especially in light of the fact that last December, Justice officials told the HHS inspector general's office to keep its hands off Food and Drug Administration (FDA) investigations. That was after the inspector general broke the FDA generic drug bribery scandal.

Defense lawyers haven't missed the significance of the ruling. Lawyers representing defendants in cases originated by inspectors general have already begun to question the authority of the watchdogs in court.

Inspectors general are now muttering that they want legislation to protect them from further power grabs by the Justice Department. Glenn plans to introduce protective legislation.

It's more than coincidence that the Justice Department turned a cold shoulder to inspectors general about one month before it begrudgingly received its own first inspector general. The department had resisted the appointment of an internal watchdog for more than 10 years.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

People sold bill of goods about Lithuania

WASHINGTON — When an individual becomes a dissident, he or she is seen by the outside world as a hero: a Sakharov or Mandela stirs the conscience of the world.

But when a captive nation becomes a dissident, its resistance to oppression becomes an inconvenience to mankind; it is accused of being an impediment to the big picture, a threat to worshipers of the idol of stability.

Safire

That is why European industrialists who insisted that the Kremlin would never use its natural-gas pipeline as a weapon are now so silent at the cutoff to Lithuania.

That is why polls say American public opinion treats the reach for independence by the dissident nation to be an annoyance, preferring 2 to 1 that our president continue his policy of paying lip service to the Lithuanian assertion of longstanding independence — while supporting Gorbachev and protecting the summit meeting.

We have been sold a bill of goods.

We are told that we have a great stake in the personal success of Gorbachev; that his success depends on his absolute control of the Kremlin; and that he would lose control to some neo-Stalinist faction if his freeing of Central European nations extended to the three Baltic republics which were grabbed a few years earlier.

The opposite is true.

Our interest in Gorbachev is limited to his ability to withdraw troops from illegally seized nations and to speed the transition to political and economic freedom; his motive to make these reforms is rooted in the fear of the failed system's impending collapse; and by not putting a price on his reversion to command control, we remove a central impetus for the growth of democracy.

Does pressing Gorbachev to acknowledge the independence of the Baltic states really jeopardize, as White House backgrounders argue, our greater objective of troop withdrawal and missile reduction?

A minority think not.

We believe that the West's toleration of his decision to make economic war on a conquered nation that now dares to assert its freedom is not merely morally wrong, but geopolitically unsound.

It breaks the democratic momentum.

Our failure to denounce the threat of "presidential rule" — the euphemism for dictatorship — bolsters the imperious inclinations of the Soviet strongman and undermines sensibly radical reformers.

But Bush, following isolationist public opinion in the U.S., and under the cloak of "consultation" with European leaders eager to abandon the idea of collective security, is temporizing.

In light of this tepid support, what should besieged Lithuanians do?

Negotiating in a vacuum is a non-starter.

Offering concessions when the other side answers only with a blockade is taken as weakness rather than reasonableness. The cap of independence has been tossed over the wall; the declaration cannot be undeclared without abject surrender.

Counting on the West for help at the start is another mistake.

Our nervous doves combine with our ultra-pragmatists to say: America has other fish to fry.

Armed revolt is not an option: as one Balt told me, "there are no hills here — we cannot do an Afghanistan."

What's left?

Suffering and lamentation; sustained resistance and dramatically expressed resentment; refusal to be starved into submission.

Public suffering can be a powerful force, as individual dissidents have demonstrated.

Freedom never comes easily, and rarely does it come from outside.

To prick the conscience of the world, Lithuanians will have to do more than line up cars at gas stations. They will have to parade their jobless, show the ravages of Gorbachev's blockade on their children, passively torment their oppressors and become the grim example of the failure of glasnost.

Moscow's no-gas attack is effective, as is occupiers' brutality, the takeover of printing plants and the imposition of a quisling prosecutor.

Gorbachev will set the Baltic nations free only if he must. The Balts, by their courage and willingness to suffer, can shame the world into making sure he must.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Pet Labradors forgiving, non-judgmental

The New York Times Sunday Magazine has done an article on me. There must not have been much news around fit to print.

I will not comment otherwise on the article, but I would like to say a few words about a quotation that appeared from the ex-Mrs. Grizzard, Kathy Schmook, aka Number 3.

Grizzard

Mrs. Schmook, who lives in Montana, is quoted as saying, "Lewis is the loneliest man in the world."

It was a nice gesture, I thought, that my local paper pulled out the quote and ran it so that readers of these papers, or at least those who read them, were able to see it, too.

I wonder if my ex-wife had said, "Lewis is the greatest lover in the world," or, "Lewis always wears clean underwear," if that would have made the New York Times Sunday Magazine, and my local paper as well, but she didn't, so we can go on.

I don't know why Mrs. Schmook said that. We haven't talked in years.

But I would like to say to her, the New York Times, and just for the everlasting record that, although like most people, I do go through periods of loneliness, I am not the loneliest man in the world.

I figure Manuel Noriega is the loneliest man in the world. Either him or Mikhail Gorbachev or Pete Rose.

I'm probably not even the loneliest man or person on my street. If for no other reason it's because I've got my two dogs, Catfish and Cornbread, the black Labs.

Catfish's bed is at the foot of mine. Cornbread's is to the right. At some point in the middle of every night, however, Cornbread, my youngest, gets out of his bed and gets into mine.

Each morning I awaken with Cornbread next to me.

At first, I tried to discourage this. But then I thought, it's comforting to know that at least somebody or something wants to sleep next to me at night no matter what I did during the day.

Dogs are like that. They are forgiving and completely non-judgmental.

When I come home Catfish and Cornbread are always glad to see me. They care not where I have been, what I have been doing, or with whom I have been doing it.

I can tell that is true by the way Cornbread leaps at my feet first and attempts to lick me on the head.

I can tell that by the way Catfish whines, wags his tail and seem to be saying, "Am I glad you're home! Want to go in the back yard and throw me some tennis balls?"

I sort of wish Catfish and Cornbread could read. They would glance at the New York Times Sunday Magazine, and say, "Whoa, listen to this: 'Lewis is the loneliest man in the world.' Hey, Dad, if you're lonely, we know a Dalmatian and two basset hounds up the street we could ask over and have a party."

I'm not lonely. Sometimes, I don't sleep that well at night, onions give me heartburn, I'm upset about what's happening in Khartoum, but I'm not lonely, because my dogs love me and don't mouth off to newspapers.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I'm late for Cornbread's Little League game.

Star telescope waits in wings

Discovery crew prepares to launch Hubble today, then standby

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Later this week, a command radioed from Earth will open the lens cap on the Hubble Space Telescope and allow the first light from space to strike its mirror.

If telescopes have a most-important moment, that will be it. It will mean that Hubble, flying free 380 miles above the world, has opened its eyes to the heavens and is ready to make discoveries not yet imagined.

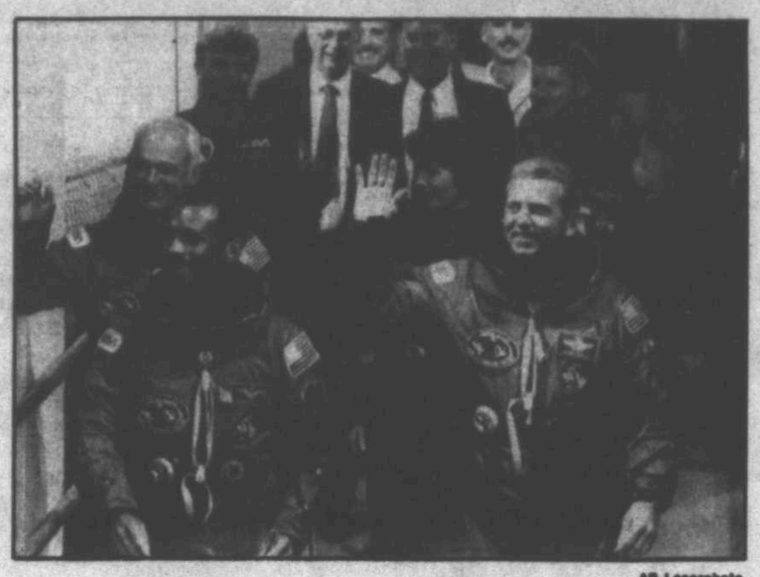

NASA is so concerned about that lens cap opening, it is keeping the shuttle Discovery in the neighborhood just in case. Astronauts Bruce McCandless and Kathryn Sullivan will be suited up, ready to walk in space to open the cap — formally called an aperture door — by hand.

Opening that door is step 65 in a sequence NASA laid out to activate and check out the $1.5 billion telescope and its five instruments before the shuttle pulls away and leaves the Hubble to its own devices.

The instruments themselves, mounted behind the telescope's 94.5 inch mirror, were warmed up Tuesday, soon after the shuttle lifted into a sunny Florida sky. Their ability to communicate with the ground was checked one-by-one.

One of the instruments, the Wide-Field and Planetary Camera, operates in two modes as its name implies. In the wide-field mode, the camera can photograph a giant galaxy 60 million light years from Earth. How far is that? Light travels 5,900,000,000,000 miles in one year.

With this instrument, astronomers plan to look into crowded centers of galaxies and search for disk-shaped formations of gas and dust around young stars where new planetary systems may be forming. If they discover a star like our sun and planets like our Earth, they may be on the trail of other life in the universe.

AP Laserphoto

In its planetary mode, the camera can photograph entire hemispheres of any planet in our solar system in a single exposure. Scientists will be able to take photographs of Neptune as sharp and detailed as those taken by the two Voyager spacecraft when each was only five days away.

A second instrument is the Faint-Object Camera, provided by the European Space Agency. It is designed to detect distant objects and extends the reach of the telescope to the greatest possible distance.

This camera will photograph stars seven times farther away than any before it. "Many stars and galaxies that are considered faint by present standards will be almost blazing light sources to the Faint-Object Camera," says a NASA brochure.

A third instrument, the Faint-Object Spectrograph, will analyze the light from individual stars and nebulae in our galaxy and those nearby and provide data to deduce their physical and chemical properties.

The spectrograph also will be used to study erupting stars — supernova — and determine the rate at which the expansion of the universe has been slowing over billions of years.

Liberia condemned for killings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Tuesday to condemn the Liberian government for killing unarmed civilians in a wave of violence that has caused tens of thousands to flee the African nation.

The House approved the non-binding resolution 417-0. It includes a request that President Bush consider human rights abuses before resuming any military aid.

Liberian President Samuel Doe launched a crackdown on his opponents after a group of insurgents killed several Liberian officials in December.

More than 200 people reportedly have been killed by Doe's forces. The United Nations estimates that 140,000 Liberians have fled to the neighboring Ivory Coast and Guinea.

For Earth's sake, give up steak, committee urges

By Mike Feinsilber

WASHINGTON (AP) — So you thought you did your part on Earth Day by picking up litter? Now the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine claims that if you are going to be an environmentalist (76 percent of Americans say they are), you've got to be a vegetarian (that's 3 percent).

In other words, chew vegetables and eschew hot dogs to save the world.

"If you're a meat eater, you are contributing to the destruction of the environment, whether you know it or not," says Neal D. Bernard, 36, a 1980 graduate of George Washington University Medical School and president of the 30,000-member committee. "Clearly the best thing you can do for the Earth is to not support animal agriculture."

He cited statistics to make his point:

■ Producing enough food to feed a meat-eater requires 4,200 gallons of water a day; to feed a vegetarian requires 300 gallons.

■ Nearly 4 billion tons of topsoil are lost each year in the United States, chiefly because of overgrazing by livestock and unsustainable methods of growing feed.

■ It takes 39 times more energy to produce beef than soybeans having the same caloric value.

■ Tropical rain forest is being cleared in Latin America to raise cattle; a pound of hamburger represents 55 square feet of burned-off forest.

Bernard's group observed Earth Day Sunday by passing out recipes for such dishes as black beans and rice and vegetarian chili.

Bernard said most environmentalists don't "catch the connection" between eating meat and polluting the earth, but are "pretty sympathetic" when it is spelled out.

"They picture a pastoral scene, a few cows grazing and a few chickens clucking," he said. "Little do they know that cows are raised on enormous feedlots for a portion of their lives and you can't keep the manure from running off into streams. By and large, raising animals for food is a very unfriendly industry from an environmental viewpoint."

He says research suggests that methane gas — an inevitable by-product of cud-chewing animals — contributes to the greenhouse effect.

The 300,000-member National Cattlemen's Association disputed the committee's assertions.

"The claim that to be a proper environmentalist you can't be a meat-eater is a bunch of bull," said spokesperson Alisa Harrison. "There is no current sound scientific evidence that shows that by being a vegetarian you're going to be a better user of natural resources."

She said the committee's figures on water use, for example, could only be true if all field corn were raised through irrigation, which is not the case.

"We don't have a problem with people choosing to become vegetarians," Ms. Harrison said. "What we don't like is groups like the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine spreading false rumors about our use of natural resources. They're misleading and they're not based on scientific evidence."

Bernard said that in polls 76 percent of Americans say they consider themselves environmentalists and 3 percent list themselves as vegetarians of one degree or another. Ms. Harrison said her information was that vegetarians account for only 2 percent of the public.

The latest government figures said that red meat consumption in the United States dropped from 163 to 144 pounds per person between 1970 and 1987.

Havana jams Radio Marti

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba began jamming the U.S. government's Radio Marti broadcasts between 6 a.m. and noon on Tuesday, said a spokeswoman for the Voice of America, which runs the service.

Until this month, Cuba had not interfered with Radio Marti except for a humming sound that impaired the quality of the broadcasts.

Castro has called TV Marti a "gross instrument of subversion" that violates national sovereignty and international law. The Bush administration has said the station is consistent with international law.

Fly found in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Florida's agriculture commissioner announced Tuesday the state will begin aerial pesticide spraying to combat an infestation of Mediterranean fruit flies.

A malathion compound will be sprayed by helicopter beginning Thursday in a mostly residential, 16-square-mile area, commissioner Doyle Conner said.

The spraying will continue for four weeks followed by the release of millions of sterile Medflies to break the breeding cycle. Fruit quarantine boundaries have not yet been established.

At least one environmentalist blasted the announcement.

"The bad thing about using these kinds of chemicals is that they wipe out all the insects in an area — the good and the bad," said Lee Emerson, vice president of the Oleta River environmental group.

Activists arrested

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Animal research supporters marked the 35th anniversary of the Salk polio vaccine Tuesday by wheeling an iron lung to a rally by opponents of animal experimentation.

The iron lung was once used to treat patients of the disease, which was finally conquered by a vaccine developed from animal research.

The machine stood in the midst of an angry confrontation at the University of California-Berkeley, where hundreds of sign-wielding scientists and students on both sides of the issue clashed.

At least 28 protesters were arrested.

House rights law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday voted to correct mistakes in the new federal ethics law, including one that would have allowed officials to avoid disclosing information on last year's finances.

The new legislation, passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate, takes 38 pages to correct the drafters' mistakes.

Christa McAuliffe Grant winner Ann Murphey, a science teacher at San Jacinto Junior High School, holds class mascot Fred the Ferret. Ms. Murphey will receive more than $29,000 from the federal government to buy computers and upgrade her classroom "zoo."

Ann Murphey's classroom is alive with critters — from fish to ferrets.

She said the menagerie, which includes shrimp, a sea anemone, an angora rabbit, flying squirrels and water snakes, exists for a purpose.

"I've found that when I pull these animals in, the kids even sneak upstairs in the morning (to play with them)," said Ms. Murphey, who heads the science department at San Jacinto Junior High School. "If kids have something concrete and tangible, they tend to do a little better."

The Department of Education apparently agrees with this theory. It recently awarded Ms. Murphey a $29,335 Christa McAuliffe Grant

Firm picked to design plan for area's water service

■ County will be applying for state funds for windowpane services.

By Brenda Masengill
Staff Writer

There appears to be light at the end of the tunnel, or in this case, at the end of Midland County's windowpane project.

County commissioners this week authorized the Midland engineering firm of Parkhill Smith & Cooper to proceed with design plans to bring water service to county residents living in an area roughly bordered by Midland Freshman High School and Interstate 20.

The county next will apply for funds to install sewer service in the area, which is called a windowpane because of its enclosure by city boundaries.

The water project will be funded by a $202,584 state grant. The county must apply by July for state monies to complete the sewer portion of the project.

Water service has already been provided another windowpane area — known as Windowpane I — also located in south central Midland. In the meantime, sewer hookups in Windowpane I should be on line in the next 30 to 45 days, Parkhill Smith & Cooper engineer Gary Davis told commissioners Monday.

In 1986, the county obtained a $233,200 state grant to fund Windowpane I's water project. In 1987, the board received a $199,880 state grant for the sewer portion, according to Barbara Ellis of Lubbock, Parkhill Smith & Cooper's grants coordinator.

Once water and sewer projects in both Windowpane I and II are completed, the county can then "go into the subdivision and patch and seal the roads," Commissioner Durward Wright said.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia, whose Precinct 3 contains the windowpane areas, said installation of the utilities as well as street improvements is a prerequisite for eventual annexation of the areas by the city.

Mrs. Valencia credited Wright for spearheading the windowpane project, "even though it's not his district."

Mrs. Valencia said she "inheirted this thing when I was elected last year," and has worked closely with Wright to obtain the necessary funding.

Both commissioners are expected to appear before funding officials in the next several weeks to plead the county's case for money to complete the sewer project in Windowpane II.

The areas became the focus of attention after the county received reports of water contamination, open cesspools and "children playing in what could be raw sewage," Wright said. "There were even rumors of hepatitis" outbreaks in the neighborhoods, he said. "It had turned into a pretty shoddy area."

Mrs. Valencia noted that by not being in the city limits, the windowpanes also are without police protection, leaving the areas open to drug dealers and other criminals.

Midland has a history of success with windowpane projects, Wright said. In 1981, the county received $1.6 million for a three-year comprehensive program in a windowpane located west of Rankin Highway.

Housing was rehabilitated, utilities installed, streets paved and dilapidated structures were demolished as part of the federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) grant.

"It was a total neighborhood program," according to Ms. Ellis. Additionally, the Taylor Park Child Care Center was established.

The project, said Mrs. Valencia, brought new life to the area that is still flourishing today. Wright said the area "was made a viable part of the community."

Wright said he feels "exceptionally good" about the latest windowpane effort. "It's a worthy project for the entire community," he said, despite "maybe a handful" who are against the improvements.

The level of funding has been cut in recent years, as well as the method of financing, forcing the county to "go to a step level" in completing the latest windowpane projects, Wright said.

In 1981, the county received $1.6 million "basically in one lump sum" for a three year project, Wright noted. Not only are there

Group lists vital economic issues

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland economy is beginning to level off in wake of the bust of the oil boom.

Agriculture continues to get underplayed and underrated even though it "built the nation."

Water quality and quantity are vital issues in town and country.

Drugs and drop-outs are continuing problems of youth.

And the 1990s is the decade of "the environment."

Those were among "critical issues" highlighted Tuesday night by a citizens group assembled by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to identify those issues in Midland County.

"We're not in a boom, but we're not in a bust any longer," Midland banker Robert Southerland said in gauging Midland's 1990 economy.

The boom started in 1979, was evidenced in rising oil prices, rampant building, and frenzied optimism and investing. The boom peaked in 1981. Oil prices dropped to bust level.

"We've scaled down and now we've leveled off," said Southerland. "The economics of this community is not as bad as it appears" by some standards. But that "doesn't mean" Midland readily is attracting new industry or a homeowner can "sell your house for what it was worth in 1982."

In the 1990s, the environment is "finally getting the attention it deserves," said Melony Sikes, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Midland County.

Ms. Sikes cited the urgency for protecting the underground water table from pollution, the need to recycle products, including paper and oil, and the necessity to conserve resources and to cut down on trash and garbage.

"Besides being unsightly, dumping is dangerous."

Agriculture was the "number one business that built the nation," said Midland cotton ginner

MISD teacher's aides could soon lead own classrooms

■ MISD plan should improve employee retention and boost the minority teaching population.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Jennifer Edwards dreams of becoming a teacher.

Ms. Edwards, a 30-year-old teacher's aide, is a year and a half away from earning her teaching certificate from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Meanwhile, she spends her days at the Midland Independent School District's Carver Cultural Center doing many of the same things teachers do.

"The teacher has more authority — she acts upon more initiative than I do," Ms. Edwards said. "But I get up, I teach and if a child is being distracting to others I can deal with that. I do a lot of what the teacher does, but I don't do lesson plans."

MISD administrators hope that aides like Ms. Edwards — with classroom experience and a desire to become full-fledged teachers — can help solve some of the district's recruiting problems.

Tom Holland, MISD executive director of human resource services, said the district is working on a plan to provide scholarships for aides who want to earn teaching certificates.

Holland said the plan, which has yet to gain school board approval, should improve employee retention and boost MISD's minority teaching population.

"It's for any person currently employed by the school district who is non-certified who is interested in (teaching)," Holland said. "These are people who are already residents of Midland — we're not likely to lose them.

"We have some minority aides who would make excellent teachers and of course that's part of it. It's an idea that other districts have kicked around before."

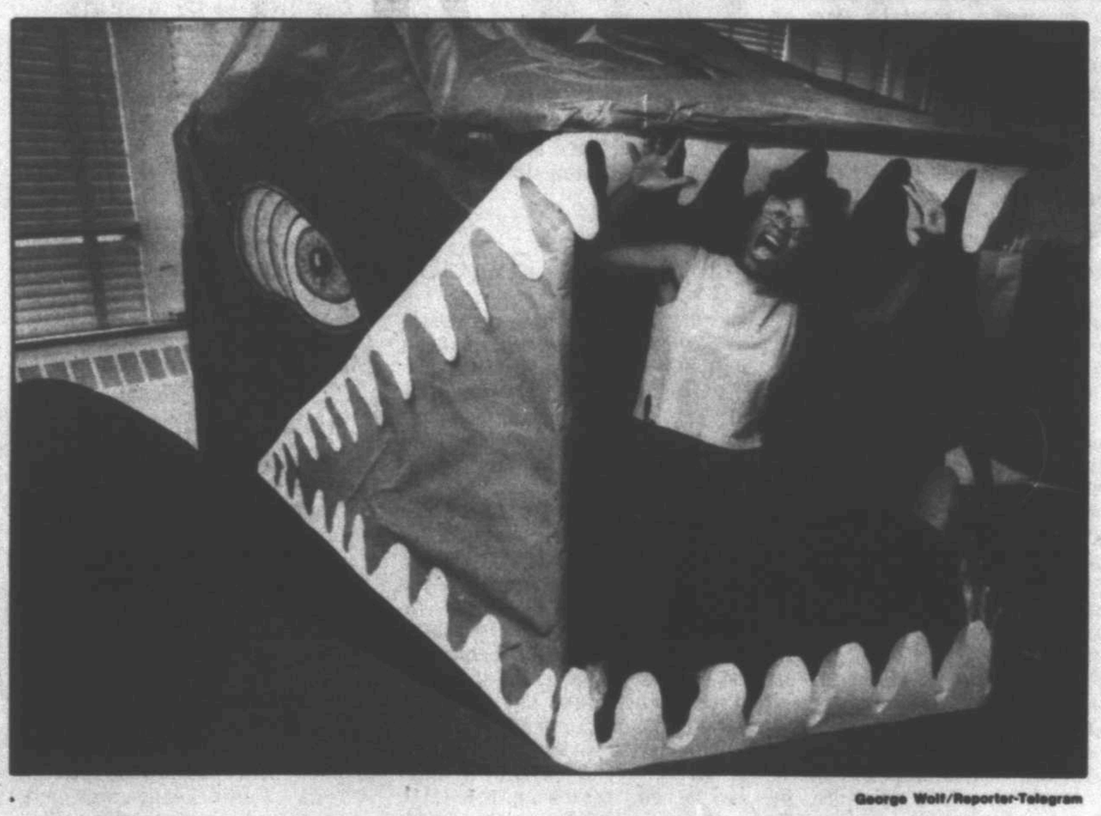

Holland would not speculate on the cost of the program, but he said MISD is seeking foundation grants to help pay for it.

He said aides could use the scholarships to attend Midland College and the UTPB while continuing to work in MISD.

MC reports that tuition and fees for 12 semester hours total $182. UTPB tuition for 12 hours, which is considered a full-time schedule, is $388.

Holland said he hoped that between 15 and 50 aides could be served by the program next year.

Wildcatters honor Arco executives

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

In terms of financial performance Arco ranks as a leader among major oil companies.

Last year, the Los Angeles-based company led all majors in return on stockholder equity with 30.1 percent. That was in a year that saw earnings soar 23 percent to a record $1.95 billion, and the value of a share of Arco stock increase 44.3 percent.

Members of Arco's top management team were in Midland Tuesday for a Wildcatter's Reception and in a roundtable interview revealed some of the corporate strategy that has permitted the firm to attain record performance during a period that some consider still depressed for the oil and gas industry.

Among those participating in the interview were Lod M. Cook, Arco chairman; Robert Wycoff, president and chief operating officer; James A. Middleton, president Arco Oil & Gas of Dallas and Ken Thompson, vice president of Arco's Central Division in Midland.

"We make money the old fashion way," said Cook, chairman and executive officer of Arco. "We earn it."

Cook was honored with 12 other top Arco executives by the Midland Wildcatters Committee, which regularly hosts management of top U.S. oil companies.

Said Cook: "It is not enough to be in the oil business just to produce for production's sake or have

Soil survey of old base shows low amount of contamination

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' probes into contaminations at the old Webb Air Force Base site here indicate "low potential for adverse health and environment impacts."

Results of the investigations and ways to clean up polluted soil at the former base will be discussed in a 7 p.m. hearing today in the Big Spring Municipal Auditorium.

"This meeting is being held to explain the results of the recent remedial investigation of hazardous and toxic waste and to solicit comments and recommendations from the public regarding remediation alternatives identified in the Feasibility Study phase for cleaning up soil contamination," according to Lt. Col. Frederick D. Reynolds, deputy district engineer.

Study of the 2,000-acre Webb site, which is now Big Spring Airport and Industrial Park, is part of the Defense Environment Restoration Program for active and formerly used Department of Defense properties.

The Corps of Engineers' field investigations at the former Air Force base included soil-gas survey, soil sampling, and a geophysical survey in focusing on four areas: a waste lagoon, a fire-training area, an oxidation pond, and a fuel-storage area.

Those investigations indicated "soil contamination with chlordane and trace amounts of PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyl) and metals" in the waste lagoon and "soil contamination with fuel constituents" in the fuel-storage area.

Webb Air Force Base was among United States military installations closed in the mid- and late 1970s in a Pentagon reduction of defense spending.

It was acquired by city of Big Spring in 1978 and converted to a light industrial park and airport, which is used by private and commercial aircraft. The city of Big Spring leases former base buildings to 37 businesses and organizations.

Portions of the old base are used as a Federal Prison Camp and as the campus for the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

During World War II, the base was used as a bombardier training air field. Afterward, from 1951 to 1978, the base was used for intermediate and advanced jet-flight training.

ARCO: Executives explain firm's record performance

volume for volume's sake. And it's not enough just to make money, you need to make money in terms of investment in assets. We like to make 10 to 12 percent a year."

Last year the company topped the charts with a record 15 percent return on assets.

Cook said the Arco formula for getting a good return on their money was to maintain high grade assets, replace reserves with a low finding cost and keep operating costs low.

Thompson, vice president of Arco's Central District in Midland said operating or lifting costs in his district were only $3 per barrel, and total production costs including write-offs and finding costs were $8 per barrel.

"Companywide, our producing costs are down to $10.60 per barrel," said Arco Oil & Gas president Middleton. "Five years ago they were $17."

Middleton said controlling costs and maintaining high-grade assets were the main factors in reducing cost.

Thompson said, "We continually upgrade our assets by divesting ourselves from marginal properties with high operating costs and acquiring properties that meet our operating criteria.

"We don't want to give away any secrets," said Arco president Wycoff. "But we have learned that you can control fixed costs."

One major cost that the company has been able to keep low is finding cost, which is about $4.50 per barrel.

"We produce about 365 million barrels of oil a year, and that means that every day we have to go out and replace one million barrels of oil to keep from going out of business," said Wycoff.

To make sure the company continues to replace reserves it plans to expand overseas operations. Among the nations targeted for exploration are West Africa, New Zealand, Indonesia, Egypt and the North Sea.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

"About 10 percent of our reserves now come from overseas," said Cook. "We would like to increase that to about 30 percent."

As for the future of the industry, Cook sees reformulated gasoline playing a major role in bridging to a cleaner fuel. "This is something we can do now to clean up the air. We don't have to wait for the development of an infrastructure." he explained. He thinks compressed natural gas (CNG) will play a role mainly in fleet applications.

The company is not as bullish on oil prices or gas prices as other oil companies.

"We see gas prices tracking oil prices, but not at a premium price, and gas prices will continue to be highly seasonal. Right now, we are predicating all our economics on $18 oil. We think the Saudis and OPEC will continue to pump oil into the market and keep prices down. Some have predicted $30 oil prices by the middle of the decade, but we see something closer to $25 oil," said Cook.

GRANT: Teacher also plans on computers

(From 1B)

to expand San Jacinto's "zoo."

The 3-year-old grant program is named in honor of teacher Christa McAuliffe, who died in the 1986 Challenger space shuttle explosion.

The total number of Texas teachers awarded the grant this year were not available.

However, Midland Independent School District spokesman Ted Miller said only three Texas teachers received the award last year — including MISD science teacher Jan Fisher.

"For a school district to get a Christa McAuliffe scholarship two years in a row is virtually unheard of," Miller said.

In addition, Trinity School teacher Jack Hickman received a McAuliffe Grant in 1987.

Ms. Murphey, who has degrees in biology and geology, said she will use grant money to expand her animal collection and improve the classroom "habitat." Part of the money will buy five classroom computers, she added.

She said she hoped things bought with the grant will encourage student interest in science.

"We've just got to catch their imagination," she said. "It's very difficult to compete with the television set. I can't be Carol Burnett every week."

The grant requires Ms. Murphey to report to the Education Department how she spends the money. She must also devise lesson plans which relate to equipment bought with grant money.

Ms. Murphey, a 17-year veteran of teaching, said science education in the United States has been neglected in recent years.

"After the Russians beat us up in space (with Sputnik), money was dumped into science," she said. "Through the years, more and more money has been pulled out of it. We don't have the stuff to work with any more. Hopefully through grants ... we will get more money in and upgrade what we're trying to do."

Ms. Murphey's pupils, meanwhile, agreed that their teacher's class is an interesting and enjoyable one.

"I love it," said Carrie McKague, a 13-year-old eighth-grader. "It's one of my most relaxed classes. You learn, but it's in a relaxed way. The animals are fun to play with and you learn about them — it breaks the sitting-down-at-your-desk routine."

TEACH: Plan would help aides

(From 1B)

"It would be on an application and funds-available type basis," Holland said. "It depends on the amount of funds, but I would anticipate it being somewhat competitive. I think there are a lot of them out there who were expressing interest in becoming a full-time teacher."

Holland said he thought the program would be effective, but results might not be immediately evident.

"This is one of those plans where the payoff doesn't come until they finish their college work," Holland said.

He said scholarship recipients would be required to work in MISD for three years after certification. Participants who quit the program would be required to repay the district, he said.

MISD school board president James Fuller said he expects trustees to support the scholarship plan.

"It's a very positive plan as far as I'm concerned," Fuller said. "I think it's a very good opportunity to capitalize on individuals who are talented ... and have the desire to become professionally involved with the edicational process."

Patricia Maurer, Carver Cultural Center principal, said aides are uniquely qualified to become teachers because of their classroom experience.

"As we function (at Carver), we don't distinguish between aides and teachers," she said. "The instructional aides are one of the team."

The likeness between teachers and aides ends at their respective paychecks, however. Entry-level aides, who must have a high school diploma, earn $8,272 a year.

The starting salary for teachers in MISD, recently upped by trustees to boost recruiting, is $21,000.

Carver aide Ema Hernandez said the salary difference alone would be incentive enough for her to apply to the scholarship program.

"I like their salary a lot better than mine," said Ms. Hernandez, an aide for 14 years. "I'm not working toward certification right now, but I'm planning on it. And that (scholarship) would sure help."

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Lawmen assume girl strangled

Staff Report

An Ector County Sheriff's Department homicide investigation is proceeding under the assumptions that the body of a girl found Saturday night is that of Gloria Castillo, and that she was strangled with the rope found around her neck, said Capt. Gene Kloss.

The body of the 8-year-old girl, who had been missing from her West Odessa home since April 14, was discovered by four women. According to Kloss, the women told sheriff officials that "woman's intuition" led them to look in the area where the body was found. The women are said to have been searching for Castillo since her disappearance.

Castillo's badly decomposed body was found about 8:15 p.m. Saturday in a field near Damascus Drive and 16th Street, about five miles west of her home.

The body's identity was determined by the clothes Castillo was wearing at the time of her disappearance, but could not be confirmed through an autopsy.

The autopsy determined strangulation as the cause of death, but was unable to identify a rope as the weapon used. However, investigators are assuming the rope found with the body was used.

Candidate forum set

Staff Report

ODESSA — KOCV-TV has invited all Ector and Midland county candidates in contested races in the May 5 local elections to present their platforms and field call-in questions during two live broadcast political forums, according to program director Nan Martin.

Tonight, representatives from the League of Women Voters will moderate the first hour, from 8 to 9 p.m., with Midland candidates. Odessa's Junior League will moderate from 9 to 10 p.m. Then viewer will have a chance to call in questions to the candidates.

From 8 to 9:30 p.m. May 1, candidates for the Medical Center Hospital Board of Directors in Ector County have been invited to discuss the proposed 1 percent sales tax and other problems faced by the Odessa hospital. Viewers again will have the opportunity to direct questions to the candidates.

KOCV, the local Public Broadcasting System station, is seen on channel 36 over-the-air and on cable channel 13 in Midland and Odessa.

2 people hurt in wreck

Staff Report

Two people were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital late Tuesday after they were involved in a three-vehicle accident, Midland police said.

A man and a woman, whose names were being withheld until the next of kin could be notified, appeared to have neck and back injuries, police said.

The couple was traveling northbound on North I Street and turning left onto Wadley Avenue about 9 p.m. when the Honda Civic they were riding in collided with a Nissan pickup truck, police said.

The Honda Civic slid across Wadley and struck a Mazda MX-6, which was turning right from the Midland College campus onto Wadley, officials said. The Mazda driver was traveling alone.

The pickup truck driver, who was alone and traveling eastbound on Wadley, apparently ran a red light, police said.

No one else was injured in the mishap, authorities said. Names of the drivers of the Mazda and pickup truck were not immediately available.

Assistant DA in accident

LUBBOCK (AP) — Investigators today waited for medical reports to determine whether a Lubbock assistant district attorney was driving under the influence of alcohol when he struck and fatally injured a 40-year-old woman.

John S. Young, assistant criminal district attorney, was driving a 1973 Mercedes-Benz 450 SE at a high rate of speed when the car struck Darlene May Hall of Lubbock shortly before 10 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Lubbock police officer Mike Smith said Young passed a field sobriety test immediately following the accident, but noted Young smelled of alcohol.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, who pronounced Ms. Hall dead at the scene, told The Lubbock Avalanche Journal on Monday that he had smelled alcohol on the victim's body Saturday night.

Bill Dodd, Ms. Hall's boyfriend, said she had one drink in the two hours preceding the accident.

Lawyer need not be present for DWI tests

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that drunken driving suspects do not have the right to legal counsel before undergoing police sobriety tests.

In the decision Monday, the court let stand a ruling by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Without comment, the justices declined to review an appeal by Dennis Michael McCambridge, who pleaded guilty in Houston in 1984 to a misdemeanor charge of driving while intoxicated.

McCambridge was stopped by two Houston police officers while driving home the night of May 21, 1984.

He began requesting an attorney while being placed in the officers' patrol car and made the request 18 times.

His due process complaint arises from the allegation that he was not allowed to consult an attorney before police persuaded him to take a breath-alcohol test that resulted in the filing of DWI charges.

McCambridge pleaded guilty after a county court-at-law judge refused to suppress the results of the breath test and a video recording of the police administered test.

Panel OKs $555 million in school aid

STATE

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A joint legislative conference committee Tuesday set the stage for a confrontation with the governor by approving school reforms that include $555 million in new state aid to local districts.

House and Senate leaders were predicting even more members will endorse the committee's compromise than voted for original education bills approved by both chambers earlier this session.

The compromise measure would send an additional $3.2 million in state aid to the Midland Independent School District next school year and $14.8 million in the plan's fifth year of implementation.

The Greenwood ISD would see an additional $350,004 in aid next school year and $1.3 million after five years.

Of other nearby school districts, Ector ISD would receive an additional $5.1 million in aid next school year and $23.4 million after five years.

Upton County schools would lose no aid next school year, but by the plan's fifth year, the McCamey district would lose $359,430 in state aid and the Rankin district would lose $150,156.

Because the compromise's first-year spending level is less than half the $1.2 billion the Senate originally endorsed, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and committee co-chairman, hoped previously critical senators would find it more attractive.

Twenty-three of 31 senators supported the original, $1.2 billion school finance legislation.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the Senate likely will consider the bill Thursday and then immediately consider a half-cent sales tax hike and $117 million in budget cuts, both of which are needed to pay for the reforms.

The House, which also likely will take up the compromise on Thursday, already has approved the cuts and the tax increase, which is expected to pump an additional $448 million into the state budget.

House conference committee co-chairman Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, held out hope of picking up additional votes over the 106 members who endorsed the original House reform bill.

But the numbers are not indications of the necessary strength to override a veto promised by Gov. Bill Clements.

House members approved the tax increase on a narrower 82-63 margin. An override would need the votes of 100 of the 150 House members and 21 of the 31 senators.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and chairman of the House Republican Caucus, said "there is not even a minute chance" Clements would fail to follow through on his promise.

Craddick said the 60-member House Republican Caucus will stand firm in support of the governor. "It will be a very strong vote," he said.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi and chairman of the House Hispanic Caucus, said members of that organization will support the compromise measure, although reluctantly.

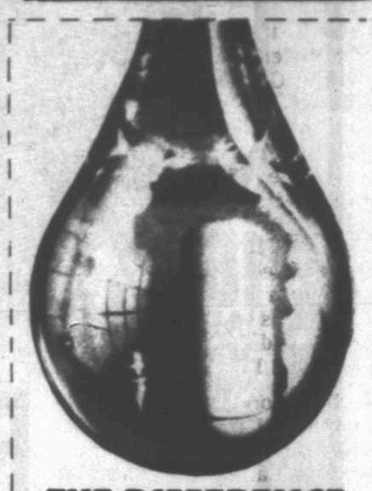

Minority House members who felt House efforts were insufficient were one faction that worked to defeat the chamber's first consideration of school finance reform during a session that ended March 28.

Cavazos said Hispanic members want to make sure each legislative step is documented fully so as to provide a record for the Texas Supreme Court, which has ruled the state's school finance system illegal.

The court set a May 1 deadline for the lawmakers to approve a new school finance system. Travis County District Judge Scott McCown, who justices asked to oversee state compliance with their decision, has scheduled a hearing on the matter for the same day as the deadline.

Another Hispanic member, Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi and a conference committee member, said representatives should vote for the bill because it "gets us out of the courthouse."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A project only recently begun will bring great financial success. A new love relationship makes life seem wonderful again. Trust your first impressions when choosing a partner in September. An autumn trip may not seem as important as it really will be. Refuse to be sidetracked from your main objective at work. Let a young person know that you are in his corner. Your response to a special plea tells others a lot about your values.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Ella Fitzgerald, Justice William Brennan, journalist Edward R. Murrow, actor Al Pacino.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will gain nothing by cutting corners in business. Think about joining a gym or engaging the services of a health professional. You meet a prospective romantic partner in a most likely place.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A romantic relationship could come under close scrutiny by your friends or relatives. Tell them to back off. Work goes well if you focus on one project at a time. Make essential home repairs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An exciting new business cycle begins today. Certain claims and stories seem farfetched. Conduct your own investigation. Your lighthearted wit cheers others. Be a good guest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those who have a special talent should develop it. Today's ideas can become tomorrow's realities. A relationship will take a fascinating new direction. Passions run high in financial matters. Be calm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A unique business experience will open your eyes. Use your insights wisely and tie up loose ends. Forge an alliance with an understanding member of the opposite sex. Celebrate quietly tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A strong-willed person attempts to influence you; resist if certain that you are in the right. Younger family members should take on new responsibilities. Resume a promising romantic relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Something you discover today will stand you in good stead when negotiating an agreement in the near future. Do your homework diligently. Seize a golden opportunity to cement a special attachment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tuck away well-intentioned advice offered by a sibling for future consideration. A blind date or lucky introduction could lead to a lasting romance. Do not be afraid to show your sentimental side.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You tend to be lax about shepherding pet projects to completion. Curb an inclination to splurge on luxuries. A promise must be kept even if there is a steep price to pay.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It might be better to rely on public transportation than to drive your own car today. Both higher-ups and subordinates are willing to cover up a goof. Apologize for any inconvenience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A legal matter may be settled out of court in your favor. Job pressures ease when you get better organized. Economize in small and big ways if you want to take that dream vacation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be wary when a romantic partner advises you on your money. Do not neglect minor health concerns. Seniors can reap rich personal rewards from working on community projects.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will amaze you with their determination and perseverance. They bounce back quickly from disappointments, eager to try again. Openly affectionate and very generous, these Taureans choose their friends carefully — keeping many of them for life.

The majority of tournament players have come to accept that computer deals are more truly random than hands dealt at the table. But once in a while a hand comes along, like this one from the Grand National Pair Championship at the recent Spring North American Championships in Fort Worth, Texas, that makes one wonder.

South's opening bid, even at this vulnerability, was rather light. West made a normal preempt and North can hardly be faulted for competing with five clubs, although a double would have netted 500 points—800 if declarer misguessed in diamonds. East, looking at a 7-6 distribution and a known misfit, could only pass and hope for the best.

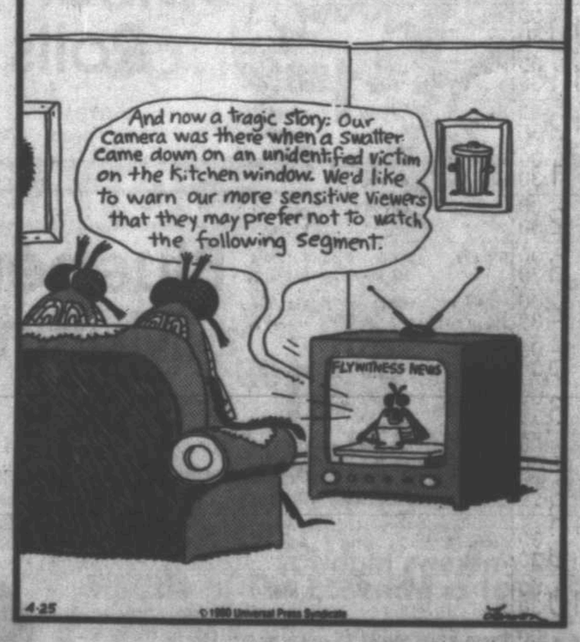

East-West were leading ace from ace-king, so declarer was somewhat surprised to see East discard a spade on the first trick. After taking the ace, declarer drew trumps in two rounds and then led the jack of spades, pinning West's ten. East rose with the ace and returned a spade. Declarer finessed the nine of spades and discarded the table's heart loser on the king. South conceded a diamond trick, but made his contract. Had West led his singleton spade, the contract could have been defeated.

At another table, East became declarer at four spades. The opening club lead was ruffed, and East returned a low diamond. For reasons known only to himself, South felt compelled to rise with the queen of diamonds and shift to a spade, to prevent declarer from getting diamond ruffs on the board.

Declarer won the queen and cashed the ace, then led the king of diamonds to force out the ace. As a result, declarer lost only two diamond tricks and a trump, to score game in the other direction.

Liz Taylor's spirits better

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Pneumonia-stricken Elizabeth Taylor's spirits were good despite an uncomfortable ventilator that helped her breathe after surgery to determine the cause of her illness, her doctor said Tuesday.

Taylor

Dr. Michael Roth, a longtime friend and Miss Taylor's physician for 10 years, said the 58-year-old actress was "certainly stable for the moment with the very slightest bit of improvement."

"It started with viral pneumonia," Roth said in a telephone interview after seeing Miss Taylor in the intensive care unit at St. Johns Hospital and Health Center. In addition to the ventilator, intravenous lines were connected to the actress.

"We are trying to prevent infection so we are using IV drugs," Roth said. "Her spirits are good and she's feeling a little bit better."

The Academy Award-winning actress has deteriorated markedly since what was initially described as a sinus infection.

Miss Taylor's three doctors and her publicist Chen Sam, who flew in from New York on Tuesday, scheduled a Wednesday afternoon news conference to discuss the case.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Helmsley, who avoided prosecution on federal tax charges because he was found mentally incompetent, must submit to a new test before a decision on similar state charges is made.

Gerald B. Lefcourt, attorney for the 81-year-old real estate magnate, argued Monday in state court that there was "no point" to a new exam, and that the stress from it could endanger the life of his client.

But Justice John A.K. Bradley ordered him to make an appointment immediately for an examination after prosecutors said that Helmsley and his wife, Leona, recently had flown to Florida for a vacation.

The exam was scheduled tentatively for May 9 and results are to be submitted to the court May 23, said Leslie Gersing, a spokeswoman for the state attorney general's office.

The Helmsleys face state charges that they falsified $3 million worth of business and tax records from 1982 to 1986.

Mrs. Helmsley, 69, was convicted last year of federal income tax fraud and sentenced to four years in prison, but is free on bond pending appeal.

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Violinist Itzhak Perlman is giving advice on restoration of a 64-year-old theater and concert hall.

Perlman, who was stricken with polio at age 4 and wears leg braces, is suggesting ways to make the theater accessible to disabled people.

Problems at the Garde Arts Center were apparent to Perlman when he performed a benefit concert there with the Eastern Connecticut Symphony in October.

"It's no secret that the Garde, built in 1926, has some problems relating to access," restoration committee Chairman Carl Stoner said Monday.

Committee members met recently at Perlman's New York City apartment to go over their master plan.

"He was so anxious to be a part of it, as though he was a member of our committee," Stoner said.

Committee member Steve Sigel said Perlman told group he is always upset to see how theaters build a special "Perlman ramp" to accommodate him and then remove it the next day.

"He said they miss the point," Sigel said. "The audience needs to use this as much as the performer."

Davis

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Sammy Davis Jr., recuperating at home from chemotherapy, got a boost from the birth of his second grandchild and words of encouragement from Frank Sinatra.

"He told Sammy he wishes he was on the road with him again," said Susan Reynolds, spokeswoman for the two entertainers. Asked how Davis was doing, she said only, "He's resting."

Sinatra and his wife, Barbara, visited Davis on Monday.

Davis' grandchild Sam Michael Garner was born Friday. Davis' daughter, Tracy Garner, delivered the 7-pound, 1-ounce boy at a Los Angeles hospital, Ms. Reynolds said.

Davis, 64, was diagnosed with throat cancer in September. He underwent radiation treatment, but the cancer recurred and he turned to chemotherapy, which he completed March 13.

Minister found safe in Washington

AUSTIN (AP) — A Unitarian minister who disappeared nearly three months ago has been located in Washington state, safe but with no memory of what happened to him before last week, police said Tuesday.

Gail Phillips, spokeswoman for the Austin Police Department, said Fort Lauderdale, Fla., police notified the department Tuesday that the Rev. David Scheyer, 61, had been located.

Scheyer's pickup truck had been found by police in a Fort Lauderdale parking lot one week after he was reported missing on Feb. 2, with the doors locked, the keys in it and the engine running.

Ms. Phillips said Scheyer had contacted his uncle Carl Scheyer, who lives in Puyallup, Wash., by telephone on Monday.

"Apparently what happened was, David Scheyer sometime last week was in Phoenix, Ariz. He heard someone mention the name of the city Puyallup. Things started clicking for him, and it occurred to him that he was raised there," Ms. Phillips said.

She said that Scheyer went to Puyallup and checked a phone book, where he found Carl Scheyer's name, and called him to see if the two were related.

Ms. Phillips said authorities do not yet know how Scheyer traveled from Phoenix to Puyallup.

Carl Scheyer then notified David's brother Warner, who lives in Redmond, Wash. "At that point they got him to Redmond, where he is staying," she said.

Ms. Phillips said Scheyer apparently has no idea what has happened to him since he disappeared from his Austin home.

"David has no recollection of where he's been or what he's been doing up until last week," she said.

Ms. Phillips said that Scheyer's wife Fia, who now lives in Boston, Mass., was planning to fly to Redmond Tuesday evening.

Parishioners at Austin's First Unitarian Church had suspected foul play. Scheyer, who worked as an interim pastor and had been with the Austin church since mid-August, had failed to show up for a Saturday morning trip to the Gulf of Mexico coast to look at whooping cranes.

The next Sunday morning, 200 congregation members were left sitting in the church with no minister.

Ms. Phillips said Scheyer "looks fine physically. They said he was in excellent physical condition, he was clean-shaven, well-dressed," she said, adding that the man's family plans to have him undergo medical evaluation to try to determine what happened.

"I get the feeling that they're not pushing hard for details because they don't know what they're dealing with, and they don't want to aggravate any condition if that's what they're dealing with," she said.

Judge denies mistrial in ex-lawmen's case

TYLER (AP) — A state district judge Tuesday denied a mistrial in the murder trial of three white former lawmen accused of beating a black jail prisoner to death.

Defense attorneys asked for the mistrial after racial epithets were found painted on the wall of a men's restroom in the Smith County Courthouse Monday.

State District Judge Joe Tunnell denied the motion after questioning jurors, including three male jurors, who said they had not seen the graffiti.

Former Hemphill Police Chief Thomas Ladner and former Sabine County sheriff's deputies James "Bo" Hyden and Billy Ray Horton are charged with murder in the beating death of Loyal Garner Jr., a Louisiana man who died of severe head injuries he suffered in the Sabine County Jail on Christmas Day 1987.

The three were acquitted by a Hemphill jury in July 1988 of violating Garner's civil rights.

Garner was arrested for driving while intoxicated. He was placed in a detoxification cell with his friends, Johnnie and Alton Maxie. Prosecutors contend he was beaten after banging on his cell door and demanding to make a phone call.

On Tuesday, an inmate who was in the cell next to the detoxification cell that night said he heard "banging on the door" of the cell and a man demanding to make a phone call. The inmate, Welton Sangwin of Houston, could not see the people involved.

"I heard whop, whop, whop, and I heard some scuffling around," he said.

In testimony Monday, the Maxies told jurors that Garner was hit several times after Garner and the Maxies rattled the door of their cell.

Richards says she won't discuss Williams' prostitutes remark

Associated Press

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Ann Richards said Tuesday she won't discuss opponent Clayton Williams' admission of patronizing prostitutes in his youth and declared questions about such private matters irrelevant to the campaign.

"I am to the very best of my ability going to have absolutely no comment," Ms. Richards said in her first public appearance since Republican Williams' remarks were published Sunday in The Houston Post.

Meanwhile, Williams' press secretary, Bill Kenyon, accused the Richards campaign of helping spread rumors linking Williams to the use of prostitutes. Her aides denied the charge.

Ms. Richards won the Democratic nomination after a mudslinging runoff against Attorney General Jim Mattox, who alleged that she had used illegal drugs as recently as 10 years ago.

Ms. Richards refused to answer yes or no when asked about illegal drug use, saying that as a recovering alcoholic she feared such a discussion might keep others from seeking treatment. She in turn accused Mattox and former Gov. Mark White of profiting from public service.

Interviewed Tuesday, Ms. Richards chastised news reporting on the private lives of politicians.

"The whole tenor of this campaign, both in the primary and the runoff, and what now is the trend in the reporting, is irrelevant," she said.

"I hope very much that we start talking about education, about ... the problems of criminal justice, the victims of crime and what we're going to do about law enforcement, what we're going to do about old people and health care. That's what being governor of Texas is about," she said.

Williams' spokesman, Kenyon, said the Democrat's credibility should be questioned.

"They have been fanning the latest flames. Her campaign has been spreading rumors about Clayton, and her staff felt compelled to try to make political hay out of these recent stories," Kenyon said.

Cache of cashew recipes offered

By Desiree Vivea
Copley News Service

Native to Brazil, the lush, spreading cashew tree flourishes in the intense heat of the tropics. Portuguese explorers and missionaries in the 17th century brought the tree to Africa and India, and cashews now are grown in tropical regions all over the world. Today, leading exporters are Brazil and India.

Besides the well-known nut, the tree produces a tart but edible cashew "apple," often fermented to make wines and liquors. The cashew nut is the seed of the apple — and, surprisingly, it grows outside, not inside, the fruit. Hanging from the bottom of the apple, the cashew is encased in a smooth, thin, caustic covering which can burn the lips and mouth — so you will always find cashews shelled.

The wrinkled, crescent-shape nut is softly crisp and buttery. Rich in flavor, cashews also are rich in fat: one ounce (18 medium cashews) totals a hefty 160 calories. Because they're so high in fat content, cashews can easily go rancid if left out for a long period of time. To maintain freshness and quality, store in an airtight container in your freezer. They'll stay fresh this way up to one year.

Cashews are available roasted or raw, whole or broken (the latter is cheaper and fine for baking or cooking). Cashew butter is expensive, but a wonderful change from peanut butter. Make your own by grinding one cup dry roasted cashews with four teaspoons peanut oil and one teaspoon honey in a food processor or blender.

Great as a snack, cashews usually are the first to disappear whenever there's a bowl of mixed nuts on the table. Aside from snacking, they're versatile for all kinds of recipes. Use in salads, curries, stir-fry, poultry stuffing, candy, cookies, rice or vegetable dishes. And try today's "cache" of cashew recipes for the microwave. If you're nuts about cashews, these are sure to become favorites.

(Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.)

To toast raw cashews in your microwave, spread an even layer on a paper plate and microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) setting 3 to 4 minutes, stirring every minute to rearrange. Or toast with 1 tablespoon butter in a microwave-safe bowl for 3 to 4 minutes, stirring every minute, until toasted to desired degree. Toasting time will vary according to oven wattage and freshness of nuts.

CHICKEN WITH CASHEWS AND SNOW PEAS

1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon powdered ginger
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ cup soy sauce
2½ pounds skinless chicken breasts, cut into thin strips
2½ cups fresh snow peas, washed and trimmed
¾ cup toasted whole cashews

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Place cornstarch, ginger and garlic powder in 10-inch microwave browning skillet. Add soy sauce, stirring to make a smooth paste. Microwave 30 seconds; stir. Add chicken and microwave, covered, 4 to 5 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, to partially cook chicken.

Add snow peas, cover and microwave 5 to 9 minutes longer, stirring every 3 minutes, until chicken is cooked through and snow peas are tender. Stir in cashews, cover and let stand 3 minutes before serving. Serve with hot cooked rice.

CURRIED CASHEW CARROTS

1 pound fresh carrots
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
½ to 1 teaspoon curry powder
¼ cup toasted cashew pieces

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Scrape, trim and julienne slice carrots into thin matchsticks. Combine in 1-quart microwave-safe casserole with 2 tablespoons water. Microwave, covered, 5 to 8 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, until carrots are tender. Drain; add butter, curry powder and cashews. Stir gently to combine and let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving.

CASHEW TOFFEE

1 cup plus 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1¼ cups chopped toasted cashews
2 cups granulated sugar
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
2 tablespoons water
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 (12-ounce) package vanilla milk chips or semisweet chocolate chip

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Line 15x10½-inch jelly roll pan with foil. Grease foil with 1 tablespoon butter. Sprinkle 1 cup cashews in even layer in prepared pan. Set aside.

In 8-cup measure, microwave remaining 1 cup butter for 1½ to 2 minutes, or until melted. Stir in sugar, corn syrup, water and cream of tartar. Microwave 4 minutes. Mix well. Insert candy thermometer. Microwave mixture 5½ to 7½ minutes, or until thermometer registers 290 degrees (soft crack stage). Remove thermometer.

(If you don't have a microwave-safe candy thermometer, use cold water to judge doneness. Fill a cup with very cold water. Drop about ½ teaspoon of mixture into the cup, and let stand a few seconds. Then test syrup with your fingers. When candy has reached the soft crack stage, the syrup separates into hard but not brittle threads.)

Stir in vanilla. Pour slowly and evenly over nuts in pan. Immediately sprinkle with vanilla or chocolate chips. Let stand about 1 minute. Spread chips over toffee mixture. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup cashews. Cool completely. Break into pieces. Store in an airtight container.

Recipe not recommended for ovens with less than 600 watts power.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a cook in a small but very popular restaurant. At the end of our shifts, the waitresses count their tip money, and believe me, it's a healthy "take." Add this to their hourly wage, and they do very well.

Van Buren

I make an hourly wage that is slightly over the so-called poverty level, yet nobody seems to remember where all the excellent food came from. Good service is important, but if a reduction in help is necessary, the waitresses would be the first to go.

Abby, is there some way to enlighten the public to share their tip money with the cooks? — LIKES TO ROLL IN THE DOUGH

DEAR LIKES: I sent your letter to the owners of three of the most popular restaurants in the Los Angeles area. Their responses:

DEAR ABBY: Every restaurant — large, small, plain or fancy — pays its waiters, waitresses, bartenders, etc. the minimum wage required by law, simply because it is understood that this amount will be supplemented by tips.

I feel that because the dining public is aware that the price of the meal includes the cost of the labor to prepare it, there is no need to leave a gratuity for the kitchen.

Although I am sure the restaurant business was not uppermost in the mind of Harry Truman when he said it, it fits this situation best: "If you can't stand the heat — get out of the kitchen!" — BRUCE VANDERHOFF, LE RESTAURANT, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: As a general rule, cooks are paid far more than waiters and waitresses whose wages are supplemented by tips. Chefs who are talented and reliable are always in demand and are handsomely paid by the management. Sometimes, when the chef makes an extraordinary effort for a private party, the host will present him with a gratuity in appreciation.

I suggest that your correspondent who signs himself "Likes to Roll in the Dough" take steps to perfect his craft so that he can "rake in the chips." — JIMMY MURPHY, JIMMY'S IN BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR ABBY: With regard to the cook who felt that he was entitled to a portion of the waitresses' tip money: No way! I am reluctant to express my opinion on the subject of tipping because I am expert at putting my foot in my mouth.

If I had my druthers, tipping would be abolished altogether since it makes the recipients feel like second-class citizens.

In most European countries, the gratuity is included in the cost of the meal. This covers the preparation as well as the serving. I feel quite certain that if the choice were up to the diners, they, too, would prefer to do away with tipping.

Thank you for including me in your survey. I respectfully prefer to remain anonymous. — LONGTIME RESTAURATEUR

DEAR BRUCE, JIMMY AND LONGTIME RESTAURATEUR: If I had my druthers, I, too, would do away with tipping waiters and waitresses — unless, of course, a special service had been performed.

Each time I make this suggestion, a howl goes up from service people who say, "If we were paid a decent wage, we wouldn't have to depend on tips in order to survive!"

And the restaurateurs scream, "If we had to pay our waiters and waitresses what they were worth, we couldn't stay in business."

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "Fish and relatives begin to stink after three days"? — EXHAUSTED HOSTESS

DEAR EXHAUSTED: The quotation is, "Fish and VISITORS stink in three days." And it's from "Poor Richard's Almanac," written by Benjamin Franklin.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Beef-turkey blend takes top marks

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

In our search for a delicious, low-fat burger, this beef-turkey blend takes top marks. The meat is moist, tender and flavorful. Each patty has just 7 grams of fat.

JOHNNY APPLESEED BURGERS

1 egg white
¾ cup chunk-style applesauce
⅓ cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 tablespoon dried minced onion
¼ teaspoon salt
½ pound skinned, boneless turkey breast, ground
½ pound 90-percent lean ground beef
Non-stick spray coating
1 small head leaf lettuce
2 small apples

Preheat the broiler. Meanwhile, in a medium mixing bowl slightly beat egg white. Stir in ¼ cup of the applesauce, the bread crumbs, onion and salt. Add turkey and beef; mix well. Shape into five ½-inch-thick patties.

Spray cold rack of unheated broiler pan with non-stick coating. Place patties on rack. Broil 3 to 4 inches from the heat for 5 minutes. Turn over. Broil for 5 to 7 minutes more or until meat is no longer pink.

Meanwhile, in a small saucepan heat remaining applesauce. Cut leaf lettuce into thin strips. Slice apples into wedges. Serve each patty on a bed of lettuce along with warm applesauce and apple wedges. Makes 5 servings.

Hog breeders are wising up

By Kit Snedaker
Copley News Service

Hog breeders are getting smarter, and hogs are getting leaner.

Pork and ham no longer are best sellers either in supermarkets or restaurants, and the hog growers are hurting. Or they were before they wised up and started to feed and breed leaner animals.

Then, responding to our need to fix dinner in a hurry, the Pork Council came up with two new cuts that cook in minutes. The cuts are so special, the council trademarked their names. A premium pork chop is called America's Cut, and Chef's Prime is a quick-fix boneless roast.

The America's Cut is a 1½-inch-thick boneless center loin pork chop that was introduced a couple of years ago as America's Cut. Chef's Prime is a small 2- to 4-pound boneless rib-end pork roast.

PORK CHOPS WITH BALSAMIC VINEGAR

2 boneless center pork loin chops (called America's Cut, about 1½-inches thick)
1½ teaspoons lemon pepper
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
2 tablespoons low-sodium chicken broth
3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
2 teaspoons low-sodium margarine

Yields 2 servings. Each serving has about 244 calories, 82 milligrams cholesterol and 350 milligrams sodium.

Pat chops dry and rub with lemon pepper. Heat oil in heavy skillet over medium-high heat. Add chops and brown for about 8 minutes on one side. Turn and cook 7 minutes more. Remove chops from pan and keep warm.

Add broth and vinegar to skillet and cook, stirring until syrupy, 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in margarine, blend well and spoon sauce over chops. Serve at once.

ITALIAN PORK ROAST

2- to 4-pound boneless pork rib-end roast (called Chef's Prime)
3 tablespoons dill seed
1 tablespoon fennel seed
½ teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon lemon pepper
¼ teaspoon onion powder
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Yields 6 to 8 servings. Each serving has about 216 calories, 67 milligrams cholesterol and 110 milligrams sodium.

Combine seasonings and rub into roast. Place in shallow roasting pan and set on middle rack of oven preheated to 325 degrees. Roast 45 to 60 minutes until meat thermometer registers 155 degrees to 160 degrees. Let roast rest 5 to 10 minutes before carving.

HONEY-GARLIC PORK CHOPS

4 boneless center pork loin chops (called America's Cut, about 1½-inches thick)
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
2 cloves garlic, minced

Yields 4 servings. Each serving has about 235 calories, 83 milligrams cholesterol and 325 milligrams sodium.

Combine juice, honey, soy sauce, sherry and garlic. Pour mixture over chops in heavy plastic bag. Seal. Refrigerate for 4 to 24 hours.

Prepare covered grill with drip pan in middle and medium-hot coals on either side. Take chops from marinade, reserving marinade. Grill chops about 12 to 15 minutes, turning once, and baste occasionally with marinade.

Hi, I'm Charlton Heston. I want to talk to you about a problem. It's important to all of us and it's getting worse. America is the most energy-oriented society on the planet. Our national defense, our economic security, our ability to maintain leadership in the Free World, are all linked to our capacity to produce increasing and uninterrupted energy supplies.

But today, we can't do that. The things we should be doing right now to provide the energy we'll need five years and longer down the road just aren't getting done. We are becoming more and more dependent for essential supplies from foreign areas and sources that are neither secure nor dependable. We have to get busy if we hope to avoid the vulnerabilities that come with dependence on foreign energy.

Coffee cakes make great hostess, holiday gifts

By Charlyn Fargo
Copley News Service

When Kathy Wozniak goes to a party, the hostess usually gets treated with a creation from her kitchen. More often than not, the treat is a coffee cake.

Coffee cakes are like dumplings and warm chocolate chip cookies — foods that remind you of family and friends and Mom's homey cooking.

"Everyone likes something homemade," says Wozniak, who used to run her own business, Kitchen Creations. "Coffee cakes aren't real difficult to make. Especially those without yeast that are like a quick bread. But they look like something you spent hours on."

She makes a point of taking them to parties she attends and giving to her neighbors for holiday gifts. "It's a nice hostess gift."

If guests are coming to her home, she waits to make the coffee cake until last, so the kitchen smells good.

"Coffee cakes can be a real light touch, as opposed to heavy sweets or cakes," says Wozniak. "I especially like to include fruit in the recipe, and plenty of it."

She says most people like fruit and a crispy topping on their coffee cakes. A combination sugar-cinnamon topping is much more popular than the traditional powdered-sugar glaze. "And you don't overbake coffee cakes or they'll dry out, like anything else."

COFFEE CAKES have become more than a brunch offering, expanding to a dessert after the movies with a cup of aromatic coffee or, if made in a muffin tin, a quick snack for the office.

And while Wozniak prefers the quick-bread type to save time, there is nothing like a fresh-baked yeast coffee cake for gift giving.

Wozniak's recipes include family hand-me-downs as well as new ones she found in her cookbook collection.

"I have a real large collection of cookbooks. I like to spend the evening in front of the fireplace reading a cookbook."

Techniques were picked up from watching her mother. "My mother is a good baker. I was always right there alongside."

WOZNIAK'S BLUEBERRY COFFEE CAKE

½ cup margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup blueberries, drained
Topping:
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup chopped nuts

Cream together margarine and sugar. Add eggs. Stir in sour cream. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture. Add vanilla, then add blueberries.

Pour into two 8-inch round cake pans. Mix together topping ingredients and sprinkle over coffee cake batter.

Bake coffee cakes at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. The mixture also can be baked in a tube pan. If tube pan is used, increase baking time to 40 to 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

WOZNIAK'S ORANGE CHIFFON COFFEE CAKE

4 eggs, separated
1 cup sugar
½ cup margarine, softened
¼ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons lemon peel, grated
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ cup chopped almonds
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

In small bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Set aside.

In large bowl, cream 1 cup sugar and margarine. Add orange juice, lemon peel and egg yolks. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed.

Gradually blend in flour and baking powder. By hand, fold in beaten egg whites. Pour into ungreased 9-inch square pan.

CINNAMON TWIST COFFEE CAKE

5 to 6 cups unsifted flour
1¼ cups sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
1 cup milk
⅔ cup water
¼ cup margarine
2 eggs (room temperature)
¾ cup dark seedless raisins
Melted margarine
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
Oil

In large bowl, thoroughly mix 1¾ cup flour, ½ cup sugar, salt and undissolved yeast.

Combine milk, water and ¼ cup margarine in saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120 to 130 degrees). Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add eggs and ½ cup flour.

Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in raisins and enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Cover with plastic wrap, then a towel. Let rest 20 minutes.

Divide dough in half. Roll out each half into 12-inch square. Brush lightly with melted margarine.

Combine remaining ¾ cup sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle center third of each square with 3 tablespoons of sugar mixture. Fold third of dough over center third. Sprinkle with 3 tablespoons of sugar mixture. Fold remaining third of dough over the 2 layers. Cut into strips about 1 inch wide. Take hold of each end of strip and twist tightly in opposite directions. Seal ends firmly. Arrange in 2 greased 9-inch square pans.

When ready to bake, remove from refrigerator. Uncover dough carefully. Let stand at room temperature 10 minutes.

Bake at 375 degrees for about 30 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks.

GLORIA SCHWARTZ'S BROWN SUGAR GALETTE

1 envelope active dry yeast
5 tablespoons sugar
½ cup warm water, 105 to 115 degrees
2 cups or more bread flour
¼ cup unsalted butter, melted
1 large egg
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
½ teaspoon salt
Topping:
6 tablespoons chilled unsalted butter, cut in six pieces
½ cup walnuts
4½ teaspoons sugar
3 tablespoons brown sugar
2 teaspoons unbleached flour
¾ teaspoon cinnamon

In small bowl, sprinkle yeast and 2 tablespoons sugar over water. Stir to dissolve. Let stand.

In food processor, with metal or dough blade, add 2 cups flour, ¼ cup melted butter, egg, lemon peel, salt, remaining (3 tablespoons) sugar and yeast mixture. Process until dough clings to the side, about 10 seconds.

If dough sticks, add 1 teaspoon flour. If dough is too dry, add water, 1 teaspoon at a time.

Process until dough is smooth and elastic, about 40 seconds. Transfer to large plastic bag and seal, leaving space for dough to rise. Let rise 1½ hours.

For topping, insert metal blade and blend butter, walnuts, sugars, 2 teaspoons flour and cinnamon. Use on-off turns until nuts are chopped. Refrigerate topping until ready to use.

Position rack in oven so coffee cake will fit comfortably. Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Grease 14-inch pizza pan. Punch dough down and roll out to 14-inch circle. Transfer to pan and crimp edges. Sprinkle topping over. Bake 14 minutes.

This can be prepared a month ahead and frozen.

To reheat after frozen, place frozen coffee cake on baking sheet in cold oven. Set oven at 425 degrees and bake 13 minutes. Cut in wedges and serve warm.

Adapted from Bon Appetit.

STRAWBERRY COFFEE CAKE

1¾ cups all-purpose flour
1 package quick-acting dry yeast
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
½ cup water
2 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
½ cup strawberry, peach or apricot preserves
Topping:
½ cup sugar
½ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup flaked coconut
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

In large mixer bowl, combine 1 cup flour, yeast, ¼ cup sugar, nutmeg and salt. Mix well. In saucepan, heat milk, water and shortening until warm (shortening does not need to melt). Add to flour mixture. Add egg.

Blend at low speed until moistened. Beat 3 minutes at medium speed. By hand, gradually stir in remaining flour to make stiff batter. Spread in greased 9-inch square pan.

Prepare topping by combining all ingredients and mixing well.

Spread preserves over dough and sprinkle with topping. Cover. Let rise in warm place until light, about 45 minutes. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes until golden brown. Serve warm.

Cheesy pasta is pleasing

By Linda Susan Dudley
Copley News Service

In an era when even Grandma's cooking has become hot — and haute — cuisine, cooks are looking for new trends in old standbys.

And what's more standard than macaroni and cheese? If there are any people in the United States who haven't tried it, they surely can be counted on the fingers of both hands.

In that familiar Kraft blue box enclosing a cello envelope of "cheese powder," macaroni and cheese has put many a college student through four years of higher education without starving.

For decades, this one-dish meal has been the answer for hungry families when a "budget-stretcher" is all the household cook could afford to put on the table.

Extra bonuses: Macaroni and cheese, with its bland flavor and creamy texture, is a food you can get most kids to eat. It's also a dish many adults find comforting to the soul in rough times and warming to the stomach in rough weather.

Now that 80 percent of U.S. homes have microwave ovens, it's time for a few recipes that utilize that speedy appliance. The following two are designed for the microwave.

All cheeses are easily overcooked in the microwave, becoming rubbery and tough. Add cheese toppings toward the end of cooking time, and never microwave cheese longer than a recipe suggests. You will find that shredded (rather than cubed) cheddar will microwave more evenly.

Pasta cooks in the microwave in about the same amount of time as by conventional methods.

Of course, a pasta and cheese dish cooked by microwaves instead of baked in the oven won't have that inviting browned crust.

Cheesy pasta is a comfort food for children and adults.

MACARONI AND CHEESE

3 cups water
1 teaspoon butter or margarine
2 cups uncooked elbow macaroni
3 cups (12 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese
2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
⅓ cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste

In 3-quart casserole, combine water and 1 teaspoon butter. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave on HIGH for 5 to 6 minutes or until water boils. Stir in macaroni. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave on HIGH for 10 minutes, stirring after 5 minutes. Let stand, covered, for 5 minutes (macaroni should be al dente). If undercooked, microwave on HIGH for 3 to 4 more minutes. Drain liquid.

Toss cheese and flour together, then stir into macaroni along with 1 tablespoon butter, milk and salt. Season with pepper. Cover with wax paper. Microwave on HIGH for 3 to 6 minutes (stirring every 2 minutes) or until sauce thickens. Stir before serving.

From "Sunset Microwave Cookbook."

Sauces containing cheese should not be heated too long or at too high a temperature. Excessive cooking causes the casein in the cheese to coagulate and separate from the fat and water, producing a stringy mass with an oily slick.

Add grated cheese slowly to a sauce over low or moderate temperature; stir constantly to blend. Remove from heat or set pot over simmering water once cheese has melted.

What could be more '90s than a scaled-down, health-conscious macaroni and cheese that meets the nutrition guidelines of less than 30 percent of the calories from fat?

This one tips the nutrient scale at 22 percent of calories or 11 grams of fat per serving.

ITALIAN MACARONI AND CHEESE

2 cups cubed low-fat cheddar cheese (see note)
1 cup skim evaporated milk
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
2½ cups elbow macaroni, cooked al dente
½ teaspoon dried basil
1 (16-ounce) can plum tomatoes with liquid, diced
1 tablespoon bread crumbs

In medium saucepan, combine cheese, milk and mustard. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until cheese melts. Add pasta and mix well.

In ovenproof baking dish, layer one-third of macaroni and cheese; top with one-third of tomato mixture. Repeat layers, ending with macaroni and cheese but reserving a generous dollop of tomatoes to put in center of top layer. Sprinkle with bread crumbs.

Associated Press

Flowers make blooming-pretty accents for salads, entrees and desserts. Use them in small amounts, as you would a fresh herb, to add flavor accent, too. But not just any flowers will do for eating. Choose those that are botanically safe to eat and are grown without pesticides. Supermarkets and farmers markets in some cities stock small containers of edible flowers. Or, grow your own from seeds or plants from a local nursery or mail-order supplier. Do not use flowers from florist shops.

HERBS

You can use both herbs and their flowers in salads and as garnishes. The flowers generally taste much like the herb but milder.

■ Borage: Borage is a spectacular, royal blue flower with a cucumberlike flavor. For summer harvest, start borage from seeds sown outdoors after the danger of frost has passed.

■ Fennel: Golden-colored fennel flowers taste a bit like licorice and bloom in the summer. Buy started fennel plants in the spring.

■ Chive: The pale lavender blooms of the common chive are as good-looking as they are edible. Start chives from seed in the early spring or buy plants. Garlic chives, which bear white flowers in the late summer, are also delicious.

■ Other choices include the blossoms of basil, sage and thyme.

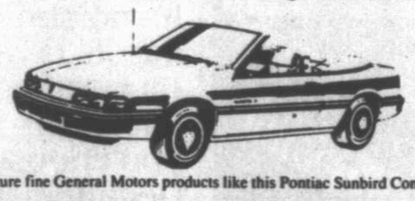

POPULAR POSIES

■ Calendula: Often called pot marigold, calendula produces bumper crops of iridescent yellow or golden flowers. These plants thrive in cool, moist weather. Northern gardeners should sow calendula seeds outdoors in the early spring. Fall sowings are best in the South and Pacific Northwest.

■ Nasturtium: The bright orange and red blossoms of nasturtium have a peppery flavor. Nasturtiums bloom all summer long. Sow seeds outdoors after frost danger has passed.

■ Pansy: Pansy, an old-fashioned favorite, comes in a wide range of colors and blooms in the spring when the weather is cool and moist. Buy started plants at your local nursery or greenhouse.

■ Squash: Butterblossom, a hybrid zucchini, produces bumper crops of golden-yellow flowers, ideal for squash blossom recipes. Sow seeds in your garden after frost danger has passed.

Squeeze play gives Angel win

■ Midland's Angels endure another extra inning affair and down El Paso 12-11 in the bottom of the 10th inning.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Angels scored on a squeeze play with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to take a 12-11 win over the El Paso Diablos Tuesday night at Angel Stadium.

Midland releiver Mark Zappelli pitched one inning for the victory, his first of the season. El Paso's Chris George gave up the 12th and final run for the loss, his first loss against two wins this season.

Both Wagner and Midland second baseman Scott Cerny drove in four runs to lead the Angels' offensive heroics. Steve DeAngelis and Jim Aylward both had three hits, and Aylward and Amaro scored three times each in the game.

El Paso's Ruben Escalera went 4-for-6 leading the Diablos at the plate. First baseman Craig Cooper drove three runs for El Paso on a pair of doubles.

Midland jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the first inning on four straight singles followed by a three-run triple by Wagner. Cerny's RBI single rounded out the inning for Midland.

Midland bats fell relatively silent until the seventh when the Angels scored four more runs. The highlight of the inning was a two-run homer by short stop Kevin Flora who entered the game hitting .056.

After the Angels took a 5-0 lead the Diablos jumped right back into the thick of things with a four-run second highlighted by DH Shon Ashley's two-run homer. Later that inning, catcher Bert Heffernan smashed a two-run single.

The Diablos other outburst came in the eighth as they fought from a four-run deficit to tie the game at 11-11. Cooper's three-run double did most of the damage.

Lee outslugs favored Mojo

Staff Report

ODESSA — For the second time in the 1990 District 4-5A baseball season, Midland Lee upended a favored Odessa Permian team by outslugging the Panthers 9-7 Tuesday at the Permian field.

The Rebels capitalized on a seven-run fifth inning to go 11-8 overall and 6-4 in district competition. For Permian, the loss might prove to be catastrophic, as Midland High downed O essa High 8-4 Tuesday.

The Panthers stand at 7-4 in 4-5A, while MHS (7-3) has just one more loss than district leader Abilene Cooper. Cooper was open Tuesday.

For Lee, Ty Chambers and Randy Brown both went 2-for-3 from the plate with two RBI apiece. Also, Brown and David Schmidt hit home runs to match the trio hit by Permian's Roy Hernandez, Greg Kwiatkowski and Saul Bustos.

Junior Lee pitcher Jeff Johnston also recorded his second win over Mojo this season, as he went to 7-4 for the season.

Lee went out on top 2-0 in the second inning, only to be tied by the Panthers in the bottom of the fourth. But with their seven runs in the fifth, the Rebels went out to a 9-2 edge with two innings left to play. Permian scored a run in the fifth, and kept chipping away at the lead with two in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Madrid does it all for 'Dogs

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland High's 8-4 District 4-5A baseball win over Odessa High Tuesday at Zachery Field did plenty for James Madrid's self-esteem.

Not only did Madrid throw a complete game and strike out 11 OHS batters for the Bulldogs, he smacked a home run over the left field fence to break out of his 3-for-22 batting slump in district play.

"The home run felt good, and it was a good way to break out of the slump," Madrid said. "I was seeing the ball today. As a matter of fact, I hit a flyout to center earlier in the game, and I thought that felt better off the bat than the homer."

Madrid (7-3 on the mound) and his Bulldog teammates, playing their final regular season home game, also found reason to celebrate Tuesday with Midland Lee's 9-7 win over Odessa Permian. The MHS and Lee wins combined to give the 'Dogs sole possession of second place in 4-5A behind Abilene Cooper.

MHS is now 15-8 overall and 7-3 in loop play, while Cooper is 9-2 in district and Permian 7-4. Lee stands at 6-4.

For the 'Dogs, the win may have come a little harder than expected, as MHS tried to recover from an emotionally draining 5-2 loss to Cooper Monday. Also, before the Cooper game MHS had endured a 13-day layoff because of rain postponements and an open date.

"The layoff hurt us in every aspect of the game," said Bulldog coach Tim Whalen, who possibly saw his team play the best game of the year in a 2-0 win over Permian April 10. "You just can't lay off for 13 days and not have it hurt you."

Hyde shrugs off rain

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Jenny Hyde spent a week away from the golf course after her second-place effort in the District 4-5A tournament earned her a berth in this weekend's Region I tourney in Lubbock.

A day or two of rest and relaxation was the intent, but rain was the reason for her prolonged absence from the links.

No matter, says Hyde. She's been back in the swing since last Saturday, and she thinks the rest may have been for the best.

"It actually kind of helped me," said the Midland High senior. "I think it gave me a fresh start."

Hyde, who led 4-5A by two shots going into the final district round, had to settle for second place when her 88 opened the door for defending medalist Lisa Balsch over the last 18. But she is headed to regionals nonetheless, and she said her post-rain practice rounds have been good ones.

Now she is anxious to end the waiting game and hit the course in earnest. Play is scheduled for Friday and Saturday at Shadow Hills Golf Course.

"I've never played there, but I hear that it's a pretty wide open course," Hyde said. "They're supposed to have nice greens but not many trees.

Jenny Hyde

Hyde used rounds of 79, 82, 84 and 88 for a total of 333 strokes in district play, nine behind Balsch who smoked Odessa Country Club with a 77 over the last round.

"Regionals will be a lot different than district play," Hyde said. "You've got to play two rounds in a row, not one each week."

Dykes shows caution

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Spike Dykes, who in 1989 guided Texas Tech to its winningest football season since 1976, knows about winning. He proved that when he led the Midland Lee Rebels to the state finals in 1983.

But Dykes also knows caution. He likes the high expectations his 9-3 Red Raiders have created in West Texas, but he was not prepared to boast his 1990 version into a Cotton Bowl berth when he addressed the Midland Red Raider Club at Midland Country Club Tuesday.

"Success breeds success, and last year we had a very fortunate year," said Dykes. "We won a lot of close games, we got some big plays and we had very few injuries.

"It's nice that a moderate degree of success raises the expectations. When the expectations are high, then people have a tendency to reach a little higher to meet them."

Dykes' most immediate concern will be replacing running back James Gray who was drafted in the fifth round by the New England Patriots last weekend. Also, four starters on the offensive line must be replaced.

Spike Dykes

"We have the athletes," Dykes said. "Anthony Lynn is going to be a fine running back for us, and our offensive line is well coached by Ted Unbehagen. He'll get them ready and we could have a tremendous line.

Controversy marks Cup play

LONDON (AP) — Just six weeks before the World Cup starts, national soccer coaches all over Europe are playing warmup games without some of their best players because of injuries and politics.

Eight of the 24 World Cup-bound teams play warmup games Wednesday and players such as Chris Waddle and John Barnes of England, Enzo Francescoli of Uruguay, Klaus Augenthaler of West Germany and Johnny Eckstrom and Glenn Stromberg of Sweden will be missing.

Czechoslovakia, welcoming back two players who defected two years ago, plays England at Wembley. West Germany plays Uruguay in Stuttgart, Sweden plays Wales in Stockholm and Scotland plays East Germany in Glasgow.

The Netherlands, a World Cup favorite, was scheduled to play Romania, but that match was called off. The Dutch have been in turmoil since players voted last month to fire Coach Thijs Libregts. They wanted Johan Cruyff as a replacement but got former Real Madrid coach Leo Beenhakker instead and their lineup is still a matter for conjecture.

Germany will be missing Augenthaler, forward Roland Wohlfahrt and Alois Reinhardt, all of whom are injured. That gives West German coach Franz Beckenbauer the opportunity to start rookie forward Thomas Kuntz, who has scored 15 goals for FC Kaiserslautern this season. Uruguay will be missing five starters.

Ireland will be missing four starters. Two of its Liverpool midfielders — Ronnie Whelan and Ray Houghton — have pulled out and Coach Jack Charlton has decided to rest defender Kevin Moran and foward Tony Cascarino as Ireland defends its 18-game unbeaten streak at Lansdowne Road.

The Soviets will be without injured regulars Vasily Rats, Alexei Michailichenko and Oleg Protasov and experienced goalkeeper Rinat Dasayev, who is needed by his Spanish club, Seville.

An injury to Peter Beardsley gives England manager Bobby Robson the chance to try Steve Bull, of second division Wolverhampton Wanderers, as Gary Lineker's partner on the front line.

DOGS: Madrid shuts door on Bronchos

From 1D

OHS, which entered the game 2-8 in district play.

The 'Dogs scored four runs in the first inning and another pair in the second before Broncho coach Milton Thompson pulled sophomore pitcher Oscar Olivas and replaced him with Danny Campos.

As Campos was holding MHS to two runs on a pair of hits in the four innings he worked, the Broncho batters came alive and began chiseling away at the lead.

In the third OHS scored two runs, then Madrid answered with his round-tripper in the bottom of the inning. The Broncs also picked up a run in the fourth and one in the fifth to cut the lead to 7-3, but that was when Whalen held a conference with Madrid.

"He's pitched for us in pressure situations all year, so when I looked up and saw the score was 7-3, I told him to close the door," Whalen said.

Madrid followed orders explicitly, as he recorded three strikeouts and faced only seven batters in the final two innings.

With only two games left in the regular season, MHS' schedule is still in limbo. Slated to play a makeup game at San Angelo Thursday, a Tuesday rainout of the San Angelo-Abilene High game forced the MHS-San Angelo affair to be put off yet again. Barring inclement weather, the 'Dogs now plan to play at San Angelo Monday. In the meantime, MHS travels to AHS Saturday for a 2 p.m. game.

Suspensions may be lifted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The indefinite suspensions for Texas boxers Gaby Canizales and Edward "Pee Wee" Parker will be lifted when they pay fines levied by the California State Athletic Commission for failing drug tests, it was announced Tuesday.

Canizales, who turns 30 next Tuesday, was fined $500 for failing to notify the commission that he was on prescribed medication.

Swedberg quits his world title

Staff Report

ODESSA — Chuck Swedberg, 36, has formally resigned his Universal Fighting Society World Superheavyweight Karate championship for health reasons.

Swedberg, a 6-8, 245-pound, fifth degree black belt said he doesn't want to risk his health to keep the title he won in October of 1989.

Swedberg was recently released from the hospital after being greated for an accumulation of fluid in his left lung. He was operated on for colon cancer last May.

"The world title is a great honor, but it should be held by someone who can defend it without the fear of getting hurt," said Swedberg.

BASEBALL

McReynolds gets the big hit for Mets

Associated Press

On a bad night for batters, Kevin McReynolds got the big hit for the New York Mets.

McReynolds' hard slide allowed Mike Marshall to barely beat the double-play relay and enabled the winning run to score in the ninth inning Tuesday night as the Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 2-1.

The Mets and Braves, the two poorest-hitting teams in the majors, each had only three hits before New York loaded the bases with one out in the ninth. Marshall swung and missed twice before tapping a grounder up the middle.

Drawn-in shortstop Jeff Blauser stopped the ball with a dive and flipped backward to second baseman Jeff Treadway. But McReynolds' bruising — but completely legal — slide sent Treadway flying and gave Marshall the split-second he needed to beat the throw to first.

"It would've been hard to complete it anyway," Treadway said. "You don't turn too many double plays from that position. It was a last-ditch effort."

Marshall is not the fastest of Mets, but got down the line quickly enough. He clapped his hands as he crossed the bag, knowing the game was over.

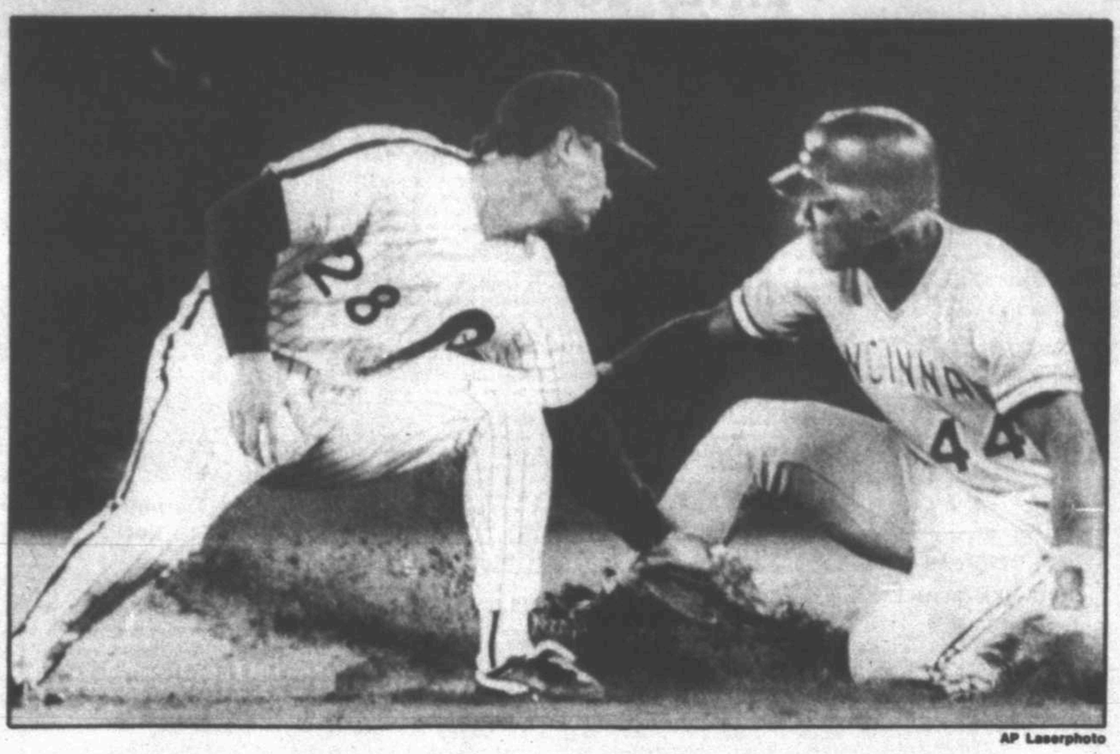

"Everybody thinks I'm slow because I wear a size 14 shoe," Marshall said. "I beat the throw by at least a step. I knew I was safe."

"The way I hit the ball, they had no other option but the double play," he said. "It was a nice forceout for me."

Mark Carreon, who hit four pinch home runs last season, led off the Mets' ninth with a pinch double and moved to third on Howard Johnson's soft single.

Former Midland High pitcher Mike Stanton (0-1) retired Darryl Strawberry on a popup and intentionally walked McReynolds to load the bases, bringing up Marshall.

Julio Machado (2-0) pitched the ninth and struck out two batters for the victory. Each team had just three hits until the Mets' scored the winning run.

Gooden struck out 10 in eight innings and allowed one run on three hits. Smith gave up one run on two hits in seven innings and fanned nine.

"This was probably one of the games I've pitched in a long time," Gooden said. "After the second inning, I felt I was the Doc of old. Either one of us could've won the game. He was great."

The Braves scored in the first on a one-out single by Treadway, a wild pickoff throw by Gooden and Jim Presley's double. Atlanta got only one more hit against Gooden and he struck out eight in his last four innings.

Smith retired the first 12 batters before walking Strawberry to start the fifth. Strawberry stole second, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on McReynolds' sacrifice fly. With two outs, Barry Lyons singled for the Mets' first hit.

Smith has never beaten New York in four career decisions. The Mets' starting lineup Tuesday was batting a combined .377 lifetime against him.

Gooden won his last start against Chicago after opening the season with two consecutive losses. His career record in April remained 18-6 and he stayed unbeaten against the Braves in four decisions since July 21, 1987.

Phillies 6, Reds 3

John Kruk had three hits, including a two-run homer and an RBI double, as Philadelphia beat Cincinnati for its fourth straight victory.

Expos 5, Astros 3

Tim Wallach hit a two-run homer to lead Montreal past Houston and winless Mike Scott for its sixth victory in seven games.

Kevin Gross (1-1) pitched six innings, allowing one run and five hits. Drew Hall, newly-acquired John Costello and Tim Burke finished. Burke pitched two innings for his fourth save.

Scott (0-2) pitched five innings and allowed four runs and five hits in his fourth start of the season.

Marquis Grissom singled with one out in the first inning, stole second and scored on a single by Tim Raines. Raines stole second before Wallach hit his first home run of the season.

The Expos made it 4-1 in the third after Raines walked, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Wallach's single.

Montreal stole five bases and has 31 in 14 games.

Houston added two runs in the seventh on a two-run double by Davis, who had three hits.

The Expos made it 5-3 in the eighth.

Parker powers Brewers to win

Associated Press

The Milwaukee Brewers acquired Dave Parker to power their offense this season. Tuesday night, he delivered.

Parker drove in three runs with his first home run as a Brewer, and Gary Sheffield knocked in three more as the Milwaukee beat the Kansas City Royals 7-3 in a game marked by a bench-clearing incident.

"You get to a new ballclub and you always want to show the people what you can do," said Parker, signed in the off-season as a free agent from the world champion Oakland Athletics. "The harder you try the less production you get.

"I was just fortunate to be swinging the bat good, driving in runs with doubles or singles, but you still want to show the people you have the punch," he said. "This is just my first one. Hopefully, I'll have about 29 to go."

Bosio (2-0) gave up three runs and seven hits in seven innings, striking out five and walking two as the Brewers won for the fifth time in six games.

Kansas City reliever Jeff Montgomery hit Rob Deer with a pitch in the eighth before Milwaukee's Chuck Crim hit Frank White with the first pitch of the ninth. Both benches emptied, but there were no major confrontations. Crim was ejected.

Parker hit his first homer off Richard Dotson (0-1) after a walk to Edgar Diaz and a double by Robin Yount. Gary Sheffield also drove in three runs for Milwaukee.

Rangers 5, White Sox 4

Pete Incaviglia hit a game-winning two-run homer after Ruben Sierra had done the same off Chicago relief ace Bob Thigpen in the ninth inning — when Texas scored all its runs.

Rafael Palmeiro doubled with one out and scored when Julio Franco's grounder went through the legs of shortstop Ozzie Guillen. Sierra followed with his fourth homer of the season. Thigpen (0-1) walked Harold Baines, and Incaviglia hit the first pitch for his third homer, over the left-center field fence.

Eric King allowed two hits in seven innings and Carlton Fisk keyed a three-run first with a run-scoring double for the White Sox, who lost their fourth straight game. King struck out seven and walked one.

Jamie Moyer allowed eight hits, struck out three and walked none in 6 1-3 innings for Texas. Three of the four Chicago runs were unearned, with Moyer setting the stage himself.

He failed to cleanly field Ivan Calderon's dribbler to the right of the mound for an error. Moyer had Calderon picked off, but first baseman Palmeiro mishandled the throw and Calderon was safe at second.

Ron Kittle had an RBI single and Fisk doubled for the first of his three hits, scoring Kittle. Carlos Martinez added a run-scoring single.

AL Roundup

Twins 16, Tigers 4

The Minnesota Twins established season highs in several offensive categories, with Gene Larkin and Kent Hrbek driving in three runs.

Larkin doubled twice, singled twice and scored twice as the Twins, who won for the fifth time in six games, had season highs in hits (19), walks drawn (12) and runs. They had seven doubles to tie a team record.

Athletics 7, Orioles 1

Dave Stewart won his 18th straight April decision and Mark McGwire hit two home runs and drove in five runs for Oakland, as the Athletics remained unbeaten on the road.

Stewart, unbeaten in April since joining Oakland in 1986, was 0-11 prior to that in the season's first month. He ran his record to 4-0 and Oakland's road mark to 6-0 by allowing five hits in seven innings, striking out five and walking four.

Red Sox 4, Angels 2

Roger Clemens ran his record to 4-0 and Boston scored three unearned runs after an error by losing pitcher Mark Langston.

Clemens, collecting his 99th career victory, allowed four hits, struck out eight and walked one in 8 1-3 innings. He retired 14 straight Angels between the fourth and ninth innings. Jeff Reardon, the third Boston pitcher, got the final out for his first save.

Yankees 6, Mariners 2

Dave LaPoint won his first game since June 6 and slump-ridden Jesse Barfield hit a three-run homer as New York scored five times in the first inning and ended a five-game losing streak.

LaPoint (1-1), trying to come back from shoulder surgery last August, allowed six hits in 6 2-3 innings, walked two and struck out two. He pitched six shutout innings then allowed a two-out RBI double to Harold Reynolds in the seventh.

Barfield, who entered the game 0-for-13 with a .192 average, capped the first with his homer to the opposite field off Matt Young (0-3). It was Barfield's first home run and quadrupled his RBI total to four.

The Yankees started the inning with consecutive leadoff singles by Steve Sax and Alvaro Espinoza. Then, after Don Mattingly struck out on three pitches, Dave Winfield walked, Steve Balboni singled in two runs, and Barfield lofted a first-pitch fastball into right field seats.

Blue Jays 4, Indians 3

Kelly Gruber hit his major-league-leading fifth and sixth homers and drove in all the Toronto runs as the Blue Jays won for the fourth time in five games.

Durables take big jump

■ Orders for the big ticket durable goods took their biggest increase in two years in March as purchases of automobiles and airplanes took a jump upward after declining in January.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories for durable goods jumped 6.7 percent in March, the sharpest increase in two years, the government said today.

The Commerce Department reported that orders for durable goods — "big-ticket" items expected to last at least three years — totaled a seasonally adjusted $128.8 billion in March following a 2.3 percent upward bounce in February.

It was the largest increase in orders since a 7.4 percent gain in December 1988. And it continued for a second month the rebound from January's 10.5 percent decline, the steepest drop ever recorded.

The department said most of the boost was due to increased orders for transportation equipment, saying that excluding transportation, the advance was only 2.0 percent.

"The increase in transportation equipment in March of ... 21.0 percent to $36.2 billion was mostly attributable to aircraft and parts, although motor vehicles and parts also had a significant increase," it said.

The closely watched non-defense capital goods sector, often a barometer of business investment plans, jumped 14.9 percent to $41.4 billion after diving 6.1 percent in February.

Sharp drops in airplane and automobile orders were responsible for the record decline in January, the department reported.

Aircraft orders continued to slide in February, but a resumption in autobuilding helped pushed total orders up. The department counts car orders and production as the same.

The auto industry had laid off more than 90,000 workers during January to ease bloated inventories. Most of those workers returned to production lines in February.

The January report had been viewed as another sign of weakness in the manufacturing sector of the economy. That sector has been particularly affected by high-interest polices of the Federal Reserve since many of the "big-ticket" items are financed by loans.

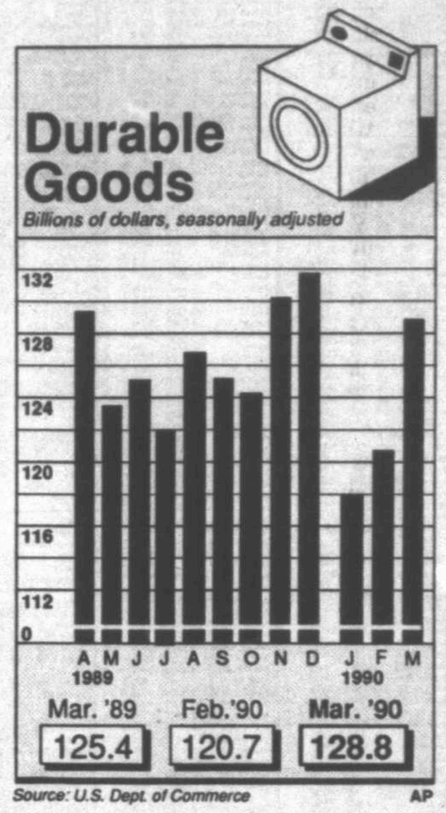

But the March report shows that most of that loss has been regained.

New orders for defense capital goods, a highly volatile category, fell 4.5 percent to $7.3 billion after gaining 18.4 percent in February. Excluding defense, orders rose 7.5 percent.

Non-electrical machinery orders rose 1.6 percent to $22.7 billion while orders for electrical machinery gained 1.1 percent to $20.1 billion.

Shipments of durable goods were up 1.5 percent to $125 billion while unfilled orders rose 0.8 percent to $496.7 billion.

Oil futures slip

The June contract for West Texas Intermediate slipped 7 cents to close at $19 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange while posted price clung to $18.00.

Analysts said crude oil futures opened higher in response to gains on overseas markets, but prices fell back after meeting resistance at about $19.50 a barrel.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar declined against all major currencies Tuesday except the Japanese yen, which weakened considerably.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for April delivery settled at $375.90 a troy ounce, or $3 below Monday's close. Later, Republic National Bank of New York quoted a troy ounce of gold bullion at $375.75 as of 4 p.m. EDT, down $2.90 from Monday's late bid.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.4875 Swiss francs; 5.698 French francs; 1,244.75 Italian lire; and 1.15955 Canadian dollars.

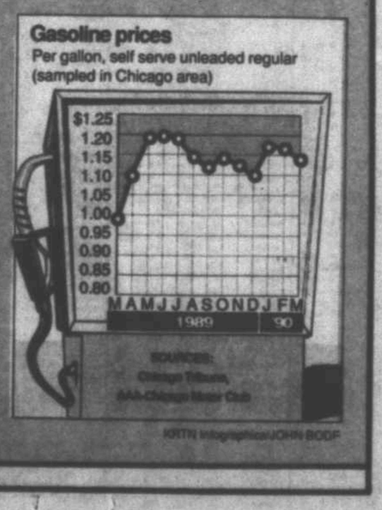

In London, gold traded at a late bid of $378.25 a troy ounce. In Zurich, the bid price was $377.50. Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose to $378.97.

Interest rates up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose at the latest auction to their highest level in several weeks.

The Treasury Department sold $8.2 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.78 percent on Monday, up from 7.71 percent last week. Another $8.2 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.91 percent, up from 7.75 percent last week.

Junk bond giant Michel Milken enters the District Court of New York Tuesday to plead guilty to six criminal charges in the largest Wall Street fraud ever.

Milken pleads guilty

■ Michael Milken, Drexel's junk bond expert and a main target in the federal government's investigation of Wall Street crime has pleaded guilty to six counts, faces fines of $600 million and 28 years in jail.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Junk bond giant Michael Milken tearfully pleaded guilty today to six criminal charges and agreed to pay $600 million to settle the biggest Wall Street fraud case ever against an individual.

"I realize by my acts I have hurt those who are closest to me. I am truly sorry," Milken said, breaking down and crying as he read a statement in court.

Included were guilty pleas for aiding speculator Ivan Boesky in several securities law violations; for aiding another trader in filing false income tax returns; and for conspiring to violate securities laws.

Milken did not plead to any charges of insider trading or racketeering, which were the most serious in the government's original, broad indictment of him.

Sentencing was set for Oct. 1. Milken faces up to 28 years in prison.

The move capped the stunning decline of the former head of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.'s high-yield bond department, who gained notoriety for engineering financing for some of the biggest corporate takeovers of the 1980s and then for allegations of widespread wrongdoing.

Milken was the main target of the government's lengthy investigation of Wall Street crime that resulted in more than 30 convictions.

Milken was linked to a large insider trading network headed by Boesky, who paid $100 million and was sentenced to three years in prison in exchange for providing information against Milken, Drexel and others.

After three years of rumors and press leaks, the Justice Department in March 1989 indicted Milken, his brother, Lowell, and former Drexel trader Bruce Newberg on an unprecedented 98 counts of fraud and racketeering.

Under the plea deal, all charges were dropped against Lowell Milken, a lawyer and key aide to his brother at Drexel. The case against Newberg was not resolved.

Milken pleaded guilty to counts of conspiracy; aiding and abetting failure to meet federal securities disclosure regulations; securities fraud; aiding and abetting a regulated broker-dealer to violate securities reporting requirements; mail fraud; and assisting in filing a false tax return.

Health benefits spur jump in employment costs

■ Cost increases for health benefits spurred a 5.5 percent leap in employment costs over the past year, prompting fears among economists that this might worsen inflation.

By Karen Ball

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wages, salaries and other benefits paid to American workers shot up 5.5 percent over the past year, the largest jump in six years, the government reported today.

The Labor Department attributed much of the increase in its Employment Cost Index, one of the best measures of wage inflation, to the continued soaring cost of health insurance and other benefits.

Health insurance alone increased 12.1 percent for the year ending in March, following the 13.4 percent rise registered for the 12-month period ending in March 1989.

The 5.5 percent rise in overall employment costs was the largest 12-month surge since March 1984, when wages, benefits and salaries increased by 5.9 percent, the government said.

Economists have been concerned that tight labor markets are pushing labor costs higher and worsening the nation's inflation problems.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co., called the report a "big negative on the inflation outlook."

"It shows that we have a rock hard, high employment cost lump facing American business that is being passed on at the retail level," Sinai said.

Today's report showed that wages and salaries rose 4.2 percent over the year ending in March, the same as the increase from a year earlier, while benefit costs jumped 7.2 percent.

The jump in benefit costs was blamed on higher health insurance and an increase in social security taxes, up from 7.51 percent to 7.65 percent.

Workers in the service sector of the economy fared slightly better than the manufacturing sector in pay gains. Service industries saw wages and salaries go up by 4.2 percent in the past 12 months compared to a 4.0 percent rise for the manufacturing sector.

Tom Lindsey becomes Fairchild Systems

By Mella McEwen

McEwen

Earlier this year Tom Lindsey Associates became Fairchild Systems after moving from being a strict supplier of measurement equipment to being a designer and developer of automated measurement systems.

The new direction of the firm is under the management of Mark Fairchild, a petroleum engineer, who became a principal in the firm in January of this year.

To accomodate its new endeavors Fairchild Systems has moved from its former location on Alta Vista Road to 17 Barry Road, just off South Midkiff. The new phone number is 699-1476.

Mark Fairchild, president, emphasized that even though the company is now engaged in automated systems, it will still carry the same quality line of measurement controls as before. The company is distributor for Bristol-Babcock, the first company to introduce microprocessors to the field in 1947.

Just opened at 2106 N. Big Spring is TROY'S MEAT MARKET, which is not affiliated with Troy's House of Meats at 2703 Cuthbert.

Sue Robertson, who owns the new store with husband Troy, describes it as "an old-time over-the-counter meat market." Customers can order special cuts of beef, as well as chicken, fish, cheese, sandwich meats, bacon and ham. Also available are freezer packs.

The Robertsons have been in the meat business in Midland for 11 years.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Reopening under new ownership is MIDLAND FLORAL & ETC., located at 1706 W. Wall.

The shop, which had been closed, was purchased by the Skeens, who own Skeens Auction Service, according to Holly Farris, manager-designer at Midland Floral.

In addition to selling and delivering floral arrangements at discount prices, "because we'd rather sell a lot of flowers for less than fewer flowers at higher prices," customers can also find different antiques and gift items.

"Whatever the Skeens don't sell through their auction service comes over here, so there's all kinds of unique items," Farris explains. One such item, which currently holds the store's silk flowers, is a Norwegian wedding sleigh from the late 1700s.

The MIDLAND HILTON, which just announced a $2.2 million renovation program, has also released results of a survey conducted on business travelers.

Conducted by the Hilton and Tarrance & Associates, business travelers were surveyed as to different services and amenities via random telephone interviews.

Asked to rank in-room furnishings, 43 percent of the respondents said a king-sized bed was the most important. Next were overstuffed lounge chairs, chosen by 26 percent of respondents. Lots of clothing storage space was third, with 16 percent of respondents asking for a chest of drawers. Fourth in importance was access to a videocassette player, chosen by only 8 percent.

The local office of V.I.P. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE INC., located at 4304 N. Garfield Suite 200-A, is now specializing in nationwide recruitment and placement of engineering, data processing and related professionals on an employer-paid basis.

The firm, run by Liz Proctor, also specializes in local placement of data processing, oil and gas, accounting, sales, insurance and medical professionals and provides a temporary service.

ANALYSIS

By MARIANN CAPRINO
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market stumbled Tuesday when a late round of computer-triggered selling wiped out initial gains and pushed the key index down for the fifth consecutive session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 12.17 to 2,654.50. Since last Tuesday the index has lost 111.27 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 833 down, 652 up and 506 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 137.36 million shares, up slightly from 135.15 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 169.11 million shares.

When bond prices advanced in the early going despite the government's better-than expected report on March durable goods orders, stocks advanced. But when bond prices faltered, their yields rising in tandem, stocks struggled to hold onto initial gains.

An hour before the closing bell, computer-triggered sell programs kicked in and took the stock market down. "Given how light the volume is, the market couldn't recover from that little straw," said Dennis Jarrett, chief market analyst at Kidder Peabody & Co.

Alfred E. Goldman, a vice president at A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis, called the market's performance "a little disappointing because it tried to go up — both the generals and the troops."

With plenty of cash on the sidelines, investors so far have not had to dump blocks of stocks in order to buy bonds. But there is concern that the selling of stocks could accelerate if yields go higher.

Government bonds yielding close to 9 percent proved an attractive alternative to equities. "It's a portfolio decision," Jarrett said, and "it could have an impact on our market."

Some analysts were heartened that the selling was not heavy. "It did not get nasty," said Goldman. He drew encouragement from the fact that bond prices were down only fractionally, an indication that the market seemed to be stabilizing.

Ames Department Stores, the most actively traded Big Board issue with 3.8 million shares changing hands, fell ⅝ to 1⅜. The chain hired a bankruptcy lawyer and was reported to be considering seeking Chapter 11 protection from creditors.

Elsewhere inthe retail sector, Sears was off 1⅛ at 35⅜; the company reported a 59 percent decline in first-quarter profits.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Roll that CD over

By Bill Doyle

Q. We are a retired couple, 70 and 79, in good health. Social Security benefits and a pension amount to $17,000 annually. Last year, the interest from all our certificates of deposit was $18,365. We put $30,000 into Series EE bonds, U.S. Savings Bonds, in October 1986 and $15,000 into EE bonds in July 1989.

We would like your advice about a $60,000 CD coming due soon. Should we buy more EE bonds with that money, roll it over into a new CD or do something else? We started married life with nothing and worked hard for what we have.

Doyle

A. Your final sentence was the clincher. Roll that money over into another CD from which you can withdraw the interest. At your stage of life, you should use all your income — including CD interest — to enjoy life and spend money on "extras," such as vacation trips and luxuries.

You worked long enough and hard enough. Now is the time to use your nest egg. Don't make the mistakes many senior citizens do of socking money away and denying themselves pleasures and even necessities — and then dying with a bundle.

You don't collect EE bond interest until you redeem the bonds. So putting more money into EEs wouldn't do you much good now. Also, you must hold EEs for five years before interest accumulates at the top guaranteed rate. Even with your good health, you really can't expect to travel too far down the lifeline pike.

EEs issued since November 1986 accrue interest at a 6 percent guaranteed rate, if held for five years or longer. The guaranteed rate, with the five-year holding provision, for EEs issued from November 1982 through October 1986 is 7.5 percent.

That made your $30,000 EE purchase in October 1986 — the very last month with the higher guaranteed rate — a smart move, back then. But, nowadays, you can buy CDs paying interest higher than the 6 percent currently guaranteed on newly issued EE bonds.

Q. I am enclosing an advertisement in which a bank offers two-year certificates of deposit at a 8.75 percent annual rate, payable quarterly. That rate seems unusually high. How does the bank make any money on this offer?

A. By using the money taken in on those CDs to make loans with interest higher than 8.75 percent, say, 10.85 percent or more. A two percentage point "spread" usually covers the bank's operating expenses and leaves it with a profit.

A bank's basic business is to gather money from deposits, including CDs, and put the money out on loans. This gave rise to the joke that bankers lived in "the world of five, seven, three" — meaning they paid 5 percent on deposits, made 7 percent loans and were on the golf course by 3 p.m.

That, of course, was before deregulation raised interest rates on deposits and made the banking business much more competitive. In recent years, you didn't find many bankers teeing off at 3 p.m. weekdays.

Q. My wife and I have individual retirement accounts at a bank and also at a savings and loan association. Because we are past age 701/2, we have to make withdrawals from our IRAs annually.

When we make an IRA withdrawal at the bank, we get the money right away. But the S&Ls tells us we have to wait until December 31 for our IRA checks, even though we request the money earlier and the amounts are deducted from our IRAs at the earlier date.

A. No at all. You are entitled to the money at the time you request the withdrawals.

However, that S&L might be doing you a favor. At many S&Ls and banks, interest is credited to accounts on the final day of the month or calendar quarter. If that's the story, you might lose interest by making a withdrawal before the date on which interest is credited.

Placid abandons Gulf project

DALLAS (AP) — Citing disappointing flow rates, Placid Oil Co. announced it is pulling out of the Green Canyon deep-well drilling operation in the Gulf of Mexico.

Placid Oil's Green Canyon 29 project became operational in late 1988. Four wells were drilled at a cost of more than $7 million apiece, but "didn't perform as expected," said Phil Clarke, vice president of operations.

The total project included the drilling of more than 20 wells and if completed would have cost $400 million. The production system will be used at another location, so all the investment wasn't wasted, Clarke said.

The Green Canyon project was expected to produce enough cash to help the Hunt brothers of Dallas pay back their large debts and retain control of troubled Penrod Drilling Co., which they lost last month to creditors.

Placid and its partners, which included several Hunt-affiliated companies, decided to stop operations after a satellite well was lost due to downhole equipment failure. The well was in 2,243 feet of water and established the current world water depth record for production, according to the Oil & Gas Journal.

"It's very disappointing to us to plug and abandon this project, but the wells' production capabilities weren't high enough to pay costs," Clarke said.

Enserch Exploration Partners Ltd., a subsidiary of Dallas-based Enserch Corp., was a 25 percent working-interest partner in the project.

An Enserch spokeswoman said Enserch won't have to take a write-down against earnings because the company was amortizing its Green Canyon expenses while they were incurred.

GUILTY: Milken to pay $600 million in fines

(From 5D)

The first five counts carry a maximum five years each in prison and the tax count has a maximum three-year setnence, for a possible total of 28 years.

Milken agreed to pay $200 million in penalties to the government and $400 million to set up a fund for reimbursing defrauded investors.

"We believe that this prosecution and the fact that Mr. Milken has admitted to guilt will send the right message to the financial community," Assistant U.S. Attorney John K. Carroll told the court.

The original indictment had charged the defendants with illegal securities trading, stock manipulation and other fraudulent activity, some in connection with corporate mergers and acquisitions.

Milken had pleaded innocent and repeatedly said he would fight the charges at trial, but reversed his position after months of negotiations between the government and his attorneys.

He had faced a much longer prison term and possible forfeiture of his wealth, said to be more than $1 billion, under the original charges.

The plea deal was reached Friday after the U.S. attorney's office said it would bring a broader indictment as it had been threatening to do for nearly a year if Milken did not settle.

Milken told the court he violated the law in doing business with Boesky in 1984, when Boesky acquired more than 10 percent of the stock of Fischbach Corp., a takeover target at the time.

As part of his dealings, Milken told Boesky that Drexel would cover any losses Boesky suffered in trading the stock, in violation of federal disclosure requirements.

Milken also admitted to securities fraud in an arrangement with Boesky involving the sale of MCA Inc. stock by Drexel client Golden Nugget Inc. in the fall of 1984.

In the tax-related count, Milken said he helped Drexel client David Solomon, head of Solomon Asset Management, engage in illegal trading and create fictitious losses for tax purposes.

Milken broke down as he finished his statement. His attorney, Arthur Liman, placed his hand on his back for support as Milken finished reading.

Milken is required to answer questions about the government's continuing insider trading and savings and loan investigations but he does not have to provide specific information to help develop other fraud cases.

Milken is credited with reshaping American finance in the 1980s through junk bonds used to provide billions of dollars in capital to small- and medium-sized companies and to finance hostile corporate takeovers.

Junk bonds grew from an obscure form of debt to a $200 billion market almost entirely because of Milken, who controlled a wide network of buyers and sellers and wielded enormous power.

Under an agreement with Drexel, Milken was paid more than $1.1 billion from 1983-87, including $550 million in 1987 alone.

Milken, Drexel and others were accused by the Securities and Exchange Commission in September 1988 with sweeping civil insider trading charges.

Drexel settled its case last year by pleading guilty to six felonies and agreeing to pay $650 million in fines and restitution. Drexel was required to sever ties with Milken, who quit last June after 19 years at Drexel.

Texaco says Pennzoil firm used judge

DALLAS (AP) — Texaco attorney Richard Miller says he would have challenged the qualifications of a judge in a multi-billion dollar judgment against Texaco if he'd known the judge had worked for the opponent a few months earlier.

Texas Lawyer, a legal trade publication, reported Monday that retired state district judge Solomon Casseb Jr. was paid $25,000 from one of Pennzoil's law firms for work on a case unrelated to the 1985 fight between Pennzoil and Texaco Inc.

Legal experts quoted by Texas Lawyer said the payment to Casseb should have been disclosed, although it did not violate ethical canons.

"Surely there must be a judge who could be appointed to complete this case who had not just finished a very substantial relationship with one of the lead counsel on the other side," Miller said Monday by telephone from his Houston office.

William Barnett, managing partner for Pennzoil's law firm, Baker & Botts, told The Associated Press none of the attorneys working on the case were aware of the payment. Barnett said the payment on Feb. 14, 1985 was made on behalf of a client in another case.

"There's no way anyone could have forecast" Casseb would be appointed to the Texaco-Pennzoil case, Barnett said from Houston.

Casseb, a retired judge and attorney in San Antonio, did not grant an interview to Texas Lawyer and did not return telephone calls from The Associated Press.

Eight weeks into the trial, Judge Anthony J.P. Harris stepped down citing poor health, and on Oct. 22, 1985, administrative Judge Thomas Stovall appointed Casseb to take over the case.

Casseb had served as a judge until 1968, when he returned to private practice. Texas Lawyer said he qualified as a retired judge, agreeing to sit as a visiting judge anywhere in Texas, in May 1985.

In November, a jury awarded Pennzoil $10.53 billion, and Casseb approved the verdict in November. With interest, the total judgment was $11.1 billion.

An appeals court later reduced the punitive damages and in 1987, when Texaco lost attempts to avoid posting $10 billion bond, the company filed for federal bankruptcy court protection.

Zaireans crowd streets to celebrate democracy

President lifts 20-year ban on opposition, announces that free elections will elect new government

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Bowing to weeks of pressure, President Mobutu Sese Seko said Tuesday he had lifted a 20-year ban on opposition parties and would let a multiparty government replace his in a year.

Thousands of Zaireans chanting, singing and waving branches poured into downtown Kinshasa, the capital, and blocked the streets to cheer the president's decision.

Mobutu, absolute ruler since taking power Nov. 24, 1965, announced in a nationally broadcast speech that he was setting up a transitional government to rule until free elections could be held. No election date was set.

"I am taking leave of the Popular Movement for the Revolution (MPR)," said Mobutu, 59. He said he would no longer be head of the party that supplanted the government in 1970, but would remain as president "at the request of the people of Zaire."

Mobutu said three parties will be allowed at first. His Popular Movement for the Revolution, which under Zaire's law was the country's government, no longer will hold any special status, he said.

Mobutu said one leading opposition figure, Etienne Tshisekedi, was released from detention Tuesday and his Union for Democracy and Social Progess party legalized. He did not say which of several other opposition groups, whose leaders are in exile, would be selected as the third legal party.

He said the constitution will be rewritten and a transitional government established until elections are held. The elections will produce a new government by April 24, 1991, he said.

He began a tour of the nation in January, seeking public comment on his rule. Thousands of replies were sent in from business groups, churches, unions, students and individuals. Many bitterly critized the government and Mobutu himself, accusing the president and his cronies of corruption and monopolizing power.

The country's Roman Catholic bishops compared Mobutu's rule to a monarchy.

Mobutu did not reply directly to the criticisms but promised "the will of the majority will be respected. We will proceed together on the changes wanted by the majority."

The former journalist and army sergeant has ruled the former Belgian Congo since Nov. 24, 1965. He renamed the country and ran it almost as a personal fiefdom.

Like most African presidents, Mobutu has asserted one-party rule was the only way to avoid tribalism. In the country's first five years of independence, more than 100,000 people died in fighting attributed to ethnic or regional conflicts.

Since 1970, every citizen of Zaire has been automatically registered as a member of the official party. Opposition groups were brutally repressed, and Mobutu claimed 99.99 percent of the vote in presidential elections.

He renamed the country Zaire and ordered Zaireans to replace their Christian names with African names. Men were required to replace Western-style suits and neckties with high-necked jackets.

As part of Mobutu's campaign to replace European influences, he ordered that people address each other as "citizen," rather than "sir" or "madame."

Perhaps most symbolic about Mobutu's announcement Tuesday was his declaration that Western-style suits would no longer be banned, and people could again call each other "sir" or "madame."

After taking power, Mobutu nationalized key industries, including copper production, and replaced expatriate advisers and experts with Zaireans.

Production collapsed, along with much of the country's infrastructure. Mobutu was accused of using his plan to plunder the country's wealth. His critics say he amassed several billion dollars.

Twice he needed major Western military intervention to put down revolts, and international organizations and opposition leaders said he brutally repressed any opposition.

But the United States and other Western governments supported Mobutu, who was committed to opposing the expansion of Marxism in the region. Zaire has been a conduit of U.S. aid to anti-Marxist guerrillas in Angola, Zaire's southern neighbor.

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Hundreds of policemen refused to go to work Tuesday after six of their colleagues were killed in daylong rioting. A Cabinet minister said the army would be used to control any new upsurges of violence.

On Monday, angry mobs beat six policemen to death, and another 15 policemen were reported missing, the state-owned Rashtriya Samachar Samiti news agency said.

The attackers accused police of condoning and sometimes joining a pro-monarchist group blamed for violence and arson attacks since a new government headed by pro-democracy forces took office last week.

Monday's violence was the worst since April 6, when police and troops killed scores of pro-democracy demonstrators at the height of Nepal's popular movement for a multiparty system.

At least five civilians were killed in retaliatory police firing after Monday's attacks, the news agency said.

Government officials said police officers in most of Katmandu's 33 precincts failed to report to work Tuesday. Almost none of the capital's estimated 4,000 policemen was seen on the streets of Katmandu, a city of 250,000 people.

"There are no policemen anywhere in the city," a taxi driver said after six hours on the streets. "Even traffic policemen are absent today."

Shops opened and streets were clogged with traffic after a 10-hour curfew clamped on Monday night was lifted at 6 a.m. There were no reports of violence.

Home Minister Yog Prasad Upadhyay said Tuesday that in case of any further upsurges in violence, "we will have to fall back on the army in a limited way."

He said, however, that the "tremendous amount of confidence the people have in this government is compensating for the absence of police."

Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai met with King Birendra on Tuesday to discuss the situation, officials said. No details of the meeting were released. A scheduled meeting of the Cabinet was postponed, the officials said on condition of anonymity.

AP

Bhattarai and his government, a coalition of democrats, Communists, royalists and independents, took office Thursday after an eight-week campaign against the previous regime, which was subservient to the king.

King Birendra caved in to opposition demands April 8 by lifting a 29-year ban on political parties. Two days earlier, government troops had opened fire on pro-democracy demonstrators, and witnesses estimated about 200 people were killed. The government put the death toll at 10.
