Pure feeder plan

Should Midland Independent School District have a pure feeder system?

School board trustees will decide the fate of MISD's feeder system — or method of sending junior high school students to high schools — at Tuesday's board meeting.

The addition of a fourth junior high school — to open in 1993 — will make it possible to divide the student population equally. Students from two junior high schools could "feed" directly to Midland High School and two junior highs would feed its students to Midland Lee High School. This would allow students to become part of academic and extra-curricular programs for one particular high school beginning in the seventh grade.

Is the current system sufficient for our athletes and band students? Can Midland students continue to compete with their peers in pure feeder systems in Abilene, San Angelo and Odessa high schools? Would academics benefit from a pure feeder system? Or will targeting students for a particular high school in the seventh grade intensify cross-town rivalries?

The Cityline COMMUNITY PULSE wants to know. Call 560-2400 and select category 1890 to vote for or against a pure feeder system. You may also stay on the line and express your opinion.

This special survey will remain open until 5 p.m. Monday. Results of your calls will be tallied and reported in the Tuesday edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

Kinison dies

Sam Kinison, a former tent preacher who gained fame as a shrieking and often insulting stand-up comedian, was killed Friday night in a head-on automobile crash on a desert highway near Needles, Calif. He was 38 and lived in Hollywood Hills.

Kinison's high-decibel routines became popular on the comedy-club circuit and won him film and television appearances.

Two seek judge's post

Tuesday's GOP runoff decides officeholders

Wright, Goulet face off for Precinct 1

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright, who said that conservative fiscal management has been his benchmark in the 23 years he has been Precinct 1 commissioner, is being challenged by a 70-year-old political newcomer, Henry Goulet, who said that a change in county government management is needed.

In Tuesday's runoff election, many of the Republican Party voters in Precinct 1 in western Midland and Midland County will decide who — Wright or Goulet — will serve in that $27,000-plus-a-year post in the next four-year term beginning in 1993.

Tuesday's winner will have no Democratic opponent in the November general election.

Wright, a 60-year-old financial analyst, cited his diligence in "keeping the (county's) budget balanced in these troubled financial times and in keeping taxes as low as possible."

He was first elected to office in 1968 as a conservative Democrat and switched over to the Republican Party in 1985 in a predominantly Republican county.

Whether George D. "Jody" Gilles or Robin Malone Sams will preside over the 142nd District Court will finally be determined in Tuesday's high-profile runoff election.

ELECTION '92

Winners in Tuesday's balloting are virtually assured of taking office since no Democratic candidates entered the race.

Both Republican candidates said their campaigns have been going strong since the March 10 primary, which knocked a third candidate, Thomas Bruner, off the ballot.

During that election, Ms. Sams, 33, an assistant district attorney, captured 44.9 percent of the vote while Gilles, 40, an independent attorney in general law, took 40.2 percent.

"If I got all of Tom Bruner's supporters that would push me over the edge or the same number who didn't vote the first time. I think it's going to be a combination of those ... and people who voted for me originally," Gilles said, when

Committee splits over teen AIDS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A congressional panel expressed alarm Saturday at the spread of AIDS among adolescents and condemned the federal government's response as "a national disgrace."

It concluded that federal efforts are "underfunded, uncoordinated and largely unsuccessful" in dealing with AIDS and can't meet the need for prevention among teen-agers.

The House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families said federal prevention efforts are hampered by moralistic restrictions that prevent explicit or specific information about high-risk sexual practices and the effective use of condoms.

"Denial of the problem at the federal level, where leadership should be paramount, is a national disgrace," the committee said.

"Few federal resources are dedicated to research or data collection that involve adolescents and their health care providers," it said. "Prevention efforts to curb risk-taking behavior among youth are sketchy. And use of explicit information about preventing HIV infection is often discouraged or even prohibited."

Eight of 14 Republicans, including Lamar Smith, R-Texas, on the panel took issue with the findings, saying AIDS among teens is primarily "a behavioral problem" rather than a health problem.

In a dissenting report, they said sexual abstinence and strengthening the family, not more government programs, were the answer.

"Safe sex for teen-agers today is clearly not using condoms but in using self-restraint — abstinence," the Republicans said. "The fact that some teens engage in

At home, President Bush leads a sheltered life

By Matthew C. Quinn
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush's daily existence at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue amounts to life in a cocoon.

If he wants to see a first-run movie, an aide orders it from the nearby Motion Picture Association, an industry lobbying group, and Bush views the film in the White House screening room on the east side of the mansion.

When he makes a speech at a city hotel, he doesn't walk even if it's only a block away. He rides in a 16-car motorcade.

When the president goes to the Kennedy Center, the main performing arts theater here , he sits in the presidential box, which is stocked with soft drinks and champagne.

The first family is even insulated from the change of seasons. Outdoor pools at the White House and the Camp David, Md., presidential retreat are maintained at moderate temperatures year round.

When Bush goes home for the night, he doesn't leave the office far behind. He merely walks across a courtyard from the Oval Office and takes an elevator to the third-floor residential quarters, where he and his family are pampered by a domestic staff of almost 100.

"Living over the store," as Ronald Reagan once put it.

It may be grand, but it's also confining.

When the president and his wife Barbara decided to walk home across Lafayette Square from church one recent Sunday, their block-long stroll became a major media event. A crowd gathered, and with all the jostling, a news photographer was thrown to the ground.

So when the Bushes walked amid Washington's blossoming cherry trees along the nearby Tidal Basin last week, they did so in pre-dawn darkness so as not to attract many onlookers and dis-

CAF's 'living museum' impacts area economy

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force's $10-million first-year economic impact on the Midland-Odessa area must be viewed in conjunction with the CAF's "many intangible benefits" to gauge the value of the organization, according to a study prepared by Midland College.

The CAF is rooted in preserving, in flying condition, those remaining rare warplanes from the 1939-45 World War II era.

"This is a living museum," Dr. Jerry Lee Jones, the recently retired director of the college's Business and Economic Development Center, said of the 1957-founded CAF. "People are interested in historical factors. And, that brings in tourism."

And that brings in dollars.

About half of the CAF's 1991 economic impact was in construction dollars — $5 million.

The CAF headquarters and the American Airpower Heritage Museum officially opened in December 1991. About $2.3 million of the 1991 $10-million impact was generated during the CAF's Flying Museum aerial air show — AirSho'91 — at Midland International Airport prior to the Dec. 7 CAF opening and dedication.

In preparing the study, Jones and Midland College researcher David Terry used "actual dollars" in gauging the CAF's impact. They decided against using any "multiplier," which some economists do, to indicate the turnover of dollars.

"The multiplier concept is somewhat controversial and is not universally accepted," Jones explained.

A multiplier factor, possibly from four to seven, would boost the CAF's $10 million impact in 1991 from

Relaxed approach misleads Bush campaign watchers

By Michael Wines
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Public approval of George Bush's presidency has been scraping along at historic lows for two months. A quarter to a third of all Republican voters have consistently rejected the president through the spring's primaries.

A drumbeat of news reports is depicting the White House as adrift and bereft of bright ideas. And the prevailing view of Bush's campaign performance is that it has been, ah, uneven.

Not to worry, says Robert M. Teeter.

"You cannot get distracted totally by the primary and forget why we're here. We're here to win the election in November," Teeter, the Republican poll taker who is running Bush's campaign, said in a recent conversation.

"Disarray stories are around, but, obviously, I don't believe them. In fact, I'm kind of surprised, because I think the campaign is running very well."

He paused and then added, "To be honest with you, I think it's running spectacularly well."

"Well" is not the adverb of choice among many leading Republicans. Some of them say Teeter is too complacent, too contemplative, too short of the hair-trigger reflexes a good manager needs for a presidential political fistfight.

They also say he is too nice. In some Republican campaign circles, his nickname is Blood and Guts, a sarcastic reference to Teeter's reluctance to employ the pit bull politics that Bush's last campaign manager, Lee Atwater, used to mangle Michael S. Dukakis in 1988.

"Here's a guy who's an optimist, a guy who has that James Stewart, 'Wonderful Life' quality," said one top Republican campaign consultant. "James Stewart never threw the first punch. Teeter won't either. It's his strength, but it's his biggest weakness."

Witness the last two months, in which Teeter's campaign was first blind-sided by the anger of New Hampshire voters over the economy and then idled as Bush's conservative challenger, Patrick J. Buchanan, pasted the South with a blizzard of negative advertisements and caustic speeches.

Buchanan has since faded. But critics nodded knowingly early last month when, hours before the expiration of Bush's deadline for Congress to pass his economic-growth legislation, Teeter was still huddled at the White House with the chief of staff, Samuel K. Skinner, debating the timing and tactics of the president's response.

Bush had laid down his deadline 52 days earlier.

"There's much too much tactical figuring out what they're going to do in next 48 hours," the House Republican whip, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, said the next day. "They just do not understand the rhythm and strategy of organizing and building a nationwide grass-roots effort."

And yet, there is no ignoring Teeter's guiding principles: that primaries, public opinion and the economic angst propelling Bush's nose dive are transient; that people vote the long run, and that voters will conclude that in the long run Bush is superior to any challenger.

For one thing, Teeter is no novice. He has worked for the campaigns of every Republican president since Richard M. Nixon — six campaigns over 24 years.

He devised much of the 1976 Republican strategy that carried President Gerald R. Ford from 30 points behind in the polls to within an ace of Jimmy Carter.

For another, Teeter's cool approach is a proven winner. "There's no reason to make a drastic shift," he told The Detroit Free Press in May 1988, when he was the principal strategist for a Bush presidential campaign swooning in the polls against Dukakis.

And Bush won easily.

During an interview behind locked doors at Bush-Quayle headquarters, in a plain 12-story building four blocks from the Oval Office, Teeter predicted that this year's contest would be far closer. But he argued against making book against Bush just yet.

Two critical elements of the 1992 presidential race — the Democratic nominee and the state of the economy in the fall — are still a matter of guesswork, he said, and the underlying themes of the campaign are only now emerging.

Beyond the economy, he said, he detects new uneasiness about the future. He sees rising fear among middle-class voters that the nation's social fabric is unraveling, and a sense that their financial destiny has suddenly become hostage to events and economies far from their borders.

In Bush campaign parlance, the issues are "jobs, family and peace," and Teeter is excited about them.

"What you've got in that sense is a merger between the two historic big issues in American presidential elections, which are foreign policy and the domestic economy," he said. "I think there's nobody in the world better placed to integrate those two things and lead the country, based on his experience and ability, than the president."

Bush's experience, ability and vision are what Teeter intends to pound into the electoral psyche this spring. The messages will be blended like a fine recording so that Bush does not sound like a Johnny-one-note, too strident or obsessive on a single topic, but comes across as a reasoned, broad-minded leader.

Such insights have made Teeter perhaps the most respected campaign adviser in either party, although even the best can fumble.

Teeter was paid nearly $80,000 last fall to advise Dick Thornburgh, an old friend and Bush's former attorney general, who was running for the Senate in Pennsylvania.

Teeter told Thornburgh to run on his record as an experienced and able Washington hand, said one of Thornburgh's chief aides, Murray Dickman.

Thornburgh began his race in August with a 40-point lead in the polls. He lost in November by 20 percentage points to a Democrat who painted him as part of the Washington problem rather than part of the solution.

Teeter gave some of the best advice of the campaign, Dickman said. But in retrospect, he said, "all of us, including Bob, made a serious mistake" in not paying closer heed to the volatile mix of voter unhappiness toward the Washington establishment.

Clinton aides zero in on Washington, Congress

By John King
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton's voice problem gave George Stephanopoulos his first extended break from Clinton's side since controversy first rocked the campaign in January. But it was no holiday.

One of the campaign aide's first stops: Capitol Hill, where he lobbied for endorsements of Clinton's presidential campaign.

And he was hardly alone.

With their candidate grounded, Clinton aides fanned out across Washington to shore up support, repair weaknesses in their organization and sit down with national party officials to map plans for the fall.

And the effort brought results Saturday as House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri endorsed Clinton for the party's nomination, saying he would work "tirelessly" for his election.

The endorsement by Gephardt, who is the second-ranking House Democrat, was especially important to Clinton because it may prompt other members of Congress to do the same. Clinton "will be the kind of president the United States needs to recapture our economic strength and leadership," Gephardt said.

"Washington is alive with cherry blossoms and general election campaign thinking," Democratic National Committee communications director Mark Steitz said after meeting Friday with Clinton advisers.

"The primaries aren't over, but it's very helpful to at least glance part of an eye toward the fall campaign."

Clinton's five-day respite from campaigning was ordered by doctors, who warned the Arkansas governor non-stop speech making had severely strained his larynx and left him at risk of permanent damage.

He returns to the campaign trail Tuesday when his immediate goal will be a convincing win in the April 28 Pennsylvania primary to confirm his status as the probable nominee.

But even as they plan Pennsylvania, Clinton aides are spending more time looking ahead to the fall.

Their effort includes scheduling dozens of fund-raisers in April and May, efforts to mend fences with labor and other Democratic factions that supported rivals — particularly upscale Democrats who backed Paul Tsongas — and lobbying members of Congress and party officials who are delegates to the July convention.

"We want to avoid the mistakes of the past so we're trying to use this time to bring everyone together," said Clinton campaign manager David Wilhelm. "We want the convention to be the first event of the general election campaign rather than the last event of a vicious primary campaign."

The unity push is slowly gaining steam.

West Virginia Sen. Jay Rockefeller endorsed Clinton Friday and called on other Democrats to do the same.

"We cannot wait until July when we already know who has earned the right to be our nominee," Rockefeller said.

Clinton also won the backing of the 1-million member Service Employees International Union, which said it was time to rally around the candidate.

The endorsements fit the image of momentum and inevitability the Clinton campaign tried to project at the close of a week that included primary wins in New York, Wisconsin and Kansas.

Advisers believe Clinton will finish the campaign with enough delegates for first ballot nomination. But, should he be short, congressional and other "super delegates" could provide the margin, or in theory deny Clinton the nomination.

BUSH: President has limited contact with real world

rupt traffic.

The cocoon accompanies them everywhere, especially to their routine retreats. That's why, when Dr. Burton Lee, the president's personal physician, recommended recently that Bush take a stress-reducing vacation, he said that Camp David and the Bushes' seaside home in Kennebunkport, Maine, would not do.

Lee said Camp David "is part of the system, and he (Bush) is completely surrounded by the military and Secret Service." Similarly, at Kennebunkport, "the press sits right outside the gate, and so when he goes shopping, sees friends or out to dinner, everyone is right on him," the physician added.

The Bushes begin their days in Washington at 5:30 a.m. by having coffee and six newspapers The Washington Post, The New York Times, USA Today, The Wall Street Journal, the New York Post and the New York Daily News — delivered to their bedroom.

Barbara Bush sometimes walks her English springer spaniels, Millie and Ranger, around the White House grounds. Other times, stewards walk the dogs. Much of the time the canines run loose around the compound.

After working out in his exercise room, Bush spends most of the rest of his time on official functions. If there is no business lunch, he dines in a small study adjacent to the Oval Office. On occasion he goes to the residential suite or eats in the executive dining room known as the White House Mess.

He often entertains official visitors at dinner. Or, if the Bushes are alone, they eat meals prepared by the staff in the residential quarters.

Occasionally, after returning from a Camp David weekend, the Bushes prepare a simple Sunday night meal for themselves in their small kitchen. According to Anna Perez, the first lady's press secretary, Bush always clears his own dishes and puts them in the dishwasher.

But the Bushes are insulated from other features of everyday life.

They do not go to supermarkets; food is brought in by the kitchen staff. A round-the-clock medical staff is available on the premises to treat a common cold. Although the Bushes have a Ford pickup truck in Maine, the only vehicle that Bush drives as president is his golf cart at Camp David. Mrs. Bush's driver's license expired years ago.

When the president needs a new suit, he does not go shopping at a local department store, although he did visit a J.C. Penney store to purchase athletic socks last Christmas.

Instead, Bush chooses from a selection that his longtime haberdasher, John Adler, brings to the White House every few weeks from his Chevy Chase, Md., clothing store. Bush, a size 43-long, recently purchased a spring suit off the rack, and Adler had another made up for the president to his specifications.

Mrs. Bush tried once to shop at a department store, but reporters, photographers and Secret Service agents turned the outing into a mob scene. She now shops from home by catalogue or chooses from among clothing brought to the White House by designers.

However, Mrs. Bush manages a sneak shopping trip on occasion. She helped her daughter Dorothy pick out a wedding dress recently during a private visit to the studios of a posh Manhattan designer.

The president, an aficionado of trendy restaurants, eats out from time to time. But such forays become major logistical hassles.

An aide notifies a restaurant several hours in advance. Secret Service agents show up to survey the premises, and a White House chef is posted in the kitchen to supervise the preparation of the president's meal. He even tastes the food.

When the president shows up, usually in a large party, he takes one table, and others are reserved for the Secret Service and the "pool" of reporters and photographers who accompany the president everywhere.

Bush pays in cash, whips out his American Express card or asks that a bill be sent to his secretary, who mails back a personal check from the president. He tips at a rate of about 20 percent.

Last month the Bushes went to Red Sage, the capital's latest "hot" restaurant where the power elite reserve weeks in advance for tables. The owner-chef, Mark Miller, had been informed days in advance by former Bush aide Craig Fuller, who had already reserved a table, that the Bushes would be his dinner guests.

Even that adventure was different from what ordinary customers experience. Bush was treated to special fare prepared by Miller that included an exotic Southwestern sausage not available to the public.

When Bush visits his favorite Chinese restaurant, Peking Gourmet, in suburban Virginia, things are more relaxed because the Bushes have been eating there for years, says manager George Tsui.

When the Bushes need new furniture, they do not go to any well-known firm such as Ethan Allen.

Instead, White House Curator Rex Scouten and Mrs. Bush discuss what is available from a government warehouse packed with historical pieces and reproductions maintained especially for the White House.

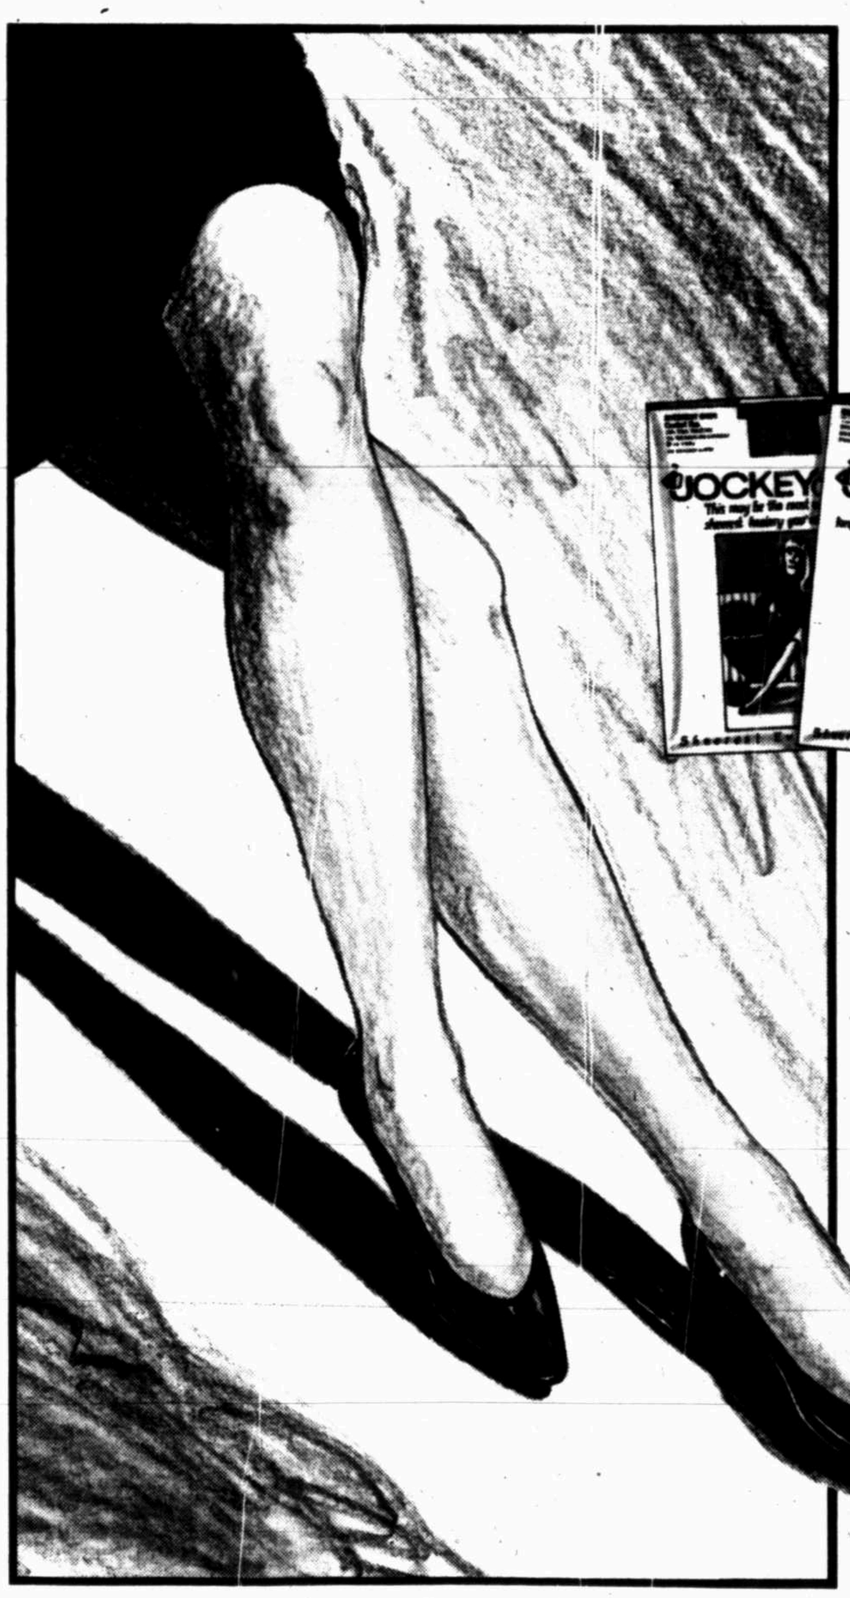

Perez said the Bushes do not complain about the fishbowl nature of their lives.

But Mrs. Bush, she reports, sometimes talks wistfully about "life after the White House, without the support system."

NATION

A winter-like storm dumped 6 to 8 inches of snow on northern New England Saturday, while gale-force winds whipped across the Great Lakes and thunderstorms brought hail as big as baseballs to parts of the Midwest.

Six to 8 inches of snow fell on northern Vermont during the morning, while most of the rest of the state got 3 to 6 inches. Snow also was heavy across parts of New York state, including Lake Placid, which got a half-foot.

Rain, heavy in many areas, also was recorded in parts of Vermont and New York and farther South across most of the Atlantic states, from New Jersey to Florida.

Warnings for gale force winds were posted across the southern half of the Great Lakes region and the northern coast of Washington state Saturday afternoon.

Rainshowers, hail, thunderstorms and snowstorms of varying intensity also hit much of the rest of the nation, including the Midwest, South, Pacific Northwest and parts of the Plains.

A thunderstorm in Kansas City, Mo., produced hail the size of baseballs.

By the end of the morning, rainshowers or thunderstorms extended over northern Missouri, northeast Kansas, the lower Ohio Valley, the Appalachian Mountains, parts of central Oregon and northern California.

Snow was falling on parts of the northern Rockies and Montana.

The morning low Saturday for the Lower 48 states was 7 degrees at Browning, Mont.

SEAT: Goulet seeks Wright's Precinct 1 post

(From 1A)

"I have always considered myself a fiscal conservative and a supporter of free enterprise," Wright said in 1985.

In requesting the voters' support, Wright said he would assure the voting taxpayers that their "trust will not be misplaced."

Goulet, a furniture refinisher and a Midlander since the end of World War II during which he served as an Army Air Corps combat bombardier, promised to bring common sense to county government.

Goulet said that he intends "to bring some of that common sense and horse sense to the Commissioners' Court" and intends to use "a little common sense, especially in the area of letting other elected officials do their jobs."

In his campaign, Goulet has been critical of Wright and other members of the Commissioners' Court for seemingly trying to control Sheriff Gary Painter's activities.

That control extends to the sheriff's former practice of going outside the bounds of Midland County to conduct reverse-sting operations to catch drug traffickers and to seize their money.

"I have a large backing from members of the Sheriff's Department," Goulet said.

However, Wright said that his stance in limiting the sheriff's activities to Midland County, except in qualified instances, such as hot-pursuit and under inter-local governmental agreements approved by the Commissioners' Court, "basically has been our (his and the sheriff's) only disagreement of any consequent."

"I have had an excellent working relationship with them (the sheriff and his deputies) and have been instrumental in upgrading law enforcement at every level, including working conditions and employee benefits," Wright said.

The principal controversy, resolved earlier this year, has focused on the sheriff's out-of-county sting operations and on the Commissioners' Court's limiting the sheriff on his use of vehicles and in realigning the sheriff's manpower.

A visiting Texas district court judge in this year virtually restricted Painter to Midland County in upholding a 1991 unanimous Commissioners' Court order that limited the sheriff's out-of-county travels.

However, the judge, Virgil Malanax of Gilmer, ordered the Commissioners' Court to stop interfering in the day-to-day operations of the Sheriff's Department and to leave the sheriff's vehicles alone.

"I would like to see Midland County abide by the law," Wright said of his opposition to the sheriff's out-of-county investigations and sting operations. "I would like to see Midland County keep its assets at home more frequently and participate with other counties on a networking basis" in the law-enforcement realm.

Wright and Goulet won places in the run-off by being the two top voter-getters in the March 10 first primary election.

Wright garnered almost 39 percent of the vote. Goulet took about 36 percent, an 43-year-old Deputy Sheriff Ron Harvel drew better than 25 percent of the vote. Harvel is supporting Goulet in the run-off election.

JUDGE: Two want 142nd District Court post

asked what votes he needs to win.

Ms. Sams expressed a similar view.

"I expect to get the vote of those who voted for me before and I hope to garner a few of Tom Bruner's supporters," she said.

During their campaigns, both candidates have contended that their law experience best qualifies them to be judge.

"I'm trying to focus on the fact that I'm the candidate with trial experience and have tried lots and lots of jury trials," Ms. Sams said.

Although Ms. Sams' experience is mostly in criminal law and Gilles' is predominantly in civil law, Ms. Sams said the most important qualification is not the type of law but trial experience — to serve as a trial judge.

Gilles has maintained that a varied legal background best qualifies him for the job.

"I think the message is basically the same: that I've got well-rounded experience and a broad-based experience," he said.

Gilles has practiced as an independent attorney in general law since 1980. From 1976-80, he was an associate with a law firm in Midland. He was a law clerk for the U.S. Attorney's Office, Northern District of Texas in 1975.

Ms. Sams has been a prosecutor for the District Attorney's Office since 1985, and has served as trial chief and, currently, is chief prosecutor for narcotics crimes. During her first couple of years with that office, Ms. Sams also ran a small private practice.

Before that, she was a special assistant to Secretary of State David Dean and later was a legislative assistant to Rep. Ashley Smith of Houston.

"She has some experience and I'm not going to take that away from her, but I feel I have more," Gilles said.

Ms. Sams emphasized her view that she has more useful experience for the position.

"I claim I have some civil experience like he claims he has some criminal experience," Ms. Sams said. But, she added, Gilles by his own admission has never tried a criminal jury trial.

Ms. Sams said being a prosecutor shows her interest in the safety of Midland, and has received support from the law enforcement sector. Gilles said he has had favorable feedback and support from the legal community.

IMPACT: CAF boosts Permian Basin economy

$40 million to $70 million.

"I think most people would consider that fluff," Jones said of the multiplier approach.

The actual-dollars approach, which often relies on estimates, is "more realistic," although "some people don't like to deal that way," Jones said. "They like to have the big-sounding figures."

The study was underwritten by the Phillips Petroleum Company.

The CAF relocated to Midland's Midland International Airport from Harlingen's Valley International Airport in 1991.

"This is a major contribution to the local economy of the Permian Basin by adding significant diversification," Jones said, "and is a real asset in our long-term movement toward a sound economic development base."

Beyond the 1991 economic impact, which the study said could vary from $9.6 million to $11.8 million, there is a major discrepancy — upward of $8 million per year — between the study and the CAF staff projections.

The study does not incorporate the impact of the CAF's day-to-day primary tourist attraction: the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

However, at the time of the study, museum-attendance figures were not available.

The museum alone is expected to generate $6 million and $8 million annually based on a projected billboard advertising scheme proposed by the CAF, according to Norma Webb, CAF director of marketing and communication.

The first-year $10-million CAF impact estimate is "very conservative," Ms. Webb said.

The 1991 construction included the CAF's World War II-style hangar and headquarters building and the conversion of the old Windecker Aviation Company building into the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

For a five-year period beginning in 1992, the study projects a $26.9-million to a $35.6-million economic impact or about $5.4 million per year. The yearly figure includes $700,000 in new construction.

But the CAF staff, figuring in the impact of the museum, would project from $57-million to $75-million economic impact over the same five-year study by adding in the museum's impact on the economy.

Properly advertised, the American Airpower Heritage Museum could attract about 200,000 visitors per year instead of the estimated 50,000 without, for example, highway billboard advertising, officials suggested. The high end of the influx of museum visitors would bring in an additional $8 million into the Midland-Odessa area each year.

The CAF headquarters and the museum formally opened last Dec. 7 in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and America's plunge into that World War II.

The mid-range current economic impact of the CAF includes construction, $5 million; air show, $2.3 million; spring Wings-N-Things fly-in, $384,000; CAF retirees, $150,000; motor-coach tours, $1.2 million; CAF expenditures, $933,060; Pearl Harbor Day ceremonies, $589,050; CAF General Staff Conference, $102,510.

Without including museum attendance, the study projects an almost $5.4-million economic impact of the CAF in each of five years: the October air show, $2.3 million; Wings-N-Things, $360,000; CAF retirees, $90,000; motor-coach tours, $809,835; CAF expenditures, $993,060; CAF staff conference, $100,470; new construction $700,000.

A breakdown of the $10.5 million 1991 economic impact, as viewed by the CAF, includes: CAF construction, $5 million; CAF AirSho'91, $2.3 million; CAF retirees, $150,000; motor-coach tours, $1.2 million; CAF expenditures, $933,060; Pearl Harbor Day ceremonies, $589,050; CAF staff conference, $102,510; museum visitors, $219,750.

AirSho'91 attendance was estimated at 92,000 people.

The 1992 projected impact of $11.2 million was computed by the CAF staff, which estimated $6 million to $8 million in revenue from visitors who tour the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

The CAF's projected 1992 economic impact of $11.2 million includes: museum visitors, $6 million; the October AirSho'92, $2.3 million; CAF retirees, $150,000; motor-coach tours, $1.2 million; CAF expenditures, $750,000; CAF staff conferences, $300,000; Wings-N-Things May 16-17 event, $500,000.

Since December, museum attendance has average 4,234 people per month, Ms. Webb noted. Attendance peaked in March, when 6,179 people toured the museum. January's attendance was about half that.

Of the museum visitors, about 75 percent are from outside the Permian Basin, Ms. Webb said. Based on 3,176 "outside" visitors per month or 38,112 per year, the yearly revenue generated by those "day trippers," spending $50 per day in the Midland-Odessa area, would total $1.9 million.

But the CAF's 1992 projected museum revenue, ranging between $6 million and $8 million per year, is based on attendance heightened three to four times by displaying CAF-museum billboards along Interstate Highway 20 between Van Horn and Abilene.

The attraction to the CAF flying events and to the museum by people both young and old, Ms. Webb said, seems hinged on "a child's natural fascination with airplanes that never seems to stop even when you grow up."

In computing the CAF economic impact, Jones and Terry in their study used, for example, a 92,000 attendance to the October AirSho during each of the next five years.

Of the 92,000 AirSho attendees, about 27,600 or 30 percent would be from out of town. Their impact by way of food, lodging and other expenses would be $2.3 million.

In wrapping up the study, Jones and Terry reported that the "potential impact of the Confederate Air Force is both exciting and promising to the Midland-Odessa area now and for many years to come."

Aside from the "tremendous" economic impact of the CAF, the CAF has "before it a sizeable, untapped tourism market that has not yet been fully exploited," the study said.

"With aggressive marketing throughout the state and region, not only will future impact be greater, but long-range productivity will thrive as well."

The Confederate Air Force and the Permian Basin may "enhance each other in many ways," the synopsis said.

"The CAF will bring in economic diversification as well as educational benefits, historical value and a sense of patriotism to the area.

"The Permian Basin in return will provide an environment and climate for the CAF conducive to the continued growth of a national treasure. Together, the CAF and the Permian Basin will collaborate to form a unique diversification to the local economy."

SPLIT: Panel divides over teen AIDS

unhealthy behavior should not discourage us as a society from promoting moral conduct."

The panel, led by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., described its report as the first comprehensive report on AIDS among teen-agers.

The prevalence of the AIDS-causing HIV virus is unknown among adolescents, the panel found. But the number of teens who have AIDS increased by more than 70 percent in the past two years.

AIDS is the sixth-leading cause of death among youth ages 15 to 24.

Among teens ages 13 to 19, there were 401 cases of reported AIDS in 1989, compared with 789 in 1991, the panel said, citing information provided by the federal Centers for Disease Control. Among those ages 13 to 24, cases increased from 5,524 to 8,949. Those figures don't reflect people with the HIV virus who have not developed AIDS.

The panel said that while the number of teen cases is relatively small, nearly one-fifth of all U.S. cases of AIDS occur among people in their 20s. Because the incubation period between infection with HIV and diagnosis of AIDS can be eight to 10 years, many may have been infected as teenagers.

The report said CDC requirements for basic educational materials are overly restrictive and avoid discussion of homosexuality and specific risky behavior. It said new CDC public service announcements fail to mention either condoms or sex.

The report also found:

■ Less than 5 percent of federal AIDS budget, excluding Medicaid, goes for research, programs or services that benefit teens.

■ By age 20, 68 percent of females and 86 percent of males are sexually active. Among sexually experienced teens 18 and 19, nearly 25 percent of females and 20 percent of males report having six or more partners. Only half reported using condoms at first intercourse.

■ There is no coordinated government effort targeting teenagers.

Major brings in two women in Cabinet shake-up

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister John Major on Saturday named a new Cabinet, bringing in two women and dropping several senior figures in a big shake-up following his Conservative Party's fourth straight election victory.

Major assembled a 22-member lineup that is somewhat more liberal than his previous Cabinet. It had been largely inherited from Margaret Thatcher, whom he succeeded 16 months ago before leading the party to victory in Thursday's national election.

Major dropped the former defense secretary, Tom King, 58, and the former home secretary, Kenneth Baker, 57, both close Thatcher aides.

The more liberal shift in the Cabinet was particularly reflected in the dismissal of Baker, a right-winger and strong critic of the November 1990 political revolt against Mrs. Thatcher.

He named Malcolm Rifkind, 46, a prominent Scottish Conservative and ex-transport secretary, as new defense secretary, and Kenneth Clarke, 51, as home secretary, a key job which includes responsibility for law and order and immigration.

The two women, health secretary Virginia Bottomley, 44, and employment secretary Gillian Shephard, 52, are the first women in the Cabinet since Mrs. Thatcher was ousted in a party revolt in November 1990.

In her 12 years as prime minister she named no other women to Cabinet posts.

Mrs. Bottomley is a former deputy health minister and the most prominent new appointee from the liberal wing of the party. Mrs. Shephard was a treasury minister in the last Conservative administration and a deputy chairman of the party.

The foreign secretary remains Douglas Hurd, 62, who has had he post since 1989.

The more liberal Cabinet lineup reflected Major's personal stamp after winning his own mandate.

IRA claims responsibility for bombing

LONDON (AP) — The IRA on Saturday claimed responsibility for a bombing in London's financial district that killed three people and left more than 90 injured. And it promised more attacks until British troops withdraw from Northern Ireland.

Friday night's business district bombing — and a second suspected IRA bombing at a major traffic junction early Saturday — came on the heels of the Conservative Party's surprise win in Thursday's elections. The attacks immediately put Northern Ireland on Prime Minister John Major's political agenda.

The financial district bomb, planted in a van, contained more than 100 pounds of explosives and was probably the biggest bomb ever detonated by terrorists on the British mainland, police said.

Commander George Churchill-Coleman of the police Anti-Terrorist Branch said the attack marked a "different dimension" in Irish Republican Army stragegy.

The IRA has claimed responsibility for previous recent bombings in London, mainly directed at rail lines. Those explosions left one dead and scores more injured.

Hard-line incumbents suffer in early Iran election results

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian voters have ousted many of President Hashemi Rafsanjani's opponents from parliament, the hard-liners' last major power base, according to early returns announced Saturday.

The results of Friday's balloting were expected to strengthen Rafsanjani's hand as he seeks to open up the country's economy and improve relations with the West.

The president's faction argues that economic reform and more foreign trade will help cure unemployment and inflation. But the radicals see ties to the West as a betrayal of the teachings of revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who died three years ago. This election was the first since Khomeini's death.

Reporting partial results, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said 103 candidates were elected outright to seats in the 270-member parliament, 57 of them new faces.

It was not immediately clear how many of those elected were Rafsanjani allies. The parliament was formerly overwhelmingly against him, however, and the numbers of non-incumbents pointed to a good showing for him.

In another 62 races, the Iranian news agency said candidates failed to get the required two-thirds of the vote, forcing them into a second-round ballot, the date for which has not yet been set.

Iran has 196 parliamentary districts, but the larger ones are allotted more than one seat. Candidates in Tehran, the largest and most important constituency, competed for 30 seats. The official media said the count was from 156 districts, but did not say which ones.

Rafsanjani's faction had been favored to do well in the vote. A week earlier, 1,000 candidates were disqualified by the pro-Rafsanjani Council of Guardians. Those barred included a number of Rafsanjani's most rabid critics.

That left 2,030 candidates competing for the parliament seats.

There are 30 million eligible voters in Iran, where anyone over the age of 15 can vote. No official turnout was provided on election day, but on Saturday, the Iranian news agecy said 13.1 million votes had been counted.

Vatican revokes status of 300 underground Czech priests

PRAGUE (NYT) — The Vatican has revoked the status of about 300 priests in Czechoslovakia who were secretly trained and ordained to keep the faith alive during the decades of communist rule.

Men who served as clandestine priests have been given until today to present themselves to their local bishops. Those who are not married have been invited to apply for ordination, which will involve tests of their knowledge of church teachings and liturgy and possibly some additional training.

Underground priests who are married have been told that they must give up performing duties of the Roman Catholic priesthood, but may work as deacons, assisting other priests or teaching. Or they may apply for ordination in the Greek Catholic, or Uniate Church, which is strongest in eastern Slovakia and allows married priests.

The ruling was delivered by the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the former Holy Office, and the Roman Catholic Church's final arbiter on questions of doctrine.

The Vatican's decision, which it said was based on doubts about the validity of the secret ordinations in Czechoslovakia, has been greeted with disappointment, and, in some cases, defiance, among those who were active in underground circles.

Many of those who accepted ordination as secret priests say they are being treated shabbily after years of personal sacrifice. While they took risks by tending to underground congregations, they say, some members of the official church were collaborating with the communist authorities, and sometimes even acting as informants. The ordinations were carried out by underground bishops beginning in the 1950s and continuing for up to 20 years.

Most of the secret priests toiled by day as workers or professionals, ministering to small religious communities and hospitals in the evenings and on weekends. In light of the pressures of that double life, some say, it is only normal that some of them married.

But there appears to be no chance that the Vatican will reverse itself.

Russian congress votes to require Yeltsin to resign post in 90 days

MOSCOW (AP) — Some members of President Boris Yeltsin's Cabinet said Saturday that they were considering resigning over the refusal by Russian lawmakers to give the president another six months to carry out his reforms.

Lawmakers rejected Yeltsin's appeal Saturday and ordered him to select a new Cabinet by July.

Yeltsin's Cabinet ministers denounced the resolution as a death knell for reforms. If they resign in protest, it could create the worst government crisis since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

Andrei Nechayev, the minister of economics, told The Associated Press that the Cabinet planned to hand its resignation to Yeltsin "with the request that he speak at the Congress and ask it to abolish this decision."

Communist lawmakers and other Yeltsin opponents at the Congress of People's Deputies have been trying to rein in the president and alter some of his market-reform policies, which have sent prices soaring across the former Soviet Union.

Yeltsin offered Friday to temper his reforms and eventually give up the job of prime minister, which also carries direct responsibility for the economy. But he has insisted on keeping the power to rule by decree and asked to remain prime minister until at least Sept. 1.

However, after a day of angry debate, the 1,046-member Congress rejected Yeltsin's compromise and approved an amendment that would require him to propose a new Cabinet and nominate a prime minister in three months.

The Congress approved the resolution 647-69 and then recessed until Monday. However, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov refused to sign the resolution, as required under parliament rules, until the session resumed.

Deputy Premier Yegor Gaidar — who lost his finance ministry portfolio in a pre-session Cabinet reshuffle — said the resolution would "block any cooperation with the world in the hopes of healing our economy."

Gaidar said he and other Cabinet members discussed with Yeltsin the possibility of resigning in protest. He refused to elaborate.

Iona Andronov, a pro-Yeltsin lawmaker from Moscow, said Yeltsin also was being urged to call new elections by State Secretary Gennady Burbulis.

Belgium lodges formal protest against Russian spying

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Belgium lodged a formal protest with Moscow on Saturday after Belgian authorities accused four Russians of spying.

Belgium made the accusation on Friday and gave the Russians 24 hours to leave the country. Two were Russian Embassy diplomats, and the other two worked at the Russian trade mission in Brussels.

Foreign Minister Willy Claes said in a radio interview Saturday that the alleged incidents were "totally unacceptable."

A Justice Ministry spokesman said Friday the government had uncovered a spy ring involving at least two dozen people, including journalists and members of the Belgian armed forces. The spying involved technological information for military use, the spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

Belgian authorities said the ring was set up by the former Soviet intelligence agency, the KGB. It had been operating for several years and continued to do so despite the collapse of the former Soviet Union, they said.

In the radio interview, Claes said: "I cannot hide my bitterness that at a time when we must convince public opinion that significant budgetary efforts must be made vis-a-vis (East European countries), they still find the money to finance activities we thought belonged to the past."

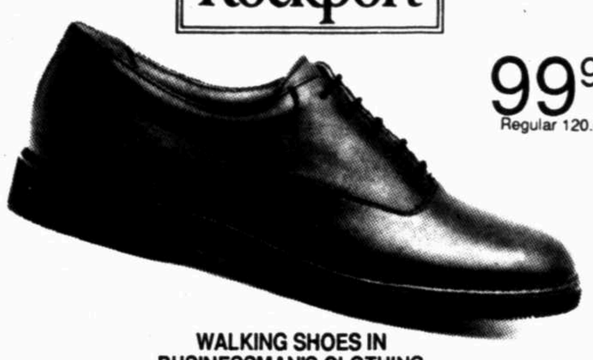

Claes said the spy ring jeopardized relations between Russia and the European Community.

On Friday, police raided homes in several Belgian cities, including Brussels, and brought 30 people in for questioning.

The daily newspaper De Standaard said Saturday that discovery of the ring was based on information provided by Vladimir Comopliev, a Russian who defected to the West several years ago.

The paper said one of its own reporters, Guido Kindt, 57, was a suspect.

Euro Disney expects strike on opening day

MARNE-LA-VALLEE, France (AP) — After five years of preparation and weeks of test runs, Euro Disneyland lets in the public today to see what all the fuss is about. But French officials, anticipating horrendous traffic jams, said to come and join the fun another day.

Officials confirmed Saturday that on opening day a rail strike was expected to close the commuter rail line that was extended specially to serve the $4 billion theme park 18 miles east of Paris.

"We've already found out that all the rides work, we've already found out that the food is delivered sometimes slower than we'd like," said Walt Disney Co. chairman Michael Eisner, on hand for the opening.

"Now we will find out how he deals with a strike," he said of James Cora, the Euro Disney vice president responsible for day-to-day operations at the park.

The Paris police chief, Pierre Verbrugghe, urged motorists to stay away today, saying that even a network of detours and deployment wouldn't suffice to prevent "lots of problems."

A government survey indicated 90,000 cars, carrying roughly 300,000 people, might head to the park — which has space for 11,500 cars.

Cora said he was likely to order a halt to admissions after about 50,000 to 55,000 people enter to prevent excessively long lines.

The opening festivities actually began Friday night, when the five completed hotels were inaugurated amidst a nighttime spectacle on an artificial lake in the heart of the complex.

A more lavish celebration unfolded Saturday night inside the park, before more than 12,000 invited guests and millions of international television viewers. Cher, Tina Turner and the Temptations were among the performers. The spectacle climaxed with a sky-filling fireworks display after Eisner and Walt Disney's nephew, Roy, cut a red ribbon opening the bridge to Sleeping Beauty's castle.

Though some French intellectuals and trade unions have accused Disney of cultural imperialism and heavy-handed labor practices, most French people seem excited by opening of the park. Officials estimate it will draw 11 million people in its first year of operation.

The work force of 14,000 hails from 63 countries, and collectively can speak 43 languages, according to Disney officials. French and English predominate on signposts and menus, but many of the attractions also offer Spanish, German and Italian.

The "cast members," as Disney calls its employees, had plenty of practice during two weeks of tests runs as 165,000 invited guests sampled rides, restaurants and hotels.

Food prices are similar to those in Paris — $1 for a cup of coffee, $6 for a chicken salad.

Rights groups question killings of Palestinians by Israeli agents

By Clyde Haberman
N.Y. Times News Service

JENIN, Israeli-Occupied West Bank — As a fruit-stand owner in the outdoor market remembers it, the men were leaning against a wall drinking juice when they suddenly called out to Bassam Fadi Shaban, who was standing yards away in the dusty street.

The fruit vendor recalls two men. Another merchant in the market says there were three.

Either way, their versions of what happened next that morning last November are essentially the same: The men shouted "Ba₀sam!" and drew pistols; then they ran up to Shaban and shot him at point-blank range. Then, according to these accounts, they finished him off, firing repeatedly at him as he lay on the ground.

The gunmen were agents of an Israeli undercover army unit working in the occupied territories. Shaban, 24, was on their wanted list as a member of the Black Panthers, an armed and violent Palestinian group affiliated with Al Fatah, the main faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

His death is typical of at least three dozen cases over the last year and a half, in which Israeli undercover units in the territories have killed wanted Palestinians under disputed circumstances. In recent weeks, these cases have begun to be studied with new intensity by Israeli, Palestinian and foreign human rights observers.

After several more such deaths in mid-March, Palestinian leaders charged that these units were carrying out "summary executions." That, witnesses here in Jenin say, is how they view what happened to Shaban.

"There was no need to shoot him like that," said the fruit vendor, who refused to give his name. "If they wanted to catch him, they could have. He didn't even have time to think."

This is not how the Israeli army tells the story. It readily acknowledges undercover soldiers dressed in civilian clothes killed Shaban, whom they had been trying to arrest for awhile on murder charges. But senior officers insist he was armed and he ignored a lawful order to halt. The agents, they say, used reasonable force to stop him.

In almost all the disputed cases, the military authorities say proper procedures were followed against armed and highly dangerous men, while Palestinian witnesses insist these men offered no resistance and could easily have been arrested instead of gunned down.

Sometimes, the Israeli agents appear to have made fatal errors. In Jenin recently, a man identified as Muhanad Turqman, 28, was killed when a bullet was fired into his head from a few feet away as he sat in the backseat of a taxi. When the undercover soldiers checked his identification papers, Israeli news reports say, they discovered they had gone after the wrong man.

In most cases, however, even Palestinian leaders do not argue those killed were innocents. Many belonged to the Black Panthers, a group that is conspicuously strong here in Jenin and in Nablus, both centers in the northern West Bank, and which has waged a death campaign, in particular against Palestinians accused of collaborating with Israel.

But Palestinians assert the agents are shooting on sight, with no questions asked.

Arafat's close call boosts his PLO standing

By Patrick McDowell
Associated Press writer

TUNIS, Tunisia — Yasser Arafat's narrow escape from death has boosted his sagging fortunes within the PLO, but raised concern over the future of the Palestinian movement without its charismatic guerilla-statesman.

Arafat's return to Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunis just three days after his plane vanished in a Libyan desert sandstorm reinforced his image as a survivor, a man of legendary luck.

Arafat on Saturday bearhugged Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and said that he was rapidly recovering from his injuries.

"I feel great," a waving, smiling Arafat told photographers and reporters as he began 20 minutes of talks with the Egyptian leader. The substance of the meeting was not made public.

The outpouring of relief and joy at PLO headquarters and in the streets of the Israeli-occupied territories when Arafat was found alive revealed the genuine, widespread affection felt for the man who has led the Palestinian movement for 25 years.

But in the 15 hours between the crash landing and Arafat's rescue, many Palestinians and others were struck by how much the Palestinian struggle and hopes for Middle East peace rest on the shoulders of one man.

"He is really the single most important support for the negotiations in the peace process," said Nabil Shaath, a senior adviser to Arafat. "This accident caused much anxiety."

When Arafat's plane vanished from Libyan radar screens, an urgent question arose for the PLO: Who could replace him, and how? There is confusion over how a successor is selected.

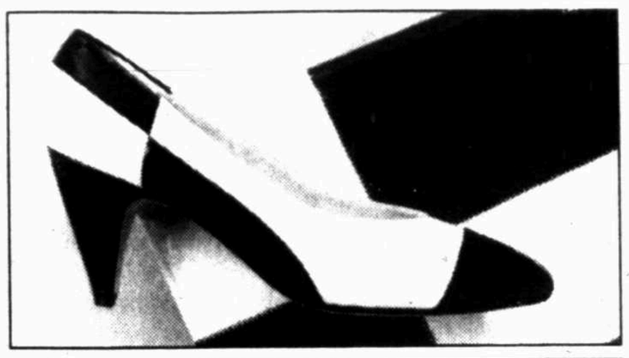

The Arabic daily An-Nahar in Jerusalem urged the PLO to elect a deputy chairman or set up a system for succession.

Shaath and Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi said a new leader could be chosen through elections or a vote of the Palestine National Council, the 450-seat parliament in exile.

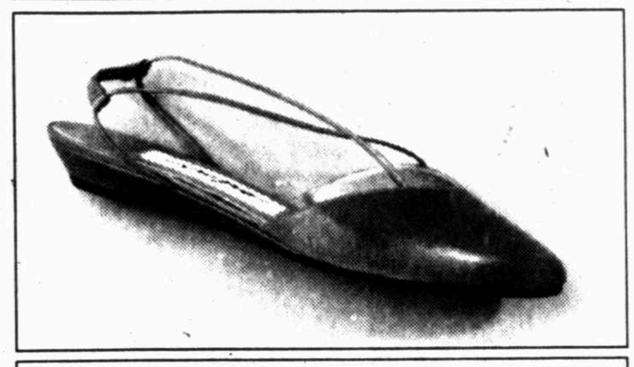

Applicants for the job of PLO leader should be politically cunning, charismatic and agile enough to retain the loyalty of Palestinians in the occupied territories.

Bush plans attack on how unions spend non-members' fees

WASHINGTON — In a move long sought by conservatives, President Bush will soon take steps to prevent labor unions from using money collected from non-union workers for political activities that those workers oppose.

The measures are intended, in part, to limit the activities of unions in support of Democratic candidates this year.

Labor leaders vehemently oppose the restrictions, saying the rules will impose an undue accounting burden by requiring unions to keep detailed records of spending in different categories. They also say Bush is pandering to the right wing and his plan would impede unions' legitimate political activities.

In a speech planned for Monday, Bush will describe his actions as a way to enforce a 1988 Supreme Court decision that held that workers who choose not to join a union may not be required to pay for any union activities other than collective bargaining and representation on labor-management issues.

White House officials estimate the president's actions will eventually keep $2.4 billion a year out of union coffers and in workers' pockets. The actual amount depends on many factors, including the number of workers who demand refunds.

A White House official said President Bush's actions would "protect workers' rights recognized by the Supreme Court" in the 1988 case, Communications Workers of America vs. Beck.

Harry E. Beck, an electronics technician whose feud with the union led to the 1988 decision, said he had been invited to the White House for Bush's announcement on Monday and he plans to attend.

Unions endorse Democratic candidates far more often than Republicans. "There's no doubt about that," said Laurence Gold, general counsel of the AFL-CIO.

But public opinion polls show Republican candidates have won about one-third of the votes of union households in recent congressional elections and slightly more than that in presidential races.

In many states, workers who do not belong to a union but are covered by a union contract may be required to pay dues or agency fees to the union.

Under the new policy to be announced by Bush, such workers may request and obtain a refund of any portion of their fees used to finance political work, lobbying, organizing activities or social and charitable events.

The refunds are not available to union members. A member of a teachers' union, for example, could not get a reduction in dues if he or she objected to the union's political activities.

But members could resign from a union and get a reduction in fees if they did not want to pay for its political activities. Or members could work within the union to change its policies through debate.

Virginia caucuses show Clinton with early lead

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Bill Clinton took an early lead in Virginia Democratic caucuses Saturday as the ailing Arkansas governor watched from home and presidential rival Jerry Brown campaigned in California.

Final results won't be known until Monday night when most of the state's rural caucuses complete their business.

With about a third of the results in, Clinton was winning with 43 percent to 35 percent for an uncommitted slate and 22 percent for Brown, according to state Democratic Chairman Paul Goldman.

Goldman said further Clinton gains were expected when more results were expected to come in late Saturday night from the Virginia suburbs near Washington D.C.

"There's nothing here to indicate that Virginia feels any differently than any of the other Southern states," Goldman said. The Democratic front-runner has swept the Southern primaries thus far.

"I think we're going to end up real strong," said Craig Sutherland, a Clinton organizer. "It's pretty much exactly what I expected."

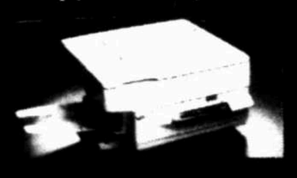

Goldman said 1,362 of the 3,500 local delegates to be picked in caucuses had been reported to party headquarters. Still to be heard from was Fairfax County, a populous suburb of the nation's capital.

About 68 percent of the delegate strength was to be decided in mostly urban and suburban caucuses Saturday with the rest being determined in mostly rural caucuses Monday night.

Brown, before leaving Virginia on Friday, appealed to Democrats to fight "against the odds" and support him in the caucuses.

1860 manuscript surfaces, illuminates disordered mind of Lincoln's assassin

By Herbert Mitgang
N.Y. Times News Service

In December 1860, more than four years before John Wilkes Booth assassinated Abraham Lincoln in Ford's Theater in Washington, the actor wrote a 21-page manuscript that showed his fanatical state of mind, his sympathies for the Southern secessionists and his association with the historical characters he portrayed in Shakespeare's plays.

In the view of Lincoln scholars, had these sentiments been known to the officials responsible for guarding the president, it is possible that Booth would not have had such easy access to the theater on April 14, 1865.

The manuscript, written in Philadelphia, was intended as a speech, but it was never delivered. Nor has it ever been published.

It was discovered last year in the theatrical archives of the private Players Club at 16 Gramercy Park South in Manhattan, the former home of Edwin Booth, the assassin's older brother, who was a better-known actor at the time.

"I think the JWB manuscript is a fascinating document," said David Herbert Donald, a Harvard historian, who is now writing a major Lincoln biography. "The 'speech' is revealing both of Booth's views on the secession crisis and of his disorderly, incoherent state of mind in this time of great emotional turmoil."

An undated note appended to the manuscript, written by Edwin Booth, reads: "This was found (long after his death) among some old play-books and clothes left by JWB in my house."

After sorting through the contents of his brother's trunk some time in the 1870s, Edwin Booth burned the costumes and clothes but saved the manuscript.

The manuscript, which is now being made accessible to scholars for the first time, was found by Robert Giroux, the editor and publisher at Farrar, Straus & Giroux, while he was combing through old documents at the Players Club.

"I had a bit of a shock when I realized that the initials JWB stood for John Wilkes Booth," Giroux said as he sat behind Edwin Booth's desk in a study overlooking Gramercy Park. A plaque in the room notes that Actors Equity was founded there in 1913. "Even though he was a rabid sympathizer with the secessionists, he believed he was defending the Union."

The manuscript is scrawled in heavy black ink, in rather erratic handwriting, with crossed-out words, misspellings and grammatical errors. It was written in the house of his sister, Asia Booth Clarke, in Philadelphia, where Booth and his mother were spending the Christmas holidays.

In the rambling manuscript, Booth calls himself "a Northern man" who intends to "fight with all my heart and soul — even if there's not a man to back me" — for equal rights and justice for the South as well as the North.

Referring to the secession of South Carolina, he says that "she is fighting in a just cause with God Himself upon their side." But he adds, "I don't believe that any of us are represented truly in Washington" because the men there are "Abolitionists."

Booth blames the cause of disunion on "nothing but the constant agitation of the slavery question." He claims that the South has "a right, according to the Constitution," to keep and hold slaves.

Furthermore, he says that the institution of slavery brings "happiness for them." True, he concedes, "I have seen the black man whipped but only when he deserved more than he received."

Attacking the "free press," he writes, "Is it not (what Shakespeare says of the drama) to hold as it were the mirror up to nature?" He accuses newspapers of telling "a hundred lies calculated to lead mankind into folly and into vice."

Somehow twisting the words of Iago in "Othello" to fit his own views on states' rights, he writes: "But he who steals my purse steals trash. It does more than that. It filches from me my good name. It induces my very servant to poison me at my meals, to murder me in my sleep."

At no point in the manuscript does Booth mention the president-elect's name. Lincoln had been elected a month before the Philadelphia meeting and was still in Springfield, Ill.

Maryland OKs nation's first gas-guzzler tax

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Maryland has agreed to slap an extra tax on gas-guzzling cars and give a tax credit on cars that get good gasoline mileage. It is believed to be the first state in the nation to approve such measures.

The General Assembly also voted Friday to raise the state gasoline tax by a nickel a gallon as part of $120 million in funding increases for transportation projects. Gov. William Donald Schaefer later signed the bill into law.

Robert Veit, public affairs manager of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association in Washington, said he knows of no other state that has a gas guzzler tax.

The penalty would not apply to trucks, vans, taxicabs and cars with disabled plates.

The bill is "a loaded gun that could devastate our industry," said Gerald Murphy, president of the Automotive Trade Association of the National Capital Area.

"I'd hate to be forced to give up my full-sized car," said an opponent, Delegate Ellen Sauerbrey, a Republican from Baltimore County. "If I'm ever in an accident, I'd rather be in my Buick than in a teeny-tiny car," she said.

Supporters said the gas-guzzler tax would help clean the air and reduce dependence on foreign oil. It would also raise as much as $20 million a year for mass transportation.

"It is economically, environmentally and socially responsible," said Delegate Gene Counihan.

The tax or credit would be applied each time a car is sold, when the buyer pays the state's 5 percent titling tax.

For the first two years, it would add $100 to the tax on cars getting less than 27 miles per gallon. It would reduce the tax by $50 on cars getting more than 34 mpg.

Beginning with the 1995 model year, the penalty would kick in at 26 mpg. There would be a $100 tax for every mile below that up to 1 percent of the value of the car.

Buyers of fuel efficient cars would get $50 off the titling tax for every mile above 34 mpg to a maximum of 1 percent of the value of the car.

Sentencing guidelines draw criticism

By David Margolick
N.Y. Times News Service

A five-year effort to make the prison sentences meted out in federal courts more uniform through mandatory guidelines has evoked a chorus of criticism from normally reticent judges of all ideological stripes.

The guidelines were the product of an unusual bipartisan coalition: liberals convinced that harsh sentences fell disproportionately on the poor and disenfranchised, and conservatives seeking longer, more certain jail terms.

But since they took effect in November 1987, another alignment has formed, composed of judges appointed by liberal and conservative presidents alike. The judges, many of whom opposed the guidelines from the start, say their direst warnings have come to pass, and that a foolish and illusory consistency has become the hobgoblin of the federal courts.

Proponents of the new sentencing system counter it has achieved its stated goal of making sentences less capricious, more uniform and more understandable.

But the guidelines, which require that all sentences be based on an increasingly complex formula involving the seriousness of the crime and a person's criminal history, have few defenders on the federal bench. Some judges liken them to Prohibition: a utopian experiment gone haywire.

They complain the new approach has taken the judging out of judging and replaced it with an oppressively mechanistic regime, one with the abstruseness of the Internal Revenue Code and overtones of Franz Kafka, George Orwell and Rube Goldberg.

A survey taken by the Federal Bar Council of New York, appearing recently in the New York Law Journal, found a majority of the city's federal judges believe that only one in four of the sentences they now impose are "fair and just."

Along with judges throughout the country, they maintain the guidelines shortchange specific offender characteristics like age, education and family ties.

By discouraging plea bargains and raising innumerable interpretive questions, these critics continue, the guidelines have clogged both the trial and appellate courts.

Dozens of variables, facts and definitions have become the subject of prolonged, repeated legal wrangling, with months or years of jail time hanging in the balance as lawyers and judges hold Talmudic discussions on such matters as what constitutes "brandishing" a weapon, whether a water pistol is a gun, and whether a person's role in a crime is "minor," "minimal" or somewhere in between.

Moreover, rather than eliminate discretion from the sentencing process, they say, the guidelines have merely moved it from judges, who exercised it in open court, to prosecutors privately deciding who to charge with how serious a crime and at what stage of the criminal act.

One of the most vocal critics of the guidelines is Judge Jose Cabranes of federal District Court in Connecticut, appointed by President Jimmy Carter in 1979.

Air Force confirms fighter pilots used amphetamines

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The Air Force has confirmed that some of its fighter pilots used amphetamines to stay awake during the Persian Gulf War, a newspaper reported.

"They did take them. ... They were used only under careful circumstances supervised by the flight surgeon," said Patti Turner of the Air Force surgeon general's office at Bolling Air Force Base in Washington, D.C.

The pilots took Dexedrine, a brand name for dextroamphetamine, to keep alert during flights longer than eight hours, Turner said in a story published in The News Tribune of Tacoma.

The Air Force wouldn't reveal the number of pilots using amphetamines, allow interviews with the pilots or say what type of aircraft they flew, the newspaper reported Thursday.

Side effects of amphetamines include dizziness, rapid heartbeat and muscle spasms. But they can be used safely to fight fatigue if given in limited doses for brief periods, said Albert Carlin, associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Washington.

Nation in brief

■ Alaska bans fishing, cites Exxon spill

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Alaska has issued an emergency ban on sport fishing of cutthroat trout in part of Prince William Sound, citing damage caused by the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill.

The ban on the west side of the sound takes effect Wednesday and continues until the end of the year, officials said Friday.

Also Friday, the state announced a ban on all fishing at Eshamy Creek and Green Island Creek, which are located in other areas of Prince William Sound. That ban lasts through June 30.

The area to be closed forms a giant funnel flowing southwest across the same path the spilled oil took, said area biologist Kelly Hepler. He said mortality rates of the trout were significantly higher in the spill's path than in other parts of the sound.

Nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil spilled into the Sound on March 24, 1989, when the tanker Exxon Valdez rammed a charted reef.

■ Brown vows to stay until convention

LOS ANGELES — Undeterred by his third-place finish in New York, former California Gov. Jerry Brown has vowed to continue his presidential campaign up to the Democratic convention.

But he toned down his comments against his rival, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, on Saturday and said he would unconditionally support the party's eventual nominee for president.

"This election is not about Bill Clinton or Jerry Brown," Brown said. "It is about taking back the country ... about taking back democracy"

As California Democrats held their annual convention at the Bonaventure Hotel in Los Angeles, Brown said in a fiery speech that he was trying to lead "a revolution to take back our party, our country, our democracy."

Later, at a news conference, Brown told reporters he had no plans to abandon his campaign and that he is is now focusing on the April 28 primary election in Pennsylvania.

"If we win in Pennsylvania, it will move the ball forward," Brown said, adding he must have a good showing in the remaining primaries if he is to have any chance of stopping Clinton.

For him to win the nomination, Brown said he will have to win all the remaining primaries and see Clinton stumble.

■ KKK leader pleads guilty to shooting

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A state Ku Klux Klan leader has pleaded guilty to shooting into a Nashville synagogue in June 1990, shattering a window.

Leonard William Armstrong, 35, of Lenoir City, about 140 miles east of Nashville, pleaded Friday before U.S. District Judge John T. Nixon.

The guilty plea was part of an agreement that U.S. Attorney Ernest Williams said was sealed. He wouldn't disclose details.

Armstrong, grand dragon of the Tennessee White Knights of the KKK, told the judge he wanted to intimidate the Jewish congregation. He faces up to 10 years in prison.

No one was inside the West End Synagogue at the time of the shooting. FBI special agent Utley Noble said Armstrong fired four shots into the temple with a handgun.

A juvenile pleaded guilty to a similar charge last year. Armstrong said he fired at the synagogue from the youth's car.

Deserter reflects on opposition to war, time in prison

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — An Army Reserve doctor who spent eight months in a military prison for desertion after refusing duty in the Persian Gulf War said she has one regret: Her peace protest went unheeded.

Capt. Yolanda Huet-Vaughn left the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth Monday and was reunited with her husband, David, and three children, aged 9, 6 and 3.

In an interview, she said she wants to continue her work as a peace activist and otherwise resume life's routine, though that may not be entirely possible. "I'm hoping things will quiet down," she said.

The day after she left prison, the Kansas Board of Healing Arts, the state agency that licenses doctors, moved to revoke, suspend or limit her medical license on grounds the 40-year-old family practitioner is a criminal and unprofessional.

"This is really not an action that belongs on their agenda," Huet-Vaughn said. "My medical care has never been in question. What is in question is my political views."

She plans to challenge that action in court.

Huet-Vaughn's opposition to the war was widely criticized and she found getting out her message difficult, she said.

"I wish I could have been more effective in disseminating the information about the alternatives to war and its disastrous environmental and political consequences," she said.

Huet-Vaughn joined the Reserves in 1977 while a student at Meharry Medical College in Nashville. Tenn.

She left the military in 1982 to work in public health but sought reappointment in December 1989 when the communist bloc was disintegrating and re-enlisted in July 1990.

Reduced payments cause doctors to cut back on Medicare patients

By Milt Freudenheim
N.Y. Times News Service

Many doctors in Manhattan, Miami and other places where medical care is expensive say they are curtailing services for the elderly because of sharp reductions in the payments they receive from Medicare.

Medicare payments used to be based on the fees doctors in an area customarily charged their patients.

But starting March 1, Medicare adopted a national payment schedule that sharply narrows the gap between more expensive and less expensive places.

For example, Medicare now pays $54 in Manhattan for an office visit for which doctors typically charge a patient under private insurance $80 to $110.

But doctors in Rochester, N.Y., where the average charge is only $38 to $43, now get $41 from Medicare.

And the government pays $2,068 for a hip replacement in Manhattan, compared with $5,900 charged many private patients there.

The government pays $1,874 for the hip procedure in Rochester, compared with $2,978 paid for private patients by Rochester Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

All told, Manhattan physicians must be willing to accept payments for Medicare patients that are 50 to 60 percent less for some common types of office visits and surgical procedures, said Amy Schwartz, associate director of the New York County Medical Society.

As a result, a number of doctors in high-cost places said in interviews that they had decided to refuse new Medicare patients. They also said they would no longer provide advice by telephone to current patients, as they traditionally have without charge, asking the patients to come in for appointments instead.

Other doctors say they are changing jobs or retiring early. And some health-care experts say one danger is doctors might begin to charge their privately insured patients more to offset the effects of the Medicare cuts.

"I can't afford to take care of any more Medicare patients," said Dr. Margaret Lewin, a Manhattan internist. She said her costs amounted to $329 an hour — for salaries and benefits for five medical and office assistants, equipment maintenance and depreciation, supplies, insurance and rent for her upper East Side office.

Doctors and other experts warned Medicare could be following the path of Medicaid, the program for low-income people that pays doctors even less than Medicare.

Woman douses body with gas, threatens fire

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who said she was protesting the use of tax dollars to support war drove a van to the United Nations on Saturday, doused herself with gasoline and threatened to set herself on fire, police said.

Police hostage negotiators covered from head to toe by silver heat-retardant suits surrounded the van and attempted to talk her out, said police spokeswoman Sgt. Tina Mohrmann. Several emergency vehicles also were on the scene.

Blocks were placed under the van's tires so it couldn't be moved.

The woman was identified through a license plate check as 41-year-old Linne Gunther of San Lorenzo, Calif.

Mohrmann said the woman pulled into the circular driveway outside the U.N. at 11 a.m. She got out, poured gasoline over her body and climbed back into the van, locking its doors.

She threatened to ignite herself, and the standoff began. She claimed to be holding two disposable lighters, one in each hand, said Deputy Police Commissioner Suzanne Trazoff.

As darkness fell, Trazoff said negotiators were making no progress.

The woman asked to see media coverage of her protest.

"She's protesting American taxes going towards the Persian Gulf War and asking for tax amnesty for those who oppose war," Wrensen said.

Doctors seek cause of mystery illness

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Doctors ran a battery of tests on about 100 Army reservists Saturday, seeking a clue to what caused a mystery illness that has sickened the soldiers since their return from the Persian Gulf War.

A team of doctors from Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington compiled medical histories and conducted blood, urine and enzyme tests on soldiers from the 123rd Army Reserve Command, based at Indianapolis' Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The reservists have reported such symptoms as hair loss, muscle aches, chronic fatigue, thick saliva and aching teeth and gums.

The 1,500-member 123rd sent soldiers to five locations in Saudi Arabia during last year's war.

"It's only natural for some to conclude that these ailments are connected to service in the Persian Gulf area, but there is no proven connection at this time," said Col. Norman Teer, head surgeon for the 123rd.

"I'm not concerned something serious is going around. I haven't found anything that would make me strongly suspicious," he said.

Some afflicted reservists speculated their illness may have been caused by an experimental anthrax vaccine administered to prepare them for possible germ warfare.

"We all got that anthrax shot, so they can't explain it away (that) just everyone's getting this battle fatigue or whatever," said reservist Joe Mulfinix.

The symptoms developed within six months of the reservists' return from the Persian Gulf. About 60 reservists initially complained of feeling sick, but officials say the number of complaints has risen to about 100.

So far, no complaints have come from units outside Indiana.

Medical results are expected in two to three weeks, with follow-up tests planned over the following six weeks, said Maj. Robert DeFraites.

Critics decry higher ed 'pork barrel' projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Money set aside by Congress for projects at specified colleges and universities rose to at least $684 million this year, a 39 percent increase that has some critics decrying "pork barrel science," an education journal reports.

The money for fiscal 1992 was earmarked, a way of using appropriations bills to channel dollars directly to college programs, bypassing the normal competitive reviews by which the merits of all other projects are judged.

In a survey prepared for publication this week, The Chronicle of Higher Education reported that the amount set aside for specific schools has tripled since 1988, when $225 million was earmarked. The fiscal 1991 total was $491 million.

The spending increases on these programs occurred as the government tried unsuccessfully to get the growing budget deficit under control.

"These numbers are really extraordinary; I think its a lousy way to do business," said Robert M. Rosenzweig, president of the Association of American Universities.

"It's a way of spending money for science that avoids all of the difficult questions of quality and simply allocates money for science on the basis of political influence," he said. "And when you are talking about science, it really does make a difference who does the work."

Some defenders say it's simply a sign that many colleges and universities — especially smaller ones — are strapped for money during a recession and are understandably turning to their representatives in Congress for help.

Panama offers Noriega ranch to San Diego Zoo

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Panamanian government has offered to turn over a ranch formerly owned by Manuel Noriega to the San Diego Zoo, a zoo official said.

Officials have not decided whether to take over the ranch, located near the Panamanian town of Potrerillos close to the Costa Rican border, San Diego Zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said Friday. The 200-acre ranch is worth an estimated $1.6 million.

The property would provide a rare chance to study tropical wildlife in its natural habitat, said Ruben Carles, Panama's comptroller general, who made the offer during a meeting of scientists from five zoological institutions last week.

"It was an informal offer," said Rick Barongi, of the San Diego Zoo. "I told him that yes, we appreciated the offer but that I doubted the San Diego Zoo or any other zoo would have the resources to run such an estate."

The Panamanian government pays about $2,000 per month to maintain the ranch, one of five ranches seized by the civilian government after Noriega's ouster.

Noriega was convicted by a jury in Miami on Thursday of drug-trafficking, racketeering and money-laundering.

Blast lifts Lee over MHS

■ Sean McIntosh slams a game-winning home run over the right-field fence as the Rebs drop the 'Dogs, 5-4.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

When the words "Big Mac Attack" emanate from Midland Lee baseball fans, it doesn't mean they're hungry for any fast food hamburger. It means Rebel first baseman Sean McIntosh is at bat.

Saturday, McIntosh catered to the Lee fans and his teammates by delivering a two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning against cross-town rival Midland High, capping one of the better-played high school games of the year for a 5-4 Rebel win at Johnson Field.

"It's the biggest home run I've ever hit that really meant something — the one with the most importance and had an impact on the game," said the 6-0, 190-pound junior, who turned in his fifth home run of the season with his 350-foot shot to right field.

None of the estimated 225 fans at the game would question that statement.

The game was for more then local bragging rights, as the Rebels used their third win this year over MHS to move to 4-3 in District 4-5A play and 10-8 overall. The Bulldogs, who were tied with Lee and Abilene High as the day began, fell to 3-4 and 7-13.

And after McIntosh drilled the 0-1 fastball he got from Bulldog pitcher Mario Rodriguez, the 4-3 lead MHS had worked Marshman scored with just under 13 minutes remaining in the game as Plano earned its second consecutive University Interscholastic League boy's soccer championship.

Grapevine, which attempted only six shots on goal, ended the year 26-1, and Plano, which tried 16 shots, finished 20-3-2.

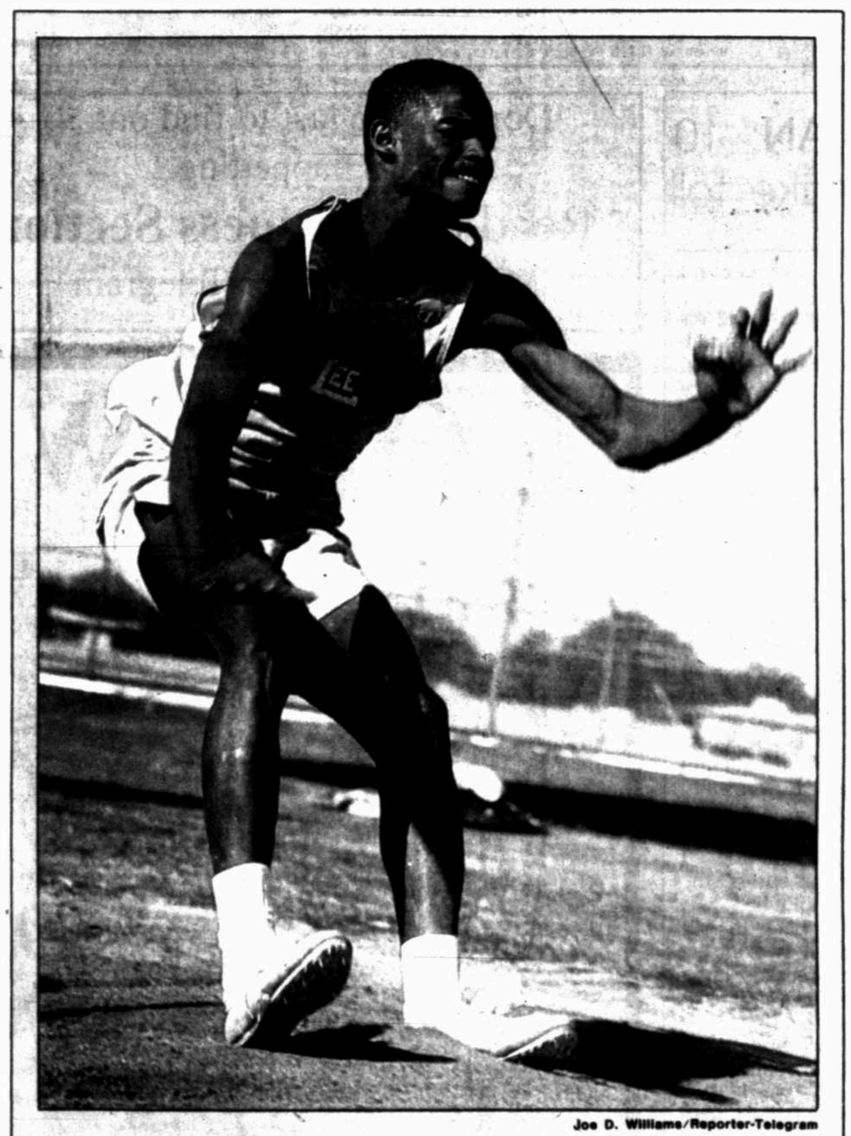

Marshman was named to the All-Tournament team, joined by teammates Sean Higgins and David Hooper, both midfielders, and fullback John Holman.

Permian struggles to win Tall City Relays

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

With only four teams entered, Midland's Tall City Relays Saturday at Memorial Stadium wasn't exactly the premier event in the state, but there were enough strange happenings to make it interesting.

As expected, Odessa Permian won the team title with 206 points, but it had to be Mojo's worst outing on the track this year. Permian coach Waymond Griggs can't feel too good about heading into next weekend's all-important District 4-5A run in Abilene after what he saw Saturday.

Midland Lee placed second with 123 points while Midland High had 97 and San Angelo 85.

Permian will be seeking its seventh consecutive 4-5A team championship next Saturday at Abilene Christian University, but in the Tall City Relays, the Panthers were beaten in the Texas All-Stars pull away for 115-103 win over USA

■ Western Junior College Athletic Conference alums provide much of the action in Texas' 115-103 win.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The Texas All-Stars turned on the offense in the final two-and-half minutes Saturday night, handing the USA a 115-103 loss in the seventh annual Texas-USA Junior College All-Star basketball game at Chaparral Center.

Texas, led by Most Valuable Player Terry Alexander of South Plains College, scored 13 of the game's final 15 points to ice the win.

It was the second consecutive victory and the sixth in seven games for the Texas team.

The Texas stars held their slimmest lead of the second half, 102-101, before turning on their game-winning offense.

"There were three things we talked about," said Texas head coach Roy Thomas, of Tyler Junior College. "Have fun, play hard, and play together. I'm normally too serious-minded to be in an All-Star game, but this is a great promotion for junior college basketball."

The Texas stars, who came out for the second half with a 58-56 lead, never lost the lead in the game's final 20 minutes. The first half, though, was a different story. The two team's had traded the lead 10 times and fought to six ties by the mid-way point.

Midland College sophomore guard Chris McKinney, who came off the bench, contributed 14 points — 12 in the second half — for the Texas team. The East St. Louis, Ill., native was one of seven Texas players in double figures.

"In the early going, I was still in a daze about just playing in this game, and wasn't concentrating," McKinney said of

Angels get first win, 5-4

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — A ninth-inning double play started by Midland second baseman Terry Taylor preserved a 5-4 come-from-behind win for Midland Saturday night, the Angels' first win of the season.

Taylor scooped up a grounder hit by Missions' pinch hitter Chris Morrow, tagged Garey Ingram who was on his way to second, and threw to first to end the second game of the Angels five game road trip in the Alamo City.

Ironically, it was Taylor who was the base runner tagged out on the same 4-to-3 double play combination an inning earlier.

Midland's Marvin Cobb picked up his first win in relief. Closer Darryl Scott came on in the ninth to pick up the first save of the year for the Angels.

Elsewhere, Wichita shut out El Paso, 1-0; Arkansas was also blanked, 9-0 at the hands of Shreveport, and Tulsa downed Jackson, 9-2.

Trailing 4-2, the Angels tied the game in the top of the sixth when a Bobby Jones single scored Matt Stark, and a single by Ray Martinez scored J.R. Phillips.

Foreman just escapes Stewart

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Father Time nearly caught up with George Foreman Saturday night.

Bruised and battered, blood flowing from his nose and mouth, Foreman looked every bit his 43 years as he barely escaped a brutal slugfest to capture a narrow 10-round majority decision over unheralded Alex Stewart.

Although he knocked Stewart down twice early in the fight, it was Foreman who looked like the loser as the fight ended, with both eyes nearly swollen shut and his face a misshapen mess from taking the younger Stewart's punches.

"I didn't want to hurt the kid and now the kid hurt me," Foreman said. "I could see but it was like watching 'Tales of the Crypt.'"

Foreman, going the distance for only the third time since beginning his comeback five years ago, dominated the first few rounds and seemed on the verge of ending the fight after knocking Stewart

RELAYS: McLeod turns in best distance of season

sprint relay by Midland High and sophomore sensation John Williams, who figured to be a shoe-in Region I qualifier in both the 100 and 200, was beaten in both races.

Permian's Lavorik Robinson beat Williams in both the 100 and 200. Williams was only a fourth place finisher in a weak 200 field.

It was the Bulldogs' victory in the sprint relay that came as a big surprise as Permian continues to seek a replacement for the injured Gerrod Bergen. MHS ran a season best 42.78 with a good first leg by Marcus Anderson and a strong finish by anchor Thomas Acrey.

"This is the team we will have for district with Acrey back from injury and I thought we should have had this kind of time a couple of weeks ago," said MHS track coach Farris Strambler.

"They (Permian) weren't expecting us to win. I think we shocked them a little," said MHS' Watu Todd, who ran the third leg behind Robert McKee.

Todd also won the high jump with a meager 5-10, saying, "I was in the lead and we just stopped at 5-10. I could have jumped higher, but they told me to go on and run the quarter in the prelims."

Lee's Scott McLeod continued his quest to repeat as a Region I qualifier in the shot put, beating San Angelo's John Green for the second time in as many meetings with a season best 54-9¼.

"I'm happy that I got a better throw than the last time at San Angelo, but I had 10 throws in a row over 55-feet in practice last week. I really want to hit 56 next week," McLeod said.

Lee's K.C. Jones, who is headed for Miami and a college football career next year, entered his first meet of the season and had a third place 52-4¼, but is undecided about throwing next week.

"I don't know if I will throw or not at Abilene," Jones said. "What I had today wasn't very good."

Lee's Michael Nunn, a sophomore, could be a rising star in the triple jump. He won with a 42-0½ and is expected to make a strong Region I bid next week.

"I had a 43-7½ at San Angelo, but I didn't do that well today," Nunn said. "I've beaten most of the people in the district, so I have a shot."

But Nunn, who also won the long jump with a 21-10½ got some unexpected competition from the junior varsity division triple jump where Midland High's Roy Ratliff had a 42-10, a jump that would have won the varsity division.

"He should have been in the JV division. He's jumped only 40-feet this year. I didn't expect that," Strambler said before adding, "He'll be jumping at the district meet next week. You can bet on that."

Lee's Martin Lattibeaudiere, with a 41-10 second place finish in the triple jump, and Tony Olivas, with a 143-4 in the discus, kept their hopes alive for district competition next week. MHS' Chris Anderson also had a second place 10:53.10 in the 3200 while Lee's Marlon Henry had a second place in the 200. Henry and Anderson both beat Permian's Williams for the first time this year.

Permian won eight of the 16 events while Lee and San Angelo won three each and Midland High took two events.

Midland High ripped off 204 points to win the junior varsity division while Permian had 62 points, Lee 29 and San Angelo 25.

MASTERS: Woosnam slips back

complete the third round, followed by the final round Sunday afternoon.

When they straggled away from Saturday night, the leaderboard showed these standings:

— Parry, 11 under par with four holes to play.

— Ray Floyd, 9 under with four to play.

— Fred Couples, 9 under with four to play.

— Ian Baker-Finch, 9 under, round completed.

— Nick Price, 8 under, round completed.

— Jeff Sluman, 7 under, round completed.

— Bruce Lietzke, 7 under, round completed.

— Ted Schulz, 7 under with two to play.

Conspicuous by his absence is defending champion Ian Woosnam of Wales, who shared the lead with Parry at 10 under par when the approaching storm prompted cautious officials to call play at 2:33 p.m.

When they returned to the course almost three hours later and in a light rain, Woosnam immediately double bogeyed the next two holes and all but eliminated himself from any chance of retaining the title.

He was 6 under par with five holes to play, leaving a 5-foot putt on the green to be finished in daylight Sunday.

Woosnam was picked up on the course by a club automobile and fled immediately without comment.

But his decline — three putts after being bunkered on the fourth, and a snap-hooked drive into an unplayable position on the fifth — raised the possibility of a brand-new Masters champion.

Or the oldest of them all.

Parry, playing in only his second Masters, Couples, Baker-Finch, Price, Sluman, Schulz and Lietzke have never worn the Masters green jacket. Of that group, only British Open champion Baker-Finch has won a major.

And then there's Floyd, the 1976 Masters winner and the 1990 playoff loser, holder of two PGA Championships and the 1986 U.S. Open crown.

At 49, he's bidding to become the Masters' oldest winner.

But those thoughts were far from his mind when he, too, made a fast exit when darkness descended through the Georgia pines.

"I'm soaked. I'm chilled. I'm out of here," was Floyd's only comment.

Couples, who has dominated world golf with five victories and almost $2.4 million in earnings since last June, noted the discomfort was not restricted to the players inside the ropes.

"A lot of spectators fell down, slipping and sliding on the slopes," Couples said.

"But a lot of golfers fell down, too."

Parry, 26, who plays mostly on the European tour, was among them.

He also fell victim to a double bogey when he and Woosnam came back from the rain delay. Like Woosnam, he was bunkered and then three-putted.

JUCO: New Mexico JC guard comes alive off bench his two points in the first half. "But between Robert Shannon (of Odessa College) and me, one of us had to have a good game for the home town people.

"I thought I played good. I didn't play selfish or unselfish. I took what was given to me, and my teammates helped me out a lot."

OC's Shannon was held to four points, but did lead Texas with 10 rebounds.

Eastern Utah's Kris Hill, who had a double-double with 17 points and 14 rebounds, was voted the USA team's Most Valuable Player. New Mexico Junior College's 5-7 point guard Greg Brown was high-point man for the USA with 19 points. Five other USA stars scored in double figures.

Brown, who has verbally committed to the University of New Mexico, played well in front of both UNM head coach Dave Bliss and his JUCO coach Ron Black, of NMJC. The diminutive and speedy Albuquerque native was 5-of-6 from the field and 2-of-2 from the line for 15 points in the first half. Eight of those points came in a 2½ minute run as soon as Brown came off the bench at the 14 minute mark.

"It was a typical All-Star game," said Charles Anderson, 11-year head coach at Aquinas (Tenn.) Junior College, who coached the USA team. "The guys who were supposed to shoot well didn't. If they would have, we would have won the game.

"Our inside guys played better than our outside people and that wasn't supposed to happen."

Anderson coached Aquinas JC to the 1991 National championship. Shon Peck-Love, a 6-8 forward who scored 18 points and seven rebounds in Saturday's game, led Three Rivers, Mo., to the '92 NJCAA title last month.

FOREMAN: 10 rounds take toll

down twice in the second round.

But Stewart began using his superior quickness in the middle rounds and soon Foreman found himself taking more punches than he was throwing as first his right eye and then his left began swelling shut.

By the seventh round, the fight had turned, and Stewart was landing almost at will on the advancing Foreman, whose stiff left jab of the early rounds had escaped him and who was tiring badly.

After rallying in the eighth round, Foreman looked like an old fighter in the ninth as his right cheek puffed out at an odd angle as if his jaw was broken and blood began spurting from his nose and flowing into his open mouth.

"I've heard of fighters bleeding before," Foreman said. "I saw blood coming out of my nose and said, 'Can't be.'"

Foreman came back to win the 10th round on two of the three ringside scorecards, but a point deduction for a low blow nearly cost him the fight.

Judges Art Lurie and Dalby Shirley both had Foreman winning 94-93, while Patricia Jarman had it even at 94-94. The Associated Press had Foreman ahead 96-92.

"I should have let it all hang out in the last round," Stewart said.

Don't be the last to find out what's happening.

Conner loses another chance to enter America's Cup finals

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is coming down to sudden death for Dennis Conner in the America's Cup.

Bill Koch's America3 Foundation moved a step closer to locking out Conner from the defender final when the yacht America3 (America Cubed) beat Conner's Stars & Stripes by 44 seconds in the 11th race of the semifinals on Saturday.

Conner, the defending America's Cup skipper, failed for the second time to clinch a spot in the finals. He also could have wrapped it up on Wednesday, but lost to America3 by 2:08.

Conner's only hope to avoid a sail-off on Monday is to have Kanza beat America3 on Sunday. That's an unlikely scenario because the America3 Foundation, headed by the multimillionaire Koch, wants to get both of its yachts into the finals.

Although the America3 Foundation denies fixing races between America3 and Kanza, America3 has won the last two intramural matches, including by 10 minutes on Friday.

"We obviously want America3 to win (Sunday), so I'll probably be putting our best helmsmen on it and our best trimmers and stuff," Koch said. "I will tell you that in our camp, it's really hard to pick an 'A' team. We have to flip a coin in many cases. What we've been doing is rotating a lot of people in.

"We have what the Celtics used to call a lot of good sixth men. They can go in and play just as well as the first team can. That's been one of the philosophies of our program."

So if America3 wins Sunday, it will have five victories, all in this round, and will clinch a finals spot. That will leave Kanza and Stars & Stripes to race Monday for the other spot.

Kanza and Stars & Stripes have five victories apiece. Kanza entered the round with two bonus victories and Stars & Stripes one. The bonus victories don't count when determining tiebreakers.

"Nothing's really changed; we only need one more win to get in," Conner said. "We would have liked to have it today, so we'll just have to wait until Monday to get it. But it's going to make great theater and this is what the America's Cup is all about.

"I'd like to congratulate Bill and his guys today," Conner said. "They made a real nice comeback under tough circumstances. If they beat us, that's what they're going to need to have a successful defense."

Conner has been in the last four America's Cup finals dating to 1980, winning three times and losing once.

"There's no quit in these guys," Conner said of his crew. "We're going to take them on Monday."

America3, steered the whole way by Buddy Melges, went ahead for good after a tacking duel on the second beat to windward, the fourth lead change on the first three legs. America3 covered to 20.03-mile course in 2 hours, 24 minutes, 54 seconds.

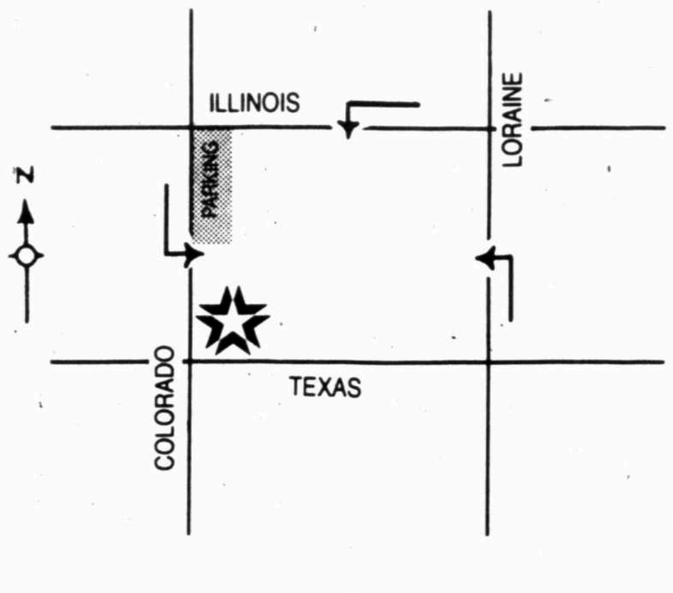

America3, the third of four America3 Foundation yachts, led by 20 seconds at the sixth mark.

It increased its advantage after catching a wind shift sailing upwind for the final time and led by 65 seconds around the seventh mark despite dumping its spinnaker pole into the water preparing for the sail change.

Mavericks stun Rockets, 99-92

Associated Press

NBA

HOUSTON — Rolando Blackman scored 30 points and Rodney McCray had the fifth triple-double of his career Saturday night as the Dallas Mavericks ended their club-record 26-game road losing streak with a 99-92 victory over the Houston Rockets.

The loss prevented Houston from building on its half-game lead over the Los Angeles Lakers in the race for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference. The Lakers lost, 93-90, to Utah on Saturday afternoon.

McCray had 13 points, 13 rebounds and 11 assists before fouling out. Blackman then took over, scoring nine of Dallas' last 12 points to hold of the Rockets.

Sleepy Floyd scored 22 points, all in the second half, as Houston wiped out most of a 19-point deficit, drawing to 92-90 on a pair of free throws by Floyd with 3:57 left in the game.

The Rockets did not score in the last three minutes, however, missing four three-point shots in the final seconds.

Hakeem Olajuwon, with 19 points, 13 rebounds, five blocks and five steals, and Otis Thorpe, with 18 points and 13 rebounds, also helped in the comeback.

Floyd had 10 points, two assists and a steal in a 17-4 third quarter run as Houston cut the Mavericks' lead to 72-66 with 1:30 left in the quarter.

Jazz 93, Lakers 90

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Karl Malone scored 27 points and grabbed 11 rebounds and Mark Eaton made a criticial dunk with 11.5 seconds left as Utah beat the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Lakers' streak of 15 consecutive playoff appearances was further jeoporized with the loss. Los Angeles began the day a half-game behind Houston for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff spot.

Utah, which won its third straight and its 200th under coach Jerry Sloan, also clinched playoff spots for Seattle and San Antonio.

Tyrone Corbin scored 21 points as a reserve, matching Utah's season-high for bench players.

Heat 105, Magic 101

MIAMI — Glen Rice scored 31 of his team record 46 points in the second half to lead Miami over Orlando, keeping the Heat's Eastern Conference playoff chances alive.

Miami, 37-42, trails New Jersey and Atlanta by a half-game for the eighth and final playoff spots from the East. The Nets, 119-98 losers at Atlanta on Saturday night, and Hawks both have four games remaining, one more than Miami.

Nick Anderson led Orlando with 34 points, including a 3-pointer with 1:30 to play that drew the Magic within 102-101. Anderson had a chance to give Orlando the lead after a Miami miss, but his jumper was off the mark.

Bimbo Coles then hit one of two free-throws for Miami, making it 103-101 with 12.6 seconds left, and Rice grabbed his ninth rebound following a missed layup by Brian Williams at the other end to all but seal the outcome.

Kevin Edwards hit two free throws with 2.2 seconds left to close the scoring. Edwards, with 16 points, was the only other Miami player to score in double figures.

Atlanta 118, New Jersey 98

ATLANTA — Kevin Willis had 22 points and 15 rebounds to lead the Atlanta Hawks past New Jersey, leaving the teams in a tie for the last two playoff spots in the Eastern Conference.

Atlanta, which won 104-97 at New Jersey on Tuesday night, has beaten the Nets 18 consecutive times at The Omni. The teams have 37-41 records with four games to play.

Willis' tip-in snapped a 46-46 tie and the Hawks outscored the Nets 13-6 over the final four minutes of the first half to take a 59-52 halftime lead. Willis and Duane Ferrell scored five points apiece in that stretch.

Willis added eight points in the third period as Atlanta expanded its lead to 85-73 by the end of the third period. The Hawks stretched their lead to 103-85 with 3:37 to play.

Bulls 108, Pacers 106

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half and Scottie Pippen added 21 to lead the Chicago Bulls to a victory over stubborn Indiana.

Chicago has won eight of nine and is 64-14 overall, best in the NBA, and is 34-5 in Chicago Stadium.

Baskets by Vern Fleming and Chuck Person to open the fourth quarter brought Indiana to within 82-80. But the Bulls got two baskets from Pippen and one from Stacey King for an 88-80 lead, their biggest of the quarter.

Kings 114, Timberwolves 94

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Lionel Simmons scored 26 points and all five Sacramento starters scored in double figures as the Kings beat Minnesota.

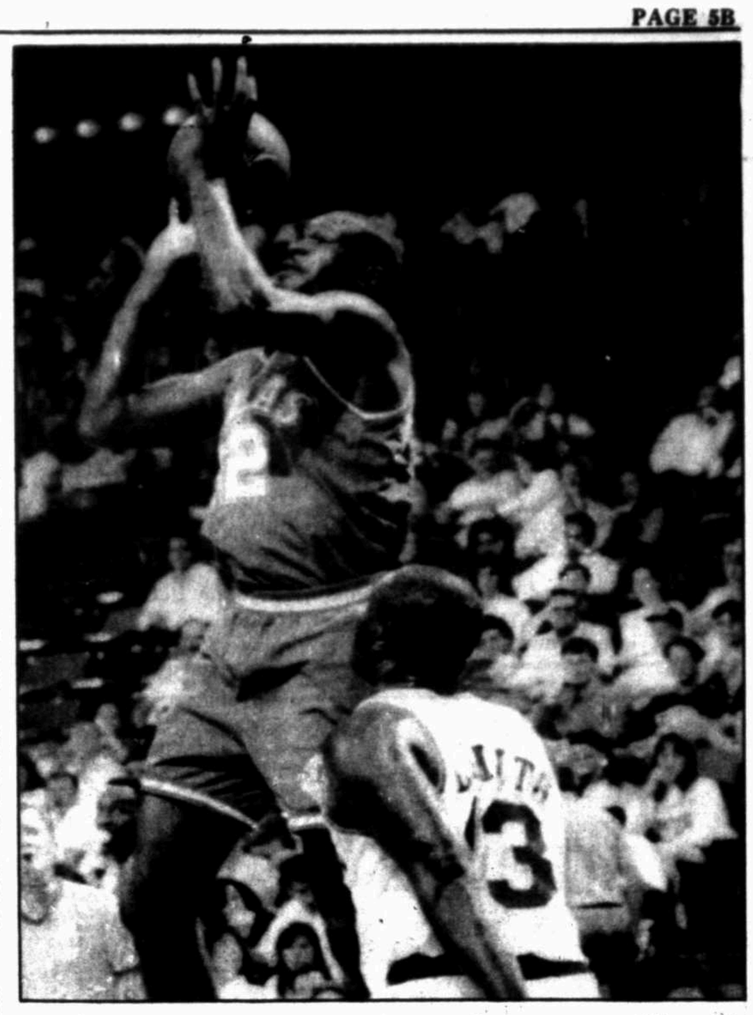

Wayman Tisdale added 21 points and Mitch Richmond had 16 for Sacramento, which led by 19 at halftime and expanded its cushion to as many as 30 points late in the third quarter.

Duane Causwell added 14 points and 11 rebounds and Spud Webb had 13 points and 10 assists for the Kings.

Clippers 122, Nuggets 88

LOS ANGELES — Charles Smith made all 10 of his shots and scored 29 points in the Los Angeles Clippers' romp over Denver.

The Clippers' 44th victory was the most since the franchise, then located in Buffalo and known as the Braves, won 46 games in 1976.

Graf, Vicario tied when rain halts Bausch & Lomb Championships

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Top seed Steffi Graf and No. 3 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario were tied 6-6 in the opening set when rain halted their semifinal match Saturday at the Bausch & Lomb Championships.

Graf, hoping to reach the final of the $350,000 clay-court tennis tournament for the sixth time, took a 2-0 lead only to lose command as Sanchez Vicario pulled even by breaking Graf's serve in the third game and holding her own in the fourth.

The players remained on serve until a drizzle increased to a downpour and play was suspended 59 minutes into the match. Three hours later, officials decided to cancel play for the rest of the day rather than wait to see when the storm would stop.

The conclusion of the Graf-Sanchez Vicario match, as well as the other semifinal between defending champion Gabriela Sabatini and Conchita Martinez, was rescheduled for Sunday morning. Weather permitting, the final would follow in the afternoon.

The Sabatini-Martinez semifinal is a rematch of last Sunday's Family Cup Circle final at Hilton Head, S.C. Sabatini won 6-1, 6-4

Wright's service warrants votes

Political incumbency has long translated into advantage during an election season, but with the mood among the electorate in Midland County as well as elsewhere increasingly hostile, this year officeholders are tiptoeing on the political stump. There is a definite attitude in favor of "throwing the rascals out" among voters. And not without reason.

We have also been moved, at times, to reach for such simplistic answers as term limitations and anti-incumbent voting. But there is a danger in such responses. Yes, throwing out all the "rascals" can improve government in some instances, but throwing out good, honest individuals who seek to fairly and effectively represent their constituents can damage the quest for better government to an even greater degree.

That danger is extreme as Midland County voters go back to the polls this Tuesday in a runoff election pitting Durward Wright, who has served the people of Precinct 1 as county commissioner for 23 years, and businessman Henry Goulet. Voters will also decide the outcome of a race between Robin Malone Sams and George D. "Jody" Gilles for judge of 142nd District Court. Both are political newcomers.

All those who have served in political office realize that during their service they have angered someone — sometimes many someones. No doubt that is the case with Wright; he has been in office for almost two and a half decades and one cannot even work in a non-political job that long without angering some people. But the larger measure of Wright's public service is the job he has done evidenced by improvements in Midland County's government and the respect he enjoys among his fellow commissioners and the public at large. Most agree that Wright has worked for the best interests of all Midland County's residents, even those living outside Precinct 1.

Through the years, Wright has taken the lead on many such projects, such as testifying before State House and Senate committees on legislation affecting counties, working with the State Department of Transportation on highway matters affecting this region (he was the originator of the designation request for Loop 250 and State Highway 191), and the construction of Midland County Detention Facility and Law Enforcement Building.

Furthermore, he was heavily involved in the Midland County Courthouse "wraparound" project that added 9,000 square feet of public space at the nominal rate of about $10 a square foot as well as the county extension facility built south of Midland County Exhibit Building.

While many Midlanders mistakenly assume that the only duty of county commissioners is to attend meetings a couple of times a month and approve expenditure of county funds, in a county such as Midland they're responsible for overseeing virtually all county business, including some actions of county department heads. It's a fulltime job.

But Wright also has had other responsibilities he did not neglect. He has served for years as Midland County's ad hoc representative and liaison officer on the Midland County Library Advisory Board and the important library building committee. He also serves on the Midland County Courthouse Renovation Committee, Midland Chamber of Commerce Governmental Affairs Board and Midland County Housing Finance Corp.'s board of directors.

Yet through it all, Wright has always espoused a fiscally conservative philosophy and is proudest of the fact that of the state's 254 counties, Midland County's tax rate is in the lowest 10 percent at 22.5 cents per $100 valuation.

Durward Wright has served Midland County residents well in a fashion that could only be described as dedicated and conscientious, and he should be returned for another term.

Ms. Sams is a very effective prosecutor in the Midland County District Attorney's office and has the legal expertise, coupled with the understanding of the law and the needs of today's society, to be a compassionate yet firm and fair district judge.

She should also get the vote of Midland County voters.

Diplomacy neutralizes drug interdiction

WASHINGTON — In the international drug war, Uncle Sam sometimes likes to be the piano player in the brothel. He knows full well what's going on upstairs, but he keeps on tickling the ivories.

Anderson

State Department officials are now privately condemning the U.S. approach to Thailand, which has amounted to stroking corrupt government officials with direct links to major heroin-trafficking organizations that move hundreds of tons of heroin every year.

Officials studying the record in Thailand say that U.S. drug diplomacy there has been punctuated by appeasement and hypocrisy. They blame the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok for downplaying the problem. In one case, the embassy prepped Vice President Dan Quayle for his 1989 visit to Thailand by giving him "talking points" that were more flattering than the Thai government deserved.

The United States has too frequently congratulated the Thais for their token crackdowns on narcotics production and trafficking, and ignored decades-long official corruption that reaches the highest level of government. In addition to Quayle, former President Reagan and a slew of other American dignitaries have gushed over Thailand's role in the drug war when a tougher tack was called for, according to government sources.

The recent flap over Thailand's Prime Minister-designate Narong Wongwan shows there may be some backbone at the State Department after all. After the selection of Narong, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler told reporters that Narong had been denied a U.S. visa last year under "the Immigration and Nationality Act, which states any alien who the consular or immigration officer knows, or has reason to believe is or has been an illicit trafficker in any controlled substance is excludable."

Narong defiantly dared the United States to open up its secret dossier on him to prove that he had dealings with the heroin warlords of the Golden Triangle. He bowed out earlier this month — a relief to those Thais who worried that more than $8 billion in annual trade between the United States and Thailand was in peril.

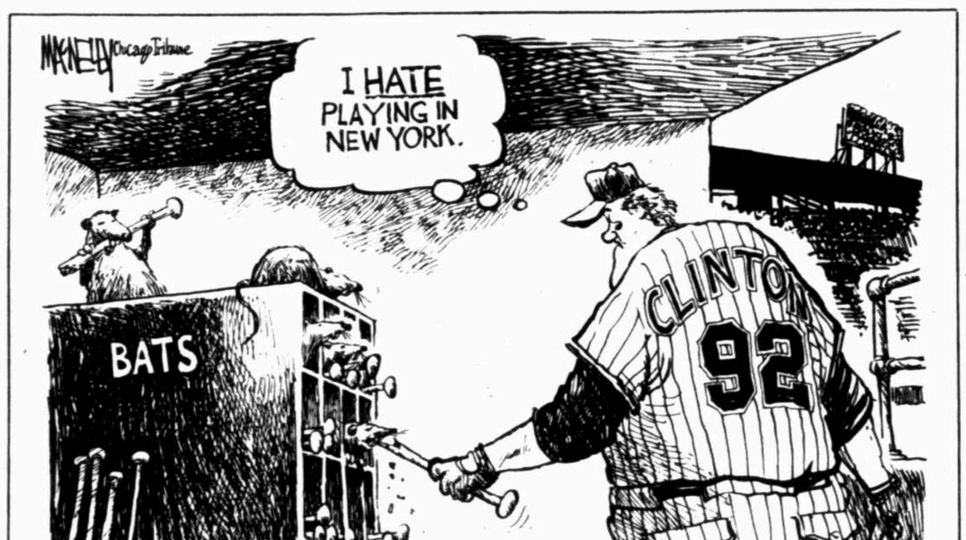

The State Department should also be relieved that it won the game of chicken with Narong because the secret history that Narong referred to would implicate U.S. diplomats in the crime of looking the other way.

Until recently, the cable traffic from the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok to the State Department seemed to whitewash the rumors of official corruption and narcotics trafficking. Sources say the embassy went easy on the Thai government because the diplomats had higher priorities than corruption and drugs. They were fearful that a confrontation with Thailand over drug thugs in high places would jeopardize other aspects of U.S.-Thai relations.

What they ignored in the process, according to officials, was evidence showing that some in the Thai government are business partners with traffickers and even arrange for financing. In addition, a range of military and police officials from all levels have dirtied their hands in the drug trade, and some Thai officials are even arming, feeding and clothing the guilty.

State Department sources say the line between good guys and bad guys is blurry.

We can be thankful for Conservative's victory

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — There is good news this weekend for President Bush's hope to create a new order of peace and security in the world if he is re-elected.

British Prime Minister John Major won a slim but solid victory for the Conservative Party in the parliamentary elections despite Britain's longest recession in 50 years and poll predictions that the socialist Labor Party was likely to win.

Hearst

We could not have relied on the socialists to join with us and other allies in any military action to stop aggression, especially in the Middle East, or to impose embargoes and blockades against Libya or other terrorism-sponsoring regimes.

There is other encouraging news, this time about Iran's parliamentary elections, the significance of which came to me in the following report from Joe Kingsbury Smith, our national editor in Washington:

The final results of the elections held Friday will not be announced until Wednesday. However, western diplomats in Tehran expect President Hashemi Rafsanjani's supporters to win about 70 percent of the 270 parliamentary seats. This would strength Rafsanjani's power against the hardline Islamic fundamentalists who want to move faster and more recklessly toward creation of a radical Islamic empire that could control two thirds of the world's oil supplies and prevent America from maintaining a dominant influence in that strategically vital region.

However, Rafsanjani is playing a Machiavellian game. He, too, favors a fundamentalist Islamic empire, but he would move more cautiously toward it. He knows that as long as Bush is president, the United States would go to war to prevent any fundamentalist, anti-Western conquest of Middle East oil resources. Rafsanjani also wants western, and especially American, technological and other aid to help Iran's economic recovery and development.

Therefore, he is posing to the West as a moderate. There is no doubt in western and Arab diplomatic circles that his ultimate goal is to replace Iraq's Saddam Hussein as a modern Saladin trying to conquer the Middle East for Islamic fundamentalism.

CIA Director Robert Gates told Congress last month that Iran's clerical leadership "has not abandoned the goal of one day leading the Islamic world and reversing the global dominance of western technology." As recently as last December, Rafsanjani declared, "Iran will become the lighthouse of the entire Islamic world."

In flagrant violation of its commitment as a signatory of the 1968 Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, the Iranian government, with the obvious approval of Rafsanjani, has been secretly striving to produce a nuclear weapon for several years.

Gates told the House Armed Services Committee that Iran is also trying to develop poison gas warheads to place atop Scud missiles and is suspected of working toward biological warfare capability.

Although many of the 2,030 candidates in Iran's parliamentary elections have assailed the United States as an enemy, the State Department recommended a couple of days ago that the Commerce Department approve a request for the resale to Iran of U.S.-made jet engines and other components used in two A-300 Airbus planes produced by a European consortium. State Department spokesman Margaret Tutwiler said the request was approved in the interests of the U.S. manufacturers wanting to "maintain their traditional supply arrangements."

Since Iran remains on the list of countries considered sponsors of international terrorism, it would be a mistake for our government to make American technology available to Iran.

GUEST COLUMN

We must strike balance to protect mineral rights

By Bob Krueger

The rules governing natural gas prorationing and correlative rights (that is, determining the market demand for natural gas from each gas field, and determining which wells will be allowed an opportunity to meet how much of that demand each month) must sound like one of the dullest topics alive.

Krueger

Yet, since the oil and gas industry accounts for one-seventh of the Gross State Product in Texas, a larger share than any other industry in the state, these rules affect the economic well-being of every community in Texas. By producing 27 percent of our nation's gas, Texas is America's largest producer of gas.

The Clean Air Act of 1989, recognizing gas as our cleanest, most environmentally desirable and abundant domestic energy source, encourages use of natural gas rather than coal or nuclear power to produce electricity. Therefore, new markets can bring new profits to our state in years ahead. Similarly, fears that state regulators in gas-producing states might constrict production in order to raise prices frightens electric utility regulators in consuming states. Such fears may prompt them to approve coal-fired or nuclear facilities rather than gas-fired facilities for future electric generation.

State laws require the Texas Railroad Commission to protect the correlative rights of property owners in each gas field. This task seems initially simple. But natural gas exists in underground reservoirs and is subject neither to direct physical inspection nor precise measurement. If you and I are neighboring landowners, and gas from a continuous reservoir lies beneath our land, we cannot know exactly how much gas underlies your property or mine. If I sell gas from a well on my land, and you sell none, either because you have no purchaser to sell to or you believe the price offered is too low, I am, in effect, selling your inventory. It's like having two straws in the same soda. If I'm drinking from mine and you aren't drinking any, I'll eventually drink your soda.

You may want to save your soda for another day, and resent my drinking yours. But if a regulatory agency says I can drink nothing until you are thirsty, I may die of thirst before you're ready to drink your share. Therefore, determining exactly who gets the right to draw out one's minerals, in what portion, over what time, and with what effect on one's neighbor, is subject to constant difference of opinion. Nevertheless, the Railroad Commission must determine such issues for the 2,700 separate gas reservoirs existing in our state. The rules governing these questions are now being reviewed at the Railroad Commission.

In this circumstance, some producers have asked their state regulatory bodies to shut in some allowable supplies in hopes that prices might rise. That request, while understandable, is probably also illegal. And it is certain to invite federal intervention. Congressman John Dingell, chairman of the House Energy & Commerce Committee, and Sen. Bill Bradley of the Senate Energy Committee are two of the influential members who have already indicated their intent to prevent statewide prorationing that would restrict supply to raise price.

As is customary, in a time in which the economy is suffering and the industry in a parlous state, charges and counter-charges fly readily. Nevertheless, it seems to me that the Railroad Commission must do the following:

1. Protect correlative rights. Mineral owners should be allowed a reasonable opportunity to sell the minerals underlying their land into a competitive marketplace.

2. Simplify our gas rules, which currently are designed for an industry that no longer exists.

3. Remain within the laws of our state and federal governments. We can address correlative rights on a reservoir-by-reservoir basis once we have estimated the demand for gas from each reservoir. But we cannot reallocate these reservoir demand amounts as a means of protecting correlative-rights on a state-wide basis. We can protect correlative rights; we can prevent physical waste. But reducing supply in order to raise price does not protect correlative rights.

4. Finally, we must do our part to develop larger national markets for natural gas. This means reassuring other sections of the country that we will not reduce supplies in order to raise price.

If we can strike the right balance that protects the property rights of Texas mineral owners either to market or to husband their own resources in a fair fashion, and can at the same time develop confidence in other parts of the country that we will be responsible in supplying this precious energy source to the rest of the country for years to come, we will have served not only our own citizens but the nation well.

Candidates in race for 142nd District Judge, Commissioners' Court

Put Gilles on bench where he belongs

Deciding on the best person for district judge seemed tough at first. I have friends who supported both.

Even though I've made an effort to discern who the best candidate would be, understanding the ins and outs of the judicial system is tough. The controversy in the editorials alone can cause confusion. Most of us have to go to great lengths to try and make a good intelligent decision without being able to see the whole picture.

Common sense does tell me that a person who is a top notch prosecutor working fiercely for seven years to put the "bad" guys behind bars may have a bit of trouble seeing the picture clearly in the court room as an impartial judge.

Since I began to determine who would be the best person for the job, I've been fortunate to meet both candidates and have let my intuition speak to me about who would really just "BE" the best judge. Before I met "Jody" Gilles it was Robin Sams who swayed me because she seemed like a bright intelligent woman. But now that I have met Gilles it's obvious to me that he is the best person to serve as our judge. He shows sincerity, concern and integrity.

We sometimes take for granted the fact that we live in such a peaceful community. Let's keep Robin Sams as our tough, aggressive prosecutor and let's put "Jody" Gilles on the bench where he belongs.

Sams' vast experience qualifies her for role

There has been considerable discussion concerning the courtroom experience of the two candidates for district judge.

"Jody" Gilles claims to have more courtroom appearances, primarily in the field of civil litigation. A majority of civil cases are settled through arbitration and then presented to the court as a formality and public record. Civil litigations normally affect only the litigants. However, the outcome of a criminal case may affect the entire community. Robin Sams has vast experience where a jury hears the evidence and renders the verdict. It is the duty of the presiding judge to oversee the process of proper jury selection. Sams has extensive experience in the preparation and presentation of evidence in open court. It is the duty of the presiding judge to make sure all evidence presented is in accordance with laws pertinent to that proceeding.

Sams has heard numerous charges to a jury. It is the duty of the presiding judge to explain the legal facts to be considered by the jury. Sams has been present when these verdicts have been rendered and has observed the legal process for determining that a verdict has been legally rendered.

It is the duty of the presiding judge to make sure the assessed penalty is in accordance with the established rules of conduct and legal precedents in an attempt to prevent the verdict from being appealed to the Court of Criminal Appeals, which requires representation by both the prosecuting attorney and the defense.

The attorneys on both sides of a civil litigation are paid by their respective clients. However, in criminal cases both the prosecuting and defense attorneys may be receiving payment from the public coffers. A defense attorney is required to be appointed as a public defender when a defendant does not have the financial means to employ an attorney.

I find Robin Malone Sams to be the most qualified candidate in all categories of legal court proceedings and ask voters to cast their ballot for her on April 14.

The choice is clear: Gilles deserves vote

I would like an opportunity to comment on two letters you published on March 29th regarding the 142nd Judicial District judge's race. Thomas Beall correctly stated that "Jody" Gilles openly admitted the fact that he has never tried a major criminal case. Gilles displayed an admirable quality in that statement — honesty. Beall further stated that by Ms. Sams' own admission, she has never lost a case. I know for a fact that in 1988 Ms. Sams lost at least one major jury trial in the 142nd District Court.

James Blakemore told the voters, "The fact that someone has practiced law is no criteria or standard for excellence that we should accept." I question just what criteria or standard we should accept in a judicial candidate.

Blakemore seems to believe the judicial race has turned into a popularity contest. I strongly disagree. If Midland County voters had an opportunity to vote on the chief of staff for the hospital, would they not want to visit with other practicing physicians and get their opinion of the candidates? Before you went in for surgery, would you want to know how experienced and qualified the surgeon is?

The legal profession is certainly no different. Lawyers are in the court on a continual basis — that's their livelihood.

The choice is clear. Midland County needs George D. "Jody" Gilles in the 142nd District Court.

Sams indeed has civil law experience

For the record, Robin Sams does have civil experience. She has been practicing law for 10 years and has practiced family law, banking, has been counsel to Secretary of State David Dean as special assistant, and council as legislative aide to Rep. Ashley Smith. She is not claiming that this civil experience or her criminal law experience is the most important qualification for district judge, but moreover her vast knowledge of the 142nd District Court and her extensive trial experience are her best qualification to be judge of this trial court.

On the other hand, it is my understanding that the bulk of "Jody" Gilles' practice is in the areas of family law, collections and bankruptcy — none of which are heard in the 142nd District Court. By Gilles' own admission, he has never tried a criminal case and most likely has very limited criminal law experience. Additionally, his continuing refusal to disclose how many jury trials he has tried leads one to believe he has tried very few if any at all.

This leads one to question just what qualifications does Gilles have that make him qualified?

To me the choice seems clear and I must cast my vote for Robin Malone Sams.

District judge needs real-world experience

My husband and I are pleased that our candidate for district judge, "Jody" Gilles, is in the upcoming runoff.

Gilles has been a practicing attorney for 15 years, many of these years as a solo practitioner. His opposition has been a practicing attorney seven years, all as a government employee.

There is nothing wrong with government service; my husband and I work for a governmental entity. Yet, making payroll, doing billing, servicing your clients' needs — basically keeping your practice and business afloat — are concerns outside the experience of government employees. I know my late father, an executive for Pennzoil, and my father-in-law, an independent grocer, have dealt with problems I will never encounter as a teacher. It seems to be a businessman would prefer a judge with an understanding of the real world presiding over his civil case.

Sandra Miller

Let's not take chance with Gilles as judge

With regards to the runoff for judge of the 142nd District Court, I have been watching this race very closely because a great deal of my work winds up in the 142nd District Court and I do not want to spend my time and taxpayer money in vain. I take particular interest in this race.

I have witnessed Robin Sams at work on many occasions in not only the 142nd District Court, but the 238th and 318th District Courts as well, and I can honestly say that this community has gotten its money's worth and more from her.

I have watched politicians at work before and I have seen them make statements that I know were untrue, or at least stretching the truth to its very limits; however, in watching Robin's campaign I have not heard her say one thing about her experience, or the caseload facing the 142nd District Court that is untrue or stretching the truth, and I have knowledge of both. I have, on the other hand, read and heard statements originating from her opponent's campaign that directly contradict what Robin has stated.

I have never seen "Jody" Gilles in any of the three district courts in Midland. So I do not have any personal knowledge of his abilities or character, but I do know the truth. In my 10 years of law enforcement I have seen the results of a "milktoast" judge on the bench and while I am not suggesting that Gilles would lack energy or backbone in carrying out the job, I am saying let's not take a chance.

Let's elect someone who has proven herself in Midland's district courts and has paid her dues to the community by working for the good of the taxpayers. Let's elect Robin Sams district judge of the 142nd District Court.

Gilles exemplifies qualities needed

I would like to take this opportunity to urge Midland voters to cast their ballots for "Jody" Gilles, as our next district judge.

I have had the opportunity to work directly and indirectly with both candidates. Gilles is an honest, intelligent and fair individual. He is very down to earth and treats everyone with dignity. These are the qualities that I am looking for in a judge. Please join me in electing George D. "Jody" Gilles as 142 District Judge on April 14.

Lawyer contradicts Sams' victory claims

In several advertisements, particularly in the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Feb. 28th edition, Ms. Sams stated, "As lead prosecutor, she has tried over 50 cases in front of a jury in seven years, and hasn't lost a case in five years."

However, on Oct. 5, 1988, a jury panel in the 142nd District Court returned a verdict of "not guilty" in Cause No. CRA-14,784. I know because I was the lawyer for the defense in that case. A copy of the Judgment of Acquittal in Jury Trial may be found in the district clerk's office, but I will recite the pertinent parts for the readers:

"On Oct. 5, 1988, the above-entitled and numbered Cause was called for trial. The State appeqared by Asst. D.A. Robin Malone Sams. The Defendant, (name withheld) appeared in person, together with the Defendant's attorney, Paul Williams.

A jury was duly selected, impaneled, and sworn, and the Defendant entered a plea of not guilty. After hearing the evidence submitted, and after having been duly charged by the Court, the jury rendered a verdict of "NOT GUILTY."

It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed by the Court that the said Defendant be immediately discharged from all further liability for the offense of which the Defendant has herein been tried."

From my own experience, I can say that any lawyer who claims never to have lost a case is either stretching the truth or hasn't tried many difficult lawsuits.

In measuring judicial qualifications, there are more important considerations than a win/loss record. Subjective criteria, such as complexity of cases handled, matter as much or more than who won what. To coin a cliche, some people have a thousand different experiences while others have the same experience a thousand different times.

I urge Midland County voters to vote for the qualified candidate with broad experience, integrity, and a judicial temperament — George D. "Jody" Gilles.

Sams shows concern for this community

I would like to comment on the election for district judge for the 142nd Judicial District. I have worked with Robin Sams for a number of years while I was investigating burglaries and other offenses. When we would discuss possible options when dealing with the defendants, Robin, as the prosecutor, always brought up the question, "What about the victim in this case?"

To me, this showed that she has a strong sense of what is right and wrong for the community, and is dedicated to this community.

I have seen Robin in operation in the courtroom and I believe that she is as professional as any attorney I have seen in the court, before a judge and jury. I am sure that "Jody" Gilles is a good man, yet I have never seen him in the 142nd District Court in the 10 years I have been working law enforcement in this community, so I have no personal observations to base an opinion on.

Law officer endorses Sams as judge choice

In reference to the judicial race involving Ms. Robin Malone Sams and George "Jody" Gilles, I have several comments to make. I have worked as a peace officer for the City of Midland for approximately 10 years and during this time period I have had the opportunity to work with Ms. Sams on several occasions.

I have observed Ms. Sams make firm but fair decisions on criminal cases assigned to her. I have also observed Ms. Sams at work in the courtroom, fighting for the rights of victims.

I now know why our district attorney, Al Schorre, hires attorneys such as Ms. Sams — because of their commitment and dedication to the Midland community.

I am sure that Gilles is an excellent attorney, but I have not had the opportunity to observe him working in the 142nd District Court. Therefore, I have no basis for an opinion of Gilles.

Vote for Wright is vote for progress

Durward Wright is a man whom I have known since 1964. He and his wife have raised five children in Midland, and I have watched these kids grow into responsible, law-abiding citizens.

I also have watched Durward labor at his job as county commissioner for the last 23 years. In his defense and support, I submit this letter for voters in his precinct to consider. The primary election was filled with much controversy between Sheriff Painter and the Commissioners' Court. I feel that Durward believed, as I do, that there should be some limitations of boundaries concerning these operations because of problems which could, and sooner or later, would arise. This did not mean that Wright was against Sheriff Painter as a quality lawman and a very good man.

I voted for Sheriff Painter for re-election, and wholeheartedly support Durward Wright in his bid for re-election as county commissioner. This county needs his years of experience in his capacity as commissioner. Wright was the only commissioner to oppose the last county tax increase as proposed.

A vote for Durward Wright is a vote for a progressive Midland.

It's time to change the local status quo

In reference to Mark Hilton's letter (Letters, April 6), I am in total agreement. To quote from his letter, "Have we not had enough of (County Judge Charles) Seltzer and his Commissioners' Court? — let's throw the insensitive rascals out of office."

There is a grassroots uprising across the country "to throw the rascals out of office." We must, however, change the "status quo," not only on the federal level but the local level as well.

Our Commissioners' Court is comprised of elected commissioners who have long since forgotten why they were elected. They have become arrogant and self-serving.

It is indeed time to "throw the rascals out."

Yes it is time, and long overdue, to replace Durward Wright, a 20-year plus member of the self serving establishment, the Commissioners' Court.

Henry Goulet, a Midland businessman and non-politician, has been making successful business decisions for over 30 years.

Now is the time for a change!

Forum abuse concerns former commissioner

In 1964 I was the first Republican ever elected a commissioner in Midland County. This was before the age of one-man, one-vote and I represented 90 percent of the population of the county, the other three commissioners representing 10 percent. On controversial actions, unanimity amongst the commissioners was rare and I applaud any Commissioners' Court that will stand solidly behind a course of action they deem appropriate.

During my term the sheriff was a man who had been in office 20 years or so and it could be said about him that he was a benevolent, gentle, and considerate man. His only flaw was that he arrogated unto himself powers that did not belong to him or his office but lay instead with the Commissioners' Court.

With this background, I am deeply disturbed by the attempt to pack the court with people directly connected with the sheriff's office including the wife of a deputy and the endorsement of an opponent to a sitting commissioner by a sheriff's deputy who ran and lost in the primary.

Letters to the editor is a forum of value, but it is being abused by those directly connected with the sheriff's department and who feel they would benefit directly from a change in the composition of the Commissioners' Court. Contributors discussing county affairs should identify themselves if they are employees of the sheriff's department and not describe themselves as "ignorant taxpayers."

Bill Heck
Midland

Commissioners' salaries are just not deserved

The best kept secret in this county is no longer a secret. That secret is that a commissioner makes more than many county employees! No wonder that a deputy ran for Durward Wright's post. Why should Deputy Ron Harvel do 40 hours a week of shift work, be spit upon and physically and verbally abused when he could be a commissioner, go to meetings twice a month (maybe eight hours a month), have free parking downtown, a $300 per month car allowance, and a better salary? Not bad for parttime.

Don't try to convince me, Mr./Mrs. Commissioner, that your job is equivalent to CEO's in a large corporation. Some, if not all, commissioners may be incorrectly confusing their duties with those of the elected or appointed official of that particular department of office! Pay them accordingly! The closest time that a commissioner comes to being verbally abused is by an irate county resident cursing into a commissioner's unanswered telephone.

We see laymen (not professional politicians) serve as city councilmen for $25 a month and school board members, college and hospital district trustees serve for little or nothing, why does the same not apply to county commissioners?

We see a healthy turnover at these other entities. Why do we still have two commissioners with over 20 years of freeloading? Other counties have WORKING commissioners. They are putting in their time directly overseeing the maintenance of their roads in their precincts, rather than making county employees and other elected officials miserable.

And why, Midland, do we put up with it?

Jill McDaniel
Midland

Business approach may solve officer problem

I'm amazed that the Commissioners' Court finds it necessary to employ another $30,000-plus salaried officer to secure the courthouse, which is in addition to the four bailiffs assigned to the courthouse, six investigators that work out of the courthouse and an unspecified number of deputies manning the jail, to say nothing of the other 300-plus sheriff's deputies, police officers and meter maids employed in the city and county.

It would appear that with a business approach and a small amount of cooperation, something could be worked out without the necessity of employing yet another officer.

The current approach and problem seems to be akin to the Immigration Service problem. The service admits that they can apprehend only a small portion of the illegal aliens yet refuses to permit other officers in the state (police, highway patrol, deputies) to as much as question a suspected illegal alien.

New facility will help relieve overcrowding

Private donations make upgrading at COM go from dream to reality

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Saturday morning's ground breaking ceremonies at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center began the reality for the close to $2 million expansion project for the City of Midland Swim Team facility, but the dream goes back about five years.

"We started thinking of expansion five years ago," said COM coach Brad Swendig, "because we were having to use the swimming facilities at both high schools and then renting some space at the Northeast YMCA just to get the kids we have in the water.

"When I came here seven years ago, we had about 60 kids in the program. This fall we had 350. In spite of the four pools we use, we have a waiting list every fall. By December or January we have been able to get all of them in on our waiting list, but we are crowded."

The expansion project will provide COM with a new state-of-the-art pool in addition to the one already in place, extra space and remodeling of the older part of the facility.

"There is not a week that goes by that we don't have a problem with overcrowding," Swendig said. "Swimming is an expensive sport at about $50 a month, but where else can you get 15 to 20 hours of supervised coaching a week for that. It has been recession proof for us. I think we actually pick up kids during hard times because people are staying in town instead of going to Europe or national camps. People are looking for things to do within the community more and more."

The dream began small. First there was talk of a six-lane, 25-yard training pool, just big enough for the coaches to walk around.

"I talked with Charles Koch, one of our board members, about that kind of addition. We talked about construction, collected information, and Koch told me that we could do something like this."

Growing numbers in the COM program and continued shortfalls on available training space allowed the the talk to grow to an eight-lane pool addition.

"When you start adding lanes, you cross into a new area of costs," Swendig said. "Our plans and program just kept escalating. We then talked about a 10-lane pool. Then started looking at our weight training problems where we kept them under the bleachers like a poor boy situation.

"We had some kids running bleachers, lifting weights and swimming and rotating all of that. It got to be a dangerous situation with so many people."

Swendig's desire was to bring all the team members back into club's training facility.

"Even with the new expansion, we will have to use the two high schools and rent some time at the YMCA, but we will now be able to get everyone in here two or three times a week. Some of our kids never work out here and I don't think they feel as much a part of the team as those who do."

Prior to July, 1990, COM had an architect draw plans and estimated costs at $1.5 million. In July, the Mabee Foundation, which 20 years ago paid a large portion of the present facility, offered to provide money for the new viewing stands and seats.

In September of 1990 the Abel-Hanger Foundation offered a $500,000 matching grant. If COM could raise $500,000 in a year, the foundation would match it.

"That's one of the largest grants ever given by the foundation in a one-year time period," Swendig said. "We felt at the time that was very reachable, so we went back to the architect and added another $250,000 in improvements.

"As July, 1991, approached, it was close as to whether or not we would reach the $1.5 million. I got married about that time and was on my honeymoon. I called Mr. Koch every day to find out how we were doing. We reached the goal on the very last week.

"Individuals, foundations and some out-of-town groups, who had an interest in swimming, all contributed to this project. The St. Paul's Insurance Company out of Minneapolis, Minn., who insures our swimmers, for instance, gave us a $25,000 gift."

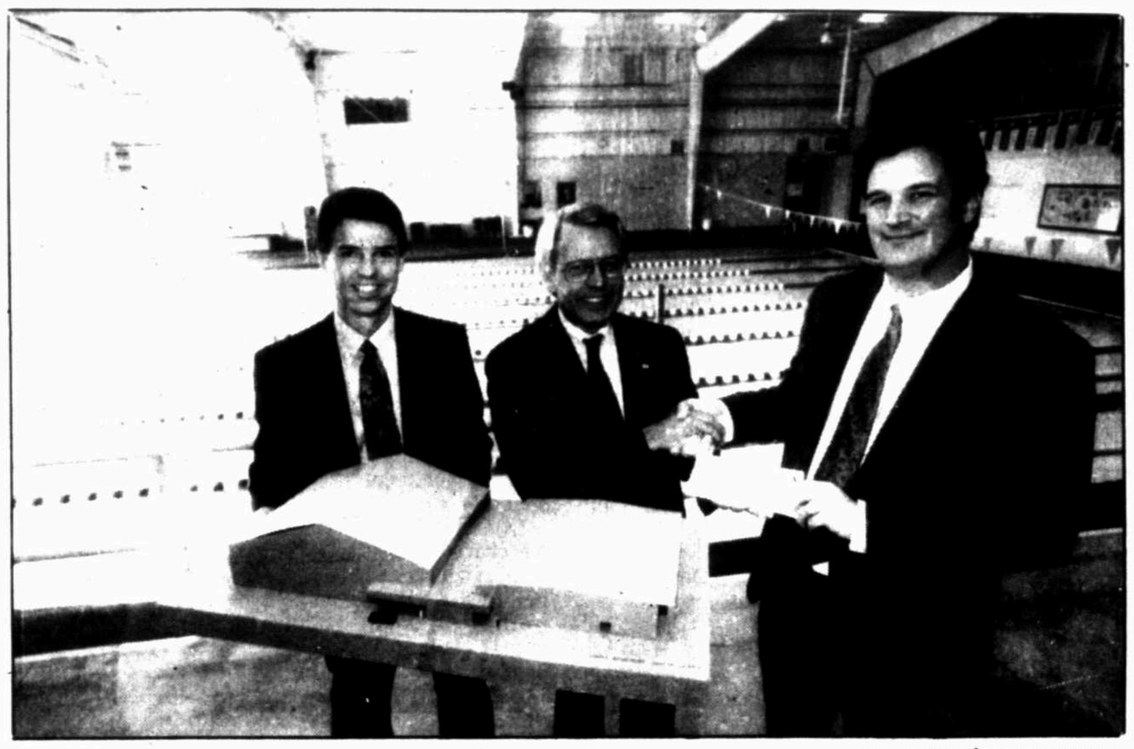

The $1.5 million goal had been reached, but there was $250,000 still to be raised.

"A lot of people thought the overall target was $1.5 million," Swendig said. "We weren't trying to hide anything, but we were really focused on the $1.5 million deadline we had to make in order to receive to get our matching funds."

The barriers of dreams have been torn down so that the foundation of reality can be laid. COM dared to dream in a tough economic time and will now reap the benefits.

"Our expansion project will certainly make things much nicer for us, but it isn't fancy by any means," Swendig said. "Every penny has been put to good use.

"Primarily, the swim team can now reach out to a much broader base to the city with our Learn to Swim program, our work with MARC and we will be adding a new diving program. It's going to be very functional and we will be able to give back to the community."

New pool will be one of the fastest world wide

■ The depth and width of the new facility, plus improved lighting and new diving boards make for first rate competition and training at COM.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

When the City of Midland Swim Team's expansion project is completed, Midland may own one of the fastest competitive swimming pools in the world.

The new 25-yard by 25-yard pool will be eight-feet deep in the shallow end and 16½-feet deep at the deep end.

"Deep water makes for a fast pool," noted COM coach Brad Swendig. "It's a proven fact that the deeper the water, the faster you can swim because you don't get the waves bouncing back from the bottom.

"There is no question that this pool will be the fastest pool in West Texas. It has the same depth as the one at the University of Texas, and if it is faster than the one at Texas, then it will be the fastest pool in the state. If that's true, then it could be the fastest in the world because the one at Texas is considered the best in the world."

Swendig said the new pool's lighting system will also be like the one on the Texas campus and that, too, will aid in the overall speed factor.

"The better the lighting, the better the swimmer can see going into his turns," Swendig said.

When finished, the Midland facility will meet the requirements for hosting a national championship.

"I coached in the Houston area before we came here and we had to do our workouts at country clubs and such, around their time," Swendig said. "There are club coaches around the state and across the nation who are very envious of what we have right now, but now we will be one of a handful of club-owned facilities in the nation that will meet the requirements of hosting a national championship meet."

Competition will play a key role for the new COM pool, but its flexibility is the major gain. The new pool will have eight lanes one-way for competitive races, but will have a 10-lane capability cross-way for workout purposes. That will give COM 18 lanes of workout space when combined with the eight-lane pool already in place.

"This gives us 10 more lanes to schedule workouts and that is going to be a major factor in our program," Swendig said. "We are currently using the pools at both high schools and renting space at the Northeast YMCA for our 350 members. Even with the new expansion, we will have to use the two high schools and rent some time at the YMCA, but we will now be able to get everyone in here two or three times a week. Some of our kids never work out here and I don't think they feel as much a part of the team as those who do."

One of the major additions is diving boards at one end of the pool.

"We haven't been able to teach diving in our present facility," Swendig said. "We will have diving space at one end of the pool and we hope to have a diving tower. There are only three other indoor diving towers in the state."

Swendig said there are plans to bring in a diving coach this summer.

"Ideally, we would like a coach who could work with the high schools and help us during the year and during the summer," Swendig said.

The deck space will also increase with the new pool by three or four times the current space.

"We'll have a lot more room for trampoline and tumbling exercises that we do on the deck," Swendig said. "It will also be much better for meets when you have a lot of teams in here."

Spectators will also benefit with the increase of bleacher space by 400 percent over the current seating capacity. Under one set of bleachers will be a new weight room without slanting walls that currently limits complete space usage in the current setup.

During meets the current pool can be used as a warm down pool, giving COM another luxury that other facilities don't possess.

New locker rooms will be under the other set of bleachers.

"Only about 20 percent of the team members will still get lockers. The only place we didn't cut corners was on the pool," Swendig said.

There will also be renovation to the current office space and the Learn to Swim pool area.

A communication room with windows that will allow viewing of the races will also be installed and that is where meet results can be tabulated.

In all, there will be an addition of 23,000 square feet.

Swendig said that around $400,000 is being set aside to insure that the new facility can keep up with maintenance and utility costs.

"We still feel like our club will have to expand to insure that we can keep up this new facility because that will be our major expense," Swendig said.

With this new facility, it would be hard to think that membership won't increase.

They had no coach and no pool — just ambition

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

It all started a quarter of a century ago, when the Vietnam War was raging and the Beatles were aging. A handful of ambitious Midland swimmers with no coach, no pool and no certainty for the future assembled with the goal of remedying the bleak existence of their sport.

There was a swim program in the Midland Independent School District in 1967, a program that was competitive and also supported by a YMCA program.

Times were in the midst of changing in swimming in 1967, though. Gaining popularity was an Amateur Athletic Union-sponsored program called age group swimming, a sport that had not yet taken hold in Midland.

According to a booklet titled "City of Midland Swim Tean, Inc., 1967-1987, The First 20 Years", this is how the future of the sport was changed:

"A handful of determined Midland parents decided to create an AAU swim team and aquatic program with the result that on October 6, 1967 they received the 'Texas Certificate of Incorporation' creating the 'City of Midland Swim Team, Inc.' It had no pool, no coach, 20 swimmers and a Board of Directors of three. One month later, on Novermber 2, 1967, it had a board of 11, an AAU membership certificate, a $1,000 fund for members unable to pay fees, its first coach, and pool time from the MISD for training."

Thereinafter, things were different — and much wetter — in Midland.

COM's first coach, Don Fogelsong, was an interim coach put in place until a long term mentor could be installed.

COM's second coach was the man for five years. It was Terry Gathercole, a native of Australia, who moved to Midland to lay the groundwork for the city's swimming program.

Now the Australian Olympic swimming coach, Gathercole was influential not only in Midland swimming, but also in the sport across the United States.

"He was a really big part of the changing of U.S. swimming over the years," present-day COM coach Brad Swendig said. "He had a real influence in this country and was the first foreign coach to serve on the U.S. Olympic Committee when he was in Midland."

Swendig began his swimming career as a ninth-grader in 1972, thereby only having the privilege of being under Gathercole's tutelage for the last year he served as COM's coach.

But during Swendig's formative years, he did swim under the guidance of several other influential coaches before taking the reigns of the program himself in 1984.

One of those coaches was Doug Ingram, who headed COM from 1975-79 and who is now the chairman of the U.S. Olympic Swimming Committee, and a head coach at Southern Illinois. Another Swendig learned under was George French, formerly the swim coach of the Ladera Oaks (Calif.) Swim Team before taking over the coaching position at COM.

Five more coaches headed COM from 1979-84 before Swendig took control.

One of the biggest annual events COM has hosted through the years has been the West Texas Invitational. Surviving in part because of corporate sponsorship (last June's event was known as the Nationsbank West Texas Invitational), the event is annually one of the biggest and most popular youth swimming events in the entire state.

"We have about 20 teams come in from all over the state every year," Swendig said. "I can remember back when Fred Allison paid prize money for some of the top teams in the country to come in (1977-80). He sponsored some of the top teams in the country to come in. It was really the top age group meet in the entire country then."

During the West Texas Invitational's Allison-funded years, teams from Miami, Cincinnati, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Mission Viejo, Calif., Nashville, Santa Clara, Calif., and the Mexican National Age Group team would pay annual visits to the Mabee Memorial Swim Center for the event.

Although those were fun years and the competition always top notch and exciting, Swendig said any extra funding is earmarked for different purposes in the '90s.

"Our philosophy has changed a little today," he said. "There are some things we can do to promote and bring in more teams, but my preference is we spend our money for our kids to travel to other meets."

Contrary to what Swendig considers popular belief, COM is not associated in any way with the City of Midland municipal government agency, which, he says, has been confusing over the years.

"A lot of people think we're associated with the city and that's how we operate," Swendig said. "Or that we get funding solely from the Mabee Foundation. The Mabees have contributed three times, once in the beginning, once about 10 years aog to help pay for renovations, and now. The second time, the Mabees contributed $200,000 which went to renovating and upgrading the current facility.

Swendig said the organization has thought about changing its name to curtail confusion, but has decided not to in the past.

Several athletes wwho have passed through the COM system and MISD swimming programs have gone on to success in the college ranks, including Swendig himself, a renowned swimmer at Texas A&M and Auburn University.

Currently, names out Midland's prep swimming past like Matt Seay, Doug Dickinson, Michaela Hasek, Sam Perry and Ricky Perkins are splashing in standard sized pools vying for collegiate success.

Several factors point to COM's success over the years, but maybe none moreso than the amount of successful youth the program has turned out.

"Based on the number of kids we've had go to the junior national level, we're one of the top teams in the state for a town with the population base we have. Probably the best for this size of a town.

"When we go to a state meet, most of the Top 10 teams are a compilation of two or three cities that compete as one team. For our population, we're as good as any. And better than some teams from metropolitan areas."

Its stature in the community, as well as its ability to operate a year-round program for youths is another contributing factor in the overwehelming success of COM in the last 25 years.

COM History

School programs benefit from COM

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland High and Midland Lee's University Interscholastic League swim teams may not have been dead in the water without the City of Midland Swim Team, but both high school coaches agree that COM offers a near ideal situation.

Using prep swimmers who virtually all have logged time at the COM lanes, Lee and MHS have become aquatic powers on the West Texas scene.

In the past three years, MHS' boys have claimed as many Region I team titles, and the Lee girls have posted first-, second-, fourth- and seventh-place finishes in the last four campaigns. The MHS girls have also been a Region I force, taking second-, third- and fifth-place finishes, while the Lee boys came on for a second-place victory in 1992.

All that success at the regional level, against teams from the Panhandle to the Big Country and on to El Paso, can only mean one thing to the District 4-5A competition — Midland teams have been dominating.

"COM is a feeder program for us, plain and simple," said third-year MHS coach Larry Ridge. "It starts with the Learn to Swim and summer league programs.

"We don't have to wait for potential swimmers to walk in as sophomores. They already have a good competitive background and a true knowledge of the sport, and are ready to keep the Midland schools on top of the swimming heap.

"It's also a big help to the kids who come in a sophomores and haven't done much swimming. One of the first things I tell them is to get involved in it. The don't have to be part of COM since they were seven year olds, and it can be just as valuable to a sophomore.

"For instance, when I visit Midland Freshman High School I encourage the kids to swim for COM and take part in the year-round program. Those kids, by the end of their sophomore year, can be in the Top 10 in the district."

And hearing Lee swim coach Jeff Goelz, who is in his first year as the Rebel mentor, was almost like hearing an echo.

"Without any feeder program at all, it would be very tough to compete at the level we're at now," Goelz said. "Our high school athletes swim in the summer for COM and come back in shape.

"Under the UIL rules, we can only swim four months but the other eight months are so important. The key is for them to maintain their aerobic base, and that's what COM allows us.

"Without COM it would be very, very difficult to have competitive high school teams. All the top teams in the state, from Houston and Dallas, have good club programs. The advantage with COM is that it's established.

"There is no excuse for a kid not to be a good swimmer in Midland, especially after the (new) pool comes."

Ahhh, the pool. With the planned expansion of the Mabee Memorial Swim Center, a project that will double the available water at COM's home, Goelz and Ridge say the high schools can only profit.

And they both put in plenty of hours working with COM coach Brad Swendig to insure that the resource is used to its fullest advantage. That means being the same kind of force at state meets that Midland teams are now at the regional level.

"We're a big fish in West Texas, and now we can be a medium fish at the state level," Goelz said.

"It really works out well that Larry, Brad and I can get together. As long as we work together, we'll be ready to step up to the next level.

"There's a lot of talent around here and I think in the next five to six years we're going to see Midland be a power at state."

Added Ridge: "We had limited pool space and water time. I'm just elated about getting more pool space and water time because I think you'll see the high school programs move on to the next level."

Swendig revitalized sinking ship in '84

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

It was 1984 and the City of Midland Swim Team — down to around 50 active participants — was in jeopardy of going under.

Swendig

But a familiar face tossed the program a lifeline that year and COM did not sink. It swam.

COM tabbed former team member Brad Swendig to put the program back on the pedestal it occupied in earlier days, and now nearly 50 youngsters from the Midland team qualify each year for the Texas Age Group state swim meet.

"We were down to only around 50 kids when I came in and the first thing I wanted to know was what it was that we were not doing right," said Swendig, a former Midland College swimmer who also competed for two years under the tutelage of Olympic coach Eddie Reese at Auburn.

Swendig, working with a board of directors, which is now a dozen members strong, assembled both financial backing and a strong staff. The results of their collective efforts have been no less than remarkable.

COM's home base, the Mabee Memorial Swim Center, will more than double in size when its soon-to-begin addition is completed, and the reason for the new supply of space is demand.

Swendig, the head coach of COM's TAGS team, passes the credit for COM's recent successes down through the ranks.

"I guess I'm more of an aquatic director than anything else," Swendig said. "I hire assistant coaches, set schedules and make arrangements for coaches to conduct their workouts.

"But the running of the practices are pretty much left up to the coaches.

"There's no question about it. I coach 30 kids out of 300, and when they get to me they're dedicated swimmers.

"When you talk about getting kids to the state meet, they're already of that caliber before I even have a chance to work with them. That's a testament to the coaching staff here."

That staff includes Midland High head swimming coach Larry Ridge and his Midland Lee counterpart, Jeff Goelz.

Ted Carson oversees the adult Masters Group. And Beth Barber, Sunday Brasher, Cathy Kennedy, Carolyn Sheffield and Sara Welch are instrumental in guiding youngsters in the Learn To Swim area, a program coordinated by office manager Josie Birdwell, who also oversees computerized results at all the meets.

"Swimmers are not born, they're made," said Swendig, who, as a member of the 1977 Chaparral team that finished second nationally, knows first hand. "Mainly they're made through their own hard work and a combination of efforts by parents, coaches and teachers.

"I would compliment my staff to the highest degree because they're the ones that get the kids to the state meet and make the reputation for this team."

And not to be ignored for their often unsung contributions are the members of the COM Board of Directors.

President Ron Stroman and vice president Dale Strauss work along with treasurer Martin Krall and secretary Charlotte Johnson in directing the board. Other present board members are Patty Stoltz, A.J. Wachsmann, Jim Brown, Charles Wallace, Susie Seltzer, Larry Goodwin and James Ritchie.

It's a working group of individuals, any of whom might be found doing pool-side duty during a swim meet.

"Our board is not simply made up of decision makers," Swendig said. "These folks get right down on the deck and run meets."

And then there's Charles Koch, the first person Swendig contacted when he took over the COM controls.

"I remembered Mr. Koch from back when I swam on the team," Swendig said of the local businessman and swimming enthusiast.

"He's been instrumental in this program since Day 1. He's been 100-percent behind the team since he was on the board years ago when his daughter swam for the team."

And without Swendig at the controls, COM might have sunk from sight well before plans were drawn up to expand the pool by more than double its present size.

Learn To Swim program starts 'em young

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

The success of the City of Midland Swim Team's Learn to Swim Program can simply be measured by the numbers.

Since the team and the program came into existence in 1967, more than 25,000 West Texans have overcome the inability to swim. And it's that reason as much any other that COM was in such need of the expansion of the Mabee Memorial Swim Center that is now under way.

COM secretary Josie Birdwell, who has been with the team since its infancy in the early 1970s, said she remembers Learn to Swim being in full swing when she came aboard, and now more than 1,500 people a year participate.

Before the Mabee pool was built in 1972, the team was forced to work out at local YMCAs or the two high school pools at Midland High and Midland Lee. And Learn to Swim has grown to the point where classes are even now being conducted at the high schools.

When completed, the new 25-yard by 25-yard pool — along with the existing 25-yard pool and smaller beginners pool — should give COM the capability to accommodate 2,500 Learn to Swim participants a year.

In addition to teaching the basics of swimming, the program has also served as a springboard for many youngsters into the competition level that the COM team provides.

There's something for everyone in the newspaper...

AL Roundup

DETROIT — Don Mattingly drove in four runs and hit one of New York's four home runs Saturday as the undefeated Yankees downed the winless Detroit Tigers 8-1.

Charlie Hayes, Mel Hall and Randy Velarde also homered for the Yankees, now 4-0 under new manager Buck Showalter. It is New York's best start since a 5-0 beginning in 1988.

The Tigers fell to 0-5, their worst start since going 0-6 to open the 1959 season.

Tim Leary (1-0) won in his first start since last Aug. 11, allowing one run on four hits in eight innings. He is 5-0 lifetime against Detroit, with three wins at Tiger Stadium. He came within three outs of pitching the Yankees' first complete game since last July, a span of 87 starts that is a major league record.

Rangers 10, Twins 8

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Reimer hit a two-run double in the 10th inning that capped rallies against Scott Erickson and Rick Aguilera, and the Texas Rangers beat Minnesota.

Erickson, a 20-game winner in 1991, blew all but one run of a 6-0 lead but the Twins were still up 7-5 in the ninth. Aguilera, who had 42 saves in 51 attempts last year but has failed on two of four chances in 1992, allowed Dean Palmer's leadoff double and Ivan Rodriguez's one-out homer to tie it at 7.

With one out in the 10th, Aguilera (0-2) walked Ruben Sierra and allowed Juan Gonzalez's single before Reimer doubled into the right-center field gap. Palmer followed with an RBI single off Tom Edens for a 10-7 lead.

Aguilera entered the game after Gary Wayne had struck out the side in the eighth.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 2

TORONTO — Jack Morris won again, pitching seven strong innings as undefeated Toronto beat Baltimore for the Blue Jays fifth straight victory and the best start in team history.

Morris (2-0), signed as a free agent to be the staff ace, followed up his victory in Detroit on opening day by limiting the Orioles to two runs on seven hits. He struck out four and walked four in outpitching Rick Sutcliffe (1-1).

A's 7, White Sox 6

OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson singled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning and the Oakland Athletics, after overcoming an early six-run deficit, rallied past Chicago and raised their record to 5-0.

Dan Pasqua's grand slam put Chicago ahead 6-0 in the third inning. Mark McGwire homered for the third straight game and Jose Canseco also connected as Oakland began its comeback, and the Athletics tied it in the ninth with a run against Bobby Thigpen.

Angels 4, Brewers 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Don Robinson, making his first American League appearance after 14 seasons in the National League, pitched 6⅓ shutout innings as the California Angels beat Milwaukee for their first victory of the season.

Robinson, a 34-year-old right-hander who signed with California as a free agent for $900,000, allowed five hits, struck out three and walked two. It was his first victory since last July 15, when he was with San Francisco.

Red Sox 7, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Tim Naehring hit a two-run homer in the 19th inning and the Boston Red Sox beat Cleveland, ending the longest game by time in Indians' history.

A crowd of 65,813 turned out to see the Indians' home opener, but half the fans had left when the game ended 6 hours, 30 minutes later.

Mariners 1, Royals 0

SEATTLE — Randy Johnson pitched a four-hitter for his fourth career shutout, and Pete O'Brien ended an 0-for-18 streak against Kevin Appier with a seventh-inning homer.

The Royals are off to an 0-5 start, the worst in the franchise's 24-season history.

Bagwell leads Astros past Reds

Associated Press

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Hot-hitting Jeff Bagwell drove in the go-ahead run with a two-out single in the eighth inning Saturday night, leading the Houston Astros over Jose Rijo and the Cincinnati Reds 2-1.

Bagwell, the 1991 National League Rookie of the Year, is 9 for 21 in five games, a .429 average. He was 1 for 4 Saturday night.

Rijo (0-2) lost despite striking out 12 in eight innings. He walked one and allowed nine hits and both runs.

Al Osuna (2-0), Houston's third pitcher, got two outs for the victory and Doug Jones finished for his first save with the Astros.

With the score tied at 1, Casey Candaele singled, was sacrificed to second but was thrown out at third on Steve Finley's grounder. Finley went to second on the fielder's choice and scored on Bagwell's single.

Cincinnati's Hal Morris was thrown out at the plate in the fourth after a flyout and collided with catcher Eddie Taubensee. Starter Mark Portugal and Oliver exchanged words and several players from both benches approached home plate, but no punches were thrown.

Craig Biggio of the Astros went 3-for-3, giving him five consecutive hits over two games.

Houston went ahead in the first when Biggio reached on an infield single, took third on Finley's single and scored as Bagwell grounded into a double play.

Cincinnati tied the score in the fourth after it loaded the bases on Paul O'Neill's walk and singles by Morris and Reggie Sanders. Portugal, who allowed five hits in seven innings, then threw a wild pitch.

Phillies 7, Pirates 4

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Ruben Amaro hit his second home run of the week and Andy Ashby pitched six strong innings in his first appearance of the season as the Philadelphia Phillies beat Pittsburgh.

Barry Bonds hit his third home run for the Pirates. Doug Drabek (1-1) allowed five runs and three hits in six innings and struck out seven. The Pirates made three errors behind Drabek that led to one unearned run.

Ashby, a 24-year-old right-hander, allowed four hits in six innings, struck out four and walked one. Ashby, 1-5 in eight games last season, got into trouble only once, when Bonds homered in the fourth.

John Kruk's RBI groundout tied the score in the bottom of the inning when second baseman Jose Lind was late in tagging a sliding Dave Hollins. Dale Murphy followed with an RBI single for a 2-1 lead and Wes Chamberlain was credited with a two-run single when his grounder skipped past shortstop Jay Bell.

Darren Daulton hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth and Amaro hit a two-run homer off rookie Miguel Batista in the seventh to make it 7-1. Amaro hit only three runs in 472 at-bats last season for Edmonton of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League and none in 23 at-bats with California.

It was the first major league appearance for Batista, a 21-year-old right-hander claimed from Montreal in the major league draft. Pittsburgh must keep him on its roster all season or offer him back to the Expos for $25,000.

Pittsburgh scored three runs in the ninth off Mitch Williams on Steve Buechele's RBI double, Jeff King's pinch-hit triple and Jose Lind's sacrifice fly.

Expos 9, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Dennis Martinez shut down New York on three hits through seven innings and Arci Cianfrocco hit a rare, three-run single, leading Montreal past the Mets on a wet and cold afternoon.

Martinez (1-1) gave up one run, struck out five and walked four. Howard Johnson hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth for the Mets, ending their 18-inning scoreless streak.

Jeff Fassero pitched the last two innings. The game was played in 40-degree temperatures, and a light rain fell throughout.

David Cone (0-1) allowed four runs in the fourth inning, and left after the seventh with the Expos ahead 4-1. Cone, who tied Roger Clemens for the major league lead in strikeouts last season, fanned 11.

Tim Wallach and Marquis Grissom each drove in two runs. Wallach had three hits, including two doubles, and Grissom had two hits and two of Montreal's five stolen bases.

The Expos scored four times in the fourth. In the seventh, Montreal loaded the bases with two outs, and Cianfrocco hit a pinch-single on a 3-2 pitch, scoring all three runners. Wallach added an RBI double in the ninth and Grissom hit a run-scoring single.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 1

CHICAGO — Reliever Chuck McElroy tripled, singled and pitched 2⅓ perfect innings for a save as Chicago broke a three-game losing streak with a victory over St. Louis.

McElroy took over in the seventh for Shawn Boskie (1-0) after Tom Pagnozzi doubled with two outs. McElroy struck out pinch hitter Craig Wilson on three pitches, preserving a 2-1 lead.

McElroy tripled with one out in the seventh and Chico Walker drew a walk from Jose DeLeon (0-1). After McElroy scored on a sacrifice fly by Jose Vizcaino, Walker stole second and scored on a single by Ryne Sandberg.

Giants 3, Braves 0

ATLANTA — Bill Swift, acquired from Seattle in the Kevin Mitchell trade, pitched a six-hitter for his second career shutout Saturday night as the San Francisco Giants beat the Atlanta Braves 3-0.

Swift (2-0) struck out a career-high eight and walked two. His only previous shutout came against Kansas City on June 26, 1988. He had beaten Los Angeles 8-1 Monday in his first National League start.

Mike Bielecki (0-1), making his first start for the Braves, gave up two runs and five hits in six innings, walked four and struck out five.

Travis Cage (1-1) suffered the loss.

TCU improved to 20-20 overall and 10-14 in the Southwest Conference. The Red Raiders fell to 23-19 and 12-15 after dropping all three games to TCU.

Beto Garzo-Gongora had a two-run single in the fifth to snap a 1-1 tie. J.J. Varney (3-3) suffered the loss.

No. 7 Texas 5, Texas A&M 4

COLLEGE STATION — Braxton Hickman's RBI double in the eighth inning propelled Texas past Texas A&M for the Longhorns' eighth straight victory.

The Longhorns are 33-8 overall and atop the Southwest Conference with a 20-4 mark. The Aggies, who have lost four in a row, fell to 25-15 and 12-11.

Texas owns a 7½-game lead over second-place Texas in the SWC race.

With the score tied 4 in the eighth, Chris Abbe opened the inning with a double before Hickman's double to right gave Texas its 19th come-from-behind victory.

A&M had jumped out early 2-0 on solo home runs by Brian Thomas and Jason Marshall. It was Marshall's first homer in 578 career at-bats over four years.

The Longhorns rallied in the sixth with a two-run double by Mark Prather and a two-run single by Robert DeLeon.

John Dickens (4-0) was the winner for Texas in four innings of relief. He allowed four hits and no runs.

Brian Harrison (4-4) was the loser, chased in the sixth after allowing six hits and four runs.

ANGELS: Blyleven starts tonight

for the Angels' first home run of the year, a shot over the left field wall.

The Angels went ahead for good in the ninth when centerfielder John Jackson scored after Rod Coreia hit a ball off the glove of San Antonio first baseman Mike Busch. The ball bounced into right field after dusting Busch's glove, allowing Jackson to score from second.

Midland also put a run on the board in the fourth when Coreia scored on a double play ball by Phillips.

After knocking four home runs in their season debut Friday night, the Missions' were held to just one round-tripper by Tony Barron, his second of the season.

Major League veteran Bert Blyleven gets his first start of the season tonight as the 279-game winner begins his Class AA rehabilitation assignment from arm surgery. Blyleven hasn't pitched in the minors in 21 years, and has not pitched competitively since August of 1990, with the California Angels.

Blyleven will face another rehab project, Chris Nichting, who hasn't thrown since 1989 following elbow injuries.

Game time is 6:05 p.m., with coverage on KCRS (550 AM).

Calallen junior sets national prep mark

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Calallen High School junior Amy Acuff set a national prep record by clearing 6 feet, 3 inches at a district track meet Saturday.

The leap, which also qualified 16-year-old Acuff for the U.S. Olympic Trials in June, surpassed the previous national girls' record by one-quarter of an inch.

"I wasn't turning flips or anything," Acuff said, "but it felt like I was about to come out of my skin. The adrenalin was really popping."

Acuff's previous best high jump was 6-2, a height she cleared three times last spring.

She now boasts the best freshman (6-0), sophomore (6-2,) and junior (6-3) high jumps in U.S. history, as well as all-time national marks for 15- and 16-year-olds.

Acuff captured the District 30-4A championship on a muggy, breezy morning when she vaulted 6 feet on her first jump, beating the runner-up by 11 inches.

Michael Andretti hangs on to pole at Long Beach

Associated Press

Indy-Cars

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Michael Andretti kept plugging until it all came together Saturday, hanging onto the pole position for Sunday's Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach.

The defending IndyCar PPG Cup champion, who won the provisional pole Friday on a street circuit that this year is the shorter and faster than previous years, turned a lap of 106.894 mph with only about four minutes remaining in Saturday's session to grab his second straight pole and 10th in the last 20 events.

Danny Sullivan, a former CART series champion who struggled through a frustrating year in 1991 with the now-departed Alfa Romeo engine program, took the outside spot on the front row with a last-minute lap of 106.191 before slamming nose-first into a tire wall.

"At least we were able to run the whole session," said Andretti, who was somewhat frustrated in the first two events this season by mechanical ills. "Even when we were on used tires (midway through the 30-minute session), we made some adjustments and improved our speed.

"I knew when we got new tires on (at the end), we'd improve."

Andretti set the target speed on Friday in the opening round of time trials with a lap of 105.633, which was quickly topped on Saturday.

Al Unser Jr., who has won the last four races here, took the tentative pole just six minutes into the session at 105.840, then upped that to 105.943 just two minutes later.

Exactly halfway through the session, that was bettered by Scott Pruett, who turned a 106.128, becoming the first driver to go under 54 seconds for a lap on the 1.59-mile, eight-turn course.

Meanwhile, Andretti, driving one of the team's 1992 Lolas powered by the new Ford Cosworth XB engine for the first time this week after starting the season with an upgraded 1991 chassis modified for the new power plant, continued to improve.

He jumped back to second with a lap of 106.091 just before a red flag waved to stop the session after Pruett's Chevrolet Indy V8-A engine blew, oiling down the circuit. Andretti then turned his pole-winning lap just as another red flag came out after Eddie Cheever stopped on course.

There was just enough time after the session resumed for Sullivan to put his new Galmer-Chevrolet-A in second.

"Those red flags and yellow flags do kind of mess up your rhythm," Andretti said. "I don't feel I got the best out of the last set of tires. I think the next lap (after his fast lap) would have been the fast one."

Sullivan, whose last front-row start was the season-ending race at Monterey, Calif., in 1990 when he won the pole and race in his last start for Team Penske, said, "Like everybody else, when there's so many yellows and reds, it's hard to get your car tuned in.

"I tried a little too hard and bumped the wall the lap after my fast one. I had another good lap going, but not as good as Mike's. So I'll take what I got. It's just nice to be competitive again."

Sullivan was 10th on Friday.

Pruett wound up third, followed by Unser — Sullivan's teammate — at 106.091, Emerson Fittipaldi 105.753, Cheever 105.620, Mario Andretti 105.525 and Bobby Rahal, winner last week at Phoenix, at 105.005. The top four drivers all broke 54 seconds.

Sunday's race is scheduled to go 105 laps.

"Look at the grid; look at how tight it is," Michael Andretti said. "Any one of the top 10 drivers could win this thing."

Sullivan said the new track configuration — 0.69 miles and three turns shorter and considerably quicker than the old layout — will make it easy to pass slow cars, but will keep things plenty competitive up front.

"It's not easy to pass because everybody's so close," he said. "I don't think the front of the field will stretch out that much because even if you're quicker than the guy in front of you, it's tough to get past."

City considers options for Poe successor

■ Council members are considering options in filling the city manager position, which will be vacated January 1993.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland City Council members are evaluating options for replacement of City Manager Fred Poe.

It's a choice that could impact the city budget and restructure the administration, potentially cutting city management staff by one.

Set to retire Jan. 31, 1993, Poe has three working under him — Mike McGregor, deputy city manager; Susan Thorpe, assistant city manager; and Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager. The number of managers has been criticized by the public.

"What we've talked about is a normal transition," said J.D. Faircloth, at-large council member.

"We have a group of people in line," said District 1 council member James Devenport. "I think Mike McGregor is the heir apparent (for the manager job), and I'd be for leaving (the deputy) job vacant."

"If you don't look first at your existing employees to see if the qualifications exist internally for growth, I think you destroy morale," said Bill Morrow, at-large member. "My impressions of the (three management staffers) are very favorable."

Distribution of the duties could involve Ms. Thorpe and Menchaca as well as some department heads, Devenport said.

"I would recommend not adding a position," said Faircloth, who supports moving McGregor into the top job.

"As the number two man for nine years, I think he's the obvious choice," Faircloth said. "A number of people who've worked with him have been generally supportive."

So city management may run with three on staff next year instead of four.

"That's what all businesses are looking at, how

Focusing on a rattle and reaching for it may seem like a simple task for an infant, but it has required months of work for 21-month-old Alex Gonzales.

"Go for it Alex. Reach for it," said therapist, Marla Morgette as his mother shook the rattle a foot away from his face.

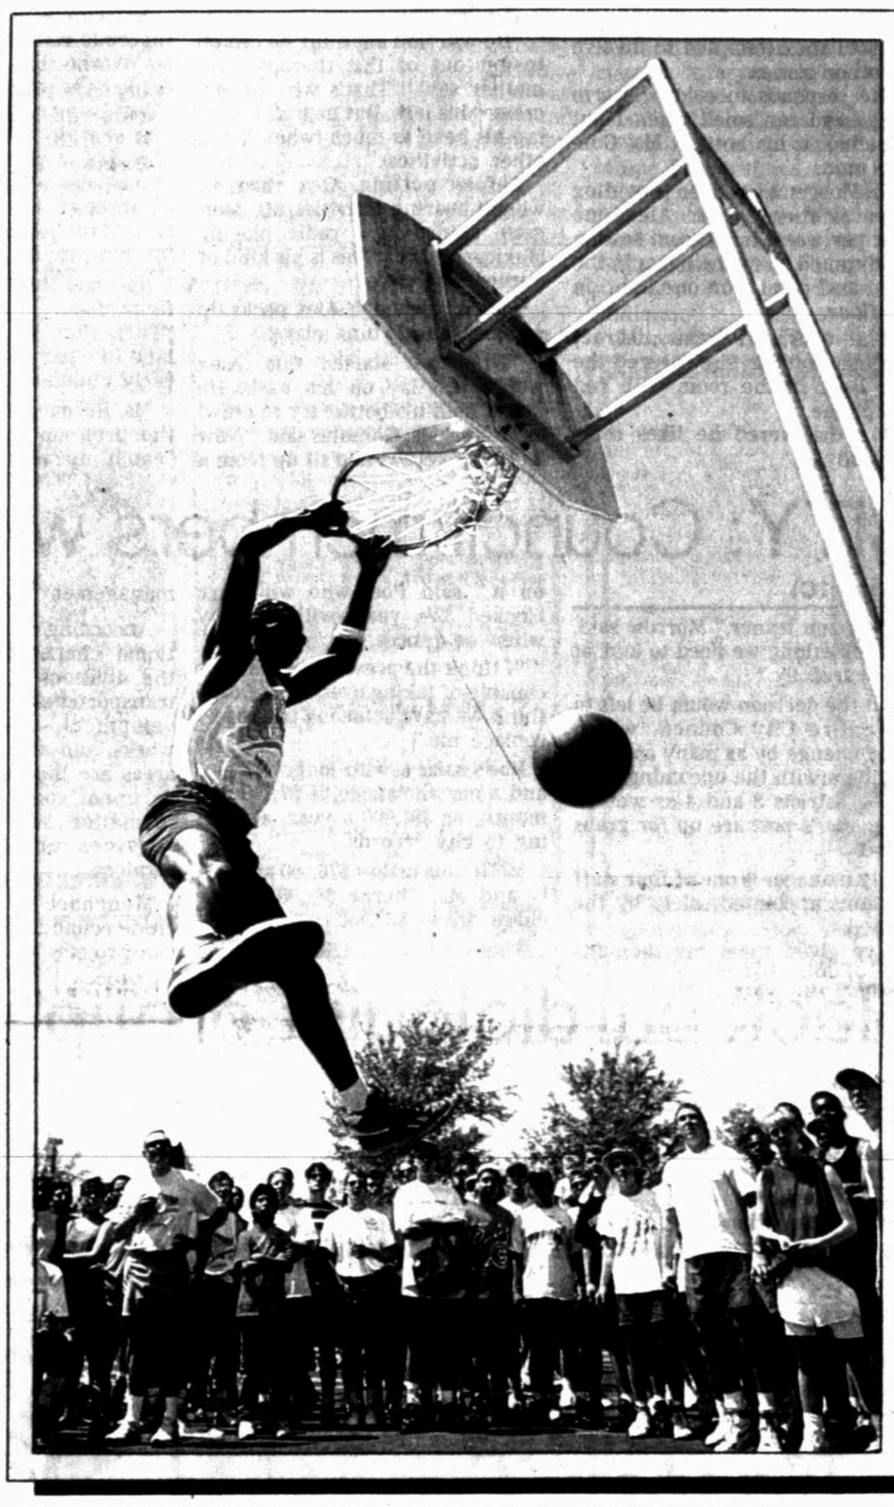

"He got it," said his mother, laughing. "Good boy, Alex, you did it."

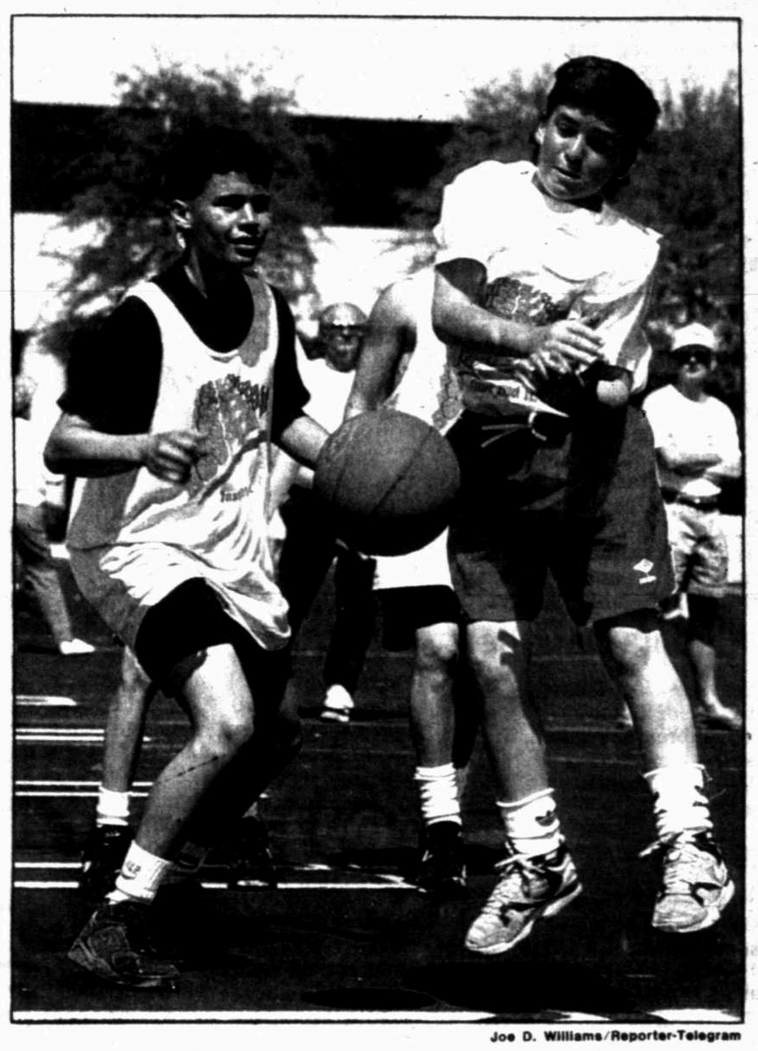

With the help of his mother, Leonarda Gonzales, and his therapist, Alex is learning to focus on objects, reach for them, gain a sense of balance and begin to sit up.

Jamboree looks to break record

Staff Report

Midland Lions are hoping to serve more than 10,000 people and break all previous attendance records at this year's annual Pancake Jamboree, according to Ike Fitzgerald, president of Midland Downtown Lion's Club, which sponsors the event.

The Pancake Jamboree gets under way at 7 a.m. April 25, and concludes at 7 p.m.

Fitzgerald said he was hopeful that moving the location from Dellwood Mall to Chaparrel Center, and expanding the Health Fair would provide the impetus to break the 10,000 attendance mark.

IBM invests in city's youth

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Aiding others in developing literacy, particularly computer literacy, is the focus of International Business Machines Corp.'s gift of 12 personal computers and printers to the African-American Business Development Center.

The center is a function of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

The IBM gift of computers and the center's dedication to building self-esteem and business skills in young people was celebrated Saturday at a ribbon-cutting ceremony in the center.

"We all are focusing on the same thing — increased literacy for our children," IBM's Jacquelyn Donald-Mims of Dallas said following the dedication. "And that's not only just ABCs, reading, writing and arithmetic. That's also computer literacy."

Mrs. Donald-Mims, a planner for IBM's markets in Europe, Asia, and the Pacific, was instrumental in persuading IBM to donate the used personal computers to the center.

The computers had been used by IBM office workers and were replaced by a new wave of personal computers for IBM office use.

Mrs. Donald-Mims is on the board of directors of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

Today's job market, Mrs. Donald-Mims said, is demanding basic skills in computer use and "the skill of just being able to do anything on a computer.

"Most things large companies do, they do electronically."

Companies are demanding computer literacy at the clerical, executive and professional levels, she said.

GARY OTT

The world is changing through these 40-year-old eyes

Let's see. According to the big clock on the wall, it is now 1:13 p.m. on Thursday, April 9th.

That means I have been 40 years old for exactly 13 hours and 13 minutes. Isn't 13 supposed to be an unlucky number? I wonder if God is trying to tell me something.

Ott

As in, "Beware, hot shot, you're in for a lousy year."

Maybe so, but that doesn't stop me from speaking my mind.

What follows is this kid's first rambling thoughts as a 40-year-old:

■ Forty sounds a whole lot worse than it feels. When I woke up this morning, for example, I didn't feel any different than I did the day before. But somehow when I say the word forty I get this dreadful mental picture of a slightly balding overweight man living in a brick home he can't really afford with a wife he doesn't really like and three kids who give him heartburn every time they walk into the room. Instead of speaking when passing each other in the hall, they all snarl and grunt at one another.

For some reason, saying thirty-nine doesn't conjure up that image.

■ I'm tired of hearing people say, "Hey, 40 is not so bad. It sure beats the alternative."

Perhaps, but it is still a boring cliché. You'll need to come up with something more clever in order to amuse me.

■ Women make a valid argument when they say, "Men have it lucky. You become distinguished. We just get old."

What can I say? It's an unfair world. Besides, I didn't make the rules.

■ Lying about my age doesn't work. Deep inside, I know the truth.

■ It is a fact that once you turn 40 you have a tendency to feel sorry for yourself and become overly concerned about life passing you by. The key is not to burden other people with your petty fears.

■ Suddenly, I find myself taking delight when learning that someone is actually older than I thought they were. I say things like, "Gee, I have 15 years before I'm that old."

■ Magazine articles about young women who are attracted to "older" men have taken on a new, more significant, meaning.

■ Hearing people talk about "the good old days" no longer irritates me.

■ Best line I've seen today was in a card mailed to me by my sweet little grandmother. It said, "How does it feel to be 40? I'll be 88 on my next birthday."

She always could keep things in their proper perspective.

■ And while we're on the subject of birthday cards, check this one out that just arrived in the mail. On the cover is a picture of two very elderly looking gentleman. The first one says, "Hello, I'm Bill Hill." The other one says, "And I'm Phil Hill." Then in unison they say, "We were born on the exact same day and year as you were." You open the card and it says, "Happy birthday to someone who's as old as the Hills."

Ha, ha, ha. Turn 40 and everyone's a comedian.

■ It has just dawned on me that I am of the generation which is not particularly shocked when learning that a presidential candidate smoked pot and tried to avoid the draft during his college days.

■ What does shock me, however, is that people of my generation are actually running for president.

■ I can vividly remember the names of all the bands who performed at Woodstock, and for some incredibly silly reason I still consider that three-day event the ultimate "weekend of love."

■ By the same token, I find myself becoming increasingly disgusted with the current crop of "young people" who are mindlessly obsessed with today's musicians.

■ More and more, it seems, I am taking great delight in witnessing the so-called "elder statesmen of sports" — men like Nolan Ryan, Jack Nicklaus, Jimmy Conners, George Foreman — embarrass those young punks with flat bellies.

■ A terribly attractive young woman who can't possibly be more than 25 years of age just walked past my desk. Out of the corner of my eye I am admiring her fantastic legs. My mind is conjuring up delicious fantasies that aren't fit to be printed in a family newspaper.

Gee, I do believe I'm going to make a great "dirty old man."

Gary Ott is managing editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

INFANT: Program helps parents, family

one or two a day and sometimes goes two or three days without one."

His mother said constant seizures and drowsiness have contributed to his delayed development.

She said Alex was unresponsive to his environment as an infant.

"We wondered if he could hear and see," she said.

But after months of therapy with the Mental Health Mental Retardation Infant Stimulation Program, Alex is gaining some coordination.

"In the past two or three months he has started to do things independently," Ms. Morgette said. "But he may have a vision problem. He can see his bottle clear across the room but not when he gets right up to it."

"He may need glasses and may have a mild hearing loss," his mother added.

When Ms. Morgette didn't get a response from appealing to the child's sight and sense of hearing, she said she attempted to involve his other senses.

"He responds to cold or warm things and can smell when I put medicine in his bottle," Ms. Gonzales said.

Ms. Morgette has been providing physical therapy for Alex one hour per week. In a recent session she dimmed all of the lights in the room and turned on one light on the floor.

"The overhead lights distract him," she said, as she covered the only light in the room with red cellophane.

"We discovered he likes red," she said.

Hugging the child to her as he faced front, the therapist placed him on a ball and bounced it. "When we first started this with Alex, we started him on the ball. It gives him a sense of security like a hug," she said. "It also stimulates his muscles and gets him used to this range of motion."

Leaning the ball from side to side, the therapist left Alex's upper body free encouraging him to hold his head up and catch his balance rather than to flop over. She also let him fall back a few times from a sitting position and didn't catch him. "Sometimes he has to bump his head, that's how he learns. If you always catch him, he will depend on that," she said.

His mother took it in stride.

"We are also trying to make him look at something before we give it to him. We won't let him reach for it and take it unless he looks at it first," she said.

When Alex is put into a sitting position with his legs crossed to prop him up, he uncrosses his legs and falls back.

"He will find anything he can do to get out of this therapy," his mother said. "That's why he uncrosses his legs. But he isn't bumping his head as much (when doing other activities)."

Before putting Alex through weight bearing activities, Ms. Morgette brings in a radio playing Mexican music. "This is his kind of music," she said.

And sure enough Alex perks up when a jaunty tune plays.

"When we started this, Alex would just lay on his back. He didn't hold his bottle, try to crawl or sit up," Ms. Gonzales said. "Now he tries to crawl and sit up from a sideway's position and he holds his bottle."

She said that every new movement her son learns is cause for excitement with his family.

Annette Bernard, program supervisor, said, "The most gratifying part of this program is that you see the infants learn to do the little things that we take for granted, like reaching for an object. We focus in on the good that is in everything. We try to focus on the positive — what a child can do — rather than what he can't do."

Alex has been receiving physical therapy for almost a year. His therapist attributes much of his success to his mother's attentions. "We train the parents to do these things at home," Ms. Morgette said. "One hour from us once a week won't do the trick.'

Ms. Gonzalez said caring for Alex is a full-time job. "My sister, Mely (Suchio) helps me a lot. She has become a second mom for Alex. And my nine-year-old even works with Alex."

"I accept what he has now — the tuberous sclerosis," she said. "It's been hard, but this program has helped the whole family."

Ms. Bernard said parent education is a big part of the program. "Anyone can refer to our program," she noted. "The infant will go through a screening to determine if the program is appropriate for him or her."

She said the program serves infants from birth to age three. "Then they are referred to Midland Independent School District's early childhood program."

Ms. Bernard said the purpose of the program is to help children "catch up with their peers" or compensate for being developmentally delayed.

Babies may develop slowly if they are born premature or have been bedridden in a hospital for long periods.

"Or they may have Down's syndrome, a genetic syndrome or seizure disorders. Sometimes we just don't know what causes a delay," Ms. Bernard said. "Some children may just have a speech delay and we provide speech therapy. We have seven therapists who see approximately 60 children per month."

Alex's therapist said that she enjoys working with parents as well as the children. "I like seeing the parents' pride when the child learns something," she said. "And I get the infant at the beginning of his or her life and prepare the child and the parent for the road ahead."

Ms. Gonzales said caring for Alex has made her sensitive to other parents who may be dealing with the same type of thing.

"This program has helped Alex and it has helped me and my family," she said. "They have given us support and all I want to do now is help other's who have children going through this."

Ms. Morgette said, "If a child is not drinking from a bottle or rolling over, or delayed in other area, a parent can call us."

"Alex depends on me for everything," Ms. Gonzales said. "I am glad that I have someone I can depend on, too."

The Infant Stimulation Program facility has recently relocated to 401 E. Illinois, Suite 302. The program's new telephone number is 570-3366.

CITY: Council members will make decision

(From 1C)

can we run leaner," Morrow said. "It's something we need to look at very carefully."

But the decision would be left to the entire City Council, which could change by as many as three members with the upcoming elections. Districts 3 and 4 as well as the mayor's post are up for grabs May 2.

City manager is one of four staff positions appointed solely by the council.

"I've given them my thoughts on it," said Poe, who will have clocked 32½ years with the city when he retires.

"I think the present staff is very capable of taking over," he said. "I think we have someone trained to replace me."

Poe's salary, with longevity pay and a car allowance, is $7,740 per month, or $91,000 a year, according to city records.

McGregor makes $76,000 annually and Ms. Thorpe $61,300. Menchaca draws $33,960.

That's a total of $262,000 in city management salaries.

According to the city's organizational chart, McGregor oversees the divisions of engineering and transportation, planning and development, utilities and public works, and airports. Ms. Thorpe's areas are the budget, finance department, communications and information services, community services and administrative services.

Menchaca's varied duties include economic development, special projects and public relations.

Poe, meanwhile, oversees the management staff and has direct supervision over the leaders of the police and fire departments, the internal audit and fleet services.

Faircloth said he expects the change in administration to be reflected in the city's fiscal year 1993 budget, which will be prepared in the next few months.

"I know we don't want to rush into anything," he said. "But I would say the entire council will look at McGregor and decide to promote him or go outside (for applicants)."

Black cardiologist group meets in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Heart disease and other cardiovascular health problems are prevalent among black people, but too few blacks know where and when to go get help, an official for a national group of physicians says.

"There are a number of problems related to cardiovascular health that seem more pronounced among blacks," said Dr. Augustus O. Grant, newly-elected president of the Association of Black Cardiologists.

"We want to examine what sort of reasons there are for this and what we, as black physicians, can do to take care of this."

Grant and about 150 other cardiologists from across the country met in Texas to discuss current issues concerning cardiovascular care of minorities. The two-day program ended today.

Among the topics discussed were cardiovascular care of black HIV-positive patients and access to cardiovascular health care for blacks and other minorities.

LIONS: Event is bargain

(From 1C)

"Breaking 10,000 has always been one of our dreams," said Fitzgerald. "We have come close over the past 35 years, but never broke the record." Last year's Jamboree, which was one of the best-attended drew more than 9,600 people. The largest attendance, however, came during the year of the big oil crash (1986) when more than 9,700 showed up to eat pancakes."

"At $2.50 for all the pancakes, sausage, orange drink and coffee you can consume in a 12-hour period, it is still one of the best all-time bargains going," said Fitzgerald. "Perhaps, even better than the 50 cents we charged in 1956."

At that first Pancake Jamboree, the club earned only $100. This year, however, the organization expects to take in more than $35,000 for support of its charitable projects.

In addition to the draw of the bargain, and day-long entertainment, Downtown Lions are also hoping the expanded Health Fair, which will draw more than 40 participants, will help swell the attendance this year.

Lion Vernon Shock, who will head the Health Fair, said medical testing booths and information exhibits will be set up all around the entrance of Chaparrel Center. "We will have a number of free medical tests which range from blood pressure, cholesterol screening, and eye testing to dental checks."

Burial held for first explosion victim

BRENHAM (AP) — A 5-year-old boy killed when a gas pipeline explosion ripped through a rural southeast Texas community was buried here Saturday as investigators continued to seek the cause of the blast.

Officials from Washington and Austin counties said the blast caused at least $6.6 million in damages to homes and other structures.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board and the Texas Railroad Commission remained at the site of the Tuesday morning explosion that killed two and injured 19.

Railroad commission officials allowed Seminole Pipeline Co., which operates a liquid propane storage facility in salt dome caverns in the area, to resume pumping liquefied petroleum gas through the pipeline Friday. Coastline Gas Pipeline Co. operates an adjoining pipeline.

Derrick Meinen, who would have been 6 years old next month, died instantly in the explosion that destroyed his family's mobile home, the structure closest to the pipeline.

His mother, Jane Meinen, 31, remained in critical, but stable condition Saturday in the intensive care unit of Hermann Hospital in Houston. She has undergone more than 19 hours of surgery for broken bones, severed fingers and massive trauma to her chest.

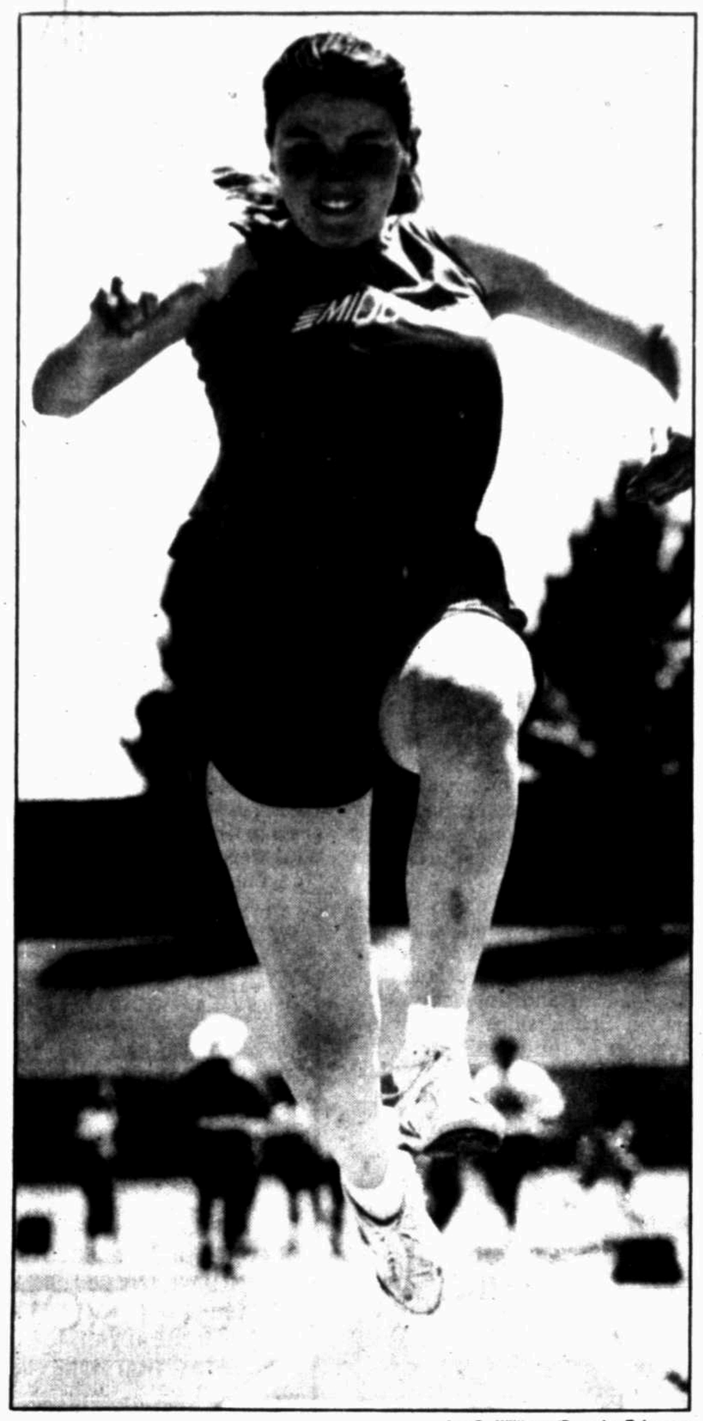

The State

Gloria Diver, 46, who suffered third-degree burns over 60 percent of her body, died early Friday. Her daughter, Delores Medve, 27, remained in critical condition in Hermann's burn unit Saturday, while grandson Travis Medve, 3, was reported in stable condition.

All three had been in a car traveling to work and day care at the time of the blast. It was Mrs. Diver's birthday.

About 200 people, including about three dozen relatives, crowded the First Baptist Church in Brenham Saturday for funeral services for Derrick Meinen.

The American Red Cross is providing assistance to 27 families.

CHAMBER: Group builds youth's self esteem

(From 1C)

"In the future, it is going to be a minimum skill," Mrs. Donald-Mims said Saturday prior to addressing a chamber market-fair gathering in the Midland Hilton Inn.

"We make our decisions using computers. We make projections. We try to understand what has happened in the past. Computer literacy is going to be a minimum, entry-level skill."

Mrs. Donald-Mims was to address the chamber gathering on "The Struggle" of African-American citizens to enjoy a "quality of life at the highest level."

And the building of self-esteem in children and young people is a means toward that goal.

Struggling people need to "know inside of their hearts that they can compete, not just to compete on the basketball court, but they can compete in corporate America," Mrs. Donald-Mims said. "They can aspire to corporate America. They can aspire to their own businesses."

Robbyne Hocker Fuller, who founded the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs in 1986, noted that the African-American Business Development Center is open to "everyone" who wants to learn how to compete and to succeed in the business world.

"We have had people from all ethnic backgrounds come to the chamber," she said. "We don't refuse anyone membership, and we don't refuse anyone training."

The chamber and the center are located at 2707 N. Big Spring St. in Midland.

James Fuller, a Midland College instructor and the chamber's vice president for economic development, cited the importance of young people's positive attitudes toward education.

The chamber has set up an "Excel Youth" program to encourage young people to prepare for careers in companies and in their own businesses.

For example, Fuller said, "We want our kids to know the difference between investment and saving."

"We want them to understand that they can succeed as business persons," he said, "and to understand this whole concept of circulating dollars in their own community as a result of generating and re-generating business ventures."

Those business ventures will help "to sustain our community from an economic standpoint."

In establishing the African-American Business Development Center, the chamber is "simply demonstrating what can happen when people work together and work hard and don't give up regardless of what kinds of obstacles you might encounter," Fuller said.

"We are saying to those in our community, particularly to those in our African-American community, 'We have a job to do. We will do it. We will do it correctly. We will do our homework, and we will succeed.' It's called perseverance," Fuller said.

ENERGY ANSWERS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a feature that gives energy conservation tips provided by the Texas Energy Extension Service.

Question: What is solar-thermal energy and what are some examples of its uses.

Answer: Solar-thermal applications literally use heat from the sun to warm a home or a building or to heat water.

The ideal site for solar-thermal use is sunny with a minimum of cloud cover year round, particularly in the winter when the sun's rays are most needed for heating. Locations with bright, sunny days throughout the winter offer the highest potential for solar-thermal use. For example, solar heating systems are widely used in the southwestern United States because of its constant sunshine.

Applications of solar-thermal energy are divided into two categories: active and passive. Passive solar refers to a use that requires little or no mechanical equipment. It frequently refers to a type of architecture in which a building is designed to capture and store the sun's heat naturally. In other words, the building itself is the solar collector and heat storage mechanism.

Thermal-storage walls and attached solar greenhouses are also examples of passive solar systems.

Active solar heating systems use solar panels with heat-absorbing surfaces to warm a fluid, which is then used to heat water or space in buildings or to provide heat for industrial processes. Active solar heating systems use collectors, pipes, pumps, fans and other mechanical devices to capture and use the sun's heat.

Usually, they require backup systems that use conventional energy sources, such as gas, oil or electricity.

In Texas, the amount of available sunlight increases from east to west across the state because the cloud cover diminishes from east to west. Houston and the Gulf Coast area are generally not as suitable for solar applications because of the cloud cover, density of vegetation and density of population and buildings.

On the other hand, West Texas with its bright, sunny skies and open plains offer many good sites for capturing solar energy.

Gov. Ann Richards signing the resolution which notes that Texas community colleges celebrating with the theme "Texas Community Colleges: Building Communities One Mind At a Time."

Community colleges provide a broad array of educational services which include academic transfer programs, two-year degree programs, basic skills education, certificate programs for job training, continuing education, career development, job search assistance, counseling, and community development activities.

Community colleges enroll 48 percent of all students in public Texas higher education.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Faculty members offer students advising assistance

By H.A. Tuck

Current Midland College students are being given an opportunity to reserve fall semester classes through April 24 with more assistance from faculty members.

Tuck

Advisors, who may be any faculty members selected by students, assist the students in filling out class schedules and discussing majors or degree plans. Students then fill out a reservation form, have it signed by the faculty member, and return it to the Student Services office.

All that's left is for the student then to register and pay fees during the July 20-Aug.6 early registration period. Changes also may be made at that time from the reservation form, since circumstances may alter class needs.

Freshman advising conferences will be held July 20, 21, 27, 28, and Aug. 3, 4, 10, and 11.

Friday and April 20, are holidays for Midland College with all offices closed.

When students return, they'll have just two weeks left for classes and one week for final exams in the spring semester. This year's graduation ceremony is scheduled for May 8.

A Career Fair is taking place at the Student Center Wednesday, with a number of local and area companies coming to seek employees and advise students as to their educational requirements for future employment.

As an incentive to participate, students also can become video stars through "Fun Flicks," an interactive video system which allows students to fly like Superman, sing in a music video, walk on the moon, or take part in several other action events.

It all takes place from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Student Center.

Session III of College Classics starts this week for a four-week run.

College Classics are knowledge-filled afternoon classes, usually for an hour or so one day per week, which are especially for those at least 55 years of age. There's a single enrollment fee of $25 to take as many classes as desired.

If you'd like to know more, call 685-4518 or visit the Continuing Education Office.

The April breakfast for Small Business owners and operators, as well as would-be entrepreneurs, is taking place on April 21. Since that's the morning the college resumes after being closed for a long weekend, you'd best call the Continuing Education Office at 685-4518 for reservations. Cost is $5 per person, payable at the door. The door, by the way, is in the Student Center leading to the Chaparral Hall.

If you'd like to meet the candidates for the various Midland College Board of Trustees places, you should be at the MC Health Science Building Lecture Hall at 2 p.m. on Tuesday. A forum moderated by faculty members is designed to acquaint the candidates with the faculty.

The forum is being sponsored by the MC Faculty Council. Kent Moss, president of the Faculty Council, said the forum is open to the public, as well as being especially for faculty, students, and staff.

The golf and tennis teams are active this week. Chaparral golfers are competing in the Texas State Junior College Tournament, which they won last spring. This year's event is being held at the Mill Creek County Club in Salado.

This morning, the Chap women tennis players are slated to play Odessa College as the final match of three this weekend at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces. On Tuesday, the men will play New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell.

Friday and Saturday, both teams will be playing in a pro-am event at Bentwood Country Club in San Angelo.

Final home appearances, ever, for the tennis teams will be April 23-25, when MC hosts the Region V tournament on the MC courts. That same weekend, the golfers are competing in their Region V tournament at the Odessa Country Club.

Current art being displayed at Midland College's McCormick Gallery is whimsical and colorful in flights to fantasy or trips into the past. Although the two artists are from different parts of the country, their work turns out being quite similar in many respects. Rob Gischer of Blaine, Wash., and Sally Grant of San Antonio are the two artists. Their work may be seen through Tuesday. Hours of the McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, are 1-5 p.m. today and 8 a.m.-10 p.m. both Monday and Tuesday. Admission always is free.

Final show for the spring semester is the Student Show that opens April 22 and closes May 3.

Three classes offered this week through Continuing Education have quite different subjects. You might wish to register for Infant and Child C.P.R., for Managing Your Retirement, or for Watercolors.

The only class starting the week of April 21 is Aerobics.

Registration takes only a few minutes and is handled in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building. Call 685-4518 if you need more information about any of these classes.

And remember the Continuing Education office will work with local businesses and organizations to tailor classes for specific needs. The classes can be credit or non-credit, taught either at the college or at your site. Just call 685-4519 and one of the Continuing Education account executives will provide the details.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

INTRODUCING CLEARVOICE K

Tune into the soft voices, not the noise.

Sometimes, in this noisy world, it's difficult to hear the soft sounds like people's voices. Beltone's continuously self-adjusting ClearVoice K amplifies only the soft sounds, so you'll hear more clearly no matter where you go.

With the K-Amp™ microcircuit, annoying loud sounds like shouting, doors slamming and dishes clattering pass through without any amplification as if there were no hearing aid present. The result is crisp, clean, natural high-fidelity sound.

If it's a problem when people speak too softly, call Beltone today. ClearVoice K can help you recapture the treasures of the human voice.

ClearVoice K micro-circuitry can be placed in hearing aids as tiny as this.

FREE VOICE UNDERSTANDING ASSESSMENT DURING APRIL!

United Way Shining Stars

NAME: Barbara Haralson Reed
OCCUPATION: Facilities Planning/Telecommunications, Texas Instruments
VOLUNTEER POSITION: Chairman of Funds Distribution Panel 4; Grants Committee; Needs Assessment Committee; United Way campaign assistant at TI; Camp Fire President 1989-91.

Barbara Reed has seen United Way in action from the funding standpoint and from the agency's point of view and understands how it takes volunteers to make it all work.

Mrs. Reed bacame involved in Texas Instruments' pilot campaign several years ago. Then, a supervisor who was a Funds Distribution panel chairman enticed Mrs. Reed into signing up for a tour. "It sounded interesting to me, and I got on his panel."

Since then, she's added grants committee and Needs Assessment Committee to her list of United Way duties, while still working on the campaign committee at Texas Instruments.

"There's a lot of needs out there that I wasn't aware of until I got on a Funds Distribution Panel. I gained a broader understanding of all that United Way does and how many people it actually affects," she says.

Mrs. Reed still laughs about how she was "conned" into serving on the Camp Fire board by a friend, but she soon stepped up to the board presidency. "I learned how much change can affect how an agency does business," she says, recalling the year Camp Fire's budget was cut $10,000. "And I saw the team spirit within an agency" when the staff had to cut its budget to make it through the year and still provide programs.

Being on both sides of the fence -- both asking for funds for an agency and reviewing agencies' requests -- has been a good experience, she says. Camp Fire has had a good relationship with its review panel. And as a member of another panel, "We take a business look at the agency but try to keep the human service aspect in mind."

"United Way is a wonderful organization to work with. And we always need more volunteers," she adds.

"The United Way Of Midland serves 36,000 Midlanders through the following agencies and programs: American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' and Girls" Club of Midland, Camp Fire, Casa de Amigos, Citywide Community services, Community and Senior Services of Midland, Family Services, Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program, Freewill Foster Home, Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Midland Rape Crises Center, Midland Need To Read, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scouts, Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center, YMCA's

Medical Assistants Group to host phone-a-thon

Staff Report

The Medical Assistants Group will be participating in a phone-a-thon to benefit the Children's Miracle Network.

The Medical Assistants Group, a professional national organization comprised of members who work in the medical field, includes 500 members in Texas alone. Twenty members of the local chapter will be volunteering their time from 7-9 p.m. Monday to raise money for the Children's Miracle Network.

The group will be calling residents of the community to secure pledges to kickoff this year's telethon, which will be broadcast on May 30-31 on KTPX-TV, Channel 9.

Cash Flow Management
George Shivers, Director Of Business Development

From time to time, both large and small businesses have a problem with cash flow. This shortage in cash may be due to seasonal requirements, rapid expansion, product development, or any number of other circumstances. The remedy that most business owners and managers consider first is bank financing. Many times, however, these businesses are ineligible because they have used their entire line of credit, or because they need to avoid long-term monthly payments.

Cash Flow Management, located in Duncanville at 1110 South Santa Fe Trail, phone (214) 780-0081, offers a solution to this cash shortage through factoring. Factoring is the purchase of accounts receivable on a discount basis. In effect, Cash Flow Management is a secondary financial market that helps businesses get through the cash flow crunches that can occur when they have to wait for payment on their invoices. Companies with creditworthy customers can factor their invoices and receive the cash they need in as little as 24 hours. They currently have clients who factor invoices for less than $200.00 as well as clients who factor invoices for thousands of dollars.

To see how your business can benefit from their professional services, contact Cash Flow Management today for additional information.

Midland Dialysis Center Douglas S. Park, MD, FACP

Many health problems can develop if the human body's kidneys are not functioning properly. The kidneys are responsible for calcium production, red blood cell production and hormone production. Therefore, problems could result in chronic anemia, osteoporosis, or in a child, a reduction in physical maturity.

Dr. Park, located at 731 West Wadley Avenue in Midland, phone 687-1201, is skilled in diagnosing and treating possible kidney problems. He can treat problems such as appearance of protein or blood in the urine, high blood pressure caused by a kidney problem, stones, infections and the most serious of kidney disorders—complete renal dysfunction. In cases of complete dysfunction, he may prescribe peritoneal dialysis or hemodialysis. These procedures help to eliminate dangerous toxins from the body. Their ultimate goal, in cases of renal failure, is to transplant a healthy kidney so that the patient may lead a normal, healthy life. Dr. Park and his staff will counsel you and recommend the best therapy for your dysfunction.

Kidney disorders upset a person's normal lifestyle and can keep one from enjoying many activities. If you or a loved one suffer from a kidney disorder, contact Dr. Park at 687-1201 for a consultation today.

Consumer Credit Counseling Service
Non-Profit, Confidential Debt Relief For Overspenders Or Hard Times

Americans have had a long and growing love affair with credit, many embracing the buy-now, pay-later lifestyle. It has never been easier to acquire—and abuse—credit purchases. By the time many people with financial difficulties seek aid, they are deeply in debt to creditors. Often, the only alternatives seem to be bankruptcy, drastic changes in lifestyles or voluntary repossession of assets.

No matter how bleak your financial future looks, Consumer Credit Counseling Service (CCCS) is available to provide assistance and counseling. Located in Midland at 2500 North Big Springs Street, Suite 290, they are experienced in all phases of credit and finance. A nationally certified counselor will sit down with you and help you compile a workable monthly budget and repayment plan. Many consumers qualify for a "debt management program" in which the non-profit agency will negotiate for reduced payments with the creditors. The debt clearing process can be a lengthy procedure, but with professional assistance from CCCS, you can overcome those credit difficulties.

Good credit is one of the most valuable assets an individual can possess. When you need assistance with financial problems, give CCCS a call. With the right help, debts can be repaid and a good credit record can be re-established over time. Contact CCCS at 561-5540 in Midland, or 1-800-541-2227 in West Texas, for a free initial counseling session.

Dream Estate

By Sonja Merrick

This home's dramatically designed exterior is breathtaking, expansive, contemporary. Surrounded by 2½ acres on which 36 pine, five pecan and two fruit-bearing walnut trees thrive, it's completely enclosed by a lovely mission stone fence.

Open the door to more than 7,000 sq. ft. of exquisitely designed, beautifully decorated living space. A skylight sheds sunlight on the entryway — sparkling against its dramatic hunter green walls, reflecting from the gleaming white floor tile.

Situated to the right is an incomparably elegant formal living area. Rich green-painted walls coordinate delightfully with the warm sunny hue of the soft peach carpeting. One wall is almost completely dominated by high French windows. Wainscoating and recessed lighting are among the fine finishing touches.

Straight ahead find an delightful formal dining area. Elegant, delicate floral print wallpaper decorates three walls — the other wall is dominated by shimmering glass windows and doors.

Beyond the doors is an elegantly executed game room. Its walls are primarily brick, doors are arched. This room is large enough to accommodate a pool table with plenty of space to spare.

The communal living areas also include a huge, comfortable family room that boasts a curving stone wall within which is a large fireplace. Two skylights add brightness. Then there's a cozy den with large bay window and built-in shelves and cabinets that dominate three walls.

The kitchen/breakfast area is a masterpiece. Another skylight sends sunbeams dancing across the center island, an expanse of cabinets, multiple counters and bar area. The kitchen includes two ranges and stove tops — beside it lies a very large utility room and pantry. Beyond the barstools is an enchanting breakfast room, with so many windows it almost seems to be outdoors. A glass door situated between kitchen and breakfast areas leads to a sunroom.

On the other side of the house, there are five large bedrooms and six baths. The sequestered master bedroom is enormous — spacious enough to accommodate the largest of bedroom furnishings plus a sizeable sitting area. Next to the master bedroom is a luxurious bath complete with step-up tiled tub, two separate marbled vanities and sinks, separate oversize shower and a huge double walk-in closet.

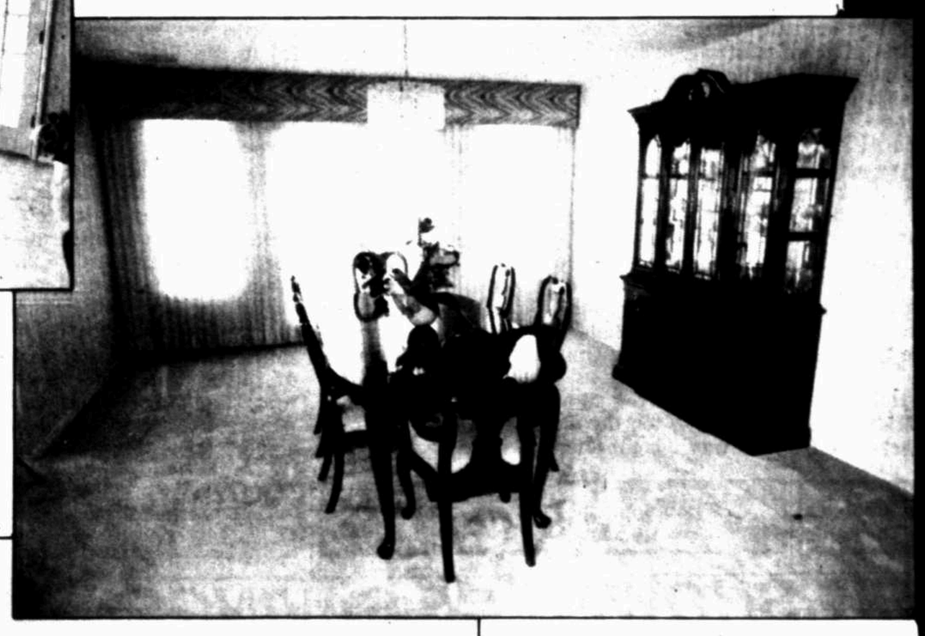

The home also includes separate "mother-in-law" quarters — a luxurious, sequestered apartment with a huge modern kitchen, a living area with fireplace, a large bedroom and two baths. It's accessible from the main part of the house through the sun room, but also has a separate entrance.

The list of amenities is almost endless. Outdoors there's a ¼-mile dog run and all 2½ acres are sprinkled. A great workshop is located in the three-car garage.

Indoors are six skylights, recessed lighting throughout, tons of storage areas.

The home is being offered by Re-Max for $299,900. Shown by appointment only.

Don Harvey, Realtors greets new agents

By Don Harvey

There can never be too much emphasis placed on the importance of knowing the qualifications, background and experience of prospective real estate agents and their company- before you make the final choice of who can best assist you with your real estate needs. It is always a pleasure for us at Don Harvey, Realtors to help those in the process of considering real estate agents and companies by presenting what we have to offer to them. In the final analysis, we always end up focusing on the individual agents and employees that collectively make up the winning team that's responsible for the leadership position we enjoy today.

Phillips

One of the latest members to join our team is Kathy Phillips. Kathy was born in Colorado City, Texas and lived with her family in Hobbs, NM, and Snyder, Texas before they moved to Midland in 1967. After graduating from Lee High School, Kathy worked for a while in Dallas and also Las Vegas before returning to Midland in 1984. Kathy was associated with a large local oil and gas company for seven years before completing her real estate education and obtaining her license.

Kathy's husband, Rick Phillips, is a CPA with Enron Oil and Gas. They have three children, one son and two daughters. Their son, Justin, is in the third grade. Their older daughter, Vandi, is a freshman at Texas Tech University. Their younger daughter, Dawn, is now in the seventh grade. Both Kathy's and Rick's parents, Truman and Evelyn Davis and Bob and Laura Falk, respectively, have been Midland residents for the past 26 years.

In addition to her work with ADDAPT of Midland, Kathy's many hobbies include gourmet cooking, aerobic exercising, interior decorating and snow skiing. Kathy's primary goal in her real estate career is to become known for the quality of service she provides for her customers and clients and her commitment to honesty and integrity.

After six years of real estate experience, John Fields brings a solid and diverse background of experience and training to our company. His many accomplishments include: a Bachelor of Science degree in geology from Lamar University, nine years of experience in the oil and gas industry and two years of experience as a real estate instructor with the Southwest College of Real Estate and Midland College.

John's education, experience and background in the oil and gas industry as well as in real estate are key factors in his ability to more clearly and comprehensively understand the industries that are the engines of Midland's economy. John also understands the real estate needs and objectives of Midlanders and how best to meet those needs and objectives through the continually changing markets of Midland.

John grew up in Beaumont, but has been a Midland resident for the past 16 years. He is married to Ruth Fields, a sales representative for W.W. Grainger. The have two sons — Keefer, now attending Hardin-Simmons University and Kaylor, a sophomore at Midland High School.

Fields

John Fields, Kathy Phillips and all the associates and employees of Don Harvey, Realtors are very proud of the broad range of services we offer our customers and clients and of the great team we have to deliver them. We look forward to our continued and ever-growing role in the service of real estate needs for present and future Midlanders.

Home warranty makes property more attractive

By Pat Paxton

Home warranties are increasingly popular service contracts protecting buyers of previously owned homes from high repair bills for mechanical breakdowns for one year.

Real estate agents like home warranties. Sellers like home warranties. And buyers like home warranties.

Home warranty contracts typically cover repairs on heating systems, electrical systems, plumbing and built-in appliances. Optional coverage for an additional fee usually is available for swimming pools, freestanding appliances, lawn maintenance systems and other items. The typical contract costs about $350 to $399.

Home warranties are not panaceas. Structural problems, such as roof leaks, generally are not covered. Foundation problems — a major worry for many Dallas-area home buyers — are not covered.

Jack Morris, director of programs for the Texas Real Estate Commission, the agency that regulates home warranty companies, says that about 40 percent of all sales of previously-owned homes last year included home warranties. From July 1, 1990 to June 30, 1991, 96,000 homes were sold in Texas through multiple listing services. During that time, 46,400 contracts for home warranties were written at the time of sale.

Currently, 13 companies are licensed to write home warranty contracts. To be licensed, Morris says, companies have to be financially sound, have a good business reputation and provide a reasonable rate of return. Last year, Morris said, home warranty companies paid out $9.5 million in direct costs — more than 55 percent of what they took in. According to Morris, a 40 percent return is considered good for an insurance company.

Paxton

Home sellers like them because they're good selling tools. Home warranties often are purchased by the seller at the time the home is placed on the market. In many cases, partial coverage goes into effect immediately, though the seller is not required to pay for the warranty until the closing. Approximately 60 percent of home warranties are purchased by home sellers.

Buyers like the warranties because of the peace of mind they bring when making such a large investment.

Recently, several companies have expanded their service to the general homeowner's market — people who are currently settled in homes.

American Home Shield's new Homeowner Advantage Package costs a little less than the plan that accompanies real estate transactions. It covers heating, plumbing, duct work, the water heating system and electrical and phone lines.

For information on home warranty policies, contact Midland real estate agencies for the names of warranty services.

Pat Paxton is president of the Midland Association of Realtors.

Association supports mandatory education

Committed to promoting professionalism in the real estate industry, the Midland Association of Realtors, Inc. supports new laws requiring mandatory continuing education (MCE) for real estate agents in Texas.

In 1989, the 71st Texas legislature added a requirement to the Real Estate License Act requiring MCE for real estate license renewals.

"Mandatory continuing education for real estate agents will assure clients and customers knowledgeable, professional assistance when buying or selling real estate," says Pat Paxton, president of the Midland Association of Realtors, Inc. "Realtors have always promoted professional standards within our membership but MCE now requires licensees to keep abreast of changes in the industry."

The Midland Association, a member of the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR), is working closely with the state organization to provide quality courses for agents trying to meet MCE requirements. TAR was the first organization to become a provider of MCE in Texas and offers its courses to both members and non-members.

The Midland Association will provide the location for a TAR sponsored course on Tuesday, April 28. For more information, call the Association office at 682-9725.

When is it a good time to look for a new home?

Whether you're looking for a new home because you've outgrown yours or because it has outgrown you, here are some things to think about.

Currently, mortgage rates are their lowest levels in years... and many buyers are able to move up into larger, more luxurious homes without unaffordable mortgages.

But money isn't everything. There are other factors to be considered. Lifestyle changes may not always be the result of "your ship coming in."

More likely, these changes are a reflection of a family that is coming to know itself better.

For instance, dinner parties are hardly the norm when toddlers are tumbling through the house. Yet, when they're a bit older and you've grown into a more demanding career, you may need a formal dining area. And soon, the kids will want an entirely different kind of entertainment space!

Perhaps you've shared one bath throughout the first few years of marriage. But that's hardly ideal when five of you are trying to get ready at the same time.

Or, you used all three baths to their greatest advantage, along with five bedrooms and a large back yard. But now it's the two of you again, and it would be nice to cozy up together.

The preceding information is provided by Roy Proctor Realtors/Better Homes and Gardens.

How we 'show and tell' Midland to prospective new residents

During the six years we've written articles for the Reporter/Telegram, by far the most popular was our series on introducing Midland to newcomers or potential newcomers. We've received several requests to repeat it — so here goes, in an updated version, and thanks for asking!

We are regularly called upon by professional firms, major and independent oil companies and other community groups to assist in recruiting new hires, doctors, attorneys, directors in arts organizations and other potential transferees to Midland. And we must say that sharing our city with others is one of the most enjoyable aspects of our business.

So how do we "show and tell" Midland to the potential new resident? Next week we'd like to write about the "show," a description of our two-hour drive through the city, but this week we'd like to write about the "tell." In an often wordy but always enthusiastic and sincere description of Midland, we try to make four very important points.

First, we tell potential new citizens that Midland is a very caring city, where the frontier way of neighbors helping neighbors still abounds. The Jessica story is a classic example of this, but we also talk about the annual United Way campaign with its ambitious, necessary and successful two and three-quarter million dollar drive. That's a gift of approximately $27 from every man, woman and child in the county. In fact, according to TEC statistics, Midland ranks number one in the state in giving on a per-employee basis.

Another outstanding example of "caring" Midlanders is that of the Abell-Hangar's truly unbelievable gift of a college education for every graduate of a high school in Midland County. There is not another community in this country (the world?) where every young person, regardless of financial capability, has the opportunity for one year of college, and in many cases two years.

Second, we tell others that Midland is a very cosmopolitan city. Our major oil companies bring us new citizens who have lived all over the country and often the world. Our World War II bombadier base, the largest of its kind, brought us thousands of young men from every state who fell in love with our friendly, warm community or our charming young ladies (or both!), and who elected to return to Midland after the war. Our citizens' broad business interests, social contacts and love for travel regularly take them everywhere! We all know that if you want to see a Midlander, just take a walk through Knightsbridge in London, lunch in SoHo in New York or ride the trolley in San Francisco!

We personally will never forget our first trip to Europe when we walked into the Swiss House in Lucerne only to find John and Charlotte Seay holding the door open for us! Or several years later, the Christmas dinner shared with Gene and Fran Schutte and Paul and Eila Noel after running into them on the fringe of Hyde Park!

And just how does a cosmopolitan citizenry benefit our city? We think it results in a community of individuals who know the best, demand the best and are willing to support the best! Examples are everywhere: in our symphony, museums, theater, arts and in our City of Midland Swim Team, Polo Club and city soccer fields. There just has to be something truly unique and outstanding about a city of our size that produces a president of the United States, Indy 500 winners, Kentucky Derby winners, gold medal olympic swimmers, the only children's theater group in the United States invited to perform in New Zealand's theater festival, the first symphony organization outside the Dallas area invited to play on the outstanding new Meyerson, the Thouvenal Strings who performed in the Orient, the nation's leading cowboy/ranch historian and so much more. We could easily fill the page!

Third, we talk about Midland as a clean city. Wide streets, lawns meticulously maintained in a less-than-nurturing environment, clean alleys, neatly mowed and litter-free school grounds, an abundance of community parks, all of these attest to a community that appreciates and maintains a blue-skyed, safe, inviting environment. Midland is truly, as only one of our favorite English friends could have described it, "a very tidy town!"

Finally, we tell others considering moving to Midland that it is an exceptionally friendly city, our citizens are appreciated and accepted not on the basis of who they are but what they do. One is judged on contributions to the community, not only family ties or being born here. Everyone is welcomed in Midland, a city where an "old timer" is some that has lived here 10 years! And everyone becomes a Midlander, whether he or she becomes a volunteer at Casa de Amigos, drives for Meals on Wheels, tries out for the newest community theater production, coaches a little league team, walks the neighborhood, attends church services, serves on a Chamber of Commerce committee, does aerobics at the Y, opens a new business, joins the PTA, or a jillion other things. "Feeling at home" in Midland is only a week or two away for anyone new!

As initially stated, our "ambassador's tour of this city" is one of the things that we love to do and feel we do best! If you are trying to recruit a new teacher, doctor, employee, director, business, attorney, or whatever, to our city, let us help. Our services are free, utilized by a large number of companies and professionals and they are generously given. Just call me, or our Relocation VP Richard Langston, and tell us when you need us.

Rigs edge up

Above roughnecks tripping at night on JSM Rig No. 2 in Gaines County. The Permian Basin rig count was up one to 96, while the U.S. rig count jumped 19 to 658. Rig counts remain near record low, ending a three-week, record-setting decline. The state of Texas had 234 rigs working for the week ending April 3, according to Baker-Hughes.

Mitchell sells

Mitchell Energy says it is cutting staff, selling assets and curbing exploration, while looking to make more acquisitions. Mitchell says it is positioning itself to survive in what it sees as a period of prolonged weak gas prices.

The company is expecting a loss for the first quarter of 1992. Mitchell hopes to trim its staff by 50 with a voluntary retirement program, bringing the staff down to 610.

Mitchell also noted that it will shift its development budget to oil properties in New Mexico, and to its natural gas liquids business, which have not been hurt by low oil prices.

Oil prices

Oil prices closed Wednesday at $20.62 up 39 cents, and are at highest level of the year, due largely to reports of refinery problems in the U.S. and overseas. Prices have been rising steadily, since late last week, as a result of tensions in the Middle East between Iran and Iraq.

Oil show

As a result of new construction at the Fair Grounds, space is still available for the Permian Basin Oil Show which begins October 21. For the first time the Permian Basin Oil Show is offering 1,000 spaces to exhibitors, and less than 10 percent of the available space remains unsold, according to Jay Alvey, executive director, who encouraged potential exhibitors to call for space.

Alvey said the facilities this year will have new buildings, improved grounds and additional parking. He also noted that the Show had been cut back from four to three days, at the request of exhibitors. The Show this year will run from Wednesday, October 21, through Friday, October 23.

AAPG meeting opens

■ Regional meetings such as the AAPG section meeting in Midland help geologists in a cash-strapped industry keep up with technical advances.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Approximately 600 geologists, members of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, will spend the next two-and-a-half days in Midland hoping to find new ways to find old oil.

The West Texas Geological Society is hosting the 1992 meeting of the Southwest section of the AAPG, to be held at the Midland Hilton and Midland Center beginning Monday and lasting through noon Wednesday.

The purpose of the meeting, according to Marie Bellamy, executive secretary for the WTGS, is continuing education. "It keeps the members updated in their fields with new drilling and exploration techniques."

She said that, to date, 450 have registered for the meeting, not including students, spouses and exhibitors.

The WTGS is one of eight geological societies in the Southwest Section of the AAPG and each society has a turn at hosting the annual meeting. Midland last hosted the meeting in 1984. The 1993 meeting is in Fort Worth.

Michael Party of Wagner and Brown, general chairman of the meeting, said its general theme is "Something Old, Something New: New Concepts for Exploration and Exploitation."

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Marie Bellamy has been with the West Texas Geological Society for over 25 years.

He explained: "We take the old concepts in hand, looking for oil in new places using the old ways, and we also look for oil in old places using the new ways."

Paul H. Pause', program chairman, said that the sectional meetings "are excellent meetings for working professionals because they usually have a more specific focus than the national

Seismic advances bring new hope to the Basin

■ Seismic technology is old stuff, but 3-D is a new twist with great promise.

By Louis J. Mazzullo

Conditions may be bleak for the oil industry but new advances in three-dimensional seismic exploration are breathing new life into maturely-developed petroleum regions like the Permian Basin.

As larger oil and gas fields are played out and depleted, the shift in focus for exploration is to smaller structural and stratigraphic traps which can hold per-well reserves of oil and gas that are comparable to the larger fields.

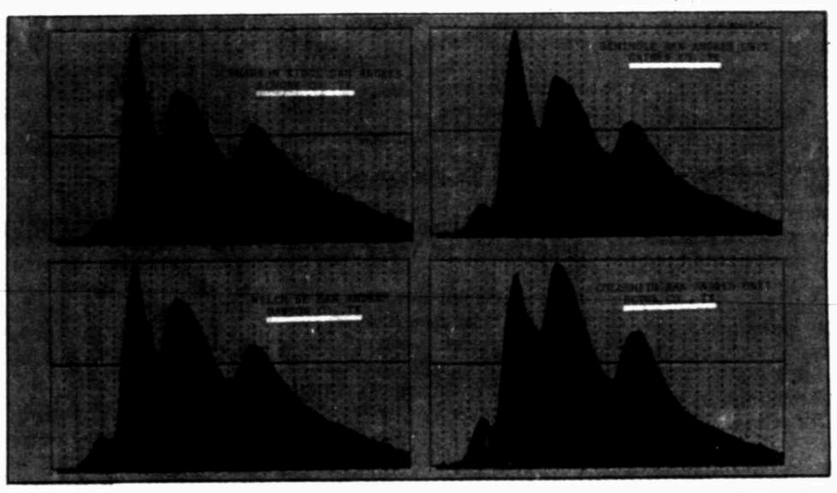

Three-dimensional seismic techniques are ideally suited to finding such subtle traps, and open up windows of opportunity to smaller independent producers that were once economically feasible only to larger oil companies.

Since the cost of drilling a 10,000 ft. well may be on the order of $500,000, and the only sure way of knowing whether oil is present is by drilling a well, explorationists are relying more on sopthisticated techniques to help them predict drill sites and reduce odds. 3-D Seismic is about as sophisticated a prediction tool that is available today and is a brand new twist on a technology. that has been around in the industry since the early 1920s.

The idea that seismic waves could be used to obtain information on rock structures deep underground has been around since 1846, when the concept was first introduced by Robert Mallet to the Royal Irish Academy.

Basically, the structure of subsurface formations is mapped by evaluating the times required for a

Black box geology could reduce odds

Editor's Note: Jerry Calhoun is an expert on the subject of unconventional surface exploration techniques, otherwise know as Geochem and has written extensively on the subject.

By Jerry Calhoun

Black box geology has never been at the fore front of exploration, but used in the proper context as an additional prospect qualifier it has something to bring to the table.

Thousands of geologists have looked at the same well logs and seismic lines and constructed look-alike prospects for generations. Yet there is little doubt that, this mature petroleum province could yield even more oil and gas discoveries if more wells were drilled because the odds had been knocked way down. Surface geochemical exploration has the potential to reduce odds.

Recent advances in measuring the hard-to-detect chemical changes caused by vertically migrating oil have created renewed interest in geochem.

Some form of geochemical oil exploration has been practiced for 50 years. Its familiar name, the Black Box, was ac-

CNG comes of age

■ After a skeptical and slow start the CNG business has finally come of age.

AUSTIN — "Four years ago when I tried to tell audiences about natural gas vehicles, I felt as if I had been caught wearing brown shoes with a tuxedo, but things have changed. The CNG (compressed natural gas) movement has finally come of age," says Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who has spearheaded the natural gas vehicle movement in Texas and was the founder of the Texas Alternative Vehicle Fuels Market Fair and Symposium which kicks off today in Austin.

More than 2,000 attendees and 140 exhibitors are expected to attend The Texas Alternative Vehicle Fuels Market Fair and Symposium set for April 12-14 at the Palmer Auditorium in Austin, which is sponsored by the Texas General Land Office. The theme for the third annual event will be A Road Map to Success, and will feature special workshops for entrepreneurs, inventors and investors in the alternative fuel markets.

Last year, was a landmark for CNG in Texas, but 1992 will be better, said Mauro who noted that the first retail natural gas refueling station was opened in 1991, followed by refueling networks across the state, and fleet conversions mandated by the Texas Plan for Clean Air are on schedule."

About 1992 he said: "CNG powered, GMC Sierra pickup trucks will roll off the assembly line this year. When the Big Three come to Austin to show off their wares and companies like Southwestern Bell, Coca-Cola and Bluebell Creameries come to show, we've reached a whole new level in the movement to alternative fuels."

A session in natural gas vehicles, lead by Richard Pennel, marketing manager of GMC Truck Division; Harvey Klein, Manager of Alternative Fuels Engineering and Planing for Ford Motor Co. and Ronald Boltz, vice president product strategy for Chrysler Corp. will lead off the two day affair.

The Natural Gas Bus Market is the topic of a second session which will be lead by Paul Cassidy, vice president for alternative fueled engines , Hercules Engines Inc., and Paul Glaske, president Blue Bird Body Co.

Rise and fall of an American oil industry

Pitts

What is going on with the shift of power from the major oil companies to Opec, the perpetual restructing and massive lay offs of employees in major oil companies in the U.S.?

It is all part of the natural life cycle of corporations, says Bruno Hanson, a Midland geologist and former president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. "The present dilemma can be compared to the life cycle of all living organisms," said Hanson, who notes that oil companies engaged in the search, production and sale of crude oil are governed by a cycle called an "ontogeny." Hanson first came up with the oil industry ontogeny concept in 1986 during the crash, when there was intense restructuring and mergering in the oil business, but says it more evident and active today than every before.

"This ontogeny includes birth, adolescence, maturity, old age and finally death," says Hanson, who will explain his concept to geologists meeting this week in Midland for the Southwest Section Meeting of AAPG.

In the birth stage, Hanson says the company is usually run by a venture capitalist, entrepreneur who has a strong desire to succeed and is willing to take risks. He says the companies have few assets during this period and suffer a high mortaility rate.

During the adolescence phase the key officer is still and entrepreneur or geologist and the emphasis is still on high risk for high returns. Key officers are still receptive to new ideas in geological risk taking, and tangible assets include prospects and leases. Hanson explains that this is the period in which a significant discovery can be a "company-maker."

As the company moves into maturity, he notes that the key officer is more likely to be an engineer, but not necessarily an entrepreneur. If he is an entrepreneur the company is likely to continue to grow, but if not, the focus will fall to development of reserves and rapid cash flow derived from production. Also, reception to geological risk-taking is lowered, and management quantifies exploration ventures in unrealistic terms.

When a company becomes elderly or "old age," one can look for a CPA or MBA to be at the helm, according to Hanson. The entrepreneurial spirit is gone and the focus is on management. Interest in risk-taking virtually disappears and investments from the large and rapid cash flow of oil production is generally transferred into other business opportunities.

At the same time rapid diversification begins to take place as producing properties are sold and the demise of the company is foreseen.

In the final "death stage" the administrator is often a banker, who presides over the liquidation of assets, as producing properties are sold to other companies.

Hanson warns that the ontogeny of the oil industry is very much alive and more evident in oil companies today than ever before. He says that investors and potential employees might do well to carefully study the ontogeny of oil companies to determine what stage they are in.

seismic wave, which is artificially generated at the surface by a number of possible means — such as dynamite charges, large "thumper" trucks — to return to the surface after reflections and refraction from the underlying rock layers. Reflections and refractions are influenced by such factors as the tilts and folding of the rock layers, faults, contrasting densities of the various formations, differences in rock types (lithology) and the amount of open pores (porosity) present in the rocks, among other things.

Seismic techniques had their first practical success in the oil business in 1921, when Gulf Oil Co. located the Orchard Dome in Bend County, Texas. After that time, the technique saw prolific success through the 1950s. The first seismic surveys relied up what we call "single-fold" or "100 percent" data sets; these are seismograms (record sections) that recorded several reflected events, or traces, in two directions away from each dynamite shot hole — usually 12 on each side — and for many years were successful in finding large subsurface structures.

As recording and processing technologies improved in the late 1950s and early 1960s, and larger structures were played out, multifold seismic data replaced single-fold data as the primary geophysical tool. This data essentially combines many record sections into continuous three-dimensional cross-sections which in some instances could cover many tens of miles.

Petroleum exploration using seismic data basically involves three steps:

- Data acquisition in the field
- Data processing, and
- Data interpretation.

Data acquisition is the most expensive phase because high-quality seismic data depends upon exacting field procedures. At this state, the field operators must be able to compensate for irregular terrain, poor shallow subsurface reflecting layers and other factors which could jeopardize the quality of the reflections they are recording

Data processing depends upon the quality of the raw data and the geology of the area under study.

The resolution of the record section that is ultimately produced, and the confidence in geological interpretation, depend upon the complexity of the subsurface rock layers, quality of the data collected and the skill by which it is interpreted.

Many times, for example, complex structures such as faults provide reflection events that may not be exactly where they appear to be on the record section, because of the way reflections off these surfaces are bounced back to the surface and "blended" with reflections from other horizons. Thus, events that are mapped on a single two-dimensional section should ideally be verified on adjacent lines.

Our understanding of rock properties and the behavior of seismic waves through rocks has improved to the point where geologists and geophysicists can try to predict what a seismic record should look like through particular rock types and combinations of formations (sequences).

This ability to model reservoirs is important today because the historical emphasis on looking for oil trapped in structures is being replaced by the search for more subtle or stratigraphic traps. These subtle traps may be such things as small reefs that may only be on the order of 80 acres or less in size, or preserved "towers" of porous rock that survived erosion of the rest of the formation around them. A lot of oil has been found with 2-D seismic data looking for both structured and stratigraphic traps, but it has limited geoscientists to interpreting two-dimensional cross-sections of the subsurface.

The application of 3-D technology has helped in some cases in evaluating underdeveloped oil in existing fields, and is a potentially useful tool for increasing production and cash flow from older fields. This application is potentially lucrative to companies who are buying older producing properties and would like to examine additional potential in existing pay zones or those that are behind pipe.

A lot of exploration activity has recently been centered around acquisition and interpretation of 3-D seismic data because of its capacity to "see" even smaller structural and certain stratigraphic features that cannot be resolved with conventional 2-D data. The technique also limits or eliminates some of the processing problems that arise out of such things as false or misleading reflections.

Basically, data are still collected along intersecting 2-D traverses but with increased density of recording stations and closer spacing of the traverses in the field. The increased data collection density, for example, can in many instances compensate for missing data that used to arise out of surface obstructions such as houses and roads.

"The 3-D seismic technique allows geoscientists to image the subsurface in far greater detail than was ever imagined, and opens up new frontiers in mature basins such as the Permian Basin," said Stan Sansone, a geophysical consultant in Denver. Sansone said that 3-D has become a reality in the past five years with the development of supercomputers that are capable of processing the increased magnitude of data acquired from the field, and the ability of field crews to add more recording power. Sansone's business, like many other consulting geophysicists, is heavily skewed these days to 3-D analysis.

In the Permian Basin as elsewhere, consulting geologists are finding it increasingly harder to promote drilling deals that don't have 3-D data to support them. In fact, investors are becoming more savvy about the power of the tool and demanding more prospects that utilize the technique.

Early on in the development of 3-D seismic, only the major oil companies could afford the costs of acquiring and processing data. However, it is becoming easier for smaller independents and consultants to take advantage of 3-D technology with the advent of public-use computer workstations that are available now in Midland, Houston, Dallas and Oklahoma City.

In addition, the costs of acquiring and processing 3-D data have dropped considerably to the point where an entire square mile, which may overlay a small reservoir that could be exploited with two wells, could be shot for about $30,000 to $40,000, which is a fraction of the cost of drilling two intermediate to deep dry holes.

The applications of 3-D seismic are becoming fairly widespread as more and more companies see the value in its increased potential for finding the smaller plays that are left in mature basins. Three-dimensional exploration and development is currently being employed throughout the world, and is allowing local operators the opportunity to exploit reservoirs that the majors find too small to deal with. Some of the majors, on the other hand, are utilizing the technique to exploit more reserves out of fields they operate.

"We are able to potentially drill fewer wells with less risk, and are able to more accurately target reservoirs that are less than 320 acres in size," said John Seay, an independent oil producer in Midland. Seay is involved in a 3-D play for small patch reef stratigraphic traps that lie within and south of the main Scurry Reef producing trend in Borden and Scurry counties.

These reefs are relatively small features that in some cases have the capacity of producing upwards of 300,000 barrels of oil per well, but are very hard to find with conventional 2-D data. Discovery success with this type of reservoir is generally less than 25 percent with conventional data. Seay has stated that his overall success rate with the 3-D technique has been better than 75 percent, and risk factors and costs to him are further reduced by partnership with a group of other independent producers. His group, like many others, prospect by first doing regional geology, then analyzing commerically-purchased 2-D lines to high-grade small areas that are then targeted in detail by 3-D shooting.

Exploration and development along the Scurry Reef trend is one of the most active applications of the 3-D method in the Permian Basin, but other smaller structural and stratigraphic plays are utilizing the technique as well. In the Tatum Basin in southeastern New Mexico, for example, Maralo Inc. utilizes 3-D seismic to more accurately pin down the structural crests of small Devonian carbonate reservoirs below 10,000 ft. "The exact placement of a well in a Devonian reservoir in this area is critical to the water/oil ratio that is produced," said Shane Lough, a senior exploration geologist at Maralo. "We are looking for very small but prolific reservoirs of 320 acres in size or less, and the density of control that 3-D allows helps reduce the risk of drilling into the water column of these small closures."

Another application of the technique is in defining small erosional remnants of weathered Devonian chert, or tripolite, along the margins of the Ozona Platform.

BOX: New techniques may reduce odds

(From 1E)

quired early on, much as seismic crews are still called "doodle buggers."

The basis of all surface geochemical methods is the concept that most oil and gas traps leak small amounts of hydrocarbons to the surface through fractures. Vertical seepage was independently documented in the April AAPG bulletin.

These leaking hydrocarbons create a chemically reduced environment in the overburden and chemical changes that can be measured with various instruments.

Several methods measure the actual presence of the oil at the surface. These direct indicators include the fluorescence technique, which detects the aromatic constituents of oil such as benzene, napthalene, phenanthrene and anthracene.

The presence of these compounds vary in the oils produced from various formations, and soil samples taken at the surface reflect the signature of the oil trapped at depth. San Andres oils have a diagnostic signature which is consistent from Scurry County to Dawson County to Gaines County, a distance of over 100 miles.

Another direct method is measuring the concentration of gases in the subsoil down to 10-12 ft. Augers are driven into the soil and a sample is extracted through a tube to the bit. Ethane, butane and propane are measured at various sites around the proposed wildcat and an interpretation is made of the concentrations of soil gas. Gas molecules bound to the soil particles can be extracted with heat or acid and measured for a similar study.

The most recent innovations in direct HC measurement is the use of radar. This microwave instrument excites propane molecules at the soil surface. By special tuning the radar receiver, the varying concentrations of propane create an echo on the radar screen. Radar requires interpretation as well, because the propane tends to collect in stream valleys and other topographic low areas. These four direct detection techniques have been used extensively in the King Sand play in Concho County.

Radiometrics is another commonly used method to find oil. Theories vary as to why gamma ray emissions are dampened over oil fields, but 80 percent of fields in the Permian Basin, and elsewhere, show a radiometric low at the surface.

It is fair to ask why: If these methods are accurate predictors why are they not used more frequently?

The answer varies with whom you ask. Some operators reply, "I tried one of those methods several years ago, and it didn't work." Geologists and geophysicists would all be out of work if we were judged by that standard. Then too, there is some foot-dragging in response to overzealous geochem contractors, who couldn't deliver on extravagant "can't-miss promises."

Also, old methods are slow to be replaced — the inertia of the status quo anti.

Another reason geochem methods are slow to be accepted is that it's demanding to keep up with all the advances in the science of oil exploration. Between wrench tectonics, carbonate sedimentation, 3-D seismic and a dozen other specialized fields, it is a real challenge to just stay current. Surface geochem exploration just has not been studied carefully by the explorationists.

Some earth scientists seem to fear that their services will no longer be required if all you need to do is go out and "sniff." In reality, more geologists would probably be required, first to acquire and interpret the new data and second, to find a geological-geophysical reason for the unexpected and unexplained anomalies that come to light.

Lastly, when everybody is hunkered down trying to survive, new ideas are as welcome as thread dope in your shorts.

It is my contention that when good ideas that once sold prospects no longer sell, when the rigs, men and money are moving to Russia, you'd better come up with some new ideas to qualifity and sell prospects or pack the suitcase.

It may be difficult to be aggressive when you're fighting whipsaw prices, government regulations and name-changing banks with new rules for collateral every week, but if there was ever a time and place that screams for new ideas like surface geochemical exploration and the guts to try it, it is here and now. We simply can't go on drilling six wildcats to make one discovery of any amount of oil.

Of the dozen geochem techniques in use today, how do you decide which to use? The May 13, 1991 Oil and Gas Journal this writer published an article on geochem results in the Permian Basin. The Geochemical Evaluation Research Team subjected 12 techniques to a blind test — predict the outcome of the wildcat prior to drilling. Five of the methods were accurate 65 percent or more and found the economic successes as well.

Fluorescence, elemental analysis, landsat, windowed radiometrics, and micro-magnetics were the winners after 17 wildcats had been drilled. Granted, 17 repetitions are not enough to analyze statistically, but surely it is pointing in the right direction. Combining three of the methods and drilling where all three are positive should reduce the risk even further.

But what about costs? Three of the successful methods can be applied to a 1,000-acre prospect for no more than $7500.

When to apply? The logical time to apply geochem is after the geology has been done but before the expensive steps of seismic or lease acquisitions.

Almost any prospect generator will tell you that there are some great prospects crying to be drilled here in the Permian Basin, but are going undrilled because of risk.

Surface geochem exploration can reduce risk. It isn't perfect, but GERT proved that dry hole risk can be controlled.

Phillips Petroleum predicts first quarter loss

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. expects an operating loss for its first quarter, partly because of before-tax charges that include $93 million for laid-off workers, the company says.

The energy company said that the other before-tax charge was a $39 million loss related to the early retirement through refinancing of the company's 14¾ percent subordinated debentures and 13⅞ percent senior notes.

The refinancing of the early debt redemption will reduce the company's annual pre-tax interest expense by about $100 million a year, Phillips said.

The company's total debt was $4.3 billion March 31.

Phillips announced last week it cut 1,350 employees to save $150 million a year.

Burlington Resources earnings fall in quarter

SEATTLE (AP) — Burlington Resources reported first-quarter earnings of $63 million, or 48 cents per share, down from year-earlier income of $66 million, or 49 cents per share.

Revenues for the latest period were $444 million, the company reported, compared with $467.2 million for the first quarter of 1991.

The company cited declining crude oil and natural gas prices.

Operating income for BR's exploration and production company, Meridian Oil, was $62 million, down from $69 million for the same period last year. Natural gas take-or-pay contract recoveries were $6 million for the latest quarter, down from $14 million in 1991.

Operating income for El Paso Natural Gas, the company's interstate pipeline, was also down, to $57 million from $61 million. Pipeline throughput declined by 6 percent to 3.8 billion cubic feet per day, the company said, citing increased withdrawals of gas stored in California.

Triton Energy posts net loss of $26.5 million

DALLAS (AP) — Triton Energy Corp. reported a third-quarter net loss of $26.5 million or 79 cents a common share on revenues of $56.9 million.

That compared with net earnings of $1 million or 5 cents a share on revenues of $63.9 million in the third quarter of last year, the company said.

For the nine months, the independent oil and gas exploration and production company had a net loss of $45.7 million or $1.60 per share on revenues of $163.6 million.

In the year-earlier period, the company reported a net loss of $1.8 million or 9 cents a share on revenues of $234 million.

Revenues were lower primarily because of asset sales in the company's fiscal 1991 restructuring program, the company said.

PITTS: Learning the cycles

(From 1E)

In reading Hanson's life-cycle of oil companies, one is tempted to place modern day major oil companies by their management and actions in the "old age" category. Certainly, there is a great deal of divestiture going on and a strong focus on management.

But there are some contradictions that confound the theory. For all their bureaucracy, major oil companies, with the formation of business units, are making a concerted effort to restore some similance of non-bureaucratic hands-on entrepreneurship to the business. At the same time, major oil companies are once again warming up to high-risk ventures.

"We are leaving the U.S. for high-risk, high-reward opportunities. We are not interested in safe, marginal production," the president of one major oil company told me flatly.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Partners cut back major Gulf project

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – One of the most ambitious new energy exploration projects in the Gulf of Mexico is being sharply scaled back because of the continuing slump in the price of natural gas.

The $1.6 billion joint venture by Amoco Production Co., Exxon Company USA and Shell Offshore was formed more than two years ago to look for oil and gas in the deep waters of the Gulf.

The partnership, called Ram/Powell, already has spent about $100 million to drill 12 exploratory wells south of Mobile, Ala., including one well in 3,500 feet of water that set a world record for deep-water drilling.

Despite the early progress, though, sources working on the project say the scope of Ram/Powell is about to be drastically cut, thanks to a lull in the gas market and tight budgets at all three of the oil giants.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the companies have scheduled a meeting Tuesday at Shell's offices in New Orleans to discuss the future of one of the Gulf's most expensive deep-water programs.

"All three partners are looking at other ways to develop this project and minimize their costs," said an engineer working on Ram/Powell. "We have all been driven to ask: Are there cheaper alternatives?"

One proposal already under consideration, the sources say, is to cut the number of development wells that ultimately will be drilled from 44 to about 20.

That plan is expected to lower the project's cost by about $600 million.

Officials say all three companies are pressing for a phased-in drilling program to spread out the costs of the venture. As it now stands, the companies would not begin seeing any revenue from Ram/Powell for about nine years.

Neither Shell, nor any of the other companies involved in Ram/Powell, would discuss publicly how the project is likely to look after the meeting.

The sources involved in the effort said, however, there is now a consensus that the scope of the venture must be changed.

"The plan that was originally proposed is very marginal, based on today's prices," a source said. "We're going back to the table to start talking in earnest about how to get this field on production."

Industry analysts say word that the project is slowing down is hardly a surprise, considering the deep decline in drilling activity throughout the Gulf of Mexico.

"It all boils down to the fact that the economics of energy prices are just not very good," said Tom Marsh, Gulf of Mexico editor for Offshore Data Services, an energy consulting company in Houston. "No one wants to go into a project that they know is not going to provide an immediate rate of return."

Natural gas prices earlier this year dropped to their lowest level in more than a decade. In response, land drilling has hit a 50-year low, and offshore drilling today is lagging as much as in the worst days of the 1980s oil bust.

Don Taylor, chief executive of Tatham Offshore, one of the few independent energy companies looking for oil and gas in deep water, said drilling in the Gulf of Mexico has suffered as major producers shifted their spending from domestic projects to more promising prospects overseas.

"Everybody is absolutely frozen solid," Taylor said.

Hadson Corp. unveils restructuring plans

Staff Report

Following a $9.1 million loss in 1991, Hadson Corp., the Oklahoma City-based parent of Hadson Gas Systems, Inc. has announced a plan to restructure the parent company's debt, utilizing the relatively new process of a "Pre-Packaged" Chapter 11 Bankruptcy filing.

Robert L. Laughman, president of Hadson Gas Systems, Inc., the Dallas-based principal operating unit of Hadson Corp., said, "This development represents the next logical step in the plan to return Hadson Corporation to its traditional core business. We have completed the disposition of both the previously acquired electrical power and defense contracting businesses. Unfortunately, the defense business transaction resulted in a significant loss for the corporation, which is largely represented by approximately $120 million in debt which is being resolved through the proposed debt restructuring in the pre-packaged reorganization plan to be filed with the bankruptcy petition."

Laughman said Hadson Gas Systems, Inc. will not be included in the bankruptcy filing, which he said will likely occur in the next several weeks or so. "Hadson Gas," he said "along with five other Hadson Corporation operating energy products subsidiaries, have collectively enjoyed consistent growth and financial strength in spite of the Corporation's Debt-load."

Laughman emphasized that Hadson Gas Systems and its affiliate companies have sufficient funds on hand as well as cash flows to meet supplier and producer payments. In addition, he said, the company has a $29.5 million line of revolving credit in place for the operating subsidiaries. The energy products and services companies maintain separate credit facilities from that of Hadson Corporation.

CNG: Finally takes off

(From 1E)

Other sessions will discuss: propane vehicles, electric vehicles, alternative fuel regulations, liquified natural gas (LNG), cylinder technology, clean air regulations, natural gas storage and refueling. Economics and possibilities for CNG will be reviewed in sessions entitled: Starting an Alternative Fuels Business; Forecast for Alternative Fuels; The Southwest as a NGV Zone.

"Texas has seen its future and its future is natural gas," said Mauro referring to a quote by Governor Ann Richards. He said the governor's plan to make the Southwest a Natural Gas Zone, and the building of CNG vehicles in Arlington, Texas would put the CNG movement in high gear. He said the plant could supply vehicles throughout the state.

He said the move to natural gas as a fuel had taken on a life all its own and was now being driven by economics and environmental concerns.

"Private fleet operators who may not be required to convert for years are already doing so, because of the competitive edge. When your competitor is buying fuel for half your cost, you have to take a second look."

The Alternative Fuels Symposium, which opened in 1990, as a means of getting information out to managers of fleets who were mandated by the Texas Plan to convert to an alternative fuel has now taken on larger dimensions as a major national alternative fuels event.

"When you get this many people from this many countries and corporations participating, you know something is happening."

He cites innovative financing by gas companies for much of the CNG progress.

"The willingness of gas companies to provide the up front cost of conversion through a natural gas surcharge is working. Even with a surcharge, fuel costs are still slightly lower than gasoline or diesel. The fleet operator saves big on maintenance and a little on fuel in the short term, but when the surcharge retires the conversion cost and is dropped the savings are great.

He pointed out that Lone Star and Southern Union Gas Co. have the surcharge program, and that "Dallas County is the classic example of how the program works."

He said interest in CNG had expanded much faster than he had anticipated to the private sector fleets and individuals, as more entrepreneurs recognized its economic potential.

"This is no longer a maybe market. California and New York have mandated 50 percent non-gasoline vehicles by 2001, the question is what will replace gasoline. We feel it will be natural gas."

There's safety in numbers.

Product numbers for Tretolite oil and gas production chemicals have been expanded from simple identification codes into mini information packages.*

CR O 2413 F

CORROSION INHIBITOR | OIL SOLUBLE | PRODUCT NUMBER | FLAMMABLE TOXIC IRRITANT

Now our corrosion inhibitors, paraffin controllers, scale inhibitors, demulsifiers and water clarifiers come labeled with a new product number that reveals their function, solubility and potential hazard—important safety information.

Our safety in numbers program is widely useful. Include it in your training, for example, and it will help your employees understand proper chemical handling procedures of our products. This emphasis will reinforce the importance of alertness and awareness when applying production chemicals.

These informative numbers will also help you and your staff act quickly to protect people and the environment in case of a mishap. And, because the new product identification numbers are built around our original codes, they're easy to learn.

A brochure explaining the details and many benefits of this new system is available from your local Tretolite representative, or from the office below. Putting safety in numbers is one more example of the lengths we're going to at the Tretolite Division to help protect you, your employees and the environment.

First Seismic loses $3.8 million in 1991

HOUSTON (AP) — First Seismic Corp. has defaulted on some of its debt and laid off nearly half its workers after 1991 losses of nearly $4 million, company officials said.

Company officials said First Seismic, which processes and sells seismic data used to search for oil and gas, lost $3.8 million last year on revenues totalling $24 million.

That's compared with 1990 profits of $3 million.

Most of the 1991 loss can be traced to one-time charges of $3.7 million, including a $2 million write-down of a company center that uses updated computer software to re-examine old data.

The next step in ramp blending.

Precisely. As scheduled. Even during rapid proppant stage or rate changes. So our fluid is fully crosslinked and buffered and the correct amount of breaker is added.

Which ensures that you will receive the cleanest fluid and highest conductivity fracture. And optimum well performance.

Otherwise, we wouldn't be the choice of some of the country's finest oil and gas operators.

So if you're concerned about how your well performs and the next step for unearthing your profits, take the first step.

Valero buys NGL assets from Oryx

SAN ANTONIO — Valero Energy Corp., has entered into a letter of intent to purchase certain South Texas natural gas liquids assets currently owned and operated by subsidiaries of Oryx Energy Company for $83 million. The transaction is subject to due dilegence and further negotiation of a more definitive purchase agreement.

The assets include two natural gas processing plants in Starr and Dimmit counties which can extract a total of over 11,00 barrels per day, of NGLs, 450 miles of associated natural gas gathering lines, a 59-mile liquids pipeline and a 17.5 percent interest in a third processing plant in Nueces County. Valero contemplated entering into an agreement with Valero Natural Gas Partners, L.P. which the partnership would be the operator of the assets.

Valero Energy is involved primarily in specializing refining of high-sulfur atmospheric residual oil into premium products, such as unleaded gasoline, through its specialized refinery in Corpus Christi, Texas and in the marketing of those products.

Phillips says reduction plan 'worth it'

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. laid off 1,350 employees and will save $150 million a year, the company said in outlining the results of a four-month cost-reduction program.

The number of layoffs is 250 more than the company announced in February. Of the additional layoffs identified, 200 are in Houston or other field offices and 50 are at headquarters in Bartlesville.

That means Bartlesville will lose 900 jobs at headquarters, 100 contract workers and another 100 people who have been transferred to other offices.

J. Bryan Whitworth, vice president of corporate relations and services, said the program put a tremendous strain on the 5,400 employees it targeted as it looked at reductions, but the results were well worth it.

"There is no question in my mind that we will have a stronger Phillips," he said. "I know the employees were under strain and a significant amount of anxiety. Hopefully with all the pain that ensued, we can pick up the pieces.

"The results show us there are very few things in life that are guaranteed."

The Activity Value Analysis, coordinated by the consulting firm of McKinsey & Associates, had a team of Phillips employees identify unnecessary functions and eliminate them.

The program was brought on by Phillips' slow reaction to the recession, Whitworth said. The company is not projecting big growth soon, and he said it would proceed prudently.

"The key thing is to make sure we retain the cost-saving measures that have been identified," he said.

Phillips, the nation's 11th largest oil company, laid off 2,300 workers — 1,100 of them at headquarters — in 1986 following takeover attempts by Carl Icahn and T. Boone Pickens.

Whitworth said unlike previous layoffs, the company will not rehire workers when its financial condition improves. But he also said he doesn't anticipate any more layoffs soon.

The program concentrated on 5,400 jobs and $600 million of annual expenses. Whitworth said the company would save $150 million a year with the layoffs. Half of that would be salaries; the rest would be expenses associated with those jobs.

He said severance pay would be charged against first-quarter earnings, which are due out later this month. The savings would likely begin to show in the second and third quarters, he said.

Whitworth could not say which departments suffered the bulk of the layoffs or the job descriptions that were eliminated. But he said the program looked at nearly every function, "top to bottom."

He said of the 775 people who volunteered to take early retirement, only 500 of those workers were laid off, meaning 40 percent of those laid off did not seek early retirement.

About 400 business leaders who attended the Chamber of Commerce forum were concerned about the impact on the city's economy because of the layoffs. Whitworth said he didn't have an answer.

"There's no question that business will suffer as a result of the number of people no longer on Phillips' payroll," he said. "How many will leave town? I don't have that answer. Hopefully some will find work in the area. Others will have to leave."

meetings."

He also pointed out that AAPG members have not been immune to the downturn suffered by the energy industry. Because of the current state of the industry, he said, a number of AAPG members may not be able to afford to attend the national meeting in Calgary, Canada this summer, but would like to attend at least one professional meeting this year.

The downturn is evident when Bellamy says that approximately 600 are expected for this week's meeting while the last one held in Midland, in 1984, drew 1200.

A dominant theme of this year's meeting is sequence stratigraphy and seismic stratigraphy, areas Pause' said have been "hot" recently.

There will also be a number of field studies, which Pause' said are of great interest to geologists, particularly those working on a prospect. He added that field studies are sometimes hard to come by, because operators as a rule don't like to make them public.

There will be 55 papers presented at the meeting, up sharply from previous meetings, and there will be 14 poster sessions. The papers will be presented in Ballrooms A and B at the Hilton and the poster sessions at the Midland Center. Those presenting posters have been assigned times to be at their booth to discuss and answer questions about their presentation.

In addition, there will be an exhibit hall at the Midland Center. Bellamy said that, to date, 53 booths have been sold.

The meeting gets underway today at the Hilton with two short courses.

The first short course is "Carbonate Reservoir Geology" and will be presented by F. Jerry Lucia. It is intended as an introduction to geological methods for developing producing properties by reviewing petrophysical properties.

The second course will be presented by George B. Asquith and is on "How to Evaluate Carbonate Reservoirs From Well Logs."

The section meeting itself will get underway Monday with an opening address and slide presentation by Danny Clayton of Red Adair Co., who will speak on "The Hellfires of Kuwait."

Technical sessions begin Monday morning with two presentations in Ballroom A from 10:35 to 11 a.m.

Following will be the DPA luncheon from 11:25 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. with guest speaker Dr. William Fisher of the Bureau of Economic Geology. Fisher will speak on "The Changing Dynamics of Oil and Gas."

Technical sessions will resume at 1:30 p.m. in both Ballroom A and Ballroom B and continue through 4:50 p.m.

They will begin at 8:05 a.m. Tuesday, April 14, with presentations in both Ballroom A and B until 11:25 a.m.

The All Convention luncheon will last until 1:30 p.m. and feature a speech by Bruno Hanson, whose topic will be "The Rise and Fall of an Oil Co."

Technical sessions resume in both ballrooms until 5:15 p.m.

The final technical presentations will be presented in both ballrooms Wednesday morning from 8:05 to 11:25 a.m.

Poster sessions in the Midland Center across from the Hilton and begin Monday from 3:10 to 3:35 and Tuesday, from 9:45 to 10:10 a.m. and 3:10 to 3:35 p.m., and Wednesday morning from 9:45 to 10:10 a.m.

Entertainment includes a Safari party Monday evening at Clay-Desta Atrium. There are also several special events for spouses.

Commission plugs more wells in '92

AUSTIN — In just the first six months of Fiscal Year 1992, the Railroad Commission has plugged 467 abandoned wells across the state, topping the 455 wells plugged during all of FY 1991, according to Commission Chairman Lena Guerrero.

"We're delivering on a promise we made to the legislature last year when it passed Senate Bill 1103," Guerrero said. "We said give us the resources and we'll find more potentially-polluting wells and plug them. The numbers speak for themselves - we're getting the job done. We're devoting more time and resources to oilfield pollution than ever before."

Fees, penalties and other payments collected from the oil and gas industry support a multi-million dollar oilfield cleanup fund which the Railroad Commission uses to plug wells and cleanup polluted sites that operators have abandoned.

Commissioner James E. (Jim) Nugent said the Commission has spend over $1.8 million for well plugging in the first half of the fiscal year and more than $24,000 cleaning up oilfield pollution. "We're on track for a record year in well plugging," Nugent said. "That is going to pay big dividends to the Texas environment in future years by eliminating these wells as pollution hazards before they can contaminate our water resources."

California field pumps 1 billion barrels

Staff Report

Producing one billion barrels of oil is a major milestone for any oil producer. But when that producer sells its oil and the profits are deposited directly into the U.S. Treasury, such a milestone is of particular interest to U.S. taxpayers.

The Elk Hills Naval Petroleum Reserves No. 1 (NPR-1) located about 35 miles west of Bakersfield, Calif., produced its one-billionth barrel of oil on Saturday, March 14. NPR-1 ranks among the 10 largest producing fields in the U.S., and is one of three oil fields operated by the U.S. Department of Energy.

President William Howard Taft withdrew the public lands in Elk Hills from all forms of entry in September 1909. Oil was discovered on the lands in 1911. The Naval Petroleum and Oil Shale Reserves (NPOSR) were established by a series of Executive orders between 1912 and 1924 to provide emergency liquid fuel supplies for national defense purposes.

In 1942, the government entered into an agreement with Standard Oil Company of Calif. (now Chevron Corp.) to allow for production from the reserves. Under the agreement, Standard Oil was allowed a maximum production of 75,000 barrels-per-day to meet its wartime obligations. Subsequent actions by Congress increased the field's production limits to support the government's war effort during that period.

This legislation also contains a provision which allows the President to extend maximum production levels in increments of up to three years, if such levels are deemed to be in the Nation's interest. The President has exercised this authority four times, with the last such order being executed by President Bush on October 3, 1990.

Phillips delays public offering of GPM stock

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. has decided because of the depressed economy to delay a public stock offering of GPM Gas Corp, its gas gathering operation.

Phillips had planned to keep 49 percent of the stock in the company and put the rest on sale to reduce the company's debt.

C.J. Silas, Phillips' chairman and chief executive officer, said economic conditions wouldn't allow Phillips to realize the value of the company in a stock offering.

He said GPM would operate as a Phillips subsidiary with its own management.

"Phillips, as the sole stockholder, will receive the entire benefit from the implementation of GPM's business plan," Silas said. "And, we plan to proceed with a public stock offering sometime in the future."

George Minter, a Phillips spokesman, said the decision will not affect the decision to move the headquarters of the operation from Bartlesville to Houston.

He said there initially will be 80 employees at Houston and 150 in Bartlesville.

Minter said Phillips will continue to operate at higher debt levels without proceeds from the stock offering.

He said the company is looking for firmer prices for natural gas, natural gas liquids and oil before a public offering will be made.

"Product prices in the petroleum markets have continued to soften," Minter said. "As a result, the general interest of potential investors is tempered. The climate of today's energy markets made the timing of such an offering inappropriate."

Kaiser-Francis purchases Arkla well interests

Kaiser-Francis Oil Co., has purchased from Arkla Exploration Co. its interest in four wells in the Northeast Duncan field, Stephens County, Okla. Acquired for a purchase price of $1,320,000 are proved reserves estimated by independent engineers to be 1.4 bcf of gas and 22,000 barrels of condensate.

Since January 1, Kaiser-Francis has closed even producing property acquisitions totaling $8.7 million and has signed four other contracts to purchase an additional $9.0 million in properties in the U.S. and western Canada.

IPAA endorses Senate energy proposal

IPAA has strongly endorsed Senate bill, S. 1220. "We believe that Senators Johnston and Wallop have done a masterful job of addressing competing interests while preserving America's ability to produce domestic energy," said IPAA's Denise Bode.

On the other hand, we have serious problems with the House bill, H.R. 776, and we are concerned that the fractured jurisdictional maze in the House will compound those problems.

Both the House and the Senate bill rightly encourage greater consumption of natural gas. However, the House bill gives a regulatory advantage to high-cost gas imports to the detriment of consumer and domestic producers. The IPAA supported efforts to remove all language on natural gas imports from the Senate bill and to leave this matter to the appropriate regulatory agencies. We encourage the House to do likewise.

The IPAA opposes the House bill provisions mandating a set-aside program on domestic and imported oil to fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and creating federal authority to use the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to manipulate oil prices.

Edisto Resources suffers net loss for year

DALLAS — Edisto Resources Corp., has announced a net loss for the year ended December 31, 1991 was 115.6 million, or a $6.84 share loss after preferred dividends, on revenues of $345.2 million, compared with a net loss of $2.8 million, or a $0.48 per share loss after preferred dividends, on revenues of $188.2 million for the year ended December 31, 1990.

Midland firm dealer for catalytic systems

Ignition Systems & Controls, Inc. of Midland, will serve as exclusive distributor for Johnson Matthey, Catalytic Systems Division in West Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

The Johnson Matthey line of Catalytic Converters permits operators to retro-fit existing engines in compression and Gas Plant applications to comply with strict air quality regulations. The equipment, which is added to existing exhaust systems, is designed to reduce oxides of nitrogen (NOX), carbon dioxide (CO) and hydrocarbon (HC) pollutants that produce acid rain or smog, from rich-burn, gas fired Internal combustion engines. The equipment decomposes the pollutants into environmentally sage nitrogen, carbon dioxide and water vapor levels acceptable to EPA and Air Control Boards.

Union Pacific expanding Overland Train facilities

FORT WORTH — Union Pacific Fuels, Inc. (UPFI), a subsidiary of Union Pacific Resources Co. (UPRC) will expand the facilities of the Overland Trail Transmission Company, a Wyoming intrastate pipeline operated by a subsidiary of UPFI, to provide additional market outlets and transportation alternatives for Wyoming natural gas.

"The pipeline interconnects will add Kern River as a new delivery point and will increase the system's receipt and delivery capability with Colorado Interstate Gas Company," said Don Niemiec, president of Union Pacific Fuels. "This project will enhance Overlands Trail's position as a key market center for the aggregation and sale of natural gas in the Rockies," Niemiec explained.

Oklahoma defends natural gas measures

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahomans' assurances that new state limits on natural gas production are a sound conservation measure failed to soothe at least one congressman's fears of price jacking.

"Gas is too much of a bargain and has too bright of a future as an abundant American energy supply to let its prices be manipulated," Rep. Phil

Walters, Rep. Mike Synar and Tulsa oilmen George Kaiser, George Singer and Buddy Kleemeier were in Washington on Tuesday for a series of meetings with Sharp; Reps. John Dingell, D-Mich., and Norman Lent, R-N.Y.; and Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

The congressmen have written a letter to federal officials asking them to check into Oklahoma's law. The production limits during times of low demand raise the "prospect of a domestic natural gas OPEC," the congressmen wrote.

The federal Department of Energy is reviewing Oklahoma's law and preparing a response to the representatives, an agency spokeswoman said.

Texas and Louisiana also are considering natural gas production limits this year.

Sharp said he warned Walters that consumers and Congress will oppose Oklahoma's production-control efforts.

A spokesman for Bradley said the senator also "has some concern about the impact on consumers."

Synar, D-Okla., said the lawmakers expressed some "legitimate concerns" that the Oklahoma law would tamper with the price of natural gas.

"We tried to calm those fears," Synar said from his Washington office.

Synar said the oil producers provided good, factual information to back up their predictions there wouldn't be any price variations and fluctuations.

Synar said Walters told the congressmen there would be a steady supply of natural gas for all consumers and said he represented both consumers and producers.

Walters said the law is designed to help a struggling industry and to conserve natural gas for the future.

MEETINGS

Permian section, SPE, to host SPE president

Abel

Roger Abel will be the guest speaker at the April 21 meeting of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Abel, 1992 president of the SPE, will speak on "Energy Developments in the Commonwealth of Independent States (former USSR). In addition to his duties with the SPE, Abel is vice president and general manager, exploration production, Russia, for Conoco. He is responsible for the direction and coordination of Du Pont's oil and gas investment opportunities within Russia.

According to Abel, the republics of the former Soviet Union represent 25 percent of the world's current non-OPEC oil supply and are in need of investment to avoid becoming a net importer of energy. The Russian Federation, largest of the 11-member commonwealth, provides 90 percent of the current CIS production and significant reserve potential. To arrest the decline in production from these republics, significant investment is needed to elevate their reservoir management, field development, safety and environmental practices.

He joined Conoco in 1968 as a production engineer, and has served in numerous capacities within the company since his employment.

Cost of the luncheon is $12 per person and reservations should be made by Friday by calling 686-7329.

SPE section to discuss reservoir development

The Trans-Pecos section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Wednesday at the Odessa Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Pande is currently an engineering advisor for Fina Oil and Chemical Co., leading reservoir engineering and characterization studies for waterflood optimization and miscible CO2 EOR projects in the Permian Basin.

Cost is $14 per person.

The North Texas Oil & Gas Association has scheduled its 62nd annual meeting for April 21-22 in Wichita Falls.

Among those expected to speak during the meeting are Bob Armstrong, director, energy division, State of Texas, Lena Guerrero, chairman of the Railroad Commission and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

The meeting begins the 21st with the NTOGA Golf Scramble and Hamburger Buffet at Wichita Falls Country Club, which has 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. shotgun starts.

The first of three seminars will also be held that day, at Wichita Falls Activities Center from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. The seminar, "Oil and Gas Property Valuation," will feature energy lenders from American National Bank, Bank of Oklahoma, Bank One, NationsBank, Parker Square Bank and Team Bank. They will discuss the evaluation process and parameters their lending institutions use in evaluating oil and gas properties.

The first day of the session concludes with hospitality hour, a barbecue and country and western dance.

On the 22nd, the meeting begins at 7:45 with the membership breakfast, featuring talks by Armstrong and Guerrero.

It will be followed by a seminar on the environment from 9:15 to 11:15 a.m. Among the speakers and topics to be covered include the implementation of Senate Bill 1103, RRC financial assurance requirements and new changes for plugging rule 14, to be presented by David M. Garlick, director, oil and gas division, Railroad Commission. Lori Wrotenbery, assistant director, underground injection, also with the commission, will discuss Resource Conservation and Recovery Act reauthorization and the fight to retain oil and gas exemptions, the Environmental Protection Agency's underground injection control regulations, what's on the horizon, and development of RRC spill cleanup standards. Oil and gas production and waste handling practices and naturally occurring radioactive material will be discussed by Michael E.Covert, manager, environmental division, Southwestern Laboratories Inc. Europeans lift South Africa oil embargo

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The European Community agreed this past week to lift its embargoes on oil sales and cultural, scientific and sports exchanges with South Africa, rewarding the white-minority government for moving to end apartheid.

"The Community and its member sates ... reaffirm their commitment to the creation of a democratic and non-racial South Africa and the well-being of all its people," EC foreign ministers said in a statement.

Bhadra Ranchod, South Africa's ambassador to the EC, welcomed the ministers' decision.

"We need economic growth, we need to create jobs because a democracy without people having ... employment would be fairly meaningless," he said.

The oil restriction was the last remaining economic sanction the EC had in place against South Africa. The embargo was imposed in 1985 in line with a U.N. General Assembly resolution seeking the isolation of the pro-apartheid government.

President F.W. de Klerk's government got a major boost from white South African voters last month when they approved by a 2-1 margin his program of reforms intended to abolish apartheid altogether.

Ranchod had no estimate on the cost of the embargo, saying only that it "cost South Africa a lot. We had to buy oil through third parties and we had to pay fairly high premiums."

Without the restrictions, South Africa will have access to North Sea crude oil and a wide range of European oil products. European oil companies, he said, can expand their operations in South Africa.

The oil embargo prohibited the sales of crude and refined oil products to South Africa. It also barred EC-registered ships from transporting oil to the nation.

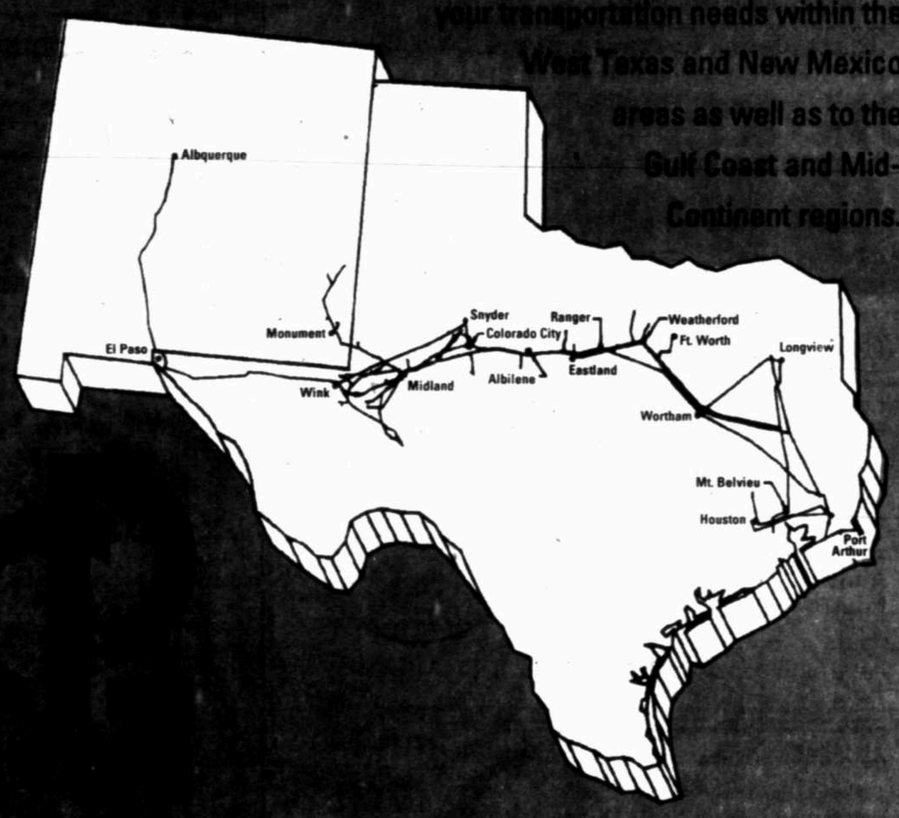

In 1991, the EC and the United States lifted major economic sanctions against South Africa as President F.W. De Klerk moved toward dismantling apartheid.

The EC and U.S. sanctions affected imports of gold coins, steel and iron. In addition, the United States lifted its ban on oil trade.

The EC continues to ban cooperation in nuclear and security matters with South Africa and also upholds a 1977 U.N. Security Council ban on arms trade.

Bunny cakes make perfect Easter decorations as well as tasty treats.

Tasty treats can be decorative too

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle Editor

Nothing symbolizes the festive side of the Easter holiday quite as well as the Easter Bunny. He is known to children far and wide, and fondly recalled by those young at heart.

While the Easter Bunny's job is to hide all the eggs so children can hunt for them, that's no reason for that to be his only presence this Easter. Another way he can join in the Easter festivities is by sharing his likeness in the form of an Easter cake.

The folks at Wilton Enterprises have found a simple, adorable and delicious way to have the Easter Bunny be a part of any celebration. They have designed a mini bunny cake pan, just right for individual servings. The muffin-style pan features six molds shaped like bunny faces, complete with indentations for noses, mouths and eyes, making decorating easy even for those who believe they don't have a creative bone in their bodies.

For those who like to get creative in their baking, there is an easy way to make a large bunny cake from two round layer cakes. First bake two 8- or 9-inch round cakes. One round cake will form the bunny's face. The second round cake will be used to form ears and a bow tie.

To form the ears (see diagram 1), cut two oval-shaped pieces from the second round cake, with one side of the oval being the outer side of the cake on both ears. This should leave approximately a 1-inch piece of cake at the center of the round cake that arches to about a 4-inch piece of cake at the outer edges. This piece left over from cutting the ears becomes the bunny's bow tie.

Place the ears appropriately atop the first round cake with the bow tie at the neck (see diagram 2). The cake can then be frosted using white icing for the bunny's face and outer sides of the ears and pink frosting for the inside of the ears and the bow tie. Chocolate chips, candies or licorice can be used to outline features and form the eyes, nose and mouth. A sprinkle of coconut atop the frosting will give the bunny cake a "fuzzy" appearance.

Another easy Easter cake can be made by baking (or buying) a loaf cake and icing it. Just before serving, braid licorice strings together and

'EGG'CITING EASTER

Although Easter is a religious holiday, a day when Christians celebrate the resurrection of Jesus, there are many symbols that have become recognized with the holiday that have no apparent religious meaning. For instance, the Easter Bunny, lambs, lilies, Easter hats, pastel colors and of course, Easter eggs.

While Easter eggs start out as just ordinary eggs, by the time Easter morning comes around, they have been transformed into "egg"ceptional works of art, and often prove to be a true test of a child's creativity and a mother's patience.

Easter eggs usually are hard-boiled eggs dyed a variety of shades of blue, green, orange, red, purple and yellow. Their decorative creativity ranges from solid colors to detailed designs and are a delight for children, both during the creating and hunting stages. In fact, sometimes these works of art become so special to children that they don't want to part with them. You can imagine the result when a hard-boiled egg is carried around by a child for a few days unrefrigerated; not a pleasant thought, ...or smell.

Which also brings to mind the hidden egg that no one finds in the house until a few days later when the nose begins to know where it was hidden. A good reason to plan outdoor egg hunts.

For adults, memories of dyeing Easter eggs probably conjure up images of stains on mom's cabinet tops and smells of vinegar, wax sticks for drawing on the eggs and decals that transferred onto the shell.

But today's children have so many new options. Not only can they dye the eggs "the old fashioned way" by dissolving dye tablets in vinegar, but they can dye eggs with dye crystals (and no vinegar), add sparkles, strips, stencil drawings, swirls, and the list goes on and on.

There are an abundance of Easter egg coloring kits that supply the elements needed to dye one to two dozen eggs. These dyes are non-toxic pure food colors, so they are safe for eggs that will later be eaten. While complete, easy-to-follow instructions are provided for each type of coloring kit, adult supervision is recommended for small children when coloring eggs.

WHEN HARD-BOILING eggs, do not add oil to the water because the oil will coat the shell, making it difficult — if not impossible — for the dye to adhere to the shell. You should also make sure the pan is free of detergent and oil. Enamel, stainless steel and glass pans work best for boiling eggs. Companies warn against cooking eggs in aluminum or iron pans.

For the simple, all-one-color eggs, there are two options: 1) a kit by Pass where a dye tablet is dissolved in vinegar, then water is added, or 2) a kit by Dudley where dye crystals are dissolved in cold water. Both kits come with six colors of dye and an egg dipper. As an option, a wax crayon can be used to draw on the

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Parties honor former resident

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Our best wishes and fond farewells go with longtime Midlander Dorothy Smith, who is now settled in her new apartment at The Classic in Dallas. After 53 years here, she said "Au Revoir" to her many friends in order to be near her daughters, Gwen Boren and Suzie (Mrs. Thornton, III) Hardie, and her three grandchildren.

McKnight-Harrison

At a black-eyed pea party at her home on New Year's Day, Dorothy announced to the gathering that she would be moving to Dallas in the near future. The ensuing months have been filled with a round of farewell festivities.

A luncheon group, composed of Dorothy and three friends who all have daughters of the same age, have met regularly since the girls were in first grade. The other members, Polly (Mrs. Clovis) Chappell, Jenna (Mrs. Harold) Welch and Betty Sue (Mrs. Tom) Marinis, were among those feting Dorothy before she left.

With a March birthday shortly before her departure, Dorothy was entertained with a party hosted by Ibby Hardie and a dinner given by Harriet and Harvey Herd.

Dorothy will miss her townhouse neighborhood in North Midland, where for eight years, she and Pat (Mrs. John) Carey entertained the ladies residing there with a Spring Fling. This year, their annual bash occurred on her birthday.

Among other farewell events were theatre parties given by Billie Hunt and Olive Cowden, an Easter luncheon hosted by Jerry Landau in her home and social gatherings hosted by Chan Driscoll at the Petroleum Club, by Martha Black at Midland Country Club and by Dorothy's longtime Sewing Club.

Dorothy originally moved to Midland as a new graduate of Texas Tech University. She married a young lawyer, James T. Smith, now deceased, who was a native Midlander. Over the years, she assumed many civic and church responsibilities, including the presidencies of the Junior League and United Methodist Women of First United Methodist Church, and established the church's Wedding Committee.

SANTA RITA CLUB members recently celebrated their annual Santa Marga-Rita dinner "at home" in the Petroleum Museum.

Mexican flowers and hats decorated the tables, and "South of the Border" food was enjoyed by the carowd.

Puppeteers, docents and gift shop workers exchanged tales of fun and challenges in each of their volunteer areas.

Sharing in the fun evening were Harry Hugly, president-elect of the organization, and his wife, Elsie; Margaret and John Rhea, Sally Whiteley, Shirley and W.O. Snyder, Brooksie Salmon and Ann and Márvin Harges.

The festivities were planned by Mary Sue Harrison and Barbara Fleetwood.

IN GREEK NEWS — Eddie McCarthy, son of Babe and Jerry McCarthy, was recently initiated into Beta Theta Pi fraternity at the University of Texas-Austin. He is a sophomore majoring in biology-zoology.

Kristie Peters is a member of the newly installed chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority at Southwest Texas State University. Daughter of Rosemary and Jim Peters, Kristie is a sophomore majoring in biology.

The new chapter was installed on April 4 at San Marcos. The sorority was founded in 1897 at Barnard College, now part of Columbia University.

FORMER MIDLANDER Susan Engleman of Lake Jackson was honored with a wine and cheese party and display shower recently in the home of Marilee (Mrs. Ed) Runyan.

Susan is the bride-elect of Randy Savoie of Gonzales, La. They will be married May 2 in Victoria.

The other hostesses were Marvel (Mrs. Jack) Goodwin, Elizabeth (Mrs. Byron) Greaves, Gladys (Mrs. Scott) Hickman, Anne (Mrs. Jack) Herbig, Kay (Mrs. George) Smith, Barbara (Mrs. Tom) Waller and Jocelyn (Mrs. Richard) Williams.

Susan is the daughter of Anette and Toby Engleman, who recently moved to Dallas.

Marilyn McKnight-Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

EGGS: Kits offer creativity, variety egg before it is dyed. Anywhere the wax adheres to the egg's shell, the dye will not.

For solid-colored eggs with these kits, you simply lower the egg into the dye with the egg dipper. When the desired shade of color is achieved, remove the egg and let drain, place in the drying tray and allow to dry. That's it. When finished with the dyes, they can be washed down the drain.

To add a little creativity to the art of dying eggs, Dudley's has Color•Rings, an egg coloring kit that dyes eggs in perfect rings of color. The trick to this creative effort is in the egg dipper. The crystal dye is dissolved in cold water (no vinegar). The hard-boiled egg is placed in an egg dipper which has moveable rings. Where these rings touch the egg, the dye can not adhere. You simply dip the egg in the dye until desired shade is achieved, then remove, drain and let dry. The dyes must thoroughly dry before adding the next ring of color.

But if perfect rings of color are just a little too controlled for your taste, maybe a rainbow of colors will suit you better.

With the Rainbow Color kit, a room temperature egg is placed in a coloring pouch and two to three drops of two or three different colors are dropped on different sides of the egg. With the coloring pouch, you are to gently rub the egg until it is covered with color. The egg is then removed from the pouch and set in a tray to dry. The effect created is a swirl of colors.

A similar effect of swirled color can be achieved with Sparkle Eggs; however this version glimmers.

ALTHOUGH WORK surfaces and clothing should be covered while dyeing eggs with any of the egg coloring kits, Sparkle Eggs is one of the few which warns to wear protective clothing.

For a Sparkle Eggs, a container is filled with cold water. The packet of dye is to be gently kneaded before opening. Once kneaded, squeeze two or three drops of dye onto the surface of the water, being creative with the color combinations.

With the egg dipper, slowly lower a room temperature egg into the dye drops using a circular motion until the egg in submerged in color, then remove the egg through a clear section of water.

The egg is then sprinkled with a light coat of glitter and left to dry on waxed paper or a drying tray.

Because this is an oil-based dye, it is not water soluble and clean up is a little more difficult. The dyes can be cleaned from the skin with vegetable oil or rubbing alcohol.

For a solid-colored egg that sparkles and shines, there is Shake 'N Dazzle, which may be a bit easier for younger 'egg'thusiasts to do (with supervision).

This kit contains two baskets. You place an egg in one cup and drop a few drops of dye on it. Place the second basket on top securely and shake until the egg is covered in color. Then open the basket and shake glitter onto the egg and shake again in the covered basket. When the egg is covered with glitter, take off the top basket and remove the egg with the egg puppet (a plastic mitten that is provided) and place in a tray to dry.

The baskets used for shaking come with attachable handles so they may be used as Easter baskets once all the eggs are decorated.

BECAUSE EGGS are rather delicate — even hard-boiled ones — Dudley's offers another egg coloring kit which produces glittering eggs without shaking.

Dazzlin' Eggs basically is dying the eggs with color crystals, then when the eggs are dry, you coat it with No Mess Glittering Gel using the applicator provided in a rolling manner. The glitter sticks to the egg and there you have it, a perfectly sparkling egg.

A product by Sun Hill uses basically the same principal to achieve solid-colored eggs that glitter, only the colors are pearlized. Another catch is that cut out figures of "The Little Mermaid" and her friends are included.

For a decorated egg with a little different flair, there is Stencil An Egg. The hard-boiled egg is placed in an egg-shaped stencil backed by foam — to keep the egg from moving. The stencil with the egg is then positioned in a specially designed area of the box which exposes only the area of the egg to be colored. With six colors of markers, the stencil shapes can now be transferred onto the shell of the egg. There are six stencils provided in the kit. The only precaution is to be sure the markers have dried on the egg shell before removing it from the stencil so colors do not smudge.

Now if all these methods just sound like too much trouble to you, then Instant Egg Art or Easter Egg Wrappers — depending on which brand you purchase — are for you. If you can boil water, you can decorate eggs with these wrappers.

All you have to do is hard-boil large eggs, and allow them to cool and dry. Take a wrapper and slip it on an egg. With a spoon, dip the egg with wrapper into boiling water for three seconds. Remove the egg from the water, drain and allow to dry. When the egg is submerged in the boiling water, the wrapper instantly shrinks around the egg.

THE DESIGNS for the wrappers range from traditional bunnies, chicks and flowers to the Muppets, Mickey and Minnie, and Donald and the Duck Tales gang.

The wrappers can be removed from the egg by simply cutting the wrapper off the egg. Although this method is very simple, it is not recommended for young children without adult supervision because boiling water is needed.

Most of these kits come with egg holders to display the eggs and the drying tray is made by punching out the perforated holes in the back of the box that are just the right size for the eggs to rest in.

These kits range in price from 50 cents to around $5.

So surprise the Easter Bunny this year with some creative egg decorations; who knows, it might even make the eggs easier to find.

Recipes offer twist of taste for leftover hard-boiled eggs

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle Editor

There are a few "tricks of the trade" in achieving the perfect hard-boiled egg.

The key is the temperature of the eggs and the velocity of the water in which they are cooked. Chilled eggs should be place in a pot in one layer, with room to move around, and covered with hot tap water. They should be allowed to sit for 10 minutes to adjust to the new temperature before cooking.

Then heat them to a simmer over medium heat and as soon as the water begins to bubble, turn the heat down to a bare simmer so the eggs will not be bounced around. Let the eggs cook for 15 minutes, then gently pour off the water and fill with cold tap water. Drain and let dry.

Then your eggs are ready for decorating and dyeing.

But when the Easter egg hunt is over, what should you do with all those hard-boiled eggs? A family can only eat so much egg salad and egg sandwiches.

Here are a few recipes to give some of those hard-boiled eggs a new twist of taste.

EGG SALAD WITH DILL

8 hard-cooked eggs
½ cup finely chopped purple onion
⅓ cup chopped fresh dill
½ cup Hellmann's mayonnaise
¼ cup dairy sour cream
¼ cup prepared Dijon-style mustard
salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Peel the eggs and quarter them. Place in a mixing bowl with the onion and dill.

In another bowl, whisk together the mayonnaise, sour cream and mustard and pour over the eggs, onion and dill.

Toss gently, season to taste with salt and pepper, and toss again. Cover and refrigerate if you must, be the salad is at its best eaten immediately.

Makes six portions.

From "The Silver Palate Cookbook" by Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, with Michael McLaughlin.

SCOTCH EGGS

2 raw eggs
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
8 hard-cooked eggs, peeled
1 pound bulk country-style sausage
Vegetable oil for frying

Beat the raw eggs and mustard together in a shallow bowl.

Place the bread crumbs in another shallow bowl.

Encase each hard-cooked egg completely in a thin layer of sausage, using both hands to mold the sausage around the eggs.

Dip one sausage-encased egg first in the egg mixture and then coat with the bread crumbs. Set aside on a plate and repeat with the remaining eggs. Refrigerate covered at least 3 hours or overnight.

Heat 3 inches oil in a deep-fat fryer to 375 degrees. Fry 2 or 3 eggs at a time, turning occasionally, until quite well browned, 10 to 15 minutes. (You want to make sure the sausage meat is thoroughly cooked.) Remove them from the oil with a slotted spoon and drain on paper towels.

Serve the eggs, cut into quarters, at room temperature. Pass additional mustard if desired.

SCOTCH EGGS CHINESE-STYLE

8 hard-cooked eggs, unpeeled but shells cracked all over
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 whole star anise
2 bags Chinese black tea
2 raw eggs
1 tablespoon sesame mustard
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
2 tablespoons sesame seeds
1 pound bulk country-style sausage
2 teaspoons chopped fresh ginger root
2 teaspoons chopped garlic
Vegetable oil for frying

One day before serving, place the hard-cooked eggs, soy sauce, star anise, tea bags and water to cover in a medium-size saucepan. Simmer the eggs uncovered for 25 minutes and then let stand overnight.

Beat raw eggs and mustard together in a shallow bowl.

Combine the bread crumbs and sesame seeds in another shallow bowl.

Mix the sausage, ginger and garlic.

Peel the hard-cooked eggs and proceed as directed in the recipe for Scotch Eggs.

curve them to form a handle, use green sprinkles or green tinted coconut in the middle of the cake to look like Easter grass and place jelly beans or other candies to represent eggs, and serve.

For individual Easter baskets, make any flavor of gelatin in custard cups or individual ring molds and chill until firm. Tint flaked coconut green to be used as Easter grass. When gelatin is unmolded, place the small side down. Sprinkle coconut on top of each mold for "grass." Place jelly beans on top of coconut for "eggs." Cut licorice strings for basket handles and insert on each side of molds to create small baskets.

An Easter bonnet cake can be created by baking the crown of the hat in an oven-proof mixing bowl and crafting a brim from a regular 9-inch round layer cake. Place the cake baked in the mixing bowl on top of the layer cake, ice and decorate.

With just a little imagination and work, Easter goodies can be decorative as well as tasty.

Walk into the home of Wayne and Linda Newkumet, 4906 Island Drive in Green Tree, and the first thing you notice is the bright and airy atmosphere.

Large glass windows and doors open onto the backyard, where children's play equipment, including swing set, fort and riding train, are evidence that this is a family home.

The 6,000-square-foot home, which was built a year and a half ago by M.R. Lary, builder and architect, and decorated by James Van Stavern and Norma Castello, has three bedrooms and five bathrooms, as well as a study, formal living area, dining area, kitchen and family room, and playroom upstairs.

It also has what Mrs. Newkumet calls a "nature room," which is home to several living animals including an iguana, hedgehog, chinchilla, snake, and several fish and birds. "I used to teach nature classes to kids," said Mrs. Newkumet. "Now I do a conservation program for the schools."

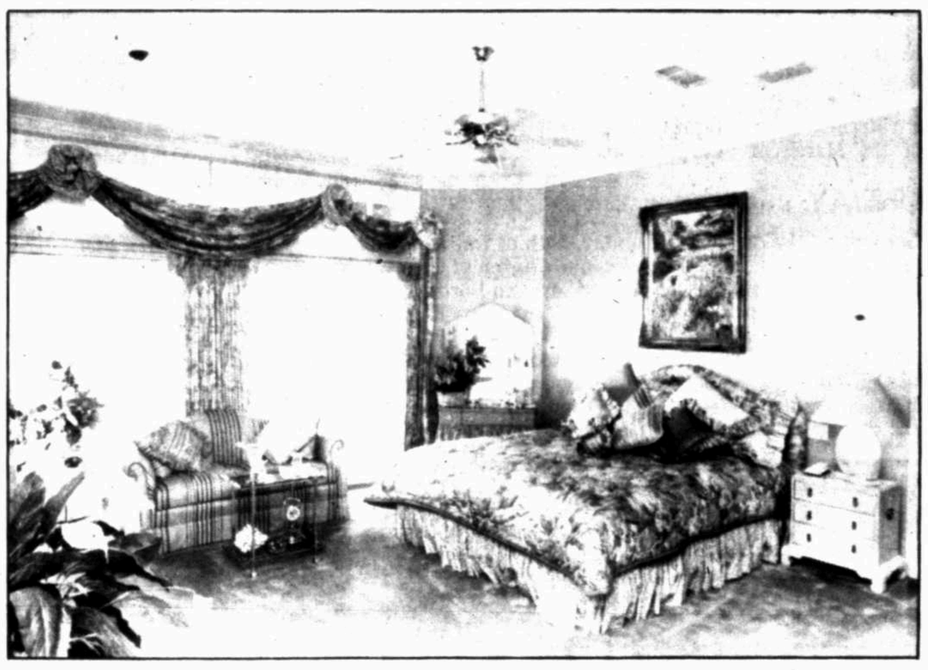

The family's interest in nature is evident in the decor of their home. The hall which leads to the children's bedrooms and the nature room is painted red with an underwater motif — "I call it 'the red sea,'" Mrs. Newkumet laughed.

The children's rooms have white walls and bright primary colors in the decor. Both rooms have blue carpeting; the baby's room is decorated with rainbows, and the 4-year-old's room is decorated with trains, boats and airplanes in bright colors.

The master bath; adjacent to the bedroom, continues the garden atmosphere of the master bedroom.

HOME: Family's home has garden-style decor

(From 3F)

The master bedroom is decorated in deep pastels with a floral flair. "I wanted a really happy, gardeny look," said Mrs. Newkumet. "I put in French doors and windows to give it that feel."

In the adjoining master bath, the whirlpool tub is surrounded by plants, bringing a garden indoors.

Across the hall in Newkumet's study, his interest in archeology and history is evident in the artifacts on display. He even has an "Indiana Jones" hat included in the decor. The room, decorated in vivid shades of blue and red with some walls paneled in wood, can be used as a guest bedroom, his wife said.

The guest bathroom down the hall is decorated in a black and floral motif.

Mrs. Newkumet describes the living area as a "contemporary California look." French doors bring sunlight into the room, and mirrored shelves display the family's shells and other ocean treasurers.

A large saltwater aquarium in the corner of the living area houses what she called a "living reef," complete with vividly-colored fish and other aquatic life.

The kitchen — with its wooden floor, center island and contemporary, friendly feel — opens onto the family room, which is decorated in reds. Here, the family can gather, play games, share meals or just enjoy each others company.

Upstairs is the game room, where family and friends can enjoy such recreations as playing pool or foosball, setting up and running electric trains, reading or just relaxing.

The Newkumet's home reflects the tastes and interests of the family, as well as a love of and appreciation for the wonders of the world.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Pecan trees need added zinc

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

It's our state tree — the pecan (Carya illenoinsis) and for the most part it is a tough tree and a popular tree for home gardeners. Despite its toughness, they do require care and attention.

We are past the bud break point on pecans, which is a significant stage of growth for some trees, because some trees in Midland County suffer from zinc deficiency. Zinc is a minor nutrient that pecans can't get enough of in alkaline soil conditions — that's us. Because our soils have a high soil pH, zinc is not available for pecan tree use; therefore in those trees that suffer from zinc deficiency, zinc must be applied in foliar sprays to the leaves.

Since it is the new young expanding leaves that take up foliar sprays of zinc, it is important to apply the zinc sprays during the leafing out stage. Leaves that have already leafed out and obtained their full size cannot take up zinc at that point even if they are undersized due to zinc deficiency. Because of this fact, sprays should be made beginning at bud break and followed by subsequent sprays up until May.

Actually, young trees tend to put on new growth throughout the growing season and can utilize zinc sprays made every two weeks up until August. More mature trees or trees approaching maturity will only utilize zinc sprays when there are new buds and expanding tissue present, so make one spray at bud break, one in mid-April and one more in early May.

Now, how do you tell if you have a zinc deficiency? The best way to tell is by comparing the leaves on your tree to a tree you know is healthy, perhaps one that is sprayed with zinc on a regular basis. The leaves of a healthy tree will be full size and medium to dark green. Leaf attachment along the stem of the new growth should be about three inches from one leaf attachment to the next leaf attachment. In a zinc deficient tree, the leaves will be pale, small, mishappened and the internode space will be short, less than two inches from leaf attachment to leaf attachment. This type of growth will give your tree a bunched or tufted appearance, sometimes called rosette.

There are several chelated zinc, zinc nitrate and zinc sulfate products that you can spray on your trees to correct or prevent a zinc deficiency in your trees. Nitrogen fertilizer added to these sprays will enhance the zinc uptake as well. Some zinc formulations contain a liquid nitrogen source already or you can add nitrogen. Use these sprays early in the morning when there is some moisture on the leaves and in the air. This will facilitate the zinc uptake process by the leaves. Direct sprays to the underside of the leaves, which won't be hard to do, since it is the underside of the leaf that takes up more zinc.

As you may already know, pecan varieties are all grafted onto pecan seeding rootstock. The only way to have a Western Schley or Wichita, or any of the improved pecan varieties, is to graft budwood from one of those varieties onto seedling rootstock. Otherwise growing a pecan tree from seed will result in a seedling pecan, one in which you won't know the fruiting habits, growth habits, performance habits for years — sometimes many years. Unfortunately, seedling pecans usually begin to bear much later than grafted improved varieties.

If you've lost the grafted portion of your pecan tree or you have a poor pecan variety, you may want to change your pecan tree to a desirable variety, like Tejas, Cheyenne, Western, Pawnee, Burkett, Sioux or Caddo. You can do this by grafting. Grafting simply means taking graftwood from a known and desirable variety and grafting it onto the rootstock of pecan.

You can learn how to do this intriguing horticultural propagation technique by attending a Pecan Grafting and Seasonal Care of Pecan Trees Workshop 4:30 p.m. Thursday at 3915 Cottonflat Road south of Midland.

Other aspects of growing and caring for pecan trees will be discussed, like what can be done about those pesky aphids that produce all that annoying honeydew!!! Be sure to join us.

Anyone interested in grafting, pest control, fertilizing and watering of pecan trees is encouraged to join the Texas Agricultural Extnesion Service and the Midland Pecan Growers Association. For more information call 687-1351.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Dodo was odd bird

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius (AP) — The dodo, a flightless bird long extinct, was a true oddity of nature.

Twice the size of a goose, the dodo had short legs and feet, a large head, long neck and huge bill. Its small wings covered with yellow-white feathers were useless for flight.

In 1507, sailors discovered large numbers of dodo birds on Mauritius and used them as food. Slaughter of the defenseless birds continued as more ships arrived, and by 1681 the dodo species was extinct.

AT WIT'S END

'Soap opera' commercials continuing

By Erma Bombeck

Well, we have just been treated to the fourth episode in the continuing commercial saga of the little yuppie snobs who borrow instant coffee from each other.

Bombeck

And who said romance was dead!

By today's standards — where couples have the sexual restraint of rabbits — this is going to be one of the longest courtships in the history of men and women.

In the first episode, she borrowed coffee for a group of her friends. He wanted to know if they were worth the price of premier coffee.

In the second commercial, she returned a jar to find him plying yet another conquest over coffee.

The third segment had them meeting by chance at a dinner party, and the current one has him using the oldest line in the world, "Could I come in for ... coffee?" (Oh sure, and we'll listen to Roy Acuff records and do Bible charades.)

The two have been tossing jars of coffee back and forth like activated bombs.

My kids tell me the idea of the soap opera commercial came from Great Britain, where people can't wait for the plot to thicken.

It doesn't take a genius to find out where this one is going. Episode V has our hero borrowing a jar of coffee from his intended for his bachelor party and her mother observing, "Your young man sure knows how to have a good time."

At the wedding (Episode VI) everyone is toasting the bride and groom, "To the most wired couple we know."

In the seventh commercial, he is propped up in bed on a Sunday morning surrounded by newspapers and a cup of you-know-what and offers his wife a sip. She is pregnant and throws up at the smell of it.

In Episode VIII, she is taking the kids to school one day when she discovers a jar of instant coffee in the glove compartment.

She doesn't need a building to fall on her to know he is fooling around. She confronts him and wants to know if the woman is worth the price of premier coffee.

He accuses her of being a closet tea drinker and they split.

Normally, I'd feel bad about a divorce, but I don't like either of these people.

They've been wrong for each other since the beginning. She looks older than he. He's condescending.

And they're both out of sync for a beverage that should denote warmth and friendship.

They should have met over Mueslix.

DEAR ABBY

Only thing we have to fear is fear we're misquoting

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am having an argument with a friend who considers himself an authority on everything. The question: Who said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself?"

Van Buren

I say, Franklin Roosevelt said it. My friend says the Duke of Wellington said it. Who is right? — BIG FIGHT IN LITTLE ROCK

DEAR BIG FIGHT: Roosevelt said it in his First Inaugural Address in 1933. And the Duke of Wellington — according to the Earl of Stanhope in his "Notes of Conversations with the Duke of Wellington" (published in 1888) quoted the Duke as having said: "The only thing I am afraid of is fear."

Wellington may have been paraphrasing Thoreau, who said in Henry David Thoreau's "Journal" (published in 1851): "Nothing is so much to be feared as fear."

However, Henry David Thoreau may have borrowed this gem from Francis Bacon who, in 1623, wrote: "Nothing is terrible except fear itself" ("De Augmentis Scientiarum, Book II, Fortitudo").

There is also the possibility that Thoreau might have read Michel Montaigne's "Essays, Book I" (published in 1580) in which he wrote, "The thing I fear most is fear."

But leave it to the Old Testament to scoop them all: "Be not afraid of sudden fear," Proverbs 3:25.

Deliberate plagiarism has been around for a long time, but it's possible for philosophers (and even advice columnists) to come up with an "original" thought that occurred to someone else in another land at another time.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I filed for Medicaid for my mother. She had been living in a nursing home and had used up all of her savings. The social service person at the nursing home asked me if my mother had been receiving a pension as a widow of a World War I veteran.

"Never heard of it," said I. She suggested I contact the Veterans Administration office. Well, to make a long story short, my mother is now receiving $7,000 a year from the V.A., which means that the state will have to pay a much smaller amount of my mother's nursing home bill.

I wish we had known about this pension three years ago. My mother could have saved herself $21,000 that she spent needlessly.

On the chance that there are a lot of folks who read your column and also do not know that there is a pension available for veterans, widows and children of veterans of all wartime periods, it might be a good idea to print this.

I have enjoyed your column for years in the Faribault News. — PATRICIA IN FARIBAULT, MINN.

DEAR PATRICIA: Your letter could be helpful to many readers who are veterans, or widows, or children of veterans of all wartime periods. (Benefits are available for veterans of "conflicts," too.)

To find if you qualify for assistance, contact the Regional Veterans Benefits Office (NOT the VA hospital). A toll-free number is listed in most telephone directories — and every state has one or more regional offices.

Problems? Write to: Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Music in a new LIGHT

By Georgia Todd Temple

Everybody that does this is like their own Johnny Appleseed," said guitarist Chris Proctor.

"You go places and you perform and you stimulate airplay and record sales that way. Then you hope that takes root in that area.

"You come back often enough to nourish those little seedlings that you scattered around the country from your travels and from your record company's efforts to get promotions and from individual music store owners taking chances on some new person and putting new music in their stores."

Proctor could be describing the way any performer gets his name and music recognized by the public. However, he is actually speaking about the path traveled by those musicians/composers who play music that has no established, agreed-upon name.

"The truth of the matter is you could read every piece of written material about me and still would have the same question, which is, 'How do you describe this music?'

"Anytime you do new music people don't have the words quite at hand. If you say jazz or rock 'n' roll, everybody has an image of what's involved in that. There's a legacy."

Through his more than 20 years of performing, Proctor has collected the words written about his music.

"It's almost humorous, all the different things people have called me. The LA Times — baroque finger style; somebody else called me contemporary acoustic; somebody else called me post-folk; somebody else called me classicaljazzfolk — like it's all one word crammed together with no spaces. Acoustic eclectic. Contemporary finger style. The list is endless.

"And it's all just an attempt to give people a handle for music that's relatively new. There aren't that many of us out here that are making our little niche playing instrumental music of our own compositions on steel-string guitars."

Midlanders will have a chance to stretch their vocabulary in describing Proctor's music during this year's Celebration of the Arts May 2-3. Proctor is set to perform at the ninth annual COA at 2:15, 3:30 and 5 p.m. May 3.

The event, sponsored by the Arts Assembly of Midland, opens with a free family concert featuring JazzCaribe, who will present a musical tour of the Caribbean with calypso, reggae and soca sounds of Jamaica, Cuba and Trinidad at 6:30 p.m. April 30 at Beal Plaza, Midland College. The downtown events at Midland Center and Centennial Plaza kick off with a preview party May 1.

As for describing his music himself, Proctor said, "I've given up. On my letterhead, it says contemporary finger-style guitar. That's about the best I can do, but that doesn't mean anything intrinsically."

Proctor, who was first exposed to the guitar in college, has an undergraduate degree from the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, not in music, but in philosophy.

"I didn't expect it to be practical or pertinent to whatever I was going to do with my life, and it turns out that was a reasonable expectation," he said. He added, "Philosophy was a good undergraduate major for people to do things as practical as law school or business school. Those schools like somebody who learned how to think and come to conclusions and analyze good and bad arguments, which is probably the best part of philosophy. Not that you come out of the system, but that you come out educated almost in the broad sense in knowing how to think, knowing what the great issues were and what people thought about them, and how people have solved these problems historically."

MUSIC: Creating process is similiar to artist carving driftwood

(From 1G)

The first time Proctor went to college, he took not one music course.

"I began to play guitar pretty late in life for a beginner. I had taken a lot of other music lessons. This is the first guitar music I saw up close and heard that really moved me," he said, adding that he became interested in this type of music when it was in its early stages.

"I was introduced to this from the beginning. I had a couple of friends who played instrumental music on steel-strings in a fledgling sense. They weren't that good, and it was more than 20 years ago, so the repertoire was vastly different. It's so much more sophisticated now and so much broader."

When he first heard his friends play, he had no idea that the music was not something everyone was doing.

"I almost started out in this not knowing that this was unusual. I had two or three friends around, and it seemed like everyone must be doing this."

Actually, it wouldn't have mattered if he had known differently.

"When I first saw this style being played, or what this style was like 20 years ago, it was one of those riveting moments that people, if they're lucky, have. You get tunnel vision. The world, all of a sudden, gets smaller.

"This is it. This is what I have to do. I'm going to learn how to do this without regard for consequences, follow it wherever it needs to be. And, that was my feeling. And I still is."

Proctor began working on his own. He bought every record and music book available. Then, five years later, he realized he didn't know enough about writing music. He returned to the same university. This time, his major was music. His goal was not a degree in music, it was becoming musically literate." This time, he was in college for two and a half years.

"To get a degree, I had to learn piano because all of the music theory that is taught in most colleges is piano-based. I wasn't attracted to piano. I took the classes that they would allow me to take without having any more piano literacy, and I took all the theory and composition and counterpoint."

Proctor's career choice has geographically carried him to every state except North Dakota. Emotionally and psychologically, his music has given him a real focus.

"To do something like this you need to feel you're on a search for Grail, or, if not the Grail, you have a really strong mission.

"And especially with new music, the mission's sort of unclear. The mission, in one sense, is clear to keep pursuing the guitar, but it's not like with classical or something where there's already a repertoire out there.

"We're expected to write our own material, also, with no guidelines — essentially, nobody having really gone before us. There's nobody out there saying you have to learn how to do this exactly. It's still evolving."

The evolving nature of the music Proctor writes has required him to become self-disciplined.

"I also set all my own parameters. How much am I writing? What kind of music am I writing? What forms does it take? What techniques are required to execute it well and to get it across? That's all wide open. It's really unstructured. It's forced me to become self-disciplined to a greater extent that I ever through would be required just to make sense of it. There's so many variables and so many choices."

Proctor compares the process he goes through in creating music to the artist carving pieces of driftwood.

"When you pick up a piece of driftwood off the beach, the shape that it came in does at least partially determine what you are going to be able to make out of it. I'm not starting with a perfectly milled piece of lumber with a goal in mind that I'm going to turn out figurines that look a certain way.

'When you pick up a piece of driftwood off the beach, the shape that it came in does at least partially determine what you are going to be able to make out of it. I'm not starting with a perfectly milled piece of lumber with a goal in mind that I'm going to turn out figurines that look a certain way.

"In a way, I'm sort of following my little muse and wherever it ends up is where that song ends up. The guiding thing for me is my own desire to be technically innovative and my own creative urge."

In a way, Proctor said, what he does reminds him of being a tour-bus driver.

"They're in my city, and I'm showing them around. When you get on a tour bus, you're sort of trusting that that individual knows where he or she is going and will show you some things that you're interested in, and will give you a slice of life you hadn't seen before, and will drop you back off, and you'll be fine, and, in fact, even better than you started at the end. And that's what I do with the steel-string guitar."

Town still reeling from filming of 'Hud'

By David Stevens
Associated Press

CLAUDE — I suppose there were some good movies in 1991. "City Slickers," was pretty funny, "The Silence of the Lambs" was pretty scary and "The Prince of Tides" was pretty thought-provoking.

But one has to wonder about year in which a cartoon was nominated for Best Picture.

No sir, they just don't make them like they used to. They don't make them like "Hud" anymore.

(For those of you who wonder what low-income housing has to do with the movies, I hereby sentence you to watch "Valley of Gwangi," the science fiction classic featuring cowboys and dinosaurs. You may have popcorn, but no Coke.)

It was 30 springs ago when Paramount Pictures arrived in Claude to make a movie based on Larry McMurtry's book "Horseman, Pass By." Paul Newman was the star of "Hud," which wasn't nominated for Best Picture but still beats anything showing on the big screen today.

Besides a great story line — focused on the sorry son of a Texas rancher who has fallen on hard times — and a star-studded cast — Newman, Melvyn Douglas and Patricia Neal, who won Best Actress in her role as the family housekeeper — "Hud" produced some all-time great lines:

- "It happens to everybody — horses dogs, men. Nobody gets out of life alive." — Hud Bannon.
- "If you don't look out for yourself, the only helping hand you'll ever get is when they lower your box into the grave." — Hud.
- "The look of the country changes because of the men we admire." — Homer Bannon, Hud's father.
- "I can't feel a smidgen of pride in 'em, 'cause it ain't none of my doin'." — Homer Bannon, on oil wells.
- "It don't take long to kill things; not like it does to grow." — Homer Bannon.

Besides being a great movie, there are some great memories from its filming.

Author McMurtry wrote that the cast and crew stayed in the Ramada Inn in Amarillo where Newman — already a star — was hounded by female admirers. Cars circled the Ramada "like Indians circling a wagon train," McMurtry wrote in a book of essays.

Veteran newsman Putt Powell has told the story many times of how Newman would come to the Globe-News late at night and wait on baseball box scores from the West Coast.

And Claude's Anne Christian still has to listen to stories about how her husband — an extra in the movie — played bridge with Newman and Neal.

"I don't know if he won or not," she said. "In his memory, he probably did by now."

Houston Symphony plans summer home north of city

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Symphony has found a summer home north of the city.

Thanks to a $5 million grant and another $2.5 million in improvements and subsidies, the symphony will take the orchestra to the Cynthia Woods Mitchell Pavilion in The Woodlands during the summer.

The grant by oilman George Mitchell and his wife, Cynthia, The Woodlands Corp. and Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. will endow an annual summer concert series at the 10,000-seat outdoor theater 30 miles north of Houston.

Since the gift is to be paid over a 10-year period, rather than in one lump sum, the Mitchells will provide an additional $2 million to make up the difference in interest and help keep ticket prices low.

Another $330,000 is being spent on improvements, including increased air conditioning on stage, a new orchestra shell and improved amplification at the two-year-old pavilion.

The gift is the largest donation by private individuals and the third largest overall to the capital fund drive. The Wortham Foundation has provided $10.5 million and the Brown Foundation $7 million.

Thanks to a $5 million grant and another $2.5 million in improvements and subsidies, the symphony will take the orchestra to the Cynthia Woods Mitchell Pavilion in The Woodlands during the summer.

"When we began planning the Pavilion seven years ago, it was our thought that Houston should have an outstanding facility similar to Tanglewood near Boston, Ravinia near Chicago, Blossom near Cleveland, and Wolf Trap near Washington, D.C.," George Mitchell said.

ABC wins ratings with Oscar broadcast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 64th Annual Academy Awards made ABC No. 1 in the latest ratings race and gave the network its highest weekly mark of the season.

The March 30 Oscar telecast was the most-watched program on television last week, according to ratings released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

ABC earned a 14 average rating for last week's programming. CBS was second with 12.7 and NBC was third with 10.8.

Each ratings point represents 921,000 homes.

In the 30-week television season that ends Sunday, ABC so far has earned only two victories and remains last among the Big Three broadcasters in overall season standings.

In the latest top 10 list, however, ABC grabbed seven slots.

The blue-collar comedy "Roseanne" placed second, followed by CBS' "60 Minutes."

"The Barbara Walters Special" with Michelle Pfeiffer and Anthony Hopkins, which aired directly before the Oscar broadcast in the East and immediately afterward in the West, ranked fourth.

ABC's "20-20" finished fifth. The network's hit comedy "Home Improvement" was sixth. Linda Lavin's new ABC series "Room For Two," ranked seventh.

The ABC sitcom "Full House" was eighth and NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" was ninth.

CBS' Saturday broadcast of the NCAA National Semifinal basketball game between Duke and Indiana Universities ranked tenth.

The premiere of NBC's highly touted prime-time magazine "Dateline NBC," starring Jane Pauley, finished 31st.

School names Istomin as president

NEW YORK (AP) — Cellist Marta Casals Istomin has been named president of the Manhattan School of Music.

Istomin, 55, was married for 17 years to the acclaimed cellist Pablo Casals. She started playing when she was 9, studied at the Mannes School of Music before returning to her native Puerto Rico to study with Casals.

She was artistic director at the Kennedy Center in Washington from 1980 to 1990 and is married to concert pianist Eugene Istomin.

"To work with young students and help them work and dream at the same time is very exciting to me," she said. "I've had the opportunity of seeing what is out there in the music world. I feel with that experience I can perhaps contribute to guiding young people toward the future."

She will begin her new duties July 1 and will give the commencement address in May.

The 74-year-old Manhattan School's budget is more than $11 million, board chairman Gordon K. Greenfeld said, adding that the budget is balanced. Enrollment of music students is 834 this year.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, APRIL 12, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: New business and personal alliances demand the lion's share of your energy. Make as many contacts as you can, beginning in July. Who you know will mean more than experience or skills in September. Once you land a coveted job in November, you will have to deliver! A home decorating project adds to your creature comforts next December. A chance meeting early in 1993 puts thoughts of a secret romance into your head. Be very, very careful!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: bandleader Lionel Hampton, jazz musician Herbie Hancock, singer David Cassidy, actress Jane Withers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Socializing could lead to some interesting developments today. You get a lead that gives you access to people in high places. Couples draw closer together.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You take great pleasure in talking with people who are well-informed on a variety of subjects. Seize an opportunity to redeem yourself in the eyes of someone you love.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your emotions under strict control. Refuse to be goaded into losing your temper. Seeking the company of tolerant, well-adjusted friends pays rich dividends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Discuss a financial situation with family members if you find yourself in a temporary bind. Their help could mean the difference between failure and success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends are eager to help you solve a personal problem. Unfortunately, they may not have enough information to give you a fair opinion. Let a parent tell you about his or her experiences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check your calendar; you may have forgotten an important business or social engagement. If so, call and apologize. Home life is more relaxing than in the recent past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone who always seemed well-balanced may be acting oddly now. Avoid passing judgment. Curb a tendency to speak out of turn. You can be a good friend without offering unsolicited advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you feel that you are headed down the wrong path, change course. Ignoring your instincts could prove costly. Family obligations are in the spotlight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A decision you reach today will bring new peace of mind. Absolute secrecy is essential now. Someone's enthusiasm should be allowed to run unchecked until you have accomplished your goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If making any headway in an argument, keep the pressure on. Playing on someone's vanity helps you get what you want. All of your loved ones will band together today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Those in love may wish to tell the world about it. Better still, tell the object of your affection! Do-it-yourself projects prove especially satisfying if they help you save money.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use your energies wisely. Certain people will impose shamelessly if you let them. Be diplomatic when extricating yourself from users. Enjoy dinner "a deux" tonight.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

Just because two cards are equal doesn't mean it makes no difference which you play to a given trick. It depends on what you are trying to achieve—whether you want to conceal the location of a card or reveal it.

South was decidedly optimistic to venture three no trump opposite a non-vulnerable preempt. At least one of the pointed suits had to be inadequately stopped, and there was no guarantee the club suit would run.

West led a fourth-best heart to East's queen. As declarer, should you hold up on this trick, or not?

Since the opponents have missed your weak spot and you don't want to give them a chance to switch the attack, you should plan to win the trick. Do you do so with the king or the ace?

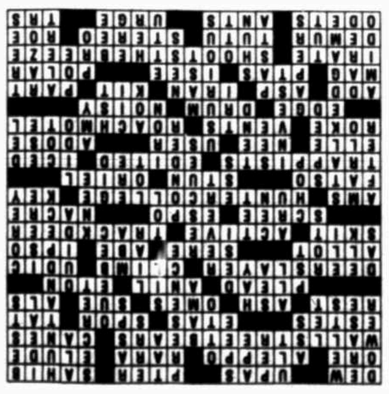

Many players believe that, by winning with the ace, they suggest to West that East started with the K Q in the suit. Not so, for with A x x the normal play would be to hold up the ace until the third round. On the other hand, since it is correct for East to play the queen from A Q x, winning with the king leaves both defenders in doubt as to the location of the ace.

Now transfer yourself to the East seat. Declarer wins the king of hearts at trick one and leads a club to the ten. Should you take the ace?

Not yet. You want to give partner a chance to signal in clubs, so hold up, preferably for two rounds. On the second club partner discards the two of hearts to deny interst in having the suit returned. When in with the ace of clubs, heed partner's suit preference signal and shift to the jack of diamonds. Down one.
