Aristide reversal

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Removing a final major obstacle to settling Haiti's 18-month political crisis, diplomats and advisers to the ousted president say the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide has reversed himself and extended an offer of amnesty to his most bitter opponents among the army leadership. United Nations mediators are expected to present the offer to Haitian military leaders today in a meeting that diplomats have described as pivotal to the resolution of the crisis. Mediators have said they hope to have Aristide return to office within 60 days of a settlement./2A

Vietnam replies

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnam's senior diplomat dealing with U.S. affairs Tuesday described as a "clear fabrication" a document suggesting that 1,205 American prisoners of war were in North Vietnamese prisons in 1972, more than double the number eventually released. The diplomat, Nguyen Xuan Phong, acting director of the Americas Department at the Foreign Ministry, said in a telephone interview from Hanoi that "we have very strong evidence" to prove "this document is not authentic — a clear fabrication."/2A

Penalty-tax plan

WASHINGTON — Groping for ways to carry out a crucial feature of President Clinton's health-care plan, the White House is considering a "penalty tax" on doctors and hospitals to constrain medical spending. The tax would be imposed on hospitals, doctors and other health-care providers in states that exceed spending targets to be established by the federal government, according to administration officials and White House documents. The officials say such targets are essential to control costs./8A

Jury acquits three

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Three Marines were acquitted Tuesday of charges that they assaulted three people at a bar that catered to homosexuals. Judge Jacqueline Morris-Goodson, who was hearing the case without a jury, said the state failed to meet its burden of proof. Lance Cpls. Walter Watkins III, 26, Patrick Cardone, 23, and Colin Hunt, 20 were charged with three counts each of simple assault. They faced a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail or a $50 fine./5B

Retail sales plunge

Consumers dig out from blizzard, debt

■ Drop is worst since January 1991, during recession.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans sharply curtailed retail spending in March as they dug out from the Blizzard of '93 and an avalanche of credit card debt from a holiday shopping spree.

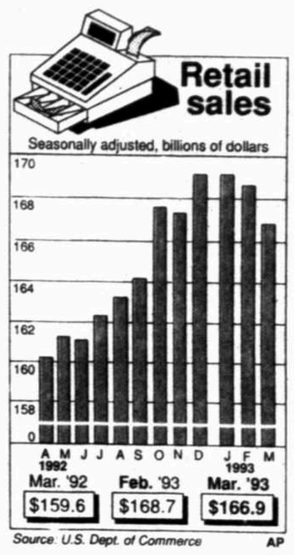

Sales plunged 1 percent to a seasonally adjusted $166.9 billion, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. It was the worst drop since January 1991, during the depths of the recession.

The Clinton administration seized on the report as evidence its $16 billion jobs bill is needed to keep the recovery alive. Senate Republicans, citing the need to reduce the budget deficit, have blocked the bill with a filibuster.

Commerce Secretary Ronald H. Brown said the sales slump "provides compelling evidence that recovery is at risk unless decisive action is taken when Congress returns next week."

"Americans have every right to resent the reimposition of gridlock government in the face of new and growing evidence that the pace of recovery and job growth may not be

School board backs Proposition 2

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Midland school-board trustees agreed with Gov. Ann Richards advice, "If you don't fill the till, don't pass the bill," as it applies to Proposition 2 in the May 1 election.

Trustees voted unanimously Tuesday afternoon to support the proposed amendment to the constitution which may ease future local tax burden.

The amendment exempts school districts from the obligation to comply with laws passed by the Legislature if any local funds are required to pay for them.

It reads — "The constitutional amendment exempting a school district from the obligation to comply with unfunded state educational mandates."

Several state teacher organizations support the amendment. They fear its failure would place teacher benefits and some programs in jeopardy.

"The key word in that amendment is 'future' mandates," said

City, county, Midland school-board trustees and law enforcement officials don't have a problem with being tested for drugs, though they doubt it would solve teen-age alcohol problems.

Representatives of all of the entities met for a joint meeting Tuesday afternoon to discuss the grand jury report citing alcohol and drug abuse among Midland teen-agers.

Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth allowed that city and county leaders submitting to drug testing "would be a fine example for us to do as leaders. But, we're not the problem — and doing that is not going to solve the problem."

Defense team tries to pound coercion line

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Defense attorneys continued Tuesday to pound the assertion that Curtis Dean Purser was coerced into confessing a role in the Nov. 13, 1991, murder of a church secretary.

Carol Purser, the mother of the 21-year-old on trial, testified that a District Attorney's investigator advised against talking to a lawyer and made promises that the state would not seek the death penalty.

And for a four-month period before Purser's arrest, law-enforcement officers visited the Purser home about three times a week, she told the jury.

Between the day of the crime and his arrest on April 15, 1991, Purser made several statements about his involvement. They ranged from knowing nothing of the murder to stabbing Brenda Branch, 28, twice at the Living Way Foursquare Church.

Although Purser was regularly advised of his rights, a lawyer was never secured.

"I said 'How can you do this to him without a lawyer?' It's like taking a lamb to slaughter," Ms. Purser

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Jeannie Brown never considered buying a gun.

But the woman who calls herself "kind of a liberal" has been jittery lately. Carjackings. Home break-ins. The Rodney King beating trial.

After work Monday, she stopped by Bruce Jochim's gun shop in this affluent suburb, known for its left-leaning politics, to check out the handguns.

Gun control advocates say the worst thing people could do while awaiting the verdicts in the King trial would be to arm themselves to the teeth. But for

Senators support change in way of electing judges

AUSTIN (AP) — After two weeks of political fighting, state senators Tuesday voted along party lines in favor of a judicial election system that is designed to increase the number of minority judges in nine counties.

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said the proposal would "move Texas into the 21st century in far better shape than it is in this century."

The 17-13 vote — with Democrats holding the majority — is the latest development in a partisan battle in which Republicans have shut down the Senate twice: once in a walkout and the second time by a filibuster.

The dispute is over a proposed court settlement to change the method of electing state district court judges in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis counties.

The proposal is the result of a

U.N. envoy returns to Haiti for negotiations

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — U.N. envoy Dante Caputo returned to Haiti on Tuesday with an intricate plan for political and military changes that could induce other countries to end their embargo and restore foreign aid.

In his fifth visit in four months, the Argentine diplomat will press for the resignation of the army high command and the quick restoration of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was deposed by the army in September 1991.

Caputo also is believed to be ready to tell soldiers who took part in the coup that Aristide will give them a blanket amnesty if he returns to office.

Such a promise would resolve a key sticking point in the negotiations for his return. Aristide was deposed seven months after becoming the country's first freely elected president.

Caputo made no statement upon his arrival and, unlike a trip in February, there were no right-wing demonstrators jeering him.

Distrust between Aristide and the coup leaders runs high and has thwarted Caputo's previous attempts at restoring democracy.

Aristide supporters have little faith in the military, which slaughtered hundreds of Haitians in the days after the coup and which has arrested thousands without charges since then.

The civilian and military elite, meanwhile, have feared that Haiti's masses would one day seek vengeance for mistreatment and exploitation. Aristide, a fiery, populist Roman Catholic priest, personifies their fear.

After a series of negotiating sessions with U.N. and U.S. officials, Aristide agreed over the weekend to a blanket amnesty, a pro-Aristide politician told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

But in a radio broadcast on Sunday, Aristide was less clear.

"From now on, stop killing, so that in coming days I will be able to grant you political amnesty," he told the army, citing Article 147 of the constitution. However, he said earlier in the broadcast that the article would not extend to coup leaders because, in his words, they are "common criminals."

U.S. officials also believed that Aristide promised such an amnesty during a meeting with President Clinton last month.

Most Aristide partisans, although opposed to a blanket amnesty, are impatient for a quick solution following more than 18 months of economic hardship and human rights abuses.

Vietnam officials denounce POW documentation

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A document purporting to show that Vietnam held hundreds more American prisoners of war than it admitted in the 1970's is a fabrication, officials said Tuesday.

They blamed the document on unnamed parties trying to sabotage improved U.S.-Vietnamese ties. Vietnam seeks to develop its economy and wants Washington to end a trade embargo imposed in 1975 and extend diplomatic recognition.

The document, if authentic, indicates North Vietnam held 1,205 American POWS in 1972 — 837 more than it acknowledged to the United States at the time.

"Vietnam categorically rejects this ill-intentioned fabrication," the Foreign Ministry said. "The fact is that in 1973, after the signing of the Paris Agreement, Vietnam handed over to the U.S. all American prisoners captured in Vietnam."

The ministry statement, transmitted by the official Vietnam News Agency, appeared to stress that no American servicemen were living in Vietnam, either in detention or by their own choice.

A Harvard researcher, Stephen Morris, said he found the formerly secret document in Soviet Communist Party archives in Moscow. It purportedly was a Russian translation of a report written by Gen. Tran Van Quang, deputy chief of staff of the North Vietnamese army.

Quang, now chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Association, could not be reached for comment.

"This is merely a fabrication, and Vietnam rejects it firmly," said Nguyen Xuan Phong, acting director of the Americas Department at Vietnam's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

BRACES: King beating trial jury deliberations continue today

District Judge John Davies, who said they were "too accurate for comfort" in their portrayals of the anonymous jury deciding the fate of four police officers accused of violating King's civil rights.

"Any drawings of jurors or alternates must contain minimal detail and must not render them recognizable," the judge wrote in an order posted in the courthouse press room.

The city, meantime, moved to bolster security.

A crane lowered 3-foot-high concrete barriers into place outside the federal building, blocking the entrance to crowds and vehicles, and a chain-link fence went up around a parking lot across the street. Police said it would be used as a staging area.

About 600 National Guard troops trained at armories in Inglewood, Burbank, Glendale, Los Alamitos, Van Nuys and Arcadia.

"California guardsmen have been instructed that they are to use any means at their disposal to protect themselves or any other citizen if they are in threat of human death," said Maj. Gen. Tandy Bozeman.

Another military contingent was training 80 miles to the south. About 1,000 Marines at Camp Pendleton stormed a mock town as part of a "just in case" urban assault exercise, said Cpl. Rick Laemmle, a base spokesman.

Hours after Sgt. Stacey Koon, Officers Laurence Powell and Theodore Briseno and former Officer Timothy Wind were acquitted of most charges in a state trial last April, the city erupted in violence that left 54 people dead and caused nearly $1 billion damage.

Police under the leadership of former Chief Daryl F. Gates were criticized for their delayed response to the unrest, but new Chief Willie Williams has promised protection for the city's 3.6 million residents.

Some activists condemned the military and police buildup.

"We think that it's important that people have a continued opportunity to voice opposition," said activist lawyer B. Kwaku Duren.

But most voices were urging peace, no matter what the verdicts turn out to be. U.S. Rep. Maxine Waters handed out letters in her South Central district saying, "It's time to chill."

"If you take to the streets with a Molotov cocktail in your hand, a gun in your belt or a brick ready to throw, you give the police the legal right to kill you," the letters read.

"Chill" — slang for "keep calm" — was also the title of a music video featuring Arsenio Hall and Arnold Schwarzenegger as hosts that was introduced to schoolchildren on the school district's KLCS-TV station.

In one neighborhood, a man with "Peace" written on his T-shirt expressed the plea by carrying a 10-foot wooden cross.

"Justice, equality, human rights — that's what we don't have in this country. I'm trying to bring a message to the people: Let's not fight injury with injury, ignorance with ignorance. I'm urging peace," said Charles Verdun, 49.

The Rev. Benjamin Chavis Jr., newly elected leader of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, spent the night at a Watts public housing project before touring South Los Angeles.

"It's calm here and I think it's going to be calm here after the verdicts," said Chavis. "The unrest and the uncalm is coming from an overreaction by the military and law enforcement."

JUDGES: Senators seek change

recent federal court panel ruling that says the current countywide system of electing judges discriminates against black and Hispanic voters because white bloc voting essentially prevents minority-backed candidates from winning.

For example, Harris County has a 42 percent minority population. But of 59 state district judges, less than 10 percent are minorities.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales and minority plaintiffs signed a proposed agreement that would divide the nine counties into smaller districts where higher concentrations of minority voters would be able to elect their candidates.

Morales asked lawmakers to endorse the proposal as he submitted it for approval by the federal court. The House has yet to consider the proposal.

Republicans would probably stand to lose a large number of judge positions under the change. Several GOP senators said the proposed settlement should be put to voters first. They also said they oppose the smaller district system because it does nothing to remove partisan politics, or high-dollar contributions in court races.

"There is no Democratic law, there is no Republican law," said Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, in an unsuccessful attempt to amend Ellis' resolution to have non-partisan races.

Even after the vote, senators would not let the issue rest.

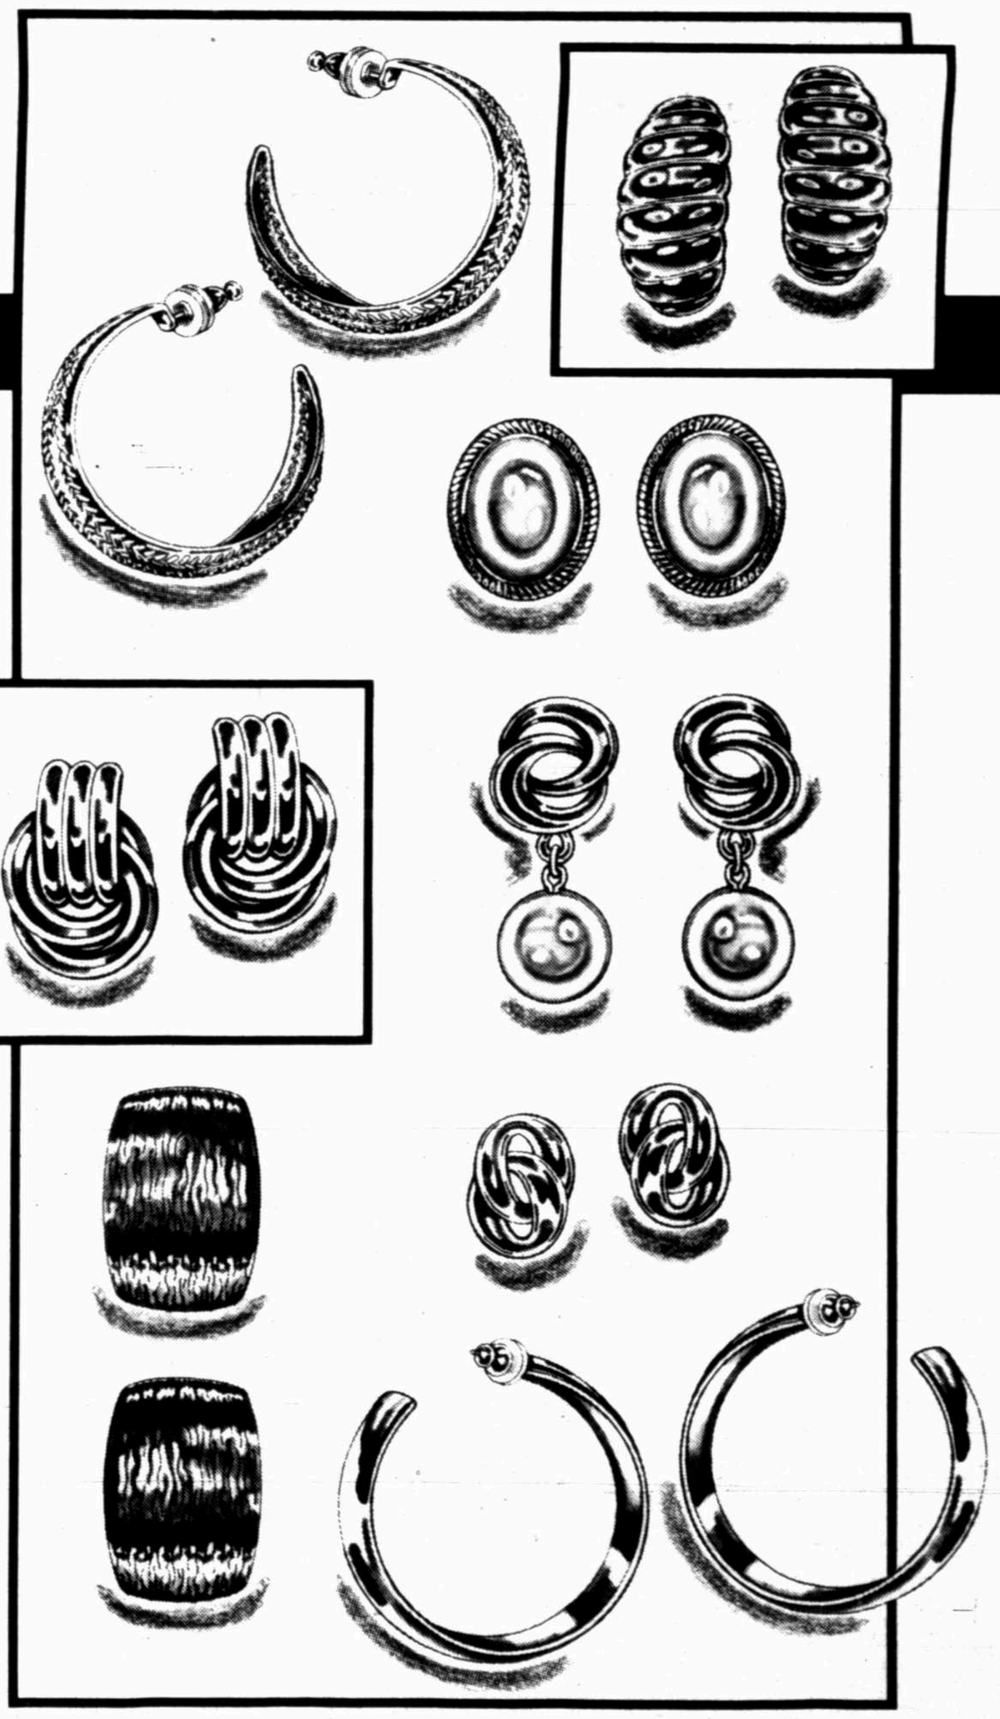

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mt. Pleasant, said the action should not be taken as an official statement of the Senate because it was done as the 31-member body met as a committee.

ECONOMY: Retailers' sales drop in March sustainable," he said.

But Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas accused the administration of mounting a "snow job" to convince Americans a weather-related drop in sales could be cured by more government spending.

"If anything, consumers are getting more and more worried about being buried under a record-breaking blizzard of new taxes," he said.

Commerce Department spokesman Adren Cooper said government analysts were unsure how much of the decline to attribute to the storm that swept up the East Coast in the middle of the month.

But he said the across-the-board nature of the drop suggested the weather had a significant effect. All but one category of retailing — drug stores — reported drops in March.

Private economists said that painfully slow improvement in the labor market and Americans' income growth were at least partially behind the March decline. But many don't believe President Clinton's stimulus package will make much difference.

"This is a trivial package. The notion that somehow this very, very small program is going to have any significant impact on the job market or the economy as a whole is almost ludicrous," said economist Norman Robertson

In advance, analysts were expecting March sales to remain unchanged from February. Instead, the government reported a decline to the lowest sales level in six months.

March was the third consecutive month without an increase. Sales slipped 0.3 percent in February and remained unchanged in January. They had soared 1.1 percent in December, the fifth increase in six months, giving retailers their best Christmas in five years.

However, much of the late-1992 sales boomlet was paid for by credit cards and could not last, analysts said.

"People drew down their savings and borrowed heavily to finance Christmas purchases. Now they're curtailing spending. They're just not willing to borrow more because income and job growth has been so small," said economist Mark Zandi.

ARMS: Jittery residents head for gun shops

(From 1A)

Ms. Brown and many others, the question was to buy or not to buy.

"I'm not really the gun type," said Ms. Brown, a mid-30ish office worker who lives in Santa Monica, about 15 miles west of South Central Los Angeles.

"I just feel less safe than I used to, and I'm trying to figure out if this is the answer."

Statistics indicate many people were saying yes to that question. Handgun sales in Los Angeles County jumped 53 percent in the month after the deadly rioting that followed the acquittals of four officers on state charges in King's beating, according to the state Justice Department.

For the year, sales of all types of guns across California jumped about 19 percent to 114,000 last year from 96,000 in 1991, the department said.

Preliminary figures also showed gun sales statewide last month jumped more than 50 percent over March 1992, the month before the riots.

But the idea that everyone was arming for another round of violence is a misperception, officials said.

Los Angeles County handgun sales fell back to pre-riot levels within six weeks of last year's violence, said Luis Tolley.

A recent Los Angeles Times poll indicated that of 1,136 people randomly surveyed, 40 percent had made preparations to protect themselves in case of new riots. Of that number, just 4 percent had bought guns. The poll had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

"There is a trend, a national trend of buying guns — but it's not something that's new — it's something that's been going on for decades," Tolley said.

IMAGE: Crimes, hurricane scratch surface

speedboat towing a tan skier scratches a white wake across a lagoon. Every wavelet winks in the sun.

"This is the ideal place to do nothing without having a bad conscience," said Anouk Linder, a German tourist sunning herself on Miami Beach. Reflected in her irridescent sunglasses are sidewalk cafes, a row of pastel Art Deco hotels and, always, the Coke-bottle-green Atlantic.

But other images never make the handsome brochures distributed by travel agents and retirement communities. Like the crumpled body of an earlier German visitor who lost her way between airport and beach and was robbed and killed in the blighted Liberty City neighborhood.

Or the destruction and death that filled TV screens after Hurricane Andrew struck last August, leaving a hot, slow cleanup job that drags on still.

On Florida's shiny surface, these and other incidents — from a racially tinged police brutality case here to highway snipers near Jacksonville to ever-present drug crime — may be only nasty scratches. But they have allowed the world a peek through this much polished looking-glass, and made Floridians look, too.

There is no rush to abandon a land many residents saw as the Great Escape — from snow, from communist Cuba, from the ordinariness of places lacking the pace and style of "Miami Vice." Florida's population still grows by a net 600 a day, and jumbo jets at Miami International still disgorge some of the 42 million tourists Florida expects this year.

Still, recent events have made many reconsider their state's image.

"Florida, South Florida especially, has always attempted to project itself as a paradise," said Arva Moore Parks, a local historian and author. "This is what they want the tourists to think."

Paradise has absorbed some powerful blows lately, she acknowledges. But they remind her of past trials Floridians weathered, among them deadly yellow fever 90 years ago and race riots in the 1980s.

"There's a lot more substance here than what we say in our ads," she said.

On the Liberty City streets where Barbara Meller Jensen was killed April 2, many hope the tragedy may turn attention to their bleak reality.

Instead of intensifying the neighborhood stigma by improving highway signs pointing the way to the beach, as officials announced they would do after the Jensen slaying, residents ask why not increase police patrols to protect local people, the criminals' usual prey?

"What happened to my brothers and sisters that have been grabbed out of cars and beaten to death? Why didn't we react to the problem years ago when this started happening?" asks Lottie Mitchell testified.

The question reportedly was directed to J.D. Luckie, chief criminal investigator for the District Attorney's Office, after Purser admitted in December 1991 to acting as a lookout.

Ms. Purser said Luckie replied that the state would watch after Purser, who would get a lawyer when the time comes, testify against another man involved and serve a few years in prison.

Luckie said at an earlier date that a lawyer would damage the case against the co-defendant — the real culprit — because "the lawyers all talked among themselves," Ms. Purser testified.

And short of being arrested, an attorney couldn't be appointed, Luckie said, Ms. Purser testified.

As a result, Ms. Purser said she didn't get a lawyer because, "I was scared it would hurt Curtis and I didn't have money to get one."

But, Ms. Purser had contacted an attorney and when Luckie found out, he reportedly said, "By God, don't talk to any more lawyers," she testified.

In addition to the advice not to seek an attorney, Luckie allegedly made promises about the punishment that would be imposed on Purser, Ms. Purser told the jury.

When Purser's admitted part in the crime escalated to actually stabbing the woman, other deals about an impending punishment were made, she said.

"He (Luckie) told me Midland County is a hanging county and Midland is real mad and if Curtis did not cooperate, they would seek the death penalty . . . and get it," Ms. Purser testified.

If convicted of capital murder, Purser faces either death by lethal injection or life in prison.

The man Purser was expected to testify against, Gearld Benjamin Kelly, 22, plea bargained a life sentence two months ago.

During the trial, the defense has attempted to show that Kelly was the real culprit.

Nevertheless, Purser, in a taped confession, admits to punching and stabbing the woman. In addition, witnesses testified that Purser had knowledge of the crime and crime scene that only someone involved would know, and a hair found at the scene closely matched Purser's.

In other testimony Tuesday, a former inmate — who knew Purser for a couple of years — told jurors that Kelly said in jail that Purser did not participate in the crime.

In Kelly's plea agreement, the convicted man states that the murder was committed with Purser during an attempted robbery.

The trial, which began testimony April 5 in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court, is set continue this morning.

Ms. Purser's contentions have not faced cross-examination by the prosecution, which is expected to occur today.

Luckie made statements during earlier testimony that contradicted Ms. Purser's allegations.

"I made no deals with your client, absolutely none," he told lead defense attorney Matthew Blair.

SIEGE: Black humor abounds

strain of the continuing standoff between 96 heavily armed religious cult members and hundreds of law enforcement officers has its lighter moments.

And many of the best lines come from a seemingly unlikely source — poker-faced FBI agents delivering daily news updates.

For example, FBI Special Agent Bob Ricks told an eager assembly of reporters Tuesday about one of cult leader David Koresh's favorite topics — his Chevy hot rod.

The man who sometimes claims to be Jesus Christ is terribly fond of his chariot, Ricks said without cracking a grin.

"He talks about his black Camaro, which is very close to his heart. Apparently, it has a 427-cubic-inch engine. It has Holley carbs."

When a mild earthquake hit southeast of San Antonio last week, Ricks reported without a smile that Koresh thought his prophecy of doom finally had come true.

"They were very excited about the earthquake," he said. "When it was learned it was down in South Texas, they decided maybe it wasn't as significant as they thought."

One joke making the rounds in Waco is about the new flavor of ice cream, Mount Carmel. It's full of nuts and won't come out of the carton.

News reporters covering the siege since Feb. 28 aren't immune. After cult members hung a banner from a window of their compound saying, "God help us we want the press," one TV crew hung a banner in response: "God help us we are the press."

Meanwhile, Ricks — a salt-and-pepper haired agent who heads the FBI's Oklahoma City office — has become something of a celebrity with his dry wit and occasionally sarcastic manner.

Asked early in the siege about the prolonged religious conversations Koresh favored, Ricks replied: "We do have our Bible study hours."

On one of the cult leader's questions to the FBI: "He talks about what we think of all the crazy people inside and what they're doing."

On Koresh's view of his own situation: "Mr. Koresh in our conversations bemoaned his fate, that he was stuck in this stinking compound."

On the profanity in some Koresh talks: "I have to be very careful, because when I say he uses four-letter words — which he does from time to time — he gets very upset and doesn't talk to us for three to four days."

REPORT: Area officials discuss findings

(From 1A)

"Then you are opposed to drug testing for us," said Midland school-board trustee Jackie Hamilton.

"No, I'm not opposed to it," Faircloth said. "I'm just not sure it means that much in addressing the problem."

County Commissioner Louisa Valencia suggested that teachers also submit to drug testing.

With various law-enforcement officials from the Sheriff's Department, Police Department and MISD police attending the afternoon meeting, school-board vice president Gary Willis asked if there was cooperation between jurisdictions.

"Agencies and officers on the street cooperate," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, who noted that he and MISD police chief John Miller share radio channels. "John and I work together well," he said. "And we have to have cooperation (between law-enforcement departments) to survive. We're outnumbered."

Painter said most of the teenagers in Midland are well-behaved. "Most of the kids are good kids. It's the minority, about 10-15 percent who create all of the problems. This is the group we are focusing on," he said.

MISD trustee James Fuller said adults are sending a mixed message to teen-agers when alcohol is legally consumed at entertainment sites such as a local ballpark.

County commissioners noted that drinking is legal for adults.

"It's not necessarily the school system, the court system or the police who are not doing their jobs, it's the parents," said Midland County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer.

Mayor Faircloth said some parents provide support and discipline, but they can't prevent their teen-agers from being exposed to drugs, alcohol or peer pressure.

Ms. Hamilton said school-board trustess are grappling with the immediate issue of students bringing guns onto campus.

"We are trying to find ways to curtail this," she said. She asked if there are gangs in Midland. "I've heard there are gangs, and I've heard we don't have any gangs."

Police Deputy Chief John Urby said there are adult and youth gangs in Midland, primarily in south and east Midland. "Some of the youth gangs are more of a status thing with little violence," he said. "Some of the adult gangs are more related to crack sales. Crack sales are very competitive. And some of the adults use some of the juveniles to sell drugs."

"Like the schools need parents to help them with crime, we need the neighbors in some neighborhoods to help us," said City Council member Jose Cuevas, asking citizens to alert law enforcement to suspicious events.

TRUSTEES: School board to support Proposition 2

(From 1A)

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "Mandates in place, such as the 22-to-1 (student-/teacher classroom ratio) won't be changed."

If the amendment passes, it would affect mandates passed after Dec. 31, 1993.

While trustees easily agreed on Proposition 2, they were divided on how to support Propositions 1 and 3. As a board, they voted 4-3 to delete those amendments from a resolution supporting passage of the amendments.

Trustees James Fuller, George Staley, Michael Dobey and Jackie Hamilton voted in favor of deleting Propositions 1 and 3 from the resolution. Jack Hightower, Gary Willis and Adela Marmolejo opposed the motion.

Trustees not supporting the amendments, and former mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. who spoke before the board on the issue, feared Proposition 1 would take away local control and give it to the state.

Proposition 1 reads: "The constitutional amendment allowing limited redistribution of ad valorem taxes for schools, authorizing the Legislature or local districts to set a minimum tax rate in county education districts, and placing a cap on the ad valorem tax levied by county education districts."

Constitutional Amendment 1 allows the Legislature to create something similar to the County Education Districts.

If the amendment fails, some legislators have said it will force consolidation of school districts or a state income tax.

"We received approximately $9.6 million from Andrews ISD as a result of the CED," Baressi said. "Without the CED, we would have to raise the tax rate 30 cents to achieve that $9.6 million."

Baressi allowed that passing the amendment won't guarantee the same CED situation. "But I can tell you Andrews ISD would rather pay us that money and keep their identity as Andrews ISD than to consolidate."

"Passing the amendment in and of itself will not increase or decrease taxes, that depends on the enabling legislation," Baressi said.

However, with the state estimating that Texas public school enrollment will increase by 70,000 students next year, more dollars are going to be needed.

Passing Proposition 1 would mean that the state would be allowed to recapture up to 2.75 percent of the sum of the state and local school expenditures from the wealthiest school districts in the state and give it to the poorest districts. It also would mean — without voter approval — the cap on the county education district district will be $1.00 per $100 valuation. Voter approval would be needed to increase taxes more.

If the amendment fails it may force legislators back to the drawing board to come up with another solution before the June 1 deadline.

"Voters need to say no to make legislators go back and look at it," Angelo said. He also voiced concern that passing the amendment would mean "the Legislature would have total control over what we are spending."

"Whether the bill passes or fails, we are totally in the hands of legislators," Baressi said.

The superintendent said that without recapture, it's questionable there will be funds for public education. "We are making the critical assumption that the $410 million (from recapture) will come from somewhere else. They could close the schools for a few months and then push for a state income tax."

Trustees also voiced concern over Proposition 3, which would allow the Legislature to authorize the issuance of $750 million in state general obligation or revenue bonds to assist school districts in partially funding facilities.

Some trustees thought if bonds were not repaid, taxpayers would have to make up the difference. "It's not in the best interest of the state or taxpayers," Angelo said.

Trustees also heard reports on reducing wait time for buses in the cluster system, a survey on closed campuses and a summary of gun incidents reported on MISD campuses.

Shelling of refugees in Srebrenica shakes U.N. workers

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The Serb shelling of women and children in Srebrenica has infuriated international aid officials, who urge greater U.N. involvement to prevent further slaughter.

"I wonder how much longer we can stand by and try to help, like a sticking plaster on a wound which is just killing the patient," Dr. Simon Mardel of the World Health Organization said Tuesday.

As a result of the Bosnian Serbs' unrelenting advances in eastern Bosnia, Muslims there now face a choice: "They can now be transported like cattle or slaughtered like sheep," said Larry Hollingworth of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

The powerlessness of U.N. workers to prevent catastrophe in Srebrenica was brought home Monday when Bosnian Serbs unleashed a ferocious artillery barrage — minutes after their commander swore in Sarajevo to respect a cease-fire.

Shells exploded over a school packed with refugees and a football field where children played, raining down a shower of hot shrapnel that severed limbs amid hellish scenes of panic, according to U.N. workers. Fifty-six civilians, including 15 children, died immediately, and 90 people were wounded.

"It's typical of what will occur when large artillery shells fall on a densely packed town filled with displaced people from neighboring villages and towns," said Mardel. "Casualties are reaching and will continue to reach astronomical proportions."

Most of the wounds outstrip the medical facilities of Srebrenica, a town of 6,500 people that has been overwhelmed by tens of thousands of Muslim refugees fleeing the Bosnian Serb army.

Four local doctors and a small French team are coping with more than 600 wounded in a makeshift hospital without electricity, water or sufficient food and medicine.

Extremists claim responsibility for official's murder

ASSIUT, Egypt (AP) — Muslim militants claimed responsibility Tuesday for the machine-gun killing of a top security official and promised more attacks in their campaign to overturn Egypt's secular government.

Police stepped up their campaign to quash the extremists, sending 5,000 policemen to help search for the killers after Interior Minister Abdel-Halim Moussa vowed to "fight terrorism until the last drop of our blood."

They arrested six suspected Muslim extremists at a mosque in Abu Tig, the village where the assassination occurred 12 miles south of Assiut, and said they found explosives with them. They arrested 70 others elsewhere.

A member of al-Gamaa al-Islamiya, or the Islamic Group, telephoned a reporter and said Sunday's attack was to avenge the death of a militant leader shot by police this month.

The man, who spoke on condition of anonmyity for fear of reprisals, said the radical group will stage other attacks to revenge the deaths of other al-Gamaa leaders.

He claimed police are carrying out orders from Western countries to annihilate the group, which is believed responsible for most of the recent attacks on police and foreign tourists.

Maj. Gen. Mohamed el-Sheimy, Assiut's provincial security chief, and his bodyguard and driver were killed in the attack. Since then more than 1,000 police have searched continuously for suspects in Assiut, 200 miles south of Cairo, and surrounding villages.

Police believe four Muslim extremists carried out the attack.

The slain officer, el-Sheimy, was buried Monday in his northern Egypt hometown, Suez. Tens of thousands marched in his funeral procession, some chanting, "Terrorism is the enemy of Allah."

At the funeral, Moussa, the interior minister, vowed an all-out attack on religious extremists.

"Whatever the cost in lives, we will continue to fight terrorism until the last drop of our blood," he said.

Dispute's end best serves all

Midland County residents can breathe a long-awaited sigh of relief now that Sheriff Gary Painter and the county commissioners have agreed to settle a dispute over management and control of the sheriff's department.

In settling the feud, the sheriff agreed to abide by the county budget, which is set by commissioners, to furnish to the county treasurer the names of his employees who were assigned to position classification by the commissioners' court, and to properly staff the Midland County jails in accordance with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. The commissioners agreed to hire additional jail employees as needed and, essentially, to pay for the maintenance, operation, fuel and insurance of 40 vehicles purchased with county funds plus insurance for 10 other vehicles as long as Painter can raise money to pay other costs associated with those 10 vehicles.

The feud, which was evidenced most openly by difficult relations between Painter and County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, was unsettling for many residents. It was good on Monday to hear both Seltzer and Painter talking in terms of the best interests of all Midland County residents and of working together for the benefit of the county's taxpayers. Those interests had gone lacking during the two years of the dispute.

The sheriff's attorney during the dispute, Kenneth Mayfield of Dallas, aptly characterized the settlement agreement Monday when he noted, "It hopefully gets the confrontational approach over with and gets the sheriff and the commissioners' court back to working together for the citizens of Midland County."

Amen to that. It was the citizens of Midland County who were hurt most by the divisiveness of the conflict between the sheriff and commissioners. The conflict prevented a harmonious relationship from developing between the sheriff and commissioners, and such a relationship best serves the needs of all the citizens of this county.

Now that the dispute has been settled, Sheriff Painter, County Judge Seltzer and the commissioners should all stand together for the best interests of the people of Midland County.

Mideast neighbors fear peace process

Someone in the Middle East is afraid of peace.

With the ending of the Cold War and the superpower contest for influence in that troubled and strategic region, the prospects for ending the Palestinian Diaspora and normalizing relations between Israel and its Arab neighbors appear brighter than at any time in the last half century.

Israel had a government ready to negotiate, representatives of the Palestinians had the backing of the Palestine Liberation Organization to parley and key Arab governments were on board. But fanatical elements in the region, bent on wrecking the peace process, unleashed a wave of terrorism that appears to have doomed the negotiations.

Despite Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's pledge to pursue peace and fight the terrorism simultaneously without intermingling the two efforts, that appears to be impossible. The Israeli public has become so outraged by the terrorist attacks that it will force the government to take such repressive action that a climate will be created in which peace negotiations will be impossible for the foreseeable future.

That is what someone in the Middle East who masquerades as a friend of the Palestinians wants.

The sad irony of it all is that the Palestinians who have suffered so long and need peace, land and a sense of homeland will pay the heaviest price for this madness.

Hospital prices belie administration claims

Any hospital administration that is not already operating in compliance with the minimum being considered should be ashamed to admit it. Think about the last hospital bill you paid. Remember those exorbitant prices for things like aspirin or a box of tissues?

There's no doubt that hospitals make enough profit on their paying customers to take care of those who can't.

Today is Wednesday, April 14, the 104th day of 1993. There are 261 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 14, 1865 President Lincoln was shot and mortally wounded by John Wilkes Booth while attending the comedy "Our American Cousin" at Ford's Theater in Washington. The president died the following morning.

On this date:

In 1759, composer George Frederic Handel died in London.

In 1775, the first American society for the abolition of slavery was organized by Benjamin Franklin and Benjamin Rush.

OAS monitors treat Haiti as vacation

WASHINGTON — If you're a recent college graduate and you speak French, the Organization for American States might have a job for you in Haiti. It pays $6,000 per month, tax-free, and it offers plenty of opportunity to tan, relax, and enjoy the local nightlife.

Anderson

And it's all in the name of human rights.

The OAS monitors in Haiti could hardly have a more difficult task. Haiti is one of the most ravaged nations on earth. Since President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was deposed by military coup in September 1991, the situation has deteriorated into a tug of war between Aristide supporters and his military opponents. All too often, human rights have been caught in the crossfire.

Between September 1992 and February 1993, a team of 16 OAS observers were the only outside human rights monitors in the country. A subsequent accord between military-backed Prime Minister Marc Bazin and Dante Caputo, the special United Nations-OAS envoy working to end Haiti's 18 month-old crisis, allowed the United Nations and OAS to dispatch 40 more observers to the country in February, followed by teams of between 100 and 200.

Though the situation recently got better when more experienced monitors arrived, several sources told us that many of the monitors treated the experience more like spring break than a humanitarian mission.

"What we got was a bunch of people who had no knowledge of Haiti or its customs," said one source close to the Haitian military who has interviewed many of the observers. "Many are kids in their mid-20s who are very nice, but completely ill-informed." An American businessman who returned from the country in March told our associate Dean Boyd that observers could be seen "absolutely every night in the hotel bar or discotheque."

By all accounts, the first mission was a largely failure. In its rush to send observers to the country, the OAS apparently paid little mind to the qualifications of its applicants. Within days, the Haitian government expelled John Kosin, a supposedly impartial OAS observer, after it learned that he worked for a pro-Aristide lobbying group in Washington. Another member of the group then resigned and returned to Canada.

The team also came under fire from human-rights organizations in the United States. "Virtually no one among the 16 with whom I met had previous experience in human rights work or knew anything about human rights in Haiti," charged William O'Neill, deputy director of the New York-based Lawyer's Committee for Human Rights in a scathing October 1992 letter to U.N. officials.

"I spoke to several members of the delegation and they freely admitted that the team had been put together in a haphazard fashion and that they had no idea what their mandate was. . . . While some seemed interested and asked me very good questions, some questions, though well meaning, revealed a shocking lack of knowledge about the human-rights situation in Haiti," O'Neill continued.

When the OAS was given notice to quickly find nearly 100 more observers in February, it only took four days to select and ship 40 new civilian observers out to Haiti. Applicants were only required to speak French and accept a $6,000 check each month. Nonetheless, OAS spokesman Jorge Barbosa said that "we were very careful in the selection process this time."

In the ensuing weeks, sources in Haiti tell us many of the new observers in the capital were afraid to go to the countryside or even walk downtown from the confines of their Port-au-Prince hotels. Instead they tanned by the pool during the day and at night headed to the hotel bar, discotheque or nearby casino.

In February, at least one member of the new team was expelled from the country after Haitian police were called to the Montana hotel, where they reportedly found an OAS observer running naked through the corridors screaming his desire for a Creole woman.

Today, human rights experts in the United States say the OAS has begun to pay more attention to the qualifications of their applicants, and sources in Haiti acknowledge that more observers have finally filtered into the countryside. The problem, though, says one official at Amnesty International is an ongoing "tug of war between finding the most qualified people and just getting poeple out there as fast as possible."

Criticism often helps democratic leaders

WASHINGTON — On Wednesday in the Egyptian town of Ismailiya, which was the headquarters for the digging in 1863 of the Suez canal, Israel's Yitzhak Rabin and Egypt's Hosni Mubarak will open the way for the Clinton Round of the Mideast peace talks.

Safire

Confounding analysts who saw him following a "Syria first" strategy, Prime Minister Rabin will formally accede to a key Egyptian request, transmitted via the United States — that the Palestinian leader Faisal Husseini be permitted to represent the West Bank and Gaza Arabs.

This is a whopping pre-emptive concession by Israel. Faisal lives in East Jerusalem, and Arabs have long felt that permitting him to sit on the Palestinian delegation he effectively heads would put Israel's capital in negotiating play. Rabin is ignoring this danger because it means he can deal with Palestinians nominally loyal to the PLO while leaders of the fundamentalist Hamas faction, controlled by Iran, remain deported.

Faisal has been sufficiently harassed by Israel over the years to give him credibility with Palestinians in the disputed territories; at the same time, the local leader is not locked into PLO worldwide terrorism or the covenants of Yasser Arafat.

Rabin's strategy is (1) to offer Syria's dictator a land-for-peace deal on a demilitarized Golan Heights he cannot refuse; (2) simultaneously, to offer most of the West Bank and Gaza to a self-governing entity (and the recent closing-off of the disputed territories, ostensibly to protect Israelis or punish Palestinians, advances the ultimate separation); and (3) to build anti-missile defenses against what he sees as the ultimate threat from Iran.

Half of Israel thinks this poses an unacceptable risk to the nation's survival. Israelis have historical reason to hope that Syria's Hafez Assad will maintain his straddle, supporting Iran's Hezbollah in Lebanon and sheltering every terrorist headquarters in Damascus while flirting with peace with Israel. They also expect Hamas-PLO warfare to paralyze the cause of Palestinian statehood.

Rabin's moment in history will not last long; at the next election, his Labor Party is likely to be ousted by a revitalized Likud coalition headed by Bibi Netanyahu, or if war looms, by Arik Sharon. Labor can no longer expect the inexcusable U.S. intervention prompted by George Bush's personal and policy distaste for Yitzhak Shamir; next time, the electoral playing field will be level.

This prospect has posed a dilemma for some American supporters of Israel. Should longtime hard-liners, who used to assail any criticism of Israeli policies by U.S. doves as divisive, now abandon that principle and denounce the Labor government's willingness to welcome a PLO-ish state? Should longtime proponents of financial aid to Israel now join isolationists who view such aid as debilitating, causing welfare dependence?

Accordingly, as a hawk on Bosnia (come April 26, we should issue a credible threat to turn out the lights in Belgrade) and a hawk on Iraq (the attorney general "de jure" should find out who in her holdover Criminal Division just quashed a potential prosecution of Iraqgate's Dennis Kloske), I'm a hawk on the "peace process" — and think Rabin is giving away too much too soon on the basis of a flawed strategy.

But he's the elected prime minister, an old pro and patriot, and maybe he's right. That means I join with hawkish Israelis in expressing my doubts about trusting Assad or abandoning West Bank settlements, and identify with sensible Israeli economists who want to break the state-owned stranglehold on Israel's enterprise — but do not urge the U.S. government to renege on commitments made to Egypt and Israel at Camp David years ago.

Democratic leaders are tough cookies. Meeting in Vancouver or Ismailiya, they can take criticism. Sometimes it helps.

Two couches better than one if truth is told

I understand everything about the Mia Farrow-Woody Allen case except this: It was revealed in the newspapers that Mr. Allen was seeing two psychiatrists rather than the usual one.

Buchwald

The news did not indicate whether he was telling both doctors the same story — or whether he was telling different ones on each couch.

I can only speculate that Woody had an appointment with one in the morning and another with the second psychiatrist in the afternoon.

First doctor's session:

Woody: "I hated my mother, but I loved my father. I am also attracted to teen-age girls."

Doctor: "Does it bother you that teen-agers could someday become mothers?"

Woody: "That's why I'm here to see you."

After this dialogue Woody keeps his second appointment.

Woody: "I loved my mother and hated my father, and I like to take photographs of girls I go out with."

Second doctor: "There's nothing wrong with that. I have many 57-year-old male patients who fall in love with the daughters of their mistresses. We call it male menopause, which means that you are sick."

Woody: "I don't understand why Mia, whom I used to love, would get upset because I preferred to walk home from school with her adopted daughter instead of with her."

Second doctor: "That's a guilt burden you shouldn't have to carry around."

Woody: "I have to go now. I'm experimenting with shock treatments to see if I can straighten out my family values."

The next day Woody goes back to the first doctor.

Woody: "Do you think I'm carrying around a guilt burden because of Soon-Yi?"

First doctor: "Why do you ask?"

Woody: "Someone told me that yesterday."

First doctor: "Well, that person doesn't know what he is talking about."

Woody: "He comes highly recommended from Menninger's. What do you make of this?" Woody hands the doctor a Valentine card of turkey feathers and a knife piercing the heart.

First doctor: "I didn't know that Hallmark was into knives and turkey feathers."

Woody: "I think Mia sent it. The card depressed me."

First doctor: "Do you believe that you are in a depression?"

Woody: "I don't know. Maybe I'll learn that this afternoon when I see Dr. Gluck."

First doctor: "Are you seeing another doctor at the same time you are seeing me?!"

Woody: "Yes, but I can afford it."

First doctor: "Can you explain to me why you want two doctors instead of one?"

Woody: "Because I can find out which one is telling me the truth. If you have only one doctor, you don't know whether you're getting the straight story. My father lied to me when I was a child, so I never got the true picture. I think that's why I like to go to the movies with Soon-Yi."

First doctor: "Why don't we talk about that tomorrow?"

Woody: "OK, but don't tell Dr. Gluck I hated my mother and loved my father. He thinks it's the other way around."

The Nation in brief

■ Officials urge crackdown on drunken boaters

WASHINGTON — Federal safety officials urged states to set tougher rules for recreational boaters Tuesday, including more testing for alcohol, in a report three weeks after the deaths of two Cleveland Indians pitchers in a boating accident.

The National Transportation Safety Board began its study before the deaths March 22 of pitchers Tim Crews and Steve Olin. But the board noted that the incident, still under investigation, has aroused new interest in boating safety nationwide.

The board recommended mandatory life jacket laws, better training for boat operators and more testing for alcohol consumption to control drunkenness, a prime reason for fatal accidents. But the board stopped short of proposing state licensing of boat operators.

More people die each year in boating accidents than in any other form of transportation mishaps except highway crashes.

"Recreational boating is the only mode of transportation in which the operator is not required to demonstrate an understanding of the rules of the road and an ability to operate the vehicle," the board said in a report on boating safety.

"There are people out there operating boats, drinking and dying," said board Chairman Carl Vogt. "I think we all feel we've got a problem of alcohol and boating."

But he said there is strong resistance to licensing, a universally accepted form of state regulation for motorists. Vogt said licensing is "a very strong measure" that states can consider on their own.

■ Judge overturns law banning Crazy Horse

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — A federal judge overturned a law designed to stop the sale of Crazy Horse Malt Liquor, but the brew may face another challenge from an Indian tribe that finds the name offensive.

U.S. District Judge Carol Amon in New York City sided Monday with Brooklyn-based Hornell Brewing Co. in its lawsuit seeking the right to keep the name.

Hornell claimed its free speech rights were violated by a federal law passed last fall instructing the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to rescind approval for the name.

Congress passed the law after U.S. Surgeon General Antonia Novello and the Oglala Sioux Tribe objected to the name. Crazy Horse was a legendary warrior and spiritual leader among the Lakota Sioux in the 1800s.

Also on Monday, a tribal court judge on the Rosebud Sioux reservation in South Dakota named Seth H. Big Crow Sr. administrator of the Crazy Horse estate. A lawyer for Big Crow said he may challenge the brew again.

"People wouldn't stand for Martin Luther King police batons or Rodney King police batons," said Bob Gough, Big Crow's lawyer. "It's that level or worse."

"We selected the name to celebrate our interest in the American West, and the life and accomplishments of a great American warrior who played a prominent role in our history," Hornell Chairman Don Vultaggio said in a statement after the court decision. "We did not anticipate that the name would offend anyone."

■ Police search for man involved in shooting

MOUNTAIN PARK, Okla. — Police searched southwest Oklahoma and north Texas on Tuesday for a man wanted in questioning in a roadside shooting that killed George Earnest Jahn, 55, of Cement.

District Attorney John Wampler in Altus said Jahn was shot in the face at close range about 10:30 a.m. on State Highway 183 in Mountain Park. Wampler said Jahn stopped his vehicle and another man stopped his and they apparently had words before Jahn was shot.

Wampler characterized the shooting as being related to a domestic situation.

Wampler said police were searching for Ray Reed to question about the shooting. No charges have been filed.

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol said Reed, 46, is a former police chief in Cache.

■ Carnival ferris-wheel cable snaps, kills two

DALLAS — Two workers in a traveling carnival were killed Tuesday when a cable snapped while they erected a 100-foot Ferris wheel, officials said.

A third worker was taken to Baylor Medical Center with a foot injury after the accident, which occurred about 1 p.m., said Dallas Fire Department spokeswoman Carolyn Garcia.

"It appears that the cable broke as they were setting the Ferris wheel up," Ms. Garcia said. Autopsies were being conducted by the Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office.

The carnival was setting up for a two-week run that begins Thursday. Barbara McMahon, a spokeswoman for Tulsa, Okla.-based Murphy Brothers Exposition, said the show would go on, probably without the Giant Wheel.

"It's like a traveling family. It's very devastating," Ms. McMahon said.

The workers were near the top of the wheel when the cable snapped, Ms. McMahon said.

Ms. Garcia said firefighters arrived to find four workers trapped on the wheel. Two were rescued unhurt, while a 32-year-old man injured his foot.

A 25-year-old man, who authorities said was crushed, was dead by the time his body was retrieved from mid-wheel. A 33-year-old man fell to the ground and was killed, officials said.

Survey: Drug use rises among teens

DETROIT (AP) — More children say they are doing drugs before reaching high school age and LSD is on the rise among 12th-graders, according to a study released Tuesday that showed both gains and losses in the war on drugs.

Marijuana use jumped a full percentage point among eighth-graders in 1992, but the most popular drugs among pre-high schoolers were so-called inhalants, potent chemicals fumes sniffed like glue, the survey found.

"It's the most widely used class of drug among eighth-graders," University of Michigan researcher Lloyd Johnston said. "I think they really don't have an understanding of the dangers of inhalants yet."

Johnston blamed complacency for the rise, which was accompanied by a drop in disapproval of drug use among the same age group.

Drug use among high seniors dropped in every category but LSD, as did approval of drug use, the survey of eighth-, 10th-, and 12th-graders found.

Officials consider 'penalty tax' to limit health costs

By Robert Pear
N.Y. Times News Service

■ More national news/5B

WASHINGTON — Groping for ways to carry out a crucial feature of President Clinton's health-care plan, the White House is considering a "penalty tax" on doctors and hospitals to constrain medical spending.

The tax would be imposed on hospitals, doctors and other health-care providers in states that exceed spending targets to be established by the federal government, according to administration officials and White House documents. The officials say such targets are essential to control costs.

Revenue from the new tax would be used to subsidize health care for poor people and for employees of small businesses, the documents say.

There are few precedents for such a tax, which some experts find legally questionable, and Congress appears unlikely to impose it in the near future.

But the fact that it is under consideration shows how the administration has turned to novel ideas in its high-stakes effort to control health costs.

A somewhat similar idea — reducing federal grants to states that exceed their spending budgets — is both politically realistic and legally feasible.

The federal government does not set a limit, budget or target for national health spending, which soared to $838.5 billion last year from $326 billion in 1982.

In the 1992 presidential campaign, however, Clinton said he wanted to set annual limits on health spending, public and private, for the nation as a whole and for each state. He said the limits would be established by a new agency, the National Health Board, but he did not say how they would be enforced.

Under the health plan now being developed by the administration, states would bear a significant part of the cost if they exceeded the limits on health spending. Likewise, they would share in the savings if they kept health spending below the annual targets.

Confidential work papers from Hillary Rodham Clinton's Task Force on National Health Care Reform say the annual budget for health spending will be "strictly enforced at the state level," with "states held accountable for exceeding" their shares.

"For states that exceed budgets in successive years," the papers say, "the federal government could impose a penalty tax on providers, with revenues flowing to federal government to pay for subsidies."

Asked about the idea of a national health budget, Robert O. Boorstin, a spokesman for the task force, said Tuesday, "All sorts of enforcement measures are under consideration."

Speeding tickets

AUSTIN — Insurance companies would not be notified of speeding tickets issued to people driving up to 70 mph on Texas highways under a bill that has received preliminary approval by the House. Under the measure sponsored by Rep. Tom Craddick, drivers surpassing the state mandated 65 mph highway speed limit would still be issued speeding tickets. However, the Department of Public Safety would not be allowed to notify insurance companies of the tickets. Craddick, R-Midland, says the bill would not encourage speeding. He says it would merely allow motorists to drive as they already do without risking higher insurance rates. The measure received preliminary approval Tuesday on a voice vote. It faces another vote by the House.

Stolen vehicles

ODESSA — Odessa police and Department of Public Safety officers recovered approximately $100,000 in stolen vehicles Tuesday during a joint investigation.

According to a police report, officers found four trucks and a car at three locations: Andersons Body Shop, Polaris and W. University; Skeltons Auto, 4112 W. University; and McBete's, at Moss Road and West University.

The vehicles were taken to Neal Pool Rekers, 1117 S. Grant, where they were stored.

The investigation into the stolen vehicles is continuing.

Lawmaker unveils school bill

■ Midland and Ector schools would benefit under Manchaca lawmaker's funding plan.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Midland and Ector County school districts are among 932 statewide that would benefit from a plan announced Tuesday to equalize financing for the state's schools.

Rep. Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca, head of the House Public Education Committee, revealed details of the proposal at a news conference. Her committee will begin a public hearing on the bill today.

Under her plan, 40 property-wealthy school districts would have to send some money to the state for distribution to property-poor districts in Texas. Another 76 districts would have to share their wealth with other schools in the same county.

Texas has 1,043 regular school districts and 17 special or state-administered districts.

Linebarger's plan also would make tax rollback elections easier by eliminating the requirement of signed petitions to call an election, and by reducing the amount of tax increase that automatically would trigger an election from 8 cents to 6 cents.

School districts also would have to bring their administrative costs in line or face penalties, and the legislation would strengthen provisions for the state issuing school district "report cards."

The House plan would replace the current 188 County Education Districts and their tax collecting authority with 253 "Education Funding Districts."

The Legislature created the CED system along county lines in 1991, but included several multi-county districts from the state's 254 counties. Linebarger's bill includes only 253 EFDs because Loving County does not have a school district.

The legislation avoids multi-county CEDs by taking some money from 40 wealthy counties and sending it to the state for distribution.

"We're going to eliminate at least $3.2 million in wasteful administrative bureaucracy by doing away with CEDs and changing the way recaptured funds are distributed," Ms. Linebarger said.

The House bill, like a similar one in the Senate, is an effort to meet orders from the state Supreme Court to provide equal funding for all Texas school children. A district court judge has threatened to withhold school funding on June 1 if a plan is not in place by then.

Neither the House bill nor Senate bill contain specific numbers for districts because the Legislature has not approved the 1994-'95 budget that includes state

Council approves constructing sand volleyball complex

■ Sports outlet would keep teens occupied and curb their drinking, task force says.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The city council Tuesday acted upon a top concern of local teens by approving the construction of a sand volleyball complex at Ulmer Park.

The 10-member Wake-Up Teen Task Force — an outgrowth of a new community task force — viewed the additional sports outlet as essential toward helping keep local teenagers occupied and therefore curb teen-age drinking and drug abuse.

Midland High student Kit Tomlinson, a member of the teen task force, said the group determined that many teens turn to alcohol and drugs out of sheer boredom. He said the volleyball complex will give them another option.

"I feel strongly about this recreation center," he said. "I am sick and tired of watching my friends waste their lives. I've been doing it for four years."

'I am sick and tired of watching my friends waste their lives.'
— Kit Tomlinson of MHS

The prominence of underage alcohol abuse was outlined ealier this year in a special grand jury report. The grand jury examined several community problems during a nine-month period last year and had suggested that City Council member Claudia Egan head a task force to study ways to help alleviate the problems.

"The city has embraced the grand jury report and taken a big step toward making something happen," Ms. Egan said. "I believe this action will go a long way toward making a difference."

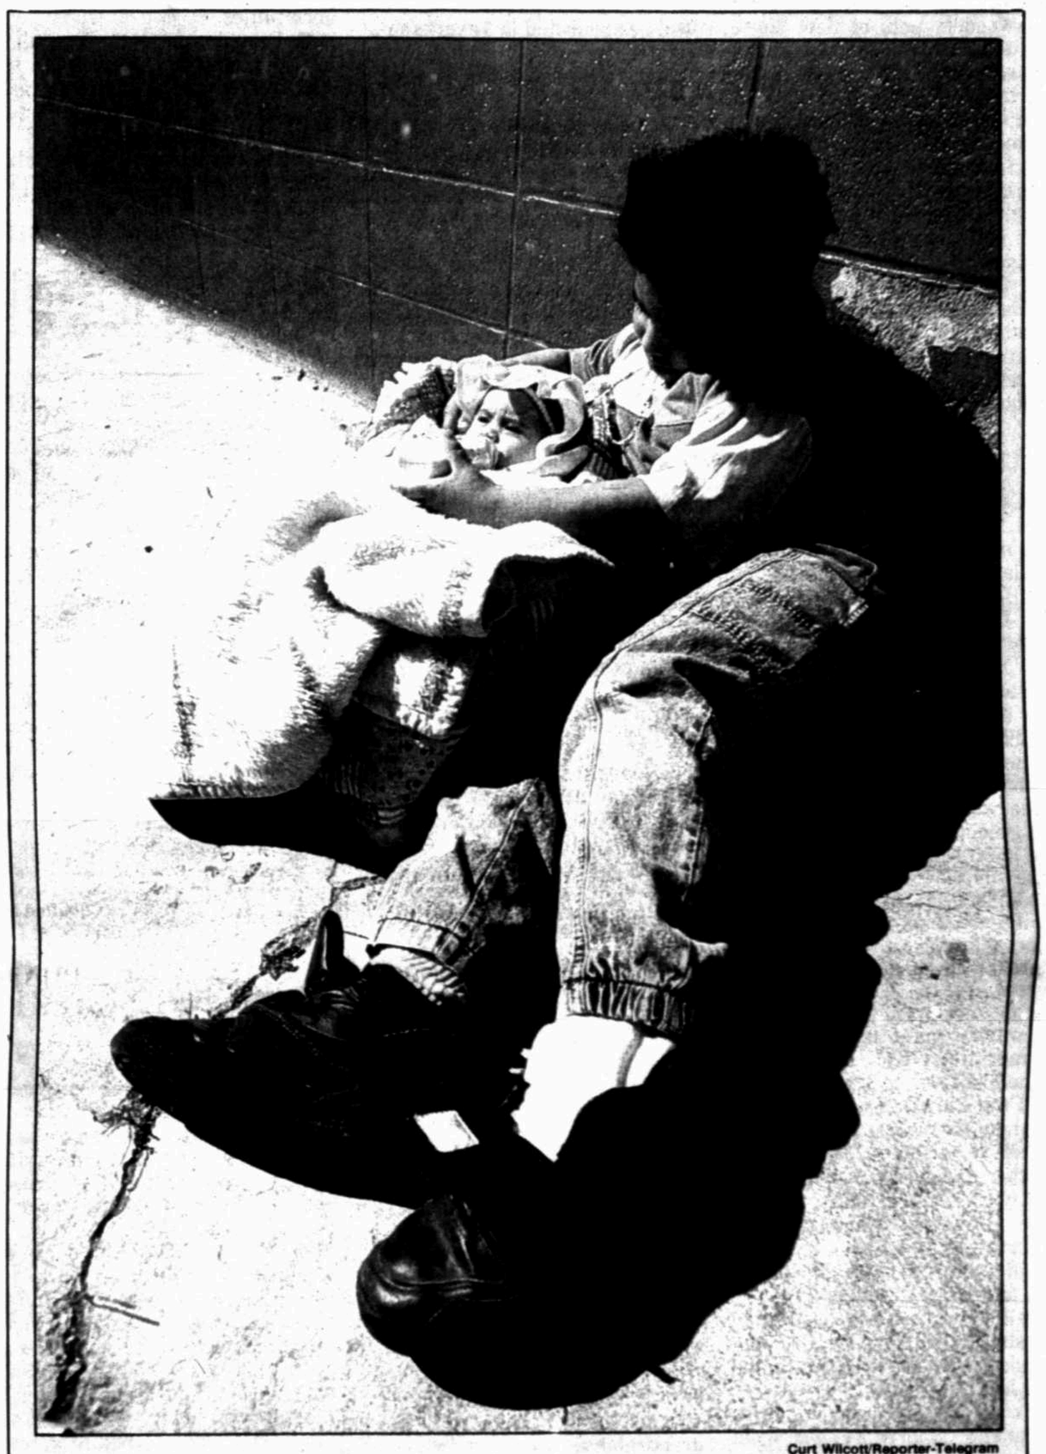

The sand volleyball courts will cost $16,000 and will be built at the site of four decaying and seldom-used tennis courts. The budget will provide for nets, poles, lights and sand and the complex should be completed this summer. Officials did not know how many courts would be built.

George Logan, director of Community Services, said the courts will provide a safe recreational alternative for the youth of Midland and said the complex also should help promote sand volleyball in Midland.

"Sand volleyball or beach volleyball is a very popular and fast-growing sport across the United States. This renovation attempt would provide an avenue of recreation to meet the needs of the youth and volleyball players in Midland," Logan said.

Ms. Egan said members of the task force plan to spread the sand and build the containing walls for the courts.

"This complex will allow them to set up leagues and teams, which should make it a lot more fun for them," she said.

Neighborhood residents raise funds to renovate Fasken Park

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

After nearly 30 years of neglect, residents who live near central Midland's Fasken Park are taking the improvement of the park into their own hands.

The Fasken Park Neighborhood Committee, comprised of seven women, decided to undertake the mission of replacing aging playground equipment after the city removed much of it last summer.

The group, chaired by Julie Stevens, solicited the help of other residents living in the close-knit neighborhood and produced a petition with 266 signatures.

The petition was in turn submitted to the City Council, whose members asked the committee to raise money for the project.

At Tuesday's council meeting, Mayor J.D. Faircloth commended the group for their success in raising $5,000 to go toward the new equipment.

George Logan, director of Community Services, said the city could use more private fund-raising drives.

"The city appreciates the partnership with private groups. This committee exemplifies what can be done when we all work together," Logan said.

The group is hoping the money goes toward modular playground equipment and to build a sidewalk — for walking and biking — surrounding the perimeter of the community park.

"We would also like to see some land-

Hutchison reveals her energy plan

U.S. Senate hopeful Kay Bailey Hutchison made a stop in Midland to unveil her energy plan and receive the endorsement of former Texas Rep. Troy Fraser of Big Spring.

Ms. Hutchison conducted a press conference Tuesday at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum to outline her plan and announce Fraser's endorsement.

"Kay is clearly the most qualified for the job of U.S. senator," Fraser said. "She is sensitive to economic development and energy issues, which are very important to this area."

Ms. Hutchison said she picked the museum to make public her energy plan because of its significance to the Permian Basin.

Nobel Prize-winning physicists, other scientists endorse SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven Nobel Prize-winning physicists and other leading scientists descended on the nation's capital Tuesday to make the case that the super collider is too important to kill.

At a news conference and later in a meeting with Vice President Al Gore, the laureates reiterated their theme that the giant atom smasher's construction cost — estimated at $10 billion — is a small price to pay for the knowledge and technological spinoffs the collider will generate.

"Basically, the importance of the super collider, when you all boil it down to a single phrase, is to continue the process of answering the fundamental question of science: Why is the world the way it is?" said Steven Weinberg, a 1979 Nobel laureate, author and University of Texas physicist.

Tuesday's events were a preemptive strike by collider enthusiasts in advance of the fight expected in June, when the appropriations bill containing super collider funding reaches the House floor.

Opponents say they will introduce amendments to strip federal funding from the project. Some oppose the collider on grounds it's too costly at a time of economic uncertainty. Others attack the science, saying the collider's benefits and technological spinoffs are too few to justify the expense.

Last June, House members jolted backers by voting to terminate the huge particle accelerator under construction south of Dallas. Only intensive lobbying in the Senate saved it.

Supporters say they are working overtime to avoid a repeat of last year's vote. In addition to concerns that last year's House action will strengthen the hand of opponents, there is fear that the funding battle comes against a backdrop of increasing public and congressional concern over the deficit and growing federal spending.

"To many, the SSC seems like an expensive luxury in times of fiscal crisis, terribly abstract Basin."

She said the goal of her plan was to encourage domestic exploration for oil and make America more independent from foreign oil.

"There's no reason for the greatest nation on earth to be held hostage to oil that is not domestically produced," she said.

The two main proposals in Ms. Hutchison's plan are an import fee and establishing environmental regulations that are reasonable.

The fee on imported oil would establish a floor price for domestic oil at about the current dollar price per barrel ($20), with appropriate feedstock waivers, she said.

Other policy proposals include:

■ Encourage the use of natural gas as an alternative fuel source, including the gradual conversion of the federal vehicle fleet where possible, subject to U.S. national defense needs. Special attention should be paid to expanding the use of natural gas as a boiler fuel for utilities.

■ Provide protections against added taxes on marginal or so-called stripper wells. Twenty percent of all oil production in Texas is from stripper wells.

■ Reform the Alternative Minimum Tax to encourage oil and gas exploration and investment.

■ Oppose all federal attempts to nationalize the oil and gas regulatory system that would override the jurisdiction of the Texas Railroad Commission over Texas' energy resources.

■ Support, with proper environmental safeguards, oil recovery in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and other selected federal lands.

■ Support the exploration and development of the Outer Continental Shelf in efforts to recover the 30 billion barrels of oil and 60 trillion cubic feet of natural gas not now available for drilling.

■ Support continued private and university research and experimentation or alternative fuel sources and secondary and tertiary recovery.

■ Support continued private sector initiatives, not federal mandates beyond current requirements, for improved fuel efficiency in automobiles, homes and commercial activities.

■ Standardize the construction of nuclear power plants and improve the regulatory climate for nuclear power in America to create jobs and to produce low-cost energy to consumers in a safe, clean energy environment.

■ Support total deregulation of pricing for pipeline construction.

■ Restore tax code preferences dealing with the energy industry that Congress eliminated in 1969.

Fire in Davis Mountains threatens cattle grassland

FORT DAVIS (AP) — A fire raging at the base of the Davis Mountains has created problems for ranchers as it destroys grass they need to feed their cattle, a Texas Forest Service spokesman said Tuesday.

The blaze, which has now charred some 23,000 acres of range land, has not threatened dwellings or caused serious injuries.

But it has taken a heavy toll on the range grass ranchers rely on to feed their stock, said forest service spokesman Sam Logan.

The grass will come back in a few weeks, he said.

"For the cows that don't have anything to eat (now), the ranchers have to buy feed and hay and that's probably where the biggest loss is at this point," said Logan, who could not estimate how many ranchers were having difficulties.

The blaze was started on April 2 by a lightning strike and has been pushing toward Mount Livermore, one of Texas' highest peaks. It has prompted County Judge Bob Dillard to declare Jeff Davis County a disaster area and request federal and state aid.

Officials estimate they have gotten fire lines around about 80 percent of the fire, but expect rugged terrain to make the last 20 percent of it difficult to fight.

Logan said if the fire spreads past Mount Livermore it could become a threat to some 200 resort homes about six miles away.

"We don't expect that and we'd be surprised if that happened," Logan said. "But at the same time you have to identify these possibilities and plan for them."

About 100 firefighters, including crews from seven volunteer fire departments and 24 forest service personnel, have been working on containing the blaze.

'For the cows that don't have anything to eat (now), the ranchers have to buy feed and hay and that's probably where the biggest loss is at this point.

research with unpredictable utility in times of national stress," said Leon Lederman, a 1988 Nobel laureate, author and physicist at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

But Lederman cautioned that cancellation of the collider would be devastating to America's high-energy physics community and would deter young people from going into the field.

Scientists hope to learn more about the fundamentals of matter by colliding beams of subatomic particles at near-light speeds in the collider's 54-mile underground tunnel.

"The super collider is not Texas pork," Weinberg said. "Without it the process of science toward an understanding of the deepest level of nature just comes to an end here in the late 20th century."

'Without it the process of . . . understanding of the deepest level of nature just comes to an end here in the late 20th century.'

— Steven Weinberg, UT

Weinberg said he and his colleagues would tell Gore about their "worry — and in fact terror — about the prospects in Congress."

But, he added, "We feel in an awkward position because undoubtedly Washington is filled with delegations trying to explain why their particular project should not be cut."

Rep. Martin Frost, whose district includes much of the collider, said he is "satisfied that we will win this year." But the Dallas Democrat added: "This is a tough fight this year. No one should pretend that it's not."

As part of their campaign to deflect criticism that the collider is too costly, the supporters gave figures showing that cancellation of the project wouldn't translate into huge savings. Almost $2 billion has been spent to date, mostly in federal funds. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that killing the collider could save as much as $3 billion over five years.

The Clinton administration is requesting $640 million for fiscal 1994, which would mark a 19 percent increase over this year's allocation. That figure is far below the $887 million the Energy Department had considered necessary to keep the project on track, but the administration wants to stretch out completion by three years to 2002.

Asked if the collider is siphoning money from other research, Brookhaven National Laboratory Director Nicholas Samios said: "We're all in it together."

"If we don't do the SSC a critical branch of science will not be done," he said.

Other Nobel winners endorsing the project were James Cronin of the University of Chicago, Val Fitch of Princeton University, Jerome Friedman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Norman Ramsey of Harvard University.

funding for schools.

However, Ms. Linebarger said her plan would put to rest criticism by opponents that any proposal would require huge property tax increases.

She said only 13 school districts would have to increase property taxes to meet the plan's minimum rate of 86 cents per $100 valuation.

Lawmakers earlier approved a constitutional amendment to allow the Legislature to devise a plan for sharing property taxes. The amendment will go before voters May 1.

Supporters of the so-called "Robin Hood" concept to equalize school financing contend the only alternatives are a state income tax to provide money for all schools, or a massive consolidation of rich school districts with poor ones.

"This proposal assumes that Proposition 1 passes," Ms. Linebarger said. "If it fails, then some version of one or more of the consolidation bills pending in my committee is our only avenue."

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, chairman of the House Republican Caucus, is part of a coalition of opponents to the "Robin Hood" method of sharing taxes equally. The group has scheduled a news conference and rally today at the state Capitol to launch a three-week campaign to defeat the constitutional amendment.

Karen Thompson said the project flourished due to the support of the neighbors.

Another committee member, Susan Atchison, said much of the money was donated by people who do not have children.

Prosecutor calls Railey scheming, cold-blooded liar

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO — A prosecutor branded ex-minister Walker Railey a scheming, cold-blooded liar Tuesday and urged a jury to convict him for allegedly trying to kill his wife.

Railey's lawyers argued that the defendant's only crime was engaging in an adulterous love affair and concealing it from his wife.

"We are not here to render judgment on sin," a defense lawyer said.

State District Judge Pat McDowell interrupted closing statements at midday, delaying the jury phase of Railey's attempted murder trial until today.

He said a member of the panel was ill.

Railey, 45, is accused of a near-fatal choking attack on his wife April 21, 1987, two days after preaching the Easter sermon at the First United Methodist Church in Dallas.

A jury could send him to prison for up to 20 years.

Both sides closed Tuesday morning, about 24 hours after Railey took the stand and explained for the first time under oath why he lied about his activities the night of the assault.

"I was lying to my wife and creating an alibi to go see Lucy Papillon," he said.

He told the jury he was "infatuated" with Ms. Papillon, a psychologist with whom Railey carried on a secret romance before and after the attack on his wife.

Leading off final statements, prosecutor Howard Wilson referred to Ms. Papillon as "Lucy babe" and Railey's "little mistress" and declared:

"Her judgment will come from someone who has a lot more authority than me."

Turning to Railey, seated silent and solemn only feet away, Wilson said: "He is the one for whom the guilt falls. He is the one who should be punished."

Wilson insisted Railey's attempt to arrange an alibi six years ago was not a bungled scheme to hide his love affair but to cover a murder attempt.

And he said a note Railey wrote before a suicide attempt 10 days later was "a confession, pure and simple ... He tried to commit suicide because even he could not stand to see what he'd done."

And in somewhat of a novel twist, Wilson theorized Railey argued with his wife that night, perhaps over Ms. Papillon. "He loses it, and chokes Peggy Railey. He'd rather be with Lucy anyway."

Arguing first for the defense, Roy Barrera Sr. labeled the state's theory as "fiction" and its entire case a "snow job."

Attacking the state's argument that all the circumstantial "snowflakes" add up to a snowstorm of evidence against Railey, Barrera said:

"I think ... you've had a snow job from the biggest flake producer that I have had occasion to hear in the courtroom ... Where in God's name has anybody produced any evidence telling you Railey did it?"

A panel of seven women and five men must determine Railey's motive for a series of phone calls that April night in which he gave erroneous times and locations on a home answering machine.

Mobile phone records provide indisputable evidence of deception.

The state says it was a plot to cover attempted murder. Railey says it was simply an ill-fated effort to hide a midnight rendezvous with Ms. Papillon — one that never occurred.

Railey testified he spent that April night researching books at Southern Methodist University and had started home before deciding to swing by and see Ms. Papillon.

He said he left a message for his wife on the answering machine in an effort to "buy an hour" with Ms. Papillon.

Witnesses in drug ring trial shot to death

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Federal officials say they're alarmed by the shooting deaths last week of witnesses who had testified against hitmen in a Mexican drug gang.

Both Norberto Hernandez Paz, 25, and Armando Barrera, 28, had declined offers to join the federal witness protection program, law enforcement sources told The Brownsville Herald.

Hernandez was found dead Friday evening by the Rio Grande. Barrera's body was discovered Thursday morning in a residential area southeast of Brownsville.

Both men had testified in the murder trials of two hitmen in the Juan Garcia Abrego drug-trafficking ring.

"Their deaths deeply concern us," said FBI agent Wayne Smith. "We have no reason to believe any other witnesses are being sought. However, we have taken steps to inform other witnesses of what has happened."

Garcia Abrego, 47, whose operations are based across the border from Brownsville in Matamoros, Mexico, has been indicted in the United States on 131 counts of drug trafficking and money laundering. He also is wanted in Mexico.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Patterson, who successfully prosecuted hitmen Miguel Botello, 35, and Arcadio Perez, 32, said the two witnesses may have been killed for reasons unrelated to their testimony.

"They were both people who hung around the underworld, so there are an infinite number of reasons they could have met their deaths," said Patterson, who added that they should have accepted protection.

Another federal witness who testified in the trials said the latest deaths prove the power of the Abrego ring.

"The witnesses used by the government of this country ... against the Juan Garcia Abrego organization now know the danger," said Oscar Lopez Olivarez, a former lieutenant for Abrego.

Police said Hernandez, a car dealership employee, took two men for a test drive Friday and never returned.

Last year he testified against Botello and Perez, who were eventually convicted of killing Gerardo Luis Quintanilla on behalf of the drug ring.

Barrera, who testified that he was once a member of the Abrego operation, gave an extensive statement to Mexican consular officials and the FBI shortly after Quintanilla's 1991 death.

In his statement, Barrera accused state police officials in Matamoros of working for Abrego, according to a copy of the statement obtained by The Herald.

Investigations have been launched into the deaths of Barrera and Hernandez, but reported no progress Tuesday.

Hospital to test drug on breast cancer patients

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors at the Unviersity of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center are studying the effects of the anti-cancer agent Taxotere in breast cancer patients.

M.D. Anderson is one of several U.S. sites conducting clinical trials of Taxotere, which is injected into the patient. A total of 40 patients are expected to be enrolled at the M.D. Anderson site.

Preliminary studies show Taxotere may produce anti-tumor activity in breast cancer patients. Taxotere is a taxoid, a class of anti-cancer agents that have been found to inhibit cancer cell division by acting on the cell's internal skeleton.

Clinical studies now under way will evaluate the effectiveness and safety of the drug in selected patients with breast cancer resistant to other treatments currently used, including chemotherapy.

Lawyer hopes to talk to Koresh after Passover ends

WACO (AP) — A lawyer who earlier said religious cult leader David Koresh promised to surrender after Passover week hoped to talk to him again as the holiday ended Tuesday. But the FBI said no immediate end to the 45-day standoff was in sight.

In nearly five hours of phone talks between federal negotiators and Koresh early Tuesday, "No new ground was broken," said FBI spokesman Bob Ricks.

But Houston attorney Dick DeGuerin, who represents Koresh, said he hoped to talk by phone with the 33-year-old religious zealot about ending the stalemate.

"I'm still very hopeful it's going to end, and peacefully," said DeGuerin, who claims he received assurances from his client that the standoff would end following the sect's observance of Passover.

DeGuerin spoke via telephone with Koresh's top deputy Steven Schneider for about an hour and a half Tuesday afternoon. DeGuerin planned to call Koresh after sundown Tuesday, which officially ends the Branch Davidians weeklong celebration of Passover.

"The primary reason for Mr. DeGuerin being put in contact with Mr. Koresh today is not to resolve additional legal issues," Ricks said. "It's to resolve when these people will be coming out and how that will be taking place."

However, Ricks said, talks between the lawyer and cult leaders might not occur because of Passover.

"We were told that those inside the compound may not wish to speak with their counsel today because it is the last day of Passover," the FBI agent said.

Koresh has holed up in his city-block sized compound with 95 followers, including 17 children, since a Feb. 28 raid by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms erupted into a bloody gunfight.

Four agents were killed and 16 injured. Koresh claims six cultists died.

DeGuerin said a number of biblical passages in two letters released by Koresh over the weekend show he may have received a long-awaited message from God and that he may be ready to tell his story in court.

"One passage I think is very telling, says, 'When thy hand is lifted the fire of thy enemies will devour them,' " DeGuerin said.

"It's as if he is saying, when he speaks in court the truth will become known that what the ATF did on Feb. 28 will end up destroying the ATF. The power is in what he is going to say in court."

DeGuerin said the two letters released by his client over the weekend may be the message from God he is waiting for before surrendering.

The letters, written by Koresh as if he were God, had been described by FBI analysts as antagonistic and vengeful.

"I think the letters are a very good sign," DeGuerin said. "I read them differently, understandably, than the FBI analysts. The letters are a sign they have resolved where they are in their community and are ready to come out and tell the world what really happened on Feb. 28."

Ricks, who described the letter as threatening in tone, said Koresh is clearly hiding behind the children inside.

"We believe that he has great fear the government would come in and be much more aggressive in its tactics if those children weren't there," Ricks said.

Meanwhile, authorities also were watching for suspicious activity at a Waco area dam that Koresh reportedly claimed would be destroyed.

Ricks said FBI officials initially were worried that Koresh followers who remain outside the compound might try to blow up the dam. But he said Schneider has told authorities Koresh can predict natural disasters and was predicting that's what would hit the dam — not a criminal act.

Also, authorities are considering proposals to end the standoff that range "from storming the place to waiting them out no matter how many years it takes," an FBI agent says.

FBI spokesman John Collingwood in Washington said any tactical plans calling for force against Koresh and his followers are being weighed against potential loss of lives.

"Our intent has been and will be to do whatever we can do to give maximum protection to life on both sides," said Collingwood. "We certainly don't want to do anything that will jeopardize law enforcement officers."

Jury selection begins in trial of truck driver

■ Trucker for Coca-Cola is blamed for September 1989 accident that killed 21 children.

Associated Press

EDINBURG — The judge and attorneys began screening jurors Tuesday for the criminal trial of the trucker blamed for an accident that sent a school bus plunging into a roadside pit, killing 21 school children.

Ruben Perez, 28, who is charged with 21 counts of involuntary manslaughter, sat impassively as 390th District Judge Fidencio M. Guerra Jr. asked the pool of 200 jury candidates whether they had seen newspapers or TV accounts of the September 1989 accident.

Virtually all raised their hands.

"This is a high-publicity case," said Guerra, who expected jury selection to last through today.

Perez is accused of running a stop sign and colliding with the Mission Independent School District bus, which careened into a flooded caliche pit in Alton. Nineteen students drowned and two others died later at hospitals. Sixty students were injured.

Earlier Tuesday, Hidalgo County District Attorney Rene Guerra complained that defense attorney Joseph Connors added about 90 names to his list of potential defense witnesses at the close of business hours Monday.

"I think that's an abuse of subpoena powers," Guerra, not related to the judge, said at a pretrial hearing.

Connors retorted: "Mr. Guerra should have dismissed this case a long time ago. He's the one who is causing this to go to trial."

Judge Guerra allowed the inclusion of the additional defense witnesses, including attorneys tied to civil lawsuits involving the crash.

The defense intends to show that the truck's brakes failed.

"Before this case is over, we will see what caused these children's deaths," Connors told reporters between sessions. "Mr. Guerra (the prosecutor) will be surprised."

The owner of the truck, Valley Coca-Cola Bottling Co. and other Coca-Cola entities have handed out more than $90 million in settlements to the families of those injured and killed.

Judge Guerra cautioned potential jurors to be honest in answering questions about their biases.

"There is nothing wrong with having a bias or prejudice or problem," the judge said. "What is wrong is to get somebody with that problem on the jury."

Witnesses testify in carjacking case

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — A woman who was dragged to her death when two men commandeered her car with her child inside had screamed "My baby, my baby!" as the vehicle sped off, a witness testified Tuesday.

Earlier Tuesday, the woman's husband tearfully testified how he took a videotape that prosecutors say shows the two men who killed her moments later.

Kevin Brown, a truck driver from Ellicott City, said he was driving by when when he saw the victim, Pam Basu, struggling with two men at an intersection.

Brown said he got out of the truck and saw one of the two kicking at Mrs. Basu from the passenger side of the car. The other man was on the driver's side trying to pull her out.

Brown said he ran back to his truck to get a chain to use as a weapon. As he returned, the men drove off with Mrs. Basu dangling from the driver's side. "She was screaming. She said, 'My baby, my baby!'" Brown said.

"The car took off. They slammed the door. She got caught up. She was trying to keep up with the car. You could see her head hit the ground. She stopped moving," he said.

Mrs. Basu, 34, was killed when she was dragged 1½ miles after her arm became entangled in a seatbelt as she was forced from the car. The carjackers later dropped her 22-month-old daughter, Sarina, by the side of the road. She was unharmed.

Mrs. Basu's death prompted Congress and many states to pass laws on carjacking.

Just before the carjacking, her husband, Biswanath Basu, 37, inadvertently videotaped two men as his wife prepared to drive Sarina to her first day of preschool Sept. 8.

Basu, an Indian immigrant, was at home filming his wife putting the child in the car and driving off. The woman was attacked when she stopped at an intersection less than a block away.

"Out of the corner of my eye, I saw two men walking down the (sidewalk). Then I saw them in the viewfinder . . . and I taped them as I was taping Sarina," Basu said.

Judge acquits Marines of alleged gay-bashing

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Three Marines were acquitted Tuesday of charges that they assaulted three people at a bar that catered to homosexuals.

Judge Jacqueline Morris-Goodson, who was hearing the case without a jury, said the state failed to meet its burden of proof.

The three defendants hugged their attorneys when the judge returned the verdict, and their supporters cheered in the courtroom.

Lance Cpls. Walter Watkins III, 26, Patrick Cardone, 23, and Colin Hunt, 20 were charged with three counts each of simple assault. They faced a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail or a $50 fine.

The most severely beaten man, Crae Pridgen, had testified that his attackers yelled "Clinton must pay" during the Jan. 29-30 ruckus, apparently referring to the president's move to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military.

The Marines testified Monday that they hit people, but only in self-defense after patrons of the bar threatened them. They also said they never referred to Clinton.

Pridgen and two others were beaten outside Mickey Ratz, a downtown bar catering to homosexuals.

In closing arguments, defense attorneys said Pridgen was intent on fighting and met his match during the brawl.

"He was hell-bent on hurting somebody," defense lawyer John Burney said. "He picks fights, he gets drunk. . . . He met somebody who wasn't scared of him for once in his lifetime."

Defense lawyer Ed Bailey questioned the alleged ferocity of the attack in light of testimony that Pridgen's injuries didn't seem too serious. Pridgen sustained a broken tooth and bruises.

Assistant District Attorney James Faison III countered, "It wasn't self-defense. What it was just an excuse."

Faison said there was no evidence that anyone assaulted the Marines, but there was evidence that Hunt and Cardone threw punches. No one really saw what Watkins might have done.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take better care of your health and you will be able to accomplish great things in every area of your life. Focus on new career and financial opportunities in midsummer. Timely investments next fall could yield a nice payoff. September is the best period to travel. Someone you meet while on a trip could persuade you to change your lifestyle. Creature comforts beckon in December. An older person will play a major role in the choices you make in early 1994.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Rod Steiger and Bradford Dillman, actress Julie Christie, power hitter David Justice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Show your affection for someone by lending a helping hand. Opportunities for working more closely with your business associates abound. Be open to suggestions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The work atmosphere should be more pleasant today. Views can be aired and agreements reached. Creative ventures and romantic pursuits can prove lucky.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your gift for gab is a big plus now. Use it to persuade other people to do their fair share. When you turn on the charm, resistance melts away. Make a doctor's appointment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Chats with your kin can unearth new financial resources. A misunderstanding will be quickly cleared up by your honesty. Teamwork speeds progress and boosts profits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Higher-ups will eventually favor your ideas if you are both persistent and consistent. Financial problems prove easier to solve following a phone call. Romance takes on a new glow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not be shy about asking for help in righting a wrong. Telling the whole story will produce the best results. Creditors may be helpful if you inform them how things really stand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Confidential information received from a friend should be carefully evaluated before it is used. A happy romance brings you true contentment. A new career or business venture will thrive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel is fine but make sure you have a specific plan. Set up any appointments in advance. Your cash flow could be reduced for a while. Provide a good worker with job leads.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Keep a low profile today and try not to argue with people who irritate you. Just pull in your horns. Your kindness to your loved ones will be repaid tenfold.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel, creative projects and people at a distance all contribute to higher profits now. You thrive during this expansive period. Plan to lunch at a restaurant off the beaten track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If asked for advice, share your own experiences. A few constructive suggestions will do more than a long-winded lecture. A loved one's actions will surprise and delight you.

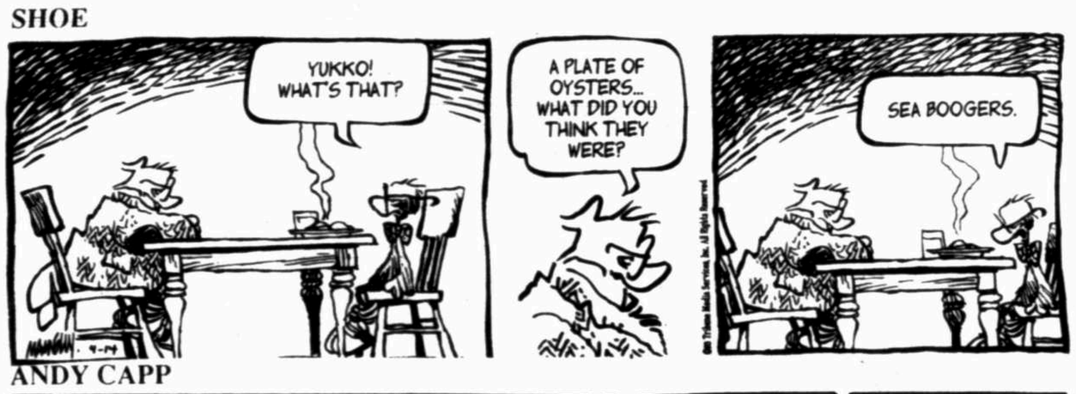

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An income boost is likely if you stick to your true talents. Refuse to take sides when quarrels arise between your co-workers. Open new channels of communication with older family members.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are friendly, idealistic and keen on solving problems. Their originality is an important part of their makeup and makes them immediate leaders on the playground, at school and eventually in the work place. The bidding:

Opening lead: Nine of ♡

It's not as easy as you might think for the defenders to take the tricks that are their due. First, they do not know how many fast tricks are available. Secondly, the fact that each defender sees only half the defensive resources makes it difficult for them to ascertain where those tricks are available. Thirdly, a skilled declarer might be able to force the defenders to select a line before much of the hand is revealed. Here's an example of a fine effort by South to hoodwink the opponents.

According to the Law of Total Tricks, North-South should be able to score 10 tricks. That would indeed be the case were the spade finesse to succeed. However, the bidding made it painfully obvious that it would not, and declarer was looking at three fast losers in the minor suits.

At the table, Jeff Meckstroth made it as difficult as possible for the opponents. He won the opening trump lead in hand and immediately led the nine of spades. West rose to the occasion by going up with the king and East followed with the three. Reading this as suit preference, West shifted to a low club and the defenders had no trouble getting their tricks.

West's touching faith in partner is admirable, but was it necessary? We, too, would have defeated the contract without running the risk that partner was not signalling with his spade play. After winning the king of spades, the simple defense is to lead one of our minor-suit aces. If we chose the ace of clubs and partner encouraged with a high club, we would then cash the ace of diamonds before reverting to clubs. If, instead, the ace of diamonds was led and partner discouraged with the trey, we would then shift to a club with the same result.

Charles says he's 'not entirely dotty' for farming organically

LONDON — Prince Charles said Tuesday he was "not entirely dotty" when he converted farms he owns to organic production.

Charles

Charles told scientists and farmers meeting near Edinburgh, Scotland, that organic farming was not "airy fairy" but a traditional form of agriculture.

The heir to the British throne practices organic farming at Highgrove, his country home 100 miles west of London, and on farms throughout his vast Duchy of Cornwall estate.

Charles said many people are concerned about the level of waste in society, and are attracted to organic farming because it leaves little waste.

"I could not help thinking that I was not entirely dotty to follow my own particular convictions and convert the Duchy of Cornwall home farm to an organic system," he said.

"As far as I am concerned, the results have been really quite encouraging," he said.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — A woman who accused former Alabama basketball coach Wimp Sanderson of punching her in the face agreed Tuesday to take $275,000 to drop her lawsuit.

The settlement resolves sex discrimination allegations by Sanderson's former assistant, Nancy Watts.

Watts' claim that Sanderson struck her in the face led to his forced resignation last year. More recently, depositions filed in the case disclosed a sometimes stormy 15-year affair between the two while she worked as his assistant.

As part of the settlement, she will be transferred to another comparable job outside the university's athletic department, U.S. District Judge Sam Pointer Jr. said.

Sanderson, the university and athletic director Hootie Ingram were named as defendants in the lawsuit. The money would paid by the university and Sanderson's insurance, Pointer said.

Sanderson said he was prepared to go to trial but the university and his insurance company decided on their own to settle.

"I did not have anything to do with her getting $275,000," he said.

Watts left the courtroom without comment.

BARROW, Alaska — "The Punisher" is coming to Barrow. So is "The Hater."

They aren't the outcasts from the Lower 48, rather members of the World Organization of Wrestling, who plan to compete at the city's high school on April 24-25, the Barrow Tae Kwon Do Club said.

The event would be the debut of professional wrestling in the nation's northernmost city, population 3,500.

The event is headlined by Ken Patera, who calls himself "the World's Strongest Man."

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind. — When Erma Bombeck went public last fall about her breast cancer, Fern Wharton Brill wrote offering her support.

That letter and Mrs. Brill's story of her own cancer fight went nationwide Monday in Bombeck's syndicated column.

In her letter, Mrs. Brill, 90, explained that because of her age, nobody seemed to be concerned about the lump she found in her breast.

Her doctor said he hated to put her through a biopsy at her age but would if she insisted.

She did, and the lump was cancerous. Last September she had a bilateral modified radical mastectomy.

Bombeck said Mrs. Brill's story showed that older people don't have to put up with being pushed aside.

"I think I admire this woman's pure guts and courage," Bombeck said. "She didn't roll over and do what she was told."

Mrs. Brill said Bombeck had written to tell her that she was going to publish her letter.

"It took me 90 years to become famous, but it was a hard way to do it," Mrs. Brill said Tuesday.

NEW YORK — Patti LuPone may be Norma Desmond in London and New York, but Los Angeles will see Glenn Close as the famous film star in Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical version of "Sunset Boulevard."

The production starring Close will open at the Shubert Theater in Los Angeles on Dec. 2, Peter Brown, a spokesman for Lloyd Webber, said Tuesday.

"It's wonderful for us to have found an actress of Glenn's caliber to sing the role of Norma," Lloyd Webber said in a statement. "I haven't been this excited since I realized Michael Crawford could sing so well."

Close, who starred in the movie "Fatal Attraction," sung on Broadway in the original production of "Barnum."

LuPone will star in the London production, which opens June 29, and will appear in the New York version planned for sometime next year.

Young people make their mark on Clinton's administration

By Nita Lelyveld
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — He's the first Baby Boomer president and the youngest since John F. Kennedy. But even Bill Clinton looks old compared to some members of his staff born since the Kennedy years.

Legions of bright, ambitious 20-somethings followed the 46-year-old president to town, taking jobs in the administration, including some usually reserved for grayer heads. They work long hours, seven days a week, and don't blink an eye. They are awed by their surroundings and wholeheartedly believe in what they're doing.

"We've really bought into the Clinton mission: the call to national service, the 'Roll up our sleeves and let's get things done' approach," says 27-year-old Ken Snyder, a special assistant in the Education Department's Office of Legislation and Congressional Affairs.

Snyder worked on the Clinton campaign in Winnebago County, Wis., while at the University of Wisconsin. He has two master's degrees in education fields and left a doctoral program to help shape Clinton's education policies.

He's one of many who put their studies on hold for some real-world experience. The pay isn't particularly high — most salaries are in the $20,000-range. But that's not what's important. They approach government with campaign-trail zeal.

"We don't have a long history in Washington to become cynical about how difficult it can be to change things here. We just don't buy that," says Ethan Zindler, 23, who brought the Clinton campaign into the MTV age by booking the candidate into youth-oriented media appearances. He's now deputy director of communications for the White House Office of National Service.

A willingness to judge workers by their product rather than their age emerged during the Clinton campaign, says 27-year-old Atul Gawande, a key member of the administration's health care task force.

"The striking thing about the campaign was that if you worked hard, were smart and did the right things, if you had good judgment and produced the kind of work that was needed, you were valued," he said. "It skipped all of the kind of time-card punching that people feel like you've got to do, and it allowed you to move very quickly into valuable roles."

Gawande is a Stanford University graduate and Rhodes scholar who left Harvard Medical School in his second year for the campaign. He went to Little Rock, Ark., in July as a campaign health and welfare specialist because he had experience working for then-Sen. Al Gore, and helping develop an innovative managed-competition health care plan for U.S. Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn.

Death toll hits 7 in prison riot

LUCASVILLE, Ohio (AP) — The inmate death toll rose to seven Tuesday at a maximum-security prison where eight guards were held hostage, and rebellious convicts yelled to other prisoners to join them in the siege. Guards fired tear gas to restore order.

The prisoners barricaded inside the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility also rigged a loudspeaker to complain about negotiations. Negotiators said they too weren't encouraged by the progress of the talks.

The prisoners have been denied food, heat, electricity and water since the riot Sunday.

A guard on patrol at the prison found the seventh body in a cell of the K cellblock. The unit is linked by a corridor to the L cellblock, where 450 prisoners have been barricaded since a scuffle among a few prisoners escalated into a riot.

Investigators didn't know if the inmate, Dennis Weaver, 43, was killed or committed suicide, said Tessa Unwin, a spokeswoman for the Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Correction. She said he was not alone in the cell but would not say how many other prisoners were inside at the time.

Wimp settlement

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — A settlement was reached today in former Alabama basketball coach Wimp Sanderson's trial on sex harassment charges, the woman he was accused of punching in the face receiving $275,000.

U.S. District Judge Sam Pointer Jr. said the money going to Nancy Watts would be paid by the university and Sanderson's homeowner's insurance company.

Pointer said the settlement also provides that Watts must be transferred to another comparable job outside the university's Athletic Department, with no loss in pay or benefits.

The settlement averted trial.

Melvin arrested

EL PASO (AP) — A University of Texas-El Paso basketball player, who just completed his eligibility, has been arrested in the assault of a female student, the university police chief said Tuesday.

Johnny Melvin, 24, was arrested following an altercation outside the university dormitory and booked on a Class A misdemeanor assault charge, said UTEP police Chief William E. Rodriguez.

Rodriguez said he did not know what prompted the dispute.

Bennett masters Missions

■ Midland pitcher Erik Bennett allows San Antonio just five hits as the Angels win, 3-1.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland pitcher Erik Bennett lost his shutout in the ninth inning at Angels Stadium Tuesday night, but not the 3-1 victory over San Antonio. At least, for Bennett, that was good enough for his first start of the year.

Bennett carried a three-hit shutout into the ninth inning where he gave up two singles to open the frame to the Missions' leadoff hitters Roger Cedeno and Vernon Spearman. San Antonio then loaded the bases when Midland third baseman Mark Brakebill booted a Chris Abbe grounder and the shutout hopes ended when Melendez scored Cedeno with a sacrifice fly to left.

Bennett was then replaced by Jose Musset, who got the last two outs in order to pick up the Angels' first save of the year.

"I was a little disappointed that I didn't get the shutout and the complete game, but I'll take the win," Bennett said. "I thought about the shutout going into the ninth, but I got behind the hitters and that was something I hadn't done the rest of the game. Still, I'm pretty pleased with this one."

And well he should be. Bennett allowed the Missions two hits in the first inning and only one more, a single by Hector Ortiz in the fifth, until the ninth.

In fact, this was a record setting performance for Bennett, who came to the Angels in the fourth round of the 1989 draft. At one stretch, Bennett retired 12 Missions in a row, a personal pro best for him.

"Basically, I had all my pitches working for me, the fastball, slider, curve and straight change," Bennett said. "I usually pick one pitch that is working for me to use in key situations and that was the slider tonight, but the fastball was also good."

Bennett was 1-3 in seven games for the Angels last season, but he also pitched at Quad City and Palm Springs, compiling an overall 8-8 record for 1992 with a 3.34 ERA in 21 starts. He likes pitching against San Antonio. He had a 1-1 record against the Missions last year and an impressive 1.65 ERA in 16⅓ innings of work.

Rough times continue for MHS

■ The Midland High Bulldogs commit 11 errors en route to a 14-2 loss to Odessa Permian Tuesday.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

This is the kind of season the Midland High baseball Bulldogs have endured so far.

First, head baseball coach Rick Wood was sidelined with a kidney stone. Then last week, upwards of $10,000 in baseball equipment was stolen from the MHS storage shed at Zachery Field. Finally, third baseman Justin Duffield broke his foot when he fouled a ball off it in batting practice Monday.

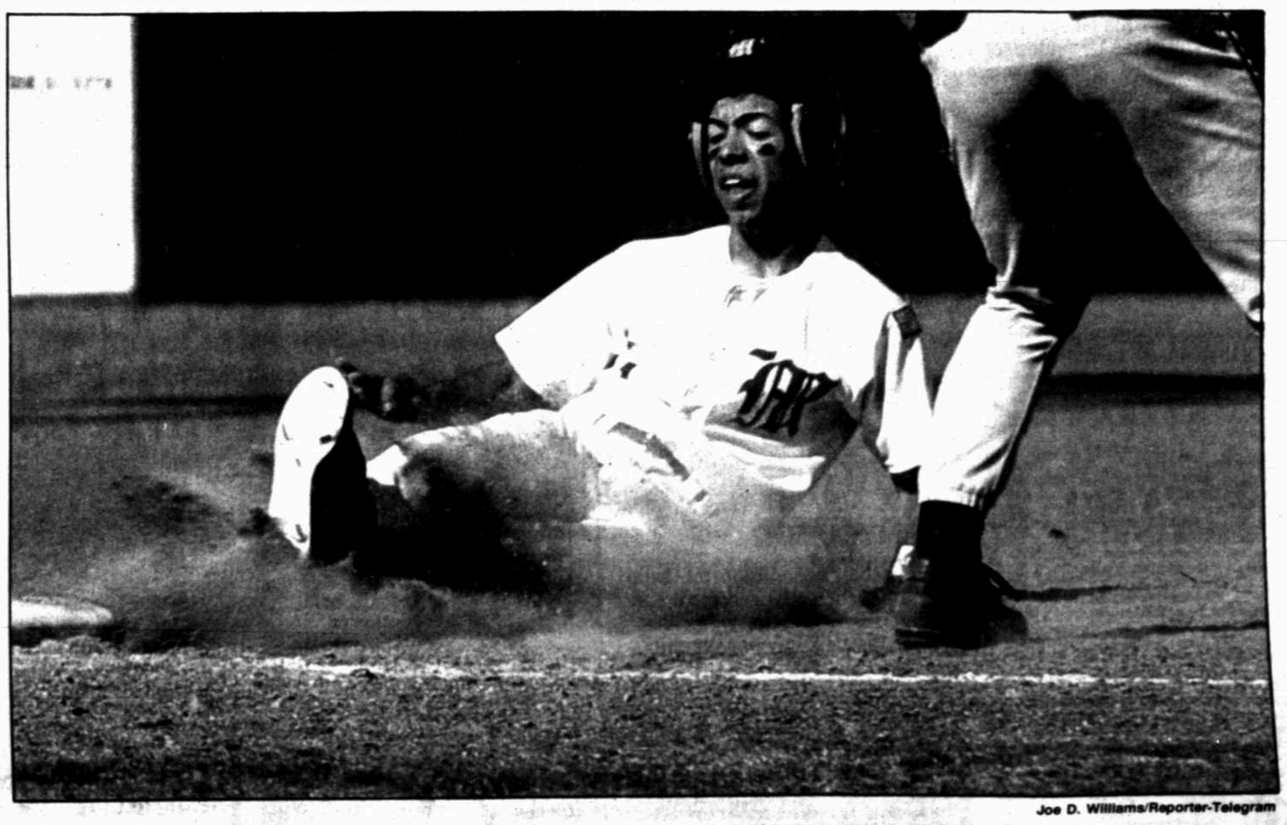

That occurrence forced a reshuffling in the Bulldog infield for Tuesday's 14-2 loss to Odessa Permian at Angels Stadium, a game in which MHS committed 11 errors. And though a case of double-digit E's can't wholly be attributed to men playing out of position, it was a starting point.

Of course, the Panthers' 11 hits and the pitching of Donnie Bivins had plenty to do with Permian's victory, as well. Bivins (6-1) went a complete game while allowing just one earned run, and he was also 3-for-4 from the lead-off position in the Permian batting order.

Bivins, who also started but was no-decisioned in a 5-4 loss to MHS in the first district game between the teams, said the difference was his work load.

"This time I had a week's rest. Last time I had to pitch a Saturday and Tuesday game with no rest at all," Bivins said.

The loss leaves MHS (7-11 overall, 3-5 in District 4-5A) two games out of third place and a playoff spot with four games to play in the regular season. Permian (9-10, 5-4) remains ½-game behind third place San Angelo, which downed first place Abilene Cooper 5-3 Tuesday. That loss was Cooper's first in district play.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High's Ricky Flores pulls in safely at third base on a sacrifice bunt by Mike Melzer in the fifth inning. Flores would eventually score after Permian pitcher Donnie Bivins was charged with a throwing error to third.

Tuesday's other 4-5A action saw Midland Lee down Odessa High 13-0, while Abilene High defeated Sweetwater 9-8 in non-district play.

And though MHS was playing to stay in the thick of the playoff picture Tuesday, Bulldog head coach Rick Wood said a win just wasn't meant to be.

"We were put in a bind when Justin Duffield broke his foot and Mike Melzer had to move to third base. He had three errors, but he had never played there before and they were all tough hops," Wood said.

"Also, I thought Permian played well. Bivins threw the ball well and they did a good job at the plate. I say that because I thought Joe Urquidez (MHS' starting pitcher) threw better today than he has all year and they still got 11 hits. We just didn't get the job done offensively or defensively today. It was the whole package," Wood added.

"Midland had a little bit of trouble, but our kids hit the ball well. They put the ball into play and played well defensivley," said Permian head coach Bob Highley.

Catcher Seane Parker also had a multi-hit game for the Panthers, going 2-for-2, while eight of the nine Permian starters earned at least one hit.

Kennedy a big hit in Arlington

By Arnie Stapleton
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON — Texas Rangers skipper Kevin Kennedy, who never made it to the big leagues as a player, is a big hit in his first week as a major league manager.

"I didn't come here to learn how to manage. I came here to win," declared Kennedy, whose team opened the season 5-1 despite having nine players on the disabled list. "I know I sound confident, and I am. And I want that to rub off on our players."

The 38-year-old Kennedy was hired as the Rangers' manager on Oct. 26, 1992. His name didn't register with the casual fan because he never played or managed in the major leagues.

But Kennedy was known as a top managerial prospect in baseball's inner circle, and Texas drew high praise for its choice. Kennedy has never had a losing season or finished below second in nine seasons as a minor league manager and major league coach.

Kennedy caught eight seasons in the Baltimore, St. Louis and Los Angeles systems before his release by the Dodgers organization in 1983.

AP Laserphoto

Kevin Kennedy

After that, he spent eight years coaching in the Dodgers' minor league system, compiling a 533-373 record. He posted the Pacific Coast League's best overall record in his three seasons with Albuquerque, and was named Baseball America's Minor League Manager of the Year in 1990, when the Dukes won the league title.

After learning he was third in line for the Dodgers' managerial job should Tommy Lasorda leave, Kennedy took a position last year as director of minor league field operations with the Montreal Expos.

"I didn't want to wait until I was 60 to manage in the big leagues," Kennedy said. "Just like a minor league player who's done all he can do, I had to move on."

Shortly thereafter, Expos manager Tom Runnells was fired and replaced by Felipe Alou. One of his first moves was to promote Kennedy to his staff as dugout coach.

The Expos went 70-55 the rest of the way, finishing in second place with an 87-75 mark, and Alou said Kennedy "was a big part of our success."

On his way up, Kennedy also man-

Swoopes top female hoopster

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Sheryl Swoopes knew she would be coming back to Atlanta, where she led Texas Tech to the NCAA women's basketball championship less than two weeks ago, but she didn't think it would be so soon.

Swoopes received the Naismith Women's Player of the Year award at the Atlanta Tip-Off Club's annual dinner Monday night. Indiana's Calbert Cheaney was honored as Men's Player of the Year.

North Carolina's Dean Smith, who won his second NCAA title last week, was honored as the top men's coach, and Iowa coach Vivian Stringer, whose team lost in the NCAA semifinals, was named the top women's coach. Smith could not be present because of a team banquet.

"First of all, I'm not even off of cloud nine from the championship," said Swoopes, who flew in with her mother, Louise. "I was looking forward to coming back, but I was thinking it'd be in 1996 (for the Olympics)."

Swoopes scored a record 47 points in the women's championship game. She also set records for points (177), field goals (56) and free throws (57) during the NCAA tournament.

Cheaney led Indiana to a 31-4 record. The Hoosiers were ranked No. 1 much of the season.

Rangers shell Fernando in return

■ Texas collects seven runs in Fernando Valenzuela's first 2⅓ innings pitched in the majors since 1991.

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Fernando Valenzuela's first major league start since 1991 was spoiled Tuesday night when the Texas Rangers tagged him for seven runs in 2 1-3 innings in an 8-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Valenzuela (0-1) gave up six earned runs on five hits, two walks and a hit batter. He also made a wild pickoff throw and threw a wild pitch.

It was Valenzuela's first major league start since June 12, 1991, when he lasted just 1 1-3 innings for the California Angels. He was released less than a month later.

Valenzuela, who pitched a scoreless inning Friday night at Seattle in his other appearance this season, retired the Rangers in order in the first inning. But Texas, which leads the AL with a 6-1 record, began to break loose in the second inning.

Gary Redus homered during a five-run third inning that finished Valenzuela. Texas is 4-0 against the Orioles this season, and has hit 10 of its major league leading 14 home runs off Baltimore.

Kenny Rogers (1-0) went 6 1-3 innings and gave up seven hits, including a two-run homer by Chris Hoiles. It was Rogers' first victory since May 24, 1991.

Juan Gonzalez and Julio Franco started Texas' spree with consecutive doubles in the second inning.

Correction

Tuesday's Reporter-Telegram incorrectly reported San Angelo's No. 2 team to have finished ninth in the final standings of the District 4-5A girls golf tour. The report should have read that it was the Midland High No. 2 team that finished ninth.

Kite's discs herniated

AUSTIN (AP) — Tom Kite's back problem has been diagnosed as herniated discs and the U.S. Open champion will be out of action for an undetermined length of time.

Kite, who was examined Monday at the Centinella Hospital in Los Angeles, on Tuesday said he will not "even think about coming back before I get a go-ahead" from his physicians.

Kite said he was told he had herniated discs in the L-4 and L-5 area and is scheduled to receive the first of a series of cortisone injections Wednesday to combat inflamation in the injured area.

ANGELS: Midland wins series

(From 1C)

Bennett had some great defensive backing from Midland centerfielder Orlando Palmeiro, who may make M-Angel fans forget Devon White. Palmeiro robbed Todd Hollandsworth of extra bases in the second inning with a twisting, turning, crash-into-the-Green-Monster, over the shoulder catch. In the seventh inning, Palmeiro made a diving catch of a sinking fly off the bat of Billy Lott while racing toward the infield. In all, Palmeiro handled seven chances.

"Palmeiro really saved me a couple of times out there in center," Bennett said. "You usually have to have some good defensive plays behind you to have a good game."

It's a good thing the Angels had good pitching and defense because the offense had a tough time against Mission starter Jose Parra, who pitched six-hit ball over seven innings. He gave up all three runs, but two were unearned.

Mark Brakebill drove in a run in the fourth with a ground out to raise his team leading RBI total to seven in five games. Chris Pritchett singled three times and Luis Raven had the only extra base hit, a double to start Midland's two-run fifth, but both runs scored that inning were unearned.

The Angels won the series by a 3-2 margin and will now host El Paso for the next five days before making the first road trip of the year.

Rockets continue torrid streak

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon had 29 points and 16 rebounds as the Houston Rockets won their sixth straight game, beating the slump-ridden Los Angeles Lakers 126-107 Tuesday night.

The Rockets have won 23 of 27 games and have a 20-4 record since the All-Star break.

Vlade Divac led the Lakers — losers for the 12th time in 14 games — with 18 points and 13 rebounds.

Matt Bullard's 3-point basket with 3.4 seconds left in the first half gave him a Houston club record 74 3-pointers. That broke Rick Barry's mark of 73.

The Rockets trailed through most of the first quarter, but used a 12-4 spurt at the end of the period to tie at 26. They outscored the Lakers 30-19 in the second period for a 60-45 halftime lead.

Houston built an 82-61 lead with 3:15 to go in the third quarter, but the Lakers outscored the Rockets 11-4 over the rest of the period for their only charge of the second half. Byron Scott had nine of his 14 points during the surge.

Starters for both teams sat out the rest of the game after Houston built a 108-81 lead with 4:40 left.

Houston's second quarter included a 12-2 run that rallied the Rockets from a 32-31 deficit to a 42-34 lead with 6:10 left in the period.

Celtics 96, Pacers 90

BOSTON — Robert Parish's go-ahead tip with 1:10 left, and strong team defense in the final minute gave Boston a victory over the Indiana Pacers after the Celtics blew a 19-point lead.

Getting 19 points from Reggie Lewis, the Celtics broke a five-game losing streak and a four-game home slide — their longest in 14 seasons. They moved one game in front of idle New Jersey for the fourth playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

The Pacers, led by Reggie Miller's 24 points, dropped into a tie with idle Detroit for the eighth and final Eastern berth.

The Pacers, who trailed 39-20 early in the second quarter, took their first lead at 74-73 on Miller's baseline jumper with 10:18 left. With the score 90-90, Parish tipped in Kevin McHale's miss.

Pooh Richardson's shot with 47 seconds remaining was blocked by McHale. But Boston's Dee Brown, who had all 12 of his points in the fourth quarter, missed a 3-pointer with 25 seconds to go.

Dale Davis rebounded for Indiana, but Xavier McDaniel stole the ball. Brown was fouled and made both shots with 17 seconds left. Miller then missed a 3-pointer, and Brown sank the last two points on free throws with eight seconds to go.

Magic 110, Bucks 91

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dennis Scott ended a shooting slump with nine 3-pointers and a career-high 41 points, leading the Orlando Magic over the Milwaukee Bucks.

A sellout crowd of 15,151 at Orlando Arena booed when coach Matt Guokas removed Scott with 2:35 remaining and the Magic forward needing one more 3-pointer to tie an NBA record set last week by Miami's Brian Shaw.

Scott was a bright spot in an otherwise poor shooting performance for Orlando, which pulled even with Indiana and Detroit for the eighth playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

The third-year pro made 16 of 31 shots and was 8 for 8 from the foul line after hitting just 36 percent of his attempts (19-52) in his previous five games. He tried 19 3-pointers — one shy of Michael Adams' record — and was four of eight in the fourth quarter before leaving the game.

Shaquille O'Neal was held to 15 points, but had 16 rebounds and seven blocked shots for the Magic, which broke the game open with a 17-0 run during a five-minute stretch late in the second quarter and early in the third to win for the fourth time in five games.

Knicks 93, Bullets 85

NEW YORK — Rolando Blackman made four consecutive baskets in the first 2:22 of the fourth quarter, lifting the New York Knicks to their 17th consecutive victory at home.

The outcome rebuilt the Knicks' lead in the race for homecourt advantage in the Eastern Conference playoffs to one game over idle Chicago. The loss was the fifth straight for the Bullets, playing without Pervis Ellison, Michael Adams, Charles Jones and Rex Chapman because of injuries.

John Starks led the Knicks, now 34-4 at Madison Square Garden, with 19 points, while Patrick Ewing had 14 points and 14 rebounds. Harvey Grant led Washington with 27 points.

Blackman, who scored 10 of his 14 points in the fourth quarter, helped the Knicks extend a 73-67 lead to 83-69 with his outburst early in the period.

The Bullets, who hit just 39 percent of their shots, got no closer than eight the rest of the way as New York, leading the NBA in defense, held a team under 90 points for the 20th time this season. The Knicks are 19-1 in those games.

Cavaliers 112, Hawks 109, 2 OT

ATLANTA — Brad Daugherty's 14-foot turnaround jumper snapped a tie with 1:31 left in the second overtime, and the Cleveland Cavaliers beat Atlanta to continue their two-year mastery of the Hawks.

The victory was Cleveland's 10th straight over Atlanta in the past two seasons and fifth in a row overall. The Hawks, scoreless in the final 2:36 of the game, lost their second straight home game after 10 straight victories at the Omni.

The Cavs, who haven't lost to the Hawks since April 9, 1991, overcame a five-point deficit in the final 54 seconds of regulation. Danny Ferry's basket with 0.6 seconds remaining tied the game at 99 and forced overtime.

KENNEDY: Not overwhelmed

(From 1C)

aged four seasons in winter ball, where he became conversational in Spanish. With the Rangers' large number of Latin players at both the major and minor league levels, that added to Kennedy's already impressive credentials.

Texas general manager Tom Grieve said Kennedy, at 6-foot-3 and 220 pounds, "commands a presence in the clubhouse. He's strict but he's fair and he's really able to communicate well with his players. He's a player's manager."

Kennedy, reared on NL style baseball, said he will make the steal and run-and-hit part of the Rangers' potent offense. They were second in the league in stolen bases this spring.

"I'm not going to take away anybody's power, but I'm going to augment it," Kennedy said.

He also solidified the Rangers' defense by moving Juan Gonzalez to left field and replacing him with David Hulse in center and by signing infielders Manny Lee, who is on the DL, and Billy Ripken. When Lee got hurt, Kennedy inserted 20-year-old rookie Benji Gil, a defensive specialist, at shortstop.

Kennedy said he hasn't been overwhelmed by the major leagues because he's been preparing for it since his first summer as a catching instructor at Lodi, Calif., in 1983.

"I get a better hotel suite than I did as a minor league coach," Kennedy said. "Once the game starts, baseball's baseball. It's just that now I've got the best players in the world. Baseball doesn't change."

Ominous pall hangs over Dodger-Cardinal game

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The fans at Dodger Stadium must have felt like it was 1992 all over again at Tuesday's home opener.

On the field, Los Angeles lost 9-7 to St. Louis as Lee Smith became the major league's all-time save leader. But there was the threat of civil unrest as the jury in the Rodney King civil rights trial continued deliberations.

Nearly a year ago, four games were postponed because of rioting in the downtown area following the acquittal of four Los Angeles police officers charged in the videotaped beating of King.

King attended the game as a guest of Dodgers outfielders Eric Davis and Darryl Strawberry.

"It's nice to be back home, but I think on the back burner everybody's thinking about the verdict," LA center fielder Brett Butler said less than an hour before the game started. "I know I am. I think it will be different than it was before."

■ NL Roundup

Smith got the last three outs for his 358th career save, surpassing Jeff Reardon of Cincinnati. It was Smith's third save this season.

Gerald Perry hit a two-out, three-run pinch homer in the seventh inning and Tom Pagnozzi added a solo shot with two outs in the ninth for St. Louis.

Astros 9, Expos 6

MONTREAL — Andujar Cedeno's two-run single and Ed Taubensee's two-run homer highlighted a seven-run eighth inning as the Houston Astros rallied to beat Montreal, spoiling the Expos' home opener before a crowd of 51,539 at Olympic Stadium.

The Expos blew a 5-2 lead after manager Felipe Alou chose to relieve Ken Hill at the start of the eighth. Hill allowed four hits and two runs in seven innings.

Steve Finley and Jeff Bagwell delivered RBI singles in the eighth to make it 5-4 before Mel Rojas (0-1) threw a wild pitch to tie it. Cedeno followed with a two-run single and Taubensee hit his first homer. Both hits came off Brian Barnes.

The rally made a winner of reliever Brian Williams, who allowed one run in three innings. Doug Jones finished for his second save as the Astros won their fourth straight game after starting the season 0-3 at home.

Darrin Fletcher hit his first homer of the season, a solo shot, to start the Montreal eighth.

The Astros went ahead in the first on Ken Caminiti's two-run double with two outs.

Giants 3, Marlins 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Kirt Manwaring's solo homer in the fifth inning snapped a tie as the San Francisco Giants beat the Florida Marlins without left fielder Barry Bonds.

It was the Giants' fourth straight victory, giving them five wins in their first eight games. The Marlins, playing the second game of their inaugural road trip, have lost six of their last seven.

Bonds missed the game with a strained right hamstring, suffered Monday while running to first base to beat out a throw on a grounder.

Phillies 4, Reds 1

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies won for the seventh time in eight games for one of the best starts in team history as Tommy Greene pitched seven strong innings.

It is the Phillies' best start since beginning the 1915 season 8-0. They were 10-2 to start the 1964 season.

Greene (1-0), who pitched 2 2-3 innings of shutout relief April 9, gave up just two hits, struck out eight and walked one as the Phillies won their fourth straight game. Mitch Williams got the last three outs for his fifth save.

Braves 3, Cubs 2

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine survived a shaky first inning for his second victory and David Justice hit a home run as the Atlanta Braves beat the Chicago Cubs.

The Braves, who entered the game with a .188 team batting average, had nine hits for their second-highest total this season. Atlanta has won six of its first nine games.

Glavine (2-0) gave up two runs and three hits in the first inning before settling down. He gave allowed six hits in eight innings and Mike Stanton finished for his fourth save.

Mets 8, Rockies 4

DENVER — Todd Hundley hit a bases-loaded triple that highlighted a six-run eighth inning, rallying the New York Mets past the self-destructing Rockies in Colorado's first night game.

Hundley, who tied a career-high with four RBIs, put an exclamation point on a disastrous inning for Rockies pitchers, who issued four walks and threw a wild pitch.

The Rockies hurt themselves in other ways, too. Alex Cole tripped over third base and was left stranded, two other runners were out trying to stretch hits and right fielder Dante Bichette misplayed a fly ball that turned into a double for pitcher Bret Saberhagen.

Until the eighth, Colorado pitchers appeared to have redeemed themselves for a miserable performance in their last game on Sunday, when they gave up 22 hits in a 19-9 loss to Montreal. Starter Andy Ashby, who went five innings, and Parrett had nursed a 4-2 lead into the eighth.

AL: Tigers hit 3 three-run homers, win, 20-4

(From 1C)

Tigers 20, Athletics 4

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers hit three three-run homers and set a team record for runs in a home opener.

Rob Deer, Mickey Tettleton and Travis Fryman hit the home runs. The previous club record for runs in a home opener was set in a 15-7 victory over Cleveland in 1922. It also tied the most runs ever allowed by Oakland, set on two other occasions.

Mike Moore (1-1), the former Oakland pitcher whom the Tigers obtained as a free agent, allowed four runs on five hits in 6 2-3 innings for the victory.

Storm Davis (0-2) gave up eight runs on seven hits in 2 1-3 innings for Oakland. Davis also walked five and had a throwing error that resulted in two runs.

The Tigers, who dropped two of three to the Athletics in Oakland to start the season last week, scored in each of the first four innings. They scored four in the first, three in the second, one in the third and eight in the fourth. Detroit, which had 18 hits and 12 walks, added four unearned runs in the eighth.

Fryman matched a career-high with five RBIs and Cecil Fielder equaled a career-high with four hits, all singles, before being lifted for a pinch runner in the fourth.

Red Sox 6, Indians 2

BOSTON — Scott Fletcher hit a two-run homer and Mike Greenwell had a two-run triple as the Boston Red Sox, whose weak offense dismayed Fenway Park fans last year, defeated the Cleveland Indians.

Fletcher homered over the left-field wall in the fourth inning off starter Jeff Mutis (0-1). Greenwell hit his triple in a three-run third inning and Mo Vaughn added an RBI single. Vaughn also singled in a run in the seventh.

Greenwell, sidelined most of last season following elbow surgery, leads the Red Sox with eight RBIs. Five of his seven hits have been for extra bases.

Winner Frank Viola (2-0) gave up one run and seven hits in seven innings. The Indians scored in the second on Felix Fermin's RBI single and Albert Belle's third homer in the eighth off Paul Quantrill. Ken Ryan finished.

The Red Sox batted .246 and hit only 84 homers in 1992, the only time they've had fewer than 100 home runs in a full season since World War II. They were the lowest-scoring team in the AL East last season with 599 runs.

The game was attended by 29,606 fans on a blustery day. The temperature was 48 degrees but a 15 mph wind made it feel much cooler. It was the smallest crowd for a home opener at Fenway Park since 1974 when 23,441 showed.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 5

TORONTO — Darnell Coles tripled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Seattle Mariners.

Reliever Danny Cox (1-0) was the winner despite giving up Omar Vizquel's first career grand slam and first home run since Aug. 19, 1991.

John Olerud singled with one out in the eighth off Tim Leary (0-1) and Darrin Jackson struck out before Coles tripled just beyond the diving reach of right fielder Jay Buhner.

Cox allowed one hit, Vizquel's first homer in 626 at-bats, in 2 1-3 innings. Duane Ward pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Ken Griffey Jr. led off the sixth with a single against Toronto starter Al Leiter. With two outs, Greg Litton singled, Mike Blowers walked and Dave Valle walked, forcing home a run. Vizquel met Cox with a grand slam on a 1-2 pitch, putting the Mariners ahead 5-3.

Toronto tied it in the seventh. Paul Molitor hit an RBI single and another run scored on Roberto Alomar's bases-loaded double play.

Olerud hit a two-out, two-run double in the first inning. Dick Schofield had an RBI double in the fourth for a 3-0 lead.

White Sox 4, Twins 0

CHICAGO — Alex Fernandez pitched a three-hitter, leading the Chicago White Sox to a victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Fernandez (2-0) defeated Pat Mahomes (0-2) for a second time this season. He also was the winner in a 9-4 decision over Mahomes last Thursday in the Metrodome.

Fernandez gave up three singles, struck out seven and walked three. It was his third career shutout, his previous one coming last Sept. 4 against Kansas City.

The White Sox led 1-0 when their defense cut down a potential run at the plate. Mike Pagliarulo singled, advanced to third on a pair of infield outs and J.T. Bruett walked.

Prices steady

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices finished unchanged on Tuesday with the market pulled between indications of higher prices from OPEC and an abundant near-term supply.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $20.46 per barrel at the New York Mercantile Exchange in slow trading.

But prices fell about 15 cents per barrel in the cash market Tuesday evening after the American Petroleum Institute reported a sharp increase in domestic crude oil inventories.

Gasoline stocks fell 916,000 barrels to 40.15 million and supplies of distillates, which include heating oil, increased 1.96 million barrels to 99.88 million.

Also, refineries operated at 86.5 percent of capacity, down from 88.7 the previous week, API said.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in May settling at 2.320 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 2.4 cents. More distant delivery months were higher.

Apple cuts prices

SAN FRANCISCO — In an aggressive bid to boost sales, Apple Computer has cut prices on some of its PowerBook Duo computers by 10 to 18 percent, effective immediately.

The PowerBook Duo has won rave reviews for its unique design that allows a notebook-sized PowerBook to slip into a desktop docking unit, giving users a small, powerful machine on the road coupled with big-screen convenience at home.

With last week's announcement, the low-end PowerBook Duo 210 will be reduced 18 percent to $1,839. The high-end PowerBook Duo 230 with a modem would be cut 10 percent to $2,899.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK — The dollar declined against most major foreign currencies in worldwide trading Tuesday, driven lower by a weak U.S. retail sales report, but it steadied against the surging Japanese yen.

In New York, the dollar finished the day at 113.40 yen, up from 112.80 yen late Monday.

In New York, sterling strengthened to $1.5580 from $1.5460 late Monday.

Stocks advance

NEW YORK — The stock market ended higher on Tuesday, lifted by several good corporate earnings reports, higher bond prices and gains on foreign equity markets.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 15.94 points, or 0.46 percent, to 3,444.03.

The Nasdaq composite index gained 0.72 to 673.84. The NYSE composite index rose 3.07 to 246.91, while the American Stock Exchange market value index rose 2.43 to 420.51.

Investors to bid on S&L assets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Small investors are going to get a bigger crack at buying real estate and other assets seized in the saving and loan scandal, the S&L cleanup agency announced Tuesday.

Responding to congressional critics, Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger C. Altman told a news conference that the Resolution Trust Corp. will rely less on grouping assets into large portfolios for sale to Wall Street firms and major investors.

The portfolios were central to the Bush administration's cleanup strategy. Bush officials argued such sales returned assets to private hands sooner and reduced the government's holding costs.

However, congressional offices were flooded with complaints from smaller businesses and investors who said they were being frozen out of bidding on RTC-owned assets.

Altman stepped in as temporary head of the agency after the forced resignation last month of RTC President Albert Casey. He now must persuade Congress to allot an additional $45 billion for the RTC, which has spent $87 billion protecting depositors since its creation in 1989.

As part of the campaign to obtain the funding, Altman has promised new contracting controls and a shift in the sales strategy. He said the new emphasis on individual sales to local investors would bring higher prices.

"In the past, too many small investors have been left out of the RTC bidding process, and too much of the taxpayers' dollars has been left on the table," he said.

Under the new policy, all properties will be offered for sale individually for at least 120 days before they are packaged for group sales. The limit on portfolios will be $50 million, down from $400 million.

The targeted buyers will be investors, either individuals or firms, with the capacity, among other qualifications, to purchase real estate at prices of up to $5 million or to make equity investments in joint ventures with the RTC of up to $9 million.

In the first offering, 150 parcels of land and commercial real estate in 26 states, ranging in value from $5,000 to $5 million, will be auctioned by sealed bid in May and June.

The RTC also will sell small investors a new type of security, known as the 'S' series.

Altman said the small investor program should increase the participation of women-owned and minority-owned firms.

The Bush administration argued its strategy would allow the government to dismantle the RTC bureaucracy sooner. Altman said the new strategy would not result in appreciable delay.

The agency has sold more than $300 billion in assets and still has $100 billion — the bulk of which are less attractive properties — yet to unload. By law, it must go out of business by Sept. 30, 1996.

Compaq, Microsoft announce partnership

SEATTLE (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. and Microsoft Corp. have entered a far-reaching alliance to share technology and develop new products, including pen-based and handheld computers, the companies said Tuesday.

Bill Gates, Microsoft chairman and chief executive officer, said the agreement was one of the most wide-ranging Microsoft has made since the pact with IBM that established his company as the major player in personal computer software.

"This is by a significant amount the most important thing we have done in a long time," Gates said.

The companies formally announced their "Frontline Partnership" during the Federal Office System Expo in Washington, D.C. Gates and Eckhard Pfeiffer, president and chief executive officer of Compaq, held a telephone news conference to elaborate on the agreement.

Microsoft of Redmond, Wash., is the largest producer of personal computer software. Compaq, a Houston-based manufacturer of computers and printers, has about 8 percent of the personal computer market.

Prices inclined to rise on heels of stronger yen

NEW YORK (AP) — Ripples from the Japanese yen's surge against the dollar are expected to reach U.S. consumers soon, forcing slightly higher prices for cars, VCRs, cordless phones and other Japanese-made products.

Leading Japanese consumer electronics makers including Sony, Panasonic and Toshiba said Tuesday prices could rise on selected products by fall, the result of the yen's 10 percent advance to record high levels in recent months.

But while the yen's appreciation may mean higher prices for American shoppers, a strong Japanese currency typically helps the U.S. economy overall. As the prices of imported Japanese goods rise, consumers are more likely to seek out lower-priced products made at home.

Rick Clancy, a spokesman for Sony Corp. of America, said prices will rise "on a selective basis, on a case-by-case basis." But while the increases will vary in size, he said it is unlikely any would approach 10 percent.

TRC chairman meets with oil sheiks

MUSCAT, Oman (AP) — Other than being from a state that produces a lot of petroleum, Jim Nugent may not have a lot in common with the oil sheiks he's meeting at an international conference of petroleum producers in Muscat.

But as chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, Nugent has more than a passing interest in a major issue confronting the Middle East OPEC countries and other producers worldwide.

They are all opposed to proposals to tax carbon fuels like oil in the name of environment protection in the United States and Europe.

"It isn't fair. It isn't equal. It isn't reasonable, and we're trying to change it," Nugent said Tuesday during a break in meetings attended by the 12-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and a dozen other independent producing states.

The Texan is in Oman strictly as an "invited observer," he said.

Some of the countries involved in the conference would like to coordinate production to drive up the price of oil. That would make Western lawmakers think twice about adding an extra levy.

But Nugent said he is forbidden by law from entering any discussion on price-fixing and would have to leave the room if it occurred. So far, the speakers have shied away from the topic, anyway.

Nevertheless, Nugent is more than a casual observer. The problem with the taxes is simple from any producer's standpoint, he said.

"If the price of oil goes up, the use of oil goes down," Nugent said. "If the price of oil is cheap, it will be taxed by the countries that use it."

He would not speculate on the chances of OPEC and other producing countries to forestall the energy taxes.

The Railroad Commission was created about a century ago to regulate the rails in the Lone Star State, Nugent said. Over the years, it was handed other thorny problems that came along, including intrastate oil industry regulation after the black gold was discovered in Texas in the early 1900s.

Now, Texas produces about 1.7 to 1.8 million barrels of oil a day, Nugent said. "About as much as Kuwait."

"Our costs of handling environmental problems are up six-fold over 10 years," the chairman said.

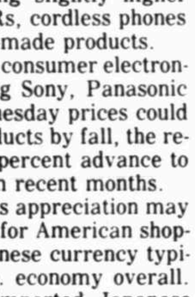

By the commission's calculations, he said, the proposed "BTU tax" — as it is known in the United States — would cost Texans another $54 million a day, and the state would bear 12 percent of the U.S. tax burden based not only on its population but its oil and gas production levels.

Outdoor Connection joins local retail scene

By Mella McEwen

Just opened at 3404 W. Loop 250 North is OUTDOOR CONNECTION.

The store was formerly known as the Midland Army Store and located at 3101 N. Big Spring St.

Owner Dane Widner decided to close the Midland Army Store and opened Outdoor Connection because, while the Army Store had been an outdoor store for quite awhile, people were still under the impression it was a military store. He decided to drop the army motif and concentrate on the outdoor connection.

Outdoor Connection is an outdoor store catering to hunters, archers, backpackers and hikers. Among the equipment being stocked are camouflage clothing, archery equipment, ammunition, backpacks, canoes, tents, cots, coolers, sleeping bags, camp stools, knives, pocket knives, campstoves and lanterns, dehydrated food, hunting boots, hiking boots, binoculars and flashlights.

Store manager is Mark Short. The store is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Bone up on beans

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Jack was smarter than he realized when he started his climb up the beanstalk, yet even he couldn't have guessed what a giant beans would become.

Far from being the poorman's food of fairy tales, beans today are lauded for their high fiber content and for being an inexpensive, low-fat source of protein. They also offer lots of room for creativity. In restaurants across the country, beans are starring in salads, soups, pilafs and exciting entrees. Chefs are experimenting with beans of different sizes, shapes and colors. You can, too, once you bone up on beans.

STALKING BEANS

You can tell a bean by its size, color (black, brown, red, white, or speckled), and shape (round, oval, or kidney-shaped). The different kinds are sold either in bags or in bulk at the supermarket. If you buy them in bulk, choose plump beans and discard any that are shriveled. Store beans in a covered container at room temperature for up to 1 year or in your freezer indefinitely. Choose from the following varieties:

Black: Small, black and oval. Cook them for 1 to 1½ hours.

Black-eyed pea: Small, cream-colored and oval. One side has a black oval with a cream-colored dot in the center. Do not precook or soak. Cook them for 45 to 60 minutes.

Chick pea or garbanzo: Medium, yellow or golden, round and irregular. Cook them for 1½ to 2 hours.

Cranberry: Small, tan-colored (with specks and streaks of burgundy) and oval. Cook them for 1¼ to 1¾ hours.

Fava: Large, brown, flat oval. Cook them for 15 to 30 minutes, then cool and peel. Cook for 45 to 60 minutes more.

Great Northern: Small to medium, white, kidney-shaped. Cook them for 1 to 1½ hours.

Lima, baby: Small, off-white and wide oval in shape. Cook them for 45 to 60 minutes.

Lima, large and butter: Medium, off-white and wide oval in shape. Cook them for 1 to 1¼ hours.

Navy or pea: Small, off-white and oval. Cook them for 1 to 1½ hours.

Pinto: Small, tan-colored (with brown specks) and oval. Cook them for 1¼ to 1¾ hours.

Red kidney: Medium to large, brownish red and kidney-shaped. Cook them for 1 to 1½ hours.

Soybean: Small, cream-colored and oval. Cook them for 2 to 2½ hours.

COOKING DRIED BEANS

It's best to simmer dried beans slowly so they will retain their shape. If you're using a recipe that calls for an acid food, such as tomatoes or vinegar, these ingredients will slow down the cooking process. Add the acid food as near the end of the cooking time as possible.

Most beans, unless otherwise noted, must first be soaked. To soak, rinse beans. In a 4½-quart Dutch oven, combine 1 pound beans and 8 cups cold water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer for 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Cover and let stand for 1 hour. (Or, omit simmering; soak beans in cold water overnight in a covered pan.) Drain and rinse.

To cook, in the same pan combine beans and 8 cups fresh water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer until the beans are tender, using the timings given above as a guide for each bean. Stir occasionally during cooking. One pound of dry beans (2½ cups) will yield 6 to 7 cups of cooked beans.

Slow-cooking Southwestern Bean Soup solves dinner time squeeze

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

The crockery cooker is making a comeback. It lets you have a home-cooked meal when there seems to be no time to cook. Mix up this full-of-beans soup in the morning and let it simmer all day long in your cooker. About 45 minutes before dinner, stir together the dumplings and add them to the soup. Remember to turn the cooker to high heat to cook the dumplings quickly.

SOUTHWESTERN BEAN SOUP WITH CORNMEAL DUMPLINGS

15½-ounce can red kidney beans, rinsed and drained
15-ounce can black beans, pinto beans, or great Northern beans, rinsed and drained
3 cups water
14½-ounce can Mexican-style stewed tomatoes
10-ounce package frozen whole kernel corn, thawed
2 medium carrots, sliced (1 cup)
1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
4-ounce can diced green chili peppers
2 tablespoons instant beef, chicken, or vegetable bouillon granules
1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
2 cloves garlic, minced
⅓ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon baking powder
Dash salt
Dash pepper
1 beaten egg white
2 tablespoons milk
1 tablespoon cooking oil

In a 3½- or 4-quart crockery cooker combine canned beans, water, undrained tomatoes, corn, carrot, onion, undrained chili peppers, bouillon granules, chili powder and garlic. Cover and cook on low-heat setting for 10 to 12 hours or on high-heat setting for 4 to 5 hours.

For dumplings, in a small mixing bowl stir together flour, cornmeal, baking powder, salt and pepper. In a medium mixing bowl combine egg white, milk and oil. Add egg mixture to flour mixture; stir with a fork just until combined.

Turn the crockery cooker to the high-heat setting. Drop the dumpling mixture from a rounded teaspoon to make 8 mounds atop the soup. Cover and cook for 30 minutes more (do not lift the cover). Makes 4 servings.

NOTE: Be sure the crockery cooker you're using has coils that surround the food and cook on low or high. The heat should be continuous, rather than cycling on and off. Check your owner's manual if you're not sure.

Top bean soup with Mexican-style cheese

Associated Press

In the golden age of ancient Mexico, before the Spanish conquest, the Tarascan Indians formed an independent nation and survived on a high fiber diet consisting of maize, beans, herbs, fruits and vegetables.

In keeping with the nutritious foods of these Indians, the California Milk Advisory Board has created Tarascan bean soup. The beans, corn tortillas and roasted chilies remain as staples to the Tarascan Indians in Michoacan and other regions such as Zacapu, La Canada and the Sierra.

For added calcium, top each serving with a Mexican-style cheese such as Crema Mexicana and Ranchero cheese.

TARASCAN BEAN SOUP

3 plum tomatoes, roasted
1 dried chili ancho, with the stem removed, seeded and roasted
2½ cups chicken broth
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1½ cups water
3 cups cooked pinto beans and 1½ cups reserved pinto bean broth (recipe below)
1 medium white onion, quartered
4 garlic cloves
1 cup (8 ounces) Mexican-style cheese, such as Ranchero, Adobera, Fresco, or Monterey Jack or Muenster cheese, cubed
2 ripe avocados, diced
8 corn tortillas, cut into thin strips and fried
4 dried chili ancho, stems removed, seeded, sliced into thin strips and fried
8 tablespoons Crema Mexicana, Ranchero cheese, or sour cream

In a blender, puree tomatoes, roasted chili ancho and chicken broth until smooth. In a large pot or Dutch oven, heat oil over medium heat; stir in blended tomato mixture and water. Cook 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Set aside.

In a blender, puree 3 cups cooked pinto beans, the 1½ cups reserved broth, onion and garlic until smooth; add to tomato mixture and cook additional 10 minutes, until thoroughly heated and well blended. To serve, ladle soup into bowls and garnish with cheese, avocado, fried tortilla strips, chili strips and Crema Mexicana or sour cream. Makes 6 servings.

Green Giant 'Creates a Stir'

By Linda Anderson

Ever get hungry for Chinese food but you really don't feel like going out? Evidently the people at Green Giant have felt the same way, because they recently introduced frozen Create a Stir! Meal Starter so you can make Chinese foods at home by just adding meat.

Anderson

Since convenience is of major importance to me in cooking, I bought a bag of Create A Stir! that was supposed to make lo mein stir fry — once you added pork — to see if I too could make decent Chinese food. I knew this would be an interesting taste test because the young taste-tester is very limited in her appreciation of most foods that contain vegetables.

A 21-ounce bag of lo mein stir fry meal starter cost $2.49 and contained enough vegetables ("Crisp Broccoli," "Tender Julienne Carrots" and "Delicate Mushrooms") and lo mein noodles — plus two packets of Oriental sauce — to make four servings.

Label advertising claimed "Now you don't have to be an oriental chef to create great tasting stir fry!" (What a relief! Chefing in any nationality is not my greatest talent.) Then it goes on: "Green Giant makes it easy! Just add pork and in less than 15 minutes, your family can enjoy a delicious Lo Mein Stir Fry dinner!" All those exclamation points are beginning to get redundant, aren't they.

The label also included a list of tips to make your dinner more personalized, such as the fact that "Chicken or beef may be substituted for pork" and "For a meatless stir fry, prepare as directed, except omit meat." Really?

Green Giant also has the class to include a toll-free number for consumers to call if they have any questions, comments or complaints: 1-800-998-9996 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. (central time) weekdays.

The directions were easy. Basically, cook the meat, add the frozen vegetables and noodles, stir in sauce, cover skillet and cook. No problem.

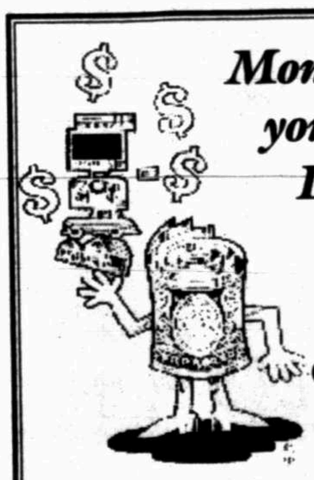

Create a Stir!, while not a rousing hit at our house, was at least a modest success. The older taste-tester thought it was good; the younger one said she liked everything except the broccoli and the carrots; and I liked it.

I'll probably buy it again. While not as good as restaurant food, it sure beats having to cook.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Strawberries are perfect spring fare

Associated Press

Fruit paired with meringues makes festive spring dessert offerings — without the weight of extra calories. The following recipe is from Kraft General Foods.

Elegant Strawberry Meringues
3 egg whites
½ cup sugar
3 cups sliced strawberries
1 ounce semi-sweet chocolate, melted

Heat oven to 275 degrees.

Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating well after each addition. Mixture will be glossy but no longer grainy to the touch.

Spoon meringue mixture onto cookie sheet covered with parchment paper to form 6 shells.

Bake 1 hour. Turn oven off; leave meringues in closed oven 1 hour.

Fill each meringue with strawberries; drizzle with melted chocolate. Serves 6.

Baked Noodles have savory taste

Associated Press

The following recipe for Egg Noodle Bake is a versatile addition to Sunday brunch. The dish is made with low-fat sour cream, cottage cheese and milk, diced onions and egg noodles, and sweetened with raisins, cinnamon and sugar.

EGG NOODLE BAKE WITH GOLDEN RAISINS
12 ounces egg noodles (¼-inch or ½-inch wide)
16 ounces low-fat cottage cheese
1 cup low-fat sour cream
1 tablespoon margarine
1 medium onion, diced
2 egg whites
1½ cups low-fat milk
½ cup raisins or sultanas
2 tablespoons sugar teaspoon cinnamon

Prepare pasta according to package directions; drain. Rinse under water and drain again. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a large bowl, combine the noodles with the cottage cheese and sour cream; set aside.

Melt the margarine in a small skillet. Add onion and saute over medium heat until soft, about 5 minutes. Combine onion with noodles.

In a medium bowl, beat egg whites for 30 seconds; beat in milk. Add mixture to noodles. Stir raisins into noodles. Lightly grease a 1½-quart baking dish with oil or cooking spray. Spoon noodle mixture into the dish.

In a small bowl, combine sugar and cinnamon; sprinkle over noodles. Bake in a 350-degree oven until noodles until firm and browned on top, about 55 minutes. Serve hot from the oven or at room temperature. Makes 6 servings.

Ingredients are everything

By Linda Beaulieu
Associated Press

For Boston chef Jasper White, ingredients are everything. "If you use the best, you don't need to do a lot of fancy stuff."

Using only the best ingredients is what has made his namesake restaurant so successful, he said. White and his wife, Nancy, opened Jasper's in 1983, in a former molasses warehouse on Boston's waterfront.

At Jasper's, customers are served unfussy fare — New England chowders, baked beans, cod fritters, brown bread, fried green tomatoes and a salad of fennel and endive with Parmesan cheese.

His restaurant has won Boston magazine's "Best of Boston" award year after year. In addition, the Boston Globe has given Jasper's its highest rating.

During a recent cooking demonstration at Johnson & Wales University in Providence, R.I., White told 200 young chefs that he is still learning about food after 20 years in the restaurant business. "If you love food, you will never be unhappy," he said.

Born in New Jersey, Jasper spent much of his childhood on a farm near the shore. Hunting and fishing, as well as farming, gave him a solid respect for food in its most unadulterated state, he said. By extensively researching New England foods, their history and cultural aspects, Jasper has become a well-regarded spokesman for the region's cooking.

White's pear crisp, served with sweetened whipped cream or vanilla-bean ice cream, is a very simple dessert. It is a true "cook's dessert," he said, because once you get the hang of it, you can follow your instinct, combining different fruits and nuts and pairing it with different flavors of ice cream.

PEAR CRISP
1 cup pecan pieces
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup (packed) light brown sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter, cold
8 firm Anjou, Bosc, or Bartlett pears
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
Sweetened whipped cream or vanilla-bean ice cream

Toast the pecan pieces in a preheated 350-degree oven for 6 to 8 minutes or until lightly browned. This may be done ahead of time.

Combine the flour, brown sugar, salt and cinnamon with the nuts in a mixing bowl. Cut the butter into pieces the size of a hazelnut (½ tablespoon); add to the flour mixture. Rub the mixture between the palms of your hands, mixing in the butter while keeping the topping crumbly. Set aside in a cool place.

Peel, core and slice the pears about ½ inch thick. Toss the slices with the sugar and flour. Place in a 6- by 10-inch baking dish and cover evenly with topping. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 1 hour or until brown, bubbly and crisp. Serve warm with whipped cream or ice cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Mom wants to meet kid's friends before they play

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our son has entered the first grade and has befriended a lot of his peers. These children and their parents, some of whom are complete strangers to us, often phone and invite our son over to their homes to play. We try to get to know as many of these people as possible, but sometimes kids will invite him over before we've even met them and their families.

Van Buren

When this happens, we say that he can't go, and sometimes explain that he can't play there because we don't know them. Some parents have been offended by this reply and others have then suggested that I come over with him.

In this day and age, we carefully instruct our children to beware of strangers. How can anyone expect us to send our young children to spend an afternoon in a stranger's home? It's time to make it a practice to invite the child and a parent over on the first visit.

I hope you can print this. It might protect some unsuspecting parents and children. — BETTER CAUTIOUS THAN SORRY

DEAR BETTER CAUTIOUS: Your vigilance is commendable, and a good example. I hope you are willing to reciprocate the hospitality and invite the mothers of your son's playmates to investigate the suitability of your home as well.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old, happily married woman with a 2-year-old daughter. My husband, "Burt," is 29. He just received a telephone call from an old girlfriend who now lives in Indiana. (We live in Florida.)

"Betty" called to tell Burt that he is going to be subpoenaed for a blood test. She says that Burt is one of the men who could be the father of her daughter, who is nearly 7 years old.

All this happened before I met Burt. Betty said that she hates doing this, but this is the only way she can get welfare — and they won't help her until they find the father of her child.

My question: What are Burt's rights in Florida and Indiana? And what right does Betty have walking into a man's life after seven years and saying, "You are my daughter's daddy, therefore you are responsible for this child"?

I could understand it if she had just had a baby — but after seven years, it's ridiculous. We have our own life, our own child, and we can't start paying child support for a child we just now heard about.

Burt is a decent and responsible man, and this will really turn our lives upside down if he finds out this little girl is his daughter. The mother obviously never needed welfare until now. Please help. What a ridiculous mess! — FRUSTRATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Sorry, the only person who can help you and Burt is a lawyer. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I have been told there is an organization where people can send old, soiled and torn American flags, and they will be disposed of properly.

I wasn't sure of the name of that organization, so I wrote a letter to the Veterans of Foreign Wars — the chapter nearest me — and I never received a reply.

Do you know if there is such an organization? — PATRIOTIC IN CAMDEN, MAINE

DEAR PATRIOTIC: Yes, there is such an organization. Contact your local chapter of The American Legion. It will accept soiled and damaged American flags and dispose of them in a dignified, respectful ceremony. And thank you for caring enough about "Old Glory" to make sure she is disposed of properly.

Rack of lamb is flavorful, festive

By Pierre Franey
N.Y. Times News Service

Rack of lamb remains, for me, one of the most flavorful and festive meats, and it is especially well suited to holiday entertaining. Admittedly, it is a relatively expensive cut, but it has the advantage of being easy to prepare and it cooks quickly.

The trend in this country is to serve lamb of all kinds extremely rare, in the French style. Whether to do so or not is really up to individual tastes. When serving guests with varied preferences it is wise to aim for medium rare, which will yield pieces that are more rare in the center and medium toward the surface.

There are numerous ways to season and garnish rack of lamb. The most typically French is to mince fresh parsley and then blend it with minced garlic and fresh bread crumbs. The recipe here also calls for shallots and thyme. Another favorite technique of mine is to use chopped rosemary.

Before roasting the rack of lamb, pull away and discard the entire top layer of fat. Then cut away as much fat as possible from the meaty loin and ribs. You can make these trims easily in a home kitchen, although many butchers will make them for you.

Never carve the lamb right after taking it out of the oven. Let it stand for five minutes or more to allow the meat to firm up and the pan juices to accumulate. Use any pan juices in a sauce, or simply as they are.

PARSLEYED RACK OF LAMB

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon curry powder
2 racks of lamb, about 1½ pounds total, boned and trimmed of fat and sinew
½ cup fresh bread crumbs
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves or ½ teaspoon dried
1 tablespoon melted butter
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

Preheat broiler to 450 degrees.

Combine the salt, pepper, olive oil and curry powder in a small bowl, and blend well with a wire whisk.

Brush the mixture over the lamb, place the meat in a shallow baking dish large enough to hold the racks side by side.

Place the rack under the broiler about 4 inches from the source of heat. Cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Turn and cook for about 2 minutes more.

Meanwhile, combine the bread crumbs, shallots, garlic, thyme, melted butter, 2 tablespoons of the parsley, and salt and pepper to taste.

Remove lamb from broiler and sprinkle it all over with the bread-crumb mixture. Place on the oven rack and bake for 5 to 6 minutes for rare, depending on the degree of doneness desired. Sprinkle with the remaining parsley.

TO SERVE: slice the meat on the bias.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Approximate nutritional analysis per serving: 540 calories, 30 grams fat, 190 milligrams cholesterol, 215 milligrams sodium (before salting), 60 grams protein, 3 grams carbohydrate.

SAUTEED SPINACH AND TOMATOES

1½ pounds fresh spinach leaves
4 ripe plum tomatoes, about ½ pound
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Pull away any tough stems and blemished leaves from the spinach, and discard them. Rinse and dry well.

Core the tomatoes and place them in boiling water for about 10 seconds. Drain and cool. Pull away the skins, cut the tomatoes crosswise and then into ¼-inch cubes.

Melt the butter in a large nonstick skillet, add the tomatoes and cook, stirring, for 1 minute over high heat. Add the spinach, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring and tossing, until the spinach is thoroughly wilted. Remove from heat and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

Approximate nutritional analysis per serving: 75 calories, 4 grams fat, 8 milligrams cholesterol, 170 milligrams sodium (before salting), 5 grams protein, 9 grams carbohydrate.
