It is an ambitious program that chamber of commerce members have mapped out for Wichita Falls in 1928. Most of the projects, particularly those relating to dairying, poultry raising, agriculture, road building and opera and musical programs, are of vital importance to this city and territory in the coming year. The entire citizenship, as well as members of the chamber of commerce, should realize that these are community projects—and that the community must work as a whole if they are to be successfully completed.

A board of expert advisors is to be found for Wichita Falls' 1928 advertising campaign in the Wichita Falls Advertising club. The civic spirit and abilities of the club's members should be and doubtless are available in the work that is to be done in placing Wichita Falls before other sections of the country. Add club members know the power of the proper word, of color and art and balance, and what appeal to use to bring worthwhile citizens to Wichita Falls. They know how to get two-dollar value for every one dollar invested in advertising. The club's leaders should be called in when this campaign is drawn.

Joe Dixon, superintendent of the state fish hatchery at Diversion lake, has moved into his new home and is busy stocking the ponds with game fish. His seems an ideal occupation to most of us—nothing to do but fish. Of course Mr. Dixon doesn't use a hook and line in his fishing, but he is interested in making fishing profitable and pleasurable for real anglers. It is a good thing to go fishing every now and then. It gets your nose out of the office grind and your mind free of the office muddle. You can think about something besides fishing as you fish; you can't think anything but business while at work.

More Wichita Falls residents should go fishing, driving into new new additions, into the oil fields, over the irrigated sections, visit the various clubs and see more of Wichita Falls. Many of us do not realize that Wichita Falls is such a great and interesting city, or that it has such a great future.

Wichita Falls is honored in the visit here of Arthur Sapp, president of Rotary International. He should have an inspiring message at the banquet here tonight and at church services at which he will speak Sunday. Mr. Sapp placed codes of ethics and ideals in many business organizations and associations of the country. He performed a great service for these associations, as well as for the public. No business can long endure which does not deal fairly and generously with its public and its competitors, and which does not give dollar for dollar in value and service to its customers.

True friendship is a wonderful thing, especially if it is true even to the pocketbook. Arthur Salmon, the big-hearted restaurant man now basking in California's sunlight with the oranges and movie stars, wired back to a number of his regular customers: "Have a heart. Use only one spoon of sugar in your coffee. Trip more expensive than anticipated." Mr. Salmon seems to have devised the supreme test of friendship.

REPORT COUNTS EXCESS FEES AND INTEREST

10-Year Period Covered In Survey Of Auditors

RECORDS BLAMED

"Joke," Say Ex-Officials In Interviews On Amounts Claimed

A special audit of the accounts of all Wichita county offices over the ten-year period ending Jan. 1, 1927, reveals a balance of $224,706.37 due the county in excess fees and interest, according to the complete auditors' account submitted the county commissioners' court in executive session Friday.

Complete Report

The audit was prepared by Smith, Allred & Company, on an order passed by the commissioners' court about six months ago. The complete report, a volume of several hundred pages, was read beore the court Friday afternoon. The financial situation of each of the offices was submitted to a resume of collections, disbursements, payment of fees, and other vital activities for the last ten years, with the exception of the district clerk's office, the books of which were checked back to 1910.

Completing the reading of the audit late in the afternoon, members of the court adjourned without committing themselves to opinion of the audit, or the state of county affairs revealed in the document, according to County Judge E. W. Nicholson.

The audit of the county's books was the first complete check of records since they were audited by A. E. Myles, local accountant, who submitted his report on Jan. 1, 1917. The present audit, it was said, used the figures of the Myles report as basis for calculation. The 1927 audit is said to have called for an expenditure in excess of $14,000, over six months being required in which to complete the check of each office.

Commenting on the situation, Judge Nicholson traced the indebtedness to the county to a lack of more frequent audits.

"The present commissioners' court, on its assumption of office, found the affairs of some offices in a tangle, and the only way to

CAL IS SILENT

White House Issues No Forecast For Nation's 1928 Business

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—Although it has been customary at the White House to review the year from a governmental standpoint as the new year approaches, there was no such review in prospect today at the White House.

President Coolidge believes, it was said, on his behalf that anyone who desires to know what were the accomplishments of his administration during 1927 could ascertain them as easily by himself as from the president.

Likewise the White House was silent regarding what 1928 might hold for the American people.

TRADE TRIPS WIN APPROVAL

Manufacturers and Jobbers For 1928

Special trade trips to the south plains territory by groups of Wichita Falls men to celebrate the opening of the new lines of the Denver and South Plains and of the extension of the Quanah, Acme & Pacific, were tentatively decided upon at a series of meetings held Friday between the executive and the specialized committees of the recently organized manufacturers and jobbers section of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce.

Adopt Name

The division of the chamber has been known as the manufacturers and wholesalers division until Friday when it was decided to adopt the permanent name of manufacturers and jobbers.

Plans for a working program for the year were tentatively decided upon and recommended to the directors of the chamber of commerce.

Small trade visits by small groups of Wichita Falls men to the cities of the trade territory to renew friendships and to assist in stimulating mutual trade interests and buying; the issuance of a buyers' guide; the staging of a traveling men's banquet the night of Jan. 28; stories in Wichita Falls newspapers telling of the features and advantages of the cities, in this portion of Texas; a survey of homes in the territory and urging of closer co-operation of all concerned and of buying at home, were among the projects approved.

Hold Conferences

LINDY'S PLANE DODGES OVER WIRE OBSTACLE

U. S. Ace in Thrill Act As He Reaches Belize, British Honduras

SKILL SAVES HIM

"WE" Lands Without Hurt As Flier Figures In Narrow Escape

BELIZE, British Honduras, Dec. 30. (AP)—Just missing telephone wires on the northern end of the Sports field, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today skilfully brought his famous Spirit of St. Louis safely to a landing here, completing the second leg of his good-will flight to Central America and making the first landing in a land plane ever made here.

There were tense moments of anxiety in the crowd, for the American air hero was forced to swerve his plane sharply from a stand erected for the New Year's horse races and to pilot it down the narrow field skilfully to a safe landing. When he had accomplished this a sigh of relief rose from the crowd which swarmed about the American flier cheering in joy and exuberance.

Three-Hour Flight.

The American aviator landed at 9:45 a. m., local time (10:45 a. m. eastern standard time) just three hours and 25 minutes after he had taken off from Guatemala City, 250 miles away, over rough and dangerous territory. He was five minutes early, for he had estimated that it would take him three and a half hours to make the trip.

Enthusiastic because of Colonel Lindbergh's decision to land here when it was feared that the field would prove inadequate, and doubly excited by the colonel's marvelous feat in bringing his plane safely to land on the small sports field, the crowd swarmed about the plane, wild with joy and it was necessary for the reception committee to link arms and take Colonel Lindbergh within their protecting ranks to the golf club where he was formally greeted by Sir John Burdon, governor of the colony, and prominent citizens, including the mayor of Belize.

Fogs Delay Flier.

Fogs held Colonel Lindbergh up on his flight, forcing him to make a detour before striking the coast line. Otherwise it was estimated that he would have made the hop in less than three hours.

Surrounded by enthusiastic welcomers Colonel Lindbergh smiled boyishly and bowed in acknowledgement of the cheers which greeted him. He said that he was glad that he had come to British Honduras and laughingly admitted that there was a few in America who had never heard of such a colony.

Then the colonel was taken to a waiting decorated car which led a parade through the streets of Belize which were lavishly decorated. Great crowds had gathered, for the day had been declared a public holiday. Finally the colonel was taken to government house to dine with the governor.

The whole town was Lindbergh mad and all business was suspended.

Too Weak To Fight, Bandit Pair Gives Up

Wichita Falls Woman Admits She Made Santa Suit For Robber

GRAHAM, Texas, Dec. 30. (AP)—Hunger, lack of sleep and serious bullet wounds which produced delirious mental lapses were responsible for the capture today of Henry Helms and Robert Hill, ex-convicts and the last two of the quartet of desperadoes who one week ago today robbed the First National bank of Cisco, killed G. E. Bedford, Cisco chief of police, and wounded eight others in a gun battle.

The two bandits today were taken to the county jail at Eastland where they will join Marshall Ratliff, another ex-convict, the third member of their gang, and be arraigned on charges of murder and robbery by firearms. The fourth bandit, L. E. Davis, was mortally wounded in the gun fight at the Cisco bank and died in the jail at Fort Worth last Saturday.

Too Weak to Fight.

After successfully eluding scores of possemen in four spectacular gun battles, the last two robbers today were captured on the streets of this little town without a struggle. Both men were heavily armed but their weakened condition prevented resistance.

It developed that the pair after eluding some 150 possemen in the dense cedar brakes of the Brazos river near South Bend, where they made their last stand by holding off the officers with sweeping gun fire as they retreated across the river, came back to Graham last night. They knocked on the door of Mrs. Doc Harkey last night and asked to be directed to the "Texas Rooms." There is no such place in Graham. Mrs. Harkey summoned officers, but investigation seemed to discount her story.

Guns Betray Them.

This morning they accosted H. C. Cox, a visitor here, and asked him a similar question.

Cox, who noticed two revolvers under the coat of one of the men, told them he was a stranger here and left them. He immediately notified police. When the officers approached Helms and Hill separated and Hill began a sort of tottering trot and was easily overtaken. Helms leaned against a wall and a second later crumpled and fell.

At the jail here it was found that Helms was delirious and suffering with a temperature of 102 1-2.

"He got us caught," Hill exclaimed. "He's been out of his head for nearly two days." Hill talked readily, while Helms said he was too sick to talk.

Both Men Unkempt.

Both men were unkempt and their clothing almost torn to shreds by the thick undergrowth in which they had been hiding. Examined at the jail, Hill showed a nasty bullet wound in his elbow, which he said had not caused him much trouble but over which physicians shook their heads. Bullets also had glazed him on the head and back. The head wound was suffered in the fight near South Bend Tuesday morning, he said. The other wounds were received at Cisco at the time of the robbery.

Helms nursed a variety of bullet holes suffered at Cisco and an arm wound received at the South Bend battle. His old wounds included shots in the right hip, back and shoulder. Other wounds were in the arms and body.

"Haven't had a bite to eat since Tuesday morning," Hill said.

"What do you want?" he was asked.

"Anything good to eat," was the reply.

Trackers Far Behind.

Questioning of Hill brought out the fact that trackers yesterday were 12 hours behind the fugitives. All day yesterday, Hill said, they were hiding in the vicinity of Graham. In the meantime scores of

Hickman and Hunt Grilled by Cops To Clear Mystery of Third Murder

Police Believe Slayer of Parker Girl Figured in Other Killings Aside From Those Confessed

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30. (AP)—A plea of insanity will be made by William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of little Marian Parker, Jerome Walsh, counsel for the boy prisoner, announced late today.

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—Strongly believing that William Edward Hickman has not yet told all of his criminal past, police today continued their investigation of the career of the youthful slayer of 12-year-old Marion Parker.

They are working on the theory that there is at least one other murder in the record of the youth, who has confessed to kidnaping, killing and dismembering the Parker girl, to being a participant in a holdup which resulted in the death of C. Ivy Toms, Los Angeles druggist, and to committing a string of holdups here and in other cities.

Police today questioned Hickman in an effort to learn if he could have been connected with the murder of Policeman P. L. Bennett, shot to death in a holdup here on January 23, last. This occurred a month after the Toms murder, and at a time, police say, when Hickman was in this city engaged in a robbery career.

Boy Answers Description.

The murderer of Officer Bennett was described as being not dissimilar in appearance to the slayer of the Parker girl.

Police also were trying to learn if there could be any connection

Sinclair, Burns and Four of Aides In 'Jury Shadowing' Face Charges

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—Harry F. Sinclair, William J. Burns and five of their associates were charged today with conspiracy to obstruct justice by the federal grand jury which investigated the shadowing of the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy jury by Burns detectives hired by Sinclair.

No indictments were returned, however, as District Attorney Peyton Gordon held that as Sinclair, Burns and four of their associates were being tried for criminal contempt in connection with surveillance of the jury, new charges should not be filed against them. The presentment of the grand jury to Chief Justice McCoy of the District of Columbia supreme court, will be filed, he said, and no action taken upon it.

Besides Sinclair and Burns those named in the presentment were Henry Mason Dry of New York, vice president of the Sinclair Exploration company; Sheldon Clark of Chicago, vice president of the Sinclair Refining company; W. Sherman Burns of New York, manager of the Burns Detective Agency; Charles G. Ruddy of Philadelphia, Burns man who directed the jury shadowing and Frank J. O'Reilly, Ruddy's assistant.

Uncle Sam and John Bull in Accord Over Elevation of Guns on Cruisers

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Secretary of State Kellogg today issued a formal denial of published reports that the British object to elevation of guns on United States' warships as a violation of the armaments. He said:

"My attention has been called to a press report stating that the British government had elevated its guns after the Washington treaty and then had objected to the United States doing the same.

"This is a mistake. The British government had informed the United States that it had elevated its guns and this department and the navy department are satisfied that this is correct. The British government is not now objecting to the United States' gun elevation."

It was explained that at the time of the Washington armaments conference, guns on British warships had a higher elevation and greater range than American guns and that the United States is merely elevating guns and modernizing warships to match the British.

Thermometer Does Reverse Trombone Slide When Chill Hits Here

Wichita Falls enjoyed balmy weather early Friday with a temperature of 64 degrees, and then felt the temperature drop 46 degrees to 18 above zero by midnight Friday. The day was featured by the first snow flurries of the season which started at 8:58 o'clock at night and continued throughout the night.

Weather forecasts indicate cold, clear weather Saturday.

Woodward, Okla., was in the midst of a raging blizzard and snowstorm at 1 o'clock Saturday morning with the thermometer standing at 2 degrees above zero. This storm hit about midnight.

Reports from the railway dispatchers offices indicate the storm gradually getting worse and working southward.

Childress and Quanah reported temperatures of 12 above zero at midnight. Altus, Okla., thermometers registered 14 and were going down at the same hour. Abilene, Stamford, Fort Worth, Spur and other cities near Wichita Falls to the south were slightly warmer, but were enjoying freezing and near freezing weather.

An optimistic note was sounded by C. C. McGown, county agricultural agent, who declared that due to the early warnings and also to the rains of the past few days, the freeze probably will not cause material loss to the farmers.

"A damp freeze like this will not hurt the winter oats as a dry freeze night," Mr. McGown explained. "Winter wheat will not be damaged. Poultry and cattle of all kinds should fare well as sufficient warning was broadcasted by the newspapers to permit the farmers to take the necessary precautions."

Snow in Panhandle

Amarillo, Pampa and territory in that district received light snows accompanied by high north winds.

Amarillo had cold weather all day with a minimum of 20 degrees and a mixmum of 23, while forecast for Saturday morning was 8 degrees and partly cloudy. As usual, the cold wave spread rapidly down the cap rock. The boreal blast struck Lubbock about 6 p. m., where the temperature was 45 degrees and dropping rapidly after a maximum for the day of 60. A prediction of 10 or lower by morning was reported.

Cold, sweeping north winds were reported through Childress, Chillicothe, Vernon and Quanah, but up to a late hour no snow had fallen there.

The direction of the storm is indicated by the fact at 5 o'clock the snow had hit Amarillo, the bitterly cold winds had hit Wilbarger and Childress counties, the thermometer at Quanah stood at 20 de-

They went for help and while away the fire broke out. It was reported that a stranger was seen driving away from the house in an automobile. The home next door also was damaged by the flames.

FIRE AT SEA DESTROYS SHIP

Crew of Doomed Vessel Saved By Chance

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec 29. (AP)—A tale of their ship afire in the South seas, of futile battle against flames, of heroic rescue by a savage member of the crew of a fatally burned shipmate, of taking to lifeboats in a rough sea in the darkness of night, and of thrilling rescue by a chance steamer, was told by officers of the motor schooner, Doris Crane, who arrived here today. The Doris Crane sank nine days ago, the funeral pyre of a South sea islander.

"We were at breakfast December 19, nine days out of Fanning island, when we heard an explosion," said Captain Hiram C. Davison.

"A can of gasoline had capsized in the engine room and the whole place became a mass of flames. Two native oilers, Inaibo and Rerei, were inside, and I don't see how they ever got out. Inaibo, a barefoot savage islander, was a hero. His own leg badly burned, he struggled out on deck dragging poor Rerei, who died shortly afterward.

"We had no wireless and were 340 miles from land. We couldn't reach the pumps. The copra cargo and fuel tanks must have caught fire. We couldn't stop the engines and the ship churned ahead for three hours. We sealed the engine room, bored holes in the decks and all hands got busy with buckets of water. We didn't stop for 19 hours and there was three feet of water in the holds when we left.

"Two lifeboats were provisioned and we went over at 2:20 the next morning.

"It was dark and choppy. The whole ship was beginning to burn and we hoped someone might see it, though those are lonely seas. In the darkness, the steamer Niagara saw the flames 35 miles away. We fired distress rockets. She looked mighty good as she came up to us."

"The body of Rerei was left aboard and cremated with the ship. The nine other natives in the crew were sent home to Suva and the Niagara landed the white officers at Honolulu."

ALTUS SOCIETY

The Euzelian class of the First Baptist Sunday school met in regular session Sunday in their class room, when three classes of the department were special guests.

The program was opened by singing "Silent Night," after which Mrs. W. R. Cullen gave as a piano solo, "Come All Ye Feathful." Mrs. L. N. Putman led the devotional.

As a special feature of this interesting Christmas meeting, Mrs. O. B. Grimmett was asked to give the three act sketch of Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man."

Mrs. Fred Zimmerman read as a scripture lesson the story of the birth of Christ, and told in an interesting way incidents of that momentous occasion.

Following the program a gift exchange was conducted, at which time members of the class presented their teacher, Mrs. Zimmerman, with a hand-painted bed spread, and she in turn, presented each member with hand-painted Bible markers.

Members of the Methodist Women's Missionary society met at the church Monday afternoon for installation of officers, when officers of both the adult and young people's societies assumed their duties.

Reverend Jno. O. Ensor, pastor of the church, conducted the devotional and had charge of the beautiful installation ceremony, which was accompanied by an excellent talk of the women's work.

At the close of the meeting the society presented Mrs. L. H. McConnell, the retiring president, with a dainty cream and sugar service.

The presentation words were made by Mrs. G. E. Thorp, who in a charming way expressed the appreciation and heartfelt thanks the society has for Mrs. McConnell's two years of faithful and untiring service.

Chairmen of circles were introduced, the personnel being as follows: Mrs. Raymond R. Fox, Mrs. J. Ray Baker, Mrs. Will Neher, Mrs. Jess Cumbee, Mrs. L. E. Widlake and Mrs. F. Caster.

Mrs. McConnell responded, expressing as muc happreciation for the kind words and sentiment as for the lovely gift. An altogether pleasant and profitable meeting is reported.

Nearly twice as many artificial flowers and fruits are being brought to this country from Germany as a year ago.

"THE BRAN'-NEW YEAR"

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

"He sits on top of the world, and the world says, 'Oh, what have you for me?'"

"RING out wild bells!"—tonight the world seems new. A stranger world. No more an intimate, "well acquaint" Nineteen Twenty-seven world, but an unknown world! Tonight the sky looks unknown—new—holding hidden fortune, a sky called the sky of NINETEEN TWENTY-EIGHT! All over the dark face of the land, in little villages and huge cities, thrilled persons will sit up in bed, or straighten up at a festival table, and each with an odd feeling around the heart as if a new earth presence might suddenly show itself, will listen half frightened, and wholly awed, at the wild whistles and bells and horns that scream and toot and bawl and ring out, that an old year never to come back, has passed, and a new one, BRAN' NEW, is here. A new one to do great things in. A new one with new promises, new chances to be happier and better.

A bran' new year, sitting "On Top of the World." Unsoiled by a single misdeed, or a dark, worldly finger-print!

A new book with pages like snow, to write in. A new white sheet to do better, more honest work on. A great new space wherein you step, with all things perfect around you, to be a kinder and bigger person in. Perhaps to be MORE YOURSELF in. For many of us are not so good, in the year that is over, as we REALLY are. We do not even do the good we believe in. We are not even the girl or the man that goes on inside of us. We go the way of the crowd, for fear we may stand alone.

You've got a big new space, a clean "bran' new" year to work and live in. It's a nice, big, heart-raising feeling that brings resolutions that are more prayers and beliefs than formal vows.

You really KNOW you are going to do and get great things. You don't promise to!

Hail and salute, Nineteen Twenty-eight, the new child called Opportunity!

The Romance of New Year's

By Beatrice Fairfax.

An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

IT IS the eve of the New Year! There is mystery and thrill of romance in the very thought. What new and useful wonders may not 1928 bring forth! What fruition of happy love may it not unfold, for you!

Are we not at the beginning of a new era as well as a new year—the era of the air, the era of new romance, the era of youth, which laughs at limitations of years!

Three hundred years ago, Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir Francis Drake and numerous other gallant young men were sailing the high seas, exploring a new world in what was called a golden age of adventure. Surely we are today entering on another golden age.

Our Lindberghs, our Chamberlins and Byrds, our Pinedos and Sir Allan Cobbes, are exploring a new world—the unconquered world of the air! Young women have their part in the adventurous exploration of these days. We have our Ruth Elders as well as our Byrds and Lindberghs.

In this air age, it is not improbable that the family airplane, built fool-proof, may soon supplant the family flivver, and weddings and honeymoons in airplanes will no longer be nine-day wonders.

Can you not vision irate parents in the family air-flivver pursuing youthful elopers in their speeding sport-model plane, hoping against hope to overtake them before the wedding!

But possibly there will be less of parental objection to marriage in the new era 1928 is ushering in. Youth, sufficiently well-balanced, clever and resourceful to understand and handle airplanes will doubtless be practical, sane in judgment, fit mentally and physically, unlikely to rush into mad marriages. And parents will be unlikely to attempt interference.

We seem to be facing an era of new ideas of marriage. Love and marriage are so dear to the heart of humanity, that there is little possibility of any radical change. But efforts are being made to adapt marriage in its outward forms, more closely to modern needs.

For instance, there is companionate marriage, advocated by Judge Lindsay, which would permit two young persons to marry before the husband was able to support his wife, without founding a home together or having children, merely for the sake of companionship of marriage. Such a marriage could at any time be changed to the usual form of marriage or dissolved by divorce, by mutual consent.

"I am not willing to sacrifice my education for marriage as many of my school-mates have done," states Aubrey Roselle, who was united by companionate marriage last month, to Miss Josephine Haldeman-Julius of Kansas City, aged eighteen. "Neither do I think Josephine and I should be forced to wait five or six years, until I finish college, and get a star in my profession. The time for us to marry is now, while we love each other."

And Miss Haldeman-Julius remarked, shortly before her wedding: "It seems too beautiful to be true that we shall be free to enjoy each other, yet not have to give up school and the careers we have planned. Most of my friends wish they could do just as Aub and I are doing."

Companionate marriage may or may not fulfil the needs of modern young men and women. There are serious objections to it, on the part of these who believe that marriage is above all else, for the sake of children. But it is at least an effort to better conditions which at present make it impossible for the average girl and young man to marry in the early twenties, when the call to love and mate is most gloriously urgent. Do not economic conditions which make marriage financially impossible before the thirties or forties, cheat youth of its greatest happiness and good, and cause unrest, discontent, temptation to immorality?

Let us hope that 1928 may shed further light on this problem of modern romance.

Also 1928 marks a new and liberating thought about time, which in turn affects romance. There is serious talk of officially adopting a new calendar with a more convenient division of the year into months of equal length. This illustrates the fact that time is only a man-made attempt to measure the infinite and has no real existence except as a convenience. All that exists is NOW.

"I am going to cultivate charm this year," resolved Jill, last New Year's. "I am going to be sweet to Jack and not nag or try to make him over my way. Instead, I am going to make myself over.

"I'm going to love my housework—even dish-washing—and make home the sweetest place on earth for Jack and Baby. I'm always going to look attractive, even when I'm doing the housework.

"I'm going to try to understand and sympathize when Jack is too tired to take me out evenings and, also, when he wants to go to his club, now and then. I am going to make 1927 the best year, happiest year of our marriage."

This entry in her diary was followed by the postscript: "Jan. 1—A lovely day—lived up to my resolutions—Jack was a perfect darling."

There were no more entries until March. Then Jill wrote: "Dear me! I forgot all about my resolutions after New Year's Day. Things are going all wrong. But what's the use! New Year's is past!"

Jill may well remember that every day begins a new year as surely as January first.

Make every day New Year's—a day of understanding affection. Then 1928, and all succeeding years should bring romance, fresh love that never grows dull or old, marriage that will succeed because it is the union of two who are unselfishly devoted to each other. And that is the secret of successful marriage, whether it is old-fashioned or according to the 1928 model.

A very happy New Year to you, one and all, dear girls.

HER HUSBAND'S SECRETARY

By William Almon Wolff

John Calls Eileen

JOHN MacVEAGH came back from the West and, characteristically, went first to his office. It was Margaret Drew's voice, cool, fresh, oddly and subtly insolent, that first made Eileen aware of his return.

"Mrs. MacVeagh? Mr. MacVeagh would like to speak to you—will you hold the wire?"

John's voice came to her a moment later, cheerful, hearty.

"Hello, dearest! Here I am back—rushed right to the office to start catching up. Any plans for tonight?"

"Why, no!" Her voice was cool. She'd had to fight, for a moment, the sheer, thrilling surge of joy his voice had brought her. "Did you want to do anything?"

"Nothing but see you. I've missed you. I thought we might work in a quiet evening together, just the two of us."

"I'd love to," said Eileen, matter of fact. "You'll be dining here, then?"

"Yes," he said. He sounded a little dashed, and Eileen smiled, sadly. "Yes. We'll dine together and sit around afterward and talk. It's a dog's age since we've done that, just you and I."

"It's been a long time, hasn't it?" said Eileen. "Do you know what time you'll get home?"

"It'll be late—better not have dinner too early."

"It doesn't matter. I'll order it for eight—that ought to give you time to have a bath and change. You'll be tired after all your traveling."

"Maybe—I'm not tired now, though. I never felt better in my life. All right—I'll make it as early as I can. But I've a lot of work to do that's piled up while I've been away."

Eileen smiled as she hung up the receiver. She wondered how Margaret Drew had enjoyed hearing one side of that conversation. Eileen had a far shrewder and better understanding of the situation in which John found himself at his office than Margaret suspected; the girl had been foolish to give herself away, the day Eileen had gone there, to the extent that she had.

Margaret was, in point of fact, furious—and it was all the worse because it was so utterly impossible for her, even with her extreme views, to show her feelings. There was something of an air of bravado about John MacVeagh as he turned back from the telephone and picked up again the digest she had had against his return of what had been done in his absence. He looked like a little boy caught in some bit of mischief and determined to brazen it out, Margaret thought.

But, though that look was one of the things she loved about him, it only irritated her now. She understood perfectly what he had done, the significance of that talk of his with his wife, every word of which she was bound to hear. He was putting her in her place: he had reached a decision, while he had been away, and it was a decision to push her out of the empty place in his life that she had found and was determined, at any cost, to occupy.

Her lip curled, secretly, as she came to that conclusion. If he wanted to stage the age-old farce—let him! She wasn't afraid, she told herself. He was hers; she had won him, whether or not he knew it, in these months of a growing intimacy. She had been a fool, perhaps, to show her hand so plainly the other night, but young Ransome's interference in her life had maddened her, goaded her to say things she would, except for him, have continued a time, until the right moment had come, to keep to herself.

It might well be, now, that John MacVeagh, put on his guard by her rash outbreak, her revelation of her feeling for him, might make an effort to patch things up with his wife. But of the outcome of that effort Margaret was not afraid.

Her opinion of Eileen had crystallized. She had seen her only once, but she knew a hundred things about her calculated to increase her confidence in herself. Eileen was, she knew it, a drone, an idler, a woman utterly unfitted to be the mate of a man like John MacVeagh. And—he knew that, too; he had been growing in his knowledge all these months.

There was nothing essentially vicious or wanton about Margaret Drew. She was starved; it came to that. Circumstances had denied her a natural, normal outlet for all the subtle and mysterious forces that had gathered in her in her adolescence. She had become, in relation to the MacVeaghs, to John and Eileen, an infinitely dangerous force. Eileen she could not hope to understand; she had classified her with the sinister facility common to so many girls of her generation, and quite falsely.

Loose thinking, loose talking, loose reading, had gone to the unbalanced development of Margaret. She had grown up in a world rent and torn apart by the tragic upheaval of the war. The effects of that conflict, with its ghastly destruction in the old world, not only of life and property, but of standards of every sort, had stretched swiftly to America; the Americans of Margaret's generation were afire to share the experiences of their European contemporaries without having suffered what had brought about the turmoil over there.

As for John, he had been thinking hard while he was away. He had come back far from a conclusion, but with certain things definitely clear in his mind. He wanted no breach with Eileen, no shoddy, upsetting intrigue with Margaret. But his thinking had been one-sided; he had considered the problem only from his own point of view. Beyond a casual, insincere—because not fully thought out—admission that he had, perhaps, been unkind and neglectful, he had not even attempted to visualize Eileen's state of mind.

He was going home, in effect, to lay down terms and conditions for their future. He had worked out what their relation was to be; he had decided what each must bring to it. It did not so much as occur to him that it took two people to make a programme such as his come true; that he might be going home, not to a simple statement of what he wanted by himself, but to a searching discussion upon the outcome of which the whole future of his marriage would depend.

To Be Continued.

INTRINSIC WORTH

By Lucy Lowell.

FRIENDS who write me occasionally, speculating upon what they must do to make others like them, might meditate upon the theory held by Emerson—that it isn't necessary to do anything; merely to be.

LUCY LOWELL

Those whose liking we wish are those who for some reason merit our admiration. Persons of character, achievement; those, necessarily, of keen and sensitive perception.

It is not, therefore, by any planned and practised actions or attitude, nor by the ability to say graceful nothings pleasantly, they will judge us; it is by what they perceive to be underneath our social exterior—by our own characters.

If we feel sincerity, kindliness, nobility in our hearts, these others will see us as sincere, kindly and noble, even though we fail to exchange with them more than the most perfunctory of greetings for those things are what we shall be.

It is impossible to wear a false exterior in the presence of the truly admirable.

Read what Emerson wrote:

"A great man is coming to eat at my house. I do not wish to please him; I wish that he should wish to please me. I will stand here for humanity, and, though I would make it kind, I would make it true. Let us affront and reprimand the smooth mediocrity and squalid contentment of the times, and hurl in the face of custom and trade and office the fact which is the upshot of all history—that there is a great Thinker and Actor moving wherever moves a man: that a true man belongs to no other time or place but in the center of things.

"Where he is, there is Nature. He measures you and all men and all events. You are constrained to accept his standard."

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

MANY joys the year discloses,
Many pleasures it can boast;
But the time of planting roses
Brings a dearer joy than most.
Planting roses, planting beauty
In the dark and senseless soil;
Planting loveliness to brighten
Quiet hours after toil.
Friends may leave our pathways lonely
So life seems an empty husk;
But the roses will be waiting,
Souls of sweetness, in the dusk.
Planting roses is but planting
Gladness when the sap will rise,
Planting sweets for birds to sing to,
Future joy for butterflies.
Planting roses—planting beauty
Springtime's garland to adorn,
Planting color, fragrance, graces
For the hours yet unborn!

Correct Forms And Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Widow's Signature.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
How should a widow sign her name? Should she sign the same on business papers as on her social letters and cards?
A READER.

A WIDOW signs her name just as she did when her husband was alive. Her visiting cards carry the same formal name: "Mrs. Edward Ames Haven." Her checks are still signed: "Mary Burgess Haven." And her business letters or letters to anyone who must be informed of her formal name are signed:

Very truly yours,
MARY BURGESS HAVEN.
(Mrs. Edward Ames Haven.)

Most business papers she signs "Mary Burgess Haven," as she does her checks, but, if necessary, she adds her formal name in parenthesis, as she does in her business letters.

Table Hint

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
What is the proper way of eating fried chicken? As it is difficult to get all the meat off the bone, I am in doubt as to the way of eating it.
A READER.

THE only way to eat fried chicken is to develop enough patience and skill and grace to use the knife and fork in cutting the meat from the bone. If we are dining with someone we must not take the piece of chicken in our fingers to eat it, for this is a most unpleasant sight to other guests. It is messy on her fingers, and then, when we wipe our fingers on our napkins it makes a messy looking napkin.

Choice of Head-dress

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I am to be married next month and expect to wear a tan satin-faced crepe dress. What should I wear on my head? The wedding is to be at my home at 12 o'clock. I do not care to wear a hat.
BRIDE-TO-BE.

IT is not necessary that you wear a hat or a head covering of any kind, since you are to be married in your own home.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

SHADOW KIDS

VEGETARIAN DIET

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU are advised by Mr. Sibley that the "vegetarian" boys held their own in football, cricket, running and swimming contests, and averaged more than their proportionate number of places in the school elevens. In the Summer of 1924 they took four out of the first ten places in the 220 yards swimming championships, and two of them won, respectively, the challenge cups for Scouts over and under sixteen for all the southwest of England.

DR. CHAS. A. L. REED

A vegetarian life, though it does not protect a boy from infectious diseases, lessens the chance of complications and makes recovery quicker, in Mr. Sibley's experience. Nevertheless, in the big influenza epidemic of 1918 an unexpectedly big proportion were immune, and in a smaller epidemic this year the number of victims was only 23 per cent of the vegetarians as against 50 per cent and 55 per cent in the other houses. Boils and constipation are comparatively rare among vegetarians.

Mr. Sibley concludes from what I have told you that a "vegetarian" diet, scientifically pursued, not only gives equally good health, but promises greater freedom from common ills, and allows the brain to function more freely and effectively.

The point about Mr. Sibley's "vegetarian" diet is that it is far from being an exclusively vegetarian regimen. His eggs, cheese, milk and butter, are frankly of animal origin. He does not say whether his soups contain meat stocks. If not they are rather poor excuses for soups. Of course, by virtue of the protein contained in its animal elements as given, the diet is fairly well-balanced. It makes but little difference whether you get your protein from meat or other animal products, just so you get it.

Meat is only a convenient way of taking protein—the energy producing element of your diet—and it makes no difference whether you get it by eating an egg or the hen that laid the egg. But when you take it through animal products you are not taking it through vegetables. There are vegetables, notably maize and lentils, that carry a high protein content and that help to maintain somewhat of a balance in diet if they are given due representation on the bill of fare. But the experiments of Mr. Sibley are extremely interesting as showing how, by using the animal products he enumerates, an attractive and fairly balanced diet may be worked out with a preponderance of vegetables.

Entire Field of Woman's Interest Completely Covered Each Day

Man Who Watches His Fiancee Not Paying Her Compliment, Says Dix

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am engaged to a young man. My friend is also engaged. Her fiance watches her like a hawk to see that she does not go out with other fellows and drops in on her unexpectedly to see what she is doing. My fiance never watches me. He says: "I trust my girl." Don't you think that if he really loved me that he would watch me like the other fellow does?"

BERNICE.

Answer:

Why, you poor silly girl, jealousy isn't a proof of love. It is only manifestation of suspicion. It isn't a compliment. It is an insult.

You seem to be peeved because your sweetheart trusts you. He trusts you because he has a belief in your honor and honesty and he is sure in his own heart that you will go straight. The other young man has no such belief in his girl. He thinks that she will lie to him and cheat and that he cannot trust her to be true to him when she is out of his sight.

It seems to me that a man could not possibly offer a girl a dealier insult than to spy on her and to make unexpected visits just to see if his suspicions of her are correct, and I think that if that girl had a particle of pride in her she would resent his suspicions and refuse to marry him. And, believe me, if she did she would save herself a lot of misery, because a jealous husband makes his wife's life a hell on earth to her.

There is nothing that she can do that will satisfy him, because no matter how discretely she conducts herself he will always find something to be suspicious about. She won't be able to do the simplest thing without his attributing a sinister motive to it.

I have known women whose husbands kept them virtual prisoners and who were cut off from all association even with other women by their husband's jealousy. They couldn't speak to any man without their husbands accusing them of having a rendezvous with the baker. They couldn't step around to the corner grocery to buy a loaf of bread without their husbands accusing them of having a redezvous with the baker. They couldn't even gossip over the back fence with a neighbor woman without their husbands trying to eavsdrop into the conversation.

Jealousy is the worst fault a husband can have and it is incurable, because it is an insanity. So never regret that you are not marrying a jealous man. As for the watching business, that's the silliest thing on earth, because the espionage system always breaks down. If a man's wife wants to deceive him she can always do it. And, anyway, anybody who has to be watched isn't worth marrying.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Is it fair that a woman should have to give up her name when she marries? Further, is it fair that the children shall all bear the father's name when it is the mother who goes down into the valley of the shadow of death to give them life? Of course, the father is proud of having his children bear his name, but we mothers, too, would be glad and proud to have our sons and daughters bear our names, and it seems to me that any fair-minded person should be willing to concede that much to the mother.

A MOTHER.

Answer:

Lucy Stone held the same views that you do and a society has been formed called "The Lucy Stone League" of women who have kept their maiden names after they were married.

The custom of a woman taking her husband's name and of children bearing their father's name is merely a matter of convenience and identification of a family group and for the transfer of property. It seems to me unimportant, but if it makes a woman any happier to call herself after marriage Miss Mary Jones instead of Mrs. Bill Smith, by all means let her do it.

DOROTHY DIX.

BEWARE OF COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.—(adv.)

Serve in compote glasses, topped with a dash of whipped cream.

QUESTION: J. E. C. asks: "Is there a remedy that you could recommend for checking perspiration without injury to health?"

ANSWER: Any "remedy" that will check excessive perspiration would be injurious to the health. If I recommended any such remedy to you, it would be much the same as if I prescribed some method of treatment which would make you breathe less. Choking up the sweat glands is just as detrimental as interfering with respiration.

QUESTION: W. D. M. asks: "Is there a cure for facial neuralgia? Six years ago I had an operation for necrosis of the jawbone caused by infection from the dentist's forceps. Have had X-ray treatments and about forty chiropractic adjustments, but the pain comes back.

ANSWER: Your trouble is a difficult one to cure since it is caused by an infection in the injured jawbone. Your only hope lies in getting your blood in good condition, as it is your own blood that must do the repairing of the injured parts. Stop treating the jaw locally, but try and get the entire alimentary canal in good condition. Remove all irritation in the intestines through systematic dieting and a course of enema treatments. This procedure I have found the most helpful in overcoming facial neuralgia.

QUESTION: Amie asks: "What causes red spots like little specks of blood to appear under the skin? There are a few on my face, and all over my body."

ANSWER: Your blood capillaries are breaking down because they do not contain enough calcium or other mineral matter. This may be due to your not eating foods containing these minerals, or simply because they are destroyed after eating by an acidosis in your system produced by a diet that is improperly balanced from the standpoint of physiological chemistry.

Holland's Golden Wedding Day

COLONEL FRANK P. HOLLAND of Dallas is the dean of Texas publishers. The colonel and Mrs. Holland celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Christmas day. Colonel Holland is the head of the Farm and Ranch Publishing company and the publisher of Holland's Magazine. He received a thousand telegrams from admiring friends the world over.

He was married on Christmas day 50 years ago. He was a resident of Austin more than 50 years ago. He established the Farm and Ranch more than 50 years ago.

A very busy man for many, many years, the dean of Texas publishers is as active as ever and planning for his winter fishing and hunting trip to the Gulf coast section of Texas.

A Victory For Decency

RECEIVERS for the Mammoth Oil company will return the Teapot Dome lease in a Wyoming Salt Creek field to the United States navy December 28, as decreed by the supreme court of the United States.

Harry S. Sinclair and his associates will be stripped of their royal possessions. Decency will be given a winning on that day, honesty will be given a big boost and official integrity will perch itself on the top of the Goddess of Liberty.

It appears that the plain people of the United States and the supreme court of the United States are in possession of the government.

New Laws For Italy

MUSSOLINI has given Italy a new code of law. Refusal to obey a public functionary is made a crime punishable by a year imprisonment, and whoever disturbs a religious service is to be punished from one to two years' imprisonment. Dictator Mussolini knows how to get results. He makes all the men work in Italy; he makes all the beggars get busy or leave the country. He makes all the male parasites and the female butterflies of the street work of their own accord or work in prisons or reformatories. A wonderful man is Mussolini. Why loafers? Why criminals? Why paupers who are able bodied and able to earn their own bread?

South Pittsburgh Is On The Map

SOUTH PITTSBURGH is a town in Tennessee. There are two rival factions. One faction controls the city government; the other the county government. Leaders of both factions celebrated just before Christmas. To make it peppy, they used automatic pistols and Winchester rifles. There are six jobs for the undertakers, and the doctors are busy patching up a baker's dozen participants or eye witnesses who were hit by flying bullets. In Tennessee they shoot to kill.

Mussolini as a Financier

MUSSOLINI has placed Italy on a gold standard basis. That is, he has placed the financial system of Italy on a gold standard basis. This won for the dictator the recognition of John Pierpont Morgan of New York, London, Paris, Berlin and Rome. King Morgan cabled his congratulations. Not only to Mussolini, but to Italy and its people and the gold standard nations of the world. It must be true that the Duce is in the head lines of the world every day of the year. He is almost alone in his class.

ATLANTA has been given a population of 249,000 by the guessers of the federal department of census. Birmingham, Ala., is not lagging. Birmingham is a manufacturing town, a steel center and is credited with a population of 217,000. Mobile was the best known Alabama city for a century. Moblie had many advantages. Mobile stood still. Birmingham came along and the men who made it never stood still. They worked. They were builders. They had a vision. Look at them now.

Eagle Pass On the Road

EAGLE PASS citizens voted by an overwhelming majority for a large bond issue to be used for irrigation purposes. Now the waters of the Rio Grande river will be used to make productive 60,000 acres of idle land. They are doing it every where in the Magic Valley and along the banks of the Rio Grande. Forty years hence the people then on earth will be very busy paying their bonded indebtedness to the holders of some of the wealth of America.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—"The Ladder," which an eccentric millionaire who believes in reincarnation has kept going at a cost that now amounts to over one million dollars, stopped taking money for tickets some time back. Every seat in the house was given away at the box office a few hours before the performance. This philanthropy, it seems, has been suspended, because so many holders of free tickets complained to the management about the location of their seats.

I watched a group of people on Eighth avenue who in turn were watching the operations on the new subway-to-be. Most of them seemed to bestow a patronizing glance upon the subway workers. The average salary of the male spectators was, I should judge by their appearance, about $35 a week. I know one of these subway workers. He operates a donkey engine. His salary is $125 a week. When he is washed up and dressed, he might pass for a rich young man about town. He lives in comfortable apartments and eats in the best restaurants. He has a fine library and he can talk well upon almost any subject of general interest. Yet, because he earns his living at day labor in subway construction, he is a daily comfort to starched collar clerks who look upon him and pity his lot.

When Columbia students went on a rampage recently, police reserves and the fire department both were not sufficient to control them. Police, stationed on 114th street were deluged by buckets of water, which students on dormitory roofs tossed down at them. When the fire department hitched up hoses and started to disperse the crowd with bursts of water, some of the mob went about and uncoupled the hoses, and went riding on the fire engines. This however is not the story. The peculiar part of the affair lay in the fact that one of the students was employed not as campus correspondent but as a regular reporter on a big paper. When the riot broke out, he kept in touch with both the warring factions by showing his police card to the gendarmes and by putting this away and showing his school credentials when dealing with the students. Thus his paper got a two-hour scoop on the story.

Edward W. ("Daddy") Browning couldn't keep out of the papers long. His adoption, marriage, and divorce of his child-wife "Peaches" is one of the most incredible tragi-comic episodes in contemporary American life. Now he has let it be known that, despite his silvery locks, he is more vigorous than many younger men. This he says is due to his diet which is made up wholly of raw fruits, vegetables and grain. To him, he says a dinner of oats and water is sufficient.

In the epidemic word game, the best of the current offerings is Robert C. Benchley's sentence using the word Noel: "The old oaken bucket that hangs in Noel."

Make me hear joy and gladness; that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice.

Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.

Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.

Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy spirit from me.

Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit.—Psalms, li, 8-12.

MODISH MITZI— So It's Leap Year By JAY V. JAY

They heard that the Goofer's dear Aunt Selina is dangerously ill. Mitzi hopes to cheer him up. That's why she is wearing her most fascinating black lace and chiffon gown. Does he like the chiffon drape from the shoulder? And the side drapery that extend below the hem? Conversation should take his mind off his trouble.

Polly insists upon sitting the dance out with him. He won't be able to worry about Aunt Selina if she asks him questions all the time. Does he like her tiered tulle dress? Doesn't he think this color, this Vionnet nude, is ravishing? She thought of him when she bought the dress because he'd admired one something like it.

"We'll go anywhere you like," suggested Mitzi submissively as she wraps the gorgeous painted velvet shawl with the ostrich border around her. The Goofer is overwhelmed. They'll kill him with kindness and what's it all about anyway? Actually, the girls have—well—almost run after him.

Now that he thinks of it, they've phoned him constantly. They've dated him for weeks. They've been solicitous about his health. Is the answer "Leap Year?" Is the Goofer to be more pursued than pursuing. Of course, he never mentioned that his Aunt Selina was a great aunt he'd never seen.

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of

READ THIS FIRST:

LILY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, is engaged to marry a rich bachelor named STLEY DRUMMOND. Then she falls in love at first sight with a taxi driver whom she sees on the street. He takes her home and on the way he tells her his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSAN. He adds that he is going to sell it to finance a piston ring that he has invented.

He and his cab vanish from the streets after a week or two, during which time Lily sees him every day, and she begins to miss him so much that she decides she cannot marry Drummond. But her mother announces the engagement and the plans for the wedding on June tenth are made. About May tenth Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur, and when he comes he is—Pat France! After that there is no thought of marrying Drummond in Lily's mind. With her wedding dress finished and hanging in the closet, the tickets bought for a sea-voyage honeymoon, etc., she leaves the house with Pat one day after he disagrees with her mother about waiting on table and the following day she marries him in his parents' home next to their little grocery store. The only guest from Lily's world is her chum, SUE CAIN. The only wedding present is a $200 check from Lily's father, all of which she spends on clothes. She quarrels with Pat's mother, and the pair of then take a flat of their own. Lily knows she will have to do her own work, but she hates to do it, and the dishes go half-washed, the beds half-made, the house half-dusty, and the laundry piles up until Pat hasn't a single shirt left. He and Roy Jetterson, whose wife SADYE, does her best to get along with Lily, have rented a tiny machine shop for the manufacture of the piston ring, and Pat leaves for it early every morning—so early that Lily refuses to get his breakfast. So he goes to a near-by lunchroom for it, and one morning when he and Lily had quarreled because of the lack of clean clothes for him, she follows him to the little restaurant to make up. She finds him having breakfast with his old sweetheart, ELIZABETH ERTZ, a nurse. Elizabeth is just leaving when Lily begins to accuse Pat of infidelity to her. Lily created considerable of a scene in the restaurant. Finally, Pat accompanied her home and told her she must trust him, and that, in the future, she must take better care of the home. Lily tried, and their domestic ship sailed smoother for a few months. One day, Lily met SUE CAIN, an old friend, on the street. Sue invited her to a card party. Lily without funds, went to a store and tried to charge some clothes to her father. She was informed her mother had left word that "Mrs. Patrick France could not charge things to Mr. Lexington.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XXXIII

With her fingers almost touching the box, Lily began to argue with herself.

"Suppose I take it," she thought, "I might be arrested for a thief."

Then another thought came to her: "But they never would arrest me—not in this shop!" . . . Why, she had been buying clothes here in Angouleme's for years and years! They ought to have been ashamed to even telephone her mother to ask whether she still could charge to her father or not!

"I'll just take them, anyway," she finally made up her mind, "and worry about it afterward."

The girl in charge of the credit desk still had her slender back turned towards her, and without another thought Lily picked up the big pasteboard box and walked swiftly out of the store.

One or two of the black-clad saleswomen nodded to her as she went past them. . . . She had known them for a long time and they did not stop her.

There was a taxicab in the street. Lily hailed it, and in two minutes she was on her way home with the box in her arms. She laid it down on the seat beside her and peeped into it to see that everything she had ordered was in it—a golden brown chiffon dress with a fur-trimmed velvet coat to match. A golden brown hat of satin. A handbag of brown suede with a lace-edge handkerchief and a small bottle of "Blue Star" perfume in it.

She Gave His Number in a Voice That Trembled

It was half past one when she unlocked the door of the little flat.

Sue's bridge was at two.

"I can just make it if I hurry," Lily said to herself, turning on the water in the bathtub and laying out fresh underthings that she had washed and ironed with her own hands.

She could have wept tears of humiliation over the hands, themselves. They were bruised and cut and stained from all the bangs and hard work of housekeeping—from the scouring of knives and the peeling of vegetables.

"Never mind, I can manicure them a little in the cab," she said to herself. She had kept the cab, and she could hear it throbbing and panting in the street outside the house as she dressed.

The golden brown clothes were wonderfully becoming, and Lily spraying Blue Star perfume on the lining of her new hat, felt very well pleased with herself.

"I got them the only way I could have got them," she thought. "If I hadn't walked out with them, I couldn't have gone to Sue's party." And, even if a store detective came for them he wouldn't take them away, now that she had worn them. . . . Besides, Lily knew that her father would pay for the clothes rather than let her be disgraced.

"I'll call him up from Sue's house," she decided, and "ask him to call up the store and tell them it was all right for me to take them."

Yes, that was the thing to do! It was the best way to play safe. But when she reached Sue's house she forgot all about doing it.

She was late and the guest room upstairs, where she went to leave her coat and powder her nose, was filled with girls—with her old friends.

They pounced upon her with surprised squeals and shrieks when they saw her standing in the doorway of the big luxurious room:

"Why, Lily Lexington, where did you drop from?"

"Girls, look who's here? Just LOOK—"

"For goodness' sake if there isn't the runaway bride"—and so on. They might have failed to send her wedding gifts or to have anything to do with her since her marriage to Pat. But, now that she was actually among them again, they were as friendly as ever.

"Aren't you thinner than you were?" Sue's cousin, Jeanne Angell asked her, and Lily laughed and told her that she certainly was.

"If you got down on your knees and scrubbed a kitchen floor and a bathroom floor every morning of your life, you'd be thinner, too," she said, and while she was saying it, she felt as if she were talking about some other woman—some other woman who had to pack Pat's lunchbox every morning, who had to scrub floors and iron shirts and darn socks.

It seemed so natural to be here with these people she had known for years. To sit at a card table, holding a hand of bridge, and nibble chocolates from a silver dish or light cigarets from a little silver alcohol lamp beside her.

The fall day was cold, and when the game was over the tea tables were drawn up before the wood fire and Sue poured tea and chocolate with whipped cream on the top of it, and served little cakes and sandwiches.

"Oh, Sue, it's so heavenly to be in a place like this again!" Lily sighed to her when everyone but herself had said goodbye and gone. "I'm so used to getting up at six and working like a Trojan all day in that flat with not a soul to talk to but the janitress and the grocer's boy that I'd forgotten life could be easy and soft like this—" She looked around the big room where the firelight shone on silver picture frames and vases of deep red roses, on brocaded chairs and tables of inlaid wood.

In the hall a silvery-noted bell chimed five.

Five o'clock. . . . Time to go home and start Pat's supper. Time to peel the potatoes and put them on to boil. Time to set the table and cut the bread. Time to fill the water pitcher and put it in the icebox . . . Time to go back to the never-ending round of drudgery.

For the first time in three months, Lily hated the thought of it. This little taste of luxury and pleasure had seemed to wake her up to the fact that there was nothing pleasant in her own life but Pat.

Her lovely eyes, fixed on the dancing yellow flames in the grate, clouded with discontent.

"Much as I love Pat," she said to herself, "I hate being a poor man's wife."

"Jack and I had dinner with Staley Drummond the other night," Sue was remarking as she blew a long plume of cigaret smoke from her lacquerred lips. "He wondered if I ever saw you."

Lily did not answer. . . . She had not heard Staley's name in weeks, and he was becoming simply a memory to her. Some figure out of a story book, and having nothing to do with the very real problem of buying food, clothes, drugs, newspapers, and moving picture show tickets on Pat's little salary.

"He asked about me?" she wanted to know. "Oh, Sue, I was dreadful not to tell him about Pat during all that time when I was engaged to him, wasn't I—I didn't play fair with Staley."

"No, you didn't play fair with him," Sue, all frankness, answered her. "But—do you know?—I think he still cares a lot about you. Jack and I were talking it over the other night and Jack thinks so, too."

The idea that Staley might still be in love with her was curiously exciting to Lily. It stuck in her mind all the way home that night . . . . She stood in the crowded street car, hanging to a strap and jostled by the homeward-bound crowds of working people and said to herself: "One of the richest men in town is in love with me—and here I am without the price of a taxicab. Here I am, hanging to a strap, like a cash-girl, in a five-and-ten cent store!"

She was full of bitterness. . . . Without knowing what she was doing, Sue had stirred up a lot of mischief that afternoon by her careless remarks about Staley Drummond.

There was no light in the windows of the little flat when Lily turned into Derbyshire street at a quarter before six that night.

"Thank fortune!" She breathed a sigh of pure relief. . . . If Pat had been at home how on earth would she have explained the fur-and-velvet coat to him? The golden brown hat? The chiffon dress with its embroidery of little gold leaves?

"To say nothing of the Blue Star perfume bottle that I left on the dresser," she went on thinking. For Blue Star perfume cost $15 an ounce, and Pat would have known that Lily never could have bought it for herself.

As she went up the front walk, searching in her new golden-brown bag for her latch key a man stepped out from the vestibule of the apartment building.

"Mrs. Patrick France?" he asked, and Lily answered, "Yes" without thinking.

"I'd like a word with you," he said and stepped into the brightly lighted hall with her. His eyes went down over the coat, and in an instant Lily knew what had happened . . . . The Angouleme shop had sent the store detective for the clothes, or for the money they represented. . . .

"Do you mind if I ask you about the clothes you are wearing?" the man said, and Lily airly answered:

"Oh, no, go right ahead!—What is it you want to know about them?"

"There seems to have been a misunderstanding about them," he told her in a smooth even tone. "The young lady at the credit desk says that she distinctly told you you could not charge the clothes to Mr. Cyrus Lexington—"

"But he's my own father!" said Lily. "And I've always bought things at Angouleme's—although I never shall again. You come with me, and I'll telephone my father—"

She had just one thought uppermost in her mind. . . . She must get this man away from the front hall before Pat came!

We tried to get Mr. Lexington this afternoon on the telephone, and his office says he is out of town," the man objected. "My instructions are to see Mr. France—"

Lily's heart seemed to turn completely over.

"Well, we'll go and telephone him then!" she said. "He's not coming home to dinner—" That was a lie, she knew, but lies came easly to Lily. Not malicious, wicked lies, but the small white variety. She never thought of them as lies, anyway.

She thought of them as—inspirations, always!

The nearest telephone was one in the little restaurant on Boyle street. The store detective from Angouleme's cat on a high white stool and chewed gum while Lily looked up Staley Drummond's telephone number in the book. . . .

She gave it to central in a voice that trembled—his office number. He answered the telephone himself.

"Hello," she said to him. "Do you know who this is?"

There was a tiny pause. "Yes, I know," Staley answered. "You don't suppose I could ever forget your voice, child, do you?"

Harrison Urges Early Purchase of Tickets

With a word of warning to buy early to avoid disappointment, Hubert Harrison, manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce announced Friday that the sale of tickets for the annual banquet of the chamber in the auditorium of the Junior college, Friday, January 13, has started with a rush.

"Last year, and in other past years, we have been unable to take care of all those wishing to attend," Mr. Harrison said. "Those who purchased their tickets early were at the banquet. Those who tried to get their tickets late were too late, for it was impossible to accommodate as many as wished to come. Because of this, I urge those who can possibly do so, to buy their annual dinner tickets at once at the chamber offices."

The universe paused....as kings and presidents...and untold millions...paid homage to this intrepid airman.

Now read Colonel Lindbergh's own thrilling story of his spectacular dash across the perilous waters of the North Atlantic. Ed Hughes' Column

BY ED HUGHES.

Although Joe Glick appeared to be near to a championship when he fouled Tod Morgan, the consensus of right-thinking fans will be that Eddie Forbes was correct in depriving the Williamsburg tailor of possible victory. Glick, in the opinion of the writer, was in front by a small margin owing to the severe punishment he had dealt Tod in the earlier rounds. Without attempting to read the minds of the officials, it is quite within the realms of reason that Glick would have been declared the winner, although the champion was making much the stronger finish.

However, the foul fighter, whether the low hitting be intentional or otherwise, is never deserving of victory. It isn't always an easy matter to guide the direction of winging wallops in the heat of fierce mixups. Yet it is a fact that the greatest fighters of the ring have usually been accurate and legitimate hitters.

Looking at the proposition as strictly a business, probably one could conceive of the "big uns" trying to "get away" with more foul fighting than the underlyings of fistiana carving their way to the top by hook or crook. Yet it is a fact that the "big bugs" of the arena contribute less illegitimate punching than the smaller fry, who aren't always particular about where their gloves find impact.

There are various and sundry types of foul fighters. Undoubtedly there are those who are perfectly content to commit the offense to save themselves from defeat, or to help gain a victory in the event a referee will overlook the "crime." Then, again, you have another type—the wild swinger who unintentionally smacks below the belt in the excitement of battle.

The latter type is comparatively rare, for all the excuses that are made for the blokes that are continually being ruled against for low fighting. Generally speaking, it is a pretty good theory that if a man strikes foul, it is because he deliberately, and with malice aforethought, plans to do so.

Particularly if the boxer has been previously warned for the violation at some earlier stage of the battle. It is circumstantial evidence, perhaps, but certainly a scrapper leaves himself open to unfavorable criticism under such circumstances.

The thoroughly conscientious boxer, who has some principles of sportsmanship in his nature and who knows at least a little about boxing, is seldom convicted of foul fighting. Thus it is that boxers who make something of a habit of hitting low eventually become classed as wilfully dirty boxers. Nor is this without reason and just cause. The plain truth, usually, is that a fighter can keep his blows in fair territory if he is so minded, and any other kind is generally regarded as intentional—and nothing else but.

I do not say that Glick intentionally fouled in the 14th round, but the fact that Morgan was besting him in the finish didn't help his case any. Moreover, the fact that he had been previously cautioned for similar tactics certainly didn't improve his case with the referee or with the fans.

On the whole it is rather damning evidence when a fighter commits a foul the tide of battle flowing against him. The natural impression is that he has so acted to prevent defeat or to turn the tide so that it will be in his favor. The crowd, as a rule, is quick to scent this and generally the decision is founded on reasonable grounds. Morgan, for instance, was roundly cheered when Forbes decreed that he was the victor, whereas Glick, the local favorite, received scarcely any consolation from the spectators.

As noted above, it is a bad thing for a boxer to commit a foul when he is losing. Few there are who will not immediately regard the act as a way "out," and as a rule they are right in so believing.

Take, for instance, the case of Joe Gans, in his memorable 42-round struggle with Battling Nelson in the Nevada desert. Nelson, according to Referee Siler, had been hitting foul at many times during the encounter and although he did not disqualify the Dane, the matter was given due consideration in his general estimate of each boxer's fighting qualities.

Throughout a greater part of the battle, the dusky Baltimorean hit the white boy four to one and probably many though Nelson fought to win by hitting low. On the other hand, the Nelson supporters argued, and not unwisely, that Gans' wallops so befuddled the iron Dane that Bat frequently had litle control over his punching direction..

At any rate, Gans received the decision from Siler on a foul in the 42nd round, and the crowd, a thoroughly white aggregation, cheered the verdict to the echo. Like most fight crowds, it hadn't the slightest use for the gent who couldn't keep them above the belt line.

Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion, bore the name of a "dirty fighter," and certainly his record was very much against him. Wolgast's fouls usually came when he was getting the worst of it, ha[ve] the suspicion that he would [rather] in low rather than lose

[The]re two such notable in[stances] d's career. Mexican [Ritchie] had him "going" when [he] ded foul. Joe had de[cided] hat looked to be a par[ticularly] punch on the [jaw] st, in fall[ing] erican cat's wallop was unfair and the Mexican's a perfectly legitimate sock on the chin.

The two went to the floor, Wolgast dazed, while Rivers writhed in agony from the effects of the blow to the groin. The referee "charitably" picked up Rivers with his own hands, the while counting out the poor Mexican.

Wolgast was so flagrantly guilty in his fourth of Willie Ritchie when the latter won the Michigan boy's lightweight title in the 16th round. Ritchie had been giving Wolgast plenty of punishment, when Ad decided the time was ripe to "try something."

So, running true to form, he swatted Willie foul, and the championship passed into the capable hands of the Californian. There wasn't any doubt this time that Wolgast had deliberately fouled his way out of what looked like a knockout ending—with Ad the unfortunate gentleman on the canvas.

It is very incriminating to hit low when the battle is going against a boxer. That is a very good thing for Joe Glick, as well as every other boxer, to remember.

36 CYLINDERS FOR RACE CAR

1500-Horsepower Machine To Seek Record

BY HAMILTON M. WRIGHT
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

ORMOND, DAYTON BEACH, Fla., Dec. 30.—Celebrating the 25th anniversary of automobile racing in America, a series of international speed trials of the Ormond-Daytona beach where W. K. Vanderbilt, Barney Oldfield, Major H. O. D. Segrave, Tommy Milton, Ralph De Palma, and many others have made automobile history, will be held from February 15 to February 23, it has just been announced by the Daytona Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Cap. Malcolm Campbell, British speed ace whose record of 157 miles an hour in his Napier-Aero engined "Blue Bird" was cut short at Pendine Beach, Wales, last February by poor beach conditions, has written that he will be on hand to defend England's speed laurels. He has the permission the British air ministry to use one of its secretly built special 450 horse power Napier engines such as was used in winning the Schneider cup race.

36-Cylinder Motor.

J. M. White of Philadelphia, insulated automobile wire manufacturer who is completing his 36-cylinder, three motored "triplex" will also race. White's car develops 1500 horse power, weighs four tons and is the most powerful the world has ever seen.

Frank Lockhart, young American speeder, is another who will strive to travel faster than man has ever before gone on land. His medium will be a specially built Stutz. Fortunes have been spent on all these cars and it is not unlikely that a speed of 225 miles an hour will be reached. The goal, of course, by the American drivers will be to break the present straightaway record of 203.79 miles an hour set by Major H. O. D. Segrave of London on the beach here last March with his 1000 horse power Mystery S. and to bring the world's speed title back to America.

A. A. A. to Supervise.

The races will be held under the supervision of the American Automobile association.

The classic will, as a whole, be a test of the speed of cars over a measured mile on a straightaway course, with four miles to start, one mile to run and four miles to slow down. The beach is as smooth and hard as a billiard table. It is straight as an arrow, 500 feet wide at low tide and when wind and tide conditions are right, affords the most perfect straightaway course in the world.

MICKEY WALKER SUED.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Dec. 30. (AP) Suits seeking damages aggregating $103,500 were filed today against Mickey Walker, middleweight boxing champion of the world, by five persons who were in an automobile which collided with his car in Shrewsbury township on Sept. 25.

George Godfrey, Latest Dusky Threat Of Prie Ring, Will Fight Hansen

250-Pound Battler Has Won Last 17 Fights By Way Of the Knockout Route

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—George Godfrey, the black shadow of Leiperville, the 250-pound negro who has knocked out his last 17 opponents, was matched today to meet Knute Hansen, the Dane, at Philadelphia on January 23. The signing for the match was made public by Jim Dougherty, manager of Godfrey.

The clash between the big black and the giant Dane is by all odds the most important pugilistic attraction now on the calendar. It will settle the real status of the current black menace.

Hansen is the best opponent Godfrey has been asked to meet. In his last New York bout, Hansen knocked out Phil Scott, heavyweight champion of England.

Should Hansen defeat Godfrey, Rickard will be forced to enter Knute in his elimination tournament, although he is not considering him at the present time.

On the other hand, should Godfrey stop Hansen, Rickard will be in a more embarrassing predicament than ever, and he is annoyed enough right now.

Scraps With Coach

Little Mae Bowmer, famous swimming champion and holder of the world record for the 50-yard free-style event jointly with Eleanor Garratti, is charged with what is technically known as "club desertion" by her coach, Frank Holborow, who claims that she failed to properly file notice of leaving the Rolay Palms (Cal.) swimming team when she sailed for Honolulu to make her home there. Miss Bowmer, above, denies any infraction of the regulations and intimates she will fight the charges.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

Football schedules for 1928 are already drifting into the office. And along comes the list of games booked by the Army. The schedule is an interesting one, in addition to the usual games with the Navy and Notre Dame the Soldier officials have booked contests with Harvard and the Southern Methodists of Dallas, Texas.

The game with the southerners ought to give the southwest its first real change to draw nation-wide attention. And strike the first blow at alleged discrimination in the annual scramble for all-American honors.

The game is to be played at West Point, October 6.

The Southern Methodists have set a wonderful record over a span of several years. During the last five campaigns it has won 34 games, lost five and tied but seven. This record looms up as probably the best of the important colleges of the country, barring that of Notre Dame under Knute Rockne.

The game with Harvard and the Army is to be played at Cambridge and marks the first visit of the Soldier lads to Cambridge.

Carleton college, booked for November 17 at West Point, is located in Minnesota and, while not nationally known, has set a great record in football, having won the championship in its conference two years and finished runner up the third in three consecutive years.

Roger Peckinpaugh, new manager of the Cleveland Indians, is serving his novitiate as a manager but the enthusiasm of his friends over his possibilities as a manager drew him into the limelight as a prospective one some years ago.

Peck was then a member of the New York Yankees—in the early days of Miller Huggins' reign. The Yankees then were a powerful ball club mechanically at least but an inconsistent affair and there was constantly talk of "too many prima donnas," etc., due to the struggles of handling Babe Ruth and the un-called for criticisms heaped on Miller Huggin's head would have driven a more tender hearted livered individual out of the managerial game.

Some of Huggins' friends and Peck's boosters found some delight in starting agitations to oust Huggins and make Peckinpaugh manager. When Peckinpaugh was finally traded to Boston and then moved to Washington it was said by the jolly gossip mongers that he was given the cane in New York to end dissention—and remove the thorns from beneath Huggins' saddle.

Peck is not of a plotting or jealous disposition. The stories no doubt were mostly figments of the imagination. But now Roger will have a chance to show his managerial ability against no less a team than the Yankees. And whatever views he may have regarding the team and the personnel of it might be interesting, were Peckinpaugh to fall into a reminiscent mood.

Fans to Honor Smith's Memory

California U. Memorial Bench in Place

By Universal Service.

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 30—The memory of Andy Smith, late coach of the University of California football team, will be honored Saturday by the dedication of the Andy Smith bench on the side lines of memorial stadium.

The dedication ceremonies will be held previous to the kickoff in the Pennsylvania-California intersectional clash.

As Smith rose to fame on the gridiron at Pennsylvania, Saturday's game presents an ideal opportunity for the dedication of the memorial.

Robert G. Sproul, comptroller of the University of California, will deliver the dedication address, while Sydney Hutchinson, chairman of the Pennsylvania council of athletics, will represent the eastern group.

While Sproul is speaking the bench will be unveiled by the captains of the two competing varsities, Fritz Coltrin of California and Ed Hake of Pennsylvania.

On the bench is an inscription reading as follows: In tribute to Andrew Latham Smith, coach 1916-1925.

"We do not want men who will lie down bravely to die but men who will fight valiantly to live—"

"Winning is not everything, and it is far better to play the game squarely and lose than to win at the sacrifices of an ideal."

PASS RULES REVERSED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—After short debate over the changes made early this year in the football rules the American Football Coaches' association Friday approved a recommendation to eliminate the alterations affecting use of the lateral pass and the recovery of fumbled punts. The coaches voted in favor of returning to the 1926 rules affecting these features.

GIANTS START TRAINING SOON

Pitchers to Hot Springs On February 15

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The local baseball clubs are making progress with their spring training plans and soon will be treking to the southland.

Today Jim Tierney, Giants' secretary, announced the spring exhibition schedule and the athletics who are taken along with John McGraw's outfit will not be lacking work by the time the 1928 campaign rolls around.

The pitchers and catchers of the club will report to Hot Springs, Ark., on Feb. 15. They will remain there for 14 days and then will join the infielders and the outfielders who are scheduled to arrive at the Augusta, Ga., camp on March 1.

Giants Play Early

McGraw has arranged for the first exhibition game to be played on March 16, but it is likely that a game that is pending for March 19 will be staged.

The Giants' schedule at the present time calls for 22 games, but none of these contests are thus far booked with another national league team.

Bucky Harris and his Washington Senators have been given their usual portion of the games for the teams will come north again together. McGraw and Harris will take each other by the arm at Birmingham and will play seven games en tour, while two more contests are carded at Tampa, where the senators do their conditioning.

Connie Mack and his 1928 hopethis will be engaged in five games, all of them coming in succession. These games will start on March 16 and end on March 20. The Red Sox will be met in four tilts, while the Memphis club has been given its annual opportunity to cash in on some pre-season dough.

Mugsy Vs. Walt

Not to forget Walter Johnson, McGraw has also booked a game with the Newark International league club which Sir Walter pilots. This game takes place at St. Augustine on March 25.

The exhibition tour will come to a close with a game against the Cadets at West Point on April 9.

Texas League Schedule Conference Postponed to Dodge Date Conflict

No New Date For Meeting On 1928 Schedule Yet Set According to Word From Roberts

HOUSTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—Owing to a series of unforeseen difficulties, chief of which is the called meeting of the National Association of Minor leagues in Chicago on January 9, at which time the minor leagues will confer with Judge Landis on a new major-minor code, the Texas league schedule meeting has been indefinitely postponed.

President Fred Ankenman of the Houston Buffaloes, was so advised Friday when he talked on long distance with Doak Roberts, president of the Texas league. The Texas league's annual meet is slated for Shreveport this year. Ankenman declares that there is nothing to indicate that the postponement will involve a change in the meeting's site.

It was originally determined to have the Texas league meeting in advance of the national association meet but President Roberts declared that he would not have the 1928 Texas league schedule in shape to present that early. Now President Ankenman believes that the league moguls will have their meet about the middle of January. President Roberts has been ill lately and this has tended to slow down his work in drafting the 1928 schedule. Incidentally, Roberts is regarded the country over as one of the most able and efficient schedule makers in the minor leagues.

He recently advised that he would map the next season card to permit the league to split its season if it was so voted. The split season is certain to be brought up at the schedule meeting.

Stagg Drops In On Frisco Folks

Great Chicago Gridiron Coach Wins Praise

By Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 30.—Coach A. Alonzo Stagg of Chicago, known through all America as the dean of university athletic directors, dropped in quietly on San Francisco today, and appeared before the Big Ten club at the Stewart hotel.

Gray-haired and distinguished at 65 years, yet vigorous and engaging, the Chicago director is a thorough personification of the character and ideals in football, in coaching and in university affairs from which he contends so strongly.

Forty years of rich experience have mellowed the great "old man" who warms now, as ever, instantly to any subject in his field, and who never fails to see two sides of any problem approached.

Showing his open-mindedness, which has always been characteristic of him, the Chicago director said that he would be ready, willing and glad to bring one of his football teams west, if, and whenever the Big Ten group would permit. Present regulations are against post-season games, with which regulations Stagg, in general, agrees.

Director Stagg makes a strong plea for character in coaching, asking university people to seek not only good coaches, but men qualified to assume a position of real leadership, aside from coaching, in university affairs. He will never recommend a coach to a university simply on the basis of good coaching ability.

Stagg believes the success of the big ten is largely due to the development of the director system, which in turn has developed strong athletic directors at each of the universities, men who recognize problems involved in intercollegiate relationship aside from the aspect of winning or losing games.

LEWIS BEGINS TRAINING.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. (AP)—Ed "Strangler" Lewis started light training here today for his match in St. Louis February 20 with Joe Stecher to settle the world's heavyweight wrestling championship situation.

Lewis weighs about 230 pounds. He intends to knock off about 10 pounds, sending him to the mat at 220, at which figure, he says, he will be at his best.

HUDKINS REINSTATED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska "wild cat," and welterweight contender, was reinstated by the New York boxing commission Friday after a long period of suspension in this state.

Encouraged by the success of strikes of 150,000 coal and textile workers who won wage increases, 118,000 tobacco workers in Germany walked out only to find that they were locked out.

WEST ADMITS TEXANS GOOD

Hunt, Mann, Rags, Sikes And Brewster Star

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 30.—That they recognize out west the speed and strength of football as it is taught and played on the college gridirons of Texas is evidenced in the unstinted praise that came to Hunt, Mann, Matthews, Sikes and Brewster for their work on the Western eleven against that aggregation of Eastern all-Americans that Andy Kerr has assembled for the Shrine children's hospital benefit game.

Every account of the Western victory, which was accounted a staggering upset in view of the reputations enjoyed by every man-jack on the Eastern squad, gave Hunt and Mann—those two especially—just about as much credit as any two young men ever received for winning a football contest.

That was the aftermath; the homage that belonged to the Davids of the west who slew the eastern Goliaths; the applause for the victors, what is more to the point is that the ability of these men apparently was recognized on the practice field before the game.

They reported from Texas only a few days before the all-star affair and Coach "Babe" Hollingbery had but a short time to size them up. He had never seen these lads from Texas A. and M. college and Southern Methodist university and Texas Christian university play; all he had to go by was the recommendations that had won them enrollment on the Western all-star squad. On the other hand, this coast coach had seen virtually all other men at his command in action and knew fairly well what they could do; they were coast players whose capabilities were well-known to him either through personal observation or frequent discussion among experienced observers.

Now it would have been natural, one admits, if Hollingbery had trusted that game to a team made up entirely of talent he had seen or which had been seen by friends. He could have saved the Texas boys for the substitute roles and had a logical reason for it.

Therefore, it is complimentary to the extreme that four of the five texas men on the squad started the game and another was in the fray and shining brightly before it was over. Those few days of practice showed Hollingbery that the Texans were well-coached, business-like, perfectly conditioned athletes. The pick of the section, and the best men he had at this command.

Deviveros to Minneapolis.

OAKLAND, Calif., Dec. 30. (AP)—Bernie Deviveros, utility infielder of the Detroit Americans, was notified today he had been turned over to Minneapolis of the American association. His sale is part of the deal whereby Minneapolis sold Frank Emmer, infielder, to the American league club. Deviveros, an Oakland boy, was farmed out to Beaumont, Texas league, last season, and played spectacular ball at shortstop.

As Told by Them to
FRANK ERNEST NICHOLSON

By GEORGE M. COHAN

Not so long ago George M. Cohan internationally known as the star and producer of some fifteen highly successful plays, saw an advertisement in a theatrical paper inserted by a small-time booker who wanted a man to play leads in a small time review.

The man, the advertisement stated, must look like George M. Cohan and be able to give an impersonation of him. For a lark, Cohan himself called at the booker's address in answer to the advertisement.

When he reached the office, it was crowded and the booker was walking down the long line, considering each applicant with the utmost care. Presently he reached Cohan.

"No use even considering you," the booker said, "you're not the type."

And for Mr. Cohan's pet story. "An American touring in Scotland took a great fancy to a handsome collie he saw, and offered to buy it. The owner asked some questions, and on learning that it was the would-be purchaser's intention to take Jock to America, he refused to part with the dog.

'Just then an English tourist came along and also made a bid for the dog, which, though less than the offer from the American, was accepted.

"The American was very annoyed, and when the Englishman had departed he questioned the owner.

GEORGE M. COHAN

"'You told me you wouldn't sell your dog.'

"'Na, na,' replied the canny Scot, 'I said I couldna part with him. Jock weel be back in a day or two, never fear. But he couldna swim the Atlantic.'"

PAMPA GAS IN KANSAS STOVES

Wichita, Kan., Turns On Panhandle Fuel

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 30. (AP)—Natural gas from the Texas Panhandle today began pouring into a new 26-inch pipe line recently completed by the Cities Service Gas company at a cost of $15,000,000 to furnish increased gas supplies to 133 cities in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

The line from Pampa, Texas, in the Amarillo field, to Wichita is 276 miles long. Compressor stations along the line at Pampa, Mooreland, Oklahoma, and Wichita will keep up pressure to send the gas in the rest of the Cities service system from the northern terminus of the new line here.

A new compressor station has been erected at Ottawa and the Petrolia station near Chanute has been enlarged to increase the facilities for pipe line service to cities in northwest Missouri and northeast Kansas, including Kansas City.

Fourteen wells with a total volume of more than 400,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily are available for the new pipe line which has a capacity of about 70,000,000 cubic feet a day and which may be increased to 100,000,000 cubic feet daily.

Deeper Drilling Helps Burbank Oil Wells

BURBANK, Okla., Dec. 30.—Deeper drilling has given the Peters Petroleum corporation and Plains Petroleum company a big increase in their No. 8 in the southeast corner of the northwest of 17-27-6e, in the Stanley extension of the Burbank field, in western Osage county.

At 2950 feet and 42 feet in the Bartlesville sand, the well is now making 1000 barrels a day natural.

It was originally drilled into the pay at 2905 feet and at 2916 feet, it did 1000 barrels of oil and 15,000,000 feet of gas.

The Burbank field as a result increased 1674 barrels and last week averaged 26,27 barrels, from 2021 wells, a gain of two wells. Osage county did 32,774 barrels from 1823 wells and Kay county did 4733 barrels from 153 wells.

Bowers Pool May Be "Child" of Borger Field

The Bowers pool, south of Pampa, in Gray county, is an interesting area, but it is also somewhat spotted as recent developments have shown. As a result Panhandle oil men now assert that all of the pools there except Borger district are nothing more or less than offshoots from the mother pool east of Borger.

Drilling effort in the Panhandle is down to a minimum, but oil men feel that 1928 will witness much more drilling. This new work would be hastened if oil prices could be put to $1 or $1.25 a barrel. Present price of 75 cents a barrel is held too low. Premiums are being paid for Gray county oils.

Oil Dictionary Shows What Makes "Bus" Go

Now oildom has its Webster. "What Makes the Old Bus Go?" is the title of a very interesting booklet just received in Wichita Falls from the American Petroleum institute, which in reality is a dictionary of terms used in the oil business, whitten so the motorist can have a better understanding of "what makes the old bus go."

grees above zero, the thermometer in Wichita Falls stood at 27 degrees, and the weather was even warmer in Fort Worth.

Weather conditions in Wichita Falls for the 24 hours ending at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon showed the coldest temperature of the day to have been at 5 o'clock. At one time during the day the thermometer stood at 64 degrees. A northeast breeze was blowing, and it gradually increased to a north wind as the night grew colder and colder. Clouds filled the sky. The barometer stood at 29.27.

Big Alcohol Demand

Filling stations were doing a rushing business in the sale of radiator alcohol and many automobiles which stand out in the weather the major portion of the year, were seeking the shelter of the garages.

Plans for New Year's parties in many places were being reconstructed to allow for the almost certain fact that the new year will get a cold reception Saturday night.

COLD WAVE MOVES OVER MIDDLEWEST.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 30. (AP)—A severe cold wave with scattered snowfall and temperatures of zero or below swept into the Middlewest and Southwest today from the Rocky Mountain region, where the whining year was recording the most severe weather of the winter in some sections.

Although the snow generally was light, the fall at Kansas City was expected to reach two inches during the night, being the heaviest of the winter.

First effects of the cold snap were felt in Western Kansas last night when thermometers dropped quickly with a minimum of two degrees above zero at Goodland, near the Colorado line. Only light snow flurries were reported. Temperatures of zero to five below were predicted for Kansas tonight.

In the mountain states temperatures dropped as low as 30 degrees below zero at Marysville, in northeastern Montana, which was experiencing the coldest weather of the winter. Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico were in the grip [illegible] storm. Snowfall in those [illegible] light but more was predicted along with zero temperatures.

between Hickman and several murders committed in the neighborhood of Chicago last fall.

Jerome Walsh, Kansas City attorney representing Hickman, conferred with the prisoner for two hours in the office of County Jailer Dewar this morning. Hickman appeared to be in much better spirits after the conference, details of which Walsh refused to reveal. It was known, however, that Hickman has been told not to do any more talking on the subject of his case.

Walsh declared he has not yet outlined his course in representing Hickman.

Grand Jury to Act.

The county grand jury will be asked to return murder in indictments against Hickman and Welby Hunt, his youthful accomplice in the Toms slaying, at a session next Tuesday, according to the district attorney's office.

On the same day Hickman will enter his plea to kidnaping and murder charges in the Parker case.

The grand jury is expected to go into the death of Abner Driskell, Hunt's grandfather, who was found, a reported suicide, beneath Pasadena's "suicide bridge" last May. For a time, early last year, both Hickman and Hunt lived at Driskell's home.

It was said that on the day Driskell died he had gone to the bank in Los Angeles where both youths worked as messengers and drawn out a considerable amount of money. This was not found on the body, it was declared.

Charred Note Found.

Police reported today that they had found in a tea kettle in the apartment formerly occupied by Hickman, charred pieces of a note which bore, among other words and phrases, the name of "Perry M. Parker," father of the slain girl. The writing was said to be that of Hickman.

FREDERICKSBURG MURDER INVESTIGATION REVIVED.

AUSTIN, Dec. 30. (AP)—Questioning of William Edward Hickman confessed slayer of a California school girl and druggist, in connection with the mysterious death of a 12-year-old girl near Fredericksburg, Texas, last September, is sought in telegram Friday to District Attorney Asa Keyes at Los Angeles from Deputy Sheriff J. E. McClain here.

Details of the discovery of the unidentified girl's body in a shallow grave were related in the telegram, which explained that Hickman is believed to have "been in Central Texas" near the time of the supposed crime, still unsolved. The telegram followed statements of Welby Hunt purporting to implicate Hickman with him in Dallas and Fort Worth robberies last October.

Several soldiers at Camp Sam Houston, Texas, were among the several persons questioned after the makeshift grave was opened near a main highway out of Fredericksburg.

possemen beat the thickets a score of miles to the south.

Tracks found in the river bottoms bore mute testimony of the physical condition of the men, officers said. They were only 10 or 12 inches apart, whereas a man normally strides 28 inches or more. Marks also showed that they even had to crawl up slight inclines.

Hill insisted that if it had not been for Helms' delirium they would have escaped. Helms, he said, prevented their flight because of his condition, and he was afraid to leave him because he was "crazy."

WICHITA FALLS WOMAN MADE SANTA CLAUS SUIT.

CISCO, Texas, Dec. 30. (AP)—Admitting that she made the Santa Claus suit and purchased the mask worn by Marshall Ratliff, leader of the bandit gang who robbed the First National bank of Cisco last Friday, Mrs. Frances Herron, of Wichita Falls, today made a detailed statement to J. M. Williamson, mayor of Cisco.

Mrs. Herron told Williamson that Henry Helms, another of the bandits, not only is an ex-convict, automobile thief and bank robber, but he operated a "dope line" from El Paso to Tulsa, Okla., and had told her the names of numerous physicians enroute to whom he sold smuggled narcotics.

She said that Helms, Ratliff and Robert Hill, the third surviving Cisco bandit, lived with her at Wichita Falls for several months prior to the holdup. She said that the night before the robbery the three men gave her money and she purchased a supply of canned food for the trio. The men left and came back later that night driving in a high powered automobile which they told her belonged to L. E. Davis, the bandid who was mortally wounded in the bank robbery. They told her whom to notify "in case anything goes wrong," she said. She said the aid was given through kindness and not to violate any laws.

The woman was being held on a charge of accessory after the fact. Federal officers are expected to make a further investigation of the woman's story.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—Pre-holiday realizing was absorbed on comparatively moderate setbacks in the cotton market today. After easing off early to 19.64, March advanced 19.79, a net gain of 10 points and new high ground for the present movement, closing at 19.79. The general market closed steady, net unchanged to two points higher.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 to 7 points, active months showing net gains of about 5 to 8 points after the call on covering and local buying inspired by a bullish view of the cotton goods situation.

The market met considerable cotton on the advance which seemed to include a little southern selling as well as realizing, and prices eased off, May selling down to 19.80 and July to 19.75, or about 2 to 5 points net lower.

Trade interests were buyers on the decline, including houses with uropean and Liverpool connections, and, as the selling tapered off, the market firmed up again on a renewal of covering accompanied by reports of a firm spot situation in the south. It seemed absorption of early offerings had left the market comparatively bare of contracts, and the advance extended to 19.95 for May and 19.86 for July, the general list showing net gains of about 10 to 12 points. Offerings increased as prices worked into new high ground, however, and the close was several points off from the best under a renewal of realizing.

Cotton cloth statistics indicating that sales during the first 11 months of the year had represented 98.4 per cent of production for the period, were more or less generally commented upon as indicating a healthy situation.

Private cables reported trade calling with covering and speculative buying in Liverpool; fair sales of light cotton cloths for India and that satisfactory results were reported at the Shanghai auctions.

Port receipts today 19,139 bales. U. S. port stocks 2,598,824. Exports 34,471, making 3,851,285 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30. (AP)—The cotton market was quiet today in advance of the holiday here Monday. Trading was moderate and prices were narrow. The market closed 8 points net lower to 7 points higher.

After opening four points up to 19.84 and soon reaching 19.86, January declined to 19.65, later rallying to 19.77 and closing at 19.67, seven points net higher.

Liverpool was one point better than due and private cables reported active buying and light selling. First trades here showed gains of four to six points and prices soon advanced to 19.84 for March and May, or 14 to 16 points above the previous close.

Later in the morning the market turned easier on longs realizing and on selling due to the western rains and promises of severe cold weather which, it was thought, would kill most of the boll weevils. March declined to 19.68 and May to 19.70.

In the afternoon the market eased off on a renewal of liquidation in advance of the holidays and, although January held fairly firm the later months made new lows, at 19.67 for March and 19.66 for May. The close was steady, 3 net lower for March and four points net lower for May. The closing tone was steady.

Exports for the day totaled 82,625 bales; for the week 121,047.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. BOSTON, Dec. 30. (AP)—Reports issued today by the United States department of commerce say a slight recession took place during November in the activity of most lines of wool manufacturing machinery. The exceptions were a very slight increase in the activity of woolen spindles and a moderate increase in the activity of carpet looms. Recession was moderate in the case of cloth looms as well aswoolen card and worsted combs. In all cases except carpet and rag looms, which were slighlly more active, the rate of activity was less than November last year.

DRYGOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—Cotton goods were quieter in the gray goods division today with prices firmer. Wash fabrics agents are expecting an active spring trade. Raw silk was firmer at Yokohama. Printed silks sold more steadily. One of the largest manufacturers of silk hosiery has reduced wholesale prices from 35 cents to 50 cents a dozen, the steepest cut being made on finer qualities. Burlaps were firmer at Calcutta and a moderate amount of business in passing here.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. (AP)—Wheat prices tended downward today influenced by an apparent lull in North American wheat export business and also by snowfalls in domestic winter wheat territory. Closing prices were unsettled and unsettled ⅛ to ½c net lower, with corn and oats each at ¼c decline to ⅛c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10c.

Corn values were easy, influenced over weather for the handling of new grain. Oats followed corn.

Provisions were firmer, helped by steadiness of the hog market.

DUN'S REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. (AP)—Dun's tomorrow will say:

The letharzy in business which invariably prevails at this period has been somewhat relieved by the more vigorous action of buyers in certain prominent markets. A general deferring of important commitments until after the year-end would be quite natural, yet several instances of an opposite tendency have appeared at a time when they least, to be expected. The conspicuously large orders for railroad equipment, supplemented by augmented demands from some other sources, have further bettered the status of the iron and steel industry, which has been steadily emerging from its comparatively recent inertia.

That such a trend should be manifested now in a trade whose developments have a wide significance, is a tangible reason for encouragement, and it has served to strengthen sentiment. There are moreover, some added favorable features in the textile field, comprising purchase of cotton goods in a volume not equalled in a number of months, and a continued stiffening of prices in that division.

Weekly bank clearings $3,224,783,000, which is practically identical with the amount of a year ago.

Independent Steels and Specialties Take Lead In Stock Market With Industrials Quiet

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Independent steels and the specialties took the leadership of another generally strong market today while the standard industrials quited. Armour B was the outstanding leader as group work continued, while others to forge to the front were Inland Steel and Youngstown, as well as American International. Railway equipments remained prominent although the rail stocks quieted at slightly higher average price level.

Strength in the outstanding leaders was due largely to special influences while the general list reflected the year-end evening up of commitments by professionals. Calling of $50,000,000 loans, the substantial increase in borrowing and $10,000,000 more gold shipments failed to unsettle the market.

Cotton rallied on favorable trade news while the grain market held still in dull trading. European currencies slipped off slightly while other monies ruled firm. The call rate held at 5 1-2 per cent despite the big amount called to take care of he $700,000,000 odd January 1 disbursements.

Pressed Steel Car moved higher as did Lima while the other equipments held strong. The recent buying in the equipments, it is reported, is due to special developments in several companies in addition to the larger orders placed by the carriers as reported by the Steel Trade Reviews. The tobacco interests who recently acquired control of Pressed Steel Car talk of a dividend soon as a result of earnings of over $6 a share and as soon as the split-up is consummated they have plans for expansion of the activity of the company. There was a report that Baldwin would take in Combustion but that report was "bunk," floated coincident with the Combustion pool work. The Cuttens and their associates, holding control of Baldwin, do plan acquisition of other properties. They cannot sell so must try to make their stock worth something. They most desire Westinghouse and are reported also to have flirted with Refractories and Steel Foundries.

Canada Dry was one of those specialties to enjoy greater prominence. It responded to resumed pool operation by the same interests who were responsible for the last advance. Durant's name was connected with the operation again. Business Machines moved higher coincident with a rumor that it would take in the Burroughs company. The Business Machines folks laugh at the report, stating that their company has no intention of taking in any other concern as it is better off than any other in the industry as it stands and would have to pay too hop a price, under current conditions, for control of any other company.

A new high for the move in Armour was credited to operations of Chicago interests based on expectations of long pull possibilities. With the agreement reached with the British, the meat packers, it was pointed out, are free from foreign troubles. The industry has been struggling almost since the close of the war under conditions that made it necessary to effect every possible economy and for the first time in years looks ahead with optimism.

There was another rumor afloat that the commerce commission would hand down a favorable St. Paul decision before the close of the week. From the number of times similar reports have proved false in the last fortnight it is evident there is no leak from the commission. The entire railroad list waits on the decision, for if favorable, it would create better feeling toward the carriers' stocks, which find it impossible to advance in the face of generally disappointing earnings.

Sinclair held firm in the leak of the oils along with Marland. Mystery as to the reason for Sinclair strength remains unsolved. The latest idea in banking circles is that there soon will be a new head to the corporation. Standard of Indiana is mentioned as possibly acquiring control in order to have full ownership of the pipe line and crude oil sales organizations, now held jointly with Sinclair. In the event of such development, it was pointed out, certain properties of the corporation could be advantageously disposed of so that the federal trade commission would not deem it necessary to take action.

The public, the pools, et al, enjoying the bull market as the eleventh hour of 1928 strikes, pay no attention to gold shipments, record brokers loans or tight money. Nevertheless, easy money has been the foundation of the Coolidge bull market, of which 1928 has been the outstanding year. Gold shipments as a result of today's exports will reach near $75,000,000 for December, the largest for any month since January, 1925. A flood of bullish tips, rumors and reports entirely overshadows the indication given by the foreign exchange market of further shipments next month. But those taking profits remember good news is always plentiful in a distributing market.

TEXAN DENIES 'SACK MURDER'

Former Doctor at Waco Held at Los Angeles

RESIDED AT WACO.
By Universal Service.

WACO, Dec. 30.—Dr. Charles McMillan, held on a murder charge in Los Angeles, was a practicing physician in Waco until shortly after the World war when he was convicted in federal court of violating the narcotic law, according to Drs. J. M. Witt and J. R. Ferrell.

McMillan, Dr. Witt said, was refused membership in the McClennan County Medical society during his residence in Waco.

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—Interrogation of Dr. Charles M. McMillan at the sheriff's office today failed to shake his original declaration that he had had nothing to do with the "sack murder" of Mrs. Amelia Appleby, widow of John S. Appleby of Chicago, millionaire inventor of binder twine. Dr. McMillan was taken today to the undertaking parlor to view the body of Mrs. Appleby, which was found bound in a canvas sack at Fernando, on Christmas day. He said the body, which was identified until yesterday, looked like Mrs. Appleby, but declared that he did not kill her.

Publication was made by Mrs. Appleby, Engle Rock, son of Mrs. by a former marriage, who told sheriff's investigators the woman had been left a dollar estate when her husband died in Chicago 10 years ago. Of this, most of this had been lost in litigation.

Chicago Woman Wealthy

Investigators said, however, that they believed Mrs. Appleby still had considerable property holdings in Chicago.

Dr. McMillan was arrested last night for questioning. Thus far no charge has been filed against him. Sheriff's officers reported learning that he had often visited Mrs. Appleby and that when she was last seen she was leaving her home in an automobile with him.

They said that when they went to his home they found him examining her personal papers, which included a power of attorney to him and a will, signed by her, bequeathing him her property. These papers were being checked by the sheriff's office today.

Examination of Mrs. Appleby showed she had been struck on the head, probably with a club, and strangled with a dish towel. The wrists and ankles were bound together at her back, the cord being tied in surgeon's knots, deputies declared. The body tied in a sack, was found Christmas night in a clump of bushes three miles from San Fernando. Identification was finally established through a peculiarly shaped finger nail.

Husband's Death Mysterious

John S. Appleby, the Chicago inventor, is said to have died mysteriously in 1917. At that time his son demanded an investigation to ascertain if Appleby had been poisoned. Nothing came of this, it was said. Mrs. Appleby, who came to Los Angeles some time after her husband's death, had property holdings in Chicago according to investigators, on Kenmore street; Broadway; Barry avenue and Sheffield street.

Dr. McMillan is said to have come here from Colorado, Texas, several years ago. He also resided in Waco, Texas, at one time.

300 to Greet Rotary's Prexy

A sing-song after dinner will be led by Mayor Shepherd. Following introduction of individual guests and visiting clubs, a quartet composed of Mrs. Luella B. Thompson, Mrs. Wayne Holes, Mayor Shepherd and John Kilgore, will sing, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Shepherd.

Invocation will be pronounced by Dr. N. F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church and benediction by Rev. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the First Methodist church.

Filling suit-case with facts and figures and a hand-bag with clothing, Mr. Sapp, in 1924, chairman of Rotary's business methods committee, started out in search of trade associations. As a result of his work, by the first of 1925, half a hundred trade bodies and professional associations had adopted codes of standard practice.

Honored for Work.

It was largely because of the record he made as chairman of the business methods committee that Mr. Sapp was named first vice president of Rotary International at the Cleveland convention in 1925. In 1926 he took over the chairmanship of the constitution and by-laws committee. At the convention of Rotary International held in Ostend, Belgium, this year, Mr. Sapp was unanimously selected president of the organization, just 10 years after he first became a Rotarian in his home town, Huntington, Ind.

As stepping stones to a legal career, Mr. Sapp explained that it was necessary for him to first learn tree surgery and boarding house management. After serving as tree surgeon, boarding house manager, school teacher and educational worker, he graduated from the Indiana law school in 1912. He has practiced law in Huntington since graduation.

Earned Education.

Graduating from the high school of Ravenna, Ohio, his birthplace, in 1903, Mr. Sapp worked his way through Ohio Wesleyan university, securing an A. B. degree there in 1907.

In addition to his position with Rotary International, Mr Sapp is a member of the board of directors of the National Layman's Missionary movement. He also has served as director of the Y. M. C. A. in Huntington.

J. H. Wiley Exonerated of Blame In Fatal Auto Accident at Electra

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Dec. 30.—J. H. Wiley of Wichita Falls, who had been held in connection with the accidental death of Mrs. R. L. Horton in an automobile collision early Thursday night, was exonerated of blame for the accident in a hearing this afternoon before Justice of the Peace Ed C. Wilson.

Release of Wiley was ordered after evidence given by several witnesses brought out that Mr. Horton was afflicted with defective eyesight, and at the time of the accident was going at an excessive rate of speed, Judge Wilson said. Mrs. Horton, 25, who lived near Cooper, Texas, was instantly killed when the car in which she was riding with her husband and other relatives collided with a truck near here on the Wichita Falls-Electra highway. A protruding pole from the truck crashed through the Horton car, crushing the woman's skull.

An examination made at the scene of the accident showed that the truck had been moved about four feet as the result of the impact of the collision, Judge Wilson said.

Funeral services for Mrs. Horton are to be held in Klondike, Hunt county, Texas, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The body was forwarded from here today by the Totten Brothers mortuary.

Audit Claims Fees For County

straighten the thing out right, was to have a complete audit. The excess fees due the county may trace their origin to a lack of these audits."

Fees In Dispute

The question of alleged excess fees of office, and of what constitutes excess fees has been much in dispute recently among various county officials. A number of suits have resulted from these disagreements, not all of which have been successfully prosecuted by the county.

Judge Nicholson said after the audit had been read that the audit had made allowance for these suits, and that the figures submitted were in addition to the amounts involved in these disputes.

Former county officials who could be reached by telephone by The Record News Friday night generally expressed surprise at the claims, and a number seemed to rather enjoy the "news."

Mrs. Thomas E. Ragsdale, speaking for her husband, who was county tax assessor from 1916 to 1920, was both alarmed and amused at the information that her husband is said to owe a sum of over $3000 in alleged excess fees to the county.

"Why, he paid them about $7500 in 1920," she said, "and this other claim is a joke." "Let's hang up the phone and go back to bed," she concluded, for it was a late hour of the night when the report was retailed to her.

Change in Law

Irvin Deaton, in the same office from 1920 until 1924, asserted that details given him Friday night was the "first he had known" about the claim of more than $900 inscribed against him in alleged excess fees. Mr. Deaton said he would make a statement to officials later.

Pointing out that the "fee bill" did not go into effect in Wichita county until two years after he had retired from the office, B. M. Bullard, former county tax collector, declared that there "wasn't anything to" a claim of $4500 in alleged excess fees made against him in the audit.

"At the time I was in office, from 1916 until 1918, we operated on an entirely different basis than the one now used," he explained, "and I presume that the claim made against me is based on a law that wasn't in effect at that time."

J. P. Jones, county judge, 1919-1922, said: "This is news to me, and it is so far back that I really can't remember anything about it."

T. B. Greenwood, county attorney, 1918-1921, said: "I don't know anything about it. I don't owe them a red cent," he added with a laugh.

E. L. Fulton, county attorney, 1921-1924, said: "I never heard a word about it before. The books were audited regularly. I don't know anything at all about it."

The complete recapitulation of the audit, showing the official concerned, the period checked and the amount of alleged excess fees claimed in the audit, follows:

Remus Insane Declares Court

CINCINNATI, Dec. 30—The door to freedom, opened for George Remus when a sympathetic jury decided he was deranged at the moment he killed his wife, banged shut again today when Probate Judge William H. Leuders held Remus insane and dangerous, and ordered him confined to the state hospital for criminal insane, at Lima, O.

Undismayed by the reverse, Charles Elston, Remus' counsel, renewed the fight to liberate Remus. Late this afternoon he instituted habeas corpus proceedings to free Remus from the custody of Sheriff William A. Anderson.

Hearing on the suit, brought in behalf of Gabriel R. Yerson, Remus' brother-in-law, was set for next Tuesday by Judge Charles E. Bell in common pleas court. At this hearing, Elston will argue that Judge Lueders has no power to override the conclusion of alienists, although qualified, that Remus is sane.

Taft to Fight Remus

Charles P. Taft, prosecutor who conducted the murder case against Remus will represent Sheriff Anderson and seek to have Judge Bell affirm the decision of Judge Leuders.

Judge Leuders granted a request that the sentence of Remus to the insane asylum be stayed until Tuesday.

Remus was not in court when the decision was given, asked for a statement later, he said:

"The decision is one of the nine wonders of the world. It is the most humorous I know of in my whole life. The alienists who say Remus is insane had better have their own minds examined. It is simply simple. They have no intelligence.

"Dr. Wolfstein is burned up to think that in the murder trial I had the temerity to tell the jurors that the works of Lombroso, a criminologist, were ahead of Kraft-Ebing's works and others. They make one statement in one court and say another thing in another.

"Are they trying to justify their fees? They will have a day of reckoning. Their report is nonsensical. Go ahead and broadcast it."

Medics Say "Sane"

The report of the three probate court alienists, Drs. H. H. Hoppe, Thomas Catliff and Howard M. McIntyre, said: "We find George Remus sane, but we also find that he is a psychopath and therefore a dangerous individual to be at large. We believe that he is a dangerous psychopath because he is unmoral, lacking a sense of ethics, emotionally unstable, being subject to unrestrained fits of rage and outbreaks of temper, and is egocentric to a pathological degree."

Judge Leuders was not bound by law to accept the alienists verdict as to Remus' sanity. In ordering him sent to Lima he followed a precedent which he set in 1924 in the case of Vinton Perin, wealthy grain merchant, who killed his mother-in-law. Perin was acquitted on the ground of insanity and alienists later found him sane, but Leuders held him dangerous and sent him to Lima where he still is confined.

Judge Calls Him Insane

Leuder's verdict declared that the verdict of the jury acquitting Remus of murder on his plea of transitory maniacal insanity was prima-facie evidence of Remus' present insanity, and that this status remained until Remus proved himself sane.

The verdict cites the conclusion of alienists that Remus is dangerous and says further "the evidence also discloses that at this time George Remus does not believe it morally wrong to commit murder. From this evidence the court finds George Remus insane and orders him confined until such time as he is restored to reason or otherwise discharged by process of law." Although the jury found Remus insane, several members indicated they would have found him not guilty on an 'unwritten law' basis had the charge of the court allowed that verdict.

CITY ORDERS COLLECTION OF $84,000 BACK TAXES

ROLLS GIVEN TO ATTORNEY

Name For Auditorium Stirs Debate

Members of the city council Friday afternoon ordered Thelbert Martin, city attorney, to take strenuous measures to collect delinquent personal taxes owing to the city. The order came at a special meeting held in the afternoon in the council room at the Memorial auditorium. W. E. McBroom, city clerk, presented a comprehensive audit on the delinquent tax situation and his recommendations.

The report shows there are now on the tax rolls some $97,301.58, in delinquencies, divided into $54,065.49 on lots, $5,754.94 on land and $37,481.42 on personal taxes. All of this is not considered collectible as in some instances the land descriptions are too vague to find the land and in the case of personal taxes the delinquent has either died, moved away or gone through banruptcy. Permission was granted to transfer such accounts to the "doubtful tax accounts."

Collections Planned.

Personal items for the years 1921 to 1926, inclusive, that will go on this account amount to $12,134.51, leaving a balance the clerk believes collectible at $25,346.91. These were turned over to Mr. Martin. He will first write letters to all of the delinquents and was instructed to use his judgment as to the filing of suits. Some of the amounts are as low as 40 cents.

The land accounts were found to have $1,034.95 that was believed uncollectible and dropped the total delinquent roll to $4,719.99. This will leave $84,132.39 that it is thought can be collected. This amount is divided between 2505 different lots and 106 parcels of land with 2800 personal tax accounts unpaid. These accounts were all gone over by Mr. McBroom, Oral Jones, finance commissioner, and W. R. Hyer, tax collector. Addresses were brought to date where possible and card indexed to be given to Mr. Martin.

Mr. McBroom, although not a certified public accountant, is an experienced auditor and graduate in higher accountancy.

The council placed official approval upon the ordering of furniture for offices in the new building. The total account of $2418.70 divided among three firms as follows: Railey Printing company, $1404.95; Western Office Supply company, $411, and Martin Printing and Stationery company, $662.75.

Auditorium Name.

Much discussion was held over the official naming of the new home of the city offices. "City Hall and Memorial auditorium" was offered in a resolution but failed as too bulky. The matter did not come to a test vote but the most favored seemed to be to transpose the two names. P. B. Curd, utilities commissioner, suggested that the two names should be used distinctly with the city hall applying to the office part and the other to the auditorium. The only agreement reached was to change the name of the old city hall to the Central Police and Fire station.

Taxes of the Oil Center Lumber company for 1927 were adjusted downward $34 when it was shown the equalization board had made a mistake in going over the inventory of the company.

An expense account for Frank L. Burns, chief of police, and N. Daves, detective, for their trip to Cisco and Eastland in connection with the identification and investigation of men who engaged in the robbery of the First National bank there was approved for $16.14.

MISSION: "The Bandit's Son," with Bob Steele, and comedy. Bert Southern's Vanities on the stage in musical comedy.
GARDEN: Dick Hatton in "The Action Craver," also comedy.
GEM: "The Boy Rider," with Buzz Barton; No. 7 of "Hawk of the Hills," and comedy.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, the popular team of First National players, are to be seen again on the local screen in a new film.

They come to the Olympic theater Sunday in a rollicking romance of staid New England, "Man Crazy." The story is the love affair of a daughter of an aristocratic New England family, and a truck driver who proudly pilots the fastest truck on the Boston Post Road.

Adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Clarissa and the Post Road," "Man Crazy" is an ideal vehicle for the talents of Miss Mackaill and Mr. Mulhall, and their performance in this picture, together with that of the capable cast which supports them, make it a splendid entertainment.

"Man Crazy" has a pretty love story, action, thrills and mystery. It is ideal entertainment for picture fans of all ages, and both of the featured players do excellent work.

Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight," now showing at the Majestic theater. The picture will also be shown at the midnight matinee at 11:30 tonight.

Letters From Readers

CHRISTMAS APPRECIATION.

Editor, The Record News:

Just a few words of thanks from a glad and happy heart.

I am just a little late but I hope this does not find the waste basket.

First, I want to thank the Camp Fire girls of Junior college for the big box of nice good things such as fruit, candy, nuts and canned goods of all kinds. I also appreciate the book and the other nice things for Baby Ruth to play with and enjoy.

This box was found in my home when I returned from work Thursday evening.

I can not find words to express my heartfelt appreciation of this great kindness. May God's richest blessings be showered upon them. May God spread his white wing of peace over those dear sweet girls.

May the year 1928 bring happiness and great joy to each one of them.

It is the hearty wish of the glad receiver of the Christmas box that we all raise our voices in "rah, rah, rah" for the Camp Fire girls.

I want at this time to thank the good teachers who took part in sending Baby Ruth the big baby doll from the Christmas tree of the junior college.

That morning, before I left the house to go to my work, Baby Ruth asked me if Santa Claus would bring her a doll for Christmas this year. I told her I was afraid not.

Santa's Visit.

She looked up at me with a sad look in her big, soft, dark eyes. She shook her head of long dark curls and said: "Mama, it won't be like Christmas to us, will it?"

Now, can you imagine the expression of surprise, love and happiness that covered her little face that same afternoon as she held her little arms out to receive what was to her the most beautiful doll in all the world.

She said: "Mama, is it really mine?"

God bless the teachers of junior college. May 1928 be the crowning year of their success. This is the wish of both Baby Ruth and her mother.

I want to thank Mrs. Keith for giving me a place at the pastry table in her cafeteria where I have been since school began. It is through her kindness in giving me this place that I keep Baby Ruth in school and meet my other expenses.

We wish her a Happy New Year with lots of love and good cheer.

I want to thank the boy who leaves the dear old Record News at my door each morning.

One of the Family.

He comes in the night—we never know when he comes or when he goes, but he never fails to leave the dear old paper of all papers. It brings to us sunshine and good news from all parts of the country as well as our home town news. We would miss The Record News at our house almost as much as one of the family.

With best wishes to the newsboys and the entire staff of The Record News workers for the new year, we are:

MRS. MATTIE SMITH,
AND CHILDREN,
1108 Lamar Street.

CUPID LEADS DIVORCE BOGEY

1228 Couples Wed, But 500 Are Divorced

A total of 1228 marriage licenses had been issued in the office of the Wichita county clerk up to Tuesday, Dec. 27, according to figures compiled Friday by Miss Elizabeth Hall, county clerk. More than 75 per cent of the licenses were issued to residents of Wichita county, Miss Hall said, the remainder being issued principally to newcomers from nearby towns in Oklahoma.

The number of marriage licenses issued exceeds the number of divorces this year by an overwhelming majority, according to estimates by Judge W. W. Cook of the 78th district court. Being the trial judge in the majority of divorce cases, Judge Cook estimated Friday that approximately 500 cases had been tried during the year.

OLNEY SEEKS MILK MARKET

Farmers Expected to Sell To Kraft

Olney is seeking information on the Kraft Cheese company which will be in operation in Wichita Falls inside of the next three weeks.

Merle Gruver, secretary of the Olney Chamber of Commerce, was in the city Friday investigating the possibilities in the factory as an outlet for possible whole milk production in the district around Olney.

"I know a half dozen men right now who will increase their herds if they are assured of an outlet," he said. "With proper information and encouragement to give the farmers near Olney, I feel confident that favorable results may be obtained.

"Our people are anxious to hear about the new factory and to meet the new manager at the earliest possible moment."
