ELECTRA PROBES SCHOOL SPEAKEASY

Inquiry Into Aimee's Gift To Judge May Solve Kidnaping

JURIST FACES STATE QUIZ ON FAMED $2,500

State Legislature to Probe 'Good Will Offering' To Judge Hardy

WOMAN TO TESTIFY

Lawmakers Will Try to Get Whole Story of Weird Disappearance

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 25 (US)—The state legislature's special committee announced tonight that all is in readiness for the start tomorrow of the injury into the acceptance by Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy of the now famous $2,500 "good will offering" from Aimee Semple McPherson.

The five legislators composing the committee delicately hinted tonight that, as they are not bound by ordinary rules of court procedure, many interesting, and even sensational revelations, may be made.

New Questions Planned

It was said that many questions Asa Keyes failed to ask the red-haired evangelist when, as district attorney, he investigated her uncanny disappearance and even stranger appearance will be put to her.

The legislators let it be known that while the purpose of the investigation is to determine if the legislature has grounds for impeaching the judge, they will not be surprised if the whole weird "kidnaping" case is not gone into thoroughly for the first time.

Witnesses Called

Witnesses subpoenaed late today included the evangelist, Judge Hardy, his wife, J. W. Arthur, auditor of Angelus temple; Ralph "Jock" Jordan, until recently Mrs. McPherson's business manager; the attorneys who aided in her defense during ther preliminary hearing on charges of conspiracy to defeat justice, and a number of newspaper men.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, estranged mother of the evangelist, has been asked to come here from Seattle to add her testimony.

Indications tonight were that the hosts of Angelus temple, as is usual on such occasions, will appear in full strength to give the "Little Evangelist," as "Sister" McPherson sometimes refers to herself, a big hand and plenty of moral support.

State Cement Plants Recommended to Board

AUSTIN, Jan. 25 (AP)—Recommendation that the state build three cement plants located on sites which would be accessible to all parts of Texas, and manufacture cement for use in construction of roads, was made to the senate by the board of control today. It would be a fine opportunity for the state to utilize convict labor, it suggested.

"Suitable" locations were recommended near Bridgeport, Roby, Weatherford, Jacksboro, Jayton, Marfa, Clarksville, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Atlas and LaGrange.

Kaiser Denies Cruelty In War On Eve Of Birthday

Former War Lord, Speaking Through Subordinate, Gives His Views on Debts and Treaties

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press

DOORN, Holland, Jan. 25. (AP)—On the eve of his 70th birthday, former Emperor Wilhelm II, speaking through a friend and co-worker, Baron Ulrich von Sell, gave the chief of the Berlin bureau of the Associated Press, who visited Doorn, an interview.

The former emperor, speaking through Baron von Sell, declared that "the preliminary treaty of Nov. 5, 1918" bearing directly on the reparations problem, had been broken and that he had observed with satisfaction that the thesis of Germany's sole guilt for the war was becoming more and more untenable.

Denies Cruelty

He denied cruelty in the conduct of the world war.

The former ruler of Germany has grown shy of publicity. He does not now even receive German correspondents of approved monarchist views.

Asked how Wilhelm II regarded the development and present status of the reparations question, Baron von Sell said:

"In estimating this question," he said, "his majesty proceeds from the fact that the settlement of the reparations problem rests, to begin with, upon an evident breach of treaty. According to the program of President Wilson, the central powers were not to pay any war reparations, but were only to restore the occupied territories. When Germany, in October, 1918 declared herself ready to accept this program the allies expanded the obligations of Germany to include the damage rendered to their civil population through submarine and air attacks

Sees Change of Opinion

"Does his majesty see any evidence of a change of public opinion outside of Germany in estimating Germany's guilt for the war, as compared with the views current in 1919?" Baron von Sell was asked.

"Mostly decidedly his majesty does" was his rejoinder. "How could it be otherwise, for, the documents published since 1919 from German, Russian, Serbian and other archives have long brought irrefutable proof that the thesis of Germany's responsibility for the outbreak of the war is no longer tenable. His majesty is able to note with satisfaction that no conscientious investigator today still defends the thesis, embodied in Article 231 of the Versailles treaty, of Germany's guilt in the war.

"I need but to remind you of Senator Owen and of savants like the American historians Barnes William L. Langer and Fay, the Canadian Ewart, and many others

Walters Farmer Fails To Realize Wish Expressed To His Wife

(By Staff Correspondent)

WALTERS, Okla., Jan. 25.—Gottlieb Bessmer, widely known farmer reputed to be one of the ablest in Cotton county, recently intimated at a meeting of the Walters community club that his reputed success was debatable.

"When I come to this country I had only one children," Mr Bessmer explained. "I bought one farm."

"I told my wife land so cheap every time a new baby comes we should buy another farm.

"Now I'm getting behind with my farms."

Mr. Bessmer owns six or seven fine quarter sections.

SOLONS MOURN FOR COMRADE

Senator Oscar Underwood Claimed by Death

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. (UP)—Oscar Underwood, former Democratic senator from Alabama and a noted leader of the Democratic party, died today at his country home, "Woodlawn," near Mount Vernon, Va.

Millions of radio fans, who did not know Underwood as a United States senator, learned to know him through the persistence of the Alabama delegation at the 1924 Democratic convention, which from the start to the finish cast "24 votes for Oscar Underwood."

Thought Recovering

Underwood's death came suddenly at 11:15 a. m., after he was thought well on the road to recovery from a stroke he suffered last month.

Within a few minutes after his death, the senate, where he had served for many years, adjourned in respect and in the house minority leader, Finis Garrett, delivered a brief eulogy.

Underwood was 67 years old. He was born in Louisville, Ky., educated at Rugby school there and later attended the University of Virginia. He was elected a representative in the 54th and each succeeding congress to the 64th. After serving 20 years in the house, he was elected to the senate and took office as a senator in 1915, remaining until 1927, when he refused to be a candidate for re-election.

Wrote Tariff Act

Underwood gained national prominence at the beginning of the Wilson administration as the author of the Underwood tariff act. For several years he was the minority leader in the senate and in 1924 was conspicuous contender for the Democratic presidential nomination.

He served as a member of the American delegation at the Washington arms conference in 1921, and was an American delegate to the sixth Pan-American conference at Havana last year.

Senator Underwood's health began failing a few years ago.

Underwood is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bertha Woodward Underwood; two sons, Oscar Jr., and John Louis, and two brothers, Col. Sidney Underwood of Atlanta, Ga., and Fred B., of Knoxville, Tenn.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed but Oscar Underwood Jr., said the body probably would be taken to Birmingham, Ala., Saturday night and the burial may be there Monday.

Friday holds the year's record for the coldest day with a reading of 16 above zero early Friday morning.

The sky was clear at an early hour Saturday morning, and the weather forecast for Saturday by the Associated Press wires was "fair and warmer."

CONFIDANTE OF GOV. JOHNSTON FORCED TO WAIT

Mrs. Hammonds Appears In Questioning but Is Told Others Are First

FAMILY AFFAIR NOW

Woman's Brother and Uncle Closely Quizzed on Their Sales Successes

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 25 (AP)—Oklahoma's best known confidential secretary today was assigned a waiting role by the legislative committee inquiring into details of the administrative family of Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor.

Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, confidential secretary to the governor, appeared today before the house investigating committee, as she had been directed, to be informed that other witnesses were ahead and that she must return tomorrow.

Machinery Sales Aired

The committee had spent much time striving to fathom the success of Reed Scott, Mrs. Hammond's brother, in selling road machinery to the state highway department and activities of her uncle, James W. Armstrong, as an attorney for a bonding company which underwrote successful bidders on highway contracts.

Three divisional engineers of the highway department testified before the committee that they had bought considerable amounts of machinery from the company that Scott represented, and through him. A fourth said he had not bought much machinery from Scott.

L. C. Bernard, Oklahoma City, one of the engineers, replied in the affirmative when he was asked by Edward Box, attorney for the committee, if it were not true that the salesman with the "best pull" got most of the highway business. He also answered "yes" when Box asked him if he did not understand that it was "better" to give a Scott a share of the business.

Bond Man Testifies

E. J. Franklin, of Tulsa, agent for a bonding company, testified that he had employed Armstrong as his attorney.

"Was it after Jim Armstrong became spiritual and legal adviser to the governor that you saw the necessity of hiring him for your attorney?" Box asked Franklin. Political enemies have declared that Armstrong and Johnston have a common interest in occultism.

"It was."

The senate investigation into rumors that money was employed to persuade some senators to vote to call off the 1927 legislative uprising languished today after a statement by H. Tom Kight, house member and anti-administration leader, said that he believed the rumors groundless. Kight had been named as a circulator of the rumors and appeared before the senate committee yesterday.

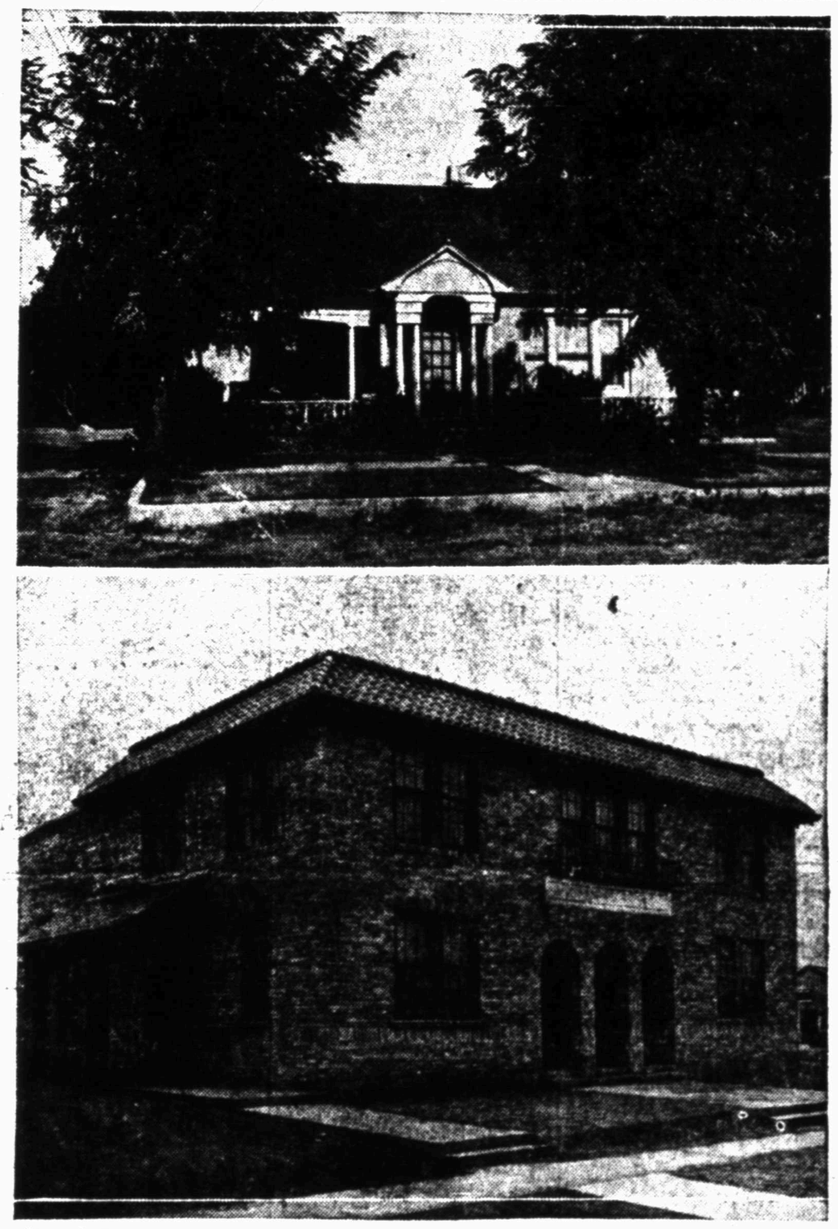

Charges Received

Resolving into a court of impeachment for a short time today, the senate received two additional charges of impeachment voted against Johnston during the week. The court set Jan. 31 as the date for the suspended governor's appearance to plead to the charges. He previously had been instructed to appear Monday, Jan. 28, to answer five charges accepted last Monday, when the senate suspended him. This instruction was unchanged.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. (AP)—A special committee was appointed today by the chamber of commerce of the United States to inquire into futures trading on produce exchanges, particularly in wheat and cotton. The purpose of the study will be to determine the effect of such trading on prices, apart from the normal influences of supply and demand, and how the system can be made to best serve economic purposes.

Women of Childress Outwitted Wise Boys in Real Estate to Erect Club

By C. W. ROGERS
Staff Correspondent

CHILDRESS, Texas, Jan. 25.—How the club women of Childress outsmarted the smartest moneyed men of the town in foreseeing and taking advantage of the profit possibilities of certain parcels of real estate will long be related in narratives of the development of Childress.

The Department club, whose membership embraces all of the women's clubs of Childress, was organized back in 1902.

A few years ago the club discovered that it had in its treasury an enormous sum of money—enormous to the organization.

Scorned Donations

The women wanted a clubhouse all their own. They were too independent to solicit donations. Funds in the treasury were trivial in proportion to the cost of the building they craved.

"We'll invest our money in real estate," they decided. "As Childress grows our money will grow."

The "gumshoe squad" discovered that, among others, one particular

HEITHER FREE UNDER BOND

Man Charged With Wood Slaying Released

O. C. Heither, charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Clifford E. Wood in the Heither home last Sunday night, was released from the Wichita county jail under bond in amount of $3,500 Friday afternoon.

Beyond the announcement that he would spend his first afternoon of freedom attending to business affairs, Heither made no statement of his plans. Mrs. Heither, at home at 2308 Buchanan, said late Friday that she did not know of her husband's release and had no knowledge of his plans.

Heither was arrested last Saturday night when officers found Wood, shot eight times, lying on the floor of the Heither home. Wood died a few hours later. In a statement made to Sam Spence, district attorney, Sunday Heither said the shooting grew out of domestic trouble.

Heither conferred with J. A. Lantz, United States commissioner, after he was released Friday on bond. Lantz asserted that Heither had come to him for advice as he had previously represented members of the Heither family in a civil case.

INQUIRY HEARS PARENTS' TALE OF RUM SALES

Reports of Students' Ability To Buy Liquor Near School Heard

CASE TO GRAND JURY

Leaders of City to Present Evidence Gleaned In Investigation

Special to The Record News

ELECTRA, Texas, Jan. 25.—A court of inquiry, called at the request of several parents of high school children, and city officials, met here today to decide upon a means of removing the menace of what is thought to be a "schoolboy speakeasy," the existence of which parents and officials said has come to light within the last few days.

The court was made up of a representative of the Electra schools, city and county officials, a representative of the district attorney's department, and two grand jurors, in addition to several mothers and fathers of students in the Electra high school.

Unusual Situation

The condition said to exist, according to Chief of Police J. T. Taylor, who was a member of the court, is unusual, and is the first sign of any alleged liquor law violations which would threaten the student body, in several years. The court, he said, considered evidence that there existed, within a few blocks of the school building, a joint, or "speakeasy," where the school children apparently were free to visit between class periods during school hours, or after the final recess.

Evidence to Grand Jury

Among other things, Chief Taylor said, the court decided to refer what evidence there was obtainable to the Wichita county grand jury, which reconvenes Feb. 1. The grand jury for the January term of court adjourned last week.

Among those who attended the inquiry were Mayor George Ragland, City School Superintendent Dinsmore, and Mike Anglin, assistant attorney, Chief Taylor said.

An analysis, to ascertain the probable seriousness of the situation, could not be obtained from Superintendent Dinsmore nor Mayor Ragland Friday night, both being away from their homes.

Wichita Youth Seeks Patents On Device Which May Upset Telephoto

Special to The Record News

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Applications for patents to cover a process of broadcasting and receiving moving pictures by radio will be filed within a few days by B. Y. Cummings Jr., of Wichita Falls. Mr. Cummings believes he has solved the problem on which many of the experts of the radio world have been working and attorneys with whom he has consulted believe he will be entitled to six basic patents.

Orville Bullington, financier of Wichita Falls and a leading Republican of Texas, is associated with the youthful inventor and when the applications for patents are granted it is anticipated that a company will be organized to manufacture the devices or authorize their use under royalties.

The exact nature of the processes naturally will not be revealed until there has been some action on them by the patent office. Young Cummings is convinced, however, that he has originated a process which is far superior to any of the several now proposed. Pictures heretofore sent by radio have been in the nature of silhouettes while those produced by the Cummings process appear as half-tones, it being possible to see the movement of the lips and the features.

To put them into use it will require some slight changes in both sending and receiving apparatus but Cummings is convinced this will come and that there will be a substantial demand for receiving sets carrying the necessary screen on which various events will be depicted as they occur.

I Saw It Myself

Returning to Burkburnett after an absence of almost a decade, a bewildering transformation is apparent in this once roaring oil camp, oft referred to by enthused promoters as "the Billion Dollar Lane."

The once vast forest of derricks has been thinned, board shacks in great number typical of the new oil field have been replaced by substantial business structures and residences. No longer does the clarion call of "seven, come 'leven" resound from beaverboard lairs of the big striped cat, no longer from sordid abodes do ladies of leisure beckon, no longer do hip pocket purveyors of liquid exhilarants patrol streets in quest of trade. Physically, "Burk" has changed in aspect; morally its regeneration has been complete, or as nearly complete as could be expected.

The industrial, commercial and civic development of "Burk" since the decline of the boom that was heralded around the world has been of a nature to challenge admiration. Leases round about the town continue to yield of their stores of oil, but in addition refineries have been established that send out each day long trains of petroleum products, small manufacturing industries have been aided to prosperous permanency, oil field supply houses adding to the volume of trade have been increased in number, mercantile establishments domiciled in modern structures in increasing number attract a large volume of trade from an area 40 miles long in the fertile Red river valley, an efficiently functioning chamber of commerce supports all public enterprises and aids in the development of agriculture, a complete representation of civic clubs promote various activities contributing to the welfare of the town, splendid church edifices have been erected by various congregations and a public school system has been developed that has brought many families to "Burk" to educate their children.

The new Burkburnett is builded on a solid formation. It is now a desirable town in which to live.

Devol, next stop in the itinerary of this seeker after the truth, some nine or ten years ago was gripped by the delirium of a prospective oil boom, from the effects of which it is just now recuperating. When the landowners came out of the trance their town was on the toboggan, their lease money all gone. They hopped in and essayed a comeback in the cotton fields. Their hopes of financial recovery from this source were blasted by adverse market conditions. Diversification was then grasped as the medium of salvation. Products other than cotton are bringing in cash money. The rehabilitation of Devol has begun. Devol, among other things, ships about $2,000 worth of cream each month.

At the station C. C. Johnson of the faculty of the Devol High school offered this chronicler a ride to the business district. Mr. Johnson supplied the information that 350 pupils are enrolled in the Devol schools and 10 teachers are employed. The high school building is a pretentious brick structure, ample at this time for the requirements of the town.

Another leasing play has started around Devol, according to J. L. Moorehead, notary, and George A. Smith, postmaster. D. Stone of Tulsa recently leased 5,000 acres in the vicinity of Devol, it was said.

In journeying to Randlett, 10 miles northeast of Devol, with J. R. Campbell, star route mail carrier, the information was imparted by Mr. Campbell that the banner dairy and poultry district of southern Cotton county was being entered. This was confirmed at Randlett by George F. Stringer, hardware merchant. "Cream valued at from $2,500 to $3,000 is being sent out of Randlett each month," said Mr. Stringer. "Of farmers who own cream separators 95 per cent pay cash for their purchases. A large volume of poultry marketed with our local produce house adds to the gross farm revenue. Henry Thompson is one farmer who marketed $1,500 worth of turkeys in one year."

That portion of Cotton county northeast from Randlett to Walters, the county seat, a distance of 17 miles, as seen from the highway, is a grain country, largely planted to wheat which at this time is promising in appearance. Acreage planted to cotton last year was scattered. Stock cattle, horses and mules are numerous on nearly all farms. Few hogs are in evidence, but dairy cows and flocks of chickens and turkeys are not lacking. Some farmers have a few sheep. It is in this section of Cotton county that permanent prosperity abides.

Responsible for this prosperity to no small extent is the Community club at Walters.

The Community club exercises the functions of a chamber of commerce, but its principal—it might be said its sole objective—is promoting the welfare and prosperity of the farmer.

"Bob" Lines, city manager and secretary of the club, explained that Walters had no civic problems of consequence, had about everything needed for a town of its size and that the business men of the town aimed to keep what they already had and devote their efforts to making the most of the agricultural resources of the surrounding territory.

The farmer is made to feel that the club is his organization and not the town's organization. Farmers and their families come in for the big trade day every first Monday, go to the picture shows free of charge and make themselves at home. Now and then there is a big general meeting and festivity, at which the farmers fill most of the program, and they enjoy every bit of it, it is said.

Mr. Lines, who can talk the farmer's language and is a writer of no mean ability, as a part of his plan conducts a Community club column in the Walters Herald which is full of sound information and is eagerly read by the rural contingent of the club.

Benefits resulting to the farmer from the work of the club included the recent establishment of the Cotton County Ice and Creamery company and wholesale produce house—but that's another story. Sufficient to say, here that in three months operation the company paid farmers $120,000 for poultry and is now paying them upwards of $2,000 a week for cream.

KAISER DENIES CRUEL TACTICS

Former Emperor Gives Interview to Press

will be in the course of time bring about a change of world opinion in favor of Germany, and will finally result in cancelling further payments of tribute on the part of Germany."

The discussion now turned to the charge of Germany's method of conducting the war, which finds expression in the phrase, used in Versailles, alleging that Germany is responsible "likewise for the cruel and inhumane manner in which the war was conducted."

Baron von Sell was asked: "This concerns his majesty in a very particular manner: What has he to say in reply?"

The baron replied:

"I see anew from your question that the effects of the propaganda concerning war atrocities have not yet died out. Does not the world realize even now that this propaganda was nothing other than a means in the war, just as were poison gas and tanks? England has always made use of this weapon of war with great success—I need but to remind you of the Congo atrocities!!—and other nations followed her each according to its temperament.

"Today, a decade after the war, the cruelties with which the Germans were charged have long been unmasked as lies and have been made to appear ludicrous."

"But what of the submarine warfare?" the interviewer asked.

"Let us consider merely the practical side and omit any discussion founded upon the law of nations, as this would lead us too far," was the reply.

England Flayed

"To be sure, some 36,000 nationals of the entente lost their lives through submarines—without a doubt a regrettably higher figure, but what is this in comparison with the 800,000 dead which were demanded as the toll of England's unlawful hunger blockade of the German civilian population? Who ever mentions these atrocities? Who speaks of Baralong, King Stephen, of the behavior of the English at Scapa Flow?

"Who speaks of the cruelties committed on German prisoners of war? Was it not a gruesome thing that in France 25 francs were offered as a premium for bringing back escaped German prisoners living, and 50 francs for returning them dead?

"x x x no the atrocity propaganda was never anything different from an unclean means of conducting the war."

That the man whom the allied world throughout the war spoke of as "The supreme war lord" wished nothing more ardently than to preserve peace was the final assertion of Baron von Sell on the eve of his sovereign's 70th birthday.

New Salesmanager

R. H. DAVIS

R. H. Davis recently appointed salesmanager for the Fox Chevrolet company of this city. Mr. Davis is well and favorably known in the automobile fraternity, both state and national, coming direct from the Chevrolet factory to Wichita Falls. He has the distinction of holding a number of first place classes in Chevrolet performance. The service, parts and accessory departments will also be under the direct supervision of Mr. Davis. In order to provide Chevrolet owners with the finest workmanship available, special schools are conducted at the factory for Chevrolet dealers and service men. Here, under expert instruction, they learn the best and quickest methods of performing every Chevrolet service operation—learn how to service cars in the most satisfactory and most economical way.

"It will be our policy to employ factory skilled men, trained especially for Chevrolet cars," said Mr. Davis.

parcel on the courthouse plaza had been overlooked or ignored by real estate men and investors.

Exercising their powers of persuasion, they exchanged an insignificant sum of money for this parcel. Another parcel acquired, opposite the new Hotel Childress, was secured for a mere $1,000. It is now worth $20,000. Last year a portion of the courthouse plaza purchase, that cost the clubwomen just $500, was sold for $10,000.

"Slumber not in the tents of your fathers—
The world is advancing; advance with it."

is the motto of the Woman's Department club.

$40,000 Building

In November of last year the long desired clubhouse was completed, at a cost of $40,000, inclusive of equipment. This clubhouse is a symbol of the advancement of the women of Childress.

The clubhouse has a completely equipped stage and auditorium with seating capacity of 600; a public library, revenue bearing quarters for studios—and about everything else that a woman could plan.

The Woman's Department club embraces the Book club, Mrs. G. C. Fox, president; Music Study club, Mrs. H. M. Baker, president; Physical Culture club, Mrs. Reid B. Scott, president; Childress Little theater, Miss Annabel Baker, president; Childress Garden club, Mrs. W. E. Davis, president; Home Economics club number one, Mrs. Tom Huggins, president; Business Woman's forum, Mrs. J. O. McMinn, president; Home Economics club number two, Mrs. Reid B. Scott, president; Alpha Delphian club, Mrs. Cecil Pryor, president; Art club, Mrs. J. C. Thomas, president.

It will be noted that the matter of organizing a woman's real estate brokerage club has been neglected—at least for the time being.

Officers of the Woman's Department club are: Mrs. Q. S. Barrett, president; Mrs. T. L. Hardin, first vice president; Mrs. Herman Smith, second vice president; Mrs. B. F. Hasler, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Boyd, recording secretary; Mrs. F. P. K. Atkinson, treasurer; Mrs. J. C. Thomas, parliamentarian; Mrs. W. E. Davis, federation counselor; trustees, Mrs. Annie B. Davis, Msr. M. Celeste Caradine, Mrs. Bunch Price.

Higher Tariff on Reindeer Meat Urged

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. (UP)—Protection of the Eskimo standard of living against competition of the Nomads of the Siberian steppes was advocated before the house ways and means committee today when Carl J. Lomen of New York City asked that the tariff on venison and reindeer meat be increased from four cents per pound to nine cents.

Lomen testified the Eskimo reindeer herders are earning $1,000 to $2,000 per year. He feared imports of reindeer meat from eastern Siberia "where one can get a reindeer for a plug of tobacco."

Dr. S. W. McClure of Bliss, Idaho, representing the National Wool Growers association, asked that the duty of lamb be increased from four to seven cents to meet impending competition from New Zealand.

McClure said that since the present tariff law was enacted in 1922 the number of sheep in the United States has increased 25 per cent now being 44,500,000.

EVOLUTION IS HOOTED AGAIN

Evangelist Offers $1000 for Proven Error in Bible

By W. F. SULLIVAN

CHICAGO, Jan. 25. (UP)—Man and monkey would be brought face to face for comparison in Chicago in the fundamentalist campaign to smoulder what they regard as an "evolution eruption," that is sweeping the country through teachings permitted in schools and colleges.

This, in effect, was the substance of a challenge hurled today at the evolutionists and modernists to offer scientific proof of the link between the pre-historic ape and the present form of man.

Offers Reward

Paul Rader, noted evangelist, and leader of the "Defenders of the Christian Faith," which took form today, offered to post a reward of $1,000 to anyone who could establish one scientifically proven fact that would disprove a single statement in the Bible.

"Nine-tenths of the talk of evolutionists," Rader told the United Press, "is sheer nonsense, not founded on observation and wholly unsupported by facts. Evolutionary literature abounds with statements about the pithecantropus, the Heidelberg man and the piltdown man. The pithecanthropus is a high-brow name for an ape man."

To Start Fight

Rader, who is international president of the world-wide Christian couriers, explained that the first move of the "defenders" in a nation-wide campaign to stamp out the teaching of the evolution theory in grade schools, high schools and colleges would be made at a national convention in Indianapolis, Feb. 3 to 10.

"The evolutionists must go," he said, "and with them the defenders of modernism who are corrupting our educational standards in the grade and high schools of the country. He will engage in no snarling talk and make no effort to excite aversion by smashing personalities."

He referred to the teachings against the Bible as "crucifying the infallible word of God on the cross of culture and neo-culture with the nails of taboo."

Grieved at Teachings

"We are sorely grieved at the rapid advance of materialistic, mechanistic and atheistic philosophies in our schools," Rader said. "We would be lacking in candor if we did not say that we believe men of science should discriminate carefully between their facts and their theories.

"Those who hold to evolution and at the same time wish to wear a Christian cloak call themselves 'theistic evolutionists.' They believe in a Christianity that is cultured in that it is patterned after Christ and accept His social ideas.

"According to the Darwinian theory, every organ was evolved from what was originally a very slight variation due to accident or to other cause unknown. This variation because it proved useful to its possessors, was transmitted to its off-springs and it is supposed that the departure continued through many generations until at last it became an organ such as an eye, an ear or a wing with a distinct and valuable function. Thus, variations from the original stock but not for their production."

Can't Explain It

Rader charged that only such accidental variations as are advantageous to their possessors are preserved and that theories cannot be explained definitely because the authors of theories are utterly unable to suggest how natural selection worked in any concrete case.

"Mr. Darwin says," he continued, "our ignorance of the law of variations is profound. Thus we are left in total darkness as to the cause of the most important factors in organic evolution. Creation or evolution? It cannot be both.

"It follows that natural selection or the law of evolution by its own necessary limitations, cannot account for development of any organ which must pass through a period of non-usefulness. The theory of evolution cannot admit of the perpetuation of useless organs and structural features for such do not exist."

Hurts the Faith

"Scientists should exercise care lest these theories and hypothesis of purely human and recent origin which are doing much against faith and morals should be taught by realists in the name of science."

The evangelist said an appeal was being made to Christians throughout the United States to cooperate in movement "for God, His books, the church of Jesus Christ and foundation of our great school system." He said he expected 100,000 persons would attend the convention in Indianapolis.

"We are making this appeal," Rader said, "because we feel that from some source, God will supply a spiritual dynamic force that will restore in no small measure the spiritual strength of by-gone days. Perhaps God has raised the defender movement to help towards this end.

Kindly Spirit

"We are proceeding upon the program that any defense of the faith, as outlined in the Bible as the infallible word of God, to be effective must be carried out in a kindly spirit."

The defenders movement is incorporated under the laws of the state of Kansas with executive office in Chicago and Wichita.

Mentality of Aged Groom in Contest

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 25. (INS)—When a millionaire of 50 marries a pretty girl of 26, is he "mentally incompetent?"

This question was before the courts here today, as Leo Bergin prepared to ask that his wealthy brother, Charles Bergin, be adjudged incompetent because of his startling action early this month in divorcing his wife and marrying youthful Sy Painter, Mongomery, Ala., society girl.

Both the young bride and the aged ex-wife, who was divorced in Reno after 25 years of married life with Bergin, are scheduled to be witnesses in the case.

Bergin, a retired soap manufacturer, met Miss Painter in Monte Carlo, more than a year ago. On his return to this country, he obtained a divorce and astounded his friends by abruptly marrying the young Alabama girl on the day he obtained the divorce decree.

Italy's Naval Building Program Is Approved

BLANTON HAS TO DODGE BOOK

So Goes Story of Clash With Elliott

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP)—Representatives Blanton of Texas and Elliott of Indiana engaged in a sharp exchange in the house today and when they resumed it later in the house lobby were held apart by fellow members.

Several versions of the clash circulated through the chamber, including one story that Elliott had thrown a book at the Texan, but both men later said "nothing serious happened."

The dispute began when Blanton charged on the floor he had understood the Indiana member to have promised a year or so ago that postoffices would be provided for Sweetwater and Coleman, Texas, if he would support the public buildings bill. Elliott denied he made such a promise and Blanton declared he would put into the record a statement confirming his declaration.

Representative Cramton, Republican Michigan, observed that "since Texas now is a Republican state there is no need to worry about postoffices."

School and College News

"Interesting Applications of Logarithms" was the subject of an address by J. W. Williams of the mathematics department at the weekly meeting of the Junior College Mathemetics club held Thursday night in room 123 of the college building. Graphic applications of this branch of science were discussed in the address and the use of the slide rule was explained. Mr. Williams and B. T. Adams sponsor of the Math club, are now undertaking to work out a spherical log with no interpollations. The log, when completed, is expected to prove a space-saver and no interpolating will be necessary.

"Mathematics among the Hindoos" was the subject of what proved to be an interesting talk by Euclidian Bill Duncan. Duncan resigned as chairman of the finance committee. No successor has been appointed as yet, it was announced.

A special meeting of the newly organized Junior College Boy's Outdoor club was held during the 30-minute period Friday morning in room 121 with President Jim Martin in charge of the program. An election was held for the completion of officers with the following officers selected: Vice president, Oliver Fudge; secretary treasurer, Henry Barton, and sergeant-at-arms, Eggleston Ramee.

Five suggestions for a name for the organization were voted upon, but no decision was reached by the close of the meeting. Names given consideration were: "The Spice of Life," "Swastika," "Black Cat," "Ozone," and "Grandershankers." The suggestion was deferred until the next meeting which is to be held sometime during the coming week.

The Snider Library has reopened and all students will be permitted to withdraw books, it has been announced. Due to crowded conditions in the two study halls, the library was used the past week as an overflow and no books were permitted to be checked out.

New students of the high school who recently came over from the two Junior high schools are being given a most unusual welcome by the upperclassmen at the close of school each day. A large street car that appears one block north of the school each afternoon for the transporting of students to their various destinations is always overcrowded to the extent that many patrons are compelled to stand up during the entire run to town. Upperclassmen have now enacted an unwritten, unofficial rule that all undergraduates just entering the high school must not be seated during the entire trip. Even though there be a few vacant seats left in the car, they are compelled to remain standing, much to their chagrin.

Use of Diplomacy in Breaking Engagement Explained by Writer

How to Break Off an Undesirable Match—Helping a Young Girl to Find Happiness.

Dear Miss Dix: You say in a recent article that the way to break off an undesirable match is by the use of diplomacy. Will you explain how? —AN ANXIOUS PARENT.

Answer: On the theory that an ounce of experience is worth a ton theory, I will cite some cases that I have known in which parents have prevented their children from making matches that they knew would inevitably end in misery and divorce. Furthermore, they alienated their youngsters from the objects of their temporary infatuation so deftly and painlessly that they never knew that mother and father had a hand in it and attributed their escape to their own good sense and judgment.

As exhibit A, I present for your consideration the case of Mrs. B. Mrs. B.'s daughter was madly in love with a fascinating youth addicted to drink, and the foolish girl felt that it would be romantic and wonderful to reform him by marrying him. Mrs. B. pointed out in vain to her daughter the dangers and difficulties of a woman trying to make a Keely cure of herself. Also that the prescription seldom worked. And when that failed she sent her daughter to visit in a home in which the husband came home soused about five nights a week.

What argument had failed to accomplish, the object lesson did. Seen at close range, the role of the drunkard's wife was not appealing, and it didn't take the girl long to decide that she wouldn't care to sit up night after night waiting for the drag of a stumbling footstep and that there was nothing romantic about helping a maudlin, intoxicated man who was bleary-eyed and dirty and repulsive to get to bed, where he could sleep off his stupor.

The next exhibit is Mrs. C., who tried pretty much the same tactics upon her daughter, who was enamored of one of these temperamental geniuses who spend their time trying to find themselves instead of hunting a job, and who cannot bring themselves to do any such sordid thing as real work. So Mrs. C. sent her daughter to visit in a home where the wife took in boarders to support an able-bodied husband who loafed and invited his soul.

Sally C., not being an utter fool even if she was in love, was warned in time to save herself from becoming a meal ticket to a male parasite.

The next exhibit is Mrs. D., whose daughter Maud was tumbling into a love affair with a chap who was all right morally, but who had a hateful, cantankerous disposition, and who was a good deal of a tightwad. One of the steadies, you know, who never spend a nickel on a girl if they can help it; who spend their evenings camped on a girl's chairs listening in on the radio; who think it is so much nicer to eat her mother's good dinners than take her out to a restaurant, and who make the kind of husbands who snoop in the ice box, and ask their wives what they did with the quarter they gave them week before last.

So Mrs. D. got busy, and every time she sat down for a little chat with the youth with a Yale lock on his pocketbook she would casually and artlessly mention something about how much money it took to support a girl in these days, and how fond Maud was of fine clothes, and how many dresses and hats she had, and how much silk stockings and crepe de chine lingerie cost. The effect was magical. The close-fisted one had no idea of letting himself in for an extravagant wife. He simply faded out of the picture, and Maud doesn't know to this day why he cooled off.

Then there was Mrs. E., whose son fell in love with a pretty little Dumb Dora who rolled her eyes at him and asked him fool questions, and who didn't have two ideas in her head to rub together. The boy was clever, highly educated, fond of reading and the mother knew that they would be utterly uncongenial, and have nothing in common after their first physical attraction for each other had worn off. She didn't waste any time and effort trying to explain this to her son, however.

Instead, she invited the girl to spend a month with them at their summer place, and she left her son to entertain her. She gave the boy undiluted doses of the girl's society, and in a week he was so bored that he cut short his vacation and fled from her as he would from a pest.

And son on, and so on, in endless variation. Oh, there are lots of ways of killing a cat, except by choking it on butter.
—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix: What, oh what is wrong with me? I can't take life in a happy way. And why? I am only 15, but I am so miserable that I have been on the verge of committing suicide many times, yet I have nothing to be miserable about. Nothing interests me. Nothing seems worth while. And I see no use in going on living. Can you suggest any remedy for my trouble?
—TIRED OF LIFE.

Answer: Sure. Nothing easier. All that ails you is just being 15, and all that you need to do it just to let nature take its course, and in a year or two you will outgrow the morbidness that is nearly always a feature of adolescence.

Besides, 15 is about the most uncomfortable age there is for a girl. It is a time of life when she doesn't fit in anywhere, when she is neither child nor woman, but an antagonistic blend of the two that keeps her own soul in a state of turmoil and confusion, and that makes her a terror to her family.

It is a time when it is hard for her to amuse herself because she is too old to play dolls and not old enough to have dates, and when neither the children nor the grown-ups want her as a companion. So, unless her family is able and wise enough to send her off to school among other 15-year-olders, she is apt to be lonesome and bored, as you are.

Yet the way to happiness and to make life worth while when you are 15, or 55, or any other age is the same. It consists in thinking as little about yourself as possible and as much about other people as you can.

You can always find misery if you hunt for it. You can always borrow trouble if you ask for it. There is no man or woman so fortunately situated that he or she can't make himself or herself utterly wretched by dwelling on the disillusions and disappointments of life, and on the contrary there are none of us who cannot find something to make whoopee about if we would only count our blessings.

The real secret of happiness is to be found in unselfishness. If you will get busy trying to be a little ray of sunshine in your home and doing things for your mother and father and sisters and brothers, you will find a meaning to life, and no longer be miserable.
—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a college graduate and am earning a good salary. I had to borrow the money to pay for my education, and it will take me about three years to pay it back. Now, I am in love with a very dear girl and would like to marry her, but refrain from asking her on account of the debt. What shall I do? —CHARLES.

Answer: Tell the girl that you love her, but that you cannot marry her until the debt is paid. If she loves you she will not mind waiting three years. I strongly object to long engagements that have to drag on interminably, but it is a different matter when there is a definite time limit, as in your case, that you can probably reduce by putting in extra effort.

Don't marry, however, until you have paid back the money that was advanced to you on no other guarantee than someone's faith in your integrity and manhood. If there is any debt of honor on earth, it is that, and if you default on it you are the most contemptible of welchers. —DOROTHY DIX.

'Bill' Williams Takes Seat of Late H. D. Henry

By C. W. ROGERS
Staff Correspondent

MANGUM, Okla., Jan. 25.—William M. (Bill) Williams, Democrat elected representative to the Oklahoma legislature from the fourth senatorial district at a special election held Wednesday, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Williams of Deleon, Texas. He succeeds the late H. D. Henry who died on the opening day of the present session of the legislature.

Senator Williams graduated from the University of Texas in 1922, subsequent to overseas service in the world war. After graduation he practiced law at Breckenridge, Texas, coming to Mangum Christmas day, 1922.

He was appointed county attorney in 1926, serving until his resignation last week. His Republican opponent in the Wednesday election was the popular Col. Warren White, publisher of the Hollis Post Herald, veteran of three wars.

His opponents for the Democratic nomination in the special primary held last Saturday were J. G. H. Windle, three times member of the lower house of the Oklahoma legislature; Mrs. Lamar Looney, senator for eight years, and Joe Morrison, pioneer Greer county farmer.

Doctors Warn against undereating

Too little fat in the body makes us a prey to disease

EMINENT medical authorities are amazed and alarmed that so many girls and adults of both sexes are dieting themselves to a dangerous loss of weight.

A famous doctor says: "The most delicate parts of the body are always the ones to suffer first. A woman who is naturally sweet-tempered, good-natured, competent . . . becomes petulant, unreasonable, hard to get along with. A man who is thus starving himself becomes irritable and inefficient in the office and grouchy at home. . . . He begins to fall off in judgment and mental ability." This doctor goes on to show that nature stores up fat in the body as a reserve and that it is dangerous to destroy this reserve by dieting. Such an individual, he says, "becomes an easy prey for all manner of chronic ailments—kidney and liver diseases, and degeneration of the brain, spinal cord and nerves . . . typhoid fever, pneumonia, influenza and colds."

How much more intelligent it is to eat varied, nourishing foods, rather than eliminating the one ingredient that adds flavor and enjoyment to all other foods. Sweetness is the ideal flavor. What is so tasteful and refreshing as a salad of fresh grapefruit—sweetened with powdered sugar—and lettuce? Eat enough fruits and cereals. The best cooks are generous with sugar. SORE THROAT?
Gargle with Listerine
Kills germs in 15 seconds

Don't let a sore throat get serious. It's a germ condition that ought to be whipped early.

At the first sign of trouble, gargle with full strength Listerine. Your improvement ought to be rapid. If it is not, consult your doctor.

Listerine, full strength, is effective against infections because it is powerful against germs. It kills even the virulent B. Typhosus (typhoid) germ in 15 seconds, as shown by repeated tests in three great laboratories.

We have a helpful free book, Personal Hygiene, that is yours for the asking. Write Dept. S-44, Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo.

And for COLDS

Countless colds start when germs are carried to the mouth on food. By using Listerine on the hands before every meal, you attack such germs and lessen the risk of cold. Remember this, mothers, when handling baby's food.

JOB 'CREATOR' HELD IN JAIL

While Workless Men Hunt Fabled Place of Work

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 25. (INS)—Somewhere on the snow covered roads of western Kansas 25 Kansas City workmen in motor cars are battling the weather, headed for a town in Arizona that does not exist and a job that will not materialize.

They are only a small group of some 500 Kansas City men who heeded the persuasive talk of Benton McKinley Rogers, alias C. M. Brooks, erstwhile construction company head.

Rogers is in municipal court today explaining why he advertised for men to go to work on a big dam project near the town of "Selma," Ariz., a town which police declare is only a product of the fertile imagination of Rogers.

Can't Find Dam

Police also are unable to find any trace of a dam project which would employ men at the place mentioned.

The alleged creator of "towns" and "jobs" was arrested by detectives, on complaint of the better business bureau.

The bureau had received complaints from numerous working men that they had been "taken in" by the glowing picture of plenty of work in warm climate, held forth before them by "Mr. Brooks."

The big dam project first saw the light of day when "Mr. Rogers" advertised in the papers Jan. 13 for 160 workmen to be employed on a huge dam project near Selma, Ariz.

Applicants Jam Room

His room at the hotel was crowded with applicants in the days following the advertisement.

According to the applicants "Brooks" said he was the head of the Healey-Brooks Construction company of Los Angeles, and that he was here to hire men to construct the dam at Selma.

Each applicant was handed a card with the name of the construction company upon it and the information that he was to be at Selma ready for work Feb. 1.

They were informed that two special cars had been chartered on the Santa Fe railroad to take the workmen to Selma and would leave Kansas City Jan. 30. The fare and expenses of the trip would be $17, they were told, of which the construction company would bear two-thirds, leaving each man to pay $5.80.

Kellogg Strong For Sea Law Conference

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. (UP)—Secretary of State Kellogg today enthusiastically endorsed Senator William E. Borah's proposal for an international conference to codify international maritime law and determine the rights of neutral commerce before 1931 when the Washington arms conference discussions are to be resumed here.

Publication of documents exchanged between London and Washington during the war period of 1914 and 1915 have shown that British violations of the rights of American neutral shipping caused grave difficulties before this country entered the war.

Kellogg would not comment on Borah's contention that the question of neutral rights was the dominant factor in the current Anglo-American naval rivalry but he said he considered very important subject.

Protection for Products of Texas Farms and Ranches Asked at Hearing

By CHARLES S. HAYDEN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Higher duties on the farm and ranch products of Texas, with particular reference to cattle and hides, were asked of the house ways and means committee today by Representative C. B. Hudspeth. This was based up by the presentation of a resolution recently passed by the Texas legislature.

In submitting his argument, the El Paso congressman declared that fully 90 per cent of the Texas cattle men went broke in 1919 and that while they are in a fairly prosperous condition now there is an element of uncertainty which is harmful to the business. This uncertainty he attributed to fear that the embargo on South American cattle may be raised at any time and that because of this Texas cattlemen are having difficulties in obtaining money through their banks.

Canada Now Competitior

The need for a protective tariff on importation of cattle was stressed. Congressman Hudspeth declared that Canada is now becoming a strong competitor as is Mexico. He was asked whether it is possible to raise cattle in Mexico cheaper than in the United States, and asserted emphatically that it is, attributing the difference largely to lower wages and cheaper leasing rates.

The congressman insisted that the duty on dry hides should be not less than six cents and eight cents on green hides. He suggested that the duty on canned meat be raised from two cents to six cents, pointing out that 56,000,000 pounds of these products were imported last year and that this was in direct competition with the American cattle producers.

He urged that there should be a duty on mutton and lamb as well as wool and asserted that if adequate protection were afforded American producers would supply the demand. He further urged protection for alfalfa hay, pecans, soy beans and other products of the Texas ranches and farms.

Among the Texans who are to appear before the committee will be Roger Gillis, T. L. Drisdale and C. C. Belcher of Del Rio, and J. A. Whitten of Eldorado, representing the sheep and goat industry, Dayton Moses of Fort Worth in behalf of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association, E. M. Cole of Alta Loma and Gordon Hinds of Houston, in behalf of the fig industry. Dee Bell of San Benito for the winter vegetable industry, and James O'Keefe of Laredo for the Southwest Texas Onion Growers.

TARIFF ON PRODUCE ASKED BY BOUDE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. (AP)—Further requests for higher tariffs on cattle, dairy and farm products were received by the house ways and means committee today on resumption of its hearings on tariff revision.

Knox Boude of Sebastopol, Calif., representing the national poultry council, urged an increase to 10 cents a pound in the existing duty of three cents on live poultry and 10 cents on dead poultry as compared with the present rate of six cents. Other rates proposed were: eggs in shell, 10 cents a dozen as against the present 8 cents; frozen eggs 12 cents a pound against six; dried yolk 30 cents against 18; dried albumen 60 cents against 18; baby chicks 4 cents each, a new duty; and live poultry imported for breeding purposes $2 each, also a new rate.

The total value of crops grown in 1927 on irrigated land furnished with water from the works of the bureau of reclamation was $133,207,210, an increase of $23,087,550 compared with 1926.

SEARCH BILL TO COMMITTEE

Repeal of Seizure Law Is Delayed for Study

AUSTIN, Jan. 25. (INS)—The King house bill proposing to repeal the search and seizure law, after heated debate, today was referred to the house committee on criminal jurisprudence. The bill had originally been preferred to the house committee on liquor and liquor traffic.

The proposal to refer the bill to the committee on criminal jurisprudence was made by a vote of 83 to 25. During the debate, Rep. Forbes of Weatherford, an ultra dry, opposed the motion to refer.

He charged that bootleggers were back of the movement to defeat the measure. He resented the intimation that he was antagonistic to the spirit of the constitution.

Both the senate and house adjourned until Monday.

CONFESSION OF APE MAN READ

Northcott Strongly Objects To Testimony

COURTROOM, RIVERSIDE, Calif., Jan. 25. (INS)—A signed confession in which Gordon Stewart Northcott admitted he had killed a Mexican youth, whose headless body was found by a roadside, was admitted as evidence today at the trial of the 21-year-old chicken rancher after he made a desperate legal fight to keep the document away from the jury.

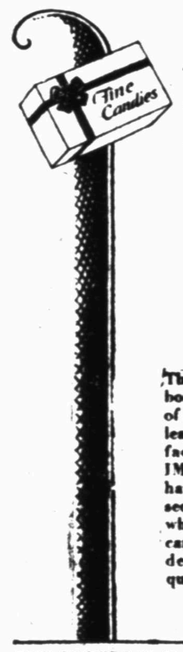

Five times Northcott jumped to his feet to object to the admission of the confession, which he termed an "extra-judicial confession" on the grounds that it had been wrested from him by "threats promises and extreme intimidation."

Each time he was overruled by Superior Judge G. R. Freeman, who promised Northcott an opportunity later to either testify on the witness stand or produce witnesses to support his charges that he had been the victim of police third degree methods.

OLD KING COAL is desperately sick, and threatened with dethronement to boot.

Competition has served notice that he must put on his thinking cap or abdicate.

Efficiency is reducing fuel consumption—making more steam with smaller shovelfuls—electricity is getting increased energy out of less tonnage—water power is underselling his markets—and crude-oil burners are snatching his furnace customers.

So many English miners are out of work that unemployment has again reached the peak figures of 1926, when starvation nearly fomented revolution.

A few years back, statistics turned pale at estimated reserves of anthracite and bituminous; they warned us that supply could not long fill demand, but conceived no method to avert the shortage.

Now, the pressing problems are disposal of a growing surplus and the discovery of new uses for a fast obsolescing product.

The word has no fixed values or habits.

STYLE changes its mind overnight, snips skirts and locks, banishes corsets and casts the petticoat into the discard.

Innovation is a merciless force. The path of progress is strewn with the bones of dead trades and ventures.

The half-tone sounds the knell of wood engraving. The garage closes the blacksmith's shop, just as the kerosene lamp stranded the whaling fleets and vehicular tunnels begin to retire the ferry boat.

No investment is safe from the invading invention.

Mexico quit gathering cochineal; a hundred thousand families and two million acres of indigo plantations lost their occupations and India was swept with bankruptcy when aniline dyes demonstrated their superiority and economy.

All one-string bows and businesses exist at the peril of substitutes.

Improvements will be served regardless of cost.

The world refuses to stand still. Nothing is certain but change, change, change.

There's an alternative in brew for every handcraft and a mechanical successor, in work, for every craft.

Old King Coal didn't believe it. And look what a mess he's in!

Carry a second bow-string. Develop a side line. Or you'll be in the same fix some soon day.

TEMPLE, Okla., Jan. 25.—With total cotton ginnings at Temple right at 6,800 bales, the season is practically at an end. Total production of cotton in Cotton county for 1928, will approximate 16,000 bales compared with 18,640 in 1927 and 24,203 in 1926.

A pessihist is one who thinks motherly instinct is dyin' out jest because Mrs. Ike Lark's convicted sister-in-law, mother of eleven, has told her lawyer not t' bother about a new trial. Speakin' o' cruisers, another thing this country needs is a lot o' new dress suits, an' not allow Queen Marie t' catch us unprepared again.

If Hoover is really in earnest in finding out what is wrong with the prohibition situation, he ought to appoint a committee of alienists. They can find out almost anything.

A Signal of Sympathy

A VERY little thing often means a great deal, if you look at it properly.

In a little Ohio town near Toledo lives an 18-year-old boy who has been an invalid for several years. His parents' house is near the New York Central railroad tracks, and one of the lad's diversions is watching the big limited passenger trains go speeding by.

One day, about a year ago, an engineer saw the boy's cot on the sun porch and inquired about him when he reached the town's station. Learning that the boy was kept to his bed by illness, the engineer decided to do a little something to cheer him up.

So, thereafter, every night when his train passed the boy's house, the engineer would blow his whistle four times. The boy quickly discovered that this signal was a greeting to him, and he responded by blinking the light in his bedroom four times.

That has kept up for a year now. Every night that the engineer speeds by he sounds his signal, and the boy responds by flashing his light. If the boy is feeling worse than usual, and has to drop off to sleep earlier in the evening, he sets his alarm clock so that he will awaken in time to hear and respond to the greeting.

On Christmas the engineer sent the boy a little present. And a few days later, on his day off, he went to the little town and called on him, promising to have all the other engineers on that section of the line toot their whistles for the sick lad when they passed his house.

Now all of this, while interesting and a little bit touching, may not seem especially important. But it is, just the same. Study it aright and you will get a great deal of encouragement and hope out of it.

There is a good deal of misery of one kind and another in this world. Sickness, poverty, failure and disappointment touch every one of us at one time or another. They're pretty hard to live through, sometimes; but the worst thing of all is the feeling of loneliness that so often accompanies them.

We are so constituted that we can stand almost anything except the feeling that the rest of the world is shut off from us by barriers of indifference and misunderstanding. There are times when the most important thing on earth is an unmistakable hint that kindness and thoughtfulness still exist in a world of strangers.

That is why the simple, kindly act of this locomotive engineer is worth reading about. What he did wasn't much, perhaps—but it meant a great deal to that bed-ridden youngster, lonely and depressed. And, though the rest of us never heard of either of these two people before, it can mean a good deal to us, too.

It is just one more demonstration that kindness and the willingness to help someone else to a little happiness aren't so uncommon as we often think.

Old Red School House Passes

THE OLD one-room country schoolhouse, a feature of American life for many years, is disappearing, and there will be few to mourn its passing.

A report from the bureau of education of the department of the interior shows that consolidated rural schools have been replacing one-teacher schools in the United States at a rapid rate during the past decade. In 1920 the 48 states had 189,000 one-room schools; in 1926 this number had shrunk to 161,000, and it is still going down.

Advantages of the consolidated school are numerous, both from the standpoint of education and general health and comfort. The modern school bus, which can bring children from widely separated farms to the door of a distant schoolhouse in less time than it took their fathers to walk a mile, is a big factor in the change.

The one-room school served the country well in its day; but the consolidated school can do the job better, and the sooner the replacement is complete, the better for all concerned.

Coolidge Plans to Visit Texas

WASHINGTON lets it be known that Calvin Coolidge expects to visit El Paso and other Texas cities after his retirement from office. Cowboy Congressman Hudspeth was "the breakfast guest of the president and they discussed Texas at length."

It was at the table that the president made the pledge to the cowboy congressman to visit the state and at the same time he whispered in the ear of the Texan that "he has long been deeply interested in Texas and wishes to take time to see it leisurely after his retirement from office."

There are more tillable acres of land in Williamson county than the entire state of Vermont. There are 254 Texas counties and all on the map.

There is only one Texas. It covers all the territory lying between the Gulf of Mexico and the Rocky mountains. Its history covers six flags. It voted for the Hoover electors in 1928. And thus convinced the most liberal of the fundamentalists that evolution is on the way.

FAITH BUILDS IN ANY TOWN

The Wichita Falls Record News gave front page space to the architect's drawing of the Memorial auditorium, plans of which have been accepted, and work to commence soon. The slogan that Wichita Falls has adopted is "The City That Faith Built" and the printing of this beautiful memorial building to be built in Graham, giving it front page position, along with a writeup from the staff writer, is an extenuation of their slogan, in that the auditorium is the culmination of the faith that the Chamber of Commerce has in the town of Graham.

A DOUBLE LOSS TO WEST TEXAS

In the past week death has removed from West Texas two of its most able financiers and town and community builders.

First, Breckenridge Stephens Walker died in Fort Worth, although his birthplace was Breckenridge, and it was his home for many years. Second, Lee Bivins, capitalist, ranchman, oil baron, mayor of Amarillo and a leading man in the progressive civic and industrial affairs of his city, passed away in Wichita Falls while returning from a business mission to Fort Worth.

Types of men like Breck Walker and Lee Bivins make it hard to get along without. These gentlemen came up from the "grass roots" in West Texas. Walker was the first white male child born in Stephens county, Bivins going to Amarillo when a young man thirty-eight years ago and entering the ranching business.

The Day Book of a New Yorker
Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Taxi Tommy differs somewhat from the usual type. Exposure to all kinds of weather, eye strain and nerve strain serve to harden and line the features of most drivers, but Tommy has managed to preserve that schoolgirl complexion without the aid of any particular brand of soap—and somewhat against his will, too, as he is anything but feminine in his ways.

Tommy is up against it. Another driver from Chicago and points west, took a fancy to Tommy and formed a sort of partnership with him, with results not altogether satisfactory to either. Not that Tommy isn't on the level, for he is; that's part of his trouble. But let him tell it in his own way:

"What I want to know," says Tommy plaintively, "is where do I get off on this job? There's the wife and the two kiddies to be thought of, and I wouldn't have that little dame get the notion I'm crooked for all the cabs in the city.

"When Chicago Ike came along I was cruising upper Broadway on my own in a rattler that kept me busy holding it together. Ike had a good new maroon-colored cab, and after we'd got together two or three times in a beanery he proposed a 50-50 split-up on fares. It was all to the good from my way of figuring, so we made the deal. And that's the way it worked out to the finish.

"Some days my 50 for him would be three dollars, some days twice as much, while his 50 for me never ran under eight dollars and once went as high as twenty.

"'This isn't fair to you, Ike,' I says to him one day. 'They don't like to ride in my old tub, and won't unless they have to, because it's raining or because there ain't any other cab in sight. Let's call it off until I can get a better car.'

"'Nothing doin' kid,' he says. 'Not in that way. But I'll help you to get a new car—lend you enough for the down payment and get you going right. What say?'

"Well, I said O. K., of course. Who wouldn't? And I got a new car just like Ike's. Then the divvies grew larger on both sides. Ike didn't work in any one district, but cruised all over the city, but we managed to meet regularly at the beanery.

"I'd been living deep down on the East Side, but as business got better I parked the dame and the kiddies in a nice little flat uptown and blew myself for fancy fixings for it and gave the girl the rest of the roll, telling her to doll up in any way she wanted to.

"Then things didn't go so good. Ike didn't show up at the beanery for two weeks, and when we met again I was in the dumps. There was a $75 payment due on the car and not more than $10 left in the roll. Ike asked what was the matter, and I told him. I didn't even have his share left.

"'Don't let that bother you, kid,' says he, 'you've got a hundred coming to you from me and here it is.'

"He counted out the bills, said he'd meet me again in the beanery at midnight and blew out.

"I was sitting in the beanery about one in the morning, waiting for him. The place was pretty full of drivers—it was a sort of hang-out for them.

"Then four fellows blew in with handkerchiefs over their faces and guns in their fists. They lined us up and proceeded to collect. One of them stuck his gun in my belly and said, 'Come across, kid—shell out that hundred and be quick about it.'

"It was Ike. I recognized his voice.

"'This is a dirty trick, Ike,' I said, when he interrupted with: 'Shell out and close your trap! We're playing no favorites here.'

"Well, I shelled out, but I said some ugly things while I was doing it—about it being a bum way to treat a pal, and being sorry to have chummed with a crook and like that. But he just grunted and took the dough.

"Well, I figured the car would be taken away from me by the dealer, that we'd have to sell our nice new stuff and dive down into the East Side again, and I knew it would be a heartbreak to the little dame at home, so I just kept cruising all night to stall off telling her as long as possible.

"Next day about noon I decided to go and see the dealer and surrender the car, but as soon as he sees me come in he rushes up, shakes hands and gives me a receipt in full for the balance on the car. Ike had been in earlier and paid me out of hock, he said.

"And when I got home that night there was a special delivery letter waiting for me with a $100 bill in it and just a line saying: 'Goodby, kid. Buck up and go on playing the game your own way.'

"What I want to know is what I ought to do about this. If I knew where Ike was I'd pay him back, for I'm making good. And I can't squeal on him to the coppers. I'm all up in the air about it. He's done me a good turn, I'll admit, but hasn't he put me in dutch doing it—and the dame?"

VIOLA PARADISE

"On the boat coming from Europe," Miss Paradise told me, "was a couple whose identity I shall disguise under the alias of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. They had with them their little 6-year-old boy, Jimmy. Jimmy was one of those fidgety little nuisances. Mrs. Brown was a buxom woman, boisterous of voice and possessing of a rather caustic manner of speech. Mr. Brown was a small, wiry man—good-natured, easy-going, calm and submissive. One might even say he was henpecked.

"Little Jimmy was a trial—especially on a boat. If he wasn't into mischief in one part of the ship he was in another.

"One morning the trio was walking along the deck. Mr. Brown was pale and wan from seasickness. Little Jimmy, when his parents weren't watching, had climbed up onto the rail—walking along the top of it. The merest slip of his little foot would mean that he'd go overboard. Mrs. Brown saw him and almost swooned.

"'Speak to Jimmy!' she commanded of Mr. Brown.

"Mr. Brown slowly and wearily glanced in the direction of his son.

"'Hello, Jimmy,' he said."

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air, and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Honer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Honer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

But relieved of the fear of an immediate throttling grip, he wrote Jerry Ballard briefly, expressing in his cunningest phrase complete lack of interest in Honer, his affairs and any bequests he might have made. Exhausted then to the point of indifference to every other desire, he fell upon his bed and slept through 20 hours.

He woke to find Rex Welling, the youthful head of his condensing room, waiting to see him. He had almost forgotten Welling. Now, when after hasty ablutions he called the young fellow into his living room, he was startled to see, instead of the ruddy, eager, vigorous young man he had become accustomed to depend upon as one of his aides, a white-faced, trembling creature, who found difficulty in walking across a room unassisted, and who looked at him with a scared appeal in his eyes that told at once half his story.

"Tried to Get Me"

"They tried to get me, Mr. Brainard," he said, "I came to tell you."

It required but a few brief questions and answers to elicit all that Welling himself knew about his own case. He had received a mysterious telephone message one evening, difficult at first to understand, then clearly suggesting that there was opportunity for him to make a large sum of money if he were willing to part with information he could gather in Brainard's employ. By his own account he had refused indignantly—and what had followed bore him out. His unknown telephone correspondent had told him he was likely to regret such a decision—and the next night he had been taken ill in his boarding house, where his doctor presently examining him said he had been poisoned. What the poison was, and how it had been administered to him, neither he nor his physician nor his terrified landlady could guess. But he was left in no doubt as to a connection between his illness and the threat that had preceded it; for a letter, unstamped, was left during the following night under the front door of the house where he lived, addressed to him and containing two brief sentences:

Let's reconsider, what?
How do you like it?

Of course, he took this as a preliminary to further approaches. He had come to Brainard as soon as he could.

"I'm not surprised," Brainard told him, watching him covertly. "There are men who would pay you nearly anything you like for what they think you know. They will try again to get you.

"On the other hand, if you are faithful to me I'll see that you have any reasonable thing you want—and that you are protected. There are two ways to answer them. Next time they ask you, go and prove to them that you can be of no use to them without a condenser; and that you know no more about building a condenser than they do; or stay here and live with me for a while, and spend your spare time running down your telephone correspondent or the source of your letter.

"Oh, let me do that!" cried the young man.

"I doubt if you will find either," Brainard said. "My enemies are getting wise. But the first thing you may do is to record your experience just as you've told it to me. I'll put it with some other records I've been making, and we'll give it out to the theaters as a sort of prophylactic continued story of what is happening to us."

Welling stared at him. Then his pallid lips began to laugh and life came back to him.

"I see!" he said. "They can't fight you!"

"It's going to pay to be loyal to me. And one of your jobs is to make as many other people in this place see it as you know how."

He had neglected to examine carefully the parts of the condensing machine he had brought in from Honer's mountain cabin. He told Welling to attend to that. Welling later reported that the machine was complete—and then discovered that it would not work. Brainard smiled; he had been sure this would be the result. There was a part of a vibrator which he himself always supplied to every machine set up, and which he put into none of the spare machines. Only those in active use on the floor were equipped with the essential bit of the magic, mysterious substance that made them worth the metal in them. If Welling, who was as familiar with the machine as any one except himself, had not missed this essential in setting up, doubtless Honer had never known of its existence. The possibility of less well-informed enemies' imitating his devices seemed remote.

The theater men were scared. "We can't run that stuff, Mr. Brainard," one of them protested. "Mortimer and Ballard! Why, it's libel—and they'd ruin us!"

"It's not libel," smiled Brainard. "I'm just taking the public into my confidence. They'll protect you—and me, too."

"It means trouble," said another exhibitor; and then exclaimed, "Why, it's ruin—for them, or for you!"

"Maybe you can take care of yourself, Mr. Brainard," the first man continued, "but leave us out of the fight."

"All right," Brainard returned quietly; "I'll find plenty of theaters that will run this stuff. If not, I'll open a couple myself."

They squirmed at that. "But—they'll sue us—shut us up—get injunctions! Why, you're practically charging them with—with——"

Striking Back

"Conspiracy?" queried Brainard helpfully. "No, I'm charging them with nothing. I'm just showing the world what has happened, as we see it—some of it as we were not intended to see it. Curious things the Vicarion gets! If the attorneys for Mortimer & Ballard approach you, send them to me. If anybody tries to enjoin you, notify me. I'll take any of 'em in and give 'em a private view of several things I haven't shown you. Any of 'em—attorneys, judges, politicians, mayors, governors! I haven't expended any ammunition on you yet—nor on the public. Nor on Mortimer & Ballard. If Sam Ellshofer, Mortimer's personal attorney, wants to start suit against me after seeing and hearing what I am offering you for exhibition to the public, we'll simply take the exhibition into court—along with several other exhibits we shall readily collect—and stand on our facts."

They stared at him. "But this isn't our quarrel!" one of them protested faintly, at last.

"You'll have hard work to stay out of it if you're going to run theaters," said Brainard. "But what are you afraid of? Show me the man you're afraid of! I'll bring him up here and sit down with him to look over a few pages out of the life he has lived, public and private, day and night, indoors and out, for a day past, or a month, or a year! I may not please him, but I'll interest him."

"But—but, do you think you can scare people out of fighting you by—by snowing them up?"

"Why put it that way? Suppose we merely say we are insisting on the Scriptural qualifications for any man who wants to throw stones."

"You'll never control the world by such a—such a—"

"Well, gentlemen, shall I invite you—any of you—to sit with me and look back at what you were doing, say last Saturday night at 11:45—or yesterday afternoon at 3:30—or at 3:30 this morning?"

They were silent. He glanced around the group; one after another they dodged his eyes. At last one of them ventured:

"Trying to blackmail us?"

"Not at all. I'm just trying to show you which bandwagon to climb on to."

"Somebody will kill you!"

"Will they be any better off to have my power distributed among their neighbors, their business rivals, and their personal enemies? Don't you suppose I've been all around this little circle of discussion before?"

They were still. Presently one of them swore huskily, and got up. Brainard rose slowly.

"I'll send you the bombs containing these records in time for your afternoon shows," he said simply.

And not one of them had an answer to make. They went.

He ordered tickets for the day's matinee at The Empress, put them into an envelope with his card, and sent them by special messenger to Mortimer & Ballard.

At 1 o'clock Jerry Ballard was in his office.

The inescapable conclusion that Van Winkle had loved her, or had believed himself in love with her at a time when to her he had been but one of many dancing men, was a sufficiently startling one to draw from that scene Phyllis had witnessed with the afflicted man. But it was a much stranger revelation that this same backward glance into time, which had made him again aware of it. In one aspect it was ludicrous; in another, pitiful. She could see nothing funny in it after that broken, despairing ejaculation of his when he realized it.

But two elements in the incident demanded attention. One was that it had been some of the man's feeling for her that had alone persisted in his darkened mind when other affairs and conditions of his life had vanished from memory; the other was that the dates he thought he recalled were not necessarily true or significant ones. He had come upon the New Embassy hall by accident, while recording local history for the theaters, but his own history might now be within his grasp.

Van Winkle had realized this last fact, of course. He himself had suggested that his notions of his recollections might easily be the results of suggestions given him before or after he had lost his memory.

But when she had hinted that he might now use the means Brainard had furnished for searching still further into the past surrounding that established incident, he seemed to shrink from it. And much as it might appeal to or touch any woman to know that a man loved her, she could hardly fail to see why he might not choose to probe into a wound so curiously healed over. Bizarre situation, truly! But if his case was abnormal it simply illustrated by exaggeration the normal man's relation to his normal ability to forget! If forgetting was happiness, it was folly to remember!

But this was only one of the lesser matters of which she had now to think. The effect of the Vicarion upon daily life was arresting the attention of every intelligent observer. Social life was flagging. At first people gathered eagerly in their usual groupings, the great theme compelling them to discussion. But the more they saw of what some one had now called liquid reincarnation, the more irresistible the experience itself became. The curious, the critical, the frivolous and the serious alike were caught by phases of the Vicarion's astounding revelations.

But nobody could fail to understand. Phyllis herself sat one night in the Empress, an enormous theater, formerly for motion pictures, and heard a chorus of a thousand voices in support of soloists among whom was Adelina Patti, in a magnificent rendering of "the Messiah," given in London years before even the phonograph was dreamed of. It was no mere scene; she was in London, listening to Patti, on that eventful night long years before she was born! And then she stood in the streets of Paris on a night in 1792 and heard a mad French mob sing the Marseillaise. The mob's own spirit caught her reason momentarily away! She stood in No Man's Land on the Marne, and looked first into German and then into French faces, in the teeth of machine gun fire—and saw how men do meet death! For hours afterward she went about, trying to find her way back to today, among fallen young bodies, writhing and stark. In less fevered hours, she heard John Knox preach and Paganin play! Again she saw a Macedonian phalanx in battle with hordes of unknown naked savages. She saw what had once been a man taken from Calcutta's Black Hole. She heard the Confederates yell at Antietam!—and saw a bullet pull the white lining out through the blue of a Union soldier's coat! And she lay in her bed staring, sleepless, with every fiber in her body shaking, on a night after she had looked into a Russian prison!

Madness

People could not write or converse sanely about the Vicarion; they gave up trying. They gave up shaking their heads in amazement or apprehension. They only crowded the theaters, old and new. They crowded every building which opened its doors with announcement of the Vicarion. Her home city flamed with signs. In one theater in which she sat, scenes in other cities were shown, where throngs fought for opportunity to see Liquid Life. San Francisco, Denver, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York! You could see their eyes flare—and hear them pant!

America was mad. Europe was waiting agape till a supply of the new marvels could be afforded for consumption there. Every day that the girl traversed the streets she saw the spread of Brainard's activities. Building after building was taken over, at any cost, at every inconvenience to other interests. The fire which destroyed that block of studios, once belonging to Complete Illusions, but bought for Brainard, did not even delay his expansion. He swept on into the suddenly paralyzed headquarters of the former monopoly like a rolling flood. It was rumored that the fire had been the blow of an enemy aimed at him. It was said that the former members of Complete Illusions Incorporated had schemed, conspired, fought, begged, wept, in their crazed efforts to check him first, and then to destroy him. But it was rumored too that Brainard had simply recorded their conspirings and their weepings and held them ready to show in public when he might choose.

One night Phyllis saw two men suddenly come madly to blows before a theater ticket office over some quarrel about right of way. A score of people were hurt in a panic resulting from a rush at the Bijou-Pacific on the night when certain real history behind the evidence in a historic divorce trial was shown. A committee of public safety, so-called, announced that showings of the Vicarion would be stopped until all records could be viewed and passed upon by authority; but nothing happened, and it was said that Brainard had responded that he would welcome such censorship, provided the censors would first submit their own careers to the Vicarion's eye. The leaders in the movement became curiously unenthusiastic. A mob demolished a trolley car that stopped one evening in its midst before the doors of the Palais Royale and blocked free passage to the entrance. A train load of Brainard's bombs was wrecked as it started east from the Salt Lake yards, in Los Angeles, because somebody had put ties across the tracks; next day a fanatic who had done the thing was in jail, picked up first by the Vicarion and then by the officers. A prisoner escaped from San Quentin, and that night, before he was caught, his movements were shown in Santa Monica theaters. A popular preacher denounced Brainard in unmeasured terms in his pulpit on a Sunday morning; and that night he arrived in his church to find his congregation gaping at a miraculous presentation there of himself reproaching a recent sermon on charity. A trial was stopped instantly in a local court by a sudden appearance of the exact re-enactment of the deed involved, which frightened two witnesses for the defense into confession of perjury. A notorious dive at a nearby beach suddenly closed its doors, after one scene from its parlors was shown in the prosecuting attorney's office.

A newspaper said that a man had come to Brainard claiming to have discovered the secret of the Vicarion; and Brainard had merely retorted, "You haven't any secrets I don't know!" And this phrase spread from mouth to mouth, slanged and laughed at, but persisting because it was an expression, in reverse perhaps, of a universal fear.

People grew uneasy-eyed, indeed, over conversations that approached private matters. Phyllis was suddenly aware that women were becoming newly anxious to ingratiate themselves with her; and Relief Brainard furnished her the reason. "They know you are to marry Radley, my dear. They think you will share his power and multiply his motives."

History repeated itself in minor events, in kind if not in detail. There were plenty of variations upon the theme of marital jealousy, with and without cause, revealed by The Vicarion. One suspicious woman forced confession from her scared spouse by merely describing in general terms an imaginary scene in one of his haunts she claimed to have witnessed by proxy. A murder and two suicides that occurred in near-by California towns were charged to revelations made by the new method. The newspapers seized upon this and presently were assigning the same cause to every deed of violence.

MOODY FAVORS UTILITY BOARD

Appointive Commission to Control Rates Urged

AUSTIN, Jan. 25. (AP)—Gov. Dan Moody favors an appointive state utility commission "to protect the people from excessive and exorbitant utility rates," but is "absolutely opposed" to an elective commission, he said in a statement today.

"By all means the utility commission should be appointed, for we do not want utility companies trying to use influence in the election of a utility commission," Governor Moody said. "An elective utility commission, instead of controlling utilities, would ultimately become a utility-controlled commission. I am for an appointive commission, and in this I stand where Governor Hogg stood with reference to the railroad commission, because he insisted upon an appointive railroad commission."

City Plants Exempted

Municipality-owned plants would be exempted from provisions of the bill, which provides for a commission with power to regulate rates of all public utilities.

The senate committee on state affairs reached this decision last night after a public hearing on measures proposed by Senators A. J. Wirtz of Seguin and Ed Westbrook of Sherman, jointly, and T. J. Holbrook of Galveston, and found itself surrounded by many city attorneys and mayors who were protesting inclusion of municipally-owned plants. Senator Holbrook offered his bill as a substitute for the Wirtz-Westbrook creation.

Gov. Dan Moody gave his endorsement to the bill, adding he believed the time had come to "protect the people from exorbitant rates" for public utilities.

Subterfuge Charged

Hank Abney of Sherman charged the public utilities companies and not the cities or people of Texas were back of the move for a state commission to regulate public utilities.

He said he was opposed to the intereference of state boards in local matters and criticized the operation of the railroad commission in handling gas rate controversies.

The governor outlined his views on the matter near the end of the hearing. He asserted there had been no need for a utility commission until utilities became monopolistic in this state.

"Home rule was all right a long time ago when we had a little phone company or a local electric light concern, but now one line serves 50 or 60 towns," the governor said.

He said that neither patrons of utility companies nor cities had any way of finding out whether or not the rate they charged for telephone, telegraph, electric and gas services was just.

Suggestions Made

Mayor Joseph F. Nichols of Greenville interrupted him to agree that state regulation of inter-city service was acceptable and to suggest that cities be allowed to make their own deals within their boundaries with the commission to act as an appellate body in case no agreement could be reached.

R. E. Rouer took a like stand concerning rate-fixing within the cities, but admitted that "we need some relief."

City attorney Jim Collins of Dallas told the legislators they should arrive at some method of determining the value of the public utilities before attempting to form a price-fixing commission.

Joe Ryan, city attorney of San Antonio, made the final suggestion to the senate committee. He asserted that the utilities corporations should not be permitted to choose the venue of hearing or court trials.

The several talks lasted until near midnight, at which time none of the public utilities representatives had been heard. The committee decided to meet again next Tuesday to hear further discussion.

The term public utilities in the original bill would include light, telegraph, telephone, bus, street car, waterworks and gas companies.

AVOID TOO MUCH DOSING FOR FLU SAY PHYSICIANS

Its Toxins Upset Stomach and Constant Dosing Further Disturbs Digestion

According to health authorities, a peculiarity of influenza is that its toxins upset the digestive system, especially in the case of children. Too much "dosing" still further disturbs the digestion, and should be avoided except on advice of a physician.

Vicks VapoRub is especially valuable because it is applied externally and so can be used freely with no risk of upsetting the digestion. Nor can it interfere with any other treatment your doctor may prescribe.

Rubbed on the throat and chest, Vicks acts two ways at once: (1) through the skin like a poultice, and (2) By means of its medicated vapors, released by body-warmth and inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

In the present epidemic, as in 1918, Vicks is proving its usefulness in millions of homes. In spite of vastly increased capacity, it is again necessary to run the laboratories all night long, as the public now demands over 375,000 jars every 24 hours.—Adv

Rescued Skipper Fills in Pages of Epic Left Blank by Modest Rescuer

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. (AP)—The missing pages of the epic rescue of the crew of the Italian tramp steamer Florida by the American liner America were filled in today by the Florida's own captain, Giuseppe Favoloro, in a wireless dispatch to the Associated Press.

In simple phrases, the Italian told of the gale that wrecked the ship. The rescue was made on Jan. 23, but as early as Jan. 12 boisterous weather was encountered by the Florida.

How fiercely the gale raged on the night of Jan. 20, might not be realized but for one seaman's phrase used by Captain Favoloro. He said "green" water broke over the ship fore and aft. These were watery mountains that broke on the little tramp in full force.

The might of this green water was so great that shortly before midnight the rudder chains gave way. During the next three days repeated efforts were made to repair this damage.

As the days passed the storm increased. The bridge was carried away, a hatch was stove in and the ship listed to its gunwales.

Ohio Lady Says Her Sister Gave Cardui on Two Occasions With Resulting Relief and Better Health.

KANAUGA, Ohio.—"When I was a girl, I had bad cramping spells," says Mrs. Nora Love, of this place, in telling how she obtained relief.

"I had a misery in my back, and frequently had to go to bed.

"My sister thought Cardui would do me good. She had me to take it. I took Cardui for eight months, and it did me a great deal of good. It gave me complete relief from cramping. I have never cramped any more, and I have felt strong and well.

"Several years later, I was rundown and weak, and needed something to help build me up.

"My back hurt most all the time, and I was extremely weak. I had to lie flat on my back for days.

"My sister got a bottle of Cardui and began to give it to me. In about a week, I was feeling much better, so I got another bottle and took it.

"I improved so much that I kept on taking Cardui until I felt entirely well. I think it is a fine medicine, and I am glad to tell other women, who suffer as I did, about it.

"After I took Cardui, I gained weight and strength."

Conference Holds Germany's Future

CHICAGO, Jan. 25. (US)—Germany's financial future depends largely upon the outcome of the forthcoming reparations conference, Ambassador Friedrich Wilhelm von Prittwitz declared at a dinner given in his honor by the Commercial club here tonight.

This was the only reference he made to the reparations question.

One of the greatest problems confronting Germany, he said, is her dearth of capital. Thus far capital has had to be imported and has not had the opportunity to accumulate and become "raw material" for economic reconstruction, he said.

The ambassador declared that "democracy at home and peace abroad" are the chief aims of the "new Germany."

Irvin Cobb Thinks Doctrine Now Useless

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Jan. 25. (INS)—Irvin S. Cobb, noted author and humorist, doesn't hold the Monroe doctrine in high regard, he revealed in a speech before the American club here.

"My tour of this continent has shown me that the large republics of South America now need the Monroe doctrine no more than a lusty college man needs a governess," he said.

"The doctrine appears to me to be a game in which the South American countries are invited to play," he added, "but it seems that each United States secretary of state may change the rules."

FORMER MEMBER U. S. SENATE NOW ENDORSES SARGON

Sargon is rapidly becoming a household word throughout America. Thousands of grateful men and women from all walks of life have been lifted out of the throes of lost vitality, suffering, misery and ill-health.

In relating his experience with this famous medicine, United States Senator Thomas W. Hardwick, who served his state for six years in the Upper House of Congress, and who was later elected Governor of Georgia, said:

"I had lost most of my old-time energy and both mental and physical fatigue came more quickly than formerly. Constipation especially had troubled me for the past ten years and I had become accustomed to dosing myself with some physic or laxative every few days. My appetite was not keen and my meals did not seem to agree with me as they should. Sometimes I would feel positively wretched for days at a time. Sargon was highly recommended to me and I decided to try it.

"The medicine helped me from the very first. It gave me a splendid appetite. I don't know when I have enjoyed my meals more than I do now. I eat with more relish and experience no ill or uncomfortable after-effects whatever. Naturally my capacity for work has increased. I feel more efficient. I have more energy. In fact, I feel that I am in better health than it has been my pleasure to enjoy in many years, but most important of all, I no longer find it necessary to continually take laxatives and cathartics.

"I also took the Sargon Pills with fine results and consider them a valuable part of the treatment.

"I take pleasure in endorsing Sargon for the genuine improvement that it has brought about in my physical condition."

Sargon may be obtained in Wichita Falls from the Renfro Drug Co., Eighth and Scott streets, No. 1 main store, and Seventh and Indiana, No. 2; and in Electra from Lough's Drug Store.—Adv.

COOLIDGES END SOCIAL DUTIES

Final Reception Held at White House

By MARTHA STRAYER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. (UP)—The president smiled and Mrs. Coolidge laughed as they walked through a lane of applauding men and women in evening dress at the White House last night.

They had finished their last official social duties as master and mistress of the presidential residence.

A packed house was their audience for this final social appearance before the Hoovers take possession of the executive mansion. It was the army and navy reception, last of the series of four great evening receptions given at the White House each winter.

Record Crowd

Nineteen hundred and twenty-seven men and women in full dress uniforms and evening gowns, battled their way inside, handed little brown admission tickets to officers at the door, stood in line for half an hour to an hour, shook hands with the Coolidges, battled through the crowd that filled every room from wall to wall, and fought their way out again. The combination of a rainy night and a record crowd made a traffic jam that kept the White House doors open till nearly midnight before the last taxi took the last guest away.

Both the president and Mrs. Coolidge look older than—fully four years older than—when the Coolidge administration began in 1925. The president's hair is still untouched with grey, but his face is beginning to be deeply lined. His wife's hair is greying but her face still is youthful.

Mrs. Coolidge wore one of her handsomest costumes and looked her very best, at this last reception. Her dress was dull blue crepe, with a magnificent court train which fell from the shoulders and trailed six feet behind her. Her slippers were blue, and her earrings and necklace crystal.

She laughed when a newspaper reporter told her it was a mournful occasion—the last reception at which she would be star.

"No," she said, "it's a happy occasion."

Poultry and Cows Overcome Setbacks

(By Staff Correspondent)

RANDLETT, Okla., Jan. 25—Not withstanding that last year one hail storm cleaned out much of the wheat and another the cotton, the Randlett community is far from being in distress, local business men assert. Poultry, dairy products and live stock income has helped offset the calamity.

Current statement of the Bank of Randlett shows deposits of $82,831.78. Officers of the bank are: Sheriff C. O. Hooper, president; C. H. Berry, vice president; Mrs. G. W. Berry, cashier; Miss Henrietta Berry, assistant cashier.

MIMIC NAVAL BATTLE STARTS

Rival Fleets in Tense Array Match Their Wits

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone, Jan. 25. (UP)—A staccato crackle of the radio on a secret frequency—quick analysis of the land officer at the highty defense center of the Panama canal—and the battle for supremacy of the great waterway was on tonight.

The moon-silvered stretch of the Pacific was silent, save for the one radio hint and below its horizon one of the greatest mimic naval battles staged in the Americas had begun.

Fourteen dreadnaughts and scores of cruisers, destroyers and submarines approached the crisis of general engagement with the word that scouting vessels of the "blue" Atlantic and the "black" Pacific fleets had met. The blue, with an inferior force of ships—75 in number—is fighting in defense of the Pacific entrance to the canal against the attack of the blacks with 99 ships.

A superior air force roosts on the airplane carrier of the blue squadrons, however, and it was thought possible that their keen observation in the late afternoon may have given the blues a tactical advantage.

Land forces at the canal mouth were prepared for all angles of attack.

Deployed through the dense jungles, the defending army was perfecting communication with separate units today, while squadrons of bombing planes were "on the line" and loaded with big 1,500-pound "eggs," awaiting the word, like air cavalry, to charge in formation.

Every Woman Knows

Every woman knows how easy it is to burn or scald herself while working in her home. Every woman knows that these burns and scalds are painful and sometimes very slow to heal. Quanah Names City Engineer

QUANAH, Texas, Jan. 25.—Harry Roberts of the Hawley Engineering company of Fort Worth has been appointed hydraulic engineer for the city by the city council.

The water situation has become so acute here chiefly on account of the rapid growth of the town that immediate steps had to be taken to greatly increase the supply. Recently the city purchased a spring across Red river in Oklahoma which is relieving the situation to a considerable extent.

The duty of the newly appointed engineer is to make a complete survey of all possibly sources of an ample water supply and recommend to the city officials the most logical course to pursue in securing sufficient water to meet the rapidly growing needs of Quanah.

SHARKEY WINS DECISION OVER CHRISTNER IN SAVAGE FIGHT

JACK'S RALLY SAVES VERDICT

Veteran K. O. Gives Bostonian Strenuous Mill

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, smashed out a bruising decision over K. O. Christner, rugged Akron veteran, in a stirring 10-round battle here tonight.

Sharkey weighed 193, Christner 194.

A capacity house of close to 20,000 with the "gate" above $90,000 greeted the heavyweights. Sharkey was a 3 to 1 favorite over the 34-year-old mid-westerner, who jumped into fame by knocking out Knut Hansen two months ago. The referee was Jack Demming and the judges Tommy Shortell and George Kelley.

His Miami Beach engagement with Young Stribling at stake, Sharkey fought in slashing fashion to outbruise the burly rubber worker who sprang into prominence through his recent knockout of Knute Hansen.

Although there were no knockdowns, one or the other reeled in almost every round in the will swinging fray. The crowd, in sympathy with Christner's game stand, booed the decision lustily.

Fight by Rounds

Round one: Sharkey came out cautiously and met Christner's rush with a left hook to the jaw. They wrestled, ripped wild torrents of gloves to each other's heads and bodies. The crowd roared as Christner slammed Sharkey across the ring and forced him to the defensive with a savage body attack. Christner ripped a right to Sharkey's chin that sent the Boston tar into faster retreat. Jack stopped in his own corner to slug it out on even terms with K. O. Sharkey ripped four left hooks to Christner's body, grunting loudly with each just before the bell.

Round Two: Sharkey boxed cautiously then buried a right into Christner's body that made the Akronite clinch. Christner glanced a right off the sailor's chin but Sharkey whaled him with left hooks. Christner's lack of polish became apparent as Sharkey nailed him with left jabs and hooks to the head and body. K. O. struggled in close where he hammered rights now and then to Sharkey's head. They were in a clinch at the bell.

Round three: Sharkey boxed indolently. He easily parried Christner's leads. K. O. ripped a right to Sharkey's chin that brought Jack back to work. Sharkey pumped left hooks and countered to Christner's body. Christner blinked, nearly floored Sharkey with a right to the chin. Before Jack could recover K. O. ripped in another that knocked the hair over Sharkey's eyes. Sharkey fought back and was outscoring Christner at the bell.

Round four: Sharkey tore into the rubber worker with a left to the body. He threw aside caution and slugged with Christner in a wild melee on the ropes. As they came away Christner packed a swing on Sharkey's temple but Jack belted him on the body. The crowd roared as Sharkey stood in the center of the ring, bobbing and weaving away from a dozen swings to the head. They were in a clinch at the bell.

Round five: Christner fell into a clinch and clubbed Sharkey's head with rights. Enraged by the right hand punches that bounced off Sharkey ripped into Christner with both hands. K. O. slugged back with both hands until Sharkey held, blinking. Sharkey missed frequently as Christner bulled him into a corner and smashed him hastily with both hands. A right to the chin dazed Sharkey and he was holding on grimly at the bell.

Round six: Sharkey's seconds gave him smelling salts and he came out cautiously, evading Christner's right. As K. O. missed a swing, Sharkey stepped in with right and left uppercuts that shook K. O. to the heels. Sharkey pasted home another right and had Christner groggy after two uppercuts. Groggy but dangerous, Christner belted Jack in the face with a stinging right. Sharkey measured him coolly and buried a left hook deep in Christner's body. Christner rushed into steady body punishment until the bell rang.

Round seven: Fighting a careful counter-battle, Sharkey made Christner lead and then ripped both hands to the body. Christner lay back so Sharkey drove in with a booming left hook to the ribs. Christner green, but game, pushed Sharkey into the ropes and nailed him again with two right drives to the head. Sharkey fought back like a cornered cat, clawing at Christner's body and lifting his right with thudding smashes to the head. Christner landed that jarring right again at the bell.

Round eight: Tired missing frequently, both clinched and punched with one free hand. As they milled Sharkey dug his left hand steadily into Christner's body and bruised K. O.'s chin with short rights. One left started blood from Christner's nose, first apparent damage. Standing clear they traded right hand shots to the chin but neither wavered. Christner was very tired at the bell.

Round nine: Sharkey, strange mixture of caution and savageness, loafed until Christner planked a long right on his chin. Then the Boston sailor slugged K. O.'s head and body in merciless fashion and sent Christner reeling under volleys of smashes to the head. K. O. held on, apparently very tired and his blood smeared face grimaced as Sharkey buried left hooks to the body again at the bell. However, Christner landed that jarring right and Sharkey was hurt for a moment.

Round ten: Sharkey with a goodly margin ahead played safe clinching frequently to whale at Christner's body. K. O. pinned Jack against the ropes and clubbed at his sides. When Christner's iron sides failed under Sharkey's pounding, Jack ripped a right uppercut to the head. K. O. fought back with all he had left, but his best was a rather weak body cuffing. Sharkey, smiling confidentaly and ready now to take all kinds of chances, brought left and right swings all the way from his sides in an effort to floor the Akronite. Christner was dazed but still trying at the bell.

California Barred Jeff-Jack And Tex Moved Fight to Reno

Quarrels of Jim and His Trainers, Including Corbett, Caused More Worries for Rickard

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The news that Tex Rickard was going to bring together a giant Caucasian and a giant Ethiopian for the heavyweight championship of the world made great fodder for the reformers and calamity howlers and they lost no time in going to work on the fight and all those connected with it.

From the moment Rickard secured the Jeffries-Johnson match, as a result of his cash bid of $101,000, until the two men climbed into the ring at Reno, Nev., on July 4, 1910, he went through a relentless drumfire of protests. From their pulpits all over the country the ministers rose up and cried out against it. A mighty chorus of lamentations and diabolical prophesies came from women's clubs and social uplift organizations everywhere.

It was predicted that the fight would precipitate race riots and bloodshed throughout the South. In later years when Rickard was urged to match Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills he had only to recall those stormy days preceding the Jeffries-Johnson fight in order to steer clear of another mixed bout for the heavyweight championship. He knew and admitted that Wills and Dempsey would draw more money than any other battle in the history of professional pugilism but he knew, too, that it would bring down about his ears a storm of protest so violent that boxing in this country might be killed for all time.

Rickard's original idea was to stage the fight at Salt Lake City and had already started negotiations with that in view when great pressure was brought to bear on him to switch the site to San Francisco. Newspapers, sportsmen, the chamber of commerce and leaders in the business life of the city pleaded with him to bring the fight to the coast. He was disinclined to do so because he had a premonition that the governor of California was opposed to the match being held in his state. Politicians, however, assured the promoter that Governor Gillette had given his official consent. When he made sure that this was true he finally decided on San Francisco. It was a move that was to cost him a deal loss of more than $50,000, not a penny of which he ever got back.

Built $35,000 Arena

In addition to this it won him the undying enmity of the Salt Lake interests that had been clamoring for the fight and making all sorts of attractive inducements to secure it.

At a cost of $35,000 a huge arena was erected in Frisco, Tex paid this money out of his own pocket. Tickets were printed and $200,000 worth of them were sold. The early indications were that the gate would go well over a half a million dollars. Training camps were established and Rickard was just beginning to see a clear road ahead of him when Governor Gillette curtly informed him that the fight could not take place in the state of California. It was a crushing blow to the promoter and for a time he was on the point of washing his hands of the whole thing.

Governor Gillette never offered any explanation for his action but there is no doubt that it was a direct result of the torrent of protests that had been flowing steadily into his office from the moment it became known that Frisco was to get the fight. It is said that a delegation of 50 women waited on him one day and many of them threw themselves on their knees and in tears begged him to forbid the fight. They also informed him that if he allowed the fight to take place in California it would mean the end of his political career.

Mrs. Rickard Involved

Not even Mrs. Rickard, quartered in a Frisco hotel, was exempt from the pressure of the reformers. Every day she was besieged by women, many of them hysterical, who begged her to make her husband call off the fight. All this clamor and uproar and uncertainty had the effect of unnerving Jim Jeffries completely. He had not wanted to return to the ring in the first place and he never overlooked an opportunity to show his irritation. He fought with his handlers and sometimes would disappear from the camp altogether.

Between Jim Jeffries and Jim Corbett, who was supervising his training, there was continuous bickering. Corbett knew that the champion wasn't training properly. He probably knew, too, that the fighter was merely a shell of the great fighter he had been and could not possibly get into anything like real condition. After one of their many quarrels Corbett packed up and was going to leave the camp when Rickard heard of it and persuaded him to stay. Jeffries' sarcastic bad humor kept the camp in a boiling turmoil and even the sparring partners got to quarreling among themselves. This was a continual source of worry for Tex Rickard, in addition to his other troubles.

When Governor Gillette placed his official ban on the match it was up to Rickard to locate another site in a hurry. He thought of Salt Lake City again, but the interests there that had been so anxious to secure the fight now gave him the cold shoulder. He remembered Nevada and Goldfield and the successful Gans-Nelson battle and quickly decided that his only hope lay in that state. He finally selected Reno as the site for the contest and built another arena there, this one costing him even more than the bowl he had erected in San Francisco.

Jeffries Trained Little

Meanwhile, it was necessary to refund thousands of dollars to disgruntled ticket purchasers who found it impossible to make the trip to Reno. Many of them seemed to labor under the impression that Tex Rickard was personally responsible for the fight not being held in San Francisco.

Finally, after indescribable difficulties, the two camps were established in Reno and training was resumed. But Jim Jeffries seemed to have the conviction that this new arrangement would, at the last minute, suffer the same fate as the California project. Using this as an excuse, he trained even less than he had in Frisco.

Then arose the protracted squabble over the referee. This brought the two camps into direct conflict and for a time it threatened to disrupt the show. No referee that suited Johnson was satisfactory to Jeffries, and vice versa. For weeks this deadlock continued. Then one day Jack Johnson himself suggested that Tex Rickard be the third man in the ring. Probably nobody was more surprised than Rickard himself when Jim Jeffries promptly gave his consent to this arrangement.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—New York has put on 400 more crossing cops.

It's added a police parade to the traffic jam.

The situation is serious in New York city. Every night at 8 o'clock, one million people suddenly decide to go to the theater.

A traffic cop is a regular policeman with a whistle and birdseed in his dinner pail.

The million people come rushing by in limousines, taxicabs and otherwise.

The otherwise can be on bicycles, on foot or underfoot.

As the man in the air said, "If that's an underslug chassis, then I am an overslung pedestrian."

The traffic cop blows his whistle and everything starts up in a well-ordered stampede.

The foot-sloggers rush across the street in an attempt to deploy in skirmish fashion.

The automobiles take advantage of the flood tide and scamper east, west, north and south.

The survivors get to the theaters.

But the man who invented the theater stagger plan shouldn't forget that the hospitals are still playing matinees.

We have a few simple recipes which will ease off the traffic situation. They have not been endorsed by the life extension bureau.

Compel all pedestrians to wear tail-lights.

When a driver sticks his hand out of the car window make him wear a boxing glove on it.

Allow Sunday drivers to make left turns on grade crossings.

Close all the east and west streets to pedestrians. Close all the north and south streets to everything.

Traffic lights do no good. The way to get rid of a mole on your nose is to knock it off.

You may paint it red or green But it's still a mole.

If you have any better ideas than these, don't send them to us.

PROMOTING NOT NEW FOR JACK

Runyon Says Dempsey Will Be Successful

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright 1929 by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—The hope of Miami, otherwise William Harrison Dempsey, is not engaged in his first promotion of the sour science in presenting the enterprise involving the turrible Sharkey man, and the king of the cane brakes.

The hope of Miami—for he is the only hope of the Sharkey-Stribling matter achieving success—was a promoter some 15 years ago. Long before he had fame as the Manassa Mauler. When he was only about 19. A real promoter, too.

It was along about 1914. The hope of Miami was then a boy ranging the western slope of Colorado, Montrose, Grand Junction, Delta, The Uncomphagre valley, Ouray, The San Juan country, Telluride, Durango. He called Montrose his home. It is in the heart of the fruit section of the western slope.

His parents had moved there from the little town of Manassa, in the San Luis valley of Colorado, where Dempsey was born. They were later to move on to Salt Lake City, in Utah, where the Manassa Man Mauler first achieved some pugilistic note. Not much, but some.

The Young Promoter

Dempsey did his first boxing in Montrose. He had a chum there named Freddy Woods. You will find the name in Dempsey's record. KO four rounds. Freddy was a blacksmith, I believe. He did not follow a pugilistic career long, that is certain.

The sour science had no standing in Montrose in those days. But the young folks liked to dance. So Dempsey hired a hall, announced a fight between himself and Freddy Woods, with dancing to follow.

There was a fair crowd, but Dempsey admits that the prospect of dancing was probably as much of an attraction as the fistic entertainment. The toll was 50 cents. Dempsey collected tickets at the door, boxed with Woods, and afterwards danced with some of the gals. I believe that the Manassa Mauler promoted a number of these combination affairs with more or less success.

No shrewded exponent of the sour science ever lived than Dempsey. He always seemed to be a little too sharp for managers even before he fell under the domination of Doctor Kearns. Half the time he was making his own matches when he was a mere pork-and-beaner, 'way, 'way down in the sticks.

He Learned From Experts

His observation and experience under Kearns and Rickard gave him valuable information on the business side of the game. He also had the coaching of Jim Coffroth, the old San Francisco promoter. I see no reason why Dempsey should not make one of the greatest promoters, on his own hook, the game has ever known.

I do not call the Miami matter a fair test. He has a bad match in a bad spot for big business. But if it is an even money bet that Dempsey puts it over, and he can then go on to certain for greater enterprises that are in his mind. I am commencing to think that the Manassa Mauler may not have to poke his synthetic beezer through the ropes again, after all.

I believe that he entertains projects as great as any that Rickard ever undertook in a pugilistic way, and that his field of operations may be even wider than that of the dead promoter. It may sound like a large order, but this Dempsey is an ambitious fellow, and a restless fellow, who has shown that he isn't content to rest on his laurels and his money.

What is a money-metr?—Adv.

Coyotes to Play Munday Tonight

Pack on Enemy's Floor In Fourth Game of Week

The Wichita Falls high school Coyote basketeers will play the Munday quintet tonight on the Munday floor. It will be the fourth contest of a hard week for the Pack and Coach McCallum will be greatly relieved when tonight's game is over and his athletes will have a respite.

After playing last Tuesday in the Commercial league they went to Waurika, a strenuous trip that ended with their return home in the wee sma' hours Thursday morning. They didn't recover from that journey and were listless Thursday in losing to Nocona, though this is not detracting from the class of the Nocona team, which won decisively and impressively.

However, with a rest yesterday the Coyotes will be ready to give a good account of themselves tonight at Munday.

WATKINS WILL JOIN CARDINALS

Rickey Thinks Parent Club Can Use George

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 25. (UP)—That George Watkins, outfielder, who played last year with Houston and who is now with Rochester, a Cardinal farm, will be with the Cardinals before the close of the 1929 season was predicted by Branch Rickey of the Cardinal club.

Watkins name does not appear on the Cardinal roster as yet because he is now with Rochester but he will train with the Red Birds at Avon Park, Fla. Watkins has been Cardinal property as Houston also is a Cardinal farm.

Watkins last summer with Houston batted .306 in 151 games. He made 22 triple hits, 33 doubles and 13 home runs. He made a total of 176 hits for a total of 292 bases. In addition he stole 17 bases and scored 92 runs.

The Cardinal roster at present shows only 26 players, which is the smallest squad the Cardinals have had at this season in recent years. The Major league rules permit a total of 40 on the roster between Sept. 1 and June 15.

The Difference Between Nut Butter and Margarine

Because of the expense and care required for its production, butter has always been a costly article of diet and human beings have striven for many years to discover a good substitute. It was known that many fats and oils were just as nourishing as butter but were unfortunately not as palatable when spread on bread and, when placed upon the vegetable foods, they did not impart the tasty flavor that could be obtained from butter churned from sour cream.

Shortly before the Franco-Prussian war, Napoleon III offered what was in those days a large reward for the invention of a suitable butter substitute. This was finally awarded to a Frenchman named Mege-Mouries, who experimented much and spent many sleepless nights, until at last he produced a product which he called oleomargarine. He afterwards shortened the name to margarine as it is still known on the continent of Europe.

At present there are only two kinds of margarine manufactured. One is composed of various animal fats, such as beef fat and pork fat, mixed with vegetable fats, salt and milk. The other, commonly called nut margarine, contains no animal fats but is made of vegetable fats, salt and milk.

According to the commissioner of internal revenue, the principal articles of food used in the manufacturing of margarine are: Oleo oil, oleo stock, oleo stearin, neutral lard, peanut oil, coconut oil, cottonseed oil, milk, butter and salt. Of course, various manufacturers select different blends of these foods, or may omit some of them. Many of the packages of margarine sold on the market distinctly state exactly what they contain so that the composition is not a secret.

Many families now use margarine in place of butter. Some states do not permit margarine to be artificially colored and it is sold uncolored and the coloring matter is afterwards mixed into it by the housewife. It is just as wholesome when white, but the yellow coloring is more pleasing to the eye.

There is another product sometimes manufactured as a substitute for butter, called nut butter which consists simply of the ground, pulverized nuts of various kinds. Nut butter therefore is a distinct product from nut margarine. The nut butters manufactured from raw peanuts are not as easily digested because they contain a large amount of starch, but the roasted nut butters and those manufactured from almonds or non-starchy nuts, and the various types of margarine, are all quite wholesome.

The government exercises a careful supervision over the manufacture of all margarines and one can therefore feel quite safe that the best of care has been used in preparing them. There is no reason why a family wishing to exercise economy cannot use the margarines in place of butter.

Some of the fats and the milk used in preparing margarine are known to contain vitamin A, and I do not believe that there is any danger that the diet will be lacking in this element if margarine is used, especially since so many of our other foods contain this element, particularly such foods as spinach, lettuce, tomatoes, carrots, sweet potatoes, yellow corn, milk and beef fat.

This article is written because so many of my readers complain about the high cost of living and especially since I recommend butter so frequently in my menus and recipes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Pains in Stomach

Question—Mrs. R. L. O. asks: "What is the cause of a pain in the stomach at night which disappears upon arising? Have been bothered with this for about six years. Am 26 years old, 5 feet tall, and weigh 107 pounds."

Answer: Such pain is often caused simply by the formation of gas which is generated during the night. Do not expect me to diagnose your trouble in this column, as it would be unwise for me to attempt to do so. Go to a good physician and have a diagnosis made, then, if you are not improving under his treatment, write me again, giving me the diagnosis, and I will be glad to send you what advice I can.

Pancakes and Fruit

Question—Camp Cook asks: "Are flapjacks and pancakes made with baking powder or eggs, and eaten with fruit, a wholesome food?"

Answer: Make your pancakes of real wholewheat flour and you can then use such stewed fruits as prunes, raisins and figs.

Tapeworm

Question—X. Y. Z. asks: "Please, what are the symptoms of tapeworm? Have a glorious appetite, but am losing weight right along."

Answer: There are not any necessarily definite clinical symptoms of tapeworm except the evidence presented by finding a piece of tapeworm in the feces. Some people with tapeworms do not have the "glorious appetite" that you describe, and even do not lose weight. Fast for a few days and take a tapeworm remedy, and you can find out very quickly whether or not you have this trouble.

Two Black Crows

MORAN AND MACK

Moran: What's th' specialty today, Big Boy?

Mack: Red Mike an' Alfalfa.

Moran: What's that?

Mack: Corned beef and cabbage.

Moran: Say, none of our customers likes that.

Mack: I know they don't like it. But I does.

Moran: Is th' boss satisfied?

Mack: I don't know. I just fired him.

Moran: Is yo' th' boss now of this Chew an' Choke?

Mack: This ain't no Chew an' Choke, Egghead. This is th' Ritz-Carlton of th' lunch-waggins.

Moran: How comes this lunch-waggin ain't got no hoss on it?

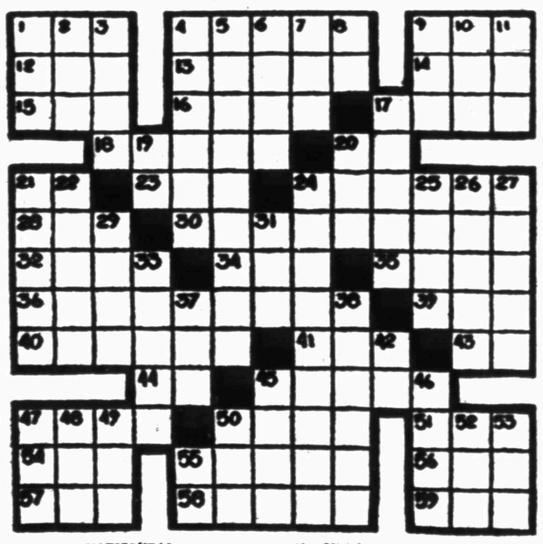

Mack: There wuz a hoss once. But th' customers ordered too many sirloins.

Moran: Well, I wants my salary. Today's pay day.

Mack: Just because yo' wants yo' salary don't make it pay day. We is doin' so much bizness that I had to use yo' salary up to make change.

The Two Black Crows are prosperous but that doesn't do Egghead any good. Their lunch wagon has been parked by a fire plug for a week, and Big Boy has so much influence that he made the city move the fire plug

'WHITES' PLAN LENT RITUAL

Court Adherents to Give in To Vatican

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI

ROME, Jan. 25. (US)—The "white" Roman aristocracy of the Italian court—as contrasted with the "black" aristocracy of the vatican—will observe lent strictly this year for the first time since the collapse of the papal dominion over Rome in 1870.

This disclosure, made exclusively to Universal Service tonight, shed new light on the viewpoint of Italian royalty towards the approaching settlement of the so-called "Roman question."

The annual mid-lent royal reception for which partial arrangements have been made including the drawing up of the guest list, has been canceled. Crown Prince Umberto, moreover, has requested his friends not to do any entertaining in his honor.

The so-called "white" aristocracy comprises those who have adhered to the royal court, and have ignored lent. The "black" aristocracy includes those lowal to the pope.

One of the two Roman princes who are hereditary "assistants to the Ifoly See" and who always assist at papal functions, today termed the decisions of the "white" aristocracy to observe lent as a friendly desire for the success of negotiations looking towards a settlement of the church and state differences in Italy.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. (AP)—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Mid-winter weather conditions continue to favor indoor operations especially in the factory industry, which maintains its lead in activity, as compared with other forms of business activity.

Retail trade has been helped by the weather, mainly in population centers.

In the list of favored industries, iron, steel, automobile, implement and machinery manufacturing lines seemed to have an unquestionable lead. Jan. cold weather very generally helped the coal industry. Copper mining was active under the stimulus of large foreign and domestic takings, and oil-well and gas supplies, electrical goods and radio materials were bought freely. In the list of less fortunately situated trade, dry-goods buying outside of large centers was reported rather spotty, building operations were interfered with in many instances by weather conditions, and buying of wool, knitwear and jewelry was spotty.

Weekly bank clearings $13,740,096,000, an increase of 30.8 over a year ago.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. (AP)—The cotton market was generally lower today. Liquidation combined with some local and southern selling seemed to be promoted by the failure of bullish factors to create more buying power recently, talk of a less active spot demand and rather bearish week-end figures. March contracts sold off to 19.81 or 20 points below yesterday's closing quotation, and closed at 19.82. The general market closed steady at net declines of 14 to 19 points.

The market opened easy at a decline of 4 to 10 points under near-month liquidation promoted by circulation of notices estimated at about 9,900 bales. The offerings of January were absorbed by shorts or the trade at a slight premium over March. The last sale of that delivery, which matured at midday, was at 19.98, or apparently 5 points above the prevailing March price.

Other months eased off and while there was enough covering or trade buying to check the decline around 19.90 for March and May offerings became more active during the afternoon. Some stop orders were uncovered as prices broke below the earlier point of resistance and their execution sent May off to 19.80 and July to 19.45, making net declines of about 16 to 20 points on the more active positions. Trade buying increased around these figures and the tone of the market became steadier in the late trading, although last prices were within a point or two of the lowest.

There was talk of a disappointing spot demand and some bearish comment on the week-end statistics showing an increase of only 74,678 bales in the world's visible supply of American cotton compared with 110,999 the previous week and 129,091 last year.

Reports from Worth street indicated a moderate volume of business at the recent decline in cotton goods but said that the action of cotton encouraged buyers to look for concessions. Private cables said trade selling had pushed prices for cotton goods in Liverpool but that demand for cotton cloths from China was less active, although a fair demand was reported from Egypt and the Near East.

Exports today were 21,267, making 494,011 so far this season. Port receipts 26,120. U. S. Port stocks 2,246,813.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 25. (AP)—Cotton prices worked into new low ground for the present movement today under rather free offerings induced by bearish statistics, final liquidation of the January position and a diminished spot demand. March contracts eased off to 19.14 and closed one point above that figure for a net loss of 23 points. The general market closed steady at net declines of 12 to 23 points.

Liverpool cables were relatively steady but the local market ignored that factor in the face of notices issued for delivery of 3,400 bales of the cotton. The notices caused an opening slump of 2 to 9 points with January showing the major loss. Offerings persisted after the start and January sold down to 19.06, or 23 points net lower while March traded off to 19.25 and May 19.27 or 12 to 13 points under yesterday's close.

Uncertainty as to what the weekly statistics would show brought out some covering later and prices rallied 8 points from the lows. Reports that the notices were being called for probably helped the recovery which carried March to 19.33 and May to 19.35.

The rally, however, met a renewal of long liquidation which persisted for the remainder of the session. January expired at noon at 19.09, net 20 points lower. The lows of the day were made in final trading when March sold at 19.14 and May 19.20, or 22 to 24 points below yesterday's close. Fina prices were 1 to 3 points above the lowest.

Receipts 21,592, last week, 178,331; for year, 7,778,605, last year, 6,625,435. Exports, 12,757; for week, 161,197; for year, 5,333,266, last year, 4,278,703. Stocks, 2,308,973, last year, 2,401,296. Stock on hand, 1,316,068, last year, 113,788. Spot sales, 15,594, last year, 15,517.

All Leading Stocks Figure In Broad Upswing on New York Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 25. (US)—Stocks today enjoyed a broad upswing which started at the very opening and persisted throughout the day. Bullish enthusiasm was revived by the relatively small increase in brokers' loans, coupled with the further betterment in the federal reserve situation.

Resumption of bullish activities on a vigorous scale brought about substantial advances throughout the list. Money remained at 6 per cent notwithstanding reports of higher rates.

'Copper Family'

American Smelting assumed leadership of the copper group as heavy buying persisted in the stock by a prominent "copper family" which has been accumulating a substantial line. American Smelting's position, particularly in relation to other active performers in the copper group, was regarded as extremely favorable. Its earnings have been showing steady expansion for years, and the company is in good position to benefit materially from the present bright prospects for the copper industry.

Motors Advance

Motor stocks for the first time in many weeks enjoyed a brisk advance. General Motors leading with a jump of over nine points in the "old" stock. President Sloan's forecast of 5,500,000 cars per year production for the industry dissipated all the bearish talk which has been heard recently regarding the auto shares. Nash rose to a new high on reports of a merger with Packard, which persisted despite official denial. Hudson advanced several points on statement its business is showing good increase.

Alcohol Rises

U. S. Industrial Alcohol had a sharp run-up to record heights, as did also other industrial alcohol shares. These companies are enjoying the best business in their history. Many small producers of industrial alcohol who have been diverting the greater part of their allotment for illegal purposes will be driven out of business, it is understood, and as several combinations will also be effected. The leading companies will benefit not alone from destruction of wild competition but also from the more stabilized conditions which are expected to prevail in the industry. Earnings of the big industrial alcohol companies are stated to be showing very substantial expansion with indications pointing to a continuance of the improvement.

Scarce Stock

Johns-Manville had another one of its famous advances, carrying it to new record prices. Little of this stock seems to be for sale, most of it having been put into investment accounts for the long-pull. General Electric likewise attained a record price on a big advance which was attributed also to the small floating supply available in the market. Park and Tilford sold off a point but support was forthcoming from interests who are aware of the substantial increase in earnings. For the last quarter of 1928 the net was the best in the company's career, according to preliminary estimates which place the profit at over $4 a share, which would bring the earnings for the full year above $9 a share. The company's expansion program is expected to further enlarge earnings.

Split-Up Rumored

American Water Works continued its advance as reports were heard that its directors contemplated a split-up. Industrial Rayon spurted over six points as Durant buying was disclosed. He is understood to hold about 75 per cent of this stock. International Combustion continued strong as preliminary estimates of the earnings to be derived from the company's new plant were of exceedingly optimistic nature.

Consolidated Gas furnished one of the outstanding performances of the day, rising 6½ points to record price as tremendous buying of the best character continued on the theory that this company cannot fail to maintain its expansion in earnings and business. There was also some talk of "rights" to subscribe for new stock. American Sugar and Electric Auto-Lite both attained new record prices. The latter is expected to show a 50 per cent increase in gross with an even larger gain in profits. Strength in American Sugar reflected optimism over prospect for dividend resumption. Columbia Graphophone was the weak feature of the entire day, selling down several points under heavy selling attributed to the advice of the leading banking sponsor for the stock.

TEXAS REVIEW

FORT WORTH, Jan. 25. (AP)—Fort Worth's cattle supply today about the same as last week's but only about half the number that came on the corresponding day in 1928.

With a light supply of cattle, buyers were willing to take them about in line with yesterday's trading, hogs were a little lower while not enough sheep offered to test the market.

About five loads of slaughter steers included in the receipts. Some steers sold early at $10.00, or fully steady with two loads of light-yielding common cattle arriving late and unsold at the noon hour.

A part load of bulls sold at $8.60, with odd head of the common light kind around $6.50.

Trade in cows about steady and consisted mostly of mixed loads. A few sold up to $8.00; canners and cutters at $4.50 to $5.75.

Slaughter yearlings and heifers confined to package lots that appeared steady with most of the sales around $10.50; with the common kind around $7.50.

Very few calves here, with packers buying odd lots at steady prices. About two cars in the southern division sold at $10.00; with stocker calves unsold at the noon hour.

The stocker supply of cattle very light, one carload of steers sold at $10.50, or about steady.

Sheep considered steady with very few on hand to test the market.

No early sales in the hog yards. With northern markets reporting very little activity and the limited trading at lower levels, values apt to be lower at Fort Worth when trading opens.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 25. (AP)—(U.S.D.A.) Hog values encountered a setback on today's receipts, prices ranging from 25 to 50c under yesterday's average or 25 to 80c lower than Thursday's best prices to shippers. Total arrivals here 123,850 as compared with 137,742 a week ago and 119,469 a year ago.

A stronger undertone featured the fat lamb market and prices ruled strong to 25c over Thursday's levels; choice fed lambs at Chicago ranged from $17 to $17.45 while comparable grades on the river markets went at $16.25@16.60. Mature classes held on a generally steady basis with seasoned ewes selling at 39.50@10.25. Total receipts totalled 39,300 against 44,927 last Friday, and 33,597 a year ago.

Nothing strictly choice was offered and the bulk of the short feds sold from $10.50@12.50. Best 995 pound yearlings scored $14.35 at Omaha for the day's top. She stock was scarce and steady prices prevailed, not enough stocker and feeder steers were received to test values. Receipts at the 11 markets totalled 11,350 against 11,647 a week ago and 12,954 a year ago.

'Golden Galley' of Ancient Roman Emperor Found in Lake Waters

Aviators Circling Over Receding Body of Water See Relic Buried From All Eyes for 19 Centuries

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI
Record News Special Wireless
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

ROME, Jan. 25.—For the first time since it was submerged in the waters of Lake Nemi 19 centuries ago, the contour of the famous "Golden Galley" of the ancient Roman Emperor Caligula was glimpsed by human eyes today.

As the sun rose over the lake and surrounding mountains, two men in a hydroplane circled low over the receding waters of the lake and viewed clearly the superstructure of the Roman emperor's floating palace. The two were Professor Cultera, director of the Terme museum of Rome, and the Italian engineer, Signor Salatine, superintendent of the Galley reclamation project.

Months ago, under governmental direction, the work of draining Lake Nemi was begun. It was considered this was one of the most colossal archaeological undertakings ever attempted. Today's discoveries gave every indication that the original belief of those who sponsored the draining of Lake Nemi would be fulfilled in entirety.

With the early sun tangent affording greatest visibility of the whole day, the two observers in the hydroplane made a successful aerial survey of the superstructure of the ponderous galley, half submerged in mud. They reported that the upper decks, although covered with weeds and slime, were apparently intact. It was impossible, however, to observe accurately the condition of the hull until the water has been drained to a greater depth.

Water in the lake has been lowered approximately 11 feet, at a rate of about five centimeters daily. As the level of the lake has dropped, an ancient marble wharf by the lakeside, heretofore submerged in six feet of water, has been revealed.

The wharf is constructed of four semi-circular steps, having an extreme length of 300 feet.

The receding waters also have revealed ruins of the ancient Roman villas of the patricians by the lakeside. These discoveries have prompted Professor Paribeni, director general of fine arts in Italy, to advance the belief that the entire area of the lake's shore will prove one of the largest and most important archaeological discoveries ever made.

It is expected the drainage of Lake Nemi will be finished by April, when reconstruction of the galleys will be started. There is no sight yet, however, of the nearby smaller galley which divers report as having been seen in the early submarine explorations.

The present lowered level of the lake is believed to have been the normal level of the lake in ancient times. It is planned to dig a drainage canal through the mountain to maintain the lake at its present level.

England Couldn't Keep Her

The little blonde third from the left, or somewhere, in a London show, drew the attention of an American movie director. Nobody knew her; she was "just a fairly clever dancer." But the director decided she was more than "fairly clever" looking and found that her name was Miriam Seegar, an American herself, and just two years out of high school in Indianapolis. Miriam was offered a leading role in a British feature film and now she has won a contract to come back to her native land and star in other pictures.

Eyes of all lovers of musical comedy, known in the land of sophistication as eye and ear entertainment, are turned on the Majestic theater where "Hit the Deck." Vincent Youman's notable musical show is to be presented Monday night.

Tickets are going rapidly. Better hurry if you don't want to get left. That's the warning of H. C. Federer, city manager of Dent theaters, when speaking of the seat sale. There are still some good seats left, but just how long they will last is problematical. Certain it is that seats in the eighth row center cannot be obtained at the window five minutes before curtain time Monday. When "Rio Rita" was at the Majestic, a few weeks ago, 218 persons asked for that position, and they asked for it after 6 o'clock the night of the presentation of the show.

Young Mr. Youmans, who wrote the song hits "Hallelujah" and "Sometimes I'm Happy," is also the producer. In his production work he picked the chorus of singers and dancers. And (lend the ear to this) they do say as how he is some picker.

Dolores del Rio is at the Majestic Saturday and Sunday in "The Red Dance." This notable picture won't get its full share of attention because of the other shows coming in. It has a splendid record, however.

And don't overlook "The Merchant of Venice" Saturday afternoon, and "Macbeth" Saturday night at the Memorial auditorium. Fritz Leiber is starred in the only presentation of Shakespearean plays Wichita Falls is booked to see this season.

Harrison Hopeful for Increase in Power

Special to The Record News

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Hubert M. Harrison, manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, left for home tonight hopeful that the federal radio commission will act favorably on his application for an increase in the wave length of the radio station KGKO, owned by the Wichita Falls Broadcasting company, from its present status of 250 watts to 1,000 watts. He submitted the application together with a brief and conferred with the several members of the board. No definite action is expected for at least 10 days.

While in Washington Mr. Harrison also conferred with members of the public buildings commission to urge that provision be made to care for increased needs at Wichita Falls and that this building be included in the new allocations on which the commission is now working. The commission is well advised as to the situation at Wichita Falls and it is believed that both Wichita Falls and San Antonio will be the two larger Texas cities which will be included in the next allocation. Upon the recommendations to be thus made congress will make the appropriations.

The desires of Wichita Falls to be placed on an air mail route also were laid before postoffice officials by Mr. Harrison. He said no assurances could be given him by these officials at this time but there was a suggestion that a new transcontinental route is in contemplation and this may be carried through Wichita Falls.

Benjamin Man Hears Unfavorable News on Search for Missing Son

Special to The Record News.

BENJAMIN, Texas, Jan. 25.—Tracks of an unshod horse in the wastes of the Mexican desert proved the only clue to the mysterious disappearance of Van A. Phillips from his ranch just across the border from Hachita, N. M., on Jan. 5 last, and after a lengthy search for three Mexicans, thought to be his abductors, his brother, A. O. Phillips of Amarillo, arrived here today, having virtually abandoned hope for the missing man's life.

Phillips is here with his father, D. A. Phillips, and other relatives, having left the scene of the asserted kidnaping after posting liberal rewards for the capture of the three Mexicans, or for information regarding his brother's whereabouts.

The Mexicans, two men and a woman, were seen about the Phillips ranch, located in the state of Chihuahua, the day before Phillips disappeared. Searching parties seeking to trace Phillips found horses' tracks, some of which indicated that one of the mounts was unshod. Phillips' horse, which was stolen, had never been shod by its owner.

At one time, the Phillips rescue party co-operated with another party of searchers, hunting for a savage band of Apaches who two years ago ambushed and killed a Mrs. Fimbres, and kidnaped her son. The slain woman's husband was in charge of this second expedition, having searched the vicinity for months seeking the slayers of his wife. Mr. Phillips said the Fimbres party had seen no trace of the missing Mexicans suspected in the more recent kidnaping.

Walton League Told of Need For Legislation for Game Conservation

Six Members on State Game Commission Urged by Oneal in Address at Banquet

The necessity of requests to the legislature for game and fish conservation was stressed by Ben G. Oneal, president, at a banquet celebrating the close of the duck season which was given by the Wichita Falls chapter of the Izaak Walton league Friday night at the Woman's Forum.

Mr. Oneal also stressed the importance of the league members asking the legislature to vote for six members in the game commission law which will be up for consideration soon.

The bill as it was explained by Mr. Oneal now asks for a game commission of three members who will be appointed by the governor for six year terms. This would place the conservation of the game and the regulation of the hunting seasons too much in the hands of one body and would be insufficient for representing every section of the state, Mr. Oneal asserted.

More than 175 member of the Izaak Walton league attended the banquet which was featured by a menu of fish, wild goose and duck.

H. J. Bruce called the attention of the Ikes to the preservation of the ducks, in a very witty after dinner speech, and asked that they support the measure to release the bag limit.

The prospect of stocking each lake in this section with from 5,000 to 10,000 fish during this year was discussed in a short address by Joe Dixon, superintendent of the state fish hatchery at Diversion lake.

Members of the league who supplied the fish and fowl for the banquet were thanked by Mr. Oneal for their services.

A six reel motion picture of hunting adventures in Alaska was shown after the banquet.
