Libya: U.S. 'power of official terrorism'

Official says if Khadafy would stop plotting terrorist acts, U.S. would back down from confrontation, related story — 2,7A

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The government today denied U.S. charges that it has a hand in worldwide political violence and said America itself was "the power of official terrorism."

Libya also warned that any attack on it would be met by a potent response abroad.

The Libyan People's Foreign Bureau, or foreign ministry, said in a statement relayed by the official JANA news agency that the North African nation is against "all terroristic operations, hijacking airplanes and the murder of innocents."

Today's Libyan statement said, "The attack on American targets in Germany is not new, for there were attacks against American targets within German territory carried out by Germans in conformity with their hostile stand to American presence on their land."

Libya, the statement said, "does not desire aggression...and is indeed interested in making the Mediterranean a lake of peace and cooperation amongst the countries surrounding it including those of southern Europe.'

But it added: "If Libya is subjected to aggression it will respond with all (its) might against all targets which represent a back base for aggression."

(The statement did not explain what was meant by back base, but Khadafy has threatened targets in southern Europe and has specifically mentioned Spain and Italy, both NATO members, in the event of a U.S. military move.

(JANA, in a dispatch monitored in Cyprus, said Libya's People's Congresses said today that "suicide units" worldwide were ready to retaliate against any U.S. attack. The congresses, local groupings of trade unions and other associations, also warned that the response to an attack would be "severe against all American interests around the world," the agency said.)

The Libyan foreign ministry statement said that "America, the power of official terrorism and arrogance, is escalating its aggression against Jamahiriyah (Libya) and executing a hostile scheme scornful of morals, laws and humane values so as to impose the logic of resorting to brute force as the only means for international deadlings."

The statement, which alleged that the "official terrorism being practiced by the United States of America goes beyond that practiced during the days of Hitler," called on all Arabs, in the event of a U.S. attack on Libya, to join in a war to destroy American interests.

Despite the heated rhetoric and Libyan statements that an attack seemed imminent, there were no signs of any military preparations in Tripoli.

On Sunday, a statement released by a Libyan Information Department official, who refused to be identified, said: "Foreign workers have been forced to live in them (oil fields), taking into account that the majority are Americans."

Jewish leaders call pope's visit to synagogue 'reasurring'

From Wire Reports

ROME — Jewish leaders say Pope John Paul II's historic visit to a synagogue was reassuring on theological issues but that they still are waiting for the Vatican to acknowledge the importance of Israel to Jews.

Applause erupted Sunday from the 1,000 people packing Rome's main synagogue when the pope declared, "You are our dearly beloved brothers and in a certain way it could be said that you are our elder brothers."

John Paul, making the first recorded visit by a pope to a synagogue, cited the Second Vatican Council's revolutionary 1965 document on non-Christian religions, which was a turning point in Catholic-Jewish relations.

In a meeting heavy on symbolism, the pope broke new ground in efforts to erase traditional suspicions and enmities between religions as he embraced and prayed with Rome's chief rabbi, Elio Toaff, in the 82-year-old temple built in the ancient Tiber riverside ghetto where until a century ago popes had forced Roman Jews to be locked up from sunset until dawn.

Toaff, greeting John Paul as the two sat in gilded chairs on a platform of the temple altar, expressed his "great satisfaction for the gesture" of the visit, which he said is "destined to pass into history."

"Nevertheless, we can not forget the past," Toaff said, "but we want today to initiate with faith and hope this new period," which he said places Christianity and Judaism on "a plane of parity, equality and reciprocal esteem."

Pope John Paul

Rabbi Toaff

Quoting from the church's document, John Paul said the church "deplores the hatred, persecutions and displays of anti-Semitism directed against the Jews at any time and by anyone."

"I repeat, by anyone," he told those assembled at the synagogue on the Tiber River.

John Paul pointed to the "common spiritual patrimony" that exists between Christians and Jews and said each religion "wishes to be respected in its own identity."

The pope condemned anti-Semitism and pledged to "deepen dialogue in loyalty and friendship."

Tullia Zevi, president of the Union of Italian Jewish Communities, said, "He swept away apprehensions that he was moving away from the letter and spirit of Vatican II and was moving back toward a conservative theology."

"Jews have been trying for at least 20 years to have the Catholic Church see the Jewish community on its terms and not through the glasses of Catholic theology," said Mrs. Zevi, whose organization represents Italy's 40,000 Jews.

On Israel, however, she said, "The dimension of people, history and land through which the Jews define themselves is ignored. Israel is where this unity finds its realization."

"We shall have to wait for this. This is for the future," she said.

The Vatican does not have diplomatic relations with Israel.

Henry Siegman, chairman of the commission for inter-religious affairs of the New York-based World Jewish Congress, said in a statement released here that the pope's visit and remarks "constitute an important and hopeful new chapter in the history of Catholic relations with Judaism."

But he called the lack of formal Vatican relations with Israel "a grievous wound" in relations between the Roman Catholic Church and Jewish people.

Giacomo Saban, president of Rome's Jewish community, said in a speech before the pope spoke that Israel is "central to the heart of every Jew."

Four Permian Basin cities might not be so dry after upcoming election

SEMINOLE (AP) — The dry cities of West Texas may not be quite so dry after an upcoming election on liquor sales.

After decades of proudly outlawing the sale of liquor, some Permian Basin cities are pursuing the sale of legalized booze as one way to fill tax coffers that are running dry because of plunging oil prices.

"I don't think beer's a savior," said Seminole businessman Derral Henderson, who led a petition drive for a wet-dry vote in Gaines County. "But this is not a moral issue anymore. It's an economic one."

Seminole voters will decide May 10 whether to allow package liquor sales and stop the flow of local dollars to Hobbs, currently the closest place to buy liquor.

Liquor sale drives also are under way in Big Spring, Levelland and Morton.

Gaines County Clerk Freida Nichols says she expects the largest voter turnout since bingo was approved a few years ago, and with the sagging economy working to their advantage, the "wet" proponents seem to stand a good chance of winning.

"When the wells started shutting in, it hit us a bad lick," she said, adding, however, that "I'm shocked when I hear merchants say they'll vote for it."

Yet liquor is just one of the avenues the cities are pursuing, officials say. In the self-dubbed "Petroplex" of Midland and Odessa, local leaders are taking a more novel approach to facing up to bad times.

Midland advertising man Ken Carr says he and other local boosters got tired of seeing the area's economic woes trotted out on network news shows and written up in papers across the country.

"Everybody's been saying we're going to dry up and blow away," he says.

At a recent concert, the crowd went wild when country and western singer Ann Murray sang her hit "Good News," a song calling for more of what its title suggests, he says.

That was when Carr and some friends decided Midland and Odessa needed a lift, he said, and decided to launch a media campaign urging people to look for the silver lining.

Rallies were held simultaneously Thursday at the downtown Centennial Plaza in Midland and the Odessa College Sports Center touting a "Love You West Texas" theme.

Akins calls for oil, gas industry deregulation, spending cuts

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, candidate for the 21st Congressional District, today called on Congress to consider three issues he says have a direct affect on U.S. national security — deregulating of the oil and gas industry, approving drastic spending cuts, and passing a bill a to solve the nation's immigration problems.

During a news conference this morning, the candidate seeking the Republican nomination said West Texans must send a message to Washington D.C. calling for consideration of the three issues in light of state's economic problems.

Akins said Congress has overtaxed the oil and gas industry compared to other energy-related businesses, leaving the industry in a vulnerable position in light of the decline in domestic oil and natural gas prices.

"We need to deregulate oil and natural gas prices to open the market and provide incentives."

Regarding the nation's deficit, Akins said Congress needs to cut back further on spending. Had Congress cut spending by five percent in 1980, he said the nation would not be faced with a deficit of this magnitude.

"We don't need any more revenues. We need to cut spending. That's what the city of Midland had to do to balance its budget, that's what the state will have to do and that's what the nation should do," he said.

Calling the Simpson-Mizzoli bill "a joke," Akins said Congress must address the nation's immigration problem to protect Americans and their jobs.

He said the immigration issue is one of the most subtle yet drastic issues facing the nation over the next several months and years.

"I don't blame those people who want to cross that river and come to the promised land to find jobs, but it has the potential to be a real problem."

Charlie Sprayberry's second trial scheduled to begin in Abilene

From Staff Reports

Midland Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry's second trial on attempted-sexual-assault charges is set to begin Tuesday morning in Abilene's 104th Judicial District courtroom.

His first trial ended with a hung jury Feb. 20 after almost nine hours of deliberations. One of the jurors told the Reporter-Telegram the group was deadlocked 10 to two for a conviction.

Sprayberry, 45, is accused of trying to force his secretary to perform oral sex on him while they were riding in his car on April 26, 1984.

The indictment also alleges the lesser-included offense of false imprisonment, a misdemeanor.

Judge James H. Clack of Andrews, who is hearing the case for Judge Vann Culp of Midland's 238th District Court, last month granted a defense motion to move the trial to Abilene because the first trial was extensively covered by local news organizations.

Sprayberry did not testify at his first trial. According to special prosecutor Andy Shuval, Sprayberry failed a polygraph test March 27 in Austin after agreeing to plead guilty if he did not pass.

The Midland magistrate has reneged on that agreement, Shuval said.

Sprayberry has not responded publicly to Shuval's statement, and his attorney, John W. Smith of Odessa, has not returned phone calls placed to his office.

According to Shuval, Sprayberry agreed to plead guilty and accept a sentence of 10 years probation and a $5,000 fine if he failed the test. If he passed, Shuval had agreed to drop the charges, he said.

The agreement is probably not legally binding on Sprayberry, but may be introduced in the trial to attack his credibility, Shuval said.

Attempted sexual assault is a third-degree felony with a penalty range of two to 10 years in prison and an optional fine up to $5,000.

Sprayberry, who took an unpaid leave of absence after being indicted in November, also faces five misdemeanor indictments — two for telephone harassment and three for barratry, or improperly soliciting cases for an attorney.

These charges were to be tried after the felony charge is resolved, according to Shuval.

International bridge to be opened Tuesday

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The long-delayed opening of the international bridge between Presidio, Texas and Ojinaga, Mexico is scheduled for Tuesday morning.

Representatives from the Permian Basin will fly to Presidio to join Gov. Mark White and representatives from both sides of the U.S.-Mexican border for a ribbon cutting ceremony at 10:30 a.m.

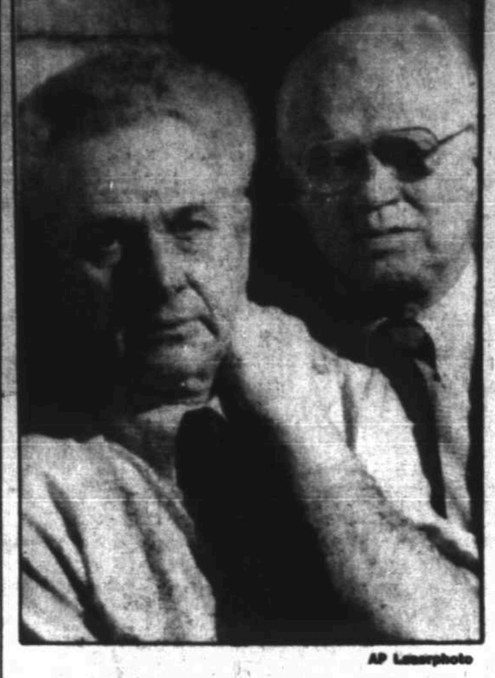

The proximity of the bridge to Midland and Odessa is expected to expand trade and manufacturing opportunities with Mexico for the area. Chuck Bernhard, Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce economic development director, has estimated about one-third of the truck traffic currently traveling from Juarez to El Paso will opt for the shorter route through Ojinaga and Presidio, which will direct a considerable amount of traffic to this area. The bridge is about 230 miles southwest of Odessa.

The $1.4 million bridge was actually completed by the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation about mid-1985, but construction of a 72,000 square foot immigration and Naturalization support facility in the bridge area has been held up by land negotiations.

The 6.2 acres of land selected as the site for support facilities belongs to former State Rep. Dick Slack. Lease negotiations between Slack and the General Services Administration hit a snag last fall because of the amount of money the federal agency was offering.

Buchenwald survivor meets liberator

AP Laserphoto

Buchenwald death camp survivor Mike Gerstner, left, is united with Dr. Bedford Pace, who was part of the liberation force 41 years ago. The two met when Pace noticed the tattoed number on Gerstner's arm.

BEAUMONT (AP) — Tucked away in his scrapbook of World War II memories, Dr. Bedford Pace has a photograph of himself and a gaunt Buchenwald survivor, taken when the Nazi death camp was liberated.

Forty years later, chance, a faded tattoo and the hot autumn sun combined to bring him face to face with the man he never knew.

Both men live in Beaumont, but they might never have recognized their mutual ties except for unseasonably warm weather last autumn that caused shoe salesman Mike Gerstner to roll up his shirtsleeves, revealing the faded tattoo that was a legacy of the Nazi death camps.

"What camp were you in?" asked Pace, who had come in to buy some shoes.

Gerstner put down the shoe he was holding.

"Buchenwald," he said quietly. "I was freed from Buchenwald."

"There he was and here we were and the both of us had survived," Pace said.

"My condominium is only a couple of blocks away from the shopping center where he works," Pace said. "We just laughed about it. Really it was quite a coincidence."

Since the chance meeting, the two have often spoken of their war experiences, Pace said.

Several months after the meeting, Pace dug out a scrapbook from World War II, and discovered some photographs he took at Buchenwald. He took them back to Dryden's Men's Store to share them.

An incredulous Gerstner recognized the prison walls in the picture and himself as a newly freed survivor. Standing in paper pajamas in the early spring's gnawing wind, he posed beside Pace in front of the ovens that killed thousands.

For Pace, the road to the meeting at Buchenwald started when he was a general surgeon for the U.S. Army's 14th Field Hospital stationed at Rouen, France, the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal reported Sunday.

There he met the family of Andre Marie, the chief justice of the Supreme Court of France who became premier of France after the war. The Nazis had taken Marie hostage for the city of Rouen, meaning he would be killed should trouble erupt in that city.

Marie's wife told Pace her husband was in Buchenwald and gave him the exact cell number. Pace's military hospital stayed in Rouen for weeks, but when it left, she gave Pace a parcel of razors, underwear and other essentials to deliver to her husband should Pace make it to the concentration camp in Germany.

Gerstner's route to Buchenwald began when the Nazis conquered Poland in 1939, taking his family prisoner. Soon, they were marched to Auschwitz, where he saw his mother and little brother for the last time.

"I asked the guard if I could join my mother," he said. "I wanted to go even though I knew then where she was going but the guard only laughed."

While Gerstner struggled to survive in the death camp, Pace was working as a surgeon south of the German city of Marburg.

When he heard a radio report that Buchenwald had been freed, Pace grabbed the package he still carried for Marie and took a three-hour jeep ride to the prison, where he briefly encountered Gerstner, one of the survivors.

Pace said Marie, who also survived the camp, had been sent back to Rouen already, so he distributed the contents of the parcel to other prisoners.

After liberation, Gerstner returned to Poland and in 1951 he immigrated to New Orleans. A Jewish community sponsored his move to Beaumont.

Tourists follow 'Marcos trail' in New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — From jewelery store to antique shop, townhouse to penthouse, two amateur guides led tourists along the glittering "Marcos trail" of Manhattan on a unique walking tour: "In the Footsteps of Ferdinand and Imelda."

In three hours Sunday, the 40 tour members saw dozens of sights on an island where the deposed Philippine leader reportedly controlled at least $300 million in real estate and ran up staggering bills for diamonds, flowers and bedsheets.

"In Manhattan, it's hard to avoid the places the Marcoses knew and owned," said Lee Bearson, a 28-year-old graphic designer who led the $5 tour with Russell Miller, 26, a journalist.

One of the first stops was a jewelry store where Mrs. Marcos bought a carved emerald bead necklace for $280,000. Gesturing toward the empty display window, Bearson said, "We imagine it looked much like this after Imelda shopped here."

Then it was on to Fifth Avenue — "No more bargains!" Miller said — where Mrs. Marcos spent $47,451.25 at Cartier on one day in 1983, and where Marcos reportedly kept $9,350,418 at the Swiss Bank Corp.

"Imagine Imelda inside, making out a check for $2 million to cash," said Bearson. "She looks up and sees that picture on the wall of the Matterhorn — the only thing in Switzerland she couldn't buy."

There were other shops (and other tabs), including an art gallery ($273,500), a florist ($40,650.27) and a linen shop ($10,340 for sheets).

But to the disappointment of some, the guides were unable to point out any store at which Mrs. Marcos is known to have bought any of the 6,000 shoes found in the presidential palace in Manila after the Marcos's departure.

Other alleged Marcos possessions on the tour included a shopping center in Herald Square; the gold-trimmed Crown Building at 57th Street and Fifth Avenue; and Olympic Tower, where the Marcoses reputedly own five apartments.

At a Philippine government-owned mansion on East 66th Street, more debts were noted, including an electrical bill for $10,436.20 and a cable televison bill for $1,920.

Down the street was the Sign of the Dove restaurant, where in 1981 Mrs. Marcos reportedly indicated she had a Swiss bank account by pulling out a statement for about $120 million and waving it.

Recalling that Mrs. Marcos once had her plane turn around and return to Rome after she developed a craving for cheese and found none aboard, Miller and Bearson distributed small cheese chunks to the group.

"Please, only one each, although I know everyone on the Marcos tour wants to take five," Bearson said.

"If you don't get one, too bad," Miller added. "The Philippine people didn't get any, either."

Later, outside a jewelry store where Mrs. Marcos spent $1.43 million, the tourists were handed clear plastic baubles as souvenirs.

Because of distance, the tour omitted the Marcos estate on Long Island and their building at 40 Wall Street, the world's 13th tallest. Mrs. Marcos reportedly left a Christmas party in 1982 to take a midnight limousine drive to lower Manhattan for a look. "I'm proud of it," she was heard to murmur.

The tour ended on what the guides described as a high note — Notre Dame School, which new Philippine President Corazon Aquino attended in the late 1940s.

Bearson read the quotation of Pope Pius XII young Corey chose for her yearbook: "It is up to you to bring to the life you are entering, and to the state you must help to form, an energy of true religious faith."

Tour members said they found the tour entertaining and informative. "This way, it's not just the numbers you read in the paper," one said.

Reputed mobster dies in car bombing

NEW YORK (AP) — A reputed mobster believed to have endorsed the slaying of the alleged head of the Gambino organized crime family was killed by a bomb that shattered a parked car, authorities said.

Frank DeCicco, 52, identified by officers as the No. 2 man in the Gambino family, died Sunday in the blast, which also critically injured another man, believed to be a member of the Lucchese crime family, police said.

A federal law enforcement source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Sunday night that DeCicco was "believed to have acquiesced" to the shooting deaths on Dec. 16 of Paul Castellano, 70, former reputed Gambino boss, and an associate, Thomas Bilotti, 48, on Dec. 16.

Asked if the bombing was an act of revenge for the shootings, the source said: "That's a possibility," but added any interpretation of the attack now would be speculation.

Authorities said DeCicco ranked just behind reputed Gambino boss John Gotti in the mob hierarchy. Police spokesman Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell said DeCicco was a suspected "high-ranking member of the Gambino crime family," and the FBI refused to comment on the bombing.

The injured man, Frank Bellino, was described by O'Donnell as a suspected member of the Lucchese family.

Gotti, 45, identified by law enforcement officials as Castellano's successor, is on trial on federal racketeering charges.

O'Donnell said Bellino and DeCicco were approaching the car, parked in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn, when the bomb exploded.

The wounded men were taken to Victory Memorial Hospital, where DeCicco died. O'Donnell said Bellino, 69, was in critical condition at the hospital with "mangled legs" and other injuries.

A woman passer-by received minor injuries when the bomb exploded at 1:45 p.m. under the gray, four-door, 1985 Buick Electra, police said.

O'Donnell said the car was registered in the name of Angelo Giammarino of Staten Island. The bomb, which police described as a "high-intensity explosive device," was placed on the ground beneath the front seat of the car, O'Donnell said.

The Daily News quoted police sources today as saying the two men arrived in the area in the car earlier Sunday and had entered Genovese Tiles, which detectives described as a front for a social club frequented by organized crime figures.

The FBI had staked out the store as recently as last week and had DeCicco under surveillance ever since the Castellano slaying last year, sources told the News.

DeCicco reputedly rose to the No. 2 spot in the Gambino family with the death of alleged former underboss Aniello Dellacroce, Dec. 2, and the Castellano-Bilotti slayings exactly two weeks later, the federal source told the AP.

The News quoted an unnamed detective saying: "We know DeCicco knew a lot about the Castellano hit. What Bellino's role was, we don't know. We think DeCicco was the primary target."

Law enforcement sources quoted by The New York Times today said the DeCicco slaying was either an act of revenge for Castellano's murder or part of a power struggle between Gotti and other factions within the Gambino group.

Official: U.S. strategy is to change Khadafy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States would back away from its confrontation with Col. Moammar Khadafy if the Libyan leader changes his conduct and stops plotting dozens of terrorists acts worldwide, a top State Department official says.

Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead, appearing Sunday on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation," said if Khadafy "stops training terrorists, financing terrorists, supplying them with arms, supplying them with documents...we would certainly back away from our actions."

Whitehead, the No. 2 official at the State Department, said the strategy behind the United States making known possible plans for military force against Libya was the hope that Khadafy will change his conduct — not the desire to overthrow the Libyan leader.

"The object of all this is to get Khadafy to change his conduct," Whitehead said. "That is our objective. We're not out to overthrow him. We're not out to remove him in any way."

Whitehead said U.S. officials have information implicating Khadafy in the bombing of a West Berlin nightclub in which an American serviceman was killed, and that Khadafy is plotting "literally dozens of other terrorist actions around the world."

Vice President George Bush said Sunday that "Libyans have their fingerprints all over state-sponsored terrorism," and the United States has a duty to punish those who threaten Americans overseas.

President Reagan is weighing the use of military force against Libya in retaliation for the attack, Whitehead said, but added, "The prospect of military action is something that only the president will decide on. He has not yet made that decision."

Reagan last week indicated his willingness to take military action if the perpetrators could be identified and an appropriate target located.

Libya vowed it was ready to strike back at any assailant. "Libya does not want aggression and does not work to cause it," said a Foreign Ministry statement carried Sunday by the official JANA news agency. "However, if aggression is carried out against it, it will retaliate forcefully against all targets which constitute rear bases for the aggression."

The statement, monitored in London, did not say what was meant by rear bases, but Khadafy has threatened targets in southern Europe and has specifically mentioned Spain and Italy, both NATO members, in the event of a U.S. military move.

Two U.S. aircraft carriers, the America and Coral Sea, which last month engaged Libyan forces in the disputed Gulf of Sidra, remained "underway in the Mediterranean," Pentagon spokesman Maj. Larry Icenogle said. Pentagon sources said Saturday the carriers were awaiting orders off the coast of Sicily.

The Reagan administration was consulting with members of Congress and U.S. allies in Western Europe over the next step against Khadafy.

U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters met with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in London on Saturday and with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher in Bonn on Sunday. He flew to Paris later Sunday for meetings with President Francois Mitterand and Premier Jacques Chirac. He was to be in Rome today.

Meanwhile, Libya's official news agency, JANA, and Tripoli radio, both monitored on Cyprus, reported that 30 U.S. F-4 Phantom jets and three C-130 transport planes had arrived at the British base at Akrotiri.

JANA and Tripoli radio said the C-130s unloaded "long boxes, which may have contained missiles." The reports could not be independently verified, and attempts to reach the base spokesman were unsuccessful.

Icenogle said he had no information on the report, adding, "That's the first I've heard of that. I can't comment."

Bush refused to accuse Khadafy point-blank of planning the bombing, while saying, "The United States has an obligation to protect its citizens living abroad and to bring to justice in some, in any way possible, those who threaten the lives or take the lives of Americans abroad."

Bush, who headed an administration task force that studied how the United States could respond to terrorism, said he had "always been in favor of retaliation on a sort of a surgical basis. I don't believe we need kind of an indiscriminate approach."

The vice president spoke on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press" as he returned from a 10-day trip to Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman and North Yemen.

None of the leaders in those four nations offered direct support for last month's attack on Libyan targets in the Gulf of Sidra, Bush said, "but indirectly I think everyone understood it."

Asked whether any Arab country endorsed armed U.S. action against fellow Arabs, Bush replied, "Not publicly, but there's a lot of quiet support. I know this for a fact certain."

Whitehead said U.S. intelligence officials have gathered "a lot of information" on the West Berlin bombing, "which does indicate that (Khadafy) was involved. No ultimate conclusion has been reached on that evidence, on that incident, because it's still coming in."

"But maybe more important than the specifics of his involvement in that incident is the information we have about his future plans, for literally dozens of other terrorist actions around the world," Whitehead said.

"The plans are all specific. They are specifically aimed at particular targets, with people enlisted to carry out the plans," he said, declining to give details.

U.S. officials apparently knew unspecified locations in Berlin where Americans gather were targeted, but The Washington Post reported in its Sunday editions that a communications foulup prevented the intelligence community's warning about an impending attack from getting top priority.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources who had been briefed by the CIA as saying the intelligence information was passed along at low-level rather than top military commanders.

LIBYA

The statement also said: "The military camps have been handed over to foreigners to repair them and to use them to live there. Foreign workers have been moved to army camps.

"Libya has got information that America is going to attack several army camps and oil fields and petrochemical companies," it said.

The Libyan statement said the moves took place Saturday, and that the army was moved to undisclosed locations.

However, a Western diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity said he had spoken to several representatives of his country in Libya, and "none of them reported any such incident."

Diplomats and business people estimate 800 Americans now live in Libya, including executives, oil field workers and about 100 U.S. women married to Libyans.

President Reagan ordered all Americans out under risk of a 10-year prison sentence, and cut all U.S. economic ties with Libya after terrorists attacked the Rome and Vienna airports Dec. 27, killing 20 people, including five Americans.

The United States blamed a Palestinian terrorist group, Abu Nidal, for the attacks and accused Khadafy of harboring its leader.

IRS say investors owe $200 million

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — About 2,500 investors nationwide who pumped money into an illegal tax shelter owe the government up to $200 million in back taxes and penalties, the Internal Revenue Service said here today.

IRS officials declined to give specifics, but said the "huge, abusive tax-shelter scam" involved a business associated with mining and oil and gas ventures.

"The proposed benefits that the investors were promised never existed," said IRS spokesman Frank Keith.

He declined to identify the operators of the tax shelter or say if it still existed.

"All I can say is that this is a particulary abusive tax shelter," Keith said. "The investors are located across the country."

The illegal tax shelter was discovered several months ago during a routine audit of a 1982 tax return in Providence, Keith said.

Notice to investors in the tax scam must be mailed by midnight Tuesday, when the three-year statute of limitations for enforcing 1982 tax violations expires, Keith said.

Keith said he did not know how much of the $200 million was owed in taxes and how much was interest and penalties.

BRIDGE

The selection of the site was the result of negotiations between the federal government, the State of Texas and the Mexican government. The bridge site selected, according to a highway department spokesman, was dictated in part by the location of the road the Mexican government planned to build from Chihuahua City to Ojinaga.

AKINS

In addition, Akins said West Texans are facing a "very real danger" if construction of the Stacy Reservoir and the state's long-term water plan is blocked because of hearings to protect Concho River Snake and its natural habitat.

Akins, who has been traveling around much of the 26 counties within the 21st Congressional District, said he anticipates a run-off election between himself and another candidate for the GOP nomination.

"We're going to continue to work as hard as we can right to the end and then spend the rest of the month of May working on the run-off," he said.

The Vatican never has explained formally why it has not established diplomatic relations with Israel since the Jewish state was founded in 1948, but Vatican officials have indicated the question of unsettled boundaries and regional disputes are sticking points. The Holy See does not have formal ties with Israel's neighbor, Jordan, either.

Before the visit, Arab ambassadors in Italy issued a joint statement that the visit should not be interpreted "as an identification of Judaism with Israel."

Russia's vineyard region trying low-alcohol wines

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — In a concession to the Kremlin's campaign against drunkenness, the ancient vineyards of Soviet Georgia are turning out low-alcohol wines.

But in a region as steeped in wine-drinking traditions as France or Italy, the light wines aren't expected to gain much favor over full-strength vintages.

"We won't drink it," declared a 32-year-old Tbilisi man. "But maybe some of those vodka-drinkers up north won't be able to tell the difference."

Georgians, he argued, appreciate good wine and do not drink it just to get drunk.

A low-alcohol brand of champagne called Azure is ready for the market, said Rudolf Dzhaushvili, director of the Tbilisi champagne factory, and he claims even wine experts can't tell the difference between Azure with its 5 percent alcohol content and regular champagnes with 11 or 12 percent.

The plant is expected to produce more than 22 million bottles of champagne this year, and the proportion of low-alcohol champagne will depend on its popularity, Dzhaushvili said. Also planned within the next few months is a no-alcohol champagne.

Dzhaushvili said the light champagne and light wines, which are planned within a few months, are efforts by the Georgian wine industry to help the nationwide campaign launched by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to cut alcohol consumption.

But Dzhaushvili claims Georgia does not have the alcoholism problem that exists in the Russian Republic and is especially pronounced in remote areas of Siberia and the far north.

"Hard drinking does not exist in Georgia," he said. "You won't see drunks in the street."

Nearly 500 varieties of grapes grow on the rugged, sun-baked slopes tended by Georgian women in calico dresses while the men watch over small family plots that provide food and much of the family's income.

The wines produced in Georgia are revered throughout the Soviet Union as the nation's finest. Some Georgian wineries hold back their best stocks for local consumption, claiming the wines don't travel well.

The popularity of the wines and the republic's economic dependence on the industry may explain why Georgian wine production is being expanded while many enterprises producing alcoholic beverages in other parts of the country have been converted to soft drink plants.

Almost a year ago, anti-drinking measures were introduced that raised the legal drinking age from 19 to 21, cut vodka production, reduced sales hours and imposed stiff fines and even imprisonment for public drunkenness or other alcohol-related infractions.

The measures have had some visible effects in major cities, including Moscow where many liquor stores have closed entirely and some restaurants have stopped serving alcoholic beverages.

In Tbilisi, wine accompanies lunch and dinner at nearly every table but there are no lines at its well-stocked wine stores.

"We have normal consumption, so we have fewer lines," commented Tamaz Kandelaki, a deputy chief of the Georgian State Committee for Winemaking.

Wine production has been the major industry of the Georgian people for centuries and the work involves nearly every family from the Caucasus Mountains to the Black Sea.

Officials say they cannot estimate how many of Georgia's 5.2 million people are employed in winemaking, but point out that almost every adult tends a private vineyard and sells the harvest to local wineries.

Georgian women in traditional calico dresses and aprons tend vines at the Manavy State Farm in the foothills of the Caucasus Mountains.

Givi Sabashvili, head of the Sagaredzho wine-producing district, said during a tour of the Manavy state vineyard that its 850 workers are typical of most Georgian agricultural workers in that they each raise nearly four tons of grapes on their private plots every year and sell the crop to state wineries for about 2,800 rubles ($3,925, at the official rate of exchange).

That means the average farmer earns more from growing his own grapes on plots of less than an acre than he does from his state farm pay of 150 rubles a month, the equivalent of about $2,500 a year.

Georgian state farms apparently experience drastically lower yields than the adjacent private plots — a problem that plagues Soviet agriculture nationwide.

The Manavy state vineyard raises only about 500 tons of grapes each year on nearly 2,000 acres — about one-sixteenth the yield of the private plots.

House slated to vote on Contra aid bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Round three of the long-running battle over military aid to Nicaraguan rebels will be fought on the House floor this week, with President Reagan hoping to reverse last month's defeat of his plan to provide military help to the U.S.-backed guerrillas.

The issue, which will be considered Tuesday by the Democratic-controlled House, is the main item on this week's congressional agenda.

Tuesday also is the deadline Congress has set for itself to pass a budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, but that date will be missed because the spending plan has become bogged down in a dispute between the White House and Congress over military spending and taxes.

Reagan has proposed giving $100 million to the U.S.-supported Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government. A previous package of $27 million in non-lethal aid such as medicine and clothing expired March 31.

The House last month voted 222-210 against Reagan's plan, but the Republican-run Senate later gave 53-47 approval of a modified version of the package, sending the matter back to the House.

Late last week, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other Democratic leaders won approval to tie the Contra aid plan to a controversial money bill, which could mean trouble for Reagan if the measure passes.

Budget Director James Miller III said last week that senior White House officials would recommend the $1.7 billion money bill be vetoed if it passes because it contains money for projects opposed by Reagan.

Reagan, in a meeting with 16 House Democrats, complained that the Democratic move "is clearly an effort to kill our proposal by delaying tactics — tactics that could jeopardize the lives of the freedom fighters and prevent the delivery of defensive weapons necessary to protect themselves from Sandinista attacks."

The Reagan aid package permits $25 million to be spent now, including funds to purchase "defensive" weapons such as shoulder-fired Stinger anti-aircraft weapons. The remaining $75 million couldn't be used for 90 days while the United States tried to negotiate a peaceful end to the fighting.

At least two alternative plans will be offered. One, proposed by Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., says $30 million in aid could be spent immediately but only for "non-lethal" assistance. The remaining $70 million could be used if peace talks failed.

Another proposal, by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., bans all aid to the Contras, but grants $27 million in help to Nicaraguan refugees and $2 million to aid the so-called Contadora nations, a group of Latin countries trying to mediate a diplomatic solution.

The complicated procedure approved by House Democratic leaders calls for separate votes on the $1.7 billion appropriations bill and the Contra aid package, but then combining the two and sending a single measure back to the Senate. If the appropriations bill is defeated, the Contra aid plan would stand alone.

O'Neill said he had decided against trying to find a method for the House to act separately on the Contra aid plan because the White House had broken an agreement with him after the previous House Contra vote.

Nakasone promises import-oriented society

Nakasone

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Japanese officials say President Reagan has a firm promise from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone that the Japanese leader will institute a program designed to restructure Japanese society to satisfy his country's Western trading partners.

The two leaders, after talks on Sunday, meet briefly again today and exchange public remarks before the prime minister returns to Japan to prepare for an economic summit of the seven major industrialized democracies next month.

Nakasone, the officials said, is determined to rid Japan of its long coveted trade surplus and convert its people into more leisurely, higher living and import hungry consumers.

That was the conclusion drawn Sunday by officials from both sides following a casual, midday meeting between the two leaders at the president's Camp David retreat in the Maryland mountains.

After years of concentrating nearly all their commercial efforts on developing an economy built on exports, the Japanese now realize that policy "is having a serious and adverse impact on relations with this country and others in the world," said one U.S. official briefing reporters after the meeting.

And a Japanese official, who, like the American, described the talks on condition he not be identified, said Reagan spoke of "mounting frustration in the United States" over the inability of U.S. firms to compete with Japanese products in either country.

The United States has about a $50 billion trade deficit with Japan.

"The prime minister said he realized Japan can't continue as is," the official said. "It is high time for the Japanese economy to change its own structure."

An American official who attended the talks said Nakasone assured Reagan he is "determined to effect an historic change" in Japanese lifestyle and culture to accommodate Western markets and interests. Reagan, he said, was "impressed by the commitment and determination of the prime minister" to eliminate the huge trade imbalance between Japan and the West.

The prime minister also expressed sympathy to Reagan for the most recent terrorist attack in Berlin in which an American soldier was killed and more than 200 people, including 63 U.S. military personnel, were wounded, the official said.

Both men expressed a desire for international cooperation in combatting terrorism, the source said, but Reagan neither sought nor received support for a retaliatory strike against Libya, which has been blamed for terrorist attacks in the past and which Reagan has termed a suspect in the latest killing.

U.S. and Japanese officials had said a key topic of the discussion was to be a report prepared for Nakasone earlier this month calling for fundamental changes in the Japanese lifestyle.

New airport security sensors being developed

BOSTON (AP) — Security experts are rethinking the traditional metal detection systems in use at most airports around the world as terrorists turn to plastic guns and explosives that look like strips of lasagna.

"We're looking at a number of alternatives," Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said in an interview. "Whether or not they live up to expectations remains to be seen, but we're moving forward."

Among the new generation of security sensors being developed are devices that "sniff out" weapons and X-rays that can detect plastic explosives such as the one suspected in the bombing of a TWA jetliner on April 2.

One manufacturer is developing an X-ray machine that detects plastic explosives while others are devising devices that vacuum vapors from baggage and passengers to sense the presence of weapons and bombs, Farrar said.

The "Model-Z" X-ray device manufactured by American Science & Engineering of Cambridge produces an improved and sharper X-ray image to help spot danger among the clutter of seemingly innocuous shapes inside luggage.

The device can see plastic explosives and new weapons like the Austrian-made Glock-17 automatic pistol, an 80 percent plastic gun developed by the military because it is lightweight and rustproof. A side-effect of its high plastic content is that the gun can fool metal detectors and most X-rays.

"It's a terrorist's dream and a security nightmare," said Dick Sesnewicz, sales manager at American Science.

But he said his device can pick up the dangerous plastics, which produce an extra-shiny image on the screen.

"We are still exploring other applications besides anti-terrorism," Sesnewicz said.

But American Science and other companies were guarded in how much they would disclose.

"The worst thing we could do would be to advertise to the terrorists," said John Ball, a spokesman for Thermedics Inc. of Woburn, which was awarded an FAA contract for more than $500,000 last June for research and development of a device the firm claims can outsniff a trained canine, especially in searching for plastic explosives.

Apartheid protesters at Yale arrested; Shanties leveled

Associated Press

As many as 76 people were arrested today by campus police at Yale University, and a shanty village erected to protest apartheid in South Africa was leveled, a Yale official said.

University spokesman Walter Littell said the arrests were made after officers warned students against interfering with the dismantling of the shantytown and some students sat down in front of the structures.

The shanties were taken down by supervisory members of Yale's custodial deparment. Members of the custodial union, had said last week that they would not obey university orders to dismantle the shanties.

It was the second confrontation between students and campus police in three days. On Saturday, about 100 demonstrators tried to unload a station wagon full of wood near Beinecke Plaza.

Several people, including Yale police officers, were knocked to the ground during a 10-minute scuffle. No one was seriously injured and there were no arrests.

"The university said they were going to take down the shanties — we decided we would take the initiative," said sophomore Jon Ritter.

Yale officials said students would face arrest or suspension if they tried to prevent university police from dismantling the shacks.

Car plows into crowd at fair, killing one man

PONCHATOULA, La. (AP) — A car that plowed into a crowd of fairgoers and mowed down people for a block, killing a man and injuring 24 others, sounded like repeating fireworks as it hit them, a witness said.

Teacher Kim Zabbia, who was in her front yard nearby when she heard what happened, said "It sounded like fireworks — pop, pop, pop. People were yelling, telling people to get out of the way."

The car, driven by an 83-year old woman who apparently became ill at the wheel, smashed into a crowd of people Sunday at the Strawberry Festival.

"She got to the corner where she would normally turn, and something happened, possibly she had a seizure or possibly a heart attack," said Tangipahoa Parish Chief Deputy John Dahmer.

He said the car, traveling at 20 to 25 mph, knocked down people for a block along the roped-off street near the festival's main entrance. It stopped only when it smashed into a parked car.

Byron Ragan, 14, said he was walking down the street when he heard people screaming and saw the car coming toward him.

"My first reaction was just to grab people and throw them away from the street," he said.

"It all happened so fast," said fairgoer Margie Price. "With all the screaming, I thought it was like a riot over there."

"It was about a half a block away from the festival itself, and a lot of the people who lived right there whose houses were right in that area, their driveways and yards were used as emergency stations," said Laura Mauffray, 21, a disc jockey who was broadcasting live from the festival.

The driver, Inez Layrisson, was hospitalized for observation and tests, Dahmer said. Mrs. Layrisson, who suffered cuts and bruises in the accident, is the mother of Sheriff Ed Layrisson.

The dead man was identified as Michael Meyer, 45, of suburban New Orleans. Three people were critically injured, including a 17-month-old boy, hospital authorities said.

Diet Pill System Sweeping U.S. (Advertisement)

Super Dream Pill
Guaranteed Weight Loss
Eat Your Favorite Foods

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to the latest review of customers' files, here's what some people are saying about the remarkable Dream Pill System for guaranteed weight loss:

"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply."
Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, Alabama
"Losing 1 lb. per day."
Mr. J.G., Pineville, Kentucky
"Your Dream Pill is working for me . . . ordering another supply."
Mrs. G.W., Fort Gay, West Virginia
"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great...have lost 27 lbs. Mr. A.D., Anadarko, Oklahoma

The System's Dream Pill combines the natural substances L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat [their favorite foods] — and still be thin and wiry."

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Lose Weight 24 Hours A Day

One beautiful thing about the Dream Pill System is the ease with which it works. The pounds melt away 24 hours a day. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger. The best time to take the pills is just before you go to bed at night. That way, the pounds melt away even as you sleep. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger!

The super Dream Pill System is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again. Naturally, individual weight loss results (like those above) may vary depending upon initial weight, metabolic differences and adherence to the Dream Pill System.

Meese visits wounded agents

MIAMI (AP) — FBI agents could not have anticipated that two suspects they stopped would open fire, killing two agents and wounding five others before the suspects were killed themselves, said U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese.

"It's just too bad that these two people were such vicious killers that they were able to kill two very good agents," said Meese, who flew here Sunday to visit three hospitalized FBI men.

The condition of agents Gordon McNeill, 43, and John Hanlon, 48, improved from serious but stable to good Sunday, said Baptist Hospital spokeswoman Anne Streeter.

Attempted arsonist arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man was arrested after he emptied a gasoline can onto a driveway in front of the White House, U.S. Park Police said.

The man, who refused to reveal his identity and carried no identification, was charged with attempted arson after the incident Saturday night, according to a statement released by Park Police.

The man, described as being in his early 20s, had parked a pickup truck in front of the White House and then poured gasoline onto the driveway at the northwest gate, police said.

"The subject reached in his pocket for matches and was then arrested by a U.S. Park Police officer for attempted arson," the police statement said.

He was turned over to the Metropolitan Police Department.

Pedestrians stroll across bridge

SANDY POINT STATE PARK, Md. (AP) — Nearly 50,000 people braved chilly weather and occasional drizzle for the once-a-year chance to walk across a 4.3-mile bridge over the Chesapeake Bay, state officials say.

Maryland Toll Facilities officials had expected more walkers for the 12th annual open house Sunday, but the weather apparently kept many people home, said pokesman Tom Freburger.

Part of the William Preston Lane Jr. Memorial Bridge is closed for one day each year so that pedestrians can enjoy a view usually reserved for motorists. Walkers ranged in age from babes in strollers to at least one woman in her 80s.

Toll facilities officials supplied water and portable toilets along the route.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable. BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleanss Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Justice for all

A Glendale, Calif. man who last Thursday shot and wounded in court the man accused of killing his daughter may have given rhyme and reason to the frustration felt by a lot of Americans disappointed by the failures of the judicial system. But he didn't point the way to a better form of justice.

After John D. Spiegelman, 47, stood and fired three shots at Daniel David Morgan, Spiegelman laid down his .38-caliber pistol and said: "I give up."

According to the Los Angeles Times, Spiegelman was interviewed last year for an article on crime victims organizations and recalled watching television footage of a father in a Louisiana courthouse shooting the suspected murderer of his child.

"He didn't have to go through all that (trial and court procedure). Nothing is going to bring back his daughter. But a tremendous burden has been lifted off of him.

"It's what we all want to do, let's face it," Spiegelman was quoted as saying.

Now he, too, has resorted to lawlessness in an effort to find a greater and faster justice.

It's likely that in a way Spiegelman is correct. In their pain and grief, there probably are any number of people in this country who have witnessed limitations in the American system of justice and, in frustration, turned to thoughts of such acts of violence to gain their own kind of justice. But in so doing, do they find true justice or do they merely undermine the fabric of society?

No one can deny that the judicial system often is slow, cumbersome and fraught with frustration for many of those who are forced to seek justice there. But that is the very reason for this system being the envy of people around the globe. Here, unlike so many countries, a poor man or a rich man, a king or a servant can find true justice. No. Not quickly. And, on occasion, an error is made. An innocent person is placed behind bars or a guilty one goes free. But, overall, the system is good and true.

Every parent in this land can embrace the pain Spiegelman and those like him must experience by the death of their child or loved one. Nothing can wipe away that loss. Nothing, that is, unless it's the knowledge that if this admirable system of justice can continue and society does not resort to vigilante justice, not one but every American will continue to have the best opportunity on earth to walk into a courtroom and find justice. Equal justice for all; that's the name of the game. The system isn't perfect, but it's the best yet devised by man.

That is worth holding onto.

Stung in Angola

Though the war is still called covert, everybody knows that the United States intends to send Stinger missiles to rebels battling Angola's Marxist regime. Stingers are heat-seeking missiles said to cost $60,000 each. They weigh 35 pounds loaded, and enable a guerrilla to shoot down hostile aircraft. Two questions arise: How will thus arming Jonas Savimbi's Unita rebels advance America's interests in southern Africa? And has anyone considered the risks of supplying Stingers to irregular forces, not only in Angola but also Nicaragua?

This surface-to-air weapon is undeniably effective in enabling insurgents to fell helicopters. But the same missile is just as deadly to airliners. A Stinger would be worth its weight in jewels to a terrorist, and someone with money is bound to turn up. Only the most vital national interests might justify this risk. What, then, are the stakes?

Arming Savimbi follows the recent declaration by President P.W. Botha of South Africa that he is prepared next August to end the illegal occupation of Namibia and accept the United Nations plan for granting it independence. But he wants assurances that Angola will, in return, agree to a plan to send home some 30,000 Cuban troops. On form, this looks like another attempt to deflect the blame when another summer passes without agreement.

The parties in this game are locked together by geography and antipathy. Huge, mineral-rich Namibia has long been a low-intensity battleground between South African troops and leftist guerrillas based in adjacent Angola. To punish Angola for sheltering Namibian insurgents, South Africa has bombed and raided Angolan territory. It has also menaced the Marxist regime by supporting its nemesis, the insurgent army led by Savimbi. Angola insists the Cubans cannot leave until its regime feels safe.

The Reagan administration has long urged a bargain by which Botha frees Namibia and Angola dismisses the Cubans. Angola has said the Cubans would depart after a settlement is reached. The idea in arming the Savimbi forces is to pressure Angola to negotiate a settlement.

But it has never been explained how arming these rebels would relieve Angola's anxieties and reliance on Soviet-bloc aid. The pains in this conflict are not symmetrical. Angola is broke and wounded. It might desire less dependence on Soviet and Cuban arms if Namibia were in friendlier hands. By contrast, for South Africa, making trouble for Angola is a low-cost way of affirming regional primacy and justifying its hold on Namibia. As a bonus, those Cubans are useful to Botha in decrying the Red menace, in the name of which he resists power-sharing with blacks in his own country.

Throwing Stingers on the scale does nothing to alter this equation. The obstacles to a regional settlement lie in Pretoria, whose leaders play on the State Department's gullibility by promising to withdraw from Namibia. What Washington needs is leverage against South Africa, not Angola. Those Stingers, even if kept in the intended hands, promise to prolong and widen Angola's wars.

Suriname drugs linked to Libya

WASHINGTON — We reported last December evidence that the Marxist government of Suriname, the former Dutch colony on the northeast coast of South America, was engaged in drug trafficking. Cocaine processed in a jungle factory guarded by Surinamese troops was being shipped to Amsterdam in diplomatic pouches, according to Dutch intelligence sources.

Jack Anderson

Now the Drug Enforcement Administration has produced dramatic confirmation of our report.

On March 24, federal agents arrested three Surinamese citizens in Miami. DEA agents, posing as smugglers, had approached the three suspects who agreed to provide a safe place to refuel drug-carrying aircraft en route from Colombia to the United States. The price was to be $1 million per plane.

The case has created an international scandal thanks to the identity of one of those arrested: Etienne Boerenveen, a member of the five-man military junta that has ruled Suriname since Desi Bouterse seized power in a 1980 coup. The Netherlands government is particularly embarrassed because it had just offered secretly to resume aid to Suriname — $25 million worth — in exchange for a pledge to restore democracy in the country of some 400,000. Dutch and American aid was abruptly stopped when Bouterse executed 15 opposition leaders in 1982.

Boerenveen, a graduate of the Dutch military academy, bragged to the undercover agent that he was the No. 2 man in the Bouterse regime. He entered the United States on a diplomatic passport and has tried to claim diplomatic immunity.

Before his arrest, "Boerenveen offered protection to ether and cocaine transshipment," court records state. "(He) would provide small boats and trucks to transport ether" from freighters to Surinamese refineries and back. He told the DEA agents that he "controlled the police, the military, the ports and security of all airfields" in Suriname, according to the court records.

The Surinamese government is concerned about Boerenveen's arrest. Surinamese officials have threatened to break off already tenuous diplomatic ties with the United States if his diplomatic status is not recognized.

As we reported, Suriname has become a refuge for Colombian drug lords forced out by President Belisario Betancur in recent years. Sources told our associate Donald Goldberg the Bouterse regime invited the drug bosses into Suriname because of its desperate need for hard currency after the cutoff of Dutch and U.S. aid.

Bouterse's situation grew even worse in 1983. His role model and mentor had been Maurice Bishop, the Marxist leader of Grenada who was deposed and murdered by Cuban-backed rivals, leading to the invasion by U.S. troops. Fearful that Suriname might be next on the Reagan administration's hit list, Bouterse abruptly expelled his Cuban military advisers — and welcomed the Colombian cocaine lords into his country.

Four days after Boerenveen's arrest, the Surinamese foreign ministry issued a statement accusing the United States of "setting up" Boerenveen because of Suriname's increasingly close ties to Libya. And one Dutch source suggested there might be some truth to the charges.

Our intelligence sources say Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy has sent more than 200 advisers to Suriname; in return, he has asked for Surinamese passports for his international assassination squads.

Boerenveen's arrest may have been a coincidence in timing, or it may have been linked to the Reagan administration's undeclared war on Khadafy. According to Dutch sources, the State Department quietly warned Suriname in late January to cool its ardent embrace of Khadafy. Four weeks later, federal agents made their first contact with the Surinamese suspects and set up the sting operation that netted Boerenveen.

LOBBYING DE LUXE: The billboard lobby is totally shameless in its courtship of congressional influence brokers. At the January convention of the Outdoor Advertising Association, the Naegele Co. and Gannett Outdoor put up a 25-foot banner with the picture of the quest of honor, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass. Other guests were House Majority Leader James Wright, D-Tex., House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., Reps. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., and Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo. The billboard industry's magazine headlined its story of the junket: "The outdoor advertising industry — forever challenged, rarely defeated."

SUICIDE STALL: The Army has a driver-education course with a difference: Ignore instructions and you're dead. The Goer, a cargo carrier, "is a unique vehicle," the manual states, adding ominously: "Unless you've been properly trained to drive it and are always alert, it can kill you." If the Goer stalls, the driver is warned, the gears won't shift and the steering will stop working. Also, the brakes have only enough reserve power for "about eight full pumps." MINI-EDITORIAL: What's that you say? You sure would like an extra hour of after-work daylight this month to cut the grass or just sit out in the yard and sniff the blossoms? Well, friends, you'd have been able to if it weren't for one man: Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky. He has succeeded in stalling legislation in the Senate — already passed by the House — that would have started daylight-saving time on the first Sunday in April instead of the last. Ford blocked what he views as a city slickers' scheme to change "God's time" to the detriment of farmers.

Casey trip may save Contra aid

WASHINGTON — CIA Director William Casey delivered a top-secret report to the White House on the true size of that Sandinista force that crossed the border to attack contra base camps in Honduras last week, and may thereby have assured a win for President Reagan in the upcoming contra aid vote.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Casey's report said that the Sandinistas had 24 battalions in close-up reserve positions, a force larger than the Honduran army. But the preliminary attack failed. Contra patrols discovered the invaders early and contra sharpshooters surrounded them. Casey's message: The contras can fight.

Before it ended, the Sandinistas lost 120 killed and 300 wounded. Casey's report explained the basic fault of Sandinista intelligence: a false assumption that most contras attached to the base camps were not there when, in fact, they were in the area. Purged of classified data, the Casey report is sure to help Reagan when the House votes on contra aid.

SPEECHWRITER BUCHANAN

Communications Director Patrick J. Buchanan will temporarily take direct control of the strife-torn White House speechwriting shop following Bently Elliott's departure of May 31, guaranteeing a continuation of conservative presidential rhetoric.

Elliott, who will write speeches and give policy advice for Rep. Jack Kemp's presidential campaign, has been the author of President Reagan's key speeches the past five years. But over the last year, chief of staff Donald T. Regan has taken issue with Elliott's conservative prose.

Elliott also has clashed lately with Tony Dolan, a fellow conservative on the speechwriting staff specializing in foreign affairs. Rather than name Dolan as chief or pick an outsider, Buchanan will take over by himself for a spell.

MORE BUSH HARDBALL?

A requested fund-raising speech by George Bush was turned down for Rep. Bill Cobey, facing a tough re-election fight from a marginal North Carolina district, after Cobey declined to serve on the vice president's congressional steering committee.

Cobey conceded to us that "some people" draw a connection between the two events, but said he did not. He added that he still hopes for a vice presidential visit in the autumn. Bush political adviser Lee Atwater claimed "no connection" between support for the vice president and his speaking appearances. One Bush insider, however, said such a connection might be "a good idea some time in the future."

A footnote: Bush will make a fund-raising speech for Rep. Fred Eckert, a conservative upstate New Yorker whose appointment to the vice president's steering committee surprised his friends. One insider privately accused Eckert of selling out for pieces of silver, but he denied any connection.

NO GOP BLACK

Wayne County (Detroit) Executive Bill Lucas, counted on by national Republican leaders to be the party's first black nominee for governor in a major state, is trailing badly in the Michigan GOP primary.

A poll conducted by White House pollster Richard Wirthlin shows Dick Chrysler, a 43-year-old auto parts manufacturer who has never held public office, with a 41 percent to 27 percent edge over Lucas. The poll was commissioned by Chrysler.

When Lucas switched parties last year, Republican strategists looked to him as a major catalyst for party gains among blacks. But his campaign has bogged down among outstate Republicans. Democratic Gov. James Blanchard is heavily favored for re-election, whoever wins the Republican nomination.

THE NEW PAULA

Republican Sen. Paula Hawkins of Florida, now recovering from back surgery at Duke University Hospital, has dramatically changed strategy from making her health a secret to making it a campaign asset in her uphill battle for re-election against Democratic Gov. Bob Graham.

When she first sneaked into the hospital for checks several weeks ago, her trip was covered up. When it leaked, it was highly embarrassing.

During her current stay, Hawkins is not only advertising her presence in the hospital but issuing bulletins and press releases and making scores of phone calls. Intimates say Graham worries Hawkins is going to get a sympathy reaction.

CHARLEY REESE

Government must learn to adapt

The United States is a superpower but it cannot educate its children, subdue its criminals, or control its borders.

How to teach children to read, compute, and learn the basics of science, geography, and history is no great mystery. People have been doing it for several hundreds of years. Even little-bitty countries do it. Even countries with a lot less money to spend on education than we have do it.

Charley Reese

Dealing with crime is simple, too. The government has to make it more painful to be a criminal than to not be a criminal. Even Third World nations do a better job of this than we do.

Nor does any other nation on earth allow millions of people to hop across their border and start enjoying the benefits of citizenship and a good economy, immigration laws be damned.

Well, to understand why the United States, despite its size and power, is in some respects a clown among the industrial nations, you have to disabuse yourself of the notion that government calls the shots in the United States. This false notion is widely believed and some people actively encourage it, but it is simply not so.

The private sector calls the shots. Government follows.

Look at public officials. With some exceptions, they are nobodies whose only claim to fame and influence is the office they hold. Prior to gaining office, they were neither well-known nor influential. They had no power. More importantly, most of them would never have gotten into office without the support of the people who do have power and influence. The vast majority of them wouldn't recognize an original idea if they pulled the covers back and found one in their beds.

Ideas that end up as legislation and institutions rarely originate in government. They come from the outside. Apply common sense. Who do you think has more influence: the recipient of large donations or the giver of large donations? The rule applies to universities and think tanks as well as to politicians.

A second necessary concept to grasp is that once an idea progresses from idea to law and bureaucracy it becomes institutionalized. Social Security was once an idea borrowed from Germany. Now it's institutionalized. Not only are there laws and bureaucrats and funds involved but a permanent constituency of recipients.

The point is that political change is always difficult because it involves changing ideas that have become institutionalized and have developed constituencies that have a vested interest in maintaining the status quo.

The institutions and constituencies we have in the country today represent the body of ideas that could be called the liberal-welfare state, though corporate welfare state would be more accurate. This body of ideas gained prominence in the New Deal and have dominated our nation ever since.

The problem with an orthodoxy — which is a body of petrified ideas — is that when new situations arise, the orthodoxy, like a stuck record, produces the same old response. Liberal orthodoxy believes open borders are good and even though our situation in 1986 is not the same as it was in the early 1900s, this petrified idea blocks immigration reform.

Liberal orthodoxy prescribes treatment and rehabilitation instead of punishment for crime. Even though there is an appalling amount of evidence that this is a failed idea, every new crime statistic produces the same old response.

Liberal orthodoxy prescribes freedom and social adjustment rather than discipline and hard work for education and even though the evidence of failure is overwhelming, it strenuously resists change.

Any organism, including a nation, which fails to adapt to changes in its environment, dies.

Andrija Artukovic's war crimes trial begins in Zabgreb, Yugoslavia

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Andrija Artukovic, who was extradited from the United States, went on trial today in a bulletproof defendant's box on charges that he ordered mass killings of civilians and anti-Nazi partisans during World War II.

Yugoslav media have labeled the 86-year-old Artukovic "the butcher of the Balkans," but he has said he is innocent of the war crimes accusations, which stem from his role as interior minister of the Nazi puppet state of Croatia.

If convicted, Artukovic could be executed by firing squad.

Wearing a dark suit jacket and a shirt without a tie, the former resident of Seal Beach, Calif., today haltingly entered Zagreb district court flanked by two policemen.

The officers helped him to sit and to rise and identify himself to the tribune of five judges who are presiding over the non-jury trial, which is expected to end April 30.

Artukovic sat in a three-sided defendant's box of bulletproof glass. Special quarters furnished with medical equipment were set up for him in the court building, where he was moved from a prison hospital after being flown to Zagreb from the United States on Feb. 12.

As the trial got under way, Defense attorney Zeiko Olujic moved for a postponement of eight days, saying he had not been allowed enough time with Artukovic to go over the indictment.

The defendant is practically blind and unable to read the 32-page document for himself, Olujic argued. Artukovic's lawyers have also argued that he is senile.

But Chief Judge Milko Gajski said the motion for postponement was denied because defense lawyers had been able to speak to Artukovic, although those meetings were supervised for security reasons.

Artukovic, who had successfully avoided extradition for trial for nearly 35 years, appeared frail during his court appearance, but understood and answered questions about his birthplace and date, his parent's names and other biographical data.

An official indictment filed last month does not specify how many killings Artukovic was charged with, but focused on four specific incidents, alleging that:

—Artukovic ordered the machine-gun killing of 450 people, mostly women and children, who could not be housed in the Kerestinac assembly camp. The indictment said he was present at the massacre.

—He ordered several hundred partisan prisoners shot. They allegedly were then run over with tanks in his presence near Samobor in early 1943.

—He ordered the killing of Dr. Jesa Vidic, a lawyer, in a concentration camp in May 1941.

—He ordered the detention and killing of the entire civilian population of several villages near Vrgin Most after a Croatian fascist unit was slain there.

Artukovic faces a minimum sentence of five years in prison.

British media reports U.S. military buildup

LONDON (AP) — Eyewitnesses say many U.S. Air Force tanker and transport planes have been flying into Britain for the past three days, and British media reported today that the movements indicate a U.S. military buildup for a possible strike at Libya.

A U.S. Air Force spokesman, however, refused to confirm that any buildup was taking place.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher remained silent on the possible use of British bases for any attack on Libya, but reporters said that at one point Sunday, KC-10A tankers were landing every 20 minutes at Mildenhall base, 3rd U.S. Air Force headquarters in eastern England.

There were conflicting reports about whether Mrs. Thatcher had agreed to a purported request from President Reagan for the use of British bases for a punitive strike against the government of Col. Moammar Khadafy, which the White House accuses of being a major force in international terrorism.

The Independent Radio News reported today that when Mrs. Thatcher met Saturday with Reagan's envoy, U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters, "she is believed to have urged him to use British bases in England and Cyprus as a last resort."

But the newscast said that "there is no doubt that the Americans have brought in extra planes to back up their possible military action in the Mediterranean."

A photograph of nine KC-10A tankers and C-130 transports close together on the ground at Mildenhall base in eastern England was on the front page of the tabloid daily Today.

Aircraft enthusiasts who log plane movements from outside base perimeters said there normally are two KC-10As a week at Mildenhall, but that by lunchtime Sunday, 15 were parked there.

Besides the transports and tankers seen at Mildenhall, more KC-10As were photographed at the Royal Air Force base at Fairford in southwest England.

Speaking over the roar of aircraft engines, Lt. Col. Doug Kinnet, U.S. Air Force spokesman at Mildenhall, said on Sunday, "It's business as usual."

He would not confirm that any aircraft movements were out of the ordinary.

If an attack on Libya were mounted, the KC-10A tankers could give mid-air refueling to British-based U.S. F-111 fighter-bombers.

The U.S. tankers and transports also could operate from the British base at Akrotiri in Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean to support the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

On Cyprus today, the Foreign Ministry summoned the British ambassador, W.J.A. Wilberforce, to ask for an explanation of the news reports.

Cyprus government spokesman Elias Georgiades said Wilberforce was told that Cypriot authorities does not agree to the use of British bases on the island by countries other than Britain for operations against neighboring nations.

This meeting occurred as Libya's official news agency, JANA, and Tripoli radio, both monitored on Cyprus, reported that 30 U.S. F-4 Phantom jets and three C-130 transport planes had arrived at the British base at Akrotiri.

JANA and Tripoli radio said the C-130s unloaded "long boxes, which may have contained missiles."

Common Market debates sanctions against Libya

By ABNER KATZMAN

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A Dutch official says Common Market foreign ministers meeting in emergency session today may seek trade sanctions against Libya in order to head off a possible U.S. military strike against the North African country.

As current head of the 12-member Common Market, the Dutch called the meeting in response to urgent appeals from Spain and Italy, which have been threatened by Libya with reprisals if U.S. forces attack.

A flotilla of U.S. air and naval forces currently is assembled in the Mediterranean on alert for possible action against Libya, which the United States has blamed for fostering terrorism.

A spokesman for the Dutch Foreign Ministry stressed European solidarity with the United States against terrorism, which in the last 15 months has claimed 19 lives and injured almost 400 people in 12 incidents in Europe or aboard airplanes near it.

"We absolutely agree with the Americans that something should be done about state terrorism," the spokesman said Sunday, "but that doesn't necessarily mean that you look for a military solution."

The Dutch spokesman said ministers could decide on sanctions against Libya, which last year conducted $12 billion in trade with the Common Market nations.

"What we want to do is prevent a further escalation of the conflict," said the spokesman, who spoke with The AP on condition of anonymity.

"The threat (of U.S. military action) was building up rapidly, that's why we called the meeting," the official said. "It (the U.S.-Libya situation) was degenerating very rapidly."

In London today, Britain's domestic news agency Press Association said Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe would tell the other Common Market foreign ministers that Britain firmly opposes economic sanctions against Libya.

The agency apparently was briefed by the Foreign Office prior to the beginning of the Common Market meeting.

The news agency said Howe would tell the other officials that Britain opposes sanctions even as a method of persuading President Reagan not to order a military strike against Libya.

Dutch officials other than the Foreign Ministry spokesman were uncertain whether the ministers would devise an anti-terrorist program to persuade the United States not to strike back at Libya for its alleged involvement in bombings early this month at a West Berlin nightclub and aboard a TWA jetliner over Greece.

Vatican expresses concern over possible arrest of Libyan bishop

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican today expressed surprise and concern over the disappearance of the leader of the Roman Catholic Church in Libya.

"We are following this turn of events with special attention," Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said in a brief statement.

Reports from Tripoli said armed men took away and apparently arrested Bishop Giovanni Martinelli of Tripoli, three priests and a nun in the coastal city of Benghazi late Thursday.

A source close to the 44-year-old prelate told The Associated Press that Martinelli, a Libyan-born son of Italian parents, had been staying in a house in Benghazi along with the priests and the nun.

The British Broadcasting Corp. said Martinelli was to have officiated at a wedding in Benghazi on Friday.

Armed men entered the house and the five "were taken away by unknown persons, but it certainly seems to us that they were arrested," the source said. It could not be determined why the five may have been arrested.

Navarro said the news of the bishop's disappearance was received by Vatican officials "with surprise and deep concern."

Asked when Martinelli was last in contact with the Vatican, Navarro said, "he had sent a letter to Silvestrini's office some time ago, but I can't say exactly when." Archbishop Achille Silvestrini is the head of the Vatican's public affairs department which performs the functions of a foreign ministry.

Italy's ambassador to Libya, Giorgio Reitano, was trying to free the five, said the source. However, the source added: "But right now, it's not even known where they are. It's terrible."

Help is waiting for your child April 21-25 at a special Dyslexia Screening Clinic.

Dyslexia. It's a word most people don't understand. But, if your child is one the millions who suffer from dyslexia, you understand the pain and frustration this disability can cause.

You know your child isn't lazy . . . stupid . . . or disobedient, as many have said. Although the strict definition of dyslexia is "a disturbance of the ability to read," you realize that it affects every aspect of your child's life.

Dyslexics find reading almost impossible

Aside from difficulty with reading and composition, your child shies away from sports involving eye/hand coordination. He has trouble following directions and is often clumsy and insecure. These are just a few of the symptoms that can make the life of a dyslexic child confusing and miserable.

Now, a special Dyslexia Screening Clinic, affiliated with Dyslexia Centers of America, offers you and your child hope for a normal life.

Sponsored by Boyd Chiropractic Clinics of Midland, who have served the health care needs of West Texans for over 40 years, the clinic will feature Dr. Carl A. Ferreri, a world renowned expert in the treatment of dyslexia.

A doctor of chiropractic, Dr. Ferreri has practiced for 29 years and has developed a highly effective method for treating basic learning dysfunctions. During the Clinic, Dr. Ferreri will instruct other professionals in his treatment methods which involve no drugs or anesthesia. The treatment, which centers around adjustments of the spinal and cranial structures, along with kinesiological and muscular

Conditions forecast for 7 P.M. Monday

Fair, high near 80 in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and a high near 80 degrees are in the area forecast, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight, under fair skies, the low will be near 50 with light and variable winds. Tuesday winds will become southeasterly at 10-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 95 was only two degrees below the record high set for the date in 1972. The 49 degree low of this morning was 20 degrees above the record low set in 1983.

STATE

A strong cold front moving through Texas lowered temperatures and triggered thunderstorms in northeastern parts of the state and forecasters predicted the precipitation would continue.

The front stretched along a line from Texarkana through Dallas and San Angelo to south of Midland and was moving southeast. Scattered showers dampened the Hill Country of Central Texas.

Thunderstorms brought high winds that snapped the arm of a railroad crossing in Camp County, blew down signs in Morris County and caused power outages in the community of Jenkins.

The National Weather Service reported dime-size hail in Pittsburg and Lone Star shortly before 2 a.m., pea-size hail in Dallas and half-inch hail in Collin County.

Low clouds blanketed the eastern half of the state while fair skies were common elsewhere.

Winds were southerly in advance of the cold front and northerly in its wake. Speeds gusted up to 25 to 35 mph along the wind shift line and ranged from 10 to 15 mph elsewhere.

Scattered thunderstorms were expected over eastern portions of North Texas and central sections of South Texas. Otherwise, skies should be fair to partly cloudy skies except for mostly cloudy in the east until this afternoon.

NATION

Storms continued to pummel the Plains today, unleashing thunderstorms, snow, marble-size hail and winds as high as 62 mph.

Snow fell over much of the northern Plains, and winter storm warnings remained in effect in the Dakotas and Montana.

The National Weather Service said up to a foot of snow was possible in parts of North Dakota. Williston, N.D., received 14 inches of snow Sunday, breaking a record for the month set in 1984.

Travelers' advisories warning of snow and blowing snow were in effect in parts of Wyoming, Minnesota and the Colorado mountains.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Canadian Dan Halldorson shot back-to-back rounds of 66—263 Sunday to claim the $36,000 first prize in the Deposit Guaranty Classic. Halldorson, 34, held off Paul Azinger, who also shot two rounds of 66. TAIPEI, Taiwan — Taiwan's Lu Hsi-chuen shot a 3-under-par 69—212 on to win the Taiwan Open, edging John Jacobs of San Diego, who shot a five-under-par 67 — Sunday's lowest score — and Curt Byrum of Onida, S.D., who shot a 72, by a stroke.

SAN DIEGO — Patty Sheehan sank a birdie putt on the final hole Sunday to hold off Pat Bradley by one stroke in the Kyocera Inamori Classic. Sheehan carded a 2-under-par 70—278 278, 10 strokes under par. Bradley, bidding for back-to-back victories after winning the Dinah Shore tournament, shot a final-round 68—279 total.

Football

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Running back Marcus Dupree has been declared eligible for the May 9 NFL draft, but he may not be healthy enough to play. Dupree learned of the league decision when NFL teams began calling to express some interest in the 6-3, 233 pound back. Dupree injured a knee in February of 1985 while playing with the now-defunct USFL Portland Breakers.

Hockey

MOSCOW — Bryan Erickson of the Los Angeles Kings of the NHL scored three goals Sunday, leading the United States to a 7-2 victory over Poland in the World Hockey Championships. Sweden downed Canada 4-1 in the other game on the second day of the tournament. All four teams have 1-1 records. In other games, the Soviet Union defeated Finland 4-1 and West Germany upset defending champion Czechoslovakia 4-3. The Czechs are 0-2, while the Finns and West Germans have 1-1 records.

Road Racing

BOSTON — Veteran cross country champion Ed Eyestone ran away from the field over the final mile Sunday to win the $5,000 first prize in the fifth annual 10-kilometer Boston Milk Run. Lynn Jennings won the women's race. Joan Benoit launched a comeback from surgery last fall by finishing a strong third.

Auto Racing

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Dale Earnhardt shook off Harry Gant and then outran Darrell Waltrip at the finish Sunday to win the 30th TranSouth 500 and end a string of 11 Winston Cup stock car races without a repeat winner.

JEREZ DE LA FRONTERA, Spain — Brazilian Ayrton Senna won Sunday's Spanish Grand Prix by the tightest margin in modern Grand Prix racing, edging Britain's Nigel Mansell in a dramatic wheel-to-wheel duel.

SILVERSTONE, England - Pascal Fabre of France, driving a Lola T86-50, won the first round of the Formula 3000 international motor racing championship Sunday.

Horse Racing

GOTEBORG, Sweden - American Leslie Burr-Lenehan completed two perfect rides Sunday to win the Volvo World Cup equestrian finals by an unprecedented victory margin.

Golden Bear ends hibernation

The Masters

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Just when the Masters appeared about to be conquered by invaders from all over the world, Jack Nicklaus defended American golf, Augusta National and himself. At age 46, the golfer known as the Golden Bear emerged from nearly a six-year hibernation in the major championships with a 65 Sunday that made him and his gallery weep.

"Going up the fairway I had tears in my eyes," he would say later. "And then I told myself, 'Hey, you've got golf to play.' "

Play golf he did, as only he can. Four strokes off the lead as he started the back nine, he birdied the 10th, 11th and 13th holes, rolled in a eagle putt at the 15th, then birdied the 16th (after a near hole-in-one) and the 17th. Confronted with a 50-foot putt on the 18th, he rolled it to within inches of the cup for the tap-in that would be the difference.

"I kept reading in the papers," he said later, "that you can't win the Masters at 46, but I did."

Celebrating the late birdie putts that won his 20th major championship and his sixth Masters, Nicklaus reacted as he did at Baltusrol in 1980 when he won a record fourth United States Open title. After each of the putts at the 15th, 16th and 17th, he raised both arms in triumph, his new putter high in his left hand.

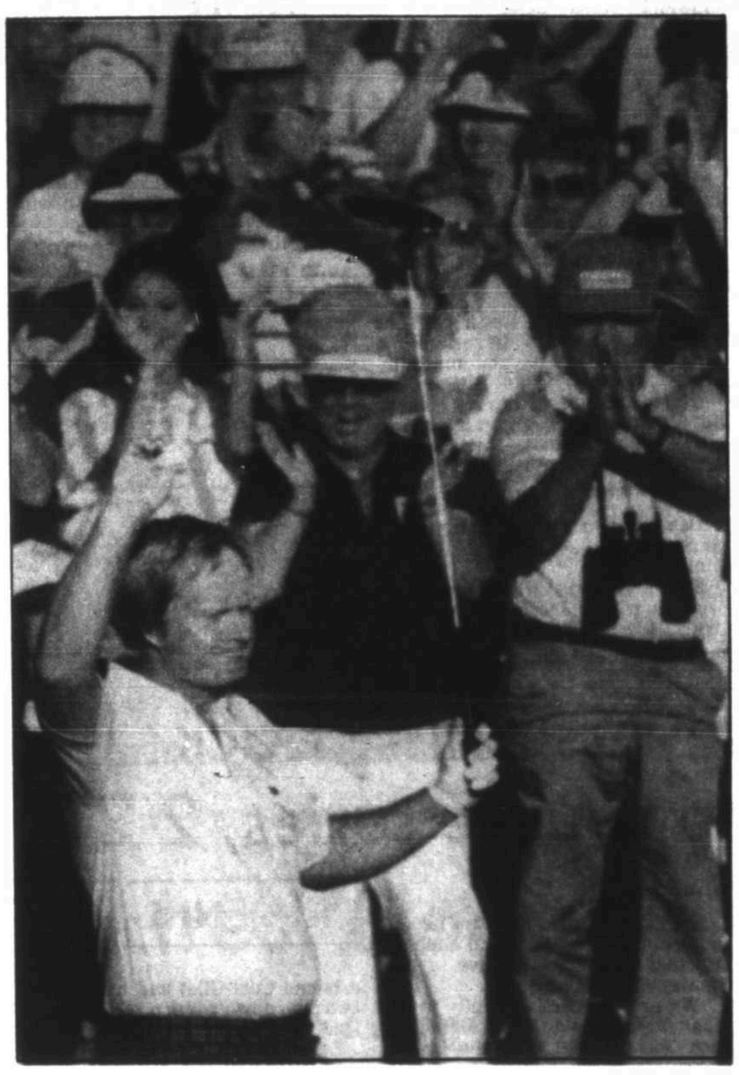

"And to have your son caddying for you," he said, "that's just terrific."

HIS 24-year-old son Jackie, also a touring pro, caddied for his father as he often has in recent years, especially in the major tournaments. But last year the Golden Bear had missed the 36-hole cut at both the United States Open and the British Open.

"I thought this morning that 66 would tie and 65 would win," Nicklaus said. "And that's exactly what happened. I haven't had this much fun in six years."

Until Sunday, the Golden Bear appeared to have lost his claws. He had not won a tournament on the PGA Tour in nearly two years, since the 1984 Memorial, the tournament he also supervises in Dublin, Ohio. Many golf people thought he might never win another major championship, or even another lesser tournament. But now he has.

Bold 18th dooms Australian

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — All week long at the Masters, Greg Norman had kept his ego under control, playing the Augusta National course carefully and conservatively.

But on the final hole, tied for the lead with Jack Nicklaus and seemingly headed for a playoff, Norman attacked and it cost him.

"I tried to hit my second shot too high and too hard," Norman said. "I was aggressive, going for the (birdie) 3 and the win. My style is to try to win and win as soon as I can. I let my ego get the best of me and I rifled the ball at the flag."

When his shot went into the gallery, Norman was doomed. His bogey turned the tournament over to Nicklaus. He finished with a 70 for the day and 280 for the tournament, tied with Tom Kite, one stroke behind.

He did not seem terribly upset by the close call.

"What do you want me to do? Cry?" he said. "We've got another week to play next week and another Masters to play next year. I gave it 101 percent."

Norman said he was proudest of the fact that he didn't fold when a double bogey on No. 10 tumbled him out of the lead. He charged back with a string of four straight birdies on the back nine to tie for the title with one hole remaining.

"When I got the double bogey, I could have said, 'Let's just finish.' I didn't. I said 'I still can win.' I never gave up.

"I'm disappointed I'm not in a playoff, but that's golf. You take the good with the bad. Maybe next year will be my year."

When Norman charged at Nicklaus, the sentimental choice of the gallery, it did not make the Australian a terribly popular man at Augusta National.

"It (The noise) makes Winged Foot (where Norman lost a U.S. Open playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller two years ago) feel like you're playing through a graveyard. The emotion of this course is far and above. With Jack, it's something special. The people love him so much. He owns this place."

Then Norman smiled.

"But one day, I'll break his record of six Masters."

Tom Kite's missed putt on 18 cost him a tie for tie with Jack Nicklaus.

So Close

'I knew it was going'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The birdie putt was just where Tom Kite wanted it, maybe 12 to 15 feet away from the hole at No. 18.

Drop it in the cup and Kite would be tied for the Masters championship with Jack Nicklaus.

Kite measured it, recognized it from the practice rounds, and moved over the ball with no qualms.

"I had that same putt seven or eight times in practice," he said. "I knew it was going in. I made that putt in practice every time from the same spot.

"I couldn't hit a better putt. The ball was going slow enough. I don't know what happened, but it didn't break. It never went left, the way it was supposed to. It just didn't do what it was supposed to do."

The result was a par-4 for the hole, 68 for the round, and 280 for the tournament, one shot behind Nicklaus.

"Obviously, it was not the outcome I had hoped for," Kite said. "Certainly, it was the caliber of round that I hoped for. After the first couple of holes, I played really good golf. I was calm as I could be under the circumstances. The score just didn't turn out the way I hoped it would."

Kite was paired with Seve Ballesteros and when both scored eagles on the par-5 eighth hole, the tournament heated up. "Everybody seemed to get going then," he said. "The caddies and gallery got pumped up."

The loss continued Kite's disappointing string of falling short in major tournaments. "I love the pressure to win," he said. "You don't want pressure, shoot 80-80 in the first two rounds and you go home. Getting in the hunt and seeing how I handled it, I was pleased with what I saw in myself today, even if the results were not what I wanted."

Stats show Tiger Stadium homer heaven

By RICHARD JUSTICE
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ARLINGTON — With the Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers hitting six home runs at Tiger Stadium opening day, an old question was again asked: What's the easiest home-run park in the major leagues?

In the 1980s the answer has been Tiger Stadium, where 992 home runs had been hit in the six seasons before this one.

The hardest? That's also not surprising — the Astrodome in Houston, with 325.

What is most surprising is that 13 of the top 15 home-run parks are in the American League, and 14 of the bottom 15 in the National League.

The National League exceptions are Atlanta and Wrigley Field in Chicago, both in the top 15, and the American League's is Royals Stadium in Kansas City, which is 23rd overall.

Certainly, this is an inexact science. The St. Louis Cardinals and Houston Astros were built around speed and pitching, the Tigers and Baltimore Orioles around home runs.

YET IN almost every instance, the clubs' personnel were assembled to meet the needs of the park. If Darrell Evans looked good to a lot of teams, he looked terrific to the Tigers, who figured his left-hand swing might be perfect for Tiger Stadium's right-field porch.

Regardless, here are the stadium home-run standings for the '80s:

1, Tiger Stadium (Detroit), 992; 2, Kingdome (Seattle), 924; 3, Memorial Stadium (Baltimore), 902; 4, Anaheim Stadium (California), 863; 5, Fenway Park (Boston), 855; 6, Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium (Atlanta), 829; 7, Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome (Minneapolis), 818; 8, Wrigley Field (Chicago), 808; 9, Exhibition Stadium (Toronto), 803; 10, Oakland Coliseum, 772; 11, County Stadium (Milwaukee), 737; 12, Yankee Stadium (New York), 729; 13, Comiskey Park (Chicago), 721.

The second half:

TED BATTLES

It's not over until Bear says so

The masses lining the fairway broke out in thunderous applause as he made his way toward the green.

It was nice that they remembered the fading old warrior, especially after the way it began many years ago.

From the fat kid many people resented for what he was doing to Arnold Palmer's popular golf reign of the game, the slimmed down Golden Bear had become a golfing legend.

This was the same fat kid from Ohio State who ruined the pro career of another golfer before it even started when the Indiana University golfer asked himself in an 0-for-22 string, "If I can't beat this kid from Ohio State, what am I going to do when I meet a real pro?"

So Dave Pelz drowned his sorrows with NASA, but finally returned to the game to design golf clubs in Abilene as the thought of how the golfer from OSU could beat him, a better all-around athlete, so consistently, continued to haunt him.

THE tributed from the crowd, if you've got any sentiment, tugged at the heart. A nice gesture, but in a few moments nostalgia time would be over and the foreign contingent who would decide whether Tom Kite would win this thing would hove into sight.

Then Seve Ballesteros had an eagle and went nine under....Nicklaus must have been four or five back at the time, hopelessly, it seemed, out of it. Kite, however, hung tough with a putt that averted a bogey that would have ruined any lingering chances.

But the way Ballesteros, two strokes ahead, was playing, even that looked like too much of a hill.

Ballesteros...he seemed to be doing all this out of spite for that TPGA ruling that banned him from U.S. tournaments...was in control and most of his competition was coming from folks like Australia's Greg Norman, South Africa's Nick Price, Germany's Bernhard Langher...and they were just the leaders.

THE DECISION to abandon the TV set for some yard work was prompted by the reluctantly arrived at conclusion that Seve was really just too good and Kite, well, that elusive first major win we've been waiting for again would dangle just out of reach.

A few more of these and Ballesteros would equal and perhaps surpass Nicklaus' record of five Masters titles.

There was a time, when you couldn't count Nicklaus out of an event like this, but he was 46 and this was a game for the young flat bellies.

Maybe 45 minutes, an hour later, a check on the tournament's progress revealed a miracle had been missed. Nicklaus was birdying 17 and was out in front and his pursuers, the only ones with a chance to catch him were Norman and Kite.

AS NICKLAUS finished, Norman was carding a birdie on 17 to pull within one. Kite had only to sink a not-that-difficult putt, unless you are standing over it, putt on 18 to tie.

As Norman teed it up on 18, I said to the Mrs. "I can't remember a Masters finish that was more exciting."

The guy on TV said the same thing.

"That's what you just said," she said.

"Profound, I know. But it's not what you say, but where you say it. His statement was worth six figures."

Everybody who wasn't out working in the yard knows the rest. Kite missed his putt and Norman's second shot on 18 went into the crowd and Nicklaus had his sixth Masters.

Seve may not find Jack so easy to catch after all.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 7 P.M. Monday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and a high near 80 degrees are in the area forecast, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight, under fair skies, the low will be near 50 with light and variable winds. Tuesday winds will become southeasterly at 10-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 95 was only two degrees below the record high set for the date in 1972. The 49 degree low of this morning was 20 degrees above the record low set in 1983.

STATE

A strong cold front moving through Texas lowered temperatures and triggered thunderstorms in northeastern parts of the state and forecasters predicted the precipitation would continue.

The front stretched along a line from Texarkana through Dallas and San Angelo to south of Midland and was moving southeast. Scattered showers dampened the Hill Country of Central Texas.

Thunderstorms brought high winds that snapped the arm of a railroad crossing in Camp County, blew down signs in Morris County and caused power outages in the community of Jenkins.

The National Weather Service reported dime-size hail in Pittsburg and Lone Star shortly before 2 a.m., pea-size hail in Dallas and half-inch hail in Collin County.

Low clouds blanketed the eastern half of the state while fair skies were common elsewhere.

Winds were southerly in advance of the cold front and northerly in its wake. Speeds gusted up to 25 to 35 mph along the wind shift line and ranged from 10 to 15 mph elsewhere.

Scattered thunderstorms were expected over eastern portions of North Texas and central sections of South Texas. Otherwise, skies should be fair to partly cloudy skies except for mostly cloudy in the east until this afternoon.

NATION

Storms continued to pummel the Plains today, unleashing thunderstorms, snow, marble-size hail and winds as high as 62 mph.

Snow fell over much of the northern Plains, and winter storm warnings remained in effect in the Dakotas and Montana.

The National Weather Service said up to a foot of snow was possible in parts of North Dakota. Williston, N.D., received 14 inches of snow Sunday, breaking a record for the month set in 1984.

Travelers' advisories warning of snow and blowing snow were in effect in parts of Wyoming, Minnesota and the Colorado mountains.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Canadian Dan Halldorson shot back-to-back rounds of 66—263 Sunday to claim the $36,000 first prize in the Deposit Guaranty Classic. Halldorson, 34, held off Paul Azinger, who also shot two rounds of 66. TAIPEI, Taiwan — Taiwan's Lu Hsi-chuen shot a 3-under-par 69—212 on to win the Taiwan Open, edging John Jacobs of San Diego, who shot a five-under-par 67 — Sunday's lowest score — and Curt Byrum of Onida, S.D., who shot a 72, by a stroke.

SAN DIEGO — Patty Sheehan sank a birdie putt on the final hole Sunday to hold off Pat Bradley by one stroke in the Kyocera Inamori Classic. Sheehan carded a 2-under-par 70—278 278, 10 strokes under par. Bradley, bidding for back-to-back victories after winning the Dinah Shore tournament, shot a final-round 68—279 total.

Football

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Running back Marcus Dupree has been declared eligible for the May 9 NFL draft, but he may not be healthy enough to play. Dupree learned of the league decision when NFL teams began calling to express some interest in the 6-3, 233 pound back. Dupree injured a knee in February of 1985 while playing with the now-defunct USFL Portland Breakers.

Hockey

MOSCOW — Bryan Erickson of the Los Angeles Kings of the NHL scored three goals Sunday, leading the United States to a 7-2 victory over Poland in the World Hockey Championships. Sweden downed Canada 4-1 in the other game on the second day of the tournament. All four teams have 1-1 records. In other games, the Soviet Union defeated Finland 4-1 and West Germany upset defending champion Czechoslovakia 4-3. The Czechs are 0-2, while the Finns and West Germans have 1-1 records.

Road Racing

BOSTON — Veteran cross country champion Ed Eyestone ran away from the field over the final mile Sunday to win the $5,000 first prize in the fifth annual 10-kilometer Boston Milk Run. Lynn Jennings won the women's race. Joan Benoit launched a comeback from surgery last fall by finishing a strong third.

Auto Racing

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Dale Earnhardt shook off Harry Gant and then outran Darrell Waltrip at the finish Sunday to win the 30th TranSouth 500 and end a string of 11 Winston Cup stock car races without a repeat winner.

JEREZ DE LA FRONTERA, Spain — Brazilian Ayrton Senna won Sunday's Spanish Grand Prix by the tightest margin in modern Grand Prix racing, edging Britain's Nigel Mansell in a dramatic wheel-to-wheel duel.

SILVERSTONE, England - Pascal Fabre of France, driving a Lola T86-50, won the first round of the Formula 3000 international motor racing championship Sunday.

Horse Racing

GOTEBORG, Sweden - American Leslie Burr-Lenehan completed two perfect rides Sunday to win the Volvo World Cup equestrian finals by an unprecedented victory margin.

Golden Bear ends hibernation

The Masters

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Just when the Masters appeared about to be conquered by invaders from all over the world, Jack Nicklaus defended American golf, Augusta National and himself. At age 46, the golfer known as the Golden Bear emerged from nearly a six-year hibernation in the major championships with a 65 Sunday that made him and his gallery weep.

"Going up the fairway I had tears in my eyes," he would say later. "And then I told myself, 'Hey, you've got golf to play.' "

Play golf he did, as only he can. Four strokes off the lead as he started the back nine, he birdied the 10th, 11th and 13th holes, rolled in a eagle putt at the 15th, then birdied the 16th (after a near hole-in-one) and the 17th. Confronted with a 50-foot putt on the 18th, he rolled it to within inches of the cup for the tap-in that would be the difference.

"I kept reading in the papers," he said later, "that you can't win the Masters at 46, but I did."

Celebrating the late birdie putts that won his 20th major championship and his sixth Masters, Nicklaus reacted as he did at Baltusrol in 1980 when he won a record fourth United States Open title. After each of the putts at the 15th, 16th and 17th, he raised both arms in triumph, his new putter high in his left hand.

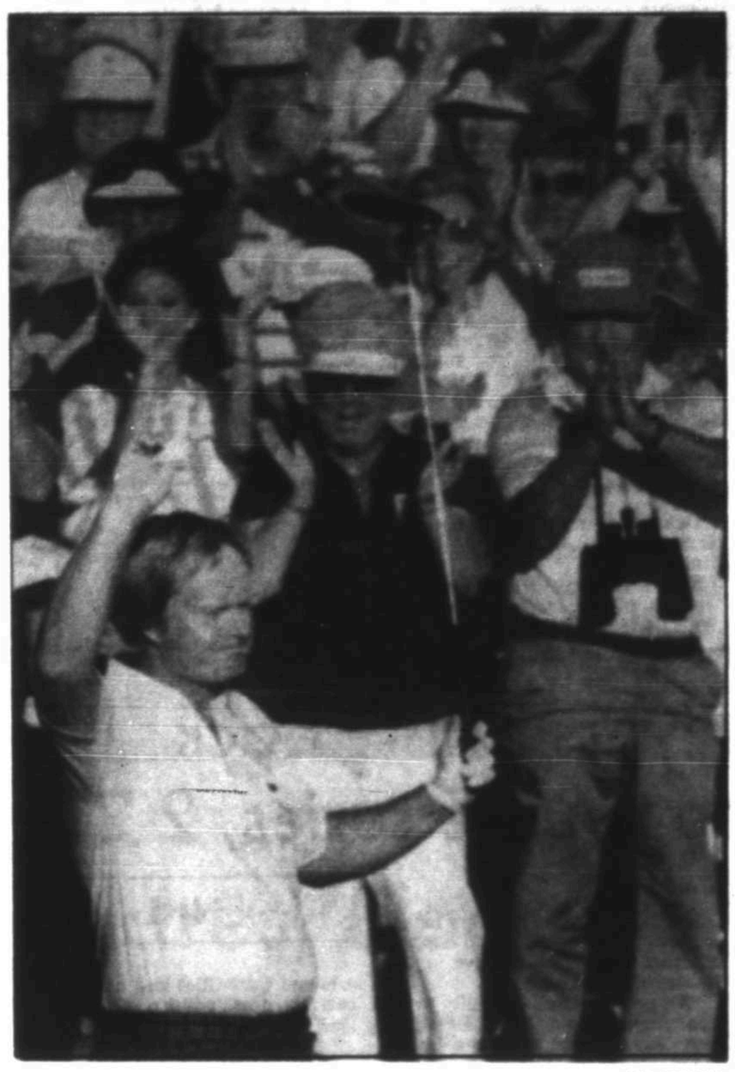

"And to have your son caddying for you," he said, "that's just terrific."

HIS 24-year-old son Jackie, also a touring pro, caddied for his father as he often has in recent years, especially in the major tournaments. But last year the Golden Bear had missed the 36-hole cut at both the United States Open and the British Open.

"I thought this morning that 66 would tie and 65 would win," Nicklaus said. "And that's exactly what happened. I haven't had this much fun in six years."

Until Sunday, the Golden Bear appeared to have lost his claws. He had not won a tournament on the PGA Tour in nearly two years, since the 1984 Memorial, the tournament he also supervises in Dublin, Ohio. Many golf people thought he might never win another major championship, or even another lesser tournament. But now he has.

Jack Nicklaus captures his sixth Masters

Bold 18th dooms Australian

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — All week long at the Masters, Greg Norman had kept his ego under control, playing the Augusta National course carefully and conservatively.

But on the final hole, tied for the lead with Jack Nicklaus and seemingly headed for a playoff, Norman attacked and it cost him.

"I tried to hit my second shot too high and too hard," Norman said. "I was aggressive, going for the (birdie) 3 and the win. My style is to try to win and win as soon as I can. I let my ego get the best of me and I rifled the ball at the flag."

When his shot went into the gallery, Norman was doomed. His bogey turned the tournament over to Nicklaus. He finished with a 70 for the day and 280 for the tournament, tied with Tom Kite, one stroke behind.

He did not seem terribly upset by the close call.

"What do you want me to do? Cry?" he said. "We've got another week to play next week and another Masters to play next year. I gave it 101 percent."

Norman said he was proudest of the fact that he didn't fold when a double bogey on No. 10 tumbled him out of the lead. He charged back with a string of four straight birdies on the back nine to tie for the title with one hole remaining.

"When I got the double bogey, I could have said, 'Let's just finish.' I didn't. I said 'I still can win.' I never gave up.

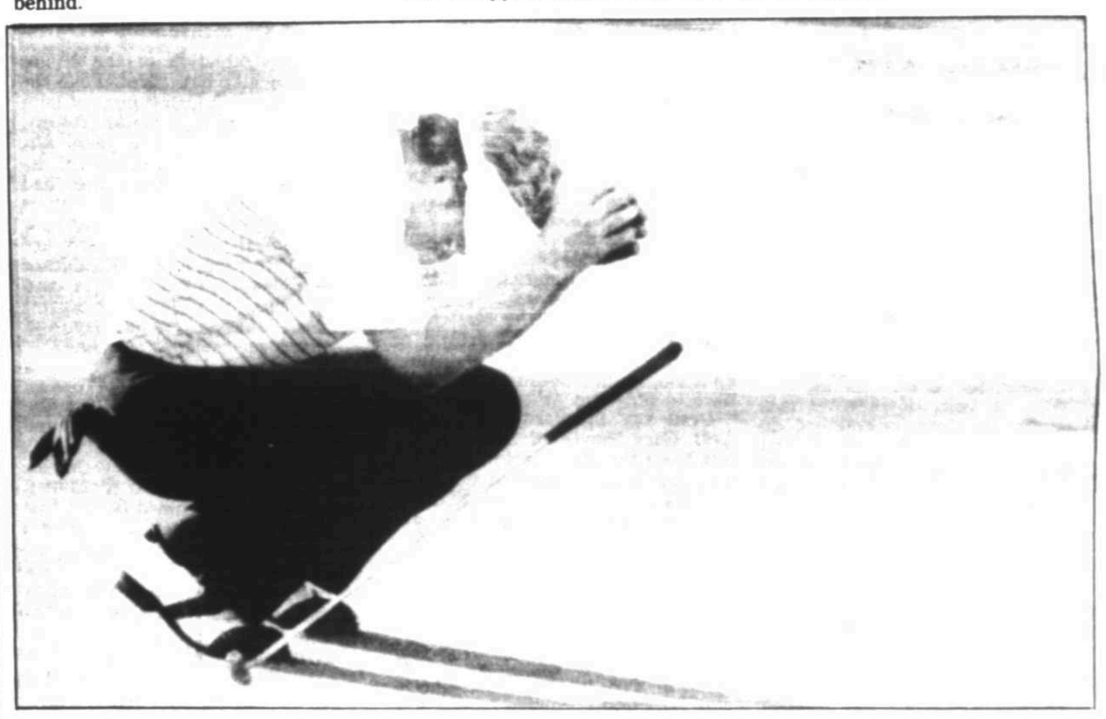

"I'm disappointed I'm not in a playoff, but that's golf. You take the good with the bad. Maybe next year will be my year."

When Norman charged at Nicklaus, the sentimental choice of the gallery, it did not make the Australian a terribly popular man at Augusta National.

"It (The noise) makes Winged Foot (where Norman lost a U.S. Open playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller two years ago) feel like you're playing through a graveyard. The emotion of this course is far and above. With Jack, it's something special. The people love him so much. He owns this place."

Then Norman smiled.

"But one day, I'll break his record of six Masters."

Tom Kite's missed putt on 18 cost him a tie for tie with Jack Nicklaus

So Close

'I knew it was going'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The birdie putt was just where Tom Kite wanted it, maybe 12 to 15 feet away from the hole at No. 18.

Drop it in the cup and Kite would be tied for the Masters championship with Jack Nicklaus.

Kite measured it, recognized it from the practice rounds, and moved over the ball with no qualms.

"I had that same putt seven or eight times in practice," he said. "I knew it was going in. I made that putt in practice every time from the same spot.

"I couldn't hit a better putt. The ball was going slow enough. I don't know what happened, but it didn't break. It never went left, the way it was supposed to. It just didn't do what it was supposed to do."

The result was a par-4 for the hole, 68 for the round, and 280 for the tournament, one shot behind Nicklaus.

"Obviously, it was not the outcome I had hoped for," Kite said. "Certainly, it was the caliber of round that I hoped for. After the first couple of holes, I played really good golf. I was calm as I could be under the circumstances. The score just didn't turn out the way I hoped it would."

Kite was paired with Seve Ballesteros and when both scored eagles on the par-5 eighth hole, the tournament heated up. "Everybody seemed to get going then," he said. "The caddies and gallery got pumped up."

The loss continued Kite's disappointing string of failing short in major tournaments. "I love the pressure to win," he said. "You don't want pressure, shoot 80-80 in the first two rounds and you go home. Getting in the hunt and seeing how I handled it, I was pleased with what I saw in myself today, even if the results were not what I wanted."

Stats show Tiger Stadium homer heaven

By RICHARD JUSTICE
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ARLINGTON — With the Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers hitting six home runs at Tiger Stadium opening day, an old question was again asked: What's the easiest home-run park in the major leagues?

In the 1980s the answer has been Tiger Stadium, where 992 home runs had been hit in the six seasons before this one.

The hardest? That's also not surprising — the Astrodome in Houston, with 325.

What is most surprising is that 13 of the top 15 home-run parks are in the American League, and 14 of the bottom 15 in the National League.

The National League exceptions are Atlanta and Wrigley Field in Chicago, both in the top 15, and the American League's is Royals Stadium in Kansas City, which is 23rd overall.

Certainly, this is an inexact science. The St. Louis Cardinals and Houston Astros were built around speed and pitching, the Tigers and Baltimore Orioles around home runs.

YET IN almost every instance, the clubs' personnel were assembled to meet the needs of the park. If Darrell Evans looked good to a lot of teams, he looked terrific to the Tigers, who figured his left-hand swing might be perfect for Tiger Stadium's right-field porch.

Regardless, here are the stadium home-run standings for the '80s:

1, Tiger Stadium (Detroit), 992; 2, Kingdome (Seattle), 924; 3, Memorial Stadium (Baltimore), 902; 4, Anaheim Stadium (California), 863; 5, Fenway Park (Boston), 855; 6, Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium (Atlanta), 829; 7, Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome (Minneapolis), 818; 8, Wrigley Field (Chicago), 808; 9, Exhibition Stadium (Toronto), 803; 10, Oakland Coliseum, 772; 11, County Stadium (Milwaukee), 737; 12, Yankee Stadium (New York), 729; 13, Comiskey Park (Chicago), 721.

The second half:

TED BATTLES

It's not over until Bear says so

The masses lining the fairway broke out in thunderous applause as he made his way toward the green.

It was nice that they remembered the fading old warrior, especially after the way it began many years ago.

From the fat kid many people resented for what he was doing to Arnold Palmer's popular golf reign of the game, the slimmed down Golden Bear had become a golfing legend.

This was the same fat kid from Ohio State who ruined the pro career of another golfer before it even started when the Indiana University golfer asked himself in an 0-for-22 string, "If I can't beat this kid from Ohio State, what am I going to do when I meet a real pro?"

So Dave Pelz drowned his sorrows with NASA, but finally returned to the game to design golf clubs in Abilene as the thought of how the golfer from OSU could beat him, a better all-around athlete, so consistently, continued to haunt him.

THE tributed from the crowd, if you've got any sentiment, tugged at the heart. A nice gesture, but in a few moments nostalgia time would be over and the foreign contingent who would decide whether Tom Kite would win this thing would hove into sight.

Then Seve Ballesteros had an eagle and went nine under....Nicklaus must have been four or five back at the time, hopelessly, it seemed, out of it. Kite, however, hung tough with a putt that averted a bogey that would have ruined any lingering chances.

But the way Ballesteros, two strokes ahead, was playing, even that looked like too much of a hill.

Ballesteros...he seemed to be doing all this out of spite for that TPGA ruling that banned him from U.S. tournaments...was in control and most of his competition was coming from folks like Australia's Greg Norman, South Africa's Nick Price, Germany's Bernhard Langher...and they were just the leaders.

THE DECISION to abandon the TV set for some yard work was prompted by the reluctantly arrived at conclusion that Seve was really just too good and Kite, well, that elusive first major win we've been waiting for again would dangle just out of reach.

A few more of these and Ballesteros would equal and perhaps surpass Nicklaus' record of five Masters titles.

There was a time, when you couldn't count Nicklaus out of an event like this, but he was 46 and this was a game for the young flat bellies.

Maybe 45 minutes, an hour later, a check on the tournament's progress revealed a miracle had been missed. Nicklaus was birdying 17 and was out in front and his pursuers, the only ones with a chance to catch him were Norman and Kite.

AS NICKLAUS finished, Norman was carding a birdie on 17 to pull within one. Kite had only to sink a not-that-difficult putt, unless you are standing over it, putt on 18 to tie.

As Norman teed it up on 18, I said to the Mrs. "I can't remember a Masters finish that was more exciting."

The guy on TV said the same thing.

"That's what you just said," she said.

"Profound, I know. But it's not what you say, but where you say it. His statement was worth six figures."

Everybody who wasn't out working in the yard knows the rest. Kite missed his putt and Norman's second shot on 18 went into the crowd and Nicklaus had his sixth Masters.

Seve may not find Jack so easy to catch after all.

Beaumont holds off Angel rally

Associated Press

Beaumont's Joey Cora had three hits to help the Golden Gators to an 8-7 victory over Midland in a Texas League baseball game.

The Golden Gators held a 6-3 lead going into the eighth inning. Beaumont scored two runs on a single, a walk, a wild pitch, a sacrifice fly, a walk and a bad hop single by Cora.

In the only other league action Sunday, the San Antonio Dodgers edged the El Paso Diablos 11-9.

The Angels had a four-run rally in the ninth inning, but fell a run short of tying the score.

Ulises Sierra, 1-1, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Mike Cook, 0-1.

Jesus Alfaro and John Gibbons contributed two-run homers in the first and bottom of the ninth innings, respectively, for El Paso.

The Dodgers' Ken Harvey went 4-for-5 with a double and a triple and drove in two runs. Chris Gwynn went 2-for-5 with an RBI and Manuel Francois went 2-for-3, scoring three runs.

Dan Cataline grabbed a double in San Antonio's five-run second inning.

Shawn Hillegas, 2-0, was credited with the win. The loser was Alex Madrid, 1-1.

In the Midland ninth, three innings opening walks started things. A passed ball let in one run and Doug Merrifield delivered an rbi single. Before it was over Walker singled in two more runs. The rally, however, fell short and Merrifield, suffering a knee injury in a base running incident during the rally, is a doubtful for tonight's second game of the five game series.

The Angels finally come home Friday night to open the Angel Stadium season against El Paso's defending West Division champion Diablos.

Midland's record is now 3-3 with all of the West teams bunched closely together.

Boris Becker...bows in Dallas WCT finals.

Jarryd downs ailing Becker

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Sweden's Anders Jarryd, a late tournament entry, downed game but injured Boris Becker of West Germany 6-7, 6-1, 6-1, 6-4 Sunday to win the Buick WCT Finals.

Jarryd's $150,000 prize was the biggest of his career. He wouldn't have been in the tournament if Ivan Lendl's knee injury hadn't kept him from playing. Lendl is the world's No. 1 player.

Jarryd qualified by being the No. 9 ranked player in the world, although he had't won a tournament this year.

The second-seeded Becker gave a courageous performance on an injured leg but couldn't overcome Jarryd, who had lost in four previous matches against his opponent.

Jarryd, who lost to Becker in the 1985 Wimbledon semifinals, led 5-1 in the one-hour first set, before his first service deserted him. Becker scrambled back to win the set on a 7-3 tiebreaker.

The 25-year-old Jarryd, helped by a Swedish cheering section in Reunion Arena, hadn't lost a set in the tournament until Becker's first-set rally.

But the match quickly turned, when Jarryd broke Becker's service six straight times, taking the second and third sets almost without opposition.

After the fifth game of the third set, Becker's right thigh muscle was wrapped by a trainer because an old injury, a strained quadricep, flared up. Instead of helping the 18-year-old seeking to become the youngest WCT Finals winner, it limited his mobility.

Steffi Graf beats Lloyd for first tourney title

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — West German Steffi Graf upset Chris Evert Lloyd 6-4, 7-5 Sunday to win the $200,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup and claim her first professional tennis tournament victory.

"You really have to wait for your chances and it really was my day today," said the player who possesses a powerful forehand that No. 2 Lloyd calls "one of the best, if not the best."

It was the first time in seven career matches that Graf had defeated Lloyd. Indeed, until Sunday, she had never even won a set from Lloyd.

"I don't think I feel at the top yet, but I'm feeling better," added Graf, who beat No. 3 Hana Mandlikova in Saturday's semifinals.

Graf said, "Now I know I can win against those players and now I know I always have a chance against Chris." But she added that Lloyd "wasn't playing her best today. Everybody can see that."

Lloyd, who was the top seed, had been looking for her ninth title in the tournament.

Graf was down 0-30 in the first game, but held her serve and went on to win the game. She fell behind 3-2 before rallying to capture the set in which she broke Lloyd's service four times.

Graf then trailed 4-0 in the second set before rattling off five straight games, relying on her powerful forehand and well-placed passing shots.

Lloyd rallied to tie at 5-5. But Graf held her opponent scoreless in the next game and then broke Lloyd's serve to take the match.

Graf said that going into the match she was thinking about having a chance, rather than winning.

But, she added, "After the first set I had the feeling I could win. She was missing some easy errors in the first set. I was playing well and everything was working for me."

Flyers battle back to square series, 2-2

Associated Press

NHL

The Philadelphia Flyers are happy to get out of New York, and happier still that they are still alive in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

"We now go back to Philly to do what we have to do," Philadelphia's Rick Tocchet said after the Flyers staved off elimination in the NHL's postseason tournament with a 7-1 victory over the New York Rangers at Madison Square Garden on Sunday night.

On the verge of a first-round knockout in the playoffs, the Flyers' victory gave them a 2-2 tie in their best-of-five Patrick Division semifinal and sent the series back to Philadelphia for the deciding game Tuesday night.

In the only first-round series still going, the Minnesota North Stars and St. Louis Blues will also play Tuesday night to decide their Norris Division semifinals. The North Stars prolonged that one with a 7-4 victory Sunday night.

The Flyers looked flat in losing 5-2 to the Rangers on Saturday night and were determined to make up for it in Game 4 on Sunday night.

"We needed a win tonight, and we got it," said Philadelphia's Tim Kerr, who scored two goals and assisted on another. "We went back to basics to get the win tonight. We executed in every facet of the game."

For a change, the Flyers had their power play working. Virtually nonexistent in the series' first three games when they were able to convert only 1 of 20 manpower advantages, the power play was in full evidence for the Flyers Sunday night when they connected on 2 of 5.

"(Peter) Zezel was the key factor in turning the power play around," Flyers Coach Mike Keenan said of the Flyers' center who scored three goals, one on a power play, and handed out an assist Sunday night.

The North Stars, meanwhile, got some help from their penalty-killing teams to beat the Blues.

"The guys really clamped down and came through for us," Minnesota Coach Lorne Hanning said, referring to a 1:48 span early in the second period after the North Stars had been whistled for consecutive penalties against defensemen Gordie Roberts and Curt Giles and had to play two men down while protecting a 4-3 lead.

St. Louis center Bernie Federko said the Blues' power play managed everything but a goal when it needed one the most.

"We had good puck control," Federko said. "It looked pretty, but nothing worked."

Minnesota's specialty teams dominated the game as Brian Bellows scored two power-play goals and Dirk Graham scored a short-handed goal in the second period to break the game open. The Blues had beaten the North Stars 4-3 in Game 3 Saturday night.

Otherwise, six series were decided in a weekend of upsets that included Toronto's three-game sweep of the Chicago Blackhawks, the regular-season Norris Division champions, and Hartford's stunning knockout of the Quebec Nordiques, who won the Adams.

The Maple Leafs, a 48-game loser and owner of the worst record for a playoff team, thrashed the Blackhawks 7-2 to finish an unlikely blitz of the Norris Division champions. Hartford, meanwhile, crushed the Nordiques 9-4, giving the Whalers a 16-7 goal margin in the three games against a team which had the fourth-best record in the league.

The Montreal Canadiens, Washington Capitals, Calgary Flames and Edmonton Oilers also wrapped up their best-of-five series with victories Saturday night.

Montreal used a pair of Bob Gainey goals in the third period to down Boston 4-3 and complete Montreal's 17th consecutive playoff series triumph over the Bruins. Washington, runner-up to Philadelphia in the Patrick Division, played an overpowering defensive game to shut down the New York Islanders 3-1.

Calgary needed an overtime to dispatch Winnipeg 4-3 and finish that Smythe Division series. And Edmonton got another record performance from Wayne Gretzky to finish off Vancouver 5-1.

Hogeboom wants place to be No. 1

DALLAS (AP) — Gary Hogeboom, the Dallas Cowboys' backup quarterback who wants a chance to start elsewhere in the National Football League, remains in limbo after almost three months on the trading block.

Head coaches say they are being cautious in contemplating a deal for Hogeboom, who Cowboys officials have described as marketable.

"What it boils down to is this: What has he done to create a demand for him?," said one NFL head coach who asked not to be identified. "He is the only quarterback that hasn't gotten Dallas into the playoffs.

"The year he was the quarterback (1984), they didn't make the playoffs for the first time in how many years (10)? They say they had injuries that year but they had injuries last year, too, and they won the dumb division," the coach told The Dallas Morning News.

"The year he was the quarterback, he just didn't get the job done."

Hogeboom in 1984 started 10 games for Dallas. The team's record in those games was 6-4 and he threw twice as many interceptions as touchdown passes.

"We're interested in him and not just because he is from Michigan," said Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers. "He's a quarterback with some experience in the NFL, but what price do you have to pay? We wouldn't give them a second-round pick for him.

"You're always looking to improve your football team, especially at quarterback because it's the most important position," he said. "If you don't have a good one, you can't compete. But we think our quarterbacks will get better. If I brought in Hogeboom, it would take him more than a year before he could help us improve."

Indianapolis coach Rod Dowhower, who has publicly expressed interest in Hogeboom, said there are other considerations besides the need for depth at quarterback.

"When you've got a 45-man roster and you've got to take care of offense, defense and special teams and you're sitting there with a third quarterback, that's tough," he said.

MASTERS

And his victory came just when the Masters had been dominated by several foreign golfers — Seve Ballesteros, Greg Norman, Bernhard Langer, Nick Price and Tommy Nakajima.

BALLESTEROS is usually identified as the Christopher Columbus of this discovery of American golf by so many other foreigners.

"When Seve won the Masters in 1980," Norman says, "it proved to other foreign golfers that they could do it too, so they began coming over here to play the American tour."

Until the Spaniard's victory in 1980, Gary Player of South Africa had been the only foreign golfer to wear the Masters green jacket. Player won in 1961, 1974 and again in 1978. But in those years, Player was considered an exception rather than the rule — the one foreigner who could challenge Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

"Seve got it started for us when he won the Masters in 1980," Price says. "And when he won the Masters again in 1983, by then I had played with Seve and Bernhard Langer and Denis Watson in Europe, as so many others on the European tour had. We knew how good Seve and Langer were, but we knew we were good enough to come to America and play well on the tour here."

But according to Price, two other factors exist in the rise of the foreign golfers.

"The introduction of the bigger American golf ball throughout the world and the improvement of both the European and Asian tours," Price says. "Until a few years ago, golfers in Europe and Asia used the smaller British ball. When they had to play the bigger American ball, it took time to adjust to it. And now the European and Asian tours are getting better and better. The cuts at those tournaments get lower and lower every year. But the biggest factor was that players like Seve and Bernhard succeeded."

ANOTHER reason many foreign golfers have succeeded is that the PGA Tour's tougher competition improved their games.

"So many are playing the American tour now as their dominant tour," Kite says, "they'd be the first to admit the American tour has made them the players they are today."

"I don't know that there's a rivalry yet between the Americans and the foreign players," Kite says, "but what happened in the Ryder Cup last year is going to contribute to a rivalry."

In last year's biennial Ryder Cup matches, the European team defeated the Americans for the first time since 1957.

"Why the foreigners are playing better and better requires a complex answer," Ben Crenshaw says. "First, they're playing all over the world, so they learn to play under different conditions. And in Europe especially, the weather is usually more inclement, so maybe they learn to play against the elements more. Another factor is that they must be pushing themselves that much harder to lift their games to a higher level."

But in the glow of sunset at Augusta National Sunday, nobody was talking about foreign golfers anymore. All the talk was about Jack Nicklaus, who reminded the world as to just who has been the best golfer in history.

Mandlikova to miss Sunkist WTA tourney

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia has joined Chris Evert Lloyd and Martina Navratilova as no-shows for the Sunkist WTA Championships beginning here today.

Fourth-ranked Steffi Graf of West Germany, who upset Lloyd Sunday to win the $200,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup in Hilton Head, S.C., became the top seed in the WTA Championship, which runs through Sunday.

Don Hallderson wins in Hattiesburg golf

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Canadian Dan Halldorson shot back-to-back rounds of 66 Sunday to claim the $36,000 first prize in the $200,000 Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic.

Halldorson, 34, held off Paul Azinger, who also shot two rounds of 66. Halldorson shattered the 72-hole tournament record with a 263 total, five shots better than the old mark held jointly by Dwight Nevil, Craig Stadler and Tom Jones.

The victory couldn't have come at more opportune time for Halldorson.

"I finally played well," he said. "I have been working so hard on my game without any results before this week.

The winner played four rounds of mistake-free golf. He made only one bogey in 72 holes, that in Friday's second round. He credited improved putting and a new putter for the change.

"It looks like a frozen hockey puck but it works," Halldorson said of the odd-looking club, specially designed for him.

Padres, Dodgers fight one-run rut

Associated Press

Nobody said it would be easy.

Certainly not the San Diego Padres and Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Padres beat Cincinnati 7-6 and the Dodgers defeated San Francisco 3-2 Sunday. In each case, it was the winner's seventh consecutive one-run game, setting a record for the most one-run games at the start of the season.

Padres 7, Reds 6

Marvell Wynne, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning and hit a home run, hit another one leading off the bottom of the ninth to power the Padres past Cincinnati. The shot over the right field wall on a 2-1 pitch from Joe Price gave him his first two-homer game.

"I didn't know Marvell Wynne could hit a ball that far," Pete Rose, the Reds' manager, said.

Rich Gossage worked the final two innings and was the winner despite giving up a game-tying homer in the ninth by Kal Daniels. Kevin McReynolds had a two-run homer and Tony Gwynn had three hits and scored three runs for San Diego.

Dodgers 3, Giants 2

In Los Angeles, Franklin Stubbs hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning to break a 1-1 tie and Orel Hershiser scattered seven hits as the Dodgers beat San Francisco.

It was the third homer of the year for Stubbs, who hit a 1-2 pitch from Scott Garrelts over the center-field fence. Mike Marshall also homered for LA.

Expos 3, Cardinals 2

In St. Louis, homers by Mitch Webster and Herm Winningham sent the Cardinals down to their first defeat of the season.

The homers came off Kurt Kepshire, who had walked home the Expos' first run. Before Webster homered in the fifth inning, Kepshire had retired nine straight batters. Winningham connected in the sixth.

Bryn Smith allowed three hits, struck out four and walked three in six innings in his seventh victory over the Cards in nine career decisions.

Pirates 8, Cubs 0

Mike Brown drove in four runs, three of them on a homer, and the Pirates beat Chicago behind the combined four-hit pitching of ex-Cub Rick Reuschel, Bob Walk and Jim Winn.

Johnny Ray had two doubles and a single and drove in three of the first four runs as the Pirates won their second in a row and handed the visiting Cubs their fourth loss in five games. Ray hit a two-run double in the first inning off Rick Sutcliffe and had a run-scoring single in the fourth.

Phillies 4, Mets 2

In Philadelphia, Darren Daulton's two-run homer and Gary Redus' solo shot carried Shane Rawley and the Phillies past the Mets. Rawley scattered 10 hits, losing his shutout bid in the eighth on two-out doubles by Keith Hernandez and Gary Carter and gave up Ray Knight's homer in the ninth.

Braves 8, Astros 7

Billy Sample had three hits, including a disputed three-run homer in the fourth inning and Ken Oberkfell drove in four runs as the Braves held on to beat the Astros in Houston.

Despite a protest by Houston Manager Hal Lanier, third-base umpire John McSherry ruled Sample's home run was just inside the left-field foul pole.

Yanks 3, Brewers 2

Don Mattingly's two-run single in a three-run third inning led Ron Guidry and the New York Yankees to a three-game sweep of the Brewers and a 5-1 record, equalling their best start in 11 seasons. It also is the best record in the major leagues after the first week of the season.

Guidry, who won on opening day, when a strained calf muscle limited him to five innings against Kansas City, went seven against the Brewers, allowing one run. Bob Shirley gave up Robin Yount's leadoff homer in the ninth, then Dave Righetti recorded his third save by striking out the side.

The Majors

Indians 8, Tigers 2

Scott Bailes picked up his first major-league win with 5 1-3 scoreless innings of two-hit relief and Andre Thornton's homer highlighted a five-run first inning as Cleveland battered Detroit pitching for 19 hits.

Frank Tanana managed to get only one out before being chased in the bottom of the first inning. Brett Butler tripled and scored on Julio Franco's single. After a wild pitch, Franco scored on a Joe Carter single and Thornton homered. Brook Jacoby singled and, after an out, Carmen Castillo knocked out Tanana with an RBI double.

Mariners 4, Twins 2

In Minneapolis, Danny Tartabull snapped an eighth-inning tie with a two-run homer, his third extra-base hit of the game, to lift the Mariners past the Twins. Mike Moore checked the Twins on four hits over the final eight innings, finishing with a six-hitter.

Mike Smithson walked pinch-hitter Ken Phelps in the eighth and Tartabull hit his second homer of the season. Tartabull doubled and scored in the first inning and hit an RBI double in the sixth.

Royals 7, Blue Jays 4

Willie Wilson and George Brett hit consecutive home runs in the third inning and Steve Balboni homered in the fourth, all of them off Dave Stieb and all with the bases empty, as the Royals took two of three games in the weekend rematch of last year's AL division champions.

Orioles 3, Rangers 2

Cal Ripken's two-run single in the top of the eighth inning boosted Baltimore past the Rangers. Scott McGregor scattered eight hits, struck out two and did not allow a walk in 7 2-3 innings.

Alan Wiggins drew a one-out walk from rookie Jose Guzman in the eighth, Lee Lacy singled him to third and stole second before Ripken blooped a single down the right field line.

Red Sox 12, White Sox 2

Wade Boggs had three singles and drove in four runs as the visiting Red Sox pounded Chicago pitching for 16 hits. Jim Rice added three runs batted in, two on a home run, and Bill Buckner and Dwight Evans each had two RBI.

Boston starter Tim Lollar allowed two hits and one run in six innings, but issued seven walks. Joe Cowley was knocked out in the third inning, when the Red Sox sent 10 men to the plate and scored five runs.

A's 11, Angels 7

In Oakland, rookie Jose Canseco drove in five runs with a single and his second home run — the only two Oakland has this season. The 21-year-old outfielder hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning and had a two-run single in the sixth.

Tuesday, April 15, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This year things will go well for you with regard to work, the arts and parent-child relationships. Mental uncertainty will soon be set aside, and the pressure will lift. Consider going ahead with your plans to move. A change of any kind means good luck for you. October looks like the month for a substantial increase in funds. Save what you can. Romance moves you toward a decision by mid-June.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Chicago's Mayor Harold Washington, artist Leonardo da Vinci, actresses Claudia Cardinale and Elizabeth Montgomery, country-western singer Roy Clark, Diners Club founder Alfred Bloomingdale.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A lost possession suddenly reappears. Make amends to someone you may have blamed for its disappearance. Friends offer useful suggestions that may result in additional income.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Job potential and financial hopes may be slightly unrealistic. Improve your earning capacity by sharpening your skills. Your mate or partner is your strongest ally during a family crisis. Time is on your side.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): After a slow start this morning, the afternoon hours will prove unusually productive. Someone out of your past re-enters your career/romantic sphere.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Praise, if well founded, could win you the respect of an influential person. A change in lifestyle brings comfort and a feeling of emotional security. New friends give you a fresh perspective on life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you quarrel with a friend, bring the problem out into the open before it is blown out of proportion. The cooperative attitude and increased productivity in connection with associates is exhilarating.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A secret project experiences unexpected good luck. Travel opportunities come your way. You could even meet someone who strikes your fancy. Go slow -- this person is your complete opposite. Just enjoy the moment!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Protect an old alliance, especially if a stranger is trying to move in. Your home environment, personal interests and family ties are of primary importance today. Keep entertainment possibilities open.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A stubborn party may not listen to reason. Keep your opinions to yourself unless they are asked for. Set money aside for home improvements. Avoid intrigue as it may have negative effects.

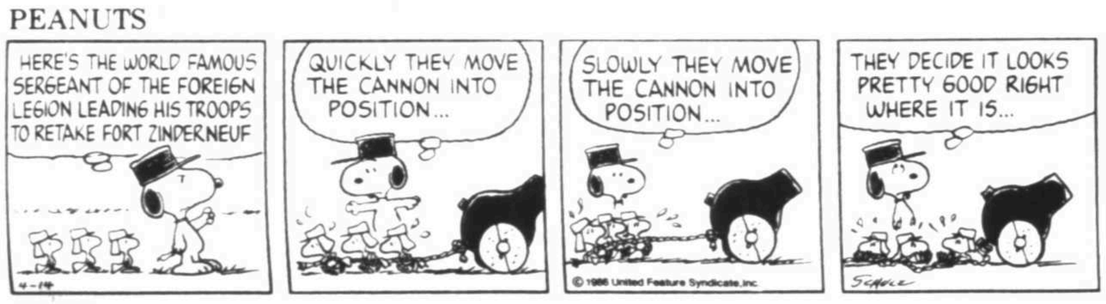

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Gossip could strain a relationship, especially if it involves someone at a distance. Do not let pride get in your way when it comes to loved ones. Humility works best when handling delicate matters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Clean up unfinished paperwork before starting new projects. A friend with a hot financial tip may be misinformed; check before making any investment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business conducted behind closed doors has profound effects upon your company or career. Look for new options. Share this evening with a friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Find a quiet place to tackle complex projects. Enjoy the company of old friends or neighbors tonight. Just avoid talking about business.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ653 ♡3 ◇3 ♣AK8762
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—So far you have shown a good hand with at least six clubs and five spades. Despite that, partner has insisted on playing in three no trump rather than choosing one of your suits. Since he knows more about your hand than you do about his, it would be folly to overrule him. Pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J8 ♡AKJ63 ◇72 ♣AKJ5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Just because you have a good hand doesn't mean you have to commit your side to a minus position. On this auction, partner could have a very weak hand with only a doubleton heart. Still, you can't pass. The only sensible action is to invite game with a bid of three hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q76 ♡J3 ◇KQ762 ♣J102
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—While North should have a better than minimum hand, it is unlikely that your side has enough for game, especially in a minor suit. Therefore, the prudent course is to pass. However, if you feel you must bid again, two spades or three diamonds are the obvious choices. We have a slight preference for the former.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ98 ♡K6 ◇7632 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have a good hand, but partner has already taken that into account with his balancing bid. Had he held a reasonable hand, he would have reopened with a double. Don't punish him for refusing to let the opponents buy the hand at one no trump. Pass.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J10762 ♡KQ ◇AQ753 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	Rdble	2 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's redouble is a request that you allow him the opportunity for a low-level penalty double. Here, however, you do not really want to defend two clubs doubled—your hand is more suited to offense than defense. You can get this message across to partner by passing now, intending to pull a double to two diamonds to show a weak distributional hand.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1076 ♡AJ952 ◇A9 ♣K10
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Obviously, it is a choice between a rebid of two hearts and two no trump. Your hand is slightly offshape for no trump and your prime controls also suggest a suit contract. Bid two hearts to see what partner intends doing next. In an auction where partner has stolen your bidding space, a rebid of your major suit doesn't promise more than a weak five-card suit.

Domingo sings for Met's pension fund

Domingo

NEW YORK (AP) — Kiri Te Kanawa and Placido Domingo, two of the brightest stars in opera, sang together with the Metropolitan Opera orchestra and chorus in a concert to raise cash for the Met's pension fund.

The chorus, men in tuxedos, women in gowns of many colors, lined up across the stage behind the orchestra for the show Sunday night for their recital pieces.

For an encore, Miss Te Kanawa sang a grandly operatic "Summertime" from George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

When she walked on stage, she said, "We tossed a coin and it's me."

James Levine conducted the orchestra, with help from chorus master David Stivender.

Redgrave

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Vanessa Redgrave will play a man, then become a woman in "Second Serve," a television film about transsexual tennis star Renee Richards.

The actress portrays ophthalmologist Richard Raskind, who underwent a sex-change operation to become Ms. Richards, then joined the women's pro tennis tour.

"I hold a tremendous empathy for her, a woman trapped inside a man's body" Miss Redgrave told Time magazine. She is quoted in this week's issue.

"Second Serve" will air on CBS next month.

• • •

Johnson

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Don Johnson of "Miami Vice" may often sport a three-day beard but he's Hollywood's hottest hunk, according to actresses Joan Collins, Linda Evans and other television beauties polled by TV Guide magazine.

The actresses, who were among those named in a December 1984 TV Guide article as the most attractive women on the small screen, were asked to pick their favorite TV males for the poll in this week's issue of the magazine.

Selleck

Tom Selleck of "Magnum P.I." came in second and Robert Wagner, formerly of "Hart to Hart" and "Lime Street," took third place.

John Forsythe of "Dynasty" was fourth, followed by Bruce Willis of "Moonlighting," Pierce Brosnan of "Remington Steele," Bill Cosby of "The Cosby Show," Robert Urich of "Spenser: For Hire," and tied at ninth William Devane of "Knots Landing" and Jack Scalia of "Hollywood Beat."

Also voting were Diahann Caroll, Stefanie Powers, Jane Seymour, Connie Selleeca and Shari Belafonte-Harper. The women were not allowed to vote for a man appearing in their own series.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mariel Hemingway is part-owner of Sam's Cafe, a new restaurant that bears the nickname her husband gave her.

Miss Hemingway, 24, got her other name while going out with Stephen Crisman, who became her husband in December 1984 and is her partner in the new venture.

"When I'd call her Mariel, everyone would turn around, so I'd just say, 'Hi, Sam,'" Crisman, 36, explained in an article in this week's People magazine.

The couple opened the restaurant on Manhattan's Upper East Side in late January.

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Gov. Harry Hughes serenaded actress Sissy Spacek on his trumpet as part of the premiere of the movie "Violets Are Blue," which is set in this beach resort.

"Hollywood doesn't hold a premiere in Maryland every day," Hughes told Miss Spacek at a black-tie reception before the premiere Sunday. "Your anticipated arrival created such fanfare we thought we'd herald it with a horn."

About 500 people stood outside in a downpour to watch a caravan of 25 limousines and a city bus arrive at the Fox Sun and Surf Cinema for the screening.

Also attending the event were Miss Spacek's husband, the director Jack Fisk, and cast members Bonnie Bedelia and Jim Standiford. Co-star Kevin Kline is starring in "Hamlet" in New York, and was unable to attend.

Gielgud

LONDON (AP) — Actor Sir John Gielgud, who turns 82 today, is busy working as a ghost.

Gielgud is making a film version of Oscar Wilde's short story, "The Canterville Ghost."

He said he doesn't need to work but it takes his mind off advancing age. "I don't really think of myself as old but I'm very aware of my friends all around me being ill and dying and having awful things happen to them," Gielgud told the daily Today.

"Naturally, one is always selfish and hopes it won't happen to oneself. You wonder how long one's memory and health will last. So you squeeze in as much as you can, within reason. One thinks of dying every day."

HANOVER, Ill. (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate Adlai Stevenson injured his back Sunday when he was thrown from a horse he was trying to break, a campaign aide said.

Stevenson, 55, who won the Democratic nomination for governor last month, suffered a possible fractured lumbar vertabra and was being treated at Mercy Hospital in Dubuque, Iowa, said David Alexrod, media coordinator for the former U.S. senator.

He was reported in satisfactory condition late Sunday, Axelrod said.

Stevenson was at his farm here, attempting to rebreak a horse that had not been ridden in some time, when he was thrown, Axelrod said.

"He was in considerable pain by the time help arrived," said Axelrod.

Physicians advised Stevenson to remain hospitalized for several days and spend several weeks recuperating, Axelrod said, adding that no decision on curtailing campaign activities would be made until Stevenson has a chance to meet with his staff Monday.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Sunday declared as a saint a Franciscan who worked among the poor and imprisoned in southern Italy in the early 18th century.

About 20,000 people from the southern Italian region of Apulia attended the ceremony making Francisco Antonio Fasani the latest saint of the Roman Catholic church.

"His preference went toward the most neglected classes and the most exploited, (and) above all, toward the humble workers of the fields, toward the sick and the suffering, toward the imprisoned," John Paul said of Fasani.

Fasani was born in the town of Lucera on Aug. 6, 1681, and died on Nov. 2, 1742.

Dear Boss...

Remember April 20-26 is National Professional Secretaries week!

I understand that the Midland Reporter-Telegram will be featuring a

"SALUTE TO PROFESSIONAL SECRETARIES"

on Wednesday, April 23rd.

This gives employers a chance to brag about their secretary and the job she does to over 65,000 readers!

Sure hope I measure up!

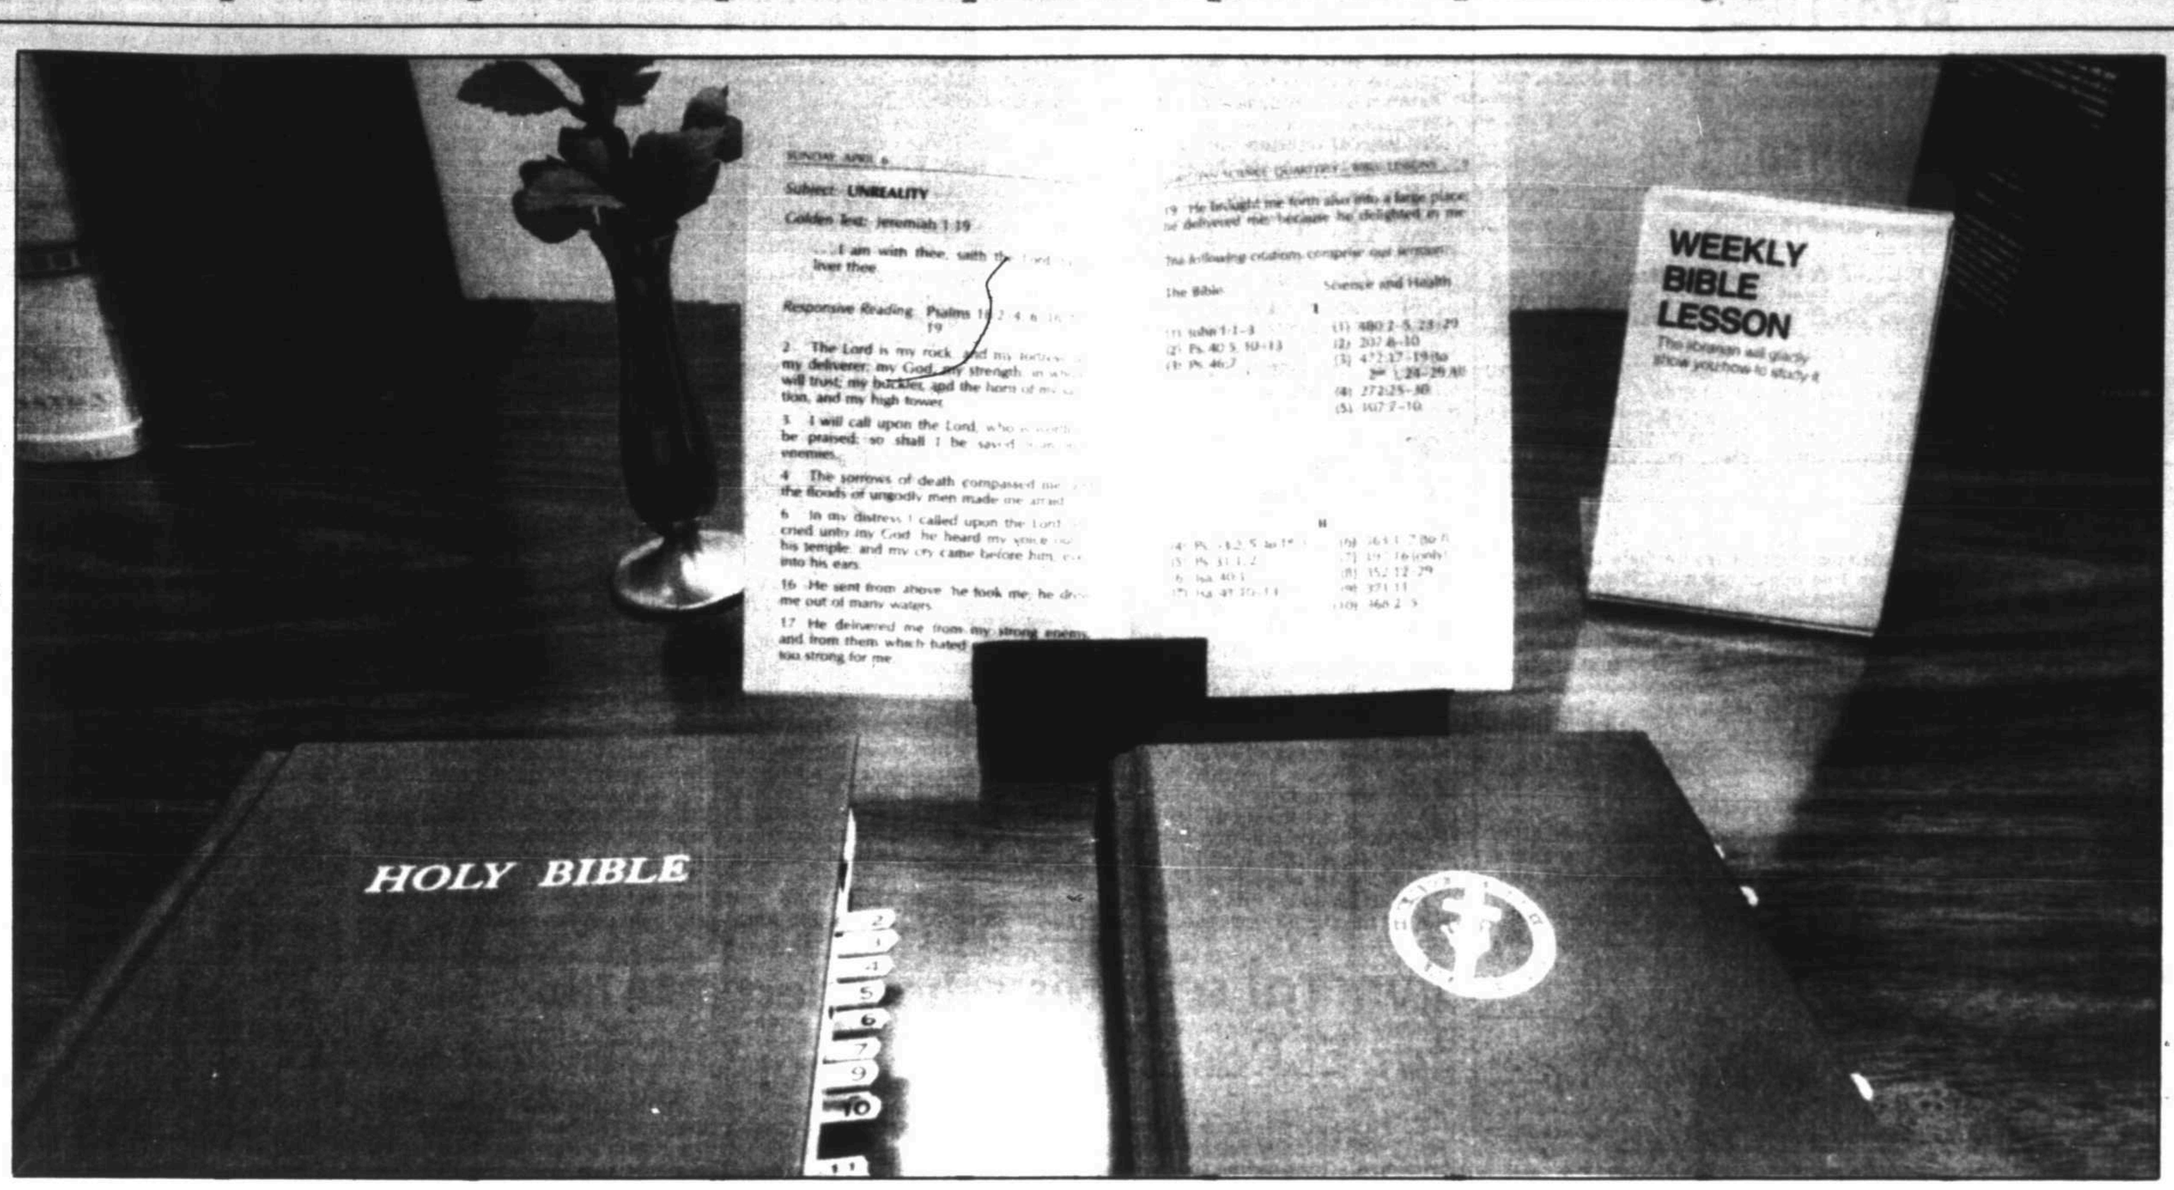

...Jo Ann

P.S. I also heard that these "Lucky Secretaries" will be receiving a pretty red rose from Midland Floral Company at 1705 West Wall!

Nestled in between the skyscrapers and parking garages of the Tall City is a small piece of history some residents might not know exists.

A place for weekly Bible studies or quiet meditation, the Christian Science Reading Room, Wall Avenue and Loraine Street, has served as a downtown refuge for businessmen, housewives and passersby for more than 20 years.

"It's our gift to the public. It's a good place to find answers," said Alice Lawrence of the modestly decorated two-room suite equipped with Christian books, journals, magazines and other media published in a dozen different languages.

"Every Christian Science church has its own reading room," said former librarian Edith Starnes. Still, she's partial to the one she helped establish in the late 1940s.

The overstuffed chairs and oak desks fit neatly against the walls or near the front window just in case a visitor decides to come in and sit awhile. The bookshelves are adorned with reference books and other literature and beneath them are stacks upon stacks of dated newspapers — all published by the Christian Science Church.

"It's amazing how these (passages) apply to events happening right now," said Mrs. Lawrence.

Mrs. Starnes explained that interest in Christian Science theology in Midland dates back to 1929, when church services were first held in private residences, then in the Midland County Library, and later in the Scharbauer Hotel private dining room.

The only Christian Science literature available to members of the congregation at that time were The Sentinel, The Journal and The Christian Science Monitor through the Midland County Library.

Librarian Alice Lawrence returns a volume of the Christian Science Journal to its respective place on the shelf.

Thelma Henson studies her weekly scripture lesson in the Christian Science Reading Room.

The reading room moved to its Wall Street location on Dec. 11, 1959. Since then, Midlanders of all denominations have taken advantage of the facility for weekly Bible study and quiet meditation.

Home schooling issue not closed

AUSTIN (AP) — Home schoolers have won a battle, but the war will be fought in the 1987 Legislature, says a Snyder woman who teaches her four children at home.

Ann Nita Taylor said she was pleased with the State Board of Education's 12-2 Saturday vote to urge lawmakers to take up the controversial issue of whether the state should regulate private and home schools.

The board opted to drop its proposed rules that would have defined what kind of home and private schools are legal under the state's compulsory attendance law.

Mrs. Taylor wants lawmakers to rule that "a home school is a viable method of educating our children and that the state will not interfere in our right to educate our children."

"I would say we probably won this battle, but not the war. It's far from over," she added after the Saturday vote.

The board resolution also includes optional guidelines that can be used by school districts that want help in dealing with those facilities.

The board vote came two days after Gov. Mark White told Chairman Jon Brumley that "an issue of this importance, with many ramifications, should be left in the hands of the members of the Legislature."

More than 1,000 people, including many fundamentalist Christians, packed a Thursday public hearing on the proposal.

Board members Geraldine Miller of Dallas and Volly Bastine of Houston voted against the resolution Saturday. They wanted to drop the guidelines and urge lawmakers to handle the issue themselves and not kick it back to the board.

"It makes me sick for us to sit here and try to justify our actions this morning," Bastine said. "This resolution is poppycock and we all know it.

"We should simply tuck our tails on this one, say we were wrong and do nothing," he said, adding that children who are being kept at home but not educated "must find their remedy in some other agency."

Ms. Miller said, "Down deep, I say I don't know if I have this right to tell people where they can educate their children and how."

In a letter dated Thursday, White told Brumley he had "carefully reviewed the situation."

"I believe it would be more appropriate for the Legislative Education Board and the Legislature to address the concerns which you have identified," White wrote.

Shortly after the Saturday vote, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby praised the board for its handling of controversial issues.

"The chorus of complaints is sometimes deafening. Many coaches are still loudly lamenting the simple fact that students have to pass their courses before they can play their games. Some teachers are still furious that they were required to take a simple literacy test," Hobby said.

"No one hears the chorus louder than you do here on the firing line," he added. "No one catches more flak."

Tamale-hush puppy feud 'heating up'

EL PASO (AP) — The tamale-hush puppy food feud between Ysleta-El Paso and Nacogdoches to prove which community is oldest has just gotten spicier.

Nacogdoches Mayor A.L. Mangham still claims his town is the oldest in Texas, has been and always will be — yesterday, today and tamale. Mangham is so sure his city is the oldest, he is doing all he can to hush El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers' claim that Ysleta is the oldest.

Ysleta is a community within El Paso that once was its own city, while Nacogdoches is an East Texas city 800 miles away from El Paso.

Lufkin Mayor Pitser Garrison started the trans-Texas feud by challenging Rogers, Mangham and San Augustine Mayor J.W. Richey to a hush puppy cook-off May 17 in Lufkin as a joke to determine what city is "The Oldest City in Texas."

Rogers responded by saying there was no contest because Ysleta is well-documented as the oldest. But if there had to be a contest, it should be done with tamales — not an imported food like hush puppies.

Rogers then dashed off a letter to Garrison, quoting El Paso historian Leon Metz' evidence that Ysleta is the oldest city. Now Mangham has dragged his own historian into the fray.

"Mayor Rogers has brought in a ringer to do his arguing for him," Mangham said. "We in East Texas are not exactly poverty stricken when it comes to historians. We even have the oldest historians!"

"Metz seems to want to define the oldest mission (Ysleta) in Texas, rather than the oldest town.... We are not talking about missions, which were not true towns," claims Archie P. McDonald, Mangham's historian.

"Ysleta was founded south of the Rio Grande," Mangham said. "Then the river changed course in 1849 and ducked down below the place; thus it may be the oldest town in Mexico for all we know, but it has only been in Texas 137 years."

Mangham also challenged Rogers' claim that El Paso has the best tamales in Texas.

"Mayor Rogers should not have brought that up," Mangham wrote. "Everyone around here knows that the best tamales in the world are sold by a family who set up during the summertime down at the Hitching Yard on Taylor Street in Nacogdoches."

"Perhaps what we really ought to do is have a cultural exchange," Mangham said. "We will invite Mayor Rogers and Mr. Metz to Nacogdoches for a catfish dinner and (they) can bring the hush puppies; then, if (Rogers) is willing, we will go way out there and eat some of his tamales at Julio's or wherever he designates."

ROOM

Mrs. Starnes, who served as librarian in the reading room from 1960 to 1985, said the public library later donated back issues of The Sentinel and The Journal to the church to be bound for use by members of the congregation.

The Christian Science Society kept its literature and all other works by founder Mary Baker Eddy on file in a private home until 1949. Afterward, the society moved the reading room to a newly constructed church at 407 N. C St. where it operated two afternoons per week and later increased to three afternoons per week.

When the demand for additional volumes outgrew the space available, the society obtained a corner office on the ground floor of the Allen Building, Texas Avenue and Big Spring Street.

In 1960, the society moved the reading room to its present location and simultaneously agreed to keep it open five days per week. Formal open house was held Sunday afternoon, Jan. 15, 1960, and printed invitations were sent to select individuals and groups in the city. The society also welcomed the general public through newspaper and radio announcements.

The Christian Science Society to this day operates its reading room for its Midland neighbors, said Mrs. Lawrence, and it's all aimed at developing a better understanding of the Bible.

"We hope those who use it for study gain a little clearer view. In fact, we wish more people would use it because it's such a lovely place," she said.

Funeral services scheduled for El Paso Diocese bishop

EL PASO (AP) — Funeral services for Bishop Emeritus Sidney Metzger, who died after heading the Diocese of El Paso for 36 years, have been scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Metzger, 83, headed the diocese from 1942 until he retired in 1978. He died Saturday after a lengthy illness.

Metzger, who oversaw the diocese as it grew from slightly more than 100,000 Catholics to 250,000 and attracted national attention for his outspoken support of laborers.

Earlier this month, he celebrated the 60th anniversary of his ordination as a priest at Hotel Dieu Medical Center. He had been hospitalized several months because of a weakened heart.

Metzger achieved a national reputation as a supporter of blue-collar workers in 1973 when he stood behind union strikers against Farah Manufacturing Co. The strike caused the factory to close temporarily, laying off 600 workers.

He also backed workers in other disputes, including one at Smelter Mine Mill.

"Priests and nuns have an obligation to become involved," Metzger said. "In matters of social justice the church has the right to speak because whereever morality touches any human, questioning it is no longer a purely political or economic matter."

On Metzger's 50th anniversary as a priest in 1976, Pope Paul VI expressed gratitude for the bishop's "unwavering defense of the right of the working people."

Appliances said stolen

From Staff Reports

About $1,000 in appliances were taken from a Midland home between 5 p.m. and 10:15 p.m. Sunday, the police department reported.

Dora Garcia, 1316 E. Pine, told officers a $500 microwave oven and one $500 color television were taken from her home.

In other law enforcement reports, Jessie Melendez, 411 E. Golf Course, told officers one $380 televison and one $300 VHS were stolen from his home sometime between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Sunday.

DEATHS

K.B. Gaston

Services for K.B. Gaston of Midland were to be at 11 a.m. today in the North A and Tennessee Church of Christ with George W. Calvert officiating. Burial was to follow in Shep. He died Saturday at his residence.

Gaston was born Jan. 31, 1936, in Blackwell. He married Venita Brewer on Aug. 16, 1956 in Blackwell. They moved from there in 1956, living in Snyder, Sweetwater, and Abilene before moving to Midland in 1964. He began work with F.W.A. Drilling at that time. He was a member of the North A and Tennessee Church of Chirst.

Survivors include his wife, Venita Gaston of Midland; three daughters, Brenda Watts of Abilene, Belinda Hogan of Big Spring, and Rebecca Gaston of Abilene; four brothers, Clifford Gaston of Sterling City, Fred Gaston of Maryneal, Kelly Gaston of Santa Paula, Calif., and G.K. Gaston of Blackwell; three sisters, Marie Romine and Beulah Chapman, both of Blackwell and Margaret Cole of Snyder; and four grandchildren.

Pallbearers were to be A.G. Fuhrman, Joe Cates, Leroy Seifert, Jackie Cantrell, Edward Elliott and Albert Stewart.

Youngster 'stable' after being run over by car

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An 8-year-old boy, run over by a car just before noon Sunday, was in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital today.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, Wayne Mills, 1310 N. Alleghaney, had been hanging onto the right side door of a car driven by 18-year-old Andrew W. Scott, as the car moved north in the 1000-block of Alleghaney. The boy was shaken off and fell beneath the rear wheel of the 1978 2-door vehicle, said McAhon.

Police reports indicated the boy suffered multiple contusions and abrasions and underwent emergency treatment at Medical Center Hospital following the 11:35 a.m. Sunday accident.

An MCH spokesman this morning said the boy was in stable condition in a regular care unit.

Scott, who listed the same address as the boy, was cited for failure to have a valid driver's license and having no liability insurance.

Police have man in mind in cleaner robberies

DALLAS (AP) — What Jesse James was to trains, James Dwight Pinson is to dry cleaners.

At least according to Dallas police, who are avidly searching for the man they say has committed more than 100 laundry store robberies in the Dallas-Fort Worth area since November — sometimes as many as three per day.

The robbery spree began six days after Pinson, 38, was released on parole from a state prison, where he was incarcerated two years ago on a burglary charge, said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

A Dallas County grand jury has indicted Pinson on 14 counts of aggravated robbery, said Paul Macaluso, chief prosecutor with the district attorney's office.

"In the 13 years I have been here, off-hand I can't recall anyone having any more indictments for aggravated robbery," Macaluso said.

Shaw agrees: "What Jesse James was to robbing trains, Pinson is to robbing cleaners."

Officers have visited dry cleaners to provide descriptions of the 5-foot-11, 180-pounder with blue-green eyes, and to warn proprietors that they could be next.

Yet the Hurst native continually manages to elude police. Even a $6,000 reward and media attention have failed to turn up his arrest.

"We don't know where he's at, but we know where he's been," said Dallas investigator Bill Hamby. "I don't know how he's gotten by with it for so long with so many people looking for him. All that publicity, and we haven't had a call — $6,000 (reward) for a phone call is pretty good money."

In most holdups, police said, the man wears a plaid shirt and carries a pistol in his waistband. But recently, witnesses noticed something even more distinctive about the brown-haired bandit.

"Two weeks ago, several witnesses told us he had shaved a place in the back of his head and several stitches," Hamby said. "If someone at a clinic or hospital remembers treating him, we'd like to hear about it."

Police believe Pinson is attempting to hide the scar now, since witnesses to two dry cleaners' robberies last week said the gunman was wearing a baseball cap.

Although the string of robberies began in November, investigators didn't start connecting the dots until February, when Pinson's name came up at a monthly conference of robbery investigators from area police departments.

To their amazement, Pinson was found to be a suspect in 40 offenses in Dallas, 15 in Fort Worth, 15 in Arlington, and several others in surrounding cities. Warrants for his arrest have been issued in most of those cities, police said.

By the March meeting, Pinson was a familiar name to all of the officers.

"An Addison officer stood up and asked, 'Where's Pinson?'" Hamby recalled.

Investigators believe the bandit strikes dry cleaners because they seldom have sophisticated security systems and their clerks are generally unarmed. They're also tough for police to stake out because there are so many of them.

No one has been injured in any of the robberies, but police say no one has resisted the bandit and they consider him potentially dangerous.

Trail riders treated to barbecue during at stop in Wichita Falls

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Horses, riders and wagons in the Sesquicentennial Trail Ride of Texas are visiting communities in the Lone Star State that might have been bypassed by a more publicized wagon train, officials said.

Travelers on the trail ride were greeted with hot barbecue and festivities when they rode into Wichita Falls Sunday night. Four wagons and at least seven of the train's core riders have gone 1,700 miles since leaving Houston Jan. 1.

Mary Gillett, a participant from Corpus Christi, said travelers have enjoyed themselves on the trail ride, which is not affiliated with the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train.

Officials said the riders will leave today for Henrietta.

Ms. Gillett said travelers have periodically joined and left the trail ride. When the trip ends on July 4, the core team will have ridden 3,200 miles, through more than 200 Texas towns and cities.

"We have become like a family," she told the Wichita Falls Times Record. "It's made a lot of us appreciate what we have.

Houston-area candidates deny connection to extremist LaRouche

HOUSTON (AP) — Several candidates for the Houston-area Democratic Party executive committee are repudiating their connections to political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, whose supporters they say wooed them with frequent phone calls and visits.

LaRouche organizers claim to have fielded more than 80 candidates for the Houston-area posts. But in the wake of recent publicity regarding LaRouche's controversial ideas, several candidates say they want out.

Some describe themselves as political innocents who first bought LaRouche literature at airports or on downtown sidewalks. They talk of persuasive and persistent LaRouche supporters.

Others said they mistakenly thought LaRouche and his National Democratic Policy Committee were affiliated with the Democratic Party when they were asked to make donations.

D.R. Murran of Channelview, a candidate in Precinct 150, is one person who no longer wants to be linked to the group.

She said her candidacy was "kind of a railroaded deal.

The Houston Post reported Sunday that it contacted 22 LaRouche candidates for the executive committee and 14 either disavowed any continued affiliation with the NPDC or wanted their names removed from the ballot.

Million Barrel Tank a million-dollar idea for Monahans

AP Laserphoto

Chuck Reynolds of the Ward County Sesquicentennial Committee surveys historic Holman House.

By PAUL F. POWER Jr.

MONAHANS (AP) — Pecos haathe West of the Pecos Museum.

Fort Stockton has the Annie Riggs Memorial Museum.

What Monahans has is a graffiti-scarred and until now idle — useless, really — concrete monstrosity known as the Million Barrel Tank.

And until now, Monahans residents have not had a museum.

On April 8, planners for a Million Barrel Museum and members of architectual firm of MWM & Associates of Midland met at the community center and took the next step in creating a museum.

The group agreed to advertise for bids for restoration of the Holman House, a turn-of-the-century, two-story wood-frame structure that served as a hotel during the Monahans stagecoach era.

The house was moved to the Million Barrel Tank site just south of U.S. Highway 80 in September 1984.

"It's one of the few buildings we have here in West Texas of architectural value," said Chuck Reynolds, a member of the Ward County Sesquicentennial Committee.

Museum planners say Monahans has needed a museum for a number of years to highlight history and to attract would-be tourists traveling past Monahans on Interstate 20 about 35 miles west of Odessa.

Planners said part of the museum could be open to the public toward the end of this year, and they also want to put a 500-seat amphitheater inside the Million Barrel Tank.

The idea of a museum originated within the sesquicentennial committee, said Betty Henson, a Monahans archivist who is a member of the county sesquicentennial panel and of the Ward County Historical Commission.

The groups plan to spend as much as $296,000 in developing the museum, she said, much of it coming from private donations.

Early funding of the museum project was provided partly through a 2 percent hotel-motel tax approved by Monahans City Council in 1984. Interest free loans from two Monahans banks also have assisted, according to Ms. Henson.

STATE

The Holman House anchored the end of the Monahans-Grandfalls-Fort Stockton stagecoach line and was renowned for its food — particularly biscuits.

The stageline was abandoned in 1911, and the building was used for a number of years as a hotel.

Debbie Robison has volunteered to collect furnishings for the Holman House so that the 1890-1915 era will be evoked as accurately as possible.

Ms. Robison said she still seeks donations to furnish the house: a butter churn, piano, rugs, lamps, clothing, ice-box, dishes, sofas, chairs, beds, chests of drawers and a wood-buring stove, for example. Donations are tax deductible, she noted.

Ms. Robison said the museum site also will feature oil field and early farm implements exhibits, as well as one depicting how the railroad helped open Ward County for settlement in 1881.

The Holman House was designated a Texas Historic Landmark in 1966.

President of the Million Barrel Museum fund drive is Monahans resident Reynolds, who said the proposed devlopment budget includes $85,000 for restoring the Holman House, $9,000 for an educational building; $9,000 for moving three railroad houses to the 14-acre site; $5,000 for restoring an old city jail, which recently was moved to the site, and $53,000 for converting the Million Barrel Tank into a partially covered amphitheater.

White stresses school reform on East Texas campaign stops

MARSHALL (AP) — Carrying his education reform message to voters in East Texas, Gov. Mark White says he had no regrets about the controversial new laws he pushed through the 1984 Legislature.

Although he was greeted by unhappy teachers at some appearances Saturday, White said the sweeping school reforms were vital to the state's future.

"I didn't do it just because I was looking for trouble," White told a campaign rally at Marshall.

"The children of our state are going to be the oil and gas of our future. Next month, we'll be graduating 160,000 youngsters across this state, and I see each and every one as a potential Spindletop," White said.

Despite a new opinion poll showing him trailing each of the three Republican gubernatorial candidates, White also insisted he's not worried about his re-election chances.

Recalling 1982 polls that showed him losing to then-Gov. Bill Clements, White said his first full day of campaigning Saturday left him feeling good about the May 3 primary and the general election.

"With the race developing as it is, I feel very confident of our victory," White said. "I think we're in good shape. These guys (pollsters) could have gone to a palm reader come up with about as good predictions."

White also downplayed another new poll that shows him getting 50 percent support in the six-way Democratic race.

"You could put five names against anybody and get 30 percent of the vote, or 40 percent, or whatever it is. You have to consider that we haven't begun to campaign," he said.

White carried another familiar messages to voters as he made stops at Lufkin, Whitton, Corsicana and Marshall.

The governor continued to urge support for a tariff on imported oil.

"Don't shed any tears for Saudi Arabia. They're gleefully looking at shutting down production around the world," White said.

White has unsuccessfully been asking President Reagan to impose the emergency tariff on oil imports as worldwide prices have plummeted from $27 a barrel to as low as $10.

But the governor said he will continue trying to build national support for the tariff because today's oil glut presents a similar threat to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-1974.

Then, the United States was too dependent on foreign oil, he said, which will happen again should the current low prices continue driving American producers out of business.

"They can't starve us with lack of oil this time. But they have another way of doing it — they can drown us," White said. "It's the same result. Just as in 1973 ... when we were jerked around in our foregin policy by the Middle Eastern oil-producing countries.

"Then they had their fingers on the gas pump and they could choke us off any time they wanted to. They knew it, we knew it and the Russians knew it," he said.

Today, the Arab producers are flooding the market, driving American producers out and creating a new dependence on foreign supplies, White said.

"That's why I'm proposing a tariff," he said. "So we can make certain we do not close in the oil wells that are producing today. We cannot afford to lose them. You'll never get it back."

Polls say incumbent trails all three GOP candidates

HOUSTON (AP) — While one poll shows Gov. Mark White and Republican Bill Clements have commanding leads in races for their parties' nominations, another survey indicates the incumbent trails all three GOP hopefuls in head-to-head matches.

A University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray, who conducted a poll for the Houston Chronicle and KTRK-TV in Houston, speculated that if a Clements-White contest were held today, Clements would likely win by 6 to 8 percentage points.

That margin is almost an exact reversal of the 1982 election when White defeated Clements, the Republican incumbent who was elected in 1978.

The Houston Chronicle-KTRK poll shows that White's education reform programs win strong support from the state's voters, but the governor himself is not enjoying the fruits of their popularity.

Clements, shown by an earlier Chronicle-KTRK poll to be way ahead in the May 3 Republican primary, leads White by 18 percentage points in voter sentiment, according to the current general electorate survey.

Republican gubernatorial candidates Kent Hance and Tom Loeffler lead White among voters surveyed by 6 and 4 percentage points respectively.

White's leadership on the education reform issue is buried by the state's economic problems triggered by the tumbling price of crude oil, Murray said.

According to a poll conducted last week by the Gallup organization, White and Clements currently are ahead in their primary races. But the poll also indicates that the likelihood of low voter turnout and the lack of strong support for any candidate make the races too volatile to call.

The Gallup poll was conducted for The Houston Post, KPRC-TV in Houston, The Dallas Morning News, KXAS-TV in Fort Worth, KSAT-TV in San Antonio and KVUE-TV in Austin.

The Gallup poll shows that White can lay claim to the support of 50 percent of those who said they intend to vote in the May 3 Democratic primary. But of that 50 percent, 19 percent professed to be strong in their support of the governor and 31 percent said they are not strong in their backing.

Clements jumps far in front of his opponents with the announced backing of 54 percent of those who say they are heading for the GOP voting booths. Of the 54 percent, only 23 percent said they are strong in their support, with the other 31 percent voicing weaker support, according to the Gallup poll.

The two leaders' opponents trail far behind, and their support is even softer than that professed for White and Clements, the Gallup poll said.

Clements' GOP opponents are Hance and Loeffler, while White has five challengers in the Democratic primary.

Gallup vice president James Shriver III directed the poll, which has a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percent.

White told The Associated Press he wasn't worried about Murray's projections.

"I'm delighted to see that he's said what he's said," White said . It makes me feel more than confident of the successes of our efforts. If he had said I was going to win, it would have disappointed me because he never has picked me to win anything."

"These guys could have gone to some palm reader and come up with about as good predictions," White said.

White said he thought the Gallup poll was "pretty accurate" and added that he wasn't worried about pulling only 50 percent support against his five opponents.

Hance and Loeffler both said their final flurry of TV commercials would help either of them grab enough votes to deny Clements the nomination outright.

Shriver was cautious about making any interpretations on the basis of the poll and refused to draw any conclusions other than to say anything can happen — including the defeats of White and Clements in the May 3 party primaries.

In the Chronicle-KTRK poll, the University of Houston Public Affairs Research Center interviewed 715 voters from 143 election precincts chosen to reflect the voter turnout in the 1984 general election. The survey, conducted April 2-10, has a statistical margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

STATE IN BRIEF

Mishap claims 8th victim

AMARILLO (AP) — The city's worst traffic accident ever claimed its eighth victim Sunday when a 38-year-old Fritch man died at Northwest Texas Hospital, officials said.

Donald Wayne Scott, whose wife and six Malaysian women died in the March 17 crash, died from injuries suffered in the two-car collision on Interstate 40 atop the Soncy Road overpass, hospital officials said.

Scott had been in extremely critical condition at NWTH since the accident.

The crash' only survivor, Norlaili Mohamed-Yunis, 21, an exchange student at North Texas State University in Denton, was admitted to NWTH in critical condition after the accident but was dismissed March 31.

She was one of seven female Malaysian exchange students at NTSU who were traveling in a westbound sedan the night of the head-on collision, police said.

Scott was a passenger in a station wagon driven by his wife, Linda Johnson Scott, 38, eastbound in the westbound lanes of I-40, officers said.

Man 'deserves to die'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Jeffery A. Barney, slated to die by lethal injection Wednesday, says he deserves his fate.

Barney, 28, convicted of raping and strangling a Pasadena minister's wife in November 1981, has also said he doesn't intend to appeal his upcoming execution date.

But Houston attorney Mary Moore said she told Barney she is available if he wants to appeal. A spokesman for the attorney general's office said Barney could probably get a stay of execution if he seeks an appeal.

Donald Gene Franklin also was scheduled to die Wednesday, but he got a stay of execution from a federal district judge in San Antonio last week.

Barney had received his first stay because a state district judge in Houston had set a premature execution date.

Lawmaker 'puzzled'

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker who took the state teacher competency test said he is puzzled by educators' hostility toward the exam, while another legislator said the test disappointed him.

State Rep. David Hudson, D-Tyler and State Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, took the TECAT test offered Saturday to people who have teaching certificates but are not currently teaching.

The test, part of an education reform package adopted in a 1984 special session, has riled teachers who say the tests are an insult to their profession.

"I just don't think that's an appropriate response. Every profession has to take some kind of test," Hudson said. "To me this is the single best way for teachers to restore the confidence of the public."

Hudson and Sarpalius both said they took the test partly to keep up their certificates and partly to find out what has so many teachers upset.

Woman dies while diving

SANTA ROSA, N.M. (AP) — A Texas woman died while scuba diving at an artesian well in eastern New Mexico, police say.

The victim was identified as Libby Sparks, 27, of Canyon.

A doctor said the woman appeared to have died Saturday from respiratory or cardiac arrest. An autopsy was scheduled to determine the cause of death.

Authorities said Ms. Sparks and her diving instructor, Billy Sims of Amarillo, Texas, entered the "Blue Hole" for a certification dive.

Sims told authorities he and the woman went down to a depth of 30 feet, then made an ascent to the surface without the use of a respirator. When the woman reached the surface, she became unconscious.

Sims and others at the site removed the woman from the water and rushed her to Guadalupe General Hospital. She was pronounced dead at 4 p.m., according to Dr. Charles Young.

Above, beyond Mensa: An elite few with a mighty IQ

Copley News Service

George Washington and Abraham Lincoln would have been denied membership. Sir Francis Drake, Johann Sebastian Bach and John Locke would have been spurned.

But, Jeff Ward, a technical writer from San Diego, has been welcomed with open arms.

Ward, unlike those great men of history, has an extremely high intelligence quotient — an IQ of 178 to be precise — stellar enough to catapult him into any number of high-brow, high-IQ societies around the world.

And we're not just talking Mensa here. That well-known IQ group requires a mere 132 score on the standard Stanford-Binet intelligence test, meaning it is open to the top 2 percent of the population or one in every 50 people. Hardly exclusive.

Ward has gone beyond Mensa to IQ societies so lofty that Washington, Lincoln, Drake, Bach and Locke, with estimated IQs of 130 or below, wouldn't have even been allowed near their doors.

Ward, who confesses he has trouble tolerating many people because they are so boring, has either joined or could join:

Intertel, also known as the International Legion of Intelligence, which requires a Stanford-Binet test score of 136 or above. Intertel was founded in 1966 and now has nearly 2,000 members in 10 countries. Its intelligence level theoretically can be met by only one out of every 100 people.

The Triple Nine Society, which requires an IQ of 148 — open to only one out of 1,000 people. The society was founded in 1979 and now has a membership of 350 in more than a dozen countries. According to members, the Triple Nine Society is designed to "provide an environment where people of higher mental ability may develop the social skills that they often disregard until they find others with whom they are uncomfortable."

THE INTERNATIONAL Society for Philosophical Enquiry, which requires an IQ of 150 — approximately one out of every 1,000 people. It was founded in 1974 and now has 390 members.

The Prometheus Society, which requires a 164 IQ — open to only about one in 30,000 people. It was started in 1982 for the purpose of doing "psychometric research" about the nature and future of intelligence. It has only 73 members, including Ward, who is president.

The Mega Society, which is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as the most exclusive of the high IQ societies. It offers several entrance exams, all geared toward accepting only those with an IQ of 172 or above — believed to be one out of 1 million people. There are 26 members.

And, if that were not enough, there also is the Savant Society (savant means someone of profound or extensive learning), started to honor Marilyn Mach vos Savant of St. Louis, who holds the distinction of having scored the highest ever on the Stanford-Binet test — 230.

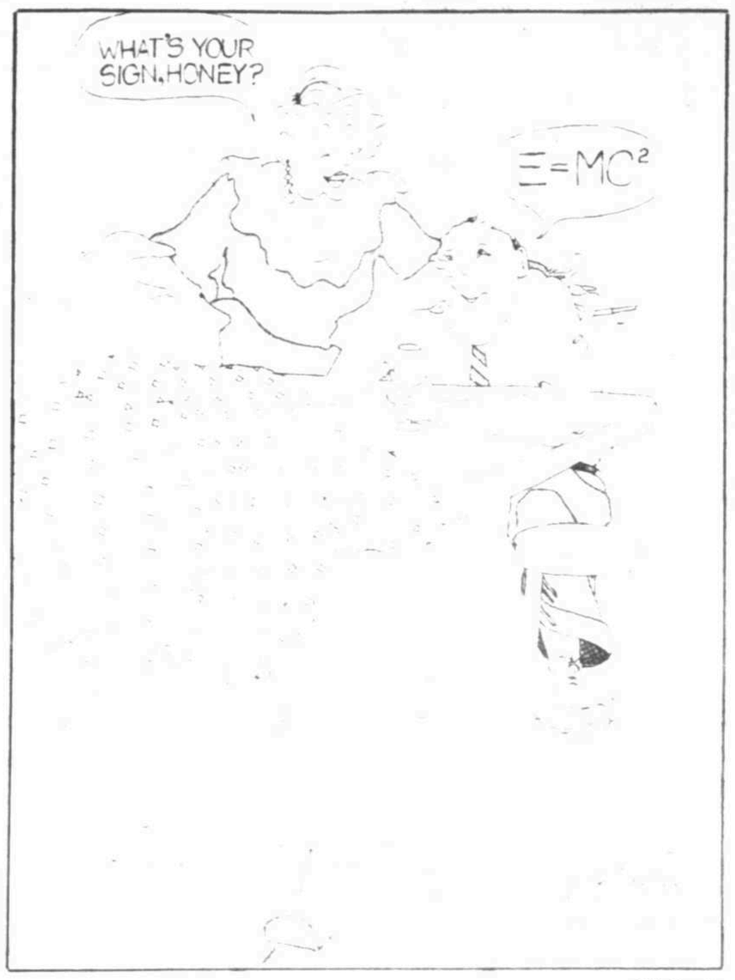

She is the group's only member.

Ron Hoeflein, a philosopher and librarian from New York City, helped start the Triple Nine Society, and founded the Mega, Prometheus and Savant societies. He first became interested in IQ after flunking out of two colleges. Believing that he really didn't have a problem with intelligence, but with his vision, Hoeflein went to the New York Public Library in search of IQ tests. There he found a Mensa quiz, which he passed with flying colors. Later, he performed just as well on a number of other IQ exams.

IN 1979, he decided to lend a hand in putting together the Triple Nine Society, though not for academic reasons.

"Initially, I was looking for a mate who was very bright," he said. He didn't find one, but "all of the women I've dated since then have been extremely bright."

Though Mensa may be well-known for its many meetings and activities, the "higher" high IQ societies can hardly be called socially oriented. Few have had more than annual get-togethers, and members say they mainly communicate through newsletters.

CNS Graphic

However, some feel that even that limited contact is important for those in the upper stratosphere of IQ.

"They're like athletic clubs: if you're good at a sport, you like to be around people who are also good at that sport," said Hoeflein. "They give you a way to discuss a wide range of issues."

Ward said that simply knowing there are other people out there like him has been comforting. "I've found I'm not so strange as I thought." Newsletters are a good way to communicate, he said, and getting together with others like him is even better.

Not everyone feels that way.

Vos Savant said she has been to a few high IQ society meetings and won't return.

"How would you like to spend an evening with a roomful of 100 nerds?" asked vos Savant, 39, a writer who said she makes her living through investments.

MANY OF the people found in high IQ groups do "nerdy" things to set themselves apart, vos Savant said, and as a result "I end up bored stiff."

Still, others feel that just passing the entry requirements for such groups is a major accomplishment.

"I felt like Rocky in 'Rocky I,'" said Ward, describing how he felt after learning that he had scored the highest on the Prometheus Society test and was to become the group's president. "It was fun to see how well I could do."

Ward, 44, said he was so uninterested in college that he took a triple major — economics, geography and political science — and has since "bounced around in occupations" because he tires of them so quickly.

While members may argue about the reasons for having the groups, they and outsiders also argue about the importance of IQ. The question of where IQ comes from — heredity or environment — and what it means in terms of life success has been argued for decades.

Bud Mehan, director of teacher education at the University of California at San Diego, said, "the historical view of IQ is that it is an ability people have primarily through heredity — something you get from your parents and grandparents. But there's a social view of intelligence, as well."

The latest theory, Mehan said, is that some people may be near genius level in some areas of ability while much lower in others and that IQ tests — which cover a limited range of abilities — cannot truly show that.

Mehan noted that studies show if there are two people with the same IQ and one comes from a low-income family and the other from a middle-income family, the middle-income person has a five times greater chance of occupational success.

Still, many are fascinated with IQ, as evidenced by membership in Mensa, which, despite the many new groups, is still the leader. Started in 1945 by two British lawyers, it today boasts 75,000 members internationally.

VOS SAVANT (her real name — in fact, her grandmother's last name was Savant and her grandfather's vos Savant) doesn't think it particularly relevant that she has her own high IQ group, the Savant Society, all to herself.

She first learned she had an extremely high IQ at the age of 8. She got a perfect score on an intelligence test and was retested several times because the administrator feared he had made a mistake. All of the retests were perfect also.

A woman with a lively personality who says she has never been a loner, vos Savant believes that intelligence, for the most part, is inherited.

"You could take a dog to college and sit him in the front row, but you couldn't expect him to learn to appreciate Shakespeare," she said.

True genius, though "has nothing to do with a number. It has to do with motivation."

Her parents were motivators, she said, in that they expected her to answer most of her own questions. "I'd ask things like 'Why is the grass green?' and they'd say, 'We're not here to entertain you; go find out for yourself,'" said Vos Savant. "I ended up spending a lot of time in the library."

TODAY, SHE is working on a novel and as a consultant and writer for a Walt Disney movie about a girl with extremely high intelligence. She sometimes gives classes on "How to Live More Intelligently," but said learning such a skill is not easy for adults.

Though vos Savant may like IQ tests, IQ groups are still out. She would much rather spend her time with a group of people of mixed IQs or at least, people with high IQs who don't spend a lot of time thinking about their intelligence level.

"I've talked with children from gifted classes who say they don't have friends, and I tell them that's totally unnecessary," she said. "You can fit in just fine if you want to."

DEAR ABBY

Child molester's new wife should be warned

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I learned that my husband was a child molester, I feared for the safety of our grandchildren and the neighborhood children, so I divorced him.

He has recently married and is no longer required to report to his probation officer. My concern: Am I morally obligated to make sure that his wife is aware of his weakness in order to protect her children and the children in the neighborhood? This is worrying me sick. — CONCERNED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR CONCERNED: Yes, you have a moral obligation to be sure his present wife is aware of his weakness — which is more than a "weakness", it's an illness that must be controlled.

Inform him that if he doesn't tell his wife, you will. Then advise him that it is your intention to check back with her to confirm that she knows.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been reading your column for many years but have never read anything about a problem we are currently having.

Several years ago, when our daughter "Patti" was in her teens, I put down one of her girlfriends for sporting several conspicuous tattoos on her arm. In a fit of rebellion, Patti went out and had several tattoos engraved on her arm! They are not tiny butterflies or pretty flowers; these tattoos are conspicuous, obscene and ugly.

Now that Patti is a young woman in her 20s, she regrets having had those tattoos. She's a bright and capable businesswoman and fears that these tattoos could cause her to be passed over for promotions.

Her father and I are willing to pay for having them removed, but we don't know if tattoos can be removed, and if so, how? You may answer this in your column if you think it will help others, but please, no names. — PATTI'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Your daughter should consult a dermatologist. One method of getting rid of tattoos is "dermabrasion." (The top layers of skin are removed by a sandpaper "wheel" propelled by electricity.)

An alternative technique is grafting a section of skin from another part of the body. Grafting usually leaves some scarring but can be covered with makeup, skillfully applied. Neither method is painless or inexpensive. I urge you to select a dermatologist who is experienced in removing tattoos.

DEAR ABBY: One of the best and least expensive gifts a parent can give a child who is leaving home is a book of recipes of the meals he or she grew up with.

Buy a bound notebook with blank pages, and record each recipe as you prepared it — not necessarily as it was originally in the cookbook. Indicate your substitutions, flavorings and the cut of meat used. If you added something to a box cake mix, write it in — plus the brand name of the mix.

Few restaurants can duplicate the flavor of home cooking, and when away from home, that familiar taste is comforting.

My children have appreciated their books, and I'm sure others would, too. — CARING MOTHER IN BELLEVUE, WASH.

DEAR CARING MOTHER:
Nothin' says lovin'
Like something from the oven,
And no one said it better
Than you did in a letter.

Volunteers dance for dollars to benefit Heart Association

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Editor

Two of America's favorite activities — aerobic dancing and cruising around shopping malls — will be hailed as healthy by the American Heart Association on Saturday.

Volunteers will be dancing for dollars at the "Dance for Heart" 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturday in the St. Ann's School gym, 2000 W. Texas Ave.

The event is being sponsored by the Midland Division of the American Heart Association both to promote the health benefits of dance exercise and to raise money for the organization's research and education programs.

The fund raiser, which is open to the public, will feature workout demonstrations by men and women from various Midland aerobic dance classes.

"All the people who participate are supposed to have sponsors," explained Tammy Smith, the "Dance for Heart" chairman. These sponsors may pledge a certain amount of money for each hour an individual dancer "aerobicizes" or can just pledge a flat donation.

"There's no set price or way of doing it," Ms. Smith said.

Among the participants expected are aerobics classes from Central YMCA, Alamo YMCA, Body Shop for Women, The Midlander, Jazzercise, Texas Fitness and Magic Mirror Figure Salon.

Individuals not belonging to any of those classes can also enter the event on their own, Ms. Smith noted. For more information, or for sponsor forms, call 682-2393.

For those who prefer a brisk stroll to "feeling the burn," the AHA has another project — called "Walk the Mall" — set to kick off Saturday morning to emphasize the exercise benefits of walking.

Midland Park Mall and the AHA have cooperated to set up a permanent walking course inside the mall.

The route, just under ¾-mile long, begins at the mall's southwest entrance, between Sears and Bealls, and circles inside the mall, with signs marking each ⅛-mile interval.

The project gives Midlanders a free, well-lighted public place to exercise, comfortably protected from the weather and with security personnel on hand, according to the AHA.

It also isn't a bad deal for the mall, noted Julia Vaughan, AHA public information chairman.

"The mall obviously likes to have people out there, window-shopping perhaps while they make their laps."

The course is likely to prove most popular with senior citizens, she said.

"I would say that probably in the heat of the summer there'll be plenty of people other than seniors who'll use the course," Ms. Vaughan added.

To introduce Midlanders to the new walking course, the AHA is inviting persons to gather at the mall's southwest entrance 9 a.m. Saturday and make the first laps around the mall as a group.

Free blood pressure screening will also be offered at the mall 9 a.m.-noon Saturday.

For more information on "Walk the Mall," or on the health benefits of walking in general, call the AHA at 689-7041.

Liberal arts majors appeal to employers

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Must your college-age daughter major in computer science to find a job, even though her talent and interest is in English literature?

Should your son choose an accounting major though history is his passion?

Not at all, say educators and career counselors.

"The liberal arts major who also takes some basic business courses will appeal to employers as having been more broadly educated than someone who majored in a technical field," says Gary Quehl, president of the Council of Independent Colleges.

"Although on-campus recruiters may be looking for people to fill specific jobs, the liberal arts graduate doesn't lack for job opportunities.

"He or she is usually in that first job by the fall. And surveys indicate that liberal arts majors move readily into middle management."

SAYS SKIP Sturman, director of Career and Employment Service at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H., "I operate under the assumption that a person who gets a liberal arts education is as competitive as people with some specialized majors — perhaps even more competitive.

"But I think students nowadays have to do more than just spend four years in the classroom concentrating on any academic discipline. They have to take a core of courses that suggest to an employer that they're an art history major with some quantitative skills, or a history major with some background in economics.

"They also have to immerse themselves in extracurricular activities," he adds, "or participate in internships or cooperative experiences which demonstrate qualities an employer is seeking."

At Buena Vista College, Storm Lake, Iowa, students may choose to have their non-academic, job-skill-building activities recorded and reported.

Graduates may take two degrees into the job market: a B.A. or a B.S., and a Second Curriculum transcript.

THE SECOND Curriculum is a four-year plan of activities to develop students' strong talent areas in work-related skills outside the classroom.

"Success in the classroom is only one indication of a student's potential," explains Keith Briscoe, president of the college. "We believe students' special skills and talents in planning, forecasting, creativity, communication and decision making need to be identified and developed."

Small colleges are also known for the personal approach they take to help their students prepare for careers, says Quehl, whose organization is conducting a national campaign featuring well-known graduates of small liberal arts colleges

"Smaller schools put more of an emphasis on the success of their alumni," says Wendy Weisbrod of Mount Vernon College, an 111-year-old women's college with 500 undergraduates in Washington, D.C.

IN BUCKNELL College, Lewisburg, Pa., alumni come back to the campus to discuss their careers. This year, alumni speakers have included a speech writer for President Reagan, an art critic, a television sports announcer, a soap opera star, a sleep researcher and a historian-author.

This liberal arts college also matches individual students with graduates who help them explore behind the scenes in a proposed career.

The alumnus may advise the student about practical aspects of a job hunt in the field or help the student obtain an internship.

Students at Gettysburg, Pa., College, may take decision-making workshops to identify their career interests, polish their resume preparation skills and rehearse for employment interviews in videotaped sessions.

Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., starts at the freshman level with discussions about choosing a major and getting work-relevant experience.

The college participates with seven others in an annual college fair, which has hosted as many as 50 potential employers.

"Some students just don't realize what they've gotten in a liberal arts education," says Tom Richards, Career Services director at Western Maryland. "In a career, you need to think in a number of different ways, and that's what liberal arts teaches."

Dance to benefit Christmas in April

From Staff Reports

A dance to benefit the Christmas in April volunteer home repair program has been scheduled for 8 p.m.-1 a.m. Saturday in the Holiday Inn Convention Center.

The third annual dance, sponsored by the Permian Basin Homebuilders Association, will feature music by "The Sessions" and a silent auction, with all proceeds benefiting Christmas in April.

Last year's benefit raised $3,000, according to Jim Walraven, chairman of the event. This year, the group hopes to double that amount.

"I don't know if we'll get that with the economic downturn, but we'll try," he said. "It's a cause we strongly believe in."

Volunteers with the 14th Annual Christmas in April program will be working on the homes of elderly and needy Midlanders on April 26.

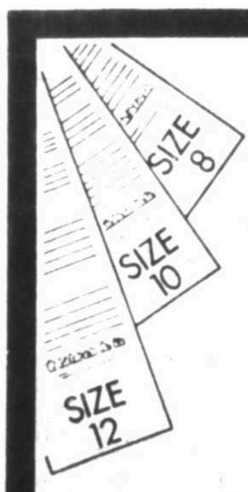

To help out, Holiday Inn is allowing the association to use the Convention Center free and is providing bartending at cost, Walraven said.

Donated goods for the silent auction are still being sought, he added.

Merchants or individuals wishing to donate auction items, or persons interested in tickets for the dance, can call 689-0021 for more information.

Tickets are $10 a person and will be available at the door.

Dollar strengthens

LONDON (AP) — The dollar opened stronger against the Japanese yen and most European currencies today while gold fluctuated in nervous trading attributed to U.S.-Libyan tension.

The dollar picked up nearly two pfennigs against the West German mark after a week in which it lost more than nine pfennigs. It gained slightly against the British pound, the Swiss and French francs and Italian lire in early trading, but lost ground to the Dutch guilder.

A Frankfurt dealer said trading was calm. He said the dollar was expected to weaken because of expectations of a cut in the U.S. discount rate, the interest rate charged by the Federal Reserve to commercial banks.

U.S.-Libyan tension was heightening uncertainty and dampening the enthusiasm of traders, he said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar, after losing 3.30 yen in three trading days, rose to a closing 178.30 yen from Friday's 178.15. Later, in London, it was quoted at 179.13 yen.

Traders said the dollar rose on rumors that the Bank of Japan told a commercial bank that it would intervene if the dollar declined today, but there was no clear indication that any intervention took place as trading progressed.

The daily Mainichi Shimbun reported from Washington that President Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, in their talks there, had expressed hope the dollar would stabilize at around 180 yen.

Gold fluctuated sharply on the London market. It opened at a bid price of $345.20 a troy ounce compared with late Friday's $341.50, but at mid-morning Monday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $343.20.

Dealers said gold was being affected mainly by U.S.-Libyan tension.

In Zurich, the bid price was $343, up from $342 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell to a closing bid of $343.29, down 50 cents from Saturday's close.

In New York Friday, gold rose $5.80 to close at $344.70.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.55 a troy ounce, up from Friday's $5.44.

T-BILLS

Rates fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rates on 52-week Treasury bills fell to 5.94 percent in Thursday's auction, the lowest level in almost nine years.

The Treasury Department sold $9.3 billion of the bills with the discount rate down substantially from the last auction on March 13, when 52-week bills averaged 6.61 percent.

The rate was the lowest since the bills sold for 5.65 percent on July 20, 1977, and continued the sharp drop in interest rates that has been occurring as a result of falling oil prices, which have lowered inflation expectations.

The sale attracted bids totaling $29.5 billion. The notes will carry a coupon rate of 6.31 percent, with a $10,000 note selling for $9,399.40.

Analysts expect few results from OPEC meeting

By JOHN TAGLIABUE
New York Times News Service

BONN — The emergency session of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that begins Tuesday is expected to prolong the bitter dispute that blocked agreement when the organization last met in mid-March and keep oil prices low in the short term, according to oil analysts and industry experts.

Little movement has been evident among the major players since the last conference, which adjourned March 24 without agreement on production and pricing. In the interim, the oil markets have been volatile, with oil priced from less than $10 to more than $12 a barrel, but with little trading.

European analysts, moreover, tend to agree that Vice President Bush's recent statements on the oil price slide and its effect on the American petroleum industry have made it harder for the OPEC ministers to come to an agreement.

On the one hand, the analysts said, the remarks could stiffen Saudi Arabia's resolve to continue pursuing its strategy to regain a larger share of the market. The Saudis, the analysts said, might have interpreted Bush's comments as meaning that the United States indeed wanted higher oil prices and would encourage its oil-producing allies, such as Britain, to cut production to put upward pressure on prices.

On the other hand, the experts said, Saudi Arabi's opponents in OPEC, who have been seeking higher prices all along, would see Bush's statements as aiding them in their efforts to get Saudi Arabia to cut back its production to increase prices.

VENEZUELA'S OIL minister, Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, exulted recently at a news conference that Bush's statement meant "the decline is affecting the United States economy tremendously."

In either case, if there is not some major movement toward a compromise, the analysts said, the Saudis will not make a move to resolve the issue.

"I doubt the Saudis feel it is in their interest to reach an agreement if others are not willing to make sacrifices," said David Gray, oil analyst at James Capel & Co., a London brokerage firm.

A small group of producers, led by Iran, Libya and Algeria, has grown increasingly restive with the Saudi-inspired OPEC policy of unrestrained production to push down prices and gain a larger worldwide market share for its oil. And these producers have not changed their views since then on this policy, which came out of a conference in early December.

These countries are burdened by large populations, heavy debt and severe shortages of foreign exchange because of shortfalls in oil revenues.

Algeria, for example, which derives 97 percent of its foreign income from hydrocarbon products, expects a 40 percent decline in income from those products this year.

But the firebrand behind efforts to topple the existing OPEC policy remains Iran, which is hard-pressed to maximize its oil revenues to finance its costly war of attrition with Iraq, now in its sixth year. Delegates said at the conclusion of the March meeting that one obstacle to an agreement was Iran's adamant demand that any increase in the production quota allowed Iraq be matched by a proportional increase in its own share.

THE GLOBAL problem facing OPEC is reduced demand for its oil. According to figures released recently by the Paris-based International Energy Agency and OPEC's own estimates, worldwide demand for OPEC's crude oil in the second quarter of this year is expected to amount to less than 15 million barrels a day, compared with cumulative output in the first quarter of about 17.3 million barrels.

Citing these figures, experts say that OPEC must figure out a way to drop production by at least 2 million barrels a day to balance output and demand and stop the price slide.

Saudi Arabia is backed mainly by Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, and none of the three has shown any signs in the meantime of having reversed its position.

Despite unconfirmed reports that Saudi Arabia, the Gulf leader, had throttled production slightly in March, oil experts estimated that Riyadh's output remained slightly below 4 million barrels a day, compared with about 2 million barrels late last year. Kuwait, the major Saudi ally in the Gulf, is estimated to be producing 1.1 million to 1.5 million barrels a day, compared with an OPEC quota of 900,000 barrels under a cumulative ceiling of 16 million barrels a day, which was in effect until December.

There have been few indications of intense contact among the ministers since the failure in March, although it is difficult to judge just how much back-room bargaining goes on.

ALGERIA'S ENERGY minister, Belkacem Nabi, traveled to Moscow in March with President Chadli Benjedid for talks that evidently included efforts to persuade the Soviet Union to restrain production and stabilize prices. And there was a public appeal by Subroto, the Indonesian minister, to the Soviet Union, Britain and Norway, three major non-OPEC producing countries, to help OPEC firm up prices by not increasing production.

Beyond the efforts of Nabi and Subroto, however, there were few indications of close contact with non-OPEC governments, five of which — Egypt, Mexico, Malaysia, Angola and Oman — sent ministers to the March conference. However, their ministers left without an agreement with the group on production restraint after the OPEC ministers failed to agree among themsives.

"There is little indication that there was much contact, or that they are any nearer agreement," said Jeremy Hale, an oil analyst at the Goldman, Sachs International Corp. in London.

Business sales fall 1.1 percent

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business sales slumped 1.1 percent in February, the largest drop in eight months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Deparment said business sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $427.2 billion in February following a 0.2 percent decline in January. It was the biggest drop in sales since a 1.7 percent plunge in June 1985.

While sales were falling sharply, inventories showed a barely noticeable 0.03 percent increase. The tiny increase of $163 million put total inventories at $585.1 billion in February.

In January, inventories had risen a much sharpter 0.3 percent while sales that month were dipping a slight 0.2 percent.

Weak sales so far this year have left some economists worried about how strong the economy will be in 1986.

Most analysts believe that the dramatic plunge in interest rates and oil prices which has occurred will spur overall economic activity including consumer demand. But so far, there has been little evidence of this occurring.

The Commerce Department reported last Friday that retail sales for March were down a sharp 0.8 percent, mainly because of a big plunge in sales of new cars.

The 1.1 percent February decline in total business sales was led by a big 2 percent drop in sales by wholesalers. Manufacturing sales were also down by 1.2 percent while retail sales edged up a tiny 0.1 percent in February.

The change in inventories included a big 0.6 percent rise in inventories held by retailers. However, stockpiles held by manufacturers dropped 0.3 percent while inventories held by wholesalers were down 0.1 percent.

Long-time rig count is oil industry barometer

AP Laserphoto

Ike Kerridge literally takes the pulse of the nation's oil industry. Every Monday he takes the count of working oil rigs, considered the barometer of the industry's health.

HOUSTON (AP) — Every Monday, Ike Kerridge literally takes the pulse of the nation's ailing oil industry.

Kerridge, an economist and vice president of stockholder relations at Houston-based Hughes Tool Co., keeps the count of working oil rigs, considered the barometer of the industry's health.

Last week, the count dropped below 1,000 for the first time in 13 years.

"We're seeing an extremely weak drilling situation, and will until the price of oil sees some stability," Kerridge says.

The weekly statistics are released every Monday by Hughes, a major supplier of rock bits and tool joints, and oilmen have been referring to the weekly Hughes rig count for decades.

But the interest is so keen in recent months that Kerridge might have one of the busiest telephones in the city.

Last Monday, Kerridge logged 382 calls on his answering machine, which greets callers with a recording of the total counts in the United States and Canada and how they compare to a week ago and year ago. The recording also indicates any major changes within states.

"We're now drilling less than half the rate" from a year ago, Kerridge notes.

The plunge in drilling activity is even more dramatic when compared with the all-time high of 4,530, achieved in December 1981, a scant 4½ years ago.

Kerridge, 61, said the count usually is low during the first months of the year because weather — wet grounds, snow and ice — hamper drilling. After April, the count picks up and ends with a sharp increase by December.

Judge may have misapplied law in Texaco suit

HOUSTON (AP) — State District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr., who ordered Texaco Inc. to pay $11.1 billion to Pennzoil Co. last year, says he may have misinterpreted the law in his charge to the jury, but he doesn't believe the case will be overturned.

"I feel that there is a good chance that perhaps I may have read the cases wrong and not have applied it correctly," Casseb was quoted today by the Houston Chronicle from a transcript of comments he made earlier this month in Los Angeles.

The Texas judge was referring to his interpretation of New York contract law which was the basis for the trial, since the alleged events in the case occurred in New York.

Casseb, reached by the Chronicle at his home in San Antonio, said he "definitely did not say" a good chance existed that the ruling would be overturned because of his error.

"What I said was if the appellate courts wanted to find any way of reversing a judgment of that magnitude, they could interpret the law the way they wanted to," the judge said.

The landmark ruling, the largest in U.S. history, was upheld by Casseb after a jury in his court found Texaco interfered in a planned merger of Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co.

Casseb's comments about the case were made April 2 during an address and question-and-answer period before the trial lawyers section of the Los Angeles County Bar Association. The Chronicle said it had both a recording and transcript of his comments.

Robert Forgone, a Los Angeles attorney who invited Casseb to the meeting, said the only doubt Casseb expressed was how the appeals court would deal with his interpretation of New York law.

"I don't think he had any doubt that the decision would be upheld," Forgone said.

Casseb told the lawyers he expected the Texas Supreme Court would uphold the verdict and the judgment, which he signed Dec. 10.

Although the case was tried in Texas, both Pennzoil and Texaco agreed that New York contract law would be the basis for the trial, since the events alleged in the suit occurred in New York.

"You know, this is my first experience in trying to analyze New York law after I did 46 years in Texas," Casseb told the California attorneys. "So you can see, that (a misinterpretation) can happen to any judge. I mean, none of us are infallible."

Both oil companies have met since the judgment in an attempt to reach a settlement.

Joe Jamail, Pennzoil's attorney, said the talks, however, are in "nowheresville." Casseb's comments were "really weird," he added.

State income tax forms becoming charity fundraiser

EDITOR'S NOTE — As tax filing deadline approaches, Associated Press bureaus in the 50 state capitals reviewed the proliferation of charitable checkoffs on state income tax forms and their success in raising money. Here's a report.

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

Uncle Sam and the state treasurer aren't the only ones eagerly awaiting your tax return. Battered children, Olympic athletes and furry woodland creatures share begging space with politicians on many state forms.

The response has been grudging. Typically only one taxpayer in 20 will give, and those give up a $5 bill or less. Checkoffs multiply but total donations remain constant.

In big states, however, small contributions can add up to $1 million funds.

"We have done some things that we never could have done with our regular budget," said Betsy Wrobel-Boerner of Ohio's Division of Natural Areas and Preserves, which has installed walkways and other visitor facilities in 15 nature preserves with its checkoff money.

Of the 40 states which have income taxes, 36 have at least one checkoff.

Wildlife is the most popular cause, adopted by 33 states. Funds have been used to reintroduce the pine marten in Michigan's Lower Peninsula and peregrine falcons in Minnesota and North Carolina, and to protect Wisconsin's last dozen timber wolves and two nesting female piping plovers.

Programs for abused children come second with 14 states, and campaign fund checkoffs are on the tax forms in 13 states.

The first state checkoffs for political campaigns were enacted in 1973 and Colorado adopted the first wildlife program in 1977, said Corine Eckl, senior research analyst for the National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver.

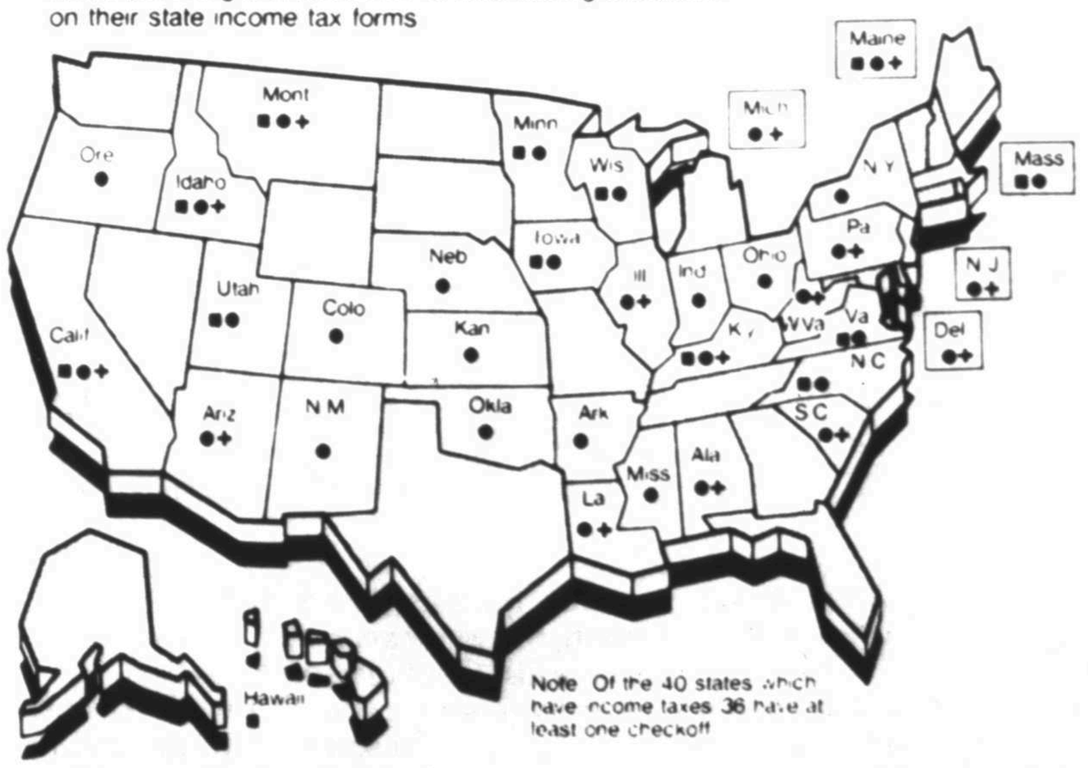

Other causes include the U.S. Olympic Committee in five states, the Statue of Liberty restoration in Louisiana and New Mexico, domestic abuse programs in Colorado, drug enforcement in Idaho, agriculture education in Montana and a mock legislature for senior citizens in California.

Massachusetts and Rhode Island have checkoffs to help pay for organ transplants, Oklahoma has one for medical care for the needy, and West Virginia is adding a checkoff

Lease sale shows decline in oil industry

The March Oil and Gas Lease sale held by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) in New Mexico felt the impact of the declining oil and gas market. Only $778,509.82 was received in high bids, the lowest in 15 years. There were only 97 bids received on the 58 parcels offered, with no bids made on the Kansas and Texas parcels. The highest bid on the New Mexico parcel was $80,000 on 80 acres in Lea County, New Mexico, offered by J.P.H. Oil Producers of Lovington, New Mexico.

Basin society schedules noon luncheon

The Permian Basin section of the Society of Paleontologists and Mineralogists will host a noon luncheon on April 15 at the Midland Center, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker for the luncheon will be L.M. Grace, of Schlumberger Well Services, who will provide a presentation entitled "Stratigraphic Interpretation Using Formation Imaging and Dipmeter Analysis."

Grace received a bachelor's degree in aerospace engineering from the University of Texas at Arlington in 1970 and began working for Schlumberger that same year. His work experience has included the Gulf Coast, Permian Basin, Rocky Mountains, Canada and North Texas.

All those wishing to attend or obtain further information can make reservations with the SEPM office at 683-1573.

Analyst says gasoline prices have fallen, but future direction uncertain

By RICHARD HOLGUIN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices have fallen for 14 consecutive weeks as more and more dealers declare a price war, but the future direction of prices is uncertain despite the downward trend, a petroleum industry analyst says.

"Nobody should dare try to project where the price will go," analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday. "Everybody thought that the price was leveling off three weeks ago, and it's falling again."

Consumers may be celebrating the price plunge, but Lundberg cautioned about the long-term effect of the price reductions.

"This free-market, very low price is knocking our domestic producers out of the box, shutting down low-production wells," he said. "At some point if this price doesn't level off, stabilize internationally, there's serious trouble ahead."

Gas station operators also are taking a beating, he said.

"The competition has become so fierce now that the dealers are chopping into their margin to be competitive," he said. "They're now fighting with their lifeblood."

The average price for all grades of gasoline has declined 5.6 cents a gallon to 90.16 cents nationwide since March 21, according to Lundberg's biweekly survey of 16,000 gasoline stations nationwide.

It was the lowest average prices since gasoline was decontrolled in 1981, said Lundberg, adding that the overall price of gas has fallen 31 cents a gallon since the year began.

The average price for regular leaded gasoline at self-service stations was 76.68 cents a gallon at the close of business Saturday, while regular unleaded went for 82.57 cents a gallon.

Falling crude oil prices and competition among refineries continued to depress prices at the pump, but Lundberg said a newly declared nationwide gasoline war was the main cause of the recent dropoff.

The dealers surveyed reported their operating markup was 13.86 cents a gallon, down 3.22 cents from three weeks ago, Lundberg said. The markup must cover labor, insurance and other operating costs.

"They'd been hanging on to their margin and passing wholesale cuts," he said. "The dealer competition has now begun to eat into their margin."

Pennzoil attorney attacks Texaco

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. lawyer Joe Jamail claims Texaco Inc.'s efforts to have a $11.1 billion judgment against it overturned include trying to manipulate public opinion, influence the judiciary and drive down the price of Pennzoil stock.

Jamail's charges stem from a Houston Chronicle story published Friday in which the judge who presided over the trial of Pennzoil's suit against Texaco was quoted as saying he may have misinterpreted the law in the case.

State District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. made the statement after giving a speech to a Los Angeles legal association on April 2. A recording of the judge's statements and a written version of his remarks were supplied to the Chronicle by Texaco representatives, the newspaper reported Sunday.

On Saturday, Jamail said Casseb's statement about misinterpreting the law was taken out of context. He said attorneys attending the meeting indicated the judge had emphasized his belief the judgment would be upheld on appeal.

Texaco is appealing that judgment, which was awarded Pennzoil late last year when a jury determined Texaco illegally interfered with a planned merger between Pennzoil and Getty Oil.

Sources supplying the material first requested anonymity then later agreed to be identified as Texaco representatives, the Chronicle said.

Jamail said Texaco's request for anonymity made it look as if the information came from an unbiased source — an action he said was an attempt to manipulate public opinion and influence the state appellate judiciary's thinking.

But Texaco issued a statement saying, "It was an open meeting and specified by its chairperson as being on the record. We provided a tape and transcription of the judge's remarks and let the judge's words speak for themselves."

Jamail said Texaco is attempting to drive down the value of Pennzoil's stock to encourage shareholders to put pressure on Pennzoil's management to settle the suit.

Texaco's stock was the third-most actively traded issue on the New York Stock Exchange Friday, closing up 1⅞ at 32¾. Pennzoil closed at 51¼, down 4¼.

Survey indicates some Texas bank executives received generous raises

DALLAS (AP) — While most Texas banks were imposing cost cuts to battle the energy lending crisis, some top bank executives received big cash raises, a survey shows.

The survey by The Dallas Morning News, compiled from proxy statements to bank shareholders and published Sunday, shows wide-ranging differences exist among salaries and raises for highest-ranking executives of the five largest Texas bank-holding companies.

Stephen J. Heyer, a bank compensation expert for Booz Allen Hamilton Inc. in New York, said there is a justification for awarding executives sizeable increases during stressful times.

Heyer said executives in a company that out-performs its peer group in troubled times should be rewarded.

At RepublicBank Corp. of Dallas, one of the best-performing banks and the largest bank company in Texas, top executives received pay increases ranging from 18 percent to 45.3 percent.

But top officials at First City Bancorporation Inc. of Houston, not one of the top performers, also received salary increases ranging from 13 percent to 34.5 percent, the News reported.

First City senior executives were rewarded in the same manner as lower-ranking employees, said John Jamison, First City spokesman. He said at least two top officials had increased job responsibilities in 1985.

RIG COUNT

Analysts, though, figured something was going wrong when the rig count didn't start to pick up last year.

"It recovered a little, but it didn't have its usual pickup," Kerridge said. "It was a hint of uncertainties. No one ever expected the oil market to crash."

This year, the highest the count may reach is 1,500, he said.

In a procedure that began in the late 1930s, about 300 Hughes field representatives count the working rigs in their area. The figures are sent to zone offices, which in turn send the data to the company's Houston headquarters. In Houston, a computer tallies the numbers and spits out a total.

"Up until the computer age, each regional officer filled out a form and mailed it Friday afternoon so it would be in Houston by Monday," Kerridge said.

In the late 1940s, the count was broken down into states and had separate figures for land, inland water and offshore rigs, plus comparisons from a year ago.

Kerridge said no one can predict the price of oil, but blamed the current dwindling prices on overproduction in Saudi Arabia.

"I think the Saudis are following a planned strategy," he said, echoing the sentiments of several other oil analysts.

Saudi production was 2½ to 3 million barrels of oil a day and now is about 9 million, Kerridge said.

But why not get the money from the Legislature?

"Ha! Have you seen the headlines?" said Ros Harrison of the Iowa Conservation Commission, referring to the slump in the farm state's economy.

Iowa's Chickadee Checkoff raises about $200,000 a year, supporting programs to reintroduce otters and protect barn owls.

The state also has a box for political donations, which was checked by 9.2 percent of its taxpayers in 1985, said Bob Rogers of the Iowa Department of Revenue.

"I think we should limit the use of income tax returns to collecting income taxes," says Iowa state Sen. Doug Ritsema. "There's no limit to the number of worthy, charitable causes that would love to have a checkoff on the tax forms to raise money."

Louisiana and Illinois now have six checkoffs on their forms.

"If the Legislature approves further checkoffs, we'll have to take the list off the front page, and when that happens, I don't feel we'll collect as much," said Shirley McNamara, secretary of Louisiana's Department of Revenue and Taxation.

"We've found that there's only X number of dollars to be donated, and what that (more checkoffs) does is to split up the pie," said Jim Crum, director of the non-game wildlife resource division of West Virginia's Department of Natural Resources.

West Virginia's wildlife fund collected $167,203 in 1981, its first year, but the total fell to $75,190 in 1984 when a checkoff for a Children's Trust Fund was added. The children's fund collected $88,440.

Colorado's wildlife fund peaked at $705,700 in donations in 1981, when it was the only checkoff on the form; last year three programs shared a total of $746,476, including $397,533 for wildlife.

Most checkoff programs only permit donations to be deducted from refunds, automatically cutting out those who owe taxes. In Pennsylvania, for example, the average tax refund is only $33, so the potential donation is modest.

Taxpayers are more inclined to give the state's money to political campaign funds than to part with their own. When Montana switched its political fund in 1979 to be deducted from refunds, contributions fell from $70,000 a year to about $4,000.

Contribution rates of about 5 percent were reported in several states, and $5 was a typical gift: $4.40 in Alabama, $4.97 in New York, $4.62 in Minnesota. New Mexico did better with an average gift of $8.28; Colorado had a better than average response of 8.6 percent, but the average gift was $5.86.

Michigan had hoped to raise $1 million a year for its Children's Trust Fund to prevent child abuse, but last year 250,000 taxpayers donated $630,000. Until this year, the donation was limited to $2 on an individual return and $4 on a joint return.

This year, with the lid off, contributions are averaging $5.06.

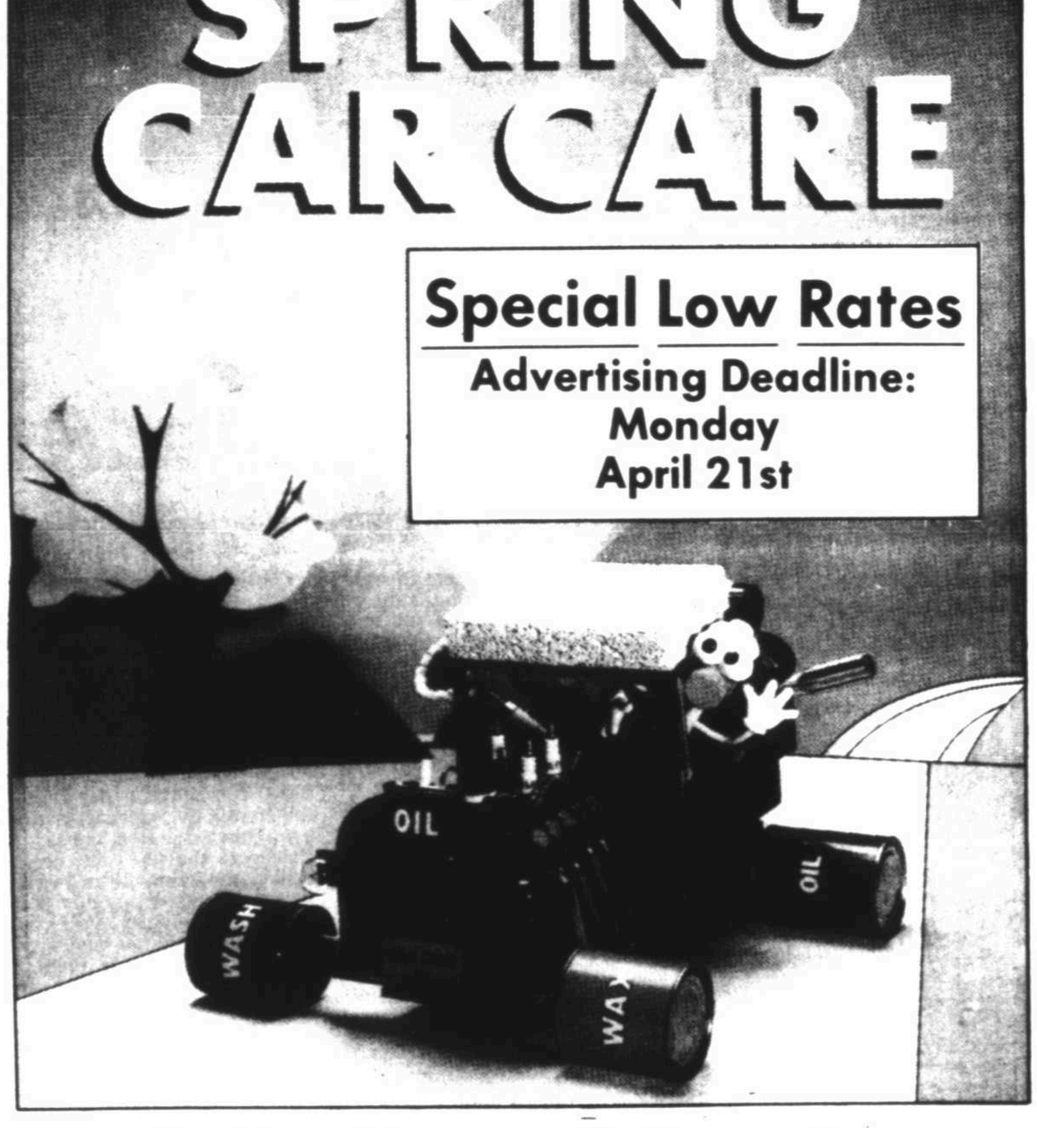

"The bad news is that that figure represents 5.72 percent of the people who've gotten a refund so far," said David Mills, the fund's executive director. "We'd hoped for 10 or 12 percent."

Jackson effort welcomed in Hormel strike

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — A one-day visit by the Rev. Jesse Jackson could lead to new contract negotations if striking meatpackers will offer a new proposal, an official of the Hormel company says.

Charles Nyberg, senior vice president of Geo. A. Hormel & Co., said Sunday he did not know if Jackson could help, but called him "a concerned individual trying to bring a resolution to a very unfortuate situation. ... We welcome the Reverend Jackson to Austin to try to do that."

Jim Guyette, president of the striking local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers union, said union leaders also welcome any help the civil rights leader could provide to end the bitter, eight-month strike.

During his visit to Austin Sunday, Jackson spoke to a crowd of more than 1,000 at a church rally and met with union and company officials, along with Austin Mayor Tom Kough and other local authorities.

Jackson said he had a "very good" meeting with Nyberg, and said "there's a general desire for people to go back to work." But he was not able to secure a date for contract negotations to resume.

Nyberg said the company is willing to resume negotiations, but said it would be up to the union to come up with a new proposal.

Jackson said he hoped to meet in the next few weeks with Hormel President Richard L. Knowlton and with William Wynn, international union president, to further his effort.

"If I can gain the confidence of all parties involved and be a facilitator ... that would be a good role," Jackson said.

An arrest warrant was issued for Guyette following a violent protest outside Hormel's main plant Friday. Eight officers were injured and 17 protesters arrested. Guyette said he planned to turn himself in today.

GM ups prices, adds incentives

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., which is boosting prices on most models, is offering a new package of sales incentives that includes some financing rates as low as 6.9 percent.

GM on Sunday unveiled the new financing program, which begins today.

It includes 7.9 percent financing on 36-month contracts for most cars and some light trucks delivered from today through June 30 or ordered before June 30. The 6.9 interest rate is offered over 30 months for the Chevrolet Chevette, Pontiac Fiero, Oldsmobile Delta 88 and Buick LeSabre models.

Synfuels program to be killed this week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's effort to develop synthetic fuels gets buried this week, killed by an economy-minded Congress in an era of gusher-soaked world oil markets.

Born in the frantic response of Congress to gasoline lines in 1980, the Synthetic Fuels Corp. has been winding down since Congress voted in December to abolish it. Friday is its last day.

It has dwindled to a group of eight people known as "Son of Synfuels," and already has moved out of its offices to the Treasury to monitor the four projects the corporation backed.

But even as it dies, one of its creators, Dan Dreyfuss, says it goes to its grave without answering some of the key questions it was designed to answer. Dreyfuss says someday Congress will again turn to a crash program to develop liquid fuels from coal, natural gas, agricultural waste — anything except crude oil — and when that happens, it won't have the technical, economic and environmental lessons that should have been learned from the current effort.

Dreyfuss, now with the Gas Research Institute, was an aide to the late Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who was chairman of the Senate Energy Committee.

Dreyfuss and the corporation's other founders freed Synfuels from Civil Service rules and gave it extraordinary — later reduced — financing: $20 billion in one shot and another $68 billion envisioned after four years.

"If it hadn't been set up the way it was it wouldn't have lasted six months," Dreyfuss said.

Was Congress wise to kill it? "Given the history, probably they were," Dreyfuss said.

The history includes a slow start, accusations of improprieties against two presidents, lack of a quorum on the board for almost a year while an unsympathetic President Reagan tried to kill it.

Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., a leading opponent, said product prices from the corporation's projects of "$62 to $90 a barrel is absolute foolishness."

Oil stood at about $27 a barrel when Congress voted to kill Synfuels and is fluctuating around $13 now.

The corporation "stood out as a red flag to members who were afraid they would be attacked for being inconsistent" when the Gramm-Rudman spending restrictions were enacted, Wolpe said.

Energy companies will bring synthetic fuels to the market as they are needed, said Rep. Michael Synar, D-Okla. "I learned from my daddy that where there's a buck to be made, somebody will be there to make it."

Synar was disputed by both Dreyfuss and Ralph Bayrer, vice president for projects and head of the detachment going to Treasury. Private companies will not make the huge initial investments necessary to gain experience and bring down production costs, and will be caught short when imports are cut off or suddenly start going up in price, Bayrer said.

"This way you get it 30 years sooner," Bayrer said. "I think the only way to look at it is in terms of an insurance policy."

Stock Market Loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.36 to 1,787.82 in the first hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gains by about 6 to 5 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported today that business sales slumped 1.1 percent in February, the largest drop in eight months. The Commerce Department said business sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $427.2 billion in February following a 0.2 percent decline in January. It was the biggest drop in sales since a 1.7 percent plunge in June 1985. While sales were falling sharply, inventories showed a barely noticeable 0.03 percent increase. The tiny increase of $163 million put total inventories at $585.1 billion in February.

General Motors dropped ⅝ to 84⅛. The company, beset by sluggish sales and large inventories, set new financing incentives for buyers of some of its car models.

National Gypsum climbed 3¾ to 62¼. The company said a group of investors led by management sweetened its proposal to buy it out, countering a recent offer by Wickes Cos.

At 10 a.m. the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down .24 at 135.98. The American Stock Exchange market value index rose .18 to 270.34.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 4.12 to 1,790.18, finishing the week with a net gain of 50.96 points.

Advances and declines ran about even in the overall tally on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 139.44 million shares, against 184.76 million in the previous session.

Gas leaks from truck

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A truck carrying ammonia overturned this morning, injuring the driver and causing the toxic gas to leak from the truck, police say.

No one was evacuated from the area of the one-vehicle accident, which occurred on Beltway 8 at the intersection of State Highway 225 about 9 a.m., said L.A. Flores, a Pasadena police dispatcher.

Pasadena is southeast of Houston.

"The leak wasn't too large," said Flores, who did not have specifics about how the accident occurred except that the truck turned onto one side.

Flores said firefighters were at the scene deciding how to take care of the ammonia seeping from the truck.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Son-in-law wasting money with gloom and doom newsletter

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. My son-in-law let me read a newsletter he receives. The author writes about "crisis." He claims people who own bonds should sell them and "take the money and run." He also says that the safest income investment for Americans this year "is definitely not" certificates of deposit. He says the only safe investment for 1986 is U.S. Treasury bills.

The newsletter contains many other dire predictions, too numerous to mention. What is your opinion of this?

A. It's that your son-in-law is wasting the money he pays to subscribe to that newsletter.

There are many gloom-and-doom sheets such as that one. The bust of our nation's economy, which they have been predicting for decades, hasn't happened. Although it would be wrong to assert it can't happen, it's most unlikely it ever will happen.

The Cassandras who make money churning out those "the financial sky is falling" newsletters have long records of making dead-wrong predictions.

Let's look at the items you mention.

Prices of marketable bonds — those bought and sold in the marketplace — go in the opposite direction of interest rates. Interest rates have been falling and bond prices rising for several years. This trend has continued in just the short time since you wrote your letter. If you had followed that newsletter's advice and sold bonds, you would be kicking yourself.

Neither I nor anyone else can promise that bond prices will continue to go up. But a sharp reversal in that trend has to be considered most doubtful.

Treasury bills, like all U.S. Treasury securities are counted as the safest investment in the world. However, no one has ever lost any money in CDs covered by federal deposit insurance. In practice, insured CDs are as safe as Treasuries.

Suggest to your daughter's husband that he check the accuracy of predictions in back issues of that newsletter. I'd lay long odds the newsletter was wrong far more often than it was correct. Maybe your son-in-law enjoys having the financial wits scared out of him. Some people get their kicks at horror movies.

• • •

Q. A fly-by-night operation opened an office in our small town several years ago and a beautiful blond saleswoman persuaded my husband to buy diamonds. I opposed this "investment," to no avail.

Needless to say, the company is long gone. We would like to sell the diamonds my husband bought but have no idea how to do so. What can we do?

A. To unload that "investment," you should have the diamonds appraised at several jewelry stores and sell them for the best price you can get. Prices can vary from one jeweler to another.

No matter what you get, brace yourself for a tremendous loss. Even at legitimate dealers, there's a huge markup between the prices at which gems are sold to the public and the prices at which dealers buy.

• • •

Q. Shouldn't you warn your readers about gold and silver peddlers offering "puts and calls?" These individuals have no more knowledge of what gold and silver prices will be than the average person reading the financial section of the daily paper.

I'm sadder and wiser, after a constant barrage of phone calls overcame my common sense.

A. And, undoubtedly, poorer.

This column has always warned against falling for hot-shot telephone sales pitches. Those "boiler room" tactics often are used by peddlers of gold, silver, gems and other items — at inflated prices. Your mistake was not hanging up when those charlatans called.

Q. When I ask the folks at the bank to give me an explanation of the annual percentage rate on a loan, they simply turn to their books and give me an exact figure for that "APR". Yet, they are unable to tell me the method by which it is computed.

Exactly what is APR and how is it calculated?

A. APR is the true cost of borrowing money, stated on a yearly percentage basis. That sounds simple enough, but it gets mighty complicated. Except in the case of a one-year, simple interest loan, APR is always higher than a loan's stated interest rate.

If you borrow $1,000 at 8 percent from some generous friend or relative and repay that loan with $1,080 at the end of one year, your APR was 8 percent — the same as the loan's interest rate.

However, if you borrow $1,000 from a bank or other commercial lender at 8 percent and repay in 12 monthly installments of $90 each, your APR was 14.5 percent. That's because you didn't have the use of the full $1,000 for the entire year, as each repayment reduced the amount of the loan.

Calculation of APR is done through complex formulas. As I write this, I have a financial encyclopedia open to a section devoted to just that — three full pages of small type, including algebraic equations that would stump anyone short of a mathematical whiz.

Your "folks at the bank" aren't about to go through that exercise every time they have to know the APR on a loan. Instead, they look it up in books containing tables of APRs — based on each loan's interest rate, maturity and repayment schedule.

Fortunately for borrowers, the APR must be disclosed before or at the time a loan is obtained. Among other things, the federal Truth in Lending Act requires that the loan contract a borrower signs must state the APR and, except for mortgages, the total finance charge in dollars and cents.

• • •

Q. I have conflicting information about how long a credit bureau can keep a personal bankruptcy on a person's credit record. Is it seven years or 14 years? Also, how long can other bad debts remain on a person's credit record?

A. For bankruptcy, it's now 10 years. Formerly, it was 14 years. But that was changed by the latest revision of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Bad debts and other "adverse information" can remain on your credit record for seven years.

• • •

Q. I'm interested in knowing what my credit record looks like. I have never had any credit problems, but I expect to buy a home within a year and want to confirm that my credit history is correct. Is there a way to find this out?

A. Sure. You can get your credit record from any credit bureau that has it. Ask your bank or a store where you have an account what credit bureau it uses. Contact that bureau and ask for your record.

Some credit bureaus will mail you a copy of your credit record. Others insist that you go to their offices. Some won't give your a copy of your record but will let you look at it. Usually, there's a small fee — $5 or $10 — for getting a copy or even looking at your credit record.

That fee must be waived, however, if the bureau's report ever resulted in you being turned down for credit. In that unhappy circumstance, the bureau must show you the record, at no cost to you.

Q. I am a 60-year-old female and a truly lazy investor. Part of my retirement plan for the rest of my life includes receiving monthly interest checks from $75,000 I have in certificates of deposit. These CDs presently are paying 7.5 percent or whatever.

It seems to me there must be safe CDs paying at least 10 percent. Are there?

A. Yes. You can get 10 percent on some five-year CDs and even more on longer-term CDs. Obviously, you either have short-term CDs or a bank paying low rates. The longer the term, the higher the interest. And each bank sets its own rates.

To get high CD rates, you have to shop around. If you are, to use your word, too "lazy" to do that, you have to settle for low interest.

Wall Street plays 'financial dominoes'

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — In their recent preoccupation with the oil and credit markets, stock market investors seem to be all but ignoring bread-and-butter economic news.

And the economy, in turn, appears almost eerily unaffected by everything that is happening in the commodities and securities markets.

The game on Wall Street lately has turned into a sort of "financial dominos," as Newton Zinder, an analyst at E.F. Hutton & Co., recently described it. A move in prices of oil futures touches off immediate reactions in interest-rate and stock-index futures and in the bond and stock markets.

The effect is often heightened by program trading, in which professional traders seek to capitalize on temporary disparities between prices of stock index futures and those of stocks themselves.

In the first week of this month, for example, Zinder noted this sequence of events: "Strength in the crude oil future resulted in weakness in bond futures. This in turn caused the premiums on the stock index futures to narrow or disappear, and this triggered sell programs in the stock market."

The good or bad implications of this kind of activity have been hotly debated for some time now, and the argument is by no means settled. What has been remarkable so far is its lack of clear-cut impact on the economy.

The price of open-market oil has dropped more than 50 percent in a very short time. Interest rates have tumbled to their lowest levels since the 1970s, and stocks have staged a dramatic rise over the last six months to record highs.

Each of these forces, taken separately, is regarded as a strong stimulus to the economy. Together, they should logically be a powerful combination.

Yet business activity has continued to plod along at what most economists describe as a respectable, but hardly spectacular pace.

"The economy has not yet manifested the dynamism that is normal during booms," observed David Levine at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., who started predicting last summer that business activity would pick up significantly.

In a recent report to clients, Levine said several factors have acted to restrain growth lately, among them the negative effects of the oil-price slide on the energy sector of the economy. "We still think a boom has begun," he declared.

But others aren't yet persuaded. Wright Investors Service, a Bridgeport, Conn., investment management firm, says it "does not see the U.S. economy improving significantly during the first half of 1986 despite the benefits from lower oil prices, reduced interest rates and an improved trade position.

"During the first half, generally weak consumer spending and cautious trends in capital spending will limit economic growth to below-normal rates."

Wright says sluggish growth and continued low inflation could prompt the Federal Reserve to ease credit further, encouraging interest rates to drop some more — say, by another percentage point.

"Then, and only then," the firm concludes, "will there be sufficient stimulus to get a bona fide economic recovery under way."

In the meantime, some touchy questions have been raised about the stock market's traditional role as an advance indicator of economic trends.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Wheelchair trips begin

Associated Press

A handicapped Canadian who has logged 14,000 miles in his wheelchair odyssey around the world rolled out of Peking on Monday, and two wheelchair-bound Britons began a 2,480-mile Turkey-to-London journey.

The Canadian, 28-year-old Rick Hansen of Vancouver, told a crowd before leaving Peking for the eastern port city of Tianjin: "Remember, never give up your dreams."

The two handicapped Britons, university professor Tim Marshall, 39, and retired engineer Bill Levick, 51, began their undertaking on Sunday in Turkey at the Asiatic end of the Bosporus Bridge, the land link between Europe and Asia.

15 injured in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police clashed today with supporters of a pro-Marcos politician, and at least 15 people were reported injured. Both sides accused the other of using firearms.

The fracas took place in the Manila suburb of San Juan, where Joseph Estrada, the mayor under ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos, relinquished his post on Friday to Reynaldo San Pascual, the appointee of President Corazon Aquino.

Estrada, a popular Tagalog-language movie actor, gave up the San Juan mayor's post after holding out in the city hall out for three weeks, but his supporters refused to yield control of the building.

The official Philippine News Agency reported 22 policemen battled 20 rock-throwing Estrada supporters outside the building today.

Police and hospitals said at least 15 people were injured, and both sides in the melee charged the other with using guns. Police also said the demonstrators threw stones at officers.

The appointed mayor, Pascual, has been holding office in a fire station.

Expo draws prostitutes

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Out-of-town prostitutes have converged on the city, anticipating a business boom when the World's Fair opens May 2, a leader of a support group for prostitutes says.

Marie Arrington of the Alliance for the Safety of Prostitutes said the influx of street-wise outsiders could spark a violent battle for territory.

"Women who have been working on corners are going to fight to keep them," she said. "We're trying to make sure no one is murdered."

The head of the city police vice squad, Inspector Harold Brittain, said prostitutes had been encouraged by recent successful court challenges to anti-prostitution laws.

On Thursday, a Provincial Court judge dismissed charges brought under soliciting legislation. A government appeal of an earlier ruling is set for a hearing April 30.

Meese arrives for talks

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese arrived Sunday afternoon in the Caribbean resort of Cancun to discuss with his Mexican counterpart the troublesome problem of illegal drug trafficking.

Their two-day discussions, which will begin Monday, will mark the fourth time Meese and Mexico's attorney general, Sergio Garcia Ramirez, have met.

In Mexico City, U.S. Embassy spokesman Vince Hovanec said their talks will center on the drug issue but will also include such law enforcement issues as the search and return of fugitives, so-called "hot pursuit" across the U.S.-Mexico border and the return of stolen property.

The Mexican attorney general's office said in a statement late last week that the two officials also were likely to discuss terrorism.

Former Trotsky aide dies

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Jean van Heijenoort, an American mathematician and longtime secretary and bodyguard to the late Soviet leader Leon Trotsky, was shot dead by his third wife who also committed suicide, the Federal District Attorney General's Office said. He was 76.

In a press release late Saturday, the attorney general's office confirmed Heijenoort's death occured March 29 but gave no details or say why the news was not previously made public.

In a dispatch Sunday, the government news agency Notimex, said his wife, Ana Maria Zamora shot Heijenoort dead with a .38 caliber special revolver while he was asleep and later killed herself with a shot in the mouth.

The dispatch said the bodies were found the next day. It also gave no details other than quote unnamed authorities as saying it was "a crime of passion."

Dog track is popular

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — A greyhound race track that opened its doors to the public less than three years ago in this Mexican border city has been popular with Americans, officials say.

Nuevo Laredo Downs is the newest Mexican track featuring greyhound races. The country's first and second oldest dog racetracks are located in Tijuana and Ciudad Juarez, in the Mexican states of Baja California and Chihuahua.

The Nuevo Laredo track "is the only racetrack in the country where 100 percent of the dogs' owners are from the United States," said Jose Mesas, a veteran dog trainer of 17 years, originally of Tijuana. "The majority of the dogs here came from Kansas, Arizona and Florida."

"What Kentucky is to the horses, Abilene, Kan., is to the greyhounds," Luis Vinels, the racetrack's director, told the Laredo News.

Mesa said the dogs' main diet has always been horsemeat imported form the United States. He said he feeds the dogs only once a day.

Jaruzelski 'strengthened'

WARSAW (LAT) — Gains in relations with western countries and a strong endorsement from the Soviet Union have strengthened the leadership of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski before an important Communist Party congress but have failed to improve prospects for Poland's crippled economy, government officials and diplomats here say.

An official visit by Foreign Minister Marian Orzechowski to West Germany last week confirmed Jaruzelski's slow progress in his drive to normalize ties with western governments after a four-year freeze. Bonn recently extended its first trade credit to Poland since 1981, and Chancellor Helmut Kohl called for a general improvement in relations between the two countries.

The visit followed a month in which Jaruzelski had his first high-level contact with a representative of the Reagan administration and was singled out for praise among Eastern European leaders by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. At the same time, officials of the Roman Catholic Church signaled that Pope John Paul II would be willing to meet with Jaruzelski for the first time at the Vatican.

INVITATION FOR BIDS

Sealed proposals addressed to John Lowe, Utilities Director, City of Midland, P. O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas 79702, will be received at the City Secretary's office, Room 204, City Hall, 300 North Loraine Street, Midland, Texas until 10:00 A.M., Wednesday, April 30, 1986 for the furnishing and installing of nine shaft-driven turbine pumping units in wells located at the Paul Davis Well Field, Andrews and Martin Counties, Texas.

At the above time and place the proposals will be opened and read. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

Copies of Plans, Specifications, and Contract Documents can be secured at the City Secretary's office, Midland, Texas or at the office of its Consulting Engineer, Reed & Associates, Inc., 1109 N. Big Spring Street, Midland, Texas 79701.

A cashier's check, certified check, or acceptable Bidder's Bond payable to City of Midland, Midland, Texas, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the bid submitted must accompany each bid as a guarantee that, if awarded the contract, the Bidder will, within ten (10) days of award of contract, enter into a contract and execute bonds on the forms provided in the Contract Documents.

A performance bond and payment bond, each in the amount of not less than one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the contract, and upon payment of all persons supplying labor or furnishing materials, will be required.

In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating proposal prices, the City of Midland reserves the right to adopt the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject any or all bids, and waive formalities. No bid may be withdrawn within thirty (30) days after date on which bids are opened.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

Nissan: One of best work-places in U.S.A.

by Tom Cooper

Nissan Motor Manfacturing Corporation U.S.A. has been listed as one of the best companies in America to work for in a book published in 1984 by Robert Levering, Milton Moskowitz, and Michael Katz (The 100 Best Companies to work for in America).

The Nissan Story, American style, is a very interesting one. It began in 1983 with the construction of a plant capable of producing 10,000 trucks a month. More than 125,000 applications were received for the initial 2000 jobs meaning that Nissan could be very selective placing emphasis on verbal skills and the ability to work with people.

The benefits Nissan has to offer employees is part of what makes this such a good work-place. For starters when employees have worked for the company for 12 months they are eligible for a leasing program. For $150.00 a month they can lease a brand new Nissan. All costs are covered in that monthly fee including maintenance, tax, license and insurance. At the other American Auto companies only top managers are entitled to such programs. Other benefits include free training during working hours for employees who want to learn new skills (and increase their wages at the same time). Many other benefits (too many to mention here) make Nissan a really unique place to work.

The total environment at Nissan seems to be a very comfortable one. The employees have been described as having a love afair with the company. One of the reasons for this is the attitude that starts at he top and permeates throughout the organization. All the employees including office personel are provided with free company uniforms. Wearing of these is strictly voluntary but most everyone does including the President, Marvin Runyon. He lunches most days in the company cafeteria and everyone calls him and the other managers by their first names.

The employees of Nissan, U.S.A. earn about the same wages as the rest of the Auto industry. But in other areas such as benefits and job security they seem to be better taken care of. And to top it all off, the company is not unionized. The pay and benefits are purely voluntary on the part of Nissan as an effort to boost morale and job performance. So far the company seems to have been extremely effective at doing both.

This feature appears each Monday in the Classified Section as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram
