VICTORY IN KENTUCKY

New Executive Chairman Claims Importance In Saturday Vote

WASHINGTON, June 2. (US)—The first outline of Democratic party policy under the leadership of Jouett Shouse of Kansas, recently elected chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic national committee, will be promulgated here on the evening of Monday, June 10. The occasion will be a dinner in Shouse's honor tendered by the Jefferson Democratic association of the District of Columbia, of which Robert N. Harper, Washington banker, is president.

An organization program for "a militant and effective year-by-year and day-by-day furtherance of party principles" will be presented, according to an announcement of the dinner plans issued today. It added:

Active Democrats

"The dinner will be the first gathering of nationally known and active Democrats since Mr. Shouse agreed to assume personal management of the permanent national headquarters of the party in Washington. Although arranged by the Democrats resident in the national capital as a tribute to Mr. Shouse, the dinner is expected to prove the initial assertion of the active offensive by the Democratic party in the confidence of capturing control of congress next year."

Speakers will be John J. Raskob of New York, chairman of the Democratic national committee; Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland, chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee; Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, and Shouse. The speeches will be broadcast over the Columbia broadcasting system.

The committee to arrange the dinner, includes Breckinridge Long, former assistant secretary of state; Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson; John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman for the District of Columbia; John B. Colpoys, chairman of the Democratic state central committee for the District of Columbia; Mrs. J. Druggist Taken For Ride Lives To Tell Story Of Day-By-Day Torture

CHICAGO, June 2. (US)—A story unique in the annals of gangdom's crimes was unfolded here today by a druggist who had been "taken for a ride" and lived to tell the tale.

Victims of these fatal rides invariably offer mute testimony with bullet-riddled bodies, tossed brutally into a ditch along a deserted road. But Mathew Zimmerman, the druggist, is able to tell all the harrowing details of the gruesome deed.

In the hands of gangsters who had mistaken him for another, he was tortured constantly for five days and nights, to reveal what he was unable to tell.

"Last Tuesday night," he told detectives of the city force, "the men, with guns, forced me into a car at a northwest side corner. I thought they were going to drive me to my drugstore and rob the register. Instead they blindfolded me and drove a long time. I could tell when we went through Whiting and Gary.

"About 20 minutes later we came to a small wooden shack where I was held. I could hear the swishing of water, and though we were near a river.

"The men began abusing me, calling me 'Matt Daly.' They said: 'Tell us where that distillery is you —.' Of course I couldn't. When I protested that I wasn't Daly, it was only a signal for more abuse.

"Every day it was some new torture. Saturday they stopped me, 'Now, Daly, tell us!' they threatened. When I continued to plead with them that I wasn't this Daly, they took jagged pieces of glass and cut gashes around my chest and abdomen.

"Saturday night another man—a clean cut, nice looking chap—came to the shack. He took one look at me, then began cursing the other three: 'You've got the wrong man, you damn fools!' he said.

"So they cursed me again, blindfolded me and drove me away in the car, telling me I was lucky to be alive."

In Hammond he was thrown from the automobile and narrowly missed rolling down into the river. Passers-by took him to a police station.

BREAK IN DAMS FREES TORRENT

One Woman Killed After Barriers Collapse

CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 2. (AP)—A wall of water released when two large dams at the Herefore ranch, six miles east of Cheyenne gave way early this morning, claimed the life of one woman, destroyed bridges in its path and threatened valuable herds of livestock as the flood swept into northern Colorado.

The dam break was caused by the impounding flood waters following a violent hail and rain storm. The reservoir was filled to overflowing from the sudden torrents that poured in from all sides.

Approaches to every bridge across the creek into Cheyenne with the exception of that on the Lincoln highway was washed out and hundreds of motorists were marooned at the edge of the city. Two camps were inundated and several of the cabins washed down the creek. All occupants reached high ground safely.

Police and firemen with boats rescued scores of persons from houses in west and south Cheyenne in which water stood several feet deep.

HOUSTON BOY'S BODY IS FOUND

Bayou City Gets Relief From Overflow

HOUSTON, June 2. (AP)—As Buffalo Bayou was slumping within its banks and nearing its lazy normal flow after an unprecedented rampage, which left millions in property damage, dark waters in the basement of a cold storage plant early Sunday gave up the body of a messenger boy, who was swept to his death in the raging currents late Friday.

The dead youth, Arthur Avendano, 19, was a former messenger for the Postal Telegraph company. His body, battered and bruised, was found lodged in a mass of timber in the inundated basement of the Houston Ice and Cold Storage company.

Discovery of the body spurred searchers to an effort to locate the body of a man who is believed to have been swept into the flood water at about the same point and about the same time.

Rehabilitation work began Saturday on a 24-hour basis and continued without cessation throughout Sunday, as workmen toiled to make emergency repairs throughout the devastated areas.

Water Commissioner James H. E. House announced that the central pumping plant, which the flood waters put out of commission at dawn Friday, will be in operation again Tuesday.

Although water pressures have been lower than ordinarily in most sections of the city, emergency measures prevented grave disaster from following in wake of the water plant shutdown.

1,000 ATTEND FUNERAL RITES FOR C. F. DOAN

Church Auditorium Filled To Capacity by Crowd Paying Tribute

SIMPLE SERVICES

Founder of Doan's Trading Post at River Trail Foard Buried

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, June 2.—Approximately 1,000 people gathered here this afternoon to pay a last tribute to C. F. Doan, founder of the Doan's trading post and one of the first settlers of Wilbarger county, who died Friday night after having sustained a fractured hip when he fell while walking earlier in the week.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist church which has the largest seating capacity of any building in Vernon, but it could hardly accommodate the crowd.

The floral offering formed a bank of flowers across the entire front of the church auditorium.

Services Simple

The funeral services were marked by simplicity. A quartet composed of Y. H. Babasin, Mrs. A. E. Harroun, F. E. Murchison, and J. W. Brock Jr., sang two selections, Rev. J. M. Perry, pastor of the Central Christian church, led in prayer, and Rev. C. A. Bickley, pastor of the First Methodist church, briefly reviewed the life of the pioneer during the more than 50 years he resided in what is now Wilbarger county.

The Odd Fellows lodge, of which Mr. Doan was a member, had charge of the services at the grave in East View cemetery.

First Wilbarger Settler

Mr. Doan established the trading post at the Western Trail crossing on Red river in 1878, moving his family here from Wilmington, Ohio. He is said to have been the first settler to bring his family to what later became Wilbarger county. He lived at the scene of the post, which later became the Doan's community, until about two years ago when he moved to Vernon, where he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Bertha Ross. He is survived by Mrs. Ross and another daughter, Mrs. C. W. Igou of Electra.

Texas Lawmakers Slow to Report For Duty in Called Special Meet

Although Speakers Predict Quorum for Both Houses, Few Solons Have Arrived in Capital

AUSTIN, June 2. (AP)—Legislators were slow to respond to Governor Dan Moody's proclamation calling them into second special session Monday at noon.

Few had arrived tonight and those on the ground were expressing surprise at the reluctance with which the members were reporting.

Although he sent word to both houses before adjournment of the first called session two weeks ago that he would convene them again on June 3, he did not issue his formal proclamation until last Thursday.

However, a quorum in both houses was predicted by Lieutenant Governor Barry Miller and Speaker W. S. Barron, who arrived today.

They expressed the belief also that the legislature will be buckled down to the job of considering and passing the general appropriation bills, which are to be ready for distribution in printed form in both houses tomorrow.

In addition to providing for expenses of government during the next biennium, the legislature will undertake to increase revenue for the highway department—it is proposed to make the gasoline tax three or four cents per gallon, instead of two cents, as at present. Registration fees on privately owned passenger automobiles will probably be reduced at least 30 per cent under the present schedule.

Regulation of public utilities, strengthening of the blue sky law, judicial reform, priority in water rights and public education are some of the subjects submitted by Governor Moody. He has indicated he will veto the prison concentration measure passed by the first called session, in which even event he will re-submit this matter.

WOMAN LATELY FREED IN DEATH CASE IS JAILED

Mrs. Catherine Cassler Interrogated in Death Of Domestic

TRIANGLE BARED

Slaying of Cameola Soutar Culmination of Sordid Romance

CHICAGO, June 2. (US)—Mrs. Catherine Cassler, 40, former leader in the W. C. T. U., heard herself accused today of slaying Cameola Soutar, 24, in a jealous rage.

The accusation was hurled at her over the body of the girl in a Hebron, Ind., morgue, by the latter's sweetheart, Chester Johnson, 24, a professional skater.

Although marks of identification were almost obliterated by the dismal Hebron swamp in which the body had lain for a week, Johnson recognized her.

"It's Cammie!" he cried. "Who killed you, Cammie? I know—Mrs. Cassler killed you."

Woman Freed Recently

Mrs. Cassler had been freed a month ago after a two years' imprisonment here, under sentence of death for the killing of William Lindstrom.

The dramatic culmination of a sordid triangle was then unfolded before Chicago and Hebron authorities.

Returning to Hebron, her home town, where she had worked to keep the city free from the stain of liquor, Mrs. Cassler found her home in the possession of her husband, Truman Cassler and a housekeeper—Miss Soutar—for whom his attachment was romantic rather than domestic.

The authorities discovered that Mrs. Cassler had torn off the girl's clothing in her fury, had beaten and reviled her and threatened to kill her.

Boy Finds Body

Then the older woman had decoyed the girl with honeyed words of apology and an offer to pay for the clothes she had torn. That was the last seen of Cameola, until a 10-year-old rare wild flower hunter stumbled over her body in the recesses of a swamp near Hebron.

Truman Cassler, the husband, rattled off the details of his romance with Cameola, admitting he had kept up the affair after his wife's release from the jail in Chicago. He said he had given her money, a statement challenged by Johnson, who had planned to marry Miss Soutar.

From the undertaking rooms the party moved to the county jail at Valparaiso, where all the persons involved in the tragedy were questioned separately.

Mrs. Cassler Quizzed

Mrs. Cassler spoke of her experiences in the Chicago jail, and of the legal technicalities by which she eventually won her freedom. Suddenly Walker Butler, assistant state's attorney snapped—

"Johnson says you killed Miss Soutar. Did you?"

"No," she said.

"You were jealous of her?"

"No," the answer came with a laugh.

"You're pretty cold-blooded."

"Tender-hearted as a chick," said the woman, "the most tender-hearted person in the world."

"What did you do with the gun?"

"I never had a gun."

This statement contradicted information in the possession of the police.

While Mrs. Cassler was in jail, the authorities disclosed, a revolver belonging to her and her clothing were in the home of her sister, Mrs. Grace Stringham, in Chicago. Police said that these were returned when Mrs. Cassler was freed. The sister and a half-brother of Mrs. Cassler, James McAninch, employed by the Illinois Steel company, are being questioned here tonight in connection with the missing revolver.

Johnson, Mrs. Cassler's accuser, added another interesting detail to

DANIEL TELLS OF JEREMIAH

Zedekiah's Rule Likened To That of Kaiser

Events of the closing years in the life of Jeremiah the Prophet, featured by the overthrow of King Zedekiah and Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, were detailed by Roy J. Daniel before the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning in an address on "The Rescue of Jeremiah."

Daniel

The statesmanlike appeals of Jeremiah to Zedekiah, which the vacillating king ignored, called for action which would have prevented the complete destruction of the city of Jerusalem, Mr. Daniel said. The group of princes under whose influence King Zedekiah proved a misguided figurehead was likened to the Junkers of Germany during the reign of Kaiser William, the now-exiled emperor.

With the passing of centuries, and the coming of Christ, Mr. Daniel said, men have learned that citizenship in a world-wide kingdom of spiritual virtue is much more important than citizenship in particular political states.

The address follows:

"Thursday was Memorial day. Memorial day is a day we salute, we bow our heads in reverence, we deck with flowers the graves of our heroic dead of all wars. Their spirits return to us on Memorial day and tell us of their heroic deeds that have made our great nation. We answer that we are still carrying on. We answer that our flag with its 13 alternate stripes of red and white, with its 48 stars upon a field of blue still floats in every breeze and has never gone down in defeat. They bid us not to think of death but to think of life—life which they in their youth gave the passion and bloom of eternal spring. Men who know war have been set apart by their experiences. In their youth their hearts have been set on fire. They learned early that life is a profound and a passionate thing. They learned that success means the application to their work and labors, of mighty hearts. These departed spirits of the soldier dead tell us on Memorial day to hear again and obey the clear clarion bugle calls of duty, of service, of will to noble endeavor.

Citizen of God

"You may be a citizen of Wichita Falls. You may be an inhabitant of Wichita county. You may live in the state of Texas. You are proud to be a citizen of the United States. You—we all—are citizens of this world called the Earth. But more important than being a citizen of any or all of these political divisions and subdivisions is citizenship in the Spiritual Kingdom of God. Are you a citizen of that Kingdom of the spirit when God answers for you this prayer: 'O God Cleanse thou me from secret faults, and create in me a heart without guile.' I shall not become a citizen of that Spiritual Republic until God answers for me that same prayer: 'Cleanse thou me from secret faults. Create in me a heart without guile.'

"Our lesson today deals with the later years of the life of the prophet Jeremiah, and of his relationships with four different persons—with Pashur, a 'cop' of the temple; with Irijah, an army captain; with Ebedmelech, an Ethiopian eunuch, a slave yet a trusted adviser of the king; and with Zedekiah, the last king of Judah. One day in the temple Jeremiah addressed the people and made again his dire prophecy that Jerusalem would be destroyed utterly and completely. Pashur, a peace officer of the temple, heard him and in the name of restoring order in the temple threw Jeremiah in the stocks. You know what the stocks were. His head was locked in a hole in a board. His hands were locked thru two holes. Then some short distance below his hands his feet were placed in two holes, leaving his body to hang down and out—a most disgraceful, disagreeable painful form of torture. A cruel whipping always preceded the placing of a man in the stocks. You remember that in early New England they used the stocks and that the New England school boys would come along and throw rotten eggs at the heads and bodies of the unfortunate victims. One time Paul was placed in the stocks, and when he was released he raised such a cry of protest that he secured an apology. When Jeremiah was released he told Pashur to his face that he was a sorry piece of humanity and that his name would be changed.

Leaves City

"Nebuchadnezzar the Babylonian conqueror with his Chaldean army had besieged Jerusalem. Twice before Jerusalem had been captured by the Chaldeans and many thousands of the people of Judah had been taken captives to Babylon. Jeremiah begged the people of Jerusalem to open the gates of the city, to go out and surrender to Nebuchadnezzar. Nebuchadnezzar received word that Pharoah of Egypt was advancing with an army to aid Jerusalem. He raised the seige temporarily, marched south to meet Pharoah, defeated him decisively, then returned and resumed the seige of Jerusalem. Now while the Babylonian army was gone south, Jeremiah decided he would follow the advice he had given the people and go outside the walls of the city. His plan was to go to the lands belonging to the tribe of Benjamin and homestead a place. Just as Jeremiah was about to go through the gate of the city he was seen by Irijah, a captain of the army of Judah and on watch at the gate. Irijah thoroughly disliked Jeremiah because Jeremiah prophested that the army of Judah would be wiped out by the Babylonians. Irijah arrested Jeremiah, accused him of treason. He placed his charges with the princes, a group that controlled the king. Then the princes went to the king and accused Jeremiah of giving aid and comfort to the enemy, and demanded that Jeremiah be placed in a dungeon. The king said, 'He is in your hands. I can only do what you say. I shall obey your command.' So Jeremiah was lowered with cords into the bottom of a dungeon or filthy pit without water, filled with muck and mire and mud and vermin. Jeremiah sank into the mud. His body became weak and emaciated. His eyes sank into his head. His body became covered with sores and body lice. He was starving to death by slow degrees.

"Ebedmelech, an Ethiopian eunuch and a slave, yet a trusted adviser of King Zedekiah, heard about Jeremiah's plight. He went to the king and said that the princes had done the king a great injustice when they placed Jeremiah in the dungeon. An Ethiopian with his skin as black as the ace of spades yet his heart was pure gold! The king listened to Ebedmelech and told him to take 30 men and rescue Jeremiah. Ebedmelech went to the commissary and secured a lot of old clothes and rags and cords. Then he threw down the old clothes to Jeremiah and told him to place first the old garments under his armpits so that the cords would do as little injury as possible to his emaciated body. Then they pulled him out of the dungeon. Jeremiah prophested that Jerusalem would be spared from destruction, when Jerusalem fell, and that prophecy came true. The king gave orders that Jeremiah would be allowed the freedom of the court yard. I have an idea his court yard was covered with stone and pavement instead of grass as ours is. The king sent cakes to Jeremiah from the king's own bakery on Baker street—the only street of ancient Jerusalem that has come down to us. The food supply of the city was very low and these cakes saved the life of Jeremiah.

Last King

"Now Zedekiah was the last king of Judah. He ruled as a vassal king under the appointment of the great Babylonian Nebuchadnezzar. But Zedekiah, got the idea that he could buck his boss. So inorder that he was he formed an alliance with Pharoah of Egypt and proceeded to disregard his homeard. Jeremiah had advised Zedekiah not to form this alliance with Egypt. Nebuchadnezzar brought his army along and besieged Jerusalem. Things reached a terrible stage. Supplies were cut off. The water supply was cut off, too. Pharoah the ally of Judah was defeated. Zedekiah had read in his history book how the great Hezekiah had gone to the temple to pray and had been assured by the prophet Isiah that the Assyrians would not capture Jerusalem. So secretly Zedekiah sent for Jeremiah. He asked Jeremiah for advice. Jeremiah replied, 'I have given the same message from God for years that I have given you for years. I advise you to open the gates and surrender to the Chaldeans.' Zedekiah did not accept the advice of God's prophet. But the king showed he was a weak character when he asked Jeremiah not to tell the princes that the king had been in conference with him. The king was not a bad man at heart. He was a man who had no will of his own, but was controlled body and soul by the group of princes, much like the Kaiser was by the Junkers of Germany. And Zedekiah and his crowd junked their country like the Kaiser and his Junkers junked Germany. Jerusalem fell. The family of Zedekiah was killed in his presence. The eyes of the traitor Zedekiah were bored out by the orders of Nebuchadnezzar. Two prophecies concerning Zedekiah were made that seemingly contradicted each other yet both came true. One was that Zedekiah would never see Babylon. The other was that he would be taken a slave to Babylon. He was blinded therefore could not see the city yet he was taken there a slave. Nebuchadnezzar gave Jeremiah his choice of going to Babylon or remaining with the few Jews left near Jerusalem. Jeremiah remained with his countrymen. He advised them not to move to Egypt but they went there against his advice and compelled Jeremiah to go with them. In Egypt Jeremiah spent the last years prophesying to the end, which came by stoning from the people of his own race who could not stand the truth. He begged them constantly to turn from idol worship to God of their fathers.

"Jeremiah was a noble citizen of the spiritual world here in the midst of a material world. His great spirit never felt the sufferings of his earthly body. By continued striving let us finally become happy citizens of the kingdom of the spiritual things whose ruler is God the father and whose prime minister is our Lord and savior, the Christ.

"Let us then be up and doing
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

County Officials to Hear Petition For Wichita Dairy Expert June 8

Members of a committee representing dairymen and the Wichita County Bankers association will go before the commissioners court on Monday, June 8, in behalf of the employment of a county dairy expert, John P. Marrs, county judge, announced Sunday afternoon. Arrangements for the meeting with the court were completed at a conference between Judge Marrs and Luke McCrory, chairman of the committee, held Saturday.

The committee, representing business, farming, and dairy interests all over the county, will sponsor the employment of an expert, according to the terms of a recently enacted law, permitting counties to employ such men at a cost not exceeding $7,000 a year. It is understood that the bankers association is offering to finance any legitimate development which may come out of the work of the expert.

Members of the committee which will meet with the court on June 8 include Mr. McCrory, chairman; J. T. Harrell, Carter McGregor, Mayor E. C. Knox, of Iowa Park, R. H. Henry of Burkburnett, and J. A. Wise of Electra.

Judge Marrs said Sunday afternoon that several applications for the proposed position have already been received in his office and would later be laid before the court for its action.

French Fear English Will be Esperanto

PARIS, June 2. (US)—The French fear that English will become a world-wide language through the agency of the American talkies was emphasized today by the announcement that Deputy Gaston Gerard will interrogate the government regarding what measures are to be taken to protect the Latin tongue against the invasion.

Gerard's consternation matches the similar alarm of the Spanish speaking politicians, who fear the American talkies will greatly impair the prestige of their own language.

Deputy Gerard specifically refers to the danger of imposing the English language in French spectacles.

G. C. McGown, county farm agent and demonstrator, returned Sunday night from a trip to Michigan and Ohio on which he purchased 24 head of registered Jersey heifers and bulls for Wichita county farmers and dairymen.

Mr. McGown said that extensive traveling by automobile over the two states was necessary to locate the number of desirable animals required for this and Archer county, stating that buyers from all over the country had taken most of the stock available this spring.

The animals purchased for use in this county include five bulls and 19 heifers. They will be placed in the neighborhood of Electra, Iowa Park and Wichita Falls. Part of them have arrived and have been unloaded, but the remaining number is in transit, Mr. McGown said.

DAVID REED'S HOPE FADES

Senator's Wish to Be President Futile

By Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 2.—One result of the recent flare-up in the senate over the Lenroot roll call "leak" appears to be the serious hobbling of presidential aspirations ascribed to Sen. David A. Reed of Pennsylvania. A propensity for making "wise cracks" which prompted him to make reference to "the so-called ethics of a so-called profession" in discussing the case of Paul Mallon, United Press correspondent, who had assumed responsibility for publishing the roll call despite a senatorial ban, has given the Keystone senator a black-eye with other members of the National Press Gallery and it will be difficult for him to live this down.

Perhaps it is a little unfair to discuss the senator's presidential aspirations when, so far as known, he himself has never discussed them unless with his most intimate friends. However, if he had or still has them there is nothing wrong about that for Senator Reed is a native-born American citizen, who bravely served his country in France, has made an enviable record as a lawyer, holds a commanding place among the conservative senators and is known to have the unlimited backing of the Mellon interests. More than that he has accumulated a substantial fortune and enjoys the duties and responsibilities of public life, besides being under 50 years of age.

All this looks like there might be possibilities, and maybe there are, but, if so, the senator will have to watch his oratorical step. As some of his colleagues might advise him there is lack of judgment in a politically ambitious man wantonly picking a fight with one correspondent but when he gratuitously slurs the entire fourth estate his friends should see to it that he is treated for the simples. It is not so much that vengeful newspapermen thereafter will misconstrue or misquote what he says as it is that his utterances, unless of transcendent importance, will not appear to them of news value. This to a political leader, either of the coming or arrived variety, is very apt to be fatal.

As to Senator Reed, however, this wasn't the first "boner" he has pulled. He tells one on himself which illustrates this propensity. It seems that he was trying a case in which his uncle had been retained as opposing counsel. When it came Senator Reed's turn to address the jury he declared that if he didn't feel he could make a better and more lucid argument in his sleep than the one he had just listened to he wouldn't say anything. This made the uncle angry and he refused to speak to his nephew for three years.

More recently, however, Senator Reed has demonstrated very poor ability as a political guesser. Being one of the staunchest backers of former Senator Geo. Wharton Pepper he said things about William Vare, the Philadelphia boss, during the primary campaign which have since proved very embarrassing, both when he was forced to urge Vare's election and later when trying to force the senate to accept Vare as his colleague. This has created a trying situation for it has left both Vare and the senate somewhat doubtful as to his sincerity. Then, too, Senator Reed was so convinced that the senate would confirm Cyrus Wood to a place on the interstate commerce commission, bitterly opposed by the senators from the Southern coal states, that he had Wood waiting outside the senate chamber so as to receive congratulations and which, it may be said, were never in order.

That Senator Reed is fully cognizant of his own limitations in dealing with members of the press gallery is evidenced by the fact that he picked Theodore A. Huntley, a member of the "so-called profession" to serve as his secretary. Huntley had represented the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette for several years and was and still is highly regarded by his former colleagues in the press gallery. Following the senator's recent faux pas anent the Mallon case his secretary sought to throw oil on the troubled water and invited all members of the press gallery to meet Senator Reed for a friendly discussion regarding newspaper ethics. There are approximately 300 members of the National Press Galleries, most of whom doubtless saw the notice posted on the bulletin board. However, only six availed themselves of the opportunity to learn Senator Reed's views on newspaper ethics at first hand and most of these represent Pennsylvania papers. This may reveal nothing as to the code of ethics practiced by Washington correspondents but it speaks volumes for their esprit de corps.

gressional district, means that the Democrats have drawn first blood in the fight which is to come next year for control of congress. This Kentucky district was carried by the Republicans by 4,006 majority in November.

"In the first test of strength since the advent of the present Republican administration the Democrats have overturned that. Mr. Moore's election by around 1,000 majority cannot fail to convey an important significance as the reaction already being emphasized throughout the country.

Revolt Among Voters

"The popular revolt among voters who see already the betrayal of Republican pledges in the 1928 campaign has been indicated in the widespread condemnation of the pending tariff bill. The Kentucky election expresses that in concrete form.

"It is difficult to overestimate the importance of this Democratic victory. It is a sharp rebuke to the Republican party and an admonition which unheeded must involve the 1930 congressional elections. To Democrats it is more than encouraging. It is almost unprecedented in the rapidity of party recovery from a defeat of seven months ago, representing a turnover of 5,000 votes in a light polling. The psychological importance is indisputable. The practical effects cannot be denied successfully."

DETROIT MURDER MYSTERY DISCLOSED

DETROIT, June 2. (US)—Discovery of the body of Miss Mary Lee, of New York, with her neck broken, in a hotel here tonight caused detectives to investigate the possibility of homicide.

Miss Lee, a graduate of Wellesley and former college athlete, had been in the city with a party of ten girls engaged as a book canvassing crew. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lee, of No. 41 Convent avenue, New York. Her father is a construction engineer, with offices at No. 29 Broadway, New York.

A maid found Miss Lee's body stretched on a bed in the Hotel Fairbairne, about 1:20 p. m. yesterday. At first there was no indication she had come to her death by any other than natural causes. The room was in perfect order.

Miss Lee, who was about 35, was clad in her night clothes. A sheet had been thrown over her. No sooner had the coroner's representatives examined the body than they discovered that her neck had been broken. Her face appeared discolored.

A post mortem examination today confirmed the broken neck.

Both died without regaining consciousness. Miss Wilson had been shot three times in the left temple and Roberts had three bullets in the right temple. They were lying side by side, fully clad, on her bed.

John C. Wilson, father of the young woman, told the police he was convinced that Roberts had slain the young woman and then ended his own life. The couple had been sweethearts since childhood and had been engaged about a year.

Treasury Tightens Up On 'Courtesy of the Port'

WASHINGTON, June 2. (US)—"Courtesy of the port" privileges were sweepingly restricted by the treasury today following disclosure that they have been granted wholesale and have resulted in smuggling.

The orders were a direct outgrowth of the recent liquor charges against Representatives Morgan of Ohio and Michaelson of Illinois, although they took an unexpected form. Both Morgan and Michaelson have been exonerated.

It has been reported the treasury might abolish "free entry," which though less freely granted enables congressmen supposed to be traveling on official business, public officials and diplomats to enter the country without having their baggage examined.

Instead Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman said "free entry" would be continued, as in accord with international custom.

18 INJURED IN STORE BLAST

Black Hand Feud Blamed For Explosion

SCRANTON, Pa., June 20. (AP)—Eighteen persons were injured, one building completely destroyed and several others badly damaged and hundreds of windows were smashed by a dynamite explosion late Saturday night that wrecked the Sterling market, a green goods store on Main street, Dickson City. All of the injured are expected to recover.

The explosion occurred at 11:40 o'clock. Joseph Sabatelli owner of the market, had just closed the store for the night, and was standing in front of the building conversing with James Munley when the blast occurred. Both were hurled across the street. Munley escaped with minor injuries. Sabatelli was badly cut and was taken to a hospital.

Police believe that a black hand feud was responsible for the explosion.

Firemen in searching the ruins this afternoon came across an electric time clock, completely wired. It is believed this was used to set off the dynamite.

Police estimated the explosion damage at $60,000.

Last "Evening of Pleasure" At Forum Features Younger Set

Last of the Knickerbocker studio's "Three Evenings of Pleasure" was produced by actors and actresses of six years or less. The Woman's Forum auditorium and dining room were crowded.

Stage settings were originally beautiful. The tall lighted caldelabra before the altar, the flower wreathed trellis work, hanging baskets and the many sheafs of gladioli made an adorable setting for an adorable kewpie wedding.

Bridesmaids and flower girls followed the appearance of the little soloist in brief and briefer tulle ruffled skirts and fluffs of tulle hats; the little ring bearer marched up the aisle carrying her white satin cushion with tremendous care.

The groom made his appearance (Peggy Gene Kimbrough) in a graceful little dance and then the bride, Bernice Bell, went up the aisle with a wedding veil quite as large as herself and a white satin train about three yards long, held carefully and triumphantly by the diminutive little ruffled Betty Lou Huffman, who made quite a success in her part.

One of the most important and imposing figures on the stage was the parson, Billy Murph, who, through all the procession, had stood in quiet dignity, waiting at the altar to perform the ceremony. He did this with the utmost composure and in a voice that could be heard clearly and his part was applauded highly.

And then the groom unfastened the bride's train (which was decidedly most of her clothes) and in a little satin slip and much veil, she danced a lovely little dance. (The ring bearer kept time.)

Sue Allyn Stripling, the little KGKO artist from Nocona, gave two of her readings next. Her expression is marvelous for a child of her age.

The entire program was good. Betty Lou Huffman, the train bearer, came out as "Peter Rabbit's Sister," and enjoyed her dance as much as her audience. Her costume was perfect, even to the little white cotton tail.

Little Dorothy Van Emden was a lovely "Spanish Baby," round and dimpled and every little movement of her hand showing grace, the big hat tipped on her head, did not hide the flirtatious light in her great darklashed eyes.

Sara Jane Sharpe, as "Goldenrod," was a graceful, rhythmic little figure.

All showed splendid training.

The second setting was a real cabaret of little tables, little chairs, a piano in proportion; gay lights, and on the tables, green bottles with golden necks. One sophisticated little five year old whispered to her mother, "It's not like a cabaret, 'cause they're not talking," and her mother asked gravely, "Were you ever in a cabaret?"

Every number was delightful. Little Erma Kathryn Johnson, who had been ring bearer in the wedding, was a Parisian doll in the cabaret. Betty Jo Wright, as the "Rose" was lovely; Joyce Janice Hale, in "High Hat," and Frances Hope Hamilton as "Glorianne," showed remarkable sense of rhythm and grace, and Peggy Marie Glass, who appeared in many numbers, was, many thought, her best in "Tambourine." Many were enchanted with the sailor dance and with the splendid trained "taps" dancer. "Oriental" was particularly fascinating because it's unusual to see that age in that dance. Last was an Apache dance by Billy Burke Taylor and Paul David Millikin. Billy Burke was such a gay little lassie and Paul Millikin such a sturdy and determined little Apache, she ogling him and he striding after her with such charming sophistication, that the cabaret program closed with a roar of applause.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Saint-Beuve said of Madam Becamier, "She listens with seduction." That is a motto for a good "line" in this age of "lines."

We've just read of a "sevigrous" baby in a Kentucky home and it reminds us of when the first airship flew over the mountains. One old lady stood in her doorway smoking her cob pipe complacently while her husband (and most of her neighbors) crawled beneath the beds. "I ain't never rid astride," she said, "ner played cyards, and I ain't afeered to meet my God."

Ten years ago the 28th of June, the peace treaty was signed. Ten years ago: And yet more than 25,000 war disabled veterans fill the government hospitals and other thousands are struggling under heavy handicaps to support families.

A little boy who had been told that when people died they went to heaven, was taken one day to the cemetery where he thought the graves were nice sand piles. It was explained to him carefully that just as he buried his little dog when it died, so people buried the bodies of those dear to them, when they died. He looked about him curiously. "Is this heaven?" he asked.

Real estate values in America have slightly increased. Uncle Sam paid four cents an acre for 1,000,000 square miles of land when he bought the Louisiana purchase from France.

They're playing marbles now, though it seems awful late. Groups of overalled boys are gathered round bare spaces. You may hear one yell shrilly, "I got first!" and another as loudly, "An' I got last!"

There's a creamy white magnolia blooming in the forum grounds.

This is the season of sore toes because it's the season of the early bare feet. We've seen numbers of them hobbling along.

Last week National Broadcasting company's station WJZ started a search for an amateur news faker who had broadcast "President Hoover has just been assassinated! Vice president Curtis is mortally wounded!" What we are chiefly thankful for is that Mr. Heflin was not present. We know just where the blame would have been laid.

They do talk about the Scotch. Mrs. Johnson, in Chicago, sued her Scotch husband because he wouldn't let her use a vacuum cleaner for fear it would wear out the rugs; he woke before the alarm clock, to save the springs and on July 4 he ran about the house yelling "Boom!" to save firecrackers.

We saw a little boy call "Chum on puppy," to a little cur,—then when the puppy came, he was hit with a switch and ran yelping. We have seen people tenderly led into friendship and then cut with switches of unfaithfulness. Whether they ran or whether they stood with a head held high, was proof of whether they were curs or thoroughbreds.

Life Worth Living Now, He Declares

Wichita Falls Man Gains Seven Pounds on Orgatone and Strength and Energy Returns

"I've gained seven pounds on Orgatone already and feel better than I have in two years," said J. W. Beasley, a well-known painter and paperhanger residing at 506 Adams street, Wichita Falls, Texas, in a conversation with the Orgatone representative, in Allison's Drug Store.

"I was bothered almost constantly with my stomach for about two years," Mr. Beasley continued, "and I would have severe sick headaches almost all the time. Sometimes I could hardly bear to stand up. I suffered so, and even when I would lie down it didn't seem like I could get any relief. I felt dull and listless and without any strength or energy and I was so racked by the pain that I kept on falling off in weight and my nerves started going to pieces so that I couldn't sleep hardly any. Then on top of all these troubles I suffered from gas formation, which just made life miserable for me and no matter what I did or what treatments I took, nothing seemed to do me any good, but I just kept going down hill and getting worse from day to day.

"I read a lot of statements in the papers about Orgatone from Wichita Falls people that I knew or had heard of and some of them described their troubles just like mine, so I decided to try the medicine, too. Well, sir, it did me a lot more good than I ever hoped it would. After the first few doses my stomach eased so I could eat without suffering any afterwards and I began feeling better every day. The pain stopped and my nerves didn't seem to be on edge like they had been and I could sleep in peace once more. I have just finished my first bottle and I can truthfully say I am feeling one hundred per cent better and I have gained seven pounds in weight and my strength and energy is coming back and I feel fine—like life is worth living again. All those pains in my head, which I have been trying to get rid of for two long years, are gone and my stomach seems all right now. Orgatone was the right medicine and was just the thing I had been looking for all the time and I am always ready to pass the good word on and let others know what Orgatone will do."

Children Not Helped By Disgruntled Parents

Parents Who Avoid the Divorce Courts "for the Sake of the Children" Sometimes Forget That a Home That Is Filled With Strife Will Warp Their Natures More Effectually Than Mere Separation.

The great majority of disgruntled husbands and wives seem to think that so long as they stop short of divorce they have a right to make their homes a battleground and fight as much as they please before their children. Even the most callous and selfish men and women hesitate about the breaking up of their homes. They have seen too many half-orphaned youngsters lacking a father's restraining or a mother's guidance running wild. They have seen too many cynical, disillusioned, part-time children, old in a sorbid knowledge of life before they were old in years, shuffled about like little pawns between mother and father. They know that whatever divorce may do towards solving the wrongs of the individual man or woman, it takes its toll of the children. They are the hapless victims that are offered up as sacrifices for their parents' sins.

Because of this knowledge of the disastrous effects that a broken-up home has upon children, many men and women continue to live together long after they have come to hate each other and when, one might almost say, they have agreed to disagree, so persistently do they quarrel over every subject under the sun. Every topic provokes an acrimonious debate. Every act of either party calls forth biting criticism. No word is too harsh, no invective too insulting for husband and wife to hurl at each other. Every meal is flavored with bitterness and gall. Every evening is passed in tense silence, loaded with menace or else in a free-for-all scrimmage.

There is no peace nor rest in such a home. It is like living in the core of a storm center, and yet, ironically enough, the men and women who maintain these places of torment will tell you that they are doing it for the sake of their children and in order to keep a home together for them.

Having thus secured to their children the outer semblance of a home, they consider that they have done their full duty and are free to violate its spirit. It does not occur to them that a home is nothing, and less than nothing, unless serenity and tolerance and self-control and courtesy and kindness abide in it.

It is strange that husbands and wives seem to think that how they get along together is their own personal affair and that if they choose to scrap like cats and dogs it is their privilege to do so. Still a stranger that they appear to have no realization of the effect of their conduct on their children.

Without shame of concealment, they will stage these disgraceful scenes in which the father will call the mother a fool and deride her judgment and ridicule her opinions, and lambast her for the extravagance and bad management and apply to her the lowest of epithets and mother will retort by dragging every weakness and fault of father's out into the light.

And the men and women, drunk with their own anger and jealousy and disappointment, who are indulging in this orgy of recrimination never stop to consider that the children who are listening wide-eyed and open-eared are having every particle of respect for both parents killed.

For children do not know how to make allowance for the passion of the moment. They lack the ability to form unbiased judgments. So, if they have grown up hearing their father call their mother a fool, they believe her to be a poor, weak, brainless creature whose opinion is not worth considering, and if they have listened to their mother recite the litany of their father's sins, they have no reverence for him.

Worse still, many parents embitter their children's lives by forcing them to take sides in the struggle between them and thus they sow the seeds of an unnatural enmity. In her morbid craving for sympathy, mother complains to the children of father's treatment of her and makes them feel that he is a cruel tyrant. In his exasperation, father is always gibing at mother until the children become partisans of one or the other and have their young souls saddened by things they should not know.

No complaint is made oftener by parents than that their children do not honor them nor respect their opinions. When that happens, nine times out of ten the fathers and mothers are to blame themselves. They lost their children's respect in their quarrels, for husbands and wives write each other's price tags for their children and they accept father's valuation of mother and mother's valuation of father.

Children can no more grow up morally and mentally sane and sweet and sound in a discordant home than they could grow up healthy in a jungle that reeked of poison. Constant bickering and strife will warp their very natures. It will make them hard and cynical and kill their belief in everything that is sweet and good and altruistic.

And it will not only send them away from home at the earliest possible moment, for they flee from a place of strife as from purgatory, but it robs them of one of the most precious possessions that any human being can ever have, the memory of a childhood home that was filled with love and tenderness and that was a calm haven from which one set sail on the sea of life.

Nor is this all. The relationship of the father and mother affect not only the child's happiness, but its physical wellbeing as long as it lives; one famous nurologist going so far as to say that he has never known a case in which a man or woman who had parents who loved each other and got on harmoniously together ever had a nervous breakdown.

And such being the case, does it not seem worthwhile for parents to forgo the pleasure of their daily spat for the sake of their children?

Curious Visitors Take Hoover Home Effects

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—The zealousness of souvenir hunters has necessitated placing plain clothes police around the home of President Hoover in Palo Alto, Calif., to save it from depredations.

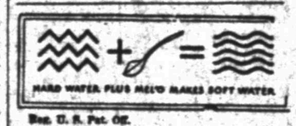

Word was received at the White house recently that rosebushes and shrubbery as well as parts of the house were being taken away by visitors.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. Gertrude Butts, 414 S. Market St., Mt. Carmel, Pa.

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 2. (AP)—Wickenburg's hermit, Andrew Newton, 58, who says he is from Eastern Kansas, has been committed to the Arizona state insane asylum for observation.

Authorities here said Newton told them he believed some hypnotist had placed him under a spell which makes him believe some one is after him.

Training Wives

One hears a good deal about training husbands, as if husbands were prospective circus material.

Almost every bride-to-be listens to much sage advice anent the importance of the first few months of marriage and the necessity, stressed by older women friends, of assuring the right habits through proper "training."

You train a husband to pick up his clothes, be prompt for meals, ring up if he is detained, beg for evenings with the boys, show solicitude for those chronic headaches of yours, and cough up an allowance on the first of every month. These excellent habits are guaranteed to render happy marriages happier and even to mitigate the wretchedness of an incompatible alliance.

There is no doubt that they do.

But the odd thing is that husbands have never glimpsed the glorious possibilities of wife training—or if they have, they have wisely, perhaps, kept the vision a secret.

The shrinking bridegroom is not instructed in the gentle art of establishing useful habits in his life partner.

No respected man friend warns him of the all-importance of those first few months. And yet if the marriage is not to be a one-sided happiness it is essential that his rights and his personality be considered.

Right at the start any wise husband will impress upon his wife the conviction that "nerves" are not a virtue but a bore, that illness should not be boasted about.

He will also establish firmly the truth that every man longs for masculine society and that his seeking it does not indicate a waning of his love for his wife.

If he has a care for the future peace and happiness of home he will furthermore be at pains to point out that dollars do not grow on lamp-posts or bushes, that family's expenditures should not equal its income and that he would appreciate his wife's assistance in thrift.

And finally he will implant the idea that a husband is not merely a cash-register of complaints; that a husband is not demanding too much when he asks for consideration on his homecoming a chance to rest, relax, put on a dressing-gown and refuse to go a-dancing.

Betty Brainerd will be glad to help her readers with their problems. Send a self addressed stamped envelope to her in care of this paper.

Herbert Kaufman's
THE SPARK PLUG OF JAPAN
Daily Editorial

ADDISON, Chesterfield, Chateaubrian, Taylerand, Bonaparte, Clive, Jefferson and Washington possessed but the haziest of ideas about Japan. Isolated by religion and by law, Nippon wended her course through the centuries unnoted and uncoveted, her Mikado a mere figurehead, the Tycoon in supreme command and her shotguns scheming and intriguing, a medieval people even when steam boat and locomotive were plotting economic revolution throughout western civilization.

Dutch merchant men occasionally drifted into her ports and at the peril of their lives traded with potters and weavers but Japanese mariners were restrained under penalty of death from venturing away from local coasts. Junks were limited in size by decree so that even though the spirit of Columbus or a Marco Polo stirred within her sailors none might challenge the great waves and pursue his imagination beyond horizon dealings.

When Commander Perry steered his tiny frigates into her waters Japan was a primitive as the England of Arthur's day. Mutsuhito, the mikado, who barely a year old. At the age of 15 the burden of state was thrust upon him. His childhood had been lived in the shadows of mysticism.

The soldiers surrounding his palace, weird creatures panoplied in lacquered mail and armed with bow and lance, maintained vigilant watch lest some impious subject might chance to look upon the sacred face of the scion of the sun as he gazed out of his prison window upon his paper house capital.

Not a wisp of factory smoke floated to the heavens nor did the wheeze of a single engine strike his ear. On July 29, 1912, 60 years after his birth and 45 years after his ascent to the throne, Mutsuhito breathed his last upon the vastest miracle in all the astounding annals of history. Within the span of one life he viewed progress as no other race attained in a thousand years.

THE clangor of triphammers, the puffing of trains, the hum of trolleys, the whir of printing presses, the click of telegraph, the jingle of phone bells, the buzz of power looms resounded in a triumphant paean to celebrate the closing of his reign. Dreadnaughts lay at anchor in his harbors.

The new social order pervaded his realm. Democracy had levelled all ranks. Armed bullies no longer strutted the streets. Samurai and the sons of Samurai bent over ledgers and held throttles and trafficked in market place and shop and stock exchange. Shoulder-strapped peasants and peasants' children risen to estates taboo to their humble sires patrolled the decks of cruisers and planned maneuvers for an irresistable army corps.

Within his time two mighty nations, the Chinese and the Russian, had tasted the valorous invincible steel of his forces.

Hospitals, schools, universities, colleges, libraries, were sprouting in every city. The first power of the universe had sued for alliance with his people. He accomplished more than fiction as its boldest would have dared conceive possible and lifted an empire and its subjects to the peaks of his own dreams.

With Mutsuhito standing upright in his grave, let no man discount human prowess.

One of the bills proposed in congress would let farmers manufacture beer and wine. At least that would relieve the tedium.

La Follette Runs True to Form

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, the elder, was one of the greatest champions of the rights of the people that this republic has known. Robert M. La Follette, the son of a great sire, runs true to form. He believes that a public servant cannot serve two masters. He does not believe in star chamber sessions. He believes that the people should be told at all times by the representatives of the press the real news of congressional action. This is his defi to the senators who stand for closed door sessions and the secret vote on confirmation of presidential appointees, speaking in defense of his right as a senator to disclose his vote to the people of Wisconsin:

"If that be a violation of an obligation of a senator in this body, then I invite the rules committee or the chamber itself to take cognizance of the fact that I'm perfectly willing to fight out the issue on the floor of the senate as to whether a man is more solemnly obligated under the constitution to his constituency in telling how he votes upon an important public matter or whether he is more obligated to the rules of the senate. If this body should decide that that is ground for expulsion I welcome the submission of that issue to the electorate of the state of Wisconsin."

Senator McKellar of Tennessee insists that closed sessions of the senate should be abandoned. Senator Black of Alabama is the author of a resolution directing the senate "hereafter to pass upon all nominees in open session." The Black resolution should be adopted.

Senators who idle behind closed doors should be taught that the people are the masters and to quote from an editorial in a Texas contemporary, "they have an indisputable right to know the basis of the senate's action on every appointment and certainly they are entitled to know how the senators voted on this, as on every other matter."

A senator should not be permitted to serve two masters. A senator should be taught that a public office is a public trust, that he is a servant of the American people and he should vote in the open at all times.

Garner Warns the Mohair Producers

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN N. GARNER is the ranking Democratic member of the ways and means committee and minority leader of the house. He has warned Texas goat raisers, who produce practically all the mohair of the country, that they stand to lose large sums of money during the next several years unless an amendment to the Republican tariff bill providing for an increase of the duty on low grade wools is admitted to the bill.

Texas sheep and goat raisers asked for an increase of duty on low grade wools to 31 cents a pound. It was denied by the makers of the bill. They retained the 24 and 26 cent duties on the low grade wools, although raising the duty on higher grades. Representative Garner says these low grade wools came into the country in large quantities competing directly with Texas mohair.

There isn't a woolen factory in Texas. There isn't a mohair mill in Texas. Makers of things are all powerful under the big dome in the city of Washington. They demand low grades of foreign wool. This enables them to hammer down the price of Texas mohair.

Funds for the Law Enforcement Commission

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S law enforcement commissioners have a fund of $250,000 to supply the sinews of war. This sum was appropriated by congress at the last session for "an inquiry into prohibition enforcement." There is no fund for the salaries of the commissioners. They must serve without pay until an appropriation is made. It is uneconomic to vote $500,000,000 as a fund to stabilize the prices of wheat and cotton for the farmers, but it is patriotic to appropriate a quarter of a million dollars to defray the expenses of 10 gentlemen and one lady making a study of a noble experiment and to devise methods to make it a successful noble experiment. A statesman is a wonderful achievement of the Almighty.

Tunney and the Gold Diggers

"GENTLEMAN GENE" TUNNEY retired from the prize ring after having won the championship of the world and accumulated a fortune of $1,000,000. He married a girl heiress to $40,000,000. He became a Shakespearan interpreter, a student of the classics, a globe trotter and courted the society of intellectuals.

Now the gold diggers are on his trail.

A woman has sued him for $500,000 damages as balm for a broken heart; her divorced husband has sued him for a large sum as balm for a cracked heart. And the eastern tabloid newspapers are pouring it on.

Gold diggers are found in every land under the sun and gold diggers are said to make hay while the sun is shining.

Why Presidents Die Young

("President Hoover's week-end trouting trip was a failure due to the fact that an army truck carrying his tackle did not arrive on time."—News item.)

PHILLIPS

Scene: Porch of a cabin on President Hoover's fishing preserve. The president has been waiting all day for his fishing-tackle.

President (cupping his ear): Wasn't that a rumble?

Secretary (listening): I don't hear anything, sir.

President: I thought I heard wagon wheels. Hasn't the truck been even located yet?

Secret Service Man: I'm sorry to say we haven't been able to get a single report on it, beyond the fact that it left Washington this morning.

President: Imagine being out here for a week-end fishing and no fishing-tackle!

Native Guide (ironically): You must have a lot of powerful heavy trout-tackle to have to get it by army truck. What're you goin' troutin' with, artillery or sumpin?

President: It isn't merely tackle; I've got boots, clothes, nets and all the filing cabinets aboard.

Guide: Filing cabinets?

President: Certainly. They contain complete card-indices showing the species and sizes of all trout in this section, the pools, rapids, rocks, ripples, seasonal appetites, habits, etc.

Guide: I should've thought you might have fetched a rod and line with you and jest fished sort of haphazard like till the truckload of data got in.

◇ ◇ ◇

Secret Service Man: I never knew an army truck to get any place on time yet, and I spent three years in France.

The President: The next time I go trout-fishing I'll have my supplies brought up by the navy.

Guide: The navy can't get into this wilderness, sir.

President: Well, neither can the army.

◇ ◇ ◇

Secretary: I wonder what can have happened to that truck.

President: Probably army red tape.

Secret Service Man: That's it. Just about the time the truck got a mile outside of Washington some army bureau colonel missed it and told a major-general. The major-general took the matter up with a couple of brigadiers who looked up the records and found the driver of the truck had the wrong kind of buttons on his coat. An order was flashed through to hold up the truck pending a full inquiry. After about 10 hours it was found the truck was being sent out on the president's orders. It was then released, only to be detained again a few minutes later because some army office secretary discovered that the order sending you the truck had been typed on the wrong kind of paper.

President (pacing the porch): Imagine an army truck taking all day to get here? Why, it's almost as slow as if it were carrying ammunition to a hard pressed regiment!

Secretary: I heard some twigs crackle just now.

President: Maybe it's coming up at last.

Guide (as a lad of about 12 comes along a path with a rod over his shoulder): It's just a kid.

President: Any luck, sonny?

The Boy (showing a dozen big ones): Got these in the last half hour, mister. They're just startin' to bite.

The President (collapsing in the arms of his secretary): Is there no justice?

One More Test

Elmer Twitchell suggests that about all that's left for Clyde Van Dusen, the Kentucky Derby winner, to do to establish his supremacy is to swim the English channel.

Yale has abandoned the ancient custom of class balloting for the "most likely to succeed," "handsomest man," etc. The students there are so busy dodging derricks, team-shovels and trucks loaded with steel beams that they haven't time for traditions.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"I don't like the way she's always talking about people; guess what she told me about Gert."

The Day Book of a New Yorker
Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, June 2.—The other day I attended a very interesting, informal and chummy little luncheon which provided a few surprises. Attending it were some who may be considered as comprising the inner circle of American publishing and literary interests.

On my left was Dr. Arthur Torrance, the author of "Tracking Down the Enemies of Man." Somehow, I had suspected that he was a gruff old fellow who, having spent so much time in the wilds and dark places of the world, might be disposed to sneer at all of us enjoying the comforts of civilization.

"No, it makes me smile," he said, "as I sit here and think that way back in Africa some of my friends are sitting around campfires or journeying through wilds. For eight years, while there, I used to sit near a camp fire and dream of being back here and attending a luncheon such as this. Adventure I guess, lies in retrospection."

Dr. Torrance is about the most traveled man I ever met. Once he was with Lawrence in Arabia, once he traveled with Trader Horn, or at other times he was fighting germs in tropical countries or journeying through Asiatic deserts. He's anxious to get back to the wilds and when he gets there, he'll be anxious to return home.

Lined up off my right at this same luncheon were Joan Lowell, that much discussed young lady who rocked the critics with her "Cradle of the Deep," and Captain Nelson Benson. Perhaps few recall the time when the captain's boat was sunk beneath him. Twice, as a matter of fact, this has happened. I asked the captain if he was through with the sea.

"I'm pretty old," he said. "But that isn't it. They don't have any wind-jammers any more. All steam and oil or something I don't understand. My kind have outlived their usefulness on the sea."

A little later I noticed he and Miss Lowell engaged in serious conversation, punctuated by ecstatic cries from both, and it was revealed that Captain Benson at one time served as second mate on two of Miss Lowell's father's ships. Its a small world or something like that, after all.

Miss Lowell, by the way, is anything but a roustabout you'd expect to meet. Very charming, sophisticated and an excellent conversationalist. Some of her sea terms, liberally sprinkled in her speech, had me baffled, but not irritated, as they were spoken without affection and with unconscious simplicity.

Arthur T. Vance, editor of the Pictorial Review, also at the intimate gathering, didn't seem to be worried so much about the state of literature or the manuscript market as he was about a new boat he recently purchased. It's about 60 feet long, the Pandora III, and he does quite a bit of cruising about in it. He is commodore of the Port Washington (L. I.) Yacht club and has played ships captain to some famous men. Carl Sandburg, the poet; Albert Wiggman, author of "The New Decalogue of Science," and quite a few others have taken orders from Commodore Vance. He makes them do their share of work on board, guests or no guests.

I noticed that James R. Crowell, well known short story writer also at the luncheon, was counseling Mr. Vance about his ship. Writing was the last thing on their minds. It is a relief to find yourself among writers who do not talk shop. Maxwell Aley, one of the editors of Woman's Home Companion; Arthur McKeogh, associate editor of Red Book, also were there.

M. Lincoln Schuster, perhaps the most energetic of present day publishers, and George Bye, the literary agent, sat about talking enthusiastically. About Canada, maybe; people seem to talk enthusiastically about Canada, unless they're going to Europe.

And Mr. Bye, incidentally was busy in a conversation with Walter Howey, famous newspaper editor and prototype of the fiery managing editor of the stage success, "The Front Page." Seems Bye and Howey were rivals in the days when airplanes were in their infancy. They had much to say about the time when the Wright Brothers and Curtiss were fighting for air supremacy.

Mr. Howey is anything to appearance but the harsh, hardboiled newspaper editor he is reported to be. His manner is gentle and kind but he has the sort of jaw which indicates that once he starts into a tirade there will be an earthquake or a revolution before he finishes.

Famous for his exploits in Chicago, Howey is still true to the ideals and principles of Chicago newspapermen. He thinks they're far superior to New York reporters characterizing the latter as "young fellows who carry canes, sport spats and wear trick mustaches."

DEMOS HOPE TO WELD PARTY

But Bishop Cannon Keeps Up Agitation

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

WASHINGTON, June 2. (UP)—Democratic leaders are hopeful of re-welding their party fragments in time for next year's congressional elections despite efforts of Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, to prolong the party schism until the present national leadership is repudiated.

Bishop Cannon appealed today to anti-Smith Democrats of Virginia to refuse to support any candidate for governor in the state elections this coming fall who voted for and who did not publicly criticise Governor Smith. He urged the nomination of an independent anti-Smith Democratic candidate for governor.

Swanson Says Nothing

Senator Swanson, one of those in control of the regular Virginia Democratic organization, declined to comment today on Bishop Cannon's appeal, but those familiar with the state situation predicted the regular Democratic ticket would win anyway. One national party leader here said the only affect of Bishop Cannon's appeal for an anti-Smith ticket would be to split the vote, which otherwise might go to the Republicans. Senator Carter Glass, also powerful in Virginia Democratic politics, feels the party will be united successfully in the state election.

The Virginia fight is attracting national attention because it is the first opportunity to ascertain whether the Republican inroads which Mr. Hoover made in the South are to have any lasting effect.

Raskob Stays

It can be said with utmost assurance, however, that Raskob has no intention of getting out as national chairman. He has just provided for a sumptuously furnished suite of offices in the National Press building here in charge of Jouett Shouse of Kansas, chairman of the executive committee of the Democratic national committee. Shouse's job is to perfect the reassembling of the party machinery in the southern states which bolted last fall and to extend party organization into northern states where it has been weak before—states like the Dakotas and Minnesota, where if the present low wheat prices continue in spite of farm relief legislation, Democrats hope to find much support in the 1930 congressional elections.

Shouse has been in conferences with political leaders of several of the disaffected southern states. They are all confident that most of the disaffection of the last campaign was due to the religious issue and they anticipate that this disappeared when Governor Smith retired.

BEEF FEEDING NEW INDUSTRY

Briscoe County Farmers Get Co-Operation

Special to The Record News.

SILVERTON, Texas, June 2.—A local milling company is installing a sweet feed mill and arranging for 100 additional horse-power to meet the demand of Briscoe county's youngest industry, the feeding-out of beef cattle for market. Two baby beeves that were shipped out the first of May are credited with being the first fed-out cattle to go out from this county. These were two high-grade Herefords handled by Cecil Vaughn, a vocational student, and they topped the market and had only five pounds each shrinkage in transportation.

The management of the new sweet feed mill, which will handle grain sorghums that are the basic yields of this section, states that he has received sufficient assurance from stockmen over the county to justify the mill, and one farmer plans to feed-out two hundred head of beef cattle during the year.

It is a big stride to go from the first of this nature by a youth to dozens of stockmen feeding out several hundred head, purchasing the balanced ration in a home factory that uses the county's farm products, all in less than a year's time.

Oil Importation Curb Planned at Conference

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 2. Health And Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

The Meaning of Acidosis

The blood of the human body must remain alkaline during life, and serious illnesses result when the presence of acids in the blood stream reduces it toward a neutral chemical reaction. Actual acidity of the blood stream never occurs during life, for if it did it would quickly result in death. The term "acidosis" covers a number of things, but it frequently is used to indicate a lessened alkalinity of the blood.

We know that the blood is formed out of what we eat, drink, and breathe. Some foods leave more alkaline end products and others leave more acid end products to be eliminated. The acidity or alkalinity of the food before it is eaten has no connection with the reaction after it is consumed. The fruit acids, for instance, are converted into carbonic acid just as are the sugars, and this acid is thrown out by the lungs as carbon dioxid and does not make the body acid. On the other hand, other foods containing an abundance of phosphorus, sulphur, nitrogen, or chlorin, may leave an acid reaction after being consumed, even though they are alkaline before being eaten.

Many doctors are coming to the belief that a strong alkaline reaction of the blood is one of the best defenses of the body against many diseases. This can only be accomplished by eating a large quantity of the alkaline-forming foods. Some acid-forming foods may be eaten and are in fact necessary, but they should be less abundant.

When acidosis occurs from eating too much acid-forming food, we observe a strongly acid urine, acid sweat, acid mouth and sour stomach. Some of the symptoms may be headache, biliousness, heart burn, insomnia, and irritability. Often some disease is produced, usually heart trouble, kidney disease, liver congestion, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, apoplexy, and poor circulation.

The human race has existed for a long time, even without knowing anything about the chemistry of foods. This is because the eliminative organs maintain a delicate adjustment of the blood's chemistry and eliminate an excess of alkali or acid.

It is difficult for one who is not an expert chemist to understand the exact changes which take place with food substances in the body while they are undergoing assimilation. It is my desire to give my readers the benefit of scientific research in the chemical laboratories, but I do not think it wise to use too many scientific terms which may prove confusing.

In tomorrow's article I will give my readers a list of the alkaline-forming and acid-forming foods and the proportion of each that should be used. You will then realize from another viewpoint why I recommend so many of the leafy green vegetables.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Catarrh

Question— H. E. M. writes: "Just clearing my throat brings up little sacks of clear mucus. Do you think this is necessarily a forerunner of tuberculosis?"

Answer: The little sacks you mention are simply the exudations of catarrhal phlegm and cannot be considered the forerunner of tuberculosis. Of course, an extreme catarrhal condition may develop into tuberculosis, but your problem now is to get rid of your catarrh, which you can do by living on a mucusless diet.

Baby's Head Perspires

Question: Mrs. F. W. W. writes: "My baby nine months old has for several months been subject to a profuse perspiration which occurs only when she is sleeping or nursing, and the strange part is that the condition manifests only at the head. Will you tell me if this is an indication of anything wrong and what measures I can take to overcome it?"

Answer: You will understand that it is difficult for me to give you a definite statement without having the opportunity of examining your baby. Excessive perspiration of the head, if not due to the fact that the baby has on too much clothing or the warmth of your own body while nursing him, is sometimes a sign of rickets, or a tendency to rickets, and this can be overcome by adding orange juice to his diet.

Drug Sensitiveness

Question: F. L. writes: "I have been in the embalming business for the past 20 years. During the past two years I cannot stand the fluids on my hands, formalin being the most damaging. Small blisters appear on my fingers and in time open and my hands become very sore. I have seen different doctors, and they all agree I should get out of the business. My blood tests okay. What is your opinion?"

Answer: You have probably developed an extreme sensitiveness to formalin. Sometimes this can be overcome by the use of a fasting and dieting regime. The regime will prove helpful in increasing the alkalinity of the blood and your general resistance. If this treatment does not produce the desired effect, the best thing would be to change your occupation or to possibly make changes in the formulas which you employ.

SHREVEPORT, La., June 2.—Behind the heavy hitting of Pete Turgeon, who hit three doubles in the first game and one double in the second, the Spudders rode to victory over the Sports in both ends of a double header here Sunday. The scores were 7 to 5 and 9 to 4.

Poor pitching was responsible for the locals' defeat. They used three hurlers in the first game and two in the second and none ere effective.

Steengrafe started and failed for the Spudders in the first but Payne came to his relief in the eighth inning to save the contest. Payne went back on the hill in the second game and after a bad first inning held the home club safe.

Flushed with their double triumph, which pulled the Sports from first place and halted their own losing streak that had extended to five straight, the Spudders headed homeward tonight to open a five-day stand Monday at Athletic park. The Dallas Steers are foes of Galloway's men tomorrow.

Spuds Start Scoring

The first three innings of the opening game were scoreless.

To start the fourth Bennett walked and Stapleton grounded out to Whelan who made an unsuccessful attempt to catch Bennet at second after touching first base. Swenson doubled to left field and Bennett scored. Sullivan rolled out to pitcher and Lapan was given a pass. Steengrafe dropped a single in center field and Swenson scored. Benton hit to short and Steengrafe was out at second.

The scoring started again in the seventh when Benton hit a hot single through the pitcher's box after one was out. Turgeon doubled to left field and Fitzgerald scored Benton and Turgeon with a double to center. Bennett was safe on Whelan's fumble. Stapleton flied to center and Fitzgerald scored. Swenson flied to center field.

Sports Tally in Eighth

Two more runs were turned in by the Spudders when pitcher Williamson relieved Brown at the start of the eighth inning. With one out Lapan hit safe. Steengrafe bunted and Williamson booted the ball and then threw wild to first and Lapan scored and Steengrafe went to third. Benton rolled out to Williamson but Turgeon doubled to left field and Steengrafe scored. Fitzgerald walked and both runners moved up on a wild pitch. Bennett hopped to short.

Two were out in the eighth inning when the Sports broke through Steengrafe's defense and bunching hits put over their first scores. Cashion paved the way for the scoring by drawing a pass. Langford singled to right field and Cashion scored on Cox's single to center. Starr cleared the bases with a triple to right center and scored on Woehrs' double to left field. Deviveros singled to left and Woehrs scored. Payne relieved Steengrafe and Estrada batting for Williamson rolled out to second.

Second Opens With Bang

The second game found both clubs scoring heavily in the first inning, the Spudders tallying three times and the Sports coming back to score four.

Estrada forced Benton to pop to left field to start the game but Turgeon drew a walk. Fitzgerald followed with a single to left field and Bennett cleared the sacks with a homer over the left field wall. Stapleton was hit by a pitched ball and Thompson relieved Estrada on the hill and Swenson and Sullivan were retired on infield popups.

Whelan greeted Payne with a single to center and Stewart was safe on a roller that Benton fumbled. Cashion fanned. Langford hit to second the Turgeon booted the ball and when Sullivan tried to recover the ball he booted it and both Whelan and Stewart scored and Langford went to second. Cox drew a pass and Holman singled to left field and Langford and Cox scored and Holman went to second when Bennett fumbled the ball. Deviveros and Tobin skied out.

Break Helps Sports

The hitters slowed down for the next three innings though the Sports got a lucky break in the fourth. With two out, Crouch walked and Payne doubled to the left field fence. Crouch crossed home plate but was sent back to third on account of ground rules that allowed for only two bases on a ball hit into the crowd. Benton then fouled to Tobin to retire the side.

In their half of the fourth the Sports made a big threat to increase their lead. Tobin walked after one was out and Thompson flied to center. Whelan hit to the left field wall and Tobin went to third base. Whelan tried to make second on his blow and was caught in a chase. Tobin started for home while the play was on for Whelan at second and Tobin was then run down between home and third.

Turgeon put the Spudders back on an even footing in the fifth by opening the inning with a home run over the left field wall. Later in the inning Bennett doubled but died on base.

With a great rally in the seventh the Spudders forged to the front. Benton opened with a single and Turgeon doubled. Fitzgerald walked. On a squeeze-play Benton scored when Stapleton bunted safe in front of the plate. Tobin and Benton collided at the plate and Tobin narrowly escaped serious injury. Swenson cleared the sacks with a three bagger to right field and scored on Sullivan's fly to center field.

Huge Crowd Sees Auto Races Here

George Barringer Captures Feature Contests

A huge throng, one of the largest crowds that ever saw auto races here, attended yesterday's interesting program of speed events at the Fairgrounds track.

The class A race started promptly at 3 o'clock as scheduled and had as the six starters the fastest cars on the track. The event was a nip-and-tuck affair that kept the fans on their feet throughout. George Barringer, driving Frontenac No. 21 took first place and was closely followed to the line by Cotton Greble in Chrysler No. 11 and Harry Norris piloting his Chevvy No. 50.

Evans Wins Class B

The class B race, which was turned in the time of 3:23, was won by Hotfoot Evans piloting Fronty No. 33 and like the preceding event the victor was dogged throughout by the other money winners. R. O. Graves took second and Art Hutcheson of Oklahoma City, piloting a Whippet special, took third. Eight cars took part in the event.

At this stage of the proceedings Don C. Onley, starter and referee, explained to the audience the races scheduled for next Sunday at the track. The event is the second annual 100-mile race for modified stock cars. Last year 23 cars were on the line and this year 30 entries are already in and the list does not close until next Saturday night. Stock cars entered are piloted by drivers who follow as professionals the various stock events in the country.

The third race of yesterday's card was a three-cornered match race for the fastest cars on the track. The event was won in the time of 3:20 by Barringer, with Greble and the Chrysler No. 11 and Harry Norris in his Chevvy again following in the order named. The last lap of the race saw the lead change and Barringer take his second win of the day.

Hutcheson Takes Hot Race

The straw hat derby, presented as a consolation event, kept the fans roaring from the start to the finish. The winner was Art Hutcheson in his Whippet and Reves driving No. 8. They were the only two who finished with their hats on.

The final event of the card, open to the winners and next fastest cars, saw 10 entries take the line in what proved to be a thrilling race. The 25-mile event was turned in the time of 14:32 with Barringer again taking first money. Harry Norris with an exhibition of thrilling driving, took second money. Cotton Greble drove a good race, using his head to a distinct advantage in carrying out his idea of a consistent speedy pace with reserve to carry him ahead when threatened by a foe. His third place was his third win of the day in a car which he had never piloted before. The three money winners were neck and neck most of the way with the lead changing several times before the checkered flag.

Jack Hale Wins City Golf Title

Tommy Cochran Defeated, 6 and 5, on Muny Links

Jack Hale, president of the Weeks Park Golf club, yesterday won the city open amateur championship tournament sponsored by the Wichita Falls Junior chamber of commerce. Hale defeated Tommy Cochran, a former state amateur champion, 6 and 5 over the municipal course.

A well-rounded game, marked by particular brilliance in his short shots, including superb putting, carried Hale to victory. Cochran was somewhat off his game in approaching and putting, but the sort of golf played yesterday by Hale would have been a match or better for Tommy at his very best.

Cochran was tournament medalist.

F. C. Barron won the class B honors of the tournament by beating Floyd Putty in the final round, 3 and 2, L. O. Shudde won class C by defeating M. T. McLaughlin, 2 and 1, and H. S. Gordon disposed of C. E. Parker, 4 and 3, in the finals of class D.

Phil Hesler, professional of the Weeks Park course, was in charge of the tournament.

How Much Proselyting or Paying?

College athletics today are far from being perfect, but there are few perfect things. All that one can say is that conditions are much better than they were a few years ago. The Iowa case in the Western conference has stirred up an endless amount of argument as to how many universities and colleges are either proselything athletic talent or paying certain stars in one fashion or another.

This is something beyond proof. Quite a little of it is going on around the country. But conditions in the leading universities are so much better than they were some years ago that no reason exists for any pessimistic outcry.

From time to time one gets fairly direct evidence that certain collegiate sports are going out after their talent and paying it, either directly or indirectly. But there is always some kink in any form of direct proof. Conditions will always be something like this as long as so many take their college sport with such feverish intensity—especially where football is concerned.

Few get steamed up over a track meet or a baseball game, lacrosse and other intercollegiate efforts, but football is another matter.

If you happen to mention the names of three or four good halfbacks in the paper a dozen or so letters arrive at once from indignant old grads who want to know why you left out Whozis of Whatsis, who always has those mentioned outclassed.

Most of the proselyting is done by individual alumni, who in various places keep an observing eye on all the young talent popping up.

Only a few days ago I heard one old grad saying bitterly that a certain young star was headed for his university, but another university had lured him away with a position that paid all expenses and left a few dollars on the side. Whether this was true or not is something else. But he believed it. With the growth of crowds and gate receipts and publicity there is bound to be a certain amount of collegiate scandal, and a lot of it will be true.

The Harder Job

"Which is the more difficult human job," asks L. F. K., "to run 100 yards in nine flat or the mile in four minutes flat? In the case of the 100 it would mean a reduction in time of 5¼ per cent. In the case of the mile it would mean a reduction of 4 1-7 per cent from the present record." The 100 yards in nine seconds flat would be much the harder job. The time may not be so far ahead when some one will be strong enough and fast enough to run the mile around four flat. That means an average of one minute for each quarter, and the quarter has been run around 47 second. It will call for a combination of speed and endurance hooked together, the development of a sprinter into a middle distance runner.

Low Scoring

Dear Sir: How does Glenna Collett's 34 for the first nine holes of her match with Joyce Wethered at St. Andrews compare with other low scores made by women stars? Was it ever bettered, even by Miss Wethered? I recall the English girl's having shot a low round against Glenna at Troon a few years ago, but do not remember the exact score?— K. M. O.

In Speaker's Shoes

Dear Sir: With the baseball season starting on its second month, it appears the prize rookie of the year is Earl Averill, of the Cleveland Indians. He is one of the leading home run hitters of the American league, one of the leading base stealers, and according to some capable judges, the best center fielder in baseball in going after fly balls. When the Yankees played Cleveland recently Averill made catches that not even Tris Speaker in his best days could have bettered. Averill hits right and left handers alike and hits the ball with great power. He's only 24 and should be good for 10 years, for he's a youngster who follows the best rules of training.— BUCKEYE BELL.

The Toughest Assignment

As Johnny Farrell, U. S. open golf champion, reads the scores of more than 960 qualifying starters next week he will realize that he will have to beat all the survivors to hold his title. Also 30 or 40 others who don't have to qualify. Johnny Farrell is the one champion who finds a thousand competitors barring his way to a second year on the throne, and many of these have just as good a chance as he carries.

What other champion in sport has to face a list as formidable as that which carries Bobby Jones, Horton Smith, Walter Hagen, Mac Smith, Tommy Armour, Leo Diegel, Gene Carazen and others? In tennis it would be about the same as if Cochet had to meet 10 or 15 men as good as Lacoste or Tilden at their best. Bobby Jones was good enough to finish one-two in six out of seven years, but even the star Georgian was not good enough to win two in a row. Both Jones and Hagen won two British opens in succession, but the U. S. open is a much harder job, with a far stronger all-round entry list.

In the last few years it has carried a stronger entry list than any golf championship ever played, at any time, before or anywhere before, even going back to the old reigns of Vardon, Braid and Taylor.

There were five or six stars then, where today there are 30 or 40 good enough to make any one sprint the entire route. And there are more and more coming along from the thousands of youngsters picking up the right way to swing.

THE SPUDDERS, who in recent weeks have been going nowhere at all with great rapidity and eclat, must change their ways soon if they are to occupy a high place in the pennant race by July 4. It is an axiom of baseball that the team or teams out in front at Independence day will be ultimate victor when the pennant race is over, which usually is borne out, though there have been exceptions, notably the Boston Braves of 1914.

Consolation for the lowly place held by the Spudders may be had, if there is any consolation in occupying a submerged berth, in the close battle prevailing in the Texas league. This season's campaign probably is the closest in the history of the Texas loop and every club in the race still is held more or less as a pennant possibility, some more and some less.

AFTER THEIR five-day stay starting today in their own bailiwick, Galloway's men go on another trek, this extending for 13 days and including a swing of the southern half of the wheel. Returning home June 21 the Spudders play here 11 days, which takes them into July 2. If they are to hold a respectable place in the standing at the halfway mark around July 4, they must hold their own or better on this home stand starting today and on their next road jaunt, and then win a flock of games when they are back at Athletic park June 21.

That is, barring the possibility that the magnates will decide to split the season, in which event they all would start even again.

◇ ◇ ◇

IF THE CLUBS continue bunched as they now are, it seems unlikely that the schedule will be divided this campaign. The split season wasn't a glorified success in 1928, even though the pennant campaign was more or less of a two-team affair, and with the race now apparently an open affair, little or no talk is heard of the probability of a split season.

Dempsey Signs 2-Year Lease for Coliseum

CHICAGO, June 2. (UP)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, and more recently a fight promoter, signed a two-year lease for the Coliseum today and announced he would stage his first bout there after Oct. 1.

Dempsey said he would apply immediately for a promoter's license. The former heavyweight title-holder takes over the lease held by Jim Mullen until last week.

Owners of the Coliseum said they could offer Dempsey 60 open dates for fights. Dempsey said he planned to make his home here after he returns from a trip to California.

Benton Hurls Five-Hit Ball; Blake Falters in Seventh

CHICAGO, June 2. (AP)—The explosion of Sheriff Fred Blake in the seventh inning enabled the Giants to rush through the broken defense of the Cubs for six hits and four runs and a 4 to 1 decision here today.

Larry Benton held the home team to five scattered hits and was not scored on until the ninth when Norman McMillan popped one into the right field seats for a homer. Score:

Martin Pleads for Tolerance In Address to Bible Students

Prejudice and Hate Scored in Talk on "Modern Persecution" At Floral Heights Church

Judge P. A. Martin, speaking before the Men's Bible class at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, made a plea for tolerance and understanding, invoking the story of the persecution of Jeremiah in Judah to illustrate his study of modern tendencies. His attack upon prejudice and hate was organized under the general title of "Modern Persecution." An outline of the address follows:

"The editors of our literature have gone back to the days of Jeremiah for an example of persecution to compare with our modern forms of the article, and, according to the Bible story the old prophet was living just a little ahead of the people of his day and understood better than they did the dangers which confronted them. The little kingdom of Judah was a sort of 'buffer state' between the great kingdoms of Egypt and Babylon. It could only exist through the protection of the one or the other and there was a party who favored the Egyptians and a party who favored the Babylonians. Jeremiah belonged to the Babylonian party and at the particular time of our lesson this party was in a hopeless minority. Yet he continued to preach with authority of 'thus saith the Lord' to the weak king and the petty princes of Judah, advising them to save themselves and save the remnant of Israel by early submission to the powers of Babylon.

Prophecies Come True

"His fervent preaching brought down upon his devoted head the hatred of the party in power; so they went to the king, Zedekiah, and persuaded him to deliver Jeremiah into their hands for punishment. The weak, vacillating sovereign readily consented; so they took the old prophet and let him down into the mire and filth of a dungeon and there he would have died had it not been for the interposition of an Ethiopian eunuch of the king's household who besought Zedekiah to save his life; so the king again gave his consent and they let down ropes and drew the weeping prophet out again into the fresh air and sunshine and he went on preaching. By and bye his prophesies came true; the Babylonians came and destroyed the city, took King Zedekiah and put out his eyes, after killing his sons before his face; took all the principal people into slavery to Babylon and abolished the petty kingdom completely, thus vindicating the wisdom of the prophet. So much for the historical lesson for the day. 'Thus persecuted they the prophets.'

"How now about modern persecutions and systems of persecution? They are not so direct, so physical. We don't take the unpopular preacher of a new and peculiar religious or political doctrine and lower him into a dungeon all at once; we cannot do that under our system. We can and do kill him off just as effectually, however, by invoking the prejudices of the people against him and he becomes a victim of a 'lost cause' by the will of a majority frequently and then, in a few short years after he dies, we discover that he was right and we were wrong all the time. Jeremiah lived to see himself vindicated but not many of the men of modern days who lived ahead of their ages ever say themselves vindicated, as he did.

Voice of People Wrong

"The old Romans had a saying they applied to their rulers elevated by the power of the people 'vox populi, vox Dei' (the voice of the people is the voice of God), political orators and writers have used it until many of our unthinking people have come to believe there is some truth in this heathen slogan, but there never was a greater untruth given such universal recognition. The voice of the people has been wrong so many times that it has been pretty well discredited. It clamored for the life of the Christ; it stoned Stephen; it beat Paul with many stripes; it crucified Peter in Rome; it laughed in inhuman glee at Nero's faggots; it burned old Galileo; it called Columbus a crank; kindled the fires of hate under the furnaces of the inquisition; it burned witches in the English colonies in fires built by Puritans who had themselves been driven from their homes by the same 'voice,' and it has been guilty of still more modern crimes. It almost broke the heart of Washington with its adverse criticism; it set brother against brother in our great civil war between the states and after that war had ended it brought the untold miseries of Reconstruction upon a defenseless southland. It drove the greatest president America has had since the days of Washington into a war he did not want and strove to prevent and then it killed him when he found that the high objects he had in view were not what the 'voice of the people' was calling for.

"And even now, in free America, as well as in all other countries under the sun, men and women are being maligned, castigated and ostracised by majorities on account of their religious or political views, and in pulpit, press and private life, as well as in the arena of politics, we too often hear the appeal to prejudice and passion, rather than an appeal to reason.

"So let us not be too severe in our judgment of Judah for the way they treated the prophet Jeremiah; perhaps if a prophet should rise in our own country teaching some doctrine we did not like we would also be ready to persecute him in some effective way and put him to silence. If he should predict the destruction of our temples and the downfall of our government, we might go so far as to want him confined in a dungeon or an insane asylum.

Appeal to Prejudice

"It is hard for us to control our prejudices and be as tolerant as we should in matters of either politics or religion. Just last year we witnessed a campaign for the greatest office in the nation in which there were people on both sides appealing to the religious prejudice of the people; one candidate was a Catholic and the other was a Quaker and rival orators and newspapers insulted the intelligence of the American people by using the religious affiliations of both men as an argument against them; both were equally guilty of this appeal to religious prejudice and the spirit of intolerance.

"All of this is contrary to the gospel of the man of Gallilee whose religion is a religion of love, not hate; of brotherhood, not division; of universal peace, not war; of tolerance, not persecution, and we who profess to follow Him are acting directly contrary to his gospel when we indulge prejudice of race, nationality, religious sect or political difference.

"So let us avoid, as far as we possibly can, the influence of this ugly quality, so prevalent in human nature."

YOUNG COURT OPENS TODAY

Judge Montgomery to Charge Grand Jury

Judge Allan D. Montgomery will impanel and charge the 30th district grand jury for Young county at Graham at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Immediately afterwards he will call the civil docket for the June term, while Sam Spence, district attorney, conducts the work of the investigating body.

Mr. Spence said Sunday afternoon that the grand jury would face an unusually light session, and that the first report would probably come within the next two days. No capital cases are to be investigated, he declared. He will work with the jury until its report is made and return to Graham at a later date to handle the criminal docket, he declared.

STRAND: William Haines and Joan Crawford in "The Duke Steps Out."

OLYMPIC: "El Bandido," story of Pancho Villa, with William Russell. Comedy. Pathe news.

GEM: Victor McLaglen in "Captain Lash." Chapter 2 of "The Police Reporter." Comedy.

Spontaneous humor and a contagious smile are the outstanding elements which combine with a good voice to put Maurice Chevalier across in "Innocents of Paris." He bubbles over with good nature, and has in both singing and talking lines that peculiar something which Al Jolson injects into his melodies to precipitate tears or laughter, as he chooses.

The story of Maurice the "antiquaire" rising from a push-cart business in the states to the stage of the exclusive "Montmarte Casino" in Paris affords Chevalier a familiar background against which to project his artistry.

Old George Fawcett, with his customary excellent portrayal of character roles, makes the most of his few appearances as a fond but exacting father. You'll like Louise, too, though you must forget how calm and perfectly ladylike she was when trying to prevent papa from leaving the house. All papa meant to do was just shoot down her lover at sight, and desperate efforts to stop him really might not have registered as tenderly beautiful and all that—but little brother saved Maurice, so it all comes out all right. And little brother, incidentally, gives one of the best juvenile performances the pictures have produced.

Millionaire to Pay Expenses of Students

NEW YORK, June 2. (AP)—That five students may enter his alma mater—the University of Kansas—each year unhampered by financial worries, Solon E. Summerfield, New York manufacturer, today announced plans by which he will pay all their expenses for a four-year course. Starting with five students next fall, in four years Mr. Summerville will be paying the expenses of 20 students each year.

Hoover's Police Dog Wrecks Screen Door

WASHINGTON, June 2. (US)—"Tut," President Hoover's police dog, chum and companion, recently tore away a wire screen door to remind his master that he was late for lunch.

The president is accustomed to leave his office at 1 o'clock and walk through the White house grounds to the executive mansion. On such occasions he stops in the kitchen and feeds the dog.

"Tut" became a bit impatient and poked his great paw through the screen door of the executive offices, tore away the screen and entered. White house attendants could not persuade him to leave and the president, whose conference had ended, emerged from his private office just as the dog was trying to enter there.

JUDGES TO MEET JUNE 16

Marrs Suggests Date For Gathering Here

The association of county judges and commissioners for the 13th congressional district, which was to have met in Wichita Falls two weeks ago, will probably convene here on June 15 Judge John P. Marrs announced Sunday. He has proposed that date to Judge H. N. Dearmore of Montague county, president of the organization.

The quarterly meeting of the association was postponed two weeks ago because heavy rains had made roads impassable and had cut down the attendance. Judge Marrs said Sunday that he expected a record crowd of visitors at that date.

Judge Marrs and members of the Wichita county commissioners court will be hosts to the assemblage. A program, in which the problems of caring for the insane is featured, has already been arranged. The meetings will be held in one of the trial rooms at the courthouse. The visitors will be entertained at lunch by the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce.

Monday Last Day To Enter Summer School

Summer school registration for the Junior college, senior high school, and junior high school is expected to close Monday, according to Registrar A. K. Presson, director of the summer session. Enrollment to the three divisions of the Wichita Falls school system has been satisfactory, being by a small margin the largest in the history of the schools.

Work is being offered in all classes of the fundamental subjects of English, history, and mathematics, and also in Spanish, Latin, and biology, in the high schools. In the college, in addition to the three fundamental subjects, a full set of courses in education and phychology make it possible for teachers to build for higher certificates or to renew others about to expire.

After Monday only special permission to register may be obtained if the student can furnish evidence of being able to do good work to make up for classes missed.

County to Award New Contract for Burials

At its regular meeting Monday, the county commissioners court will award a contract to a local undertaking company for the handling of the dependent dead during the next two years, John P. Marrs, county judge, announced Sunday. The bids are already before the court, he explained. The firms bid on a basis of handling the bodies at so much per funeral, Judge Marrs said.

The court will resume its work as county equalization board after Monday. Work is expected to be completed by the middle of the week.
