Persian Gulf oil producers debate price

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — OPEC oil ministers from four Persian Gulf countries met privately today to consider matching or undercutting price reductions by three other nations trying to beat an international oil glut.

A Saudi newspaper reported the Arab oil producers planned to slash their prices by as much as $7 a barrel.

Today's emergency meeting was supposed to include all six members of the Saudi-led Gulf Cooperation Council states, according to a council announcement. But only oil ministers of Saudi Arabia,lKuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar attended. Bahrain and Oman, which are not OPEC members, did not show up.

The absences sparked predictions of an immediate price cut.

Such a move could ignite a worldwide price war, lowering gas prices for American motorists but making it harder for Third World oil-producers to repay their foreign debts.

To be competitive, industry analysts say, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries must drop its price of $34 a barrel. The 13-nation cartel controlled international oil prices in the 1970s but has lost some clout since then because of internal rivalries and a smaller market.

Nigeria was the first OPEC member to break ranks when on Sunday it lowered its price by $5.50 to $30 a barrel. Its decision came after non-OPEC members, Britain and Norway, cut their price to $30 a barrel for North Sea Crude, the African nation's main competitor in the European oil market.

See Windfall Profits story, Page 4B

The state-run Saudi Press Agency reported that ministers of the Gulf Coordination Council meeting here would discuss "current trends in the petroleum market" because of the action taken by Nigeria, Britain and Norway.

Saudi sources said the official announcement that the entire council would meet clearly indicated a price cut is planned.

The council includes four OPEC members — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, and the United Arab Emirates — as well as Bahrain and Oman.

Without saying when the action would take effect, the authoritative Saudi newspaper Asharq al Awsat said the council's ministers would cut prices between $5.50 and $7 per barrel "to maintain competitive levels after the North Sea and Nigerian reductions."

"The present structure has been debilitated after Nigeria violated it in a manner that surpassed all expectations," the newspaper said.

The report also said OPEC's troubleshooting committee — composed of Algeria, Indonesia, Venezuela and the United Arab Emirates — might meet soon "to define a general framework for OPEC's future movements, since its present price structure has become vulnerable to total collapse as a result of Nigeria's decision."

The looming price war would help U.S. consumers because each $1 drop in the price of a barrel of crude oil represents a 2½-cent drop at the pump. Third World oil-producers, however, would be hurt by price reductions because income from petroleum sales are used to pay off foreign debts.

Reagan asks withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the United States is ready to "take all necessary measures" to guarantee the security of Israel's northern borders if the Israelis withdraw their forces from Lebanon.

At the same time, the president is urging Arabs to accept Israel's right to exist and to let Jordan negotiate the future of the West Bank.

Reagan made the statements in a speech reviewing his foreign policy at midterm, prepared for delivery to the American Legion today. The White House made several excerpts of his remarks available in advance.

In the speech, the president contends past U.S. policy-makers "had lost touch with changing world realities," and "ignored our responsibility to work for constructive change, not simply to try to preserve the status quo."

He also declared that the "ultimate Soviet goal in Europe is to force the nations to accommodate themselves to Soviet interests on Soviet terms."

On the heels of allegations that U.S.-Israeli relations have worsened substantially over the situation in Lebanon, the president pledged:

"This administration is prepared to take all necessary measures to guarantee the security of Israeli's northern border in the aftermath of the complete withdrawal of the Israeli army."

He was referring to U.S.-led efforts to get the Israelis and all other foreign forces out of Lebanon, which Israel invaded last summer. So far, Israel has refused to set a timetable for withdrawal.

Reagan also repeated his call for Arabs "to accept the reality of Israel and the reality that peace and justice are to be gained only through direct negotiation.

"King Hussein (of Jordan) should be supported in his effort to bring together a joint Jordanian-Palestinian team to negotiate the future of the West Bank, Gaza and Jerusalem," Reagan said.

Reagan has long urged Hussein to enter talks with Israel, and Secretary of State George P. Shultz said last week he sees a "reasonable possibility" the Jordanian leader will do so.

Libyan plane hijacked

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Three Libyan hijackers today released a stewardess carrying a request for medicine for a sick boy, nearly 44 hours after the Libyan Arab Airlines plane was forced to land on this Mediterranean island, airport officials said.

The stewardess got off the Boeing 727 at 2:30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. EST) and walked about 50 yards to a command post. Airport officials said supplies of food and water aboard the plane were exhausted.

The hijackers, who pirated the Libyan domestic flight en route to Tripoli on Sunday, have demanded to go to Morocco. The North African country has refused to give them asylum, saying it does not want to encourage air piracy.

Prime Minister Dom Mintoff said the plane would not be refueled until the hijackers freed the remaining 161 captives, Maltese officials said.

Mintoff told the hijackers that he had a message for them from the Moroccan government but he would not release its contents until they released all the hostages.

The hijackers had no immediate reaction to the news of Morocco's rejection.

The parked plane's 156 passengers and five other crew members were without food or water for a second day today, and Mintoff said none would be sent.

Maltese negotiations with the hijackers resumed this morning via two-way radio that was monitored by Libyan officials who flew in from Tripoli, authorities said.

Western diplomats said Morocco had not responded to an invitation to send a representative to the talks.

Some medical supplies were brought to the plane overnight, but the hijackers refused to open the door. Authorities said nothing indicated any violence had happened inside the jetliner.

Police buses, trucks and a tractor blocked part of the abandoned runway where the jet was parked. Dozens of riot police, with submachine guns cocked, patrolled the remote corner of the airport. Entrances and exits were closed at Luqa International Airport, four miles south of here on this tiny Mediterranean island.

Reagan spokesman feels like 'middle man in war of words'

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — As President Reagan's chief spokesman, Larry Speakes says he sometimes feels like the middle man between two warring factions — the press and the White House.

"You're in no man's land," the deputy press secretary said. "Sometimes you're caught in the crossfire."

Unlike Jody Powell, who was President Carter's confidante when he served as White House press secretary, Speakes has the added burden of being outside Reagan's inner circle.

In a recent interview, Powell said Speakes' role is tougher "because reporters generally will make your life more difficult if you don't have a lot of information to impart than if you do."

Some reporters believe Speakes' distance from Reagan affects the kind of information he is privy to, as well as his performance. They say he's simultaneously trying to gain the approval of his superiors while trying to convince reporters he knows more than it may appear.

Lou Cannon of The Washington Post suggested top White House officials were using Speakes as a "kamikaze pilot" and maintained it will backfire in the long run.

As an example, Cannon cited a speech Speakes delivered recently calling for a "good news" segment on television news shows.

"I just think that's so overblown and unlike Speakes," Cannon said. "The senior staff — they are just using the guy up that way. I think he's doing it to win their approval because he's not in the inner circle."

Larry Speakes

And when Speakes speaks...

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vintage Larry Speakes:

"You don't tell us how to stage the news and we don't tell you how to cover it." October 1982.

"Look, Sarah. Look, look, look. I'm not the president. You can't sit here and badger me like you did him," Speakes said to Sarah McClendon, famous for jousting with presidents, who kept trying to ask a question. August 1982.

"This is the price you have to pay for bringing down inflation," he said in response to the news that the November 1981 unemployment rate was 8.4 percent. His remark was directly contrary to White House policy at the time. December 1981.

Regarding a Reagan remark on a lower minimum wage for teen-agers: "He didn't mean what you thought he said." February 1983.

And recently, trying to play down Reagan's suggestion that the corporate income tax be abolished, Speakes accused reporters of "licking your chops and clapping your hands and doing back flips" over the story. Later, he happily reported that Reagan shook his hand when he learned of the crack.

Speakes, 43, says he's not simply trying to curry favor, and he says he sometimes appears uninformed because he's not able to talk about what he knows.

"There are a lot of things I'm fully aware of and know why I'm doing it but I'm not at liberty to reveal," he said. "You choose your words very carefully because you know the goal you are trying to achieve for the president."

For instance, Speakes said he could not disclose the details of the administration's $4.3 billion jobs package last week — though reporters pressed him for them — because the White House had adopted a tight-lipped strategy until it heard back from Democrats.

Nevertheless, Speakes, who also served in the Nixon and Ford White House press offices, is open about the fact that he does not get as much information as he believes he should have.

Powell said a press secretary is most vulnerable when he briefs reporters on a topic he believes he knows about — only to discover he hasn't been told everything.

"If I were dealing — not with the facts with the bark off — but with what someone thought the 'line' ought to be, I was seriously in danger of saying something misleading without even intending to," he said. Those are the times, according to Powell, when a press secretary runs the greatest risk of embarrassing the president.

Speakes said he asks for the full story. And about 25 percent of the time he's bound by "strict guidelines" as to what to tell reporters. The rest of the time he's free to improvise a bit more.

"There are two sins in this job," Speakes said. "One is lying. And that's a cardinal sin. Unforgiveable. The other is not knowing. It's almost as bad, (but) it's forgiveable.

"The only currency you've got in this business, the only thing that counts, is credibility and I'll do what I have to do to preserve credibility because once you lose it you're no longer any good to the press or to the president."

Speakes said he often knows more than he makes public in large briefings.

"What you say in the briefing room and what you say privately on a guidance basis are always two different things," he said. "You realize when you say something on the podium and your name is attached to it ... it's got an impact to it."

The "good reporters" call him every afternoon to get private guidance, said Speakes, who inherited his job when White House press secretary James Brady was shot in the head during the attempt on Reagan's life March 30, 1981.

Ramada Hotel planned for 3100 block of Wall

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

Dennis Ehlers, who has been investing in Midland housing construction during the past year, is teaming up with an experienced hotelier, Hans Peter Jost, to build and manage a new "modern" hotel here.

Jost and Ehlers were greeted warmly this morning by Chamber of Commerce President Larry Bell, who asked the audience to "share this great event with us."

The two businessmen — as the Wall Street Hotel Limited Partners — announced today they are building a new, mid-priced "Midland Ramada Hotel" on Wall Avenue, next to Permian Toyota, in the 3100 block bordered by Wall, Powell, Travis and Walker streets.

R&M Construction, a Midland firm, is building the facility from plans drawn by Graphic Design Group, Dallas.

Ramada Hotels are the lodging company's newest idea, a concept less than a year old. These hotels fit midway between the 2-year-old, super-premium Ramada Renaissance Hotels and older, lower-priced, recently-refurbished Ramada Inns that made the Phoenix, Ariz., company famous.

Ehlers said his 215-room Midland Ramada Hotel will cost $8.4 million and should open its doors sometime in December.

No damage reported in quakes

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. (AP) — A moderate undersea earthquake was felt from Ventura County just northwest of Los Angeles to the Mexican border, but no damage was reported.

The offshore quake struck at 6:18 p.m. Monday and was centered 40 miles northwest of San Diego, said Susan Green, a U.S. Geological Survey worker at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

The quake measured 4.4 on the Richter scale.

On land the nearest point to the epicenter was San Onofre, about 45 miles northwest of San Diego and site of a nuclear power plant, where Southern California Edison officials conducted an inspection to make sure no damage occurred.

"The temblor was felt at the plant but there was no damage," Edison spokesman Charles Beal said today, adding that neither of the reactor units at the plant was in operation at the time of the earthquake.

"That's a pretty small earthquake," said Jerry Haynes, manager of nuclear operations for Edison. "The plant is designed to withstand an earthquake much larger than that."

He estimated the design capacity at "approximately a magnitude 7 earthquake located fairly near the plant."

Haynes said the plant is equipped with an alarm system attached to an instrument that measures ground motion. The other "alarm" system is the staff that is on duty 24 hours a day, he said.

"The operators obviously feel an earthquake and there is a written procedure they go through," he said. "They classify the magnitude based on their observation, and depending on the magnitude, they order inspections in the plant."

"We felt it here in Santa Ana," Orange County sheriff's Sgt. Ray Karr said of the quake.

A radio station in the Ventura County city of Thousand Oaks, 100 miles north of the epicenter, also reported feeling the quake.

A second, much smaller earthquake struck at 9:37 p.m. Monday, centered two miles north of Fontana in San Bernardino County 50 miles east of Los Angeles, a Caltech spokesman said. That quake measured 2.6 on the Richter scale, he said.

It apparently wasn't strong enough to be felt even in San Bernardino, less than 10 miles from the epicenter.

"I didn't even know we had one," said San Bernardino County sheriff's dispatcher Sherry Kirkruff, adding that she had received no calls from concerned citizens.

Iran ready to resume drive into Iraq

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Iran is poised to resume its drive toward central Iraq this week, despite growing signs that the new thrust will fail and further deepen the military stalemate in the Persian Gulf war, according to analysts in the State and Defense departments.

But amid the continuing conflict, which sometimes has seemed to threaten the West's oil lifeline, U.S. officials say there are encouraging signs that the worst may be over for U.S. aims in the area.

Iranian leaders claim to have achieved the objectives of their earlier February offensive and have threatened to strike at new "strategic political, economic and military targets" inside Iraq with the huge reserves of men and armor not yet committed to the fight.

Yet Administration officials see:

—Reduced danger that the 29-month-old war will spill over into the oil-rich Persian Gulf states and Saudi Arabia.

—Heightened hostility between Iran and the Soviet Union. The officials cite as evidence the recent arrest of the Iranian Communist Party leader.

—Moves by Iran's revolutionary Islamic regime to reduce human and civil rights abuses, to achieve greater stability and to promote economic recovery inside Iran.

Despite such moderating trends by Iran's ruler, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and his followers, the Tehran regime shows no sign of being ready to make peace with Iraq yet.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, the Speaker of Parliament and Iran's second most powerful man, has said that peace mediators from Algeria and the Organization of the Islamic Conference "are welcome here only with new proposals."

There appears to be no significant change in the conditions Iran has set for an end to the war: the ouster of Iraq's President Saddam Hussein, who started the conflict; the repatriation of more than 100,000 Iraqi Shia Moslems who have been driven into Iran by Hussein, and war reparations of astronomical size — raised last week from $150 billion to $200 billion.

The battlefield focus, once on the southern end of the 300-mile front, has moved to an 18-mile central section since Feb. 7, when the fourth and latest offensive in the last year was kicked off by Iran. Revolutionary Guards and volunteers as young as 12 years old formed human waves to walk across Iraqi mine fields and bridge barbed-wire fortifications. The Iranians carried paper chits from Islamic clerics promising entry into heaven for the brave who fell.

Estimates are that 6,000 to 10,000 Iranians were killed or wounded in the initial attacks, with no more than half that many Iraqi casualties, according to Department of Defense analysts here. Morale of the Iranians for the first time also appeared to weaken, the analysts said, after an Iraqi counterattack that recaptured much of the ground lost.

Most of the Iranian forces — including considerable armor and regular Iranian army troops, who are far better trained and disciplined than the volunteers — are available for the renewed offensive, the officials said. The Iranian goal appears to be Al Amarah, whose capture would cut the main north-south road between Basra and Baghdad as well as the Tigris waterway, although the Iranians could resume the attack farther to the north as well, the officials said.

Iraq, for its part, has readied its superior artillery, tank and air forces — all using equipment obtained from the Soviet Union or France — to defend Al Amarah, which lies only 200 miles southeast of the Iraqi capital.

A measure of the stalemate is that after all the bloodshed, Iran now holds merely 160 square miles of Iraqi territory, or less than one-thousandth of that California-sized nation. Iraq still controls barely 360 square miles of Iran — proportionately even less, since Iran is four times as large in area.

Heartening to the West has been the fact that as the war winds down, it moves north — away from the rich oil fields of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and the smaller states of the Persian Gulf region whose regimes Khomeini hates both on religious grounds and because they contributed an estimated $25 billion to Iraq's war effort against him.

Ramada Hotel planned for Midland

Jose L. Torres, a Ramada vice president, lauded the project as an outstanding example of the new Ramada Hotels division. He said the hotel will offer "...exceptional value to an increasingly sophisticated consumer." Torres noted there are 55 Ramadas in Texas — more than any other state in the Union. "We like Texas and Texas likes us," he said.

Midland will host the Ramada because of its easy access and high business traffic, the partners said, and because "better performance will be expected for the hotel here than if we had decided to build it in Odessa," according to market studies completed for this project.

The hotel will rely on heavy weekday traffic — mostly business people — and the emphasis is on amenities and options not found in smaller inns, according to Jost. "We're going to try to fit the new Ramada image," he said.

"These are fun-type facilities for modern people."

Included in the fun will be an indoor pool with a bar, a whirlpool, a sauna, exercise facilities, and a game room. Lobby construction uses the current "atrium" style.

The 180-seat restaurant and lounge, Harry's Bar and Grill, is set to offer food and fun in the style of a new franchise restaurant opened here, Jost said, but with more fun and better food service. Steak and seafood will top the menu. There will also be a coffee shop geared for family eating and for fast business breakfasts.

Three floors of hotel rooms will include 10 rooms especially for the physically handicapped.

Close to 120 people will work at the new Ramada, about one-third part-time. "The labor market has improved for hotels and motels. There are more young people in the industry: We can train our own, professional staff," Jost said.

Drought endangers Morocco 'breadbasket' region

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

AGADIR, Morocco — From the air, it looks like a landscape painted in broad strokes — wide green belts of fertile farmland giving way to drought-browned expanses that surrender in turn to the yellow sands of the desert.

Normally, Morocco's verdant breadbasket extends all the way to the doorstep of the Sahara, but this year the rains have not been generous, and again this ancient kingdom is on the verge of disaster.

In 1981 Morocco, one of the West's closest allies in Africa, suffered its worst drought in history. It lost 54 percent of its grain crop and 35 percent of its sheep; it had to spend $350 million from its dwindling reserves of foreign currency to import food.

This year the first rains fell on schedule in October, after King Hassan II led the nation in prayer. Crops were planted and the farmers waited. The rainy season of the North African winter should continue through February, but the farmers are still waiting. They have seen only a few drizzles since the season's first rains.

Western diplomats in Rabat agree that the stability of Hassan's throne depends on the health of the Moroccan economy. Undeniably, the patient is not in good condition, and for most Moroccans the memory is still fresh of the 1981 food riots in Casablanca, riots that Hassan's forces suppressed with a high death toll.

Like other Third World countries trying to industrialize rapidly, Morocco faces several fundamental obstacles that are thwarting ambitious development plans. Foremost are a lack of investment capital and an annual population growth rate of 3.5 percent, one of the world's highest.

Agriculture — wheat, barley and citrus fruit — accounts for 18 percent of Morocco's gross national product. The most important export, though, is phosphate, and despite reduced prices on the world market Morocco has announced a $4 billion, five-year expansion plan for the industry. One mine, at Meskala, is being developed jointly with the Soviet Union.

The United States and the Soviet Union both produce more phosphate — a commodity used for fertilizer — than Morocco, but Morocco is the world's largest exporter and has 60 percent of the world's known reserves.

With phosphate prices falling, Morocco has been forced to turn to outside sources to prop up its economy.

Times Beach residents want government to buy homes

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond met with angry residents chanting for the government to buy their homes amid reports that dioxin contamination in the town was almost three times worse than at first thought.

Meanwhile, Anne Burford, the embattled administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency who changed her last name from Gorsuch when she remarried Sunday, planned to come to Missouri today to officially announce results of the latest dioxin testing in this suburb of St. Louis.

EPA "superfund" chief William N. Hedeman on Monday confirmed that "raw data" from the latest tests indicated contamination by dioxin at levels up to 300 parts per billion, 300 times what the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta considers safe.

Bond met Monday behind closed doors at a motel with about a dozen Times Beach residents in nearby Eureka. He told them the EPA would announce the test results at a meeting attended by Lee M. Thomas, head of a federal cleanup task force, and Dr. Vernon Houk, a health expert with the CDC.

About 75 additional townspeople gathered outside the motel and chanted for a federal buyout of their homes.

"We're not just staying here because we're hard-headed and want to be here," Evelyn Zufall said at a town meeting that preceded the governor's visit. "We're just protecting our homes. When I get that check into my little hot hands, I'll leave."

Unpaved roads in Times Beach were sprayed more than a decade ago with waste oil containing dioxin as a dust control measure.

Another round of soil samples was taken last month in Times Beach following extensive flooding of the community by the Meramec River in December. Testing done before the floods showed levels of dioxin, a highly toxic chemical, at just over 100 parts per billion in places.

The earlier tests along the streets and in yards were taken last November at depths of only a few inches. The second round of tests was taken at much deeper levels, with borings done mainly through asphalt into roadbeds.

Thomas said health safety issues and options for residents of Times Beach, the home of 2,400 residents before December's floods, would be discussed at the EPA briefing.

Hedeman said the CDC has already made its recommendations, based on the latest test results. The safe level for the toxic substance has been set at 1 part per billion by the center.

Dioxins are byproducts of several chemical manufacturing processes, including the manufacture of some herbicides.

Their effects on humans are disputed, but certain types have been proven to cause cancer, birth defects and liver damage to laboratory animals. The toxicity of dioxins varies.

The Rev. Charles Neal takes to the road in his red-and-white van and gives couples the option of having a church wedding instead of going to the justice of the peace.

Pastor puts weddings on wheels

HOUSTON (AP) — The Rev. Charles Neal is putting love on the road with a red and white wedding van.

Neal, pastor of the Irvington Church of the Nazarene, says he has married six couples since last week in his Abiding Love Wedding Chapel's "mobile unit," parked outside the Harris County courthouse.

The pastor mounts a steeple on top of the van and watches for couples going to the county clerk's office to get a wedding license. The trick, he says, is to catch couples on their way into the building.

"Coming out is not near as good as going in," Neal said. "Coming out they've got their minds made up where they are going to get married and more than likely they are going to a JP (justice of the peace).

"I'm just giving people the opportunity to have a Christian wedding as opposed to a civil wedding," he said, climbing atop the vehicle to set up the little wooden steeple.

Inside, Neal offers his prayers and two kinds of ceremonies — the economy version for $19.95 and the deluxe service for $24.95, complete with a photograph of the newlyweds and a tape recording of the event.

The van is carpeted and paneled and equipped with a stereo system which plays gospel music.

Neal said he sets up the mobile chapel in the afternoon after seeing to the business of Neal's Moving Co. in the morning.

"We do all sorts of things," he said. "I'll do anything that's honest. I'm not salaried by my church."

Neal spends the time he is not performing ceremonies passing out cards and answering questions from the curious.

"I plan to be here, the Lord willing, indefinitely," he said.

Chief says police acted well

Over 100 attacked at Austin confrontation, he says

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin Police Chief Frank Dyson says as many as 150 policemen were assaulted during the weekend Capitol melee he says was sparked by anti-Ku Klux Klan demonstrators.

Dyson said Monday he planned to present a report on the violence to the city council by Thursday. He said police showed "remarkable restraint" during the Klan rally that turned into a melee.

However, demonstrators who claimed they were beaten by police said the confrontation was a "clear example of police brutality."

Twelve people were injured and nine were arrested in the confrontation Saturday between Klansmen and anti-Klan demonstrators. The injured included four policemen and one newsman. No one was seriously hurt.

Austin Mayor Carole McClellan said Monday she had ordered an investigation of allegations that police used excessive force in subduing hecklers who pelted the Klan and police with rocks and debris.

"Anytime you've got people injured, it causes concern," Ms. McClellan said. "The tape showed one part of the march. We've got to find out what preceded it and what went on around it."

Dyson said his officers were prepared for trouble, but, "We frankly did not anticipate the problems we encountered in getting the Klan back to their cars. We thought once the rally (at the Capitol) was over we were prepared to go back in that direction with the Klan."

A television videotape showed several Austin policeman using night sticks to beat a person on the ground. Dyson said he would have no comment about the tape until he knew what had happened before it was shot.

"It may very well be before I'm over with it, I may just condemn the crowd rather than the police officers. The officers weren't trying to start anything. The Klan wasn't trying to start anything. It was the anti-group that was there that was starting it all," Dyson said.

Members of the Brown Berets, a Mexican-American group, said the confrontation with police was a "clear example of police brutality."

Dyson said his officers were "under constant attack" from anti-Klan demonstrators including the Brown Berets who threw rocks and debris.

Dyson said it would be hard to take disciplinary action against any officer unless an injured person could identify the officer who allegedly struck him.

Senate OKs schoolbook hearing bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill approved by the Senate Monday would allow supporters of proposed textbooks to join critics in testifying on book adoption — a $60 million a year business in Texas.

The measure was sent to the House on a 30-0 vote.

Currently only protestors can testify at textbook hearings.

In addition to removing that restriction, Sen. Ray Farabee's bill would increase the size of the textbook selection committee from 15 to 27 — one from each congressional district in Texas.

Committee would members would be paid and would receive expenses.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said his bill was drafted by the Texas Education Agency "in response to the concern I and others have had" that only protestors were getting to testify on textbooks.

Farabee accepted an amendment by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, that both sides would get "equal treatment."

People for the American Way, a national anti-censorship organization founded by "All in the Family" television producer Norman Lear, has focused attention on changing the hearing rules to combat protestors such as Mel and Norma Gabler of Longview.

The Gablers have testified at the hearings for 21 years.

Bell System plan could control phone thievery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The confusion over telephone repairs caused by new deregulation rules may yield a blessing for the Bell System in its long-frustrated efforts to recover stolen phones.

Pic Wagner, a spokesman for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., says the Bell System cannot estimate how many of its phones have disappeared over the years.

But AT&T says it is now developing procedures to monitor phone repair orders in an effort to recover lost property.

According to Wagner and Tom A. Catanzano, an AT&T official who is helping plan the company's new telephone sales program, a used phone that has been legitimately sold by a Bell company will have a special sticker affixed to its base as proof of purchase.

If a customer appears at a service center with a phone and no proof of purchase, the phone will be repaired or replaced free.

But Catanzano says the Bell company plans to conduct a "substantial number" of audits to determine whether customers bringing in phones without the stickers are paying monthly leasing fees.

Getting telephone repairs a whole new ball game

WASHINGTON (AP) — It used to be when your telephone broke, all you had to do was dial 611 and the phone company came out and fixed it — for free.

No more.

The telephone revolution extends to dealing with phone repair, according to executives of the Bell System (American Telephone & Telegraph).

For the next year especially, people who buy their telephones are going to have to remember where they bought them in order to get them repaired. They won't be able to turn to their local Bell company for help.

Repair procedures are affected by the telephone deregulation program that began Jan. 1, when the Federal Communications Commission required AT&T to separate the sale of newly manufactured telephones from provision of local service.

AT&T complied with the order by setting up a new subsidiary, American Bell Inc., to take over all sales of new equipment formerly handled by AT&T's 22 wholly owned Bell System companies.

The Bell companies can still lease or sell telephones from existing inventories. But once those inventories are exhausted, consumers who need a new phone this year will have to buy one either from American Bell or from a competing manufacturer such as International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., the Tandy Corp. (Radio Shack) or the GTE Corp.

In addition to new equipment, consumers are being offered the chance to buy the phones already in their homes that they lease from their local Bell company.

That's where phone repairs get a little complicated. Here are some general consumer guidelines:

—A customer can continue renting a phone, with repairs and maintenance covered by the monthly leasing fee. Eventually, however, the rental option will become more expensive, and phones will become more stylish and sophisticated, prompting people to buy.

Complicating matters is American Bell's plan to sell telephones through other retailers..The American Bell warranty on its phones will still apply, but if it breaks, the purchaser will have to return it for repairs to the retailer.

—Consumers who buy a telephone from an AT&T competitor such as ITT or Radio Shack will have to follow the manufacturer's repair or warranty procedures.

—American Bell equipment will carry a one-year warranty, plus an initial 30-day refund offer if the customer isn't satisfied with the phone. During the warranty period, phones can be repaired at no cost. If the repair cannot be performed immediately, and customers have only one phone, they'll be able to borrow one.

—After the American Bell warranty expires, the customer must pay to have it fixed. Spokesman Bryan Monahan says the charge will be "nominal" and that customers can get an estimate in advance. Whether the phone is under warranty or not, it must be taken to an American Bell service center to be fixed.

—Complicating matters is American Bell's plan to sell telephones through other retailers. Bell phones are already for sale at some Sears stores, for example. The American Bell warranty on its phones will still apply, but if it breaks, the purchaser will have to return it for repairs to the retailer. Repair charges may differ from those at an American Bell service center.

We have always stressed that there is no such thing as a blind opening lead—only deaf opening leaders. Here's a classic case from the recent World Team Olympiad in Biarritz, France.

Toward the middle of the last decade, a pair of young Scots began to make an impact on the British bridge scene, and soon began winning every major event in sight. One of them, Michael Rosenberg, emigrated to New York. The other, Barnet Shenkin, is a stalwart of Scotland's international team.

Shenkin held the West cards on this hand from the team event. He heard his left-hand opponent open the bidding with one heart and rebid one no trump over South's one spade response. South's invitational jump to three spades was passed out.

You have all the facts. Before reading on, decide what you would lead, and why.

It took only a few moment's thought for Shenkin to select the best attack. From the bidding it seemed that, if either opponent had the king of clubs, it was more likely to be dummy. So Shenkin chose to lead the queen of clubs!

Not surprisingly, declarer elected to duck the first trick in dummy. Shenkin continued by cashing the ace of clubs and giving his partner a club ruff. Since the defenders still had to come to two heart tricks by force, that was down one.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Stopping brutality

Police officers carry a heavy burden. As keepers of the peace, they are expected to conduct themselves in exemplary fashion regardless of the circumstances they confront.

Whether they like it or not, law enforcement officers are grouped together in the public's mind. Consequently, when one officer fails to meet the public's standards or is shamed by his actions, the usual result is a black mark against all law enforcement officers.

That isn't right, of course. Law enforcement personnel shouldn't be judged collectively any more than the workers in any occupation. But like it or not, that's the way a large majority of the public sees the situation.

And it's in that way Midland residents most likely will construe last week's indictment of police officer Lonnie Payne on felony charges of abusing a prisoner. The merits of the case against Payne will be determined in court, as is appropriate. He should be extended the same rights and privileges accorded any person charged with a felony crime. He is innocent until proven otherwise.

The response of Midland Police Department officials to the recent incident was swift and appropriate. Payne was suspended without pay. Then an internal investigation was conducted of the charges against him. After the investigation, he was stripped of his badge and gun and dismissed from the force.

An investigation by the Midland County Sheriff's Department brought Payne's actions in arresting 20-year-old George Benavides of Odessa into question. Sheriff Dallas Smith's description of Benavides' injuries — a non-displaced fracture of the second vertebra of the neck, a fracture of the nasal bone and numerous bruises — was disturbing, to say the least.

But Benavides, whom Payne was arresting on a misdemeanor theft charge, also was indicted by the grand jury and little is known of the degree of his resistance in the arrest procedure. More undoubtedly will be revealed at the trials.

Now, let's put this case aside, temporarily. However the courts may detemine, it has joined the growing list of similar complaints voiced here and elsewhere in the state and nation. Although we acknowledge it's fashionable to charge brutality nowadays, it's well past time for effective action to stop brutality by police officers where and when it exists. But how can that end be realized?

Officers charged with such offenses can and should be brought to trial and if convicted, stripped of their law enforcement privileges. There will be occasions when circumstances will dictate their removal from the force even before the trial, as in the Payne case.

But above all the public and law enforcement officers themselves must demand a rigid code of conduct for peace officers. That's the only way to create peer pressure and bring about change. And without that change in attitude and conduct, no person can be certain he is safe from police brutality.

Japan's technology slip

An American security official has added a new dimension to our already difficult trade relationships with Japan. Richard Perle, an assistant secretary of defense for international security policy, says advanced industrial technology that the United States shares with Japan is being passed on to the Soviet Union.

During a recent interview, Perle said the United States learned about the Soviet effort in Japan from a KGB official who defected after operating in Tokyo.

While the Russians have been eager to acquire Japanese technology, their more favored target is U.S. technology.

Last year the Reagan administration reported that there is a "hemorrhage" of Western technology flowing to the Soviet Union. By one estimate, U.S. technology has been incorporated into 150 different Soviet weapons systems. There have been cases where American technological developments have been incorporated into Soviet military gear before they have gone through the procurement system to become part of U.S. weapons systems.

The United States is trying to protect its most sensitive technology with export controls and by smoking out Soviet espionage efforts in the United States. If the Russians are finding it easier to pirate our technological secrets by way of Japan, then that's an urgent new item for the trade talks between Washington and Tokyo.

Cleaning up EPA's mess

President Reagan has acted judiciously if belatedly to stem the destructive controversy brewing over the Environmental Protection Agency. If there is to be any chance of cleaning up what has become a monstrous political mess, Congress should accept his "olive branch."

Mr. Reagan offered to end the "executive privilege" dispute by allowing certain congressional committee chairmen and members to inspect records which EPA Director Anne M. Gorsuch had refused to turn over to various probes of the EPA's handling of the hazardous waste Super-fund. That is the traditional method of compromise in executive-congressional branch disputes over documents. Unless EPA critics really are more concerned with grandstanding and seeing Gorsuch thrown into jail for contempt of Congress, as the EPA director has claimed, the compromise would appear to be in everyone's interest.

Meanwhile, the FBI is investigating charges into whether documents subpoenaed by Congress, but withheld by the Reagan administration, were destroyed by two EPA shredders. And the Justice Department is probing whether recently fired Gorsuch aide Rita Lavelle may have been guilty of a conflict of interest by participating in an EPA hazardous dump case involving her former employer, Aerojet General Corp. Lavelle, who administered the Super-fund, reportedly was fired for quarreling with EPA officials who wanted to take a tougher stand with private polluters.

The president's problems with the EPA have prompted some contrived comparisons to Watergate: A stonewalling administration, the "massacre" of Lavelle and the shredding of documents. This unfortunately obscures some worthwhile goals behind the six congressional probes of the Superfund.

What should be bipartisan concerns are: whether the $1.6 billion fund (actually about a third of that has been collected) to clean up hazardous wastes is being properly administered; how many of the estimated 14,000 dumps nationwide have been cleaned up; the adequacy of negotiated settlements between the EPA and private polluters that pay the cleanup bills; and whether there is any political favoritism involved in the cleanup.

Now that President Reagan has moved to clear the air on the EPA, expeditious answers to these questions by Congress, rather than a witch-hunt, would be the proper response.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

ARCO oil pricing probe subject

WASHINGTON — Three federal agencies, two members of Congress and the state of Alaska are investigating the Atlantic Richfield Company's oil pricing methods. They want to find out whether ARCO's low prices at the gas pump are being made possible by improper calculation of the company's windfall profits taxes.

Jack Anderson

It's a bit complicated, but essentially what ARCO is suspected of doing is deducting about $4 per barrel in fictitious transportation costs from the price on which its windfall profits are based. This would cut about $2.40 per barrel from its windfall tax, allowing ARCO to shave competitively crucial pennies from its gasoline prices.

What ARCO saves in taxes, of course, must be made up by the other taxpayers. So the ARCO price cut allegedly is financed by the taxpayers.

ARCO denies any hanky-panky. Its price cuts at the gas pump are due to "ARCO's successful execution and implementation of its marketing plans and strategies, and are not the result of artificial increases in transportation costs," a company spokesman told my associate Tony Capaccio.

Nevertheless, the General Accounting Office, the Federal Trade Commission, the Internal Revenue Service and the state of Alaska are studying ARCO's pricing system. Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, asked the IRS to look into the matter, and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., has turned his energy subcommittee bloodhounds loose on the case.

The controversy involves oil that ARCO drills in Alaska and ships to the lower 48 states. For reasons that are hazy at best, ARCO has chosen to use as its selling price the going rate charged for a barrel of West Texas sour crude transported to the Gulf Coast.

This would be OK if all of ARCO's oil were actually shipped from Alaska to the Gulf Coast. Instead, virtually all of the oil stops at Los Angeles. Yet ARCO subtracts about $4 per barrel in transportation costs as if it had been sent to the Gulf. This lowered the company's windfall tax on most of its Alaskan oil by $2.40 or more per barrel.

Why did ARCO choose the West Texas oil as its initial selling price? The company says it's because its Alaskan oil is of comparable quality.

But investigators suspect that the West Texas crude was chosen precisely so the extra transportation costs could be deducted before the windfall profit is calculated.

ARCO, which has paid almost $2.6 billion in windfall profits taxes since 1980, managed to pay $300 million less in these taxes in 1982 than in 1981. This was done even though the company's daily production increased by 65,000 barrels that year, total revenues remained constant and overall profits increased slightly.

An ARCO spokesman said the decline in windfall taxes was "the result of a general decline in all domestic crude oil prices."

As for the investigators' suspicions about its wellhead price, the ARCO spokesman said: "If we establish a wellhead price that we can't justify, we are not going to get away with that. The IRS is involved on a constant basis with us."

WITH FRIENDS LIKE THESE ...: The story can now be told of how Palestinian guerrillas tried to have Anwar Sadat assassinated in Vienna by misleading the Egyptian president's host, Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky.

It happened in 1981. A close friend of Kreisky, Austrian Jewish leader Heinz Nittel, had been murdered. PLO leader Yassir Arafat, who was given a warm welcome by Kreisky in 1979, told the Austrian chancellor an Arab group opposed to the Palestine Liberation Organization was responsible for Nittel's killing. He offered to send two PLO anti-terrorist experts to help Austrian police crack the case.

Kreisky accepted the offer. But Israeli intelligence told Kreisky that the two anti-terrorist experts were actually assassins gunning for the visiting Egyptian president. Sure enough, the two men were armed to the teeth when they stepped off the plane in Vienna. Kreisky sent them packing.

Despite this apparent evidence of Arafat's duplicity, Kreisky still continues to regard the PLO leader as a friend. The two got along fine when they met several months ago in Majorca when Kreisky was helping to arrange an Israeli-PLO prisoner exchange.

Indeed, Kreisky's limitless tolerance for Arab radicals has been a cause for concern in Washington for years. His recent visit to Washington did little to ease the Reagan administration's concern over his weakness for Arab extremists.

Incidentally, PLO documents captured in Lebanon have enabled Israeli intelligence to finger the assassins of Kreisky's friend Nittel: a PLO affiliate run by the East German secret police. Arafat may not have known this when he lied to Kreisky.

BROADENING HER BASE?: A North Carolina resident who owns land in Florida suspected that Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., had national political aspirations when he kept getting her official newsletter. Not so, insists a Hawkins aide. It's just that the senator is interested in agricultural problems, so she puts all Florida landowners on her mailing list, no matter where they live.

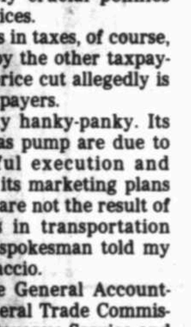
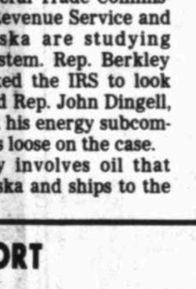
INSIDE REPORT

Gorsuch's woes not self-induced

WASHINGTON — Ann Gorsuch's travail does not stem from any hard two-year record of being sweetheart of the industrial polluters, as shown by one typical private encounter between her and big business.



Rowland Evans



Robert Novak

On Jan. 19, the head of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) met behind closed doors at Washington's International Club with the Business Roundtable's environmental task force headed by U.S. Steel's David Roderick. One corporate president, broadly smiling, three times tried to get her to say what she "really" would do if anti-pollution deadlines expire Dec. 31 without compliance. Each time, Gorsuch said she would "obey the law," on the third occasion raising her voice to warn that nobody should leave the room with a contrary impression.

But trying to "obey the law" does not come close to satisfying the congressional posse chasing Gorsuch. What is wrong and threatens to drive her from government sums up what ails the Reagan administration: an accelerating Democratic counteroffensive against Reaganism; a White House staff all too willing to toss overboard beleaguered officials; pervasive inefficiency.

Gorsuch is by no means without blame. She has not taken sufficient hold on the EPA to be certain in her own mind of no hanky-panky with big business. Her admirers concede her shortcomings as both politician and administrator. But if such deficiencies were cause for dismissal, the Reagan administration's upper levels would be largely unstaffed.

In truth, Gorsuch was under attack from the environmentalist lobby from her first hour in office, even before the claimed maladministration of the "Superfund" to clean up toxic waste. From the start, she posed a threat to permanent national regulation that had not yet been fully institutionalized when Reagan was elected.

Because of the liberal onslaught, a negative verdict on Gorsuch was quickly returned by the president's senior staff in the West Wing. More than a year before the current trouble, senior Reagan staffers deemed her an embarrassment to the president. That has been the consistent West Wing view on the dwindling band of administration officials associated with the conservative movement.

Oddly, however, Gorsuch is not a movement conservative. She did not copy her friend, Interior Secretary James Watt, in building a strong base on the right. Conservative activists claim she brought trouble on herself by not surrounding herself with Reaganites and by letting in too many Carterites accused of being "openly anti-industry." Especially galling to the right is John Daniels, Gorsuch's powerful deputy who worked in the campaign of Maryland's liberal Democratic representative, Mike Barnes.

But the staffer who caused Gorsuch the most trouble was a Reaganite. Gorsuch first turned down Rita Lavelle as an assistant administrator, but Helene von Damm at the White House personnel office insisted. Although not terribly interested in ideological purity, von Damm made sure of administration plums for her colleagues from the Reagan governorship a decade before. Lavelle had been a secretary to a Reagan aide in Sacramento then, and that qualified her for the EPA post she held until fired in the present turbulence.

How Gorsuch became a prime Democratic target of opportunity is a case study of the administration's amateur status persisting beyond midterm. In refusing to offer Congress documents on grounds of executive privilege, Gorsuch was relying on Assistant Attorney General Ted Olson, legal counsel at the Justice Department. Olson, a blue-chip California lawyer, showed on this case, as on others, that he is neophyte in Washington.

Predictably, when the forbidden documents began embarrassing the president, the blame was put not on the responsible lawyers — Olson and White House Counsel Fred Fielding — but on Gorsuch. Only one presidential assistant has telephoned her to offer support (he was also the only Reagan aide who sent flowers during her hospitalization last year). Only one Republican senator, Wyoming's Alan Simpson, defended her at last week's hearings.

Ronald Reagan himself appreciates loyalty, flowing up and down. While preparing for last week's press conference in which he defended her, the president noted that the same old save-the-whales gang was out after Ann. But elsewhere in the White House the feeling is that, for purposes of public relations, Gorsuch will have to go after a decent interval. To them, whether or not she really is the sweetheart of the polluters is academic.

CHARLEY REESE

Government serving big corporations

Does the government of the United States represent the American people or Big Oil, Big Banks, and Big Business? I think it represents the three Mr. Bigs and I cite you a clear example of how your government works against your interests.

Charley Reese

It costs about 50 cents to pull a barrel of oil out of the sand in the Middle East. When Middle East oil was selling for $3.50 a barrel both the Arabs and their Big Oil partners were making a hefty profit.

The oil exporting cartel, known as OPEC, first got its act together in 1970 when it broke existing contracts and raised the price of oil. Now the OPEC nations are small and weak. Without the concurrence of Western governments, they couldn't have pulled it off. The United States, however, supported OPEC and urged other industrial nations not to oppose the new agreement. It would result in stabilized oil prices the State Department claimed.

What it ultimately resulted in was human misery caused by economic hardship on a scale not seen since the Great Depression. It drained one trillion dollars out of the pockets of consumers in the oil-importing nations. It contributed to double-digit inflation in the United States and pushed the Third World nations toward bankruptcy.

Yet, not once, did the United States make any serious attempt to break up the cartel. The government lied to the American people by claiming that there was nothing we could do about it. In the meantime, at the expense of the American people, some groups made huge profits.

The Arab countries naturally profited. So did Big Oil which produces, transports and markets the OPEC oil. Incidentally, while American politicians were yacking about the need for energy independence, Big Oil was reinvesting billions in the OPEC countries to find even more OPEC oil. The Big Banks played a neat but cruel game on the Third World countries. The billions taken from them by OPEC were deposited in the banks which then lent them back to the poorer nations at high interest rates.

Now, of course, this petrodollar game played by OPEC, Big Oil and Big Banks, has caused a world recession. Oil consumption has dropped 45 percent. The cartel is in imminent danger of breaking up as each of its greedy members cuts prices to get their share of a dwindling market.

There is no question that the American people as well as those in every other oil importing nation would benefit tremendously if the price of OPEC oil fell. A drop from $34 a barrel to $20 a barrel would pump more than $90 billion into the economies of the oil-importing nations, according to Charles Krauthammer in an excellent article in the February issue of "The New Republic."

However, at the last meeting of OPEC in Geneva, Big Oil and Big Banking were there in force, frantically trying to preserve the oil cartel and to prevent the price of oil from falling. As you might suspect, the United States government is also against the demise of OPEC.

So here you have your clear example. On one side, you have the economic interests of the American people. On the other, you have the profits of Big Oil and Big Banking. And where do you find the State Department and the White House? On the side of Big Oil and Big Banking.

It doesn't matter which party is in power. The OPEC game was played by Nixon, Ford, Carter and now Reagan. Even the phony windfall profits tax was part of the game. What that was, was an excise tax levied on American oil and leaving untouched the OPEC oil. The tax hurt American independent oil men, not the Big Oil which plays the foreign game.

We, the American people, do not seem to be represented in Washington. Apparently our government has been purchased by a few big corporations. It serves them, not us.

Florida measles outbreak expands to 20 cases

FLORIDA CITY, Fla. (AP) — A week-old measles outbreak that spread to the crowded nursery of a migrant labor camp has grown to 20 cases in Dade County, officials say.

One of two new cases logged Monday was a child living at the Everglades camp, while the other was a pupil at Everglades Elementary School, said the county's Health Department director, Dr. Richard A. Morgan.

Health officials last week inoculated 598 children in the Everglades and Redlands migrant labor camps to keep the illness from spreading.

Jail rioting caused by loss of TV

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Rioting in an overcrowded Orange County cellblock that injured three deputies and 19 inmates flared up after a television set was removed for repairs, officials say.

Jail Commander Capt. George King said fighting in the cellblock started Saturday but escalated Sunday, when the injuries were reported, after the TV set was taken out.

The men's jail has an approved capacity of 1,200 inmates but it houses an average of more than 1,650 each day, The Register reported. A jail clerk who declined to give her name said Monday she could not release any information about the inmate population.

Man dies in pulp factory explosion

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — An explosion at a paperboard pulp factory killed one man, injured four others and blasted a hole in the roof of the factory, officials say.

A steam cooker, used to dry paperboard pulp, blew up Monday, tearing a hole in the roof and scattered parts of the large cooker as far as 30 yards across a street.

The blast badly burned four people and struck one with a "projectile" from the machine, said Fire Battalion Chief Joe Santos.

Nuclear protestors arrested on sub

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — Two environmentalists protesting Navy plans to dump radioactive waste into the Pacific Ocean were arrested after they tried to drape protest banners on a nuclear submarine.

The two members of the environmental group Greenpeace were arrested Monday as they tried to board the USS Nautilus, the nation's first nuclear sub which has been decommissioned and is now a museum.

General: Army not 'hollow'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army Chief of Staff Gen. Edward C. Meyer says he no longer heads a "hollow Army."

In 1980, shortly after he took over as the Army's top officer, Meyer told Congress that the Army was hollow, with many units below their prescribed strength, poor-quality recruits, and shortages of spare parts and ammunition.

Three years later, Meyer told an American Legion conference Monday, "by and large, the problem has been solved."

Since 1980, he said, Congress has spent $153 billion to correct the Army's problems.

When the Reagan administration took office, improved readiness to fight was made a top priority and the services were ordered to rebuild their stocks of ammunition, spare parts, and other items that would be needed to fight a war.

Chicago voters to decide on Democratic mayoral candidate

CHICAGO (AP) — Under the watchful eyes of more than 1,500 federal and state agents, voters decide today whether Chicago will keep its first woman mayor, nominate its first black mayor or restore the Daley name to City Hall.

The Democratic primary, tantamount to election for 50 years, is the most expensive ever in Chicago politics. It is also the most bitter and hotly contested mayoral campaign in nearly three decades.

A million voters were expected to choose among Mayor Jane M. Byrne, seeking a second term; Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, whose father ruled as mayor for a generation; and U.S. Rep. Harold Washington, the most serious black mayoral candidate ever in Chicago.

Last-minute campaigning has focused on the candidates' differences, with Mrs. Byrne and Washington tussling Monday over charges of racism in the Byrne campaign and Daley stumping in white ethnic precincts.

Polls showed that Mrs. Byrne, who trailed when she announced her candidacy last November but soared to a strong lead in January, lost ground to both challengers in the final weeks of the campaign. The race was rated a toss-up.

The winner faces former State Rep. Bernard Epton on April 12. Epton is unopposed in today's Republican primary.

Mild, spring-like weather was forecast, prompting election officials to predict a record turnout among the city's 1.6 million registered voters.

Amid concerns of vote fraud that have tainted the city's reputation in the past, a cadre of U.S. officials was assigned to monitor a non-federal Chicago election for the first time.

Also watching were nearly 900 federal and state prosecutors, 3,000 Chicago police officers and about 250 state and city election workers.

The federal agents were ordered in by U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb, whose office has indicted several people for vote fraud in last November's Illinois gubernatorial race. He vowed that the mayor of Chicago would not be chosen "based on fraud."

"If everything falls into place, we could have an honest election in the city of Chicago," said Kirsten Svare, executive director of Project LEAP, a non-partisan group that combats vote fraud.

The issues in the campaign were Mrs. Byrne's leadership, the $10 million raised for her political war chest, and race.

All three candidates had avoided references to race but the two challengers accused Cook County Democratic Chairman Ed Vrdolyak, a Byrne supporter, of race-baiting. Vrdolyak warned white precinct captains over the weekend that the election was "a racial thing," and said that a vote for Daley was a vote for Washington, Mrs. Byrne's opponents claimed.

Mrs. Byrne repudiated the statement and spent much of her final campaign day in the black community. Vrdolyak denied making the statement.

Washington told a news conference Monday he was concerned about the use of racial campaign tactics but more worried about possible ballot box fraud.

"If there were an honest election in this city, the whole country would go bananas. They would literally be stunned," he said.

Mrs. Byrne, 48, was elected mayor in 1979, when as an outsider she rode to victory on a blizzard that buried the city and her party-backed opponent, Mayor Michael A. Bilandic.

Her first two years as mayor were chaotic with three public strikes and high turnover among top city officials. But in her campaign, she has admitted making mistakes in those early years and cited the city's fiscal condition as evidence of her strong leadership.

Daley, 40, who has long been viewed as heir to his father's job, has focused on his famous family name and Mrs. Byrne's record. He has been endorsed by both major daily newspapers and generally gets good marks for his records as top prosecutor in Cook County.

Washington, 60, has captured the imagination of the black community with a campaign many compare to a crusade, and is mounting a strong get-out-the-vote drive. An articulate, forceful speaker, he used four televised debates to compensate for his lack of financing.

OMB rule prohibits groups from lobbying with federal funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — New regulations issued by the Reagan administration, barring lobbying by non-profit groups that receive federal assistance, are stirring protests from private charities and service organizations.

The rules issued by the Office of Management and Budget, and an order from the Office of Personnel Management, cover organizations that receive federal aid or participate in chairity drives among government employees.

Until now, federal rules have allowed those groups to engage in lobbying as long as they didn't use federal money to finance it.

But the Reagan administration decided it was impossible to sort out money used to provide public services from dollars used in lobbying.

Under the order issued last week, any organization that advocates public policy positions, or sues or lobbies for them, cannot participate in the Combined Federal Campaign, which raises millions of dollars annually from federal employees, as United Way does in the prvate sector.

The new regulations from OMB prohibit groups from using federal funds "directly or indirectly" for political activities.

John Lordon, OMB's chief of financial management, says the new rules aim only "to make sure that public funds don't go for espousing beliefs of one political persuasion or another."

However, Brian O'Connell, president of Independent Sector, an umbrella group representing most of the major public service organizations, said the rules "would substantially reduce the capacity of voluntary organizations to be of public service."

The Alliance for Justice, another association that includes groups ranging from the Consumers Union to the National Wildlife Federation, contends the rule places "a chilling effect" on the First Amendment rights of such groups.

"It would require non-profit grantees to choose between federal funding and any involvement in 'political advocacy' activities," Alliance for Justice said. "It will also result in increased regulation, paperwork and federal monitoring of all activities conducted by grantees."

Tim Saasta, assistant director of the National Committee for Responsive Philanthrophy, said trying to affect government decisions is "a very important function that non-profits have had.

Boy drowns in septic tank

MANCHESTER TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — The drowning of a 5-year-old boy who fell into a septic tank has angered some apartment dwellers who say their deteriorating complex makes them fear for the safety of their children.

"The only safe place for our kids is in the roads because we don't know where to walk around any more," said Marie Straka, a tenant at the Village Green apartments, where David Baber drowned Sunday.

The boy was playing in a lot between two buildings when the ground gave way and he fell into the septic tank, authorities said.

Police said David's mother, Ella Baber, reported him missing about 5 p.m. Sunday. About 90 minutes after police began searching for him, officers discovered a hole in the ground leading into a septic tank where the boy's body was found, authorities said.

Queen Elizabeth II

Monarch to make last Mexican stop

LA PAZ, Mexico (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II and her husband Prince Philip arrive today aboard the royal yacht Britannia at this port city near the tip of the Baja California Peninsula.

La Paz, the state capital of Baja California Sur, is the Britannia's last port of call in Mexico during the British monarch's month-long tour of the Americas.

The royal couple spent Monday at sea after leaving the Pacific coast resort of Puerto Vallarta at midnight Sunday.

The 57-year-old monarch will arive at noon at this city of 100,000 people, located on the arid peninsula some 900 miles south of San Diego, Calif.

During her 3-hour stopover here, the queen will disembark at the pier and walk to the main square to meet the townspeople.

The royal couple will be guests at a luncheon in their honor offered by Gov. Alberto Andres Alvarado.

From here Elizabeth will continue her cruise north to San Diego. She flew in to the popular Pacific resort of Acapulco last Thursday to begin an eight-day visit by yacht along the west coast of Mexico.

Although La Paz is to be the Britannia's last port of call in Mexico, the yacht the will not reach U.S. waters until Friday. The queen will also visit the west coast of the United States and Canada.

On March 1 the royal couple will give a dinner aboard the Britannia for President Reagan and his wife Nancy to celebrate the Reagan's 31st wedding anniversary.

A spokesman said the Britannia may anchor at Scammon's Lagoon, halfway up the Baja peninsula, to give the queen and her husband an opportunity to see the California grey whales that migrate there each year between December and April to mate and calve.

Mexican steel mill to hold production level

MONCLOVA, Mexico (AP) — Mexico's largest steel mill, suffering from Mexico's economic recession and a drop in world demand, plans to hold production this year at its 1982 levels, a company official says.

Sergio Romero Roaro, assistant director of Sidermex, the government's steel monopoly, said the Altos Hornos de Mexico mill lost 16 billion pesos ($107 million) in 1982, the first year the company has lost money.

Devaluations of the Mexican peso against the dollar increased the Sidermex foreign debt to 90 billion pesos ($600 million), Romero Roaro told the newspaper Excelsior.

Altos Hornos plans to produce about 2.2 million tons of steel and export about 500,000 tons of finished products, such as tubing, rods and laminated metal to the United States, Algeria and the Middle East, he said.

Queen Elizabeth II wants to experience the California way of life during her upcoming visit, says the British Embassy in Washington, D.C.

And so she will dine with the Walter Annenbergs at their Palm Springs, Calif., estate; attend an exclusive extravaganza at 20th Century-Fox in Los Angeles; and ride horses with President Reagan and the first lady at their Santa Barbara ranch.

Of course, she also will mingle with the regular folk. The queen is scheduled to see the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in San Diego, drop in at Rockwell International in Downey and take a peek at Stanford University.

Her 10 fun-filled days in California will not exactly be relaxing – nor secluded. She and Prince Philip will be followed by hundreds of media members and security officers.

Because the queen is visiting on the invitation of President Reagan, the United States is ultimately responsible for her safety and will provide hordes of security-minded escorts to aid her own large staff of bodyguards.

The U.S. State Department has issued a whopping 17,000 press passes to members of the media from around the world. "Keep in mind that includes television cameramen, technicians, drivers, etc.," pointed out Charles Anson of the British Embassy in Washington.

Nicholas Ashford, Washington bureau chief of the Times of London, said American press will find covering the queen a much different task than covering President Reagan. The difference: "You have to treat her with respect."

For instance, one does not simply yell questions at Queen Elizabeth, as if she were a mere U.S. president. "But it's hard to imagine a question worth yelling out," said Ashford. "She's not a political figure. You can only talk about the weather with her."

Ashford said American reporters tend to freeze up in the queen's presence. "From my experience, they become unduly formal with her. Yet that's not what she wants — she tries to make you feel comfortable."

Los Angeles British Consulate spokesman Angus Mackay expressed the same sentiment regarding Americans mixing with monarchs.

"We hope people will be relaxed around the queen," he said. "We've had people call us asking, 'Should I wear white gloves to such-and-such event?' We tell them to just be themselves — within reasonable limits."

Queen Elizabeth flew to Jamaica a week ago and is now aboard the royal yacht Britannia, currently sailing up the Mexican coast. She will set foot on California sand — her first trip to these parts of the country — Saturday, when the Britannia docks in San Diego.

While her husband hikes around the San Diego Zoo, Queen Elizabeth will visit the Old Globe Theater, modeled after the Shakespearean theater in her homeland. That night the couple will host one of a number of private black tie dinners aboard the Britannia. As they will most nights of their trip, they will retire following the party to their yacht's sleeping quarters.

Sunday will be a busy day for the queen and the Duke of Edinburgh. After attending service at St. Paul's Church in San Diego, they will zip over to Palm Springs — by air rather than sea, obviously. There they will lunch with multimillionaire Reagan buddy and former British ambassador Walter Annenberg and his wife.

If it's Sunday night it must be Los Angeles. The evening of Feb. 27 Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will grace a Western-style dinner at 20th Century- Fox. Such American favorites as Frank Sinatra will help keep Her Majesty well entertained.

The next day the queen will see the sights in Los Angeles, including Rockewell, City Hall and the Music Center. She and the duke will stay overnight with a British family in Sierra Madre.

Tuesday, March 1, Queen Elizabeth sets sail for Santa Barbara, to wine, dine (on presidential-style barbecue) and ride horses with the Reagans. The first lady will join the queen Wednesday on the Britannia, which anchors in San Francisco 24 hours later.

British prime minister still favors deployment

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

LONDON — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher believes that well-intentioned opponents of nuclear weapons, especially young people, overlook the fact that those weapons have kept the peace in Europe for 37 years and, as long as the Soviet Union possesses them, the Western powers must maintain a balance of nuclear military power.

That is why she will procede with deployment of American cruise missiles in Britain if the U.S. Is unable to reach an agreement with Russia before the end of this year on intermediate range nuclear missiles.

Britain's first woman prime minister still strongly supports President Reagan's "zero option" proposal to create a land-based nuclear weapons free zone in Europe if the Soviets dismantle the 330 intermediate range SS-20 missiles they have most targetted on western Europe. However, since the Soviets have already rejected that offer, she doubts agreement can be reached on it this year.

Like leaders of other European allied governments, she is prepared to support an interim agreement which would limit the number of American Pershing II and cruise missiles that would be deployed on the basis of "balanced numbers" with a sharply reduced force of Soviet intermediate range missiles.

The Soviets have offered to limit the number of their IRMs to the total number of nuclear weapons the West has in Europe, but Moscow insists this must include the British and the French strategic missiles although the Soviets have not offered to include their strategic missiles in this plan. Such an agreement would, therefore, leave the Soviets with strong nuclear weapons superiority in Europe. Both the British and French governments have made it clear they will not agree to including their strategic weapons in the proposed intermediate range agreement.

It is expected President Reagan will propose a compromise interim aggreement soon after the West German elections in March, especially if Christian Democratic Chancellor Helmut Kohl is elected.

Prime Minister Thatcher plans to discuss such an agreement with the president when she holds separate talks with him during her visit to the U.S. in May to attend the economic summit meeting in Williamsburg, Va.

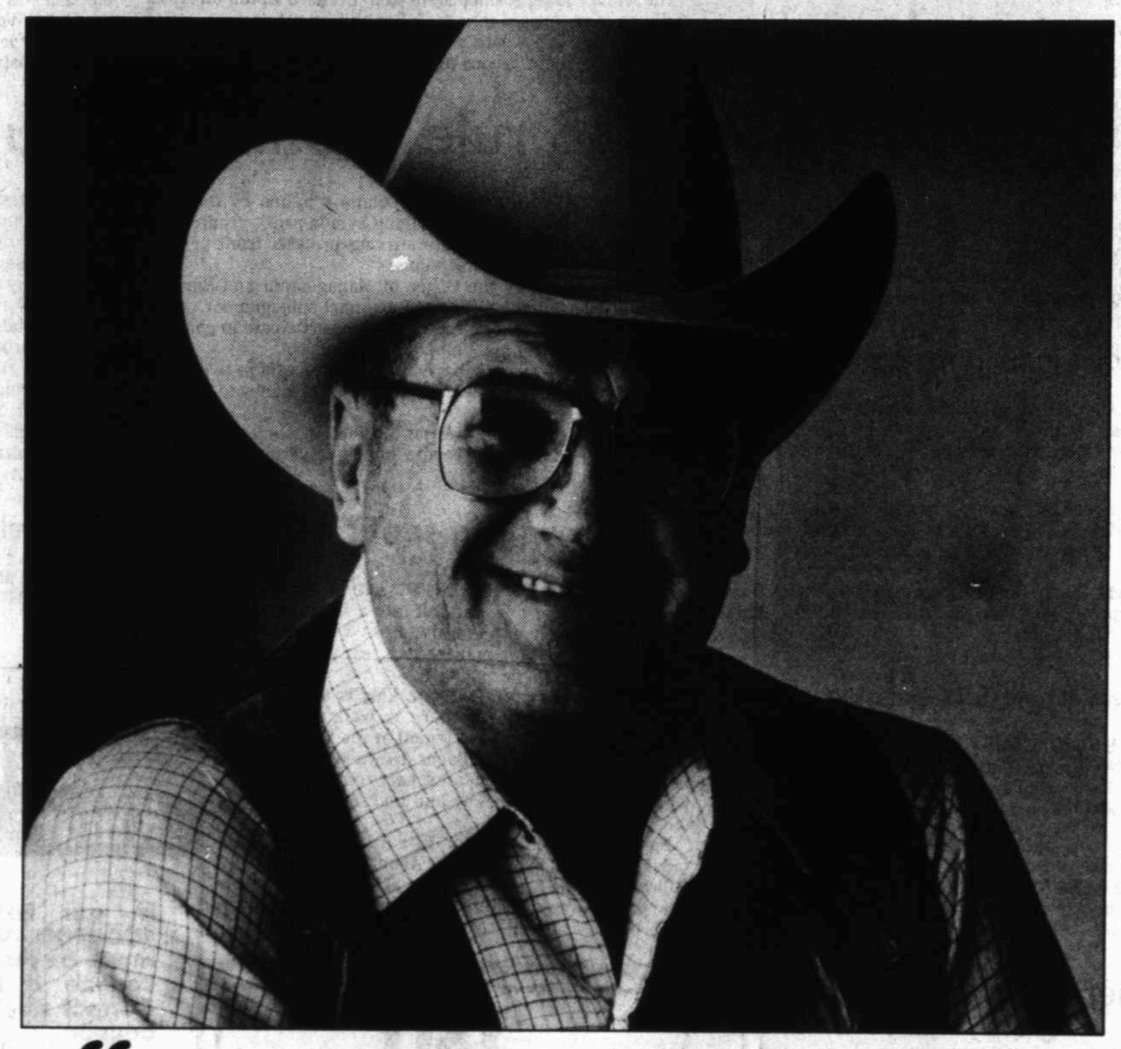
Britain is scheduled to receive 160 cruise missiles of the total of 572 cruise and Pershing II IRMs that NATO decided in 1979 to deploy in Europe starting the end of this year if no limitation agreement was reached with the Soviets. The West has no IRMs in Europe, and NATO wants them as a deterrent to an attack by the overwhelmingly superior conventional Warsaw Pact forces, which have a 3-to-1 superiority in tanks.

A voiciferous minority of so-called peaceniks have been demonstrating against deployment of the cruise missiles in Britain, and calling for unilateral nuclear disarmament by the West.

Mrs.Thatcher, in an interview in the Sunday Telegraph, said that while the demonstrators, especially women, think only of these new weapons going off, she thinks of them "as a deterrent, something to prevent war."

She was scathing about the distinction so many of the pacifists make between nuclear and conventional war. "I must say," she added, "that the way they talk about conventional war makes my blood run cold — as if they were all right and nuclear arms were not. The last war was the worst we have ever experienced. It is wars like that we are trying to prevent with nuclear deterrent which has already given us 37 years of peace. The terrifying thing is that these protesters talk about peace, but they forget the Gulags, the Sakharovs, the tanks in Hungary."

"BRIERCROFT SAVINGS MAY NOT BE IN A CLASS BY ITSELF. BUT IT SURE DON'T TAKE LONG TO CALL THE ROLL."



"Let's talk about West Texas for a minute. This sprawling place had to crawl before it could walk. And, years ago, back in those crawling days, Briercroft Savings was here to help coach it along. Briercroft Savings is one of West Texas' roots. If you've lived here long enough — mighty long — you remember it. And after all these years, they're still doing things right. Booming right along with the rest of the state. But never too big for their britches.

You see, Briercroft Savings didn't get to where they are by being confusing with a lot of high fallutin' talk, or by offering savings plans that were hard to understand. They did it by being up front about what's what and what's not. So, if you're confused by all that's going on around you, come on over and see some just plain folks. They're still dependable. Still doing business like they ought to. And I'm here to tell you that you can depend on 'em. Or my name's not Bum Phillips."

Chaps pull out Annie Oakley guns against OC

Midland College rolls toward Region V play

When Midland College's 5-foot-6 guard Spud Webb (10) finds himself surrounded, he invents ways to see inside like leaping over the arms of Odessa College's Dale Bryant (44). OC's Rick Ford (12) and Ed Dudley (32) think they have Webb cornered.

Midland College was just one step away from duplicating last year's 17-1 Western Junior College Conference championship season after defeating Odessa College 103-67 Monday night. And they did it with the kind of marksmanship that would've made Annie Oakley envious.

A third straight WJCAC title has long since been stowed in the trophy case, but a win over Western Texas College at Snyder Thursday night would provide that last flourish. It would give the Chaparrals a 34-2 conference record for two years and a 49-4 record for its run of three straight championships.

"WESTERN HAS added a 6-8 player and even before that they were a good club that had been improving all along," worries Coach Jerry Stone. "They have a young enthusiastic coach who is learning as the season goes along." That, of course, explains why the Westerners have beaten Amarillo College and Howard College in recent weeks.

However, talk about 17-1 and WTC is just chit-chat, avoiding what everybody really wants to talk about, next week's Region V tournament at the Langford Chaparral Center...and what will come later.

MC already has clinched an automatic berth in the regional and the second place team will get the second spot. The remaining eight teams playoff for the other two spots. In the Northern Conference, McLennan is the champion with Cisco the probable runnerup. Southwest Christian, Ranger and Cooke are scrambling for the other two tickets to Midland.

THE REGION V winner will have to play another Texas team before it gets that return trip to the nationals at Hutchinson. Stone and assistant coach Reggie Franklin scouted as San Jacinto beat No. 1 ranked Laredo by 10 Saturday night. If San Jacinto wins its final two games, it will be the conference representative and Laredo, which has been No. 1 in the land all season, will sit home.

"I know how that feels," says Stone, "We were No. 1 two years ago and then lost in the Region V finals and sat home."

The San Jacinto-Laredo survivor must meet the winner of a four-team playoff in the Eastern Conference. In all probability, that will be Henderson, which went to the national semifinals last year.

AS FOR Monday's game, the story was the pinpoint marksmanship of 6-6 Chester Smith and 6-2 Nate Bufford and perhaps the tenacity or loyalty of 3,800 fans who showed up at Langford Chaparral Center. They made it despite rampaging Wadley, which could have been mistaken for the Mississippi after a spring rain and before they got the levees up.

A broken water pipe turned the concave thoroughfare into a fast-flowing torrent that resulted in routing traffic west and north of MC after the game.

BUT BACK to the game. Smith was 11 of 14 from the field in scoring his 23 points while Bufford riddled the OC zone with 10 of 13. The Wranglers were just lucky the WJCAC doesn't have a three-point rule, the way Nate was shooting from outside.

Anthony "Spud" Webb also knocked in a trio of would-be three-pointers, but for most of the night contented himself with feeding the ball off. Five minutes into the final half, he already had notched 11 assists, teaming up with leaping Smith and Ervin Williams for some spectacular lob layups. Williams had a 10 point night.

The way six-four Jerome Crowe was dominating the defensive boards, every one else could concentrate on breaking down court for the pass and shot.

THE LAST time these teams played, MC won 45-34. This time MC had 48 points by halftime. With 10 minutes to go, Stone began emptying his bench and before it was over every player but one had scored.

Preston Robertson came in to bag nine points in the final nine minutes while Alvin Dunson put the Chaps over 100 with a one-hander from the top of the circle, drawing perhaps the biggest roar of the night.

Believe it or not, OC actually took more shots than the Chaps, 72, but converted only 25 with Al Penny's 19 leading the way. MC, hitting 65 per cent the first half, wound up 44 for 71.

While Midland was raising its WJCAC record to 16-1 and its season's mark to 27-3, Odessa's WJCC losing streak reached 14. The Wranglers are 1-16 and 7-23.

Two Midland fighters win Gloves' trip

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Two Midland Boxing Club fighters fought their way to State Golden Gloves berths Monday night by posting decision victories over their opponents in the 37th Annual Regional Golden Gloves boxing tournament at Ector County Coliseum.

Joel Abila, last year's 112-pound champion, went the distance against defending 119-pound title holder Ray Cortinez of Abilene in an early Open division bout and came away with the decision.

Using excellent defensive ability — dodging and deflecting the shorter Cortinez' blows — Abila was able to take advantage of the fight. When the two fighters were in the middle of the ring, Abila was clearly the dominate force. The only time he seemed to have trouble with Cortinez was when the two were on the ropes.

"He was awkward, very wild with his punches," said Abila. "I was landing my punches and waiting for him to try to counter. He was throwing his right hand hard but I saw it coming and was able to sidestep. He was very strong when I fought inside with him, stronger than me, but I had the faster hands to help keep him away."

At 119 pounds, Abila is finding things a little more difficult in the ring than he did last year at 112.

"When you step up it's a whole different story," he said. "The boxers are taller and stronger. They can eat more and get a few extra pounds. At 112 they're lighter and faster but not as strong."

Midland Boxing Club trainer Rick Fleetwood was pleased with Abila's performance, saying, "Joel just outsmarted him. I thought he (Abila) lost the first round. It took him that round to figure the guy (Cortinez) out but he controled him after that. Cortinez is a good fighter."

THE SECOND MBC victory came from a first-year Open division fighter, Ruben Tagle, a 178-pound lightheavyweight.

Despite suffering a cut in his mouth in the first round and a bloody nose in the second, Tagle was able to dominate his opponent, Vic Walker, with a consistant left jab to the face and occasional combinations that eventually bloodied Walker as well.

"I wasn't really right, I wasn't using my jab as much as I should have," said Tagle. "I need more practice and I'm going to get it at State — hopefully. Walker hit me pretty good but he didn't have me hurt. He's a tough fighter, a good fighter. It was good experience for me."

With his trip to Fort Worth for the State Gloves competition coming up, Tagle wants to "work on my left jab, get it in with more power. I wasn't moving right to throw it, wasn't making the right steps. I'm just glad I won and now I've got to get ready for State in Fort Worth."

EMILIO MENCHACA and Felix Munoz, 112 and 125 pounds respectively, didn't have as much success in the ring Monday night as their teammates, both losing by decision.

Menchaca had trouble reaching his taller opponent, Ramon Carrillo of the Pecos Evening Optimist boxing club, and combine that with a lack of recent fighting experience, the result was his down fall.

"He was just outclassed," said Fleetwood. "Mo (Menchaca) has only had two fights in the last two years. Ramon Carrillo is a super fighter. He's made it to the semifinals the last two years at State. I'm proud of Mo for going the distance with him. I thought he showed good."

"I just didn't have my head on right, that's all," said Menchaca. "It was just me. I was too tense, couldn't loosen up and couldn't shoot back."

Munoz couldn't overcome Odessa Boys Club Tiger Blas Pineda's superior reach. On several occasions he would throw a lunging right hand that would run out of power before it connected and while he was off balance from the throw, Pineda would take the opportunity to get in a few punches of his own.

"He's good," said Munoz. "I fought him two years ago and he was one of the easiest fights I've ever fought. He deserved to win tonight. He hit me harder than any fighter ever has and that surprised me."

AWARDS IN Open, Regular High School and High School football divisions were passed out as each group completed their final Golden Gloves fight card.

Jamie Garcia of Pecos, claimed a decision over defending 147-pound champion Mike Deanda of San Angelo Southside and for his efforts he was named Best Open Fighter. Combining Garcia's victories with those of his teammates throughout the tournament gave Pecos Evening Optimist club the Open team championship.

Dion Delao, 153 of Pecos Barstow, was named the Best Regular High School Fighter, Fort Stockton the best Team Sportsmen and San Angelo Aesteca and Pecos EO tied for team honors. Permian's Robbie Acosta, 142 pounds was named Best High School Football Fighter and his Mojo teammates piled up enough points to win the team trophy. Odessa High won the Team Sportsmen award.

Walker-USFL affair takes another confusing turn

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The Herschel Walker affair has taken another confusing turn.

NCAA enforcement chief David Berst told The Associated Press on Monday that it was against NCAA policy to comment on whether his organization planned to investigate Walker's alleged signing of a professional football contract. However, the New York Times quoted him as saying the NCAA would look into the matter and an investigation would begin soon.

However, Berst told The Associated Press Monday night, "I don't remember saying it that way, although I have hedged on saying that the whole matter is concluded.

"As I recall, the Times asked me that if we were going to look into something like this would we wait forever or try to resolve it quickly. I believe I said that it would not be as immediate as some other things as a result of the national (football) signing date last week."

Berst did say he is satisfied that Walker, the University of Georgia's Heisman Trophy winner and three-time All-American running back, had not signed a multimillion-dollar contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League last week.

Walker held a news conference last Friday and denied reports that he had signed with the Generals. Under NCAA regulations, he would be ineligible next year, his senior season, if he signed the contract, even if he later changed his mind and exercised a reported 24-hour escape clause.

"Herschel, his coach, Vince Dooley, and Georgia officials have maintained good communications with us throughout Herschel's career. As far as I'm concerned, he's eligible. I'm inclined to believe him when he tells me something, but that also doesn't mean we wouldn't look at a matter we're supposed to look at."

Long distance runner Mary Decker Tabb reacts after being named the 1982 Sullivan Award winner in Indianapolis Monday night.

Decker Tabb honored as top amateur athlete

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Distance runner Mary Decker Tabb, who broke seven world records and 10 American standards last year, received the Sullivan Award Monday night as the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union's top athlete for 1982.

The winner of the prestigious award, presented annually since 1930 by the AAU, was announced at an awards dinner at the Indianapolis Convention Center.

Last year's Sullivan Award winner, track star Carl Lewis, made the presentation to Tabb.

"This is the most prestigious award an athlete can win," said Tabb, 24, a native of New Jersey who now lives in Eugene, Ore.

"The only thing beyond this would be an Olympic medal. It's gratifying just to be among a group of athletes like this."

Tabb set women's world records for the indoor mile three times last year, with her best clocking at 4:20.5. During a 41-day span starting last June 5, Tabb set three world and six American records. The world marks were in 5,000 meters, 3,000 meters and the mile.

She said her long-range goal is the Olympics in Los Angeles next year but more immediate, she said, are the world championships this coming July.

"The competition should be just as stiff as in the Olympics. To me, running is a profession. To be as good as I am, you have to look on it with a professional attitude, not monetarily, but in your approach."

Tabb said she started running when she was 11 years old "out of boredom. I was with a girlfriend, and we went to a parks and recreation cross-country meet. It was three-quarters of a mile. She dropped out, and I won the race.

"I got recruited by an AAU coach and$just started doing it. Running started out just as fun, and it became something I really want to do."

Among the other nominees was diver Greg Louganis, 23, a Sullivan finalist for the fourth straight year and runner-up in the balloting to speed skater Eric Heiden two years ago.

Among the other Sullivan finalists Monday night, swimmer Mary T. Meagher was contesting for the award for the third straight year. Synchronized swimmer Tracie Ruiz and figure skater Scott Hamilton were finalists for the second year in a row, and skier Phil Mahre was a finalist for the second time in three years. Mahre, who finished third in voting behind Heiden and Louganis two years ago, did not attend Monday's award ceremony because of competition in Europe.

Among other favorites this year was distance runners Alberto Salazar, both of Eugene, Ore.

Toby Harrah's father killed in car accident

RICHWOOD, Ohio (AP) — The father of baseball star Toby Harrah of the Cleveland Indians was killed in a weekend traffic accident shortly after his car had forced another vehicle off the road, the Ohio Highway Patrol said.

Berton L. Harrah, 69, of LaRue, died late Saturday afternoon when his car left Ohio 37 and struck a tree. Harrah, who was alone in the car, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Trooper Rick Munk of the Highway Patrol's Delaware office said that a short time before the fatal accident, Harrah's car struck another car from behind.

That vehicle, driven by Dale S. Henderson, 64, of Richwood, left the road and went into a ditch. Henderson was not injured.

Munk said that after the accident, Harrah pulled his car into a private driveway, turned around and then headed off in the opposite direction without stopping at the scene.

The fatal accident took place about a mile away, Munk said.

Sputtering Frogs hold on

SWC Basketball

By The Associated Press

Texas Christian Coach Jim Killingsworth compared the first half of the Horned Frogs' game against Baylor to the bus ride between Fort Worth and Waco.

"We chugged and sputtered along and stunk like the fumes on that bus," he said.

The second half was a different story.

Darrell Browder scored 12 of his game-high 16 points in the second stanza as TCU overcame a 13-point halftime deficit to defeat Baylor 51-47 in Southwest Conference action Monday night.

The win kept the Horned Frogs, now 9-5 in SWC play and 18-7 for the year, in third place in the conference race. Baylor, which began the year with its hotest start since 1945, dropped to 2-51 and 10-14.

IN ANOTHER game involving an SWC team, Texas A&M took off in the second half to post a 96-76 win over St. Mary's at College Station. The loss snapped a 10-game winning streak for the Rattlers, who had not lost since Jan. 15.

"In the second half we got back to our bread and butter defense," said TCU's Doug Arnold. "In the second half we reacted fast as compared to slow reaction in the first half. At halftime, they must have thought the game was over."

The Bears dominated the first half, building the 13-point lead behind the scoring of James Stern, who finished with 13 to lead Baylor.

Baylor Coach Jim Haller said he was pleased with his team's performance in the first half.

"The difference in the game was that we didn't hit our shots in the second half that allowed us to apply our press," Haller said. "We had four turnovers in the first half compared to TCU's 14, but you can't press when you don't make a basket."

The Horned Frogs came out storming after the intermission, and finally grabbed the lead at 36-34 when Dennis Nutt hit an 18-footer from the corner.

Nutt, who finished with eight points, gave TCU the lead for good at 38-37 with a driving layup.

The Bears came within one at 40-39 when Ozell Hall, who led all rebounders with 11, hit two free throws.

But then Baylor went cold and failed to score during the next five minutes as TCU opened up its lead.

Freshman guards Doug Lee and Kenny Brown led the Aggie charge in the second half that broke open a tight game.

Down 45-43 at halftime, St. Mary's scored on three straight baskets to open the second half and had cut A&M's lead to 51-48 when Lee and Brown went to work — earning the praise of Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf.

"I THOUGHT Kenny Brown and Doug Lee, our two freshman guards, put on a pretty good show tonight," Metcalf said. "They both have good offensive ability, they're probably the best two shooters, at least with that range, on the squad or maybe that we've had here."

Lee, with 18 points, and Brown, with 17, were among six Aggies in double figures. Tyren Naulls led A&M with 20 points while Claude Riley had 13, Roy Jones had 12 and Lowell McHenry had 10.

Jai Mahone led St. Mary's with 20 points while Gary Jaspard had 19 and Ricky Hooker had 18.

The Aggies ran their season record to 14-12. A&M is 7-5 in Southwest Conference play. St. Mary's dropped to 21-6 overall.

Michigan woos Riggins to jump to new league

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice president of the Michigan Panthers has confirmed reports that the United States Football League team obtained conditional negotiating rights from the Boston Breakers to Washington Redskins fullback John Riggins, according to a published report on Tuesday.

Shire Rothbart, who also is the team treasurer, denied a report that the Panthers already had offered Riggins more than $1 million for a two-year contract, The Washington Post reported from Jacksonville, Fla. But Rothbart said he hoped to arrange a negotiating session including himself, General Manager James Spavital and Riggins "very soon," the Post said.

Houston climbs poll into second

By The Associated Press

The University of Nevada at Las Vegas, the nation's only undefeated major college basketball team, held onto first place today in the The Associated Press college basketball poll for the second week in a row, while Houston climbed into second place and defending national champion North Carolina dropped out of the Top Ten.

The Runnin' Rebels of UNLV, 24-0, received 41 of 57 first-place votes and 1,110 of a possible 1,140 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Houston, 22-2, received five first-place votes and 1,040 points in jumping from fourth place to second. Virginia, 21-3, rose from fifth to third with seven first-place votes and 976 points.

The other four first-place ballots went to Indiana, which totaled 939 points but dropped from second place to fourth.

Louisville climbed from ninth place to fifth with 842 points, followed by Arkansas with 827 points, Villanova 777, UCLA 743, St. John's 707 and Kentucky 637.

Last week, fifth-place Virginia was followed by St. John's, Arkansas, Villanova, Louisville and UCLA.

This week's Second Ten consists of North Carolina — the Tar Heels lost three straight games last week — Wichita State, Syracuse, Memphis State, Ohio State and Missouri tied for 15th, Iowa, Georgetown, Boston College and Tennessee.

Last week, it was Kentucky, Missouri, Memphis State, Georgetown, Wichita State, Iowa, Syracuse, Boston College, Oklahoma and Ohio State.

Oklahoma, which split two games last week, was the only casualty. The Sooners were replaced in the Top Twenty by Tennessee.

Leafs stay on target despite offside

NHL Roundup

By The Associated Press

Rick Vaive may have been offside, but the Toronto Maple Leafs remained on target.

Vaive's 40th goal of the season in the second period erased a 1-0 deficit and the Maple Leafs went on to defeat the Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2 Monday night, extending their longest unbeaten streak of the National Hockey League season to four games and vaulting them over the idle Detroit Red Wings into the fourth and final playoff spot in the Norris Division.

"I don't know whether I was over the line or not," Vaive said. "The linesman didn't think it was offside, and that's good enough for me. I'll take it. I've got a good shot at 50 goals, and if I make it, that'll be great. But the thing right now is getting points for the team."

Pittsburgh Coach Eddie Johnston said he looked at a videotape replay of Vaive's goal and insisted, "The play was five feet offside."

At Toronto, goals by Peter Ihnacak and Terry Martin early in the final period sealed the Maple Leafs' triumph over Pittsburgh. The Penguins, who have won only one of their last 23 games, led 1-0 after 20 minutes on Paul Gardner's power-play goal but Toronto got second-period goals from Vaive and Dave Farrish on a power play to take a 2-1 lead.

Sabres 4, Devils 4

At East Rutherford, N.J., the Devils took a 4-2 lead into the third period, but Buffalo rallied behind Gilles Hamel's second goal of the game and Cyr's shot. Hamel cut New Jersey's lead to 4-3 at 4:30.

The Devils jumped to a 2-0 lead 5:36 into the game. Don Lever scored a short-handed goal at 2:46 of the first period, banging in a rebound of his own shot, and Paul Gagne blasted a 15-footer over the shoulder of Buffalo goalie Jacques Cloutier, who was then replaced by Bob Sauve.

Hamel's goal at 6:39 of the opening period and Tony McKegney's score early in the second period tied the game. The Devils went ahead 4-2 on Brent Ashton's power play goal at 7:08 of the second period and an unassisted goal by Bob Lorimer at 11:46.

Democrats' politicking troubles AFL-CIO leaders

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — Grassroots campaign organizing by Democratic presidential hopefuls is making it harder for AFL-CIO leaders trying to unify labor behind just one candidate, say top union officials.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Monday at the federation's weeklong policymaking meeting that labor officials are striving for ways to cope with "pressures from the various candidates at the local level."

Kirkland acknowledged that holding the line against premature endorsements by the federation's rank-and-file is becoming more difficult.

The problem, AFL-CIO political director John Perkins said, is that Democratic White House aspirants — whom he did not name — want unionists to become precinct soldiers. That is at odds with the leadership's quest to keep the troops in step during the march to the hoped-for national labor movement endorsement, he said.

"President Kirkland has sent a communication out to state federation offices and central (AFL-CIO) bodies outlining the policies of non-involvement," Perkins said.

The AFL-CIO, breaking with tradition, is trying to unify the union movement behind a candidate no later than December, or well before the opening of the 1984 presidential primary and caucus season.

A meeting of the federation's general board, consisting of the heads of about 100 affiliated unions and leaders of state and central labor federations, will be called to see if such a consensus can be found.

To win endorsement, a candidate would have to gain a two-thirds majority of the labor officials, who would cast weighted ballots reflecting the size of their unions.

The problem of commitments to candidates on the local level was disclosed as former Vice President Walter F. Mondale on Monday joined Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Gary Hart of Colorado as a declared candidate for president.

Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew is scheduled to enter the fray later this week. And Sens. John Glenn of Ohio and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina are coveting the 1984 Democratic nomination, although neither has yet committed himself to a candidacy.

Kirkland denied that Mondale was virtually assured labor's "consensus endorsement."

"I don't have any grounds for making that assumption," he said, "because I have not conducted any canvass of our organizations.

"I think Fritz Mondale is a longtime friend of labor, as are many of the other candidates," he said. "We wish them all well."

The AFL-CIO's 35-member executive council was to meet privately today with Cranston, who has spent several days campaigning for the labor endorsement.

"I don't think it's a life or death matter" to get that endorsement, said Cranston, who is at the meeting lobbying for his candidacy. "You can win without the endorsement. I'd rather win with it."

The policymaking body, meanwhile, called for enactment of a $68.5 billion job-creation and anti-recession program. The federation seeks $22.5 billion in supplemental federal spending in the current budget year and $46 billion in fiscal 1984, which begins Oct. 1.

The traditionally hawkish labor board did not call for cutting the defense budget or freezing it at fiscal 1983 levels. But it did say it could support hiking the Pentagon budget only by a range of 5 percent to 7 percent, after inflation, instead of the 10 percent "real" increase sought by President Reagan.

The federation said the government could finance additional defense costs with a surtax on individual income tax rates. And it said the cost of the expensive anti-recession program could be offset by closing some $41 billion in tax "loopholes" built into the three-year, $750 billion tax cut legislation enacted in the summer of 1981.

Big boom foreseen by lunar explorer

By Hearst Feature Service

The American economy has stopped growing and many economists pesimistically see this development as a product of permanent weakness in American society.

But the chairman of the first lunar-exploration committee and founder of NASA's Goddard Institute for Space studies makes a strong argument that the opposite is true in the March issue of Science Digest.

"We are at the beginning of the biggest boom in American history — a period of unparalleled prosperity and economic growth," asserts Robert Jastrow, currently professor of earth science at Dartmouth. "The reasons have a great deal to do with science and its first cousins, research and development."

In a revealing analysis, Jastrow, who set up the U.S. priorities for the scientific investigation of the moon, debunks most of the oftstated reasons for America's stagnation. It is not, he says, high-priced labor; it is not too much social welfare spending; it is not astronomical deficits, nor is it lack of concentration on resarch and development.

"What is killing our productivity? If we could identify the villain we could cast him out," Jastrow says. "But there is no villain. The trauma we are passing through now is not a depression but a natural interlude between two great waves of economic growth. American industry is shedding its skin, casting off old technologies and developing new ones. But the new skin has not yet hardened."

The new skin, in Jastrow's view, is based on new technologies such as computers and micro-electronics, robotics, fiber optics, biotechnology, and long-distance communications.

"They have not yet developed to the point where they can take up the slack in employment and industrial output created by the decline of the aging enterprises - the smokestack industries of steel, chemicals, autos, and so on," he believes.

While Jastrow rejects accepted explanations for the current stagnation, he is in complete agreement with economists who insist that productivity must be increased — through high technology or otherwise.

Lane Kirkland, President of the AFL-CIO speaks at a press conference following yesterday's opening meeting of the labor organization's 35-member executive council. The union will meet all week.

Supreme Justices to mull windfall profits oil tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether the government may continue to collect billions of dollars under the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil.

The court said it will review a ruling that declared the tax unconstitutional. The justices' decision is not expected until next year.

The government has continued to collect the tax pending the outcome of the appeal acted on today. The levy produced an estimated $26 billion in revenue as of last Oct. 1 and is expected to yield more than $40 billion more over the next five years.

U.S. District Judge Ewing T. Kerr ruled last Nov. 4 in Cheyenne, Wyo., that the 3-year-old tax is unconstitutional. But he allowed the government to continue collecting the revenue while his decision was appealed.

KERR SAID THE tax is illegal because it exempts new oil produced above the Arctic Circle, thereby excluding the giant Prudhoe Bay Field on the North Slope of Alaska.

The Constitution requires all federal taxes to be uniform throughout the nation, Kerr said.

Government lawyers argued that the exclusion is legitimate in order to encourage exploration in a remote area.

"Because of its remote location, fragile environment and extreme climatic conditions, the production of North Slope oil involved risks and costs that were far greater than the risks and costs of developing domestic oil properties elsewhere," the government's appeal said.

IT ALSO NOTED THAT Congress anticipated the wellhead price of North Slope oil would be $8 or $9 less per barrel than prevailing oil prices in other producing states.

In January, the Supreme Court turned down a Justice Department request for emergency consideration of the case. The government had hoped the court would announce a ruling on the tax's constitutionality by July.

The Justice Department said then that "the magnitude of the sums at stake" had created "fiscal uncertainty (that) threatens to disrupt the federal budgetary process."

The original lawsuit against the government was filed by a small oil company, Calvin Petroleum Corp. of Fort Lupton, Colo., and three Wyoming oil royalty owners.

MORE THAN 30 other parties joined the challenge, including the major oil-producing states of Louisiana and Texas. They say the law violates states' rights.

The 1980 tax was imposed on oil when decontrol of prices was accelerated. The tax actually is applied to sales prices rather than to oil industry profits.

The oil tax takes as much as 60 percent of each price increase above 1979 levels.

St. Johns doing something about problems

By ANDREW JAFFE
Hearst Feature Service

George St. Johns, a longtime Reagan loyalist, is what you might call a "cynical idealist" — someone with a romantic vision of what might be and not much confidence the U.S. government will work to bring it about.

The grandson of the famed writer, Adela Rogers St. Johns, George got a bitter greening during the late '60s and early '70s, when he tried to hook his star to the banner of Richard Nixon and other Republican notables.

A year after graduation from Pierce College in 1963, St. Johns became field director for Richard Nixon's California campaign and, when Nixon won, sought a Washington position as the White House top adviser on youth affairs. Nixon chose Oklahoma football coach Bud Wilkinson.

St. Johns was too proud to ask a second time. Instead, he worked during the next six years for a string of unsuccessful Republican candidates. In 1974, when he failed to get Bill Jacquin elected governor of Arizona in the wake of Watergate, St. Johns realized that he had enough: "I had become a mercenary. It was time to get out (of consulting) and learn how to be a good citizen."

St. Johns organized a small advertising design agency. Three years later he sold his interest and tried something a bit more ambitious: to take on the ballooning American trade deficit.

With $125,000 in seed money and another partner, St. Johns started "Showcase USA," a bimonthly catalogue of American goods and services sent by seamail to 33,000 senior buying executives in 150 countries around the globe. For $175 a year, an American firm can become a member of St. Johns' Association of American Export. With membership comes the opportunity to be listed in the association's directory, to get access to the magazine's "trade leads" and occasionally to have products featured in trade bulletins sent out to overseas buyers.

In the two years of its existence, membership has grown to 2,000. St. Johns is still refining the pitch for his Sell Overseas America, the parent group which controls the association. Next year, he would like to set up an international trade conference, Exportarama '84, in order to generate more excitement among members.

The trouble with all this worthy effort is that just about everything he and the association does is duplicated to some extent by the Commerce Department.

Somehow, St. Johns must confront Reagan and Congress to mount a much greater effort into selling American products overseas.

"Is the government doing enough? No!" says St. Johns, a ruggedly handsome executive in an office crowded with mementos of his years with Reagan and Nixon. "About 120 years ago this was a trading nation. The Yankee traders could speak the languages and knew the attitudes of the people they did business with. But all that went down the toilet when our forefathers crossed the Mississippi.

Braniff decision appealed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration and Continental Airlines have asked a federal appeals court to stop a plan under which Pacific Southwest Airlines would use about 30 idle Braniff International jets to start a new Texas division.

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon was expected to rule today on requests that he stay his order approving the deal, under which PSA plans to hire up to 2,000 former Braniff employees.

The FAA and Continental asked for an emergency stay from the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, according to Rufus Garrett, an attorney for Delta Air Lines, another carrier opposed to the deal.

The agreement originally was approved Jan. 31 by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers, who is hearing Braniff's bankruptcy case.

Braniff, facing a debt of about $1 billion, ceased operations May 12 and filed for protection from its creditors the next day in Flowers' court in Fort Worth.

Business group pushes political involvement

"Get involved in politics or get out of business" is the theme chosen by a statewide business organization for a series of meetings to be held this month.

The Texas Association of business (TAB), sponsor of the affairs, will hold one session of the statewide meeting series the Airport Executel, near Midland-Odessa Air Terminal, Thursday at 11:45 a.m.

TAB is one of the oldest and largest state business alliances in the nation, representing nearly 4000 member-firms across Texas.

The TAB Region III Chairman Barry Welton, of End Devices Inc., Midland, said the purpose of TAB is to maintain and enhance the environment for business and industry in Texas.

The local meeting is designed to outline the Association's legislative priorities and to give the local business community an opportunity to make their views heard.

Principal speaker at the meeting will be 1983 TAB State Chairman Joe Hughins, Cairman of the Board and President of L-K Industries Inc., Houston.

The TAB spokesman, Welton, said everyone in business should attend and will be welcome at the meeting. According to Welton, reservations for the event may be secured by contacting Ralph Nelson, president of Hy-Bon Engineering. Phone 915 682-5344.

Editors should 'lay out hard news,' Asner says

Ed Asner

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Actor Ed Asner, the hard-nosed city editor on the "Lou Grant" television series, told some real editors that they shouldn't hesitate to hold up a mirror to society.

Asner, speaking Monday to the midwinter meeting of the Inland Daily Press Association, said laying out the hard news may seem cruel, but it's necessary.

Through investigative reporting, he said, newspapers are fulfilling a responsibility that may infuriate their readers, but bring about change.

"One thing about holding up a mirror to your readers, they don't like it much," said Asner. "Not only do you become the bearer of bad tidings, you arouse the emotion of not wanting to know what's going on."

Dolores Hope

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Delores Hope, wife of comedian Bob Hope, has been honored for her contributions to the USO, an organization with which her husband has been associated for decades.

"Delores Hope is one of the most gracious ladies ever to serve the USO," said Virginia Rutledge Holley, USO president, announcing that Mrs. Hope would receive the USO's Distinguished American Award in a dinner ceremony Monday night.

"She has entertained thousands of our military troops throughout the world and, moreover, numerous institutions within the United States have gained from her concern for the welfare of others. Assuredly, she epitomizes dedicated service and a sterling example for all Americans," Mrs. Holley said.

"What everyone knows is that she has been so strongly supportive of husband Bob in their marriage..." Mrs. Holley said. "What many people do not know is that she has made trips to entertain our service people in such far-flung places as Anchorage, Alaska, Southeast Asia, Guam and several other distant spots."

The Hopes celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary this year.

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the diminutive Indian guru made famous by the Beatles almost two decades ago, now speaks of the late 1960s as the "passing days of ignorance."

"We are now in the age of enlightened days," the founder of Transcendental Meditation said at a press conference Monday.

The guru, claiming 3 million followers worldwide, said he wants to establish a South American capital for the Age of Enlightenment.

He also announced he has a "simple solution" for the problems facing Brazil, based on 15 minutes of meditation twice a day. He said the government should encourage people to undertake his form of meditation to end "all suffering, all problems."

Comparing government to a parent, the guru said, "Government is the father in the family who wants everyone to be very, very happy."

He said he will present his ideas to the ministers of health and education.

'Arthur-grams' could cost performer Moore money

Hearst Feature Service

Arlan Day never thought his idea for "Arthur-grams" would make him a million dollars. On the other hand, he never thought it could cost him a million dollars, either.

But that is what "Arthur-grams" stand to cost Day if Warner Bros. and Orion Warner Co. have their way. Those corporate giants have sued Day, a soft-spoken, personable young songwriter and performer, to the tune of one million bucks for taking out an ad offering to deliver an Arthur-gram to anyone, anywhere, anytime.

Remember the film "Arthur," starring Dudley Moore as an immensely wealthy, eternally besotted libertine who finds love and happiness with a poor girl from Queens? The movie earned Warner, Orion, et al, about $60 million.

An Arthur-gram is a comic routine delivered in drunken, Arthur-esque style by Day. It costs a minimum of $75, for which Day will arrive at the recipient's home or office and do a complete, 15- to 20-minute "Arthur" schtick, including a stint at the piano, if available (Day is also a classical pianist), written specifically for the recipient.

DAY, WHO incidentally bears a close physical resemblance to Moore, does a very good Arthur.

"I've been a fan of Dudley Moore's ever since I was a boy in England," Day said in an interview, "and I've always had fun imitating the voices and the characters he does. The last thing I would want to do is to harm him (Moore) in any way. I started the Arthur-gram thing because everybody said I do a great imitation, and I thought it would be great fun. It's not something I'm making a lot of money at."

Day figures he had delivered perhaps a couple of dozen Arthur-grams since he started the service a few months ago. Recent recipients of Arthur-grams have included Hugh Hefner, the cast of "Dallas" and, you guessed it, Dudley Moore himself, who recently underwent an Arthur-gram on the set of his upcoming film, "Unfaithfully Yours."

"He loved it," Day said, describing how Moore lapsed into the Arthur character for a few minutes of "dueling Arthurs" with Day. "He said it was marvelous."

Attorneys for Warner and Orion, on the other hand, thought the whole idea was somewhat less than marvelous, believing as they did that Day's Arthur-grams were somehow encroaching on their turf. Soon after Day took out a newspaper ad pitching his Arthur-gram service, he got a love letter from the studio legal department.

"IT WAS A standard 'cease-and-desist' letter," Day said. "I contacted Orion to try to explain what I was doing, but they didn't want to hear it."

When Day failed to cease and desist, attorneys for Warner Bros. and Orion Warner Co. filed suit in federal court, asking for a permanent restraining order against Day and $1 million in punitive damages.

John Schulman, one of the attorneys representing the studios, said the $1 million figure was selected because the studios did not yet know how much actual damages they may have suffered at the hands of Day and his Arthur-grams.

Have the batteries of corporate lawyers dissuaded Day from his self-appointed task, that is, the continued delivery of Arthur-grams? Not hardly, he said. Although it's possible he may eventually come to some sort of licensing agreement with the studios, for now he will continue to deliver Arthur-grams whenever and wherever necessary.

Soviet pianist follows her violinist son to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet pianist Bella Davidovich fled to America for artistic freedom, of course, but she admits with a smile that there was another important reason. She is a mother who sorely missed her son the violinist.

Her decision to leave the Soviet Union was inevitable, she says, when her son, Dimitri Sitkovetsky, abandoned the Moscow Conservatory in May 1977 to complete his violin studies at the Juilliard School in New York City.

A widow since 1958, the piano virtuoso called Dimitri — her only son — once a week from Moscow while he was in New York. The year after he left, in 1978, the Soviet government inexplicably canceled all her foreign tours.

"His leaving was the reason everything fell apart for me," she said in a recent interview at the Kennedy Center, where she performed with the National Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Mstislav Rostropovich.

"My doors began to close. Many concerts were canceled, and I was deprived of the chance to see him at all. To my students at the Moscow Conservatory I became a 'white crow,' calling a lot of attention to myself," she said through an interpreter.

"I missed him. Sooner or later I had to move to be with him," she said.

Laughing softly, Miss Davidovich explained, "Well, I am a Jewish mother. What can I tell you? Every mother wants to be close to her son."

Her application to emigrate was approved in a mere six months, and she moved in October 1978 into a quiet, one-bedroom apartment in Queens, 12 miles east of Manhattan. Her mother and sister traveled with her.

Miss Davidovich's neighbors knew nothing about her, and the American musical public was hardly aware of her arrival. She attracted none of the fanfare that greeted such celebrated defectors as Rostropovich, the great Soviet cellist who shared her hometown of Baku near the Caspian Sea.

Yet in her native land, she was ranked with Emil Gilels and Sviatoslav Richter as a legendary piano virtuoso and held the title of "Deserving Artist of the Soviet Union," the second highest level of state honor.

Miss Davidovich was a child prodigy who began playing at the age of 3. She performed a Beethoven concerto at 9, entered the Moscow Conservatory at 18 and three years later won first prize at the Chopin Competition in Warsaw in 1949 — the last time a Soviet pianist accomplished that feat.

It was not long, however, before her reputation was established in her new homeland. Her sold-out debut at Carnegie Hall moved Newsweek magazine to declare that her "command of the keyboard...as awesome in its ease and eloquence."

Miss Davidovich, 54, is making 70 concert appearances this season, in solo recitals or with major U.S. and European orchestras, and has played with her 28-year-old son in San Francisco and Princeton, N.J. She has an apartment in Manhattan which she shares with Dimitri when he visits New York.

A master of Chopin, Schumann and other romantic composers, Miss Davidovich tailors her selections to fit her unusually small hands. There are certain concertos by Rachmaninoff, Liszt, Brahms, Ravel and Tchaikovsky that she will not play.

Still, she says, "pianists are very lucky, for they have such a huge repertoire, and I can always find a repertoire that fits the size of my hands. The power doesn't depend on small or large hands."

She and her son, though close personally, do have occasional "professional arguments," she acknowledges. "He has young ears, and contemporary ones at that," she says, while her musical upbringing during the Stalin era left her with limited exposure to modern composers.

Nonetheless, she said, "I always listen very carefully to Dimitri's opinions."

Tenor Placido Domingo dashes to the stage door entrance of the Metropolitan Opera at Lincoln Center in New York City Monday night. He sang the aria "L'Anima ho stanca" from Cilea's "Adriana Lecouvreur" in the first act, and then ran through the Lincoln Center to the stage door of the New York State Theater where he sang the theme song for a taping of a PBS special, "Gala of the Stars, 1983." He then ran back to the opera house for the second act.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Eye surgery can be on outpatient basis

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter needs an operation for cross-eyes. The doctor says she won't even have to stay in the hospital overnight. I would like that but I don't like to take shortcuts when it comes to my child's health. Can an operation be any good if the patient is in and out in the same day? — Mrs. F.L., Gainesville, Fla.

Dear Mrs. L.: Some aspects of eye surgery have changed dramatically over the years. Cataract operations, for example, used to require extended hospital stays; today, if the person is in good health, the operation can be performed on an outpatient basis. Of course, if a problem develops, the patients can always be kept overnight.

Dr. Michael Cobo, of Duke University's Eye Center, notes that operations for low-risk cataract surgery, routine eye plastic surgery, or surgery to correct cross-eyes can be performed in the morning, and the patient would be ready to be discharged that afternoon.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had ulcerative colitis but it is now inactive. I would still like to have a family. Would a pregnancy do any harm to me or to the baby? — Gertrude, Atlantic City, N.J.

Dear Gertrude: Most pregnant women who have ulcerative colitis generally have no problems with the delivery or the health of their babies. However, if you were to become pregnant at a time that the disease was active, it would be likely to remain active or even to worsen during the pregnancy. The worsening, if it does occur, is most likely to happen during the first three months of the pregnancy.

I suggest you discuss your plans with your physician and with your obstetrician even before you become pregnant so that they might review them with you in greater detail.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm in pretty good health and I've never smoked but my blood pressure is a little high. I know that some friends of mine who are about in the same situation I'm in are taking pills for their blood pressure; my doctor disagrees. Isn't it poor practice to ignore high blood pressure even if it is mild? — Kip, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Kip: The fact that a physician does not prescribe drugs in the treatment of high blood pressure does not mean that the problem is being ignored. I have been able to reduce hypertension in my own patients through a combination of weight control, sodium restriction, and exercise, and your physician may have the same approach in mind.

Alleged murderess takes lie detector test on television

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Caril Ann Fugate, pictured 25 years ago as a willing companion in a "Bonnie and Clyde" murder spree, sobbed with relief after taking a nationally-televised lie detector test that she hoped would clear her — but the results were inconclusive.

Miss Fugate, 39, contended she was forced into going along with Charles Starkweather on a grisly two-day rampage in January 1958.

Miss Fugate, now of Lansing, Mich., appeared Monday on F. Lee Bailey's syndicated program "Lie Detector" to answer questions about the murder spree that left 10 people dead, four of them members of her own family in Lincoln, Neb.

Polygraph expert Ed Gelb, who administered the tests, said Miss Fugate's reactions to the questions didn't "tell us a heckuva lot" and that Miss Fugate didn't show much reaction either to control questions or to questions relating to the murder spree.

The polygraph specialist said Miss Fugate's breathing seemed to show the control questions were of more interest to her than the three "relevant" questions.

But Bailey, a well-known criminal lawyer, said he was "pretty convinced" that the crime was such a "horrendous" part of Miss Fugate's life that "we would have seen it" if she had lied about her reasons for accompanying Starkweather.

At that point, Miss Fugate turned away from the camera sobbing and put her head on Bailey's shoulder.

Starkweather, a 19-year-old garbageman from Lincoln, was tried and executed in 1959. Miss Fugate, 14 at the time of the killings, spent 18 years in a Nebraska prison for second-degree murder.

"We were painted as a Bonnie and Clyde, which is not what really happened," Miss Fugate told Bailey in a brief interview.

During her trial and the few times she has talked publicly about the killings, Miss Fugate said Starkweather held her hostage by threatening the lives of her family. She said she had no idea her stepfather, mother and 2-year-old half-sister already were dead when she agreed to go with him.

Miss Fugate said the slayings were triggered when she broke off their relationship at her parents' insistance just before the spree began.

SWCID pleas possibly falling on deaf ears

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Their cries for acceptance and understanding often go unheard in a world of sound.

They are 107 hearing-impaired students, seeking education, training and knowledge at Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

Now, the very institution which has helped them better cope in a seemingly alien society is itself handicapped by the deaf ear of the Legislature.

Trustees of Howard County Junior College District requested a budget of $11 million for SWCID. Only $2 million was granted. Unless $5 million in additional funds are received, the facility could slam its doors on the deaf by summer.

But SWCID officials and community supporters are not going to give up without a fight.

"WE PROBABLY won't know (SWCID's fate) for sure until final appropriations are passed," said Dr. Charles Hays, president of HCJC District. "We're getting some positive responses but nothing you can put your finger on. We still have an uphill battle."

The first hurdle to clear will be the March 8 meeting of the Budgets and Oversights Committee, a subcommittee of the House Higher Education Committee. "We're hoping they will include us in their consideration," said Hays. "We're doing lots of visiting right now with members of the House and Senate."

A major problem, said Hays, will be to surmount a dearth of perception by lawmakers. "Some legislators believe (SWCID) is a local community effort and should be funded by the community," he explained. "But this is not true...We think it is a statewide project and should be funded by the state. There's a lack of understanding on their part."

In an effort to alleviate that problem, almost 5,000 Big Spring residents have banded together via petition, letters and telephone calls.

"WE ARE TRYING to reach out into other communities in the state to get other legislators aware and interested in the need for the institution," said Sharon Andrews, who is spearheading the drive. A former SWCID registrar who resigned to assume a ministry of music at First Christian Church, she regards her attempts to save SWCID "not so much as a Christian responsibility but as a joy...There is a great need for an institution such as this."

Within the past two weeks, 4,543 persons have signed petitions supporting SWCID and asking the Legislature to reconsider its budget. "People pretty generally are in agreement they want SWCID to stay," said Ms. Andrews. "Local response has been tremendous."

Cries to save SWCID also have echoed to the far corners of Texas. "We're getting calls from legislators from various places across the state," said Hays, "and it's because of the interest we're generating in different constituents."

Both Hays and Ms. Andrews suggested that SWCID supporters express their concern to their respective state legislators.

Out-of-state tuition increases also have concerned supporters, who are petitioning for a more equitable tuition policy. This year, a student from outside of Texas was forced to pay approximately $4,350 a semester — a development which resulted in a drop in enrollment of almost 25 percent from the spring semester of 1982.

"WHEN IT created SWCID, the Legislature said that out-of-state students would pay the actual cost of education," explained Hays. "Legislators believed it was time Texas stopped paying for the education of persons from other states."

That ruling was the first of its kind implemented for any state-supported institution, and SWCID thus far is alone in dealing with it.

"I don't believe in any way (legislators) were trying to pick on the hearing impaired — it just turned out that way," said Hays. "It was the last institution they created...I agree with (their philosophy) for a matter of fact, but if we do it for one group we're going to have to do it for all."

When the first SWCID classes were held, existing buildings at old Webb Air Force Base were used. But increased emphasis on vocational-technical programs have rendered the facilities inadequate and spawned a need for additions — the very root of SWCID's budgetary problems.

"We've got to have at least $7 million, and a big part of that is for construction," noted Hays. "Howard County Junior College District just doesn't have the money to build the kind of facilities (SWCID) needs."

Beware winds of March

'Tis the season for property owners to be wary of potential fire hazards, according to the president of the Texas Fire Chiefs Association.

Chief Tom Foster, Lubbock's fire chief and president of the TFCA, cautions Texas homeowners that while fire safety should be a year-round concern, the dry and windy days of February and March are especially notorious for producing potentially hazardous conditions.

"People are normally more conscious of fire safety in the summer after a long dry spell," said Foster, in a news release issued recently. "But February and March, which normally have long periods of low humidity combined with strong winds, create almost ideal conditions for fires to start.

"Since most Texans do not feel the dry heat of a summer drought during these two months, they are probably not as alert to the potential threat of a home fire as they could be," Foster said.

Jerry Petree, Midland's fire marshal, concurred with Foster's assessment and said the whistling winds of a West Texas winter are especially dangerous.

Petree said the dry conditions during February and March nurture grass fires, which may be spread quickly by gusty winds.

"In total, this time of the year is a bad time of the year for grass fires," Petree said.

Foster said people whose homes are roofed with untreated wood shingles, or who live in neighborhoods were such roofs are common, should be especially wary because a fire fed by dry material and spurred by high winds could hopscotch through a neighborhood.

"These weather conditions can make combustible building materials such as untreated wood shingles highly susceptible to fire," Foster said.

To help Texas homeowners avoid problems with fire, the TFCA offers several suggestions:

—Cut and trim back dry, dead grass and other dead foliage near the house. Although the lawn is dead, the TFCA also recommends watering the lawn to create a "buffer fire zone" around the house.

—Do not pile combustible material near the house.

—Change or clean furnace filters. A poorly maintained heater can overheat during winter months, when thermostats are kept at higher temperatures.

—Allow ashes from fireplaces and stoves to stop burning before depositing them in the trash. Ashes can be watered down, or stored in a metal container, until extinguished.

—Extinguish all smoking materials before tossing them aside.

Eugene Fodor to perform

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

He began playing the violin at the age of 5. At 16, he was a student at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. By the time he was 23 years old he had won the Paganini International Competition and the Tchaikovsky International Competition.

Tonight Eugene Fodor plays the Tchaikovsky Concerto and the "Witches Dance" by Paganini in an 8 p.m. performance with the Midland-Odessa Symphony at Lee High School Auditorium. Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

After Juilliard, this Colorado native attended Indiana University, where he studied under Josef Gingold and Harry Farban, for two years.

Then he transferred to the University of Southern California, where he studied under Jascha Heifetz. As Paganini was to the 19th Century, Heifetz is to the 20th — this century's premiere violin virtuoso.

In an interview made brief because of his terrible cold, Fodor summed up his numerous performances by saying, "I have performed with major orchestras in every state in the Union. I've played internationally in Eastern and Western Europe as well as all of Latin America, the Republic of China, Korea and Japan. And I played at the White House for (President) Ford."

In addition, he has recorded six albums for RCA. When asked what he feels has had the most impact on his career, Fodor said, "Six records for RCA distributed worldwide made a big difference. And playing at the White House."

City tries to stop water main break

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

City employees were scrambling in vain to find a shut-off valve this morning after a water valve burst in northwest Midland Monday afternoon, flooding Wadley Avenue as much as two feet deep in places and cutting water pressure to some area residences.

The torrent began between 3:30 and 4 p.m. Monday when city crews attempted to tie a new, 20-inch water line embedded along Wadley Avenue into an existing 16-inch valve running beneath Garfield Avenue. The valve burst as workmen attempted to connect the lines.

Several cars reportedly stalled in the high water Monday evening and this morning.

George Medley, city engineer with the public works department, said blocking under the excavated line gave way and the valve ruptured. No injuries were reported from the accident.

Medley said city crews tried closing several valves on side-street pipes feeding the Garfield Street line, but have been unable to locate the proper valve to stop the water flow.

"We're having a little trouble finding the right valve," said Medley. "Until we get the water shut off, we can't repair the leak."

He said the leak and closed valves cut water pressure to residences generally north of Wadley Avenue, between Garfield Street and Midkiff Road. Medley said the entire city's water supply should not be affected unless the problem continues indefinitely.

But Medley said if the valve isn't located quickly, a "second line of defense" — water lines serving adjacent areas — may be closed in order to stop the flow of water to the broken

Hobby doesn't want Capitol quarters

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby no longer wants his Capitol apartment where a Feb. 6 fire killed a guest and damaged a wing of the building, a press aide says.

Bob Cargill said the lieutenant governor planned to tell a Senate committee today that he wants the apartment — gutted in the fire — refurbished as offices. The space could be reconverted to an apartment if desired by a future lieutenant governor, Cargill said.

Hobby never lived in the apartment, however, he allowed guests to use it. The fire started on a night that four Hobby guests — including his daughter and a young man killed in the blaze — were in the apartment.

"We've been slowly but surely converting it to offices, anyway," said Cargill.

The lieutenant governor and House speaker traditionally have had living quarters in the Capitol. Speaker Gib Lewis is refurbishing the speaker's apartment, which had been used for offices by former Speaker Billy Clayton.

The House Appropriation Committee was told of Hobby's plans Monday during discussion of the Senate request for $7 million for fire repairs. The committee voted 22-1 to approve the request, which has been OK'd by the Senate.

There were some questions about the amount.

Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, said $7 million "seems like a horrendous amount." Sen. Roy Blake, chairman of the Senate Administration Committee, said, "I don't think by any stretch of the imagination (all of) that money will be spent."

"We don't intend to do anything but repair what has been damaged," said Blake, D-Nacogdoches. "What we don't use will certainly revert to the treasurer."

Rep. Pete Patterson, D-Brookston, was the lone vote against the bill.

Priest's accused killer will return to Odessa

ODESSA (AP) — A 26-year-old man accused of killing a West Texas priest will be returned here now that authorities have completed New Mexico extradition proceedings which required warrants from two governors.

New Mexico District Judge Frank Allen ordered at a hearing Monday that James Harry Reyos of Chama, N.M., be returned to Odessa to stand trial.

Reyos was taken into custody by Albuquerque police Nov. 18. He is accused of killing the Rev. Patrick Ryan, a Denver City priest whose body was found bound and beaten in an Odessa motel room.

Reyos refused to sign extradition papers, and Ector County authorities were forced to begin a lengthy process that included obtaining warrants from the governors of Texas and New Mexico.

Ryan, 51, was found in a motel room Dec. 22, 1981. His body lay unidentified for several days in an Odessa funeral home after being discovered by a motel maid.

Man killed on highway near Stanton

STANTON — A 54-year-old man was killed when his bicycle and a car collided on Interstate 20 about three miles east of here early this morning.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Martin County Justice of the Peace F.E. Kennedy was Bobby Gene Byrd, no known address.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Byrd was eastbound on the interstate when he rode his bicycle into the path of an eastbound 1976 Chrysler driven by Raymond Travis Bell Jr. of Big Spring.

Byrd was thrown against the windshield of the vehicle. His body was taken to the Gilbert Funeral Home in Stanton. The accident occurred about 2:10 a.m. today.

Jury convicts Dallas man of drug charge

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man faces up to 171 years in prison and a $500,000 fine following his conviction on 20 counts revolving around a conspiracy to distribute Florida cocaine in the Dallas area.

But the federal court jury, which heard testimony from 55 witnesses over seven weeks, deadlocked on a charge that John Russell Webster Jr. was the "kingpin" of the organization that police said was one of the city's largest drug rings.

The jury convicted Webster and three others Monday in connection with the conspiracy but deadlocked 10-2 in favor of conviction on a charge that Webster had engaged in a continuing criminal enterprise involving cocaine smuggling and distribution.

Webster, 35, was among 35 people charged in the case. Twenty-six defendants agreed to plea bargains, three are still at large, one was offered immunity in exchange for testimony and the trial of another was delayed.

The verdicts were returned after 2½ hours of deliberation.

Webster's defense attorney, Dick DeGuerin, said he was "pleased" that the jury failed to reach a unanimous verdict of the so-called "kingpin statute."

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer ordered a mistrial on the one charge over which jurors could not reach a unanimous verdict.

School for deaf officials hope legislators hear their pleas

A MAJOR problem trustees have encountered is a lack of clarity in the original legislation which created SWCID, said the president. "You can't tell for sure if SWCID is a separate state agency created by the Legislature, or is a part of the Junior College District. If it is a part of (HCJC District), the state does not want to give us construction funds, because the state would be building on somebody else's property."

Only an attorney general's opinion could decide the matter, but either way Hays hopes SWCID will gain its own identity. "If it is not a state agency, then we're going to try to get legislation to separate it from the Junior College District and establish it as a state agency," he said.

SWCID's cry for understanding will be heard by the Budgets and Oversights Committee at 6:30 p.m. March 8 in Room C of the Reagan Building in Austin.

He is excited about two upcoming television shows. Those who tune in for Wednesday night's 25th anniversary of the Grammy Awards will hear Fodor perform, as will those who view the 25th Country Music Association Awards April 13.

In a tone which indicated he was quite pleased, Fodor said, "They wanted a classical piece on their show."

When asked which works he had performed that he considered particularly difficult to master, he said, "They're all tough. I've lived with all these pieces all my life. I don't think about the difficulty."

Eugene Fodor is 32 years old.

Mattox calls for health spa regulation

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says he has been cheated twice by health spas and now wants the Legislature to pass tougher laws governing their operation.

He testified Monday before a Senate committee hearing a bill by Sen. Lindon Williams, D-Houston, that would prohibit a spa from offering "pre-opening sales" to potential customers more than 90 days before a spa opens.

Mattox said this would prevent sudden closings caused when "money solicited before a spa opens is not adequate to complete the facilities, so the spa never opens."

The bill would also ban lifetime memberships.

Wedding menus undergo change, says caterer

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For most people, a wedding is a once-in-a-lifetime event, but for Gerry Paul a wedding is an every-day affair.

As general manager of a catering establishment on Long Island, Leonard's of Great Neck, Paul is involved with hundreds of weddings throughout the year and has seen significant changes in the celebrations during his more than two decades in the food service industry.

"In the late '60s and early '70s we were into the hippie generation and they were not looking for ambiance," he said in an interview. "But now marriage has come back in style and elegance of place is extremely important.

"We truly do not feel it," he said of the current economic situation. "The wedding industry is busier than ever. People will spend for that one big occasion — we find them going all out. But one way they may be cutting corners is that the wedding reception is getting slightly smaller. They may not be inviting that third cousin they haven't seen for years."

THE MEAL, HE SAYS, is as lavish as ever, but the typical menu has changed drastically. Where once the caterer offered a cocktail hour with a smorgasbord of 10 to 12 appetizers, followed by a sit-down dinner with fruit cup, soup, salad, roast beef, vegetable, potato and cake, the presentation today is more varied and sophisticated.

"The standard menu is pretty much a thing of the past," Paul says. "Today there's a great deal of variety in the smorgasbord — perhaps 30 to 35 different kinds of hot and cold appetizers. There's a big demand for tableside preparation of food — the tossing of a Caesar salad or a chef preparing Chinese food in a wok."

Ethnic foods, he adds, are popular, with favorites from the background of the bride and groom's family often served for the hors d'oeuvres — for example, pasta carbonara, potato pancakes, moussaka or stuffed grape leaves.

"Young couples have become more knowledgeable about what takes place in fine restaurants and their demands are greater," he points out. "Today, we might start with a hot crepe, followed by an intermezzo of lemon sherbet. And flambeed desserts are very popular — everyone is looking for that big show."

WITH SO MANY PEOPLE diet-conscious, he suggests giving guests a choice of main course — a beef or poultry item — and fish should be available as well.

Although a full bar is always offered, Paul sees a definite trend away from hard liquor, with most people preferring wine. Imported beers are popular, and mineral water is a must.

The wedding cake has also undergone a change from the traditional tiered version, and appears in all shapes, including pagoda-style, and flavors. Common now are chocolate, spice and carrot cakes, and even baked Alaska. But the couple still holds to the custom of taking home the bride-and-groom mannequins and some of the cake to freeze and eat on their first anniversary.

Another difference from bygone days, Paul notes, is that the couples for the most part are older, often paying for the reception themselves, "and they call the shots" on menu, tablecloth colors (burgundy is a current favorite), and other details.

ARRANGEMENTS MUST BE MADE a year to a year and a half in advance of the wedding date, but during that interval only about 7 or 8 percent drop out, in Paul's experience. Saturday is the most popular day, and June the most desirable month.

"Unfortunately, there are not enough days in June. If you want a June date you have to book two years ahead. The month of January is the least popular," adds Paul, who offers blizzard insurance.

Paul once had to put on a blizzard of his own making when he did a wedding in July for two ski instructors from Aspen, Colo.

"We used a snow-blowing machine, and the couple came around the circular drive by sleigh, arriving at the reception in ski clothes," he recalled with a laugh. "And one fellow who owned a riding academy and his wife came to their wedding reception on horseback."

With more and more interfaith marriages taking place, more and more ceremonies are held at catering establishments, which find having a chapel on the premises increasingly important, Paul says.

LEONARD'S HAS BEEN in existence for 21 years, and the manager reports he is already seeing some second-generation weddings, "Soon," he adds, "we'll be doing a lot of 25th anniversaries, with people coming back to the place where they were married."

Paul, 40, had a "very traditional, 'Goodbye Columbus' wedding" 20 years ago. He and his wife have three sons and two daughters. "They're 10 and 12 years old," he says, "but I assure you they have already been planning their weddings."

'El Nino effect' causes unusual developments in Pacific waters

By RICHARD NORDWIND
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Something fishy is going on in the waters off Southern California this winter. Consider:

Sea horses spotted off Huntington Beach this month.

Marlin sighted near San Diego in January.

Jumbo squid and anchovies spawning along the Southern California coast.

Red crabs as far north as Santa Barbara.

Yellowtail caught near Los Angeles.

And the strange developments don't stop there: From Baja to Vancouver Island, scientists and fishermen are reporting species hundreds of miles north of their usual habitat. Ocean temperatures in January were 3 to 5 degrees above normal along the West Coast.

It's all part of a phenomenon oceanographers call the "El Nino" effect — warmer than normal tropical currents heating up the ocean between the two tropic circles — which occurs roughly every 20 years, bringing dramatic changes in sea life.

"It seems that we're in the middle of a warm-water cycle," Herb Frey, a senior marine biologist with the California Department of Fish and Game, said. "The last time we experienced this was between 1957 and 1959."

The El Nino currents begin in the equatorial regions of the Southern Hemisphere, and gradually move north over a period of two to three years before subsiding, said noted oceanographer Joe Reid of Scripps Institute in La Jolla.

"It (the El Nino) began last summer in the equatorial zone, and it's been making its way north ever since," Reid said.

In the waters off Baja California, state marine biologist Kenny Mais reported ocean temperatures about 5 degrees above normal during a recent voyage.

Susie the Haircutter calls it quits after half century

By KAY ROHRER

SOUDERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Isabel "Susie" Sweigart is selling her antique porcelain barber chairs and barber pole and has put aside her scissors and razors for retirement.

Her only real reason for closing her Lancaster County shop is that she "figured they were good round numbers."

She is 75 and has been barbering for 50 years. Now, "Susie's" 300 or so customers will have to find other barbers.

At $3 her haircuts were still a bargain, but she recalled when a cut cost only 30 cents and a shave was an additional quarter.

A small, friendly woman whose appearance belies her age, Mrs. Sweigart has kept what she calls "short hours" for the past two years.

Nonetheless, that still has been 45 hours a week, from 9 a.m. till 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, with an hour off for lunch.

"When my husband Amos was still living, we'd stay open from 7 a.m. until 9 p.m. five days a week," she explained.

Hair-cutting for Mrs. Sweigart holds many fond memories, but she said that the most memorable event of her life was meeting her husband, a barber, on a bus between Marion, Ohio and Fort Wayne, Ind.

They were married in 1930 and two years later moved into the Soudersburg home that would later house their barber shop.

Mrs. Sweigart said "I learned to cut hair with my husband. Nowadays you have to go to a school."

For the first four or five years she recalled just helping out, then there was some skepticism when she started actually cutting hair. Gradually, the woman in a traditionally male role was accepted and allowed to cut the men's hair.

She took breaks from barbering through the years to raise her four children, but kept on cutting after her husband's death eight years ago.

Her two sons, Ronald and Ken, work as barbers in Lancaster and nearby Paradise, respectively.

Some California parents sponsor effort to fingerprint children for protection

By FRANK CANDIDA
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — It's every parent's nightmare: your child is missing. Some parents in the San Fernando Valley here want to make sure they're prepared if it ever comes true for them.

On Saturday, they plan to fingerprint any child who comes to the Prairie Street Elementary School in Northridge with $2 and a parent or guardian. Fingerprint cards will be given to the parent to be held for the day they might be needed.

"Hopefully, nothing will ever happen, but if it does, you're prepared," said Barbara Olinger, president of the school's booster club. "If something happens to your child, you'd have something that would help to find the child, to help the police. It's something the parents can do."

The idea grew from news stories about a similar program in New Jersey.

"It just sort of blossomed," explained Olinger, whose 7-year-old son, Michael, attends the school. "We do think it's a good service for the community. . . . Perhaps it will make some parents feel safer."

To allay fears that police agencies will use the print cards to build up dossiers, backers of the Northridge program insist that participation is voluntary — and that only one copy will be made of a child's prints. That copy, they say, will go to the parents.

"(Some) people might feel that the prints would get into the wrong hands and get used (but) I haven't heard one single person complain," said school principal Kathryn Henry.

The American Civil Liberties Union often challenges agencies which spy or build files on citizens, but ACLU spokeswoman Linda Valentino said the group doesn't quarrel with the plan.

"It's being done for the benefit of the parents and the parents get to keep the prints," Valentino said. "We are not opposed to that. The ACLU in New Jersey has supported the program there — very vocally."

She referred to Linden, N.J., where, on Jan. 25, hundreds of children lined up at a Catholic elementary school for the "Fingerprints on File" program there.

News reports quoted Sister Maureen James, principal of St. Elizabeth's Grammar School, as saying that parents of only 15 of the school's 484 pupils objected.

"Some people said they didn't like the publicity," she said. "Others said it was against their civil rights."

In New Jersey — as planned in Northridge — the sole copy of the print card went home with the child.

A Union County, N.J., police officer said he came up with the idea after Reader's Digest reported there were about 100,000 missing children in the United States. Under his plan, parents could send the prints to law enforcement officers to help in locating a missing child — or identifying the body should the child be slain.

Also contributing to the push, she added, was the recent film, "Without a Trace," about a schoolboy who mysteriously vanishes.

In Westlake Village, Calif., a former New Jersey policeman also is trying to do something about missing children.

Ken Daurio said he is setting up the National Missing Persons Data Center, a computerized operation which will log the coded fingerprints of children, to be turned over to police agencies across the nation. Detectives then would be able to call the computer to see if it has the prints of the children they've found.

Daurio's service would cost $25 per child, and he said he and his partner expect to take the prints of 600 children.

His interest in missing children began 14 years ago when he was a police officer in Deerfield Township, N.J., and a 2½-year-old girl was thrown from a stolen car.

'Vanessa Royall' successful for author

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Hinkemeyer thought it would be nice to be called Melissa Hart, but he had to settle for Vanessa Royall.

Hinkemeyer doesn't let it bother him, though, since the five historical-romances he has written under the nom de plume of Vanessa Royall have sold well — about 1.5 million copies, he says — and bring him a good living.

He recalls that when he turned in his first historical-romance — known in the publishing business as "bodice-rippers" — he assumed it would carry his own name, Michael T. Hinkemeyer. He quickly found out he was wrong.

"There's a theory in the publishing trade that women will only read a book about love if they think it was written by a woman," says Hinkemeyer, a stocky, 42-year-old with thick blond hair, beard and mustache.

"Since 98 percent of the people who read these novels are women, and since I'm a commercial writer, I went along with the name change even though I find it a bit chauvinistic. I did try to preserve my own initials by suggesting my pseudonym be Melissa Hart, but my editor liked Vanessa Royall better, and Vanessa it was and is."

Hinkemeyer, a native of St. Cloud, Minn., who now lives in Manhasset, N.Y., with his wife and their two children, came to historical-romance writing in a rather roundabout way.

"I'd always wanted to be a writer," he recalls, "but I come from a work-oriented family that doubted I could make a living by writing. So, I went to college, took a B.A. and an M.A. in history, a Ph.D. in education and then went into teaching.

"But I still wanted to write, so I did a first novel and it was really bad, absolutely horrible. But rather than turning me away from writing it drove me into it because I knew I could do better than that. So, I wrote another novel and it wasn't too bad and even though it was rejected I got letters from editors asking me to write something else."

Since occult novels were selling well at that time, he says, he wrote an occult novel and it was accepted and published as "The Dark Below."

He did others, and the thriller-suspense-occult novels earned Hinkemeyer enough to leave teaching and become a full-time writer. He's written six of this sort under his own name and five historical-romances as Vanessa Royall. The latest of these is "Seize the Dawn."

"The way I work it," he says, "is I spend one month working on a Vanessa, take a week off, and then spend the next month writing a Hinkemeyer. By the end of the year, I usually have one of each kind of book finished."

Hinkemeyer says he finds the Vanessas less taxing to write than the Hinkemeyers. This is partly due to his background in history. "I don't have to research the period I set them in," he explains, "because I already know them.

"Each Vanessa is set in a different historical period. The furthest back in history I have gone is the late 15th century in "Come Faith, Come Fire." The furthest forward is in "Seize the Dawn," which comes up to 1900.

"They're also not too hard to write because the story of the Vanessa books is similar. The formula for all of them is: Boy meets girl, they have a lot of problems, and then they come together at the end. All this, against a rich, historical background.

DEAR ABBY

Public restrooms provoke private dilemma

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Today my jaw dropped! While sitting in the local cafe having coffee with my husband and our 2 1/2-year-old daughter, "Cindy," we were approached by the owner of the cafe, who told us of a complaint he had had about us the previous evening.

My husband, who has always shared in the care of our daughter, had taken Cindy to the "potty" in the men's room. There is only one stall, and while they were occupying it, another gentleman had need for the facilities, so he poked his head in. My husband informed him that they would be out in a minute.

The other customer promptly complained to the owner, saying little girls should use the women's facilities. The owner then told my husband that in the future he should not take Cindy into the men's room — either I would have to take her to the ladies' restroom or she would have to go alone.

What is the rule on this? Is it written somewhere that only women are allowed to take their children to the bathroom in a public place? And then only to the women's room?

How do mothers of sons — or single fathers of daughters — handle this? — NO IDENTIFICATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO: Very young children should never be sent into a public restroom alone. And men should use the men's facilities and women should use the women's when taking a child of either sex to the bathroom.

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading about when a cowboy should take off his hat. Most men who wear western hats (and they're not all cowboys) wear them indoors.

When you invest $100 in a hat and $50 in the band, you don't take it off indoors. If you do, someone invariably sits on it, steals it, or some drunk wanders up, puts it on, and you have to dismantle his body to get it back.

In the movie "Smokey and the Bandit," Burt Reynolds, who always wore a cowboy hat, said, "I take my hat off for only one thing."

What do you think that "one thing" was? — OREGON TRUCK DRIVER

DEAR DRIVER: To scratch his head. (Would I lie to you on Washington's birthday?)

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I attended a holiday party given by a couple we had met socially at several other parties.

When we got there, we found the other guests were mixing drinks at a "bar" that had been set up on the kitchen table — a common practice among our circle of friends. About halfway through the party, I was informed by a complete stranger that this was a "bring your own bottle" party, and I was drinking his scotch!

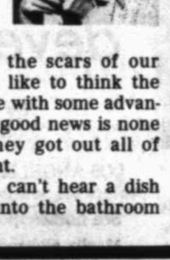
Abby, I haven't heard of a "BYOB party" since my college days. I know we are in an economic depression, but our hosts are comfortable, middle-class professionals — not rich, but surely far from poor. Also, I was raised to believe that if you couldn't afford to entertain your guests, you should wait until you could.

Was I brought up wrong, or have times and the rules of common courtesy changed that much? (I'm only 30.) — BEWILDERED IN BOSTON

DEAR BEWILDERED: In many circles the BYOB party is S.O.P. (standard operating procedure). Your hosts were remiss in not informing you what kind of party it was when they invited you.

AT WIT'S END

Children and dirty dishes



By ERMA BOMBECK

It's a question that has plagued parents for generations.

Is it worth all the aggravation, the nagging, the varicose veins of the neck to get your kids to do dishes?

Parents argue it builds character.

Kids say it's the only job in the world where nepotism is a curse.

Frankly, I've seen some side effects that maybe parents should know about. I always perceived the kids doing dishes together every night as a sharing experience where everyone pitched in and made it a better world.

This myth exploded the night we took a steak knife away from one of the boys who was using his brother as a dart board.

We moved right along to Plan B where each of them would have their night in the kitchen and then be off two. However, there was so much trading and paying back, the bookkeeping became unwieldy and we moved to a new house to start fresh.

We called them the Three S's. Each had his own personality in the kitchen.

One was a "Soaker." Everything soaked. The only thing that wasn't put in the sink and filled with water was the spaghetti pot which always looked clean and hung with spaghetti hardened in it for three years.

One was a "Saver." No leftover was too small to store in its original serving dish: a peach pit, a french fry, a wad of gum on a dinner plate. All were preserved for whoever was on for dishes the next night.

The other one was a "Cyclone." She cleared. She stacked. She washed. She dried. She put away. In 15 seconds. And at great expense to the management.

All three, however, had one trait in common. The moment the meal was over a biological urgency would come over them and they would disappear into the bathroom until they were sure the food on the plates was in a solid state.

The children swear they carry the scars of our enforced labor. It's possible. But I like to think the three S's came out of the experience with some advantages as well as disadvantages. The good news is none of them ever needed therapy. They got out all of their hostility over dishes every night.

The bad news? To this day they can't hear a dish rattle without instinctively going into the bathroom and shutting the door.

Deer killed on highway given to needy as food

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Not all the deer killed in Pennsylvania go to hunters. Some of the whitetails end up on the tables of non-hunters and the needy.

Considering the unemployment situation, Eastern Greene County game protector Bob Shaffer says, "The meat is sure appreciated by some families."

Shaffer offered high praise for the Game Commission's relatively new policy of permitting a person who hits a deer on the road with a vehicle to keep the animal. It wasn't always like that.

"All the person has to do is call me and obtain a permit for the deer," said Shaffer, who reported 24,699 deer were killed on the roads in Pennsylvania last year.

Even in a rural county such as Greene, the road kill totaled 331 last year.

Road kills that go unclaimed, illegal kills, or that small percentage killed for crop damage usually go to the needy. As might be expected, Shaffer has a ready idea of those in need of food.

"In November and December, I turned over 60 to 70 deer to needy families," said Shaffer.

The game protector said a deer carcass contains about 45 pounds of meat.

Across the state, Shaffer said, "tons of deer meat" are consumed by the public because of Game Commission policy.

If Shaffer has time, he usually saves the antlers of the deer that are killed on the roads. He has some of them on display at the game lands at Garards Fort, proof that not all the bucks are taken by hunters.

Under the Game Commission's road-kill policy, the hide and head of a deer killed on the road and obtained by permit must be turned over to the game protector in 12 hours.

"If the hide and head are just discarded in the woods, someone could come across it and mistakenly think a deer has been poached," said Shaffer. The action eliminates confusion.

B & B says shop before having vacuum repaired

Do you shop around before you have repairs made to your vacuum cleaner? Harold Ervin, owner of B & B Vacuum Cleaner Repair, says he encourages everyone to call around for estimates before having their vacuums repaired. "If they do that," he says, "they'll end up at B & B."

Ervin says he is happy to give prices over the phone for replacement parts or for repair service. Because repairing vacuum cleaners is his primary business, there are no high pressure tactics to sell you a new cleaner. Ervin can usually assess the problem and give you a free estimate in a matter of minutes and you can be assured that your vacuum will be repaired quickly and inexpensively. In fact, Ervin says most vacuums can be repaired for under $25.

You can also depend on Ervin to do an excellent job of repairing your vacuum cleaner, as he has had more than 29 years of experience in the vacu... repair business.

B & B is a factory warranty station for all Hoover products and Ervin is authorized to service your Hoover floorcare products. Ervin is well-stocked with all parts for Hoover vacuum cleaners manufactured during the last 20 years.

Ervin stresses the fact that all repairs are done right in the shop by him. "If something doesn't work," he says, "there's no one to blame but me." He adds that because he doesn't sell vacuums, his customers can feel secure in the knowledge that he will do all he can to restore their vacuums to peak operating efficiency.

So before taking your vacuum in for repair, or before buying replacement parts, shop around and compare prices. When you do, you'll end up at B & B Vacuum Cleaner Repair. Located at 1009 N. Midkiff, just north of Cuthbert, B & B is open from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Indian crafts featured at Shop of the Blue Gem

Bringing the ancient crafts of the Navajo, Zuni, Hopi and Pima Indians to the Southwest is an important goal of The Shop of the Blue Gem. However, according to owner Dorothy Davis, who is on the public relations committee of the Indian Arts & Crafts Association, it is secondary to the dedication of those associated with the IACA. "We believe in the Indian culture, and are dedicated to helping them preserve it."

With shops in Midland, Santa Fe and Ruidosa, all offering top names in Indian artists and craftsmen, The Shop of the Blue Gem is certainly bringing the finest in pottery, Indian jewelry, paintings, weavings and sandpaintings to their customers.

Midland's gallery features many well-known artists, such as Mike McCullough, Gary Gore and Justin Wells; and Indian artists Robert Redbird, Melody Lightfeather, Bill Rabbit, King Kuka, Bert Seabourn, Mars Big Goose, Black Owl, Calvin Toddy and Jean Bales. They have a fine selection of limited edition prints from G. Harvey, Olaf Weighorst, Wayne Baize, Penni Anne Cross and Roberta Wesley. Lithographs by Gary Gore and serigraphs by Virginia Stroud round out the collection.

The Indian jewelry, pottery, Navajo rugs, baskets, bronzes and sandpaintings are still done as it was done hundreds of years ago. The craftsmen work in their homes in Pueblos or reservations, using methods which have been handed down through the years. For example, their pottery is still fired outdoors.

The pottery in the Shop of the Blue Gem is from the finest artists living today. In fact, a recent article in the National Geographic featured Indian pottery and many of the shop's artists appeared in the article. One of the most famous artists is Maria of San Idlefonso. According to Ms. Davis, the shop also has Santa Clara pottery and pottery from the Naranjo, Tafoya and Dunlap families. These families are known for their fine craftsmanship, as well as the individual style of each person who constructs these pieces. Another famous pottery artist is Jemez, one of the finest artists of the Kachina dolls. These are called "story tellers", and their eyes are closed to signify remembrance as the Indians do not write their stories down, but pass them down by word of mouth through the generations. It is said that the more figures on the doll, the more valuable the piece.

Another pottery artist featured by the shop is Ray Tofoya, who, according to Ms. Davis, "we feel will become well-known for his miniatures in pottery."

Carolyn Stallwitz, wildlife artist, and Georgia Tyler have written a book, "Window on the Prairie" which the shop has in stock. Another fine book just out is Southwest Art's "Contemporary Western Artists". One of the points made by Ms. Davis about this book is that all the artists featured here are still alive and painting.

The Shop of the Blue Gem also features local artists in its gallery. Annora Pate, Paula Mallams, Carol Greenwood and Lulabelle Klinger are among those whose work can be found; and the gallery displays the Paint Dabbers "Painting and Craft of the Month".

The fine jewelry on display features such reknown silversmiths as Ben Nighthorse and Melody Lightfeather, as well as the handcrafted pieces from the Navajo, Zuni, Hopi and Pima tribes. These are all of sterling silver, turquoise and coral. There are a few 14k gold earrings in stock. Manager Susan Vannoy says that jewelry can be custom designed to your specifications. According to Ms. Davis, they have just returned from a buying trip from Isleta, San Idlefonso and Santa Clara and have quite a few new pieces of pottery and jewelry.

The Shop of the Blue Gem offers decorating services, and are currently providing paintings for The First National Bank in Pecos. Ms. Davis says, "We can provide offices or homes with rugs, paintings or accessories in Midland, Santa Fe or Ruidosa, and we'll be glad to bring selections to your home or office."

Come by The Shop of the Blue Gem, located in the La Vallita Shopping Center on Wadley just west of Midkiff.

Another Laotian rescue try reported

NONG KHAI, Thailand (AP) — Former Green Beret James "Bo" Gritz has slipped back into Laos with about 20 guerrillas in a controversial search for Americans he believes have been held captive since the Vietnam war, a Laotian guerrilla leader said today.

The guerrilla leader, who declined to be identified, said Gritz had entered Laos Feb. 7 from the frontier town of Nakhon Phanom. He said 20 armed men and another resistance chief identified as Kedsadong Suwannavong accompanied Gritz.

The guerrilla leader said Gritz opened an account in a commercial bank in Thailand and deposited $22,000 for the latest rescue raid.

Kenyan president reveals pardons

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Daniel Arap Moi announced today that he has pardoned 412 ex-servicemen and 61 university students charged with involvement in an attempt to overthrow the government Aug. 1.

"Action has already been taken regarding their release, and instructions issued that they proceed directly to their homes," said a statement from the president carried by the official Kenya News Agency.

Moi's statement said the clemency order was the result of a careful examination of cases still pending. One knowledgeable Kenyan said the government prosecutors were having trouble finding witnesses to testify against the students.

Egyptian president arrives in Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak arrived today for talks with President Jaafar Nimeiri, who warned that Libya was still flexing its military muscle near Sudan's borders.

Mubarak's visit comes during tensions which were heightened last week by reports that Libya was bolstering its military strength near the junction of its borders with Egypt, Sudan and Chad.

Egypt and Sudan have a mutual defense pact, and the two leaders were expected to discuss the buildup, which Sudanese and American officials have said was aimed at Sudan.

Canada reiterates acid rain proposal

TORONTO (AP) — Canada is urging the United States to reconsider a Canadian proposal to cut sulfur emissions in both countries by half to fight acid rain.

Environment Minister John Roberts said Monday a new study by three "work groups" of scientists appointed by the two governments "establishes beyond doubt, for those who approach the question with an open mind, the danger and urgency of the problem."

Last year, Canada proposed a 50 percent reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions in each country by 1990, but U.S. negotiators said more study was needed before a target should be set.

Nicaraguan rebels killed, captured

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Twenty-five "counterrevolutionaries" were killed and 18 taken prisoner in clashes with government troops near Nicaragua's troubled border with Honduras, the Defense Ministry said.

Deputy Defense Minister Luis Carrion Cruz told a political rally here late Monday the fighting occurred in northern Nueva Segovia province. That is the same region where 51 anti-government rebels were earlier reported killed in fighting since Feb. 1.

Carrion did not specify when the latest clashes had taken place but he said "an entire column of ex-Somocista guardsmen...was annihilated."

Libya threatens American AWACS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Libya has threatened to shoot down American AWACS aircraft in Egyptian air space, rejecting Egypt's contention that the spy planes are only on a training mission, a Lebanese newspaper reported today.

The leftist Beirut daily As-Safir quoted an official Libyan announcement as saying "the excuses of (Egyptian President) Hosni Mubarak and his pretext that the Egyptians will be training on these plans are rejected and will deceive no one."

The Airborne Warning and Control Systems plane were sent to Egypt after U.S. and Egyptian officials said they had detected a movement of Libyan forces that was threatening Sudan. Washington also diverted an aircraft carrier to off the Libyan coast.

Captured journalists 'treated well'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A rebel broadcast says a missing American and two Swedish journalists were detained by leftist guerrillas who have treated the trio "well."

The guerrillas' underground Radio Guazapa broadcast a statement Sunday that it said was made by Michael Luhan, a 30-year-old writer for the Dallas Morning News. The speaker identified himself as Luhan at the start and end of the statement, which was in Spanish.

Luhan is from Bloomington, Ind.

The other two newsmen have been identified by authorities as Tom Thulin, 22, and Jens Rydstrom, 27, who work for Ny Das, a Swedish publication. They are of Lund, Sweden.

2,000 Mexican workers given raises

MEXICO CITY (AP) — More than 2,000 workers won raises ranging from 25 to 30 percent in contracts with mining, chemical and paper companies during the weekend, avoiding separate strikes that had been threatened for Monday.

The workers included 1,400 miners at the Benito Juarez Pena Colorada Mining Consortium, who won 25 percent increases. The 72 miners at the Concepcion Carmen Mining Co., which works gold, silver and copper mines, obtained the biggest raises, 30 percent.

Most new labor contracts this year have given workers raises of about 25 percent, the same as the increase in the minimum wage granted by the government Jan. 1. Inflation for 1982 was officially estimated at 100 percent.

Lebanese rescue has cooperative air

By HERBERT H. DENTON
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syria refused Monday to allow an armored rescue convoy of American, French and Italian troops into the Syrian-controlled mountains of eastern Lebanon where more than 100 people are believed to be stranded in the worst snowstorm there in memory.

The Syrian government's refusal may have been based on suspicions about the intent of the multinational ground units — perhaps worried about possible spying or being seen by Arab rejectionists as too friendly to the Western forces — since it earlier had given permission to a multinational air rescue operation and in other ways was cooperating in the unusual international effort to save the stranded victims.

But after U.S. Marine choppers began icing over during two attempts to conduct reconnaissance above the stricken area, air operations had to be suspended Monday morning. The multinational force's armored convoy then waited four hours in the foothills outside Beirut as diplomats sought permission from the Syrians to allow them to attempt to move the convoy into the mountains.

The Syrians finally replied that they would permit only Lebanese army ground convoys to enter areas under their control, according to U.S. Marine spokesman Capt. Dale Dye. He said he understood that the Syrians gave no reason for denying entry to the multinational force.

Marine commander Col. James Mead said he had learned that roads leading into the area were impassable so that the diplomatic flap may in the end have been entirely "academic."

Lebanese Red Cross workers watch Monday as a bulldozer clears a road in Sofar, Lebanon.

At least 50 persons have frozen to death in the snowbound Dahr al Baydar mountain peak on the Beirut-Damascus highway about 25 miles east of Beirut. One of the victims was a Japanese, whom the the Lebanese army identified as a diplomat. But the news agency Reuter reported that Japanese sources in Beirut said he was Kazuo Togo, a businessman.

More than 300 people had been trapped in cars but an international effort by the Lebanese army, civil defense units and other teams managed to rescue about 150 of them during operations over the weekend.

The Lebanese say that February is always the cruelest month in Lebanon, but the severe weather this year is extreme. Indeed, talk of the weather has temporarily replaced the usual talk of the town — of car bombs, troop withdrawal negotiations and war.

The silver lining in this snowstorm that hit on Sunday has been the unusual way the various nations and forces in Lebanon, at loggerheads and in violent conflict at other times, have been cooperating in the face of this natural disaster, the Syrian rejection of the multinational force convoy notwithstanding.

American and Israeli commanders whose relations have been strained at best in the past were on the line Monday exchanging information about road conditions in the mountains.

Syrians and Israelis who have strictly guarded their positions against encroachment by other military forces lowered barriers to allow the Lebanese army through.

A Norwegian diplomat who returned here Monday hoarse but well talked of the relief of being picked up by a Syrian military snowmobile after being trapped in the mountains on an impassable road for nine hours.

The Syrians took him and about 15 Lebanese who had also been stranded in cars off to a well-heated military outpost where they fed them and administered first aid. When weather conditions improved slightly, the Syrians piled them into snowmobiles and took them down the mountains where they were turned over to the Lebanese army.

"The Syrians were really very professional in dealing with it," said the diplomat.

But the Syrians balked at the possibility of having the massive multinational force convoy enter the area it controlled. The Marines had been prepared to send 110 troopers in nine amphibious tracked personnel carriers, known as amtraks, two trucks and a refueling vehicle. The Italian contingent included 22 soldiers in one Leopard tank with a snowplow, one bulldozer, and three jeeps. The French had a 20-man unit with two bulldozers and two trucks.

A spokesman said the Marines intend to try Tuesday to mount an air rescue operation in the Syrian-controlled area. He said Mead intended to conduct reconnaissance operations himself Tuesday morning.

Common market nations fight illiteracy

By ROBERT WIELAARD
Associated Press Writer

ANTWERP, Belgium — At 52 years old, Maria still hears the taunting of her fourth grade classmates. Unable to keep up with them, she sat in the back row of the classroom for two weeks, then quit school at 12 years old.

Born 12th and last to a poor farming family, Maria became a maid for rich folks at a mansion and stayed for 20 years. Then she did another 20-year stint at a second household.

Until she started taking literacy classes three years ago, she was illiterate like five of her brothers and sisters.

Now she can write simple sentences.

Life without an alphabet was "like being blind," said Maria, who agreed to be identified only by her first name. "Now I can see."

"As a maid I always shopped by recognizing bottles and boxes. I was always tense, always afraid that in the post office or bank I would have to fill out forms," said Maria. "I lied to officials and said I had forgotten my glasses and could you fill this out for me, please?"

Last year a European Parliament report estimated that "between 4 and 6 percent of the population, meaning 10 to 15 million people are illiterate" in the 10 European Common Market nations.

It considered as illiterates, people who cannot read or write at all or not well enough to "function fully in society."

The report, based on information from governments, deflated two myths: that illiteracy occurs "on a significant scale" in the northern Common Market nations and not only in the poorer southern nations, and affects native Europeans, people like Maria, as well as immigrants.

It predicted that "a continuing recession and rising unemployment will worsen matters considerably."

One election day — "in 1960 or thereabouts" — Maria worked at a polling station, a job for which private citizens are drafted in Belgium.

"I just sat there," Maria, a frail, bespectacled woman with short, graying hair, recalled recently. "After a while the head of the polling station told me, 'Maria, you'd better go home. We cannot use you here if you cannot read or write'."

"I always thought I was alone," she said, adding that she "didn't know an 'A' from a 'B'." Today she writes simple sentences such as this brief description of her youth:

"There were 12 of us at home. We had a nice time. Our parents were fine people. They had a farm.

"We lived six kilometers (about four miles) from school. In winter we could not go to school. Because the road was often flooded and then the war came."

Until recently, most governments said illiteracy was non-existent because they feared it reflected poorly on the quality of their schools, said Phili Viehoff, a Dutch Socialist and author of the parliamentary report.

She said that because the study of illiteracy is so recent her estimate of between 10 and 15 million illiterates is "very conservative. It almost certainly understates the true situation."

Aggravating the problem of overcoming illiteracy is the fact that illiterates are invisible. "They are constantly at pains to conceal their literacy," she said.

Alan Wells, spokesman for the Adult Literacy and Basic Skills Unit, a private group based in London, estimated 2 million British adults, or 6 percent of the population, are illiterate.

Illiterates number about 2.5 million in Italy, 5.2 percent of the population; about one million or 2 percent in France; about 1.4 million or 3 percent in Germany; about 2.4 million or 24 percent in Greece; about 375,000 or 2.5 percent in Holland and about 400,000 or 4 percent in Belgium, according to officials in these countries.

In Denmark, education department official Birgit Kure said, "There is no illiteracy in Denmark." Statistics on illiteracy were not immediately available for Luxembourg and Ireland.

"A high degree of rejection rests on those unable to read or write," said Bert Deruyck. He heads the mostly volunteer Belgian program to teach reading and writing skills to people like Maria. About 800 students are enrolled in classes in about 30 cities.

Violence-torn Assam isolated from India

By The Associated Press

India's remote northeastern state of Assam, bloodied in recent days by anti-foreigner violence that has been brewing for decades, boasts some of the world's best tea and the last of the one-horned rhinoceroses.

Heavily wooded, hilly and oil-bearing, Assam is connected to the main part of India by a narrow neck of land flanked by Nepal to the north and Bangladesh to the south. The state has a population of 21 million and long has been a haven for hunters and fishermen.

Assam produces 53 percent of India's tea; India is the world's largest exporter of tea. Rice is the staple food in the state, whose fertile soil is fed by heavy rainfall and the river Brahmaputra, which crosses Assam from northeast to southwest.

The Brahmaputra is known as "The River of Sorrow," because of monsoon flooding that each year devastates vast areas of cropland and leaves thousands homeless.

The Kaziranga wildlife sanctuary of Assam is known for its elephants, deer, tigers, wild boars — and one-horned rhinos.

In the last 35 years, Assam has been cut to one-third its original size, first by partition of the subcontinent into India and East and West Pakistan, and later by creation of new states in northeast India. Today, it measures 31,600 square miles.

Nakasone seeks more defense support

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

TOKYO — Defying a decline in public support and criticism from inside his own ruling Liberal Democratic Party, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is pressing his personal campaign to broaden Japan's contributions to its defense alliance with the United States.

The campaign, started during Nakasone's January visit to Washington, promptly exacerbated Japan's relations with the Soviet Union. China has also added a note of criticism.

Yet the 64-year-old prime minister has given no sign of abandoning what has become virtually a one-man effort to make the U.S.-Japanese security treaty more of a two-way alliance.

In Washington, Nakasone declared that Japan would develop the capability of sealing off the key straits that run through the Japanese islands to bottle up the Soviet fleet in the Sea of Japan and the ability to stop the penetration of Soviet Backfire bombers. Both goals would be of crucial value in protecting ships of the U.S. 7th Fleet operating in the Western Pacific, although Nakasone stressed that Japan would take such action only if Japan itself were attacked and not just for the benefit of the United States.

More recently, Nakasone has been listing new actions that Japan would be willing to take which, while related to Japan's own defense, would also help the United States.

On Feb. 4, the prime minister declared that Japan would act on the open seas to protect U.S. naval vessels coming to Japan's assistance if it were under attack. The security treaty requires Japan to defend U.S. forces being attacked inside Japan's national boundaries but it carries no explicit obligation for Japan to provide such defense beyond its maritime frontiers, and no previous prime minister had ever offered to do so.

On Feb. 8, Nakasone offered stronger backing than ever to the idea that Japan's defense is inevitably linked to U.S. security rather than being solely concerned with isolated aggression against itself, a prevalent notion here.

However, the firmest expression of Nakasone's determination to continue his effort to firm up the alliance came Saturday.

Answering questions in Parliament, Nakasone declared for the first time that, under special circumstances, Japan would let the United States seal the key Japanese straits to bottle up the Soviet navy.

Japan told West Germany after economic comeback

Hearst Foreign Bureau

BONN — When Japan's foreign minister, Shintaro Abe, recently visited here, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl wasted little time on diplomatic pleasantries.

Instead, he took him aside for a private chat to warn him that Germany, the old economic champion which had lost the title to the Japanese, was determined on a comeback.

"I told him not to be under any illusions," the chancellor recalled in an interview at his office here. "We have our problems, but I said to him that, by the end of this decade, we will be back."

What, Kohl was asked, had Abe's reaction been?

"He didn't say much, but he obviously didn't believe me," was the reply.

Plenty of reasons exist for the Japanese minister to be skeptical about West Germany's ability to regain its former economic luster. Deep cracks are showing in the Germans' own self-confidence about both their competitive industrial skills, once considered non-pareil, and their capacity as a nation to keep their economic house in order.

"The German economic miracle is well and truly over," says a Western diplomat here. "If they keep on as they have been doing, they'll soon wind up a second or third rate economic power."

The Germans have been badly shaken by the financial collapse of companies that have been international household names, like Telefunken. The inability of others like Volkswagen to fight off their Japanese competitors is a national trauma.

Germany's postwar faith in its industrial might replaced conventional patriotism. Economic efficiency as a solution to nearly everything became a kind of test of national identity.

When recession sprang on the world, it tripped up a people who had become complacently convinced that their economic supremacy was part of the natural order of things.

Feelings run for, against DWI bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Most witnesses, including one woman who made an emotional appeal on behalf of her mother, who was killed by a drunken driver, urged lawmakers to pass tougher laws against drunken drivers.

But one witness who testified Monday before the Senate State Affairs Committee hearing several DWI bills warned lawmakers not to go "too far."

Defense attorney Roy Minton of Austin said Texas simply needs to enforce the current laws.

Some senators, as well as observers in the crowded Senate chamber Monday, wore buttons saying, "Save a Life, SB 1, 2, 3." Others held up signs in the balcony that said, "Stop DWI, Vote for SB 1, 2, 3."

Senate bills 1, 2 and 3 were sponsored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford. Other senators who presented anti-DWI bills to the State Affairs Committee were Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso; Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite; and Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville.

Committee chairman Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said all eight DWI bills would go to a subcommittee, which would be asked to make a report within two weeks.

The DWI bills would increase penalties, make it more difficult to get probated sentences and provide for driver's license suspensions.

Minton warned committee members not to abolish "deferred adjudication," a form of probation that allows a defendant to get his record wiped clean if he stays out of trouble for a period of time.

"That's the strongest prosecutorial tool we have today," said Minton, a former prosecutor. "If that judge places him on deferred prosecution and six months later he goes out and has an automobile accident, is drunk, tears up some property, that judge may then sentence him to two years in jail" without any further trial.

But other witnesses said deferred adjudication means repeat offenders can come to court on drunken driving charges and be considered "first offenders" each time, since their previous record was purged.

Mothers Against Drunken Drivers organizer Suzanne Hildebrand of San Antonio cited one Bexar County case in which she said a man was convicted of drunken driving 22 times and got off each time becasue of deferred adjudication.

Her voice broke into a brief sob as she asked senators on the committee to approve tougher DWI lawss "in honor of my mother," who was killed by a drunken motorist 10 years ago.

Sarpalius said drunken driving is the No. 1 cause of death among Texans 16 to 24. "A lot of people are consistently slipping through the system," he said.

As an example, he told of a drunken driver in Houston whose car hit a man, partially paralyzing him. The driver, Sarpalius said, "got off with a traffic ticket. Where was justice done?"

Sarpalius recited several incidents of traffic deaths and injuries caused by drunken drivers and said senators should "listen to the cries" of victims and their families.

Rusty Duncan of Denton, president of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, supported Santiesteban's proposal, which would set up a sliding scale of penalties based on the seriousness of the offense.

Uribe said the most important part of his bill would require an additional $100 probation fee that would go into a fund to pay damages to DWI victims.

Sarpalius suggested raising alcoholic beverage permit and license fees — some of which have not been changed since 1935 — with the money going into a special fund for local alcohol rehabilitation programs.

He estimated the provision would raise $23 million a year.

Sarpalius also proposed a bill that would ban open containers of alcoholic beverages in motor vehicles.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, who describes himself as a non-drinking alcoholic, said the money for rehabilitation should come out of the state's general revenue fund, not from fees.

Bullock was treated at an alcoholic rehabilition center in California, and he said, "If I had not gone, I would have been in the Austin Cemetery today."

In Lancaster, Texas, many people stop to stare at former mayor Cecil Edwards' field-watching eagle. The bird came from the First National Bank of Lancaster building in the late 1930s.

Some think pasture statue in Lancaster for the birds

But former mayor wanted it there

LANCASTER, Texas (AP) — At first glance, the imposing statue perched in a sweeping pasture of buttercups looks like a 7-foot-tall bald eagle.

At second glance, it is — a red, white and blue concrete eagle.

For three decades, it has kept a silent vigil in a Lancaster pasture, accepted by townsfolk as the legacy of an eccentric millionaire who died in 1962.

But it still causes motorists on the city's main drag to gawk and elicits inquiries from newcomers who wonder why the bird is in the middle of a field surrounded by a rusty, barbed-wire fence.

The statue is there because of J. Cecil Edwards, a former mayor who sold Fords and owned 2,000 acres of farm land. Edwards decided that Lancaster could use a 7-foot bald eagle, visible for all the world to see from bustling Dallas Avenue.

City officials don't claim it as an historic landmark.

It's just there, along with the wildflowers and Shetland ponies on the outskirts of the rural town in southern Dallas County.

"I don't know what that eagle stands for," said E.H. Sheffield, executive vice president of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce. "It's of no significance that I know of. I think he just liked the looks of it."

Edwards, a big man with piercing blue eyes and an ever-present Stetson, got the bird in the late 1930s from a bank president who decided he was bored with it.

John McShane, retired president of the First National Bank of Lancaster, said he gave the eagle to Edwards when the bank was being remodeled. The bird had rested on a second-story ledge of the old building since 1914.

"It looked like it was about to fall off," McShane said. "I didn't have any use for it."

Instead of having the eagle carted to the dump, Edwards took the bird and put it in the middle of 33 acres of farm property he owned.

Edwards' widow, Geneva, who now owns the eagle and the property, said: "He just wanted it there where it could be seen from the road. Isn't that something?"

For six years, Imogene Harris has rented a farmhouse on the Edwards property. The retired woman has become accustomed to motorists who slow down and stop to ask about the eagle.

"You can't keep people from stopping on the side of the road. I've seen it so much I never really think about it," said Mrs. Harris, 66.

There is a slim possibility that the eagle will be sold, but family members say that after all this time it just seems to belong.

"There's been many a person who has wanted to buy it, but Cecil put it there, and so long as (the Edwards family) owns it, I imagine it will stay there," said Charles Edwards, 63, a younger brother of the man who put the eagle in the pasture.

"Directions are given by it all over the county," Edwards said.

So the eagle sits in the pasture, its third coat of paint wearing thin.

"I just think it's a symbol," Edwards said.

Juarez trying to clean up its image

Keeping tourists coming means keeping city clean

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The Mexico border town of Juarez is being buffed and polished so it can show a better side to foreign visitors.

Juarez once was dubbed "a sin center" where nightclubs doubled as brothels and quickie Mexican divorces were so popular that would-be divorcees chartered flights from New York.

Now, in the midst of Mexico's worst economic crisis in a half-century, this tourist-dependent city of 900,000 desperately is trying to clean up its image.

Chihuahua State Gov. Oscar Ornelas Kuchle ordered traffic police last month to "go easy" on American visitors.

Juarez Chamber of Commerce vice president Manuel Enriquez Savignac has asked federal authorities to help rid Juarez streets of cigarette vendors and children who wipe motorist's windshields.

Juarez Mayor Jose Reyes Estrada has mulled over installing traffic dividers to funnel motorists through the city's finer sections, avoiding the colonias where some of the poorest residents live in adobe shacks that lack potable water. Only 62 percent of Juarez has running water, officials say.

Ornelas also promised Juarez authorities last month that pot-holed streets and uneven sidewalks in the city's tourist zone would be fixed.

To compound Juarez's image problems, a city bus driver from nearby El Paso was arrested last December for running over a female pedestrian while transporting a busload of tourists to a Juarez nightclub.

The manslaughter charge against Sun City Area Transit driver Daniel Levario was complicated when Juarez police admitted the victim may have been a prostitute. The charge is pending.

In December, nearly 1,000 Mexican socialists marched on the U.S. Consulate in Juarez, tossed rocks and burned an effigy of Uncle Sam. The protesters, mostly squatters, blamed the United States for causing Mexico's recent economic problems.

Reports of unrest and Juarez's sordid past have caused local officials to try to initiate ways of encouraging visitors to return to the city, which is Mexico's fourth largest behind Mexico City, Guadalajara and Monterrey.

AP Laserphoto

Ciudad Juarez, the Mexican border town second only to Tijuana in attracting foreign visitors, has undertaken an image-upgrading program in hopes of keeping the tourists coming.

Of Mexico's cities along its 1,760-mile border with the United States, only Tijuana annually has more visitors than Juarez.

Millions of dollars were spent in the mid-1960s to shed Juarez's shantytown image. The result was a new museum, city auditiorium and hotel near the popular government-sponsored ProNaF tourist complex.

Police were called in to stop 1960s Juarez scavengers who crossed daily through porous fences and the knee-deep Rio Grande to El Paso to ferret out usable goods from the Cordova Island garbage dump.

In 1970, when 24-hour Mexican divorces were declared illegal, local officials pushed for the establishment of gambling casinos to lure tourists to Juarez. Mexico has outlawed gambling casinos since 1933. Then-Mexican President Luis Echevarria Alvarez quashed the move.

In 1974, another downtown modernization project resulted in the paving of more tourist-zone streets and the addition of horse and greyhound racing.

By 1977, tourists flocking across the two border bridges to buy Mexico's tequila and onyx chess pieces and to indulge in Juarez's restaurants and bars were aided by the addition of speed limit signs in English.

The Juarez Race Track, a popular tourist attraction, canceled its 1982 horse racing season because of a strike. About 150 horses and 600 greyhounds were held hostage for five weeks until the strike ended when a 10-year franchise extension was granted.

In May 1982, Juarez officials started a summer campaign called "Operation Amigo" because they feared tourists would avoid their city in the face of bad economic news and a prolonged student strike at the local agricultural college.

The city also doubled to 60 its fleet of garbage trucks in order to clean up tourist areas.

A part-time job only pays for part of his education.

When you give to the United Negro College Fund, you help keep tuition down at 42 private, predominantly black colleges and universities. So part-time workers like this one can continue to be full-time students. And go on to enrich our society.

Please send your check to the United Negro College Fund, Box C, 500 East 62nd St., New York, N.Y. 10021.

If you think our students work hard to put themselves through college, one thing will impress you even more: What they'll do when they graduate.

Give to the United Negro College Fund.
A mind is a terrible thing to waste.
