Houston man slain as his sons watch

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who was attempting to chase drug dealers away from a Houston apartment complex was fatally shot as his two young sons watched helplessly.

Police said the victim, Felipe Martinez, 42, had grown weary of people dealing drugs at the complex, which is managed by his wife.

"He was just a hard-working guy," homicide investigator Rico Garcia said. "He was tired of these drug dealers using the complex to sell narcotics."

The incident began about 9:45 p.m. on Tuesday when Martinez confronted men in two vehicles that had just pulled into the apartment parking lot. His sons, ages 13 and 6, were nearby watching.

"The place is just infested with drug dealers. He knew they didn't live there and was just tired of them coming there and told a friend he was going to chase them off," Garcia said.

When he ordered the men in the vehicles to leave, they got out and started beating Martinez up, Garcia said.

"His two sons were there and they tried to step in and help, but a witness restrained them because he didn't want them to get hurt, too," Garcia said.

Martinez was fighting with at least two men, when another man got out of a car and shot him in the back.

"After he shot him they continued beating on him," Garcia said.

After the drug dealers fled a few minutes later, Martinez was taken to Ben Taub Hospital where he died early Wednesday morning.

Garcia said that in the past whenever the drug pushers showed up at the complex, residents called police.

"When police would get there, they would be gone," Garcia said.

"It's really sad, and really frustrating when this happens. This guy took it upon himself to do something about these dealers and he got killed," Garcia said.

Garcia said police detectives are investigating reports that the shooting might have been done by a man who already has been charged with another drug-related homicide.

"He's a cold-blooded killer," Garcia said. "It's not like some cantina shooting when high emotions are involved. He just walked up to him and shot him."

Colombian candidate slain

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Two men armed with machine guns killed a leftist presidential candidate today at Bogota's international airport, a doctor said. It was the second assassination of a presidential candidate in seven months.

Bernardo Jaramillo, 38, candidate of the Patriotic Union, was shot by at least one of the two gunmen and rushed to a nearby clinic where he died from complications caused by wounds to the throat, said Dr. Juan Manuel Uribe.

Last year, Jaramillo fled the country for several months after saying he had been threatened with assassination.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the shooting. However, the Patriotic Union has been targeted by Colombian right-wing death squads. Since the party's founding in 1984, 1,044 of its members have been killed.

One of the assailants opened fire on Jaramillo as he walked into the airport to board a domestic flight, one of his bodyguards said. The candidate was reportedly leaving for a three-day vacation on Colombia's northern coast.

Jaramillo was shot twice in the throat and twice in the abdomen, a statement read by Uribe said. He arrived at the clinic unconcious and in shock.

"A man walked up to him to greet him like a supporter and then began shooting," the bodyguard told Caracol radio. "Bernardo fell to the floor and was protected by his wife and bodyguards while we fired on the aggressor."

Diego Montana, president of the Patriotic Union, said one of Jaramillo's assailants was shot and killed by bodyguards, but Caracol said the man, identified as Jairo Restrepo, 21, was seriously wounded.

Jury to get slander case

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Final arguments were scheduled today in the $4 million slander case against former Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon after an early recess was called Tuesday by visiting District Judge James Gregg.

Witnesses testifying Tuesday included the man who ended Dallas Smith's eight-year reign as sheriff of Midland County.

Gary Painter testified that during one meeting Smith ordered his deputies to get their "house in order" as far as any outstanding parking tickets were concerned because he was going "to get Gideon again."

Gideon is accused of spreading rumors that Smith beat his ex-wife Gail Mabee Commagere and that the rumors eventually led to the former sheriff's downfall to Painter in the 1984 Republican primary.

Painter said that following a fight between Smith and his wife at her home, the former sheriff called a meeting to tell his staff about the incident, which he described as a "door slamming contest and she lost."

According to previous testimony, Smith reportedly restrained his ex-wife's movement by the throat during a argument. When she tried to escape through the front door, Smith reportedly slammed it shut on her hand.

Painter testified he had no respect for Smith or the way he ran the department.

When Painter decided to take on his boss in the GOP Primary, he testified he received tremendous support from fellow officers, including those at the police depart-

Bush glad broccoli to be served to those hungry enough to eat it

By Christopher Connell

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush says he still won't eat his broccoli and not even his "totalitarian" wife can make him.

Bush expressed delight Wednesday that California growers were shipping 10 tons of the green vegetable to feed the hungry in the nation's capital.

"I am not going to rethink my position," a puckish president insisted on his way home from the Oval Office.

Barbara Bush has publicly bemoaned the difficulty of getting her husband to eat his vegetables, but Bush said later he didn't really ban broccoli from the presidential plane.

At a state dinner for Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, he told reporters, "I have not ordered it off Air Force One. I have just said, 'Don't you dare bring me another sprig of High calling

Welder Bob Curley works more than 90 feet above ground on the city's new water tank at Wadley Avenue and Lamesa Road. The structure is expected to be completed by October.

New water tower soon to store 2 million gallons

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

What looks like the barrel of a giant elephant gun pointed at the sky, is 69 percent built and will hold 2 million gallons of water when completed in October?

If the city of Midland's still-rising addition to the skyline hasn't become obvious in the past two months, then maybe it's time to visit the optometrist.

Construction on Midland's third and biggest elevated water storage tank has been ongoing on the southwest corner of Hogan Park in northeast Midland since June 1989.

The tank, which will rise to 140 feet, should be storing water in seven months, Ken Jones, assistant utilities director, said Wednesday.

Fifty-one percent of the way to the expected completion date, construction is 69 percent finished, Jones said. He would not speculate whether the project would be completed early.

The earth's gravitational pull on the elevated 17 million pounds of fluid at maximum tank capacity will help keep water pressure high in east and downtown Midland, Jones said. The added pressure will be especially handy when peak usage occurs during the late morning hours in the summer, he said.

The tank will be filled at night, start draining at daybreak and be almost empty by 10 p.m., he said.

The $1.4 million for the project came from the Texas Capital Access Program, through which the Texas Department of Commerce purchases bonds issued by local governmental entities statewide. The project bid was awarded to Pitt-Des Moines Inc.

"It's been right on budget," Jones said. "There have been no change orders at all."

It took seven months to construct the 90-foot-tall hollow, concrete base which will support the 50-foot-tall tank, where the steel is 3½ inches thick in some places, he said.

Parker murder probe takes surprising turn

SCARLET BLOODLINE

Last in a series

By Mike Cochran

HARPER, Texas (AP) — Linda Parker was preparing dinner that Sunday evening when she received a telephone call from "Big Mama," the aging matriarch of the Parker clan.

Lorena Parker told her something had happened to Bruce.

"I went to find him," Linda said.

At a low water crossing on the river, she met a pickup truck descending from the hill. It was a local man named Benny Barker.

With the motor running, she jumped from her car, stopped Barker and demanded to know where her husband was.

"He's up on the hill, and I think he's dead," Barker replied.

"No, he's not!" Linda cried. "Don't tell me that!"

"I've got to go call an ambulance," Barker insisted.

Linda abandoned her car and started up the hill on foot.

"Don't go up there," Barker declared.

She ran on.

Barker drove to a telephone and called Bruce's friend, sheriff's deputy Bill Beard, who left for the ranch while his wife summoned an ambulance.

Bruce was in fact dead when Linda found him, his body sprawled along the dirt road on the driver's side of the pickup.

His head was turned sideways and he lay in a massive pool of blood.

His .22-caliber rifle and his Ruger pistol were clearly visible in the passenger seat of the truck. Investigators indicated, but refused to confirm, that neither was the death weapon.

Though Deputy Beard had no jurisdiction in Kimble County where Bruce was shot, he was the first officer at the scene, and he spotted a powder burn about the size of a half dollar on his friend's upper chest.

He and an ambulance attendant felt for a pulse, found nothing, then covered the body.

Fair skies anticipated

Staff Report

Fair skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low in the middle 50s and winds from the southwest at 10-20 mph, shifting to the east in the early evening.

Friday is expected to be partly cloudy and cooler with the high in the middle 70s and winds from the east-southeast at 10-20 mph and gusty.

Wednesday's high of 85 was two degrees cooler than the record high of 87 set for that date in 1934. The overnight low of 48 was 26 degrees warmer than the record low of 22 set for this date in 1989.

STATE

A large ridge of high pressure centered over the Eastern Seaboard brought low level moisture into Texas from the Gulf of Mexico and increased the chances of thunderstorms in North Texas Friday.

It will be clear to partly cloudy and mild across the rest of the state through Friday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 50s, ranging from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 60s in South Texas.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 60s and 70s, ranging from the 50s in the Panhandle to the 80s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas, extreme West Texas and inland areas of South Texas.

Skies were mostly clear over most of the western half of the state and mostly cloudy elsewhere early today.

Early morning temperatures are mostly in the 50s, ranging from the 40s in the Panhandle and the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 60s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 42 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 67 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 50 at Amarillo, 56 at Wichita Falls, 57 at Fort Worth, 58 at Waco, 60 at Austin, 58 at San Antonio, 65 at Brownsville, 60 at San Angelo, 58 at Lubbock, 55 at Midland and 54 at El Paso.

NATION

A cold front was moving across the northern Plains today, threatening livestock with a blast of winter, while farmers in the highlands of the Carolinas assessed extensive frost damage to peaches and other early crops.

A cold front pushed by strong northerly winds may drop temperatures in northern North Dakota and Minnesota to 10 below by late tonight. Snow was expected, with gusts reaching 45 mph likely to leave drifts.

Livestock stress is expected to reach the danger level in eastern Wyoming late tonight and Friday, the National Weather Service said.

Freezing temperatures early Wednesday destroyed up to half of the peach crop in South Carolina's Upstate and extension agents say such early crops as tobacco, corn and watermelons also suffered devastating blows.

Growers blamed the damage on temperatures that dipped into the low 20s just before dawn Wednesday. More frost was possible later this week.

Rain fell in South Dakota on Wednesday night ahead of the developing storm front. A few thundershowers were also over western Nebraska and northeastern Colorado.

The Southwest was expected to bask under clear skies and temperatures into the 80s and 90s, while showers were forecast for Northwest.

Rain fell in Minneapolis early today. Clear skies were expected over much of the East, but showers were likely in New York, Vermont and New Hampshire.

Flood waters in the Florida panhandle from swollen Georgia and Alabama rivers were expected to recede in some places today. But some other rivers were not expected to crest until Friday or Saturday.

The high for the nation Wednesday was 98 degrees at Borrego Springs and Palm Springs in California.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Sterling, Coke Irion and Tom Green counties: Tonight, fair. Low in the upper 50s. Southwest wind 10 to 20 mph shifting to the east early tonight. Friday, partly cloudy. High in the upper 70s. East and southeast wind 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Census forms could arrive soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Households across the nation will receive census forms in the mail starting Friday, as the head count shifts its focus from the homeless to the rest of the U.S. population.

The most ambitious effort ever to count the homeless wound up early Wednesday, with Census Bureau Director Barbara Everett Bryant proclaiming success.

"We can now move on to the rest of America," she said, urging people to complete their census forms and send them back promptly.

Nearly 85 million census forms already have been trucked to bulk distribution centers of the U.S. Postal Service. They will go into the hands of letter carriers Friday for delivery to homes nationwide.

Forms will be stuffed in mailboxes or held with other mail, but they will not be forwarded to people who have moved.

People who haven't received a form by April 2 are being asked to call the Census Bureau, which will send out a worker known as an enumerator to make sure they get counted. The number to call is 1-800-999-1990.

Census Day is April 1, and the bureau wants people to fill out the forms to show their residence and family situation as of that day.

Just getting the material delivered and returned through the mail is costing nearly $44 million in postage, a fraction of the estimated $2.5 billion overall cost of the head count.

With the nation's population at about 250 million, that amounts to $10 each. In fact, since the actual count is done only every 10 years, bureau officials like to say it averages out to only $1 a year for each American.

Millions will be saved if the forms are returned promptly because that will save census takers from having to visit those people, a more expensive undertaking.

Census workers will have to visit lots of homes in any case.

While commercial address lists were purchased covering about 85 million homes, there are nearly 100 million residences in the country. There were no good, accurate mailing lists for the other 15 million.

That means census takers will have to visit those places, largely in rural areas such as hollows in West Virginia, isolated communities in Alaska and lonely ranches in the West.

To collect the mass of material, the bureau is hiring 480,000 temporary employees. And they won't be desk-bound bureaucrats, because the agency bought them only 68,000 desks and 75,000 chairs.

The workers will use 9,360,000 pencils to process census forms that consumed 5,000 tons of paper and 2,700 pounds of ink in printing.

The forms will be shredded, pulped and recycled after the information has been obtained — although microfilm copies will be maintained for future reference.

Information on any individual remains secret for 72 years, after which the microfilm goes to the National Archives and is available to historians and to people researching ancestors.

Once the counting of heads is done, the processing of data has just begun.

Analysis of the information obtained in the census will take years. Plans currently call for publication of as many as 900 different reports over that time.

They will be printed on paper, released on compact discs, tapes, diskettes and microfilm producing the equivalent of 420,000 pages of information.

That's a bit more than the first census in 1790, which was complete in 56 pages.

SUIT: Final arguments presented

ment who did not care for Smith.

When Painter became sheriff, he said he cleaned house in order to clear the air between the two departments.

Former Midland County Deputy Thomas Jones attested to that.

But unlike previous testimony, Jones told the jury that Smith was a "perfectionist," who for the most part, was fair to his employees and was only interested in getting the job done.

Jones also countered previous testimony surrounding an alleged pistol-whipping incident involving Smith and a prisoner who was beaten after he put one officer in the hospital and later attempted to attack the ex-sheriff and another deputy.

"Generally, the talk around the office was that he (Smith) used an appropriate amount of force," said Jones.

Sharon King Allison, a former girlfriend of Smith, also testified that while the two dated for a year, Smith never demonstrated a temper in front of her — something the defense made an issue of during the six-day trial.

But that testimony was rebuked twice in the final day.

In questioning by attorney Bill Moss, Gideon's wife, Patricia, testified that Smith "slapped" a friend of her's who told the sheriff she could no longer date him.

That woman, Sherry Sparks, could not be located for the trial.

Smith's attorney, Tom Sims, took issue to Mrs. Gideon's testimony, wondering why she never told her husband about the incident until the suit was filed.

Elizabeth Ann Shamo, who was flown in from Arizona in the defense's pursuit to demonstrate Smith's violent nature, also testified.

Ms. Shamo was a neighbor of the Smiths during their rocky divorce. She testified that Smith dragged his wife by the arm against her will on the night of the door-slamming incident.

She testified that Mrs. Commagere's unsuccessfully struggled to get away from the former sheriff, who she viewed as a "stand-offish" person. Like many others who testified throughout the trial, she too had heard the rumor that Smith beat his wife.

TOWER: October completion due

(From 1A)

The structure will be coated with more than 1,000 gallons of baby-blue paint, Jones said.

"It will take longer to paint it than it did to put the steel up," he said. "They have to sandblast and then put three coats of paint on the inside and two coats of paint on the outside."

The water tower will be topped by a blinking red light and a radio antenna for the city's communication system, he said.

Harvey Hansen, engineering and transportation director, said the city's other two elevated tanks, each of which hold only 1 million gallons, have not been able to keep water pressure up citywide.

One of the tanks is located near the Shell Avenue-Midland Drive intersection in northwest Midland, while the other is near the Storey Avenue-Edgewood Drive intersection in the city's southwest area.

Hansen said that because the east and downtown areas had no elevated water tower nearby, pressure sometimes dropped as low as 20 pounds per square inch.

With the new tower, pressure may go as high as 57 pounds per square inch and never go much lower than 40 pounds per square inch, he said.

Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said the low water pressure hasn't been a problem so far for firefighters.

Petree, though, said the new tank is needed to ensure an adequate volume of water needed to fight fires in downtown and east Midland.

"The town keeps spreading out," Petree noted. "The more houses you have, the lower the water pressure. We benefit from having the tanks in strategic points in the city."

Hansen said that at the rate Midland is growing toward the west and northwest, a 2 million-gallon tank may be needed for that area in 10 to 15 years.

that vegetable.'"

The president's taste runs more to pork rinds, taco salads and almost anything smothered in hot pepper sauce.

Bush gave his Polish guest a quick fill-in on the broccoli brouhaha.

"The broccoli growers of America are up in arms against me. Would you be interested in having the (10 tons) in Poland?" he asked. Mazowiecki evinced no interest in the deal.

"Just as Poland is rebelling against totalitarianism, I am rebelling. I refuse to give ground," said Bush, warming to the subject. "But the broccoli growers and my wife will win."

Asked if he really viewed his wife of 45 years as a totalitarian, he replied, "She is a total totalitarian — on broccoli only."

Mrs. Bush said, "You're darn right I am" a broccoli totalitarian. "I love broccoli."

She said she was prepared to serve a meal with broccoli soup and salad, broccoli with the main course and "then finish it with a little broccoli ice cream."

Asked if there was anything else he doesn't like, Bush laughed and replied, "Yeah, but I don't want to get 10 tons of it!"

The White House is considering holding a welcoming ceremony for the broccoli when it arrives Monday en route to the Capital Area Community Food Bank, which will forward the vegetables to soup kitchens, shelters and other groups feeding the hungry.

Two cartons of broccoli reportedly are earmarked for the White House kitchens, along with recipes offering appetizing ways to serve it.

Peter Lassen, food solicitor for the food bank, said he was contacted by the California growers Monday after a news magazine reported that broccoli was verboten on Air Force One.

"I got a call asking if we'd accept a shipment of broccoli as a good-natured protest to the president. I said sure," he said.

A White House official contacted Lassen on Tuesday and discussed the possibility of giving the broccoli a presidential reception.

"They wanted to make sure it wasn't a hoax," said Lassen. He added, "I don't know if the White House is going to go along."

SLAIN: Leftist candidate shot at airport

Police were searching for the other gunman, Caracol said.

When a crowd outside the Patriotic Union's headquarters learned that Jaramillo had not survived the attack, people set fire to a bus and began breaking store windows. Police were sent in to try to control the disturbances.

The candidate was elected to the Senate in a general election on March 11. Colombian law permits active senators to run for president.

Jaramillo, considered one of the most threatened men in the country, was forced to resign from the Patriotic Union's presidency and flee the country on Feb. 28, 1989, because of what he called a plot to assassinate him.

He returned to Colombia on June 9, 1989.

The presidential election is May 26.

BLOODLINE: 'Family got larger, land got smaller'

(From 1A)

Beard noticed the enormous loss of blood and speculated that Bruce, though possibly conscious, lived no more than three minutes after the shooting.

He noticed other things as well, things he would not discuss later because of the judicial order of silence. But they convinced him Bruce Parker was murdered.

"There were too many things that didn't add up to a self-inflicted wound," he said.

By the time Kimble County Sheriff Pat Davis arrived, a sizable crowd had gathered at the bluff above Big Rock, raising concern later about the integrity of the crime scene.

Bruce's western hat was on the hood of the truck, which Sheriff Davis thought might be significant.

"They said when he was mad and about ready to fight, the first thing he did was take his hat off and set it down," he said. "It looks like there might be some sort of altercation."

Linda would not totally accept that premise, but never for a second did she embrace the theory that her husband killed himself.

The motive behind the slaying?

"Jealousy and greed," she snapped.

Would she explain?

"No," she replied.

Alarmed over the rumors of a suicide ruling, Linda Parker appealed to the Texas Rangers to investigate her husband's death, and Ranger Joe Davis was dispatched to join Sheriff Pat Davis in the inquiry.

"It was day and night for three weeks, lots of hours and hours," the sheriff said. "We'd meet every morning and evening and discuss it. We didn't want to make a mistake."

For two days in mid-November, a steady stream of Parkers clattered across the bridge spanning the Llano River and rolled up to the old brick and stone courthouse in Junction.

Behind closed doors, they and others were questioned in front of a Kimble County grand jury about what they knew of the events of Oct. 29.

Among the witnesses subpoenaed to testify were Doyle Parker and his brother Raymond, 66, the uncle who owned the land where the shooting occurred.

Those who knew both men described Doyle as a short, dark man with a fondness for cigars and a dedication solely to ranching and family, which included his wife Virginia and their four children.

He spent his entire life on Parker land and had acquired holdings beyond what he inherited from "Big Daddy."

Unlike Doyle, Raymond left the Parker conclave for San Antonio and spent 17 years in business before returning to the ranch in his later years.

A six-footer with gray, wavy hair, Raymond was said to be the image of his father, gentle and personable with a sense of humor and an attractive wife named Pauline.

He and Bruce sometimes attended cattle auctions together and Bruce occasionally hauled cattle for him. Their close relationship was not endorsed by all their kinsmen.

After hearing two days of testimony, the case took its most bizarre twist to date. Grand jurors rendered a murder indictment against Doyle Parker, who had the foresight to bring his lawyer to the secret proceedings.

Accused of "intentionally and knowingly" killing his nephew, Doyle was arrested but quickly

"It was day and night for three weeks, lots of hours. ... We'd meet every morning and evening and discuss it. We didn't want to make a mistake."

— Pat Davis, Kimble County Sheriff

"It just goes on and on."

— Frederica Wyatt, Junction city secretarty and Kimble County historian freed on $25,000 bail.

But even then other sinister forces were at work in the Parker family.

The frost-laden northers that usher in a Hill Country winter were no match for the chill that penetrated the Parker compound in the days following Doyle Parker's indictment.

According to investigators and others, "Big Mama" Parker indirectly blamed son Raymond for the death of grandson Bruce, even though Doyle stood accused by authorities.

With logic perhaps known only to a family so scrupulously private, she reportedly concluded the tragedy occurred because Raymond offered his own nephew hunting and fishing rights on sacred Parker ground.

No one apparently knew what inner turmoil Raymond faced and he himself left no clue when he picked up his .22-caliber automatic pistol on a Sunday night in early December and disappeared into the bathroom of his ranch home.

Without a word, or even a note, he blew his brains out.

He left behind only his grand jury testimony, secret by law.

Complaining about the "considerable" media coverage of the case, a defense attorney persuaded State Judge V. Murray Jordan to issue a gag order on everyone in the investigation, adding another layer of silence to the puzzling case.

Before that mandate, authorities said they suspected homicide early on.

"I didn't think it was suicide, the sheriff didn't think it was suicide and the ranger didn't think it was suicide," said Ron Sutton, a small-town district attorney with a big-time reputation.

Sutton, who successfully prosecuted baby killer Genene Jones and the Kerrville "slave ranch" defendants, said his case is "circumstantial and complicated" but he wanted it tried as quickly as possible.

Although his assistant initially opposed the gag order, Sutton indicated his case was so fragile he wouldn't talk about it with anyone, let alone reporters.

Judge Jordan set the trial for March 27 but it appeared that could be the date for a competency hearing for Doyle Parker, who is 75.

His attorney filed a petition maintaining the defendant lacks neither the "ability to consult with counsel with a reasonable degree of rational understanding, nor a rational as well as factual understanding of the proceedings against him."

Sutton claimed the competency issue was a delaying tactic and seemed undeterred by the defendant's advanced age. Said the prosecutor:

"His mother's in good shape at 92 and his father lived to be 97. These people live forever down there unless they get shot."

And, said Sutton, the victim is no less dead.

"Age doesn't give you the right to kill."

With Bruce Parker dead and his uncle under indictment, there was little to be thankful for as Thanksgiving came and went at the Parker compound in Kimble County.

Raymond's suicide in early December was hardly less shocking than the events that preceded it. In just six incredible months, three Parkers were dead and a fourth charged with murder.

And the family's history of violence was now embroidered with still another legacy — silence.

Undeniably restrained, Linda Parker lived out the winter in the home Bruce built, vowing that justice would be served.

"All of this will come out in court," she insisted.

Others familiar with the family's scarlet bloodlines were not so sure. With the competency issue unresolved, the prosecution of Doyle Parker was no certainty.

Parker obituaries of the past faithfully recorded who died, but not always why.

It is possible that an offhand inference by an investigator strikes perilously close to the truth.

"The family got larger and larger," he drawled, "and the land smaller and smaller."

Agent acquitted of DWI charges

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston judge has acquitted the head of Houston's Drug Enforcement Administration office of drunken driving charges in connection with an August wreck with a Metro bus.

Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross ruled Marion Hambrick innocent of driving while intoxicated charges Wednesday.

Hambrick, 49, said two men had pulled up beside him Aug. 9 as he left a Houston restaurant and pointed a gun at him. He said when he ducked down, he smashed into the back of the stopped bus.

Store removes records

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Several recordings by rap artists and one by the hard rock group Guns 'N Roses were removed from a record store's shelves after police said one recording violated the state's obscenity laws, the owner says.

Music store owner Don Hodgkinson said Tuesday he voluntarily pulled several recordings off his shelves that contained a parental warning of explicit lyrics when two police detectives told him not to sell one recording.

Hodgkinson said the recordings he removed included more than a dozen tapes by black rap artists and one by Guns 'N Roses.

"We haven't ordered anyone to remove anything," responded Orange Police Chief Sam Kittrell.

Kittrell also said he does not believe the police department is acting as a censor.

The police chief said a parent made an informal complaint two weeks ago about a record by the Ghetto Boys. He said the parent told him the handwritten lyrics of the group's song "Gangster of Love" were being circulated at a local school, but he did not know which one.

"Gangster of Love" includes details of sexual encounters with slang terms for genitals.

"It's certainly not up to me to make a ruling on what is obscene," Kittrell said. "But it wouldn't take a rocket scientist to tell this is pretty obscene."

Hodgkinson said he does not blame the police for following up on the complaint.

Orange County Attorney Steve Howard, who prosecutes felony criminal cases, said Kittrell had contacted him and his office would investigate any formal complaint.

A young couple looks over photos of Lithuanian political leaders and current events displayed by the republic's Elta news agency Wednesday in Vilnius. The Baltic republic declared independence from the Soviet Union on March 11, a move condemned by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Lithuanian leader says people won't give up their guns

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuania's prime minister said today that Mikhail S. Gorbachev has no right to order her people to surrender their firearms, and she demanded to know how many extra Soviet troops have been sent to Lithuania.

The prime minister, Kazimiera Prunskiene, called Gorbachev's decree "an expression of mistrust in the whole population" of the Baltic state, which insists it will not be intimidated into backing down from secession.

President Vytautus Landsbergis of Lithuania, which declared itself independent on March 11, said in a statement that the Soviet leader's order Wednesday showed "the ghost of Stalinism is walking in the Kremlin."

Landsbergis said the Baltic republic would remain "serene and united" despite the decree, which he said "could be enforced only by brutal military force."

Gorbachev has called Lithuania's declaration of independence illegal but has also said he would not use force to keep it from seceding. Soviet troops have over the past week stepped up maneuvers in Lithuanian territory.

Wednesday night, Mrs. Prunskiene sent a telegram to Gorbachev demanding to know the number of Soviet troops and amount of military equipment sent to Lithuania during the past few days.

The telegram said the number of soldiers, especially paratroopers, appeared to be on the rise although the massive number of military flights to Lithuania over the weekend had been halted.

Mrs. Prunskiene said today during a meeting of Lithuania's Parliament that it is up to the people if they want to keep arms. "It is up to each individual because sports guns are private property."

She said the Soviet Union had no right to tell Lithuanians what to do. "Nor does it have an excuse for the suspicion that these weapons will be used for any kind of bad event," she said.

However, the Soviet general who commands Lithuania's volunteer civil defense agency said he has partially complied with orders to turn over to the Soviet military the weapons and 16,000 vehicles under his command.

Gen. Ginutis Taurinskas told the Lithuanian Parliament he was ordered "to give all small caliber weapons to military units so there won't be any eventual theft of arms for inappropriate use."

He said firearms remained scattered among 500 to 600 units of volunteers who carry out air raid drills and train young people for military service. He gave no figures.

Gorbachev, using the powers he gained when the Congress of People's Deputies elected him the Soviet Union's first executive president last week, said Lithuanians had a week to turn in their firearms.

If they fail to do so, he said the Soviet Interior Ministry should be prepared to confiscate them.

Gorbachev also told KGB border troops to tighten their watch over the republic and told officials to reduce the number of visas issued to foreigners seeking to visit the republic.

His decree was the latest in a series of increasingly tough moves taken by Moscow in an attempt to discourage secession.

Belgium nuns 'on the run' from Catholic church officials

BRUGES, Belgium (AP) — Eight nuns moved to a castle in southern France after their convent was sold for $1.4 million, and police were investigating the religious order's purchase of racehorses and other property, a court official said Wednesday.

Roman Catholic Church officials said the sale occurred without the bishop of Bruges' permission.

He has excommunicated the convent's mother superior and the youngest of the eight nuns for failing to submit the convent's books for examination to the diocese and for refusing to let a church official enter the convent.

Investigators have arrested the convent's financial director, Ronny Crab, 35, and charged him with swindling, abuse of trust, extortion and forgery.

Police have uncovered unusual practices for a religious order, including the purchases of a Mercedes-Benz auto equipped with a bar, a farmhouse, racehorses and the dilapidated castle in Tarbes, France, where they are living.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said investigators had traveled to Tarbes, near Lourdes, to determine if the Poor Sisters of Clare agreed to the $1.4 million sale of the convent to a building corporation.

The nuns left the same day, March 6, for the south of France, and the court official said.

Globe '90s theme somber

Hearst News Service

VANCOUVER, British Columbia – Environmental destruction is a "ticking time bomb" posing a greater threat to humanity than nuclear annihilation did during the Cold War, participants at a global environmental conference were warned.

The conference, Globe '90, opened this week amid warnings that pollution and overpopulation are threats that require resources previously committed to the international arms race.

A leading American businessman, Monsanto Co. President Earle Harbison, said the "environmental clock may strike midnight; in the next 30 to 40 years, we and our children may witness environmental degradation on a scale we have not yet imagined."

To illustrate the point, Thailand's Princess Chulabhorn Mahidol showed pictures of floods in her country brought on by deforestation.

"The environmental clock may strike midnight; in the next 30 to 40 years, we and our children may witness environmental degradation on a scale we have not yet imagined."

— Earle Harbison, Monsanto Co. president

A Canadian lawmaker, House of Commons Speaker John Fraser, warned that polluting industries are "hoodwinking us" by claiming more proof is needed on climate change, global warming and other issues.

"We're going to see a deliberate campaign to keep politicians from acting and to lull the public into complacency," Fraser said.

"What we'll get is what we heard from the chemical industry on DDT, and the power plants on acid rain," he said. "Those who do not want to change their ways will say, 'You can't prove it.'"

Former Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland, chairman of the World Commission on Environment and Development, said a thawing Cold War has made vital resources available for cleaning up the Earth.

"The present international atmosphere gives us a historic opportunity to act together," she said. "We can take out a sustainable development dividend after curbing and reversing the arms race. ... All our economies, all our children, all our futures will benefit from cuts in military expenditure."

Globe '90, a conference and trade fair, has attracted exhibitors, speakers and more than delegates from 56 countries.

Vote irks sculptor

BERWYN, Ill. (AP) — The critics have spoken.

By more than 2-to-1, voters called for scrapping "Spindle," a 50-foot-tall steel shish kebab spearing eight automobiles, and "Bil-Bored," a sculpture made of household appliances and concrete.

Before the vote, mall owner David Bermant said he would abide by the voters' wishes.

"I've just about had it with Berwyn. I mean, I'm really discouraged about Berwyn. Don't they have any sense of aesthetics in Berwyn?" Bermant said.

"I gave them these wonderful works of art and what do I get? Public meetings. Insults. Hate mail."

"You need 10 years to gain an understanding of art like this," he said.

DOE warned not to give away SSC

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON -- A senator warned the Department of Energy Wednesday not to "give away" high-technology work on the superconducting super collider to other countries.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., issued the warning while presiding over a hearing of a Senate subcommittee looking into the fiscal year 1991 budget for the collider, which is to be the world's biggest atom-smasher.

Johnston asked James F. Decker of the energy department whether planners of the project envisioned a wide search for bids to develop the collider's magnets, or whether DOE wants a sole-source contract.

Decker, acting director of the Office of Energy Research at DOE, said that decision has not been made.

"I don't think we ought to give away the high-technology part of the SSC," Johnston said. "If you want to get Congress really upset, give away the high technology.

"If you want to give them some work, let them dig the ditch, or help us dig the ditch, out there. That's why we are doing this thing, to learn how to do the high tech, as well as find the (physics) secrets. Let's don't give that away," Johnston said.

The subject of international participation in the collider project, which is to be built south of Dallas, was one of several in a closed-door briefing Wednesday in the Capitol. Several members of Congress and officials of the Department of Energy discussed the project and agreed to keep the discussion secret.

> "If you want to give them some work, let them dig the ditch, or help us dig the ditch, out there. That's why we are doing this thing (SSC), to learn how to do the high tech, as well as find the (physics) secrets. Let's don't give that away."
> J. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

Johnston told Decker one difficulty Congress faces with approving the $318 million budget requested for the collider in the next fiscal year is that there is no unified science budget.

"We speak of the super collider in one breath and the space station in another breath" but without a list of priorities from the White House, he said.

"Would you tell me what your top three priorities are in this (energy science) budget?" Johnston asked Decker.

"That is very, very difficult," Decker said, and declined to state the priorities.

Johnston said one area that could be cut back to help pay for such projects as the collider is nuclear fusion, the "cleaner" but yet-to-be-developed successor to nuclear fission.

"I can tell you that is one place we have got to look very carefully," Johnston said.

Decker said fusion can become "a very important energy source for this country" and the research program has been reduced sharply in recent years.

Another senator on the subcommittee, Pete Domenici, R-N.M., disagreed with Johnston and told Decker he did not want fusion research to be the program "to pluck to pay for some other programs."

NATION

No verdict yet in Valdez trial

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The jury in Joseph Hazelwood's trial was denied a request for exhibits dealing with whether the skipper was intoxicated when the Exxon Valdez caused the nation's worst oil spill.

The panel, which ended its first day of deliberations Wednesday without reaching a verdict, sought a series of blood alcohol charts and graphs used by a defense expert to illustrate his testimony.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone, after conferring in a hurried session with attorneys, sent the jury a note saying: "You have received all of the evidence. The exhibits you have requested are not in evidence."

Deliberations were to resume today in the seven-week trial.

Saturday will be the first anniversary of the disaster, in which the 987-foot tanker rammed the charted reef in Prince William Sound, gushing nearly 11 million gallons of North Slope crude oil.

The exhibits sought by the jury Wednesday were used by defense lawyers during the trial to help illustrate testimony by Michael Hlastala, a physiologist who discussed blood testing for alcohol. The prosecution sought to prove that the fired Exxon skipper was drunk when his ship went aground at Bligh Reef while Hazelwood was below.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., is charged with one felony, second-degree criminal mischief, and three misdemeanors: reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil.

Johnstone said he would allow the jurors to continue their talks over the weekend if they should fail to reach verdicts by Friday.

Art remains

This is a view inside the Dutch Room of the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, which was robbed Sunday of numerous art treasures, including Rembrandts, a Degas and a Vermeer painting. A frame that held Rembrandt's "The Storm in the Sea of Galilee," which was stolen, is seen on the floor in the foreground.

NEA chief opposes federal censorship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration opposes federal censorship of artworks that are subsidized by tax dollars, the head of the government arts agency says.

Federal art subsidies were intended "to be free of political or cultural or content-based restrictions," John E. Frohnmeyer, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, told a congressional panel Wednesday.

That is why the administration's request to continue the NEA in business for five more years contains no such restrictions, said Frohnmayer, who has headed the agency since October.

He told the House Education and Labor subcommittee on post-secondary education that the restrictions were absent when the arts endowment was created in 1965 and should stay out.

But the NEA came under close scrutiny last year after it funded a pair of controversial exhibits depicting work that could be considered sacrilegious or obscene.

Conservative lawmakers, as a result, succeeded in amending the 1990 funding bill for the NEA by ordering the head of the agency to deny funding to work that depicts "sadomasochism, homoeroticism, the sexual exploitation of children or individuals engaged in sex acts."

The NEA was told to review its evaluation process as well. In the meantime, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. and other critics contend that the endowment has continued to finance art that violates those standards.

Helms asked the congressional General Accounting Office to investigate whether the NEA is financing pornographic art.

In requesting the probe, Helms said Frohnmayer may be sincere in saying no NEA funds are being used to support obscene art.

"But the evidence to the contrary is so compelling that it is imperative that there be an objective investigation by an agency independent of the NEA," the senator wrote.

Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., recently complained about an art exhibit in Illinois that included a painting of Jesus Christ injecting himself with heroin.

Frohnmayer said the NEA is improving the system for evaluating grants. The agency will develop a "grid" to assure that all geographic areas are represented and that as many cultures as possible are represented. The makeup of the evaluation panels also will be diversified.

Anne G. Murphy, executive director of the American Arts Alliance said she was pleased by Frohnmeyer's comments opposing censorship but was cautious about whether the administration will succeed in keeping NEA free of restrictions.

"I think it's a first step in what is going to be a prolonged debate over the next six weeks," she said.

Rohrabacher said the legislative proposal ignores mainstream values.

"If he means by no content restrictions that NEA will continue to fund art that attacks religion or is so sexually graphic that it is contrary to the moral standards of the people, I think he's forgetting the American people are his boss and not certain people in the arts community," Rohrabacher said.

"We feel that the National Endowment for the Arts is completely out of control," said a statement from the Eagle Forum, a conservative group that wants to end NEA funding.

Defenders of the NEA say only 10 "images" out of 1 million in the agency's history have generated controversy. Put another way, they say 25 grants out of 85,000 have caused trouble — just a fraction of a cent for each taxpayer.

"It's a small amount, but it's a big principle," Rohrabacher countered.

White House objects to clean-air proviso

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is approaching a showdown over whether to provide aid to coal miners who lose their jobs because of new pollution controls, and the outcome could determine whether a clean air bill passes this year.

The coal issue has placed two of the Senate's most powerful members at odds: Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who was Mitchell's predecessor as Senate leader and still wields immense power as chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Byrd has been pressing an assistance program for miners in his state and elsewhere if they lose their jobs because of tougher acid rain controls at coal-burning power plants in the Midwest.

On Wednesday night, Byrd offered to lower the package's expected cost from $700 million over four years to $500 million over three years.

Byrd's amendment, offered nearly two weeks ago, has threatened to derail progress in enacting the first improvements in federal air pollution controls in 13 years.

The White House vigorously opposes the assistance plan and Mitchell is fearful its passage might cause the compromise clean air bill, worked out in lengthy negotiations with the Bush administration, to unravel.

The miner aid issue was expected to come to a head today as Mitchell tried to work out a compromise with the White House, while Byrd was likely to press for a vote on his amendment.

"I'm not going to stand here and say I've got 51 votes (needed for passage), but I can tell you, 'You don't have 51 votes either.' And I can tell you I'm very close," Byrd told Mitchell during floor debate Wednesday night.

While the Senate has been considering a string of amendments on the floor, the miner assistance program has been the hottest topic behind the scenes.

There has been intense lobbying by the White House to defeat the amendment and an administration source said Wednesday that it has become less interested in seeking a compromise and was prepared to try to defeat the proposal.

Mitchell and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., meanwhile, have been trying line up senators to vote against Byrd's proposal, but a vote on the amendment was put off twice because its defeat was not certain.

Offering his revised assistance proposal, Byrd complained that the White House was unwilling to negotiate and that he wanted a vote.

Mitchell and Dole said they expected a response shortly from the administration on a compromise assistance plan, crafted by aides to Mitchell, that would include benefits to coal miners as well as other workers that could lose their jobs because of tougher pollution controls.

Many senators have complained that if coal miners were to be given special assistance, the same should be provided to workers in other industries.

The Senate spent most of Wednesday debating and then defeating a proposal aimed at tightening smog pollution controls in the nation's cities.

The amendment, which lost, 53-46, would have preserved the federal government's authority to impose air pollution reduction plans if states and localities failed to act.

Twister slowdown

Record few twisters touched down on Oklahoma in the latter part of the 1980s, according to the dean of the University of Oklahoma's Meteorology Dept., Dr. Howard Bluestein.

"Oklahoma had record few tornadoes in 1987 and 1988. April 1987, none, and that's a record for the state," he said.

For twister researchers such as Bluestien, 1988 was just as 'bad.'

"April 1989, again, we had very few, and for May 1989 the number of reports was below the norm."

Soviet revolution on verge of failing

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is still walking a tightrope where the rebellious Baltic States are concerned.

Lithuania, whose people don't want to remain part of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics any longer, has gone as far as to declare its independence from the U.S.S.R., but Gorbachev says the action was illegal and will not be recognized.

President Bush has encouraged the Lithuanians in their quest to break away from the Soviet Union, but stops short of extending formal diplomatic ties to the brave little state until its people can show they are in control of their own country.

Meanwhile, Gorbachev says that the Soviet Union will not forcibly call Lithuania's hand, even though Soviet troops are conducting military maneuvers in and near Lithuania.

It all adds up to yet another historic moment of decision for the embattled Soviet leader. Will the hobnail boot fall in Lithuania or will Gorbachev accept the metamorphosis his own perestroika unleashed inside the Soviet Union, even if it means the end of the union?

Gorbachev has surprised the world on several occasions in the past, choosing the democratic course when Soviet history counseled a resort to force to hold the masses in check. But those decisions were reached when Gorbachev was caught up in his own program of reform and not facing massive unrest or attempts by captive nations to pull away from the Soviet state.

Now Gorbachev holds different cards. For one thing, unrest has been rocking Russia in recent weeks as shortages and economic collapse have undermined the president's promises of a better day for Muscovites.

For another, Gorbachev now has been handed virtually dictatorial authority and can assert martial law if he believes such a step is necessary.

During a recent visit to Dallas, West Germany's top military officer, Adm. Dieter Wellershoff, noted that the Soviet Union is at a critical juncture and said, "Within the week, we may know if they will use military force in Lithuania. My guess is they would not, but they are confronted with the loss of their colonies along the whole of Russia."

If that force is used, the freedoms that have been gained in Eastern Europe could be wiped away. That would be a tragedy of staggering proportions and impresses upon Bush the duty to encourage calm action on the part of both the Soviet military and Gorbachev.

The world must not lose the gains democracy has realized in the last year.

MISD choice right

An individual has criticized the Midland School Board for their appointment of an "out-of-town" architect for the proposed new junior high school. Apparently, some major facts are being overlooked by those who are doing the criticism:

1. The Midland School Board members spent a lot of time reviewing all local and several award-winning, statewide architectural firms in the selection of the "most qualified" firm to design the new building.

2. The selection process, as requested and established by several local architects two years ago, resulted in the selection of the same architectural firm which had been appointed in the past.

3. Two completely separate Midland School Boards have reviewed and appointed the same architect for several years.

4. The architect receives only 5 to 6 percent of the cost of the project, but is hired to design and administer the other 95 percent which is retained in the community.

Architects, like any other professional, are more qualified in different areas and on different size projects. As an example an architect recognized for designing houses probably wouldn't be the best choice for designing a hospital. Experience in hospital design, and a successful history of projects of similar size would seem more important to the community than where he had his office.

Midland taxpayers deserve the most building for the money, and after the MISD board reviewed all qualifications, if the Fort Worth architect represents the most qualified firm, then I'm grateful to the Midland School Board for having the fortitude to take some heat and appoint the best firm for the job.

Attitudes appalling

We're disappointed and appalled! Disappointed in the parents of students at Jane Long Elementary who try so hard to teach their children safety rules and the difference between right and wrong, and then don't follow them themselves. Appalled at the attitudes of those who will literally challenge our principal and volunteers when asked to move their cars and follow the rules.

Parents are parking in the crosswalks, loading and unloading zones, double-parking in the lane of traffic and pulling into the circle drive reserved the school buses and daycare vans. These are the people who are putting the lives of innocent children in danger.

The children cannot see around the cars when they are parked in the yellow zone, and the cars do not see the children darting across the street from between parked cars if the parents are calling for them. But we don't have to tell you that; you already know. We've been cussed at, argued with, ignored and had windows rolled up on us. Don't get us wrong, there are several parents who have graciously apologized and have since followed the rules. Why can't you?

By the way, was that your little boy who darted out between parked cars and came within a foot of being hit while you stood across the street calling for him to do so? Did it frighten you? Did it make you think? It scared those who saw it and angered them that you didn't think before you acted. Don't fight us, help us!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 22, the 81st day of 1990. There are 284 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 22, 1765, Britain enacted the Stamp Act to raise money from the American colonies. The Act set off such a strong protest that it was repealed the following year.

On this date:

In 1638, religious dissident Anne Hutchinson was expelled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

In 1794, Congress passed a law prohibiting American vessels from supplying slaves to other countries.

In 1820, U.S. naval hero Stephen Decatur was killed in a duel with Commodore James Barron near Washington, D.C.

In 1894, hockey's first Stanley Cup game was played. Montreal, the home team, defeated Ottawa, 3-1.

In 1929, a U.S. Coast Guard vessel sank a Canadian-registered schooner, the "I'm Alone," in the Gulf of Mexico. (The schooner was suspected of carrying bootleg liquor.)

Rocket motors focus of controversy

WASHINGTON — Some of the people living around the Stennis Space Center on the Mississippi Gulf Coast figure they have received one favor too many from Congress.

Anderson

Rep. Jaime Whitten, D-Miss., is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee — a position equivalent to Santa Claus when it comes to winning projects for the folks back home. But Whitten's folks back home are in northern Mississippi. He used his clout to put a $1.2 billion program to build space shuttle rocket motors in his district in Yellow Creek, Miss.

But the dirty job of testing the new motors ended up at the Stennis Space Center in southern Mississippi. The testing involves laying one of the solid-fuel rocket boosters on its side, igniting it and letting it burn. In the process, the booster spews out 240,000 pounds of hydrogen chloride and 375,000 pounds of aluminum oxide.

Robert Esher, head of environmental research at the Mississippi State University Research Center, contends that, under the right conditions, that plume of exhaust could turn into 400 tons of hydrochloric acid which would fall to the earth as acid rain.

That's not southern Mississippi's idea of an attractive gift from the federal government.

The environmental controversy over the proposed tests is just the latest in a series of stumbling blocks for the advanced solid-fuel rocket booster motor that was designed to enhance shuttle safety after the Challenger explosion.

NASA is building the motor over the objection of its own Aeronautics Safety Advisory Panel, which last spring said a liquid-fueled motor would be a better way to go.

We reported in August that Whitten was able to steer the project to an abandoned nuclear plant site in his district. At the time, NASA officials told us that the decision to go with a solid rocket booster plant in Mississippi had nothing to do with winning Whitten's backing on the Appropriations Committee.

Whitten's pull in Congress is little help to those near the Stennis Space Center who don't want the tests. Esher at Mississippi State University and others are demanding that NASA either install a scrubber to trap pollutants or test the rockets in a less sensitive environment.

NASA contends that the exhaust plume will go high enough to disperse, and the effects will be negligible.

Why is NASA even considering the poison-belching motors if a liquid-fueled version is a possibility?

Russell Bardos, NASA's deputy director for systems engineering, told our reporter Greg Moore that the solid-fuel version is cheaper and can be built faster. The liquid-fueled motor would take about $2.5 billion to develop.

Jerry Grey is with the private American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics. We asked him who is correct in this debate of liquid vs. solid. He told us the liquid-fuel motor could be ready in the same amount of time it will take to adequately test an advanced solid-fuel motor to make sure it is safe for use. And the safety issue is the reason NASA needs a new solid rocket motor in the first place.

As for cost, the Challenger disaster cost the taxpayers $15 billion, and Grey contends that accident could have been avoided if NASA had been using a liquid-fueled motor in the first place.

GEORGE WILL

Biographer pulverizes LBJ's reputation

WASHINGTON — The best biographers, it is sometimes said, are conscientious enemies of their subjects: scrupulous when sifting evidence, but unenthralled and disposed to suspicion. Robert A. Caro, the indefatigable and unforgiving biographer of Lyndon Johnson, has now published the second of his projected four volumes.

Will

It is, as Caro intended, fascinating and dismaying. It also is some things Caro did not intend: a case study of flight from the inescapable ambiguities of political judgment.

Caro, 53, is a liberal devoting the prime of his professional life to pulverizing the reputation of the most consequential liberal politician of the postwar era. Caro probably voted for Johnson rather than Goldwater in 1964. It is probably good that Johnson was president when the racial crisis reached a roily boil because, as Caro writes:

"Abraham Lincoln struck off the chains of black Americans, but it was Lyndon Johnson who led them into voting booths, closed democracy's sacred curtain behind them, placed their hands on the lever that gave them a hold on their own destiny, made them, at last and forever, a true part of American political life."

That true tribute appears in "Means of Ascent," which deals with Johnson's life from 1941 through 1948. Nothing in the more than 400 pages gives the reader an inkling of how Johnson was capable of any goodness.

This volume tells three dismal stories: how Johnson lied about his brief military service, how he used political power to begin making a fortune in the federally regulated broadcasting industry, and how he acquired a Senate seat by winning the 1948 Democratic primary. Caro demonstrates, with sledgehammer force, how Johnson stole the election, defeating Coke Stevenson.

But had Caro been a Texas voter in 1948, he probably would have done what most Texas liberals did: voted for Johnson.

Stevenson was a rancher and lawyer whose character may have been, as Caro insists, a splendid distillation of frontier individualism and rectitude. But in his political life, he was a familiar Southwestern type of his day, well to the right of the ground Barry Goldwater was later to occupy, and racist in a way common then but that Johnson never was.

Caro makes a plausible case that Johnson saved his career by stealing 35,000 votes. But the verb "steal" must be used gingerly.

These were not 35,000 votes that otherwise would have been cast after the free deliberation of informed and uncoerced individuals behind democracy's sacred curtain. Many of those votes were going to be delivered as a block, at some boss's discretion. The precincts that had better than 90 percent turnout and larger than 90 percent landslides for Johnson had been "voting" that way for a long time, for other candidates.

Johnson got 494,191 votes, Stevenson 494,104. Subtract 35,000 votes from Johnson's total (never mind that Caro acknowledges that votes were stolen from Stevenson) and it would still have been a close race, largely because of Johnson's support among poor, labor and liberals. It is interesting that, as president, Johnson did as much as anyone to make impossible the kind of electoral corruption that flourished in Texas by fostering a dramatic expansion of federal power over the electoral process.

Caro believes that many more than 35,000 Johnson votes were tainted by his "modern" campaign techniques (campaigning by helicopter, and with a broadcasting blitz). Caro's account of Stevenson meandering from one small town, and tiny audience, to another has a misty romanticism to it, until you ask: Why, precisely is it good to campaign in a way that communicates to such a tiny sliver to the electorate?

It is fun to execrate the frequent superficiality — and worse — of media politics. But broadcasting helped put bosses out of business by enabling candidates to talk directly to voters. Caro may pine for the days when a candidate had "no electronic devices to mediate between himself and them" (the voters). But then, the mediating was apt to be done by the bosses so repellent to Caro.

Caro's narrative prompts this thought: Perhaps something in liberalism, or the liberal temperament, disposes liberals to make aesthetic judgments about politics, subordinating substantive judgments to the romance of style.

Johnson was a bullying vulgarian, often crudely unethical, sometimes corrupt. He also was the most potent promoter of the liberal agenda since Franklin Roosevelt.

Non-smokers wreaking havoc on programs

I know that you were expecting an extra dividend from the new smoking bans that have gone into effect, but it is not to be. According to The Washington Post, the reduction in smoking will cause havoc with Social Security and health-care programs.

Buchwald

In the good old days, smokers could be counted on to die far before their time, and therefore did not use up their Social Security benefits or health plan credits. Nonsmokers, on the other hand, live too long and to this day are a tremendous drain on the country's finances. We're talking about hundreds of billions of dollars. So, every time we turn a smoker into a nonsmoker we're destroying the entire pension system of the United States.

This discovery has caused many actuarial economists to re-examine Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan's severe anti-tobacco campaign.

Professor Scarcely Breething is one of them.

"An end to smoking is not a means to an end. Nor is it an end to a means. What it does tell us is that unless a certain number of people die prematurely from smoking, we cannot afford to provide medical care to the non-smoking survivors."

I said, "It seems a pity to root for smokers to expire early just so the rest of us can enjoy our September years."

Breething responded, "We're not asking for that at all. We're simply saying that the government should not be part of the campaign to prevent people from smoking, as it is a conflict of interest. Those who smoke should be encouraged to do so. That way when they go to heaven their Medicare benefits will be doled out to the senior citizens who led clean lives. Economists are alerting the American people that it is the smoker, and not the nonsmoker, who is saving mankind."

"What about secondary smoking — when the smoker causes a nonsmoker grievous harm by blowing cigarette smoke into his face?"

Breething admitted, "No one likes it, but it is still better for the secondary smokers to do their thing than for the Social Security system to go broke."

I told him, "What you seem to be saying is against everything the medical profession has taught us. You indicate that we should encourage the nation's smokers so that we can get their Social Security benefits. Would you take the warning off cigarette packs and advertising messages as well?"

Breething answered, "Most certainly. I'd also reinstate smoking on domestic airliners and in public buildings. The anti-tobacco campaign has cost us a great deal of Medicare benefits already, and we have to put a stop to the HHS bad-mouthing of the weed."

"If smokers know that they are going to die, won't they give up the habit on their own?"

"They know it right now and it hasn't stopped them from smoking. What we economists don't like is the government telling nicotine lovers that Mother Nature has it in for them."

"Would you say that Darwin was counting on people to smoke?"

"He always maintained that the survival of the fittest depended on who sat in the non-smoking part of the restaurant."

NATION IN BRIEF

Poland given Bush backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, still worried about securing a treaty to guarantee Poland's border with a united Germany, resumed private talks today with President Bush.

Bush invited the Polish leader back to the White House for an unscheduled round of discussions after feting him Wednesday with full military honors and a state dinner.

Mazowiecki used the formal occasion to again press his insistence on a new treaty guaranteeing Poland's border. He also urged a new political structure to free Europe of military rivalry.

Earlier Wednesday Bush sought to assure Mazowiecki of U.S. support for Poland's demand that its current western border not be breached when the two Germanys unite.

Bush declared that "Poland must have a voice" in any talks with the two Germanys affecting the border question. The Germanys and the four victorious World War II allies have agreed to make room at the table for discussions affecting Poland.

Bill foes to fight

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Abortion rights proponents acknowledged they were outnumbered in the state Senate and faced an unsympathetic governor but pledged to fight to the end to block the most restrictive abortion law in any state.

The Idaho Senate neared final approval today on a bill that would ban more than 90 percent of the 1,500 abortions performed in Idaho each year. It has already passed the House.

The bill banning abortions for birth control purposes was patterned on a National Right To Life model that has been rejected by other states as too restrictive. But it is the version abortion foes want for the test of the U.S. Supreme Court's commitment to its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

If approved by the Senate and signed by Gov. Cecil Andrus, a longtime abortion opponent, the measure would take effect July 1.

Grain pact reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have reached an agreement in principle on a new long-term grain agreement, the government announced today.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter and U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills said the tentative five-year agreement was reached during negotiations in Vienna. The current pact, which has been in effect since 1983, will expire on Dec. 31.

The new accord will increase the annual minimum shipments of U.S. grain to the Soviets to 10 million metric tons from nine million tons under the current agreement.

Under the new agreement, the Soviets are committed to buy at least four million tons each of wheat and feed grains. However, in any one year Moscow can substitute up to 750,000 tons of one commodity for the other.

Also, for the first time, the agreement includes barley and sorghum as well as corn under the definition of feed grains.

'Shield' expanded

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Senate on Wednesday overwhelmingly approved an expansion of New York's Shield Law that would protect virtually any information gathered by reporters or photographers.

The bill ensures that reporters' notes, unused video or audio tapes and newsroom files can't be subpoenaed unless it's proven the information is necessary to a criminal case and couldn't be obtained elsewhere.

The bill, which passed the Senate 47-5 and was approved by the state Assembly two months ago, is expected to be signed by Gov. Mario Cuomo.

The bill's sponsor, Republican Sen. Roy Goodman, said it would prevent the press from being hauled into court on fishing expeditions by defense attorneys.

"It will recognize, particularly in criminal cases, that the press should not be made to be an investigative arm of the government," Goodman said.

Wednesday's 90-minute debate, which ended before 3 p.m., contained some bitter charges against the press.

$1.2 billion sought for European aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are outlining a new $2 billion aid package for Eastern Europe — far more than President Bush wants to spend and several times what Democrats themselves proposed just two months ago.

The draft bill escalates a Democratic argument that Bush has been too timid in aiding the emerging democracies and establishing a foothold for U.S. companies in their newly free economies.

The bill by Sens. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., includes a $1.2 billion U.S. share in a European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, proposed by France to finance public works and new private enterprises in former communist economies.

A copy of the draft was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press.

The administration has conditioned U.S. participation in the bank on it refusal to lend for government projects or private ventures in the Soviet Union.

But Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and other administration officials acknowledge that the bank, with commitments already from most Western European countries and Japan, is going forward with or without a U.S. role.

"Our economic competitors are racing to establish strong footings in Eastern Europe," Biden said Wednesday. "We took a stutter step in the wrong direction when (the bank) was being set up and we lost our influence."

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said the administration's actions threaten to lock U.S. companies out of billions of dollars in new exports and technical aid that the bank will be financing.

"It's a brand new world and unless we throw off old ways of thinking rooted in Cold War mentality, we risk being left behind," Gephardt told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee Wednesday.

The new bill by Pell, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Biden, who chairs the panel's subcommittee on international economics and trade, is four times the $511 million in new aid they proposed just two months ago.

The administration has proposed $300 million in new aid in fiscal 1991 for Eastern Europe beyond the $738 million that Congress set aside last year for helping Poland and Hungary through 1992.

Administration officials have said any more money could not be absorbed by the Eastern European economies without being wasted.

"Businesses are waiting for the government to go first and cover risks in the region and the government is waiting for business leaders to go in on their own," Biden complained. "What we're lacking is the vision to develop programs that transform our military presence in Europe to a political and economic presence."

The bill would give the administration flexibility in dividing the aid among Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Romania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia in addition to Poland and Hungary.

It would expand total aid to the seven countries to $2.75 billion by the end of 1992 but does not say where the money would be found. Except for some food programs, the measure does not specify how much is to go to each country.

On Tuesday, Sens. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vermont, proposed shifting some of the $800 million in new foreign aid that Bush wants for Nicaragua and Panama to Eastern Europe.

While providing no direct aid to the Soviet government, the bill authorizes Bush to extend aspects of the program to the Soviet Union if they promote U.S. values there.

For example, it would authorize the AFL-CIO, using $40 million in increased funds for the National Endowment for Democracy, to help foster effective trade unions in the Soviet Union, as it did with the Solidarity movement in Poland.

Portions of a $44 million boost in Peace Corps spending in the region also could be used for teaching English to Soviet citizens.

There was no romantic light, no soft focus, to the Census Bureau's homeless count Wednesday. Early yesterday, Floyd, 46, one of Detroit's homeless displays bullet wounds and scars from life on the streets. "I can't trust nobody," he said. "There's too many smokin' crack."

15,000 sent out to tally homeless

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK – Penn Station, 3 a.m. A man is sprawled on the gritty floor, motionless, covered by a gray wool blanket. Next to him is another, and another. The station -- where many people arrive from other parts of the country by train – resembles a makeshift hospital in a war zone.

They were everywhere, these people without homes. Outside a closed donut shop. Inside passageways. Beneath a screen displaying schedules to Long Island. In their midst, a group of people with red-white-and-blue identity cards scribbled on pads of paper.

This was the U.S. Census Bureau at work early Wednesday, spearheading its first tally of the nation's homeless, which won't be made public until late 1991. And in America's largest city, the task was nothing less than formidable.

On Tuesday night and early Wednesday, the bureau sent out 15,000 workers nationwide – 1,577 of them to New York and its environs, more than any other city. They visited 1,866 sites – comparable only to Los Angeles, where the weather was about 20 degrees warmer and rain didn't make the task more challenging.

New York's Coalition for the Homeless estimates New York has 70,000 to 90,000 homeless people, more than the population of the small industrial city of Schenectady, N.Y.

And with 722 miles of subway track, 26,220 acres of park, and 6,374 miles of streets, the city offers many places to hide. A night spent following the census takers made this fact clear.

At the Penn Station terminal, a team of four counters worked quietly between rows of sleeping people. Several of the homeless had no shoes. One lay next to a folded wheelchair.

Two workers counted, one marked down the sex, another the age –approximate if the person was asleep, exact if the person was coherent.

Guessing sex was sometimes difficult: many were completely covered by blankets. Age was sometimes a challenge. One man verbally abused the counters in a barrage of Spanish. Another woman would only answer, "Are you giving out food?"

Crew leader John Sanislo, who was homeless last year, said the crew was taught to treat the homeless with respect: "We're not even going to talk to them unless they come up and talk with us. We expect a few will come up and bum some cigarettes and change. That's a good introduction."

But even though counters were going out again Wednesday night in some cities, including New York, critics feared the homeless would be undercounted, giving the U.S. government an unrealistic notion of the problem.

Tim Dennehy, who said he was from Boston and had lived at the station for three months, agreed. "They (counters) came by 2 minutes ago and they stayed about 2 seconds. I don't think they'll do it. I think it's stupid."

Indeed, in the time they were there, the Penn Station team missed at least one tunnel filled with at least a dozen homeless sleepers. The city said counters didn't show up at three shelters and one was locked, barring access.

Kenneth C. Meyer, a regional census manager, emphasized that the New York workers, paid $8-to-$10 per hour, were visiting only those spots deemed safe. They would, for instance, wait outside abandoned buildings for homeless people to venture forth.

Hector Martinez and his team were hired by a social service advocacy group, the DOE Fund, to double check the census. By 1:50 a.m., they'd found 23 homeless on the streets around the station, 29 inside, and another 14 in the shuttle that travels between the station and the city's west side.

"They say New York City is the richest place in the whole world," he said, shortly after watching officers throw a sleepy old man and a younger woman with red high heels out of the station. "Look around you."

IRS' tax notices sometimes right, sometimes wrong, magazine says

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a nearly 50-50 chance the Internal Revenue Service will make a mistake the next time it bills you for additional taxes and penalties, a magazine says.

Taxpayers, confused by the law and scared to challenge the IRS, shrugged off the mistakes last year and sent in at least $7 billion they did not owe, Money magazine estimated.

In the cover story of its April edition, Money cited a report by the General Accounting Office, interviews with tax lawyers and accountants and a survey of its subscribers to conclude that half the 36 million bills for taxes and penalties mailed out last year contained errors.

The form letters generated $15.3 billion last year, an average of $425 per notice, Money noted.

"Yet, behind that apparent triumph of tax law micro-enforcement lurks a sloppy little secret: a convincing case can be made that at least $7 billion of that money should never have been collected at all because around half of those imposing official notices were inaccurate," the magazine said.

"Clearly, individuals are caving in to questionable demands for more money that would propel them to the phone in a second if the bill came from some bank or credit-card company."

Money Magazine, April 1990

"Clearly, individuals are caving in to questionable demands for more money that would propel them to the phone in a second if the bill came from some bank or credit-card company."

Although IRS officials quarreled with Money's figures, the agency acknowledges wholesale employee errors in answering taxpayers' telephoned questions and in processing returns.

In fact, IRS Commissioner Fred T. Goldberg Jr. cited the processing errors in testimony before a House subcommittee earlier this month while pleading for money to modernize the agency's 1960s-vintage computer system.

"The net result will be fewer erroneous notices and levies (property seizures) which cost both IRS and taxpayers time and money to resolve, and will allow us to devote our resources to truly delinquent accounts," Goldberg said.

More than 35 percent of the IRS notices of additional taxes and penalties allege mathematical errors, late returns, failure to pay tax on some wages, interest or dividend reported by an employer or bank; or underpayment of quarterly estimated taxes.

Last month, Money polled 300 of its subscribers with a median income over $52,000 a year and found that at sometime in their lives, half had received IRS bills for more taxes and penalties. Seven of 10 fought back.

"A stunning 45 percent of those who contested their notices report that the IRS claims were totally incorrect and an additional 24 percent said that they were at least partially wrong," the magazine wrote. "What's more, of those who challenged the IRS on their own, 53 percent wound up paying nothing and another 17 percent succeeded in getting the bill reduced."

The telephone poll had an error margin of plus or minus six percentage points.

shĭb´ə-lĭth

shibboleth (noun) — A "shibboleth" is a peculiarity of pronunciation, behavior or mode of dress that distinguishes a group of people from another. A "shibboleth" is also a "password." The word "shibboleth" is an ancient Hebrew word that literally means "ear of grain." The word dates to a Biblical story, Judges 12:6, that tells about a battle between the Gileadites and the Ephraimites. A way the Gileadites would determine if a fugitive was not a Ephraimite would be to listen to how they pronounced "shibboleth." Ephraimites could not pronounce the "sh" in "shibboleth." Therefore "shibboleth" was used as a "watchword" — the word's present meaning.

CAF's general staff will consider site proposals

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force's general staff is to consider the competing six proposed sites for the new CAF headquarters on Saturday at the CAF "Rebel Field" in Harlingen in South Texas.

But whether or not the 11-member staff, which is headed up by Midland's Joe Mabee, will then take a vote on a new CAF home base is uncertain.

"I don't anticipate it," said Ralph Royce, who is the CAF executive director.

"The site-selection committee is on the agenda, but that doesn't mean anything else is going to happen. They (the general-staff director) are the board of directors. They can do whatever they want," Royce said Wednesday in Harlingen.

The directors will be meeting in their regular monthly session and could go into "a closed session or executive session at their own discretion," Royce said.

Midland, which is one of six bidders for the CAF headquarters, is offering a $19-million debt-free "deal" in inviting the CAF headquarters, museum, and the Ghost Squadron of more than 140 fighters or pursuit aircraft, bombers, trainers, transports, and liaison aircraft to Midland International Airport.

The CAF is dedicated to restoring and maintaining in flying condition "warbirds" from the 1939-45 World War II.

The CAF governing general staff is "not going to be stampeded by any outside pressures" into making a decision on the new home base of the international aviation group, Mabee said in an earlier interview.

"They (general-staff members) are going to look at everything very, very analytically," said Mabee, who is a Midland rancher, oilman, aviator, airplane restorer, and philanthropist. "And it's strictly an economic decision."

Six communities in Texas and Tennessee are bidding for the CAF's home base: Midland, San Antonio, Brownsville, San Marcos, Longview and Nashville-Smyrna, Tenn.

Of the six contenders, Midland and San Antonio appear to be the strongest contenders for the CAF, which currently is based deep in the Rio Grande Valley at Harlingen's Valley International Airport.

The CAF general staff has been authorized by a vote of the CAF members to seek a new CAF home base. Currently, the CAF is boxed in at Harlingen and has no room to expand there.

A coalition of Midland-Odessa business-civic leaders, headed up by Midland banker-CAF Colonel Ed Jones, is offering the CAF a debt-free $19-million proposal, including hangars, museum and 52 acres of land at the Midland airport.

The Midland proposal includes a $1-million gift from the Mabee Foundation. However, the Mabee Foundation incentive gift already is committed to the CAF regardless of which site the general staff selects.

Mabee, who is a member of the Tulsa-based Mabee Foundation board of directors, is an advocate

Leonard Monroe, Chamber of Commerce Secondary Teacher of the Month, is surrounded by one of his social studies classes at Lee Freshman High School.

Teacher glad to be back on 'front lines' of education

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Leonard Monroe likes teaching.

He likes it so much, in fact, he returned to the classroom after 17 years as an administrator.

"Teaching's always been a mission to me, I think," said Monroe, who is the Chamber of Commerce Secondary Teacher of the Month. "My parents always wanted me to be a teacher. It's been a good career — it's been a good profession."

Monroe, the social studies and foreign language department chairman at Lee Freshman High School, began his teaching career in 1965 at Alamo Junior High School. After teaching history and government until 1971, he made the jump to management.

Monroe spent 10 years as an assistant principal at Midland High School and Alamo, another four years as principal of Midland Freshman High School and three years as principal of Greenwood High School.

His return to the classroom in 1988 was a happy one. In addition to giving him more time to spend with his family, Monroe's return to teaching has put him back on the "front lines" of education, where he feels he can make a difference.

"I think there are lots of ways in the classroom that we can be effective," Monroe said. "I feel it's simply my responsibility to make students a success or guide them toward being successful."

In history classes, Monroe said, success can depend on a students' ability to relate historical events to their own lives.

"If you can get a point of reference, a student's birthday, and teach from that, then it's more effective than using the teacher's or the book's point of reference," Monroe said.

Making history "come to life" is another technique Monroe uses to generate interest.

For a unit on the Depression era, Monroe invited an antique car club to come to LFHS to show students what people drove in the 1930s. This week, the curator of the Holocaust Museum in Dallas will visit Monroe's classes to give them a firsthand account of Nazi horrors.

Housing program taking risk of losing CDBG funds

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The city of Midland must spend more money to fix up 15 run-down homes by Oct. 1 or risk losing Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds, Councilman Jose Cuevas said Wednesday.

U.S. Housing and Development officials recently instructed the city to allot more CDBG funds to its rehabilitation program for houses occupied by low-income families in east and southeast Midland, Cuevas said.

"We've been doing a very poor job in our housing program," he said. "The HUD people have told us they are unhappy."

City Council last October allotted $75,000 for the program, which would have meant spending about $5,000 per house.

"They (HUD officials) have said that to do a good job you need to spend at least $7,000 on each house," Cuevas said. "If you fail to do that you always have the problem of them revoking CDBG funding and making us pay some back.

"We have to do a good job this year. It's a small request from them."

The city refurbished only four homes during the 1988-89 fiscal year, Cuevas added.

The city council has informally agreed to inject an additional $40,000 into this year's rehabilitation project, he said. The funding proposal is expected to be put to vote at a Tuesday meeting, he said.

If the additional funding is approved, the city will have $115,000 for home renovation minus an estimated $10,000 for applicant screening and home inspection costs, Cuevas said. An average

Wreck involves five vehicles

Staff Report

A five-car accident at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and "A" Street Wednesday afternoon sent two people to the hospital, according to police reports.

Ed Garrison, 52, was admitted to Midland Memorial hospital with unknown injuries and was in stable condition this morning, a hospital spokesperson said.

Jennifer Ann Groce, 24, was treated and released from the hospital Wednesday evening, the spokesperson said.

The accident occurred about 5:50 p.m. Wednesday when a car, westbound on Wadley Avenue apparently ran the stoplight at "A" Street and struck the rear car in a line that had stopped behind a stalled vehicle, police said.

Police said five cars were involved in the "chain reaction" accident, but the stalled car was not damaged.

Consensus not expected on selection of judges

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislative leaders see little hope in the current special session for a consensus on how to satisfy a federal court order on judicial selection.

With one week left in the monthlong special legislative session, the House Judicial Affairs Committee Wednesday heard proposals for the first time, the Senate State Affairs Committee put off action until Monday at the earliest and a task force on judicial selection broke up into subcommittees to study different approaches to judicial reform.

Judicial selection was one of the issues that brought lawmakers back to Austin for a special session after U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland ruled countywide election of district judges in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis counties dilutes minority voting strength and violates the Voting Rights Act.

Bunton ordered election of district judges from subdistricts, such as commissioner precincts in Midland and Ector counties, to give minorities an opportunity to elect judges.

The 5th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in New Orleans temporarily set aside Bunton's order, although it threatened to reinstate Bunton's ruling if the Legislature fails to act.

The House committee heard proposals that included partisan election of judges from single-member subdistricts in the nine counties. That bill has the support

Warfield farmer imports Israeli irrigation system

WARFIELD — Vernon Chandler has come up with an imported way of doing things the American way: irrigating those cotton fields.

Todd

The farmer, who has been tilling the soil since 1952, is experimenting with an Israeli-designed drip-irrigation system on a 25-acre plot on his home place southwest of Midland.

It's working well.

West Texans and Israelis have a bit in common that makes water management crucial in raising crops, including cotton, fruits and vegetables.

"The rain over there is like it is over here: They don't get much," said Chandler. The Israeli drip system was designed and implemented out of necessity and economic survival. The Israelis combine the drip system with a greenhouse concept to raise fruits and vegetables for marketing in Europe.

"That's the way Israel earns the biggest part of their foreign exchange," Chandler said.

American farmers could learn well from that innovative industry, Chandler suggested. Farmers and gardeners could plant and nurture "salad-bar" fruits and vegetables under the drip system and/or the drip-greenhouse system had they a mind to do so and then go to market.

In the drip system, black plastic tubing, about one-half inch in diameter, carries water, above or underground and, drop by drop at 24-inch intervals, the Israeli-designed white plastic emitters inside the tubing filters the water in gill-like fashion and lets the water drip through a pinhole in the tubing.

"It clogs up less than any other kind (of drip system) I've seen," Chandler. The system puts out two to three gallons of water per hour per tubing hole.

Chandler's drip system's efficiency has paid off. In 1985, for example, his drip-irrigated cotton doubled production of sprinkler-irrigated cotton: to three bales per acre from 1⅓ bales.

"Last year," he confessed, "I didn't hardly make anything because it got hailed on — kind of wiped it out."

The cost of his drip-irrigation tubing is four to five cents per foot, depending on the thickness of the tubing's wall. At 1⅓ miles of tubing per acre, the cost is between $300 and $400 per acre. The payout, based on drip production above sprinkler production, is only in a couple or years or so.

Even so, Chandler has had his problems.

"My biggest problem has been with (pack) rats and ground squirrels bitting holes in it (the tubing), because it's lying on top of the ground."

The thirsty rodents seek drinking water.

"I've never caught them at it," Chandler reflected, "but everybody in the country knows they do it. There's a lot of pack rats out in the country."

Chandler, someday, plans to bury the tubing, which is "supposed to last" for years "unless the ground squirrels eat it up" and supposedly is not adversely affected by sunshine. "I can hardly believe it."

Drip irrigation is about 98 percent efficient versus the 60 percent efficiency of the sprinkler system, which loses about 40 percent to evaporation. Other than that, because of the naturally-occurring salts in West Texas water, the sprinkler system may leave salt residue on plant leaves.

"If it's really hot and dry and the wind blows real hard, it will burn the leaves" and inhibit plant and cotton-boll development. So, Chandler, who mostly sprinkles at night, also dryland farms other acreage by depending entirely on the rainfall to put moisture into the soil and into his crops.

Cotton farmers in the St. Lawrence community southeast of Midland in Glasscock County use American-designed drip-irrigation systems. Drip systems are used in the Lamesa area. Up toward Lubbock, irrigation flooding is widely used, since the thick, heavy soil there will hold water better than the Amarillo sandy loams soil in the Midland area.

In his drip irrigation, Chandler spikes the water with nitrogen fertilizer. "It's the energy food for plants."

Chandler contrasted the drip system with the sprinkler and flood irrigation systems this way:

"It's kind of like feeding and watering a calf," he said. "You don't need a big lake of water. Just a little trough of water will do."

"You've got to have good, clean water," which he takes from underground wells and filters before it enters the drip tubing. "It saves fertilizer and, best of all, it saves water."

For sprinkler-irrigated cotton, Chandler pumps in water from nearby Monahans Draw, which is fed by Odessa's treated wastewater — effluent — and by the occasional rains.

"It's good water for irrigation," Chandler said. "It's got a lot of nitrogen fertilizer in it."

But the best crop water is rainwater.

"Nature recycles water over and over and over," Chandler said. "It don't wear out. But we get it pretty well polluted sometimes."

Chandler's attitude toward West Texas and his station in life seems to serve him well in working the land.

"I like where I live," the farmer said. "It's close to two pretty good towns (Midland and Odessa), close to the airport. It's quiet, and I like that.'

DEATHS

Lynn Peveler

LUBBOCK — Graveside services for Lynn F. Peveler, 59, of Midland were held Tuesday in Resthaven Memorial Park in Lubbock with the Rev. Elton Wyatt of St. Luke's United Methodist Church of Lubbock officiating. Services were directed by Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home of Lubbock.

Peveler died Sunday in a Midland hospital following an illness.

He was born on March 8, 1931, in Granbury, lived many years in Lubbock, where he attended high school and Texas Tech University, and was a retired employee of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. He was a veteran of the Korean War.

Peveler moved to Midland in 1980.

Survivors include two daughters, Judy Sparkman of Highland Village and Darla Fisher of Midland.

Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Monday at his Midland home.

Pallbearers were to be Randy Weatherford, Joe Pickering, Steve Koch, Cliff Chalmers, John Hyatt and Jake Jacoby. Honorary pallbearers were Rick Hieberg, Chris Robison, Frank Reed, Larry Hiller and Paul Hiller.

Memorials should be directed to Hearthstone or a charity of choice.

James McNeal

Services for James Edwin "Eddy" McNeal were to be at 11 a.m. today at First Baptist Church.

Louise Barron

Services for Louise (Mrs. Elliott H.) Barron are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

She died this morning at a local nursing home.

Ethel Woodside

Ethel Woodside of Midland died this morning at her home.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

FUNDS: Renovations to increase

(From 1B)

$7,000 would be spent fixing each house, he said.

Casa De Amigos in April will be screening applicants who want their homes refurbished. Houses for the project probably will be picked on a worst-case basis, Cuevas said.

David Thurbon, the city's assistant director of planning, said he expects an overwhelming number of people to apply for the program.

"There's a big need out there," he said. "We'll probably get a couple of hundred applications."

Thurbon said a number of occupied Midland homes are not even close to meeting minimum building standards.

Renovations to the homes chosen for the project will include repairing plumbing, electrical wiring, holes in walls, roofs and broken windows, Thurbon said.

Cuevas said the city also will be urging contracting companies run by minorities to submit bids on the repair projects. The city will be accepting bids sometime in April, he said.

camps and it's another thing to have someone who was actually there, who is tattooed with the numbers," Monroe said.

Monroe said that in addition to keeping student interest at a peak, he tries to treat his charges "like human beings."

His humanitarian approach was not lost on parent Becky Lofton, who said Monroe has "the priceless gift of encouragement."

"He publicly commends his students who are showing improvement, which is a great boost for their self-esteem and also encouragement to others to strive for such commendation themselves," Ms. Lofton wrote in a nomination letter.

Monroe said he hopes all his students will go on to success from his classroom, although they have differing ability and maturity levels.

"I think if I was the last person that was ever going to teach them, I'd be in serious trouble," Monroe said. "Basically, I'm enthusiastic and I want to provide these students with the best thing we can give them regardless of who they are and regardless of what level they're on."

MISD sets meetings

Staff Report

Midland Independent School District officials are preparing for a round of community meetings to discuss projects for possible inclusion in a proposed bond election.

Single member Districts 1 and 2 will meet April 3 at Washington Elementary School, 1800 E. Wall Ave.; Districts 3 and 4 will meet April 24 at Sam Houston Elementary, 2000 W. Louisiana; Districts 5 and 6 will meet April 17 at Lee High School, 3500 Neely Ave., and District 7 will meet May 3 at Goddard Junior High School, 2500 Haynes Ave.

Meetings will start at 7:30 p.m. and last until 9 p.m.

Discussion items will include:

- A proposed new junior high school.
- An alternative high school with day care services for at-risk students and dropout recovery.
- Renovation of science labs at Lee Freshman High School, Midland High School and Lee High School.
- Construction of multipurpose rooms for De Zavala, Emerson, Fannin, Parker, Rusk, Santa Rita, Scharbauer and Pease elementaries.
- Construction of a new elementary school.
- Completion of Bush Elementary School.
- Construction of a multipurpose room and library at Washington Elementary School.
- Construction of a multipurpose room, library and five classrooms at Sam Houston Elementary School.

VOLUNTEERING

Spring will bring to Midland several one-time volunteer opportunities. Pick from this list or call for other openings currently available through the Volunteer Center of Midland.

- Clean-up on this volunteer opportunity. You and your group can assist in a massive anti-litter campaign scheduled for Saturday, March 31 from 9:30 a.m. Volunteers — individuals, families, groups — are needed to pickup litter at selected sites. Bags, painter's caps, refreshments and prizes will be provided.
- Participate in a "low pollute commute" by walking or riding your bike to work Friday, April 20. Or address environmental concerns by saving your recyclable items: glass, plastic, and metal for Earth Day, April 22.
- People helping people. Do you know the basics of home repairs and upkeep? If so, then assist with repairs of deteriorating homes of low-income elderly or disabled on Saturday, April 29. Your expertise can range from washing walls and painting to installing vinyl floors or roofing. This is a great group project.
- Looking for an excuse to get out of the house or office for some fresh air? Get a suntan while helping a nonprofit organization run its golf tournament on Friday, April 20. No golfing experience is needed. If you can't leave the house, the agency also needs phone assistance contacting teams and answering questions about the tournament.
- See your way clear to some free time during the next 10 days? Drivers are needed to pick up donated prizes for an agency's membership drive. This is a flexible day-time opportunity. Mileage can be reimbursed.
- Upcoming trainings: an agency that counsels sexual abuse victims has a training scheduled Tuesday, March 27 through May 1. Both female and male volunteers are needed.
- Have a question or a problem? The only number you need is 697-HELP. Call INFORMATION AND REFERRAL MIDLAND 697-HELP.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

CAF: Vote not expected

of the West Texas site for the CAF.

West Texas weather is conducive for year-round flying, he noted. And West Texas' relatively low humidity and lack of salt corrosion associated with the Gulf Coast are ideal for aircraft preservation, Mabee said.

The San Antonio proposal to the CAF is a $23-million package which, unlike the Midland offer, is not debt free. The Alamo City's offer includes $3 million cash, to be raised by pledges, and $20 million in revenue bonds needed to finance the building of CAF facilities, including a replica of a World War II United States Army Air Corps air field, at Kelly Air Force Base near San Antonio.

The San Antonio proposal calls for the indebtedness to be paid off through money raised by admission fees to the CAF Museum. In that regard, San Antonio leaders are proposing a $75,000 study to determine if admission fees would be sufficient to retire the indebtedness.

"As far as we are concerned, it's part of the San Antonio proposal," Mabee said earlier. "And they can do what they please on it. The staff did not ask for it, and we have no comment on it. The report will mean nothing as far as our decision that is to be made" on a permanent base for the CAF.

"The board (general staff) is going to make an economic decision, period," Mabee said. "And projected museum (attendance) has no effect on our decision."

Rather, he said, it's the "bottom line" that counts.

The CAF general staff, Mabee said, favors a debt-free proposal.

Jones said that San Antonio and other bidders for the CAF home base "are shooting at what Midland has put together" in its offer to the CAF. "But they are doing it all with debt."

"The Confederate Air Force has repeatedly said they won't move if they have to incur debt to leave (South Texas)," Jones said earlier. "And Midland's offer so far is the only one without debt to the CAF."

"If anything, Midland's deal looks better than the other deals," Jones said on Wednesday.

And from the standpoint of the CAF general-staff members, Jones said, "This is a one-time move for the organization. They want to make sure they don't create any dissension in the organization by making this move. You can't really push them."

Unstable chemical found in school lab

AUSTIN (AP) — A potentially explosive chemical that had been in the Mineral Wells High School chemistry lab for 20 years recently was discovered by school officials, the Texas Water Commission said.

The chemical, known as picric acid, had become very unstable with age, according to the commission. It urged all Texas schools to conduct a thorough inventory of chemicals in their labs to ensure that stock is within its recommended shelf-life.

Mineral Wells High School officials contracted with Emtech Environmental Services, Inc., a hazardous waste management company, to remove the chemical. The Water Commission earlier this month approved an emergency order authorizing the handling and disposal of the picric acid.

As picric acid ages, the acid crystallizes and becomes capable of detonating on impact.

Williams seeking support from White

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams went a-courtin' for former Democratic Gov. Mark White's support and came away empty handed — so far.

"He didn't say yes, and he didn't say no," Williams said Wednesday after the two-hour session at White's law office. "We'll meet again in a week or two as he looks at his options."

A spokesman for White, Mark Miller, said the former governor and the governor hopeful talked about "various issues facing Texas."

"They discussed potential endorsements and potential solutions to some of the problems facing the state," Miller said. 'I suspect the governor will have an announcement eight to 10 days before the (April 10 runoff) election."

White finished third behind Treasurer Ann Richards and Attorney General Jim Mattox in a bruising primary campaign where his record as governor from 1982 to 1986 came under attack. Williams, meanwhile, raced to a landslide victory in the GOP primary to avoid a runoff.

Williams said he doubted White would switch party allegiances but could work as a "Democrat for Williams."

LHS competes in spelling bee

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — Lee High School students competed in the regional Citizen Bee here recently at Texas Tech University.

Lee student Chrissy Wimmer earned fourth place in the competition, although this is the first time a Midland school has taken part in the event.

First place went to Nathan Briles of Odessa High School, second place went to Christi Ammons of Lamesa High School and third place to Clorinda McElwee of Odessa High School. Other Lee High School participants were Nicole Craft and Todd Wyrick. The Lee team was sponsored by Sam Manning and tutored by David Fly.

Six area secondary schools, representing Lubbock, Odessa, Lamesa, Crane and Midland took part in the regional meet.

The Citizen Bee is a national competition of the Closeup Foundation based on American political and cultural history, government, geography, economics and current events. It is designed to stimulate greater understanding of American heritage and issues facing the United States.

JUDGES: Subcommittees to study selection options of the plaintiffs and most black and Hispanic lawmakers.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, believes his bill will not require amendment to the Texas Constitution, which requires countywide judicial districts, because the courts will be elected by subdistricts but still have countywide jurisdiction.

A constitutional amendment requires approval by two-thirds of both houses and a statewide referendum.

Rep. A.R. Ovard, R-Dallas, proposed a resolution that the Legislature would wait until the state exhausts its appeals in federal court before it proceeds with changes in judicial selection.

Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, proposed a constitutional amendment that would allow the governor appoint members of the Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals, then require them to run for retention in one of nine districts.

A similar bill would allow the governor appoint district judges from single-member districts, with later retention elections.

Rep. Pat Hill, D-Dallas, Judicial Affairs Committee chairman, said she would poll committee members on the various bills, but she would prefer to wait until the federal appeals court decides what must be done. The court will hear arguments April 30 in New Orleans.

Meanwhile, a 21-member task force on judicial selection reportedly got little enlightenment from nine statewide public hearings.

Charles Barrow, a former Supreme Court justice, said witnesses all showed "tunnel vision" in their remarks. "We got lots of advice, none of it disinterested," he said.

Andrew Jefferson Jr., a former Harris County judge, said the points of view were predictable, as black or Hispanics generally favored single-member districts, incumbents generally liked the system the way it was and "establishment types" tended to favor appointment-retention plans.

Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, proposed a plan similar to that used in Illinois, where judges are elected from single-member districts and later face countywide retention elections.

A subcommittee will draft a proposal on that and other variations on single-member district elections. Other subcommittees will study "limited" voting, where each voter would vote for two-thirds of the seats up for election, and variations of merit selection, including appointment-retention.

Another group will look at the possibility of holding off federal court action until the appeals are resolved and yet another will explore various other proposals, such as public financing of elections, limits on contributions, voter education efforts and screening of potential appointees to judicial vacancies.

House considering school bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The House today started considering a school finance bill that would pump $450 million more into public education next school year in response to a reform order from the Texas Supreme Court.

Legislative leaders predicted that whatever bill is passed by the House will end up in a conference committee to resolve differences with a $1.2 billion Senate measure.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he hopes a conference committee on the issue will work this weekend, the last before the 30-day special session expires at midnight next Wednesday.

Even $450 million is a higher cost for next school year than deemed acceptable by Gov. Bill Clements. He has vowed to veto any new state taxes to pay for school finance reform.

The Supreme Court ruled last year that the school finance system is unconstitutional because of disparities between property-rich and -poor school districts. The $13.5 billion-a-year public school system relies on a combination of state aid, local property taxes and federal funds.

Clements has said he would allow increased public education funding only at a no-new-taxes level, which he has estimated at $200 million to $300 million for 1990-91.

The governor has promised to keep lawmakers in special session until they send him the bill he wants, despite a May 1 deadline set by the court for change. Clements can call an unlimited number of consecutive special sessions.

But Education Commissioner William Kirby said an education showdown is coming, because he and Comptroller Bob Bullock will not send state money to schools after May 1 if a new finance system has not been devised.

Slagle says runoff will be positive campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats will be united by November even if peace doesn't break out between their feuding gubernatorial candidates before next month's runoff, party Chairman Bob Slagle says.

But Slagle, who has been meeting with officials of the Ann Richards and Jim Mattox campaigns, said he expects the mudslinging that marked their primary to be over as they campaign for the April 10 runoff.

"I really think that the runoff primary is going to be a positive campaign. We will have a little different tone," Slagle predicted.

During the primary, Ms. Richards accused Mattox of profiteering in public office while Mattox challenged Ms. Richards to say she's never used illegal drugs.

In a pep talk to the State Democratic Executive Committee on Wednesday, Slagle said party unity is crucial against Williams, whom he called "Blatant Millions" in referring to the oilman's record $8 million-plus GOP primary spending.

With the 1991 Legislature handling reapportionment for itself and Texas' expected 30 congressional seats, Slagle called this year's gubernatorial election the springboard into 21st century politics.

"This election is so critical to us that we cannot afford for people to have their noses out of joint," Slagle said. "We are indeed a family and we're going to move forward together and be successful together. It's tough. We're tough. Tough people win."

The party executive committee certified the results of the March 13 primary Wednesday. Ms. Richards got 580,587 votes and Mattox 546,758. Former Gov. Mark White ran a distant third, with 287,328.

Texas Republicans, meanwhile, certified Williams as their nominee after he received 520,014 votes, a landslide 61 percent of the primary total.

The party's executive committee also reported that state Sen. Buster Brown of Lake Jackson won the GOP nomination for attorney general outright, receiving 636 more votes than the 50 percent required to avoid a runoff. Brown finished with 359,721 to 200,255 for state Rep. Patricia Hill of Dallas.

"This victory demonstrates that the people of Texas want new leadership in the attorney general's office," said Brown, who faces Democratic state Rep. Dan Morales of San Antonio in November. Morales told Democratic officials he believes the party has "put together a much, much stronger ticket, top to bottom" than the Republicans.

In an interview, Slagle said he has met with Richards and Mattox campaign managers three or four times, calling them "very pleasant" sessions.

"I think the Democrats will be very pleased with the campaigns both of our candidates run in the runoff," he said.

But he refused to call such a truce mandatory for eventual Democratic victory.

"I don't think it is essential. My brother and I used to fight, but my brother and I are very good friends anyway," he said.

Party executive director Ed Martin said all Democrats understand the need to unite after April 10.

"Democrats from the rank-and-file up to the ones running for governor understand that either of our candidates is far more qualified to run this state than Clayton Williams. It's essential that that's what we emphasize during this runoff," Martin said.

"They're always a little nervous about laying down their gun and getting shot in the back, but I think there's a very genuine and sincere desire to run positive campaigns," he added.

In other political developments:

■ Williams meet with White Wednesday for two hours in Houston but didn't get the endorsement he was seeking.

"I didn't get the endorsement, but he didn't say no," Williams said. "We just got to be friendly."

■ The last woman to made a major bid for governor before Richards — Houston lawyer Frances "Sissy" Farenthold — announced that she is throwing her support behind Mattox.

"I admire his record as attorney general right across the board," said Farenthold, who ran as a Democrat for governor twice in the '70s.

Mattox was pleased by the endorsement.

"I think this signifies that serious women require serious candidates, and there are a few women in Texas who have contributed more to the major issues we have faced over the past couple of decades," he said.

Salvation Army head greets 'Guv' in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — When the chief of the Salvation Army met the head of state in Texas, it was a question of protocol.

"I said to him, do I call you 'your excellency?' " recalled Gen. Eva Burrows of a converstation with Gov. Bill Clements, who greeted her before a speech here Wednesday.

"He said, 'No, Guv will do.' If that's Texas, I like it," Ms. Burrows told hundreds at a gathering of the charity organization's members and supporters.

Ms. Burrows, who is Australian, also said she had been informed of the state's political workings.

"I suppose, Guv," she said, turning to Clements at the head table, "We should really be having this in Austin. But someone told me that Austin is the Capital, but Dallas has the capital.

"It's not surprising that the Salvation Army is where the capital is," she said.

Ms. Burrows, who was in Dallas to address the 100th annual meeting of the Dallas County Salvation Army Advisory Board, is the spiritual and secular head of the international charitable organization.

She said Dallas operates the organization's largest social service center in the world.

The Salvation Army is very interested in the results of the U.S. Census, which will count the homeless, she said.

"The Salvation Army is providing for the lost and lonely people in the great cities of the world," she said.

In an interview earlier, Ms. Burrows said her group is facing opportunities in communist countries that it hasn't had since being expelled from most of them decades ago.

"It caught us very much by surprise," said Ms. Burrows of the rapidly changing political shift toward democratic reforms. "Everyone is working a little bit in the dark."

Plans for services to be offered across newly opened borders are still sketchy, but Ms. Burrows, said she has a few ideas.

"One thing the Russians wouldn't mind is help with their alcoholism problem," she said.

The Salvation Army also should find new opportunities to expand the Christian aspect of its mission, she said.

"People will be more open to the Christian faith, as well," Ms. Burrows told The Dallas Morning News.

Ms. Burrow said she has recently discussed morality with the president of Zimbabwe; chatted with Mother Teresa in India about taking their respective ministries into Eastern Europe; and spent time in Great Britain where a management consultant recently recommended changes to bring the organization "into the 21st century."

Teen who was illegally jailed to be retried

DALLAS (AP) — A Vietnamese youth who spent four years in prison after being illegally sentenced to 38 years in prison will be tried again on robbery charges, Dallas County prosecutors say.

The announcement Wednesday came only a week after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled that Luan Van Hoang had been illegally sentenced to an adult prison.

The prosecutors' strategy potentially could expose the teen-ager to three life sentences in prison.

"I think it's appropriate that he be held accountable, whether it's in juvenile court or felony (adult) court, for the action he committed, if he is adjudged guilty," said Janice Warder, chief of the juvenile division of the Dallas County district attorney's office.

Luan, who records show was only 13 when he was convicted of armed robbery in 1986, was sentenced by a Dallas jury to adult prison after lying to police about his age. Luan says he told officials that he was 17 to avoid return to a California juvenile facility from which he had fled.

The state's highest criminal court ruled March 14 that District Judge Jack Hampton lacked jurisdiction because Luan was underage.

Prosecutors say they planned to retry Luan not just on the case that was thrown out but on three other robberies that have not been voided.

In 1986, Luan agreed to a plea-bargain for three 10-year sentences only after a jury had sentenced him to 38 years on the first robbery.

Prosecutors said they were preparing to handle all four cases together, which could result in three life sentences for Luan.

But defense lawyer Bruce Anton said that the prosecutors had decided to delay filing their petition after he questioned its legality.

"If the district attorney's office intends to have the other three convictions voided, at this time I intend to contest that matter," Anton said.

Ms. Warder said her office had not decided what punishment it would seek should Luan be found guilty.

Anton believes that state parole officials will release Luan soon because the four years he has served probably have discharged his concurrent 10-year sentences.

Anton said he also doubts that prosecutors could prove their contention that Luan was 16, not 13, at the time of the robbery and retry him as an adult.

Ex-coach in jail for murder files suit against witness

PLAINVIEW (AP) — A former high school tennis coach convicted in the slaying of his ex-girlfriend's boyfriend is attempting to sue a prosecution witness from the trial that resulted in his imprisonment for life.

Jon David Weatherred, 31, drafted papers in the lawsuit and mailed them to be filed Monday in 64th State District Judge Jack Miller's court.

Papers filed in the lawsuit seek a minimum of $50,000 in damages from Charles Ray Sterling of Lubbock, who was a key witness in Weatherred's Conroe trial, for a conversation that was allegedly bugged. Weatherred was convicted of capital murder and is serving his sentence at the Michael prison unit at Tennessee Colony.

Weatherred will not be eligible for parole for 14 years in the December 1988 shooting death.

The inmate's lawsuit claims that Sterling called him on March 8, 1989, at his home in Kress and asked to meet him at a Plainview restaurant.

After Weatherred agreed, the two "drove around town" in his pickup truck and talked.

"Without plaintiff's knowledge, consent and authority, respondent (Sterling) was wired with a listening device that enabled a third party to listen to plaintiff's conversations, wholly unknown to plaintiff," the lawsuit claims.

Influx of illegal aliens across border appears to be increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The flow of illegal immigration across the Southwest border appears to be increasing dramatically, reversing a three-year downturn that began when the federal government made it unlawful to hire undocumented workers.

Verne Jervis, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said a surge in apprehensions of illegal aliens — considered to be the best available indicator of illegal immigration — began in May 1989 and has continued steadily.

According to the INS, apprehensions of illegal aliens were up 29.9 percent over the past 10 months, compared with the same period a year ago. Apprehensions totaled 801,937 between May 1989 and February 1990 compared with 617,317 between May 1988 and February 1989.

Some months recorded surges of nearly 60 percent, while in other months the increases dropped below 20 percent. But the past three months have been among the highest, with apprehensions rising 57.3 percent between February 1989 and February 1990, by 39.6 percent between January 1989 and January 1990, and by 58.3 between December 1988 and December 1989.

Apprehensions began dropping sharply in fiscal 1987, the year after Congress passed the Immigration Control and Reform Act of 1986, which made employers subject to civil and criminal sanctions for hiring undocumented workers.

Although the trend in apprehensions continued downward through the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, the first six months of this fiscal year have seen an increase in apprehensions of 37 percent over the same period a year ago.

Jervis said the rise in illegal immigration may be due to the availability of fraudulent documents that undocumented workers use to obtain work or simply the "desperation" of some in Mexico to seek work here.

Rep. Lamar Smith of San Antonio, the ranking Republican on the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, blamed inadequate enforcement of employer sanctions for contributing to the increase.

"The combination of sanctions not being enforced for lack of personnel and financial resources, in conjunction with an abundance of fraudulent documents, means there's not as much of a disincentive for illegal aliens to come to the United States as there should be," Smith said.

Smith said he is surprised by a lack of vigorous lobbying for additional funds by the Justice Department and the INS.

Jervis, however, said the Bush administration's budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 seeks an increase in funding for the Border Patrol to $289.2 million from the current $262.6 million.

The administration is also seeking 90 new Border Patrol agents, bringing the total 4,942 next fiscal year.

Remember the Alamo

STATE IN BRIEF

Guard funding may be cut

AUSTIN (AP) — A Department of Defense proposal to cut the 1990 budget would put a disproportionate burden on Texas by yanking $10 million that was set aside to build three National Guard armories, said the executive director of the National Guard Association of Texas.

"This move is quite unusual because such cuts are normally done after consultation with the states involved to determine priorities," said Lewis King.

"When the nationwide cuts in all military services were first announced several weeks ago, it appeared that most were in Democratic congressional districts," he said. "This is certainly the case with the withdrawal of funds for armories in Dallas, San Antonio and Temple."

The armories "are imperative for Texas to maintain its current state of readiness," King said. "I thought the defense of the country was above partisan politics."

A Department of Defense spokesman did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Summit director named

HOUSTON (AP) — A senior lecturer at the University of Texas Graduate School of Business in Austin was named as director of events for the 1990 Economic Summit of Industrialized Nations in Houston, officials said Wednesday.

Homer Luther of Houston, who is also a private investor, will be responsible for all scheduled events during the economic summit on July 9-11, said Frederic V. Malek, director of the conference.

Thousands are expected to attend the summit, which Houston officials hope will be an economic benefit to the city.

Luther is a member of the Houston Host Committee for the summit and the Summit Executive Committee.

"The fact that Homer is from Houston is a tremendous advantage in that he will be able to work closely with the Houston Host Committee in his official role as Director of Events," Malek said in a news release from his Washington office.

Luther will serve along with Malek and Chuck Hagel, deputy director of the economic summit, without compensation.

Ship building studied

DALLAS (AP) — Better training and safety procedures could reduce worker's deaths in ship building and repairing, a government study released Wednesday shows.

The report by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration says most deaths in shipyards result from fires, explosions, falls, asphyxiation, poisoning or electrocution.

The study, which analyzed 176 deaths in ship building and repairing, recommends establishment and strict enforcement of safety standards on work in confined or enclosed spaces and fall protection.

The OSHA report also urges precautions on flammable and explosive materials, especially during welding and cutting operations, according to the Department of Labor's Dallas office.

"The study ... provides information which employers can use to eliminate hazards and improve worker training," said Gerald F. Scannell, assistant labor secretary who heads OSHA.

Black sheriff named

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Billy Dirks has become the only black sheriff in the state following the departure of his old boss, the Texas Sheriffs Association said.

Dirks, a 55-year-old retired veteran of the U.S. Air Force and Army, was sworn in Wednesday as the sheriff of Hopkins County.

Dirks, appointed by county commissioners, succeeds Mark Bassham, who appointed him as the county's chief deputy in 1986. Bassham has accepted an appointment to become an inspector for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Dirks, who lives in Sulphur Springs, will hold the post until a permanent replacement can be elected in November to complete the final two years of Bassham's four-year term.

"I hope I get the (Democratic) nomination, but the party hasn't named anybody yet. We'll just have to wait and see," Dirks told The Dallas Morning News.

Child drowns in bucket

TYLER (AP) — A 1-year-old Tyler child apparently drowned Wednesday after falling into a partially filled five-gallon bucket of water, police said.

Devonte Horton was pronounced dead about 5 p.m. at Mother Frances Hospital, about 90 minutes after he was discovered in the bucket by babysitters taking care of him, authorities said.

Investigators said that Thomasina and Tyrone Waters, who were caring for the child, apparently were outside or in another room when the accident occurred.

The bucket contained about one gallon of water and soiled clothing.

The boy's mother, Shelly Horton, was in Houston at the time.

Census panel appointed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements announced creation of the Census Complete Count Committee of Texas and appointed nine people to serve on the committee.

The governor's appointees, which were announced Wednesday, are Steve Radack of Houston; Chip Gilmour of Lubbock; Wright Lassiter Jr. and Jere Thompson Sr. of Dallas; Ruben Flores Jr. of San Antonio; Tony Garza Jr. and John Cawley of Brownsville; Maria Flood of El Paso; and James Tamayo of Laredo.

Committee members are charged with promoting the census at the local level to make certain that Texas gets a correct population count.

Pilot reports trouble

GRAPEVINE (AP) — An American Airlines jet landed safely at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Wednesday after the pilot reported that one of the plane's nose tires might have been blown, officials said.

But American spokesman Al Becker said an inspection of the plane after its 2:55 p.m. CST landing showed the nose tire was intact.

American flight 373 was carrying 142 passengers and six crew members from Atlanta to DFW on an MD-80 aircraft.

There was no damage and no report of injuries, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Bill Anderson said.

Baker tells South Africa to lift state of emergency

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III today told South African officials they must end a nearly 4-year-old state of emergency before Washington lifts sanctions against the white-led government.

Earlier, Baker met with an African National Congress delegation, which criticized the first visit in 12 years by a U.S. secretary of state on the ground that it gives the government's reform program legitimacy that the black anti-apartheid group feels has not been earned.

The ANC did not want Baker to meet with President F.W. de Klerk later today, but Baker said he would do so to push the government for more reforms.

After a luncheon meeting with Foreign Minister Pik Botha, Baker said he discussed the national state of emergency in effect since June 1986, noting that its lifting was one of the conditions set by the U.S. Congress for ending economic sanctions.

Baker said the U.S. government hoped that the state of emergency would be ended "at an appropriate time, consistent, of course, with the maintenance of law and order.

"We approve of the direction that the government has recently been moving in," Baker said.

The Pretoria government last month released black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela after 27 years of imprisonment and legalized the ANC and other groups.

The state of emergency, however, allows police to detain people indefinitely without trial, outlaw certain forms of protest and subject the news media to various restrictions.

Botha said the South African government wants to end the state of emergency as soon as the level of political violence in the country is brought down. "We don't want it," he said of the nearly 4-year-old state of emergency. "It is bad for us, our name abroad, our reputation."

Govan Mbeki, a member of the ANC's National Executive, said after his delegation's 90-minute meeting with Baker today: "We are not happy with the fact that he has come here to consult with the South African government."

Mbeki said the ANC wants a complete cut in diplomatic contacts with the South African government.

Mandela Wednesday asked Baker not to meet with de Klerk. The African National Congress deputy president said the meeting would send an inaccurate message that South Africa has made meaningful changes.

The secretary met with Mandela in Namibia because Mandela refused to meet with him in South Africa. But Mbeki and two of Mandela's other co-defendants sentenced to life in prison with him met with Baker in Cape Town.

And Walter Sisulu, the internal leader of the ANC in South Africa, planned to meet with Baker Friday in Soweto, outside Johannesburg.

Bush lifts economic sanctions on Namibia

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush Wednesday lifted all economic sanctions that had been imposed on Namibia while it was under South African control and promised to make the newly independent African nation a full trading partner of the United States.

In a written statment issued by the White House, Bush said he had established full diplomatic relations with Namibia, effective Wednesday, and "will take the necessary steps to exchange ambassadors as soon as possible."

Both measures had been expected after the inauguration just after midnight Tuesday of Sam Nujoma as president of Namibia. The newest independent nation, formerly known as South-West Africa, had been under control of South Africa for 75 years.

"The independence of Namibia today marks the end of colonialism in Africa and a proud beginning for the world's newest country," Bush said.

He added that he had sent Secretary of State James A. Baker III to the inauguration ceremonies in Windhoek "as a sign of the respect and esteem in which we hold the world's newest democracy."

"We are especially gratified that Namibia's Constituent Assembly has produced a constitution that is among the most democratic in Africa and which provides an excellent basis to insure national harmony and development," Bush said.

The Rev. Alan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, from left, former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and the Rev. Jesse Jackson attend a prayer meeting today to pray for the goodwill of the now-independent Namibia, in the capital city of Windhoek.

In addition to establishing diplomatic relations with Namibia, the president said he is "taking steps to insure that it is given access to the American market."

"With the end of South Africa's administration, all U.S. sanctions against Namibia are being lifted," he said.

As a territory of South Africa, Namibia was subject to sanctions imposed by Congress against South Africa in 1986, overriding a veto by President Ronald Reagan to protest Pretoria's apartheid policies.

The sanctions included prohibitions against civil aircraft traffic between the United States and South Africa and a ban on any new investment in South Africa except in black-owned companies, including bank loans to private businesses and most loans to the South African government.

The sanctions prohibited the importing of military equipment from South Africa, or the export of material to that country and wide bans on importing other products from South Africa, including uranium, coal and textiles. Military cooperation also was banned under the 1986 law.

Time temporarily runs out for bell in London's Big Ben

LONDON (AP) — Big Ben, which didn't miss its hourly bell once during World War II bombings, will be silenced temporarily for repairs.

Although the clock will continue to run uninterrupted, the hourly bell will be stopped for 12 weeks, and the quarter-hourly "Westminster" chimes for two days, Government Minister Christopher Chope said Wednesday.

A mechanism needs replacing because of age, said Chope, the minister responsible for the Property Services Agency that looks after the clock.

The faulty mechanism, the hammer arm that strikes the hour, will have to be removed so a replica can be made, the agency said.

Chope said work will begin March 26.

Big Ben has been keeping time since 1859. It is stopped twice a year when Britain goes on and off daylight savings time. In October, it stopped for three hours due to a mechanical fault.

In 1976 a piece of metal broke off the clockworks, forcing the hourly bell to be silenced for 22 days and the chimes for several months. The keepers of the clock said get-well cards addressed to Big Ben arrived from all over.

The name Big Ben actually applies only to the 13½-ton bell, but it has become the nickname for the entire clock.

WORLD IN BRIEF

German charged with aiding Libyan plant

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A West German businessman was charged today with helping to build a plant in Libya that was suspected of producing chemical weapons before it was damaged in a fire earlier this month.

The indictment against Juergen Hippenstiel-Imhausen, former head of the Imhausen-Chemie chemical company, charged him with violating West Germany's export laws and tax evasion.

Also today, a West German official said Libya cut off trade with West Germany after accusing it of setting fire to the chemical plant.

West Germany made a formal protest today to the Tripoli government, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Czech admits Libyan link

LONDON (AP) — Czechoslovakia's former Communist rulers sold tons of Semtex plastic explosives to Libya but its new non-Communist government has stopped all such exports, President Vaclav Havel said today.

Havel, in Britain on an official visit, made his comments at a news conference at the Czechoslovak Embassy.

"The past regime exported 1,000 tons to Libya," he said. "If you consider that it takes 200 grams (7 ounces) to blow up an aircraft, this means world terrorism has enough Semtex to last for 150 years."

Semtex was used in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, which exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland in December 1988, killing all 259 on board and 11 people on the ground.

"We ceased exporting this explosive some time ago," Havel said, speaking through a translator. He did not give a date or any other details.

Attacks kill 19 Haitians

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — In attacks political and civic leaders blame on thugs angered by the shift from army to civilian rule, marauding gunmen have killed at least 19 people this week, officials and radio reports say.

The victims included 11 members of a self-defense group hacked to death in the town of Petit Goave, the birthplace of nationwide demonstrations that forced Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril from power.

In the capital of Port-au-Prince Wednesday, assailants killed at least four people and wounded eight, according to the reports. The wounded included five members of a self-defense unit shot by gunmen in speeding cars.

CPSC issues warnings, recalls on children's toys

By Linda Anderson

To parents, grandparents and anyone else who ever buys things for children: Please, please, please be careful when purchasing toys, clothing or anything to be used by or around children. U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has issued more recalls and warnings on children's products:

Anderson

■ Toys R Us, in cooperation with the CPSC, has recalled about 12,000 Chicco brand Activity Gyms for cribs because of a possible strangulation risk. The crib toys have a white strap with blue buckles (to attach them to crib or playpen), music box and two rotating cylinders, and two clear balls that hang down and are supposed to be pulled to make the music box start. The number 62930.0 is on the package, but not the toy.

According to information from CPSC, "The label on the box recommends the toy's use for children from 6 to 18 months of age. CPSC recommends that toys intended to be hung across a crib or playpen be removed when the baby reaches five months of age or begins to push up on hands and knees. Beginning at about five months of age babies may be able to pull themselves up to such crib toys and could fall across them or become entangled in them, risking strangulation."

Toys R Us stores have posted pictures of the toy. Customers are advised to remove the toy from the crib or playpen, and return it to Toys R Us for a refund.

■ In another choking hazard-related recall, Henry Gordy International has recalled 43,000 "Little Triplets" dolls and baby bottle sets because some of the toys' small parts could be swallowed by children, possibly chocking them. The sets, item #299, contain two white and one orange toy baby bottles and three 4-inch plastic dolls. The item, sold nationwide in 1988-89, was priced at less than $2.

Customers are advised to take the toys away from their children and return them to the store where they were bought for a refund.

■ Two more recalls on children's items were issued because of potential choking hazards: Chuck E. Cheese tambourine (sold since 1987 at Chuck E. Cheese and Showbiz Pizza Restaurants for about $1.50 each) and "Siren Whistle" toys, by Mitchell Important Company of Shawnee Mission, Kan.

The tambourines are orange and white, decorated with red, black, yellow and gray pictures of Chuck E. Cheese. These toys also have sharp points that could hurt children, according to the CPSC. Customers are advised to take the toys away from children, return them to the restaurant where the toys were purchased, or call (408) 379-8800.

The Siren Whistles are described as solid-colored (either red, blue, orange, green, pink or yellow), plastic and are 1¾-inches long. They were sold nationwide in 1988-89 for about 75 cents each. The whistles should be taken away from children and returned to the store for a refund. For any questiona about this recall, customers may call 1-800-648-2426.

Cross-training shoes fit many needs

By Barbara Lloyd
N.Y. Times News Service

New technology has changed the look of athletic footwear dramatically in the last decade. The all-around sneaker has been replaced with intricate footwear for individual sports activities. But the newest wave is a return to the basics: a cross-training shoe that fits the needs of more than one sport, yet makes the sneaker look like a distant cousin.

Now, for most people who exercise regularly to keep fit, there's no need to buy an athletic shoe for every activity.

That saves money — prices for the new cross-training shoes range from about $50 to $110 — and time. But before you toss out your collection of athletic shoes and buy one pair to use for all your activities, remember that the cross-training shoe is intended for moderate physical activity.

Anyone whose fitness regimen is devoted primarily to one sport should still buy a sport-specific shoe — one for running or tennis or any other single sports activity, experts say.

The idea for a new multipurpose shoe surfaced in the mid-1980s when a researcher at Nike Inc., the footwear manufacturer in Beaverton, Ore., began to question athletes' choices for footwear.

"I would see people running in basketball shoes, and I would see people playing basketball in running shoes," said John Robinson, the Nike researcher. "People were almost misusing their shoes. I decided there had to be another way of approaching shoe development."

NIKE RESEARCHERS then began to rethink athletic shoe design in relation to fit, cushioning and stability. Their solution — a shoe that could be used for different kinds of sports — took advantage of what had been learned about specialty shoes.

By combining the cushioning of a running shoe with the sideways stability of a court shoe, Nike came up with a modified design that could be used for more than one sport. That combination might include tennis, running, aerobics and weight training.

Many companies that make athletic shoes have followed Nike.

And today, cross-training is the fastest-growing category in the sports and fitness business.

Major athetic shoe brands, including Reebok, Avia, Adidas, Brooks, Saucony and Converse, have developed cross-training shoes by incorporating much of the technology from their specialized shoe lines.

This summer, Reebok International of Stoughton, Mass., for example, will market the SXT Pump and AXT Pump, cross-training shoes that come with an internal air bladder that inflates to improve fit. The technology was first developed for Reebok's basketball shoe.

Nike still dominates the field, with a 70 percent share of the market. The company's sales of cross-training shoes totaled $92.5 million in 1987; last year, sales grew to $237 million. Nike estimates that by the end of 1991, it will have sold more than 10 million pairs of cross-training shoes.

CROSS-TRAINING SHOES have, in some cases, eclipsed the popularity of both running shoes and aerobic footwear. Wayne Spinney of Avia in Portland, Ore., said recently that one of the chief assets of the cross-training shoe is that it's "supercomfortable."

Experts in the shoe industry estimate that more than 70 percent of the cross-training shoes are bought for street wear.

Dr. Robert Soutas-Little, the chairman of the department of biomechanics at Michigan State University, warned that "for the serious performer, be he an athlete or a serious recreational athlete, I'm not sure the cross-trainer will perform as well as a specialized shoe."

But, he added, "for the casual, recreational user not into high performance over prolonged periods, these cross-training shoes may work very well."

Spinney said: "The cross-trainer offered a new look. There's always that group of people out there who want to wear something different."

But more important, Spinney said, was that fitness experts are recommending exercise routines that vary.

Those in the baby-boom generation who are now in their 30s and 40s are buying cross-training shoes as they move away from the activities that consumed their youth.

Instead of excessive running or playing team sports like basketball, they are staying fit by combining multiple activities. They may work out at a health club for an hour after work, play a few sets of tennis on Saturday and go bicycling on Sunday.

For these people, and for older Americans who are working regular, moderate exercise into their lives, the cross-training shoe seems to be a wise choice.

Expert offers advice on proper fit

N.Y. Times News Service

Dr. Rob Roy McGregor, an assistant professor of orthopedics at the University of Massachusetts Medical School, said that a proper fit is crucial when buying cross-training shoes.

Here are his suggestions.

■ Go to a store that carries more than one brand.

■ Have both feet fitted while you are standing up.

■ Make sure there is a quarter inch of space in front of your longest toe.

■ Look at the shoe from the rear; the heel should be as square as possible. A tapered heel invites instability.

■ Look for a shoe with flex in the toe. A stiff shoe is harder on the foot.

■ If you are having trouble with fit, look for a design with an outside strap for added adjustability.

Market for large-print books is growing

By Edwin McDowell
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In a test to determine whether it should publish large-print books, Random House recently published a large-print edition of Robert Fulghum's best seller, "It Was On Fire When I Lay Down On It."

The test was successful. Bookstores ordered all but 700 of the 10,000 copies printed.

And Random House is so pleased with the results that it is considering several more large-print titles for this spring, said Annik La Farge, who coordinated the experiment.

Meanwhile, Bantam Doubleday Dell is broadening its three-year-old large-print publishing program.

Instead of selling exclusively to libraries, which buy as much as 80 percent of the large-print books published in the United States, it has also begun selling the books to stores.

"We think there is a growing market for large print books," said Isabel Geffner, associate publisher of Dell Publishing.

Booksellers agree. "Sales of large-print books were up 30 percent in 1989 over 1988," said Dara Tyson, public relations director of Waldenbooks.

Several other leading publishers are considering large-print publishing, said Lorraine H. Marchi, executive director of the National Association for Visually Handicapped.

One reason, she said, is that there are almost 14 million visually impaired Americans, the overwhelming majority of whom can read large-print books (which cost $1 or $2 more than regular books and have type about one-third larger than regular type).

But there is another reason: publishers view people over 50 as a large potential book market, and it is that group that comprises the majority of the visually handicapped.

In her presentation to Random House colleagues, suggesting that the company consider large-print books, Ms. La Farge cited "Midlife and Beyond," a report by the Conference Board.

The report estimated that the 63 million Americans over age 50 constitute an $800 billion market. It also estimated the discretionary spending of Americans over 50 at $130 billion.

Officials at B. Dalton and Barnes & Noble say that past attempts to sell large-print books failed. But large-print publishers say they erred in persuading booksellers to display large-print books in special sections, rather than putting them alongside of regular editions.

They also erred in marketing large-print books mainly to those with impaired vision.

"Today, we think there's a market among people who work with computers all day, or in similar occupations," said Charles Fortier, operations manager of Thorndike Press, which publishes about 150 large-print books a year. (Recent titles include "The Joy Luck Club" by Amy Tan and "The Temple of My Familiar" by Alice Walker.)

Beth Whittingham, the editor of Doubleday's Large Print Home Library, said that while it still attracted most readers through ads in Modern Maturity magazine, "we're now targeting people below 55 who work in eye-straining jobs or who just like to read books with bigger type."

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company hereby gives notice that it has filed an application requesting the PUC to declare Southwestern Bell's intrastate Billing and Collection market subject to significant competition and to authorize the following form of pricing flexibility: detariffing of the rates, terms and conditions of the Billing and Collection services now offered in Section 8 of Southwestern Bell's intrastate Access Service Tariff. Approval of the application as filed would result in all tariff sheets in Section 8 (Billing and Collection) of Southwestern Bell's Intrastate Access Service Tariff being cancelled, and the service thereafter being provided on a contract basis. Through this application, using procedures established by P.U.C. SUBST. R. 23.27, Southwestern Bell seeks to obtain uniformity of rates, rules and regulations for intrastate and interstate Billing and Collection services.

Approval of this application would remove all rates, terms and conditions applicable to billing and collection from Southwestern Bell's Intrastate Access Service Tariff. Intrastate billing and collection service would continue to be subject to PUC regulatory oversight only to the extent that (1) Southwestern Bell would be required to maintain current price lists at the Commission for the service, and (2) the revenues or losses from the service would be subject to the regulatory treatment specified in P.U.C. SUBST. R. 23.27(p). Further, under procedures established by P.U.C. SUBST. R. 23.27, the PUC's General Counsel, the Public Utility Counsel or any affected person could seek a subsequent review of the rates, terms and conditions of this service.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings, or who would like further information, should call or contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, (512) 458-0100. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Information Office at (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

The PUC has assigned this matter to Docket No. 9224. A prehearing conference will be held on April 19, 1990, at 9:00 a.m. at the Commission's offices at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard in Austin, Texas. The deadline for filing motions to intervene is April 26, 1990.

AT WIT'S END

You gotta have faith — but be careful too

By Erma Bombeck

The age of trust was a time in which my parents lived. The days of never locking the front door and believing crime doesn't pay was another era. It was a time when anything was possible if you worked hard. And if the federal government said it, then it was true.

Bombeck

It has taken one stolen car, a Watergate scandal, and a purse that I dangle between my knees to ward off muggers to convince me that if crime doesn't pay, it makes a pretty good down payment on retirement.

I'm not really cynical, but let's just say I question facts that I used to regard as absolute.

Take the story I read in the paper about first lady Barbara Bush. She was quoted as saying she hasn't yet started to read Nancy Reagan's "My Turn." Give me a break. Is she telling us she hasn't had a minute to thumb through the index and look under "Bush, Barbara" and see what pages she is mentioned on? Excuse me, but I don't believe she's propped up in bed reading "Charlotte's Web" and "There's a Boy in the Girls' Bathroom" when she has the galley proofs of "My Turn" on her nightstand.

You know what else I don't believe? The woman on television who pops prunes in her mouth every 15 seconds. Who are we kidding here? No one can eat that many prunes. If she eats prunes as a snack, she'd be on the run more than the Er gizer rabbit.

I don't believe airline food can make y i sterile. It can make you hostile, but I have never believed the rumors that it causes mood swings and genetic side effects.

It stretches my credulity gland to see former Raiders coach and sportscaster John Madden hanging out in a hardware store. Andy Rooney, yes. Maybe I'm wrong, but Madden doesn't seem like the kind of guy who would turn his carport into a rec room. And every time I see Cher walk into a fitness gym and say, "I feel like a lump," I expect a cellulite-driven army of women to attack her with blunt instruments. If she walked into my aerobics class with a body like that, she wouldn't come out alive.

I don't want you to think I've given up on the world. There are a lot of things I accept on blind faith. I know in my heart that Jane Goodall is a good person, Minnie Pearl would sit down and chew the fat with you, Beverly Sills could cheer me up. I believe people talk about me if my glasses have water spots and my children will never forgive me for feeding them cheap peanut butter.

And I know that I can lose weight while I sleep and eat anything I want to. If I didn't believe that, I couldn't go on living.

DEAR ABBY

Former boyfriend's call upsets woman

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A few days ago out of the blue, I received a phone call from a man that I have neither seen nor heard from in years. We dated for two years, during which time he led me on, promising that he would leave his wife and marry me. Then his wife found out about us and he dropped me cold, refusing to accept any of my phone calls. Our beautiful love affair ended abruptly — that was eight years ago!

Van Buren

When I demanded to know why he was calling, he said he just wanted to know how I was — that he had been thinking about me a great deal lately. I was so shocked and angry I told him very sharply that I had nothing to say to him and to please never call me again. Then I hung up on him.

Abby, I am now happily married to a wonderful man, and I have long forgotten any feelings I once had for this man. I also would never want my husband to know that this person was calling me.

What could have possessed this man to call me after all this time and act as though nothing was wrong? I can only imagine that he wanted to resume some kind of relationship. Perhaps I overreacted, but I was really annoyed that this man had the nerve to think that after dropping me like a hot potato, he could just walk back into my life again.

Now I'm worried that he might call again, and it's very upsetting. What should I do if he calls me again? Or should I call him and tell him that I am now happily married and I do not want to see him again? — SHOOK IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SHOOK: Don't call him. But if he calls you again, tell him emphatically that you want nothing more to do with him. Then hang up.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for your "My, How Things Have Changed" file: Enclosed are two hospital bills. One I received from the Easton Hospital in May 1946 after giving birth to my first child. For a 10-day stay in the hospital, the cost was $124.

The other is a copy of the bill my daughter recently received after she gave birth to a premature son. He was in the intensive care unit for two months. The cost was $126,000! — TILLIE W. BRICKER, EASTON, PA.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you on behalf of my friend. Her son, not quite 2 years old, has ears that stick out very noticeably — in fact, that's the first thing you notice about this beautiful child.

Recently, she was at the grocery store when a woman she had never seen before walked up to her and said in a voice loud enough for everyone around to hear, "Boy, look at those ears! He looks like he's gonna take off!"

Needless to say, my friend was shocked and hurt. She wanted to say something back to that rude stranger but didn't know what to say.

What should she have said, or done, Abby? — HURTING FOR HER

DEAR HURTING: Since it's not possible to educate an insensitive, boorish stranger — especially with other strangers looking on — an appropriate response might have been: "Thank you, he is a beautiful child, isn't he?"

DEAR ABBY: You really hit a nerve today regarding those who are perpetually late.

All my childhood memories are peppered with, "We have to wait for Peggy." No matter where we went or what the occasion, the family stood at the front door "waiting for Peggy."

Abby, please don't advise people to lie to those who are always late by telling them the party is half an hour earlier, thus permitting them to perpetuate their tardiness.

I solved my problem one Christmas. I told Peggy's family that I was going to serve dinner at 5 p.m. Peggy was not there at 5 p.m. so we sat down to eat without her. While we were well into our dinner, Peggy and her family arrived. Shocked and hurt, she said, "You didn't wait for us!"

I told her that since the roads were bad and her husband was a volunteer fireman, I wasn't sure if there was a big fire or they had been involved in an accident. I didn't want bad news on an empty stomach, and in any case, the food was ready.

This happened about 30 years ago. She has never again been late for a meal in my home.

It's nice not to have to "wait for Peggy." Perhaps others still do, but not I. Her loving sister — JEAN IN PENNSYLVANIA

Copley News Service

A few seconds is all it takes for a child to be poisoned from medications or chemicals found in the home. A few minutes is all it takes to poison-proof the home and prevent this from happening.

Here are some easy-to-follow tips:

- All medications should be purchased with child-resistant lids.
- All medications and vitamins should be kept out of children's reach and not in the bathroom medicine cabinet, which offers easy access. Experts recommend storing medications in a locked cabinet in the parents' bedroom.
- Children's vitamins should be treated as medicine, not candy.
- Read and follow label directions on all medicines, vitamins and household chemical products.
- Check expiration dates on medicines. Flush old medicines down the toilet and discard the container.
- Keep chemicals, automotive products, cleaning supplies and pesticides out of children's reach. These products should be locked away in a closet or storage bin and secured with a child-proof safety lock.
- Always leave medicines and chemicals in their original containers. Never put chemicals or medicine in food or beverage containers. Poisoning deaths have been known to happen when children unknowingly drank the poisonous contents of a milk carton or soda bottle found in the kitchen or garage.
- To help prevent food poisoning, thaw frozen food in the refrigerator, not on the kitchen counter. Also, be sure to refrigerate leftover cooked food as soon as possible.

Duty-free shopping may be no bargain for tourists

By Deborah Blumenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

Wandering through duty-free shops to try on sleek Ebel watches, inhale seductive fragrances or admire the frosted curves of Lalique crystal has become as much a part of the itinerary for many travelers as lolling on pristine beaches or visiting landmark museums and temples.

The lure of the bargain — finding the same scarf or china for as little as two-thirds of the list price back home — has led more and more travelers to buy luxury goods abroad.

The trend sent international sales of duty-free goods at airports and aboard airlines, ferries and cruise ships soaring to an all-time high of $11 billion for 1988 (the last year for which figures are available), nearly double the volume three to four years earlier, according to industry records.

But just because travelers worldwide — particularly the Japanese — are spending more on duty-free goods doesn't necessarily mean that all the items they are purchasing are cheaper than at home.

As a recent check of luxury items at duty-free shops around the world showed, travelers do not always save money by buying luxury items free of sales tax and import duties.

And on occasion a shopper unfamiliar with the cost of an item at home — a camera, for example — may end up spending more, not less.

IN ADDITION, the fact that the price of perfume at one duty-free shop is low doesn't mean that the same shop will offer another item at an equally impressive discount.

"Generally speaking, we say that in most duty-free shops you'll save anywhere from 20 to 50 percent" over prices in conventional retail shops, said David Bernstein, president of the International Association of Airport Duty Free Stores, the dominant trade group.

The exceptions are electronics and cameras. These, he acknowledged, are probably cheaper at discount stores in Manhattan than any place in the world.

Although policies vary widely, it always pays to ask if the store offers a discount if payment is made with cash. Many stores do not volunteer or advertise this policy, yet they will discount merchandise from 5 to 10 percent if one pays with cash or traveler's checks.

Classic examples of bargains are name-brand luxury goods that are ordinarily sold at prices set by the manufacturer.

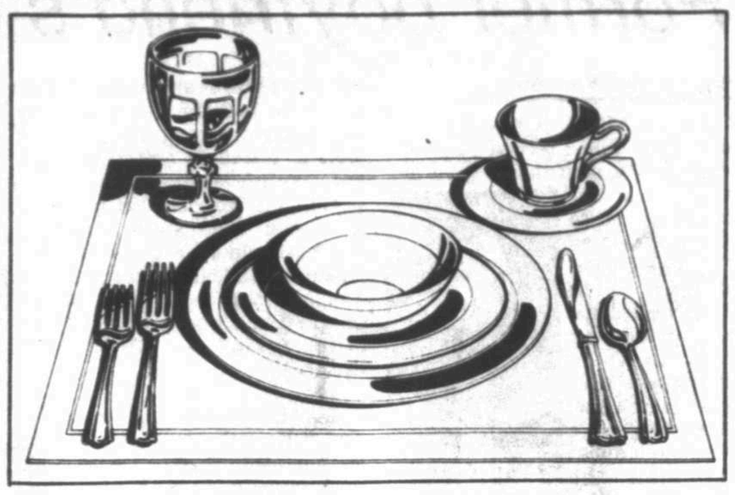
To compare the prices of some popular luxury items at duty-free shops, New York Times correspondents and contributors made spot checks in Paris, London, Shannon Airport, Rome, Amsterdam, Tokyo, Bangkok and St. Martin and St. Barthelemy in the Caribbean.

The seven items they tried to compare were an ounce of Chanel No. 5, a Dior lipstick, a Hermes scarf, a Cartier ring, a 35-millimeter Nikon Zoom 500 automatic camera, a liter of Grand Marnier and two models of the Movado Museum watch, one of gold, the other of stainless steel with a gold-plated bezel.

TYPICAL OF the inconsistency of the market, none of the nine locations carried all of the items. The Cartier ring (a rolling ring, to be specific) was found only in Amsterdam and Tokyo.

In other cases, even when an item was found, it was hard to compare prices because the shops did not always carry the same sizes — the ounce of the perfume, for example, or the liter of Grand Marnier.

The surveys also showed that while one item at a specific shop may have compared favorably with U.S prices, others did not.



The ounce of Chanel No. 5 was a good buy at $116 in Tokyo, for example, since it costs $175 at New York department stores, but the Dior lipstick at $17.60 was higher than the $15.50 it costs in most New York stores (though this price, like others cited in this comparison, did not include New York City's 8.25 percent sales tax.)

In addition to the availablility of goods, shoppers at duty-free stores typically find that styles differ.

Bathing suits made by the Israeli company Gottex cost about $60 at New Amsterdam in Philipsburg on the Dutch side of St. Martin.

The price is about one-third less than at Saks Fifth Avenue in New York. But only one of the styles in stock was the same as the line spotted in December in New York.

"Quite often there will be a line that isn't available in the home market or it will be packaged in a way that isn't available in the home market," said Julian Fox, managing editor of Duty Free News, a London-based publication.

Such export lines, however, are not necessarily inferior quality, he said, sometimes just the opposite.

EVEN WHEN an item is cheaper than at home, one has to decide whether it's worth dealing with a store far from home. A scarf or bathing suit can be easily tucked into a bag, but dishes must be mailed, and travelers may be uneasy about whether the parcel will arrive and about the headaches they may encounter if there is breakage and replacements are needed.

Whether the purchase will be worth the trouble will depend on how much is saved. So travelers in search of specific items should know the exact style numbers and list prices.

Those who buy dinnerware from Little Switzerland in St. Martin, for example, generally save about 30 percent off list prices, according to the store manager. But the wait for goods can be long.

The order first goes from St. Martin to St. Thomas, the island from which the goods are mailed. Assuming that the items are in stock, it generally takes three to four weeks to receive them. If they are not in stock and have to be ordered from the manufacturer, there may be a wait of six to eight months.

Customers are generally charged about $15 to have two place settings mailed; a service for 12, including serving pieces, will cost about $150. Insurance is included.

Should some dishes arrive broken, the customer must notify company representatives in St. Thomas to ask for replacements, an expensive phone call.

While the wait for goods can be long, travelers can be assured that duty-free stores are closely monitored by local authorities to insurethat their operations are legitimate.

IN THE United States, duty-free store operators have to get federal permits from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and the authorities check to see whether the applicants have a police record, said Bernstein.

"You have to operate a bonded warehouse, keep lots of items that don't come into the commerce of the United States, and so there is much reporting that has to be done to customs," he added. It's all supervised by the Customs Service. It's tightly watched in Europe, too, and in most countries of the world."

Local authorities have a say in who runs the shops. At airports, authorities usually take in one concessionaire, sometimes by bid.

Travelers can be reasonably certain that the goods they buy are authentic, purchased directly from the manufacturer, or in the case of small-volume operations from local suppliers who buy in quantity from the manufacturer.

On a recent trip to St. Martin and St. Barts, I found the mix of bargains and nonbargains that typify the duty-free shopping experience.

THE BEST buys were fragrances and cosmetics. All were at least 20 percent below prices in the United States. And prices were consistent from one shop to another, all of which are privately owned, as are the majority of duty-free shops. Aside from cosmetics, however, there was a considerable discrepancy between prices in different shops, particularly liquor and watches.

While most liquor stores charged about half the United States price on many items, prices of some of the same items varied by a few dollars from store to store.

Each visitor is permitted to bring a liter of alcohol into the United States free of duty. Those coming from the U.S. Virgin Islands, however, are permitted to bring in five bottles (for a total of a gallon) plus a sixth bottle, if it was produced in the Virgin Islands.

While the men's and women's Movado Museum watch, in stainless steel with a gold-plated bezel, black face and leather band was generally about $250, $100 less than advertised at Tourneau in New York, prices varied on the same watch in gold.

On the Dutch side of St. Martin, in Philipsburg, the H. Stern shop at 56 Front Street sold the gold women's watch ($895 in New York) for $620 and the men's version ($1,290 in New York) for $900. Prices at the Little Europe shop in Philipsburg were much higher on the women's ($810) and somewhat lower on the men's ($840).

Aside from price, jewelry stores in general carried an uninspiring selection of merchandise, especially for New Yorkers accustomed to the range of designs found on 47th Street or in boutiques carrying designer names such as Manfredi and Barry Kieselstein-Cord.

Valvano's job in jeopardy

Trustees call for coach's ouster

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State trustees are calling for the resignation of basketball coach Jim Valvano, who in 10 seasons has had the Wolfpack consistently in the limelight and in 1983 won the national title.

The board voted 9-3 during a closed meeting Tuesday to ask its lawyer to begin negotiations to terminate Valvano's contract, The Charlotte Observer reported today.

The move came after N.C. State interim chancellor Larry Monteith painted a dark picture of the academic performance of Valvano's basketball players, The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Valvano has been under pressure following disclosures last month that former basketball player Charles Shackleford accepted $60,000 in loans while a student, a violation of NCAA rules.

A source told the Charlotte paper that trustees have directed Monteith to send Valvano's lawyer a letter informing him that the school will not automatically renew his contract.

"I think Jim Valvano is gone," said the source, who wasn't identified. "The negotiations will not be to honor the contract, but to focus on flaws in it."

The source wouldn't elaborate on what, if any, flaws existed in the coach's five-year contract.

If Valvano refuses to step down, he may have to go to court to seek compensation for the 4½ years remaining on his contract, the Raleigh newspaper said.

Contacted Wednesday, Jay Goldberg, an assistant to Valvano's lawyer, Art Kaminsky, said he had received no word from the school.

Valvano was out of town and unavailable for comment, his secretary said.

Under Valvano's contract, the university would be required to pay the coach $400,000 if he leaves, unless another agreement is reached. The source said the money would likely come from the N.C. State athletic department's emergency fund.

The news comes one day after Valvano told a Wolfpack booster club at Sanford, N.C., about 45 miles southwest of Raleigh, that he wanted to continue to coach the team.

Speaking Tuesday night to 175 people, Valvano received a standing ovation when he said he want-

Nolan Ryan warms up in the Texas Rangers' Wednesday workout by throwing a football around. The football was a brainchild of Ranger pitching coach Tom House.

Old men hurl first

Ryan, Hough report fit

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — As if things weren't confusing enough during this spring training camp, things got really wacky when Nolan Ryan began tossing around a football on his first day back.

But when he got around to throwing baseballs, the 43-year-old Ryan looked surprisingly strong on Wednesday. He threw batting practice for 25 minutes, an unusually long time for a pitcher who just arrived in training camp.

"Everything was in the strike zone," said outfielder Pete Incaviglia, who batted against Ryan. "He wasn't even huffing and puffing. Typical Nolan. He's in better shape than most 19-year-olds."

The Rangers' second-oldest pitcher — 42-year-old Charlie Hough — also took a long turn on the batting practice pitcher's mound.

The two veterans' stamina was encouraging to Rangers pitching coach Tom House.

"I got my wish," House said. "Those two guys haven't been around so long because they're stupid or lazy. They know how

Texas expects footrace

DALLAS (AP) — The late show in the NCAA tournament's Midwest Regional should be worth watching, regardless of the hour.

Texas (23-8) and Xavier of Ohio (28-4) will likely be running and gunning as midnight approaches tonight in the second game of a round-of-16 doubleheader. No. 7 Arkansas (28-4) and North Carolina (21-12) meet in the first game.

Xavier, playing in its first regional semifinal, has no plans to back off from Texas, even though the Longhorns have stampeded past the 100-point mark 10 times this season.

"Our players think defense is a town in Bolivia," Xavier coach Pete Gillen quipped. "We're going to give 'em our best shot and swing from the hips."

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson and Razorback Todd Day try to avoid the upsets plaguing top-seeded teams.

The Xavier players, enjoying what is already the winningest season in school history, relished the prospect of getting into a shooting and running game with Texas.

A's look to repeat while league amends schedule

Baseball Roundup

While baseball and CBS are still working on a 162-game schedule, the Oakland Athletics are working on winning another World Series.

Baseball would like to extend the season by three days and reschedule two games during the year, officials at CBS, the commissioner's office and the players association said Wednesday.

But so far, they haven't been able to completely solve the problems caused by the 32-day lockout. As it stands now, each team is set for just 158 games.

Some early games already have been rescheduled by taking advantage of open dates.

The New York Yankees' home opener, which was to have been April 3 against Cleveland, was changed to April 12 against the Indians. Los Angeles, which had its season-opening, seven-game homestand wiped out, will play its home opener April 9 against San Diego.

Boston rescheduled a missed game at Detroit for April 12, meaning the Red Sox will play three straight at home, fly to Detroit the next day, and then return home for three more.

The trouble, though, comes at the end of season.

CBS begins its $1.06 billion, four-year contract with baseball this season. The network expected the playoffs to start on Tuesday, Oct. 1, and the World Series on Saturday, Oct. 13.

"It's very difficult to move around a week of prime-time programming," CBS Sports spokeswoman Susan Kerr said. "I know the people here are working at it."

Under the plan being discussed, American League teams would make up their scheduled opening series during the season and play what had been their first scheduled weekend series on Oct. 1-3.

AL teams only make two trips to each city per season, while National League teams make three trips to each team in their division. The NL schedule being discussed would make up the weekend games during the season and reschedule the missed opening series from Oct. 1-3. The playoffs would begin Friday, Oct. 5.

The Athletics intend to be playing in the postseason. So for Oakland's first full workout at Phoenix on Wednesday, Carney Lansford passed out T-shirts. The message on the front: "Contentment stinks. Stay Focused."

Lansford said he got the idea while watching the San Francisco 49ers repeat as Super Bowl champions.

MHS sophomore doesn't fear state

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

State Swimming

You don't really think Matt Houston would be scared, do you?

Sure, Houston's only making his first trip to the state swim meet in Austin this weekend. But the Midland High sophomore star says he likes it that way.

"It's a new experience for me," Houston said. "I just want to go up there and show what I can do.

"I think in a way, this (inexperience) makes me more up to it."

Houston will swim the 100-yard butterfly and 100 backstroke in the state meet. Other Midland High boys making the trip are repeaters Matt Seay, his third trip, in the breaststroke and individual medley; and second-timer Moss Fennell in both distance freestyle events.

The Bulldogs' terrific trio will be joined by freestylist Rob Neatherlin in the 200 medley relay.

Neatherlin isn't any slouch, either. The junior barely missed the 50 free finals at the recent Region I meet, and is considered a legitimate contender for a region sprint championship next season.

Sophomore Carrie Henry will be the only Midland High girl to make the trip to Austin after regional wins in both sprint freestyle races, while Midland Lee will be represented by the regional champion 400 free relay team of Stephanie Reed, Kerri Stiles, Mimi Morrison and Adinda Kelder.

Reed didn't receive a wild card berth in either the 200 or 500 freestyle races, nor did the Lady Rebels' medley relay team make anything of a second-place showing in the regional meet.

Add those disappointments to the fact that Lee's free relay team is seeded 15th of 16 teams in the statewide competition and it may be easy to see why Lee mentor John Bettina has virtually no expectations this weekend.

"It's not looking like a very exciting trip for us," Bettina said. "We have not been beaten yet, but we're going up against a monstrous field."

The Lady Reb foursome has a season best of 3:54.31, while top seed Round Rock Westwood has posted a 3:40 — just a second slower than the Lee boys foursome that placed ninth in Region I.

"I hate to end on a down note, but we've had a great season," Bettin said. The Rebel mentor hastened to add that anything can happen.

"There's been a lot of relay teams that have gone up there and gotten a false start, and that could open it up for us.

"But we've pretty much gone as fast as we're going to go," Bettina lamented.

No such concerns enter the mind of MHS coach Larry Ridge.

Young Hull joins elite company

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — For a guy who had just joined the NHL elite, Brett Hull was not a happy man.

Hull, a right winger with the St. Louis Blues, became only the sixth player to score 70 goals in a National Hockey League season. But it came in an 8-6 loss to the Edmonton Oilers on Wednesday night.

"It's an honor but when you lose, you don't really care," said the son of former NHL great Bobby Hull.

"I'm sure my dad will be very proud. But when you lose four in a row — we should be nine up in our division but we're only one — you can't be very happy about that."

Hull scored on a wrist shot following a faceoff at 17:17 of the second period to cut Edmonton's lead to 6-5. It was a quick snap shot that beat goaltender Pokey Reddick high to the glove side.

Jeff Brown and Peter Zezel got assists.

Hull joins Wayne Gretzky, Mario Lemieux, Phil Esposito, Jari Kurri and Bernie Nicholls as the only players to score 70 goals in an NHL season.

Hull said he never expected to reach the 70-goal mark this year.

"Certainly not, you don't expect to ever score 70 goals in a year," he said. "It's nice we're in first place and 70 goals is just a bonus for that."

SWIM: Lee quartet faces tough team

From 1C

And why should they? Houston and Seay are arguably knocking on the door of a state championship, while Fennell may be a sleeper in the distance events.

Houston appears to have the Bulldogs' best shot at the first state championship by an MHS swimmer since Michaela Hasek won the 100-yard backstroke in 1987. With a personal best time of 51.46, the sturdily-built sophomore is only seeded .15 seconds behind top seed Murray Easton of San Antonio Churchill and only .06 behind second-seeded Hansen of Austin Westlake.

Houston welcomes coming in as the underdog, however misleading that may be.

"I think if I was seeded first, I would be more nervous," he said. "I know I can go faster (than at regional) with all the competition there."

Houston feels like he can break the 50-second barrier, and MHS mentor Larry Ridge feels like both he and Seay have realistic shots at a win.

"It's going to be an extremely good race in both the 100 fly and 100 breast," Ridge said. "It's going to come down to whoever has the best taper."

Seay is seeded fourth in the 100 breast. His time of 58.79 trails top seed Richard Ou of Richardson Berkner by almost two seconds, but the senior will try to use his two years of state meet experience to overcome the seeding deficit.

Not as much is expected of either Seay in the 200 individual medley, where he is seeded 15th; nor Houston in the 100 back, where he is the 14th seed. Nor is much expected of Fennell — by those outside the MHS fold.

But Ridge believes that Fennell can be one of the meet's real surprises, even though he is seeded last in the 200 free and next-to-last in the 500.

"We're expecting a good swim out of Moss," Ridge said. "He tapers better the second time, and if he can drop seven more seconds, he's right in the thick of things in the 200.

"He's not going to let them run away from him."

Fennell remembers the 1989 state meet.

"I was seeded 15th and 16th last year and managed to move up to 12th in both races," he said. "I'm hoping to move up again this year, and if I'm lucky — to get in the finals."

Henry is seeded ninth in the 50 free and 16th in the 100 free. Ridge is hopeful that the sophomore can score points, especially in the 50.

"She has a good chance of dropping some time."

Duke's Crawford Palmer dunks in Wednesday practice as the Blue Devils prepare for tonight's game with UCLA.

Bruins downplay tradition

East Regional

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ten NCAA basketball championships from 1964-1975 is a source of pride for this year's UCLA players.

It is not, however, as much of a source of confidence as their second-round tournament victory over Kansas.

The unranked Bruins (22-10), the seventh seed in the East Regional, meet third-seeded and 15th-ranked Duke tonight in the regional semifinals at the Meadowlands.

In the first game, top-seeded and third-ranked Connecticut (30-5) meets No. 17 Clemson (26-8), the fifth seed.

Despite the rich tradition of the 1960s and '70s, UCLA is an underdog for the second time in three games. The Bruins beat 10th-seeded Alabama-Birmingham before upsetting second-seeded Kansas on Sunday.

Coach Jim Harrick is reveling in the underdog role.

"It doesn't seem we have a chance against Duke," Harrick said Wednesday. "They're 9-1 at the Meadowlands and they've reached the Final Four in three of the last four years from this building."

Senior Trevor Wilson, UCLA's second-leading scorer and top rebounder, said the current Bruins are aware of the school's past basketball greatness under Coach John Wooden, but don't dwell on it.

"It's good to talk about the UCLA tradition and have pride in it," Wilson said, "but it has no bearing on this game. We had nothing to do with Coach Wooden and his players. We want to make our own past."

"We use the UCLA tradition to sell our program in recruiting," Harrick said, "but I told our players that we're going to forget the past, and that includes the '80s as well as the '70s and '60s."

UCLA is making its first final 16 appearance since Coach Larry Brown took the Bruins to the championship game in 1980.

"We all came to UCLA to win our own championship and make our own identity," guard Darrick Martin said. "A lot of people say we couldn't beat Kansas and are saying now we can't beat Duke, and that makes us more determined."

"We were looked at as another obstruction in the path of Kansas that wouldn't be much of a factor," Wilson said. "That made us play harder."

UCLA was ranked as high as 13th nationally this season after starting the season 16-4. But the Bruins lost their next five games — their longest losing streak in 42 years — and were written off by many.

"There was a time we weren't playing well and at that time we were injured and sick," Harrick said. "But we have great character and that overcomes a lot of things. I suspect that we're a better team than our record indicates."

Mike Krzyzewski, coach of Duke (26-8), said that coaching at UCLA isn't necessarily as difficult as coaching where expectations are high.

"Each coach should be allowed to run his own program," Krzyzewski said. "I get tougher letters now than when I was 11-17 at Duke."

Krzyzewski said Harrick is using the underdog role as a tool to motivate his team. Krzyzewski doesn't believe it himself.

"If the underdog role is one that brings them together, then it's working for them," Krzyzewski said. "But I don't see them as an underdog team. We have to play well to beat UCLA."

Clemson has held opponents to 40.9 percent shooting this season and has not allowed better than 50 percent shooting in any of its 34 games. The Tigers limited Brigham Young to 47 points in the first round to overcome their own offensive troubles.

Connecticut forced 55 turnovers in its NCAA tournament victories over Boston University and California.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bird scores triple double

Associated Press

Surprise! It's crunch time in the NBA and Larry Bird is carrying the Boston Celtics.

Bird, enjoying his best stretch since missing most of last season because of surgery on both heels, had 25 points, 16 assists and 10 rebounds Wednesday night as the Celtics beat Cleveland 123-114.

"Larry initiates 85 to 90 percent of our offense. He opens up everything," Kevin McHale said of his teammate.

With a month left in the regular season, Boston tied New York for second place in the Atlantic Division, 1½ games behind Philadelphia.

Cleveland, meanwhile, stayed on the edge of making the playoffs. The Cavaliers' five-game winning streak ended and the record fell to 30-35. The top eight teams in the Eastern Conference reach the playoffs and Atlanta is currently eighth at 31-35.

76ers 118, Heat 97

Hersey Hawkins scored 25 points and led a third-quarter surge that sent Philadelphia past visiting Miami.

The 76ers are 5-0 against the Heat this season. Miami played without center Rony Seikaly, out with a stomach virus.

Charles Barkley scored 11 of his 19 points in the first quarter as Philadelphia took an 11-point lead. The 76ers were ahead 59-51 in the third period when Hawkins scored 12 points, and Philadelphia's lead was at least 11 the rest of the way.

Bulls 99, Hawks 89

Michael Jordan scored 27 points and Chicago broke away from an 85-85 tie in the final five minutes.

The Bulls rallied from a 78-73 deficit in the fourth quarter. Jordan's two foul shots made it 89-87 with 2:31 left.

Kings 90, Timberwolves 84

Rodney McCray hit all eight of his shots and scored 19 points as Sacramento handed Minnesota its 21st consecutive road loss.

Rookie Pervis Ellison scored a season-high 18 points and Wayman Tisdale had 17 for Sacramento.

Bullets 136, Nets 106

Ledell Eackles scored a career-high 40 points and Washington sent New Jersey to its 21st straight road loss.

The Nets have lost eight in a row overall and are 4-30 on the road. They have not won at the Capital Centre since March 17, 1986. The Bullets ended a four-game losing streak.

Hornets 115, Suns 114

Dell Curry got five of his 28 points in overtime as Charlotte beat Phoenix for the first time ever after four losses.

The Suns lost their second straight home game after winning 19 in a row in Phoenix. Charlotte is 3-30 on the road.

Pacers 112, Bucks 96

Indiana made its first 13 shots from the field and ended a three-game home losing streak.

The Pacers did not miss until Vern Fleming's layup rolled off the rim with 3:07 left in the first quarter. But Fleming got his own rebound and scored.

Indiana hit 17 of 21 shots in the first period and finished with 48 in 82 attempts, 59 percent.

Chuck Person scored 27 points, Detlef Schrempf 26 and Rik Smits 25 for Indiana. Alvin Robertson scored 31 for Milwaukee.

Jazz 118, Clippers 102

John Stockton scored 23 points and led a fourth-quarter run as Utah beat the visiting Clippers and clinched a playoff spot.

er," forward Tyrone Hill said. "They like to run and dunk and shoot 3's and we do, too."

The Longhorns, third in the Southwest Conference, got here by beating Georgia and Purdue, while the Musketeers beat Kansas State and shocked the region's top seed, Georgetown.

"I watched from the stands as Xavier beat Georgetown and I know what they are capable of doing," Texas guard Travis Mays said. "We'll have to play one of our best games."

Lance Blanks of the Longhorns said Xavier "is no darkhorse. They are here because they are good, not lucky."

Joey Wright, the other member of Texas' trio of guards nicknamed the "BMW," said Xavier's victory over Georgetown was no fluke.

"It's simple," Wright said. "Xavier has more talent than Georgetown."

Oddsmakers rated Xavier, regular season champions of the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, as slight favorites over the Longhorns.

In the other game, Arkansas was the pick over a North Carolina team that figured to be severely hampered by the loss of star forward Kevin Madden to a knee injury.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith said Henrik Rodl, a native of West Germany who averages two points a game, would start for Madden. Rodl may be moved to guard with Rick Fox shifted to small forward.

Despite the weakened lineup, North Carolina, conquerer of top-represented a major psychological hurdle for the Razoerbacks.

"It's a little scary playing North Carolina," Arkansas guard Todd Day said. "You heard the word 'North Carolina' and a little fear comes into your heart. I always wanted to play for North Carolina when I was a kid."

"When I grew up," added point guard Lee Mayberry, "North Carolina was my favorite team but I never got a letter from them."

Arkansas slipped by Princeton and then Dayton to earn a trip to Reunion Arena, which the Razoerbacks call "Barnhill South." Some 65 percent of the tickets were purchased by Arkansas fans.

"It will be like a home game for Arkansas," Smith said. "We'll just have to find a way to overcome it."

Baldwin takes Golden Glove win

FORT WORTH (AP) — Defending light welterweight champion Martin Baldwin of Odessa stopped Anthony Rogers of San Antonio with one second left with a flurry of punches in the third and last round in the State Golden Gloves tournament Wednesday night.

Referee Ronnie Walters stopped the two-minute bout at 1:59. It almost was a repeat of their state USA—American Boxing Federation bout when Baldwin won in the first round.

Baldwin advanced to Friday night's semifinals against 1988 champion David Leal of Corpus Christi. Leal moved into the semifinals by winning a 3-2 split decision over two-time state champion Booker Kidd of Dallas.

Baldwin, 18, is the only defending champion in the tournament and was one of 16 winners on the second night of the five-night tournament.

Baldwin is trying to win the fourth consecutive state title for his family. His brother, Juan, won titles in 1987 and '88. He also will be trying to avenge a loss to Leal in the state USA—American Boxing Federation tournament in 1988.

"He fought me when I was just a youngster," Baldwin said. "I've got a lot more experience and I've grown about two inches since we fought in '88."

Texas Golden Gloves president Donna Pryor announced that Dallas super heavyweight Elvis Franks had been disqualified because he had played professional football. Anyone who has been compensated for playing sports is deemed ineligible to compete in amateur boxing, she said.

Sugita fires 71 for lead

YOSHIICHO, Japan (AP) — Japan's Isamu Sugita fired a 1-under par 71 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Taylor Made Setonaikai Open.

Sugita scored 36 on the front nine and 35 on the back.

LaSalle's Simmons, Stanford's Azzi win 1990 Naismith Awards

ATLANTA (AP) — Lionel Simmons of LaSalle and Jennifer Azzi of Stanford were named winners of the 1990 Naismith Awards for top collegiate basketball players.

The awards, administered by the Atlanta Tipoff Club, are based on voting by 400 coaches, sports writers and "basketball enthusiasts" from around the country.

Simmons is joined on the Naismith All-American Men's team by Derrick Coleman of Syracuse, Chris Jackson of Louisiana State, Gary Payton of Oregon State and Dennis Scott of Georgia Tech.

Upsets rule day at IPC

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Emilio Sanchez always thought he had the heart to defeat Ivan Lendl. Now he knows he has it after ousting the top seed from the International Players Championships.

The Spaniard, refusing to buckle under pressure, beat the world's top-ranked player for the first time in four tries Wednesday to reach the quarterfinals of the $2.5 million tennis tournament.

Gabriela Sabatini, the women's No. 1 seed, also was beaten, losing to Spaniard Conchita Martinez after holding a commanding lead in the first set.

"Today I saw a part of me that I knew was always in there, and when I had the chance I kept fighting and stayed in the match," said Sanchez, who beat Lendl 6-3, 6-7 (3-7), 6-4.

"In my career I've beaten most of the guys — (Boris) Becker, (John) McEnroe, (Stefan) Edberg — but not in the same tournament. Lendl was the only one that I could never beat. ... I'm happy to do it. Maybe this will give me confidence to win some other important matches."

Lendl, who said he would have preferred skipping the Players Championships because he dislikes South Florida's humidity, joined high seeds Boris Becker (No. 2) and Brad Gilbert (No. 4) in making an early exit from the men's draw.

He fought off match point three times before Sanchez broke serve in the 10th game of the third set to end the defending champion's bid to win the tournament for the third time in six years.

"Every time I come down here it's humid and I don't feel like the ball is coming off the racket the way I want it to," Lendl said. "I can't really say whether or not I should have played here. But I made a commitment, and when I make a commitment I'm not the type of person to pull out. From now on, I will be looking for a certain type of tournament which fits me and my style a little better."

Joining Sanchez in the men's quarterfinals were fourth-round winners Edberg, Andre Agassi, Martin Jaite, Jakob Hlasek, Jim Courier, Jay Berger and Pete Sampras.

Edberg, the No. 3 seed, beat Carl-Uwe Steeb 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 and will face Hlasek, a 6-3, 6-4 winner over Bryan Shelton. No. 5 Agassi defeated No. 12 Andres Gomez 6-7 (6-8), 6-2, 6-3 to advance to a match against Courier, the 14th seed who eliminated Javier Sanchez 7-6 (7-4) 6-3.

Jaite, a 6-1, 6-1 winner over Alexander Volkov, will face Emilio Sanchez in the quarterfinals. No. 7 Berger dominated Mark Kratzmann 6-0, 6-1 and will oppose Sampras if the 16th seed is able to shake off an injury to his left hip which occurred during a 5-7, 6-4, 6-1 victory over Jean Fleurian.

Like Lendl, Sabatini suggested her 7-6 (10-8), 6-2 loss to Martinez may have been as much mental as physical. She led the first set 4-1 before faltering.

"I started the first set a little nervous. I wanted to win points really fast and that's why she put up 4-1," Martinez said. "I tried to be patient after that and I think that's why I came back."

Sabatini said Martinez played well, but blamed herself for losing focus.

"I wasn't fighting for points — playing like I did in other matches," the top seed said. "I wasn't thinking."

Martinez, seeded fifth, will play No. 15 Judith Wiesner in the semifinals. Wiesner advanced with a 2-6, 6-1, 6-2 upset of No. 4 Manuela Maleeva.

Monica Seles, the No. 3 seed, earned a semifinal berth opposite No. 9 Nathalie Tauziat with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over Nathalie Herreman. Tauziat beat Claudia Porwik 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 in their quarterfinal.

Lady Kats favorite cage team at NWIT

AMARILLO (AP) — The University of Kentucky is the top seed as the National Women's Invitational Basketball Tournament begins tonight.

The 20-8 Lady Kats face Maine, 22-5, at 8 p.m. The tournament begins with the University of Toledo, 23-6, meeting the 24-5 University of Wyoming at 6 p.m.

FRIDAY, MARCH 23, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be asked to defend your reputation or a decision you made. Be prepared to answer some tough questions. The business climate will improve considerably in September. New financial opportunities allow you to increase your savings. Celebrate in December when you make some terrific investments! Travel is favored next winter. Be direct in romance. Spend more time with offspring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Joan Crawford, quarterback Ron Jaworski, basketball star Moses Malone, singer Chaka Khan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You need to focus on one project at a time. Working alone produces the best results. Someone influential is impressed by your performance. Romance could hit a snag if you are too aggressive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A fine day to set dates and cement relationships. Your artistic talents serve you magnificently. Move forward with confidence. Romance continues to bring happiness. Drive carefully.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The emphasis today is on mental pursuits, travel and communications. Pay closer attention to loan payments. A new partnership is possible. Be wary if you receive unwarranted compliments.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may have to take work home over the weekend. Mate will be understanding if you explain the circumstances. Do not be overly generous with the wrong people. A social gathering is fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use tact when dealing with sensitive people. Concentrate on essential tasks in spite of fascinating distractions. An older person could make romantic overtures. Know your own heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow the advice of an experienced colleague. A newcomer steers you in a profitable direction. Be prepared to take a chance. A dog would make a wonderful companion for a senior citizen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tune in to romantic partner's mood and domestic tensions will evaporate. Diplomacy helps you patch up a misunderstanding. Business progress is erratic. Work on your own whenever possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 2-Nov. 21): Your creativity may not be recognized today. Strive for greater harmony in your personal relationships. A solo project may prove more productive than a team effort. An out-of-towner boosts your spirits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Consider a small business venture. Others look to you for leadership. A family relationship can be rekindled if you make the first move. A long-distance call brings good news.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick with tried-and-proven work methods lest a gamble lands you in hot water. Think twice about a business expansion; the timing may be all wrong. Use your authority wisely to avoid making enemies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not overlook a source of inspiration. Someone special boosts your morale with encouraging words. An attractive acquaintance who seemed immune to your charms extends an enticing invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day to ask for loans and special favors. An older person gives your career or pet project a giant boost. Family businesses do surprisingly well. A platonic relationship heats up!

Bridge is a game of never-ending wonders. When we first saw this situation it cropped up in in a slightly different guise some years ago.

South's sequence showed a balanced hand of 25-27 points. With all primes and a five-card suit South's hand was worth considerably more than its nominal count. But for the duplication of spade shortness the contract would have offered no challenge.

Declarer was unlucky to receive a spade lead. On any other lead declarer would have been able to concede two diamond tricks to the enemy and coast home in comfort. But now the defenders were a tempo ahead and, with only seven fast tricks, declarer had to develop two more tricks while surrendering the lead no more than once.

The first suit to tackle was hearts. If the suit broke evenly a long card would set up in dummy and an entry to the table could be forced in clubs. Unfortunately, East discarded a spade on the third heart, killing that hope.

South found an intriguing way to develop two extra tricks in the club suit. He led a low club and, when West followed with the five, declarer finessed the board's eight! If East took that trick with the king, declarer would have no problem collecting three club tricks, so the defender ducked.

To no avail. Declarer used that extra entry to run the queen of clubs. When that held South had three club tricks in the bank, together with the contract.

Steve Martin gives scripts to UT

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas library is getting some "wild and crazy" new assets: comedian-actor Steve Martin, who writes much of his material, is donating original scripts.

Martin

The first batch of Martin scripts arrived at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center early this month, including drafts, revisions and final shooting scripts for the screenplays "Roxanne" and "Three Amigos."

More Martin scripts are expected, said Ray Daum, public affairs officer and curator of the Gloria Swanson archives at the Ransom center. He said he pursued the material for two years from Martin, who's a Waco native.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — As a boy, Hank Williams Jr. enjoyed hunting and fishing in southeast Alabama. Now he wants to help flood victims in that region.

Williams

The country singer's manager, Merle Kilgore, said Wednesday that Williams will donate his entire concert fee plus concession sales from an April 1 appearance in Birmingham to the people of Elba. Kilgore said the amount is expected to exceed $100,000.

The rain-swollen Pea River swept away parts of a levee surrounding Elba last weekend and inundated the town, forcing 1,500 people to evacuate.

Kilgore said that Gov. Guy Hunt's office will administer the money and that Williams wants every family in Elba to receive part of it.

Williams as a boy spent his summers with his maternal grandfather, Shelton Sheppard, who lived in nearby Troy.

"They would go hunting and fishing and that is the reason that part of Alabama is dear to his heart," Kilgore said. "He also has been inducted into the Alabama Music Hall of Fame and he feels a special fondness for the state for that reason, also."

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The J. Paul Getty Museum in suburban Malibu has announced its purchase of the 19th century Vincent Van Gogh masterpiece "Irises" for an undisclosed sum.

The Getty bought "Irises," painted in 1889, from Alan Bond, the financially troubled Australian industrialist who paid $53.9 million for the work at a November 1987 auction, the largest amount ever paid at auction for a painting.

"In keeping with its policy of not discussing details of private acquisitions, the museum will not be disclosing the price of the work," Lori Starr, the Getty's head of public information, said Wednesday.

The painting is on display in the museum's second-floor gallery, where other 19th century paintings are displayed, including works by Pierre-Auguste Renoir, Edouard Manet and Edvard Munch.

"Irises," by Vincent Van Gogh

" 'Irises' has a power that nobody can miss," said John Walsh, director of the museum, in a prepared statement Wednesday. "A picture this important needs a permanent home, and we're overjoyed that it can be the Getty."

The Getty's purchase was arranged by Sotheby's New York auction house, which had loaned Bond $27 million to buy "Irises," using the painting itself as collateral.

The 1987 deal was criticized as inflating market prices for art and because the auction house had lent Bond money for the purchase. Sotheby's subsequently changed its financing policy, prohibiting buyers from using property they were purchasing as collateral on a Sotheby's loan.

Bond's financial empire began to come apart under the weight of more than $5 billion in debts, prompting the sale to the Getty.

The Dutch-born Van Gogh was a self-taught painter who created his greatest work during a five-year period between 1886 and his suicide in the summer of 1890.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Gloria Estefan, whose back was broken when her tour bus was hit by a truck, underwent surgery today to have her spine stabilized with metal rods.

The star of the Latin-pop group Miami Sound Machine will need three to six months to recover from injuries she suffered, doctors said.

"Her prognosis is excellent for a return to normal function," Dr. Michael Neuwirth, her surgeon, said Wednesday.

Neuwirth of the Orthopedic Institute Hospital for Joint Diseases planned to insert two metal rods into Miss Estefan's fractured vertebrae. The surgery was expected to continue until early afternoon.

Known for her energetic dancing on stage, Miss Estefan felt numbness and weakness in her legs after the accident. Besides being fractured, the two vertebrae were slightly dislocated, doctors said.

"Ms. Estefan has a serious spinal injury. It is a fractured subluxation of the spine. It requires an operation to stabilize her spine," Neuwirth said.

Miss Estefan, 32, initially was taken to the Community Medical Center in Scranton, Pa., but she was flown by helicopter Wednesday to New York for the operation.

Energy futures jump sharply

Futures are showing positive increases. In midmorning trading West Texas Intermediate jumped 7 cents to $20.03. Posted price is still clinging to $19.00.

Energy futures prices jumped Wednesday, boosted by the latest industry statistics that showed a decline in oil product inventories.

Heating oil for April delivery surged 1.19 cents to 55.54 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The May heating oil contract advanced 0.74 cent to 53.51 cents while contracts for later delivery had smaller increases.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for delivery in April gained 0.63 cent to finish at 57.94 cents a gallon, May unleaded gasoline rose 1.24 cents to 62.45 cents and June added 1.02 cents to match at 62.45 cents.

Crude oil, which got support from the product markets, posted smaller gains despite negative API statistics.

The May contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of crude oil, rose 19 cents to $19.96 a barrel. June rose 15 cents to $20.20 and July advanced 12 cents to $20.36 a 42-gallon barrel.

Dollar value higher, gold mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was higher against all other major currencies in moderate trading in Europe this morning.

Gold prices were up slightly in European trading, but lower in Hong Kong.

With concerns about unrest in Lithuanian and Romania, investors were turning to the dollar as a safe haven, dealers said.

Exchange Rates
- 1.7123 West German marks
- 1.5205 Swiss francs
- 5.7720 French francs
- 1.9255 Dutch guilders
- 1,260.50 Italian lire
- 1.1810 Canadian dollars

Traders said continued confusion over how long unification between East and West Germany will take is discouraging interest in the Deutsche mark.

But the dollar is unlikely to rise much higher, dealers said, with fears of another round of coordinated central bank intervention.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 1.18 yen to a closing 154.83 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 154.95 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning compared with late Wednesday:

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.5952, compared with $1.5965 late Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $392.50 a troy ounce, up from $391.75 bid late Wednesday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $392.25.

In Zurich, the bid price was $392.10, up from $391.50 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 99 cents to close at a bid $393.52.

Silver rose in London to a bid price of $5.08 a troy ounce, from Wednesday's $5.06.

Light trading, market lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished lower Wednesday in light trading, weakened by profit-takers and an uncertain earnings outlook for a broad range of U.S. companies.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost 10.81 points at 2,727.93.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 870 down, 582 up and 513 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board totaled a weak 130.99 million shares, down from 177.32 million in Tuesday's session.

Stocks were mixed through most of the lackluster session, and the bulk of the loss occurred just before the closing bell.

Brokers attributed the decline partly to profit-takers worried about the endurance of the market's recent strength, particularly in the face of stunning weakness in the other major world stock market, Japan.

Last week, the Dow average gained a net 57.89 points to 2,741.22, its highest level since early January. The advance continued on Monday, as the blue-chip barometer picked up another 14.41 points.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Parallel reports record year-end earnings

Midland-based Parallel Petroleum Corp. has reported record year-end earning. For the year 1989, the company increased earnings 40 percent to $856,919, and showed a net income of $42,540 or .04 cents per share. The previous year the company showed a net loss of $38,766.

Five month deficit nears 1990 projection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit totaled $97.52 billion for the first five months of fiscal year 1990, just $2.48 billion less than the Gramm-Rudman deficit target for the entire year, the government said.

The Treasury Department said Wednesday the deficit last month was $36.42 billion, 30.1 percent above the $27.87 billion imbalance in February 1989.

Receipts totaled $65.17 billion in February, up 5.3 percent from the same month last year. But expenditures amounted to $101.58 billion, a 13.2 percent increase over February 1989.

Japanese buy 7-Eleven

DALLAS (AP) — Debt-ridden Southland Corp., which owns 7,000 7-Eleven convenience stores, said today it has agreed to sell a controlling interest to its Japanese partners for $400 million and the assumption of debt.

Ito-Yokado Co. Ltd., Japan's second-largest supermarket operator, and longtime Southland affiliate 7-Eleven Japan, which Ito-Yokado controls, would acquire 75 percent of Southland's common stock under terms of the deal, Southland said in a statement.

The Japanese companies would pay $400 million in cash. The deal is contingent upon the restructuring of Southland's $1.8 billion in debt and of its outstanding preferred stock.

The deal, which has been approved by Southland's board, also must be approved by a syndicate of 32 banks, the company's lenders.

Southland spokeswoman Cecilia Norwood said the total acquisition cost was not yet known, but the leading Japanese financial journal Nihon Keizai Shimbun today estimated the deal at about $1 billion.

In addition to company-owned 7-Eleven stores, Southland's six food processing centers and five distribution centers are also included in the deal.

Independent licensees and affiliates also operate more than 5,900 7-Eleven stores in the United States and 21 foreign countries.

7-Eleven Japan, the largest convenience-store operator in Japan, operates 3,940 licensed stores. Ito-Yokado, which Southland described as Japan's most profitable supermarket chain, owns 50.3 percent of 7-Eleven Japan. Southland has had a 17-year affiliation with the Japanese concerns.

Suffering disappointing sales and earnings growth, Southland has been strained by debt associated with its $4.9 billion leveraged buyout in 1987, which gave Dallas' Thompson family control of the chain.

For the nine months ended Nov. 30, 1989, Southland lost $299 million on revenue of $6.3 billion. The company attributed the loss to heavy interest payments and additional charges associated with the buyout.

Southland said in November it faced a liquidity crisis. To meet substantial debt payments last year, the company sold off its half-ownership of Citgo Petroleum Corp., which supplies many of its

Hunts lose Penrod

DALLAS (AP) — Control of Penrod Drilling Corp. and its prized fleet of drilling rigs has been turned over to a group of lenders by the trust estates of the three Hunt brothers.

Penrod was founded by the late H.L. Hunt and been operated since his death by Lamar Hunt, Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt.

The company as of Wednesday is owned by Hunt lenders including five banks, a partnership of Fort Worth investor Richard Rainwater and Energy Service Co. of Houston, and R.D. Smith & Co. Inc., a securities firm.

The Hunts held a 50 percent interest in Penrod since it was restructured in 1988.

The banks held the other 50 percent, but have been selling it off to parties interested in acquiring Penrod's 40 offshore rigs, among the most modern in the world.

The Hunts gained an agreement from the lenders to remove a lien against Placid Oil Co., another Hunt company.

Penrod was reportedly having difficulty meeting a loan payment of $25 million to $30 million due the lenders on March 31. The payment was to be the first of 32 Penrod made on a $525 million note.

If Penrod had defaulted on the loan, the Hunts' control of the company would have gone to the lenders and the lien against Placid, about $300 million of the oil company's future profits, would remain in place.

The trust estates for Nelson Bunker, William Herbert and Lamar Hunt transferred their shares back to Penrod for cancellation, according to a brief statement. The Hunts said the action was dictated by the estates' determination that further investment in Penrod would be inadvisable.

"This action was dictated by the trust estates' determination that further investment in Penrod Drilling Corp. would be inadvisable due to irreconcilable differences of business philosophy with the other stockholders and management," the statement said.

Penrod officials were unavailable late Wednesday.

The share transfer ended a battle that has last nearly 10 years over Penrod. During that time, a big part of the fortune H.L. Hunt left his children has been tangled in lawsuits, bankruptcies, disputes with the Internal Revenue Service and other federal regulators.

Crisis hit the world's largest stock market today when the Nikkei fell 6 percent.

Nikkei plunges 6 percent

TOKYO — The Tokyo financial markets were plunged into crisis early Thursday as a tumbling yen and rapidly eroding confidence in the government's ability to stabilize the situation caused share prices on the world's largest stock market to go into a nose dive.

At the mid-day trading break, the closely watched Nikkei stock index had fallen 6 percent, or 1,836.07 points, to 28,971.12.

If that loss holds, or increases, the decline would be the second worst in the Tokyo Stock Exchange's history, after the 14.9 percent plunge in October 1987.

But it only continued the market's recent severe tumble, which has been set off by the weakening yen and a steep rise in Japanese interest rates.

The enormous imbalance of selling pressure was so intense Thursday morning that most stocks did not even open for trading, and the stock-index futures market closed almost as soon as it opened because it had already reached its daily limit.

The seizing up of the market contributed to the sense of despair sweeping securities professionals.

Billionaires prevail in ballot battle

Bass brothers (left to right) Sid, Robert and Ed with unpictured brother Lee were victors in a multi-million dollar dispute with fellow billionaire Philip Anschutz.

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — A failed ballot-box bid to force construction of a $10 million manure treatment plant in a battle of tycoons over a huge hog farm was a vicious attack based on vengeance, a farm official says.

"If it had been an environmental fight, I could have felt better," Bill Haw, president of the billionaire Bass brothers' National Farms Inc., said Tuesday after voters overwhelmingly defeated the proposal.

"I'm glad we beat them bad, and I just hope they don't dream up something else to subject the citizens of Weld County to," Haw said.

Weld County voters rejected a county ordinance, 14,706-6,334, in the countywide election that pitted the four Fort Worth, Texas, brothers — Robert, 41, Ed, 44, Lee, 33, and Sid, 47 — against Denver oil and railroad magnate Philip Anschutz, who owns a 32,000-acre private hunting preserve downstream from the hog plant.

Haw claimed the election was a vendetta by Anschutz, who was

Court order threatens S&L bailout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is moving swiftly to appeal a judge's order that threatens a costly delay in the president's savings and loan bailout.

U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth barred the Treasury Department's Office of Thrift Supervision on Wednesday from seizing Olympic Savings and Loan Association of Berwyn, Ill.

Lamberth said thrift office director Salvatore R. Martoche and his predecessor, M. Danny Wall, were unconstitutionally appointed. He said the government may not seize the suburban Chicago thrift until a new director is nominated by President Bush and confirmed by the Senate.

The judge rejected a last-minute plea from government attorneys to stay his order. They said they would ask the U.S. Court of Appeals to overturn it.

"Briefs will be filed (today) and we'll request an expedited hearing," said Assistant Treasury Secretary Roger Bolton.

Pending the appeal, Gene Katz, the thrift office's top attorney, vowed agency officials "will continue to fulfill our mandate as the regulator and supervisor of the thrift industry."

However he conceded the ruling "makes it more difficult for us to carry out our mandate."

"I think it's an absolute catastrophe," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a member of the House Banking Committee. "At the very least, it's paralysis and a million lawsuits."

Lamberth stressed that his order applies only to Olympic Savings. But his opinion acknowledged: "This may lead to a great deal of litigation and place (the thrift office's) operations in some confusion."

The decision could slow Bush's bailout by giving an estimated 200 other ailing thrifts the grounds to request a similar injunction. Regulators had not moved to take over Olympic, but the thrift believed it was in imminent danger of seizure.

Olympic contended, and Lamberth agreed, that Wall was improperly appointed when Congress dismantled his agency, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and transferred many of its duties to the new thrift office.

As part of a political deal to appease senators who sought to protect Wall from a nasty confirmation battle, the S&L law automatically gave Wall the thrift office job.

Martoche, because he had been confirmed by the Senate as an assistant secretary of the Treasury, normally could succeed an outgoing thrift office director on an acting basis. However, in this case he cannot because he succeeds someone who never legally held the job, the judge said.

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, a member of the banking committee who had fought to oust Wall, called the ruling "embarrassing to Congress and costly to the taxpayer."

The ruling also calls into question, but not as strongly, the takeover of 137 thrifts, with $97 billion in assets, seized since last Aug. 9, when Bush signed the bailout law.

JAMES HUMPHREYS, M.D.

Advanced technology boosts health care expenses in U.S.

There is no free lunch. There is no free health care, either.

Recently one of the local television stations aired a story about a health clinic in Midland which supposedly solicited patients by telephone with the promise of a free consultation. According to the story, some who accepted the offer later received correspondence from their health insurers regarding charges for diagnostic testing. At least one of the patients also expressed uncertainty as to what kind of "doctor" had seen her.

Humphreys

Medical care in the United States is some of the best in the world. It also is some of the most expensive, partly because of the level of technology employed in diagnosis and treatment. It is the expense (and sometimes the hazard) of this technology which requires that it be used judiciously.

Unfortunately, most patients have insufficient knowledge of medical disgnosis and treatment to decide what care is appropriate and what is not. The payment system (third party insurance) also keeps patients relatively disconnected from the true cost of medical care, so they cannot decide appropriateness on that basis either.

If one attempts to separate a medical care encounter into its components, it becomes apparent that some components are more profitable for the provider than others. Diagnostic testing, some medications, and some surgery usually are profitable. Physician visits, some medications, and prolonged hospital stays often are not. Nevertheless, as many components must be included as necessary for a favorable outcome, whether they be profitable or not.

The technologies available for diagnostic testing tempt medical providers to become overly reliant on them, even if the provider does not gain monetarily from interpreting the test, owning the testing equipment, or both. Such reliance can add greatly to the cost of medical care without producing a corresponding benefit for the patient.

Other factors besides the ready availability of expensive diagnostic tests contribute to the expense of health care. One is the growing tendency for patients to frequent hospital emergency rooms and minor emergency centers for routine care instead of establishing a relationship with a physician. Thus the potential efficiency of having health care managed by a single physician is sacrificed for personal convenience.

Another factor is the genuine threat of liability actions against physicians and other providers of health services. A physician seeing a patient in a high risk situation — one of which is as a new patient — may order more tests than is necessary for documentation purposes. This practice alone may add 25 percent or more to the cost of health care services.

Those who pay for health services cannot be expected to tolerate the already high and increasing costs indefinitely. Patients can act in responsible ways to help control those costs. If they do not, those who pay may shift more of the cost to the patient, select providers on the basis of efficiency or restrict access to some services.

What specifically can one do to receive quality health cares at a reasonable price?

Here are a few suggestions:

■ Establish a long-term relationship with a primary care physician and allow him or her to manage health care, which is what he or she is trained to do. This physician should know when to treat, when to refer for consultation (and to whom), and what diagnostic tests to order;

■ Select a physician appropriate for the need. Consider level of training, specialty board certification, hospital privileges, and comments from acquaintances who have been to the physician. Read the certificates on the wall — there should be some. Find out if this physician can care for you if you need to be hospitalized;

■ Be willing to ask as many questions as necessary to understand proposed diagnostic tests and treatment. Do not hesitate to ask for a second opinion regarding suggested surgery — some insurance coverage mandates second opinions;

■ Consult the physician first, if possible, before seeking treatment after hours in the hospital emergency room or a minor emergency center. If such a visit is necessary at all, the physician can specify diagnosis and/or treatment so that the time involved and the expense is lessened considerably; and

■ Be wary of the deal that is "too good to be true" in health care, as in any other business offering. Constraints on advertising by physicians, hospitals and other providers have all but disappeared.

Undoubtedly we will continue to experience expensive health care in this country for the foreseeable future. Quality medical care still can be obtained at a reasonable price, however. One of the best ways to accomplish that is to establish a mutually beneficial relationship with a primary care physician.

New drug treatment, surgery studied for Parkinson's patients

Associated Press

Promising treatments in the form of a new drug and a surgical procedure are on the horizon for the nearly 500,000 Americans who have Parkinson's disease.

"Preliminary results of an ongoing nationwide study show that the drug, deprenyl, can delay the onset of disability associated with the disease," said Dr. Govindan Gopinathan, a neurologist at New York University Medical Center.

The study focuses on people with early, untreated Parkinson's disease. There are about 10,000 new cases of Parkinson's each year in the United States, most in people over the age of 60.

Symptoms include tremor, difficulty walking and speaking, and muscular rigidity. In later stages, memory and thought processes may become impaired.

"Deprenyl appears to be the first drug capable of altering the progression of a degenerative neurological disease," Gopinathan said.

Parkinson's disease is related to a deficiency of dopamine, a brain chemical that helps transmit impulses from one nerve cell to another. As the brain cells that produce dopamine gradually die as people age, the remaining cells produce more dopamine to compensate.

In people with Parkinson's, the byproducts of dopamine manufacture are toxic to dopamine-producing cells. This results in further destruction of these cells, aggravating the Parkinson's symptoms.

Deprenyl, also known as selegiline, is thought to protect dopamine-producing cells from the toxic effect, which is expected to slow the disease's progress. Further studies are ongoing.

The standard treatment for Parkinson's is levodopa (L-dopa), which is used by the cells to make dopamine. Patients usually respond to it for three to five years. Deprenyl appears to postpone the need for levadopa treatment by several months.

Deprenyl appears to be generally well tolerated, Gopinathan said. At high doses, levodopa and other drugs, called dopamine agonists used to treat Parkinson's can ha undesirable side effects.

Heimlich says battle raging over use of his maneuver for drowning victims

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The inventor of the Heimlich maneuver to rescue choking victims said there now is a battle over acceptance of the technique to save drowning victims.

"You have to realize if you do something original and creative, whatever the field — art, music, medicine — you will be attacked," said Dr. Harry Heimlich.

He made the remarks before a speech Monday to the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

Heimlich also recounted a 10-year struggle with agencies such as the American Red Cross and the American Heart Association over the effectiveness of his technique in aiding choking victims.

That struggle is being repeated with drowning victims, said Heimlich, a professor at Xavier University and president of the non-profit Heimlich Institute in Cincinnati.

Heimlich said he has received reports for 15 years from fire chiefs, emergency medical service technicians, life guards and other rescue workers who say drowning victims who did not respond to mouth-to-mouth resuscitation were helped by the Heimlich maneuver.

"All of them said the water gushed out and the person recovered," he said.

The Heimlich maneuver calls for holding the victim up in a standing position from behind, with one fist against the victim's waist area, keeping the thumb inside. The other hand is held over the fist and quickly thrust hard, in and up, above the belt line.

CLICK and CLACK TALK CARS

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

A PROPOSED CAR FOR COLLEGE FRESHMAN

Dear Tom and Ray:

I am a college freshman who commutes about 30 minutes each way. I need a dependable, automatic, small, easy-to-drive car that can carry all my junk! Sounds like a dream, huh? I also need it to be fairly reasonable in price. Right now, I'm driving a '78 Pontiac Grand Am which, needless to say, will soon need to be retired. Please suggest a car for me. Also, I really love your column. Either of you married? — Julie TOM: First things first. You leave out a crucial piece of information, Julie. You don't tell us whether or not daddy is helping with this purchase.

RAY: If he is, we suggest you look at the Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer — both of which will be brand new this spring. They were jointly engineered with Mazda and share much of their technology with the Mazda 323 Protege. You might also look at the Geo Prizm — which is sort of a Toyota Corolla but with sillier commercials.

TOM: In the Small/Reliable category, the Honda Civic has a lot of devotees. We've never found that car particularly comfortable — although remember, you're talking to guys whose tastes gravitate toward Imperial Star Cruisers and lizard lounge chairs.

RAY: If daddy's a cheapskate like my brother, and all you've got is a few thousand dollars in savings, we suggest you keep your '78 Grand Am. You're probably better off spending a thousand dollars to fix up your car than spending $3,000 to buy someone else's unknown troubles. Unless it's literally falling apart, fix the Grand Am and save your money until you can afford a real car.

TOM: As for your last question, my brother and I have to assume that anyone who drives a '78 Pontiac probably can't support us in the lavish style to which we would like to become accustomed. So write again when you get out of law school, Julie.

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 1983 Honda Accord with an overheating problem. I was on my way back from Las Vegas. It was 110 degrees in the shade. I was heading up a 10-mile-long hill into a strong head wind, and the car overheated. Since then, I have had a new head gasket, new thermostat and new water pump. I've even had the radiator recored, and it still heats up after about six miles of driving. Do you have any idea how to correct the problem? — Albert

RAY: Start by taking the car back to the shop that replaced your head gasket. If you had severe overheating, you may have done more than just blow a gasket. You may have warped or cracked the cylinder head itself. Ask them if they checked the head for flatness. If it was warped, they should have milled it until it was flat again.

TOM: Also ask if they "dye checked" the head for cracks. If the head is cracked, it needs to be replaced. If they didn't investigate both of these possibilities, suggest they do it now at their expense. You'll have to pay for the head if you need a new one, but you shouldn't have to pay for the labor again.

RAY: If they did check the head, you've probably got a cracked block. In that case, drive back to Las Vegas and stay there until you win enough money to buy a new engine.

PART-TIME $$$$$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a part time job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW! CONTACT:

Man let out of prison early; arrested in slaying of three

How prison policies slash years off criminals' terms

It started with reports on crime. And the high incidence of parolee crime in Michigan. And ended by placing the blame for much of that crime on prison officials.

Officials who, in an effort to ease prison overcrowding, were themselves breaking the law.

It aroused public outrage and forced the state to make changes in the system.

Changes that wouldn't have occurred if a few reporters at a Detroit newspaper hadn't been looking for a story.

Parolees returning to cells; state admits release errors
