THOUSANDS IN HOT SPRINGS FOR CEREMONY

Robinson Defends Party Stand On Dry Issue Farm Relief

RASKOB PRESIDES

Giant Radio Hookup Is Used in Broadcast Over Nation

By RALPH H. TURNER

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 30. (AP)—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, accepting the Democratic nomination for vice president in a speech before thousands of his fellow citizens, who had accorded him the greatest celebration in the history of the state, defended the prohibition modification stand of Gov. Alfred E. Smith tonight, and attacked the agricultural policy of the Republicans, promising a full measure of relief by the Democratic party. He said Herbert Hoover was responsible for the Republican failure to give farm relief.

Robinson's remarks on prohibition were considered especially significant, as the senator, a dry himself, and speaking in a dry state, defended the campaign attitude the Democrats will assume in appealing to dry voters, especially in the south.

The senator pointed out that Smith had pledged to enforce the law and added: "Can it be said that because Governor Smith believes that without returning to the old evils of the saloon, temperance and respect for law can be promoted through changes in the existing system, he is a nullificationist and an enemy of the constitution?

"Such arguments impeach the intelligence of their authors."

He pointed out that only modifications which meet with public approval were possible, no matter who was president.

Robinson began his speech with a discussion of farm relief, which he described as "perhaps the most important issue" in the campaign. He charged that Herbert Hoover, "is perhaps more directly responsible for the failure of farm relief legislation during the eight years referred to than any other single political leader."

Hoover's latest utterance on the subject marked no material advance, he said.

Two Other Topics

Robinson discussed only two other subjects, the merchant marine and political corruption. He said that while the Democratic party did not favor government ownership and operation of ships as a permanent policy, it should be continued until the ships could be transferred satisfactorily to private operation. He condemned political

'Bad Boy' Mencken Losing His Punch, Claims Kiwanian

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 30. (UP)—H. L. Mencken, editor and civic club critic, is losing his "kick" for the American public while civic clubs trip gayly on, O. Samuel Cummings, Kansas City, president of Kiwanis International, said here today in an interview.

"The American public, out of curiosity, will follow a man like that for a while and then get tired of it," Kiwanian Cummings said. "Sinclair Lewis is the same way. Why, his own brother was president of a Kiwanis club last year.

"The secret of success for the service clubs is their service to humanity. Their service doesn't need justification. The clubs interpret the spirit of America, and that is the spirit of fair play.

"These critics are not sincere. Mencken personally is a fine fellow. It was profitable to write as he did," Cummings said.

President Cummings, here on a tour of the Southwest, said he was convinced religion was the big issue in the presidential campaign, with prohibition put forward on the side.

State May Finance All Road Work After Slash in Gas Tax Saturday

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30. (UP)—With Saturday's drop of one cent a gallon in the state gasoline tax, the problem of financing road construction in Texas bids fair to be the chief topic that will face the 41st legislature.

The return from a three-cent to a two-cent tax on gasoline cuts off approximately $8,000,000 annual revenue. One fourth of this tax, however, goes to public schools. Highway funds are reduced $4,500,000.

The tax is levied as an occupation tax on wholesale dealers in gasoline. They say that they pass it on to the consumer. Prices are posted with the tax separate. Whether tomorrow's reduction is looked upon as a loss of revenue to the state or a saving to the gasoline user, the result upon highway funds are the same.

Proposals to raise the tax again—perhaps as high as four cents—are being made by some legislators. Even this, Chairman R. S. Sterling of the highway commission believes would not meet the state's road needs.

The method of financing road building in Texas differs from that in most states. It is done here by combined action of the state, its counties and the federal government. The federal road bureau does not recognize the counties, dealing only with the state. The state, however, gets the county to supply a share of the funds before making its agreement with federal officials.

Under this system counties that would and could vote road bonds got road construction. Others went without. The result is that numerous unpaved gaps are left in highways that are main arteries of traffic.

An attempt to remedy this condition was made at the last session of the legislature. Counties com-

BOLTERS TO CLASH

Wichita County Anti-Als May Fight For Seats At Convention

DALLAS, Aug. 30. (AP)—Discussion at Democratic state headquarters today of persons for the permanent chairmanship of the state convention here Sept. 11, centered about four prominent party leaders. Those frequently mentioned were: W. A. Tarver of Corsicana, Myron Blalock of Marshall, Wright Morrow of Houston, and C. I. Francis of Wichita Falls.

Governor Moody is expected in Dallas early next week and until he has conferred with leaders at headquarters here, no definite program will be decided on, it was indicated.

The fight of anti-Smith delegations for place in the convention likely will occur the day before the convention at the meeting of the state executive committee. The committee, of which D. W. Wilcox of Georgetown, is chairman, is charged with making up the temporary roll of the convention, and before it are expected to clash the Smith and "regular" delegations chosen from Dallas, Harris, Tarrant and Palo Pinto counties, and possibly Wichita county. Two courses of procedure are open to the committee: It may seat either of the contesting groups, or it may seat neither and send the contests to the convention.

Regulary in Majority

The personnel of the state committee is overwhelmingly pro-Smith or regular, W. A. Thomas, Democratic campaign manager pointed out, and the Smith delegations from contested counties may be seated without much ado.

It is claimed at headquarters that "regulars" will hold a big majority in the convention, regardless whether anti-Smith delegations are seated at Beaumont, the anti-Smith vote reached a maximum of 205, but it is said to have declined in strength, and leaders believe it will not reach 100 in the forthcoming meeting. Should the "regulars" be seated the anti-Smith group would lose 88 votes from Dallas county, 22 from Harris, and 17 from Tarrant. The 13 Travis county and eight Smith county delegates, anti-Smith at Beaumont, have changed to the nominee, it is claimed.

PRINCIPALS IN NEW YORK BOOTLEG RING HELD

Dry Agents Raid Main Center of Liquor Supply for Night Clubs and Residents of Park and Fifth Avenues

NEW YORK, Aug. 30. (US)—With a raid on room 43, No. 138 West 48th street, today, special prohibition agents announced they had seized a main center of New York's bootleg supply. Eight prisoners were taken. Five were described as salesmen and three as principals in a liquor selling organization.

According to William J. Calhoun, head of the prohibition undercover forces, the West 45th street office was one of the selling outlets organized to dispose of vast liquor caches in Florida.

Intensive solicitations of persons listed in the social register and in the directory of directors was undertaken through the West 48th street office and two other branches.

The West 45th street office had also been used as a clearing house, Calhoun declared, receiving orders from night clubs, patrons along Park and Fifth avenues and other high class residential centers and office buildings.

From the premises, Calhoun said, natty looking messengers made delivery in small packages, containing benedictine, imported cognac, Scotch, gin and wines of all grades, from claret to champagne.

Philip A. Gilstein, described as a real estate and insurance broker of No. 2450 Grand Concourse, the Bronx, was named as leader of the selling organization. He was held in $7,500 bail by United States Commissioner O'Neil on charges of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act.

Nat Galpers, of No. 1898 Harrison avenue, the Bronx, and John Schwartzberg, of No. 1518 Walton avenue, the Bronx, seconds in command, were held in $5,000 bail each.

The alleged salesmen were held in $3,500 bail each.

JURY INDICTS TWO OFFICERS

Twelve Others Billed In Chicago Terrorism

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. (UP)—Declaring that evidence presented showed the Chicago police department was "rotten to the core," the special election grand jury investigating charges of fraud, intimidations and violence in the April primary, returned its report today naming 14 persons in true bills.

Those indicted, including two policemen and two court bailiffs, were charged with "conspiracy to obstruct personal liberty."

The special grand jury was convened August 10 with instructions to investigate elections dating back to April 5, 1927. The murder of "Diamond Joe" Esposito during the recent primary campaign and that of Octavius C. Granady on election day, were the chief incidents to occupy the attention of the grand jury. Both were candidates for ward committeemen.

Fraud Alleged

In its report the grand jury announced today it had questioned 24 witnesses, including bankers, members of the police force and politicians.

"From the testimony heard and evidence presented," the report tated, "the utter regard for the fulfillment of their duties by the police department is appalling, and there is no question in the minds of the members of the jury the police department is rotten to the core."

The report urged that corrective measures in the police department be taken immediately and suggested a revision of the election laws as a means of curbing vice.

Joseph Slattery and Edward Curran were the policemen indicted; Morris Krakow and Samuel Meyers were the court bailiffs named in true bills.

Deneen's House Bombed

The April primary election campaign filled with bombings, shootings and intimidations, brought a demand for the investigation which closed its first phase today. The homes of Senator Charles S. Deneen and Judge John A. Swanson, leaders in the Deneen-Emmerson Republican faction, were among those bombed.

Kidnapings, sluggings and shootings including the murder of Granady, occurred on election day and charges of crime and fraud were heard on all sides following the counting of ballots. The special grand jury was summoned as a result.

Border Prosecutor Makes Claim After Threat To Move Consulate

LAREDO, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—The recently assassinated president-elect of Mexico, Gen. Alvaro Obregon, and President Plutarco Elias Calles were accused of implication in the assassination of two Mexican army officers here in 1922 by John A. Valls, district attorney, in his reply to diplomatic representations from Washington growing out of the Mexican government's threat to remove the consulate from Laredo.

Mancha Macias, consulate attache, recently was arrested as he walked near a church after he was alleged to have remarked that a Mexican refugee then addressing a large audience in the edifice "will not speak again." Taken before Mr. Valls, Macias declared he was abused. From the report to Mexico City grew a threat that the Mexican consul here would be removed, a step which would have prevented the immense import and export business between the two countries being continued through this port of entry.

Has Evidence

"With reference to your request that I set forth concisely my reasons for refusing admittance to my office of the representatives of the present government of Mexico and my insistence in declining to cultivate friendly relations with them, I have the honor to reply as follows," Mr. Valls wrote.

"There is in my possession evidence conecting Alvaro Obregon and Plutarco Elias Calles with the murder of Gen. Lucio Blanco and Col Aurelio Martinez committed in this city on the seventh day of June, 1922. I have proof that Obregon and Calles, acting together with other Mexican officials, entered into a conspiracy to kidnap and murder the aforesaid Gen. Lucio Blanco and Col. Aurelio Martinez. On the same occasion and at the same times, Col. Ramon Garcia, the chief of the Mexican secret services, was also murdered and in his pockets were found the keys to the handcuffs that linked the dead bodies of Lucio Blanco and Aurelio Martinez."

Valls said he would not give a narrative of the evidence he possessed, but asserted since the slayings Obregon and Calles "each sed-

Farm Issue Overshadows Prohibition, Says Raskob After Tour of West

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 30. (UP)—The plight of the American farmer is the most important problem of the campaign, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, declared here today.

In connection with his statement concerning his realization of the seriousness of the farm situation, learned through his trips in the west, Raskob denied that Gov. Alfred E. Smith had said he was opposed to the equalization fee as embodied in the McNary-Haugen bill. Smith had not taken a position one way or the other on the fee, Raskob said.

"Governor Smith believes that the farmers are entitled to legislation that will put them on an equality with industry," Raskob said. "Farm relief is often understood to mean giving the farmers something as if they were paupers, but the farmers do not regard themselves as paupers and only ask an equal opportunity with industry."

Confidence was expressed by Raskob in the Democrats' ability to devise machinery enabling the farmer to market his surplus in a manner whereby the losses caused by the surpluses would be assessed against the crop that benefited from the price adjustments.

"A plan for placing agriculture on an equality with other industries would be economically sound," Raskob said. "It would be similar to the practice in industry in which a manufacturer had a surplus which he would dispose of either by export or safeguarded himself against loss by charge for his product in the home market sufficient to compensate him for the stocks on hand that he was unable to sell."

Judging from reports given him in the West, prohibition is playing a comparatively small part in the campaign, he said. Western leaders, however, discussed to great length the farm question.

THE WICHITA FALLS RECORD NEWS AND THE DAILY TIMES

FILIPINO'S ARE SURE OF ISSUE

Plea for Independence Is Not Dead, Say Leaders

Editor's Note: Herewith is the second of a series of three stories which the United Press is presenting on the Filipino independence question.

By RANDALL GOULD
United Press Staff Correspondent

MANILA, Aug. 30. (UP)—Convinced that the issue of "Filipino independence" is not dead, native leaders look to the American public's attitude as an indication of their chances for a successful freedom campaign.

Professor Charlos P. Romulo, coach of the Filipino debaters, who toured the United States, said American correspondents had misrepresented the Filipinos. That the American press had given prominence to news against the Filipinos while "hushing up" news favorable to them. That there is little American interest in the problem and that the American press treats the Philippine question from a purely political or economic viewpoint, ignoring the moral phase.

To a large degree it is conceded that American reports have been colored by an American viewpoint, as contrasted with a Filipino viewpoint or even a far eastern attitude. But the Filipinos themselves have been able propagandists, while the American public has usually been sympathetic—if not intensely interested—in the island problems.

The Philippines are remote and small—and the general lack of interest in their affairs has resulted in the most bizarre tales from here receiving the widest publicity.

If the moral phase has been obscured in favor of political and economic phases of the situation, it probably has been due to an understandable desire for concrete facts.

Many observers here see the best hope for independence in the continued appearance of the Philippines in the political and economic life of the United States itself. When an attempt is made to restrict duty-free importation of Philippine sugar into the United States, the American public becomes interested.

When Governor-General H. L. Stimson, in effect, proffers a "swap" of tact in political administration in return for equal consideration in economic development, that, too, puts the islands in the American newspapers. Senate President Quezon is widely quoted and the independence subject is never neglected.

Upon the whole the islands are getting more and more intelligent consideration—and that is what proponents of independence desire.

BUS DIRECTOR ASSUMES POST

H. L. Smith to Fill New State Office

Special to The Record News

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—Herbert L. Smith of Mount Pleasant, recently named by the railroad commission as assistant state motor bus director, today assumed his duties. Mr. Smith will be aide to Mark Marshall, motor bus director.

This addition to the motor bus division of the railroad commission was made necessary, it was said, because of the phenomenal growth of the motor bus industry in Texas.

In the little more than a year which has passed since the Beck motor bus bill became a law, and the motor bus industry was placed under the supervision of the commission, the business has grown to the point where over 25,000 miles of lines are being operated, almost 50 per cent greater mileage than the railways of Texas.

TRAVIS VOTE TO FAVOR AL

Herb Won't Get 3000 Votes, Is Prediction

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—Travis county will not give Herbert Hoover more than 3,000 votes in the general election of November, Mrs. J. M. Loving, member of the county executive committee, predicted here today before leaving for Hot Springs, Ark., where she will attend notification ceremonies for Senator Robinson Thursday.

About 13,000 voters are registered in the county, she said.

Mrs. Loving based her prediction of the Hoover vote on the fact that Thomas B. Love received 1,691 votes in this county in the primary of last Saturday in spite of the fact that his candidacy had been withdrawn, and that information published in the newspapers circulating here.

She believes this vote for Love was based on his position as a boiler of the Smith candidacy, and that it reveals a tolerably strong sentiment in Travis county against the New York governor.

Valley Highways Are Improving

HOUSTON, Aug. 30. (AP)—The Rio Grande valley has made tremendous progress in highway construction since 1920, according to Charles R. Haile, first assistant Harris county engineer, who has returned from a vacation tour of the valley.

"A big program of highway construction was launched in the valley counties several years ago," he said, "and splendid results have been obtained through the investment of several millions of dollars. The state highways have been given first attention and virtually all of the designated roads have been paved."

Mr. Haile said that the valley now has a hard surfaced road into San Antonio, with the exception of about 16 miles and that the unpaved gap between Houston and the valley is 90 miles. Present plans call for the closing of this gap.

Display to Show Development of Business

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—A monster display, covering some 10,000 square feet of floor space, and revealing the developments in the motor bus business during the past two or three years, is being planned by members of the Texas Bus Owners' association, for the Dallas State fair.

Guy Shields of Austin, president of the association, announced today that the officers and directors of the group would met in Fort Worth and make final plans for the exhibit.

The evolution of the big passenger motor buses from the small machines used a short time ago, to the palatial cars now on the highways; the improvement in station facilities, and so on, will all be shown, he said.

Rural Schools To Open Monday

School bells will be ringing over Wichita county next Monday morning as sight of the rural schools begin fall session, bringing the number of schools in operation to 10, according to announcement made by Burl Bryant, county school superintendent, Thursday.

The Allendale and County Line schools have been in session since late July, with the intention of closing for several weeks during the cotton picking season. Nine other schools probably will not open until Sept. 10.

The rural school teachers will hold their institute this year at Iowa Park, Friday and Saturday of next week, Mr. Bryant said.

Names of the schools which will open Monday were not available Thursday afternoon.

Exasperated Cop Discovers Brew Made of Grapefruit

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—Another alcoholic concoction has appeared to make life more miserable for the harrassed federal prohibition agents here.

Victor Buthod, deputy administrator at Houston, looked over the first bottle of the new potion, seized by Agent McDonald near Brownsville.

"Grapefruit Wine!" he moaned. "I guess the next will be cotton gin!"

WORK STARTED ON NEW ROAD

Electra C-C Sponsors New Project

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Aug. 30.—Work was begun this week on the grading of the Greyback Crossing road through the Waggoner pasture. The project is being sponsored by the Electra Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture, and expense of preliminary survey, etc., has been raised by donation from Electra business men.

The commissioner's court of Wilbarger county agreed to build the road through the pasture provided the arrangement for a permanent right of way could be made. Roland Cobb, commissioner of the Harrold precinct, is directing the work. Concrete culverts will be built and the Craig bridge across Beaver creek will be re-inforced in preparation for the heavy oilfield traffic which will be diverted in that direction.

The new road will connect with existing highways from Red Pasture gate southeast to Craig bridge, thence by a circuitous route to block 24. It will connect with the Vernon-Rock Crossing road and will thus give Electra a direct connection of good roads to that popular section of the country.

Texas Stock Exchange To Aid Cattlemen

OZONA, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—Direct trading with packing houses by West Texas cattlemen will be encouraged through the Crockett County Livestock exchange, an unchartered organization without capital stock, which recently was established here.

The organization, the first of its kind in the sheep and cattle raising area of the state, will furnish lists of sheep and cattle for sale to buyers in the feeder belt and also will supply daily market reports by telephone and radio to ranchers.

Included in the equipment at the livestock exchange headquarters are a library and lounging room where livestock and agricultural periodicals have been provided.

Paul Perner, president, and T. A. Kincaid, vice president, were chosen as leaders of the organization which now has a membership of 75 ranchmen.

15 Counties to Enter South Texas Fair

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—Fifteen counties of East Texas have already advised County Agent J. F. Combs that they will send exhibitions to the South Texas State fair November 8-15. Prizes for farm exhibits range from $250 for first price, to $50 for the lowest for county exhibits.

BLAZING GAS WELL FADING

Crane County Fire About Controlled

CRANE CITY, Texas, Aug. 30. (UP)—West Texas' greatest night spectacle, the sight by night of the hundreds of gas flares in the Crane county oil field, is fading. No longer do the flares jerk high in the air and then recede, only to repeat the process, for the great volume of the gas seems to have been dissipated.

The workmen regard this with delight, for the gas in the Crane county field has taken its toll of men and beasts, and men who did know that they could run have made rapid progress through the deep sand when the gas, coming in a purple haze out of a new well, being brought in, caused them to run for life.

The Crane county gas is an epic among oilfield workers. This city is located more than two miles from the main pool, where a mile long row of storage tanks can be seen. Workers in the gas-laden field wear gas masks when pumping or when gauging tanks.

Italian Sub Raised Quicker Than S-4

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30. (UP)—The Italians were able to raise the sunken submarine F-14 within 24 hours because of the light weight of the vessel, Commander Edward Ellsberg, submarine expert, explained to Representative Celler, New York Democrat, today, in answer to an inquiry comparing the F-14 with the United States submarine S-4, which took weeks to raise.

The Italian submarine was only one-third of the weight of the S-4, Ellsberg said, and rescuers were able to use floating cranes.

Germany to Resume Trade With Russians

BERLIN, Aug. 30. (UP)—Sensational reports regarding Franco-German relations and the foreign office's announcement that Germany is ready to resume trade relations with the Soviet union, indicated today that the republic's diplomatic isolation has been pierced by Foreign Minister Gustave Stresemann.

A foreign office note announced the government's readiness to resume trade negotiations which were discontinued because of the arrest of Germans in Russia on charges of sabotage.

Italian Press Official Placed Under Arrest

ROME, Aug. 30. (UP)—Cesare Rossi, former chief of the Italian press office, and a prominent figure in the early stages of Mussolini's regime, has been arrested "somewhere in Italy," it was announced here today. He was a fugitive, hiding in France, until recently.

Rossi was expelled from Fascism because he was implicated in the Matteotti affair and because he wrote a "moral indictment" of Benito Mussolini.

In some European countries nut and fruit trees along the roads are sources of material profit.

NATIONS RUSH TO JOIN PACT

Kellogg Treaty Gains World Scope

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30. (UP)—The rush to join in the multilateral anti-war treaty—a rush which is making world history in the greatest step yet made to outlaw war among men—is officially under way.

Since the treaty was signed at Paris Monday by 15 world powers, two nations have formally notified the United States of their acceptance of the pact; six others have informed the state department of their intention to adhere, and Paris reports tell of similar action by two others.

Peru and Liberia have formally accepted the Kellogg-Briand pact for renunciation of war. Costa Rica, the Dominican republic, Denmark, Bolivia, Cuba and Austria have informed the United States through their ambassadors that they will become parties, and dispatches from Paris announce Roumania and Jugoslavia have done likewise.

Gains World Scope

Thus the movement started by the idea of French Foreign Minister Briand, coached along and broadened by Secretary of State Kellogg and brought to a successful conclusion by plenipotentiaries representing the 15 nations who signed the treaty at Paris, is fast gaining the worldwide scope hoped for by the original signatories.

The suggestion of extending a general world invitation to other nations was first formally made by Great Britain in its note of acceptance of the American revised draft of the treaty.

France, as depository for the treaty by its signing in Paris, issued the world call. The action of Peru and Denmark in accepting and announcement of the eight others that they intend to accept, was taken here as strong indication that most of the nations of the world will fall in line.

Within the next 48 hours many additional formal acceptances or notifications to adhere are expected by the state department.

The state department, it was explained, has not received confirmation of Paris reports that Roumania and Jugoslavia have officially adhered to the treaty, but pointed out their notices may have been sent directly to Paris instead of to Washington.

Peru Hails Treaty

Peru, in its note of acceptance; hailed the treaty signing as "making a glorious stage in the history of humanity," which will be "for all time, a legitimate source of pride to the great nation of the United States."

In this history making race, a question has arisen as to which nation was first to subscribe to the treaty.

It is thought Peru's note was the first received, but officials are checking with the American embassy at Paris to ascertain whether Roumania's or Jugo-Slavia's notes ante-dated Peru's.

ALCOHOL WORTH MILLION BURNS

New Orleans Warehouse Destroyed by Fire

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 30. (AP)—Alcohol valued at more than $1,000,000 was destroyed by a fire which swept through the plant of the American Solvents and Chemical corporation here today.

Starting from an undetermined cause in the warehouse, the flames spread quickly to the main building and almost destroyed the four-story structure which covers a city block.

Frenchman Honored With American Medal

PARIS, Aug. 30. (UP)—American Ambassador Herrick today presented the American distinguished flying cross to Dieudonne Costes in the name of President Coolidge. The cross was for "courage and resourcefulness" in the Costes-Lebrix flight to the American continent. Joseph Lebrix will receive a similar decoration.

ALTUS FAIR TO OPEN SEPT. 13

$800 in Livestock Prizes to Be Awarded

Special to The Record News.

ALTUS, Okla., Aug. 30.—Jackson county offers larger prizes in livestock this year than have been given before in the history of the county. Approximately $800 will be distributed in premiums to livestock breeders alone who make winning entries in the fair. Large prizes are being offered the winners in draft teams, draft horses and for mules, Sept. 13, 14 and 15.

The largest showing which has been exhibited for several years is expected in the Jersey cattle division, judging from the outstanding county breeders who have declared that they have good shows to enter.

With the increase of raising of pure bred hogs in Jackson county, a better showing is expected than has been exhibited since 1920.

Due to the increase in Four-H club members in livestock, two extra classes are offered in that division.

Il Duce Responsible For Iron Exports, Claim

BEAUMONT, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—Premier Mussolini, already credited with many unusual things, now is said to be responsible for the port of Beaumont showing an increase in shipping. While other exports continue at about a normal rate, thousands of tons of scrap iron have been shipped to Italy for use in carrying out an industrial program inspired by Il Duce. Nearly 10,000 tons was exported during July alone.

New McCamey School Land Gift of Burleson

McCAMEY, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—When school opens September 3 it is estimated 1,000 pupils will attend the new $120,000 brick school building, erected on land donated by A. S. Burleson, former postmaster general of the United States.

Local citizens think this unusual for a town but two years old. The school, headed by R. V. Compton, will offer in addition to the regular curriculum a course in geology, manual training, home economics, and will present a football team for the approval of the fans.

Both were unconscious, apparently from gas fumes. They are thought to have started an exploration trip through the abandoned shaft.

OH, THESE WOMEN ! ! !

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 30. (US)—A lady had guests at dinner the other night, out in Denver. They were discussing the subject of men crying. All of the guests said that they never had seen a man really cry.

The canny little daughter of the house, ten years old, spoke up and said: "I have never seen my father cry but once, and that was at his wedding."

An English woman, 105, says that the young girls of today, with bare arms, low necks, short skirts and bobbed hair, are headed straight for the lower regions.

To hear old ladies talk you would think sin was something new, invented and practiced only by the modern woman.

Yet when women wore hairpins, a good many of them were found where they had no business to be. And men tripped and fell much more easily on long skirts than on the modern waist ruffle.

The pet abomination of wives is the snoring husband. These strange sleeping noises have headed many an irritated wife into a divorce court. Well, here is the remedy:

A prominent man thought of it, and he has followed his own perscription for years. Just before going to sleep he sticks a small strip of adhesive tape over his lips. This makes him breathe through the nose, and he doesn't utter a sound all night.

The only trick is to get them to do it.

A girl with a chiffon dress, sitting in her office yesterday, sewing a strip of tiny weights around the bottom of her skirt. It takes such a tiny wind to lift such a light skirt! You buy the weights by the yard.

The woman sewing the weights was 50 years old. There probably won't be any rush on the weight market.

Two women were chattering at luncheon, in a Fifth avenue tea room.

They were giving their private opinions of a man who was the husband of a mutual friend.

It seems the gentleman had an argument with his employer and quit his job. He explained to his wife that he had to quit. His pride demanded the resignation.

And the wife flew into a rage. Her friends were sympathizing with her. The reason was—she bought a beautiful fur coat and now she can't finish the payments on it.

And the ladies all figured that a husband had no right to any pride in a situation like this!

CHIC CHERIE

(Copyright, King Features Syn., Inc.)

Latest Fashions

Minus what? Minus tops. It can't possibly have escaped your notice that there's less and less material going into the tops of evening gowns. The dress that Dina is wearing (right) is an example. The bodice is cut low, back and front, and continues to be economical of material to below the belt. Then it simply ripples out in all kinds of flounces. Emily's frock has the extremely low back-decolletage that is quite the smartest thing and a skirt that droops in sections nearly to her ankles. The intervening sections, it's true, are up to her knees, but there's a good deal of cloth in the thing anyway. Cherie has just picked Ambrose, the Gilded Turtle, out of her jewel box.

Cherie's dress follows the same general lines. Cut low in the bodice and then perked out with three wide stiff flounces of tulle, drooping in back nearly to the floor, although they clear her knees in front. Ernest is returning Ambrose, who has just made a mad dash for Mud and Freedom and got as far as the front door before being caught.

In case of an extreme emergency such as a sudden chill, most of these evening gowns have little jackets. Cherie's is metal cloth and looks like a cardigan. Cherie's earrings and necklace are of carved crystal—very new. Cherie's attention is completely distracted by John Doe and John Doe is absorbed in Ambrose. Such a happy family!

Irate Wifey Should Be Careful In Talk About Hubby to Other Folks

A Wife's Disparging Remarks About Her Husband Have a Greater Effect on Her Listeners Than Any Other Criticism, and If Her Careless Words Are Broadcast They May Result in Grave Injury to Him.

The favorite indoor sport of a great many wives is criticising their husbands, and where two or three are gathered together it only too often becomes a vivisection party.

Mrs. A. pulls down the corners of her mouth and says: "I just told John the other night that if he didn't let this bootlegger stuff alone I was going to take the children and go back to mother." Mrs. B. sighs and says: "The older a man gets, the bigger fool he get, and why Tom can't see through the wiles of that blond stenographer of his, who makes eyes at him, is past me." Mrs. C. says: "Yes, of course, this gown was awfully expensive, but Sam always throws a fit over the bills, anyway, and I might just as well get what I want." Mrs. D. says: "Of course, I have to haunt the bargain counters; poor, dear Dick never seems to get along somehow."

Now these women are fond of their husbands, and would not intentionally harm them. They would be amazed if you accused them of disloyalty, and shocked if they were told that they were assassins who were stabbing the men they have married in the back. Yet that is precisely what they are doing, for without knowing it, they are ruining their husbands' reputations, which is a pretty high price to pay for working off a bit of a grudge, or for a draught of the morbid sympathy for which so many women have an inexhaustible craving.

It is a pity that women do not realize how completely the world takes a man at his wife's valuation. She literally writes his price tag. She can boom his stock, or depress it. She always puts across her propaganda, because we naturally feel that nobody can know her husband and be so well able to estimate his qualities as she is.

So, if a wife goes about complaining about her husband's drinking we set him down as a sot. If she is jealous of every woman that he speaks to, we rate him as a philanderer. If she is forever lamenting that her husband isn't a go-getter, we conclude that he is trifling and no account.

Very often this is not true. Frequently a wife's fault-finding is born of spleen, fanaticism or jealousy that makes her exaggerate a mole hill into a mountain. Very often it is just mere idle talk, but the result is as deadly as if it had been premeditated malice. Her broadcasting of her husband's weaknesses has branded him as a drunkard, a petticoat-chaser, an incompetent, a gambler, or whatnot, whether he actually is or not.

On the other hand, a wife is the most efficient of press agents, and if Mr. A. has the reputation in the community of being a perfectly wonderful doctor who makes the most marvelous cures, and Mr. B. for keeping the finest groceries in town, and if we take our children to Dr. C. to have their teeth straightened, and if Mr. D. is popularly regarded as a model of all the virtues, it is because their respective wives have sung their praises, in season and out of season. We know it is true because Mrs. A., B., C. and D. have told us so.

Furthermore, if a wife's criticism of her husband is so injurious to him outside of the home, it is even more destructive inside of it. Curiously enough, women seem to regard this as a harmless diversion, and many a wife spends most of the time when her husband is at home calling his attention to what a poor, weak, inefficient creature he is, and reminding him of the mistakes he has made.

Perhaps women consider this a chastening experience that is good for their husbands' souls. Anyway, they do it, and apparently it never occurs to them that the quickest way to break down a man's morale is to kill his faith in himself, and that once you get a man thoroughly discouraged, he is done for. His energies are paralyzed and he is incapable of making and further effort.

Yet there are wives who wet-blanket every plan their husbands make until they take every particle of starch out of them and they crumple before they are even tried out. There are wives who dismally croak failure until they take the heart out of their husbands and make their bones turn to water, on the eve of every battle, and wives who belittle their husbands' abilities, and who keep reminding them that they haven't the money or the talent to succeed as other men have.

Sometimes all that a man lacks to achieve success is his wife's belief in him. If she admires him, if she is always telling him how clever he is, how far-seeing, how energetic, and she stimulates him to do the best that is in him. If, when he meets with misfortune, she bucks him up and says, "Well, what of it? Everybody gets their bumps. They can't down a good man like you, and you will win out at last." It puts fresh courage into his soul and he does win out in the end.

Not long ago a man who had risen from humble beginnings to high power and place said that he owed all of his success to his wife. "I had to justify her belief in me," he said. "Many a time my own faith in myself faltered, but if hers did she never let me know it. When I grew discouraged, she poured fresh hope into me. She never ceased telling me that I would succeed. She would never admit that I made a mistake. She never questioned my judgment. She never even criticised anything that I did, and I just had to make good for anybody who believed in me like that.

"But I couldn't have done the things that I have done if she had weakened me by doubts and fears and dismal forebodings of failure. I couldn't have fought the difficulties outside of my home and discouragements at home. But, mainly I have succeeded because I had to be the sort of a man she thought I was."

This is a truth that wives may well lay to heart: As a wife thinks her husband is, he is. And what she tells the world about him, it believes. She writes his number.

FIRST COTTON AT FREDERICK

Negro Brings in Tillman County's First Bale

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 30.—First bales of cotton were brought to Frederick, Tipton and Grandfield this week. The one ginned at Frederick was raised by G. C. Buckner, on a farm belonging to J. L. Copeland, 10 miles southwest of Frederick. It was ginned at the Sam Mitchell establishment and the 1100-pound load turned out a 400-pound bale. Total premium given Buckner was $244.40. He was offered 17 cents a pound but did not sell.

After the bale was ginned it was compressed and then taken to the Tillman county fair where it is on exhibit at the Oklahoma Cotton Growers' association booth.

O. E. Goodwin residing six miles west of Tipton in Jackson county marketed the first bale in Tipton. It was ginned at the Tipton gin and was bought by E. V. Massey who paid 17 cents per pound. The cotton was snapped, the bale weighing 422 pounds. Business concerns of Tipton made up a premium of $50.

To Jesse James, colored, tenant on the Ray Gardiner farm of near Grandfield, goes the honor of marketing the first bale of cotton in Tillman county this season. It was brought to Grandfield Monday afternoon and ginned by the Farmers' Cooperative Gin company. It weighed 457 pounds and was purchased by the Farmers' Cooperative Gin company for 17½ cents a pound.

The first bale marketed in Tillman county last year was Aug. 12 when J. W. Thompson of near Wykoff's store brought a 1250-pound load of the fleecy staple to Frederick which was converted into a 420-pound bale at the S. D. Mitchell gin. It sold for 20 cents a pound and Thompson received a bonus of over $100 from the business men.

The first bale marketed in Frederick in 1926 was on Aug. 25.

Smith Has Exciting Experience With Bull

STATE FAIR GROUNDS, SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 30. (INS)—Gov. Al Smith and members of his party had an exciting experience with a prize bull on the fair grounds here today.

The presidential candidate had just emerged from the dairy building and photographers were arranging to take his picture standing beside the animal.

Suddenly and without warning the bull plunged into the air and started straight for the crowd which had gathered around Smith.

With the quickness of a football player, the governor jumped to one side, but two husky guards quickly subdued the animal.

Under 5,000,000 Bales For Texas Forecast

AUSTIN, Aug. 30. (AP)—George H. Terrell, commissioner of agriculture, today estimated the Texas cotton crop would be less than 5,000,000 bales.

Terrell said there had been considerable deterioration since his estimate of 5,026,208 bales, based on reports up to August 15, and the government's estimate of 5,137,000 bales, based on reports up to August 1.

"Deterioration caused by excessive drouth in some sections and boll worm and boll weevil damage in other section," Terrell said.

NEW BUILDING FOR OFFICES

New Senator to Ask for State Office Structure

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—Judge John W. Hornsby, nominated state senator for the Austin district, has pledged his support to the recommendations of the board of control for an appropriation next January to build a nine or ten-story state office building here, and for setting aside approximately $1,000,000 for reconstruction of the interior of the capitol building.

Travis county epresentatives in the house will also support this measure.

Fireproofing of the capitol building is advocated as a safety measure for the protection of invaluable public records. Much of the heavy plaster ceiling of the capitol is now propped up on timbers to prevent its falling. Sections have fallen out, endangering lives of persons in the capitol.

The 10-story office building is badly needed, officials have declared, to house growing departments, such as the highway department, and to remove the necessity for use of house and senate committee rooms by administrative departments. The four-story land office building has proven inadequate to meet the needs of the state, and space is now being rented by several departments in residence buildings near the capitol for the conduct of official business.

Senator Hornsby, succeeding A. E. Wood, finance committee chairman, is assured a place on the senate finance committee, and will thus be in a position to further the proposed state building and reconstruction program here.

COTTON BOOTH FAIR FEATURE

Association Exhibit Draws Frederick Crowds

FREDERICK, Okla., Aug. 30.—As usual the Oklahoma Cotton Growers association has an attractive booth at the Tillman county fair. Two farms are shown, the first where cotton is raised and marketed the old way and the other farm where the cotton is raised by an association member and marketed through that method. The old method shows what is called "country" damage, damage by cutting out a sample, profit paid a street buyer, toll paid a speculator, profit made by a cotton merchant and mill broker. This farmer lives in a small house and has few improvements.

The other lives in a two-story residence which is electrified. His cotton is shipped directly after being ginned to the big $5,000,000 warehouse at Houston, being compressed en route. At Houston it is classified and shipped abroad, bringing the maximum price.

W. L. Goudlock, a federal cotton classified of Houston, Texas, employed by the Oklahoma Cotton Growers' association, explains the various operations, which is simplified by means of charts. Two miniature electric railways which haul the tiny bales of cotton attract considerable interest. Goudlock gives lectures on cotton classification from 10 to 11 a. m. and 12:30 to 1 p. m. daily. W. L. Hutcheson, district director of the Oklahoma Cotton Growers' association, says he has been told that one year a local buyer picked up 100 bales of cotton in this city from samples taken from various bales. Nothing like this takes place under the system adopted by his association, he explained, as the place where the sample is cut out at Houston is carefully sewed up so that the bale is a perfect package before being shipped.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—It may be the heat. It may be that men are not alone in their attitude toward the prohibition laws. But the fact is that there has been an epidemic of birds losing their balance and falling down the chimneys.

The result of a fall down the chimney is anything but pleasant to the bird. To the housewife it is extremely annoying. To the house it is quite disastrous. But it has opened up a new market for the insurance broker.

To any one who hasn't had the experience—a bird flying into the living room through the fireplace may seem to be a romantic, interesting and harmless event. But those who have experienced the event don't want to experience it again. That's why we have bird insurance now.

Bird insurance originated in White Plains where there are many robins, and starlings and sparrows. It was Mrs. Cramer who started it. During one of the recent unbearably hot days Mrs. Cramer's afternoon nap was disturbed by a strange noise downstairs. Something fell and broke. Burglars! was the first thought that came to her mind. Timidly she stole down the stairs and peaked into the living room. Not a burglar at all, but a robin—flying frantically around the room, bouncing from the white ceiling to the cream walls, from the cretone curtains to the embroidered table covers, crashing against the original oil paintings and the Japanese vases trying to find a way out.

Now, ordinarily, a robin is a very pretty bird—a bird that you can like. It has a red breast and a brown back. It has a sweet song, too. But this robin had come through the fireplace. It had fallen down the chimney and it was covered with black sticky soot, soot that it deposited on the ceiling, walls, curtains, pictures and tablecloths. And there on the floor was Mr. Cramer's prize vase broken to pieces.

Mrs. Cramer got a broom. She opened the screen door. She chased the black robin out as fast as she could.

She found that it was not easy to remove the soot from the ceiling, walls, pictures, curtains and tablecloths. In despair she spoke to to her neighbors. Several of them had had the same experience, with the same damage to property. They held indignation meetings.

One of th eneighbors was an insurance broker. When he heard how prevalent was the property damage caused by visiting birds, he set his nimble brains working—as brokers will do.

"Why not insure houses against bird damage?" eh said.

And now he has a thriving new business. Specialist in bird insurance. His territory has expanded from White Plains to the whole of Westchester county. Others followed him.

And that's the way bird insurance began. The rates are based on the number of birds in the neighborhood, the number of trees around the house and the number of nests in the trees. If the bricks of your chimney are covered with English ivy the rates are very, very high.

Many peculiar businesses and methods of doing business come and go in Greenwich Village. One of the most popular of these is the team room. More often than not it isn't successful. The proprietor has a difficult time estimating just how many temperamental villagers are going to turn out on a one evening. Villagers seldom eat regularly at any given place, even when they are given to eating regularly at all. So the restaurant business is more or less of a gamble. Villagers are apt to flock to new places.

One Greenwich Village restaurant on Seventh avenue apparently has solved the problem, however. This restaurant, operated by an Italian, seldom has any stock on hand—at least very little. He runs an al a carte business, and you may order anything from a certain cut of meat to your favorite cigarettes, and be sure of getting it. That is, if you are willing to wait.

The proprietor keeps an errand boy, and his kitchen faces the street—Seventh avenue. If it's a fruit cocktail you want, or any particular kind of fruit, the errand boy merely dashes to one of the fruit stands, which are open until late in the evening. Even some of the butchers are open late, and there are any number of grocers in the vicinity open during the dinner hour.

"Name it and you can have it," seems to be the motto. The proprietor explains that he buys only in small quantities, and if you wish cocoanut cake, for instance, there are always the small packages to be had in the grocery stores for a nickel or a dime.

"It's impossible to satisfy everybody, but a fast errand boy and a good hot stove will do more to satisfy the largest number of people than any numbe rof table d'hote dinners, or any famous dishes. Particularly in hot weather, people want what they want when they want it."

COTTON LATE

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—Cotton in Travis county is three weeks late, Dane B. Burton Sr., census agent for this county, has reported. A total of 281 bales was ginned prior to Aug. 16, he said. For the same period last year the ginnings totaled 1,283 bales.

Health, and Accidents

MANY avoidable serious accidents are due to awkwardness or lack of alertness and agility, according to a bulletin of the Chicago health commissioner. The awkward individual who, because of weak muscles and stiff joints, needs both muscle development and training is not only subject to laughter when he stumbles over his own feet, but actually possesses insufficient grace and agility lto keep him out of danger.

Exercise is healthful, it seems, in more ways than one.

The Pursuit of Beauty

ONE of the greatest toilet goods counters in the world, in a New York department store, employs 50 clerks, and sells $3,000,000 worth of beauty accessories annually. Flapper, fading dowager and "nice" young man are, in order, the best customers.

With 1300 different shades, scents and brands of powder, 1200 kinds of perfume, 600 brands of cold cream and rouges of every shade in the rainbow and a few more added, with all these to pick from, the pursuit of beauty must be a grueling chase.

And, beholding some of the results of facial experimentation, it is to be doubted if the game is worth the candle.

Morrow a Great Discovery

THE wisdom of President Coolidge's appointment of Dwight W. Morrow as ambassador to Mexico was doubted by many at the time it was made. Morrow was a Wall street financier and it was feared his banking connections would tend to make trouble with our neighbor to the south.

Such has not been the case. Morrow has apparently forgotten that he ever had a penny in Wall street, and he has shown excellent sense and discretion and fairness in dealing with Mexico. The country has come to look upon him as a good friend.

Recently Morrow traveled about the country and his welcome everywhere was cordial and sincere. He has established good relations. Mr. Morrow, as an ambassador, has proved to be a great discovery.

Airport Investments

AS the argosies of the air increase in number and scope, more and more is being spent for adequate landing fields for the new traffic. In the recent Missouri primary election St. Louis voted a $2,000,000 bond issue for improvements at its flying field and Kansas City voted a million for the same purpose.

These two Missouri cities and Chicago are competing for a place of pre-eminence in the middle west. The idea is extending to the smaller towns where thousands of dollars are being spent for lights and emergency landing fields. Detroit and Cleveland have been racing neck and neck to have "the finest airports in America." As the value of air transport begins to be made clearer, the spending of money for adequate facilities is contagious.

Our Lesson in Forests

AN OUTSTANDING example of the value of conservation is shown today in the national forests of the United States. And but for the act of 1891, granting the president the right to set aside such forests, the threatened exhaustion of our lumber supply would be almost at hand.

There are now more than 300,000 square miles of national forests, providing watershed protection, timber and game. The various states have added to their own forests holdings until today more than 10,000,000 acres are so administered.

In addition to protecting the trees from fire and depredation, the United States forest service now supervises grazing and lumbering privileges, conducts experiments, plants and cooperates in productive methods and elimination of waste.

The forests have taught us a wonderful lesson in conservation.

Let's Get on Record

MORE votes were polled in the city bond election Tuesday than were ever before polled in a city bond election in Wichita Falls. The largest number heretofore was 733. Former Mayor J. B. Marlow furnishes us this figure.

The $250,000 bond issue Tuesday was carried by a vote of 930 to 601.

Many of those voting against the bonds doubtless did so as a rebuke to the city council for incurring indebtedness for which the money to liquidate was not in sight at the time it was incurred. Some of those who voted for the bond issue did so in the belief that in the future no improvements would be made for which the money was not on hand or in sight from current revenues. Indeed the mass meeting's recommendation in favor of the bonds was made with the understanding that a statement be forthcoming "from same (city) officials that during their tenure of office as city officials, no city time warrants will be issued or indebtedness created in excess of the $2,000 statutory limit without approval of the citizenship except temporary loans that can and will be paid out of the current revnue for that year."

If not already done, we would like to see a resolution embodying such a statement spread upon the minutes of the city council. We believe the council is in accord with the statement but it might be well to have it a matter of record. When such a policy is definitely adopted the city government can begin to make headway toward clearing off its debts.

SCHOOL CONSCIENCE DEVELOPS

With the approach of the school year 1928-29, we become, as it were, school conscience.

On the one hand, we are considering the advisability of more schooling, and, on the other, wondering about the attitude of mind of those who do return, either through choice or compulsion. On this decision and attitude may hinge success or failure in the undertaking.

In the modern competitive contest to make good, it becomes a conflict of wits. Adequate schooling can play an important part. There is no magic in education; it does not insure success, but there is no better insurance against failure. It helps create greater resourcefulness to meet opportunity as it beckons; stimulate ability to expand earning power; contribute to greater moral force and better citizenship.

The FORBIDDEN DOOR — by Herman Landon

Old Blighty's Vengeance

None too gently Mallingham drew Julia away from the hall. A smile still hung on his slack lips. There was still a dazed, baffled look in his eyes, as if he had come from a losing battle with forces that were too vast, too incomprehensible. He led Julia to a chair.

"Pull yourself together. It's all right. I lost—that's all. Next time—" He laughed queerly.

The house was in a state of uproar. Doors were slamming, voices were shouting excitedly there were sounds of confusion in the halls.

"What happened?" asked Julia in a faint voice.

Mallingham lighted a cigaret. With bemused eyes he followed a spiral of smoke to the ceiling. "I made two mistakes. First, my theory was all wrong. Second, I bungled things up in the hills. Can't see just how it happened. I suppose only experts should handle explosives. No matter. We'll win yet. What's up, John?"

The caretaker, breathless and with a look of consternation on his gaunt face, rushed into the room. It was evident he had not been in bed, for he was fully dressed.

"Didn't you hear that terrible racket?"

"Certainly?" Mallingham glanced significantly at Julia. "But what did it mean?"

"Don't know. Likewise, I'm not sure. There's a lot of explosive stuff stored in a shack up the hills—up Old Blighty way. Maybe somebody's been monkeying with it—some trapper, maybe. There's enough of that stuf to blow out the side of Old Blighty."

"Well," said Mallingham easily, "apparently no damage has been done, except possibly to the fool who tampered with the stuff."

"I wouldn't be too sure about that, sir," said John darkly. "Old Blighty don't like to be teased like that. He may cut loose. He's in a bad temper, anyhow, after all this rain. I didn't like the looks of him tonight."

"Nonsense," said Mallingham. "You are letting your imagination run away with your senses, John. Get Mrs. Martenet an aspirin tablet and a glass of water, please. She has a headache. That's why she couldn't sleep."

With a worried expression John turned to the door. People in various stages of undress were crowding into the library. Mallingham assured them nothing serious had happened and advised them to return to their rooms, but evidently they had been too badly shaken to feel any further inclination for bed. They scattered about the room, relating their individual impressions of the shocks.

John returned with the aspirin and water. Julia reached out a shaking hand for them, brought the tablet to her lips, looked at Mallingham, and suddenly her hand faltered. A look of vague surprise came into her eyes. She shuddered violently, then sat rigidly still. The glass fell to the floor with a crash.

A breathless, horrible silence fell. The faces in the room blanched. No one knew what had happened, but stark terror was written on every countenance. It was as if a chilling, sinister breath had suddenly swept through the gathering. Even the storm appeared to pause. It was a stillness that seemed to swallow up all sounds in its immensity and leave a fearful constriction at the throat. Eyes looked into eyes with silent, shuddering questioning.

Then a tremor came, almost too slight to be apprehended by the senses. It seemed to come from nowhere, to have no definite location, but there was a nameless quality in it that chilled the blood with a touch of something loathsome and appalling. Only a moment longer the unearthly spell lasted, and then a roar, like a great abysmal upheaval, broke monstrously on the stillness.

Mallingham ran from the room and out on the porch. He stood swaying in a gale that seemed determined to above him back. The night was impenetrably black. It was a mad, deafening uproar of tumbling sheets of rain and howling gusts of wind. Above the clamor of the elements there came another sound, one that clawed hideously at his nerves. He could see nothing, but his imagination pictured a writhing, squirming, thunderous mass rushing down the mountainside with the motions of a monstrous reptile. With a tightening at his throat he ran back to the library.

No one in the crowd appeared to have moved during his brief absence. They stood hushed, immobile, waiting for something to happen, yet not knowing what. There was a lull, a hush, a tension charged with something unspeakable. Only Julia, sitting aloof from the others and twisting her fingers with convulsive motions, showed any signs of life.

Mallingham, after a glance and a shrug, sauntered past them, opened the door in the rear, looked up at the serenely ticking clock, and again a smile of mystification and bafflement came to his lips. He was still looking at it when the caretaker's hoarse exclamation shattered the tension.

"Old Blighty's cut loose!"

The spell was broken. There were loud voices and scurrying of feet. Mrs. Martenet's servants, their faces stricken with fear, stood huddled in the doorway. Above the hubbub rose a steady, menacing din, constantly drawing nearer, and above the din rose John's voice once more:

"Everybody stay here! Get back, you! It'll be death if you leave the house—death, I tell you!"

He pushed back a few hysterical ones. Then, cajoling and bullying, he told two of Mrs. Martenet's servants to go with him and close the shutters all over the house. Mallingham gave him an admiring glance. The caretaker appeared to be the only one in the group who had not taken leave of his senses.

The closing of the shutters seemed a ludicrously inadequate precaution, but Mallingham granted that it was better than none. He realized the folly of trying to escape. The thunderous avalanche was constantly drawing closer to the house. In a few moments the little hollow would be choked with gravel, snow and rocks. Any one who attempted flight through the narrow passage in the mountain ridge would be quickly ground to death under the tide now rushing in destructive glee toward the house.

Mallingham smiled faintly. Whatever they did, he reflected, the end would probably be certain death. He looked across the room at Julia. How exquisite her small, white face looked! Her pallor was an enhancement of her loveliness. It was a pity that such beauty could not escape the impending debacle. There was but one hope for them all, as far as Mallingham could see. The house, soundly constructed from roof to foundation, might possibly resist the onslaught when it came.

It came in a moment, with a furious, inanimate below. A deafening crash, like a broadside of shell fire, beat hideously against Mallingham's eardrums. Then the din ceased, leaving an aching stillness in its wake. It was as if the earth had cracked open and precipitated them into a soundless void.

"It held! The roof held!"

Mallingham looked at the man who had uttered that hysterical exclamation of relief. It was Horace Peters. The strain he had been under had brought out all the mottled colors in his face. He was as nattily dressed as usual, wearing the same double-breasted coat of dark blue serge he had worn at dinner. Mallingham's eyes narrowed in perplexity. Peters certainly did not look like a man whose rest had been rudely disturbed and who had dressed in a hurry. Even as he wondered about this, an ominous creaking of timbers seemed to mock Peters' expression of relief. Like a human being after a violent paroxysm, the house was groaning and trembling from the shock it had received. Uneasily Mallingham looked upward and listened to the squeaking of straining timbers. If the roof should collapse!

He went to Peters' side. "I see you didn't go to bed," he observed.

The little man's embarrassment was comical. "No, I—you see—I felt it in my bones something of this kind was going to happen."

Mallingham fixed him with a dark, searching look. "You might have given me a friendly warning."

"Didn't think it was necessary." Peters' face twisted into a wry grin. "Had an idea you knew more about what was going to happen than anybody else."

"Just what makes you say that?"

"A little birdie told me, Mally."

"You take your information from queer sources."

"One has to, sometimes. Tell me, Mally, where did you go after dinner this evening? You came back all soaked.'

"Ask the birdie," said Mallingham. He wondered just how much the little man knew of his movements this evening.

"By the way, who is the gentleman with the incendiary hair?" He indicated a tall, youngish person with astonishingly red hair who had just entered.

"I never saw him before, Mally, but my guess is that he is the physician who is attending the mysterious young lady who arrived last night. I understand his name is Dr. Speck. Wonder how the patient is getting on."

At this point the caretaker returned with two servants who had assisted him in closing the shutters all over the house. John announced that the sun parlor, which occupied a separate wing and constituted an addition to the original building, had collapsed. It was John's opinion that the original wall would hold a while longer.

"That sounds bad," said Peters. He trembled as an ominous creaking sounded overhead. "I wish those noises would stop. They give me the jimmies. What's going to happen to us, Mally?"

"Hard telling. Well know soon whether we are going to be buried alive or permitted to live long enough to die some other kind of death."

"You're a cool one, Mally. Have you no fear, no regrets?"

"What would be the use? Have you?"

"Why, yes. If this is going to be the end of little old Horace Peters, I wish I'd taken a chance on the iron door." He figured his large, bulbous nose. "The clock is still running, I suppose, Mally?"

"It was a few minutes ago. You might go and look for yourself."

But Peters seemed to have no inclination to do so. Te glanced nervously about the room, at the chattering men and women, and then his glance stopped on the fireplace. The few charred logs on the andirons were emitting a feeble, flickering glow. His mouth opened in surprise.

"Look, Mally! Notice the smoke? There isn't much of it, but see where it's going."

Mallingham nodded. "Yes, Ive noticed it. The smoke is coming into the room instead of going up the chimney. There is an obstruction somewhere. Probably the entire house is buried. For all we know, there may be several thousand tons of snow, gravel and rocks over our heads."

Peters trembled. "You say that as coolly as if this was an anthill and we were an army of ants and somebody was poking a stick in our midst."

"Why not? This house is pretty solidly constructed, but it can't stand that kind of strain indefinitely. Something is bound to give. We might as well face the truth."

"Keep your darned truth to yourself," said Peters with grim earnestness. "I want to think about pleasant things while I'm alive. I want to feast my eyes on pretty girls. There's Mrs. Martenet's maid, for instance. Her name is Kate Wynne, isn't it?"

Mallingham smiled. Peter's flippancies, he knew, were like the whistling of a small boy trying to keep up his courage in the dark. He favored Kate Wynne with an appreciative glance as she administered smelling salts to her mistress. She was a dark, slim, very pretty girl, full of unconscious coquetries.

As he watched her, he became aware that still another person was interested in the maid.

"You have a competitor," he told the little man. "Look at Dr. Speck."

Peters' glance traveled to the young physician, standing a little aloof from the others. He was fixing the maid with a dreamy and adoring look that showed all the symptoms of a sudden and violet infatuation.

"That hick!" Peters snorted. "Looks as if he ought to be a horse doctor. Kate has been looking after the mysterious young lady upstairs. That's how this countrified pill-mixer got acquainted with her. If I live long enough, I'm going to knock some of those gold teeth out of his jaws. Look at him, Mally. He looks like the United States mint whenever he smiles."

"I'm going to let some of this smoke out," Mallingham announced.

He stepped to the door, flung it open, then drew back a step in surprise. The corridor outside was deserted, but he had a clear and sharp impression that some one had sprung back into the shadows as he opened the door. He had caught a moment's glimpse of a face, and the face had brought a rush of poignant sensations to his brain.

Steadying himself, he ran down the corridor. Sharp hammering blows fell on his ears, mingling with the creaking and snapping of timbers. He knew that the caretaker, with two of Mrs. Martenet's male servants, was bracing the outer doors and the windows against the constantly increasing pressure of the grinding and sagging mass outside. Postponing the hour of destruction, was Mallingham's thought.

At the end of the corridor, he looked back over it in the light of the electric bulb in the ceiling, glanced up the curving sweep of the stairway, and stood scanning the dusk with eyes infinitely alert. He must have another glimpse of that face even if this were to be his last hour on earth. But the face was gone; it appeared to have vanished into the creaking and tortured depths of the house.

A prolonged, rending roar sounded overhead. Once more he glanced up the stairway well. The overloaded roof was cracking in places. But that face——?

He went back to the library, buzzing with hysterical voices. Doctor Speck, like an overgrown romantic boy, stood gazing moodily at Kate Wynne. Julia was reclining on the coach, and he could not tell whether she had fainted or gone to sleep. Peters, with a gray film on his mottled features and an unsteady grin on his lips, came forward.

"You look scared, Mally," said the little man. "At last I know you're human, Shake!"

They shook hands, Mallingham with the air of humoring a youth. Their eyes met, and Peters jerked back a little. His own eyes widened with astonishment.

"Mercy, Mally, you look as if you'd seen a ghost!"

"Don't be an idiot," snapped Mallingham; and just then darkness descended suddenly over the room. Peters gave a startled gasp. Somewhere a woman screamed.

"Don't be alarmed!" Mallingham called out. Shaken though he was, his voice sounded steady. "Something has happened to the lights, that's all. The dynamo is in a separate building. It has probably collapsed."

He struck a match and lighted the stately red and green candles on the mantelshelf. His hand was firm again, although his mind was haunted by division. As he turned away, a great splintering crash sounded overhead. There was something awful and blood-freezing in that mighty uproar. In an instant all voices were stilled. There was a period of waiting, of horrible suspense. The moments dragged agonizingly.

"We'll all be dead before morning," said Peters, fumbling with the button on Mallingham's coat. The forced levity in his voice gave it a ghastly ring. "Anyhow, Dr. Speck is a kiss ahead of the game. I saw him——"

Once more a thunderous crack shook the house. The awfulness of it silenced every tongue. Like a frightened herd the occupants of the room drew closer together. The candles wavered, projecting a ghostly shimmer into the far corners. Again came that horrible, suspenseful hush. Then a chime fell melodiously, mockingly on the fear-ridden stillness.

Old Winthrop's clock was striking the hour of 4.

For the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.—Ps. vii:9.

A king that sitteth on the throne of judgment, winnoweth away all evil with his eyes . . . . To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.—Prov. xx:8, xxi:3.

Learn with justice to keep pace,
Spurning what is vile and base,
And bravely ever set your face
To play the man.

FICKLENESS

He vowed a love so strong and great,
The love that lasts forever;
She swore that she would always care,
And would forget him—never.

Their hearts were in the words they spoke,
When those great vows were taken.
But when a year or two have passed,
They'll see they were mistaken.

Cotton Picking Slowly Becoming Lost Art

HOUSTON, Aug. 30. (AP)—Cotton picking is becoming a lost art. Thus opines Mrs. Nell Mercer, labor agent.

Mrs. Mercer recently issued a call for 1,500 pickers. The cotton was good, a fair price was offered, and the farmers agreed to provide transportation to the fields.

Hundreds of laborers, as usual, swarmed about Mrs. Mercer's office the next day, looking for jobs. But when she told them of the cotton picking offer, one of them, a big, black negro, said:

"Ah can't pick cotton. No, suh, I'b burn out in them fields."

Fellow members of his race agreed with him, and the rest of the job seekers either admitted they couldn't pick cotton or were looking for easier occupations.

Fort Worth Grand Jury Probes Oil Stock Sales

FORT WORTH, Aug. 30.—The federal grand jury in session already has examined more than 75 witnesses. The majority of cases under consideration are for alleged violation of the mail fraud statute and narcotics. The jury will be in session at least three weeks. In his charge to the grand jury, Judge James C. Wilson charged specifically for a close investigation to be made in cases growing out of the sale of oil stocks.

Corpus Christi Forges Ahead as Gulf Port

CORPUS CHRISTI, Aug. 30.—Corpus Christi is rapidly forging to the front as a gulf port. A few days ago 11 large transatlantic freighters were tied up alongside the wharf awaiting loading with cotton destined to the European continent.

COOL WEATHER FOLLOWS RAIN

Showers Reported General Over North Texas

Wichitans Thursday night were enjoying a milder temperature and a cool east breeze, following fall of .60 of an inch of rain Thursday morning. Thermometers were 20 degrees lower at 5 o'clock Thursday than at the same time Wednesday, according to reports of the Texas Electric Service company bureau here.

Following the first shower about 5 o'clock Thursday morning thermometers dropped to a low of 71.

The rain is reported by railroads radiating from Wichita Falls to have been general over North Texas. The Fort Worth and Denver railroad reported rain along its line as far west as Clarendon during the night, and the Missouri-Kansas-Texas line reported a light rain in southern Oklahoma. The Wichita Valley reported rains as far south as Stamford and the Wichita Falls and Southern found rain between here and Archer City but none south of there.

Skies continued overcast with promise of additional rain during the night.

Any damage that the rain might cause because of encouragement to insects on cotton in the irrigated districts would be more than counteracted by the benefit to dry-land crops, according to G. C. McGown, county atgent. Cotton in the dry-land sections of Wichita county had been badly in need of moisture, Mr. McGown said.

Rain at Crosbyton

CROSBYTON, Aug. 30.—A slow rain fell over Crosby county Thursday morning amounting to .20 of an inch at Crosbyton. The rain was not needed as worms are making their appearance. However no material damage has been done.

Clarendon Shower

CLARENDON, Aug. 30.—Rain amounting to .65 of an inch fell here Thursday. Crops in some parts of the county were dry. All will be benefited. Weather warm and not conducive to worm development.

Police Investigate Plot to Dupe Girls

EASTON, Pa., Aug. 30. (INS)—Police and federal authorities today planned a further probe into the activities of an alleged "white slave ring" which was revealed in court here when a girl, giving the name of Ethel Bowen, West New York, N. J., testified that she had been sold into a house of ill repute here for $1,000.

Two brothers, Archie and Charles Bashlow, both of Passaic, N. J., took the girl to Bethlehem where they met a third man, Lewis Rosenberg, who also figured in the transaction, the girl testified.

Rosenberg accompanied the trio to Easton. Here he is alleged to have introduced them to the proprietress of a disorderly house where the price was set on the girl. She was left here but later reported the affair to police and the three men were arrested. Each was held in $3,000 bail for a court hearing but Rosenberg raised his bail and was freed. The others are in jail in default of bail.

Band Rehearsals

Rehearsals are now being held twice a week by the Wichita Falls playground band, composed of young boys of the city under Paul Seeds' direction. It has been announced that general enrollment in the band will be closed September 9. It now has 42 members.

State May Pay For Road Work

taining large cities agreed to remit to the highway commissioners all of their share of motor registration fees over $50,000. By doing so, they were told they would help the state pave the gaps in the roads leading to them.

Some progress has been made in closing the gaps, notably below San Antonio on the road to Corpus Christi and the Lower Rio Grande valley. Summer tourists can testify that many, many still remain.

Now the proposal is to have all highway building financed by the state with federal aid and no county aid. Several plans to finance such a system have been suggested. Highway Chairman Sterling suggests $300,000,000 to $350,000,000 of state bonds to be issued as work progresses. While announcing it has not yet reached a definite plan, the East Texas Chamber of Commerce looks favorably on an issue of $100,000,000 immediately.

Such bond issues will bring up the question of the status of counties that have already issued road bonds. Two plans have been proposed to care for them. One is to retire their bonds with part of the state bond issue; the other is for the state to buy the roads they have built. The method of appraisal has not been given by advocates of the latter plan. In some counties the roads are already practically worn out. Such counties with some justice claim that they should still be refunded because by acting as pioneers they have enabled the whole state to profit by their road experiments.

Clarence Ousley, who was engaged by the East Texas Chamber of Commerce to study the road problems, makes the suggestion that whatever is done about a bond issue, road taxes should be levied on the road users and not on the land owners.

Too Many Roads

At first this seems unanswerable. But, take a glance at any recent map showing late highways and those under construction. They show long stretches of road built and being built in sparsely settled country. The question can then be raised whom such roads aid most—the users or land owners. For with the assistance of the roads and irrigation these tracts are being opened to homeseekers and being turned into developed farms.

All members of the highway commission agree that the state has too many highways. It has been loaded up with 20,000 miles to be maintained. One thousand mile highway would take traffic across the state from East to West; another of equal length would run from North to South. Three thousand more would reach all big population centers. The state has four times that. Most of this excess mileage has been piled up at the insistence of counties and groups of counties that have been willing to aid in building roads.

In seeking money to improve them, the motor busses and commercial trucks are likely to receive attention from the legislators. "Tax payers should not be required to furnish free road beds for freight and passenger carriers" says a road policy statement of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce. A rail official recently told Governor Moody that if some one else would pay the expense "under the wheels" the railroads could drive out motor competition.

But there is another side to that also. Railroad roadbeds were not established entirely without state help. Numerous railway surveys cited in abstracts recall the large land grants for early building. Not more than a decade ago newspapers were telling of "bonus drives" of communities to get rail lines built. Cities left to one side by railways because they would not raise bonuses are scattered over the map. Jefferson, probably would have been the Dallas of North Texas, if it had raised a bonus at such a time.

Lack of road markers, another thing criticised by tourists almost as much as the breaks in the paving, is now being remedied. Markers have been contracted for and roads are being logged to determine the markings.

Obregon, Calles Linked in Deaths

ulously avoided the jurisdiction of the state of Texas whenever they visited the United States."

"For these reasons there can be no friendly relations between violators of the law or their representatives and the district attorney of this judicial district," Mr. Valls continued. "For these reasons I shall continue to refuse admittance to my office of the representatives of a government that has so flagrantly transgressed the laws of Texas.

"The state department becomes an impudent intruder when it attempts to interpose its powerful influence in behalf of violators of the law, no matter how high their station or how contemptible their character."

Of President Calles, Mr. Valls said he "is a Syrian by blood and a Mexican by accident and he does not represent either the virtue or the intelligence of the real people of Mexico, that unhappy land of fair women and brave men."

To the deceased president-elect, Mr. Valls attributed the statement that "an assassination sometimes prevented a revolution and saved many lives," and remarked that "the life of Alvaro Obregon has furnished a striking exemplification of the Biblical injunction that he who lives by the sword will perish by the sword."

"The prosecution against him in Webb county will be dismissed for the familiar reason that he is dead; but the prosecution against Calles and his fellow conspirators will remain pending with the fervent hope that some day they will be called to answer for their enormous crime at the bar of public justice in Webb county."

Mr. Valls long has been recognized as a dominant figure in border politics. He recently was made a target for bullets fired from ambush, but escaped uninjured.

He would not indicate whether he had sent his reply to the state department at Washington directly or had transmitted it through diplomatic channels which, it is understood, would have caused him to direct his reply to Gov. Dan Moody of Texas.

Mr. Valls concluded his reply with this:

"Let the Mexican government thoroughly understand that I alone am the district attorney and I will neither brook nor tolerate any interference from any source in the discharge of my official duties."

OIL OPERATORS TO TEST ORDER

Curtailment Program In Seminole Attacked

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Aug. 30. (AP)—Oil operators tomorrow morning will discuss at Tulsa the first test of the authority of the state corporation commission to curtail production of petroleum in the Seminole pool.

On learning of a temporary restraining order issued in United States district court here today to prevent the commission and the attorney general from enforcing a commission order curtailing the oil output Ray M. Collins, production umpire of the greater Seminole field, summoned producers of the Little river area for the meeting. The court order was issued to the Reiter-Foster Oil corporation.

Collins was on his way to Oklahoma City to cite the Reiter-Foster company for alleged infraction of the commission order, when the court acted. Collins alleged that company's well on its Bunyard lease of 40 acres were exceeding a 1600 barrel limit established by the commission order.

Senator Robinson Formally Notified

corruption under the Republicans and said that Gov. Smith's administration in New York state had stood the test of every hostile scrutiny.

A crowd of approximately 20,000 sat on th epine benches in the natural amphitheater, overflowed into the streets and viewed the proceedings from windows of nearby buildings.

The celebration, which accompanied the notification and acceptance, was an impressive demonstration for "our Joe, the next vice president," as Robinson had been placarded throughout this resort town. Rain, which fell intermittenly from late afternoon onward, disappointed but did not dampen th eardor of the thousands who gathered to pay tribute to their hero.

A quarter of a century ago a young country lawyer had gone from Arkansas to Washington as a representative in Washington. Since then he has been governor of the state and one of its senators.

Tonight he had come back to be proclaimed as a candidate for vice president. Arkansas made the most of it. It was important, too, that this ceremony was the first of the kind ever held in this state and the first in the whole south since 1856.

Many Visitors

From all over the state, in automobiles, by train, and in horse-drawn vehicles, people came to have a part in the greatest event the state had experienced. As early as 5 p. m. they began to gather in the great natural amphitheater where seats had been arranged facing the speaker's stand in front of the Arlington hotel.

Every type was represented, politicians, and merchants, men and women from the cities, the Ozark hills, the cotton fields, and the lumber areas. They stood there waiting for the big show. A few had umbrellas, but most of them allowed the rain to soak in, unmindful of anything but the celebration for "our own Joe." Others thronged into the Arlington, making the lobbies of that hotel almost impassible. Police finally were forced to bar many of the would-be-entrants. A few draped newspapers over their heads; most of them waited unmindful of the rain.

They ranged in rows of five and six all along the main street which passes the hotel and the speaker's stand, and they perched precariously along the precipitate mountain side which rears itself skyward where the seats ended.

The Hot Springs boys' band entertained the crowds frequently before the formal program started, alternating "Dixie" and "The Sidewalks of New York" to the cheers of the crowd.

Robinson Appears

When Senator Robinson came to the platform it was an occasion for the bursting of bombs, the lighting of flares! A blinding flow of flood lights and war whoops from the crowd, the 20,000 persons were in a happy, carnival mood. Robinson was escorted by John J. Raskob, Claude Bowers, Senator Gerry of Rhode Island, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, and Mrs. John B. Warner, daughter of Governor Smith, and members of the notification committee.

Raskob, extending greetings from Governor Smith, asked Mrs. Warner to speak.

Mrs. Warner, receiving great applause, said, "I'll go home and tell father about Senator Robinson's wonderful friends and this great demonstration."

Governor Parnell made a speech of welcome and other speeches were made by Mrs. Ross, Senator Gerry, and Senator Caraway of Arkansas, the latter saying of the Democratic candidates and their aspirations, we have waited eight years to fill a vacancy that has existed for that time. The character of the candidates will repay us for wait."

Bowers praised Governor Smith as "a man of the people who captivated millions by a rare combination of mind and heart," and told Robinson he has been chosen because of "your seasoned statesmanship and your established leadership, the robust qualities of your Democracy, the Jeffersonian character of your political concepts and your fine fidelity of American ideals."

LAPAN'S HIT IN NINTH LETS PANYE BLANK SPORTS, 1 TO 0.

SPUDDERS WIN NINE STRAIGHT

George Shades Hearne In Pitchers' Battle

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Our Spudders returned home yesterday from a triumphant road jaunt, and provided the patrons with a corking and thrilling ball game. The customers who stayed away from Athletic park (and they were many more than those who were there) were treated to one of the best pastimes of the season. It ended in the ninth inning when Peter Lapan did a Frank Merriwell and smote a hit that drove home a comrade for the only run of the game.

This 1 to 0 triumph of the Gallowaymen was their fourth straight over the Sports, and their ninth in a row. It enabled them to maintain a heavy margin over the Buffs, although Houston gained half a game by taking a double header. But the Spudders are still seven and a half games in the lead and that is something the Buffs can't laugh off.

George Payne shared hero honors of the day with Peter Lapan. The eminent screw ball artist chucked superlative ball to shut out the hard-hitting Shreveport clan and best Bunny Hearne in a brilliant hurling duel.

Both Hurl Five-Hit Ball

Payne and his portside rival each allowed only five hits. Hearne struck out four and Payne fanned three. George's control was better, however, as he did not issue a single base on balls, while Hearne passed six. Bunny also uncorked a wild pitch which helped the Spudders win in the ninth.

The enemy threatened to score on one occasion, in the eighth, when they had two runners on bases with one out. George W. bore down, however, and averted a run. He limited the hits along the route, except in that eighth, over as many innings.

The Spudders are just as pleased that they will not be called upon to face the youthful Mr. Hearne any more this season. In his last start against them which was in their own bailiwick, Bunny beat them, 4 to 2. And he would have beaten them yesterday except that George W. Payne couldn't permit that. Yes, sir, the Spudders were mighty tickled to win that ball game, but in the clubhouse after the pastime they were lavish in their praise of the young Mr. Hearne. And it was merited. A fellow who can hold the savage-hitting Spudders to one run and five hits is entitled to lots of acclaim.

Lapan Again Delivers

Grizzled Pete Lapan, who has been playing baseball a decade or more, and who gets better every season, arose to the occasion in the ninth yesterday, as he usually does. Earlier in the game the Sports had purposely passed Lapan, and Dugan Phelan probably is wishing he had ordered putting on Pete in the ninth, too. Jenkins started the round with a single to center but was forced by Swenson, Hearne to Deviveros. Swenson went to second on a wild pitch. Roetz fouled to Hayworth. Then Lapan banged the right field wall and Swenson scurried home.

The Spudders fielded errorlessly and the Sports made only one misplay, a ball dropped by the usually efficient Dick Cox.

Howard Fitzgerald was the batting leader, with a triple and a single in three times at bat and was the only athlete to mace more than one hit.

Fitzgerald Triples

The Sports were retired in order in the first inning. Fitzgerald tripled to the right field wall but two were out and he was left on third.

Cox singled to left in the second after one was out but Hayworth and Deviveros failed to advance him.

Swenson and Roetz walked but both were caught stealing by Hayworth.

Nary a Sport got on in the third. Neither did a Spudder, though Payne surprised everyone, including himself, by almost poking a safe hit into right.

Watwood, Woehrs and Frazee went out one-two-three in the fourth. Cox dropped Fitzgerald's fly in the sun field in the fourth but threw Howard out at second.

Hayworth singled sharply past Turgeon into right in the fifth with one out. Turgeon and Swenson threw out Deviveros and Holman.

The bases were filled in the Spudder fifth but to no avail. Jenkins, first up, strolled. Swenson lifted to Woehrs. Roetz rolled to Hearne, Jenkins going to second. Lapan was purposely passed, although he almost crossed up the Sports by reaching out and fouling one. Payne DID upset that strategy by singling to right, Jenkins stopping at third and Lapan at second. Benton struck out, with the call two and three.

Phelan's men went out in order in the sixth. A lady in a left field box caught a ball fouled by Watwood and the fans applauded.

Turgeon's Unlucky Day

Watwood went to the fence for Turgeon's drive, the third hard hit ball by Pete that failed to go safely. Fitzgerald walked and went to second on Lamb's sacrifice. Hearne to Whelan. Hearne also threw out Jenkins.

Again Payne turned back the hostiles in order in the seventh. And Hearne did the same to the Spudders.

The Sports threatened in the eighth. Benton went back for Hayworth's lift. Deviveros and Holman singled to left. Roetz grabbed Hearne's bounder and forced Holman at second, Deviveros going to third. Benton and Turgeon retired Hearne on Whelan's grounder. Benton walked and Fitzgerald singled but they got no farther.

Woehrs singled in the ninth after one was out. Frazee was out at first, Lapan to Roetz, and Woehrs, under the impression the ball was a foul, walked off second and was caught on Eddie's toss to Benton.

HOQUIAM, Wash., Aug. 30. (AP)—The coastwise steam schooner Wahkeena sank at her berth in 40 feet of water here today. Fire department pumps worked all night in an effort to keep her afloat after she had been towed into dock from Grays Harbor bar where she grounded yesterday.

Britisher Beats Brown In Flyweight 'Title' Go

LONDON, Aug. 30. (UP)—Johnny Hill, Scotland, defeated Newsboy Brown of California on points in a 15-round bout tonight advertised for the world flyweight championship. English writers insist that Hill is now the 112-pound champion as Brown was the hitherto titleholder despite the claims of Corporal Izzy Schwartz of New York.

Teddy Baldock knocked out Johnny Brown in the second round of their scheduled 15-round bout advertised for the world's bantamweight title. Brown's seconds threw in the towel after Bladock had beaten him up badly.

Notes of the Game

After the second and final of the series with the Sports today, the Spudders go on the road again. They play at Dallas tomorrow, at Fort Worth Sunday and Monday, including a Labor day double header, and at Dallas again Tuesday.

They are home Wednesday to windup the season, which ends a week from Sunday.

Reservations for the double header Monday at Fort Worth may be made through Secretary Guy Airey of the Spudders at the offices here until Sunday. They may be obtained from him at the Texan hotel, at Fort Worth, at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Doc Smith, catcher injured at Shreveport, was taken to his home on arrival of the Spudders yesterday from Shreveport. It is unlikely that he will be able to play during the championship season, though he may be back in the lineup for the playoff with the Buffs.

Eddie Roetz, playing first base in place of another Spud cripple, Buck Stanton, looks pretty good at his new job. Ed handles himself with the nonchalance of an old-timer at the initial sack, when he takes a throw.

One thing about Eddie, he's a mighty steady rookie. In fact, the boy isn't the sort to become rattled or excited. It's just a ball game to him, and first base is like any other position. He'll do his best out there and isn't worrying, so why need others worry?

Rabbit Benton handled seven chances flawlessly yesterday. Fitzgerald roamed around the outfield to haul down a flock of drives.

This fellow Deviveros is one of the best all-round shortstops in the Texas league.

Watwood, kid Sport outfielder, is a fine prospect. He isn't more than 21 years of age, if that old.

The Sports are crippled. Pete Kilduff and Frank Tobin aren't with them on this trip, being out with injuries.

Ruth's 47th Unavailing As Nats Trim Champs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30. (AP)—Babe Ruth's 47th home run failed to win for the Yankees here today, when the Senators bunched hits off Waite Hoyt to run off with a 3 to 1 decision. Sad Sam Jones held the champions well in check save when Ruth hit the ball over the right field barrier in the seventh. The Yankee lead remained two and one-half games as the Athletics lost to Boston, 3 to 2. Score:

Cochran, Golding Beaten in Golf

Wichita Falls Stars Lose At Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Aug. 30. (AP)—Four aces of the southern links, Tommy Cochran, Dennis Lavender, Edwin McClure and Dudley Golding, were eliminated in the two rounds of play today in the combined River Crest invitation and Southwestern Golf association.

Cochran went out in the first round, while the others met their Waterloo in the second round.

Elimination of the quartet does not dim greatly the luster of the field. A fast field still remains for the quarter finals and semi-finals Friday.

Stars Defeated

Cochran, Wichita Falls, one-time Texas and River Crest invitation titlist, met his conqueror in the first round. He was Chilton Jennings of River Crest.

Lavender, Abilene, West Texas Golf association champion; Golding, Wichita Falls, one time winner of the River Crest championship; McClure, Shreveport, former holder of Louisiana's championship, went out in the second round.

Joe Ballard, 19-year-old River Crest youth, beat Lavender 2 up.

Gus Moreland, Dallas, ended all hopes of Golding when he won, 3 and 2.

Massingill Wins

McClure's conqueror was L. R. Robertson, Dallas, medalist in the recent southern amateur tournament there. Robertson won 2 and 1.

M. L. (Happy) Massingill, River Crest, defending champion, encountered two tough matches. One was with Ben Hogan, Katy Lake, in the first round. Hogan carried the veteran campaigner to the nineteenth hole. Massingill turned in a birdie three for the victory.

Ross McDade, Shreveport, La., gets his colors tried in his match Friday, meeting Jack Speer of Houston, Texas amateur champion. Scott and Ballard tangle in a match of much prospect.

Young Jack Thompson Stops Dundee in 2nd

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. (UP)—Joe Dundee, Baltimore, welterweight champion, still holds his title, but only because he insisted that Young Jack Thompson, California welterweight, come into the ring overweight.

Carrying the attack to the champion from the opening gong Thompson scored a technical knock-out in the second round of their fight here tonight after he had sent Dundee to the mat for a count of eight.

Thompson's attack was irresistible and Dundee succumbed shortly after the second round opened. He got to his feet at the count of eight, after going down under a right to the jaw, but he was groggy and when he fell under a left to the stomach and a right to the jaw the referee awarded the verdict to Thompson.

AMERICANS SWEEP WALKER CUP GOLF PLAY WITH BRITISH

U. S. CAPTURES FOUR MATCHES

Jones Off Game But Teammates Bewilder Britons

By FRANK GETTY
CHICAGO GOLF CLUB, WHEATON, Ill., Aug. 30. (UP)—The anticipated rout of the British challengers for the Walker cup material ized somewhat later today than the experts had led us to expect, but when it came it was convincing.

Bobby Jones and his team mates made a sweep of the four two-ball foursome matches which comprised the first day's play for the International trophy, and put the United States in the lead, 4 to 0.

The British amateurs must win a majority of the singles matches Friday to carry away the big silver trophy which has been held by American golfers ever since the first informal contests in 1921.

Once they settled down to the serious business of playing their best golf, the Americans were unbeatable in the foursomes. Each of the four matches was one-sided, more so than has been the case in the previous struggles for the Walker cup.

Whatever excitement developed during the day's play was provided by the British at the outset, when three of the four challenging pairs went into the lead over their American opponents.

Steadily the Americans wore down the challengers, until at the end of the morning round only one defending pair was down to its adversaries. And once the cup defenders went into the lead, they drew away so rapidly that one of the matches proceeded beyond the thirty-third hole.

Jess Sweetser and George Von Elm, named by Captain Jones to tackle the strongest British pair, Dr. Tweddell and T. Phillip Perkins, registered the most one-sided of the victories. Sweetser and Von Elm won 7 up and 6 to play.

As for Bobby himself, he was by no means on his game. The Atlantan, whose practice rounds had amazed golfers everywhere, seemed to have left some of his customary brilliancy on the practice links. Even at that, he and Chick Evans, his partner, were far more than a match for the British team of Major G. C. Headet and W. L. Hope whom they defeated 5 up and 3 to play.

"Baby" Pair Easily Win

The third American pair, Francis Ouimet and Jimmy Johnston, had the hardest fight of the day on their hands, and they never were in serious danger. Ouimet and Johnston ran out the last four holes of their match with Tony Torrance and Eustace Storey to win, 4 up and 2 to play.

The "Babies" of the American team, Watts Gunn and Roland MacKenzie, went on a little sand gravel hunting expedition at the outset of their match with Dr. A. R. MacCallum and J. B. Beck. MacKenzie was in the traps constantly.

This distressive state of affairs found the American pair 4 down at the end of four holes. But MacKenzie reformed shortly, and before lunch time, the youngsters were 2 up.

From that point on, Watts and Roland simply slaughtered their opponents, winning 7 up and 5 to play, a victory so decisive that Dr. Tweddell, who captains the British side, decided not to use either Beck or Doctor MacCallum in the singles matches Friday. Their places will be taken by R. H. Hardman and Capt. G. N. C. Martin.

Rip Collins Hurls Two Victories in One Day

TORONTO, Aug. 30. (UP)—Rip Collins, former major league pitcher, accomplished the iron man stunt today by pitching the Toronto Leafs to a double victory over the Reading Keystones, 2 to 0 and 4 to 1.

Collins' feat was made all the more remarkable by the fact that he allowed only three hits in 16 innings. He gave Reading but one hit in the first game, but allowed two hits in the seven-inning afterpiece.

TRUE! Some policies may have a nice "catchy" feature! But it's the net result that counts!

Damon Runyon Thinks Elimination Of Caddies Would be Boon to Golf

Boys Lugging Around Big Sacks Full of Clubs Viewed With Disfavor; British Writer Concurs in Opinion

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—One of the narrowest squeaks of my career befell the day I viewed my first game of golf, and someone—I think it was Mr. Grantland Rice, the sports writer, who swings a mean niblick—inquired:

"What do you think of it?"

"I think they ought to do away with those boys lugging those big sacks of clubs around, that's what I think of it!" I said with some heat. "It's ridiculous! They ought to make the players pack their own tools!"

A pained silence among my hearers followed my remarks. I realized, vaguely, that I had somehow committed a fox paw, as we say at the club. Thereafter Mr. Rice chanced to miss a particularly vicious swipe at a pill while I was standing nearby, and if I hadn't pulled my head into my collar, like a turtle, I would have lost my south ear.

I am not charging that Mr. Rice's miss was with malice aforethought, or that he was taking dead aim at my ear, but it is a matter of record that Mr. Rice never came so close to marring a spectator before in his life. It was quite obvious that he was irked. Mr. Rice is an old-time golf goof, guarding jealously all the ancient traditions of the game, among which is the hidebound tenet that a golfer must have someone to carry his clubs.

And yet I have since been firmly of the opinion that it's all wrong. A golfer ought to carry those clubs himself, but I kept this opinion to myself, because there may be golfers around who won't miss you like Mr. Rice. I mentioned the matter once in my discursions on golf a couple of years ago, and a lot of golfers stopped speaking to me in public. Now I return to the subject with renewed courage, because I find, somewhat to my surprise, support on the other side of the firmy, where they invented golf.

Support Comes From London

A prominent golf writer in England takes up cudgels in support of my contention. He is Mr. R. Endersby Howard, of the London Sketch, a moniker that is alone sufficient to give one plenty of pause.

Only Mr. Howard, lacking my foolhardy courage, hangs the proposition on a vague friend. I suppose the very thought of changing one iota of the noble old pastime is a little bit too much for an Englishman to sponsor outright. Read what Mr. Howard says:

"A golfer not long down from his university put a startling suggestion to me the other day. He expressed the opinion that, in serious rivalry on the links, caddies ought to be abolished. He thought they might be allowed to elderly (that saves Mr. Leo Fiser Flynn!—Ed.) or infirm people in their private recreation, but that in competitions they should be barred, and that young persons should be brought up to dispense with such luxuries.

"He pointed out that golf is the only game in which the player is permitted to take out a henchman to wait on him, hand and foot, and advise him all the time how he should achieve his purpose. In present-day circumstances, and he stressed modern conditions, he could imagine no more unfortunate influence than the caddie who helped to make the game pampered and expensive just when its cost ought to be reasonable, and who could not be relied upon to perform his simple duties satisfactorily unless his patron had a reputation for generous tipping.

What Does Caddie Do?

"The idea may be altogether too revolutionary in the height of the August holiday season, with heatwaves occurring and recurring, but my friend's arguments have so much of the element of originality that they deserve to be stated.

"There most certainly is a caddie problem. It is of a very involved character, and this pioneer's effort to deal with it from the root may be helpful. His supreme question is: 'What does the caddie do?' And he answers it in detail, thus:

"First—The caddie carries the clubs. If the player had to carry his own, he would learn to depend upon a few, which would be much better for his golf. Unnecessary clubs confuse him.

"Second—The caddie prepares tees. Anybody can stick the modern wooden peg tee into the ground without inconvenience.

"Third—The caddie watches the flight of the ball, and marks down the spot at which it falls. It depends, however, upon his own keenness, and other qualities, as to whether he finds it in the rough.

"Fourth—The caddie gives advice. The player should depend upon his own judgment. It is purely a matter of chance (or tipping) as to whether he receives good or bad advice.

"Fifth—The caddie cleans the clubs. The professional would do that for a small sum by contract—a system which obtains at some places in this country, and nearly everywhere in America."

An Old Character Lost

Of course some of these arguments may not apply to golf as it is committed in this country. I wouldn't know about that, but Mr. Howard's friend brings out one point that is worth considering—the fact that the presence of the caddie is a pampering influence on the game. Mr. Howard, on his own account, says:

"I hope I do not seem suspicious of the caddie or disrespectful to him. In very many instances he is a most admirable man or boy, with a healthy desire to help his family by doing something other than draw the dole.

"But in these days it is not much use regarding him romantically. The truth is that we have lost a character out of golf. We have lost the caddie as we knew him an era ago. He was then a survival of the feudal system of the fifteenth century, when the 'superior lord' and his servant went out side by side to fight for their joint cause.

"He is dead now, and it is no use being so poetic as to believe that he still lives, except in wondrously rare instances. The other day I drove past the golf course at Musselburgh, near Edinburgh, where open championships were once decided and where even Harry Vardon was disowned and abandoned by a caddie because in those days he would not carry a niblick—and, as a consequence had taken four shots to get out of a bunker.

"It was rather wonderful to compare the caddies of that age (even if they did show signs of wet-rot born of whisky) and the deadly dull caddies of today."

SENATOR ROBINSON ACCEPTS NOMINATION AS VICE PRESIDENT

Notification Made in Historic Park Created by Efforts of Jefferson

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 30.—In America's first national park, which perhaps owes its creation to the interest shown in it by the founders of the Democratic party, Thomas Jefferson, Senator Joseph T. Robinson received official notification of his selection as the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

Claude Bowers, of New York, keynoter of the Democratic national convention, Houston brought the message of notification to the first Arkansan ever honored by such a nomination.

The text of Senator Robinson's acceptance speech follows:

Bowers Speech Notification

Claude Bowers of New York, "keynoter" of the national Democratic convention at Houston and long a leader in the ranks of the party, brought the message of notification to Senator Robinson.

Mr. Bowers' address follows:

At Houston we witnessed the mobilization of the army of democracy. The ceremonies tonight close the preliminaries before the battle. Tomorrow comes the thunder of the guns; and in November the peal of the triumph of our cause.

We come from the national convention to the state of Augustus Garland to place the commission of command in the hands of a militant son of Arkansas who has richly earned the admiration and affection of millions of Americans from sea to sea. We bid him go forth to battle for the fundamental principles of the party that are rooted in the finest traditions of our people.

All the fundamental principles of democracy may be concentrated on a page. Take the preamble of the Declaration of Independence, the whole of the bill of rights, and the historic passages from Jefferson's first inaugural address and you have all the elementals of the party's faith.

Never have these fundamental principles been more generally ignored or renounced in administration than they are today. The imperative need of the hour is for less centralization and more self-government, less bureaucracy and more democracy, less intricacy in the governmental machinery and more of the simplicity of common sense, less red tape and more red blood, less privilege and more equality, less cynicism and a greater capacity in federal officials for righteous wrath and instant action when corruption appears in the public service.

The nation has suffered during the last seven and a half years from the lack of courageous and constructive action. We need a real leadership that is inherent in the man, and not that which is dependent on the printer. With a depreciation of thirty billion dollars in the value of farm lands and equipment in five years of this administration, the failure to find a remedy is a confession of incapacity in constructive statesmanship.

Human Government

But our indictment of the failures of the present regime is not based wholly on the lack of constructive ability, but in part on the unresponsiveness of the heart. It was bad enough to make no move to solve the problem of the tillers of the soil; it was downright wicked to manifest no sympathy with the farmers' plight.

And that brings us to another need,—the injection of more of the human spirit into the processes of government. We have been living under a regime which assumes that the functions of government are confined to the keeping of books, the collecting of taxes and the paying of bills. We are hungering today for men in power who know that the primary function of government is to contribute to the happiness and comfort of men, women and children.

Thus we propose to humanize government, and make it an organized agency of human welfare.

And we enter the campaign with confidence since we have the cause, we have the principles, we have the incentive, we have the will, and through such leaders as we have summoned to the bearing of the standard we shall find the way.

In the Houston convention we placed the supreme command in the hands of a man of the people who has captivated millions by a rare combination of the qualities of mind and heart. We need not rely on printers ink to humanize our candidate, for nature made him human and humane. He has demonstrated an unquestioned genius in state craft. He has the eye of a realist, and he recognizes problems when he sees them. He has vision,—and he finds a plan for their solution. He has constructive initiative, and he puts it into form. He has courage and honesty,—and he submits it to the people. He has the red blood of a two-fisted fighting man and he fights it through. And that is the reason that he has literally made over the governmental machinery of New York, given a new dignity to state sovereignty, and written his name indelibly into history as one of the greatest creative forces among all the brilliant and able executives of a mighty commonwealth.

Picked Leaders

Having selected one of the distinguished leaders of the North, the convention turned for his running mate to the section that has been prolific in leaders and political thinkers since long before the establishment of the republic.

Your fellow Democrats turned to you, Senator Robinson, because of your seasoned statsemanship, your established leadership, the robust quality of your democracy, the Jeffersonian character of your political concepts, and your fine fidelity to American ideals. They have noted with increasing respect and admiration your position in the senate on the corruption that has shamed our people, and toward those knocking for admission at the senate door with tainted credentials in their hands. You have stood for the ideals of the nation, for the conscience and the liberties of the people, and for a militant championship of those principles and policies that we believe essential to the welfare of the state. In presenting you with this notification and commission, the highest testimonial of public confidence, and bidding you go forth to battle for the cause, we know that in accordance with your custom, you will fight the good fight, and keep the faith, and contribute mightily to the inevitable victory in November.

The attention of the public throughout the United States is being concentrated on political affairs to a degree of intensity never before known.

Voters are interested, not alone in the problems and issues with which the campaign is expected to deal, but also in the personal characteristics of the candidates.

The preliminary events of the contest indicate that in order to avoid bitterness, the leaders on both sides must display a sense of justice and fairness by refusing to become the beneficiaries of political influences and processes which they themselves are unwilling to employ. In this way, and in no other, may the poisons of slander and libel be counteracted and overcome.

The quadrennial political contest for which our elective system is notable presents an inspiring spectacle when conducted in accordance with high standards of ethics. No better evidence can be produced of the soundness of the Democratic theory of government than recognition of the right of the people to govern themselves through the selection of official representatives.

Numerous political serpents are hissing in the dark and striking from cover, and with venomous malice seek to poison the thoughts and arouse the prejudice of those who will decide issues of far reaching importance.

Sound public policy encourages full, frank and fearless discussion of issues and records. It discountenances misrepresentation, perversion and falsehood. No end aimed at by an individual or a political organization can justify the secret or open employment of corrupt or other dishonorable means. The spokesman of a party has the duty to tell the whole truth, and is justified in urging conclusions which his conscience approves, however distasteful or harmful they may be to the opposition. He proves himself unworthy if he knowingly accepts advantage from falsehood, even though not uttered or inspired by himself.

In the hope that frankness, sincerity and fairness may govern throughout the campaign, and that they may be tempered by the spirit of charity which constitutes the sublimest attribute of our Christian civilization, the discussion of the measures at issue is entered upon in the belief that the wisdom of the voters will correctly and justly decide between the two great parties which present their candidates and platforms.

It will not be practicable in this address to touch upon all of the issues raised. Many subjects of importance necessarily are reserved for comment hereafter.

Agricultural Policy

Perhaps the most important issue in this campaign arises out of the attitude of the two major parties toward the problems affecting agriculture.

Both platforms recognize the distressed condition of the industry and embrace promises, the relative value of which is apparent from a comparison of the two pronouncements.

The Republican platform on the subject of farm relief is not readily distinguishable from that of 1924, pledging the party "To take whatever steps are necessary to bring back a balanced condition between agriculture, industry and labor."

The farm problem had appeared in December of 1921, when President Harding requested the former Secretary of Agriculture Mr. Wallace to call a conference. The conference was held in January, 1921, and a resolution adopted calling upon the president and the congress "to take such steps as would immediately re-establish a fair exchange value for all farm products with that of all other commodities."

The secretary of agriculture, Mr. Wallace, took the lead in the preparation of a measure which has become widely known as the McNary-Haugen bill. Prior to the national conventions of 1924 it was defeated in the house of representatives, and consequently was not considered by the senate during that session.

This was the situation when the promise of 1924 was made by the Republican party "to take whatever steps are necessary to bring back a balanced condition between agriculture, industry and labor."

To regain the confidence of the millions of voters who experienced disappointment in the failure of his party to keep its pledge, President Coolidge announced during the campaign of 1924 that he would call an agricultural conference to consider legislation for the next session of congress.

First Conference

The first report of this conference was transmitted by the president to the congress January 28, 1925, embracing the following recommendations:

"There must, therefore, be established a balanced American agriculture by which production is kept in step with the demand of domestic markets and with only such foreign markets as may be profitable."

Thus originated the doctrine of which Mr. Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee for president, became a champion, that agricultural production should be limited to the demands of our domestic markets.

This report also contained recommendations which the president strongly approved for legislation on the subject of cooperative marketing.

The legislation suggested followed the general line of the Capper-Williams bill recommended by Mr. Hoover. It met with opposition from all the principal farm organizations, and was defeated in the house. However, another cooperative marketing bill was passed.

One of the principal distinctions between the two measures is that the administration bill placed cooperative marketing associations under government control, while the bill which passed the house gave the cooperatives certain government assistance with self-control.

trol. The latter bill was never brought to a vote in the senate.

In the short session of congress which expired March 4, 1924, the McNary-Haugen bill, modified, was reported by the committees on agriculture in both the house and senate, but did not come to a vote in either body.

In the Pacific Ruralist of February 7, 1924, Secretary Hoover, outlining his views on the agricultural question, said:

"Generally the fundamental need is a balancing of agricultural production to our home demand."

Hoover's Plan

This plan announced by Mr. Hoover for the alleged relief of agriculture, contemplated the contraction of the farm industry so that production in excess of the home demand would be eliminated, and the export field left entirely to the industrial exporter.

During the session of 1925-1926 the McNary-Haugen bill was added as a committee amendment to house bill 7983, to create a division of cooperative marketing in the department of agriculture. The amendment was defeated and the bill was passed as it came from the house.

Numerous other bills, perhaps 50, designed to promote agricultural prosperity were introduced, but not one of them was strong enough to receive a vote in either house.

The 69th congress passed the McNary-Haugen bill by a vote of 57 per cent of the Democrats and 52 per cent of the Republicans. President Coolidge vetoed the bill.

During the last session the bill was modified to meet many of the objections urged by the president in his veto message, and again passed both houses by increased majorities. For a second time the president vetoed the bill.

This is a partial recapitulation of the events which disclose that throughout the last eight years the Republican party has admitted the urgent character of the agricultural problem. These facts prove also that the Republican party is either incapable of successfully dealing with the question or has deliberately violated its express promises to the farmers of the nation. It would seem that eight years have afforded ample time for action, and that a political organization which has had every opportunity which these years could bring to obtain beneficial results should not now be heard to ask for a renewal of its lease on power merely to repeat the old promises which have been so often broken. But the argument does not end at this point.

Mr. Hoover, as the president's trusted adviser, is perhaps more directly responsible for the failure of farm relief legislation during the eight years referred to than any other single political leader. His present position touching legislation for agricultural relief marks no material advance. In his speech of acceptance it is asserted:

"The most urgent economic problem in our nation today is in agriculture. . . . Differences of opinion as to both causes and remedies have retarded the completion of a constructive program of relief. . . ."

Platform Fails

This language exp.essly recognizes the persistence of the problem and what is more significant, the failure of his party to advance "a constructive program of relief."

What are the methods suggested by the nominee for president in his interpretation of the Republican platform?

1—He asserts:

"An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief."

Will the farmers of the United States, who have waited eight years for Mr. Hoover and his associates to serve them, accept the tariff as a remedy "for depression in farm products" whose domestic prices are controlled in markets not shielded by the tariff wall? Our farmers usually produce for export large quantities of wheat, corn, cotton and other staple products. Increased tariffs can afford no relief.

2—The next proposal in Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech is the development of inland waterways.

No political party opposes the improvement of rivers and harbors; but if the farmers of the United States must wait until transportation rates are sufficiently reduced by means of waterways to bring them prosperity, they may as well give up the fight and accept the humiliation and ruin which has threatened them throughout the last eight years.

3—The remaining feature of Mr. Hoover's plan for farm relief is the stimulation of cooperative marketing by advancing federal credits.

The cooperative marketing system has long been recognized by many members of both parties as helpful, but if it is to be regarded as of controlling value in the solution of the farm problem, why have the administrations in which Mr. Hoover has served as a cabinet member failed to apply this remedy with promptness?

Contrast with this record of feebleness and failure the Democratic policy for the improvement of agriculture:

Democrat's Policy

1.—We repudiate Mr. Hoover's proposal to limit farm production to the domestic demand, as calculated to belittle, rather than to encourage the great industry of agriculture.

Wheat, cotton and other farm products have long contributed to the maintenance of our balance of trade. In 1927 we sold to other nations cotton amounting to $959,000,000; wheat sold abroad helped to swell our exports $324,000,000. If Mr. Hoover's suggestion should be carried out, hundreds of thousands of farmers and their families would lose their property and be driven from their homes, to swell even further the ranks of unemployed in the urban centers.

2—The Democratic party recognizes the right of farmers to lead in the development of farm policies.

One of the reasons the Republican party has failed is that it has relied on the judgment of politicians and rejected the opinions of men whose interests and associations have prompted them to devote lifelong study to farm problems.

3—That adequate credit facilities and better administration of the farm loan system be assured in the interest of farmers.

The mismanagement of this system during the last few years has aroused the fears of many that it may be wrecked or its effectiveness greatly impaired if present policies are continued.

4—The necessity is recognized by the Democratic party for an organized agriculture through which the farmer may work out and apply his own remedies, as well as receive government aid, through a federal farm board.

5—The creation of a federal farm board and the financing of cooperative associations to deal with the crop surpluses.

While the equalization fee provided for in the McNary-Haugen bill is not expressly approved, the Democratic platform does recognize the principle of distributing the cost of operations with respect to surplus crops over the marketed units whose producers are benefited thereby.

If a more equitable and effective plan than that comprised by the equalization fee is discovered, it should be adopted. The time has come, however, when an economic adventure is justified in behalf of the millions who engage in that industry without which civilization could not survive. The Democratic nominee for president has committed himself to prompt and decisive action in accordance with the principles outlined in our platform.

Enforcement of Prohibition

There has always been room in the Democratic party for those who differ as to the best means of promoting temperance and of suppressing the traffic in alcoholic beverages. A proposal for changes in the existing national prohibition system, and also a resolution approving the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, were submitted to the committee on platform and resolutions of the Houston convention. Neither was adopted.

Both the committee and the convention, after prolonged hearings, recognized the futility of attempting to secure unanimity for either contention. The committee reported, and the convention unanimously adopted, a declaration in the following language:

"The Republican party, for eight years in complete control of the government at Washington, presents the remarkable spectacle of feeling compelled in its national platform to promise obedience to a provission of the federal constitution which it has flagrantly disregarded and to apologize to the country for its failure to enforce laws enacted by the congress of the United States.

"Speaking for the national Democracy, this convention pledges the party and its nominees to an honest effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

This provision condemns the Republican party for insincerity in promising obedience to the 18th amendment after having flagrantly disregarded for eight years that amendment and the law for its enforcement. The convention recognized that the Democratic party is neither a prohibition nor an anti-prohibition organization, but if entrusted with power its duty would be to enforce all laws.

To one who for 25 years has uniformly supported measures for prohibition, it has been disappointing to note the methods and agencies employed by the Republican party in the enforcement of national prohibition laws.

The question should not be treated as merely political, but rather as moral and economic. Some claiming to be reformers, have clouded the subject with confusion and misunderstanding. They have discredited the motives of those who display moderation and fairness in public discussions and have questioned the loyalty to the cause of temperance of all who are dissatisfied with present conditions.

President Wilson vetoed the Volstead act. The integrity of his purpose was not questioned; his good faith was generally conceded.

Smith's Stand

The Democratic candidate for president, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, declared in his telegram to the convention:

"The equal and even enforcement of the law is the corner stone on which rests the whole structure of Democratic government. If it is the will of the people of this nation that I am to take an oath as president of the United States to protect and defend our constitution and laws, I will execute that oath to the limit of my ability without reservation or evasion."

This language is an unqualified acceptance of the obligation to enforce the law to the best of his ability.

Throughout the last two administrations the prohibition bureau has been under the treasury department, whose head, prior to national prohibition, was largely interested in the liquor business.

Mr. Vare, who thwarted the movement to "stop Hoover" at Kansas City and forced Mr. Hoover's nomination, claimed election to the senate on a platform containing a single plank—the repeal of national prohibition.

Can it be said that because Governor Smith believes that, without returning to the old evils of the saloon, temperance and respect for law can be promoted through changes in the existing system, he is a nullificationist and an enemy of the constitution? Such arguments impeach the intelligence of their authors.

It is certain that only such modifications as meet with the approval of public opinion are possible, no matter who serves as president.

Having in mind that the law for enforcement of prohibition has been discredited because good faith efforts have not been made for its enforcement, the conclusion is asserted that a breakdown is not threatened by mere proposals for modification, but rather by indifference of the public to proper execution and by corruption and inefficiency of many enforcement officers. It is recognized that the people constitute the reservoir of all political power and have the right, in the constitutional manner, to call for changes in either or both the constitution and the law. The executive has no power to modify either. It is in no sense an attempt at nuullification to suggest changes in the constitution or the law. Nullification consists in refusal or willful failure to enforce.

To summarise, the Democratic platform does not commit the party for or against modification. It does pledge the nominees to an honest effort to enforce the 18th amendment and the laws enacted pursuant thereto. Governor Smith has promised his best efforts to enforce prohibition. His personal opinion that the law or the constitution should be changed to make certain better observance and enforcement, does not affect his disposition to perform that duty.

Merchant Marine

An adequate merchant marine is recognized by the Democratic party as essential to the safety of the nation and the independence of its commerce.

When it became apparent that the United States might become involved in the late world war, which began in 1914, her merchant marine had almost disappeared from the seas. President Wilson announced a policy which in the emergency met with general approval. The Democratic congress gave effect to his recommendations and provided liberal appropriations for the construction of ships for the carriage of our commerce. Democrats have never advocated and do not favor, as a permanent policy, government ownership and operation of shipping lines if private enterprise will provide the funds and agencies required to give American shippers the necessary carrying service under our own flag. The Republican party has been quick to respond to private influences and the propaganda of our rivals in commerce, while Democrats have been concerned primarily with the interests of our own people. We have refused to approve reckless sacrifice and favoritism in the sale of vessels. We have insisted that the service of the United States Shipping board shall be continued without discrimination against sections or ports until it becomes practicable to transfer the lines for private operation under conditions that will protect our commerce in peace times against discriminations which are certain to be imposed upon it if transported largely under foreign flags; and it must be made certain that in the event of war the merchant vessels, reasonably required as auxiliaries to naval operations, shall be available for prompt use without reliance upon the shipping facilities of other powers.

While the necessity for government ships continues, and until they can be transferred under satisfactory conditions for private operation, the service should be kept efficient and should be improved to meet competition with foreign lines and to provide for the expansion of our commerce.

Political Corruption

Honesty in public affairs is of transcendent importance. Corruption is the red signal of decadence. Corrupt elections breed dishonest public officers. That this issue exists is proved by the fact that both of the major parties have so declared in their platforms. That the platform makers at Kansas City dread the issue is shown in their effort to anticipate the declaration on the subject by the Democratic party.

While rare cases of fraud may be regarded as unavoidable in any business comparable in volume to that of the United States, it becomes a matter of general political concern when the party in power proves so derelict as to fail to prevent shocking and repeated departures from standards of common honesty in the transaction of the public business. The basis for the platform declarations referred to is found in notorious and criminal breaches of duty in several of the executive departments — instances which have come to light during the last seven years. The wholesale frauds perpetrated by Republican officeholders since March 4, 1921, have prompted pledges in language which implies recognition of the necessity for reform.

In the Kansas City platform it is asserted by the Republicans:

"We stand for honesty in government, for the appointment of officials whose integrity cannot be questioned." . . .

If this principle had been applied by the Republican administration it would not have been necessary for the senate to advise the discharge of an attorney general who had flagrantly disregarded the obligations of his office and contributed to the pollution of the fountain of justice. The country would have been spared the spectacle of the executive sustaining this faithless officer until public sentiment compelled dismissal; and the dismissal would have been made without an expression of confidence in the faithless officer by the chief executive. If the reputation of the government had been duly safeguarded, there would have been no necessity for the senate to urge the retirement of the secretary of the navy who had blindly approved the corrupt contract by which the nation's oil reserves were bartered to private interests through the bribery of a fellow cabinet officer, the secretary of the interior. Surely it is of greater consequence that a national administration shall sustain and justify the public confidence by the prompt dismissal of faithless cabinet officers than that the feelings of such officers shall be spared by retaining them in authority after their misconduct has been disclosed.

Veterans' Bureau

Breaches of trust in the veterans' bureau and in the alien property custodian's office; the secret exaction of enormous campaign funds from despoilers of the public domain; and the widespread sale of favors and appointments by patronage dispensers disclose conditions which should have been corrected long ago and which make the platform declaration of the Republican party for "honesty in government" and for "the appointment of officials whose integrity cannot be questioned," appear insincere and for the purpose of securing another lease on power.

The Democratic party pledges itself to "rescue the government from those who have betrayed their trust by disgracing it"; and supports its claim to the confidence of the voters by comparing the last eight years of Republican maladministration with the record of our great Democratic president, Woodrow Wilson. During his presidency, to the usual administrative responsibilities were added the duty of carrying on the greatest war of all times. Numerous committees of investigation created by the opposition after it had secured control of the congress immediately following the war disclosed no breach of trust, no instance of dishonesty on the part of any Democratic officeholder.

Throughout almost four terms the Democratic nominee for president has served as chief executive of New York. During all his service the searchlight of hostile scrutiny has been thrown in full glare on his administrations. That Governor Smith's record has stood the test is evidence of that extraordinary executive ability and fearlessness required in a president of the United States, who is expected to safeguard the government against such thieves and crooks as have plundered it during recent years.

Campaign contributions and fair elections are intimately related to honest government. Here again both platforms recognize an issue; The Republicans say:

"Economy, honesty and decency in the conduct of political campaigns are a necessity if representative government is to be preserved to the people and political parties are to hold the respect of the citizens at large.

"The campaign of 1926 complied with all these requirements. It was a campaign, the expenses of which were carefully budgeted in advance, and which, at the close, presented a surplus and not a deficit."

If the spirit of these declarations had governed, the former chairman of the Republican committee could not have secretly extorted or received from a beneficiary of the naval oil lease large amounts in liberty bonds for the payment of a deficit coming over from the 1920 campaign, and without the payment of which the budget of 1924 could not have been balanced without disclosing the arrangements which would have forfeited public confidence in the campaign methods of the Republican party. The secret procurement of liberty bonds derived from a corrupt business transaction in oil, and the effort by the former chairman of the Republican national committee to distribute the bonds among cabinet officers, senators and other Republicans of great prestige; the deliberate concealment of the plan from the senate committee of investigation disclose practices at variance with the pledge now made not to "create any deficit in campaign expenditures" and to keep the public fully advised of the sources of campaign funds.

Amusing Provision

Attention is now directed to another declaration in the Republican platform:

"There will not be any relaxing of resolute endeavor to keep our elections clean, honest and free from taint of any kind. The improper use of money in governmental and political affairs is a great national evil."

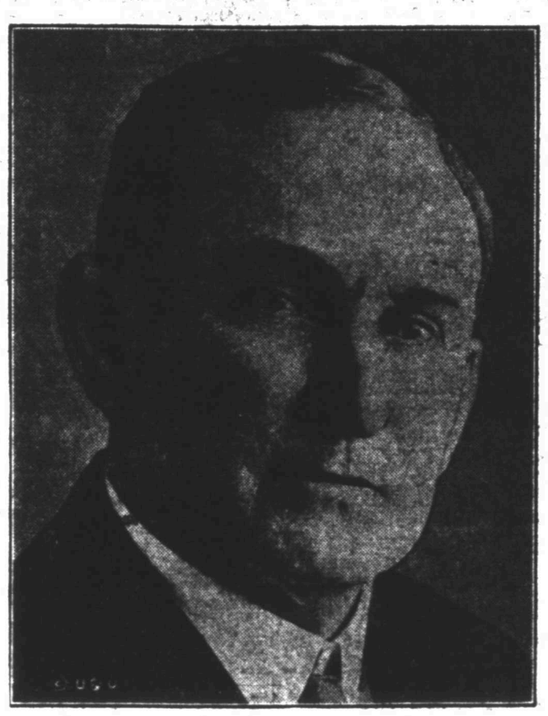

This provision is amusing in the light of recent history. It implies that a determined effort heretofore has been made to "keep elections clean" and to prevent the improper use of money. The implication is contradicted by the facts.

The safety of our political institutions depends on fair elections and honest government. You may never expect clean government if nominations or elections are to be bought and sold. Of course, such methods do not meet with approval by the majority of the Republican party. Many Republicans condemn the indifference of their leaders to the ignominious record mentioned—a record which never could have been made if the watchmen on the towers had not fallen asleep.

The Democratic party invites the cooperation of all who desire the administration of national affairs reformed in accordance with the principles set forth in its platform.

Mr. Chairman, Bowers, and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, the nomination for vice president is accepted with sincere appreciation of the honor and the responsibilities that are associated with it.

Poker With Sharks' Teeth For Stakes To Amuse Byrd Expedition

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. (UP)—Poker, with sharks' teeth and polar bear skins for stakes, will be the popular diversion for members of the Byrd antarctic expedition during the long "six month' nights" along the borealis.

Richard G. Brophy, business manager of the expedition here today purchasing chess boards, playing cards, poker chips and checkers, said this equipment would be as necesary as food and clothing.

"A straw vote of the party showed that poker would be the favorite game," Brophy said today. "All kinds of cards will be the order of the day, but mostly the games that require several to play will be favored. Imagine playing solitaire through a six-months' night.

"Amusement and occupation of the mind through the dreary hours that are bound to come are as essential to morale a food and clothing for the body."

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—Pretty 23-year-old Annie May Engle of Travis county is not going to let distance prevent her from entering Columbia university in New York City, following her graduation here this week from the University of Texas with an M. A. degree.

Literally carrying a camping kit in one hand and her freshly inscribed diploma in the other, she set out today to walk to New York, if necessary. Actually she is hoping to catch rides part of the way at least, but she is going just the same.

"Sure, I'd like to ride some of the way, but if I am not offered rides, it shan't bother me," she said.

A number of years ago Miss Engle received a B. A. degree from the University of Texas.

Frances Willard's Temperance Trees Struck by Blight

EVANSTON, Ill., Aug. 30. (US) In the dim past, when whisky was bought for church functions, Miss Frances E. Willard, then a slip of a girl of 13, planted two chestnut trees in her back yard. She emblemized the trees and their future spreading branches as tokens of the staunch and spreading cause of temperance.

That was 80 years ago. And during that lapse of time Miss Willard founded the Women's Christian Temperance Union. The trees continued to grow sturdy and strong with the advance of prohibition.

Until this year with prohibition an issue—they were healthy, but lately a blight seems to have fallen upon them and the trees are rotting away.

Condemned Man Gets Cigar as Last Wish

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 30. (US) Granting his last wish, officials at Sing Sing gave Martin L. Miller a cigar—big, black and strong—after his supper tonight.

"Let me smoke a good black cigar and I won't give a damn whether I live or not," he told them.

For an hour the doomed man sat in his cell and nursed the smouldering weed that had been denied him for many months.

Miller, who is 25, was executed at 11 p. m. for the murder of Mrs. Helen C. Kimball on March 19 in her apartment in Brooklyn.

Centenarians are common in South Africa and unless persons are considerably over a hundred their age is not regarded as extraordinary.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

Dr. McCoy's menus suggested for the week beginning Sunday, Sept. 2:

Sunday: Breakfast, poached egg, wholewheat muffins, stewed raisins; lunch, cooked small carrots and peas, stuffed celery, shredded lettuce; dinner, baked chicken, wholewheat dressing, cooked asparagus, McCoy salad, apricot whip.

Monday: Breakfast, French omelet, Melba toast, stewed prunes; lunch, berries and cream, no sugar; dinner, Callsbury steak, baked turnips and carrots grated together, salad of sliced cucumbers on endive leaves, plain jello or jell-well.

Tuesday: Breakfast, cottage cheese, pineapple (fresh or canned); lunch, spinach and rice en casserole, celery and ripe olives; dinner, roast pork, string beans, salad of diced cooked beets on lettuce, baked apple.

Wednesday: Breakfast, coddled eggs, Melba toast, stewed pears; lunch, ice cream (½ pint portions); dinner, baked sea bass, squash, cooked greens, combination salad of tomatoes, cucumbers. No dessert.

Thursday: Breakfast, Re-toasted breakfast food, with milk or cream, fresh peaches, (no sugar); lunch, cooked spinach and okra, raw celery; dinner, boiled lean beef, mashed turnips and carrots, salad of shredded raw cabbage, gelatinized milk with prune juice and whipped cream.

Friday: Breakfast, French omelet, re-toasted Triscuit, applesauce; lunch, melon or grapes as desired; dinner, broiled filet of sole, spinach, tomatoes, salad of head lettuce, grapejuice whip (no cream).

Saturday: Breakfast, wholewheat raisin muffins, peanut butter, stewed raisins; lunch, ice and cantaloupe; dinner, roast veal, cooked cucumber, string beans, salad of grated raw carrots, baked pears.

"Spinach and rice en casserole: Measure out a half cupful of rice and wash thoroughly. Let soak in last water for an hour or more, drain, and cook until tender in about a quart of boiling water. Then throw rice into a colander and rinse in cold water. This washes away the sticky liquid, and separates the grains of rice. There will be about two cupfuls of the cooked rice, to which add one cupful of cooked and mashed spinach. Mix together thoroughly, put into a casserole, and bake for 15 or 20 minutes tightly covered. Remove cover and place under broiler flame until slightly crisped on top. Serve each portion with a lump of butter.

Questions and Answers

Question: Jeanette W. asks: "Is it possible that a child will be deformed because of the mother harboring morbid thoughts about it being born without an arm or leg, or do not such thoughts have any effect on the child?"

Answer: Most medical authorities agree that a mother cannot produce a deformity in her unborn child through harboring morbid thoughts. Most mothers will not believe this, and will tell you of birthmarks produced through fear, worry, anxiety, etc. I am personally convinced that the temperament and intelligence of the child is affected to some degree by the mental condition of the mother, but there is no evidence that physical abnormalities will develop from the effect of the mother's mind.

Question: Mrs. Martin B. asks: "Is it possible that under-action of the suprarenal gland is the cause of varicose veins? I have taken a half grain of suprarenal extract every day for about three months, but cannot see any improvement. I follow your diet and exercise."

Answer: Varicose veins are produced by a breaking down of the walls of the veins. If the veins extend over both legs it is sure to be due to a lack of organic minerals in the body's food supply, or due to an acidosis which destroys the minerals after they are assimilated. If any of the ductless glands oversecrete or under-secrete, it is bound to affect metabolism to some extent, but the use of glandular extracts will not correct the mineral deficiency from which the veins suffer in the trouble known as varicose veins. I have an article that gives a good home treatment for varicose veins and I will be very glad to send it to you if you will send me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope, care of this newspaper.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By GLORIA SWANSON

Here we have Gloria Swanson—or Madame la Countess de la Falaise, as she is known in very private life.

GLORIA SWANSON

How many miles of redhot celluloid are dedicated to her art?

After Gloria raised the temperature of "The Admirable Crichton" several years ago, she lived through a harsh period when unkind people called her "The Clothes - Horse," but in her recent picture, "Sadie Thompson," Gloria proved that she was not that kind of an animal at all!

"I belong to a golf club here in Hollywood," Gloria told me, "and the other day I heard a conversation at the first tee. I believed that conversation constitutes my latest favorite joke.

"An old gentleman belongs to the club. This day he came out for a game of golf, but found, to his aggravation, that the places were booked two hours ahead by women players, who were practicing for the recent woman's golf championship.

"The old man looked over the crowd of women who were waiting, and then observed loudly and for the benefit of the crowd of the other sex:

"'Simply disgusting! I shall join a club for gentlemen only!'

"A bright young thing standing near gave him a smile and said: 'What makes you think you'd be all right?'

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 30. (AP)—Moderate advances on unfavorable crop or weather reports met renewed liquidation together with some local and southern selling in the New York cotton market today. After selling up to 18.82 early December declined to 18.62 and closed at 18.64, with the general market closing fairly steady at net declines of 8 to 11 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 5 points to an advance of 3 points with the market working up a few points during the early trading on prospects for showers over the greater part of the belt, together with reiterated reports of crop deterioration as a result of shedding and insect damage. The bulge was soon checked by realizing or liquidation, however, and fluctuations later were irregular, but in a general way slight advances were checked by increased offerings from one source or another and prices worked gradually lower. October sold off from 18.94 to 18.77 and March from 18.80 to 18.64 and the close was within a few points of the low.

The comparatively small volume of business was generally attributed by local brokers to a disposition to even up commitments in advance of the approaching three-day adjournment, and uncertainty as to the probable showing of the next government crop report scheduled for publication on September 8. One of the private "end August" crop reports was issued today placing the condition as of August 25 at 61.8 per cent of normal compared with 68.0 per cent last year, but it was pointed out that the condition might have changed somewhat between the date mentioned, and the date of the government report which carries the crop up to September 1.

Exports today were 17,942 bales, making 263,451 so far this season. Port receipts today 21,441. U. S. port stocks 479,192.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 30. (AP)—The cotton market was again dull today with business limited to evening-up for over the Labor day holiday at the end of the week. This tended to see-saw prices, although they worked slightly lower under selling induced by bearish crop reports. December deliveries, which had sold up to 18.39, eased off to 18.18, 21 points down from the high. The option closed 5 points above the lowest, but 11 points under the previous close. The general market closed steady at net declines of 9 to 11 points.

The opening was irregular, first trades being unchanged to 2 points down. Prices worked lower in early trading in sympathy with relatively easier Liverpool cables. October traded off to 18.18 and December 18.25, or 9 to 11 points below the previous close. When the early offerings were absorbed moderate trade buying developed, probably inspired by the numerous reports of crop deterioration and weevil activity. All the early loss was recovered and October traded up to 18.33, with active months generally showing a net advance of 5 to 6 points.

One private report was issued during the day and made the condition average 61.8. No figures on the estimated size of the crop were given but traders placed a bearish construction on the report, believing that it indicated a probable yield of 15,000,000 bales. This coupled with expectations of similarly large estimates in the near future and liquidation in advance of the week-end holidays caused active positions to ease to new lows for the day with October at 18.14 and December 18.18, or 19 to 21 points under the highs of the morning. The market recovered a few points in final trading and October closed at 18.18, 9 points net lower.

'Selected Stocks' Take Spree And Soar to New Market Price Record

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 30. (US)—Loose Wiles soared 9½ to a new record high price in another strong market of "selected stocks," today in which the month-end money developments were practically ignored. The unexpected appearance of a large amount of money in the call market, told of here today, was responsible for much of the good feeling that existed.

Radio, Savage Arms and Kolster were others to score rather sensational gains. General Motors and other standard industrials were held to narrow price range. International Nickel continued to move forward but the other Durant stocks did not arouse much interest. Railroads were irregular again with Missouri Pacific enjoying good demand. Cerro De Pasco took the leadership of the copper group with Anacona a close second. Oils were quiet but firm.

General Motors is the battleground for one of the stiffest fights between bulls and bears ever witnessed on the floor. Professionals are short and those interests most responsible for bullish activity throughout the list recently are the main supporters of the stock. They have taken all offerings when weakness threatened with the apparent idea in mind of holding to November when the directors are expected to authorize a substantial stock dividend. Allied Chemical scored the best gain but it was the buying of Can that was the outstanding development in the standard industrials as it resembled that experienced just prior to the last rather sensational running in of shorts.

Savage Arms sudden spurt was regarded as the result of quiet accumulation reported for the past several weeks. The company, it was pointed out, is now starting to derive increasing income from its new "peace products." Loose Wiles buying appeared from the same sources as were first interested over a week ago, as pointed out there exclusively at that time. Simmons was another to climb into new high territory with buying described as of investment character. Cerro has been hanging behind other copper companies although its earnings have improved as much as any and more than most, giving rise to expectation of extra dividend later in the year. Warner held firm as belief was expressed that acquisition of First National Pictures would be announced next week.

Freeport Texas was rallied against shorts although shifting continues by those who have profits left. Montgomery Ward dipped only fractionally although several attempts to depress it were made by professionals. Interests who have had success in Montgomery Ward and other stocks were mentioned as buyers of Mexican Seaboard at the same time that it became known that an important statement concerning agreement for drilling Venezuelan properties by one of the leading American companies would be announced within 24 hours. United Cigar gained over a point following report here that important negotiations were under way with other tobacco distributing interests.

Grain

GRAIN REVIEW
By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. (US)—Wheat prices eased off gradually in a dull market today. The decline was apparently due more to lack of interest than to any real selling pressure. Closing quotations on wheat futures registered losses of ⅝@⅞c as compared with the previous close.

September corn was weak on scattered selling which carried prices down into stop-loss orders. Deferred futures followed in sympathy, although their range was smaller. Corn finished ⅝ to 3c lower.

Oats and rye reflected the heavy tones in the other grains and showed losses of ⅜ to ⅛c and rye ⅛ to 1c.

Conditions continued about the same in regard to the wheat situation. With nothing in the news to promote any exceptional interest, the trade was inclined to let the market rest as this week-end is an extra day in length and private crop estimates are due Tuesday.

Some early buying was credited to northwest interests. Selling was scattered and not of great volume. All of the reports from the northwest on both sides of the boundary told of generally favorable conditions, with harvesting progressing at a rapid pace.

While corn was weak from the outset, trade was light and the reason for the decline appeared much the same as in wheat. Weather conditions were reported as favorable over the belt, but advices from traveling crop experts continued to indicate that the condition of the crop as a whole may not be so good as it was at the time of the August government report. While shipments have fallen off, shipping demand was good and there were local sales of 108,000 bushels. Receipts continued light.

In the cash market wheat was 1 to 2c lower, corn 2 to 3c off, oats steady to ½c lower and rye weak.

WINKLER LEADS IN LOCATIONS

Twenty-Five New Tests In West Texas

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, Aug. 30.—Twenty-five locations for new oil tests in the Permian basin were made in 10 West Texas counties last week, a dozen of them in Winkler county. This is three less locations than made during the previous week in a dozen counties. Last week's 25 locations swells the total for the last 12 weeks to 316.

Winkler county replaced Howard last week in locations, the former's 12 locations leading the field with Howard county second with three locations. Pecos and Coke counties each got a pair, and there was one made in each of Crane, Irion, Taylor, Mitchell, Runnels and Crockett counties. The locations the previous week were in Howard, Winkler, Jones, Pecos, Glasscock, Fisher, Dawson, Borden, Mitchell, Loving, Ward and Scurry counties. Three corrections were made last week.

Eight of Winkler county's dozen locations were made by the Southern Crude Oil Purchasing company, as follows: No. T-68-3-B-2 Hendrick, 2,200 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the east line; and No. T-89-H-1 Hendrick, 1,815 feet from the south line and 2,310 feet from the east line, each in section 46, block 26, public school land; No. T-83-N-3 Hendrick, 440 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the east line of section 28, block 26; No. T-88-R-1 Hendrick, 440 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the west line of section 27, block 26; No. T-88-S-2 Hendrick, 1,320 feet from the north line and 330 feet from the west line, and No. T-88-T-4 Hendrick, 1,650 feet from the south and west lines, each in section 34, block 26; No. T-89-D-1 Hendrick, 1,320 feet from the north line and 1,650 feet from the west line of section 35, block B-5; and No. T-89-E-1 Hendrick, 330 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the east line of section 40, block B-5.

Marland Production company made two locations in Winkler county: No. 2-B Hendrick, 990 feet from the south and west lines of section 34, block 26, and No. 1-C Hendrick, 2,310 feet from the north line and 1,650 feet from the east line of section 30, block B-5. Jennings Pool Test Will Extend Field

COLEMAN, Aug. 30.—Still testing on the swab, the E. J. Cunningham, Simpson, White & Pinkerton No. C-2 Jennings in the A. S. Lipscomb survey No. 94, twelfth producer in the Jennings pool and southern extension to the field, produced 131 barrels in 14 hours, it was reported from the field today.

The importance of the C-2 Jennings completion lies in the fact that the field has definitely been defined to the north by the Derby Oil company's No. 1 Jennings, which, although an offset to No. 2 producer, failed to encounter the shallow sand around 1,150 feet. However, the pool has not as yet been defined to the south or southwest and it is highly possible, according to geologists, that even more production may be expected in that direction from the original wells.

In the southern part of the county, two miles south of Voss, Henshaw Oil corporation's No. 1 Netherton, 750 feet from the south line and 1490 feet from the west line of the southwest quarter of section 1, S. P. R. R. survey, was dry and abandoned at 2504 feet during the week.

Theaters Threaten to Close After Musicians Rebel; 'Talkies' Blamed

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. (US)—Rather than meet the exorbitant demands of the Musicians' union, the movie exhibitors said today they would close down their theaters.

This statement came from Jack Miller, president of the exhibitors' association, following a conference between himself and other leading exhibitors with James Petrillo, president of the Musicians' union, and his associates.

The "talkies" are blamed.

Mr. Miller said:

"We will offer no compromise. Meeting the union demands would mean bankruptcy for most of our members, and they feel that they might as well go broke fighting a strike as signing their rights away under a union contract.

"The synchronized pictures are the cause of it all. Now, the union says that unless we agree to sign their contracts calling for six musicians when we have only been employing four, they will call their men out and take the operators with them."

Specifically the union demands list certain theaters which must employ four musicians in addition to an organist during a period of from 40 to 44 weeks. They also demand that any new theaters with a seating capacity of 800 persons must be bound by the same agreement.

The union further demands that every theater employing synchronized music must use a minimum of six musicians during the time the instrument is in use.

In connection with the union fight on synchronized music-pictures, it was pointed out that the federation of musicians is raising $10,000,000 to fight the "talkies."

Petroleum Producers—Comac Wildcat Expected to Open Up New Territory

The Petroleum Producers and Comac Drilling company No. 1 Mrs. Bishop, located 1730 feet north and 1500 feet east of the southwest corner of Lewis Netherly survey, abstract 240, Wichita county, late Thursday afternoon drilled out the plug from the sand, topped at 1783 feet, and oil rose rapidly several hundred feet into the hole. The well which, from its showing, will probably make anywhere from 100 to 125 barrels when completed, was drilled eight feet into the sand.

The completion of a well here, which is in absolute wildcat territory, one and a half miles east of the Watkins and Overby producers, and a like distance south of the Love pool in the Kennard survey, will result in considerable new drilling being started, and will also be the means of deepening many of the older shallow tests to the same horizon uncovered in the Petroleum Producers-Comac producer.

The Petroleum Producers set and cemented the casing on top of the sand at 985 feet in its No. 5 Hemmig test, in section 410, T. E. L. survey, southwest of Olney, in Young county.

TEXAS CO.-RICHARDSON

Texas company is rigging up on its No. 16, J. T. Richardson test, 150 feet south and 150 west of the northeast corner of lot 6, N. Anderson ranch, in southwest Archer county. The new test will offset the Madden-Hunt producer.

WE WONDER WHY

The W. T. Waggoner pasture, in southeast Wilbarger county, until a few weeks ago the most active spot in North Texas oildom, boasting of between 40 and 50 rigs in actual drilling, has in the last ten days fallen off rapidly and with the exception of a few wells in the wildcat and outlying section drilling has practically been suspended. Lack of water for drilling and overtaxed pipeline facilities are put forward as some of the factors in the shutdown.

SOUTH OF TOLBERT

Dorsey and Tidwell's of Fort Worth test on the Jones farm in section 47, block 16, H. T. & C. R. R. survey, south of Tolbert, in Wilbarger county, is drilling at a depth of 1660 feet.

SOUTHWEST OF GREYBACK

The Texas company is rigging up for a wildcat test No. L-1, W. T. Waggoner, to be drilled 205 feet north and 205 feet west of the southeast corner of section 12, block 4, H. & T. C. R. R. survey, southwest of Greyback pool in Wilbarger county.

GULF DRILLING IN TEST

The Gulf Production is drilling out the plug from the sand at 1292 feet in its No. 3 W. O. Hayter well, located in section 2409, T. E. L. survey, southwest Archer county.

NEAR HOLLIDAY

E. J. Stump and others have made location for their fourth well, to be drilled 750 feet west and 150 feet north of the southeast corner of section 11, Denton county school lands in Holliday pool, north Archer county.

More Women Are Plane Passengers

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 30. (AP)—The hand that rocks the cradle rides in airplanes.

That is one of the outstanding impressions gained by Heywood Nelms, a director of the Houston Municipal airport, who has just returned from a tour of European airports.

"I found that 75 per cent of the passengers utilizing the air lines from Croyden, London's airport, and Le Bourget, the aerodome at Paris, are Americans," Mr. Nelms said, "and that 80 per cent of this number are women."

Mr. Nelms said he was inclined to believe that this preference of women for aerial transportation might be caused by their fear of sea sickness in crossing the English channel. But at inland European airports, he pointed out, more women than men are passengers on air lines.

MEMPHIS HOST HIGHWAY MEET

Panhandle-Rio Grande Route Is Discussed

MEMPHIS, Texas, Aug. 30.—A meeting of the Panhandle-Rio Grande Highway association was held here Thursday with representatives from every county from Mangum, Okla., to Snyder and beyond. Judge Horace Holley, president, and M. G. Evans, secretary of the association, with other officials of the organization, were present.

Mr. Evans stated that the proposed highway had been logged practically all the way through Texas, and that it will in time become one of the popular routes through Texas. He said also that it would prove to be one of the best feeders for highway No. 1, the Broadway of America, for it will lead tourists into the Broadway at a time of year when other feeder highways are closed on account of weather conditions.

It is proposed to connect the highway at the state line east of Wellington with the Oklahoma state highway to Oklahoma City, where it will lead into the north and east transcontinental highways.

The representatives present pledged their counties to an active campaign of building up their roads.

A barbecue was spread for the visitors at noon.

"I Ate Just Because It Was Eating Time"

Florida Lady Felt Weak and Tired, But Got Stronger and Regained Her Strength After Taking Cardui.

PLANT CITY, Fla.—"Cardui has done more for me than I can express in words," declares Mrs. L. R. Willaford, who lives on Warnell street at the corner of East Reynolds, this city.

"Any lady who has suffered from weakness, as I have, can appreciate a good tonic, and Cardui is a good one," says Mrs. Willaford.

"I was so weak and tired, I did not enjoy anything. I did not have an appetite. I simply ate because it was eating time.

"I would get up so tired in the morning, until I was all out of heart, and just wondered how long one could keep going, feeling as I did.

"A friend told me of Cardui, and I took it. While I didn't gain any weight, I gained in strength, and how I ate! My appetite was much work was much easier, too, and my work was muc heasier.

"Cardui surely did help me."

GARDEN: "Fighting Red Head." Serial. Comedy.

GEM: "Thunder Riders." Serial. Comedy.

"Three Ring Marriage" is in its last day Friday at the Majestic.

Same is true of "Love Hungry," starring Lois Moran, at the Mission.

Th eonly place they ever have a duel these days is in the movies. At least we thought so until yesterday when European news services carried the wild tale that Jaime del Rio, divorced hubby of Dolores del Rio, who is touring Europe with her manager, E. Carew, had challenged Carew to a duel. There was some speculation and some gossip with a fair amount of spice attached to it and Dolores and Carew.

Then came a joint denial from Jaimie and Carew in which they said they were the best of friends and that the story was without foundation.

After all, she is no longer Jaimie's wife.

And if she wants to tour Europe, with the large group that is in Carew's party, she probably has a right to do so.

So, it seems as though that duels still exist only in the movies—if you will include movie publicity in the deal. The stories looked like a straight publicity gag to help popularize the Mexican actress. The thing we like best about it is that they don't have to "popularize" the American girls. They can usually hold their own without "popularizing."

Friday night is china night again at the Olympic theater. That means every woman entering the show Friday night will receive, free, a piece of chinaware. Each Monday and Friday nights, a piece of chinaware will be given free to each woman entering the theater. This will continue until the entire 52 pieces which comprise the set that is being given away are distributed.

"Hangman's House," a thoroughly enjoyable picture, opened Thursday at the Olympic theater. Victor McLaglan is starred, but our choice of the cast is June Collyer. There is a lot of excitement connected with the show which deals with the trials of a girl who marries against her will to please her father who is dying. Victor McLaglen makes an excellent hero, and one who will be enjoyed by the entire public.

"Women They Talk About," a vitaphone picture, starring Irene Rich, and Audrey Ferris, is opening at the Strand theater Friday. It is a tale of petticoat politics where cupid referees a political battle.

The old circus fight cry of "Hey, Rube," will ring out on the vitaphone in "The Sawdust Trail," which opens Labor day at the Strand. This is the second of Paramount's pictures with sound.

A scene from "Women They Talk About," a vitaphone picture, at the Strand starting Friday.

DEMO CALLS DALLAS MEET

Party Leaders to Gather Sept. 3

DALLAS, Aug. 30. (AP)—A call for the state Democratic central committee, chairmen for senatorial districts and counties, and prominent Democrats throughout Texas to meet here September 3, was issued by Chairman James Young of Kaufman, from "regular" Democrat headquarters today. Young said the meeting would afford Democratic leaders opportunity to hear Senator Joseph T. Robinson, vice presidential nominee, speak here that day. An effort will be made to have Senator Robinson attend the conference.

District and county chairmen were requested to urge prominent Democrats of ther vicinity to attend the conference. Reports will be heard from all sections of the state, further details of the statewide organization will be worked out and work assigned to various committees.

Officers of the state central Democratic committee jested at the threat of "professed Democrats" to join forces with the Republicans, but it was said they expect to "count noses" and prosecute the campaign into every "nook and cranny of Texas."

Mayes Urges Austin to Prepare For Centennial Exposion in 1936

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 30.—Immediate launching of plans and preparations for one of the Texas centennial expositions, to be held here in 1936, is urged by Will H. Mayes, former lieutenant governor, and a member of the Texas Centennial Exposition board.

It is almost certain that this city will be the site of one of the elaborate expositions, which Jesse H. Jones of Houston, head of the movement, has suggested be held at the various historical cities and battlefields of the state, in place of one single monster exposition, Mr. Mayes said.

"The fact that Austin is the seat of government and the location of the University of Texas are not sufficient factors to cause the centennial commission to select this city as a site for the centennial or a branch thereof, however," he pointed out. "If Austin does not prepare itself.

"This city should begin now correlating its bond improvement program with other improvements to be continued, "to insure preparation."
