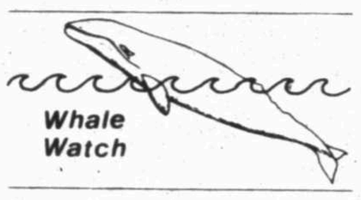
Whales apparently 'free at last'

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Two gray whales that were stranded in Arctic ice for nearly three weeks apparently swam to freedom Friday, ending a million-dollar rescue effort watched around the world.

"There is no evidence of the whales in the immediate area," rescue coordinator Ron Morris said. "I think the whales are definitely gone."

North Slope Borough Mayor George Ahmaogak said the whales were last seen at 8:45 a.m.



"They were looking good," Ahmaogak said after talking by radio to Eskimos who had gone to open breathing holes for the whales. The last sighting was about an hour before sunrise. Ahmaogak later made an observation flight over 15 miles of the coastline south and west of Barrow.

"I feel great. I feel like I got no more burden," said Arnold Brower, the senior whaling captain who directed the Eskimo rescue efforts of cutting breathing holes in the ice with chainsaws.

Asked if he was confident the two gray whales swam to freedom, rather than died, Brower replied: "Yes."

Morris called the whales' survival chances "pure speculation. They had the will to live. They should make it."

Whether the whales survive probably will never be known because biologists chose not to tag them with radio transmitters to keep track of them.

Brower said he was confident the two whales had reached the channel cut by two Soviet icebreakers.

If the California gray whales followed the icebreaker's channel, they would still have to navigate "leads," natural breaks in the ice that vary greatly in width and close or open according to the wind, about 200 miles to open ocean.

Biologist Howard Braham, director of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Marine Mammal Laboratory in Seattle, said he thought the whales could make the 200-mile journey if they would get moving.

"This is an open water species, basically, and for whatever reason, being in the ice is new to them," he said. "They are not adapted for it anatomically. They are in unfamiliar territory."

Economists dispute claim that budget deficit shrinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economists are disputing the Reagan administration's contention that the budget deficit's underlying trend is downward despite a small increase for 1988.

The Treasury Department and the White House Office of Management and Budget reported Friday that the imbalance between revenues and spending rose to $155.1 billion for the budget year that ended Sept. 30, a $5.4 billion increase over 1987.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, in a joint statement with the OMB, pointed out that several one-time events, including the phase-in of the new tax law, cut the 1987 deficit and inflated the 1988 budget gap.

Excluding those special factors, the deficit would have fallen $31.1 billion between 1987 and 1988, he said, adding, "The underlying trend in the deficit...remains downward."

Private economists concede that 1988 represents substantial progress compared with the record $221.1 billion shortfall of two years ago.

However, they see little hope for meeting the administration projection of $145.5 billion for the current 1989 fiscal year, absent substantial new spending cuts or a tax increase.

The federal government spent a record $1.064 trillion during fiscal 1988, up 6 percent from 1987. Receipts were $909 billion, up 6.4 percent.

Interest payments on the $2.61 trillion national debt totaled $214.1 billion, 9.6 percent greater than a year earlier.

Woman who may have been abducted sought

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — Lawmen were continuing their search for a woman who may have been abducted Friday by her former boyfriend, one of three inmates who have been free since their October 19 escape from the Tom Green County Jail.

The woman, identified as Cecilia Walker of San Angelo, was last seen outside her home wearing a housecoat about 5 a.m. Friday, according to Tom Green County Sheriff's Capt. Mike McCarty. She was talking to 19-year-old Michael Ray Penny, described by McCarty as a former boyfriend, McCarty said.

"We are not sure what exactly happened," the officer said. "A witness heard her say she wasn't going. We're going to assume she didn't go freely. If she is aiding them we are going to have her in here soon with them."

While Penny, who was in jail on charges of forgery, burglary and unlawfully carrying a weapon at the time of his escape, was last seen in the yard of the home, a vehicle drove up.

Clayton Williams moved by naturalization ceremony

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Clayton Williams Jr.'s patriotism turned so sentimental that he shed tears in talking about freedom.

"In this country, freedom and opportunity are available to you folks," he said Friday afternoon in Midland federal court in a naturalization ceremony for 47 aliens from 10 countries.

He listed wars, from the Revolutionary War to the Vietnam War.

"Men died," he said. "They gave their lives for you who are here today."

His forefathers were among those who fought in wars here and abroad, said Williams, a 57-year-old Midland rancher, investor, oilman, communicator and promoter of his alma mater, Texas A&M University.

Williams was invited to the ceremony by his friend, U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, 63.

"I knew him before he knew where Midland was," Bunton, who has a ranching background, said of Williams. Williams, who was born in Alpine, was raised in the Fort Stockton area.

"God has been good to Clayton," Bunton said in introducing the rancher, who was joined by his wife, Modesta. "God has given him some material things," which Williams shares, the judge said. "He's a philanthropist. He's a Christian. He's a man who really believes in this country."

Freedom in the United States was won by forebears who "fought for this freedom," Williams said.

"It didn't happen. It didn't just occur. We paid for it."

And, he said, "All people in the world are entitled to freedom."

Williams said that World War I was fought in Europe by patriots who "believed freedom has value beyond their own selfish interests."

Bentsen urges Texas Democrats to 'go flat out from now to Nov. 8'

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Urging Texas Democrats to "go flat out from now to Nov. 8 to get people to the polls," Lloyd Bentsen Friday kicked off a "homestretch" campaign for his home state at a rally at the LBJ Presidential Library.

Bentsen and other Democrats downplayed polls that show Republican George Bush with a wide lead over Michael Dukakis and Bentsen in Texas, attacked the GOP's "lies and distortions" and made fun of Bush's running mate Dan Quayle.

Campaign aides said the Democratic vice presidential nominee will spend all or part of every remaining day before the election in Texas. Dukakis is scheduled to tour the Rio Grande Valley late next week, and surrogates ranging from the Rev. Jesse Jackson to Bentsen's wife B.A. will criss-cross the state to get out the vote.

"Lloyd Bentsen is the man who can light the fire in Texas and get our message across," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro. "We're going to carry Texas for Lloyd Bentsen."

Standing in the shadow of Lyndon Johnson, the last Texas Democrat to leave the U.S. Senate and become vice president, Bentsen called on a crowd of about 2,000 enthusiastic supporters to ignore the polls. Mimicking Harry Truman's classic 1948 pose, Bentsen held up the early Chicago Daily Tribune newspaper with the "DEWEY DEFEATS TRUMAN" headline.

"That's the kind of comeback that we're looking forward to having," he said, adding that the Democrats have made it a one-point race in California within the past week. "If we just go flat out for the next 10 days, we're going to win it," he said.

State Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, joined in the poll bashing. "I don't know anybody who was polled," she said.

"I think they were selective and they made sure that the people they called we're going to give them the answers they'd already printed."

Bentsen accused Bush of "the best distortion of the truth that Republican money can buy," and he defended Dukakis' positions on prison furloughs, energy, national defense and gun control. "I happen to be a hunter and I specialize in quail," he said to laughter from the crowd.

"I wouldn't run with a man who would take my shotgun away."

He stressed the Democratic platform on education, health, day care, energy policy, trade and the national budget deficit. "Do you know why the Republicans fear the truth?" he asked. "For the same reason that balogna fears the slicer."

While Bentsen held his attack on Quayle to a few criticisms of the Indiana senator's voting record, other Democrats hit him hard.

Grant Thornton buys local Price Waterhouse operations

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Grant Thornton, a Chicago-based accounting firm and one of the industry's "Big Eight," agreed to purchase the Midland operations of Price Waterhouse this week.

The transaction goes into effect Tuesday; its price was not disclosed.

Beginning Tuesday, the combined operations under the Grant Thornton banner will begin making arrangements to move into the former Price Waterhouse offices on the 12th floor of First City Tower Two.

"We want to have the consolidation completed as soon as possible, hopefully by mid-November," said Scott Reed, the Grant Thornton partner who will manage the local operations.

The two firms, each with 22 employees, had "similar sized" offices, but the Price Waterhouse office was laid out better than the Grant office, which is located on the 6th Floor in the other First City tower.

"No cuts or layoffs are contemplated under the new arrangement," said Larry Jobe, southwestern regional managing partner for Grant Thornton in Dallas.

"In fact, we had been looking for additional people before the purchase," said Jobe, who manages the company's energy-region offices from Salt Lake City and Denver through Kansas and Oklahoma as well as seven Texas offices.

Price Waterhouse has agreed to transfer anyone who chooses to stay with their former employer to another office, said Joel Murray, former manager of PW's Midland office.

However, all Price Waterhouse employees have been offered jobs by Grant.

Reed and Murray agreed that the purchase is a positive deal for both staffs, building the second largest practice in the city.

The client lists of the two offices have "good compatibility," Jobe said.

Grant Thornton has historically concentrated in the financial and manufacturing industries nationwide as well as the energy business in the Southwest.

Time change set for 2 a.m. Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's time once again for the semiannual ritual of resetting America's clocks and watches.

First, the magic reminder: "Spring forward, fall back."

That means it's time to set the clocks back, as the nation changes from daylight-saving time to standard time.

Officially, the moment comes at 2 a.m. Sunday, which, by law, becomes 1 a.m. Sunday in most of the nation. Most people, though, will simply do the job before retiring tonight.

Some areas won't have to change the clocks because they have chosen to stay on the same time all year. Those are Arizona, Hawaii, the part of Indiana located in the Eastern time zone, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and American Samoa.

WHALES

The icebreakers spent much of the night plowing through the ice off Alaska's northern coast to slice another escape route for the whales, originally trapped at a small breathing hole four miles from open water. A third whale trapped with them died earlier.

The Arseniev and the larger Admiral Makarov had been expected at first light to head for their home port of Vladivostok. But their crews reported they could stay to help, rescuers said.

Rescuers had thought that after the Soviet ships smashed a channel to open water earlier this week, the relatively young marine mammals would have resumed their migration south. But at first they did not move, and parts of the channel refroze.

The temperature early Friday was 14 degrees below zero.

When last seen late Thursday, the whales' condition appeared worse after they had struggled through the slush and ragged ice left in the icebreakers' wake Wednesday night and Thursday. Both bled from multiple but superficial cuts.

"I think if they can stay in the small cracks and open leads that are frequent on the front of the pack ice, frequently that ice is thinner, and if they don't make wrong turns, they should make it out. Still, they have some rough going," Braham said. "They may make mistakes."

FirstRepublicBank ending retirement, pension plans

DALLAS (AP) — First RepublicBank Corp. is terminating the retirement and pension plans for the corporation and a subsidiary, which are both in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings, bank officials said Friday.

The termination will not affect the rights of plan participants and beneficiaries, First Republic said in a statement. The company also said it will provide annuities for all accrued benefits to the termination date. About 11,000 employees are covered by the plans.

Albert V. Casey, chairman and chief executive officer, said in the statement that it is important to begin the termination process as soon as possible because the process will be lengthy.

Casey said First Republic's bankruptcy made the plan's termination inevitable unless a "satisfactory arrangement" to transfer them to NCNB or another company can be reached.

"It continues to be our firm desire to work together with NCNB to avert the terminations of these plans to resolve all outstanding issues with NCNB in the spirit of cooperation," Casey said.

First Republic, a Dallas-based bank holding company, is battling Charlotte, N.C.-based NCNB Corp. for control of up to $200 million in surplus pension funds. NCNB acquired First Republic's 40 insolvent banks this summer.

Congress has passed a compromise tax bill that includes a provision to divide the surplus pension funds between First Republic and NCNB Texas. President Reagan has not yet signed the bill.

First Republic claims that the surplus is one of its few assets and should be used to repay creditors.

NCNB Texas spokesman Joe Bowles said the bank was disappointed in the "unilateral action" First Republic has taken.

"We are not in agreement with this decision and are committed to continuing a pension plan for NCNB Texas employees," Bowles said.

Junior high honor choir performs

From Staff Reports

For the first time, a West Texas junior high honor choir has been established. The choir will present its first concert today at the Andrews Middle School auditorium, beginning at 6 p.m.

Choir members were selected by juried audition held in Andrews on October 22. In addition to Midland students, young people from Kermit, Monahans, Big Spring, and Andrews are represented in the choral group.

Prior to the concert, students will be participating in a day long clinic led by Randy Talley, former award-winning director with the Odessa Permian High School choral program.

Midland will be represented in the honor choir by: Melissa May, third chair, soprano section, Goddard Junior High School; Christina Ortiz 13th chair, soprano section, Alamo Junior High School; Rachell Skiles, first chair, alto section, Alamo Junior High School; Melanie Brock, 5th chair, alto section, Alamo Junior High School; Kim Navarrete, 16th chair, alto section, Alamo Junior High School; Stephen Alexander, 13th chair, tenor section, Alamo Junior High School.

The honor students are under the direction of choral instructors, Bevra Carruth and Rob Hunt, Alamo Junior High School and Goddard Junior High School, respectively.

DEFICIT

Analysts predict slower economic growth will cut into tax receipts in 1989. And they expect the Federal Reserve Board, as an inflation-fighting measure, will push interest rates higher, pushing up government spending to finance the debt.

The economy, as measured by the gross national product, expanded 3.7 percent during the 1988 fiscal year and many analysts are expecting the rate to slow to 2.5 percent during 1989.

"It's almost impossible to see how we can reduce the deficit if we have slower growth," said Michael K. Evans, a consultant in Washington. "And the government...is ignoring the fact that interest has been going up steadily...I realize Treasury secretaries aren't supposed to say these things, but that's certainly the case."

Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch & Co., said that if the budget deficits don't go down, the government will have difficulty whittling away the trade imbalance and interest rates likely will stay high to persuade foreigners to buy U.S. debt.

"We're close to the end of a business expansion that's run a very long time. The problems and destabilizing effects of running this kind of deficit may become more acute," Steinberg said.

Jury finds firms negligent in asbestos case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Four Odessans who were exposed to asbestos fibers in the workplace and at home were awarded $1 million in actual and punitive damages Friday by a one-man, five-woman jury in Midland federal court.

The jury in the three-day trial determined that Raymark Industries Inc. and The Celotex Corp., manufacturers of asbestos products, were negligent and that they failed to give "adequate and timely warnings of reasonably foreseeable dangers of asbestos-containing products."

"The people of Midland and Odessa have spoken against companies that treat people this way," said plaintiffs' attorney Brian Weinstein of Dallas.

The companies were mainly interested in increasing their profits, he said.

"But you've got to be responsible, and you've got to care about people," said Weinstein, who was joined by co-counsel Marilee Neff in attacking the manufacturing companies.

"It's not a disease that you wake up with, like measles," Ms. Neff of the lung disease asbestosis. "It's progressive. And it can and has caused death."

In a similar trial recently held in federal court in Midland, jurors found in favor of the asbestos-manufacturing companies and did not award damages to the plaintiffs. United States District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton presided over both trials.

Thousands of lives have been lost through asbestos-related diseases, such as asbestosis and cancer, because asbestos-manufacturing companies failed to warn of the hazards of minute asbestos fibers, Weinstein said.

Plaintiffs in the lawsuit alleged that they suffered shortness of breath, malaise, and had beginning stages of asbestosis — an incurable lung disease which is rooted in scars caused by the microscopic asbestos fibers.

Damages in the suit went to plaintiffs:

— Nolberto S. Aguirre, 52, who was awarded $360,000.

— Guillermo Aguirre, Aguirre's 63-year-old brother, who was awarded $193,500.

— Carmen Aguirre, the older brother's 65-year-old wife, who was awarded $152,000.

— Antonio Galindo, 53, who was awarded $297,000.

Initially, 13 companies had been named as defendants in the lawsuit. But as the trial approached and during the trial, most of the defendant companies had reached out-of-court settlements. But, noted Weinstein, the settlements were far short of the damages awarded by the jury. He declined to specify amounts of the settlements.

The two companies, seasoned in asbestos lawsuits, were The Celotex Corp., successor to Philip-Carey Manufacturing Co., Philip-Carey Corp., Briggs Manufacturing Co. and Panacon Corp., and Raymark Industries, successor to Raybestos-Manhattan Inc.

Tom Taylor, a Houston lawyer representing the defendant manufacturing companies, had maintained that "these folks (the plaintiffs) do not have asbostos-related disease."

He and co-counsel defense Karen Lukin summoned expert witnesses, to present their contention.

Likewise, Weinstein and Ms. Neff offered expert witnesses to prove that their clients suffered damages and were diseased and disabled or would be crippled from asbestos-related diseases.

"Did any one of them go to a doctor and say, 'Doctor, I don't feel good?'" before the plaintiffs' lawyers arranged for their examinations, Taylor asked.

"No," he said in answering his own question. "They don't really have anything wrong with them. They got signed up by their lawyers...and we get these lawsuits," Taylor said.

"This lawsuit is about money damages," Taylor said. "That's all it is."

In his closing arguments, Weinstein accused the asbestos companies of cover-up schemes to withhold damages of working with and living amid asbestos.

He produced a 1935 company letter in which Raybestos-Manhattan, which later became Raymark Industries, said that "the less said about asbestos, the better off we are."

Asbestos manufacturing companies were aware of the hazards of their products long before the United States government in the early 1970s required warnings on asbestos products and set limits on the number of microscopic fibers allowed per cubic foot at plants and in the workplace.

Companies originally named in the lawsuit but which reached monetary settlements prior to the jury verdict include Armstrong World Industries, Fibreboard Corp., Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., Eagle-Picher Industries Inc., GAF Corp., Keene Corp., Owens-Illinois Inc., Pittsburgh Corning Corp., H.K. Porter Co. Inc., Gariock Inc., and Rockwool Industries Manufacturing Co.

World War II was "fought across the world," he said.

"I know some men who died in this war."

And the United States was "never there (in Vietnam) for our own self-interest," Williams said. "The people of Vietnam had a right to determine who would be their government by vote and not by the machine-gun. We are not through with this fight."

Williams told the new citizens, whose ages range from 2 to 67, that "There are those who are anxious to take away this gift off freedom."

And many generations of Americans "fought and died" to preserve freedom and its rights and privileges.

"It's a wonderful country," he said of America. "It has good and bad," as have all countries.

And if there are situations within the country that "we dislike," Americans can effect changes "by the vote — not by the rifle," he said. Williams encouraged citizens to "practice their freedom of choice by the ballot" whereby "you choose the people who represent you."

Williams told the new citizens that he, too, was from a family of immigrants — from Scotland and England.

Those new citizens in the courtroom were from Mexico, Iraq, South Korea, Syria, Republic of China (Taiwan), Vietnam, Guyana, India, Canada and Hong Kong.

"I made some money," he said. "Nobody gave it to me."

Williams told the new Americans that "without the involvement of you,...democracy cannot live.

"I welcome you," he said. "God bless America."

Afterward, Williams greeted the new citizens.

"Congratulations, sailor," he said to 19-year-old Manuel Carrasco, a Mexico native, who is serving aboard the U.S.S. John Young, a Navy destroyer, as a boatswain's mate.

"It's over. Thank God it's over," Carrasco, who is from Andrews, said of his naturalization. The sailor said he had dreamed of being a United States citizen since he was 5 years old.

Bunton, obviously impressed with Williams' talk, told the rancher: "We appreciate your remarks. We appreciate your emotions. It's an emotion-packed time for family and friends."

And the judge noted that the 2-year-old citizen, Bryan David Lee Lysinger, an adopted child from South Korea, was clapping.

"He may make an address to follow your address," Bunton told Williams.

After the ceremony, Bunton again thanked Williams for sharing his views on freedom.

"It's good for you," the judge said of Williams' tears. "It doesn't hurt you to cry once in a while."

Police investigate 3 auto burglaries

Midland Police are investigating three auto burglaries which occurred Friday.

Shortly before 7:30 a.m., Clayton W. Hale, 4104 Pleasant Dr., reported a radar detector was stolen from his car, reports said.

Valued at $320, the item was taken after the burglar crashed through the vehicle's vent window.

Minutes later, Gary Merriott, 906 Canyon Dr., reported to police a stereo equalizer and a rear view mirror were stolen from his car Friday.

And shortly before 5 p.m. Friday, police reports indicate Gordon Thell, 4504 Parkdale Dr., reported a stereo, speakers, money and one gold nugget ring were stolen from his truck.

Reports said the burglar entered the vehicle through the rear sliding glass window.

WOMAN

The car was described as small and maroon, possibly a Subaru, McCarty said. Two persons were inside when Penny and the woman climbed into it, he said.

Moments later, a white station wagon also drove up, according to investigators.

Penny, Harold Copelin, 19, and Elton David Myers, 40, escaped together from the jail. Myers was convicted of burglary and sentenced to 25 years in state prison, and Copelin had been convicted on a charge of aggravated robbery and sentenced to 25 years in prison.

McCarty said investigators weren't sure if Penny or the other escapees were armed.

"None of them have anything of violence in their record except Copelin," he said. "We know he used a pistol in the robbery."

The officer said it surprised him "a bunch" that the escapees were still in the San Angelo area.

"But we don't catch the smart people, just the stupid ones," he said.

Midland police, sheriff's department and the Department of Public Safety headquarters received the same statewide bulletin issued about the abduction.

"I know Lloyd Bentsen, I served with Lloyd Bentsen, Lloyd Bentsen's my friend and Dan Quayle's no Lloyd Bentsen," U.S. Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Austin, said, paraphrasing Bentsen's "you're no Jack Kennedy" line from the vice presidential debates.

Attorney General Jim Mattox called Quayle "the un-cola" of the campaign. "He's unsound, he's untested and he's clearly unqualified," Mattox said.

Public interest in occult spurs Satanism seminars around state

STATE

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Experts say a surge of public interest in the occult, from the Lower Rio Grande Valley to Dallas, has sparked a statewide increase in seminars on the signs and dangers of Satanism, including a two-day meeting that began here Friday.

Officials in national cult organizations said their groups have been barraged by phone calls from people worried about Satanism, or devil worship.

"There's been a growth in a sort of hate movement, and Satanism is part of that movement," said Hope Evans, president of the non-profit Cult Awareness Council in Dallas. "It's hard to tell whether it's picking up momentum or if people are just more aware of it because of media attention."

Experts say Satanism, in the Judeo-Christian view, embodies absolute evil and is a complete antithesis of God. Satanists often ridicule God and celebrate the ego, self-interest and sex.

Evidence of Satanism, including mutilated animals, burned gravesites and satanic graffiti, has been reported in South Texas, according to law enforcement officials.

Jeff Coleman, intern youth minister at Corpus Christi's Faith Temple, the site of Friday's and Saturday's seminar, said members of the interdenominational church decided to sponsor the meeting after "hearing more reports of occult activities from kids at the church."

Seminars on the occult and Satanism also have been planned during the next few weeks in Denton, McAllen, Dallas and Fort Worth.

Since a recent series on Satanism appeared in the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, Coleman told the newspaper that "we've had kids come into our youth group trying to get out" of their involvement in devil worship.

Sanctuary Inc., a Colorado-based consultant on religious movements, has developed a profile of a devil cultist. Generally, according to the report, a satanist is obsessed with fantasy role-playing games, drug use, edged weapons, symbolic jewelry, heavy metal rock music and bizarre cruelty to animals.

Two weeks ago, a seminar on Satanism given by Bee County Sheriff Bob Horn and sponsored by a Catholic student group at Bee County College in Beeville attracted three times the attendance generated by an AIDS seminar last spring.

Horn said the 150 people in attendance were proof of increased awareness of satanism.

The sheriff plans to beef up patrols on Halloween night in anticipation of increased satanic activity.

The sheriff said he was so disturbed by evidence of Satanism in the county that he began attending workshops on the subject.

"We hear a lot about it," Horn said. "Teachers tell us about it all the time."

El Paso, Ciudad Juarez police crack down on bridge loiterers

EL PASO (AP) — Police from El Paso and Ciudad Juarez are putting the squeeze on vendors and loiterers who clutter international bridges.

Police say the vagrants pose a safety hazard, and that hawkers of lace tablecloths, chewing gum, watermelon seeds and cheap trinkets snarl traffic on the spans.

Since daily bridge sweeps began Sept. 23, police say, bridge violence and traffic problems have been reduced. But the crackdown has its social cost: tossing vendors out of work.

Mexican hawkers caught in the bridge raids are sent to Raquel Zuniga, Juarez's director of social work, who refers them to factories that are looking for employees.

But not every vendor wants to work in a factory. Claudio Ramirez, who spent part of Thursday waiting to talk with Ms. Zuniga, said he would like a vendor's spot near the downtown market. But all those spots are filled.

Ramirez, 38, still sells candy, gum and toys on the bridges, but only early in the morning before the sweeps begin. He said he dreams of selling gum, chocolate, cigarettes and sunflower seeds "from a place that's well-arranged, with tables."

For a deal like that, Ramirez said he would be happy to rent a space for $4 to $6 a month — roughly the amount he and his wife, Concepcion, earn daily from street vending to support themselves and their 10 children.

Police coordinate the bridge sweeps by phone. They decide which of the three downtown bridges they will descend upon and when. Then, at the same time, Mexican police start northward from their end of a bridge, while U.S. police move south. They meet in the middle.

"If someone runs from either side, we're going to know about it," El Paso police Sgt. Armando Nava said.

Everyone who isn't considered a bona fide pedestrian is either arrested or urged strongly to move along.

"To me, it's all positive," said Kenneth Pasquarell, deputy director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in El Paso. "I don't see any drawbacks."

Manges angry over election ad in court race

AUSTIN (AP) — South Texas oilman Clinton Manges says he's angry over a television commercial for Chief Justice Tom Phillips that uses a "60 Minutes" film clip of him in criticizing Phillip's election opponent, Democratic Justice Ted Z. Robertson.

"That ad would try to get you to believe I was up there continuously, trying to buy them and trying to get their votes," Manges told The Associated Press in a phone interview Friday.

"It's a vicious pack of lies...I've never asked one of those Supreme Court judges for anything," Manges said.

Jim Arnold, Phillips' campaign manager, said the ad was fair and wasn't about Manges.

"The question is not about what Clinton Manges' motivations were in giving the money. The questions are about what Judge Robertson's motivation were," Arnold said.

The Phillips commercial contains a portions of a CBS News "60 Minutes" segment about the Texas Supreme Court entitled, "Justice For Sale?" The ad notes that in the report last year, CBS told of a $120,000 campaign contribution Manges made to Robertson, and it says Robertson later switched his vote in a case to favor Manges.

Manges said one thing that angers him about the ad is what it doesn't say — that he ultimately lost the case.

He also is angry because the contribution was made in 1982, Robertson wasn't on the Supreme Court at the time, Manges says he didn't ask Robertson for anything, and the oilman said he hasn't given money to Robertson since.

"What they don't bother to say is he (Robertson) wasn't a (Supreme Court) judge, he wasn't asking me for a damn thing. And the case they're talking about, I lost anyway," Manges said.

"They're trying to hurt a decent man like Judge Robertson. He's been just as fair as he could be. Evidently, that's the only thing they could find to try to cut Judge Robertson with — and they had to go back six years to a different race to do that," Manges said.

Manges and his political action committees contributed about $1.8 million to Democratic politicians in 1982.

He said his contributions to Robertson that year were due in part to his unhappiness with the makeup of the Supreme Court at that time, which he described as "the old establishment." He said he didn't believe he had received a fair treatment in a legal dispute he was having with Mobil Oil.

"The reason I gave money to Judge Robertson at the time — and I didn't even know him — was just to try to get rid of that crowd that was up there and hopefully get somebody who'd listen to the little people.

"I wasn't trying to buy a judge. If I was trying to buy a judge, I'd have bought one of those...already in office. I didn't even know whether he was going to be a judge, and anything I did for Robertson wasn't for him, it was against that bunch that was in there," Manges said.

Arnold, Phillips' campaign manger, said the ad correctly recounts the CBS report. "The ad is about Judge Robertson and his actions. It was documented by the then-Chief Justice Jack Pope...I think that's up to Judge Robertson to try to explain to the people," Arnold said.

Robertson's campaign Friday also criticized the commercial, questioning whether Phillips had the right to use the "60 Minutes" film.

MALDEF sues Rains, charges violations of voting rights laws

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Secretary of State Jack Rains came under further attack Friday for his election orders that critics say are intended to intimidate minorities and keep them from voting.

The Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund (MALDEF) filed a lawsuit Friday charging the secretary of state's office with violating federal voting rights law.

The lawsuit is the latest in a round of charges swirling over what Rains says is a crackdown on voter fraud.

But Democrats contend that Rains and other Republicans are trying to keep Hispanics and blacks away from the polls in the Nov. 8 general election.

At the center of the controversy is Assistant Secretary of State Randy Erben, who this week said some Hidalgo County paper ballots would be impounded because they made it appear that separate votes could be cast for Republican George Bush for president and Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for vice president.

Democrats said Erben was trying to frighten voters in the heavily Hispanic county and should be fired.

Erben dismissed the Democratic charges and on Friday said the MALDEF lawsuit was "groundless."

"MALDEF has once again dragged the secretary of state into court without first bringing its concerns to us," said Erben. "It makes me think they are more interested in demagoguing to the press than in solving problems, whether real or perceived."

A similar lawsuit against Rains was filed earlier in the week with the Texas Supreme Court by two Travis County election judges. The MALDEF lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court in Laredo.

Judith Sanders-Castro, MALDEF staff attorney, said Rains has issued election orders "that effect tremendous changes in past procedures and even state law."

MALDEF, a national non-profit civil rights organization, contends these changes cannot be implemented without Justice Department approval under the Voting Rights Act.

Both lawsuits take issue with Rains over directives sent to county clerks and election administrators on election procedures.

The directives tell election officials that pollwatchers have the right to leave a polling place to make telephone calls, require that election officers contact voter registrars to verify whether a person is registered if they do not show their voter registration certificate at the polls and warn that law enforcement officials will be on the alert to respond to Election Day problems.

MALDEF hopes to win an emergency order to stop the directives until the case can be heard.

"It is the shame of Texas that our secretary of state is determined to turn the fundamental right of voting into an experience fraught with fear and intimidation for thousands of Texas voters," Ms. Sanders-Castro said.

But Erben said, "No previous secretary of state who issued such memoranda submitted them for preclearance. Further, nothing in these memoranda represents anything other than a recitation of the Texas Election Code, which already has been approved by the Justice Department."

120 anti-abortion protesters arrested; Texas cities targeted

Associated Press

At least 120 demonstrators were arrested in three states Friday as anti-abortion activists kicked off a weekend of protests calling for pickets or blockades at abortion clinics in 32 cities.

Operation Rescue founder Randall Terry, whose group organized the protests, was among at least 50 demonstrators who were arrested Friday morning as they picketed an abortion clinic in Vestal, N.Y.

Vestal Police Chief Frank J. Croom said those arrested will be charged with resisting arrest and trespassing. Terry could face additional charges, including conspiracy to commit a crime, he said.

In Texas, protesters will go to clinics in Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Dallas on Saturday "to express our love for the children who are scheduled to be killed that day," said Rex Moses of Operation Rescue in Austin.

The Texas Abortion Rights Action League, a group supporting women's rights to choose whether or not to have an abortion, also plans a rally Saturday in Austin. Phyllis Dunham, executive director of the league, said the rally "is meant to show just how much community support there is for choice, and how little community support there is for Operation Rescue."

In Mary Esther, Fla., sheriff's deputies arrested 34 anti-abortion demonstrators who had blocked the doors of a clinic operated by Family Planning of Fort Walton Beach. Those arrested were among about 120 protesters who converged upon the clinic in the Florida Panhandle suburb.

Okaloosa County Sheriff Larry Gilbert said he sympathized with the protesters' views, but not their demonstrations.

"I do feel we're being used. That's for sure. They do use us and the media and they're certainly doing it now," he said.

In Indianapolis, 40 protesters were arrested after they blocked entrances to two women's clinics. Police said they were charged with criminal trespass.

"It was very peaceful," said Wendy Snitko, a spokeswoman for the Indianapolis Police Department. "There were no problems with any of the protesters, whatsoever."

The demonstrations marked a continuation of the anti-abortion campaign that has resulted in some 7,000 arrests across the country in the past five months. The campaign began in Atlanta in July, and more than 1,200 people have been arrested in 20 demonstrations in the Georgia capital since then.

Bob Nolte, a spokesman for Operation Rescue, said the demonstrations Saturday will be conducted "Atlanta-style."

FDA could OK drug with side effect of abortion

New York Times News Service

The Food and Drug Administration is expected to approve for marketing next month a drug developed to prevent ulcers in arthritis patients that can also induce abortion.

Anti-abortion groups, which have opposed a French abortion-inducing drug called RU 486, are mounting protests against the new compound.

The new drug, Cytotec, is being developed by G.D. Searle & Co. of Skokie, Ill. Because it was not developed specifically as an abortion drug, company officials said, its optimum dose and effectiveness in producing abortions are unknown.

Nonetheless, the National Right to Life Committee, an anti-abortion group, has urged the FDA not to approve the drug. Officials of the group say it will take some action against Searle, possibly a boycott of all Searle products, if the company markets Cytotec.

According to Kay Bruno, a Searle spokeswoman, the drug's abortion-inducing effects were tested only to assess the dangers to patients taking it for other reasons.

Cytotec, which is already on the market in 43 countries, is a prostaglandin, a type of hormone that is known to produce uterine contractions and abortions.

It was approved last month by an advisory committee to the Food and Drug Administration and will be marketed to prevent stomach ulcers in patients taking certain arthritis drugs. Ulcers are a common side effect of the drugs, non-steroidal anti-inflammatory compounds.

"Cytotec is not intended for use in birth control, contraception, or abortions," Ms. Bruno said. "It is an anti-ulcer drug."

She added that the company wanted to include a warning on the drug's label saying Cytotec is not to be used by women of childbearing age, but that the advisory committee said the warning was too strong.

For instance, the committee members told Searle, some women of childbearing age are sterile and so should not be barred from using the drug.

To test the drug's hazards in pregnancy, Ms. Bruno said, Searle gave Cytotec to a small group of women in their first trimester of pregnancy who planned on having abortions.

The tests, conducted in West Germany in the early 1980s, showed that the drug caused "uterine expulsion and bleeding," Ms. Bruno said.

But she said the study was too small to indicate the likelihood that the drug would cause an abortion. In addition, she said, the drug was not tested at different doses, so there is no information on the dose required for an abortion.

The National Right To Life Committee, with headquarters in Washington, calls Cytotec a "death drug," just the same as RU-486. The latter drug was approved for marketing in France and then removed by its manufacturer, Roussel Uclaf, which cited pressure from anti-abortion groups. Friday, Roussel returned RU-486 to the market on order of the French government.

At FDA hearings last month involving Cytotec, the anti-abortion movement made "an enormous plea" to the FDA, said Ronald M. Nordmann, a financial analyst at Paine Webber.

Dr. John C. Wilke, president of National Right to Life, testified at the hearing that Cytotec, "will be on the street, literally days after it is made available on prescription," and will be used specifically to produce abortions.

OSHA hits meatpacker with $4.33 million fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration Friday slapped a record $4.33 million fine on John Morrell & Co., saying the meatpacker forced hundreds of injured employees at its plant in Sioux Falls, S.D., to keep working, even immediately after surgery.

The fine, the largest against a single employer in the agency's 17-year history, reflects what Assistant Labor Secretary John A. Pendergrass called "an employer who knew about a serious health hazard, saw the tragic toll on its workers and chose to ignore it."

Morrell, the nation's fifth largest meatpacker, said it would seek an injunction on Monday in U.S. District Court in Sioux Falls "to stop OSHA from singling us out for penalties...for what is clearly a national, multi-industry safety and health problem."

Pendergrass, however, said an OSHA inspection of the giant plant begun six months ago uncovered "the worst conditions we've found in any industry to date."

Morrell Chairman Milton J. Schloss called the fine "grossly unfair and totally unjustified."

"This is guilt by headline," Schloss said from the company's headquarters in Cincinnati. "It clearly is unfair for OSHA to single us out and demand we do more when we already are leading the industry in this effort."

The fines all stem from what is increasingly recognized as cumulative trauma disorders such as carpal tunnel syndrome and tendinitis in which joints become incapable of movement because of repeated hand, wrist and arm motions that wear away soft tissue protecting them.

OSHA has levied fines in the past against companies that ignore the disorder — including some against auto producers and a $3.1 million penalty against another meatpacker, IBP Corp., last May.

IBP, the nation's second largest meatpacker, has appealed its fine, which stemmed from working conditions that the agency found at its Dakota City, Neb., plant.

But nowhere, OSHA officials said Friday, have government investigators found such widespread evidence of the disorders and such willful disregard for those injured as at Morrell's Sioux Falls plant.

From May 1987 to May 1988, more than 800 of the 2,000 workers at the plant sustained "serious and sometimes disabling injuries," OSHA said.

And some departments in the plant had incidence rates of 75 injured workers for every 100 full-time employees.

The government said Morrell's rate of injuries was nine times the average for the meatpacking industry — the most hazardous in the country.

NATION IN BRIEF

No prosecutions likely from probe of police academy

BOSTON (AP) — The hospitalization of police cadets from a state academy exposed a brutal training regimen hidden from public scrutiny despite many warning signs, but no one will be prosecuted, the state attorney general said Friday.

Attorney General James Shannon said his investigation found a "top-to-bottom" failure by the state to protect the cadets, most of them from small-town police departments.

He said he could find no statute under which to press charges, that there was no evidence of intent by State Police trainers to harm the cadets and that the "diffusion of responsibility" made it unfair to prosecute individuals.

But Shannon said the chief of the agency responsible for the boot camp-like training should resign or be dismissed.

"The failure began with a bureaucracy that paid little or no attention to the end product of its paper-shuffling: the care and training of human beings," Shannon concluded.

The investigation was limited to one class of the police training academy in Agawam in western Massachusetts, one of 11 operated by the state Criminal Justice Training Council.

Diner undergoes transplant

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — One of five people who ate poisonous mushrooms at a dinner party underwent a liver transplant operation Friday, and two others were awaiting donors.

A woman who also ate the mushrooms received a liver transplant Thursday, and the fifth person was being watched for signs of liver damage.

All five people ate the so-called "death cap" mushrooms in an Oriental stir fry dish served Saturday at the home of Teresa and John Duncan.

The mushrooms were Amanita phalloides, a deadly variety common in Europe but found only recently in the western United States, said Preston Alexander, president of the Oregon Mycological Society.

The people at the dinner party ate a total of at least 10 mushrooms when less than one can be fatal, Alexander said.

Anti-Semitism worries Jews

BOSTON (AP) — Nearly three out of four U.S. Jews believe anti-Semitism is a serious problem in the country, according to a survey presented by The American Jewish Committee.

The survey found 75 percent of Jews worry about anti-Semitism compared with just 45 percent in 1983, the first year the organization asked the question.

"One has to understand that Jews, even in a free society, have a residual memory of danger," Ira Silverman, director of the New York-based organization said Friday. He was among 250 people at the annual meeting of the organization's national executive council.

"There's hardly been a society where Jews have felt perfectly safe...It is possible that the openness of black anti-Semitism within the last year or more has exacerbated the worry of Jews. If they see anti-Semitism spoken openly and not being decried by others, that becomes very worrisome," Silverman said.

DC-9s to be inspected after small cracks found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration announced Friday it plans to order an in-depth inspection of all DC-9 aircraft after uncovering cracks in three planes.

The agency "uncovered a series of small cracks in three DC-9 aircraft," flown by Northwest Airlines and USAir Group Inc., said FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn. "As a result of this finding, FAA plans to order shortly an in-depth inspection of the DC-9 fleet."

The FAA is awaiting completion of inspections already under way before ordering the inspection of all the DC-9 aircraft, he said.

"The cracks, the longest of which was approximately one inch, are located in the uppermost area of the fuselage over the wing," he added.

The announcement came a day after the FAA tightened the schedule for inspection and replacement of 7,200 rivets on almost 300 of the oldest Boeing 737s. The roof of one of those planes, flown by Aloha Airlines, tore off during flight April 28, killing one person and injuring 61.

The agency said the cracks in the DC-9s, manufactured by Douglas Aircraft Co., a division of McDonnell Douglas Corp., were not as serious and "in no manner comparable to the recent cracks discovered in Boeing 737 aircraft fuselage joints," and noted that corrosion was not a factor in any of the crack development.

The agency emphasized that the cracks do not mean the passenger jets are unsafe.

"I am confident that these cracks could not become a threat to the structural integrity of the aircraft," FAA Administrator T. Allan McArtor said in a statement.

"We're talking about very small cracks. We're not talking about the kind of thing we found in the Boeings," said Buckhorn.

The FAA's order Thursday concerned the 7,200 rivets on older Boeing 737s. The rivets are believed to cause cracks in the fuselage skin of the aircraft.

McArtor credited the early discovery of the DC-9 cracks to "the effectiveness of the FAA structural inspection program," instituted in the early 1980s to provide early detection of structural fatigue in older aircraft.

The fuselage cracks were found on older aircraft which had between 65,000 and 70,000 landings, and the agency's more extensive inspection could involve up to 200 of the oldest planes.

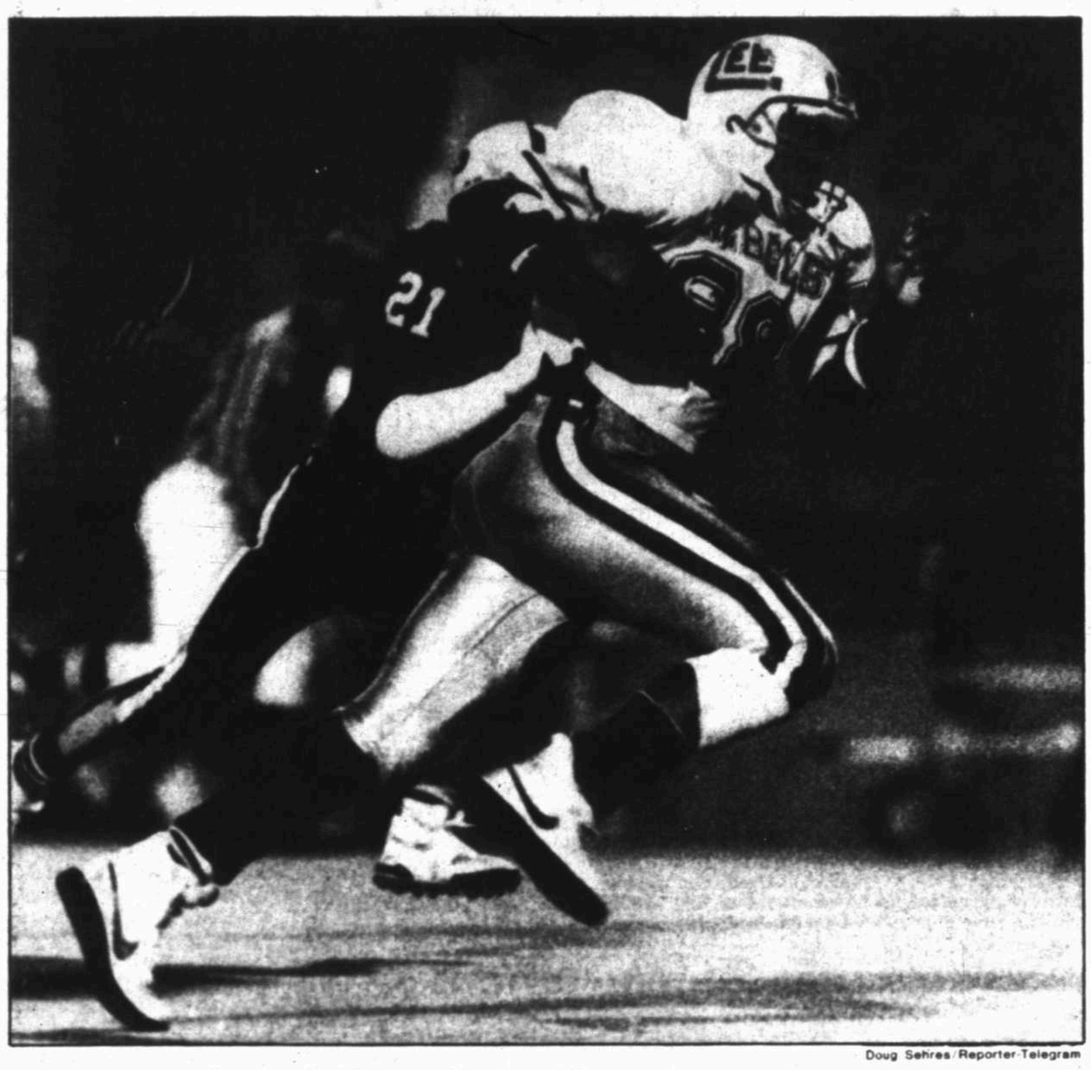
Lee stuns Mojo; anybody got a coin?



Doug Sehres/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee's Quincy White sets sail for open seas against Permian.

Rebs win third in row over Permian

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland Lee is walking to the beat of a different District 4-5A drummer. The Rebels waited until Friday night at Ratliff Stadium to kickoff the Halloween weekend by taking off its mask after being named a 21-point underdog to No. 5 state ranked Odessa Permian.

And what old Mojo saw was the usual Rebel monster — with fangs. Lee erased a 21-10 Permian lead to nip out a 22-21 victory that surprisingly put an end to Lee's playoff obituary.

In what is being hailed as one of the biggest upsets in Lee football history, the Rebels climbed to 4-1 in the 4-5A race, sharing room at a crowded top with Midland High and Permian. One of those teams will have to sit at home in two weeks when the playoffs start. It could be Lee as well as any of the other two, but this game can only add to the grid lore of Lee vs. Permian.

In short, it was just another classic Lee-Permian matchup, but its turning out that the Rebels are beginning to show a dominance in the series, winning four of the last seven from Mojo and three straight.

Lee is the only team in 4-5A history to beat Permian three times in a row. Only Plano, in the playoffs, equals that mark. Lee coach Earl Miller is the only coach in 4-5A history who can still say he hasn't lost a game to Permian as head coach.

"This was a great victory for our kids," says Miller. "It sure wasn't me. My coaches did a great job. I don't really do anything around here but go and get the water bottles during practice. Next year, I'm hiring me a line coach and I won't even call defensive plays."

Lee took its final lead with 10:53 left in the game when Farris Strambler crashed in from one-yard out and then the Rebel defense took over.

Permian got to the Lee 13-yard line with 4:30 left in the game, but James Brown, who attended Permian last year as a student, blocked an Alan Wyles field goal try of 30 yards. Wyles had previously missed a 37-yard effort in the second period.

"I saw a hole and came through, but this was pure luck," said Brown of his block. "The play is designed for me to get in there, but this is all just undescribable to me. I'm really a lucky person because I've been fortunate enough to play for the best two football programs in the state. I've never looked back at leaving Permian. I came here to do the best I could, win or lose. This is just all very special to me."

Permian came back to the Lee 41 but was held on downs as Permian quarterback Mike Winchell, the passing leader of 4-5A, failed to connect on four pass attempts.

Permian rolled to a 21-10 lead in the first half, but Lee may have gotten the key play of the game with six seconds left in the half when junior quarterback Vince Henderson hit unknown star John Valles for 49 yards to the Permian one. It was Valles' first catch of the year and he did it in a crowd of Permian defenders such as Lloyd Hill, Robert Brown and Stan Wilkins.

"It was just a miraculous catch. What can I say?" said Valles. "I knew I was in a crowd, but I just watched the ball all the way in. I fought and scratched to score because I didn't know about the time, but I got off balance and just missed getting in."

Quarterback Ty Chambers scored on the next play by recovering his own fumble from center Billy Parks in the end zone.

Permian lit the scoreboard first with an eight-play, 64-yard drive with Don Billingsley getting the final four. Lee struck back with a 60-yard drive on 12 plays to tie it at 7-7 when David Whiteside rambled 12 yards on a key third down play. You knew then this was going to be a wild one.

Lee then turned a Sid Harper fumble recovery into an 18-yard field goal by Arthur Donnelly, but Permian came back with two scoring drives, one of 77 and one of 60 to take a 21-10 lead. Chris Comer scored from 12 out and Winchell hit Hill for a 60-yard shocker with 2:19 left. Lee looked dead until Valles gave the Rebels new hope.

"I thought the play right before the half was a big play in the game," said Permian coach Gary Gaines. "That and the fact that we couldn't convert two field goals. There's not much difference in a win and a loss when two good teams are playing.

Page aerials pace 33-14 win

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Russell Page threw four touchdown passes and ran for another in leading the Midland High Bulldogs to a 33-14 romp over the visiting Odessa High Bronchos Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

Page, who completed 9 of 11 passes for 212 yards — by far his best outing of the season — hit Max Reyes and Shaun Savas twice for the scoring strikes.

The win moves the Bulldogs, 4-1, into a three-way tie for first in the hotly contested District 4-5A race. After Midland Lee's 22-21 upset of Odessa Permian, the Rebs' and Panthers' district marks are also at 4-1.

With only one week left in district action, the Bulldogs travel to Abilene High while Lee hosts Abilene Cooper; Permian closes out the regular season with a trip to San Angelo. A loss by any of the district co-leaders is unlikely, which would mean a coin toss would be necessary to decide the league's two playoff representatives, if all three should win next Friday.

"I really have mixed emotions right now," Page said following the Bulldog win. "I'm excited we won, but hearing the score from Odessa means we could end up third, but also end up district champs."

Midland High coach Doug McCutchen took on a more positive outlook concerning the district race.

"We had a chance at second place going into tonight's game," McCutchen said. "Now we have a chance at first place. Shoot, we want to be district champs."

Page was brilliant throughout the night. Only two of his passes — a seven yard connection to Savas and a nine yarder to Will Sowders — went for under 12 yards. The senior's three completions to Reyes were for 35, 30 and 29 yards. On the night, Reyes pulled down 94 yards worth of completions.

Safety Kevin Rychel pulled down a key interception as time grew short in the second quarter to put a stop to what had been a fairly impressive Broncho drive.

On the Midland High 33 yard line, OHS quarterback Kevin Skinner attempted a 13 yard pass to Wade Thomas only to find the waiting hands of Rychel. The score at that point had Midland High up by just two touchdowns, 21-6.

The two teams traded TDs in the first quarter, the Bulldogs striking first with a 35 yard pass from Page to Reyes. Odessa High junior tailback Patrick Brown ran for a seven yard TD, but a missed extra point allowed MHS to retain a 7-6 lead.

The 'Dawgs tacked on 14 more in the second quarter as Page ran in from two yards out, following that up with an 18 yard pass to Savas on a fourth down play.

Despite his rushing TD, Page was limited to negative 13 yards rushing, thanks to being sacked six times.

There were other statistical mishaps for the 'Dawgs even though they won the most important figure of them all: Midland High fumbled twice compared to just one for the Bronchos; Odessa High outrushed Midland High (127-110) and the 'Dawgs suffered 45 yards in penalties, compared with only 15 for OHS.

Despite the misgivings, MHS continued its impressive offensive display in the third quarter when Savas and Reyes each caught TD passes for 32 and 29 yards.

Odessa High's Brown added the Bronchos' final TD on a 31 yard pass from Skinner. The Bronchos then added a safety to complete the night's scoring.

"I'm real excited," Page restated. "Four touchdown passes, that's a personal high for me. Our offensive line played well. It was just a great all around effort."

"He's a good one," a visibly disappointed OHS head coach Jerry Taylor said of Page. "But he's run up the yardage before like that. We just

Greenwood takes over first district

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD — Something billed as the biggest game in Greenwood High School history became the biggest Ranger win ever in just a couple of short hours Friday.

The Greenwood Rangers clinched at least a tie for the District 4-3A title with a 20-9 win over perennial champion Kermit at J.M. King Memorial Stadium. The mild upset was Greenwood's seventh straight win after two season-opening losses.

Coach Bob Purser's Rangers, 5-0 in district play, needs either a win against Clint or a Kermit loss to Crane next week to clinch Greenwood's first district title EVER in nine years of grid competition.

Ranger quarterback-kick returner-free safety Randy Donnell set the tone for Greenwood with a 97-yard touchdown return of the opening kickoff — the second straight week that Greenwood has taken the opening kick back all the way. Donnell lofted a touchdown pass to Sean Holcomb later in the first quarter and kept the Rangers out of poor field position with a 28-yard punt return in the second half.

"More than anything, it was just effort," Purser said. "I think we just kind of wore them down."

Kermit outgained the Rangers 229-178, but the Yellowjackets were plagued by fumbles and penalties in crucial situations, something that Kermit coach Randy Hicks found less than coincidental.

Andrews smothers Big Spring by 49-0

By JOHN FREY
MRT Sports Correspondent

ANDREWS—The Andrews Mustangs flexed both their offensive and defensive muscles Friday night and in the process kept their playoff hopes alive with a 49-0 trouncing of the Big Spring Steers.

The Mustangs pulled into a second-place tie with Monahans with Friday's win.

"We got our butts whipped in every way possible," Steer coach David Thompson said. "We were not ready to play tonight and the coaching staff will take responsibility for that. But I do promise you it will not happen again."

Offensively the Mustangs rang up 446 yards in offense including 401 yards rushing. On defense they limited the Steers to 76 total yards, only four yards rushing. Quarterback Rance Thompson was sacked six times for minus 47 yards.

As it turned out the very first play from scrimmage gave an indication of how the night was going to be for the Steers. Rance Thompson threw a perfect strike to Neal Mayfield for what appeared to be a 70-yard touchdown. But the play was called back because of illegal motion.

From their the Mustangs totally dominated. On thier second possession they drove 69 yards in only six plays to score. The big plays were a 23-yard pass from Robert Morris to Stephen Hines, followed by a 24-yard touchdown run by Morris. Amos Rosas kick put the Mustangs on top 7-0.

From Staff Reports

IRAAN— Stanton claimed sole possession of first place in the District 5-2A football race by pounding Iraan, 28-7, here Friday night to repel the challenge of the Braves.

Stanton struck for four touchdowns in less than a six-minute stretch of the second period to ice the contest by taking a 28-0 halftime lead.

Odessa High finishes its season 3-6 overall, 2-4 in district. The beleaguered Taylor refused to firmly commit on whether he would return for the '89 season, saying only he had "not even thought about that yet."

Bulldog running back Dwane Roberts, who needed 155 yards to break the 1,000 yard mark, was held to 78 yards on 18 carries. With one game left, Roberts needs to match his Friday output to finish over 1,000 yards.

Just how much luck did the Bulldogs enjoy Friday? They converted two of three fourth down attempts in the first half and weren't forced to punt until their first possession in the fourth quarter.

McCutchen, who has never been involved in a coin flip situation, said after the game, "The coin toss could go our way. Rather than look at this negatively, we have to be positive and take that chance."

Before the coin toss, though, the Bulldogs have to remember their little trip to Shotwell Stadium next Friday against an Abilene High team that shocked San Angelo 24-22 Friday night.

Marc Buoniconti and family are dropping their bid for a new trial in their failed lawsuit against The Citadel's football team doctor. A Charleston, S.C., jury decided July 14 after a five-week trial that Dr. E.K. Wallace Jr. was not negligent in his advice and treatment of Buoniconti before the football player suffered a paralyzing injury making a tackle during a game Oct. 26, 1985.

Purses for the Preakness and Belmont stakes have been increased to $500,000-added for 1989. Pimlico vice chairman Robert Manfuso said the increase is "a reflection of what turf athletes are running for. With races up and down the East Coast (increased in value), it seemed appropriate." Churchill Downs officials will keep the Kentucky Derby at $350,000-added, although the Derby, by virtue of its higher entry and starting fees and larger fields, usually goes for more than $700,000.

John Elway remains "questionable" on the Broncos' injury list, but Coach Dan Reeves said he is confident the quarterback will be near 100 percent for Monday night's game at Indianapolis.

After undergoing his seventh surgery in six years, Denver Broncos LB Karl Mecklenburg vowed to be back for the last two games of the season "and the playoffs, of course." Mecklenburg broke his right thumb at Kansas City six weeks ago, and had two metal pins surgically inserted to stabilize the fracture.

Marge Schott and Carl Kroch, feuding owners of the Cincinnati Reds, were making progress in resolving their legal dispute over access to financial records of the team and the partnership that owns the club. Kroch filed suit against Schott and the Reds to gain access to the records...

Detroit traded pitcher Walt Terrell, 7-16, to San Diego for infielder Chris Brown, .235-19 HR-19 RBI, and infielder-outfielder Keith Moreland, .256-5-64, and will not offer a contract to infielder Darrell Evans, .208-22-64, for next season.

Texas FG favorite over Tech in McWilliams homecoming

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas coach David McWilliams returns to Lubbock for the first time since he left the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

SWC

Texas was a field goal favorite over the Red Raiders in McWilliams' return game in which Texas Tech has promised him a heated homecoming. McWilliams coached at Tech one year before he left for his alma mater in Austin.

The last coach who returned to play an SWC school he abandoned was Francis Schmidt, who left Arkansas for TCU. The Horned Frogs won 7-0 for Schmidt in Fayetteville.

JONES STADIUM is expected to be rocking with a sellout crowd of 47,000 fans.

Tech has held secret workouts for two weeks, getting ready for the Longhorns.

"I had to do what I thought was best when I left Tech," McWilliams said. "I think most Red Raider fans understand that. Still I've checked the postmark on all my letters this week."

There are 25 Red Raiders who played under McWilliams.

The Arkansas Razorbacks hope to quit celebrating long enough on Saturday night to put away the losingest team in major college football.

AFTER back-to-back victories against Houston and Texas, the 11th-ranked and unblemished Razorbacks entertain the lowly Rice Owls in War Memorial Stadium at Little Rock.

Although the Owls have lost 13 consecutive games, they put a scare into Texas before losing by a touchdown and gave Texas A&M some anxious moments last Saturday before falling 24-10.

Arkansas, seeking its first Cotton Bowl berth since 1976, can't afford to go through the motions against the Owls, who became a dangerous offensive team when Quentis Roper moved to starting quarterback.

Oddsmakers rated the Owls 22-point underdogs but Rice has beaten the spread in the last five games.

IN OTHER SWC action on Saturday, Texas Christian travels to Houston.

Houston, trying to bounce back from a disappointing 26-21 loss to Arkansas, was a 10-point favorite over Texas Christian which has only one league loss.

The Cougars haven't won a homecoming game since 1980.

Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield has been trying to warn his team that Rice could be troublesome.

"At this time we have more distractions than a team that plays Rice earlier in the year," Hatfield said. "Some of the players are looking ahead to what might happen. A lot of our younger players are getting caught up in the excitement of being 7-0 and they're forgetting what it took to get there."

Arkansas can go to the Cotton Bowl with victories over Rice and Baylor in the next two weeks.

"I don't think we'll overlook Rice," said offensive tackle Freddie Childress. "This is the last time to play in Little Rock for our seniors."

Baylor and Texas A&M are idle.

"You just can't play against 15 folks," Hicks said. "When we fumbled, it was always picked up but they fumbled, it was blown dead."

"The officials robbed us of every little bit of emotion."

Despite his displeasure, Hicks gave the winners credit.

"Coach Purser and his team really did well against us."

The Rangers especially did a number on star left halfback Billy Ray Thompson, who had been averaging more than 100 yards per game but was held to 80 yards on 22 carries. Also, the Rangers consistenly kicked away from Thompson on punts and kickoffs, depriving the senior speedster of any game-breaking opportunities on the specialty units.

In fact, Thompson shined primarily on defense with two pass interceptions from his free safety position.

Kermit has won 10 of the last 11 district championships in 4-3A and its lineal predecessors, and it looked like business as usual for the Jackets when they drove 61 yards in five plays to score on a 20-yard run by right halfback Saul Alvarado with 9:41 left in the first period. Alvarado added the point-after and it appeared the visitors had eliminated any Greenwood momentum that the opening kickoff had provided.

But Kermit could only manage a third-period safety. And even that was a gift, since Greenwood punter Brian Aylor intentionally stepped out of the end zone to set up a free kick from the Ranger 20 that gave Kermit much worse field position than it would have had Aylor attempted to punt.

Greenwood had to punt after its first series from scrimmage, but the Rangers got a break when sophomore end Mike Bradford recovered a Victor Muniz fumble on the Kermit 25-yard line.

Three plays later, Donnell went to Holcomb for a pass in the corner of the end zone. The 6-foot-3 Holcomb outfought several shorter Jackets for the go-ahead TD, then saved two points seconds later by dragging down Alvarado as he was attempting to run back a blocked extra-point kick.

The Jackets drove deep in Greenwood territory late in the half, but Thompson was stopped short on fourth-and-two at the Ranger 12.

Greenwood continued to stop the Kermit wishbone in the third quarter, but it looked like disaster struck when Randy Marquez muffed a punt and Kermit recovered in the end zone.

Or did they? The back judge said, nope, Marquez recovered at the Ranger one, even though the ball clearly popped from underneath the Ranger's belly.

"The Greenwood played fell on the ball, was hit by a defender while down, and the ball popped out. It was a dead ball," the back judge said on condition of anonymity.

Thompson gave the Jackets another chance with his pass pickoff of the game late in the period, but the senior fumbled on the next play, with the ballhawking Bradford recovering once again on the Kermit 45.

The Rangers then took six plays to drive for an insurance score. Fullback Jimmy O'Briant took it over from 12 yards out on the first play of the fourth quarter, despite having to drag two Kermit defenders for the last six yards. The drive was helped by an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty on the Jackets on third down that moved the ball inside the Jacket 30.

Michael Wyatt, Lee defensive back, tackles Permian fullback Chris Comer.

LEE

Lee played well and our kids played well.

"If all three of us (Lee, Permian, MHS) all take care of business next week, we have a coin flip. We wanted to avoid that, but we've made our bed and we have to lie in it."

Permian's Comer led all rushers with 143 yard on 30 carries, becoming Permian's 12th running back to crash the 1,000-yard rushing barrier. Lee's Strambler needed 93 yards to crack 1,000, but got only 62. Fullback Quincy White led Lee with 87 yards rushing.

"Permian was dead set on stopping Farris (Strambler) and David (Whiteside) and that allowed me to be open," said White, who was voted as the game's MVP. "This is the best victory of my life. We knew we were the underdog, but we just went out and played as hard as we could."

"It was just a total effort by every kid," said Miller. "We knew going in that it would take a major effort by every kid and we got it.

"Permian kept checking off at the line in the first half and attacked our weaknesses and hurt us some. In the second half we went to a more balanced defense. I didn't know if we were good enough to do that, but the kids just rose to the occassion."

Lee defensive coach Eddie Wolski predicted a Lee victory before the game and said afterwards, "Is this good, or what?"

And now playoff dreams have begun again at Lee. They're not there yet, but was that Miller over in the corner Friday night practicing flipping coins?

Devils, Red Wings win

NHL

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Tom Kurvers and Doug Brown scored first-period goals 52 seconds apart as the New Jersey Devils beat the Hartford Whalers 5-3 in the NHL Friday night.

In breaking a two-game losing streak, the Devils posted their first victory ever over Hartford goaltender Mike Liut, who had a 6-0-3 record against them before Friday night.

The Whalers outscored the Devils 3-2 in the second period. But New Jersey, clinging to a 4-3 lead through most of the third period, wrapped up the game on Brendan Shanahan's goal in the last minute.

Red Wings 4, North Stars 1

DETROIT — Steve Chiasson and Miroslav Frycer scored 49 seconds apart early in the second period to lead Detroit.

Chiasson, playing just his second game of the season after missing eight with a groin injury, tied the score 1-1 at 3:23 of the middle period with a short-handed goal. Frycer, who minutes earlier had failed on a penalty shot, broke the tie less than a minute later, beating Don Beaupre with a slap shot from the top of the faceoff circle.

Dave Gagner scored a power-play goal in the first period for Minnesota, 1-8-1, which hasn't won in five games.

Syracuse cager attends funeral

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse Orangemen forward Derrick Coleman is in Detroit for the funeral of a friend killed in a gangland-style shooting, his second friend shot and killed in the last year, a team official said.

Coleman, a junior, will be back in Syracuse by Monday after attending services for Darryl Dixon, 20, who was shot in the head while sitting in a car Tuesday night, Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said.

Another friend, Clarence Scott, 17, was killed in a shooting last year.

"He's hurt," Boeheim said of Coleman. "He's having a difficult time handling it. It's hard to go through once, let alone two years in a row."

Hershiser wants money to go with glory, records

NEW YORK (AP) — Orel Hershiser has the records and the glory. Now he wants the money.

He made $1.1 million this year, settling before an arbitration hearing. He wants a long-term contract from the Los Angeles Dodgers at about $10 million for five years. If he doesn't get it, it could be back to arbitration.

"If we go to arbitration, we will try to set an indoor world record," Hershiser said Friday.

Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees set the record for an arbitration winner in 1987 at $1.975 million. George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays asked for $2.105 million last year, but settled before the hearing, getting $6.1 million over three years.

Hershiser's agent, Bob Fraley, said the pitcher would not agree to a multiyear contract unless it was for more than three years. The last contract longer than that was a four-year deal agreed to by Ken Oberkfell and the Atlanta Braves on Oct. 11, 1985.

"If the Dodgers offer me the monetary worth of my skills, I want to stay there," Hershiseer said.

Hershiser was in New York to receive the Sport Magazine World Series Most Valuable Player Award. It was presented by Donald Fehr, executive director of the players' union. Fehr was asked how much Hershiser was worth.

"We'll see if we're going to have the first $3 million player," Fehr said.

Hershiser realizes his major league record streak of 59 straight scoreless innings plus the NL playoffs and World Series MVP awards are changing him.

"I think my life will be classified in two sections now — before 1988 and after 1988," he said.

Burning question: Is he too old to coach?

Battles

Is he too old to coach?

Can anyone that forgetful be allowed on the sidelines in charge of a team?

Have times passed him by?

The debate has raged out of control all week. By now it has become repetitious and tiresome and, frankly, I'm weary of discussing it.

You know what I'm talking about. All week concerned, caustic and, I fear, relieved fans have been asking, "How come you didn't coach the Chaparrals in their preseason intrasquad game as has been the tradition? Are you really too old? Is it true you confuse the center line for the base line?

IN THE first place, calling Win Farquhar Vern is a mistake that can happen. I'm just surprised I didn't call him John...they are all Farquhars.

There's no truth to charges that the game has passed me by, although admittedly I suspect some sort of conspiracy.

Midland College Coach Reggie Franklin is upset because I advise his outside shooters to use both hands. "You'll make more three pointers that way."

And, predictably, the officials are in on the plot, objecting about the screeching from the sidelines. "It's not just once in a while," they contend unreasonably, "It's after every basket, he screams for a jump ball at center court."

Delnor Poss, MC Athletic Director, is in on it, too. "Come on, I mean, checking the baskets before the game for leftover peaches?"

Long time opponent Ed Clements whines that he never gets the proper credit in the post-game accounts for his coaching wizardry.

WHAT THESE people seem to overlook is that among the players who benefited from the "old guy's" expertise are Spud Webb, Puntus Wilson, Mookie Blaylock, Linoln Minor, Joe Dumars, Karl Malone, Clyde Drexler, the USC all-Americans Paula and Pam McGee...

What it all comes down to is not age, but won-lost record.

The players on this year's team refused to suit up if I were on the bench. It wasn't so much that I was a Frank Kush or Junction-vintage Bear Bryant, "he's never won coach," they bled their case to Reggie.

What did they expect. One year they give me a 5-7 kid who was named after a piece of potato, or something, and order, "Go work a miracle."

Another time we had the opposition just where we wanted it, one point ahead, but we had possession of the ball....and the last shot. I call the team over to map out the strategy for the game winning basket and Tony "Kayo" Wright assures, "Hey, we know how to work the clock down and get the last shot. We work on it all week." We did such a thorough job of working the clock, we forgot about the shot.

AND THAT NBA exhibition at the Chap Center. They made me use two girls, Pam and Paula, while the other team had just one. Dumars got upset because I benched him in the fourth quarter for one of the girls. Then I took the girls out so I could finish with an all male team. Pam accused me of being a "sexist."

With this kind of turmoil, the team lost the lead and the game. Later I realized the reason we held the lead while the girls were in the game and lost it when they came out was because Malone was so busy staying close to Pam or Paula, he might as well have been on the bench. But when I took the girls out...

In any case, I don't want to talk about it, especially after the Mrs. came to my defense. "Go ahead," she told Reggie, "but have some one come pick him up so he won't forget."

PLAYING the line on today's games....The SWC....

Texas Tech plus three over Texas— You can be sure Red Raiders will have a "Welcome Back, David" party.

TCU 10½ over Houston— Frogs surprised last week by beating Baylor. Surely, then can keep Cougs within hailing distance.

The others....

Florida plus 7½ over Auburn— This may not be Montana State, but it's not Memphis State either...what did I just say?

Illinois minus 7 over Minnesota— It's tough to pick against a team that tied Northwestern.

Iowa plus 3½ over Indiana— Hoosiers still in shock over Michigan loss.

Maryland minus 5 over North Carolina— Shucks, Mars Hill minus 5 over Carolina.

South Carolina minus 3 over NC State— How about the Wolfpack, beating Clemson, again, but this is something else.

Arizona State plus 12 over Oregon— But not if it rains.

Duke plus 2 over Georgia Tech— This pair is so unpredictable, take the points and run.

The pros....

Cowboys minus 3 over Cardinals— If Tom doesn't forget, then Steve does, but this week we get it all together.

Redskins minus 1 over Oilers— Doug Williams is back and the Oilers are staggering anyway.

Bengals plus 3½ over Browns— Browns favored...what happened to Boomer, did he get hurt?

Charles takes lead

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Leading Senior PGA Tour money winner Bob Charles birdied six holes for a 5-under-par 67 Friday night and took the first-round lead in the $250,000 Las Vegas Classic.

"It was a very good putting round. The stroke felt good and I read the greens well, although I didn't play well off the tee," the left-hander from New Zealand said after establishing a one-shot lead over a group of five players at the 6,800-yard Desert Inn Country Club.

Charles had birdie putts ranging from six to 22 feet. He had only one bogey.

Charles, who led this tournament after the first round in 1986 and after the first two rounds last year, was a late commitment after suffering a herniated disc that has since stabilized.

Trailing Charles at 4-under 68 were Jim Ferree, Bobby Nichols, Dave Hill, Orville Moody and Larry Mowry.

TB outscores rivals, 64-56

ST. EDWARD, Neb. (AP) — The final score was St. Edward 76, Silver Creek 56, but Chad Micek 64, Silver Creek 56 would be just as appropriate.

Micek, a tailback for St. Edward, rushed for 465 yards, scored nine touchdowns and added five two-point conversions to account for all but 12 of Silver Creek's points in the high school football game.

Micek's 44 carries included scoring runs of 58, 47, 41, 28, 28, 11, 7 and 5 yards. He also returned a kickoff 59 yards for another score.

Despite his startling numbers, Micek fell well short of the unofficial state rushing record of 525 yards, set in 1912 by John Cook of Beatrice.

ANDREWS—

On the ensuing kickoff the Steers took over on their 36-yard line. On the very first play a defensive hit forced a fumble and the Mustangs recovered on the Steer 33. Three plays later Morris hit Hines on a 22-yard scoring strike. Rosas' kick upped the lead to 14-0.

With less than three minutes left in the half it looked like all the scoring was over. But then Rosas busted loose on a 32-yard run from the fullback position to set up another score.

Michael Hernandez added the score from three from 3-yards out. Hernandez also ran in the two-point conversion to make the halftime score 22-0.

Not much went right for the Steers in the first half and the second half was even worse. Andrews was able to run the ball 32 times for 246 yards in the second half alone.

On their second possession of the half the Mustangs drove 66 yards in only six plays to score. Morris ran the final 26 yards for the score. Rosas continued his extra point perfection making the score 29-0.

Again one play after the kick-off the Steers fumbled and Andrews recovered this time at the 43 yard line. Seven plays later it was Hernandez scoring again, this time form 2-yards out. The kick was good for a 36-0 lead.

Reserve Oscar Bueno then got into the scoring column running a reverse in from the 12-yard line. It was a good night for the back-ups as quarterback Elias Balderas scored minutes later on a 44-yard run for the final score of the night.

It was a good night rushing for the two Mustang quarterbacks as they combined for 194 yards on 16 carries.

"We finally put two really good halves of football together," Mustang coach W.T. Stapler said. "When you get all three options going on the triple-option you are going to get some yards. We had that tonight. This was one of those nights where we got going early and things just steam rolled.

"We began this season with the goal of having a winning season and this win guaranteed that."

The win boosts Andrews record to 6-2 overall and 4-1 in District 4-4A.

Big Spring drops to 2-5 overall and 2-3 in district play.

Cowboys face Cards Sunday

IRVING, Texas (AP) — It's one game Tom Landry needs worse than a former assistant.

For his morale and the 47 players on the Dallas Cowboys team, Landry hopes something positive happens Sunday when the Gene Stallings-led Phoenix Cardinals come calling at noon in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys have lost four games in a row and have tumbled to a 2-6 record, worst in 26 years.

Stallings spent 14 seasons on Landry's coaching staff but he isn't going to roll over.

"WE NEED a victory worse than Tom does," Stallings said. "He's been to five Super Bowls. We'd just like our fifth victory."

The Cardinals are 4-4, losing their last two games after taking an early lead in the NFC Eastern division.

Stallings has lost four of his five meetings against Landry, including a 17-14 decision in the second game of the season.

"Tom has been pretty tough on me," Stallings said. "He's still a great coach. He's catching a lot of criticism but it's not deserved."

STALLINGS called Landry this week to check his morale.

"He's still a good friend of mine," Stallings said. "I don't care if we are playing."

Landry helped Stallings get his job with the Cardinals, giving a glowing recommendation when queried by owner Bill Bidwell.

"Gene's teams are always aggressive and give you everything they have," Landry said. "Their defense will get after you — it's a trademark of Stallings' teams.

"The Cardinals are an excellent offensive team. They have excellent skill people at every position. You have to outscore 'em. It will take at least 28 points for us to win this game. We'll definitely have to be in the high 20s."

The most points the Cowboys have scored this year is 26 against Atlanta.

DALLAS HAS won five of its last six games with the Cardinals and holds a 33-18-1 all-time edge.

"At 4-4 we are at least in the hunt for the NFC title," Stallings said. "If you had told me when we left training camp we would be 5-3 I would have taken it. So 4-4 isn't too far off. We're still in position to make a run for it."

Landry said the Cowboys will be playing a spoiler role hereout.

"We have such a tough schedule

Lohr takes aim at PGA scoring mark

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Bob Lohr's 66—196 at the Walt Disney World Classic was good for a two-stroke lead after three rounds and a shot at the 43-year-old PGA Tour scoring record.

Lohr, 21-under-par after 54 holes, needs a 7-under 65 in Saturday's final round to break the mark for most shots under par. The record for a 72-hole tournament, 27 under, was set by Ben Hogan in the 1945 Portland Invitational and tied by Mike Souchak in the 1955 Texas Open.

Lohr, a four-year veteran, is trying to become the 11th first-time winner on the tour this year and the third player to lead after every round.

Paul Azinger and Chip Beck were tied for second place at 197, 19 under par.

CREDITORS OF MID-AMERICA PETROLEUM, INC.

A Plan of Reorganization has been proposed for Midland-based Mid-America Petroleum, Inc. ("MAP") by Richland Resources Corporation, an Oklahoma City oil and gas company. THE OFFICIAL UNSECURED CREDITORS COMMITTEE AND THE LIMITED PARTNERS CREDITORS COMMITTEE appointed by the Bankruptcy Court to represent YOU as a creditor have determined to exclusively SUPPORT AND ENDORSE THE RICHLAND PLAN.

The Richland Plan is the result of months of extensive negotiations with both Committees and provides for the emergence of a new debt-free public company dedicated to MAP's employees, venture partners, service companies and to the Midland-Odessa business community. The Committees do not support the competing Plan proposed by French Petroleum Corporation.

French has been reprimanded by the Bankruptcy Court in these proceedings for violating the Court's Solicitation Order for cutting "special deals" with former insiders of MAP at the potential expense of YOU as a creditor.

If you are a creditor of MAP and have not received a Joint Disclosure Statement and a Ballot, please contact either Don M. Hughes, Vice President of Richland Resources Corporation (405) 848-0011, or Jim Scott, Chairman of the Official Unsecured Creditors Committee at (915) 563-3031. Richland and both Committees urge you to review the Joint Disclosure Statement and to vote to ACCEPT THE RICHLAND PLAN and REJECT THE FRENCH PLAN. Ballots must be returned by 5:00 p.m. on November 21, 1988.

RICHLAND AND THE OFFICIAL UNSECURED CREDITORS COMMITTEE INVITES YOU TO ATTEND A CREDITORS MEETING TO DISCUSS OUR PLAN OF REORGANIZATION FOR MAP ON TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1st, AT:

NORTHWESTERN BAPTIST CHURCH

Neville Chamberlain returned to England in September 1938, having met with Adolph Hitler. He emerged from the airplane waving the signed copy of the Munich Agreement and announced. "This means peace in our times." But before the ink on the paper was dry, Hitler had voilated the terms of the agreement and England was at war. So is the futility of man's efforts to acheive any degree of peace.

Learn with how the Prince of Peace gives real peace.

COMMUNITY

Amid snow-laden hills the village nestles around its church. In a cold world—a symbol of community

Probably the most positive trend in our changing culture is this new emphasis on community. For too long it had been a cold world. "Every man for himself . . ." went the old motto. Now it's becoming a warmer world. Folks recognize their need for one another. And with the realization of need has come increasingly a sense of responsibility.

Naturally the Church is at the center of community: It teaches that we are all children of God. And when the Church calls us together each Sunday it reminds us of our common need—and of our shared responsibility.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

World Community Day to be observed Friday

World Community Day, observed on Friday, is an annual event that unites Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women in a common worship experience. It will be held at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas, at 10:30 a.m. and luncheon will be held at 11:30 a.m.

This year's ecumenical service, entitled "Everywoman's Ministry," was written by churchwomen, both lay and ordained. It challenges women to recognize and share the gifts of their individual ministries performed within and outside the organized church that touch families, friends, neighbors — the sick, elderly and destitute.

"It is our hope that all who can will join in this year's celebration of World Community Day," says a news release from Church Women United. "We also hope all who support women's ministries of love and service will make a generous offering."

These World Community Day offerings make possible, in part, the mission of Church Women United and support its national commitment to eliminate the poverty of women and children in this country and build a world of peace and justice, the release says.

For more information, contact the First Presbyterian Church, 684-7821.

725,000 expected Sunday

At least 725,000 people, the largest combined crowd in Texas Baptist history, are expected to pack many of the 5,000 churches and missions for High Attendance Day in the Sunday School this Sunday.

On any given Sunday, churches affiliated with the Baptist General Convention of Texas will have an average attendance of about 600,000. The largest one-day attendance in Texas Baptist history was reported in 1983 with 719,232 present.

As part of this year's event, church and Sunday school members are being encouraged to bring a friend.

Texas Baptists have been celebrating "Great Day in the Morning," as the event is called, since 1974. In that time, almost 9.5 million persons have been involved in Bible study.

Many churches will have guest personalities and will be celebrating special events in conjunction with the high attendance day. In some cases, churches from several denominations are participating in a community-wide High Attendance Day in the Sunday School.

Bob G. Fuston, a consultant in the Texas Baptist Sunday School Division, said, "studies of why people visit or join a church continue to confirm the importance of a relative or friend's influence in visiting and bringing them to a church. No other influence will compare to it."

Over 175 visit Waco home

WACO — During the week of Oct. 11 and 12, over 175 commissioners and their spouses visited the Methodist Home in Waco for their annual meeting.

Working together in 1890, Methodist churches founded the Methodist Home for children. Today, the home serves 368 children through residential living on the Waco campus, through the Boys Ranch program for delinquent young men and through foster care for preschoolers.

The Methodist Home is one ministry that has remained dear to Methodists in local churches, which help support the home and who are always on the lookout for children who need the home's help.

The relationship has remained close because of the efforts of a group called the Methodist Home Commissioners, lay and clergy representatives from local churches who learn about the ministry and promote its work in their own communities.

For more information or to contact one of the local Commissioners, call Donna Helfrich, 1-817-753-0181.

Nine major religious denominations to debate future of 'covenanting'

RELIGION

PRINCETON, N.J. — A new path toward visible Christian unity in the United States will be debated in New Orleans Dec. 5 through 9 by representatives of nine major U.S. religious bodies attending the 17th Plenary meeting of the Consultation on Church Union.

Known as "covenanting," the new direction uses what one of its developers calls "a biblical format to bring Christians together sociologically and theologically to meet today's needs and those of the future." The step builds on foundations developed previously in the Consultation's 28 years of existence.

The Rev. Gerald F. Moede, C.O.C.U. General Secretary for 14 years before assuming a United Methodist pastorate this past summer, characterizes the covenanting plan as "a communion model mingling ministries and members" with a "dual focus of worship and life in the world" at regional and local levels.

Elements involved in the covenanting process include C.O.C.U. churches' acceptance of one another's baptism and membership, a commitment to inclusiveness, recognition and reconciliation of each other's ministries, a common mission, and regularly shared celebrations of the Lord's Supper. Present church structures, forms of worship, modes of baptism, assignment of pastors and other traditions will be retained.

All the churches that are together in the covenant would be represented in ordinations so that new ministers would have a common acceptability by all churches in the covenant. All, therefore, could serve in any of the congregations of these churches.

At the local level, joint baptisms once or twice a year would be held, an Easter vigil might be shared and the eucharist would be planned jointly.

Supporting the covenanting proposal are earlier agreements on mutual recognition of church membership and theology. Each of the nine Consultation members has accepted at its highest level the baptism and membership recognition, and the theology statement now is making the rounds of top legislative assemblies.

If the covenanting proposal is accepted in New Orleans, it then will go to the member churches for consideration. This process could run at least until the mid-1990s, Consultation officials say.

Each of the nine C.O.C.U. member churches will have ten voting delegates at the Plenary in New Orleans. There also will be observers from the Roman Catholic church and other Protestant bodies.

President of the Consultation is the Rev. George H. Pike, Louisville, Ky. Christian Methodist Episcopal Bishop Marshall Gilmore, Shreveport, La., is vice president, and Dorothy Bascome, Baltimore, Md., secretary. New officers will be elected and installed during the Plenary in New Orleans.

The Rev. David W.A. Taylor is Consultation General Secretary for Strategy and Interpretation, and interim General Secretary.

Major speakers during the sessions will include Michael Kinnamon of Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis who will give the keynote address Dec. 5. Katherine Sakenfeld of Princeton Theological Seminary will give the Rachel Henderlite Lectures that honor a former Consultation president.

Member churches of the Consultation are African Methodist Episcopal, African Methodist Episcopal Zion, Christian Methodist Episcopal, Christian Church-Disciples of Christ, Episcopal Church, International Council of Community Churches, Presbyterian Church, USA, United Church of Christ and United Methodist Church.

Crosbyton pastor to lead preaching

The Rev. Jo Carr, pastor of First United Methodist Church of Crosbyton, will lead St. Luke's United Methodist Church in a preaching mission Nov. 13-15.

She will be preaching at 8:30 and 10:50 a.m. and at 7 p.m. Nov. 13 and at 7 p.m. Nov. 14 and 15. Her theme for this series of sermons will be "The Celebration of Life."

A graduate of Texas Tech University, Ms. Carr entered the ministry in 1976, served as associate pastor at St. John's UMC, Lubbock, and as pastor at Cooper UMC, Woodrow UMC, and Christ UMC, Levelland, before moving to Crosbyton in June of 1988.

She has written for Upper Room Press, Friendship Press and has co-authored several books with Imogene Sorley for Abingdon Press, including "Bless This Mess and Other Prayers" and "The Intentional Family."

Before entering the ministry, she spent five years as a missionary in Rhodesia and more recently as an English professor at Texas Tech.

The mother of five and grandmother of four, Ms. Carr says, "I'm happier than I've ever been, luckier than I deserve to be, and am grateful for many things — like churches and kids and books and friends and sunrises and this great surprising world of wonders in which God caused us and calls us to live."

Bert Bostic, minister of music, has arranged special music for the preaching mission which includes St. Luke's many choirs. A nursery will be provided and a reception will be held following each evening service.

The public is invited to attend. The church is located at 3011 W. Kansas.

Scientist says 'Catholic lobby' fragmented

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A King's College political scientist says that just as there no longer is a unified "Catholic vote" in America, the "Catholic lobby" also is fragmented.

The Rev. Thomas J. O'Hara, who has examined 31 separate Washington-based Catholic interest groups advocating various public policy positions, says many scholars mistakenly considered the Catholic lobby "a monolith."

"That really is a distorted view," he says. O'Hara, who has written a chapter on the multifaceted Catholic lobby in a new book, "Religion in American Politics," says:

"There are Catholic pacifists, feminists, traditionalist and advocates of positions on many policy issues. Some are to the left of the bishops and some are to the right."

Porker faces eviction from hog heaven

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who keeps a 700-pound pig in the front yard of her inner city home faces up to a $200-a-day fine if her pet porker isn't moved to the country.

City officials say they'll enforce an ordinance against Victoria Herberta, who has kept pigs at her home since 1984.

"We can laugh about it and look at it as comical," says Robert Armstrong, head of the city's animal control office. "But we don't have to live next door to a pig."

Ms. Herberta, who calls her pet pig Jeffrey Jerome, has a Dec. 8 court appearance after animal control officers delivered a citation to her this week.

"He's not just any pig," she says. "His mother saved a human life and look how I'm being rewarded."

Jerome's mother, Priscilla, gained wide attention in 1984 for saving a child drowning in Lake Somerville.

A neighbor complained to a city councilman, saying the pig was filthy. Councilman Rodney Ellis said he passed along the complaint to the health department.

The white pig, with one blue and one brown eye, lives in the woman's front yard, eats hot dogs, grapes and candy, sips soda pop and has become somewhat of a local tourist attraction. Ms. Herberta, 49, bathes him in a tub, brushes his teeth and says she occasionally lets the pig sleep in her bed.

"A pig is a pig is a pig," Armstrong says. "This may be a VIPig but it's still a pig."

DALLAS (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan has been honored for her efforts urging women to take early steps to battle breast cancer.

Mrs. Reagan, who recovered last year, received the 1988 Betty Ford Award on Thursday.

"I know how hearing the word 'cancer' or 'malignancy' can just absolutely freeze you with fear," Mrs. Reagan told an audience of more than 2,000 people. "But that fear should never keep you from facing up to the need for mammograms" for detection.

Reagan

Former first lady Betty Ford, who also recovered from breast cancer, presented the award.

Jill Eikenberry, a star of the NBC-TV series "L.A. Law," also was honored by the Susan G. Komen Foundation, the event's sponsor. Mrs. Eikenberry, who had breast cancer two years ago, was recognized for "Destined to Live," a television special on the subject broadcast earlier this month.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, who's made a habit lately of roasting London's skyline, found a new way to have a go against post-World War II architecture.

The heir to the throne wrote and starred in a 75-minute documentary in which he dons a hardhat, takes the controls of a crane and gleefully wields a wreckers' ball against a condemned multistory parking lot.

Charles stirred controversy earlier by saying builders have done more damage to London than Hitler's air force. He returned to that theme in the British Broadcasting Corporation film intended for broadcast Friday night.

FLOYDADA, Texas (AP) — Pumpkin farming in Floyd County got its start when B.A. Robertson began planting the vegetable to make some extra money.

Today, some 800 acres in the county are planted with pumpkins, and to promote the alternative crop, town leaders are staging "Punkin Day" this weekend.

"I guess I have been accused of starting this racket here," said Robertson, now retired from farming. "It was just a way to supplement my cotton and milo growing."

In 30 years of pumpkin growing, the 84-year-old Robertson said he hasn't struck it rich, but he has seen changes in the way the large orange orbs are grown.

"Back in my days the biggest one we grew was the Big Mac, which got up to about 100 or 120 pounds," he said. "Now they have the Atlanta Giant which can grow to between 200 and 240 pounds."

Pumpkins, which used to sell for about 2 cents a pound, now go for 5 cents, and wages have risen accordingly, Robertson said.

"I used to pay about 65 cents an hour for labor. Now these guys are paying over $3 an hour," he said.

City officials have dubbed Floydada "Pumpkin Capital, U.S.A.," hoping to draw people to this town about 45 miles east of Lubbock.

The festival, in its second year, features a pumpkin contest on Saturday with prizes for the smallest pumpkin, largest pumpkin, ugliest gourd, prettiest corn, best painted pumpkin, best carved pumpkin and best pumpkin pie, said event organizer Alice Gilroy. Speedy pumpkin carvers also will face off in a timed carving contest.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Retired actress Helen Hayes gave mixed reviews of her latest performances on a lecture tour.

Miss Hayes, 88, told an audience at Purdue University "I cannot do without you," but said earlier Thursday at a news conference that her stand-up gig made her a little nervous and she wanted to stay home and tend her roses.

Hayes

"Old age is not something I've staved off, it's something I've achieved," she told the crowd of 3,000. "I'm having a ball."

"I cannot bear to be parted from a live audience. You've been my very best friends for 80 years and I cannot do without you."

The actress said earlier: "I haven't got used to it, the nervousness. This is my fourth lecture and I have another next week and then I'll not do any more. I'm also lazy. I don't like the travel part. I want to tend my roses and stay home."

From left, Dr. Philip Stein and the Revs. Thien An Vo, Ha Nguyen and Thang Nguyen, Vietnamese Bible translators, finalize a draft of the Gospel of John.

Translators address problem of rank, social standing in Vietnamese Bible

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Religion Writer

Bible translators deal with countless problems which never arise for pulpit preachers and biblical scholars.

Stein

Consider the following: Rank and social standing are vital elements of the Vietnamese language. Rank is established by the way a person talks with another. Thus, in the Gospel of John, when Jesus talks with Simon Peter, will translators use words denoting rank? The original Greek text doesn't. The English language doesn't. Vietnamese does.

Dr. Philip C. Stein of United Bible Societies and six Vietnamese Bible translators met in Midland recently to resolve certain translation problems, similiar to the one above, prior to publication of the "Gospel of John" by the American Bible Society.

The existing 1916 Vietnamese translation of the Bible is inadequate, says Leon Taylor, a member of the board of directors of the Midland-based Vietnamese Bible, Inc.

"Its language makes it unintelligible to the majority of readers," Taylor says. "The translator, a non-Christian, used a regional dialect and local idioms that are not used in the national language today."

Thus, a local group of concerned Christians took on the goal of establishing a foundation in 1986 which would coordinate efforts to translate the Old and New Testaments from the original Greek and Hebrew texts into Vietnamese and publish a complete Bible. The upcoming publication of the Gospel of John marks the completion of a small portion of this dream.

Working with VBI are the New York-based United Bible Societies, which represents over 100 societies around the world, and Vietnamese ministers from across the United States.

"UBS was interested in doing a translation in the late '60s and early '70s and had a translation committee and had training workshops in Vietnam, and then, of course, after the fall of Saigon, that all fell apart," says Stein, who served as a consultant in the Africa region for 15 years before becoming the global coordinator of UBS' work.

Some years after the fall of Saigon, Stein says, "Bible societies in the Asian Pacific region got the idea it might be possible to do a new translation of Vietnamese with refugees — people outside the country. We normally don't like to do that, but if there are extenuating circumstances, you find another solution."

Because Stein was an experienced field consultant, he was asked by those in Asia to investigate the possibility of forming a translation team in the United States.

"When I investigated, I discovered there was a group of Vietnamese pastors who had the same idea. They had wanted to do a translation and had gone to Leon Taylor and asked him if he would help them in raising the money for it."

When Stein talked with Taylor and other board members of VBI, he discovered "their plans coincided very much" with the plans of UBS.

Stein's next step was to train the Bible translators.

"The Bible societies do not use missionaries as translators," Stein says. "We work only with native speakers and very closely with the church so that we see ourselves in the role of serving the church and not as some outside organization that works independently."

Next, Stein began meeting with the translators — the Rev. Thang M. Nguyen, the Rev. Daniel Dao Tran, Dr. Phu Hoang Le, the Rev. David Mai, the Rev. Thien An Vo, the Rev. Ha Nguyen and Dr. Luc To Ha — three or four times a year to ensure "the quality of the work is good."

The reason for choosing the Gospel of John as the starting point was, Stein says, "They felt it was most appropriate for this particular church situation. They toyed with Luke, but settled on John. The decision was made by the Vietnamese church."

So far, Stein has found the work to be "very good."

The translators are "sharp, well-educated, intelligent men. They are working very hard to make sure that the language they use is not different from the language of Vietnam itself. They are reading and talking with people fresh from Vietnam. Their hope is eventually we will be able to distribute this to people still in Vietnam."

Stein has one reservation — "the work is going too slowly."

All of the translators work part-time, due to financial considerations. Stein says he hopes two or three of them will be able to work full-time, otherwise, "it will take until some time into the next century.

"You can do a complete translation in anywhere from 10 to 12 years even under bad circumstances, if you have people working full time. But, when you're working part-time like this, then you're talking in terms of longer."

Stein's opinion is based on "real experience in a lot of languages."

UBS is currently working, he says, "in 580 languages around the world. Of the 580 projects, about 40 or 45 of those are languages where there's already a translation, and it's a matter of doing a new one. But the rest are projects where the Bible's being translated for the first time."

The cost of publishing and distribution of will be covered by the American Bible Society.

VBI is the non-profit foundation charged with raising the funds to pay for the cost of translating the Bible and coordinating the entire project, which means the administrative expenses are paid by the foundation. For more information on VBI call 684-4900, or write VBI, P.O. Box 61, Midland, Texas 79702.

"It's unusual to have a group of Anglo-Americans take up a project for the Vietnamese," Stein says. "Usually, it would be a matter of the people of that church that spoke that language taking up the project.

Drug firm reverses itself, resumes giving out abortion pills

PARIS (AP) — A pharmaceutical company that manufactures abortion pills reversed itself Friday and agreed to resume distribution of the controversial drug after the government demanded it do so.

The company, Roussel Uclaf, announced its decision after Health Minister Claude Evin said the pills should be made available in the interest of public health.

The firm, partly owned by the French government, said it had no choice but to comply with Evin's wishes.

The firm announced Wednesday it was pulling RU 486, also known as Mifepristone, off the market because of an "outcry of public opinion at home and abroad," and a threatened boycott of its products.

Evin, after meeting with company executives, issued a statement saying that France's 1975 law legalizing abortions must be respected.

"The drug RU 486 is an advance because it does not involve use of an anesthetic. The precautionary measures to be taken in administering this drug, exclusively in approved health clinics, provides indispensable safeguards to women's health," the minister's statement said.

Roussel Uclaf is part of the giant West German chemical group Hoescht, which holds the majority share. The French government has a 36 percent share.

The government certified the pill for use under medical supervision Sept. 23.

Since then, 4,000 women in France have used it with a success rate of 95.5 percent, according to the drug's inventor, Etienne Emile Baulieu.

In a written statement issued late Friday, the company said it "accepted the (government's) order and would rescind its earlier decision and would resume distributing RU 486 in approved health centers."

Roussel Uclaf repeated that "no medical reason" had prompted its decision to withdraw the drug from distribution.

Baulieu, at a medical conference in Rio de Janeiro, was quoted as saying he was "very pleased" with the decision to resume distribution. He attributed it to "government pressure on right-wing groups," according to the press office at the World Congress of Gynecology and Obstetrics.

Baulieu said the pill represented "immense hope" for Third World countries.

"It is a question of human misery, of life and death. It was not possible to keep such an important advance in the drawer just because certain pressure groups were against its distribution," he said.

In Washington, Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, applauded the government's action.

"The French government has taken a strong stand against intolerance and in favor of the health of women. We support this action and the message it sends to those who seek to impose their will on all of us," she said.

Anti-abortion groups, including the Roman Catholic church, had welcomed the company's decision to suspend distribution.

Cardinal Albert Decourtray, president of the French Bishops Conference, said Friday he was "astonished that the government intervened in such an authoritarian manner." The cardinal denied that the church had pressured the company to halt distribution.

Thousands of doctors attending the Rio conference had called on Roussel Uclaf to continue making the abortion pill or pass the patent onto another manufacturer.

Health Ministry officials maintained the company acted to protect its image abroad when it halted distribution. Company officials said they had been inundated with mail from opponents to the drug in France and abroad, especially the United States.

They said many letters threatened to boycott company products.

Andre Ulmann, a Roussel Uclaf official who helped develop the pill, told reporters at the Rio conference a boycott would have cost the company substantial sums of money, "So we decided to stop making the drug."

The pill works by blocking the action of progesterone, a hormone essential in all stages pregnancy. Researchers say it is effective in the first seven weeks of pregnancy, particularly when used in conjunction with a second product called Sulprotone, or prostaglandin E.

They said the drug was not a do-it-yourself, morning-after-pill that could be purchased over the counter and taken at home. Its use requires medical supervision. It also has been tested for use in China and India.

Evin said it was difficult to know who exactly was responsible for the unsigned threatening letters received by Roussel Uclaf.

"It seems it is the fundamentalist movements which have already protested at other times, notably in 1975 when the abortion bill was passed," Evin said in a television newscast Friday.

Duarte claims El Salvador has made rights gains

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte Friday defended his government's record on human rights, saying El Salvador has made gains in ending abuses but cannot thoroughly investigate all violations.

He spoke at a meeting of government human rights organizations from Costa Rica, Honduras and El Salvador.

"We have made great advances in the promotion, the protection and the state of human rights despite the limitations our challengers impose upon us day after day and the merciless attack of subversive forces and international terrorism," Duarte said.

Left-wing guerrillas have been battling for nine years to gain power in El Salvador.

Duarte said El Salvador doesn't have the technical ability to investigate thoroughly the activities of death squads and abuses of authority by the security forces.

Another problem is that witnesses are afraid to talk, the president said, calling El Salvador a country where "the people have kept quiet out of fear, where they are afraid they will be killed if they create problems."

Earlier this week Amnesty International said right-wing death squads were again active in El Salvador.

The London-based human rights organization said hundreds of suspected government opponents have been slain in the past two years by the death squads that usually include members of police or military units.

Duarte, elected in May 1984, said his administration has been "totally dedicated to converting our military officers into faithful supporters of the fundamental rights of the Salvadoran people."

Duarte's government has not prosecuted anyone for suspected death-squad actions.

A federal judge did issue arrest warrants for four soldiers following the massacre of 10 villagers in September, but no arrests have been made.

Witnesses said soldiers killed seven men and three women in the village of Aldea, 31 miles east of the capital, after accusing them of collaborating with the rebels.

Czechoslovakians defy police, rally in historic square

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — About 5,000 people defied authorities by rallying in historic Wenceslas Square on Friday, then shouted "Shame!" and "Gestapo!" at police who cleared them with clubs and water cannon.

Powerful jets of water slashed indiscriminately into the crowd, knocking some people over and sending others fleeing down side streets.

The state news agency CTK said 87 people were arrested. Western journalists saw police beating some of the demonstrators with clubs and plainclothes officers twisted the arms of others while leading them to police buses.

Hundreds of police, some with dogs on leashes, swarmed through the plaza to disperse the thousands of all ages who assembled on the 70th anniversary of Czechoslovak independence to demand reform and greater freedom.

Police fired tear gas into a crowd of several hundred people watching from the steps of the National Museum overlooking the square, which stretches for half a mile in central Prague.

A cloud of tear gas billowed under a huge, official poster on the museum proclaiming, "Seventy (years), all power in the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic belongs to the working people."

CTK said the disturbances only involved about 2,000 people but said they also spread to the nearby Old Town Square.

"The actions of internal enemies of socialism and debased elements were prepared well ahead of time with the support of foreign, anti-Socialist emigre centers and publicized by Western media," CTK said.

"The aim of the confrontation was to cast doubts" on official policies and "to discredit Czechoslovakia," CTK said.

By early evening, police trucks had moved off Wenceslas Square into nearby side streets. There was a heavy presence of uniformed police throughout the city center.

Friday's crowd defied a week of warnings from the communist authorities not to attend the rally called by the Charter 77 human rights organization and four other independent groups.

The rally followed what dissident sources described as the most extensive roundups of dissidents in recent years, in which at least 70 were detained.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Phyllis Oakley said: "The detentions show that Czechoslovakia has far to go to bridge the chasm between the current practices of the authorities and the democratic ideals upon which the country was founded."

The rally ban and show of force appeared intended to prevent a protest similar to one of about 10,000 people Aug. 21, the anniversary of the 1968 Soviet-led invasion that crushed the "Prague spring" of liberal reform.

Authorities reported 77 people detained after the August demonstration, which riot police dispersed after several thousand people marched through Prague demanding "Freedom" and a withdrawal of the estimated 80,000 Soviet troops stationed in Czechoslovakia.

Chants of "We want freedom!" and "Long live truth!" rose repeatedly from Friday's crowd, but there were none about the Soviets.

In the 20 years since 1968, the Communist Party has been hard on dissent but kept supplies of consumer goods generous as a reward for political silence from most of the 15.5 million citizens.

U.S.S.R. postpones launch of space shuttle

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union postponed for four hours the unmanned maiden launch of its space shuttle Buran from a pad in Soviet Central Asia early Saturday, but there was no immediate word on what caused the delay.

"According to reports from the Baikonur Cosmodrome, the launch of the Soviet reusable space craft Buran has been postponed," official Radio Moscow said in a broadcast.

The official Soviet news agency, Tass, said there had been a four-hour delay in the prestart preparations, but did not say why.

Technicians had worked around the clock Friday on a floodlit launch pad, preparing for the brief flight of the shuttle, billed as safer, more flexible and more powerful than the U.S. orbiter it resembles.

The launch of the black-and-white winged Buran, or Snowstorm, shuttle attached to the Energiya booster — the world's most powerful rocket — had been scheduled for 6:23 a.m. Moscow time today (10:23 p.m. CDT Friday) at the pad in the republic of Kazakhstan.

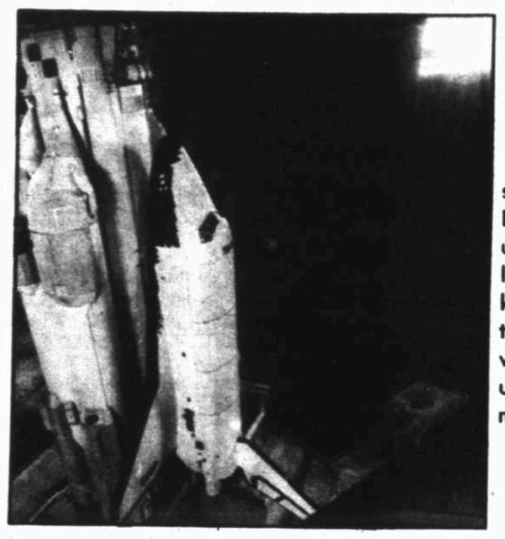
The shuttle will orbit Earth twice and then, "obeying its electronic brain and the radio commands from Earth, will land on a paved runway 12 kilometers (eight miles) from the launch complex," Tass said. No landing time was given.

In a report on launch preparations late Friday, state-run television provided the first confirmation that the military is involved in the shuttle program.

"As always in our country, military specialists participate in crucial, dangerous tests," a correspondent said, reporting from Baikonur.

The report said the military official overseeing shuttle operations is Alexander A. Maksimov, "chief specialist of the Defense Ministry on multiple-use space transport systems and the prospect of their development."

Military involvement could be one reason Soviet officials have withheld details of their shuttle program.



The Soviet space shuttle Buran, on its Energiya booster unit sits on the floodlit launch pad at Baikonur in Soviet Central Asia Friday, with a launch scheduled for early this morning.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Yugoslav urges reform

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Raif Dizdarevic told government officials today that nationwide unrest threatens political stability, and he urged quick economic reform, an official report said.

"Political and ethnic tensions have increased to such a degree that the political security situation has seriously deteriorated," Dizdarevic told an emergency session of the collective presidency he leads and its Cabinet.

The collective presidency has nine members who represent regions across the nation. Its rotating annual president functions as chief of state.

Economic and social problems have combined to prompt months of anti-government demonstrations with calls for an overhaul of Communist Party leadership and introduction of a multiparty system.

"The perspective of the exit from the economic crisis can not be put off any longer," Dizdarevic was quoted as saying by Tanjug, the official news agency. "It is the final hour (in which) we direct and concentrate all forces for final preparation of the economic reform."

Ortega: U.S. aiding rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega told the nation Friday the United States took advantage of the devastation spread here by Hurricane Joan to resupply the rebels and order 3,000 of them to re-enter Nicaragua.

Ortega charged that the U.S. government "is trying to do as much or more damage than the hurricane."

He accused Reagan of instructing the rebels, known as Contras, to "sabotage and slow reconstruction work and delay the coffee harvest," economically vital to Nicaragua's economy.

In Washington, State Department press officer Anita Stockman denied Ortega's allegations. "No U.S. military aid is being provided to the Contras at this time," she said.

China to protect firms

BEIJING (AP) — China's top government spokesman said Friday that foreign investors now operating in this country will be protected from a nationwide campaign to slash spending and cool off a badly overheated economy.

Spokesman Yuan Mu added, however, that the economic slowdown will have some effect on foreign firms still negotiating new projects in China.

At the same time, Yuan denied reports of dissension among top leaders on how to solve the economic crisis without crippling the decade-old policy of letting market forces rather than central planners guide the economy.

Yuan is spokesman for the State Council, or Cabinet. His rare news conference, for foreign and Chinese journalists, was apparently meant to assure the outside world that tough measures to regain control over the economy do not signal a reversal in China's overall policies of reform and opening to foreign nations.

Dukakis says 11 days enough time to pull off upset

Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis called the dwindling days before the election a political "eternity" with enough time to pull off an upset, while Republican rival George Bush accused him on Friday of wanting to "torpedo the prosperity."

The Democrat said the race was "tightening up all over the country." And he said that Bush, leading in the polls with 11 days to go, was hiding "in his little cocoon," with advisers afraid to let him engage in news programs' give-and-take while Dukakis has been appearing on many such programs.

Bush, speaking to a group of businessmen in Los Angeles, said that as Americans step into voting booths, they should keep peace and prosperity in mind.

"Peace means you can sleep at night knowing the world will still be there in the morning; prosperity means you can sleep at night knowing that opportunity will still be there in the morning," the vice president said.

Despite a pledge to shun negative campaigning between now and the election, Bush also stayed on the attack, warning that Dukakis "wants to torpedo the prosperity we've worked so hard to achieve."

"I ask you to consider: What kind of morning would electing the liberal governor of Massachusetts bring? Will it be gloomy?" Bush asked. "Will the dark clouds of pessimism and limited possibility obscure our vision?"

Bush also disputed Dukakis' assertion that American families have been able to keep up financially only because more women have been working outside their homes.

"Frankly, that strikes me as sexist — because it implies that women wouldn't work unless they had to," the GOP presidential nominee said.

Bush also spoke at the California Highway Patrol Academy in Sacramento and received endorsements from the California Correctional Peace Officers Association and the International Association of Correctional Officers.

In his remarks there, he said, "You might almost say that the Democratic Party today suffers from a split personality with a rank and file made up of some of the best of America, the silent majority...But the leadership, much of it, is a remnant of the '60s, the new left, those campus radicals grown old, the peace marchers and the nuclear freeze activists."

Dukakis wound up a trip to Missouri suggesting his campaign could be struck by the same political lightning that returned favorite son Harry Truman to the White House in 1948.

"In politics, as you all know, 11 days is an eternity," Dukakis said at a morning rally at a Kansas City Baptist church before he flew to Detroit. "There is time to do it."

Truman's name has been invoked by both sides in the campaign, but the late president's son-in-law said Friday the Republicans cannot lay claim to his memory.

Clifton Daniel, who married Margaret Truman, said President Reagan was "talking nonsense" when he said the feisty Democrat would be a Republican if he were alive today.

"President Truman would shoot himself before he became a Republican," Daniel said in an interview with an Iowa radio station.

Dukakis' trip to the Detroit suburbs brought him to within a few miles of the factory where the helmeted candidate's ride in a tank a few weeks ago — to show his support for building up conventional forces — turned into a public relations disaster. The Republicans even used film of it in a commercial to ridicule him.

"Let me tell you why I was in that tank factory," Dukakis said. "I care about those people. I care about what they're making."

Recalling a remark Bush made while watching Soviet tank maneuvers in Europe, Dukakis said, "I am very concerned when a vice president of the United States who wants to be president comes back from Europe and says to the American people, 'I'd like to bring some of those Soviet mechanics over here to tell American workers what to do.'"

His paraphrase of Bush's words brought boos from the crowd in Warren, Mich., where tanks are manufactured.

"I don't think we need any Soviet mechanics telling American workers how to produce," Dukakis said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Dukakis' vice presidential running mate, was drawing upon the memory of fellow Texan Lyndon Johnson, whose presidential library in Austin was the site for an evening campaign rally.

Earlier, Bentsen told students at Oakland Tech, a mostly black school with a record of academic achievement in Oakland, Calif., to apply their talent, stay away from drugs and vote.

"When you come right down to it, in an urban area like Oakland, the war on drugs in our schools will be won or lost by a series of millions of personal decisions made by students like you," Bentsen said.

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, took a bus tour through Pennsylvania, trying to avert complacency that could keep his ticket's supporters from going to the polls on Nov. 8.

"We're not taking anything for granted," he said.

Truth lies low at annual competition

DANNEBROG, Neb. (AP) — The National Liar's Hall of Fame issued its annual Pinocchio Award on Friday to a farm columnist who said the drought was so bad in Ohio that a Roman Catholic priest tried to turn wine back into water.

Politicians were ineligible for the grand prize won by Russell Hoy, a columnist for the Ohio Farmer.

"We have a rule that politicians can't participate, only amateurs," said Roger Welsch, the hall's founder and an expert in Nebraska folklore.

Even Vice President George Bush, who was to campaign Friday evening in Omaha, was told to keep his distance from the competition crowning the teller of this year's tallest tale.

Well, actually, the liars just didn't bother to invite him.

Entertainer Johnny Carson, who grew up in Nebraska, didn't show up either, but he received special recognition for his "contribution to the art of the tall tale" during the induction ceremony at Eric's Big Table Tavern.

"It's hard to sort out what's true and what's not in a Liar's Club," said Linda Welsch, Roger's wife.

Dick Cavett, another Nebraska native, was on hand for the induction ceremony and received a "public service" award for his comedy radio program.

"All my life I've dreamed of being here. Whoops!" he said, to the laughter of veteran liars.

Hoy's winning lie said the 1988 drought was so dry that "the Baptists were sprinkling and the Presbyterians were using a damp cloth" for baptisms.

He said, "the Lutherans were passing out rain checks and at least one Catholic priest was working at turning wine back into water."

Championship lies honored the past two years were told by one competitor who said he once met an honest fisherman, and another who claimed he once saw a lawyer standing outside on a cold winter day with his hands in his own pockets.

Many of this year's yarns targeted the summer drought, including an anonymous entry from nearby Central City that insisted authorities had banned water skiing on the Platte River because it was kicking up too much dust.

"Most people, deep down inside, like to stretch a story," said Eric Nielsen, owner of the tiny tavern. "I don't know why, but all of us are guilty of it."

The 2-year-old Liar's Hall consists of three plaques on a wooden wall near the men's room along with pictures of Presidents Washington, Johnson, Nixon and Reagan.

"The pictures are there because of the old story that Washington never told a lie, Johnson never told the truth and Nixon never knew the difference," Nielsen said, adding that Reagan has been added "because he forgot."

This year's event got a great deal of publicity, and organizers worried about how to come up with an induction ceremony that would satisfy the expectations of out-of-towners.

"The problem is, in the past the ceremony itself was all fabricated," Mrs. Welsch said. "It's really gotten out of hand."

A news release described the induction as the 37th annual event and said it was attended by a crowd of 1,455 in white ties.

Nielsen said he tried to discourage reporters from attending. "We thought about telling them when they got here that it was already over and we just lied about the time," he said.

People living near uranium plant demand cleanup

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — People who live near a uranium processing plant that spilled some 200,000 pounds of radioactive dust into the environment went on television Friday, complaining of health problems and demanding the facility be cleaned up.

Cancer and birth defects were among the chief complaints raised on the Phil Donahue Show by people who live near the Feed Materials Production Center, which is in Fernald about 18 miles northwest of Cincinnati.

The plant has been widely criticized since the DOE admitted in January 1985 that at least 200,000 pounds of uranium oxide dust have been released into the atmosphere from the plant during its 37 years of operation.

DOE officials said last week they have no plans to close the plant and have already begun a 10-year, $500 million program to clean up and modernize it.

"I don't see why we should have to wait for more studies, we should just make them stop," said an unidentified woman who drew applause from the audience during a live broadcast of the show.

Many said cancer has afflicted members of their families who live near the plant. Others complained their property values had dropped.

Donahue invited Ohio Gov. Richard F. Celeste and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, to answer questions in the packed 660-seat auditorium of Hamilton High School. Hamilton is about two miles from Fernald.

There were no representatives from the U.S. Department of Energy, which owns the Fernald plant, nor from Westinghouse Materials of Ohio, which operates the 1,000-acre facility under contract.

"They weren't ducking the show," said producer Marlene Sulip. "They weren't invited. But we sent them 60 tickets which they accepted."

Dr. Richard Luftic, a professor of special education at Miami University of Ohio, said there is a high incidence of cancer and spina bifida reported among children in the area. People with spina bifida were born with unclosed spines.

"Usually, you find spina bifida once in a million births. There are two of them down there next door to each other," said Luftin.

Stanley Chesley, a Cincinnati lawyer representing 14,000 residents who have filed a class action lawsuit against the former operator, National Lead of Ohio, said he expects to win and that DOE will pay the damages.

"If we get a judgment, there is a clause in NLO's contract that says DOE has to pay. The families of the seven astronauts who died in the space (shuttle) crash received fair payment. I think these people are entitled to fair payment."

Celeste and Glenn agreed that the situation at Fernald should be inspected by an independent commission of experts. "The secrecy of the DOE has created this mess. They can't be trusted to do the job," Glenn said.

Glenn called on the Reagan administration to budget at least $5 billion a year to clean up 15 nuclear processing sites in the United States.

Glenn and Celeste differed on prospects of closing the plant, with Glenn saying it should remain open to ensure cleanup, and the governor advocating shutting it down until cleanup is complete.

Fear of fear itself subject of convention in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — If flying in an airplane makes you unbearably dizzy, David Barlow will spin you in a chair until the room dances. If a subway ride makes your heart race, he'll give you coffee to simulate the sensation of panic until you overcome it.

Barlow, a psychologist who teaches at the State University of New York at Albany, was among the 420 experts and phobics gathered Friday for a weekend convention on the fear of fear itself, also known as anxiety attacks.

The objective of the ninth National Conference and Training Institute on Phobias and Related Anxiety Disorders is to find a salve for discomfort widely suffered but not entirely understood.

Barlow knows of what he speaks. About 10 years ago, he was under the stress of a new job when he panicked at giving a speech. He cured himself by jogging and orating at the same time to simulate and overcome the breathlessness of sudden anxiety.

He developed this technique into a treatment in which the physical sensations of anxiety and panic are recreated, based on the theory that people who suffer anxiety attacks are hypersensitive to their bodily reactions. As a consequence, these people monitor themselves, vigilantly waiting for another panic attack. When attacks occur, an interior dialogue rages: Is this pounding heart just a healthy muscle or is it the irrational foreboding of some unknown disaster?

Patients at Barlow's clinic are taught to reinforce rational thoughts over the irrational fears.

Estimates of how many Americans suffer from crippling anxiety and phobias range from 2 million to 12 million, according to the National Institute of Mental Health.

Anxiety attacks were believed for a long time to be a heart condition. Now, psychologists recognize that these experiences can lead to phobias — irrational, excessive and persistent fears.

Phobias focus on specific situations that cause anxiety, such as flying, subways, crowds or driving. There is the dizzying panic of vertigo that can strike on a mountainside or an escalator, or the loss of voice at having to speak in public, the No. 1 fear, according to Jerilyn Ross, president of the Rockville, Md.-based Phobia Society of America.

Her organization is sponsoring the convention with Massachusetts General Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

Treatments for anxiety and severe phobia include gradually exposing the patient to the experience they fear.

Leader of Hells Angels convicted

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A jury on Friday found the national leader of the Hells Angels Motorcycle Club guilty of conspiracy to violate federal firearms and explosives laws in plots to kill members of a rival gang.

National leader Ralph "Sonny" Barger Jr. was one of 10 Hells Angels from Alaska and California accused of plotting attacks in Louisville and elsewhere against members of the Outlaws.

Barger and Michael Vincent O'Farrell, both of Oakland, Calif., were convicted in U.S. District Court on conspiracy to transport and receive in interstate commerce explosives with intent to kill and (to) damage buildings, said Duane Schwartz, chief of the criminal division of the U.S. attorney's office in Louisville.

The conviction carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Barger also was convicted, along with three other people, on a charge dealing with a stolen government manual. Five people were acquitted on all charges, Schwartz said.

"I think we won very handily in there. It was just too bad that Irish (O'Farrell) and I were convicted, but we will probably win an appeal," Barger said.

PAC gifts total more than $1.6 million

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A dozen Texas congressmen running unopposed for reelection have collected more than $1.6 million from political action committees since Jan. 1, 1987, two self-styled public interest groups said Friday.

Representatives of Common Cause of Texas and Public Citizen/Texas used the figures, compiled by the Ralph Nader-linked Public Citizen's Washington office, to push for campaign finance reform.

They called for limits on the total amount of PAC money congressional candidates can accept, for campaign spending limits along with public financing of elections and for eliminating a law that allows some congressmen to take their campaign treasuries with them when they retire.

The 12 Texans — including Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, whose district includes Midland County — brought in a total of $3.45 million in campaign contributions from Jan. 1, 1987 through Sept. 30 of this year, the report shows. John Hildreth of Common Cause and Tom Smith of Public Citizen said that "war chest practice" discourages candidates from challenging incumbent congressmen.

Hildreth and Smith particularly criticized the fact that nearly half of the unopposed congressmen's collections came from PACs.

"Imagine being a congressman and having two phone calls coming in simultaneously: one from a constituent and another from a lobbyist who made a $5,000 campaign contribution," Smith said at a Capitol press conference.

"Which are you more likely to answer first?"

The PAC's "callous efforts to influence lawmakers through political contributions are exposed as the narrow, selfish interest motives they are," Hildreth said of the Public Citizen study.

"Incumbent politicians who use PACs as automatic money machines are accelerating the corruption of our democratic process, and they should be held accountable."

PACs are organizations of individuals, usually employees of a corporation or members of a labor union, who band together to donate campaign money to candidates.

The Public Citizen report shows Smith received $427,405 total, including $74,680 from PACs, in the current election cycle. Hildreth pointed out that Smith is using some of his money to finance get-out-the-vote activities for other Republican candidates in his sprawling congressional district.

NWS director says decision on cuts not made

DALLAS (AP) — The director of the National Weather Service Friday labeled as "pure speculation" reports that operations in Texas could be cut severely.

National Weather Service Director Dr. Elbert W. Friday said the agency is facing a budget shortfall and considering many ways to balance its books, but has not made any decisions on where the cuts would come.

A statement sent to weather service offices across the country on Friday said: "While we are considering a variety of options, some immediate steps are being taken to save money. These include a restriction on hiring and travel, so long as such actions do not impact operations. Numerous other options are under consideration, however no decisions have yet been made."

The statement, issued by Friday, blamed the budget shortfall on funding cuts over the past several years. But in a phone interview from Washington, he disputed reports that the agency had already decided to close several offices and start layoffs.

Thursday, an Austin television station reported that the weather service has proposed cutting back operations. KVUE-TV reported that a worst case scenario would include eliminating up to 125 jobs in the agency's southern region — stretching from New Mexico to Florida, north through Oklahoma and Arkansas, and including the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

KVUE quoted sources as saying all agricultural weather centers would be closed, including the one in College Station, and non-radar weather service offices such as Del Rio.

Friday acknowledged the agency is looking for ways to cut the budget — not just in Texas but across the nation. But he said he had no cut list.

"These things have been discusssed for many weeks," Friday said. "We will make an announcement whenever decisions have been made."

"We are looking at a lot of options," said Donald E. Witten, spokesman for the weather service in Washington. "We look at things a worst case scenario because that is the best way to do it."

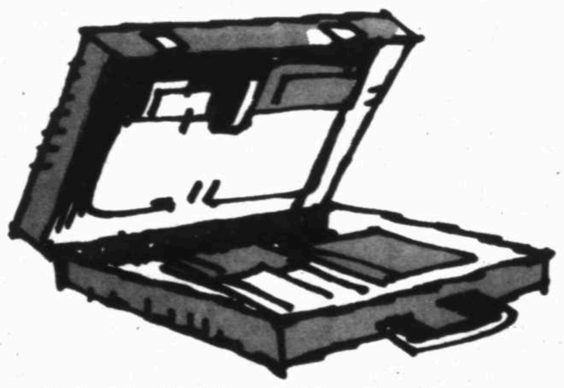
WRITE IT AND REAP!

Writing a classified ad that gets results—whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise— is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

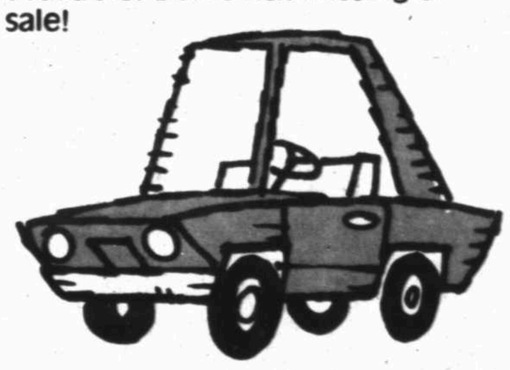
1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

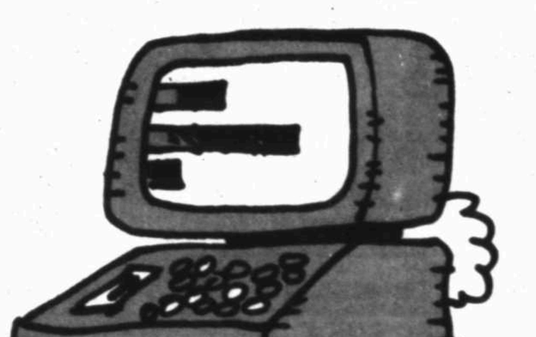


2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!





5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative. Run your ad for at least one week, or use our special rate.

Remember, you can cancel your ad as soon as you get the desired results!
