OPEC makes progress on production pact

Talks in Yugoslavia could conclude as early as Sunday

BRIONI, Yugoslavia (AP) — OPEC'S president said today the oil cartel has made progress toward an agreement on production policy and could finish its talks by Sunday.

Rilwanu Lukman of Nigeria told reporters during a break in the conference — now in its third day — that "very concrete" proposals had been put on the bargaining table. He refused to describe their contents.

"We're talking price levels, we're talking production ceilings, that's what we've been talking about all day," he said.

Asked if a two-hour morning session had made progress toward an accord, he said, "Yes, I think so." He would not be more specific.

"We do hope we reach an agreement by the weekend," Lukman added. He said the ministers would gather again tonight.

Other oil ministers emerging from the morning session declined to talk with reporters. Conference sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Lukman told his colleagues to avoid commenting on the deliberations.

The leaders of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries spent the first two days of their conference assessing the world oil market and discussing how high they would like prices to rise.

The talks are being held in an opulent hotel overlooking a secluded harbor on the largest island in the Brioni archipelago. The late President Josip Broz Tito once used the island as a private retreat.

A majority of the OPEC ministers favor a price target for the end of the year of between $17 and $20 a barrel, Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh told reporters after Thursday's three-hour session.

Aghazadeh said he saw no "economic justification" for seeking a price in that range. He wants OPEC to cut its production enough to drive prices back to the $28 level that prevailed late last fall before a switch in OPEC strategy triggered a massive price drop.

The Iranian minister declined to say whether he would stand in the way of a majority decision — as he did at OPEC's most recent meetings in March and April when he headed a minority alliance that also included Libya and Algeria.

The most widely traded grades of crude today sell for between $12 and $15 a barrel.

Even with a provisional agreement on a price target, OPEC would gain little without settling the stickier issue of how to control production.

Last fall the cartel abandoned its system of production controls, which sets an overall ceiling for the group and assigns quotas for each of the 13 members.

The ministers generally agree that controls should be reimposed. The problem is deciding what ceiling to set and how to divide it among the members.

A majority of the members have said they favor a production ceiling of between 17 million and 18 million barrels daily. Current production is reported to be about 19 million barrels a day.

The Iran-Libya-Algeria alliance has pressed for a lower ceiling.

World Court terms support of Contras charter violation

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The World Court today denounced U.S. backing for Contra rebels seeking to topple Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, and termed the U.S. support a violation of the U.N. Charter.

It declined to award Nicaragua its claim of $375 million compensation for damage caused by U.S. support for the Contras, but said that the United States was under obligation to make reparations.

The 15-judge court, formally known as the International Court of Justice, is the judicial arm of the United Nations and has no enforcement powers, but wields considerable moral authority.

Its ruling came at the end of a lopsided 28-month legal proceeding begun by the Sandinistas, who presented evidence of what they said were American efforts to topple their government.

The United States boycotted most of the court proceedings, and a U.S. diplomat had said earlier in an interview with The Associated Press that a verdict against the United States was a foregone conclusion.

"The court has found that the arming and training of the Contras is a violation of the prohibition of the use of force (as laid down in the U.N. Charter)," said Court President Nagendra Singh of India.

"The financing of the Contras undoubtedly constitutes intervention" in Nicaraguan sovereignty by the United States, Singh said.

The decision comes two days after the U.S. House of Representatives approved President Reagan's request for $100 million in aid to the Contras.

Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said he hoped the ruling would have a "sobering effect" on the Reagan administration and that the United States would "become a respectable member of the international community.

"Today's judgement is the best guarantee for the preservation of international peace in Central America," D'Escoto told The Associated Press outside the court.

Carlos Arguello, Nicaragua's agent at the court, said "the court did the only thing possible legally. The court recognized that Nicaragua is in the right and that justice is on the side of Nicaragua."

The United States, which has withdrawn from court jurisdiction in Central American disputes, was not officially represented when the verdict was read.

Hot-check writers voice variety of interesting excuses

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

There's more to hot checks than no cash.

A Midland man wrote a $480 check to a woman for illegal drugs or so he alleged.

"The check bounced," said Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, "and she brought it in (to the county's Hot-Check Office) for collection, alleging it was for personal loans."

Earlier, the man had paid off a "bounced" check for drugs.

Another man reasoned that "his wife couldn't have written those hot checks, because 'I closed her accounts,'" Dettman said. However, he didn't destroy or take away her checks.

People almost invariably make excuses when they write checks on closed bank accounts or on accounts with insufficient funds. The most common reaction when hot-check writers are confronted by the County Attorney's Office is that "They never knew they had 'bad' checks (in circulation)," said Bobbi Carr, a legal secretary in the Hot-Check Office. "That was their No. 1 story."

Since Dettman launched his round-up of habitual hot-check writers two weeks ago, more than 40 men and women have been arrested and jailed. Others, aware that arrest warrants were made out in their names, voluntarily surrendered.

"We're going to keep filing (charges)," Dettman said. "We're still filing."

SINCE THE FIRST of the year, the Hot-Check Office has processed $244,000 in 5,000 hot checks — an average of $48.80 per check — and has collected $160,000. But in acknowledging a "lag time," Dettman said that ultimately his office would collect on about 70 percent of those checks which merchants, unsuccessful in collecting on them, turned over to his office for collection.

The volume of hot checks processed by the County Attorney's Office is about doubled from last year. "There are more bad checks around. It may be due to the economy," Dettman said. "And the merchants are more inclined to bring us their bad checks."

Most of the checks are written for groceries and cash at supermarkets, such as Albertson's, Skaggs Alpha Beta, M System and Safeway. Checks also are written for clothes and other merchandise.

Among those arrested in the round-up were two certified public accountants (CPAs), a restaurateur and his assistant, an Odessa bail bondsman, a private-duty nurse, housewives, a chef and his girl friend, an ex-cameraman, and an office clerk.

"He (one of the CPAs) said he loaned his checkbook to his best friend, who wrote checks all over town," Ms. Carr said. "But his signature was on all the checks. He got an attorney."

A 22-YEAR-OLD woman was jailed for writing $634 in hot checks. Like the others arrested, she had ignored telephoned or written notices to report to the County Attorney's Office to resolve the hot-check complaints by making arrangements to pay restitution or by going to trial.

Sandinistas get shipment of Soviet-made helicopters

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Nicaragua reported to have received 10 more Soviet-made helicopters, anti-governnment rebel leaders say they hope to use a new infusion of U.S. aid to neutralize the Sandinistas' air power advantage.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said Thursday the Soviet Union, in its first direct delivery to Nicaragua since 1984, has shipped Nicaragua 10 additional HIP MI-8 helicopters for use against the Contra rebels.

Sims spoke shortly after Adolfo Calero, a leader of the Unified Nicaraguan Opposition, said he is placing high priority on using U.S. aid money to acquire shoulder-fired missiles capable of bringing down the Sandinista helicopters.

Calero told a news conference the helicopters have "changed the war" in the Sandinistas' favor. The Contras also will seek light anti-tank weapons, grenade launchers and light machine guns once, as expected, the U.S. arms flow to the rebels resumes on Sept. 1, Calero said.

At his news conference, Calero was in an upbeat mood following House approval Wednesday night of $70 million in military aid and $30 million in non-lethal assistance.

The Soviet helicopter shipment brought to an estimated 9,500 tons the amount of military equipment Moscow has given Nicaragua in the first six months of this year, more than the 7,500 tons they supplied last year, according to an official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Reagan administration says the Soviet Union has provided Nicaragua arms worth $650 million this year, and a total of $2 billion since the Sandinistas came to power in 1979. It says most of the material has been filtered through third nations, mainly Cuba.

Sims said a Soviet merchant ship docked at the port of Corinto on Nicaragua's Pacific coast on May 13 and unloaded 100 containers of arms and other supplies, including HIP helicopters.

The shipment, he said, "brings the fleet of the Sandinistas to about 25 of these extremely valuable helicopters, which are quite flexible...and have been used effectively against the resistance forces there."

House kills benefit plan for oil workers

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The Senate Thursday revived an effort to extend special jobless benefits to oil and gas workers, but the House killed the plan an hour later as members rushed to get out of town to begin their Fourth of July holiday.

The proposal was sponsored primarily by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and co-sponsored by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and other oil state Democrats. It was first approved by the Senate June 6 but stripped from an emergency catchall spending bill designed to keep several government agencies running through September, when the 1986 fiscal year ends.

In pushing to restore the provision, Johnston said the cost of his amendment had been scaled back to meet White House objections by eliminating benefits to the oil and gas industry and services directly related to the industry and by limiting the eligibility period to fiscal 1987.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, the changes would reduce the overall cost of Johnston's amendment from an estimated $44 - $50 million annually to roughly $7 million in FY 1987.

"People in my state are suffering to a degree they have not suffered since the Great Depression," Johnston said in a floor speech. "Unemployment at 13.2 percent and rising. The same thing is true in Texas, Oklahoma and other oil producing areas.

"If this is not an emergency, I don't know what is," he added. "This amendment provides only a small amount, but it is targeted right to the heart of the problem."

Under Johnston's amendment unempoyed oil and gas workers and others in jobs related directly to the oil and gas industries would be eligible for up to 26 weeks of unemployment benefits after regular state benefits have been exhausted, through the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act.

The act until now mostly has benefited workers in textiles, steel and other manufacturing industries who lost jobs because of foreign competition.

The Senate passed the measure — a part of a House-Senate conference report on the supplemental spending bill — by a voice vote. The amended conference report was then sent to the House where Rep. William Frenzel, R-Minn., raised a point of order against the amendment on grounds it violated the Budget Act by setting up a new entitlement program. The chair sustained the point o order against the amendment, so there was no recorded vote in the House.

Johnston pleaded with the Senate to approve $7 million measley dollars" out of a $1.7 billion appropriations measure, noting that the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law provides for a waiver in an emergency. "If this is not an emergency, I don't know what is," he said.

Johnston demanded to know "how can we give $50 million to Northern Ireland and turn right around and say our own unemployed oil workers can't get $7 million in benefits."

Season's first hurricane blows death into East Texas, western Louisiana

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — The season's first hurricane made a brief but dramatic entrance, bringing 85 mph winds and leaving two dead before plodding north and spreading heavy rains over much of East Texas and western Louisiana.

Hurricane Bonnie struck the Gulf Coast before dawn Thursday, spinning off tornadoes, destroying homes and knocking out power to thousands.

Thousands of beachfront residents who had boarded up their homes and fled inland to escape returned as Bonnie, downgraded to a tropical depression, lumbered north, carrying more problems with it.

Thunderstorms covered a large part of East Texas and western parts of Louisiana Thursday night dumping rains of 10 inches or more in some locations. The heaviest rain was at Ace, northwest of Beaumont and Port Arthur, with 13 inches, the National Weather Service said.

In addition to rains and flooding caused by Bonnie, high winds produced damage to homes and businesses as the storm tracked northward. A tornado was spawned by the storm near Fannett southwest of here.

U.S. 59 between Livingston and Shepherd near Lake Livingston, was covered with water and closed about 8:30 p.m. Thursday because of floodwaters from Big Creek, said Don Clark, a spokesman for the state Highway Department. Several farm-to-market roads also were closed and would remain closed for hours, he said.

"Reports from our people in the area are that they just had a deluge," Clark said.

About 20 miles to the southeast of the closed highway, water spilled over a dam at Big Thicket Lake just above a housing subdivision after 13 inches of rain had fallen, Liberty County deputy George Addington said.

The area was evacuated of its small number of residents, said Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety.

"There have been no injuries and no deaths. Apparently, it is a very small lake," Cox said about 10 p.m., two hours after the evacuation began. "It is already receding."

Cox, who said a trooper reported the area had 13 inches of rain Thursday, said he did not how many people were evacuated.

There were reports of marinas and boats at Lake Sam Rayburn being damaged. Bill Webb, owner of the Shirley Creek Marina near Etoile, estimated wind damage from $750,000 to $1 million.

Across the lake, Hank Creek Marina near Huntington, broke free from its moorings and floated into the lake, and parts of it were submerged, said Colleen Schroeder, dispatcher with the Angelina County Sheriff's Department.

Bridge City, just north of Port Arthur, recorded 7⅓ inches of rain Thursday, and several places northwest of Beaumont reported over 5 inches.

Bonnie was not a major hurricane but still managed to terrify residents when it hit land at 4:45 a.m. south of Port Arthur.

"I sure enough thought we weren't going to live through it," said Nancy Morrell, who huddled in her Port Arthur home with her 83-year-old sister because they couldn't walk to a shelter. "It held us in fear. We were two scared old ladies."

South African government bolsters security powers

By MAUREEN JOHNSON

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Under tough new security measures that became law this week, the government is armed with powers that critics charge will enable it to maintain a permanent state of emergency.

The new Public Safety Amendment Act and the Internal Security Amendment Act, which became law Thursday, bolster an already formidable array of security powers.

One opposition lawmaker says that with the new laws South Africa is moving toward "permanent martial law."

The new measures permit the government to jail people without charge and to curb the press through regulations issued by a Cabinet minister, powers that are more far-reaching than anything previously on South Africa's statute books.

Under the public safety act, Law and Order Minister Louis Le Grange can now declare any district an "unrest area" if he thinks rioting or other disturbances have erupted or might break out.

Without going to Parliament or having to raise the international furor caused by emergency decrees from President P.W. Botha, Le Grange can make whatever regulations he deems necessary to maintain law and order in the "unrest area."

This means Le Grange can, if he wishes, impose regulations such as those in force under the nationwide state of emergency declared June 12, including curfews, restrictions on meetings and bans on journalists from entering black townships, filming unrest or reporting police and troop activity.

The other act enables police officers to detain people for 180 days without charge, instead of the current 14.

Previously, only Le Grange could authorize long-term detentions without trial, and these could be challenged in court with the minister ordered to produce his reasons.

However, whatever is done under the new acts cannot be challenged in the courts, where white judges have often ruled against the government in suits by jailed black anti-apartheid activists.

The new laws — which evoked widespread protests and were enacted despite rejection by the Indian and mixed-race houses of the tricameral Parliament —also give troops and police immunity from lawsuits over anything they do in an "unrest area."

"South Africa is being forcibly jettisoned into a new era of permanent martial law, more detentions without trial and rule by the police and military," white opposition Progressive Federal Party legislator David Dalling declared during stormy parliamentary debate.

The goverment, making its most determined bid yet to quell 22 months of black rioting and spinoff violence in which some 1,800 people have been killed, retorts that it is facing a communist-inspired "revolutionary onslaught."

"It is grossly unfair to compare South Africa's position with that of any other Western country," said Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel.

"No other Western nation at present experiences the revolutionary onslaught, planned by communist strategists...making them (blacks) believe that revolution is the way to bring about peace and a just society," Nel said.

Several weeks of maneuvers in Parliament culminated in the measures being enacted by a government-dominated President's Council which, by majority vote, can adopt bills stalemated in the three chambers.

For the mixed-race and Indian legislators, already scorned by radicals for taking part in the three-house Parliament because it excludes blacks, the enactment was a humiliation.

The government, too, had sought to avoid openly overriding the Indian and mixed-race legislators and offered to water down the detention powers. But negotiations collapsed, and Le Grange went ahead with his original versions.

South Africans urged to resist race documentation

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Protestant church leaders today urged South Africans to refuse to state their race on documents, a key measure in the administration of apartheid.

"If done on an increasing scale, this would eventually render the system unworkable," the South African Council of Churches said in a resolution at the end of its annual conference in Johannesburg.

In other developments, a leading black newspaper editor was detained without charge under the state of emergency regulations, his colleagues said.

The editor, who may not be identified under the emergency regulations, joined an estimated 1,800 political activists, church workers and labor leaders jailed without charge since the state of emergency was imposed June 12. Some detainees have been released in recent days.

The state Information Bureau said six black men were killed, all apparently by fellow blacks, in the 24-hour period ending early today, bringing to 72 the number of people killed since the state of emergency was imposed.

Johannesburg police today extended to the black township of Alexandra an already widespread ban on students entering school premises. Schoolgrounds have been the scene of anti-government protests.

Curfews were imposed Thursday in the KwaNdebele tribal homeland north of Pretoria and in 11 black townships in the northern Orange Free State province. The South African Council of Churches urged whites, Indians and people of mixed race to erase the digit that denotes race from current identity documents and refuse to state race on other documents or applications.

New national identity documents, replacing passes for blacks and separate cards for whites, will not state race, but race still will be designated on most forms, including birth certificates and driving licenses.

"This action goes to the root of apartheid. It is open to any and every adult South African," said a council resolution.

"It is an internal pressure which does not rely on foreign influence. It is a way for those classified into privileged classes to express solidarity with those oppressed by their classification," the resolution said.

The council includes representatives of the major Protestant churches in South Africa, but does not include the Dutch Reformed Church of the governing Afrikaners.

COURT

The court said the amount of compensation should be settled in a subsequent proceeding if the parties agree, which seemed an unlikely prospect because of the United States withdrawal from the case.

The U.S. government has claimed that its support for the Contras was intended to stem a Nicraguan government arms flow to rebels in El Salvador.

But Singh said the court was not satisfied that the "alleged Nicaraguan arms flow to El Salvadoran insurgents reached a scale of any significance since early 1981, or that the Nicaraguan government was responsible for it."

Most of the court's findings came on a 12-3 vote, with U.S. Judge Stephen M. Schwebel, British Judge Sir Robert Jennings and Japanese Judge Shigeru Oda dissenting.

In dissenting, Schwebel issued a strong defense of U.S. support for the Contras, and a correspondingly strong denunciation of Nicaraguan governent actions.

In reference to the Sandinistas' denial of support for Salvadoran rebels, he accused Nicaragua of giving false testimony and said, "Nicaragua does not come before the court with clean hands."

Referring to U.S. support for the Contras, he said "the actions of the United States are strikingly proportionate."

"The Salvadoran rebels, vitally supported by Nicaragua, conduct a rebellion in El Salvador; in collective self-defense, the United States symmetrically supports rebels who conduct a rebellion in Nicaragua," Schwebel said.

"The rebels in El Salvador," he said, "pervasively attack economic tagets of importance in El Salvador; the United States selectively attacks economic targets of military importance" in Nicaragua.

The ruling said that the CIA's reported mining of Nicaraguan ports in 1984, a major element of the Sandinista complaint before the court, "affects Nicaraguan sovereignty."

It found that unauthorized U.S. intelligence overflights of Nicaraguan territory also were a violation of Nicaragua's sovereignty.

Role of World Court explained

Associated Press

The International Court of Justice, commonly known as the World Court, is an agency of the United Nations. Its headquarters are in The Hague, Netherlands.

The court was established for nations, and individuals may not sue or be sued. It has jurisdiction in all cases which the parties agree to refer to it and other matters provided for in the United Nations Charter or other treaties.

In the event of a dispute as to whether the court has jurisdiction, the issue is settled by the court.

States are not required to submit disputes to the court. Under Article 36 of the statute which created the court, states may declare that they recognize the court's jurisdiction as compulsory in cases involving the interpretation of a treaty; interpretation of international law; deciding whether there has been a breach of an international obligation, and settling any reparations due for a breach of an international obligation. Such declarations are binding only if the other party to the dispute has made a similar declaration.

However, states have often qualified such declarations. The United States, in accepting the court's compulsory jurisdiction in 1946, excluded matters of domestic jurisdiction "as determined by the United States of America." Other states have made similar recommendations.

The United States has also withdrawn from court jurisdiction in disputes involving Central America.

The court has no enforcement powers.

The court consists of 15 judges elected for renewable nine-year terms by votes of the U.N. General Assembly and the Security Council. Five judges are elected every three years.

No two judges may be from the same nation, and no judge may exercise any political or administrative function or have any other job.

No judge may be dismissed except by a unanimous finding by the other judges that he has ceased to fulfill the required conditions for services.

When two states come before the court and none of the justices is from either state, each state may choose ad hoc judges to sit for that particular case. The ad hoc judges participate in the decision with the same authority as the other judges.

Insurance ills force shutdown of coaster

DALLAS (AP) — Ballooning liability insurance costs have forced the State Fair of Texas to shut down its 40-year-old roller coaster and sublet two other rides, officials say.

The fair's insurance coverage has gone from $114,000 for $50 million in 1984 to about $1 million for $12 million in coverage this year, said Bob Halford, assistant general manager for marketing.

The fair wanted to keep the wooden Comet coaster, but its Board of Directors didn't feel comfortable subletting it to another operator unfamiliar with the machinery, he said.

A private operator pays for his own insurance, and that is what fair officials want done with the carousel and the log flume rides, Halford said.

"The log flume ride will be in operation. We will sublet it," he said. "We don't know who to yet, but it will be in operation when we open in September."

Halford said he doesn't believe closing the Comet would hurt fair attendance.

"The fair is so much bigger than just the midway and the roller coaster. The fair is the exhibits and the food and all the other things that go with it," he said. "We'll miss the coaster because it's a fixture. It just seems like it's always been around."

Halford said the coaster could return if the insurance situation turned around.

"You know, the Coney Island coaster's been down this year, which is probably the most famous coaster in the world. The insurance is the reason. Insurance has just become a tough chore for everyone," Halford said.

The fair grossed more than $11 million during last year's 18-day run, said David Nixon, director of concessions.

"It's very safe to say that costs for amusement insurance are substantially more expensive this year, and it's also more difficult to acquire high limits of liability," said Bill Wilkerson, president of the fair's insurance company, Haas Wilkerson Insurance Agency in Kansas City, Kan.

"They (ride operators) are being squeezed on the supply end and also are being squeezed on the cost end."

Since 1979, two major accidents have occurred at the State Fair, resulting in millions of dollars in court settlements.

The Senate had voted 65 to 31 against an effort to cut out $50 million for economic aid to Ireland over objections by Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb. and others who argued that the nation could not affor to start a new foreign aid program. Bt supporters said the aid would offer hope for peace in the troubled country.

Sen. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, agreed that extended unemployment benefits for out-of-work oilfield workers was "a critical need," but he urged tht the money be subtracted from some other less important program rather than waive requirements of the Budget Act.

The spending measure, worked out in a week of private meetings between House and Senate negotiators, was said to be acceptable to President Reagan after a compromise was reached on refinancing billions of dollars in federal loans to rural electric cooperatives.

Included in the bill also is $5.3 billion for farmers, whose checks from the Commodity Credit Corp. have been held up since te agency ran out of money June 3; $3.8 million to pay jurors in federal civil trials, some of which have been delayed for lack of funds, and money to restore some cuts made under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings dedific reduction law for fiscal 1986.

In that category was $55.6 million in noncompetitive university reach mone that critics labeled "pork barrel science."

CHECKS

"All of her checks were for shoes and clothes," said Ms. Carr. "She bought some rather expensive shoes, nice clothes, and $127.26 worth of lingerie."

"She's not one of those who was buying milk for her baby, obviously," said Dettman.

Ms. Carr recalled another hot-check writer, a woman, who had $773 in outstanding hot checks and "claimed she didn't know she had any bad checks."

Said Ms. Carr: "They always (initially) deny knowing about it."

A former television cameraman had "paid" $700 in a hot check for two suits. Two months later, he wrote $400 in hot checks to pay dry-cleaning bills.

"If you are writing hot checks for nice clothes," said Dettman, "you have to take care of them."

And another man, who fraudulently posed as an Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) special agent, built up $5,000 in misdemeanor hot checks — theft by check.

COUNTY ATTORNEY Investigator Bob Peetz said that he doesn't have "any trouble" in arresting hot-check writers. He said that a "significant number" turn themselves in prior to the serving of arrest warrants.

"There are a lot of good people out there for one reason or another get into financial trouble," Peetz said.

They may have lost their jobs, their spouses got laid off, or medical or other bills got out of control.

"During that period of time," Peetz said, "they end up writing hot checks." And once they begin to recover financially, often "the last thing they can afford to take care of" are the bad checks.

Peetz said that only a relatively small percentage of people intentionally write hot checks and "won't take care of them." Often, they seem resentful of collection attempts, he said. Those who inadvertently write hot checks for whatever reason are apologetic and are "eager to clear them up."

Tearful sister celebrates surrogate triplets

DETROIT (AP) — An infertile woman was in tears as her sister gave birth to triplets after being artificially inseminated with the sperm of the woman's husband.

Jeanette Wilks, 32, of St. Clair Shores, delivered what may be the world's first set of surrogate triplets, said Noel Keane, an attorney who is handling the adoption and has arranged 100 surrogate births.

The three boys were delivered Sunday by Caesarean section at Sinai Hospital of Detroit eight weeks premature and were transferred to Pontiac General Hospital, said Dr. Michael Berke, who helped in the delivery.

New budget may spur spending cuts

By STEVEN KOMAROW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nearly $1 trillion fiscal 1987 budget approved by Congress early today may not reduce the deficit enough to avoid automatic spending cuts of the Gramm-Rudman law, lawmakers say.

The plan restrains both military and domestic spending and officially meets next year's $144 billion deficit target with $1.4 billion to spare. But lawmakers said it contains optimistic assumptions about strong economic growth, and weak provisions to enforce the cuts, that could drive the deficit estimate billions of dollars higher.

"It's phony as a $3 bill," said Rep. Silvio Conte of Massachusetts, ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee. Still, Conte was one of 333 House members who voted for the budget, with only 43 against.

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said, "At least there is a modicum of outlay reductions."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., where President Reagan is vacationing, White House spokesman Larry Speakes issued a statement saying the president found the overall conference agreement "generally acceptable" but said the budget resolution "would alter the president's priorities."

The resolution "cut too much from defense and international affairs in fiscal year 1987 and is way too limiting" for future years, Speakes said.

The spokesman said the resolution increases domestic spending by more than the president recommended, but he welcomed the fact that the conference report did not call for a tax increase and met Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction targets.

The legislators, rushing out of town for the Fourth of July recess, approved the $995 billion plan overwhelmingly. It was given final passage by the Senate by voice vote early today soon after the lopsided approval vote in the House on Thursday night.

Before the Senate voted, its budget committee chairman, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., predicted a tax increase still would be needed.

"I'm not here tonight extremely proud of this product," Domenici said. "Basically, I've concluded after looking at it, (it was better than) no budget resolution at all," he said.

Domenici said the $292.15 billion in military spending in the budget was inadequate, and President Reagan would have to ask Congress for an increase.

The budget includes a $4.8 billion contingency fund, and part of that could help boost Pentagon spending — but Reagan would have to propose an acceptable way to fill the coffers.

Administration officials have pressed Congress to sell more government assets and raise user fees, but lawmakers said many of those were politically impossible and a tax increase was the only way to give Reagan anywhere close to the $320 billion he originally requested for the military.

The Senate had endorsed a $10.7 billion tax boost, but House Democratic leaders refused to go along unless Reagan dropped his opposition. The contingency fund for "unmet critical needs" helped lead to the House-Senate compromise.

Whether Congress actually meets the Gramm-Rudman requirements won't be determined until August, when the Congressional Budget Office and the president's Office of Management and Budget make a revised deficit estimate.

If the deficit for fiscal 1987 misses the $144 billion target by more than $10 billion, automatic spending cuts would be ordered in military and domestic programs to make up the difference.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., an original sponsor of the Gramm-Rudman law, predicted the deficit would approach $165 billion because of "the soft numbers."

Approval of the spending plan came more than two months after Congress' self-imposed deadline of April 15. But it was still well in advance of last year, when the budget wasn't approved until Aug. 1.

The budget is a congressional resolution that does not require President Reagan's signature, but his approval would be needed to enact the budget's proposals, which include:

— A 3 percent pay raise for military and civilian federal employees.

— A cost-of-living increase for Social Security, retired civil servants and veterans, estimated at 2 percent.

— Foreign aid programs 10 percent below current levels.

— Trimming slightly a wide range of domestic programs and freezing others, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. No money was provided for replacing the space shuttle Challenger, pending further review by the administration and Congress.

— Cutting the federal highway program by 7.5 percent and federal mass transit assistance by about 10 percent, but slighly increasing Amtrak's budget.

— Cutting several development programs by 10 percent, including Urban Development Action Grants, the Economic Development Administration, Appalachian Regional Commission and subsidized rental housing.

— Sell government assets, including the Small Business Administration Disaster Loan portfolio.

— Increase spending for education and training programs by about $1.7 billion.

— Phasing out the $4 billion a year revenue-sharing with local governments.

House Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray III, D-Pa., said the budget "achieves responsible deficit reduction without placing that burden unfairly on any one area of the budget."

He said the overwhelming House approval showed there was little support for Reagan's plan to cut more domestic programs and spend more on the Pentagon.

"I think it (the vote) says, bipartisanly, the House is unified in repudiating the priorities of the president," he said. "I think it is a good budget within the circumstances of a president who would not approve adequate revenues, and with the constraints of Gramm-Rudman."

Talk, don't fight

Sir Winston Churchill is credited with saying something to the effect it is better to "jaw, jaw, than to war, war." This may not be the most elegant phrase ever uttered by that noted master of the mother tongue, but it makes a point with convincing clarity.

Talking is to be preferred to shooting. The thought should be kept in mind by those who are impatient about the pace of peace negotiations in the Middle East.

Much talking has taken place in recent months, with scant results. But at least the jawing is about peace, not war. Despite continuing difficulties, the 39 years of fighting between Egypt and Israel is at an end.

One of the latest conversations about the future of the Middle East was in Washington between President Reagan and Jordan's King Hussein. As expected no great turning point resulted, and the president referred to a "drift" in the peace process, but at least the door stays open for further negotiations.

One of the stumbling blocks is the Palestine Liberation Organization's Yasir Arafat. He scuttled last year's peace talks initiated by Hussein, but the king talks on. Prior to his meeting with Reagan, Hussein tried to enlist the aid of moderate Arabs, has tried to mend fences with Syria's Hafez Assad and cool the strife between Iraq and Iran.

Israel has sought to speed up the peace process by letting it be known a visit by Secretary of State Shultz would be welcome. He has been invited by Ezer Weizman, a minister without portfolio in the Israeli Cabinet.

No decision has been made, but the stage is set for what could be a significant mission after Shultz returns from a trip to the Far East at the end of this month. Meanwhile the "drift" may continue and the failure of these talks and initiatives to bring quick results may frustrate many observers.

If Winston Churchill were around today, however, he might remind those watching the Middle East peace process that talking is far, far better than what went on between Israel and Egypt for three decades before that historic peace treaty was signed by President Sadat and Prime Minister Begin.

Another View:

Negotiating distance

For months it has been obvious that the strategic arms reduction talks in Geneva would never get anywhere unless President Reagan agreed to put his Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," on the bargaining table. For the first time there is reason to hope that he will.

The President, in an interview with three members of The Times' Washington bureau, expressed optimism that he and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev might reach an agreement in principle on arms reductions at their next summit meeting. He specifically said that restraints on the deployment of anti-missile defensive systems could be included in the negotiations.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and his aides will no doubt try to redefine the President's words into insignificance. Unfortunately, if experience is any guide, they may succeed. But if the President sticks to what he said this week, and if the Soviets prove similarly flexible, the chances for reaching an agreement will be greatly improved.

Until lately the Soviet Union had been insisting on U.S. abandonment of the Star Wars program as a pre-condition for reductions in offensive missile forces on both sides. Since there would be no way to verify compliance with a ban on laboratory work of the sort that both sides were conducting long before Reagan ever announced his SDI program, that was an impractical proposal.

Four weeks ago, however, the Soviets submitted a greatly modified negotiating proposal for cuts in offensive missiles, together with a suggestion that continued SDI laboratory work would be acceptable. Reagan, who had thrown arms-control advocates into deep gloom with his seeming repudiation of the SALT 2 treaty, responded with a warmly worded speech at Glassboro, N.J., calling the Gorbachev proposal a possible "turning point" in arms-control negotiations. Conversations concerning a possible summit meeting are once more under way.

No one should imagine that all the problems are solved, even if the President doesn't allow administration hard-liners to dilute his newly expressed willingness to put SDI on the bargaining table. The two sides are still far from agreement on a formula for offensive-missile cuts. And, as for Star Wars, the Soviets will strive for a stricter definition of "research" than Reagan, who is still devoted to the idea of SDI as an eventual means of deliverance from the threat of mutual nuclear extermination, will be willing to accept. The United States will seek a broader definition, including development as well as research, going beyond what Moscow is willing to accept.

Compromising these very different viewpoints will be difficult. At least, however, the two sides have moved within negotiating distance of each other. And that itself is a major improvement.

CIA gives odds on Mexico's collapse

WASHINGTON — The CIA has told President Reagan there's at least a 1-in-5 chance that the Mexican government will collapse within the next five years.

Jack Anderson

This alarming judgment was delivered to the White House two years ago, but our CIA sources tell us that, if anything, it was an optimistic appraisal. In the last two years, they point out, Mexico's economic and political problems have grown by quantum leaps as the price of oil has fallen and charges of election fraud have hit the headlines.

The prediction of possible disaster was contained in a highly classified National Intelligence Estimate — the most important appraisal of a country that the intelligence community provides to a president. It represents the best intelligence analysis the president and his top advisers receive before policy decisions are made.

The secret, 35-page intelligence estimate begins mildly enough: "The Mexican political system is under greater stress today than at any time under the last 30 years. Ultimately, of course, the preservation of Mexico's stability will rest on the skill and competence of its leaders and on the strength of its political fabric."

The estimate continued hopefully: "We judge that in the end the Mexican political system is likely to remain intact." Then came the kick in the pants:

"But the majority of the intelligence community principals also judge there is roughly a 1-in-5 chance that during the period of this estimate — through the remainder of President (Miguel) de la Madrid's term, which ends in 1988, and the first few years after his successor is scheduled to take office —centrifugal forces now at work within the system, combined with internal political opposition and perhaps external pressure, will result in the political destabilization of Mexico."

Because National Intelligence Estimates represent the combined view of all U.S. intelligence agencies, dissent is duly noted. In the case of the dire prediction of Mexico's collapse, the majority of the "intelligence community principals" agreed, but five representatives disagreed with the CIA's pessimistic opinion.

Among those who agreed were CIA Director William Casey; Lt. Gen. Lincoln Faurer, then-director of the National Security Agency; Rear Adm. John L. Butts, then chief of naval intelligence; and the Treasury Department's intelligence unit.

Disagreeing were Lt. Gen. James A. Williams, Defense Intelligence Agency boss; Hugh Montgomery, head of the State Department's intelligence and research bureau; Gen. William E. Odom, Maj. Gen. James Pfautz and Brig. Gen. Larry Smith, the intelligence chiefs of the Army, Air Force and Marines, respectively. All five have since moved on to other spots.

The dissenters' view was given at length: "While Mexico will experience increased political instability associated with extremely difficult social and economic problems, the probability that these conditions will reach the extreme of political destabilization during the period of this estimate is remote. ...

"The complete political destabilization of Mexico would require an extremely well-organized opposition with dedicated leaders capable of challenging one of the most durable and resilient political systems in Latin America." The dissenters felt this was unlikely in the near future.

"Despite these differences of opinion," the intelligence chiefs told the president, "we judge unanimously that in the coming years Mexico will suffer a series of incidents and crises stemming from the forces now at work within that country's society." The president was reminded, perhaps unnecessarily, that "U.S. policy makers will need to monitor (conditions in Mexico) closely to protect U.S. vital interests."

UNDER THE DOME: Here's a twist on partisan politics: Democratic insiders who have been fighting the good fight against pork-barrel-as-usual are less than ecstatic over the growing possibility that their party might recapture the Senate this fall. Reason: Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., would cede chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee to Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss. With Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., the "king of pork" who heads the House Appropriations Committee, this would give the Magnolia State a mortal lock on congressional pork. "We might as well turn over the whole budget to Mississippi," mourned one Senate aide.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: State Department cables reveal the curious relationship between Imelda Marcos and her daughter, Imee, who scandalized her mother several years ago by eloping with a divorced playboy, Tommy Manotoc. One cable reports Imelda describing her daughter — then 26 — as having "the mind of a 40-year-old and the heart of a 10-year-old." Imelda called her daughter's marriage "the sophisticated rebellion of a child unaware of the consequences." Imelda reportedly had hoped Imee would snag Prince Charles of Britain. The fantasy of a 6-year-old?

Burton's amendment labeled African action

WASHINGTON — Moments before the House last week shouted approval of a draconian South African sanctions bill, its supporters were rolled back by a 7-to-1 roll call vote in favor of an amendment putting a communist label on the African National Congress (ANC).

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That vote has been ignored in the excitement following passage of the sanctions substitute, which had the effect of erasing the anti-communist amendment from the books. But the bizarre episode on the House floor revealed a reverse spin to anti-apartheid politics: liberals can have as much trouble handling the ANC as conservatives do with the Pretoria regime.

The amendment offered by Indiana Republican Rep. Dan Burton merely says none of the sanctions bill's $50 million in aid could go to the ANC unless its "controlling body ... no longer includes members of the South African Communist Party." That echoes the bill's prohibition against aid to Pretoria. Yet, the Democratic leadership was intent on burying the Burton amendment in committee. It came to the House floor only because of a clerical mixup.

The normally cool-headed Rep. Stephen J. Solarz of New York, a major Democratic voice on foreign policy, was so overwrought by the oversight that he branded the amendment "obnoxious," "ludicrous" and "ridiculous." After that outburst, he joined most of his Democratic colleagues in voting for it.

This is the mirror image of Republicans flinching from voting against South African sanctions that they actually consider poor policy. While seeking to legitimize the ANC, Democrats want no debate on its communist connections and cannot bring themselves to give it a public bill of health.

Nobody during the House debate refuted a Senate committee report that the 30-member ANC national executive named last year contains at least 19 and up to 25 known communists. The ANC's 1985 political report endorses Soviet repression in Poland and Afghanistan, assails the U.S. for leading the "global offensive of imperialism" and condemns "Zionist Israel" as "the proxy of United States Imperialism."

Agreeing with Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania that "the issue is not communism in southern Africa" but "the end of racism," House Democrats wanted Burton's amendment out of the sanctions debate. The House Rules Committee, acting as an arm of the Democratic leadership, voted against permitting a vote.

Consequently, Solarz was visibly in shock when he heard the clerk reading Burton's amendment. The Rules Committee inadvertently had blocked the wrong amendment. Solarz and Chairman Claude Pepper pleaded that consideration of the Burton amendment violated Rules Committee intent. But Rep. Bob Traxler of Michigan, presiding over the House, had no choice but to rule the amendment in order.

Rep. Howard Wolpe of Michigan, chairman of the Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Africa, promptly announced that he would accept the Burton amendment "because it is frankly ... meaningless" in barring unintended ANC subsidies. "Nor should our acceptance of this amendment," he added, "indicate any endorsement of the view that the African National Congress is dominated by communists."

Solarz swallowed the acceptance of the amendment. But, his voice rising, he added, "That does not mean it is not obnoxious or ludicrous or otherwise ridiculous." He decried "a ridiculous amendment like this saying no aid can go to (the ANC) because there may be a few communists in it."

Solarz's adjectives were scrubbed from the permanent record, as was the amendment itself once the tough sanctions substitute erased everything previously adopted. But the 365-to-49 vote stands as a marker. The 49 opponents, all Democrats, represent the congressional hard left on foreign policy questions (with Rep. Michael Barnes of Maryland voting no, unable to go along with usual Foreign Affairs allies Solarz and Wolpe).

The overwhelming majority of House Democrats simply cannot vote against such a proposition, which is why the House Rules Committee tried to spare them the embarrassment. Having passed it once, Burton can be counted on to raise his amendment every time sanctions are debated, as the Boland amendment barring covert aid was added to every Central American bill.

"It is ... hard for me to understand," Danny Burton told the House, "why well-meaning members of Congress would be fooled by the ANC in exactly the same way they were fooled by the Sandinistas in Nicaragua, the Viet Cong in Vietnam, the MPLA in Angola, Frelimo in Mozambique and even by Fidel Castro in Cuba." That's what Democratic leaders wanted to avoid hearing.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 27, the 178th day of 1986. There are 187 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 27, 1950, President Harry S. Truman ordered the Air Force and Navy into the Korean conflict following a call from the United Nations Security Council for member nations to help South Korea repel the invasion from the North.

On this date:

In 1844, Mormon leader Joseph Smith was killed by a mob in Carthage, Ill.

In 1847, New York and Boston were linked by telegraph wires.

In 1880, author-lecturer Helen Keller, who would live most of her life without sight or hearing, was born in Tuscumbia, Ala.

In 1942, the FBI announced the capture of eight Nazi saboteurs who had been put ashore from a submarine on New York's Long Island.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy spent his first full day in Ireland, the land of his ancestors.

In 1983, world-famous balloonists Maxie Anderson and Don Ida died during a race when their balloon crashed in a German forest.

Ten years ago: Palestinian extremists hijacked an Air France plane carrying 287 people on a Tel Aviv-to-Paris flight, had it refueled in Libya and ordered it flown to Uganda's Entebbe airport.

Five years ago: President Ronald Reagan's top advisers said Reagan's success in getting budget cuts through congress could pave the way for a balanced budget by 1984.

One year ago: The United States demanded that seven other Americans held hostage in Lebanon be included in any arrangement to free the 39 hostages from a hijacked TWA flight. They were not.

Today's birthdays: "Captain Kangaroo," Bob Keeshan, is 59. Opera singer Anna Moffo is 52.

Thought for today: "I don't know whether war is an interlude during peace, or peace an interlude during war." — Georges Clemenceau, French statesman (1841-1929).

Arms sales verify 'Muddle East' policy

As one who hopes Israel survives, the sale of $265 million worth of arms to Saudi Arabia doesn't especially upset me. If there is a country on earth least likely to employ sophisticated weapons in a competent manner, it is Saudi Arabia.

Charley Reese

What does upset me is the clear evidence provided by the sale that the Reagan administration has no Middle East policy, and worse, is so muddle-headed about the area, it does not even realize it.

When a public official deceives the American public, I get mad. When a public official deceives himself, I worry. The statements the president made in justifying the sale don't make sense. He said world peace depends on the U.S. maintaining its influence in the area.

Pray tell, what influence? Saudi Arabia denounced, not supported, the Camp David peace process. Saudi Arabia always has and continues to fund radical states and terrorist organizations. Saudi Arabia led the pack in oil blackmail in the 1970s. Saudi Arabia spends millions to undermine American support of Israel. Saudi Arabia routinely and publicly denounces the United States — the latest instance was in support of Libya after our bombing raid. Saudi Arabia flatly refuses, as does every other Arab state, to allow an American military base on its soil.

The Saudi regime — an extended family of about 5,000 people — is about as stable as a bottle of nitroglycerin lying on a rock pile in the hot August sun. All those guys don't have their foreign investments, Swiss bank accounts, and private jets with English-speaking pilots on 24-hour standby because they're comfortable and secure in the desert kingdom.

Besides, I've heard all this malarkey before when previous administrations were trying to justify arms sales by the billions to the Shah of Iran — the great linchpin of American influence.

True, big business in America and the Saudis have extremely close ties. Saudi oil is marketed by American oil companies. True, the Saudis hired the president's pal, Mike Deaver, for a multi-million dollar contract a few months ago.

I know what the Saudi policy is — undermine U.S. support of Israel so it can be destroyed. I know what the policy of big business is — use the American government to guarantee their investments in the Arab world. I know what Deaver's policy is — make as much money as he can while the getting is good.

But what I don't know is what U.S. policy is. The Reagan administration continues to provide billions to Israel and Egypt and to sell arms, when it can persuade Congress to go along, to the Saudis and the Jordanians. Give-aways and missile sales are not a policy. Calling the Persian Gulf a strategic interest of the United States, which generally means we will go to war to defend it, is not a policy — it's madness. Which would be easier to survive — the loss of Persian Gulf oil or a war with the Soviet Union? It makes no sense to go to war to save an asset which would be useless after the war to save it.

It's also madness to claim on the one hand support for Israel and on the other hand to pour high-tech weapons into countries which are officially at war with Israel — Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

Ground facts argue that arms sales will increase the likelihood of war. Israel, Arab propaganda notwithstanding, is no superpower. It is a little country of 3.5 million Jews; it's exactly 226 miles long and an average of 40 miles wide. You could fit two Israels into the Florida peninsula and Florida would still have land left over and 3 million more people.

As the war plane flies from Arab military bases, Israel's major population centers are 12 minutes from Syria, 30 minutes from Iraq, seven minutes from Jordan, and 14 minutes from Saudi Arabia. Do you know what that means? It means the Israeli government has to keep its forces on hair-trigger readiness to make a pre-emptive strike the second they think the Arabs are planning to go to war.

If Reagan has no ideas on how to prevent war, he'd better decide what we are going to do when war breaks out over there. It will eventually.

ACLU attacks pornography report, condemns commission conclusions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 2,000-page report by the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography isn't due out for another two weeks, but the panel's most vocal critic, the American Civil Liberties Union, already is decrying it as an assault on the Constitution.

The ACLU compiled nearly a dozen copies of the lengthy study and circulated them among reporters at a news conference Thursday, along with the ACLU's own 200-page condemnation of the commission's conclusions.

In its report, "Polluting the Censorship Debate," the ACLU said nearly all of the 92 recommendations of Attorney General Edwin Meese's panel violate the First Amendment and undermine constitutional rights to privacy, due process and individual choice.

"The basis of this report is that ... any material that is ... considered offensive should be ridden out of town on a rail," said Barry Lynn, the ACLU's legislative counsel.

"We have the combination of law enforcement recommendations combined with (support of) extraordinarily broad citizen vigilante action to get rid of all sexually oriented material whether it is legally obscene or not," Lynn added. He criticized the report's support for "collusion between the government and private 'decency' groups" to pressure stores into ridding their shelves of sexually explicit material.

Commission spokeswoman Dee Kuhn said the panel would have no comment on the ACLU's criticism and that the commission plans to officially release its study July 8.

The ACLU's legislative counsel also criticized the commission's central finding that there is strong evidence showing a connection between violent pornography and sex crimes. Lynn called the conclusion a "wildly misleading inference based on uncertain social science and frail personal anecdotes" from rape victims and others who said pornography was a factor in the assaults on them.

He called the government's report "a dangerous call to arms against free expression, one which relies on misrepresentations, distortions and deception to pollute the national debate over sexual materials and censorship."

But Richard E. McLawhorn, executive vice president and general counsel of the National Coalition Against Pornography Inc., called Lynn's charges "outrageous and completely inconsistent with the ACLU's professed belief in the First Amendment."

Among the commission recommendations the ACLU found most objectionable was a suggestion that Congress enact a forfeiture statute to reach any proceeds derived from violating federal obscenity laws.

Lynn said the result would be the seizure of "everything else that that company is involved in or every other book that that bookstore sells."

The ACLU also objected to a recommendation that the Federal Communications Commission scrutinize cable television and telephone dial-in services to determine whether obscene material is being distributed.

Psychiatrists in 'life-and-death' bind

NEW YORK (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling barring the death penalty for insane convicts puts criminal psychiatrists in a bind in which curing their patients could lead to their eventual executions.

While many leading forensic psychiatrists praised the high court for extending humane new protections to death-row inmates in its ruling Thursday, some also expressed concern over the ethical problems posed for their profession.

In a decision involving a Florida man convicted of murdering a Fort Lauderdale police officer in 1974, the court, for the first time, made it a constitutional requirement that a person be judged sane before being executed.

It added, however, that a person could eventually be executed if he or she is cured. And it ruled that death row convicts are entitled to sanity hearings with their own lawyers and psychiatrists present.

Dr. Henry Weinstein, director of forensic psychiatry at Bellevue Hospital and NYU Medical Center in New York City, agreed that a hearing to judge the mental fitness of death row inmates is "a matter of basic fairness."

"The really difficult ethical dilemma comes in when treating someone found incompetent. You may want to ease the pain of psychosis, but you also know that that is going to lead to his execution," said Dr. Howard Zonana, associate professor of psychiatry at Yale University who helped write a friend-of-the-court brief in the case on behalf of the American Psychiatric Association.

"My own feeling is the ruling is basically proper. But without a doubt, it poses a dilemma for psychiatrists," said Dr. Loren Roth, a psychiatrist at the Western Psychiatric Institute in Pittsburgh and chairman of the Council of Law and Psychiatry of the psychiatric association.

Magnetic field 'flip-flops' in Voyager view of Uranus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Uranus' magnetic north and south poles may be flip-flopping — an astonishing reversal never before witnessed although it happened repeatedly on prehistoric Earth, NASA scientists say.

The theory that the magnetic field is reversing on the seventh planet from the sun is based on observations by the Voyager 2 spacecraft when it swooped by Uranus in January, the researchers reported in the July 4 issue of the journal Science, which was released today.

The issue contains the first published studies from Voyager's Uranus flyby.

"What we may be seeing is a magnetic field in the process of flipping," said Ellis Miner, deputy Voyager project scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Metal particles in sea-floor rocks show Earth's magnetic field reversed at least nine times during the past 3½ million years, most recently 730,000 years ago, and scientists believe such reversals happened many times earlier. The particles point north in some areas and south in others, reflecting the magnetic flip-flops.

But humans have never witnessed a field reversal on any planet, said astrophysicist Mario Acuna of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

Miner and Acuna emphasized that a flip-flop in Uranus' magnetic field is only one possible explanation for Voyager's observations that the Uranian magnetic field is strangely tilted and is offset from the center of the planet.

Another, previously debated theory is that the odd Uranian magnetic field was created as an indirect result of an Earth-sized object smashing into Uranus and tipping it on its side early in the solar system's history.

Understanding Uranus' magnetic field is important because it helps scientists learn about Earth's magnetic field, which allows compass navigation, keeps out harmful radiation, and possibly affects climate, said David Stevenson, a planetary scientist at the California Institute of Technology.

If Voyager really detected Uranus' magnetic field flip-flopping, "it would be astonishing, remarkable good luck," he said, because such reversals occur very quickly in geologic time, on the average of about 200,000 years on Earth.

Stevenson tends to favor the collision theory. He said a collision would change the way sunlight heats and moves liquids within the planet's interior to create a very unusual magnetic field.

Voyager project scientist Ed Stone agreed, saying a magnetic flip-flop may be too simple an explanation.

A planet spins around its rotational poles. Uranus' rotational poles point toward and away from the sun, parallel to the plane of its orbit around the sun. The rotational poles of all the other planets are like Earth's, perpendicular to the orbital plane.

The magnetic poles are different than the rotational poles on all planets except Saturn. On Earth, the magnetic north pole is tilted about 11 degrees away from the rotational north pole, so compasses point to magnetic north, not true north. On Uranus, the magnetic poles are tilted 60 degrees away from the rotational poles.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan sure of progress at U.S.-Soviet arms talks

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan remains upbeat about the chances for progress in the U.S.-Soviet arms talks despite the Soviets' harsh criticism at the end of the latest round at the Geneva parley.

In a statement released Thursday while he vacationed at his mountaintop ranch near here, Reagan reiterated comments he made a week ago that a recent Soviet arms control bid appeared "serious" and might help pave the way toward an arms accord.

"We are studying these Soviet ideas on reductions very carefully ...," Reagan said.

"At the same time," Reagan added, "We believe that if progress can be made in one of the ... three negotiating areas, it should not be held up — as the Soviets are still insisting — pending agreement in another area."

The statement appeared geared toward keeping the arms control effort on track during the three-month recess in the talks. In comparison, Soviet negotiator Viktor Karpov put the end of the round in a harsh light, charging that the United States had continued to block progress and offered no change of position.

U.S. trades astronauts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is sending 10 teen-age members of the Young Astronaut program to the Soviet Union in October, but it is denying a real astronaut the right to take part in next month's "Goodwill Games" in Moscow.

The Young Astronauts will be in the Soviet Union for two weeks under a new exchange agreement that calls for a similar delegation from the Soviet Young Cosmonauts to visit the United States in December. The students will be 14 to 16 years old.

At the same time, however, the State Department said Vance D. Brand — a two-time space shuttle commander — cannot attend the mini-Olympics because they are "a purely private corporate venture."

Brand and his two American colleagues on the historic linkup of U.S. and Soviet spacecraft in July 1975, had been invited to take part in the July 5 opening ceremonies for the games being put together by Atlanta broadcaster Ted Turner. Former astronauts Donald K. Slayton and retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Thomas P. Stafford are going.

"Vance was invited to the games by the Turner Broadcasting System," said NASA spokesman Peter Smith. "As we always do in things like this, we consulted with State. We are advised the Goodwill Games are a purely private corporate venture arising from an agreement between TBS and the Soviet government.

"Consistent with overall NASA policy, we advised Mr. Brand it does not appear to be appropriate for him to participate in the games."

Prostitution ring trial set

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A tentative trial date of July 28 was set Thursday for an insurance executive charged with operating a prostitution ring involving Brown University students, juveniles and other women.

Stanley Henshaw III, who allegedly ran the sex-for-money ring from his condominium near the Ivy League school, is free on $5,000 bail.

He is charged with coercing women into becoming prostitutes; conspiring to have women violate a law prohibiting oral sex and sodomy; maintaining a common nuisance; and possession of cocaine and marijuana.

Henshaw faces up to 97 years in prison and a $6,000 fine.

Charges were dropped against one of two Brown students arrested in the case, Rebecca Kidd of Orange, Conn., when she cooperated with the state. Dana E. Smith, of Avon, Conn., is to be arraigned July 9.

British producer wins post

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Columbia Pictures on Thursday announced the appointment of David Puttnam, the British film producer, to the top creative post at its Burbank studios.

Puttnam, 45, producer of the 1981 Academy Award-winning "Chariots of Fire," will replace Guy McElwaine, who resigned under pressure as chairman and chief executive of the studio in April.

Missile site walkers jailed

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Three people who trespassed on a nuclear missile site four days after being released from jail for the same offense have been convicted and sentenced to jail.

Erny W. Davies, 43, of Athens, Ohio, Kathleen Jennings, 38, of Pittsburgh, and Homer Ladon Sheets, 51, of Berkeley, Calif., were sentenced Thursday to five months and 29 days in jail for trespassing on a military reservation.

The trio had been convicted May 23 by U.S. District Judge Scott O. Wright of trespassing on the same central Missouri Minuteman 2 missile site and were sentenced to time spent in jail — 23 days. They were arrested again May 24.

Five other protestors are on trial this week on charges they entered another nuclear missile site and damaged equipment.

Titanic interior explored

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. Navy research ship Knorr, which discovered and photographed the wreckage of the British ocean liner Titanic last September, will sail again within two weeks to explore the sunken vessel's interior with sophisticated video cameras, a scientist said Wednesday.

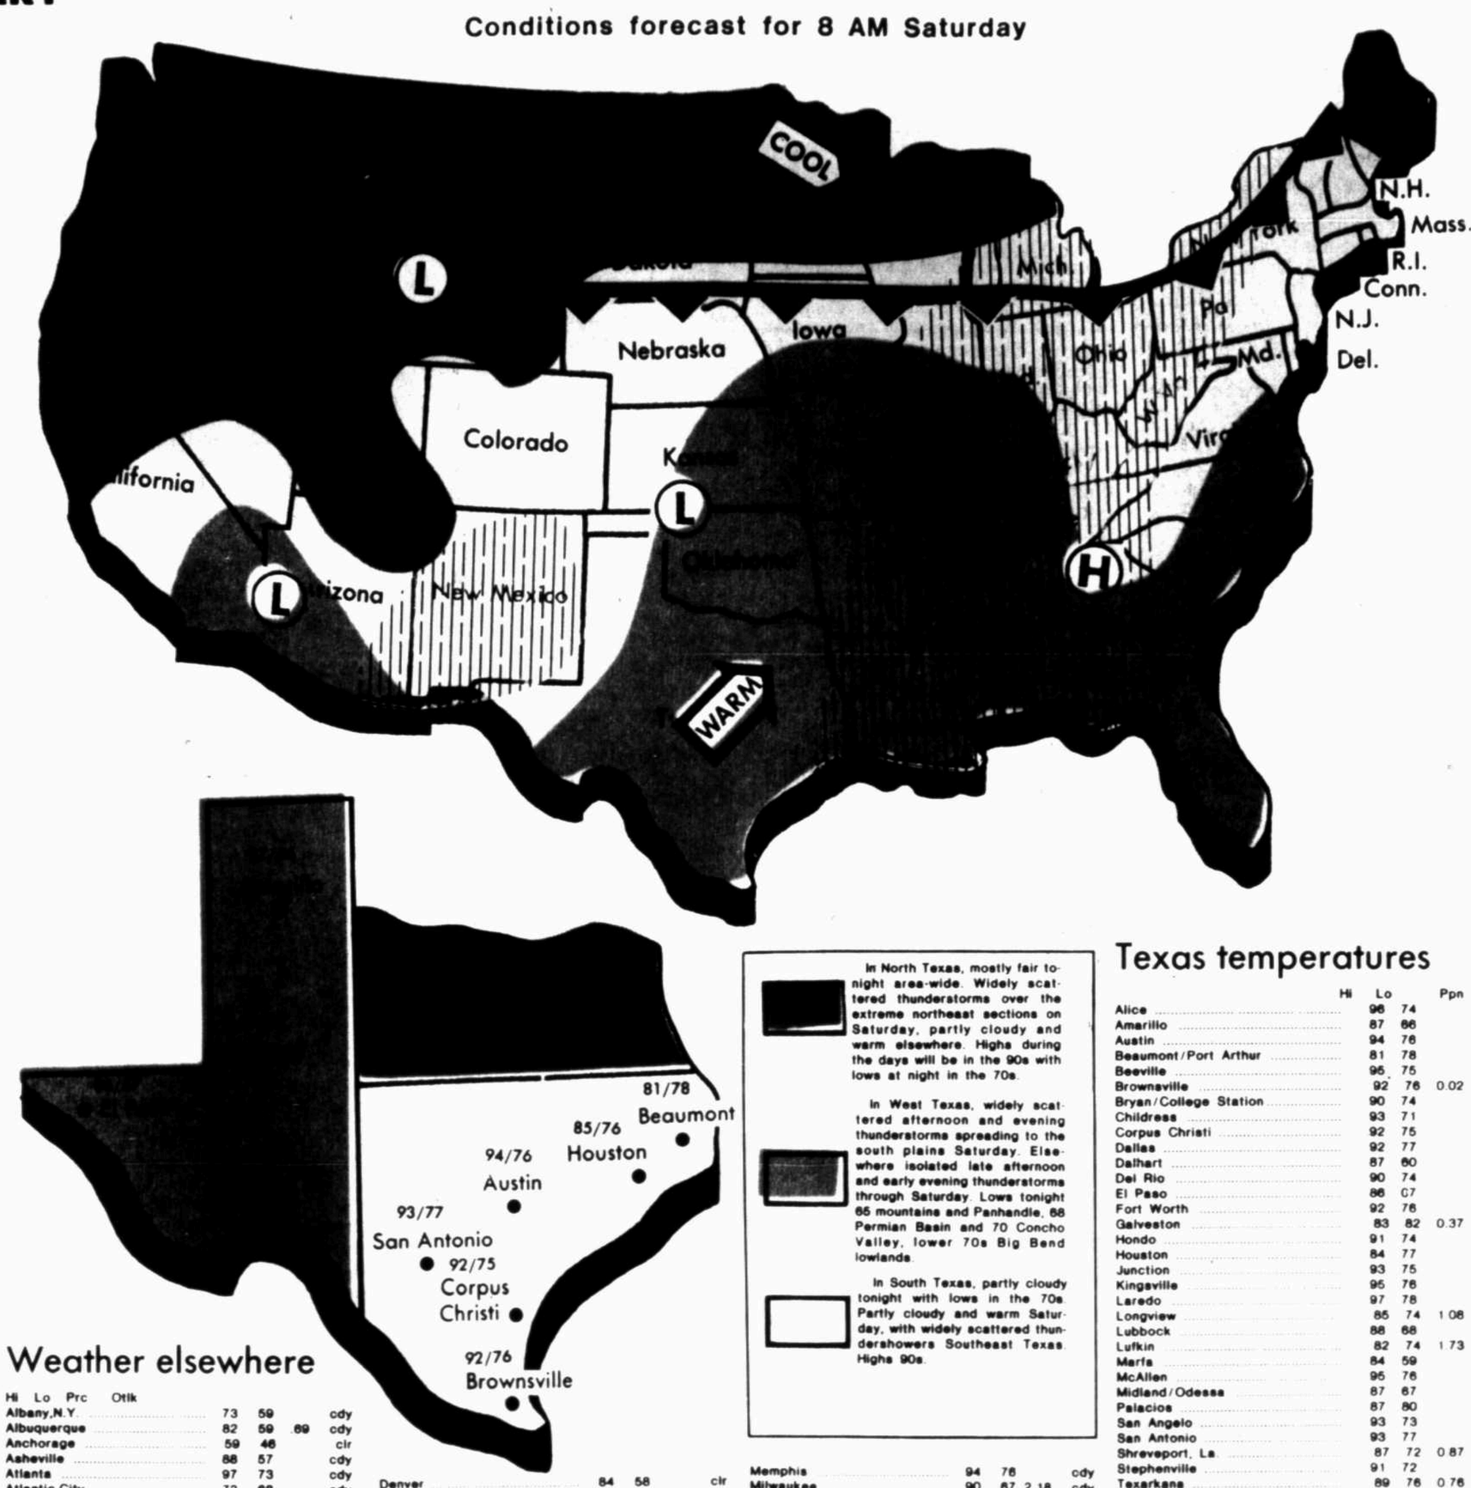
TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Saturday



In North Texas, mostly fair tonight area-wide. Widely scattered thunderstorms over the extreme northeast sections on Saturday, partly cloudy and warm elsewhere. Highs during the days will be in the 90s with lows at night in the 70s.

In West Texas, widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms spreading to the south plains Saturday. Elsewhere isolated late afternoon and early evening thunderstorms through Saturday. Lows tonight 65 mountains and Panhandle, 68 Permian Basin and 70 Concho Valley, lower 70s Big Bend lowlands.

In South Texas, partly cloudy tonight with lows in the 70s. Partly cloudy and warm Saturday, with widely scattered thundershowers Southeast Texas. Highs 90s.

Partly cloudly skies expected for Saturday

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies through Saturday, with possible isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms. However, the chance of rain stands at less than 20 percent.

The NWS forecast for Saturday is calling for a high in the lower 90s and southwesterly winds at 10-15 mph. For tonight, the forecasters are predicting a low in the upper 60s and southerly winds at five to 10 mph.

Thursday's 87 degree high was 16 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1972. This morning's low was six degrees above the record low of 61 set in 1968.

STATE

Street flooding was reported in portions of Northeast Texas early today as the remnants of Tropical Storm Bonnie continued to dump heavy rainfall over the area, causing some street flooding.

The flash flood warning covered Shelby County and eastern portions of Panola, Marion and Harrison counties. It also covered the Shreveport-Bossier City area, just across the Texas-Louisiana border.

Forecasters said many areas had received as much as five inches of rainfall between midnight and dawn and some areas would get as much as six inches of rain before the rain stops.

In addition to the flash flood warning, much of Northeast Texas was under a flash flood watch today.

NATION

The remnants of Hurricane Bonnie spread rain and thunderstorms across sections of Texas and Louisiana today while thunderstorms were scattered in the West.

All that remained of Bonnie was a low pressure system over northeast Texas, drifting slowly north. Heavy rain and scattered thunderstorms extended from east central and northeast Texas into northwest Louisiana.

Elsewhere, thunderstorms ranged across the southern Rockies and from southern Montana into northwest Nevada and southern Oregon.

Thunderstorms in the Southeast dissipated early today but a narrow band of showers and thunderstorms extended from southwestern Iowa to southeastern New Mexico.

Heavy thunderstorms ranged across the Midwest Thursday evening, spawning tornadoes.

Road and power company crews cleaned up from a tornado that hit near the northern Michigan village of Thompsonville, state police said.

Sahara heats play; Seeds gain third round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tim Mayotte of the United States and Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany led a seeded sweep in the early matches at Wimbledon today, where a heat wave had players, fans and the courts baking.

Mayotte, the men's 10th seed, beat Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2, in a third-round match, and Kohde-Kilsch, the women's fourth seed, defeated Alycia Moulton of the United States 6-2, 6-2, in the second round.

Also winning second-round matches were women's seeds Manuela Maleeva, No. 8 from Bulgaria, who beat Susan Mascarin of the United States 6-4, 7-6, and Gabriela Sabatini, No. 10 from Argentina, who beat Catherine Suire of France 6-3, 6-3.

Top seeds Ivan Lendl and Martina Navratilova played later in the day, along with defending men's champ Boris Becker, whose match against American Tom Gullickson was suspended because of darkness Thursday evening with Becker leading 6-4, 6-3, 2-2.

Lendl, who has never reached the Wimbledon final, plays Amos Mansdorf of Israel, while Navratilova, who is going for a fifth straight title, takes on Australian Jane Forman.

A HEAT wave born in the Sahara Desert swept over the Wimbledon tennis championships, with forecasters predicting sunny skies and temperatures in the mid-80s through the first part of the weekend.

The London Weather Center said a slight easterly breeze would help cool the grounds, but that more humid conditions might bring a threat of a thunderstorm Saturday afternoon.

"We're getting some Sahara air, although it's wandered around a bit before reaching us, and there shouldn't be any radical change until after the weekend," the weather center said.

ON THURSDAY, two seeded players from Sweden, No. 2 Mats Wilander and No. 5 Stefan Edberg, called on their experience and staying power to advance.

Seven other men's seeds, including Sweden's Anders Jarryd, have tumbled out of the tourney. But Wilander and Edberg are still there, along with fellow Swedes Joakim Nystrom and Mike Pernfors.

Wilander beat Britain's Andrew Castle 4-6, 7-6, 6-7, 6-4, 6-0 and only got in front in the final set.

"I was struggling," Wilander said. "I always felt I had a good chance, but I couldn't go through the wall. He was always getting to everything."

Edberg, the reigning Australian Open champion, trailed 2-1 in sets in a see-saw second-round match before edging American Paul Annacone 6-4, 6-7, 4-6, 7-5, 6-0.

WILANDER WAS at the point of a gun as thousands of British fans cheered on a native son who was a virtual unknown to most of them.

Castle is the product of the American college system and his only claim to fame back home was winning the British Under-12 title in 1975.

But the 22-year-old Briton played the game of his brief career to stretch the two-time French and Australian champion almost to the limit.

Castle was given a standing ovation by the sun-baked Wimbledon crowd, a salute Castle accepted with some reserve.

"Let's take it easy," he said. "I lost."

Wilander was thankful that, for him, the tournament hadn't come to yet another premature end. The Swede has never advanced further than the fourth round in five previous visits.

Edberg's game burst into life in the fifth set after remaining dormant throughout the first four.

"It's always like that on grass," he said. "Suddenly you get a break and then it's another game. I don't think I missed a ball in the fifth set."

Of the four Swedish seeds still in the tourney, Edberg probably has the toughest third-round match. He faces Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, whom he can't recall ever having beaten.

"We shouldn't have met this early in the tournament. My history with Mecir isn't good, unfortunately," the 20-year-old Swede said.

NC Cubs wait for opponent in title game

From Staff Reports

North Central's Cubs are patiently waiting for Saturday and a championship meeting with the winner of tonight's Western Blue Braves-Eastern Optimist battle in the 1986 Joe Mowles Memorial Little League Class A Tournament at Nortch Central Field.

North Central moved into the championship with a 2-0 record (not including a first-round bye) with a hard-fought 5-4 victory over Western Thursday night.

Cubs starter Allen Chase went the distance to gain the victory, allowing four hits and striking out six Western batters.

Michael Trevino also stayed on the mound for the duration and ended up suffering the loss, giving up nine hits while coming up with five strike outs.

At the plate, Western's Juan Ramos and North Central's Richie Greth collected home runs while Tim Melton added a double to the Cubs' attack.

IN LOSER'S bracket action, the Eastern Optimist ended the season for the Mid-City Angels with a 3-0 victory for a semifinal berth against Western.

Mario Rodriquez pitched a three-hit shutout at the Angels while the Optimist attack collected five hits against Mid-City pitcher Sean Eschberger, who suffered the loss.

Nino Almager and Smiley Carrasco collected homers to supply Eastern with all the runs it would need.

Tonight's game between Eastern and Western will be played at 6 p.m. with the winner advancing to Saturday's 9 a.m. championship game.

Eastern is taking a 3-1 record into tonight's game while Western is 1-1. Western won a first-round meeting between the two teams, 6-2.

Should North Central lose the title game, an if necessary game is scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday.

Buice stops Gators to give Angels 11-10 win

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After Beaumont had roughed up three pitchers with 13 hits and nine runs in seven-plus innings, Midland manager Joe Maddon finally had the Golden Gators right where he wanted them.

So with the bases loaded with Gators, nobody out in the eighth and the Angels leading 11-9, Maddon put the clamps on — signaling for reliever DeWayne Buice.

And Buice came on to do what the rest of the Midland staff could not — stop the Beaumont bats — as he milked a double play ball out of Bill Wrona and then struck out dangerous Shane Mack.

In the ninth the righthander worked out of a jam of his own to preserve the 11-10 Texas League victory for the Angels, their third straight.

Though Midland leaped to a 6-1 lead with a six-run explosion in the second inning, the Gators proved to be a fiesty bunch, rallying time and again against a struggling Angels' pitching staff.

"It came down to getting somebody who could get them out," Maddon said. "I tried to save Buice for the ninth so we can maximize his appearances, but at that point, we had no choice but to bring him in."

IT WAS the 10th save of the season in 29 appearances for Buice, his third in the recent homestand, pulling him within one of the league lead. It also left the Angels in sole possession of the lead in the second half race in the Western Division at 5-2.

"(Beaumont) is not big in strength, but they're a bunch of scrappers, they chipped at us all night," said Buice, who at 28 is in his 10th professional season. "I just threw that forkball so they wouldn't hit it out of the park. If they did, they were going to have to supply their own power — I wasn't going to give it to them."

The Angels had no power shortage on their end against a parade of Gator pitchers, including pitching coach Steve Luebber — a former major leaguer who was activated last week.

After Beaumont took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, the Angels put a six-spot on the board in the second. After singles by Dante Bichette and David Heath and a Gator error, Pete Coachman doubled home all three runners off Mark Poston, 5-5.

One out later, the Angels followed with four straight hits sending Poston to an early shower.

But the Gators got three back in the fourth as starter Don Timberlake struggled to hang on for the win. He did, finally coming out after 5⅓ innings to improve his record to 5-3.

"I really didn't have very good stuff tonight, I was just trying to fool 'em as long as I could because I knew we were going to score some runs tonight," said Timberlake. "Joe knew I wasn't throwing well so I wasn't surprised he took me out. It's nice to get a win when you don't really throw well."

EVEN WITH the big second inning, it didn't look like six runs would be enough — it wasn't. So in the fourth, Midland poured on four more runs, this time with the long ball.

Al Romero led off the inning with a solo homer, his second since arriving from Edmonton, but the big blow was struck by a struggling David Heath. Heath blasted a 3-0 pitch over the wall in left-center field to give Midland a seemingly safe 10-4 lead.

It was Heath's third homer, a disappointing total for the big catcher who hit .309 with 12 homers in Midland in 1985. Coming into the game, Heath was limping along at a .222 clip.

"It's been a long time coming," Heath said of the homer. "Right before the pitch, I stepped out of the box and was saying 'Maybe I should take this pitch,' because I can re-

Spud latest sports marketing rage

DALLAS (AP) — Since winning the NBA Slam-Dunk championship at Reunion Arena here Feb. 8, Spud Webb has been one hot potato.

He just signed a two-year contract, worth a reported $250,000, to promote a company's shoes and clothing.

For three days earlier this month, representatives of the Pony company took pictures of Webb in Dallas, to be used in a national advertising campaign for their newest line of sneaker, The Dunkmaster.

"This is a take, Spudbaby," Damian Bisch, president of a New York ad agency, told Webb during a recent photo session at the Wilmer-Hutchins High School gym where Webb once played.

Standing just 5-5½, Webb's famed dunking ability has made him among the latest rages in sports marketing.

There is a Spudball made by Baden — smaller than the standard-sized basketball.

IN THE next few months, it's likely Webb will be promoting Coca-Cola.

He has been approached by Walt Disney Studios, which wants to do a movie about his life.

A book about him is already in the making.

Moreover, Webb went to New York last week to film a segment on the Phil Donahue Show that will be shown July 7.

Webb, who last season played with the Atlanta Hawks for the NBA minimum salary of $70,000, likely will emerge as a millionaire.

"He is, like, the rage," said John O'Reilly, Pony's vice president of marketing. "We have Mary Lou Retton, too, but we've negotiated more time with Spud. The response has been phenomenal. He's the hottest thing going right now, absolutely."

THE LITTLE guy who used to hustle pool at Webb's Soul Market is climbing the endorsement ladder in high-heeled sneakers.

But, he said, "I'd rather just play and go home."

"I don't get into the ego thing. I haven't told a lot of people about the camps, or even the shows I've been on," Webb said.

"It's (his new-found celebrity) something. But I treat it like it's nothing."

Like it or not, Webb is appealing because he is small.

"I want them to say, 'He can play,'" said Webb. "I know because I'm small I'm doing all these things now. But I hope my size is just giving me a foot in the door. I hope that by playing in the NBA I showed people I could play."

Bo plays homer show before SRO crowds

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Frank White sidled up to Rudy Law at the batting cage and peered intently at the broad-shouldered young man inside.

"I'm late," said White, the Kansas City Royals' second baseman. "How many has he hit out today?"

"I've counted five," said Law, an outfielder.

"Where's he hitting them to today?"

"Everywhere."

The crowd swells — an assortment of scouts, players, team officials, reporters and interested hangers-on. They are here for "The Bo Show" — an increasingly popular event since the Royals signed Bo Jackson, the husky Heisman Trophy winner, to a baseball contract last weekend.

"Sure has a nice, smooth stroke, doesn't he?" says Hank Bauer, a New York Yankee star of the 1950s, and later a manager.

The first time he stepped into the batting cage on Saturday, the 220-pound Jackson mashed a ball over the wall in dead center-field that carried almost to the base of the 12-story electronic scoreboard. Near as anyone can remember, nobody ever hit one to that particular spot before.

Steel vs. lead settlement collapses

NWF refuses to drop suit banning lead shot

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A proposed out-of-court settlement of the lengthy lead shot-steel shot controversy has collapsed after an acrimonious meeting between the National Wildlife Federation and the National Park Service.

NWF executive vice president Jay Hair said Wednesday that his organization will not drop a suit calling for a ban on use of lead shot for all waterfowl hunting in the contiguous 48 states starting in the 1987-'88 season. The suit is scheduled to be argued Friday in U.S. District Court in Sacramento, Calif.

Scientists say spent lead shot annually kills as many as 2 million ducks that ingest it, and that the dead waterfowl in turn poison endangered bald eagles, which feed on them.

The Interior Department, which has been trying fitfully for nearly a decade to institute steel shot regulations, was said to have forged a compromise under which it would gradually phase out lead shot by 1991 and NWF would drop its suit.

But last Friday, when Hair met with William P. Horn, assistant interior secretary for fish, wildlife and parks, sparks reportedly flew and the agreement came apart.

"Had the federation agreed to this approach, a decade-long process to end lead-poisoning in waterfowl and bald eagles could have been concluded," Horn said in a statement yesterday. "Instead, for legal and procedural reasons that we do not fully comprehend, the federation has decided to throw away this opportunity."

HORN ANNOUNCED that Interior will proceed with the phaseout plan, and will publish the proposed rule in the Federal Register Friday.

NWF officials said Hair turned down the compromise because Horn refused to sign a consent decree to ensure that the promised action would be taken. "One of our stipulations was that it be judicially enforceable," said federation vice president Lynn Greenwalt.

Horn told Hair he couldn't sign a consent decree, citing a memo from Attorney General Edwin Meese III barring Reagan administration officials from entering into such decrees for fear they might hamstring future administrations.

Horn offered instead a "stipulated agreement," which the federation said lacks the same force. It "simply does not assure us that Interior will be irrevocably bound," Hair wrote to Horn the day after the meeting.

Sources said that at the settlement meeting, which ended abruptly when NWF officials didn't return from a cooling-off break, Hair told Horn he was "arrogant" to be "telling us to trust you one more time."

Apparently incensed, Horn fired off a letter to Hair expressing regret "that NWF prefers confrontation and legal disputation to consensus-building and agreement."

THE INTERIOR Department first took up the lead shot controversy almost a decade ago by phasing in steel-shot zones where the worst poisoning was occurring. But opposition from hunters and ammunition manufacturers sidetracked the program in some states.

In 1981, steel-shot rules suffered under Horn's predecessor, Ray Arnett, who opposed steel shot.

Last year NWF won a suit in the Sacramento court that required 22 counties in five states to either require steel shot or lose the right to open waterfowl hunting seasons.

Galveston Bay gets 100,000 striped bass

ANAHUAC (AP) — A first-ever cooperative effort between state and federal fishery agencies has resulted in the stocking of more than 100,000 striped bass fingerlings into Galveston Bay near the mouth of the Trinity River.

The fish were raised at the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's hatchery at Uvalde and transported by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department crews to the release site.

State biologists will monitor the program to determine survival of the 1½-inch long fish.

Shrimpers must report catches of sea turtles

AUSTIN (AP) — Shrimpers operating in federal waters from 15 to 200 nautical miles off the Texas coast are required to report any catches of sea turtles to the National Marine Fisheries Service.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said Wednesday the reports will be required until a ban on shrimping in federal waters nine to 15 miles out is lifted, probably July 9.

Calendar

July 1-31 — Applications for Aransas National Refuge deer hunts.
July 24 — Parks and Wildlife Commission meet, Austin.
Sept 5-21 — Alligator season in some Southeast Texas counties.
Oct 4-12 — Archery deer hunt at Aransas Refuge.
Nov 8-12 — Gun hunts at Aransas Refuge.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Saturday, June 28, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You can expect changes and challenges that will make your work more interesting. Your career soars to new heights. Top management takes a special interest in what you're trying to accomplish. An exciting business opportunity arises just before Christmas. Travel could lead to higher profits, rewarding romance.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: philosopher Jean Jacques Rousseau, Flemish painter Peter Paul Rubens, England's King Henry VIII, composer Richard Rodgers, writer-director-actor Mel Brooks, Gilda Radner, country music's Lester Flatt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are good at reading other people's thoughts today. A sympathetic approach could help you avoid a clash with a friend or relative. Keep the lines of communication open between parent and child.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Consider enrolling in summer or night school. Additional training qualifies you for a promotion or better job. Romance runs hot and cold this weekend. Try not to be so sensitive. Keep your cool.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Things are looking up. Family ties are strengthened by this weekend's events. Put your imagination to work when planning a birthday party or other celebration. Original ideas prove very popular. Consult mate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You should know by now that no one can control your life unless you let him/her. Declare your independence. Relying on your parents could be slowing you down. A shopping trip proves exciting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance is at the top of your priority list. Your affectionate nature makes you very popular. A restless mood could get you into trouble. Work at a hobby or go to a ball game.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stop worrying about every little mistake you make. You cannot be a winner until you see yourself in a positive light. Reserve the evening hours for romance. A long-cherished dream comes true.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gently coax a family member to face reality. Your kindness will be richly rewarded. Don't blame someone else for the failure of a romance. Take a closer look at your own behavior.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A fishing or hiking trip could provide just the change of pace you need. Have faith in yourself and you will be able to handle almost any challenge. Luck is on your side!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A family member or friend could suddenly re-enter your life. Straighten out a misunderstanding before a child gets hurt. You and romantic partner enjoy a new rapport. Do nothing to rock the boat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are sometimes too stubborn for your own good. A change in attitude will lead to new gains, possibly extra cash. Another success restores your self-confidence. Guard against communications mix-ups.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A sense of fair play helps you make the right decision this weekend. Keep spending down by making a list before going shopping. Curb a tendency to buy things on impulse.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Delegating certain responsibilities will lighten your load and make you easier to be around. A casual romance could quickly turn serious. Act immediately on a new financial opportunity; others are interested.

It is not only at tennis that young Scandinavians are making their mark. Lars Blakset of Denmark, a former junior champion, was selected as one of the 10 candidates for Royal Viking Line's "Player of the Year" competition.

"When you are defending against a squeeze," writes Blakset, "you usually have to attack declarer's communications; if that is impossible without sacrificing a key trick, you might have to rely on a deceptive discard early in the play. This hand is from the 1985 European Championship."

After a highly-artificial auction, North-South arrived at six diamonds. It might seem that a spade lead would beat that, but declarer can make the contract with careful play. Even with a club lead, West was exposed to a heart-club squeeze if declarer guessed the position, or he could play East for the 10-9 bare of hearts.

Declarer took the king of clubs and ran the ten of diamonds to East's ace. He won the spade return, cashed one high trump on which West discarded a heart, took the ace of clubs (had he cashed the queen as well, he would have gotten a count of the suit), then started running his diamonds. Blakset foresaw that, in the four-card ending, he could not guard both key suits, so his first two discards were both clubs. Then came the king of spades and, finally, a heart.

West's order of discards convinced declarer he had started with six clubs and four hearts, so on the last trump declarer let go dummy's club and kept three hearts. Thus he had to surrender a heart at the end for down one.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Love stories, adventures prompt popcorn munching

CHICAGO (AP) — When Americans settle down on the couch to watch a little sex and violence, they're often taking along popcorn, says an executive whose popcorn company is using the home video market to boost sales.

Richard Donofrio, an executive with American Pop Inc. of Chicago, said Thursday that 70 percent of the 618 million pounds of popcorn consumed in the United States each year is eaten at home and that popcorn goes hand-in-hand with video rentals.

"We tried to find out what movies people eat the most popcorn at," and learned that love stories and adventures do the trick, Donofrio said.

"When you have something that has a little more violence and more excitement, people consume more popcorn," he said, attributing the extra eating to "nervous reaction."

"'Rambo' is one of the movies that comes to mind," he said. "People that rented 'Rambo' bought more popcorn."

The company examined which videos people checked out when they also bought popcorn at video stores. "We found that love and a little sex, and movies that have a little more violence," sell the most popcorn, he said.

The company is expanding its sales of cooked and uncooked popcorn into neighborhood video stores, he said, with such sales accounting for between 5 percent and 10 percent of the 500,000 pounds the company sells each year.

"It all ties in," he said. "People are spending more time at home."

People who love eating popcorn in theaters often enjoy eating it while watching videos because "it gives them the perception of a movie theater," he said. "There are no commercials, and people don't take breaks. They're going to be watching television for two or three hours at a time, and they take America's No. 1 snack food with them."

The average American consumes 22 quarts of popcorn per year, he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Frank Sinatra says he's "never felt better" despite the recent removal of two growths from his colon, according to a spokeswoman who said she didn't know if they were malignant or benign.

Sinatra's surgery was recent, but he did not disclose where the procedure was done, publicist Susan Reynolds said Thursday. "He told us today that he's never felt better. That's all I can tell you, because that's all he told us."

Sinatra, 70, was expected to keep his summer concert appearances, including one July 3 on Governor's Island in New York Harbor for the opening ceremonies of the Statue of Liberty Centennial, Ms. Reynolds said.

President Reagan earlier this week had two small, benign polyps removed from his colon.

Ellerbee

NEW YORK (AP) — Linda Ellerbee, an NBC News correspondent for 11 years, said she turned down a contract offer and would make her last appearance on the network today.

"I'm leaving, and I don't know where I'm going," Ellerbee said Thursday.

Neither she nor the network offered details on their negotiations. Asked whether money or assignments were the issue, Ellerbee said, "Yes."

"I work best in something new, something that let's me stretch myself, and right now NBC doesn't offer me that opportunity," she said.

"We are sorry she is leaving us, and wish her the very best of luck," said Lawrence K. Grossman, president of NBC News.

Ellerbee said she will spend the next few weeks working on a screenplay from her best-selling book, "And So It Goes," and magazine assignments. She said she expects to make a decision on a new job within a month.

"I'm 41, I'm good at what I do, and I will work," she said.

Although her contract expired last week, she will do a final "TGIF" spot on "Today" — and said she would have done it for free.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers is recuperating at home after a hysterectomy and stomach tuck surgery, her publicist said.

Miss Rivers, 53, left Cedars-Sinai Medical Center late Wednesday, spokesman Richard Grant said Thursday. She will continue her recovery at home until she flies to London on July 20 to cover the royal wedding of Prince Andrew for ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Rickles

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Comedian Don Rickles, spouting insults and jokes to the lucky participants, served as best man for the marriage of four couples during taping of a television special.

About 1,000 people watched as Rickles played the part of best man Thursday for the couples, who he had never met before.

Gene Sheffrin, a publicist for the comedian, said the newlyweds were recruited a few days earlier by Rev. John Levendis of the Candlelight Chapel, who performed the actual weddings.

Sheffrin said the weddings, performed in the Sahara Hotel's main showroom, were part of a special called "Don Rickles on the Loose," scheduled to be aired on Showtime Aug. 23.

"They were all supposed to be married in the chapel, but all agreed to be married on television after being asked by the show's producer," he said.

The couples were Nick Talley and Sharyn Henderson of Farmington, Mo., Tonny Hoffman and Ellen Suit of Canyon Lake, Calif., Frank Trupiano Jr. of Detroit and Marcia Moslimani of Inkster, Mich., and Christian and Pamela Schaff of Poland, Conn.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Beach Boys plan to make an appearance at the Farm Aid II concert July 4, in addition to their previously scheduled performance on the USS Iowa in New York harbor that day, a spokeswoman says.

The group is scheduled to appear about 8:30 a.m. in the fund raising concert organized by singer Willie Nelson, publicist Karen Rappaport said Thursday.

Also Thursday, Dr. Red Duke, known nationally for his folksy television health reports from the University of Texas Health Center at Houston, said he had agreed to Nelson's request that he be medical director for the concert.

"Willie asked me through his daughter, Lana," said Duke, 57, a veteran of several Willie Nelson Fourth of July Picnics.

The first Farm Aid concert, last September in Champaign, Ill., raised about $9 million, Nelson said.

USFL-NFL at halftime of $1.69 billion antitrust suit

NEW YORK (AP) — USFL Commissioner Harry Usher was the first to make The Speech from the witness stand, although it has since been restated in various forms by Usher and two of his league's owners, Eddie Einhorn and Donald Trump.

At halftime of the war of the football leagues, The Speech states the USFL's basic position in its $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL.

"What happened," Usher testified on June 3, "was that once competition on players' salaries was really realized, the NFL went up to Harvard and got the strategy to interrupt the flow of our television money.

"It was a brilliant plan, a brilliant strategy. The net result is that we are dying. We have been pushed and shoved by the NFL into the situation. It is the NFL's business plan and choice. We are the little guy and they are the big guy and that's what this suit is all about."

When the USFL rested its case Wednesday, it rested on that note — notwithstanding the millions of owners like New York builder Trump, it portrayed itself as the poor kid seeking a small slice of the football pie. In the opinion of most of those present, counsel Harvey Myerson has done a good job of sewing suspicion, particularly in regard to NFL influence over the thre major TV networks.

Usher said he was "very satisfied" and even NFL officials, some of whom have sat through the entire case, acknowledged that the USFL has scored some points. In fact, there already is some talk among some NFL people about the league's chances on appeal, and sources on both sides acknowledge that early in the trial, Judge Peter Leisure twice urged NFL lawyers to settle.

"I don't think they've proven anything, but they've thrown out a lot of charges," said Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys. "When you throw that much mud up against the wall, some of it is bound to stick."

"I'd say we're about a touchdown and a safety behind," said Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns. "Now we've got the whole second half to catch up."

The USFL case starts with the study by Harvard Business School Professor Michael Porter at a seminar for 65 NFL club officials in February 1984. Titled "How to Conquer the USFL," it outlined a series of strategies to eventually drive the then-spring league out of business.

The USFL contends that is just what the NFL did. Commissioner Pete Rozelle and other NFL officials, they charge, followed the recommendations that they pressure the networks to deny the fledgling league a contract and force teams out of the major markets and into smaller ones.

The NFL's answer: "poppycock."

Rozelle testified that the moment he heard of the study he disowned it and ordered that it not be implemented. He and other NFL officials noted that it comprised two hours in two days of seminars on negotiating contracts.

Seven Midland ARCO athletes going to L.A.

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Seven young athletes that competed in the Tall City's ARCO Jesse Owens qualifying track meet have made another big step — all the way to the national finals in Los Angeles.

Bill Swearengin of Midland earned his berth in the 400 meters in the 13-14 age group with a time that was faster than the national winner last year, 54.09.

The national ARCO Jesse Owens meet will be held Aug. 8 at UCLA's Drake Stadium.

Others to qualify for the nationals from Midland were Chris Jeffrey, 11-12, with a high jump of 4-8; Robert Thorns, 11-12, with a softball throw of 208 feet; and Jason Davenport, 13-14, with a long jump of 14-2 in the boys divisions.

For the girls, Ursula Ison, 9-10, in the 50 meter dash with a 7.95; Stephanie Spencer, 11-12, in the 100 meters with a 13.12; Trina Amos, 13-14 in 100 meters at 13.37.

Other participants who finished well were Phillip Sims, 9-10, 2nd, 200 meters, 30.77; Eric Sullivan, 9-10, 3rd, long jump, 11-8; Scott Harrell, 9-10, 2nd, softball throw, 130-3; Mike Salinas, 13-14, 200 meters, 27.60; Randell Bowers, 13-14, 2nd, 100 meters, 12.15; Oscar Bueno, 13-14, 3rd, 1,500 meters, 4:42.45.

And for the girls, Sunny Howard, 9-10, 2nd, softball throw, 88-3; Lezlie Neill, 9-10, 3rd, 200 meters, 32.50; Marisol Teltez, 13-14, 3rd, softball throw, 193; Tiffany McWhorter, 13-14, 3rd, high jump, 4-4; and Kristy Harrison, 13-14, 400 meters, 3rd, 1:06.27.

Brenham places seven on 4A All-Tournament

AUSTIN (AP) — State Class 4A baseball champion Brenham placed seven players on the All-Tournament Team announced Wednesday by the University Scholastic League.

Brenham won the title Saturday by beating Mercedes 6-1.

Right fielder Carl Sullivan, who had five RBIs in Brenham's two tournament wins, and designated hitter Michael Watts, who had two hits, were unanimous choices.

Brenham's David Crowson was selected at two positions — pitcher and third base. He was the winning pitcher in the title game and had six hits in eight at-bats in the tournament.

Here is the 4A all-tournament team, as selected by sportswriters:
Pitcher (tie) — Joe Peters and David Crowson, Brenham
Catcher — Matt Fisher, Brenham
First Base — Todd Arrington, Austin Westlake
Second Base — Michael Thane, Brenham
Third Base — David Crowson, Brenham
Shortstop — Arnold Ramirez, Mercedes
Left Field — Larry Morales, Mercedes
Right Field — Carl Sullivan, Brenham
Center Field — Chris Graves, Brenham
Designated Hitter — Michael Watts, Brenham

A's haven't had good stand against Kansas City

Associated Press

A mouse that cost Dave Kingman $3,502. A baserunning blunder that cost Jackie Moore a job.

All things considered, this was one of the more eventful four-game series in Oakland baseball history. It seemed almost fitting for the A's to cap their zany trip to mid-America Thursday night by taking it on the chin, 9-2, as the Kansas City Royals thoroughly spoiled Jeff Newman's managerial debut.

With Jorge Orta hitting an inside-the-park home run, the Royals scored four runs in the first inning and four more in the second.

Newman, converted from bullpen coach to interim manager when Moore was fired Thursday morning, had hoped for something better.

"It wasn't the way I wanted it to be. I'll say that," said the former A's catcher. "We had opportunities. We hit the ball hard. Those things fall in, it could have been a different story."

In the only major-league games Thursday, Detroit beat Baltimore 8-3 and Texas downed Seattle 10-3.

Moore's dismissal was anything but unexpected. Oakland's lone victory Tuesday night in this eight-game road trip had snapped a team-record 15-game road losing streak. A gut-wrenching 5-4 loss Wednesday night, featuring Ricky Peters' baserunning mistake in the ninth inning, plunged their record to 29-44.

Kingman's practical joke during Monday night's game, in which he had "a $2 rat" delivered to a female sportswriter, backfired in his face.

The moody slugger was fined $3,500 and told he would be fired if it ever happened again. Moreover, the incident seemed to indicate that morale and discipline among the boys from the East Bay had sunk to a new low, and probably did nothing to strengthen Moore's tenuous hold on his job.

But with Newman at the controls and Moore flying home to Arlington, Texas, Thursday night, the A's went back to business as usual. They loaded the bases in the first and fifth but failed to score.

"Did I experience anything I didn't expect to?" said Newman. "Yes. I really didn't expect them to score eight runs in the first two innings."

Pitcher Rick Langford, one of Newman's closest friends, was the victim of the shelling and dropped to 1-8.

"He and I played together many years," said Newman, who maintains he is not a candidate for Moore's permanent replacement. "And he wanted to do well for my first day. He probably pressed a little."

"I wasn't looking for miracles tonight," Newman said. "But the same things happened to us tonight that have been happening the past four weeks, or whatever. I thought we showed a little composure settling down after the first two innings."

Moore's firing caused a change of plans for Royals' Manager Dick Howser, who will manage the American League in next month's All-Star game.

"He was a friend. I hate to see it. I had selected him as a coach for the All-Star Game," Howser said. "Now he can't do it. I don't know what I'm going to do. But he's been a credit to baseball. He'll wind up back on hs feet."

Howser said he told Moore how he handled getting fired by New York Yankees owner George Steinbenner after winning 103 games in 1980.

American League

"He needs to get away from it for a while. I talked to him this afternoon and told him to just relax for a while and don't even look at the scores in the papers," Howser said.

"Every manager knows there's a guillotine out there with his name on it. You keep evading it, and you try to keep going. But you know it's out there and you know some day it's going to get you.

Charlie Leibrandt, 8-5, picked up the victory, while Rudy Law had two hits and drove in three runs and Willie Wilson had three singles.

Rangers 10, Mariners 3

Larry Parrish and Steve Buechele each hit two-run homers during a six-run first inning as Texas broke a three-game losing streak by beating Seattle.

The Rangers rapped eight straight hits in the first inning and finished with 17 for the game.

Tom Paciorek had four hits and Scott Fletcher had three, while Oddibe McDowell also homered.

Charlie Hough, 7-3, gave up three runs on five hits in seven innings. Hough won for the first time in Seattle since Sept. 30, 1981, ending his streak of three straight losses at the Kingdome.

Bob Kearney hit a three-run homer for the Mariners.

Tigers 8, Orioles 3

Lance Parrish hit a pair of two-run homers and Walt Terrell gave up five hits over 8 2-3 innings as Detroit beat Baltimore for the sixth time in seven games this season.

Parrish connected in the first inning after a single by Alan Trammell, who went 4-for-4, and added another homer, his 17th home run of the season, in the fifth.

Terrell, 7-5, left the game after walking John Shelby with the bases loaded and two outs in the ninth. Willie Hernandez got the final out for his 14th save.

Mike Flanagan, 1-5, who gave up both of Parrish's homers, took the loss at Tiger Stadium.

Irwin ends slump with Canadian Open lead

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Without question, it has been the worst slump of Hale Irwin's 19-year PGA Tour career.

"It has been a long dry spell. It has not been a lot of fun," said Irwin, who once went almost four seasons without missing a cut but this year has missed seven times in 15 starts.

"It was time for me to relax and play the kind of golf I'm capable of," Irwin said.

And that's what the 41-year-old veteran did on Thursday. He relaxed, had a little fun and walked off the Glen Abbey Golf Club course with a solid, 4-under-par 68 and the first-round lead in the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I haven't been playing that badly, I really haven't," said Irwin, who counts two U.S. Open titles among his 17 career victories.

"It was just a little thing here, a little thing there, and I've turned a 68 into a 72 or 73 and all of a sudden I'm struggling.

"It's been a matter of concentration and the level of intensity," he said. "I haven't been playing all that poorly, but the results have been terrible."

Irwin, one of golf's most respected performers, missed only two fairways and three greens on a sunny, breezy day in the Toronto suburbs.

"I did everything very well. It wasn't perfect, but compared with what I've been posting, I played very well."

Massey holds one-shot lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Debbie Massey is giving her repaired driver an "A" as she shoots for her first LPGA victory since 1979.

"I've got a bionic joint right now," Massey said after carding a 5-under-par 67 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of $350,000 LPGA Mayflower Classic golf tournament.

The driver broke as Massey, holding a one-stroke lead in her last tournament, teed off on the final hole.

"The epoxy (glue) gave way in the heat and the grip turned about 90 degrees," she said. "My shot went dead right in the trees. I ended up making bogey on the hole and losing in a playoff."

"I went home. I fixed my driver and I just hit it great today. It was so much fun," Massey said. "I was home for a week (at Hilton Head, S.C.), put a new shaft in it and got used to it.

"It's pretty much the way it was. But it was a pretty disheartening note (when it broke)," Massey said.

"I had had it reshafted at the beginning of the year and the fellow who reshafted it just put an inferior epoxy in it, which can happen. It's a graphite-over-steel shaft and it has to be roughed up a lot before the epoxy is put on it. And the job just wasn't done."

Local favorite needs super race to beat Mr. Victory Devil

From Staff Reports

RUIDOSO, N.M. — A longtime favorite of local fans, Dashing Phoebe will need a super race to overcome favorite Mr. Victory Devil in Sunday's $640,000 Rainbow Derby at Ruidoso Downs.

Mr. Victory Devil led all qualifiers in the Rainbow Derby trials with a four-length victory in its 440-yard heat for the Derby. It covered the quarter-mile distance in 21.255 seconds. Jacky Martin rode the winner for trainer Jack Dube and the Circle M Ranch of Manor, Texas.

Dashing Phoebe, the winner of the Kansas Derby May 31, will have to improve on her slow start in the trials June 12. Despite falling behind on the break, Dashing Phoebe came back to post a 2¾ length victory and the fifth fastest qualifying time, 21.515.

Ruidoso

Phoebe is ridden by Jerry Nicodemus, trained by Charles Cascio and owned by San Jose Cattle, Co., of Pleasanton, Texas.

Another strong challenger for the Rainbow Derby crown is California bred Raise A Secret, a $663,000 lifetime winner. Raise A Secret was the winner of last year's Los Alamitos Futurity and the Dash for Cash Futurity. It's qualifying time was 21.490.

Jockey Ralph Pauline will ride Raise A Secret for trainer Bruce Hawkinson and owner Dr. Edward Allred of Long Beach, Calif.

MONEY

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against all other major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion also drifted lower.

The dollar's losses were modest for the most part. Currency traders described the market as thin and trendless.

They said rumors that central banks have been buying dollars during the week to support the dollar added to a general reluctance to trade. There has been no confirmation of dollar-supporting purchases by the central banks.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

—2.213 West German marks, down from 2.2195

—1.8178 Swiss francs, down from 1.8185

—7.065 French francs, down from 7.0695

—2.4943 Dutch guilders, down from 2.5005

—1,521.50 Italian lire, down from 1,524.50

—1.39075 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3925

The British pound rose to $1.521 from $1.517.

The dollar sank for a fourth straight day in Tokyo, closing at 165.85 Japanese yen, down from 166.10 yen. Later, in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 165.75 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $343.55 a troy ounce, down from $344.50 late Thursday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $343.75, down from $345.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $343.26, down from $343.71.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.02 an ounce, down from $5.07 late Thursday.

Federal bank regulators reviewing Interfirst loan

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Federal bank regulators have begun an examination to determine whether a loan made by the Interfirst Corp., the troubled Texas bank holding company, to one of its directors may have violated banking laws, a regulatory source said Thursday.

There is no indication that the $80 million loan, to Edwin L. Cox Jr., a wealthy Texas rancher and director of Interfirst's lead bank in Dallas, was improper, the source, who asked not to be named, said.

But according to the source, officials from the three principal bank regulatory agencies — the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Federal Reserve — met in Washington Thursday specifically to begin reviewing whether the loan to Cox fulfilled federal law regarding the extension of credit to directors.

Those rules essentially say that a director may not receive preferential treatment, and that loans exceeding $500,000 must be approved by a majority of a bank's board, with the director borrowing the money abstaining from the vote. The rules reflect a belief by regulators that many bank failures, particularly those involving small and midsized banks, can be traced to improper lending between a bank and its directors or officers.

Cox maintained Thursday that he continued to pay the interest due on his loan from Interfirst. "They have asked for additional collateral, and I have agreed to provide it," he said. "The interest has been and will be paid. We do not see a problem resolving this issue."

Interfirst said Wednesday that it expected to report a loss of between $260 million and $285 million in the second quarter, partly because the loan it had made to Cox did not have enough collateral backing it. The regulatory source indicated that a full-blown investigation into Interfirst's dealings with Cox would likely be undertaken soon.

"That would be reasonable to surmise, given the trouble down there," he said. He was referring to the deepening problems that Interfirst, the third-largest bank holding company in Texas, was experiencing with its energy loans because of the collapse of oil prices. In the current quarter alone, Interfirst is expected to increase its loan-loss reserve by at least $340 million.

On the New York Stock Exchange, Interfirst dropped ⅞, to 7⅜. And, in another blow to the company, the Standard & Poor's Corp. said Thursday that it had lowered the rating on $525 million of Interfirst debt because of worsening asset quality problems.

S&P downgraded Interfirst's senior debt to BB from BBB, subordinated debt to B-plus from BBB-minus and commercial paper to B from A-3. Moody's Investors Service Inc. also lowered its rating on Interfirst debt.

Cox is the son of Edwin L. Cox Sr., one of the wealthiest oilmen in America.

The younger Cox is best known as a cattleman and real estate owner. From his 25,000-acre ranch in Athens, Texas, about 90 miles southeast of Dallas, he presides over a collection of businesses that this year should gross more than $4.5 billion, according to reports that have appeared in the Texas press.

Cox conducts his business through Valley View Holdings, a Dallas-based parent for all of the Cox companies. They include Friona Industries, a Friona, Texas, feedlot; Village Meats Inc., a supplier of boxed beef to, among others, the Wendy's fast-food chain; the Swift Independent Corp., the Chicago-based beef packer, and Val-agri Inc., a beef processor based in Garden City, Kan.

Business sources in Texas said Cox had shown an ability to earn high returns in low-margin businesses by, for example, modernizing beef-processing plants and by extracting added revenue from his cattle.

InterFirst bond rating cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Standard & Poors Corp. bumped four of InterFirst Corp.'s debt ratings down a notch Thursday, one day after the bank holding company said it expects to lose at least $260 million in the second quarter.

The downgrades reflect worsening asset-quality problems, operating losses and the resulting increase in funding pressure, S&P officials said.

InterFirst's senior debt was lowered to BB from BBB; its subordinated debt to B-plus from BBB-minus; its commercial paper to B from A-3; and the debt of InterFirst Texas Finance N.V. to BB from BBB.

About $525 million in debt is affected, S&P officials said.

InterFirst Chairman Robert H. Stewart III said Wednesday the projected second-quarter loss stems from a plan to increase reserves for loan losses, which it blamed on low oil and gas prices, a weak real estate market and the depressed economy of Texas and the Southwest.

Despite the reserves-increase plan, however, "future loan charge-offs will erode the firm's already weak capital position," S&P officials said in a statement.

"Further, these events may result in additional funding pressure on the firm's principal banking subsidiary, InterFirst Bank Dallas," S&P said.

Midland oilmen may be after pipeline firm

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Shares in the Panhandle Eastern Corp. rose sharply on Thursday amid rumors that Wagner & Brown, independent Texas oil operators and close associates of T. Boone Pickens, might attempt to take over the big natural gas pipeline company.

Panhandle owns the Anadarko Petroleum Corp., which holds a major stake in the rich Hugoton gas field of southwestern Kansas. The Hugoton field, which extends into Texas and Oklahoma, is the biggest natural gas field in the country, with reserves of some 10 trillion cubic feet.

A substantial interest in the field is also owned by the Mesa Limited Partnership, headed by Pickens. The Pioneer Corp., which Mesa has just acquired, has gas production in part of the Hugoton reservoir.

Wall Street arbitragers, heavy buyers of Panhandle stock in recent days, said they had heard that Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., which has worked closely with Wagner & Brown in previous takeover deals, had relinquished its position on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange as specialist in Panhandle stock options.

Arbitragers said they also understood that Drexel had placed Panhandle on its restricted list, thus prohibiting its traders from dealing in the stock. The moves are almost routine signs that an investment house is clearing the decks for a major event.

On the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday, Panhandle's stock jumped $3.125 a share, to $44.25, on a volume of 1.7 million shares. The day before Panhandle rose $1.375.

In Amarillo, Texas, Pickens declined comment on the rumor but sources close to the situation said that the Texas oilman was "not involved" in anything dealing with Panhandle.

In Midland, Texas, neither Cyril Wagner nor Jack E. Brown could be reached for comment.

The Dallas Times Herald is to be purchased by a company headed by William Dean Singleton for $110 million in cash and notes, the Times Mirror Co. announced Thursday.

Times Herald sale won't alter newspaper war

DALLAS (AP) — The Times Mirror Co. has pulled out of one of the nation's hottest newspaper wars by selling the Dallas Times Herald, leaving its successor to carry on what has turned into an uphill battle.

Media News Group, a Woodbury, N.J., firm headed by a Texan who once was rejected for a job at the Times Herald, said Thursday it would pay $110 million for Dallas' No. 2 newspaper.

Analysts agree the sale will be a good move for Los Angeles-based Times Mirror. But how the sale will affect the battle with the Dallas Morning News remains to be seen.

"It could be he's content to be a strong number two," New York media analyst Jeffrey Russell said. "I would think it's probably positive for A.H. Belo Corp.," owners of the Morning News.

For his part, however, Media News Group president William Dean Singleton, 34, says he plans to focus more on local news but not on making any radical changes.

"I don't see a lot of staff reductions. I see the paper being more and more a local newspaper, covering the primary market around it," he said. "In order to serve the community, you have to make a substantial amount of profits to plow back into the product."

After Times Mirror bought the perenially second-place Times Herald in 1970 for $48.5 million, the paper threw a healthy scare into a somnolent Morning News with aggressive reporting, a redesign and a circulation spurt, said Peter Elkind, an associate editor of Texas Monthly magazine and former Times Herald staffer who writes about Dallas media.

As the Herald edged ahead in a market its rival had dominated for nearly a century, the Morning News beefed up its staff and poured money into its news operation. That sparked a war for readership that gave Dallas its choice of some of the nation's best newspapers, analysts say.

Banks call Hunt suit desperate act

New York Times News Service

The $1.2 billion lawsuit filed by members of the Hunt family of Dallas against 23 major banks is regarded by many banking analysts as an effort by the Hunts to stymie the banks' attempts to collect on mounting overdue loans.

"It seems to be a fairly desperate act by the Hunts to frustrate a normal banking response to a troubled debtor," said James J. McDermott, a banking analyst with Keefe, Bruyette & Woods Inc. "It's a legal attempt to complicate an already complicated situation."

The three sons of the late H.L. Hunt — Nelson Bunker, William Herbert and Lamar, — along with three of their sons, related companies and family trusts, filed the lawsuit on Tuesday in United States District Court in Dallas.

The suit charged the banks with joining forces "to dismantle and ultimately destroy" the Placid Oil Co. and the Penrod Drilling Co.

Several banks, among them the Bankers Trust Co., Mellon Bank, Bank of America, National Westminster Bank and Interfirst Bank declined comment on the suit Wednesday. A spokesman for Chemical Bank, another defendant, said the charges by the Hunts were "totally without merit."

Jack Johnson, general council for the Republicbank Corp., the agent and co-manager of the Placid loan agreement, released this statement Wednesday, "Republic is confident that its actions with respect to the Hunts have been both reasonable and lawful, and we expect to be fully vindicated in court."

OPEC meeting will have major impact on Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — OPEC's success or failure in reversing the oil-price slump will have a major impact on non-OPEC Egypt and could determine whether this pro-Western country weathers its growing economic crisis.

Oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are meeting this week in Brioni, Yugoslavia, in an effort to find ways of reversing the decline, which has driven down prices to about half their levels of last November.

Already, the price slump has severely strained the economy of this strategic country, burdened with overpopulation, widespread poverty, diminished sources of hard currency revenues and $32 billion in foreign debts.

The price decline has all but forced Egypt out of the petroleum export business, which last year earned more than $2 billion and served as the country's second major source of foreign currency.

Officially, Egypt's production has been cut from 870,000 barrels a day to about 650,000 barrels a day, with domestic consumption eating up about two-thirds of that.

If the trend toward cheaper oil cannot be reversed, government economists predict that Egypt will lose $1.2 billion in the fiscal year beginning next Tuesday.

State's projected deficit revised up to $2.3 billion

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Gov. Mark White declined to speculate Thursday on the need for a special legislative session in wake of news the state's budget will reach $2.3 billion within 14 months.

Tony Proffit, director of tax information in Comptroller Bob Bullock's office, confirmed Thursday the comptroller's office now believes the state's projected deficit will be $2.3 billion instead of the $1.3 billion estimated in February.

Bullock will make the bad news official Friday at a meeting of the Legislative Budget Board.

Asked Thursday about the possibility of a special session, White, replied, "Well, I'm not inclined to respond to that until I hear from the comptroller."

"That's (special session) always a potential, obviously but there's been nothing other than what he's put out officially of $1.3 billion," he said. "Let's wait until he says that and then we'll take appropriate action. But until then, the official comment has been $1.3 billion."

Proffit said, however, Bullock has been saying in speeches around the state for weeks that the deficit would probably top $2 billion.

"I think Bullock has expressed himself to the governor," he said. "I don't know if the governor has ever asked the comptroller to come in and give the governor a financial briefing, but I'm certain the governor's office is aware (of the higher deficit)."

Chief Deputy Comptroller Jack Roberts said the shorfall in revenue for the current two-year budget period is growing due to Texas' deepening recession, which is linked to depressed oil prices.

Hand-dug well contributes to education

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

While a Brownwood man is busy mining oil in Comanche County, another oilman in Newcastle, Wyo., has turned his hand-dug oilwell into both a tourist attraction and an educational tool.

Al Smith, a long-time driller, dug the well in much the same manner as Col. Edwin Drake dug the first oilwell in Pennsylvania 100 years ago. In a telephone interview, Smith said he dug the well because, "I was curious about why oil was so elusive in sandstone." The well was dug to a total depth of 24 ft., and while it produces oil, it has never produced oil in commercial quantities.

"The well shows that oil does not form in pools beneath the ground, but is contained in the pores of hard rocks," Smith said.

The well, located on a federal lease, was certified the first successful well of its kind by the Bureau of Land Management, according to Smith. The story of the well was told around the world, and got so much publicity that Smith decided to dig a viewing well, a 16 ft. by 50 ft. well that is also 24 ft. deep, that people can go in and actually see the well oozing oil. Like the original well, it also produces oil, but not in commercial quantities. The oil produced is a lubricating type of oil, and is rare type of crude where a person can be present in the well because there's none of the gases usually produced along with hydrocarbons.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Existing home sales fell 3.4 percent in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes declined 3.4 percent in May, the National Association of Realtors reports, but economists for the trade group said they do not expect an extended drop.

The association said Wednesday that existing homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.45 million units last month, down from the 3.57 million rate in April.

Nevertheless, the rate was 13.5 percent higher than the 3.04 million rate recorded during May 1985.

Federal deficit soars to $39.4 billion in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit soared to $39.4 billion in May, leaving the imbalance for the first eight months of the fiscal year 3.2 percent above the previous year's record-shattering pace, the Treasury Department reports.

Government spending last month exceeded receipts by the largest amount since a record $42 billion monthly deficit in May 1985, the Treasury said Wednesday.

The latest flood of red ink left the government's budget deficit for the first eight months of the fiscal year at $165.8 billion.

Survey forecasts increase in cost of living

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers can expect a 3.5 percent rise in the cost of living next year, but prices should remain fairly steady for food, clothing and other necessities, Standard & Poor's Corp. predicts.

A survey released Wednesday by the business-information company said food, clothing, oil and natural gas would provide the best values through 1987.

It predicted that retail food and beer prices would rise by about 2 percent in the second half of 1986, while soft drink prices should remain stable.

FHA resumes taking mortgage applications

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Housing Authority has resumed processing applications for government-insured home mortgages after President Reagan signed legislation ending the agency's three-week shutdown.

FHA's acting head, Silvio DeBartolomeis, notified the agency's field offices and major lenders on Wednesday to resume processing applications, which had been pouring in at a rate of 10,000 a day during the hottest real estate market of the decade.

FHA's statutory authority lapsed at midnight June 5 and its $74.4 billion credit ceiling was depleted last week. The bill Reagan signed extends FHA's statutory authority to Sept. 30 and raises the agency's credit ceiling to $83.9 billion.

Fruehauf Corp. goes private to avoid buyout

DETROIT (AP) — Fruehauf Corp. would be taken private and escape a hostile acquisition bid under a $1.8 billion proposal unveiled by the company's managers and the investment firm Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc.

The Fruehauf-Merrill Lynch venture launched on Wednesday offers $48.50 a share in cash for 78 percent of Fruehauf's common stock, topping by

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Lea producer flows 238 barrels

From Staff Reports

MARSHALL & WINSTON, INC. added another strong Bone Spring producer in the Querecho Plains field of Lea County with completion of the No. 2 Querecho Federal.

On potential test, the well flowed 238 barrels of crude, 184 Mcfd and 23 barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 95 psi. Production is from perforations 8,459 to 8,526 ft.

Drilled to a total depth of 9,100 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,661 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,703 ft. Pay was topped at 8,459 ft.

Location is 760 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from west lines of Section 23, T18s, R32e.

Glasscock discovery flows 68 barrels oil

TEXACO, INC., Midland, completed a Strawn discovery in the Saint Lawrence field of Glasscock County with completion of the No. 1 Glasscock "X" fee.

Texaco tested the well to flow 68 barrels of 43 gravity crude and 519 Mcfd on a 30/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 170 psi. Production is from perforations 9,878 to 9,894 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 7,645:1.

Permitted as a 10,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 10,000 ft. and was plugged back to 9,980 ft. with seven inch casing set at 7,850 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 1,800 ft., Wolfcamp at 7,750, and the Strawn at 9,800 ft. on ground elevation of 2,672 ft. Pay was topped at 9,878 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 810 ft. from east lines of Section 1, Block 35, T-5-S, T&P survey, three miles north of Saint Lawrence.

Texaco completes well in Fort Stockton field

TEXACO, INC. reports another producer in the Fort Stockton field which has yielded several prolific wells for the company in the recent past.

The No. 2603 Fort Stockton South Unit was potetnialed to pump 94 barrels of 30.1 gravity crude, 112 Mcfd and 242 barrels of water from perforations 2,814 to 3,071 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,550 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 39,700 gallons of gel, 51,600 lbs. 20/40 sand, and 13,200 lbs. 12/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 1,191:1.

Drilled to 3,140 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,130 ft.

The well topped the Yates formation at 2,814 ft. on ground elevation of 2,910 ft. Pay was topped at 2,814 ft.

Location is 5,270 ft. from north and 5,354 ft. from east lines of Section 10, Block 146, T&STL survey, four miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

Upton field gains 90 barrel extension

BTA OIL PRODUCERS, Midland, added a second Joins producer and a southwest extension to the McCamey West field of Upton County with completion of the No. 2 Lyle "B".

The well was potentialed to flow 90 barrels of 49 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water from open hole 7,818 to 7,824 ft. The interval was acidized with 450 gallons of acid.

Total depth was 7,824 ft., with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,818 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,726 ft., include the Yates at 1,475 ft., San Andres at 2,256, Pennsylvanian Detrital at 6,008, Devonian at 6,318, Fusselman at 6,715, and the Joins at 7,781 ft.

Location is 2,073 ft. from south and 517 ft. from west lines of Section 18, Block 3, MK&T survey, four miles north of McCamey.

Chaves plugback nets Wolfcamp discovery

A plugback operation has yielded a Wolfcamp discovery in Chaves County for STEVENS OPERATING CORP.

The No. 1 O'Brien "EA" was reentered and potentialed to pump 10 barrels of crude, 19 Mcfd and 59 barrel of water from perforations 6,324 to 6,336 ft.

Originally completed as a Fusselman discovery, the well was plugged back to 6,430 ft. from an original depth of 8,060 ft. Stevens set 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,075 ft.

On ground elevation of 4,035 ft., formation tops include Anhydrite at 922 ft., San Andres at 2,148, Glorieta at 3,030, Tubb at 4,842, Abo at 5,567, Wolfcamp at 6,354, Mississippian at 7,405, and the Devonian at 7,817 ft.

Location is 2,140 ft. from north and 1,960 ft. from west lines of Section 33, T7s, R29e.

Montoya strike tested in Roosevelt County

MARSHALL PIPE & SUPPLY CO. has completed a Montoya discovery in Roosevelt County, several miles away from production in the county.

The No. 1 Wendell Best was completed to flow 2.7 barrels of 47.7 gravity crude, 2.8 Mmcfd and 2.7 barrels of water on various chokes with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,893 psi. Production is from perforations 7,006 to 7,042 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of 10 percent MCA.

Permitted as a 7,260 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 7,155 ft. and plugged back to 7,090 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,153 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,363 ft., include the Yates at 1,057 ft., San Andres at 2,005, Glorieta at 3,244, Tubb at 4,645, Drinkard at 5,204, Abo at 5,204, Wolfcamp at 6,440, Montoya at 6,969, and the Granite at 7,069 ft. Pay was topped at 7,006 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from east lines of Section 27, T2s, R29e.

Snyder buying Energy Oil stock

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Snyder Oil Partners (SOI) announced that it had acquired 739,210 shares of common stock of Energy Oil, Inc., a Colorado-based independent oil company. The stock, which represents approximately 34 percent of Energy Oil's outstanding shares, is being acquired from the president and one of the directors of Energy Oil. SOI is acquiring the stock for $4.4 million or approximately $5.90 per Energy Oil share. The purchase price is being paid half in cash and half in SOI units.

In connection with the purchase, the president and the executive vice president of Energy Oil, as well as the director involved in the sale have resigned from their positions with the company. John C. Snyder, Thomas J. Edelman and Rodney L. Waller, as representatives of SOI, have been elected directors of Energy Oil. Edelman has been appointed president of the company.

It is intended that the new management of Energy Oil will seek to renegotiate the company's indebtedness or convert it into equity. Thereafter, an attempt will be made to negotiate a purchase agreement providing for the acquisition of Energy Oil's assets by Snyder Oil Partners and the liquidation of Energy Oil. Should SOI be successful in converting all of Energy Oil's indebtedness into equity, the acquisition would have a total value of approximately $40 million. It is expected that the transaction will bbe structured such that upon liquidation the shareholders of Energy Oil will receive units of SOI in an exchange ratio no less favorable than that accorded the selling stockholders. The eventual acquisition of Energy Oil's assets by SOI is subject to a number of conditions including the success of negotiations with Energy Oil's creditors, various filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission being declared effective and approval of the transaction by Energy Oil stockholders. Consequently, there can be no assurance that the acquisition of the remainder of Energy Oil will be consummated.

Should SOI acquire all of Energy Oil's assets for units, the partnership's assets would increase by more than 50 percent. Energy Oil currently has interests in over 250 producing wells located primarily in the Denver-Julesberg Basin of Colorado and owns a related gas gathering system. Based on preliminary estimates ppepared in connection with the stock purchase, Energy Oil had proved reserves of approximately 8.3 million barrels of oil equivalents as of June 30, 1986.

KCC modifies infill drilling order

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — In response to a rehearing last month on the issue of infill drilling, the Kansas Corporation Commission made modest changes in its order allowing the controversial procedure to begin in the Hugoton natural gas field.

In an administrative meeting, the commission rejected a challenge to its own jurisdiction to authorize infill drilling on a field-wide basis, and dealt with several specific questions, such as requirements for the specific location of each well.

Since 1944, the KCC had allowed only one natural gas well to be drilled on each 640-acre section, or "proration unit," of the vast Hugoton Field of southwest Kansas. There are 4,165 wells in the field.

In March, the commission issued its order permitting a four-year phase-in of infill drilling — the sinking of a second well within each unit. Supporters of the procedure contend it will drain the gas field more efficiently, pulling gas from pockets that otherwise might not be tapped by existing wells.

Opponents argued infill wells are not needed at present and would raise the price of Hugoton Field gas under federal price controls. The average price of gas from the field is estimated to be about 70 cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf). Gas from new wells could qualify for a federally approved maximum price of $3 per mcf. However, recent gas contracts negotiated in Kansas have been in the range of $1.90 to $2 per mcf.

Chairman Michael Lennen noted the decision is to be considered tentative pending the drafting and signing of a final order. Lennen said a draft order would be circulated for comment by the companies participating in the case.

Parties wishing to challenge the final order may do so by filing suit in district court

Commissioners eliminated a requirement that the infill well be placed in the northwest quarter of each proration unit.

Under the assumption that the original wells were at the center of each section, the original commission order placed the new well about halfway between the old well and the northwest boundary. The modified order eliminates that restriction on direction from the original well and makes other minor changes to make the order easier to administer.

The panel also placed a limit on the amount of gas that can be drawn from infill wells during the phase-in period to protect the rights of royalty owners in adjoining sections and to limit the amount of gas that would be subject to higher prices under federal regulations.

Infill drilling is to be permitted in 25 percent of the proration units in the first year, beginning Jan. 1, 1987. Drilling will be allowed in 50 percent of the units in the second year, 75 percent the third year and 100 percent the fourth year.

Lawsuit filed against Oxoco

HOUSTON SWN) Oxoco Inc. announced that it had been served in a lawsuit filed in the District Court of Dallas County, brought by InterFirst Venture Capital Corp. for alleged failure by the company to pay interest and accelerated principal on $2,500,000 in 13 percent convertible subordinated notes. The lawsuit, seeks immediate payment of the unpaid principal and accrued interest on each of the notes, along with reasonable attorneys' fees and costs.

The company has been, and is currently, in active negotiations with representatives of holders of its senior subordinated debt to formulate a new exchange offer for a successful restructuring of the company's debt. The company has previously announced that unless it is able to restructure its subordinated debt, it will be compelled to liquidate or reorganize under the protection of the Federal bankruptcy laws. Although such circumstances continue to exist, the company is encouraged by renewed efforts toward developing a satisfactory plan to restructure its debt.

AT&T strike settled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of AT&T's largest union return to work today with job security guarantees they consider vital in an industry in which American workers are being replaced by automation and overseas labor.

The 155,000 long-distance operators, installers, sales personnel and equipment plant workers also got an 8 percent pay raise, spread over three years.

Rozanne Weissman, public affairs director for the Communications Workers of America, called the tentative pact "a major breakthrough in the telecommunications industry" because of the employment security package and other gains.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. spokesman Herb Linnen said the agreements will "give us flexibility in structuring and paying certain job categories so we will be better able to keep our costs — and prices — in line with our competition."

The package will be sent to workers for a secret ratification vote, which is expected to be completed Aug. 4, but workers were told to report for work at the start of the midnight shift today.

In Chicago, Mattie Harris, an AT&T group manager, said some employees had returned to work and more were expected for the early morning shift.

"Some of our people came at midnight when, as I understand it, the strike ended," said Mattie Harris. "Not that many were scheduled to work. We expect the bulk of them to be back beginning with the 5:30 a.m. shift."

Mrs. Harris declined to give the number of workers or provide any further details.

Negotiators for the union and AT&T reached a tentative agreement on a national wage and employment security package on June 17. However, the strike, which began June 1, ended Thursday, when bargainers for workers at the unit hardest hit by layoffs last year agreed on work rules, including work schedules and sales quota requirements.

Members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which accepted an earlier contract offer from AT&T and never struck, will receive the same benefits won by the strikers under what CWA president Morton Bahr called a "me too" agreement with AT&T.

The employment security section in the tentative contract is considered by both sides to be one of the most innovative programs in the country and the best in the fast-changing telecommunications industry.

It will be a model for negotiators at the seven regional Bell Operating Companies, whose agreements expire Aug. 9, and for bargainers in Illinois. There, a contract covering 12,750 IBEW linemen installers, service representatives, sales personnel and bill processers expires at 11:59 p.m. CDT, Saturday.

The employment security package includes an extensive training and retraining program for AT&T workers to help them improve skills and develop new ones as jobs change in the industry.

Japanese car prices rise

Since the beginning of the 1986 model year, the cost of imported Japanese cars has increased by an average of more than $1,000. Carmakers claim the reason for this rise is the strong yen, whose rate of exchange has slid below 200 per U.S. dollar. Honda Motors Corporation has bumped the price tags of its new cars by a total of $1,424. Toyota Motors Corporation, which has already increased prices by $833, is considering additional hikes.

Japanese cars higher

DETROIT (UPI) — U.S. prices of Japanese cars have gone up an average $1,331 or 14 percent since the 1986-model year began, reports an Automotive News survey.

A survey by the weekly trade publication found that the top Japanese automakers — Toyota, Nissan, Honda and Mazda — each have raised prices four times since the end of the 1985-model year.

The first round came with the traditional new model increases last fall, followed by hikes in December and March. The latest price increases were announced this month and last.

The falling value of the U.S. dollar against the Japanese yen has been the main reason behind the increases, as carmakers have sought to recoup erosions in profit margins on U.S. sales caused by the currency change.

The Japanese yen currently is trading in the 165 to 170 range and has appreciated more than 30 percent since late last year when the new models were introduced.

Of the top Japanese carmakers, Mazda's prices increased the most at an average $1,408 or 15.6 percent. Toyota's rose an average $1,358 or 14.1 percent. Nissan raised prices an average $1,339 or 12.5 percent, and Honda posted a $1,199 or 14.5 percent hike since last fall, the study showed.

Coke, Dr. Pepper will contest FTC decision

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr Pepper Co. will join Coca-Cola Co. in contesting the Federal Trade Commission decision to try to block Coke's proposed $470 million purchase of Dr Pepper, its owner said Thursday.

A federal judge in Columbus, Ga., meanwhile, extended an order barring Coca-Cola from proceeding with the merger and set a trial date in an effort by Royal Crown Cola Co. to prevent the merger.

"We intend to proceed with our deal with Coca-Cola, which we think is in all respects proper and will increase competition," said Theodore Forstmann, general partner of the New York investment firm Forstmann Little & Co., which owns the Dallas-based Dr Pepper.

"We will pursue our legal remedies and we think the facts speak for themselves," Forstmann said.

On Tuesday, Philip Morris Cos. Inc. said it scrapped its agreement to sell Seven-Up Co. to Pepsico Inc. for $380 million, because of the FTC's objections.

The FTC announced June 20 that it would go to court to oppose the two deals, saying it feared the takeovers would reduce competition in the distribution and sale of soft drinks in the United States.

Coca-Cola is the nation's largest soft drink maker. Pepsico ranks second. Their proposed acquisitions of No. 4 Dr Pepper and No. 3 Seven-Up would have given them 80 percent of the domestic market.

The commission filed a complaint in federal court in Washington on Tuesday seeking a temporary restraining order against Coca-Cola's bid.

Atlanta-based Coca-Cola, which said it would pursue its acquisition, agreed not to proceed before a July 16 hearing on the FTC complaint.

But it already was blocked from going ahead by a temporary restraining order obtained by Royal Crown.

On Wednesday, U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott extended a temporary order and set an Aug. 25 trial date.

The preliminary injunction is in effect pending the outcome of that hearing. A hearing previously scheduled for Monday was canceled.

Royal Crown, a privately owned company that ranks fifth in the soft drink market, obtained the original order June 20, temporarily restraining Coca-Cola and Pepsico from proceeding with the deals.

Royal Crown, based in Rolling Meadows, Ill., filed its lawsuit June 19, seeking to block the mergers on antitrust grounds.

Philip Morris said it still intended to sell St. Louis-based Seven-Up's franchise business.

The company also said it was considering offers to buy other Seven-Up assets that were not part of the agreement with Pepsico.

Phillips school moving to buy land from Phillips oil

PHILLIPS, Texas (AP) — Trustees for the Phillips Independent School District have voted to begin steps to acquire from Phillips Petroleum Co. the title to land that part of the school now sits on.

The school district — which is situated about two miles northeast of Borger in Hutchinson County — is on two pieces of property, with the classrooms on land previously owned by Johnson Land Co. and other facilities on land leased from Phillips Petroleum.

"The school board feels they would be more secure if they had clear title to the land under the school's property. The land has been used for many years as a school, and we have an activity center and football field on that land," Superintendent Joel Lynch said.

The school board voted Wednesday night to seek a meeting with oil company officials in an effort to agree on purchase terms. If there is no agreement, the matter probably will wind up in court, Lynch said.

Oil company spokesman Dan Harrison said Thursday the company would continue to urge, as it has in the past, that the Phillips school system be consolidated with the Borger school system.

EGYPT

In addition, a Middle East-wide recession brought about by the oil slump threatens the country's principal source of hard currency — remittances sent home by Egyptians working in Persian Gulf oil states.

American and Egyptian sources, speaking on condition they not be identified further, say annual remittances from Egyptians in the gulf have dropped from $4 billion to about $2.5 billion.

Major sources of hard currency are drying up at a time when Egypt is struggling to pay its bills. It has a balance-of-payments deficit of $7.75 billion and accumulates annual interest on its debts of $3 billion.

With only 3 percent of its land fit for agriculture, Egypt is spending $8 million a day importing food for its 49 million people. Every nine months, Egypt has 1 million more mouths to feed.

Signs of the currency crunch are everywhere. Construction projects sit idle because contractors cannot obtain enough hard currency to import necessary equipment.

Prices for a wide-range of commodities including gasoline, cooking oil, electricity and water have been increased. Foreign businessmen complain of delays in receiving promised hard currency payments.

With the economic outlook bleak, the government has turned for help to the United States, its major source of foreign aid since the late President Anwar Sadat launched his peace overtures to Israel in 1977.

Egypt is the second largest recipient of U.S. foreign aid after Israel, a clear sign of Washington's interest in maintaining stability in the Middle East's most populous country.

Last week, the defense minister, Field Marshal Abdel-Halim Abu-Ghazala, visited Washington to seek lower interest rates on loans for weapons. They currently average 11.81 percent.

DEFICIT

"We're seeing, of course, more weakness in oil prices than we had anticipated," he said. "And we're now seeing the full effects of the spillover of the decline of the oil and gas industry into the sales tax and just a generalized decrease in the vitality of the economy."

After oil prices dropped sharply, Bullock released a report in February that estimated the state would collect $1.3 billion less than anticipated during the two-year budget period ending Aug. 31, 1987.

Bullock's projection prompted White to ask state agencies to cut their spending by 13 percent, but spending has risen every month since his executive order.

White told reporters Thursday, however, the state has a plan in place now that has saved some $600 million to $700 million.

During a speech to the Texas House last month, Bullock said the figure possibly could go as high as $2 billion though oil prices were too volatile to revise the official $1.3 billion figure.

WELL

The Newcastle well has been a tourist attraction for 15 years, and has spawned an antique oilfield museum that Smith is very proud of. It currently boasts six antique drilling rigs, of which three are operable although they're not currently operating. The museum also owns a 1912 model wooden pumpjack that is operating, and a 1932 model metal pumpjack. There is also a gift shop contained in an old oil storage tank.

Hospital budget tightened

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Decreases in revenue due to a 12 percent decline in patient census figures at Midland Memorial Hospital led to the approval Thursday by the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees of an adjusted budget for the remaining 1986 fiscal year.

The revised budget is effective through September 1986 and decreased patient care revenue projections by $1,128,086 and increased projections for operating expenses by $137,947.

Ron Peterson, vice president of finance for the hospital, released figures showing income from total patient care services fell $591,369 short of the projected year-to-date revenues of $32,397,426.

Figures indicating operating expenses of the hospital, including salaries and wages, employee benefits, physicians fees and purchased services, exceeded the projected year-to-date amount of $143,486,650 by $576,671.

MMH President Ray Branson said he believed the inflated operating expense figures were misleading due to factors like unsettled Medicaid claims and investments in technologies, such as the increased radiation oncology services now offered at the Allison Cancer Center.

The decline in revenue at the hospital, the board agreed, most likely was due to the sagging Midland economy. One member commented, "When a person is laid off, their insurance goes with it. Unemployed people will often put off medical care."

The Taxpayers Advisory Group, formerly the Concerned Citizens Group, presented a petition to the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors signed by more than 600 Midlanders at the board meeting Thursday.

Spokesman Charles Seltzer said the group was concerned about the proposed increase in taxes by local taxing entities. With record unemployment in Midland, he said, it was only fair that the entities, including the MCHD, try to hold tax rates down to the 1985 level or below.

TAG's wish, Seltzer said, is to gain "equality of sacrifice," thus assuring that government shares the economic burdens with the taxpayer.

A decrease in hospital district taxes would, however, lower the quality of services to the medically indigent, Branson countered.

He explained that hospital district taxes go directly to providing care for the indigent comparable with care given to those who can pay, and that those standards must not be lowered, especially in hard times.

Dyer's sentencing set for July 14

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — District Judge Joe Connally has set July 14 as the sentencing date for a 33-year-old former Midland man convicted of the aggravated sexual assault-kidnapping of an Odessa girl.

William Mitchell Dyer faces a sentence of from five to 99 years in prison and a $10,000, according to Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen.

On June 18, as the 244th District Court judge pronounced Dyer guilty and ordered a pre-sentencing investigation, Connally informed jurors that while they were deliberating "new evidence" concerning the case had been discovered.

However, state law prohibited interrupting deliberations to inform them of the new information, he said.

One of Dyer's attorneys, Tom Hirsch, said the new evidence concerned a previous sexual assault allegedly involving the now-14-year-old girl and that a file on the case was in the district attorney's office.

Hirsch contends the district attorney's office should have provided him copies of the file on the previous assault.

According to Hirsch, the circumstances of the previous incident raise questions about the credibility of the young girl's testimony about the alleged assault by Dyer because the girl stated under oath she was a virgin at the time Dyer is alleged to have abducted her from near Water Wonderland.

Hirsch said he planned to file a motion asking Connally to grant a new trial on the basis of the new evidence, contending knowledge of the previous assault might have influenced jurors in their deliberations.

Augesen has rejected Hirsch's contentions, saying he had no knowledge of the previous incident until June 18, the day Dyer was found guilty.

The district attorney said the case had been filed under the name of the man who had allegedly assaulted the girl. The file was found, he said, only after his office learned the name of the man allegedly involved.

With about 20,000 criminal case files in his office, Augesen said, it is impossible to cross reference files with victim's names, which is the only way the girl's name might have been known.

The district attorney disagrees with Hirsch's contention that knowledge of the previous incident would have affected the outcome of the case.

He termed the evidence against Dyer "overwhelming." Augesen said he had personally talked with six of the 12 jurors. "Five said knowledge of the previous incident would not have changed their decisions.

The sixth said knowing about the previous incident could have a bearing on Dyer's sentence, but would not have changed his decision about Dyer's guilt," he said.

Augesen also rejected Hirsch's suggestion the girl's credibility was in question because of testimony about previous sexual experience.

The girl never stated she was a virgin except when she stated Dyer told her he would kill her if she wasn't a virgin and she testified she told him she was, he stated.

According to Augesen, a review of the file in question indicates the boyfriend of the girl's mother fondled the girl and only partially penetrated her.

Connally has stated he will hear Dyer's attorney's motion for a new trial after sentencing July 14.

Dyer faces three additional charges of aggravated sexual assault of a child in connection with the abduction of the then-13-year-old girl. He also faces prostitution on a charge of aggravated sexual assault in Andrews County.

Dyer is accused of abducting the girl as she walked home from Water Wonderland shortly after 7 p.m. June 13, 1985. He is alleged to have sodomized and repeatedly raped her as he traveled from Midland County to Ector County and Andrews County and then returned her to Ector County, letting her out near a friend's home in Gardendale more than two hours after allegedly kidnapping her.

Autopsy set for woman shot in 'suspicious' circumstances

From Staff Reports

An autopsy is scheduled today on the body of a Midland woman who died late Thursday from a a gunshot wound to the head under what Midland police describe as "suspicious" circumstances.

Christina St. John, 21, was wounded about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday following an argument with her boyfriend at his residence in the 4400 block of Tanforan, police said. The shooting was originally reported as an attempted suicide based on the statement of the boyfriend, but police investigated the case as an aggravated assault and have questioned the man.

According to Lt. Earl Luckey of the detective division, the case is now classified as a homicide, but he said "all deaths are treated as homicides until the cause of death can be determined." Luckey said the autopsy, which will be performed by Dr. David Schneidman, may shed some light on the case if the angle of the bullet's entry to Ms. St. John's right temple or the distance the gun was from her when fired is consistent with a self-inflicted wound.

a gunman who robbed Domino's Pizza at 3321 W. Illinois late Thursday and escaped with $900. Ronald D. Martin, an employee at the store, told police the man entered the store about 11:30 p.m. and produced a blue steel short barrel revolver before he took the money. He was described as a black male, six feet five inches tall, with black hair and brown eyes and weighing approximately 200 pounds. He wore a red muscle shirt, multicolored shorts, and had a mustache with only several days' growth.

In other reports, twelve cartons of cigarettes valued at $160 were stolen from Dunkles convenience store, 2300 W. Wadley. Richard Dunbar told police the incident occurred sometime between 3:30 a.m. and 4:30 a.m. today.

Jeanne Swepston, Rt. 8, Box 112, Thursday reported the burglary of a Magnavox videocassette recorder valued at $600, two Magnavox speakers valued at $300, a remote control satellite valued at $100 and a .22 caliber bolt action rifle, value unknown.

The burglary of a residence that apparently occurred between 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and 5:30 p.m. Thursday also was reported. Liz Sims told police two rifles and a videocassette recorder of undetermined value were stolen from a residence at 1318 E. Pine.

The Midland County Sheriff's Office reported two burglaries, a felony theft and the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Bruce Needham late Thursday reported a travel trailer valued at $1,200 and plumbing fixtures valued at $300 were stolen from a residence at state highway 1213 at 160. Needham said the items were taken sometime in the last 18 months.

Helen Reeves reported the burglary of a commercial lawnmower valued at $850, a lawn edger valued at $250, a .22 caliber rifle valued at $84 and a grinder valued at $50. She told authorities the items were taken Wednesday between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. from a building at the southeast corner of state highways 122 and 1313. Entry was apparently gained through a door on the west side of the building.

A burglary at Wallace Grocery, on County Road 1130, was reported early Thursday. James Wallace said various items valued at $662 were taken from the business, after someone apparently gained entry to the business through the ceiling near an air conditioner.

Steven W. Tucker of 2109 City View told authorities a suspect known to him had borrowed his 1977 Chrysler New Yorker valued at $2,295 at 8 p.m. Tuesday. He said the vehicle had not been returned.

Man charged with assaulting officer

From Staff Reports

A 28-year-old Midland man has been charged with aggravated assault on a peace officer after he allegedly tried to run down several police officers in an incident late Wednesday that attracted a volatile crowd of between 250 and 300 people.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said today Midland police were checking on a vehicle about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday that was parked at the Playmate Club, 200 N. Lee, in response to a Crimestoppers tip received about the theft early Saturday morning of $8,000 worth of narcotics from his department.

"It happened after the police found the vehicle that matched the description of the suspect car," Painter said. "It drew a big crowd in the area and there was a lot of confusion. A man then got in his car and was driving straight at a group of officers. He hit one officer slightly on the leg."

Daniel Webster Colvin, 28, was charged with aggravated assault on a peace officer and resisting arrest and is in custody at Midland County Jail. By early today no bond had been set on the assault charge.

Painter said after the car struck the officer, Colvin sped away with the car headlights off. He said officers fired two shots at Colvin's car, and following a chase he was apprehended.

At about the same time, Painter said additional police units arrived and the crowd became unruly; he said three deputy units and six or seven police units were present at the time.

A fight broke out when officers tried to arrest a man who had been cursing the law officers. Painter said family members intervened and some rocks and bottles were thrown before the man was taken into custody. He was charged with public intoxication and released pending further possible charges.

Perkins plea bargain agreement delayed

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen this morning said plans to conclude a plea bargain agreement concerning former City Councilman Thomas Perkins have been delayed because of new evidence in the case.

Late Wednesday afternoon Augesen said he had talked to Perkins' attorney, G. David Smith, and that Perkins had agreed to waive grand jury consideration of the theft charges against him and would plead guilty late Thursday afternoon to the theft of more than $750 from Montgomery Ward, where he was employed. In return for the guilty plea, the district attorney said, Perkins would be sentenced to a six year probated sentence and ordered to pay $6,000 in restitution.

These plans were preempted when Montgomery Ward submitted new information Augesen said may have a bearing on the case. He indicated this morning, however, Perkins' attorney has indicated the former city councilman still intends to enter a plea of guilty to the charges.

Augesen met with the Texas Ranger investigating the case late Thursday afternoon and said this morning plans to conclude the plea bargain agreement late today have been cancelled pending further investigation.

FFA members not limited to farming

By JOHN BRYANT

AUSTIN (AP) — The Future Farmers of America are not all future farmers anymore.

In fact, few of the 105 agriculture students in Lanier High School's FFA chapter are even considering the beleaguered farm and ranch business that is reeling from plummeting prices for crops, animals and land.

"You'd have to be crazy to go into farming," said Chris White. "You can't get any money out of it anymore."

Even FFA chapter officers plan to avoid farm and ranch production after graduation. "There are too many farms going bankrupt," said secretary Terese Meegan, who wants to teach agriculture after college.

But the students defend their decision to invest four years in the agriculture department at Lanier. All but two of the agriculture students at Lanier are dues-paying members of the FFA.

"If people understood what FFA was all about, they wouldn't make fun of it. I'm here to learn about caring for animals."
— Michele Goerlitz, FFA member and Austin honor student

"I can't say enough about it — I loved it," said White, who plans to attend college this fall and work in the agri-business field. "It's the only thing that kept me in school."

Students, teachers and other supporters of the "ag" courses offered at Lanier and Crockett high schools in the Austin school district are scrambling to convince the public — and potential agriculture students — that the "kicker" image of FFA members is as outdated as grandma's butter churn.

"Today's agriculture is more than sows, cows and plows," said a headline on a newspaper advertisement telling students they could transfer into Lanier or Crockett to take agriculture courses. Lanier's FFA Advisory Club paid for the advertisement, which attracted a lot of attention but few new students.

"VOCATIONAL teachers have been told to promote their programs and get more kids in them," said U.D. Adams, who heads the three-person Lanier agriculture department he started with 23 students in 1961.

"We were told that if we didn't have the kids, we wouldn't have the program."

Adams takes that warning from school administrators seriously, since they are undertaking some serious budget-slashing. Adams concern is not just for the students. His two sons — Gary at Lanier and David at Crockett — are vocational agriculture teachers, too.

"I've asked whether the formulas consider the good that we've done for students," Adams said. "I was told that the bottom line is dollars."

Enrollment in Lanier's agriculture program reached a high of 215 students in 1978-79, and has declined each year since 1981.

David Adams, who had 44 agriculture students this past school year at Crockett, said his enrollment has inched up slightly each year.

If his South Austin school had a project farm like the 29-acre facility operated by Lanier, the Crockett program might rival Lanier's in size, David Adams said.

Some locals favor idea of issuing bonds to improve streets

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The idea of issuing bonds to improve city streets has been raised in the past at city hall.

On Thursday a sample of 12 Midlanders were asked, "Do you think bonds should be issued to improve city streets?"

Seven said they would favor a bond issue for city street improvements while five said they would be against issuing bonds.

"The people that live here in Midland, if they drive on the streets, they should support the effort to issue bonds. It's probably the most cost effective way," said Ed Fritz, of Greenview Lane. Fritz is a drafting supervisor.

Nancy Evans, who works as a secretary, said "If we're going to pay to fix it, we ought to do a first class job.

"We don't need to patch the streets anymore," said Ms. Evans.

Debbie Dyer, County Road 1225, said, "Something's got to be done because patching up doesn't work." Ms. Dyer is a secretary.

Joe Hathaway, 2825 Metz, said, "I do think the streets need improving whatever it takes. I would not mind paying a little more taxes for better streets." Hathaway is a salesman.

Jane Gram, who is an accountant, said, "There are too many streets that need to be fixed and I don't think they'll get to them all. What they are doing doesn't seem to be working." Mrs. Gram is an accountant.

Michael Higgins, 3317 Pinemont, said, "I would be in favor of issuing bonds to improve city streets in better economic times and only if they build streets to last. The only streets I know to last are concrete." Higgins is the vice president of an exploration firm.

Evelyn Gould, 2814 Fannin, said "I don't think the economy warrants a bond issue right now. I think the time is all wrong. We need to do something with the money situation first." Gould is an office manager.

Ralph Holder, 2301 Culpepper, "We ought to be as conservative as possible. More bonds mean more taxes. Personally I'm not in the position to pay more now and I don't think anyone else is." Holder is a self-employed welder.

Ron Pepper, 2102 Woodlawn, said, "With the way the economy is right now, I'm not sure that's the thing we need to concentrate on." Pepper is an independent oil and gas producer.

Judy Deeds, 714 West Pine, said, "I drive on the streets and the streets are terrible. I'm not sure a bond issue is the best idea, but something needs to be done." Ms. Deeds is a manager of a flower shop.

Richard H. Dawson, 63, of Midland, died at his home on Thursday evening.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at Resthaven Memorial Park with Dr. F. Ray Riddle, chaplain of Hospice, officiating.

Dawson was born Sept. 12, 1922, in Moose Jaw, Canada, and was reared in Ann Arbor, Mich. On Aug. 23, 1947, he married Ruth Carol Collins in Chelsea, Mich.

He graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in geology. He was employed with the state of Michigan before he began working for Cities Service Oil Co. in 1954.

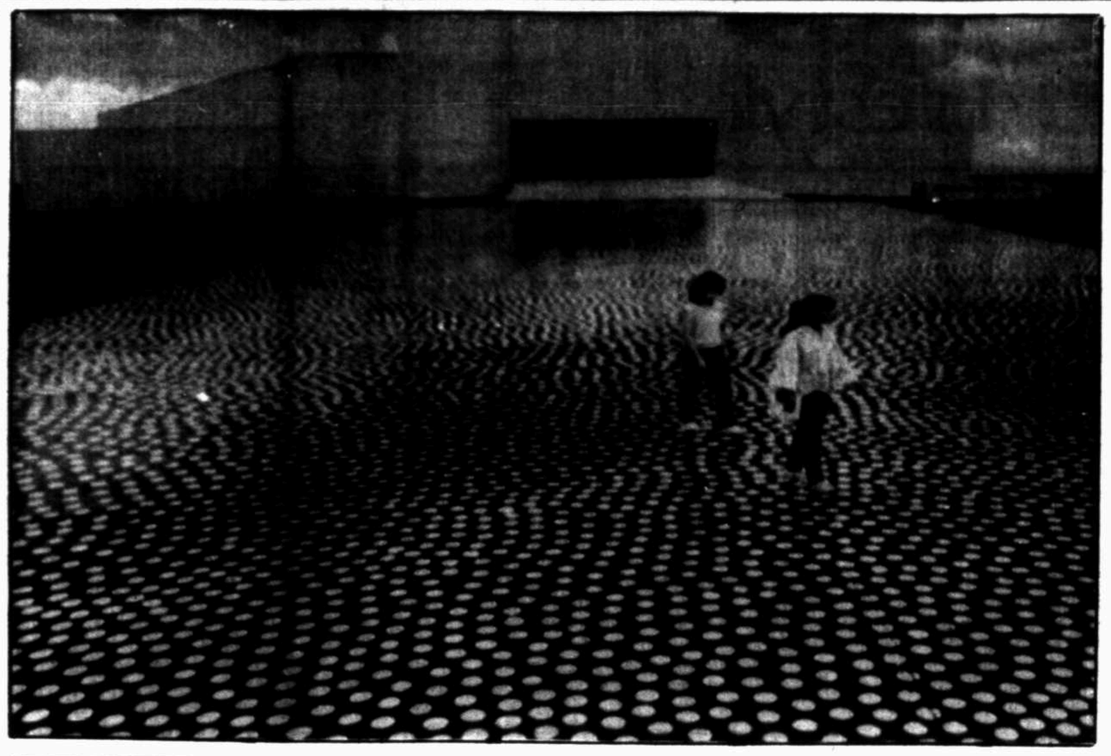
The family lived in a number of places over the next several years. Dawson was involved with the development of the North Slope of Alaska. In 1972, he transferred to Midland. He took an early retirement from Cities Service in 1977 and began work with Terra Oil Co. He established their exploration department in Midland before retiring in 1983.

He was a veteran of the U.S. armed forces, having served in the Navy in the South Pacific during World War II.

Dawson was a volunteer with Hospice for the past two years; a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; Midland Petroleum Club; and a member of the University of Michigan Alumni Association.

Survivors include two sons, David Dawson of Albuquerque, N.M., and James Dawson of San Jose, Calif.; two daughters, Nancy Dawson of San Francisco, Calif., and Carolie McCauley, of Seguin; one sister, Jean Berkimer of Prospect, Ky.; and five grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, PO Box 2621, Midland, 79702.



Doomed dots

No one has actually counted the number of dots in artist June Kaneko's "Polka Dot Sidewalk" outside the Art Museum of South Texas in Corpus Christi. However, the number is estimated to be between 50,000 and 60,000 dots. The sidewalk and its dots will only last until summer's end, when they will make way for a parking garage.

White shrugs off latest state revenue projection

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White, apparently figuring one Texas disaster a day is plenty, Thursday shrugged off Comptroller Bob Bullock's revised revenue projection showing the state's shortfall has increased by another $1 billion.

Because the Texas economy is "so volatile," the comptroller will not officially revise his original estimate projecting a $1.3 billion shortfall, said Bullock aide Tony Proffitt. But if Bullock had to make an estimate today, he would project a $2.3 billion deficit, Proffitt said.

Bullock on Friday will tell the Legislative Budget Board — the group of lawmakers that prepares the state's budget — that the shortfall now appears to be $2.3 billion, Proffitt confirmed.

White might call for further cuts in state spending or other possible ways to save money after Bullock's presentation to the LBB, a spokesman for the governor said.

But the governor said he will continue to use the $1.3 billion figure until Bullock changes his official estimate. White again ruled out a special legislative session to deal with the shortall. His Republican opponent Bill Clements has repeatedly said White should call lawmakers in for a special session.

"His (Bullock's) official comments have been $1.3 billion, and we have a plan in place right now that has produced some $600, almost $700-million in savings that have been announced by the various agencies who have control over those expenditures," White said, alluding to the 13-percent cutback he ordered for all state.

Bullock's monthly reports show state spending has increased every month since White ordered the cuts on February 18.

White also noted several one-time gains in revenue for the state from the federal government and oil companies. "I think we're in good position on liquidity as well as cash flow," White said.

Also on Friday, White said a nonprofit corporation and a New York holding company had arranged financing for a new 2,250-bed prison near Palestine.

The state needs additional prison space to meet court-ordered reforms, so the Legislature decided to sell certain tracts of state-owned land to pay for the new unit. But when the state could not sell the land, White and the prison board turned to a lease-purchase arrangement to build the new $67.1-million unit.

Since the agreement Friday, the private corporation sold certificates of participation — similar to bonds — to pay for construction costs.

The Legislature will decide whether to buy the prison from the corporation outright or to make installment payments on the unit. Either way, White said, the state will not go into debt on the prison.

"I am confident that the prison unit can be completed in time without any early release of prisoners," the governor said. The new prison will be built before the court-ordered August 1987 deadline, White said.

Parents of retarded demand 'choice' at MHMR hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — The budget writers say the state is going to have to get by on less, but the parents of Texas' retarded say they need more.

Pepi Streiff of Duncanville wants to go back to work as a high school math teacher. She said she cannot because there is no place for her autistic son to go when his school day is over.

"I like teaching school and I can't stand scrubbing toilets, but I have no choice. Give me a choice," she told the Mental Health and Mental Retardation board at its Thursday budget hearing.

Gene Newton of Wichita Falls, president of the Association for Retarded Citizens, said the state must do more to help parents who keep their retarded children at home, rather than sending them to state institutions.

"The state provides very little for people doing the heroic job of taking care of their own children," he testified.

The budget hearing was held amid talk that the state budget shortfall might be nearing $2.3 billion. For MHMR, the money crunch highlighted what has always been one of the most emotional battles in state government — how to take care of the mentally retarded.

The Association for Retarded Citizens favors expanding use of community care facilities, and less use of institutions.

The Parents Association for the Retarded of Texas backs MHMR's state schools as the best thing for thousands of retarded citizens.

A federal court order has forced MHMR to look toward community care. Brenda Miller of Nashville, Tenn., who told the board she has a "2-year-old son who will celebrate his 17th birthday in September," urged the board not to give up on the state schools. Her son is in the Fort Worth State School, which she said is the "only satisfactory solution for his many needs."

"But you think of the state schools as an albatross around your neck, as the Edsel of 1986," she told the board.

Prior to the hearing, about 200 ARC members rallied at the MHMR building. They don't like an MHMR staff proposal that might put new residents in state schools.

"To me, there is no one in state institutions now that could not live in a community setting," said Dee Kifowit, an ARC official in Austin.

The MHMR staff, as required by the legislative budget staff, has prepared several budget alternatives — including one reflecting a 20 percent spending cut. To achieve that cut, the agency could close four state schools for the retarded and three state hospitals for the mentally ill, according to Wesley Hjornevik, MHMR director of operations.

FFA

FFA recruiters trying to promote agricultural studies are up against not only troubled times in the field but also revised school requirements that permit fewer electives in honors graduation plans. Students in the program take one or two agriculture courses a semester. Classes last one, two or three hours.

"WE COULD lose students who want to achieve academic excellence because they don't have room for agriculture courses," U.D. Adams said.

He and his Lanier students, attempting to correct what they call misconceptions about vocational agriculture, paint this picture of the FFA in the mid-1980s:

— In spite of the name, national statistics show only about 10 percent of the Future Farmers of America are now going into agriculture production. At Lanier, the figure is even lower. Many of the rest enter related careers such as agri-business, science, education, communication, processing, distribution, marketing and sales or service fields.

Regardless of their career choices, FFA members learn leadership, money-handling and problem-solving skills from club and school activities, said Lanier vocational counselor Ed McArthur.

Agriculture students also study a wide range of subjects, including landscaping, gardening, welding, electrical wiring, plumbing, construction and automotive and machine maintenance, McArthur said. They even work on computers.

— At least half of the agriculture students go to college, Adams said.

— FFA members are not all kickers who wear boots and dip snuff. "That's a real big misconception," said chapter president Ronny Nauert. "I don't wear boots every day, and I don't have a big wad of snuff hanging out."

Michele Goerlitz, an honor student who does not own a pair of boots, hopes to go to college and become a veterinarian.

"IF PEOPLE understood what FFA was all about, they wouldn't make fun of it," she said. "I'm here to learn about caring for animals."

Some agriculture students do fit the kicker image, but that does not mean anything in FFA, Nauert said.

"It doesn't matter who you are or what you are," he said. "When it comes down to business, everybody puts everything aside and works together."

— FFA members are still proud to wear the blue FFA jackets that signify they are agriculture students.

"All during junior high, I looked forward to wearing that jacket," Nauert said.

He said entertainers such as Willie Nelson and John Cougar Mellencamp, who wore FFA jackets during last summer's Farm Aid concert, give a definite boost to the program.

"It's like saying that if those people are where they are now, the FFA might have had something to do with it," Nauert said.

— Agriculture courses are not as easy as some students think, chapter vice president Tamara Johnson said. "People think FFA is an easy ride through school," she said. "Ag courses are some of the hardest courses I've had. You really do have to work."

Second TECAT test set for Saturday

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's controversial teacher competency test will be given for a second time Saturday, with 6,579 people needing to pass it to keep their jobs.

Up to 25,000 teachers, former teachers and school adminstrators are expected to take the exam, officials said Thursday.

A total of just over 202,000 teachers and administrators took the first exam in March. Nearly 97 percent passed.

The 6,579 who failed it are required to pass the second test or they will not be allowed to teach in the next school year, said Terri Anderson, spokeswoman for the Texas Education Agency.

"They have to pass this time to teach in the 86-87 school year. If they fail, they don't lose their certificates, but they can't teach until they pass the test. They can take the test any time in the future," Ms. Anderson said.

The test of basic skills, officially known as the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, was required by the sweeping 1984 school reform law.

The TECAT stirred considerable protest from teacher groups, notably the Texas State Teachers Association, which has gone to court to overturn the exam.

The Texas Supreme Court heard arguments on June 18 on a Starr County lawsuit that challenged the test on behalf of 350 South Texas teachers and administrators. The TSTA also has filed suit on behalf of teachers who failed, claiming the test was racially discriminatory since a higher percentage of minorities than whites failed.

Besides those who failed the first test, thousands of others will take the exam Saturday, Ms. Anderson said.

Takers this time include former teachers, college personnel and private school teachers who want to retain their state-issued teaching certificates.

Thatcher thanks Texan

CANUTILLO (AP) — James Armstrong says he doesn't get many letters, but he wasn't surprised this week when he got one from No. 10 Downing Street this week.

After all, he figured, how often does Great Britain's prime minister hear from someone in Canutillo, a small town east of El Paso?

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office sent Armstrong a letter thanking him for a complimentary letter Armstrong wrote last month after the British prime minister supported the U.S. air raid on Libya.

"When the chips were down, you stood up to be counted, a courageous act on your part," he wrote.

He also told Thatcher "that Britain's three greatest leaders have all been women — Elizabeth I, Victoria and Margaret Thatcher, and I am considered a male chauvinist."

A Thatcher staff aide wrote Armstrong: "The prime minister has asked me to thank you for your recent letter. Mrs. Thatcher is most grateful to you for your kind thought in writing."

TDC rule questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — Ruben Bonilla, chairman of Mexican American Democrats, said Thursday he has asked state prison officials to suspend a new rule about the use of foreign languages in the prison system.

Bonilla said the rule, handed down in early June, says "a foreign language cannot be used to intentionally exclude another person from a conversation in the work place."

He said this would affect prison guards and employees most.

"Given the disproportionate number of Hispanics in the prison system a language prohibition of this sort is impractical and may lead to further problems of morale and discipline in the inmate and guard population," Bonilla said.

He said guards have to speak in Spanish to many of the inmates "because that is the language of so many who do not have much education."

MADD chapter suspended

HOUSTON (AP) — The office locks at the Harris County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving were changed and the chapter's president says she was told to pack her bags.

Chapter president Marinelle Timmons said officials from MADD's national office in Hurst gave her a letter Wednesday stating the Harris County chapter was being suspended.

"I asked why. They told me there would be a hearing in 10 days. They gave me no reason," Ms. Timmons said.

No one answered the phone at the national office in the Fort Worth suburb of Hurst Thursday evening.

Ms. Timmons said officials from the national office apparently were in the Harris County office Tuesday while she was speaking at a law enforcement conference in Waco.

Juror's request stalls Achille Lauro hearing

GENOA, Italy (AP) — One of the jurors in the Achille Lauro hijacking trial asked to be dropped from the panel today, and the judge promptly suspended the case for three days so he could decide whether to grant the request.

The juror, Silvio Ferrari, made the request in a letter which was delivered to Judge Lino Monteverde just before today's session was to convene.

The judge said he would decide on the request, and that court would resume Tuesday morning. Monteverde did not disclose the juror's reason for asking to be excused.

A court source said he did not know why Ferrari, a Communist member of the provincial legislature, had made the request, but said illness was not the reason.

The jury hearing evidence against 15 defendants accused in connection with the Oct. 7-9 hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship consists of Monteverde, another judge and six civilian jurors.

There are six civilian alternates who can take the place of a regular juror in case of illness.

The sudden cancellation of today's session meant the postponement of arguments by Oreste Terracini, a lawyer for Lisa Klinghoffer, a daughter of the crippled American passenger slain aboard the cruise ship during the hijacking.

Lisa and Ilsa, another daughter of Leon Klinghoffer, are seeking compensation for their father's death. The 69-year-old New Yorker was shot, and his body and wheelchair were thrown into the Mediterranean.

If the court rules that there are sufficient grounds for the Klinghoffer daughters to claim compensation, then a civil trial would be held. If the civil court rules that compensation is warranted, the minimum amount specified by Italian law is 100 million lire, or nearly $67,000.

Presumably, the defendants in the current criminal trial would have to pay, although whether they have the means to do so would be another matter. The owners of the Achille Lauro might also be called upon to provide compensation, although this has not been decided.

On Thursday, a defense lawyer and prison officials said a Syrian charged in connection with the ship hijacking was stopped by prison guards after he tied a sheet to a window bar in his cell and slipped it around his neck.

A report from Novara maximum security prison said the act by Mohawat Gandura, 37, was "a theatrical gesture, given the presence of numerous personnel in the department at the moment."

Gandura, a native of Damascus, Syria, is charged with helping the hijackers travel through Italy before they boarded the cruise ship in Genoa.

Emmanuele Lamberti, Gandura's lawyer, said he didn't know if his client intended to kill himself when he knotted a sheet to a bar of a window grating in his cell Wednesday evening.

Lamberti said Gandura was unconscious briefly after prison guards who were nearby saw what has happening and intervened.

Gandura was uninjured in the incident, the prison report said.

"It was an act of desperation," Lamberti said in an interview. The lawyer said Gandura's "instinct for self-preservation" might have led him to make the attempt while guards were around in hopes they would intervene.

Last Friday, the third day of the trial, the hijacker accused of shooting Klinghoffer shouted threats in Arabic at the court.

After the outburst by Youssef Magied Al-Moqki, the defendants were transferred from a Genoa prison to more secure facilities at Novara, about 60 miles north of Genoa.

Three other Palestinians are accused of seizing the cruise ship. They are Ibrahim Fatayer Abdelatif, Ahmad Mahmoud Al Assadi and Bassam Al-Ashker, all in Italian custody.

Because he was only 17 at the time of the hijacking, Ashker will be tried later by a juvenile court.

Mohammed Abbas, a Palestinian leader also known as Abul Abbas, is accused of being the mastermind of the hijacking. He and nine other defendants are being tried in absentia.

Defense and prosecution arguments are expected to last well into next week. The case then goes to the jury of six civilians and two judges.

Irish referendum seems to support anti-divorce law

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The government proposal to scrap Ireland's ban on divorce appeared headed for defeat today as first returns came in from a nationwide referendum, state radio said.

RTE, the national network, said early returns from Thursday's vote indicated a crushing anti-divorce vote in conservative rural areas, while initial tallies in metropolitan Dublin were far from the 2-1 yes vote that supporters of the referendum believed was vital to ensure its passage.

The radio said defeat was a "virtual certainty." Final results were not expected until later after returns from the 5,000 polling stations were tallied.

Guard credited with saving lives in airport blast

BEN GURION AIRPORT, Israel (AP) — Passengers on El Al Flight 396 said today that a security guard who yelled "take cover" seconds before a bomb blast shook a crowded Madrid airport terminal may have saved lives.

Ninety-four travelers emerged wearily from the plane that left Madrid after a six-hour delay. Passengers said they were just 20 minutes from boarding when a bomb in a suitcase exploded Thursday, damaging the roof and shattering glass throughout the Barajas Airport terminal.

Officials in Spain said security guard Nir Ran, one passenger and six other people were taken to a hospital for treatment. Five other people were treated at the airport for cuts and bruises, they said.

Police in Spain said the suitcase belonged to the last passenger to check in for the flight. A police spokesman said that passenger was arrested and was being questioned.

Summer pecans require special aphid, scab control

By EARNEST KIKER

Pecans need special attention in the summer. That means applying zinc sprays controlling aphids and scab.

Pecan scab will likely be a serious problem due to recent rains. Fungicide sprays of Benlate, Topsin or Super Tin will prevent scab from overtaking the entire shuck. Homeowners should use Benlate. Scab can develop on pecans in any part of Texas as long as the weather is wet and warm.

Pecan growers have had to worry about sticky, sugar-covered leaves every summer due to aphid infestations. Zolone or malathion sprays can give homeowners good control.

Summertime drought is a sure bet every year, and pecans will suffer if they do not receive at least one inch of water per week from June through September. Actually, two inches is optimum. A mature pecan tree will use more than 100 gallons of water per day. If trees go more than three weeks without water, serious crop loss can occur.

Weeds and grass also use soil moisture, so keep competitive vegetation to a minimum under pecan trees. With shallow soil and vegetation under trees, a weekly irrigation will be needed.

On young pecan trees, weeds slow down growth more than anything else, so use a contact herbicide such as Roundup to keep the limb spread area weed-free.

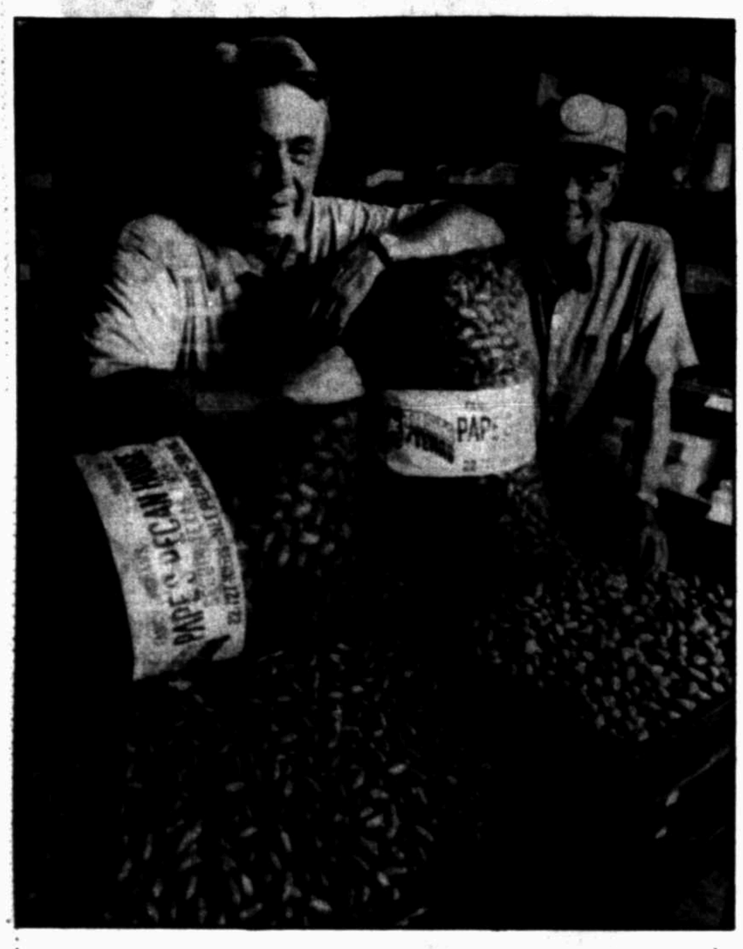
Pecan trees less than four years of age should have only one main trunk. If two, three or four trunks develop, simply cut the weaker ones out and leave the strongest one.

Young trees also should receive zinc sprays every two weeks to insure maximum growth. Make your final nitrogen application in June, because later applications can, and probably will, result in freeze injury in December or January.

Freeze injury is showing up in parts of Texas on mature pecan trees. Sometimes it is a limb or two, but occasionally it is the entire tree. Warm winters mixed with an occasional cold spell are much more serious than a long, cold winter.

Varieties which were productive last fall such as Wichita or Mahan have been hit the hardest. Since the pecan has a short chilling requirement of only 400 hours, it can have active sap as long as weather is mild. Consequently, weak pecan trees did not go completely dormant, and when freezes do occur, freeze injury results. Homeowners should wait until mid-summer to prune out dead limbs to avoid removing limbs which may recover.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.



Kenneth Pape, left, and his father Hugo watch over the family's pecan business in Seguin. Pecan growers across the state are promoting the pecan as the state's fruit, since the tree is already the state tree.

Pecans rate as state fruit, growers say

By DAVID SEDENO

AGRICULTURE

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — Hugo Pape is nuts abouts pecans.

For more than 60 years, Pape has been part of the pecan industry in this south central Texas community, which boasts the world's largest pecan.

At 86, Pape is trying to get away from his family business, but he still manages occasional strolls into the pecan store run by his son, Kenneth.

"I just love to fool with pecans," the elder Pape said. "Pecans are a nice hobby if you have a lot of patience."

Texas' sesquicentennial celebration, commemorating separation from Mexico 150 years ago, has prompted the nicknaming of animals — such as an endangered Ridley sea turtle as "Lone Star" and a Longhorn bull as "Texas USA."

Pecan industry officials had hoped the state would christen the pecan as Texas' fruit since the tree already is the state tree. They argue that their crop is native to Texas, even before Texas was Texas, and can be found not only near river banks, but in backyards across the state.

But peach and citrus growers, among others in agriculture, also have campaigned to name their crop the state's official fruit.

Texas ranks second behind Georgia in pecan production, which last year was worth $163 million nationwide.

In 1985, the Lone Star State produced more than 58 million pounds of pecans, compared to Georgia's 95 million pounds. The Texas crop — used primarily in confectionary products — was worth about $35 million, according to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

But pecan growers said the Texas figures on pounds and profits are misleading because not every pecan is counted.

"There are literally thousands of pecan trees that grow wild," said Norman Winter, executive director of the 1,200-member Texas Pecan Growers Association. "The pecans might fall on the ground and nobody picks them up."

Of more than 112 varieties of pecans across the country, the most common is the "Stuart." The "Wichita," however, continues to be the most popular for growers to plant, said Dr. Tommy Thompson of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's research station in Brownwood.

Researchers at the USDA facility continue their work in pecan genetics and breeding to help the pecan withstand nature.

During the past 50 years, researchers have come up with 16 varieties of pecans and have named them after Indian tribes, such as the Pawnee, Wichita, Cheyenne, Mohawk, and Choctaw.The last variety released was the Pawnee in 1984.

"We are breeding and improving the pecan, genetically," said Thompson, who has been at the facility seven years. "We think we can have an impact on changing the habit from a wild wood-producing species to a domestic nut-producing species."

He said it takes about 20 years to produce another variety.

Texas pecan growers pray for rain and battle insects for a successful harvest. They also have competition from California's walnuts and almonds.

But Texas pecan growers, who have started promoting their product outside the United States, said their nut is nuttier and more nutritious.

"The almond. There's no way to compare it in quality with the pecan," said Dr. J. Benton Storey of the Texas A&M Agricultural Experiment Station.

Palm oil threat to U.S. soybean producers

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — A question that American soybean farmers might want to consider is what effect the Cameroon weevil will have on their crop prices in the years ahead.

According to an Agriculture Department analyst, the Cameroon weevil does not threaten U.S. soybean production directly. But it was introduced in 1981 by palm oil producers in Malaysia as an alternative to expensive manual pollination of oil palm trees.

Palm oil competes with soybean oil in some important foreign markets, and, when prices are attractive, can intrude heavily into the U.S. domestic market for use in the manufacture of shortening, margarine, frying fats, soaps and detergents.

"The improved pollination resulted in more fruit and denser fruit bunches," says Jitendar S. Mann of the department's Economic Research Service. "Although precise data are not available, the weevil has probably increased yields."

Mann said the reproduction of palm oil trees by cloning is another breakthrough, which could eventually increase yields by about 30 percent. An estimated 5 percent to 10 percent of the Malaysian plants are cloned every year, but low oil prices could discourage expansion.

Palm oil has emerged as a major competitor in world vegetable oil markets in the past decade, and Malaysia is the world's No. 1 producer. And since little is used domestically, most of the oil is exported.

The Malaysian palm oil industry draws upon a half-century of experience, dating back to the large estates of the colonial era prior to World War II. Since the early 1960s, the Malaysian government also has supported small producers. During the period 1970-85, oil production increased at an annual rate of 17 percent.

Mann said in a report that oil palms bear fruit for decades and that the crop is not responsive to short-term price changes. It's the long-term outlook upon which producers make basic decisions.

"Present prices give Malaysian palm oil an edge in world vegetable oil markets," Mann said. "It will likely continue to compete strongly with soybean oil and other vegetable oils during the rest of this century."

Palm oil's low production costs make it a strong competitor of soybean oil, he said. India and Pakistan account for about 22 percent of palm oil imports, and Japan, South Korea and Bangladesh are also major customers.

"Continued growth in Malaysian palm oil production will make the task of marketing more difficult and may exert downward pressure on world vegetable oil prices," Mann said.

Bite of brown recluse spider justifiable cause for worry

By RICHARD MINZENMAYER

The brown recluse spider, reclusa, occurs in the U.S. in many southern and midwestern states. This species and its near relatives may now be included with the black widows as being among the few spiders in the country for which it can be said that their bites, although uncommon, are cause for justifiable concern.

Members of this species can be observed in bathrooms, bedrooms and closets, on the underside of tables and chairs, behind baseboards and door facings or in corners and crevices. These spiders also can be found in cellars and garages which are not cleaned often and the contents are not disturbed for relatively long periods of time.

It is a nonaggressive species that spins offwhite to grayish nondescript webs. Many times bites occur when people inadvertently trap these spiders in folds of clothinbg or roll over the spider in bed while sleeping.

Three pairs of eyes arranged in a semicircle on the forepart of the head and a guitar or violin shaped marking immediately behind the semicircle of eyes with a distinct short median groove forming the neck of the "guitar" distinguish these spiders. The adult females vary from 7 to 12 mm in length, averaging about 9 mm. The males are a little smaller, averaging about 8 mm. The legs of the brown recluse are long, and are covered with minute brown hairs, but appear almost bare to the unaided eye. The body color varies from light fawn to dark brown. Adults are larger and lighter in color than immature spiders.

The typical human reaction to the brown recluse's bite is necrosis (killed tissue) at the site of the bite. The victim may not be aware of the bite for 2 to 3 hours, or a painful reaction may occur immediately. A stinging sensation is usually followed by intense pain. A small blister usually rises, and a large area aroundb the bite becomes congested and swollen. The patient may become restless, feverish, and have difficulty in sleeping. The local pain is frequently quite intense, and the area surrounding the bite remains congested and hard to touch for some time. The tissue affected is killed and gradually sloughs away, exposing the underlying muscles. Healing takes place quite slowly, and may take 6 to 8 weeks. The end result is a sunken scar ranging from the size of a penny to half dollar.

As a precautionary measure, become familiar with the appearance and habit of poisonous spiders. Since spiders nest in quiet and undisturbed areas, frequent cleaning in closets, cellars and other such areas help keep the spiders away. Use a water hose to wash off outside areas. When chemical control is necessary, use products containing diazinon, Dursban®, Baygon®, pyrethrins, Sevin®, resmethrin, Vapona®, or malathion.

WORLD in brief

Import measures near against South Africa

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Diplomatic sources said leaders of the 12 Common Market countries were near agreement today on a package of measures aimed at pressuring South Africa to end apartheid.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the measures likely would include a ban on importing South African coal, iron and steel combined with Common Market financial aid for South Africans hurt by their country's policy of forced racial segregation.

The Common Market leaders, nearing the end of a two-day summit, also will urge South Africa to release jailed black leader Nelson Mandela within two months and recognize the African National Congress guerrilla group, the sources said.

Mandela is a former leader of the ANC, the main black guerrilla group fighting to end white domination in South Africa. The ANC is outlawed in South Africa. Mandela is serving a life sentence for a 1964 conviction of plotting sabotage.

Bomb safely defused

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Police said they defused a homemade bomb early today near the European Community information office, less than a mile from the site of a Common Market summit meeting.

Police spokeswoman Dini Veldhuis said police received an anonymous phone call in the early morning hours from a man saying the bomb would detonate in a half-hour.

The Common Market leaders, who are holding a two-day summit meeting at the Foreign Ministry several blocks away, were not meeting at the time.

Among the European leaders attending the summit meeting are British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French President Francois Mitterrand.

Ms. Veldhuis said police found the device in a black plastic bag and defused it. She said the bag was suspended from a gate near the information office of the Common Market, or European Economic Community.

"Inside the bag was a note signed by the Red Revolutionary Front," a group she said was known to police for having distributed ultra-leftist pamphlets at demonstrations in the past.

Confidence vote won

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva won a vote of confidence motion in Parliament early Friday, staving off a collapse of his minority party government.

In voting at the end of a two-day debate in the 250-seat chamber, the government-tabled motion was carried by 108 votes cast by Cavaco Silva's Social Democrats and the conservative Christian Democrats.

The Socialists and Communists mustered 93 votes against the motion, while the final result rested on the abstention of 44 Democratic Renewal party deputies.

If defeated by the majority opposition on the measure, the 8-month-old government would have had to resign under Portuguese law.

Cavaco Silva said the motion's passage represented "an effective vote," adding "Parliament once again accepted the legitimacy of this government, its program and its objectives."

PEN accuses countries

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The PEN international writers' organization has accused Chile, Turkey and Iran of suppressing freedom of expression, a spokesman for the group said Thursday.

At the meeting in Hamburg, 420 authors from around the world also condemned apartheid in South Africa in a resolution Wednesday night, Alexandre Blokh said.

In another resolution, the writers called on the Soviet Union to release Ukranian author Irina Ratuschinskaja, Blokh said.

He said Miss Ratuschinskaja was arrested in Kiev in 1982 and sentenced one year later to seven years in a prison camp and five years of internal exile on charges of anti-Soviet propaganda.

The 49th PEN Congress opened in Hamburg on Monday.

Six held in bombing

CUZCO, Peru (AP) — Police arrested six suspects in connection with the bomb blast that killed seven people on a tourist train headed from here for the ancient Inca city of Machu Picchu, Peru's official news agency said.

Officials say one of the dead was an American man, and that the Wednesday blast also injured up to 40 people.

Late Wednesday night, the Andina news agency said six suspects were detained, but it did not specify what they were charged with or identify them. Suspects in Peru can be held without being charged.

In Washington, the State Department on Thursday identified the dead American as Lee Shelby Corzine of Texas. Hilda Delgado, a spokeswoman for the tour company that sold Corzine his tickets, said he was in his mid-30s and had arrived in Peru June 14 for a two-week visit.

Peruvian officials identified the other slain passengers as Ernest Martin, 54, his wife Hildegard and his 19-year old son Stefan, all of West Germany; Teresa Carbonelly de Forgado of Spain; Rosa Beatriz Oliveira da Silva of Brazil and Jose Collantes of Peru.

Shultz says U.S. withdrawing its pledge to New Zealand

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today the United States is withdrawing a 35-year-old pledge to defend New Zealand following failure to resolve a dispute over nuclear weapons with New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange.

After a 30-minute meeting, Lange told reporters his country will stick to a policy that bars visits by foreign ships unless his government is assured there are no nuclear arms aboard and that the vessels are not nuclear-powered.

Shultz said the United States will adhere to its policy of refusing to confirm or deny such weapons are aboard American vessels.

Given the impasse, "We part company as friends, but we part company — as far as the alliance is concerned," Shultz said.

A senior U.S. State Department official, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, described the withdrawal of the U.S. security guarantee as a continuing process and said no formal notification of the rupture in the defense pact has been transmitted to the New Zealanders.

He noted the United States has stopped cooperating with New Zealand in military exercises and the sharing of intelligence.

"The timing is up to us," the official said, describing today's action as putting the United States "a little farther down the line" in a divorce from defense relations with New Zealand.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Changes affect entire family

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: I am one of those lucky people who was recently offered a "separation package" by my company.

After almost 20 years of going to work at the same company, I just can't decide what I should do.

I still have at least 15 more working years ahead of me before I get our last child through college. Any ideas? — M.M.

DEAR M.M.: We would like to share two basic thoughts with you and your family:

First, we would suggest that you begin to think of the situation in terms of "we" rather than "me." This problem and subsequent decision is a family decision as it affects all your family members.

The financial considerations aside, can you imagine what effect it would have on the rest of the family to suddenly have you home and available to provide management advice?

Such a change could be good or bad, but certainly it would be different and people generally need time to adjust to differences.

We suggest sharing this decision with all members of the family, wife, children and parents, if appropriate. We feel the resulting dialogue is critical to preparing the support structure within the family that will be so vital in facing this pending change.

Second, prepare a family budget. The budget should take into account anticipated family income and expenses over a reasonable horizon (at least a year).

You may find it advantageous to consult an experienced financial planner to review your separation package and to describe what alternatives are available.

In creating your budget as a family, include the children. Their factual understanding of the family financial situation may well be hard on your ego, but they are certainly involved as an effect, if nothing else.

The budget can be used as a basis upon which to build future plans for the family — such as the need for your wife to get a job, where reductions in expenses can and should be made and what level of income you might need to generate.

There is no easy answer, but this process will bring the family together to help address a significant family issue. Good luck.

DEAR COPING: I'm confused. I am 40 years old, have worked hard and have a record of accomplishments to show for it.

When my boss terminated me, he told that I was just too expensive to keep on the payroll.

It just makes no sense to me that my hard work and successes appear to have cost me my job. Is that fair? — L.W.C., Midland

DEAR L.W.C.: It is confusing. In a broad sense, you are caught in a basic restructuring of American industry, especially in the white collar segment.

You did not say, but we assume you are associated with the oil and gas industry. This restructuring is not just restricted to our industry, rather it is in response to management concerns about long-term economic conditions created by foreign competition.

Such massive changes in response to competitive pressures often come with a significant human price. The capitalistic system addresses the "most efficient producer" rather than "fairness."

The Protestant Work Ethic that is so embedded in our being and has done so much to build our economic strength unfortunately also tells us that losing a job must somehow be the result of something we have or have not done.

It is distressing that the very successes we enjoyed as a result of our long, hard labors — high salaries and great benefits — now are detriments. This makes blaming ourselves even more contradictory.

We would encourage you to discuss your feelings with your wife, your God and your friends. The paradoxes of Christ's parables seem somehow appropriate with their focus on spiritual rather than economic values.

DEAR COPING: I really hesitated to write you because I have a job. However, I am constantly worried about losing it as well as my about my friends who were let go from here. Is that normal? — J.K.

DEAR J.K.: Yes. Dating back as far as the Great Depression, studies indicate that among engineers, for example, the lowest morale was among those who were still working but expected to be terminated.

In fact, another study found that those engineers anticipating job loss were even lower in morale than many of their terminated colleagues.

More recent studies verify your feelings in that professionals who survived mass terminations of their co-workers experienced high anxiety, were resentful of their employers and exhibited low interest in their work.

The loss of productivity of those remaining is also significant as the topic of conversation is often "How's your resume coming?"

Other evidence points to the lasting effects that job insecurity had upon those who retained their jobs during the recession of 1970-71. Even after the recession ended, anxiety over job security remained.

So, yes, it is normal to experience such concerns, but, at the risk of sounding like a broken record, share those concerns with others. Do not try to handle them in isolation. Real men do eat quiche and do have fears.

Jim May is director and Marti Vermillion is a staff member of the Family Wellness Center.

AT WIT'S END

Parenting not for sissies

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

From time to time I have cautioned young marrieds that raising children is not for sissies.

If it's "adventure" you're looking for, try flying in a lawn chair propelled by balloons. If it's a "desire to dedicate yourself to service," plant rice for the Peace Corps. If it's a "learning experience" you seek, drop in on a bunch of orangutans with a tape recorder.

When you sign on for a child's education, health, entertainment, moral and spiritual upbringing, you are in for some kind of a ride. I could make up all kinds of examples, but I don't have to. Real-life situations do it for me. This story is from a reader in Durham, N.C., and has not been altered one bit.

A 5-year-old girl and her 3-year-old brother David had the "largest and worst-infected adenoids ever seen by the medical profession." The surgery was routine, but in the night, the little girl hemorrhaged and was taken back to OR to tie off the bleeder.

Her mother reacted with near hysteria and had to be given a dose of Demerol and put in a bed in a nearby room.

She had an allergic reaction to the drug and was found wandering the halls crazed in her bare feet and Grandma had to be brought in to keep vigil over the kids.

All were eventually dismissed from the hospital and shortly after the arrival home, the little girl's kindergarten class sent her a clever construction-paper apple which listed the names of the school chums. After the novelty of the gift wore off, the little girl pulled off a strip of red paper, balled it up and stuck it up her nose. Way up.

The taxi ride back to the hospital was fun, but the ER doctor used tweezers a foot long to explore the nasal cavity.

Later that day, a neighbor child came to visit and asked, "How did you do that?" So, removing a like strip of paper, she honked up another wad of paper.

This time Mama removed the foreign object with her cosmetic tweezers. Everyone blamed the little friend because they figured she was getting back, as the little girl had bitten her finger to the bone a few years before.

There is a myth circulated among would-be parents that someday you will laugh at all these things.

The woman from North Carolina who wrote the adenoids story said the incident happened in 1946 ... that's 40 years ago and she's still waiting for the laugh.

Early retirement requires planning

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — For some people, early retirement means more time to enjoy early leisure while others grind on. For others, it can mean deprivation from living on a reduced income and the frustration of empty days.

The difference between the two is often advance planning, says a sociologist who recently reviewed studies of people retiring between ages 55 and 62.

Dr. Lynette Milner, who teaches at the United States International University in San Diego, has found that preparing for retirement — both on a financial and emotional level — "is important whether you retire early by choice or whether you are forced to retire" because of health reasons or company layoffs.

If you are considering an early out, Milner suggests asking yourself these questions:

- "What kind of financial arrangements have I made for my retirement?" Evaluate your savings in the harsh light of potential inflation and rising health care costs for elderly consumers.
- "How important is my job in terms of social contacts and my feeling of status and self-worth?" If a lot of friends are people you work with, she says, "you may need to set up a network of friends outside your job before you retire."
- "Are there things I want to do that I'm not able to do while working full time?" Or, in other words, "are you prepared to fill your time with positive leisure activities?"
- "How will my retirement affect my spouse and children?"

Milner suggests that working part time may be a way to ease into retirement emotionally and financially.

Study rates men's attitudes on crying

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The majority of men still feel it's not right to cry, and often it's the men under the most stress who are most resistant to shedding tears, two University of Illinois sociologists say.

Educated, highly paid professional men are more likely to approve of crying, but often don't have much to cry about, Catherine Ross, who teaches on social aspects of mental health, said.

"Well-educated men with good jobs are more likely to express emotions, but less likely to be sad," Ms. Ross said. "That's why few men cry."

Working-class men, often under greater economic and personal stress, are less likely to approve of crying, she said. "What we found was that at any given level of sadness, very traditional men wouldn't cry."

Non-traditional men, described as those who don't believe in many natural differences between men and women, are more likely to cry, she said.

Ms. Ross and her husband, sociologist John Mirowsky, conducted nationwide telephone surveys of 680 men and 680 women in 1976.

They found 19 percent of the women admitted to crying in the week, but only 3 percent of the men.

DEAR ABBY

Wife finds her marriage no handicap

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to say a few words to all the single women looking for an honest, happy, rewarding relationship with a decent man. Please don't overlook a man with a physical handicap. I'm glad I didn't.

Thirteen years ago I met an interesting man. He was a veteran of the Vietnam War and was paralyzed from the waist down. He was permanently confined to a wheelchair, but could do almost everything an able-bodied man could do. We dated for several years in spite of the mixed feelings of my family, friends and sometimes myself.

Eight years ago we were married, and this man has given me two beautiful children, a wonderful life and a thousand other reasons for being alive.

As far as I'm concerned, my husband is the warmest, kindest, sexiest (yes, sexiest!) man in the world. Since our marriage, he has taught me more about courage, love and values than most people learn in a lifetime.

I am glad I focused on all the positive aspects of our relationship rather than the few minor inconveniences of living with a handicapped person. — LUCKY

DEAR LUCKY: Thank you for a dandy upper. He's lucky, too.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that lately all the lovers on TV think the wider they open their mouths when they kiss, the sexier they are? It never used to be that way.

After many years of watching my favorite "soaps," I've turned to reading instead. It got to be too nauseating to watch those open mouths, chewing on each other's lips and slobbering all over each other. What people want to do in private is their own business, but do they have to do it on TV? It's revolting.

I've tried to ignore it, but yesterday my 5-year-old grandson greeted me with his mouth wide open, and a very wet kiss! When I told him that was not the way to kiss — he should keep his mouth closed — he said, "That's not the way they do it on TV, Grandma." Now what? — YUCK IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR YUCK: To protest anything you see on TV, write to the head of the network, then fire off a letter of complaint to the sponsors of the program, then write the producer. Meanwhile, tell the child that the people on television kiss their grandmothers with their mouths shut.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are planning our wedding and we've hit a snag. He is going to have six ushers and I am going to have six bridesmaids.

All of his best friends are within an inch of being 6 feet tall, with the exception of this one guy he's known since first grade. "Shorty" is 5 foot 5.

We're afraid he will feel embarrassed standing with all those taller guys. Should "Shorty" be asked? — CHRISTMAS WEDDING

DEAR WEDDING: Yes. Let Shorty decide whether he wants to be included. Some short guys are long on self-confidence. He might surprise you.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the wedding season is upon us, please remind your readers of the following: If an invitation is addressed to Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, it does not mean Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and their three children. (Even if the John Smiths live 2,000 miles away, the invitation does not include their children.)

If the invitation is addressed to Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and family, then — and only then — are their children included.

If the invitation is addressed to Ms. Jane Doe, this does not mean that Ms. Doe may bring a date. If the invitation is addressed to Ms. Jane Doe and guest, then she may bring one. — R.O. IN COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married in four months and I'm very excited. Now for the problem: My parents were divorced three years ago after fighting like cats and dogs for 25 years, and they are still very, very bitter — especially my mother.

Anyway, my father is paying for the wedding and his name as well as my mother's will be on the invitation, but he will not allow my mother to attend the reception.

No matter what has happened between the two of them, I love them equally and could not enjoy my wedding reception knowing my mother was sitting at home.

This is my big day, Abby, and I think my parents could bury the hatchet for four hours max. My fiance tells me not to worry — that this will blow over before the wedding — but knowing my parents, it will not. How would you handle this? — BAFFLED BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I would thank my father for offering to pay for the reception, and tell him that there will be no reception unless my mother is invited. Period.

CONFIDENTIAL TO IN DOUBT IN NEW BRITAIN, CONN.: You are wise to have your doubts. The person who is constantly talking about what a super lover he is, is probably doing what he does best. Talking.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Life planning financially important

Associated Press

Adult Americans are encouraged from an early age to engage in estate planning, sometimes described as "planning for death."

But too often neglected is a parallel need to plan for life, say legal consultants specializing in problems of the elderly.

"Life planning" is the need for mature adults to plan for their own lives as the years go by, when they may be incapacitated by chronic or mental illness and are unable to handle their own affairs, according to New York attorneys Peter Strauss and Robert Wolf.

Without such planning, "serious consequences could occur," the law partners warn. "Family members may be unable to utilize the incapacitated person's funds to provide needed medical care and services.

"Furthermore, the state can interfere in the patient's care and management in the event of incapacity by imposing a court-appointed conservator or committee to manage the patient's affairs, declaring the incapacitated person a judicial incompetent."

And finally, they point out, few people planning their estate take into account the enormous expense of nursing home care which can dissipate the estates of all but the wealthiest of families.

In the New York area, for example, nursing homes commonly cost more than $40,000 a year.

But, the attorneys say, steps can be taken easily to plan for the management of financial affairs in the event of incapacity and avoid such intervention by the state.

Options available to avoid court-directed incompetency or conservatorship proceedings include the delegating of authority — called power of attorney — to someone to act in your behalf.

ASK DR. RUTH

Togetherness can be too much

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. When we moved in together, sex flew out the window. Up to then, great. Maybe I wouldn't mind now and then, but my boyfriend gratifies himself regularly and pores over skin magazines all the time. I think I'm competing with those more-than-naked babes in the pictures — and losing, because he nearly always turns down my advances.

A. Hey! Why do you stay with a man like that? If he were to read and study a sexually specific magazine now and then, or even more often than that, that would be one thing. But if he continuously rejects you, what's in it for you? Does he pay the rent? That's not enough.

I don't say to break off with him, unless you have already decided to do that, for more than one good reason. But either you or he should find another place to live. You should live apart, because you have drifted into the living-together doldrums. That happens so often when a turned-on couple begin to share the toothbrush rack and all the rest.

Q. All last summer this girl and I were lifeguards at the town beach. We're going to be again. We are real friends and spend time together in the evening, but I would like to touch and kiss her and I don't know how to start.

A. Why not tell her that? Maybe she will have some good ideas on that subject. Before you speak to her — and you really should, because this has gone on long enough — get two things firmly in your mind. First, she has really shown she likes you for a long time, so it is likely that she would like to touch and kiss you, too.

Second, you will have to take a risk. She may say no, she doesn't want that kind of attention from you. Then you can say that you want to stay friends, because you really are friends. It's just that you heard that sometimes friends drift into being more than that. It doesn't have to hit like lightning. Write and tell me what happens.

Q. I love this guy so much, so much I will probably do what he wants. But I don't know how to deal with it. He says he wants to go with other women just to use them, but he will only love me and he doesn't want me with other guys. Maybe he has to do this because one woman just isn't enough for him.

A. How do you deal with it? You dump it, because if he tells you he loves you and just uses the others, what do you think he tells the others? The same thing he tells you.

And even if you believe him, don't agree. If you really love him, give it a good try, say he is your sky and earth, sun and moon, he fulfills all your dreams — but he has to be yours alone or all bets are off. This involves the risk that he may walk out. For a while, at least. But what he says he wants is impossible.

If he had said you both should go around with other people to be sure you are really the best for each other, you might try that. But no, this is another kind of guy, and I think you'll get rid of him in the end.

Q. I have a full-time job, go to community college nights and have an active sex life with my boyfriend. Which is great, but it makes an 18-hour day. He thinks love means never saying no. I'm supposed to be available whenever he wants me. He says a relationship is kaput when the woman starts being too tired or having headaches. Isn't there really such a thing as being too tired? He's ready to break up over this.

A. You should take him up on this kind offer to break up before you have a breakdown. Even buses get a rest on weekends. Why don't you rest up a week or so and then look around for a guy who has heard of a day's work and term papers that have to be finished overnight? Or just wait for a lucky guy to find you. You sound like a real prize.

Study looks at female wages

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The wives of men with little or no income tend to bring home more money than women whose husbands earn somewhat more — but the women with the best paying jobs are those married to the most affluent spouses, according to a new Census study.

Overall, 42 percent of American families have two wage earners, with the wives of men in the highest and lowest income brackets earning more than those married to husbands in between.

According to the study of 1984 income, the traditional one-earner family now accounts for only 29 percent of families, followed by 15 percent with no one working; 10 percent with three wage-earners, and 4 percent with four or more people bringing home money.

Census officials have suggested that higher educational levels of both spouses could help account for the higher incomes of women married to higher income men.

At the other end of the scale, the wives of lower-income husbands may be responding to economic necessity in bringing home more money than wives of middle-income men, Bureau statisticians said.

NATIONALLY, THE report said, median family income increased faster than inflation for the second year in a row in 1984. It climbed 7.1 percent to $26,430, while the Consumer Price Index went up 4.3 percent from 1983 to 1984.

"Increased employment and higher real earnings levels were important factors that helped boost real median family income," the study said.

"The proportion of families with a householder working year-round, full-time rose from 55 percent to 57 percent, and the proportion of families with two or more earners also increased slightly from 55 percent to 56 percent," the Bureau reported. "Two-earner families now account for about 42 percent of all families."

The study found that working wives had median incomes of $9,437 in 1984. Median income means half made less than that amount and half earned more.

The highest-income group of women, with a median of $10,727, were wives of men earning between $35,000 and $50,000.

Wives with the lowest median income — $5,785 — had husbands in the $5,000 to $6,000 income bracket.

But women with husbands who had no earnings at all had median incomes of $8,859, and wives of husbands in the levels of under $5,000 recorded median incomes in the $6,000 to $7,000 range.

ONLY IN the range of husbands earning more than $10,000 do wives' incomes climb back above $8,000, the report shows.

Economic pressure to maintain a standard of living was cited as a likely reason for wives earning more than their low-income husbands by Edward J. Welniak of the Census Bureau, author of the study.

To maintain a decent standard of living someone needs to bring in income, and for families with low-income husbands there may be a need for a kind of reversal of traditional roles, he said.

Suzanne Bianchi of the Bureau, who has studied wives who earn more than their husbands, said another possibility may relate to whether the wives are working full or part-time.

For the lowest-income husbands, the wives may have to work full-time to maintain family income, while women whose husbands earn somewhat more may be able to work only part-time. That is especially true if they tend to have children at home, she added.

SO ACTUALLY, the wage rates of wives of middle income men may not be less, but their participation in the labor supply differs, she said.

At the lowest end of the scale, she added, many husbands may be out of work, while among the highest income group, higher educational levels tend to produce women who earn close to or more than their husbands.

Another possibility, she said, might be a difference in ages among the differing groups of women.

Wives of the men with the lowest income might be very young, and thus without children to keep them home some of the time, or might be older and married to men who are retired, she commented.

In the middle income groups, on the other hand, women could be dealing with small children at home, or just returning to the labor force after raising families.

"It's hard to make a judgment without knowing the characteristics of these women. ... I would question whether there are important age differences between the groups of women, and differences in hours worked each week," she concluded.

Here is a breakdown of the median income of wives in 1984 compared with the earnings of their husbands:

HUSBAND	WIFE
None	$8,859
Under $2,000	$7,143
$2,000-$2,999	$7,732

Involvement in feminist issues can possibly hinder being hired

DALLAS (UPI) — Corporations in general are interested in hiring women for professional positions but seem reluctant to employ those whose resumes include information on involvement in feminist issues, research indicates.

The research, by Michael Hitt, dean of the school of management at Texas A&M University in College Station, and Dr. William Zikmund of Oklahoma State University, concerned two women business graduate students at Oklahoma State.

One student wrote her thesis on "Women and Job Discrimination: Strategies for Change" and the other on "Sex Discrimination Practices in Industry."

The professors conducted their study in 1982-83 but the results were published only recently.

Hitt said he and Zikmund randomly selected 200 firms from 750 that had advertised in the college placement manual for marketing positions needing persons with MBA degrees but no technical qualification.

Four different types of resumes were developed for the two women after being reviewed by a panel of judges to ensure both had the same grade point average, were interested in marketing positions, had similar background and were in the same age group.

The first set of resumes listed the women's names using only their initials and also their thesis topics; the second used the initials but did not include the thesis topics; the third listed their full names identifying them as females as well as their thesis topics, and the fourth used their full names but made no mention of their theses.

The resumes were mailed to the sample firms with a cover letter that corresponded with the style of names used in the resumes.

"Most of the firms selected were in the Fortune 1,000. We also made sure the firms were spread throughout the country to avoid regional bias," Hitt said. "We made no other changes in the resumes. It is not unsual for men to use their initials although women seldom do that. Also more and more colleges are doing away with the thesis and thus not listing it was not abnormal."

Hitt said in monitoring the firms' response, he and Zikmund looked at the number of replies and positive responses among those replies.

"We were conservative in determining the positive response. We used only those that offered opportunities for an interview," he said.

Hitt said the applications which carried the women's full names but no thesis title drew the fewest number of replies but at the same drew the largest number of positive responses. The results in the other categories were more or less equal.

"They (the firms) seemed to respond well to women but only in cases where there was no evidence showing the women were interested in issues related to discrimination," he said. "It is possible they want to hire women who wouldn't give them problems. It is also possible they may not want to hire men with similar orientation but I cannot definitely say that."

Couple honor life together

By JOHN PLATERO

LAUDERDALE LAKES, Fla. (AP) — Ben and Gussie Schwartz have lived a love story — a touching romance that's enriched their marriage of 70 years.

Born in Poland 25 miles apart, they came to the United States as children, met at a dance in New York City, fell in love and married when they were only 14 years old.

"I love her," says Ben simply. "I couldn't live without her."

Across the living room of their Lauderhill Oaks apartment, Gussie smiles and says, "I need him."

To share their love affair is a warming experience. Both are effervescent, energetic and friendly. Ben dominates the conversation while Gussie's sense of humor and interjected quips reflect a youthful attitude and a zest for life.

The two were born in 1901 in southcentral Poland — Ben in Czestochowa and Gussie three towns away in Zawiercie. She emigrated to New York City, where her parents later ran a bakery in the basement of a Harlem walkup.

Ben, following a strong desire to join two older brothers already in New York, sneaked across the border into Germany and got a job as a galley worker aboard the steamship Potsdam headed for that city. He was 12 years old.

Born with a talent and love for dancing, he performed for the ship's passengers during the Atlantic crossing.

"The people threw me money and I gave it to the sailors to buy beer," he says.

When the vessel docked in New York, the grateful crew located one of Ben's brothers, Abe, who took him home — to the building where Gussie lived.

However, Ben didn't see Gussie until a short time later when Abe, a bakers' union organizer at the time, took him to a union affair where Ben was to perform a Russian dance.

"I looked across the dance hall," says Ben, his voice softening as he goes back in time. "There was standing the most beautiful girl, her hair hanging down to her knees. I went to her and said, 'I love you.' "

Gussie didn't pay much attention to Ben, even though they lived in the same building.

"I was a showoff," admits Ben, recalling how he would perform headstands on his bicycle whenever he saw Gussie looking out the window.

Ben's persistence won out. Finally, a letter he wrote Gussie in which he threatened suicide if she wouldn't marry him did the trick. The two teen-agers went to city hall to get a marriage license. Too young, said officials, sending them sadly home.

Another obstacle to their marriage was Gussie's father, in part because Ben's salary at an embroidery factory was small. Ben used trickery to overcome that.

"I got my boss to pay me two weeks in one and when I showed him how much I made, he approved," says Ben.

With permission, the two went to Jersey City, N.J., obtained their license and were married April 20, 1916. Both were 14.

The Schwartzes had two children, a daughter and a son. In 1925, they moved to Miami, where Ben established a painting contracting business. He retired eight years ago when their daughter died. Broward County has been their home for 16 years.

Ben's secret for longevity in marriage is a single word: love.

Paper boy retires at 70

SHADY GROVE, Pa. (AP) — A tradition that lasted more than a half century ended recently when Eugene "Gene" Lohman delivered his last Record Herald in the small community of Shady Grove, several miles west of Waynesboro, Pa.

Clad in denims, tennis shoes and a First National Bank T-shirt, Lohman walked his newspaper route just as he has for the past 61 years. Only this time, it was different; he was giving advice and instructions to 14-year-old Mandi Stevens on all his tricks of the trade.

Miss Stevens has taken over Lohman's route, delivering The Record Herald to the 75 customers in this small, friendly community.

All of the residents agree that she has big shoes to fill.

Lohman's last day as a carrier was a sad one for the local residents, who consider the 70-year-old carrier "part of the family."

Dubbed "Mayor of Shady Grove," Lohman has delivered newspapers through rain and sunshine and, according to one Shady Grove resident, only missed delivering one time — when his mother died in 1952.

Lohman said he had to give up his route, his lifelong love, for his sister, who "can't get around very good."

He carried Shady Grove's newspapers up until the day he and his sister, Beulah "Bootsie" Lohman, moved to Wynbrier Retirement Home, a private home in Wayne Heights, just a few miles from Shady Grove.

Beulah and Gene are both losing their hearing and their sister, Mrs. Sarah Beaver, feared he could be struck by a car on his route. So she helped them with the move to Wynbrier.

"It will be difficult. He's never lived anywhere but here. It will be hard for him," says Jo Ann Kohler, an employee of the local bank where Lohman frequently stopped to visit his friends who work there.

She and other employees of the First National Bank of Greencastle's Shady Grove Branch have "adopted and spoiled" Lohman. Included in the honorary mayor's 70th birthday celebration at the bank on Oct. 11, 1985, was a cake, balloons and gifts.

Youth charged in death of Strait's daughter

SAN MARCOS (AP) — An 18-year-old youth has been arraigned on a charge of criminally negligent homicide following a one-car crash that killed the daughter of country-Western singer George Strait.

Jenifer Strait, 13, died Wednesday night when the auto carrying four teen-agers overturned near her family's home, authorities said Thursday.

Justice of the Peace Macel Sullivan said the driver, George Wilson Allen of Staples, Texas, was arraigned before her on the Class A misdemeanor charge and released on a $2,000 personal recognizance bond.

Allen is scheduled to appear before County Judge H. Howard Warner on July 24, she said.

Authorities said Miss Strait, an eighth-grade student in San Marcos public schools, was killed when the auto in which she was riding rolled over while attempting a left turn.

Strait, who lives in the city about 30 miles south of Austin, went to the accident site after being notified of the crash, a family friend said.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said the driver wasn't injured in the accident.

Two other passengers — William Allen McDonald, 16, and Joseph Wiley Robbins, 17, both of San Marcos — suffered minor injuries and were treated at a San Marcos hospital, Cox said.

According to DPS reports, the car was traveling on a county road in Hays County when the accident occurred. DPS spokesman David Wells said the car turned over and landed on its roof in a ditch after the driver failed to stop at a stop sign.

Miss Strait was riding in the front passenger seat and was not wearing a seat belt, Wells said.

State trooper Anthony Wolpman said the teen-agers apparently were returning from a party when the accident occurred. He said they were leaving a subdivision and pulling onto the county road when the auto went through the stop sign.

FarmAid like loading 'frogs into wheelbarrow'

AUSTIN (AP) — Jim Hightower likens producing the FarmAid II concert to loading bull frogs into a wheelbarrow, but "leap frog" might be more accurate.

More problems with liability insurance have forced the benefit concert to switch sites for the second time in two weeks, this time to a horse-training facility east of the city, organizers said Thursday.

"I said the other day that nailing down all the business details of the FarmAid II concert was kind of like loading bull frogs into a wheelbarrow," state Agriculture Commissioner Hightower said.

"We finally got the toads loaded up, but to make FarmAid II work, we've had to move a little further down the road to Manor Farm country," he added.

The day-long July 4 concert to benefit the nation's farmers was originally scheduled for the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium, but prohibitive liability insurance costs forced promoters to move it last week to South Park.

That site six miles south of the city is where country singer Willie Nelson, who organized the FarmAid concert, has held his Fourth of July picnic-concerts in the past.

"By moving to Manor Downs, FarmAid II will save a ton on insurance," said Hightower, whose department is backing the production. "The insurance companies were charging so much at the other location that it would consume $6 out of every ($20) ticket.

"But by using the policy Manor Downs had in place, it will cost just $1 of every ticket," he added. "That's a bonus of $5 for every ticket that FarmAid can send to provide services to hard-strapped farmers instead of big insurance conglomerates."

Manor Downs, a horse-training facility 10 miles east of the city on Highway 290, can easily accommodate 40,000 people and has better facilities than the South Park site, FarmAid II spokeswoman Margaret Wade said.

> "We're still going to have FarmAid II. It's too important an issue to stop now."
>
> — Willie Nelson

"We're still going to have FarmAid II," Nelson said. "It's too important an issue to stop now. FarmAid could not make a reasonable deal with South Park Meadows. So we've moved to Manor Downs."

Nelson added that "our sponsors, the Texas Department of Agriculture, and the entire city of Austin have proved that this country will not give up on the farmers, and neither will I."

Meanwhile, organizers said Thursday that the Beach Boys have been added to the list of some 75 performers scheduled to appear at the concert.

Karen Rappaport of the Los Angeles public relations firm Rogers and Cowan said the Beach Boys' early morning FarmAid performance would be one of two scheduled for that day.

Also, Dr. Red Duke, known nationally for his folksy television health reports from the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston, has agreed to Nelson's request to be medical director for the concert.

Duke, 57, a veteran of several Willie Nelson Fourth of July Picnics, said he will be on hand for FarmAid II to supervise medical services and "try to be as helpful as I can."
