New Policy Announced By Supt. C. J. Duncan; Starts Next Fall

PLAN TO SAVE MONEY

List Of Teachers Released; Few Changes Made In Faculty

Teachers in the Burk Burnett public school will receive their salary in 12 monthly payments instead of the nine payments used at the present time. The new policy was voted by members of the Burk Burnett school board last Thursday night, and the faculty for next year was selected by the trustees.

Previously announcement had been made about the selection of the heads of five departments, including C. J. Duncan, superintendent of school and principal of high school; Lee Clifton, principal of the grade schools; Volney Hill and Polk Robison coaches of football and basket ball; M. S. Dean, teacher of vocational agriculture.

The new pay policy was adopted for two specific reasons. Teachers leaving during the year will receive only their portion of salary earned on per month basis up to that time. Thus a greater loyalty of teacher group is expected in changes during the year. The school payments received from the state are made on a monthly basis according to Mr. Duncan, and these payments make it necessary to borrow to pay the teachers during the year. This saving will amount to several hundred dollars.

The teachers selected for next year are as follows:

In the grade school the instructors will be Ethyl Virginia Allen, Annie Laura Billingslea, Mrs. E. L. Blum, Mildred Corley, Pauline Cunningham, Sadie Fleming, Janis Franke, Emma Jane Gray, Helen Ingle, Katherine Lasseter, Pauline Miller, Mary McGinnis, Mildred Owen, Morris Strong, W. B. Teel, Pattie Thompson, Grace Warman, and Elizabeth West.

The high school instructors will be Ella Billingslea, Thelma Dunaway, John Farr, Juanita Ford, office; Lorene Goodman, Laura Fay Herring, Helen January, Jesse Johnson, Paschall Kimbrew, Alice Morgan, Alfred Pierce, Carl Pommerening, Margaret Tanner, Gladys Westbrook, Scott Williamson, Kathryn Wynn. In the colored school Mrs. L. C. Lee will continue to teach.

Ben Chapman wants Freddie Singleton as his roommate on the Washington baseball club. They are old high school buddies.

The Hindenburg sinks into a flaming inferno after explosion which cost 36 lives at Lakehurst, N. J.

ZEP CRASH KILLS 36 AT LAKEHURST

20 Passengers, 44 of Crew Survive As Hindenburg Explodes.

THIRTY-SIX persons were killed and many injured as a series of explosions shattered and burned the German dirigible air liner Hindenburg when she attempted to moor at Lakehurst, N. J., at the end of her first trans-Atlantic crossing of the season. The catastrophe began with an explosion of the highly inflammable hydrogen gas with which the ship was filled, in one of the rear gas cells.

There were 97 on board. Forty-four of the crew of 61 escaped with their lives and 20 of the 36 passengers survived. One member of the ground crew died of injuries received as he was trying to aid in bringing the great silver liner to earth.

The morning after the disaster smoke was still curling from the mangled skeleton of what had once been the world's largest flying vessel. There were still a few bodies unidentified or unaccounted for. In a section of the crew's quarters in the hangar which had hastily been transformed into a morgue, a small group of men and women filed past the charred remains of 26 of the victims in an attempt to identify them. Other detachments of sailors guarded all approaches to the wreck of the airship and all information was refused.

Inquiries Under Way
Three inquiries into the tragedy were to get under way. Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper was expected to be on hand to take charge of an investigation by the bureau of air commerce. Rear Admiral A. B. Cook, chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the United States navy, arrived to head a separate naval inquiry. Hans Luther, German ambassador to the United States, flew in and immediately went into conference with officials of the American Zeppelin company.

All this official activity, however, attracted little notice, for the mind of everyone is still concerned with the horror of the tragedy and in the ears of those who witnessed it still echo the screams of the victims as men were blown through the heavy glass window of the ship's observation room.

What caused the explosion probably never will be known to a certainty. And as to exactly what happened—the beginning and the end of the event were so closely merged together that even here the versions vary.

Even Capt. Ernst Lehmann, veteran of ten successful round trips to the ill-fated Hindenburg, could only mumble, as he fell into the arms of an American friend: "I don't understand. . . I don't understand."

The following, however, is the story as related by E. W. Kirkpatrick, one of the ground crew who was standing directly beneath the huge silver bag when it burst into flames.

Describes Liner's Arrival
The Zeppelin was scheduled to have been moored at 6 p. m. There were several hundred persons on the edge of the large landing field waiting to cheer the successful end of her first trip across the Atlantic this year. Among them were several holding tickets for the return journey, for after a quick refueling and inspection the Hindenburg was to have started back at midnight.

It was first seen over the field at 4:12 p. m. (eastern daylight time) after making its customary cruise over New York. There was some electrical disturbance and a steady rain was falling. The lightning, however, was not considered by those on the ground as sufficient to be dangerous. Nevertheless the Hindenburg circled around the field and disappeared. More than an hour later its engines were again heard, but the ship itself was out of sight because of the rain. It did not appear again until about five minutes after seven, flying low and passing to the northwest. Just at this time, it was explained, there was a shift of the wind from the south-southwest to southeast, which made it necessary for the Zeppelin to come down to the field from the northwest. After maneuvering for 15 minutes it swung low over the field at an altitude of from 150 to 200 feet and at 7:20 the mooring lines were dropped over the side.

Two hundred men of the ground crew rushed in to grab the lines and start the 100-yard pull to the mooring mast. It was not two minutes later that there came an explosion from the stern of the ship, followed almost instantly by another, and another, forward.

Almost immediately, several witnesses declared, a blinding sheet of flame enveloped the entire ship.

Confused Nightmare.
So quickly did it happen that the covering was entirely burned off and the bare skeleton of the ship's duraluminum ribs was visible behind the sputtering flame and smoke before it touched the ground.

What happened next is just a confused nightmare to those who watched it. Miraculous though it seems, those who were literally blown from the ship can thank the force of the explosion for saving their lives. The ship by that time was not far from the ground.

There was a rush toward the scene then, as though everyone was drawn by an invisible magnet. Men from the quartermaster corps who had been standing by ran for a ship. Three trucks, a four-seater airplane bus and several private cars were driven quickly across the field.

Men jumped to the ground, tearing their way through the bursting flames, and were dragged to safety. The heat from the flaming ship was so intense, however, that rescue work was prevented for several minutes.

All those minutes are nothing but the reaction of confused impression by those who were there. And probably scores of acts of heroism will go unrecorded and unpraised—both on the part of rescuers on the ground and of the passengers.

Rosendahl Acts Quickly.
This chaos, however, did not last long. Comdr. C. E. Rosendahl, in charge of the naval airport, was standing beneath the spreading stations of the mooring mast. It did not take long for him to galvanize into action. A cordon of men was thrown around the burning mass to keep back the crowd. Other men were dispatched to rush through calls for nurses and doctors and ambulances from surrounding towns and villages. Meanwhile the injured were rushed to the emergency hospital on the field and given first aid for their burns.

"I was standing directly beneath the ship when the first explosion came," Kirkpatrick said. "All of us in the ground crew were reaching for the ropes and were ready to haul her across the field. With that first explosion—it was like a huge puff of igniting gas that sometimes happens when you open a furnace door—we all ran back. From there I turned and saw the fire leap out. Another explosion came further forward. By that time the whole ship was in flames. It didn't come to the ground with a crash, though. It just seemed to sink down easily, like a floating fire balloon on the Fourth of July. I don't even remember hearing any crash even when it hit, though I suppose there was one."

Mrs. Margaret Unger of Maywood, N. J., was one of those waiting to make the return voyage on the Hindenburg. "It was the most horrible thing I ever saw in my life," she said, still white and trembling from her experience "I wanted to look away but I couldn't. I didn't hear any explosion because I was too far away. But I saw the ship start to sink, and then a huge burst of flames. It seemed to sweep over the airship all at once, and I saw three, maybe more, exploded out of the windows."

Ship Out of Control.
Ames Camp of Lakewood, N. J., another witness, said the ship "appeared to yaw as she dropped her mooring lines. It swung almost a full half circle and seemed to be extremely hard to manage. "Then came the flash and I didn't wait to see any more. I ran toward the ship with the rest of them."

Although the Zeppelin continued to burn for several hours and was still smoldering at daylight, it took only a matter of seconds to render it a skeleton of wreckage. Late arrivals among the army of newspaper men, photographers and radio men found the roads blocked with cars and had to race back to Newark and return by plane.

Search for bodies of the victims continued by the light of the huge navy field floodlights. Work was later postponed until daylight, partly because the metal embers were still too hot to allow the searchers to make any progress.

Speculate on Cause.
There was much speculation as to what caused the explosion. Naval experts offered a possible explanation that it might have been caused by the grounding of wet ground lines, causing a spark which ignited "free gas."

F. W. Von Meister, vice president of the American Zeppelin company, offered two theories—the first that it had been caused by an electric current induced by static; the second that the gas was set off by sparks from the exhaust when the engine was throttled down for a landing. This he said, seemed plausible, as the ship was valving gas gently as she came on the field, tossing over ballast to reduce her altitude.

"Ordinarily," he said, "she would have been expected to be perfectly safe the moment she dropped her lines."

Report by Rosendahl.
Commander Rosendahl forwarded a complete report both to the commandant of the fourth naval district in Philadelphia, his immediate superior, and to headquarters of the Navy department in Washington. His explanation of what happened tallied in the main with that of official witnesses. According to his report, however, it was four minutes after the giant ship had made contact with the ground that the flames burst out.

"Four minutes later," he states, "fire broke out aft, working progressively forward. The ship settled to the ground tail first and was completely on fire by the time the ground was reached. The fire burned for several hours and was finally extinguished by chemicals."

"Out of 97 on board, 64 escaped alive, including 44 of the crew of 61 and 20 of the 36 passengers. Two of the 20 passengers, however, are seriously injured. Twenty-six bodies have been recovered, of which nine are still unidentified."

GEORGE VI, ELIZABETH CROWNED

Five Million Voices Cry, "God Save the King!" as Guns Boom Glad Tidings From Historic Tower of London.

London, England.—"God save the King!"

As the great guns of the Tower of London boomed forth the news that the Archbishop of Canterbury had placed the weighty Crown of St. Edward, the Crown of England, upon the head of George VI, the cry came forth in a mighty swell from five million throats as from the throat of one man.

This was the climax of the greatest show on earth, a show for which a generous share of the throng which lined the six and one-half miles of the procession route had waited without moving from their places through the dampness of a London spring night and, indeed, through part of the preceding day.

Those of the King's subjects who had not been able to afford $2 to $250 for a seat that would assure them a glimpse of their new monarch on his proudest day began marking off space along the curb on the afternoon of May 11. Smart alecks who thought they could put off their vigil until sunrise of Coronation Day were doomed to stretch their necks an inch or two in twelve hours of straining to see over several rows of earlier arrivals.

"A Quiet Empire."

It was a heavy day of work at the end of many back-breaking weeks of preparation for the 9,000 gentlemen and ladies of the peerage whose rank and purse entitled them to sit for an entire day in 10 to 25 pounds of clothing per capita, on a hard seat 19 inches wide without ever moving. But it was a magnificent show.

"The Lord give you fruitful lands and healthful seasons," said the archbishop in the benediction which followed the crowning of the King, "victorious fleets and armies, and a quiet Empire. . ."

No one in Britain could deny that in a time of world-wide unrest, a time of urgent necessity for imperial strength and unity, the political expediency of "a quiet Empire" prompted the government to make of this the most splendid coronation in all history. The government expense in the crowning of George VI has been estimated to be double that in the coronation of his father 26 years ago; its backing of the dazzling pageantry required expenditures of $2,620,000 of public funds, not counting an estimated $500,000 spent by the royal household in entertaining royal and foreign guests.

In the vast coronation pageant the government hoped to lend new emphasis to that sentiment which is the real bond holding the empire together, and which is symbolized by the crown and the man who wears it. There is still an undercurrent of dissatisfaction over the abdication of Edward VIII. The new King and Queen must be popularized to the fullest possible extent. The coronation was an opportunity to accomplish this, and the government could afford to let none of it slip past.

The show and the crowd lived up to all advance billing. It was estimated that there were 300,000 visitors who had to cross the ocean. All London's 12,000 hotel rooms were sold out. Souvenir manufacturers and vendors did the expected land office business. The drink bill for toasting the new King was guesstimated at $10,000,000.

Queen Goes First.
Pomp and regal solemnity were byword of the day from the time the King and Queen boarded the coronation coach at Buckingham Palace in mid-morning. Eight magnificent cream-colored horses drew the ancient four-ton vehicle down the streets it had traversed since 1761, when it was built for Queen Anne. In its heavily ornate gold and jewels it carried the spectators back through the pages of history to those days before the American colonies had revolted and prevented the British Empire from including the lion's share of North America.

The ancient coach, a tradition at coronations, bore the royal couple down the mall to the Abbey, where the Queen's procession left the King to enter first, so that she could stand and wait for him by the chairs of state, or recognition chairs, in front of the royal box where the other members of the royal family were seated.

Peers and peeresses were in their places before the central figures of the coronation drama arrived. And before them the real martyrs had assumed their positions. These were the eight newspaper photographers the government had permitted to be present.

Abhorring the thought of flash bulbs marring the solemnity of such an occasion, but still anxious that pictures be taken, officials hit upon a solution. They provided camouflaged quarters for camera men in false pillars and other positions which blended into the background of the Abbey. Narrow slits in the walls of these refuges enabled the cameras to peer out at the spectacle. But the poor "photogs!" They had to be "set up" before anyone entered the Abbey and maintain their cramped positions for eight or nine hours. They were not permitted to withdraw until everyone else had left.

King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, officially crowned in one of history's most spectacular and colorful coronations.

History's Greatest Gem Display.

A general color scheme of blue and gold with rich, soft velvet hangings made a brilliant background for the cast and for the spectators in their gorgeous uniforms and gowns. Peeresses wore robes of crimson velvet, trimmed in ermine, unless they happened to be of royal blood, in which event they were required to don the purple velvet of royalty. The court gowns worn underneath were of white, cream, silver or gold. Fashion experts estimated that the most economical of them cost at least $1,200. Uniforms of the men started at about $600 and went up from there.

This did not, of course, include the jewelry of the coronets. The cheapest coronet could hardly have been purchased for less than $100. The total of all the rings, bracelets, necklaces, etc., worn by the 9,000 present must have run into the millions, and was probably the most costly and magnificent display of ward, with which English kings are invested. Then came more dignitaries, and the King's sceptre with the dove symbolic of mercy and equity; the King's gold and diamond orb, surmounted by the Christian cross; the crown of St. Edward, the patent and the chalice and the Bible.

Then entered George VI in the crimson robes of state, to join his Queen, and march through the choir and up the stairs to the theatre. Passing the thrones, they then knelt at the faldstools before the recognition chairs to offer prayers. Next they proceeded about the Abbey to all four sides before the view of the assemblage. The King went to his chair and once more faced each side of the Abbey as the Archbishop, in loud tones, announced him.

After the regalia had been brought and placed by the dean of Westminster upon the altar, the Archbishop asked the King, according to ritual, "Sire, is your Majesty willing to take the oath?" and the King answered, "I am willing." He gave his oath to govern the peoples of the British Isles and the Empire according to their laws and customs; to maintain the profession of the Gospel and the Church of England. After he had kissed the Bible and signed the oath, the King repeated and subscribed to the declaration required by parliament and, with the assemblage, prepared for the communion service.

Following this lengthy service, the King, having first removed the cap and robes of state, ascended to the throne of St. Edward, the ancient chair which contains beneath its seat the historic Stone of Scone upon which the kings of Scotland sat as they were crowned a thousand years ago. After a silken pall had been put over the King, the Archbishop anointed him upon the hands, breast and face with the holy oil, and he was ready to be presented with the spurs and the sword.

King Receives His Crown.

These given, George VI removed the pall and was clothed for the first time in the royal robe of purple. The orb and cross were brought from the altar by the Dean of Westminster and placed in the King's hands by the Archbishop. He was next invested with the ring and the sceptres.

Then as the King bowed his head the Dean of Westminster brought the Crown of St. Edward, and the Archbishop, receiving it from him, held it but momentarily upon the head of the King (its weight is terrific).

This was the signal for the trumpets and the guns in the Tower of London, for the peers and peeresses to cry "God save the King!" and for the millions who, along the procession line outside, had been waiting for that moment to toss their hats in the air and cry likewise, "God save the King!" The peers were now allowed to put on their coronets.

There followed more religious ceremonies of great length and solemnity, and then the coronation of the Queen, following which the peeresses cried, "God save the Queen!" and donned their coronets.

Still more long hours of ceremony. Then, in the early evening the King's coach at last passed once more down the procession route, and the millions who had waited all day for the sight went home happy.

Crisey To Present Burk At Fiesta Show

of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Crisey Selected As Ideal Girl In Contest

COMPETE MAY 22

Barbara Crisey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Crisey, will represent this town at the Ft. Worth Fiesta of May 22. Miss Crisey is a very perfect and beautiful young lady.

She will enter the competition as representative of Burk and the Famous Crisey girls. In the Fiesta of this city, Miss Crisey will be the most beautiful girl representative of the communities entering the stage show there the best girl in the state will appear in the pre-cutting, sewing and quill work.

Miss Faye Cotton, Burk, was selected to play a part in a movie. So the opportunity at Fort Worth may be greater achievement in the world.

representative will receive an expense trip to the show, and will have the honor of being a guest of the hostess.

Thrills at random—Marshall Teal gave 500 Burk Burnett fans the thrill of the season when the Stamford team was all set to stop Toll, and Teal twisted through for nine yards and a touchdown.

And Doc Sims 97 yard return against Seymour was the climax of a great season for a great team three years ago. Avis Finch dashed into the line against Crowell last year and tossed a perfect lateral to McKown.

That lateral of Finch's was the turning point of the game. Those are the most recent. Many old timers could recall others.

About this year's team many things could be said. The most interesting observation will be the performance of the rookies. The regulars have received much attention. They were expected to be good. Last year they proved their ability in carrying the team to the regional championship contest.

Those present were: Mesdames George Kimball, Carl Morrison, R. P. Reagan, J. M. Pogue, Chall Hall, F. A. Hill, R. C. Tevis, Volney Hill, A. B. Sandler, and R. W. Wallace.

Spring Is Here

Punts And Passes

There has been a debate around Burk Burnett this year about whether or not our present team is as good as some of the teams that have performed for the high school in the past.

This argument waxes hot when fans and ex-gather for sessions of hot air, and next Monday night there will be a slight comparison made between the teams of the past and present when the Exes and the 1937 edition of the Bulldog team meets in the annual spring clash between the two groups.

Of course this can't be an absolute comparison. The former stars have gained in experience and weight, and many are not in condition to play at their best.

The youngsters of the present squad are enthusiastic and full of pep, but the old head work of the veteran might make their enthusiasm look foolish.

On the other hand the good condition of the spring training squad might cause exes to look like a weather beaten lunk before the game is over.

Ghosts will walk Monday night when the stars of yesterday don the moleskins again to recall some memories for the fans of thrills that kept them crazy in the heat of the conference competition.

What the men that played such an important part in those games will do in the Monday trial is a matter of much speculation. But it will be interesting and worth watching for both the old and new fans.

Thrills at random—Marshall Teal gave 500 Burk Burnett fans the thrill of the season when the Stamford team was all set to stop Toll, and Teal twisted through for nine yards and a touchdown.

And Doc Sims 97 yard return against Seymour was the climax of a great season for a great team three years ago.

Avis Finch dashed into the line against Crowell last year and tossed a perfect lateral to McKown.

That lateral of Finch's was the turning point of the game. Those are the most recent. Many old timers could recall others.

About this year's team many things could be said. The most interesting observation will be the performance of the rookies.

The regulars have received much attention. They were expected to be good. Last year they proved their ability in carrying the team to the regional championship contest.

Those present were: Mesdames George Kimball, Carl Morrison, R. P. Reagan, J. M. Pogue, Chall Hall, F. A. Hill, R. C. Tevis, Volney Hill, A. B. Sandler, and R. W. Wallace.

Negroes Shoot At Each Other Five Times; No Hits

Two negro men landed in the county jail at Wichita Falls Sunday morning after firing five shots at each other and indulging in numerous other playful tactics like swishing an "East Dallas Special" hitting each other with lamps and other handy articles.

The fight started when the two brothers-in-law started a war in their home here. One of the men drew a knife and the other lambasted him with a lamp stand. After that they got mad and started fighting.

As the fight changed into a war each grabbed a 22 rifle. At this point they had emerged into the yard at the home, and after a couple of shots at each other started a race across a junk yard west of the city.

The running fight ensued which ended with one of the negroes in a neighbors home.

Chief of police Bill Stapp arrested one of the negroes at the office of a local doctor, and then brought the other to jail from his home. Roy Blanset, deputy sheriff assisted in the arrest and the negroes were charged at Wichita Falls.

Garden Club Holds Meeting At Home Of Mrs. Sandler

Members of the Burk Burnett Garden club met at the home of Mrs. A. B. Sandler last Thursday afternoon for an interesting series of discussions.

The committee appointed for the beautification of a plot east of the city was the most important business of the short session.

Mrs. R. P. Reagan and Volney Hill were appointed to supervise the beautification. The project is one of the part of the program of the club to make the city more beautiful.

Mrs. R. C. Tevis read a paper prepared by Mrs. W. P. Sims on plants suitable for growing in shade. Mrs. Ross Reagan gave a talk on evergreens, starting with the legend of the bluebonnets in Texas.

She continued the discussion of the Paint Brush. Mrs. F. A. Hill gave an interesting talk on protecting wild flowers that grow on the road side.

Those present were: Mesdames George Kimball, Carl Morrison, R. P. Reagan, J. M. Pogue, Chall Hall, F. A. Hill, R. C. Tevis, Volney Hill, A. B. Sandler, and R. W. Wallace.

Hawkeye and his better half motored over to the big oil city of Burk Burnett Saturday with Mr. Clarence LaBarre and his mother, Mrs. Fred LaBarre.

As Mrs. LaBarre and her son could not stay until the big cash drawing was over at 4 p. m., that caused Hawkeye to go to their good friends Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brookman, owner and editor of the Burk Burnett Star, to see if he could get Bro. Fred to bring them home.

He found Bro. Fred more than willing to grant such a request. After the drawing about 5 p. m. Mr. and Mrs. Brookman, their son Master Jimmie started for Oklahoma.

In less than 20 minutes they arrived at the Owens family home safe and sound. Bro. Fred and family visited about an hour before starting back to their home.

It was greatly appreciated by Hawkeye and his wife, the favor and kindness that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brookman granted Hawkeye and his wife for bringing them and their big bill of groceries home.

A BLOW TO GERMAN PRESTIGE

As the huge airliners of the United States fell one by one carrying crew and passengers to their death, the fact that German ships rarely ever blew up or fell established a tradition around the ships made by Hugo Eckner. The world gradually arrived at the idea that the brilliant German scientist was about the only person in the world that knew how to build zeppelins. This tradition had become so profoundly believed that the line had developed leadership in the trans-Atlantic air race.

The aviation world is divided into two distinct camps. One of these camps is persistent in its belief that the lighter than air ships are the answer to aviation problems. The group believes that the only possible solution to long distant pay hauling problems is in this type of ship.

Another equally stubborn group of experts will have nothing to do with the "wind-bags." This group maintains that the rigid construction and ease of control of the heavier than air craft traveling at higher speeds will be the plane for conquest of the inter-nation travel.

Regardless of which group wins the argument, that magic that Eckner had seems to have come to an end. One of his ships has fallen carrying 30 people to tragic death. Possibly the people who believed in his ability will forget this incident, but the prestige of the German people will suffer to some extent.

In justice to Eckner, he advised that the ship be filled with helium. Had his advice been followed, it is probable that the tragedy would have been averted.

GOOD BUSINESS

The Burkburnett school trustees adopted a more efficient system at the meeting last Thursday night when they adopted the schedule to pay the teachers on a twelve month basis instead of the customary nine months basis. The teachers will have a hard time at first adjusting their budget to meet the new arrangement; but once they become accustomed to the idea, they will find it much more convenient than the present system.

Most major school systems in the state have already adopted the routine, and in each instance have found that the method adds to the efficiency of the schools.

There are two basic reasons for the new plan. The school payments from the state are made on a monthly basis and this division of funds makes it necessary for the local system to borrow from county and private funds to complete the year. The interest on such loans eats up funds that should go to school activities. The new system will make possible the payment without necessity for overdraft or loan.

The teachers usually have difficulty in arranging to save enough during the winter to carry over the summer months. Usually they are forced to make arrangements which pledge a portion of the salary of the ensuing year. The majority find it necessary to attend school during the summer. The equalizing of the income to 12 payments will make the summer months and attendance at school much less difficult for the instructors.

While handing out compliments, it would hardly be appropriate to mention the hope that these payments may some day be larger. Under the present conditions such a hope seems to be merely a vague dream, but it calls for the serious consideration of the citizenship. We are sure that neither the school board nor the patrons are satisfied with what they must offer the instructors.

A GOOD RACKET WHILE IT WORKS

Every fisherman is willing to pay for his sport. That is he is willing to pay what he thinks is a just assessment for the fun that he has and for the fish—if any—that he catches. When the big lakes were constructed on Wichita river the fishermen were happy because it presented the possibility of a huge supply of fish and a lot of recreation.

Three things have made it impossible for the hope of the men to come true. Lack of foresight in stocking, attempt of everybody living within several miles of the lake to commercialize what is supposed to be public property, and permission of the managers of the project for such rackets as is being worked at the Diversion spillway.

Specifically we are speaking of the construction of an unnecessary fence across the spillway of the dam so that in order to fish on the dam it is necessary to make a two mile journey or pay a fee for boat transportation around that fence.

The amount is trivial, but it represents a type of thing that the average sportsman resents. If that fence were necessary, if it represented any reasonable or logical service, the average fisherman would not hesitate to pay his two bits to ride the 200 feet.

But that is the whole point. The fence was erected in order that the man hauling the passengers across could establish the racket. When a friend of any fisherman comes along and offers a free ride this concessionaire generally raises a fuss and yells about his rights and property.

If Wichita Falls is interested in developing goodwill among hundreds of men in this area that have complained about this specific situation, arrangements will be made in the near future to stop the racket that is commercializing on property that belongs to everyone in this irrigation district.

HEADLINES

The luckiest newspaper man in America is Murray Decker, member of the Associated Press staff at New York city. He did what every newspaper man and every photographer in the world wishes to do. HE HAD HIS CAMERA POINTED TOWARD A SPOT STORY WHILE IT WAS HAPPENING.

Decker had been sent from New York office to take pictures of the Hindenberg as it landed and of the prominent people who were aboard the huge airliner. A few seconds before the terrific explosion that tore the ship apart and sent it the ground a mass of flames, Decker changed plates on his speed graphic camera and focused on the huge ship. As he started to press the bulb to make the exposure for the press service, flames burst from the ship. Automatically Decker snapped and achieved the most remarkable picture of the century. He took 22 other pictures in the following five minutes as the liner burned and the rescue work continued.

Important thing to do right now is to find a means for keeping the demand for cotton growing. Various scientific discoveries have increased the field of the utility of the fabric and other products of cotton. Texas made a formal bid last week for the research laboratory which the government will establish in the near future. The state added a $250,000 bonus to the bid for the location of the laboratory in the state. The establishment will investigate new uses which will be designed to expand the demand. An expansion is necessary to keep the cotton farmer up to a safe economic level. Among the interesting experiments recently conducted has been the attempt to pave roads with cotton products. So far the experiment has demonstrated that safer and tougher roads can be built by the fabric than other ordinary materials and at a much lower cost. The bid was confirmed by the senate and must be concurred in the house.

Probe Of State Institutions

Every few years the state legislature starts an investigation of state institutions. The probe is aired in the headlines for a while and then the legislators feel that they have done their duty. Very little good is accomplished by the probe. Most of the time they become political white-washing jobs for whatever administrations happens to be in the office at that time. There is nothing that is as vital as such an investigation. But it should not have to wait on a legislative committee bent on making political capitol. There should be some method of bringing into proper court under jurisdiction of correct officials such investigations. If there is barbaric and inhuman treatment as has been charged, the persons responsible should suffer consequences by punishment assessed in court. Some times such cases uncover a mass of evidence and a few underlings lose jobs and the whole matter is forgotten. Such procedure is politically expedient, but ac inhuman as the alleged treatment of the inmates.

Reason and Tryanny

Chief Justice Hughes used appropriate words in his discussion of the supreme court "reason as opposed to tryanny and force," but he had the order reversed. Tryanny and force has been used

Types of News

There are several types of news stories. The greeting of the Hindenberg by cameramen was a routine assignment. That is the type that the staff man of the average news paper makes every day as a matter of routine. The explosion created the second type of story called SPOT STORY. The spot story is the type that all news papermen wish to be on hand while it is happening. For instance a murder trial is a routine assignment. It might be very important and call for several important reporters. The spot story was the murder. The snapping of the Hindenberg was as phenomenal as it would be for some lucky reporter to actually see and photograph a murder while the murder was being committed.

Cotton Research

While limited production of cotton some control has been achieved in order that the status of the farmer could be improved. However, most people realize that the program can't be permanent. It is a temporary measure. Some of the parts of soil conservation can be kept as a permanent policy and retained for the future. The for many years by those who would oppress the tendency of social reform, and every possible shady deal has been perfected in the name of conservative politics. The last time in history that the word "reason" was used on an important occasion was during the French revolution. Chief justice Hughes undoubtedly remembers the results of those tryannists following "reason." To follow his reasoning would inevitably lead to the same condition of revolution and rebellion.

563 NYA Youths In District Working

In district 12 comprising 14 counties, there are now 25 work projects being operated by the National Youth Administration in 13 of these counties, according to H. A. Ziegler, Asst. Dist. Supervisor.

During the month of April there were 563 youths between the ages of 18 and 25 employed on these projects. Several have found jobs in private employment during the last few days and in anticipation of the need for farm labor and other seasonal employment, Ziegler stated he is expecting a decrease in the number now working on NYA projects. 25 of these youngsters are in Burkburnett.

K. M. Witherspoon Dies At Randlett

Funeral services were held for K. M. Witherspoon Monday afternoon from the First Methodist church at Randlett with Rev. L. G. Hagar Methodist minister officiating. Witherspoon would have been 84 Monday, but died Sunday morning on the day before his birthday. Witherspoon had been in the contracting business and was a prominent leader in the Oklahoma community for thirty years. His wife died about 15 months ago.

The survivors include daughters Mrs. D. C. Oxley and Mrs. Finis Craft of Randlett; Mrs. Charles Melton, Redd, Okla.; and Mrs. Ed Curwood, West Okla.; two sons, Frank of Harlingen and Ralph of Randlett, Okla.; two brothers, Jim and Dave Witherspoon of Midlothian, Texas.

The funeral services were under the direction of the Owens and Brumley funeral home of Burkburnett.

Puzzle No. 5 Solved:

What is the "Low-price Field"?

YOU hear a lot about "the low-price field" these days. A good many cars claim to be in it. So whenever the low-price field is mentioned, remember:

Until Ford came, no average American could own a car.

Today all Ford prices are still low — with the prices of the 60-horsepower Ford V-8 $30 to $60 lower than those of any other car of comparable size.

But with Ford, "low price" doesn't merely mean low figures on the price tag. It means much more than that. It means low prices and low costs all the car's long life. Low prices for service — for parts — and, above all, for operation.

Both Ford V-8 engine sizes are economical to operate. The 85 horsepower gives greater gasoline mileage this year than ever, and the "60" delivers the highest mileage in Ford history.

Private owners, cab companies, fleet operators all report that the "60" averages from 22 to 27 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Check and see how much Ford saves you.

Capitol News Letter
(by W. D. McFarlane)

The Hindenburg Disaster
The nation was again shocked by the 18th major lighter than air craft disaster which occurred last Thursday evening at Lakehurst, New Jersey, in the attempted landing of the Hindenburg airship. The present known death toll is 33 with some members of the crew unaccounted for. The loss of this great airship is the 9th major disaster since the world war. A review of these terrible disasters should be a helpful warning to our people at this time, who contemplate future experiments of this kind.

February 12, 1935 the U. S. Macon; April 4, 1933, U. S. Navy Akron; October 4, 1930, British dirigible R-101; May 25, 1928, Italian dirigible Italia; September 3, 1925 U. S. dirigible Shenandoah, formerly ZR-1; December 21, 1923, French dirigible Dixmude; February 21, 1922 U. S. dirigible Rome; August 24, 1921 dirigible ZR-2 bought in England for U. S. January 29, 1921 British dirigible R-34; July 21, 1919 dirigible burned over Chicago; July 15, 1919 British airship NS-11 struck by lightning over North Sea; June 20 1914 airship and airplane collided at Vienna; September 9, 1913, Zeppelin L-2; July 2, 1912, Balloon Akron; also the Zeppelins 3 and 6 and the Deutschlands 1 and 2.

After giving careful study of this mode of travel and the methods of procurement in the handling of our lighter than air craft, I recommended in my Minority report, filed in March 1934, the following concerning the future purchase of lighter than air craft by the Government:

"That no more purchases of lighter than air craft equipment be made unless and until their elasticity of performance, maneuverability, and the general usefulness under actual war conditions is definitely proven to the entire satisfaction of a disinterested board."

My investigation and report at the time pointed out that the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation of Akron, Ohio, makers of the last two ill fated lighter than air crafts, the Akron and the Macon, which were destroyed in 1933 and 1935 respectively and have cost the tax payers of the nation more than $10,000,000 and which contracts were let without any competition and under the present order of procurement future contracts would be let the same way, and the writer pointed out that according to the evidence available the only one which benefited from the lighter than air craft purchases was Mr. Mellon's monopolistic Aluminium Company of America, which furnishes practically all the material for these airships.

A WORD TO THE WIVES

About Shortcake

You'll find your baked shortcake much easier to split in layers if you divide the dough into 2 parts, fit one portion in the pan and brush with melted butter; then top with second layer of dough and bake.

"Saucy Eggs"

A delightful way to prepare poached eggs is to cook the eggs in hot tomato soup instead of the usual hot water. Serve the soup as a sauce.

A Tint-Hint

Here's a grand way to tint curtains evenly—and easily. If the curtains are fragile, place in roomy bag or an old pillow slip and close at open end. Thoroughly dissolve the tinting agent in water in your Hotpoint electric washer. Add the curtains, which have been washed, and let them agitate for 3 to 5 minutes. Curtains made of sturdier material may be placed in the machine without being placed in a bag.

For Bigger and Better Cream Puffs

When baking cream puffs or eclairs the one-step, cold oven way, made possible by the temperature and moisture controlled Hotpoint oven, drop the mixture by smaller spoonfuls than usual on the baking sheet; baked in the cold electric oven, cream puffs expand to greater size, producing not only a delicious crunchy product, but yielding more servings than the same recipe baked the ordinary way.

Personally we would rather have the Constitution what the Justices say it is than what John L. Lewis says it ought to be.

Wheat continues to look like a million dollars and some of our informing farmer friends vow we are going to make a good crop, whether it rains any more or not.

HEIGH - DE - HULA

This hula is serious stuff. It's gotta be done right. Martha strikes High C experimentally. It sounds more like C-moan, C-Moan.

You can't trust a uke. She tries a little vocal giving. Hotcha! That's better. Into the dance, folks, hold on!

The teacher told Martha every movement of the hula must express a word. She heard a truck driver say this word on Hollywood Blvd.

In Harlem it's trucking — in Hawaii they don't know what this is. Martha claims her hands, feet and chassis are saying, "Make mine a ham sandwich."

This is the romantic finale; once you learn that you're a finished hula dancer that's what the teacher Martha and it looks like. This is finished, all right!

All Harvest Men Asked To List Names With Bureau

Since it is quite likely that Wichita County will have one of the best grain crops in several years, The Texas State Employment Service is endeavoring to be of service to the Farmers and thresher operators of the county by supplying needed labor for the harvest.

All persons who are interested in this type work are urged to get in touch with the service, whose offices are located at 607 Ninth street, Wichita Falls.

It is the purpose of the service to set up a file or list of available workers in each community, and make an effort to find employment in that particular community for each worker.

Farmers and harvest machinery operators are likewise urged to communicate with the office, so that the labor problem of the harvest can be solved before men are actually needed.

This service is entirely without cost to employer or employee.

It is contemplated that representatives of the service will be in Electra, Burkburnett and Iowa Park, on certain days, the dates to be announced later.

Sr. Class Prophecy Of 1937

Billy Ashlock

According to the stars, the members of the Senior class of 1937, Burkburnett High School are fated for many varied professions and vocations. The future looks bright for most, and we hope it will not be stormy for any.

In 1937 we shall see them as follows: Durwood Arrington: A cameraman who takes snapshots of people as they walk down the street. With his personality he is a super-salesman persuading one out of every 3,897 persons photographed to buy a ten cent picture.

Billy Ashlock: A filling station operator in New York City, Texas.

Jack Boulton: A share-cropper on a two acre alfalfa farm in Mississippi.

Ina Mae Brown: Operator of a trans-pacific airline service and effects of alcoholic beverages married to Lloyd Scruggs. Van Buren Cross: President of the Oshkosh, Kansas, Women's Temperance Union and Society. (pool hall to author of several books on the (Continued next page)

Plans Be Reviewed Meeting Friday

Develop For Each Interest-Event Of The Huge Party

TRIPS MADE

Committee meeting of all of the birthday celebration will be held at the Friday night for a review of the progress made in the celebration of the 30th anniversary. The meeting has been called by the general chairman H. D. and every chairman has requested to submit a report at that time.

Program for the celebration will be formulated rapidly during the week, and at this time the committee appears to bid for the greatest party ever attempted locally.

Special advertising trips will be made this week. A group of burkburnett men carried and noisy invitations to a general picnic in Bridgeport Friday afternoon and a large delegation accompanied the cowboy band on a trip to Southern Oklahoma ending with a concert at the water in Comanche, Oklahoma.

Plans for the celebration have grown more elaborate as the committees make reports. At the present interest is centered in the queen of the celebration. The six princesses vieing for the crown are running a close race and it is possible that the winner will be determined before the week.

The most interesting addition to the celebration this year is the challenge issued by the group of Southern Oklahoma residents for the past 30 years. The group of burkburnett pioneers to a tug of war contest between persons 50 years and older. Residents for more than 50 years in this district will be eligible to enter the contest. Five will be selected from the district for the big event.

Summary of the entertainment program, Indian villages, units, band concerts, a parade, coronation of the queen, speaking program, amusements, boxing, and a number of attractions have been planned for the program.

Queen coronation will be held the night before the formal opening of the street fair, and the queen will be used as the center of the elaborate ceremonies. Students of the local schools are in the preparation for the contest. A contest for the history of the city has been sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, and the students of all classes are submitting themes for the cash prize.

The Morning 2-Minute Facial

FOR a truly lovely skin, beauty experts recommend the morning 2-minute facial. Wet your face with warm water, massage with a thick lather of soap, rinse with warm water, then with cold and pat the skin dry. For body complexion beauty, nightly beauty baths in soothing, cleansing hot water is recommended.

The importance of an adequate supply of hot water, not only in the protection of youthful charm and beauty, but in the many other demands of the modern home, is focusing the attention of builders and home owners on the dependable hot water service of the modern Hotpoint electric water heater. It supplies day and night hot water service at the turn of the faucet.

Hardin Demo Club Guests Mrs. Hugh Preston Wed.

Members of the Hardin Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Artie Whitesides Wednesday with Mrs. Hugh Preston as hostess. Mrs. M. R. Hewell presided at the business session. The roll call was answered by a favorite Bible verse.

The lesson was on different types of ironing boards, and the discussion included equipment, board, padding, cover, and iron pad. The sleeve board was discussed and its uses demonstrated. There were 18 members present. The next meeting will be May 26 at the home of Mrs. J. C. Muller. The meeting will be an all-day meeting and a demonstration of the improvement of the kitchen will be given by Miss Leta Bennet. A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon.

Parading the Fashion

A STYLE show De Luxe for De Ladies on this De Lightful Spring day!

Betty Ann feels just a bit the most elegant of the three for her housecoat is superlative. She has "skirts" like the ladies in the feminine yesterdays; her basque is form-fitting; her sash has a bow, and her sleeves puff. The illusion is so perfect that she is about to reach for smelling salts or a sprig of old lavender.

Matrons Have Vanity, Too.

Mama, very young for her years, can not resist styles that bring more compliments her way. The no-belt feature of this one is definitely new, and does wonders for the figure a bit past the slim stage. The continuing collar, which in soft pastels is always flattering, gives the break required by the all-in-one waist and skirt. The fitted top and flaring bottom make for style plus comfort, a demand matrons, even though youthful, always make.

Parties and Picnics.

Winifred on the left is privately making up her mind to have a housecoat, too; though she is mightily pleased with the way her print has turned out. She chose this style because the fitted, broken waist line and front seamed skirt are so very slenderizing. She's on her way to the 4-H meeting now and has only stopped to remind Betty Ann of the picnic "The Jolly Twelve" are having on Tuesday.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1255 comes in sizes 12-20 (30 to 40). Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1252 is for sizes 14-20

BLACK-DRAUGHT A GOOD LAXATIVE

Two men were talking about their children.

"I've spent much money sending my boy to a good school, and the young scoundrel doesn't even trouble to write to me," said Robinson.

"That's funny," replied Boots. "I always manage to get my son to write."

"How do you do it?"

"Easy," replied Boots. "I send him a letter saying I am enclosing a ten-spot—and forget to enclose the ten-spot."

SHRINERS TO MEET IN WICHITA FALLS

On May 21st and 22nd the combined Shrine Temples of Texas under the auspices of Maskat Temple at Wichita Falls acting as host will stage in that city the greatest parade and pageant of its kind ever seen in the South.

Potentate Kindel Paulk of Maskat in attempting to describe the overwhelming monstrous Shrine Civic Parade to be held at 7:30 P. M. on Friday, May 21st, said in part, "It will be the most stupendous parade of the decade; gigantic, glamorous, glittering, glistening, and gorgeous beyond words, this caravan of the Century will be inimitably illuminated. It will be a series of spectacular spectacles, blaring bands, deafening drum corps, serried ranks of colorful costumes, and fantasmagorical phantasies from fairy book tales such as never seen before in any place in the South, much less in Texas or in Wichita Falls."

There will be Shrine bands besides other bands; five Shrine Drum Corps besides other drum corps; National Guard units; civic organizations; huge floats; Shrine patrol after Shrine patrol with their eye compelling, richly fantastic uniforms; and interspersed throughout the parade will be huge balloon monsters held down with ropes by 70 boys from the DeMolays and other youths organizations. Then there will be individuals wearing great inflated rubber heads six feet across and besides a bevy of clowns clad in papier mache depicting the comic strip characters such as Popeye, Wimpy, Andy Gump, and many others.

The ballon monsters will perhaps be the most spectacular feature of the procession. "Just to illustrate," said Potentate Paulk "there is a dragon 145 feet long and a hippopotomus 40 feet long besides many others of comparable size." These large inflated figures have never before been shown in the South, but in New York, Chicago, and Cleveland where they have been exhibited they have been a real sensation and have drawn enormous crowds.

People for 150 miles around Wichita Falls are planning to see this superb spectacle and, of course, take the children. It is something which will entertain the big boys as well as the little boys; fathers as well as sons; mothers as well as daughters.

It is going to be a parade that can not be compared to any other because it will be different from any other. It is unique in being held at night. The streets will be brilliantly lighted and so will the

Notary Publics To Be appointed Soon

Notice was received from Ben G. O'Neal, state senator from this district, that all persons applying for notary public confirmation should get in touch with him at Austin immediately to file the application. The present session of the state legislature will soon close and appointments for this year will end with the session. The applicants may give their names and addresses to the county clerk, Julian McFall or write directly to Senator O'Neal.

Any person in doubt about the application can apply at the office of Mr. McFall in Wichita Falls for further information. Burkburnett residents have been asked to apply at once.

Skeletons of more than two dozen deer have been found in a natural trap, a deep rocky pit in northern California.

MEN ADVISED PASTURE CARE

do not consider pasture care as a cash crop, since they see any money being made directly from the pasture as the middle case. It is because of the understanding on the part of pasture land owners that neglected sources of occupation are being lost.

se pasture fertilization which includes an application of 200 to 300 pounds per acre of nitrogen in the spring, brings returns of six weeks after the fertilizer is applied to the soil. The Cayuga has been tried on demonstration basis. The results have been uniformly good. Pasturemen should make every effort to treat their pastures as they treat their crops, and thereby get a cheaper milk from their

There is no crop in which to raise geese so wheat and corn suitable feed for them.

Pay Weed Tax

farmer pays his share of the tax, with the average being about $450 a farm according to a crop producer at the University of Illinois. Although much can be done to reduce this loss through the use of a small farming mill for grain, farmers must often clean their seeds with machines of commercial seed-cleaning to remove the many weeds.

Approximately 75 per cent of the farms sold by the land banks last year were bought by farmers. During the past year farm operators have displaced non-farmers as purchasers of federal land properties, off-

FAMOUS HEADLINE HUNTER

FLOYD GIBBONS ADVENTURERS CLUB

Hello everybody

"Buried—But Not Dead"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

ADVENTURE sure laid an icy hand on the shoulder of Joseph Kurtz, who sent me one of the best written yarns I've had to date. Joe lives in Brooklyn now and at last writing could have used a job. He gave up his youthful ambition to be a mining engineer as a result of events related in today's story, and switched to mechanical engineering. But, if you ask me, the magazines are looking for people who can write like Joe.

Accordingly, I'm following his script pretty close. In April, 1920, Joe was a surveyor with the Glen Alden Coal company, Scranton, Pa. It was his first job, and he was assigned to investigating "pillar robbing" in the Cayuga mine. I'll explain.

Miners must leave enough coal to support the roof of the mine, which consists of shale, a scaly rock, that caves in easily. Pillar robbing means stealing coal from these remaining supports, and is illegal, since it may cause cave-ins in which workers are killed, gas and water mains burst, even explode, and brick buildings standing on the land collapse. It's earthquake, fire and flood.

Fine Place for an Avalanche.

The Cayuga had been deserted for fifty years. Inside Joe and three companions found pillars cracked and crumbled by the weight of millions of tons of rock they had held up for five decades. As supports they were useless and might just as well have been mined out. Old timbers erected by miners to protect themselves in those far, bygone years were rotted, useless. A touch and they collapsed to fungi-infested, mildewed dust. Not much between Joe and the millions of tons of rock over his head.

Worse, the workings were of the "pitch" type—each chamber like a long, sloping tunnel, some very steep. The roof was dangerously cracked. Slabs of shale hung so loose a breath would send them crashing to the floor. Fallen rock covered the steeply-slanting floor in sizes from a fist to a dining-room table. This "gob" can start an avalanche on the slanting tunnel floor.

Joe's duties—lovely job!—were to climb over this loose rock, covered with slime. If he made it, it was safe for the others to come up. If he didn't and started a fatal avalanche—Joe forgot to tell about that.

A Pocket of Gas Was Ignited.

Well, sir, Joe climbed gingerly upward, clinging to the glistening coal pillar at the side, peering ahead by the faint light of the lamp fastened above his cap-visor. He stepped, light as a falling feather, testing every foothold. At the top of the "human fly," as Joe calls himself, to be established a point for the transit—a surveyor's instrument—to shoot at.

Joe never made it. Twenty feet from the top—Bom! An explosion like a giant bassdrum shook the earth in a bolt of livid flame. GAS! Joe's light had ignited a pocket of whitedamp!

Splinter! Crack! Crash! The shock jerked rock toppling from the roof, dropped it on the loose "gob" on the steeply-slanting floor! THE SLIDE WAS ON!

At first, with thumps scarcely audible above the rolling rumble of the waves of flame over his head, then, in a roaring crescendo, jagged rock raced, leaping and thundering downward past Joe, hurtling into the hell of darkness far below.

Buried—and in Inky Darkness.

Joe's lamp had gone out with the explosion. But above him was a blinding glare—a marching surf of blue-and-red-streaked fire, lighting up the chamber overhead. Blistering white heat above—thundering flood of angry rock below! Joe clung to the pillar on his stomach, ducking hurtling rocks, shrinking from the blazing heat above. With clawing fingers and toes that vainly sought foothold in the hard floor, he lay there—it seemed ages—aching muscles a-torture. The slide diminished. The "carbon oxide" above burned fitfully, threatening any second to seek out with its rainbow flames another pocket, spreading in chain explosions through the underground terrain, burying Joe and his companions.

Joe thought of the others. Had they been crushed to a jelly-smear under those tons of rock—trapped in some doghole or cross-cut in a pillar?

The rolling flames died, went out. In the inky black Joe groped for a match, lit his lamp. The floor was clear. He stepped out. Instantly he tobogganed down on a slab of rock he had overlooked. Four hundred feet below he brought up short on the heap of loose rock. He had blocked the entrance completely.

No Wonder Panic Seized Him.

Joe was CAUGHT LIKE A RAT. He sat on a rock, wondered that he was not frightened, began to figure his chances of seeing sunlight again. It seemed suddenly very precious, sun and open air. Air! The rock had sucked much out, the explosion had driven more out and the fire had burned he didn't know how much of the life-giving oxygen in that black pit. Would the rest last: till they got to him?

Then, Joe says, panic did grip him. He shouted himself hoarse. He smashed a rock repeatedly against a pillar, listened. Not a sound. Just silence. TERRIBLE SILENCE. Joe saw slow death ahead—suffocation, thirst, starvation. Unwounded, he wished for death—swift death, rather than this drawn-out agony. Now he could only wait helplessly.

Joe says he prefers to forget the next nine hours. Imaginative can be the most horrible form of torture. But—his companions had escaped. With all hope gone for Joe, they had notified the surface. A relay of rescue crews, working as only mine rescue crews can, dug through the pillar from an adjoining chamber and pulled Joe out nine hours later.

From that day on the only coal Joe can stand looking at is in a stove. He quit the mining engineer career cold. But I still say he can write like a professional. What do you think? ©—WNU Service.

Gold Spike Joined First Transcontinental R. R.

It was a gold spike driven with two silver sledges that dedicated the joining of the two railroads which completed the first transcontinental railroad in the United States, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Union Pacific was built west from Omaha, while the Central Pacific was built east from Sacramento. The rails of the two roads were joined on May 10, 1869, by a ceremony at Promontory Point, on the tip of an isthmus projecting into Great Salt lake, Utah, from the northern shore.

The Universal Postal Union was organized in 1878. It followed an earlier union formed in 1874. It includes practically all nations on the globe. These countries are declared to be a single postal territory for the reciprocal exchange of correspondence.

Colorado's High Peaks There are more than 30 peaks in Colorado which exceed an elevation of 14,000 feet.

"E Pluribus Unum," the U. S. Great Seal Motto

"E Pluribus Unum"—one from many—is the Latin motto which appears on the obverse of the great seal of the United States. It is thus the "official" motto of the government, and by act of Congress is also inscribed on the coins.

The motto was originally proposed on August 1, 1776, by a committee of three which had been appointed by the Continental Congress to prepare a device for a state seal. The committee consisted, incidentally, of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

McKinley's Favorite Hymn

President McKinley's favorite hymn was "Lead, Kindly Light." It was sung at the funeral service in Canton and also at the services held at the Capitol in Washington. The hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," was played by the Marine Band at the services at the Capitol.

STAR DUST Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

BITTERLY does Miriam Hopkins regret the day last year when she told an interviewer that her judgment on screen stories for herself was infallibly bad. Whenever she gets balky about working in a picture selected for her, Sam Goldwyn reminds her of her own admission. Then he goes on to point out that she thought "Splendor" was a fine story and that she did not like "These Three." The latter was her greatest success, "Splendor" brought nothing but complaints from the customers.

Recently she completed "Woman Chases Man" and at the preview the audience roared with delight so continuously that it was necessary to take it back to the studio and insert some scenes to slow up the action so that laughter would not drown out the good lines.

If you have ever wanted to be a screen star, if you have ever longed to visit Hollywood, then "A Star Is Born" is a picture you will adore. It is so gratifying, it is hard to imagine anyone who would not enjoy it. Janet Gaynor and Fredric March play the roles of the girl who goes to Hollywood and makes good, the man who helps her and who loses his public just as she is winning hers. An old, old story certainly, but presented in a fresh manner, with gay, bantering lines.

Fredric March

Only the three or four ranking stars in any studio are given little portable bungalow dressing rooms parked right at the side of the set where they are working. So Robert Taylor was rather surprised when he went out to work in "Broadway Melody" to find George Murphy and Buddy Ebsen occupying a most elaborate one. Seeking out the business manager, he asked if he couldn't have a dressing room on the set since he had so many costume changes to make. "What's the matter with the one we gave you?" the business manager demanded angrily, stalking out on the set. Then he spied Ebsen and Murphy and bellowed: "Those clowns are at it again."

James Stewart is so worried for fear M-G-M will change their minds about lending him to RKO to play opposite Ginger Rogers that he has stopped having the phone answered at his house, and spends most of his time in a far away corner of the RKO lot where they are unlikely to locate him. To add further difficulties to the lives of phone studio operators, Buddy Ebsen spends most of his time on his new boat.

ODDS AND ENDS—Warner Brothers wouldn't ask Bette Davis to take a supporting role in "Gentleman After Midnight," the new Leslie Howard-Olivia de Havilland picture, but she surprised them by asking for it. . . . Basil Rathbone has a chance to play a hero at last in Bobby Breen's new picture, "Make a Wish" . . . Paul Muni rehearses his lines by speaking them into a home recording machine, then listening to them. . . . Sidney Blackmer rehearses in a room with five mirrors placed at various angles so that he can see himself all around. . . . Betty Furness has a charm bracelet from which dangle a dozen or so fraternity pins. She claims she picked them up at a pawnshop, but considering her popularity with college boys all the folks around the studio are frankly dubious. . . . Victor Moore's son and daughter are making their screen debuts in his RKO picture, "Missus America." John Beal recently rented the house formerly occupied by Charles Laughton in Hollywood, but didn't get around to explore the cellar until recently. He thought he might find mementoes of some of Laughton's horror roles, but confronted by weird sounds and a pair of flashing eyes, all he found was a mother cat with a litter of kittens. © Western Newspaper Union.

Outer Leaves of Lettuce—The outer leaves of lettuce, often trimmed off and thrown away, are more than 30 times as rich in vitamin A as the inside leaves.

Boiled Whitefish—Clean a whitefish. To sufficient water to cover add salt and vinegar and a bunch of parsley and a quartered onion. Cook until the flesh separates easily from the bones. Drain and place on a hot platter, garnished with parsley and serve with a sauce.

Removing Mustard Stains — Mustard stains can be removed from table linen by washing in hot water and soap and rinsing in warm water.

Hanging Pictures—Never allow picture frames to touch the wall if it is damp. The frame will soon become damaged. With a small tack or gramophone needle, attach two small corks at the bottom of your frame. These will keep the frame off the wall.

Soaking Salt Fish—When soaking salt fish add a small glass of vinegar to the soaking water and it will draw out more of the salt.

With Fancywork—Before starting to draw the threads on linen for hemstitching, wet a small brush, rub it over a bar of soap until a lather is produced, scrub the threads of linen that you wish to draw, and they will pull out easily.

Butter Layer Cake—When raspberry jam that is not of firm consistency is to be used for filling a sponge sandwich cake it is advisable to butter the inner surface of each layer before spreading it with jam. This will prevent the moisture from soaking into the cake and making it sodden.

Beef Juice—To make beef juice add 1 pound of fresh, raw, finely chopped round steak without fat to 6 ounces of cold water. Add a pinch of salt, put the beef and water in a glass jar and stand it on ice, over night. Shake and strain it through coarse muslin, squeezing hard to obtain all the juice.

Reaves Addresses Class Members At Annual Banquet

G. A. Reaves Jr. former Burkburnett instructor, and teacher in Wichita Falls, gave the inspirational address at the meeting of the Junior and Seniors in the annual banquet in the high school gymnasium Tuesday night. The brilliant social affair that is the climax of the season each year for the upper classmembers ended a long series of special events held jointly by the two classes.

The Juniors were hosts of the graduating group, and treated the honor guests royally as approximately 150 members of the classes and teachers and visitors were present.

Miss Pauline Browning, president of the Junior class was official hostess for the event, and guided the entertainment with gracious poise.

The gypsy motif was carried out in the decoration, and a camp fire in the center of the building, and the talks leading to the idea. C. J. Duncan, superintendent of the school, gave the invocation. The meal was served by members of the P. T. A.

Billy Walker told the graduates about "The Call of the Wild." The response from Tommy Harms was "Heeding the Call." Miss Katherine Wynn gave the class prophecy as a fortune teller. Barbara Crissey sang. Marilyn Harwell gave a reading.

Norris Bingham gave several piano selections. George Napiers orchestra provided the music for the evening.

Ray Lawler Leader In College Program

In clippings received this week from Corpus Christi, the information that Ray Lawler, former Bulldog football star and high student in the Burkburnett school is rapidly assuming a position of leadership in the Junior College was given. The local papers gave extensive review of the work of the "Collegians" a series of broadcasts that is attracting attention in the area. Lawler is master of ceremonies of the programs.

In the pictures presented by the daily paper Lawler is shown as announcing the program and directing the work on the script of the broadcast. In other activities such as the school paper, plays and musical program his name is mentioned with increasing frequency. Those interested here in the broadcast may tune in at KGFI any Monday night at 8:30.

JOLLY DOZEN CLUB

Four Years of Satisfactory Service Result in Increased Satisfied Patrons

Citizens of Burkburnett have been supporting their municipal light plant for almost four years now, and each year's passage has shown increase in the number patronizing the local concern. Each year's growth may be attributed to the fact that more individuals are realizing the advantages of keeping their money at home; of building for their home town rather than some financial center elsewhere; of providing a safe foundation for local operation; of insuring lowest rates.

Three years ago last January the municipal light plant was serving 187 customers. This last January the plant was serving 320 customers. Such increase speaks for itself, and many persons daily ask for extensions to be built in order that they too may be served by the "home plant operated for the home folks."
