Cash, checks recovered

Detective Sgt. Bob Miller tallies more than $4,800 worth of cash and checks recovered in the weekend burglaries of several retail establishments. A 20-year-old man and a 14-year-old juvenile were arrested about 2:45 a.m. Monday after patrol officer Ron Keck and Sgt. L.L. Wright spotted them in an Aladdin House Furniture Co. car that had been parked earlier at the store on West Wall Avenue. It was stopped in the 200 block of Circle Drive and a check revealed the store had been broken into. Officers said a search of the suspects' motel room uncovered loot taken in the burglaries of at least seven stores over the weekend.

Freighter, like oil rig, sinks in North Atlantic

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — A Soviet freighter sank in 50-foot waves in the storm-tossed North Atlantic today, and officials said four or five people were rescued but about 15 drowned and 18 were missing.

The freighter sank between 2 a.m. and 3 a.m. some 240 nautical miles east of Newfoundland in an area 65 miles east of where the world's biggest oil rig capsized, leaving 84 workers missing and believed dead.

The 4,262-ton Soviet freighter, Mekhanik Tarasov, went down as two vessels tried for several hours to assist the container ship when it ran into trouble in heavy seas. Officials said about 15 bodies had been recovered.

A spokesman for the Halifax Search and Rescue center said two life rafts had been spotted and a third was missing.

"We don't know where it (the third raft) is.... It could be on the sunken ship," the spokesman said.

The Mekhanik Tarasov had developed a 45-degree list overnight in 40 knot winds, heavy seas and freezing spray.

The 2,500-ton Tolbachik, a Soviet factory ship, and the 444-ton trawler Sigurdfarid from the Faroe Islands were on the scene picking up bodies and searching for more survivors.

A Canadian army Buffalo aircraft also was flying over the area and a Canadian Coast Guard vessel, the Sir Humphrey Gilbert, was on the way.

In Moscow, the ministry in charge of the Soviet commercial fleet said it had no information on the ship.

The area is east of the drilling site in the Hibernia field where the storm's huge waves capsized the $120 million oil rig Ocean Ranger Monday morning.

Mobil Oil Canada Ltd., which leased the Japanese-built rig from a Louisiana company, said the crew included 15 Americans, 52 Newfoundlanders, 16 men from other parts of Canada and one Briton. The company said the names would not be announced until the families were notified.

It was the second highest toll in the history of offshore drilling, exceeded only by the loss of 123 men in the capsizing of the rig Alexander Kielland in the North Sea on March 27, 1980.

Only one body from the Ocean Ranger crew was recovered. Searching ships and aircraft reported sighting three of the rig's four lifeboats, with two bodies in one of them, two of the 12 liferafts, and bodies in red-and-orange survival suits and debris in the water. But the 50-foot waves prevented recovery of the other bodies, and snow and low visibility hampered the search.

The survival suits could have kept the wearers alive for about an hour in the frigid water that otherwise would kill in minutes, officials said.

The search planes returned to St. John's for the night and were to resume the hunt at dawn. But W. O. Mason, president of Mobil Canada, told a news conference: "The Ocean Ranger is lost. I cannot hold out much hope for survivors."

The Boston Herald American reported two former crew members, Robert St. Aubins and Terry Frame of St. Johns, told it safety drills were not taken seriously aboard the rig and the boats were never lowered.

"We had drills most Sundays, but we just put on our life jackets, went to the boats and stood around for 10 minutes," said St. Aubins. He said he quit the rig last Thursday.

Mobil said the crew radioed about 2 a.m. local time the rig was listing and the crew was preparing to abandon it. But it was not known whether all the men got off.

Cpl. Randy Brown was lowered by cable into the water, but "it was just too rough to get anyone," he said.

A spokesman for the rig's owner, Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co. of New Orleans, said the Ranger was the biggest drilling platform afloat. Lloyd's Shipping Register said the loss was the largest in oil-rig history.

The self-propelled Ocean Ranger was built in Japan six years ago and had a rectangular platform 398 feet long and 262 feet wide. It was 337 feet from the top of the derrick to the pontoons 50-80 feet below the surface which kept it afloat.

In Providence, R.I., a Coast Guard commander who two years ago inspected the Ocean Ranger said another routine inspection was two months overdue.

Lt. Cmdr. Ronald Edmiston, the head of the Marine Safety Office at Providence, said the Coast Guard asked his office to conduct the inspection last week but had been unable to do so until now because of a staff shortage and scheduling problems.

Two disasters in as many days have hit the waters of the North Atlantic off Newfoundland. A Russian ship sank 240 miles east of St. John's today, about 65 miles east of where an oil rig sank Monday.

Offshore rig had endured worse

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For almost six years, the Ocean Ranger, largest semisubmersible oil drilling rig in the world, survived the worst that nature could dish out.

But on Monday morning, in 50-foot seas and winds of 80 mph, the rig toppled and sank in the North Atlantic, 175 nautical miles east of Newfoundland in water 257 feet deep. All 84 crew members were feared drowned.

Maritime associations in the United States and Norway believed the rig — 398 feet long, 262 feet wide and taller than a 35-story office building — could withstand weather conditions twice as bad as Monday's storm, officials said.

"It underwent much worse — just this winter it underwent worse," said Al Spindler, a spokesman for Ocean Drilling and Exploration Co., owners of the rig, which was under contract to Mobil Oil Canada.

"The Ocean Ranger was designed to withstand, simultaneously, 115 mph winds, 3-knot currents and 110-foot waves. We've had much smaller rigs go through more wicked weather than what I understand we had. The Ocean Ranger has definitely undergone more than that in the North Sea and the North Atlantic and Alaska."

The rig was designed to drill for oil and gas in water almost three-quarters of a mile deep. Two more, much like it, are under construction — one in Scotland and one in Japan, where the Ocean Ranger was launched in 1976.

"It drilled offshore Alaska for about three years, then came around the tip of South America and up the East Coast of the United States where it drilled in the Baltimore Canyon," Spindler said.

"Then it moved to the North Atlantic, off Ireland, and it's been off Newfoundland over a year."

Floating atop the water, as they do in transit, semi-submersible rigs such as the Ocean Ranger resemble long-legged tables on floats.

On site, ballast tanks in the pontoons are filled with water until the floats are 50-80 feet below the surface. A dozen anchors of 25,000 pounds apiece fan out from the submerged pontoons, holding the rig in place for drilling.

Filing again extended in redistricting dispute

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A three-judge federal court panel Monday delayed the filing deadline for election campaigns for the second time in 16 of Texas' 27 congressional districts, and has enjoined all congressional elections in the state until a new redistricting plan can be implemented.

Included in the 16 is District 21, now represented by Republican Tom Loeffler. Earlier redistricting plans have moved Midland from the 19th District, represented by Democrat Kent Hance, into the 21st, which stretches south to San Antonio. The May primary would determine who from each party would face-off for the November general election. Midland would be voting on the 21st District race.

Criticizing the U.S. Department of Justice for "impeding" the election process in Texas, the three-judge panel moved back the filing deadline for 16 congressional seats until 6 p.m. March 19.

The order delaying the filing deadline was entered Monday afternoon by 5th Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Sam Johnson, who blasted the Justice Department for withholding its objection to the Texas congressional reapportionment plan until Jan. 29, only three days prior to the original Feb. 1 filing deadline.

Johnson said the Justice Department had been given some 140 days to review the plan and that its delay had "substantially impeded" the court's ability "to function in the best interest" of the people of Texas.

"This impediment has been occasioned by the unseemly delay, inattention and inactivity of the office of the attorney general of the United States," Johnson said in the five-page written order.

The three-judge panel, which also includes U.S. District Judges William Wayne Justice of Tyler and Robert Parker of Beaumont, initially postponed the filing deadline until Feb. 22 just four days before the Justice Department handed down its objection to the redistricting plan. That objection was based on inclusion of two rapidly growing, heavily Hispanic areas of South Texas in the same district.

The court gave Texas Attorney General Mark White's office until Monday to get the Justice Department to rescind that objection before entering its own plan under which this year's congressional elections would be held.

In addition to the 16th District, Johnson's order postponing the filing deadlines affects only Districts 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 15, 18, 20, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27. But Johnson also has put a hold on all congressional elections in Texas "until this court implements a court-ordered congressional apportionment plan or takes other action deemed appropriate."

Monday's action also affects filing deadlines for races for the state's Board of Education, which has one member elected from each congressional district.

Nancy Reagan shares parents' pain

First lady observes drug treatment program

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Only the names and faces of the troubled teen-agers varied. Their declarations before a huge audience that included a tearful Nancy Reagan were always the same: "I am a druggie."

For three hours Monday night, the first lady sat in a hot auditorium crowded with 300 drug-prone adolescents and 600 anxious parents involved in a treatment program called Straight Inc.

She listened to the songs they sang enthusiastically. She heard an unending litany of substances they once used to "get high." And she watched as a microphone was passed from parent to parent, some scolding their children for setbacks, others offering praise and love.

And when the microphone finally got to the president's wife, her voice choked.

"My heart is filled with so many things," she told the teen-agers. "I am so proud of you and I love you, too."

Tears welling in her eyes, she turned to the parents:

"Being a parent myself, I know how painful it must be for you. There's nothing as painful for a parent as having something happen to their children and nothing as hurtful."

Then again to the youngsters:

"I wish you all the best of luck and the most wonderful lives and I know you will have it. I know everything will be just fine."

Mrs. Reagan's two-day trip on behalf of drug abuse prevention was concluding today after a stop in Dallas.

Monday night's program was an unusual experience.

First, the children singing from their seats in front of the auditorium while their parents waited outside; loud, loud singing; a cappella; with hands moving in unison; such songs as "America" and "I'm On My Way."

Next, the counselors would ask what was the most outrageous substance they had ever used (roach killer); the most outrageous place they found to hide drugs (parents' mattress); how many had introduced drugs to children they babysat for (about half); and so on.

Girls were pitted against the boys. The competition was so strong that one counselor finally pleaded, "C'mon, girls. You can top the guys." All 300 of the children frantically waved their hands high in the air for a chance to reveal how outrageous they once had been.

Then the parents were admitted.

Slowly and silently they filed in one-by-one, filling all the seats in one row before starting the next.

The true confessions began.

Children who were new to the program stood up and recited the substances they had used — pot, acid, uppers, downers, on and on — always ending with, "I am a druggie."

Individually, they apologized for how they had lied to their families and stolen. They renounced their former "druggie" friends. They set goals, usually a desire to be more honest and open with their feelings and to rebuild their family relationships.

"I was a low-life daughter," confessed one girl, who under Straight Inc. rules must remain anonymous. "I feel real bad about that. My long-term goal is to earn the privilege to go home." She began to cry.

A boy volunteered: "The friends I had, they were druggies. They weren't really friends."

Next, it was time for the parents. Some said simply, "I love you, Laura." The girl would shout out in return, "Love you, Mom."

The children, in unison, would chant, "Love you, Laura."

One father declared: "It seems like a bad dream." Another man told his son, "I'm learning about my feelings. We are more open at home."

Jet clips power lines, slides off runway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Boeing 737 jet that clipped high-power lines and damaged its brakes slid off a runway into a sandy embankment during an emergency landing at Los Angeles International Airport, officials said today.

None of the 119 people aboard the Air California flight was injured in the accident Monday night, authorities said.

The jet was scheduled for a 9:05 p.m. landing at Ontario Airport, about 50 miles east of Los Angeles, but the pilot diverted to Los Angeles after it appeared the plane might have struck something, officials said.

"The plane hit two high-power lines and broke them about four miles east of Ontario Airport," said Los Angeles International operations officer Michael Powell.

That mishap apparently triggered a failure of the jetliner's hydraulic system, officials said.

The National Transportation Safety Board was investigating the accident.

Elizabeth Rogers, a passenger from Covina, said she thought she felt an impact during the approach.

"We started coming down and I didn't notice anything unusual. Then all of a sudden there was this big bump and then we just took off straight up in the air, all the thrusters going trying to get us up," she said.

ANOTHER PASSENGER, James Nashny of Oakland, said he "saw what appeared to be a flash of light or sparks, or something to that effect."

"They only lasted a second and then it was airborne again," he said.

Ms. Rogers said passengers got no warning of the brake failure on the runway.

"When we touched down, everyone started to applaud, but it was premature, because we had no brakes," she said.

"When we went to land in Los Angeles, we were going real fast and next we know we were off the runway and that was how we stopped. It was pretty scary," said Frances Walker of Redlands, another passenger.

There were 114 passengers and a crew of five aboard Flight 754, which originated in Seattle and stopped at Oakland, Calif., before attempting to land at Ontario.

Although no one was injured when the plane came to rest at 9:22 p.m., "a couple people were shaken up," said Mark Peterson, a spokesman for Air California.

He said the pilot "experienced a loss of braking action" on the Los Angeles runway, Peterson added.

"APPARENTLY THE thrust reversers were not operational and it rolled off the runway 'til it came to a stop," he said.

Truck driver still in critical condition

Abilene truck driver Kenneth Ferguson, 55, was in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning with head injuries suffered when his 18-wheeler and a flatbed truck driven by A.L. Hubbard of Coleman collided on Interstate 20 near the Garden City Highway overpass about 6:30 a.m. Monday.

Hubbard, 58, died at the scene and westbound traffic on the interstate was tied up for several hours while crews cleared the wreckage from the highway. Police said Ferguson was hauling a load of oilfield pipe to Odessa when he apparently ran into the rear of Hubbard's westbound truck, which was carrying a load of oats.

Midland burn victim remains critical

Burn victim William P. Wilkerson of 3008 Franklin Ave. remained in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, where he was transferred following a fire at his home about midnight Saturday.

The 71-year-old Wilkerson, his clothing aflame, was found in his front yard and intially was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital. An electrical short was listed as the cause of the blaze.

Bronze cowboy statue reported stolen

In theft and burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, a $2,500 bronze statue of two cowboys roping a steer was reported taken from an office of the Energy Square Building, 505 N. Big Spring St.

A $150 AM/FM radio and cassette tape recorder and a $500 gold-plated, desk-top pump jack were also missing from other offices in the building.

Larry Sims, no address available, told officers his wallet containing $240 in cash was taken Monday night from a booth at Red's Drive-Inn, 1807 E. Front.

High today expected in lower 70s

The March winds have come a little early this year. After two days of 70-degree temperatures and gusty, dusty winds, Midlanders may feel the seasons are a little ahead of themselves.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will remain fair and warm through Wednesday.

The low tonight is expected to be in the lower 40s, with the high on Wednesday climbing into the lower 70s.

The westerly winds that gusted at 10-20 mph today will diminish to 5-10 mph tonight.

Monday's high of 73 was eight degrees cooler than the record high of 81, set for that date in 1945. The overnight low of 41 was 24 degrees warmer than the record low of 17, set in 1936.

Midland man charged with murder

A Midland man has been charged with murder and two counts of attempted murder in the Sunday night stabbing death of 18-year-old Jeff Lawrence Dixon and the wounding of two other men.

Dixon, of Route 2, Midland, was stabbed at least once in the chest during a fight on a parking lot in the 1100 block of North Midkiff Road about 9:20 p.m. Sunday.

In the city jail this morning under a total of $100,000 bond set Monday by Justice of Peace Robert Pine was Manuel Mormalejo Rodriquez, 18, of 302 E. Cottonwood.

Injured in the stabbing were 23-year-old Rob Roberts of 2410 Stewart and 21-year-old Mark McBeth of 2600 N. Loop-250. Roberts was in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital with back wounds and McBeth was in serious condition with facial cuts.

Funeral arrangements for Dixon are incomplete. The fight reportedly stemmed from a name-calling incident. Police today said they would try to have three juveniles who were arrested with Rodriquez certified to stand trial as adults.

Drug paraphernalia to be displayed

A wide variety of drug paraphernalia will be displayed tonight by Sgt. Eulalio Camarillo of the Midland Police Department during the second part of the drug awareness seminar sponsored by the Bowie Elementary School PTA Parent and Family Life Education program.

Camarillo also will discuss the law's view of drug abuse in Midland and explain the uses of the paraphernalia during the program which will be held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Bowie cafeteria, 805 W. Elk.

He will be joined by Mental Health Mental Retardation counselors Sam Guyton and Shelley Peckham. Ms. Guyton and Ms. Peckham will discuss their experiences in preventive and theraputic counseling.

The public is invited to attend. For more information, contact the PAFLE chairman at 683-8928.

TESCO opens building at new location on Wall

Texas Electric Service Company opened its new Western Division headquarters building today during a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 1700 W. Wall St.

Hosting the event was the Midland Chamber of Commerce with President Larry Bell as master of ceremonies. Remarks were made by Mayor G. Thane Akins, County Commissioner Durward Wright and TESCO Western Division Manager Winston Barclay. Following the ribbon-cutting, the 29,367-square-foot building was opened for tours.

The new masonry and bronze glass structure replaces the company's offices at North Colorado and Texas in downtown Midland. The new offices are centrally located on the edge of the downtown business district but in an area relatively free from traffic congestion.

"Our new location offers a number of advantages to our customers, including the convenience of easily accessible off-street parking and additional drive-in facilities," Barclay said.

"With the growth of Midland and the accompanying increase in the number of our customers, it's important that we continue to have adequate customer service facilities," he added. "We now can provide faster, more convenient service to our customers, and as Midland continues to grow we'll be able to keep up with that growth."

Barclay said the new building has more office space than the company's former quarters, with allowance for any necessary expansion in the future.

The building houses the company's customer service staff, telephone service, credit department, cashiers, accounting and personnel offices, meter reading headquarters, oil field representatives' offices and the engineering department. It also is headquarters for TESCO's Western Division, which serves 17 counties in the Texas portion of the Permian Basin.

Two drive-in windows in an attached drive-through service facility have been provided for customer convenience and may be expanded in the future as demand increases.

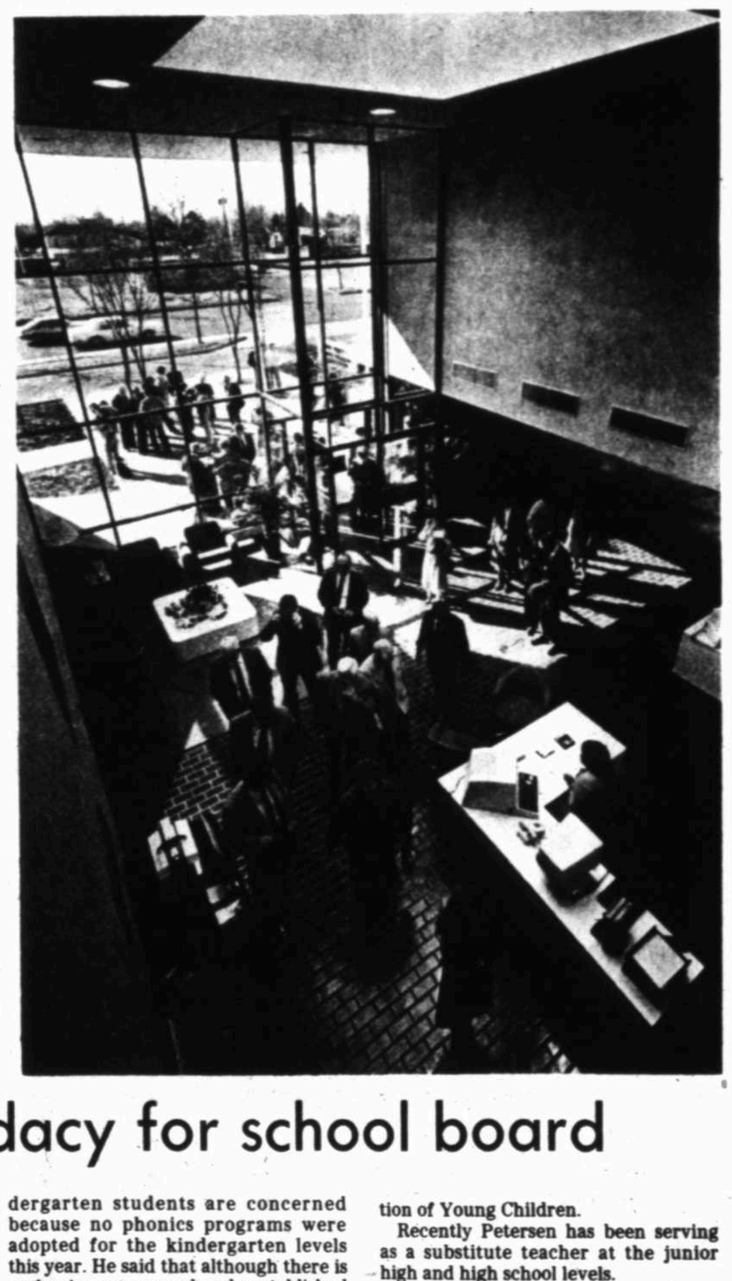
Barclay also noted that the new office building is designed for maximum energy efficience.

All outside glass is double-paned, and the roof and exterior walls are well insulated. Wide roof overhangs limit the amount of direct sunlight that can reach the windows.

Inside, an energy management system will reduce energy use by automatically controlling the air conditioning system on a pre-programmed schedule based on weather conditions and the time of day.

An energy-saving lighting system also has been installed in the building. Large office spaces are lighted by a high-efficiency, task-oriented system, enhanced by reflectors, that produces more light for the amount of electricity used.

TESCO has been providing electricity to Midland since 1927.



Petersen announces candidacy for school board

Benton Petersen, 4505 Versailles Drive, announced his candidacy today for Place 5 on the Midland Independent School District board of trustees. The position is currently held by Parker Humes, board president.

A six-year resident of Midland and a former counselor, Petersen has worked with the MISD, private schools and day-care centers as an interpersonal consultant, teaching instructors how to improve relationships with other teachers, administrators and children.

One of the main problems faced by the school district, according to Petersen, are "teachers and principals bailing out in droves.

"All of these good teachers are leaving and the ones that stay, even if they are good, feel like if they were so good, then they should be leaving too," he said. "It's demoralizing for the teachers."

Petersen said he feels the school board should do something to reinforce teachers in their careers.

"I think the school board can do a lot in providing teachers with some backup," he said. "The school board is kind of between the teachers and the parents, or the taxpayers. The school board plays a very vital part in letting the parents know what's going on in the schools.

"I think the school board can present a more positive PR to the parents by emphasizing the positive to the parents and the teachers."

Instead of a principal always sending home a note when Johnny acts up, Petersen said notes also should be sent home when Johnny makes an A.

He said that one of the school board's roles should be to keep parents informed.

"Parents have lots of questions," he said, adding that many parents of kindergarten students are concerned because no phonics programs were adopted for the kindergarten levels this year. He said that although there is a phonics program already established for that age group, some parents are unaware of its existence. Parents are also concerned over some of the textbooks which are not considered to be challenging, he said.

"Each student should be challenged — no matter what grade level," Petersen said.

Petersen is a member of the National Association for the Education of Young Children and is president-elect of the West Texas Association for the Education of Young Children.

Recently Petersen has been serving as a substitute teacher at the junior high and high school levels.

A native of Salt Lake City, Utah, Petersen earned his master's degree in Liberal Studies from the University of Oklahoma in 1980. He received his bachelor's degree from Weber State College in Ogden, Utah, in 1968, where he majored in speech and minored in English.

Woman lands in jail after proposition

Midlander Ron Wilson was driving in the 700 block of North Big Spring Street about 2 a.m. today when a woman standing on a parking lot motioned for him to pull over.

Wilson obliged, and the woman struck up a conversation that soon turned into a proposition: oral sex for $50. Wilson accepted. As he and the woman drove off in his car, the familiar question of "Your place or mine?" arose. She opted for her westside motel room, but he suggested they try his place.

She agreed and then was placed under arrest as Wilson pulled up to his "place" — the police station. Wilson is a plainclothes detective who was driving an unmarked patrol car. The 21-year-old woman was booked on solicitation of prostitution charges and transferred to the county jail this morning.

Space shuttle inches its way to launching pad

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia began inching along a 3¼-mile journey to its launch pad early today as officials scanned the skies for signs of rain or lightning.

Under the glare of floodlights and perched aboard a steel crawler the size of a baseball infield, the shuttle began moving from the Vehicle Assembly Building at 4:21 a.m. EST for the four-to five-hour trip to Launch Complex 39.

Officials moved up the rollout time by almost 40 minutes because of the possibility of a storm front reaching Kennedy Space Center before the shuttle was fastened securely to the launch pad where it is to make its third voyage into space on March 22 with astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton aboard.

Skies over Cape Canaveral were clear before dawn today when the rollout began, but there was fear of rain and lightning during Columbia's slow journey.

"We can take the rain if we have to, but we can't have lightning," said Mark Hess, a Kennedy Space Center spokesman. "Once it gets to the pad, it's OK, There's lightning protection there."

The 184-foot-tall "stack" of the orbiter, its mustard-colored external fuel tank and twin rocket boosters went out the door of the huge VAB at 4:50 a.m. EST.

THE SHUTTLE and its launch platform, weighing more than 11.8 million pounds, moved at less than 1 mph toward the launch site.

"It's takes a while to move those things — they're not light," Hess said.

Officials said they hoped to make all connections of the shuttle and its mobile launcher platform to the launch pad about eight hours after rollout began.

Lousma and Fullerton awaited the placement of the shuttle on its launch pad, where they will rehearse countdown proceedures for 33 hours this week.

Once at the pad, the Columbia will rest on the platform so it "touches metal to metal," Hess said. A rotating platform will move around the spacecraft so technicians can link fuel, electrical and communications lines from the Columbia to the ground.

The hookups will continue until Thursday, when Lousma and Fullerton will begin the simulated launch, Hess said.

LOUSMA AND FULLERTON, who returned to Houston Space Center Saturday for more training, will return to Kennedy Space Center for the countdown demonstration test, NASA spokesman Dick Young said.

The astronauts will be awakened early, eat breakfast, suit up and enter the shuttle as if the mission were ready to launch.

In the test run, which ends Friday, however, no propellants will have been placed in the tanks, Hess said.

On Sunday, technicians completed installing explosive devices used to separate the Columbia's solid rocket boosters just before the space ship begins to reach orbit. On Monday, the crawler was moved into place.

Lousma and Fullerton completed two make-believe missions without a hitch Friday.

One test, a simulated firing, re-entry and landing, took about an hour. Earlier, the two completed a 26-minute mock emergency return to the shuttle's launch site, Young said.

THE FUEL CELLS of the solid rocket boosters and the auxiliary power units will be tested later, he said.

Golden Fleece Award given for Wisconsin sound, light show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire is giving his Golden Fleece of the Month Award for February to the National Endowment of the Arts for giving a $7,000 grant for a sound and light show at the state capitol in Madison, Wis.

"The history of this project demonstrates the mindless and wasteful ways in which federal funds are spent," Proxmire said today.

The Wisconsin Democrat said the purpose of the event — according to its sponsors — was to "turn Wisconsin's state capitol building into a geometrically-tuned instrument which will bring together and send forth human and planetary energies in a message of world peace."

"While attempting to tune-in and turn-on, this project has only turned off the American taxpayers," said Proxmire.

Dr. Zachary Berk, president of the Peace Project, which was a primary sponsor of the Dec. 21 show, said the event was not a waste of the taxpayers' money and met its goal.

"The money was set aside for a multiculture event, which was satisfied," Berk said in a telephone interview from Madison. "We are disappointed that Sen. Proxmire chose not to communicate with the planners and the participants of the event, but relied on the opinions of people in the vicinity who did not get close enough to experience the true spirit of the event."

In his news release, Proxmire said:

"The history of this project clearly shows the inability of the National Endowment for the Arts to control the spending of taxpayers' money once a grant has been approved.

"In a matter of days, a grant issued to continue a fine community project with the proven track record was transferred into supporting a conceptual art project involving an exhibition of colored lights and unintelligible sounds."

Koch may enter race for governor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York Mayor Edward I. Koch is leaning toward entering the race for governor of New York state and will declare next week whether he is a candidate, The Los Angeles Times reported in its Tuesday editions.

Koch, who won re-election as mayor with 75 percent of the vote last year, said in an interview with the newspaper that he has not made his final decision, which will be announced on Feb. 24.

But close associates report that the mayor said he is leaning strongly toward throwing his hat into the ring, the newpspaper said.

A major factor in Koch's decision is what he sees as the attitude of the Reagan administration toward local government.

"Before, all of us chief executives of localities hopefully could look to Washington for aid to our problems," he said in the Times interview. "That's been closed to us. There's a war on the cities and states of this country, emanating from Washington. We now have to look for whatever assistance we are going to get at the city and town or village level from Albany."

New York Gov. Hugh L. Carey announced last month that he would not seek a third term.

Employees retire early

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Almost 1,000 Polaroid Corp. employees — nearly a sixth of the company's work force — have elected early retirement under a company plan designed to reduce personnel and cut costs, it was reported today.

Study the club suit in this hand. It is a position that occurs frequently. What you are about to learn will earn you rich rewards over the years.

North's bidding is the sort that drives partners to commit mayhem. He had nowhere near the values for a free bid at the two-level in a suit higher ranking than his partner's. He should have simply responded two diamonds and waited to see whether his partner could move over that. We attach no blame to South for leaping to game.

West led his fourth-best spade against three no trump. Declarer made the technically correct play of holding up for one round, then won the spade continuation. By developing three diamond tricks, declarer could count seven top tricks. Obviously, he would not have time to set up two heart tricks, so he would have to count on the club suit for four tricks.

A cursory glance at the diagram might make it look as if declarer needs a finesse to collect those tricks and that he can play either defender for the queen. Not so!

To make four tricks in clubs, declarer must find a favorable division in the suit. His problem is that he is missing all the intermediate spots. If East has the queen of clubs, declarer can never make more than three tricks in the suit—all East has to do is cover the ten of clubs when it is led from dummy, and declarer will inevitably have to concede the fourth round of the suit to one of the defenders no matter how the club suit is split.

The only way to score four club tricks from this combination is to hope that West holds the queen of clubs guarded no more than twice. So at trick three declarer led a low club to dummy's ten. He then cashed the king of clubs. When the queen dropped, declarer had time to knock out the ace of diamonds to bring home a well-played game.

AFL-CIO suggests surtax to fund defense increases

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — The AFL-CIO, accepting President Reagan's challenge to offer alternative economic solutions, is pushing a recovery program tied to a pay-as-you-go Pentagon policy and restoration of cuts in social spending.

The top policymakers of the 15-million-member federation, unveiling "An Alternative to Reaganomics," exhorted Congress Monday to enact a special, progressive income surtax to fund any increases in fiscal 1983 defense spending.

Federation President Lane Kirkland stressed the proposal was not a departure from the AFL-CIO's long-standing support of a strong national defense. The American people should not be forced to choose between an adequate military and domestic programs for the poor and unemployed, he said.

Although Reagan and big labor have been at loggerheads on economic issues since the outset of the administration, the chief executive is striving to avert a collapse of relations with union leaders.

Vice President George Bush, named by Reagan in December to be the administration's point-man for dealing with labor, was to appear before the AFL-CIO leaders today at their midwinter meeting in this Florida resort.

Kirkland said he hoped "we will have a civilized exchange of views."

"This administration has proposed an intolerable tradeoff," Kirkland said of Reagan's plans for the new budget year, which include a $33 billion increase in defense spending accompanied by a $41 billion cut in social programs.

Reagan, stumping for his economic policies in the Midwest last week, challenged his critics "to put up or shut up."

"I think the president's point was quite well taken — that those who disagree with him should offer an alternative. We did last year...and we continue to say that no one else has offered an alternative," Kirkland said.

The cornerstone of the AFL-CIO plan is a $64 billion reordering of national priorities that Kirkland said would not further swell the federal deficit.

The AFL-CIO wants Congress to rescind various provisions of the tax cut enacted last year, which it said could save the treasury $31 billion.

Kirkland said he has a "high degree of skepticism" about the need for an additional $33 billion for the Defense Department. He urged members of the House and Senate to analyze the Pentagon's budget with "the same degree of skepticism and care with which the budgets for social programs are examined."

The federation's proposed surtax should be provided by an assessment against individuals and an "inescapable levy" on corporate earnings, the labor leaders said.

Auto workers are likely to ratify tentative contract

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser says there's a good chance Ford Motor Co. workers will ratify a tentative contract designed to cut labor costs and save thousands of jobs.

"If the committee is any reflection — and committees usually are — I think the Ford workers will look upon the agreement affirmatively," Fraser told a news conference Monday at the UAW skilled trade conference in Detroit.

Meanwhile, a top UAW official says the union may open contract talks with American Motors Corp. now that the union has finished negotiations with Ford.

Ray Majerus, UAW secretary-treasurer, said Monday that a meeting of union officials from AMC plants will be scheduled "within the next two weeks" to consider bargaining with the company.

"We'll watch and see how the ratification process goes with the Ford workers, although we could proceed regardless of that," said Majerus.

The union's Ford bargaining committee unanimously endorsed the 31-month contract settlement on Saturday. On Sunday, the agreement won unanimous approval from the UAW's international executive board.

Society too court-happy

In the past four decades, civil suits in the federal courts have increased more than five times faster than the population — from 35,000 in 1940 to 180,000 in 1981. The conventional response has been to build more courtrooms and appoint more judges. But that remedy seems to attract more legal traffic than it alleviates. Even with scores of new judges added under the Omnibus Judgeship Act of 1978, the case backlog has grown, not lessened.

Indeed, Americans spend so much time suing each other that Chief Justice Warren Burger made "our litigation explosion" the central theme of his State of the Judiciary address to the American Bar Association in January.

Justice Burger asked the assembled lawyers to attack the problem in a novel manner — by discouraging lawsuits. He suggested that conciliation, mediation and arbitration might be better ways to settle many disputes.

"Americans are increasingly turning to the courts for relief from a range of personal distresses and anxieties. The courts have been expected to fill the void created by the decline of church, family and neighborhood unity," the chief justice said.

We have more lawyers per capita than any other nation on earth, and Burger's suggestion that they discourage clients from suing each other did not win their enthusiastic applause.

There are other ways, however, to relieve court congestion. Courts still adhere to archaic paperwork practices that are indefensible in the age of instant communication. And trials got longer as evidenciary rules became more complex. Pre-trial skirmishing, in which lawyers seek procedural advantage, has become as time-consuming as the trial itself.

Appeals courts have become overloaded with frivolous appeals. Appeals court judges, in turn, overload the trial courts by ordering cases retried on points of procedural nicety that have little bearing on substantive issues.

As a result of all this, Americans increasingly find the judicial process "stressful and frustrating, expensive and unrewarding," to borrow Justice Burger's phrase.

That being the case, the legal profession might be wise to explore reform before the public, taking its cue from the chief justice, devises ways to settle disputes without using lawyers at all.

An indictment of India

One of the bluntest indictments of the government of India has come from the lips of none other than India's president, Sanjiva Reddy. He said his country faces "frightening consequences" if it continues its slide away from moral values.

Mr. Reddy did not mention Prime Minister Indira Gandhi by name, but it was obvious that her leadership — or to put it more accurately, lack of leadership — was the target of his criticism.

He took the occasion of the 32nd anniversary of the Indian constitution to announce his retirement in July, and to sound off about his country's troubles: "Values and sanctions which had in the past enabled us to live together in peace appear to be losing their hold."

In his opinion India has been slipping not only morally, but economically and spiritually. He spoke as follows on economic conditions: "The fruits of development are beyond the reach of a large number."

Mr. Reddy noted what the world has long noted, which is that Mrs. Gandhi has not measured up to examples set by previous leaders, one of whom was her late father, Jawaharlal Nehru. "What we find today," he said, "is the very antithesis of the noble spirit that animated the nation only a few decades ago."

The president is eligible for a second five-year term, but the prime minister has not asked him to stay on. Perhaps it is because he talks too openly and candidly of his hopes for "nobler spirits" to assume the rein of government in New Delhi.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Despite new role, Helms crusty as ever

WASHINGTON — Throughout his Senate career, Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has enjoyed the luxury of irresponsibility.

Jack Anderson

Until a year ago, he had been on the outside looking in, able to wage guerrilla war on the Democratic majority without having to offer positive programs of his own. Obstruction was the name of his game.

All that should have changed when the Republicans won control of the Senate and a man of unassailable conservative views moved into the White House. Presumably, Helms would be sobered by the formal trappings of power and become an enthusiastic member of the Reagan team.

But old habits die hard. And Helms isn't a team player; if he wins one, it won't be for the Gipper, but for himself.

The round-faced, hazel-eyed Helms is at his best — or worst — in hit-and-run attacks, savaging his political enemies with any weapon at hand. A former newspaper and radio newsman, he knows how to manipulate the press to his advantage.

A recent incident illustrates how Helms, who looks more like a college professor than a curmudgeon, has reacted to his unaccustomed role as a Senate leader. It has Democratic senators and their staffs — and even a few Republicans — grinding their teeth in frustration. Here's what happened:

As chairman of the Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Hemispheric Affairs, Helms scheduled a hearing on "Possibilities for Democracy in Central America." The subcommittee's majority and minority staffs set to work compiling a witness list, which would presumably represent the entire spectrum of opinion on the wartorn region.

But it soon became clear that Helms and his henchmen were more interested in pushing their views than in observing the hoary traditions of fairness and civility in the august body. They were, in short, stacking the hearing, loading the witness list with experts who agreed with the chairman's views on Central America — that communists were at the root of all the troubles there, and could be thwarted only by resolute U.S. military support of the conservative juntas.

One witness the Democratic staff wanted was Prof. Thomas Anderson, a respected expert on El Salvador. But a few days after he was invited to testify, the Democrats were informed by John Carbaugh, a professional hardball player on the Helms team, that the witness list was complete. There would be no room for anyone else to testify.

The astounded Democratic staffers, with support from the staff of Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., Foreign Relations Committee chairman, protested to Carbaugh. He coolly suggested they find a senator to take their appeal to Helms. There would be no accommodation at the staff level.

This further infuriated the Democrats. As one later told my associate Lucette Lagnado, "When Frank Church was chairman, we had countless Helms crackpots come and testify." Turnabout is not fair play in Helms' rulebook, the Democrats complained.

In the end, the disgruntled staffers prevailed on Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., to put their case to Helms directly. The patrician Pell was informed by the down-home Helms that the Democrats could have one witness. They settled on Aryeh Neier, an official of the group that monitors the Helsinki human rights agreement. Prof. Anderson was "disinvited."

The hearing was duly held, with full press coverage and a wholly lopsided presentation of conservative views. It was just the way Jesse Helms wanted it.

CUTTING THE COATTAILS: Usually, in an election year, a traveling president is accompanied by congressional members of his own political party whenever he flies off to the hinterlands. Elected representatives like to show the home folks they're close to power here in Washington.

But a strange thing happened when President Reagan flew off to Iowa last week: The state's three Republican congressman — Jim Leach, Thomas Tauke and even freshman Cooper Evans — all begged off with the excuse that pressing business forced them to stay in Washington. Sen. Roger Jepsen was sick, so this left only one Capitol Hill representative, Sen. Charles Grassley, to share the stage with Reagan.

It's been suggested that the "pressing business" that kept the three GOP legislators away is the attempt to put some distance between themselves and the president, whose budget proposals would spell disaster for many Iowa farmers. Unlike the timorous trio, Grassley doesn't need to worry about re-election till 1986.

WATCH ON WASTE: Everything's up-to-date in the Health Care Financing Administration, where a fancy new audio-visual "teleconference center" has been installed for a six-month trial. It connects the Washington office with 11 offices around the country, enabling Dr. Carolyne Davis and her administrators to have meetings and conferences via closed-circuit television. The new toy is costing $115,000 for the six-month tryout, and will save thousands in travel expenses, according to HCFA officials. To save even more, meanwhile, the agency is firing 260 employees.

INSIDE REPORT:

Memo comparing Soviet stooge to Polish patriot raises ire

WASHINGTON — An internal Voice of America memo comparing Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's top communist and Soviet-backed dictator under martial law, with Marshal Jozef Pilsudski, the epitome of anti-Russian Polish nationalism in the 1920s, is stirring anger and anguish inside the Reagan administration.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"There are more similarities than the Soviet and Polish communists would care to admit between the Jaruzelski putsch and the takeover by Marshal Pilsudski in the early '20s," said the memorandum to a high official of the Voice. The difference between the two, it said, is only that "Pilsudski was and still is reasonably popular."

Reaganites in the International Communication Agency, which controls the Voice of America, were flabbergasted. Pilsudski's hero status as an anti-Russian patriot has increased since Jaruzelski decreed martial law under orders from Moscow, while Jaruzelski is regarded as a Soviet stooge. The memo has raised new questions within the administration about the Voice of America.

SUPPLY-SIDERS FEUD

Long-simmering animosity between two leaders of supply-side economics, Rep. Jack Kemp and millionaire businessman Lewis Lehrman, exploded when Kemp endorsed State Controller Ned Regan against Lehrman for the Republican nomination for governor of New York.

Lehrman was stunned, learning of Kemp's decision only the night before. Lehrman's friends contend he had been assured by Kemp scarcely a month earlier that the influential congressman would stay neutral in the race for the governor's nomination. Kemp's advisers deny that, claiming he had no choice but to endorse Regan, his fellow Buffalo Republican.

Whatever the truth, poisoned personal relations between the two supply-siders made Kemp's endorsement of Regan easy. Whereas other New York Republicans gave Kemp first refusal rights on running for governor before unequivocally throwing in their hats, Lehrman announced his first try for public office with the affirmation that he could not wait for Jack Kemp to make up his mind.

ANTI-AMERICAN AGAIN

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has been warned to expect a new round of anti-American demonstrations in Western Europe over his decision to match Soviet chemical warfare production with new U.S. chemical weapons.

An earlier round of hostile demonstrations against the Reagan administration last fall was keyed to the NATO plan to modernize aging missiles in Western Europe, essential to meet the challenge of the Soviet SS-20s targeted against NATO. Those demonstrations had strong backing and some financial support from the Soviet Union and such communist-front organizations as the World Peace Council.

The new demonstrations, U.S. officials have been warned, will be kicked off sometime this spring against Weinberger's prudent decision not to sit idly by any longer while the Soviets perfect new chemical and biological warfare weapons. Weinberger hinted to Congress that the administration may charge Moscow with breaking a treaty against the manufacture and use of these dread weapons.

JIM BAKER'S ANGER

Although the angry demand by Iowa senator Roger Jepsen for the firing of top White House political aide Ed Rollins has been resolved, the incident angered White House chief of staff James Baker III.

While President Reagan was defending his new budget last week on a tour through Iowa, with Baker at his side, Jepsen's press secretary, Jim Lafferty, put Baker on the spot. Lafferty said, "Ask Jim Baker" when Iowa reporters questioned him about whether Rollins would get the axe for allegedly making a derogatory remark about Jepsen.

After returning to the White House, Baker and Jepsen smoothed out the dispute over Rollins. Rollins apologized to Jepsen for using boxing-ring language to describe Jepsen's last-minute decision to change his vote and support Reagan in last fall's AWACS vote. But Baker told the senator he did not appreciate the way his aide had put him on the spot.

REAGAN VS. HUMAN EVENTS

Human Events, the right-wing weekly that long has been a bible for Ronald Reagan, is admittedly less pleasant reading for him since he became president.

Two Human Events editors, Tom Winter and Alan Ryskind, were present at a stormy session of conservative movement leaders with the president and senior aides. The conservatives aired a long list of complaints, headed by failure of true Reaganites to get key posts in the administration, that have filled the pages of Human Events in the last few months.

At one point during the meeting, Reagan was asked whether he still read Human Events. The president smiled, then used the old John F. Kennedy quote: "You might say I'm reading it more but enjoying it less."

the small society

CHARLEY REESE

Poor aren't resisting budget cuts

If the bulk of the federal budget went to the poor, it would be politically feasible to cut it in half tomorrow. The reason it is so difficult to cut the federal budget is that the bulk of it benefits the rich, the almost-rich, and the want-to-be rich.

Charley Reese

Poor people are not politically powerful. The truly poor are usually ignorant of political processes, unable to contribute to campaigns, inarticulate, and ignorant of their Congressman's name, let alone how to influence him.

Let me give you an example. The Associated Press reported recently that 60 percent of the 34,000 students at the University of Florida were receiving a total of $45 million a year in financial aid, 90 percent of it federal. Half the graduate and professional students were on government-guaranteed loans.

Now the University of Florida may not be Harvard, but it is no poor man's school. By no stretch of the imagination is 60 percent of its student population poor or from poor families. It is middle and upper-middle class through and through.

Certainly, if you probe among the 34,000 students, you will find your token poor along with your token blacks, but the bulk of that $45 million is going to families with nice homes, comfortable incomes, and all the other amenities of American prosperity. You will find the same pattern on every other major university campus in the country.

Student aid is really a subsidy of the middle class and of the banking and education industries. Unfortunately, it doesn't make for good demagoguery to scream about denying education to the prosperous, so the comfortable middle class makes use of the token poor for the purposes of political rhetoric.

Not long ago I was accosted by a man at a service station. He was a veteran. He had developed cancer of the bladder. His cancer had no relationship whatsoever to his military service, yet the Veterans Administration had, at the taxpayer's expense, provided him with "free" surgery to remove his bladder.

Do you think he was grateful? Oh, no. He was complaining that under Reagan he now had to purchase with his own money a cheap little brush for his prosthetic that the Veterans Administration had formerly given him.

The Reagan administration is now in the process of paying off loans to private American banks which had financed grain sales to Poland. That is a taxpayer's subsidy of private banks. Now if you are a grain broker, you sell your grain to Poland at a profit. The bank, which is in the business of renting money for a profit, finances the sale at a profit. Why should the taxpayer guarantee the transaction? Because he's a sap. He doesn't share in the profits, but he is supposed to provide millions to the bank in the national interest of furthering agricultural exports. It's funny how nobody asks the banker and the grain broker to think about the national interest.

Most of so-called government philanthropy is a thinly disguised diversion of private wealth by public police power into other private pockets. Take an honest look at the FHA-guaranteed mortgage program, for example. (Realtors and mortgage bankers always scream when I point this out.) This is really a subsidy to the mortgage bankers and homebuilders under the guise of helping the home buyer.

If the home buyer, however, makes his mortgage payments, he would have done so anyway so there was no need for the government guarantee. If he fails to make them, he gets booted out into the street and the bankers get their dough and the house back. What the scheme really amounts to is a government guarantee for the marginal customers of the mortgage banker, allowing them, without risk, to expand their profit-making business.

In other words, let's suppose we sell widgets on credit. We sell our widgets to everybody with a prime credit rating. Now there are some people who are iffy. So we run to the government and say, "You guarantee us against loss, so we can sell our widgets to that segment of the market, too." Nice scheme.

Belive me, the effective resistance to Reagan's budget cuts is not coming from the poor. It's coming from the spoiled and the greedy.

Tom Hayden, anti-war activist of the 1960s, is shown with his wife, actress Jane Fonda, at a recent $200-a-plate campaign dinner in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hayden, one-time firebrand leader of the anti-war movement and unsuccessful candidate for a U.S. Senate nomination, is running for office again. And this time he is given a good chance of joining the political establishment he once fought in the streets.

More than 600 people paid $200 each last week to be served by black-tie waiters and to rub shoulders with a galaxy of television and movie stars at the kickoff of Hayden's campaign for a seat in the state Assembly.

The scene was a ballroom in Los Angeles' posh Century Plaza Hotel, the same room that every president since Lyndon Johnson has used to court the monied elite of California. The Tom Hayden of 1982 is seeking acceptance as part of the political establishment of the California Democratic Party.

Declaring it is time for "a new generation of leadership" in California politics, Hayden is campaigning against President Reagan's "new federalism" as a "mean-spirited" doctrine "which contains a very dangerous sanction of selfishness that will be a disaster for our people."

Hayden says he believes the California Legislature "will become a major battleground of the '80s" where Democrats will forge alternatives to Reagan's economic plans.

Hayden, who in 1969 shouted outside the walls of Folsom Prison to "free the leadership of the revolution" from prison, in 1982 is talking about the need to put more police on the street to fight the "crisis in crime."

The announcement marks Hayden's second bid for political office in California. Six years ago he ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate in the Democratic primary against the incumbent, John Tunney.

But there are several major differences between that campaign and Hayden's 1982 campaign.

In 1976, he had no realistic chance of winning. It was a campaign to establish political credibility. This time, Hayden is seeking a lower office, and he could win.

He will face Steve Saltzman, a aide to Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, and Alan Katz, a former federal Securities and Exchange Commission attorney in the June 8 Democratic primary. The seat is currently held by Democrat Mel Levine, who is seeking a seat in Congress.

Hayden is, if not the favorite, a strong contender, with far more political experience than his two Democratic primary foes and more acceptance among party leaders. And with the Hollywood connections of his wife, actress Jane Fonda, Hayden has far more ability than his rivals to raise campaign funds.

His announcement dinner netted more than $100,000, raising his total to $250,000, a vast sum even in 1982 for so early in a legislative campaign.

Although some Democratic Party leaders in California are still wary that Hayden might be a liability, a target for Republicans to campaign against in races statewide, many others are ready to accept Hayden in the party heirarchy.

The chairman of the Los Angeles County Democratic committee and the president of the Los Angeles City Council topped a list two dozen or more party and local officials attending Hayden's kickoff dinner.

Chapman undergoing treatment

MARCY, N.Y. (AP) — Mark David Chapman, who pleaded guilty to killing former Beatle John Lennon, is undergoing treatment at the Central New York Psychiatric Center here, authorities say.

Chapman was transferred to the state facility on Wednesday from the maximum-security Attica state prison because officials decided he needed psychiatric care, Martin Von Holden, center director, said.

No extra security measures were planned during Chapman's stay, Von Holden said.

Chapman is serving a sentence of 20 years to life after pleading guilty to shooting Lennon on Dec. 8, 1980, outside Lennon's New York City apartment.

Chapman will be treated "like every other one of the 2,000 patients we have treated in the past five years," Von Holden said. "We will take a look at him, evaluate his needs and treat him, then we will transfer him back to a correctional facility."

Von Holden said patients normally stay about 70 days, but he could not speculate on the length of Chapman's stay.

"Chapman is here because Central New York is the only treatment facility in the state for prisoners in county jails or state prisons," Von Holden said.

Acting state Supreme Court Justice Dennis Edwards recommended psychiatric treatment for Chapman on Aug. 24 when he sentenced 26-year-old Chapman.

Williams' sentencing scheduled

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Sen. Harrison Williams Jr., D-N.J., could receive up to 15 years in prison for his conviction on conspiracy and bribery charges in the FBI's Abscam sting operation.

Williams, a senator for 22 years, was to be sentenced today in federal court, an action postponed for three weeks to allow him to recuperate from an emergency hernia operation.

Williams was one of seven members of Congress convicted in the Abscam operation, in which an undercover FBI agent posed as an Arab sheik willing to pay for favors.

He was convicted last May of conspiracy, bribery, conflict of interest, interstate travel in aid of racketeering, and receiving a criminal gratuity.

His co-defendant, lawyer Alexander Feinberg of Cherry Hill, N.J., who also could have gotten up to 15 years in prison, was sentenced last month to three years and fined $40,000.

After Williams' sentencing, the Senate was expected to begin debate on whether he should be expelled.

Critics gear up for fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalist critics of the Reagan administration say they are gearing up for "the fight of our lives" over proposed changes in the Clean Water Act being drafted by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The administration has yet to conclude its bitter fight with environmentalists over how clean the air should be, with reauthorization of the Clean Air act still pending in Congress more than a year after that battle began.

That notwithstanding, the administration now is drafting revisions it would like Congress to make in the 10-year-old Clean Water Act.

The revisions being considered would revamp the act by delaying deadlines and loosening industry clean-up standards.

After the outcry over the proposed Clean Air Act revisions, however, the administration is saying its water law rewrite would be a modest mid-course correction.

"We intend to suggest changes only in those few areas where obvious statutory problems have emerged," EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch has told members of Congress. The Clean Water Act as it now stands, she said, is "fundamentally sound."

Environmentalists, however, have a different view of the changes being considered.

"We have the fight of our lives on our hands because the very roots of the Clean Water Act are being questioned by the administration," said J. Taylor Banks of the Natural Resources Defense Council.

Mothers say they never feared

ATLANTA (AP) — Mothers of three black teen-agers who practiced music with Wayne B. Williams say they never feared when their sons were alone with him and still wouldn't be afraid even though Williams is charged with killing two young blacks.

The three mothers testified as defense witnesses at Williams' trial Monday before the aspiring talent promoter became ill and had to leave the courtroom, forcing an early recess in the proceedings.

Court personnel said Williams was treated earlier Monday at a local hospital for an intestinal virus and was expected to return to court today.

The 23-year-old black man is charged with murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose slaying during a 22-month period were investigated by special police task force.

No arrests have been made in the 26 other killings, but prosecutors have introduced evidence in 10 other slayings in an effort to show a pattern of murders that includes the deaths of Cater and Payne.

The mothers, Lula Burns, Shirley Flemister, and Carla Howard, were among 13 witnesses called Monday to dispute prosecution claims that Williams is a homosexual who hated poor blacks and has failed in the music business.

Defense attorney Mary Welcome asked Mrs. Burns if she was fearful about her son's participation in Gemini, the singing group Williams promoted.

"No," Mrs. Burns responded. "He (Williams) wanted them to make it in singing; he wanted them to be a famous group of singers."

Mrs. Flemister and Mrs. Burns said they never heard Williams make derogatory remarks about blacks or poor people.

On one occasion, Mrs. Flemister said, Williams brought a teen-ager to her house and asked her son to talk with him because the youth had been threatening to commit suicide. She said the boy lived in a foster home and thought "nobody cared about him."

"He (Williams) told Stu (her son) to talk with him, that he wanted to commit suicide and that that wasn't what he should be doing with his life," she said.

The three women's sons, Broderick Burns, Stuart Flemister and Jimmy Howard, also testified Monday, telling jurors that Williams never made homosexual advances toward them or gave them reason to believe he was a homosexual.

Burns said he had known Williams for four years, Flemister two years and Howard one year.

A defense witness called Monday, Williams' business associate Carla Bailey, countered the testimony of prosecution witness Kent Hindsman, who said he saw Williams with Joseph "Jo Jo" Bell, one of the victims on the task force list.

Williams has denied knowing any of the 28 blacks on the list.

Hindsman testified last month that when he was given a ride by Williams and Miss Bailey from a recording studio to downtown Atlanta in December 1980, Bell was in the car. Bell was killed in April 1981.

Miss Bailey said the teen-ager in Williams' car with Hindsman was David Stevens. She said she worked with Williams virtually every day for the past five years, and never saw him with any of the victims on the task force list.

Miss Bailey also disputed Hindsman's testimony that she had given him a note in Williams' presence that said, "I could be a president, I could be a mayor, or I could even be a killer."

Prosecutors did not present testimony about the source of the note, but left the impression it was Williams.

But the note, Miss Bailey said, was from an autobiographical statement written by a youth Williams was auditioning and did not include any mention of the word "killer."

Miss Bailey, who testified Williams made passes at her, said he often referred to homosexuals by derogatory terms such as "twinkies," and he "didn't want them around nowhere near him."

von Bulow doctor found no trace of drugs

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Martha "Sunny" von Bulow's doctor testified today that her blood showed no trace of alcohol and only small amounts of other drugs after she lapsed into a coma that her husband claims was caused by heavy drinking and drug abuse.

Dr. Janis Gailitis, testifying in Claus von Bulow's trial on charges of twice trying to kill his wife, said Mrs. von Bulow "was blue, was struggling, gasping for breath" when he arrived at the couple's mansion Dec. 27, 1979.

Von Bulow, 55, is charged with trying to murder his wife with insulin injections during 1979 and 1980 Christmas visits to Clarendon Court, their Newport mansion. Mrs. von Bulow, 50, is still in a coma from what the state claims was the second attempt on her life, on Dec. 21, 1980.

Gailitis said he was taking out his stethoscope to begin examining Mrs. von Bulow when "she vomited and stopped breathing...there was no pulse, indicating cardiac arrest."

The doctor said he administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and began chest compressions, reviving Mrs. von Bulow by the time an ambulance arrived.

Gailitis said he talked by telephone with von Bulow twice that day about Mrs. von Bulow's worsening condition. He said von Bulow told him she was an alcoholic and "he really was ashamed to admit it or talk to somebody about it." The doctor said he was told Mrs. von Bulow had suffered similar lapses after drinking bouts.

Gailitis said he asked if Mrs. von Bulow had taken barbiturates. "He indicated, I can't recall his exact words, that she had had trouble with those drugs also."

The physician also said he was told Mrs. von Bulow had been out of bed earlier in the day to take some soft drinks and tapioca pudding.

Mrs. von Bulow's maid, Maria Schrallhammer, has testified von Bulow ignored her appeals to call a doctor that day. She also testified Mrs. von Bulow remained unconscious that day and never left her bed.

Gailitis said insulin tests were ordered on Mrs. von Bulow's blood during the first coma, but he was not asked if the levels were especially high. The samples were drawn after she was given sugar solutions, he said. Earlier, another physician testified glucose could trigger the natural production of insulin.

On Monday, Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Needham angrily threatened to oust reporters who asked about his closed-door talks with the 12 jurors and four alternates. "Your numbers could be seriously curtailed if there is another repetition of the group as a whole trying to find out," he told reporters.

"If I deem something to be appropriate for the record, I will put it on the record," he said.

Brighten up for spring

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Internationally recognized makeup artist Paul Hayes says "bright" is the key word in makeup for spring.

Hayes, who will arrive in Midland Thursday for a week's stay, adds that his palette of makeup complements is what we'll be seeing in spring fashion shades—red, blue, yellow, white, turquoise and teal.

"The face for spring becomes alive with clear, definite color. Golds will be a carry over from the holiday season, but used in different ways."

Hayes, who researched in Italy and Germany for five months last fall, was chosen by Town & Country magazine to style the makeup and hair of The Bright Stars of Texas, a portfolio of socialites from all over the state.

He has also appeared in Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, Self, Glamour, Mademoiselle, Bride's, Time, US, People, Newsweek and foreign publications.

Some of his credits include Carrie Fisher, Olivia-Newton John, The Village People, Van Halen Rock Group, and Meat Loaf.

Hayes, who will be based at the Midland Hilton during his stay here, gives some following pointers to meet a woman's makeup needs for spring:

• All over foundation should match skin tone, using lighter foundation shade to highlight certain areas of the face and to allow the bright shades to work as radiant color.

• Contouring is a must for evening makeup, using a light brown contour opowder. Remember, for evening makeup, lights go down, intensity of color must be turned up.

• Cheeks are dusted lightly with color along outer edge of cheekbone and worked into the hairline using a cosmetic puff. For day make-up, a lighter foundation shade is blended above this blush pattern to create high cheekbones. For evening, this area can be dusted with gold eyeshadow to create an iridescent finish, very beautiful under candlelight.

• Eyes are elongated with the primary eyeshadow and eyeliner pencil. Highlight foundation is used as a base before eye coloring, blended from lash line to brow line and dusted with loose powder. The base and powder veil will help the top-layer colors to glide on easily and keep them fresh looking hours longer.

To achieve an elongated effect, begin with primary eye color at the inner corner of eye following lash line and blending color from outer edge of pupil in a horizontal line past outer corner of eye. Inner corner of eye and browbone are highlighted with light peach. Liner is applied in a wider line on lower lash line than on the upper lid, outer half. A lot of mascara is applied after curling lashes. Brows are neat with a nice, soft curve to them. Fill in where sparse and brush up to give an open eye effect.

• Lips glisten with clear color. They are lined and buffed before lip color is applied. Mix clear shine gloss with lip color before application. For evening, a light gold can be blended in center of lower lip and again glossed with clear shine lip gloss.

To complete this radiant face, a very light dusting of powder is applied to set makeup and to give the face a "patina" finish.

America's indoors turning green

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (AP) — Indoor gardeners are caring for more than twice as many plants as they did five years ago.

The average number of plants in the 58.8 million households that had indoor plants in 1981 was 21.9 plants, up from an average of 10.0 in 1975, according to Phillips Products, a manufacturer of planterware.

The company's fifth annual survey was taken recently.

Inside and out

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's no secret that a used car appearing clean and well-maintained on the outside will sell faster and bring a better price.

A little cleaning under the hood is a good idea, too. A clean engine is more attractive and suggests care. You can clean the engine block, power-steering mechanism and power brakes without dismantling them by using an aerosol engine degreaser, which dissolves and flushes away grease, oil and dirt.

Hairstylists say femininity is in CHICAGO (AP) — Unisex is dead, and it's okay for women to be feminine again. That's the fashion word for spring from the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board, made up of a dozen of the nation's outstanding professionals.

The liberated locks of the '70s and tailored "executive" fashions of recent years have given way to a new look that reflects a changing self-image among American women, according to the board. In hair, says Brenda Longhofer, member from Louisville, Ky., "Many women are choosing styles that are feminine and ladylike.

"Frizzy hair isn't feminine any more," she notes. "Today's hairstyles are softer, shinier and prettier — like the new clothes. And, like the hemlines, hair lengths will either be long or very short."

Board members characterize today's hair fashion image as a combination of delicacy and practicality.

"Perms are a good example," says Gerald Haynes, Detroit. "Whatever the fashion trends may be, perms remain a necessity for easy style maintenance and for the soft look that women want."

Haynes adds that "women are looking for a wider range of salon services, and all of top quality." That statement may hold the trend of the future: pampering is making a comeback.

Haynes and other board members report an increase in requests for makeup applications, skin-care consultations and hair coloring.

Tin soldier march

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Tin soldiers are more than child's play for Wendell Schollander, who has made more than 270 miniature tin soldiers impeccably attired in their World War I uniforms.

Schollander, a lawyer for R.J. Reynolds Industries, spends hours casting a mold. Then he begins painting the replica. Even with a magnifying glass, it can take up to 30 hours to paint one minutely detailed soldier.

Schollander says there are fewer than 20 fellow enthusiasts in the United States.

Dinosaurs fast

WEST HOLLAND, Mich. (AP) — — A scientist has found that some dinosaurs could run faster than sprinting humans, though not as fast as greyhounds or racehorses.

The dinosaur tracks measured in Texas showed speeds from 6 feet to 39 feet per second. Human athletes can achieve speeds of 33 feet per second. A horse can run more than 50 feet per second, says the scientist, who lives here.

Be doggedly consistent in instructing pup

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — "Never call a dog to come to you when you intend to punish the dog physically. If you do, the animal will quickly learn to run away from you when you call it," says Connie Jurgensen, instructor at a training center here.

"Dogs should not be physically punished. I recommend the simple use of a collar and leash during training. Verbal praise or food may be used as rewards," she says.

Most important is to "always be consistent in what you make a dog do or not do," Jurgensen says.

On the house

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

From various sources come these bits of information of interest to the homer owner:

If you installed a solar hot-water heating system now, you would not have to wait until you filed your 1982 income tax return in 1983 to start claiming tax credits, according to John Kay, president of Energy Works East of Durham, N. C. Kay sends along this note:

"Due to a change in IRS regulations, all you have to do is go to your employer and file an amended W-4 form to start receiving reimbursement immediately. The new form specifically states that an employee can claim an increased number of allowances and can reduce his withholding tax if the tax owed is itself reduced by a claim for the residential energy credit on the purchase of a solar hot-water heating system. The effect of this change is that a taxpayer will immediately have more tax-free income at his disposal."

A conversation at a gathering recently made it clear many people have an exaggeragted idea of the rate of mortgage loan delinquencies during a recession. When I asked for guesses on the percentage rate of such delinquencies, the replies ranged between 8 and 25 percent. The truth is, based on figures of the nation's savings and loan associations, that the rate in any one month is usually below 1 percent. Only twice since 1976 has it gone above that figure and both times it got no higher than 1.06 percent. Mortgage loans are considered delinquent after 60 days. People tend to make their mortgage payments even when they can't handle other loan payments.

More than 38 percent of the exhibitors at the National Home Center, Home Improvement Congress and Exposition in Chicago March 14-17 will introduce new products. One exhibitor will offer discounts determined by the roll of the dice. Another will have a "savings" wheel that will enable people to compute how much money they presumably will save by installing transparent window film in their homes.

While it is still difficult for most persons to purchase conventional houses, it is getting a bit easier to buy mobile homes. New Federal Housing Administration loan limits have just been put into effect by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The FHA now will insure single-section mobile homes up to $22,500 instead of $22,000 and double-section homes up to $35,000 instead of $30,000. Also, the repayment period has been extended from 15 years to 20 years.

New insurable loan limits also have been established for the combination mobile home and lot program administered by HUD. The new ceiling for a single-section unit and lot has been increased to $35,000 from $27,500, while for a double-section unit and lot it has gone up to $47,500 from $36,000. The insurable loan limit for a lot has gone to $12,500 from $9,315.

HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. says the changes will, in effect, lower the required down payment on mobile homes by reducing the dollar gap between the amount the FHA will insure and what it actually cost to buy a home.

(If you are a do-it-yourselfer, you can get much valuable information from Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

PUSHING COTTON — U. S. cotton producers are presenting ideas on color, design and fabric for Fall-Winter 1982 apparel and home fashions through Cotton Incorporated's New York fabric library, THE COTTONWORKS. Manager Jill Mason is presenting cotton innovations to interested designers, manufacturers, major retailers, and the trade press through March. COTTONWORKS is a unique service provided by Cotton Incorporated on behalf of U.S. cotton producers through their "self-help" research and promotion program. "If not for this service there would be no point in the marketing chain for this important audience to learn about cotton," said Miss Mason. Cotton Incorporated also has COTTONWORKS in Dallas and Los Angeles.

National Park ranger has lonely job

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

ANACAPA ISLAND — Two hundred brown pelicans perching on Arch Rock kept their eyes glued on the lone ranger of the National Park Service as he cruised by in his Boston Whaler.

As caretaker of the 5-mile long chain of three Anacapa Islets, Jonathan Lewis, 27, also is responsible for the waters surrounding his domain.

"I am the only human being on Anacapa most of the time. Yet, 12 1-2 miles across the Santa Barbara Channel close by on the California mainland live millions of people," Lewis who has been here for two years, said.

He stays on the island for at least 10 days straight, then has four days off. Sometimes he is on the island for 20 consecutive days with 8 days off or 30 days followed by 12 days liberty.

"Sometimes in my solitude during the mainland rush hours I listen to the freeway traffic radio reports and feel guilty," Lewis said.

The quiet of the island is interrupted every 14 seconds by the raucous wail of the Coast Gurd foghorn.

"But I never hear it," the ranger said. "It groans around the clock, but I'm oblivious to it."

He lives alone in a 3-bedroom Coast Guard house that had been home for lighthouse keepers before the Anacapa Light and foghorn were automated in 1966.

When visitors come to the island, Lewis acts as a guide and leads them on an interpretive walk along the island's 1 1-2 -mile trail.

There is a campground here but campers are required to bring everything they need including food and water. They are also required to take back with them everything they brought — including their trash.

"Since this is part of a National Park everything on the island is protected — insects, flowers, plants, rocks, shells," Lewis said.

Even the insects? he was asked.

"Well, technically you're not supposed to disturb anything. But I don't go around citing people for killing flies or mosquitos," he said with a laugh.

But he does try to prevent anyone from picking flowers and plants or removing rocks and shells.

"There are rare plants growing here," Lewis said. "The giant coreopsis, a woody plant with yellow flowers, is found only on the Channel Islands and at a few points along the coast."

He is a deputy warden for the state Fish and Game Department and enforces fishing regulations. He issues citations for taking lobster and abalone out of season and for catching too many fish.

He keeps a daily log on hw the plants and flowers are doing, notes the wildlife he sights, the visitors to the island and the citations he issues.

And, he worries a lot about the large population of black rats.

"The rats came from old shipwrecks," Lewis said. "The Park Service is trying to figure out how to get rid of them. But it's complicated." The island is also alive with deer mice. Red-tail hawks and owls feed on the mice which are important to the island's ecology and are native to Anacapa.

"If we set out poison to eliminate the rats, it would also kill the mice. We've got to find some way of doing in the rats without hurting the mice."

Lewis also serves as a lifeguard and looks out for the well-being of scuba divers. A number of them hve drowned in the waters off Anacapa.

It is also his duty to make sure divers do not carry off souvenirs from the wreck of the steamer Winfield Scott which sank in 20 feet of water Dec. 2, 1853, stranding the ship's 250 passengers on the island for serveral days.

Does the lone ranger ever get lonely?

"No chance," said Lewis. "I've got too much to keep me busy to find time to get lonely."

Automated bank teller use up

NEW YORK (AP) — Automated bank teller machine usage is expanding at a rate of 20 percent a year, reports a management information systems publication.

According to MIS Week, there were only about 1,000 ATM computers operating in the entire country in 1973. By the end of 1981, there were 24,000 in operation.

A beam signing

ATLANTA (AP) — To commemorate the topping-off recently of the tallest office building in the southeastern U.S., passers-by were invited to sign their names on a steel beam that was to be hoisted to the top of the structure.

"Thousands of Atlantans signed their names," said a Georgia-Pacific representative.

The 42-foot long, 2-ton beam completed 18,000 tons of steel used in the framework of the 52-story Georgia-Pacific Center.

DEAR ABBY

Pregnancy fears nag woman

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I read in the newspaper that a 50-year-old grandmother of eight just gave birth to twin boys in Michigan. I'm sure it wasn't planned, and now I'm worried because I'm also 50 and a grandmother, and if it could happen to her, it could happen to me.

Abby, I have a fairly active sex life and I thought my childbearing years were over, but how can I be sure? I haven't used any birth control for the last five years. I thought I didn't have to. At what age is a woman safe? — NERVOUS IN NEVADA.

DEAR NERVOUS: Don't go by age. Ask your gynecologist and take no chances. Medical records show that a baby was born to a woman in her 54th year. And biblical history (Genesis 21) reveals that Abraham's wife, Sarah, laughed when she learned that at age 90 she was pregnant, which today would be no laughing matter.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a housewife complaining because she had guests for Thanksgiving and her husband spent the day watching football, which spoiled the Thanksgiving dinner. You advised her to ask him either to sacrifice his football watching or to refrain from inviting guests on a holiday.

Why didn't you get with the times and advise that poor woman and thousands of football widows like her that life would be a lot less complicated if she or her husband would simply buy a videotape recorder and record the (stupid) game while the entire family enjoys a lovely meal together? Then afterward the football "nuts" can see the entire game together — WINNIE IN S.F.

DEAR WINNIE: It wouldn't work. Football "nuts" aren't content to wait until after the game is over to watch it on tape. They prefer the excitement of "seeing" history while it's being made.

DEAR ABBY: "Fed up With Football" gets no sympathy from me. So her man watches football all weekend—so what? She's lucky. He's there, she's there, and he's all hers. What more could she ask for?

And a little lovin' at halftime helps even the score and makes the afternoon more fun! — P.M.M. IN SEATTLE.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were talking about what we would do if the other one died first. My husband said if I died first, he would never marry again. Then I said if he died first I wouldn't marry again either. That's when he got a piece of paper and a pen and asked me to put it in writing!

At first I thought he was kidding, but he was serious, so I put it in writing and signed it.

We're not old, Abby. He's 43 and I'm 42. What I want to know is this: Can he hold me to it? — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: After he's dead, he can't "hold you" to anything.

Thailand has unique contraceptive methods

By BOB SECTER
Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

THONBURI, Thailand — Stalls at the Prannock Market in suburban Bangkok offered an especially wide selection the other day — shrimp, ducks, rice, flowers, greens and vasectomies.

"Mechai's Free Vasectomy," barked a loudspeaker at the edge of the open-air shopping area. "Safe and easy. No more poverty. No loss of power."

Mechai Viravaidya was at it again. This day he was offering 7-minute sterilizations in the back of a mobile van. Another day he may be leasing water buffalo at discount prices to Thai farmers who agree to practice family planning, or passing out condoms as prizes on television quiz shows and at formal diplomatic dinners.

Although birth control information is dispensed in most countries in a relatively discreet manner, Thailand's best-known population expert has all the subtlety of P.T. Barnum. He is the Monty Hall of family planners, always armed with a wide array of gimmicks, gags and prizes designed to seduce his countrymen into contraception.

His hijinks have made him as much a national hero as a national character. Thai slang for a condom has become "Mechai."

It may be clowning, but it is calculated clowning. "We've desensitized contraceptives to the extent that people can talk about them quite openly," explained the 41-year-old former government economic planing expert. "When we first began work, people in family planning were embarrassed by contraceptives, particularly the condom. Can you imagine a soldier embarrassed by the gun? You'd lose the war."

Mechai apparently is not embarrassed by much of anything. He frequently organizes contests to see who can blow up a condom to make the biggest balloon.

In December, to celebrate the birthday of King Bhumibol Adulyadej, doctors from Mechai's private, non-profit, community-based family-planning services agency set up a tent at a festival and sterilized 262 men with assembly-line precision. Participants in the vasectomy marathon were given the chance to enter their name in a grand prize drawing, and a few won scholarships for their children.

Such antics have produced chuckles, but they also have netted results. Population growth, soaring at nearly 3 percent a year only a decade ago, was down to 2.2 percent annually by 1980, according to U.N. statistics. Thai government estimates for 1981 show the rate dipping below 2 percent.

The largest birth-control drive was conducted by the government, but Mechai's flair for the unusual has earned him most of the credit for popularizing birth control in Thailand.

The son of a Thai father and a Scottish mother, he earned an economics degree in Australia and went to work as an economist in charge of evaluating development programs for the Thai government. He quit and went into family planning after determining that unchecked population growth would strangle the Thai economy and "all the foreign assistance, all the development would be for naught."

His organization, begun in 1974 on a shoestring, has blossomed into a $10-million-a-year organization fueled mostly by contributions from Western governments and philanthropic organizations.

The agency also sponsors rural health care and agricultural development projects, some of which are linked to population control.

Besides the program in which water buffalo are rented at half the usual rates to farm families that use birth control devices, the association is buying produce from some farmers at better than market rates if they practice contraception.

The produce is resold at a general store in Bangkok that also features a full line of birth control pills, condoms and T-shirts adorned with slogans. The store is named "Of Cabbages and Condoms."

The organization promotes both male and female contraception, but concentrates its publicity efforts mainly on men, who tend to resist the idea more than women. "In developing countries, most men feel that family planning is a duty of the female," said Praween Payapvipapong, associate project director for the group, "but it's cheaper and easier to sterilize men."

Mechai and his aides have enlisted a squad of beauticians, barbers, bus drivers, taxi drivers and parking lot attendants who routinely pass out free condoms and free birth-control advice to customers.

Mechai has even begun to export his unorthodox methods. The government of Sri Lanka recently put in an order for 10,000 of his key rings, which carry a condom encased in plastic and carry the message, "in case of emergency, break glass."

When the People's Republic of China asked for his help a few years ago, he recommended printing contraceptive details on a variety of consumer goods, from bottle caps to the wrappers of candy bars.

Animals trained

COLTON, Calif. (AP) — Using a technique called "Affection Training," a company here has trained more than 500 animals, from tigers to spiders, to perform in movies, TV commercials and circus acts.

By winning the love and trust of each animal with food, petting and praise, trainers teach animals to do everything from yawning on cue to staging realistic attack scenes with human actors.

Taking up space

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — A 25-foot tall, orange-colored object stands on the lawn outside St. Bonaventure University's science hall. The $200 structure is made of bamboo poles, radio wire and plastic water pipes.

The builder, physics major Steve Schrader, says it is a radio telescope. The physics department uses the telescope to measure the radio waves from the sun and Jupiter.

The 21-year-old Schrader says he hopes someday to work on the space shuttle.

"I used to weigh 194 lbs. and was so embarrassed I wouldn't go anywhere, so my husband used to go places by himself. I tried every kind of diet and reducing plan you can imagine but I never lost more than a pound or two and I always gained it back.

Then I discovered Nutri/System and lost 15 lbs. the very first week! I've gone from size 44 pants to a size 5. And now my husband takes me out every weekend."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

IRA savings too good to miss

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. Individual Retirement Account rules stipulate a person must pay a penalty tax, if he withdraws money from his IRA before reaching age 59½. However, isn't it wise for a 28-year-old to open an IRA as a means of savings, even if he intends to withdraw all the money in, say, 10 years?

A. Strictly for savings purposes, the answer has to be "yes." As far as taxes are concerned, the answer is "probably." You will come out ahead of the taxman — if you put your IRA money into an investment that performs well. That, of course is a big "IF." No one can tell you, for sure, how most IRA investments will work out over 10 years.

However, if your IRA investment earns high interest or dividends, the total value of the money you have tucked away will increase. Don't overlook the important fact that both the money put in and the earnings on an IRA are tax-sheltered until you make a withdrawal.

The benefit of the tax-deferred buildup in your IRA's total value could more than offset the tax you will have to pay when you take money out. You pay income tax on IRA withdrawals, no matter what your age. If you make a withdrawal before the year in which you become 59½, you pay income tax, plus a penalty tax equal to 10 percent of the amount withdrawn. There's no penalty tax, if you're disabled at an earlier age, or if you die.

Considering the tax savings you would have each year, when you put up to $2,000 into an IRA — $2,250, if you're married and your spouse is not employed — and the tax-shelter on IRA earnings, IRAs are too good to pass up.

Also, there's already some talk in Congress about easing the penalty rules on IRA withdrawals. Tax-sheltered annuities, available to employees of schools and non-profit organizations allow withdrawals — free of penalty tax in cases of "financial hardship." That is often liberally construed to include such things as the purchase of a home and children's college costs.

Many people feel the same rules should apply to withdrawals from IRAs and from Keogh plans for the self-employed.

Q. Can I set up an individual retirement account at a tax-exempt municipal bond mutual fund? My broker says doing so wouldn't make sense. What are your thoughts on this?

A. Your broker's right. A municipal bond mutual fund holds many different municipal bonds — bonds issued by states and their political subdivisions. Interest paid on municipal bonds is not subject to federal income tax. A municipal bond fund collects interest on the bonds it holds and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes the money along to fund shareholders — also free of federal income tax.

When you eventually withdraw money from an IRA, you have to pay income tax on all the money you take out. If your IRA was in a municipal bond fund, you would end up paying tax on your accumulated dividends -- taxes you wouldn't have to pay, if you invested in the municipal bond fund outside of an IRA.

Another point is, because municipal bonds pay lower interest than other bonds, municipal bond mutual funds pay lower dividends than most other mutual funds investing in bonds.

Finally, going through a list of municipal bond funds, I can't find one offering IRAs. You idea is a bad one. Forget it.

Q. My wife and I are both 66 and retired. Three years ago, we set up a partnership, working in our home, to do engineering work. We file all the necessary tax returns. Total income from our partnership is about $8,000 to $10,000 a year.

We would both like to start individual retirement accounts, beginning this year. A local bank is not sure we can, because we do not have W-2 forms or anything showing earned income. Do we qualify for IRAs.

A. Of course, you do. You both have earned income from the partnership. Your income tax returns show that. You can each put $2,000 into individual IRAs, starting this year. By reducing your family's taxable income $4,000 a year, you'll save a lot of tax dollars.

And, because the partnership gives you self-employed income you can each have a Keogh retirement plan. Each of you can tuck away 15 percent of your self-employed income annually. You should have opened Keogh plans, as soon as you set up your partnership.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Can pension funds aid American homebuyers?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Desperate for a new source of financing, the housing industry is looking closely at private pension funds, those huge and growing bundles of cash that geneally go to finance everything else.

The match would seem to be a natural, since pension funds are built up by ordinary working Americans, the kind of people who haven't been able to afford a new home during the past three years or so.

If such funds could be invested to provide funding for mortgages now, as well as retirement later, it would seem to be one of those rare instances when the ordinary citizen gets double value for his dollar.

It may not be that easy though. The National Association of Home Builders feels that new laws are needed before the funds can be used to any great extent in housing. ERISA, it says, appears to be in the way.

Stuart Lewis, NAHB counsel, has testified before Congress that ERISA, or Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, prohibits financial transactions between "related parties."

The restriction was written into law to prevent the abuse of pension funds, he told Congress. But, he argues, the effect is to deny the funds, which he estimtes at about $700 billion, from investing in a market where favorable commercial standards and interest rates exist.

Recent efforts to allow pension funds to invest in mortgages, Lewis says, have proved "unworkable," which is one reason why the NAHB endorses a bill filed by Sen. Orren Hatch, R-Utah, to clear the way.

That bill, he said, "recognizes that mortgage investment is a stable, high yeilding, long term investment which has consistencly produced better earnings than comparable fixed-rate securities...."

But not everyone agrees wth Lewis. Stan Ross, a partner of Kenneth Leventhal & Co., a certified public accounting firm, told builders at the January annual meeting of the NAHB "we don't need legislation."

Builders could raise as much as $500 million this year by marketing mortgage-backed securities to pension funds and other investors, he said. It could "spark a full-scale revival of the housing industry," he told the builders, 50 percent of whom the NAHB says are in the red.

"We already have the necessary instruments and market mechanisms available to allow the pension trusts to make sound investments in residential real estate," said Ross. He suggested that builders join to issue the bonds or perhaps do so through builder associations.

With views on the matter apparently contradictory, clarification would seem to be in order. The pension funds would appear to benefit because of the high returns and stability, the builders from getting new financing. But the biggest return of all might be for home-seekers.

Viewed conventionally, there is little demand for housing today. But hidden behind the convention is a tragic and in some ways alarming story, the story of millions of young households stymied by the market.

These millions fail to show up as "demanders" because they find themselves in a situation similar to the disheartened job-seeker who is dropped from the labor count because he has given up looking.

But they are there in body if not in statistical form — more people of homebuying age than ever before in one decade. They don't seek because their incomes cannot support today's extraordinarilly high interest rates, even when husband and wife both work. Besides, mortgages aren't that easy to come by, regardless of ads that suggest they are.

Considering the circumstances, it seems absurd that people building a pension nestegg so they may have security in retirement suffer one of the greatest insecurities of all in their prime years.

That is, being unable to invest their own money in their own home.

Study says women MBAs earn less

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Women with masters degrees in business at Stanford University expect less pay and prestige than their male classmates when they graduate — and generally get what they expect, a study shows.

While women and men earning MBAs in 1974 earned about equal salaries to start, women earned only 80 percent as much as the men did four years later, according to the study conducted by Myra H. Strober.

'African Queen' may enter race as part of Derby preliminaries

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Belle of Louisville and the Delta Queen might be joined by an old movie star as they race up the Ohio River in this year's Great Steamboat Race, part of a week of festivities before the Kentucky Derby.

The African Queen, which starred — along with Humphrey Bogart and Katharine Hepburn — in the 1951 film of the same name, just might join in this year's race. That's if former Louisville resident Jim Hendricks gets his way.

Hendricks, of Key Largo, Fla., recently bought the 76-year-old boat, and has been keeping it in front of the hotel he owns.

Last November, Hendricks spotted an advertisement offering the African Queen for sale by Hal Bailey, an Ocala, Fla., thoroughbred breeder who had used the Queen for excursion trips in Oregon.

For $65,000, Hendricks got the Queen — 30 feet long and 8 feet abeam — plus a large boat trailer and a tractor-trailer on which the Queen once toured the United States, raising money to fight cancer.

Hendricks also got a pack of old clippings that told where the boat had been. According to the clips, the Queen was a real African riverboat long before it ever met up with Bogie and Miss Hepburn. The Queen was built in London in 1906 or 1912, and used in the river trade until 1951, the clips said.

In 1951, the boat was "discovered" by director John Huston, who rented it from the Uganda government for his movie, the clips said.

In the film, Bogart — as river-rat Charlie Allnutt — and Miss Hepburn — as a missionary named Rosie — try to navigate the African Queen along a jungle river.

In the film the boat is destroyed to neutralize a German gunboat, but Houston's prop crew actually had constructed two other boats, letting the Queen stay in tip-top shape.

Hendricks and the Queen already have been invited to the Miami International Boat Show, which begins Thursday.

Hendricks, who keeps the boat a mile or so from the Caribbean Club bar, where another Bogart film, "Key Largo," was filmed in 1948, has already installed a video recorder in the boat. He says he's watched a tape of "The African Queen" about 10 times already.

Eventually, he plans to use the Queen to haul passengers around the harbor by the hotel at Key Largo.

But he's also got his eye on that Louisville steamboat race, and if he gets "a little encouragement" — financially speaking — he'll make the trip to the derby, scheduled for May 1. The Kentucky Derby Festival week starts April 25.

Normally, the race pits the Belle of Louisville, a local excursion sternwheeler, against the Delta Queen, a Cincinnati sternwheeler.

The boats travel from a point in the river near downtown Louisville, six miles upstream to Six Mile Island, and back. The prize is a pair of gilded elk antlers, which the winner gets to keep for one year.

The African Queen can travel at about 8 mph, as does the Belle of Louisville, Hendricks said, so he thinks the Queen stands a chance — if it isn't hurt by the wakes of its larger competitors.

UTPB program to show science fun

ODESSA — Public school students and special interest groups from throughout the Permian Basin are expected on The University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus for Permian Basin Science and Engineering Days, Feb. 26-27.

Dr. David Eggleston, chairman of control engineering at UTPB, said the program is intended to promote interest and enthusiasm for science and engineering.

"There will be exhibits and demonstrations of interest to all age groups from children through senior citizens. School classes are invited to tour the exhibits on Friday," he said.

Included among the exhibits will be home computers, talking computers, computers that display and play music, an operating flat-place solar collector system, microprocessors, and a microprocessor-based data logging system. Also included will be a wind-augmented automobile, an aircraft simulator, a jet helicopter, a ham radio and an automobile computer command and control. Demonstrations on biofeedback and water control analysis, and an ergometer demonstration of human power input also are on the agenda.

Saturday's events will feature a kite flying contest in addition to the demonstrations and exhibits. Awards in the kite flying contest will be given to those with the prettiest and highest-flying homemade kites in three age groups: kindergarten through fourth grade, fifth through ninth grade and 10th grade and above.

"This is an opportunity to come and experience some of the fun and fascinating developments in science and engineering," Eggleston said. "We are devoting exhibit space to those projects and demonstrations which have proven to be the most fun and interesting to students — the hands-on, let-me-try-it variety. It's all free and a lot of fun."

Book banning joins Supreme Court issues

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "There are no wrong books," says author Bernard Malamud. "What's wrong is the fear of them."

A decade after Malamud wrote those words in "The Fixer," a New York school district banned that Pulitzer Prize-winning novel and eight other books from its libraries.

Now, the Supreme Court will settle the dispute.

The Island Trees School Board's 1976 ban — which also includes Kurt Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse Five" and "The Naked Ape" by Desmond Morris — is not an isolated phenomenon.

In Girard, Pa., some parents are protesting the use of Studs Terkel's book "Working" in high school classes because of the profanity it contains.

In Warsaw, Ind., all 40 school copies of a textbook called "Values Clarification" were burned in December 1977 after the book was banned from classrooms.

And the American Library Association reported last month that librarians nationwide are fighting what they say is a "three-fold" increase in attempts to ban books from library shelves.

Some of the book banning and censorship cases are winding up in court.

Attorney Alan H. Levine, speaking of the New York case, said: "I believe quite strongly that if the power of the school board here is upheld, it would give school boards power similar to totalitarian governments'."

Levine will argue the case before the Supreme Court March 2 on behalf of five Island Trees students who challenged the Long Island school board's decision.

The board removed and banned eight books from the high school library and one from the junior high library. It also bars use of the books in classrooms.

Levine acknowledges there are "legitimate competing interests" between the school board's right to control public education and students' First Amendment rights to read books that contain strong passages about drugs, sex and brutality and sometimes use vulgar, "four-letter" words.

That brought a sharp dissent from the late Justice William O. Douglas, who said he and Justice Potter Stewart thought the issue should be resolved.

The couple booked five seats under the name Hardy and were to arrive at Nassau about 6 p.m. EST. Airline officials said the pair would stay aboard their jet and wait for a private plane.

The couple planned to change planes quickly and take off for an undisclosed locale on the resort island of Eleuthra.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — British singer Shirley Bassey, best known for her rendition of the theme song to the James Bond movie "Goldfinger," was listed in fair condition after undergoing exploratory surgery last week, hospital officials said.

Miss Bassey, 45, was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Hospital Thursday and underwent surgery a day later, Tess Griffin, a spokeswoman for the hospital, said Monday.

Although Ms. Griffin couldn't say when Miss Bassey would be released from the hospital, she said: "I'm sure it won't be much before the end of the week. She is improving, though."

Hospital officials would not say what kind of exploratory surgery the singer underwent.

Phone-in homework help appears to be working

ATLANTA (AP) — A pilot program designed to help students with their homework by telephone appears to be working, teachers say.

Instructors take the phone calls and help students complete their assignments without actually telling them the answers, said Heyward Thomas, a mathematics specialist who is supervising the project for the Atlanta Public School System.

The most difficult part of the program is not telling the students the answer to their problem, said math teacher Alfred Kiel.

"I mean, it's really hard," he said, after a 15-minute conversation with a second grader about fractions.

Sandy Pardue, an English teacher in the project, said many of the callers needed only basic help in understanding directions and then were ready to tackle assignments on their own.

Tennessee adopts new song

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Statehouse was rocking when the Osborne Brothers pulled out their guitars on the House floor, their feet stompin' to a hand-clappin' tune that legislators quickly adopted as the new Tennessee state song.

After warming up in the clerks' office Monday night, the Osbornes performed "Rocky Top," written by Boudleaux Bryant and Felice Bryant, to a packed audience of representatives and senators. It is an ode to the smog-free, down-home Tennessee hills.

With the first bar of the song lawmakers and spectators were clapping their hands while the Osbornes played their guitar, banjo, mandolin and fiddle.

The legislators must have liked what they heard. They approved 97-0 a bill to make the tune the fifth state song.

"Rocky Top" joins state songs "When It's Iris Time in Tennessee," written by Willa Mae Waid and adopted in 1935; "Tennessee Waltz."

Sometimes doing nothing best for flat feet

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son has flat feet, but the pediatrician doesn't recommend doing anything. What's the best treatment for flat feet? — Anna, New York

Dear Anna: As your pediatrician has indicated, sometimes the best treatment for flat feet is doing nothing. If the condition makes the child tire easily or causes pain, a shoe support may be beneficial. In some cases, surgery may have to be performed to correct the condition.

But sometimes doing nothing is the best thing you can do.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You once wrote that if a woman smokes when she is pregnant, her baby will weigh less when it is born. Is that because the mother gains less weight if she smokes while she is pregnant? — Peggy, Stamford, Conn.

Dear Peggy: Your theory may sound reasonable, but it is not borne out by the facts. One study of more than 2,000 pregnancies has shown that the lower birth weights of babies whose mothers smoked were not related to lower weight gain by the mothers. However, smoking by the mothers was strongly associated with low birth weight.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been taking nitroglycerine for over a year because I have angina. Now a buddy of mine tells me it can be used like a cream and spread on the skin. Is he pulling my leg? — Cody, Hoboken, N.J.

Dear Cody: Your buddy is giving it to you straight. Nitroglycerine ointment has been used to treat angina and apparently is effective.

A study by Dr. Jorge A. Salerno at University Hospital in Pavia, Italy, demonstrated that the ointment was helpful in seven of 10 patients in whom it was tried. The side effects were few. Three patients complained of headaches related to the drug, but none was forced to discontinue treatment. It is speculated that the patients who were not helped may have absorbed the drug at a much slower rate, and therefore did not receive the same degree of protection.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm a working mother, not because I want to be but because I have to be. I must have read a dozen articles saying it's better for a mother to stay home with her children, and another dozen articles saying it makes no difference. What do you say? — Mrs. N.T., Phoenix

Dear Mrs. T.: The conflict over whether a mother should or should not work is unfortunate, particularly when the mother has no choice. However, you may find the results of a recent study reassuring.

Dr. Eileen Hock, of Ohio State University, reports that the children of mothers who work full time do not appear to be adversely affected, either in regard to motor and mental development or in relation to the quality of the mother-child relationship. She bases her conclusions on tests of infants at one year of age. Furthermore, Dr. Hock says, in some cases employment even seemed to enhance the quality of the relationship between mother and child.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My obstetrician says he wants me to go to a hospital with an intensive care unit for babies when it's time for me to give birth. He says it's because I've been taking medicine for high blood pressure. Is this usual? — Mrs. G.S., Queens, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. S.: Some babies born to hypertensive mothers who have been taking medicine during their pregnancy may be in need of more intensive care than would ordinarily be the case. One study done in England showed that babies of mothers who received lorazepam intravenously needed help with their breathing, had a lower body temperature, and did not suck as well as other babies did.

The recommendation for a hospital with a neonatal intensive care unit would appear to be a precautionary move.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The doctor says my grandson has juvenile rheumatoid arthritis. Does that mean it will clear up when he is no longer a juvenile? — Mrs. M.O. Atlanta

Dear Mrs. O.: Juvenile rheumatoid arthritis unfortunately does not always resolve itself when a patient grows older, although there is a good chance that it might. A study by Dr. John J. Calabro, of Saint Vincent Hospital in Worcester, Mass., may give you some idea of the chances that the disease will disappear as the patient matures.

Of 100 patients studied by Dr. Calabro, 74 achieved complete remission, while 26 continued to have active disease. I assume your grandson is under the care of a physician, and I would urge him to follow the doctor's instructions to the letter.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother-in-law recently fractured her hip and is now laid up in bed. I keep hearing about these fractures in older people. Isn't there some way to keep them from happening? — Mildred, Chicago

Dear Mildred: One way to prevent fractures is to make the living situation as safe as possible. For example, a torn rug is an invitation for someone to trip and take a fall.

From a medical standpoint, physical activity seems to have a beneficial effect on bone loss, which makes older people more susceptible to fractures. A study among residents in a nursing home showed that bone mass increased after they participated in a program of physical exercise. This was also true among a group of postmenopausal women.

Leonard knocks down Finch three times in third

Cold start doesn't slow Sugar Ray much

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard said he was cold in the first round against Bruce Finch after the fight was delayed 10 minutes due to television technical problems.

But once Leonard warmed up, he was torrid, knocking down the outclassed Finch three times before the fight was stopped at 1:50 of the third round.

"I came out a little cold, it took me about a round or two to warm up," said Leonard after he retained the undisputed welterweight boxing championship of the world. "I warmed up for 20 minutes before the fight, but then I had to settle down when it was delayed."

LEONARD, IN his first fight since winning the combined title last September against Thomas Hearns, lost the first round of Monday's bout on the cards of the three judges.

But he took command midway through the second round when he unleashed three savage hooks to the body followed by a right that sent Finch reeling.

Following Finch across the ring, Leonard threw a right that put Finch down for the first time, but the challenger struggled to his feet. Another flurry of punches put Finch down for the second time, but he managed to get to his feet and last the final few seconds of the round.

Finch came out swinging in the third round and landed perhaps his best punch of the brief fight, a right to the champion's head. But Leonard hit Finch with a flurry of punches followed by a left hook that buckled the challenger's knees. Two left-right combinations later, Finch was on the canvas for the third and final time of the night.

"Once I hurt an opponent the rest is history," Leonard said. "When he had me in the corner in the second round, he made me realize he was serious. I had to get serious and take over."

LEONARD SAID referee Mills Lane had no choice but to stop the bout after the third knockdown, adding he thought Lane should have stopped it after Finch went down for the second time in the second round.

But Lane said Finch was still in control of his senses until the third knockdown.

"He was able to take a punch without his head flying around," said Lane. "His eyes were clear. He deserved a chance to go on."

Leonard, who received a minimum of $1 million for the fight against the World Boxing Council's fourth-ranked contender, said his next title defense probably will be against Roger Stafford, ranked third by the WBC.

Leonard's attorney, Mike Trainer, said the fight probably would take place in May or June, but first Stafford has to beat David Madrid on March 2 in Atlantic City.

The 25-year-old champion, who previously has said he would eventually like to meet middleweight champion Marvin Hagler, said he has no plans now to move out of the welterweight division.

"I'll stay a welterweight," he said. "I feel very strong and effective in this weight category."

A tearful Finch said after the fight he had planned to go inside against Leonard and keep the pressure on throughout the scheduled 15-round bout.

"My plan was to stay as close as possible to Sugar Ray," he said. "I didn't follow up on him in the corner. That was my big mistake. I guess I learn from my mistakes."

FINCH, 145¼, received about $100,000 for the fight, which attracted a sellout crowd to Reno's 6,500-seat Centennial Coliseum. The fight was the first title bout in Reno since Jack Johnson stopped Jim Jeffries in a heavyweight bout in 1910.

Undisputed welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard heads for a neutral corner after sending challenger Bruce Finch to the canvas for the third time in the third round. Lady Bulldogs end season with victory

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland High girls basketball team ended the 1982 District 5-5A season at Chaparral Center Monday night with a free and easy 72-52 win over Abilene Cooper.

The victory was the 19th of the year for the Lady Bulldogs against 13 defeats and the win only left the reminder of what could have been if they had won 20 games this year instead of 19.

MHS finishes the second half race with a fine 5-2 mark after making a solid second half run, but a loss to Abilene High earlier in the race proved to be the clincher that kept the Bulldogs out of the district playoff, which begins Thursday in Big Spring when Midland Lee takes on San Angelo.

But, at least, this was one fine finish by the Bulldogs as Janice Littlefield ended her career at Midland High with a 15-point effort. Littlefield, who was All-District as a junior, led the Bulldogs in scoring this year.

SENIORS SHELLY Parker and Missy Larremore also ended their careers on high notes as Parker canned 14 points and Larremore 10. Junior Penny Griffen was the only other Bulldog in double figures with 10 points as MHS coach Jane Young was allowed the luxury of giving her reserves plenty of playing time in the season finale. In all, nine Bulldogs got in on the scoring act and all 12 played.

"We were free and loose out there tonight and I think the girls had a lot of fun," Young said. "I still think we had a pretty good team. We could be in the playoff with one more win."

Cooper played with the Bulldogs in the first period as the quarter ended in a 14-14 knot. Littlefield scored 10 of her 15 points in the period and then turned it over to the rest of her teammates the rest of the way.

Even with the score tied at the end of one, it was easy to see that the Bulldogs were going to walk away with this one. Young played everyone she had in the first quarter.

THE BULLDOGS broke the game wide open in the second period with a 22-10 explosion as Parker, Larremore and Cindy Besek all cut loose with six points in the frame. MHS led 36-24 at the half and there was no looking back after that.

Cooper's Carla Selden, a one-woman show for the Cougars, led all scorers with 22 points, but she had little help from the rest of the team.

Both teams scored 14 points in the third period, but MHS cût loose with 22 again in the fourth period for the final 20-point lark.

Cooper ends the season with an 11-18 record, 1-6 in the second half. The Cougars won only one game in 14 district outings this year. MHS had a poor 3-4 mark in the first half as San Angelo and Lee tied for that crown with 6-1 records. MHS' 5-2 mark was strong in the second half, but Abilene High won the second half title outright to force the three-team playoff.

Rebels host AHS, Bulldogs at Cooper

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Chaparral Center will be the site of a very important basketball game for the Midland Lee Rebels tonight when they host Abilene High at 8 p.m.

Abilene High is currently tied for first place in the District 5-5A second half race with San Angelo at 4-1 and could clinch the state playoff berth, by virtue of a better performance in the two halves, by winning its final two games of the season.

But, that's just one side of the coin. If the Rebels should win their final two games, then they could force a four-team playoff at the end of the regular season. Lee could also possibly clinch the state berth outright, but to do that Abilene High would have to lose its final two games.

If San Angelo ends up winning the 5-5A second half title outright, then Midland Lee, Midland High, Abilene High and San Angelo will be in the playoffs.

ABILENE HIGH has a lot of talented players on their squad this year and Lee coach Paul Stueckler has a lot of respect for their abilities, especially the ability of a sophomore guard that has "advanced beyond his years.

"Abilene High has a real talented team," said Stueckler. " They've won 23 games this year and that's more than anybody in else in the league. "They have excellent personnel.

"They have one of the most talented sophomores in the league, Brett Enzor. He presents some problems. He can penetrate a defense, zone or man-to-man and when he does he can dish off. He's just a sophomore but he doesn't play like one. He's advanced beyond his years. It's an effective manuever, more common in college."

And Enzor isn't the only player Stueckler will have his Rebels looking out for. "All their players are good," he said. "They have a 6-foot-6 postman, John Chalk, who's good. He's been a starter for them for three years.

"They've got 6-foot-3 forward Mike Simmons and he's been in the 20's most of the time in scoring and they've got another guard, Shannon Daniel, and he can hurt you from outside."

Coach Stueckler feels that a key to tonight's game will be keeping Enzor from penetrating the Rebel defense. Outside, Lee has three guards that will have the task of trying to stop him in the back court, Randy Pepper, Alvin Dunson and Steve Cherryhomes, and if he should get by them then the inside players, Kenneth Brown and Alvin Dunson will have to take over.

On offense, the Rebels have an inside-outside punch from Van Buren and Dunson. The two Rebels are averaging 16.8 and 16.3 points per game respectively. Pepper and Blackwell are also capable of putting points on the board from long range an Brown as the ability to score from underneath although his biggest contribution to the team is his rebounding.

WHILE LEE is facing Abilene High, Midland High will be in Abilene against the Abilene Cooper Eagles in a game that has no importance toward the outcome of the District 5-5A race.

The Bulldogs, after finishing in a tie for the first half title, have been in a tail spin throughout most of the second half of play and the result has been a 2-3 record. Cooper was also a contender in the first half, but has done no better than MHS.

Even though the MHS-Cooper game won't effect the 5-5A standings, it does have importance for the Bulldogs. MHS still has a shot at a post-season playoff and would like to finish the year on winning note to build momentum if things work out right.

The Bulldogs will be throwing a triple double figure scoring threat at the Cougars with Preston Robertson leading the way with a 19.1 average. Don Sharnowski is hitting at a 13.3 rate while Raymond Parker is at 12.9. MHS also has Jim Gunnels as a threat with a 9.3 average.

Elsewhere around the 5-5A, Odessa Permian, with an outside hope of making the playoffs, will travel to San Angelo and Odessa High hosts Big Spring.

Eagles edge Rebels with bucket in final seconds

ABILENE — Abilene High's Tracy Hubbard scored from underneath with 10 seconds left here Monday night to hand the Midland Lee girls basketball team a 57-55 loss in the last regular season District 5-5A game of the year.

The score was tied at 55 when Hubbard got a feed from Sonya Roberts for the deciding points as AHS ended its second half surge with a perfect 7-0 record while Lee fell to 4-3.

However, the game had little impact on the race since Abilene High had already captured the second half title last Thursday. So now it's on to the district playoff, which begins at 7 p.m. Thursday at Dorothy Garrett Colisieum in Big Spring when 21-10 Lee squares off against 19-10 San Angelo. The winner of that game will meet 18-9 Abilene High for the right to advance to the state playoffs Friday at 7 p.m. at the same site.

Lee and San Angelo tied for the first half title, and Thursday's game is really to see who wins the first half crown. Then the first half winner will meet AHS, the second half winner on Friday. That winner goes to the playoffs.

Hubbard led all scorers with 25 points Monday in what could be a preview of the district championship game if Lee wins Thursday against San Angelo. Teammate Roberts had 13 points.

Lee was led by Yshun King's 22 points and Shun Harris' 15. Those were the only Rebels in double figures.

AHS jumped to a 10-4 first quarter lead, but led by a narrow 21-20 margin at the half as Lee made a comeback.

But the Eagles erupted again in the third period with a 21-point effort to build a firm 42-32 margin heading into the final period. Lee outscored AHS 23-15 in the final period, but that was still two points short. Lee had one last shot with two seconds left to tie the game, but the ball didn't fall.

In other 5-5A action Monday, San Angelo prepped for the Rebels with a 58-48 win over Odessa Permian as Else Ornales hit for 24 points while Big Spring downed Odessa High, 44-37.

Chaps clinch WJCAC tie by beating Frank Phillips

BORGER — The Midland College Chaparrals made it 14 straight Monday night by defeating Frank Phillips College 90-81 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

The victory proved to be all-important for the Chaps as Amarillo College, second in the WJCAC, suffered a 63-61 loss to Western Texas. MC's win, combined with the Amarillo loss, clinches at least a tie for the conference crown, and with three games remaining on the schedule, MC needs to win only one for outright honors.

The Chaps came out cold in the opening minutes of the game and gave the Plainsmen the early lead, as much as 12 points.

"It was a long trip up there and we weren't ready to play when the game started," said MC coach Jerry Stone. "Frank Phillips came out real strong and they were running by us. We were down by as much as 12 in the first 10 minutes but our players showed a lot of poise and started coming back."

The comeback in the first half saw the Chaps cut the Plainsmen's 12-point lead to just one by the end of the half as they went into the lockerroom down 36-35.

The momentum gained in the final minutes of the first half carried over into the second half with MC taking over the lead and running it up to as many as 15 points.

Spud Webb led the Chaps in the scoring department with a game-high 32 points while Puntus Wilson added 28 and Chester smith 18. For FPC, James Wright had 18 points followed by Roger Hughes with 15, Clifford Morgan with 14 and Marcus Bishop with 13.

On the defensive side of the ball, Coach Stone credited Justin Morett with good play saying, " "Justin Morett came in and played very well for us on defense.,"

On Thursday, the Chaps will conclude their current string of road games when they travel to Odessa to take on the Odessa College Wranglers. On Monday, MC will have homecoming festivities on the agenda as the Chaps conclude their home season against Western Texas. The final game of the season will be in Clarendon against Clarendon College on Feb. 25.

Virginia, North Carolina, DePaul, Missouri top four

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

While Virginia's Cavaliers remain No.1 in The Associated Press college basketball poll, West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett is whooping it up over his own ninth-ranked Mountaineers.

Virginia, 25-1 following a tough 56-52 victory over Georgia Tech Monday night, received 57 of 60 first-place votes Monday. The Cavaliers also collected 1,197 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, who again tabbed North Carolina, DePaul and Missouri for the Nos. 2-4 positions, respectively.

Oregon State and Tulsa, which was surprised by Drake Monday night after the poll was compiled, inched up to the No.5 and No.6 slots. Iowa, stunned by defending national champion Indiana last Saturday, slipped to No.7 while Minnesota, West Virginia and Kentucky rounded out the Top 10.

"This season has been a phenomenal thing," said Catlett, now in his fourth season at the helm of West Virginia, 21-1. "For a while, I didn't think this team was good enough to be in the Top 10. I do now. Our kids have earned the right to be rated with the best."

The Mountaineers, whose biggest victories this season have been against Ohio State and Virginia Tech, currently are riding the nation's longest major college winning streak at 20 games.

"When you win 20 straight games, it's a great accomplishment," said Catlett. "And I don't care if you're playing in a church league downtown. I never thought as a coach I'd have the privilege of being a part of a team that won 20 in a row."

North Carolina, impressive in beating highly regarded Georgia last Sunday, received one first-place votes and 1,115 points in holding down the No.2 position. Ray Meyer's DePaul Blue Demons were tabbed No.1 on two ballots and collected 1,075 points.

Once-beaten Missouri got 1,031 points. Oregon State, winners over California and Oregon last week, picked up 920 points, while Tulsa, upset by Drake Monday night after the poll was counted, got 846.

Seventh-ranked Iowa had 747 points — 13 more than Big Ten rival Minnesota. West Virginia finished with 661 points — 22 more then Kentucky, which once again moved into the Top 10.

Idaho headed the Second 10, followed by Memphis State, Georgetown, Wake Forest, Fresno State, San Francisco, Arkansas, Kansas State, Alabama and Indiana.

Last week, the Second 10 was West Virginia, Kentucky, Idaho, Memphis State, Kansas State, Wake Forest, San Francisco, Fresno State, Washington and Georgetown.

Washington, ranked 19th when surprised by California last week, fell from the Top 20. Arkansas and Alabama, ranked eighth and 10th last week, each tumbled nine positions after dropping two games apiece.

Lewis wins Sullivan Award

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Carl Lewis, 20, the world indoor record holder in the long jump at 28 feet, 1 inch, received the U.S. Amateur Atheltic Union's Sullivan Award Monday night as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete for 1981.

Lewis, a sophomore at the University of Houston, received the award at the annual Sullivan banquet at the Indianapolis Convention Center.

He was the first athlete since Jesse Owens in 1936 to win the long jump and the 100-meter dash in the NCAA track and field meet, and he also was a double winner in those events in The Athletics Congress meet last year.

"It is so far out, just incredible," said Lewis, a native of Willingboro, N.J. "This makes me feel good about what it represents. To be named worthy of an award like this speaks for itself."

Lewis is the first black athlete to win the Sullivan Award since Wilma Rudolph in 1961.

The award was presented by former swimmer John Naber, the 1977 Sullivan winner.

OTHER FINALISTS for this year's award, representing accomplishments in 1981, included track star Evelyn Ashford, unbeated in the 100-meter dash and acclaimed by Track and Field News as the sport's top woman athlete in the world.

Other favorites were figure skater Scott Hamilton, the reigning U.S. and world champion, and swimmer Mary T. Meagher, a Lousiville, Ky., high school junior who set world records in the 100- and 200-meter butterfly events.

The other finalists this year were Kathy Arendsen, 23, Holland, Mich., for softball; Chris Campbell, 27, Ames, Iowa, wrestling; Tracie Ruiz, 18, Bothell, Wash., synchronized swimming; Lones Wigger Jr., 44, Carter, Mont., shooting; and Sheila Young-Ochowicz, 31, Pewaukee, Wis., cycling.

"On a strictly logical basis, it's got to be the most prestigious award an amateur athlete can win," said Naber, a former Olympic swimming champion who closed out his career in 1977 with 18 AAU and 10 NCAA titles at the University of Southern California. "An athlete is not only judge on his or her performance, but on the performance compared to other outstanding athletes.

"When I was master of ceremonies for this award three years ago, I referred to the nominees as the equivalent of 10 Heisman Trophy winners at one table. They're all the outstanding athletes in their sports.

"To come out on top of a field of that nature has to be one of the highest honors an athlete can win," said Naber, who now is a promotional spokesman for various amateur athletic programs and is on the board of directors for the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics organizing committee.

BESIDES NABER, three other former Sullivan Award winners — all former track stars — were in Indianapolis for Monday night's program: Dr. Glenn Cunningham (1933), Don Lash (1938) and Fred Wilt (1950). Lash currently is an Indiana state representative, and Wilt is the women's track coach at Purdue University.

Last year's winner of the Sullivan Award, named for a founder of the AAU, was speed skater Eric Heiden. Only one other skater, Dick Button in 1949, had won the award since its inception 50 years ago.

Other winners included Bill Bradley and Bill Walton in basketball, Kurt Thomas in gymnastics and Doc Blanchard in football.

NHL ROUNDUP

Toronto, Minnesota skate to 3-3 tie

TORONTO (AP) — Dan Maloney of the Toronto Maple Leafs says a little hitting in a game can make a difference.

"Sometimes, you can play for a week or so and never get the opportunity to hit," said Maloney. "It puts a spark into everything."

The Leafs, especially Maloney, threw their weight around Monday night and gained a 3-3 tie with the Minnesota North Stars.

In the only other National Hockey League game Monday night, the Vancouver Canucks beat the Chicago Black Hawks 4-1.

Toronto got goals from Laurie Boschman and Wilf Paiement for a 2-0 lead. But Tom McCarthy's two goals and a score by Tim Young put the North Stars on top 3-2 early in the third period before Maloney deflected a shot from the blue line by teammate Fred Boimistruck for the final goal at 6:42.

In the second minute of play, Maloney landed a stiff check to the North Stars' Steve Christoff, who was led off the ice but saw limited action in the final two periods.

"I've always played that way. I like to go out there and get going. I got to play more than I usually do and it felt good. I went out there and just went as hard as I could," Maloney said.

"We haven't been getting any points at all lately so we'll take this one," he said. "It's a really big point for us."

"At this point in the season, it looks like a good time to start using Danny more," said Leafs Coach Mike Nykoluk. "He's a fiery competitor. He's like an old horse who doesn't want to quit."

After Maloney, 31, tied the game, the North Stars pressed but couldn't get the puck past Toronto goalie Vince Tremblay.

Canucks 4, Black Hawks 1

Stan Smyl scored two goals to pace Vancouver past Chicago, and Black Hawks Coach Keith Magnuson resigned after the game.

Smyl's first goal gave the Canucks a 3-1 lead in the second period and his second marker was fired from 60 feet away into an empty net.

Ivan Boldirev and Ron Delorme also scored for Vancouver, while Ted Bulley scored the only goal for Chicago.

Arkansas defeats Texas A&M

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Senior center Scott Hastings scored 27 points and junior guard Darrell Walker 16 Monday night as No.8 Arkansas defeated Texas A&M 92-75 in a key Southwest Conference game.

The victory upped Arkansas' SWC record to 9-4 and snapped a tie with the Aggies for the lead. A&M dropped to 8-5 and a tie with Baylor and Texas Christian University.

Hastings was devastating inside, hitting 10 of his 15 shots from the field. Walker hit 8 of his 12 field goal attempts as Arkansas shot 67 percent from the floor.

Sophomore guard Reggie Roberts had 26 points to lead the Aggies. Sophomore guard Milton Woodley added 12.

Arkansas roared to a 12-4 lead. Once they built a 10-point advantage at 20-10 with 7:49 remaining in the first half, they never led by less than 10 again.

Arkansas' largest advantage of the opening half was 18 when Hastings hit an outside jumper for a 38-20 lead with 1:38 remaining before intermission. The Razorbacks led 41-27 at the half.

With Walker getting breakaway dunks after two steals, Arkansas built a 20-point advantage at 64-44 in the second half. The largest lead of the night was at 72-50 when Walker stuffed in a shot with eight minutes left.

Arkansas is 18-5 overall, while Texas A&M dropped to 15-8.

Hastings' performance was one short of his career high of 28 points at Texas Tech two years ago.

Arkansas' point total was its highest of the year and it also was the largest yield by A&M this season.

Virginia rallies to beat unheralded Georgia Tech

By WILLIAM R.BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

While 6-foot-9 Georgia Tech center Lee Goza involved 7-4 All-American Ralph Sampson in personal warfare, unheralded Georgia Tech nearly succeeded in upsetting top-ranked Virginia.

The Yellow Jackets, who have won only eight of 22 games this season, led the top-ranked Cavaliers by 11 points at halftime before succumbing 56-52 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Monday night.

Sampson, who refused to comment after the game, scored 14 points for Virginia, but he fouled out with 2:23 left after battling with Goza the entire game and getting involved in a shoving match in the first half. Last year, Goza was accused of spitting on his giant rival.

The shoving match halted play and had both coaches on the floor to separate the players. Moments later, Sampson held out his hand to shake with Goza and when Goza reached out, Sampson jerked his hand away.

Goza called Sampson's action "third grade stuff. I played rough. He didn't seem to like it but I hope he gets used to it. He's a great player. He deserves to be Player of the Year."

Brook Steppe, who led Georgia Tech's upset bid with 26 points on 11 of 12 shooting from the field, said, "They don't quit. They kept coming after us. That's why they are the No.1 team in the country."

Asked if the Goza-Sampson spats were really serious, Steppe said, "I can say without question they don't like each other. It' not just one of them doing that stuff out there. It's both of them. I think if the officials had whistled some fouls early and maybe called a technical on them, they might have had a little better control."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland said he "can't judge objectively" whether the Sampson-Goza battle got out of hand.

"I was extremely agitated," Holland admitted. "But I sit on one bench and Bobby (Tech Coach Cremins) sits on the other bench and I'm sure we see it differently."

Othell Wilson, who scored 15 points as Virginia won its 13th straight game and improved its record to 23-1, hit a basket and two free throws in the final 1:19 to give the Cavaliers a 53-50 lead. Georgia Tech led 33-22 at halftime, but a 12-4 spurt finally pulled Virginia even at 42-42 with 8:29 on a layup by Wilson.

In other games involving ranked teams, No.3 DePaul beat Ohio University 83-61, Drake upset No.6 Tulsa 56-55, 12th-ranked Memphis State beat St.Louis 82-64 and No.17 Arkansas beat Texas A&M 92-75.

Top Ten

Senior Skip Dillard, playing his final home game for DePaul, scored 19 points in the Blue Demons' victory over Ohio.

Bernard Randolph scored 13 of his 15 points in the first half, when DePaul hit its first 10 shots and took a 35-24 lead.

DePaul, which has won 21 games in a row for a 23-1 record, also got 18 points from Terry Cummings.

Tulsa was victimized by a miraculous basket from a little-used Drake substitute.

With 11 seconds remaining and Drake nursing a 54-53 lead, Terry Youngbauer of the Bulldogs missed a free throw that was rebounded by Tulsa's Bruce Vanley. But reserve Leon Van Hook jerked the ball out of Vanley's hands and it bounced off the floor and into the basket for a 56-53 Drake lead. A layup by Tulsa's Mike Anderson at the buzzer completed the scoring.

"I kept telling the kids that if you work hard, good things will happen," said Drake Coach Gary Garner. "We were very fortunate the ball bounced the way it did, but you've got to take it any way you can get it."

Garner said his team, now 11-11, celebrated deliriously in the locker room. "You would have thought we won the national championship," he said.

Second Ten

Freshman Keith Lee scored 20 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead Memphis State to its 18th victory in 21 games.

Lee triggered a run of 15 straight points for the Tigers as they took a 20-8 lead. Memphis State, which also got 21 points from Derrick Phillips, led by as many as 20 points in the first half and St.Louis never got closer than nine thereafter.

Senior center Scott Hastings scored 27 points as Arkansas snapped a tie in the Southwest Conference race by beating Texas A&M. The Razorbacks shot 67 percent from the floor, including 10 of 15 by Hastings and eight of 12 by Darrell Walker, who had 16 points.

In other games, it was Penn State 62, South Carolina 60; St. John's 77, Providence 76 in double overtime; Clemson 79, Furman 72; Jacksonville 98, Stetson 84; South Florida 74, North Carolina-Charlotte 69; Cincinnati 87, Virginia Tech 81; Nebraska 65, Oklahoma 51; and Arizona State 80, Southern Cal 62.

Oil price decontrol - predictions, facts of decontrol process

By CHARLES J. DiBONA
American Petroleum Institute

WASHINGTON — One year ago, President Reagan put the final touch to the process of phasing out government controls on U.S. crude oil prices. President Carter began the decontrol process in mid-1979.

The decision to complete decontrol of oil prices in early 1981 generated a flurry of dire predictions.

Now, one year later, it may be instructive to look back at those predictions and to cite the facts — to examine what really happened last year.

Prediction number one: oil production would not improve.

In fact, in 1981, oil production in the lower 48 states, which has been declining through the 1970s, increased in the second half of the year. And Alaska oil production, which had been stabel throughout most of the year, began to increase at year's end with the start up of the Kuparuk field.

Prediction number two: the oil industry would not reinvest increased revenues in the search for new supplies.

In fact, last year, energy companies increased drilling activity to the highest level ever. Records set back in the 1950s were broken. And total oil industry investment in drilling, exploration, production and outer continental shelf lease bonuses reached an estimated $50 billion in 1981. That, too, was an all time record.

Prediction number three: oil decontrol would cause oil prices to skyrocket. Some people predicted, for example, that gasoline prices would be 20 cents higher by the end of last summer.

In fact, at the end of 1981, the average price of a gallon of gasoline was 5 to 6 cents less than the peak price reached in March 1981, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Heating oil prices across the country have also been falling since last spring.

Prediction number four: OPEC's pricing power would not be affected by restoring to the U.S. a market system for oil.

In fact, in 1981, as U.S. oil production improved and oil consumption dropped both here and in other countries, it became clear that OPEC's pricing power had been weakened considerably.

One by one, OPEC members, who had been able to raise prices virtually at will during the 1970s had to reduce prices last year in order to sell their oil. Since January 1981, both the announced prices and spot market prices for most crude oils have been falling.

OPEC members have also been forced to cut oil production because of reduced demand from their customers, particularly the United States. OPEC oil production is down by one third from its 1979 level.

And so are U.S. imports of oil. In fact, at the end of 1981, U.S. oil imports were one half million barrels a day below imports in 1973 the year the oil embargo started.

The conclusions are clear. The verdict is in. On all counts, the dire predictions were wrong. The facts show that the U.S. oil market free of government controls has been a demonstrated success.

Our central problem, the rising tide of oil imports into the United States during the 1970s, is being brought under control.

Nevertheless, as we begin a new year, it is important to put recent achievements into perspective. The United States still imports more than one third of the oil it uses. That remaining dependence means several things.

First, it means that the United States is still vulnerable to sudden major disruptions in supplies of foreign oil. A large, abrupt reduction in oil imports could still exact a heavy toll in lost jobs, lost income, more inflation and possibly severe damage to the U.kS. economy.

Second, U.S. dependence on foreign oil still means that each year we send billions of dollars abroad for oil. Last year, even though we reduced oil imports, America spent almost $80 billion for foreign oil. That level of expense damages our balance of trade and could undermine the strength of our economy.

Third, our dependence on oil imports from unstable areas of the world affects our national security. Our need for foreign oil shapes and often constrains our foreign policy. It threatens to involve us and our allies in international conflicts.

A further reduction in our reliance on imported oil would lessen these problems and reduce these risks.

One means of reducing that reliance and risk is to gradually remove federal price controls from natural gas.

Natural gas is the only U.S. fuel whose price is still regulated by the federal government. Under current law, about 97 percent of all U.S. natural gas will be subject to federal price controls until 1985. At that time, some gas will be decontrolled. But up to 50 percent will remain under controls until it runs out.

Natural gas price controls, in effect since 1954, have held back gas exploration and production, discouraged efficient use of gas, and prompted shortages, shortages made up by oil and gas imports.

The gradual decontrol of all natural gas prices by January 1, 1985, would provide American consumers and the nation with the same kinds of benefits that the gradual removal of oil price controls has brought.

The year 1981 was one of our most remarkable years of energy progress. The challenge now is to build on the second decisions that have been made and to apply those decisions to other areas of energy policy.

Sanchez-O'Brien finals two Louisiana gas wells

HOUSTON — Sanchez-O'Brien Oil & Gas Corporation acting as managing general partner for its 1981-A Drilling Partnership reported a new fault block gas-condensate discovery in the Church Point area of South Louisiana. The discovery, the Aspen Exploration - Winsor Daigle No. 2 flowed gas on tests at a rate of 6.128 million cubic feet per day and condensate at 457 barrels per day from the Lower Nodasari "LN-1" Sand.

The well flowed through a 12/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 8,500 pounds per square inch. A shut-in-pressure of 9,950 pounds per square inch was observed.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 14,500 feet. It was then perforated over the interval 14,220 feet.

The company has also completed a second well in the Church Point area of South Louisiana.

The new well, the Aspen Exploration — Winsor Daigle P1 flowed gas on tests at 2.779 million cubic feet of gas per day and condensate at 124 barrels per day from the "NS-2" Sand.

The well flowed through a 12/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 4,509 pounds per square inch. Shut in tubing pressure was observed to be 5,660 pounds per square inch.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 12,450 feet. It was perforated over the interval 11,734 to 11,744 feet.

The Church Point producing area is located in Acadia Parish, Louisiana, about 20 miles northwest of Lafayette.

Builder selected for project

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — Ebasco Services Inc., an experienced builder of nuclear plants, has been selected to replace Brown & Root Inc. as the builder of the $4.8 billion South Texas Nuclear Project.

Don D. Jordan, president of Houston Lighting and Power Co., said the decision was subject to a satisfactory conclusion of contract negotiations.

Ebasco got the job over two other bidders, Bechtel Power Corp., the project's design engineer, and the Daniel Construction Co., Greenville, S.C.

Brown & Root withdrew from the project last Nov. 4. Six weeks earlier, HL&P had replaced Brown & Root as the project's design engineer.

Ebasco has been the designer-builder or builder of about 20 nuclear plants.

Nicaraguan controversy centered on Indian tribes

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua's leftist government says it resettled 8,500 English-speaking Indians to "protect them," but a tribal group says the junta sent Indians to concentration camps where they were used as forced labor.

The Sandinista junta denied charges by the Misurata Organization, representing the Miskito Indians and two other coastal tribes, that it put at least 10,000 Indians into two concentration camps after burning 31 communities last month in Zelaya province.

The government also denied a charge by the State Department that it was oppressing the tribes but put Zelaya, Nicaragua's largest province, off limits to travelers. On Feb. 3, the Defense Ministry said it arrested more than 100 members of a "counter-revolutionary" separatist movement in the province.

The Miskitos and other Indian tribes in Zelaya have been described as conservative, church-going Protestants who are having difficulty adjusting to the leftists who overthrew the Somoza dictatorship in 1979. The rest of the Nicaraguan people are almost all Roman Catholics.

The junta in a communique Sunday said 8,500 Miskitos were resettled from their ancient homelands on the Caribbean coast to a better location "deep inland" but did not say where. It said the resettlement was to "protect them from anti-revolutionary armed gangs" and "will permit carrying out important projects for these communities to achieve levels of development they never attained in the past."

Claiming the Indians had been subjected to "armed aggressions by counter-revolutionary bands," the communique said 60 Miskitos were killed in November and December.

In a communique issued in Tegucigalpa, the capital of neighboring Honduras, the Misurata Organization urged the United Nations and the International Red Cross to investigate conditions in Zelaya.

Charging the Nicaraguan government with genocide, it claimed that 31 villages in which more than 31,000 Indians lived were burned between Jan. 5 and Jan. 18. It said many of the Indians fled to Honduras, but at least 10,000 were herded into two concentration camps where they were being used as forced laborers.

The junta accused the Indian organization of a "misleading campaign." It invited foreign journalists and religious and labor organizations to visit Zelaya and observe conditions there.

Actors Edward Asner, right, and Howard Hesseman joined Ralph Waite ("Papa Walton") and actress Lee Grant at a Monday press conference announcing a fund-raising campaign by Medical Aid for El Salvador, a Los Angeles-based group. Since "the rebel forces are now the most effective institution in El Salvador committed to health delivery," Asner said, medical supplies to be bought in Mexico will be sent to the Salvadoran guerrillas in order to help that country's people.

U.N. representative says Reagan human rights figures belie truth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the human rights violations in El Salvador are being committed by military and rightist groups — not the leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed ruling junta, a United Nations official says.

Jose Antonio Pastor-Ridruejo, the U.N. Human Rights Commission special representative on El Salvador, also says there were at least 11,000 political killings in the embattled Central American nation last year — nearly twice as many as the Reagan administration reported to Congress.

That and other aspects of a report by the U.N. official contradict the administration's certification that the Salvadoran government is "making a concerted and significant effort to comply with internationally recognized human rights." Such a certification was required by Congress before it would agree to a continuation of U.S. military aid to El Salvador.

IN EL SALVADOR, meanwhile, a military source said that at least 400 leftist guerrillas were killed during a five-day sweep by government troops. That source, who asked not to be identified, said Monday night that no government soldiers were killed.

Leftist guerrillas denied the operation was as successful as the government claimed.

The military source said that up to 200 guerrillas managed to escape the army operation in Usulutan province, 105 miles from San Salvador. Other military sources said 4,000 troops with heavy artillery and air support participated in the operation.

The military source said seven guerrilla camps with a large quantity of arms and medicine were located and destroyed before the operation ended earlier in the day.

The Reagan administration says the number of political killings in El Salvador declined from 9,000 in 1980 to about 6,000 in 1981 and uses the figures as evidence of an improvement in human rights.

But in a telephone interview from his home in Madrid, Spain, Pastor-Ridruejo said Friday he "found that there is a consistent pattern of human rights violations in El Salvador — most violations coming from the military and rightist groups (but) some violations coming from guerrillas."

Pastor-Ridruejo said the report he will submit to a U.N. meeting in Geneva within the next two weeks puts the number of assassinations at 11,000 for the first 11 months of 1981.

Meanwhile, the actors who play Lou Grant, Dr. Johnny Fever and Pa Walton on television held a news conference Monday to proclaim themselves the vanguard of a movement "to stop another useless, wasteful, criminal tragedy like the Vietnam War."

ACTOR ED ASNER, who plays city editor Lou Grant, handed a $25,000 check to Dr. Gloria E. Torres, a medical professor at the Metropolitan Autonomous University of Mexico, to buy medical supplies for distribution by leftist guerrillas in El Salvador who are opposing the country's U.S.-backed government.

Asner said "the rebel forces are now the most effective institution in El Salvador committed to health delivery."

He said the money was donated by 8,000 people responding to a drive by a Los Angeles-based group called Medical Aid for El Salvador. Asner said the medical supplies are to be purchased in Mexico and shipped clandestinely to the Democratic Revolutionary Front in El Salvador.

Howard Hesseman, who plays disc jockey Dr. Johnny Fever on "WKRP in Cincinnati," Ralph Waite, the father on "The Waltons," and actress and filmmaker Lee Grant were among those taking part in the news conference.

It was held in the same hotel where U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick had criticized liberals earlier in the day for supporting what she called Marxist guerrilla movements in Latin America.

Medical Aid to El Salvador was formed last May and has mailed 800,000 fund-raising letters, said its national coordinator, Christina Courtright. She said the group expects to send 200,000 more shortly.

President Reagan held a closed-door meeting Monday with his top foreign policy advisers, apparently to discuss developments in Central America.

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMEN refused to say what was discussed, but Reagan told reporters Sunday he had been working on a speech on economic assistance in the Caribbean Basin. One of those present at Monday's intelligence briefing was Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

Pastor-Ridruejo also contradicted a Salvadoran army spokesman's assertion that the army had asked the U.N. commission to send a delegation to the town of Nueva Trinidad to look into government claims that guerrillas had killed 150 to 200 civilians.

"The government of El Salvador never asked the commission anything," Pastor-Ridruejo said.

Elaborating on his human rights report, Pastor-Ridruejo said, "violations about life, liberty and security of peasants come most from the army and from paramilitary groups, but violations of human rights that arise from public and private property came most from guerrillas."

He said his report relied heavily on figures prepared by the legal aid office of the Roman Catholic Diocese in San Salvador. He said he also was given similar figures on political murders by Salvadoran Archbishop Rivera y Damas.

Military claims guerrilla deaths

By EDUARDO VAZQUEZ BECKER
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — At least 400 leftist guerrillas were killed — without any government casualties — during a five-day military sweep in the southeast of this Central American nation, a military source says.

Leftist guerrillas, however, said the operation was not as successful as the government claimed.

The military source, who requested anonymity, said Monday night that up to 200 guerrillas managed to escape the army operation in Usulutan province, 105 miles from San Salvador. Other military sources said 4,000 troops with heavy artillery and air support were active in the operation.

The military source said seven guerrilla camps with a large quantity of arms and medicine were located and destroyed before the operation ended earlier in the day. Two soldiers suffered slight wounds during the sweep, he added.

The army sweep in Usulutan province followed heavy guerrilla activity in the area during the first week of February, including attacks on the provincial capital of Usulutan City.

The source said without elaboration that a second army operation in Morazan province was a routine search and clean-up mission. He did not say whether it was continuing. Other sources said 1,500 troops were involved.

Earlier Monday, a clandestine rebel radio station, Radio Venceremos, said the government troops had "failed in their intent."

The broadcast also said a government operation in northern Morazan province did not exist. "And there is an offensive in Morazan all right, but it is an offensive of the revolutionary forces against the common imperialist enemy," Radio Venceremos said.

Independent reports from Morazan said two soldiers were killed before noon Monday in a guerrilla attack on army positions in Osicala.

The radio claimed guerrillas had mounted attacks during the previous 72 hours near the towns of Perquin, Joateca and Arambala, 107 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Guerrilla activity also was reported Monday in Apopa, just outside of San Salvador, where an early morning raid apparently was intended to acquire medicine from the local hospital. A military post also was attacked and the town hall set on fire, but there were no reports of casualties.

Guerrillas in San Salvador are fighting to oust the U.S.-supported military-civilian junta that has been in power since an October 1979 coup.

A United Nations human rights officer denied the Reagan administration cited the truth in telling Congress the Salvadoran junta has improved its human rights record.

Jose Antonio Pastor-Ridruejo, the U.N. Human Rights Commission's special representative on El Salvador, said there were 11,000 deaths for the first 11 months of 1981.

Meanwhile, U.S. Sens. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., met with Salvador Zamora, a representative of Salvador's leftists, while in Mexico City on Monday. The senators, returning from a trip to Salvador, declined to discuss the meeting.

The base rate for calls to Flexnet Discount Cities continues to be discounted by 20-40% during the day, depending on volume, and the one-third discount is still applied to all night, evening, weekend and holiday calls to all cities. In addition, 21 cities have been added to the Flexnet Discount Cities list; daytime calls to these cities are eligible for a discount.
