S. L. Forrest Honored at Banquet in Lubbock

S. L. Forrest, local lumberman and president of the Texas Lumbermen's Association, was honor guest at a banquet given in Lubbock Tuesday evening by members of the West Texas Lumbermen's Association. Mr. Forrest is the first man from West Texas to become president of the state association.

Called the "Round-up for Lamar Forrest" the meeting was one of the best lumbermen's gatherings ever to be held in this part of the state. Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Forrest, Slaton, parents of President Forrest, were present at the dinner, and were recognized by several speakers.

Jim Wilson, lumber dealer of Floydada, was toastmaster of the dinner, and introduced Z. H. Zimmerman, well known lumberman of Waco, who made the principal address of the evening, using as a subject, "Citizenship."

Zimmerman denounced the Black-Connerly bill before Congress that would increase the cost of building. He termed such legislation as saying, "If you study this plan, you will see that not even the National Recovery Act had any effect in comparison to the possible effect of this." In further reference to the bill, he said, "business would pass out of your hands into the hands of five men appointed by President Roosevelt."

The Waco man said that lumbermen and other business would have to keep pace with the rapid changes of industry in order to keep one's own business in pace with industry. He said that "we must not forget human nature when looking for Utopia, because people are doing things in the name of 'progress' without thinking about the outcome and happiness of mankind." The speaker termed Forrest as a "real citizen."

"The national crisis is over," said Forrest in response to the main talk by Zimmerman, "and we should not allow our governmental representatives to do any more rubber stamping."

Johnson of Fort Worth commented on the lumbermen of West Texas when he said, "I am satisfied with these men. They can deliver the goods at the proper time."

Dave Thompson, secretary of the Angelina County Lumber Company, made a brief talk and C. A. Pickett, new secretary of the state association brought greetings from the South Texas branch, paid a tribute to Forrest and spoke on the essentials of "shelter." Pickett has been recently elected president of the Texas Young Democrats.

Telegrams from Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard, Governor James V. Allred, Congressman George Mahon, and leading lumbermen of the United States who sent congratulations were acknowledged. Governor Allred said: "Realizing as I do that the lumbering industry is one of the most important in our state, I want to congratulate the Lumbermen's Association of Texas upon the judicious choice of Forrest as their new president." Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation also sent congratulations.

Invocation was given by Dr. L. N. Lipscomb of the First Methodist church. A quintet of Arnett Campbell, Douglas Hardy, Marilee Jones, Virginia Bell Gamble, and Marion Cooper of the Lubbock senior high school "sang for the banquet. Mrs. T. R. Pridaux of Lubbock presented Mrs. S. L. Forrest with a bouquet of pink rosebuds.

Billy Leete Jackson, Lubbock, gave two tap dance numbers, and Miss Brunette Beard sang two solos.

Members of the committee of the dinner were Willson, general chairman; W. B. Atkins, Lubbock, treasurer; and a committee of Joe Telford, T. R. Pridaux, Otis Felty, Herbert Halls, Sam Newman, Charles Bartlett, Jr., B. M. Hale, Roland Ponce, John Crisler, A. W. May, George W. Butler and Jimmie Pryor.

Ladies of the club made up the receiving line and as each guest entered they were shown through the building. Punch was served throughout the evening.

Conway King and his orchestra furnished the music. Through the courtesy of the South Plains Music Company of Lubbock a piano was furnished the club for this occasion, for which the members were very grateful.

The new club house, only recently completed at the new site, is one of the most attractive and complete buildings to be found in West Texas. The building is of frame structure, containing one large entertaining room, 50 by 24 feet, a dining room, kitchen, ladies lounge, and men's locker room. Every room is completely furnished. The entertaining room is furnished with maple furnishings, which are in keeping with the knotty pine walls and large rock fire place.

The members of the Association endorsed the County Fair program unanimously, and went further to state that they, the members, thought the plan of working toward putting up permanent buildings for the housing of livestock and exhibits, during the Fair each year, an excellent idea. The members further went on record as favoring the whole set up and agreed to lend the assistance its members would be able to give to assist the members of the Fair association in any way possible.

The members of the association requested that a committee investigate and see if the equipment could be made available for getting films and lighting apparatus for giving free movies in a number of centrally located communities in the county, as a means of entertainment for residents of the county. These shows if secured will be given with the compliments of the association as an educational and entertainment feature. A committee is working on this.

Rotary Club Enjoys Unusual Program

The Lamesa Rotary Club enjoyed an unusual program last Friday in its final meeting for 1936-37. The program took the form of an installation and induction service. The new president for the year 1937-38, W. D. Arnett, was installed and five new members were received into the club formally.

The only change in the official lineup for the coming year was the interchange of places between Carl Rountree, president, and Dud Arnett, vice-president. Under the new set-up, Arnett becomes president and Rountree the vice-president. Mr. Rountree was master of ceremonies for the day and made a very impressive speech on the principles of Rotary and the member's duties and obligations to service in the club. Upon conclusion of his speech he presented five new members with Rotary pins and welcomed them into membership in the club. The new members were W. J. Beckham, C. A. Hollingsworth, Cleve Austin, Matt A. McCall, and J. E. Barron.

The president then paid high tribute to the incoming president, W. D. Arnett, and handed him the gavel as an indication of the duties which he was to assume. Mr. Arnett responded with a short talk in which he offered to be of whatever service possible to the club.

Upon the recommendations of Owen Taylor, a vote of thanks and appreciation was extended Carl Rountree for his invaluable services as the first president of the Lamesa Rotary Club.

Elmo Wasson and Ira Thurman, Rotarians from Big Spring, unexpectedly dropped in on the meeting. It will be remembered that the Big Spring club was the sponsor organization for the Lamesa club and both of these visitors spoke pleasingly upon the progress being made by the new club. Elmo Wasson is president of the Big Spring Rotary Club.

Plans Going Forward For Construction of Big Cyanide Plant

While officials of the American Cyanide Company have not made official statement as to date of beginning construction on the $200,000 Cyanide plant north of here, we have been informed that they have closed the deal for the land from Charley Doak which indicates that they mean to do something within the very near future.

The company has established offices at O'Donnell, which are to be used as a laboratory and their chemist is already on the job.

No definite announcement has yet been made concerning the site of the plant itself, whether it will be in Dawson or Lynn county. But as the company have already put up a boiler, dug two water wells and are now digging a tank for storage, all on the Dawson county side of the lake, it looks as though the entire plant will be located in this county.

The Commissioner's Court is at work on the project now and from all indications the plant will be built. The Cyanide Company asked the court to build a hard surfaced road to join Highway No. 9, this they refused to do, but promised the company that a dirt road would be built.

It has been reported that when the plant is established, the company contemplates the hiring of a local trucking contractor to haul their products to the railroad here, which would employ a number of local men. It has been estimated that about 150 local men would be used at the plant, besides the head company men who will move here from the east.

The proposed sites for this Cyanide plant is about fifteen miles north of Lamesa, at the old Frost Lake, which is also eight miles west of O'Donnell. Other salts than cyanide are also said to exist at the site in large and paying quantities, and it is believed by many that the possibilities of the project are great.

Crop Conditions in Dawson County Are Looking Better

Crops in Dawson county are showing a steady improvement each week due in a large measure to the abundance of sunshine and fair weather that has prevailed in this section for the past several weeks. Farmers have been busy waging war on weeds which have infested a large number of fields that were planted early. However, most Dawson county farmers will complete the cleaning of their crops this week.

In some instances early feed is in need of additional moisture to insure good grain but it is generally conceded by those who are informed of this work that cotton is progressing as rapidly as it ever has in Dawson county. Farmers report lots of squares and in a number of cases blooms are in evidence. It is thought that a good rain in the next week or two will insure Dawson county one of the best crops in years.

LIVING UP TO MY AD
Giving you tops in Mileage

I know the trouble. So many oil ads yell mileage, that you can't tell one way or another. I don't want my own ads to be in that class, so I'd like you to know all I'm staking, when I personally recommend Conoco Germ Processed oil to you. In my case, you see, I'm the owner of my business. And there's nothing makes repeat customers for me like my Germ Processed oil... or I ought to say, the long mileage it gives you. The patent Germ Process makes this oil get fastened real firm to the bearings and cylinders and other parts—as if they'd been built with an actual plating of oil that can't separate... can't thin out and burn right up. Neither is it going to run down every time you stop. Then you can't make any "dry starts" with Oil-Plating, and right there is where engineers say you will end a good half of all the wear you used to get in Summer. The less wear, the less oil your engine eats. You'll get on to this yourself, from your cool quiet Oil-Plated engine. And that's how I make another good friend for Conoco Germ Processed oil.

On the day before Christmas she left the community house near mid-afternoon and started for her cabin. A gathering storm was beginning to lash the pine and send the snow crawling and settling about her feet. This blizzard she could see, was different from previous ones. Its tone was deeper, thicker, it was massing its strength more slowly and ominously.

cabin a sudden call came out of the rising moan of the wind.

"Tree-shia!"

Patricia stopped in her tracks, dead-short. "Tree-shia—that was the name which Craig had given her, at God's lake; his own name for her. No other person on earth called her that.

She whirled. Twenty yards out in the gloom a tall rangy figure was looming up, coming toward her. Because of his heavy fur clothes she was not sure of him at first, but as he drew near she could no longer doubt. "It is—he," she breathed.

Craig trudged up to her, snow-plastered, weariness written on his face.

"Hullo," he greeted, shaking back his parka-hood and standing bare-headed before her. He looked her up and down, sharp-eyed as always, but his former scorn and suspicion seemed gone now. "Hmmp! You, wearing Eskimo togs! And you, here, in the dead of an Arctic winter!"

Patricia fought to keep her voice steady. "I didn't know that you—when did you get back to the Bay?"

"Twenty minutes ago. Poleon and I. We brought Bill Fornier. He's up at my cabin. Poleon is up there with him."

Patricia started. "Oh-hh!" From Craig's tone she knew that Bill was dying. Bill had worked at his claim till he dropped, and they had brought him in to the Bay to die. Tears sprang to her eyes. "Can't I do something to help, Craig? Can't I see him, nurse him?"

"There's nothing that can be done," Craig said. He moved around so that his body sheltered Patricia from the wind, for the storm was lashing her in the face with icy pellets and lapping snow spume over her racquets. "Bill is in no pain. I've shot him full of drug. Maybe it's better you don't go up there; your visit might rouse him. In a minute I'm going back and relieve Poleon. I can do everything necessary." He tapped a packet which he was carrying under his arm. "I brought you a Christmas remembrance, Tree-shia. From the barrens."

Patricia's heart pounded madly. "Tree-shia"—he had called her that again! And he was giving her a Christmas present. Were the heavens caving in? Was she dreaming?

There was nothing more than friendliness in Craig's attitude; nothing more than a cordial esteem such as he might have shown toward anybody he respected. But friendship and esteem from him—they were overwhelming riches to the lonely and disheartened girl.

"My cabin—it's just yonder; won't you step over for a cup of tea, Craig?" she invited hesitatingly, not knowing how far to presume on his friendliness.

"I can stay only a minute, but I'd be glad," Craig accepted.

They walked together to her cabin and went inside out of the rising storm. Craig laid his present on Patricia's cot and looked around at her home. Dainty and feminine, with curtained windows, cretonne colors and the cozy warmth of a girl's touch, it was a great contrast to his own stern bachelor cabin up the hollow.

"You're actually living over here?" he said. "On this side of Resurrection. Sam Honeywell was the first to tell me. I laughed at him. But then others told me."

In a kind of daze Patricia set two cups and saucers on her little table. For Craig to be there in her cabin, having tea with her, was in the nature of a wish-born miracle. Just a few minutes ago the Bay had been utterly empty, the storm frightening; but now Craig was back, and the Bay did not seem lonely or the heavens black and lowering.

"One thing, Craig said, brushing a hand across his tired eyes, "has been on my conscience. That time I suspected you of trying to cheat Bill Fornier, I apologized once, but in the light of what's happened since, I see that my suspicions were positively brutal."

While they drank their tea, Craig asked her a few questions about the Den, about the prospectors; but he gave no indication that he cared to pitch into the fight. He mentioned the possibility of going back to the barrens after the holidays, and finishing his inspection work.

As he set down his cup Patricia insisted: "Please Craig, you're so badly worn out—let me go up to your cabin and take care of Bill while you lie down and sleep here for a few hours."

Craig shook his head. "It's my job. Bill seems to feel easier if I'm with him. I think I'd better go now. Poleon is in bad shape, after our trip."

When the door closed behind him Patricia ran to the north window of her cabin, scratched a clear place on the hoarfrosted pane, and watched him till he was swallowed up in the wind-torn gloom.

For the first time, as she stood at the curtained window, she permitted herself to believe that God's lake could be resurrected between Craig and her. For the first time she admitted it to herself—it broke over her irresistibly an engulfing flood—that she was wildly and blindly in love with him.

A long time after Craig had vanished in the twilight she awoke from her tumultuous thoughts and turned to the cot where his Christmas present lay. It was a large deerskin packet, laced with babish and smelling of campfire smoke. With fumbling hands she untied the things, spread open his gift. First Indian-made. A complete winter outfit for a girl: kamiks or small boots lined with rabbit fur, hood or trousers, a netusk or blouse with parka-hood attached, and gloves of dark gleaming otter.

Bolting the cabin door, she took off her other clothes and put on these new ones. The furs were exquisitely matched, the workmanship flawless, the whole outfit the most beautiful ensemble she had ever seen. And they fitted her so perfectly that she knew Craig had had them made especially for her.

As she stood in front of her mirror and lifted her hand to stroke the soft fur of her parka, she caught the cold sparkling fires of the engagement diamond on her finger. Her hand dropped like a flash. The sight of the ring broke into her happy thoughts like a burning discord. Forgetting all about her new clothes, she stared down at her hand at Warren's ring. Not until that moment had she fully realized its meaning. She was engaged to Warren, was going to marry him, live with him; he would be her husband, the father of her children. That's what the ring meant.

It suddenly seemed a hateful thing, that beautiful diamond—a symbol of a loveless betrothal. She wanted to get it off her hand, and end the lie. She couldn't marry Warren. The very thought was repugnant, even sinful. Her Arctic trip at least had saved her from a bitterly unhappy marriage. Of at least one thing she was certain now amid all her raging uncertainties—she could never marry Warren.

She whirled around, caught up her gloves, lifted her snowshoes from their wall peg.

When she entered Warren's cabin, across the river, and walked over to his desk, he surveyed her in the light of the gas lamp.

"New clothes, dear! And what pretty ones—on you! Where did you get them, if I may ask?"

"Craig brought them to me as a Christmas present," Patricia said frankly. "He came back to the Bay this afternoon, he and Poleon."

Warren winced. Patricia read the thought in his mind—she was wearing clothes that Craig Tarleton had given her.

"I hated to come here, Warren," she said hastily, badly torn up by what she had to do. "I hate to tell you this, but I've got to. We can't go on as we are. It's impossible."

Warren started a little. "What's impossible?" he seemed to know what was coming.

"Our engagement, Warren. I want to end it. Please, this isn't any sudden decision. For months I've been realizing that I didn't love you enough to marry you. I should have told you this before now. But I just drifted along and put off facing the truth till I've come to the point where I must face it."

Reluctantly, knowing that she was taking a freight step, she slipped their engagement ring from her finger and laid it on Warren's desk.

"Patricia!"

She looked down at the floor, unable to meet Warren's eyes. In those moments, when she needed to remember Warren's dishonesty with her and his cold-hearted campaign against these defenseless men and the long weeks when he had repulsed her attempts to build up a loyal oneness between herself and him, she seemed to forget all that and remember only the occasions when Warren had done her a kindness.

After a few moments she heard him say slowly, "On Christmas Eve, Patricia." He reached out and picked up the ring. "This isn't a very pleasant Christmas present to give a man, dear."

"I—I didn't stop to think about that. Oh, I'm sorry! I never stop to think about anything." She burst into tears. "Forgive me, Warren. I didn't mean to be so heartless."

Warren stood steady under the blow, as though he had half expected it and was in a measure prepared. Only for an instant had he yielded to emotion. "On Christmas Eve, Patricia"—those words had come from his heart; words of pain. But immediately he had clamped down and become his sternly repressed self again; the poker-faced self that she intensely disliked.

"Please don't cry about it, dear," he bade. "It's done now. I know you didn't stop to think." He stepped around in front of her as she turned away. "Don't go just yet, Patricia. There's a word or two I must say to you."

She brushed the tears from her eyes. "What, Warren?"

He turned the ring over and over in his palm, thoughtfully. "You intend to go back to Chicago sometime, don't you, Patricia?"

Rivalry Gets Stronger In Soft Ball League

With the list of undefeated teams getting smaller as the season progresses, rivalry and interest is getting stronger in the Dawson county Soft Ball League. Friday night saw the Boy Scouts defeat Gus Ragsdale 9 to 8. Modern Dry Cleaners outslug McCarty 14 to 9 and Lintown forfeit to Shumake.

Lions Club in Regular Session Wednesday

The Lamesa Lions Club met in its regular meeting at the Plaza Hotel at noon Wednesday, and had a very interesting program.

Glady's Alsbrook played several violin solos, and the Bulsterbaum trio sang three numbers.

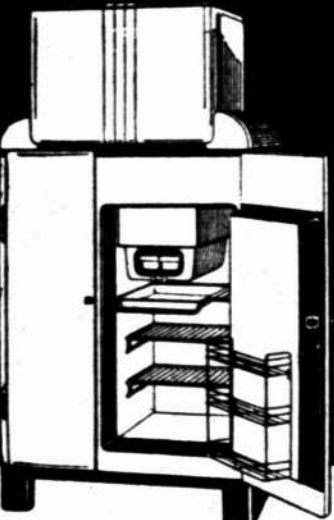

The club had as visitors members of the State Board of Control and staff, consisting of Claude D. Teer, chairman, John F. Wallace and Henry C. Meyer, members of the Board, and Dr. Charles F. Caster, Medical Director of the State Eleemosynary Institutions. Ray Shaver, Agricultural Director of the Institutions, and Tom Leach, secretary to the Board, Doyle Settles, Representative of this District, was also present and made a short speech. Other visitors at the club from Lamesa were Sam Richardson, V. Z. Rogers, M. C. Lindsey, and J. E. Barron. Rev. Elmer Peterson of Crosbyton was also a visitor with the club and made a short talk. Louis B. Reed, a member of the club who has been ill for several weeks, was back with the club, and members expressed their joy at seeing him up and about again.

Guy Weekes, new president of the club, was inducted into office, and expressed his appreciation of the honor that had been accorded him in his election to the presidency and pledged his earnest efforts in carrying on the work of the club during the next year. Due to the long program, and the number of visitors present, it was thought wise to postpone the installation of the remainder of the officers until next week.

Luncheon Club Meets Tuesday At Noon

MADE FOR THE FAMILY THAT LIVES IN THE COUNTRY

This "miracle" refrigerator is operated by kerosene

HOW would you like to have fresh meats at hand whenever you want them? How would you like to be able to make your own ice creams and frozen desserts without the work of turning a freezer? How would you like to have an ample supply of ice cubes for cooling hot-weather drinks? You can have all of these things with Superfex. And you can have them no matter where you live. For Superfex makes cold by burning just a little kerosene.

Superfex is amazingly simple. You light its burners and forget it. Two hours later the burners go out automatically. But Superfex keeps right on working. It gives you twenty-four hours or more of refrigeration with one lighting. This short burning time gives you modern refrigeration in its most economical form.

And you may buy on easy terms, if you wish. Ask for free home demonstration.

EIGHT EXTRA POUNDS OF RUBBER to every 100 pounds of cord. Extra value AT NO EXTRA COST.

PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS, because Gum-Dipping, that famous patented Firestone Process, makes these tires run up to 28 degrees cooler. TO THE FAR AWAY HILLS OF IDAHO

About 500 people would come into my place in the month of July, seeking my services. To turn away from them is just a little bit hard, for I like my friends and I appreciate my customers.

But I need a vacation, and I have the dearest old mother anyone ever had, and she wants to go and see her daughter. I kinder want to see the old girl too.

Be with you again in three or four weeks

Thank you,

SEIBERLING'S

Patented Vapor-Cure Process

MAKES TIRES WITH NO WEAK SPOTS!

All tire manufacturers, with the exception of Seiberling, vulcanize their tires in molds where rubber is pressed against blistering steel. Since rubber and cotton are vegetable products, heat burns the life and strength out of them. All Seiberling tires are cured by the Patented Vapor-Cure process as shown in the photograph at the right. This process of gentle steam vapor preserves the life of the cotton and rubber and makes a tire with No Weak Spots.

A SEIBERLING TIRE FOR EVERY PURSE AND PURPOSE!

Whether you select a Seiberling Special Service Rib tread design, a Special Service Low Pressure tire design or the famous Seiberling Standard Service tire, you can rest assured that you have a tire incorporating every construction advantage known to Seiberling engineers, with the exception of the Air-Cooling principle. Let us equip your car today with genuine Seiberling tires. We make you a liberal trade-in allowance on your old tires.

METHODIST NOTES
WELCH CIRCUIT

Our Notes last week were too late to be published, so are just a little behind. Services at Bartlett the third Sunday were good. Arranged for a revival to begin there the second Sunday in August. It won't be long and we have lots to do to get ready. Begin now to get ready.

Sunday night league program was good. Guess the people at Welch have found out that the pastor can't preach. Don't let that keep you away. Just come on and call it preaching and go on. There may be other things to keep them away. Might really have been sick. Little bit strange to me why so many people get sick about 7:30 p. m. Sunday. If anyone was really sick I beg your pardon. I have already decided that I'm going to do better preaching from now on. You can help me by being present.

Our revival at Welch will begin the third Sunday in August. Rev. W. M. Pearce will do the preaching and the pastor will end singing. Get ready.

REV. DENNING RETURNS FROM ROSWELL HOSPITAL

Evangelist Jno. R. Denning has returned from Roswell, New Mexico where he has been undergoing treatment in a Medical Clinic for several weeks, and is now occupying his pulpit regularly at the Highway Baptist church each Saturday night and Sunday.

Last Sunday's services were unusually well attended, and the church reports several additions and conversions during the past month.

In order that all may worship in comfort an open air meeting place is being prepared and equipped with electric lights on the south side of the church building, and beginning with the young peoples services Saturday night, all night services throughout the summer months will be held in the open air.

Next Sunday morning the entire membership is urged to be present for a special service, when the pastor will preach on "Standing in the Covenant."

The Sunday night sermon will be "Can One Be Saved Today and Lost Tomorrow?"

Rev. Roy R. Baese, singing evangelist, and his wife, will be guests at all services Sunday.

Mrs. Edna Harper underwent major surgery on Friday, June 25, at a local hospital.

Mrs. H. A. Duke is in a local hospital for medical treatment.

Public Notice:

It has been called to my attention by a number of people from different parts of the county, that farmers with tractors were doing lots of damage to the County Roads with their tractors in turning at the end of the rows. They just drive out in the road to turn around and most of the time with their plows in the ground and in some instances just take their plows or other implements and go out into the road and smooth the bar ditches down that they might cross them easily. Now this is expense to the county and the work of the graders is just wasted so far as the bar ditch is concerned.

This is an open violation of the law and must be stopped, and we hope without any serious trouble to anyone, but the county roads are county property the same as any other property and must be protected the same as any other. Please don't let this happen any more and if it continues we will just have to take steps to stop it and in so doing someone will have to suffer the consequences.

Hoping this notice will be sufficient.

Veterans Hospital For West Texas Urged by Mahon

Washington, D. C., June 30—Hearings by a special committee on the need for a general medical and surgical veterans hospital for West Texas may be expected within the next few weeks, according to Congressman Geo. Mahon. He conferred with Colonel George E. Ijama of the Veterans Administration who is a member of the Special Committee appointed by General Frank T. Hines, Administrator of the Veterans Administration, to make a general study of the need for additional Veterans Hospital facilities. The West Texas-Panhandle section is one of two areas in the United States designated by the Administrator to be given particular consideration.

As originally appointed, the Special Committee consisted of Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr., Surgeon General of the United States, Public Health Service, and Chairman of the Special Committee, General George H. Wood, Special Representative of the Administrator on National Homes for Veterans, and Colonel George E. Ijama, Assistant Administrator of the Veterans Administration, but Dr. Parran was unable to serve. Rear Admiral P. S. Rossiter, Surgeon General of the United States Navy, has been asked to serve as Chairman, but his acceptance of the assignment had not been given last week. As soon as the Committee is completed, open hearings will be held to consider the need for new hospitals.

Mahon stated that he expected to appear before the Committee and urge favorable recommendation for the West Texas Hospital. He has a bill pending in this Congress which authorizes an appropriation for a hospital to be erected in the Fifth American Legion District, comprising all of West Texas. Bills with more limited restrictions as to location have been introduced by Congressman Marvin Jones of Amarillo, Congressman Ewing Thomson of El Paso, and Congressman Clyde Garrett of Eastland. Mahon pointed out the necessity for cooperation of all West Texas areas in an effort to secure a favorable recommendation from the Veterans Administration at this time, stating that competition between individual cities could easily detract from the weight of argument for the Veterans Hospital for all West Texas. He stated that the appointment of the Special Committee with designation of West Texas for special consideration was more definite encouragement than had heretofore been given by the Veterans Administration.

rive at destinations all day July 5, 1937, and will bear final return limit of July 7, 1937. The tickets will not be good for passage on trains July 8, 1937. The basis for these low fares will be one-way coach fare for the round trip or one cent per mile traveled.

Suitable Formula for Grasshopper Poison

Joe Williams, County Farm Agent, gives the following formula, as a suitable and standard mixture for the poisoning of grasshoppers. The method of applying and amount to be used is as follows:

- Coarse wheat bran 25 lbs.
- Paris green or white arsenic 1 lb.
- High grade amyl acetate (avoid cheap grades of banana oil or bronzing liquids) 1 ounce
- Care or sorghum molasses (avoid corn syrup) 2 quarts
- Water sufficient to make a moist mash as explained below.

Mix the bran and poison together thoroughly. Dilute the amyl acetate and molasses in about two gallons of water, pour this liquid over the mixture of poison and bran until every particle is moist. Then make further additions of water and mix thoroughly until a mash is obtained that is quite moist, yet so that it will fall apart after being tightly squeezed, and so may be readily sown broadcast. This quantity of mash should be broadcast so as to cover about five acres. A good practice is to mix at night and sow early in the morning before nine o'clock, since the hoppers do not actively feed until the dew dries up. If it is desired to kill hoppers in grass land, sow over the entire acreage to be protected. Where they are migrating from fence rows or pastures into cultivated crops, sow the fence row on a fairly broad margin of the pasture, and also a broad margin of the crop land with the mixture.

Amyl acetate is preferable, but if it cannot be obtained, substitute six lemons for one ounce of the amyl acetate. Use both juice and rinds grinding in a fine food chopper. Do not place the mash in piles. Do not use lead arsenate. Do not use cheap banana oil or bronzing liquids.
