Bush, Dukakis point out headlines; Lead narrows

Associated Press

George Bush mocked Michael Dukakis' sudden embrace of liberalism as the Republican nominee courted disenchanted Democrats. Underdog Dukakis, in an appeal to women voters, assailed the Reagan-Bush administration for "being on the wrong side" of issues important to women.

With Election Day exactly one week away — and polls indicating a sizable but narrowing Republican lead, the GOP ticket of Bush and Sen. Dan Quayle exploited Dukakis' claim that he is a liberal in the tradition of former Presidents Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John F. Kennedy.

"Miracle of miracles. Headline. Read all about it," Bush told an audience Monday in Louisville, Ky. "My opponent finally ... called himself the big L, called himself a liberal."

Quayle returned Democratic opponent Lloyd Bentsen's debate putdown line of "You're no Jack Kennedy" to poke fun at Dukakis.

"Michael Dukakis is no Jack Kennedy," said the Indiana senator as he campaigned in Michigan and Ohio.

Dukakis, seeking the support of women voters, said the Democrats are "on your side" on the issues of abortion, equal pay and parental leave. The Republican ticket, however, has been "on the wrong side of every issue of special importance to American women."

The Democratic nominee was campaigning today in Youngstown, Ohio; Milwaukee, Detroit and Kansas City, Mo. He also was telling voters in a new five-minute ad scheduled to run tonight on NBC that the race for the White House is far from over.

Many voting absentee

In the tradition of the 1986 Texas gubernatorial race, it's safe to say a large bloc of voters isn't passionately supporting either major presidential candidate this year.

ELECTION '88

But according to statistics, voters are zealous about a law passed two years ago allowing balloters to cast their choice prior to election day — free of excuse — on an absentee basis.

There are an estimated 53,000 registered voters each in Midland and Ector counties, officials estimate.

Nearly 20 percent of Midland County's electorate has voted since the absentee procedure began Oct. 19.

In Ector County, a little more than 13 percent of the registered voters have voted absentee.

Both Midland and Ector county voters had the opportunity of voting last Saturday, while Midlanders also had the privilege on Sunday.

"We had people snaked way into the parking lot," Midland County Election Administrator Bettye Calvert said Monday.

Here Saturday, the eight-hour day at election headquarters saw 689 voters come through. Sunday, though hours were shortened to a 1 to 5 p.m. shift, 634 Midlanders voted, Mrs. Calvert said.

Ector County's election administrator, Sharon Wilson, said her operation has seen 500-800 absentee voters a day.

Spinoff will make Sun E&P largest

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas-based energy company plans today to become the largest American independent oil and gas producer through a spinoff approved by shareholders of its former parent company, officials say.

Sun Exploration & Production Co., Dallas' newest publicly held company, scheduled an employee rally outside its corporate headquarters off Central Expressway.

Stockholders of Radnor, Pa.-based Sun Co. approved the spinoff of Sun E&P on Oct. 4. Distribution of one share of Sun common stock for one share of Sun E&P occurs today, officials said.

Until now, Union Texas Petroleum of Houston held top ranking in independent oil and gas production.

Sun E&P's first chairman and chief executive officer said his company was ready to enter today's environment alone.

"We can't look to another part of the integrated business, as a major can, to sustain us with profits," said Robert P. Hauptfuhrer, Sun E&P chairman and CEO. "Our profits are totally driven by our oil and gas resources.

"We have to be responsive to the signals of the marketplace, just like other independents. When prices are low, they tend to cut back on their drilling and developmental expenditures and we have," Hauptfuhrer told the Dallas Morning News.

Hauptfuhrer said that the new company, like other U.S. independents, is moving more toward natural gas exploration and production. He said the company is nearing the end of a major restructuring that cuts its payroll by 800 workers to 3,100.

"We're now a focused company," Hauptfuhrer said. "And as the prices of our products improved, our shareholders will have a direct investment in prospects of oil and gas development."

The spinoff is a "progressive decision on the part of Sun Co.," said David Bradshaw, an analyst at PaineWebber Inc. in New York. "It will be interesting to watch how each company functions as a separate operation, with E&P operations standing on its own merits. They'll be the biggest."

Sun E&P has $150 million in cash and $1 billion in debt. Sun E&P's revenues last year were $1.6 billion, with income of $185 million.

Bail set for Imelda Marcos

NEW YORK (AP) — Wearing a regal gown, former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos was fingerprinted, photographed and ordered to remain here until she can come up with $5 million bail to face a racketeering trial.

"I'm not going to let the lady go back to the Hawaiian Islands until I'm certain the bail is set," U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan said after Mrs. Marcos pleaded innocent at an arraignment Monday.

Mrs. Marcos, who lives in exile in Honolulu with her husband, former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, brushed away tears.

Keenan ordered her to return to court Thursday with her attorneys if the lawyers have not worked out a bail agreement with prosecutors by then.

Mrs. Marcos, 59, was then fingerprinted and had her mug shot taken by federal marshals before being released temporarily without bail. Keenan instructed her not to leave the New York area.

She blew a kiss to a crowd outside the federal courthouse before departing for her midtown Manhattan hotel.

The Marcoses were indicted Oct. 21 on charges they plundered the Philippine treasury of $103 million, spirited the money out of their country and into foreign bank accounts, and used it to buy prime Manhattan real estate and art.

Mrs. Marcos' arrival at the courthouse for her arraignment was dramatic. A seven-car caravan, including two stretch limousines, pulled up to the courthouse.

The waiting crowd was momentarily stunned when the former first lady stepped out of her limo. She wore a bright aquamarine, chiffon gown with traditional Filipino butterfly sleeves and pearl earrings. Mrs. Marcos, who gained notoriety for the thousands of pairs of shoes found in the presidential palace after her husband's ouster in February 1986, wore simple black, high-heeled pumps.

U.S. Marines to discharge ex-hostage

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — A Texas Marine with emotional troubles caused by nearly 15 months of Iranian captivity will be discharged within three weeks despite his desire to remain in the service, Marine Corps officials said.

Staff Sgt. John D. McKeel Jr., 35, who contends his problems are manageable, will be honorably discharged with a 10 percent medical disability, according to a statement released Monday by the Marine Corps press office in Washington.

"Following the determination by the Department of the Navy's Central Physical Evaluation Board that McKeel ... was physically unfit to perform the duties required of him on active duty, the commandant of the Marine Corps has directed that he be honorably discharged within the next 20 days," the statement said.

McKeel, a Dallas native who is stationed at Camp Pendleton, was a Marine guard at the U.S. embassy in Tehran when it was stormed by Moslem radicals on Nov. 3, 1979, during the revolution which toppled the Shah and brought the Ayatollah Khomenei to power.

He was among nine Marines and 42 civilians held hostage 444 days before being released Jan. 19, 1981.

A Marine for nearly 13 years, McKeel has said civilian doctors diagnosed him in 1985 as suffering from post-traumatic stress syndrome. The federal Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the release of details of McKeel's career and military doctors' diagnoses of his medical condition.

"Due to the nature of his disability and the length of his service, Staff Sgt. McKeel will be entitled to two years of his base pay (about $34,000) as a severance payment," the Marine Corps statement said.

Halloween police calls include robbery

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Halloween night was busy for law officers, whose calls including a convenience store armed robbery, two major accidents within an hour, hurled eggs, smashed pumpkins and a missing scarecrow.

Midland County Sheriff's officers had a slow night until just before 11 p.m., when a robbery was reported at the Town and Country convenience store on U.S. Highway 80 east of Midland International Airport.

The clerk, 39, told officers a man walked into the store, pulled a "lockblade" knife and demanded money from the cash register. The clerk complied, and the man was last seen walking east of the store.

The suspect was described as a white man, about 18 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and weighing about 140 pounds. He had blond hair and blue eyes, according to officers.

The robbery was one of six calls reported to the sheriff's office between 3 p.m. and midnight. After midnight, the calls slowed down, according to the overnight dispatcher.

"It was dead," said Peggy Miller. "All we did was chase cows. We really didn't do anything, but the city ran their legs off."

Ms. Miller said she had only two calls during her shift.

Police dispatchers logged 159 calls during the midnight-to-midnight period, including one 8:45 p.m. accident that injured three children.

Officers arriving at the scene in the 1000 block of West Industrial Avenue found a 1984 Ford pickup truck had smashed into a utility pole.

Injured in the accident were 9-year-old Nicole Ezell, Laurie Ezell, and Brittany Paxton, 7. Nicole was listed this morning in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital, spokeswoman Sue Ristom said. The other children were treated and released, she said.

The driver of the truck, 29-year-old Lona Dale Ezell, Rt. 1 Box 97-K, told police she was distracted by the children, who were riding in the bed of the truck.

Cows vow 'I moo' at their Halloween wedding

SARATOGA, Calif. (AP) — Lise Dominique and Steve Bauer dressed up as cows for a Halloween wedding and said, "I moo."

As the "Monster Mash" played Monday, "the guests mooed us down the aisle and then they all applauded," Bauer said after the ceremony.

"It was very atraditional," the high school football coach said from the couple's home in this northern California city.

Dominique, news director for radio station KEZR in San Jose, originally ordered the cow costumes in August as a joke, not for a wedding.

She waited and waited, but the costumes didn't arrive. Earlier this month, Dominique finally called the company and insisted she needed them right away because she planned to get married in them on Halloween.

The company apologized and rushed the costumes to Dominique by air freight. All they asked in return were pictures of the cow vows.

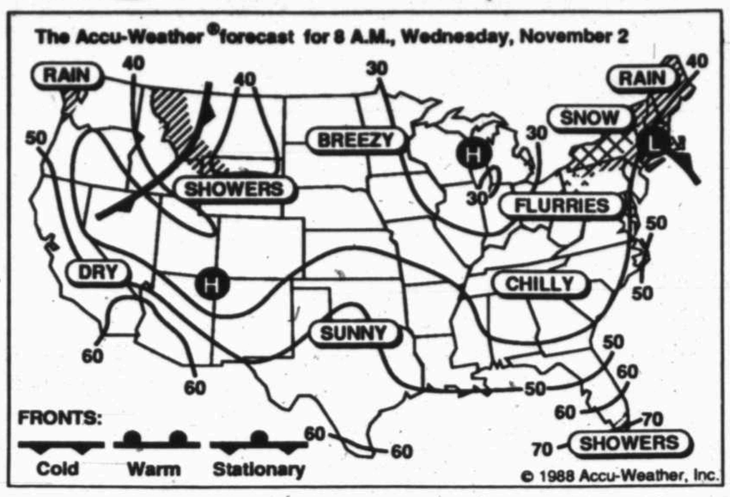

This presented Dominique and Bauer, who have lived together for the past 10 years, with a problem: Should they go through with a wedding or admit to the company that they lied just to get the costumes?

Bauer wanted to do the honorable thing. And Dominique accepted his proposal a week ago.

"We'd been living together for so long and we needed a nudge," said Bauer.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and southerly winds at 5-10 mph are expected for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Tonight's low should be near 50.

Sunny skies and continued warm weather are expected Wednesday, with the high reaching into the mid-80s and southwesterly winds at 10-20 m.p.h.

Monday's high of 74 was 15 degrees cooler than the record high of 89 set for that date in 1934. The overnight low of 44 was 13 degrees warmer than the record low of 31 set for this date in 1972.

STATE

Dense fog forced temporary suspension of flights at Dallas Love Field Airport early today, an airport official said. The suspension began about 6:30 a.m. and was still in effect two hours later.

There were reports that Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport had closed temporarily, but airport officials said operations were normal.

Fog reduced visibility to near zero in the Wichita Falls area, and fog also was widespread across much of North Texas and Central Texas.

A dense fog advisory was in effect for northwest and south central portions of North Texas before dawn. Dense fog also was reported in the Waco-Hillsboro area.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies across South Texas and mostly sunny skies and clear skies through tonight for the rest of the state.

Lows tonight should be mostly in the 50s, ranging from the low 40s in the Panhandle to the lower 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Wednesday will be in the 70s and 80s across West Texas and North Texas and in the 80s in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 60s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 34 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 65 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 44 at Amarillo, 42 at Wichita Falls, 51 at Fort Worth, 57 at Waco and Austin, 53 at Houston, 59 at Brownsville, 45 at San Angelo, 44 at Lubbock, 48 at Midland and 44 at El Paso.

NATION

Showers lingered over the Carolinas and the mid-Atlantic Coast today as cloudy skies and some widely scattered rain extended across the Southeast and Great Lakes.

Clouds covered much of California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington state, and dense fog developed over California's central coast, as well as parts of Oklahoma, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Clear skies prevailed across the rest of the nation.

After two days of record low temperatures in the Northeast and Midwest, record highs for Oct. 31 were recorded Monday in at least eight cities — Boise, Idaho, at 73 degrees; Las Vegas, 86; Phoenix, 96; Pocatello, Idaho, 71; Salt Lake City, 73; Spokane, Wash., 67; Tucson, Ariz., 88; and Winnemucca, Nev., 76.

Today's forecast called for rain from central and southern New England through the mid-Atlantic Coast, eastern parts of the Great Lakes through the Middle Atlantic States, and from there down to Florida; widespread showers across the northern Pacific Coast; and mostly sunny skies and higher temperatures from the central Rockies to the middle Mississippi Valley.

POLICE

Police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said charges were pending against the woman.

Less than an hour later, five persons were injured in a two-vehicle accident in the 1600 block of North Midkiff Road near the intersection with Lockheed Avenue, police reported.

Deborah Ann Pierce, 38, 2903 Douglas Ave., Janet Pierce, 6, and Kyle Pierce, 4, suffered minor injuries and were treated and released at MMH, Ms. Ristom said.

The trio was traveling south on Midkiff in a 1983 Buick LeSabre station wagon, when, according to police, Ms. Pierce "cut a corner" and turned left in front of another vehicle.

The other vehicle, a 1982 Pontiac Firebird two-door, was driven by George Sultero, 20, 2600 N. Loop 250. After the two vehicles collided, the Buick came to rest near a home on Lockheed, according to police.

Sultero was uninjured, but a passenger, 18-year-old Mike Tarango, was taken to MMH and this morning was listed in satisfactory condition, Ms. Ristom said.

The load of 159 calls included several reports of kids throwing eggs or rocks at passing cars, smashing or throwing pumpkins, and an interesting call about a scarecrow.

Just after 10 p.m., the scarecrow was reported missing from the 2900 block of Godfrey Street. This morning, there were no leads in the disappearance.

"Halloween night usually generates an increase in calls," White said. "Last night was no different."

Writers 'Hammet-up' for ham sandwich

By THOMAS MURPHY

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Perhaps mystery writer Dashiell Hammett was dropping a clue to would-be-bad-writers when he wrote, "The cheaper the crook, the gaudier the patter."

More than 100 writers accepted the challenge and submitted entries in the "Hamming up Hammett" writing contest, vying for the grand prize package: a bottle of cheap gin, a ham sandwich and hard-boiled egg.

The winners got what they had coming Monday at John's Grill, a swank little joint where Hammett used to bend an elbow between chapters of books like "The Maltese Falcon" and "The Thin Man."

Top honors, or dishonors, were shared by Kevin Killian and William Vlach. Carolyn Diamond got a bottle of cheap wine as a runner-up. All three writers are from San Francisco, although the judges didn't know that while poring over essays from around the country.

Vlach was picked for his classic Hammett-esque prose:

"She turned to me, the Continental Cop, and said with a tear dribbling through her eye liner like Moses parting the Red Sea, 'You won't turn me in. I love you. You love me.' "I counted the lies in those three sentences, multiplied by three, then opened the door for her pal, Little Joel Egypt. ... When the cops got there I turned them both in. Her because she said she loved me. Him because he called me Donald Dick."

Killian's entry was honored for an obscure pun from "The Thin Man".

"Tell me the truth," Nora said, "when you were on the floor, wrestling with Mimi, did you have anorexia."

When "The Thin Man" was published in 1934, censors deleted a similar line. Nora actually asked Nick if he had "an erection" when he wrestled with Mimi.

Diamond's entry featured a hard-boiled detective named Sam meeting an operative named Gus at the corner of Fifth and Market, where Sam had found a body:

"Gus bends over and with a heave rolls over a huge concrete slab. Laying there is a body with a face one could never forget. It was Hoffa. ... We put the slab back and left ol' Jimmy there at that intersection. He's lying there now looking up at those society dames as they go by. I figure Jimmy would have liked it that way."

HOSTAGE

"The commandant of the Marine Corps, due to the special circumstances involved, conducted an in-depth review of Staff Sgt. McKeel's case to ensure that every available option had been considered."

Telephone calls to McKeel's home in San Marcos, 35 miles north of San Diego, went unanswered Monday evening.

McKeel has said he won't fight the discharge because his enlistment is up in March and he has no legal right to re-enlist because he has less than 18 years in the service.

However, he doesn't believe the Marines have treated him fairly or exhausted all efforts to find a job which his condition will allow him to handle.

"I'm perfectly capable of doing a good job. They just won't give me (one)," McKeel said last month when he first complained publicly about his situation.

"If you put your life on the line for your country, they ought to repay you some other way than saying, 'Hit the road.' After the awards and the honors you get, they do this to you."

McKeel said the civilian doctors who diagnosed him wanted to place him in a treatment program designed for former prisoners of war, but the Marines wouldn't approve it.

He was instead sent back to Camp Pendleton in northern San Diego County and assigned to supply duty while undergoing periodic counseling, which McKeel said helped a little.

"I still had the post-traumatic stress, but I wasn't crazy or anything," he said.

"I could still function and do a job ... (but) the only reason they keep me around at all is (because) no other sucker will do (those supply and maintenance chores)."

McKeel said he decided to discuss his dilemma publicly because "if more people speak up, a lot of stuff like this might not happen."

VOTE

To date, about 9,000 Midlanders and 7,100 Odessans have voted absentee.

During the work week, an average of 600-700 voters come through daily, the two women said.

On Oct. 28 in Midland, however, a whopping 1,031 people turned out, Mrs. Calvert said.

Until the state law was passed in 1986, a voter had to have had a medical or geographical reason that prevented his voting on election day in order to vote in abstentia, Mrs. Calvert explained.

But complaints from voters plagued by election-day hassles — namely the long lines and waits — was the catalyst in the getting the new law passed, she said.

The administrators, however, said they couldn't predict if the big numbers during the absentee period mean more voters will cast ballots on election day, Nov. 8.

Sentiment seemed to run that the normal presidential year turnouts would remain the same — 75 percent in Midland, 70 percent in Odessa, the women said.

The Midland County Election office is located at 709 W. Washington Ave. and is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Absentee voting ends Friday, Nov. 4.

"The line (Friday) will probably be into the parking lot," Mrs. Calvert said. "We're going to have 3,000 people that day," she estimated.

The last person in line at 5 p.m. "will be it," she claimed. "That is the law."

RACE

"In recent days our campaign has been on the move. Thousands of Americans are joining our effort daily," Dukakis says. "Next Tuesday, your one vote will be more powerful than all the pollsters and political commercials."

Two new polls — a survey by Harris and another done by Gallup for the Times Mirror Corp. — showed Bush maintaining a strong lead among likely voters.

In the Harris survey of 1,250 voters questioned during the weekend, Bush led Dukakis 52-45 percent, a slight narrowing from 53-44 percent in a similar poll done Oct. 14-17.

The Times Mirror poll of 1,505 likely voters conducted Oct. 23-26 found Bush ahead by 11 points, 52-41 percent. Both polls had margins of error of plus or minus three points.

The front-running Republican ticket was concentrating on the Midwest today.

Bush was speaking about law and order this afternoon at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., and campaigning in Wisconsin after taping an interview this morning with David Frost. Quayle was stumping in Ohio and his home state of Indiana.

Democratic candidate Bentsen was focusing on his home state of Texas, Kentucky and Missouri.

Former Democratic contender Jesse Jackson joined Bentsen Monday night at a rally in Fort Worth, Texas, where the preacher-turned-politician responded to Bush's "read my lips" refrain.

"You watch our hips as we march," to the voting booth, Jackson told the crowd at the Mount Olive Missionary Baptist Church.

The Texas senator urged those in the audience to get out and vote. "Don't tell me your vote doesn't count — it does," he said.

While Bentsen focused on Texas and its third-largest electoral prize of 29 votes, Dukakis sought support in California and its biggest electoral bounty of 47 votes.

In his major appeal to women voters, Dukakis said the Republican ticket wanted to outlaw abortions.

"I believe a choice that personal must be made by the woman in the exercise of her beliefs," the Democratic nominee told an audience in San Jose.

Dukakis cited Quayle's response to an 11-year-old girl's question last week about what she should do if she was raped by her father and became pregnant. The GOP candidate said that he favored childbirth over abortion even under those circumstances.

Dukakis also challenged Bush to an hour-long debate the night before the election, but the Republican nominee scoffed at his rival's idea and suggested that Dukakis debate himself.

The vice president, ostensibly concerned about a slight decrease in his lead, appealed to what he called "abandoned Democrats," those left behind as he says the party moves away from the mainstream.

"So, my pitch here, in the last eight days, is to those good Democrats, the rank and file," Bush said during a stop in Louisville, Ky. "I tell them: Have hope, have confidence."

The Bush campaign also continued with two new economic ads, a positive spot citing the accomplishments of the Reagan-Bush administration and a negative commercial showing a couple inundated with tax bills. That ad accuses Dukakis of consistently raising taxes, and the narrator concludes, "And now he wants to do for America what he's done for Massachusetts. American taxpayers can't afford that risk."

The topic of ads arose in Bush's interview with NBC News anchorman Tom Brokaw, who questioned the vice president about whether his commercial saying 'George Bush led the way' on the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty with the Soviet Union was an exaggeration.

"Well, I hope it didn't indicate that I was out in front of the president," Bush said.

MARCOS

"She doesn't look like she's going to court, she looks like she's going to a dance ball," said Ziyad Barq, a designer who stopped at the courthouse to see what all the fuss was about.

At least a dozen protesters greeted Mrs. Marcos and her entourage of at least a dozen people, chanting "Justice, justice must prevail! Send the Marcoses to jail!"

A woman wearing a black cape and vampire fangs held up a sign reading, "Imelda, bloodsucker of the Filipino people."

Detractors' shouts drowned out those of supporters, who occasionally called out, "We love you, Imelda."

Mrs. Marcos, clasping rosary beads, made her way up the courthouse steps through a gauntlet of hundreds of reporters and photographers.

Inside, she spoke aloud only twice during the 45-minute hearing, once to waive a reading of the six-count indictment and once to answer "not guilty" when asked her plea.

Most of the hearing, in a court packed with 200 artists, reporters and spectators, was taken up with lawyers arguing over the amount of bail.

Mrs. Marcos' attorneys originally wanted her released without any bond, but had agreed to a package in which the couple would put up $1.2 million in Philippine pesos and jewelry they brought to Hawaii in 1986.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles LaBella balked, noting that the jewelry is subject to subpoena in a grand jury investigation and that the current Philippine government has laid claim to the Marcoses' Philippine currency.

"There are conflicting claims to the property brought by the Marcoses to the United States," conceded the Marcos' attorney, John S. Bartko. A federal judge in California has frozen "anything the Marcoses own anywhere in the world" except for living expenses and legal fees, Bartko said.

"The Marcoses have been forced to live on borrowed funds," he said. "All of their collateral is subject to claims."

Keenan suggested putting up the hillside home the Marcoses occupy in Honolulu.

Pilot waited too long to apply full power, documents indicate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pilot of a Delta Air Lines flight that crashed last August near Dallas waited at least 20 seconds after a stall warning before he applied full power, according to documents.

The documents made public Monday by the National Transportation Safety Board pointed to no specific cause for the Aug. 31 crash in which 14 of the 108 people aboard Flight 1141 were killed.

The NTSB investigation is not expected to be completed for a number of weeks.

According to a transcript of the cockpit voice recorder tape on Flight 1141, an unusual "snap" was heard seconds after liftoff, followed almost immediately by a vibration of the control column — a warning of an impending stall.

A normal procedure for dealing with an impending stall close to the ground such as in a takeoff would be to apply full power and attempt to fly out of the problem, according to aviation experts.

But the transcript showed that Capt. Larry Davis, 48, a veteran Delta pilot, did not call for "full power" until nearly 23 seconds after the first sign of trouble and nearly 20 seconds after the so-called "stickshaker" stall warning.

The call to full power came as the aircraft was about to crash and eight seconds after Davis could be heard on the tape saying, "We're not gonna make it," according to the transcript.

Davis, a 23-year veteran at Delta with 17,000 hours of flying including 6,500 in a Boeing 727, later told investigators, "In retrospect, I should have pushed up full power immediately."

A summary of the NTSB interview of Davis from his hospital bed was included among the documents made public Monday.

The documents provided no apparent clear evidence as to specifically what caused Flight 1141 not to gain proper lift as it departed the Dallas-Fort Worth airport. The flight was bound for Salt Lake City, Utah.

The investigation continues to focus on the possibility that the flight crew failed to set the plane's flaps properly, inhibiting the aircraft's lift. The NTSB previously had said that the wing flaps were found in a retracted position in the wreckage as was the cockpit lever controlling the flaps.

But the cockpit tape transcript shows, as also has been previously disclosed, that co-pilot Gary Kirkland specifically acknowledged during a pre-takeoff check that the flaps were in the proper 15 degree extension — contradicting evidence in the wreckage.

Bentsen touts Dukakis defense plan

FORT WORTH (AP) — Lloyd Bentsen is stressing that the Democratic ticket's defense plan is better for Texas than Republican policies as the senator stumps in his home state for its third-largest electoral prize.

Bentsen

The Democratic vice presidential nominee today was visiting a General Dynamics factory which makes the F-16 jet fighter. The stop fits in with the Texas senator's efforts to counter Republican attempts to paint Michael Dukakis as soft on defense.

Bentsen said Monday that the Democrats' defense plan, which places a greater emphasis on conventional weapons such as fighter jets than on nuclear missiles, is better for Texas.

"The truth is that most of the defense jobs in Texas relate to conventional weapons — the kind of weapons Mike Dukakis and I favor," Bentsen told an audience in San Antonio.

According to recent polls, the Democratic ticket of Dukakis and Bentsen trail in Texas, which has 29 electoral votes at stake.

On Monday night, Bentsen put aside his defense speech for visits to two black Baptist churches in Fort Worth, including a stop where he was joined by former Democratic candidate Jesse Jackson.

At the first stop, Bentsen sat on the floor with children at a Halloween party. He and House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, gave out candy prizes to winners of a costume contest.

Jackson joined Bentsen at the second stop — a rally at the Mount Olive Missionary Baptist Church — and was the featured speaker of the night.

"...(M)ost defense jobs in Texas relate to conventional weapons — the kind of weapons Mike Dukakis and I favor."

— Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

Bentsen, who spoke first, got a friendly reception when he told the crowd to get out and vote. "Don't tell me your vote doesn't count — it does," he said.

Reciting the Republican record on social issues, Bentsen highlighted Bush running mate Dan Quayle's votes against civil rights legislation.

"Senator Quayle has stated that civil rights is not very high on his list of priorities," he said. "How do you like the idea of a man like that being a heartbeat away from the president."

Bentsen also included an attack on the GOP proposals earlier in the decade to trim back Social Security spending.

The social security check, "for some of them, that's all they have, isn't it," he said. The Republican willingness to cut that back, "That's reason enough to vote against them," he said.

Jackson, clearly the favorite of the crowd, attacked Bush's call for a "kinder, gentler nation" as "nice words from some speechwriter but they don't fit."

He called Bush's campaign "meanspirited" and he had an answer to Bush's phrase of "read my lips."

"You watch our hips as we march," to the voting booth, Jackson said.

Jackson wrapped up his speech by getting the crowd to repeat after him: "Dukakis yes, Bush no. Bentsen yes, Quayle no. Dukakis yes, justice yes, fairness yes...Keep hope alive."

Jesse Jackson criticizes Bush for waging negative campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson campaigned through Texas trying to drum up support for Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis and criticized Republican nominee George Bush for waging a negative campaign.

Jackson

On Monday, Jackson spoke at the University of Texas campus before an enthusiastic crowd of about 3,000. He also made stops in McAllen, Dallas and Fort Worth, before heading for other southern states.

"We are going to take off the Bush-Quayle mask. We will not have Halloween November the eighth. We will not get the trick, while they get the treat," Jackson said at UT. "We can win Texas. We can win America."

Jackson's speech coincided with a move by Dukakis on Sunday to defend liberal traditions.

Jackson told the crowd that certain conservative values should be cherished, but that conservative politicians have stood in the way of progress in civil rights.

"And if conservatives had had their way, the sign on the Statue of Liberty would have said, 'No room in the inn. You don't have any property. You don't speak English. You can't come.' But the liberal tradition said, 'Give me your poor, your huddled masses.'"

Supporters of Bush have used the image of the Massachusetts governor as a liberal to attract conservative and moderate voters, but Jackson said Dukakis was right Sunday in calling himself a liberal in the Franklin D. Roosevelt-John F. Kennedy tradition.

He said liberals have fought for Medicare, Social Security and housing for the poor. Jackson added that Bush "runs a campaign implying that civil liberties are subversive. We must stand for civil liberties."

In McAllen, Jackson praised Dukakis, saying, "When he properly defines liberalism and liberation as expanding the democracy to make room for the common people, it is the highest and best tradition of Roosevelt and John Kennedy and (farm worker leader Cesar) Chavez and Martin Luther King and the Statue of Liberty."

Later at a Dallas rally at the Martin Luther King Jr. Community Center, Jackson told some 2,000 supporters that Bush's remarks against liberals shunned the work and the memory of such famous Americans as King, Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

"Conservatives want to keep things the way they are," Jackson said. "Liberals want to change things that need to be changed."

STATE IN BRIEF

Prisons not required to supply prayer shawls

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Prisons don't have to supply free prayer shawls, sermon tapes or religious books to inmates, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Monday.

The court upheld U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's decision that Donald Ray Frank's lawsuit against the Texas Department of Corrections should be dismissed as frivolous.

"We agree with the District Court's observation that 'there cannot possibly be any constitutional or legal requirement that the government provide materials for every religion and sect practiced in this diverse country,'" the 5th Circuit said.

Frank, who is Jewish, claimed his freedom of religion was violated because the department wouldn't give him religious materials including six books, a prayer shawl, sermon tapes and a kippah — the skullcap also called a yarmulke.

The 5th Circuit noted that Frank does not claim he is not allowed to worship or that he is discriminated against because he is Jewish, or that the Corrections Department won't let him get the things he wants on his own.

Teen charged with murder

FORT WORTH (AP) — A murder charge has been filed against a stepcousin in the slaying of Michael Toston, a 5-year-old who was bludgeoned and dumped in a field near his grandmother's east-side apartment complex last October, police said.

Homicide Sgt. Paul Kratz said Sirron Hicks, 18, was charged Monday.

Michael had last been seen about noon Oct. 22. He was reported missing about 90 minutes later by his mother, who had come to pick him up after he had stayed overnight with his grandmother.

The boy's body was discovered by a cousin the morning of Oct. 23, less than 100 yards from his grandmother's front door in a wooded area that had been searched the previous night by neighbors, patrol officers and police dogs, Kratz said.

Taxes paid on Roloff land

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Officials of the church founded by the late Lester Roloff have paid back taxes owed to a school district in time to avoid an auction of a 550-acre spread where the controversial evangelist operated unlicensed homes for youths.

Officials of the People's Baptist Church paid the $75,250 owed to the West Oso Independent School District Monday in order to avoid the auction that was to be held today.

Roloff's successor had earlier criticized a Texas Supreme Court ruling that agreed that the school district had the right to tax the property despite the church's contention that it was exempt.

The Supreme Court ruled that the church had nullified its tax-exempt status by allowing a for-profit business to operate on the property.

Roloff, a dynamic radio preacher whose sermons were broadcast throughout the nation, died in 1982 when his private plane crashed.

Roloff's 72-year-old widow, Marie, lives on the farm in the two-story home she once shared with the evangelist.

About 450 troubled youths and drug and alcohol abusers lived in five homes located on the farm, but today only 150 remain in three homes. The homes for adult drug users and alcoholics are still open. And the church continues to operate a day school Roloff founded in 1948.

Hospital cuts services

EL PASO (AP) — This West Texas city's oldest hospital laid off about 150 workers Monday as it closed its emergency room and eliminated its surgery department and all other inpatient services.

Since the late 1970s, when Landmark Medical Center had more than 600 employees, the hospital's staff had been cut to about 300.

Half of Landmark's workers had been offered jobs somewhere in the El Paso Healthcare System, a division of Columbia Hospital Corp. of Fort Worth, said Ann Moncure, Landmark marketing director. El Paso Healthcare's acquisition of Landmark center was completed Monday.

All Landmark's remaining patients will be moved to either Sun Towers or Vista Hills Tuesday, officials said. The Landmark emergency and inpatient surgery departments closed Monday.

Landmark will now handle only surgery that does not require hospitalization.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A partnership could solve your business woes and create an environment that will make you more productive. A close relationship will flourish once you both understand the need to compromise on the little things. Pets and children add a new dimension to home life, especially for those now retired. Children show greater purpose when they know what they are working toward.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: pitching coach Billy Connors, presidents James Polk and Warren G. Harding, actor Burt Lancaster, frontiersman Daniel Boone, Marie-Antoinette, tennis star Ken Rosewall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your creativity is at a peak. Disciplined work on your pet project will bring fantastic rewards in the near future. Romantic fires started now will burn forever. Do not let opportunity pass you by!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Turn worry into positive action and you will make real progress. You have a great deal of influence now; use it to best advantage and you will emerge a winner. Romance is terrific!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your high hopes could be dashed by a sudden change of plans. Get up off the floor and take a different approach. Influential person admires your gumption. Accept praise, criticism with good grace.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not be so secretive. Let others in on your plans so they can help you. Your patience begins to pay off with investments. You finally find what you are looking for in romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Postpone making important financial decisions or you could lose a bundle. Additional data is needed. Romance beckons. You could be thinking about setting the date. Let your family in on your plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Worry could lead you to be short-tempered with someone dear to you. Apologize before it is too late. Something happens this afternoon to change your life. Be grateful for small blessings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for shopping and bargain-hunting. You find what you have been looking for. Avoid making a job change now. Stay where the action is and profit. Show loved one more affection.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your quick mind comes up with several solutions to a vexing problem. Your personal magnetism helps you put your point across to a loved one. Once the air clears, go out and celebrate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Only hard work will bring the rewards you seek. Try to be more patient with a young person who steps out of line. Start making Christmas vacation plans now. Get reservations confirmed in writing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your usual good judgment could desert you. Realize how vulnerable you are right now and act accordingly. Do not stew over a broken promise. Your sense of humor comes to the rescue!

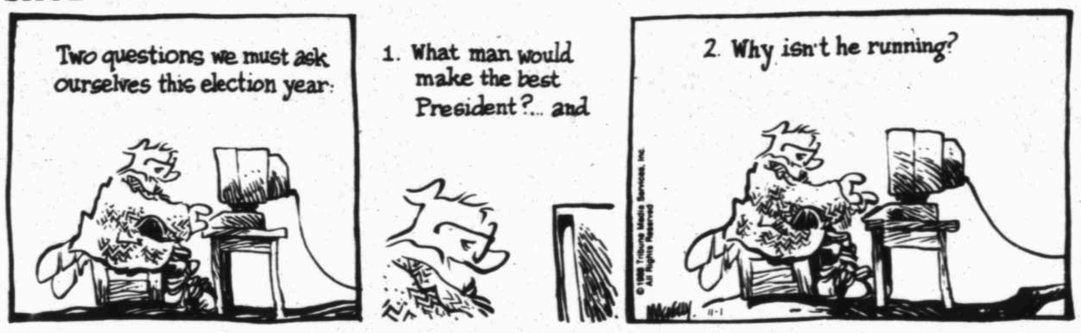

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day for buying and selling. Follow up on a stock tip. Your patience is put to a severe test, but if you can stick it out, you will accomplish great things.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Sit tight and let things follow their natural course. Avoid secret deals. Keep everything on the up-and-up. Your original plan still looks promising. You feel more at ease with the opposite sex.

Conventions come and conventions go. Some years ago, the Gambling Three No Trump Convention was very much in vogue with tournament bridge players, but today, in its original form, it has fallen on lean times. However, it still crops up from time to time and, unless the defense is on its toes, it can wreak havoc.

South's opening bid was typical of the Gambling Three No Trump, which shows a hand with a solid seven-card minor suit and not much in the side suits. Partner can gamble it out with a smattering of cards, or he can bail out in four of the minor. Here, there's no question that he would have been wiser to run to four diamonds, but he was afraid that, if he showed weakness, he might invite the opponents into the auction.

West made his normal lead of fourth-best from his longest suit. Declarer had to decide whether to take his eight fast tricks and settle for down one, or whether to try for his contract at the risk of going down about six tricks.

Since the difference between down 50 and down 300 was not calamitous, declarer decided to go for broke. He called for a low spade from dummy, and when East did not produce the king, nine tricks were there.

When an opponent opens with a gambling three no trump, you cannot afford to make a normal lead. You know that he can run at least seven tricks against you, so you have to take your tricks quickly. If you have one, you should select an ace for your opening lead, so that you could get a look at dummy.

Had West led his ace of hearts, the club shift would have been apparent. That would have permitted the defenders, rather than declarer, to collect the first nine tricks.

Houseman remembered for helping advance careers of young actors

Houseman

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — John Houseman was remembered upon his death at age 86 as a gentleman actor-producer who taught young actors, not the autocratic law professor in "The Paper Chase," for which he won an Oscar.

Houseman brought a magnetic eloquence to the role of the curmudgeon as Professor Charles W. Kingsfield Jr.

He parlayed his fame from "The Paper Chase" movie and television series and his distinctive speaking style into a lucrative series of commercial endorsements, including advertisements for the investment firm Smith, Barney in which he growled, "They make money the old-fashioned way — they EARN it."

"Behind that austere public posture was the warmest, most generous man in the world — with his time, his remarkable intelligence, his insight," said writer David Rintels, who collaborated with Houseman on the movie "Gideon's Trumpet" and the play "Clarence Darrow."

Houseman died at his seaside home before dawn Monday, said Ivan Goff, a family friend and scriptwriter. Margo Harley, a longtime friend and colleague, said he had spinal cancer.

Houseman's most significant contribution was his role advancing the work of young actors, Ms. Harley said. They included Kevin Kline, Robin Williams, Christopher Reeve, Patti LuPone and David Ogden Stiers, with whom Houseman appears in the new Woody Allen movie, "Another Woman."

"He was really the last of the Renaissance men," she said. "He was somebody who has been responsible, probably, for more people's careers in American theater than any single person."

Robert Ginty, an actor who worked with Houseman in "The Paper Chase" television series, agreed. "He was without question the No. 1 creative influence on my life."

"He was a gentleman of the old school, polite and courtly," said Kirk Douglas, who starred in the Houseman-produced movie "Two Weeks in Another Town."

While best known for his work on screen, Houseman was a reluctant actor. His strongest affections were reserved for theater and opera production, book writing and the teaching of acting.

Houseman achieved what he told friends was his ultimate goal: the establishment of the Acting Company, a touring ensemble of the nation's brightest theatrical talents.

Born Jacques Haussmann in Bucharest, Romania, to an Alsatian father and a British mother, he began his career in 1934 as the director of a Broadway production of the Gertrude Stein-Virgil Thomson opera "Four Saints in Three Acts." He founded New York's Mercury Theatre with Orson Welles in 1937.

Houseman produced the "War of the Worlds" radio broadcast for Welles and though uncredited, Houseman was instrumental in making Welles' legendary film "Citizen Kane" in 1941.

His subsequent acting credits included "Three Days of the Condor," "The Cheap Detective" "St. Ives," "Old Boyfriends," "The Fog" and "Bright Lights, Big City."

He also starred in the 1978-79 CBS-TV series based on the movie "The Paper Chase." He returned with the show when it was revived in 1983 by cable television as "The Paper Chase: The Second Year."

Houseman's theater productions included "Lute Song" with Mary Martin, "Hamlet" with Leslie Howard and Marc Blitzstein's "The Cradle Will Rock."

Survivors include his wife, Joan, and two sons. There will be no funeral, but a memorial service was being planned, said publicist Judi Davidson.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Singer John Fogerty hoisted a guitar on the witness stand in federal court and plucked out a twangy tune in an effort to prove he's innocent of plagiarism charges.

Fogerty led jurors Monday through his musical roots in 1950s blues songs, playing tapes of Howlin' Wolf and Bo Diddley before picking up an electric guitar for a rendition of Diddley's "Bring It To Jerome."

Fogerty is fighting a plagiarism lawsuit by his former record company that claims he stole one of his own Creedence Clearwater Revival songs for a later solo tune.

"Jerome," though in a different style, has a similar tune to the two songs involved in the lawsuit — "Run Through the Jungle," a 1970 Creedence hit, and "Old Man Down the Road," a song Fogerty wrote in 1984 for his solo "Centerfield" album.

Fantasy Records, which distributed Creedence music before the group disbanded in 1972, claims Fogerty copied the melody of "Run Through the Jungle" when he wrote "Old Man Down the Road." Fantasy Records owns the rights to "Run Through the Jungle."

Fogerty contends the similarities between the songs are part of his composing style and are shared by several of his songs for Creedence, for which he was the lead singer and songwriter.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cher's boyfriend dodged the press and entered an early innocent plea to charges stemming from an alleged attempt to run down a photographer in the actress's Ferrari.

Robert Camilletti, 24, was due in court Monday for arraignment on one count of reckless driving and two counts of malicious mischief. He had his lawyers enter innocent pleas to the misdemeanor charges Thursday, said city attorney's spokesman Mike Qualls. Camilletti's next court appearance is Nov. 14.

Camilletti, who has lived with the pop singer-actress in her Benedict Canyon home, maintained that he was upset by pesky photographers when he lost control of the black sports car outside the driveway and smashed into a photographer's parked car.

The photographer, Peter Brandt, accused Camilletti of trying to run him down, and of smashing $2,200 worth of photo gear and a cellular phone in the July 27 incident. Another photographer who specializes in snapping celebrity candid shots, Phil Ramey, accused Camilletti of causing $435 worth of damage to his walkie-talkie.

Some recently published reports say Cher and Camilletti have separated.

Court race suffers from ad campaign

The Texas Supreme Court received a black eye several months ago when 60 Minutes looked at the court and how justice is being dispensed in the Lone Star State. Now, with several seats on the bench up for grabs including the position of chief justice, it appears as though the Supreme Court will be brushed by controversy again.

This time the culprit is the campaign advertising being aired either by or on behalf of Ted Z. Robertson, the Democratic nominee for the court's top slot. The ads, which refer to the 60 Minutes program aired in December 1987, attempt to place the blame for the Supreme Court's problems at that time squarely on the shoulders of Tom Phillips, the current chief justice and the Republican nominee.

That's a little far-fetched considering Phillips wasn't even on the court when the show first aired and wasn't part of any investigation. Phillips was appointed to the court in 1987 by Gov. Bill Clements and has received outstanding reviews by court-watchers since.

There's little doubt that advertising for Robertson, who has served on the court and now wants to be chief justice, is intended to create confusion in the minds of voters. It wouldn't be the first time that an election was won by duping the electorate. But such a tactic is shameful.

The 60 Minutes program revealed a desperate situation on the Texas Supreme Court. A number of those on the court at that time, including Robertson, were faulted for taking money — or campaign contributions, if you will — from individuals whose cases would come before the Supreme Court. Robertson was one of those cited by the report. It indicated he accepted $120,000 from Texas oilman Clinton Manges, then later changed his vote in a crucial case to favor Manges.

Anyone who has kept up with what has happened to the Supreme Court in the last year or so knows that it has been in an almost constant state of change. The faces on the court have changed dramatically, but the policies on the court have changed, too, for the better. Many of the justices now, Phillips being one, limit campaign contributions. Robertson has not, though. In all this change, it could be easy for anyone to become confused.

But the type of campaign being waged by Ted Z. Robertson only makes it more confusing. That's no help. Change has already come to the Supreme Court in the position of chief justice. The sitting chief justice, Tom Phillips, is an honorable man who has the court headed in the right direction. He will not sell justice to the highest bidder. Justice will be fair, impartial and above-board.

Chief Justice Tom Phillips can help bring respect back to the Supreme Court.

Give Boulter a chance

Under the "Quotable Quotes" in the November issue of the Reader's Digest, there is a quote by Lou Erickson which reads as follows, "We will all be better citizens when voting records of our Congressmen are followed as carefully as scores of pro-football games."

Texans stopped noting the voting record of Sen. Bentsen after his first term when he did vote conservative. A quick determination of "conservative" versus "liberal" is to note whether the vote was in favor of more government interference and control of your life and that of businesses or was in favor of less government control. Less government control is in line with the thinking of the Founding Fathers and gives more responsibility for one's actions to the individual.

Sen. Bentsen during his last two terms has steadily voted more liberal. He fits in very well with the congressmen and senators from Massachusetts who consistently vote very liberal. According to my last information, Sen. Bentsen has an accumulative record of voting 29 percent pro-conservative and 71 percent pro-liberal. On the other hand, Congressman Boulter who is running for the Senate has an accumulative record of 83 percent pro-conservative and only 17 percent pro-liberal.

How about Texans giving Beau Boulter a chance at the Senate? Then let's not forget to watch his voting record.

Wrong on Richards

In a recent speech in San Angelo Ann Richards' quote about Michael Dukakis was, "He never, never said he was going to take away a person's guns ..."

Ann Richards is a very colorful speaker. Color her wrong on that speech. Come on Ann, that old dog won't hunt! The direct quote from Michael Dukakis on June 16, was, "I do not believe in people owning guns, only police and military. I am going to do everything I can to disarm this state." This quote was confirmed by Roy Innis, National Chairman of CORE and a highly respected black liberal.

More open houses

I recently toured the fire station at Thomason and Midland Drive with my 5-year old son and wanted to thank the firemen there, especially Mike Childs. I would encourage parents with children of any age to visit a fire station. The information you get could be a life-saver.

I would also ask the City Council a question. If the police open house was a success why not do the same thing with fire stations? What better way for the public to become aware of the needs or problems facing our firefighters, and also to become aware of the valuable information available from them?

Don't lose mobility

If it ain't broke, don't fix it," would be a good statement for Proposition 1 (Highway Amendment) on the Nov. 8 ballot.

Dedicated funding and the historical use of federal gasoline taxes refunded to the state for highway projects have given Texas the best highway system in the world.

A vote for Proposition 1 will insure that this process continues into the future. Remember, your mobility may be at stake! Federal reimbursements for highway projects amount to $850 million annually, approximately one-third of the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation's budget.

The Highway Amendment does not increase taxes, does not increase funding for highway construction, does not remove legislative oversight of the highway program, and does not affect any other dedicated funding such as public education.

The Highway Amendment does maintain dedication of federal highway dollars to federal highway projects, does continue the user fee concept, and does allow long-term planning to meet the state's mobility needs. Protect your highway fees, vote for the Highway Amendment!

Witness details plot against Castro

WASHINGTON — After a 25-year silence, a witness has stepped out of the shadows to tell how a covert CIA mission to liquidate Cuba's Fidel Castro backfired. The Marxist ruler was tipped off that the CIA was trying to kill him. Instead, he may have turned the hired guns against John F. Kennedy.

Jack Anderson

The witness, a Washington police officer named Joseph Shimon, played an undercover role in the bizarre tragedy. He sat in on the actual meetings where the CIA's William Harvey and the Mafia's Johnny Rosselli plotted Castro's assassination.

The covert operation had the blessing of two of America's most notorious crime figures — Sam Giancana, boss of the Chicago mob, and Santos Trafficante, who controlled the Cuban underworld before Castro came to power. Shimon quotes Trafficante as saying, "I'll get you the contacts, give you a lot of names. But keep me out of it."

Harvey and Rosselli recruited killers recommended by Trafficante. Six assassination teams were dispatched to Cuba; all six not only failed, but disappeared.

Harvey and Rosselli concluded that professional hit men wouldn't have failed repeatedly unless Castro had been waiting for them. "You don't have that many misses, and these fellows are not coming back," said Shimon.

Only six people knew about the CIA plot to use the Mafia to knock off Castro. No mention of the operation had been committed to paper. Yet Castro must have been tipped off.

The finger of suspicion pointed to Trafficante. Though he had been jailed and his gambling casinos seized by Castro, for some unexplained reason, Trafficante got out of Cuba unscathed after Castro came to power. Shimon recalled, "Suddenly Trafficante is released. ... He comes back here with all his assets, with the yacht. ... Others eventually got out, but they left Cuba broke. Trafficante came out with all his money, immediately went into business and look how big he got overnight. He spread out all over the South." The easy treatment may have set up a bond between Trafficante and Castro.

Shimon confronted Giancana and asked whether Trafficante was reliable. "Frankly," confided Giancana, "he's a rat." The CIA came to the same conclusion and abruptly called off the Mafia. But the CIA continued to look for other ways to eliminate Castro.

Without inside information, Castro no longer knew where the CIA would strike next. So he issued a public warning in September 1963. If the CIA persisted in trying to kill Cuban leaders, he said, then "American leaders will not be safe."

Two months later, President Kennedy was gunned down in Dallas. Shimon figured that Castro had conspired with Trafficante to beat Kennedy to the draw. Shimon said his conclusion was "confirmed by Harvey," who had other information from the CIA.

Shimon said, "They had other sources, too. They were satisfied that this had to be retaliation by Castro. ... Castro decided, look, if this (CIA murder mission) is gonna continue on, let's have a little self-defense. This is a two-way game."

Shimon is just one of a number of witnesses who have provided evidence that Castro turned the tables on the CIA and Kennedy. We will present this evidence on Wednesday (Nov. 2) in a two-hour, prime-time documentary on more than 150 television stations.

We believe the evidence is strong enough to attract the attention of Americans who have accepted the Warren Commission's mistaken verdict that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin.

Dukakis wants to awaken 'sleeping giant'

WASHINGTON — In these last days of the presidential campaign, Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis is trying to awaken "the sleeping giant" in the Hispanic community that could hand him a victory in such key battleground states as Texas.

Roberson

Responding to complaints by Hispanic leaders that their concerns are being virtually ignored while the campaign panders to so-called "Reagan Democrats," Dukakis last week tapped U.S. Rep. Bill Richardson, a Hispanic from New Mexico, to head a strengthened get-out-the-Hispanic-vote effort.

Jose Garcia de Lara, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), had warned Dukakis that the campaign couldn't "target the Hispanic community out of Boston." He said he believes the effort to do so "is one reason for a lack of emotional bond with Hispanics." He suggested that the campaign get cracking on the local level.

In response to that and other complaints, Dukakis met last Monday with 40 Hispanic leaders in Denver to assure them that they are key players in his campaign. He urged them not to give up in the face of evidence that Vice President George Bush in making inroads in the Hispanic vote.

Despite the prompt response from Dukakis, some Hispanic leaders say privately it may be "too little, too late."

LULAC leaders on Oct. 21 also denounced Bush for not making a commitment to retain Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos, the former president of Texas Tech University, in a Bush administration.

"We don't think they really care," said de Lara, of San Antonio. "Perhaps the Republican Party thinks if it can get 24 percent (of the Texas Hispanic vote), it will win."

Bush, whose legal residence is in Houston, is using his Mexican daughter-in-law, Columba, in his campaign.

In new ads Columba Bush speaks in Spanish about the "great impact" Hispanics can have in the election. The camera then fades to Bush holding his three half-Hispanic grandchildren — whom he had introduced to President Reagan during the GOP convention as "the little brown ones" — and saying that he (Bush) must "answer not only to the Hispanic community but also to my grandchildren."

Bush's spokesman in Texas, Mark Sanders, said the campaign is continuing its "Adelante con Bush" (Forward with Bush) program in predominantly Hispanic metropolitan areas as well as 19 rural South Texas counties.

Nationally, more than 4 million voters are considered Hispanic, a generic category for persons of Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban and other Latin origin. That is less than 5 percent of all American voters, but Hispanics' potential influence is great because they are concentrated mainly in five states — Texas, California, Illinois, New Mexico and New York.

Together, these states contain approximately 75 percent of the nation's Hispanic voters. And they have 141 of the 270 Electoral College votes required to be elected president.

Traditionally, registration among Hispanics has been low — only 40 percent said they had registered in 1984 — and actual voting has been even lower.

Ruben Bonilla Jr., a former LULAC president from Corpus Christi, predicted that, rather than turning out in record numbers, as had been expected, Hispanics this year "are going to stay home in greater numbers than ever before."

Richardson acknowledged Thursday that there had been "a lull" in Dukakis campaign efforts in Hispanic areas in late summer and he said, "That was a mistake."

As a condition for his heading the Hispanic division, Richardson said he demanded "access" to Dukakis and authority to hire and fire.

Richardson's deputy is Clara Apodaca, wife of former New Mexico governor Jerry Apodaca. She said polls showing Dukakis behind Bush "do not include the true Hispanic vote. That sleeping giant of 18.9 million eligible Hispanic voters is never polled."

To reach "that sleeping giant," Dukakis has doubled, to $1 million, his media budget targeted to Hispanics and has added five staff members to his campaign's Hispanic division.

Political commercials on radio and TV will be stepped up in the days remaining before the Nov. 8 election. In many of these announcements, Dukakis proclaims in Spanish an approximation of his last-ditch battle cry: "I am on your side."

What Dukakis actually says is, "Nos entendemos," meaning, "We understand each other."

Dukakis started the campaign with a clear advantage among Texas Hispanic voters. In the Democratic primary last March, he won with 56 percent of the Hispanic vote.

But a recent Mason-Dixon poll, taken Oct. 22-24, showed Bush leading in Texas 51 to 44 percent.

Richardson said before his swing through South Texas this weekend with Rep. Solomon P. Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, that he will visit Texas several times again before election day.

Also, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, whose political career has been on hold amid disclosures that he had been having an extra-marital affair, will stump for the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket in Texas for two or three days.

Democratic vice presidential nominee Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas has planned to spend most of the remaining campaign in Texas in an attempt to reverse the tide that appears to be running against the Democratic ticket.

On behalf of Bush, Cavazos, who had taken pains to be publicly nonpolitical before President Reagan named him to education secretary, has been campaigning in South Texas.

Dukakis's denial of liberalism damaging

DAYTON, Ohio — Many failings have contributed to Michael Dukakis's lagging campaign for president but one seems to be at the heart of the problem — the candidate's long, lame and basically unbelievable effort to deny that he and his party represent the great liberal tradition of the last half-century.

Wicker

Many distortions and punches below the belt have contributed to George Bush's apparently growing lead, but on one important point Bush has been forthright — he and his party stand for and are proud of the new conservative approach born of Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan.

The advantage this has given the Bush campaign is to a considerable extent ideological. New right conservatism is a strong, confident and vigorous force in American politics, while liberalism has been rocked by conservatives' base charge that it is somehow un-American and lacking in "traditional values."

The greater damage may have been done, however, because Dukakis failed for too long to stand up for what he is: a liberal — not a McGovern liberal or a big-spending liberal or any other variation, but a liberal without suffix or prefix — in his record, his attitude and his approach to government. In denying that, he put himself in a false position, the basic insincerity of which the Republicans have capitalized upon and the American people recognized as disingenuous, if not hypocritical.

Belatedly, the Democratic nominee seems to be coming around to his natural position, declaring repeatedly in California and elsewhere: "He's on their side. I'm on your side." That's simplistic but it makes the point sharply — Democrats as liberals have consistently sought, not always successfully, to improve the lot of the generality of the people — the poor, the aged, the infirm, the minorities, as well as the middle class (most of whom live in houses made possible by federal policies, and look forward to the support of Social Security).

That's the record Dukakis could have stood upon, not defensively but proudly. That's the promise he could have made, not by indirection but pointedly. Instead he proclaimed "competence" his goal, fled from the liberal "label" George Bush was all too willing to pin on him, and went so far as to complain that the Republicans had tried to call Franklin Roosevelt a liberal too. But that's exactly what FDR was, and Michael Dukakis should have been proud to wear the same label.

The Dukakis strategists seem to have been persuaded by polls and focus groups — not to mention the last two elections — that "liberal" was synonymous with "loser." By trying to picture Dukakis as a non-ideological centrist interested only in competence they reinforced Republican claims that liberalism is not respectable; they missed their best chance to profit from the substantial discontent of many voters with the Reagan administration; they underlined the lack of passion that marks their candidate's personal style; and — most important — they condemned Dukakis to the insecure and untenable position of denying his political heritage.

Maybe they'd have lost in any case. But they could not have done much worse than the current polls suggest: down 40 to 50 in the Gallup Poll and 38 to 51 in the New York Times-CBS News Poll; behind 10 points in California, according to The Los Angeles Times, and even losing by 9 points in a Washington Post poll of supposedly Democratic Maryland.

Even the "competence" theme has been undermined by the incompetence of the Dukakis campaign, which has been out-generaled at every turn by the seasoned professionals headed by Jim Baker who are pulling Bush's strings. They've been appealing stridently to conservatives, their basic support, since the campaign began. Dukakis, in contrast, waited until the last two weeks before he turned in desperation to the modern Democratic Party's most basic, believable and appealing theme — that it's the party of the people, while its opponents are the party of wealth and privilege.

George Bush complains that this is a divisive "appeal to class conflict." Of course it is; class, like race, is a powerful force in American politics. The Republicans have been blinding too many voters to their economic self-interest with dramatic appeals to their patriotism and "traditional values." Dukakis's counterattack, though probably too late to succeed, calls on legitimate class interest to reassert itself against this Republican bamboozling.

Besides, to be called divisive by George Bush is like being called ugly by a frog. What could more nearly set Americans against Americans than his insistence that liberals are soft, subversive and so obscene that they can only be designated by an initial?

Israelis cast ballots in violent atmosphere

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israelis, casting ballots in an emotionally electric climate of Arab firebomb attacks and reprisal air raids, voted today in watershed elections expected to determine the future of the occupied lands.

More than 300 Arabs and 10 Jews have been killed in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip in the nearly 11-month-old Palestinian uprising against 21 years of Israeli rule.

Election officials reported a heavy voter turnout under clear skies. A massive security force protected polling places. The army sealed off the occupied lands, where a Palestinian general strike was taking place.

As its citizens voted, Israel raided Arab guerrilla targets in Lebanon in apparent retaliation for a firebomb attack Sunday. The Palestine Liberation Organization said three people were killed and 15 wounded in the midday raid, which lasted six minutes.

Six Israeli fighter-bombers blasted positions held by Syrian-backed guerrillas around the capital's southern suburb of Aramoun and Palestine Liberation Organization installations in Sidon's Mieh Mieh refugee camp, police said.

In Sidon's southeastern outskirts, pillars of flame shot up from the bases in Mieh Mieh and the nearby hills of En el-Dilb as the planes swept in on four bombing runs, police reported. Ambulances and fire engines raced to the scene.

The warplanes fired eight rockets in four sorties, devastating four buildings used as bases by the PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's Fatah guerrillas and the PLO's Force 17 security apparatus, police said.

In Arab east Jerusalem, assailants today threw a firebomb at a car, injuring three people, police said. Witnesses said the car was plastered with stickers for the right-wing Likud bloc and was being used to transport voters.

Witnesses said gasoline-filled bottles set fire to the hair of a woman driver, seriously injuring her and two passengers. The driver, in her 30s, lost control, smashed into a parked car and careened across the road.

She emerged from the car, her hair in flames, and Arabs came out of their homes to help put the fire out, said a passerby who identified himself only as Ahmed.

Hospital officials said the woman had burns on her face and hands and was listed in "moderate" condition. Two men who were riding in the car were slightly injured.

Police said about 30 Arabs were detained for questioning.

Sunday, a rabbi's daughter and her three sons were killed in a firebomb attack by Palestinians in the West Bank.

By midafternoon, 41 percent of the electorate, or about 1,090,000 voters, had cast ballots. Results were to be announced after polls closed at 10 p.m. (2 p.m. CST).

Labor, led by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, has been running on a platform of offering to give up some occupied territory in exchange for peace. Likud, led by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, opposes any such withdrawal.

Neither Labor or Likud has succeeded in gaining a majority in the 120-member Parliament since the Jewish state was established in 1948. Polls indicated they would fail again.

The situation has forced Labor and Likud to form alliances with minor parties that have gained influence beyond their numbers. Twenty-seven parties were entered in the election.

Likud and Labor formed a fractious coalition after the 1984 elections, when neither party could arrange a majority with the small parties.

Election officials said the turnout was heavy, indicating that 75 to 80 percent of eligible voters would cast ballots. In the 1984 election, voter turnout was 78.7 percent.

Police reported 74 incidents ranging from fistfights to unlawful campaigning near polling stations. Three people were reported arrested.

The army sealed off the occupied territories for 48 hours, beginning at 11 p.m. Monday, and imposed curfews on refugee camps in Gaza. Journalists were barred without army permission and escort from entering the territories, where a Palestinian general strike was under way.

Bank employee Rahamim Fadikler voted in a working class Jerusalem neighborhood.

"My family and I vote for Likud," he said. "The people here don't want to return the territories. We suffered the shelling in 1967 and we don't want to see it again."

He was referring to shelling of settlements along the border before Israel captured the territories from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War.

Shamir favors the strengthening of Jewish settlement in the occupied lands, which 70,000 settlers share uneasily with 1.5 million Palestinians.

In the election, 2.9 million voters were eligible to cast ballots. Results were not expected until Wednesday.

More than 13,000 policemen and civil guardsmen were deployed at the 4,800 polling stations.

Likud planned to spend about $2.5 million, hiring taxicabs and buses and using the services of 10,000 volunteer drivers to get voters to the polls.

Polls taken before Sunday's firebombing and published in the Maariv newspaper Monday gave the Likud an edge or pointed to a deadlock.

Shipyard's closing slap at Solidarity

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Whatever sense it may make on solely economic grounds, the decision to shut the Lenin shipyard is a slap at the Solidarity trade union movement at a time the government ostensibly is seeking dialogue.

The closing poses a difficult challenge for union leader Lech Walesa, who has been preaching economic reform but undoubtedly did not want it to begin by eliminating his workplace and political base.

Monday's announcement follows closely a government demand that Walesa remove two longtime Solidarity advisers from his delegation to promised "round-table" talks with authorities, which were to start in mid-October.

Walesa refused and the talks now appear in jeopardy.

The developments underscore an end to the accommodative mood on both sides that briefly seemed to dominate Polish politics after Walesa ended a series of strikes in early September in exchange for the promise of the talks on Solidarity's future.

The government has taken a more energetic, decisive tone since the ascension to prime minister last month of Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, the party propaganda chief and a longtime Solidarity foe.

Rakowski has said the situation is too urgent to wait for talks with the opposition before trying to revitalize the economy.

But the opposition, which has long distrusted Rakowski, questions whether he is interested in talks at all.

AP

Rakowski said in a broadcast interview Monday that the decision to close the Gdansk shipyard Dec. 1 and liquidate it over the next year was purely economic and had "nothing to do with Solidarity."

The official media gave heavy coverage to the decision, but made no mention of the shipyard's symbolic importance as the birthplace and stronghold of the only independent labor movement allowed in the Soviet bloc.

The official news agency PAP said the state-owned shipyard, Poland's largest, has been losing money and increasingly draining the public treasury.

But Walesa said it was no coincidence that the shipyard was the first industrial enterprise in the country to fall victim to the budget ax.

"Premier Rakowski's decision was not dictated by economic reasons," he said, calling the move Rakowski's "personal provocation" against the yard where Solidarity sprang to life in August 1980 after a nationwide strike wave.

While vowing to fight the closing, Walesa said he agreed the "economy needs restructuring and basic changes. Solidarity is and has been for those changes."

But he said the yard could be saved by dismissing incompetent managers and allowing workers to run it more efficiently themselves.

Historian Bronislaw Geremek, a close Walesa adviser, said Solidarity always was prepared to accept painful economic choices in the course of reform. But those steps were supposed to be a subject for agreement in the now-delayed talks with authorities, he said.

By deciding unilaterally to close the shipyard, Rakowski "either buried the chances for the round table or considered the round table already buried," Geremek said. "If such decisions are taken without first achieving a social contract, then what one wants to prove is that there is no need for such a way, no need for dialogue."

One Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, called the government's move a political "masterstroke."

If Solidarity strikes, it will lend credence to Rakowski's argument that the union is unreasonable and poses an obstacle to efforts to reform Poland's inefficient, debt-ridden economy.

And by shutting down the shipyard, the strikers would only be hastening what the government wants to do next month anyway.

But if Solidarity does not mount a protest to defend its home base, Walesa and the Solidarity leadership run the risk of seeming toothless to militant followers at home and would-be supporters abroad.

Poland's first major plant closing is likely to send shock waves through factories nationwide. But because the closing was announced during a four-day holiday weekend, it was difficult to immediately judge the degree of public sympathy for the workers.

The government, meanwhile, was trying to take the sting out of the closure for the approximately 10,000 workers facing layoffs. It said state enterprises have far more than enough jobs going begging in Gdansk province at equal or higher pay. And it promised free job retraining for those who need it.

Ironically and perhaps not accidentally, Rakowski made the move only days before Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain is due to arrive for a visit that is to include a trip to Gdansk to see Walesa on Friday.

Official commentators have been drawing parallels between Rakowski's plans to overhaul Poland's economy and the toughness shown by Mrs. Thatcher in facing down the unions and cutting back money-losing state industry in Britain.

An Analysis

Salvadoran rebels ready to talk

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Salvadoran rebels say they are ready to renew talks with the U.S.-backed government to end their 9-year-old civil war, but will not surrender weapons as a precondition.

"We have given them the message that we are ready to talk with all social forces, including the army, that we are ready to talk at any place or time," said Leonel Gonzalez of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella organization for five Salvadoran guerrilla groups.

"The one that's established conditions is the government," he said Monday. "(President) Duarte has said that in order to talk again with the FMLN we have to put down our arms. This is absurd, it's inadmissible."

Arturo Rivera y Damas, Roman Catholic archbishop of San Salvador, met with rebel leaders and presented a report on proposals for a negotiated end to the conflict that has claimed 65,000 lives. He said the report is based on observations from more than 60 Salvadoran organizations.

Guerrilla representative Joaquin Villalobos said the front considers the report positive because it demands "an end to the war and the reasons that led to it."

Rivera y Damas presented the report during a ceremony at a military installation attended by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, Panama's military commander and de facto ruler.

Villalobos and Gonzalez said they briefed Noriega on visits by rebel representatives to Peru, Argentina, Ecuador and Costa Rica to promote a negotiated settlement.

They said rebel officials would return to those countries to inform government leaders about their meeting with the archbishop.

Rivera y Damas said the report contained ideas offered by the Salvadoran organizations in several days of meetings with church leaders, but he gave no details.

Inmates take over Salvadoran jail

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Five inmates took over a prison near the capital, wresting guns from their guards, taking three hostages and wounding two police officers, authorities said today.

The takeover occurred late Monday at the penitentiary in Quezaltepeque, about 15 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Also in Quezaltepeque Monday night, suspected leftist rebels detonated bombs outside the offices of two political parties, officials said.

"The prisoners took the weapons of several prison guards and seized a nurse at the jail and two guards as hostages," a National Police officer said by telephone from the town.

The inmates shot and wounded two National Police officers who tried to intervene, said the officer, who requested anonymity. The condition of the two officers was not immediately known.

An armed forces spokesman said five prisoners jumped the guards and had taken over the prison.

"They're together with the rest of the prisoners, about 250 of them, but they haven't made any demands," the spokesman said on condition he not be identified.

Army troops dispatched to the penitentiary "are standing by and have not intervened to subdue the rioters," the National Police officer said.

Suspected guerrillas detonated two bombs outside the offices of the governing Christian Democratic Party and the right-wing Nationalist Republican Alliance, the officer said.

The explosions damaged the offices, but no one was hurt.

Officials said they did not know if the explosions were related to the prison takeover.

The guerrillas are pitted against the U.S.-backed government in a 9-year-old civil war. More than 65,000 people have died in the conflict, most of them civilians.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Argentine court upholds ex-leaders' conviction

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President and army chief Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri lost his appeal of a 12-year sentence and conviction of negligence in losing the 1982 Falklands War with Britain.

A civilian court Monday upheld a military court's decision against Galtieri and the two other members of his former junta, Adm. Jorge Isaac Anaya and Brig. Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo and stripped them of their ranks.

The four-judge federal appeals panel upheld the May 1986 convictions by the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces.

It also adjusted the sentences for Anaya and Lami Dozo to 12 years, reducing Anaya's by two years and increasing Lami Dozo's by four.

The retired commanders-in-chief of Argentina's army, navy and air force have been in jail since 1984; their sentences run through February 1996. Their pensions, while technically denied to them, will be paid to their wives.

The three, all in uniform, sat impassively, arms crossed, through the 90-minute hearing, and returned to military prison afterward.

Defense attorneys said final appeals may be lodged with the Supreme Court.

Sandinistas extend truce

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — For a sixth time, the leftist Sandinista government has extended for a month its truce with U.S.-backed rebels.

President Daniel Ortega Monday extended the 7-month-old cease-fire "with the objective of enabling Contra (rebel) groups to put down their arms, take advantage of the amnesty and enter the normal life of the country," according to a statement released by his office.

The cease-fire, yet another unilateral extension of a 30-day formal truce that took effect April 1, would have expired Nov. 1.

The rebels have said the cease-fire is indefinite.

The Sandinistas and rebels agreed on March 21 to halt offensive military operations. Two days later, they signed a pact to negotiate a lasting peace in the 8-year civil war.

But talks on a definitive cease-fire stalemated in September. Each side has accused the other of violating the truce.

Was castle 'Camelot'?

LONDON (AP) — The ruins of a castle owned by generations of a Scottish Kennedy family could have been King Arthur's Camelot, a genealogist said Monday.

Greenan Castle, high on the Ayrshire cliffs of southwest Scotland, was built on the site of a 6th century fort that "matches almost exactly" the description and location of a fortress in Arthurian legend, said Harold Brooks-Baker.

Although the story of King Arthur and his court at Camelot are legend, historians believe there probably was a British ruler named Arthur who fought Saxon invaders from what is now the Netherlands and the north German coast. The shadowy figure was embellished by storytellers into a chivalrous hero, slayer of monsters, leader of the Knights of the Round Table and seeker of the Holy Grail.

Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage, said researchers had discovered the castle site was a key military post for King Arthur and his knights.

Soviets review law code

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials plan to abolish a law banning "anti-Soviet slander" and to rewrite another to include fewer violations as part of a review of the nation's criminal code, the Tass news agency said Monday.

It was the second promise in a week of impending improvements in the rights of Soviet dissidents.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said last week after talks with Soviet officials that he had been told all people regarded in the West as political prisoners will be released by the end of the year.

Tass quoted Justice Minister Boris Kravtsov as saying Article 190, which bans "anti-Soviet slander," apparently will be dropped.

Article 70, which bars "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda," probably will be restricted to cover concrete actions, Kravtsov said.

Kravtsov said no one has been convicted this year under either of the two laws.

However, an Armenian was held for several months under the anti-slander law this year and then abruptly exiled to Ethiopia. Paruyr Ayrikyan aroused government ire when he provided information to Western journalists on ethnic problems in the republic of Azerbaijan.

Bomb breaks GE's windows

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A homemade bomb shattered windows and caused heavy damage early today to the General Electric Co.'s administrative office in downtown San Juan, police said.

Police said there were no injuries in the explosion, which occurred at 1:35 a.m. outside the two-story GE building. A security guard was the only employee at the site and he escaped unharmed, police said.

Lawyer says blood sample taken illegally

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The attorney for a 23-year-old Odessa man accused of killing five persons while driving drunk contended during a pre-trial hearing Monday that blood for the man's alcohol level test was taken illegally.

The test should not be admitted as evidence, attorney Roy Bell of Odessa, representing Troy Dal Richburg, contended in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court in a hearing on several Bell motions.

Richburg is accused of five counts of involuntary manslaughter for a July 23 accident on U.S. Highway 80, near Midland International Airport.

Bell claimed the blood sample was taken at Midland Memorial Hospital "despite the defendant's objection and refusal to take the test, and was taken by force" by a Department of Public Safety trooper.

The attorney said the blood test — which prosecutors have said establish Richburg as legally drunk the night of the wreck — therefore cannot be used, he argued before Baskin.

"Any blood taken from him and the results are not admissible," Bell said. "He was not under arrest and he didn't give him any consent."

But District Attorney Al Schorre reminded Bell that his client had said "go for it," when asked about the blood sample at the hospital by Trooper Hal Heathington, according to testimony in a prior court hearing.

But Bell said his client was "terribly disoriented and in a state of shock" when he was quizzed by the officer, and "was in no condition to give voluntary consent for his blood to be taken."

The attorney also said a "scuffle" in the hospital emergency room proved the consent could not have been voluntary.

Schorre countered that the scuffle "had nothing to do with the blood being taken."

Baskin said he would rule on the motion at a later hearing.

Bell also has asked the judge to grant a change of venue and move the trial because of what he said was negative publicity.

The attorney read the judge part of a script from a KTPX-TV Channel 9 news broadcast which referred to Richburg's recent jailing in the Martin County Jail for a "parole violation."

Richburg has never been on parole, and was in the Stanton jail after his probation on an auto theft charge was revoked, according to Sheriff Dan Saunders.

"Any blood taken from him (Troy Dal Richburg) and the results are not admissible. He was not under arrest and he didn't give him any consent...(He was) "terribly disoriented and in a state of shock" when he was quizzed by the officer, and "was in no condition to give voluntary consent for his blood to be taken."

— Attorney Roy Bell

"It may be a burden we cannot delete or overcome," Bell said of the inaccurate broadcast. "It is like throwing a skunk into the jury box and asking them not to smell it.

"That's all we want for Mr. Richburg — a fair trial. We don't want that extra burden."

Schorre argued that because of a recent Court of Criminal Appeals ruling, the defense must prove that the publicity has been "pervasive, prejudicial, and inflammatory."

The judge also deferred ruling on the venue change. He said he would hold another hearing just before trial.

No witnesses testified during the half-hour hearing.

Richburg was indicted by a grand jury August 10 for the crash. The indictment alleges Richburg was drunk at the time the pickup truck he was driving slammed into a car packed with passengers on U.S. Highway 80.

Five persons, including three members of a Midland family, were killed in the accident.

The five counts specify the Odessa man caused the deaths "recklessly by accident and mistake when operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated," and at an excessive rate of speed."

'Physical terrorists' man MMH rehabilitation ward

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

James Brady, the press secretary gunned down and maimed by an assassin's bullets directed for President Reagan in 1981, called those in the profession "physical terrorists" during a recent 60 Minutes television interview.

His definition of physical therapists rings true for Midland Memorial Hospital nurse Brenda Dennis-Miller.

"We are Hitlers and Mussolinis, and a common answer to someone who's rung the bell from their (hospital) room for us to get them a glass of water is, 'Get it yourself!' " she explained with a smile.

Ms. Miller is the head nurse in MMH's new 18-bed rehabilitation ward — for some a last alternative to life in a nursing home.

The ward, located on the west end of the hospital's first floor, was designed to provide in-patient physical and occupational therapy for those well enough to undergo the treatment, but requiring hospital care.

The RehabCare Unit, as it's known, furnishes a treatment ward for people suffering from neurological disorders such as head trauma, spinal cord injuries or strokes; orthopedic conditions such as hip or multiple joint fractures, hand disabilities or amputations; and degenerative neurological maladies such as multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy or other progressive neurological impairments, explained Harold Rubin, MMH senior vice president.

Carmen Boren suffered a stroke Sept. 17 that rendered the left side of her body temporarily powerless and robbed her of the elemental ability to swallow.

At the RehabCare Unit Monday, she explained through her stilted speech "it's kind of tough" regaining her strength.

"I am tough!" she bravely proclaimed while attempting to walk Monday with the help of steel parallel bars.

Ms. Miller said the nursing staff — consisting of rehabilitation, occupational, physical and speech therapists, psychologists and social workers — has to maintain a hard-nosed demeanor with the patients.

She is not without a heart, however, and acknowledged it's often difficult to be a physical terrorist when patients like Mrs. Boren are in pain and exhausted from their minimum three hours a day of therapy.

But the head nurse was adamant in her opinion she'd rather be "mean" during therapy than see the patient resigned to a life in a nursing home.

"I tell them they still have an active mind. Our goal is to improve the quality of their life" and to help the patients "function to the best of their abilities in a home setting."

At the RehabCare Unit, there is an array of therapeutic equipment enabling the staff to assist patients get well.

The occupational and physical therapy room holds a bathtub and complete kitchen, weights and other apparatuses geared toward muscular recovery.

Also in that room is a computer system that assists the patients — perhaps mentally shaken up by a head trauma — re-learn spelling, reading and other cognitive skills.

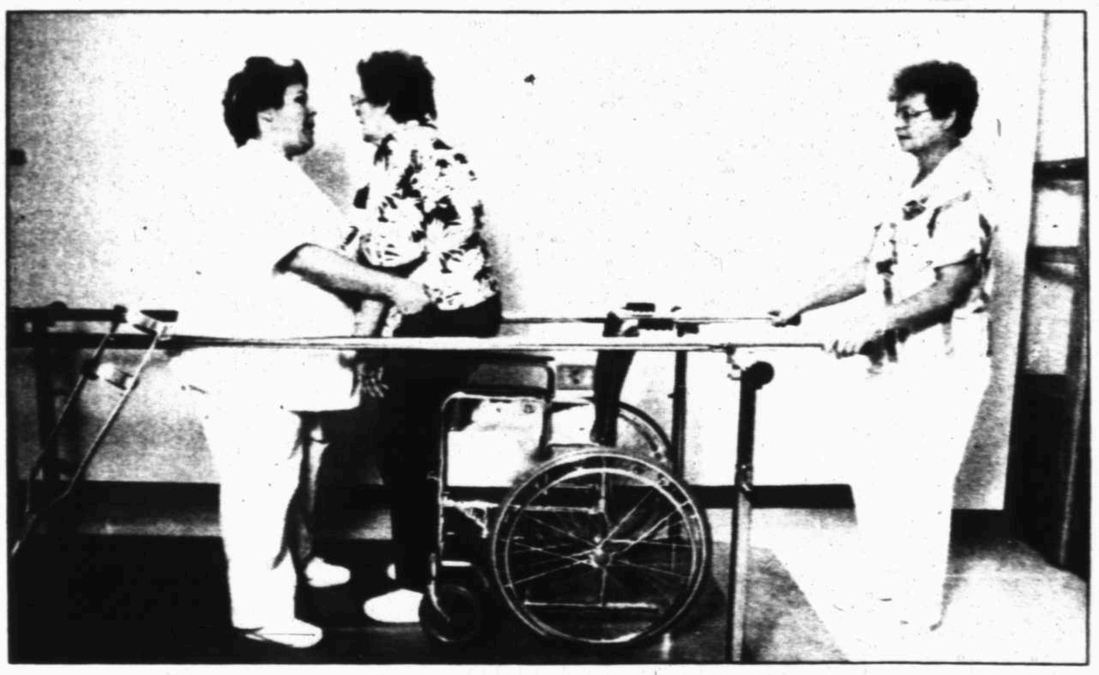

In the "tub room" is a large whirlpool tub that mechanically lowers the patient into the water. Also in the room is a washer and dryer so that patients may re-learn how to do laundry.

A dining room provides patients with an arena for talk and discussion with others about the emotional trauma involved with a severe physical handicap.

"There is a big area for family involvement," Rubin explained. Support must come from relatives if the patient is to recover fully, he explained.

All staff members at the RehabCare Unit are required to undergo a "disability awareness day," Ms. Miller explained.

Officers sign letter supporting Odessa police chief

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Rejecting claims in an anonymous letter sent last week to the city manager, councilmen and members of the news media, a group of Odessa police officers has issued a letter supporting Chief Alan Stewart.

Ninety-nine of the department's 240 members signed the letter, which expressed the belief that the earlier letter did not speak for "the majority of officers and personnel at the police department."

The earlier letter, purportedly authored by "concerned officers of the Odessa Police Department," stated department morale is "at an all-time low" and contended the chief is not "fighting for our rights" as he should.

Police department members signing the latest letter rejected the suggestion Stewart has attempted to restrict their right "to speak freely." The letter said the chief "has fully supported our right to speak out," requesting only that it be done "in a professional and diplomatic manner."

"I'm very pleased with the letter to say the least," City Manager Bill Brown said Monday after reviewing it over the weekend.

"I think the fact that the officers (signed the letter) indicates support for the chief and the manner in which the business of the police department is conducted, in a professional and straight forward manner," Brown stated.

"It (the signed letter) counteracted that anonymous memo. Obviously, when you see this many officers signing a letter — and I'm sure they could have gotten more signatures if they'd had more time — it makes you realize that in any organization you're going to have issues that should have attention," the city manager said.

"But I think the police department, as well as the rest of the city, is in pretty sound shape organizationally and we just need to work together and fine-tune a lot of the things we have."

The unsigned letter surfaced after city council members Oct. 18 approved a preferred provider agreement to handle hospitalization insurance covering city employees and increased the share of insurance costs that will be passed on to employees.

However, southside councilman Jaime Rodriguez said the letter from "concerned officers" stated "that they're not really upset about the insurance, it's just that they wish their leader (the chief) would fight for them."

Under the plan approved by the council, the city of Odessa has signed a contract with the National HealthCare Alliance Inc. of Houston, which will arrange a contract with a local hospital and other health care providers for discounted medical care for city employees who use the facilities.

City employees who choose to use other providers will not receive the benefit of discounted rates.

Some of the complaints heard from officers after approval of the PPO plan by council members involved the misconception that they would have to give up family doctors they had used for several years.

However, one officer who attended one of several PPO briefing sessions held by city administrative personnel said his concerns were allayed after hearing how the PPO would actually work.

It didn't mean, he said, that he and his family would be forced to find another doctor, that this was not part of the plan.

Campaign buttons tell political story

By SYLVIA REYES

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Behind every campaign button is a story. And every dedicated collector is a storyteller.

Put the two together and what have you got? Life, piercing what Charles Cotrell, St. Mary's University academic vice president and political science professor, terms "dead" history.

This particular story begins with 1,000 political buttons dating back to the 1896 William McKinley-William Jennings Bryan presidential campaign that recently found their way to St. Mary's University, thanks to a local anonymous collector whose deceased brother once attended the college many years ago.

The political Americana, which will be on display at the university through Nov. 9, ranges from the somber McKinley photograph to "Drive Carefully — the life you save may vote Republican (Goldwater '64)." Although the collection has yet to be appraised, Cotrell said the button bearing the likeness of McKinley, the 25th U.S. president who was assassinated, is one of the most valuable buttons today.

The McKinley button was the first of the type of campaign buttons used today. Earlier buttons were made from lithographs on steel and more recent ones are made of paper with a celluloid covering.

"A button really expresses the First Amendment," Cotrell said. The professor pointed out that symbolic speech is protected by the First Amendment, a ruling made in the 1969 U.S. Supreme Court case of Tinker vs. Des Moines School District. The case arose when the school district forbade its high school students from wearing black armbands to protest U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War.

"So much of political science is symbols," Cotrell said. "Buttons are fixed imagery that goes back before the turn of the century. They afford a concrete touch with history in an age that almost depends on a flickering image (television) of reality."

AP Laserphoto

San Antonio transit authority official David Frost displays part of his collection of at least 1,000 campaign buttons which date back to George Washington.

David Frost, a paratransit coordinator for VIA Metropolitan Transit Authority, began his button collection 30 years ago and has amassed at least 1,000 assorted buttons.

"Buttons tell where we have been as a nation and how we got to where we are now," he said. One of his most prized items is a George Washington campaign token. "I found it in an antique store in South Carolina," said the 43-year-old American politics history buff. "I paid $20 for it. Is it my best find? I've never seen another one, let's put it that way."

Another treasured button is one of Lyndon B. Johnson's first Senate race in 1938. "A serious collector always has his eyes open," Frost said. "I never know where something is going to turn up. You develop a secret radar or antenna because some stuff comes from out of left field.

"Would I pass up a meal at a fancy restaurant to get a button? Yes. Would I risk my health or job to get a button? No I wouldn't."

Cotrell fondly remembers one of his favorite political science college professors who used campaign buttons to start class discussions. "He would open up one side of his coat and he would have all these buttons on it," Cotrell recalled. "A student would tell him which one to pick and we would talk about it. My point is that you can take any button and it will conjure up its entire history."

Cotrell said he plans to use the collection in conjunction with his political science classes. He said the buttons also lend themselves to trivia games for children and adults alike.

"(The collection is) a significant contribution to American history, immeasurable beyond a dollar figure," he said. "It will give our publics periodic access to history. These buttons are an expression of an era.

"They are helpful anchors in a time when the Vietnam War is ancient history to many college freshmen." Cotrell said the button fad peaked in the late '60s and early '70s. "But nowadays, buttons as a mode of campaigning are giving way to television and direct mail."

AUSTIN — Campaign contributions in the race for chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court passed the $3.5 million mark in October, according to reports filed with the secretary of state Monday.

Incumbent Republican Chief Justice Tom Phillips collected almost $390,000 last month to take the fundraising lead over his Democratic challenger Justice Ted Z. Robertson, who brought in $281,000. "We have been able to raise more money from a broader base of support than any other judicial candidate in history," Phillips said.

Noting that his candidate spent almost $800,000 in a primary campaign Phillips didn't have to wage, Robertson campaign manager Richard Jenson said Robertson's message "will succeed" despite being outspent 2-to-1.

The source of campaign funds for the two candidates has become the major issue in the race. Phillips charges Robertson has brought in most of his money from attorneys who represent plaintiffs in high-stakes civil cases, while Robertson says medical groups and corporate defense lawyers are bankrolling Phillips' campaign.

Phillips outspent Robertson by more than 2-to-1 in October. The incumbent spent almost $656,000, including about $600,000 to purchase time for television advertisements. Robertson's $282,000 expenditure list included $200,000 in TV time.

Robertson received two of the three single largest contributions among the nine high court candidates who delivered their campaign finance reports to the secretary of state Monday. He collected $25,000 from the Houston law firm of Fisher Gallagher Perrin & Lewis and $15,000 from Dallas lawyer Frank Branson and his wife Debbie.

Robertson also received $10,000 from Houston lawyer W. Douglass Matthews and $5,000 each from 14 other lawyers or law firms. Phillips, who has set a $5,000 cap on donations from individuals or political action committees, reported bringing in eight $5,000 contributions last month.

Not counting the three candidates who didn't hand deliver their reports Monday — state law allows candidates to mail in reports if they are postmarked by midnight — the 11 men and one woman running for the high court collected almost $1.7 million in October. They spent almost that much on TV time.

Monday's reports bring total contributions in the record-high six contested races to at least $8.8 million since Jan. 1, 1987.

Paul Murphy of Huntsville, Republican candidate for Place 1, brought in almost $140,000, including a $15,000 contribution from the Texas Medical Association PAC. His Democratic opponent, Lloyd Doggett of Austin, did not turn in his report by 5 p.m. Monday.

Austin attorney Karl Bayer, Democratic candidate for Place 6 on the court, collected $219,000, including a $168,000 personal loan to his campaign. His expenditures included $7,000 for the Bayer aspirin he is giving away to remind voters of his name. Justice Eugene Cook, Bayer's Republican opponent, raised $211,000.

Incumbent Republican Justice Barbara Culver of Midland, vying to become the first women to win election to the court, brought in $111,000 in October. Her Democratic opponent Jack Hightower of Vernon collected $65,000.

Fundraising for Place 2 incumbent Democratic Justice William Kilgarlin slowed last month, as he reported bringing in just $174,000 for a total of almost $1.6 million since the campaign cycle began. Eleven lawyers or law firms gave Kilgarlin $5,000.

Nathan Hecht of Dallas, Kilgarlin's GOP opponent, did not deliver his report Monday.

Place 3 incumbent Democrat Raul Gonzalez brought in $103,000 in October. His Republican opponent Charles Ben Howell of Dallas did not turn in his report Monday.

REHAB — Drug treatment centers planned

The new employee spends one full day in a wheelchair so he may know firsthand what his patients are going through.

Rubin said there is not a facility like this closer than Lubbock, San Angelo or Dallas.

Fear is a common thread running through the minds of patients. "They're facing an entirely new situation, he said.

"I tell them the greatest thing they have to fear is fear itself...We don't concentrate on what you can't do, we concentrate on what you can do," the head nurse claimed.

Although the nurses may be tough, their firmness is for the patient's own good.

Said Mrs. Boren as she wheeled out of the therapy room, "She's got a heart of gold," turning her head slowly to Ms. Miller, the floor's chief "terrorist."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The military will begin work within the next 11 months to convert under-used facilities into civilian drug treatment centers to help stop AIDS and the birth of AIDS virus-afflicted children, U.S. Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop says.

"If we are to stop AIDS and stop the birth of children with AIDS, we have to do it in this fashion," Koop said Monday at the 95th meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States.

"The reason it is so important at this point is that the spread of AIDS is taking place most swiftly in the drug abuse community," he said.

The Department of Defense and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services agreed last week to pursue the proposal, which would expand the availability of drug treatment for civilians, Koop said.

Following his speech to 6,000 military health leaders, Koop, 72, a Navy vice admiral by virtue of his being chief of the U.S. Public Health Service, said carrying out the plan to open treatment slots for drug addicts was one of the key items he wanted to see accomplished before his scheduled retirement in November 1989.

Drug addicts particularly need to be the focus of the battle against AIDS, even though they make up a small percentage of the total U.S. population, Koop said.

"It is the only group of people that is involved in the birth of babies with AIDS," Koop said. "They are only born to women who are abusing drugs or to partners of drug abusers."

There will be 3,000 U.S. babies with acquired immune deficiency syndrome by this time next year, the surgeon general predicted.

Koop also leveled a double-barreled attack on the American tobacco industry because of its increasing cigarette exports to developing countries.

Juried art exhibition hanging at MC

From Staff Reports

Midland Arts Association's Eleventh Annual Juried Art Exhibition is hanging through Friday at McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, Midland College.

Terence Keane, who served as the juror, is the Curator of Exhibitions at Abilene Fine Arts Museum.

Merit Award winners this year are: Bill Bagley, Lubbock, "Glass Sculptural Forms," glass; Travis Beckham, Midland, "Chrome Recollections II," oil sticks; James Campbell, Big Spring, "Mexican Colonial," casein; John A. LaCaze, Jr., Midland, "Black; Blue, 1987," photography; and Alice Leese of Kermit, "Fossil Corn," acrylic.

Merchandise Award winners are: M. Andrews, Midland, "Dickless Tracy," photography; and Ellen Taylor, Odessa, "Jesicacat," serigraph.

Honorable Mention winners are: E. Barry Phillips III, "Roaring Rousseau," mixed media; Grey Rigney, Lubbock, "Aquafacade," mixed media; Walter Kleweno, Midland, "Renewal," photography; Ana Lee, Odessa, "Primitive Past," mixed media; M. Andrews, Midland, "Cactus and Other Concerns," photography; Joyce McDonald, Midland, "Galactic Interlude," ceramic; Veronica V. Thacker, Lubbock, "Untitled," glass; L. Julie Storey, Lubbock, "Cattle Ya," oil; Audrey Larson, Midland, "Betting Lounge," watercolor; Cynthia Wolfe, Midland, "Moonlight," watercolor; and Alice Leese, Kermit, "Twelve O'Clock," acrylic.

"This exhibition is one of those set up in a manner beneficial to both individual artists and the regional art community as a whole," Keane says in his juror's statement.

"It has been designed to give exposure to recent works, to form qualitative comparisons across lines of style, medium or professional standing, and to provide a forum which discourages bias or incestual tendencies.

"The apparent result has been the evolution of a show which each year attracts a tremendous variety of entries including many fresh contemporary works along with a blend of the more traditional, and most importantly, works by emerging artist."

DEATHS

L.T. Barnett

Barnett

Services for L.T. Barnett are scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Russell Parchman, minister of the First United Methodist Church, officiating.

He died early Monday morning at a Midland hospital. He was born Dec. 28, 1914, in San Antonio, where he was reared and attended school. He graduated from Main Avenue High School in 1930. He attended the University of Texas, where he received a degree in business administration in 1936.

He joined The Texas Co. in Houston as an accountant the same year. He met Jean Polk in Houston, and they were married May 18, 1939. In 1947, the couple moved to Fort Worth, where he became division warehousemen. In 1959, the family moved to Dallas when the company's Fort Worth office was relocated there. The family lived in Dallas until 1965, when they moved to Midland.

He worked in Texaco's employee relations department. He retired in February 1977 after 41 years with the company. After retirement, he enjoyed such hobbies as golf and doll house building. He was a member of the Methodist Church.

He is survived by his wife of Midland; two daughters, Sandra Pry of Dallas and Sheila Brown of Plano; a brother, James S. Barnett of Los Gatos, Calif.; two sisters, Bernice Denton of San Antonio and Carolyn Darby of Atwater, Calif.; two grandchildren, William B. Pry of Dallas and Blair Brown of Plano; four nieces and four nephews.

The family prefers memorials be directed to Meals on Wheels or a favorite charity.

Fay Wallace

BROWNWOOD — Fay Wallace, 73, of Brownwood, mother of June Shepard of Midland, died Sunday at a local nursing home.

Services were to be held at 2 p.m. today at the Austin Avenue Church of Christ. The ministers will be Ted Keil, H.E. Speck and Hulen Jackson. Interment will be in the Glen Cove Cemetery in Coleman County.

She was born April 21, 1915 in Coleman and was a member of the Austin Avenue Church of Christ. She was a homemaker and a public school teacher. She taught in Valera. She was a graduate of Southwest Texas Teachers College and had been a resident of Brownwood for 15 years. She married Paul Wallace Sept. 15, 1941 in Coleman.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, John B. Wallace of San Antonio and David P. Wallace of Abilene; two sisters, Marie Coursey and May Beaver, both of Coleman; and eight grandchildren.

Helen Griffin

ABILENE — Mrs. Paul (Helen) Griffin, 67, formerly of Midland, died Monday at an Abilene hospital.

Funeral services will be Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Stevens Funeral Home Chapel in Coleman.

Burial will be in Coleman Cemetery.

Survivors include her husband, Paul Griffin of Abilene; two daughters, Paula Justice of Cisco and Linda Harragan of Knox City; two brothers, Donnie Smith of Hawley and Jackie Smith of Ira; four sisters, Dorothy Musick, Ruth Lobstein, and Joan Lobstein, all of Abilene, and Wilma Jean Priddy of Coleman; four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Daisy White

Graveside services for Daisy White of Phoenix, Ariz., formerly of Midland, are scheduled for 2 p.m. Wednesday at Citizens Cemetery in Clarendon, Texas.

She was born July 26, 1902. She lived in Midland from 1977 to 1985 at Terrace West nursing home. She moved to Phoenix three years ago.

Survivors include a daughter, Dorothy Martin of Midland.

Cecil Oden

Services for Cecil Oden, 49, of Midland are pending at Ellis Funeral Home. He died Monday in Houston. He was a driver for McClatchey Bros. Trucking of Midland.

Oilfield roundhouse destroyed

BATSON (AP) — Fire destroyed the 84-year-old roundhouse that powered pumps for most of the Ada Belle Oil Co.'s wells, taking with it a chunk of Texas oilfield history.

Ada Belle was the oldest oil company in the country still using a big central motor to power pumps in the field, said Judy Allen, company secretary.

A giant electric motor transmitted power to a horizontal "bull wheel" on the floor of the roundhouse. The bull wheel, in turn, transmitted power to well pumps through a network of steel rods that snaked across the field, passing through pipes under dirt roads and raised above the sandy soil by small, wooden blocks.

In earlier years, a big crude oil-fueled engine powered the big wheel.

The electric motor apparently sparked the fire Saturday. Bushings in the motors are believed to have caused sparks that set oil and grease-soakd timbers ablaze.

Formed by investors from Chicago and Beaumont in 1903 during an oil boom in Batson, a Hardin County town about 40 miles northwest of Beaumont, Ada Belle has drilled more than 300 wells on its own property and on adjacent leases.

Archaeological society to meet

From Staff Reports

Dr. Carl Frailey of Midland will address this month's meeting of the Midland Archaeological Society 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Marian Blackmore Planetarium, located behind the Museum of the Southwest.

Frailey will show slides and talk about his recent fossil-hunting trip to Brazil, sponsored by the National Science Foundation. He will discuss Miocene and Pleistocene stratigraphy in the western part of the Amazon Basin, emphasizing its recent geological history and how this has affected its human population.

Frailey received a doctorate in vertebrate paleontology from the University of Kansas. He has been a field paleontologist for the Bureau of Land Management, and has worked for several museums, including the American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

Currently, Frailey is a professor at Midland College, where he has taught classes in geology and biology since 1982.

Female minister to address group

From Staff Reports

The Midland Outreach Aglow Fellowship will meet at 7:15 p.m. today at the Holiday Inn T-Dome, 2904 W. Wall. Supper will be served before the meeting at 6:30 p.m.

Liz Walker, an ordained minister from Baton Rouge, La., "who was healed from brain damage suffered in an automobile accident," will speak, says a release from Aglow.

She has a teaching ministry that has been used in retreats, seminars, TV ministry and churches.

Paul Baskin, praise and worship leader at Greenwood United Methodist Church, and Darren Dortch, senior and varsity basketball player at Lee High School, will lead the praise and worship.

Aglow is a non-denominational group of Christian women. Men are invited to this special meeting.

The officers for Midland are Jannie Linney, Pat Jones, Jody Dortch, Sandy Tucker, Carol Skinner and Ida Paxton. Advisors are Justin Woodruff, Dr. Tom Thomson and Dick Spencer.

New hairstyles take short cut to fall

Associated Press

You can take a short cut to fall fashion with a cropped hairstyle — one that is mischievously feminine and playfully alluring.

The latest short cuts, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, are sleek in texture with soft wispy bangs or strands curving over one eye for a look as disarming as a frilly blouse with a tailored jacket.

Pivotal to these split-personality styles are new layering techniques and some styling tricks-of-the-trade you can use at home.

"Women want to show off their neck and shoulders now," said styling expert Howard Fugler. "This fall, cuts stop a bit below the chin, or however higher you dare."

The small head is predominant. Instead of poufs and moussed-out volume, the hair hones into the crown or against the face.

"I leave extra length on the crown," Fugler said. "That way, you have more styling freedom — scrunch it up or do a mass of bangs, a more womanly attitude."

Refined cutting methods play an important role in the new hair look. "Shingling" with a razor tapers the ends very short at the neck and temples. The top is kept longish and strands are snipped on the bias — at 45 degree angles.

The short cut becomes less severe when layers are gently snipped beneath the surface. Also, the hair is cut dry, yielding a finer blending of layers for a subtle buoyancy.

A smart alternative to very short is the updated pageboy, clipped a few inches below chin level and swept behind the ear. Stylists favor all one length, perhaps a bit shorter in front. The news is in the back, where ends flip up instead of being forced under with a blow-dryer and brush.

Streamlined texture is attainable even if you were born with curls.

"Usually, your best tool is a natural bristle brush," Fugler said. "But if you have fine hair, try one with nylon and natural bristles to remove static electricity."

After shampooing, comb hair into shape. Then, with brush and blow-dryer, work strands back from temples without forcing the ends under.

Another option — on wet hair apply an alcohol-free gel. Next, use a blow-dryer and your hands to straighten. Don't aim the nozzle near the roots — that will give you unwanted "lift." When completely dry, tame ends with more gel for increased control and shine.

Because extra-curly hair gets curlier when cut short, Fugler likes a finger-wave set to gently loosen strands. He molds sections into head-hugging waves, clips securely and covers with a net. When dry, he removes the clips and dabs on hair moisturizer.

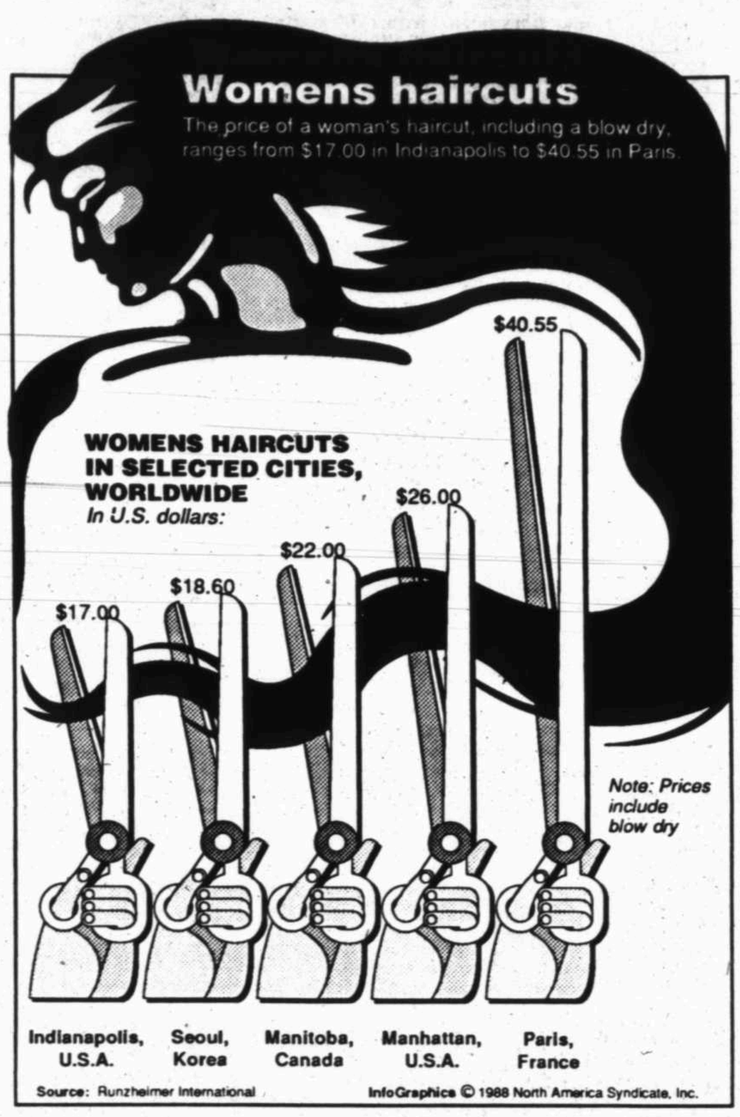

For longer-lasting slickness, consider a soft body wave. Instead of regular perm rods, stylists use flat metal sheets to relax strands — about 30 percent less curl — with minimal volume.

The new styles include a hint of softness toward the face.

"It makes a boyish cut turn suddenly sensuous," Fugler said.

For gentle wisps across the brow, rely on a tapered cut and a bit of gel.

For a more groomed mood, he advised a non-oily pomade for shine and manageability without stiffness. Use it to fashion a fringe of bangs. Pomades can combine sleek strands with tousled ones. Comb forward and towel dry, then massage in cream where you need it — strands will spring up instantly.

Hot hairstyles for fall are 1920s madcap, 1960s bob

By CARRIE DONOVAN
New York Times News Service

PARIS — In this city — especially during the seasonal collections — intriguing fashion notes are sounded everywhere. One theme here has to do with hair.

For women, it's short. Think of the 1920's madcap style with a thick fringe of bangs. Or the short, full, mid-ear-length bob that English designers like Mary Quant made famous in the 1960's. Take a little from each and that's the newest look here today.

At the Comme des Garcons showing, wigs did it for the models. Most of them had their own long locks tucked up under Quant-style caps of hair.

It was fascinating how different the style made all these young women look, even the internationally famous ones. In the audience at the showings, Anna Wintour, Vogue's new editor, personifies the look.

Meanwhile, for young men it's sideburns. This debonair style is now being sported by the designer Christian Lacroix, among others. Lacroix says his were a result of lazy shaving habits over a summer vacation.

But it's clear that a lot of other stylish young men are taking the look seriously. Some, particularly photographers lining the runways, are keeping the rest of their coif smoothed back with small bandanas tied pirate-style.

Hairstyles may be single most important fashion accessory

Associated Press

A hairstylist believes hair — not jewelry — may be the single most important fashion accessory for the well-dressed woman this fall.

"Though the individual style will vary with each woman and the image she wants to project, beautiful, professionally-styled hair is definitely the most important fashion accessory this season," says Xenon, international creative director for the Helene Curtis Professional Division.

According to Xenon, women's fashions this fall are more subdued and streamlined, with an emphasis on the basics, such as cut, fabric, texture, color and proportion.

"Simple clothes tend to draw attention to hair and accessories, so a flattering hairstyle is more important than ever," Xenon says, adding:

"Women don't want their hair to look the same every day. Today's woman plays a number of roles and has a real need for a look that matches her activities.

"For fall, the most popular hairstyles will be adaptable, able to take a women from the job, to the gym, to a romantic evening encounter."

DEAR ABBY

Mom needs to shift gears for son

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As I was leaving the second floor of a major department store yesterday, I saw a little boy around 3 or 4 years old screaming hysterically as he ran blindly and all alone across the floor and onto the escalator right behind me.

Halfway down the escalator, he was still alone and screaming. His little face was contorted and purple. That was bad enough, but a woman ahead of me — all the way down at the bottom of the escalator — turned around and yelled, "No, I don't want you! You're a bad boy!"

Abby, I am a mother, too, and I can't begin to describe how much I hurt for that boy. I could never dream of pretending, even for a second, to abandon a child. I might have given him a tongue lashing, or threatened to spank him, but never would I say, "I don't want you," and I surely would never have taken my eyes off that kid in a large department store, never mind turning my back and leaving him!

Later I was sorry I didn't give that woman a royal blasting. What would you have done? — HUMAN, TOO, IN BOSTON

DEAR HUMAN: I would not have given her a "royal blasting" — that would serve only to embarrass and humiliate her, and she'd probably take it out on the child when she got him home.

I would have approached her as inconspicuously as possible and quietly told her that I knew she was upset ("I'm a mother, too, and I know how you feel ..."), then suggested that she get some kind of counseling to help her deal with the difficult job of parenting.

Of course, you would risk being told in no uncertain terms to mind your own business. But it would be a small price to pay if it would cause an out-of-control mother to seek the help she needs.

DEAR ABBY: A while back someone wrote to you complaining because she got too much attention while shopping in a department store. (She said she wanted to just "look" without having a salesperson pounce on her and stick to her like glue.)

Abby, what planet does this person live on? The last time a salesperson "stuck to me like glue" was 20 years ago. If I'm lucky enough to find someone to wait on me, I stick to her (or him) like glue!

Last winter I was looking for a flannel shirt, and when I asked the salesperson if she had any, she looked at me like I was crazy. Then she asked me what "flannel" was!

Last month, my favorite department store eliminated two cashiers' counters, and there was one woman frantically trying to help the line of customers waiting for her.

So, dear "Too Much Attention," the next time a salesperson sticks to you like glue, give 'em a big kiss for me and count your blessings. — MARGARET MORRISON, LOS ANGELES

DEAR MARGARET: I'm glad you wrote. In response to that letter, I suggested that the salesperson approach the customer who appeared to be looking, and say, "Take your time, and if you find something you want, let me know — my name is Maggie."

Well, management in retail instruct their salespeople never to turn their backs on a customer who appears interested in any piece of merchandise he or she can touch. The millions of dollars worth of merchandise shoplifters steal would blow your mind!

And who are the shoplifters? The last ones you'd suspect. A young mother with a child in a stroller and another in her arms, or a well-dressed, middle-aged woman wearing a full coat and carrying an oversized purse or shopping bag.

I was also informed that if a store manager saw a salesperson ignore a "shopper" who was handling merchandise, that salesperson would be in for a reprimand.

Abby's favorite recipes are going like hotcakes! Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Creativity has gone a little far

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

All my life I've lived next to a Sherry Kalbach.

What's a Sherry Kalbach? It's a clever person who is a creative crafts lecturer and author, usually from Cleona, Pa., who sees exciting possibilities in everything she touches. There is no such thing as a throwaway. Old potato peelings turn into necklaces, discarded dental floss is woven into rugs before your eyes, and you don't want to see what she comes up with at Halloween.

Well, the other day, I opened the mail, and lo and behold, it was an ornament from Sherry for my Christmas tree. (That's another thing. Her Christmas ornaments are all made by Aug. 15.) It was a precious little mouse made out of (get hold of yourself) cooked dryer lint.

Give me a break, Sherry. Do I need a guilt trip for throwing away lint? Now I know as sure as I'm sitting here that readers of this column will write and say, "I want to make a mouse out of cooked dryer lint. Would you please send me the recipe?" People are like that.

OK, according to Sherry, you "begin with three cups of dryer lint and add some water. Stir till thoroughly moistened and blend in flour. Turn on the stove. (I hate it when they talk down to me.) Continue stirring over heat until thickened.

"Never, never leave this mixture unattended on the stove," says Sherry, "as this would be one heck of a fire to explain to a firefighter. Throw the glob onto some wax paper to cool, and in a few minutes you have a modeling material that can be shaped and molded."

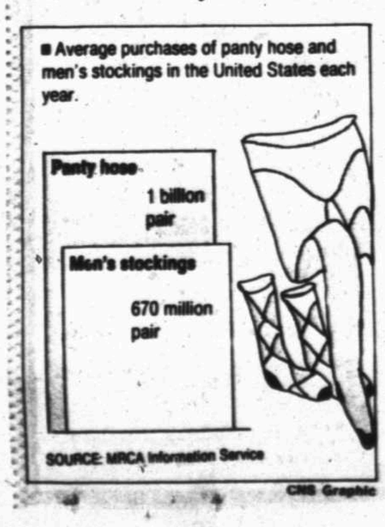

The fact that Sherry does not have a dryer does not deter her in the least. Her neighbors have responded with bagfuls of gray lint. (Boring underwear!) But Sherry has come up with a way to color the lint and is now doing pastel ornaments.

Looking at that cute little mouse, my heart starts beating faster, my mind begins to race, and for a moment I am stripping my beds of blankets to throw them in the dryer to make lint and spend the rest of my days making mice in a saucepan.

Then I get hold of myself and remember the Christmas wreath I made out of a coat hanger and nose tissue.

Somehow, a eulogy comes to mind: "Some see things as they are and say, 'Why?' I dream of things that never were and say ... don't make yourself crazy."

Women's sensible shoes increasingly reek of chic

By CARRIE DONOVAN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — To downtown dressers, the "cop on the beat" shoe is not new. For several years, sprightly young women have been finishing off their all-black outfits with chubby-toed, thick-soled, black leather shoes much like the ones worn by police officers.

This fad for decking out women in sensible, solid men's-style shoes started in London. The original Dr. Marten's shoe from England is still sold here, but the look has been embellished and is catching the fancy of stylish women around the city, especially those who like to walk a lot but cannot stand the way they look in running shoes.

Several New York shoe shops, like Giraudon, have clunky shoes that are solid enough to qualify as comfortable, but also reek of chic. Black, navy blue or brown suede shoes with the regulation thick-tread soles and wide black grosgrain ribbon laces that tie in a bow at the instep look great with a short skirt and black tights or slim, tailored pants. The

Meanwhile, downtowners are taking a dramatically different direction. The newest shoe shapes are those from Stephane Kelian of Paris and can be found at Tootsi Plohound, another New York shoe store. With their long, pointy toes and thick inward-slanting heels, they look like a cross between a Western boot and something a wicked witch would wear. Average price: $385.

Find quality home care needs at Major Medical Supply

Major Medical Supply provides a vital service to the Permian Basin by combining quality medical equipment, supplies and service for complete home care service. Located across from Midland Memorial Hospital and next to Driscoll's Gifts at 309 Andrews Highway, Major Medical Supply offers convenience and service-oriented patient care to its customers.

Major Medical Supply demonstrates to both its customers and to its referral sources a genuine patient care attitude through excellent service, laced with heavy doses of compassion and caring. With the potential to provide a complete in-home patient care program, Major Medical Supply offers a wide variety of products which can enhance mobility and independence, as well as comfort.

With three Texas stores owned and operated by Kenneth and Diane Benson, Odessa residents since 1952, Major Medical Supply is a leader in its field. In order to facilitate its operations, Major Medical Supply recently moved its entire management, accounting and Medicare/insurance filing staff to an office adjacent to the Andrews Highway location.

Published prices for the rental and sales of medical equipment are, across the board, the lowest in West Texas, according to Leslie Benson, marketing director. All equipment prices are below Medicare allowables. Medicare and insurance assignments are welcome, and Major Medical always charges the same price regardless of reimbursement methods.

Everything a person could need for life to death medical care is available, from "preemie" diapers to First aid supplies to complex oxygen machines. Equipment and supplies also include walking aids by Lumex and Guardian, wheelchairs by Everest and Jennings and Invacare, moist heat pads, home blood pressure kits, exercise equipment, wedge pillows, cervical pillows, traction equipment and whirlpools.

Also, bedside commodes, hospital beds, support hose, surgical garments, decubitis cushions, incontinence aids, aids to daily living, bandages and gauze.

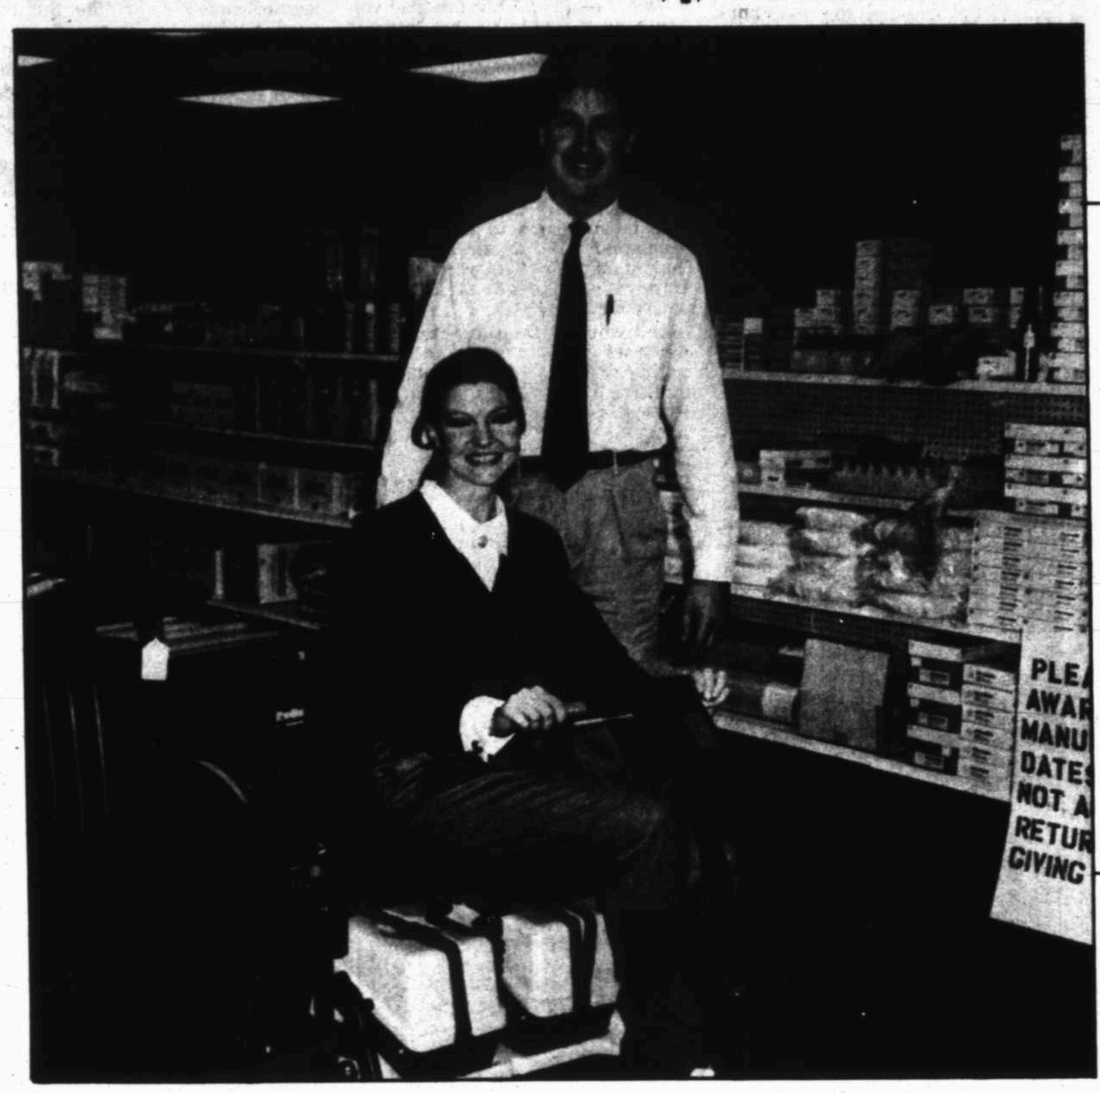

A complete oxygen therapy homecare program is available, featuring liquid oxygen, oxygen concentrators, Bennett I.P.P.B., aerosol therapy, ventilator equipment and care and in-home evaluations. Mike Samp, respiratory therapist, is on staff to manage Major Medical's complete oxygen therapy program.

Major Medical Supply carries "Nearly Me Too" breast prostheses. A private room is available, and fittings are done by Diane Benson by appointment. Formfit and Bali bras are for sale.

You can count on friendly, professional service by manager Cameron Thompson and the Odessa store manager, Randy Fincher. Both have received industry training as well as monthly training on products and equipment. Factory trained maintenance personnel are on call 24 hours a day for sales and rental equipment repairs.

Because Major Medical Supply is locally owned and operated, it strongly supports our community civic and chairtable organizations with its time and financial resources.

Major Medical supply cares about your health and your life and hopes that it will soon be providing all your home health care needs and services. Call 686-8502, or stop by 309 Andrews Highway from 8:30 to 5:30 Monday through Friday. The Odessa location, at 720 N. Golder is open weekdays and Saturdays. Saturday hours are 9 a.m. to noon.

Major Medical Supply marketing director Leslie Benson (seated), and Midland store manager Cameron Thompson invite you in to see the latest in quality medical equipment, supplies and service for home medical care. Major Medical Supply is located at 309 Andrews Highway, across from Midland Memorial Hospital and next to Driscoll's Gifts.

Lewellen Construction storm windows help save energy dollars

Lewellen Construction offers custom made storm windows and experienced, top-quality installation for maximum protection. This home, equipped with quality storm windows, is owned by Bill and Joan Lewellen.

Bill and Joan Lewellen remind you that winter weather will be here soon, and once again you may be paying the price for air leaks around the windows. Don't wait until it's too late–order right away for custom built windows. As an extra incentive, you will receive one free storm window from Lewellen Construction with the purchase of nine or more storm windows.

Heating costs are increased when cold air slips in around those openings. Frustration is also increased when dust blows through as though no window was even there. High noise levels add to the aggravation.

Bill says quality storm windows, when properly installed, will make a significant difference. How significant? Well, 70 percent of a home's total heat loss is attributable to uninsulated windows, and government studies reveal that installation of storm windows can cut home owners' energy costs by 24 percent.

If you have your windows installed now you'll also be prepared for the inevitable spring dust storms. In addition to keeping your home warmer, storm windows are very effective in reducing noise and keeping the dust out.

All the storm windows offered by Lewellen Construction are custom made to assure the good fit needed for maximum protection. To best enhance your home's appearance, the windows are available in a variety of colors.

In addition to storm windows, Lewellen Construction offers replacement windows, including a popular vinyl tilt-in model.

Of course, it is important not only to get quality windows, but to have those windows installed by a qualified company like Lewellen Construction. If the windows are installed incorrectly they won't be as effective.

Bill and Joan also remind you that for a limited time, a special group of glass speaker doors are half price. "Our standard price with installation on this door is $350.00, but we are charging just half of that. Do your own installation, purchase it cash and carry, and the door is only $125.00."

Also, because of the continued escalation of the costs of siding, Lewellen Construction urges you to take advantage of the stock they have now. "We still have some of our lower cost inventory available in several colors for a limited time," Bill said.

Recently announced were the winners of the Lewellen Construction contest drawing. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. C.M. Edwards of Midland!

Lewellen Construction does quality work at a fair price not only with windows, but also with steel siding, soffit, fascia, and carport covers.

For more information or a free estimate call Lewellen Construction at 686-8007 or 563-4520.

Pages and Prints a delightful shopping experience

It's no surprise that shopping at Pages and Prints is a relaxing, fun experience. Pages and Prints is conveniently located at 40 Plaza Center, at the corner of Wadley and Garfield Streets.

This is a delightful shop loaded with clever gifts, antiques, decorating items, and of course, a wonderful variety of books.

Owner Patteann Daniel-Beverley and her daughter Cyndy warmly greet each customer and encourage the fine art of browsing.

"Pages and Prints is so much more than an ordinary book store," explained Patteann. "It's so much like a home with its little rooms."

While the front room contains a reading area and books on a variety of subjects, the smaller, cozier rooms are devoted to different themes, such as Texana, children's literature and cooking.

New merchandise is arriving daily for early Christmas shopping. Many Christmas coffee table books are now on display, including "Christmas In America," Eliot Porter's new "The West," and "Odyssey," from National Geographic. Racing fans will enjoy "Kentucky Derby," featuring the hometown favorite, Aly Sheba.

Holiday travelers may select from a wonderful variety of books on stateside or overseas travel. Pages and Prints also has beautiful decorator and student globes. An atlas would make a thoughtful gift for anyone who enjoys geography or planning for adventures.

Cyndy Daniel of Pages and Prints is in the shop's extensive Children's Room. Many books come with their own toys, which make them ideal for Christmas or birthday gifts. Come by #40 Plaza Center or call 687-5172 today.

Browsers who haven't been in the store lately will like the display of Santa Fe-look sculptures from Austin Productions. Artist David Fisher captures the popular Southwest flavor in his designs. And Harvey Edwards' "Legwarmers" would be a very special piece for ballet enthusiaats.

Numbered Western prints by Tom Ryan are personally signed. Patteann has always featured the works of local artists at Pages and Prints, and this holiday season is no exception. Tanya Godfrey's jewelry and pottery is for sale, as are American Oak antiques by Mar-Van.

Children old and young will delight with doll houses, finger puppets and rabbit dolls by Johanna Mills. Other locally-made gift ideas are hand-painted pins by Marilyn Pritchett and hand-painted blue jean jackets by Wendy McCluskey.

Another charming gift idea for children who love to dress up like their favorite storybook characters, are costume clothes by My Dream Trunk. These quality fashions can be ordered now in time for Christmas giving. Order in sizes small, medium and large.

Stroll through Pages and Prints and find something on your wish list or on your gift list. The Children's Room contains a very extensive and unique collection of books ranging from cloth and rigid "hard to destroy" books for babies and toddlers, to advanced reading. Many books are packaged with toys relating to the stories. "Books are gifts you can open again and again," reminds Patteann.

The Inspirational Room contains books on self-help and self-awareness, in addition to religious materials.

Another fascinating room, the Women's Corner, features reading on marriage, parenting and decorating. New to the Fine Arts Room are rubber stamps, which make great stocking stuffers. In this room are books on theater, dance and music, along with greeting cards and posters.

The Kitchen is loaded with lots of interesting kitchen gadgets and books on recipes, entertaining, diet and health. Additionally the Mass Market Room carries all of the latest best-selling paperbacks.

Perhaps most unique to Pages and Prints, and certainly a one-of-a-kind room is the J. Evetts Haley/Texana Room. This area is devoted exclusively to Texana and the Old West.

It contains current publications, first editions and out-of-print books. A number of Mr. Haley's books are for sale here. Local authors Frank Samponaro, Diane and Roger Olien, Patrick Dearen and Margaret Crane are all represented in this room.

One just can't go wrong by shopping and browsing at Pages and Prints. Be sure to call or come by for information on the monthly luncheons, book reviews and travel groups that form thoroughout the year.

Pages and Prints is involved in many community events, including the upcoming Merry Marketplace in Odessa, November 4, 5 and 6, the Trinity School Bookfair on November 9th, and National Children's Book Week, beginning November 14th. Make plans now for Pages and Prints' Christmas Open House on November 20th.

Stop by soon and see what's new at Pages and Prints. You won't be disappointed! Hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

Quality, service foremost at Majestic Cleaners

Majestic Cleaners now offers you the convenience of covered customer parking and drive-thru service in the heart of downtown Midland.

This new convenience has come as a complete (and welcome) surprise to all the customers of Majestic Cleaners. This service has been added to cater to the professional Midlanders working in downtown Midland and to protect all of their customers from the unpredictable Midland weather.

With winter approaching, more and more customers will be using this, the only facility of its kind in Midland. Now, Midlanders do not have to worry about rain, snow, sunlight or dust when picking up or dropping off their cleaning.

Midlanders have come to expect quality and service from Majestic Cleaners. Herman "Joe" Jackson has been with Majestic for 30 years, and has the experience to clean almost any garment on the market today. Says Joe, "From the beginning, I decided I would try to do a better job than the next guy, and would hopefully appeal to the sort of customer who appreciated quality and good work." And Joe's decision has paid off. "Recently we cleaned a $5000 wedding gown, and the fact that the customer let us do it made my day," added Joe.

Majestic Cleaners provides a full range of services which include:

- Fine dry cleaning
- Alterations and repairs
- Shirt and jeans laundry
- Wedding gown cleaning and preservation
- Pillow renovation
- Reweaving
- Suede and leather cleaning
- Drapery and household item cleaning
- Regular pick-up and delivery service.

Quality and service seem to be Majestic's guiding principle, and they take great pride in their quality. The modern and well-equipped facility includes a sweater and knits press–the only one in Midland. With this modern machine, they are able to block to size any sweater or knit garment and finish it to perfection. All sweaters are put in a nice snap bag for easy storage and convenience for the customer.

Majestic Cleaners' specialized service for formals and wedding gowns is also remarkable. With the holiday season coming up, Majestic Cleaners is offering a special price on formals. From now until the new year, Majestic Cleaners will clean and press formals for a low price of $13.99 (over the counter) plus tax.

There will be an extra charge for sequins or beaded garments. So come and have your formals done and get ready for the holiday parties.

Majestic Cleaners is well-known for its fine pillow sanitizing service. The feathers are removed from the old ticking and individually sterilized. These sanitized, deodorized and refluffed feathers are then tucked in brand-new featherproof ticking and returned to you in soil-proof poly bags.

Majestic Cleaners has been serving Midlanders since 1955. Their unique appearance, meticulous attention to detail and courteous, personal attention has enabled Majestic Cleaners to achieve a higher standard in professional dry cleaning services.

Each garment is:

- Tagged (buttons and pads removed if necessary)
- Carefully pre-spotted
- Dry-cleaned just the right duration
- Skillfully pressed
- Thoroughly inspected before packaging

All outgoing orders have a detailed invoice attached showing the number of garments brought in, the price charged for each garment, and details of any additional work done to the garments. This way the customer knows exactly what he or she is paying for.

Majestic Cleaners is something special for you, the discriminating customer. The staff's motto is, "Do the best you can and treat each customer the way you'd like to be treated."

Try Majestic Cleaners for your next cleaning job. Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, and 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Fridays. Call 682-8001 for more information.

Alysheba needs victory to lead all-time money list

AP Laserphoto

David Pettinger takes Midland-owned Alysheba for an exercise run down the backstretch of Churchill Downs in preparation for Saturday's Breeder's Cup run. Alysheba could earn horse-of-the-year honors with a victory.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — It has all the makings for a great day in thoroughbred racing.

Breeders' Cup Day arrives Saturday at Churchill Downs, featuring the world's finest thoroughbreds competing in seven races that carry a combined purse of $10 million.

The highlight of the nationally televised card will be the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic. Midland's Alysheba, the 1987 Kentucky Derby winner, tops a field of 11 3-year-olds and up pre-entered for the 1¼-mile race over the historic track.

Personal Ensign, a 4-year-old filly unbeaten in 12 career starts, will seek to become the first horse in major competition to retire undefeated since 1908 if she can capture the $1 million Distaff over 1½ miles.

For the first time, there's no apparent home-course advantage to horses out of the major East- or West-based stables. And incidences of a trainer or owner with a potential Eclipse Award winner skipping the event, which was particularly evident last year, seem to have been minimized.

The dramatic element of a battle for horse of the year will be present. Alysheba, dominant in the handicap division, is the likely choice if he wins the $3 million Classic. If Alysheba fails, however, and the 4-year-old filly Personal Ensign (12-for-12) completes an undefeated career with a victory in the $1 million Distaff, the honor could be hers.

The showcase is the Breeders' Cup — called by some the "Super Bowl" and by others the "World Series" of horse racing.

Breeder's Cup

Alysheba, with lifetime earnings of $5,329,242, would become thoroughbred racing's all-time money winner with a victory Saturday. The winner's share is $1.35 million, which would move him past John Henry's total of $6,597,947.

Alysheba is owned by Midland's Dorothy Scharbauer and daughter Pamela.

Forty Niner, who finished second to Winning Colors in this year's Derby, is expected to be Alysheba's top challenger. The Claiborne Farm colt, trained by Hall of Famer Woody Stephens, has won the Haskell and Travers stakes.

Winning Colors, trained by D. Wayne Lukas, will test Personal Ensign, along with Goodbye Halo, a winner of four Grade I events, Epitome and Willa on the Move in the Distaff.

And there will be four former Breeders' Cup champions:

— Miesque, a 4-year-old filly from France, will defend her title in the $1 million Mile on the turf course.

— Very Subtle, last year's Sprint champion, and Precisionist, the 1985 winner, were pre-entered in the $1 million Sprint.

— Epitome, the 1987 Juvenile Fillies winner, is to run in the Distaff.

In addition to Miesque, the other leading European horses include Caerwent (Ireland) and Warning (Britain) in the $1 million Mile and Triptych (France) in the $2 million Turf.

Churchill Downs and the city of Louisville also are looking to Breeders' Cup Day with considerable pride and preparation.

Four years ago, the track started a $25 million capital improvement project with the idea of attracting the Breeders' Cup. One of the improvements was a turf course to meet one of the basic criteria.

"We're not second to California, and certainly we're not second to New York," said track president Tom Meeker, referring to sites of the previous four events. "We're going to demonstrate to the world that Kentucky knows how to put on the Breeders' Cup."

The city established a Breeders' Cup Task Force to coordinate community involvement, ranging from welcoming centers to restaurant hospitality in order to impress visitors.

NCAA stuns Kansas basketball

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The University of Kansas, seven months after winning the national basketball championship, has been told it cannot defend its title next season as part of a three-year probation in which the NCAA stopped barely short of the "death penalty."

In addition, the Jayhawks will be allowed to give no paid recruiting visits during 1989 and will be stripped of one scholarship during that period.

News reports have linked former Memphis State guard Vincent Askew to the probe. The NCAA announcement identified no one. Askew was recruited by KU and spent one summer on campus but then returned to Memphis without ever playing for the Jayhawks.

The report by the Infractions Committee said the investigation was begun by telephone call from a "confidential informant" dealing with the recruitment of a "highly visible transfer student-athlete."

The NCAA noted the Kansas football program received a "major" penalty in November 1983 and that this major basketball violation within a five-year period made the Jayhawks subject to having their program shut down.

"The committee believes, however, that the following unique circumstances were present in this case: the violations, while serious and calculated to obtain a recruiting advantage ... were isolated to a 10-day period and the investigation revealed no other serious violations in the basketball program; the basketball program was not involved in the 1983 football case."

The NCAA also said it believed "the compliance, educational and monitoring programs which need further strengthening, can best be established through a lengthy period of probation, annual reports and audits, rather than through certain ... penalties."

In addition to the three-year probation, the NCAA outlined the following penalties for the Jayhawks, the fourth-winningest basketball program in NCAA history:

—The team must end its 1988-89 season with the last regularly scheduled contest and cannot participate in postseason competition.

—Kansas can pay for no campus visits by basketball recruits in 1989.

—Kansas is stripped of one basketball scholarship for the 1989-90 academic year.

—Kansas must make annual reports on action it is taking during the probationary period to bring its program into compliance with NCAA rules, including a full audit of athletes' summer jobs; make annual reports on wages and salaries paid to players employed in university summer camps and camps operated by the school's athletic staff.

Kansas apparently came close to becoming the second school to get the newly enacted death penalty.

Colts' Harvey Armstrong and Craig Swoope ...high fives for fifty-five

Dickerson runs wild with four touchdowns as Colts score 55 points

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Eric Dickerson celebrated his anniversary with the Indianapolis Colts, and the NFL's leading rusher provided the treats.

Performing before a record Hoosier Dome crowd of 60,628, Dickerson scored a career-high four touchdowns and rushed for 159 yards, going over 1,000 yards for an NFL record-tying sixth consecutive season despite carrying the ball only three times in the second half.

Indianapolis was ahead 45-10 at halftime en route to a 55-23 triumph in the first Monday night football game played in Indianapolis. Dickerson did all his scoring in the first half on runs of 12, 11, 1 and 41 yards, sparking Indianapolis to a 31-0 lead.

Dickerson and Coach Ron Meyer, who was reunited with the running back he coached at Southern Methodist on Halloween Night last year in a blockbuster three-team trade that brought him from the Los Angeles Rams, talked about his play at halftime.

"He asked me if I wanted to play more," Dickerson said. "I said I can sit out and let Albert (Bentley) play. I don't like to run scores up on people. We have to play another game this week (Sunday against the visiting New York Jets). It was no big deal.

"I felt I had a chance to run for 200 yards, but it may come another day."

McWilliams admits bowl hopes slim

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas football coach David McWilliams said Monday his team is down after a disappointing loss to Texas Tech, but he knows it will continue to play hard for the rest of the season.

"Pride is a part of you and a part of the team," McWilliams said. "I don't even question their pride. You sign on for the whole season to play every game."

After leading 32-15 starting the fourth quarter, Texas surrendered 18 points and lost 33-32 at Lubbock on Saturday.

McWILLIAMS admitted his team is in danger of being overlooked by the bowls for only the second time in the past 11 years and suffering its second losing season in the past three years.

"We'd really have to finish strong," he said. "It's tough to think right now that a bowl bid is going to come. It's a real long shot."

The Longhorns are 3-4 overall and 1-2 in the Southwest Conference.

"I do think we have lost a little momentum," McWilliams told his weekly news conference, "but I still think there is a lot of excitement about Texas out there."

McWilliams also defended his offensive coordinator, John Mize, after Mize called for a long pass on third-and-1 at Texas' 29-yard line, leading 32-25 and with only 4½ minutes to play. Quarterback Mark Murdock's attempt to reach Tony Jones went out of bounds, and the Red Raiders scored two minutes later to win the game.

"It was John's call and I'm not going to second-guess John," McWilliams said. He said he agreed with the call.

"I'm pleased with John Mize," McWilliams said. "I have no plans to make any change there."

Texas also had a touchdown called back by a penalty and receiver Kerry Cash fumbled a reception near the Tech 20. McWilliams felt those two plays were much more the undoing of the Longhorns.

BILL GRIMES

Greenwood Rangers feed crow to football skeptics

"...your Rangers are not going to beat Kermit," sports writer W.C. Grimes, Esq., Oct. 27, 1988.

Grimes

Hey, this Grimes fella picked Permian to beat Lee, too. Guess that means he's not infallible.

So it's time to eat some proverbial crow, something that's tough to do for an unmagnanimous cuss like Grimes. But the Greenwood Rangers bought his meal ticket with their 20-9 win over Kermit this past Friday night.

Yeah, there was some hooting and hollering "aways daown" in Greenwood after Grimes downgraded the beloved Rangers. Can't figure out why that would be. Héck, I can understand the guy's reasoning. Would you have picked against Kermit, considering that the Yellowjackets wiped out Fabens 56-7, while Greenwood struggled to a 30-20 win over the same 11?

"...it (a Greenwood win) is not out of the realm of possibility, especially if wishbone quarterback Randy Donnell has a big game," Grimes again.

Hey, 33 yards rushing against Kermit isn't going to get Donnell many All-State votes, but you have to look beyond that stat, tainted as it is by several rushes for loss.

Donnell again showed that he may be the best player in District 4-3A with a 97-yard return of the opening kickoff for a quick 7-0 lead. The two-way standout knew the game wasn't over with that play, however.

"We knew we were going to have to play every minute," Donnell said. "If we didn't play, Kermit would be in there just like that."

But after the Jackets sparkled on their only TD drive of the game on their first possession, Donnell gave the Rangers the lead for good when he lofted a pass to the end zone that tall end Sean Holcomb outleaped everyone for a 24-yard scoring play.

"I was trying to throw to his outside shoulder," Donnell said. "I thought since Sean's 6-3 or 6-4 that he could reach up and get it."

Incidentally, when a Donnell pass is described as having been "lofted," that's what the writer means. The Ranger QB seems to throw most of his passes with a peculiarly high arc — something you can do when your favorite receivers include Holcomb, Tom Marvin and Tim Flowers — all standing 6-4.

The bottom line is, Donnell does what the great ones do. He gives his team the big play when they need it, even if it doesn't look like they can get it in that situation.

"The Rangers stopped (Crane tailback Sherod) Vaden, but Kermit tailback Thompson may be another story," Grimes again (Don't you get tired of me quoting this clown?).

Well, Thompson wasn't another story. The All-State candidate did gain more against the Rangers than Vaden, but 22 carries for 80 yards is not All-State numbers. Greenwood fans can thank cornerbacks Dave Dixon and Quincy Carlisle for that.

Dixon, the Rangers' right corner, was primarily responsible for tailing Thompson on option rollouts by Jacket QB Victor Muniz. Thompson got some yards, sure, but almost none were on pitchouts — more likely on traps and counter plays.

"We took out one of the lead blockers and got to the pitch man," Dixon said.

So what if Muniz led all rushers with 85 yards. He probably should have had 185, but the Ranger defense closed in on him soon after crossing the line of scrimmage in most cases.

Middle linebacker Jimmy O'Briant was a leader in that aspect of play. But the junior standout will be best remembered for dragging two Kermit tacklers with him on the last half of a 12-yard TD run on the first play of the fourth quarter.

"It was just effort," O'Briant said. "But the first thing we had to do was shut them down."

The Rangers dodged a bullet midway through the third quarter when Ranger returner Randy Marquez fumbled a punt on about his own 15-yard line and the ball rolled toward the end zone. Marquez tried to fall on the ball at about the one-yard-line, but the ball squirted loose and a Kermit player jumped on the ball in the end zone for an apparent Jacket TD.

Or was it? Mr. Back Judge said nope, Marquez had possession of the ball on the one (even though the ball plainly squirted away.).

Greenwood couldn't move the ball on the ensuing series, but punter Brian Aylor saved the Rangers a lot of potential grief when he stepped backward out of the end zone for a Kermit safety.

But it was the fumbled punt that held the key, Grimes thinks. That eminent crow-eating scribe thinks if that Kermit TD had been allowed, the Jackets would probably not have been so frustrated as to mouth off to the refs on the Rangers' next drive — where a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty gave Greenwood the ball on the Kermit 27.

On third-and-five after the penalty, Donnell hit Marvin for a 10-yard gain and a first down as the period ended.

On the next play, it was all O'Briant.

0-for-October Cowboys in Aikman hunt

IRVING (AP) — After going 0-for-October, the Dallas Cowboys have become legitimate contenders in the Troy Aikman sweepstakes.

The Cowboys, who are only a half-game behind the Kansas City Chiefs in the race to be the worst team in the NFL, play a tough schedule in the last seven games.

Dallas' remaining opponents have a record of 39-24.

This Sunday the Cowboys, who are having their worst season in 25 years, play at the New York Giants (6-3).

Then they meet, in order, the Minnesota Vikings (5-4), the Cincinnati Bengals (7-2), the Houston Oilers (6-3), the Cleveland Browns (6-3), the Washington Redskins (5-4) and the Philadelphia Eagles (4-5).

Sunday's 16-10 loss to Phoenix sent the Cowboys tumbling to a 2-7 ledger. Dallas has lost five games in row. The Cowboys haven't lost six consecutive games since the 1960 season.

Kansas City leads the chase for UCLA quarterback Aikman with a 1-7-1 record. Atlanta, Detroit, Green Bay, Pittsburgh, San Diego and Tampa Bay are at 2-7 with the Cowboys. The worst team gets the top pick in the NFL draft and it is expected to be the talented Aikman, rated the top quarterback in college.

"We are still hurting in the last two minutes of the game," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "Until we learn to get over that hump then we're not going to have much success."

Dallas has lost five games by 19 points. Three losses have come in the final two minutes.

Landry isn't planning an immediate switch to backup quarterback Kevin Sweeney although Steve Pelluer had one of his poorest games since becoming the starter.

"You have to keep working and climb out of it," Landry said. "I'm not thinking about changing quarterbacks."

Pelluer hit only nine of 31 passes for 132 yards, and blamed a sore shoulder and slick ball for his down performance.

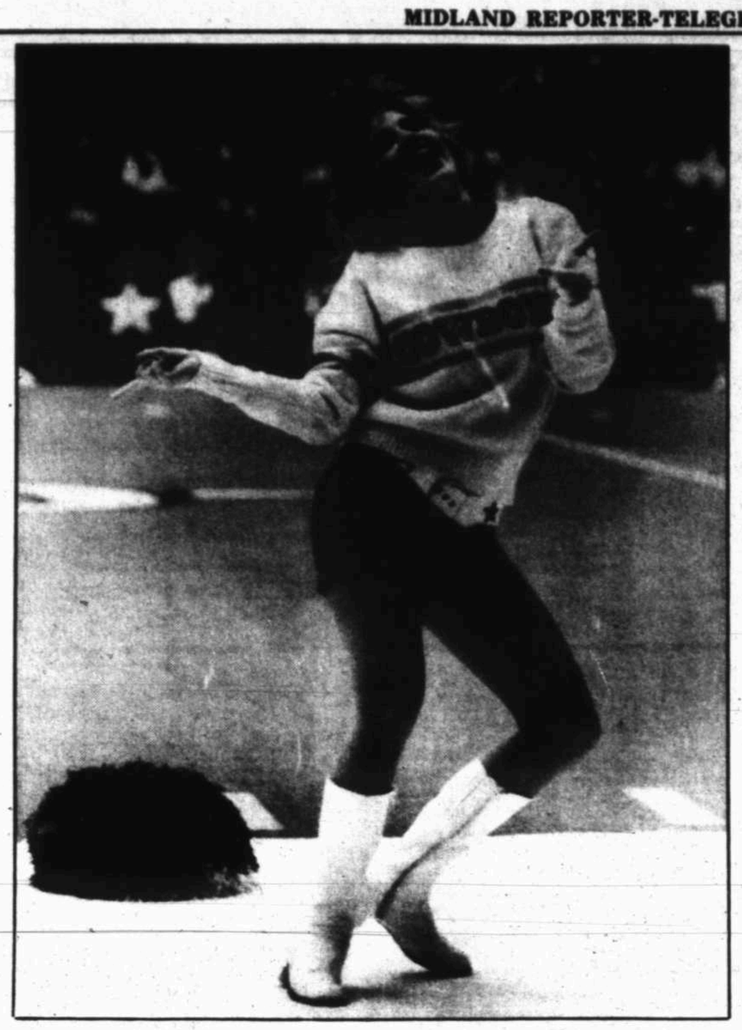

Pelluer's interception late in the game cost the Cowboys, Landry said, "It really hurt us."

Pelluer said, "I don't think I've had as bad a day all year throwing the ball as I did in that game. I'm not going to give up. I'm going to keep firing the ball."

He said he hurt his shoulder in the first half and couldn't get loose although Pelluer warmed up constantly on the sidelines.

"I just never could get into a good flow," Pelluer said.

Only 42,196 fans watched with 3,980 no-shows.

Holiday Bowl pulls for Wyoming

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Shamu the killer whale won't attend Saturday's Wyoming-Texas-El Paso football game, but Sea World Holiday Bowl officials will be on hand in case the Cowboys clinch the Western Athletic Conference title.

A Wyoming win over Texas-El Paso would leave the Cowboys 7-0 in the conference with one conference game remaining, and so give the team at least a tie for the league title.

A victory Saturday also would give Wyoming, currently 9-0 and ranked 10th in the nation, a tie-breaking edge over other conference teams and therefore the WAC champion's automatic bid to the Holiday Bowl.

Although bowl committees normally can't officially tender bowl bids until Nov. 19, Wyoming would be able to accept such a bid Saturday since the WAC champion receives an automatic berth in the Holiday Bowl, said bowl spokesman Bruce Binkowski on Monday.

"We will have someone there" to present Wyoming the bid if the Cowboys win, Binkowski said in an interview from his San Diego office.

Three teams currently remain in the hunt for the conference crown. Joining Wyoming in the race are Brigham Young, 7-1 overall and 4-1 in the conference, and Texas-El Paso, 8-1 and 4-1. Wyoming, at 6-0 in the WAC, has the edge having beaten BYU.

A win over Texas-El Paso would settle the matter, as even if Wyoming lost to Hawaii on Nov. 19 and Brigham Young won its remaining conference games the Cougars still would sport that loss to the Cowboys and so lose the edge in the tie-breaker process.

Teams being considered for the at-large bid to the bowl game, which will be played Dec. 29, include, in alphabetical order, Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Nebraska, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Oregon, Penn State, Southern Cal, Syracuse, UCLA, Washington and Washington State.

Binkowski said Holiday Bowl officials hope to bring a highly ranked team to San Diego to face the WAC champion.

"Wyoming's really playing well. Obviously the way the WAC has been over the years, and especially this year, the bowl is happy with whatever conference champion comes out of the WAC, and the possiblity of having an undefeated team ... the bowl is happy with that," he said.

"I know they're going to try to get the best team they can get. It all depends on who's available," the spokesman said.

Irish reclaim No. 1 status

Five undefeated teams spice Top 20

Associated Press

Notre Dame has reclaimed the top spot in the college football rankings for the first time in seven years. Lou Holtz is wary of the position.

"My motto's always been, first we'll be best, and then we'll be first," the Notre Dame coach said Monday. "Right now I'm not sure we're the best."

The latest AP poll of sports writers and broadcasters put the Fighting Irish on top for the first time since early in the 1981 season.

The Fighting Irish, coming off a sluggish 22-7 victory over Navy, will take the top ranking into Saturday's game against winless Rice.

"Here we are number one and I'm scared to death of a team that hasn't won a game all year," Holtz said. "We can't go the cash window yet and cash our tickets in. I just hope our players don't get all excited about being number one."

THAT POSITION had been held for two weeks by UCLA, which lost to Washington State 34-30 on Saturday and fell to sixth.

Southern Cal, a 41-20 winner over Oregon State, moved from third to second, while Miami, Fla., moved up one place to third. West Virginia and Florida State rounded out the first five.

Notre Dame became the fourth team to be ranked No. 1 this season. Florida State was tops in the preseason poll but lost its opener to Miami 31-0. Miami then became No. 1 for six weeks before losing at Notre Dame 31-30. UCLA then stepped in for its two weeks on top of the college football world.

"It wasn't very good luck for Florida State," Holtz said. "It wasn't good luck for Miami and it wasn't for UCLA. It's nice that it creates an awful lot of interest. But what we have to understand is, we're not defending a number one ranking. What we're doing is fighting for a national championship."

Since the AP poll began in 1936, Notre Dame has won seven national championships, more than any other school. But the Irish haven't won a national championship since 1977 and were last ranked No. 1 after opening the 1981 season and the Gerry Faust era with a 27-9 victory over Louisiana State. Notre Dame lost to Michigan 25-7 the following week and haven't been higher than fourth until beating Miami two weeks ago.

"We're not an indestructible team," said offensive tackle and co-captain Andy Heck. "We could just as easily fold as we go on and have a great season."

AFTER RICE, the Irish face Penn State before ending the season at Southern Cal, setting up a possible meeting between the two top-ranked teams Nov. 26 in Los Angeles. Southern Cal, 7-0, would have to beat California, Arizona State and UCLA.

"It gets tougher now, because we're on top, and people are making stabs at us, trying to knock us off," Notre Dame tailback Mark Green said.

"This team has done an incredible job this year but it's like building a house — it looks good and it hasn't fallen down yet, but it hasn't had a big storm yet, either," Holtz said.

Although the Top Ten teams in this week's poll are the same as last week, there was considerable shuffling.

West Virginia leaped from seventh to fourth by routing Penn State 51-30. The Mountaineers, 8-0 for the first time in their 97-year football history, was as high as No. 4 twice during the 1983 season.

Florida State was idle but rose from sixth to fifth followed by UCLA. Nebraska, which dropped from fifth to seventh, and Oklahoma, Auburn and Wyoming, Nos. 8, 9 and 10 last week.

The Second Ten consists of Arkansas, Oklahoma State, LSU, Michigan, South Carolina, Syracuse, Clemson, Alabama, Georgia and a tie for 20th between Brigham Young and Indiana.

Last week it was Arkansas, Oklahoma State, LSU, Michigan, Clemson, Syracuse, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Oregon.

Walsh calls on QB Young again

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — San Francisco 49ers veteran quarterback Joe Montana said the club may be ready to trade him after Coach Bill Walsh announced that Steve Young would again probably start Sunday's game against Phoenix.

"I can't say, but I think maybe he's trying to get rid of me," Montana said. "For some reason, I think Steve (Young) gets too caught up in the competition with me."

Young's dramatic 49-yard touchdown run on Sunday lifted the 49ers to a 24-21 win over Minnesota. Earlier Monday, Walsh said Young would probably start against the Cardinals.

"We'll make a decision midweek, but it's very likely that Steve will start again," said Walsh, speaking at his weekly media luncheon.

"I just don't believe that Joe (Montana) will be 100 percent ready this next week," explained Walsh. "He may be available — he may suit up and be used in a limited way — but I'm not sure that he's going to be in top form, and we're not going to give him a lot of work on the field this week.

"So I would have to say that Steve will start," Walsh said.

But Montana didn't sound quite as convinced as Walsh that he would not be able to play.

"I would think that I would be ready," Montana said when asked if he could play. The quarterback was held out of Sunday's game after suffering from a sore back.

"I'm going to try and practice Wednesday, and I feel right now I probably could be ready for the weekend."

Montana said that he felt that people were making too big of a deal over his back, elbow and ribs.

"Even back in 1981 when I played with sore ribs and a sore sternum ... and had 11 straight weeks of shots in my elbow, there was no big deal," said Montana. "But now, all of a sudden, a big deal is being made out of it because of the way the whole situation has been handled.

"But I have given up worrying about it."

However, Montana admitted that he is not ready to be relegated to a backup role behind Young.

"I think that anybody who forsees himself as a backup anything has problems to start with," said Montana.

Meanwhile, Walsh said that Young had plenty of help on his touchdown run.

Yankee saga: 'I' word vs. Green

NEW YORK (AP) — George M. Steinbrenner III runs the New York Yankees in a style that matches the numerals at the end the owner's name: "I, I, I."

This view of baseball does not coincide with that of his new manager, Dallas Green.

"I had a slogan in Philadelphia, 'We, not I.'" Green said Monday. "I think that's the way it should be done."

As Green said Monday, "We're gonna have a lot of fun."

George Dallas Green Jr., the 17th manager in the reign of Steinbrenner, was introduced to New York on Monday. He has the reputation of a tough guy and sounded like it.

"I'm coming in here as a new guy because everybody who was supposed to know about these guys didn't get the job done," he said.

Green is the first Yankees manager to join the organization from the outside since Billy Martin came to New York in 1975 for Billy I. And Green has his views on how things should be done.

"I really believe in some disciplines that are really necessary to bring a team together," he said.

Talk like that is what convinced Steinbrenner to bring Green to Yankee Stadium. But Steinbrenner also is not known as a supporter of pluralism. After all, there have been 11 general managers, 17 managers, 30 pitching coaches and nine spokesmen since he purchased the team on Jan. 3, 1973. He banishes all who disagree with his decrees.

"I think the understanding George and I have is that we're men and we're going to talk together as men," Green said. "We recognize there's going to be difficult times along the line."

A difficult time in Yankee Stadium is any period in which the home team is not in first place — comfortably. When the Yankees fall behind, Steinbrenner makes suggestions.

"I'm confident I can handle those kinds of confrontations," Green said. "I think the respect factor — I respect him and, I think, right now he respects me."

Steinbrenner and Green have much in common, from their desire to be in first place to their tempers.

"I don't think George Steinbrenner's worse than anybody else in baseball, and he's better than most of them," Green said. "I want to win today. I want to win tomorrow. I want to win next week and certainly in 1989."

He doesn't believe he's always as tough as his reputation suggests.

"I can be as hard as I have to be," Green said. "I'm not the ogre some people make me out to be. I like to think I'm as compassionate as the next guy."

COLTS

The Colts totaled 244 yards on the ground against the worst rushing defense in the league.

"The offensive line did play a marvelous game," Meyer said. "I think it's noteworthy that for the third game in a row we allowed no sacks. As for Eric, he is just special."

"We could do nothing to stop Dickerson. He was outstanding," said Denver coach Dan Reeves after the two-time defending AFC champions fell to 4-5, the same record Indianapolis has in defense of its AFC Eastern Division title.

The Colts scored on seven of their nine first-half possessions, forced four fumbles, sacked Denver quarterback John Elway three times and didn't let Denver cross midfield until its seventh possession, five minutes into the second quarter.

By then, Indianapolis had its 31-0 lead on Dickerson's four touchdowns and the first of two field goals by Dean Biasucci. The Colts built the margin to 45-10 at halftime, breaking the franchise's record of 42 points in a half and falling only four points short of the NFL mark set by Chicago against Philadelphia in 1941 and matched by Green Bay in 1983 against Tampa Bay.

"Our defense really played well early in the ball game to create the turnovers, and the offense executed to take advantage of those turnovers," Meyer said.

Meyer also used the wishbone formation, with Dickerson, Bentley and George Wonsley lining up as running backs behind backup quarterback Gary Hogeboom, for the second consecutive week. Hogeboom, who replaced starter Chris Chandler whenever the Colts went to the wishbone, threw a 53-yard touchdown pass to Bill Brooks in the second quarter.

"The offensive mix was good, the combination of Chandler and Hogeboom in the game and the use of the wishbone," Meyer said.

"It gives the defense a different look," Dickerson said of the formation which has had little use in the NFL. "I know it confused Denver. They didn't know who was going to get the ball."

Dickerson, seeking a fourth NFL rushing title in six years, raised his season total to 1,038 yards, joining Franco Harris and Walter Payton for the most consecutive 1,000-yard seasons with his 50th regular-season 100-yard game. The first back to run for 1,000 yards in his first six years in the NFL boosted his career-rushing total to 9,294 — the eighth highest in league history and just 113 yards short of No. 7 Earl Campbell.

Dickerson broke the Colts' record of three rushing touchdowns in a game he shared with Alan Ameche, Lenny Moore, Tom Matte, Don McCauley and Randy McMillan.

His first touchdown came on a 12-yard run early in the first quarter.

Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan ...Wheaties lands another star

Jordan slam dunks on breakfast table

CHICAGO (AP) — Soon you'll be able to gaze at Chicago Bulls star Michael Jordan at your breakfast table.

General Mills Inc. announced Monday that Jordan will be pictured on the front of packages of Wheaties, a breakfast cereal marketed as "The Breakfast of Champions."

Jim Nuckols, a General Mills product manager, called Jordan "a man of real character and integrity," fitting for the positive image the product tries to promote.

"He truly is a champion in every sense of the word," Nuckols said at a news conference.

"I'm very happy to be part of the Wheaties organization," said Jordan, clad in his No. 23 Bulls jersey and black sweat pants. "A lot of people would love to be in my shoes."

While Jordan said Monday's honor was "up there" with being chosen as pro basketball's Most Valuable Player last season, he admitted that as a child he hadn't even heard of the cereal.

"We had a big family," said the 25-year-old North Carolina native. "We used to eat wheat puffs — remember those in the big bags that could last ... through five or six kids? That's what we had."

Terms of the Wheaties agreement were not disclosed by Jordan or General Mills. But they did disclose that Jordan's picture would be printed on at least 12 million boxes of the cereal.

On the back of a series of Wheaties boxes will be installments of "The Michael Jordan Story," tracing his roots from an awkward child to the MVP award last year.

Others who have contracted with Minneapolis-based General Mills for the Wheaties limelight, beginning in 1956, include pole vaulter Bob Richards, decathlon star Bruce Jenner, gymnast Mary Lou Retton, baseball player Pete Rose, football's Walter Payton and tennis star Chris Evert.

While "a dozen or two" athletes have been pictured on the front of Wheaties boxes over the years, Jordan is only one of seven "celebrity athletes" to get the honor through major deals with the company, said Kathryn Newman, public relations supervisor for General Mills.

LA Dodgers sew up Valenzuela, Howell

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers on Monday agreed to terms of a one-year contract with left-handed pitcher Fernando Valenzuela and a three-year deal with right-handed reliever Jay Howell.

Financial terms were not disclosed.

The World Series champions still have seven players eligible for free agency.

Valenzuela has been a Dodger mainstay since his phenomenal rookie season of 1981, which he capped by becoming the first player to win both the Cy Young and Rookie of the Year awards in the same season.

But he he stretched the anterior capsule in his left shoulder on July 31 and was put on the 21-day disabled list. That forced him to miss his turn in the rotation after making 255 consecutive starts dating to opening day of 1981.

"We are confident that Fernando will return to the form that established him as one of the outstanding pitchers in baseball," said Fred Claire, the Dodgers' executive vice president for player personnel.

"We are encouraged by the dedication Fernando displayed when he worked to recover from his shoulder injury."

Valenzuela, who turns 28 Tuesday, was activated Sept. 26 and made two appearances. He earned a save against the San Francisco Giants on Oct. 1, only the second of his career. The other was against San Diego on Sept. 27, 1980.

Valenzuela was 5-8 in 1988 and had the highest ERA of his career, 4.24. He is 118-90 in his career.

Howell's contract calls for two years with an option on the 1991 season.

He led the Dodgers with 21 saves and had a career-best 2.08 ERA in his first season with Los Angeles. He and shortstop Alfredo Griffin were traded from the Oakland Athletics to the Dodgers last Dec. 11 for pitchers Bob Welch, Matt Young and Jack Savage.

Manning holding out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Danny Manning says he will continue to hold out until he gets a contract from the Los Angeles Clippers that pays the full amount up front.

The NBA's No. 1 draft pick, who last week rejected a 5-year, $10 million contract, said Monday night in an interview with KNBC-TV that he remains unhappy that the Clippers want to defer 30 percent of each year's salary.

That would make the cash value of the contract a little more than $1 million a year, Manning said from Cincinnati.

"And right now that's not the going rate and that's not what the previous No. 1 pick's gotten in deferred money. They've all received cash deals," Manning said.

"A lot of times in the past the Clippers have had players who had money deferred, and the players have had some trouble in getting their money," Manning said. "I don't want to run into those problems. I'd just like my money up front."

Clippers officials could not be reached for comment.

Manning, whose agent is Ron Grinker of Cincinnati, said the amount of deferred money was supposed to be negotiable, "but they told us they want to leave it at 30 percent, which is the maximum amount of money you can defer."

If the Clippers won't budge, "I'll just have to sit and hold out," Manning said.

Leading indicators off in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that its main forecasting gauage of future economic activity edged down 0.1 percent in September, its second decline in the last three months.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators rose 0.5 percent in August and 1.5 percent in June but fell 0.7 percent in July.

Economists believe this rollercoaster performance is a signal that the economy, which was expanding at a robust pace in the first six months of 1988, is slowing down.

Indeed, overall economic growth as measured by the gross national product dropped to an annual rate of 2.2 percent from July through September and many analysts believe that this modest pace will continue in the current quarter and for most of next year.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., said that the leading index was signalling a welcome slowdown, which would give the economy breathing room and lower inflationary pressures built up by heavy demand and tight labor markets.

The 0.1 percent decline in the leading index was a bit weaker than expected. Many private forecasters were calling for a 0.2 percent rise. The August index, however, was revised upward to show a 0.5 percent gain instead of the originally reported 0.4 percent increase.

The index, by focusing on forward-pointing business statistics, is designed to foretell economic activity six to nine months into the future.

Many economists, who had at one time been fearful that the next president would face a recession in his first year in office, have revised that view and now believe the next downturn will not come until 1990.

But the leading index is signalling slower growth. For the last 12 months, it has risen just 0.7 percent, compared to an increase of 6.7 percent in the previous 12-month period.

For October, the biggest factor holding the index back was a drop in plant and equipment orders, followed by a fall in building permits. Other factors depressing the index were a decline in raw materials prices and slower growth in the money supply. Falling prices are viewed negatively as a sign of lower demand.

In all, five of the available nine indicators made positive contributions. The biggest positive force came from an increase in the average workweek. Other positive factors were a fall in initial unemployment claims, a rise in stock prices, a slowdown in filling orders and a rise in orders for consumer goods.

The various changes left the index at 193.3 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he is predicting GNP growth of just 2 percent next year, reflecting a slowdown of the export boom which accounted for half of this year's growth.

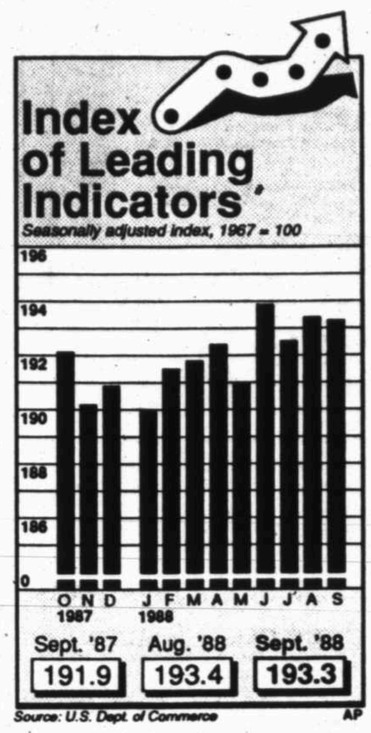

"The export boom is clearly gone, capital spending has tailed off and consumers haven't been too eager to spend either," said Evans. "That is basically the whole economy."

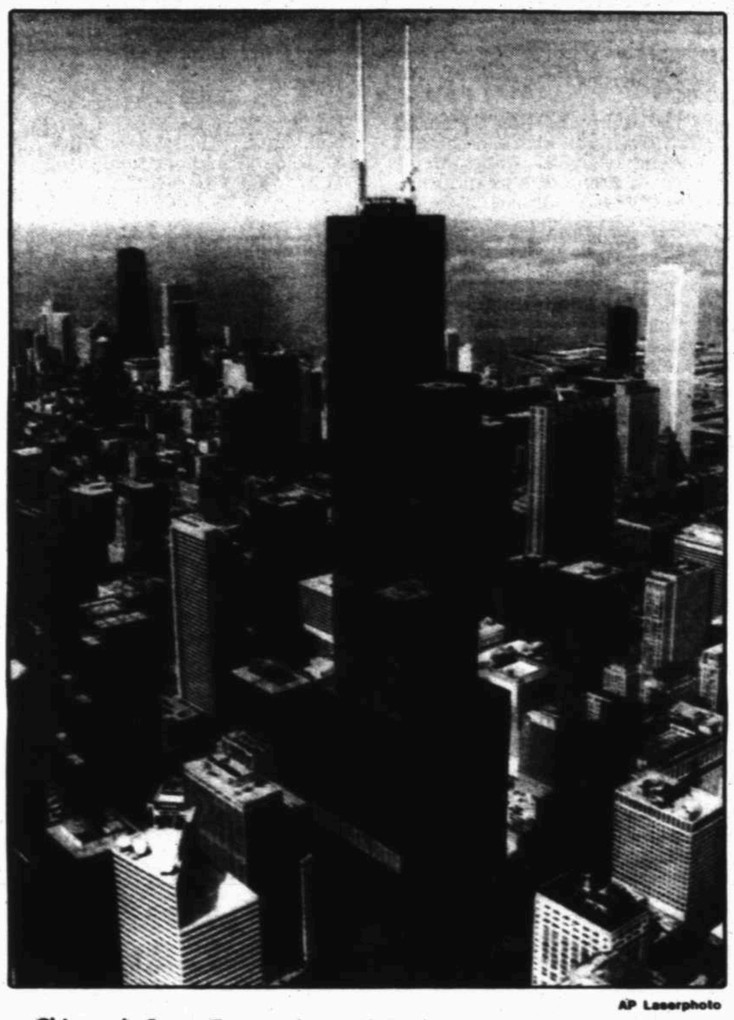

But Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, said in a speech last week that there was no reason for a recession to occur anytime soon.

"Recessions don't just happen. They are caused by policy mistakes," he said.

If a recession does occur next year, many analysts are fearful that it will be triggered by the Federal Reserve pushing interest rates too high in an effort to dampen inflationary pressures.

Fed policymakers were meeting behind closed doors today, but analysts did not expect the session to result in any dramatic changes.

Wall Street greets Sears moves warily

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co., the nation's largest retailer, is selling the world's largest building and a real estate unit, shuffling jobs and buying its stock in a move seen by some as a defense against a possible takeover.

Edward A. Brennan, chairman of the 102-year-old company, said the plan is designed to enhance stock value and put its resources on consumer-oriented businesses — retailing, insurance, real estate and financial services.

Brennan said the timing of the announcement may have been affected by the recent wave of takeovers.

"Sears has not been untouched by the rumor and speculation that thrives in these conditions," he said.

"But make no mistake," he added, "this strategy is not solely a reaction to that environment."

The announcement was greeted warily on Wall Street, as Sears stock slid $1.875 Monday to close at $41.75 on the New York Stock Exchange.

"The market's perception seems to be that they labored mightily and brought forth a mouse," William N. Smith, a retail analyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., told The New York Times.

Sears had been expected to take some action to improve the value of its stock after announcing last week that third-quarter profits fell 16 percent — the third consecutive period Sears' income has declined.

Net income for the quarter was $344.2 million, or 90 cents per share, for the three months that ended Sept. 30, compared with $409 million, or $1.08 a share, for third-quarter 1987.

"This makes a takeover more difficult in the near term. It doesn't make it impossible," said Monroe Greenstein, an analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co. "This will satisfy the pressure (on Sears) for the short term."

The Sears Tower, a stunning black skyscraper that rises 110 stories — 1,450 feet — from the downtown Loop business district, was built in 1974 and has been valued at $1.8 billion.

Besides selling the building, Sears said it would:

— Buy back 10 percent of its stock.

— Sell the commercial real estate division of its Coldwell Banker Real Estate Group, a move that analyst Walter F. Loeb of Morgan Stanley & Co. said would raise $500 million.

— Continue to trim jobs from retail support activities like stockrooms and distribution centers and add people to the sales force. "Overall, there will be job reductions," said Brennan.

— Adopt "everyday low pricing" at its 825 retail stores, instead of sales.

— Take a one-time, after-tax charge of $425 million in the fourth quarter to cover expenses for new merchandise assortments, liquidation of old merchandise and other organizational changes.

"In terms of merchandising, they did what they had to do — go head-to-head with the K marts and other companies who have taken market share from them," Greenstein said.

$1.3 billion facility planned for Port Lavaca

PORT LAVACA, Texas (AP) — Formosa Plastics Group will make the largest one-time investment by a petrochemical manufacturer in the state when it begins construction of a $1.3 billion facility next year, officials said.

The Taiwan-based company already has a plant at nearby Point Comfort that employs 166 workers, but announced Monday that groundbreaking for a new expanded facility is expected to begin early next year.

Formosa will provide up to 4,000 jobs during its three-year construction phase and will employ up to 1,700 new workers with an annual payroll of $85 million, Formosa Chairman Y.C. Wang said.

Wang praised Gov. Bill Clements and Sen. Phil Gramm for leading an effort that helped him decide to locate the new facility on the Texas Gulf Coast.

The unemployment rate in Calhoun County once was 26 percent, but has dropped to about 10 percent and officials hope that by this time next year that rate to be cut in half.

"Their support moved me a great deal and I am extremely grateful," Wang said through an interpreter Monday. "There were many other states that would like to have the project in their state and we had deep consideration (of their proposals), but we were moved by the sincerity of your people.

"I feel very happy and at the same time I am very, very scared. I must excert every effort in order that you won't be disappointed," Wang said.

Clements said the new Formosa plant would be the largest one-time investment by a petrochemical manufacturer in the state's history and thanked Wang for his decision.

Economists predict higher gasoline taxes

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The cost of filling your car's gas tank will probably not go down despite the fact that oil prices in coming months could fall lower than the recent $13-$14 a barrel, according to industry economists.

Expected increases in the federal gasoline tax and other tariffs aimed at reducing the federal budget deficit can be blamed for the pump prices, said economists in Houston for the 10th annual North American meeting of the International Association for Energy Economics.

Cyrus H. Tahmassebi, chief economist for Ashland Oil Inc., said the National Economic Commission is expected to recommend a "revenue enhancement" program that will include a higher gasoline tax. The commission could propose a hike of as much as 50 cents a gallon, phased in by increments of 10 cents to 15 cents, he said.

Although Vice President George Bush has maintained a "no new taxes" campaign pledge, Tahmassebi believes that as president Bush would accept the recommendation of the bipartisan commission, especially since each penny of gasoline taxes generates $1 billion in revenues.

Jack W. Wilkinson, chief economist for Sun Co., also anticipates higher gasoline taxes, but only 5 cents to 10 cents a gallon. "No way it's going to be 50 cents," he said.

Governments of other countries are also likely to increase consumption taxes if oil prices fall too low, said Akin Iwayemi, an economist on the staff of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Secretariat in Vienna.

"Major consuming countries will not welcome a crash in prices," he said, contending that low prices that stimulate higher demand and negate efforts toward energy conservation, alternate fuels, and diversification of energy supplies.

OPEC Secretary-General Subroto also recently said a drop in oil prices below a certain level would lead to new taxes in consuming countries.

FDIC ready to help thrifts, but not with money

HONOLULU (AP) — The chairman of the fund insuring commercial bank deposits says he's ready to help the comparable fund for savings institutions — provided there's no request for money involved.

"The FDIC would like to help you in any way we can — within limits, of course," Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman told delegates to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions' 96th annual convention.

In remarks to reporters after his speech on Monday, Seidman said, "I strongly oppose the banks having to pay for the problems of the thrift industry" and that banks prefer "to go it alone" with their own insurance fund.

However, he did not rule out merging the two regulatory systems, provided insurance costs were kept separate. He said the FDIC could help thrifts by providing use of its credit.

At midyear, 497 of the 3,096 U.S. savings associations were insolvent, while another 408 were losing money. Regulators estimate it will cost $45 billion to $50 billion to clean up the mess, and the S&Ls say they can't pay for the cleanup without help from Congress.

In contrast, Seidman said the FDIC fund, although it will suffer its first loss ever, is sound. It had $16.3 billion at the end of September and should shrink to between $15 billion and $16 billion by years's end, before growing by about $500 million next year, he said.

Seidman said bank failures should decline from a post-Depression record topping 200 this year to between 175 and 200 next year. There are no more "megabank failures on the horizon" next year, he said.

Theo H. Pitt Jr., chairman of Pioneer Savings Bank in Rocky Mount, N.C., and outgoing chairman of the S&L industry's trade group, said the organization will fight next year to preserve a separate regulatory system, arguing that it is crucial to the American home buyer.

Seidman said Americans appear to want a separate S&L system and government probably will preserve one, but, he said, "I don't think the world would necessarily come to an end if there were no thrifts."

Pitt, opening the first day of a four-day convention, said bungled deregulation by the Reagan administration bankrupted the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

"We've had our troubles, but you know how we got there: as a result of ill-timed, poorly executed, ill-conceived deregulation," Pitt said.

"The regulators let some real sharpies slip into the system, high fliers who looked upon their institutions as personal piggy banks to serve their own irresponsible, sometimes criminal ends," he said.

Pitt said the industry has spent $4.5 billion in extra payments to its insurance fund, can spend no more than an additional $3 billion, and should not be forced to contribute more because the crisis was not of its making.

MARKETS

Oil prices lower in early trading

Crude oil prices opened 13 cents lower today, after drifting lower Monday, when contracts for unleaded gasoline rebounded slightly after plunging more 4 cents a gallon at one point mainly on technical factors.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the December contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark crude, fell 27 cents a barrel to settle at $13.58, after rising 17 cents on Friday. Other contract months also declined.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, the November contract for wholesale home-heating oil, which rose 0.29 cent a gallon on Friday, settled at 42.62 cents, down 0.71 cent.

The most volatile trading came in wholesale unleaded gasoline, where the November contract plunged about 4.25 cents a gallon before settling at 50.24 cents a gallon, down 1.52 cents.

Peter Beutel, an energy analyst with Elders Futures Inc., said that in the absence of any market-moving news, technical factors dominated trading. He attributed the volatility in gasoline trading to the fact that the November contract was set to expire Monday.

"Trading was very thin. Everyone is just trying to see what OPEC will do next," Beutel said.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is scheduled to meet in Vienna on Nov. 17 to discuss curbing production to prop up sagging oil prices.

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most European currencies today following reports of continued intervention by the Japanese central bank. Gold prices were lower.

Foreign exchange dealers said early European dollar-buying helped boost the U.S. currency following dollar purchases by the Bank of Japan in Tokyo earlier today.

The Japanese bank and the U.S. Federal Reserve intervened Monday to help increase the currency's value, dealers said. U.S. dealers said the Federal Reserve appeared to be saying it will not let the currency fall below recent levels.

European dealers said overall trading was light because of holidays in many European countries, including Italy.

In London, the dollar gained against the British pound. It cost $1.7675 to buy one pound, cheaper than $1.7678 late Monday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Monday:

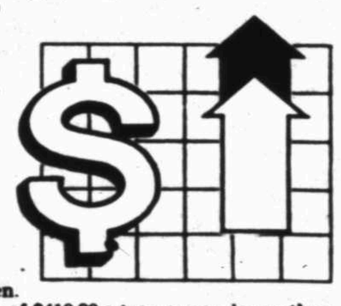

—1.7868 West German marks, up from 1.7810

—1.5042 Swiss francs, up from 1.4995

—6.1010 French francs, up from 6.0800

—2.0158 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0000

—1.2205 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2204

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.30 Japanese yen to a closing 125.30 yen today. Later, in London, it rose slightly to 125.50 yen.

Gold opened in London at bid price of $410.80 a troy ounce, lower than its late bid price of $411.25 Monday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $411.00.

In Zurich, gold was lower at a bid $411.25, compared with $412.25 bid late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 57 cents to close at a bid $413.89.

Stocks drift lower in dull trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted to a mostly lower finish Monday in dull trading, as Wall Street recovered from last week's takeover frenzy and waited for new developments.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.24 points to 2,148.65. The blue-chip indicator remained slightly lower through most of the trading session.

Declining issues edged out advances by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 835 issues down, 626 up and 496 unchanged.

Stocks came under some pressure from an early decline in the dollar, but mostly just slipped under their own weight, analysts said.

"There's nothing around to stimulate it," said Larry Wachtel, an analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "There's all kinds of incentives to sit around on one's rear end and await developments."

Many participants were said to be sidelined, awaiting Tuesday's meeting of the Federal Reserve's policymaking arm and U.S. unemployment figures for October, scheduled for release on Friday. The fast-approaching presidential election also has dampened activity.

Stock prices got a brief boost in the afternoon from a rebound in the dollar, market watchers said. The Fed came into the foreign-exchange market at least twice Monday to bolster the dollar by buying the U.S. currency and selling Japanese yen, according to exchange dealers.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE totaled 143.46 million shares, down slightly from 146.30 million in last Friday's session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 170.60 million shares.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Permian constructs North Dakota pipeline

Permian Operating Limited Partnership has started construction on its 13-mile six inch North Dakota Battleview pipeline from the Dolphin field in Divide County to Amoco's pipeline in Burke County. The pipeline will handle initial volumes of 2,500 to 3,000 barrels per day.

Washington utilities vote on settlement

SEATTLE (AP) — Fourteen public utilities across Washington state have voted to approve a $226 million settlement that would let them out of the giant Washington Public Power Supply System securities fraud trial.

The complex agreement announced Monday involves utilities, the state of Washington and the federal Bonneville Power Administration.

The trail stems from WPPSS' default on a $2.25 billion bond issue used to finance two nuclear power plants that never were finished.

The pact leaves Snohomish County Public Utility District the only utility remaining as a defendant in the trial, although Snohomish has the option to settle until Nov. 10.

Phillip Morris won't change Kraft

NEW YORK (AP) — Industry analysts say they expect Philip Morris Cos. Inc., to make few changes in the food company it is buying for $13.1 billion.

The tobacco company's intense, two-week takeover battle for Kraft Inc. apparently ended Sunday when Kraft said it would recommend that shareholders accept Philip Morris' sweetened offer of $106 a share.

The acquisition would fulfill Philip Morris' goal of reducing its dependence on revenue from its slowing cigarette business.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Gaines find pumps 364 barrels

From Staff Reports

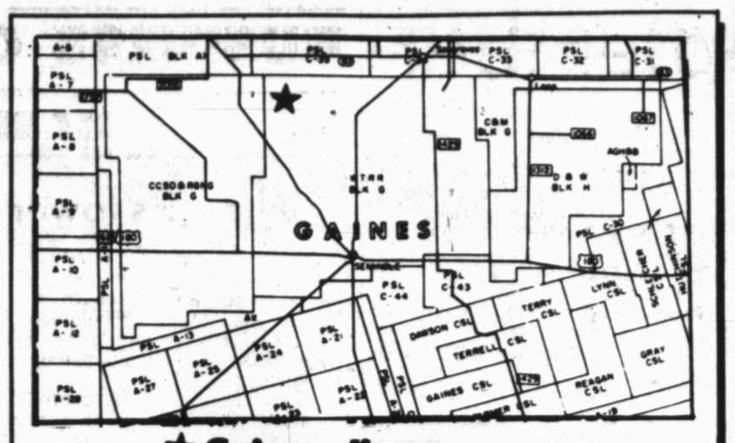

An undesignated discovery — probably Devonian — has been completed in Gaines County, west of the ODC North field.

PAGE ENERGY, Eldorado, potentialed the No. 1-273 ODC to pump 364 barrels of 32.1 gravity crude and no water from perforations 12,469 to 12,481 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 182:1.

Permitted as a 12,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 12,481 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,450 ft.

The well topped the Spraberry at 7,941 ft., Mississippian at 11,749 and Devonian at 12,450 ft. on ground elevation of 3,469 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 273, Block G, WTRR survey, 10 miles southwest of Seagraves.

Exxon tests 163 barrel Cherry Canyon well

EXXON CORP., Midland, has added new production to the Dimmitt (Cherry Canyon) field of Loving County.

On potential test, the No. 7 Santa Fe Andover flowed 163 barrels of 37 gravity crude, 436 Mcfd and 431 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 220 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,428 to 6,645 ft., which had been acidized with 1,650 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 36,000 gallons of gel and 72,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 2,675:1.

The well was drilled to 6,822 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,817 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,041 ft., include the Rustler at 595 ft., Salado at 973, Bell Canyon at 4,910, and Cherry Canyon Marker at 6,094 ft. Pay was topped at 6,428 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 12, Block 53, T-2, T&P survey, 12.5 miles northeast of Mentone.

Ninth producer added to Tom Green field

The ninth Strawn producer has been added to the Schniers field of Tom Green County, extending the pay a quarter-mile north.

FORTUNE PRODUCTION CO., San Angelo, finaled the No. 1 Strube-Wilde Unit to flow 41.7 barrels of 36 gravity crude and 25 barrels of water on a 10/64 inch choke from perforations 4,732 to 4,733 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 863:1.

Drilled to 4,900 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 4,842 ft.

Location is 3,798 ft. from south and 900 ft. from east lines of Section 69, Block 11, SPRR survey, a half-mile north of Wall.

Recompletion yields Upton pay extension

A recompletion effort in Upton County has yielded a new Strawn producer in the Amacker-Tippett field, extending the pay a mile southsoutheast.

TERRA RESOURCES INC., Midland, reentered and tested the No. 2 Halff Estate to flow 44 barrels of 46 gravity crude and no water on an 8/64 inch choke. Production was from perforations 9,677 to 9,701 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 12,364:1.

Drilled to 11,703 ft., the well was plugged back to 10,650 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,702 ft.

Location is 2,120 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 20, Block Y, GC&SF survey, 12 miles northwest of Rankin.

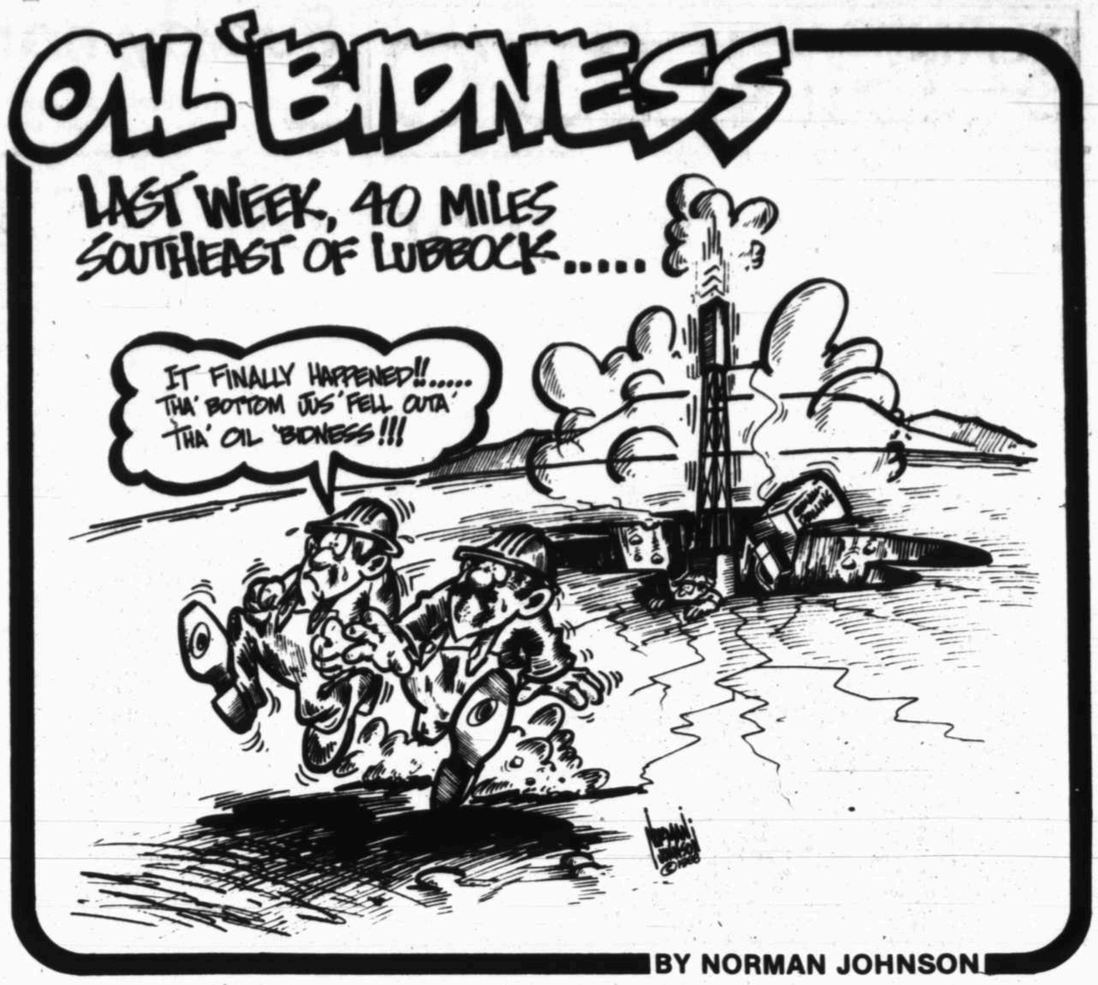

Winkler County gains three gas producers

New gas production has been added to three fields in Winkler County by three different operators.

In the Apollo (Atoka) field, BHP PETROLEUM CO. INC., Midland, tested the No. 2 Wink Airport for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.5 Mmcfd from perforations 12,946 to 13,020 ft. Condensate gravity was 52.7 API and gas-liquid ratio was 178,940:1.

HILLIN-SIMON OIL CO., Midland, reentered the former Pan American Petroleum Corp. No. 2 Brown-Altman "A", plugged in 1969, and completed it in the Kermit (Yates) field. Now the No. 1 Amoco "5", the well was finaled for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.8 Mmcfd from perforations 2,534 to 2,753 ft.

ARCO OIL & GAS CO., Midland, completed the No. 3 Wolfe Unit for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.13 Mmcfd from perforations 16,198 to 16,409 ft. The completion report originally had the completion in the Morrow formation.

"He is the private entrepreneur that we all talk about," Clements said.

Clements, Gramm, state and area officials said the economic impact could include 7,800 indirect jobs, $2.3 million annual increase in personal income and another $1.1 billion annual increase in the State Gross Product.

"This means more jobs, more growth, more opportunity for our people. This is the beginning of a development of a new major industry in Texas and America," Gramm said. "This is a good, red-letter day for the state of Texas."

Gramm said 70 percent of the plastics products will be sent overseas, but the remaining 30 percent will be available to process in the United States and could develop to as many as 100,000 new jobs in the United States.

"If you want to set it in a context of things that we've all heard about ... it's roughly equivalent to terms of the economic impact to a new Homeport in Corpus Christi," Gramm said.

"If we go through the full vertical integration, this will become the largest, private industry in Texas and will be roughly equal in terms of economic impact of getting the new superconducting supercollider. So we are talking about a megaeconomic event," Gramm said.

Texas officials offered tax incentives, help with infrastructure and road construction and aid in deepening the Gulf Coast channel so products could be shipped out more easily.

The Formosa facility will include eight major plants that will be spread over 600 acres of a 1,500-acre tract and will include an electric plant using gas-fueled turbines.

Survey names LA as best real estate market

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey of real estate investment prospects in major cities says there are fewer "best" markets this year, although Los Angeles, Washington and Boston remain the most favorable.

It said the worst real estate markets are Houston, Denver and Dallas.

The report released Monday said New York was dropped from the list of "most bullish" property markets because it is "just too expensive" to live there.

Even Washington and Boston, while remaining on the list of top prospects, were said to face possible future problems due to their fast-rising housing costs.

"Fewer and fewer people can afford to live in or near those centers, and that will take its toll on economic expansion," the report said.

But Real Estate Research Corp. said that despite its current problems, New York is "a premier market that will return to favor as its inherent strengths prevail."

The company said its survey was based on interviews with 90 real estate investors, lenders and developers around the country.

It said there are fewer "best" markets than in the past and that "no city or region offers good prospects across the board."

Los Angeles was called a prime investment prospect despite regulatory barriers.

"LA's pluses — economic diversity, job growth, climate, quality of life, and Pacific Rim access — outweigh traffic congestion, smog, ridiculously high housing prices, and regulatory hurdles," said the report, "Emerging Trends in Real Estate, 1989."

Growth restriction, it says, "is one of the things that attracts investors to California and to the other top-ranked areas. Developers complain, often bitterly, of the hassles, expense and risk, but they are increasingly resigned to them and willing to accept the responsibilities in return for unsurpass development opportunities, less competition, and upside profits."

The report put Houston, Denver and Dallas under "places to be avoided." Also included in this category were Austin, San Antonio, New Orleans and Tulsa.

Amoco investigating fire that killed two workers

WHITING, Ind. (AP) — Two workers severely burned in a refinery fire remained in critical condition Monday while Amoco Oil Co. began an investigation into the explosion that injured the workers and killed two others.

Company spokeswoman Elise Sims refused comment about the course of the investigation or the possible cause of Sunday's accident. She said results would not be available "for quite some time."

Charles R. Mason, an Amoco spokesman, said the company would begin interviewing workers Monday in a search for the cause.

Leo Gonzalez, 40, of East Chicago was hospitalized at Loyola Medical Center in Maywood, Ill., with third-degree burns over 65 percent of his body. Robert Zivich, 44, of Dyer was hospitalized at University of Chicago Hospital with third-degree burns over 30 percent to 40 percent of his body.

The explosion at the No. 3 oxydizer unit, which makes industrial asphalt for paving and roofing, instantly killed Michael Zimmerman, 44, of Hammond, a 17-year veteran of the refinery, authorities said. George Kusbel, 37, of Whiting, a shift supervisor with 14 years' experience, died of burns at University of Chicago Hospital six hours after the 2 p.m. accident.

There were no other injuries.

Hospital emergency room workers had to cut through hardened asphalt up to a half-inch thick on the victims' bodies.

The deaths equaled the number killed in a massive explosion and fire in 1955 that injured 35 people and destroyed 70 storage tanks and 200 homes.

The explosion was the third this year at the refinery. On April 16, an explosion and small fire in a processing unit injured 16 workers. Two men were hurt Oct. 6 in a fire and explosion at a refinery unit where chemicals are added to jet fuel.

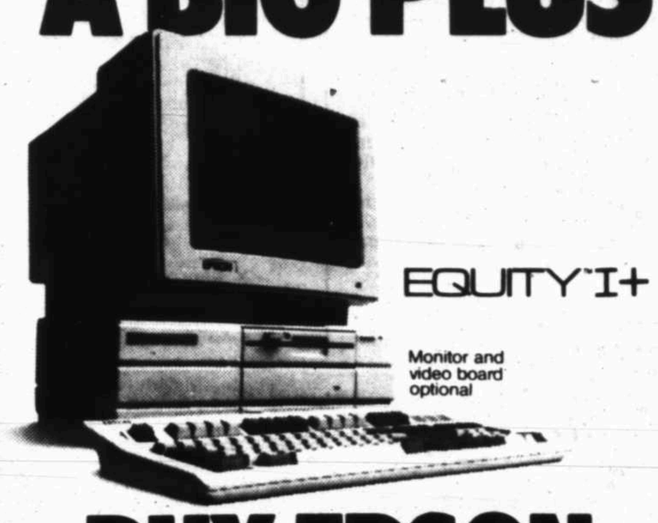

A December 1984 fire destroyed two bulk storage tanks and forced the evacuation of about 100 people.

Texas oilmen don't expect much from Bush or Dukakis

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Texas oilmen and energy experts say they don't expect much from either presidential candidate in the way of dollars-and-cents help for the energy industry. Both George Bush and Michael Dukakis have made plenty of stops in Texas this campaign season, peddling energy platforms they promise will put the state's wildcatters, roustabouts and mudloggers back to work again.

Tax incentives in the form of credits and temporary tax holidays for small- and medium-sized independents are at the core of both energy platforms.

But with oil prices floundering, most of the little drillers don't make enough from the oil business to owe Uncle Sam any taxes anyway, and those tax incentives probably won't provide the kind of bait needed to lure more money into new wells.

Bush's tax package would inject more money into the ailing oil and gas industry than Dukakis' — three to four times as much, according to one energy tax consultant.

Less than one-third of the independents, whom the candidates want to help, pay any tax today because they're not making any money. This means they don't get much from tax incentive programs.

The candidates don't rank oil patch problems high on their lists of priorities, several local people in the oil business complained, pointing to the lack of national air time they have devoted to energy issues.

Bush appears to be the favorite of most local energy people. But even his supporters say they're not expecting miracles. He will get their votes mainly because he has a probusiness philosophy, and, as a former oilman who began his career in the West Texas oil fields in the 1950s, he at least can sympathize with their plight.

They don't share the same tie to Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis, whose home state has gotten a boost from cheap oil from Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Dukakis' opposition to offshore drilling in environmentally sensitive areas like California and Alaska has made him an outright villain in the eyes of some whose livelihoods depend on the offshore market.

Bush favors most offshore drilling — especially in Alaska — although he has hedged on the California coast in an attempt to placate environmentally sensitive Californians.

While the candidates' surrogates find plenty to argue about, most of their proposals ring remarkably similar. Both oppose an oil import fee – although Dukakis' running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, has been a longtime advocate such a fee. Both believe natural gas should be the growth fuel of the future and want to break down regulatory barriers.

Both favor development of clean coal technology, and agree that the country needs a larger Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the federally mandated oil pool the United States socks away for emergencies.

About all the candidates disagree strongly about are offshore drilling and nuclear power.

The real meat of their programs, however, are the tax incentives for independent oil and gas producers, who traditionally drill the lion's share of wildcat wells in the United States and have been clobbered the worst by falling oil prices.

Bush's package of tax incentives probably could inject about $1.1 billion a year into the oil and gas industry, one tax consultant estimated. That compares with about $300 million for Dukakis' programs.

Bush's plan includes a tax credit on production from new exploratory drilling, a tax holiday for owners of "stripper" wells who can't make enough from the low-volume wells to justify operating them, and a more favorable tax treatment on intangible drilling costs for independents who pay alternative minimum tax.

The biggest boost, about $500 million a year, would come from a repeal of the "transfer rule" that prohibits independents from getting the benefit of a percentage depletion allowance on properties they buy from majors, who are not eligible for that benefit.

The cornerstone of Dukakis' tax incentive plan is a three-year moritorium on taxes on production from new exploratory wells, a measure expected to yield about $200 million, the tax expert estimated.

Dukakis' three-year moritorium won't help much during most of the first and second years, because producers already can offset most earnings by writing off drilling costs. The real benefit would be enjoyed only in the third year.

On a gas well that costs $1 million to drill, he estimated, the most a producer would save in taxes is about $100,000 -- if the driller makes enough to pay taxes.

Likewise, Bush's offer of a 10 percent tax credit for oil and gas exploration up to the first $10 million and 5 percent thereafter could be helpful only to producers who earn enough from older wells to run up a tax bill.

Ashland's Tahmassebi expects the upcoming OPEC ministerial meeting to result in a new production agreement that includes Iraq, absent from the negotiations for more than two years. Even with a total OPEC production ceiling at a level higher than present output, oil prices could rise to $15-$16 a barrel, he said.

The higher price would not last long, he predicted, because output would continue to exceed demand. "In addition, we see a good chance for a recession in the United States in the second half of 1989," he said.

Tahmassebi noted that while U.S. oil reserves are declining, total world reserves continue to grow. Increases in supply, fuel substitution – especially natural gas – and probable consumption taxes will hold prices down through the end of the century. He said the price could hold between $10 and $15 a barrel until the year 2000.

William H. Brown III, an analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co., said OPEC's recent production rates of up to 21 million barrels a day will result in "sloppy" prices over the next few months and add more than normal pressure during the first quarter of 1989.

The organization could attain its stated target price of $18, Brown said, by cutting first quarter output to less than 16 million barrels a day, though he does not believe a reduction of that magnitude is feasible because of most OPEC nations' revenue requirements.

However, H. Joe Selby, former director of regulatory affairs in the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, which oversees some of the most troubled savings institutions in the country, disputed Pitt's account.

"My God, the thrift industry has fought and fought and fought regulation," Selby said in an interview. "They want to have their cake and eat it both."

Selby, who now operates a consulting firm in Dallas, The Insignia Company, said, "They wanted deregulation. They got deregulation. They didn't want supervised deregulation, and they didn't get supervised deregulation."

Pitt, outlining a part of the trade group's legislative strategy for next year, said the industry will push for regulatory reform as part of a package providing new money to the FSLIC.

Among the reforms he mentioned were: tighter restrictions on S&L investments in junk bonds and in commercial real estate projects, limits on the availability of high-priced brokered deposits, greater power for regulators to block the creation of new S&Ls or the transfer of ownership of existing institutions, and limits on growth tied to the amount of capital an institution can raise from private investors.

Construction spending up in September

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending climbed 0.6 percent in September as strength in housing and government building projects offset a decline in office construction, the Commerce Department said today.

Building activity rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $403.4 billion last month following a 0.2 percent decline in August. Construction activity had risen 1.5 percent in July.

Even with the latest increase, construction activity has been modest for the year, advancing by only 0.7 percent compared to the first nine months in 1987. Overbuilding of apartments and offices in earlier years has depressed activity in 1988.

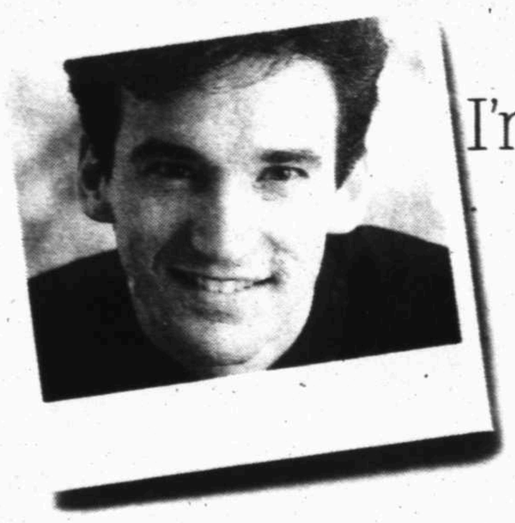

For September, residential construction rose 0.7 percent to a seasonally adjusted $195.3 billion, reflecting a 1.1 percent increase in construction of single-family homes and a 0.9 percent increase in construction of multi-family units.

Non-residential construction fell by 0.5 percent during the month, dropping to an annual rate of $91.7 billion. While factory construction was up 0.8 percent, this was offset by a 2.8 percent drop in construction of office buildings.

When it comes to money, I'm like most people. I always want to make more. For years, I switched banks looking for the best rates. But just as I got a good one, I read about another that's even higher. Finally, I've found something that works for me. Now they pay me 7½% on my savings, and I don't need a big balance to get it. And they even give me free checking and a discount on my car loan. Even though another bank's rate may look a little higher, I know I'm money ahead.

JFK's legend echos in closing days

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Republican as well as Democratic accents, the name and the policies of John F. Kennedy are echoing in the waning days of the campaign for the White House.

And to hear the Republican ticket tell it, Democrat Michael Dukakis is no Jack Kennedy.

George Bush claims that on such issues as taxes and defense, he has more in common with JFK than Dukakis does.

Dukakis has been invoking the Kennedy political legacy all campaign long.

On Sunday, after shrinking from the liberal label all season, Dukakis declared that he is one, and said Kennedy was, too.

"Yes, I am a liberal in the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman and John Kennedy," the Massachusetts governor said.

That's not the Kennedy legacy Bush cites. "How much the national Democratic Party has changed since the days of John Kennedy," Bush said. "How far it has moved from those policies of lower taxes and a stronger defense."

A Dukakis campaign commercial recalls the narrow 1960 victory that put Kennedy in the White House. "My friends, they won that election by a margin of 112,000 votes out of nearly 70 million cast," he says. "And remember what a difference John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson made in the lives of millions and millions of people."

The Kennedy issue first was unleashed by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee and unlikely enforcer of claims on the JFK legacy.

In debate with Sen. Dan Quayle, Bush's running mate, Bentsen dismissed his rival's claim to congressional experience matching Kennedy's with a stinging: "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

Kennedy's brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, was gentler and kinder to Quayle. Kennedy said that while they disagree on issues, he thinks the Indiana senator was treated unfairly in news accounts that questioned his record and abilities.

Quayle used Bentsen's belittling line Monday to dispute Dukakis' claim to the venerable liberal tradition of Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy.

"I didn't know Jack Kennedy and I didn't serve with Jack Kennedy, but Michael Dukakis is no Jack Kennedy," Quayle told a crowd in Michigan.

When he chose Bentsen as his running mate, Dukakis said he was reassembling a Boston-Austin partnership that would win the White House as Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson did in 1960. He says that was "a strong ticket, one of our best tickets," and that he and Bentsen are out to match it.

Bush has taken to reciting lines from Kennedy speeches, notably on a 1963 tax cut proposal.

In Santa Clara, Calif., last Thursday, Bush said Dukakis' election would mean higher taxes, smothering economic growth, and that it would then become virtually impossible to cut the budget deficit.

"The reason for this was perhaps best explained by a previous Democratic president, none other than John F. Kennedy, back in 1962. 'It is a paradoxical truth that tax rates are too high today and tax revenues are too low, and the soundest way to raise the revenues in the long run is to cut the rates now,'" Bush said quoting the late president.

In Detroit, insisting that his proposal for a reduction in the tax on capital gains would spur the economy and create new jobs, Bush said Kennedy endorsed just such a plan. Dukakis has denounced the Bush proposal as a tax break for the rich.

In Waterbury, Conn., Bush recalled a memorable Kennedy campaign rally shortly before his 1960 victory, when thousands of people waited long into a rainy night to see the young candidate from Boston.

"If we succeed here, then the cause of freedom is strengthened," Kennedy told them.

Man who recorded 'First Family' now plays honky tonks

By GLENN ADAMS

HALLOWELL, Maine (AP) — A generation after his polite parody of John F. Kennedy's family sold millions of records, Vaughn Meader is playing honky-tonk music in out-of-the-way bars and enjoying life in Maine's "slow lane."

"The First Family," which depicted JFK in press conferences, family settings at the White House and meetings with heads of state, sold more than 5 million copies before Nov. 22, 1963, when it became funny no longer.

Meader, then commanding top billings around the country for his Kennedy impressions, got the grim news of the Dallas assassination from a cabbie in Milwaukee while en route to a gig.

"I said, 'What's the punch line?'" recalled Meader, 52. "Then I heard it on the radio.

"I felt a sense of loss, that we lost something special," said Meader, then a strikingly handsome man in his late 20s. "I went into deep hibernation."

After two months in seclusion, Meader tried to renew his act, without Kennedy humor, but bookings continued to be canceled.

"I was a reminder of that tragedy," Meader, who has a gray beard and often sports a cowboy hat, recalled somberly in an interview. "It was over."

"As Lenny Bruce said, that day they dug two graves in Arlington, one for John Kennedy and one for Vaughn Meader," said the ex-comic, who after the assassination stopped using Meader, his middle name, and started to go by the surname he was given at birth, Abbott.

Lighthearted and respectful by today's bare-knuckled standards of political humor, "The First Family" also featured sound-alikes of Jacqueline, Caroline and Bobby Kennedy.

"It was very daring at the time," said Meader, whose performing career began in his Army days in the mid-1950s when he formed a country band. His act then was sprinkled wih Elvis Presley and Hank Snow imitations.

Meader studied broadcast technique in 1959 and began a career as a piano-playing comic at small New York clubs. He grew tired of mother-in-law jokes, and about 1960, as the JFK juggernaut gained full momentum, he injected political humor into his act.

He brushed his hair into his face like Kennedy and did impressions of the charismatic Massachusetts senator "because I had a New England accent anyway," said Meader, who was born in Waterville and lives in this small city.

Reagan disputes hostage's claims about bargaining with terrorists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan disputes hostage Terry Anderson's videotaped statement that the administration bargained with terrorists, but says he still doesn't know what happened in the Iran-Contra affair.

Reagan

Reagan commented Monday on the videotape of Anderson that was released in Beirut by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnappers.

"I don't think that was Terry speaking," the president said after a bill-signing ceremony in a hotel ballroom. "I think he had a script that was given to him."

"When I was given a script, I always read the lines," the former movie actor said to laughter in the room sprinkled with film luminaries.

Hollywood executives and such stars as Charlton Heston and Cyd Charisse had come to watch Reagan sign a copyright bill affecting the entertainment industry.

Reporters, however, zeroed in on Anderson's taped statements that the administration thwarted efforts for the release of the hostages and that Vice President George Bush had bargained with terrorists during the Iran-Contra affair and the 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner on a Middle East flight.

"There's never been any interference, nor have we ever been negotiating any more than we would with any other kind of kidnapper on a ransom type of basis," the president said.

Asked specifically whether Bush, now the Republican candidate for president, was involved in the TWA talks, the president said, "George has been a part of everything that we've accomplished...but in a constructive way, and that's why he's my choice in the coming election."

When asked if this meant Bush was involved in all his decisions on the Iran-Contra affair "which wound up in a scandal," the president replied:

"Well, there was no scandal. That scandal...I'm afraid has been artificially created by a media that I cannot understand..."

The president completed the sentence by saying that his administration sought to find out the facts "the minute the news broke and the operation was exposed."

"And I am still asking, after 10 months of a congressional investigation — I still don't know who delivered the weapons and where the money came from," Reagan said.

Bush, asked during an interview with NBC anchor Tom Brokaw about Anderson's statement, said: "I had no role that you are aware of or are not aware of, absolutely. So I don't know what he's, what that refers to."

Anderson, 41, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped by the Islamic Jihad on March 16, 1985. He is the longest-held of the 14 foreign hostages in Lebanon. Nine are Americans.

Copies of the 2-minute, 35-second tape were delivered to two Western news agencies in Beirut four days after Anderson marked his fourth birthday in captivity.

"I have been very close to being released several times over the past three years, but each time it seems that the U.S. government uses its influence to stop any agreement and I don't understand this," Anderson said on the tape.

"I am not asking Reagan to deal with terrorists, although Mr. Bush did so in the Iran-Contra affair and TWA hijacking," he said.

Reagan said "any information" Anderson has must come from his captors.

Experts: Soviet deficit larger than U.S gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. experts say the Soviet budget deficit that Moscow has finally acknowledged is comparatively larger than that of America and could jeopardize the reform program of Kremlin chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Soviets likely will try to ease the deficit by printing more money, raising prices and reducing subsidies on such goods as housing and food, according to the Central Intelligence Agency and two non-government economists, Marshall Goldman of Harvard University and Jan Vanous.

But those steps could anger consumers as well as key interest groups such as the military, Goldman and Vanous said Monday in telephone interviews.

The Soviet finance minister, Boris Gostev, said during a session of parliament last week that the Kremlin expected to run a deficit of 34 billion rubles ($55 billion) on a budget of 493 billion rubles ($795 billion) in 1989. The Soviet government budget makes up the bulk of the socialist country's economy, in which nearly all enterprises are owned by the state.

Gostev did not disclose the deficit for 1988 or previous years.

A CIA report issued in September before Gostev spoke estimated that the Soviet deficit had grown from 11 billion rubles or 1.4 percent of gross national product in 1984 to 64 billion rubles or 7.4 percent of GNP in 1987.

By contrast, the U.S. government deficit peaked as a percentage of GNP at 3.5 percent in 1986 — $148 billion.

Vanous estimated the Soviet deficit for 1987 and 1988 at 65-75 billion rubles per year.

"The actual deficit is much higher" than the Soviet figure, said Vanous, who develops econometric models of the Soviet economy for PlanEcon, a Washington firm. "What they have released to the public is a distortion."

The CIA analysis said Gorbachev "needs to come to grips with the budget deficit. Most of the options open to him, however, impinge on the welfare of the population or key interest groups, such as the military, just at a time when he needs as much political support as he can garner."

"If the budget deficit is not brought down, it could lead to inflation much worse than the Soviets have experience in the postwar era," the CIA said.

Goldman said that Gostev's budget figures were "probably meant as a warning signal to the population...that prices will be going up and that subsidies will be going down."

"The whole thing is so bizarre, because they say now that the previous budgets were incorrect," said Goldman, the associate director of the Russian Research Center at Harvard. "Glasnost (greater openness) has been in effect for three years, and this is the first we have heard of the deficit. So we don't know what is right."

The deficit began to rise in 1985, the year Gorbachev became Communist Party general secretary, and "it really took off in 1987-88," said Vanous.

New president must cope with $170 billion deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the federal budget deficit seems invisible to most Americans, the gaping trade deficit is all too apparent. They see its evidence every day in the cars they drive, the televisions they watch, the shoes they wear.

Now it will fall to either George Bush or Michael Dukakis to try to remedy this other U.S. deficit, the trade imbalances that hit a staggering $170 billion last year and are running at a $138 billion pace for 1988.

The American appetite for imported goods became voracious in the 1980s as a strong dollar produced a flood of bargains for U.S. consumers. Even when the dollar took a nose-dive after intervention by the United States and its allies in 1985, Americans retained their taste for imports.

Japanese auto makers who established a beachhead in the U.S. market with cheap, fuel-efficient subcompacts earned a larger and more expensive niche on the strength of their autos' quality and reliability.

The trade law signed by President Reagan in August gives the next president new tools to protect American markets and retaliate against countries with unfair trading practices.

Dukakis's running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, was the leading congressional champion of the tougher trade law.

"I want to be a president who stands up and fights for American companies, American products and American workers," Dukakis said at a metal factory in Dayton, Ohio, last month.

Bush says American exports are booming, the trade deficit is already coming down, and free trade, not protectionism, is the way to restore America's competitiveness. The Republican dismisses Dukakis' warnings about foreign ownership as "protectionist demagoguery."

"We need to increase our exports, not shut our borders," says Bush. But, he adds, "our commitment to free trade must be linked to a reciprocal commitment to fair trade by our trading partners."

Dukakis, while trying to make a gut-level appeal to American workers alarmed about their livelihood, has tried to avoid being cast as a protectionist.

Dukakis stayed conspicuously silent when Congress passed a protectionist textile bill in September that Reagan vetoed.

But even Reagan is not the doctrinaire free-trader he once was.

His administration, confronted with gaping trade deficits, backed off from what had been an undeviating faith in free markets in 1985 and worked in concert with allies to bring the value of the dollar down. That effort was orchestrated by James Baker III.

"There's been very vigorous enforcement of trade laws under the Reagan-Bush administration in the past three years," Bruce Smart, a Bush trade adviser and former undersecretary of Commerce, said.

Supreme Court to hear case against agency for not preventing child abuse

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — Nine-year-old Joshua DeShaney can make some awkward movements and guttural sounds and will need special care throughout his life because of a beating more than four years ago that left him brain damaged.

The boy's mother blames a Wisconsin county welfare agency for not preventing the injuries inflicted by the boy's father, and the U.S. Supreme Court will hear arguments in her lawsuit Wednesday.

"We can't restore the tissue that's missing from Joshua's brain, but we can make sure little Suzie Smith doesn't become another Joshua," Donald Sullivan, an attorney for Melody DeShaney said in a telephone interview.

Ms. DeShaney, who lives in Wyoming, filed the lawsuit on behalf of her son against the Winnebago County Department of Social Services and two of its employees.

The multimillion-dollar lawsuit accuses social workers of violating the boy's consitutional rights by failing to come to his rescue after they had repeated evidence he was being beaten.

"They had a mountain of direct evidence that was higher than their eyebrows," said Sullivan.

Ms. DeShaney appealed the case to the Supreme Court after the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed the suit, saying it would place welfare agencies in an unfair predicament to require them to take custody of children who are suspected victims of abuse.

Lawyers for Winnebago County, located in east-central Wisconsin about 80 miles from Wausau, have said the case could put public employees in the impossible position of always having to make the right decisions or face lawsuits.

The case is being watched very closely by the National Association of Counties, which filed a friend-of-the-court brief.

"We're all feeling very vulnerable," said Mark Quam, director of social services for Winnebago County. "It popped up here, but it could have happened anywhere."

Joshua was living in the county with his divorced father when he came to the attention of social workers. A county social worker assigned to his case visited the boy several times and a file of reports grew.

Social worker Ann Kemmeter reported she noticed a bump on Joshua's head one time and "a scraped chin that appeared to me to look like a cigarette burn" another time.

Ms. Kemmeter visited the DeShaney home on March 7, 1984, but did not ask to see the boy, according to court records. The next day, the then 4-year-old boy was in the hospital with head injuries that destroyed half of his brain.

His father, Randy DeShaney, was later convicted of felony battery and child abuse and sentenced to two consecutive two-year prison terms. He served about two years and eight months before he was released in September 1987.

DeShaney, who lives in central Wisconsin's Portage County and declines interview requests, will finish his parole Dec. 11, said Don Netzel, his parole agent.

Joshua remains in the custody of the county and lives in a group home for children who are developmentally disabled, said John Bodnar, attorney for Winnebago County.

The boy has no use of his legs or one arm and can only make awkward movements with one hand, Sullivan said. Joshua's intelligence has been tested at less than a 1-year-old's, he said.

His mother wants custody but has filed no formal legal petition because she wants to be sure she can provide care for him first, Sullivan said.

"We're going to ask (for) the money for Joshua," he said.

Ms. DeShaney, who gave custody of her infant son to her former husband when she was divorced at 19, declined an interview request because of the pressures of the case, Sullivan said.

The fact that the Supreme Court has decided to hear the case concerns the counties' association, said Lee Ruck, the general counsel for the Washington-based association. Counties acknowledge a general duty to protect everyone in the county, but that is not a guarantee everyone will be protected, he said.

The case could raise a new class of lawsuits that not only review public employees' decisions with hindsight but may "Monday-morning-quarterback a decision not to get in the game," Ruck said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Kitty Dukakis hospitalized

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kitty Dukakis, wife of Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, was in a hospital today for observation and tests after complaining of fever and chills, a spokesman said.

The symptoms occurred after Mrs. Dukakis, 51, had dinner Monday night with her staff and Secret Service guards at the St. Paul hotel where she was staying while on a campaign trip for her husband, said Paul Costello, her press secretary.

Mrs. Dukakis was admitted to the University of Minnesota Hospital in Minneapolis shortly before 10 p.m., he said.

Earlier in the day, University of Minnesota Hospital doctors tested her after she admitted herself about 7 a.m. They prescribed antibiotics for a viral infection and she returned to the hotel, where she rested all day, Costello said.

Costello said early today that Mrs. Dukakis's fever, which was 102 degrees Monday night, had gone down. Mrs. Dukakis had been suffering from a sinus infection, Costello said, and had difficulty sleeping Sunday night because of the discomfort.

Mrs. Dukakis talked briefly with her husband Monday night, but Costello said the governor had no plans to travel to Minneapolis to be with his wife.

Shuttle to go to launch pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis will be moved to the launch pad early Wednesday for a late November liftoff with a secret military payload.

The four-mile, six-hour trip to Launch Pad 39B was scheduled to start at 12:01 a.m., with the shuttle perched upright on the broad back of a giant tracked transporter called a crawler.

The move was delayed two days after a three-inch wire was discovered Saturday pinned beneath a nut and washer that are part of structure that attaches the shuttle to its external fuel tank.

Before the nut could be loosened to get at the wire, Atlantis had to be partially decoupled from the tank, to which it was attached last week.

Lisa Malone, a National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration spokeswoman, said the wire was removed Monday and engineers did not determine how it became lodged under the washer.

At the pad, Atlantis will be readied for a launch in the last week in November. A date will be set Nov. 10 following a flight readiness review. NASA said Monday the launch would occur between 6:32 a.m. and 9:32 a.m. EST.

Hepatitis, AIDS linked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A test tube experiment shows that a protein produced in cells infected by the common liver disease hepatitis-B may activate production of the AIDS virus in human cells.

Dr. T.S. Benedict Yen, an assistant professor at the University of California, San Francisco, says the finding suggests an explanation of why almost 90 percent of AIDS patients are also infected by the hepatitis-B virus. But he cautions that more study must be done to determine the exact connection between the two viral infections.

A team of scientists led by Yen studied the link between hepatitis-B and AIDS by inserting fragments of the hepatitis-B virus into human cell cultures containing the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

Yen said the group found that a protein produced by the hepatitis virus activates the production of the HIV genes, a necessary step in the replication of HIV.

The protein produced by the hepatitis-B virus is called the "X protein," said Yen, because it long had been a mystery.

Parrot smugglers tried

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Ohio pet shop owner outraged at brokers of smuggled, possibly diseased Mexican parrots helped government agents run a two-year sting operation resulting in planned prosecutions in six states.

Carol Rueve said she and her husband, Frank, helped the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service investigate illegal parrot trafficking because "it kind of rubbed me wrong" when middlemen tried to sell them illegal birds.

The investigation operated out of their Dayton-area Driftwood Pet Shops, where an undercover agent posed as the shops' parrot-buying agent from August 1986 to August 1988.

The probe culminated Monday with the announcement that U.S. attorneys in Indiana, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, Texas and California have agreed to seek indictments against 36 people the government believes have been buying parrots from smugglers who sneak them across the Mexican border near Brownsville, Texas.

Man sentenced for threat

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal judge sentenced a self-described white supremacist to two years in prison and ordered him to pay $100 for threatening former presidential candidate Jesse Jackson's life last spring.

U.S. District Judge Edward Filippine on Monday handed Londell Williams the maximum prison term under federal sentencing guidelines for threatening to kill the black Democratic candidate and possessing an unregistered automatic rifle.

Filippine also ordered that the 30-year-old man be supervised for three years following his release.

Under the guidelines, Williams could have been fined $30,000, but Filippine ordered him to pay only $100.

Vincennes skipper focuses on positive, offers new details

Copley News Service

Sailors aboard the Vincennes will long try to forget the downing last July of an Iranian airliner, but their commander remembers that the tragic day began with the promise of victory.

"We had a lot go right. Everyone is focusing on what went wrong," said Capt. Will C. Rogers III, commanding officer of the guided missile cruiser Vincennes, in his first extensive press interview since the ship's return to San Diego last week.

Rogers said he did not mean to diminish the magnitude of the tragedy, but characterized an exchange with Iranian gunboats, which preceded the aircraft downing, as a textbook example of naval engagement.

He also offered new details about the battle that ended in the destruction of Iran Air Flight 655, killing all 290 people aboard and leaving his crew with a numbing memory.

Rogers said five Iranian gunboats were destroyed with all hands presumed killed during the battle. Originally, Rogers reported two ships destroyed and a third damaged, but a review of the Vincennes' computer tapes made weeks after the battle proved that five were destroyed.

In his most detailed account yet of what happened July 3 in the Persian Gulf, Rogers said his decision and mistakes made by his crew were not the result of combat stress, as alleged by a Navy probe into the tragedy. He generally agreed with other findings that radar consoles in the advanced Aegis weapons system, which were used to detect the aircraft, should be made simpler to operate.

And he again defended his decision, hotly criticized by the Iranian government, to shoot down the airliner because there was no time to evaluate its intentions.

"In the desert," said Rogers, quoting a Middle Eastern proverb, "a man meets no friend."

Rogers, 48, remembers the weather the day before the fatal encounter as hazy, providing limited visibility. There also were clouds of apprehension about Iranian intentions.

"We saw increased Iranian Revolutionary Guard activity around the Strait (of Hormuz) on July 2. They attacked a Norwegian merchant ship and warning shots from the Montgomery (a Navy frigate) drove them off," he said.

But, on July 3, Rogers noticed a change in the Iranians' operations.

"What was highly unusual was that the gunboats were operating in daylight. They normally came out after dusk or at the early morning hour.

"We hadn't seen that before, but it tied in with intelligence reports that we should anticipate an attempt by the Iranian government to embarrass the U.S.," he said.

Revolutionary Guard gunboat attacks were carried out with a variety of weapons designed not to sink the U.S. ships, but to kill the crews.

"It's vicious and violent. You put a rocket-propelled grenade or a 23mm round through the side of a ship packed with people doing their jobs and you'll have casualties," he said.

Rogers ordered his anti-submarine helicopter off the deck to observe the gunboats, warning his pilot not to approach closer than four miles. "We didn't want to appear to be provocative," he said.

The helicopter was fired upon an hour later.

Rogers said he ordered the helicopter back, and the Vincennes approached the gunboats. "Five of the seven boats turned in my direction," he recalled.

Rogers received permission from Rear Adm. Tony Less, commander of the U.S. Middle East Force in Bahrain, to fire both his 5-inch guns at the Iranian vessels after both men were satisfied that the boats were not retreating.

Developments threaten Walden Pond

By ALAN COOPERMAN

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Walden Pond, where Henry David Thoreau retreated to observe nature 140 years ago, is to conservationism what Selma, Ala., is to civil rights or Woodstock, N.Y., to rock music.

So the possibility that an office park and a housing project may rise within a few hundred yards of the pond has rallied the conservation movement.

"If you can't save the place where the principle was first asserted, how can you hope to assert the principle elsewhere?" Thomas Blanding, president of the Thoreau Country Conservation Alliance, asserted Monday.

"We've been getting calls about these projects from Washington and New York and San Francisco," said Janet Beyer, chairwoman of the Concord Historical Commission. "It's no longer a matter just of Concord making decisions about a few parcels. It's a symbol for the nation."

Walden Pond is a 62-acre body of water in a 333-acre state-owned reservation on the edge of Concord, an affluent town of 12,500 about 20 miles northwest of Boston. Thoreau, a naturalist and writer, built a cabin on the pond in 1845 and remained there two years.

The Concord Zoning Board of Appeals is scheduled to decide Thursday whether to allow the 139-unit housing project.

Several local officials have come out in favor of the project, which is a compromise between the developers' original request for 251 units and a prior ruling by the zoning board that it would accept just 125.

"My feeling is that this is a reasonable compromise," said town Manager Alan H. Edmond.

To make the project more palatable, developers Philip DeNormandie and John Corcoran have agreed to set aside 41 of the units at prices of about $75,000 for people with low incomes.

The rest of the 135 condos and four detached, single-family houses would sell at market rates — probably around $250,000 each for the condos and $1 million or more for the houses, Edmond said.

Blanding said the conservation alliance agrees that "Concord badly needs affordable housing." But, he contended, the project is "still too intrusive" and should be scaled down further, or better yet, moved elsewhere.

"We recognize that Concord is a living town. We don't want to freeze it at some elite level. But we have to realize that we have one of the country's great cultural resources in the landscape here, and it's our obligation to protect it for future generations," he said.

Plans for the office park are on hold while the developer, Boston Properties, prepares an environmental notification form for state review.

Boston Properties is owned by publisher and real estate magnate Mortimer Zuckerman. He owns The Atlantic Monthly magazine, which published Thoreau's journals posthumously in the early 1900s.
