Man has memories of bountiful tablelands

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

PECOS COUNTY — The eyes are those of a man who has seen remnants of once-vast wealth run through his fingers.

Lines crease their corners like tributary rivulets now, aged as they are by the passage of 76 summers. But ask about the land of the Pecos River seven decades ago and they blaze as clearly as the sun rising through a mist on a West Texas spring.

Roy McDonald has lived in the shadow of the Trans-Pecos buttes and tablelands almost his entire life, riding the wagon roads of Horsehead Crossing, exploring the salt-cedar brakes of the Pecos, ranching the creosote-ruled sands. It has been a land rich in lore, filled with occasional violence, overflowing in unforgettable tales just as the Pecos itself once overran its banks. And everytime McDonald rests his head of cotton-like hair against his recliner and reminisces in a deep drawl of those early days, it's obvious he shares a unique oneness with the land which shaped his life.

Born in Hamilton County in 1906, McDonald came to the Girvin-Bakersfield area as an infant, bouncing in the seat of a hack. Crossing the Pecos in the initial decade of the century was no easy matter, as the upstream dams of a modern era were yet to be built and bridges were unknown.

"AT LEAST HALF the time you couldn't get across the river," recalled McDonald, relaxing in the living room of his desert-style bungalow nestled beneath a great-rimrock mesa six miles south of Girvin. "The river ran a lot more water then than it does now, and we had a lot of rises. We had Horsehead Crossing on up the river from Girvin, but the best crossing was right back down here (toward Bakersfield)...It had a solid rock bottom and there was water boiling up from a spring right out in the middle."

This natural hot spring was not just a curiosity to those crossing the river on the road from San Angelo to Fort Stockton; in this barren land devoid of surface moisture, the presence of fresh water amid the brine of the Pecos was a life-giver.

"Those old freighters, they'd have four or five or six or eight wagons all tied together one behind the other," remembered McDonald. "They had a barrel on each side of the wagons, and they'd stop right there in the middle of that river, take a big old bucket with a rope on it, and get that water coming up out of that spring."

The Pecos River area was vast, rugged and remote in those days, and education usually came at the hands of a single teacher plying his trade in a one-room schoolhouse. One such facility along the river in Crockett County near Sheffield became indelibly imprinted on McDonald's mind through memories of a

U.S. won't push pipeline dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's key advisers are recommending he sidestep a clash with France over shipment of U.S.-licensed equipment to the Soviet Union in defiance of his pipeline embargo, according to sources here.

The decision was made Tuesday at a high-level meeting at the State Department hours before a federal court upheld the U.S. government's right to punish American companies defying the ban.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz and other top officials did not rule out denying Dresser Industries, Inc., of Dallas, some future export licenses, it was learned after the closed-door meeting.

But the consensus on dealing with France was to try to work out a diplomatic settlement and avoid a confrontation, said the sources, who asked not to be identified. They said this would mean further trans-Atlantic consultations.

Reagan, on a vacation and political trip to California, awaited their report.

U.S. government lawyers were uncertain what legal steps could be taken against the French government, which ordered Dresser's subsidiary, Dresser France, to ship three compressors and spare parts to the Soviet Union.

Shipment is scheduled for Thursday. The compressors are to be used in construction of a 3,600-mile pipeline to carry natural gas from the Soviet Union to western Europe.

Reagan wants to block construction as a way of pressuring the Soviets to persuade Polish authorities to ease restrictions on workers and political dissidents in Poland.

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery declined to shield Dresser Industries or its French branch from potential fines or other penalties after the subsidiary announced it would comply.

The Dallas firm had asked for a temporary restraining order against punitive actions by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige. Flannery declined, saying the company had failed to prove it would be irreparably harmed by any sanctions or that it had a reasonable chance to win its case at trial.

"The case involves a very serious area of foreign affairs," Flannery said, and therefore the companies would have to make "an extraordinarily strong showing" to justify his intervention.

"We are pleased that the U.S. District Court has ordered the Dresser Co. to follow the laws and procedures of the United States," Baldrige said.

Ed Luter, a Dresser vice president, said he was disappointed. But in a telephone interview, he noted the court had not ruled on the merits of the case.

"We have not decided what our next step is," Luter said. "I understand there are several options that we might pursue," including a hearing on the issues or appealing Flannery's denial of a restraining order.

John Vanderstar, Dresser's lawyer, had argued, "The plaintiffs in this case are in a terrible jam."

He said Dresser France had no choice but to comply with a French government demand that it load the compressors on a Soviet freighter docked at Le Havre.

Jail panel limits prisoner count

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Jail Standards Commission today ordered that the Midland County Jail be restricted to housing 85 inmates, with any over that number to be transferred to other counties.

That action brought hints of a possible legal challenge from County Attorney Scott Henderson.

Sheriff Dallas Smith, a member of the commission, noted that at the commission's last meeting, Midland County had indicated it planned to construct a "low-risk system" or stockade facility.

Those plans, Smith said, have been "shelved or canceled...In any case, it's not being done at this time."

Assistant County Attorney Mark Dettman told the commission Smith has "made all efforts" to get approval of new jail facilities, and said county commissioners have agreed with an architect for developing plans for a new jail.

He also reported that "at least two" adjoining counties have indicated they will accept inmates from Midland County if jail overcrowding occurs.

Smith said the average jail population of the Midland County jail is approximately 85, but that problems with classification of prisoners begin to occur at a population of 80, because "we don't have the right proportion" of men, women and juveniles.

A commission official said Midland County has indicated by letter that it is considering a $9 million bond issue which would allow the jail to be doubled in size.

Smith noted it would take two to three years to get new jail facilities, and commented that that would not solve problems at the existing jail during that time.

He suggested the commission adopt a "remedial order" limiting the population at the jail to 85, with the commission unanimously adopting that order.

If the county exceeds the 85-inmate limit, the commission could take steps to close the jail, and to transfer prisoners to other counties at Midland County's expense.

The commission reports prisoners in excess of the limit will be transferred to Howard, Glasscock, Martin or Andrews counties.

Following the adoption of the order, County Attorney Scott Henderson asked the commission to provide its street address "for citation of service."

When asked after the meeting if that question means the county may pursue legal action against the commission, Henderson said he "would have to check with the commissioners court" on that possibility.

Marines land in Beirut

As U.S. Marines landed in Beirut today, another 500 Palestinian guerrillas prepared to leave by ship.

But Israel announced the overland evacuation of guerrillas to Syria had been delayed, reportedly because the Palestinians were afraid of attacks by Christian militiamen loyal to Bashir Gemayel, Lebanon's president-elect.

Passing proposed budget least of City Council's worries

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Passing the proposed 1982-83 budget and accompanying tax rate proved to be the least of Midland City Council's worries on Tuesday during a regular meeting in City Hall Council Chambers.

While the $47 million budget and 43 cent tax rate took only a few minutes to approve, the council tangled itself in other matters ranging from how to spend federal funds to hearing both sides of a three-hour zone change request and then referring the entire case back to the Planning and Zoning Commission.

While the council had been completing its meetings this summer by 6 p.m., it dived into a backslide by holding another multi-day marathon session. Starting the afternoon session about 1:40 p.m., the council took one brief break about 5 p.m. and didn't quit until 10:10 p.m., deciding to start again at 9 a.m. today.

Looking at a shopping list on how to spend $604,657 in Revenue Sharing funds, the council selected traffic signal improvements, $110,000; Ward Street park development, $50,000; Quanah Park development, $50,000; Hogan Park, $65,000; radios for the emergency operations center, $30,000; Animal Control Center expansion, $35,000; matching funds for a softball field complex, $100,000; bicycle paths and signing, $16,500; and Crestgate park development, $25,000.

WHILE ONE COUNCILMAN resisted, the remaining members revised the budget for the 1982-83 Community Development Block Grant application to include money for Taylor Park Day Care Center.

Jan Reed, chairman of the Midland County Child Care Corporation, asked for $47,000 to help furnish the center so it can open in a few months. The building is being constructed with county CD money, and the board is having to seek funds to equip and furnish the facility.

Pointing out the center will care for city children, and not just those in the county, Ms. Reed said it would include a kitchen and a community room that could be used by the public at night.

After Councilman Gordon Marcum II requested using $40,000 of the $900,000-plus expected in CD money for the child care center, Councilman Tom Sloan refused to agree. "You're talking about taking CD funds for a county project. It's city money. I can't vote for that" and he didn't.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said by way of explanation, "The city residents are going to use it (child care center)."

Area's residents fight City Council annexation plan

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Annexation of a large chunk of land northeast and east of the city limits had been rolling along smoothly for months and the Midland City Council was down to the final two steps — passage of the ordinance on two readings.

But on Tuesday when the ordinance came up for a first reading, it blew apart as if hit by a bomb.

The resistance forces were comprised primarily of a group of people who live in Skyview Estates, which is bounded by what will be Loop 250, Wadley Avenue and County Road 1160, and assisted by others who have interests in the areas designated for annexation.

The battle between the City Council and resistance forces raged for hours, starting in the afternoon and finally ending about 10 p.m. when the council approved annexing the entire area on first reading. However, council members indicated to Skyview residents that if a plat is submitted to them by the second reading in November that parcel would be excluded from annexation.

And golf courses of the three country clubs also were annexed, with the council talking of zoning the land for recreational uses. At the last session, the council had said it would leave out the golf courses.

Setting up the battle scene was J.D. Webster, 105 Thornridge, who purchased land in the proposed annexed area for a warehouse. "I'm dead set against the city annexing anything, unless the city can provide some services. We're already overburdened. Are you annexing these people to pay for the sewage plant?"

At one point in his presentation, Mayor G. Thane Akins interrupted Webster to warn: "If you don't mind, we'll keep this very straightforward."

Webster then asked if the city was going to pave a road where he bought land in a private development since the developer had failed to do the job so far.

"Look to your contract," replied Councilman Tom Sloan. "It's between you and your developer."

Leading the forces from Skyview were James Logan and Ron Bentley. Logan submitted a petition with names of 57 residents who objected to annexation.

"We all opted to buy out of the city limits," said Logan. "You can't annex without our approval of it."

Sloan pointed out that the developer of that estates had failed to record a plat of it, which is a violation of state law.

Logan then pointed out that an application for an asphalt plant to be located near Skyview had been approved by the Texas Air Control Board. And the council used that as ammunition for supporting the annexation move, with the mayor saying, "We can keep out an asphalt plant."

Logan mentioned he had his own ways of keeping it out. "I could burn it down," he said, adding hastily, "I was just kidding."

In their arguments, opponents used the age-old bullets by claiming the city can't do anything for them except add a tax burden and that they had moved

Republican Party's Old Center calls the shots

Moderate conservatives like Baker, Dole dominant force

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A year and a half ago, when "New Right" Republicans packed the Senate's back benches and men such as Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., took over important committee chairmanships, the Senate looked as if it were changing into a citadel of superconservatism.

But things haven't turned out that way.

"When you're trying to change the status quo and the status quo is entrenched, it's difficult," said Sen. John P. East, R-N.C., one of the New Right freshmen and a Helms protege. "I don't think anyone had any illusions that it would be easy."

"Reality had a way of intruding," said Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., Md., a Republican moderate.

"They were preoccupied with purifying the doctrine," said Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., another moderate.

AS THE 97TH Congress nears an end, it is not the New Right of the Republican Party but rather its Old Center, guided more by pragmatism than ideology, that calls the shots in the Senate.

Moderate conservatives like Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., Finance Committee Chairman Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., and Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., are the dominant force, often setting the agenda for Congress as a whole and sometimes bending the administration to its will.

Working in cooperation with the administration, if not always in synchronized lock-step, they have swept almost everything else aside to consider President Reagan's economic program. And they have succeeded in large part, sometimes to the extent of forcing the administration to temper some of its more adventurous economic intiatives.

This had the effect, whether it was intended or not, of pushing such New Right issues as abortion and school prayer off to the side, where some of their post-election momentum of 1980 seems to have been lost.

Strong anti-busing legislation was passed by the Senate but only after a 10-month struggle that took its toll in members' patience, and the measure has virtually sunk out of sight in the House.

Abortion and prayer are now before the Senate, but they are mired in a parliamentary quagmire and chances of passage before adjournment in early October are uncertain.

THE FAMILY Protection Act, another favorite of the right, is languishing in a half-dozen or more Senate committees. The administration's proposal for tuition tax credits for children in private schools, also pushed by many conservatives, is in trouble. Capital punishment is unlikely to be taken up before year's end. Some of the right's more novel ideas, like denying crime victim aid to rape victims who have abortions as a result, have been quietly sidelined.

A look back at the post-1980 committee record of Thurmond, Hatch and Helms is instructive.

Thurmond may control the Judiciary Committee, but the major legislation from his committee that has passed Congress was an extension of the Voting Rights Act, strengthened even beyond its existing provisions.

Hatch may be chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, but the balance of power on many issues rests with more liberal Republicans, Sens. Lowell C. Weicker Jr., Conn., and Robert T. Stafford, Vt., who tend to vote with the Democrats in budget showdowns over spending for education and other domestic programs that Hatch would cut.

Helms heads the Agriculture Committee, where he was in a commanding position to attack food stamps. But Dole, pursuing damage control as chairman of Agriculture's nutrition subcommittee, was able to limit food-stamp funding cuts to far less than Helms wanted.

All three committee chairmen, principally Hatch, played a role in Senate passage of the balanced-budget constitutional amendment, another pet project of the conservatives. But, as an election-year antidote to the political poison of high deficits, it had support stretching far beyond the right. And the balanced-budget amendment, like the anti-busing measure, faces seemingly insurmountable problems in the House.

PERHAPS EVEN more illustrative of where real power in the Senate rests was the scene on the Senate floor late Thursday.

In the Senate of 18 months ago, voting against abortion would have seemed a far safer bet than voting to increase taxes. Yet Helms, who had to wait a year and a half to get his anti-abortion crusade onto the Senate floor, was fighting a filibuster against the measure for the fourth day when he had to stand aside for passage of the largely Dole-drafted tax increase bill. Helms voted against the tax bill and now faces resumption of the filibuster when Congress comes back to town after Labor Day.

By his tactics, including backing out of a time-agreement to limit debate on the anti-abortion measure, Helms has angered some of his colleagues to the point that they say personal frustrations could influence a crucial number of votes on the issue. "Some members are genuinely affronted," said one of his colleagues.

But Helms has always had more strength outside the Senate than in it, and he indicated on Friday that he has hardly given up. "We've got some troops in the field whispering sweet somethings in the ears of senators," said Helms, explaining that the grass-roots conservative lobby has marshaled its forces, phone banks and all, to lobby senators during the 2 1-2-week recess. "We pushed the red-alert button," he said.

Helms' clout outside the Senate is bolstered by his National Congressional Club, which was recently reported to have spent $8.7 million in the last 18 months, more than any of the other big political action committees.

The problem is that the New Right has inadvertantly activated other grass-roots forces, including lawyers and judges who are opposed to the way Helms would curtail pro-busing, pro-abortion and anti-prayer efforts: by limiting the courts' jurisdiction over these issues.

THESE QUINTESSENTIALLY establishment groups thus find themselves on the same side of the lobbying fence as civil liberties and civil rights groups, which also report increased grass-roots support as a result of a perceived threat from the right.

"They've overreached themselves...they've caused the groups they oppose to get smart and employ their own successful tactics against them," said a Senate staff worker, noting the recent growth in groups like the American Civil Liberties Union. John Shattuck, director of the Washington office of the ACLU, reports that the ACLU's membership, now about 275,000, has grown by about 75,000 since 1980, more than at any other time.

There are other explanations for why the New Right didn't live up to its advance billing.

One, cited by Hatfield, was that its power was overblown from the start, by the press and others. "I'm not saying they have no influence but it was largely an image that had been falsely created," he said.

An even more frequently mentioned explanation is that senators like Helms have built a career upon causes, not experience in legislative craftsmanship, leaving them handicapped when they are thrust into positions of institutional leadership.

Moreover, some say, their ideological intensity makes compromise difficult and tends to lead to schisms, even within the ranks of the faithful, as happened when anti-abortion forces split over what specific legislation to support, delaying its consideration on the Senate floor.

IN CONTRAST, the Bakers and Doles of the Senate are experienced and adept at compromise. As legislators first and foremost, they also tend to be utility infielders. A Dole, for instance, can be juggling taxes, food stamps and voting rights at the same time.

By happenstance, or perhaps because of their longer tenure, the Republican centrists were also senior on the key fiscal committees, including Finance, Budget and Appropriations, when the Republicans took power early in 1981. And it was in these committees that the action of the 97th Congress has centered, giving them the opportunity to dominate center stage to the exclusion of other issues.

Some of the freshmen have quietly put some distance between themselves and the issues on which they were elected. A more senior senator, frustrated by the pressures of trying to accommodate ideological purity and legislative effectiveness, privately gripes about his "crazies."

But East and others make the case that the New Right has made progress, nonetheless.

"What we have now is a legislative climate in which these issues can be considered," he said last week. "Things are slow and long-term in a legislative process."

Ex-cult member says she's out for good, despite husband's return to Minnesota sect

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — She's seven months pregnant and hopes to be reunited with her husband, but Sandy Eilers says she won't return to the religious group from which both were taken, even if it means rearing her child by herself.

"I won't turn my back on him," Mrs. Eilers, 23, said Tuesday of her husband, Bill, 24. "I want to get him out, but I'm not sure how that will be accomplished...The group leader has undue control through a lot of fear and guilt."

The Eilers have told conflicting stories about the religious group to which they belonged near Winona, Minn., and the events that occurred Aug. 16.

ON THAT day, the couple was pushed into a van and taken away as they emerged from a Winona clinic where Mrs. Eilers was receiving prenatal care. They were missing for a week.

False imprisonment charges were filed against five people Tuesday. Eilers said that he was held against his will and tortured.

"I would like to call it being rescued," Mrs. Eilers said.

Their case has attracted so much attention that both held news conferences Tuesday. Mrs. Eilers held hers at Unbound Inc., a halfway house here for former cult members where she is staying.

Eilers conducted his at the farm where they lived in Centerville, Wis.

Three months ago, they joined the Disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ and lived on the farm, near the Minnesota-Wisconsin border near Winona, with another couple that also belonged to the group.

She said they joined up thinking "it was a fundamental Christian group. We were looking for a way to be closer to God, and we saw them as really sincere people."

But she described life within the group as strictly disciplined and said members believed God spoke through Rama Bahera, a former Hindu now living in Shawano, Wis.

"...I believe mind control is used," she said.

She said her parents and her husband's parents arranged five days of deprogramming by "very comforting, sincere, caring people" and both of them decided to leave the group and come here for counseling.

SHE SAID "IT was a great shock to me" when her husband decided to return to the group.

Eilers, reached Tuesday night, refused to be interviewed by telephone. He said he would stand by the statement he released earlier in the day.

"I was held against my will," he said in the statement. "I was tortured. I was handcuffed to a bed. I wasn't allowed to see daylight and I was choked.

"I had the cast twisted off my broken arm and it's because I do love the Lord Jesus," he said.

Mrs. Eilers said they were taken to the Tau Center, a retreat at the College of St. Teresa in Winona. The nuns who run the center have refused comment except to say that the center is not associated with the college.

But Eilers said the "the nuns knew, the administration at the college knew; I was there. And I screamed loud enough when they were laying on top of me and choking me that I think just about anybody in that hall could have heard me...

"They handcuffed me to the bed, and that's how I stayed for three days," Eilers said.

"HIS FAMILY was present with him, and I don't believe they would have let that happen," Mrs. Eilers said of her husband's reports. "The deprogrammers were very comforting, very caring people. He's saying whatever they (the sect members) want him to say."

In a telephone interview Tuesday from his home, Bahera said he is troubled by the incident.

"This shows the intolerance and ignorance of many people toward religion in America," he said. "Deprogramming creates psychological havoc. Something must be done about this."

In Minnesota, Winona County Attorney Jules Gernes filed charges of false imprisonment and conspiracy to commit false imprisonment against five people Tuesday as a result of Eilers' complaint.

Sandy Eilers, 23, said that she won't return to the Disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ sect farm in Centerville, despite her husband's return to the sect after both had been deprogrammed.

The five appeared in court and were released on bond pending another appearance in Winona County District Court on Sept. 2. They are Mark Palmer, 28, of Orange, Calif.; Debbie Coy, 27, of Bradford, Pa.; Joanne Hanson, 56, of Austin, Minn.; and Thomas Quick, 33, and Daniel Graham, 30, both of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

Mrs. Eilers said she will spend several weeks in Iowa City before returning to Minnesota, where she expects to live with her parents in Fairmont.

"I'M VERY happy except that my husband is still with the group. I'm myself again — I wasn't myself when I was with the group — and I'm happy about that."

Eilers said that "now it seems that my reward for what I've gone through is that I get my baby and my wife taken from me and it doesn't seem like anybody is going to do anything for me or do anything about it..."

Sea World unable to save deformed whale

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A badly deformed baby whale, encrusted with barnacles and half its normal size, died shortly after being lassoed in San Diego Bay and rushed to a marine park by rescue workers.

The young California gray whale was described as "just plain emaciated" and crippled from "severe curvature of the spine."

"When we saw how badly emaciated it was, it was clear that it was probably not going to survive under any circumstances," said Sea World spokeswoman Jackie O'Connor.

The 1-year-old whale, which weighed between 6,000 and 6,500 pounds, "showed no response at all" after being transported to Sea World and placed in a pool, she said.

The cause of death was not immediately determined, but the 25-foot whale weighed about half of what it should have, she said.

The whale was spotted in the bay before noon Tuesday and was followed by the Harbor Patrol until Sea World received permission from the National Marine Fisheries Service "to treat it as we see necessary," Ms. O'Connor said.

The animal, encrusted with barnacles, was herded to a Navy pier. Divers slipped a rope around its tail and a sling under its belly and a crane lifted it onto a truck for the 5-mile ride to Sea World.

Marine biologists wrapped the whale with foam rubber and sprayed it with salt water to keep it cool before placing it in the pool. It died about 7:45 p.m.

Harbor Patrol officers initially believed it to be an elderly animal because of its deformities and large amounts of barnicles.

"It was covered with whale lice. The biologists said it was carrying a parasite load equal to that of an animal twice its size," Ms. O'Connor said.

Thousands of California gray whales migrate 6,000 miles each winter from Alaska's Arctic seas to warm Mexican lagoons to breed and bear young. The gentle ocean giants, which grow to 50 feet in length and weight 40 tons, make the longest known migration of any mammal.

The whale was first sighted near the bay's mouth, off a finger of land known as Ballast Point, site of a major whaling station in the 1800s and now a base for nuclear-powered submarines.

Sightings in the bay are not uncommon during winter because the southward-bound whales occassionally become confused and swim into the natural harbor. But few whales are seen in the summer, since the whales return to Alaska's Bering Sea by traveling a course about 200 miles from land.

It was the first whale taken to Sea World, a major marine park, in more than a decade. In 1971, a baby whale named Gigi was captured in Scammons Lagoon, 400 miles south of San Diego off Baja California, and taken to Sea World for a year of research.

It was released off the coast of San Diego in good health and boaters have reported seeing a "friendly whale" during annual migrations.

Americans in Taiwan notice subtle changes

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Nearly four years after the United States cut its diplomatic ties to Taiwan, Americans here say they still feel welcome but that in subtle ways they are being discriminated against in the marketplace.

Personal relationships between the 5,000 resident Americans — mostly businessmen, teachers and missionaries — and their Chinese hosts appear to have survived the trauma of 1979 when the Carter administration recognized the communist regime on mainland China and broke relations with Taiwan.

"There has been very little anti-Americanism," says Robert Parker, an attorney who serves as an unofficial spokesman for the U.S. community in Taiwan. "In the early stages it focused largely on (former President) Jimmy Carter and the U.S. government. Even when there was anti-American rioting, Chinese came up to us to reaffirm their personal loyalty."

His remarks were echoed by other Americans, but some — choosing not to go on record — say they detect a bitter aftertaste among local Chinese who believe the Reagan administration favors Peking over the Taiwan-based Nationalists, who fled China in 1949 after being defeated by the communists.

Tensions were heightened earlier this month when the U.S. and Chinese governments agreed on a communique in which Washington pledged not to increase — and gradually reduce — arms sales to Taiwan. The government in Taipei denounced the communique as "a serious mistake."

"In many small ways, Americans are made to feel the hurt that the Chinese felt," says Parker, who was chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce here when the United States recognized Peking.

"One senses that there is a loss of the shared perception of the special relationship," he said. "American businessmen here now often find it would be more advantageous to be European. The Republic of China has adopted a conscious policy of diversification which benefits the Europeans."

The trend so far is not dramatic. The United States remained Taiwan's biggest trading partner in 1981, buying 38 percent of its exports and supplying it with 26 percent of its imports. In the first seven months of 1982, two-way trade reached $7.85 billion, or 32.5 percent of Taiwan's total trade. When the export-import books were balanced, the United States was $2.2 billion in the red.

The American Institute in Taiwan, the semiofficial organization which replaced the embassy, expects two-way trade to grow 12.4 percent this year to $14.5 billion, and the Taiwan surplus to be about $3.5 billion.

Taiwan surpluses have been the rule since 1967, a contrast to the continuing deficits in trade with its second-biggest partner, Japan.

In an effort to right the balance, Taiwan has adopted a "buy American" policy. Since 1978, it has sent six buying missions to the United States which returned with contracts valued at $5.6 billion. The seventh, leaving in September, expects to sign up $500 million worth of business.

In 1981, Taiwan signed a new five-year agreement to buy more than $5 billion worth of U.S. farm products, a 70 percent increase over the previous agreement.

Taiwan dominates its trade with the United States because it levies an average 30 percent tariff on imports. It sells Americans textiles, electronics and electrical goods, footwear, machine tools and plywood. It buys grains, cotton, machinery and chemicals.

Taiwan is a growing market for computers, but despite more experience and superior software, U.S. companies are in second place behind the Japanese, who offer more attractive credit terms.

But the Taiwanese penchant for copying — its competitors call it "pirating" — is an irritant. The U.S.-based Apple Computer Inc. recently brought legal action against a Taiwan company which markets the "Orange" computer, a cheaper but virtually chip-for-chip copy of the Apple.

Still the American business community continues to prosper, with Chinese filling many of the managerial positions.

Among the reasons; well-administered tax incentives, a highly educated and motivated work force, good national economic management and domestic stability.

Hospital boards meetings, public hearing to be Thursday

Midland Memorial Hospital's governing boards will meet at 12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. in their regular monthly meetings Thursday in the MMH board room. In addition, a public hearing will be held at 2:30 p.m. on the annual budget and tax rate.

Agenda items call for the the board of trustees to consider approval and recommendation to the board of directors of the 1983 fiscal year budget.

Also, the board's planning committee will give an update on the chemical dependency and 77-bed expansion certificate of need applications.

Other business will include reports on the board education program and on a letter received from Medical Center Hospital in Odessa along with reports from the standing committees.

Agenda items for the board of directors call for consideration of the financial statements, transfer of funds, indigent care funds, capital purchases and budget amendments.

Also scheduled is a 2:30 p.m. public hearing to consider approval and adoption of the district's annual budget, determining the amount for the annual tax rate, setting the 1982 tax rate and levying the tax for the district.

Midland's weather continues warm

Close, but no cigar.

Tuesday's high temperature of 102 degrees narrowly missed the record 103 set in 1936. The overnight low of 72 eluded the record 58 set in 1970 by a considerably larger margin.

A 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight may add to Midland's monthly and yearly rainfall totals, holding steady at 0.66 and 10.18 inches. Summer's most recent rainfall, 0.22 of an inch, fell on Aug. 8.

Tonight's low should dip to near 70, with southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 mph. Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s. Southerly winds at 10 to 15 mph are expected for Thursday.

Sunset tonight will be at 8:22 p.m.; sunrise Thursday comes at 7:20 a.m.

Mauro confident of sizable lead in land commissioner's race

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Confident that he holds a sizable lead in the race for the land commissioner spot, Democrat Garry Mauro made a stopover this morning at Midland Regional Airport and reiterated his stands on various issues.

"When you're as far ahead in the polls as I am, there won't be much (new) said," quipped the 33-year-old Austin resident who opposes Republican Woody Glasscock in the Nov. 2 general election.

Mauro, who edged Midlander Pete Snelson in a down-to-the-wire Democratic runoff in June, called for expanding the Veterans Land Program to include homebuyers' loans, establishing a permanent university fund for institutions outside The University of Texas and Texas A&M systems, and ensuring that the land commissioner hold business and management skills.

"Texas veterans should be allowed to purchase homes under (the Veterans Land Program) using the money as a down payment," Mauro noted in a news release. "In these days of high interest rates and expensive housing, we need to have a program which will allow our veterans to have the ability to purchase part of the American dream, their own home."

Saying that as land commissioner he would "be sensitive to all needs of Texas," Mauro indicated he expected to have an announcement soon on pre-filing of legislation which would give him the authority to expand that program to include housing.

Mauro, while stressing that he is "for keeping the permanent university fund as it is today" for funding UT and Texas A&M, also wants to establish a similar fund for the 17 state universities outside those systems.

"The founding fathers of Texas intended that all revenues generated by the public lands of Texas be put into education," he said in a prepared text. "We can establish a fund for these colleges and universities by dedicating a portion of the existing severance tax to provide a permanent fund...This will solve a major problem for these institutions which will not raise taxes and will not alter the Permanent University Fund."

Mauro, who said he can bring the latest management and business techniques to the land commissioner office, is adamant in his contention that such skills are an absolute necessity for a Texas land commissioner.

"Texas is blessed with 22.5 million acres of public land which generate money for our public schools and universities," he said. "In order to increase revenues for education and preserve this unique heritage, the land commissioner must have the necessary management and business skills to effectively administrate this office."

Although diplomatic in fielding questions concerning whether or not his vanquished runoff opponent Snelson will support his candidacy, Mauro left the impression that the two do not hold the best of political relationships.

"We're still talking (about receiving Snelson's support)," said Mauro, adding "there's no problem. We had a tough, tough race and we're just going to have to take time to be friends again."

Mauro, on a 20-city swing through West Texas and the Panhandle, indicated he has spent $835,000 thus far in his campaign to defeat Glasscock.

Mistakes lead to shooting, arrest

One mistake compounded by another resulted in the arrest of one man and minor injuries to a private security guard who was released following treatment for gunshot wounds to the head early Tuesday morning.

Jailed under $15,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine was Michael Coit, 22, who lives in a trailer on a mini-storage complex at North Big Spring Street and Lamesa Road.

Treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for superficial pellet wounds to the head was Jan Ray McWhorter, 29, an employee of the Lawrence Security Co. of Odessa.

A sheriff's deputy was called to the storage complex about 12:15 a.m. Tuesday after McWhorter and another security guard said they were patrolling the complex when someone began firing a shotgun. As the deputy and the security guards were circling the complex in marked cars, another shot rang out, hitting McWhorter.

Following his arrest on aggravated assault charges, deputies said Coit told them he is related to the owner of the complex and mistakenly took the guards for prowlers. Due to the proliferation of storage buildings in the area, it turned out the guards were at the wrong complex.

Firemen were called out to a blaze in rural south Midland shortly before 8 p.m. Tuesday. The fire, which sent large clouds of black smoke drifting northward across the city and drew dozens of spectators, was a "controlled burning" of old tires on private property along County Road 140, about a block west of the Rankin Highway. Firemen used 2,000 gallons of water extinguishing the blaze.

Man shares memories of Trans-Pecos tablelands

boyhood Christmas.

"THE OLD SCHOOL had a platform up in one end of the room, and one Christmas they had a Christmas tree up there on it and ol' Santy Claus all dressed up in his red uniform," said McDonald, babysitting his own grandchildren on this day. "I was just a kid — I wasn't old enough to start school — and we were there that night when ol' Santy Claus was taking stuff off that tree, calling out names and going down the aisle to take it to 'em.

"I remember he got up there and called out my name, and I run around and hid under one of them old desks." He laughed. "Liked to scared me to death — Santy Claus had called my name."

Having traveled by wagon or hack most of his early years, McDonald, like everyone else in the area, was mesmerized by the steam locomotive when the first railroad was completed from San Angelo to Fort Stockton.

"Everybody just had to do it; they had to get on the train and go to Angelo one day, spend the day, and come back on the train on the next," he said. "I also remember going through Odessa a long time ago — it was just a little country town then. When we got on that ridge over there (south) of Odessa, we could look over there and see a big bunch of windmills, the most windmills, I guess, of any town in the world. There was just ranch people there then, and everybody had one of those wooden windmills in their back yard."

BUT OF ALL his early memories of the Pecos River country, that of searching out — and finding — the site of the legendary silver mine on a mesa southeast of Girvin is the most vivid, forever kindling his sense of wonder.

The Indians, he said, were the discoverers of the argentine vein glinting like the Pecos waters in the sunlight, and for years they mined it from the great tableland rising just east of McDonald's modern-day home. Later, however, intruders came — Spanish conquistadores who plundered their find, took it for their own, stripped it of its wealth. But even long afterward, when McDonald was a boy, more than just mere myths remained to document a West Texas legend.

"I remember when I was a kid we used to go there and find some of those nuggets lying around there," he said, his eyes assuming a faraway look as he searched the cobwebbed corners of his memory. "They were real heavy, had silver in them...When the Spaniards had found out about it, they had moved in there and mined nearly all of it. But when I was a kid you could still see that old hole in the ground in that mesa. There was just a pocket of that silver there. When it played out that was all of it."

He paused to breathe deeply, and nostalgia left a trace of submerged tragedy in his voice. "They say if you go over there now, there's been so many tourists you can't even find a nugget," he sighed.

Every so often McDonald still drives eastward along his caliche ranchroad, glances up at the mine still visible in the mesa, and remembers. The wealth is gone now, taken by the hand of Indian, Spaniard and Twentieth Century treasure hunter. But even if it still lay buried deep inside that desert crag, it's doubtful McDonald would defile earth and boulder to claim it for his own. For, to a man who has found a special identity with the land of the Pecos, to ravage one of its guarding sentinels would be to ravage his own heart and soul.

Council and the Mexican-American Advisory Council, the city panel approved a CD budget that includes: parks improvements, $150,000; community center, $67,000; street improvements, $146,000; drainage, $186,000; clearance, $50,000; beautify Midland, $10,000; housing rehabilitation, $250,000; day care center, $40,000; and administration, $50,000. All the money is directed toward south and east Midland.

After hearing three hours of pros and cons on developing a tract of land between Cimmaron Street and Racquet Club Drive, the council referred the matter back to the P and Z Commission to have the differences ironed out.

Although residents in the area weren't opposed per se to the development, they objected to bits and pieces of it and what they viewed as resulting traffic problems.

Under development by Steve Wisenbaker, the land would be fenced and include one security entrance with a guard. Two fountains are planned for a center mall area and 27 homes would circle the perimeters.

One point of contention came with two lots on Cimmaron that sit on each side of the development's entrance. Wisenbaker said original plans called for the homes there to be torn down and the area landscaped with a maintenance center located there. After the residents' objections, he had agreed to move the building to within the fenced area.

ANOTHER POINT came with the garbage collection plan that had been proposed by the city staff. With each house having a trash compactor, the garbage would be retained in sealed plastic bags. These would be picked up by the maintenance crew and placed in a large city-owned trash compactor placed in an alley near the development's entrance.

And the residents complained that too much traffic would be pouring out onto Cimmaron and Racquet Club Drives.

With suggestions from the council, the developer said he would consider additional entrances including the idea to make Racquet Club Drive a cul-de-sac to eliminate traffic coming down that road onto Neely.

"We've been attempting to respond to the people's needs. That's why the plans keep changing," said Wisenbaker. And in response to a resident's charge that property would be devalued with this development, he said, "Location is the most important factor in real estate. Racquet Club is a well-established area and we would like to enforce it with this development."

The plan calls for 27 homes in a 17-acre tract.

Akins told the residents that additional traffic can't be avoided. "If this were to be developed the way they have been lately, you'd see more than 100 homes in there. Even if you had five to six entrances, it's still a lot of traffic. I don't think 27 homes will change traffic that much. Whatever you put in there will generate more traffic."

MIDLAND'S SECOND helistop was approved by the council for I. David Porras' Building No. 8 at his One Petroleum Center development at Wadley and A streets. The first helistop is located on top of the BTA building on Pecos Street downtown.

Questioned as to why he didn't want to use nearby Air Park for landing a helicopter, Porras said, "We prefer to operate it from the building. Helicopters get in the way of small planes at Air Park" and his primary use would be for Midland Regional Airport, where he keeps a jet aircraft.

Support came from Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, who recommended approval for the helistop. "I feel better with it on that building rather than operating out of Air Park. Helicopters are designed to operate at places other than airports. Helicopter pilots have said they would rather land and take off at a pad rather than at Air Park."

On a 3-2 vote, Albert Curle was approved to put in a four-story building at the southwest corner of Highway 349 and Loop 250. The council previously had set a rule that buildings in that area must be restricted to 2½ stories because it falls in the flight path of a runway at Air Park.

Curle noted a motel company is considering the building. But because of increasing land values, the firm prefers to go up rather than out with their structure. Offices in the rest of the development will be limited to 2½ stories.

IN PASSING AN ordinance to extend the one-way designations on Louisiana and Michigan streets out to Andrews Highway, the council disagreed on what should be done with the section of Cuthbert Avenue that is one-way for westbound traffic.

Sloan wanted to see it revert to two-way traffic and Councilman Jesse Hatfield preferred to see the one-way changed to eastbound traffic. And the mayor objected to making any change.

"We've got something that works and I'm uncomfortable with changing it," said Akins. But the council approved the idea of reversing the traffic flow on Cuthbert and sending it eastbound. Official action on the possible switch of Cuthbert to eastbound won't be taken until a later date.

Midland sells $10 million in bonds in council meeting

City of Midland cashed in on the volatile bond market Tuesday when $10 million in bonds were sold during a City Council meeting.

Republic Bank of Dallas & Associates was the low bidder on $7 million in general obligation bonds with a bid of 9.0756 percent interest rate. With a premium of $424, it gives a net interest cost of $5,046,076.

Other bidders included Underwood, Newhouse Co, Inc., 9.234 percent interest; First City National Bank of Houston & Associates, 9.264 percent; Rotan, Moseley & Associates, 9.104 percent; and Firt National Bank of Midland with Interfirst Bank of Dallas & Associates, 9.125 percent.

The low bid for $3 million in revenue bonds for the waterworks and sewer system came from E.F. Hutton & Co., with an interest rate of 9.67 percent to give a total interest cost of $2,756,462.49.

The other two bidders on this issue were a joint management group including Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith, Inc., First Southwest Co., and Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc., with a proposed interest rate of 9.7329 percent; and Cowan & Co., with an interest rate of 10.116 percent.

Joe Smith with First Southwest Co., the city's bond counsel, remarked, "The city has gotten the benefit from the current market. You won't believe the volatility of the market."

Afterwards, Mayor G. Thane Akins said the city had been expecting interest rates that would have been about one percentage point higher on each package.

The bonds have a 15-year maturity.

Area's residents fighting plans for city annexation

out to the "country" to get away from the city.

Akins pointed out to two men that they had only moved within half a mile of the city limits. And both admitted they realized at the time they bought the land they would be annexed sometime "in the future" but didn't think the future would be this soon.

"The development over there has gone faster than we expected," said Sloan.

Then came a fusillade of shots from both sides as the resistance forces charged that the council was listening only to the big developers and wasn't caring about "the little guy."

"Looks like you're just doing this for the developers," said one man.

"We've turned down developers in large areas next to the city before," said Sloan.

The mayor attempted to point out that areas intended for annexation but not being developed won't stay that way for long. These areas fall in between the tracts requested for annexation by developers. "If we annex this," he said of the voluntary requests, "it's reasonable and proven this other is going to develop."

Richard Hennessy, director of planning and community development, suggested that if the council wasn't going to annex something it should leave out the one-section request by the Midland Homebuilders Association.

"There is some thought that if these lands aren't annexed, they won't be developed," he explained. "Well, they will be. When developers are ready, they'll go ahead and do it. It's important that you annex areas next to the city limits."

After voting to annex the entire proposed area, Sloan told the Skyview people that if their plat isn't submitted to City Hall by the November second reading, "You're being annexed."

Doctors celebrate milestone

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Jubilant doctors at University of California-San Diego Medical School are quietly celebrating a major milestone that has taken years of laboratory research. They have finally isolated and copied a human gene that, when it goes amiss, produces severe retardation in young boys, causing them involuntary movements, such as biting off their lips and fingers. Victims must live their lives under physical restraints.

The rare and incurable genetic defect known as Lesch-Nyhan syndrome occurs once in every 100,000 births.

"The finding doesn't mean a cure," said Dr. Theodore Friedmann, a professor of pediatrics and one of the researchers. "But it means that we'll probably have a better understanding of the defect." He said that the complex achievement with recombinant DNA technology might lead to an effective treatment.

Isolating the human gene involved long, complex procedures that chemically mix mouse cells with human DNA. "It's extremely complicated, involving genetic tricks of every kind," Friedmann said.

The discovery was outlined in a report by Friedmann and co-workers Douglas J. Jolly, Abby C. Esty and H. Uli Bernhard that was published in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The gene has been placed in the tissue cultures of mice that don't have the syndrome, "to see what happens," according to Friedmann. The gene is the only one deciphered so far in which malfunctions produce behavior changes and retardation, Friedmann said, so it "offers the first possibility" for learning how genes work on the brain to affect intelligence and behavior.

Genes — built of deoxyribonucleic acid, or DNA — carry the inherited blueprint of life. A gene's sole function is to direct the production of an enzyme, but the message in those enzymes determines before birth whether a cell becomes hair or heart, blue eyes or brown.

Throughout life, enzymes affect everything — from appetite to memory to mood. A malfunctioning gene repeated in every cell of the body thus can have devastating consequences.

The gene isolated by the UC-SD researchers orders production of an enzyme called HPRT — hypoxanthine guanine phosphoribosyl transferase. Lesch-Nyhan syndrome occurs when some inherited malfunction shuts down the gene and HPRT is absent. Because the gene is carried on the sex chromosome, the syndrome afflicts only boys.

Pandas may breed in autumn

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's panda pair, Pe-Pe and Ying-Ying, may procreate a playmate for little Tohui when the breeding season begins in September, officials at Chapultepec Park Zoo say.

Zoo Director Gabino Vazquez said Sunday that the conditions are right for bringing the pandas together in the next few weeks. If Ying-Ying becomes pregnant, she willl give birth in five months, he said.

Tohui celebrated his first birthday on July 21. He is the only surviving panda cub born outside of China, and more than a million visitors have come to the zoo to see him since his birth.

The Chinese government gave Pe-Pe and Ying-Ying to the zoo in 1976. They produced an offspring in 1980, but Ying-Ying accidentally crushed it eight days after it was born.

Charlie Green feted at Midland luncheon

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Though not yet a saint, Charlie Green was eulogized Tuesday as a progressive and dedicated agriculture supporter, spokesman, and educator who has given distinguished and unselfish service to Midland County.

"He's very progressive. He's very dedicated," said Midland Chamber of Commerce President Doug Henson in extolling Green, the retiring Midland County agricultural agent, "and he's a believer in the agri-business sector of our county."

Green, who is being feted this week in the Midland County Commissioners' Court-proclaimed "Charlie Green Week," was treated to a chamber-sponsored luncheon at noon Tuesday in the Midland Center and was bestowed with gifts and praises.

"Service to humanity is the best work of life," the event's master of ceremonies, Texas Senator W.E. "Pete" Snelson, said in applying the adage to Green who, at 56, has rounded out 33 years of service as the Midland County agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX).

Snelson noted that agriculture long has been beset by hail and sandstorms, droughts and other disasters, but "none will compare" to the trials to be faced by the young agriculturist who has to start farming "without Charlie Green" to advise and encourage him.

Snelson said when Green launched his career as the Midland County agent in 1949, his stock saying to questions he didn't yet have answers to was that "he didn't know but he'd get the answers, and," said Snelson, "he's been getting the answers ever since."

In other tributes, Midland County Judge Bill Ahders presented Green a plaque for "distinguished and outstanding" service to Midland County and extended sympathy to his yet unnamed successor. Green's retirement from TAEX takes effect next Tuesday.

"Everybody knows I have utmost sympathy for whoever takes Charlie's place — the poor devil," the judge said. "What an assignment!" Then, Ahders addressed Green: "Charlie, you're going to have to take him to your heart."

Roberta Johnson, district director for the TAEX's District VI which is headquartered in Fort Stockton, cited Green as the "most eloquent writer of reports" of anybody in the multi-county district. "When he said something, we knew it was right."

Ms. Johnson read a passage from Ecclesiastes in eulogizing Green, and said that virtues such as "the pursuit of goodness," scrupulousness and eloquence befitted him.

In alluding to his expertise to agriculture-related matters, Ms. Johnson observed that what others may have gleaned from textbooks, "Charlie put to practice."

Among gifts and citations presented Green in the luncheon attended by elected officials, TAEX leaders, family and long-time friends and admirers of Green, were books and art works, a plaque and a Midland City Council tribute which lauded Green for his distinguished service to the agricultural and urban-rural communities and which cited his professional expertise.

Some English now to the manor bought

LONDON (AP) — It won't make you a duke, marquess, earl or baron, but now you no longer have to be to the manor born — you can buy the title.

There are 60,000 manors in England and Wales and 400 in Scotland, where they are known as feudal baronies, and London real estate agents Strutt and Parker have put titles to eight of them on the market. For $6,800 to $11,475, you can become lord of the manor.

They say there was "tremendous interest" when they auctioned 14 others in 1981 and sold another seven last March.

"Buying a manorial lordship basically means becoming the owner of a lot of old documents on parchment and vellum," said Robert Smith, chairman of the Manorial Society of Great Britain.

"But it does have an association with the crown, which originally granted...certain rights and privileges in return for loyal service. You can put the title on your notepaper and even on your checks, which some owners do," he said.

"A lot of owners have coats of arms made to go with the title."

Smith, a 35-year-old company director, and the 900 members of his society, founded in 1906, meet regularly.

Most lords of the manor are British. There are some Americans and a few Germans and Swiss, Smith said.

The eight lordships for sale are in the counties of Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk and Cambridgeshire, and their value largely depends on the number and age of the documents included in the sale. The oldest of the eight is Crepping Hall, Essex, which has documents dating to 1327, but Smith said the oldest manors go back before the Norman invasion of 1066.

Purchasers become owners of court records, indentures of servants, court rolls showing who was liable for jury service, land and rent records, maps, surveys and letters between the lords and their agents.

The records are considered historical documents and may not be removed from county or national archives.

In days long gone, a lord of the manor was often a very powerful person indeed, who had to be paid something like three to five guineas ($15 to $25), when any building or land in his manor was inherited or sold.

"In a big village that could mean a substantial amount of money and the lord of the manor...employed local solicitors as stewards, who made sure the people who were inheriting or buying paid up," Smith said.

The society fought hard in 1922 against the Liberal Party government of Prime Minister David Lloyd George, who wanted to abolish the day-to-day income of manorial lords because it was considered a leftover from the Middle Ages.

The government won and introduced the Law of Property Act, which made the tenancies granted by lords of the manor into freeholds in the hands of the tenants.

After the 1922 act, all that remained of the lordships was the title and some less exciting rights, such as rent for land occupied by telegraph, telephone and electricity poles, sporting rights over common land, rights to cut turf and timber, extract minerals and ownership of beaches, tolls, markets and other franchises.

"Unfortunately, none of the lordships we are selling now include any of these rights," said Jill Brain, spokeswoman for Strutt and Parker.

Some lordships are very unlikely to be sold, like the Duchy of Cornwall, which belongs to Prince Charles and includes a tin mine.

Smith said that if the lordship of Scrivelsby in Lincolnshire went on the market "it would fetch hundreds of thousands of pounds."

Mysterious sighting unexplained

By The Associated Press

Authorities were mystified by sightings across the Northeast which provoked dozens of calls to police and fire departments about a "large white ball descending in the sky."

"We aren't missing anything," said Federal Aviation Adminstration duty officer Bill Nantz in New York, dismissing the possibility it was a stray aircraft. "We have no idea at this time what it was."

"Beats us," said Edward Yandrich of the National Weather Service.

Jim Chanarde of the Union City College Astronomer's Club in Cranford, N.J., said the observatory there sighted the object through a telescope at about 8:33 p.m. Tuesday.

Although the Comet Austin is in the evening sky this month it appears on the horizon and "has nothing of this brightness," said Chanarde, who believed it was a meteor.

MOST UNFORGETTABLE CHARACTER

Chauffeur helps black boys surmount racial barrier

By BROADUS N. BUTLER
Special from Reader's Digest

As sounds of the spring festival faded, we boys gathered around a tall, slender man in the schoolyard. He was dressed in Army surplus khakis as were most of us, though some wore secondhand Boy Scout uniforms, the official insignia removed because we were "colored" and this was Mobile, Alabama, 1929.

The good times we had enjoyed this day could not mask the sad fact that as a fundraiser, our festival had been a failure. "Boys," Clarence Mathews began in a soft, firm voice, "I don't believe we'll be able to make our trip to Washington, D.C., this year. But I pledge to you that we'll make it next year — and someday soon, you'll be Boy Scouts, too."

Looking back, I realize how improbable were Mr. Mathews' dreams. He was a chauffeur who never went past fourth grade. Our parents were poor. What money they made barely put food on the table.

Mr. Mathews never allowed us to think about the handicaps of poverty and race. "My boys are as good as any in this town," he often said. And we believed that.

Mr. Mathews was in his mid-30s when he formed our chapter of the Allen Life guard, a religious organization for black youths. He made clear from the start that his goal was gaining a Boy Scout charter. And he saw the trip to Washington as an achievement so extraordinary that Scout leaders could not deny us a charter.

He found that, by renting a rail coach, 43 boys could go for $15 each, round trip. For months we worked at odd jobs, saving every nickel and dime we earned.

My parents helped pay for my expenses, so I was lucky. Other boys simply could not produce their share. Even so, Mr. Mathews somehow came up with enough money to take us all. Late one August night in 1930, 43 of us boarded a rail coach bound for the nation's capital.

The next morning, the train left our coach at a small station outside Chehaw, Ala., and we marched the five miles or so from the station to Tuskegee Institute. None of us had imagined that there existed a hospital staffed by black doctors and nurses like the veterans' facility at Tuskegee. And visiting Dr. George Washington Carver in his laboratory was the greatest thrill of all. We could not hide the pride we felt being in his presence.

The next day, we arrived in Washington. Night had fallen, and the illuminated dome of the Capitol shone brightly. The awe filling our hearts, however, was soon replaced with uncertainty. Taxis there did not carry Negroes and, for two hours, we waited anxiously while Mr. Mathews placed numerous phone calls.

We needn't have worried, because this man could surmount any barrier. He contacted the lone black congressman — Oscar DePriest of Chicago — who personally led the pool of cars that took us to a local church, where we bedded down.

The city did not seem able to imagine how this band of Negro boys had managed to get there from Alabama in the midst of the Depression, and were were welcomed with open arms — and kitchens. Tours were arranged. We climbed the Washington Monument. At the foot of Abraham Lincoln's statue, Mr. Mathews led us in prayer.

On our last day in Washington, we were escorted through the front door of the White House. President Herbert Hoover shook our hands and spoke with each one of us.

Mr. Mathews had opened a whole new world before us. From the halls of Tuskegee to President Hoover's extended hand, we sensed a land of opportunity for those willing to tackle the impossible and make mircles for themselves. It was a lesson we'd never forget.

Word got around Mobile about all that had happened, and quite a crowd gathered to meet us on our return. Soon the second part of Mr. Mathews' pledge was fulfilled: We were awarded not one Boy Scout charter but three. Mr. Mathews even arranged for us to use the Mobile Scout camping grounds, previously reserved for whites.

These breakthroughs, however, could not surpass the experience of our journey to Washington and the wonder of how Mr. Mathews had accomplished such an impossible dream. Three years later, a small legal notice in a local paper explained how he had done it. A bank was foreclosing a mortgage on his home — a mortgage he had taken out to finance our trip.

Somehow, he managed to keep his home, though he did lose his Model A for a time. But not one of his boys ever lost the meaning of the standards he set for us.

In fact, every boy who made that trip to Washington became a success and, in the years before his death in 1958, Mr. Mathews could list many a distinguished career in business, law, education and community service achieved by those whose lives he had touched.

Astronomers starry-eyed about new comet

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LAKE OF THE WOODS, Calif — There's a just-discovered comet in the sky these nights, so a cluster of amateur astronomers journeyed one night last week to a dark spot near the top of Mount Pinos, 100 miles north of Los Angeles, to try to get a good look at it.

Interest in the comet has been growing since June, when Rodney Richard Dacre Austin, an amateur in New Zealand, discovered it in the morning sky and gave it its name, Comet Austin.

Many skywatchers hoped the new comet would be bright and visible, like Halley's Comet, whose return later in this decade they eagerly await. But, still smarting from the Kohoutek Comet fizzle of a few years ago, they didn't want to say too much about it.

Comet Austin will make its closest approach to the sun this week before swinging back out into space, to return, who knows when? Since comets exhibit their characteristic tails when they are closest to the sun, it's now or never.

Once a month, on the Saturday night after a new moon, when the sky is darkest, several dozen amateur astronomers gather in a large parking lot, 8,831 feet up in the Los Padres National Forest, far from city lights.

They arrive in campers, set up their equipment and play tapes of star music ("E.T." was popular the other night) while scanning the heavens. If someone turns on a light or, worse yet, headlights, they scowl and shout.

Some look at planets. Jupiter and its moons and Saturn and its rings were clearly visible just after sunset. "It changes every night," said Charles Durham, who has been viewing the sky for 15 of his 50 years. "I never get tired of looking at it."

Others look for familiar objects that tantalize the imagination: M13, a ball containing hundreds of thousands of stars; the Lagoon nebula, a cloud of hydrogen gas from which new stars condense; the Andromeda Galaxy, 2 million light years away.

When the light that was observed Saturday night left the Andromeda Galaxy, mastadons and sabre-toothed tigers walked the earth.

Bambi Hale, 14, was using her six-inch telescope to observe Messier objects, 103 clusters and nebulas that were catalogued by the Frenchman Messier in 1784.

"I'm hooked on astronomy, at least as a hobby, and maybe as a profession," she said. Nearby stood her father, Jim. "She's the astronomer. I'm just the chauffeur," he said.

But the big attraction was Comet Austin and, after several tries, it was spotted in the northwest sky, just below the Big Dipper. A pair of binoculars was mounted on a tripod, and people took turns looking at the comet, a small fuzzy object, like a cotton ball.

Some said they could see the tail pointing back up toward the Big Dipper. The tail is created when escaping gases from the sun — the so-called solar wind — blow ice and debris into space from the head of the comet back into space.

Hal Jandorf, whose enthusiasm sparked the interest of many who gathered around him, had hoped to take pictures of Comet Austin. But the comet just wasn't bright enough.

"Just think," Jandorf sighed, "we came all the way up here and all of that drive just to see a fuzzy spot. Halley's will be a lot better than that."

Comet Austin is expected to be visible through the end of this month and perhaps into next month. But increasing brightness from the waxing moon may make observation difficult.

West German economic woes threaten Western alliance

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BONN — A rash of bad economic news this summer for West Germany has dashed hopes of an upturn this year and carries unsettling consequences for Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, his nation's patience and Western alliance harmony.

The failure earlier this month of West Germany's second-largest electronics company, the sputtering of the country's export drive and the rapid growth of unemployment all point to an economy more chronically ill than officials in Bonn had been ready to concede. They also belie recent optimistic forecasts by outside analysts such as those at the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

As West Germany now heads into its third year of stagnation, there is a growing realization that the nation's economic erosion extends further than first imagined. A second-wind spurt toward recovery, like the one that lifted West Germany out of its mid-1970s slump, does not appear to be on the horizon.

FOR EUROPE, THIS SADLY shreds expectations that the region's biggest and historically most vigorous economy would spring back to life and pull its neighbors' sluggish economies along. For the United States, a weakened West German economy likely means more resistance to entreaties for higher allied defense spending and to pleas for fewer business deals with the Soviets.

Here on the home front, a gloomier outlook threatens to encourage more of the same frictions — between governing coalition partners, Germans and foreign workers, environmentalists and business interests — that already have provided a fitful picture of this country adjusting to lower expectations after decades of growth and prosperity.

Most ominous is the slowing of export sales, which in past recessions have been the flywheel that kept West Germany's economic engine turning.

The falloff in foreign orders is being blamed on weakening demand from developing and oil-exporting countries and continued sluggish economic activity in Western industrial countries. But there is a quiet acknowledgement that West Germany's aging industry is losing its competitive edge in some old key fields and failing to establish itself in the new frontiers of computer and microelectronic technology.

LEADING FORECASTERS HERE are predicting that the country will fall far short of the government's ambitious 3 percent growth target next year.

Unemployment — at 1.75 million people or 7.2 percent of the work force, already the highest level since the Federal Republic was created 37 years ago — is rising faster here than in any other major industrialized nation. Corporate bankruptcies, too, are at a record level, running 50 percent ahead of last year's number.

But not until the recent financial collapse of the electrical giant AEG-Telefunken did the gloomy figures seem to sink in. The company is a household name in appliances and was formerly a prime source of goods from televisions to turbines contributing to Germany's post-World War II reconstruction.

Declaring itself insolvent, AEG has begun court settlement proceedings asking that 60 percent of the $1.8 billion debt of its parent company be written off. Much of this is owed to West German banks.

"When even enterprises in such dimensions can't survive," observed the authoritative weekly newspaper Die Zeit last week, "then it dawns on people that the economic crisis is more than a passing irritation, more than just one of the many bad news items on the evening news show. Suddenly, the mood turns bad."

THE PROLONGED RECESSION has exposed structural problems in the economy, suggesting that the slump cannot be brushed off simply as a result of weak world demand or high U.S. interest rates.

One of the secrets of the postwar industrial resurgence here was the purchase of foreign, mainly U.S., technology that was applied with characteristic attention to detail both in design and marketing. That strategy is difficult to repeat now.

1982 campaign unlikely to reveal startling shifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another political campaign is upon us and it is likely to be remembered more for what doesn't happen than for any startling shifts it marks in the mood of American voters.

For the next 10 weeks, logic will be tipped on its ear, even more than it has been during the last 10.

There will be talk about a referendum on the Reagan economic program, about watershed elections and coattails and political IOU's.

Politicians in both parties who've never been close to a balanced budget will vow to do all that's necessary to achieve one...some day. There will be a great deal of talk about the need to keep cutting taxes and hardly any about the recent need to raise them.

The Democrats will talk about how much they've done for women, but if 1982 sees a third woman elected to the Senate, she's almost certain to be a Republican.

President Reagan will take credit for declining interest rates and rising stock prices and blame unemployment on years of Democratic profligacy.

But when the votes are counted on Nov. 2, the likelihood is that the election will prove a wash.

It won't be the watershed the Republicans once hoped it would be and neither will it bring Democrats roaring back from the ashes of 1980.

If it becomes a referendum on anything it would be on the effectiveness of money in politics. The Republicans have pots of money, several times what is available to Democratic candidates.

That financial gap frightens the daylights out of many Democrats. They have nightmares of slick, high-budget advertising campaigns selling Republican candidates and ideas like bars of soap, while the Democratic alternatives sit unnoticed on back shelves.

But some Republicans see it as an embarassment of riches that could backfire among voters who are hard hit by economic conditions and who are listening to Democratic claims that the Reagan administration favors the wealthiest people.

In some of the multimillion dollar campaigns for House seats, the two parties are fairly evenly matched. Both sides will have plenty of money in the contests between Reps. Margaret Heckler, the Republican, and Barney Frank, a Democrat, in Masssachusetts and between Democratic Rep. Tom Lantos of California and his GOP challenger, William Royer.

Freak bicycle accident splits eight-year-old's kidney in two

CLEVELAND (AP) — No one thought anything was seriously wrong with Pamela Wolfe after she wrecked her bicycle and flipped over the handlebars earlier this summer.

But when massive amounts of blood appeared in the urine of the 8-year-old girl from Parkersburg, W.Va., physicians there ordered her taken by helicopter to Cleveland, where urologist Robert Kay couldn't quite believe what his X-rays showed.

Not only had the little girl lacerated a kidney — something doctors in West Virginia had discovered — she had split the organ into two parts. Stranger yet, both parts, as well as her other kidney, appeared to be functioning, the doctor said.

"The kidney was in two distinct pieces," Kay said. "I had never really seen that injury before. Lacerated kidneys are nothing unusual, but this was a freak accident. The impact of the handlebars apparently pushed her skeleton against the kidney, severing it. I don't think she could have done it if she wanted to."

Pamela had been riding her bicycle in the front yard of her home with a friend on the seat when the accident occurred. The bike slipped, she fell into the handlebars, and the boy riding behind her crashed down on top of her.

Vinyl not 'new' product

NEW YORK (AP) — Vinyl is a term applied to polyvinyl chloride, commonly known as PVC. It was discovered more than 100 years ago but did not gain commercial acceptance until the 1930s.

Today it is used in such diverse applications as food wrapping, clothing, and even windows. For window frames, rigid PVC is used for resistance to rot and corrosion.

'Low-rider' remarks may have prompted stabbing

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Remarks about a passing "low-rider" sedan carrying four Hispanic youths in west Midland may have set off a fatal encounter between the four Mexican-American youths and four young Anglo men last Feb. 14, testimony in a murder trial revealed on Tuesday.

The confrontation resulted in the stabbing death of Jeff Dixon, 18, and the wounding of two of his companions about 9 p.m. on Feb. 14 on an automotive supply parking lot in the 1100 block of Midkiff Drive and the filing of murder charges against 17-year-old Marcus Rodriquez, the defendant in the murder trial, and brothers Adam Marmolejo Rodriquez, 17, and Manuel Rodriquez, 18.

Rob Roberts, 24, testified in Midland's 238th State District Court that he and his friends, Mark McBeath, 21, John C.C. Lewallen, 23, and Dixon were talking and drinking some beer on the Action Auto Supply parking lot, adjacent to a fast-food restaurant, when the older model, low-rider Chevrolet sedan carrying the four Hispanics passed by.

"We had said something about low-riders as the car passed by," Roberts testified under questioning by state prosecutor David Joers. "We said, 'Hey, low-rider' or something like that."

Joers asked him who made the remarks.

"I imagine all of us did," Roberts said.

Roberts said the passing car returned, made a U-turn and parked near his and his friends' vehicles.

Roberts said that four of the Hispanics, including the defendant, got out of the car; three of them immediately approached him and his friends. A fourth person in the low-rider sedan "kind of trailed back," Roberts said.

He said Marcus Rodriquez, the larger of the Hispanics, asked him: "What the hell is all the yelling about?"

Roberts said he suddenly was "knived," though initially he thought he was just hit, in the back. Roberts said he then started walking over to the nearby Sonic Drive-In restaurant to call police, and that he noticed "the guy heading toward Mark McBeath with his hand up."

Roberts described the defendant as "kind of cock-sure" and "very confident" during the brief encounter.

In cross-examination by defense attorney Edward T. Garza, Roberts testified that he and his companions said, as if in harmony, "Hey, low-rider," as the low-profile sedan passed by.

"Is it customary for y'all to yell at every car that goes by?" Garza asked Roberts.

"No," conceded Roberts, who said they yelled at the passing car but "did not cuss." He said that they were "cutting up" and having a good time, and were drinking beer from the ice-chest in McBeath's pickup.

Testimony from other state witnesses — Lewallen and McBeath — at times differed with parts of Roberts' version of the incident.

Lewallen testified that "no one from our group said anything" at the passing low-rider sedan or to the low-riders "or I most likely would have heard it. We didn't even lift a hand."

However, once the low-rider sedan had made the U-turn and the youthful Hispanics had stepped out and approached Lewallen and his three companions, they asked, Lewallen said, " 'What the hell did y'all say about our car?' or something along those lines."

Lewallen said Roberts then remarked "'We're not accustomed..." but said he was "not sure" of the reference Roberts intended. However, Garza earlier had mentioned that low-rider sedans in west Midland were relatively rare. Low-riders are fairly common on Midland's east side, wherein Midland's Hispanic population is concentrated.

"We don't want any trouble," Lewallen said he told the Hispanic youths.

McBeath, who said he was stabbed in the face and back, testified that he and his friends were "just talking to each other" when the low-rider sedan pulled up and the Hispanics stepped out.

"Did you say something to me about my car?" McBeath said Marcus Rodriquez asked. "That's when I felt I was slapped" but instead was stabbed, he said.

Tami Feeler, a witness apart from the two groups, testified that she heard "a lot of obscenities from both parties."

Sgt. Lannie Lee, an off-duty police detective who witnessed the incident from a nearby supermarket parking lot and who intervened in the incident and brought in back-up police units, testified that Dixon already was stabbed and lying on the pavement when he arrived at the scene.

Lee told the six-man, six-woman jury in the case presided over by Judge Vann Culp that defendant Marcus Rodriquez "seemed to be calm. For lack of a better term, he seemed to be cocky, laughed about the matter."

Mesquite program scheduled

A mesquite control demonstration will be held Friday from 10 a.m. to noon at the Braun Ranch (Scharbauer) pasture.

According to Charlie Green, Midland County extension agent, the demonstration is designed to evaluate the effectiveness of both old and new herbicides in controlling mesquite when applied as foliar sprays and as individual plant basal treatment.

Also included in the demonstration will be a new pelleted herbicide applied both as a broadcast and individual plant treatment.

Allan McGinty, area extension range specialist, will be present to discuss the materials, rates and application methods and evaluation of results to date.

Anyone wishing to attend the field day should meet at the cattle guard on FM 1788, seven miles south of Warfield Truck Stop, by 10 a.m. The cattle guard is on the east side of the road across from the green pens on the Faudree Estate Ranch.

Midlander in intensive care unit

A rural man injured when his car rolled over early Tuesday night was listed in serious condition this morning in the intensive care unit of Midland Memorial Hospital.

John Hester, 26, of Route 3, Midland, suffered head injuries when his 1981 Mercury ran off County Road 140 three miles south of town and overturned about 6:45 p.m. Tuesday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Meeting canceled

A Southwestern Bell meeting with members of the Midland Homebuilders Association scheduled for today at 7:30 p.m. at the Midland Holiday Inn Holidome has been canceled due to lack of interest, according to a Bell spokesman.

Purpose of the meeting was to explain a new customer-provided inside wire and pre-wiring policy plan which will be introduced in the Midland area next week.

Get acquainted with Commercial Bank's Time Deposit Counselors: Jerry Armstrong, Assistant Vice President — Time Deposit Services; Sara Ames, Assistant Cashier and Time Deposit Officer; Carol Ray, Time Deposit Counselor; Vi Evans, Assistant Cashier and Time Deposit Officer; and Lana Cooley, Time Deposit Counselor.

You don't have to have a lot of money to get professional answers to your money management questions at Commercial Bank. Our Time Deposit Counselors will help you untangle the complex options you face in reaching your financial goals.

We know that savings and certificates of deposit are only part of a prudent financial program that includes your insurance, stocks and bonds, real estate, and collectibles. But a cash reserve is a most important part. Helping you build it is our business. Getting started is up to you.

The key to building a sizeable cash reserve is in getting started, and in having a systematic plan. When you've accumulated as little as $500 in a Commercial Bank savings account, you can begin the purchase of Small Saver Certificates. And you can start an Individual Retirement Account with as little as $100.

With $7,500 you can earn a good return on our 91–Day Certificate, tied to the average yield on U.S. Treasury bills.

The 182–Day Money Market Certificate is popular with those having $10,000 or more to invest.

You can also save several hundred federal tax dollars each year by depositing up to $2,000 ($4,000 if both husband and wife work) in an Individual Retirement Account. We offer both a Fixed Rate and a Variable Rate IRA. The All Savers Certificate is also a tax shelter for those in higher tax brackets.

Each depositor is insured up to $100,000 by the F.D.I.C. Joint depositors are insured separately, providing much greater coverage.

Our Time Deposit Counselors will show you how a combination of regular savings, certificates of deposit, automatic transfers from checking to savings, and retirement accounts can get you where you want to go, financially.

At Commercial Bank we're rich in people who care.

Benjamin Sasway, a Vista, Calif., draft resister, is accompanied by a supporter as he enters the federal courthouse in San Diego Tuesday. He is charged with failure to register for the draft. Jury selection in his trial began Tuesday.

Oklahomans choose candidates

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Democratic Gov. George Nigh and Republican state auditor Tom Daxon won their parties' nominations for governor in primary balloting Tuesday.

Nigh, in an effort to be the state's first governor to win back-to-back terms, coasted to an easy victory over storm-window manufacturer Howard Bell, 58, of Blanchard, a political unknown.

Daxon took the GOP nomination with a resounding victory over state Rep. Neal McCaleb.

With 971 of 2,395 Democratic precincts counted, Nigh had 153,607 votes, or 84 percent, to Bell's 28,918. And with 959 GOP precincts reporting, Daxon had 29,193 votes to 11,775 for McCaleb. The third man in the race, Don House, had 1,706 votes.

In the 1st Congressional District, aircraft sales executive Richard C. "Dick" Freeman defeated two opponents to win the Republican nomination and the right to challenge Democratic Rep. Jim Jones, chairman of the House Budget committee and a leader in the Democrats' budget battles with the Reagan administration. Freeman, 54, unsuccessfully ran against Jones four years ago.

There are no U.S. Senate seats up for grabs this year, but all six of Oklahoma's congressmen are running for re-election. Besides Jones, four others ran unchallenged in Tuesday's primary and the fifth was expected to easily defeat his opponent.

Early returns indicated a light vote statewide. It was hot Tuesday in Oklahoma; the temperature in Tulsa was 104 degrees, and it was 102 in Oklahoma City.

Turnout by voters was expected to be light, although Lee Slater, the Election Board secretary, declined to make a prediction.

The closest race appeared to be the Democratic nomination for attorney general. The incumbent attorney general, Jan Eric Cartwright, was opposed by Mike Turpen, a district attorney from Muskogee in eastern Oklahoma.

Cartwright is far better known across the state but his rulings have upset businessmen and prompted some to pour money into Turpen's campaign.

As expected, Democratic U.S. Rep. Wes Watkins easily won renomination to Congress from the 3rd District with a primary victory over writer Leland Kelly, 38. With 18 of 560 precincts reporting, Watkins had 3,398 votes to Kelly's 523.

Besides Jones, the other congressmen running unopposed for their party's nomination were Democrats Mike Synar in the 2nd District, Dave McCurdy in the 4th, Glenn English in the 6th and Republican Mickey Edwards in the 5th.

In addition to Daxon, the only Republican in the present administration, and McCaleb, the state House minority leader, Moore homebuilder Don House was also seeking the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

He was given little chance of winning but could be a spoiler by drawing enough votes to force McCaleb and Daxon into a September runoff.

Democratic Lt. Gov. Spencer Bernard was seeking renomination against Rodney J. Ray and John Rodgers. On the GOP side, state Sens. Norman A. Lamb and Warren E. Green and Michael Williams were contesting the lieutenant governor's nomination.

Kentucky county votes against liquor

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Pike County, an oasis of prohibition since 1947, has voted to turn back the first attempt at making the sale of booze legal again.

Billy Joe Justice, chairman of the Citizens Against Alcoholic Beverages, said after Tuesday's victory that folks living near wet territory ensured the defeat of the referendum to allow liquor sales.

"They're telling the truth about how destructive alcoholic beverages are because they live close to the West Virginia border," where liquor sales are legal, Justice said.

Pike County, with a population of 80,000, would have been eligible for 36 liquor store licenses had the measure passed, state officials said. There would have been no limit on establishments selling wine and beer for carry out.

Government says resister knew consequences

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The government, in the second case against a student accused of breaking the new mandatory registration law, says draft opponent Benjamin Sasway knew the consequences of his actions.

"The evidence will show that it's a personal choice he had made, being aware of the consequences of violating the law," Assistant U.S. Attorney Yesmin Annen told the jury on Tuesday.

Sasway, 21, a student at Humboldt State University in Arcata, Calif., said before his trial began that his "modest aim" is to destroy the Selective Service System.

Indicted July 30, Sasway was the first youth charged under the mandatory Selective Service registration law that took effect in July 1980. If convicted, he faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

About 40 protesters gathered outside the court, carrying anti-draft signs and singing, "Give Peace a Chance."

"All he had to do to comply with the law was fill out a registration card," Ms. Annen told the jury. "There is no draft in existence. The government made no attempt to induct him or force him into military service."

Sasway wrote President Jimmy Carter in July 1980 saying he wouldn't sign up. The letter was introduced as evidence by Ms. Yesmin in an attempt to prove that Sasway knew he was required to register, but refused to do so.

During cross-examination of Selective Service System attorney Edward Frankle, Sasway's attorney suggested that his client had complied with the law.

"The law said he had to go to the post office and provide the information. He went to the post office (when he mailed the letter to Carter) and he provided most of the information," said Charles T. Bumer.

But Frankle said that a date of birth, which Sasway did not supply, was essential, "because if Congress allowed us the authority to induct it would probably be done by lottery by date of birth."

Congress has not authorized funds for a draft or given the Selective Service System authority to conduct a draft.

Frankle has said that 8.6 million men born between 1960 and 1964 have registered. According to the Census Bureau, another 700,000 men were born in the United States during those years who should be registered.

But Frankle said he doesn't believe they are all draft resisters. He said many don't know the requirements, and others are in mental institutions, prison or are disabled.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, August 26, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: U.S. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, writer Christopher Isherwood and the late actor Jim Davis (J.R.'s daddy on "Dallas") were born on this date. Welcome changes affect employment and romance in the coming year. New partnerships require a large investment of time, but the results will make temporary sacrifices worthwhile. Family members are supportive and understanding. Be careful not to neglect your domestic responsibilities while absorbed with your work. You run the risk of having romantic partner think you indifferent! Although certain relatives are more involved in your life than you might like, they can help your career. Be diplomatic when they make suggestions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend helps you earn extra cash. Invest this money wisely. Rely on experts' advice. Your responsibilities increase but so does your feeling of satisfaction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be confident. Others look to you for leadership. Express yourself more clearly and write down your ideas for future reference. Your judgment is excellent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Show influential people just how responsible you can be. Finalize contracts and agreements. Romantic partner will ask personal questions. Be prepared to answer them!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Circumstances encourage you to make friendly contact with bankers. Financial backing looks sure-fire. Your aggressiveness pays off if you are not arrogant.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your travel plans get the "green light" from higher-ups. Talk things over with authority figure. He or she will play a major role in your future success. Be honest about your goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A special favor will give you the edge over the competition today. Your entertainment plans receive strong support. A candid talk with mate results in minor changes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A newcomer causes a small shakeup at work. You benefit from adopting a practical approach to a career or business project. Romance seems somewhat confusing, but time is on your side.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Allow more time for creative and artistic projects. Money is still tight but expenses are decreasing. Peer pressure may be causing problems for teenager. Show loving concern.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A senior employee comes to the rescue of a novice, and the generation gap is permanently closed. Be sensitive to nuances when dealing with a complex domestic problem.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Concede a small point in business negotiations and you will get everything else that you want. A contract will be a big money-maker, but it also entails a heavy workload.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Concentrate on attaining one goal at a time and progress will come easier for you. Shared responsibilities bring you closer to the one you love.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not hesitate to take on new responsibilities. Revel in the power that comes with them. Things begin to go your way at home. Romance becomes more fulfilling.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

The time to start thinking about overtricks is after you have assured your contract. A favorable lead distracted South from this main goal, with disastrous results.

The bidding is a textbook example of simplicity and directness. South bid what he expected to make, and North had nothing to add to his opening call.

West led the king of clubs, and declarer was delighted that the defenders had not picked up their two heart tricks at the opening gun. With visions of collecting all thirteen tricks, declarer took the ace of clubs and led a spade to his king. West's failure to follow suit was something of a blow, but created no great concern at the moment. Declarer crossed to dummy with the queen of diamonds, took a trump finesse and cashed the ace.

Leaving the queen of trumps in East's hand, declarer now tried to get to the table with a diamond. East ruffed and shifted to a heart, and the defenders took three heart tricks for down one.

"Terribly unlucky," muttered South. "Not only did trumps break 4-0, but diamonds were 4-1."

Had declarer realized that he could afford to lose two heart tricks and a trump, he might have found the successful line. After winning the opening lead, declarer should immediately lead a trump to his ten. If West wins, the defenders can take two heart tricks but dummy's last trump controls the third round of the suit. Any other play by the defenders allows declarer to draw the last trumps with the ace-king and then get at least one heart discard on the diamonds. As the cards lie, West shows out on the first trump and it is a simple matter to get back to dummy with a diamond to repeat the trump finesse.

Declarer's virtuoso technique is thus rewarded with an overtrick—seven spades, three diamonds and the ace of clubs.

Crime fighting time

Behind every cloud there may be a silver lining. But behind that silver lining all too often is someone trying to steal it.

A recent news article in The Reporter-Telegram noted that the oil boom in the Permian Basin has brought something other than wealth, a sound economy and bright future to Midland and Odessa. It's an increase in criminal activity that local residents likely will be living with for awhile.

Law enforcement officials say the increase in crime can be directly linked to the influx of people to this area. Unemployed people from other areas move into a region such as this in the belief they can get good paying jobs easily and when they find only experienced workers are needed or when the jobs "dry up" as in the current slowdown, some of them turn to crime as a means of supporting themselves and their families.

Thefts, robberies and burglaries all are on the increase and that's likely to remain the trend until the influx of people to this region slows further.

Law enforcement officers have met the challenge admirably to this point. They should continue to remain vigilant, of course, because it is only through their crime-fighting efforts that the public can be adequately protected and the illicit efforts of criminals foiled.

Local courts, too, can assist in the crime-fighting effort by meting out harsh penalties to those convicted of crimes.

But if safety begins at home, so does security against the increase in criminal activity. Residents of Midland and Odessa should be aware that they are in greater risk nowadays of becoming victims of crime and should take the necessary steps to minimize that risk.

Utilizing information available from the crime prevention units of each of the police departments is a good starting point. But police officials and sheriff's deputies also will readily talk with residents about ways to make themselves safer in their daily routines in their homes, on city streets, in the country and at their places of business.

Crime prevention is the responsibility of everyone. At a time like the present, when crimes are on the increase, taking steps to protect ourselves and our property can save a lot of heartaches.

Scapegoats in Paris

The Jews of the Marais believed they were finished with anti-Semitism. The quiet quarter of Paris had once known their agony: Here French Jews were rounded up by the Vichy government and sent to the Nazi extermination camps. But when the war ended, survivors of the Holocaust came back, joined by Jews from North Africa. The Marais rebuilt itself, and the Jewish community baked matzo and observed the religious holy days and celebrated weddings without fear.

But the peace of the Marais was shattered not long ago by machine-guns and hand grenades. Four terrorists blasted their way into a Jewish restaurant, firing indiscriminately at diners and waiters. Six people were killed, including an Arab kitchen worker. Twenty-one people were left bleeding on the cobblestone streets. It was the fifth anti-Jewish attack in Paris in 10 days.

Direct Action, the craven terrorist group which claimed responsibility for the Marais attack, said it was retaliating for the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

The victims of the attack were not Israelis, nor did they have anything to do with invading Lebanon. They were as innocent as the Lebanese caught in the deadly crossfire between Israel and the PLO. The logic of slaughter was the logic of Hitler, who insanely blamed the Jews for the defeat of Germany in World War I and burned them in the ovens of Auschwitz.

Israel rose out of the ashes of the Holocaust, settled by Jews who vowed never again to live as a powerless minority in a nation not their own. The importance of a Jewish homeland is underlined by attacks on Jews in the Diaspora such as happened in the Marais. Israel must forever endure as a haven for worldwide victims of anti-Semitism, a sovereign nation for the Jewish people who return to Zion.

But as a sovereign nation, Israel joins the community of nations, a community where survival is based not only on moral justification, but on strength and ability to live with neighbors. Criticism of Israel's invasion of Lebanon is not anti-Semitism. Uncritical support of a friend can be a dangerous form of self-indulgence, which harms the one it seeks to help by fostering illusions until too late. We intend to stand by Israel's survival in the tempestuous Middle East, but not stand silent when we feel our ally has gone too far.

The killing of innocent Jews in Paris is not a threat against Israeli military policy. It is a recurrence of anti-Semitism, a virus which lies dormant until vicious Jew-haters see an opportunity to strike.

Israel has its own threats and problems, its errors and history to overcome. It cannot alone protect Jews from anti-Semitism. Outraged people of all lands must decry the slayings in Paris and give anti-Semites no chance to raise their ugly heads at this time of international crisis.

Another View:

Dipping the public

Double-dipping, the practice of drawing more than one government salary or pension, is a popular target for budget-cutters. Most of the criticism these days concerns former federal employees who collect both a civil service pension and Social Security. But there are double-dippers of another kind.

There are retirees who collect as many as three government-related pensions — local, state and federal, civilian and military.

President Reagan, the most prominent double-dipper, receives $22,400 a year for his past service as a two-time governor of California. The Sacramento Chapter of the National Urban League wants to put a stop to the pension check and it is bringing suit.

The league contends the Constitution bans a state benefit for a president. We're not quarreling with that position or with the legal action. But the league is being mighty selective in its choice of targets.

Sen. Alan Cranston, in addition to his Senate salary, gets $47,000 a year from California for past service as a state employee. And Cranston is a classic example of what cost of living increases can do to enrich a retiree and wreck a government budget. His state pension is almost three times his top state salary of $18,000.

The National Taxpayers Union reported recently that 55 members of Congress are receiving military pensions and also raised the question of constitutionality. Only one has deferred receiving the military benefit while in office.

Regarding double-dipping in general, the group said it wasn't contesting whether the pensions had been earned but added "it's time the American taxpayer blew the whistle on double-dipping from a U.S. Treasury that is drowning in red ink."

The Taxpayers Union is right. Double-dipping is so widespread and so costly, it's futile to single out one beneficiary or group. It's the system that needs changing.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Nicaragua is Central American powder keg

WASHINGTON — Central America is a powder keg that could explode within the next few months. The impact could make El Salvador's civil war seem like a backfiring automobile.

Jack Anderson

The timebomb is Nicaragua, and the principal combatants would be the leftist Sandinista regime in Managua and their opponents in exile in neighboring Honduras. They have already had numerous bloody clashes.

There is grave danger these skirmishes could precipitate open conflict between Honduras and Nicaragua. The Honduran forces, armed with U.S. equipment, probably would have a military edge over the Sandinistas.

Nicaragua therefore might call on Cuba for help. The appearance of Cuban soldiers would be countered by increasing U.S. involvement. The Cubans, of course, rely on the Soviet Union for armaments. This could bring a confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

A principal catalyst in this explosive equation is Jose Francisco Cardenal, leader of the anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan Democratic Force. He is a former Nicaraguan businessman, popularly known as "Chicano," who organized opposition to the late dictator Anastasio Somoza. After Somoza's overthrow three years ago, Cardenal served briefly as vice president of the Sandinistas' Council of State.

In an interview with my associate Jon Lee Anderson, Cardenal said he quit his council post and took up arms in exile because "Marxist-Leninist elements had begun to monopolize what was supposed to be a council representative of all sectors of Nicaraguan society."

He said his force, which is already conducting guerrilla operations inside Nicaragua, is composed of patriots who want to rid their homeland of its Communist rulers.

Cardenal admitted that his troops include former members of Somoza's detested National Guard. "We take anyone who comes to us as a Nicaraguan ready to fight," he explained. "We have ex-Guardsmen, sure — just like we have ex-Sandinistas."

The short, stocky exile leader, prematurely gray in his mid-40s, said he has 2,000 to 3,000 active fighters operating within Nicaragua's northern province, and clamed, "We have eight to ten thousand more waiting for the word inside Nicaragua. They are under training and waiting for the arms we shall get to them."

Cardenal says his guerrillas have modern weapons, including machine-guns, bazookas and shoulder-held guided-missile launchers. He hopes to have surface-to-air missiles soon.

"One doesn't negotiate with the communists," he declared. "You don't win a war by talking — you win it by killing, and that is what we are doing, every day, inside Nicaragua. We will triumph, too. We will have Managua in six months."

How can he be so confident? There are whispers that Cardenal is the principal beneficiary of the reported $19 million in covert CIA funds that President Reagan approved to destabilize Nicaragua.

Cardenal denies this. "We'll take money from any democratic institution or agency," he said. "We need the U.S. government to help us with political pressure. The CIA could help us by relaying information back to Washington. But their direct involvement would hurt more than help us because of their bad reputation in Latin America."

He would not specify the amounts and sources of his arms supplies, other than "several Latin American countries." Sandinista diplomats in Washington say Cardenal — and other exile groups — are getting their arms and funds directly from the Honduran military.

A Honduran official in Washington insisted that his country is taking a neutral position between the contending Nicaraguan groups. "But Nicaragua is trying to provoke a war," the diplomat said. "There have been a series of violations of our territory."

Then he added an ominous warning: "If we are attacked, we'll attack." And the chain reaction would begin.

FAREWELL TO FARY: After seven years in Congress, Rep. John Fary, D-Ill., is retiring at the end of the year. His departure will leave a certain void on Capitol Hill.

The 71-year-old Fary is an amiable anachronism, a relic of the days when big-city bosses controlled great blocs of Congress. Fary was handpicked by the late Mayor Richard Daley as possessing the requisite ethnic background and unquestioning loyalty to represent a heavily Polish district of South Chicago. In return, Fary never hid the fact that Dick Daley was his most important constituent.

Short and stocky, Fary relished the nickname "Big John." On his arrival in Washington in 1975, he presented little toilet-shaped radios to congressional leaders with the explanation that the "Little John" was a gift from "Big John."

A number of Fary's congressional staff aides were discovered performing political chores for the Daley machine in Chicago instead of tending to business in Washington. When one was found working in a funeral parlor, Fary explained that he was useful in contacting "schools and clubs."

One of Fary's most convincing techniques is to play dumb. He used to require an aide to guide him through the maze of underground corridors that link the Capitol and the House office buildings. And he once expressed awe at the ability of his top assistant to get him "write-ups" in the Congressional Record — a medium that is open to anything a member wishes to have published.

Fary hasn't lost his touch. When one of my reporters asked him recently about a specific issue, Fary obligingly pulled out some 3-by-5 cue cards and rattled off answers that had nothing to do with the questions asked.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Pope warns clergy to stay clear of politics

WASHINGTON - Pope John Paul II is still trying to convince Catholic priests to stay out of politics, particularly radical, revolutionary politics.

William Glandoni

He has been saying much the same, in different words, for over three years now.

But, it seems, some bishops and priests in the Americas choose not to heed the Holy Father's words.

The pope's latest effort was a pastoral letter addressed to the bishops of Nicaragua.

The Sandinista government of that Central American country sought to suppress the papal message, presumably because the pope's words can be taken as a criticism of what has been characterized as "persecution" of the church there.

On three occasions, the Nicaraguan interior ministry's censorship office refused the independent newspaper, La Prensa, permission to publish the text of the pope's letter to the bishops.

Pedro Joaquin Chamorro Barrios, publisher of the paper, said that La Prensa was unable to print its Monday, Aug. 9, issue because the story on the papal letter that the censor rejected was slated for "such display" that no substitution was possible.

What made the ban on publication of the pastoral letter in La Prensa particularly galling was the fact that it had been read from pulpits in Managua during Mass the day before.

In his message, John Paul II voiced total opposition to what Nicaraguans say is the Sandinista campaign in favor of creation of a "people's church" in Nicaragua. "Absurd and dangerous," the pope termed the idea.

"The concept of a people's church," the papal letter said, "can hardly escape being imbued with very ideological connotations, reflecting a certain political radicalism, the class struggle, or the acceptance of violence to achieve certain goals."

Although the pope did not specifically condemn the Nicaraguan government, he did exhort Nicaraguan Catholics to remain united behind their bishops and to avoid "any germ of schism or division."

News of the Sandinistas' efforts to suppress the papal letter reached here after separate conferences in which, first, a prominent U.S. Catholic layman and, then, two well-known Nicaraguan exiles discussed the campaign against the church which, they said, is abetted by radical priests.

Jose Gonzalez, the man who headed Nicaragua's first human rights commission until he was forced into exile, and Humberto Belli, a Catholic sociologist and newsman, said that even Managua Archbishop Miguel Obando had been subject to physical abuse.

Belli also said that the Sandinistas were trying to split the Catholic church, into "reactionary" and "progressive" factions. He noted that three Catholic priests still hold prominent positions in the Sandinista regime, in defiance of the expressed wishes of the pope. They are Miguel D'Escoto, former editor of Maryknoll magazine, who is foreign minister, Ernesto Cardenal, minister of culture, and Edgar Parrales, ambassador to the Organization of American States.

Earlier, Michael Novak, Catholic political philosopher and author, charged that "the Sandinistas have already mounted a major attack against the Nicaraguan Council of Bishops." Novak said that "some of the clergy (in Nicaragua) are more involved in revolution than in the church, (trying) to create an ideology that uses Catholic words to baptize a secular revolution."

Novak spoke at a conference to introduce a new book, "The Pope and Revolution: John Paul II Confronts Liberation Theology," published by the Ethics and Public Policy Center, Washington, D.C.

The book is a collection of essays and speeches, including John Paul II's address to the Latin American bishops conference in Puebla, Mexico, Jan. 28, 1979, on the subject of liberation theology.

All the writings in it, except that of Father Gustavo Gutierrez, reflect the pope's conviction that direct involvement of the clergy in politics endangers the primary mission of Christianity.

ART BUCHWALD

Banks spring up, but shops are forfeited

Every time an old building is torn down in this country, and a new building goes up, the ground floor becomes a bank.

Art Buchwald

The reason for this is that banks are the only ones who can afford the rent for the ground floor of the new buildings going up. Besides, when a bank loans someone money to put up a new building, it usually takes an option for the street-floor facilities.

Most people don't think there is anything wrong with this, and they accept it as part of the American free-enterprise system. But there is a small group of people in this country who are fighting for Bank Birth Control.

This is how Huddlestone Hubbard, the BBC's chairman, explained it:

"Whenever you see an old building torn down," Hubbard said, "you usually see a candy store, a dry cleaner, a delicatessen and possibly a florist torn down with it. These shops are all replaced in the new building with a beautiful glass, aluminum, wall-to-wall carpeted money factory.

"Now from an aesthetic viewpoint, a bank looks better than a dry cleaner, a candy store, a delicatessen and a florist. But from a practical point of view, it's a sheer disaster. If you want a newspaper, a candy bar or a chocolate milk shake, you can't get it at a bank. Nor can you run out to a bank for a pound of Swiss cheese and a six-pack of beer when you have guests coming over.

"A bank is great if you want to buy a car, but it's useless if you want to have your dress cleaned.

"And while a bank might buy flowers to give itself a human image, it doesn't sell any when you want to make up with your wife."

"What you're saying then, Mr. Hubbard, is that every time a bank goes up, something in all of us dies."

"Exactly. One of the reasons kids are getting in so much trouble these days is that there are no candy stores to hang around any more. When they tear down a delicatessen, the tangy smells of potato salad, salamis, corned beef and dill pickles are lost forever. Unless you're trying to make a loan, no one ever salivates in a bank.

"The situation is more crucial than anyone thinks," Hubbard continued. "At the rate they're tearing down consumer stores and replacing them with banks, we estimate that in 10 years it will be impossible to buy a loaf of bread in this country. What good is it to get 7 percent on your money if you starve to death?"

"Then what you're saying is that it isn't a question of not taking it with you. It's a question of staying alive while you have it," I said.

"Something like that," Hubbard agreed. "We're trying to get the public to wake up to the fact that it's better to have a store that sells screwdrivers than a bank that gives away alarm clocks."

"What's the solution?"

"A government decree that a bank has to supply the same services as the stores it tore down. If it's a bakery, they have to sell cake; if it's a photography shop, they have to develop film; and if it's a dry-goods store, they have to sell warm underwear. If they provide the services of the store they tore down, then we'll let them do a little moneylending on the side."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 25, the 237th day of 1982. There are 128 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 25, 1718, French immigrants founded the city of New Orleans in Louisiana.

On this date:

In 1883, the Krakatoa volcano erupted in the Dutch East Indies, creating a tidal wave that killed 36,000 people.

In 1941, British and Soviet troops invaded Iran during World War II.

In 1965, a massive avalanche roared down from a glacier in the Swiss Alps, burying 108 people at a hydroelectric construction project.

In 1973, the U.N. Security Council voted to condemn Israel for what it called a "premeditated air attack" on Lebanese villages.

Ten years ago: Communist China cast its first veto in the U.N. Security Council, blocking Bangladesh's membership in the United Nations.

Five years ago: Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan declared his opposition to President Jimmy Carter's plan for the Panama Canal's eventual turnover to Panama.

One year ago: The U.S. Voyager 2 speacecraft came within 63,000 miles of Saturn, transmitting photos and other information about the planet to Earth.

Today's birthdays: Composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein is 64. Actor Sean Connery is 52. Former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus is 51.

Thought for today: I never made a mistake in my life — at least never one that I couldn't explain away afterward. — Rudyard Kipling, English writer (1865-1936).

Apathy stalls drive to preserve motel where Martin Luther King Jr. was shot

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Apathy has stalled a drive to preserve as a monument the small motel where the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated, backers say.

Charles A. Scruggs, an organizer of a foundation to honor the slain civil rights leader, said Tuesday the group has raised only $25,000 of the $240,000 needed to save the motel from the auction block and possible demolition.

A U.S. Bankruptcy Court judge in April gave the foundation until Thursday to come up with the money.

"It looks tough," Scruggs said. "It looks very tough."

King was shot April 4, 1968, as he stood on the second-floor balcony of the Lorraine Motel.

He was in Memphis to give support to sanitation workers on strike after the city refused to recognize their union.

D'Army Bailey, an attorney and member of the Martin Luther King Memphis Memorial Foundation, said a nationwide plea to blacks for funds for the motel has been largely ignored.

"Right now, I wouldn't put a lot of hope in it," he said. "I think it's a matter of priorities. I think people have forgotten a lot...If we don't care enough to see it saved, then so be it."

The foundation was formed in April after Harry Sauer of Memphis, a businessman, filed a foreclosure notice against Walter Bailey, the motel owner. Sauer contended that Bailey, who is no relation to D'Army Bailey, defaulted on a $140,000 construction loan.

The Lorraine, a three-building complex with 52 rooms, was to have been auctioned on the steps of the Shelby County Courthousee on April 22. On the eve of the sale, however, Walter Bailey filed for bankruptcy and halted the foreclosure.

The foundation announced April 27 that it had borrowed $10,000 as front money to buy the Lorraine from Bailey. A week later, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge William Leffler approved the sale of the motel to the nonprofit organization, setting the Aug. 26 deadline.

The foundation's wants to convert the Lorraine into a permanent monument to King and the civil rights movement. It would include an audio visual center, a library, a performing arts auditorium, meeting rooms, a restaurant, a gift shop and a museum.

Former diplomat's son convicted of fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The son of a former Liberian diplomat has been convicted of engineering a $27 million trans-Atlantic wire fraud scheme.

A U.S. District Court jury Tuesday found that Joseph Hartford-Graham illegally gained control of the money by using a brokerage house in Paris and a major California bank, the Crocker National Bank.

Graham, 32, is the son of the former Liberian ambassador to Sweden and the Netherlands.

His apparent goal was to turn a profit by borrowing funds at low Swiss bank interest rates and lending them at much higher rates in the United States, according to the Los Angeles Times. He received about $183,000 in fees for arranging money transfers.

Judge Matt Byrne is to sentence Graham on Oct. 25.

Graham was convicted on eight counts of wire fraud and one count of transportation of stolen funds. The jury acquitted him on five other counts.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard B. Kendall, who prosecuted the case, said Graham began his scheme in December 1980, when he met with an official of an international clothing company.

Graham told the executive that his family had been exiled from Liberia after a coup earlier that year. He also told the executive that his family had $500 million in Swiss banks which could be made available for loans to qualified borrowers, the prosecution said.

Graham allegedly agreed to arrange a $100 million loan. The clothing executive opened accounts at Crocker in Los Angeles and London to receive the funds.

Graham then allegedly contacted Finacor, a Paris brokerage firm that lines up banks to lend money. Because of confusion created by Graham, Finacor arranged a $4 million transfer to the clothing executive's account at Crocker Bank in London, Kendall said.

Finacor thought it was making a bank-to-bank transfer and was relying on Crocker to repay the money. But Crocker thought a loan was being made to the clothing executive.

After that initial transaction, the prosecution alleged, Graham enlarged the scheme and told the same story to a Crocker officer in San Jose. He opened an account to receive investment funds from Europe, and again working through Finacor, had about $27 million sent to Crocker in London and deposited in his account.

Crocker thought that Graham was receiving his own funds from Europe and Finacor was under the impression that it was arranging a $27 million bank-to-bank transfer, again relying on Crocker to repay the money. Finacor does not arrange loans to individuals.

Graham's scheme began to unravel when Finacor learned that who it thought was a Crocker executive was really the clothing executive. Crocker attorneys halted the earlier money transfer and then discovered Graham's San Jose transaction and stopped that also.

All the money was being held in London. Graham did not make any loans or transfer any significant amount to a U.S. account. Crocker then filed a civil suit charging Graham with fraud.

Last January, Graham contacted a Security Pacific Bank officer in San Mateo and for the third time told the bogus story of his wealthy exiled family and asked to open an account to receive funds from Europe. But the bank discovered that the funds would actually be a loan to itself instead of Graham and refused to cooperate.

Glen Cove says 'nyet' to diplomats

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — The Glen Cove City Council, angry over lost tax revenues and security costs, is still saying "nyet" to Soviet diplomats who want to use public recreational facilities in the Long Island town.

The council voted 5-1 Tuesday night to reject a resolution to lift its ban on Soviets using beaches, tennis courts and golf courses.

The hard-line stance got support from a New York City councilwoman, who says the nation's largest city should take similar action to win federal reimbursement for lost property taxes.

But the position of June Eisland, D-Bronx, was not supported by Mayor Edward Koch.

"We're not going to deprive Russian diplomats of going to Coney Island or the Rockaways," Koch declared.

The Glen Cove council wants Congress to pass legislation paying it back for revenue lost because of the tax-exempt status of Killenworth, the Soviet diplomatic residence, before reopening the facilities.

It also hopes to recover funds spent on security, and asked for a bill mandating the deportation of foreign diplomats who are "strongly suspected" of spying.

Glen Cove officials have accused the Soviets of using the estate to monitor telephone conversations of Long Island defense industries.

State Department spokeswoman Sandra McCarty declined comment on the latest developments in the continuing struggle between the Long Island town and its Soviet diplomats.

"We're going to have to wait to see specifically what they did," she stated.

The State Department agreed last week to seek reimbursement for the lost revenue and protection costs after Glen Cove Mayor Alan Parente met with Undersecretary of State-designate William Schneider.

"It's been my position, and I believe it is the position of the five board members who voted for the ban, not to remove the ban or lift the ban at this time until we have an agreement with the Soviets," Parente said.

Council member Donald DeRiggi favored lifting the ban.

"We can compete very well with the Russians militarily, economically, scientifically and surveillance-wise, but we cannot compete with them in the area of petty nastiness," he said.

The council also decided that if and when the Soviet ban is removed, then the Soviets will be charged more than the average for beach, tennis and golf permits.

Government attacks acid rain legislation

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has launched an assault on congressional attempts to crack down on acid rain.

The White House has directed department and agency heads to lobby against proposed legislation which would require the reduction of sulfur dioxide emissions by eight million tons annually by 1995.

Sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-burning power plants are increasingly blamed for acid rain which, in turn, is looked on as the principal cause of fish kill in U.S. and Canadian lakes and streams.

The bill, which is intended to curb damage attributed to acid rain could add as much as $7 billion a year to the fuel bills of utilities and industries in the East and Midwest. It is pending before the Senate.

Most environmentalists and scientists believe that acid rain occurs when sulfur dioxide and other pollutants from coal-burning plants are carried for long distances by winds and then return to earth in the form of rain.

The Reagan administration, many industry groups and some scientists argue that there are a lot of unanswered questions about the effects of acid rain and that additional research should be completed before Congress decides how to control pollution that causes acid rain.

The administration's lobbying effort has included a barrage of press releases disclosing results of various studies and testimony from government officials claiming that legislation, in the end, would financially hurt electricity users who are already paying high utility bills.

An Interior Department study released this week claimed that "increases or decreases in the acidity of rainfall in New York have not always produced corresponding changes in the quality of water in lakes and streams."

"As part of the study, we tried to find a link between precipitation quality and streamflow quality in nine basins across the state," the study said. "The results were inconclusive."

The Commerce Department reported its "Global Precipitation Chemistry Project" found that acid rain was found in Bermuda, Alaska, Venezuela, Australia and Amsterdam Island in the Indian Ocean.

"These findings show that acid rain may be nearly worldwide in distribution," said Dr. John Miller, deputy director of the project.

"Previously it was thought to occur primarily downwind of heavy industry, where it is more acid than in remote areas," he added. "If we are going to monitor and perhaps combat acid rain we need to know its natural distribution over the earth."

Testifying last week before a Senate committee, an Energy Department official said the Senate plan, which is intended to curb damage attributed to acid rain, is "especially disconcerting in light of the fact that major scientific uncertainties abound, and we have little understanding of the benefits, if any, that would result."

Acting undersecretary Jan W. Mares said the legislation would require the older, unregulated power plants to install and operate scrubbers or pay the higher costs of low sulfur coals.

The additional costs, he said, would translate into a rise in electricity rates of between four and 25 percent for the affected utilities and could force as many as 40,000 miners in higher-sulfur coal fields to look for other jobs or move to low-sulfur coal regions.

Judge formally approves AT&T antitrust settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has formally approved the antitrust settlement between the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the government, setting the stage for the largest corporate reorganization in history.

In other words, Ma Bell is giving up her children.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene on Tuesday signed the settlement requiring AT&T to spin off its Bell System operating companies in what will be the breakup of the world's largest company.

The judge's final approval was almost anti-climatic because the Justice Department and AT&T had announced their willingness to accept a series of conditions laid down by Greene last Thursday.

Under the order, AT&T must set free its 22 wholly owned operated companies by Feb. 24, 1984 — 18 months from Tuesday.

Those companies provide local service to more than 80 percent of the nation's telephones and represent two-thirds of AT&T's assets — $80 billion. More than one million workers and three million stockholders will be affected.

Within six months, AT&T must present the Justice Department and Greene with its detailed plan for accomplishing the breakup.

"The court's action is truly good news for everyone and the uncertainties are now behind us," said AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner. "We've already made substantial progress in developing a plan for orderly divestiture. And we'll do our best to have the details of the plan available well ahead of the six-month deadline."

"Since the government has been seeking this relief basically since before I was born, I think you could say we're very pleased," added James Denvir, the chief trial attorney on the AT&T case.

Denvir was born in 1950. His statement refers to the fact that the Justice Department filed a major antitrust suit against AT&T in 1949, only to settle it in 1956 with a consent decree that did not prevent the type of alleged anti-competitive conduct that prompted a new antitrust suit in 1974.

The 1974 suit, which the government will drop as part of the settlement, accused AT&T of using its control of local phone networks around the country to freeze out competitors in the long-distance and equipment fields.

AT&T consistently denied the allegations, but accepted the settlement last January to avoid years of additional litigation.

In exchange for giving up the local monopoly companies that the Justice Department maintains provided the means for anti-competitive behavior, AT&T will be allowed to keep the Long Lines Division, the Western Electric Co. and Bell Laboratories.

Long Lines provides long-distance service, Western Electric manufactures equipment and Bell Laboratories develops new technologies.

The settlement also allows AT&T to enter new, unregulated businesses like data processing. AT&T has been seeking that right for years, arguing it could not take advantage of new technologies.

Small-time drug dealers arrested in 'Silicon Valley'

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — More than 60 small-time drug dealers whose trade centered in the electronics industry's "Silicon Valley" were arrested in early morning raids, authorities said.

Warrants naming 92 people were served simultaneously Tuesday, and by evening 63 people had been jailed. More arrests were pending, police said.

The mass arrests in Santa Clara, San Mateo, Alameda, San Benito and Merced counties in northern California stemmed from a 10-month investigation by 15 law enforcement agencies involving 160 officers.

High voter turnout expected in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Voters went to the polls in Alaska's open primary elections Tuesday to nominate Democratic and Republican candidates to succeed Republican Gov. Jay Hammond.

Six Democrats were on their party's ballot for the gubernatorial nomination, and five Republicans were seeking the GOP's nomination. Hammond is barred from seeking a third-straight four-year term.

During the weekend, Lt. Gov. Terry Miller, seen as the front runner in the GOP gubernatorial contest, said if voter turnout doesn't top 100,000, "it's going to be a long night."

State election officials predicted about 100,000 of Alaska's 241,000 registered voters would cast ballots. But heavy absentee voting in the Anchorage area has prompted officials here to forecast a turnout as high as 125,000.

Facing Miller were Anchorage insurance agent and former House Speaker Tom Fink, and three others — Rick Reakoff, a guide and pilot from Wiseman; Harold L. Stafford, a Valdez businessman, and Don Wright of Fairbanks.

With 10 of 438 precincts reporting, all from the Juneau area, Miller had 1,685 votes to 46 for Fink. Reakoff, Stafford and Wright had a combined 20 votes.

On the Democratic side, hotel chain owner Bill Sheffield, attorney and former state Rep. Steve Cowper of Fairbanks, and former Lt. Gov. H.A. "Red" Boucher were seen as the frontrunners for the party's nomination for governor. Also on the ballot were Northslope laborer Michael Beasley of Eagle River, Bruce J. Lemke of Anchorage and Edward J. Vincent of College.

In the early returns, Cowper had 935 votes to 433 for Sheffield. Boucher was a distant third with 128. Beasley, Lemke and Vincent had a combined 54 votes.

In the lieutenant governor's races, six Republicans and three Democrats were candidates.

Republican state Sen. Mike Colletta of Anchorage, former Assemblyman Dave Rose of Anchorage and Malcolm Roberts, a former public relations man from Anchorage, were seen as front-runners. The other three GOP candidates are state Sen. Brad Bradley of Eagle River, Bill Hudson of Juneau and Tom Staudenmaier of Anchorage.

Hudson led as expected in his hometown with 1,032 to 515 for Rose. Coletta was third with 309, Roberts had 222, Bradley had 101 and Staudenmaier, 17.

State Sen. Charlie Parr of Fairbanks is the best known of the Democratic hopefuls for lieutenant governor. The other candidates were Valdez Mayor Steve McAlpine and Stan Harhut of Anchorage.

McAlpine had 649 votes and Parr had 275.

Two little-known Democrats, utility worker Dave Carlson and adult bookstore operator Ron Mallott both of Anchorage, are seeking their party's nomination for Congress.

Carlson led in the early returnsm, 493 to 353.

The winner of that race will face incumbant Republican Rep. Don Young, who was unopposed for the GOP nomination as the state's only member of the House of Representatives.

Man who smuggled aliens slipped into U.S. illegally

HOUSTON (AP) — A 23-year-old Salvadoran accused of transporting undocumented aliens into the United States entered the country illegally himself, federal authorities say.

Jose H. Correa-Blanco was arrested after being stopped for a minor traffic violation last weekend, Immigration and Naturalization Service Agent Charles Griggs said Tuesday. Correa-Blanco has been jailed on $25,000 bond.

A police officer discovered 22 aliens lying "stacked on top of each other" in Correa-Blanco's van, Griggs said. Some of the aliens started to run away but stopped after the officer pulled his weapon, he said.

Seventeen aliens were being held until deportation hearings were completed and three aliens — a mother and her two small children — were sent back to El Salvador because the INS has no holding facilities for children, he said.

Two of the aliens will remain here to testify against Correa-Blanco, who claims he was paid $500 to transport the aliens, he said.

..."Sexual abuse of children is a widespread and growing problem," said Nan Gordon, director of Midland Rape Crisis Center. "It occurs in all economic and racial groups. Quite often when we discuss the child molester, we give the impression that it is a dangerous looking stranger who offers candy to children. Although it may happen this way, a very high percentage of children are molested by someone they know or have seen before. This could be a babysitter, neighbor, relative or friend. Too many children will comply with inappropriate requests because they are uninformed, or because they are unlucky enough to be in the presence of an adult who takes advantage of the child's innocence, needs or fears."

The Midland Rape Crisis Center has developed a program to teach safety precautions to children. "Speak UP, Say No!" includes a filmstrip which features a delightful character, Penelope Peabody Mouse, who in a positive way teaches children not only to be aware of strangers but to recognize and avoid sexual abuse from trusted friends, relatives or acquaintances. The filmstrip was developed for use with ages kindergarten through sixth grade.

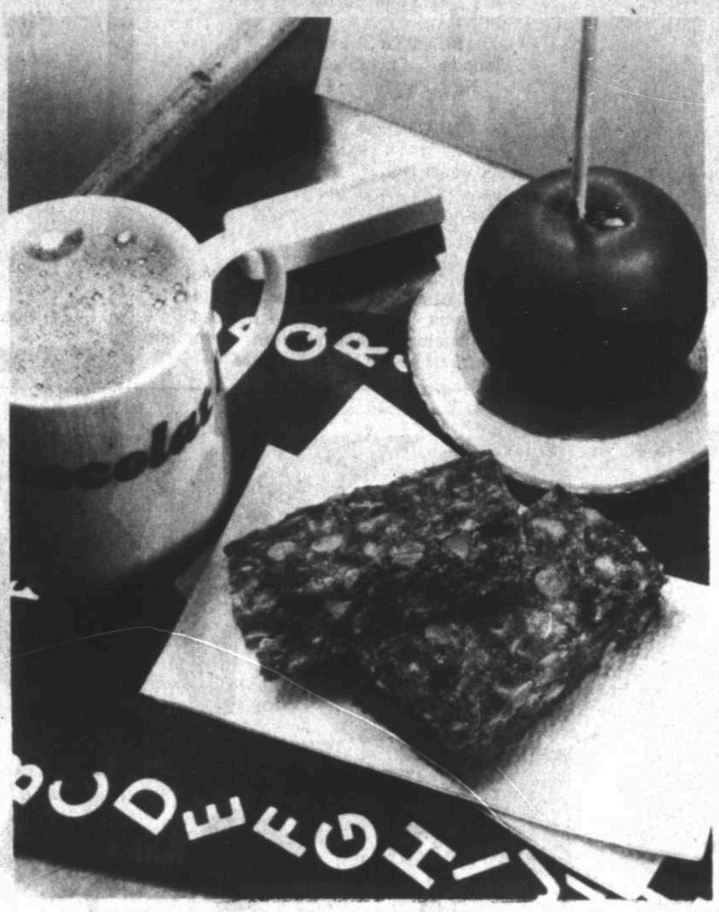
The exhibition includes more than 100 objects ranging from human skulls to jewelry and dating from about 1000 B.C. to the 16th century. It was organized by Mexico's National Institute of Anthropology and History and the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Affairs.



Mom, to help ease the transition to the back-to-school routine, pack special goodies in the children's lunch boxes and have a snack waiting when they get home. Energy-Plus Bars, Peanutty Chocolate Apples and Kids Love Hot Chocolate have the added bonus of being made with healthy ingredients.

Homemade treats:

They taste better!

By SUSAN SHEPHERD
Copley News Service

After a carefree summer, even youngsters who basically like school may be less than enthusiastic about those first few days of classes and books. To help make it all more palatable, tuck a flavorful surprise into each lunch box — and have a special snack waiting when they get home.

All the kids have to know is that you love them, and the taste is great! You know these goodies are chock-full of healthy ingredients, giving a nutritious energy boost.

Energy-Plus Bars are delightfully chewy with the ever-popular flavor of peanut butter — fortified with wheat germ, bran and fruit. Simply combine ingredients in a bowl, pour into pan and bake. A couple of these also make a dandy "breakfast on the run" — for those mornings when everybody's late and the school bus is waiting.

One way to be sure they get an "apple a day" is by making up a batch of Peanutty Chocolate Apples. Those classic flavor-mates, peanut butter and chocolate, are a snap to put together using, again, the versatile chips plus unsweetened cocoa.

Kids Love Hot Chocolate takes the chill off an autumn morning ... or pour some into a thermos to pack 'n' go. Chocolate sweetened naturally with honey and orange juice makes this brew practically irresistible — even to non-milk drinkers. It's easy to whip up, in a very few minutes.

ENERGY-PLUS BARS

1 egg, slightly beaten
3 tbsps. orange juice
2 tbsps. oil
cup honey
1 tsp. vanilla extract
½ cup flour
½ cup wheat germ
¼ cup shredded bran
2 cups (12-oz. package) peanut butter flavored chips
¼ cup chopped apricots
1 cup chopped dates

In large bowl, beat egg; blend in juice, oil, honey and vanilla. Stir in flour; add all remaining ingredients. Mix well. Mixture will be thick. Spread in a greased 9-inch square baking pan.

Bake in a preheated 325 degrees F oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until golden brown around the edges and firm in the center. Cool on wire rack. Cut into 20 bars; wrap in plastic wrap or foil and store in refrigerator to retain moistness. Makes 20 bars. 246 calories per serving.

PEANUTTY CHOCOLATE APPLES

8 wooden skewers
8 medium-sized apples, washed and dried, stems removed
2 cups peanut butter flavored chips
½ cup cocoa cup confectioners' sugar
cup shortening or oil

Insert skewer into each prepared apple. In top of double boiler combine peanut butter chips, cocoa, confectioners' sugar and oil or shortening. Place over hot water; stir constantly until chips are melted and mixture is smooth.

Remove from heat; dip apples, one at a time, into mixture and twirl to remove excess coating. (Return to low heat, or add oil, one teaspoon at a time if coating is too thick.)

Cool coated apples on waxed paper-covered cookie sheet.

KIDS LOVE HOT CHOCOLATE cup cocoa

cup honey
1 qt. milk
¼ cup orange juice
1½ tsps. vanilla extract

In saucepan, combine cocoa and honey. Gradually blend in milk. Heat, stirring. Do not boil. Add orange juice and vanilla. Beat until foamy. If desired, garnish with whipped cream and slivered orange peel. Makes 4 servings.

Cabbage dishes excellent

Very versatile vegetable

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

The cabbage, native of England and Northwestern France is surely one of the most plebian of vegetables, conjuring images of hearty, no-nonsense peasant fare. Its great versatility, however, makes it a boon to a vegetarian diet. Cabbage is high in potassium, and in vitamins A and C.

Easy to keep on hand since it can be stored in the refrigerator for up to two weeks, cabbage can be stuffed, shredded, boiled, or sauteed into an almost endless variety of dishes. When shopping, choose heads which are firm and hard, weighty, of good color and with no external blemishes.

THERE ARE THREE TYPES of cabbage, white, red, and savoy. (Chinese cabbage is not true cabbage.) The white variety, which is the most popular in the United States, is actually pale green in color. This is what we find shredded into slaws or salads, pickled into sauerkraut, and stuffed as cabbage rolls.

The unpleasant odor associated with cooked cabbage is really the result of overcooking. Quartered cabbage should be cooked in boiling salted water for six to eight minutes, and shredded cabbage for about four minutes. It is said that a whole walnut dropped into the cooking water will nearly eliminate an unwanted odor.

Good news for dieters, too: a cup of raw sliced cabbage has only 17 calories! Today's recipes have a few more, of course, and tasty calories they are.

THE CREAMY CABBAGE-CHEESE SOUP and Mushroom-Stuffed Cabbage make warm and nourishing entrees, just right with some hot buttered bread and a light salad. Or try the tangy Sweet-Sour Cabbage or Cole Slaw Vinaigrette as side dishes to round out a meal.

SWEET-AND-SOUR CABBAGE

1 head cabbage (approx. 1½ lbs.)
1 med. onion
4 tbsps. oil
2 tbsps. tomato paste diluted in ½ cup warm water
2 tsps. salt
2 tbsps. wine vinegar
1½ tbsps. sugar

Discard the rough, outer leaves of the cabbage, cut it into quarters, cut out and discard the core, and slice into very thin strips. Cut the onion into thin slivers and saute in the oil until limp. Add the diluted tomato paste to the onions. Bring the tomato-onion mixture to a boil, and add the cabbage and salt. Cook uncovered, stirring and turning the cabbage, for two or three minutes, or until cabbage is limp. Add the vinegar, cover the pan, lower the heat, and cook slowly for 10 minutes. Stir in the sugar and continue cooking for 15 minutes, until cabbage is tender but not overcooked. Stir occasionally, taste for seasonings, and adjust if necessary. Serve hot. Makes six servings.

CABBAGE-CHEESE SOUP

2 tbsps. butter, more as necessary
1 tbsp. safflower oil, more as necessary
1 large potato, unpeeled and grated
½ lb. white cabbage, shredded
1 quart milk
½ tsp. salt, or to taste
2 cups vegetable stock
1 cup grated Swiss Gruyere cheese
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
Freshly ground pepper

Heat the butter and oil in a stock pot or Dutch oven and saute the potato for 15 minutes, or until tender. (Keep stirring and tossing potato with a wooden spoon — it will begin to stick to the bottom of the pan, but it won't burn if you keep stirring.) Add more oil or butter as necessary, and don't stir the layer that sticks to the bottom up into the potatoes. Add the cabbage and cook, tossing, until it begins to cook through, about five minutes. Gradually add the milk, salt, and stock, stirring. Bring to a very slow simmer; do not boil. Cover and let cook slowly for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. About five minutes before serving, add the cheeses and grind in some black pepper. Stir until the cheese melts, adjust seasoning, and serve hot. Serves six to eight.

MUSHROOM-STUFFED CABBAGE

1 head of cabbage
3 tbsps. vegetable oil
½ lb. mushrooms, sliced
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup raw rice
1 cup boiling water
1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
1 cup canned tomato sauce

Cover the cabbage with boiling water and let stand for 10 minutes to soften. Carefully remove 16 leaves. Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a skillet; saute the mushrooms and onion for 10 minutes. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a saucepan; stir the rice into it until yellow. Add the water; cover and cook over low heat until tender and dry. Mix in the sauteed vegetables, salt and pepper. Place a heaping tablespoon of the mixture on each cabbage leaf; turn in the ends and roll up. Shred half the remaining cabbage and spread in a casserole; arrange the cabbage rolls over it. Add the tomato sauce and the remaining oil. Cover and bake in a 350 degree oven one hour, removing the cover for the last 15 minutes. Taste for seasoning. Serves four as a main course, eight as a side dish.

COLE SLAW VINAIGRETTE WITH HERBS

3 cups finely shredded cabbage
½ cup green pepper, chopped
2 tsps. caraway seeds
1 tsp. finely chopped parsley
1 tbsp. finely chopped onion
1 tsp. salt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
½ tsp. dry mustard (or 1 tsp. prepared Dijon mustard)
2 tbsps. sugar
¼ cup olive oil
2 tbsps. red wine vinegar

Place the cabbage in a large salad bowl and sprinkle with green pepper, caraway seeds, parsley and onion. Combine the remaining ingredients and beat well with a fork. Add more oil or vinegar according to taste. Pour the oil mixture over the cabbage and toss lightly. Chill until ready to serve. Serves four to six.

Tuna is basis for wide range of tasty meals

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

During hot days, a refreshing lunch can be built around tuna, the tasty fish which Americans consume at the rate of 1.5 billion cans a year.

This salt-water game fish, which is a member of the mackerel family, can be found in almost all the seas of the temperate and warm zones of Asia, Africa and America. There are a number of varieties, including bluefin, skipjack, yellowfin and the internationally sought "white meat" tuna, known as albacore.

TUNA IS MENTIONED in ancient writings from many parts of the world. The Greeks hunted the fish as a sport, the Incas fished for them from reed boats off the coast of Peru. And the Japanese have long used them for that raw fish appetizer known as sashimi.

Today, tuna is the No. 1 seafood in the United States, with most of it going into the canning industry.

Canned tuna is an important chapter in the growth story of American food processing. In 1903, the first 700 cases of the fish were packed commercially at San Pedro, Calif. It was albacore, which abounded in the region. A decade later, nine tuna canneries in the region packed 115,000 cases.

World War I pointed up the need for an economical, tasty, readily available protein food in a time of food shortage, and soon 36 plants in southern California were rolling out half a million cases annually.

COMSUMPTION OF TUNA took another leap forward in World War II when domestic protein food shortages resulted from a program designed to feed the U.S. Allies, creating an urgent need for nourishing low-cost food at home.

Today, Americans eat an average 3.1 pounds of tuna a year, at a cost of more than $1 billion.

Canned tuna is delicious in a wide range of dishes from soup to main course. But for me, salad is far and away the best way to prepare this versatile fish, as in this recipe for Tunisian tuna eggplant salad.

TUNISIAN EGGPLANT SALAD

1 medium eggplant
¼ cup chopped scallions
1 large tomato chopped (about 1 cup)
¼ cup chopped parsley
¼ cup pine nuts
¼ cup raisins
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
¼ teaspoon salt (or to taste)
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 can (6½ or 7 ounces) tuna, drained
Lettuce leaves

Bake eggplant in a preheated 350-degree oven one hour or until very soft. Cut eggplant in half and scoop out pulp into a bowl. Add scallions, tomato, parsley, pine nuts, raisins, oil, salt and lemon juice. Mix well. Cover and chill several hours. Before serving, add tuna and mix. Serve in bowl lined with lettuce leaves. Serves four. Good with chilled dry white wine.

CURRIED COLLEGE CHICKEN

College cooking really 'makes the grade'

College days...those exciting times filled with discoveries, new friends and many challenges. Since the days of racoon coats, college students of every generation have encountered one similar problem — not eating properly. Hectic schedules, boring and unappetizing school food and tight finances have too often meant inadequate or even skipped meals — and a lot of worried moms.

But today's college student will find that there's always enough time to have a good meal, thanks to quick and delicious recipes like these. Armed with just a hot plate, a small saucepan and a few basic utensils, any dorm room can become a kitchen and any student can learn to cook even if he or she never got past "Basic Water Boiling."

What makes these recipes so ideal for active college life are the simple ingredients: inexpensive canned and non-refrigerated foods that combine with instant soup mixes to make wonderful main meals in just minutes. These perfectly seasoned soups, packaged in convenient single-serving envelopes, help make cooking for one almost effortless...and always delicious. And all by themselves, instant soup mixes make a great hot snack in just seconds.

College life will continue to be fast paced, and amid all the studying, it's nice to know there's at least one course which requires only minimal effort and little preparation to make the grade — that's the main course.

CURRIED COLLEGE CHICKEN

2/3 cup water
1 envelope onion instant onion soup mix
1 small apple, chopped
1/3 cup uncooked instant rice
2 tablespoons raisins
1/4 teaspoon curry powder
1 can (5 oz.) boned chicken, drained and flaked

In small saucepan, bring water to a boil; stir in instant onion soup mix, apple, uncooked rice, raisins and curry. Simmer covered five minutes or until rice is tender. Add chicken and heat through. Makes one serving.

SAUCY SHRIMP AND NOODLE SUPPER

1 cup water
1 envelope instant tomato soup mix
1/2 cup fine egg noodles
1 can (4-1/2 oz.) shrimp, drained
1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained

In small saucepan, bring water to a boil; stir in instant tomato soup mix and noodles. Simmer covered, stirring occasionally, five minutes or until noodles are tender. Add remaining ingredients and simmer covered an additonal five minutes. Makes one serving.

SURFSIDE SPECIAL

1 cup water
1 envelope instant cream of mushroom soup mix
1/2 cup medium egg noodles
1 can (3-1/2 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked
1 can (7-3/4 oz.) spinach, drained

In small saucepan, bring water to a boil; stir in instant cream of mushroom soup mix and noodles. Simmer covered, stirring occasionally, five minutes or until noodles are tender. Add remaining ingredients and simmer covered an additional five minutes. Makes one serving.

Coupons use increasing

By DAVID WHARTON
Hearst Feature Service

Surveys, analysts and grocers themselves agree: more and more consumers are using manufacturers' coupons to beat inflation in today's supermarkets.

Independent surveys confirm these observations about coupon usage. The most recent survey was conducted in 1980 by the A.C. Nielsen Co. Inc., the same firm that monitors America's television-watching habits. Nielsen's report, which surveyed 1,007 homes, estimated that 76 percent of American households regularly use coupons when buying groceries, said Richard Aycrigg, director of market research for Nielsen's Clearing House division.

Aycrigg said that figure represents a significant increase in coupon usage. Of the households surveyed, he reported that 39 percent said they redeemed coupons "a lot more," 17 percent said "somewhat more," 37 percent said they used the same amount of coupons and 7 percent said they used coupons less often than in the past.

Consumers are not the only ones caught up in the coupon craze. "We do know that the number of companies using coupons is steadily growing," Aycrigg said.

Many manufacturers who never before offered coupons, such as cosmetics companies and sporting goods manufacturers, now are trying to attract customers by offering them the chance to save, Aycrigg said. Aycrigg estimated that in the last 10 years the number of manufacturers offering coupons had doubled, rising to over 2,000.

"We are using coupons more than ever before," said George Wilkins, a spokesman for Carnation Co., a major West Coast food supplier. Wilkins said more consumers are using coupons to buy Carnation products and he thought the increased coupon offerings probably helped sales.

After 40 years, cook recreates cake

By PATRICIA DIBSIE
Copley News Service

She was a woman driven — blending semisweet chocolate and sticks of unsalted butter, sifting and measuring flour and later cornstarch. Many a night she scurried around her small Miami Beach kitchen sure that she was on the edge of success.

For more than 40 years Maida Heatter pushed the instant replay in the taste-buds of her mind to recall the sweet sensations of a moist, smooth, dense, dark chocolate loaf cake first tasted at a French pastry shop in New York.

The author of three previous best sellers on the art of desserts, Heatter promised fans with each book released that she would keep experimenting to find the "ultimate" chocolate cake recipe. Her fourth book is out and she has but one word: "Eureka."

Her French Chocolate Loaf Cake leads off "Maida Heatter's New Book of Great Desserts," (Alfred Knopf, Inc., $17.50).

"I first tasted and swooned over this cake years ago and have finally succeeded in re-creating the recipe to my satisfaction," she said during an interview. (The French bakery refused to divulge the secret recipe.) "The first dozen or so years I tried to make this I concentrated on recipes with only one or two spoonsful of flour and only about 15 minutes of baking. The results were too much like icing."

HUSBAND RALPH HELPED her finally break the secret, it was the method of baking that finally brought success. He suggested placing the filled cake pan in another filled with one-inch of boiling water and then baking.

With that success out of the oven, Heatter started this fourth dessert book.

FRENCH CHOCOLATE LOAF CAKE

¾ cup sifted cornstarch
8 ozs. semisweet chocoate
1 tbsp. instant coffee
¼ cup boiling water
3 ozs. (¾ stick) unsalted butter
½ cup granulated sugar
4 eggs (graded large), separated
⅛ tsp. salt

Adjust a rack in the bottom third of the oven and preheat oven to 350 degrees.

You will need a loaf pan with a six-cup capacity. Line the pan with foil and brush foil lightly with melted butter.

Sift and measure the cornstarch, resift it three more times and set it aside. Break up or coarsely chop the chocolate and place it in a heavy saucepan. In a bowl, dissolve the coffee in the water and pour the mixture in the saucepan of chocolate.

Cover, and place over low heat, and let stnd for a few minutes until the chocolate starts to melt. Do not overcook. Transfer the mixture into a small bowl to stop the cooking and set mixture aside to cool slightly.

Meanwhile, in the large bowl of an electric mixer, beat the butter until soft. Gradually add the sugar and beat for 2 or 3 minutes. Add the yolks one at a time and continue to beat mixture until pale and creamy.

Add the chocolate on a low speed and beat mixture until smooth, then add the cornstarch. Remove from mixer and set aside. In a small bowl, (with clean beaters) beat the whites and the salt until the whites just stand up straight when beaters are removed. Add the whipped egg whites to the chocolate mixture a tablespoon at a time and stir to mix.

Pour cake mixture into a loaf pan and place in a larger pan filled one-inch with boiling water. Bake for 50 to 55 minutes until a cake tester gently inserted into the middle comes out just barely clean and dry. Do not overbake.

Let the cake cool in oven for about 20 minutes. Remove from pan and serve the cake upside down.

Before serving, the cake may be covered with chocolate curls or with whipped cream. Make the portions small.

LES PETITES

¾ ozs. (¾ cup) blanched hazelnuts or almonds, or a combination of both
6 ozs. (1½ sticks) unsalted butter
½ tsp. vanilla extract
½ cup granulated sugar
Pinch of salt
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
5 ozs. semisweet chocolate (to be used for sandwiching the cookies)
Confectioners' sugar to be sprinkled over the cookies before serving (optional)

Adjust two racks to divide the oven into thirds and preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line two cookie sheets with aluminum foil.

The nuts must be ground fine. This can be done in a food processor, a blender or a nut grinder. If you use a processor or a blender, add a spoonful of the sugar to prevent the nuts from lumping.

The dough can be put together in a mixer or a processor.

In a mixer: Cream the butter, mix in the vanilla, sugar, salt, then the flour and finally the ground nuts, beating until mixed.

In a food processor: After grinding the nuts, do not remove them from the bowl; add the butter which should be cut into small pieces, and all the other ingredients except the chocolate, and process until the dough holds together.

Do not chill the dough before rolling it (chilling makes it crack when it is rolled).

Flour a pastry cloth and a rolling pin. Use only half of the dough at a time. Form it into a ball and flour it lightly. Flatten it slightly between your hands. Then roll it carefully, flouring the top, the bottom, and the rolling pin as necessary, until it is a scant ¼-inch, or a generous ⅛ inch thick.

You will need a round (preferably scalloped) cookie cutter that measures 1½ inches in diameter. Starting at the outside edge of the rolled-out dough, cut rounds and place them about ½ inch apart on the foil lined sheets. Then, with a plain round cutter that measures ¾ inch in diameter, cut holes out of the middle of half of the cookies. (Save the cutout holes and the leftovers and roll them out again to make more cookies.)

Bake for about 10 to 15 minutes or a bit longer (depending on the thickness of the cookies), reversing the sheets top to bottom and front to back as necessary to ensure even browning. Bake until the cookies are sandy colored. Do not underbake.

With a wide metal spatula transfer the cookies to racks to cool.

Coarsely chop the chocolate and place it in the top of a small double boiler over hot water on low heat. Cover until partly melted, then uncover and stir until completely melted. Transfer to a small shallow cup for easy handling.

Turn the cookies that do not have holes in them upside down. With the tip of a small spoon, place a bit (about ¼ teaspoon) of the melted chocolate in a mound in the center of each cookies. Do not spread it out. Then place one of the cookies that has a hole in it over the chocolate should not extend out to the edges. Repeat, sandwiching all the cookies.

Refrigerate the cookie sandwiches until the chocolate is firm. Then these may be stored in the refrigerator or the freezer. Or, if the room is not too warm, they may stand at room temperature. If the cookies are going to stand overnight or longer they should be wrapped airtight. Pack them in a box with wax paper between the layers.

The cookies may be sprinkled with confectioners sugar before serving. Place the cookies on a large piece of wax paper. Sprinkle the sugar through a fine strainer held over the the cookies.

Banana is tasty, healthy, low-calorie fruit

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Most people agree that the banana tastes good. Which helps explain why it is one of America's top-selling fruits, averaging more than 20 pounds per person a year.

Despite the fact that it is so popular in the United States, the banana is not grown commercially here or in Canada. Our main sources are Central and South America.

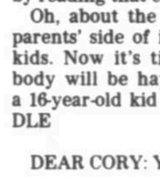
Another reason for the banana's popularity is the campaign by nutritionists to promote consumption of carbohydrates as found in fruits, vegetables and whole grains, thus cutting down on meat, which is generally high in fats.

Bananas are 99.8 fat-free and average only 100 calories each, about the same as a sizable orange.

Bananas have long been popular as a breakfast food, providing vitamins and energy after the long night's fast. Now they are a key ingredient in a breakfast dish called Banola, a mixture which also includes wheat germ, nuts and molasses. Here's the recipe.

3 cups uncooked oats
1 cup wheat germ
1 cup shredded coconut
1 cup raisins
1 cup sliced almonds
¼ cup sesame seeds
1/3rd cup dark brown sugar
1/3rd cup honey
¼ cup unsulfured molasses
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Bananas and milk to taste

Mix all ingredients, except bananas and milk, in large bowl. Spread over ungreased 15 by 10 by 1-inch baking pan. Bake in 300-degree preheated oven for 1 hour or until toasted, stirring occasionally. Cool in refrigerator. If you don't use immediately, store in an airtight container. Serve with sliced bananas and milk. Yields about 7 cups.



DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: If I weren't a Christian with three young children to raise, I would have ended my life. I am in my 30s, divorced and on welfare because I am unable to leave my house to go to work. I am normal in every other respect, but I panic when I get more than a block away from home. I haven't been to a movie or out for dinner for over two years. I'm attractive, but I gave up dating two years ago because it was hard to explain to a man that I was too terrified to leave my house.

I have been to psychiatrists and psychologists, and they tell me I have "agoraphobia," which means, "fear of open spaces." I joined a support group, but all I got from it was the comfort of knowing there are a lot of other people with the same problem.

My total income from welfare is $770 a month, and it's a miracle we even make it through the month. I want more than anything in the world to get well so I can get a job and take care of my children. Is there any hope for me? — DESPERATE IN L.A.

DEAR DESPERATE: Yes. Write to the New Beginning Foundation. It's a non-profit, charitable corporation formed to help agoraphobics. It offers a step-by-step program designed to rehabilitate people who suffer anxiety attacks when they leave the security of their homes. There are no drugs, medication or deep analysis involved. It's a self-help program that begins by playing cassettes at home.

I have investigated this organization and found it to be legitimate, sincere and effective. Many who have been treated by this method have reported excellent results.

Write to: New Beginning Foundation, 1551 North Western Ave., Suite 229, Los Angeles, Calif. 90027.

Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. And please write to me in six months and give me a progress report. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading your new book and I loved it.

I forced myself to read the chapter titled, "Smokey the Bore," but it's the best thing that ever happened to me. I haven't given up smoking yet, but you'll be credited when I do. I've cut down on the number of cigarettes, and by reading that chapter every night I think I can finally quit.

Oh, about the chapter on divorce, I agree. The kids should try to see their parents' side of it. Their mom and pop have lived most of their lives for their kids. Now it's time they (the parents) started living for themselves. Everybody will be happier. So, kids with divorced parents, take this advice from a 16-year-old kid who's been there. Give mom and dad a break. — CORY BRINDLE

DEAR CORY: Your letter made my day. Thanks for writing.

(Problems? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Best brisket of beef is Texas style

By MERLE ELLIS

There is no more delicious beef dish in the world than brisket of beef barbecue Texas style — or so I've heard. I've never really tasted Texas barbecue, but I understand there is no more glorious end for a brisket of beef than to spend 18 hours wrapped in a gunnysack and buried in a pit on a bed of mesquite coals. It is then served with a good sauce, lots of jalapenos and a pot of pinto beans. It does sound good, doesn't it?

Last week I decided to try it. The Meat Deal, a market in my neighborhood that sells wholesale subprimals direct to the consumer had whole beef brisket on special for $1.49 a pound. So I bought a bag.

The first snag came when I told my wife I was going to dig a three-by-five-foot hole two feet deep in our backyard.

"You're what?" she said in her submissive, delicate, part Far Eastern fashion. "Like hell you are!" So much for a pit barbecue. I'll bet she would have had a different response if I had said I was going to make Hawaiian style Kalua Pig. For that I'll bet I could dig a hole in the dining room! Anyway, there I was with two beautiful, rich, beefy briskets, a taste for tasting Texas barbecue, and no barbecue pit. I decided to call Ole.

Ole and Patsy Swendson are "a couple of cooks" we know in San Antonio. If anyone could help, I was sure they could.

"Hi! Patsy? This is Merle. Neva wouldn't let me dig up the backyard and I have these beautiful briskets and a taste for Texas barbecue and ..."

"Wait a minute," she said, "you'd better talk to Ole."

"Hi! Ole? Neva won't let me dig a pit and I have these briskets. Is there any way that I can ..."

"Relax, Merle. It's all right, you can do it."

"Oh, great, Ole," I said, "I knew you could help!"

" A lot of the boys down here do barbecue in an oil drum (we've got a lot of those around here). You take a 50-gallon steel drum and cut it in half lengthwise with a blowtorch. Then you hinge the two halves together and mount the thing on legs. You put a grate on the bottom half so you can build a good mesquite fire on one side under the grate and put the brisket at the other end on top of the ..."

"Ole! Ole!"

"What? Okay, I know. No 50-gallon drum, right?"

"Right!"

"Don't worry, Merle. There's still a way. You got a cookin' kettle?"

"A what?"

"A cookin' kettle — you know one of those covered cookers — a Weber?"

"Yes, yes, I have one of those!"

Combining what I learned from Ole with even more information on the subject from "The Only Texas Cookbook," by Linda West Eckhardt, I came up with a barbecued brisket that was abso-blumin-lutely fandamn-tastic. Here's how to do it.

Close two of the three vents in the bottom of your kettle cooker. Build a fire with charcoal briskets directly over the third vent. When the coals have burned down to a nice gray, cover them with hickory chips that have been soaked in water for 30 minutes.

Season the brisket with salt, pepper and paprika and put it on the grill opposite the side where the coals are. Put a small pan of water on the center of the grill, between the coals and the meat. This produces steam inside the kettle that helps tenderize the meat. Remember, brisket is basically a tough cut of meat and needs long, slow, moist-heat cooking in order to tenderize it. Put the cover on the kettle so the vent in the cover is over the meat.

Cook the brisket for 4 to 5 hours, basting every 30 minutes or so with a good barbecue sauce. Keep the temperature inside the cooker under 200 degrees.

Water boils at 212 and if you boil the moisture out of a beef brisket what you have is akin to saddle leather. If you cook it low and slow you will end up with a barbecued brisket that will make you feel like a proud Texan.

Good Barbecue Sauce
1/2 cube butter
2 onions, chopped fine
2 or 3 cloves garlic, minced
1 stalk celery, minced
1 small green pepper, minced
1 28-oz. can stewed tomatoes
1 12-oz. can tomato paste
1 T. dry mustard
1 T. salt
1 or 2 bay leaves
1/2 cup cider vinegar
1/2 cup dark molasses
1 T. Tabasco cause
1 T. liquid smoke
Juice of 1 lemon

Melt the butter in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add onion, garlic, celery and pepper. Cook until limp and tender, but not brown. Add all remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and cover. Simmer for one hour, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Remove bay leaves.

Then either blend in a blender or food processor or force through a sieve. Keep refrigerated.

Saguaros, which are huge cactuses found in Arizona, are often called "apartment houses of the desert" because they provide living quarters for so many bird species.

Try simple recipe for Italian-style chowder

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: An acquaintance of mine, John Storojev, has his own recipe for an Italian-style chowder.

Because he is of Russian descent and has lived abroad, his cooking has true international flavor.

After you taste the chowder, I think you'll agree with me the recipe deserves to be published.

John is marketing manger for a publisher, but he's never too tired to cook dinner for his two teen-age daughters and himself. And the girls' friends consider dinner at the Storojevs something special. — RECIPE RECRUIT.

DEAR RECIPE RECRUIT: My tasters and I agree with you the chowder is delicious. Thank you for the recipe. I'm happy to pass it along. — C.B.

JOHN STOROJEV'S SPECIAL CHOWDER

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound sweet Italian sausage, casings removed
1 cup thinly sliced onion
2 garlic cloves, crushed
1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced fairly thin
35-ounce can Italian plum tomatoes, undrained but broken up
1½ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
½ cup dry red wine
12 fresh clams, scrubbed

In a large saucepot heat the oil. Add the sausage, breaking it up, until browned — about 5 minutes.

With a slotted spoon, remove the sausage and reserve. Add the onion, garlic and mushrooms; cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until wilted — about 5 minutes.

To the saucepot add the reserved sausage, the tomatoes, salt and Worcestershire sauce. Bring to a boil; simmer, covered, for about 15 minutes.

Add the wine and clams. Simmer, covered, until clams open — about 5 minutes. Good served with garlic bread.

Whip up Oriental dishes for picnic in park

By PAMELA KESSLER
The Washington Post

Along with a hibachi, you can pack a soup bowl and a pair of chopsticks for each person and enjoy an Oriental picnic in the park. The flavors blend in the single bowl, more convenient than a floppy paper plate for eating on the grass.

Since everything is marinated in some way or another, it can all be done ahead except for the grilling. In fact, everything including the cold rice and vegetables can be done before leaving for work in the morning.

SKEWERED LEMON CHICKEN
(4 servings)

4 boneless chicken breasts
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1 or 2 large cloves garlic, minced
3 tablespoons soy sauce
3 tablespoons dry white wine
2 tablespoons peanut oil or vegetable oil
2 green peppers
8-ounce can whole water chestnuts

Rinse the chicken, pat it dry with paper towels and cut it in 1 1/2- to 2-inch cubes. Combine lemon rind, garlic, soy sauce, wine and oil in a non-metallic bowl, and add the chicken. Marinate for at least half an hour. Cut the green peppers into 2-inch chunks. Alternate the water chestnuts, chicken and green peppers on 12 6-inch skewers.

When the coals in the hibachi are half gray, put the chicken kebabs on the grills, 2 or 3 inches from the heat, turning the kebabs until nicely browned. They will start being done in about 15 minutes. Serve them as they finish, and do not overcook, or the chicken will dry out. Then, while your guests eat the chicken, broil the beef.

BEEF TERIYAKI
(4 servings)

1 to 1 1/2 pounds round steak
4 chopped scallions, including the green
2 tablespoons fresh ginger, thinly sliced
1/2 cup thin soy sauce (1/3 cup if using Kikkoman)
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 cup dry white wine
3 tablespoons peanut oil or vegetable oil
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Pat the meat dry with a paper towel. Trim off the fat, and score the meat in a crosshatch pattern. Combine the remaining ingredients in a flat, non-metallic baking dish. Add the meat, spooning the marinade over it. Marinate for several hours.

After the chicken is done, lower the grills of the hibachi to about 1 inch from the coals. Put on the beef, turning and basting it every 3 minutes. Medium rare takes a total of 6 minutes a side. Put the beef on a serving platter, and with a sharp knife, slice very thinly across the grain, as for london broil.

TOMATO-CUCUMBER SALAD
(4 servings)

2 cucumbers
4 tomatoes
2 tablespoons sesame oil
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Peel the cucumbers, and seed and juice the tomatoes. Then cut them into small bite-size chunks and put them in a bowl. Add the sesame oil and the vinegar, and toss together. Season to taste. Let sit for at least half an hour.

Banana is tasty, healthy, low-calorie fruit

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Most people agree that the banana tastes good. Which helps explain why it is one of America's top-selling fruits, averaging more than 20 pounds per person a year.

Despite the fact that it is so popular in the United States, the banana is not grown commercially here or in Canada. Our main sources are Central and South America.

Another reason for the banana's popularity is the campaign by nutritionists to promote consumption of carbohydrates as found in fruits, vegetables and whole grains, thus cutting down on meat, which is generally high in fats.

Bananas are 99.8 fat-free and average only 100 calories each, about the same as a sizable orange.

Bananas have long been popular as a breakfast food, providing vitamins and energy after the long night's fast. Now they are a key ingredient in a breakfast dish called Banola, a mixture which also includes wheat germ, nuts and molasses. Here's the recipe.

3 cups uncooked oats
1 cup wheat germ
1 cup shredded coconut
1 cup raisins
1 cup sliced almonds
¼ cup sesame seeds
1/3rd cup dark brown sugar
1/3rd cup honey
¼ cup unsulfured molasses
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Bananas and milk to taste

Mix all ingredients, except bananas and milk, in large bowl. Spread over ungreased 15 by 10 by 1-inch baking pan. Bake in 300-degree preheated oven for 1 hour or until toasted, stirring occasionally. Cool in refrigerator. If you don't use immediately, store in an airtight container. Serve with sliced bananas and milk. Yields about 7 cups.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: If I weren't a Christian with three young children to raise, I would have ended my life. I am in my 30s, divorced and on welfare because I am unable to leave my house to go to work. I am normal in every other respect, but I panic when I get more than a block away from home. I haven't been to a movie or out for dinner for over two years. I'm attractive, but I gave up dating two years ago because it was hard to explain to a man that I was too terrified to leave my house.

I have been to psychiatrists and psychologists, and they tell me I have "agoraphobia," which means, "fear of open spaces." I joined a support group, but all I got from it was the comfort of knowing there are a lot of other people with the same problem.

My total income from welfare is $770 a month, and it's a miracle we even make it through the month. I want more than anything in the world to get well so I can get a job and take care of my children. Is there any hope for me? — DESPERATE IN L.A.

DEAR DESPERATE: Yes. Write to the New Beginning Foundation. It's a non-profit, charitable corporation formed to help agoraphobics. It offers a step-by-step program designed to rehabilitate people who suffer anxiety attacks when they leave the security of their homes. There are no drugs, medication or deep analysis involved. It's a self-help program that begins by playing cassettes at home.

I have investigated this organization and found it to be legitimate, sincere and effective. Many who have been treated by this method have reported excellent results.

Write to: New Beginning Foundation, 1551 North Western Ave., Suite 229, Los Angeles, Calif. 90027.

Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. And please write to me in six months and give me a progress report. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished reading your new book and I loved it.

I forced myself to read the chapter titled, "Smokey the Bore," but it's the best thing that ever happened to me. I haven't given up smoking yet, but you'll be credited when I do. I've cut down on the number of cigarettes, and by reading that chapter every night I think I can finally quit.

Oh, about the chapter on divorce, I agree. The kids should try to see their parents' side of it. Their mom and pop have lived most of their lives for their kids. Now it's time they (the parents) started living for themselves. Everybody will be happier. So, kids with divorced parents, take this advice from a 16-year-old kid who's been there. Give mom and dad a break. — CORY BRINDLE

DEAR CORY: Your letter made my day. Thanks for writing.

(Problems? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

By MERLE ELLIS

There is no more delicious beef dish in the world than brisket of beef barbecue Texas style — or so I've heard. I've never really tasted Texas barbecue, but I understand there is no more glorious end for a brisket of beef than to spend 18 hours wrapped in a gunnysack and buried in a pit on a bed of mesquite coals. It is then served with a good sauce, lots of jalapenos and a pot of pinto beans. It does sound good, doesn't it?

Last week I decided to try it. The Meat Deal, a market in my neighborhood that sells wholesale subprimals direct to the consumer had whole beef brisket on special for $1.49 a pound. So I bought a bag.

The first snag came when I told my wife I was going to dig a three-by-five-foot hole two feet deep in our backyard.

"You're what?" she said in her submissive, delicate, part Far Eastern fashion. "Like hell you are!" So much for a pit barbecue. I'll bet she would have had a different response if I had said I was going to make Hawaiian style Kalua Pig. For that I'll bet I could dig a hole in the dining room! Anyway, there I was with two beautiful, rich, beefy briskets, a taste for tasting Texas barbecue, and no barbecue pit. I decided to call Ole.

Ole and Patsy Swendson are "a couple of cooks" we know in San Antonio. If anyone could help, I was sure they could.

"Hi! Patsy? This is Merle. Neva wouldn't let me dig up the backyard and I have these beautiful briskets and a taste for Texas barbecue and ..."

"Wait a minute," she said, "you'd better talk to Ole."

"Hi! Ole? Neva won't let me dig a pit and I have these briskets. Is there any way that I can ..."

"Relax, Merle. It's all right, you can do it."

"Oh, great, Ole," I said, "I knew you could help!"

" A lot of the boys down here do barbecue in an oil drum (we've got a lot of those around here). You take a 50-gallon steel drum and cut it in half lengthwise with a blowtorch. Then you hinge the two halves together and mount the thing on legs. You put a grate on the bottom half so you can build a good mesquite fire on one side under the grate and put the brisket at the other end on top of the ..."

"Ole! Ole!"

"What? Okay, I know. No 50-gallon drum, right?"

"Right!"

"Don't worry, Merle. There's still a way. You got a cookin' kettle?"

"A what?"

"A cookin' kettle — you know one of those covered cookers — a Weber?"

"Yes, yes, I have one of those!"

Combining what I learned from Ole with even more information on the subject from "The Only Texas Cookbook," by Linda West Eckhardt, I came up with a barbecued brisket that was abso-blumin-lutely fandamn-tastic. Here's how to do it.

Close two of the three vents in the bottom of your kettle cooker. Build a fire with charcoal briskets directly over the third vent. When the coals have burned down to a nice gray, cover them with hickory chips that have been soaked in water for 30 minutes.

Season the brisket with salt, pepper and paprika and put it on the grill opposite the side where the coals are. Put a small pan of water on the center of the grill, between the coals and the meat. This produces steam inside the kettle that helps tenderize the meat. Remember, brisket is basically a tough cut of meat and needs long, slow, moist-heat cooking in order to tenderize it. Put the cover on the kettle so the vent in the cover is over the meat.

Cook the brisket for 4 to 5 hours, basting every 30 minutes or so with a good barbecue sauce. Keep the temperature inside the cooker under 200 degrees.

Water boils at 212 and if you boil the moisture out of a beef brisket what you have is akin to saddle leather. If you cook it low and slow you will end up with a barbecued brisket that will make you feel like a proud Texan.

Good Barbecue Sauce
1/2 cube butter
2 onions, chopped fine
2 or 3 cloves garlic, minced
1 stalk celery, minced
1 small green pepper, minced
1 28-oz. can stewed tomatoes
1 12-oz. can tomato paste
1 T. dry mustard
1 T. salt
1 or 2 bay leaves
1/2 cup cider vinegar
1/2 cup dark molasses
1 T. Tabasco cause
1 T. liquid smoke
Juice of 1 lemon

Melt the butter in a heavy pot over medium heat. Add onion, garlic, celery and pepper. Cook until limp and tender, but not brown. Add all remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and cover. Simmer for one hour, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Remove bay leaves.

Then either blend in a blender or food processor or force through a sieve. Keep refrigerated.

Steel worker hit with double whammy

MIDLAND, Pa. (AP) — The recession dumped a double whammy on steelworker Harold Taylor, who left the depressed Ohio River Valley only to find the Sunbelt strewn with more pink slips and a ticket back home.

"In six months, it went from boom to bust, literally. It's like the bubble has burst," said Taylor, 40, the father of two children.

"I couldn't afford to pay my mortgage up here and be down there. If I'm going to starve, I might was well go back home and starve," he said after returning from Texas this month.

Taylor, who lives in nearby East Liverpool, Ohio, was laid off 13 months ago from the Crucible Stainless Steel and Alloy Division which Colt Industries Inc. is closing on Oct. 15.

In February, the week he got his final unemployment check, Taylor took a job in Liberty, Texas, with National Pipe and Tube Co. The company, a subsidiary of National Steel Corp., made pipes in the oil well drilling boom and promised guaranteed work without layoffs.

Taylor got a pair of $500 bonuses, a month's free housing and board. With such a bright promise of a new life, he jumped at the opportunity. His family stayed behind, planning to move down later.

"What did I have to lose?" said Taylor in a recent interview arranged in a Midland tavern.

"I was reluctant to leave. But with guaranteed no layoffs, I expected to work the rest of my life. Now, I've resigned myself to something less. Things down there are as bad as up here," he added.

When the drilling boom went bust, Taylor was furloughed on May 1 despite the guarantees.

There was still no reason to fret. Houston newspapers had help wanted sections that filled over 100 pages and were bulkier than entire newspapers up north.

He took another job as a millwright with St. Regis Paper Co. But the sweet promise continued to turn sour. There was talk of more layoffs and shutdowns. Finally, Taylor decided to come home — one week before he was due to be furloughed again.

In the meantime, there was a rash of personal problems for Taylor, who lost 50 pounds.

He lived alone for four months in a scene reminiscent of "The Grapes Of Wrath," John Steinbeck's novel on the Great Depression. He drove back north to get his family in June.

Two days before he was supposed to close on a house in Texas, it burned to the ground, forcing the family to live in a two bedroom trailer with no air conditioning in the Texas summer. His German shepherd died two days after moving to Texas.

In Ohio, his house was originally for sale at the appraised price of $42,000. Taylor ultimately dropped the asking price to $18,000, but still never found a buyer in the depressed housing market.

While the family was gone, someone broke into his home and ransacked the place. His mother, who lives two doors away, suffered a heart attack at the news.

"It was like every day you wonder what's going to happen next," said Taylor, wearing a T-shirt and Lone Star belt buckle. "I finally said we're not living like this anymore. I felt like a gypsy. It wasn't the way I wanted to raise my kids."

Taylor did have another job offer, working as an electrician for a company that unloaded shipments of foreign steel from a Texas harbor. He turned it down flat.

"It was a matter of principle. Under different circumstances, I may have taken the job," he said.

Back home now, Taylor is working odd jobs until something breaks in the job market. He has two years of college and has attended a number of trade schools, so he's confident of finding work.

"I'll weather the storm. Things are going to get better. I don't think they can get any worse," he shrugged.

"If worst comes to worst, I'll go somewhere else but just until something opens up here. There's no idea of picking up and moving my family again. It would be a last resort," Taylor added.

"Besides, I'm lucky. I've worked in the last six months. There are some real hard luck stories out here."

Government reports inflation slowing

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

American workers and other consumers have gotten a double dose of good news from new government reports that show inflation slowing and earnings inching up.

Meanwhile, the stock market enjoyed another busy day Tuesday, with trading the second heaviest on record.

The Labor Department said consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 7.3 percent in July after flirting with double-digit increases the previous two months. Economists forecast even smaller increases in the months ahead.

The report said increases in the cost of gasoline and housing were smaller than in recent months, and food prices remained constant to produce the better inflation picture in July.

Overall, the Consumer Price Index rose 0.6 percent in July after season adjustment. The advances in May and June had both been 1 percent.

"The inflation outlook is very bright," said private economist Allen Sinai of Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

The Labor Department also released figures showing that Americans' inflation-adjusted average weekly earnings rose 0.2 percent in July after falling 1.4 percent in June.

But for the 12 months ending in July, inflation still managed to outstrip earnings. The government said inflation-adjusted average weekly earnings in July were 1.4 percent below what they were in the same month of 1981.

On Wall Street, trading activity exploded again, with volume on the New York Stock Exchange topping 100 million shares for the second straight session and hitting its second-highest level on record. Volume surged to 121.65 million shares, second only to the record 132.69 million shares traded last Wednesday.

Advances led losers 3-2 on the NYSE, but the Dow Jones average slipped 16.27 points to 874.90 as investors sold their holdings to take advantage of recent price gains in the 30 industrial stocks that make up the Dow.

In other economic news:

—The federal budget deficit, with only two months left in the 1982 fiscal year, has reached $94.2 billion. That is well above the record deficit for a full year of $66.4 billion set in 1976. The administration forecasts a deficit this year of $108.9 billion.

—Domestic new car sales dropped 35 percent in mid-August from the period a year ago, with the daily selling rate the lowest in 21 years. The major carmakers sold 131,956 new cars in the Aug. 11-20 period, down from 203,028 in the year-ago period. The daily selling rate of 14,662 was the lowest since the 14,475 rate set in 1961.

Federal agencies cut mortgage rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home buyers and sellers may have brighter prospects now that three federal agencies have announced they have cut mortgage interest rates.

The Federal National Mortgage Association joined the parade Tuesday, 24 hours after reductions were announced by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration.

Lenders aren't generally obligated to reduce rates on new loans, but experts in the field were optimistic about the moves, saying reductions are likely for prospective home buyers.

In the latest announcement, FNMA chief David Maxwell reported cuts of about 1 percent in rates for adjustable mortgages. Those are mortgages in which the interest rate is guaranteed for a set time, and then can vary according to market conditions.

For adjustable rate mortgages with a six-month term, the rate will drop from 13.8 percent to 12.9 percent today, he said.

One-year term adjustable mortgages will also drop to 12.9 percent, from the current 14.5 percent. And those adjustable after five years will decline from 15.7 percent to 14.6 percent, Maxwell said.

In addition, he said the yield requirement for conventional fixed rate mortgages will be lowered from 15¼ percent to 15 percent.

"This will make it possible for a lot of people to buy homes that couldn't do so a very short time ago," said Maxwell.

His agency buys mortgages from banks and other lenders to free them to make other loans. It is the largest member of this "secondary" mortgage market, buying between 10 percent and 15 percent of U.S. mortgages, he said.

The yield requirements are the minimum FNMA expects from a loan before it will purchase it, Maxwell explained. He said that lenders can still charge higher rates, but he anticipated that in most cases the interest to the home buyer would be approximately the same as the FNMA yield.

On Monday, FHA and VA dropped the rates on mortgages they guarantee to 14 percent, a move also hailed by the industry.

Asked if he could forsee a 12 percent mortgage, Maxwell responded that is is "conceivable" in the future. Officials of his agency said rates of 13 percent to 13¼ percent for conventional mortgages were possible in the next year or so.

"Obviously it's good news whenever you get rates coming down. We're just hopeful the trend continues," Jay Shackford, assistant vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, said on Tuesday.

The reductions are "perfectly appropriate and certainly welcome to both home buyers and sellers," added Mark Reidy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

Mexico swaps oil for dollars

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Most of the $1 billion the United States advanced Mexico last week will be repaid with 40 million barrels of crude oil for the U.S. strategic petroleum reserve, the Mexican government announced.

Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog announced Tuesday night that his government had signed an agreement with the U.S. Department of Energy to sell the U.S. government an average of 110,000 barrels a day of its best crude for 12 months beginning Oct. 1.

The oil will be the light Isthmus type used for making gasoline and other light fuels. The price will fluctuate according to international levels, but will not be higher than $35 a barrel nor lower than $25, the announcement said.

Mexico currently sells Isthmus crude at $32 a barrel.

The announcement said Pemex, the Mexican state petroleum monopoly, will ship 60,000 barrels a day during the last quarter of the year, 120,000 barrels a day during the first quarter of 1983, 140,000 barrels a day during the second quarter and 120,000 barrels a day during the third quarter.

With $80 billion in foreign debts, the Third World's highest, and other economic ills, Mexico is going through its worst economic crisis since the 1910-20 revolution.

The economy, dependent on revenue from Mexico's huge oil reserves, fell victim to the world oil glut and heavy government borrowing for development projects which oil revenues had been expected to cover. The inflation rate is running between 60 and 80 percent, and unemployment is growing.

Silva Herzog went to Washington and New York last week and secured a $1 billion cash advance against future oil shipments and another $1 billion from the Commodity Credit Corp. in easy-term loans to pay for imports of American grain and other foods.

During his visit, 150 banks agreed to postponements of 30 to 90 days of Mexico's short-term debts, but the government agreed to pay the interest due.

The government has devalued the peso twice in the past six months and imposed exchange controls to keep dollars from being taken out of the country. The peso at the beginning of the year was worth about 4 cents; now it's worth about a penny.

Japanese, U.S. firm now partners in defense

TOKYO (AP) — Nissan Motor Co., Japan's second largest automaker, announced it has signed a long-term agreement to obtain assistance from Martin Marietta Corp. of the United States in space and weapon technologies.

A preliminary agreement with the American aerospace firm, signed in June, does not cover any specific item or piece of equipment, a Nissan statement state. A spokesman said talks are underway on contract terms.

He said that in return for Martin Marietta's assistance in the technoloy, Nissan, makers of Datsun cars, is "considering" helping the American company in the field of industrial robots.

Martin Marietta, a leader in the U.S. space and defense industry, builds Titan ICBM rockets, Pershing IRBMs and Patriot surface-to-air missiles.

Tokyo newspapers said Nissan is preparing to form a new group of firms with Fuji Heavy Industries and Hitachi Seisakusho to enter Japan's growing space and defense industry on a large scale.

Mitsubishi Heavy Industries and Mitsubishi Electric produce Nike defensive missiles under license for the Japan Defense Agency.

New U.S. car sales bump bottom

DETROIT (AP) — New car sales of the major domestic automakers continued to "bump along the bottom" in mid-August, with sales falling 35 percent compared with the period a year ago, the automakers say.

But two analysts said Tuesday the figures show a slight improvement in annual rates compared with dismal June figures. Another analyst worried that falling interest rates could keep consumers out of the market, waiting for the lowest rate possible for car loans.

The carmakers said they sold 131,956 new cars in the Aug. 11-20 period, down from 203,028 last year. The daily selling rate of 14,662 was the lowest for the period since 14,475 new cars were sold daily in 1961.

General Motors Corp. was off the most, 39.5 percent, with car sales of 81,597, compared with 134,949 in the period last year. Ford Motor Co. said its sales dropped 19.7 percent, from 37,034 to 29,736. Chrysler Corp. sales were off 29.6 percent in the period, from 22,853 to 16,092.

Pool Company cutting workforce

HOUSTON (SWN) — Pool Company, a subsidiary of ENSERCH Corporation, announced Tuesday it plans a reduction in the workforce at its manufacturing facility in San Angelo, Texas. The reduction results from a continuing decline in petroleum industry activity and the resultant reduced demand for drilling and well servicing equipment manufactured at the San Angelo facility.

The planned workforce reduction includes the immediate termination of approxiamtely 30 employees and a further reduction of approximately 100 jobs as current manufacturing projects are completed.

The company has not altered plans to continue construction of its new and enlarged manufacturing and operations support facility in San Angelo, which is scheduled for completion in early 1983.

Pool Company, through its three major operating units, provides drilling, well servicing and other petroleum related services onshore and offshore throughout the world.

City staff OKs 38 building permits

The city of Midland issued 38 building permits in the week Aug. 16 through 20, for construction, alterations and swimming pools valued at a total of $1,875,010. This brings August's total permitted to $9,426,169. The city has granted permits totaling $211,679,647 so far in 1982.

Commercial permits were issued to: Joe C. Mills for a 30,000 square-foot, two-story office byilding at 2500 N. Big Spring, for construction valued at $850,000; G.B.A. & Associates, 3416 W. Wall, commercial alteration, $100,000; Vest Construction, 11 Oak Ridge Square, $5,000; P.M.I. General Construction, 710 Andrews Highway, $9,000; Hacienda Propertires, 2101 W. Louisiana, comercial alteration for $25,000; High Rafters Construction, 2800 N. Big Spring, commercial alteration, $700.

Permits were issued also for five new residences, ranging in construction price from $32,580 to $450,000, for 12 swimming pools, three mobile homes, and the remaining permits were for residential alterations.

Antitrust agreement signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has signed an antitrust settlement requiring the break-up of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., setting off the largest corporate reorganization in history and ending an eight-year lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene acted Tuesday less than two hours after AT&T and Justice Department attorneys filed the final version of the settlement, incorporating a series of conditions the judge set down Aug. 11.

Under the terms of the settlement, AT&T will now have six months to develop a plan for spinning off its 22 wholly owned Bell System operating companies.

Those companies provide local service to more than 80 percent of the nation's telephones and represent more than $80 billion in assets, about two-thirds of AT&T's total.

AT&T will keep its Long Lines Division, which provides long-distance telephone service; Western Electric Co., the subsidiary that manufactures equipment, and the Bell Laboratories.

Ford, Chrysler chop loan rate

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. are offering lower car loan interest rates on some vehicles to help boost sluggish sales and move dealer inventories.

In a statement Tuesday, Ford said effective immediately it is offering an 11.9 percent interest rate for financing of 1982 Thunderbirds, Mercury XR-7s and Lincoln Continentals, with delivery by Dec. 31.

Current rates range from 17 percent to 18 percent.

Spokesman Tom Jakobowski said Chrysler's program, begun Tuesday, offers buyers of some 1981, 1982 and 1983 cars 12.5 percent interest rates on loans.

To be eligible, customers must buy Chrysler Imperials, Chrysler Cordobas and Dodge Miradas and have them delivered by Dec. 31, he said.Buyers of the 1982 Dodge 400 and Chrysler LeBaron convertibles also will be eligible if their purchases are delivered by Sept. 30, he added.

Federal deficit still climbing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit has reached $94.2 billion, well ahead of the red-ink record for an entire year set six years ago.

The deficit was $59.1 billion at this point in the 1981 fiscal year. The record, set in 1976, was $66.4 billion.

The Reagan administration is forecasting a deficit of $108.9 billion for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, and $115 billion for next year. Congressional budget estimates, however, have put next year's red ink closer to $150 billion.

New Treasury figures indicated that in July the government spent $19.8 billion more than it took in.

Last year's total deficit was $57.9 billion.

Canon introduces new copier

NEW YORK (AP) — Canon Inc. has introduced a personal plain paper copier that is smaller than an electronic typewriter and designed to sit atop a secretary's desk or conference room table.

Canon's new Personal Copier System, to be available early next year in the United States, is based on a cartridge containing a photosensitive drum, charging device, development and toner assembly and cleaner.

Canon said Tuesday that combining the parts into a single cartridge limits service requirements and, therefore, costs of the PC-10 and PC-20 copiers. The cartridge must be replaced after 2,000 copies.

Canon spokesman Robert T. Brennan said the cost of the copiers still had not been determined but that the suggested retail price likely would range from $1,000 to $1,300 each.

Weekly earnings inch upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' average weekly earnings increased fractionally in July, but earnings still are behind inflation for the past 12 months.

The Labor Department said Tuesday earnings were up 0.2 percent in July compared with a 1.4 percent decline the previous month.

The report is based on a bureau survey of business establishment payrolls, employment and work hour records.

From July 1981 through July 30 of this year, however, average weekly earnings decreased by 1.4 percent.

Before adjustment for seasonal change and inflation, the bureau said, gross average weekly earnings were $269.98 in July compared with $257.74 a year earlier.Gross weekly earnings amounted to $267.05 in June, it said.

Gannett to buy TV station

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Gannett Co. Inc., the nation's largest media group, has reached agreement to purchase WTCN-TV in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

Terms of the deal worked out between Gannett and present WTCN-TV owner Metromedia, Inc. were not disclosed Tuesday.

The station's sale is subject to Federal Communications Commission approval and is contingent on Gannett divesting itself of one of the five VHF stations it now owns.Under federal law, companies can have no more than seven TV stations, of which no more than five can be VHF stations.

In addition to its seven television stations, Gannett also owns and operates 13 AM and FM radio stations. It is the nation's largest newspaper group with 88 daily and 32 non-daily papers in its stable.

Gannett begins publishing a new national newspaper, USA Today, in September in the Baltimore and Washington, D.C., areas.

New farm gear shown

CHARLES CITY, Iowa (AP) — Despite rain and the floundering farm economy, the positive was accentuated Monday and Tuesday as White Farm Equipment Co. introduced its new models.

About 700 White Farm dealers, marketing personnel and reporters attended the events, held mostly at the Floyd County Fairgrounds.

Midland-Odessa area employment statistics show improvement in July

Employment statistics for the Midland-Odessa area in July look better than they did for the previous month, with both cities experiencing a drop in their unemployment rates.

Midland's rate dropped by 2.4 percent, from 7.6 in June to 5.2 for July. Odessa's rate changed by 1.8 percent, from June's high of 8.4 percent to 6.6 percent in July.

Apparently some of the unemployed workers whose fates were reported in the June statistics have left the Permian Basin for greener pastures, or dropped out of the labor force in preparation for the upcoming school year.

The health of the labor force throughout the state is also improving, after unemployment figures rose to an all-time high in June, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission.

Latest data shows that Midland's unemployment rate dropped to just 5.2 percent in July. A year ago in July, it was 6.8.

"June is always an atypical month because of school getting out and people looking for summer jobs," said Ed Miller of the Midland TEC office. The slight improvement in July's figures was part of a normal trend, Miller said, but the main reason the unemployment figure was down was because many people are leaving the area.

While Midland's unemployment percentage fell, the number of persons actually working here also decreased slighty, indicating some workers have either left the city or dropped out of the labor market altogether.

The total number of people working in Midland dropped from June's total of 60,800 to 60,650 in July, (out of a civilian labor force of 64,000). But, on the positive side, that number is still ahead of the amount recorded in July a year ago, when there were 58,800 employed in the Tall City, and ahead of January of this year, when there were 59,350 people on the job in Midland.

In Odessa, the unemployment rate fell from 8.4 percent in June to 6.6 percent in July. The number of persons actually working also dropped off slightly, from 66,600 in June to 66,000 in July. This is less than the number of persons employed during the same month a year earlier, when 69,700 employees were listed on Odessa payrolls.

There were 3,350 people unemployed in Midland in July and 4,650 in Odessa, reflecting a significant drop in the number of people seeking benefits, according to TEC records. This compares with June's tally of 5,000 unemployed in Midland and 6,100 in Odessa.

The statewide unemployment rate decreased also from June to July, dropping from 7.7 percent to 7.3 percent in July. The rate dropped in most of Texas' standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSAs), said TEC spokesman Ralph Briggs, reflecting a normal seasonal trend.

Decreases in the unemployment rate were reported in Dallas/Fort Worth, El Paso and San Antonio; while the unemployment rate in Houston remained steady, at 7.1 percent.

In July there were no large-scale layoffs in Midland, although energy-related companies continued to lay off one or two people sporadically, Miller said.

"Thank goodness this has not yet spread to the retail or wholesale people," Miller said Monday. "If it does, then we'll know the recession has really hit here. I hear a lot of people hoping, and I think it's wishing, to do more drilling in the fourth quarter. They say it's in their budgets, but I don't know if they are actually going to spend that money."

Why excitement means little to little guy

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The big news in financial circles is that interest rates have dropped dramatically. But for people without big stakes in the stock or bond markets, the excitement may mean little until rates on consumer loans go down.

The record-setting rally on Wall Street last week, fueled by falling interest rates, overshadowed the fact that the euphoria did not make home mortgages or car loans more affordable, and neither did it lower the cost of bank or gasoline credit.

Rates on home mortgages have come down slightly in many parts of the country, but any drop in consumer rates is minuscule compared with the plunge in business borrowing costs.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain why the decline in interest rates has not yet spread to consumers:

Q. What rates have dropped?

A. When people talk about interest rates going up or down from one day to the next, they are referring to open-market rates. One such rate is known as the federal funds rate, which simply is the rate that banks charge one another for overnight loans. That rate is considered important because it influences a banks' cost of acquiring funds that can be used for lending to businesses and consumers. Because that rate tends to go up when demand for funds rises or when the supply of bank reserves goes down, it is a kind of barometer of credit conditions.

Q. What else determines a bank's cost of funds?

A. A major source of funds for banks are "jumbo" certificates of deposits, which are deposits of $100,000 or more that individuals or businesses typically buy for one to three months. The rate on those certificates in the resale market last week fell more than one percentage point, to about 10.5 percent.

Q. Why have banks been quicker to lower business loan rates than consumer rates?

A. The answer, in a word, is competition. The big money to be made in banking lies in lending to corporations, so the competition for those customers is keener. Evidence of that is the multiple cuts in recent days in the prime rate.

The prime is the rate that banks use to figure interest charges on loans to corporations, although a bank's stated prime rate does not apply to all business loans. Smaller companies usually are charged more than the prime rate, while the bigger corporations that are considered better credit risks can get below-prime loans.

Q. When will consumer rates come down?

A. Economists say the recent drop in open-market interest rates, combined with a slackening of demand for credit as the recession lingers, has set the stage for somewhat lower consumer rates. That means rates on car loans, home-improvement loans and personal loans could fall in the months ahead. But the drop is not likely to be as quick or widespread as the decline in other kinds of rates.

Q. What is the risk of rates going back up?

A. There seems to be usually wide agreement in financial circles that rates for now will hold steady, or fall a bit more. But some economists think the chances are good that interest rates will start climbing again near year's end or in early 1983 if the economy stages more than a meager recovery and the Congress fails to find new ways of reducing the size of budget deficits.

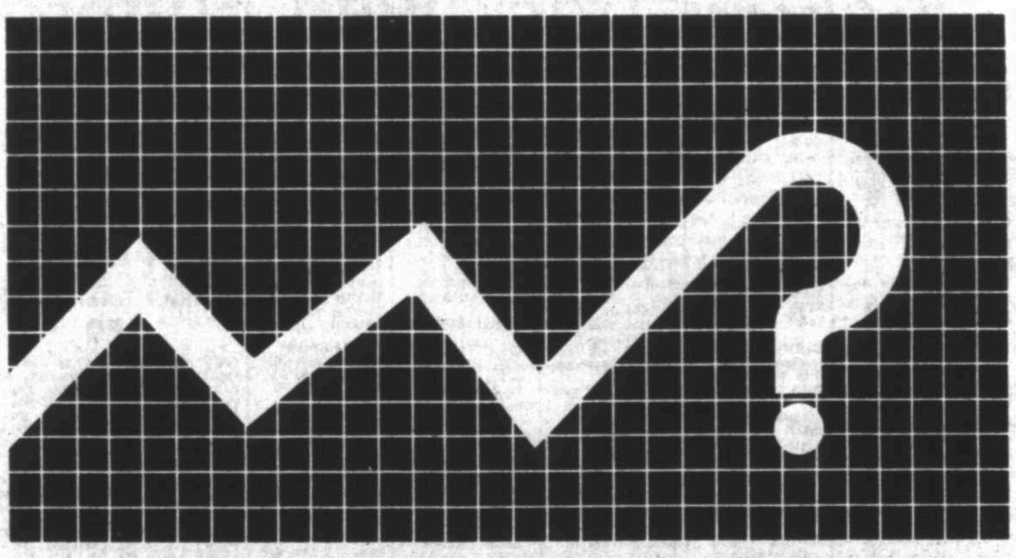
Investment Uncertainty?



WITH A FIRST NATIONAL 6-MONTH CERTIFICATE, YOU CAN BE CERTAIN OF YOUR INVESTMENT.

The interest rates on money funds may appear higher going in, but there is no way to be certain what the rate may be at the end of the month, or even the next week!

At The First National Bank of Midland, the interest rate on a 6-Month Money Market Certificate of Deposit is assured for the entire 182 day term, as long as you maintain your deposit.

Current Rate
10.355%

This is an annual rate and is subject to change at renewal. Federal regulations prohibit compounding of interest during the 182 day term and require that the penalty for early withdrawal be collected from the principal if the prescribed penalty period has not been met. The interest rate changes weekly and the current rate is in effect through August 30, 1982.

Fierro saves Midland

EL PASO — The Midland Cubs moved back to two games in front of the El Paso Diablos here Tuesday night in the Texas League West with a 13-7 victory, which was set up by a grand slam homerun by Javier Fierro in the seventh inning.

The Cubs never trailed in the game, but Fierro's bases loaded blast to left proved to be the winner since El Paso followed with four runs in their next two at bats. Fierro's lick gave the Cubs a 10-3 lead at the time, but the Cubs had a hard time closing the door in a game that produced 10 doubles and four homers.

Joe Carter opened the Midland seventh with a double and Carmelo Martinez reached on an error by third baseman Randy Ready. Carlos Lezcano then set up Fierro's eighth homer of the year with an infield single that failed to score Carter from third. Fierro then connected off Vasquez for the slam.

The Cubs held a 6-0 lead through 3⅓ innings of play. In the first, Carter and Mike Diaz had RBI singles for two runs and led 4-0 after two when Bruce Chaney doubled in a run and scored the other.

In the third, Lezcano singled in a lone run and Chaney scored on a sacrifice fly by Mike Kelley in the fourth.

Ready, the league's leading hitter, got to winner Ed Moore (1-0) with his 19th homer, but Diaz countered with his 21st shot in the fifth before El Paso's Mark Corey hit his fourth in the fifth inning. Moore worked only five innings to get the win and Randy Clark got his third save despite giving up five runs and nine hits in his four innings of work.

Midland's other run came in the eighth when Martinez produced an RBI single. El Paso got to Clark for three runs in the seventh on an RBI double by Bill Foley and a two-run single by Eric Peyton.

The Cubs pounded out 20 hits against four El Paso pitchers, including seven doubles and two homers. Chaney and Martinez both doubled twice.

The Cubs now hold a two-game edge over El Paso with eight games left in regular season play. The Cubs and Diablos face each other three more times, the first of which comes tonight in El Paso. The Cubs then finish the season in San Antonio with a five game series against the Dodgers, who are still in the race.

The Diablos ended the Cubs nine-game winning streak on Monday night here, but Midland has won 10 of their last 11 and 12 of their last 15 outings. However, Tuesday's victory was only the 20th of the year for the Cubs against 40 losses on the road.

Tulsa captures 2nd half title

By The Associated Press

The Tulsa Drillers and the Jackson Mets are going to be seeing a lot of each other for the next two weeks.

The Drillers and Mets open a five-game series at Tulsa Saturday to close out regular season play in the Texas League. Then the same two teams will meet in the playoffs for the Texas League East championship soon after regular season play ends next Wednesday.

The Drillers clinched the second half title Tuesday night with a 4-2 victory over the Shreveport Captains. The Mets won the first half championship, but have slipped to third place, 13 games behind the Drillers, in the second half.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, Amarillo whipped San Antonio, 6-1; and Arkansas edged Jackson, 3-2.

Doug Lulay continued his hot hitting streak to lead the Amarillo Gold Sox to a 6-1 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers.

Lulay, who contributed a run-producing single in the sixth inning when the Gold Sox scored all six runs on four hits and two San Antonio errors, had three hits in five trips to the plate. He has 13 hits in his last 19 plate appearances over the past five games.

The winning pitcher was John White, 7-7. The loser was Tom Klawitter, 9-13.

A pitcher Jackson loaned to the Arkansas Travelers before the season started drove home the winning run with a pinch hit single in the 10th inning as the Travelers defeated the Mets, 3-2.

Talented Buffs ranked high

Stanton coach Steve Park doesn't want No. 1 pick

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Stanton head football coach Steve Park doesn't like being the favorite in district play.

"I hate to be picked No. 1," he said, "I want us to work our way there."

Well, when you finish second in your district the previous year and have five returning All-District players, you can expect to be chosen as the team to beat.

Park need not fear, for the other teams in District 8-AA (including three with recent playoff experience) will be happy to allow his Buffaloes to work their way through the season, trying to remain on top.

Defensively, Park said his team is strong with one exception.

"The front four and defensive backs are looking good," he said. "But we're a little shy on linebackers."

ONE OF the returners on defense is Scott Church.

Last year he played a tackle position but he will move to defensive end this season. Like a lot of high school football players, the senior has changed a great deal during the off season. But unlike most, Church lost weight and his motivation was simple.

"Scott told me he wanted to play tight end," Park said, "and I told him he would have to lose some weight."

So lose weight he did. From 242 pounds to a trim 210. At 6-foot-2 that makes Church a prototype for a tight end, but not a defensive tackle. Hence the move to defensive end, which in Stanton's Oklahoma 5-2 defense is tantamount to being a linebacker.

But what of Church's dream of being a tight end? Well, if last year's performance at offensive tackle is any indication, he should be one heck of a good blocker. He was an All-District first team selection at that position.

He was also named to the second team All-District squad as a punter and kicker. That leaves one question unanswered. Can he catch the ball? Well, if he demonstrates the same ability to hang on to the ball as he has at his other endevours on the gridiron, then Church will be an outstanding receiver.

ANOTHER ALL—DISTRICT defensive returner for the Buffaloes is Tommy Esparza. Last year Esparza was a defensive back, but Park will move the 165-pound senior to rover for the 1982 campaign. Esparza will play the wing on offense, a position he played last year.

Three of the members of the defensive squad that made second team All-District last year will also be returning.

Maurizo Iaquaniello, a defensive back and Tracey Spinks, a defensive end will return to their positions in the lineup. Spinks will also start at left guard in the offensive line. Polo Mendez, a 220-pound defensive tacole last year, will move to the offensive line as a tackle.

Parks said he expects at least four players to go both ways for the Buffaloes. Joining Spinks, Esparza and Church on the workhorse list is Bobby Barnhill.

THE 5-FOOT-8, 170 pounder will line up as an inside linebacker and will be the starting fullback.

Offensively, the Buffaloes will miss tailback Kevin Newman. Newman left Stanton with the school rushing record, 1,570 yards, and was All-District, All-West Texas and All-South Plains pick.

Park said there are three candidates for the job this year, including Rocky Barnes, who seems to have the inside track for the position.

Another key position, quarterback, is up for grabs.

"Last year our quarterback was a converted tailback," Park said. "This year we want to throw more so we'll be going with a true quarterback."

But Park wouldn't say who it would be as the job is a tough fight between two youngsters.

TRANSFERS WILL play a major role in the Buffaloes success in '82. Mark Helms, one of the leading candidates at tailback, came to Stanton from Georgia last year and rushed for more than 800 yards in six games for the junior varsity.

James Bass came to Stanton with his father-coach and will see some action at defensive end and left tackle.

Stanton has finished second in their district for the past two years and with all the size, speed and experience of this year's squad, they could finally break the rut and win it all.

Two ingrediants that could be the key to success are leadership and injuries.

If the Buffaloes get through their three pre-season games with class AAA schools, Park feels the injury problem will be behind his team, and Park concluded, "With seventeen seniors we ought to find some leadership somewhere."

The Snake is back with Bum

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

The Snake is back in the National Football League and has no intentions of spending the year on the bench.

Ken Stabler returned to NFL Tuesday, agreeing to join former head coach Bum Phillips with the New Orleans Saints.

"I've never walked on the field when I thought I was going to be a backup quarterback, said the 36-year-old signalcaller who was released earlier this year by the Houston Oilers. "I may wind up being (a backup quarterback) one but I'm not taking that approach."

Stabler, who is the most accurate passer in NFL history, hitting 60.32 percent of his passes, will challenge incumbent Archie Manning and Bobby Scott for the starting job, while second-year pro Dave Wilson recovers from knee surgery. The former Oakland and Houston veteran reportedly has signed a contract although terms were not disclosed.

STABLER'S SIGNING comes one day after NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said teams could begin talking with the former University of Alabama quarterback, who was investigated by the league because of published reports concerning his alleged association with known gamblers.

Stabler's arrival allowed the Saints to say goodbye to Craig Bradshaw — the brother of Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw. New Orleans also cut veteran wide receiver Ike Harris and placed Wilson and free safety Tom Myers on the disabled list.

Stabler apparently joins the Saints under the same sort of unofficial agreement that ended the holdout of linebacker Jim Kovach: play now and talk money later, when the league and the players' union settle their differences.

The Saints cannot negotiate with Stabler because the NFL Players Association and management don't have a contract. The union contends that it is now the sole bargaining agent for every player, so the team cannot bargain with him individually.

"You've got to do one of two things," Phillips said — equal either Stabler's last contract or the minimum NFL contract. Stabler's last contract at Houston reportedly was worth at least $450,000 per year. The minimum for a veteran with five years experience or more is $35,000.

Phillips said he would suggest to Stabler that he could sign, play, and discuss money later.

ANOTHER OBSTACLE to signing Stabler fell Monday when NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle gave permission for teams to talk to him. Stabler had been accused of associating with known gamblers, and Rozelle said he would not discipline the quarterback if he keeps his distance from "undesirable elements."

The league office said all clubs had been notified of Rozelle's decision and had been told they were free to deal for Stabler.

Phillips said Sunday that Stabler knows his system from the year they spent together at Houston.

"If we signed Ken on Friday he could play for us on Saturday," the coach said.

"He knows our system. He could step in and play. How well? Well, that remains to be seen. That's what you have preseason for."

A statement by Rozelle, released by the NFL, made no reference to Stabler's alleged past associations. Rozelle's statement said:

"After a review of all information available to me following an extensive investigation and a private meeting with Ken Stabler, I have concluded that disciplinary action is not merited and that he should be free to sign a contract with an NFL club should he so desire.

"In so doing, I have cautioned him that any return to the NFL is conditioned on his future willingness and ability to maintain total separation, both publicly and privately, between himself and any undesirable elements, and that any lapse may subject him to serious disciplinary action, up to and including suspension from the league. Ken Stabler has assured me of his willingness to do so."

There were several other transactions as NFL teams pared their rosters to this week's limit of 70 players, 25 above the opening day limit.

And with 19 days to go before the opening of the 1982 season, the two sides in the negotiations for a new basic agreement will resume contract talks in Washington. It will be the first formal talks between the players and management since negotiations broke off in July when the two sides failed to agree on a site for their discussuions.

Bulldogs defeat Imperial in V-ball

IMPERIAL — The Midland High Bulldogs opened the 1982 volleyball season here Tuesday night with a hard fought 6-15, 15-11, 15-13 win over Imperial.

"We started slow, but got stronger as the game went on," noted MHS coach Linda Jolly. "The new blocking rule is giving everyone trouble. You can't put your hand over the net anymore and that is almost impossible to do on a spike."

The Bulldogs lost badly in the first set by a 6-15 margin, but the serving by Jency Johnson, Shelia Christian and Denise Lanz brought the Bulldogs back for the win.

The MHS junior varsity had an easier time by recording a 15-0, 15-2 win over Imperial as Mavis Lee scored eight points in the first set and Georgeann Savary scored 11 points in the second.

MHS travels to Andrews Thursday and will compete in the JV and varsity tournament in Monahans over the weekend.

The Bulldogs will make their home debut Tuesday against Imperial at the MHS gym.

More gun blasts strike Ayala's home

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — For the second time in 24 hours, shotgun blasts have struck the vacant home of boxer Tony Ayala Jr.

The undefeated junior middleweight fighter, scheduled to begin treatment of emotional and drinking problems in California today, was not home early Monday nor shortly before midnight Monday when neighbors reported buckshot being fired at his house.

The boxer's father and trainer, Tony Ayala Sr., angrily blamed the news media for the shots being fired at his son's house.

"Thanks to you people, this is what has happened," the older Ayala told reporters outside the house.

"Everything has gotten completely blown out of proportion and I have you to thank for it. You people in the news media have been judging Tony before he's had a trial."

Tony Ayala Jr., 19, is scheduled for a Sept. 16 hearing to determine whether his 10 years probation should be revoked because of his Aug. 15 arrest on a burglary charge.

The fighter was charged with burglary after police arrested him late at night inside a house two blocks from the home where he recently moved.

Alan Brown, Ayala's attorney, maintains that the boxer was intoxicated and wandered into the wrong house.

After his arrest, the news media reported that Ayala had received 19 traffic tickets over the past 18 months and that most of the tickets were dismissed by city judges, although several of the alleged violations occurred while his driver license was suspended.

Neighbors of Ayala reported early today that they were awakened by four shotgun blasts, then saw a white and maroon car speed away. An investigating officer said he found four spent 12-gauge shotgun shells near the curb and on the grass in front of Ayala's house.

Police said five additional shotgun blasts were aimed at the front of the house about 2:20 a.m. Monday, peppering the garage door and the brickwork in front of the house.

Ayala Jr., scheduled to fight former champion Roberto Duran here Nov. 19 for $750,000, went to New Jersey to watch a Sunday boxing match after the incident, then traveled to California for treatment, his promoter, Lou Duva, said.

Carlton blows four-run lead to Braves

Dodgers keep West pace with win over St. Louis Cardinals

By The Associated Press

You're trying to hold on to first place, at least for one more day. The other guys get four runs in the first inning. The man you have to come back against is named Steve Carlton.

Pretty grim, huh?

"I didn't like it at all," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre, whose Braves found themselves behind 4-0 against Philadelphia's ace left-hander Tuesday night. "But we had a five-game winning streak, have been playing aggressive and then Jerry (Royster) got us going again with the home run."

And before the night was over, the Braves had blasted Carlton from the mound during a six-run fourth inning as they took a 9-7 victory from the Phillies. Atlanta's sixth consecutive victory enabled it to stay on top in the National League West, one percentage point ahead of Los Angeles.

Royster's first-inning homer made it 4-1. Bob Horner belted his 25th homer of the year in the third inning to close the gap to 4-2.

"I'd rather face anybody than Carlton when he's on," said Horner. "I've seen him throw better."

The big fourth inning was highlighted by Dale Murphy's two-run homer, his league-leading 31st of the season.

Carlton, 16-9, has been hit hard in his last three starts, allowing 29 hits and 18 earned runs in 21⅓ innings and watching his earned run average soar from 2.95 to 3.56.

Still, Phillie third baseman Mike Schmidt warned that the slump was only temporary.

"He's got a couple bad games out of his system," said Schmidt. "There's no chance that will happen in September when there's no tomorrow."

Veteran knuckleballer Phil Niekro, 12-3, picked up the victory for Atlanta.

Dodgers 5, Cardinals 2

Bob Welch, 15-8, fired a four-hitter and Ken Landreaux tripled twice, singled and scored three runs to lead the Dodgers.

"I was throwing the ball pretty good. I was fluid, and I was moving the fastball around. They (the Cardinals) have got some jackrabbits, and they'll run you to death if you let them," said Welch.

Landreaux, meanwhile, came out of a 3-for-33 slump.

"You just keep it in perspective," said Landreaux. "You just keep hitting the ball hard. I've been hitting the ball well. I just hadn't been finding any holes."

Pirates 6, Padres 5

Tony Pena's RBI single in the 11th off Juan Eichelberger scored Lee Lacy with the winning run and capped a stirring Pirate late-inning comeback.

The Pirates trailed, 5-1, going into the seventh inning. They picked up two runs in the seventh and one in the eighth to close the gap to 5-4. Then, with two out in the ninth, Bill Madlock tied it with a solo homer off Gary Lucas.

"I was definitely looking for a homer," said Madlock. "That's the only thing I could do. I was looking for a fastball up and he gave me one."

That set the stage for Pena's bases-loaded, two-out single two innings later.

"I knew he (Eichelberger) was capable of throwing four balls in a row," said Pena. "I waited on the first pitch, and then he threw the second pitch right down the middle."

Expos 5, Reds 1

Scott Sanderson, 7-11, scattered nine hits and won his first game since June 20.

Expos catcher Gary Carter, who blasted his 25th home run of the year in the second inning, said of Sanderson, "He really pitched a strong game. His control was excellent. The key is his breaking ball. When he gets it over, the hitters can't sit on his fast ball."

Montreal's Al Oliver completed a streak in which he picked up six consecutive hits over three games, and saw his National League-leading batting average climb to .338.

Bruce Berenyi, 8-13, took the loss.

Astros 5, Mets 4

Phil Garner lashed a two-out eighth inning double down the left field line to drive home Dickie Thon with the winning run as the Astros sent the Mets to their ninth straight defeat.

Victims of a poor start, the Astros have now won 11 of their last 15 games.

For the Mets, last in the NL East, their frustrations were symbolized as Hubie Brooks was called out at the plate in the eighth inning on a play that would have given them a 5-4 lead. Brooks was then ejected after vehemently arguing the call with umpire Ed Montague.

Cubs 8, Giants 4

Bill Buckner smashed a three-run homer and drove in four runs, while Bump Wills drove in three runs with a pair of singles to lead the Cubs over the Giants.

Buckner also hit into two double plays, but wasn't concerned.

"That's the first time this season I've hit into two double plays in one game," said Buckner, "but I'll trade that for four runs batted in anytime. I've won a batting title before but I'm really getting a charge out of driving in runs."

Ferguson Jenkins, 9-13, picked up the victory over Rich Gale, 5-13.

New York Met Hubie Brooks is called out while trying to score as Houston Astro catcher Alan Ashby applies the tag in an eighth inning play. Brooks was ejected from the game for disputing the call and the Astros won by one run.

Stobart faces culture shock

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — As a long-time assistant to Michigan head Coach Bo Schembechler, Chuck Stobart developed a philosophy much like that of his mentor. He prefers the power running game, with a few wrinkles thrown in only to keep the defense honest.

The new coach at the University of Utah thus might be a candidate for culture shock when he goes up against some of the pass-happy teams in the Western Athletic Conference for the first time.

Asked by WAC Skywriters on Tuesday if he had ever seen so much passing in any of his previous coaching jobs, Stobart responded, "Yeah, in pregame warmups."

BUT HE is quick to add that it is common, even in the staid Big Ten, to find the weaker teams resorting to a bombs-away attack in an effort to compensate for their deficiencies, and he saw plenty of those teams play Michigan.

"And you must realize that not all of the WAC likes to throw the ball the way Brigham Young and San Diego State do," noted Stobart. "Wyoming and Hawaii, for instance, are more ground-oriented, so there's really a pretty good balance of run and pass in this league."

Stobart, 47, head coach at Toledo the last six seasons, is one of the few college football coaches in a new position to inherit a winning program. Utah has had a winning record the last four years, including an 8-2-1 mark last season when the Utes challenged for the WAC title.

His good fortune seems only fair, since he left an equally successful program at Toledo, having guided that school to a 9-3 record last year and victory over favored San Jose State in the first-ever California Bowl.

STOBART HAS brought with him a strong sense of organization and discipline, most of all discipline. That took some getting used to by the players who were accustomed to the laid-back style of his predecessor, Wayne Howard. One of his players brought up the name "Lombardi" when discussing the intense practice sessions and demanding schedules the players are required to keep.

"I don't think I'm a Lombardi type," said Stobart, "but we are organized and I believe our practices are productive."

Quarterback Ken Vierra agrees. "On a scale of one to 10 in degree of difficulty, our practices are probably a 12," he said. "But we get things accomplished and we learn something every day, and that didn't used to be the case."

The team Stobart inherited from Howard, who resigned last winter, has considerable talent, although all seven All-WAC players from last year are gone. The main problems are in the offensive line, where center Don Eck is the lone returning starter, and lack of depth at virtually every position except running back.

Stobart has had to move his freshmen recruits around to fill in as second-and third-teamers at those positions, but he hopes they don't have to see action.

"I ONCE had a full head of black hair and movie-star good looks, and then one year I had to play a bunch of freshmen," said Stobart, who is balding, slightly paunchy and has that well-worn look about him. "This is what playing freshmen does to you."

Heath wins title

Ella Heath of Hogan Park recently won the Permian Basin Women's Golf Association Play Day tournament at Mission Country Club with a low gross score of 81. Blanche Cramer of Sunset was low net and Naomi Colson of Hogan Park won fewest putts.

Pat Price of Andrews won low gross honors in the first flight while Ginny Elmore of Sunset had low net and Pauline Howell of Sunset low putts. In the third flight, Jane Webb of Andrews had low gross while Maureen Phillips of Ranchland Hills won low net and bernice Webb of Hogan Park low putts.

Barbara Briley and Martha Womack of Mission tied for low gross in the fourth flight while Gerry Thomas and Billie Craig of Andrews tied for low net. Hogan's Connie Stricker took low putts.

Artesia develops new silver lining

PORTALES (AP) — When Artesia Coach Mike Phipps had seven starters injured and in casts at the start of the District 4AAA season last year, he couldn't see how the situation could help him.

The perennial powerhouse Bulldogs finished the season 6-5 and though they made the playoffs, Aztec defeated Artesia in the first round.

However, the cloud over the Bulldog camp has developed a silver lining.

Phipps has 26 returning lettermen, 14 of which were starters at one time or another for the Bulldogs. That experience, plus a good deal of size, makes the Bulldogs the favorites to unseat defending state champion Portales as the district champion.

In a poll of the league's coaches compiled for Associated Press, Artesia was a unanimous choice for the district title. Portales was picked to finish second, followed by Lovington and Tucumcari. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own teams.

"I've never had injuries like we had last year in all my years here," said Phipps. "It didn't help last year, but it has for this year. A lot of kids saw a lot of action."

One key Bulldog who missed much of last season with injuries was quarterback Scott Runyan, who ran for more than 1,000 yards as a sophomore. Runyan is bigger now at 5-10 and 207-pounds and returns for his senior year to lead the vaunted Artesia wishbone offense.

Joining Runyan in the backfield are junior Jeff Sanders and senior Eric McCaleb, both fill-in starters at halfback for a good deal of the 1981 season. Phipps has also moved Chris Hernandez, 210-pounds, from guard to fullback.

The front line may be Artesia's biggest strength. Anchored by senior tackles Gerome Briseno, 220, and Jeff Canfield, 215, Artesia has more size than usual.

"We're big for an Artesia team," Phipps said. "These boys aren't fat, just tall and rangy."

Artesia also has back all four defensive backs in McCaleb, Shawn Smith, Mark Juarez and Leroy Richards.

In Portales, Rams Coach Tom Gruber has to replace 17 starters and won't have anyone named Poe to guide the offense that won two of the last three state titles.

The heir apparent to the quarterback spot vacated by All-State standout Johnny Poe is junior Ed Loehr. Loehr has a dandy passing arm and Gruber plans to use it.

"We feel like we're going to have a good passing attack," said Gruber. "Ed's probably the best pure passer we've had here."

Junior fullback Paul Pacheco is the lone returnee to the backfield although seniors Larry Gutierrez and Kerry Walsh saw action last season.

Up front, All-State tackle John Gossett is the lone returner, but he will move to tight end since talented Rod Simon has decided to concentrate on baseball his senior year.

Eddie Armijo, 6-1, 220; David Allen, 6-0, 210 and Maurice Griffin, 6-2, 210, give Portales abundant size in the offensive line.

Defensively, only Gossett in the line and Gutierrez at rover return. But junior Mark Howl saw action last year at tackle as did senior Stan Strong.

The Rams will have to rebuild the secondary, where all of last year's starters graduated.

In Lovington, second-year Coach Jerry Brown can't wait for the season to start.

"We're extremely pleased with the development of our program," said Brown. "We have over 60 kids out for football and they are bigger and physically stronger than in the past."

"We have more of a power-type offense than we did last year," says Brown.

Football player dies

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A junior high school football player died after he collapsed during practice, authorities said.

Robert Novak, 14, of Wesleyville, Erie County, died at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Hamot Medical Center. The ninth grade student collapsed at the Iroquois Junior High School practice field, the county coroner's office said.

Novak was running a lap at the field when he slowed down and began walking, authorities said. Coaches approached him, and the boy lay down and went into cardiac arrest, emergency personnel said.

Erie County Coroner Merle Wood said no cause of death has been determined. An autopsy was performed Tuesday, but officials were awaiting the results of further tests.

Close, hot races belong to baseball's young, old catalysts

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Call them catalysts. Call them leaders. They are men like Reggie Jackson, Cecil Cooper, Fernando Valenzuela, Lonnie Smith.

They come in all ages — like rookie Willie McGee and veteran Phil Niekro. They come in all sizes — like Gorman Thomas and Manny Trillo.

They are the men in the pennant races.

As the 1982 baseball season nears its final month, and the chase for division flags becomes more heated, keep a close eye on these men. They mold the fate of their teams.

In the American League West, California held a two-game lead over the Kansas City Royals, while Milwaukee threatened to make a runaway of the AL East with a five-game lead over Boston going into Tuesday night's action.

THE ANGELS were a unique blend of retreads and established stars with Jackson — the straw who stirs the drink c in the forefront. Overcoming an abysmal start, Jackson was hitting .275 with 30 home runs and 77 runs batted in after fleeing the chaos of Yankee Stadium for Southern California.

Obviously, Jackson was not alone with the swizzle stick. Don Baylor had 74 RBI and 19 homers for the Angeles. Fred Lynn had driven in 73 runs with 18 homers, and Doug DeCinces had 24 homers and 80 RBI.

That left someone to serve the drinks — starting pitchers Steve Renko and Geoff Zahn. Renko, in the 13th major league season, has followed an 8-4 record in 1981 withc 10-4 mark this year, while Zahn, the crafty left-hander with seven years of experience behind him, was 14-5.

Despite scoring an average of more than five runs per game, the Angels have been unable to shake Kansas City. The fleet feet of Willie Wilson have helped keep the Royals in the race.

Wilson led AL hitters with a .334 average. Swinging behind him were the dangerous George Brett and Hal McRae. Brett had an average of .300 — miniscule compared with his .390 of 1980 — but he also had 56 RBI and 17 homers. McRae, meanwhile, is enjoying his best season. He is hitting .317 with a major-league leading 109 RBI.

The ace of Kansas City's pitching staff, as usual, was right-handed sidewinder Dan Quisenberry, who had 27 saves and an earned run average of 2.86.

IN THE East, the Brewers were putting on a display of power better than that of any team in baseball. They not only had baseball's best record, 72-51, but theyo had 166 homers.

Thomas led in homers with 32, while Cooper had 24 plus a .317 average and 90 RBI. There was no monopoly on the long ball in Milwaukee. Ben Oglivie had 25 homers, Ted Simmons 18, Robin Yount 22 and Don Money 13.

Rollie Fingers anchored an improved pitching staff with his 28 saves and and an ERA of 2.71, while starter Pete Vuckovich had a 14-4 record.

Within reach were Boston, five games out, and Baltimore, seven back.

Jim Rice and Dwight Evans were getting some help from oldtimer Carl Yastrzemski providing runs, while Mark Clear was the bullpen ace. Rice had 75 RBI, Evans 72 with 21 homers, and Yaz, who turned 43 four days ago, chipped in with 56. Clear had a record of 10-7 with 12 saves.

The story in Baltimore was the reclamation of right-hander Jim Palmer, who often has asked to be traded, and spent some time in the bullpen this year. Back in the starting rotation, Palmer is 10-3. Eddie Murray's .308 average, 69 RBI and 20 homers were no surprise, but then there was John Lowenstein, who had six homers and 20 RBI last year for the Orioles. This season, though, Lowenstein was hitting .317 with 49 RBI and 20 homers.

Atlanta and Los Angeles were locked in baseball's closest race, separated by .000768 percentage points in the National League West. Despite losing 19 of their past 26 games, including 11 in a row, the Braves held the slim lead.

Dale Murphy and Gene Garber were two of the biggest reasons why. Murphy shared the league lead in homers with 30, and had driven in 89 runs with a .290 average.

At age 43, Phil Niekro showed few signs of weakening with an 11-3 record, and Garber had 22 saves in 52 appearances, covering 88 innings.

Valenzuela, last year's Rookie of the Year and Cy Young Award winner in the NL, was right on target again for the Dodgers. His record of 16-9 tied him for the most victories in the league, and he had an ERA of 2.88 with 143 strikeouts. While Steve Garvey and Ron Cey both got off to slow starts, Dusty Baker had a .304 batting average with 69 RBI and 20 homers, and Pedro Guerrero was hitting .300 with 25 homers and 80 RBI.

In the East, Montreal, everyone's preseason pick to win the title, faded, while St. Louis braced for the charge. The Cards hung onto a three-game lead over Philadelphia, while the Expos were seven games back.

St. Louis completed its rebuilding program this season with the acquisition of a pair of Smiths, Lonnie and Ozzie. While Ozzie provided defense at shortstop, Lonnie added punch, hitting .312 with 62 RBI, 53 stolen bases and 100 runs scored. The rookie McGee was hitting .336 in 87 games, and Bruce Sutter had 27 saves.

With perhaps the best defense in the eague, provided in large measure by shortstop Ivan DeJesus and second baseman Trillo, the Phillies hung in there. Despite early injury problems, Mike Schmidt had 27 homers and 67 RBI. Catcher Bo Diaz led the team in run-production, driving in 75, while Gary Matthews added 71.

Foursome captures golf title in Boy Scouts Pro-Am event

Led by Craig Adams, Don Hughes, John Riggs and Tommy Johnson shot a 53 to win the seventh Boy Scouts Pro-Am tournament at Hogan Park Golf Course as 19 pros and 24 teams participated.

Green Tree's Randy Kahn led Lloyd MacDonald, George Mounts and Nick Williams were second with a 54.

Six teams tied for sixth with 55s. They were: Rex Worrell, Hogan Park pro, D.K. Coffman, Ray Nicholas and Clint Benefield; J.D. Dill, HP assistant pro, Bennie Massey, Sam Wood and Don Higgins; Odessa CC pro Jake Bechtold, Carl Hefner, Bob Williamson, Don Presley; Monahans CC pro Beau Wright, Steve Whiteside, Travis Burke and Bill Williams; Odessa CC pro Gidd Faircloth, Brad Hicks, Bob Emerson and Larry Hammond; Mark Felton, Jack Hunnicutt, Dale Ballard and John Cunningham.

Terry Lester, Midland CC, and Wright tied for low pro with 67. Worrell, Dill and C.G. Griffin, Big Spring CC, tied at 69 while Kahn had a 70.

David Shuster, MCC, was low amateur with a 69.

Kelle Mobley's 76 tops field in Green Tree's junior event

Green Tree Country Club held its Junior Club Championship golf tournament Wednesday with Kelle Mobley and Perry McIntosh taking the 16-17 age bracket titles.

Mobley posted a 76 to win the girls title while McIntosh had a 99 to beat out Allan Ladaga, who had a 118. Mobley's 76 was the best round posted by all the golfers.

In the 14-15 competition, Alli Weiss won the girls title with a 166 while Jeff Wildman posted an 81 for the boys. Wildman's 81 was the best round turned in by any of the boys. Scott Pockat had a 92. In the 12-13 age group, Ted Newman took the boys crown with an 84 while Beau Brown posted a 94.

Only nine holes were played in the 11-under division, and David Schmidt's 53 was tops for the boys and Greg Rich had a 57. Audi Weiss' 80 was tops among the girls and Stacy Stroman had an 82.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson comes up angry after being called out by umpire Durwood Merrill at second in an eighth inning steal attempt. Henderson set a record by being caught 39 times this year. He was attempting steal 118 to tie Lou Brock's record.

Henderson nails down wrong record

Rickey does move to within one of 'real' Brock record

By The Associated Press

Oakland speedster Rickey Henderson finally cracked the record book for stolen bases. But it wasn't the theft mark he was shooting for.

After stealing two bases in Tuesday's game against the Detroit Tigers to move within one of Lou Brock's all-time record of 118, Henderson was caught by catcher Bill Fahey going for tying mark in the eighth inning of Oakland's 3-0 victory.

It was the 39th time this season that Henderson had been thrown out in his quest for the record, breaking the major league mark of 38 set by Ty Cobb in 1915 — a season Cobb stole what appeared to be an untouchable 96 bases.

"I thought I was safe at second," Henderson said about the call made by umpire Durwood Merrill. "He didn't have the right position on it and never saw the tag. I had my hand on the bag when the tag was made on my back."

The biggest disappointment for Henderson, however, was not equalling or breaking the record before the home crowd at Oakland Coliseum. The A's go on a 10-day road trip and Henderson is a cinch to break Brock's record.

"You would think that he'd want me to break the record at home and get it over with," he said.

Merrill, as expected, stood by his decision.

"I made the call," he said, "and I don't regret it."

Henderson wasn't the only person in Oakland's Coliseum who thought he was safe. A's Manager Billy Martin, Coach Charlie Metro and teammate Dwayne Murphy disagreed and where thrown out of the game for disputing the call.

Oakland scored all its runs in the first inning off Detroit start Jerry Ujdur, 7-7, as Henderson had two thefts. Matt Keough, 11-16, pitched his 10th complete game and second shutout of the season.

Royals 5, Rangers 3

Kansas City's John Wathan also got in on the base-stealing act, logging his 31st stolen base to set a major league record for catchers.

Hal McRae also drove in three runs, raising his major league-leading total to 112, on a double and two singles to lead the Royals at the plate.

Larry Gura, 16-8, was the winning pitcher, getting relief help from Dan Quisenberry, who earned his 28th save of the season. Frank Tanana, 6-14, was the loser.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 3

Joe Nolan's dramatic grand slam with two outs in the bottom of the 10th off reliever Joey McLaughlin lifted the Orioles to their fourth straight victory.

Dennis Martinez, 12-10, pitched a four-hitter to register the victory. McLaughlin's record fell to 8-6.

Eddie Murray gave the Orioles a 3-0 lead in the first inning when he smashed his 21st homer of the season, after singles by Glenn Gulliver and Ken Singleton.

Twins 5, Yankees 0

Minnesota rookie Frank Viola, 4-4, tossed a six-hitter for his first major league shutout. The 6-foot-4 lefthander walked one and struck out eight in registering his second complete game in 15 starts.

John Castino provided most of the power for the Twins, singling home a run in the seventh and hitting a two-run homer in the ninth, his sixth home run of the year. Gary Ward also hit his 22nd homer of the season in the eighth inning.

Tommy John, 9-10, was the losing pitcher.

Indians 14, White Sox 7

Andre Thornton, Mike Hargrove and Ron Hassey powered the Indians to their seventh victory in nine games. Thornton knocked in four runs, Hargrove three and Hassey slammed a two-run homer.

Rick Waits, 2-12, got the victory in relief of John Denny.

LaMarr Hoyt, 14-12, was the early victim of the Cleveland barrage, getting knocked out after giving up five runs in 12-3 innings. Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa used six pitchers in the contest.

Brewers 7, Angels 3

Robin Yount and Ted Simmons both homered and drove in three runs to power the Brewers to their fifth victory in six games.

Simmons' homer, a two-run shot in the fifth, was his 19th of the season. Yount clubbed his 23rd in the ninth, also a two-run blast.

Reggie Jackson hit his 31st and Don Baylor his 20th for California.

Red Sox 5, Mariners 4

Reid Nichols probably likes Seattle's Kingdome almost as much as Boston's Fenway Park if his performances the past two nights are any indication. Both nights he drilled game-winning homers for the Red Sox.

Tuesday's game was twice as nice, though, as Nichols cracked two homers to hike his season total to six. His two-run homer in the fourth gave the Red Sox a 4-2 lead.

Washington given a nickname

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington franchise in the new United States Football League introduced its new head coach, veteran Canadian Football League coach Ray Jauch, and its new nickname, the Federals.

Jauch has a record of 110-80-4 in 12 seasons with Edmonton and Winnipeg in the CFL.

"We're not gambling," Berl Bernhard, Federals' president said Tuesday of the decision to hire Jauch. "Ray has a full range of experience. He has such a phenomenal record every place he's been."

Green Tree CC hosts Hagen benefit tourney

The fourth annual Walter Hagen Golf Tournament will be held Tuesday, Aug. 31, at Green Tree Country Club with an 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. shotgun start.

The tournament originated when several admirers of legendary golfer Walter Hagen, who died of cancer in 1969, formed the Walter Hagen Foundation, which teamed up with the PGA to sponsor pro-am tournaments to benefit the American Cancer Society.

The tax deductible entry fee is $150 per person. Registration forms may be picked up at any of the country club pro shops or at Hogan Park Municipal Golf Course.

Colters win title

Nina and Jim Colter won low gross honors recently in the Ranchland Hills Women's Golf Association's "freebie" couples golf tournament. Top low gross honors in the B flight were Nancy and Charlie Tierce.

Over 50 couples enterd the two-man ½-handicap scramble event. Handicap winners in the A flight were Kathy Bond and Dean Woods, first; Bernie and Dave Lage, second; and Orene and Claude Mitchell, fourth.

B flight winners were Mary Wagner and Jake Sax, first; June and J. L. McGill, second; Mary Lou and Bob Hand, third; and Florence and Harold Clark, fourth.

MC inks golfer

David Stillwell of Comanche is the latest recruit for the Midland College men's golf team. A 1982 graduate of Comanche High School, David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Stillwell.

David was All-District two years and All-Region one year. He was a member of the Comanche golf team which was runnerup in the Class AAA state golf tournament in 1981 and 1982.

"I feel that David has a lot of potential as a college golfer. He comes to Midland College from a good golf program at Comanche and has experienced good competition on the state level. He should be quite an asset for our program this year," said Delnor Poss, MC athletic director and men's golf coach.

Poss also pointed out that Stillwell is a former Midland resident. David is the fifth freshman signed by MC this year. Earlier signees include Danny Klosa, San Antonio Lee; Emil Hale, Midland Lee; and Mike Schwartz and Robert Iovinelli, both from El Paso Coronado.

FCA slates meeting

The newly formed Permian Basin adult chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes will hold its second meeting at noon Thursday at the Bonanza Steak House on the Andrews Highway.

A special FCA film will be shown at the meeting and highlights such FCA members as Tom Landry, Roger Staubach, Jim Sundberg and Craig Reynolds.

The meeting is open to all persons interested in the new Permian Basin adult chapter of the FCA. The group is formed as an outreach to Permian Basin athletes and plans to sponsor events such as jogathons and golf tournaments.

Soccer signup due

The Midland Soccer Association will hold its final registration for the fall season from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Hogan Park activities building next to Cubs Stadium.

No registrations will be accepted after Saturday. Registration fee is $16 per child.

Tryouts for the MSA select teams will be held Sunday at the soccer complex at Hogan Park. Tryout time for 10-year-olds will be 1:30 p.m. abd will be followed by age 11 at 2:15 p.m., age 12 at 3 p.m. and age 13 at 3:45 p.m.

The Select League stresses competitive soccer as opposed to recreational soccer. Two teams will be selected on each age leve with a total of four teams in each division. An eight game schedule will be set up for city play, however, these teams also have the opiton of travelling out of town for other games, which is their responsibility to arrange. They may also travel to tournaments of their choice.

The select teams will not be reformed each year as the teams in the regular recreational program are. The teams will be selected at tryouts and players will be on that team for the duration.

Robert Font is commissioner for the Select League. He still needs coaches and may be reached at 683-8078.

Regular season soccer action will begin Saturday, Sept. 16.

Ken Callaway, John L. Kennedy, Bill Fair and Jim Chase look at some clubs that can be earned Tuesday in the fourth annual Walter Hagen Golf Tournament at Green Tree Country Club. Tournament proceeds will benefit the American Cancer Society and Midland merchants have donated prizes. The tax deductible entry fee is $150 per person. Registration forms may be picked up at any of the country club pro shops or at Hogan Park Municipal Golf Course.

Kotar tumor unremovable

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Doctors were unable to remove a brain tumor from former New York Giants running back Doug Kotar, who underwent six hours of surgery Tuesday.

"Unfortunately, it was a tumor that could not be removed. It is in an area of the brain that acts as the center of the brain, and if you remove the structure, you can do more damage than good," said Dr. Kim Sloan, a physician who assisted in the operation at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey Hospital.

"It is not a very good tumor. As of now, it looks more like a poor type of tumor. I'm evading the words malignant or benign because I don't know for sure yet," he said.

Sloan said the only treatment options left now were radiation therapy, chemotherapy or antibiotics, depending on the results of the analysis of tissue samples.

Kotar, who retired July 23 after eight years in the National Football League, learned he had the tumor last week when he sought medical treatment for headaches he suffered after being kicked in the head while playing volleyball in his swinning pool.

Sloane estimated that Kotar probably had the tumor less than a year. He also said he will not know if Kotar suffered any detrimental effects from the surgery for about 24 hours, when Kotar will be fully awake.

Kotar, the Giants' fourth all-time rushing leader, began his pro career with the Pittsburgh Steelers. The University of Kentucky graduate was traded to the Giants in 1974.

Juneau has a Judy for offensive, defensive tackle

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Judy Jackson said her mother was hoping this was the year she'd grow out of being a tomboy. Instead, she's going to be a starting offensive and defensive tackle on Juneau High School's varsity football team.

"She's just another football player," Juneau Coach R.C. Clifton said Tuesday. "Everybody's getting hit hard out here. Once she puts those shoulder pads and that helmet on, she's a target just like everybody else."

Jackson is a 15-year-old junior who stands 5-foot-9 and weighs 185 pounds.

"I think she'll surprise some of the opposing players," Clifton said. "They will think that she's a puppy. She's no puppy. She can hit."

Jackson played tennis and girl's basketball for Juneau before, but this was her first tryout for football.

"She is definitely the first girl to play on a male athletic team in Milwaukee," public school Athletic Commissioner Jack Takerian said.

Jackson was nursing a slightly pulled hamstring and a jammed thumb, but she still participated in all running and contact drills at practice Tuesday.

"All this running's a little tough, but the hitting won't kill me," she said. "Last spring, after I told the coaches I was going to come out, I was given running, weightlifting and stretching programs to do in the off-season. I didn't do any of them. That's why I'm a little sore. I did ride my bike and jump rope a little, neither of which did too good."

Her teammates call her "J.J.," the same nickname that Green Bay Packers wide receiver John Jeffereson carries.

"Some radio station this morning said, 'The Packers have J.J. and now so does Juneau High.' That really cracked me up," she said.

Clifton said Juneau traditionally has had small teams and this year is no exception.

"We have had only 25 guys each of the last four years," he said. "She had to beat two guys out for the starting spots, and they will spell her some when she gets tired."

Tim Burant, a Juneau junior who was beaten out by Jackson, said he was not angry or embarrassed.

Wyoming power comes at fullback

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Last year, two converted halfbacks gave the University of Wyoming football team the best one-two fullback punch in the Western Athletic Conference.

This year, with a little more experience behind them, all-conference fullbacks Walt Goffigan and Doug Moore hope to lead the Cowboys to the conference championship.

And they say winning the WAC will mean much more to them than any individual honors.

"Everyone would like to be all-WAC, but I'll have to leave that up to the Lord," says Goffigan, a junior from Virginia Beach, Va., and the WAC's first-team all-conference fullback last year. "I'm just looking to helping the team out any possible way I can so we can win the WAC."

MOORE, A junior from Lincoln, Neb., and second-team all-WAC fullback, thinks the Cowboys have a good chance at the title, barring injuries. "That's what we're shooting for," he said in a recent interview.

The two fullbacks share responsibilities and playing time — a strategy that Coach Al Kincaid says rests both, gives them a chance to help coach eachother and takes advantage of their somewhat different styles.

The 5-foot-10-inch, 190-pound Goffigan is considered a better open field runner, and Kincaid has dubbed him his "big play" man. Moore, at 5-feet-9 and 210 pounds, is considered more of a straight-ahead, short-yardage threat.

"We compliment eachother," Goffigan said recently. "Doug has just as much ability as I have, and we help eachother out.

"Coach Kincaid calls me the big play man, but Doug has big plays, too, and we're only big play players if the line makes a big play," he added.

Moore is comfortable with his role as the straight-ahead man in the team. "I think that suits my style a little better," he said. "Walt's a better open field runner."

Goffigan rushed 103 times for 483 yards and six touchdowns last year, while Moore carried 92 times for 475 yards and two touchdowns.

Both came to Wyoming as halfbacks, with Goffigan starting during much of his freshman year. But last year, Kincaid had a half dozen speedy running backs as outside threats in his wishbone offense, and he needed a fullback, so Moore and Goffigan switched.

IT'S A key role in the wishbone, because the fullback not only runs but blocks or serves as a decoy on virtually every play.

"I gained some weight, and I lost a lot of my speed, so I think I'm better at fullback," Moore said. "I've always enjoyed blocking — that's one of the things I do better. I get as much pleasure out of a block as anything."

While the two fullbacks emphasize their team goals, they agree their all-conference honors will make them marked men this year, but Goffigan says that will be true of Wyoming as a team after last year's surprising 8-3 season.

"We have to work just a little harder this year," Goffigan said.

Ancient Mariner is hot over suspension

SEATTLE (AP) — Gaylord Perry is hotter than a major league fastball over his suspension for allegedly doctoring a pitch — something the Ancient Mariner has been suspected of doing for much of his 21-year career.

A 10-day suspension was ordered in New York Tuesday, but Perry and the Major League Baseball Players Association quickly followed up with an appeal, which stays the suspension.

Perry said he had a 20-minute telephone conversation with American League President Lee MacPhail Tuesday morning. But he wasn't very pleased with the result.

"He's a ... weak human," the venerable right-hander said of MacPhail. "I told him I'd played this game 20 years and I never saw anybody out to get somebody like Monday night.

"They'll have so many appeals that MacPhail will have to hire 10 assistants," Perry said.

"He don't know what to do. He takes advice from somebody else," Perry charged, implying that MacPhail was giving in to home plate umpire Dave Phillips. It was Phillips who ejected Perry during Monday night's game with the Boston Red Sox.

Perry said he has taken no action so far, but vowed, "Phillips ain't heard the last of it, believe me."

Mariners' Manager Rene Lachemann said, "We're going to see what evidence they (the American League) have. I guess that's what you appeal this on."

The 43-year-old Perry has been suspected for years of being among the sport's best doctors of baseballs.

Phillips had warned Perry about throwing an illegal pitch in the fifth inning. And, in the seventh, with two outs, runners on first and third and a 1-0 count on Rick Miller, Perry threw a pitch that dropped drastically.

Without asking for the ball, Phillips ejected Perry. It's the second time he's been thrown out of a game, the first coming early in his career for bench-jockeying.

Perry will be able to pitch for the Mariners until the appeal is heard. But an accompanying $250 is payable immediately, said Bob Fishel, an aide to MacPhail.

Fishel also said the fact that Phillips had not asked for the ball did not matter. "In his opinion it was an illegal pitch," Fishel said.

Owners have no new offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prospect of National Football League owners unveiling a new money offer as talks resume in their contract negotiations with the players' union have been dashed by their chief negotiator.

In an interview on the eve of resumption of talks, Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL's Management Council, said union leaders are in for a "big disappointment" if they think he is coming to town with a new financial offer.

"A new offer? Unequivocally no," Donlan said. "The owners are still entitled to a detailed response to our last offer."

The National Football League Players Association rejected the owners 48-page financial package out of hand on July 13.

Speculation that the owners were prepared to change their money proposal was fueled by a Monday night meeting in Los Angeles attended by executives from seven teams.

"We are very anxious to learn what was discussed in Los Angeles," said Ed Garvey, NFLPA executive director.

"Alternatives to our last offer were discussed," said Jim Miller, spokesman for the management council, the league's bargaining agent.

"We have said all along that our last offer was not our final offer but the basis for a settlement," Miller continued.

"Alternative proposals were discussed but that is as far as it went," Donlan said. "We are constantly reviewing negotiations with the owners."

The union's collective bargaining agreement with the league expired on July 15. Talks broke down July 23 as both sides failed to agree on a site for further negotiations.

The NFLPA had refused to resume talks until guaranteed players on the negotiationg committee, busy at summer training camps, would be given time off to participate in future discussions.

Meanwhile, Garvey, refused to rule out a possible strike by the players in this the third week of the exhibition season.

"A strike this week is highly unlikely but not impossible," Garvey said.

Garvey said he personally feels the owners will withhold any new offer until after Sept. 3, to catch the players between the exhibition season and the start of the regular season on Sept. 12.

"I don't feel the owners will chance opening the season without a contract with the (players') union," Garvey said.

Cowboys reduce roster to 73 players

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys released nine free agents Monday to reduce the National Football League team's roster to 73 players, team officials announced.

Placed on waivers were Grambling defensive tackle Mike Barker, Idaho State wide receiver Chris Corp, North Texas State safety Zac Cypert, Clemson defensive tackle Steve Durham, Evansville tackle Yancy Gill, Morehouse (Ga.) defensive end David Graham, UCLA tackle Mike Mason, Stanford linebacker David Morze, and Central Michigan running back Darryl Tucker.

Jim Eliopulos, a third-round draft choice from Wyoming, returned to Dallas Monday. The linebacker is scheduled to undergo knee surgery Wednesday at Dr. Marvin Knight's clinic in Muenster, the Cowboys reported.

The Cowboys, and all other NFL clubs, must cut their rosters to 70 by Tuesday.

Unimposing Milton is People-to-People

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

President Reagan, Max Schmeling, Pele and King Wangchuck of Bhutan all have been involved in the endeavors of Dr. Leonard Milton.

Milton is an unimposing figure, an electronics tycoon whose company (Filtron) supplies those sophisticated radar safeguards against an enemy attack and a man whose spare time is devoted to fulfilling one of the late President Dwight Eisenhower's dreams.

His official title, in addition to being chairman of the board for his company which is an arm of Aeroflex, is president of the People-to-People Sports Committee, Inc.

From his home in Great Neck, N.Y., he can pick up the phone and get President Reagan's ear in an instant. He is on a first name basis with Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger and other top government officials.

HE HEADS the most prestigious and broad-reaching single sports organization in the world, yet one of which the average person is not aware. Its fingers reach into the most obscure and little known areas — without trumpet or bombast — to create what Ike called "an epidemic of friendship."

Reagan serves as honorary chairman. A 22-man Diplomatic Council consists of Senators, Congressmen and other influential figures such as Henry Kissinger, John Connolly and Melvin Laird. A 66-member Sports Council reads like a Sports "Who's Who" - Joe DiMaggio, Peggy Fleming, Pele, Mickey Wright, Roone Arledge, Pete Rozelle and Bowie Kuhn.

DiMaggio was reminded recently that he was on the Council of the People-to-People Sports Committee, Inc.

"What's that?" Joe asked.

The same reaction might have come from almost anybody. Dr. Milton's group is better known in Bhuton than in Boston, in New Delhi than in New York and in Shanghai than in San Francisco. With very little fuss, it keeps talent and equipment flowing overseas to Uncle Sam's enemies as well as friends.

It was Eisenhower's belief that only through such endeavors -exchanges in sports, art and entertainment fields - that peace could be achieved in this angry, troubled world.

"It is dedicated to the task of promoting friendship among ordinary citizens," Eisenhower said when he forged the People-to-People movement in 1956."It stands apart from government. It is not a propoganda agency, not apother foreign-aid program."

HE ALSO said people who play together don't fight, adding: "An emotion that lies deep in the hearts of people everywhere is a yearning for peace."

"We don't send our top pros to these countries," says Milton, an engineer and scientist. "They are so good, it would be embarrassing. We use college kids and neighborhood kids, athletes to which the the people of other countries can relate."

The doctor's committee veered from this theme only when it chose to assist in the defense of the America's Cup, the century-old yachting trophy, next year on the Newport Sound.

"This is an international event which probably will draw the largest number of challengers ever," Milton said. "We are helping raise money fo the endeavor."

It's an amateur effort. Two men who shared the cockpit of a rival yacht in the 1980 trials, Tom Blackaller and Gary Jobson, formed a team that bought the Courageous from successfuil defender Ted Turner and set about designing and building a new craft to be named the Defender-Courageous.

The People-to-People Committee normally involves itself in lesser publicized undertakings such as staging a golf tournament on the glacial surface of Greenland, sending 1,000 soccer balls to Africa or dispatching 13,000 pairs of sports socks to South American neighbors.

MILTON, WHO succeeded the late Eddie Eagan (an Olympic gold medalist in boxing), figured in one of sport's most dramatic reunions a quarter of a century ago.

The Committee arranged an amateur boxing match between teams of the United States and Germany.

"Wouldn't it be great if we could get Max Schmeling over?" someone suggested.

Dan Hammett, a 35-year-old University of Dallas ceramics professor, is making five Greek vases a day in Dallas so that they will be ready for presentation this fall. The vases will be presented to top American amateur athletes competing in Olympic sports.

Ceramics professor bests Greeks, makes five 'ancient' vases daily

DALLAS (AP) — Ceramics professor Dan Hammett is churning out "Greek" vases for top athletes the American way — five vases a day.

It took a Greek master potter and a team of apprentices at least two weeks to make a single red clay vase in 523 B.C., but to do it that way today would cost $2,000.

So Hammett, a 35-year-old University of Dallas professor, is using modern techniques to mass produce 300 "Greek" vases to be presented to top United States amateur athletes.

It would have taken him the rest of his life to make the pots in the Greek way.

"I didn't have that much time," Hammett said.

The design on the traditional "amphora" was usually a picture of the goddess Athena and people competing in different athletic events. It was done by hand, but Hammett's silk screen melts into the vase when it is fired. He says his pots will last for centuries — at least as long as the Greek originals.

His vase is baked in an electric kiln at 1,850 degrees Fahrenheit for 10 hours. Hammett turns out an average of five pots a day when he's working on the project full-time.

The project is underwritten by Southland Corp. of Dallas as part of its sponsorship of the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles. The two-handled "amphorae," which cost $145 each, will be Southland's "Olympia Award" to encourage participation in amateur sports.

A dozen pots will be handed out monthly. The vases are modeled on the Greek vases awarded to winners in the Panathenaic athletic festival in 556 B.C.

Hammett wasn't enthusiastic about the project when he was first approached by Southland's creative projects manager Hans Streich. Hammett thought the company would want a "down-and-dirty project," he said, and he just wasn't interested.

He referred Streich to other potters.

Weeks later, Streich, unable to find another artist, called on Hammett again, this time bringing along a prototype produced by a California company. That did the trick.

"I was thoroughly disgusted," Hammett said. "My fear was that they would settle for this piece.

"I don't think it looked like ancient Greek pottery. It looked more like a Mexican contemporary piece."

Southland officials let Hammett set his own standards.

Mexican police chief says crime due to hunger

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Gen. Arturo Durazo, Mexico City police chief, says that many recent robberies and muggings have been the work of "hungry people and not criminals with records."

He said that the country's economic crisis, described by many as the most serious in half a century, has led to an increase in crime by people who have lost their jobs and can't make ends meet because of the high cost of living. The country's inflation rate is expected to exceed 60 percent this year.

Argentine economy slumping

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — While Argentines struggle to make ends meet in a slumping economy, thousands of foreign tourists find the country a shoppers' paradise. Day after day they arrive with pockets full of dollars and go home with new shoes, clothing and leather goods bought at at bargain prices.

The foreigners, chiefly from neighboring Uruguay, Brazil and Chile, find they can get shoes at $15 a pair, men's suits for under $100, leather jackets for $40 and a steak dinner — wine included — for $3.

The bargains are the result of a series of currency devaluations totaling more than 1,500 percent since April 1981, when one U.S. dollar was worth 2,400 pesos and a pair of men's shoes cost $60 and a suit $200. In the process, Argentina, one of Latin America's most expensive countries in dollar terms, became one of the cheapest.

"I can buy five shirts here for what I would pay for one in Brazil," said Sergio da Silva, a Rio de Janeiro teacher who made a four-day shopping trip to Buenos Aires with his wife.

Mrs. da Silva bought three pairs of shoes for $45 and commented: "for that you can buy one shoe in Brazil."

"I just bought a beautiful winter coat for $40," said Montevideo housewife Marina Sandrini, unable to believe her good fortune. "The same coat sells for twice that much at home in Uruguay.

Argentines, on the other hand, are hard put to buy the same items the foreigners find so cheap. The purchasing power of peso salaries shrinks daily due to living cost increases that amounted to 16.3 percent in July alone, the highest monthly inflation figure in six years.

The situation is a reversal for many Argentines who, only two years ago, were among the world's big spenders. Taking advantage of the military government's economic policies that inflated the peso's value, they bought dollars cheaply and flocked to Miami, Rio de Janeiro, Madrid and other cities to stock up on clothes, color television sets and stereo equipment at a fraction of their cost in Buenos Aires.

The largest peso devaluation, setting off the tourist boom, came in July. President Reynaldo Bignone, who took office in a government shakeup following Argentina's surrender to Britain in the Falklands war, quickly announced a departure from the anti-inflationary, free-market policies of his predecessors. He reduced the value of the peso by more than 100 percent July 6 to promote exports and help pay off a $39 billion foreign debt and cut interest rates to stimulate a recession-ridden national industry.

Despite optimistic outlook, geothermal catching on slowly

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BOISE, Idaho — One day next winter Dick Schevers, manager for a group of historic downtown buildings, will begin to heat two of them with a new source of energy — geothermal heat from naturally hot wells below the city.

In Bluffdale, Utah, Ralph Wright already uses geothermal energy to warm the greenhouses that keep 1.8 million roses a year growing for florists across the country.

Companies are dehydrating onions with geothermal heat in Nevada and growing mushrooms in Oregon. And in California, lights are burning in the Imperial Valley Irrigation District with electricity from a small new geothermal power plant near Niland that began operation this summer. It is the second such plant in the area.

Across the West, while exotic new forms of energy — tar sands, oil shale, nuclear power — falter under technical and financial burdens, an ancient and natural source of energy — geothermal — is taking hold on a growing scale.

IT IS ONLY A sliver of the nation's energy pie but geothermal energy is nonetheless increasingly replacing oil and natural gas.

"Geothermal is operational," said David Anderson, executive director of the Geothermal Resources Council in Davis, Calif. "It's as good as coal and as economical. You couldn't say that a few years ago."

"It's a very attractive energy source," said Paul Rodzianko, executive vice president of Grace Geothermal Co., which developed the onion dehydrating plant in Nevada and a mushroom-growing plant in Vale, Ore. "Of the alternative energy resources, it's the one with the proven economics."

In fact, geothermal energy use has increased 50 percent in the last five years and has almost tripled since the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74. In 1981, it accounted for a small but important 0.16 percent of the nation's energy supplies, compared to 0.02 percent at the time of the embargo.

"The overall geothermal possibility is in the few-percent range," said Richard E. Wood of the U.S. Department of Energy in Idaho Falls, Ida. "But we ought to pursue everything. We need to get as much as we can out of all the resources. If you add them up, it's significant. Before long, it's a significant contribution to our energy supply and you displace fossil fuels for use elsewhere."

"IT'S ALL THESE little efforts that have caused this turnaround in the oil market you see today," Carel Otte, president of the geothermal division of Union Oil Co., said. Union is the operator of the most significant geothermal resource in the country, a dry steam reservoir at The Geysers, Calif., that may ultimately generate half the power needs of the San Francisco Bay area.

The growing use of natural heat from underground services for energy is the direct result of high oil and gas prices, government grants for so-called demonstration projects and favorable legislation that gives geothermal wells the same federal tax advantages as oil wells.

But federal spending for geothermal projects is ending with the Reagan administration's budget cutbacks and a belief that federally funded projects have proven a range of uses for this alternative energy resource. Money to help build geothermal projects is evaporating, and the government has closed its experimental goethermal power plant at Raft River, Idaho, and placed it up for sale.

As a result, geothermal energy is at a crossroads.

"Once you've demonstrated this works, you should expect industry and the commercial markets to pick it up," said Charles E. Gilmore, chief of advanced technology for the Department of Energy in Idaho Falls. "We have demonstrated the applications you can use it for. Now it's up to the people to use it."

Without government help, in fact, Phillips Petroleum and Utah Power & Light Co. are developing and constructing a geothermal field and power plant near Roosevelt, Utah, to generate 20,000 kilowatts.

BUT TECHNICAL PROBLEMS remain in finding and using geothermal reservoirs. Even though geothermal energy was once a favorite cause of environmentalists, specific projects frequently become environmental controversies. And, because almost all the nation's geothermal resources are in the West, claims to them frequently become mired in the morass of Western water rights laws.

Geothermal energy's supporters see it as a clean domestic resource that allows oil and natural gas to be used for other purposes. And geothermal electricity plants can be built in small generating units responsive to changes in demand, unlike some nuclear and coal power plants.

"We've got to start thinking in terms of smaller (power) plants strategically located near geothermal resources," Alex Black, chairman of Oakland-based Geoproducts, said. His company is developing a generating plant 25 miles east of Susanville, Calif. It will use hot water and wood waste from forest lands to produce power to pump water for the state Department of Water Resources, the largest user of electricity in California.

The Reagan administration is moving ahead to lease almost all the nation's federally owned geothermal resources to private developers by Sept. 30.

Meanwhile, federal efforts to help develop geothermal resources are being cut. The administration is asking Congress for a $9.8-million geothermal outlay for basic research in the coming budget year, contrasted with $140 million just a few years ago for research, guaranteed loans and project grants.

Past loans helped bring about the mushroom- and onion-growing ventures, while other grants aided rose-growing greenhouses and Imperial Valley power plants. Now, however, the administration's budget says, "new loans will not be issued so as to allow the marketplace to more appropriately determine the value of this technology."

Increasingly, the marketplace is putting a high value on it.

"I'M REALLY HEPPED up about this," said Schevers, building manager for Old Boise 6th & Main, which will abandon natural gas for geothermal heat this winter in two buildings of restaurants, shops and offices. Last year, one building alone used 318,000 cubic feet of gas. "It's going to save a bundle, and the more energy we save, the better it is for the country," he said.

Boise Geothermal, a joint effort of the city and a warm springs water district, is installing miles of pipe under Boise to tap dozens of businesses into geothermal heating.

Schevers expects to save up to 50 percent on heating costs in one building and up to 30 percent in the other. Across town, at the Capitol Mall complex of eight state office buildings, Idaho Gov. John V. Evans estimates his state will save $140,000 a year on heating costs by tapping naturally hot water beginning next winter.

Already, two other state office buildings are heated geothermally, the local 92-year-old geothermal water district is expanding and an estimated 150 private geothermal wells in the area are being used to heat greenhouses, swimming pools and water for home use.

Escapee visits daughter

BOSTON (AP) — They removed the handcuffs from William McKinney so he could hold his newborn daughter, then returned him to the jail he had escaped from to see the birth of his child.

"Billy told me he loved me and he was sorry for everything," said the escapee's wife, Cheryl McKenney. "He came there ready to turn himself in. I told him, 'This baby has been waiting for you.'"

McKinney escaped from the Plymouth House of Correction with three other inmates Tuesday night. He was serving 15 months for breaking and entering and larceny.

The four broke out of the jail by sawing through window bars with a smuggled hacksaw, officials said.

McKenney showed up Wednesday at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women shortly before his wife went into labor. He was there when the 7-pound, 2-ounce girl, named Collen, was born.

Then he was arrested and handcuffed.

The three other prisoners, all awaiting trial on charges of armed robbery, remained at large.

Robert Vecchi, deputy superintendent at the jail, said McKenney had asked for a furlough to be with his wife, but was turned down because he failed to return from a furlough in 1976 while serving a sentence at the Deer Island House of Correction in Boston.

Mrs. McKenney said her husband had told her he was wanted by authorities when they first met. She said she insisted he turn himself in.

"He knew he couldn't live a normal life if he had to keep on looking over his shoulder," she said.

Suspensions anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Legal Services Corp. is planning to suspend payments to 26 of its local programs because they have surpluses equal to more than half their annual budgets.

Clint Lyons, acting vice president of the federally-funded corporation, said in a memorandum that the balances carried by the 26 programs total some $10.3 million. He said another 64 programs have surpluses that exceed 25 percent of their budgets.

Lyons said the 26 programs holding more than half their budgets in reserve will be notified next Friday that they will be served with formal notices and asked to provide justifications.

"Should a satisfactory showing be made, the preliminary determination would be vacated," Lyons said. "If not, the suspension would commence with the succeeding grant award check."

The programs supply free legal services to the poor.

Caribbean plan's had many changes since introduction

Copley News Service

There was little enthusiasm for President Reagan's showcase program for aid to Central America and the Caribbean when it was introduced early this year.

Congressional leaders told the president not to expect early action on the program and warned that much of the administration's proposal would not find its way into the final legislative package. Some nations in the target area also voiced unhappiness about its provisions.

But despite early setbacks in Congress, administration officials now are quietly predicting that Mr. Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative will become law before year's end.

THE PRESIDENT unveiled his proposal in February when he described a plan to increase U.S. economic and military assistance to the region by more than 70 percent this fiscal year. If Congress were to go along, aid would total more than $1 billion.

In 1983, the plan calls for $770 million in military and economic help. The initiative is highlighted by a proposal to offer U.S. businessmen tax incentives for investing in the countries and special tariff concessions to nations in the region.

But shortly after the plan was presented, Congress and the administration began to quarrel over the type and level of aid. Critics point out that as a result of the political battling, key provisions of the plan have been changed.

"The president's aid package has been badly mauled, so you certainly couldn't say it has been smooth going," says Robert Wesson, senior fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution and an expert in Latin American affairs.

There have been several recent White House setbacks.

THEY INCLUDE Congress' redrawing of the president's Caribbean plan and a hefty slice taken out of the military aid package requested for El Salvador, considered by the administration to be one of the most strategically important countries in the region.

Still, government officials maintain that the administration will be able to regroup and, after a tough congressional fight, recoup some losses and keep Mr. Reagan's aid package largely intact.

Ambassador Robert Ryan, the U.S. State Department official charged with seeing that the Caribbean Basin Initiative becomes a reality, says the plan is in better shape than indicated by early congressional rebuffs.

Action recently supported his contention. The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved the administration's Caribbean package, but cut $28 million of the $128 million that had been earmagaed for El Salvador.

The initiative, Ryan said, could well gain full congressional approval before the summer recess and he predicted almost certain passage by the end of the year.

The plan's provision calling for free importation of certain items has run into strong opposition from congressmen, who are mindful of labor disapproval of the proposal.

LABOR LEADERS argue that letting foreign manufacturers ship goods into the United States duty-free causes suffering for American industries and the loss of jobs at home.

The administration's development plan was "gored," but — significantly — "not killed" in its first test of congressional approval, a government source argued.

Specifically, the House Ways and Means subcommittee on trade early last May voted not to allow leather and rubber footwear to be imported duty-free and clamped a tariff rate quota on rum from Caribbean nations. That move was intended to protect Puerto Rico's and the Virgin Islands' rum industries.

Later, Congress dealt Mr. Reagan's Caribbean plan another blow. This time the Senate Foreign Relations Committee decided that the aid should be administered by the World Bank, with the participation of several nations besides the United States.

At about the same time the Senate panel sharply reduced the president's proposal for military aid to El Salvador.

Stock market sociology UTPB course subject

ODESSA — The stock market has been called the "greatest poker game in the world" with few winners and many losers. But a course being offered at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is setting out to change that for students taking it.

Dr. Clyde Vedder, visiting professor of sociology and criminal justice at UTPB, noted that while most stock market courses stress the economic factors of the market, his class will take a more innovative approach.

"Most courses about the stock market stress the economic factors, whereas the dynamics of the stock market, to a greater extent, tend to reflect sociological factors of rumor, gossip, crowd psychology and social psychology," he said.

"This course will be a study of stock market philosophies, their uses and their implications," he added. "The emphasis of the course will be on what not to do, with the underlying goal being the preservation of capital.

"Hundreds of books have been written about the stock market, but most are not worth reading," he said. "In the stock market, the same 'facts' can have completely different meanings to different people. The problem is not a lack of interpretive schemes, but rather an excess of such schemes due to the peculiar character of the market."

According to Vedder, the course is concerned with the social dynamics of the market, with the way the market is viewed, interpreted and evaluated. It is not a "how to make money" course, he explained, but rather one that provides instruction on how to preserve capital and minimize the inherent risks of speculation.

He noted that executives from major New York Stock Exchange firms will serve as guest speakers to explain areas of class interest such as tax shelters, puts and calls, short selling, buying on margin and other areas of interest expressed by class members.

The sociology of the stock market course, SOC 489, will be taught from 7 to 8:20 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday throughout the fall semester. Registration will be from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in the UTPB student lounge. Late registration runs through Sept. 13.

Enrollment at UTPB is open to any student who has completed 60 credit hours at any accredited college or university. Persons wanting to take a course for enjoyment or for further information, but not toward a degree, may enroll in the university's no-grade ENCORE option. For further information, contact the UTPB admissions office.

Instructional services dean resigns post

ODESSA — Dick L. Chappell, dean of instructional services at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, has announced his resignation, effective Friday, to accept a position as director of research and planning and assistant to the president at Utah Technical College at Provo, Utah.

Chappell, who came to Odessa in August 1971 as director of the UTPB Learning Resources Center, was on hand before the university actually opened its doors to students in 1973. He served as acting dean for UTPB's College of Arts and Education from January 1971 until he was named dean of instructional services in September 1980.

UTPB president V.R. Cardozier, in accepting Chappell's resignation, commended him for his work at UTPB.

"Losing Dick Chappell will be a great loss to the university," Cardozier said. "He has been here the second longest of any person working on campus. He came here before classes began and built a superb library which now has more than 400,000 volumes. He was responsible for setting up and directing the university's computer center and instructional media services. He managed all these so well that when we needed an acting dean of arts and education, he took on the additional responsibility. Since that time, he has been the university's planning officer and dean of instructional services. In addition, he has been responsible for off-campus and continuing education."

Before coming to UTPB, Chappell held several positions at Utah State University from 1963-1971, including associate director and systems analyst for the learning resources program, director of the computer center, associate university librarian and assistant professor of library science and computer science.

Short-term T bill yields continue two-week decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities have fallen for the second week in a row, tumbling to their lowest levels in two years, officials said.

About $5.5 billion in six-month T-bills were auctioned Monday at an average discount rate 8.988 percent, down from 9.821 percent of last week.

The government also sold about $5.5 billion in three-month bills at an average rate of 7.748 percent, off the previous 8.616 percent.

Monday's yields, a measure of the cost of government borrowing from the public, were the lowest since the 8.891 percent of Aug. 11, 1980, for six-month bills and the 7.077 percent of June 23, 1980, for three-month bills.

Short-term rates on new Treasury bills had been at about 14.5 percent in mid-February, then hovered around 11 percent to 12 percent in the spring before declining sharply in recent weeks.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Bed wetters may be treated by behavior modification

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it always necessary to use drugs or to see a psychiatrist because a child wets the bed? I usually don't like to interfere with nature, although I would do anything that was necessary for my child. May I have your opinion? — Mrs. V.Y., San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Since you do not even mention your child's age, my answer will have to be in general terms. I agree that the use of drugs or referral for psychiatric treatment is not always necessary in children with enuresis. Studies of children who wet the bed at night have shown that from 12 to 15 percent a year stop doing so spontaneously.

Dr. Anupam Agarwal, of the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine in Carbondale, notes that reassurance for the parents and child may be all that is needed. If necessary, behavior modification techniques or similar treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am having drug treatments after an operation for cancer of the ovary and things seem to be going pretty well. Before I started taking the drug treatment, I had an operation. I have a lot of confidence in my doctor but I would like to know why I needed the operation if drugs can do the job. — Ms. B.R., Oakland, Calif.

Dear Ms. R.: It is possible that the chemotherpay you are now receiving would not be as effective as you indicate it is had you not had the surgery. Dr. Juan G. Posada Jr., of the Vincent T. Lombardi Cancer Research Center in Washington, points out that patients with a tumor greater than two centimeters in diameter (that is, about three-quarters of an inch) do not do as well as patients with smaller tumors.

I would speculate that the operation you have was designed to reduce the size of the tumor and thereby make the chemotherapy more effective.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am doing research on chronic phantom limb pain and have completed a survey of 6,300 out of the 25,000 veteran amputees the Veterans Administration is aware of. I found that about 85 percent of the 60 percent responding had significant amounts of phantom pain regardless of amputation circumstances and years since amputation. This is very different from the 5 to 10 percent which both the literature and my previous clinical research with amputees led me to expect. Of course, my study only surveyed veterans, and this group is "notoriously" different from the general population in many ways.

I have been attempting to contact amputees whose condition was NOT associated with military sevice so I could get an idea of whether my results with veterans generalize to the "civilian" amputee population. My response has been limited. You are the only nationally syndicated columnist in the health care area I am aware of. I would appreciate hearing from civilian amputees. — Richard A. Sherman, Ph.D., CPT., MSC, Department of the Army, Headquarters Dwight David Eisenhower Army Medical Center, Fort Gordon, Ga. 30905

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have to start preparing special meals for my husband because he's just learned he has diabetes. Can you give me some pointers about how I can cook for him, myself, and our three children without spending all my time in the kitchen? — Mrs. N.C, Toledo, Ohio

Dear Mrs. C.: You may be anticipating more of a problem than you actually face. But if you keep in mind that the diabetic diet is a good one for the entire family, I believe you'll have a different perspective on the situation. In fact, the average diabetic diet is probably a healthier one than what many people have today.

I suggest you plan one basic menu, with the understanding that individual portions will vary. You don't mention your children's ages, but obviously this will have an effect on the amounts they should be served. To the extent that you omit sweets and cut down on the use of fats and salt, you'll be doing everyone a favor.

One way to cut down on fat is to broil instead of fry. A pan with a nonstick finish will also help you reduce your use of fat.

In general, try to select foods that are nutritious but low in calories. Fresh fruit is always a good idea as a dessert, and for between-meal snacking, raw vegetables (carrot sticks, celery, etc.) should be available.

As I said, following a diet of this kind may not be essential for the entire family, but it certainly is an improvement over what many people eat today.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was in school, we used to learn about the digestive system and I must have heard about it a million times since. But I'm still not sure what it is. What do we mean when we talk about the digestive system in common language? — Sarah, Springfield, Mass.

Dear Sarah: When we speak of the digestive system we include the mouth, the point at which food enters the system; the esophagus, the tube that leads into the stomach; the stomach itself, which stores food and discharges it into the small intestine, where most digestion takes place; and the large intestine, or colon, from which the remaining products are finally expelled.

Other organs also aid in the digestive process. They include the liver, which, among other functions, filters the blood for waste products; the pancreas, which produces chemicals that digest proteins, carbohydrates, and fats so that they can be absorbed and used by the body; and the gallbladder, which collects and stores bile to aid in digestion.

For Ms. N.B. (Indianapolis): Yes I had a patient with Pseudohypoparathyroidism who had measurable levels of parathyroid hormone (PTH) but who developed signs and symptoms of hypoparathyroidism due to end-organ unresponsiveness to the parathyroid circulating hormone. My patient had convulsions prior to therapy. The convulsions stopped with the proper therapy to increase the patient's blood clacium level.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Postal service has unique idea — drive-in window

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The drive-in window, already popular with patrons of fast-food restaurants, banks and cleaners, appears to be no less of a hit with postal customers.

"Business is going very well," said Tish Hurst, 20, of Raleigh, one of two part-time operators of North Carolina's first drive-in post office near the Falls Village Shopping Center in Raleigh.

Stamp purchases and small-package mailings appear the most common transactions sought by customers at the drive-in post office, though most other postal business can be taken care of there, Ms. Hurst said.

Ms. Hurst and Mary Higgins are the part-time staffers at the office, which opened in June, while Jonathan Gill is the only full-time worker there.

The U.S. Postal Servie contracted with Unique Enterprises to operate the post office in Unique's building, the other half of which houses a video game center.

Gill says because it is a contract station, it doesn't handle the more detailed, time-consuming transactions of a regular post office. Therefore, lines either at the drive-in window or inside are often steady, but seldom long.

"On a good day, the drive-in is probably 30 (percent) to 40 percent of our business," Gill said. "We get motorcycles, bicycles and one woman who comes up with her child in a stroller every day or so."

"As far as immediate plans for another unit, we don't have any," said Bob Cassell, manager of customer relations for the U.S. Postal Service in Raleigh. "It was strictly Unique's idea and it is a unique idea. There are no others like it in the state and not a lot of them nationally."

Special consent requested

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — A mother has filed suit seeking court permission for an abortion for her unwed 23-year-old daughter, who has been in a coma since June.

Dorothy Pettit of Downingtown asked the Chester Count Court to allow doctors at Chester County Hospital to perform an abortion, claiming the pregnancy could cause further health problems if allowed to go full term.

The daughter, Patti Ann Wunsch, suffered head and facial injuries in an auto accident and has been in a coma since she was admitted to the hospital in West Chester on June 24.

The suit said her condition is unlikely to change soon.

Doctors discovered that Ms. Wunsch was pregnant "with a viable fetus" while treating her on July 2, according to the suit, filed last week.

Mrs. Pettit's attorney, Barry Buckley, told the court during a hearing Monday that doctors estimated the fetus had been developing for nine to 11 weeks.

Kevin Holleran, the hospital's lawyer, said doctors agreed the pregnancy carried a potential risk for Ms. Wunsch, but it was not now threatening her life.

He said the doctors have not performed the abortion for fear of legal repercussions.

Under state law, a woman must give "informed consent" before she receives an abortion. There is no provision that would permit a court-appointed guardian to give consent when the woman is unable to voice her wishes.

An amendment passed by the Legislature in June contains a clause that provides guidelines for cases similar to Ms. Wunsch's, but that amendment does not take effect until December.

Mrs. Pettit was appointed Ms. Wunsch's guardian Aug. 6.

During the hearing before Judge Lawrence E. Wood, Buckley said doctors fear the nourishment the fetus draws from Ms. Wunsch may eventually place her in jeopardy.

Meanwhile, a spokeswoman for a local anti-abortion group, the Chester County Citizens Concerned About Life, said the group has found several people willing to adopt the baby if the judge rules out an abortion.

Student awarded scholarship

Christopher Jeter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Jeter of Odessa, is the recipient of an academic scholarship for the 1982-83 academic year at Midland College. The scholarship covers tuition, books and fees and may be renewed for a second year at Midland College.

Jeter, a 1982 graduate of Permian High School, was a member of the National Honor Society and in the top 5 percent of his senior class. He graduated with a 3.8 grade point average.

He is a member of the Quarter Horse Association of West Texas and participated in the 1981 American Junior Quarter Horse Association World Championship Show.

Harvest rescue successful

WILBUR, Wash. (AP) — "Thank God for neighbors."

Loren Bodeau's farm in Wilbur was heavy with 380 acres of barley, but Bodeau, seriously injured in an auto accident in June, was recuperating in a Spokane hospital and couldn't harvest it.

So last week, neighbors driving more than 30 combines harvested 500 tons of barley off Bodeau's eastern Washington farmland in just two hours.

"How can I tell how it feels without bawling?" asked Bodeau's wife, Madaline. "Thank God for neighbors."

Jerry Sheffels, a neighbor, suggested it during a grain growers' meeting shortly after Bodeau's accident. He and his wife joined three other couples in organizing the gathering.

Starting promptly at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, Sheffels directed the combines into position. Each cut a 20- to 30-foot swath. A dozen trucks waited in line for the grain.

"It's awe-inspiring to see a field like this disappearing," Sheffels said. The same amount of work normally takes two or three weeks to complete, he said.

The previous week, crews from neighboring farms harvested 20,000 bushels of wheat from another 370 acres of Bodeau land.

"People in the community here do help each other," Mrs. Bodeau said. "When someone is in trouble, you just go out and help."

Then it was back to their own fields, where more wheat and barley waited for the combines.

Remember automobile insurance

Copley News Service

Transporting your children to and from school is important business. Millions of children are heading back to school this fall, many of them by way of car pools.

While car-pooling is a sign of a conscientious, time- and energy-saving neighborhood, something very important is often overlooked: automobile insurance.

Insurance must not be forgotten. Anyone who plans to "chauffeur" children in a privately owned vehicle should double-check automobile coverage, especially for bodily injury liability.

Each state has laws requiring motorists to show their ability to meet financial responsibilities in case of an accident. This demonstration usually takes the form of auto liability insurance.

Most drivers do carry the minimum coverage required by their state. But if you're a car-pool participant, these limits may prove insufficient. You may wish to consider bodily injury coverage with higher limits.

Just to clarify, bodily injury coverage provides protection against a motorist's own negligence. Should your vehicle injure or kill pedestrians or passengers (in yours or any car), the insurance company will pay the extent of your legal liability up to the stated coverage.

The amounts of bodily injury coverage usually are referred to by a series of numbers such as: 10-20, 25-50 or 100-300. The first number states the maximum amount, in thousands of dollars, that the insurance company will pay for the injuries of any one person in a single accident.

The second number is the maximum amount, in thousands of dollars, the company will pay for all of the injuries resulting from any one accident.

Border businesses see reversals, blame peso devaluation

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A year ago American border businesses reported rich Mexicans buying expensive cars, condominiums and merchandise with suitcases full of cash from Mexico's oil boom.

This week these same businesses are suffering in the wake of the second peso devaluation of 1982.

Malls along the border that as late as December were teeming with the nouveau riche from Mexico were almost devoid of Mexican customers who normally take shopping vacations in the United States during July and August.

"No Acetamos Pesos (We Don't Accept Pesos)" read signs hung on smaller businesses from Brownsville to El Paso. Bigger stores that were accepting the Mexican currency were doing so at extremely high rates of exchange pending the setting of a stable rate.

ONE SAN ANTONIO real estate agent reported she lost $1 million in condomimium sales to Mexicans since the devaluation, and a local magazine that went into business a year ago to lure wealthy Mexicans shoppers to the United States confirmed it is folding.

"They just haven't got the money," said W.F. Pape, comptroller at Richter's Department Store in Laredo's nearly desolate Riverdrive Mall, situated on the banks of the Rio Grande and catering to Mexican customers. Mall sales dropped 65 percent.

"Plus along the border the exchange rate, if its exists, is bouncing like a rubber ball," Pape said. "There's just nobody in town. Our parking lot is pretty empty. Traffic is pretty slim. I haven't had a firm exchange rate from the banks since Aug. 12. It's just a wild guess where it is going. Nobody knows. Everybody's praying day by day that things will settle down," Pape said.

Pape said his store's business dropped 30 percent when Mexico devalued the peso last February, decreasing its value from 27 to the U.S. dollar to 48, but fell 60 percent after the second devaluation.

THE LATEST DEVALUATION drove the peso's value down to a low of 130 pesos to the dollar, until it gradually began leveling off this week in the range of 90 to 97 pesos.

That delivered a killing blow to virtually all trade from across the Rio Grande, Pape said.

"It was like there was a little panic," said San Antonio realtor Gail Gilliam who sells expensive condos. "I lost a million dollars worth of contracts in the first week" when the devaluation and accompanying money-exchange restrictions were imposed.

Ms. Gilliam said many of her customers, however, have reinstated their deals since the first week of Mexico's monetary crisis, but will carefully watch their cash flows in the future.

Pat Ehler, another San Antonio real estate agent, said Mexicans who last year purchased $150,000 to $200,000 condominiums at posh Mission Trade development on San Antonio's north side were having problems making their payments because of the crackdown on the dollar flight from Mexico.

"The ones who paid cash for their property in Mission Trade are in good shape. The ones that have a mortgage are in bad shape. They cannot get their money out to make mortgage payments and they are anticipating foreclosures," Ms. Ehler said.

"We don't want to exacerbate Mexico's problems," said John Ziller, publisher of "Ventana USA," a U.S. shopping guide that boasted a circulation of 235,000 in Mexico where it was inserted into Mexican newspapers. "Obviously we reach a market that's composed of flight capital. Flight capital is considered to be one of the prime reasons that Mexico is having problems, and we don't want to make things worse."

NO BORDER POINT was immune from the economic disaster.

Said Jerry Markham of a J.C. Penney store in McAllen, "Our Mexican trade is gone.

"You could walk up and down the mall and find the pesos anywhere from 85 to 1 to 130 to 1," said Markham, general merchandise manager for the store in La Plaza Shopping Center in the border city of McAllen. "We're looking at probably 60 percent" decrease because of the lack of Mexican shoppers, he said.

Customs broker Arthur Brewer of Laredo said the restrictions imposed by the Mexican government to halt the flight of capital to the United States were particularly worrisome to people in his business.

"I've got two checks in my pocket right now and I can't collect them," Brewer said. "You can turn them in to a Mexican bank and they will cash them for pesos and then buy dollars. You might wind up with $4,000 back out of a $5,000 check. I prefer to hold them. If they'll do away with these exchange controls...I think they're even worse than the devaluation. If people cannot freely exchange money, I think they've got problems."

Roy Phillips, manager of Dillard's department store at Brownsville's Amigoland Mall, acknowledged the peso business was down but said they were getting some Mexican customers who "evidently have dollar accounts here in the United States."

Phillips said his store was accepting pesos at a 90-to-1 rate, hoping the currency eventually would stabilize in that range.

AL CISNEROS, director of the Port of Brownsville, said the two peso devaluations coupled with the U.S. recession have contributed to a loss of about 1,000 jobs this year at the facility. The port and associated industries divide business 50-50 between shipments to the United States and to Northern Mexico, which does not have its own port.

Joe Lopez, head of the Downtown Merchants Association in Del Rio, said that he anticipated it would take longer for border business to get back to normal this time.

"They've adjusted to all the other devaluations so I don't see any reason why they won't adjust to this one. Of course, it'll probably take longer because it's a bigger drop than any one before and it happened more recent to the last one," Lopez said.

Record border crossings may be linked to devaluation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents have rounded up record numbers of illegal aliens wading across the Rio Grande to seek agriculture jobs and escape ecomonic hardships resulting from the devaluation of the Mexican peso.

A beefed-up downtown agent force netted 989 illegal aliens Monday, a one-day record for the local agency, said El Paso Border Patrol chief Allan Eliason.

That record was broken Tuesday when, by late evening, almost 1,000 Mexicans had been arrested.

"Part of the increase is seasonal because of the farm jobs opening up in the valley," Eliason said. "But, the devaluation of the peso is probably an even bigger factor."

"The devaluation must have been the straw that broke the camel's back," he said.

Until the devaluation, arrests through July were lower this year than in 1981, he said.

But the agency has been watching a rise in the flow of Mexicans wading the river and attempting to hide downtown since the middle of July, Eliason said.

Besides the devaluation and increased chances of employment in Texas farmlands, authorities also believe high inflation and unemployment rates in Mexico are fueling the border crossings.

Almost all those arrested opted to return voluntarily to Mexico rather than request a deportation hearing, Eliason said, and were released in vanloads at the Paso Del Norte bridge and the Zaragosa bridge.

"We have a processing facility right in the area and we simply send these people back to Mexico on a catwalk," Eliason said.

Alien smuggling ring's leaders indicted after nine-year reign

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A grand jury has indicted five leaders of an alien smuggling ring that operated for nine years without arrest and brought 400 illegal aliens across the border each week, a federal official says.

The five, plus two others believed to be drivers, each were indicted Tuesday by a federal grand jury on 28 counts of conspiracy to violate immigration laws, said William Selzer, chief patrol agent of the U.S. Border Patrol in Laredo.

The indictment came after a two-year investigation. Selzer said the ring charged $350 to take a Mexican illegally into Texas to either Houston or San Antonio and for $900 would illegally transport a South American across the border.

Selzer said Border Patrol agents also are "confident" that the seven indicted are part of a ring that smuggled seven aliens found slain last month in the Houston area.

Four Salvadorans were found slain in Fort Bend County, two Mexicans were found dead in Brazoria County and another Hispanic was found shot to death in Houston, Houston police have said.

They apparently were killed in a "shakedown" by smugglers demanding an additional $100 from the aliens, police said. A grand jury in Fort Bend County returned 90 sealed indictments implicating about a dozen people in the four deaths in that county, according to Houston police.

The seven named in Tuesday's indictments in Laredo were Arturo Martinez Herrera, 26, Guillermo Martinez Herrera, 29, Augustine Martinez Herrera, 42, Daniel Martinez Herrera, 48, all brothers from Nuevo Laredo, Jose Martinez Martinez, 21, of Laredo, Heriberto Martinez Vallejo, 22, of Nuevo Laredo, Jorge Alfredo Munoz Rodriguez, 25, of Nuevo Laredo.

Martinez and Rodriguez, believed to be drivers, have been arrested and were being held in Webb County jail on $50,000 bond each, Selzer said.

Agents had suspected that the ring would move into the Laredo area just as the indictments were returned, but the five leaders indicted apparently learned of the indictments, he said.

"I think we disrupt (these rings). We're fairly effective at that. But we just keep picking off the drivers and the guides, and this time we were right on the verge of catching the leaders," Selzer said.

Ex-Harvard gay joins others outside closet

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — On a form that Toby Marotta filled out to be included in a 10th-reunion report on his Harvard class in 1977, he wrote, in part:

"Rusty Kothavala and I worked together on student-faculty committees when I was in college, and our collegial relationship grew closer when I went on to graduate school at Harvard. Both of us were greatly affected by the challenge to traditional values posed by the counterculture and the New Left in the late 1960s, and as the counterculture gave birth to the gay and women's liberation movements at the turn of the decade, each of us was moved to acknowledge the importance of our homosexuality and to make it an integral part of a moral and fulfilling lifestyle."

It was the first time anyone had ever "come out" as a homosexual in the Harvard class report.

Marotta, a 37-year-old social scientist with a Harvard Ph.D. and the author of "The Politics of Homosexuality," struck a responsive chord with his one-paragraph contribution. Gay classmates wrote him, and the contacts he made evolved into a book, "Sons of Harvard: Gay Men from the Class of 1967," an account of interviews with 10 of his classmates and their reflections on their lives as homosexuals. The paragraph also led to the formation of a nationwide gay Harvard alumni group, Sons of Harvard, Inc., which now has some 600 members.

How has Harvard, the bastion of the Ivy League, reacted to this public airing of the sexual preferences of some of its graduates? Marotta says that the school has exhibited no displeasure.

"Harvard Magazine was the first to be after me for a set of galley proofs, and they did a feature on me as a gay alumnus. This past June, many of us went back during commencement week. They had a banquet at the faculty club for gay and lesbian graduates and their parents. And to top it off, they gave an honorary degree to Tennesse Williams."

Following what he calls in his foreword "an almost devilish impulse to show old classmates that the best and the brightest could also be the gayest," Marotta traveled around the country to interview former classmates, including an Episcopal minister, a commune member, an architect, a preppy from a prominent New England family, a professor and a computer expert. They discussed the discovery of their homosexuality, their ways of coping with the realization, their relationships, their coming to terms with being gay.

Now a political gay liberationist, Marotta writes that his stance was difficult to achieve. "I couldn't have conceived of being a liberated liberationist-minded gay man back in the mid-'60s when I was a Harvard undergraduate. I was terribly conflicted about my homosexuality. Because I couldn't admit that I was homosexual, I was neither comfortable with myself nor mature in my dealings with others."

Marotta became more comfortable with his sexuality through his long relationship with Kothavala, who is 10 years older than he, and who, when they first met, was a Havard faculty member and senior tutor. The two left Harvard, where Marotta had been teaching urban studies and education and working on his Ph.D. thesis, and came to the San Francisco area about five years ago.

"In many ways, ours has been a typical gay male relationship," Marotta says. "We were a couple for many years, but not anymore. He lives with a Harvard classmate of mine. I also live with another man, but we're all part of the same community."

As Marotta sees it, what some people call gay promiscuity is related to the former closeted nature of gay life. "Because of laws against sodomy and the stigma against coming out as a homosexual, we have never been able to have monogamous relationships, so institutions like the baths developed that are primarily sexual outlets. Gay liberation translated this into much more open and healthy lifestyles. The gay community is much more open sexually because it's built on this long-existing subculture."

Marotta has spent the past four years working on a government report sponsored by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services on juvenile prostitution. As the ethnographer for the research firm that undertook the study, his research and that of others has resulted in a resource manual on juvenile prostitition that will be given to police and other institutions to aid them in dealing with the problem.

Marotta also plans to transform his research into his next book, which he plans to call "Hustlers, Johns and Janes" ("Janes" being the term he has coined to denote female customers of male prostitutes). "It's certainly a project I couldn't have pursued if I'd stayed at Harvard as an academic."

People prone toward violence can often be found with tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many people prone toward violent behavior appear to have physical defects in parts of their brains that can be identified in advance with tests, researchers say.

Psychologists studying inmates at the Nebraska state prison and elsewhere said those with a history of violent crime score differently on the tests than non-violent criminals.

These tests, which indicate malfunctions in parts of the brain, can be used to help predict the violence potential of a new offender, said Dr. Monte L. Scott, who did the research on Nebraska inmates.

All smiles at the outcome of her marijuana possession trial at the Harris County courthouse in Houston are Laura Ethel Clark and her attorney, Bill Portis. Mrs. Clark, 82, was convicted and place on two years unsupervised probation for growing the illegal "herb" in her garden.

Panel debates child abuse laws

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Giving prosecutors the power to compel spouses to testify against each other in child abuse cases is a change that may be recommended to the Texas Legislature next year.

The House Select Committee on Child Abuse-Neglect and Child Pornography held the last of a series of hearings around the state Tuesday. Committee Chairman Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, said he expected the panel to have a report ready by Oct. 1.

Dallas Congressman Jim Mattox, the Democratic nominee for attorney general, testified Tuesday that child abusers who kill their victims should be subject to the death penalty.

"That's a serious recommendation, but one I think the committee may want to consider in the long run," said Mattox.

Mattox said under current law, killers only face capital punishment if they murder while committing crimes such as rape or robbery. Child molestation is not included, he said.

He also seconded the proposal to allow subpoenas of spouses when a husband or wife is charged with abuse. Willis said the suggestion came in hearings elsewhere in the state.

Under current law, a spouse may voluntarily come forward, but cannot be compelled to testify against a husband or wife.

Mattox said the committee should carefully consider any changes in the law, because forced testimony could lead to marriage breakups.

"You're making the decision that the welfare of the child is more important than the continuation of the family relationship," he said.

Jim Marquart of the Texas Department of Human Resources said his department had to cut back on its intervention in child abuse cases because of federal budget reductions.

"We are no longer dealing with cases where the child is at risk of abuse or neglect," Marquart said. "There has to be some actual harm."

Other recommendations gathered by the committee included allowing DHR or the attorney general to prosecute child abuse cases to relieve the burden on local prosecutors, Willis said, and forming child abuse review boards at hospitals to decide whether to charge abuse in cases of injured children so "the onus wouldn't be on one doctor."

HOUSTON (AP) — Now that she's been convicted of growing pot in her vegetable garden, 82-year-old Laura Clark says she doesn't "care about marijuana.... I'll never plant any more."

Jurors deliberated 20 minutes Tuesday and found the great-grandmother guilty of felony possession of a controlled substance. She was sentenced to two years of unsupervised probation, the most lenient penalty allowed. The maximum would have been 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Mrs. Clark testified that a doctor in Mexico gave her the seeds and told her they were herbs. She said she intended to use the plants to make an arthritis lotion.

She acknowledged that a friend, who saw the plants when they were about a foot high, revealed their true identity. But she said she let them grow in good faith.

"I wouldn't have smoked it. I wouldn't have chewed it," she said after the verdict. "I was going to do what the doctor told me to do — soak the leaves in alcohol and put the juice on wherever I hurt."

Two plainclothes narcotics detectives said they arrested Mrs. Clark after they went to her house May 4, acting on an anonymous tip, and found five or six marijuana plants standing four to five feet tall in her vegetable garden.

A chemist testified that the marijuana taken from her garden amounted to 506 grams, or about 16.8 ounces — or enough to roll about 1,500 marijuana cigarettes.

Mrs. Clark's lawyer, Bill Portis, dropped to one knee during final arguments and begged jurors to find the woman innocent. Portis said later there would be no appeal.

District Judge Mike McSpadden told Mrs. Clark that "the only condition on your probation is that you give me a call every couple of months and tell me how you're doing."

Mrs. Clark testified that she was reared in the Ozark Mountains of Arkansas and always had a garden. When she planted the seeds, she said, "I thought they looked like radish seeds. I knew when they came up they weren't."

As the plants grew, she said, she thought they would turn out to be bushes, like the ones in her front yard. She said she liked to show off her garden to friends, and when the plants were about a foot tall, "Somebody said, 'Oh. That's marijuana.' I didn't know till then."

Deputy 'preoccupied' as prisoner examined

HOUSTON (AP) — A former sheriff's deputy accused in the beating death of a 17-year-old burglary suspect seemed "preoccupied" and never volunteered to help when paramedics were called to revive his prisoner, a reserve deputy says.

"I thought perhaps he did not understand that it was his prisoner being examined," Don Bynum testified Tuesday at the trial of former Harris County Deputy William T. Gordon. "So I told him, 'That's your prisoner.' He seemed preoccupied with something else."

Gordon is charged with civil rights violation in the death of Steven Barnette. The teen-ager died March 20 of a ruptured spleen.

Prosecutors argued the teen-ager died as a direct result of being beaten by Gordon and Deputy Constable Billy McCreight, 44. McCreight also is charged with civil rights violation.

Another former sheriff's deputy, William F. Whigham, 40, has agreed to testify in return for a year's probation on a reduced charge.

Reserve deputy Robert Webb testified Tuesday that paramedics said Barnette's heart stopped as they treated him in a jail holding cell.

Webb said he called an ambulance for Barnette shortly after Gordon brought the teen-ager in to be charged in connection with two burglaries.

"I heard at one time that he was straight-line, indicating that his heart had stopped," said Webb, who was in an office outside the holding cell while emergency medical technicians tried to revive Barnette.

Dr. Charles Owen, an emergency room surgeon at Northshore Hospital in nearby Channelview, said his efforts to revive the unconscious suspect would have been different had he known the teen-ager's heart had stopped as a result of a beating that ruptured his spleen.

Owen testified that he tried for more than an hour to revive Barnette but did not realize his heart had failed as a result of blood loss from the spleen injury.

The surgeon said doctors gave Barnette a drug to counteract the effects of narcotics because they thought his cardiac arrest might have been caused by drugs.

Jury selected in nun slaying trial

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Jury selection has been completed in the trial of a young man accused of raping, stabbing and strangling a 76-year-old Roman Catholic nun in a convent three blocks from his home.

Johnny Frank Garrett, 18, was arrested in November on the basis of fingerprints found two weeks earlier in the room of Sister Tadea Benz, a Franciscan living at St. Francis Convent.

Testimony at his trial was to begin today.

The jury was sworn in Tuesday, and prosecutors said the state's case against Garrett will take about four days to present.

But State District Judge George Dowlen said an FBI witness has conflicting trial dates, which could cause a trial delay.

Nuns discovered Sister Tadea's body on the floor after she missed a sunrise Mass. Police said the woman's larynx was crushed, her left eye was blackened and her body was covered with knuckle marks and gouges.

Police said the nuns initially thought Sister Tadea had fallen. The sisters cleaned blood from her face, wrapped her in blankets and sent the body to a funeral home for embalming, police said. The nuns thought the blood was the result of a hemorrhage.

Peace Justice L.B. Bartlett ordered the funeral home to stop the embalming and contacted a pathologist, who discovered the injuries.

Garrett was 17 when he was taken into custody Nov. 9 and has been held in Potter County jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Officers confiscated a knife in the room and another found outside the convent, but later ruled out the second knife as a weapon used in the slaying.

Sister Tadea was born Martina Benz in Marbach, Switzerland, and came to the United States from Columbia in 1932. She became a U.S. citizen in 1937 and had been at the convent since 1944.

Activist works to ban electroshock

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Ted Chabasinski was 6 years old when doctors clamped electrodes to his temples, and jolts of electricity sent him into convulsions. They did it about 20 times over a period of weeks and then locked him away in a mental hospital for 10 years.

Chabasinski doesn't think he was crazy. He thinks his treatment was. Now an articulate, 44-year-old activist for mental patients' rights, he has authored what may be the nation's first ballot initiative aimed at banning electroconvulsive therapy, or ECT.

The Berkeley municipal vote is an outgrowth of a nationwide movement, led by former mental patients and some psychiatrists, protesting alleged psychiatric abuse of unwilling patients.

Advocates of the ban say it would halt a widely used technique that allegedly burns the brain and damages the memories of helpless patients.

Leading psychiatrists deny that the therapy, also called electroshock, causes brain damage or long-term memory loss. They say banning it could leave thousands of chronically depressed, even suicidal patients without help.

The Coalition to Stop Electroshock collected about 2,500 signatures — they needed 1,400 — to place the issue on Berkeley's Nov. 2 ballot. It would make anyone performing the shock treatments subject to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

"I think it's a very sympathetic issue," Chabasinski said. "Basically, they're going ahead and causing brain damage just to subdue people."

"It's a very important procedure in psychiatry, sometimes life-saving, and one of the most effective treatments for depression," said Dr. Howard Gurevitz, president of the California Psychiatric Association.

"It's an unusual kind of thing to have a public initiative about," said Dr. Robert Campbell, vice president of the 27,000-member American Psychiatric Association. "We think it's inappropriate."

Gurevitz said he's certain that doctors and patient groups will organize to fight the measure. "I think we certainly should respond to it," echoed Campbell.

Electroconvulsive therapy involves a quick jolt of 70 to 150 volts in order to create a convulsion similar to an epileptic fit. Each patient generally receives six to 12 treatments.

Patients are given drugs to eliminate pain and muscle spasms, which before the advent of muscle-relaxing drugs were sometimes so strong that patients broke bones.

Researchers say they are not sure why the convulsions — which can also be produced with gas or chemicals — work. But that is true of many medical treatments, psychiatrists say.

The Berkeley ban would affect only one facility, Herrick Hospital, which performed the therapy on 45 patients in 1981, said spokeswoman Gloria Dunn.

But Chabasinski said he would like to see the effort to ban electroshock spread. "San Francisco seems a real natural place to go," he said. "Then we could probably form a coalition around the state."

State records show that between 2,400 and 2,700 patients received electroshock treatments each year from 1977 through 1980 in about 70 facilities around California.

A nationwide 1975 survey by the National Institute of Mental Health showed 60,000 patients, about 5.7 percent of all psychiatric patients in the surveyed institutions, received shock therapy.

"To be honest, this is one way of having a referendum on mental patients' rights and the way they are treated," said Chabasinski.

Among the groups supporting the electroshock ban is the Berkeley-based Network Against Psychiatric Assault, one of many groups around the country which have demonstrated against forced mental treatments.

"People often get labeled as mentally ill or schizophrenic because they're a problem to people around them," said Jenny Miller, a Network staff member.

Chabasinski and other electroshock foes, many speaking from personal experience, contend the treatment causes brain damage and permanent memory loss. "I've never met anyone who got a number of shock treatments who got back all their memory," he said.

The possibility of brain damage "is the remotest kind of thing," said Dr. George Wayne, a clinical psychologist at UCLA who was on a 1978 American Psychiatric Association studying the shock therapy.

"There is no question about its safety if practised properly," Wayne said.

The method now used produces "relatively small amounts" of short-term memory loss, Wayne said. "Within about six weeks you can hardly tell there's been any memory impairment," and within six months there's no impairment noticeable.

Dozens of former mental patients testified against electroshock at a recent Berkeley City Council hearing — and not one for it. But Gurevitz said, "The people who have been satisfied with their treatment are not the ones who want to come forward" because of the stigma involved.

Many patients request the treatment because they have had good experiences and prefer it to other forms of treatment, such as drugs, Gurevitz and Campbell said.

"I don't think the emotional problems of human beings ought to be dragged into the political process and made a popularity contest," Gurevitz said.

Ted Chabasinski, a 44-year-old activist for mental patients' rights, has authored what may be the nation's first ballot initiative aimed at banning electroconvulsive therapy, also called electroshock. He underwent that therapy at the age of six.

Wang develops computer training course

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Once seen only in the domains of industry and office, the use of the computer in homes and schools has integrated it into of our daily lives.

But Wang Laboratories and other computer companies are faced with a mixed blessing. There is a high demand for the computer, but few people know how to use it. Because of this, Wang has opened a number of computer education centers throughout the U.S. and Europe.

At the New York center, a group of gifted children currently is enrolled in a training course. Joe Pulichino, the center's manager, said: "The reason we're getting involved with kids of this age is that, with each graduating year, people are learning more and more about computers. In five or six years we'll be seeing people coming in with higher skill levels at the outset. They'll be getting their basic training in high school, even grammar school."

Computers aren't only new to students, though. A number of New York City teachers also are enrolled at the center in a "teach the teacher" program.

Pulichino explained that usually when a school orders a couple of computers, it pulls someone from the math or science department — who perhaps has fooled around with a computer in his spare time — and then tries to come up with a basic programming class.

MC adds two courses

Two new courses, not listed in the fall bulletin, have been added to the Midland College Electronics Department curriculum for the fall semester.

Electric Power Distribution will be taught on Monday and Wednesday nights from 8:30 to 9:50. The course, based on the National Electrical Code, will help equip technicians to take the Midland City Electricians license test.

Also being offered is Electronic Communications I, which will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 8:20 p.m. The course is designed to provide an overview of communications, taught in block diagram form. It will be followed during the spring semester by a subsequent course, Electronic Communications II. These courses will assist persons who hope to acquire an FCC (Federal Communications Commission) license.

Persons interested should register for the fall semester Wednesday or Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the Physical Education Building. Midland College fall semester classes begin Monday.

Nobel baby bank deposits another potentially bright child in world

Afton Blake

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 40-year-old unmarried psychologist has given birth to a boy, the second baby resulting from the so-called Nobel Prize sperm bank, a friend says.

Afton Blake, of Los Angeles, named her 8-pound, 10½-ounce son Doron William Blake, according to Ellen Pasternack. She added that Doron means "gift" in Greek.

The baby, 10 days overdue, was delivered at 12:17 p.m. Tuesday by Caesarian section, Ms. Pasternack said. She would not identify the hospital, but said the baby is "doing fine."

Miss Blake is also doing fine, Ms. Pasternack said, "but she did have a Caesarian, so it is a little more major than natural childbirth. She will have to be in the hospital a few extra days."

The sperm bank established by optometrist Robert K. Graham, 77, the inventor of shatterproof plastic eyeglass lenses, offers sperm of Nobel Prize winners and other top scientists in hopes of producing exceptionally bright children.

The medical director of the bank, called the Repository for Germinal Choice, said Tuesday, "We're positively delighted (about the Blake boy's birth).

"Hopefully another creative and intelligent child has been born into the world that might not have been possible without the Repository for Germinal Choice," Dr. Sherry Wieder said.

Jimmy Stewart

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — James Stewart, admitted to St. John's Hospital to see whether he was taking too much or too little heart medication, is back home after a thorough checkup in which he was found to be in excellent health.

The 74-year-old screen star was put in the hospital last week and released Tuesday. The medicine was prescribed two years ago when Stewart suffered skipped heart beats, said his publicist, John Strauss.

"He is in excellent condition. His checkup has been complete," said Marina Gregory, a spokeswoman for St. John's.

Stewart, star of "The Philadelphia Story," "Harvey," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "The Spirit of St. Louis," will film a movie called "Right of Way" this fall with actress Bette Davis, said Jane Deknatel, a vice president of the HBO cable TV system.

The movie is about an aging couple who refuse to be separated by illness and who take dramatic measures to stay together.

M. Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher "simply won't allow herself to be ill" and made such a strong recovery from varicose vein surgery that she was working the next day, her physician says.

"I can't believe how completely overwhelmed I am with the way this woman has recovered," Dr. John Henderson said. "She is behaving as if nothing happened."

Mrs. Thatcher returned to work Tuesday. The prime minister, 56, had the surgery performed under general anesthesia and left the clinic Monday night, 11 hours after checking in. Henderson said the operation was needed to reduce pain and for cosmetic purposes.

P. Hehmeyer

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of the New York Cotton Exchange, who was found dead of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, was despondent over losing $60,000 during last week's stock market surge, colleagues told police.

Philip L. Hehmeyer, 37, left no suicide note, but his associates told police he was depressed over the losses he sustained by "selling short" — betting that markets would go down prior to last week, when the Dow Jones Industrial Average soared 81 points.

"There was some talk of money losses," said cotton exchange President William J. Donaghy. "If there are money losses, claims will be made against them in due course, but we don't have them yet."

But W. Thorpe McKenzie, Hehmeyer's friend and former roommate, said the $60,000 loss had "a devastating psychological effect on him."

His 10 years dealing stocks left Hehmeyer feeling "a certain amount of being shellshocked," McKenzie added.

Hehmeyer's body was found on the kitchen floor of his apartment by the building superintendent, who was alerted when Hehmeyer failed to appear at work.

Police said the apartment was locked and there was no indication of foul play. A shotgun was found beside him.

Judy Jackson

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Some opponents may think the new starting tackle on the Juneau High School football team is a pushover. They should think again.

"She's no puppy. She can hit," says Coach R.C. Clifton.

Fifteen-year-old Judy Jackson is scheduled to start on both offense and defense when Juneau opens its varsity football season Sept. 4.

Athletic Commissioner Jack Takerian of the Milwaukee Public Schools said she is the first girl to play on a male athletic team in Milwaukee.

Miss Jackson, a junior who stands 5-foot-9 and weighs 185 pounds, participated in all running and contact drills Tuesday, although she had a slightly pulled hamstring and a jammed thumb.

"She's just another football player," Clifton said. "Everybody is getting hit hard out here. Once she puts those shoulder pads and that helmet on, she's a target just like everybody else."

Miss Jackson, dubbed "J.J." by her teammates, previously played tennis and girls' basketball at Juneau, but she tried out for football for the first time this year.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Ulla Jacobsson, 53, a Swedish actress who starred in Ingmar Bergman's film "Smiles of a Summer Night," died Friday of bone cancer.

Miss Jacobssen's American film career included co-starring with Glenn Ford in "Love is a Ball," with Michael Caine and Jack Hawkins in "Zulu" and with Kirk Douglas in "The Heroes of Telemark."

Chicago's Catholic hierarchy bids archbishop Bernardin welcome

CHICAGO (AP) — The city's Roman Catholic priests joyously welcomed Joseph L. Bernardin with song, standing ovations and a candlelight salute as their new archbishop urged them to "cast off" anger or bitterness toward his controversial predecessor.

Bernardin, 54, who on Tuesday officially became leader of the nation's largest archdiocese, called for unity in his first homily to about 1,500 fellow priests who gathered in the century-old Holy Name Cathedral for a twilight prayer vigil.

Speaking from the pulpit just moments after donning the ornate velvet and satin vestments and mitre of his office, Bernardin called on the priests to pray for Cardinal John P. Cody, who died on April 25 at the age of 74.

Aware of the strained relations that existed between some priests and Cody during Cody's 17 years as head of the archdiocese, Bernardin praised Cody's half-century in the church, saying he "did many good things for Chicago which make my work easier."

"If any hard feelings, bitterness, or anger — toward the cardinal or among yourselves — remain in your hearts for any reason, tonight is the night to cast off the burden and purify your hearts," he said. "Let us continue to pray for Cardinal Cody."

The homily was interrupted three times by applause. During the evening prayer service, Bernardin also was greeted warmly with three standing ovations and a candlelight salute from the priests who joined in a hymn, "O Radiant Light."

Bernardin, Chicago's seventh archbishop, is expected to be named a cardinal by Pope John Paul II, although it is uncertain when he would receive the red hat.

Bernardin stood near an altar decked with bright yellow flowers and flickering candles, and responded to the hearty welcome with a gentle smile and a brief wave.

Joining him were top church leaders, including the Rev. John Richard Keating, administrator of the archdiocese since Cody's death, and the Most Rev. Pio Laghi, the Vatican's apostolic delegate to the United States.

Laghi, who carried the letter from John Paul appointing Bernardin archbishop of Chicago, told the priests Bernardin will "not only be a bishop's bishop but a priests' bishop totally dedicated to his clergy."

Bernardin, archbishop of Cincinnati for 10 years and a native of Columbia, S.C., noted he and Cody were of "different generations" and different experiences. He said he was only 4 years old when Cody became a priest.

"I was saddened, very saddened, by the pain, suffering, and conflict that seemed to cloud his final years," said Bernardin. "The achievements of his 50 years of priesthood are real and lasting."

It was an apparent reference to a federal grand jury investigation into allegations that Cody had diverted up to $1 million in church funds to Helen Dolan Wilson, a stepcousin and lifelong friend. Both denied the charges and the probe was closed after Cody's death, without any indictments.

Most of Bernardin's homily was about his plans and his hopes for the 2.43 million Catholics in the Chicago archdiocese. Bernardin said he has no detailed program for the archdiocese, which includes 444 parishes, "Nor do I have a bag of tricks."

However, he said, he will reconstitute the Senate of Priests, a forum concerned with the needs of the local parishes. He also said he has accepted the suggestion of the Senate to take part in regional meetings to discuss the family and the church.

"I have been a priest for 30 years, and I still do not fully comprehend the mystery of the priesthood. But this much I know. The priesthood is not a job," Bernardin said. Instead, it "is a passionate commitment, a fiery-eyed vision, and an insatiable thirst for holiness and practical justice."

Collection includes much music

CBS finds ABC 'Too Close for Comfort' in ratings games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC, helped by its comedy series "Too Close For Comfort," finished in a dead heat with CBS for first place in TV's prime-time ratings race, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

ABC and CBS each had a rating of 13.6 for the week ending Aug. 22, while NBC was in third place with a rating of 11, Nielsen said. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute, 13.6 percent of the nation's homes with television were each tuned to ABC and CBS.

It was the fifth week in a row that CBS finished in first place. ABC last finished in the top spot in the week ending July 18.

In all, CBS had six shows in the Top 10 and ABC had four.

"Too Close for Comfort," with a rating of 19.8, nosed out last week's winner, the CBS summer series "Filthy Rich." Nielsen says that means in an average minute of the show, 19.8 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the nation saw at least part of "Too Close For Comfort."

It was the third time that the program, which stars Ted Knight and Nancy Dussault, had made it to the top, although the 2-year-old comedy had been consistently in the Top 10. It first made it to No. 1 in the week ending May 16 when it tied with the Miss USA Pageant.

Some of the first contingent of 800 Marines leave their landing craft in the port of Beirut early today. The first Marines landed at dawn. They will "man checkpoints, secure the port and generally assist the Lebanese armed forces" in evacuating the PLO, according the Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto, and are scheduled to stay 30 days.

Marines land, take over port in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Eight hundred combat-ready U.S. Marines landed in Beirut today and took control of the port as part of a three-nation peacekeeping force to oversee the evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon.

Lance Cpl. James Dunaway, the flag bearer from Hattiesburg, Miss., was the first man ashore at 5 a.m. from the landing craft that brought in 210 men of Echo Company.

Smiling broadly, and with the globe-and-anchor of the Marine Corps pinned to the lapel of his short-sleeved blue shirt, the architect of the Palestinian evacuation, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, greeted Col. James Mead, 47, of Boston, Mass., commander of the volunteer force from the 1,800-man 32nd Marine Amphibious Unit.

A SECOND LANDING craft brought Fox Company ashore 25 minutes later, and then came Golf Company and a logistics unit with jeeps, medium-size trucks, forklifts and a mobile communications center.

An hour after the first landing, the Americans relieved 350 French paratroopers who for four days had guarded the port and supervised the daily evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas by ship to new homes in Arab countries.

Clad in camouflage uniforms with flak vests, the Marines were armed with M-16 rifles, M-60 machine guns, mortars, Law anti-tank rockets and Dragon anti-tank missiles.

"Obviously," he continued, we'll use whatever we have in the unlikely event we must defend ourselves. I must defend myself and my men."

Asked how long they expected to stay in Beirut, Mead said: "I have no idea. We were told it is going to be about 30 days or less, but of course we are here to obey orders."

As the men unloaded, they could heard the automatic weapons fire in west Beirut with which the Palestinians and Lebanese Moslem militiamen say farewell to their departing comrades.

"It sounds like a firing range," said one Marine. "We're a little tense now, and we probably will be for a couple of days."

COL. SOUHAIL Darghouth, commander of the Lebanese army force in the port, greeted the 6-foot-7 Mead in Arabic, "Ahlan wasahlan," and Habib, who is of Lebanese origin translated, "In Arabic, it means you are welcome here."

"We want to work very closely with your forces," replied Mead, who told reporters it was his first visit to Lebanon.

Lt. Col. Charles Smith, his executive officer, told another Lebanese officer standing nearby: "As soon as the French flag comes off the silo, we would like you to put the Lebanese flag up there since this is your country."

Mead and the red-bereted French commander, Gen. Jacques Granger, shook hands at 6 a.m. and the Marines officially took control of the port.

"We've completed our mission here, and we are prepared for the next mission," said Granger. "We are pleased to hand over the port to the Americans."

Also present were U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon, French Ambassador Paul Marc Henry and Italian Ambassador Franco Ottieri, whose country is supplying the third contingent for the peacekeeping force.

The Americans will stay in buildings and tents in the port area, and U.S. officials said they would be confined there until the evacuation is over, in about two weeks.

A task force of seven 6th Fleet ships led by the helicopter-carrier Guam brought the Marines from Europe. In addition to the Guam, the task force included the tank landing ships Saginaw and Manitowoc, the dock ships Nashville and Hermitage and two escorts.

THE FRENCH WERE to take up positions near the National Museum and the race course, one of three crossing points along the "Green Line" that divides the city into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Marines keep peace once more

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marines who were landing today in Beirut to help evacuate Palestinian fighters were acting in a peacekeeping role for the 10th time since World War II.

The 800 Marines will "man check points, secure the port and generally assist the Lebanese armed forces" in evacuating the Palestine Liberation Organization, Henry Catto, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said Tuesday. They are scheduled to remain for 30 days.

As the first two waves of 425 combat Marines landed at dawn today, they were greeted by U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib, the man who negotiated the cease-fire that led to the PLO withdrawal. Ambassadors from France and Italy, whose nations are also contributing peacekeeping troops, also welcomed the troops ashore.

The Marines will patrol the port area, replacing the French who will move deeper into the Israeli-encircled city, while the Italian troops will patrol the southern area of west Beirut, Pentagon officials said.

The leathernecks are from the the 1,800 men of the 32nd Marine Amphibious Unit, a self-contained force that is part of the the U.S. 6th Fleet serving in the eastern Mediterranean. The unit was created several years ago to enable the Pentagon to move quickly if troops are needed in a distant area.

The Marines left from five mother ships, part of a fleet of 30 U.S. ships including the aircraft carriers Independence and Forrestal. Pentagon officials say there are also 38 Soviet ships in the area, including the Kiev, the main Russian carrier.

Today's landing was the 10th time since 1948 that Marines have rescued or evacuated Americans or been involved in peacekeeping missions.

One of the biggest such operations was in 1958, when more than 14,000 Marine and Army soldiers landed on the Lebanese beaches to try to halt fighting among several political groups.

The latest rescue mission came seven years ago when 14 Marines were killed and 41 wounded in an attempt to rescue the crew of the cargo ship Mayaguez after they had been seized by Cambodia off that nation's coast.

Today's landing was closely monitored by Pentagon officials, who kept President Reagan and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger abreast of its details, Defense officials said.

Before the landing, four Marines flew into Beirut Tuesday on a reconnaissance mission.

Pentagon officials have stressed that the Marine role will be strictly peacekeeping, saying the troops would be pulled out if they were endangered. But they gave the Marines the right to shoot back if fired upon.

Austrian Jew condemns Israeli Mideast actions

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, in a stinging attack on Israel published today, accused Israeli leaders of "madness" and "gigantic crimes" in their attack on Lebanon.

Kreisky, a Jew who has long aroused Israeli anger because of his meetings with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, wrote in Stern magazine that "Israel (now) stands morally destitute, its power holders have shown their true face."

"The whole world is afraid of the madness of its leaders, who rely only on arms," Kreisky continued. "...Gigantic crimes have occurred and anybody who is silent is guilty too."

"I want nothing more to do with this Israel. Never again."

Kreisky wrote the article in the form of a personal history of his relations with Arabs and Jews and his various meetings with the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Arafat in efforts to find peace in the 1970s.

The prospects for Middle East peace following Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon and bombardment of Beirut were virtually nil, Kreisky wrote.

"The exodus of the PLO from Beirut, which the Israelis have forced through horrendous sacrifices, will not solve the Mideast problem," Kreisky wrote.

"What will happen with the hundreds of thousands of Palestinian civilians in Lebanon? If you don't drive them out too, there will always be new resistance fighters coming up. Israel will then claim that she must stay in Lebanon to control the situation. And the control will be savage."

"The (PLO) movement will form again and Israel will one day say: That's where the terror comes from. It will again wage war against other Arab states. There is scarcely hope that Israel will change and become ready to compromise.

"Just as in the time of Hitler people spoke of another Germany which was very weak, there is certainly another Israel. But it is without power and influence."

Israeli "madness" in Beirut had lost Israel sympathy and increased the PLO's standing, Kreisky said.

"The tragedy of the battle for Beirut is that the PLO has found a measure of recognition in war that was refused it when it was steering toward peaceful aims," the Austrian wrote.

Sketching his links with the Middle East, Kreisky recalled bitter early reaction to his suggestions of Arab friendship with the Socialist International, a group of socialist and social democratic parties in which the Austrian leader has long been active. Israel's Labor Party is a member.

Marine commander Mead is decorated Vietnam fighter pilot

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Col. James M. Mead, who commands the 800 U.S. Marines here as part of the multinational peacekeeping force, is a decorated Vietnam fighter pilot and holds a master's degree in business administration.

The 47-year-old Boston native received his commission as a second lieutenant in 1957 after graduating from Belmont Abbey College in Belmont, N.C.

He was promoted to captain in 1962 and then served with a Marine all-weather fighting attack squadron in Atsugi, Japan. Later he was a flight instructor at Pensacola, Fla.

In 1967, Mead completed the amphibious warfare school at Quantico, Va., and was then transferred to South Vietnam as a combat pilot.

Starting in 1971, he attended the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, earning a master's degree in production management.

He was promoted to colonel in August 1980 and was appointed to his present post as commander of the 1,800-man 32nd marine amphibious unit last February.

Among his decorations are the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross and the Bronze Star. He is married and has four children.

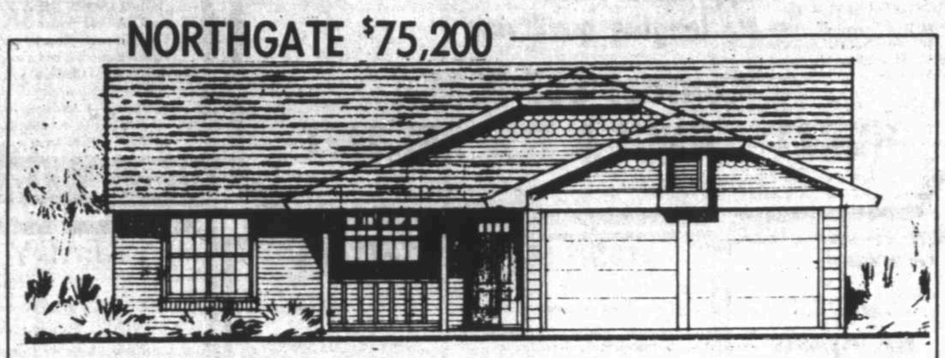
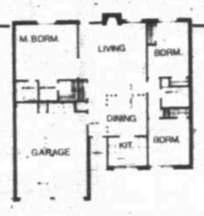
$5,250 Total Move-In Cost

$1450 Limited Closing Costs in Northgate only

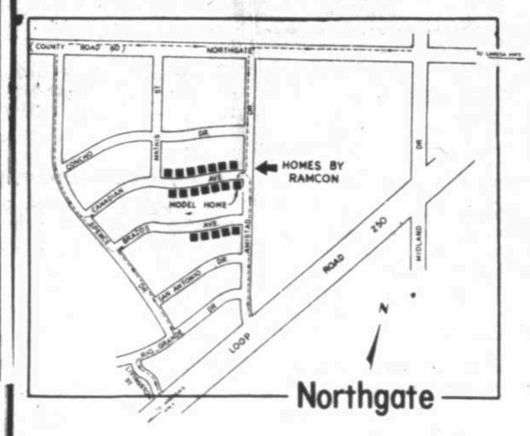
NORTHGATE $75,200



4909 Canadian



$673.30 Per Month



You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 150 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.
