Festival-goers enjoying the show

Plenty of music for toe-tapping, hand-clapping and dancing

By Wade Warren

Western swing fans were filing into Scurry Coliseum around 11 a.m. in anticipation of another day of "good-ol' western swing music." as the ninth annual Legends of Western Swing Music enters its second day.

"I'm ready for another day of dancing and listening to the bands," said Maurine Mears of Wichita Falls. Mears and her dancing partner, Wesley Campbell of Waurika, Okla., spent a full day on the dance floor Wednesday.

"Well, not a full day," laughed Mears, who has attended all but one of the yearly festivals. "We had to drive a couple of hundred miles to get here yesterday so we quit around 11 o'clock last night after starting at noon."

"But I bet they'll get in a full 12 hours today," chipped in her friend, JoAnn Coker from Lake Fork.

"They don't miss many dances," she added, noting that they had met at previous festivals.

Both women were quick to point out the pluses of the coliseum as opposed to where the event has been held.

"It's a lot cooler here," said Mears.

Coker has been impressed with the friendliness of the people of Snyder and the helpfulness of the chamber of commerce staff.

"I'm a Texan and I think the people here are about the friendliest folks I've come across," said the visitor from the piney woods of East Texas.

Corene Woods, wife of festival organizer Chuck Woods, said she was impressed with the turnout of local residents Wednesday night.

"As the word gets out of the fun at the festival, we think folks in Snyder and Scurry County will come on out," said Mrs. Woods.

"It's just great," said Lester Artherholt of Lone Grove, Okla., as he spoke of the music and the facilities. He and his wife, Rudell, and their friends from the same town, Louise and Dub Taliaferro, had their lawn chairs on the first row watching the performers Wednesday afternoon.

"I worked in Snyder for Union Oil of California in the fifties," said Artherholt. "I remember the friendly folks and the hamburgers at the Hill Top Cafe."

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The optimist believes he will go to heaven. The pessimist fears he will go to heaven and find the optimist there."

Country and western music is supposed to help you forget your troubles, and there's proof that it will at least make you forget.

Snyder police last nite were called to the coliseum, site of the Western Swing music festival, where a man reported that his vehicle had been stolen while he was inside patting his foot.

The two investigating officers located the "missing" vehicle in front of the coliseum. The slightly red-faced music fan had forgotten where he had parked.

Think More Rain!

Instead, a mother and her attorney appeared before the school board in Hamlin recently seeking to be "compensated" for an incident involving her son.

A former Hamlin football player was indicted for assault of another Hamlin student. The football player then moved to Abilene Wylie where he also played football and graduated in May.

A newspaper clipping of the Wylie gridder was put on a school bulletin board with a new headline written which read, "Star Indicted."

Somebody took a picture of the altered clipping on the bulletin board and mailed it to the family. The mother told the board that she and her son suffered "pain and suffering."

While doctoring the photo and displaying it in a school was a wrong and immature thing to do, we have difficulty seeing damage necessitating court action.

It seems like a double foul. If the kid hadn't been charged with beating up a fellow student, then he wouldn't have put himself in a position for so-called public ridicule.

Shake it off — and move on!

Think More Rain!

It sort of reminds us of the story about the famous trial lawyer who was asked to speak to a group of law students.

He was asked about how to approach difficult cases. His advice was revealing.

"When presenting a case, if you have the facts on your side, hammer the facts. But if you have the law on your side, then hammer the law."

"What if you don't have the facts or the law," a student asked, "then what do you do?"

"Well, in that case," said the guest speaker, "hammer on the table."

Against terrorists...

Clinton vows vengeance

PEROUGES, France (AP) — As Saudi Arabia bombing victims returned to America in flag-draped coffins, President Clinton vowed vengeance against their terrorist killers today and challenged world leaders to "face down the new threats to our freedom."

The president, attending an economic summit, said he expected the world's seven richest nations to adopt 40 specific recommendations to combat terrorism and issue a joint statement on the subject by this evening.

In a somber address to the people of France, the president said, "We must rally the forces of tolerance and freedom everywhere to work against terrorism."

An explosion at a U.S. military housing complex in Saudi Arabia killed 19 Americans and injured 270. The bodies were being flown to the United States today as investigators sought clues to those responsible for the carnage.

Clinton, meeting with French President Jacques Chirac in Lyon, said the carnage occurred despite increased security because "the bomb was just bigger than anyone calculated could be gotten that close to the building."

New security measures were established after the Nov. 13 bombing of a U.S. military training facility in Riyadh killed five Americans. Clinton said a fence at the U.S. Air Force compound "gave them a 35-yard cushion" against Tuesday's bombing.

"So I think the casualties were far smaller than they could have been had not the security precautions been taken," the president said. Officials will review whether more improvements are needed, he said.

At a meeting with British Prime Minister John Major, Clinton said,

Jeff Reecer, Cogdell CEO, notified the board that a bid conference will be held July 3 for contractors interested in the OB renovation projects. Bids are to be opened on July 17.

All board members were present today, to include Sue Mize, Jim Cave, Jimmy McMillan, J.B. Tate Jr., Stanley Martin and chairman Ted Crenwelge.

Hutchison, Lautenberg spar over anti-stalking bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senators took their increasingly bitter squabble to the Senate floor, arguing over who's to blame for the delay in passage of legislation seeking to crack down on stalking across state lines.

Texas Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison accused Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., of holding her anti-stalking legislation "hostage" by seeking to attach a measure of his own that would deny gun ownership to anyone convicted of domestic violence. Inclusion of that provision effectively torpedoes a vote on the stalking measure, she contends.

"For him to say that he requires that his amendment be taken up with this bill, which has been cleared by 99 members of the Senate, I think is a smoke screen," she said Wednesday during floor debate.

Lautenberg, meanwhile, accused the Republican leadership of blocking consideration of his measure. "The concern is it's too controversial apparently to take guns out of the hands of wife beaters and child abusers," he charged.

In a speech following Lautenberg's, Mrs. Hutchison answered: "We don't have to argue the merits of his amendment. All we have to argue is whether he will allow my bill to come to the floor."

Under Senate rules, senators have great leeway in attaching their amendments to other legislation. Lautenberg says the anti-stalking bill is the logical vehicle for his amendment.

But Mrs. Hutchison argues that Lautenberg's legislative maneuver imperils the swift passage of her bill, identical to one passed last month by the House. It would go directly to President Clinton if OK'd by the Senate.

In addition to bogging down her bill, she noted Wednesday that Lautenberg's measure has yet to go before the Judiciary Committee for its consideration, which hers did last month.

Lautenberg spokesman Bill Wise said Judiciary Committee staff have indicated they wouldn't give the bill a hearing, making the floor the only venue possible.

The stalking measure would make it a crime for anyone to cross state lines to injure or harass another person — closing a loophole in the 1994 crime law, which addressed interstate stalking only by present or former spouses or intimate partners. The measure also would make restraining orders from one state valid in all, which they currently aren't. And, it would give federal law enforcement authority to investigate and prosecute stalkers.

Disney Fans Aroar Over New Lion King Postage Stamps!

Move Over Elvis... Collectors Proclaim Simba The New King

Uganda, Africa — Disney fans and collectors are suddenly scrambling to obtain a new Limited Edition 9 stamp set that has just been issued by the African nation of Uganda to commemorate the mega hit animated film, Disney's The Lion King.

"Collector demand for these stamps has been unbelievable," stated John Van Emden of the International Collectors Society, distributor of the stamps in the U.S. and national clearinghouse for Disney collectible stamp issues. "Disney fans and collectors around the world have been waiting for this dramatic news, it seems they've been ready to pounce on the first hint of a Lion King release. In fact, we're nearly sold out."

Collectors are already predicting that in the very near future these Disney stamps will be far more sought after and be more desirable than the U.S. Elvis stamp, the most popular commemorative postage stamp of all time.

"Over 500 million Elvis stamps have been issued. When you compare this to these Lion King stamps, which are a Limited Edition of just thousands worldwide, you can see the irresistible appeal that these stamps have to collectors and Disney fans," added Van Emden.

Each of the 9 stamps is about four times the size of a regular U.S. postage stamp. They're legal for postage in Uganda and are recognized by every postal authority around the world.

Gotta have'em? They are available for a short time at $9.95 (plus $3 postage and handling) for the complete set of nine different colorful stamps, accompanied by an individually numbered ICS Certificate of Authenticity. The most you can order is 6 sets. Send your check or money order to ICS, 10045 Red Run Blvd., Suite 170ANJ, Owings Mills, MD 21117. Credit card holders may call toll free 1-800-322-4217.

Do you agree with this observation by Michel de Montaigne, the French essayist and moralist? He claimed, "Virtue shuns ease as a companion. It demands a rough and thorny path."

What is the best line in today's six-diamond contract after West leads a club? There is a homophonic hint hidden in Montaigne's remark.

South's two-heart rebid was a reverse, which guaranteed that his diamonds were longer than his hearts. It was an overbid with only 14 high-card points. North emphasized his long spade suit, but when South rebid his diamonds, North, looking lovingly at his three aces, jumped to the good slam.

Without a club lead, declarer could establish dummy's spade suit. After the club lead, there was a temptation to duck in the dummy. Perhaps East would switch, permitting South to play on dummy's spades. But the declarer spotted a better approach. After winning the first trick with dummy's club ace, South immediately cashed dummy's heart ace, played a heart to his king and continued with the heart 10, discarding dummy's remaining club when West played low.

The risk was that East would win with the queen and have the last heart, returning it for partner to ruff with a trump higher than dummy's seven. Here, though, the heart 10 won the trick. Declarer ruffed his club jack in the dummy, drew trumps and conceded trick 13 to West's heart queen.

It doesn't help West to cover the heart 10 with his queen. Declarer just ruffs in the dummy, draws trumps and loses a club at the end.

The ruffing finesse was South's virtuous companion.

Ask Anne & Nan

By Anne B. Adams and Nancy Nash-Cummings

Guitar may bring a tidy sum

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: My handsome, young son, who lost his life in Vietnam in 1968, had a guitar that I had bought for him. While at a musical get-together, a musician told us it was a valuable one and tried to buy it three times. He said the B25 inside was why it was so valuable. Its serial number is 098140, and it was made by Gibson. I'd like to find out how much it is worth as some of the family wants to buy it and I could, at this time, use the money. — OMA SEXTON, Bristol, Va.

DEAR OMA: The B25 number tells us that your son's Gibson was a middle-of-the-line acoustic guitar that was made around 1967. Although it isn't a collector's item, it is certainly worth more than was originally paid for it. You could probably ask (depending on its condition) between $400-$800.

The problem with accurately pricing and dating Gibsons is that the company often doubled up or otherwise mixed up their serial-number system. To get a really accurate estimate of the guitar's worth, it has to be examined by someone who is knowledgeable about guitars but who is NOT interested in buying your Gibson. A music store that deals in General Store, #1 Highway #68, Crossville, TN 38555 (Catalog $4), telephone: 1-800-334-4646, carries all the supplies and instruction books you'll need for smoking and curing. They even carry a "Country Smokehouse" that runs on electricity.

However, as you want to build your own smokehouse, we're hoping one of our readers can come up with some easy-to-follow plans for you.

DEAR ANNE AND NAN: I am looking for one of those grocery carts that has two wheels and a basket with a handle you can pull. It would be a help for me to get my groceries to the house from my car. — HELEN PUFFPAFF, Elgin, Ill.

DEAR HELEN: We found just what you are looking for in Betty Crocker's 75th Anniversary catalog. It is called a Folding Shopping Cart (cat. #3538C3) and when folded into tote-bag size is only 13 inches long x 8 inches wide and 2 inches high. When you need it, the wheels fold out and the heavy-duty reinforced bag unfolds to 27-1/2 inches high.

The price is $35.95, but if you can get your friends and neighbors to help you collect 60 Betty Crocker catalog points (these are on the boxes of all General Mills products) the price goes down to $24.95. If you would like to order the cart (or the 50-cent catalog), call 1-612-540-2212 or write to Betty Crocker Catalog, General Mills, Inc., 13400 15th Ave. N., P.O. Former major league pitcher Ray Burris enjoys teaching the game

By Brent Taylor
Sports Editor

What does a professional baseball player do after his career is finished?

In the case of Ray Burris he teaches baseball to kids.

Burris was a pitcher for 15 years in the big leagues, playing most of his years with the Chicago Cubs. The Cubs drafted Burris in 1972 out of Southwestern Oklahoma State University and sent him to their minor league club in Midland.

Burris, along with former Cubs teammates Jim Tyrone and Vic Harris, were in Snyder Tuesday and Wednesday conducting a clinic. Burris heads the Ray Burris School of Baseball headquartered in Arlington.

"As my playing years dwindled down, I got into instructional baseball," said Burris during a rain delay in the clinic Tuesday at Moffett Field. "From that, this has evolved going around the state to different cities doing clinics and taking some of our expertise to some of the young men and women who may not have had that opportunity to be exposed to big league instruction or guys who have played the game at the major league level."

"The thing about it is, we don't take an attitude that we are perfect or that we know everything about the game of baseball, but we have had a chance to play it at the major league level so we have some knowledge of what it takes. Things that were taught to us is basically what we are sharing with the young people."

Burris added that the talent of youth baseball players is improving. "The talent is definitely getting better from the standpoint that kids are making more of a committment to baseball. I think the game of baseball overall is making a big turnaround in the communities across the United States."

In addressing the major league strike of 1994, Burris said, the strike hurt, but fans are coming back to the game. "It hurt the avid fan who is going to come no matter where the game is being played. I think the thing right now is baseball, I don't believe, has done a remarkable job on promoting the game of baseball through public relations. When we come out and do a clinic like this, I think it is a step in the right direction, to give something back to the communities like Snyder and teach the game, teach the attitude that comes with the game. That is all part of the goodwill ambassadorship of baseball as a whole to the game."

"You take the commissioners office, the major league affiliates around the country, they have to do their thing in their communities as well as the Texas Rangers. You have to branch out and we are like an extension. Even though I am still associated with the Rangers, to me it is an extension of the goodwill of baseball as a whole because we are out here showing these young people that if you have the right attitude and you make the committment and strive to maintain the work ethics, it could possibly happen to you. We don't have any guarantees that it will, but I think all you can do is give yourself a chance and if you give yourself a chance, anything is possible."

Asked who the best hitter he ever faced, Burris replied, "Quite a few. The most scariest hitter I ever threw against was Willie McCovey, from the standpoint of what his ability was and what he could do. There were many more. Willie Stargell was very tough. Al Oliver, some of the line drives he could hit were horrendous. As far as power, George Foster possesses the best power I've ever seen."

As far as his own pitching performance, Burris was humble. "I don't think I could fall into a list with the likes of Ryan, Tom Seaver, Gaylord Perry, Don Sutton, all who were 300 game winners and were great pitchers and starters in their careers. I fluctuated between the bullpen and the rotation as a starter."

"The thing that makes me proud is that I was able to pitch at the level they were able to pitch at and still win games. I'm kinda humble in a lot of ways because I don't even compare myself to guys like that. I just know I competed against them, competed with them and had the chance to coach Nolan Ryan with the Rangers in 1992, and as far as I'm concerned, I put us all on the same level as far as skill wise. Unfortunately, they won a lot more games then I did. I pitched 15 years at the major league level and I think that speaks for itself."

Speaking of Ryan, "He is as nice of a guy as he comes off being on TV," said Burris. "He is a great gentleman to the game of baseball. I think he would make a great commissioner."

Rangers win 24th comebacker

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers have made the comeback victory a habit this season.

That's a big reason why they're off to the best start in club history and hold a 6½-game lead in the AL West.

The Rangers pulled off their 24th come-from-behind win of the year Wednesday night as Juan Gonzalez hit a three-run double in the eighth inning for a 6-5 decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

"These guys in here never give up," Rangers first baseman Will Clark said. "They go out every night and give us an opportunity to win."

XXVI COUNTDOWN TO ATLANTA

VIII Olympiad 1924, Paris

Paavo Nurmi may have been the talk of Antwerp in 1920, but he was the sensation of Paris four years later.

It wasn't just that the "Flying Finn" won five gold medals, it was the way he did it. Running with a stopwatch on his wrist, Peerless Paavo captured the 1,500 and 5,000-meter finals within an hour of each other and set Olympic records in both.

Two days later, he blew away the field in the 10,000-meter cross-country run where the heat and an unusually difficult course combined to knock out 23 of 38 starters. (Finland also won the team gold in the event). Finally, the next day he led the Finns to victory in the 3,000-meter team race. His performance overshadowed the four gold medals of teammate Ville Ritola.

The gold medals won by British runners Harold Abrahams in the 100 meters and Eric Liddell in the 400 were chronicled in the 1981 Academy Award-winning film Chariots of Fire. The movie, however, was not based on fact. Liddell, a devout Christian, knew months in advance that the preliminary for the 100 (his best event) was on a Sunday, so he had plenty of time to change plans and train for the 400. Also, he and Abrahams never competed against each other in real life.

Speaking of the movies, Johnny Weissmuller of the U.S. won three swimming gold medals in the 100 and 400-meter freestyles and water polo. He would later become Hollywood's most famous Tarzan.

Forty-four nations, the most by 15, took part in the games. The United States ran away with the medal race with 99 (45 gold, 27 silver, 27 bronze). The next closest country was France with 38 and Finland 37. The host country won 13 golds while Finland took home 14 golds.

In team sports, the U.S. took the gold in rugby. There were seven Olympic records set by Americans, four world records and a world record tied.

Hagar out, Roth in

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Sammy Hagar is out and David Lee Roth is back in as lead singer of Van Halen, at least temporarily.

The rock band announced Hagar's departure Wednesday and said Roth is rejoining the group to record a greatest hits album to be released this fall.

Hagar, best known for his solo hit "I Can't Drive 55," became the band's front man in 1985 after Roth left to pursue a solo career.

Reform Party's nominating convention unconventional

DALLAS (AP) — The Reform Party's unconventional convention this August will be a dream come true for political couch potatoes.

Instead of traveling to the convention, supporters will be able to assemble by leaning back their recliners and directing their television remote to C-SPAN.

Substituting satellite technology for human contact, Reform Party organizers are casting their two-part nominating convention as a televised town meeting.

"The communications systems are there to include more people in the Democratic process," said Russ Verney, the Reform Party's national coordinator. "A lot of people will be able to sit in their living room. Our national convention is not expected to draw people from across the country to attend in person."

Even without cramming thousands of flag-waving, screaming delegates into a bunting-and-balloon-filled hall, Verney expects the Reform Party convention to generate excitement and rally the troops.

Still, something may get lost in the high-tech translation, says Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

"You sacrifice the human aspects of coming together at the polls and conventions," he said. "The question of politics through electronics rather than through people is not a good development for our society."

The Reform Party already had wandered from the traditional party path by splitting its convention into two pieces. On Aug. 11, there will be one day of nominating speeches in Long Beach, Calif.

Then on Aug. 18, the party will announce its presidential candidate at Valley Forge, Pa.

C-SPAN, the public affairs cable network, has committed to showing both segments, said Perot spokeswoman Sharon Holman.

In the weeklong intermission between the two sessions, Reform Party members will select their presidential candidate through computer linkups, the telephone or by mail.

"People who signed our petitions will ultimately get an identification number to validate their voting," Verney said.

The party will send out a mailing in the next seven to 10 days that will explain the voting procedures for members. The personal identification numbers, or PINs, will follow soon after.

Verney said a company that has not been publicly identified is handling the assignment of PINs to the approximate 1.3 million Reform Party members. Anyone who has signed a petition should expect to get a PIN if they provided a valid mailing address.

Jack Essenberg, a member of the New York Independence Party which is joining up with the Reform Party for ballot access, says he loves the idea of one person, one vote.

New pastor named for Fluvanna UMC

Colin Speer, a second-year marketing student at Texas Tech, living in Lubbock, has recently been named pastor at the United Methodist Church in Fluvanna.

This is his first Methodist appointment.

Most of Speer's service work has been in the area of youth ministry. Some areas of devotion are assistant to the Minister of Youth at Lakeridge UMC in Lubbock as well as extensive participation in the Methodist church camp at Ceta Canyon, near Happy.

"I am very excited about this position and opportunity to experience first hand the challenges and blessings seen only in a rural setting," Speer said. "There are many outlets and possibilities for new things to happen here, and I am enthusiastic about this new chance to share in growth."

Speer hopes the community will be interested in the plans he wishes to implement which are "age and ability inclusive."

Services for Fluvanna Methodist begin at 9:30 a.m. with a Sunday School hour followed with worship beginning at 10:30. In addition, an evening worship service is held on the last Sunday of each month. Activities include special music, drama or guest speakers. The environment is "relaxed and open."

Visitors are encouraged to attend any of the services.

Daniel Ramey, former pastor, has moved to Rule to take the joint appointment of the Methodist churches in Rule and Sagerton.

Penalties for 'roofies' upgraded

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — In an emergency move to stem use of the so-called date rape pill, Florida's attorney general upgraded the penalty for possessing the sedative Rohypnoly to the same level as that of heroin and LSD.

This year alone, the state's poison control center has logged more than 100 reports of sexual assaults on victims knocked out by the drug and law enforcement officials say abuse among teen-agers is growing.

"The plague of Rohypnol abuse in Florida must end," Attorney General Bob Butterworth said Wednesday. "Preventing the damage caused by this drug is far preferable to cleaning up in its wake."

Until the emergency rule, Rohypnol was grouped with drugs having a low potential for abuse. Now, the penalty for possessing Rohypnol, a $1.50 pill 10 times stronger than Valium, was increased from three to 30 years in prison.

Butterworth's office says 10 to 20 percent of South Florida teenagers have tried the small white pill known as "roofies," and seizures of the drug have skyrocketed. Since last October more than 136,000 pills were seized.

Long-Distance Advice Proves Costly to Special Friendship

DEAR ABBY: I was very upset a couple of weeks ago, so I placed a collect long-distance telephone call to a dear friend whose advice was excellent.

When I returned home, my husband suggested I send her a check as reimbursement for the phone call. Knowing my friend, I said, "She'll never accept it." With that in mind, I sent her a thank-you note with cash enclosed to cover the amount of the call. In the note, I suggested, "You and your hubby get a triple-deck ice cream cone with the change — for being the dear, generous people you are." (I felt it would add a light, whimsical touch to the note.)

To my dismay, my friend called and told me she had never been so insulted in her life that I'd put cash in the envelope, as she had thought our friendship was above that, and she would not hesitate to ask me for anything. I told her that she was right, but I felt uncomfortable making her pay for my phone call, and this had nothing to do with our friendship. She also mentioned that she had a refrigerator full of ice cream and did not need the money. I tried to explain that because she is so special, this was my way of saying thank you.

She still maintains that it was insulting and I was a mile out of line. Abby, was I? The one in error has promised to eat the telephone bill.

RED IN THE FACE

DEAR RED: You were the one in error, but don't start eating yet. Perhaps your husband felt he was doing the right thing by suggesting that you insert money into a loving, friendly relationship — but a small gift would have been better than a check or cash. he should eat the phone bill.

DEAR ABBY: You recently listed the best place for women to meet men, but you left out the best place of all: the grocery store! Especially early Sunday mornings. I usually go between 7:30 and 8 a.m., and there are always a lot of single guys there. They are like lost little boys. If they are shopping that early, you can be sure they weren't at the bars the night before. You can also tell a lot about a guy by the food he buys. They can never find anything and aren't afraid to ask for help.

Often they will ask what ingredients go into a certain recipe. I always tell them I am not sure of all the ingredients or the amounts, but if they will give me their phone number, I will call them with the info after I get home and check my cookbook.

I never give them my phone number until I have talked to them on the phone several times. And I always call them back to ask how the recipe turned out.

Abby, I've lived in several parts of the country and have met exciting and interesting men in grocery stores everywhere I've lived.

Try it, ladies. It works!

LOVE THAT FRESH MEAT AISLE

DEAR LOVE: What a great suggestion! One can expect to find a terrific assortment of fruit, nuts, hot tamales and cold fish. There's something for everyone.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I received a graduation announcement, and with it came a self-addressed envelope from the sender. What colossal nerve!

Abby, if you were in our place, how would you handle this?

Families of bombing victims grieving

By HELEN O'NEILL
Associated Press Writer

Diane Morgera had gone to sleep soundly, secure in the knowledge that her 24-year-old son would be bounding through the door the next morning, home on leave from the military.

Instead, she woke to Air Force officers knocking at her door, telling her Airman First Class Peter J. Morgera had been killed in a terrorist truck bombing in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

"I asked, 'Is it possible you're wrong?' ... They said they didn't think so," said Morgera, struggling to retain her composure Wednesday as she stood on the steps of her home in Stratham, N.H.

"He was supposed to be home, like at any minute," she said. "So when I heard there was an explosion, I thought that he's already left and it would be all right."

For dozens of American families who learned of the deaths of their loved ones in Tuesday's blast, the timing of the bombing made the horror worse because several victims had been scheduled to return home within a week.

Today, bodies of the victims were to arrive at Dover Air Force Base in Delaware.

In Greendale, Wis., the Fennig family had been eagerly awaiting the return of Technical Sgt. Patrick P. Fennig, who was also killed in the blast.

"I received a Father's Day card from him saying he would be coming home," said Ted Fennig, who was looking forward to fishing trips with his son this summer.

Family members described the 34-year-old flight mechanic as a happy-go-lucky soul who had dreamed of being in the Air Force all his life and who had traveled the world as part of that dream. He would always spend the summer back home.

Brent Marthaler, 20, had been in Saudi Arabia since April and wasn't crazy about it, his father said. He was scheduled to leave the country Wednesday, just hours before the bombing.

"He said ... even the Seven-Up and Skittles tasted bad," Herm Marthaler said at his Cambridge, Minn., home. "So we sent him a 12-pack of Seven-Up and some Skittles ... for his birthday."

Marthaler was to be married in September.

Capt. Christopher Adams of Massapequa Park on New York's Long Island had planned an October wedding to a fellow Air Force captain. His fiancee was on a base in Florida at the time of the bombing.

"He was looking forward to his new life," Adams' cousin, Joe Assante, said.

In Yukon, Okla., Nancy Kitson clutched a letter from her youngest brother and broke down as she described how excited he was about coming home next week.

Heroic dog saves lives of owners

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — When a dog spotted a fire sparked by lightning in the attic of his owners' house, he barked. But that didn't work. They ignored him.

So Roc, a mix of Chesapeake Bay retriever and rottweiler, rang the doorbell. At 4 a.m., that got their attention.

Rosevelt and Linda Matthews and their two teen-age children lost everything but their lives in the Tuesday fire. Roc won their eternal gratitude.

The dog was never trained by the family to ring doorbells, though he did it once before to get their attention.

"We didn't know the house was on fire until we answered the door," said Linda Matthews, who a year ago bought the dog to appease her son.

Roc is living with a neighbor now, oblivious to his hero status. He will once again take up residence with the Matthews family as soon as they find a new home.

Whitewash safe for environment

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — It's a safe bet Tom Sawyer wouldn't have cottoned to political correctness when it came to sloshing whitewash on his Aunt Polly's fence.

But organizers of the annual Tom Sawyer Days in this Mississippi river town do. So they're making sure the whitewash for this year's fence-painting contest is environmentally friendly.

In years past, the Hannibal Jaycees have used a watered-down latex paint for the Fourth of July contest, which pits Tom Sawyer lookalikes in a race to slop whitewash over a few fence boards.

But organizer Sandy White said the paint could have been harmful to the young participants and to the environment, when it gets washed down the storm sewer afterward.

"This paint you don't have to worry about," White said. "It's safe to the environment and safe to the body."

A company called Sawyer Finn of Kansas City, Mo., has stepped in to donate 30 gallons of what it calls natural paint. White said it's even safe enough to drink.

Clotting disorder linked to disease

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Many years ago, my father, a very strong and healthy man, died suddenly of purpura hemorrhagica. At that time the doctors were unable to tell us much about it. Can you enlighten me? Is it an hereditary disease and is there a cure?

DEAR READER: In order for blood to clot properly, it must contain millions of little blood cells called platelets, as well as a complex collection of special proteins. A deficiency of one or more of these constituents may lead to uncontrolled hemorrhage.

Such was your father's case. His hemorrhagic purpura (bruising) was a manifestation of a severe clotting disorder that eventually caused fatal internal bleeding.

The causes for such a life-threatening reaction are legion: drug reactions, leukemia, AIDS, overwhelming infection, kidney failure, cancer, and many others.

At this stage — so many years after the event — it would be impossible to identify the cause of your father's illness.

In many cases, the cause cannot be discovered. However, in this situation, immediate treatment must be provided. Therefore, to buy time and save a life, doctors often use transfusions of clotting factors and platelets.

By supplying the missing constituents, transfusions prevent disseminated hemorrhage and enable physicians to salvage a patient who would have surely died. Once the situation has stabilized, appropriate long-term therapy, such as cortisone or other drugs, is employed.

Some types of clotting disorder may be inherited, but most are acquired as a result of a serious underlying disease. For example, uncontrolled hemorrhage can be associated with bloodstream infection (septicemia).

Once antibiotics have attacked the infection, the coagulation problems disappear. However, until the antibiotics have had time to act, clotting-factor transfusions must be given.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Blood — Donations and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What happens physiologically in the case of essential tremor? It appears there is a short-circuit somewhere between the brain and the muscles. What progression and deterioration can I expect? Would chiropractic adjustment help?

DEAR READER: No one knows the cause of benign essential tremor, a harmless hereditary condition marked by fine-to-coarse, slow shaking of the head, hands and voice that is often accentuated by stress and the performance of skilled acts.

The affliction is probably not due to a "short-circuit" in the central nervous system, as are many, more serious neurological disorders, such as multiple sclerosis.

Although essential tremor tends to increase with age, it does not lead to deterioration. Small amounts of alcohol or beta-blockers may suppress the tremor, which is not affected in any way by chiropractic manipulation.

Who's behind Saudi Arabia bombing?

The scale of the attacks suggests the bombers have powerful backers, and some have accused Saudi Arabia's neighbors of fomenting trouble.

So far there's been no evidence pointing to foreign sponsorship, and Saudi Arabia itself has tacitly acknowledged that the problem may be largely homegrown.

The two lethal bombings of U.S. military targets in the kingdom, one on Tuesday and one last November, have been claimed by previously unknown groups.

A caller to the Al-Arab newspaper in London said the "Legion of the Martyr Abdullah al-Huzaifi" was responsible for Tuesday's bombing in Dhahran that killed 19 American servicemen and injured hundreds.

The "Islamic Movement for Change" claimed responsibility for the Nov. 13 blast that killed five Americans and two Indians in the capital of Riyadh.

Authorities have been unable to say whether these movements even exist, and their only proclaimed goal is to drive the roughly 5,000 U.S. troops out of Saudi Arabia.

The ruling Al-Saud family tolerates no dissent, and therefore all opposition groups operate either underground or in exile.

The most prominent is the London-based Committee for the Defense of Legitimate Rights. Led by Mohammed al-Misari, the group's favored tactic is to fire off faxes accusing the Saudi royal family of massive corruption.

The group, which wants to make the strict Islamic state even more so, claims underground cells in Saudi Arabia, but does not advocate violence.

It has so angered the Saudi authorities that earlier this year they tried to have al-Misari kicked out of Britain, but the courts have permitted him to stay.

Big Spring youths taken into custody

Palmer, who resides at 302 32nd St., had reported the theft of a cellular telephone.

Sgt. Jerry Parker said a 16-year-old male juvenile confessed to the theft of the telephone Wednesday, following his arrest in the 3300 block of Avenue L. Parker said the youth was also charged with evading arrest as he and one other person ran from officers.

The youth was transported to Big Spring where he was released to the custody of a Howard County juvenile probation officer and later detained in the Big Spring juvenile facility. He was on probation for earlier offenses in Big Spring and was also listed as a runaway.

An acquaintance of the 16-year-old was also arrested in the same area, said Parker.

A 15-year-old male juvenile - also from Big Spring - was taken into custody in the 3500 block of Avenue M and charged with criminal trespass and evading arrest.

This person was also released to Big Spring juvenile authorities and placed in the Big Spring juvenile facility by his probation officer. He had been wanted in Big Spring for probation violation.

Clothing optional baseball night canceled because it's too popular

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Take me out to the ball game — but please, put on some clothes.

The chance for fans to watch baseball in the buff day at Palm Springs' 4,400-seat stadium has been canceled, the victim of its own popularity.

"So many people wanted to come it could have filled Dodger Stadium," said the sponsor, Tom Mulhall, owner of The Terra Cotta Inn, a clothing-optional resort. "We were concerned that we might have a safety and security problem."

"Clothing Optional Night" was planned for the Palm Springs Suns game July 8. Nude fans were to have enjoyed the game against the Grays Harbor Gulls from within the privacy of a large tent.

The tent was not large enough.

"Can you imagine if 10,000 people showed up?" Mulhall asked.

Even with the cancellation, the promoters still count this one a success. The team is floundering, averaging 755 fans per home game this year. That's the worst in the eight-team, independent Western Baseball League and about half of last year's average.

"I thought it was a good idea because it's brought a lot of publicity for us," said Suns player and coach Kraig Constantino.

Clinton speaks in France

"We have already agreed on a number of things that we would do together to deal with the problems of international crime, specifically with terrorism."

Major said: "This is the security challenge of the 21st century and we have to get after it."

Earlier, standing on a makeshift platform built atop a cobblestone town square at Perouges, Clinton vowed to vigorously pursue the terrorists involved in the latest attack. "We will not rest in our efforts to discover who is responsible, to track them down and bring them to justice."

Mayor Guy Passarat de la Chapelle introduced Clinton after asking the crowd of several hundred to observe a moment of silence.

The address had been planned as a low-key greeting to the French people, but the bombing made the site a perfect setting for Clinton's plea for unity against terrorism.

Located about 20 miles northeast the summit site of Lyon, this mediaeval, walled city was liberated from the Nazis in 1944. Evoking the memory of allied battles against evil in World War II, Clinton demanded the same effort against terrorism.

"Now we must join together to face down the new threats to our freedom," Clinton said hours before the summit opened.

He spoke beneath the so-called Tree of Liberty, planted in 1792 after the French Revolution. Surrounded by American flags, the president said, "The future of the children here depends on our success in this effort."

The G-7 summit is normally dominated by talks of trade and economics, but terrorism was pushed to the top of the agenda by Tuesday's bombing. "Terrorism is on our minds today because of the cowardly bombing," Clinton said.

He will cut short his European trip to fly to Florida on Sunday to attend memorial services for some of the military personnel killed in the terrorist bombing.

Guilty pleas net probated terms

Two probated sentences, one with deferred adjudication, were handed down this week in 132nd District Court.

Jonathan Michael Taylor on Tuesday pleaded guilty to an April 25 aggravated assault indictment. Taylor, 17, of 2612 36th St., was assessed a seven-year prison term in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, probated for seven years.

District Judge Ernie Armstrong also fined Taylor $500. The deferred adjudication means that there will be no record of the conviction if the terms of probation are successfully completed. If probation is revoked, the court may again consider the full range of punishment.

Pleading guilty Monday was Scott Prentice Smith, 17, of San Angelo. Smith was charged with the May 12 burglary of a habitation.

Judge Armstrong also assessed a seven-year probated prison term and fined Smith $500.
