Senator describes downing of helicopter

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — One of two U.S. senators whose helicopter was hit by gunfire and forced down in Honduras says hundreds of shots were fired at the craft by "a nest of guerrillas."

A second helicopter carrying Diana Negroponte, wife of U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte, also was fired upon but was not hit in the attack, which occurred near the border with El Salvador.

"This was not a single gun. We figure there were hundreds of rounds fired at the helicopter," said Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who was aboard the craft Wednesday with Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla. The two men were on a fact-finding mission in Honduras.

No injuries were reported among the nine passengers and six crew members aboard the two aircraft. There was no official confirmation of the source of the fire, which Johnston said came "presumably from Salvadoran guerrillas."

The helicopter was struck three times by .50-caliber ammunition. Johnston said he didn't realize what was happening until after he heard a woosh of air coming into the craft.

"Then over a period of time there were sounds like gravel rattling in a pan and it became clear that we were being shot at," he said.

The senators' copter landed at Marcala, 55 miles west of this capital city and 10 miles from the Salvadoran border province of Morazan, a longtime stronghold of leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador, said U.S. Embassy officials here.

■ Salvadoran towns attacked — Page 2A

Chiles said it was impossible to tell if the UH-1 helicopter was on the Honduran side of the border or over a rebel-controlled area of El Salvador when the shots were fired.

"We think we were on the Honduran side but it's a pretty murky border there," Chiles said.

The senators were on their way from a Honduras air force base to a U.N.-operated camp for Salvadoran refugees in southwestern Honduras. Many residents of the camp, Colomoncagua, are considered sympathetic to the Salvadoran guerrillas.

After the aircraft was hit, a lieutenant colonel accompanying the two senators said to continue "back over across these hills" if the helicopter would fly and if the instruments worked, Johnston said.

It "was a very good decision because had he not done that he would have set it down probably within range of these small arms," Johnston said. "I think it was Churchill who said there's no thrill like getting shot at and missed."

Chiles and Johnston spoke with reporters before leaving Tegucigalpa and again in Panama City, where they arrived Wednesday evening to continue their fact-finding tour of the region. The senators' aides said they were to fly to Nicaragua on Thursday before returning Friday to Washington.

"This incident shows the need to move the Salvadoran refugee camps into the interior of Honduras," said Ambassador Negroponte, who was not on the trip. Honduran officials have said Salvadoran guerrillas find aid and shelter in some of the camps closest to the border and want them moved.

Some 32,000 Salvadoran refugees are in Honduras, 6,000 of them in the camp the senators had planned to visit.

Man with a mission

The Rev. Tomas Chavez of San Angelo will take West Texans to Central America.

Texan's 'mission field' war-torn Central America

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANGELO, Texas — The Rev. Tomas Chavez, say critics, is a maverick who frequently challenges the political system. But the former policeman-turned-minister sees himself as a friend of the poor whose travels to Central America could dispel myths about Americans.

The Presbyterian minister is planning to lead a group of 20 West Texans on a goodwill tour of Central America. Although strife in the troubled region has postponed the tour from summer until fall, Chavez believes the group will be safe and the trip is important.

"I feel when people there see we're not there to criticize them or (go) as spies, they won't mistreat us," said Chavez, the pastor of a predominately Mexican-American congregation. "We need to have more goodwill trips. There are many misconceptions. People down there think we're all warmongers and that's not true."

During the past 10 years, Chavez has tried to help those who can't help themselves, especially his fellow Mexican Americans. Most recently, has increased his international travel to help the poor in other countries.

Some call him radical because he frequently challenges the political system. Others admire him because the programs he has initiated are targeted to the poor.

"I try to move people from a naive way of thinking to a critical way of thinking," he said. "People respect authority, but I want them to think critically. Too many times, Mexican-Americans blame God for things that happen to them. But God gave each person talents and abilities to use."

The white stucco church and office building seems to personify his commitment to the poor.

The structure houses a bilingual pre-school for underprivileged children; an area where elderly undergo monthly health checkups; a kitchen where food is stored for Project Dignidad, an interdenominational program that helps the poor with food and clothes; and Chavez' office, which is filled with thousands of pages of literature — from books about Protestant Hispanic liturgies to books about racism and bigotry, attitudes Chavez has tried to combat.

"Discrimination is an evil thing," he said. "But it's not as bad as when I was a child."

Chavez is a tall, somewhat rotund man who rarely wears a minister's collar, preferring to dress humbly like his congregation.

He was raised in San Antonio, the son of migrant parents. He became at San Antonio policeman, but lost his job. He will not say how that happened, calling himself a victim of circumstances.

That's when he, his wife and child took up migrant work. During his journey, he said he discovered that the workers needed spiritual uplifting and he soon was providing comfort.

White, teachers prepare for education proposals

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

On the eve of expected recommendations from the governor's Select Committee on Public Education, Texas Gov. Mark White Wednesday endured several humorous jabs at chairman H. Ross Perot. But the governor told more than 600 teachers and administrators that, if nothing else, Perot has brought some much-needed attention to educational issues.

"You think you're ready for that committee to be through. I didn't even think we needed a committee. I was ready to work on this issue this time last year," White said.

He attended a banquet of the Classroom Teachers Association of Midland and the Midland Educators Association.

The governor said he expects to call a special legislative session in May or June to consider several educational issues, among them the select committee's recommendations.

"I hope to call a special session as quickly as I can get the legislature ready to move on these reforms," he said.

Although White earlier admitted some of Perot's recommendations were unreasonable, he said he supports replacing the 27-member elected State Board of Education with a smaller, appointed body.

An appointed body would be more accountable to the public, he said. "I don't think many people in this state can name the last board of education member they elected in the last election, but they know who the governor is."

Gov. Mark White

■ White applauded for drought relief efforts — Page 1C

"I just don't agree with that," Midland's state board member, J. Murphy Horton, said. "An appointed board plays politics. They're not going to be addressing education. They're going to be addressing what the governor wants. It's bad democracy."

White — the husband and the son of a teacher — assured educators that he was eager to begin reforms and appealed for their cooperation.

"What we need is the united support of teacher across the state," he said.

He pledged to continue fighting for higher salaries. "Every single major study on education has said teacher salaries have to be improved. I'm committed to that and will not back down from it."

One of the governor's campaign promises was to seek a 24 percent teacher pay raise over two years.

White has said he will release his tax package proposal within 10 days. He has indicated a nickel-a-gallon tax on gasoline will be part of the proposal, and said Wednesday about 25 percent of the funds would be earmarked for education.

Other proposals may include a one percent increase in the sales tax and a "sin" tax on such items as alcohol and cigarettes.

Reforms need to focus on smaller classes and an academic day, White said, quickly adding that athletics are also an important part of education. Vocational programs also need to be strengthened and updated.

Discipline is another problem requiring attention, he told educators. College education majors need to be taught how to maintain discipline, he said, adding uniform state guidelines on discipline should be implemented.

White also stressed the importance of examing the issue of social promotion.

"We have the ingredients of providing the finest education available in the country. I think that we have the ability and the will to see that we're in the forefront of educational reform."

Final recommendations due today

DALLAS (AP) — Members of Gov. Mark White's select committee on public education gathered today to take final action on a comprehensive package of recommended reforms for Texas' public schools.

H. Ross Perot, chairman of the 18-member committee, said the panel would have to decide in its 2 p.m. meeting which recommendations should be modified or dropped so the cost of the reform plan can be reduced to what legislative leaders say the state can afford.

White is expected to call the Texas Legislature into special session in May or June to approve funding for the reforms.

One member of the committee, attorney Tony Bonilla of Corpus Christi, said Wednesday night that he expected today's meeting to be the last for the group. But he said he expects committee members to play a major role in selling the program to the taxpayers and in lobbying the Legislature.

"If these recommendations are enacted, they will bring Texas into the 20th Century," Bonilla said. "The recommendations emphasize quality teachers, early childhood development and better management of our tax dollars."

White and other state officials have said they expect the Legislature to approve $1.6 billion for improvements next year. The governor is pushing for a tax plan to finance education expenditures over the next three years.

The recommendations before the committee today were scaled back after it was determined that the initial proposals would have cost about $2.5 billion to implement, Bonilla said.

"We tried to prioritize those recommendations and in the process tried to reduce the cost of the package so that it could have a reasonably good chance of being implemented," Bonilla said.

"This priority list represents expenditures of under $1 billion. The state comptroller has indicated that we could raise $1 billion with a one cent sales tax (increase)," he said.

The recommendations include:

— Lengthening the school day from 175 days to 180 days.

— Limiting the class size in the first and second grades to 20 students.

— Annual testing for students.

— Voluntary pre-kindergarten classes for 4-year-olds with limited English proficiency.

— A career ladder and teacher compensation program, providing a minimum monthly starting salary of $1,520 for teachers and additional money for teachers with satisfactory evaluations.

— Testing of teachers.

— Programs to streamline the organization and management of the State Board of Education.

— Tax equalization for poor and rich school districts.

Khadafy says British must end embassy siege

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy said today that British police — not Libyans — killed a British policewoman, and that British security forces must withdraw from around his embassy in London before the standoff can end.

Ending the two-day-old siege in London "is the responsibility of the British government. We did nothing," Khadafy said from Tripoli in a live broadcast of an interview with NBC television.

■ British 'bear up' in crisis — Page 8A

The Libyan leader repeated his country's version of the events Tuesday — a version contradicted by witnesses, videotape and British officials, who all said a gunman in an embassy window fired on demonstrators outside the mission Tuesday, killing the policewoman and wounding 11 protesters.

Khadafy, speaking in English, said there was "an armed British attack by air and ground" against his embassy in which a policewoman was killed and 11 anti-Khadafy Libyan demonstrators were injured.

"I heard that the British police force used arms and shot at the bureau...," Khadafy said, adding later that his information came "from many sources."

The Libyan Embassy, which Libya calls a people's bureau, "is part of our (sovereign) territory. They have the right to defend themselves if attacked. The British government committed this attack ... and the British government is responsible for any accident that takes place there," Khadafy said.

Asked if he knew the identity of the person who fired the fatal shots, Khadafy skirted the question and finally said he thought British police were responsible.

"I think the British policemen killed themselves. Because they shot our bureau during the attack. They are responsible for killing this woman."

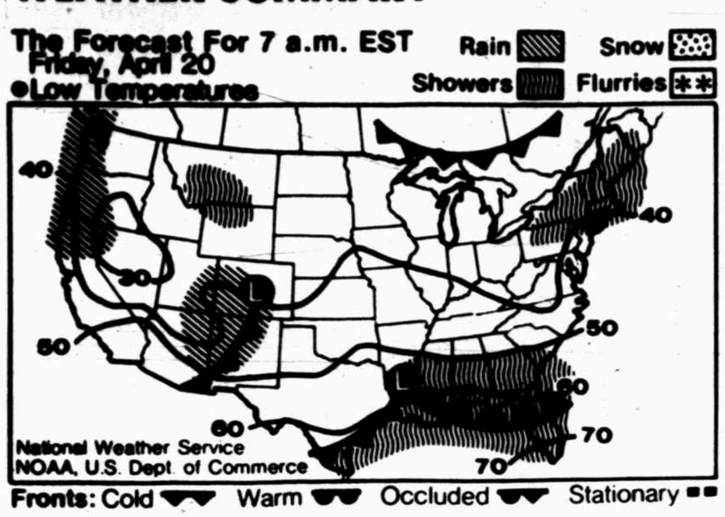
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Showers are forecast for Friday from the Gulf Coast to the southern Atlantic and in parts of the Northeast, with rain predicted for the Southwest and Northwest Pacific Coast, according to the National Weather Service.

Cloudy, windy weather to continue in Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cloudy, windy weather will continue in the Permian Basin, predict forecasters at the National Weather Service, Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight should be a warm and mild interlude with partly cloudy skies, lows in the middle 50s and southerly 10 to 20 mph winds.

Friday's forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms accompanied by gusty southwest winds of 20 to 30 mph. A high in the middle 80s is expected.

Wednesday's high reached 89 — seven degrees below the record 96 set in 1948. An overnight low of 54 was 17 above the all-time low of 37 in 1953.

STATE

A weak cool front moved into Texas before dawn today, bringing milder temperatures to North Texas and the possibility of showers and thundershowers to wide sections of the state.

Widely scattered showers and thundershowers were forecast tonight and Friday in sections of North and West Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Thunderstorms erupted in Northeast Texas late Wednesday, triggering golf-ball size hail in the Mount Pleasant area. Winds gusting to 60 mph were reported along with the storm activity. The shower activity moved eastward into Arkansas and Louisiana before midnight.

Pre-dawn temperatures over the northern half of Texas dipped into the 40s and 50s, while readings in the 60s and 70s dominated the southern portion.

Winds were variable in speed and direction statewide. Gusty winds were possible in West Texas.

Cloudy skies stretched from East Texas southward through the coastal plains. Clouds also covered the Panhandle and South Plains. Otherwise, skies were mostly fair.

The forecast called for showers to develop during the day over the Panhandle and South Plains, as well as sections of North Texas. The shower activity was expected to spread across most of North and West Texas Friday.

Slightly cooler temperatures were on tap Friday for most of Texas. Afternoon temperatures in the 60s and 70s were forecast for the northern half of the state, while the mercury was expected to hit the 80s and 90s over the southern half.

NATION

Rivers topped their banks or threatened to overflow as record snowpacks continued thawing and rain further dampened the flood-plagued West today.

The National Weather Service issued flood warnings for the Owhyee, Portneuf and Snake rivers in Idaho and southeast Oregon today.

About 20 residents of a mobile home park along the bloated Snake River near Ontario, Ore., were evacuated Wednesday, while some 300 residents of Kanosh, Utah, prepared to clear out as heavy runoff strained a dam.

Showers reached from southwest Montana across sections of Oregon, Idaho, Nevada and the California coast, and more rain was forecast in the Pacific Northwest.

Travelers' advisories for snow remained in effect for Northern California's Sierra Nevada, as well as for the Mount Shasta-Siskiyou mountains.

A woman for vice president?

By LANCE WILLIAMS
Hearst Feature Service

In her bid for the vice-presidential nomination, Frances "Cissy" Farenthold made political history at the 1972 Democratic National Convention by piling up 460 votes. But what she remembers most vividly about that feminist moment in the sun was how it played on television.

"I didn't see it, but my friends told me that Cronkite called me 'a lady from Texas who wants to be vice president,'" says Ms. Farenthold, a Houston lawyer and former state legislator. "Then they switched to a commercial."

This summer's convention is likely to prove that Democratic politics have changed mightily — but not completely — since Ms. Farenthold lost her challenge to Missouri Sen. Thomas Eagleton, the ill-starred running mate preferred by presidential candidate George McGovern.

When Ms. Farenthold comes to San Francisco this summer, she will attend a convention at which the idea of a woman vice presidential candidate will be the subject of intense discussion, and at which Democratic women will command unprecedented attention.

Two of the presidential contenders — former Vice President Walter Mondale and Colorado Sen. Gary Hart — have appointed women to key roles in their campaign organizations, and both have promised to consider a woman for the No. 2 spot on the ticket. The third contender, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, already has made a flat-out vow to put a woman on the ticket if he is nominated.

And if the eventual nominee doesn't come through voluntarily, it is likely that representatives from the National Women's Political Caucus and the National Organization for Women will enliven the whole affair. Activists say they will try to stampede the convention into nominating one of a long list of female Democrats, including Martha Layne Collins, Kentucky's newly-elected governor; San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein and several present and former members of Congress.

Like most observers, Ms. Farenthold concedes the odds are still against a woman making her way onto the ticket this year. Nevertheless, she says it is more likely today than at any time in American history.

"There's more of an acceptance of the idea," she said. "When my name was put in nomination in '72, it was virtually ignored by both the political types who run the party and the media."

Why the change? Much of it, of course, reflects changes in American society; in the last decade, people have become more accustomed to seeing women in positions of power and influence. In addition, since the 1972 convention at which Ms. Farenthold made her bid, the Democrats have been tinkering with quotas and party rules to ensure that women are equally represented at nominating conventions.

But in purely political terms, a more compelling reason for the new talk about a woman on the ticket may simply be the so-called "gender gap."

The "gap" was first noted by Dottie Lynch, a Washington-based pollster who now works for Hart. The term describes poll results suggesting that men and women have profound differences of opinion on a long list of political issues, especially President Reagan.

In the 1980 presidential election and in polls conducted regularly since then, Ms. Lynch and other observers have noted that Reagan seems far less popular among women than among men.

According to an analysis prepared for the Democrats by Eleanor Smeal, former president of the National Organization for Women, Reagan's popularity among women consistently trails his popularity among men by anywhere from 4 to 17 points. The differences are most notable on such issues as foreign affairs and the economy.

In the 1980 elections, for the first time in history, the turnout of women voters exceeded that of men; in 1984, according to some estimates, women voters might outnumber men by as many as 6 million.

All this leads Democrats to conclude that the women's vote could be the key to unseating Reagan in 1984 and the party is embarked on an ambitious voter-registration effort aimed at women.

To many women, the way for the party to demonstrate its commitment most clearly — and to capitalize on the gender gap besides — is to run a woman for vice president.

Michigan Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths — a former congresswoman whose name often comes up as a prospective nominee — has argued that it is one sure way to energize a whole new constituency now emerging as a political power.

So does another prospective vice presidential candidate, Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., who led a chant that went, "Don't call me baby, call me vice president," at last year's NOW convention.

Apparently no pollster has yet investigated how much a woman running mate would aid either Mondale or Hart in a race against Reagan.

With the presidential nomination still up for grabs, neither Mondale nor Hart has shown signs of committing himself to a woman on the ticket, perhaps because the vice presidency could be an important convention bargaining chip in the event neither candidate wins a majority of delegates in the remaining primaries. Nevertheless, women such as Ms. Farenthold hope that the nominee won't succumb to traditional views of ticket-balancing and go with a man.

"I really hope they nominate a woman because it's so long overdue," she said. "But there is nothing more traditional than your traditional Democratic male official and party functionary."

Among the possibilites are...

She was elected in 1972 on an anti-Vietnam, pro-environmentalist platform; has a seat on the House Armed Services Committee, where she has been a persistent Pentagon critic; a longtime friend and national campaign co-chair of Colorado Sen. Gary Hart. Because they are from the same state, the Constitution would bar her from serving as Hart's vice president.

NAME: Martha Griffiths
AGE: 72
HIGHLIGHTS: Lieutenant governor of Michigan; 20 years in Congress, 1954 to 1974, retiring as fourth-ranking member on the House Ways and Means Committee; among the most ardent and effective champions of the Equal Rights Amendment; for a time, considered by then-President Gerald Ford as a Supreme Court appointment.

NAME: Lindy Boggs
AGE: 68
HIGHLIGHTS: From New Orleans, elected to the U.S. Congress in 1972 after her husband, House majority leader Hale Boggs, was killed in an Alaska plane crash. Boggs, a former schoolteacher, was her husband's campaign manager in his Louisiana congressional races and served as chairwoman of the 1976 Democratic National Convention. Serves on the House Appropriations Committee and Energy and Water Development Committee; supportive of defense spending, cautious on cultural issues.

NAME: Martha Layne Collins
AGE: 47
HIGHLIGHTS: Elected Kentucky's first female governor in November, thrashing former big league pitcher Jim Bunning with a "Let's Make History" campaign pitch; former clerk of the state court of appeals and lieutenant governor; chairwoman of this summer's convention in San Francisco. With a one-term limit in Kentucky, she succeeded millionaire John Y. Brown, husband of Phyllis George, who failed in an attempt to get a referendum passed so he could succeed himself.

NAME: Dianne Feinstein
AGE: 50
HIGHLIGHTS: Mayor of San Francisco since 1978; county supervisor from 1969, became mayor in 1978 after the assassination of George Moscone; was elected in 1979 and re-elected in 1983 after easily beating back a recall attempt. As mayor, she has been a "centrist," consensus-oriented politician known for fiscal prudence; she has also backed legislation banning handguns and helped engineer the private-public funding of San Francisco's cable car restoration.

NAME: Geraldine Ferraro
AGE: 49
HIGHLIGHTS: Congresswoman from Queens, New York, representing "Archie Bunker's district," as the Almanac of American Politics puts it; a lawyer and head of New York district attorney's victim's bureau, elected to Congress in 1978; member of the House Budget Committee; supported government-financed abortions for the poor despite her Catholic, conservative district.

NAME: Barbara Mikulski
AGE: 48
HIGHLIGHTS: U.S. Representative from Baltimore, former social worker, teacher, chairwoman of the Democratic National Commission on Delegate Selection in 1973 and unsuccessful candidate for the U.S. Senate in 1974. Her Senate run against Republican Charles Mathias boosted her into the House two years later, and she has been re-elected easily since then. In Congress, she is often allied with the so-called "Atari Democrats" on foreign and cultural matters but is an old-style liberal on economic and welfare issues – especially as they relate to women. She serves on the Energy and Commerce Committee.

NAME: Barbara Jordan
AGE: 48
HIGHLIGHTS: A lawyer, former Texas congresswoman and professor at the University of Texas' Lyndon Johnson School of Public Affairs. A highly regarded Texas state senator and protege of Johnson, Jordan became the first black woman ever to go to Congress from the Deep South when she was elected from a Houston district in 1972. She was an outspoken opponent of big military budgets and consistently voted for legislation to improve living conditions for poor people. A spellbinding orator, she won national attention in 1974 as a member of the House Judiciary Committee that voted to impeach Richard Nixon. She was a keynote speaker at the 1976 Democratic convention. She retired from Congress after three terms.

Tearful Romanian couple reunited after two years

DENVER (AP) — When Severin Ciobotaru left his wife in their native Romania, the air was filled with the crack of gunshots. Two years, a hunger strike and untold red tape later, his ears resounded with applause as the couple reunited in a long-awaited embrace.

The young couple's smiles wrote the story's happy ending Wednesday night as Diana Ciobotaru stepped through a doorway at Stapleton International Airport and almost leaped into her husband's arms.

Ciobotaru kept both arms around his wife as they left the airport, accompanied by about 10 friends, and headed home to the town of Yuma on the northeastern plains of Colorado.

"I am happy to be in America. I am happy to be with my husband," Mrs. Ciobotaru told a reporter.

The couple's speechless joy was a counterpoint to their months of agony since Ciobotaru, 28, felt compelled to flee his homeland and his wife tried to gain permission to follow.

Ciobotaru said he decided to try to escape in August 1981, when he was told to join the Communist Party or be fired from his job as a mechanic and go to prison.

For two nights, he made his way to the Yugoslavian border from his hometown of Timisoara in western Romania.

After a stint in an Austrian refugee camp, Ciobotaru arrived in New York on March 30, 1982. He immediately left for Colorado, sponsored by a Lutheran pastor, and got a job in a farm machinery shop in Yuma.

About eight months after Ciobotaru left, Diana, 21, was jailed for two months. She lost her job a a lab technician and worked for two months in a low-paying job at a vegetable factory. When she applied for a passport, she was fired.

The Ciobotarus

Ciobotaru sent her sponsorship papers and money and asked for help from U.S. Rep. Hank Brown, R-Colo., whose office intervened on the couple's behalf.

Mrs. Ciobotaru received her passport and exit visa in August. But then the American Embassy in Bucharest said she was ineligible for a third-country processing visa — a set of papers required for refugees — and that such visas were not being issued, said Laura Skinner, a legislative assistant in Brown's office.

Brown's staff wrote to Secretary of State George Schultz about the case in November.

Finally, on Jan. 1, Mrs. Ciobotaru and about 1,000 others were allowed to apply for visas. She left Romania on April 8, stopping in Italy before coming to the United States.

Reagan, on China trip, praises Japanese trade

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — President Reagan praised Japan today before a group of exporters and said it has been "a fine friend to us in many respects."

The president, setting out on the first leg of an 11,000-mile journey that will take him to China next Thursday, said Japan had helped the U.S. automobile industry "get enough breathing room to recover from the siege of double-digit inflation and record interest rates that nearly destroyed us." He did not elaborate.

Reagan made his remarks in a brief speech prepared for representatives of the export trade industry at the corporate headquarters of the Weyerhaeuser timber products company here.

He pointed out that the United States is China's third largest trading partner and the leading foreign investor in that nation.

"We want to further improve the investment climate," he said, adding that while in China on the third visit there by a sitting president, he will continue current talks on tax and financial investment agreements.

"There are other trade issues we're still resolving with China," Reagan said. "The truth is, in any growing relationship there will be some growing pains."

He said he recognized exporters' problems competing with state-subsidized goods, at times contending with other nations' violations of international agreements.

"Then there is Japan," Reagan said. "Japan's been a fine friend to us in many respects. We still have a lot of trade questions to work out with Tokyo, but we've made some major progress in the last two years."

He noted that Japan recently agreed to nearly double its quota of U.S. beef and ease restrictions on citrus imports."

Reagan also visited a Weyerhaeuser log exporting facility in Tacoma. The timber conglomerate is helping the Chinese replant their depleted forests.

Many of China's forests were devastated in the mid-1960s, when they were randomly consumed for firewood to help fuel China's backyard steel mills during Mao Tse-tung's disastrous effort to industrialize China overnight.

Reagan will not actually arrive in China until a week from today. From Tacoma, he planned to go to his ranch near Santa Barbara for three days of rest and further preparation for the trip.

He will go to Hawaii on Sunday for an additional two days of rest and trip preparation. He will go to Guam, a U.S. possession, on Tuesday for an overnight stay. He will arrive in Peking on Thursday, April 26, and remain in China until May 1.

Reagan already has been extensively briefed by China experts both in and out of government and has even viewed films of President Nixon's 1972 trip to China.

Aides say that Reagan will follow a program for regulating his diet and sleep in order to counteract the effects of jet lag on the trip.

By spreading out the travel, the 73-year-old president will have several days to adjust to the 13-hour time difference between Washington and Peking.

It will be Reagan's first visit to a communist nation, and the first by an American president to China since relations were normalized in 1979. Two other presidents visited before formal relations were established, Nixon in 1972 and Gerald R. Ford in 1975.

Reagan has seven hours of meetings scheduled with Chinese leaders, including Deng Xiaoping, over three days. He will visit the Great Wall and also spend a day in Xian in central China where he will view the spectacular life-size terra-cotta soldiers and horses, dating from about 200 years before Christ, which were discovered in underground vaults in 1974.

Reagan also will visit Shanghai, where he will tour a commune, now called a township, and a factory supported by a U.S. manufacturer.

Four Salvadoran towns attacked

JOCORO, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels staged simultaneous attacks on four towns in northeast El Salvador near the area where a U.S. Army helicopter carrying two U.S. senators was struck by gunfire and forced to land in Honduras.

Five Salvadoran soldiers were killed, nine were wounded and at least seven guerrillas died in the fighting Wednesday in Morazan province, military sources in the area said. Two civilians also were killed, the sources said.

The helicopter carrying Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., was enroute from a Honduran air force base to a U.N.-operated camp for Salvadoran refugees in southwestern Honduras. They landed at Marcala, 55 miles west of the Honduran capital and 10 miles from the Salvadoran province of Morazan.

A second helicopter carrying Diana Negroponte, wife of U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte, also was fired upon but was not hit in the attack, U.S. officials said.

No injuries were reported among the nine passengers and six crew members aboard the two aircraft.

In Nicaragua, rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government attacked a Miskito Indian town in the northeast, killing four civilians and one government soldier, the official newspaper Barricada said Wednesday. It said 14 people were wounded and 32 kidnapped.

The rebels, themselves Miskitos, attacked the village of Sumubila, 24 miles west of the Caribbean port of Puerto Cabezas, on Tuesday, the newspaper said.

Of the clashes between Salvadoran rebels and government troops Wednesday in Morazan, the heaviest fighting was at Jocoro, said Col. Jorge Alberto Cruz, army commander in Morazan.

The fighting continued into the night as the army tried to recover heights seized by the rebels from a company of 180 government troops early Wednesday, another military official in the area said later.

A 15-year-old boy was killed in crossfire at Jocoro and rebels shot a bus driver when he went through a roadbock near the town, military sources said.

Guerrillas attacked Jocoro, 100 miles northeast of San Salvador, early Wednesday, simultaneously attacking the towns of El Divisadero, Osicala and Guatajiagua. They also attacked Chapeltique, 100 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Hart turns to non-labor South

AUSTIN (AP) — After the latest in a series of losses that he blames on big labor's support of Walter Mondale, Gary Hart is trying to spark his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination with help from the non-union South.

Missouri Democrats turned their backs on Hart in party caucuses Wednesday night, giving Mondale a comfortable victory.

The Missouri loss for Hart follows Mondale victories in the industrialized states of Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania.

The only break in the negative string came last weekend when Hart won 17 delegates to Mondale's 15 in Arizona.

But now Hart and his campaign strategists hope to get back into the race by appealing to voters in states where labor is not such a factor.

Hart was continuing a two-day swing through Texas today, starting with a breakfast with Gov. Mark White in Austin before heading to a rally in Tyler. Then he was flying to North Carolina for more rallies.

Hart brought cheers from crowds in oil-conscious Amarillo, Lubbock, Wichita Falls and Austin by proposing a standby tax on imported oil, which he calls "someone else's oil." It's an idea that is appealing to independent oil producers.

He also pleased audiences by indicating his opposition to so-called domestic content legislation — favored by union leaders — that would require many of the parts of imported foreign cars to be made in the United States.

"Mondale is dead wrong on energy issues in our state and Hart is right," said Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, Hart's state coordinator.

Bower capital murder trial scheduled to start Monday

SHERMAN (AP) — The last two jurors in the capital murder trial of Lester Leroy Bower Jr. have been chosen, clearing the way for testimony to start Monday.

Bower, 36, is accused of killing four men in an airplane hangar six months ago. He remains in the Grayson County jail on $400,000 bond since his arrest in January.

Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor; Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County jailer; Jerry Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; and Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer, were found shot in the head Oct. 8, 1983, in the hangar on Tate's ranch north of Sherman.

Police said an ultralight aircraft was missing from.

South Korean babies come to new homes

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Although 4-month-old Jason Mark Snailer wasn't delivered by the stork, he did fly a long way to be united with his new parents.

Jason was one of four Korean infants who arrived at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport on Wednesday after a 24-hour flight from Seoul, South Korea.

The Dillon International agency in Tulsa, Okla., which places Korean babies with U.S. families, was responsible for setting up the children with new homes. Agency representative Brenda O'Bannion said the infants, all full Koreans, were abandoned or given up to the agency by their parents.

Mark and Laura Snailer, of Fort Worth, along with the other three couples, sat nervously or paced the airport terminal as they tried to calm one another.

"This kind of waiting has to be worse than what other fathers go through," said Snailer. "Under natural circumstances you just let nature take its course. Here all we have is a picture and a flight time, and that makes us a little more anxious."

Jason, a plump, bright-eyed baby, looked startled by the flashing camera lights and noise as a flight attendant put him into Mrs. Snailer's arms. He held his mother's hair and looked around nervously at his new family and friends.

The Snailers, who learned Saturday that Jason was scheduled to leave Korea in a few days, had planned for his arrival for weeks. A bedroom in their east Fort Worth home was filled with layettes, baby clothes and stuffed animals.

Snailer said adoption agencies told him they would have to wait five or six years to adopt an American baby. The couple decided they did not want to wait that long and contacted the Dillon agency in November. They were confirmed as adoptive parents in March.

The Snailers, who are white, said they had received good reaction from their neighbors, families and friends about adopting a baby of a different culture and background.

"Our area is well-mixed. Our church community has a large Vietnamese and Oriental community," Mrs. Snailer said. "We don't fell we've done anything special or different by adopting a Korean baby, but I guess we have."

Mrs. Snailer said preparations for Jason's arrival included buying special food.

"In Korea they feed babies powdered rice milk." she said. "They have trouble digesting milk products, so he will be on a milk-free soybean formula. Maybe later he will be able to tolerate milk in small amounts."

The three other adoptive couples are Fred and Ellen Frontz of Irving, Derrick and Linda Odom of Austin and Jeannie and Dan Baucum of Midlothian.

Bensten to sponsor flower-planting bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says he will introduce legislation next week that would encourage states to plant wildflowers rather than grass along highways.

"The wildflowers would also mean millions of dollars saved at time when both state and federal government are looking hard for ways to hold down spending," Bensten, D-Houston, said Wednesday in a prepared statement.

Bentsen is the ranking member of the Senate Transportation Subcommittee. He said he will ask the panel next week to adopt his bill as an amendment to highway legislation.

"Lady Bird Johnson helped us move in the direction of appreciating and conserving the natural beauty of this great country," Bentsen said.

He said the Texas Highway Department has experimented with wildflower plants in highways in 24 counties.

Mattox hearing postponed

AUSTIN (AP) — Today's scheduled pretrial hearing on a commercial bribery indictment against Attorney General Jim Mattox has been postponed until May 3.

The indictment charges that Mattox "in the course of a telephone conversation" with an attorney of the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski committed commercial bribery by threatening to hold up approval of certain bond issues pending in the attorney general's office.

Mattox, according to the indictment, tried to keep attorneys from questioning his sister, Janice Mattox, a Dallas attorney, in connection with a lawsuit filed against Mobil Oil Corp. by the state and South Texas rancher Clinton Manges.

Suit alleges waste dumping

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas attorney general's office has filed suit against Diamond Shamrock Corp. and its subsidiartySigmor Corp., alleging that they have been illegally disposing of solid wastes and wastewater at a petroleum refinery in Three Rivers.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said the suit was filed Wednesday in Live Oak County at the request of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

The suit alleges approximately 200 violations involving both hazardous wastes and wastewater discharges. Mattox said effluent from the refinery was being discharged into the Frio River, running into the Nueces River and then into Lake Corpus Christi.

Under Texas law violators of Texas pollution laws may be fined up to $25,000 for each day and each violation.

Firms bid for oil leases

HOUSTON (AP) — Exxon Company U.S.A. and two other petroleum firms jointly made the highest bid of $205 million for federal oil leases off the Alaskan coast, Exxon officials said.

Exxon, Sun Company Inc. and Elf Aquitaine bid for 63 blocks in the Navarin Basin in the Bering Sea, Exxon announced in a release Wednesday.

Exxon's portion of the bids was $168 million, the released stated.

Exxon entered the highest bid in the Outer Continental Shelf sale — $33.39 million for one block.

Training programs change

AUSTIN (AP) — Vocational education programs in Texas public schools are being changed to make certain students have the training needed for the modern job market, the state Advisory Council for Technical-Vocational Education says.

Noting that 500,000 students in 950 school districts are enrolled in vocational education programs, council chairman Will Reece said Wednesday that 1,102 old programs were dropped and 1,629 new ones added to respond to new job needs.

The new programs included electronics, computer maintenance, data processing and business machine repair, he said.

Socialite to be retried

FORT WORTH (AP) — A state appeals court has rejected contentions by lawyers for Fort Worth socialite Pamela Hutto-Loffland that trying her again on a murder charge would constitute double jeopardy.

The 2nd Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that Mrs. Loffland should stand trial in connection with the 1982 shooting death of her husband, John D. Loffland. Mrs. Loffland is accused of conspiring with Luckey M. Wright, a Fort Worth hair stylist, to pay two men $500 to kill her husband shortly before the couple was to be divorced.

Mrs. Loffland's first trial ended in a mistrial after one prosecution witness had testified.

Mother to take baby from foster parents

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who says she had a choice of giving up her very ill newborn daughter for adoption or letting the child be transferred to a charity hospital has won the right to take the 2½-year-old girl back from her foster parents.

Jurors awarded Eileen Cochrane to her natural mother, computer programmer Patty Cochrane on Wednesday, finding that the Homes of St. Mark used duress and undue influence in persuading the mother to let foster parents care for the baby. The child is to go home with her mother for the first time Friday.

Ms. Cochrane said officials of the adoption agency pressured her to give up Eileen because the child's medical bills exceeded $10,000.

Eileen was born Nov. 24, 1981, with incomplete lungs and intestines and is deaf. Ms. Cochrane signed legal papers allowing her to be put up for adoption about a week later.

But the child's condition improved in about a month.

"A little before Christmas, I was told she was going to make it," Ms. Cochrane said. "I realized I couldn't leave my baby, that I really could make it and there was no reason for me to not raise her."

But, she said, the adoption agency refused to let her reverse her decision and the child was turned over to Jim and Peggy Fore, who have raised the baby since.

"That just blew me away, because (they had) told me (they) could just rip up those papers" if she changed her mind, Ms. Cochrane said.

"Girls in this situation should have a legal time period when they can change their minds," Ms. Cochrane said. "We have a 30-day period to return a refrigerator, but we don't have even a minute to change our minds about where our children will be spending their lives."

An attorney for the adoption agency, Don Royall, said he doubts Ms. Cochrane was ever threatened, certainly not by the agency's executive director, Joann Caldwell.

"I've known her for 20 years and it's not within her capacity as a human being to do that," Royall said.

Ms. Cochrane said she was told the Homes of St. Mark "needed a guarantee of who would pay her (Eileen's) hospital bills."

"I signed because they told me that if I didn't, they would have to move her to a charity hospital," Ms. Cochrane said. "But I was with her every minute in intensive care because she needed someone to be with her."

The Fores filed suit in September under a new state law allowing foster parents to sue for parental rights.

Fore said he and his wife are crushed by the decision.

"Two years ago, Missy was placed in our home for temporary care," he said. "We have loved and nourished this child and watched her grow into a beautiful person who considers our home her home."

Fore read a statement after the decision in which he said he could not describe "the anguish our family and friends feel...We feel no animosity or ill will toward Miss Cochrane and will continue to work toward providing Missy with the best possible transition into Miss Cochrane's home."

Ms. Cochrane said she has sympathized with the Fores, who attend her church, throughout the trial.

"When she (Mrs. Fore) would cry, it would make me cry," she said. One of us had to hurt but Eileen is my baby. I could not quit."

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with rules and orders promulgated by the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of a public hearing to begin at 10 a.m. on Monday, May 14, 1984, in the offices of the Public Utility Commission, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Austin, Texas, concerning proposals made by the company to add three optional services and delete two services from the list of local exchange services available to its Texas customers.

Proposed additions to the local exchange tariffs include an optional Local Measured Service under which all residence customers and single-line business customers could pay monthly rates less than flat rate for one-party service, with an additional charge for each completed outgoing call to be determined by the time of day, distance and duration of each call; and a subsidized LIFELINE local service to be made available to qualified individuals, as determined by the Public Utility Commission. The monthly rate for LIFELINE service would include an allowance of 25 outgoing calls per month, plus a charge for each additional call.

Proposed for deletion from the local exchange tariffs are one-element measured service offerings for residence customers and single-line business customers, but current customers would not be affected.

The company does not anticipate that these additional services will result in an increase in revenue to Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso al Publico

Por medio del presente aviso y en conformidad con las reglas y dictámenes de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, la compañía Southwestern Bell Telephone anuncia la audiencia pública que se llevará a cabo a partir de las 10 de la mañana del día lunes 14 de mayo de 1984 en las oficinas de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Austin, Texas, con respecto a la propuesta de la compañía, que consiste en agregar tres servicios opcionales y suprimir dos servicios de la lista de servicios telefónicos locales a disposición del usuario en Texas.

Las adiciones propuestas al arancel del servicio telefónico local incluyen un Servicio Medido Local opcional según el cual todos los clientes residenciales y los clientes comerciales con línea única pagarían tarifas mensuales menores que la tarifa fija para servicios de línea única, con un cargo adicional por cada llamada completa efectuada desde ese teléfono, establecido según la hora, la distancia y la duración de cada llamada; así como un servicio local subvencionado de LIFELINE que estaría disponible para determinadas personas, según lo establezca la Comisión de Servicios Públicos. La tarifa mensual para el servicio de LIFELINE incluiría 25 llamadas mensuales con un cargo adicional por cada llamada en exceso de 25.

Se propone suprimir del arancel del servicio telefónico local las opciones de servicio medido de un elemento para clientes residenciales y clientes comerciales con línea única, pero esto no afectaría a los clientes actuales.

La compañía no espera que estos servicios adicionales produzcan un aumento de ingresos para Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Toda persona que desee intervenir o participar en el proceso debe notificar a la Comisión lo antes posible. Las solicitudes de intervención, participación o información deben dirigirse a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Para obtener mayor información debe llamar a: Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223 o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para sordos.

Number of serious crimes reported to police dropped 7 percent in 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of serious crimes reported to police in the United States dropped 7 percent in 1983, the FBI said today. It was the second significant decline in two years and the largest drop since 1960.

"This marvelous news proves we are beginning to win the battle against crime with some of the most significant initiatives and results in years," Attorney General William French Smith said.

The 1983 preliminary figures, which are subject to revision, showed declines in all seven major crimes on the FBI Crime Index, in every region of the nation and in every size community.

The 7 percent decline compares to a 3 percent overall decline in 1982, which was the first significant decrease since 1977. There also was a tiny decline in 1981, but Justice Department officials considered it statistically insignificant.

FBI Director William H. Webster noted that since 1960 there has not previously been a significant two-year drop in reported crime.

The FBI preliminary report said the violent crimes of murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault were down 5 percent from 1982. The far more numerous property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft dropped 7 percent.

The Reagan administration launched a campaign against violent crime in 1981, particularly drug-related crimes, but the overwhelming majority of the crimes on the FBI index are state and local rather than federal offenses.

Citing the federal initiatives, Smith said, "The public is getting tougher about crime. So are we...It is no coincidence that the decreases in our crime rate come at a time when more criminals are behind bars than ever before."

Academic observers of the crime problem have long predicted that the mid-1980s would produce a drop in crime figures as the post-World War II baby boom generation outgrew the historic crime-prone ages of the late teens and early 20s.

Noting there are many influences on crime, Webster said the figures "may signal that crime, as measured by the Crime Index, is being managed effectively by the nation's law enforcement community." He added that "greater citizen involvement in crime resistance is equally significant in diminishing lawlessness in our society."

The preliminary FBI Crime Index report gives only percentage changes and not specific, total numbers for reported crimes. The final 1982 FBI report showed 12,857,200 reported serious crimes. The all-time high was reached in 1980, when there were 13,295,400 reported crimes.

Mayor's car stolen right out of driveway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Woe be it to anyone caught driving around in a 1975 Buick Electra, license plate E657205. It's the mayor's car, stolen right out of his driveway, and every cop in town is looking for it.

The blue four-door was stolen from outside Mayor Tom Bradley's stately mansion sometime between 10:30 p.m. Tuesday and 5 a.m. Wednesday, police Lt. Robert Martin said.

A police report signed by Larry Kounlias, one of the mayor's security guards, said the city-owned car was locked and that Bradley had no valuable personal possessions inside.

Martin declined to suggest how the car might have been spirited away from the driveway of Bradley's home.

However, he said that since the theft involved more than an ordinary citizen, police radio alerts were going out to patrol cars every half-hour.

"It will turn up real quick, because everybody in the world's looking for it," Martin said.

Police round up hairy customers

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Two hairy tarantulas were taken into custody along with a man who allowed them to run loose on the front steps of a library, police say.

"It was the creepiest thing," said Terry Kutolowski, head librarian at a branch of the Broward County Library in Fort Lauderdale.

Kutolowski said he called police Tuesday after petrified patrons began piling up in the lobby.

Andrew Polizzi, owner of the creatures, was arrested and charged with trespassing. The spiders were confined in a carton provided by Polizzi, then placed on the front seat of the patrol car.

Former professor never recovered from losing his position

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A former professor who stormed the president's office at the University of South Carolina, seized a student at gunpoint and killed himself had become increasingly bitter and frustrated after losing his job, officials and friends say.

Philip Zeltner, demanding to be reinstated to the faculty, shot himself in the head Wednesday in the office of President James Holderman, where he had barricaded himself after seizing Pat Bowman, police said.

Bowman, a student aide to Holderman, was released unharmed after about two hours.

Zeltner then talked by phone with Holderman, who had been out of his office, and with lawmen and a local television weatherman, but hung up and within 30 minutes was dead.

Zeltner, who was named the university's teacher of the year in 1978, lost his job as an assistant professor of philosophy in 1982 after failing to gain tenure. Over the next two years, he worked only intermittently, growing increasingly bitter and withdrawn as unemployment persisted, said Ward Briggs, an associate professor at the university.

Zeltner thought of the classroom as "a sanctified area," Briggs said. "It was a domain where a pure exchange of ideas could take place. When he lost his job, he had nothing."

"He was a natural-born teacher," said Morse Peckham, a friend and retired philosophy professor. "He was very interested in students...He could make very complex ideas clear to someone who had very little background."

But in the bureaucratic, political side of college teaching, the New York native who came South to pursue his beloved profession was not as skilled, said Briggs.

The 37-year-old teacher liked to sleep late, wanted to dress like the students and loved teaching far more than the other required side of the profession, publishing, he said.

Zeltner got to know the university president and attempted to parlay that to advantage in squabbles with the chairman of the philosophy department, according to Briggs.

"It all started with a schedule problem," he said. "Phil didn't like to get up before 11 in the morning. The department chairman wanted to give him a 10 o'clock class. Phil went to Holderman."

Friends say there were personality conflicts in the department the year Zeltner was considered for tenure, which junior faculty members must gain to guarantee keeping their jobs. Zeltner was denied the safeguard by his colleagues, then by a tenure panel and finally by Holderman and the university board of trustees.

University of Pennsylvania professor Ake Sjoberg holds a clay tablet containing Sumerian medical prescriptions at the University of Pennsylvania Museum in Philadelphia Wednesday.

Scholars struggle with Sumerian dictionary

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A group of scholars compiling the first modern dictionary of Sumerian, the world's oldest written language, are grappling with the ancient culture's habit of having many words for one object — including 175 words for "date palm."

The project is under way at the University of Pennsylvania, where Professor Ake Sjoberg and others are deciphering 5,000-year-old clay tablets for what is to be an 18-volume work.

Penn's 30,000 Sumerian and Babylonian clay tablets, discovered in Iraq by the university's archeologists in 1887, contain more information than from any period of history before the history of the printing press, Sjoberg said Wednesday.

But understanding the complex Sumerian language, written in wedge-shaped cuneiform script, has been a tedious process.

"Sumerian is a completely isolated language. We really don't know where the Sumerians came from," said Sjoberg, the dictionary's editor. "No other language is even close."

The Sumerians lived in the lower Tigris and Euphrates valleys, in what is now Iraq, and were expert farmers who developed intricate irrigation systems. Their language died out around 2000 B.C., after the Sumerians fell under the sway of the Babylonians.

Students protest rules

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — About 2,000 students of Notre Dame University, which now has no rules governing alcohol use, marched on the administration building to protest new restrictions on drinking that could mean expulsion for repeat offenders.

The protesters were "boisterous but not belligerent" Wednesday as they hoisted beer cans and banners and listened to speeches during the noon rally, said university spokesman Michael O. Garvey.

The rules, announced Tuesday and due to take effect in the fall, make public drunkenness punishable, restrict alcohol consumption for students under 21 and limit the size of informal dorm parties where alcohol is served.

Transplant successful

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Back-to-back heart and kidney transplants in a 45-year-old man whose first donated heart had failed were "a monumental achievement," says the head of the American Society of Transplant Surgeons.

Dr. Oscar Salvatierra said the weekend operations in which Thomas Johnson of Altoona, Pa., received a heart Saturday and a new kidney the next day, were the first back-to-back heart-kidney transplants in the United States.

Johnson, who received both organs from one donor, was in serious but stable condition Wednesday at Presbyterian-University Hospital in Pittsburgh, able to sit up in bed, drink liquids and talk with his family, said hospital spokeswoman Judy Blanchard.

Man sues archdiocese

CHICAGO (AP) — Claiming the Archdiocese of Chicago "blacklisted" his works after he sued over alleged illegal photocopying, religious-music publisher Dennis J. Fitzpatrick has asked a jury to award him damages of more than $31 million.

In closing arguments Wednesday in the U.S. District Court trial, the attorney for FEL Publications Ltd. said the alleged copyright infringement by teachers and choir directors in the Roman Catholic schools cost Fitzpatrick millions of dollars he could have earned on his published works.

De Lorean attorney calls agents sharks 'in feeding frenzy' at trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Undercover government agents mercilessly stalked John Z. De Lorean like sharks "in a feeding frenzy" when they've "smelled blood," the automaker's lawyer told jurors in his drug-trafficking trial.

"This case is a sick case. It is a tragedy and a travesty of justice," attorney Howard Weitzman said Wednesday of the government sting operation that brought the silver-haired De Lorean to trial on charges of conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine.

The prosecutor, however, promised to prove that De Lorean was desperate enough to plan cocaine and heroin deals as his dream of building a gull-winged sports car in Northern Ireland turned into a financial disaster.

"This case is about money, drugs, pride and ego," said Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh. "It is about a man whose desire to succeed led him into the dirty world of narcotics and to this courtroom and the end of his dream."

Weitzman made his opening statements in a packed courtroom, 18 months after his client's arrest at a Los Angeles airport hotel created international headlines.

He told jurors to scrutinize videotapes of the arrest skeptically, suggesting the scene was choreographed by government agents who were "trying to make John De Lorean look guilty."

Weitzman, arguing that De Lorean was the innocent victim of a frame-up, accused agents of inventing the case because they were hungry for a major celebrity arrest to enhance their careers.

"They were in a feeding frenzy," he said. "There was no stopping these people. They smelled blood. This was the big guy."

He repeatedly referred to the agents as "these sharks."

Walsh, illustrating his opening statement with elaborate charts and enlarged photographs, depicted De Lorean as a dreamer of big dreams, whose thirst for success after resigning as a General Motors Corp. executive lured him into "the grimy underworld of narcotics."

"This case is a story of a man with a dream, John De Lorean, and how he turned that dream into a nightmare composed of failure, drugs and disgrace," Walsh told the six-man, six-woman jury.

Officials search for abducted secretary

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Authorities monitored a psychiatric hospital's telephones and nearly 100 law officers searched today for a secretary who said she was abducted by two teen-age males who want to trade her for a 17-year-old female patient.

Bebe Bryant, 51, telephoned Children's Treatment Service at 10 a.m. Wednesday to say her captors had demanded the release of a girl who has been a patient at the children's mental health hospital for more than a year, said Jefferson County police officer Bob Yates.

Mrs. Bryant called again at 10:50 a.m., repeating the demands and describing her captors as being 16 to 18 years old and wearing red and blue plaid shirts. She said they drove away in a white van, then switched to a rust-colored Chevette.

Neither Mrs. Bryant nor anyone claiming to be her captors have been heard from since.

"At this point, they are treating this as a real-life situation," said Yates.

"Any demand that we can meet, we'll meet them tonight," said Jefferson County police Sgt. Larry Hassman. Both police and hospital officials, however, said the hospital patient would not be released.

Police found a white van, believed to be the getaway vehicle, abandoned on a Louisville street about three hours after Mrs. Bryant disappeared.

Officers also attached a recorder to the telephone at the center, which serves children under age 18, and to other phones which might be used by Mrs. Bryant or her abductors.

"Obviously we want to have some communication with Mrs. Bryant or the two teen-agers. We'll have to take a wait-and-see attitude," Yates said.

Police released a photograph of Mrs. Bryant, who has worked at the facility for four months.

An alert also was issued for Mrs. Bryant's lime-colored 1973 Cadillac, which was missing from the center's parking lot following the abduction. Police said she was seen driving it to work about 9 a.m.

Police and hospital officials refused to release any information on the teen-age patient Mrs. Bryant said her captors wanted released. They said they believed the boys did not have guns.

In her calls, Mrs. Bryant said she had been blindfolded and had not been harmed.

Jefferson County Police Sgt. Larry Hassman said both phone conversations were "relatively short."

The county police said all their search efforts failed to yield any results, including a high-speed chase after what turned out to be the wrong car.

About noon Wednesday, officers in a helicopter spotted a car which matched the desciption of one of the cars. About 10 police cars sped about 20 miles only to find they had the wrong car.

British police officers stand in front of the cover placed across the road into St. James' Square in London Wednesday in which the Libyan People's Bureau is situated. The square has been completely closed off the public after yesterday's shooting incident killing a woman police officer and wounding 11 others.

Britons' morale high, but no end in sight to siege

LONDON (AP) — With the dignity and aplomb that so often carries Britons through tough spots, citizens caught up in the Libyan shooting drama say their morale is good despite the death of a spunky policewoman and resulting sieges in Tripoli and London.

"We have plenty of food, everything is perfectly normal, we are happy, the dog is happy, the sun is shining," said Julia Miles, the upper-crust wife of Britain's ambassador in Libya who spent 24 hours besieged in her Tripoli home while her husband and 24 other Britons were trapped in the embassy.

"We have water and electricity. We are carrying on as normal," Mrs. Miles told The Associated Press in Rome by telephone.

"Everyone's in good spirits here," agreed Terry O'Connell, a diplomat at the British Embassy in Libya. "Morale has always been good here, ever since the incident started."

The incident started Tuesday when a gunman in the Libyan Embassy in London sprayed submachine gun fire on a group of peaceful anti-Libyan dissidents protesting outside, killing a British policewoman and injuring 11 protesters.

Yvonne Fletcher, 25, was shown on British television crumpling to the pavement with a fatal bullet wound.

Her mother, Queenie Fletcher, appeared with quiet dignity before reporters and television cameras at Scotland Yard a few hours later. In a voice that sometimes quavered, but with no tears, she spoke of her daughter's ambition.

"All I know is that she wanted to be a policewoman from the time she was three years old. She never wanted to do anything else," said Mrs. Fletcher, 51.

"She said if anything happened to her, we should remember it was her life," the mother said.

Immediately after the shooting, the Libyan Embassy was ringed with police who prevented those inside from leaving. The British Embassy in Tripoli and homes of diplomats there then were put under a similar siege.

In Tripoli today, the homes and embassy remained under guard, but those inside were permitted to move freely.

In London, however, there was no end in sight to the siege in the historic St. James's Square. The Times of London quoted unidentified Libyan sources as saying Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy ordered his countrymen inside the embassy to wait out the British police "even if it takes a year."

Police, as well, seemed ready to settle in for long negotiations. Throughout the night and early today, vans carried in supplies to officers stationed in a building three doors from the embassy. Heaters, fans and even hatstands were delivered.

Initially, some spectators gathered outside the barriers that surround the square and a fashionable shopping district. But as dawn broke today, early morning commuters walked past the 20-foot high blue plastic sheets that block off the streets with barely a second glance.

The screens, erected to heighten the Libyans' sense of isolation, already have become routine.

There has been some anger here. Workers at London's Heathrow International Airport refused to work on a Libyan Arab Airlines passenger flight which arrived from Tripoli on Wednesday. Air France's managers had to check baggage.

And an editorial in Wednesday's Daily Express tabloid raged, "Clear out this nest of murder. Libyan representatives in Britain should be told to go."

But The Guardian, a liberal newspaper, echoed the more prevailing tone. Its editorial urged "some choking back of anger" to prevent "an even worse series of events."

Couple jumps from Eiffel tower

PARIS (AP) — A London couple using a single parachute jumped from the top floor of the Eiffel Tower and landed safely on a grass field 905 feet below.

The couple hid the steerable stunt parachute in a backpack Wednesday and slipped by surveillance television cameras. Management of the tourist landmark was investigating to see how the pair got past the security.

The jumpers were identified by sources connected with the stunt as Mike McCarthy, in his 30s, and Amanda Tucker, in her 20s.

It wasn't the first successful parachute jump from the tower. A Frenchman identified only as Hervieu made a successful jump in 1911.

Army will discharge soldiers

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli army will discharge 700 soldiers, most of them officers, from its standing army because of defense budget cuts, Israel Radio reports.

Its report Wednesday quoted the army's deputy chief of staff, Maj. Gen. David Ivri.

The discharges would reduce by nearly 4 percent the regular troop strength estimated for Israel by the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies. The institute says Israeli's regular army has 18,000 troops. Israeli authorities do not publish statistics on troop strength.

The defense budget was cut by 9 percent for 1984-85 in line with government austerity measures.

Israel's core regular army can be increased to an estimated 450,000 troops if all civilian reservists are called up. At any one time, about 135,000 soldiers are in national service, the institute says.

Blackout leaves citizens powerless

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — More than 50 million Brazilians were blacked out for over an hour when a technical fault knocked out a major electrical distribution system.

Vera Prado, spokeswoman for the government-owned power company Furnas, said "an excess of current" somewhere in the system caused a breakdown that left most of Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Minas Gerais and Espirito Santo states without electricity Wednesday evening.

Those states, in the east-central and southeast regions of South America's biggest nation, contain Brazil's three biggest cities and most of its main factories.

During the blackout, crowds at two Sao Paulo train stations attacked rail facilities.In one station, security guards shot and wounded five people among a mob, according to state police Sgt. Jose Nunes Siqueira. In another station, he said, a crowd attacked and burned two railway cars, then stoned fire trucks arriving to put out the blaze.

Group's founder quits organization

MOSCOW (AP) — Oleg Radzinksy, a founding member of an unofficial Soviet peace group who is serving a five-year exile in Siberia, says in a letter to Western journalists that he quit the organization.

Radzinsky, 25, said he longer wishes to be identified with "the group for establishing trust between the USSR and U.S.A" — the only known peace organization operating without official sanction.

The letter, received in Moscow on Wednesday, was dated April 5 and postmarked Asino, a remote Siberian settlement. It was the second letter from Radzinsky to reach Western reporters. The first, which denounced President Reagan, was dismissed by other members of the peace group as having been written under official pressure.

Group members said it would not have reached Western reporters unless authorities wanted the letter made public.

Radzinsky helped start the peace group in 1982. He was sentenced to one year in prison and five years' internal exile last fall on charges of anti-Soviet agitation, but started his exile in Siberia at once because he already had been in jail for a year.

Fugitive surrenders on television

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A fugitive convict accused of financing terrorism with proceeds from a fraud scheme walked onto the set of a television news show and surrendered on the air.

Carlos Rodriguez Rodriguez appeared at the WAPA studios Tuesday night and gave himself up during the late night broadcast.

Rodriguez was convicted April 14 of bank fraud and heroin possession, but was not in the courtroom when the verdict was announced. He had been free during trial on $120,000 bond and failed to appear after prosecutors filed a motion to revoke bail.

The prosecutors' motion alleged Rodriguez was connected with subversive groups and used proceeds from the $50,000 bank fraud to finance terrorist activities. U.S. District Judge Gilberto Gierbolini declared Rodriguez a fugitive when he did not show up for the hearing on the bail motion.

Rodriguez appeared at the television station with two attorneys, who said he chose to surrender publicly because he feared for his life. He then was taken to prison, according to anchorman Pedro Rosa Nales.

Commission recommends videtapes

OTTAWA (AP) — Trials would be shorter and evidence more accurate if police used videotapes to record statements end confessions of suspected criminals, the Law Reform Commission says.

The commission released a working paper today recommending videotape as an alternative to current police practices of writing a suspect's comments in a notebook or typing them on a form.

Police officers would be protected from unwarranted allegations of misconduct and suspects would benefit from a videotape showing the actual interrogation and the circumstances in which a statement was made.

The paper says judges would be in a far better position to evaluate the admissibility of a videotaped statement.

Jurors would be better able to evaluate the weight to be attached to a statement because they would have the extra benefit of observing the suspect's expressions and mannerisms as the statement was given.

Confessions are routinely videotaped in the Bronx and other boroughs of New York, the commission says.

Cabinet approves reform plan

PARIS (AP) — A plan to increase state control over private schools, which prompted huge protest marches earlier this year, has been approved in modified form by the Cabinet of Socialist President Francois Mitterrand.

The measure now goes to National Assembly, where the Socialists hold an outright majority.

The proposal, approved by the Cabinet on Wednesday, would tighten the government's control over the nation's 10,100 private schools, more than 90 percent of them Roman Catholic.

We wish to thank all those persons for their support of my candidacy for School Board Trustee in the April 7 election. A very special thanks for the financial support and an extra thanks to the 3,200 plus persons who supported me at the polls. A person's greatest assets are his friends.

Earning trust

Political accountability is a cherished American tradition. It matters not whether politicians are in or out of office, we want them to be held accountable for their words and deeds.

When questions are raised they can respond with pride or apology, defensively or offensively, as the case may be, but they have a solid obligation to face up squarely to whatever they have said or done. "Accountability" is a key byword in the American political vocabulary.

Answering questions can be painful, or pleasurable, but it is an historic duty we inherited from our democratic forebears in the British Parliament.

President Reagan has been doing his duty in faithful fashion in the past few days by answering critics about the mining of Nicaraguan ports. Not everyone is satisfied with his answers, but he is not ducking the criticism. He admits responsibility, and goes on from there.

The record of the Democratic candidates for the presidency is more spotty, but here again there are some good examples of a willingness to stand up and be counted. One may disagree with Gary Hart's proposal to pull out of Central America entirely, but he doesn't duck the criticism. He defends his position. The same goes with Walter Mondale and his ties to organized labor. Labor's endorsement may be embarrassing at times, but Mr. Mondale takes responsibility for his relationship with the unions.

Jesse Jackson has not been doing so well. At first he denied the now notorious ethnic slurs, but later decided to confess. When the United States Department of Education asked the social-service group, PUSH for Excellence, once headed by Mr. Jackson, to return $708,431 in allegedly improperly spent funds, the candidate took evasive action. He cried "harassment."

The American public would have applauded, in the true American spirit of candor and fair play, if Mr. Jackson had addressed the issue and not sidestepped it. To hold oneself accountable, no matter how embarrassing, is always a respectable gesture.

All of this has nothing to do with blacks or whites or other ethnic groups. It has everything to do with the way presidents and those who want to be president should conduct themselves, and their moral obligation to the Americans whose trust they would like to have and to hold.

That kind of trust is earned through political accountability.

Murder is the word

A shootout between Ku Klux Klansmen, American Nazis and Communist Workers in the streets of Greensboro, N.C., in 1979 left five dead, seven wounded and a stain of blood which the justice system has yet to expunge.

The slaughter occurred at a "Death to The Klan" rally sponsored by the Communist Workers Party, a left-wing fringe group. The dead were all communists. The killers have yet to be brought to justice.

Six Klansmen and three Nazis were accused of the murders. Video tapes made by television reporters on the scene appear to show them firing at the communists. Evidence presented by U.S. prosecutors showed that the Klansmen and Nazis fired first, killing and wounding 11 communists, before the communists fired their first shot. But, an all-white jury in Winston-Salem acquitted the accused Klansmen and Nazis. This was the second acquittal for five of the nine defendants.

We don't know what happened that bloody day in Greensboro. We don't know if the accused were the actual killers, or if someone else fired the bullets. We no more support the aims of the Communist Workers Party than we tolerate the racism of the KKK or the viciousness of the American Nazis.

But murder is murder. Courts which whitewash crimes against unpopular individuals and communities which protect killers from punishment reduce law to savagery and open up society to gang war between extremists.

Another View:

Savimbi's support

Ever wonder what became of Jonas Savimbi, charismatic founder of UNITA, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola?

Pro-Western, anti-communist, an articulate spokesman for democracy for his native Angola, he has been bucking repression and struggling for liberty for his people for a quarter-century, first against colonial Portugal, more recently against an assortment of Cuban, East German and Soviet troops serving a communist regime there.

Fear not: Savimbi is alive and well in the struggle for independence. UNITA still controls nearly a third of Angolan territory, and is widely esteemed by natives elsewhere in the country.

So why is it, asks the National Conservative Caucus, that our State Department is now pressuring the government of South Africa to withdraw its support for Savimbi, while we assign a monitoring team to Windhoek, Namibia, to assure no more support for UNITA is forthcoming.

And why are we insisting on U.N.-supervised elections in Namibia, now under South African jurisdiction, while we make no demands at all for elections in Marxist Angola and its totalitarian dictatorship?

Why, indeed?

Gemayel arrogance nixed peace

WASHINGTON — What went wrong in Lebanon? Why did President Reagan's well-intentioned effort to bring peace to that troubled land fail? These questions are sure to be asked in an election year. If nothing else, the killing of 240 U.S. Marines demands answers.

Jack Anderson

I may be able to cast a little light on the tragedy of Lebanon. One cause of the fiasco was too much reliance on Lebanese President Amin Gemayel — a weak leader given to fits of moodiness, who seemed more concerned about the trappings than the responsibilities of power.

My evidence comes from a secret document drafted by the Israelis and signed by U.S. mediator Robert McFarlane. It might have served as the basis for a negotiated settlement of the long-standing differences among the factions fighting for power in Lebanon.

This intriguing document was obtained by my associate Lucette Lagnado, who traveled to Israel to track down the story of missed opportunities, well-meaning intermediaries and political obstruction that brought first the blunders, then the failures.

The document was approved by the United States in a cover letter typed in the King David hotel in Jerusalem, on hotel stationery with an old typewriter provided by the management. It was signed by McFarlane and dated Aug. 22, 1983.

The document was intended to provide a basis for fruitful negotiations between Gemayel's government and the Druse minority headed by Walid Jumblat. It called for Gemayel's Christian regime to make concessions to the Druse.

The Israelis' concern was clear: They were preparing to withdraw their troops from the strategic Shouf mountain region. They knew that, once they were gone, the Lebanese army would face a stiff challenge from the Druse — unless Gemayel made concessions and an agreement was reached.

So the Israelis prepared the working paper that would serve as a basis for negotiations between Gemayel and Jumblat. McFarlane looked it over and "said he believed this was a good basis for the beginning of a dialogue and negotiations," according to a high Israeli official. McFarlane signed it.

The Israelis then took the document to Jumblat. "He got really agitated," said an Israeli source, "and claimed that we had completely ignored the most important demands the Druse had."

But when told that both the Israelis and the Americans stood by the document, Jumblat reluctantly approved it as a basis for negotiations. "I am agreeing on this only because I am convinced that the other party (Gemayel) will not agree," Jumblat told the Israelis. But he added: "If the other party agrees, I will persuade my constituency that under the circumstances this is what we could get."

Unfortunately, Jumblat's original assessment of Gemayel was correct. The Christian leader, secure in his belief that the United States would back him with its awesome power, and contemptuous of the Druse, refused to negotiate with Jumblat.

"The Gemayel regime belittled the strength of the Druse," an Israeli official said. "They would not take heed of our serious warnings that they would be surprised by the way the Druse would perform. They said we were grossly exaggerating the strength of the Druse. And who the heck are the Druse? Basically a very primitative mountain tribe."

As it turned out of course, the Druse militia, with substantial help from the Syrians, whipped the Christian-led government forces. When Gemayel belatedly decided he'd better negotiate, it was too late.

NEPOTISM OF THE WEEK: It's "All in the Family" time at Reagan-Bush campaign headquarters. More than $100,000 in consultant fees have been handed out so far, and $6,000 of it went to Michele Laxalt, daughter of campaign chairman Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., to set up a Capitol Hill liaison section that includes former White House lobbyist Kenneth Duberstein.

— Joseph Canzeri, a former White House official, was paid $8,000. Canzeri resigned two years ago after disclosure that he had received a $400,000 low-interest loan to buy a Georgetown house and had double-billed the government and the Republican National Committee for travel expenses. He was cleared of any illegality.

— William Jackson, husband of campaign treasurer and former Treasurer of the United States Angela Buchanan, received $1,000 for advice on insurance.

FILL IN THE BLANK: Mark Braden, the Republican National Committee's chief counsel, has asked the Federal Election Commission to review some proposed TV ad copy and determine whether its production costs should be charged to the committee's campaign expenditures on behalf of Reagan.

One proposed ad will be a "smiling color portrait" of an unnamed Democratic presidential candidate who, according to the audio, "said he'd bring new ideas and morality to government." The ad would then say, "But look at the list of new ideas," and proceed to enumerate what Braden described as a "long list of inconsistencies." The ad would end with questions: "This is moral leadership? These are new ideas?"

The name of the candidate who is to be the target of the ad? The RNC request says simply: "To be supplied."

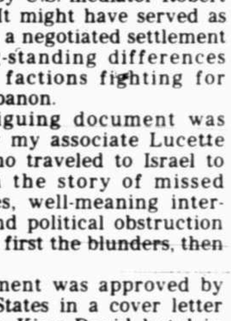
GEORGE F. WILL

Trend to 'untaxed' benefits risky

WASHINGTON — Time was when Jimmy Carter staggered to a podium carrying an armful of volumes and exclaimed: This is the U.S. tax code and isn't it a disgrace to the human race? He meant that such complexity is bad. Be that as it may, the Senate Finance Committee has labored mightily and given birth to a tax bill 1,334 pages long — with another 1,010 pages of explanation.



George F. Will

Now the full Senate has finished with it and has limited to $15,000 the amount a company can deduct as a business expense for automobiles for executives. The senators are in medium dudgeon about the fact that companies are buying foreign cars. The $15,000 sum will buy a lot more of a Cadillac or a Lincoln than a Mercedes.

Another provision says that employees will not have to count as taxable income "watches, clocks, rings, emblematic jewelry, certain personal accessories and other traditional retirement or non-retirement awards" worth up to $4,800. Evidently the watch and jewelry lobbies have been heard from.

These two provisions are small illustrations of a trend that is contributing enormously to the revenue crisis that is illustrated by the federal deficit. The trend is the increased substitution of untaxed fringe benefits — payments in kind — for taxable compensation in cash. When Republicans are weary of just lamenting the deficit and Democrats are weary of just praising "fairness," they should deal with this trend.

The trend is not difficult to define or explain. A reasonable definition is that untaxed benefits are tax shelters, often for those who can not afford the sort of tax shelters (real estate, oil, coal and other ventures) available to more affluent taxpayers. The explanation for the shift toward non-cash compensation is that such a shift is a response to rising taxes.

The great engine of social change in the modern world — war — changed the average citizen's experience with taxation. It introduced that citizen to the income tax. Until the Second World War, fewer than 10 parcent of Americans paid any federal income taxes. And in the two decades before Ronald Reagan was elected, the percentage of Americans subject to at least a 32 percent tax rate quadrupuled, from one-eighth to nearly one-half. (A 32 percent rate is higher than the highest rate proposed in most plans for a "graduated flat tax.")

Fringe benefits, which are growing faster than the economy, are valued today at $320 billion, or 16 percent of all compensation. If employees received in taxable cash the value of all employer-paid fringe benefits in 1984, government revenue would increase $83.2 billion.

The two largest items are pensions and health programs. Employees pay no income or Social Security taxes on employer contributions to pension plans or income earned by pension funds. Employees pay no taxes on health-insurance premiums or direct reimbursements from employers for medical expenditures. By not treating these items as compensation, t'e tax system forgoes $56.5 billion and $21.3 billion, respectively.

Other untaxed compensations include employer-paid life and accident and disability insurance, education assistance, legal services and child care. (For executives there are cars and drivers, special dining rooms and country club memberships, all of which inflame populist feelings but do not involve substantial revenue losses.) By fiscal 1988 the revenue loss from payments in kind rather than cash may nearly double to $152 billion.

Beginning next year, indexation of the tax brackets will eliminate inflation-produced "bracket creep" that floats taxpayers into higher brackets. That will reduce the incentive to demand non-cash compensation. But already cash is just 76.4 percent of compensation in the auto industry. There is more medicine than steel in a General Motors car. That is, GM spends more for medical care for those who make a Buick than it spends for the steel in the Buick.

The income tax is still reasonably progressive. In 1981 about 45 percent of all income-tax revenues came from 23 percent of the population — those with incomes of more than $30,000. And 50 percent of revenues now come from the top 10 percent of earners. But the trend toward non-cash compensation is regressive. It disproportionately benefits employees of the strongest companies, which can afford such benefits, and members of strong unions, which can successfully demand such benefits.

A minimal reform would limit the erosion of the tax base by limiting the share of compensation that can be paid in tax-free benefits. Like any serious tax measure, this would primarily affect the middle class because (as Willie Sutton said when asked why he robbed banks) that is where the money is.

ART BUCHWALD

Nobody lays glove on Jesse!

"Isn't it a beautiful thing to watch?" a Republican campaign manager said.

"What?"

"The Democartic primary free-for-all. Mondale is socking it to Hart, Hart is socking it to Mondale. And neither one of them is laying a glove on Jesse Jackson."

Art Buchwald

"Why should anyone lay a glove on Jesse Jackson?" I asked.

"No reason, except when someone runs for president of the United States you're supposed to rough him up a little, so you can see how he behaves under pressure."

"What issue could Mondale or Hart attack Jackson on?"

"They could mention Jesse's support by Louis Farrakhan, leader of the Nation of Islam, for starters. The good man has threatened the lives of Jews, excommunicated a black reporter from the black race, and compared himself favorably with Adolf Hitler, whom he called a 'wickedly great' man. You would think Mondale and Hart had something to work with there."

"Jackson can't help what his surrogates — I mean supporters — say."

"Aha," the campaign manager said. "But Farrakhan is one of Jackson's closest friends, and Jackson refuses to disavow him. Just think what Hart and Mondale would say if the Ku Klux Klan gave their official support to Ronald Reagan, and the Grand Dragon warmed up every white audience for Reagan."

"You want Jackson to get rid of Farrakhan?"

"Heck no. The Islam leader is ripping the Democratic Party to shreds. If Jackson refuses to dump him over the side, and Farrakhan keeps holding his crazy press conferences, the white liberal voter is going to be scared to death. Every so often a kook like Farrakhan comes along and the media can't give him enough coverage. At the moment he seems to be getting more time on television than Jackson. If you vowed to beat up on a reporter from The Washington Post and called Hitler a 'wickedly great' man, you would get a lot of attention too."

"I still don't see what Farrakhan has to do with Mondale and Hart."

"You must be pretty dumb. Jackson is going to San Francisco with a number of swing votes. He could put one or the other candidate over the top. So both Mondale and Hart have to cater to him. But if Jackson is still carrying around Farrakhan as baggage, then Mondale and Hart will lose the independents and the liberals.

"In November, for every black voter Jesse brings out, we get a white vote for Reagan, or one who stays at home."

"I don't see why you have to bring race into the Democratic primaries."

"You can't lay this one on the Republicans. Jackson asked for a rainbow coalition and Farrakhan said he'd beat up on any black reporter who didn't give it to him. Mondale and Hart are afraid to attack Jackson. So by keeping quiet, both white candidates look chicken. May I remind you that Jim Watt was thrown out of the government for just one ethnic slur. It was a cream puff compared with the stuff Farrakhan has said in the past few months."

"But Farrakhan isn't in the government."

"If the other candidates have to deal with Jackson, he could be."

"So your game plan is to link Farrakhan to Jackson to Mondale or Hart?"

"We have no game plan as far as Jackson is concerned. As long as Jesse sticks by his best friend we'll just sit on the sidelines and enjoy it. It's the Democrats' problem, not ours. All we can say at this time is 'Let Farrakhan be Farrakhan.'"

Gemayel, Assad meet in Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — With his country taking new steps to end its nine-year civil war, Lebanese President Amin Gemayel met here today with his Syrian counterpart, Hafez Assad, to discuss political changes that would accompany a truce.

It was Gemayel's second visit to Damascus in as many months in his continuing effort to gain a cease-fire in Lebanon and reconcile the warring factions into a government of national unity.

In Lebanon, officials carried out last-minute preparations for implementing a plan aimed at separating the nation's warring factions. The start of the disengagement was to coincide with the Gemayel-Assad meeting.

Leaders of Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias all pledged today to adhere to the plan and called on their forces to observe a new cease-fire called Wednesday night.

Lebanese and Syrian sources said Gemayel and Assad would discuss a blueprint prepared by Gemayel suggesting constitutional reforms to give Lebanon's Moslem community a greater share of power in the government that has been dominated by Christians for 40 years.

Assad backed the Druse and Shiite militias in civil warfare against the Lebanese army and rightist Christian irregulars. But he took a mediator's posture after Gemayel bowed to his demand and scrapped Lebanon's troop withdrawal pact with Israel on March 5.

As the two leaders met, Syrian Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam spoke separately with Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem.

A Lebanese security committee representing the nation's principal warring factions declared the new cease-fire Wednesday night, but shell blasts echoed through the capital even as the truce announcement was read to the nation over radio and television.

One thunderous explosion shook Moslem west Beirut about 10 minutes after the cease-fire deadline, and ambulance sirens wailed in the streets.

Less than an hour before the truce went into effect, unknown assailants fired a grenade from a rifle at the west Beirut home of Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, blasting a hole in the wall of the home and breaking several windows, police and Druse officials said.

Jumblatt was not home at the time and no one was injured.

Preparations were to continue through the day for the disengagement along the "green line" separating Christian east Beirut from the mosly Moslem west, the Shiite Moslem southern suburbs and Souk el-Gharb.

By sundown today, the observers were expected to be positioned and their communication system with the command center tested.

On Friday morning, 1,800 policemen and army conscripts will move into disengagement zones vacated by warring Christian and Moslem militias on the three major civil war fronts, said a Lebanese official who declined to be identified.

The disengagement process is to begin with the deployment of 40 French and 40 Lebanese truce observers in posts in the three zones.

Sikhs burn Hindu shops

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — Sikh extremists burned four Hindu-owned shops today in a town 60 miles southwest of this provincial capital, police reported.

Authorities responded by extending a curfew in Chandigarh for another three nights and banning processions and assemblies of more than five people.

The four shops were gutted when Sikhs tried to torch a shopping center in the town of Moga.

Chandigarh is the joint capital of Punjab and Haryana states, where militants elements of the Sikh religious sect have been agitating for greater political and religious freedoms. The Sikhs are a minority in India as a whole but a majority in Punjab.

The curfew here was put in place after rioting by 2,000 Hindus Wednesday.

The rioting broke out after a funeral procession for a Hindu politician assassinated by Sikh extremists in Chandigarh.

Police and angry Hindus clashed Wednesday in the Punjab capital of Chandigarh after the funeral of a Hindu politician slain by Sikh extremists. Hindus called a strike to protest terrorism. Two buses were burned, Sikh-owned shops were set on fire and at least 22 people were injured.

Nora Astorga, 39, a Nicaraguan foreign minister, who was appointed by the Sandinista government as the next ambassador to the United States, has been rejected by the U.S. government to fill that role.

United States rejects envoy candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A heroine of the Sandinista revolution in Nicaragua who helped kill a general there has been rejected by the Reagan administration as the next Nicaraguan ambassador to Washington.

Nora Astorga, a twice-married mother of four who is in her late 30's, has freely admitted her role as an accomplice in the March 8, 1978, bedroom slaying of Gen. Reynaldo Perez Vega, the deputy commander of the National Guard.

In confirming her rejection by Washington, a U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said the administration felt Ms. Astorga would not be an appropriate envoy in view of the 1978 incident.

A veteran Sandinista who has a law degree and has studied in the United States and Italy, Ms. Astorga has publicly discussed the events leading up to the slaying of Perez Vega who, according to unconfirmed reports, had been a CIA informer.

The original plan, Ms. Astorga has said, was to kidnap Perez Vega and exchange him for 59 prisoners, including Tomas Borge, now interior minister; Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the governing Sandinista junta, and Lenin Cerna, head of state security. She invited Perez Vega to her home in a middle-class residential neighborhood in southeastern Managua.

"Perez Vega, who was considered a womanizer, accepted my invitation but, according to the plan, five friends already were hidden in different rooms," she once told reporters. "When he arrived he wanted to go directly to what he had come for and we went to my room, where I disarmed him. Then my friends came out and tried to dominate him, but he was a strong man and resisted, so they had to kill him."

A week after the slaying, a letter with her signature was published by the anti-Somoza newspaper La Prensa acknowledging her participation in an "operation to bring justice" to the general.

The letter concluded with an appeal to the public to join the "popular insurrection ... for the overthrow of the Somoza dynasty which for so many years has kept us oppressed, exploited, abused and jailed, in order to achieve the democratization of our country."

It was not clear Wednesday whether the rejection of Ms. Astorga would induce Managua to reconsider its acceptance of career diplomat Harry Bergold as the replacement for the current U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua, Anthony Quainton. Bergold, a former ambassador to Hungary, is awaiting Senate confirmation.

A Nicaraguan Embassy spokeswoman said Wednesday the embassy had not been officially notified of the administration decision. Ambassador Antonio Jarquin, whom Ms. Astorga was to have replaced, was in Managua Wednesday.

The U.S. official suggested U.S.-Nicaraguan differences were not a factor in Ms. Astorga's rejection.

Margaret Trudeau remarries

Trudeau

OTTAWA (AP) — Margaret Sinclair Trudeau, former wife of Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, called the television station where she had been working to announce her marriage to a wealthy Ottawa businessman.

The former Mrs. Trudeau, 35, had taped the final segment of her talk show, "Margaret," Wednesday at station CJOH. In the afternoon she telephoned to say she had been married to Fried Kemper, who deals in real estate.

Ottawa Judge Hugh Poulin confirmed that he had performed the late-afternoon ceremony in his chambers, but would give no details. The station said the Trudeaus' three sons, Justin, 12, Sasha, 10, and Michel, 8, attended the ceremony.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sen. John Glenn has many fond memories of his years as a pioneer astronaut, but a visit to NASA's Lewis Research Center here brought back an experience he'd rather forget.

It was at Lewis, while in the early stages of space flight training, that Glenn and fellow astronauts suffered through the "multi-axis space training inertial facility."

The round contraption, the 62-year-old Ohio Democrat said Wednesday, consisted of three rotating rings, or gimbals, about 18 or 20 feet across, with a simulated cockpit in the middle.

Technicians from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would "turn this thing up to speed at a certain axis and then cut it loose so it was coasting," he said. The spin simulated "a runaway spacecraft," with the astronaut at the controls.

The "graduation exercise" — spinning at up to 30 revolutions per minute — was "the worst training we ever went through," Glenn said. gram."

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Michael Jackson was "feeling fine" after surgery on his burned scalp, but the superstar singer "needs a rest" and might stay in the hospital for a while, his plastic surgeon said.

Dr. Steven Hoefflin told a news conference Wednesday that doctors would not know for several weeks whether Jackson would again have "a normal, natural head of hair."

No hair had grown on the palm-sized area where Jackson, 25, was burned while filming a Pepsi commercial Jan. 27.

Former first ladies, daughters gather together

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — For the first time ever, former first ladies and some of their daughters gathered today to talk publicly about their lives in the White House.

A two-day conference billed as "Modern First Ladies: Private Lives and Public Duties" got under way at the Gerald R. Ford Museum with former first ladies Rosalynn Carter and Betty Ford attending along with the daughters and a granddaughter of three presidents.

On the "CBS Morning News" this morning, Mrs. Ford was asked whether a first lady's role was more important than that of a vice president.

"I would hope so," she said. "Maybe that's a feminist remark."

On NBC's "Today" show, Mrs. Carter said being a first lady was "a job I relished."

And later, on ABC's "Good Morning America," Mrs. Carter was asked if she would run for public office.

"I would not say I would never do it," she replied, noting she had just finished three years' work on an autobiography. "...but I haven't considered running for office."

Lynda Bird Johnson Robb and Luci Baines Johnson Turpin, daughters of the late President Lyndon Johnson, and Gerald and Betty Ford's daughter, Susan Ford Vance, also were to attend the conference, along with Elanor Seagraves, the granddaughter of Franklin Roosevelt.

Former first lady Lady Bird Johnson had planned to attend, but is ill and will remain in Texas. Caroline Kennedy, daughter of John F. Kennedy, and Margaret Truman Daniel, daughter of President Harry Truman, also canceled their planned appearances.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Pat Nixon declined invitations to the conference.

Mrs. Ford says history has overlooked the role of the first lady.

World's fair asks for loan

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The world's fair will open May 12 as scheduled, even though a cash shortage forced it to ask the state for an emergency $10 million loan, the fair's president says.

"I assure you construction will not stop and the fair will open on time," Petr Spurney, head of the Louisiana World Exposition Inc., told a news conference Wednesday.

He said advance ticket sales fell 72 percent below expectations, forcing the loan request.

Spurney said legislative procedures would probably keep the loan from going through until next week. In Baton Rouge, Gov. Edwin Edwards said it was possible that $5 million might be available sooner.

The $5 million was money held in escrow by the state as a guarantee of the fair's performance. Use of the escrow money would count as part of the loan.

Wealthy man leaves town $6 million

CHESTER, Ill. (AP) — Bud Cohen never flaunted his wealth — until he died and bequeathed much of his $6 million estate to the 5,500 residents of this southwestern Illinois town.

"We're rather gleaming with sunshine," Mayor Stanley Macieiski said Wednesday as municipal leaders prepared to accept the bequest.

When Cohen died July 14 at age 89, he left the town a trust fund of about $2 million — an amount equal to the entire municipal budget. He also left farmland worth $3 million to the Salvation Army and the local Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, and $800,000 to friends, relatives and charities.

He set up trust funds, too: $100,000 for the Chester Public Library; $200,000 for the American Legion post; and $250,000 for the Masonic Lodge. He gave his 130-year-old house overlooking the Mississippi River to the county's historical society.

"We're going to build one of the most outstanding recreation park areas in southern Illinois," Macieiski said. "Gordon 'Bud' Cohen's Memorial and Recreation Park Area — that's what we're hoping it will be called."

Cohen "was...toward the last 20 or 30 years pretty much of a recluse," the mayor said. "He took care of his farms and rode around and things of that nature.

"...As far as being involved in city activities, no...He wasn't a mixer in the Chester community."

Felicia Farias: Maroon talent

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

From early August to mid April, Midland Lee's Felicia Farias has had a busy schedule, one that finds little time away from the athletic playing field. And, it started on the first day she reported to high school in 1981.

Now a senior, Farias is competing in what she believes is her final athletic event in a maroon and white Lee uniform, the high jump in the Girls' Region I track meet in Lubbock.

"I don't think I'll go to state but I'd like to jump 5-foot-4 for my own personal goal," said Farias, who will cap an incredible three-year, 10-letter career at Lee at track season's end.

In the high jump this year, Farias' best mark has been 5-foot-3, one inch shy of her best leap as a junior and two inches short of her best in practice sessions. She qualified for regionals with a 5-foot-3 as the District 4-5A runnerup, losing the district crown she has held for two years by two inches. She doesn't see a personal best high enough to earn a trip to Austin.

TRACK ACCOUNTS for three of the varsity letters she's won in three years.

"I don't know if I've ever coached anyone more competitive," said track coach Linda Caraway. "When she set her goals, she went all out to achieve them."

Farias earned three more in basketball, along with All-District honors as a junior and the league's Most Valuable Player as a senior. Each of her three basketball seasons was a success as Lee won or shared the title all three years. Unfortunately, Lee was not able to make it beyond the bi-district round in the state playoffs.

"She's one of those rare people you hope comes along more than once in a lifetime," said basketball coach Shirley Stephenson. "I think you get some people with talent and you get some with burning desire but it's rare when you get an athlete who has both.

"You always miss somebody like Felicia, not just her ability, but just having her around," continued Stephenson. "I've told college coaches that just having her around makes your day."

Nets humble world champs

NBA Playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Buck Williams said he was out to save face.

The 6-foot-8-inch New Jersey forward scored 25 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and blocked three shots Wednesday night as he led the Nets to a 116-101 humbling of the world champion Philadelphia 76ers.

The victory gave the Nets a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five, first-round National Basketball Association playoff series.

Williams said he had been humiliated the past two seasons when the Nets were eliminated in mini-series without a victory.

"I didn't want to be embarrassed again," he said.

"They are going to have to drag me off the floor on Friday," noted Williams, who played 46 minutes.

"There is no reason to save any energy now and I want to give 100 percent," he said. "I can rest all summer."

NEW JERSEY Coach Stan Albeck said it was a typical Williams game.

"He's just a tremendous athlete. If there is a better power forward in the league he should step forward. He plays with tremendous enthusiasm and goes after every rebound."

Coach Billy Cunningham of the 76ers agreed with Albeck.

"Williams was truly awesome," said Cunningham. "It seemed everytime there was a defensive rebound he hauled it in."

The Nets also got 24 points from Otis Birdsong and 18 points, nine assists and six rebounds from Micheal Ray Richardson.

Darryl Dawkins and Mike Gminski held Moses Malone, the Sixers' 6-foot-10-inch center, without a field goal in the second half.

Malone scored 20 points, including 16 in the first half, and collected 11 rebounds.

The Nets took command in the first period, scoring nine straight points and 14 of 16 in a rally that gave them a 33-21 lead. They were ahead 39-29 after one quarter, 64-56 at halftime and 86-75 at the end of three quarters.

In the last period, the 76ers closed to 97-91 with 6:56 left. The Nets then scored 15 of the next 17 points to take a 112-93 lead. During the rally they scored 12 straight and held the Sixers without a point for 4:35 and without a field goal for 6:10.

Andrew Toney scored 24 points and Julius Erving 18 for the 76ers, who absorbed their worst playoff beating since being drubbed 129-108 by Los Angeles in 1982. It was the worst opening-game playoff loss for the Sixers since they lost to Boston 115-96 in 1966.

The Nets won their first playoff game in the eight-year history of the franchise. They were 0-6 in three previous first-round tries.

Albeck said he couldn't believe the job Dawkins and Gminski did on Malone, the league's leading rebounder and one of its top scorers.

"I can't in my wildest imagination think of holding Moses Malone without a field goal (in the second half). It's beyond my comprehension."

Albeck, who had predicted his team would win at least one game in the series against the highly favored Sixers, said he didn't expect it to come in the opener.

Cunningham observed, "There is not really a lot I can say. They outplayed us in every phase of the game. They played a rock 'em, sock 'em game."

The 76ers' coach added, "If we don't get ourselves in gear it's going to be a short series."

The second game will be played Friday night in Philadelphia.

Lakers 116, Kings 105

Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 26 points to lead a balanced Los Angeles attack as the Lakers grabbed the opening game of their playoff battle with Kansas City. The second game will be played Friday night, again at Inglewood, Calif.

The Lakers led from the start and built a comfortable 57-44 margin by halftime. The closest the Kings could get in the second half was 67-57 four minutes into the third quarter.

Eddie Johnson paced the Kings with 25 points, but had only five in the second half.

Suns 113, Trail Blazers 106

A pair of long-range jumpers by Walter Davis in the final two minutes propelled Phoenix past the Trail Blazers at Portland. Davis scored 10 of his 22 points in the final quarter, all from the outside.

Kenny Carr topped the losers with 24 points, while Jim Paxson added 23.

Game 2 will be Friday night at Portland.

Cubs snap skid with 7-1 victory

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland pitcher Ron Richardson found something the Cubs have been missing so far this year: A triple threat. And it proved deadly as the Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak with a 7-1 Texas League victory over El Paso at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

What the triple threat consisted of was: 1. Strong pitching. 2. Errorless defense that turned four double plays. 3. A 10-hit attack that showed power as well as timing.

In the first four innings of play, the Diablos didn't suffer from a lack of base runners as much as they did in losing them. El Paso's Eddie Irvine was stranded at third base in the top of the first when the Cubs turned their first double play of the night.

The Cubs repeated the defensive maneuver three more times in the next three innings, making Joe Morales, with his solo shot over the left-center fence in the third, the only runner to advance farther than third base.

Not only did the Cubs turn double plays, they also made the routine plays look easy, gunning down Diablo after Diablo who tried beating out infield grounders or dropping hits to the holes in the outfield. Only Irvine, with his lead off double in the first, managed an extra base hit other than Morales' homer.

The defensive performance looks even better when you take into consideration that catchers Don Hyman and Joe Henderson filled in for a depleted Cubs infield at third and first respectively.

"What we had on the field tonight was all we had left," said Hyman who was successful in the only play his way. "I wasn't going to be in the lineup tonight. Mike Anicich was supposed to play but he was hurt last night (Tuesday) in a play at first base."

Infielder Tony Woods is also laid up with an injury while Jeff Rutledge left the team, "because he had some problems at home," said Manager George Enright. "His little girl is sick so he had to go home. It kind of left us in a bind but everything worked out."

ON THE mound, Richardson was busy finding a pitch to replace his ailing breaking ball. What he came up with was a change up that allowed only seven hits and four walks while striking out four.

"I couldn't get my breaking pitch over but I hand a lot of luck with the change up," said Richardson. "I threw an awful lot of change ups and had a lot of success with them."

And, when Richardson got himself in trouble, he was more than grateful to the defensive help he received.

"The first four innings were just amazing. A double play every inning," said Richardson, "When you get a guy on base, the best you can hope for is the double play."

"Our pitching has been, over all, fairly decent," said Enright, who has watched a season's worth of low scoring ball games in this first home stand. Surprising, considering the park's reputation as a hitter's delight. "Any time you give up only five runs in this ball park, you should be in the game."

AND, AT the plate, the Cubs came up with 10 hits, including Gary Varsho's first home run of the year. Leading 1-0, Varsho took a Rich Buonantony 0-2 pitch and drilled it over the right field fence for a two-RBI homer and a 3-0 lead.

Shawon Dunston made it 4-1 in the third when his double to right-center was followed by Danny Norman's RBI double up the middle and Rick Baker upped the score to 6-1 with his two-RBI triple to the center-field fence. Dunston scored the final run of the game in the fifth inning, hitting a single and moving to second on Norman's ground out on a hit-and-run. Dunston came home after stealing third base when Diablo catcher Garrett Nago's pick-off throw went into left field.

CUB NOTES: Every Cub but Henderson collected a hit against the Diablos, led by Dunston and Norman with two hits apiece. Dunston also picked up a stolen base and a sacrifice fly in his 2-for-3 performance...Baker and Varsho led the way in RBI with two each...The Cubs conclude their 10-game home stand tonight with Ladies' Night at Cubs Stadium. All ladies will be admitted free...El Paso's Tim Crews, 1-0, will face Midland's Neil Bryant, 0-1...Midland is now 2-7 on the year while El Paso is 6-3.

Willie Aikens is back, but microscope is out

TORONTO (AP) — The big man with No. 24 on his back was in the batting cage taking his cuts from the left side of the plate. His timing was a bit off. More baseballs sprayed into left field than were pulled to right. None went over the fence.

It was the first day back for Willie Aikens, his first day in a Toronto Blue Jays uniform, one of many days he'll be under the microscope.

"I don't have any fears," said the 29-year-old first baseman, who will be platooned by the with Cliff Johnson as a designated hitter. "I've been playing now for nine years and I really feel I can come back and do the same things that I was doing before.

"There's the fear of just going back out on the baseball field and performing at the same level that I was doing before. I think that once I get into it and find the hitting groove, I don't think I'll have a problem.

"As far as playing in front of the public, the fans, I don't have a fear of that."

Aikens, who served just under three months in a Texas prison for attempted possession of cocaine while a member last year of the Kansas City Royals, had his one-year suspension from baseball commuted by the commissioner's office on Tuesday. He will officially be reinstated May 16.

The December trade which sent outfielder Jorge Orta to the Royals was, in some quarters, roundly criticized. But the Blue Jays say never had any reservations.

"He'll be an asset to us both on the field and in the clubhouse," said Manager Bobby Cox. "He has a long future ahead of him and, hopefully, it will be as a Blue Jay.

"Whatever he can contribute to us offensively, it's going to be a big help. I also think he'll be a credit in the clubhouse. Before we signed Willie we talked to him and his agent and got really good vibes out of it."

Rankin wins golf title; Tina Knight places sixth

From Staff Reports

Track and golf kept area athletes busy Wednesday as the Rankin's boys won the District 8-A golf title in Rankin while Midland High's Tina Knight finished sixth in the Region I 5A girls track meet in Lubbock.

The Greenwood Rangers' track team placed second in the District 6-A meet and the Kermit girls won a playoff with Dalhart in the Region I 3A golf tournament to finish second behind Tulia in some other key events.

Rankin's girls golf team also won a state berth by finishing second in the Region I Class A golf tournament.

Knight posted a leap of 16-10½ Wednesday to gain her sixth place finish in the Lubbock long jump. Amarillo's Lori Bolk won the event and a state berth with a leap of 18-5¾.

Midland High's Orvetta Johnson did not qualify for today's finals in the 100-meter hurdles, but MHS' Claire Hardy will be running in the 3200 and 1600 races today at the Texas Tech oval. Midland Lee's Felicia Farias was to compete in the high jump this morning.

In the Region I 2A girls meet, Stanton's Dawna West was fifth in the triple jump with a 33-11 while teammate Sandra Henry was fifth in the shot put with a 33-8¾.

Power is item lacking among 1984 rookie crop

Sports Analysis

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The 1984 season is shaping up as a year of speed, singles and defense among major league baseball's top newcomers.

Power was the key to last season's rookie crop. The National League honored Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets after he hit 26 homers and drove in 74 runs. Ron Kittle of the Chicago White Sox, with 35 homers and 100 RBI, was the American League's leading rookie.

Few, if any, of this year's first-year players promise those kinds of numbers, but their impact could be substantial in other ways. Both leagues also have several young pitchers who could challenge for rookie supremacy.

The National League has rookies such as second baseman Juan Samuel of Philadelphia, left fielder Gerald Perry of Atlanta, right fielder Doug Frobel of Pittsburgh, shortstop Argenis Salazar of Montreal, and pitchers Ron Darling and Dwight Gooden of New York.

The American League boasts such prospects as second baseman Tim Teufel of Minnesota, outfielder Butch Davis and pitchers Danny Jackson and Mike Gubicza of Kansas City, third baseman Darnell Coles of Seattle, shortstop Curtis Wilkerson of Texas and center fielder Gary Pettis of California.

With the exception of the pitchers and a few potential power hitters like Perry, Frobel and Teufel, they are a speedy lot, with stolen bases in their hearts and singles in their bats.

National League

Samuel, a 23-year-old from the Dominican Republic, was touted by the Phillies last season but, with Joe Morgan at second, he waited one year. Now, Morgan is gone, and Samuel has his chance. In six games, he was hitting .346 with seven stolen bases. He hit only .216 this spring, but last year at Portland he hit .330 with 52 RBI and 33 stolen bases.

The Braves say the jury is still out on Perry, whom some have compared to a young Cecil Cooper. At 23, he has switched from first base to the outfield, but he sat out most of the spring with an injury. He had a .294 average with five RBI in five games this year.

The Pirates expect the 24-year-old Frobel to platoon in right with Lee Lacy. Last year, Frobel hit .283 in 32 games with Pittsburgh after a 24-homer season with Honolulu. He hit over .300 in spring training. In five games with the Pirates, though, his average was just .105.

Expos Manager Bill Virdon handed Salazar the shortstop job in spring training because of his quick hands and wide range. At the same time, Virdon is hoping "he won't be an automatic out." The 22-year-old Venezuelan hit .302 with Wichita last season, but he was only .250 in the spring.

Darling and Gooden, both right-handers, have looked exceptional for the Mets this season. Darling, 23, was 1-0 with a 1.50 ERA in two appearances marked by control troubles. Gooden, 19, could be the next big strikeout artist. He fanned 300 in Class A ball last season and struck out five in his first start with the Mets. He's said to rattle easily, however.

Also worth watching are outfielder and former Midland Cub Carmelo Martinez of San Diego, .369 with 21 RBI this spring; outfielder Brad Komminsk of Atlanta, .295 with a team-leading 11 RBI in spring but sent down before the season with the possibility of early recall; third baseman German Rivera of Los Angeles, .328 at Albuquerque and .353 in 13 games with the Dodgers last year, and right-hander Orel Hershiser of Los Angeles, a long reliever with a split-finger pitch.

American League

Teufel (pronounced Tuffle) is surprising some skeptics who didn't think he could hit at the major league level. After a .323 season with 27 homers and 100 RBI at Toledo, the 25-year-old joined the Twins for 21 games in '83. He hit .308, then turned in a .313 spring and, in six games this season, has a .364 average.

Davis, 25, had 46 stolen bases with three minor league clubs last season, and Manager Dick Howser gave him the starting left field job after he hit .357 in the spring. Davis had 122 at-bats, eight short of the rookie maximum, with Kansas City last season, hitting .344 with 18 RBI, but he's off to a slow start this year, hitting .192 in the first seven games.

Among other AL rookies to watch: shortstop Curtis Wilkerson of Texas, who led the club with eight RBI in spring and beat out Bucky Dent for the starting job; shortstop Dick Schofield of California, .310 in the spring with 11 RBI; right-hander Bill Swaggerty of Baltimore, the Orioles last cut after a 2-0 spring, and catcher Jerry Willard of Cleveland.

Julie Brunson wins state berth

West has another shot at a state track berth today in the 100 hurdles. She had the fastest qualifying time of 14.83. Reagan County's Jackie King had the fastest prelim time in the 100 meters with a 12.20.

Greenwood's Keith Dove won the 6-A high jump title with a leap of 6-0 and Len Lester won the 100 meters with a 11.85 to key the Rangers' second place finish behind Highland. Highland posted 130 points to win the meet while Greenwood was second with 114 points.

Other Greenwood Region I qualifiers who finished second in the district meet were Ellis in the discus with a 144-6, Waggoner with a 10:55.0 in the 3200, Wallace in the 110 hurdles with a 16.05 and Sellers in the 1600 with a 5:00.30. Greenwood also qualified its 1600 relay with a 3:38.80.

Rankin's golf title was paced by medalist Doug Doege, who had a two-round 149 score, including one round of 71. Rankin's Shot Nicholson was second with a 153 while teammate Kyle Kevil was third with a 157.

The Rankin girls placed second in the Region I Class A golf tournament to earn a state berth, finishing behind Wink, 761-807. Rankin's Trina Wheeler was third in the medalist race with a two-round score of 182. Iraan's Tanya Hutchinson won medalist honors with a 174.

In the Region I 3A golf tournament, Crane's Julie Brunson won second in the medalist race with a two-round score of 183. That earns her a trip to the state meet in Austin. Tulia won the team title with an 828 score while Kermit was second, 23 strokes off the pace. Both teams advance to state. Kermit was paced by LaVonda Wade's two-round score of 191.

NCAA wants to police agents

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NCAA has taken what may be the first step toward certification of agents.

The policy-making NCAA Council, at the conclusion of its three-day spring meeting Wednesday, adopted an agent registration program which represents a sharp change in its attitude toward the player-agent relationship.

In addition, the 44-member Council took the first step toward creating a drug-testing procedure for college athletes and took up, for the first time, the issue of a football championship playoff.

The voluntary agent registration program goes into effect immediately. Forms will be mailed to agents around the country asking for basic biographical data and a list of former and current clients. The information will then be provided to NCAA schools, many of which have begun setting up three-person advisory panels for athletes.

The panels, approved as a resolution at last January's NCAA convention, are to help players with such things as contracts, eligibility questions and the hiring of agents. The resolution specifies that none of the three is to come from the university's athletic department.

The Council decided the drug-testing program will involve only performance-enhancing drugs and be put into final form at later meetings for submission to a convention vote.

The Council will meet again in August and October, and schools with major college programs have separate meetings scheduled in Kansas City and Chicago this summer.

Feds' Craig James passes NFL physical

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Federals running back Craig James has passed his physical with the National Football League's New England Patriots, leaving only a clause in his contract to prevent him from jumping from the United States Football League.

James, the Federals top draft choice in their initial draft in 1983, passed the physical by Patriots' team physician Dr. Bernard Zarins on Tuesday.

He has reportedly agreed to a three-year, $1-million contract with the NFL team, but cannot sign immediately because a clause prohibits transfer of his contract without his approval as well as that of the Federals.

"A lot of people assumed I've already signed, but I haven't," James told the Washington Post.

DO YOU WANT A NORMAL LENS!

We don't think so. In the past the so-called "normal lens" was far less expensive than lenses of other types, especially zoom lenses. Now for only $90 more than the price of a 50mm lens you can get a 35-70 f2.8 macro zoom lens. We call this lens a "super normal" because it drastically increases the versatility of your 35mm camera. You get 3 different lenses in one small package. Wide angles for scenery and groups, telephoto for sports and portraits plus the added bonus of macro for close-ups of flowers, etc. When you buy any of today's exceptional 35mm cameras, match it with the Sigma 35-70 f2.8 Macro "Super Normal."

Houston Astros' Dickie Thon
..."They'll always throw me inside."

Thon not worried with inside pitches

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros shortstop Dickie Thon says he won't worry about future inside pitches when he returns to the Astros lineup.

"They'll always try to throw me inside, but I can hit the ball good inside so I am not worried," Thon said Wednesday in his first return to the Astrodome since he was beaned April 8 in a game against the New York Mets.

"It did make me realize how fortunate I am to be playing in the major leagues. I'll never take it for granted again."

Thon dropped to the turf in agony 11 days ago when he was struck in the head by a pitch from New York Mets pitcher Mike Torrez. Thon suffered broken bones above his left eye that required surgery and has had blurred vision since the incident.

Torrez was trying to pitch inside to Thon but the pitch sailed at Thon's head and the shortstop could not get out of the way.

Thon says he has now overcome the horror that he experienced in the first two days after the incident.

"Mentally, I feel much better than I did in the first couple of days," Thon said. "Now I know I can play again. That first couple of days, I didn't know that."

THON SAID his first fears as he fell to the ground were for his life.

"The first thing I thought of is that I want to make it, I want to live and see my family again," Thon said. "I didn't know how bad I was hurt."

The Astros placed Thon on the team's 15-day disabled list April 9 and announced Wednesday that Thon now was on the team's 21-day disabled list. That means he would be eligible to return April 30, 21-day after his injury.

Team physician Dr. William Bryan said, however, it could take as long as four weeks for Thon to be fully recovered.

Farias seeks new avenues

Three more varsity letters came in volleyball, two years as a member of the 4-5A All-District team.

"She's an extremely coachable young lady," said volleyball coach Janice Baulch. "She always gives more than 100 percent in practice and play and she hates to lose. You can't teach a kid to be competitive and Felicia is competitive in every sense of the word."

As an extra activity in her senior year, Farias added golf — while competing in track — to her list of accomplishments. It earned her an unprecedented 10th varsity letter at Midland Lee.

Why golf?

"A lot of it was to help Lesa Burnett and Shari Saikin out so they'd have a team instead of competing as individuals," said Farias, who became the fourth player for the Rebels this year. Vicki Smith was the other.

Of the four sports, golf was the one that gave her the most trouble, but showed rapid improvement. From the first tournament to her last, Farias took nearly 40 strokes off her highest score, capping the year with a 104 in her final round.

"If we'd had another tournament, I think I'd have broken 100," she said.

IT'S BEEN a long and busy road for Farias, who recently celebrated her 18th birthday. There have been a lot of good times and happy moments, but she's ready to see them go.

"I stay after school every day for sports, starting in August and I don't finish up until this month," said Farias. "The last month (until school year's end) is mine to do what I want. Let me graduate. I'm ready for it to end, more than ready. It's nice to come home now at two instead of staying after."

Of the four sports, Farias favored volleyball with basketball finishing a close second.

"I like volleyball better but I'm probably better at basketball," said Farias. "I don't why, I guess because it's more team orienated. I know both are team sports but volleyball takes more team cooperation to set everything up."

But, basketball is where her future career in athletics probably lies. She won't say which school has the most interest in her but does say, "I'm supposed to call one basketball coach after track is over."

WHEN NOT competing in sports, Farias finds plenty of time to get her studies done, and does them with the same excellence as her athletics. Going into her final semester, she is carrying 3.78 grade point average, which includes honors courses such as trigonometry, elementary analysis, computer math and English. She has also been a member of the Lee Student Council for three years and is a member of the National Honor Society.

And, what about the summer, her off-season?

"I play softball in MUGS (Midland United Girls Softball)," said Farias. "This summer I want to get a job and I need to take a couple of classes at Midland College."

That makes five sports and Farias is still looking for more.

"One of my friends wants to teach me how to play racquetball and another wants me to play tennis," said Farias.

Seven sports! That's it for now. After all, there are only so many hours in the day.

Islanders Pat LaFontaine, left, and Brent Sutter celebrate clinching victory over Washington Capitals in Stanley Cup playoff series.

Islanders drop Caps; Flames, Canadians win

By The Associated Press

Pat Flatley, the New York Islanders' talented rookie right wing fresh from the Canadian Olympic team, has discovered that the champions' recent domination of the Stanley Cup doesn't begin with the opening faceoff. There's much more to it — and Flatley's thrilled to be a part of it.

"I'm amazed," he said after doing some pretty amazing things himself Wednesday night, such as score two goals in a four-goal second-period rally that lifted the National Hockey League titlists to a 5-3 victory over the Washington Capitals. The triumph moved the Islanders into the Stanley Cup semifinals for the sixth straight year; they won a record 18th consecutive postseason series by eliminating the Capitals in five games.

"It's obvious what talent is here just by watching them on the ice. But it's more the feeling in the dressing room and on the bench, the emotion, that is unbelievable. For every shift, they are ready to play as if it is their last. You can't help but be effected by it.

"It's a great feeling."

The Islanders are the only NHL team experiencing that feeling right now. They're in the conference finals while the three other series all stand 3-2.

The Isles became the first expansion team to win 100 postseason games as goalie Billy Smith posted his 80th Stanley Cup win, tying Ken Dryden's record. The Capitals took a 2-0 lead after one period on goals by Doug Jarvis and Dave Christian, but Flatley got a pair, Anders Kallur scored a shorthanded goal and Bryan Trottier connected to turn the game around.

"When things are going bad," said Kallur, a part-timer for most of the season, "we seem to come up with the big play and the big game. There are so many leaders on this team, so many good players."

NHL Playoffs

Canadiens 4, Nordiques 0

As they have done throughout the playoffs, the Canadiens shut down their opponent's offense and were opportunistic when on attack. The high-scoring Nordiques couldn't dent rookie goalie Steve Penney and a three-goal burst in a 2:48 span of the third period clinched matters.

Mario Tremblay, Steve Shutt and Mats Naslund scored the third-period goals, whiled Pierre Mondou had given Montreal a first-period edge.

Flames 5, Oilers 4

Edmonton blew its chance to clinch at home by falling behind 4-1 and 5-2 before a late rally fell short. Calgary, which had only two power-play goals in the first four games of the series, scored three times with a manpower advantage. Jamie Macoun, Lanny McDonald and Mike Eaves got those goals, while Dan Quinn and Jim Peplinski also scored for the Flames.

Wayne Gretzky was held scoreless by the Flames, but Edmonton's forward unit of Willy Lindstrom (two goals), Mark Messier (a goal and three assists) and Glenn Anderson (one goal, two assists) combined for nine points.

North Stars 6, Blues 0

After four tight games featuring spectacular goaltending, the North Stars staged a rout, sending Blues goalie Mike Liut to the sidelines. Don Beaupre collected his first NHL shutout. Keith Acton led the way with a goal and two assists, while Steve Payne, Dennis Maruk, Craig Levie, Willi Plett and Neal Broten also scored.

For Beaupre, it was the climax of a struggle to return to form after a mediocre season — part of which was spent in the minors — and a knee injury.

Jackson turns 'Mr. April'

Ned Yost keys Texas Rangers' victory

By The Associated Press

Reggie Jackson is back in a familiar role, only now it's "Mr. April" instead of "Mr. October."

Once known as "Mr. October" because of his record-making World Series exploits with the New York Yankees, Jackson is hitting the ball with old-time ferocity these days.

Wednesday night, the rejuvenated California slugger hit a two-run homer and figured in a couple of other rallies to help the Angels beat the Minnesota Twins 9-2.

"It's a combination of mental and physical things," Jackson said of his current power surge which includes an American League-leading 15 runs batted in and four home runs which tie him with Oakland's Dave Kingman for the league lead.

Last year, Jackson hit only 14 home runs with 49 RBI and was thought to be near the end of his baseball career.

"There are certain things you've got to do physically, but there's always someone out there who will yell .194 (Jackson's batting average last year)," Jackson said. The difference this year is "that I'm concentrating better and working a lot harder at the plate. It just feels good to contribute, even hitting .240. I've been productive with runners on base."

Jackson knocked in a run for the Angels with a groundout in a four-run first inning before his homer in the third off Larry Pashnick, who had relieved Al Williams, 1-2, with two out in the first. Pashnick allowed an RBI double to Brian Downing in the fifth, after Jackson had doubled.

Geoff Zahn and Doug Corbett combined on an eight-hitter for the Angels. Zahn, 2-0, earned the victory without a strikeout, walking just one. Zahn gave up a leadoff home run to Darrell Brown in the first, Brown's first major league homer, and allowed just five other hits in his eight innings of work.

AL Roundup

Rangers 4, Red Sox 3

Ned Yost keyed a three-run fourth inning with a two-run single and Texas went on to beat Boston and hand the Red Sox their sixth loss in a row.

Right-hander Danny Darwin settled down after a shaky start and earned the victory in his first decision of the year. Darwin allowed nine hits, just two after the second inning, and struck out seven without walking a batter in eight innings of work. Dave Tobik pitched the ninth for his first save.

"It's frustrating, no question about it," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said after the Red Sox' eighth loss in 11 games. "We' trying to figure why we're not hitting, but so far there are no answers."

Yankees 5, Indians 0

Phil Niekro and Jose Rijo combined on a five-hitter as New York blanked Cleveland in a game played in sub-freezing temperatures.

Niekro, the veteran knuckleballer who signed a free agent contract with New York, yielded five hits while striking out six and walking two over the first six innings. Niekro, 3-0, with a 1.45 earned run average in his three starts this season, moved to 23rd place on the all-time list of major league victories with 271, surpassing Hall-of-Famer Burleigh Grimes.

Rijo held Cleveland hitless, striking out five over the final three innings to notch his first major league save.

Tigers 4, Royals 3

Alan Trammell scored the winning run from third when Kansas City second baseman Frank White bobbled Larry Herndon's two out grounder in the 10th inning, lifting Detroit over the Royals.

The Tigers' 9-0 start, the best in the club's 84-year history, is two shy of the AL record set in 1981 when the Oakland A's won 11 without a defeat. The Atlanta Braves' 13-0 start in 1982 set the major league record.

Willie Hernandez came on to pitch the 10th in relief of starter Jack Morris and retired the side in order to earn his first AL victory. Trailing 3-0, the Royals tied the game in the eighth on Jorge Orta's three-run homer that shattered Morris' streak of 28⅓ consecutive innings without allowing an earned run.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 1

Dave Collins drove in three runs with a double and a two-run single and Dave Stieb and Dennis Lamp combined to check Baltimore on five hits, leading Toronto over the struggling Orioles.

Stieb, 2-0, lost his shutout bid when pinch-hitter Joe Nolan hit his first homer of the season in the Baltimore eighth, then left in favor of Lamp in the ninth.

Jim Palmer, 0-2, who gave up five runs in five innings, was tagged with the loss, the ninth in 11 starts for the defending World Champions.

"Nothing seems to be going right for us," said Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli. "Nothing seems to be going right for us. Our defense and hitting is off. You just can't cry about it, though, and hang your head. You've got to come out tomorrow and try to win one game at a time."

Mariners 5, A's 4

Rookie Al Davis' two-out double, his third of the game, scored Jack Perconte from first base in the ninth to boost Seattle over Oakland.

With one out, Perconte singled off Bill Atherton, 0-1, and one out later, Davis doubled off reliever Bill Caudill for his fourth RBI of the game.

Mariners reliever Paul Mirabella, 1-0, who escaped a bases-loaded jam in the ninth, picked up the victory.

"We can't figure out a way to pitch him," Oakland Manager Steve Boros said of Davis. "We pitch him in and we pitch him out. He sends hits in every direction. He's hot."

Britian's Budd pulls out of South African event

LONDON (AP) — Following objections by government officials, South African-born running star Zola Budd has pulled out of her second race in this country after making her debut as a British subject last week.

"She wants to go somewhere she is wanted," said Tony Miller, chairman of the Crawley Athletic Club in Sussex where Budd was scheduled to run in the 1,500 meters this Saturday. "I must say I am disappointed for the Crawley public."

Budd, the fastest woman in the world over 5,000 meters, made her move Wednesday when the leftist-controlled municipal council threatened to ban her from running.

Alf Pegler, Mayor of Crawley, said he was concerned that Budd's appearance would overshadow the rest of the Southern League Women's Track and Field meet, which has been arranged to mark the opening of the town's new all-weather track.

Several members of Britain's opposition Labor party have criticized the speed with which the 17-year-old middle-distance runner was granted citizenship by Home Secretary Leon Brittan. It is her hope she will be able to compete for Britain at the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

South Africa is barred from most international sports competition because of its racial policies of apartheid.

Budd, her family and her coach were unavailable for comment. Their affairs are being handled by the Daily Mail newspaper, which brought them to Britain and has exclusive rights to their access.

Grievance filed in Perez case

ATLANTA (AP) — Representatives for Atlanta Braves pitcher Pascual Perez and the Major League Players Association filed a grievance Wednesday night against Perez' suspension from baseball until May 16, according to a published report.

Perez, convicted of cocaine posession charges in the Dominican Republic, received a suspension Tuesday from baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

The Atlanta Constitution reported in Thursday's editions that MLPA acting Executive Director Don Fehr, who reviewed Kuhn's decision along with aides to Perez' agent Tom Reich, said, "I see nothing that supports (Kuhn's decision)."

Neither Reich nor any of his assistants could be reached for comment Wednesday night.

Fehr said the procedure is that a grievance is filed with the Players Relations Committee, an arm of baseball ownership.

Knepper tames Dodgers

By The Associated Press

Bob Knepper had a lot to prove to himself, and he made believers of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I did a lot of thinking in the off-season, but I didn't feel I had to prove anything to anyone but myself," the Houston Astros pitcher said Wednesday after hurling his second straight complete game, a 3-0 victory over the Dodgers. "You can't go through life trying to prove things to other people. I just had to learn to stay within myself and not let outside things bother me."

Last season, Knepper had a 6-13 record and reportedly was on the trading block early this year. But on Wednesday, he tossed a four-hitter, striking out five and retiring 11 batters in a row in one stretch.

"That's the best game I've ever seen Knepper pitch," Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda said.

Knepper's teammates agreed.

"It's got to make him feel well, and if he pitches well, it's going to do a lot to help this club," said first baseman Ray Knight, whose two-run double drove in two Houston runs in the sixth inning.

Jose Cruz drove in the Astros' first run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and made two fine running catches in left field, victimizing Mike Marshall in the fourth and seventh innings.

"Those were great catches by Cruz," Lasorda said. "I don't think they demoralized the team, but they were two very fine catches."

Cardinals 5-1, Cubs 0-6

Bill Buckner and Jody Davis delivered key hits in a four-run sixth inning to lead Chicago to victory in the second game and give the Cubs a split of their doubleheader with St. Louis.

National League

Joaquin Andujar checked the Cubs on five hits and David Green drove in three runs with a single and a two-run homer for a 5-0 Cardinal victory in the opener.

Andujar, 2-1, posted his second shutout of the season and was given an early lead when the Cardinals scored three runs in the first inning.

Pirates 6, Phillies 3

Tony Pena slammed a two-run homer and Bill Madlock drove in two runs with a pair of hits to power Pittsburgh over Philadelphia. The victory snapped a Pirates' six-game losing streak.

Pena's homer, his third of the season and second in as many games, followed a Jason Thompson single and staked winning pitcher John Candelaria to a 5-3 lead in the third inning.

Garry Maddox homered for the losers before a crowd of 2,752, one of the five smallest since Three Rivers Stadium opened in 1970.

Braves 5, Reds 4

Outfielder Dale Murphy bowled into Cincinnati catcher Dann Bilardello, knocking the ball loose to score Atlanta's winning run in the 10th inning.

Murphy was on second base with two out when Jerry Royster grounded a soft single to left field that set up the home-plate collision.

The throw from left fielder Duane Walker arrived at home the same time Murphy did. The collision knocked it loose from Bilardello's glove, sending the Braves to only their fourth victory in 12 games.

Claudell Washington slammed two homers to drive in four runs in the first two innings for Atlanta.

Mets 5, Expos 4

A two-out, bases-loaded double in the ninth inning by Wally Backman lifted New York to a 5-4 victory over Montreal and snapped a three-game Mets losing string.

Darryl Strawberry led off the inning with a single and, after two were out, stole second before reliever Jeff Reardon walked John Gibbons and pinch-hitter Ron Hodges to load the bases. Backman then hit a soft liner into the left field corner off Gary Lewis, scoring Strawberry and Gibbons.

Hubie Brooks homered for the Mets, while Tim Raines slammed a home run for Montreal.

San Antonio survives Beaumont in 10

By The Associated Press

Ralph Bryant hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the 10th inning to give San Antonio a 4-2 win over Beaumont in Texas League action.

In other games Wednesday night, Tulsa downed Arkansas 4-1, Jackson blanked Shreveport 6-0 and Midland knocked off El Paso 7-1.

Jackson, which has won eight out of nine games, leads Arkansas by 3½ games in the East Division, while El Paso, at 6-3, is one game up on Beaumont and San Antonio in the West.

Bryant's homer gave the win to Rick Felt, 1-0. The losing pitcher was Chuck Kolotka, 0-3.

Tulsa scored three of its four runs in the bottom of the fourth when Jorge Gomez doubled home Whitney Harry and Keith Jones. Gomez then scored on a fielding error by Mike Harris.

Greg Tabor scored Tulsa's final run in the eighth on Harry's sacrifice fly.

The Travelers' lone run came in the second, when Dan Stryffler scored on Bob Helsom's sacrifice fly.

Billy Taylor, 1-0, nabbed the win in relief. Arkansas starter Todd Worrell, 1-1, took the loss.

Knight begins cutting hopefuls

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Time is growing short for some of the 72 hopefuls seeking to wear the red-white-and-blue of the U.S. Olympic basketball team this summer.

Saturday, Coach Bob Knight will be telling about 40 of the nation's top amateur performers thanks for trying, you're just not what we are looking for.

That leaves them with just today and Friday to make a good enough impression to stay around for Saturday and Sunday's doubleheaders at Indiana University's Assembly Hall. Those games will determine the 16 or so players Knight will invite back for the final pre-Olympic training before the squad is cut to 12 for the Olympics.

From here on in, Knight will be checking on how the candidates — including All-Americans Patrick Ewing of Georgetown, Michael Jordan of North Carolina and Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma — fill the team role he wants in his quest for the gold medal at the Summer Games.

"What we'll do tomorrow and Friday will be more involved with team play," Knight said Wednesday at the daily news conference he's holding during the trials.

"What we're simply trying to do is set up a means through which we can evaluate not just how players play, but the things that they can do to fit in with the way that we're going to play."

That process has included shifting personnel from one unit to another each day.

"As we make up lists from day to day we try and move them around to see that kids play against everybody in their particular position at least a couple of times while they're here," Knight explained.

The selection process and training routine has impressed Hank Iba and Pete Newell, who between them have coached three United States teams to victory in past Olympics.

"I don't think we've ever had a better process in developing and selecting an Olympic team than we have now," said Newell, coach of the 1960 team.

Iba, who coached Olympic teams in 1964, 1968 and 1972, added, "The organization of the trials here is about the best I've ever (been) around and these people are well-organized, they've got a great group of coaches here working, a fine group of athletes, and I'm sure the selection committee will come on later and do a good job in giving to you the best Olympic team."

Knight, Newell and Iba spoke at a mid-day news conference after Knight and his staff guided 72 invitees through the second day of the trials — which include morning and afternoon practice sessions and night scrimmage games.

"This is an outstanding crop," said Newell about the Olympic hopefuls. "The junior crop on the college level is maybe as good a crop of one-class players as I've ever since 1960, maybe as good as 1960."

That 1960 team included Oscar Robertson and Jerry West, who later went on to greatness in the National Basketball Association.

Newell pointed out that such standouts as John Havlicek, Lenny Wilkens and Tom Meschery didn't make that team and they were "outstanding, great players."

The juniors, Newell was talking about include Ewing, the 7-foot center who led Georgetown to this year's NCAA championship and Jordan, the College Player of the Year.

Ewing returned to practice Wednesday after sitting out much of Tuesday's scrimmage game while his sore knees were packed in ice.

Wayman Tisdale, Oklahoma's 6-10 All-American sophomore, was expected back today after missing Wednesday's workouts because of an aggravated Achilles heel.

Steve Black, La Salle guard, missed Tuesday and Wednesday action with a sprained big toe, and Santa Clara's 7-2 Nick Vanos suffered a thigh bruise Tuesday.

Knight said that injuries wouldn't necessarily rule a player off the Olympic team now, pointing out that guard Leon Wood of Fullerton State made the Pan American team last year despite missing those trials because of an ankle injury.

"It would depend on what he's done and what the people involved in the selection process think," Knight said.

Knight, a hard taskmaster while winning two NCAA championships and producing a 398-143 (.736) career mark in 19 years of college coaching, has been impressed with the work of the Olympic hopefuls.

"These players have really worked hard," Knight said. "There are a lot of players out there playing to make the team."

Knight praised the group for being "awfully good in generalities in trying to do those simple things that we have set up as guidelines for them."

Economic growth takes astonishing step forward

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew an astonishing 8.3 percent from January through March, the government reported today, as the pace of the nation's recovery from the recession continued to confound the experts.

The Commerce Department last month had estimated economic growth, after adjusting for inflation, at 7.2 percent, far above the 6 percent predicted by most economists.

That preliminary "flash" estimated was based on data from January and February, when business activity as measured by various government indicators was extremely brisk.

After a string of reports showing much slower March activity, however, most economists predicted the 7.2 percent estimate would be revised downward, probably to 6 percent to 6.5 percent.

Instead, the department's revision announced today went the other way, raising growth, as measured by the gross national product, to 8.3 percent, compared to 5 percent in the final three months of 1983.

The department said real GNP increased $31.8 billion in the first quarter, due mainly to large increases in personal consumption spending and business inventory investment.

About half the increase in business inventory investment came from an $8.7 billion jump in farm inventories, due primarily to the receipt of crops by farmers under the federal government's payment-in-kind subsidy program.

The overall January-March surge of 8.3 percent was the strongest showing since a 9.7 percent increase in GNP during the April-June period last year as the recovery from the 1981-82 recession was beginning to pick up steam. That increase was followed by a 7.6 percent gain in the third quarter and 5 percent jump in the fourth quarter.

Inflation also picked up somewhat in this year's first quarter, with prices as measured by the GNP fixed-weighted index gaining 4.7 percent, compared to 4.2 percent in the fourth quarter.

When the department released its flash estimate last month, it raised fears that the economy was growing so fast that it would oveheat and trigger a new round of inflation.

Economists began to talk of a "boom-bust" cycle in which the economy surges along with high consumer demand outpacing industry's ability to supply products, forcing prices to rise until higher inflation brings everything to a crashing halt.

But those fears have eased somewhat in recent weeks following a string of indicators showing lower economic activity in March. Even with today's upward revision of economic growth, analysts said it was obvious that expansion will slow substantially in the current quarter, with many estimates around 4 percent.

Economists based their predictions of slower economic growth on reports of business activity in March, which uniformly have pointed in that direction.

Unemployment, which had declined for six months, held steady in March; retail sales dropped 2.2 percent and construction of new homes and apartments plummeted 26.6 percent, the sharpest decline on record.

And on Wednesday, the government reported that personal income rose only 0.5 percent in March, a third of January's increase, while spending for consumer products declined.

It has been the strong surge in consumer spending that has powered much of the recovery.

Today's GNP report said personal consumption expenditures for the quarter increased $14.6 billion, after factoring out inflation, with purchases of durable goods, products such as cars and appliances, up $6.7 billion and purchases of nondurable goods up $5.5 billion. Spending on services, which includes monthly housing payments, increased $2.5 billion.

Governor applaudes Midland-Odessa unity

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Governor Mark White verbally applauded Midland and Odessa's new spirit of unity and cooperation at a reception Wednesday at Texas Instruments facility.

"I am pleased to see this blending of the two towns," he said, "together you will be a larger economic unit and a prominent force in attracting new industry."

He offered Dallas-Fort Worth and Texas University and Texas A&M as prime examples of friendly rivals joining in cooperation to obtain a common goal.

"Dallas and Fort Worth put aside their rivalry to build DFW — an airport that is the envy of the nation. Together they did something that neither one of them working alone could have done, and both cities are much better off for it," White said.

He praised the cooperation between Texas A&M and University of Texas for helping bring the Microelectronics Computer Corp (MCC) a consortium of 12 large, high tech firms to Austin.

"Together these two schools comprise an educational system unmatched anywhere in the world. They offered MCC an educational support system that could not be matched anywhere in any other state."

The governor boasted that MCC was a catch that made Texas the envy of every other state. "California even had an investigation to find out why they didn't get the complex," he said.

White hinted that the state might be ready to put together higher educational programs in the Permian Basin to help Midland-Odessa attract diversified industry.

The TeleVideo PC - The Word Processor That Keeps Books, Payroll and Your Oil and Gas Accounting!

Word Processing - the greatest improvement in office productivity since the telephone. No wonder companies spend as much as $12,000 for a system that does nothing but word processing. For oil and gas accounting, payroll or the personal productivity applications modern managers want - nothing equals a personal computer.

Introducing the TeleVideo Word Processing system from MIDA Computer Center - a TeleVideo PC, a QUME letter quality printer and WORDPERFECT® word processing program. Rounding out the package, we've included a pass to attend a MIDA Computer Center Seminar to learn to achieve maximum productivity from your system.

But, this system doesn't quit at word processing. The TeleVideo PC gives you access to thousands of IBM compatible applications - like oil and gas accounting, management modeling, electronic spreadsheets, payroll, data communications and many more - limited only by your needs and imagination.

The fact is, we've never offered a more cost effective way to apply problem solving and productive power to the office environment.

See for yourself what the TeleVideo Word Processing system and MIDA Computer Center can do to enhance your productivity!

TXO achieves all-time high levels of net income

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Texas Oil & Gas Corp. achieved all-time high levels of net income in the second quarter and first half of fiscal 1984. For the three months ended Feb. 29, 1984, net income rose 20 percent to $87,960,000, or 42 cents per share, compared with $73,302,000, or 35 cents per share, reported in the same quarter of the prior year. In the first half of fiscal 1984, net income totaled $167,438,000, or 80 cents per share, up 18 percent over the year-earlier $141,926,000, or 68 cents per share. (Per-share numbers are adjusted for the 10 percent stock dividend distributed in July 1983 as well as the 2-for-1 stock split made in Jan. 1984.)

William L. Hutchison, chairman of the board, and Forrest E. Hoglund, president and chief executive officer, attributed the record results to a strong upturn in gas gathering delivery volumes and increased production of Comkpany-owned natural gas, crude oil and condensate, partially offset by lower margins and prices.

Second quarter revenues were up 18 percent to $572,673,000 compared with $484,951,000 a year earlier. Six-month revenues aggregated $1,060,236,000, a gain of 16 percent over the fiscal 1983 first half level of $915,040,000.

Gas gathering revenues in the second quarter were up 15 percent over the same quarter a year ago to $358,471,000; oil and gas revenues were 28 percent higher at $197,539,000; and drilling revenues advanced 10 percent to $8,515,000. for the six months, gas gathering revenues rose 14 percent to $664,739,000; oil and gas revenues increased 21 percent to $361,973,000; and drilling revenues were up 4 percent to $17,346,000.

Throughput volumes in the second quarter were at the highest level in the company's history averaging 1,529,873 thousand cubic feet (Mcf) per day, a gain of 47 percent over the prior year. For the six months, daily gas gathering deliveries averaged 1,294,651 Mcf, up 30 percent. Offsetting these record volumes were lower unit margins, reflecting the effects of market pressures in many of our operating areas caused by the continuing, although diminishing, natural gas deliverability surplus and the Tatham acquisition. This weakness is evident in the gross gas gathering differentials (gas gathering revenues, including natural gas liquids, less the cost of gas purchases). Although at a record second-quarter level, the differential rose only 11 prcent to $69,680,000. For the six months, the differential was 7 percent higher at $138,303,000. Second quarter deliveries did benefit from the strnegthening economy, cold weather and additional throughput attributable to the Tatham pipeline systems that TXO and MidCon Corp. jointly acquired on Dec. 30, 1983.

Natural gas liquid (NGL) sales volumes rose 7 percent in the second quarter to 2.1 million barrels while first-half NGL sales were up 9 percent to 4.2 million barrels. NGL prices were slightly lower in both the second quarter and six months as compared with the prior-year periods.

Natural gas production was up 31 percent in the second quarter to 49 billion cubic feet (Bcf), and in the six-month period it was 21 percent higher at 89 Bcf. Average gas prices were 6 percent lower at $3.10 per Mcf in the second quarter and 7 percent lower at $3.06 in the half. Crude oil and condensate production rose 76 percent to 1.4 million barrels in the quarter and increased 79 percent to 2.8 million barrels for the half. Average prices in the respective fiscal 1984 periods were 6 prcent lower at $29.60 pr barrel in the six months.

Hutchison and Hoglund added, "The strengthening of natural gas demand, especially in our primary Texas and Louisiana markets, underscores the fragility of the current gas deliverability surplus. The improving economy has spurred industrial sales of natural gas while the cold wave this part winter led to a sharp draw-down of supplies. Since industry-wide gas drilling declined considerably in calendar 1983, it is becoming increasingly apparent that the potential exists for a serious shortage of natural gas deliverability to occur within this decade unless steps are taken soon to avert it.

"Texas Oil & Gas is committed to expanding its reserve base, as witnessed by its growing capital spending programs and its past record of reserve replacement. These accomplishments have been achieved while increasing our financial strength. We still expect internally generated cash flow to fund a very substantial portion of our 1984 capital expenditures program which is currently budgeted at about $750 million.

"TXO still has substantial unused delivery and production capabilities which, combined with the company's continued emphasis on low-cost gas and our ongoing search for new opportunities, provide TXO excellent prospects for the future.

"Reflecting the positive results in the first half of this fiscal year and the improving outlook for gas demand, we have raised our fiscal 1984 net income goal to a gain of between 15 and 20 percent over the prior year's record $296 million, barring unforseen circumstances. At this juncture, we have every confidence in attaining that target. We are even more hopeful about what lies beyond the current fiscal year."

Oil firms to spend more for exploration, production

From Staff Reports

DALLAS — Major and large independent oil companies plan a 22.4 percent increase in their United States exploration and production expenditures during 1984, according to arecent report in Drilling, the Wellsite Publication.

The spending jump over 183 includes heavy exploratory drilling monies for the Gulf of Mexico, offshore Texas, and Louisiana. Most of the oil companies' onshore dollars will be spent developing reasonably mature oil basins. Onshore gas drilling, for te most part, will be deferred until 1985.

Despite recent mergers and reserve purchases by the larger operators, exploratory work is expected to make up a substantial share, 13.8 percent, of the major and large independent oil compaies' drilling activity for 1984. In addition to the Gulf of Mexico, special exploratory emphasis will continue to be placed on Alaska, its surrounding waters, and offshore California.

During 1984, according to the Drilling Magazine Study, oil compaies will drill 71 percent of their wells in search of oil and 25 percent in search of gas. The remainder are scheduled to be service and enhanced recovery wells.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Enstar shareholder may back another fight

HOUSTON — Enstar Corp.'s second largest shareholder said he will back another dissident holder's planned proxy fight if the company isn't sold in the next two months.

Thomas C. Thompson, leader of an investment group holding about 7.1 percent of Enstar's common outstanding, rejected the company's invitation for him to join its board. Enstar had asked Thompson to become a director, and thereby serve as an 'independent watchdog' over management. The move had been viewed as an attempt by Enstar to placate angry shareholders who seek the sale of the company.

Three Denver firms to acquire leases

Harrison Interests Ltd. of Houston and Constellation Group limited and Crux Ltd. of Denver have completed arrangements for the acquisition of the interests owned by APD and Natomas in a 2,250,000 acre block of leases in northeastern Arkansas, eastern Missouri, western Tennessee and Kentucky. Considerable interests have been shown recently by the oil industry in this area of the Mississippi Embayment known as the Reelfoor Rift.

After reviewing over 3,000 miles of seismic data acquired by the participants in this project, ten prospects have been selected to be drilling initially. The proposed depths of the ten wildcats to test these prospects range between 2,550 feet and 14,200 feet and Harrison has been named operator of this project.

PA, Reed merge to form Baker Tubular

HOUSTON — J.D. Woods, president of oilfield operations for Baker International announced recently that PA Inc. and Reed Tubular Products company have been merged into the newly formed Baker Tubular Services Inc. Roy J. Witten has been named president and chief executive officer. All of the operations and marketing activities of Reed Tubular Products and PA Inc. have been combined in order to provide a comprehensive range of tubular services to the petroleum industry worldwide.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks were broadly lower through morning trading today, although some issues were narrowing their losses.

Stock prices came under pressure from news that the economy expanded at a brisk pace in the first quarter, renewing Wall Street's fears of higher interest rates and renewed inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 8.06 on Wednesday, lost another 3.56 to 1,152.95 after two hours of trading today. The measure had been off 4½ points early in the session, however.

Losers held a 7-4 lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index fell 0.23 to 90.60.

Big Board volume totaled 32.21 million shares at noon EST, compared with 39.96 million at that hour Wednesday.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.03 to 208.08.

Americans pay for cost government

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that most of us have settled up our 1983 taxes, we can go on to thinking about something else — like, for instance, 1984 taxes.

Maybe you'd prefer to pick some other subject. But whether you choose to think about it or not, Americans are constantly paying as they go for the cost of government, through the marvels of such things as withholding and quarterly estimated taxes.

In fact, says the Tax Foundation, a non-profit research organization, all the labors of a typical American worker so far in 1984 have not yet been enough to pay off his or her tax burden for the year.

What the foundation calls "Tax Freedom Day" arrives on May 1. "This date," it says, "marks the day the average taxpayer would finish satisfying obligations to federal, state and local governments if every dollar earned from Jan. 1 went to the tax collector."

The "tax freedom" date is the same as last year's. But since 1984 is a leap year, it is taking a typical worker one more day this year to get to that point.

"That additional day is needed despite a drop in the federal tax bite," the foundation points out. "What Uncle Sam's tax cut leaves in taxpayers' pockets, state and local governments will take out, plus a little more."

Taxes have long since become the biggest single item in the average family's overall budget. According to Tax Foundation calculations, they account for slightly more than the next two major expenditures — housing and food — combined.

In an average worker's eight-hour day on the job, the foundation reports, the proceeds of two hours and forty minutes go to taxes — an hour and 43 minutes' worth to the federal government, and another 57 minutes' worth to state and local governments.

Next on the list comes "housing and household operation," one hour and 34 minutes, followed by food, an hour and four minutes; transportation, 42 minutes; medical care, 36 minutes, and clothing, 21 minutes.

That leaves just 20 minutes' worth for recreational spending, and another 43 minutes for "all other," which the foundation defines as "consumer expenditures for items such as personal business and private education, and savings."

Of course, taxes buy a wide variety of government services. To provide a picture of where federal taxes go, the Tax Foundation used the example of someone earning $26,000 in 1984.

This worker pays $6,509 in federal taxes, either directly in income and Social Security payments, or indirectly through such things as corporate income taxes, employers' Social Security contributions, and excise taxes on liquor, gasoline, tobacco and air travel.

Of this $6,509, more than 80 percent goes for four major categories of expense — income security, national defense, interest and health.

Income security costs are expected to be lower overall this year than last, largely because unemployment has declined with the economic recovery. Still, they take $2,055 (counting in Social Security), or nearly a third of the total.

After that come defense, $1,775; interest payments, $809, and health, including Medicare, $685.

If you take into account the federal budget deficit, estimated at $184 billion, there is an extra burden of $1,845 that falls on the family with an income of $26,000.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

How do you get on DRP plan?

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Some companies have dividend reinvestment plans (DRPs) through which stockholders can use their dividends to buy more shares of stock. How do I get in on such a plan? Do I write the company in whose plan I would like to participate? Or, do I have to deal with a broker?

A. The first thing you have to do is buy stock in the company. The normal way to do that is through a broker. After that, all your dealings can be with the company's DRP agent. Some companies act as their own DRP agents. Most turn that chore over to banks.

Most likely, along with your stock certificate, you will receive a letter of welcome from the company's president or chairman and literature explaining the DRP. If the company has such a plan and you are not sent literature right off the bat, you'll find it mentioned in the company's annual report to stockholders.

Sign up for the plan and, from that time on and until you cancel out of the plan, your dividends will be applied to buy more full and fractional shares of company stock. It's as simple as that. Your dividends will compound, through reinvestment, and each subsequent dividend will be larger — unless the company reduces its dividend payments.

Many companies with DRPs also allow stockholders who participate in those plans to make optional additional investments by sending in money to buy still more shares. Some give discounts on the prices of shares purchased through dividend reinvestments. A smaller number give discounts on optional additional investments.

Although the details of these plans vary from one company to another, most have very low — or no — charges on either dividend reinvestment or optional additional investments. That can save you a bundle, in comparison to buying through a broker.

White's reception

White honored for bringing relief

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Bill Turnbow of Imperial sold his last head of cattle a week ago and on Wednesday he watched as Gov. Mark White was applauded for his efforts last summer to bring a drought relief program to West Texas.

The celebration sponsored by the Midland County Democratic Party was held in the Midland Hilton and drew about 200 persons from throughout West Texas — towns such as Andrews, Seminole, Junction, Big Spring, Rankin and San Saba.

There were county judges, including Upton County Judge Peggy Garner who presented White with his awards: an ear of dried corn and a rain gauge with sand in it.

There were jokes about the drought, such as the three men who died and met St. Peter at the gates of Heaven. The man from New York and the one from California were sent to Hell; the man from West Texas went through the Pearly Gates because he had already lived in Hell.

But they all wanted one thing that White couldn't give them and it was voiced by Judge Garner: "Please give us rain."

The Democratic governor, who had spent the day in the Republican stronghold of Midland, answered that he had hopes when he arrived that morning and saw a few clouds. But they had dissipated by the time the reception had started.

He acknowledged that "all the political speeches couldn't take the place of one, good, slow 2 inch rain."

Agriculture is one of the major industries in Texas and in the country, White said, and many people have forgotten it.

"A lot of people think it means growing corn. It's more than that. It's feed and seed and grain. It's tractors and the industries that make them. It's steel and steel mills; coal and iron ore mining," the governor said.

"You're talking about the single most important industry in this country."

White said in a press conference earlier in the day that the state had used up its funds to clean up the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia. So the state had turned its eye to the federal government for drought relief.

Former teacher receives 10 years on drug charge

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Former Jane Long Elementary School teacher Rosie Luna lowered her head and cried audibly Wednesday after Judge Pat M. Baskin announced that jurors had sentenced her to 10 years in prison on a delivery of heroin charge.

The 27-year-old mother of two and former fourth grade teacher had pleaded guilty during the two-day trial and was seeking probation from the four-man, eight-woman racially mixed jury.

"I'm pleased," Chief Assistant District Attorney Michael Williams said of the sentence, even though he had sought a 15-year prison term.

"I think it sends the message that no person in this community is above the law and that the community will not tolerate drug dealing."

Defense attorneys Kit and Coll Bramblett of El Paso said the case will be appealed. Ms. Luna will remain free on a $15,000 appeal bond set by Baskin.

Ms. Luna admitted selling two grams of heroin to a Department of Public Safety narcotics agent at her South Cottonflat Road mobile home last November. She obtained the heroin from an Odessa dealer for $900 and charged a $50 "go-between" fee.

She testified that she does not use drugs and needed the money to buy groceries for her family. She said she "was desperate" because her husband of 10 years — 31-year-old Heradio Luna Jr. — was "an addict" who stole money from her. She divorced him earlier this year.

Both Lunas were arrested Jan. 6 and he now is serving an eight-year prison term after pleading guilty to a delivery of cocaine charge stemming from the same DPS investigation.

Ms. Luna was suspended from her teaching job following her arrest and is now working as a waitress in Van Horn, where she attended high school with defense attorney Coll Bramblett.

Jurors spent four hours deliberating the sentence after Williams held up the packet of heroin used as evidence and said during summation:

"She's a dope dealer. We're not talking about marijuana. We're not talking about Valium. We're talking about heroin. She says she's sorry, but she's really sorry she got caught.

"The last link in the judicial process is you. You don't want to say, 'Well, we're gonna wait two times before we send 'em to prison.'"

Ms. Luna could have been sentenced to a minimum of five years and a maximum of life.

In deciding on the 10-year sentence, jury foreman Radford J. Anderson said, "Our main objective was that it will sever all ties with her and her (former) husband's acquaintances in the drug world."

Jurors were not allowed to know that Ms. Luna is under indictment in Ector County on another delivery of heroin charge because that case has not come to trial yet.

Tax collection estimate right 'on the money'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson last May projected a 93 percent collection of 1983 taxes for funding 1984 budgets.

It's almost a year later, and he seems to be on the money.

"It (the projection) was because of the trend in the economy," Wilkinson said Wednesday. "It was before The First (National Bank of Midland) buckled over and bellied up in October," he said.

"I don't know if I was looking into a crystal ball," he said.

So far, the Midland County Appraisal District has collected about 89 percent of taxes for operation of the city of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District.

By the end of May, Wilkinson expects collections to be at 93½ percent or about $45 million of the $48 million in tax revenue.

Balance of the approximately $45 million in revenue is to be brought in as delinquent taxes.

"So, the economy of this area has a negative impact on collections," he said.

The collection of 1982 taxes in 1983 was 96 percent.

Delinquent tax notices were sent out after Jan. 31 — deadline for payment of 1983 taxes. Reminder notices will be mailed out in mid-May.

"And we're not rolling over and playing dead," Wilkinson said. "We're pursuing to the full extent of the law our collections. Just because a person is delinquent now doesn't mean we'll let him continue (being delinquent) without legal prosecution."

After Jan. 31, penalty and interest are added to delinquent taxes on a graduated scale. In February, the penalty and interest charges are 7 percent and increase to 9 percent in March, 11 percent in April, 13 percent in May, 15 percent in June and 18 percent in July. And that, charges go up 1 percent a month.

By July, the law allows the district's delinquent-tax attorney, Jimmie D. Oglesby, to add on a 15 percent attorney's fee.

Wilkinson said the four taxes entities are basing their budgets on the 93 percent rate of collections.

"Oh, we can do better than that," Gil Tompson, chairman of the appraisal district's board, had asked Wilkerson in a board meeting earlier Wednesday.

"I don't know," Wilkinson said. "It depends on what comes in in June."

ECISD board saves four jobs in cutbacks

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County and its school district have cut almost $3 million from their budgets since residents voted Jan. 21 to roll back the tax rates.

The school board voted to cut $2 million from its 1984-85 budget Tuesday night, while saving the jobs of two librarians and two secondary school counselors the staff had recommended be cut to bring the budget within rollback restrictions.

County Commissioners sliced $934,000 from the county's 1983-84 budget within a week of the January rollback vote, in which almost 65 percent of 12,291 ballots cast were for the tax cuts.

The Property Tax Code sets out the mechanism by which residents can force their public officials to keep their tax rate hikes to 8 percent. Under the provisions of this code resulting from the Peveto Bill, the county had to make its changes in mid-budget year, while the school district could wait until the next fiscal year's budget to make cuts.

More than $700,000 of the school district's cuts came from staff, with 43 positons dropped to bring the tax rate within the law. Another $910,216 came from capital outlays, including $520,000 less needed to purchase 12 buses during 1984-85 (26 were bought during the current year) and $275,000 cut in furniture and equipment purchases.

The county, which had already eliminated 46 positions in November budget cuts before the rollback, resorted to other areas in reducing the budget.

Indigent care funds were cut by $500,000, as it was determined the amount budgeted would not be needed to pay the medical bills of indigent county residents. County road maintenance may suffer because of the rollback. Commissioners also voted to cut the Farm-To-Market, Lateral Road Fund by $152,000.

While both entities cut a number of positions, actual employees were not axed in all cases. The ECISD dropped 10 spots that were jobs left unfilled since they had been vacated or expected to be open by the start of the new budget year, Sept. 1.

The county's cuts did cost some people their jobs, but several departments had a number of open positions although hiring had been authorized during budget sessions.

For example, Sheriff Bob Brookshire had 13 of 78 spots approved in the original budget dropped in the November and rollback cuts, but eight of these positions had not been filled.

The school district, whose budget is much larger than the county's, estimated savings to taxpayers at $3-4 for every $10,000 in property taxed. A taxpayer with a $50,000 home figures to pay the ECISD $15-$20 less because of the rollback — which cost the district more than $2 million in revenues.

County calculations indicated taxpayers with property valued at less than $70,000 would save less than

Tennis champion McEnroe set to play charity match

From Staff Reports

Former Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion John McEnroe will play a charity exhibition tennis match at the Al Langford Chaparral Center Aug. 9, it was revealed today.

Final details are still pending, but McEnroe is expected to play Vitas Geruliatis or another internationally known opponent.

A doubles exhibition, involving players from West Texas and the pros, also will be scheduled.

Tickets are expected to range from $15 to $25.

It was McEnroe who broke Bjorn Borg's long reign as Wimbledon champion. He then won Wimbledon again in 1983 over unknown Chris Lewis. McEnroe defeated the New Zealander in three 6-2 sets to win the title.

Last fall McEnroe was on his way to another anticipated meeting with Jimmy Connors in the U.S. Open when he was beached by Bill Scanlon in a major surprise.

In Geruliatis, he will be facing an opponent who has been a regular in the top 10 of tour tennis.

The tournament is being arranged by the Tennis Over America Tour.

ED TODD

This country needs another Alexander Hamilton & Co.

What this country really needs is a wise, Benevolent Dictator. Clones of the omnipotent are in want at every level of government to ensure an idyllic society.

After all, politicians in all of their wiles and fickleness have yet to succeed in bringing about order.

Of course, the problem with the Benevolent Dictator concept is that Murphy's Law would prevail and decadence would undermine the ideal. The powers would have to build an army of enforcers; a police state would reign. Benevolence would turn into malevolence. The "troops" — the people — wouldn't stand for a feedlot existence. The country would go into chaos and rebellion; detention wards, jails, prisons and graveyards would be overcrowded. It wouldn't work.

And the malcontent populous would want another form of government.

Well, this country is blessed with that other form of government. It limps along. It has problems.

One of its biggest woes is complacency. It didn't start out that way.

Alexander Hamilton & Co. in 1787 wrote a remarkable document: the United States Constitution. And no one since apparently has proposed a "more perfect" document, though many try to revise it to the grief of many others. The existing powers resist any radical change in the government, defy any attempt to write a new constitution as if The Constitution were sacred and as infallible as universal laws.

What this country needs is a another Hamilton, another Thomas Jefferson, another Benjamin Franklin, another James Madison. It needs great leaders to challenge the status quo, to shake this nation out of its lethargy, to reform government and to revitalize the whole system.

Something's not right with this nation. And a new set of politicians certainly is no panacea. That's tantamount to getting new baling wire to patch a worn-out Model T car. All it's holding together is junk and ruin.

Any attempt to overthrow the government and to bring about a new order would be insurrection. That would be against established order and not nice. Certainly, this nation doesn't want another Civil War; that would be unbearable.

The people of this nation no doubt need to be shaken before they'll make a concerted effort to bring about reform for the good of all. Taking potshots, which is what anti-tax protesters do, at the government is ineffective. In their vanity, their little egos are butting up against the bigger egos of the establishment; there's no contest.

This nation needs another Constitutional Convention primarily to force the people to take an inventory of themselves and the nation. That would be a beginning.

Even in perfect order, man has a penchant for bringing in chaos. Vanity, pride and avarice consume him. He sees nothing greater than himself, and that is his downfall. He forgets about his Creator and the spiritual world. He becomes a vain fool, a godless soul. It is no wonder that he sinks into hedonism and then into nihilism. When he gives up, he may have a chance.

Tattoo artist adorned by bat

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Jane Ellingston grew up in the conservative Texas city of Groves. The daughter of a refinery chemical engineer, she still believes in the things she learned in that quiet home town, loves animals and does not do drugs. Rather dull, unless you fail to notice — and you'd have to be blind as one to miss it — that she has a bat wrapped around her neck.

Jane "Rebel" Ellingston is a tattoo artist. When she was 12 she was fascinated with an uncle who had a hoola girl tattooed on his arm. He would, to the delight of Jane, already nicknamed "Rebel," make the tattoo "dance" by flexing his muscle. At 17, Rebel took some India ink, cotton thread and a pencil eraser to her arm and fashioned a tiny heart, a "prison tattoo."

Today, at 37, Rebel has won two national awards for her work.

The tiny heart has become the center of an elaborate design made of 42 tattoos on her body. She said that when she began there were only 12 women tattoo artists in the country. The bat was put on her neck, as were the blue and red designs above her thin tattooed blue eyebrows, and the black panther on her breast, by her mentor, Houston tattoo artist John Stucky.

Behind all the ink, Rebel is a soft-spoken lady with hip-length hair who attracts plainclothes police officers every time she shops at Walmart.

She has studied art, taking classes in high school and at Lamar University. As for tattooing, Rebel has learned her trade well. She can tell you that it was popular to get your favorite movie star's face etched on your buttocks in the 1920s. It began as a ritual to honor the dead in ancient times when grieving loved ones would knock out their own teeth and cut their skin and pour ink into the scars to honor the dead.

Today it is all the rage to have your makeup — lipstick, rouge, the works — tattooed on your face.

She demonstrates her art on her husband, Spider. He is also a five-year veteran of the trade. His nickname was a natural result of the spider and web that begins at his check bone and ends just below his eye. She is painting the hair on two lovelies that will grace his arm. A round needle is used and Rebel admits, though Spider will not, that the process is slightly painful.

The skin is cleaned and shaved first. To make the lines, needles penetrate the skin 1/16 of an inch. Special non-toxic ink is used. They say it feels like a bee sting at first but the skin numbs after a while.

Rebel's clientele has included sorority members who were into the cute bikini tattoos that can only be seen on the beach. Some even have their Alpha Psi tattooed on their thighs. Most of her customers in Port Arthur are roofers.

She said she has also seen some "weirdos." While she was apprenticing in Houston, an elderly man brought his wife into the parlor and asked for a private session. As soon as the curtain was pulled, he ordered his distinguished-looking wife to "drop her laundry." He gave her a sharp slap on the "derriere" and asked for his hand print to be permanently inked there. It cost him $1,800.

Many of the "skins," small paper patterns that the tattoo artists work from, are very detailed and could take more than one session to complete, said Rebel. She pointed out a beautiful dragon. It's cost is a cool $1,500.

MMH asking for type O blood donations

Midland Memorial Hospital personnel are asking Midlanders to donate O positive blood before leaving town for the Easter Holidays.

Due to an excess of patients recently needing that specific type of blood, the supply is running low.

The blood donor department, located in the basement of MMH, will be open until 4 p.m. today. Friday hours are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Grand jury probe contiunues into fire

From Staff Reports

The Midland federal grand jury convened again today as investigation continued of the burning of an Odessa office building.

At the time of the 1981 fire it was owned by the former mayor and a city councilman who is running for Ector County Commissioner.

Originally investigated by Odessa police as arson, the Nov. 25, 1981 fire at what was then called the O'Michael Building has been the subject of investigations by the Ector County District Attorney, FBI and the U.S Attorney's Office.

Among those subpoenaed to testify since the grand jury began meeting last November were Bob Bryant, mayor of Odessa for four years, and Keith Weddell, a former city councilman seeking a spot on the county Commissioners Court.

The building burned down soon after a bond issue failed in 1980 which proposed sites for a civic center.

The grand jury convened again Wednesday to hear more testimony and review evidence of the case. Among those in Midland for the proceedings was Mike Holmes, the Ector County District Attorney.

Bryant called the re-opening of the investigation so near the April 7 election in which he was defeated by John Minor "dirty politics". After losing, he suggested the publicity of the case hurt his re-election chances.

An out-of-court settlement has been reached between the owners of the building and the insurance company covering the building, which has since been refurbished by new owners and renamed the Jackson Center.

The man arrested for what was termed an "arson-for-hire" case in April 1982 by the city's fire marshal, John Thomas Peterson, Odessa, was never indicted by the county grand jury which reviewed the case. He is currently serving time in the Texas Department of Corrections for burglary.

County and city documents have been subpoenaed along with a string of former and present city and county officials. Any indictments that would be filed are not expected until May.

Also subpoenaed to testify Wednesday were Peterson's attorney, John Cliff, and John "Booker" Powell, who has been linked to Peterson in testimony from other cases heard in state district court in Odessa and is currently appealing convictions for aggravated kidnapping and promotion of prostitution.

White honored for bringing drought relief

Last summer's fight to get a federal drought program for West Texas was a hard battle waged by several sides, including federal officials and congressional leaders, he noted. The results came showering down in the fall in the form of low interest loans for farmers and ranchers and a grain program involving damaged corn being stored at Plainview.

But that drought relief program was "no good at all" for Turnbow, who owns Imperial Cattle Company. "It helped the sheep people. It was well meant, but it came too late. It would have been better in June."

State Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo also noted that the sheep raisers have fared better during the drought. But if the drought doesn't end by May, those people may be selling off their herds, too, he said.

If the rains don't come in late April or May, farmers will be kneedeep in trouble. "A lot of the topsoil will blow off" and farmers can't plant. "It will take extended rains" to solve the problems.

Turnbow, who has raised cattle as a hobby, sold 67 pair of registered cattle last year. After spending $23,000 last winter to feed the rest of his herd, he decided to part with them. The decision made by he and his wife came with tears, he noted. Last Thursday, Turnbow took the 56 pair of registered Simmental bulls, yearlings and heifers to San Angelo and sold them.

"My pastures are gone. There is no irrigation water out of Red Bluff Lake. Hay is too expensive. I didn't figure I could keep them another year at $25,000 to $30,000 for hay," said Turnbow.

It had taken him six years to get his cattle registered. Now his corrals are empty.

Even if the rains come this year, the pastures will need at least one year to recover from the drought. Then it will take several more years to build up a herd, said Turnbow, who pointed out he sold his breeders. If he bought calves to start a herd, it would require 27 months for each calf to be ready to breed.

Turnbow said he wasn't the only one selling off cattle last week: 7,000 head went on the auction block at San Angelo in a two-day period. If the trend continues, beef could rise to a high of $10 a pound within the next three years, he predicted.

The reception for White brought the Turnbows to Midland. "We're interested in what's going on," said Mrs. Turnbow. "When the weather retires you, you better find something else to do."

DEATHS

Mary Van Boyer

BIG SPRING — Mary Van Boyer, 78, of Big Spring died early Wednesday in a local hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Lucas-Brentwood Stair Chapel in Fort Worth, with burial in Rosehill Cemetery. Local arrangements were directed by Nalley, Pickle and Welch Funeral Home in Big Spring.

Mrs. Boyer, a Big Spring resident since 1974, was a Baptist and retired bookkeeper.

Tolva Blue

CRANE — Tolva Blue, 72, of Crane died Tuesday evening in a local hospital.

Services are tentatively scheduled for 2 p.m. Friday in First Baptist Church in Crane, with burial in Crane County Cemetery directed by Richard W. Box Funeral Home of Crane.

Mrs. Blue was owner of Blue Drilling Co. in Crane.

Micheal Knisely

Dr. Michael Knisely, 85, a longtime Midland chiropractor, died Monday in a local nursing home after a sudden illness.

Services were Tuesday in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Knisely was born Oct. 19, 1898, in Your, Pa. He had been a resident of Midland for the past 30 years.

Survivors include two sisters.

Ms. Maitland died Tuesday afternoon in a Midland hospital after a long illness.

Board saves four jobs in cutbacks

$10 on their adjusted tax bills. The rollback cost the county $880,000 — not counting costs for the election and reprinting tax forms, estimated at another $24,000.

But rollback supporters had stressed the issue was not the savings, but their dissatisfaction with public officials raising their taxes despite economic hard times.

Bill Norton, leader of efforts that garnered more than 13,000 signatures on separate petitions which called for the election, criticized officials for continuing with tax hikes while other businesses took steps to keep costs down.

On election night, Norton noted the rollback still allowed an 8 percent increase according to the complicated formula set up under the law.

"We couldn't cut them back on that," he said. "In any kind of other business, you wouldn't have to cut back if you got that kind of an increase."

Both the county and school district did make cutbacks, decreasing their budgets a total of $3 million.

Collection estimate 'on the money'

The board had discussed collecting taxes through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The FDIC, receiver of assets of the failed First National Bank, holds sheriff's sales of personal property to collect on what had been due to the bank.

"Could you tell the FDIC you want your cut or you'll shut them down?" jested David Grimes.

"I think," said Wilkinson, "they'd invite us to fly a kite somewhere."

Tompson and board members Grimes, Margaret Cowden and Walt Holton review statements of delinquent taxes.

"I hate to see these people here that are having (financial) trouble," said Tompson. "Of course, some are not having trouble."

Wilkinson noted that the 15 percent attorney's fees added to delinquent taxes will "make believers out of them."

Holton said starting the penalty and interest at 15 percent instead of 7 percent might cause problems for politicians.

"I think it'll be hard for some of those legislators to get re-elected if it started out at 15 (percent)," Holton said.

League of Women Voters to meet

The Midland League of Women Voters will have the second of two unit meetings at 7:30 p.m. today in the home of Charleen Rosebery, 14 Saddle Club.

The first unit meeting was to be at 9:30 a.m. today.

The meeting will focus on the organization and operation of Midland County in publishing the booklet "Know Your County." Because the first such study and publication was done in 1960, league members feel an updated version is critical.

The meeting also will feature a Midland County Library board representative who will outline the space and financial problems of the library. Comments and suggestion from league members will be welcomed.

Men arrested, charged with auto burglary

From Staff Report

Two men were arrested and charged with auto burglary Wednesday after police received a Crime Stoppers tip.

In the city jail under $10,000 bond each set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine were 18-year-old Darrell Eugene Kisto and 20-year-old David Allen Mason, both of 712 W. Michigan Ave.

They were arrested at their residence about 2 a.m. Wednesday. Officers said $3,000 worth of stolen property taken in several auto burglaries was recovered as a result of the tip and an investigation by city police.

The Crime Stoppers program offers rewards for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons responsible for crimes. The number is 694-TIPS. Callers may remain anonymous. Rewards are also for information leading to the apprehension of wanted persons.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen peers out the window of a Metropolitan Transit Authority bus as he rides from Rice University to downtown Houston Tuesday. Ford calls for repeal of War Powers Act

Gerald Ford

HOUSTON (AP) — A law which requires congressional approval to keep U.S. troops in combat more than 90 days is unconstitutional and a danger to the nation, former President Gerald Ford says.

Ford, who spoke Wednesday at the University of Houston's law school, called for repeal of the War Powers Act on the grounds it gives the legislative branch of government the equivalent of veto power over the executive branch.

"The act is harmful and detrimental to our national security because it enables an enemy power to know what a U.S. president can or can't do" and plan its strategy accordingly, Ford said.

The law passed Congress in 1973 in the wake of the Vietnam War.

Secretary of State George Shultz recently called for a review of the act, saying it makes a sensible U.S. policy in Lebanon impossible. Some congressional critics have questioned whether President Reagan has violated the act by sending military advisers to Central America.

Ford also called for revision of an act Congress passed in 1974 to reform the federal budget-making process and to stop a president from impounding refusing to spend funds appropriated for specific purposes. This legislation has made budget-making more unwieldy and deprived the president of powers he needs to exercise his authority properly, Ford said.

"It's a disgrace the way Congress is handling our federal fiscal affairs," he said. "Businessmen who acted that way would go to jail."

Congress should lift the ban on impoundments and permit the veto of specific items in appropriation bills so the president can have the legislative clout he needs to control expenditures, Ford said.

He was the first speaker in a newly established lecture series sponsored by the law firm of Butler & Binion.

Prosecutors: Drunken driving charge should lead to probation revocation

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors say a drunken driving charge should lead a state judge to revoke the probation of a man convicted of shooting his comatose father in what was called an act of mercy.

Assistant District Attorney George Godwin asked state District Judge Ted Poe Tuesday to revoke the three-year probated term given to Billy Ray Clore.

Clore, 26, was convicted in July of attempted murder in the shooting of his father, 62-year-old Robert Clore Sr. The elder Clore, whose kidneys had failed, had been comatose for several weeks when he was shot March 21, 1983. He died 12 days later, but medical experts disagreed whether the gunshot wound was the cause of death.

Godwin contends Billy Ray Clore violated a term of his probation which forbade him to drink and another which required him to ask permission before leaving Harris County. He was arrested March 3 in the parking lot of a convenience store in Euless, near Fort Worth.

School bands earn superior ratings

Bands of Lee High, Midland High and San Jacinto Junior High schools earned superior ratings in the UIL Band Concert and Sightreading Contest in Odessa recently. Both high schools won UIL Sweepstakes for earning superior ratings in concert, sightreading and marching contests.

Nine Midland bands participated. Second bands entered by both high schools earned superior ratings in concert and excellent in sightreading. Lee Freshman and Alamo Junior High were rated superior in sightreading. Midland Freshman earned a rating of excellent in both categories and Goddard Junior High got an excellent rating in concert and superior in sightreading.

Traffic signals to be shorter on Loop 250

The traffic signals along Loop 250 have been changed to cut the maximum waiting time at any light in half, according to a release from the city of Midland traffic engineering department. The division is asking for comments from the public and these may be directed to Traffic Engineer Fred McGary, 683-4281, extension 282.

The original traffic light timing system was designed by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation to meet needs when traffic along Loop 250 were at designed levels. Present traffic volumes are much lower, according to the release.

With the change, motorists making a left turn from Loop 250 must observe the stop at the next signal instead of proceeding across the intersection as they did under the old phasing. Through traffic across Loop 250 won't have a protected left turn during the entire phase as before but will have to turn with caution on green or wait for the left turn arrow at the end of the green phase.

These changes switched the signal sequence from a five phase to a three phase operation.

Flaky pie crusts take the cake

By LINDA ANDERSON

Quick quiz: What is one baked food that serves as a base for many favorite recipes? What baked good has very few ingredients to confuse the cook? What baked good causes the most headaches for many cooks because its few ingredients are still difficult to mix properly?

The answer to all three questions is, of course, pie crust. It doesn't matter how delicious the pie filling is — if the pie crust isn't right the whole pie often ends up in the trash or down the garbage disposal.

Aware of this, some manufacturers of baked items and mixes offer help for those frustrated by pie crusts, or those who are short of time. We tested two of these products for taste, texture, price and ease of use.

Pillsbury All Ready Pie Crusts are exactly what the name implies: two 9-inch pie crusts, already rolled into circles, separated by plastic sheets and neatly folded in quarters. All the cook has to do is open the box, pull off the plastic and lay the pie crust in the pie plate. What could be easier?

Betty Crocker Pie Crust Mix is more of a challenge — but not much more. The mix has all the ingredients necessary for two 9-inch pie crusts except water. All the cook has to do is add the right amount of water, mix it and roll the crust into shape. Because this mix does require some effort on the part of the cook, it can be more truthfully called "homemade."

Pillsbury pie crusts cost $1.49 for a 15-oz. box containing two pie crusts. Betty Crocker mix cost 99-cents for an 11-oz. box and contained enough mix to make two crusts. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

We made two peach pies using the same recipe for the filling of both pies. The pies were taste-tested by adults and teenagers. (The 3-year-old tester said, "I don't like pie!" and refused to touch either one.)

One teenage tester was reluctant to taste either pie because she, too, "doesn't like pie." After some pleading, begging and threats from the cook, she tasted both and said the Betty Crocker tasted more like homemade. The other teen prefered the Pillsbury because it tasted like bakery pie. ("I don't like homemade pie — I like bakery pie," she said.)

The two adults' opinions were divided — he liked the Pillsbury because it produced a darker pie crust ("I like dark crusts," he said), and I liked the Betty Crocker because it reminded me of my mother's pie crust: The world's finest.

Some of my co-workers also taste-tested the pies. (Since I started writing this column they have started meeting me at the door with eager and hungry expressions on their faces, and asking, "What are we tasting today?") Three of the four who taste-tested the pies chose the Betty Crocker crust, using descriptions such as "lighter," and "flaky."

Both the Pillsbury crusts and the Betty Crocker mix made delicious crusts. Both were flaky, although the Pillsbury seemed to be thicker and therefore heavier than the Betty Crocker. The Pillsbury did taste similar to bakery crust, while the Betty Crocker tasted more like "from scratch" pie crust. Both are of good enough quality to be served to guests. Or even in-laws.

And best of all, both are easy to use. For anyone who has ever goofed-up a pie crust, it is worth the price.

Television sets' prices steady

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Television sets today are better than those of the past but their price is only a bit higher.

Jacques Robinson of General Electric says the average retail price of a TV set in 1967 was $568. Had prices grown with the consumer price index increases, he says, the average set today would cost $1,682. However, the average price of a TV set in 1983 was only $585.

FDA to require sodium amounts on labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans with high blood pressure worried about reducing the sodium in their diets will find it easier next year to tell which processed foods to buy.

The Food and Drug Administration published in the Federal Register today a final regulation that will require food manufacturers to list the sodium content in many processed foods starting in July 1985.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler said the new rules "are of special importance to many Americans with high blood pressure, which can lead to stroke and heart attack ... Many individuals can lower their blood pressure by sodium restriction and weight reduction."

The FDA said most of the 2,400 public comments it received since first proposing the regulations in March 1983 favored adding sodium to the list of other minerals, calories, protein, carbohydrates, fats and vitamins disclosed on the nutrition labels.

All foods must disclose ingredients on the label, but manufacturers must add information about the nutritional content only when they fortify their foods — such as adding nutrients to a breakfast cereal — or make a health claim — such as "orange juice high in Vitamin C."

The FDA also spelled out what it will mean to say that a food is "low" or "reduced" in sodium, "sodium-free" or "unsalted."

Sodium, which occurs naturally in many foods, is a mineral as essential to the body as air and water. It is partly responsible for transmitting nerve impulses, nourishing the cells and it also works with other minerals, like potassium, to maintain the proper fluid balance in the body.

Once a week, every week, she spends a few hours visiting people who don't get a lot of visitors.

Sometimes she brings flowers. Sometimes a gift.

But most of the time, she brings what they appreciate most – herself.

And it isn't a one-way street. Because the people she visits give a lot to her, too. Their wisdom, their experience, their kindness.

In this country, the elderly suffer from many things. Yet one of the most crippling is also one of the easiest to cure. Loneliness.

You don't need a lot of money. You just need people who care enough to spend time with people.

There are a lot of people who can use your help. And a lot of ways you can help them.

Whether you spend a little time at a retirement home, give money to the college of your choice, or just lend a hand any way you can – your time, your money, your talents make a difference.

Because in the end, what you give isn't so important. That you do give is.

BETTER BUSINESS

Local businesses can face ad rip-offs

By LINDA TRUITT

Everyday owners of successful businesses are asked to buy advertising in directories, magazines, bulletins, coupon books and programs. They are solicited over the telephone, through the mail and in their places of business.

Advertising provides exposure which most businesses need in order to survive. It is a way to attract customers and build a good reputation in the community.

Unfortunately many unscrupulous operators sell advertising by making misleading claims with no intention of honoring the contract they made with the advertisers. Many of these companies have sold ads to local business based on the promise other local businesses have also purchased the ads and the publication would be distributed in locations of heavy traffic or the money would help religious, educational or charitable causes.

Better Business Bureau files are filled with examples of money taken from businesses which purchased advertising in publications not produced, were poor in quality or were not distributed as claimed. A recent example is a company, based in Conn., whose salesman contacted Odessa businesses offering discount coupons to be printed in a brochure and distributed through a fast food restaurant. Beginning April 1, 10,000 brochures were to be distributed by a restaurant with each participating business receiving 500. Each business paid $400 in advance.

As of this writing the brochures have not been delivered and attempts to contact the company have been unsuccessful. The BBB knows of 23 Odessa businesses which agreed to advertise. If the brochures are not delivered, a total of $9,200 will have been taken out of the community.

According to the BBB in Hartford, Conn., this same company has an unsatisfactory business performance record. Specifically the files show failure to answer complaints that allege not honoring contracts and an unwillingness to give refunds.

The BBB maintains files on thousands of businesses across the country, and although there are no guarantees, chances are high the organization knows about the company wanting to sell the ads. For questions about an advertising promotion, don't hesitate to call the BBB.

Please keep this in mind whenever considering spending advertising dollars: If advertising is bought from local, reputable businesses and non-profit organizations, the money can be used to build a stronger community. Buying advertising from unreliable companies means a larger risk of being conned, and the money is removed from the local economy.

DEAR ABBY

Reporter should rewrite future plans

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a bright, pretty, college-educated newspaper reporter in love with an older professional man. He's married and his wife is expecting next month. She conceived after I began seeing her husband, which made me doubt his love for me. He promised me that he would leave her and file for divorce as soon as the baby is born, but so far he hasn't even told his wife about me.

He is wonderful to me. He's loving, caring, generous, gentle, understanding and sincere.

Am I as stupid as I think I am? Am I ignoring the obvious? Should I wait until after the baby is born, or get out now? — BAFFLED

DEAR BAFFLED: Yes, you are as stupid as you think you are, if you think this man is sincere. Are you ignoring the obvious? Not any more; I think you are catching on.

Don't wait until the baby is born. Get out now. And stay away from married men. They make lousy husbands.

DEAR ABBY: A reader named Barbara who married a man named Gene McGraw asks, "Just who is Mrs. Gene McGraw?" (She says, "I am not a bisexual, nor do I have two heads.") Then she signs herself, "Mrs. Barbara McGraw."

The name "Mrs. Barbara McGraw" means she married someone named "Barbara."

The title "Ms." is available for women who prefer using their own first names; she could call herself "Ms. Barbara McGraw," or she could skip any title completely.

Whatever she decides, the one thing she ISN'T is "Mrs. Barbara McGraw" — unless she's planning a divorce. Archaic, maybe, but still true. — JANET TAYLOR (NO TITLE AT ALL!)

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Easter is nearly here, and if you plan to surprise a small child with a gift, such as a live rabbit or a baby chick, please consider this: Living creatures need proper care, so unless you are certain that the rabbit or chick will receive the care it needs to survive, please give a stuffed bird or animal instead. Living creatures are not "toys" to be mauled, abused or neglected.

AT WIT'S END

Reader never wrote when happy

By ERMA BOMBECK

The letter arrived on my birthday.

It was from a grandmother in California named Pearl who wrote, "For more years than I can remember, I have enjoyed your humor tremendously. HOWEVER, you wrote something in your book that turned me off completely and forever. I will never read anything you write again — never, never, never!"

I can't believe it. Nineteen years of work, 2,964 columns, approximately 1,330,800 words and for what? To have Pearl dump me over something she disagreed with.

Give me a break, Pearl. Would you quit a marriage because your husband didn't like the pajamas you bought for him? Would you abandon your children because they had a friend you didn't like? Would you leave a gifted hairdresser just because he once insulted Paul Harvey?

One of the hardest things we do in this life is to live in harmony with those who hold beliefs and attitudes different from our own.

I'm not always easy to love, Pearl, but you haven't been a day at the beach yourself.

There are little things with you I've never mentioned. To begin with, how come you didn't write me for 19 years when you liked something? It's okay, I know you're busy, but there were days I needed to know you were breathing out there.

And what about the times I spent three days writing a special piece and you were on vacation and stopped the paper while you were gone — or you were too busy that day to read it — or you wrapped the chicken innards in my face for the garbage? That hurts, Pearl.

Did I write you and say you disappointed me as a reader and I would never write for you again, never, never, never? Of course not.

My best friend has been just that since we were second-semester freshmen in college. We are the antithesis of one another. It is difficult to imagine us in the same country, let alone sitting across the table from one another. We are both walking debate teams on everything from political candidates to gun control. I will never forget the day in November when she called me in tears and said, "I'm sorry your president just died."

My friend is not a fool. She has all the ingredients of a wonderful human being, not the least of them being abounding love and respect for the rights of another human being to think and act in his own way.

I haven't given up on you, Pearl. A woman with a sense of humor is just too important to me to write off. If the Pope forgave his would-be assassin, I can give you another chance to love me.

How about you?

Week honors secretaries

Mayor Thane Akins of Midland has proclaimed April 22-28 Professional Secretaries Week. Mayor Akins asked management to join in recognizing secretaries, especially Wednesday, Secretaries Day.

Irmalee Ingrham, CPS, president Professional Secretaries International Permian Chapter, quoted President Ronald Reagan: "Secretaries Week is when we all have the opportunity to reflect on the vitally important and meaningful role our secretaries play in American life. Whether in business, education, labor, industry or government, these individuals perform the tasks and provide the coordination that are so essential to the success of our free enterprise system..."

Permian Chapter PSI will have Secretaries Week luncheon Tuesday at Midland Civic Center. Jack Swallow, independent landman, will be guest speaker. Two scholarships provided by the chapter will be given to students from Midland and Lee High Schools.

Billy Joe Shaver to play at Boondoggle festival

The 6th Annual Cathedral Mountain Boondoggle Outdoor Music Festival and Chili Cookoff, to benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, will be held Friday through Sunday on Woodward Ranch near Alpine.

Billy Joe Shaver will be joining West Texas entertainers to provide music during the weekend festivities.

Horseshoe tournaments, arts and crafts booths as well as a special Sunday concert and Easter Egg hunt for the children will be a part of the weekend on Calamity Creek.

Besides the chili cookoff, a bean and cornbread cookoff will be held. A $10 entry fee for Saturday's horseshow tournament, with cash prizes, will be charged. Also, traditional Boondoggle events, such as beer drinkin', tobacco-spittin', egg-throwin' and cow chip chunkin' will be held.

Friday's musical festivities will feature the Lone Star Revue, Cody Hubach and Crazy Wayne Sterling. Music for the Boondoggle Dance for the Bone will be provided by Alvin Crow and His Pleasant Valley Boys. Closing the show will be blues by Marbles.

Saturday will offer Whitey Huitt, the Moon Pie Dance Band from El Paso, and Roger Young and the Yellow Rose Band, the official Boondoggle musicians. Billy Joe Shaver, Jess Taylor and the Combo Kings and Warhorse will close out the evening.

Graffiti, John Casner and the Austin Roadhouse Band and Ron Riley will perform Sunday. The Amazing Bryson Bowden Band of Lubbock will close out the weekend.

To find the Boondoggle on Calamity Creek, drive 16 miles south of Alpine on Highway 118, and turn west into the mountains on Woodward Ranch.

Camping is available for the entire weekend and parking will be provided for those attending one day of festivities.

Admission is $10 and a portion of the gate proceeds will go to benefit patient services for the Permian Basin Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

MS also will benefit from an auction. Anyone wishing to donate a product for the auction should contact Judy Dixon at (915) 683-5444.

Those interested in arts and crafts booths should contact Frank Woodward at (915) 364-2271. All musical and other inquiries should be directed to Bruce or Ron Riley, event originators, at (915) 686 7205 or (806) 744-6460.

Producer seeks 'Welcome' for new show

ENTERTAINMENT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Twenty years after two adventurers ended a journey across America on "Route 66," Stirling Silliphant has turned to the South Pacific for what he hopes will be a new departure in television.

Silliphant, who produced "Route 66," is executive producer of "Welcome to Paradise," a projected series following three young people traveling in a sailing boat around the South Pacific.

A pilot episode has been completed for CBS, and Silliphant is hoping the network will accept the show as a series on its fall schedule. CBS will announce its fall lineup May 3.

"It's a whole new texture for prime-time television," Silliphant said.

American television all too often has a depressing sameness whether programs are set in Kansas City or Brazil because they are invariably made in California, Silliphant said in a telephone interview from New Zealand, where the pilot was shot.

"Virtually 90 percent of American television is shot in Southern California, even when it's set somewhere else," he said. "It stifles the freshness and surprise of a film."

Californian landscapes and casts can only be disguised or made up so much before they all blur into a single wearying image, Silliphant added. "It's a California look and it just doesn't look like France or Turkey," he said.

Silliphant hopes to give "Welcome to Paradise" a fresh look by filming a beautiful and spectacular part of the world with mainly local actors and film crews.

"Welcome to Paradise" stars Kelbe Nugent as skipper of the yacht called Paradise, Jerry Dinome as a diver and Woody Brown as a marine biologist. In the pilot, they help recover a stolen tribal totem of the native Maori people of New Zealand.

Apart from the three American stars and a few key film people, the show is being made by the local industry. If CBS accepts the project, each episode would be shot in exotic places for TV, like Australia, New Caledonia and Papua New Guinea.

And that, says Silliphant, means a new look for jaded American viewers. The program will show other nations as they tend to see themselves. The settings will be unique for most Americans and the film will even be brighter because of better light and the absence of California's ubiquitous smog.

"When you look at this film you have a feeling of being lifted out of your living room and being put somewhere else," he said.

This is what makes "Welcome to Paradise" different from "Adventures in Paradise," which was created by James Michener and had a run on ABC from 1959-62. Gardner McKay starred as captain of a schooner searching for cargo, passengers and adventure, but that series, for the most part, never ventured beyond 20th Century-Fox's back lot in Hollywood.

Silliphant says American viewing tastes are going through a periodic change. Situation comedies are giving way to light, action-adventure shows such as "The A-Team" and "Simon & Simon," and "Welcome to Paradise" fits this mold, the producer said.

The show offers viewers a double escape, Silliphant said, by releasing them not just from everyday problems but also from the pressure of modern American life by whisking them off to one of the world's last untroubled spots. "It's perfect escapism," he said.

There probably won't be too many similarities with "Route 66," the story of two young men roaming the country that ran from 1960 to 1964. "I'd say 'Route 66' was a far more serious story and a projection of the mood of America at the time. It was very anti-establishment," Silliphant said.

"This has a different spectrum entirely," he said. "My perception of American society has changed in 20 years. I'm a little more compassionate."

Play leads to film offers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Barbara Rush, noted mostly for her stage work in the past decade, is suddenly getting some good film offers on the basis of Broadway-bound "A Woman of Independent Means."

Miss Rush, now in her early 50s, has had to turn down the tempting offers, but isn't worried. "You don't sit around waiting for things to happen," she said. "I will now be considered for the good roles for women my age. And I have many, many ideas for projects of my own."

It was Miss Rush who suggested to author Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey that her book "A Woman of Independent Means" would make a good play.

The play opens in May at the Biltmore Theater in New York.

Poachers favor rhinos

Poachers have wiped out 90 percent of the rhinoceroses in northern Tanzania in the past 10 years. Even in conservation-conscious Kenya, the number of rhinos has dropped from 18,000 in 1969 to about 1,100.

Handwriting expert says letters from Woolworth heiress forged

NEW YORK (AP) — Woolworth heiress Barbara Hutton supposedly wrote letters encouraging a book on her life as America's "Poor Little Rich Girl," but a handwriting expert says the letters are not in her handwriting.

C. David Heymann's biography of the socialite who partied her way through a $26 million inheritance became controversial even before its official publication date when errors were discovered and its publisher, Random House, recalled 58,000 copies.

Charles Hamilton, author of several books on handwriting and one of the experts who discovered that last year's "Hitler diaries" were phony, told The Associated Press last week that two letters Heymann showed the publisher were fakes.

Heymann used the letters to indicate to his publisher and sources that he was working on an authorized biography of Miss Hutton, who died in 1979.

Hamilton said he was called into the matter by Karen Davison, an Austrian journalist, who had been shown the materials by Random House. He said he knew the signature on one letter was not Miss Hutton's because it was too close a resemblance.

"It was traced...no one ever signs their signature exactly the same way," he said. He termed the other letter, which was entirely handwritten, "a forgery."

The letter with the allegedly traced signature "B. Hutton" was typewritten and addressed to Heymann. The writer begins by noting that Heymann had been trying to find "the real Barbara Hutton," and says, "Perhaps you'll find her buried in one of the enclosed notebooks."

Those notebooks — which the publisher said Heymann presented as Miss Hutton's originals, and which Heymann says he presented only as his handwritten copies of the originals — are a second issue apart from the letters.

Random House, which paid a $70,000 advance for the book, recalled the original 58,000 copies of the biography, entitled "Poor Little Rich Girl," in December after the publisher learned the book contained errors.

The book's dust jacket said the account of Miss Hutton's life was "based in large part" on her own "notebooks (and) correspondence."

Heymann told the Washington Post in a February interview that he had copied notes, poems and other items written by Miss Hutton. But he also showed the reporter photocopies of materials he said were handwritten by the heiress.

Carol Schneider, Random House publicity director, was asked what the publisher thought of Hamilton's analysis.

"It's hard to say," she replied. "I'm not an expert on that (handwriting) and neither is anyone else at Random House."

She said that because the rights to the book had been sold back to Heymann, "It's really not our story or our problem."

The AP placed two calls to a telephone number listed as that of Jeanne Heymann, the name of Heymann's wife. The woman who answered the telephone the first time said Heymann did not live there.

The second time a different woman who identified herself as Renee Samon, a friend of Heymann's, said the author was out of town.

About two hours later the AP received a call from Eugene Girden, who said he was Heymann's attorney. He said he knew nothing about the two letters, but that the author "never claimed the so-called notes were anything except his word-for-word copies of the diaries."

Ms. Schneider said Heymann showed Random House two different sets of notes, one which he said he copied by hand from the originals and the other which he said showed the heiress' own handwriting.

The latter, she said, "He passed off to us as the original notebooks."

Hamilton said neither set of notes matched Miss Hutton's writing.

"Her writing is refined, delicate, tasteful, almost excruciating," he said, while the notebooks' printing is "cloddish, infantile, bumbling, something like a ninth grader would do."

And, he said, both sets of notes were written by the same hand.

Hamilton, 70, owns Hamilton Galleries in Manhattan, which deals in historic documents and autographs.

Actress joins 'Dynasty'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Diahann Carroll is joining ABC's top-rated nighttime soap opera "Dynasty" as a stylish, successful and very wealthy woman of mystery.

Miss Carroll is now filming her first appearances on the show and will make her debut on the air on Wednesday, May 2.

She was a Tony Award winner for the Broadway musical, "No Strings," and an Academy Award nominee for best actress for "Claudine." In 1968 she became the first black star since Nat King Cole to have her own TV series, "Julia."

Divine to act with Hunter

NEW YORK (AP) — Cult star Divine, who starred in the midnight movies, "Pink Flamingo" and "Polyesther," is teaming up with Tab Hunter again for a new film. Hunter co-starred in "Polyesther."

The ample Divine, whose LP "Jungle Jezebel" is a hot seller, said during a recent concert at the Limelight that Hunter was his favorite co-star.

Meanwhile, "The Simply Divine Cutout Book" is being gobbled up by midnight movie fans.

Actress tests for film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kathleen Turner, the seductive and treacherous Matty Walker of "Body Heat," had to make a screen test to convince the producers of "Romancing the Stone" that she could play the early, wimpy Joan Wilder.

She met with Michael Douglas, the producer and star, and director Robert Zemeckis, and assured them she could play the role of the woman, who is timid and insecure at the beginning of the picture.

"Bob felt we really needed to see it," she said. "So I was hurt in a way, that they wouldn't take my word for it. But when it came to doing it, no, I didn't mind doing that. I mean, I think it's my job.

"I have more confidence now," she said. "I'm not afraid of portraying a woman who's alone every night and lonely and unsure about herself. It was time to do that character."

Universal Studio Tour dazzles millions annually

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — About 70 years ago, Carl Laemmle allowed visitors to view his new movie lot for 25 cents a head.

Movie buffs were even allowed to stand behind a glass wall in the commissary and watch feeding time for the actors.

Today the Universal Studio Tour is big business, with 3 million tourists annually bedazzled with the wonders of the movie world.

The studio celebrated 20 years of tours earlier this month with a little whoopdedoo attended by two mayors: the ubiquitous Tom Bradley of Los Angeles and the beauteous Rebecca Holden of Universal City. Miss Holden, from TV's "Knight Rider," has only an honorary title, since Universal City is merely 420 acres of unincorporated territory surrounded by Los Angeles.

Though the Universal tours actually date back to Laemmle's little visits, the tours went out when sound movies came in because they were too noisy.

But in 1963, Universal, like all studios, was looking for ways to stay in business. The parent company, MCA, took a timid step at reviving Laemmle's tours. Offices were set up in quonset huts. The first employees were a ticket seller, two guides and two tram drivers.

Today there are 1,500 employees and shows galore, including a new one next month: the "A-Team Live Action Show."

All of the MCA brass were on hand for the recent celebration, including chairman of the board Lew Wasserman and president Sid Sheinberg. There also was a scattering of old Universal hands, such as Dennis Weaver, Janet Leigh, Richard Anderson, Bob Denver, Lou Ferrigno, Lorne Greene and Tony Dow.

After all the speeches and the release of balloons, the party retired to Womphopper's for a hearty western lunch and a brief tape history of Universal Studio Tour.

The late Alfred Hitchcock appeared in a deadpan TV commercial. "You do meet the strangest people on the tour," he said as his own rotund figure could be seen among the tourists on a passing tram.

During lunch Jay Stein, president of MCA Recreation Services, talked about planning: "Trouble is, we can't make any long-range plan. We've got to go with what is hot. We have 50 ideas for new exhibits in the planning stage, but when something like 'A Team' gets popular, you have to move with it.

"Also we are limited by other projects the company has for its 420 acres — hotels, office buildings and so forth."

Unlike Disneyland and other theme parks, Universal Studio Tour is strictly a daytime operation. It would be impractical to tour a dark studio. Besides, the adjacent Universal Amphitheater, now roofed for year-round operation, draws 6,000 spectators to concerts each night.

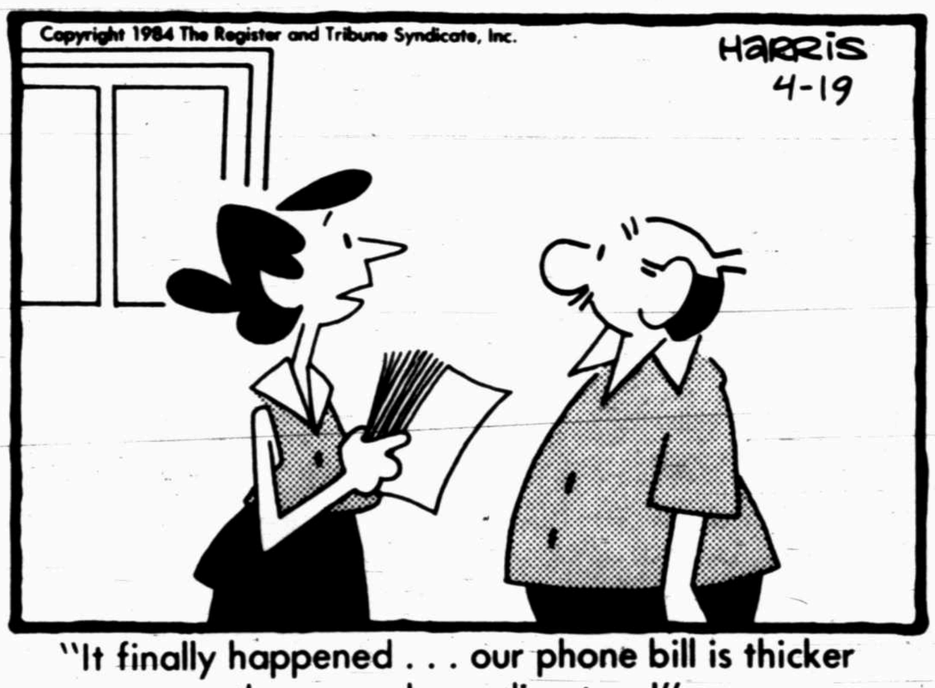
THE BETTER HALF



"It finally happened . . . our phone bill is thicker than our phone directory!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, April 20, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Happy Birthday to you, U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens, bandleader Lionel Hampton, New York Yankee Don Mattingly, actor Ryan O'Neal, auto racing's Phil Hall and actress Nina Foch! Also born on this date: Spanish painter Joan Miro, American sculptor Daniel French and Adolph Hitler. Strike a better balance between work and family life and success will come easier. An overseas alliance grows stronger, bringing you extra cash. Make the most of new contacts. As your effectiveness increases, financial worries disappear. Your offspring need you more than ever. Romance blossoms anew when you show how tender you can be.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone closing a real estate deal. A Pisces plays a major role in your personal or professional life. Creative work holds special appeal. Use it as an outlet for pent-up emotions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Not a good day to ask for special favors. Someone's departure from place of employment could put you in line for a new job and more money. Make your presence known.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some cuts in spending are necessary to satisfy your creditors. Steer clear of secret agreements. Impulsive behavior could cost you an important friendship. Be patient. Family members are highly supportive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stick to projects you can handle alone today. Work to strengthen existing relationships, but do not enter into long-term agreements. In romance, your heart tells you one thing, your head another!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid joint financial ventures and leave a partnership just as it is. Romance will soon be better than ever! Put the finishing touches on a current project before beginning a new one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The day starts off slowly but livens up by afternoon. A casual encounter could lead to valuable new clients. Keep your sense of humor when dealing with demanding people. Patience pays off.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Partnerships enjoy favorable influences. Timely property repairs will have long-term benefits. Your associates will fall into line if you are well-organized. An excellent evening for entertaining at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friends and work could come into conflict today. Examine a relative or pal's proposal for hidden flaws. Romance could blossom between you and a co-worker. Be very discreet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A shrewd strategy -- and a little good luck -- bring about a career triumph. Tend to any pressing obligations before taking off for the weekend. Spend more time with special someone!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People are willing to meet you halfway in business. Your sense of duty keeps things humming along on the domestic scene. Travel may not be productive now; stay home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Although the day gets off to a slow start, the pace soon picks up. Work done behind the scenes will affect your future employment. Romance takes a temporary back seat to career.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your practical knowhow and hard work will put you way ahead of the competition. A shrewd decision moves a career or financial goal within reach.

TV series planning cliffhangers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's coming to that time of the year when the networks tie the damsel to the railroad tracks in the manner of "The Perils of Pauline" and await the arrival of the express.

The ratings express, that is, because the end-of-the-season cliffhanger has become one of the surest ways to increase a show's audience and lure people back in the fall.

It was the suspense and speculation of the "Who Shot J.R.?" season finale that captured the world's imagination and made CBS' "Dallas" the top-rated show in 1980.

"Dallas" and such other series as NBC's "Cheers" and "Hill Street Blues," ABC's "Dynasty" and CBS' "Falcon Crest" are dishing up intrigue and suspense in May to pique the viewers' interest, keep the audience guessing until the fall and hype the ratings for the all-important May sweeps when both the A.C. Nielsen Co. and Arbitron measure viewing levels at local stations.

Earl Hamner, the creator and executive producer of "Falcon Crest," has a dilly this year: the entire cast will be aboard a plane that crashes en route to Italy on Friday, May 18 ("Dallas" also ends the same night).

Other producers are more close-mouthed about their cliffhangers, although word usually leaks out.

"Dallas," for instance, is going to borrow a page from "Who Shot J.R.?"

There's going to be another shooting, but this time the victim as well as who pulled the trigger will remain a mystery until the fall. Five people, all with good reason to do J.R. in, converge on his office — where we hear a shot. Who did it? Who got it? Tune in next fall.

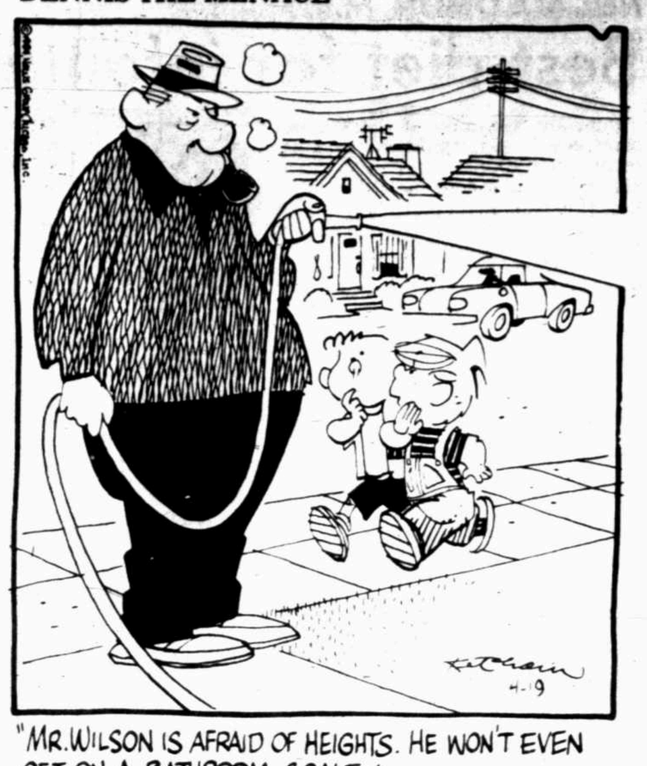
Not only is the public being kept in the dark, but the producers also try to confuse the cast and crew. Bob Crutchfield of Lorimar Productions ("Dallas," "Falcon Crest") said, "We've filmed various ways so that the editor can put the solution together at the direction of the producers."

The mystery on ABC's "Dynasty" begins Wednesday, May 2, when Diahann Carroll makes her first appearance as Dominique Deveraux. "We don't know her background but she seems to have a certain knowledge of the Carringtons," said ABC publicist Kim Rowley.

"There will be several cliffhangers when the show ends on May 9," said Miss Rowley. "One is who is Diahann Carroll and how does she fit into the Carrington family? When they filmed it they cleared everyone off the set who was not essential and they shot four versions of who she is."

On NBC's "Cheers," Sam and Diane began the season by getting together and they will end it by breaking up in a two-parter May 3 and 10.

DENNIS THE MENACE



"MR. WILSON IS AFRAID OF HEIGHTS. HE WON'T EVEN GET ON A BATHROOM SCALE."

"The Easter Bunny brings colored eggs, chocolates and ham."

HEATHCLIFF

Opening lead: Ace of ◇.

As declarer, it is wise to assume that the players to your left and right are trying their best to defeat you. (Those of you who claim that the player opposite you is also in on the act should find another game.) So if one of them suddenly turns round and tries to help you, you might want to ask yourself why this change of heart.

Four spades was a perfectly normal contract. Since South had no intention of playing anywhere else, the jump to game was a textbook bid.

West led the ace of diamonds and continued with a low diamond. East ruffed and dutifully returned a club to his partner's ace to complete the defensive book. Now West shifted to a heart.

Delighted to find himself in dummy, declarer wasted no time in taking the trump finesse. West gratefully won the singleton king for down one, and was quite content to concede the rest of the tricks to declarer.

South was rather naive to think that the trump finesse was going to work. If East did indeed have the king of trumps, West could have insured the contract's defeat by simply continuing with a diamond when in with the ace of clubs. East would have overruffed dummy for the setting trick.

West, however, knew that it was unlikely that his partner would be able to overruff, and that would give away the location of the king of trumps. He did the best he could by not continuing diamonds, but that should have been the tipoff. Declarer should have smiled knowingly after the heart shift and have led a trump to the ace — his only chance to get home, was to catch West with a singleton king.

Best diet for infant is recommended by physician

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: If there is diabetes in a family, would you have any recommendations about the kind of diet an infant should have that might keep him from getting diabetes? My sister tells me to cut down on the amount of fat in the baby's diet, but I never heard before that this would be any help. — Mrs. G.L., San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mrs. L.: Your sister may have heard about the results of an animal study that suggested that a low-fat diet for infants who are at risk of diabetes may either delay the development of the disease or decrease its severity. These conclusions were reported by Dr. George C. Gerritsen, of Upjohn Laboratories, and were based on experiments with hamsters.

I would simply note that the best diet for an infant is the one recommended by your pediatrician or family physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If an older person (I am thinking particularly of a man 72 years old) has a brain tumor, will he suffer from headaches? And if he has a brain tumor, can he be operated on? — Calvin, Casper, Wyo.

Dear Calvin: According to Dr. Tadanlori Tomita, of Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago, only about 20 percent of older patients who have brain tumors suffer from headaches. Changes in mental status, such as evidence of confusion, are more common.

The key to successful surgery for brain tumors in older patients is careful evaluation both before and after the operation. A patient who is otherwise in good physical condition and who it is felt would be able to function adequately following surgery will probably be operated on. On the other hand, if the patient's life expectancy is considered to be limited, surgery may not be a logical alternative.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have high blood pressure but my doctor says he would like to keep me off drugs because the medication would have an effect on the kind of cholesterol that is good for you. Could you put this into simple English that I can understand? — Grant, Easton, Pa.

Dear Grant: Whenever a physician contemplates prescribing medication for a patient, both the drug's possible risks and its potential benefits must be weighed. Sometimes the hoped-for benefits outweigh the possible risks; at other times the possible risks make it more advisable to do nothing than to prescribe the medication. I imagine it is this kind of dilemma that your physician is considering since some antihypertensive medications reduce high-density lipoprotein levels.

The question then becomes the trade-off between using a drug that will lower your blood pressure but that at the same time may reduce your good cholesterol.

Rides linked to allergy attacks

BOSTON (AP) — People sensitive to pollen can suffer rare but potentially fatal allergy attacks if they fall off mountain slide rides during grass pollen season, a study concludes.

The reaction occurs when people tumble on the rides, known as Alpine Slides, and get grass pollen into the scrapes, researchers said in a study published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Only those who are allergic to grass pollen are affected, and even then the chance of suffering the problem is remote. When it happens, though, the result can be low blood pressure and swelling similar to that suffered by people who are allergic to bee stings or penicillin.

Doctors first spotted the reaction — dubbed Alpine Slide anaphylaxis — when five people suddenly became sick at a slide in Vermont two years ago.

"These were life-threatening problems," said Dr. Thomas B. Casale of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. "If they weren't treated immediately, they could have gone into shock."

The slides are asbestos-cement tracks, usually about a half mile long, that run down mountainsides. Riders glide down the tracks on sleds with nylon runners.

All of the 41 slides in the United States were manufactured by Alpine Products of Manchester, Vt. Vice President Rick Hunter maintained that these allergic reactions are not limited to people falling on the slides.

"People have experienced this type of thing cutting their grass," he said. "If they have an open cut, they could experience it anywhere."

However, Dr. Kenneth C. Spitalny, who directed the study, said, "We just don't see that at all. There haven't been any very well documented cases of anything like this."

He says the problem occurs when people fall off the sleds and get friction burns. Their wounds rub along the track, which is coated with pollen. The pollen is, essentially, injected into their bodies.

The researchers surveyed operators of 27 other Alpine Slides and identified at least 26 apparent cases in all.

"Although the incidence of anaphylaxis at such amusement slides is low," they wrote, "the possibility of anaphylaxis-related fatality does exist, particularly during peak grass pollination periods."

The study was conducted while Spitalny was with the Vermont Department of Health. The researchers recommended that slide operators post signs warning allergic people of the possible danger, and workers at the slides uld be trained to treat the reaction.

They also said it may be possible to hold down pollen levels by frequently cutting and wetting the nearby grass. The manufacturer has passed on the recommendations to slide operators.

At the Vermont slide studied, grass pollen is at its height in late July and early August. During this period over six years, there were 1.7 cases of anaphylactic reactions for every 100,000 tickets sold.

RESOLUTION NO. 84-113

RESOLUTION DECLARING CERTAIN STRUCTURES WITHIN THE CITY TO BE DANGEROUS, DILAPIDATED AND PUBLIC NUISANCES; ORDERING THEIR DESTRUCTION OR REMOVAL; AND AUTHORIZING THE ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS FOR SUCH WORK

WHEREAS, the Department of Planning and Development has determined that the improvements described in Section Two hereof are unsafe buildings and dangerous structures and must be abated by repair or demolition and removal from the premises; and

WHEREAS, the Director of Planning and Development or his designee has given notice of the defects to the owners of each of said buildings as required by Section 4-8-3 of the City Code of Midland, Texas; and

WHEREAS, on February 29, 1984, after having failed, neglected or refused to correct the defects, the said owners were notified, by letter or publication, that a public hearing before the City Council would determine whether certain improvements are each dangerous structures and a public nuisance; and

WHEREAS, a notice of such hearing was also published on March 9, 1984, in a newspaper of general circulation in the City and County; and

WHEREAS, on this 27th day of March, 1984, at the time and place prescribed by said notice, the Council held said public hearing for said purpose; and

WHEREAS, the Council finds that all notices required by the City Code of Midland, Texas, have been complied with and that notice of said hearing has been duly given; and

WHEREAS, the Council has heard the evidence and arguments presented by all persons who appeared before it; and

WHERE, the Council finds that the notice of the Director of Planning and Development or his designee to make the structures safe, either by repair or demolition and removal, has not been complied with;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS:

SECTION ONE. That the Council hereby finds and determines that each of the improvements, buildings and structures described in Section Two hereof is a dangerous structure, is structurally unsafe, constitutes a fire hazard and is dangerous to human life, and their continued use will constitute a hazard to the safety, health and public welfare, and each is hereby declared to be a public nuisance.

SECTION TWO. That the owner, agent or occupant of each dangerous structure described in this Section is hereby ordered to take down and remove the same from the premises within ten (10) days from the date of notice as set out in Section 4-8-3 and Section 4-8-4 of the City Code of Midland, Texas. The structures heretofore declared public nuisances, including number of structures, types of structures and street addresses, legal descriptions, and owners' names and addresses, are as follows:
