Crime Prober Says Gambling Records Shown

AUSTIN, June 2. (AP) — A stubborn witness from Dallas was cited for contempt by the House Crime Investigation Committee today.

The committee then renefed interrogation of Galveston representatives of Maceo and Company, whose records revealed gross earnings of nearly $4 million last year. Much of that income was from gambling, said Rep. Fred V. Meridith of Terrell, committee chairman.

The ledger accounts and other memoranda were produced by Sam Serio, general accountant for the Maceo interests, after the committee threatened a contempt citation Friday if he continued to refuse.

Contempt proceedings were initiated against Louis Ferrantello of Dallas after he refused to answer more than 100 questions in the course of an hour-and-a half before the committee. He also failed to produce business records as ordered. This brought a second contempt charge.

"I refuse to answer because it might tend to incriminate me," was Ferrantello's stock reply, according to Committee Member Rep. Waggoner Carr of Lubbock.

All proceedings were behind closed doors. Attorney General Price Daniel, State Police Director Homer Garrison, Jr., and a battery of half a dozen assistant attorneys general helped the committee frame questions.

Dallas Police Chief Carl Hansson told reporters outside the civil appeals courtroom, which served as a hearing room, that Ferrantello was a "fairly big-time" operator in Dallas.

The darkly handsome Ferrantello presented an affidavit telling the committee he would not produce records because they "would be incriminating and would be used against me on the trial of my case, if and when the same should go to trial." He referred to possible trial on a 1949 Dallas County indictment charging him with operating a gambling house.

Ferrantello was ordered to appear before the committee again June 25.

On hand from Galveston with Serio were Frank Maceo, cousin of the late Sam Maceo; Victor J. Fertitta, a nephew; and R. N. Cox, Serio's assistant.

Production Of Cars Curtailed

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—The government ordered auto makers today to cut production still more.

For the three-month period beginning July 1, they will be permitted to build only about 1.2 million cars. This compares with 1.4 million for the April-June quarterly period. It's about a third less than the 1.9 million cars built in the July-September period last year.

Courtney Johnson, director of the National Production Authority's (NPA) motor vehicle division, estimated 1951 auto production at about 5.4 million units. This would be about a million less than the record 6.5 million output of 1950.

The NPA completely revised auto industry controls in today's order. Previously, production has been curtailed by limiting industry steel supplies. It has been 80 per cent of pre-Korean levels in April and May, and 75 per cent in June.

Censor Clamps Tight Lid On Korean News

U. S. 8TH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, June 2. (AP) —Eighth Army today clamped down the most restrictive news regulations since censorship was introduced last December.

Until further notice, war correspondents cannot identify Allied units except as United Nations forces. They cannot be identified by unit number or even nationality.

(This will not apply to stories of action prior to midnight, June 1).

Areas of action may not be identified by commonly accepted front names. No stories may refer to the Western, West Central, Central, East-Central or Eastern fronts.

However, correspondents may use such general terms such as "the Imjin River area," for the Western front, "the Yonchon area" for the West-Central front, "the Hwachon Reservoir area" for the Central front, "the Inje area" for the East-Central front, and "the Yangyang area" for the eastern front.

The new rules were issued by Lt. Col. Philip W. Hutton, chief censor, shortly after Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Eighth Army commander, told correspondents stringent new rules of censorship would be required by "the new phase the war has entered."

Other restrictions:

No mention can be made of patrol bases or outpost line, or of the establishment of a defensive position or line.

No mention can be made of small towns occupied by UN troops.

WATER STORAGE CONTINUES GAIN

The water situation was better yesterday morning than it had been in 10 days, W. J. Ramsey, city superintendent, said.

With continued conservation, the storage tanks should be full again within a few days, he said.

A more normal use of water can be made now, he added, but there still is no back log for extravagance or waste.

Tax Deadlock Facing Solons Another Week

AUSTIN, June 2 (AP) — The 52nd Legislature has plodded through another week of sullen no compromise on taxes.

There were signs at week-end of mounting tension, but no glimmer of hope that House and Senate conferees could get together soon and remove the one big roadblock to the session's end.

House members holding out for more rural road money and for a pipeline tax on natural gas to balance the budget gained strength. The last vote showed a House majority of 86 to 12 doesn't agree with the Senate.

The Senators are holding out for a 10 per cent production current spending and allocation levels.

The House vote was to retain the conference committee members that collided in an angry head-on with the Senate conferees. The House then quit until Tuesday.

The next move is up to the Senate, which meets Monday. It was considered likely the same five senators would be chosen to meet again with the House group.

Phone Workers Favor Strike

ST. LOUIS, June 2. (AP — The 51,000 employees of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. have voted better than 10 to 1 to authorize a strike if a satisfactory wage agreement is not reached by Monday midnight.

Results of the balloting by the utility's workers in six states were announced today by Frank P. Lonergan, assistant district director of the CIO Communications Workers Union.

Borden School Election Is Set Next Tuesday

Voters in Borden County will decide Tuesday whether their five common school districts should be grouped together to form a single district with four schools.

If the proposal is approved, the county will prepare to build new school buildings with money from bonds to be voted in another election which has been called for June 30. In this second election a maintenance tax will be proposed, and voters will also decide to reallocation of county taxes, construction of 30 to 35 miles of hard surface roads connecting the schools, and levying of an additional ad valorem tax of 30 cents for road purposes.

If Tuesday's election carries, the county will organize its first high school. The school has been planned to offer as complete a curriculum as the majority of high schools throughout the state have, according to C. S. [illegible] judge and superintendent of schools, said.

Preliminary plans already on hand include shops of various kinds for vocational training in the new high school building. All new buildings will have modern facilities throughout, and plans also call for the building and new teacherages at all the schools.

High school students from Borden County at present are attending school in Snyder. Borden County furnishes the transportation for the students.

Rain Brings Cool Weather

Snyder's heat wave simmered down to an almost moderate 89 degrees yesterday, and cooled off even more quickly as rain clouds moved in. An estimated .8 of an inch had fallen by 9 o'clock last night, and more rain was falling.

The cooling off became noticeable Friday, when a maximum of 92 degrees was recorded. Friday and Thursday both had maximums in the 90-degree range after readings of over 100 from Sunday through Wednesday.

Freak Weather Throughout U.S. Brings Death, Threatens Crop

By The Associated Press

Large areas of the country were weather-groggy Saturday from a freak June binge of the elements that killed at least five and destroyed crops and property.

There were storms, tornadic winds, heat, cold, drenching rains, snow, drouth, and floods.

Ripping winds flung a carnival acrobat to death from the top of his 119-foot pole in Detroit Friday night. The wind reached gusts of 98 miles an hour.

Lightning killed a woman and her daughter and two farm workers in Alabama, and a soldier on field maneuver at Fort Benning, Ga., Friday.

A youth drowned when wind upset a sailboat in the Ottawa River at Toledo, Ohio.

A tornado ripped through a mile long section of South Marshaltown, Ia., Friday night, injuring seven and causing extensive damage.

The South baked in oven dry heat that threatened cotton, corn and pastures. In Mississippi—without a good soaking rain for 41 days — Gov. Fielding Wright appealed for prayers Sunday. Prayer sessions were held throughout the week at Lumberton, N. C., a city without rain.

The drouth area extended over Georgia, Northern Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, South Carolina and North Carolina. Florida citrus was in good shape, however.

Crops suffered in Colorado, too—from cold. The mercury hovered near the freezing mark in the Northwest and snow pelted the Dakotas, Wyoming and Montana. Eight inches of snow blanketed Rapid City, S. D., and residents brought out their winter overcoats.

FREEZE FEARED

Paul Swisher, Colorado agriculture commissioner, said a freeze would ruin what is left of the state's wheat crop, already plagued by winter drouth, insects and hail.

Drenching rains soaked Nebraska. At least 200 residents were driven from their homes when rivers backed up in low-lying southeastern sections of the state.

The most violent weather accompanied movement of a cold front across the Great Lakes and into the Eastern states.

The wind tapered off somewhat in the eastern journey but gusts up to 60 miles an hour snapped power and telephone lines and uprooted hundred of trees Saturday in Western Pennsylvania.

The change to cold sent the mercury skidding 41 degrees in less than 12 hours in Chicago — from 92 to 51 degrees.

Acheson Tells U.S. Terms For Ending Korean War

ALMOST A BLOCK LONG

It's a delicate maneuver, transporting 28 butane storage tanks through Snyder to the Lion Oil Co. gasoline plant on the Diamond M lease southwest of Snyder. One truck drives forward and the other backward the 18 miles from the Roscoe, Snyder & Pacific tracks to the plant. The one above extends almost a full block as it was photographed on the north side of the square.—(Lee Watson photograph).

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP)—Secretary of State Acheson hinted strongly today the United States is willing to halt the fighting in Korea at Parallel 38 if there can be assurances of no further Red aggression.

He told senators this government might agree to a "real settlement that would accomplish the military purposes in Korea."

Then he explained further: "That is, if the aggression would end and you had reliable assurances that it would not be resumed, then you could return to a peacetime status and we would hope gradually to remove the troops from Korea, both Chinese troops and United Nations troops."

Acheson told the Senate Armed Forces and Foreign Relations Committees — studying the ouster of Gen. Douglas MacArthur — that once the Chinese are convinced they can't defeat the UN forces then "you have a real possibility of working out a stable situation."

Senator Smith (R-NJ) said "if we stop where we began" at the 38th Parallel then he believed it would be difficult to justify the Korean war casualties.

Acheson replied: "Senator, if you accomplish what you started out to do, I don't think that is synonymous with saying you stopped where you began.

"We started out to do two things. One is repel the armed attack and the other is to restore peace and security in the area.

"Now, if we do those two things, we have done what we started out to do, and I think that is success."

STALEMATE POSSIBLE

He agreed with MacArthur that the way may end in a stalemate —but he argued standoff would open the way to peace and not to a third world war as the general contends.

Acheson said he thought "stalemate" was an unpleasant word but that it was possible no military decision could be reached in the fighting.

When the Chinese realize this, he argued, "then it seems to me that the way is open for some sort of a settlement in Korea which can be accepted on the basis of mutually known strengths."

A cease fire, he explained, would mean technical moves to halt the shooting.

TRUCE TERMS

Acheson declared truce terms must not be based on a question of seating the Chinese Reds in the United Nations or the fate of Formosa — points which the Reds have insisted must be a part of any agreement.

Questioned by Senator Johnson (D-Tex), Acheson said he did not think any of the United Nations allies would pull troops out of Korea if MacArthur's plan to extend the war against China were adopted.

But he steadfastly opposed the general's war program which he said held the threat of another war while the administration policy of a limited war is designed to avoid another world struggle.

TRUMAN "SOLE JUDGE"

Under direct orders from the President, Acheson refused to tell senators what was said at the White House meetings where MacArthur's dismissal was discussed.

Acheson said Mr. Truman "is the sole judge of what he should disclose in regard to confidential private discussions with his own cabinet."

Offensive Plays Out; Peace Rumors Grow

TOKYO, Sunday, June 3. (AP)— The United Nations "pursuit phase" in Korea ended Saturday with the Communists driven from nearly all South Korea and the Allies still chipping at a hardening core of resistance.

Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, United Nations commander, announced the end of the Allied "all-out offensive." UN Secretary General Trygve Lie 24 hours earlier called upon the Communists to say whether they would agree to a ceasefire near the 38th Parallel.

Whether the two announcements were related, however, was strictly a guess. Responsible sources at Eighth Army Headquarters would not comment. A new and more stringent censorship was imposed on war news.

NO PEACE DEALS

(In Washington Secretary of State Acheson told a Senate hearing he knew of no present negotiations for peace in Korea or of any proposals advanced by Red China. Diplomatic informants there said, however, the British Embassy had been told to take up with the State Department the question of reviewing the situation in an attempt to find a way of ending the conflict.)

(Acheson said the United States might agree to a ceasefire if there can be a "real settlement" of the war.)

Allied gains along the rugged 125-mile front just inside Red North Korea were limited. Resistance was fierce.

REDS BUILDING UP

Larger Red concentrations were building up behind the front. The Chinese and Korean Reds moved into ridgeline defenses in their vital Chorwon-Kumhwa-Pyonggang assembly area in Central Korea.

Allied advances appeared aimed at grasping the best possible terrain in Korea's lacework of mountains and valleys in preparation for any new Chinese offensive. Two Red spring offensives — in April and May — were hurled back with heavy Red losses.

Lie warned at Ottawa Friday that if the fighting continues the United Nations would be expected to throw in additional forces and battle with all the strength they can safely commit in Korea.

(In London, informed officials said Britain is seeking a chance to end the Korean War and arrange talks of a general settlement in the Orient. They said Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison and other British leaders believe the psychological moment for a positive peace move is nearer now than it has been for a long time.

(Those sources added that Britain has been urging United Nations with forces in Korea to be ready to act quickly when such a move is made. Van Fleet's statement Saturday was received with optimism.)

RED DEAD COUNTED

The Eighth Army's new censorship regulations were imposed within hours after Van Fleet told a news conference the Allies "pursuit phase" was over.

He said the bloody fighting had cost the Chinese and Korean Reds more than 100,000 killed and wounded and about 10,000 captured since [illegible].

The Defense Department in Washington had placed Communist losses at 162,000, but the figure included some casualties preceding the Red drive.

Van Fleet said the Chinese still had the stuff for another powerful punch, but that they couldn't win.

SCREAMS AND BUGLES

In the West, three companies of screaming, bugle-blowing Chinese charged Allied positions and were driven back. Then Allied forces smashed across the Imjin River and widened their bridgehead.

Frontline officers said Communist artillery fire was the heaviest since the North Korean army tried to crack the Pusan beachhead in Southeast Korea last summer.

In Central Korea, flamethrowers burned Chinese defenders out of Bunkered Hill dugouts. Allied units pushed one mile northward along a two-mile front north of Hwachon. Hwachon is on the approaches to Kumhwa, 19 air miles to the northwest.

In East-Central Korea, AP Correspondent Jim Becker said UN elements gained more than two miles in the Inje area northeast of Yanggu against fresh Chinese forces.

HINT ACHESON MAY RESIGN

FALMOUTH, Mass., June 2 (AP) — A hint that Secretary of State Dean Acheson may resign came today from Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

Acheson, McGrath said in an interview with the Providence Journal-Bulletin, "may eventually conclude that courageous public service exacts a price that is not worth paying."

He described Acheson as "one of the greatest secretaries of state this country has ever had."

Asked if he believes Achson will resign, the attorney general said he could not elaborate.

Most Permits For Builders To Developers

Permits issued to real estate developers caused this month's building permit total to soar to $205,800, far above the average of the last three months.

Towle Place Development Co. was issued permits for 18 houses in Towle Place. Kittrell Heights ranked second, with permits for eight houses to cost $5,000 each.

Scott & Browning were issued permits for the construction of one house in Highland Park to cost $8,000, two in Parkway at $8,000 each, and one in Parkway to cost $5,000.

Other permits issued were to Tido C. Perales, frame residence to be built north of the north water tower $300.

Alford McGlaun, frame residence at 201 North Birch in Belmont Park, $7,500.

Charles Longbotham, frame residence at 2501 Thirty - first Street, $8,000.

Jesse K. Koonsman, business building, 1804 Twenty - fourth Street, $2,000.

A total of 36 building permits were issued during May.

In March only 16 building permits were issued for a total of $60,000.

May building permits were only about one-half last year's average

Acheson Avoids Any Possibility of Being Pictured With Enemy

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Secretary of State Acheson avoided elevators in the senate office building today as the MacArthur inquiry recessed for noon.

He hurried down a flight of steps so quickly photographers had difficulty getting a shot at him.

Acheson and Senator McCarthy (R-Wis), a constant critic of the secretary, met Friday for the first time in an elevator and an alert photographer snapped a picture of them together.

Two Men Killed in Accident On Fisher-Scurry County Line

Two persons apparently died instantly when their car crashed into the rear of a truck 14 miles west of Roby about 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning, according to R. L. Wilkins of Rotan, sheriff of Fisher County.

The dead were Albert J. Gilbert, Jr., 30, of Big Spring, driver of the car, and M. N. Pryor, 23, of Mesquite, Tex., the sheriff said. Both were taken to the McComb Funeral Home at Rotan, and later Gilbert was sent to Paducah, Tex., for funeral and burial rites.

The driver of the truck, Charles Howard Wright, 35, and Frank Whiterman, 35, both of Snyder were not injured, the sheriff said.

Both vehicles were traveling west toward Snyder on U.S. 180 when the accident occurred. According to Sheriff Wilkins, the motor on the truck had stalled when the vehicle was on the edge of the highway, and both Wright and Whiterman had attempted to flag down oncoming traffic from both directions to avert an accident.

Gilbert was owner of the Fashion Shop at Big Spring and had been to Dallas on a business trip. On his return, he stopped at a service station at Roby, where he became acquainted with Pryor, witnesses told the sheriff. Pryor had accepted a ride with Gilbert to Big Spring.

The truck was owned by the Frank Montgomery Dirt Crew of Snyder.

Funeral arrangement for Pryor are pending the arrival of a brother from Mesquite, attendants at the McComb Funeral Home said.

The accident was in Fisher County, just east of the Scurry County line.

Rayburn Says Impatience Is U.S. Defect in Red Dealings

AUSTIN, June 2 (AP) — We must learn to be patient, plodding and crafty to thwart Russia's aims to rule the world, House Speaker Sam Rayburn said tonight.

Rayburn's speech at the University of Texas commencement exercises was largely a defense of United States' foreign policy. He said the nation has done well in international affairs but that we have some things to learn.

"Our principal defect, given the kind of world in which we live, is that we are a hundred yard dash nation," Rayburn said. "No people can beat us at this distance, but our enemy is a plodder and he will not run our kind of race."

Our policy of containment implies patience, frustrating the enemy throwing him off balance and impeding him in a long range program designed to save the world from the horrors of atomic war," Rayburn said.

The speaker said charges that Western Europe wants the United States to fight its wars for it are "demonstrably false."

By asking us to send troops Europeans are inviting us to make their towns and cities and homes and countryside the primary battleground of the war should it come," Rayburn said. "Still, there are people among us who seem to prefer to fight the war along the Missouri River rather than the Marne."

Russia's current effort "to push down the Persian Gulf by bringing about the collapse of Iran" is not a new aim. In the past it has been largely frustrated by British arms and diplomacy, he said.

"We must understand something of the nature of the enemy if we are to stand firm against him," Rayburn told the graduating class of 1,500.

"One part of his nature is that he is infinitely patient as he is infinitely crafty. . . . Hence, however difficult for us, we shall have to learn patience."

Increasing Population Cause Of Many Of India's Problems

NEW DELHI, — With too many mouths to feed already, hungry India wonders how to curb a runaway population spotlighted by its 1951 national census.

India minus disputed Kashmir now numbers 356,891,624 — 15 per cent of the world's total people and an increase of 42,061,576 over 1941. On the basis of fertility and death rate statistics, census chief R. A. Gopalaswami estimates that the figure jumps at a 9,744-clip every 24 hours.

By the most conservative projection India's population in 1991 will reach 442,000,000. This is in spite of the fact that the increase dropped from 14.3 per cent in the 1931-41 period to 13.4 per cent in the last decade.

India's growth, furthermore, has not been large by comparison with the United States. There an increase of 14.5 per cent was recorded in the 1950 census. But hurried Indian officials mapping a long - range development program for their country find small comfort in assurances that a 442,000,000 population will represent "leveling off."

Behind the scenes a sharp cabinet dispute has been shaping up over the role government should play in checking the growth rate. Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru declared recently that he favored "the institution of various methods, including birth control."

While many ministers in his cabinet agree, they do not relish a fight with their colleague, woman health minister Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, a bitter - end foe of any artificial control measures.

The health minister, a Roman Catholic, cities Mahatma Gandhi's opposition to birth control as undermining character and interfering with nature. She adds that "apart from its doubtful moral value, it is rather impracticable in India because the country just couldn't afford it."

At present, contraceptive methods are unknown in India except among the educated urban minority in such centers as Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi, and Madras.

Instead, Amrit Kaur advocates raising by a few years the minimum legal marriage age, now 14, and prohibiting the marriage of diseased or incapacitated persons. In company with those favoring artificial controls, she points out that a rising Indian standard of living would bring with it increasing awareness of the desirability of smaller families.

When the Nehru Government's National Planning Commission presents its long-awaited report in July, it is expected to recommend a "compromise" approach to the population problem steering clear of outright promotion of birth control but laying groundwork which will ultimately lead in that direction.

It will not prove easy to convince India's uneducated rural millions in the first place that the national interest demands family planning. Hindusm's Shastra Code of Customs enjoins married couples to produce the greatest possible number of children as a sacred duty. In addition, both Hindu and Moslem communal leaders have long urged their followers to multiply in preparation for any showdown struggle between the two groups.

As a result, most Indian leaders feel they can do no more at this stage than lend encouragement to private agencies pushing family planing and launch an educational program stressing the importance of cutting down the population. Then it will be up to the next decade's officialdom to take what action changing public opinion permits.

New studies may dash cold water on hopes that hiking the marriage age to 15 or 16 would appreciably reduce the population growth rate. Health ministry statistician Dr. S. P. Jain writes in an issue of the Indian Journal of Medical Research that mothers between the ages of 21 and 29 give birth to 55.7 per cent of India's babies. Only 12.4 per cent of births occur when the mothers are 15-19 years old.

Complete results of the 1951 census will not be available until late fall. The provisional total breaks down into 183,384,807 males and 173,506,817 females.

Population density in India now averages 296 persons per square mile, reaching peaks of 841 in West Bengal and an abnormal 3,038 in Delhi State, where many of this partitioned land's 7,479,278 Pakistan refugees have settled. In the U.S. density averages 50 persons per square mile.

Vogue Changes in Brickwork, With New Modern Treatment

By The Associated Press

Bricks are one of the oldest of all manufactured building materials. They were in use long before the Bible was written. Maybe that's why it's hard to find any two persons who agree completely on how brick should be used. We've had too many years to work out combinations like cross - word puzzles, to paint bricks, glaze them, grind the face off and what not.

The result is some people think brick work is the most beautiful when it's what they call "natural." That is, unpainted and left for nature to take its course, with whitish efflorescent incrustations accepted. Others will say "wait a mintue—not that effloreseence. It spoils appearances." And the next man comes along, whitewashes his brick house, turns the firehose on it, just to get the appearance of excessive efflorescence.

The white house with green shutters so captured the style in American colonial days that many owners of Georgian style red brick houses painted the brickwork white —and this practice still continues. In New York some years ago Dorothy Draper, the decorator, wanted to achieve a smart appearance for a block of renovated tenement houses in the fashionable Sutton Place district on the East River front. She painted the brickwork black with white lintels and trim —a very attractive job.

Recently so - called "antique" brickwork has gained considerable favor. This means using second-hand bricks, salvaged from buildings that have been demolished. They are used in any mixed up form in which they are received, with the facade punctuated by a few blackened burned bricks and old painted bricks, weatherbeaten white, yellow, or any color, scattered at random. People who like this say it doesn't make the house seem so new—and besides it's cheaper to buy used brick than new.

If you are more or less of a purist and prefer to take your bricks neat, it will be hard to understand the liking for second-hand bricks. But actually they can produce such a pleasing informal appearance that they are often used for ranch-house fireplace facings that extend from floor to ceiling. Sometimes the faces are rubbed down with emery cloth or ground down with carborundum to produce a softer tint.

Then modern architects have introduced another variation that makes old time bricklayers scratch their heads. Instead of having the motar joints carefully tooled — that is grooved and smoothed— the motar is allowed to extrude like the frosting that ooes out between layers of a cake. This produces a very rough facade with interesting shadow - casting possibilities.

Although such practice runs counter to the accepted theory of preventing brickwork from offering shelves and pockets for rainwater, Rudolph A. Matern, authority in small house design, used it effectively under a broad overhang on one of his popular Long Island houses.

One thing to remember in doing tricks with bricks, is that it's hard to change your mind. It's a good idea to think twice and then think again, because you're going to have to stick to your decision for some time.

For example C. A. C. of Richmond Va., wants to know how to remove paint from his brick house. That's a tough job. It can be done, but none of the methods are easy.

The most effective way is to sandblast. This calls for the services of experts equipped with pneumatic blowers. Skyscrapers often are cleaned in this way, but it is a cleaning method usually reserved for very hard surfaces—never used on marble, for instance. It involves the blowing of fine sand against the face of the masonry to chip off the surface.

Another method is to wash the brickwork with caustic soda (sodium hydroxide), but this is a very dangerous operation. Caustic sida is so powerful that it is used to remove the hair from hides in leather making. So it's highly important to wear rubber gloves, goggles or a mask to protect the eyes and face and every precaution should be used to avoid splattering.

A much safer, even though more tedious method would be to use a strong and hot solution of trisodium phosphate (available under the trade name of Oakite). Keep applying this until the paint is soft, then rise well with clear water. It's a tiresome job, though. You may think you are making good progress because of the closeup appearance of the rough surface. Then you step back and find the job is far from finished.

Once brick work is painted, the easiest thing to do is to see if you can't convince yourself that you like it painted.

RAT RACE ENDS WITH PH.D.

BOWLING GREEN, O., June 2 (AP) — If you should ask Miss Betty Corwin what led to her degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Ohio State University, she can answer:

"Rats!"

She'll get the degree at OSU commencement exercises June 8.

Her dissertation for the degree is a report on her study of the response of rats under varying conditions of electic shock punishment. She worked for many months with rats and with data about them.

Last summer she observed 84 rats an average of four hours a day seven days a week for two months. Her course work was completed before she joined the Bowling Green State University faculty as an instructor in psychology.

TRAGEDY ON TRAIN TRACKS

ELKTON, Md., June 2 (AP) — Nine - year - old Bobie Harold Justice jumped out of the way of one train but into the side of another and was killed as his mother looked on Friday.

The boy and his mother, Mrs. Frances Justice, had been out picking strawberries.

Mrs. Justice said she and her son were walking along the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks when a train approached from the north. Bobie jumped over to the southbound tracks and was caught under the wheels of another train.

DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 2 (AP) — Luck figured twice Friday as the brakes failed on a truck loaded with logs.

The driver and his partner jumped to safety before the truck rolled downhill and plowed into the St. Michael's Parochial School yard.

Ordinarily there would have been 100 or more small children playing in the schoolyard. But Friday, they were released two hours earlier for summer vacation.

Driver Harold Arnold and his partner escaped with monor injuries. The partner said he had been lucky. His name: Ben Luck.

Governor and Highway Chief At Colorado Chamber Banquet

COLORADO CITY, June 2 — "Don't blame your legislator for everything that goes wrong, because their votes reflect the attitude of the people," E. L. Thornton, newly named chairman of the State Highway Commission, told members of the Colorado City Chamber of Commerce at a banquet in his honor Friday night.

Thornton pointed out that history has proved that the vast majority of civilization has been destroyed as a consequence of domestic corruption resulting from public apathy, which is the natural product of irresponsible government in which the people had no confidence.

In speaking on the Texas road system, Thornton said 2,000 of the 7,000 bridges in the state are badly in need of repair now, and that several hundred of these bridges were not safe before the increase of truckload limits was passed by the present Legislature.

Gov. Allan Shivers, who also was a guest speaker, said he had no comment on any political question, particularly to the one of whether or not he would be a candidate for the United States Senate.

The governor said he didn't believe the County Judges and Commissioners Association truly represents the actual opinion of the majority of Texas county judges and commissioners. This statement was made in connection with the recent blast he aimed at the association, charging that the association was engaged in too much propagandizing in connection with the controversial tax bill that would turn over to counties many millions of state money for road construction.

Another speaker was Sen. Pat Bullock of Colorado City, who served as master of ceremonies. Bullock, in speaking on the tax program now before the Legislature, said "it may take all summer, but there will be a tax bill." He told the gas interests that they are going to be taxed, but that it was a question of how.

Ebba St. Clair Made Catcher After Failure On The Mound

BY FRANK ECK
(Associated Press Staff)

NEW YORK — Ebba St. Claire had so many bad habits as a pitcher that he became a catcher. But that's only one of the reasons why Edward Joseph St. Claire, Jr. is the No. 2 catcher for the Boston Braves.

At Whitehill, N.Y., High, St. Claire was one of the most versatile athletes in the school's history. He played football, baseball and was a weight man in track. In 1938, a year before he was graduated, the Pittsburg Pirates gave him a bonus just because he agreed to sign at a futre date. He hit .317. Then he became a ski trooper. After 18 months in the Army he became a victim of asthma and didn't return to organized ball until 1945. This time he caught for Harnell and hit .347. In '46 Pirates had him back at Albany where he hit .315 as a switch batter. After being beaned twice batting right handed he became strictly a left handed hitter.

St. Claire retiried from baseball to teach and play summer ball. Early in '48 he managed Rutland, Vt., catching and playing first base. Then he went with New Orleans and hit .275. He quit the game again and played in Canada in '49 and last year returned to Atlanta where he hit .280, blasted 19 homers and drove in 107 runs for Dixie Walker's Southern Association champions.

"Walker helped me more than anyone," says St. Claire. "I reported heavy and never really had any incentive to play ball. He kept pushing me and made me hustle.

Last fall the Braves putchased the 29-year-old catcher. His first two weeks up this spring he caught shutouts for Warren Spahn and Johnny Sain. Manager Billy Southworth will be using him a lot against right handers.

St. Claire was a very capable football player for Andy Kerr who used him as a blocking back in his single wing. But Ebba was dissatisfied. He had ability as a forward passer and kicker, having been a triple threat in high school. At one time he was ready to quot the Colgate squad unless Kerr ran some plays where he could pass.

Football injuries would have ended the baseball career of any normal athlete, but not St. Claire. He is six-one and weighs 219 pounds, is 29 and popular.

If you see him catching with his left leg pointing toward third base it's the result of a sophomore football injury. A charley horse led to a blood clot, necessitating an operation.

St. Claire was highly regarded as a pitcher at Colgate. He had won 24 and lost but four games in high school. But he had too many flaws in his delivery as a collegian. So Coach Eppie Barn who played a few games at first base for the Pirates in the early 20's, shifted big Ebba to the outfield because of his bat and throwing arm. In his senior year he did some catching.

St. Claire, who taught and coached baseball and basketball at Ausable Forks, N.Y., decided to turn his full attention to catching while at Hornell in 1945.

'One catcher was sick and the other man we had was thrown out of a night game by the umpire," says St. Claire. "I went behind the bat."

Belmont Man Gives Flowers, Not Horses, Most Attention

BY FRANK ECK
AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

BELMONT, N. Y. — A few years ago a man cashed a $2 ticket on the daily double and put more than $2,000 in his pocket. He said: "Belmont Park. It's beautiful!"

Belmont actually looks like a park. Its shrubs are immaculately trimmed, its flowers arranged as neatly as a bouquet.

The man behind all the transplanting and pruning is Bill Grant, 35-year-old general foreman and horticulturist. He works under Cornelius A. Boyle, track superintendent for 18 years. Even Boyle, whose duties keep him racing madly around the track from morn until dusk, often stops to admire the flowers arranged by Grant and two of his aides, Charles Carter, formerly a gardener for J.P. Morgan; and Ed Marquardt, greenhouse man.

20 Years of Work

Grant is one fellow who knows a sweet pea from a sweet William. He has been at Belmont for amost 20 years.

Grant can tell you how many nasturtiums, geraniums, hydrangea are on the grounds and where they are. He can tell you what kind of cut flowers have been placed on track President George D. Widener's desk each morning.

In the greenhouses are grown all the flowers that can be seen around the grounds and in the flower boxes at the Turf and Field club and clubhouse. These include some 4,000 pots of geraniums in pink, red and white, and some 250 pots of standard geraniums six feet tall.

It took 120 men to get the plants in shape for the current 34 - day spring meeting ending June 21. The spring planting included 3,300 plants, 10,700 pots of flowers, and 1,400 plants used to decorate office desks.

Getting Belmont in shape horticulturally is a year round job. Eight men work in the greenhouses. In the winter there's a night shift.

"If a greenhouse froze," says Grant, "we couldn't replace it. So we must keep all flowers at a certain temperature."

"Now we have 1,500 pots of celosia and 12,000 chrysanthemum plants in the greenhouses. The large yellow mums make free corsages when the Ladies' Handicap is run next fall.

Variety of Foliage

Often called "America's most beautiful track," Belmont is crowded with trees—oak, maple, linden, beech, weeping willow, dogwood, Japanese cherry and maples.

"The trees take a lot of feeding and pruning," says Grant. "Each spring we use twelve 55-gallon drums of emulsified oil (mixing 10 gallons of oil with each 300 gallons of water) to spray the trees. We trim seven miles of hedge twice a season. And we use six tons of fertilizer on the steeplechase and hurdles course."

Bill Grant's job is to keep Belmont Park looking beautiful. His dutites as foreman and horticulturist at the flower-be-decked race track keep him busy from morn till dusk. Here he is checking some of the foliage on his daily rounds.

Long Trail of Theft Is Ended for Youth

HOUSTON, June 2. (AP) — An armed 18-year-old Houston youth who Friday night ended what police called a six weeks spree with a 14-year-old girl friend, that stretched from Houston to New York, was charged today with theft from the mails.

The youth, Joe Ingram, was charged before U.S. Commissioner Ralph Fowler with stealing mail pouches in New York, Virginia, and Arkansas.

Young Ingram was also charged with taking a stolen automobile across a state line.

Thefts of government checks, officers believe, may have totaled as much as $40,000.

The Wolf Man Back On Farm, Quits Trapping

MONTICELLO, Ark. —When the law wouldn't let him set out pioson 23 years ago for wolves that had been preying on his goat herd, Andy Ray quit farming in south Arkansas and became a trapper for the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

When he retired recently, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service sent representatives here to laud Ray as the outstanding wolf hunter in North America.

"My main reason for starting trapping, guess was the loss of those goats," he recalls. "But I also liked fishing and hunting and thought I might as well get paid for it while enjoying it."

Besides campaigning against wolves, Ray, half-Cherokee Indian, trapped beavers in various parts of the country, especially in Georgia. He was sent to Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma to get rid of coyotes. He has done some bear trapping.

The veteran trapper says he wasn't always popular when he first arrived in a community to work. The letters "U. S." were painted on the side of the automobile in which he traveled. Residents would begin wondering what Federal department he represented. They thought he was a "revenooer"—a treasury agent rounding up makers of moonshine whiskey.

To build up their confidence in him, Ray would trap a few wolves and display them on the courthouse lawn. That put him in solid with folks. He was "the wolf man".

Now—in retirement—the "wolf man" is back where he started, farming in south Arkansas, though on a smaller scale.

"I'm going to restrict my trapping to an occasional coon to eat. Been away off and on for about 23 years and I intend to garden and stay at home now."

America's first coal-burning gas turbine locomotive was constructed in 1950.

Synthetic Fuels From Shale Fought By Mid-West Senators

By CHARLES HASLET
(Associated Press Staff)

WASHINGTON, June 2. (AP) — Three oil-state senators disagree with Secretary of the Interior Chapman over the need for commercial production of synthetic fuels.

Chapman recently told the Senate Banking Committee, "It is time to put our oil shale and coal resources to work" in making gasoline, oil and other liquid fuels.

But Senators Kerr (D-Okla), Schoeppel (R-Kan) and Carlson (R-Kan), all former chairmen of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, said today they see no present necessity for any large-scale expansion of the shale coal program.

Their view is that the petroleum industry can meet all requirements from known oil reserves.

Chapman, appearing before the Senate Committee to urge extension of the Defense Production Act beyond June 30, recommended an amendment which would authorize the government to build industrial plants needed for defense.

He said such plants are needed particularly for specialized production in the oil and minerals industries.

"One or two shale and coal plants of commercial size, built now, would pioneer future large-scale production of liquid fuels from these sources" he testified.

Senator Kerr, an oil operator, told a reporter he feels there is no need for the government to build commercial-sized plants, either for production from oil shale or to refine petroleum products.

Schoeppel, a member of the committee before which Chapman appeared, said there is no necessity for large-scale expansion of shale or coal plants in view of the known oil reserves if the industry gets steel it needs and present tax and other incentives are continued.

"I think we can meet all requirements from our known oil reserves," the Kansas senator said.

VIEW DISPUTED

Carlson said that the oil companies will meet the nation's needs if they are supplied the necessary steel. This, he said, would be cheaper and would mean more to the national security than investing in commercial-sized plants for production from coal and shale.

Chapman said both the industry and the Bureau of Mines have done extensive research in refining shale oil. Processes have been developed, he said, for successful production of a variety of fuel, including motor gasoline, diesel oil and jet fuels which will meet all specifications.

Coal reserves, he added, represent a potential source of liquid fuels for centuries to come and technical advances in making oil products from coal parallel those for shale.

There is immediate need, Chapman told the committee, for beginning construction of highly specialized facilities to make certain essential components for military grade aviation gasolines.

Chapman said the nation's oil needs will make an increase necessary in years to come in the rate of drilling which now exceeds 43,000 tests a year. He cited estimates which, he said, indicate that domestic refining capacity should be expanded by the end of 1953 to nearly eight million barrels a day, some 1½ million more than the present capacity.

Sharon Ridge Wells Completed on Pump

Two completion reports on shallow Sharon Ridge field locations were reported to the Railroad Commission this week.

S. B. Roberts No. 12 C. A. Williams pumped 24 hours for a potential of 36 barrels of 28 gravity oil. No water was present. Gas-oil ratio was 110-1. Top of the pay was at 1,708 feet, with casing set at 1,700 feet. The hole had been treated with 6,000 gallons of acid.

Drillsite is in the east 100 acres of the lease in section 192, block 3, H&GN survey.

Forrest C. Lattner No. 8-A Stinson, located in the southwest quarter of section 101, block 97, H&TC survey, pumped 24 hours for a potential of 45 barrels of 30 gravity oil. No water was present. The well had been acidized with 5,000 gallons of acid. Top of the pay was at 1,723 feet, with casing set at 1,700 feet. The hole had been treated with 6,000 gallons of acid.

No. 25 J. W. Young Is Finaled for 176 Bbls.

Caroline Hunt Trust Estate has reported completion of the No. 25 J. W. Young in the Salt Creek field of Kent County.

The well made a potential of 176 barrels of 39.2 gravity oil. The flow was based on a 16 - hour gauge through a 16-64th inch choke. No water was present. Gas - oil ratio was 636-1. The well had been treated with 5,000 gallons of acid. Casing is perforated from 6,390-6,480 feet. Top of the pay was at 6,386 feet.

No. 25 Young is located in section 144, block G, W&NW survey.

Russia Wastes Few Combat Troops In Non-Fighting Jobs

By CLARK BEACH
(Associated Press Staff)

WASHINGTON — How do the Russians get 175 divisions out of 2.5 million army men while the U. S. gets only 18 divisions from 1.3 million?

Does the U. S. waste most of its manpower in armchair jobs and non-combat frills while the Russians have most of their men shouldering rifles?

A breakdown of how the two nations organize and use their army forces shows that the U. S. gets almost as many combat troops out of a given number of men as the Russians.

A GENERAL'S TESTIMONY

Brig. Gen. D. A. D. Ogden, chief of the Army's organization and training division, acknowledged in testimony to a Congressional committee that the Russians get along with somewhat fewer non-combat troops than the U. S. does. But he said that's because the Russians don't take the same care of the lives of their soldiers.

Ogden told the committee that:

1. Russian soldiers do not spend such a large proportion of their time in training as United States troops. They serve longer in the army, and very little training is given them before they join combat units.

2. Russian soldiers don't get much medical attention. A large proportion of the sick and wounded is allowed to die.

3. The Russians are closer to their fighting fronts than the United States. Thus they need fewer men along their lines of communication.

4. The Russians use civilians or part-time soldiers to man much of their anti-aircraft artillery and make extensive use of forced civilian labor jobs done by military personnel in the United States.

RED DIVISION IS SMALLER

What makes the biggest difference in the number of divisions, however, is the fact that the Russian division is smaller than the United States division. And the Russians designate as divisions a lot of units which in this country are not organized along division lines.

The average United States infantry division at war strength contains 18,000 men, compared to the present Russian average of 8,000. Our forces are backed up in the combat zone, moreover, by fighting men who are even more numerous than the men in the divisions — combat troops in the artillery, armored forces, reconnaissance, engineers, signal communications, etc. In many small theaters of war no divisions are used — just regimental combat teams or special purpose forces.

One high-ranking Army expert on personnel says the Army has about 65,000 men for one division of 18,000 men. To explain where the extra 47,000 men are stationed he sets up the idea of a division "slice" of the Army. To picture the division "slice" he assumes the division is in combat 1,500 miles from United States shores.

Many of the men in the "slice" have nothing to do with a division. The "slice" is just an account of the number of men who are assigned to various duties when a division is in combat 1,500 miles from United States shores.

First are the 18,000 men in the division. There are 23,000 more who would be combat troops in artillery, armor, signals etc., not assigned to any division. That means 64 per cent of the total "slice" would be in combat.

COMMUNICATIONS TAKES MEN

Not in combat would be 7,150 troops in communications work or 11 per cent of the total "slice." They man port facilities on the foreign shore, store and deliver supplies over there, keep highway transport and railroads going, run hospitals, maintain telegraph, telephone, radio, etc.

In the United States would be the remaining 25 per cent of the "slice" — 16,250 men. Of these, 13,000 or 20 per cent would be in training, including transients — men shipping out and coming back. Sick and wounded in hospitals would number about 1,950, or 3 per cent. And 1,300, or 1 per cent would be engaged in administrative work, research, supply, home port facilities, etc.

Cavings Plug Perforation In Martin Test

Pan American Production Co. and Forrest Oil Corp. No. 1 F. D. Breedlove, Northwest Martin County flowing discovery from the Silurо-Devonian lime at 12,070-148 feet, is coring ahead below 12,168 feet.

Operator plans to core to 12,198 feet and then run a drillstem test and electric log surveys.

This new field opener has already flowed clean oil at the rate of 45 barrels per hour from the zone at 12,074-138 feet. It is located 13 miles northwest of Tarzan and 660 feet from south and 4,620 feet from east lines of league 258, Briscoe County School Land survey.

On the latest test from 12,074-148 feet, the well flowed 26 barrels of oil in one hour. However, the perforations were partially plugged with cavings. Interested observers believe that the plug condition likely prevented the flow on that test from being any higher than it was.

No. formation water has been developed.

Tips Are More Important Than Salaries to Snyder Car-Hops

Tipping is big business—at least to about 50 Snyder car-hops and waitresses who make a big part of their living through the generosity of their customers.

The going wage here for car-hops is pretty low, but tips add up to a sizable figure for the girls with the smiles.

Salary for car hops paid by Gordon's Drive-in is $2 per day—but tips averaging from $4 to $12 per day enable the girls to earn from $50 to $100 per week.

Contrary to what many might think, it is not always the "good-looking" girls who find the public the most generous, but more often the ordinary type who always has a pleasant smile and gives quick service.

Gordon Goss, owner of the cafe which employs about 30 car-hops, says that service means more than looks in gaining tips.

And just because a girl is not a beauty doesn't mean she won't be highest in tips.

"Its the girls who give the best customer service who gets the most tips, but all of them can depend on enough tips to make a good wage from car-hopping," he said.

Inside waitresses have a higher salary, but usually get less in tips. The going wage here for waitresses and fountain girls ranges from about $28 to $40 per week, with usually a substantial amount of tips.

Snyder car-hops have proven that a friendly smile and quick service can be turned into hard cash. Alice Sartor, car hop at Gordon's Drive-in, says tips range from $4 to $12 per day.

WHO TIPS?

A survey of waitresses and car-hops shows that it's not the "gay young blades" with their dates who tip most generously, but the married persons.

Unmarried men uually tip better when they are with a girl than when alone, "maybe because of vanity and pride involved," they said.

But the drunks are the best tippers by far, the girls report.

"They just don't care about messing with the change, I guess," one said. "Or they wish to impress a car-hop who might not look so good to a sober man," she added.

A number of cafe owners report that even with good salaries and big tips, car hops and waitresses are almost impossible to find or keep in Snyder.

"They will work for a few week, then quit without any good reason," cafe men said.

"In most towns the size of Snyder, you have to turn away car-hop applicants in droves, but not here," they said.

66 CAFE

Floyd C. Hodges, manager of the 66 Cafe on the East Highway, said his waitresses were paid $30 to $35 per week in salary, and usually made about that much more in tips. He hires 24 employees, and has a big turn-over problem.

"One of the reasons for the constrant change in cafe help is that many married women must leave town with their husbands who are constantly being transferred with some oil company or drilling crew"

C. E. Ballard, owner of Ballard's Cafe on the East Highway, said his waitresses are paid $4 per day in salary, get two meals, and usually average from $2 to $4 per day in tips.

"It's not hard for a good waitress to make $50 to $75 per week," Ballard said.

"Not just any girl will make a good waitress," he added. "It takes one who is pretty well educated and intelligent to make a good waitress."

"She must be able to tell at a glance if her customers are satisfied and give good quick service," he said.

Most cafes give at least two meals in addition to the salary—and meals are a big budget item now.

Emma Oliver Believed Saved In Appointment With Death Wednesday

SAN ANTONIO, June 2 (AP) — It appeared certain today that Emma (Straight Eight) Oliver, giant Negress convicted of murder, would not keep her date with death at Huntsville State Prison Wednesday.

She undoubtedly escaped execution at that time when Judge P. C. Sanders Friday ordered that she be returned to the state penitentiary to await action of the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Judge Sanders did not order a stay of execution directly but since the Court of Criminal Appeals must first review the testimony of a hearing here Friday, it does not appear likely that her execution can be carried out Wed nesday. The district court here has 10 days in which to forward the material to Austin.

Lawrence Interprets Testimony In General MacArthur's Favor

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, — Maybe Sen. Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire, is right when he says he would like to see the senators ring down the curtain on their investigation of the MacArthur episode. It raises a lot of other conjectures, too.

Maybe all the future hearings will not bring out a bit more than past hearing. Maybe the record already shows that nobody really know why President Truman fired Gen. MacArthur and why his associates did their best to think up the reasons after the dismissal was ordered.

Maybe since the record now shows that the President decided to resist aggression in the Far East last June without a formal estimate from the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the National Security Council as to the risks involved, the Korean war—in view of the restrictions subsquently imposed—is a prize example of "the wrong war, at the wrong time and against the wrong enemy." For Gen. Bradley has testified that the military mission no longer is to clear the enemy out of Korea. Maybe Americans should be prepared now for defeat on the military side and for a "negotiated peace."

Maybe, as Sen. Tobey says, it's true that the senators ought not to be posing military questions for the top military commanders, but maybe also the families of the 65,000 killed and wounded and of the 300,000 or more American boys who are fighting in Korea today can't think of any other way to get the answers except through their elected representatives.

Maybe it's right that the Senate committee should protect the constitutional rights of a witness who doesn't want to tell what was said in White House Conferences, but maybe it is also right to ask why those same senators to this day have taken no action to question whether the whole Korean war is a constitutional operation. For the legislative branch, which alone under the Constiution can declare war, does have the right to assert its constitutional perogatives, too.

Maybe, since both Sec. Marshall and Gen. Bradley have now testified that there is no evidence of "insubordination" on the part of Gen. MacArthur, it will be accepted that the violations of policy are pertinent to define. None has yet been given except in the vaguest term. The President, for instance, has said that Gen. Mac Arthur approached the Chinese commander with an ultimatum or surrender demand and didn't ask Washington, but the general says before and never was sent any message of disapproval.

Maybe the message sent by Gen. MacArthur to the Veteran of Foreign Wars, in which he upheld the strategic importance of Formosa, was not American policy when he sent it last August but nobody has been willing lately to admit it wasn't. The net effect is to find Gen. MacArthur, on the record, merely expressing official policy to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Maybe Gen. MacArthur, after the Dec. 6 instruction, issued some statements without clearing them with Washington, but so did Gen Ridgway. Likewise, Gen. MacArthur was subsequently told he did not have to clear military statements. All the questions that the press directed to him were military questions.

Maybe President Truman would concur in Sen. Tobey's desire to call a halt. For it was the President who started all the furore—not Gen. MacArthur or the senators who have ever since been trying to find out what it's all about. Maybe nobody will ever find out, anyway, what Mr. Truman meant by his statement that he had been considering dismissing Gen. MacArthur ever since last August but kept on sending him private messages praising his accomplishments Maybe there are lots of people outside Washington who do not understand offical "gobbledycook," but there are many here in Washington who don't understand it either.

Scores Tighter, Errors Less As City Leagues Improve Game

Friday night's games in Memorial Park indicated that both pitching and fielding are improving in the city leagues.

Town & Country won a one-run victory in a 5-4 game over Parker Drilling Co., and Sunray beat Pasotex 11-4.

FEWER ERRORS

There were only nine errors in the two games. Sunray had a perfect night in the field with no errors.

Winning pitcher, Clark Wise for Town & Country, gave up five hits to Parker Drilling Co., and Parker's losing pitcher, Joe Reynolds gave up only five hits.

Sunray's Zelmer Glover, unfeated this season, allowed only five Pasotex hits for their four runs. Charles White, pitching for Pasotex, was the low mounder for the night. He gave up seven hits to Sunray players.

Bill Tolleson for Sunray and Bill Roberts for Pasotex, hit the only two home runs of the night.

Town & Country had five runs, five hits, two errors, and five men left on base. Parker Drilling Co. had four runs, five hits, four errors, and seven men left on base.

STATISTICS

Sunray had 11 runs, seven hits, no errors, and seven men left on base, and Pasotex had four runs, five hits, three errors, and four men left on base.

Two games Monday night end the first round of play in the city league and commercial league.

Town & Country will play the American Legion in the first game, and the V.F.W will play Parker Drilling Co. in the second.

A new schedule for the second round is announced today and play will begin Tuesday night.

Spectator interest is still increasing, with crowds growing steadily, Eddie Hight, league president, said.

Diamond Vet Piloting Team In Texas Now

TEXAS CITY, Tex. —Rollie Hensley, veteran of 26 years in baseball, a lot of it in the major leagues, never thought too much about settling down.

But Rollie in the near future hopes to build home.

He is now managing the Texas City-LaMarque entry in the Class B Gulf Coast League.

"This is the opportunity I have been looking for and I hope to make Texas my permanent home, he says.

The former major league catcher was minor league manager of the year in 1950 when his Columbus team won the Little World Series. The year before, his Nashville Vols of the Southern Association won the pennant and beat out Tulsa of the Texas League in the Dixie Series.

In a reminiscent mood, Rollie talked about the best pitchers he ever caught. He said Bobby Feller had the most stuff, Mel Harder was the smartest, Burleigh Grimes was tough with his spitball. Lon Warneke was good and so was Bucky Walters.

He observed that trick pitches hurt a hurler's arm. "It is best to leave the slider, screwball and curve alone until one is bodily mature," he says. "Then start the curve, but the other two pitches —leave them alone. Feller began to have arm trouble just after he began throwing the slider and Carl Hubbell, the only screwball pitcher who was good, can't even hold his arm straight because of too many screwballs."

Snyder Latin Team To Meet Big Spring Tigers

The Snyder Aces, a Latin American team, will meet the Big Spring Tigers in a baseball game here at 3 o'clock this afternoon, Adam Gonzales, manger of the team, said.

The game will be played on a field south of the Negro section of town.

It will be the seventh game for the local boys this year, who have lost only one and won five.

Their one loss was in an 11-inning game which ended 5-4 in favor of the Roscoe Farmers.

Artesia Hurler Credited With Halting Colts' Winning Streak

By WILBUR MARTIN
(Associated Press Staff)

Rudt Lorona of Artesia, N. M., stopped in spectacular fashion San Angelo's bid to break a record set in Texas, equalled by New York in the National League, but never surpassed.

He twirled a no-hit, no-run game on May 20 and that broke San Angelo's winning streak in the Longhorn League at 19 straight.

The baseball record was set in 1902 by Corsicana, then in the Texas League. The record of 27 victories was equalled by New York in 1916, but never surpassed.

The closest any team ever came in Texas to crack this mark was in 1922 when Wichita Falls, also then in the Texas League, ran a string of 25 victories.

San Angelo breezed through its 19 straight games almost without difficulty. Even two days of idleness — forced by rain — couldn't cool the Colts. But Lorona did.

Even if the Colts had broken the record, or equalled it, or even if some other team eventually does, the conditions won't be the same.

Corsicana set it with a league player limit of just eleven players. The three pitchers the club carried had to double in the field.

The team was managed by Mike O'Connor and it startted its winning streak at Fort Worth on June 8. Waco broke the string on July 6.

Included in Corsicana's winning streak was that fabulous 51-3 victory over Texarkana at Enis on June 13. This was the game where the famed "Nig" Clarke hit eight home runs.

Corsicana got 53 base hits in this game and the tilt was responsible for more Texas League records than one. It also set a number of world records.

San Angelo's feat this year set quite a few records for the Class C Longhorn League. And it is doubtful if any winning streak was ever ended in more dramatic fashion.

Sears Foundation Gilts Are Awarded to Nine In County 4-H Clubs

In continuation of the two year swine program sponsored by the Sears Foundation with the co-operation of the agricultural leaders, nine Scurry County 4-H members received gilts yesterday at the high school, according to O. M. Fowler, county agent.

Six members of the Ira 4-H club, Earl Clinkinbeard, Leon Ford, Travis Sawyer, Jerry Ford, Tommy Echols and Douglas Sawyer received pigs, as did three Snyder 4-H club members, Larry Bills, James Arp, and Velesta Sumruld.

This was the first time that a girl was permitted to join in the program.

Next Sept. 27, the recipients of the gilts will place their pigs on exhibition at a swine show at Sweetwater.

Later a heavyweight contest from the first litter of pig will be scheduled, with a pen-of-three to be entered, Fowler, said.

When the pigs, which were durocs, were distributed to the 4-H club members yesterday, literature on the care of swine was given to each member, and additional instructions on what is expected of them from the foundation.

Light Polio Year Is Seen

AUSTIN, June 2. (AP) — State Health Officer George W. Cox predicted a relatively mild polio year for Texas Friday.

Cox noted that total incidence of the disease this year to date is 186 cases, compared to 505 over the same period in 1950.

The health officer was cautious about predictions, however.

"Hot weather is later in coming this year than it was 'ast," he warned. "That might explain the relatively low case reports."

Fifteen new cases were reported for Texas last week. They were concentrated in Nueces County, which had 10. Harris County had four cases, and Tarrant County had one.

Snider's Homer Gives 2-1 Win For Brooklyn

BROOKLYN, June 2 (AP) — Duke Snider's 12th home run of the season, with Pee Wee Reese aboard, gave the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers a 2 to 1 decision over the Cincinnati Reds today and evened the series at a game apiece.

It was a scoreless duel between the Dodger's Ralph Branca and Willie Ramsdell of Cincinnati until the bottom half of the sixth.

Reese led off the sixth with a base on balls. Then Snider hoisted his drive to the delight of a "Father and Son Day" crowd of 11,925 at Ebbets Field.

Branca, in winning his third game, allowed only five hits, all well scattered.

Cincinnati threatened in the top of the seventh when Joe Adcock, led off with a walk. Adcock advanced to second as Branca threw out Ted Kluszewski, and Barney McCoskey sent him to third with a single to left.

Virgil Stallcup flied to left and Adcock came home after the catch. That was all for the Redlegs. Branca retired the side, and then set the visitors down in order in the eighth and ninth innings.

Frank Smith came on in relief to set Brooklyn down in order in the last half of the inning.

Aside from the two scoring bursts, each side got only one other runner to third base.

Last Place 'A's Break Long Winning Streak for White Sox

CHICAGO, June 2. (AP)—The first-place Chicago White Sox, playing at times like a sand-lot team, had their 14-game winning streak ended in ignominious fashion today, 5-1, by the last-place Philadelphia Athletics, whose Bob Hooper hurled a tight five-hitter.

Hooper, making his first start since April 28 and notching his first win of the season, got rousing help from three teammates.

Big Gus Zernial blasted a fifth inning homer to start the downfall of his former club, while ex-White Sox Dave Philley and Wally Moses worked a double steal in a four-run seventh which routed starter Joe Dobson.

Dobson, seeking his fifth straight win without a defeat, had a one hitter through six innings. That hit was Zernial's home run.

But in the seventh the Athletics pushed across four runs on four hits, spiced with Dobson's mental lapse when Dave Philley raced home from third and pinch-hitter Wally Moses romped from first to second on a double steal. Both Philley and Moses, like Zernial, are ex-White Sox players. Zernial and Philley went to the Athletics in a recent deal which brought the Sox Paul Lehner of the A's and Orestes Minoso of the Indians.

The only Sox tally came in the seventh when Eddie Robinson, central figure in a unique second-inning double play by the Athletics, scored from second on Jim Busby's single.

Operation Is Performed On Sammy Baugh

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Sammy Baugh, the great passer for the Washington pro football team, underwent an operation today for the removal of a loose cartilage in the left knee.

Baugh was injured in a rodeo at Texas A&M College three weeks ago. He flew here Friday to attend the celebrities Golf Tournament but his knee developed such stiffness Friday night that Dr. Robert E. Moran ordered him to the hospital.

Baugh was selected as the No. 2 quarterback on the Associated Press all time All America football team, behind Walter Eckersall. Since Eckersall is dead, Baugh was to have received the Quarterback Award at a ceremony during the Celebrities Tournament.

He is expected to be on his feet Sunday and to stay in the hospital three or four days.

Dick McCann, press agent for the Washington Redskins, said the operation shouldn't affect Baugh's football playing.

Addict Tells Horrors That Came With The Dope Habit

PITTSBURGH — Did you ever wonder what it would be like to take dope?

Here's how one drug addict described his horrible ordeal during a two-month-long binge on heroin. Haggard and stooped, the 21-year-old former athlete said he became an addict after meeting other addicts and a drug peddler while working at a used car lot.

"Before I knew it I was on the stuff," he said. "It calmed me. In fact, it numbed all the organs in my body. I was immune to pain. After six or eight hours, though, the stuff would wear off and my nerves would be worse than ever.

"I discovered the only thing that could help was another shot. The more I took the more I needed and the worse my nerves got. Pretty soon I began to feel other symptoms.

"For instance, I couldn't sleep. I got addicted to sleeping pills, too. I lost my appetite. The first thing I got up in the morning, I had to have some. While the stuff was working I would sulk and want to be by myself or in the company of other dopeheads.

"When the effect wore off, the torture started. Pain would hit me in the back first, then my stomach would roll around like jelly. I'd get diarrhea.

"Then I noticed I was getting immune to the dope. I was taking 10 capsules a day but no matter how many I took, the pains and nausea began coming more frequently.

"I asked my brother to help me. He took what was left of the heroin and got rid of it. Then my family called a doctor.

"I 'm through with the stuff. I'm going to take treatments and I've been told I can be cured.

"I'm telling this story so others won't kid themselves, as I did, into thinking they can handle any kind of narcotics.

Firm Had to Fire Man Who Confessed He Was a Witch

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Shavings by a curbstone Socrates:

The personnel executive of a world-wide business firm recently had an interesting problem in labor relations.

The native help in a Far East branch came to the local manager with the complaint that one of their fellow workers was a witch. They said he was putting the whammy on them — at the office as well as at their homes.

One worker already had broken out in a strange rash. Others were having violent quarrels with their wives. All agreed the wives had been put under a spell by the mumbo-jumbo arts of the suspected witch. They threatened to walk out in a group if he weren't dismissed.

Uneasy at the prospect of keeping a professional devil-dealer on its payroll, the firm conducted its own inquiry. And after questioning the culprit it fired him.

"Had to," explained the personnel executive. "He admitted he was a witch."

Today's true small fry tale

It is hard to curb the natural free enterprise of the modern child. A small boy had acquired the delirious juvenile skill of spitting between his front teeth and kept demonstrating it to his mother.

Not wishing to put an eternal scar on the sensibilities of her offspring, she held her peace as long as she could. Finally, she decided, however, that enough was enough.

"You'll have to stop that now," she told him firmly.

"Why do it?" he demanded, and put up his most logical argument. "It's my spit."

The oddest ambition I ever encountered was that of a soldier in Korea who had made an undertaker the beneficiary of his $10,000 service life insurance policy.

"All my life I wanted something that nobobdy else in Georgia ever had," he drawled. "And I decided a $10,000 funeral was the answer. Folks'd come from a hundred miles in Georgia to watch something like that."

Santa Monica Schools Release Students Weekly For Religion

SANTA MONICA, Calif.,—School children here get religious education with a 1951 touch. They meet for Bible instruction in a super-modern trailer, fully equipped with the latest audio-visual aids, including movies.

The youngsters are released from their regular school classes for one period each week to attend religious courses sponsored by the Santa Monica Bay Council of Churches. Formerly they met in nearby centers for these "released time" sessions. Now when they pour out of school they find the mobile class room parked right outside.

Built to order, the trailer cost approximately $3,800, including furnishings. It will accomodate 34 pupils at a time, is 34 feet long, seven feet wide and seven feet high. It is furnished with two-pupil desks and individual chairs, chosen for the height of the children who will occupy them.

An altar, backed by red velvet drapes and equipped with a Bible and electric candles, makes it possible to transform the trailer into a chapel.

During instruction, Miss Ruth E. Cleveland, supervisor and teacher, raises a curtain to reveal a blackboard which she uses to illustrate the lessons. Windows are provided with dark curtains which are drawn for film or slide demonstrations on a sceen that can be lowered from the ceiling.

A fuel oil heater with a fan to circulate the air keeps the trailer at the desired emperature and provides venetilation. The interior is finished in matching panels of light birch. Twelve swivel base lights provide illumination.

Subjects taught in the trailer classes include "Stories of Jesus and His Church," for fourth graders, "Leaders, Kings and Prophets," for fifth grade pupils, and "The Bible, Our Guide For Happy Living," for sixth graders.

Reverend Wales E. Smith, present director of the "released time" program for the Santa Monica Bay Council of Churches says one of the greatest values of the classes is that they attract children who are not related to any church or Sunday School.

Bosses Hold The Answer To Productivity

ANN ARBOR, Mich — Whether you are a good worker in your job may depend on the kind of boss you have, say a group of researchers at the University of Michigan.

The researchers, members of the university's Institute for Social Research, studied the factors making for higher productivity at the home office of the Prudential Insurance Company in Newark, N.J. They examined 12 groups doing the same kind of work, some with high productivity records and some with low.

"Most of the difference found between high and low work groups appear to be related to the differing nature of the supervision of the groups," the institute reports.

"Some of the most important findings indicate that the heads of the high-producing sections are significantly more likely to receive general rather than close supervision than from their superiors; to like the amount of authoity and jobs; to spend more time in supervision; to give general rather than close supervision to their employees; to be employee-oriented rather than production-oriented."

The researchers say they found few differences between the attitudes of high and low-producing employees. But workers in the better sections had a "greater degree of pride" in their work. In one department of the company, the higher producers griped more about some company policies like the rating and placement systems.

"In addition," the reports says, "employees in the low productivity sections participated more in company recreational and athletic programs."

Having Given Us More Noises, Scientists Now Study Quiet

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Staff)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Apartments and homes with a new freedom — freedom from your neighbors' noise — are the goal of a room here that becomes a hellhole of noise.

This story is for you if thin walls bring you the snarls of every quarrel, the blare of radios, and shouts or wails of children. If the ceiling or wall makes you an innocent bystander of each party. If airplanes and traffic and factories invade your home with racket.

The room is a new test chamber at the acoustics laboratory of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It is sound-proof and echo-proof so quiet you probably couldn't sleep in it. The drum of your own heart beat likely would keep you awake.

But at a signal, 256 loudspeakers placed behind a test panel in the wall roar with sound so intense it could break your eardrums.

A microphone records the sound waves coming though each square inch of the wall. The mike travels up and down and across on a scaffold and with other instruments draws a map of the sound intensity at each spot.

The purpose is to learn just how sound travels through walls and ceilings or floors. That can lead to design of new materials that will keep out the annoying sounds, or to improvements in existing materials, or new combinations of materials for strong fire-safe construction making an apartment a castle of peace and quiet.

The sound studies currently are being made by Dr. Jordan Baruch and Albert Frost under supervision of professors R. H. Bolt and L. L. Beranek.

The loudspeakers, set in rows, are located behind an eight-foot square test panel, composed of one kind or several kinds of wall material. The loudspeakers produce pure tones. For testing ceilings and floors, there is another panel in the ceiling, with a thumping hammer creating the testsounds.

Different sounds have different penetrating power, depending upon their frequency, through various materials. The actual tests now are beginning, after the difficult preliminary work of designing or setting up instruments to measure the behavior of sound.

The test room is built to prevent echoes from interfering with study of how sounds come through a wall. The room has wails of reinforced concrete a foot thick. It's made acoustically dead by hundreds of cones of fiber glass, lining the walls, ceiling and floor with their tapered end facing out. You walk on a suspended floor composed of a mesh of stainless steel aircraft cable mounted on springs.

These studies are just one of a number of steps here and abroad to keep noise out of apartments, row houses and individual homes.

A three-story apartment house in Rotterdam, Holland is a life size realistic laboratory. It contains 48 apartments, each built differently to learn what kinds of building construction are most efficient in bringing freedom from outside noise. There are 38 different floor constructions, 32 kinds of wall partitions, 45 outer wall and 22 flat roof constructions.

British scientists have prepared a recommended code to keep noises out of schools and flats. More than 100,000 housing units, including separate apartments in the same building, have been built following its provisions.

Acheson Believed Only Armed Aid Could Save Formosa in '49

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP) — Secretary of State Acheson says there was general agreement in the government in 1949 that no United States aid — short of armed intervention — could save Chinese Nationalist Formosa from the Communists.

And Acheson declares it was United States policy then, as well as earlier and since, that Formosa — still held by the Nationalists — was strategically important to defense of this country.

This was the State Department's position, the secretary says, even though it advised its consular officers Dec. 23, 1949, that the Pacific Island had "no special military significance."

The reason for that, Acheson said, was to "minimize the damage to the prestige of the United States . . . should Formosa fall." He added:

"I don't know any other attitude which would be sounder to take if you believed, as we did believe — and rightly believed — that an event was going to happen which would be damaging to our prestige, than to say keep your chin up, it doesn't matter, this isn't important, we will go ahead and deal with it in some other way.

REPORT MADE PUBLIC

"That is what is behind this whole document."

Acheson made those statements Friday to the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees investigating Far Eastern policy and the dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Overriding Acheson's protests that Russia would benefit, the committees made the 1949 State Department document public by a 15 to 9 vote.

Five Democrats lined up with 10 Republicans in favor of releasing the memorandum. Eight Democrats and one Republican — Senator Morse of Oregon — voted to keep it secret.

The document said that in 1949 the Communists were trying "to get us involved in a risky and unpromising venture" in Formosa.

It said there was "a mistaken conception of its strategic importance to United States defense in the Pacific," and added:

"Loss of the island is widely anticipated, and the manner in which civil and military conditions there have deteriorated adds weight to the expectation."

SOVIET GAIN FEARED

The substance of the document has been known for some time, and committee members who favored official release contended there was no good reason why it should be withheld.

Acheson took the position, however, that Russia could "use it to discredit the information program of the United States."

He said the Soviet could do that by "arguing that the Voice of America is not interested in portraying the truth, but rather thinks up its arguments (and by implication, its facts) as they may be necessary to support a pre-conceived foreign policy."

The Department's Voice of America broadcasts are beamed abroad to sell the Democratic way of life and counteract Soviet propaganda.

Time to Begin War on Flies

The number of flies in a community is an excellent index to the sanitary conditions of the city—and if judged by that criterion, Snyder last year was not a very sanitary town.

The problem of flies again presents itself, as this is the season when they breed by the millions, to create not only a household nuisance but also a health hazard.

According to Dr. James Kriesmeyer, acting director of the city-county health unit, the common housefly is a carrier of diseases, among them typhoid fever. Of course, he pointed out, there are other ways of carrying typhoid fever, but flies are among them.

Flies are an indication of the sanitation of a given locality because they lay their eggs in filth, and presumably the more flies there are the more filthy places have been available to them as breeding spots.

Cleanliness in a residence, a neighborhood, or a community is one of the surest ways of combating flies, Dr. Kriesmeyer concluded.

Tax Loopholes Let One-third Texas Motorists Avoid Paying

By MAC ROY RASOR

AUSTIN, (AP) — One out of every three car owners in 146 surveyed Texas cities ignored the city property tax on their automobiles last year.

That is the tax collection record reported by the Texas League of municipalities. The statistics were compiled from League questionnaires.

The League said its survey found 29 of the cities made no attempt even to levy the tax, most having abandoned it because "the collection of such taxes on a uniform basis is next to impossible."

The cities surveyed represented 1,662,063 persons.

In those cities were 253,291 motor vehicles. Taxes were paid on 168,831 of them. On the other 84,460, the taxes were not paid.

The delinquency represented $470,202 in lost revenue to the cities, the League said.

BILLS BOTTLED UP

Bills to force payment of the taxes were introduced in the 52nd session of the legislature but were quickly bottled up. They would have required owners of the vehicles to pay the ad valorem taxes on their cars before they could get their annual license plates.

The League said it conducted its survey to show the need for the legislation.

Towns reported making no attempt to levy the tax included Alamo Heights (San Antonio), Alpine, Bellaire (Houston), Cedar Hill, Centerville, Edinburg, Franklin, Justin, Kermit, Kingsville, Lake Jackson, Levelland, Littlefield, Los Fresnos, Lyford, Marfa, Nederland, Odessa, Orange, Pharr, Port Neches, Raymondville, San Benito, Seguin, Slaton, South Houston, Stephenville, West University Place (Houston) and Wink.

In towns still levying the tax, delinquencies ranged as high as 85 per cent (Freeport) and as low as 4 per cent (McKinney).

Among the larger cities, Fort Worth was 35 per cent and Dallas 20 per cent.

WACO PAYMENTS HIGH

Waco payments were 80 per cent delinquent, Midland 41 per cent.

The automobiles tax records reported for last year by the cities and towns included the following:

Venue Change Is Requested In Two Suits

Petitions for change of venue from Scurry to Milam County in two damage suits against Dr. W. R. Newton, totalling $258,000 were filed in 132nd district court Friday by Dr. Newton's attorney, James Little of Big Spring.

In the first suit, Bonnie Marie Hughes and her husband are seeking $78,000 damages against Dr. Newton, in which Mrs. Hughes alleges that while she was a patient in the Snyder Hospital Clinic on March 28, a roller carriage collapsed as she was entering the maternity ward. Mrs. Hughes stated she was injured and asked $50,000 for bodily injury; $25,000 for impairment of motherhood, and $3,000 is asked by the husband for the loss of services and society of his wife.

Juanita Shipley and her husband, W. L. Shipley, have sued for $180,000, charging that Mrs. Shipley was injured while a patient at the Snyder Hospital Clinic during a major operation.

She is seeking $100,000 for bodily injuries; $25,000 for nursing, medical and hospital expenses; $15,000 for pain and suffering, and her husband is asking $40,000 for the loss of services and society of his wife.

J. Ray Martin is attorney for both plaintiffs.

Judge Ben F. Thorpe is slated to rule on the pleas of privilege in the near future.

Dr. Newton contended he is not a legal resident of Scurry County.

Bitter Threats Hanging Over Royalty's Visit

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, June 1, (AP) — Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret are here for a four-day visit amid general police alerts against anti-British extremists.

King George VI stayed in London, recuperating from influenza.

As the Queen and her younger daughter stepped ashore Friday from the cruiser Sheffield, police of County Armagh searched the countryside around Cross Ma Glen for demonstrators who early Friday burnd down the royal customs but there.

The hut, a large one-story building, burned to the ground along with bales of customs records. Extremists burned down many of these huts in 1937 to protest a visit then by King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The demonstrators again were protesting the continued union of Northern Ireland with the British Crown. They want to unite the six northern counties with the Republic of Ireland.

In Belfast some 3,000 policemen, armed with pistols, were on guard to prevent incidents. Seven miles of rope were strung along the streets to keep back the crowds along the royal route.

In the Irish Republic to the south, the Dublin headquarters of the Sinn Fein patriot organization flew its black flag. Under it was this poster.

"The British Conqueror Still Rules. The Royal Visit Means Irishmen Failed."

Last week a hand grenade was thrown at the British Embassy in Dublin. Leaflets tossed on the embassy steps threatened the lives of the King and Queen if they carried out the visit.

Vanderbilt To Sail Pacific In Quest of Fish

LONG BEACH, Calif., June 2 (AP) — A 192-foot, steel hulled scooner set sail for remote islands of the South Seas Friday with a party of scientists who want to study rare fish and birds.

Led by 36-year-old George Vanderbilt, son of the late Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the expedition will head first for Hawaii then south to the Marquesas, Society and Tuamotu islands.

The trip is co-sponsored by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences and the California Academy of Sciences, San Francisco, which will study specimens brought back from the deeps of the Pacific.

Vanderbilt, of New York and South Carolina, who has made several previous expeditions for the Philadelphia Academy, said he hopes to make "quite a haul."

His big yacht is loaded with equipment for finding and capturing marine life. There are dredges for scraping the ocean floor, nets for hauling in fish attracted to the surface at night by a bright arc light, and equipment for divers who will go under water to retrieve fish knocked out by a special poison.

"This isn't a 'bring 'em back alive' expedition," Vanderbilt said. We'll bring our specimens back in alcohol."

He'll also bring back a record of the trip and its findings on film. He's taking along 14 cameras, several of them equipped for undersea use.

Vanderbilt expects to be gone six months and will study ocean areas that have been visited only once before by an expedition in 1910.

Members of the party include Vanderbilt's wife, their daughter, Lucille; Capt. William LeRoy Cleveland, of Binghamton, N.Y., and his wife; Dr. Early Herald of the California Academy; John Lance of West Palm Beach, Fla., and Dr. Gerry Harrigan of New York.

Another passenger is Mrs. Clark Gable, who filed suit for divorce from the actor Thursday. She plans to sail only as far as Honolulu.

GALVESTON, June 2 (AP) — Civil defense plans were discussed today by delegates to the annual convention of the Constables Association of Texas being held here.

County Treasurer C. R. Lockhart was bitten Tuesday night by a centiped. Charley, in company with Sheriff Darby, had spent the day out on the Colorado River and returning late at night retired and was soon soundly sleeping. About 1 o'clock he was awakened by a pain in the ankle and making an examination concluded that he had been bitten or stung, and upon further investigation he discovered the poisonous insect, a centiped some five or six inches in length in his bed. The doctor was hastily called and the wound dressed.

On Wednesday evening June 5 at the Methodist Church Mr .Albert E. Tinker and Miss Edna E. Byrd were united in the holy wedlock.

The large auditory of the church presented a most beautiful and impressive scene; the altar having been very artistically decorated with laces, flowers and evergreens over which numerous chandeliers cast their brilliant light. Long before the arrival of the contracting parties the house had been filled by relatives and friends of the young couple and sweet strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. T. F. Baker, announced to the audience that the bridal party was at the door.

Mr. J. I. Baze and Miss Mellye Buchanan, Mr. Polk Strayhorn and Miss Anne Baker were the first to appear and marched down the aisles to their respective places in front of the altar; these were followed by the bride and groom, and when they had taken their places under the magnificant arch that had been tastefully arranged over and just in front of the preacher's stand, Rev. W. H. Harris, pastor of the Methodist Church at Sweetwater, stepped forward and in language poetical recited the marriage ritual which united the two lives into one....

Ira Graduates Class of Eight

"Hitch your wagon to a star," Bob Davie, district attorney, told the eight members of the graduating class at Ira high school in their commencement Friday night.

Davie, who called the graduates the wealthiest people in the building because they had youth, health, energy, and opportunity, reminded them that the time for a decision on a life - time occupation or career was near at hand.

"Above all, choose something which you like to do, because it is difficult enough to make a living at something pleasant, and almost impossible to be a success at something which you do not like to do," Davie said.

More than 300 persons attended the commencement which was held in the gymnasium.

Three members of the class of eight were presented college scholarships by John C. Hensley, superintendent.

Alva Richardson, valedictorian was given a four year scholarship to North Texas State College.

Robert Kruse, salutatorian, was given a scholarship to any church sponsored school in Texas, and Ann Falls, high - ranking girl student, was given a similar scholarship.

Members of the class were Richardson, Kruse, Miss Falls Barbara Halladay, Morris LeMay Rooal Minor, Robert Lee Norred, and Rowena Rosser.

GALLUP POLL

Public Votes 3-2 MacArthur Hearings Are Good for Nation

DR. GEORGE W. GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N.J., June 2 —By a vote of approximately 3-to-2, American voters questioned in a coast-to-coast public opinion survey say they think the Senate hearings on MacArthur and the Korean war have been a good thing.

Republicans and Independents are more inclined to approve of the hearings than Democrats are, the survey finds, and persons with college training view the Senate probe in a much more favorable light than those who have had less formal education.

There has been some criticism of the Senate hearings on the ground that they have revealed valuable information to Russia and Red China about our ideas and our military planning in the Far East, even though part of the testimony of Generals MacArthur, Marshall, Bradley and others were deleted by censors from the published record.

To find out how the general public views the hearings, Institute interviewers put the following question to a balanced cross - section of the voting population from Maine to California:

"Some people say the hearings on Korea have been a good thing because the people have been given a truer picture of the situation there. Other people say these hearings have been a poor thing because they have given Russia and China information about our ideas and plans. What do you, yourself, think— have the hearings been a good thing or a poor thing for the country?"

Here is the national vote:

SENATE HEARINGS
Good thing	49
Poor thing	33
No opinion	18

Here is the vote by parties:

Republicans-Democrats independents.

Good thing	56	41	52
Poor thing	28	37	32
No opinion	16	22	16

• • •

Among persons with college training the vote runs 5-to-2 in approval of the hearings, while among persons who have had only high school or grade school education the vote is decidedly closer.

	College	high school	grade school
Good thing	67	54	39
Poor thing	26	31	36
No opinion	7	15	25

Changes and trends in attitudes on the MacArthur controversy, in response to public discussion throughout the country and events in Korea, will be reported by the Institute at regular intervals.

The Institute is now completing a new survey of sentiment on the ideas of General MacArthur versus those of General Marshall and Bradley, to determine how much opinion may have been changed by the testimony of the latter two in upholding the present policies in the Far East.

Results of this survey will be reported in the near future.

THE STARS

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, (AP) — "What's the matter with temperament?" asked Charles Laughton.

I couldn't think of a likely answer, so he continued: "Temperament and acting go hand in hand. All real actors have it. Those who don't might as well give up while they're still young and can go into a trade where it isn't required — such as plumbing."

Laughton came to the stout defense of Shelley Winters, the batting blonde who is often criticized in the Hollywood press.

OUTBURSTS NATURAL

"Of course she's got temperament," he argued. "That's why the little lady in two years' time has become a top screen personality. Her outbursts are a natural part of her personality. She is merely doing what comes naturally.

"Temperamental stars may be lambasted in the press, but you notice they're the ones who are working. And remember such unpredictable players as Valentino, Gloria Swanson, Clara Bow, Pola Negri, Lew Cody? We could use a few more like those to make Hollywood a more exciting place."

NASTY NOBLEMAN

Laughton is finishing up his role as a nasty French nobleman in "The Door" before traveling to England with his first drama quartet. He admitted that he has mellowed with the years and hasn't tossed a tizzy in a long time.

"But just let things go bad, and you'll hear from me," he warned.

NO MUNCHERS

Arthur Bremer of Saginaw, Mich., reports a theater there that advertises "no confections sold." It's nice to know there is some haven in this land for non-munching movie goers.

Wayne Allen of Illinois State Journal and Register, Springfield, suggests the title for the Jane Froman biography should be "Accentuate the Positive." It sounds a lot better than the present handle, "You and the Night and the Music," which will make any movie marquee groan.

And Art Rhodes of the Albany, Ga., Herald inquires: "Why — since you yourself have written there are very few actual stars in Hollywood — do you insist on referring to most players as stars, as in your May 25 yarn."

Ooops! I have since spanked my typewriter and will write on the blackboard 100 times: "I will not call a star a star unless he really is a star."

Land Taxes in Texas Higher, But Food Prices Rise Faster

COLLEGE STATION, (AP) — Texas farm and ranch owners are paying more in taxes this year than in the last two decades. Farm and ranch real estate taxes increased gain in 1950 for the fourth stright year.

Although the increase is not general over the entire state — some counties are actually showing a decrease — the average for the state was four per cent higher for 1950 than 1949. But this is a moderate increase as compared to the 15 per cent increase in 1949 over 1948.

Total taxes levied by all units of government averaged 26.6 cents per acre in the stable years of 1936-46. The record high of 29 cents occurred 1931.

These figures were furnished by the Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology of Texas A&M College as compiled by L. P. Gabbari head of the department, and Robert G. Cherry, assistant professor.

WIDE VARIATION

The survey indicated a wide variation in the tax rates ranging from a low of five cents in the Trans-Pecos area to a high of $3.41 in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Increases also were not consistent over the state, some counties showing a much greater increase than the state level, while others actually showed decreases.

The major factor in the increase of farm and ranch taxes in 1950 has been the trend to improved school facilities, the school districts being largely responsible for the increases. State and county taxes generally have shown no appreciable change.

Special districts — water, drainage and navigation — are of minor importance on a statewide basis, but are a major tax factor in some sections, the report says. Special district taxes increased slightly in 1950.

IMPORTANCE CHANGES

The relative importance of taxes levied by the various types of governments has changed considerably in recent years. Schools have increased their share of the total tax bill. County levies generally have declined. School districts accounted for 50 per cent of the 1950 farm and ranch bill, counties 29 per cent, state 14 per cent, and other districts 7 per cent.

A major factor contributing to the growth of school taxes has been the extension of levies to most land by the Gilmer-Aiken school laws. Less than 1 per cent of the farms and ranches in the Department's sample tax study showed no local school taxes in 1950; before revision of the school laws there were extensive areas which did not have a local tax.

BRIGHT FEATURES

Despite this picture of mounting tax bills, there are two bright features to the present outlook. Farmers and ranchers found the taxes easier to pay, because of higher farm crop prices. And there are indications that the upward spiral may be stopped, the experts predicted.

Offsetting the increased tax bill was an increased per-acre income in 1950. At least this was true from the standpoint of prices received from produce and livestock produced on the land.

The price index (Bureau of Agricultural Economics USDA) rose from 275 in 1949, to 306 in 1950, while the tax index rose somewhat proportionately less, from 284 to 296. As a result, the tax-price ratio declined from 1.03 to .97 slightly less than in the base year, 1913.

The promise of a halt in the upward spiral is held out by the fact that 1950 was the last year in which the state will levy a property tax for general revenue purposes. This should halt the rise, at least temporarily, although the potential tax load has not been greatly reduced. Counties may now levy an additional 30-cent rate and many of them have already done so or will shortly.

Indicated Gaines Reef Discovery Cores Deeper

Magnolia Petroleum Co. No. 1 Chilton, indicated Pennsylvanian reef lime discovery in Southeast Gaines County, is preparing to start a core at 11,395 feet after a drillstem test from 11,360 to 11,395 feet failed to develop additional shows of petroleum.

The test lasted one and one-quarter hours. When tool was pulled it was found that the packer had leaked. Recovery was 4,860 feet of slightly gas - cut mud.

The project recovered 90 feet of clean oil and 1,410 feet of gas and mud - cut oil and 90 feet of slightly oil and gas - cut mud on a drillstem test from 11,344 to 11,360 feet.

The reef was topped at 11,338 feet, datum point of minus 8,347 feet.

Location is 660 feet from north and 2,500 feet from east lines of league 288, Gray County School land survey.

Plug Gaines Failure

Fifteen miles southwest of Seminole and in Southwest Gaines County, W. W. Meeker and A. G. Slocum, both of Midland, have plugged and abandoned their No. 1 A. E. H. Brechon as a wildcat failure. It was plugged on total depth of 5,025 feet in an unidentified barren lime. Location was 660 feet from south and east lines of section 1, block A-27, psl survey.

Fear Results Of Change In Greek Army

ATHENS, Greece, June 2. (AP) — U. S. Ambassador John C. Peurifoy told Premier Sophocles Venizelos today the United States is gravely concerned about recent developments in Greece. Peurifoy hurried back to Athens after Field Marshal Alexander Papagos unexpectedly quit as chief of the Greek armed forces.

Venizelos called on the ambassador at his residence and found Peurifoy in shirtsleeves. Informed sources said the ambassador declared he felt the destiny of Greece was being placed in the balance by a dispute over minor issues. Later, Peurifoy is scheduled to see King Paul and Papagos. He is expected to tell them the same thing.

A high American source admitted that Papagos' resignation may jeopardize the scale of future American military aid to Greece.

He said U. S. military leaders have unlimited confidence in Papagos but that this confidence is not likely to be bestowed on his successor. This source said the U. S. trusted Papagos to exploit fully all aid received.

The Greek military crisis is creating anxiety in Washington, it was learned, because of the important role which would be assigned to the Greek army in case of Communist aggression in the Mediterranean or Middle East.

It is generally believed the Greek army would lose a large degree of efficiency without the ironhanded guidance of Papagos.

Formula For Success Given Class of 1951

Four points for a happy and successful life were suggested Friday night to the graduating class of the high school by the commencement speaker, Dr. Don H. Morris, president of the Abilene Christian College.

"Like people," the educator suggested. "And if you haven't done this before, learn now to like everybody." He then mentioned the happy and successful life of Will Rogers who said, "I never met the man I didn't like."

Dr. Morris stressed honesty as the second requirement in his outline for happiness, but he also stated that honesty was an attribute second to none.

"Work hard," he said, "although this suggestion may seem somewhat out of place these days. And don't ever get the idea that the world or the government owes you a living."

His final suggestion for success and happiness was moral cleanliness.

The address lasted only about 15 minutes and was preceded by the foreword given by Betty Prince, class salutatorian, a vocal solo by Kaye Weber, "In My Garden," and the valedictory speech by Jay Fish.

The speaker was introduced by T. D. Wiman, Jr., principal of the high school. Immediately following the address Charlene Stewart, Wanda Jean Rainwater, and Islsu Blakely sang "The End of a Perfect Day."

The diplomas were awarded by M. E. Stanfield, superintendent of schools.

Mrs. M. M. O'Rear, accompanied the singers at the piano and also played the procession. The Rev. W. W. Adcock, pastor of the First Methodist Church, gave the invocation, and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Ronald E. Hubbard, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

Grand Jury to Convene HereTomorrowMorning

A new Scurry County grand jury has been summoned for duty at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning to receive instructions from Judge Ben F. Thorpe.

There will be the usual run of felony cases to be probed, and an inspection of the county jail is slated. The last grand jury found that sanitary conditions there are in a deplorable state and that the jail is unsafe for confinement of dangerous prisoners. The last grand jury's stated that "our county jail not only endangers the very lives of our law enforcement officers in the transfer of prisoners, but the lives of all the people of this county."

Bob Davie, district attorney, will assist the grand jurors in their investigations.

MODERN JONAH BATTLES WHALE

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., June 2 (AP) — A Santa Barbara man started out like Ananias — just one wee fib — and almost wound up like Jonah — in a whale's belly.

He told the fib in playing hookey Friday from his job to go fishing.

The whale came in for its part of the fish story by flipping the fisherman's 14-foot skiff and battering in one side with its tail.

The fisherman, afraid he would lose his job, begged for anonymity. The story was told by his companion in the boat, Fred Suhr.

Several dry holes separate the new location from the Durham field which gets its production above 2,000 feet.

Deep Schleicher Test

Eleven miles southeast of the Hulldale - Strawn field of Central-North Schleicher County, E. B. Fletcher of Dallas spotted location for a 6,500 - foot Ellenburger wildcat.

It will be drilled as his No. 1 Mary O'Harrow Robinson 660 feet from north and east lines of section 39, block I, GH&SA survey.

Burro Club, Founded By Texan Enlivens The Washington Scene

By TEX EASLEY

WASHINGTON, June 1. (AP)—"The Burro Club of Capital Hill," organized only last year with John Hardesty of Texas, as its president, already has become a Washington institution.

The club, made up of 110 male secretarial employees of Democratic representatives, has built a reputation for lively programs mixing fun with serious business.

The club holds twice-monthly luncheons at which top government executives talk and answer questions. Occasionally the club throws a strictly social affair.

"We have to carry on a lot of business with these officials by telephone," said Hardesty in explaining the purpose of the organization.

"Therefore, we'd like to know them personally, or at least get an idea what they look like. By the time we get through questioning them, we have a lot better picture of the way their particular agencies operate."

Hardesty is an aide of Rep. Omar Burleson of Anson. So many requests come to the average congressman that he must entrust many of them to members of his staff. A large number of the requests involve conversations with important federal officials.

Last week the Burro Club had Dillard Lasseter, head of the Farmers Home Administration, as a luncheon guest. In line with the policy of lining up speakers whose departments or divisions are in the forefront of the news, the club scheduled Assistant Secretary of State George McGhee as its next speaker.

Originally from Dallas, McGhee is in charge of the department's office of Near Eastern, South Asian and African Affairs. The trouble spot of Iran, with its vast oil reserves, is one of his concerns.

On the lighter side, the Burro Club took a cruise about the Washington and Alexandria waterfronts aboard the District of Columbia's big red fireboat.

Hardesty's wife, Eddis Lee, hails from Lueders. They have a son, Johny, 4.

A two-year-old orphan girl of Japanese-American blood soon will be able to come to America with her adopted parents, Air Force Sgt. E. H. Shelton, Jr. of Palestine, Tex., and Mrs. Shelton.

The East Texas airman and his wife, living in Japan for three years, fell in love with the little orphan whose American father is unknown. They formally applied to adopt her and bring her to the United States, but learned that because she is half Japanese she is excluded under the immigration laws.

So they wrote Rep. Tom Pickett of Palestine of their problem. He introduced a bill on Jan. 9 and asked prompt consideration because Sergeant Shelton was expecting to be transferred from Japan.

With unusual speed, House and Senate committees approved the measure. Last week President Truman signed the Pickett bill exempting Jacquelyn from terms of the Immigration Act of 1924.

Sergeant Shelton and his wife, the former Elizabeth Durham of Palestine, submitted to the congressional committee numerous references from prominent East Texans.

The sergeant's father was the late Emmett Hank Shelton, one-time county judge of Anderson County and owner of a cotton gin and other properties in Palestine.

Hadacol Price Is $20 Million

NEW ORLEANS, June 2 (AP) — The New Orleans Item says today it had been advised by State Sen. Dudley LeBlanc that he has offered to sell his Hadacol business for $20 million.

The Item said Friday that LeBlanc told the newspaper by phone that:

After refusing one offer of $8 million and another of $2 million cash and a sliding scale arrangement that would have brought another $10 million or $12 million in five or six years" he set a $20 million price tag on the business.

The third group of prospective buyers were "represented by brokers" and that he doesn't know who the principals are.

"I say it is theirs for $20 million. They must like it cause they said, bring your stock to New York," the Item quoted him as saying.

LeBlanc said he plans to leave for New York Wednesday.

Hadacol is a patented dietary supplement manufactured by LeBlanc.

Shoe Shine Man Nets Less As Charges More

CORPUS CHRISTI, (AP) — Frank Tolbert, shoe-shine concessionaire in the court house here, boosted prices to meet the cost of living and right away the change started costing him money.

Here's how it happened

Tolbert, whose long fingers and rhythmical motions brown and black a lot of shoes every day, jumped prices from 15 to 20 cents. A customer normally tipping 10 cents on every 15 cent shoe shine, took his five-cents change and left the shine-boy just that much short.

Cost of living or not cost of living, this was an economic awakening to Tolbert.

Shoe-shines today in the Nueces county court house are back to normal — 15 cents.

Ten Thousand Persons View A&M Graduation

COLLEGE STATION, June 2 (AP) — The final 1951 spring review of the Texas A&M College Cadet Corps was viewed by an estimated 10,000 persons here today.

Participating were 442 graduating former cadets, soon to go into the armed forces as second lieutenants.

Wives, parents and sweethearts lined the drill field as cadets passed twice in review — once for college officials and once for the new second lieutenants commissioned in a ceremony Friday.

Lt. Col. M. P. Bowden, assistant commandant of cadets, estimated that 90 per cent of the 236 Army cadets and 206 Air Force cadets commissioned Friday will go on active duty by September.

King Makes Progress

LONDON, June 2 (AP) — King George VI's four doctors visited him this morning and are "satisfied with his progress," a Buckingham Palace spokesman said.

A medical bulletin Friday disclosed that the king, who came down with flu May 25, had a "small area" of inflammation in one lung.

Texas Tory Talks

Commencement Conjures Up Ghosts of 'Liberal Learning'

A late issue of The Freeman contains a pertinent article called "Ghosts at Commencement." It is by Lawrence R. Brown, and is addressed with deadly logic at the progressive philosophy in education. It takes to pieces the fallacious liberalism that produced the deluded intellectuals who fell either piecemeal or whole-hog, for Karl Marx.

It holds that the "ghosts at commencement" this year are those unmentioned but treasonable products of this "liberal learning" left by the recent procession through the courtroom—Fuchs, Gold, Remington, Hiss and others. And yet until the last year or so they went their lofty ways almost unchallenged. In their defense, the article continues, the "liberal and leftist press has been quick to point out that treason is a natural and almost praiseworthy response from young men educated to an understanding of their higher responsibilities toward world peace and the welfare of the masses." Even two Supreme Court justices, the President and the secretary of state went out of their way to defend the worst of them.

• • •

The author finds that back of all this confusion of liberalism in learning is an educational system that has all but lost its bearings. "It is the great bulk of our college graduates," he continues, "as writers and readers, who in bewildered anxiety cling to the basic political errors that have produced our disasters." Their persistence in doing so raises this pertinent question, "Shall this country . . . go down to its grave because the people who have been taught something more than to read and write have also been taught to lose their sense of political reality and to suppress their instinct for self-preservation."

In its deep implications that question is worthy of several dissertations by repentant doctors of philosophy. Public opinion generally, as borne out by frequent soundings of the Gallup poll has consistently shown that college graduates are the farthest removed from reality. Two striking and well-publicized examples may suffice. Their enthusiastic approval of the United Nations and the Marshall Plan, even down to this fateful hour, with all their diabolical involvements and debilitating levies, seems to prove the point.

On the other hand, the people who doubted these essentially dangerous and insidious plans and policies most, as the same poll have shown were the "uneducted masses." Therefore [illegible] cord has actually shown and will increasingly emphasize, is the fact that among those educated least has resided the soundest common sense, the quickest response to danger, a genuine awareness of reality, and the strongest will to survive.

To carry the contrast farther it is enough to recall that our intellectuals loudly shouted the virtues of our "great democratic allies"—the Soviets, in their delirium during the War. At the same time the average man was quietly going his way, knowing that the Russians were phony friends, and that Stalin was just as bad if not worse than Hitler.

• • •

Thus it was under the leadership of our late noted, but now thoroughly discredited, pseudo-intellectuals that we pursued our way to the sell-out of America and the Western World at Yalta. Later we completed the betrayal by continuing our morally bankrupt policies in Asia under Acheson and Marshall and their left-wing minions. Since then we have had time, in the light of more than 140,000 casualties to Korea, to think our follies over.

Yet we stubbornly pursue our bankrupt course. We do so, as The Freeman points out, under "a religious coloration that makes these international ideals so dangerous." This has given "a sense of self-righteouness" to the racketeering forces that rule us. It enables them to smear all who oppose them "as profoundly wicked men striking at the basis of accepted virtue." So it has gone for years down to the point where our outstanding military leaders has fallen before them.

"Against this flood" of abuse The Freeman article continues, "few are willing to do more than apologize for the existence of their own society. Almost no one seems to be proud of belonging to it... Almost no one will postulate the continuance of that society as the ethical foundation of the public life of every Westerner."

What institution should do so? all truly American ones, of course. Outside the home and church, the schools should take the lead. At one time they did, inculcating in our youth that pride in country that is essential to national health and survival. But with the educational liberals taking their cue from the foggy advocate of force named Dewey, and with such unmitigated authoritarians as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes perverting the law from the bench, and with whole shooting-match banding together in international intrigue, we all but lost sight of the United States of America.

Fortunately the perils into which they have, both by ignorance and design, so successfully placed us, are stirring the mass of Americans to rise in rebellion. They are not confused by the wordy fallacies of John Dewey. They reject instinctively, the immoral philosophy of Holmes. They are the folks who man the farms and ranches, the shops and stores and mills and who likewise produce boys being killed in a futile attempt to liquidate our latest polical folly. In matters of vital necessity they still think straight, and feel deep, while being despoiled of their substance and their sons in a venture that has no objective policy nor obvious end. It is now they, who, like Tam O Shanter's wife, knit their brows "like the gathering storm," and nurse their "wrath to keep it warm."

• • •

Meanwhile another great procession of youth crosses the stage at commencement. The usual, pious platitudes must leave them a little cold as they, with the tremendous resilience of youth, face the stark future into which our political ineptitude propels them. Meanwhile anxious parents everywhere listen for a ringing declaration of our ancient faith from the voices of wisdom and moral purpose that have been still so long.

From down at San Augustine, in deep East Texas, Lieutenant governor Ben Ramsey called his hearers back to that genius of free men that really made America. He reminded the graduates there that they faced an historic choice, "one is the time-honored American ideology, the concept of individual rights and individual initiative ....the concept upon which this country was founded," he explained.

The other is "the belief that power and authority should rest with the government;" that it "should control" "labor and wealth" and should have the power to dole out jobs money, housing and what have you...." This concept, he continued, "has taken hold in some places in this country today to a dangerous and incredible extent." The choice, he pointed out, is now up to the coming generation.

• • •

"We need now, more than we have ever needed before," this sturdy Texan continued, "men of integrity and ability in public offices. We need to send some of our best brains into public life rather than into private business. We need the creative individuals, the ones who rise above the average level of their contemporaries, in positions of leadership....."

This was a timely voice, full of wisdom and of warning, which should help dispel some of the somber ghosts at commencement.

Police Get Reports Of Tire Theft, Break-In At Mrs. Miller's Home

Theft of three tires and wheels, and a house breakin were reported to city police yesterday morning.

Mrs. R. C. Miller, Jr., 2608 Avenue U, reported that a man broke into her house sometime between 10:30 Friday night and 6 o'clock Saturday morning.

Mrs. Miller said the vandal cut a hole in a window screen to enter the bedroom in which she and her daughter were sleeping. She said that nothing was taken.

The manager of Simplex Motor Parts Co. reported that three tires and wheels were stolen from his pick-up truck sometime Friday night.

Police were investigating both incidents yesterday, but had made no arrests. Chester Bairrington, police chief, said.

Westinghouse Strike Averted Temporarily

PITTSBURGH, June 2 (AP) —With a strike temporarily averted, the Westinghouse Electric Corp. and its 51,000 CIO employees looked to two federal agencies today for final settlement of a wage dispute.

Management and officials of the CIO-International Union of Electric Workers (IUE) reached agreement Friday on a nine cent hourly pay raise for the 51,000 production workers. This would bring their hourly wage rate to $1.92, including incentive pay. The raise is retroactive to April 16.

But, Westinghouse specified, it will pay the raise only if both the Wage Stabilization Board (WSB) and the Office of Price Stabilization (OPS) approve.

The company said the wage hike may force it to raise price ceilings on its products. It cannot do so unless the OPS concurs.

The agreement halted plans for a strike the IUE had called for June 11. The union will give the company until July 2 to put the nine-cent raise into effect. If not, negotiations will be resumed. If agreement is lacking on July 15, the union still may strike.

The agreement also provides a $3.60 a week boost for CIO-IUE salaried workers. The contract extension runs to Oct. 1, 1952, with reopening permitted between Feb. 1 and April 30, 1951 for wage talks only.

Czech Communists Sentence Three To Die As Spies For U. S.

LONDON, June 2 (AP) — The Communist Czechoslovak government has sentenced three persons to death on charges of spying for the United States. A Reuters dispatch from Prague said four others were given terms ranging from 18 years to life.

One of those sentenced to death by the state court Friday was an engineer named Plocek (no first name given) who was accused of passing information to Robert A. Vogeler, vice-president and European representative of the International Telephone and Telegraph Co. and to the U.S. Embassy in Prague.

Vogeler was released in April after serving 17 months in a Hungarian jail for allegedly spying against that regime.

Police Sergeant Will Join Mississippi Unit

Bill Mitchell, desk sergeant with the police department seven months, resigned Friday, Chester Bairrington, police chief, said.

Bairrington said Mitchell was to go to Mississippi, where he plans to join the Mississippi State Highway Patrol.

HAIRCUTS NOT UP THAT MUCH

A haircut proved costly—exactly $42.50—to a 30-year-old Snyder oil field worker, according to Lloyd Merritt, sheriff.

Apparently the man had gone home well under the influence, Merritt said. He asked his wife's permission to use the family bus, but it was denied. He called a taxi and went for his trim.

Several hours later, he appeared at his home in the same taxi. His bill was $42.50, he told the sheriff. Investigation revealed that the man had failed to dismiss the driver, and the meter kept on ticking. The man paid off with a $50 bill, and no charges were filed against anyone.

Complete File Of Pictures Of All Sheriffs

The photographic gallery of all Scurry County sheriffs since the county was organized in 1884 was completed last week with the receipt of pictures of J. B. Boles, who served from 1907 to 1914, and that of Tom Condra, sheriff from 1923 to 1924.

This is one of the few 100 per cent photographic galleries of sheriffs in the state of Texas, Lloyd Merritt, sheriff, said.

Since W. W. Nelson took the oath of office in 1884 to the present day, there have been 16 sheriffs. Nelson served one two-year term.

Other sheriffs and their terms include the following:

T. J. Faught, 1886 - 1892; H.P. Wellborn, 1893 - 1898; Ira Kutch, 1899 - 1900; L. C. Darby, 1901-1902, W. A. Merrill, 1903 - 1906; J. D. Boles, 1907 - 1914; W. A. Merrill, 1915 - 1918; J. H. Seventy three-year old Dr. Frank C. D. Buchman, founder of the movement, made the plea in the keynote address to the World Assembly for Moral Re-Armament.

The international group, including leaders of state and men of the trades and professions, is in annual session on this calm and lovely isle.

C. F. Cullinan Estate Valued

HOUSTON, June 2 (AP) — A net taxable estate of $4,218,788 was left by Craig F. Cullinan, former president of the American Republics Corporation.

Cullinan was found fatally shot at his home Aug. 15, 1950.

A copy of the state inheritance tax form was filed in the office of the county clerk Friday.

Under terms of his will, most of the estate will go to his two sons equally. They are Craig F. Cullinan, Jr., and Joseph S. Cullinan II. No provision was made in the will for a daughter, Barbara, to share in the estate, and there have been persistent reports that she plans to contest the will.

The inheritance tax form showed that Cullinan owned real estate valued at $165,413, including a home here worth $92,695. His personal property was valued at $20,870 and life insurance at $100,456, the remainder of the estate is made up of stocks, bonds, cash and notes, totaling $4,324,320. Stock in the American Republics Corporation was the largest item, totaling nearly $3,500,000.

The seat of the United Nations is in New York City.

The United Nations Flag was adopted by the General Assembly on Oct. 20, 1947.

VOL. 2, No. 29 THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS SNYDER, TEXAS, SUNDAY, JUNE 3, 1951 SECTION TWO

Old House Is Remodeled And Redecorated Elegantly

When Miss Myrtle Harrell and Miss Faye Harrell had their home at Avenue V and Thirty - seventh Street remodelled recently they didn't have to plan a central cooling system. The solid brick walls, breezy front porch and high ceilings provide an almost perfect cooling system.

The house was built 25 years ago by the late Allen Warren near his own home, Warren Crest, and was one of the few in that vicinity. The basic lines of the house were left unchanged in the remodelling except for the addition of a sun porch connecting the house and garage on the north side.

The master bedroom, shown in the picture at the upper left, was built partly in floor space added to the northwest corner of he house and partly from a smaller bedroom. The fire place is flanked by comfortable chairs and lamps for reading. Knotty pine paneling was used on this wall, while other walls are papered in a bold leaf design. The color scheme of the room is green and chartreuse, with the adjoining bath decorated predomonantly in green. Sliding doors are used on both the bath and walk-in closet.

Miss Myrtle Harrell is shown in the picture at the upper right watering plants in a flower bed just outside the sun porch. She is an enthusiastic gardener and finds the sun porch an interesting setting for indoor specimens. The entire east wall of the sun porch is of floor-to-ceiling glass. The opposite wall and ceiling are of knotty pine paneling. The porch opens onto the back yard on the west side, where a terrace and picnic table are being built.

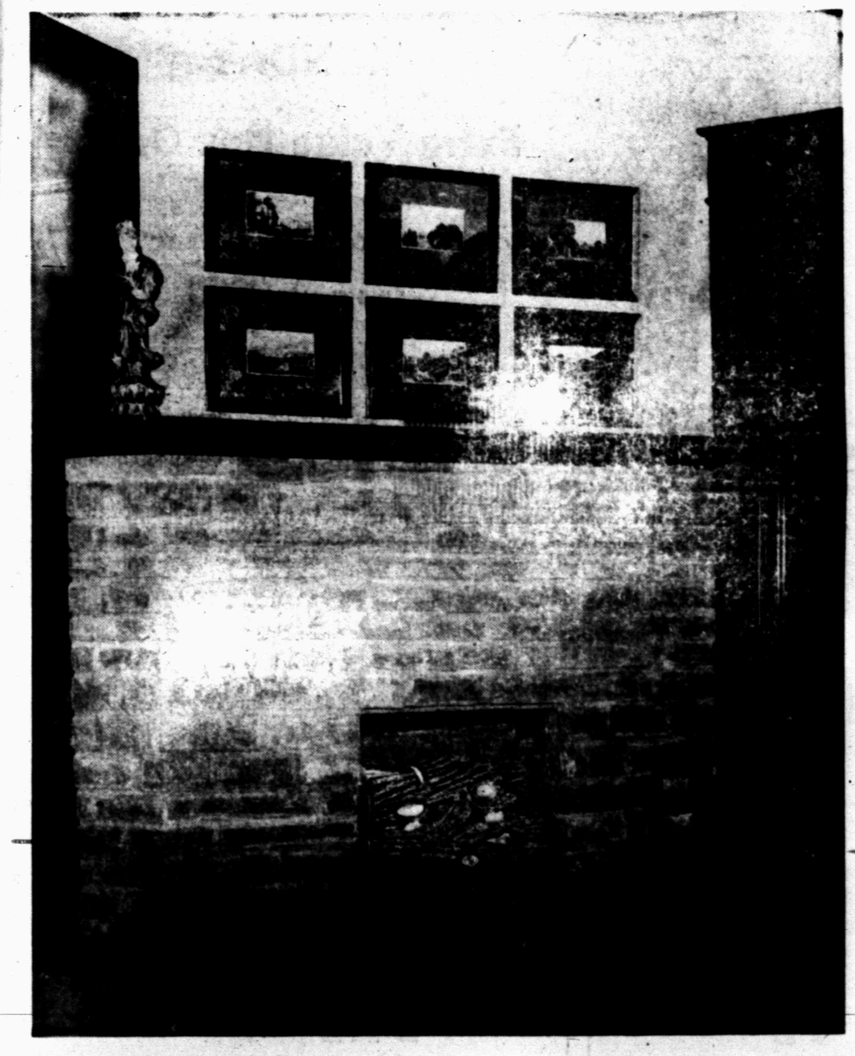

DOUBLE FIRE PLACE

Colorado red stone was used to face the double fire place which opens into both the living room and adjoining setting room of the Harrell house. The living room side is shown at the left. The muted color of the stone blends well with the light - colored cinnamon brown of the carpeting and dark woodwork in the room. The draperies are soft green, with funiture upholstered in brown and green. At the right is another view of the living room, showing part of the archway which connects the living room with the dining room on the right of the front entrance.

The dining room, lower left, is typical of the simple elegance of the house. The furniture is a modern styling of traditional pieces. A door at the left connects the dining room with the kitchen shown in the lower right.

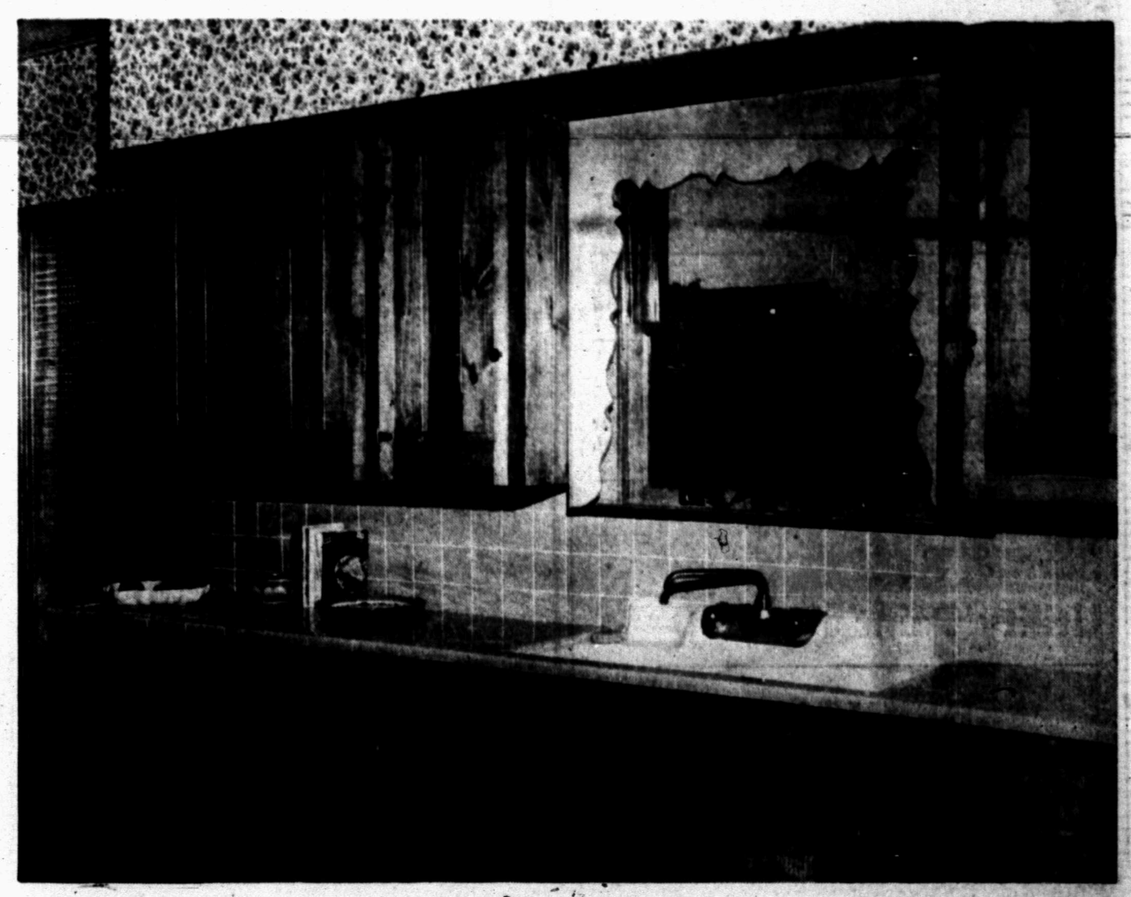

The kitchen window gives a view of the sun porch and a portion of the lawn on the north side of the house. The kitchen color scheme of blue and white is carried out in the blue tile cabinet tops and wallpaper above knotty pine wainscoting. The window cornice is of the same shade of blue. A breakfast nook is arranged near the cabinet pictured.

Another bedroom and bath occupy the space at the opposite end of a central hallway which opens from the living room and leads to the kitchen.

COOKING SCHOOL INSTRUCTORS

Miss Anna Bines, left, will conduct the Reddy Kilowatt Cooking School of 1951 Thursday and Friday at the high school. Miss Bines will be assisted by Miss Joyce Chambers, right. The school will begin at 9:30 both mornings.

WOMAN'S FORUM

Following the thought that hot weather brings on a desire for relaxation, leisure time, and plain keeping cool, we polled Snyder women as to any tricks that might help their sisters.

How do you occupy your leisure time in summer? Furiously batting a tennis ball back and forth, arranging a bridge foursome before a cooling air conditioner, or just plain lolling on the yard in the breeze? Any ideas for lightening corners, so as to relax sooner? Just what do you do to combat summer?

Miss Faynell Spears generally likes to sit in an air conditioned house when time permits. In rasher moments, when it really gets bad she dons a swim suit and goes outside, hoping somebody will turn on the hose...My arms are already so browned I look Latin."

• • •

Mrs. Prentis Bass, 3789 Highland Drive, wears shorts at work around the house always. "It's THE WAY to keep cool," she confided. Her husband, after a hot day returns to a light but filling supper, good to get relaxed for an evening of canasta or visiting. Their favorite is tuna salad sandwiches, a rather elaborate congealed salad, and iced tea with, always, mint from the back yard. ...Mrs. Bass marks time until the Beacon Lodge pool opens, a near thing. "I'm going to avail myself of swimming privileges very often" she continued.

• • •

Lime - avacado salad is an answer to the days when the thermometer is soaring, according to Mrs. C. A. Likes, Humble Oil Camp. Mrs. Likes apparently works on the theory that men like the summer dish to be sturdy if cool. She says her men folks have always fancied this salad. Here it is:

LIME - AVACADO SALAD

Ingredients:
1 package lime gelatin
1 avacado
1 can crushed pineapple
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup canned cream

Method: Mrs. Likes mashes the avacado and adds the pineapple, mayonnaise, and canned cream to the gelatin mixture which is still warm after having dissolved in boiling water, as any gelatin. This mixture, congealed and served on a lettuce leaf with crackers and perhaps a meat dish, will provide a perfect warm-day meal.

For Mrs. Waldo Montgomery, 2903 Avenue T, summer is a time of slackening of social activities. Her study club, Twentieth Century, disbands and while she is still a worker with her church mission circle, she finds more time on her hands. With her junior-high-school-age son, she is waging a campaign to persuade Mr. Montgomery to take a fishing week end. The Waldo Montgomery firm, which he owns, keeps him confined to his desk a great deal. Mrs. Montgomery feeds her menfolks salads every day without fear of refusal. They stay healthy through the warm days on lettuce, tomatoes, and the like. Fall promises a full schedule for her, as P.-T.A. interests her, so she is plenty glad to relax a bit more these days.

Mrs. Harold Bennett, wife of the manager of the Chamber of Commerce, sticks by shorts which become her trim figure. She and Mr. Bennett enjoy doing their own yard work, coming in pretty tired at night and often finding themselves headed for a drive-in restaurant where they can enjoy a light sandwich and a cooling drink without effort in the kitchen. No vacation is in sight, as one finds with so many Snyder people. Same reason: Husband too busy.

An air-conditioned house makes cooking chores about the same for Mrs. Worth Sayner, 2907 Avenue T, who is just past the recuperating stage after an illness. Rest and bridge parties outside of her usual home duties will about fill her summer. She finds she prepares cooked food about as much as in the winter, varying the diets by adding more fresh vegetables, more available, of course. Health and her husband's busy routine permitting, there will be a trip out of town. That air - conditioned house makes it pleasant to be home, though!

Scotch Tournament Next Sunday At Country Club

Flushed from a successful flag tournament at the Country Club, women golfers who attended Ladies' Day at the club Friday announced next Sunday's Scotch Tournament, which will include the men golfers of the club as well as the women.

"A Scotch tournament is a competitive affair", explained Mrs. George Frazier, reporter for the Women's Golf Association.

"Wearing funny costumes, the man and woman start the game with just two clubs, those of their choice. They are given 1 ball. He tees off, then she, alternating that way. The crowd expected to attend will follow them around the course, just as in professional matches. Proceeds from the contest will go to the barbecue pit fund. Supper at the clubhouse will follow the games."

At the flag tournament Friday, Mrs. Joe Burkett and Mrs. Nolan von Roeder won first and second places.

A red letter date for the Women's Golf Association will be June 15, regular Ladies Day, when the Edith McKanna trophies will be awarded. Each competitor entering the contest must have posted 5 rounds so she can get her handicap. The handicap will be medal play, which means it is low score, not matched. Every women who is interested in golf is invited to enter the competition. The trophies will be silver trays.

Mrs. Frazier reminds every woman member of the Country Club that each Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock the greenskeeper will be at the club to conduct golf lessons free. He is available for lessons at a fee at other times.

"Please come out and play golf with us and lunch and then enjoy any of the card games in the clubhouse in the afternoon" urged Mrs. Frazier, repeating that any woman interested in golf need not be good at it to be welcome. "Many of us are pretty poor.....but, we like it!"

Robert J. Boren Marries Jamie Chloe Bilbo Friday In Robert Lee Ceremony

Miss Jamie Chloe Bilbo and Robert Joseph Boren were married in a candlelight ceremony at the First Methodist Church in Robert Lee Friday night.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allie James Bilbo of Robert Lee. Mr. Boren is the son of Mrs. Thomas Arthur Boren, East Thirty-seventh Street.

Double ring marriage vows were solemnized by the Rev. Clifford Taylor, pastor at the First Christian Church of Snyder, as the couple stood before an altar banked in greenery and centered with a single white twist candle. Baskets of white gladioli flanked the altar and the chancel rail was entwined with greenery and fern.

Tall white tapers in seven branch candelabra and tapers were placed at intervals along the chancel rail.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Cortez Russell of Robert Lee, pianist, accompanied Mrs. R. M. Lowry, Jr., of Evansville, Ind., who sang "Indian Love Call" by Friml and "I Love Thee" by Grieg. Mrs. Russell played "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" by Wagner as the processional and "Wedding March" by Mendelssohn as the recessional. During the ceremony she played "Clair de Lune" by Debussy and as the benediction she accompanied Mrs. Lowry as she sang "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina length gown of ice blue satin which featured a low-cut rounding neckline and cap sleeves. The dress was fashioned with a fitted bodice which contrasted with the full circular folds of the skirt. She wore elbow length lace mitts which extended to points over her hands and she wore ice blue satin opera pumps. Her headdress was a double heart-shaped crown outlined in seed pearls and the nylon net veil fell in folds over her shoulders. The bride carried a bouquet of yellow gladioli centered with a single white orchid.

Janet Bilbo of Sul Ross College, Alpine, attended her sister as maid of honor and Peggy Bilbo of Robert Lee, also a sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid. The bride's attendants were identically attired in pale blue organdy over blue taffeta. The dresses were of ballerina length and fashioned with low rounding necklines, fitted bodices and full circular skirts. They carried line bouquets of white asters. Betty Boren and Jane Boren of Snyder, nieces of the bridegroom served as flower girls. They wore pale blue organdy over taffeta. The dresses featured low necklines outlined with a brief collar which was edged with a matching ruffle of organdy. They carried blue baskets from which they scattered rose petals along the bridal path.

John H. Boren of Snyder served as his brother's best man and Jimmie Randals of Montoya, N. M., was groomsman.

Altar taper lighters were Mary Ann Goodson and Mrs. James Lemons, both of Big Spring. They wore pale blue dresses fashioned identical to those of the bride's attendants. They wore wristlet corsages of esterreds. Ushers were Delbert Johnston of Snyder, Jim Hartley of Big Spring, Lamar Kay of Van Horn, brother-in-law of the bride and Jarvis Littlefield of Robert Lee, also a brother-in-law of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Bilbo wore a navy blue sheer dress and a corsage of white gardenias. Her accessories were of black and she wore a black picture hat. Mrs. Boren also wore a navy blue sheer dress and a gardenia corsage. Matching accessories of navy blue completed the ensemble.

Following the ceremony, a garden reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Guests were received by the bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bilbo, Mrs. Thomas A. Boren, Mrs. W. J. Garrett of Big Spring, aunt of the bride and Frances Boren of Kermit, sister of the groom.

The serving table was laid with a lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of white asters on a mirror reflector which was outlined with blue daisies. The three tiered white and blue wedding cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom beneath a wedding bell. The wedding cake was a gift from the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Clark of Robert Lee.

Presiding at the crystal punch service was Mrs. Jarvis Littlefield of Robert Lee, sister of the bride, and cake was served by Mrs. John H. Boren of Snyder, sister-in-law of the bridegroom. Presiding at the bride's book were Mrs. Lama Kay of Van Horn, sister of the bride and Mrs. William Thomas Boren of Jackson, Miss., sister-in-law of the bridegroom. Other members of the houseparty were Mrs. Carl Grubenman of Silver, Jean Phillips of Big Spring and Mrs. Vincent Hanna of Robert Lee.

The bride is a graduate of Robert Lee high school and Sul Ross College, Alpine, where she served as editor of SAGE magazine for two years and was a member of Sachems and Clip and Brand. For the past two and one-half years she has lived in Big Spring where she was employed by the Big Spring Herald. She has served as society editor of the paper for the past year. In Big Spring, she was a member of the Alpha Chi Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha, Business and Professional Women's Club and sweetheart of the American Business Club.

Mr. Boren is a graduate of Snyder high school and attended Texas A&M College. During World War II, he served for three and a half years in the Air Force and was in the Pacific Theatre for a portion of that time. He is now employed by the El Paso Natural Gas Co. in Snyder.

ASK MILDRED

(Address your questions to ASK MILDRED, Snyder Daily News)

Will you print for us a recipe for a salad containing rice, which is served cool? A very decorative course like this is served at a tea room in Houston and is out-of-this-world! Mrs. E.P.

Rice salads are popular throughout the south, and people everywhere should begin to appreciate the wonderful possibilities such dishes present, according to the Rice Consumer Service, who supplies us with material from Louisville, Ky.

TOMATO RICE SALAD

Ingredients:
4 green peppers
4 tomatoes
lettuce leaves
cold cooked rice
FOR DRESSING: (or use favorite French dressing)
1 teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon salt
pinch sugar
2½ teasoons mild vinegar
¼ teaspoon finely chopped onion (more if desired)

PREPARING the fluffy white rice: To make 3 cups fluffy rice: Put 1 cup of uncooked rice, 2 cups cold water and 1 teaspoon salt in a 2-quart sauce pan and cover with a tight-fitting lid. Bring to a vigorous boil. Then reduce the heat as low as possible and steam for 14 minutes or until all the water is absorbed, leaving the separate rice grains with their full nutritional value. This makes firm rice grains. (If you prefer more tender rice grains, add 1-3 cup more water and increase the slow cooking time 4 or 5 minutes) Remove the lid, permit the rice to stream dry to the desired consistency and the grains will be separate and fluffy. Never stir rice; lift gently with a fork. Keep left-over rice in a covered bowl in the refrigertor. METHOD: Chill rice. Scald the tomatoes. Peel tomatoes and remove the seeds from green peppers. Slice peppers, quarter tomatoes. Measure. (Add half their quantity of cold cooked rice.)

FOR DRESSING: Put the curry powder, the salt and sugar in the pitcher. Add the vinegar and onion. Mix with salad and serve on lettuce, immediately. Serves 4 persons.

I wish you could say something about the manner or lack of them of shoppers oftentimes in stores. Etiquette experts or no, so many women I serve in a ladies-ready-to-wear department show awful manners. "Saleswoman"

Your request is easily complied with, fortunately, as Emily Post has a great deal to say in her latest volume about inconsiderate customers, who, believe me, are not "mannered people".

According to her, here are some of the faults as a lady you will not wish to have the saleswoman notice about you:

1. Watch not to smear lipstick on the dress you try on.
2. Do not keep a cigarette smoldering during trying on . . . you could scorch the store's property.
3. Don't make it a habit of taking home merchandise and returning it next day, looking shop worn.
4. Don't go into a store to shop 10 minutes before closing time.
5. Don't be the leisured woman who stops to talk and take time and expect below-cost discounts from a friend who works in the store.
6. And, don't carry into a store with you that attitude that "the cusomer is always right". Your own good breeding only will make you right.

Cosmorama Has Final Meeting Before Summer

Members of Cosmorama Club, the last study club to close for the summer and say good-bye at last Week's meeting, parting for the various warm weather pursuits of vacation, leisure and a change of routine.

Mrs. E. J. Richardson, Jr., the hostess, received her guests in a pink striped chambray frock in the new sleeveless mode. Her corsage of spring flowers matched her green slippers. She served the group ice cream accompanied by a make-your-own-sundae tray of sauces, nuts and fruits. Spring flowers decorated her rooms.

Mrs. Richard Brice led the study hour, giving miscellaneous facts of Texas, with an amusing excerpt taken from an early Scurry County paper which was helping sell real estate cheap, lauding the county in hopes of attracting somebody to live here.

A gift from the club was presented Mrs. James Rosser, outgoing president, by Mrs. W. J. Bryant, incoming president.

Present were Mrs. J. L. Browning, Mrs. Fred Bullard Mrs. Scott Casey, Mrs. H. F. Clark, Jr., Mrs. Bob Dupree, Mrs. Jesse Everett, Mrs. J. W. Headstream, Mrs. Weldon Kincaid, Mrs. John Nance, Jr., Mrs.J. R. Meadows, Mrs. Holman Odom, Mrs. Renal Rosson, Mrs. Max West, Mrs. Whit Thompson, Jr., and the new members, Mrs. F. G. Hoefer, Mrs. Clyde Hall, Mrs. W. W. Park, Mrs. Malven Stevenson, Mrs. Kenneth Wilson, and Mrs. Lyle Alexander.

Sewing Course For Adults To Begin Tuesday

"Lets take the tension out of sewing," will be the subject of discussion in the first meeting of the adult class of elementary clothing which will begin in the high school cafeteria at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, Mrs. Joel Hodges, clothing teacher at high school, said.

The class is free and is being offered by the homemaking department of the high school. Meetings will be held each Tuesday and Thursday morning during June Mrs. Hodges said.

There will be a play school to take care of children of mothers who wish to attend.

Lessons will be given on the following: equipment used in sewing, how to take measurements, pattern selection, and alterations.

Other problems of sewing in which instruction will be given are: seam fittings, how to put in a zipper, collar, sleeves, hems and how to use machine attachments.

A brunch and achievement day will be held to close the school. During the course each person will actually make a garment. Individual help will be given in the afternoons.

Pfc. William T. Green of Snyder, now with the Seventh Infantry division in Korea, recently won a combat promotion to corporal for exemplary perfomance of duty.

The regiment also spearheaded the advance toward the Manchurian border and has fought through the Chechon, Wonju and Yang-gu areas. Green has been in the army 14 months, half of that time in Korea. TEXAS BRANDS

H

BY JOHN M. HENDRIX

It is claimed that the first brand of record in Texas was that of a Spanish Empresario, Don Martin de Leon, who was given a grant by the king of Spain in what is now Victoria County. Whether it is first or not is subject to debate, but nevertheless to Dean Martin goes the credit for placing a brand on thousands of long horned ancestors of Texas' present cattle population. According to records the brand was founded in 1828.

77

By JOHN HENDRIX

Another brand that has attained considerable age and is still in existence in West and South Texas is the 77 brand in use for a number of years by Colonel Ike Pryor, a veteran Texas ranchman who had considerable ranches in the Uvalde section of Texas.

The brand was originally 77 and was the property of the Western Union Beef Company of the Zavala County back in the early '80s. In 1907 Colonel Pryor bought the ranch and brand from the Western Union Beef Company and has continued it until now.

Colonel Pryor was one of the old school Texas cowmen and grew to be very prominent in the industry. He was at one time president of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association, and was a past president of the American Cattle Raisers' Association and was very prominent in all matters tending to be of assistance to the cattle industry of Texas.

He probably attained more credit for the number of trail herds that he drove to the Kansas markets and to the far Northwest. He has told the writer that at one time he had 11 heard's of cattle between south Texas and Abilene, Kansas. Probably no one drove more trail herds than Ike Pryor unless it was the Blocker brothers. He died in San Antonio where he had his home some five or six years ago.

Building For Vocational Agriculture

A new vocational agriculture building has been built and a new addition to the Ira high school building will be ready for school next fall, John C. Hensley, superintendent, said yesterday.

The 32-by-60-foot agriculture building built of concrete and sheet metal is one of West Texas most modern and complete, Hensley said.

Four new class rooms, a lunch room, storage room, and two rest rooms are being added to the main building, he added.

The new addition is being built of concrete blocks and glass.

Ira school had nine class rooms in use this year. Next year's total will be 14.

At the beginning of this school year, nine teachers were employed there. Four were added during the school term, and one vacancy now exists.

All teachers were re-elected for another year, Hensley said but no one has been hired to complete the faculty for next year.

A $60,000 bond issue made the new constructions possible.

1st ANNIVERSARY

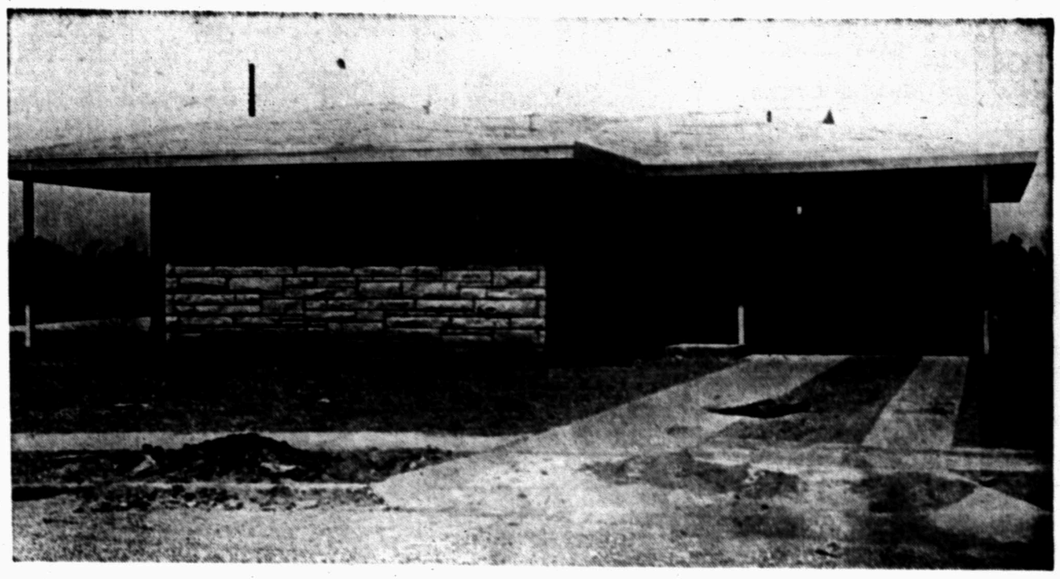

SCOTT and BROWNING BUILDING COMPANY

"A LOCAL FIRM"

We want you to read this because it is a true picture of what we have accomplished in the way of building homes for the people of SNYDER. Through your help we have been able to make this progress and we wish to thank each and every one of you.

We started this program in June of 1950 ,and to date have completed 79 homes. The property for Parkway Addition was purchased in 1949 for subdivision purposes. A part of the land was sold to Waymar Corporation for the construction of apartment houses. To date there are 72 apartments completed with 900 feet of floor space in each unit. There can be no doubt that these are SNYDER'S finest apartments. We are ready to open the second section of Parkway Addition with 76 lots.

Our entire program has been, and will continue to be, on contracts sublet to local firms, and using local labor. Milburn Mortgage & Realty Co., a local firm, work with us on general insurance and loans. In our future program we have oultined homes in the Davis subdivision Block 71. These will be six or more room houses in the $15,000 to $30,000 price range. We own lots in Highland Park and Graham-Nelson 2nd Addition, and are in a position to build homes in either. Located Southeast part of city, near new school.

GABLES IN HAPPIER DAYS

Clark Gable and his wife, the former Silvia Ashley once wife of Lord Ashley, smile from the front seat of a car during their honeymoon in Honolulu early in January, 1950. Mrs. Gable has filed suit for divorce, charging mental cruilty. She specified no particlar instances. The marriage in the fourth for both.

30 Miles From Soviet Isle, OklahomansManVitalDefenses

By FRANK H. KING

SAPPORO, Hokkaido, Japan, June 1, (AP)—Hokkaido, where the 45th Division is training, is big, open country. Big, snow-capped mountains, scenic panoramas, forests, fresh clear streams, broad fields and training areas which are the best in Japan for military purposes.

The National Guard outfit includes men from all over the United States but has a strong backbone of Oklahoma officers and men. When the 45th is fully trained, it will be "ready for anything," according to Maj. Gen. James C. Styron, the 45th commander.

The importance of its mission here became more evident this week as the camp newspaper printed Defense Secretary George C. Marshall's statement regarding the role of Hokkaido in the defense of Japan if Soviet Russia becomes an active aggressor in the Far East. Russian-held Sakhalin lies within 30 miles of the northern tip of Hokkaido.

NOT RESTLESS

The Thunderbirds are not restless to get to Korea. Many of them already know they are lucky to be training here rather than in the crowded areas of southern Japan. This isn't Oklahoma and home, by any means, nor yet Will Rogers country — where you can look further and see less — but with its mountains, forests and streams, it is more like the northwestern part of the United States than any place in Asia.

Whether the 45th Division gets to Korea or not, some of the officers hope to make visits to that distressed land, to see for themselves the conditions under which the fighting is taking place, and bring back to the division the results of their observations for use in training here.

Meanwhile the thunderbirds have settled down for the summer and the coming winter. They expect to winter in Hokkaido, where the weather is lashing cold and the snows many feet deep. They will wear three layers of clothing below the waist and five above the waist.

SETTLED DOWN

Also, the Thunderbirds have settled down to the American soldier's self-appointed task wherever he is, of finding out something about the country and its people.

The 45th is establishing an enviable record of good relations with the Japanese in Northern Japan. The country people are hard-working farmers who toil from dawn to dark with hand field tools. They use big draft horses with one-horse plows. A little Japanese farmer perched on the back of a big horse heads for the fields. In a village street, there is a blacksmith shop, with children peering through the door at a horse being shod. The little smith, no mighty man is he, backs the horse to an upright pole, lifts the hoof to be shod and ties it with rope to the pole while the job is done.

ROLLING HILLS

The farms spread over rolling hills. All planting seems to be done by hand. There are orchards and vineyards, apple trees in full bloom now and the cherry blossoms are just dying off. Each tree is trained and pruned to perfection and there isn't a weed or blade of grass in the carefully cultivated ground of the orchards.

In the fields and orchards, wives and families work with the men. There is no power machinery but man power and woman power. Debutante-age daughters appear to be no problem. Instead of fitting them in coming-out gowns, the parents just fit a nice plow handle, a big hoe or rake into their hands and they join the backbreaking labor in the fields.

They look up as the American vehicles roll past along in dust clouds, lean on their heavy farm tools for a moment and then turn back to their labors. The farm workers waste no energy waving to the troops.

Swarms of little children get the most enjoyment from the Americans. While their elders toil, they play on the bare ground around the houses. All seem to be about the same size with their black straight-cut hair and an occasional one wearing a bright-colored kimona.

Most of them seem to have been sewed up in drab winter clothes and the ones wearing the kimona may be the first to come out of their winter cocoons. If the child is 10 or 12 it probably will be carrying, strapped to its back, one of mother's later babies.

Wherever children are playing or, whatever they are doing, they keep an eye on the road and the moment an American jeep or truck rattles along they are at the roadside, some laughing and shouting, others poker-faced, but all wiggling their fingers, waving and shouting, "hello! goodabye!" or "goodabye! hello!"

It doesn't seem to make much difference.

There are friendly, uninhibited wriggling hands and arms. They are not begging. The older children are at school, and still older ones are at work in the fields or the household factories.

The older children like chewing gum. An American convoy encounters a crowd of home-going teen-agers. Two solemn-faced youngsters race with outstretched hands after a big truck. From the back of the truck GI's pass the word to the driver, who stops the vehicle while men dig through dusty layers of clothing to produce several pieces of gum. With a few newly-learned warning words of Japanese for the kids to stay off the roads and out of the way of traffic, the trucks move on.

Stockmen Are Warned To Control Pests

With hot weather approaching, now is the time to prepare for elinination and control of the external parasites of livestock, according to O. M. Fowler, county agent.

While Scurry County farmers have not suffered to any great extent from the cattle pests, a little precaution at this time of the year, with proper amounts of insecticides on hand, will save lots of grief later, Fowler, said.

Insecticides may become scarce as the national emergency deepens, but at the present time there is an abundance for current needs here.

Fowler has received a bulletin from the extension service of Texas A&M College, pertaining to pests of cattle, which recommends the following treatments:

For heel flies and cattle grub, Rotenone, applied either as a dust or spray.

For hornflies, DDT is the most effective control, either sprayed or as a dip, or methoxychlor in place of DDT.

For horseflies, there is no practical treatment, although several insecticides now are under investigation.

Complete details of the various treatments are available in a bulletin in the county agent's office.

Several Scurry Landowners Retire Fields, Sow Grass Seed

Grass seeding was recently completed on 35 acres of the Nolan von Roeder farm northwest of Union, according to Marion E. Everhart, work unit conservationist here.

Von Roeder planted King Ranch bluestem, blue grama, weeping lovegrass and sand lovegrass, Everhart, said.

The area seeded is being retired from cultivation and will be eventually used for seed production to provide grass seed with which to seed other land to permanent grass as well as for grazing, Everhart, explained.

"This part of von Roeder's conservation plan with the soil district was worked out by von Roeder, who was assisted by technicians of the Soil Conservation Service," said Everhart.

H. M. MURPHY

Seeding of grass was also done on the farm of H. M. Murphy north of China Grove, who seeded 45 acres to King Ranch bluestem. He planted the grass for grazing of livestock, and for seed production from this area to use on additional land that has been retired. Murphy said he hopes to have enough grazing from this seeded area to lessen the grazing on his native range so it can seed and improve its stand.

CLIFTON FARM

Billy Joe Clifton, east of Hermleigh, has planted three acres of King Ranch bluestem for a seed plot. The land, according to Everhart, is sub-marginal and is being retired from cultivation. Clifton told Everhart that he hopes for seed from the three-acre plot to revegetate additional land that he has.

The planting of permanent grass by the co-operators is a part of their conservation plan to use their land according to its capability. They plan to mow the weeds in these grass plots wherever necessary, said Everhart.

Glen House, who lives east of Snyder, has planted two acres of alfalfa and two acres of blue panic, to be used for grazing. House said he plans to expand his acreage for these two soil conservation crops.

'Sick, Sober, And Sorry' Is Juke Favorite

A comparatively new record release, Tommy Duncan's "Sick, Sober and Sorry," topped the list of juke box favorites in Snyder last week.

A survey made by the Davis Music Co., which supplies records for 58 coin operated machines here, showed Lefty Frizzell's "I Want to be with You Always" in second place. "Let's Live a Little" by Carl Smith, "Howling at the Moon" by Hank Williams and "I Love My Little Yo-Yo" by Wayne Rainey took other high spots among hill billy and western records.

The Weavers' record of "On Top of Old Smokey" rated tops among the popular records. The Les Paul-May Ford combination also held a strong attraction for nickelodeon enthusiasts with "How High the Moon."

Nat King Cole, a perennial hit parade artist, got into the top 10 spot with "Too Young." Patti Page was the only recording artist to have two records in the top 10, singing "Down the Trail of Aching Hearts" and "Mister and Mississippi." The reverse side of this record, "Ever True Evermore," showed up as one of the newer songs gaining popularity, along with the Ames Brothers' revival of "Wang Wang Blues."

The Weavers and "Old Smokey" also lead sales in the Babb Tire & Supply Co. record department. Frankie Laine found his way into the record buying public's notice with "Rose, Rose I Love You" backed up by "Jezebel." Bing Crosby and son, Gary, were the week's favorite duo with "When You and I Were Young Maggie Blues."

The addition of a controlled amount of soda ash to clay makes stronger bricks.

Garden Work Is Pleasure, Helps to Lift City's Face

"They sow seeds of beauty in Snyder," might well be said of members of the Garden Club, who after an active year of promoting gardens and flowers in Snyder, will meet June 22 for a rose breakfast, then disbanding until the fall.

Looking back over two full years of work and fun together, the Garden Club members feel that as a group they offer a woman a great chance to learn and express her personality in beautifying her home and grounds.

Mrs. O. R. Littell, incoming president, is urging more women to join the club and believes Snyder is a challenge not often found.

"With energy and a love of growing plants, you can join us in a hobby which will consume your interest and give you intense satisfaction," she declared.

Newcomers to Snyder, many of whom have already brought new ideas to the club, might particularly enjoy garden - clubbing, for so often their homes, built or bought new, must be landscaped and planted to acheive their desired effects.

ACHIEVEMENTS

The club's accomplishments throughout this year spoke for their worthwhile aims. Affiliated with the National Garden Club, Inc., the Snyder club at one meeting saw a film of gladioli, their culture and possibilities. As a result, several Snyder lawns contain many of the easily - grown beauties today.

Representatives of the club attended the convention in El Paso, gleaning new ideas, and monthly breakfasts were held at which members exchanged bulbs.

The Garden tour last week climaxed the year's program. Choosing a representative group of Snyder gardens and grounds to visit, the club invited all women interested in joining the group. Coffee at Mrs. W. J. Ely's, 3109 Avenue U, was served in her outdoor living room where, with Mr. Ely's enthusiastic help, she has placed rustic chairs and tables of cedar ricket, the flagstone terrace complementing her shrubs and trees.

C. N. von ROEDER

For a peep at a new home, a spacious rock dwelling set atop a von Roeder addition hill, was visited. Mrs. C. N. von Roeder, greeting the members, showed them her well-landscaped yard. A bed of roses flanks the lawns at the front, and walks lead round the southern exposure of the home where sprightly little carrot plants mingle with the daintier-leafed spring flowers. Tri-corner concrete - curbed flower beds at each yard corner caught attention. Mrs. von Roeder in a short time has had excellent luck with dahlias.

The cream-colored brick wall which Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Pendleton have purchased is the correct background for a galaxy of colorful blooming flowers which she has set out—iris, geraniums, petunias. Among her trees Mrs. Pendleton has planted elms, silver leaf maples, mimosa, and redbuds. Asked the secret for such success with yards, Mrs. Pendleton who moved here a year ago with her husband from Fort Worth replied demurely, "Just get out and work!"

KING GARDENS

Mrs. W. P. King's exquisite gardens, 3008 Avenue U, are well established and showed what consistant love and care can achieve in yards. Mr. and Mrs. King have constructed a fireplace on their elegant back lawn which is near the serving tables, delicately wrought of iron grillwork. A wisteria - covered arbor is effective, as is a fish pond inhabited by bright fish.

Mrs. Charles Noble showed her nearly completed grounds and home to the guests, explaining her ideas and some plans she has for her lawn. The sheltered terrace made an ideal place to pause for cokes.

OVERLOOKS POND

The cars swept up the graveled hilly driveway which approaches Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Brownfield's home west of town. The large, rambling home overlooks a small lake at the foot of the sloping hill. Water problems haven't stopped the Brownfields from planting their grounds in elaborate style. Deep-green grass carpeting circles the house, a rose - covered trellis admitting you by the walk into the back gardens.

Mock orange blossoms and other carefully - tended shrubs border the house. A sturdy, stacked pile of mesquite poles for fireplace use add a rustic note.

A twenty - minute drive brought the group to the white gates of Rock Ledge Farm near Fluvanna, home of Mrs. Edith McKanna. One of the chief attractions of the farm is the profuse growth of western plants, yucca, giant bear grass, cacti, all arranged artfully.

"And YOU can brighten your yard, be it a simple spring and summer flower bed, well - weeded and carefully planed, or be it a glorious arrangement of shrubs and lawns. Whatever your circumstances, plant flowers and greenery... they will repay you a thousand fold in pleasure!", maintained Mrs. Littell.

FINAL MEETING

For the last breakfast this year, Mrs. W. R. Bell, Sr., will demonstrate the making of corsages from your flower garden.

If you are interested in helping lift Snyder's face by planting flowers or greenery, you are welcome to contact any member of the Garden Club for advice or plain moral support and, next fall, to join forces with them to lick any barren aspects of the town.

Dues for a year's membership in the club are $3, according to Mrs. Littell, and if you are interested in joining, contact her by telephone at 673. All women wishing to join the club or old members behind on dues are asked to pay their dues at the breakfast as the club year book will be compiled during the summer, and this is necessary for a full printed roll.

Feed Stalks Rubbing Against Tire Starts Fire in Loaded Trailer

A freak fire occurred late Friday afternoon at Ira when Pete Rasco was hauling a load of bundle feed to his farm east of Ira. Feed staks rubbing against a tire caught fire.

The trailer was leaving a comet-like trail of fire when Raso pulled into a service station in Ira.

Because there were no fire fighting facilities there, the load of feed and trailer were badly damaged before being extinguished by a water hose to which the fire was pulled.
