Anthrax detected at senator's office

■ Letter to Senate leader Tom Daschle tests positive for anthrax; Child exposed to deadly virus at ABC studio.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A letter sent to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle tested positive for anthrax on Monday as the bioterrorism scare rattling the nation reached the halls of Congress.

The discovery of anthrax in Washington followed earlier instances in Florida, New York and Nevada in which at least 12 people were exposed to spores of the potentially deadly bacteria. Monday night, another case of the disease was announced in New York.

The 7-month-old child of an ABC News employee has tested positive for anthrax, ABC News President David Westin said. The child is expected to recover. New York police commissioner Bernard Kerik said news agencies throughout the city were being inspected for anthrax contamination.

The piece of mail in Daschle's office, which contained a powdery substance, was dispatched to an Army medical research facility at Fort Detrick, Md., for further examination, said Capitol Police Lt. Dan Nichols.

The Fort Detrick findings could be available as early as today, officials said. Nichols and others warned that the initial tests were not necessarily accurate.

Bush told reporters "there may be some possible link" between the spate of anthrax incidents across the country and Osama bin Laden, who administration officials say was behind the Sept. 11 airline hijack attacks.

"I wouldn't put it past him, but we don't have any hard evidence," Bush said.

Daschle was in the Capitol and was not exposed to the letter, which was opened in his other office a block away in the Hart Senate Office Building.

Officials would not identify the person who opened the letter, though Nichols referred to the aide as a female. Aides who may have been exposed to the letter were tested with nasal swabs and being treated with the antibiotic Cipro as a precaution, said Dr. John Eisold, attending physician in the Capitol.

"They are innocent people caught up in a matter for which they have nothing to do," a somber-looking Daschle, D-S.D., told reporters at a news conference outside the Capitol. "I am very, very disappointed and angered."

Nichols said a criminal investigation led by the FBI was under way.

The Daschle letter — and similar scares in other congressional offices — prompted a halt to all mail deliveries in the Capitol and raised the angst there. Many lawmakers, aides and other employees already were nervous about working in a building that could be a high-profile target for terrorists.

In a further security measure, all public tours of the Capitol were halted indefinitely, Nichols said. Individual visitors will still be allowed access if they obtain passes to the visitors' galleries from their home-state lawmakers.

Explosions shake Kabul in U.S. raids

By Kathy Gannon and Amir Shah
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Huge explosions shook the Afghan capital throughout the day Monday with two more jets reported attacking the northern part of the city early today.

The Monday airstrikes sent terrified residents scurrying for shelter, as U.S. jets pounded suspected weapons storage sites in Kabul and across the country.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, speaking at the Pentagon, suggested U.S. airstrikes could start targeting Taliban front-line positions facing Afghan opposition fighters in the northeast of the country.

The opposition alliance claimed Monday it had advanced close to Mazar-e-Sharif, the largest city in the north, and that some 4,000 Taliban troops defected over the weekend. The Taliban denied the defection claim.

The attacks Monday against Kabul started just before sunrise and continued through the day into the night. Taliban gunners fired in vain at the attacking planes, some so high they could not be heard from the ground.

The attacks in Kabul appeared to be directed at weapons and ammunition storage sites in the hills north of the city of 1 million people and around the airport.

In one nighttime raid, 10 huge explosions in the direction of the airport shook buildings miles away.

One bomb exploded near a U.N. World Food Program warehouse on the northern edge of Kabul, slightly injuring one Afghan employee, U.N. spokesman Khaled Mansour said in Pakistan.

In the Jalalabad area of eastern Afghanistan, U.S. jets struck the regional military headquarters near

Midlanders take precautions against anthrax

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

Precautionary measures are under way at several Midland businesses and government offices as the threat of anthrax continues to plague the nation.

With the discovery of anthrax at the NBC headquarters in New York on Friday and a subsequent detection of anthrax in Sen. Tom Daschle's office Monday, many other organizations across the nation may have reason for alarm. More important than alarm, perhaps, is precaution, according to officials

And precaution is exactly what many Midlanders are practicing.

KWES-TV, the local NBC affiliate, has taken steps to ensure safety for its employees who open mail addressed to the station. Although station executives are not alarmed, they do believe taking the appropriate steps to guard against the potential threat is a good idea.

Belinda Self is a receptionist at Channel 9, and managers at the station designated her as the primary employee to handle mail. To do so, she wears a pair of surgical gloves. Occasionally, she will wear a small face mask to guard against potential airborne diseases from a package or envelope.

"We didn't open (two letters) until we got the gloves," Ms. Self said. "From now on, I'm going to be using gloves. I don't think I'm worried. I'm just cautious. We went to bed Friday not worrying about it, and we woke up this morning, and it's like a whole other thing."

Ms. Self said the station received two letters without return addresses Monday. To open those, she used the mask and gloves, but News Director Laura Moore said mail without a return address will not be opened in the future.

"I'll be honest, I am not concerned particularly, however it made us take a look at our security, because we do get a lot of mail," Ms. Moore said. "We are going to make some adjustments that we probably should have had in place already.

Handle with care

These are a few simple ways to recognize suspicious mail. If you have received a package or letter that appears to be a threat, contact 911 immediately and do not open it.

- Lopsided or bulky
- Strange odor

Daniel throws support behind ED sales tax

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

A second prominent member of Midland's education community — Midland College President David Daniel — has thrown his support behind the economic development sales tax campaign.

Daniel joins Midland Independent School District Superintendent Robert Nicks by declaring his support for the tax. Daniel says the passage of a quarter-cent increase to support economic diversity "must be done for the city to remain vital.

"I am going to vote for it," said Daniel, who also has supported the campaign with a $100 personal donation to the Citizens for a Better Midland, the pro-sales tax group spearheading the sales tax drive.

Midlanders will be able to vote on the issue as early as Monday, the beginning of the two-week early voting period. Election day is Nov. 6.

"It seems to me this should be passed in order for us to move forward," Daniel added. "If we don't do this and continue our dependence on the industry — which has been a mainstay through all these years — and not accept the certainty that the oil and gas industry over the next few decades will certainly diminish its productivity in the Permian Basin, then we have sealed the fate for our community of a downturn rather than a vital city with a progressive attitude about employment."

Daniel

Having Daniel and Nicks throw their support, even as private citizens and not as leaders of taxing entities, does show some connection between this ED sales tax and further development of Midland's educational arenas.

Midland College has seen benefits from the city's attempt to diversify. Daniel said approximately 700 workers at the Cingular Call Center have gone through a training program at Midland College's Advanced Technology Center. That number could reach 1,100.

Cingular workers will have generated nearly 50,000 classroom hours through the end of October, Midland College officials said.

"That was the purpose of the Advanced Technology Center," Daniel said. "The ATC will be vital for them in finding the initial workers for their businesses and keeping them current through ongoing training."

There also will be indirect benefits for Midland College and MISD.

"I think anything that positively affects the city of Midland obviously has a direct bearing on the school district," Nicks said. "The growth of our city and the region as a whole is important to the school district, and in turn, it is very important for the school district to be progressive and seen as challenging and having

Crime of the Week

Crime Stoppers looking for thieves who stole essential safety equipment

Midland Crime Stoppers and the Midland County Sheriff's Department are asking for the help of citizens who may have information about a burglary.

According to Midland Crime Stoppers Sgt. Bill Anderson, perpetrators entered the yard of B.M.L. Incorporated located at 1549 South Fairgrounds Rd. sometime on Sept. 21-22. The suspects stole four self-contained breathing apparatus (SCBA) while in the yard.

Anderson said the concern for the recovery of the SCBA is important not only for the financial loss, but also as a safety concern. The SCBA equipment is used by drivers of the company in the event of H2S gas leaks.

The money-value of the property is placed at $4,000.

According to Anderson, it is possible the suspects will attempt to sell the SCBA on the street or to another business. Crime Stoppers is encouraging anyone who encounters an individual attempting to sell this property to call 694-TIPS.

Information leading to the arrest of these burglary suspects reaps a reward of $1,000. Anderson said Crime Stoppers' tips are kept confidential, and no caller identification system is ever used.

SCARE: Feingold's staff also tested

(From 1A)

The suspension of the tours — which had already been curtailed after the Sept. 11 attacks — was planned before Monday's incident, Nichols said.

Bush's national security adviser, Condoleezza Rice, said precautions were being taken at the White House with regard to mail, but added she was not aware of any tainted letters being delivered there. Other White House aides said they've been told strict limits will be put on deliveries, including food.

"Like everybody else, we are being very cautious about what we open," Rice said.

In Trenton, N.J., Postal Inspector Tony Esposito and FBI officials said the letter to Daschle was postmarked in Trenton on Sept. 18, the same date and postmark on a letter that infected an NBC employee in New York last week.

Officials also were testing a female mail carrier and male maintenance worker in Trenton who reported possible symptoms of anthrax, Esposito said.

Elsewhere Monday:

■ Rep. Patrick Kennedy and nine employees of his district office in Pawtucket, R.I., were taken to hospitals Monday after a worker developed a skin rash. They were released without being tested, and a hospital spokeswoman said there was no reason to believe the woman had been exposed to anthrax.

■ Postal inspectors said some anthrax spores were found in the Boca Raton, Fla., post office that handled mail for American Media Inc., the tabloid publisher that lost a photo editor to anthrax. An American Media mailroom employee, who had previously tested positive for exposure, has become ill with the disease, Florida officials said.

■ In Ottawa, part of Canada's federal legislature was shut down after a worker opened an envelope containing powder and developed a rash. Officials said the powder was being tested.

The letter to Daschle's office was only one of several anthrax scares at the Capitol on Monday. Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said his aides reported a suspicious letter and were told by Capitol Police that their report was the 12th of the day.

Aides to House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., were quarantined in their Capitol suite for about 30 minutes as officers examined and removed a letter that had an international postmark and no return address. The aides said they were told the letter was not dangerous.

Daschle said about 40 people were in his office when the letter was opened Monday morning. The Capitol Police's Nichols later said about 50 people — including officers who went to the scene — were being tested and treated for possible exposure, and all had been sent home by mid-afternoon.

Nichols said mail to lawmakers' offices would be suspended indefinitely. Daschle's office will be closed for several days while it is cleaned, the senator said.

Staff members of Sen. Russ Feingold, D-Wis., were tested for anthrax as a precaution because they work next door to Daschle's office. All tested negative, an aide said.

Amid the activity, the Senate convened as scheduled Monday afternoon.

"This Senate and this institution will not stop," Daschle said on the chamber's floor. "We will not cease our business."

Young child of ABC employee tests positive for skin form of anthrax virus, doctors say boy is responding well

NEW YORK — (AP) The 7-month-old child of an ABC News employee has the skin form of anthrax, authorities and network officials said Monday.

The boy was responding to antibiotics and is expected to recover, ABC News President David Westin said at a news conference.

"The prognosis is excellent," he said.

It is the second case of anthrax involving a major news organization in New York. Authorities are also investigating a letter that infected an NBC employee with the same form of anthrax last week.

The child visited the ABC newsroom in the last few weeks, probably on Sept. 28, Westin said. He was hospitalized with an unknown disease soon after the visit.

The anthrax is the type that is absorbed through cuts or scratches in the skin, not the more dangerous inhaled variety. Officials learned of the diagnosis Monday evening through blood tests and a biopsy, Westin said.

"There are no other instances that we are aware of," he said. He did not identify the employee or the child.

ANTHRAX: Craddick's office practices caution

(From 1A)

Generally, it's just a matter of having one person be our go-to for mail. Before, whoever it was addressed to just opened it. The big, important thing for us is that we are no longer going to open mail with no return address, especially from viewers. So, what we're asking is please put on a return address, so we'll open it."

City of Midland Deputy Chief of Police Jerry Compton said the Police Department currently does not have a system in place to handle suspicious mail, but said it was putting that plan together.

"We're examining that right now," Compton said. "There's a much higher awareness of the mail. As far as having a new procedure, as of now we don't."

Compton said police have a process for handling suspicious packages delivered to companies or organizations.

"We're preparing our supervisors and S.W.A.T. team members," Compton said. "They'll package this stuff in biohazard sacks, and so forth, so they can turn it over to the FBI and get it tested."

State Rep. Tom Craddick said he was not worried about the threat in his offices in Austin and Midland, but he said they were cautious.

"I've got my secretary (a pair of) gloves because we get a lot of mail, and we have no idea where it comes from," Craddick said. "We're not worried about it. We're just taking extra precautionary measures."

Brad Bennett, spokesman for U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, who represents a portion of Midland County, said congressional offices in Washington, D.C. were conforming to new procedures to process mail.

"Right now, the entire House of Representatives' postal operations, until everything can be sorted out, is screening all mail before it even gets to the representatives," he said. "So, we're in a situation right now where we're just trying to set up some guidelines."

Lt. Benny Matlock with the Midland County Sheriff's office is head of security at the Midland County Courthouse. Matlock said they are keeping regular procedure with a little more caution.

"All the mail is scanned as it comes into the courthouse," Matlock said. "We can't pick up anthrax necessarily, but it is scanned for explosives or anything that might be suspicious-looking."

Midland County Commissioner Mike Bradford, who meets with fellow commissioners in the courthouse downtown, said they are not ignoring the threat.

"We look for postmarks, places we normally do business (with). We look for return addresses. If they are in the normal course of business, fine. When they are unusual, we separate them out. This is something new for everybody."

Bradford said the Midland County Commissioners' Court is, "I'm sure, ... going to address this and other measures. It's an ongoing process, and we will do everything we can ensure the safety of the county personnel."

Some private business offices have a heightened concern as well. JoAnn Jackson, a downtown Midland office manager, said she is a little more cautious in light of the threat.

"I'm not real frightened," Ms. Jackson said. "I'm more angry than frightened. I look more (carefully) at the mail than I used to. We just need to be a little bit more cautious until they get it all ... rounded up. If it doesn't look like something I know, even at the house, I just don't open it. Same thing down at the office."

Although officials at the United States Post Office in Midland declined comment, retired Midland Postmaster Stan Sartain, said letters without return addresses call for concern.

"The thing that makes me suspicious is if I get a letter that doesn't have a return address on it," Sartain said.

RAIDS: Rumsfeld says Taliban claims 'ridiculous'

(From 1A)

the airport and Tora-Bora, a suspected terrorist training camp of Osama bin Laden.

An Afghan refugee arriving in the Pakistani border town of Chaman said a suspected ammunition depot in Kandahar, the southern city where the Taliban leadership is based, was ablaze after a hit Monday by U.S. missiles.

The United States launched the air campaign on Oct. 7 to root out bin Laden — the top suspect in Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States — and to punish Afghanistan's rulers, the Taliban hardline Islamic militia, who harbor him.

Rumsfeld said warplanes had dropped leaflets over Afghanistan for the first time Monday.

In other developments Monday:

■ In neighboring Pakistan, pro-Taliban Islamic militants closed thousands of shops throughout the country and clashed with police to demand an end to the bombing campaign. But compliance with the strike was limited, and some shops were open even in border cities where sympathy with Taliban is high.

■ U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell arrived in Pakistan to meet with President Pervez Musharraf and discuss reopening military ties.

■ The USS Theodore Roosevelt was getting into position in the region, bringing to four the number of aircraft carriers involved in the campaign.

■ The U.S. military has paid millions to buy exclusive rights to some of the commercial sector's best satellite imagery of Afghanistan — aiming to prevent the Taliban from getting hold of it.

The Taliban Information Ministry claimed 12 people died Monday during a raid in western Badgus province. The Taliban said some 200 civilians were killed Thursday when U.S. jets attacked the village of Karam in eastern Afghanistan.

In Washington, Rumsfeld said some of the Taliban casualty claims were "ridiculous." But he acknowledged that some Afghan civilians have been killed unintentionally, without offering specific numbers.

He said U.S. planes have so far avoided striking Taliban positions on the front lines because of incomplete targeting information. But he said that might soon change.

"I suspect that in the period ahead that's not going to be a very safe place to be" for Taliban fighters, he said. "We hope to have improved targeting information in the period ahead.

Pakistan, a key U.S. ally, has pressed for the U.S.-led air campaign not to directly help opposition troops. Pakistan fears the Northern Alliance, its longtime opponent, will seize power from the Taliban.

The Afghan opposition said Monday its troops had advanced to within three miles of the airport at Mazar-e-Sharif, a strategic city the Taliban have held since 1998.

"Thank God, the Taliban forces are unable to take the help of their air forces," opposition spokesman Mohammed Ashraf Nadeem said.

The claim could not be independently verified, and the Taliban had no immediate comment.

But Taliban officials denied an opposition claim that 4,000 of the militia's fighters under a single commander had surrendered to rebel troops on Sunday. Taliban Information Minister Qudratullah Jamal said the commander in question had never had so many soldiers under his authority.

There were signs the attacks were increasing the suffering of the Afghan people, already impoverished after more than 20 years of civil conflict.

At a Kabul hospital, doctors and mothers said the nightly power cuts were threatening the lives of newborns, especially premature babies who require incubators.

"Please have mercy on us and don't kill us," begged Rahim Biba, mother of an infant born two months prematurely. "We are already in trouble. Don't add to our miseries."

quality, so we can assist the city in their endeavor to diversify our economy and to make our entire area better."

Mark Kimball, one of the more vocal opponents to the ED sales tax, isn't surprised Nicks and Daniel are supportive of the issue.

"People who get a pay check from tax money tend to think that tax drive programs are good so I can see why they support them," Kimball said. "At the Midland College level, I can see they will see more students coming out there for specialized training. Perhaps the ATC would see some advantage to it, but the downside outweighs that value. The downside being that when someone changes jobs there is such a heavy cost to replace them for those industries from whom those employees were stolen. In a capitalistic environment I endorse that. I salute you if you can steal my employees because I am not paying them enough, but when you are taking tax money, and then stealing my employees, it is not fair for me."

The support of the leaders in education lengthen the list of those supporting or endorsing the sales tax. Others include State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, current Mayor Mike Canon, former mayors J.D. Faircloth and Bobby Burns and Midland businessman and former City Councilman Jose Cuevas.

Pentagon adds leaflets to bombing campaign

By Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The front lines of battles between the Taliban militia and rebel forces won't be "a very safe place to be" for Taliban fighters, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Monday as U.S. warplanes carried out the biggest daylight attacks so far over Afghanistan.

The daylight raids were followed by nighttime attacks, and Rumsfeld indicated much more bombing was planned.

A senior U.S. defense official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Monday's plan was to attack 18 to 20 targets, including some that had been struck previously as well as Taliban troop concentrations.

U.S. airstrikes have targeted Taliban troop formations for several days and will focus more on front-line Taliban fighters once the Pentagon gets better information from rebel forces, Rumsfeld said at a news conference.

On Sunday, the U.S. military added leaflets to the bombs and food being dropped in Afghanistan, he said.

"We're working to make clear to the Afghan people that we support them and we want to help free their nation from the grip of the Taliban and their foreign terrorist allies," he said. He said the Taliban are "accomplished liars" who make ridiculous claims about U.S. strikes killing hundreds of civilians.

He added a warning to Taliban fighters who might feel that the front lines — virtually untouched by American strikes in the nine-day campaign — are relatively safe.

"I suspect that in the period ahead, that's not going to be a very safe place to be," Rumsfeld said.

The USS Theodore Roosevelt joined three aircraft carriers already in the region, the Navy confirmed Monday.

Air crews for the first time Sunday added leaflets — in the local languages of Pashtu and Dari — to the drops already being made of humanitarian food packets for the Afghan population, said Air Force Gen. Richard Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who appeared with Rumsfeld.

One leaflet shows a Western soldier in camouflage and helmet shaking hands with a man in traditional Afghan dress in front of a mountain scene.

"The partnership of nations is here to assist the people of Afghanistan," the leaflet said.

Another depicts a radio transmitting tower and sketches of radios and tells times and radio stations to tune to for what it calls "Information Radio." The broadcasts started earlier, but leaflets telling people to listen were delayed because of windy conditions last week, a Pentagon official said.

Over the weekend, more than 68,000 ration packets were dropped, bringing the total to 275,000 since the effort began.

Bombing targets were being expanded daily as military planners cross some off the list and add others, Rumsfeld said.

"The target (plan) that existed at the outset has been significantly enhanced by additional information from the ground," he said. "As a result, the number of targets that are available have continued to be roughly the number that they were the day before."

Rumsfeld said American military officials believe the Taliban still have some planes and helicopters untouched by bombs.

He took issue with Taliban government reports that U.S. bombing has killed hundreds of civilians, saying "some of the numbers (claimed) are ridiculous" and the "Taliban leadership and al-Qaida (the network run by Osama bin Laden) are accomplished liars."

The Taliban have said some 200 people died when the village of Karam was bombed last week.

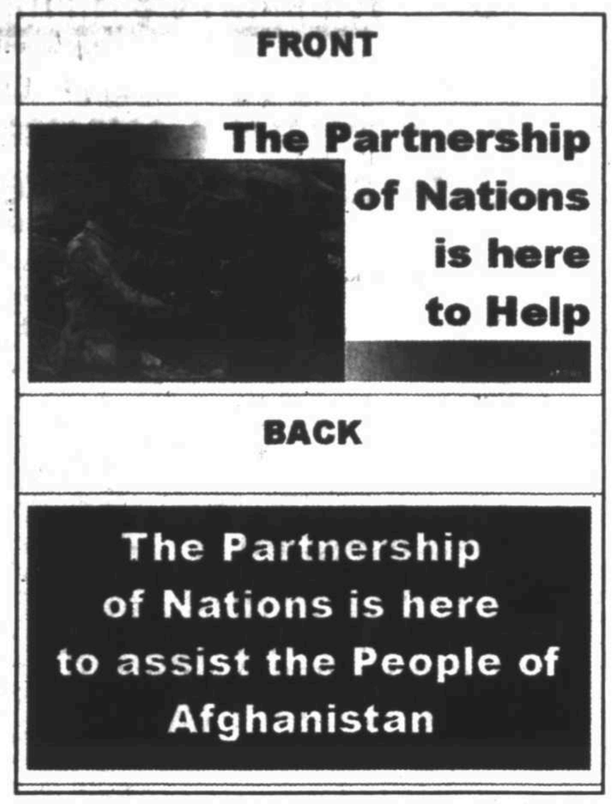
Without giving a number, Rumsfeld acknowledged some Afghan civilians have been unintended casualties of the strikes. "I don't think there is any way to avoid that" in a war, he said.

The anti-terrorist attacks will not end during Afghanistan's cold, snowy winter, Myers said.

"Let me just say that we have an all-weather force," he said. "And visible and probably invisible things are going to happen off and on for a very long period of time."

Afghanistan is believed to be the world's chief source for heroin, but U.S. strikes have not hit drug operations because "there is a lot of information that is contradictory," Rumsfeld said.

Myers said U.S. and British strikes hit 17 targets Saturday, including al-Qaida terrorist training camps, airfields, air defense forces and command-and-control facilities.



The front and back sides of an English-language translation of the leaflets dropped over Afghanistan during the U.S.-led bombing campaign are seen in this image released by the Department of Defense on Monday. The Pentagon said the new leaflet campaign is aimed at convincing the Afghan people that the strikes are meant to help them. The front side shows a Western soldier in camouflage and helmet shaking hands with a man in traditional Afghan dress. The leaflets dropped were in the local languages of Pashtu and Dari.

Giuliani states plans to help replace jobs lost after attacks

NEW YORK (AP) — Fresh from being named an honorary British knight, Mayor Rudolph Giuliani on Monday announced two employment initiatives to help replace the estimated 100,000 jobs the city lost after the Sept. 11 attacks.

Giuliani said about 200 employers were expected to attend a city job fair Wednesday, and four new employment centers will be set up throughout New York.

"This signals yet another significant milestone in the city's efforts to emerge from this difficult time in a much stronger position than before," Giuliani said.

About five blocks away, at the wreckage of the World Trade Center, police tried to determine whether newly discovered remains were those of a fallen officer. The remains would be the first to be recovered of any of the 23 city police officers lost in the disaster.

Giuliani said 4,688 people were still listed as missing in the tragedy; 453 bodies had been recovered, with 398 of them identified.

At City Hall, Giuliani again sought to assuage concern over suspicious mail.

"The vast majority of people are very, very calm," said Giuliani, adding that he planned to open some mail himself Monday.

Giuliani said city officials had received 82 calls Monday expressing concern over mail. He said 24 packages were taken for further investigation.

"So far, none of them appear to be anything dangerous. Some of them have the scent of baby powder," Giuliani said.

Earlier Monday, Giuliani received an honorary knighthood from Queen Elizabeth II. The honor was announced at City Hall by Prince Edward, the Duke of York. Lesser titles were also granted to Police Commissioner Bernard Kerik and Fire Commissioner Thomas Von Essen.

State Department planner draws task of framing policy for post-Taliban Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking past the Taliban, the Bush administration is stepping up consultations with Afghanistan's neighbors and with foes of the ruling militia on a future government.

Richard Haass, head of the State Department's policy planning office, was named Monday to oversee the operation. Haass also will hold on to his assignment as President Bush's special envoy for Northern Ireland's peace process.

Even while insisting it has no intention of choosing Afghanistan's next government, officials of the Bush administration have denounced the Taliban as unrepresentative of the people and insisted on change.

Haass has met in Rome with the king deposed in 1974, Zahir Shah, who at 86 is thought a possible focus point for a loose governing coalition. Undersecretary of State John Bolton has undertaken other soundings. Meetings have been held with expatriate Afghans in Germany and Cyprus.

Afghanistan's opposition Northern Alliance, long at war with the Taliban, and tribes in the south that have close ties to Pakistan, are likely recruits.

One potential for conflict: Pakistan's antipathy to the Northern Alliance, which calls itself the United Front. While the alliance has been helping the United States with its counterterrorism campaign, Pakistan is the only country that has maintained diplomatic relations with the Taliban.

The two main U.S. criteria for a new government are that it must not harbor terrorists, as the Taliban has given sanctuary to Osama bin Laden and his al-Qaida network, and it must be acceptable to Pakistan, Iran and other neighbors.

Secretary of State Colin Powell told reporters Monday on his flight to Pakistan that "if we are truly interested in a post-Taliban Afghanistan that represents all of the interests of the various factions and elements of Afghan society, then I think we have to listen to them, and no one nation has a veto over them."

Haass' work parallels that of Lakhdar Brahimi, a U.N. special representative, who has been in contact with the main groups in Afghanistan.

"We're staying in touch with all the parties that we've long worked with," Philip Reeker, a State Department spokesman, said Monday. "That includes the U.N. It includes various Afghan groups and others in the international community."

Views will be exchanged at meetings in Shanghai, China, in midweek, and then this weekend with officials of 20 countries, including Russia and China, at the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum.

Presidents Jiang Zemin of China and Vladimir Putin of Russia will be engaged in the talks with President Bush and others, Reeker said.

Powell is attending a meeting of foreign ministers Wednesday and Thursday in Shanghai. The heads of government will meet Saturday and Sunday.

The United Nations will continue to play the central role in seeking stability in Afghanistan, Reeker said.

"Peace and stability can only be established in Afghanistan through the formation of a broad-based government that represents all geographical and ethnic backgrounds," he said.

Haass, 49, is an experienced diplomat and trouble-shooter. He has held posts at the National Security Council on the Middle East and South Asia and at the State Department and Pentagon before joining the Bush administration.

Rudy asks: Why break in new shoes?

There's nothing more comfortable than your favorite pair of shoes.

So don't get rid of them when the soles get a little worn—take them to Rudy's Boot and Shoe Repair.

Besides letting you keep those comfortable shoes or boots, re-soling can save you as much as two-thirds off the cost of a new pair.

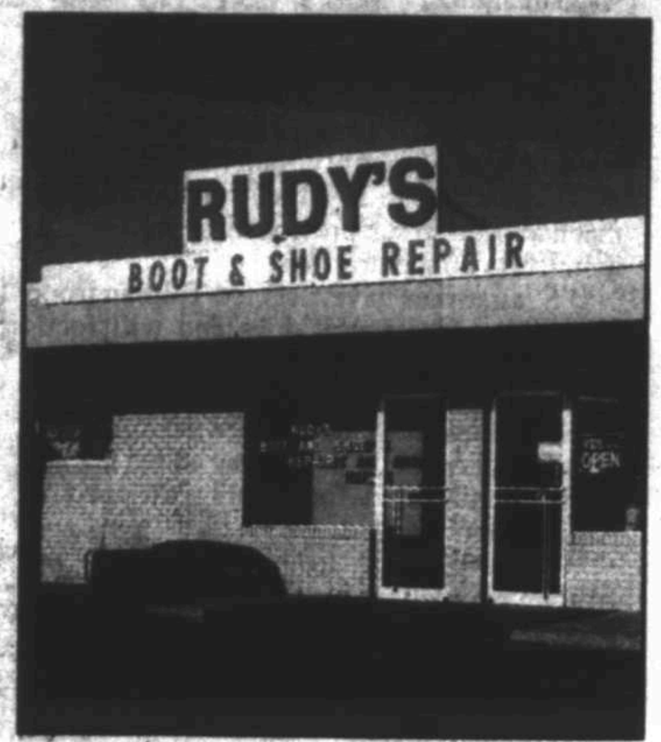
New soles from Rudy can either be the same as your old ones or they can be a more-comfortable crape or rubber sole—that's really nice if you're on your feet a lot.

Rudy does half soles or full soles for men's shoes, half soles for ladies' shoes. If the toe is worn but there's a good weld on the front, Rudy can repair that.

He can also do a "fox job" on your boots, replacing the toe leather with new cowhide or calf leather.

Rudy works on all brands of shoes and boots, plus just about anything made of leather, like backpacks, belts, purses, etc. Same day or next day service is provided upon request, whenever possible.

Rudy's Boot and Shoe Repair is located at 1009 North Midkiff. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 8-5 on Friday and 10-noon Saturdays. Call him at 697-4071. Visa and MasterCard accepted.



Don't replace your favorite shoes! New soles from Rudy's Boot and Shoe Repair can put a new spring in your step!

American flags cleaned for free

In light of recent events, it seems the demand for new American flags has exceeded the supply.

If you've wanted to replace an old flag that was dirty or ragged but you can't find a new one, take that old "Old Glory" to Fashion Cleaners—they'll clean cloth, unattached American flags for free.

"Actually," reports Fashion owner Philip McCain, "we've always cleaned American flags for free, but now seemed like a particularly good time to let people know about our service."

If your flag is worn on the end, Fashion can trim the tattered part, fold it over and reinforce it for a small charge.

Flagpoles made of aluminum tend to rub off on flags, creating a grayish stain that will not come off.

Also, Fashion is using plastic bags with American flags printed on them. When Fashion buys these bags, some of the proceeds go to helping families of the victims of the tragedy in New York City.

Fashion Cleaners has two convenient locations: 801 W. Wall and in the Imperial Shopping Center at Midkiff and Wadley. They do all kinds of cleaning and laundry, as well as alterations, reweaving and keepsaking of bridal gowns. Pickup and delivery are available.

Fashion Cleaners' Philip McCain displays a U. S. flag-adorned bag. Part of the cost of these bags is helping victims of the New York tragedy.

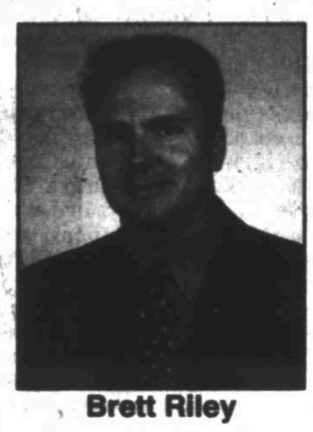
Should you shift investment gears at retirement?

You've invested wisely during your working career and you a proud of your investment accomplishments. But you've begun pondering a nagging question as you approach retirement age: Is it wise to continue the aggressive investing you did when you were younger and accumulating capital?



Brett Riley

According to many investment advisers, a more conservative approach to investing may be appropriate as you near or enter retirement. But after experiencing the returns of an eight-year bull market, it may be difficult to pull back on the investment reins even though retirement income needs are at stake.

The reason for a more conservative approach is straightforward. When you are young and building capital, you can withstand market volatility in anticipation of its long-term return potential. Unfortunately, time is no longer the same ally when retirement approaches.

Retirement probably isn't the time to rely on a possible 25 percent annual appreciation in the stock market. A more cautious investment stance, then, is more appropriate—fewer stocks and more bonds, for example. While stock historically outperform bonds over the long haul, you may not be able to wait out the normal swings of a typical investment cycle.

However, shifting your portfolio balance from stocks to bonds is an oversimplified approach to risk reduction. Keep today's longer life expectancies in mind. Because you could live well into your 80s or 90s and require an income the entire time, you should consider your purchasing power and the need to outpace inflation during retirement.

Key questions to ask when evaluating an appropriate investment posture at retirement concern how soon you'll need your retirement money and how quickly it will be consumed. Those who expect to live only on a retirement income in the near term—not tapping into their retirement assets—can afford to take greater investment risks.

Here are three hypothetical retired couples. You might want to determine which most closely resembles your situation and consider investing accordingly.

The Modests. Mary and Marty Modest have $150,000 set aside for their retirement. In addition to investing this money for retirement, they'll need it for emergency situations. Though they are aware of the daily ups and downs of stocks or long-term bonds, they invest a small portion of their money in the market because they're still investing for the future. They also take advantage of FDIC-insured CDs through their bank and short- and intermediate-term bonds through their brokerage company for their short-term retirement income needs.

The Affluents. Alice and Alex Affluent have so much money set aside that they hope it will last as long as their retirement. Because their money may have to last as long as 20 to 30 years, they are considering about half of their investment as "long term."

The Wealthys. Winnie and Wilbur Wealthy can realistically expect to live on their investment income alone. They expect their capital to remain intact for as long as they live. The Wealthys want a cash reserve for emergencies, but because they can take the risk, they'll invest most of their money in stocks.

If you're unsure how to invest for retirement or while you're in retirement, you may want to seek assistance from an investment consultant. Banc of America Investment Services, Inc. can help you determine which retirement investment strategy is appropriate for you. Escape to a patio room from Mid West

With mild fall weather well under way, now is the time to open up your view and savor the seasons with a three-season or four-season PGT NatureScape® patio room from Mid West Glass.

A Three-Season Vinyl patio room like this from PGT NatureScape and Mid West Glass could transform your home and your lifestyle.

Mid West can install your room on an existing patio or anywhere on your property regardless of whether there's already a pad or a roof.

The Three-Season Vinyl Room can include vinyl-glazed vertical four-track windows, an exclusive NatureScape feature. They slide up and down easily to up to 75 percent ventilation. When the weather is nice, you can have that breezy, "screened-in porch" feeling. Yet these unique, vinyl-glazed windows provide excellent protection when the weather turns bad.

NatureScape's Three-Season Glass room offers you the same high quality, with AAMA certified glass windows like those you'll find in new construction. These durable aluminum windows have an interlocking meeting rail to keep out wind and water. They also meet forced-entry standards for home security. Choose from a variety of styles to match your home, plus French, sliding glass or other types of doors.

Your third option is the All-Season Room. Extra wide thermally broken wall panels make heating and air conditioning an energy-efficient proposition. Durable vinyl-framed glass windows offer excellent thermal qualities as well. You'll find a choice of colors and styles that can make the All-Season Room seem like an architect-designed addition.

All NatureScape rooms come from Florida and conform to that state's stringent hurricane code—meaning they're plenty resistant to West Texas winds.

If you want your room to include other amenities, Mid West can take care of that, including a roof and a foundation. You'll only need to deal with one, locally-owned company for everything.

For very little extra cost, Mid West can add full insulation, to make your room really snug when the weather is not cooperating.

Your home will be transformed very quickly. From the time you say "OK," it usually takes about two weeks for the materials to arrive ready to install. Installation itself is finished usually in no more than a couple of days, depending on what features you order.

Call Mid West. That can be the first step in finding a new way to enjoy your home.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

Americans must back leadership in difficult hour

When the United States began bombing targets within Afghanistan on Oct. 7, Americans overwhelmingly supported the decisions of our president.

A little more than a week later, public opinion is still strongly behind our commander in chief.

But we are fearful that the next few weeks could see some weakening of the enthusiasm of the American people.

But this is no time for doubt and indecision. We must support those making the difficult decisions in Washington, D.C. and the brave men and women fighting under the American flag, particularly when times get tough.

In recent days, U.S. military officials have acknowledged a bomber missed an Afghan military target and appears to have mistakenly dropped its bomb in a residential area of Afghanistan. Of course, Afghans are claiming a higher number of civilian causalities than we believe occurred.

Each civilian casualty, regardless of the number, brings us sorrow. Our nation has apologized for the mistake.

But this should not give Americans reason to question our military leadership.

Unlike the cold-blooded terrorists who attacked the United States' World Trade Center and the Pentagon on Sept. 11, we have made our intentions clear from the start. Although the terrorists prefer to slip in among us and use our fundamental guarantees of freedom as the avenues for their sneak attacks, we have been upfront and have openly declared our intentions.

From the start, President Bush has said if Afghanistan and the ruling Taliban were to give up Osama bin Laden, that country could avoid the wrath of the United States.

However, the decision was made to shield bin Laden from U.S. authorities and now innocent Afghans are paying the price.

"They're harboring a terrorist and they need to turn him over," President Bush reiterated on Sunday.

However, it appears some Afghans are eager to play the role of victim and, ironically, try to plead their case with the American people via the media reporting from Afghanistan.

While it is natural to feel sympathy for the people of Afghanistan, it is important to remember they face a fundamental choice. They can pressure their leadership to turn over bin Laden and end the pain.

After more than a week of bombing raids, it appears the United States is poised to send in Special Operations forces and ground troops to begin the next phase of our military mission. Again, the resolve of the American people will be tested.

As a nation we must stand up against terrorism. We cannot allow these individuals to threaten the freedom we cherish.

As Americans, we must stand behind our leaders and support them in the difficult decisions they are being forced to make.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 16, the 289th day of 2001. There are 76 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1793, during the French Revolution, Queen Marie Antoinette was beheaded.

In 1859, abolitionist John Brown led a group of about 20 men in a raid on Harper's Ferry.

In 1916, Margaret Sanger opened the first birth control clinic, in New York City.

In 1946, 10 Nazi war criminals condemned during the Nuremberg trials were hanged.

In 1962, the Cuban missile crisis began as President Kennedy was informed that reconnaissance photographs had revealed the presence of missile bases in Cuba.

In 1964, China detonated its first atomic bomb.

In 1970, Anwar Sadat was elected president of Egypt, succeeding the late Gamal Abdel Nasser.

In 1978, the College of Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church chose Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Poland to be the new pope; he took the name John Paul II.

In 1981, Israeli war hero Moshe Dayan died in Tel Aviv at age 66.

In 1995, a vast throng of black men gathered in Washington, D.C., for the "Million Man March" led by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan.

Ten years ago: A deadly shooting rampage took place in Killeen, as George Hennard crashed his pickup truck into a Luby's Cafeteria and opened fire, killing 23 people before taking his own life.

We are still waiting for many answers

WASHINGTON — "Don't just write what you know," a great editor once instructed me about reporting an emerging story. "Make a list of what you don't know."

I came to call that a "dunno sheet." Abe Rosenthal's advice is again a useful reminder of how much is going on about which we have yet to learn. Here's part of my dunno sheet about the current hostilities:

Safire

■ With almost 700 suspects picked up in the United States and more in Europe, is anybody singing in jail? Have they been assigned wired Arabic-speaking cellmates? Are Muslim clerics being asked to help deprogram any fanatics? Are we recruiting those we release for double-agent work?

■ How many secret "findings" were signed by Presidents Clinton and Bush since 1995 authorizing CIA covert action in Afghanistan — and were those anti-terrorist missions carried out?

■ How many U.S., British and possibly French commandos are reconnoitering in Afghanistan now, and have they made contact with anti-Qaida Afghans or Taliban discontents willing to be bribed to reveal hideouts? Are commando-diplomats making deals with local warlords for them to be part of post-Taliban rule?

■ Has our bombing knocked out all Taliban broadcasting facilities? Has the Voice of America taken sides and broadcast Muslim clergy condemning as blasphemous the suicide-murderers' path to paradise? Are fearful Czechs trying to run Radio Free Europe out of Prague?

■ What vital information is being held back from the FBI and CIA by our Arab coalition "partners"? Did the United States share intelligence with Saudi, Egyptian and Jordanian spymasters that compromised the few Western sources in the Arab world?

■ Has Prime Minister Tony Blair secretly told President Bush that — absent absolute proof of Saddam Hussein's participation in the Sept. 11 attack — he should count Britain out of any move on nuclear or germ weapons being produced in Iraq? Has planning for "Phase II" — the removal of Saddam — been iced at the Pentagon?

■ What rule of engagement has been given our special forces regarding Osama bin Laden and his top aides — to kill or to capture? Do the potential benefits to us of interrogation outweigh the benefit to him of a trial's world forum and subsequent slaughter of hostages?

■ What anti-terrorist help have the Saudis, Egyptians and Yemenis warned us not to ask them for, and what arguments are going on within the Bush administration about why we have so far supinely acceded to their demands?

■ What, if any, is the role of James Baker, Brent Scowcroft and Edward Djerijian in trying to persuade Bush to appease "the Arab street" by pressuring Israel to give up its own war on terrorism? Will bin Laden's belated, televised embrace of the Palestinians panic the coalitionary White House into giving Hamas a terrorist victory that would further radicalize Muslims around the world?

■ What secret negotiations are under way with Russia to prevent the escape of al-Qaida leadership to Chechnya? We want to stop that, but wouldn't bin Laden's presence give Vladimir Putin an excuse to obliterate all separatists there?

■ Since the two major stockpiles of anthrax spores are in Russia and Iraq, what help are Putin and his ex-KGB associates giving us in tracking the source of terrorism's latest weapon?

■ With the Islamic Bomb in Pakistan's hands, and with unstable Indonesia ripe for radicalization, what feverish planning to enlist China's vast spy network is under way in our National Security Council — right now, in advance of Bush's trip to Shanghai?

I don't have the answers to this barrage of questions; indeed, that's why they are on the "dunno sheet." And when it comes to troop movements and the interrogation of suspects and the bribery of warlords, we should not know the answers yet because that might endanger lives.

But because the answers are hidden, that does not mean the answers do not exist. One by one, they will all spill out, in glorious or infuriating detail. Some will generate great pride and the awarding of medals for courage; others will cause much embarrassment, debate and the launching of congressional investigations into "secret agreements."

Are we, as a nation, doing the right thing in counterattacking in great force? Yes. Are we forming alliances and cutting corners that will make us proud tomorrow? Dunno.

Women still making strides in politics

WASHINGTON — The poor, oppressed women of Afghanistan — huddled under confining garments and denied an education, freedom of movement and medical care — wouldn't know what to make of Rep. Nancy Pelosi.

The California lawmaker has just become the highest-ranking female in congressional history. This is a very big deal, another gender breakthrough paving the way toward the election of the first female American president. In a secret vote of Democratic members, Pelosi, 61, was elected the party's House whip, second in command only to veteran House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt.

Means

The doors of political power have been open to large numbers of women only a few decades. Gender discrimination here, of course, was never comparable to the horrors suffered by the female victims of the Taliban. But historically, U.S. society had expected women to know their place, and that place was not in the elected leadership circle that runs the country.

President John F. Kennedy wouldn't know what to make of Pelosi either. He once confessed he couldn't understand why women were more attracted to paunchy, balding Adlai Stevenson than to him. Told that Adlai's appeal was based on the fact that he actually liked listening and talking to women, Kennedy snapped, "I'm not prepared to go that far."

President Richard Nixon was no better. On recently released White House tapes, he is heard saying, "I'm not for women in any job. I don't want any of them around."

Voters, however, gradually learned they could trust women in power to look after their political interests, sometimes more efficiently and fairly than men did. Female candidates are no longer asked if they can bake cookies, as was Democrat Geraldine Ferraro, the first female vice presidential candidate of a major party, in 1984.

Presidents since Nixon have felt compelled to demonstrate their lack of gender bias by including women in the Cabinet and other prominent appointive posts.

But it is in Congress that women have really begun to exercise power. The 100 senators now include 13 females and count among their number a former first lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton. Of 431 House members (there are four vacancies), 62 are female. Considering that women make up about half the population, our gender is underrepresented. But as a nation we are used to women in power now, and the numbers continue to grow.

In the Senate, Maryland's Barbara Mikulski is the Democratic conference secretary, making her third in the party leadership and the highest-ranking woman in that body.

Pelosi won her post the old-fashioned way. She earned it. She openly pursued her ambitious goal for three years, winning the loyalty of her colleagues by raising more than $4 million for Democratic candidates.

She is in her eighth term representing a racially and culturally diverse Democratic district that covers four-fifths of San Francisco.

A shrewd politician, she has a strong liberal voting record and is handily re-elected every two years. House Republicans were gleeful at her new status, hoping that her liberal image will hurt a Democratic Party concerned about appealing to centrist and moderate voters. But the GOP suffers from its own problems with women, who vote Democratic more often than Republican. Periodic campaigns to improve Republicans' appeal to female voters have made little progress.

Pelosi believes in big government. She built her career fighting for federal funds for health, housing and education programs. But she has wide national and international interests. She is the ranking Democrat on the House Intelligence Committee and sits on the Appropriations Committee, the most powerful panel in the House.

Pelosi defends the right of Democrats to disagree with the president over the economy and other issues even though the nation is now fighting a war on terrorism. "We must stand our ground," she says, rejecting claims that bipartisan support of the president's agenda is required to protect national security.

Time to say goodbye to Herb Block

I take time out from what is going on right now to say goodbye to the cartoonist Herb Block. The words "great American" have been used too frequently in our lives, but my "greatest American" was Herb.

He satirized and ridiculed the hypocrisy of his country for 53 years. He took on everyone, including presidents, world leaders and all the power brokers in the United States. We needed him very badly to protect us from the scoundrels.

Buchwald

Presidents had a hard time when they were depicted by Herb. He was responsible for more canceled Washington Post subscriptions than anyone else on the paper.

Herb and I were friends. He kidded me that I had an easy job during the Nixon years, and I replied, "Not as easy as yours."

The papers were full of print and the president could miss an article that was critical of him, but all it took was five seconds to scan a Herb Block cartoon to have the person ridiculed go up the wall.

Although the Washington Post was constantly being canceled by the White House, people say Nixon still looked at the editorial page when no one was watching.

I give Herb full credit for Nixon's resigning. Nixon couldn't survive the drawings of him unshaven and coming out of the sewer.

When Nixon said, "I am not a crook," Herb bragged he finished his drawing in 15 minutes.

Other presidents did not escape Block's pen if he thought they were up to no good.

Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and every president up to George Bush the second felt the Block needle.

One of his favorite targets was Sen. Joe McCarthy, who waged a war against innocent people by claiming they were communists. While the country was confused, Herb gave us a McCarthy with a four-day-old beard so we would be sure to know he was the bad guy.

While Herb sketched with his poison pen, in everyday life he was a very gentle man, trusted by people in all walks of life.

One of the things that bugged him was when someone tried to give him an idea for a cartoon. He always said he got very uptight because if someone else mentioned it to him he felt he couldn't use it. I think our friendship was based on the fact that I never said, "Hey Herb, have I got a good idea for you."

Herb never gave away the original cartoon, but he Xeroxed copies for the people who requested them.

He got upset when someone he satirized asked for a signed copy of the drawing. If a person he had just done a number on wanted the cartoon, he considered it a bad day.

Herb Block was a very young 91 years old. He was drawing more brilliantly at the end than ever before. We grieve his passing — at the same time we're grateful he was with us for such a long time.

Anthrax scares sweep Australia, Europe

By Mike Corder
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Dozens of government workers in Australia were hosed down after their office received a letter containing white powder. A U.S. consulate received a similar scare and in Germany on Monday, officials were investigating a powdery substance found in the mailroom of Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder's offices.

Across Europe and elsewhere, anthrax scares sent some people to hospitals and others home early from work uncertain of whether they had been exposed to the spores.

A section of Canada's Parliament was closed when a worker developed a rash after opening mail in one of several anthrax scares nationwide.Initial testing for anthrax spores was negative, said Anthony Dimonte, a spokesman for Ottawa's emergency services.

Two post offices in Toronto and one outside Montreal were evacuated when powdery substances were found by workers. Initial testing indicated those materials were harmless as well.

At the federal chancellery in Berlin, authorities sealed off the mailroom after two postal workers discovered white powder trickling out of an envelope. Schroeder wasn't in the sprawling downtown building at the time, officials said. Preliminary test results were expected Tuesday and Berlin fire chief Albrecht Broemme said he expected the tests would show no dangerous substances.

At the U.S. consulate in the southern Australian city of Melbourne, diplomats were evacuated for 45 minutes early Monday after a suspicious package was hand delivered there.

"We called the police ... they recommended that we evacuate the area ... just to be on the safe rather than the sorry side," U.S. Consul General David Lyon said.

In Ottawa, a section of the Canadian Parliament was closed off after an employee in the building broke out in a rash, possibly from handling an envelope that contained white powder. Officials said tests were being conducted to determine if the white powder contained anthrax.

In the northeastern Australian city of Townsville, workers were ordered out of a state government office and made to stand under water jets to ensure their clothes were not contaminated before being taken to hospital for checks.

Appealing for calm late Monday, Prime Minister John Howard said there was no evidence that any of the 16 reported scares in Australia involved anthrax or another biological agent.

"I'm told thus far the investigations have shown what are involved in these scares are hoaxes." But, he said, "it doesn't mean we can afford to be complacent."

Authorities in Australia warned people they faced up to seven years in prison if convicted of a terrorist hoax and in Belgium, lawmakers began toughening penalties for such pránks.

Twelve people in the United States have either contracted anthrax or been exposed to it. On Monday, President Bush revealed that a letter opened in the office of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle contained anthrax and that staffers who were exposed were being treated.

The scare began in Florida on Oct. 4, when it was confirmed that a newspaper editor had contracted the inhaled form of the bacteria. He later died, the first such death in the United States since 1976.

No anthrax cases have yet been detected outside the United States, but a spate of letters containing suspicious substances or threatening inscriptions has kept authorities busy.

In France, police evacuated 600 people from the offices of the French Space Agency and dozens of others at a financial institution, a school and a tax collection office in four separate scares Monday involving suspicious powder arriving in the mail.

A central police laboratory was examining the powder discovered at all four sites. Those who had touched the suspicious letters were taken to hospitals where 55 people were placed under observation. So far, no cases of anthrax have been diagnosed in France, Health Minister Bernard Kouchner said.

At a major newspaper in Lithuania's capital of Vilnius, police evacuated the offices after a suspicious white powder was found in a package mailed to the leading Respublika daily.

An employee who handled the small package, which had the word "jihad," or holy war, scrawled on it, was hospitalized as a precaution but showed no symptoms of exposure to a harmful substance, Respublika editor Jurate Skeryte said.

Police in Lisbon, Portugal, sealed off an entire block and sent five workers at a car repair shop to the hospital after an employee opened a package containing an unidentified white powder that irritated their skin.

The workers were released from hospital after being examined and a team of experts from the Defense Ministry was at the repair shop to analyze the powder.

In Basel, Switzerland, pharmaceutical giant Novartis AG said one of its employees had undergone medical tests after receiving a letter that contained an unidentified powder last Tuesday. He was being given antibiotics as a precaution, and checks were being made to see if other staff members had come into contact with the substance.

In Prague, the Czech Republic's nuclear authority was testing 31 letters and suspicious packages received in the past few days. Test results were expected in a couple of days.

England's Canterbury Cathedral reopened to visitors, a day after a worker said he saw a man dropping white powder in one of its chapels.

Germany's national postal service announced Monday it had intercepted five suspicious letters since late last week, three of which had already been determined harmless.

Police there were questioning a 32-year-old man who sent a suspicious letter to the Shelter Now aid organization, whose eight workers are on trial in Afghanistan for allegedly preaching Christianity.

Emergency workers remove suspicious envelopes from the mailroom at the Herald and Weekly Times building in Southbank, Melbourne, Australia, Monday. Buildings across Australia, including the U.S. consulate in Melbourne, were evacuated Monday as a wave of bioterrorism fears — and hoaxes — swept over the nation. Numerous scares of anthrax also have swept across Europe in the wake of U.S. anthrax cases.

Kashmir dispute worsens as Powell arrives for talks

By George Gedda
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Secretary of State Colin's Powell's South Asia visit got off to a rocky start Monday as Indian troops opened fire on Pakistani positions in the Kashmir region just hours after Powell appealed for restraint.

The Bush administration has been hoping that Pakistan and India would contain their differences over Kashmir at least for the duration of the American-led military campaign against Afghanistan-based Osama bin Laden and his terrorist organization.

In Washington, President Bush urged India and Pakistan to try to avoid military conflict over Kashmir, because fighting there "could create issues" for the anti-terrorism campaign.

"It is very important that India and Pakistan stand down during activities in Afghanistan or, for that matter, forever," Bush said.

Pakistan's support for U.S. operations is considered crucial because it is adjacent to Afghanistan. India has been sharing intelligence and offering other support for the anti-terrorism coalition.

Powell, who arrived here Monday night, is planning to make the case for restraint in Kashmir during a meeting today with President Pervez Musharraf and on Wednesday when he meets Indian Prime Minister Atal Bahiri Vajpayee in New Delhi.

A senior Indian army official said Indian forces shelled Pakistani military posts across the cease-fire line Monday in Kashmir, destroying 11 posts. The Pakistan army was returning fire as midnight approached Monday, a Pakistani army spokeswoman said.

Bush said Powell's mission was "to talk to both sides about making sure that if there are tensions — and obviously there are — that they be reduced."

"We are mindful that activities around Kashmir could create issues in that part of the region, particularly as we're conducting our operations in Afghanistan," Bush said after meeting in the Oval Office with Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi.

Monday's action in Kashmir followed a terrorist bombing there Oct. 1 that killed about 40 people. It left U.S. officials worried that India and Pakistan would turn their attention on each other instead of cooperating in the global counterterrorism effort.

National security adviser Condoleezza Rice said before U.S. airstrikes on Afghanistan began Oct. 7, she, Bush and Powell called many top Indian and Pakistani officials to emphasize the importance of "not having a 'flare-up'" over Kashmir.

"There's a lot of diplomatic infrastructure in place to try to tamp this down," Rice told reporters.

In his separate meetings with Musharraf and Vajpayee, Powell also was expected to discuss U.S. military ties with both Pakistan and India. In India, that could mean an expansion of an existing U.S. military training program. The program for Pakistan cannot resume until Congress eases sanctions.

The U.S. Senate passed legislation Oct. 4 that would effectively remove a ban on foreign aid to Pakistan imposed after the 1999 military coup. The House is to vote today. Last month, Bush lifted economic and military sanctions levied on Pakistan and India after they tested nuclear devices in 1998, but it takes congressional action to waive the ban on foreign aid.

Powell was also planning to discuss Afghanistan's future. On the plane, Powell suggested it may take time before the Taliban is driven from power. He urged the United Nations to play a major role in ensuring the next government is as representative as possible.

Musharraf, in an interview with USA Today and CBS Radio, said he would tell Powell the United States should target Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar before going after bin Laden.

"It could be over in one day if you take out Mullah Omar and his leadership. Once you've done that, the campaign is over," Musharraf said.

Security was heavy as Powell undertook his first foreign mission since the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

It was just after dark when Powell and his party landed at a military airport next to Islamabad's main commercial airport. To limit visibility of the aircraft, all shades were drawn several minutes before touchdown.

The State Department withheld details of Powell's arrival time and activities, recognizing the fierce opposition of many Pakistanis to their government's cooperation in efforts to hunt down bin Laden and his associates.

Thousands of shops around Pakistan were shuttered in response to a general strike call by Muslim leaders opposed to Pakistan's support for U.S. airstrikes against terrorist targets in Afghanistan.

Israel eases restrictions

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel made it a bit easier for Palestinians to move around the West Bank, pulling back troops and removing checkpoints Monday as part of an effort to patch up a frayed Mideast truce.

But there was also violence: for the second straight day, an Islamic militant with the Hamas movement was killed in the West Bank, this time in a car explosion in Nablus. Palestinians blamed Israel. But Israel, which took responsibility for a killing Sunday, refused to say whether it was behind Monday's attack.

Speaking to Israel's parliament, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said the security measures were being scaled back for Palestinians who "want to bring home a crust of bread and bring up their children in peace."

But he warned that Israeli troops would be sent back if Israeli civilians came under attack. "We made it very clear that if there is firing, (the army) will return and immediately take control."

The Palestinians, meanwhile, said the Israeli moves fell far short of their demand for a complete lifting of a security cordon that prevents almost all Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip from entering Israel, where many had jobs before the violence erupted a year ago.

"It's a mistake to say that we have reached an agreement with Israel," said Jibril Rajoub, the Palestinian security chief on the West Bank. "The Israelis have proposed only some small steps."

The Israeli moves mostly involve removing roadblocks that have prevented internal Palestinian movement inside the West Bank and Gaza Strip. For now, Israel will remain off limits for most Palestinians, though limited numbers of businessmen will be given permits to enter.

Palestinians consistently cite restrictions on their movements as one of their greatest frustrations. Israel says the rules are necessary to prevent, or at least limit, attacks.

Nicks stresses facility needs

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

Nicks

Only 15 years ago, science classes only used laboratories about 15 percent of the time. Today, the state mandates that each science class, from chemistry to physics, have at least 50 percent of class time in a lab. Midland Independent School District officials say students learn best in a lab environment, and they would like to spend more than half of the class time in the lab.

But with current facilities, that is impossible. The standards used 15 years ago were done in old labs, which now, as the campuses of Lee High and Midland High enter their fourth decades, are practically antiques.

Even if MISD's enrollment stayed the same, which it hasn't, the labs would still be half the size needed.

At most of his public forums since coming to Midland in early June, MISD Superintendent Robert Nicks has spoken about the district's facility needs. As he addressed the League of Women Voters Monday, the tone was no different.

"We're taking a look at what our facility needs are, but not in isolation," Nicks said of the district's new study of the instructional and facility needs of all 35 MISD campuses. "Any type of facility improvement will be expensive. If we're going to spend the money, let's make sure ... they serve the instructional needs."

He also said Midland ISD has a better reputation in the state, and many of the facility needs are unbelievable to people outside of the county. When he lived in Beaumont, Nicks said, if someone had told him that there was no regulation-size athletic track in the district, or the desert city had no air-conditioned gymnasiums, or the district had over 100 portable buildings, he would not have believed it.

"We have a better reputation in the state than that," he said.

But the address was not all negative. Nicks was sure to add details of the district's magnet programs, Rusk Elementary's accelerated schools project and MISD's partnership with the University of Texas.

Midland League of Women Voters President Karen Nicholson said she was glad the superintendent spoke about improving the schools, not just their problems.

"I was pleased that he addressed some of the improvement issues," she said. "The community needs to work together to have a good educational system."

UTPB reports new enrollment record

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The University of Texas of the Permian Basin has reported the largest enrollment in its 28-year history, with 2,420 students; a 6.5 percent increase over last fall's record.

Watts

Officials say this increase in enrollment, both in the size of the incoming freshman class and the total number of undergraduate students, is due to an increase in the number of athletic and other popular programs and classes.

"The growth in enrollment can be attributed to a variety of new programs, including athletics and the new women's soccer team," said Patricio Jaramillo, UTPB's vice president for Student Services. "For the first time, we referred students to apartments near the university."

UTPB and new president David Watts set out this summer to attract more students and recruit more aggressively in the Permian Basin, ultimately hoping to have a 2.6 percent increase every year. After surpassing the expectations, he plans to continue along the same lines.

Midland College board to consider tax abatement

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

The Midland College board of trustees will consider a tax abatement for a new Internet company called BrideSave.com, an alliance that may lead to further use of the Advanced Technology Center.

Midland Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Manager Dennis Clayton said the board at Midland College has treated other tax abatement proposals favorably, and he expects the same to happen at its meeting tonight.

"They've always participated with our tax abatement requests before," he said. "A couple of months ago, we finalized a tax abatement for Cingular Wireless, and went through the same process. We'll go to the other taxing entities, present it to them and ask them to participate the same way that the city has."

The city of Midland has to initiate a tax abatement, as it did recently with Cingular Wireless, and from there other taxing entities like the school district, the hospital and Midland College have to approve the proposal.

But this proposal may offer more to the college.

Local organizations to send $75,000 to Sept. 11 fund

By Emily Baker
MRT Correspondent

In an effort to send a message of support to President Bush, seven philanthropic organizations from his hometown will announce at 2 p.m. Wednesday that $75,000 from Midland will be sent to the Sept. 11 Fund.

The announcement will be made at President Bush's childhood home, 1412 W. Ohio. The organizations involved are the Abell-Hanger Foundation, the Beal Foundation, the Fasken Foundation, the Helen Greathouse Charitable Trust, the Scarborough-Linebery Foundation, the John and Maurine Cox Foundation and the United Way of Midland.

The directors of the Scarborough-Linebery Foundation initiated the idea.

"They thought it would be a good idea if the primary-funding organizations of Midland could send money to the fund," said David Smith, executive director of the Abell-Hanger Foundation. "The thing that is interesting about this is these organizations have different interests. They all have different backgrounds, they all have distinct characteristics. This is so West Texas and so America because when we all saw what happened, we saw things the same way. We all want to stand behind our leaders. It is tremendously satisfying to see the

Mall store receives bomb threat

By Emily Baker
MRT Correspondent

Midland police evacuated part of Midland Park Mall Monday morning after a bomb threat was phoned into The Buckle at about 10 a.m.

"Somebody called and said, 'I'm going to blow your store up,' and hung up, is my understanding of the call," Midland Park Mall general manager Mary Castillo said. Store employees called mall security who then contacted the Midland Police Department.

"They (police) take over once we tell them (about a threat), and they told us to evacuate, so we did," she said.

All things considered, I'm glad I don't get much mail

More rambling thoughts ...

— I know I'm a dreamer, but I wish we could go back to the way things were on Sept. 10.

— Speaking of such, have you noticed every American now talks about his life "before" and "after" Sept. 11?

Ott

— One final thought: Do you feel silly when you think about some of the "important" things we were squabbling about in this country prior to Sept. 11?

— Maybe race relations have improved in this country, at least slightly. After all, it was 100 years ago today, on Oct. 16, 1901, that Booker T. Washington dined at the White House as the guest of President Theodore Roosevelt, whose invitation to the black educator sparked considerable controversy.

— Now, two African-Americans, Colin Powell and Condoleezza Rice, are among America's leaders in the war on terrorism.

— Are exceedingly bright children still known as "eggheads" by their peers?

— British Prime Minister Tony Blair is one of those gifted orators who can speak forever and it always seems like he is talking off the top of his head, as if he hadn't practiced at all.

— President Clinton was the same way.

— Soren Kierkegaard, the Danish philosopher, once said, "Truth is not introduced into the individual from the outside, but was within him all the time."

— What's H. Ross Perot doing these days?

— Speaking of old political figures from days gone by, remember Charles Colson, Nixon's hatchet man from the Watergate era? He turns 70 today.

— Did anyone go to a drive-in movie to see the movie?

— Why do we automatically try to open a door that has a sign on it that says "Please use other door"?

— Given the anthrax scare, I'm glad I don't get a lot of mail at home.

— Overheard: "If men were angels, no government would be necessary."

— Also overheard: "All great truths begin as blasphemies."

— One final overheard: "Youth is a blunder; manhood a struggle; old age a regret."

— Speaking of old age, why doesn't Sen. Strom Thurmand go ahead and retire?

— Even if you're not a University of Texas fan, it is hard not to get a sense of pride when Cedric Benson breaks loose with another lengthy run on the football field.

— Given the mood of the country, Thanksgiving might be a more somber holiday this year than in the past.

— But I'm still looking forward to it.

— One man's opinion: "Amazing Grace" is sung at more funerals than other song, although I'm leaning toward having "Precious Memories" done at mine.

— You know you're getting on up in years when you starting thinking about what songs will be sung at your funeral.

— Pick-up line from a country-western song: "The first step is the two step and then we'll talk."

— It is this time of the year when I wish I lived somewhere else, a place with lots of trees that change colors.

— Does anyone miss disco?

— Why?

— Childhood Memory No. 1: Having your parents say, "Don't shoot that slingshot at any birds."

— Childhood Memory No. 2: Ignoring your parents' words.

— Childhood Memory No. 3: Crying because you got a spanking because you ignored your parents' words.

— And today's final quote comes from Ralph Waldo Emerson, who once said, "Money often costs too much."

UTPB: Enrollment hits 2,420 students

(From 1B)

"We're going to be trying to make UT Permian Basin's message clearer and more available to the people in the area," he said. "We're going to continue to visit schools and community colleges, and tell students all about the opportunities that are at the university."

Watts said prospective students, or people considering attending UTPB, need to know about all of the amenities the campus offers.

"We have an outstanding housing program, quality housing on campus for students who live too far away to commute," he said. "We have small classes, and quality instructors who are able to give students the individual attention they might need. We have a large number of scholarship opportunities available to students to help folks to pay for that quality education. And the educational programs here are second to none and equal to the quality that you'd receive at the University of Texas in Austin."

THREAT: Evacuated area reopened at about 11 a.m.

(From 1B)

Master Cuts was evacuated of all shoppers and employees.

"I was just working, and I saw a bunch of firemen," Kirklands employee Thomas Madrid said. "They told me they were evacuating the area, but they couldn't tell me why. I figured out it was a bomb threat, and I heard from some other people that someone called a threat into The Buckle."

The same thing happened to Hallmark employee Barbara Dazey.

"The fire department told us to leave," she said. "Most of the time things like this are a hoax."

The police and fire departments searched the area and found nothing, so at about 11 a.m., the closed areas were opened again.

"They told us we could open back up, so that's what we did," Ms. Castillo said. "Especially now, we just like to take the precautionary measures."

The Buckle employees could not comment about the incident.

support in the community. It is gratifying but not surprising."

United Way of Midland Executive Director Cynthia Benson said the United Way has been routing money from the community to the New York fund since the attacks. The money donated to this was donated by the community specifically to be sent to New York.

"It is not part of our campaign. It is money that Midlanders wanted to contribute to the Sept. 11 funds, and we helped to facilitate that," Ms. Benson said. "We are sending 100 percent of it to the Sept. 11 fund. It is just a service we are providing for our community."

Ms. Benson said the United Way of Midland hopes to send a message to the president that his hometown cares.

"What we are hoping is that AP (the Associated Press) will pick it up (the donation) and that national news will pick it up so his aides and advisors will know about it and so he will know," Ms. Benson said.

DEAR ABBY

Bisexual's worst offense lies in deceiving his wife

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to "Bisexual in New Jersey," who asked what his wife would gain if she found out.

What would she gain? Her life. You're afraid to stand up and say you are gay to the world; so is your lover. Your wife deserves better from you. She has given herself to you, and she shouldn't be repaid like this.

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

I am the ex-wife of a man who recently came out. We were married for 20 years. I had no clue he was gay. He woke up one morning to tell me he didn't love me anymore, the marriage was over, and I had no choice but to "get over it." He said he's put up a good front through our 20 years together.

My ex has a married lover. I feel for his wife. She has no idea. You don't know how painful it is to find out your married life was a lie. I owe my well-being to my therapist, who helped me understand why gays do this. It isn't their fault. It is society's fault for making them feel ashamed, and the spouse is the one who pays for it. — ALONE IN OHIO

DEAR ALONE: Because we live in a society that places great emphasis on "family values," many gay people marry in order to conform to societal pressure. While they may be able to stifle their inner feelings for a while — even for years — it should come as no surprise that eventually their true feelings emerge. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I was married more than 30 years when my husband came out to me. I lost my former life, including my home, friends, in-laws, my sexual identity, financial security, retirement plans, etc. I'm still struggling to put my life back together. My marriage is gone, and with it everything I thought was meaningful to both of us. I would much prefer to be in my marriage than living the life I am now.

Gay people have support groups to turn to with their needs. Support groups are also needed for the families left by the gay spouse. Straight spouses and former spouses need their concerns addressed, too. — ALONE IN PHOENIX

DEAR ALONE: Of course they do. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Bisexual" says his wife would destroy her life, his life, their kids' lives, his lover's and his lover's family's lives if she stumbled upon his 10-year affair with another married man. Hasn't his secret life already destroyed the trust at the heart of both marriages?

"What would his wife gain?" he asks. The truth! His wife would be devastated, but not destroyed. Wives whose husbands come out — the thousands with whom I have spoken since 1984 — tell me that knowing the truth was horrible, but better than living their husbands' lie without knowing it.

A nationwide support network is ready to help her resolve her anger, pain and grief in a constructive way. Resources are listed on the Straight Spouse Network Web page: www.ssnetwk.org; by e-mail: dir(at)ssnetwk.org; or by phone: (510) 525-0200. — AMITY P. BUXTON, PH.D.

DEAR AMITY: I'm pleased to hear from you. I recognize your name as the author of an excellent book on this subject, "The Other Side of the Closet: The Coming-Out Crisis for Straight Spouses and Families." Thank you for sharing these important resources.

The first reaction many spouses have when they are told their husband or wife is gay is that of shame. They feel somehow they are to blame. In their zeal to hide the truth, they wind up closeting and isolating themselves — actually assuming their spouse's place in the closet! It is vital that they understand they are not alone. An estimated 2 million women and men in the United States are (or were) married to a homosexual or bisexual partner.

Midland College President David Daniel said that's not the only news about the college's Advanced Technology Center.

"We have signed an agreement with the Ford Motor Company about doing some of their training," Daniel said.

Daniel will bring board members up-to-date on the newest developments in his President's Report, as well as future events on campus.

The board will consider a few other small items like bids for computers and copiers, and approval of revised school policies. The board of trustees will meet tonight at 4 p.m. in the Gibson Board Room in the Midland College administration building.

VOTERS GUIDE

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT ELECTION * NOVEMBER 6, 2001

PROPOSITION 4 — The constitutional amendment providing for a four-year term of office for the fire fighters' pension commissioner.

EXPLANATION

The Commissioner of the Office of the Fire Fighters' Pension helps paid and volunteer fire departments administer their local pension plans and administers statewide pension plans for eligible volunteer fire departments and emergency medical services departments. The commissioner is appointed for a two-year term by the governor and confirmed by the senate. In its report to the 77th Legislature, the Sunset Advisory Commission recommended that the commissioner's term of office be lengthened to four years, but the Texas Constitution limits terms of statewide office to two years unless otherwise specified in the Constitution.

ARGUMENTS FOR

- The proposed amendment, creating a four-year term for the Fire Fighters' Pension Commissioner to coincide with that of the governor, would increase accountability of the commissioner to the governor and eliminate the current cumbersome process of appointing a commissioner every legislative session.
- The proposed longer term would ensure more effective operation of the agency by increasing continuity and experience in the commissioner's position.
- A number of gubernatorial appointees serve four-year terms. The proposed amendment would make the commissioner's term of office more in line with those of other appointees and with the six-year terms of the Fire Fighters' Relief and Retirement Fund board of trustees.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

- Most other gubernatorial appointments are for two-year terms without significant disruption in their agencies' operations.
- A major function of the office was eliminated by the legislature. Most local pension systems operate their retirement programs successfully without the assistance of the commissioner. The Office of the Fire fighters' Pension Commissioner should be abolished.
- The Texas Constitution should not specify terms of office for appointees. The legislature should propose an amendment deleting the two-year term limitation.

PROPOSITION 5 — The constitutional amendment authorizing municipalities to donate outdated or surplus firefighting equipment or supplies to underdeveloped countries.

EXPLANATION

The proposed amendment would allow municipalities to donate outdated or surplus fire fighting equipment or supplies to underdeveloped countries. Currently, such donations may be made only to bordering states or other local governments. For instance, the Dallas Fire Department wants to make donations to Mexico as a goodwill gesture.

ARGUMENTS FOR

- Some outdated equipment is usable but no longer meets standards in Texas. Donating such equipment to Mexico or other underdeveloped countries would help improve public and firefighter safety in these countries.
- Donating equipment and supplies to border areas in Mexico could help protect Texas cities from the spread of uncontained fires. Giving equipment to Mexico would help reduce this border hazard.
- Municipalities would still have the option of donating equipment to other Texas cities or neighboring states, when appropriate.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

- Some fire departments in Texas and bordering states do not have enough equipment. Local governments should have first priority when equipment is available.
- Outdated equipment would not help local fire fighting organizations in Mexico, many of which are unlikely to have sufficient resources to keep the equipment running.
- The proposed amendment would set a bad precedent, allowing local governments to practice international diplomacy without state or federal control.

PROPOSITION 6 — The constitutional amendment requiring the governor to call a special legislative session for the appointment of presidential electors under certain circumstances.

EXPLANATION

In a presidential election, Texas electoral votes would not be counted if election results have not been decided by the deadline for the certification of electors. As a result of the 2000 presidential election in Florida, a question arose in Texas about whether the governor could be required to call a special session to choose electors under these circumstances. Proposition 6 would require the governor to convene the legislature in special session to appoint presidential electors if the governor determines the presidential election outcome will probably not be decided before the legal deadline. The resolution prohibits the legislature from considering any other subject during such a special session.

ARGUMENTS FOR

- This amendment would insure that the Texas legislature has the ultimate authority to select presidential electors to vote for president and vice president in the Electoral College in the case of a very close election.
- This amendment is needed to avoid a delay that could cause the state to lose its electoral votes and thus disenfranchise Texas voters.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST

- This amendment is not needed because current law authorizes the governor to resolve such a situation.
- This amendment could allow the legislature to circumvent the will of the voters and appoint a slate of electors pledged to a presidential candidate not selected by the voters.

This is the third in a series of ads that will be running for the next week. A complete printout of the 19 propositions is available at the Midland Reporter-Telegram office at 201 E. Illinois.

Alba's fiancé says relationship intellectually based — right

RADNOR, Pa. — "Dark Angel" stars Jessica Alba and Michael Weatherly are engaged in real life, but everything is quite chaste on screen.

The Fox show's second-season story line has their characters, genetically superior siren Max and cyberjournalist Logan, unable to come into physical contact because of a virus that will kill him.

Alba & Weatherly

The 33-year-old Weatherly tells TV Guide he doesn't mind the on-screen obstacle.

"I'm up for it," he told the magazine for an Oct. 15 cover story. "Because I know at the end of the day, I get to go home to the real thing."

Alba admits her parents initially did not approve of their relationship.

"I'm like their baby girl," she said. "I mean, my dad was the man in my life, you know? And now he's not."

Some attention has focused on the 13-year age difference between the 20-year-old Alba and Weatherly, making them cautious in interviews.

"People always have to make it (sound) so titillating," Weatherly said. "'She's a minor! No? Well, she's almost a minor.'"

"It's like people think my interest in Jessica could only be of a sexual nature, that it couldn't be emotional or intellectual," he said. "I find that really childish and mean-spirited."

REDMOND, Wash. — Madonna's Grammy-winning song "Ray of Light" is the theme for Microsoft's advertising campaign for Windows XP, which the company toned down after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks but still promoted as its biggest pitch since Windows 95.

A line from the upbeat electronic dance song sets the pace: "Faster than the speeding light she's flying ...."

"You soar," bright white letters read. "Yes you can."

Microsoft's 60-second TV spot, which starts airing Monday, begins with a guy leaping through a green field and then lifting off into a sunny sky — a landscape lifted from Windows XP's default "bliss screen."

Then there's a series of images of people using Windows XP for real-time communications, to collaborate in an airy restaurant, to relay digital images of flying people, watch video, listen to music and more.

The campaign was reworked after the terrorist attacks; the tag line changed from "Prepare to fly" to "Yes you can," to sidestep new concerns about air travel, said Stephanie Ferguson, director of the company's PC Experience Solutions Marketing Group.

"Ray of Light" won the Grammy for best dance recording in 1998, and the album of the same name won for best pop album.

MEDFORD, Ore. — Bob Dylan wanted tighter security for his tour, but he didn't expect to be held up at the door before his own show because he didn't have a backstage pass.

Traveling in support of his new album "Love and Theft," Dylan was set to play the last Oregon stop on his tour Tuesday night when he had trouble getting through a checkpoint at the Jackson County Exposition Center.

It was unclear whether the three security guards, all in their 30s, recognized Dylan. "If it was George Strait, they probably would have recognized him," said venue manager Chris Borovansky.

But even if they knew who Dylan was, the guards had strict orders from Dylan's security director that no one — no one — was to get backstage without an official credential.

"He said no exceptions," Borovansky said. "Absolutely none."

So when a slight, wild-haired man tried to walk through the checkpoint, the guards stopped him. Dylan was surprised, and a brief scene ensued. One of the guards put her hands up and gently stopped Dylan. After his security director came over, incensed, both he and Dylan demanded that the guards be thrown out.

Borovansky complied, although he said, "We prefer the term 'relocated.'" But he said he later told the guards they did "a great job."

LONDON — Albert Finney will play Winston Churchill opposite Vanessa Redgrave as his wife Clemmie in an upcoming TV movie about the former prime minister, the British Broadcasting Corp. says.

"A Lonely War," produced for the BBC and HBO, will focus on Churchill's efforts to alert Britons to the threat from Nazism in the years before World War II, the BBC said.

It also will focus on his personal life, including his relationship with Clemmie and their four children and the financial problems he suffered while trying to support them as a journalist.

The story revolves around Churchill's home, Chartwell, where he gathered intelligence about German rearmament, painted, raised pigs and entertained friends as he prepared for the responsibilities ahead, the BBC said.

The film, written by Hugh Whitemore and directed by Richard Loncraine, begins shooting this week. It also stars Derek Jacobi, Jim Broadbent, Linus Roache, Ronnie Barker, Hugh Bonneville, Celia Imrie and Tom Wilkinson.

It's scheduled to air on BBC television next year.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Oct. 16, 2001:

Your unusual imagination entices people. You make friends with ease. Be sensible when taking on new projects, as you see the potential but might not have enough time to complete them. You could cause yourself a problem by putting too much on your plate. You're unusually successful and dynamic. If you are single, your love life takes some exciting twists and turns this year. Your appeal skyrockets through this birthday year — if not longer. If attached, think of your partner and what would be pleasing to him. LIBRA is a soul mate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Can there be too much of a good thing? Now you get to find out. Others seek you out, finally willing to communicate. Unusual news emerges from a meeting. Use your high energy to take a project to the finish line. Others clearly respect your judgment. Tonight: Opt for a new beginning.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ News from a distance causes you to consider walking a different path. Understanding takes you in a new direction, if you are willing. Obviously you and someone with the same set of facts make totally different judgments. Evaluate different opinions. Tonight: Work as late as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Jump to another's request. You might disagree with a loved one or partner, but in some way, you don't have control over the way this person thinks. Your positive attitude and creativity when working with groups and individuals will be remembered. Tonight: Play the night away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Investigate another's intentions. You might find yourself in a double bind of some sort. Perhaps you will have to choose one option over another. Consider what is important to you, and don't compromise right now. Tonight: Order in.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Carefully review a proposition. Another's approach could be slightly out of kilter. Ask questions, even if you think something is going on with this person. New beginnings come through new understandings. Network and seek out information. Tonight: Examine options.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Finances, whether personal or at the office, need exploring. You might not get the answers you want, but you need to deal with facts. At first, others do not understand where you are coming from. A child challenges your directive. Try rephrasing your words. Tonight: Pay bills.

LIBRA (Seapt. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Make a promise to yourself now. You have so much going for you. Work on making yourself as fulfilled as possible. Another could tease you, but he doesn't intend harm. Use caution with a family member. Tonight: Ask for what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Listen more to someone who often gives you good advice. Your assertiveness could cause you to make waves. Try to mix a healthy dose of diplomacy into your discussions. Another's response could be well worth it. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec.. 21) ★★★★★ Ask others for feedback. If you're not sure of yourself, don't make an investment. You might only damage your position. Carefully consider possibilities that surround a friendship or a longtime desire. Resolutions made will stick. Tonight: Follow your pals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You might not be as sure of yourself as you have been previously. Don't get angry when someone close to you challenges you. Instead, look at what is going on inside of you. Work becomes a higher priority, if that's possible. You see the light ahead with a project. Tonight: A must show.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ What strikes you out of the blue could develop into even more. Carefully consider options that concern an educational or travel opportunity. A decision you make to network and expand your horizons proves to be worthwhile. A new beginning lies ahead, if you're open. Tonight: Buy a new CD.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Deal with others on a one-on-one level. You easily could be shocked by what you hear. Look first at your own reaction. Where is the surprise here? A friend could become a bit outrageous if you push him. Don't let an argument start. Tonight: Be with your best friend.

Your friend will receive a card in your name announcing the gift, and, if you mention this column with your order, you will receive a gift as well — a book from the acclaimed series "Best of the Bridge World." Nothing covers the world of bridge better than The Bridge World — reports of national and international tournaments; the latest in bridge theory; and a special section for the average player to improve bidding and play.

On this deal, from the "Improve Your Play" section, a good six-spade contract was reached. We prefer a raise to two spades with the North hand over the one no-trump selected. North's bid over game showed a maximum no-trump response, spade support and no first-round control, and South had an easy advance to slam.

West led the queen of hearts, and declarer had only 11 top tricks. "You need to work on diamonds (to create a 12th), and North's spade and heart honors may be needed for entries. Therefore, win trick one with the ace of hearts and, without drawing any trumps, lead a diamond to the king.

"If the ace of diamonds is offside, you must hope for a 4-3 diamond split: heart return (say) to dummy, diamond ruff high, spade to dummy, diamond ruff high, spade to dummy, diamond ruff high, spade to dummy to cash the long diamond."

Simple, clear and instructive.

PARENTS

FAMILIES TODAY

Children will learn what's important in relationships

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.
N.Y. Times News Service

QUESTION: Our daughter and her husband have two sons, ages 5 and 2. Both we and the other grandparents love our grandsons very much. Our problem is that Nana and Papa (the other grandparents) "buy" the grandsons' love.

Recently, Nana invited the 5-year-old for an overnight visit. Before he arrived, she called and told him he could do whatever he liked at her house (eat what he liked, see movies, etc.) and there would be presents and it would be like Christmas. It took an extra backpack just to carry all the gifts home. She also sends a box every three weeks, our daughter says.

Our grandson did not want to come back to our house with his mother because he "could do what he wanted at Nana and Papa's" and didn't have to do anything he didn't want. We play with our grandson and take him to the lake and to museums. However, we do not have the money to compete with the "gifts."

I realize I sound very jealous and competitive. I honestly do not know how to handle our end. My husband and I are trying to just follow our daughter's rules and let it go. We are hoping that our grandson will not always prefer the other side and will accept our love. — J.C., via e-mail

DR. BRAZELTON: Your grandson will have an opportunity to learn what really counts in relationships — true caring and not material "things." Unfortunately, many parents and grandparents today are using toys and permissions to try to fill the gap between what they can offer in the way of time and love and what they wish they could offer.

I realize how hurtful this can feel for you. However, your grandsons will eventually realize how important you are to them — if you continue to be steadily there for them.

I'm glad that you are trying not to be competitive, for that will only fuel the split between you and the other grandparents by confusing your grandsons. Don't let this get in the way of a clear offer of your loving relationships.

I hope your daughter will continue to value you and the other grandparents for the best each of you can offer these lucky boys.

QUESTION: My 10 1/2-year-old son still needs me to sleep with him at night. He tells me he's afraid of robbers breaking into the house, even though we have a security system. He's very sensitive and worries about everything he hears on the news. He won't even ride his bike outside unless I'm out to watch him.

What's your thinking on this? — Name and address withheld

DR. BRAZELTON: I think your son is too old for these fears and for this kind of dependency. At 4 and 5 this behavior was normal, but now it's not.

Can you get him evaluated by a child psychiatrist or psychologist who can help him learn to separate from you and help you learn to let him become more self-confident? You may have to face the fact that you are nurturing this dependency.

QUESTION: My 4-year-old daughter has a problem with lying. She lies about things that have little importance. Other times she lies about things that are very serious — the kinds of things that involve the police.

I don't react badly to the lies. I tell her that it is not nice to lie and that people can truly get hurt. She is smart enough to realize this and doesn't seem to care. She has no real reaction when I catch her in a lie. She just says, "I was fooling you, Mom."

Can you please help me with this before something bad does happen? — B.T., Houston

DR. BRAZELTON: Lying, and even stealing, are common behaviors at 4 and 5. In a new book I have written with Dr. Joshua Sparrow, "Touchpoints: Three to Six: Your Child's Emotional and Behavioral Development" (Perseus Publishing), we try to explain the underlying reasons for this behavior. A 4-year-old sometimes tries to change the world to fit her wishful thinking.

You are doing the right thing by discussing each episode with your daughter. You can say something like: "You and I both know that isn't true, and your lie won't make it come true. I wish you didn't have to lie, but I do understand it. Can't we talk about your wishes, instead?"

She tells you that she knows the difference between lies and reality. If you don't get too upset about the lying, it is likely to end as she matures.

Rachel Durkin-Drga of Austin thinks her daughter Madeleine, who was born 19 weeks prematurely, is doing so well because of the breast milk she was fed. Madeleine, now 6 months old, received milk donated to the Mother's Milk Bank of Austin. The bank is one of four in the nation that provides donated milk to newborns.

Women donate milk for newborns in need

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The adoration can be heard in Rachel Durkin-Drga's voice as she cradles her 6-month-old daughter, Madeleine.

"She's flirting with the ceiling fan," the first-time mother said, her daughter cooing happily in her arms. "She's doing very well and just going gangbusters."

Madeleine entered the world in quite the opposite fashion. She arrived two months early on April 8, weighing just 1 pound, 14 ounces.

Her size and weak immune system meant the first months of her life were spent in the neonatal intensive care unit at Seton Hospital, an incubator as her cocoon. Machines recorded her heart rate, pulse, blood pressure and oxygen levels.

With her mom unable to produce enough breast milk to keep up with Madeleine's needs, a doctor recommended Mothers' Milk Bank, an organization in Austin that collects donated breast milk for babies in need.

The milk is delivered first to the most critical premature babies in central Texas, and then beyond.

Ms. Durkin-Drga believes the donated milk helped her daughter gain a healthy footing. At 6 months, an age when full-term healthy newborns are expected to double their birth weight, Madeleine weighs 11 pounds, about the size of a healthy, full-term 3-month-old.

"She has no residual effects at this point of being premature other than just being tiny for her age. She's looking like your pretty standard, typical chubby baby. I'm convinced that's because of the breast milk," Ms. Durkin-Drga said.

The bank, which serves mostly preemies but also babies who have lost their mothers, was formed in 1998 by a group of Austin neonatologists. It is one of four in the nation; the others are in San Jose, Calif.; Denver; Newark, Del.; and Raleigh, N.C.

Elizabeth Bruns, a mother of two from San Marcos, is one of 400 women in Texas who signed up to donate this year.

"I had tons of milk. I mean, a lot," Ms. Bruns said. "I didn't want to throw it away."

Between caring for her own young children, she surrendered multiple hours to the careful and rigorous screening process.

Donors must answer health- and diet-related questions during a short phone interview. If the interview is successful, they are asked to complete an application and get medical release forms from their doctor and their baby's doctor. Their blood is screened for HIV, hepatitis and other diseases.

Only then are they asked to give a minimum of 100 ounces of milk, which is also tested for bacterial growth. If that test is clear, the milk is pasteurized and tested again.

For Ms. Bruns, it was all worth it.

"Not everyone can do it, so if you can do it I think it's one of the most rewarding things to know that you are really helping some child who's not going to be able to thrive without it," she said.

Milk banking is not new, but it is uncommon.

Before formula was available, lactating women commonly nursed children of mothers who could not breast-feed. Donors were called "wet nurses."

The first known milk bank was formed in Boston in 1911 by two doctors who were worried about the number of deaths at an orphanage where they worked. The practice grew, mostly in Europe, as technology made it easier and safer to collect, pasteurize and store donated breast milk.

Milk banking declined in the 1950s when formula was mass-produced and marketed. By the 1980s, fear of AIDS contributed to the slowdown.

The founding doctors at the Austin milk bank were inspired to revive banking because of their belief that breast milk is the healthiest nourishment for babies, particularly vulnerable preemies, said Ana Mejia-Dietche, the bank's former executive director.

Formula or cow's milk can build up in the intestines of premature babies and cause an infection called necrotizing enterocolitis. "If they get a mild case they can treat it with antibiotics but it can mean lots of surgeries for lots of babies, or even death," she said.

Dr. Rodolfo Barrera, a pediatrician in Austin, said breast-fed babies are significantly less likely to contract the infection. Whether the milk comes from the biological mother or is donated, health care providers believe antibodies in the milk reduces the babies' risk for respiratory infections as well as meningitis and juvenile diabetes.

A healthy, full-term newborn can consume between 15 and 30 ounces of milk a day, depending on size. The Austin bank pasteurizes up to 7,000 ounces of breast milk a month. The cleansing does not reduce the health benefits of the milk.

"The supply and demand here can change quickly," said Gretchen Flatau, interim director at the Austin bank. "We have received a slight increase in calls and e-mail since Sept. 11 from potential donors and we assume there may be an increased sensitivity to the need for human milk donations."

Officials at the bank also hope to get a boost from a state law that went into effect only last month. It creates state oversight of the bank, similar to the regulation of blood banks, with the goal of allaying fears of doctors and parents about transferring disease through donated milk.

Barrera said the intense cleansing and testing of the milk is stricter than testing blood.

Additionally, Ms. Mejia-Dietche said, "the combination of doing all that screening, the pasteurization and the deep freezing" is likely to kill any disease.

To Ms. Durkin-Drga, the donations are simply selfless acts of kindness.

"That's the neat part — helping in a selfless way. You have no idea who's getting it," she said. "It is a wonderful gift. I'd like to thank every woman who's ever donated to a milk bank. I'm really convinced that's why my daughter's doing so well."

'Dr. Ruth' writes book to help parents answer children's questions about sex

By Samantha Critchell
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The day will come — whether parents are ready for it or not — when children will begin to wonder and ask about sex.

The best way to handle that moment, according to sex therapist Ruth Westheimer, known to most as "Dr. Ruth," is to address the topic directly, using all the proper terms but in a way that kids will understand.

One solution is her book, "Who Am I? Where Did I Come From" (Golden Books), a pop-up book geared for 4- to 8-year-olds. The story explains sex in the context of making babies.

She addresses topics that make many parents blush and she addresses the blushing itself.

"Sex is a word that causes some people to become shy, to hide their feelings. But you're not bothered by such a little word, are you?" she writes.

But Ms. Westheimer stresses that there is no "right time" for the discussion because children's' curiosity and maturity levels vary. Same goes for the parents.

But sooner or later, advises the grandmother of three, parents will have to get involved or all their kids' information about sex will come from Hollywood.

"With so much TV about sex, parents don't have the luxury not to talk about sex. You can't leave it to schools, churches and synagogues. Parents have to work with schools, synagogues and churches."

The discussion hopefully will grow out of a child's close relationship with his parents, a relationship that fosters questions from a curious kid.

The closest thing to an ideal time for the sex talk is if a child's mother, relative or family friend is pregnant. "Let them know something happy is going on," Ms. Westheimer said. Another bonus: the finale. The actual birth of the child will turn the abstract ideas of sex and pregnancy into reality.

Ms. Westheimer also urges parents not to mask human sexuality in other animals.

"I don't believe in talking about 'the birds and the bees.' I'm about talking about humans. Explain the mating between birds, bees, cats, cows separately," she said.

Also, parents should tell their children that explaining sex can be an ongoing discussion, although one best always talked about in the home — not the bus or a friend's house. (If a child begins asking intimate questions in public, distract them; Ms. Westheimer said, it's easier to do than you think.)

Ms. Westheimer, 73, said she checked with her own children before sharing this book with the grandkids. She reports that her 5-year-old granddaughter was interested and asked intelligent questions. Ms. Westheimer's daughter-in-law, however, wants to wait to give the book to the 3-year-old.

"That's OK. I know my role as a grandma."

4-5A race should shape up after Week 2

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Now that a certain sense of order has prevailed after one week of the District 4-5A football season, the question of who shall contend and who won't will very soon be answered.

Unlike last year, this season's first week of district play yielded no upsets which threatened to derail the district's status quo. But regardless of who won or lost last Friday night, there seems to be a truism that applies to this week; namely, that week two figures to be the turning point in deciding the complexion of the district race.

Two of this week's games have obvious implications. The Midland Lee-Abilene Cooper matchup at Shotwell Stadium is just what was anticipated, a clash between the district's preeminent programs over the last several seasons, with the winner claiming at the very least a share of the district lead.

Both Lee and Cooper lived up to their end of the bargains in their 4-5A openers, as the Rebels beat Odessa High 28-7 and the Cougars survived a thriller at Odessa Permian, 29-26.

■ District 4-5A Baseball

"I figure that if you're undefeated going into week two then you really have a chance to solidify a spot in the playoff picture with a win," said Lee coach John Parchman. "If you lose that first week you pretty much have to win in week two. It's a big opportunity for someone to step forward."

The Rebels were forced to step up in the second week last season after opening district with a surprising 27-17 loss to OHS. They hosted Cooper, which had survived the upset bug that first week by beating Permian.

In an epic offensive clash featuring the running of Lee's Cedric Benson versus the passing of Cooper's Jordan Neal, the Rebels survived a 49-36 battle with Cooper. That victory proved to be the springboard for the Rebels, not only to a share of the district crown, but also their third straight state title.

While Cooper coach Randy Quisenberry doesn't see this week as being much more special than any others, he allows that the Lee-Cooper winner will have cleared a tall hurdle in the way of a postseason berth.

"It will take the pressure off since three (wins) is thought of as the magic number," said Quisenberry of the prospects of a 2-0 start. "It would definitely put you in the driver's seat."

Regardless of who wins, Parchman thinks that the wheat will be separated from the chaff by week's end.

"Week one y7ou're feeling everybody out and there might be a few eyebrows raised, but after week two you see who the contenders are," said Parchman.

Last-second kick saves Cowboys in ugly matchup

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — For three quarters, the Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins looked like they really were playing the "Gutter Bowl."

Then two of the NFL's worst teams played to an exciting finish.

Tim Seder, whose kicking leg collided with a horse during pregame warmups, made a 26-yard field goal as time expired Monday night to give Dallas a 9-7 victory, its first of the year.

"There's a fine line between winning and losing and we finally stepped over that line," said Seder, who also hit from 28 and 39 yards but missed from 41 and 52. "Maybe we can get on a roll."

The Cowboys (1-4) are rolling against the Redskins (0-5) — this was their eighth straight victory over their division rival. Washington, which led 7-3 early in the fourth quarter, is off to its worst start since losing its first seven games in 1998.

"It was our game to win," said Redskins linebacker LaVar Arrington, who was in tears.

The only positive for the Redskins was the close loss. They had been beaten by at least 14 points in every game while getting outscored 135-25.

"It's miserable," Washington coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "I wouldn't have thought that this was possible. It's difficult. There are no prizes for losing."

The wretched records of the once-proud teams prompted Washington defensive end Kenard Lang to give the game its nickname. He noted that the franchises that have won a combined eight Super Bowls are in the gutter and "are trying to climb out of it."

Some expected the equally inept teams to be competitive. Instead, Washington and Dallas traded silly mistakes until Tony Banks threw a 31-yard touchdown pass to Michael Westbrook early in the fourth quarter to give the Redskins the 7-3 lead.

Dallas — which fittingly won without scoring a touchdown — made it 7-6 when Seder kicked a 39-yarder with 6:36 left.

The Redskins answered by driving into Dallas territory, moving slowly and burning lots of clock, only to see Stephen Davis fumble at the Cowboys' 38-yard-line. Davis gained 99 yards on 23 carries.

"Unfortunately for Stephen, he was just trying to make yards," Schottenheimer said. "We wouldn't have been in the game if not for his effort."

With 2:40 to play and two timeouts left, Anthony Wright completed passes to Darrin Chiaverini and Raghib Ismail — his only healthy receivers — to reach the Washington 34.

The Cowboys kept the ball on the ground, converting a third-and-2 on a run by Troy Hambrick, then getting a 13-yard run from Emmitt Smith to set up the game-winning kick. Smith ran 25 times for a 107 yards, his first 100-yard game of the season.

"We made the plays when we had to," Smith said. "We were kind of limited. We worked with what we had, like we have all year long."

Dallas Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith (22) responds in kind after Washington linebacker LaVar Arrington grabbed his face mask during their game Monday in Irving. Dallas won, 9-7, getting its first victory of the season and leaving the Redskins winless.

Seder's final kick was perfect. He showed none of the ill effects of having his right leg grazed by a horse that was on the field for pregame festivities. The kicker backed into the horse and their legs accidentally met.

"It rubbed a little luck off on me," Seder said. "It turned out pretty well. It was a little excitement for the pregame."

Flash bulbs popped as the game-winner went through the uprights and Dallas players ran on the field celebrating as if they'd won a much bigger bowl. Hambrick tore off his helmet and spun it on the ground as if he was twirling a touchdown ball in the end zone.

If not for the exciting ending, this game might have been remembered for the long injury report for both teams.

Seder's first field goal came just before halftime, giving Dallas a 3-0 lead. By not scoring in the first three quarters, Washington became the first team since the 1943 Brooklyn Dodgers to have only one touchdown in the first 19 quarters of the season.

SEATTLE — Shut out at home. Blown out on the road. Down to their final nine outs. Twice in danger of having their record-setting, season of seasons end in failure.

The Seattle Mariners endured it all during five pressure-packed games against the Cleveland Indians. And as they did all year, the Mariners came out winners.

■ Yanks finish off Athletics/2C

Jamie Moyer tamed Cleveland's bats for six innings, Ichiro Suzuki got three more hits and Mark McLemore drove in two runs Monday as the Mariners advanced to the ALCS with a 3-1 win over the Indians in the deciding Game 5 of the playoffs.

Back home where their magic multiplies, baseball's best team during the regular season guaranteed it would be around for some more postseason fun.

The Mariners faced elimination twice and twice refused to let this season of seasons end.

"We were down 1-0, and we had to win Game 2," reliever Jeff Nelson said. "We had to win Game 4, and we had to win today. It shows what kind of players we have and what kind of team we are. We tied history, but it wouldn't have looked very good if we got knocked out in the first round."

After nearly seeing their record-tying 116 wins in the regular season overshadowed by an early October exit, the Mariners returned to the safety and screaming fans in Safeco Field and did what they've done all season.

They got solid starting pitching, clutch base hits, solid relief work and defense and improved to 119-

Craven earns his 1st career NASCAR win

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Ricky Craven lingered in Victory Lane, talking to anyone in sight and reveling in the moment — his first Winston Cup victory.

When he crossed the finish line Monday and crew chief Mike Beam told him he won, Craven was overwhelmed.

"It's never happened in my life," said Craven, who began regularly racing Winston Cup in 1995. "But time stopped and I thought, 'That's what I've worked 20 years for.'"

Craven won the Old Dominion 500 at Martinsville Speedway by holding off Dale Jarrett in a door-to-door, last-lap duel. It was his first triumph in 174 career starts and one that erased a lot of bad memories.

There was his resignation from Hendrick Motorsports in 1998 after eight races sandwiched around a bout with postconcussion syndrome.

Ill winds blow Bronchos, Bulldogs, Mojo off course

You had to figure there would be something in the air for the first week of District 4-5A football, and if you went to Memorial Stadium Friday night you knew what it was — dust.

Passmore

While all the talk after last year's first week centered around surprises on the field (Odessa High beating Midland Lee, Midland High beating Abilene High), what this last Friday night's games had in common was what distinguishes West Texas from the rest of the state. The wind blowing in from the north proved to be a factor in all three games, particularly the closer the games got.

Anybody who parked west of Memorial for the Lee-OHS game more than likely found it a challenge to reach the stadium gates without getting hats blown off or dirt in their eyes. Once seated, the knowledgeable observer could easily see that it was in a team's best interest to take the wind, given the option.

So when Odessa High's opening kickoff sailed out of the end zone aided by a 35-40 mph tail wind, the Rebels looked to be in a less than ideal situation going into the wind at their own 20-yard line.

But the Rebels didn't exactly go into the wind. They opted to stay down on earth.

Lee went 80 yards on 14 plays against the wind, with all but five of those yards on the ground, to take a 7-0 lead. Playing at home, the Rebels suddenly made the wind not matter.

"I was real pleased with how methodical and patient we were on offense against the wind," said Lee coach John Parchman.

After the Rebels converted an OHS fumble on the ensuing possession into another score for a 14-0 lead, the Bronchos faced the uphill battle of trying to get back into the game while driving against the wind over the next two quarters. With only 27 yards of total offense in the first half, OHS obviously didn't succeed.

But while an argument could be made that the wind played only a peripheral role in Lee's 28-7 victory, over 20 miles to the west in Odessa, it had a dramatic impact on the finish of the Abilene Cooper-Odessa Permian game at Ratliff Stadium.

Trailing 29-26 as the clock wound down, Permian drove deep into Cooper territory with five seconds remaining. That gave the Panthers one last chance, as Ryan Havens came onto the field for a 34-yard field goal attempt to send the game into overtime.

Havens had already set a district single game record by connecting on four field goals, including two into the wind. But with the game on the line from 34 yards, Havens couldn't beat the wind in his face, and his kick sailed off to the right as Cooper escaped with a victory.

"That north wind just pushed it off to the right," said Permian coach T.J. Mills of Havens' miss. "We worked hard in the pregame on driving the ball low."

In Abilene, Midland High couldn't take advantage of the wind at its back offensively. With the wind in the third quarter, the Bulldogs appeared to have tied the game on a touchdown scramble by quarterback Ryan Rowland, but it was wiped out by a holding penalty. When Abilene High got the ball back, it drove into the wind for a touchdown and a 13-0 lead, essentially clinching the game.

That touchdown in Abilene High's 26-0 victory was the game's only score into the wind. Midland High had trouble generating any offense against the wind, amassing only 97 yards of total offense and a measly seven first downs.

While scouting reports and videotapes are certainly handy tools to coaches preparing for games, this week they might do well to consult another outlet when they draw up their game plans — the Weather Channel.

Seattle's Mike Cameron, left, knocks over Cleveland catcher Einar Diaz as he is caught trying to steal home during the second inning of Game 5 of the American League Division Series Monday at Safeco Field in Seattle. The Mariners won the game, 3-1, and the series.

MARINERS: Team with 116 wins in regular season gets past Tribe

(From 1C)

48 since opening day.

"It's a good formula," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "This is fun. There's no pressure."

There was no wild celebration after third baseman David Bell threw out Juan Gonzalez at first for the final out. The Mariners know they still have a lot of work ahead.

As 47,867 stood and cheered, the players exchanged hugs and high-fives near second base before heading to a clubhouse celebration.

And now, the Mariners advance to their third ALCS — they also appeared in '95 and '00 — but for the first time, they'll have home-field advantage when they get there.

"We've been in this situation before," Edgar Martinez said. "We've been behind. We've bounced back and won. It's amazing the way this team is able to bounce back."

Seattle will play host to the best-of-seven series beginning Wednesday against either the Oakland Athletics or New York Yankees, who played their own Game 5 Monday night.

Suzuki, the speedy Japanese sensation whose legion of fans grows with every infield single, gave Cleveland headaches all series long. He went 12-for-20 (.600), scored four runs and set the table for nearly every Mariners' rally.

"That guys flys," said Indians shortstop Omar Vizquel. "If he hits the ball two steps to your right or left, it's almost a sure base hit."

The Indians managed just four hits and will have the winter to think about what might have been.

Cleveland was in command of the series following a 17-2 blowout in Game 3, but the Indians couldn't put away the Mariners, who after running away from the AL all year, showed they're not bad at comebacks, either.

"It showed what we're made of," Moyer said. "The last two games have been win or go home."

It could be a while before the Indians are back in the postseason. The AL Central champs are expected to slash payroll during the offseason, and Monday's game could be the last for center fielder Kenny Lofton, pitcher Dave Burba and Gonzalez.

GM John Hart, who built the Indians into a winner, is also stepping down and there's speculation that manager Charlie Manuel may not have his contract renewed.

"This hurts," said rookie pitcher C.C. Sabathia, who won 17 games during the regular season and got the victory in Game 3. "I feel like it's all for nothing. My team didn't win and that's tough to take."

Moyer beat the Indians for the second time in the series and fourth time this season, allowing one run and three hits in six innings.

The 38-year-old, pitching on three days' rest, walked one, struck out seven and got just enough help from plate umpire Mark Hirschbeck's low strike zone to make it tough on the Indians.

It's not like Cleveland could hit Moyer's off-speed stuff, anyway.

The Indians' 3-through-6 hitters — Roberto Alomar, Gonzalez, Ellis Burks and Jim Thome — went a combined 0-for-14 with six strikeouts.

"We just couldn't get to that changeup," Vizquel said. "He just paints the corners."

Relievers Jeff Nelson and Arthur Rhodes got the Mariners to the ninth and Kazuhiro Sasaki pitched a perfect final inning for his first save of the series.

Indians starter Chuck Finley, too, had his problems with Hirschbeck's strike zone, allowing two runs and three hits in 4 1-3 innings.

Yankees pull out series win after spotting A's two games

By Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — With no margin for error, Derek Jeter and the New York Yankees' pinstriped dynasty persevered with one of the great comebacks in baseball history.

As Jeter solidified his place in Yankees' lore, the three-time defending World Series champions became the first team ever to win a best-of-five series after losing the first two games at home.

New York fell behind early as Roger Clemens stumbled, then seized on Oakland's youthful nerves to beat the Athletics 5-3 in the deciding Game 5 Monday night and advance to the AL championship series.

"We're not going home until somebody beats us," Jeter said in the noisy Yankees' clubhouse.

Alfonso Soriano started New York with a two-run single, the Yankees created two runs from three errors and David Justice capped the comeback with a pinch-hit home run into the right-field seats — his first RBI in 62 at-bats since Sept. 5.

Then came Jeter, whose amazing backhand flip to the plate following an overthrow preserved the Yankees' 1-0 win in Game 3 — and turned the series.

After getting two hits to break Pete Rose's postseason record with 87, Jeter showed the heart and skill of a champion.

With a runner on first in the eighth, he dived headlong into the photographer's box behind third base to catch Terrence Long's foul pop. The runner advanced, but was stranded, and after the inning Jeter bandaged his elbow cut.

"I guess that's the reason he's wearing so many rings. That kid's as good as they come," Oakland manager Art Howe said. "Whenever they need a big play, he's there to make it. Whenever they need a big hit, he gets it."

With the delirious Bronx crowd chanting at fever pitch, Mariano Rivera closed it out, capping 4 2-3 innings of shutout, two-hit relief started by winner Mike Stanton and Ramiro Mendoza.

"Everything that this city has gone through and the fans have gone through, just the opportunity to give them something to cheer about was a joy," Clemens said. "They were so loud."

New York, trying to become only the third team to win the World Series four straight times, beat Oakland 3-2 in the first round for the second straight year and opens the AL championship Wednesday at Seattle, with renewed confidence that nothing is outside its grasp.

"If you lose playing well, you tip your hat," Howe said. "Tonight we contributed quite a bit to our demise."

Clemens, his pant legs hiked up in tribute to teammate Orlando Hernandez's victory in Game 4, fell behind 2-0 in the first two innings. The Giambi brothers hit RBI singles that put Oakland ahead, with Jason — who went 4-for-4 — connecting in the first after Johnny Damon's leadoff double and Jeremy in the second following Long's double.

"We actually were looseygoosey," Howe said. "We scored a couple of runs early and felt good about ourselves."

But then the Yankees' resolve, the refusal not to give in that has led them to four World Series titles in five years under manager Joe Torre, kicked in while the A's buckled.

"This is probably the first time we've been counted out," Stanton said. "Some people considered us underdogs coming in, then we went down 0-2. To get three straight wins, which has never been done before, is pretty special."

Said Torre: "The fact that nobody's ever done this doesn't mean it can't be done."

Soriano, one of the rookies added this year to an ever-changing roster, started it with a two-run single in the second off Mark Mulder, who had shut down the Yankees in the opener.

Soriano's hit came after Scott Brosius, in a horrible slump, loaded the bases when he was hit by a pitch on the foot.

Then the A's, the team seemingly on the verge of a breakthrough season, turned from brash to bumbling, and an attitude that seemed so solid in winning twice at Yankee Stadium last week went from juiced to jittery.

An innocent strikeout by Bernie Williams started the collapse in the third. The ball skipped away from catcher Greg Myers, who got it in plenty of time to throw to first for the out, but his throw bounced under the glove of Jason Giambi at first and into right field as Williams reached.

Tino Martinez was hit on a hip by a pitch and Shane Spencer loaded the bases with a two-out walk. Brosius then hit a grounder to third and Eric Chavez, appearing distracted as Martinez crossed in front of him, let the ball pop out of his glove as Williams scored the go-ahead run.

Jason Giambi hurt the A's again in the fourth after Chuck Knoblauch led off with a single. Mulder picked Knoblauch off first, with Giambi having plenty of time to make the play, but his throw to second was wide and low.

Randy Velarde bunted Knoblauch over and Jeter hit a sacrifice fly on the next pitch to make it 4-2.

Oakland had plenty of chances, going 3-for-8 with runners' in scoring position, a change from its 1-for-35 in the first four games.

Chaps lead in Seminole

Staff Report

SEMINOLE — Midland College is leading the Gaines County College Invitational golf tournament, but the real winner on Monday was high winds and airborne dirt.

The invitational was supposed to be a one-day event with 36 holes of play. The teams only completed 18 holes and then it was decided to finish the final round today.

"We agreed to come back on Tuesday," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss. "Three cotton fields surround the course here and let's just say it got pretty bad. I think we made a wise decision not to play the last 18 holes. We were afraid we might not find our players if we went much farther."

Midland College's No. 1 team fired a 297 despite the wind to take the lead. MC's No. 2 squad stand in second place at 301, one strok in fron of New Mexico Junior College and three in front of Odessa College's No. 2 team. Odessa College's No. 1 team is in fifth place, but only 10 strokes out of the lead.

MC was led by Lee Rhind with a 71 and was followed by Iain Colquhover, 74; Andrew Lanahan, 75; Gerod Black, 77; and Omar Sanchez, 80.

MC's second team was led by Nick Schumacher with a 72 while Malcolm Dreyer had a 75. Jake Shaw and Daniel Campbell each had 77 and Mac Lee had an 80.

Game between Texas Tech, Indiana canceled

INDIANAPOLIS — An Indiana official said Monday that the game, which would have brought former coach Bob Knight back to Bloomington, Ind., was canceled because of new "circumstances."

Spokesman Jeff Fanter said Texas Tech officials contacted Indiana earlier this month to discuss the game and that both schools then agreed to cancel it.

The game was to be played in December 2002 at Assembly Hall.

"The circumstances at both schools have changed since the game was originally scheduled," Fanter said in a statement. "We were in agreement with Texas Tech and both schools agreed mutually to forgo the final year of the contract."

Indiana athletic director Michael McNeely was in meetings all day Monday and unavailable for comment, Fanter said.

The game was originally scheduled as part of a three-game deal that was signed when Knight still coached Indiana.

DISTRICT: Havens kicks 4 field goals

(From 1C)

That Cooper also went to the playoffs despite losing to the Rebels is an indication that quality teams will win out over the course of district play. But the bigger question after this Friday might will be who is in the best position to grab that third playoff spot.

In that regard, the other game with huge implications as to making or not making the playoffs is the Midland High-Odessa High clash at Memorial Stadium. Both teams sit at 0-1 in district after losing their openers by decisive margins.

More than likely, the MHS-OHS loser can start thinking about next season.

"It's tough with just five games," said MHS coach David Browning. "It's mathematically not impossible (to make the playoffs starting 0-2) but it's going to be extremely difficult. I think it's a big week, no question about it."

If nothing else, the Bulldogs will enjoy home field advantage, something which Odessa High had to fight against last week when it lost to Lee at Memorial. The Rebels took the opening kickoff and marched 80 yards for a touchdown into the wind, then the Bronchos turned the ball over on their first possession, letting Lee score on a much shorter drive.

"We've got to come over here and play from the get-go," said OHS coach Jim Carson after the loss to Lee. "I think we were nervous."

While the loser of the MHS-OHS game will have almost zero margin for error to make the playoffs, the picture could become even more crowded after Friday. Both the OHS-MHS winner and the Lee-Cooper loser will have a 1-1 mark, and should Permian beat Abilene High, there will be four teams at 1-1.

Naturally, Permian, which suffered the toughest loss in the district last week, would love to see a logjam of five teams after Friday night.

"We felt like we had to make a statement," said Permian coach T.J. Mills. "This week is not going to be anything different for us. We don't want them (Abilene High) sitting at 2-0 and us 0-2. This is the big week."

Those who thought that Lee and Cooper (which earned its first state ranking of the season this week at No. 10) were the teams to beat have been proven right so far, and it looks as if the status quo has been maintained. But history shows that it can't necessarily be trusted.

"(This week) could clarify things a little more, but like last year, it could make things even more muddled," said Quisenberry.

Havens gets his kicks: In a losing cause, Permian's Ryan Havens still set a district record. Havens made four field goals against Cooper from 31, 37, 42 and 35 yards, beating the previous district record of three in a game, which had been accomplished 13 times.

With his four three-pointers, Havens equaled the number of field goals he had kicked in Permian's previous five games combined. Not only are his eight field goals double that of the next highest total, by Odessa High's Matt Dominey, but Havens was the only 4-5A kicker to make a field goal in the first week of district games.

Yet, it was that fifth attempt which will haunt Havens and the Panthers this week since his 34-yard try into the wind with five seconds left, which would have sent the game into overtime, went wide right.

No fourth quarter Mojo: Even if Havens had made his kick, it wouldn't have kept Permian from being outscored in the fourth quarter for the first time this season. The only score of the quarter, a 54-yard touchdown pass from Cooper's David Butler to Marcevie Ralston, proved to be the game winner.

The Panthers weren't just outscored in the final period. It was the first time this season they failed to score a point in the fourth quarter.

NASCAR: Craven takes rain-delayed race

(From 1C)

without a full-time ride and talk in the garage area that his career might be finished.

And then, suddenly, there was victory.

"I began racing in 1982 with the idea of getting to Winston Cup and winning a Winston Cup race and I've got to admit, the last couple of years, I wasn't sure I'd ever get the chance," he said. "But here we are."

In a race postponed a day because of rain, Craven pulled away from Jarrett on a restart with 13 laps to go, opening a wide lead. Then Jarrett began reeling him in, pulling up close to his bumper with about two laps to go on the .526-mile oval.

"I found comfort in knowing he was in my mirror because the guy is a gentleman," Craven said. "I knew he would race me hard, but I knew he wouldn't rough me up."

On the final lap, Jarrett went outside Craven heading into the first turn. The cars were door-to-door down the backstretch, with Craven hanging onto the inside position that eventually helped him hold off Jarrett.

"I ran the last 10 laps as hard as I could possibly run, but I went into turn one with a lap to go and said, 'I've got this thing,'" he said.

Jarrett was disappointed but thrilled for Craven.

"He did what he's supposed to do," said Jarrett, who was among the first to congratulate Craven.

Craven's Ford beat Jarrett's across the line by .141 seconds, giving owner Cal Wells his first victory in NASCAR's premier series.

The race proved a bonanza for points leader Jeff Gordon, who cruised home in ninth place and added 97 points to his lead over Ricky Rudd. Gordon leads Rudd by 334 points with six races remaining.

"It's just a nail-biter until this thing is over with anyway," Gordon said. "What happened to Ricky Rudd today can happen to me next week or the week after that. You just never know."

Oil falls

NEW YORK — Crude oil and refined products futures ended moderately lower Monday at the New York Mercantile Exchange on fears of a global recession, as traders mulled forecasts that revised oil demand downward.

Prices also dipped following news that a letter sent to Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle had tested positive for anthrax.

Crude for November delivery fell 21 cents to $22.28 per barrel; heating oil declined .73 cent to 63.11 cents a gallon and gasoline dropped .39 cent to 59.71 cents a gallon.

Market players are closely watching for something decisive from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in response to falling demand — and prices.

"Working from International Energy Agency estimates and OPEC's estimated production yields a 1.43 million barrels a day excess," said Tim Evans, analyst at IFR Pegasus. "And while improved compliance could chip away at the problem, it can't redress the entire imbalance."

For the fourth quarter, the IEA reported the call on OPEC at 25.8 million barrels a day, down 1.4 million barrels a day from its last forecast. For 2002, the IEA expects demand for OPEC crude to average 26 million barrels a day, 500,000 barrels a day below the 2001 average.

The IEA cut demand forecasts for the fourth quarter of 2001 by 1.1 million barrels a day, and said it expects the world to use an average of 76 million barrels a day this year, down 400,000 barrels a day from its last forecast and only 120,000 barrels a day over 2000 demand.

On the other side of the equation, overproduction continues. OPEC output in September was 27.23 million barrels a day, the IEA reported. However, September production from the 10 OPEC members that participate in output agreements was 24.46 million barrels a day, 1.26 million barrels a day over target quotas.

Meanwhile, non-OPEC production continues to move higher, from 45.89 million barrels a day in 2000 to 46.59 million barrels a day this year to 47.45 million barrels a day in 2002.

Dollar down

LONDON — The U.S. dollar fell against other major currencies in European trading Monday.

The euro was quoted at 90.71 cents in late European trading, up from 90.53 cents Friday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 90.81 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included 120.92 Japanese yen, down from 121.34; 1.6302 Swiss francs, down from 1.6384; and 1.5576 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5665.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4467, down from $1.4496.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 120.86 yen, and the pound was worth $1.4474.

Based on late European euro rates, the dollar was worth 2.1549 German marks, down from 2.1592; 7.2274 French francs, down from 7.2417; 2.4286 Dutch guilders, down from 2.4329; and 2,133.40 Italian lire, down from 2,137.64.

Gold mixed

Gold closed in London at $282.10 bid per troy ounce, up from $281.90 on Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $281.70, down from $281.88. Gold fell 70 cents in Hong Kong to $284.05.

Silver closed in London at $4.37 bid per troy ounce, down from $4.40.

Attacks may lead to pileup of stocks

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Businesses continued to make progress eliminating excess inventories in August, but uncertainties about the buying mood of consumers in the months ahead could lead to a pileup of some stocks.

The Commerce Department reported Monday that unsold goods on shelves and backlots fell by a seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent in August, following an even bigger decline of 0.5 percent in July.

Consumers stayed away from stores following the Sept. 11 attacks, sending retail sales in September down sharply.

"With retail sales dropping precipitously in September, we can expect more — unintended — inventory building," said Peter Kretzmer, economist with Banc of America Securities.

Economists say companies must whittle down excess stocks in order to set the stage for increased production in the future, something that could help economic growth down the road.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average, down for much of the session, managed a slim gain as it closed up 3.46 points at 9,347.62.

In an effort to stabilize the tottering economy, the Federal Reserve has cut interest rates nine times this year, with a full percentage point reduction coming after the terror attacks.

President Bush, meanwhile, is working with Congress on a package to jump-start the economy that will likely include additional tax cuts and increased government spending.

Before the attacks, Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan had attributed much of the economy's weakness to an effort by businesses to slash inventories to bring them more in line with slumping sales. Businesses cut production, laid off workers and deeply discounted merchandise.

In the aftermath of the attacks, "the need to replenish inventories by ramping up production will come later," said Richard Yamarone, economist with Argus Research Corp. "We initially expected a late third quarter manufacturing revival. Now it probably will be pushed to next year."

In August, inventories at factories, which have been hardest hit by the more than yearlong economic slump, fell by 0.7 percent, on top of a 0.8 percent decline. Sales, however, dipped by 0.5 percent in August, following a solid 0.4 percent advance.

Among wholesalers, inventories slipped by 0.1 percent, after a big 0.9 percent plunge. Sales rose by a strong 0.6 percent in August, on top of an even bigger 0.7 percent gain.

But retailers saw inventories jump by 0.6 percent in August, after a slim 0.1 percent increase in July. Sales rose by a modest 0.3 percent, up from a 0.2 percent gain in July.

Automobile dealers' inventories rose by 0.6 percent, following a 1.1 percent increase.

Monday's report also showed that the inventory-to-sales ratio — which measures how long it would take businesses to exhaust their inventories at August's sales pace, stayed at 1.42 months.

Against the backdrop of low interest rates, the Treasury Department announced Monday that it would redeem before maturity $4.2 billion in high-interest debt — 30-year bonds that carry an interest rate of 7 5/8 percent.

The bonds will be called on Feb. 15, 2002, and will stop earning interest at that time. They were issued Feb. 15, 1977, and due to mature in 2007. Investors who bought the "callable" bonds were aware the government held the option to redeem them before maturity.

Captain Lanny McAndrew, chief pilot for JetBlue Airways Corp. looks out from the cockpit of an Airbus A320 at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport, as he poses for a photograph next to a newly installed armor-plated door designed to deny passengers access to the plane's controls, Monday. The door's deadbolts are made of titanium, a move aimed at preventing passengers from using their own weight to crash through.

JetBlue installing bulletproof cockpit doors

By Alan Clendenning
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The new sign on the cockpit doors of JetBlue Airways planes warns would-be hijackers: This door is plated and locked from the inside.

Bullets won't penetrate the new door, the airline says, and someone swinging an ax wouldn't be able to cut through it, either. The door is lined with a layer of Kevlar — the material inside bulletproof vests.

After pilots close the door, they lock four new deadbolts made of titanium, a move aimed at preventing passengers from using their own weight to crash through.

Two of JetBlue's planes are now fitted with the $10,000 modified cockpit doors, and the rest of the company's 16 jets will have them soon, said David Neeleman, the airline's chief executive.

"What we didn't want is someone just running through the door," he said. "And they can't run through this door."

Other U.S. airlines are placing bars on the inside of their cockpit doors as temporary security measures — including AirTran Airways, which announced Monday that it has finished installing stainless steel bars on the cockpit doors of its 717 jets.

Neeleman said JetBlue is the first U.S. carrier to use Kevlar and titanium deadbolts to reinforce cockpit doors, following the lead of Swissair, which has had similar doors on its planes for years.

The company also plans to install miniature cameras that watch over passengers; pilots would have small TV monitors to see what's going on in the passenger compartment.

Airlines have until the end of the year to tell Federal Aviation Administration officials what temporary measures they have taken to strengthen cockpit doors, FAA spokeswoman Alison Duquette said.

The FAA is working with airlines and airplane manufacturers to come up with permanent security improvements.

JetBlue officials don't know whether their modifications will meet the final FAA design, but said the new doors will help pilots gain valuable time if problems emerge among passengers.

Even if hijackers were attacking passengers and trying to take over the plane, it "doesn't become a missile, and we've got time to get it on the ground," said Al Spain, JetBlue's vice president of operations.

JetBlue officials aren't worried about the possibility of both pilots having sudden health problems that leave them incapacitated, unable to fly and locked inside the cockpit with no way for crew members to enter.

"The chance of that happening is very small," said chief pilot Lanny McAndrew. "We thought about that, and the trade-off for it, we think, is well worth it."

With its hub at Kennedy International Airport in New York, JetBlue flies to points throughout the East Coast, California and Canada.

Dynegy reports earnings growth of 22 percent in its third quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Energy marketer Dynegy Inc. said Monday third quarter earnings grew 22 percent, beating the forecasts of Wall Street analysts, and increased its earnings estimates for the entire year.

Dynegy attributed its gains to the success of its energy marketing and trading business, which accounted for more than 90 percent of quarterly profits.

Dynegy reported net income of $286 million, or 85 cents per share, for the three months ending Sept. 30, compared with $235 million, or 73 cents per share, a year earlier.

Analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial/First Call expected earnings of 82 cents per share.

But shares of Dynegy fell $1.20, or 3 percent, to close at $42.45 in trading Monday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Revenues for the quarter grew by about 2 percent to $8.52 billion from $8.37 billion a year ago.

For the first nine months of the year, Dynegy earned $571 million, or $1.69 a share, compared with $395 million, or $1.17 a share, a year ago. Its revenue grew 73 percent to $33.5 billion from $19.4 billion last year.

Dynegy raised profit estimates for 2001 to $2.09 to $2.10 per share. Analysts surveyed by Thomson Financial/First Call were looking for earnings of $2.07 a share for the year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investing in 'fund of funds' is diversified, expense ration is low

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am 69 years old and presently own six mutual funds in a conventional IRA, which I do not depend on for income. However, I lack the expertise to adequately balance these funds and am considering converting these funds into one fund like TIAA-CREF's Managed Allocation Fund or Vanguard's Life Strategy Fund. Would this be a wise decision? I would also like your opinion on where to put the distributions from this IRA when I will shortly begin receiving them.

Tyson

A: As regular readers of my columns know, I am a fan of investing in the better "funds of funds," especially with money inside of tax-sheltered retirement accounts.

For someone your age, I would normally recommend the Vanguard Life Strategy Conservative Growth fund, which is 40 percent stocks and 60 percent bonds. This fund actually invests in five Vanguard funds: Total Bond Market Index fund, Asset Allocation fund, Total Stock Market Index fund, Short-Term Corporate fund and Total International Stock Index fund. Thus, this fund of funds is incredibly diversified. Its operating expense ratio is a mere 0.28 percent annually.

As for where to put the distributions you'll be taking from your IRA, if you want to keep the money invested for the future and you're not in a high tax bracket, you could simply use the same fund of funds as you're using in your retirement account.

One final point: As you get older, you should gradually scale back the risk of your portfolio if you're getting closer to using the money for spending. You can do that by moving some of your money into the less-aggressive Life Strategy fund of funds at Vanguard.

Q: I am invested heavily in technology-stock funds. What would be the best way to diversify? I am 67 years old and have ample income from a pension and Social Security.

My funds are Fidelity Asset Manager ($16,000), Fidelity Equity Income ($39,000), Emerging Growth ($12,000), PBHG Strategic Small Company ($26,000), Janus Mercury ($8,000) and PBHG Large Cap ($7,000).

A: While some of your funds do have large helpings of technology stocks, your largest fund holdings at Fidelity are reasonably well-diversified funds and not funds that I would classify as "technology-stock funds."

Your fund portfolio is pretty aggressive for someone at your station of life. However, since you said that you have enough monthly income, I'm assuming that you're not expecting to need the money in your funds anytime soon. Your current allocation would make sense if you don't expect to spend the bulk of this mutual fund money in your retirement and you expect mostly to pass this money on to your heirs.

Otherwise, I'd suggest investing more in bond funds to get your bond portion up to at least 40 percent. I'd also like to see you have at least one-third of your stocks in foreign stock funds.

Before you consider selling any of your current funds, you should understand the tax consequences of doing so, especially if the funds have appreciated significantly since you bought them. I would give preference to selling funds that are heavily technology (or growth-stock) focused and which are underperforming their peers (I think some of your PBHG funds fall into that category).

Eric Tyson's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate Inc.
