Practicing for Race Across America

Roger Mankus and Nick Gerlich get in some practice for the annual Race Across America (RAAM) later this month. The Canyon pair hopes to go from Irvine, Calif., to Savannah, Ga., in 9-10 days. The race will come through Hereford later this month.

Cyclists prepare for longgg race

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

If you thought those guys who came through Hereford a couple of weeks ago in the Great American Race were crazy, just wait 'til you hear about the Race Across America.

There are no antiques in this race. This race is for the young. It's for those who thrive on no sleep.

There will be nothing but a few billion up-and-down leg movements as they bicycle their way across the United States as fast as they can go.

Team Double Trouble from Canyon will be one of the tandem teams in the race, which will come through Hereford later this month.

Nick Gerlich and Roger Mankus will be riding their very special bicycle-built-for-two from Irvine, Calif., on July 25. About nine days later, they hope to be in Savannah, Georgia.

Along the way, they'll stop for almost nothing.

"We plan to ride for about 44 hours before we sleep for a couple of hours," said Roger.

They won't have to stop to eat. They have special backpacks that have a very specially formulated liquid food for sustenance. There is a hose going from the backpack to their lips.

"We have to practice that, too," said Nick. "You have to get your body in shape to live off this for 10 days."

Gerlich is an assistant professor of marketing at West Texas State University in Canyon (his wife, Becky, teaches at Hereford High School). During their summers, the couple rides constantly—they took their honeymoon on a 53-day bicycle tour from Los Angeles to Boston. Nick has ridden in exotic places from Cochise County, Arizona, to (no kidding) Tinbutt, Okla.

Parker studying for career

Nursing student learns valuable lessons at clinic

Paige Parker admits that when she left her home in Crowley, outside Fort Worth, to come to Hereford to gain a little practical nursing experience, she was a little naive.

Parker, who is pursuing a nursing degree at West Texas State University, is working this summer at South Plains Health Provider Organization's clinic in Hereford. A program to give students practical experience brought Parker to Hereford; other students were sent to other clinics in the region.

She wants to work in labor and delivery when she finishes school (Paige plans to get her master's before going to work) and has worked mostly with women in pre-natal care.

"It's very scary with all of the young girls we see in here," she said. "We try to stress the importance of pre-natal care very early. We sure need to do this with these girls."

She had done some work in private hospitals in the Fort Worth area. This summer in Hereford, she's in a different atmosphere at the clinic.

"There is a different dedication here," she said. "You have to be dedicated to the people you work with because there is much more teamwork involved here than what I went through in the big hospitals."

Office moving from courthouse

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Habits of long-standing must be broken soon by anyone doing business with the Deaf Smith County tax assessor-collector's office.

As busy an office as there is in the county courthouse, the tax assessor-collector registers all vehicles in Deaf Smith County, selling new license plates and re-registering cars and trucks.

But, beginning on July 20 citizens having business with the office will go to a new location, 136 E. Third, diagonally across the intersection of W. Third and Sampson from the courthouse.

Work on new quarters for Margaret Del Toro and her staff is nearly finished. Files and furniture will be moved from the Deaf Smith County courthouse during this week. After the close of business Friday, the job will be finished.

"We'll move files and other things we don't need every day during the week," said Del Toro. "Then, next Friday, everything else will be moved across the street."

Because of the need for more offices for the county's business, commissioners decided several months ago to rent space from the appraisal district and re-locate the tax assessor-collector's office.

The 1,300 square feet in the new office is comparable to the area in the courthouse being vacated.

Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine will move down the hall from her present location. In addition to offices for her and her staff, a courtroom will be available for her.

Remaining area will be allocated by commissioners to offices needing more space.

The courthouse maintenance supervisor, Dean Hacker, built counters and work stations in the new tax assessor-collector's quarters and erected a partition with a counter between deputies and the public area.

Employed in the office are Alison Esqueda, Teresa Garth and Jeannine Zimmerman.

Already divided into offices the new quarters also have storage areas for files that must be kept, said Mrs. Del Toro.

Shelving that was in the offices has been tailored by Hacker to suit the files of the tax office. He also supervised painting of the shelving and walls. Floor tile was installed in the waiting area for better maintenance. Most floor area is covered with carpet.

When Commissioners' Court decided to solve courthouse space problems by leasing the offices from the appraisal district, Hacker estimated that the remodeling project in the courthouse and the new office would cost about $2,000.

(See OFFICE, Page 3A)

First box moved

Moving from the Deaf Smith County courthouse to new quarters is on the agenda this week for the tax assessor-collector, Margaret Del Toro. The new quarters at 136 E. Third have been spruced up by Dean Hacker, courthouse maintenance supervisor who built the work stations and partition seen in photo. The office will open on July 20 in the new location.

DARE lessons continuing at summer camps

Hereford-area youngsters joined peers from Canyon last week at a DARE summer camp for junior high students at West Texas State University.

Two, two-day camps were held at the WT Activities Center. A joint graduation ceremony for students and parents was held at the end of the week, and a drug-free dance followed.

DARE is an intensive study on drug awareness, resistance and education. Some of the topics taught are:

- Drugs and the law.
- How to recognize and resist negative peer pressure.
- How to overcome stress and boredom without the use of drugs.
- Eight ways to say no.

It wasn't all work for the 128 Hereford students and 60 Canyon students: they also spent time bowling, swimming and playing volleyball. Snacks and drinks were provided by Affiliated Foods of Amarillo.

Hereford Independent School District paid the way for local students and provided bus transportation for all children. DARE is a cooperative effort between the Hereford Police Department and county schools, with officer Terry Brown leading the program. Brown teaches every sixth-grade class during the school year and visits upper and lower grades throughout the year. Brown is helping with a new DARE curriculum dealing with vandalism, violence and drug resistance for junior high and high school students.

Assisting Brown were Cpl Esreal Silva of Hereford; deputies Cathy Watson and Craig Allen of Randall County, and Officer Les Rogers of the Canyon Police Department.

Commissioners set two-part meeting

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will conduct a two-part meeting Monday. Beginning at 9 a.m., commissioners will go through an agenda including discussion of a new county road in Precinct 4, receiving a request from the county clerk to advertise for proposals for a computer system, discussion of commissioner precinct lines and hearing a report on the audit for the last fiscal year. An executive session also is scheduled on personnel.

An addition to the business of commissioners was made after the regular agenda was posted so another session is scheduled for 1:30 p.m., to consider hiring two employees for Precinct 1.

Chance for more storms

Saturday night, a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms, some may be severe with locally heavy rainfall mainly before midnight. Mostly cloudy with a low in the mid 60s. South wind 10 to 20 mph and gusty near thunderstorms.

Sunday, partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. High around 90. Southwest wind 15 to 20 mph and gusty.

The extended forecast for Monday through Wednesday: fair to partly cloudy with isolated to widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Lows in the 60s, highs in the upper 80s.

Saturday's low at KPAN was 63 after a high Friday of 90. KPAN recorded .33 of an inch of rain in the 24 hours ending at 7 a.m. Saturday.

Police investigate assault

Hereford police are investigating the aggravated assault of a woman in the 100 block of Clements on Friday night. Police said the woman was taken to Deaf Smith General Hospital for treatment and the case is being investigated.

Other reports Friday included theft of $200 worth of items in the 900 block of Sioux; domestic assault in the 900 block of Sioux; criminal mischief in the 100 block of Ave. H; burglary of a vehicle in the 200 block of Ave. H; domestic violence assault in the 400 block of Irving; assault in the 600 block of Irving; theft of tires and rims in the 200 block of Ranger; and domestic disturbance in the 100 block of Catalpa.

Police issued four tickets Friday.

Hereford volunteer firefighters were called to a grass fire at Summerfield.

Children's Enterprises opens here

Hereford office has been opened by a not-for-profit organization dedicated to providing services needed by children.

Maxine Westmoreland is in charge of the Hereford office of Children's Enterprises, Inc., which is based in Lubbock.

Currently, Children's Enterprises is seeking "host homes" for youngsters needing emergency care, said Westmoreland.

She pointed out that often families in crisis situations, such as illness or death, have no resources for child care. Purpose of the host home program is to provide that service.

Children's Enterprises works with the Texas Department of Human Service, providing contract services for children.

TDHS refers cases to the organization, said Westmoreland, but referrals also may be made by persons interested in welfare of children.

The Hereford case manager grew up in Amarillo where she was graduated from Palo Duro High School. She studied at Amarillo College, majoring in psychology, and received a bachelor's degree in social work from West Texas State University.

Funding for Children's Enterprises is through grants from public and private sources. Offices also are located in Lubbock, Amarillo, Plainview and Wichita Falls.

Assistance in child nutrition planning, locating services for special needs and child abuse prevention counseling are among services offered by the organization.

Directs new program

Maxine Westmoreland is case manager in Hereford for Children's Enterprises, Inc., a not-for-profit organization that recently established an office in Hereford.

YMCA drive is underway

Volunteers are continuing the Hereford YMCA's annual sustaining campaign this week, with a goal of $30,000 by August 3.

Funds raised during the campaign will be used to help supplement youth programs and scholarships.

Dave Hopper and Nena Veazey will lead the Major Division, and Cindy Simons and Linda Fitzgerald will head the Teams Division.

Each year, the Hereford YMCA has over 1,500 youngsters participating in programs. Many are able to participate only through YMCA scholarships made possible by volunteer dollars raised during the campaign. As long as the campaign is successful, no one is turned away from YMCA youth programs.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the campaign may call the Hereford YMCA at 364-6990.

Man pleads guilty to sex charge

A guilty plea in 222nd District Court Thursday drew a probation prison term for Martin Moreno, 29, charged with indecency with a child.

Judge David Wesley Gulley sentenced Moreno to 10 years in Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutional division, probation for 10 years. A fine of $1,500 also was levied against the defendant.

Poll considers two questions

How do you feel about violent television programming?

You can let us know in this week's Hereford Brand poll.

This week's national issue: "Do you feel violent television programming is contributing to violence in our homes and streets?"

All you have to do is answer yes or no by calling 1-900-407-8550, extension 13. Each call to that number is 99 cents. You will be charged on your telephone bill. Persons under 18 must have parental permission before calling. The results of the national poll will be forwarded to the three major networks.

We still want to know, for our local topic, if you think the City of Hereford should establish a curfew for persons under 18 to be off the streets.

If you would like to vote on that topic, call 1-900-407-9550, extension 13. Just follow the instructions.

WWII pilots visit England bases

EDITOR'S NOTE - U.S. airmen who attacked Adolf Hitler's Fortress Europe in World War II from fields in England are revisiting the bases this summer to mark the 50th anniversary of the first bombing missions in 1942. For many it is the first time they have returned since to Britain since the war and for all it's a time for reminiscing.

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

WENDLING, England (AP) - Bomber pilot Harry White Jr. will never forget that harrowing day just before D-Day when he bailed out of his B-24 Liberator and wound up facing the shotgun of a member of the British Home Guard.

"I bailed out five miles from here when we couldn't make it all the way back after being hit by flak over France," recalls the World War II pilot from Sacramento, Calif.

"When I got my parachute off that day, a Home Guard pointed a shotgun at me. He didn't know right away I was an American. It was two days before D-Day (June 6, 1944) but we still expected the Germans to invade."

White was in a group of 50 former members of the U.S. Army 8th Air Force who returned to their old B-24 base at Wendling in June.

Staying in King's Lynn, a port city 18 miles to the west, they looked over their old airfield, Station 118, and swapped war stories. They attended a memorial service honoring those who died and rode buses to old haunts along narrow lanes between high hedges.

Still lean but gray at 71, White spent 28 years, three months and 18 days in the Air Force, serving in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, and wasn't harmed.

Returning to England for the first time since the war, he was bent and leaning on a stick because of a broken hip suffered in an auto accident.

During 18 missions, he lost seven of the other nine crewmen in his B-24. A tail gunner was killed, two waist gunners were lost after bailing out when anti-aircraft fire smashed into the fuselage, a top turret gunner was wounded, the bombardier and navigator were lost at sea after bailing out when the plane iced up and got into a spin, and a co-pilot was hurt bailing out.

"I was scared all the time," White recalls.

The veterans keep in touch as members of the 392nd Bomb Group Memorial Association based in Winter Park, Fla.

The group flew 285 combat missions, dropped 17,392 tons of bombs and shot down 238 enemy aircraft confirmed. It lost 184 planes and suffered 1,553 men killed, missing or wounded.

"I flew the war backward," says John Rosenberg, 68, from Brookfield, Wis. "I was a tail gunner so I could see what we flew through but not what we were flying into."

Rosenberg, 68, showed a picture of his late wife, Gloria Macdonald. They met at the Cricklewood Palais, a north London dance hall.

"It took me three and a half years to get her over to the New World and we married on Christmas Eve 1948," he says.

The first seven U.S. Army Air Force officers arrived in Britain in February 1942, two months after Pearl Harbor, and the first U.S. raid was on July 4, 1942.

In a joint daylight raid with the Royal Air Force that day, American crews flew six twin-engine A-20 Boston bombers against German airfields in Holland and lost two of them. By the war's end, more than half a million Air Force men and women had been in England.

More than 50,000 were killed and many of them rest in British soil.

The young flyers wore smart uniforms, were generous with their money, handed out gum and said "Howdy" to anyone they didn't know.

"It was the most exciting part of my life," says Denis Duffield, 63, who was a teen-age grocery store clerk when the Americans came.

The main American bombers in England were four-engine B-17 Flying Fortresses and B-24 Liberators. The Americans bombed by day while the Royal Air Force in their less-heavily armored Halifaxes, Stirlings and Lancasters attacked by night.

As the war went on, powerful fighter planes arrived to escort the American

Clinton's stock up in poll

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bill Clinton has made major progress in improving his image and has drawn strength from his choice of running mate Albert Gore, a poll says.

The Times Mirror poll released Friday found 59 percent with a favorable impression of Clinton and 34 percent unfavorable. That marked a sharp improvement from 46 percent favorable and 47 unfavorable for Clinton in Times Mirror's June survey.

Independent Ross Perot has lost ground because of Republican attacks and increased media scrutiny, and President Bush's approval rating was just 32 percent, the poll found.

It was the first time since February that Clinton's negative rating was below the 40 percent level and underscored the Arkansas governor's strides in repairing the image problem that has dogged him.

The poll showed Clinton being helped by putting Gore on the ticket. The Tennessee senator was viewed as an excellent or good choice by 40 percent, fair by 22 percent and poor by 5 percent. Opinions of Clinton were more favorable after the Gore selection than before.

Perot stood at 48 percent favorable and 35 percent unfavorable in the poll. That represented a sharp rise in the unfavorable column from 26 percent in the June survey.

Last month, Bush's ratings stood at 45 percent favorable while Vice President Dan Quayle's standing was an even less healthy 29 percent favorable.

Democrats outscored Republicans 35 percent to 24 percent on which party could better solve the nation's top problems.

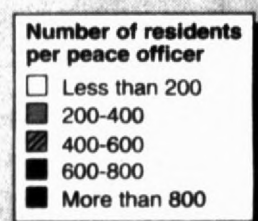

The poll results were based on a nationally representative sample of 1,053 adults interviewed Wednesday and Thursday. The margin of error was 3 percentage points.

Ratio of peace officers varies by county

Stonewall County had only one law officer for 2,013 citizens in February 1992, more residents per officer than any other county in Texas. The statewide average is one sheriff's deputy or police officer per 391 people.

Figures do not include Department of Public Safety or other officers of statewide agencies.

Candidates chasing votes at NAACP

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

Democrat Bill Clinton is promising a "vigorous campaign for the minority vote" with running mate Albert Gore but is facing some early competition from the wild card in the 1992 presidential race, undeclared independent candidate Ross Perot.

The new teammates on the Democratic ticket were heading to Nashville today for a joint appearance before the NAACP, after a rally in Sen. Gore's hometown of Carthage, Tenn., to celebrate his new alliance with the Arkansas governor.

"I believe I have what it takes to help bring about the change that's needed," Gore said as he arrived home Friday after two days in Little Rock, sounding the change theme of the baby boomer Democratic ticket.

Perot was visiting with the NAACP first, with an eye on cutting into a traditional Democratic constituency that Clinton is counting on in November.

"There is a great deal of curiosity about (Perot), especially in the black community," said Benjamin Hooks, retiring executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

As Clinton and Perot campaigned, President Bush took a break from work and the campaign. Just back from six days in Europe for two summits, Bush was at his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

But he left little doubt he was thinking ahead to the fall race, predicting a "dog-eat-dog" three-way fight and an economic upswing that will boost his standing.

Still, in an interview with the MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour before heading home, Bush said: "It's a little early to know what the mood of the country will be come election time."

The series of Tennessee events stole a bit of the spotlight from New York, where final preparations were under way for next week's Democratic National Convention. Clinton was heading to the convention city tonight to prepare for his celebration.

The Arkansas governor's selection of Gore as his vice presidential running mate has been widely praised among Democrats. But some liberals, led by Jesse Jackson, have raised concerns that the tandem of Southern moderates will take minority voters and other elements of the traditional Democratic coalition for granted.

Clinton took time Friday during a joint news conference with Gore to dispute such allegations.

"No. No, I intend to make a vigorous campaign for the minority vote," Clinton said. "We're going after everybody's vote. ... I'm not taking a single vote for granted."

Gore then stepped up to promote his own civil rights credentials.

"I have had what I believe is a 100 percent record throughout my career of advancing the cause of civil rights and fighting against discrimination of any kind," Gore said.

Perot's visit to the NAACP comes a day after the latest of a series of rallies celebrating the success of his efforts to get on state ballots, this time in Michigan.

As he has in his prior rallies, Perot applauded his volunteers' work and steered clear of any specific policy proposals.

"You have created pure panic in both parties, which is healthy for the country," Perot said in Lansing. "And all over Washington, the mood is, 'The barbarians are at the gate.'"

OFFICE

An additional sum was required for electrical outlets. And a separate connection to Southwestern Public Service was installed.

Commissioners accepted a two-year lease from the appraisal district for the offices. Rental is $250 per month.

Becoming accustomed to the new location will take some time for customers of the tax office. And, the staff will need some time to get used to their new situation, said Mrs. Del Toro.

Such conveniences as a copy machine, postage meter and fax are centrally located in the courthouse for all county offices, she observed.

"We'll just get used to going across the street," said the tax assessor-collector.

Parking will be available in front of the building or behind it.

Hacker said accessibility for disabled persons is being arranged.

"The city has agreed to mark off two parking places on Sampson, and make a cut in the sidewalk for wheelchairs," Hacker said.

Some time probably will pass before Deaf Smith County auto taxpayers are accustomed to the new location, but Mrs. Del Toro believes that in the long run citizens will like the convenience of the new office.

Gerlich said he was never much interested in other sports, but found his outlet in cycling. He's ridden as much as 512 miles in 24 hours, going from Amarillo into central Nebraska non-stop last year.

Mankus, who has taken leave of his job with Homeland in Amarillo, rode single in last year's RAAM. He's gone cross-country twice and has ridden in several two-day ultramarathons.

Why?

"We love it," Mankus said. "It sounds trite, but because it's there."

The race will come through Hereford beginning some time around July 28 and going through July 31. RAAM has passed through Hereford the last two summers, but this will be the first time Hereford will host a time stop. The race path will come into Hereford from the south. The route will go from Hereford to Canyon, down to Wayside and through Palo Duro Canyon.

"That's going to be a shock for some of those guys," said Mankus. "It's going to be so flat and then boom, here are all these hills and everything. It should be quite a challenge, especially since it's almost exactly halfway through the race."

Halfway will be at Shamrock as the path meanders from Wayside back up to Claude and Panhandle, up through Pampa, Miami and Canadian, then through Wheeler and Childress.

Traveling with the team will be a support crew that will include Rex Burke of Hereford, another cycling enthusiast. The team has to pay an entry fee of $1,250; gasoline for two vans; $1,000 for the liquid diet; $1,500 for crew food; and other costs that total $5,780.

The team will carry four front and four rear wheels for the specially-built bike; eight tires and 25 tubes; purified drinking water; extra headlights and taillights; changes of clothes; a case of water bottles; and spare parts including chains, spokes and pedals.

Erdmann faces new charge

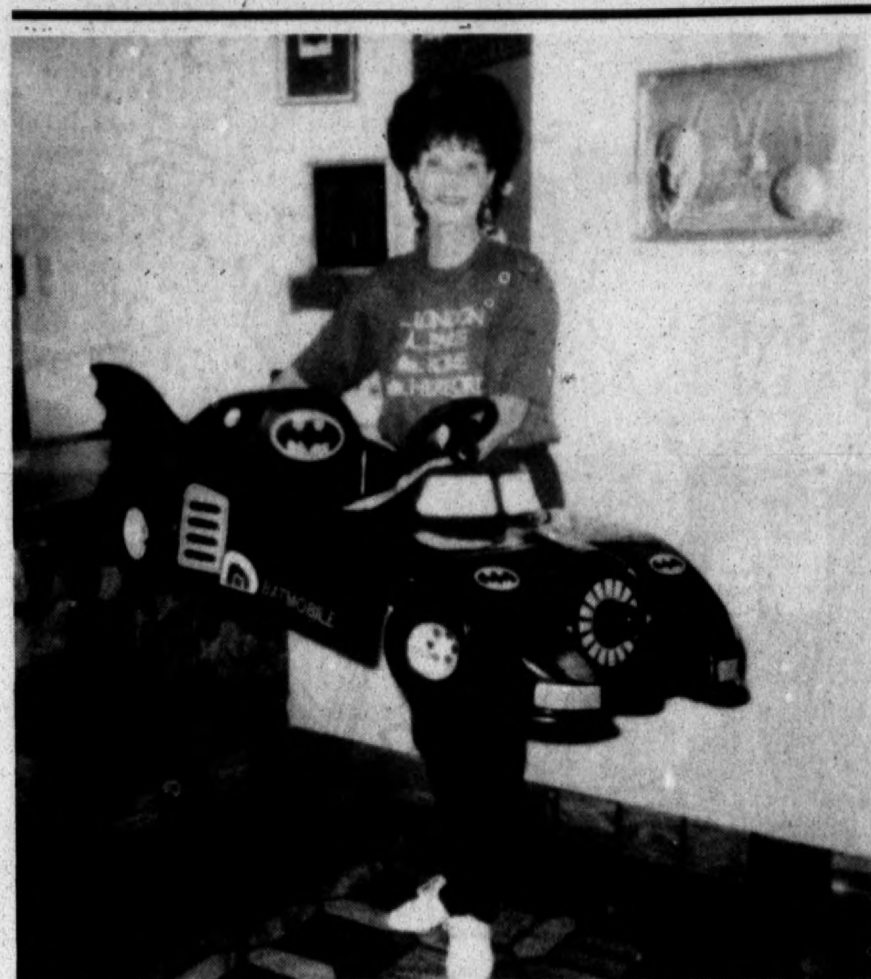

LUBBOCK (AP) - Pathologist Ralph Erdmann has been indicted on charges of tampering with a government record and theft in connection with an autopsy he claimed to have performed on a Dickens County hit-and-run victim, sources told The Associated Press Friday.

Erdmann concluded the victim died last October of a broken neck, but Dallas pathologist Linda Norton re-examined the body and found the boy died of a head injury.

Norton says Erdmann never opened the skull of the victim after claiming he did so in his autopsy.

A source close to the investigation told the AP the indictments will be unsealed upon Erdmann's arrest.

Erdmann was indicted in February by a Hockley County grand jury for falsifying an autopsy and has since been investigated by a court of inquiry.

PURCHASING AN OLDER HOME

If you want more house for your dollar you may want to consider looking at an older home. There are many reasons for considering an older home. For one thing there are more older homes than new ones. For every new house that's built there are some 45 existing homes already on the market. Many older homes especially those built in the fifties and sixties offer more abundant space than some of the new homes being built. If you have a growing family, an older home offers more room and may cost less to purchase. Most of the older homes are in established well developed neighborhoods. There is no waiting for streets to be paved, sewers to be connected or schools to be built. Everything is in place so there is no need to worry about these things. We have a large selection of older homes at this time and we would be happy to show the differences in established homes versus new homes.

DSGH progress

Deaf Smith General Hospital has made some major changes the past year in its operations and management. These changes have resulted in steady growth and expanded services.

Much of the credit goes to the Deaf Smith County Hospital board of directors and new DSGH administrator Ron Rives. It began almost a year ago when the hospital board, under the leadership of Raymond Schroeder, decided to become an affiliate of Lubbock Methodist Hospital. Then, Rives became the new administrator and set out to create a new, progressive attitude towards health care. The new board president, John Perrin, has been a guiding force in community public relations and marketing for the hospital.

Some of the changes have been: a spectacular growth in home health care, the addition of two new physicians and a new commitment to physician recruitment, the addition of new equipment and technology, a growth in emergency services, the establishment of ValuCare, and the sponsoring of a Health Fair.

The hospital administration sensed the growing need for home health care and gave more attention to supporting those who can be cared for at home with just a little medical help. The Deaf Smith Home Health Service has recorded a three-fold increase in home visits. The result has been a successful department that gives the community a service it needs and supports.

Two new physicians have joined the community. Drs. Palani Subra Mani (G.P. and surgeon) and Ranga Subra Mani, a pediatrician, are a husband-and-wife team who have been a welcome addition. Also, Dik S. Cheung, MD, a board-certified ophthalmologist, returned to Hereford. He, along with new equipment purchased by the hospital, made cataract surgery a local option for area residents.

The board appointed a physician recruitment and retention task force, including local community leaders to help in interviewing and visiting with prospective doctors. Five physicians have already visited the community and the hospital is negotiating with three doctors in residency training for practicing here in the future.

Sophisticated medical procedures are also growing in usage, such as the laparoscopic cholecystectomy. Recently acquired equipment makes this new gall bladder operation quicker and less painful, with an easier recovery for the patient. Other new technology includes a critical care monitoring system. In obstetrics, two new birthing beds were added. And throughout the hospital, a general facelift, with bright colors and simple renovations, have enhanced the appearance of the facility. The business office is being restructured so that service will be faster and more efficient.

EMS has grown this past year, too. A third ambulance was added and Hereford EMS now has three fulltime employees and seven part-time employees. DSGH established its ValuCare program in May. It provides Medicare-eligible members with hospital and business discounts, health screenings, educational programs, and insurance consultations.

The hospital board has recognized the need to inform the public and seek its support in expanding services. With the addition of a few new doctors, it appears many of the hospital district's goals are well within reach.

"Our ability to serve the community is increasing," says Rives, "and we're seeing a resulting increase in support from the community. But this is only the beginning...our growth will continue as we seek new physicians and new equipment to maintain and enhance the quality of medical services available for our area."

Just when you thought it was long gone, Texas Rural Legal Aid is up to its old tricks.

You remember TRLA, don't you? TRLA has brought the demise of the vegetable industry as it used to be in the Hereford-Dimmitt-Muleshoe-Plainview area. If you don't remember, just take a drive down New York St. some day. That eyesore of long-empty buildings is TRLA's legacy.

TRLA brought you gerrymandering. Remember those fraudulent lessons in government, when they said gerrymandering was unconstitutional?

Wait! We must not forget--TRLA doesn't have to abide by the same laws as everyone else. Of course gerrymandering is legal. And who cares if the city or county or whatever governmental entity has to pay out big bucks to its own attorney and TRLA. It's "free" money, right? After all, their money is "free" from the Legal Services Corporation.

Now, TRLA is out to wreck the South Plains Health Provider Organization.

Congress may not be able to get us "free" health care. Even Ross Perot may not be able to get us free health care. But TRLA is going to try, and it has a pretty good record in court.

TRLA is after South Plains Health Provider Organization. Because money does grow on trees, TRLA feels SPHPO should dispense medications to patients either free or on a sliding scale.

You must remember that SPHPO is not a "free" clinic. Fees are charged all patients depending on their income. Some pay more than others, some pay less, but everybody whose income is above the poverty level has to pay something.

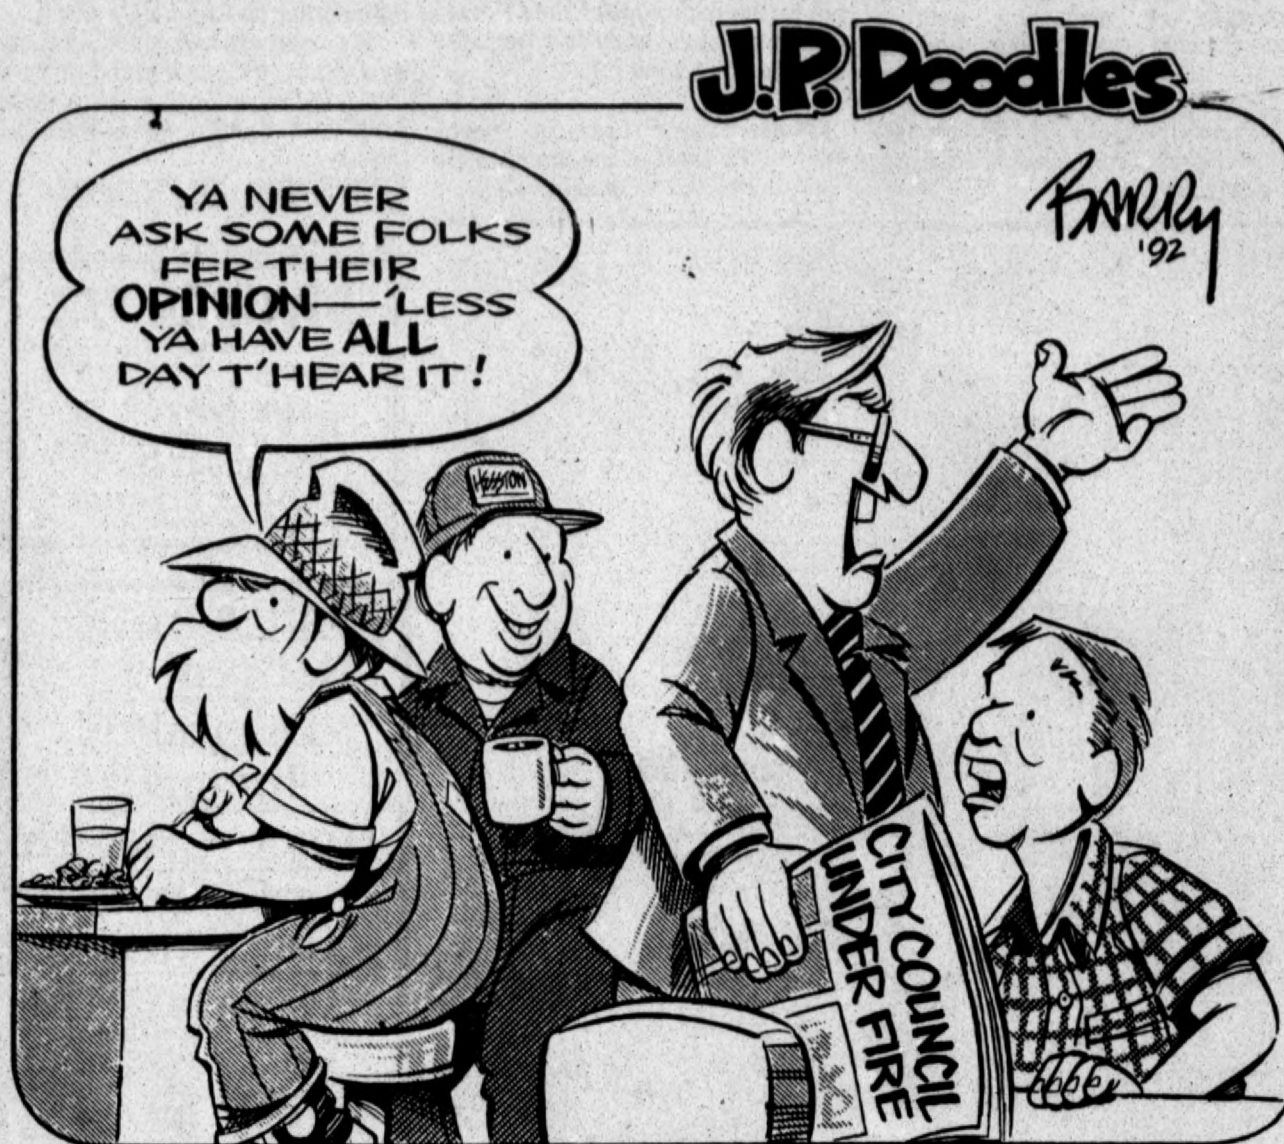

SPHPO does almost nothing "free." About as close as you get to free is with free samples given by doctors. They given them out just like my doctor gives them out occasionally. I don't go to the doctor's office expecting to get free medicine.

TRLA, however, wants SPHPO to get into the pharmacy business at the Hereford clinic and other facilities. If you've bought any medicine at all, you know medicine is an expensive proposition at best.

If TRLA wins this battle, there will be no more SPHPO. Then we will definitely have a medical crisis in this community and many other communities in this region.

TRLA has done a few good things. It's brought abuses to the fore. It has also been abusive at times. TRLA has been consistent in one thing in its time: trying to reap the harvests of those money trees that must be growing somewhere.

An AP News Analysis

Clinton's turn to surge

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) - Bill Clinton is opening off Broadway this week in a Democratic show that ought to sharply boost his standing in midsummer polls - until President Bush and Ross Perot stage their rival productions.

That's the way the national political conventions usually work. Gaining ground, and often the lead, in the public opinion polls is customary for the man who's just been nominated and celebrated. Holding it is another matter.

Hence the celebrated 17-point Democratic lead over Bush four years ago, a margin that proved fragile if not illusory.

National political conventions are obsolete as decision-making forums, with delegates routinely ratifying the White House nominations awarded by voters in the presidential primaries. Clinton effectively locked up his nomination nearly four months ago, and made his winning delegate majority a certainty on June 2.

That's been the pattern for 20 years, in both parties.

So the national conventions have become political pageants with only periodic skirmishes. Even the vice presidential choices are now being made in advance. The last equivalents of the smoke-filled room were the convention hotel suites where newly nominated candidates used to parley for hours with aides and party leaders on the choice of a running mate.

No more. Clinton chose Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee early Thursday, and announced it in Little Rock. The last two Democratic nominees did it the same way, naming their running mates in home town settings the week before the convention.

George Bush named Dan Quayle in New Orleans just before Republicans convened there in 1988. Bush's own vice presidential nomination was the last suspenseful convention exercise; Ronald Reagan made an extraordinary midnight appearance at the Republican convention in Detroit to name him to the ticket, to quell the speculative tumult produced by an unlikely flirtation with former President Gerald R. Ford.

But that was the exception. Predictability is the rule. Nevertheless, the national conventions still serve as marker events, debuts of a sort, even though the nominees have been running for months if not years before getting there. At convention time, they take on new roles, reintroduce themselves to voters who may just be starting to pay attention.

That's why independent Ross Perot, who has no party and no plans to create one, is said to be planning a convention equivalent, a sort of prolonged rally to introduce his running mate and talk about issues, probably sometime after the Republican convention renominates Bush on Aug. 19.

With the Democratic convention opening Monday at Madison Square Garden, Ronald Brown, the party chairman, called it "a way to help define ourselves, to say who we are and what we stand for...to project and profile our nominee."

But this year, for the first time in 40 years, television coverage on the broadcast networks will be limited to as little as an hour a night.

Gavel to gavel convention television began in 1952 when - for the last time - both parties had intense convention contests for their nominations. While coverage had been pruned as ratings slipped, it remained the dominant prime time convention-week fare until this year. This time, there will be fulltime coverage on C-Span, and extensive coverage on PBS and CNN.

Clinton and the Democrats will get across-the-dial television for the climax of their show, the Thursday night speech in which he'll keynote his fall campaign.

His ratings won't be long in coming. Prior nominees have emerged from their conventions with surges in the public opinion polls. Walter Mondale, the landslide loser in 1984, briefly caught up with Reagan in the polls just after his convention.

After the Democratic convention in 1988, the polls gave Michael Dukakis his biggest edge over Bush. The margin slipped quickly, and after the Republicans held their convention, the surveys gave Bush the lead he held.

The latest poll on the current field shows a statistical dead heat, with the edge to Perot. An NBC News-Wall Street Journal survey completed on Tuesday put Perot at 33 percent, Bush 31, Clinton 28, with a 3 point margin of error.

But more than 60 percent said they were not strongly committed to their current preference.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says if you want to see a short summer, borrow some money that's due before Christmas.

The quickest way to learn how to do it yourself is to criticize the way someone else is doing it.

By the time you read the next few paragraphs, America's national debt will have increased about $1 million. These terrifying facts were compiled and published by Frosty Troy, editor of the Oklahoma Observer:

Each minute $874,000 is added to the national debt; each hour $52.7 million. By the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30, America will have a national debt of $4,037 trillion. It will take 20 percent of all federal revenue to pay interest on the debt this year.

How much is a trillion? If you opened a business on the day Christ was born and lost $1 million a day, your losses wouldn't total a trillion yet!

Troy concluded with these words by Thomas Jefferson: "The question whether one generation has the right to bind another by the deficit it imposes is a question of such consequences as to place it among the fundamental principles of any government. We should consider ourselves unauthorized to saddle posterity with our debts, and morally bound to pay them ourselves."

If you visit New York City, the trip is not complete without a stop at the Cowgirl Hall of Fame Restaurant. One of our readers just returned from the Big Apple and brought us a souvenir menu from the Cowgirl. He reports his group got the royal treatment when he told them he was from Hereford.

The menu includes barbecued chicken and spare ribs, chicken-fried steak, fried catfish, fajitas, "Texas-size" Cokes (32 ounces), hamburgers, barbecue beef on a bun, and chili. He also brought us a copy of an article from The New York Times which had a "review" on the Cowgirl Restaurant.

The restaurant is decorated with Western memorabilia on loan from the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Hereford, with which the restaurant is affiliated. It is located in the Greenwich Village area at 519 Hudson St. However, on our trip there for the opening, we discovered our taxi driver didn't know much about street numbers--he went by intersections. So, the restaurant is located on Hudson at 10th Street.

THE VOICE OF BUSINESS

DISCOURAGING FOREIGN SALES

by Dr. Richard L. Leshner, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON--A major deterrent to U.S. exports, and a contributing factor to our continuing trade deficit, is the tax on personal income earned by Americans working abroad.

Foreign sales are won grudgingly, usually after prolonged personal contact with potential customers. To sell in Japan, Germany or Korea, a savvy firm will send top flight people there to extol their advantages over the competition, gauge the subtleties of the local market, advise the home office of unexpected requirements and otherwise be on hand to resolve misunderstandings.

Other exporting nations understand the critical importance of a seasoned corps of executives well-versed in the languages and customs of foreign lands. They know there are extra expenses attendant to living abroad, and that executives working overseas generally have to pay income taxes to the host countries. Thus, most exporters--Korea, Canada, Japan, France, Germany, Sweden, Italy and Britain--impose no tax on personal income earned overseas.

However, the United States excludes only the first $70,000 of a foreign-based employee's foreign income from taxation. As a result, many U.S. companies, especially smaller ones, can't afford to post people abroad. In desperation, some retain foreign nationals to handle foreign sales. This not only destroys job opportunities for Americans, but also conveys a message that we are not fully committed to foreign markets.

Even when U.S. firms maintain foreign staffs, they tend to keep them small, which means they rely upon older, more seasoned workers. This poses problems for the future when the older hands retire, and there are no experienced younger workers to take their places.

The implications of this unhappy trend cannot be overstated. We are part of a world marketplace, and our economic future is closely tied to foreign sales. Each American working overseas generates approximately $720,000 in taxable corporate revenues annually from export sales for U.S. firms, creating more than a dozen jobs and increasing tax revenues at home. Every $1 billion in U.S. exports supports at least 22,800 American jobs. And for every 1 percent drop in the number of Americans working overseas, there is a consequent drop of 0.5 to 1 percent in U.S. export revenues.

Congress should repeal the tax on personal income earned abroad. As the world marketplace becomes more intertwined and interdependent, the ill effects of the unwise foreign income tax become ever more conspicuous.

Clayton residents save historic Eklund

EDITOR'S NOTE - As its 100th birthday approached, it looked like the old Eklund Hotel and Saloon was doomed to be gutted and boarded up. That's when the townspeople banded together and raised enough money to buy it and keep it open. Not only that, but they brought in a big-city chef to run the restaurant.

By ROBERT HOLGUIN
Associated Press Writer
CLAYTON, N.M. (AP) - It's the biggest anachronism in a whole downtown that looks like it's trapped in time.

The historic Eklund Hotel and Saloon, with its turn-of-the-century architecture, solid rock walls and extravagant furnishings, persists as the centerpiece of this rustic ranching town tucked in the northeast corner of New Mexico.

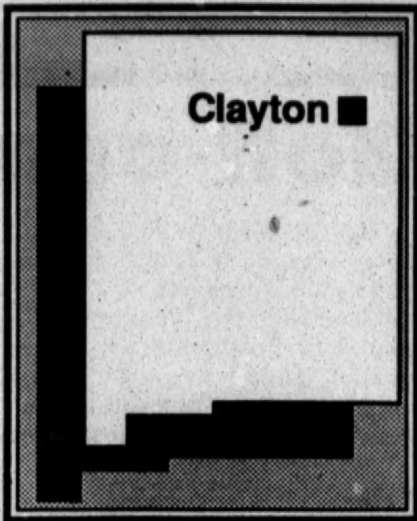

For many of the 3,000 or so local residents, however, the Eklund is more than a just a curious building that traps the attention of tourists. To them, it represents the achievement of a community that banded together to save part of its heritage.

The Eklund, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary this month, has had at least four different owners since its original incarnation in 1892. For the last several years, it has been a popular restaurant and saloon for both townspeople and the tourist trade.

Earlier this year, when the Eklund went up for sale again, many residents feared out-of-town investors were planning to swoop into Clayton and strip the Eklund of its antiques, artwork and valuable liquor license for export to a bigger town.

"The last thing we wanted was to have one of the most important parts of Clayton cleaned out and then have everything trucked out of here," says Nick Payton, editor of Clayton's weekly newspaper. "We decided that we weren't going to let that happen."

Payton, who was born and raised in Clayton, voiced his concerns about the Eklund to area residents and eventually formed an association of 17 investors. Together they pooled and borrowed enough money for a down payment and purchased the Eklund in March.

"This place is our heritage," Payton says. "Nobody wanted to lose this place because once it's gone, it's gone forever."

He wouldn't say how much the association paid for the Eklund but says many investors, including himself, had to dig deep into their bankbooks.

"We wanted this place so bad we staked our savings on it," he says. "Believe me, if we wouldn't have bought it, the Eklund would've ended up boarded up and forgotten."

Payton says the possibility of getting a return on their investment is slim, but the association is doing everything it can to recapture the spirit of the once-regal establishment.

On busy nights, many investors come in and trade a menu for a washrag.

But the investors' first big step toward revitalization was luring a big-city restaurant manager to take over.

"I wasn't sure about moving here at first," says Mike Stanton, who managed restaurants in New Orleans and Dallas before arriving in Clayton. "But once I saw the Eklund, felt the history in these walls, I fell in love with the place right on the spot."

It's hard not to. The place screams with history: mysterious bullet holes dot the ceiling, elegant stained-glass windows adorn the doorway, and the heads of big game circle the dining rooms. There are even black-and-white photographs documenting the hanging of Black Jack Ketchum, an outlaw train robber who was captured and subsequently executed in downtown Clayton.

"It's a real classic environment," Stanton says. "Instead of fabrication, this is authentic aesthetic appeal."

Stanton says there's talk of reopening the upper two floors where the hotel rooms are located. It would take extensive reconstruction, he says, since each floor shared a community bathroom and light fixtures are almost nonexistent.

"There are 40 rooms up there now, but when we're done rebuilding, I'd say we end up with about 20 because of additions and size constraints," Stanton says. "But first we want to stabilize operations here at the restaurant and bar. The rooms will come later."

Stanton says that if the rooms are reconstructed and the Eklund is returned to its old glory as a bona fide hotel, restaurant and saloon, the residents who invested could quickly pay off the mortgage and even turn a profit.

"We're not even close to maximizing the potential of the Eklund," Stanton says. "This place is a gold mine waiting to be discovered."

The restaurant features New Mexican cuisine as well as steaks and other traditional dishes. Prices are moderate in comparison to other tourist attractions because Stanton says he doesn't intend to isolate the local folks.

"Tourists are used to higher prices and we could probably get away with raising them a bit," he says. "But then we'd be shutting out the people from here who love this place."

"The trade in here has always been 50 percent locals and 50 percent tourists and I think that's a pretty good arrangement."

Tourists who wander off U.S. 56 and into the Eklund are just as impressed as the hometown residents.

"This place is like something out of Young Guns (a Western movie)," says Art Daniels of Terre Haute, Ind., who stopped in for a beer on his way to Oklahoma. "I didn't think places like this still existed."

It continues to exist in Clayton because some residents refused to let it fade. And Payton, who says he plans to throw a birthday party for the Eklund sometime in mid-July, is proud at what he and his association accomplished.

"Rural America is dying because too many times we've depended on other people for help," Payton says. "We've got to learn to defend ourselves if rural life is going to continue."

ENGLAND

bombers: P-38 Lightnings, P-47 Thunderbolts and P-51 Mustangs.

The 8th was the largest air strike force ever committed to battle. At its peak it could dispatch 3,000 bombers and fighters in a single day's operations, putting more than 20,000 young men in the sky.

The noise of those engines flooded East Anglia, where most of the 126 U.S. airfields were located. The airfields are now almost all under pasture, crops or buildings.

Joe Landers, 74, from Malverne, N.Y., said he also flew backward because he was a B-24 navigator, sitting with his back to the nose and his face level with the pilot's feet.

"To bail out, the navigator had to jump on the nose wheel cover which was then supposed to open," he says. "But when we got hit by flak and I tried, the cover was frozen shut. Lucky for me because the plane was all right and we got back."

"There were three crews in a Quonset hut and twice we went out with all three and were the only ones back. When a new guy joined us we stood beside him for height and said, 'When you're shot down I can have your clothes.' It may sound callous but that's how it was."

"The day we bombed Berlin we were due over the target at 12:15. I switched on the BBC at 12 and it said the Americans were bombing Berlin. The flak was so thick you could have got out and walked on it."

Randell Mayer Jr. of New Orleans, who was a navigator, remembered it as "a big adventure, all a lark. I was 19. The shock was to find that it was dangerous and quite violent."

Ed Popek, 70, from Kansas City, Mo., who arrived in August 1944 and piloted B-24s on a full tour of 35 missions though April 1945, recalls that "when the flak hit us it sounded like gravel on a metal roof."

Popek's wife, Erma, adds, "I have heard pilots say the flak bursting in the sky looked beautiful."

Popek was late into the war and his bombing was mostly directed at railroad yards, bridges and factories in Germany.

"I'm glad I was here and I think of it with pride but I was scared then," he says. "I was so afraid that I was wringing wet under my flying suit, which was electrically heated. The planes didn't have heat."

The veterans attended a service at a memorial which has been tended by the villagers since October 1945.

A plaque on the granite obelisk honors "747 airmen who gave their lives and all who served with them at this base July 1943 - June 1945."

Lawrence Gilbert, 74, their last commanding officer and president of the association, told the veterans and villagers: "This memorial honors all the 6,000 men and women who served here from 1943 to 1945. We are confident that the incessant bombing carried by the Royal Air Force and the United States Army Air Force made the result of the war inevitable."

A few of the old, one-story airfield buildings remain at Wendling, dwarfed by a tractor store belonging to an agricultural machinery distributor, all on land of farmer Tom Scott.

Wheat, barley, and sugar beets flourish on the field today. In the distance, where the runway ended and the B-24s lifted off, turkeys are raised in long, low buildings.

"It seemed a long time ago until I got here, and then it didn't," says Jim Meyers, 73, from Phoenix, Ariz., who flew 28 bombing missions over France, Germany, Norway and Poland. As operations officer he scheduled men for missions and supervised their training.

"Scared? I had 13 straight months of total fear," he says. "I was scared of being shot in the backside so I had a sheet of iron under my seat. But the closest I came to being killed was when an Me-109 (German fighter) shot us up playing golf at Southampton. We were jumping from bunker to bunker. I didn't play golf again 'til I was 70."

AMY LISLE, KEITH SHOLLENBARGER

Engagement announced

Harry and Claudia Lisle of Amarillo announce the engagement of their daughter, Amy Jo, to Keith Shollenbarger, son of Joe and Jan Shollenbarger, also of Amarillo.

The couple plans to wed July 25 at Central Church of Christ in Amarillo.

The bride-elect is a junior majoring in communication disorders at Harding University in Searcy, Ark. She is a member of Ko Jo Social Club, the Student Speech and Hearing Association and Phi Eta Sigma.

The prospective bridegroom is a senior at Harding majoring in economics and plans to graduate in May 1993. He is a member of Sub T-16 Social Club.

Committee chairmen named during meeting

New committee chairmen were named when members of the Ladies Auxiliary to the VFW Post #4818 met recently in regular session with Betty Boggs, senior vice president, presiding.

Boggs and Essie Martin will serve as co-chairmen of the flowers committee; Marie Goheen, Voice of Democracy; Boggs, safety; Ruth Morris, legislative; Martin, Buddy Poppy; Valerie Artho, Americanism and Loyalty Day; Linda Maeder, community activities; Martin, telephone; Terry Rhyne, decorations; Erma Murphey and Doris Wilson, food; and Leone Baum, coffee for senior citizens.

Also, during the business session, Wilson installed Ruth Stethem as a three-year trustee and Anna Conklin, guard. Boggs announced that Maeder was in Dallas to be with her son during surgery.

Secret pals were revealed and new names were drawn for the coming year.

Following the regular business agenda, the meeting was closed per ritual. The next meeting will be 8 p.m. Aug. 3.

The meeting was preceded by a supper for auxiliary and VFW members. Members present were Boggs, Martha Bridges, Bob and Leone Baum, Conklin, Doris Coffin, Mildred Deyke, Marie and Tom Goheen, Erma Loving, Martin, Morris, Murphey, Rhyne, Kee Ruland, Earline Schneider, Sadie Shaw, Stethem, Wilson and Mabel and Earl Yocum.

Latest looks in eyewear

Keeping an eye on the latest fashions? Don't forget to take a look at what's new in eyewear. Classic elements are mixed with unique details and colors in the season's newest eyewear, says experts at the Vision Industry Council of America (VICA).

-Thinner, lighter lenses that allow those with strong prescriptions to have a wider range of frame options.

-For men, vibrant-colored metal and plastic frames in a wide range of styles and shapes, from "preppy" to rectangular.

-Contact lenses to correct astigmatism, bifocal contacts and tinted contacts.

Legion hears from students

Boys State and Girls State delegates were welcomed as special guests when members of the American Legion and its auxiliary met in joint session July 7 in the Post Home. Approximately 40 members and guests were present for the annual ice cream and cake social.

Troyce Hanna, Girls State chairman, introduced the Girls State delegates and their families. Welcomed as special guests were Sara Zinck, Emily Fuston and her family, and the junior counselor, Lindsay Radford and her family.

Individual reports were heard from the youths. Sara reported there were 23 other delegates from the Panhandle area present. She was among 584 girls participating and served as a member of the House of Representatives, Nationalist Party and was also elected county chairperson. She said, "The song 'God Bless the USA' became very special to me and I came away from Girls State with a great sense of American Pride."

Emily is a second generation Girls State delegate as her mother, Joan, was a delegate when she was a student at Haskell High School. Emily was a member of the Federalist Party and was elected song/spirit leader and mayor of her city. Debating a bill in the capitol in Austin was a highlight for her.

Lindsay was among 31 other junior counselors arriving in Sequin. She observed that there was much work and effort taken to prepare the schedules, cities and programs for Girls State. She said, "Being a delegate is more fun."

Roger Eades, Boys State chairman, introduced the Boys State delegates, Matthew Parker and Drew Radford and his family. Boys State had 956 present in Austin.

A spokesperson for the American Legion and its auxiliary said, "We are very proud to sponsor these four young people who are interested in our government and how it works."

Matthew was elected senator and helped work on a bill dealing with the death penalty. "Make It Happen" was the theme for the week and Matthew said, "What I learned cleared up a lot of political myths."

Drew reported of his enjoyable experience at Boys State and announced that he hopes to serve as a junior counselor next year. He was a member of the Nationalist Party and ran for county commissioner. He gave a speech before 160 people and took the Bar Exam where he missed only one question.

Special guest speakers for Boys State and Girls State included Gov. Ann Richards, Agriculture Commissioner Ricky Perry, a railroad commissioner, a West Point representative, and an Air Force veteran of the Vietnam War who was a prisoner of war.

MRS. GILBERT PEREZ
...nee Mari Valdez

Valdez-Perez vows exchanged here

Hereford residents, Mari Valdez and Gilbert Perez, were married in an afternoon ceremony Saturday, June 13, in St. Anthony's Catholic Church. Monsignor Orville Blum of the church officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Azael and Tina Valdez of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Linda Garcia of Hereford and Elias Perez Sr. of Edinburg.

Edna Valdez served her sister as maid of honor and Elias Perez Jr. was his brother's best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's cousin, Anita Saucedo of Weslaco, Lily Arce of Amarillo and Etelvina Acosta of El Paso.

Groomsmen were the groom's uncle, Joe David San Miguel, Russell Reyna, and Azael Valdez Jr., the bride's brother.

The bride's niece, Erica Lopez Valdez, daughter of Wendell and Terry Brice, was flower girl. Ring bearer was the groom's cousin, Michael San Miguel, son of Ruben and Cecilia San Miguel.

Vocalists were Raul Guerrero, Sister Anita De Luna and Sister Rachel Castillo. Accompaniment was provided by Raul Guerrero on the guitar and Sister Anita De Luna.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father. She wore a traditional bridal gown of white regalia featuring a portrait collar, a fitted bodice and elongated waistline, all adorned with pearls, jewels and pearl swirls. The back bodice was fashioned with a runner of pearl buttons and was centered with a bow and the cathedral-length train was attached to a full skirt.

The bridal veil, made by the bride's mother, was attached to a crown of white flowers and pearl sprays. She carried a cascade of white flowers accented with small red rosebuds. Her jewelry consisted of her mother's gold cross necklace and pearl earrings, and gold bracelets given by the bride's grandmother and aunt.

Lupe Cerda, the bride's aunt, made the flower girl's basket and the ring pillow. The bouquet was made by Sister Anita De Luna and Carmen M. De Luna.

Sister Anita De Luna, Emilia Saucedo and Mickey De Luna, the bride's aunts, served cake at the reception held in the Imperial Ballroom. Lupe Cerda assisted.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School and from West Texas State University in May with a BBA degree in business administration. She is employed by the Deaf Smith County Extension Service.

The groom, also a HHS graduate, is attending Amarillo College and plans to receive a drafting degree in May 1993. He is employed by Tri State Chemical.

Out of town guests included the bride's grandmother, Carmen De Luna of Weslaco; the groom's father, Elias Perez Sr. of Edinburg; the bride's aunt, Sister Anita De Luna of San Antonio; the bride's aunts and uncles, Mr. and Mrs. Moises De Luna of San Jose, Calif. and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Saucedo of Weslaco; the bride's uncle, Pedro De Luna of Weslaco; the groom's uncle, Daniel Perez of Pharr; the bride's sisters and brothers-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Nix of Borger and Mr. and Mrs. David Perez of Plainview; the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Romanos of Orange Grove; and the bride's aunt, Katy Pena of Orange Grove.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

This Thursday is the third one of the month and that means...FAMILY FILM NIGHT! This month's feature is the classic version of Pollyanna starring Hayley Mills and Jane Wyman, with Karl Malden (without his traveler's checks) in a supporting role. The movie is based on a book by Eleanor Howell Porter in which an orphaned daughter of missionaries comes to live with her iron-willed and image-conscious aunt. Pollyanna wins the hearts of the townspeople (she taught Norman Vincent Peale how to think positive!) only to lose heart herself in the face of great personal tragedy. This film classic is brought to you, as usual, by the Friends of the Library and costs you nothing. The movie is over two hours long, so we will begin promptly at 7:00 p.m. in the library basement. This is the last Family Film this season. We will start next season off with a bang with North Avenue Irregulars on September 17.

Speaking of Pollyanna, the young lady is actually the focus of a series of books by Porter and others. The library has most of them, and can obtain through inter-library loan those we don't.

After somewhat of a dry spell we've got more good books going out this week than I can tell you about. I almost hate to mention that we have Clive Cussler's Sahara, because there is already quite a waiting list for it. This unusual suspense novel has been on the best-seller list for a number of weeks and, judging by the interest here, will be as popular as any of Steel's or Clancy's.

Another one from the best-seller list, and one with a waiting list is The Way I See It by Patti Davis, the daughter of Ronald and Nancy Reagan. Personally, I'm always a little skeptical of celebrity biographies, especially those written by family members that promise to "set the record straight." Not that what Davis says isn't true - she's certainly in the position to know. But we could probably all write a book about our family's closet skeletons if we thought we could make a buck doing it. At least she admits that it's HER perspective. I couldn't help but think that the last line of the jacket notes was rather telling: "She (the author) lives in Southern California." That certainly gives her credibility.

I have it on good authority (my boss) that The Last Prince of Ireland is an absorbing book and should be read by those who like good historical fiction with lots of violence and little or no sex. Author Morgan Llywelyn recaptures the most tragic turning point in Irish history in this epic of the Celtic people and their struggle to survive. Rebecca swears that as she read of the winter march last week, she was shivering under the covers!

There is so much good non-fiction this week (regardless of what some you say about ANY non-fiction) that it's hard to know where to start. More Wealth Without Risk by Charles J. Given is another from the best-seller list. There's a new edition of The Way Of An Indian by Frederick J. Remington. Who Killed My Daughter is Lois Duncan's heart-wrenching story of her search for the truth behind her eighteen-year-old daughter's brutal death in Albuquerque. And Nick Tosches with another celebrity biography, Dino, presents the seamy side of Dean Martin.

In this humble reviewer's opinion, one of the best books going out this week is Interlude In Umbarger, not because of its literary quality or riveting story line, but because of its readability and local interest. Lots of words have been written about the Hereford POW camp in dissertations, articles and columns, but Donald Mace Williams, former WTSU professor and Amarillo Globe-News editor, adds a professional and personal touch that others (at least those I have read) have missed.

Some of the Friends of the Library have been very busy lately. I don't feel that right now is the time to spill the bean on the operation, but scuttlebutt has it that it's something to do with videos! We'll keep you posted. (Trivia question for the week: where does the term "scuttlebutt", meaning gossip, come from. Or, for you grammar nuts - from where does the term "scuttlebutt" come? And the answer is NOT that bird in The Little Mermaid!)

Get the most from day care

By the year 2000, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that more than 60 percent of all mothers will work outside the home, making day care a vital part of the lives of millions of American families.

Today, there are approximately 76,000 center-based day care facilities in the United States; 200,000 licensed family and group day care programs and over 1.75 million unlicensed family and group day care programs, according to the Child Care Action campaign. To help parents with all these choices, a public service program, called "Ask Dr. Day Care," has been developed to provide vital information on choosing day care and forming a partnership among parents, pediatricians and caregivers.

The program, sponsored by the makers of Lysol Brand Disinfectant Spray, includes the publication of a free brochure entitled, "Getting The Most Out of Day Care." This brochure covers topics such as how to select a day care facility and how to work with the caregiver and pediatrician in tracking the child's development.

The section on choosing a day care facility is particularly detailed. It includes a checklist of questions to ask caregivers and features to look for. Some of these are:

Programs make great headway for youths

Treating children with newly diagnosed cases of diabetes in an outpatient setting provides significant cost savings over traditional treatment methods, according to an article published in the July issue of Texas Medicine.

A study on the outpatient-focused program shows a significant decrease in hospitalizations and length of stay for diabetic patients, writes author Dr. Phillip D.K. Lee. He estimates this cuts a patient's bill by 30 percent per admission.

Lee is acting chief of Texas Children's Hospital Diabetes Care Center, he is also assistant professor, Department of Pediatrics, Baylor College of Medicine. Texas Medicine is the official news magazine of Texas Medical Association.

Several pediatric diabetes centers now are using an outpatient approach. These outpatient programs include transferring diabetic knowledge and management skills to children and their families within one or two days of diagnosis, Lee writes.

Outpatient treatment is different from a traditional program. During a traditional program children face five to 10 days of hospitalization, with management by the nursing staff. Knowledge and skills gradually are imparted to the family prior to

An outpatient program includes hospitalization only if necessary.

"The diabetes treatment program at Texas Children's Hospital has changed its focus to emphasize outpatient care over the past few years," Lee states. "A review of the program demonstrates that an outpatient-focused approach to new-onset diabetes is both cost-effective and beneficial for patient care."

treatment is monitored by endocrinologists and organized by diabetes nurse-educators. clinic social workers handle psychosocial concerns. In addition, continuously updated educational materials complement the program. See notes.

"No adverse patient-care effects have been noted," he writes.

The Texas Medical Association is a professional organization of more than 31,000 physician and medical student members. It is located in Austin and has 118 component county medical societies around the state. The Association represents 82 percent of the doctors of medicine licensed and residing in Texas and 96 percent of the state's allopath medical students.

TMA's goal is to improve the health of Texans through professional and personal development of its members.

Wash hair in evening to help reduce allergies

According to haircare experts, the best time to wash hair is at night. Pollutants and allergens trapped in hair from the day can transfer to sleeping pillows and can cause allergic reactions ranging from eye irritations, to skin rashes to congestion.

Thanks to advanced hair care products like Fermodyl Interactives a quick, yet super cleansing and conditioning regimen is possible. Over 40 years ago hair corrective molecules were developed by a

Belgium chemist that remains secret to this day

The unique molecules are available in Fermodyl Interactives products. Because it bonds itself to hair's structure the molecule generates results after just one use. Since the molecules work in the cortex -- the foundation -- of the hair shaft, hair actually can become stronger and therefore, stands-up to today's styles and styling techniques.

New members welcomed

Hereford Toastmasters recently inducted four new members. Rick Jackson, at left, presents membership pins to Dave Kimmel, Clint Savoini, Sharon Cramer and Brady Jones.

Wedding date set

Brenda Leigh Carroll and David Smalts, both of Hereford, plan to wed Sept. 5 in Avenue Baptist Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Derrill Carroll of 217 Ave. B. and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Smalts of 700 Cherokee.

Miss Carroll is a graduate of Hereford High School and is employed by First National Bank.

Smalts, also a HHS graduate, graduated from West Texas State University. He is employed by McCaslin Lumber Co.

Veterans' health benefits

A special set of rules applies to Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) outpatient care eligibility, say the experts at the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) VA. Shall furnish outpatient care as follows:

-For the treatment of a service connected disability.

-For the treatment of any condition of a service connected veteran who is in receipt of compensation at a rate of 50 percent or more.

-For an injury suffered by a veteran as the result of VA hospitalization.

-For a veteran in a VA-approved vocational rehabilitation program.

VA shall furnish outpatient care for any condition on an ambulatory care basis to eliminate the need for hospitalization; to expedite the outpatient treatment needed in preparation for hospitalization; or for short-term outpatient care for a condition for which a veteran was hospitalized to:

-any 30 percent or 40 percent service connected veteran.

For more information or assistance contact your VFW local service officer.

MR. AND MRS. ADOLFO DEL TORO

Couple wed June 26

Margaret Perez of Hereford and Adolfo Del Toro of Uvalde were united in marriage Friday evening, June 26, in St. Joseph's Catholic Church of Hereford.

Marcos Enriquez of Uvalde, deacon of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Suarez of Hereford and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Aurora Del Toro, also of Hereford.

Padrinos were Messrs. and Mmes. Jesus Cano, Mike Alonzo, Eusebio Flores and Reynaldo Del Toro.

The bride was presented in marriage by her son, Tony Perez.

The groom was escorted by his children, Yvette Gallegos of Waxahachie and Rolando Del Toro of Uvalde.

Herminia Ulibarri invited guests to register at the reception held in the Imperial Ballroom.

Francis Suarez and Sharon Allen served refreshments.

Following a wedding trip to Las Vegas, Nev., Mr. and Mrs. Del Toro are at home in Hereford.

Wedding guests represented Big Spring, Uvalde, Grand Prairie, Waxahachie, Hobbs, N.M., Del Rio, Edinburg, Muleshoe, Dumas, Amarillo, Adrian and Roswell, N.M.

Washington needs to know

There is a proposal moving through Congress that anyone who is concerned about owning a home needs to know about. It was intended to help more people get into homes but in reality could cause the government's housing program to go bankrupt. The agency involved is the Federal Housing Administration (FHA).

The FHA was created to help low- and moderate-income families buy houses with little money down. The maximum loan amount varies from area to area. A proposal quickly moving through Congress would re-target the FHA, allowing it to insure more expensive homes-up to 95% of the median sales price in any area. This could spell disaster for the FHA program and for the families who use it.

When a default occurs, the family loses their home and all the money they put into it. But all taxpayers also lose, because the home is backed with taxpayer's money. This means the American taxpayer may have to bail out the FHA as well as the savings and loan industry.

The proposed change means that in many areas, the government program could be used to help someone buy a $200,000 home. To qualify, that home buyer would have to earn $80,000 a year.

The economic value of the FHA fund is now a negative $2.7 billion as a direct result of increased home foreclosures. And according to housing industry statistics, home loans from $120,000 to $200,000 have a much greater chance of default than lower home loan amounts.

In addition, the new proposal would encourage families to buy more expensive houses that they may not really be able to afford. Those concerned about this situation can call or write our legislators. They were elected to represent our views.

To contact your representatives on any issue, write to the U.S. Senate, Washington, DC 20510 and the U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC 20515.

Fabric worth checking out

A traditional American fabric is featured in one of the year's best fashion looks - checked gingham.

Real gingham for both casual and career wear are seen with rather fancy price tags from some top design talents. But they also can be found at very affordable prices in good investment items like separates and dresses.

Available in both the traditional 100 percent cotton and easy-care, cotton-rich polyester blends, gingham can be especially sharp looking in crisp navy or black with white or classic red and white. Some of the season's prettiest gingham are in fresh summer flower tones of pinks, blues, greens and violets.

lived in Hereford for 24 years. Their five children will be hosting the reception. They include Darlene Stovall of Hereford, Elaine Parker of New Caney, Glen Stovall of Las Vegas, Nev., Wayne Stovall of Amarillo and Melvin Stovall of Fritch. The couple also has 13 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

How to help fight diseases

Health experts have known for years that an adequate intake of vitamins is essential for overall good health, says Mary Helen Gunkler, registered dietitian and nutritionist. Vitamins have played a role in virtually eliminating nutritional deficiency diseases, such as scurvy, in the U.S. Today science is going beyond deficiency diseases to identify what elements of the diet may provide additional, far-reaching health benefits.

Recent scientific studies suggest that vitamins are not only important in maintaining good health but also may play a role in reducing the risk of certain cancers and heart disease. Certain vitamins, particularly vitamins C, E and beta carotene, may help prevent cancer by trapping free radical molecules that might harm fragile cell membranes.

These vitamins, often referred to as antioxidants, may protect against heart disease and help maintain healthy eye tissues. An important outcome of the research on these and other nutrients will be identifying whether the nutrient alone or the food source of the nutrient provides the benefit.

Most health experts agree that a balanced, varied diet rich in fruits, vegetables and grains, especially whole grains, is an important step towards good health.

You may want to discuss this ongoing research with your physician and, certainly consult with a dietitian before taking vitamin pills.

Henry Wallace, Vice President of the United States from 1941 to 1945 was also an expert on plant culture who developed a successful hybrid seed corn.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

COWS, CUSTOMERS AND CULLS

(Part I of a three-part series)

"For more than 18 years, independent businessman, Bill Siebenborn has kept records. Production Unit No. 469 produced 28,000 pounds last year. Old No. 414 tipped the production scales at 24,000 pounds.

Siebenborn doesn't really enjoy record keeping, but he knows that without accurate records he cannot improve overall production rates consistently. His records show that he has increased productivity by more than 58 percent since he began.

Siebenborn owns and operates a 70 cow dairy farm in the rolling hills of North Missouri. He began milking on his own in 1974 after purchasing a herd that was producing well above the state average. Not content with just being above average, Siebenborn has worked hard at surviving in a declining industry. "In 1981, there were more than 100 active dairy farmers in this area," he said. "Now there are fewer than 40."

Constant Improvement

What is the key to Siebenborn's longevity? "Constant improvement," he said. "We have had to get better every year. We've used the DHIA's (Dairy Herd Improvement Association) record keeping system since we began. It allows us to measure the productivity of every cow in our herd individually. We identify unprofitable producers and work them out of our operation."

As I thought about Siebenborn's success, it became apparent that we can apply the principles to all businesses. Success is dependent on constant improvement, good records and culling out unprofitable business.

That is how management guru, W. Edwards Deming instructed the Japanese. He taught them to strive for improvement. To look for better ways to manufacture, market and service each product. To increase quality and improve every day in some small way.

For Siebenborn, the improvement comes largely by culling his herd. Because of his very accurate record keeping, he can eliminate the profitable producers. They take a trip to the sale barn. He breeds the top producers to bulls with strong performance records in their descend line. The result is new production units with positive genes to become even better producers.

Culling Customers

Most businessmen and women would agree that it is good to have more business. Many folks interpret more business as more customers. However, having more customers doesn't always mean more profits. Some customers are unprofitable.

Just like a cow that milks well below the average of the herd, some customers aren't worth keeping. That may sound a little strange in a slow business economy when most experts are railing away at keeping customers at any cost. However, I will stick by the opinion that some customers aren't worth the trouble.

Please allow me to make a mixed analogy with cows and customers. Low-profit customers eat as much hay as top producers. Low profit customers take as long to milk as any other. Low profit customers require as much record keeping, management time and used alfalfa removal as do your best customers. The message is simple: Every venture can benefit from culling out unprofitable business. Particularly if you replace the culls with true cash cows.

In Siebenborn's dairy operation, all cows cost about the same to keep. This is probably true in your business as well. Most customers take about the same amount of care and feeding. So let's identify the good customers and send the others to our competitors.

How do you do that? How can you tell whether or not a customer is profitable? How do you get rid of the time wasting, the abusing, and the demanding "nothing is ever right" customer?

In the next two weeks we will share some techniques for measuring, identifying and culling unprofitable business. Don't miss Cows, Customers and Culls Parts II & III.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Recently, I had a pelvic and a Pap test. The doctor said I had a cystocele and rectocele. He said on a scale of 4, I was a 2. I do not sleep, but if I'm on my feet a lot, or do heavy lifting, I feel a small bulge out of the vulva. I'm 71 years old, my blood pressure is 130/80, and I feel good. I walk about a mile or more each day.

Does this always mean surgery? Can it go into cancer? I've had two children and did receiving at a supermarket for over 25 years. The doctor said a lot of women have this condition. Can you give me any information on this?

DEAR READER: They are both really ruptures (hernias). The rectum is against the back wall of the vagina and the bladder is against the front wall. When the front wall is weakened or torn, the bladder can rupture through into the vaginal vault. It also drops in the process, which may cause urinary symptoms. This is the cystocele. When the back wall weakens and the rectum ruptures into the vaginal vault, it is a rectocele. In more severe cases that may cause a problem with bowel movements, and it may be necessary to push it back into place.

Both of these conditions are common; usually childbirth, when the vaginal structures are stretched for vaginal delivery, is the main underlying cause. It is a mechanical problem, so the situation is commonly corrected by surgery, to reconstruct and reinforce the walls of the vagina and reposition the bladder. Whether this is necessary or not really depends on how severe the rupture is.

I have discussed both conditions in Special Report 106, Fibroids, Vaginal Hernias and Hysterectomies, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/106, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

You may find that a pessary that supports the uterus will also help, although they are more commonly used when the uterus itself has sagged.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband is 47 and just a week ago was diagnosed as having Whipple's disease. The symptoms were so gradual at first we thought it was part of getting old. But recently the symptoms worsened dramatically.

He hasn't weighed more than 145 for years because part of his stomach had to be removed. Also, his gallbladder, appendix and spleen are gone. Several months ago he noticed diminishing strength and arthritis set up in his hands. He began to complain of memory loss. Now he weighs 127 pounds and is still losing weight, although he eats as much as ever. His color is awful. He's weak and forgets every conversation. They have started him on an antibiotic called Bactrim DS. Can you tell us how long it should be before he can expect some improvement?

DEAR READER: Whipple's disease is a rare disorder, cause unknown. There is a lot of support for a bacterial origin, but that may not be the only factor, and the bacterial origin has never been proved. The good news is that it does respond to antibiotic therapy in most cases within a few weeks or months, although antibiotic treatment is recommended for one year.

The disease is usually characterized by diarrhea and abdominal pain. Bacteria have been identified in the intestinal wall. The weight loss and nutritional deficiencies are caused by the diarrhea and lack of absorption of food. Arthritis is one of the associated findings. While I can't tell you that Whipple's disease is the only thing your husband has, he is being treated in the manner that Whipple's disease should be.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My daughter has been allergic to fresh seafood such as shrimp, crab and squid for about four years. Before that she loved such foods. Now any time she eats them, she has stomachaches and swelling of the lips. Can you explain why this happens? I understand that if we use spoiled food we may get allergic to it due to toxins. But dried seafood is OK for her. Some articles said there are ways to cure allergies, by using small amounts and progressively increasing it to let the body become accustomed to it. She tried this unsuccessfully.

DEAR READER: Unless one has an iodine sensitivity, such a reaction is likely from the type of protein in the seafood she is allergic to. It is not a reaction to toxins or spoiled food. Rather, the body forms antibodies to the specific protein involved. Then when the protein is ingested, the antibodies react with it, causing the allergic reaction. The specific antibody is probably in her digestive tract cells and in the cells in her lips. That is why these areas are involved. The protein may have been altered in the dry seafood she tolerates so there is no interaction between the protein and the antibody.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Birthday celebrated

Mirth Pilkinton of Amarillo celebrated her 90th birthday recently with a reception held in the home of her cousin, Costaline Lee (standing). Approximately 21 guests were present for the celebration. Family members, Missy Wilcox, Micki Baulch and Gladys Merritt, presented the honoree with an orchid corsage. Miss Pilkinton taught in Texas schools for 49 years.

There are about 315 species of parrots, about half of which are found in Central and South America.

In 1872, the U.S. Congress passed a bill to establish Yellowstone National Park, the world's first national park.

MIAMI (AP) - Another music store chain has joined the national boycott of rapper Ice-T's song "Cop Killer." The album "Body Count" will no longer be sold at Miami-based Spec's Music, the company said Thursday. The chain has 64 stores in Florida and Puerto Rico.

At least three other record chains have pulled the album amid protests from law enforcement organizations that the song glorifies the killing of police officers.

Ice-T's record company, Warner Bros. Records, has said it is committed to the free expression of its artists.

Quaint 1 1/2 story plan only 35 feet in width

Luxury Master Suite In A Small Plan

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

This plan can include three floors of finished livable space should you elect to finish rooms in the basement. Or, if you prefer, the plan is available without a basement.

A wide foyer is from the small but functional front porch. It leads to the great room and dining room or to the second floor. The great room, dining room, kitchen and breakfast room are across the entire width of the design and the front entry double garage is totally convenient to these areas.

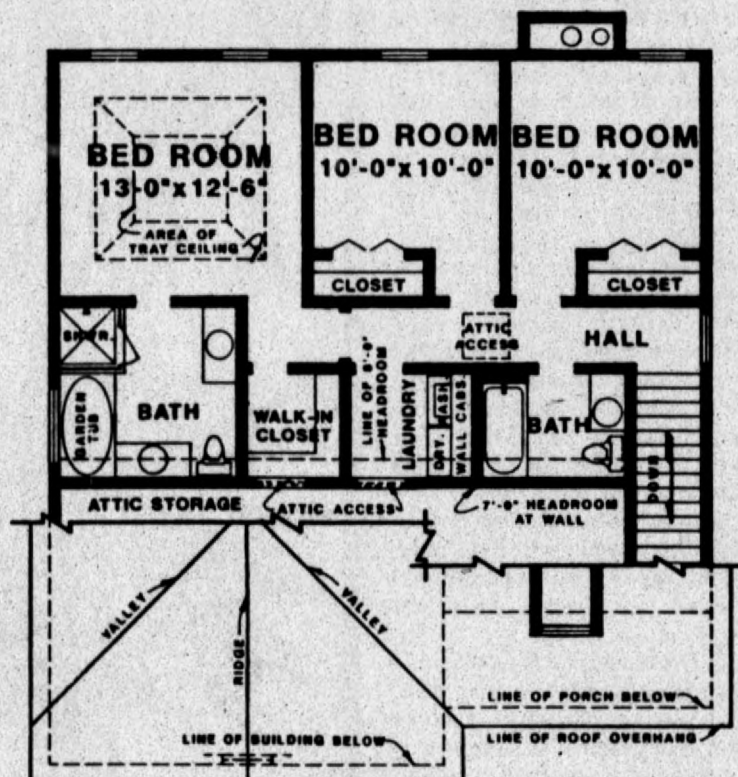

A stair to the basement is tucked away beneath the stair up for great space utilization and a half bath is shown for the first floor.

There are three bedrooms, a laundry and two full baths shown for the second floor. The master bedroom delights in the private luxury bath with separate shower and a garden tub and two lavatories. A tray ceiling is included in the bedroom area and the square room is appropriate for varied furniture arrangements. All bedrooms are supplied with excellent closet space and the separate laundry room is located on the second floor.

The cottage exterior is constructed of horizontal wood siding and enhanced by a wood rail porch, dormer window and ornate garage door.

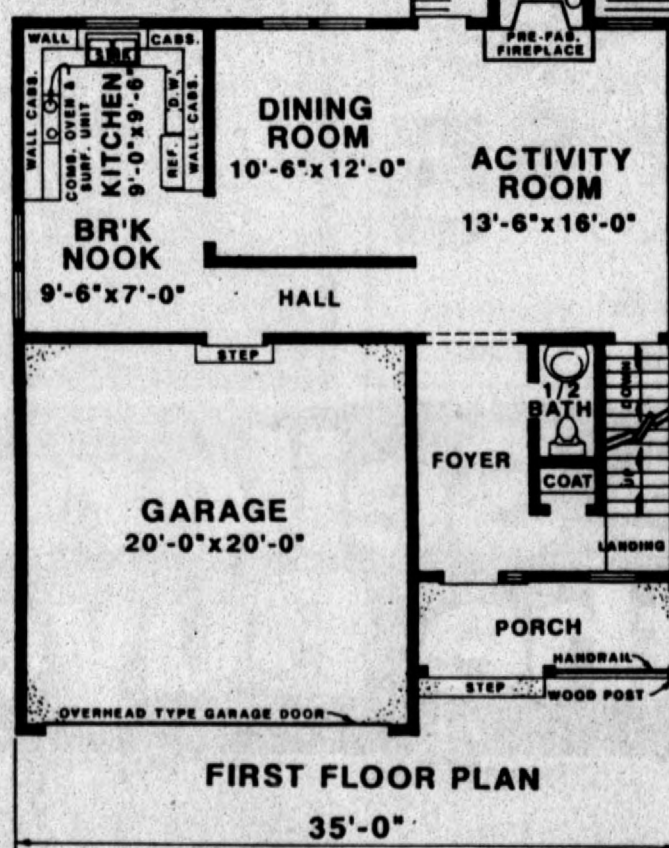

The plan is Number Z-513. It is a computer generated plan. The total square footage of heated area is 1,581. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

interference.

Financing, Down Payments, Price negotiations. Inspections. All obstacles that could block you from buying a home.

But one move could get you right through that red tape. A call to an experienced real estate agent.

An expert agent can coach you smoothly through the entire home buying process. From using the sophisticated multiple listing service to find the home that fits your needs and your budget. To tackling financing options. Setting up and monitoring inspections. Negotiating price. And even maneuvering you through closing.

So when you need a skilled teammate, get someone who really knows the housing field--a real estate agent.

Read The Hereford Brand for more information about qualified agents. Every day, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And on Sundays the housing section examines the latest market trends and home buying opportunities.

Getting the right coaching now could mean the difference between confusion and closing.

Farm and Ranch

Grass can be improved

Difference in grasslands that have not been managed for maximum benefit to the soil and the range may be seen in these photos.

At left is an over-grazed area, compared to one that has been properly grazed, right photo, with better management procedures.

Proper grazing improves rangeland

Protecting and conserving valuable rangelands requires practices that allow water infiltration, just as croplands need, reminds the Soil Conservation Service.

In some ways, rangeland is not that different from cropland. Water infiltration on rangeland can be affected by a hardpan or "crust" on or near the soil surface. If that condition is present, the amount of rainfall that actually enters the soil is reduced dramatically.

In dry regions of the state such as the Panhandle and Plains areas with tight soil types and sodbound grasses, water infiltration is very important. With an average rainfall of less than 20 inches per year, a loss of 50 percent to runoff would result in only 10 inches available to the grass in a year's time.

Reducing the amount of rainfall runoff by increasing the water infiltration can increase significantly the amount of grass produced for grazing.

On rangeland, where a crust is present, there are a few things that can be done to break down the crust. The best is to increase water infiltration through proper grazing. When grazed properly, there is an accumulation of organic matter or litter on the soil surface. The organic matter on the soil surface absorbs water very quickly and act as a wick to enable the water to enter the soil. It also helps keep a crust from forming.

Proper grazing can be defined as grazing at a rate that will maintain enough cover to protect the soil and

Applications being taken for ag loans

Emergency Loans for farmers, ranchers or agriculture operators are available through county offices of the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), James D. Webb, FmHA county supervisor, said today.

Webb asked that those who need farm credit as a result of adverse weather conditions make their needs known at the Farmers Home Administration office at 313 W. Third St. Hereford.

Applications for assistance in the disaster stricken counties will be accepted by Farmers Home until Feb. 22, 1993 for physical and production losses.

FmHA loans covering actual physical and production losses may be used to replace installations, equipment or buildings (including homes) lost through this disaster. Funds may be used to buy feed, seed, fertilizer, livestock or to meet interest and depreciation payments on current real estate and chattel debts.

"Funds can be used for essential operating and living costs," Webb said.

Applicants that certify that other credit is not available may receive loans covering actual losses at an interest rate of 4.5 percent and are scheduled for repayment as rapidly as feasible consistent with the applicant's ability to pay.

To be eligible for an emergency loan, an applicant must have suffered losses from the disaster.

maintain or improve the quantity and quality of the grass. In this area of Texas, it is recommended that only one-half (50 percent) of the grass be grazed off.

The first words heard after this advice often are "nobody can make a living on a ranch by grazing half of the grass produced per year." This isn't necessarily true because leaving half of the grass produced to build up the organic matter will improve water infiltration and, thereby, produce more grass with the additional water in the soil.

In this part of Texas, it may take a couple of years of proper grazing to build up adequate amounts of organic matter on a low producing pasture to show a significant increase in water infiltration.

In this case, the stocking rate should be reduced until the amount of grass produced allows a return to "normal" stocking.

Since a ranch will need a reduction in stocking rate until the pasture increases productivity, the rancher may want to start the process on a few pastures if it is not practical to decrease the stocking rate on the entire ranch at one time. This also will show a comparison between the pastures that are not properly grazed and those that are.

In a properly grazed pasture, the quantity of grass will increase along with the quality of the condition of the rangeland. With an increase in the quantity of grass, the grass will compete for water better than many of the annual forbs and even perennial plants.

A properly grazed pasture is also in better shape to help the rancher make it through a year of drought. As the old adage goes, "Grass makes grass."

Further information may be obtained at the Soil Conservation office, 315 W. Third in Hereford, telephone 364-6995.

'Quiet crisis' felt by families losing grip on livelihood

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., says the farm crisis of the 1990s is a "quiet crisis" being felt by families who are slowly losing their grip on their land and their livelihood.

"The financial squeeze facing many farm families is not the same type of crisis that we experienced in the early 1980s. Back then, excessive debt, spiraling costs and low prices converged at once to puncture agriculture's balloon of prosperity," Kerrey said.

This time around, it's "a quiet crisis, a crisis being felt personally by the individual farm families," he told the Agricultural Communicators Congress.

"To these families, their decline is as relentless as the hissing of air going out of a balloon. I see it every time one of those young farmers asks me: 'Should I stay in or get out? Why should I say in? What possible reason do I have to hope that things will get better?'" Kerrey said.

Kerrey said there is a "gnawing sense" among farm families, especially younger farmers and those with debt, that their operations and their way of life are no longer sustainable.

The senator said Agriculture Department figures show that 55 percent of all farm households experienced losses from their farming operations in 1990. Smaller farming operations were hit especially hard, he said.

Nearly 68 percent of farms with less than $50,000 had a loss on their farm operations in 1990. But almost one-third of the larger operations also had either losses or marginal income from farming.

"Perhaps it's not surprising then, that about 22 percent of all farm households have total income below the poverty line. That's more than twice the rate for all U.S. households," Kerrey said.

"My guess, if you looked behind the numbers and examined the 'have-nots,' you would find that their ranks are disproportionately comprised of the younger farmer and the heavily leveraged operator," he said.

Kerrey said the situation could easily worsen in the years ahead, because more than 20 percent of all farmers are age 65 and older and 24 percent are 55 to 64.

He said keeping farmers on their land involves addressing issues beyond price supports and farm programs, such as health insurance and telecommunications in rural areas.

Lights, camera, action: Democrats in New York

The Democratic National Convention begins on Monday in New York and so will the television coverage. In a rare move, NBC's Tom Brokaw (left) will join newsmen Jim Lehrer and Robert MacNeil in the PBS broadcast booth for nightly coverage. Brokaw will also anchor a one-hour nightly recap on NBC. The convention runs through Thursday.

Television coverage changes with the times

By Steven Alan McGaw

The Democratic National Convention, the next step toward the 1992 presidential election, begins on Monday, July 13, in New York City. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton is expected to be officially ratified as his party's nominee, but there are many other questions waiting to be answered.

"No. 1 is definitely, 'who's going to be the vice presidential candidate?,'" says Jacquelyn Floyd, a journalist assigned to cover the convention for The Dallas Morning News. Other issues, Floyd says, include outlining a comprehensible economic plan, how the campaign will appeal to women and young voters ("a crucial component") and uniting the sometimes-fractious Democratic party itself.

Asked who the key personalities of this convention are likely to be, Floyd mentions Mario Cuomo, Jesse Jackson, and California senatorial hopefuls Diane Feinstein and Barbara Boxer.

In all, about 15,000 media persons will attend the convention, but television viewers used to watching the Big Three networks may be surprised at the paucity of prime-time coverage. NBC will air a one-hour summary of convention activity each night, the rest of the time pooling its resources with those of PBS. The result is an impressive team of Robert MacNeil, Jim Lehrer and Tom Brokaw in the broadcast booth. While the peacock network is apparently downsizing its coverage, rivals CBS and ABC offer even less: one hour of prime-time coverage nightly with no second broadcast alternative. All three, of course, will be sure to collect armloads of sound bites for their nightly news shows.

Why the cutbacks? "Politics now is viewed as a bitter medicine," says Floyd. "In the '60s, it was our civic duty. The networks aren't buying that anymore, there are too many other options. If people don't want the medicine, they'll go somewhere else."

"Somewhere else" could, however, be cable. CNN, under a yearlong banner of "Democracy in Action," promises extensive reporting of the conventions and all election activities. Information junkies will be riveted to C-SPAN's customary gavel-to-gasp coverage.

CNBC will have representatives at both conventions, as well as its weekly series Money Politics: Campaign '92. The Monitor Channel will produce a spate of American Issues '92 specials in association with Harvard.

Lifetime calls its Women and Politics: A Lifetime Challenge an "election year public awareness program" about issues of particular concern to women. AMC is busily promoting voter registration.

One important new player in the field of election coverage is MTV. With its highly touted "Choose or Lose" campaign headed by reporter Tabitha Soren, the channel has embarked on a vigorous project to bring the election to younger voters. Becky Cain, national president of the League of Women Voters, praises the effort, saying, "Young people need to become more involved. They're the most under-represented group of voters."

Floyd agrees, adding, "They've not been very good about voting, but maybe part of the reason is that they don't feel like anybody is speaking to them."

SOAP TALK

'Y&R' fan tired of stale plots

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: What has happened to The Young and the Restless? It has been my favorite soap for so many years. I used to plan my day around it, in fact. My mother, who lives in Minnesota, and I used to call each other long distance and talk about the interesting and exciting things that happened on the soap, but Ma Bell is losing money on us this year.

It has become so boring, so inane, so lacking in story line, that I'm very close to giving it up altogether. The only story that was vaguely interesting was the one involving Sheila, but that dragged on forever.

In the past, there have always been at least a couple of interesting stories going on simultaneously. The stories would be fun to watch and would certainly get your attention. Did all the writers die? Please help save our show! —Sheila Prophet, San Rafael, Calif.

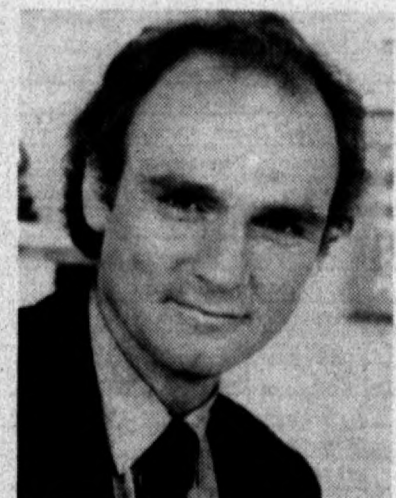

Dear Reader: I assure you the writers did not die, though I see how you might think that. Take heart; this summer will be full of surprises. Some story lines that are heating up include: the Victor and Nikki reconciliation (we knew these two could not stay apart for long); Olivia's pregnancy and the complication of having cancer; Dru will be involved in some crazy things; Paul, Lauren and Scott will have some funny and not-so-funny times in the near future; and the Victoria/Ryan/Nina love triangle could prove interesting.

Dear Candace: I enjoy The Bold and the Beautiful. Please give me information on the actress who portrays Felicia Forrester, the cutting-edge fashion designer. —Timothy Way, Earle, Ark.

Dear Reader: Colleen Dion was born in upstate New York and grew up in Chicago. Her first role was in the daytime drama Search for Tomorrow, after which she appeared on Loving for 18 months. She had parts in the feature films Fatal Charm and Lucas, and was cast in the role of Felicia Forrester on B&B in December 1989. Dion and her husband, whom she married after dating for only a couple of weeks, live in Los Angeles.

Send your comments to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009.

TRIVIA, ETC.

Identify movies' first Monster?

By Steven Alan McGaw

Questions:

1. True or False: Boris Karloff was the first actor to portray Frankenstein's Monster.

2. In 1942's The Fleet's In, the sailors enjoy their leave in what American city? (Bonus: This movie was a remake of a 1936 film and redone once more in 1951. Name both versions and the comedy team which starred in the '51 film.)

3. Julie Andrews made her film debut in what movie? (Bonus: Name the film in which Andrews was directed by Alfred Hitchcock and her co-star in the work.)

4. Identify the three performers who constitute the entire cast of 1959's The World, the Flesh and the Devil.

5. Who turned down the title role in Ben-Hur before Charlton Heston accepted the part?

Who's Dinky's fella?; music with a 'Mission'

By Taylor Michaels

Q: I'm a big fan of Winona Ryder, and I just saw Welcome Home, Roxy Carmichael. I was wondering, who is the guy who falls in love with her in this movie? Where can I write to him and her? —Kelly Windham, Gary, Texas.

A: Thomas Wilson Brown, who played wiggled-out surfer dude Gerald Howells to Winona's Dinky Bossetti, can be reached in care of Century Artists, Ltd., 9744 Wilshire Blvd. Suite 308, Beverly Hills, Calif., 90212. Write to Ryder just up the road in care of CAA, 9830 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif., 90212.

Q: This goes back a few years, but I would like to know the title of the spirited and moving theme music of the movie The Mission — the melody that is chanted by a mixed chorale as the opening title and credits are rolling. It sounds as if it could be from an old classical piece or opera, but I can't place

it. Where can I get the the soundtrack of this movie? —Noma Paige, Deer Lodge, Mont.

A: The title of the specific opening piece of which you write is "On Earth As It Is in Heaven," from the original musical score by Ennio Morricone.

For an obvious music buff like yourself, this name should ring some bells. Morricone became famous for his highly original and influential scores for director Sergio Leone's famed "spaghetti westerns," most of which starred the young Clint Eastwood. Morricone's compositions included the haunting music for The Good, the Bad and the Ugly. His brilliant musical touch has been in demand ever since.

The very first record store I called had it on tape, so I'm sure you can easily find it.

Q: Many years ago there was a sitcom starring Ida Lupino and Howard Duff. Could you tell me the name of the show? —C.E.P., Ironwood, Mich.

A: That show was Mr. Adams and Eve, a situation comedy that ran from Jan. 4, 1957, to Sept. 23, 1958. Duff and Lupino played wedded movie stars whose private life was a three-ring circus. Many of the domestic squabbles were written directly from reality, as Lupino and Duff were actually married during the show's short run.

Q: If possible, I would like the Chicago Bulls' fan-mail address. —LaKisha White, Brooksville, Miss.

A: Da address for Da Bulls is an increasingly hot topic among Let's Talk readers, including Amy Johnson of Paynesville, W. Va., the self-proclaimed "biggest fan" of No. 33, Scottie Pippen. (Sorry, Michael.) You may write the team members in care of Chicago Bulls, One Magnificent Mile, 960 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 1600, Chicago, Ill., 60611. Send your questions to Let's Talk, Features Dept., P.O. Box 961009, Fort Worth, Texas, 76161-1009. Please send no return envelopes; questions can be answered only within this column.

Comedy Challenge from 'Tonight'; 'Today' goes to Africa

Calling all comedians. NBC is ready to launch the Tonight Show With Jay Leno Comedy Challenge, a competition created exclusively for the network's 208 affiliates that is the first national TV promotion with no national sponsor. According to network executive Alan Cohen, "It's a great way to establish a mutually beneficial relationship with a local sponsor and create an added awareness for the station in its market."

Each affiliate will hold its own comedy contest and send a tape of the winning performance to The Tonight Show by the end of the year. The grand prize winner gets (what else?) a guest-shot on The Tonight Show and will join the ranks of such comedians as Jerry Seinfeld, Roseanne Arnold and Jay Leno himself who got their first big break on the late-night venue.

Casting its bread upon the waters, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has announced its support of eight major productions in the general program and drama categories. The projects in development include Reverse Angle, a one-hour program on racial fear in America; In the Mix, a weekly news and information series for teens; and Strike, a series based on the 1988 strike of the New York Daily News.

Jay Leno

Morning will begin in another time zone for watchers of NBC's Today in November. The morning news staple is set for six live broadcasts from Africa beginning Friday, Nov. 13. From three locations in Zimbabwe, Today will report on the people, politics and problems of the entire continent. To minimize some of the complex logistical difficulties, anchor Bryant Gumbel will go to Africa ahead of time (during Today's pre-emption by the Olympics) with five crews to tape portions of the footage to be used in November.

TIME OUT

Baseball's past and present on TV

By Dan Rice

Looks like a fine week to be a baseball fan with a television set.

On Sunday, July 12, ESPN's Sunday Night Baseball goes live under the lights for Philadelphia at San Diego.

On Monday, July 13, The Discovery Channel revisits the Last of America's Classic Ballparks. This program takes a retrospective look at the early days of the sport with a profile of 19th-century major league ballparks still standing. Over on ESPN, a same-day tape of the Upper Deck Old-Timers Game is followed by live coverage of Major League Baseball's 1992 All-Star Game, with Chris Berman as host of the festivities on the eve of the All-Star Game. And HBO debuts When It Was a Game II, the sequel to its acclaimed tribute to baseball's golden age. In addition to rare footage and interviews with Hall of Famers, celebrities such as Jason Robards contribute readings.

Tuesday, July 14, is the big day, however. First journey through baseball's illustrious past on The Discovery Channel with The Glory of Their Times. Written, produced and directed by Bud Greenspan, the official filmmaker of the Olympics, this documentary of America's pastime between the years of 1896 and 1916 recalls the heyday of diamond heroes such as Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner, Jim Thorpe and Babe Ruth. Immediately following on CBS is the All-Star Game, live from San Diego, Calif.

On Sunday, A&E begins the 10-part series The House of Eliot, from the creators of Upstairs, Downstairs. Stella Gonet (left) and Louise Lombard star as sisters who rise to the top of London's fashion industry in the 1920s.

'House of Eliot' a fine construction

British series translates well

By Dan Rice

Jean Marsh and Eileen Atkins, creators of the highly acclaimed British television series Upstairs, Downstairs, are once again entertaining American audiences. The 10-episode BBC production The House of Eliot debuts with a two-hour installment Sunday, July 12, on A&E.

Set in London in the early '20s, the story concerns the struggles of the Eliot sisters after the death of their doctor father. Thirty-year-old Beatrice (Stella Gonet), who practically raised her 18-year-old sister Evangeline (Louise Lombard) after their mother died, sees the event as a positive turning point. (Their strict and uncaring father had denied them both educations and the simplest of social activities.) Unfortunately, it turns out that their father had decimated his estate, leaving a lien on the family home and the unskilled daughters penniless. And in a posthumous insult to Beatrice, his will places Evangeline in the legal guardianship of their distant cousin, snobbish banker Arthur (Peter Birch).

Two characters enter the sisters' lives as catalysts: social activist Penelope Maddox (Francesca Folan) and her photographer brother Jack (Aden Gillett). Penelope brings friendship and a greater awareness of the human condition to Evangeline, while Jack hires Beatrice as his assistant and takes a romantic interest in Evangeline. Jack's upper-crust society contacts become a springboard for the sisters, who turn their innovative flair for clothing design into an independent career in the fashion industry.

The Eliot sisters build their house on a foundation of love and determination and furnish it with the new ideas of the postwar. Each revelation (such as that of their father's double life) only serves to strengthen their resolve. Inwardly and outwardly, the Eliots have arrived.

'Pinocchio' re-released, butchered on HBO

By Chris Carpenter

From the bait-and-switch school of programming comes a show designed to hoodwink subscription television's younger set. The bait is Pinocchio, the little Italian puppet boy, who returns to theaters this summer. But that's the Disney version.

The switch is another Pinocchio, a 52-episode animated series HBO has scheduled to air weekdays following Babar in the HBO For Kids morning block, beginning in July.

HBO's Pinocchio is the product of Japanese animator Tatsuo Yoshida, whose wildly uneven characters' only common trait is a penchant for ridiculing Pinocchio in howling fits of laughter.

The dialogue is erratic at best, and it's used for little else than explaining what the animation fails to show. "Cricket," who is apparently the cable version of Jiminy Cricket, is featured in an opening sequence, then reappears midway through the first episode to remind Pinocchio, "I am the ghost of the cricket who used to live with you!" Without this dopey line, the viewer wouldn't have known that the insect had died.

HBO publicity promises a Pinocchio with "cherished" moral themes. But in the first two episodes he's beaten into submission by a drunken puppeteer, repeatedly mocked and largely responsible for the drowning death of a schoolmate.

Noses are growing.

turns in another skilled performance and Tom Hanks is a sleazy delight as a former major league player fallen on hard times who is tapped to coach one of the teams. It is, however, Jon Lovits, from Saturday Night Live, who almost steals the movie as the seedy scout who scours the small towns of America to find players for the historic teams. Unfortunately, for he has some of the best lines, he exits the movie all too soon. And, a final note; it is pure enjoyment to watch the real women of "the summer of '43", now in their 60's, playing their hearts out as the credits roll at the end of the film. A very nice touch. Rated PG-13 for language.

'Pinocchio' re-released, butchered on HBO

By Chris Carpenter

From the bait-and-switch school of programming comes a show designed to hoodwink subscription television's younger set. The bait is Pinocchio, the little Italian puppet boy, who returns to theaters this summer. But that's the Disney version.

The switch is another Pinocchio, a 52-episode animated series HBO has scheduled to air weekdays following Babar in the HBO For Kids morning block, beginning in July.

HBO's Pinocchio is the product of Japanese animator Tatsuo Yoshida, whose wildly uneven characters' only common trait is a penchant for ridiculing Pinocchio in howling fits of laughter.

The dialogue is erratic at best, and it's used for little else than explaining what the animation fails to show. "Cricket," who is apparently the cable version of Jiminy Cricket, is featured in an opening sequence, then reappears midway through the first episode to remind Pinocchio, "I am the ghost of the cricket who used to live with you!" Without this dopey line, the viewer wouldn't have known that the insect had died.

HBO publicity promises a Pinocchio with "cherished" moral themes. But in the first two episodes he's beaten into submission by a drunken puppeteer, repeatedly mocked and largely responsible for the drowning death of a schoolmate.

Noses are growing.

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

A LEAGUE OF THEIR OWN: War II. However, the outline goes Starring Geena Davis, Tom Hanks, more like: Col. Ed Leland (Michael Lori Petty and Madonna.

This sentimental comedy is based Griffith) meet, hop into bed, and partly on fact. In 1943, with the men move on to Germany. There Linda off at war and the very existence of Cooks strudel for the Nazis while baseball threatened, The All-American performing acts of espionage in a way Girls Baseball League was formed. A that should have gotten her League of Their Own is a rather comic immediately shot.

look at the true story of these This soap opera comes complete with a bold escape, a shoot-out, and the

While the predictable plot has few hero dashing from danger with the twists, director Penny Marshall's heroine in his arms. The movie is, to good-natured, dreamy gait, fine honed say the least, silly fun in an dialogue and engaging performances extravagant fashion. Rent it. It's a by the ensemble cast make this flimsy hoot. Rated R for sex and brief film a true pleasure. Geena Davis turns in another skilled performance and Tom Hanks is a sleazy delight as a former major league player fallen on hard times who is tapped to coach one of the teams. It is, however, Jon Lovits, from Saturday Night Live, who almost steals the movie as the seedy scout who scours the small towns of America to find players for the historic teams. Unfortunately, for he has some of the best lines, he exits the movie all too soon. And, a final note; it is pure enjoyment to watch the real women of 'the summer of '43', now in their 60's, playing their hearts out as the credits roll at the end of the film. A very nice touch. Rated PG-13 for language.

Two and a Half Boxes
MARILYN MONROE
1926 - 1962

Marilyn Monroe died 30 years ago this summer. Last week Fox reissued eight of her movies and issued another four for the first time on tape. Many believe that Marilyn had real talent as well as sex appeal. While seven biographies have been written about her, it's her films that will secure her legacy.

ALL ABOUT EVE: (1950/Black & White) Starring Bette Davis. Marilyn's (brief) film debut. The behind-the-scenes world of the New York Theater is the subject of this classic. Would be a PG. Four Boxes

SHINING THROUGH: (1992) Starring Michael Douglas and Melanie Griffith. This is definitely one movie that will be better enjoyed at home because then you can laugh out loud at the absurdity of it all. This movie comes complete with a strong-jawed (rumored to be new plastic surgery) hero and cream-puff heroine. The story (actually based on a novel by Susan Isaacs) is about an American, involved with a German father and son, who goes through O.S.S. training to perform espionage during World

THE ASPHALT JUNGLE: (1952) Starring Cary Grant and featuring Marilyn. A romping screwball comedy about a genius chemist (Cary Grant) who invents a formula that delays the aging process. The film is a minor classic. Would be a G. Four Boxes
