Diplomatic front buzzing as summit nears

Reagan seeks conciliatory extension of arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in an unusually conciliatory pre-summit mood, is asking the Soviet Union to extend the current round of arms talks in Geneva to allow Moscow to consider a new U.S. proposal aimed at reducing nuclear weapons.

Reagan's announcement Thursday highlighted a day marked by repeated indications of U.S. interest in creating a positive climate for the president's Nov. 19-20 meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan's nationally televised statement was devoid of anti-Soviet polemics as was a supplementary statement on Soviet-American relations issued an hour later by Secretary of State George Shultz.

It also was a day when Reagan became the first president in 25 years to grant an interview to Soviet journalists.

"I appreciate very much the opportunity to speak, in a sense, to the people of your country," Reagan told the journalists. "I've always believed that a lot of the ills of the world would disappear if people talked more to each other."

Describing his new arms proposal, Reagan said the offer "builds upon the very concrete reductions proposals which our negotiators had tabled earlier as well as the recent Soviet counterproposal.

"It is my hope that our new proposal will enable both of our nations to start moving away from ever-larger arsenals of offensive forces."

In Geneva today, the new U.S. proposal was presented to the Soviets, who agreed to extend the current round of talks until next Thursday so negotiators can study it. Neither side released details of the proposal.

Reagan and his top advisers had been highly critical of the recent proposal by Gorbachev for a 50 percent cut in nuclear strategic missiles, contending it would give Moscow a huge lead in strategic, land-based systems. The Kremlin leader also has been demanding the United States scrap its proposed shield against nuclear missiles — the "Star Wars" program.

'Spy swap' may secure releases, newspaper says

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are negotiating the release of Soviet human rights activists Andrei Sakharov and dissident Anatoly Shcharansky in exchange for jailed Communist spies, a newspaper reported today.

The mass-circulation West German daily Bild, citing diplomatic sources in Moscow and Washington, said release of the two activists is being negotiated "under the strictest secrecy."

The newspaper did not identify its sources and the report could not be immediately confirmed. Bild's report was made public Thursday but the story was published in today's editions.

Bild said the swap could occur right after the Nov. 19-20 summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Sakharov, who is being kept in the closed city of Gorky, has said many times that he does not want to leave the Soviet Union.

Sakharov, winner of the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize, was banished to internal exile in Gorky in January 1980 after criticizing the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Shcharansky, a computer programmer and prominent dissident Soviet Jew, was sentenced in 1978 to three years in prison followed by 10 years in a labor camp for alleged "anti-Soviet" propaganda and "espionage."

To be included in the exchange would be two spies jailed in West Germany — Lothar Erwin Lutze of East Germany, and Yevgeni Semliakov of the Soviet Union.

In return, Moscow would free Shcharansky, Sakharov and up to 12 imprisoned agents of the United States, Britain and West Germany.

The daily said Gorbachev would "give a signal" for the dissident-spy trade if the summit with Reagan "comes off well." Bild reported negotiations were going on in Moscow, Washington and East Berlin, capital of East Germany.

The newspaper said participants in the talks included Francis Meehan, the U.S. ambassador to East Germany, and Wolfgang Vogel, an East German lawyer who has played a vital role in arranging major East-West spy exchanges in recent years.

Midland's average personal wealth likely to grow

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The average personal wealth of Midlanders will increase 57 percent over the next five years, according to a report by Sales and Marketing Management, a data magazine.

The magazine quoted findings from its 1985 Survey of Buying Power — Part II.

"Major gainers in the 25 wealthiest metro areas will include Midland, from 18th in 1985 to ninth in 1989," said the report. The figures compiled by the publication showed the average household income after taxes will be $62,191 in Midland — an increase of 57 percent from 1984 estimates.

Those predictions could very well prove to be true depending upon the unpredictable oil industry, according to a Midland Chamber of Commerce spokesman.

"They are a very reputable data magazine — one that we use for our own figures," said Steve Hardin. "I think the average income will increase, but I don't know if it will go that high."

Hardin said that Sales and Marketing Management may not "have a clear idea of how Midland's economy is based."

"Our economy is so closely tied to the oil industry that it's pretty difficult to predict exactly what will happen," he said.

Still, the data is good news for Midland, he indicated.

"Their figures give us a good feel for how we stand not only with other Texas cities but across the nation, as well," said Hardin. "They are a highly-respected publication."

According to the report, Americans in general will see a 55 percent increase in their average after-tax income in five years, with the effective buying income for the average household reaching $45,959 in 1989, compared with $29,640 for 1984.

"The increase is based on an annually compounded inflation rate of 4.3 percent over five years, compared to the 3.3 percent inflation rate projected a year ago for the 1984-88 period by the survey's compilers, Market Statistics, a division of Bill Communications," said the report. "The average household effective buying income (EBI) for the 316 metropolitan areas of the U.S. is expected to climb 55.6 percent to $48,788 from the 1984 U.S. median of $25,496. EBI in non-metro areas is expected to rise 52.3 percent to $36,603."

The report said that New York's Nassau-Suffolk area, the highest income metro for several years, will lose out to Connecticut's Bridgeport-Stamford-Norwalk-Danbury metro by 1989, when its average after-tax income per household will reach $72,725, an increase of 56 percent from 1984's EBI of $46,632.

MMH getting first hyperbaric chamber

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A new medical service — still undergoing research — will be offered at Midland Memorial Hospital, making it the only hospital in the area to have such equipment and trained personnel, according to a hospital spokesman.

"A Midlander who wishes to remain anonymous at this time is donating the funds to establish a Hyperbaric Oxygen center at MMH," said assistant director of public relations Lisa Ball. The nearest similar service is located in central Texas.

Acceptance of the donation was approved Thursday at the monthly Midland County Hospital District Trustees and Directors meetings.

"Hyperbaric Oxygen (HBO) therapy is the administration of 100 percent oxygen while the entire body is exposed to high pressure," said Ms. Ball. "One to two hours exposure in an HBO chamber produces dramatic changes in a patient's body due to the blood's carrying 20 times its normal saturation of oxygen."

"Between 1977 and 1984, the number of hyperbaric chambers used in the United States increased six-fold," she continued. "The process is still undergoing research but it has been established that HBO therapy is effective in treating osteroadonecrosis, carbon monoxide poisoning, gas gangrene, gas embolisms, crush injuries, problem wounds, cyanide poisoning, cerebral edema and several hard-to-treat bone, fungal and soft-tissue infections."

"While research is not conclusive," she added, "HBO therapy has also been used in treating multiple sclerosis, skin ulcers, senility and certain blood flow problems." Ms. Ball said the donation had to be presented to the Board of Directors for approval because "they are responsible for approving the acquisition of all major equipment."

"Upon approval, hospital personnel and the medical staff will make recommendations on setting up a full HBO service at MMH," she said.

MMH President Ray Branson discussed the new service at the earlier trustees meeting.

"We're really excited about this although it took awhile to decide if it was the thing to do," said Branson. "We've had one or two physicians who have expressed an interest in training for it." According to Branson, MMH will offer HBO as "a regional service."

Man to get six organs in landmark transplant

By MARCIA DUNN

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A disabled man who will have six abdominal organs replaced in a landmark transplant operation says he's nervous about the surgery but figures his current health "isn't worth anything."

The surgery, approved this week by the University of Pittsburgh, would replace the liver, stomach, large and small intestines, pancreas and spleen of Herb G. Seal, 36, of Pekin, Ind.

Surgeons have never simultaneously transplanted so many organs in an approved surgery, Presbyterian-University Hospital spokeswoman Ann Metzger said Thursday.

But two years ago, Dr. Thomas Starzl performed an emergency multi-organ transplant on a boy who had lost his intestines in an accident. The child died after developing complications, including pneumonia.

Starzl, a leader in transplant surgery, will head the surgical team for what Seal says he has been told may be a 20-hour operation.

All but six inches of Seal's intestines were removed in two operations 4½ years ago because of complications from ulcerative colitis. Fourteen hours of daily intravenous feeding has since caused his liver to deteriorate. He also suffers from pancreatitis.

"I'm told I'm in serious condition, that I'm slowly dying. Once the liver starts to go, it's gone, kind of like soured milk," Seal said. "But if we can get a second chance at life...I'm fortunate I'm here. I figure I'm helping somebody else as well as myself."

Seal, who is forced to spend most of the time lying or sitting down because of the constant intravenous feedings, said it didn't take him long to decide to undergo the complex operation once the idea was put to him.

Odessa man dies in one-vehicle mishap

From Staff Reports

A 25-year-old Odessa man was killed early this morning when he missed a curve and his car overturned on a road in southwest Midland County, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Raymond Patino Brito was driving east on County Road 210 (Dora Roberts Road) about four miles west of FM 1788 about 12:05 a.m. when the accident occurred. Brito was driving at a high rate of speed and missed a curve, and his 1977 Pontiac overturned 2½ times, according to DPS reports.

Passenger Jose Mendoza walked over a mile on an injured leg to get help, but Brito was pronounced dead at 2:43 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Mendoza, 28, also of Odessa, was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said. He had been wearing a seatbelt, but Brito had not, according to DPS reports.

Pennsylvania pipeline fire visible 40 miles

ROWENNA, Pa. (AP) — An explosion at a natural gas pipeline sent flames 200 feet into the air today, prompting some residents to leave their homes in a sparsely populated area, authorities said.

The flames reflected off low clouds, making the fire visible 40 miles away, said Barry Bauman of the Lancaster Emergency Management Agency.

"There's just a huge crater there. It blew dirt all over the road," said Chris Swope of the Maytown Fire Co.

The fire was under control before 8 a.m., said Maytown Fire Capt. Tony Mann. No injuries were reported. The blast destroyed a small building and the fire burned trees and part of a cornfield.

The explosion occurred about 4:15 a.m. when a Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. line ruptured and ignited, said Ben Polis, the company's manager of communications in Charleston, W. Va.

Polis said workers were immediately dispatched to the scene when sensors showed a loss of pressure at 4:15 a.m.

"They shut off the valve, and let fire burn itself out," Polis said. "They are now working to repair the line, and will be replacing it."

Dutch to announce missile decision

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The government rejected an 11th hour overture from the Soviet Union and said it would announce today whether to accept deployment of U.S.-built cruise missiles. Thousands of demonstrators marched across the Netherlands to rally against deployment.

The Dutch were expected to begin deployment of 48 missiles in 1988, bringing the Netherlands into line with four other NATO nations — Britain, West Germany, Belgium and Italy — that already have begun siting the medium-range rockets.

As the announcement neared, an estimated 20,000 slogan-shouting anti-missile demonstrators marched through the center of Amsterdam. In The Hague, seat of the Dutch government, several thousand school children took the day off to protest the missile.

NATO voted in 1979 to deploy 572 medium-range cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in the five European countries to counter what it said was a buildup of Soviet SS-20s that could reach targets in Western Europe.

Although three preceding Dutch governments preferred to wait for progress in superpower arms talks that might eliminate the need for deployment, Premier Ruud Lubber's coalition, under strong pressure from its allies, has stressed the need for Western solidarity even at the cost of domestic popularity.

A group calling itself "Operation Emergency Brake" halted at least 13 commuter trains by pulling emergency levers, and another train's electrical power was sabotaged in the eastern Dutch city of Nijmegen, according to the Dutch National Railways.

A Molotov cocktail was tossed into an electric power station in the eastern Dutch city of Zwolle. Police attributed the acts of vandalism to anti-missile activists.

Lubbers announced Thursday that he had rejected an invitation to discuss the deployment issue with Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov.

Lubbers told Parliament that the Soviet invitation was made conditional on a further postponement of any missile decision, which the Dutch leader said "would not be right."

At the root of the decision to be made by Lubber's center-right coalition is its June 1, 1984, policy statement that said the government would decide today to deploy the missiles unless Soviet SS-20 deployments on that date total 378, the same number as in June 1984.

NATO last week estimated the SS-20 deployments at 441, making a Dutch decision to deploy likely.

A Dutch government source who spoke on condition he not be identified said, "The government will note that that the conditions about the SS-20s have not been fulfilled and so the June 1 (1984) decision comes into operation. It's more an implementation than something quite new."

The cruise missiles earmarked for the Netherlands have become a focal point for the country's powerful antiwar movement, which organized the largest demonstrations in Dutch history in 1982-83 and garnered almost 4 million signatures on petitions protesting the nuclear rockets.

During an appearance Saturday at a anti-missile rally in The Hague, Lubbers told a booing crowd of 20,000 that the Soviet Union was forcing the Netherlands to deploy the missiles because of its "boundless numbers" of SS-20s.

A site at the air base in Woensdrecht near the Belgian border has already been selected for deployment of the missiles, which will be tended by American crews.

Dutch inaction over a go-ahead for the missiles dates back to the original NATO deployment decision in 1979, when the government of Andries van Agt said that it accepted the need for the deployment in principle, but would not make a final decision until 1981.

That decision was postponed because of lack of progress in the U.S.-Soviet arms talks at Geneva, Switzerland, and the issue was not dealt with again until the Lubbers' government decision in June 1984.

At one point several weeks ago, national security adviser Robert McFarlane ridiculed the Soviet position. "Mr. Gorbachev is telling us, 'If you will get rid of your defense, I will get rid of your offense,'" McFarlane said then.

On Thursday, however, Reagan said the Soviet offer, coupled with the new U.S. proposals, were "important milestones in moving these negotiations forward."

While the Soviet proposal "unfortunately fell considerably short" in certain areas, it did contain positive "seeds" that could serve as a basis for negotiation, Reagan said.

The U.S. proposal would limit both sides to 6,000 strategic — or long-range — warheads each, according to officials who spoke only on condition of anonymity. Of this total, 4,500 could be on ballistic missiles and 1,500 on cruise missiles. Each side now has about 10,000 strategic warheads apiece, including missiles on land, in submarines and on aircraft.

No more than 3,000 warheads could be on land-based systems, in line with a U.S. effort to force cutbacks in the Soviets' 1,398 heavy, globe-girdling intercontinental ballistic missiles that carry about 6,400 warheads. The United States has 1,000 land-based ICBMs carrying 2,125 warheads.

The U.S. plan also would hold each side to 1,800 ICBMs, the officials said.

At a news conference Thursday, Shultz appeared to be at pains to avoid offending the Soviets.

Repeating a theme Reagan adopted a week ago in a United Nations speech, Shultz said, "We want countries to stop trying to expand their influence through armed intervention and subversion." But, unlike Reagan, Shultz declined to mention the Soviets by name.

Shultz, who will travel to Moscow this weekend for pre-summit consultations, also said the United States wants to promote and defend human rights everywhere. His target was the Soviets — but again he made no direct reference to Moscow.

The Soviets also appear intent on meeting the U.S. halfway, at least on some issues. Shultz said he was informed by a Soviet official that Yelena Bonner, wife of dissident leader Andrei Sakharov, will be granted her long-sought visa to receive treatment in the West for an eye problem.

The upbeat mood in recent days has been reinforced by indications from U.S. officials that Moscow and Washington, even as they prepare for the meeting in Geneva, are discussing the possibility of a followup summit.

After their meeting with Reagan on Thursday, Soviet journalists said there were no surprises. They found, as expected, that, "We look at things differently."

"He (Reagan) tried to be polite, but of course we had many disagreements in our positions," said Stanislav Kondrashov, a reporter for the government newspaper Izvestia.

As he posed for pictures prior to the interview, Reagan said of the Geneva summit, "I'm hopeful, optimistic that maybe we can make some concrete achievements there."

Woman has no idea of bomb's origin

DALLAS (AP) — A woman has told the FBI she is puzzled how a battery-operated explosive device got in her luggage aboard an American Airlines jetliner she boarded at Austin for a flight to Des Moines, Iowa.

The homemade bomb exploded about 8 a.m. Wednesday in the luggage compartment of a Boeing 727, shortly after American Flight 203 arrived at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. No one was injured, and the 147 passengers and seven crew members were hurriedly taken off the plane.

Mary Thielman of San Marcos, Texas, said FBI agents greeted her and her three children after they arrived at Des Moines later Wednesday and informed her the device had been hidden in her cosmetic case.

"I didn't put it in there. I have absolutely no idea who did," she told The Dallas Morning News in a telephone interview Thursday from her parents' home in Des Moines.

Albert Thielman, who works for Miles Pre-Cut Homes in Austin, told the American-Statesman that FBI agents searched his San Marcos home, his office and his cars late Wednesday.

Thielman's wife, Mary, and their three children were on the first leg of a trip to visit relatives in Des Moines, Iowa, when the device exploded in the luggage compartment of the Boeing 727.

Thielman was not arrested or charged, and said he consented to the searches conducted Wednesday.

"They wanted to go to my house, and that was fine," Thielman said. "They went through my cars and everything in my office and my house. They said it (the device) was in her stuff."

The newspaper quoted sources as saying the bomb was constructed in two sections, with a 6-volt lantern-type battery, timing device and wiring in a coffee can. The second part of the device, which contained gunpowder and ball-bearings, was packaged in a round, olive-drab metal canister.

Thielman said he dropped his family off at the airport and checked their baggage with a skycap at the curb in front of the terminal. He said his wife and her children caught a connecting flight to Iowa after the explosion.

"When she came off the plane in Iowa there were two uniforms and an FBI agent waiting for her," he said.

He said he had no criminal record except for a misdemeanor charge when he was in college 15 years ago. He would not say if he had decided to hire a lawyer because "I've never been in this situation before."

Byron Sage, agent-in-charge of the FBI's Austin office, said an Austin area man with family on the plane was questioned but declined to identify him. San Marcos is about 40 miles southwest of Austin.

"No one has been arrested and at this point I don't anticipate any arrests in the near future," Sage said. "Everyone involved in this investigation has been cooperative, no one has been hiding from us or stonewalling."

Sage said the possibility someone else might have tampered with the luggage "has not been ruled out at all."

Indian tanker explosion kills 39

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A gasoline tanker truck fell into a ditch and exploded in flames in a southern Indian village today, killing at least 39 people and injuring 80, the United News of India reported.

It said the disaster took place in Padaval village in Karnataka state, about 775 miles south of New Delhi, and that most of those injuehurt were in critical condition.

The private news agency quoted police as saying the driver lost control while trying to avoid hitting a pedestrian and that the truck went into a ditch. Leaking gasoline led to the explosion and fire, it added.

Most of the victims were poor villagers. Some villagers reportedly dived into an open well trying to escape the inferno.

Police in Karnataka could not be reached immediately by telephone from New Delhi because of faulty lines.

UNI said 30 people were killed instantly and nine died in a hospital.

"The income gains in the Connecticut metro, third richest in 1984, are due in part to the continuing growth of corporate headquarters and offices there," said survey editor, Richard Kern.

Nassau-Suffolk's projected 1989 EBI of $69,986, up 57 percent from 1984, will be the second highest, slightly ahead of Lake County, Ill., near Chicago with $69,520, said the report. Grand Forks, N.D., 14th highest household income in 1984 ($40,596), will soar to fourth highest in 1989 as the average EBI climbs 69 percent to $68,559.

Other major changes include New Jersey's Middlesex-Somerset-Hunterdon metro, eighth richest in 1984, which will slip to 18th by 1989, although its average EBI per household will grow 54 percent to $62,919.

Major gainers following Midland include Wichita, Kan., 23rd in 1984 to 13th ($59,584), up 64 percent; Lincoln, Neb., 43rd in 1984, increasing to 17th in 1989 ($57,980), up 68 percent.

Metros expected to fall out of the top 25 in 1984 rankings include Poughkeepsie, N.Y. from 15th to 23rd in 1989 ($54,820); Aurora-Elgin, Ill. from 16th to 39th and Joliet, Ill., from 17th to below the top 50.

The magazine predicted the U.S. population will reach 250.5 million by 1989, an increase of 5.1 percent over the estimate for 1984. Total households will rise 7 percent to 93 million, while total EBI will climb 66 percent to $4.27 trillion.

New York will remain the largest metro market as its population rises 1.6 percent to an estimated 8.52 million by 1989. Los Angeles-Long Beach metro will remain second, although its total population will climb almost 6 percent to 8.4 million.

Chicago and Detroit will remain third and fifth largest despite slight population losses of .38 percent and 1.08, respectively. Houston, remaining eighth as in 1984, and Atlanta moving to 10th from 11th, will score the largest percentage gains of the top 10 metros, each slightly more than 11 percent by 1989.

Anchorage, Alaska will be the fastest-growing metro with its population rising 26.6 percent, followed by Naples, Fla. and Ocala, Fla., (25.2 and 24.7 percent, respectively.)

"We'll market it in the outlying areas," he added. "As far as we know, the nearest facility with HBO is Scott and White Hospital in Temple."

Branson said that the donation also included funds for training the staff.

Although he did not comment on the amount of the donation, he did say that "it was above $3,000."

Director of Development Paul Deets, however, explained that one HBO unit would cost "around $75,000" although if the hospital acquires more than one, it would get a discount.

Branson compared the HBO unit with the "iron lungs" used in treating polio patients years ago.

"These are chambers similar to those used in treating polio patients," he said. "Their purpose is to increase the concentration of oxygen at wound sites for a wide variety of healing purposes — some documented, some not."

"You put all your marbles on the table. You look at what you can have and what you have. There's such a vast difference," Seal said.

"Somebody said I'm like Barney Clark. In essence, I am," he said, referring to the late Seattle dentist who received the first artificial heart in December 1982.

Seal's transplant will be performed as soon as a donor of compatible size and blood type is found, said hospital spokesman Tom Chakurda. All six organs must come from the same person.

"Everything is average, the Chevrolet model," said the 5-foot-5, 139-pound Seal. "They're talking in the near future."

Seal worked as an insurance adjuster and was involved with his family's fruit business in Mapleton, Utah, before becoming ill in 1981. He moved with his wife, Bannah Sue, and their three children to Pekin a year later to be closer to major hospitals.

His liver began to deteriorate rapidly several months ago and he was referred to Presbyterian-University Hospital for a liver transplant. Starzl and other Pittsburgh surgeons recommended, however, that six of his organs be removed in a single operation.

Chakurda said research on animals shows it is surgically easier to replace all six organs at once. The procedure is also "more likely to be successful than the transplantation of just the liver and intestines," he said.

"If they put a new one (liver) in by itself, then the chances of infection and all the other complications are greater," Seal said.

Since being admitted to Presbyterian-University two months ago, Seal has grown weaker and suffered more pain. He spends much of the day reading, watching television, writing letters and visiting with his wife.

Thursday, he saw his daughter and two sons for the first time since he was admitted to the hospital.

President of Philippines facing more opposition

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos, who has enjoyed strong support through five U.S. administrations, is facing mounting pressures from his closest ally as well as his own people.

While leftist Filipino demonstrators protest the "U.S.-Marcos dictatorship" and the U.S. Congress holds hearings on how to deal with Marcos' government, the Reagan administration is showing increasing impatience with the Philippine military's failure to stop a growing communist rebellion.

Marcos, who has said he considers President Reagan a close friend, has shown signs of irritation at U.S. pressure, but has laughed at suggestions his 20-year-old regime could fall to the guerrillas of the New People's Army.

On Thursday, U.S. Ambassador Stephen W. Bosworth criticized alleged human rights abuses in the Philippines, including the killing of 23 demonstrators in recent weeks.

Without giving names or many details, Bosworth also said that 15 Americans had been killed in the Philippines in the past two years, and that four had died "allegedly at the hands of security forces."

"Frankly, my countrymen find it hard to understand how these killings could occur and pass unpunished in an allied country," Bosworth said.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the killings were generally not reported in the Philippine media, but that relatives of the victims in the United States had been informed.

The criticism from the U.S. ambassador was the latest sign of American impatience for reforms in the Philippines, the site of large U.S. Air Force and Navy bases. The Asian island nation now receives about $180 million a year in combined economic and military aid from Washington.

On Wednesday, a top U.S. defense official in Washington said the communist insurgency would likely triumph unless the Filipino military underwent "vigorous reform."

In an interview published today in The New York Times, Marcos was quoted as predicting the rebels could be vanquished within a year.

WORLD in brief

Luck holds up for hobo

Southend police today said they're trying to trace Luck to tell him his 12,927 pounds ($18,614), which he twice lost and retrieved, and apparently thought he lost a third time, is safely in the bank.

Detective Sgt. John Soames said the absent-minded vagrant first reported the loss of his brown bag containing spare socks, underwear, a mirror, hat and savings last month in this southeast England seaside resort.

A citizen found it at Southend Central railroad station and handed it intact to police, Soames said.

The police returned it to Luck and advised him to open an account with the bank across the street to keep the money safe. He did.

But a few days later, he withdrew the cash from the account and went off on his travels again.

Last week in London, Luck again reported the loss of the bag and cash. Again, it was turned in to police with nothing missing.

Police returned it to Luck a second time, and advised him to reopen a bank account, which he did before setting out on more travels.

On Tuesday, Luck once more reported the loss of the bag and its contents. But this time, he apparently forgot the money was in the bank.

When newspapers reported Luck's plight, the bank informed police his cash was safe with them. But by then, he'd taken to the road again.

"It seems that his luck is still in," said Soames. "He's very confused, but I am pleased for him because he is a nice old boy."

Soames said Luck, a ex-railroad worker who also worked on sheep farms in Australia and New Zealand, told police he'd saved the money from his various jobs and planned to buy a trailer with it.

Journalists are accused

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha hinted that the government might crack down on Western journalists whom he accused of biased reporting on South Africa's racial rioting and his moves toward reform.

Speaking to the Foreign Correspondents Association on Thursday, Botha said foreign reporters were not presenting a true picture of South Africa, where "the most profound reform in this country's history is taking place."

In another development, an independent research institute in London said today that the South African economy has sustained "severe damage" and questioned its ability to "stand the strain."

The white-run government has a $24 billion foreign debt and faces economic sanctions by nations demanding that conditions be improved for South Africa's black majority of 24 million.

Conditions repeated

BAALBEK, Lebanon (AP) — A radical Shiite Moslem leader says freedom for Americans kidnapped in Lebanon depends on whether Kuwait releases a group of extremists convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies there.

Hussein Musawi, leader of the pro-Iranian Islamic Amal, said Islamic Jihad, the shadowy Shiite group believed to hold the U.S. hostages along with four missing Frenchman, "will not release them until the 17 people held prisoner in Kuwait are freed."

U.S.S.R. outpaces U.S.

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union substantially outpaced the United States in deployment of long-range nuclear warheads in the last three years and is researching "Star Wars" technologies, a prestigious research institute said today.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies also said in its 1985-1986 Military Balance publication that the two countries have about the same number of strategic warheads, but that the Soviet warheads have greater total destructive capacity.

Numbers of U.S. strategic warheads increased about 10 percent during the three-year period, while the Soviet increase was 37 percent, it said. The report said the United States has 10,174 warheads, compared to 9,268 three years ago, and the Soviets have 9,987, up from about 7,300.

The Soviets hold an approximate 2.39-1 megatonnage advantage in deployed land- and submarine-based missile warheads, and an estimated 1.6-1 edge when bomber-delivered warheads are included, the report said.

Queen visits Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (NYT) — Queen Elizabeth II sailed into the small harbor here Thursday morning in a light rain, symbolically bringing to a close a discordant chapter in the history of this former British colony, the mother country, and the United States.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, stepped ashore in Grenada two years and six days after U.S. combat troops swarmed in to restore order after the collapse of the island-nation's leftist government.

The British government had advised against the invasion and Sir Paul Scoon, who as governor general of Grenada serves as the queen's representative, had been criticized in London for requesting the U.S. intervention.

Jewish protesters delay opening of controversial play

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Angry Jewish ticket-holders took control of the stage of a city-owned theater and shut down the premiere of a Rainer Werner Fassbinder play they considered anti-Semitic.

Theater officials canceled Thursday night's performance of "Der Muell, Die Stadt und der Tod" (Garbage, The City and Death) after a two-and-a-half hour standoff inside the theater between Jewish protesters and the play's cast.

Outside the Frankfurt Playhouse, Jewish protesters sang songs in Hebrew and shouted "Nazis" and "Shame on you" at arriving ticket-holders.

More than 500 protesters from the Jewish community as well as Christian churches, citizens groups and local political parties had gathered outside the theater before the opening.

Also outside was a small number of counter-demonstrators — some from the leftist Greens party — who protested what they said was a campaign to censor free expression.

Police reported no arrests.

The premiere by the controversial late playwright and director was rescheduled for Monday night, but Jewish protesters promised to block that performance, too.

The play, set in Frankfurt in the early 1970s, is about a predatory Jewish land speculator.

The most provocative dialogue comes in a four-minute monologue by a fringe character, Hans von Glueck, a low-income man adversely affected by the wealthy Jew's buyouts. Part of that dialogue runs:

"He sucks us dry, the Jew. He drinks our blood and puts us in the wrong because he's a Jew and we carry the blame ... If he had stayed where he came from, or if we had gassed him, I could sleep better today."

Salvage crew finds pirate ship with $12 million booty off Cape Cod

CHATHAM, Mass. (AP) — Salvors chipped a sandy crust off a bronze bell Thursday and exposed the name "Whydah," confirming that the wreck it came from was a pirate ship that sank off Cape Cod 268 years ago with a treasure now valued at up to $12 million.

"It would seem to me that this is the type of identification that we have been waiting for — not waiting, but hoping for," said Joseph A. Sinnott, director of the state Board of Underwater Archaeological Resources.

The legend on the bell read "The Whydah Gally 1716," said conservator Carl D. Becker, who chipped the crust from the artifact. The Whidah, a pirate vessel, sank off the Cape in 1717.

Named after an African slave port, the Whidah was a slave ship owned by the Royal African Co. of England and was on its maiden voyage in 1716 when pirate Capt. Black Sam Bellamy seized it in the Carribean Sea.

INS 'goofed' Soviet sailor's questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents in Louisiana who returned Soviet seaman Miroslav Medvid to his ship ignored indications he wanted to defect, says a Ukrainian interpreter who initially interviewed the sailor.

Padoch

"When I asked him why he jumped ship, he said, 'Because I want to live in an honest country,'" interpreter Irene Padoch said Thursday. "I related that" to the agents, but Medvid was taken back to the ship anyway, she said.

Mrs. Padoch's statements raised new questions about Medvid's handling by the Border Patrol and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, its parent agency, which initially handles asylum cases.

Medvid twice jumped off the freighter Marshal Koniev last week as it lay at anchor in the Mississippi River near New Orleans. He was returned to the vessel each time by Border Patrol agents who thought he was a stowaway.

Mrs. Padoch's interview with Medvid took place late last Thursday, and he was returned to the Soviet vessel the next morning. On Monday, U.S. officials took Medvid off the ship, interrogated him late Monday and then again at a U.S. naval facility on Tuesday.

Mrs. Padoch, a New York interpreter for the INS, said she spoke by telephone with Medvid for about 55 minutes. During that interview, in which Mrs. Padoch relayed immigration service questions to the sailor and then translated them for the agents, the interpreter said she concluded Medvid wanted to defect, but that her use of the word "asylum" frightened him.

Medvid told her he was "very much afraid of what they (the Soviet authorities) will do to him" if he was taken back to the ship. Mrs. Padoch said. But she added that Medvid apparently did not understand the context in which she was using the word "asylum" and that he evidently thought that meant he would be put in a mental institution.

"He couldn't understand. He thought I was talking about something for the mentally ill," Mrs. Padoch said. "He was (physically) wrecked, and the (Border Patrol) officers asked me to assure him that no harm would be done to him, that he could rest, that we could talk to him the next day."

But she said Medvid indicated he could not rest, that he was "being arrested," although he apparently confused the fact he was being detained on shore with his notion of being arrested.

Mrs. Padoch said several INS officials "woke me up on Sunday morning, around 5:30, wanting to talk to me" at her home in New York. "They told me somebody goofed in this case."

After Medvid signed a statement expressing his desire to return home, he was released back to the Soviets.

Secretary of State George Shultz said Thursday he considered the case closed. Interviews with Medvid made it "very clear that he wanted to go home," Shultz said.

Under those circumstances, Shultz told a news conference, "to hold him against his expressed will would have been a great mistake."

A federal judge in Philadelphia, meanwhile, refused Thursday to order the Soviet freighter held in port in Louisiana.

WORLD in brief

Southend police today said they're trying to trace Luck to tell him his 12,927 pounds ($18,614), which he twice lost and retrieved, and apparently thought he lost a third time, is safely in the bank.

Detective Sgt. John Soames said the absent-minded vagrant first reported the loss of his brown bag containing spare socks, underwear, a mirror, hat and savings last month in this southeast England seaside resort.

A citizen found it at Southend Central railroad station and handed it intact to police, Soames said.

The police returned it to Luck and advised him to open an account with the bank across the street to keep the money safe. He did.

But a few days later, he withdrew the cash from the account and went off on his travels again.

Lasf week in London, Luck again reported the loss of the bag and cash. Again, it was turned in to police with nothing missing.

Police returned it to Luck a second time, and advised him to reopen a bank account, which he did before setting out on more travels.

On Tuesday, Luck once more reported the loss of the bag and its contents. But this time, he apparently forgot the money was in the bank.

When newspapers reported Luck's plight, the bank informed police his cash was safe with them. But by then, he'd taken to the road again.

"It seems that his luck is still in," said Soames. "He's very confused, but I am pleased for him because he is a nice old boy."

Soames said Luck, a ex-railroad worker who also worked on sheep farms in Australia and New Zealand, told police he'd saved the money from his various jobs and planned to buy a trailer with it.

Journalists are accused

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha hinted that the government might crack down on Western journalists whom he accused of biased reporting on South Africa's racial rioting and his moves toward reform.

Speaking to the Foreign Correspondents Association on Thursday, Botha said foreign reporters were not presenting a true picture of South Africa, where "the most profound reform in this country's history is taking place."

In another development, an independent research institute in London said today that the South African economy has sustained "severe damage" and questioned its ability to "stand the strain."

The white-run government has a $24 billion foreign debt and faces economic sanctions by nations demanding that conditions be improved for South Africa's black majority of 24 million.

Conditions repeated

BAALBEK, Lebanon (AP) — A radical Shiite Moslem leader says freedom for Americans kidnapped in Lebanon depends on whether Kuwait releases a group of extremists convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies there.

Hussein Musawi, leader of the pro-Iranian Islamic Amal, said Islamic Jihad, the shadowy Shiite group believed to hold the U.S. hostages along with four missing Frenchman, "will not release them until the 17 people held prisoner in Kuwait are freed."

U.S.S.R. outpaces U.S.

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union substantially outpaced the United States in deployment of long-range nuclear warheads in the last three years and is researching "Star Wars" technologies, a prestigious research institute said today.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies also said in its 1985-1986 Military Balance publication that the two countries have about the same number of strategic warheads, but that the Soviet warheads have greater total destructive capacity.

Numbers of U.S. strategic warheads increased about 10 percent during the three-year period, while the Soviet increase was 37 percent, it said. The report said the United States has 10,174 warheads, compared to 9,268 three years ago, and the Soviets have 9,987, up from about 7,300.

The Soviets hold an approximate 2.39-1 megatonnage advantage in deployed land- and submarine-based missile warheads, and an estimated 1.6-1 edge when bomber-delivered warheads are included, the report said.

Queen visits Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (NYT) — Queen Elizabeth II sailed into the small harbor here Thursday morning in a light rain, symbolically bringing to a close a discordant chapter in the history of this former British colony, the mother country, and the United States.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, stepped ashore in Grenada two years and six days after U.S. combat troops swarmed in to restore order after the collapse of the island-nation's leftist government.

The British government had advised against the invasion and Sir Paul Scoon, who as governor general of Grenada serves as the queen's representative, had been criticized in London for requesting the U.S. intervention.

Jewish protesters delay opening of controversial play

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Angry Jewish ticket-holders took control of the stage of a city-owned theater and shut down the premiere of a Rainer Werner Fassbinder play they considered anti-Semitic.

Theater officials canceled Thursday night's performance of "Der Muell, Die Stadt und der Tod" (Garbage, The City and Death) after a two-and-a-half hour standoff inside the theater between Jewish protesters and the play's cast.

Outside the Frankfurt Playhouse, Jewish protesters sang songs in Hebrew and shouted "Nazis" and "Shame on you" at arriving ticket-holders.

More than 500 protesters from the Jewish community as well as Christian churches, citizens groups and local political parties had gathered outside the theater before the opening.

Also outside was a small number of counter-demonstrators — some from the leftist Greens party — who protested what they said was a campaign to censor free expression.

Police reported no arrests.

The premiere by the controversial late playwright and director was rescheduled for Monday night, but Jewish protesters promised to block that performance, too.

The play, set in Frankfurt in the early 1970s, is about a predatory Jewish land speculator.

The most provocative dialogue comes in a four-minute monologue by a fringe character, Hans von Glueck, a low-income man adversely affected by the wealthy Jew's buyouts. Part of that dialogue runs:

"He sucks us dry, the Jew. He drinks our blood and puts us in the wrong because he's a Jew and we carry the blame ... If he had stayed where he came from, or if we had gassed him, I could sleep better today."

CHATHAM, Mass. (AP) — Salvors chipped a sandy crust off a bronze bell Thursday and exposed the name "Whydah," confirming that the wreck it came from was a pirate ship that sank off Cape Cod 268 years ago with a treasure now valued at up to $12 million.

"It would seem to me that this is the type of identification that we have been waiting for — not waiting, but hoping for," said Joseph A. Sinnott, director of the state Board of Underwater Archaeological Resources.

The legend on the bell read "The Whydah Gally 1716," said conservator Carl D. Becker, who chipped the crust from the artifact. The Whidah, a pirate vessel, sank off the Cape in 1717.

Named after an African slave port, the Whidah was a slave ship owned by the Royal African Co. of England and was on its maiden voyage in 1716 when pirate Capt. Black Sam Bellamy seized it in the Carribean Sea.

INS 'goofed' Soviet sailor's questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents in Louisiana who returned Soviet seaman Miroslav Medvid to his ship ignored indications he wanted to defect, says a Ukrainian interpreter who initially interviewed the sailor.

Padoch

"When I asked him why he jumped ship, he said, 'Because I want to live in an honest country,'" interpreter Irene Padoch said Thursday. "I related that" to the agents, but Medvid was taken back to the ship anyway, she said.

Mrs. Padoch's statements raised new questions about Medvid's handling by the Border Patrol and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, its parent agency, which initially handles asylum cases.

Medvid twice jumped off the freighter Marshal Koniev last week as it lay at anchor in the Mississippi River near New Orleans. He was returned to the vessel each time by Border Patrol agents who thought he was a stowaway.

Mrs. Padoch's interview with Medvid took place late last Thursday, and he was returned to the Soviet vessel the next morning. On Monday, U.S. officials took Medvid off the ship, interrogated him late Monday and then again at a U.S. naval facility on Tuesday.

Mrs. Padoch, a New York interpreter for the INS, said she spoke by telephone with Medvid for about 55 minutes. During that interview, in which Mrs. Padoch relayed immigration service questions to the sailor and then translated them for the agents, the interpreter said she concluded Medvid wanted to defect, but that her use of the word "asylum" frightened him.

Medvid told her he was "very much afraid of what they (the Soviet authorities) will do to him" if he was taken back to the ship, Mrs. Padoch said. But she added that Medvid apparently did not understand the context in which she was using the word "asylum" and that he evidently thought that meant he would be put in a mental institution.

"He couldn't understand. He thought I was talking about something for the mentally ill," Mrs. Padoch said. "He was (physically) wrecked, and the (Border Patrol) officers asked me to assure him that no harm would be done to him, that he could rest, that we could talk to him the next day."

But she said Medvid indicated he could not rest, that he was "being arrested," although he apparently confused the fact he was being detained on shore with his notion of being arrested.

Mrs. Padoch said several INS officials "woke me up on Sunday morning, around 5:30, wanting to talk to me" at her home in New York. "They told me somebody goofed in this case."

After Medvid signed a statement expressing his desire to return home, he was released back to the Soviets.

Secretary of State George Shultz said Thursday he considered the case closed. Interviews with Medvid made it "very clear that he wanted to go home," Shultz said.

Under those circumstances, Shultz told a news conference, "to hold him against his expressed will would have been a great mistake."

A federal judge in Philadelphia, meanwhile, refused Thursday to order the Soviet freighter held in port in Louisiana.

House compromise expected to save Social Security trust funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House was poised to vote on competing versions of a balanced-budget plan in hopes of heading off a White House threat to refill the Treasury's empty coffers with Social Security trust funds.

The House showdown could climax weeks of wrangling over whether Congress should force itself to eliminate deficits by 1991 — and give the president the power to do it if the lawmakers fail.

A House-Senate conference committee broke up Thursday night hopelessly deadlocked in its quest for a compromise balanced-budget plan that also would raise the government's borrowing authority. As a result, House leaders planned votes today on Republican and Democratic alternatives, with the winner to be sent back the Senate.

Without at least a short-term hike in the national debt, the Treasury says it can't cover checks being sent today to 36 million Social Security recipients without redeeming some of the trust funds' investments.

Leaders in the Republican-controlled Senate, meanwhile, insisted their version alone would clear the way for a much-needed increase in the government's borrowing authority. The Senate approved the plan last month as an amendment to legislation raising the national debt above $2 trillion.

House Majority Whip Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., told reporters that House leaders would push for passage of a simple, one-week boost in the debt ceiling to head off divestment of the trust funds, as a safety-valve in case there was a snag in final passage of the long-term extension and its budget-balancing language.

He predicted the House would pass one of the versions. "I always predict the Democratic version will pass," he said, conceding he couldn't be sure.

"We are in the final stages now and there would beno point" for Republicans, who have been blocking the short-term extension, to continue objecting even if the Democratic version was approved, Foley said. "I can't believe they would be so cynical as to do that."

However, there was no agreement in the Senate to follow Foley's advice.

"We have the opportunity...to settle it once and for all," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the sponsors of the Senate plan. He said the Senate would agree only to the House GOP version and no short-term extension without it.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said of the short-term extension, "As far as I'm concerned, they might as well save it."

The exact language of the balanced-budget amendments was still being drafted Thursday night, but key differences have been aired.

House Republicans plan to offer an updated version of the Senate-passed amendment sponsored by Gramm, Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

The Senate-passed plan would set statutory limits on annual deficits, beginning with about $180 billion in the current fiscal year and dropping incrementally until budgets are balanced by fiscal 1991.

If Congress and the president failed to approve spending plans to meet the deficit targets, the president would be required to cut federal spending to the target levels. About half the government's nearly $1 trillion budget would be exempted from the cutbacks, including Social Security, interest on the national debt and the government's prior-year contracts.

The Democrats proposed to follow the Gramm-Rudman framework but add poverty programs, about 4 percent of the budget, to the exemption list. Their proposal also would make the deficit targets more stringent, starting with a ceiling of about $161 billion in fiscal 1986, which began Oct. 1.

House Democratic leaders also want to strictly limit the president's discretion if mandatory cutbacks are ever called into play — less of a concern for Reagan's party.

The Treasury has used up its borrowing authority of $1.824 trillion, and the administration has asked for a new ceiling of $2.078 trillion — enough for another year of $200 billion in red ink.

Without new borrowing authority, Treasury officials contend they cannot cover the $17 billion in checks being sent today to beneficiaries of Social Security and government pension funds.

Deficit-cutting 'figleaf' covers spending plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what dissenting Republicans criticized as terrible irony, the House has attached $1 billion of new spending to a deficit-reduction bill that includes a permanent 16-cent-a-pack tax on cigarettes.

While freezing the cigarette tax, imposing new fees on travelers, raising coal taxes and limiting federal Medicare payments to doctors and hospitals, the bill also would create a new program to reduce teen-age pregnancies, bring jobless two-parent families under welfare and expand Medicare coverage of eye ailments.

"This is a deficit-reduction figleaf being used to cover up new spending," said Rep. Willis Gradison, R-Ohio, calling it "the same old business-as-usual we've seen around here for years."

"This is another effort...to ram another spending increase down our throats," Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois said of the measure that would cut the deficit an estimated $19.4 billion over three years.

The bill was approved Thursday on a 245-174 vote after Republicans failed, 238-183, to erase the provisions that increase spending.

Democrats defended the bill as a good installment on cutting the deficit, and said Congress would be shirking its duty if it saw a need and failed to respond solely because a new program was required.

The Senate is debating its own version of deficit reductions for this budget year, which is now one month old, even as negotiators between the two houses seek a way to assure continued cuts into the future. The Senate bill also includes increases in some spending programs.

Under either bill, the nation's 55 million cigarette smokers would continue to pay a federal tax of 16 cents a pack. Unless Congress acts, the tax would drop to 8 cents on Nov. 15; the lawmakers are not about to let that happen, even though President Reagan's advisers are urging a veto of any extension.

Keeping the 16-cent levy would cut the deficit by about $4.9 billion over three years.

The House bill earmarks one penny of the 16 cents to continue federal tobacco price supports. The Senate version would substitute new supports paid for by farmers and cigarette manufacturers.

In addition to freezing the cigarette tax, the House bill would:

— Require that state and local government employees hired after this year pay into, and be covered by, the Medicare program of health care for the elderly. The worker and the employer would split the Medicare tax of 2.9 percent of most workers' wages.

— Limit the scheduled increase in the monthly Medicare Part B premium, which insures payment of doctors' fees. The premium, now $15.50, would go to $16.10 next year, $18.70 in 1987 and $20.80 in 1988.

— Set stiff civil fines and penalties for hospitals and doctors who "dump" poor emergency patients onto other facilities.

— Raise the tax on coal to pay black-lung benefits to miners. The tax, now the smaller of $1 a ton for deep-mined coal (50 cents from strip mines) or 4 percent of the sales price, would be raised to $1.60 a ton (80 cents for strip mines) or 6 percent, by 1991.

— Impose fees of up to $425 on commercial vessels arriving in the United States. Most passengers would have to pay $5 each; those arriving from Canada, Mexico or adjacent islands would pay $1.

Postal Service stamps employees with charm

BOSTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service wants to polish up its image, so it has begun charm classes for 88 window clerks, the men and women who serve as the front lines with the public.

The courses are part of a broader effort by the Postal Service to improve the self-image and performance of all employees, says Jane Saganov, all-services coordinator for the Postal Service here.

"We tell them they are the salesmen of our company. We tell them, 'You are not just a postal clerk. You are not just a letter carrier. You are the post office. And that one incident leaves a customer sour,'" she said.

The classes are taught by instructors from the Dale Carnegie self-improvement school, who urge clerks to put themselves in a customer's shoes before responding to any angry outburst.

"I just figure some of them have had burnt toast for breakfast and they aren't really angry at you," said one of the students, Theresa O'Connor, a 19-year veteran of the Postal Service.

Miss O'Connor, a window clerk at the Newton Center Post Office, recalled Thursday the time she dodged a scale hurled at her by a customer.

"I just handled it in a very low-key, relaxed manner. I said; 'Do you mind if I wait on a customer while you decide what to do for an encore?' And, believe it or not, the person started laughing," she said.

The classes, first tried experimentally last summer in Albany, N.Y., were introduced in the Boston area by Postmaster Philip L. Sullivan as part of a program to improve communications among postal employees and with the public, said Ms. Saganov.

The cost of the classes, held once a week for six weeks, is $750 per student and is paid by the post office. "But that is really so minute when you consider the number of transactions that a window clerk performs a day," she said. "If he sends away satisfied customers, that money is nothing."

Sullivan hopes that all 350 clerks in his district will eventually take the course. Depending on the results, the program could be expanded to other post offices nationwide, Ms. Saganov said.

Most customers' gripes have nothing to do with the window clerk, said Bob Rooney, who waits on 200 to 300 customers a day in Boston's Charlestown section.

"A lot of times, it's about the letter carrier who they never get to see. Whether we're involved in the problem doesn't seem to matter," he said. "To them, we are the post office, the visible post office."

Steve Albanese, president of the local American Postal Workers Union, said customers don't always understand the expertise involved in being a window clerk. Selling stamps is only a tiny part of the job, he said.

"It's not a simple matter when someone walks up to you and says they want to mail a plant to Ecuador," he said. "There are a lot of rules and laws you have to know."

Instructor Daniel Greaney said he's been "pleased beyond belief" by the enthusiasm of the workers enrolled in the classes.

In a recent class, he asked his pupils, "'Now tell me, why don't people receive the message we send?"

"They don't hear," a man identified as Larry said. "They don't have the right attitude," Peggy added. "They may be frustrated," Beth said.

"Three beautiful comments," Greaney replied with a smile.

Man guilty in sex case

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Jurors tried out bondage equipment before rejecting defense claims that a man's sex slave was a willing participant in her seven-year captivity and convicting him of 10 counts of kidnap, rape and other sex charges.

Former mill worker Cameron Hooker, 31, faces up to 75 years in prison on his convictions Thursday. The jury took three days to decide that Hooker was guilty of all but one of the 11 counts against him, a rape prosecutors said occurred while his wife was present.

San Mateo County Superior Court Judge Clarence Knight set bail at $5 million. Sentencing will be Nov. 22.

Jurors said they decided early in their deliberations Tuesday that Hooker was guilty but needed time to sort through each of the sex offenses.

Juror Debbie King of South San Francisco said she crawled into a coffin-like box Hooker was said to have used to confine his victim for long periods after abducting her in 1977. The juror described it as "terrifying."

Farm credit 'adequate'

WASHINGTON (Hearst) — The Reagan administration Thursday told a congressional committee the Farm Credit System has adequate reserves to weather its current financial crisis without federal aid.

Frank Naylor, undersecretary for small community and rural development inthe U.S. Department of Agriculture, estimated the Farm Credit System's assets at $124 billion.

The system has difficulty in coordinating its resources "because of its highly decentralized organizational structure," Naylor said.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad countered that the administration does not understand "the hurt in the heartland." He advised Congress to "wake up before there is blood all over the streets."

Shuttle furnace fixed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts fixed one of two balky furnaces today, and with most of their experiments up and humming their commander promised scientists on Earth "good pictures and results" over the next few days.

Crew members took time from their chores for a belated Halloween celebration early today. Two of the astronauts appeared on television wearing homemade paper masks, and another donned paper fangs.

"If we get any trick-or-treaters, we promise not to open the door," said Challenger commander Henry Hartsfield.

Phillipine aid OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee approved $284 million in aid for the Philippines and for construction at U.S. military bases there despite fears about the stability of President Ferdinand Marcos' government.

The money was contained in military construction and foreign aid bills which were approved separately without dissent Thursday by the Appropriations Committee.

The foreign aid bill earmarks $110 million in economic aid and another $70 million in military assistance for the Philippines. The construction bill provides $104 million for work at Clark Air Force Base and Subic Bay Naval Base.

The long-time U.S. ally has been the source of increasing concern because of a growing communist insurgency and reports that Marcos is in failing health and increasingly out of touch with unrest in his nation.

Whither justice

Not long ago John Hill, chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court, was saying some things about the legal system that capture the imagination of all those who expect that when they go into a courtroom, they'll find justice and little else.

Unfortunately that isn't the situation currently. In fact, the legal system is so encumbered with too many lawsuits and court cases that justice typically takes a backseat while the judges and attorneys go about the process of filing through the mounds of paperwork and legal maneuvering that necessarily accompany any case.

Chief Justice Hill approached the problem by appointing a special task force that will draw up new rules designed to speed up the legal machinery. The Chief Justice estimates the panel, consisting of judges, lawyers and state legislators, will issue its recommendations by the end of this year.

He went on to note that a part of the problem can be attributed to lawyers being permitted too much control over their own cases. He says judges should exert more control.

We have to agree for a number of reasons. In the first place, anyone who has spent any time at all sitting through a court proceeding surely recognizes that the presiding judge is in the "driver's seat" but can get away with allowing sloppy — and slow — procedures to dominate if he or she so desires. Who's going to object? The attorneys? The litigants? The bailiff, maybe?

Anyone who has ever sat through a trial in which the presiding judge controlled the game likely came out of the experience refreshed, invigorated and amazed at how much of such import could be dealt with so quickly and efficiently. It restores one's confidence in the validity of the legal system.

Perhaps Chief Justice Hill is onto something. Just maybe the court system can be salvaged merely by judges exercising stricter control over cases coming before them, along with other procedural changes.

Maybe not. A "kink" can be thrown into the works at any point. The panel may not do its job. Or it may, but the changes proposed may not be accepted by the legal community. Worst of all, individual judges may not embrace the gravity of the situation.

We hope they do because justice hangs in the balance.

Telling the story

Supporters of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) have launched a TV advertising campaign to change the system's public image from "Star Wars" to "Peace Shield."

The Coalition for the Strategic Defense Initiative (CSDI) aired a 30-second commercial for the first time recently on two Washington, D.C., TV stations, and hopes to buy time in 20 major media markets through Nov. 19, the date of the summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

A few months ago, the Union of Concerned Scientists ran a commercial featuring a little boy, implying that "Star Wars" would increase the likelihood of a nuclear war.

Stephanie Slewka, of The Hearst Newspapers' Washington Bureau, reported that the Coalition is seeking to refute that ad, fighting fire with fire.

The opening shot of their commercial shows a child's drawing of people, trees, the sun, a house and a car, and as a little girl's voice asks her "Daddy" about SDI, a shield appears over the picture and zaps incoming missiles.

"It would stop missiles in outer space so they couldn't hit our house. Then nobody could win a war. If there's no way to win a war, there's no reason to start one. My Daddy's smart. Support the Peace Shield," the little girl says.

Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, chairman of the Coalition for SDI, said that for every scientist who had opposed SDI, there were 10 working on the project.

The ad campaign is designed to counter public opinion that President Reagan should use SDI as a bargaining chip at the November summit, Gen. Graham said, and to counter lobbying efforts in Congress to cut funding for the program.

The White House supports the coalition's advertising initiative, and 80 members of Congress are behind the Coalition for SDI.

Gen. Graham has already raised $175,000 though private donations and a grant from the Mellon Foundation for the campaign and hopes to raise a total of $1.7 million through further appeals to individuals and business corporations.

Talking free trade

The fresh commitment to a reinvigorated and growing labor movement, being sounded these days in Anaheim, Calif., at the biennial convention of the AFL-CIO, is welcome in a nation dependent for its economic vitality on an appropriate balance between imaginative, entrepreneurial management and responsible, organized workers.

Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, leads 13.2 million union members, a formidable force. But he has been candid in acknowledging that "our overall growth has been stymied, a new labor force has grown up around us and the trade union share of it has dropped." So it has, from a third of the non-farm workers to less than 20 percent.

"The good news is that we have a hell of a lot more people to organize and we do mean to organize them," he told the delegates.

Just how good that news might be for the nation as a whole will depend on many factors. A dynamic labor movement has proved indispensable in constructing an economy with justice and fair treatment for workers. But now productivity and competitiveness in a world market are as important as freedom to organize and fair wages.

The climate under the Reagan administration, as Kirkland noted, has been chilly for the unions. There is no champion of labor in the White House. And yet 52 percent of union members approve of what Reagan is doing; only 38 percent disapprove.

Kirkland was right when he railed against the deficit that has grown so rapidly under the Reagan administration. He may have exaggerated with the suggestion that it is conspiratorial, a deliberate move to throttle social programs. Nevertheless, the deficit is being used in that way by the president and the dangers of refusing to raise taxes must be addressed.

But Kirkland was wrong when he proposed trade protectionism as a cure for the ills of labor. He said that the president's policy is to "buy foreign and fire Americans," which is not true. There is no surer way to bring on another recession, to strangle job creation, to enlarge unemployment than through tariffs and quotas ostensibly designed to protect American jobs.

The free trade advocated by the president is not, as Kirkland argued, a "mystical dream world." It is the only realistic alternative to stagnation. Kirkland seemed to be giving comfort to those in Congress who have chosen the path of punitive tariffs.

Soviets 'rewriting' dictionary

WASHINGTON — The Soviets may someday admit that they caused the "yellow rain" that killed thousands of Southeast Asians. But because they've concocted a new definition of the word "toxin," the Soviets will be able to claim that they didn't violate the Biological Weapons Convention of 1975.

Jack Anderson

This means, in effect, that the hapless Hmong refugees in Laos and other one-time U.S. allies were victims of an Orwellian word game as much as of the deadly mycotoxins that rained down on them.

The lesson is a valuable one for President Reagan and his advisers as they head for the arms-control summit in Geneva this month. They should make very sure the Soviet and American negotiators are both using the same dictionary when they define the various nuclear weapons systems under discussion. A country that routinely rewrites history and biography is perfectly capable of rewriting its dictionaries, too, as the "yellow rain" case makes clear.

A secret State Department report we've seen exposes the Soviets' "death by definition" technique — and is a solid argument for including at least one Philadelphia lawyer on any U.S. arms-control team. Titled, "Redefining Terms," the report warns:

"If the Soviets officially adopt the definition of toxins that was published in the most recent Soviet Military Encyclopedia Dictionary, they could argue that the compounds covered by the Biological Weapons Convention of 1975 are far fewer than those the U.S. and other nations included.

"The dictionary, published in 1983, defines toxins as 'natural poisons ... including low-molecular-weight poisons from unicellular animals ... and high-molecular-weight bacterial toxins.'"

But a broader definition, in the 1976 Soviet dictionary, was "substances of bacterial, plant or animal origin ...."

The secret report explains why the deletion of "plants" as a source of toxins is crucial: "The mycotoxins that the U.S. has accused the U.S.S.R. of using in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia in violation of the 1975 convention are products of fungi, which are plants, and hence could be excluded as toxins under the new Soviet definition."

The Soviet rewriting of the dictionary may well have been inspired by the unexpected U.S. success in proving that the Soviets had used toxins. By concocting a new definition of the term, poisons made from fungi are no longer officially "toxins."

Even more pertinent to the Geneva talks is an earlier example of the Soviets' potentially lethal word play. It involved the definition of "light" missiles in the negotiations over the SALT I Treaty.

Both sides agreed that the Soviet SS-11 was a light missile. U.S. negotiators wanted the Soviets' replacements for the aging SS-11s, their most widely deployed inter-continental ballistic missile at the time, to be about the same size.

A warning light should have flashed when the Soviets refused to accept the U.S. definition of a heavy missile as anything over 70 cubic meters. (The SS-11 was 67 cubic meters.) In the end, no firm definition was included in the agreement.

The United States was subsequently caught flat-footed when the Soviets began replacing the SS-11s with SS-19s, which weigh 108 cubic meters or more — roughly 60 percent more than the old missiles.

A top-secret White House report ruefully admits: "At the time of signature of (SALT I), the Soviets obviously foresaw the SS-19 as a key element in their strategic force modernization programs and refused to agree to provisions which would have precluded its development and deployment."

In short, the United States was snookered.

UNDER THE DOME: The FBI has formally assured Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., that it did not, as published reports charged, inquire into U.S. District Judge Franklin Billings' views on school prayer and abortion during its background check last year. "We have reviewed the investigative reports and found no indication questions concerning school prayer or abortion were asked," the bureau wrote, adding: "We do not make inquiries regarding a nominee's position on social or political issues."

RENT-A-COP RHUBARB: The General Services Administration has stirred up doubts in Congress about its proposal to replace federal guards with private security personnel. There is some concern about letting rent-a-cops have charge of sensitive government offices and, as Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., noted: "There is no hard evidence ... that it is less expensive, more efficient and more effective to use contractor protective services." Another GSA idea, to let local governments share security chores, has raised similar misgivings.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Next Tuesday is Election Day, and in this "off-off year" voter apathy will be monumental. Maybe this little history lesson will inspire a bigger turnout. In 1876, a dedicated Indiana voter left his sickbed to cast his ballot for a congressman. His candidate won election by a single vote, and was subsequently named to the congressional commission that refereed contested returns in the presidential election. He voted with the majority in the commission's 8-to-7 decision in favor of Rutherford B. Hayes, who thus became president. So you could say that Hayes owed his election to one conscientious voter.

EVANS & NOVAK

Reagan holds a summit 'trump'

WASHINGTON — Belying advice from diplomatic experts that President Reagan quickly show arms control cards on his way to the high-stakes table in Geneva, fresh intelligence reveals a trump in his hand: Mikhail Gorbachev's power and prestige as the new Soviet leader has been overstated by the West.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The intelligence, from a well-placed political source in Poland with intimate ties to the Soviet Politburo, discloses a tenser, less decisive selection of Gorbachev as Communist Party general secretary last March 11 than was reported at the time. He eeked out victory by a margin of only 6-to-4 on a secret ballot against the party's elderly Moscow boss, Viktor Grishin (who was nominated by Gorbachev's arch-rival, Gregoriy Romanov). The secrecy was demanded by Andrei Gromyko, Gorbachev's champion.

Despite his slim mandate, Gorbachev moved with daring speed to consolidate his leadership by firing Politburo members and recruiting his own partisans in their place, as well as taking control of all-important party cadres and the KGB. But the two-vote win reflects intense bureaucratic opposition and pressures directed against Gorbachev's economic reforms, weakening him at the summit.

That counsels Reagan to hang tougher than any American president at any previous Soviet summit, particularly in resisting bad arms control deals. Yet, Secretary of State George Shultz has worked hard at making a nuclear deal the capstone of the summit and unsuccessfully tried at the 11th hour to insert arms control in the president's United Nations speech.

The outside world never can know what happens around the table when the Soviet Politburo picks the new leader of the world's only true empire. But intelligence recently arrived here has a ring of authenticity.

Romanov's nomination of Grishin was calculated to win support from the gray-bearded Soviet autarchs for one last round of the geriatric leadership that has burdened the Soviet Union since the late 1970s. Romanov, the clear heir apparent if he could get Grishin elected, told the Politburo that the dying wish of Konstantin Chernenko was that Grishin succeed him, according to these reports.

An alarmed Gromyko, who had confided to a Western statesman a day earlier that Gorbachev would be the new leader, struck back hard. He doubted, he said, that Chernenko had ever stated such a preference on his death bed; the old man was too far gone to confide anything to anyone. He then demanded and got a secret ballot from the nine other Politburo members present.

Despite the verve with which Gorbachev nailed down his narrow win, his prestige now rides on the outcome of the summit. He needs a triumph to hold up at the 26th Communist Party Congress, originally scheduled for this year but postponed by Gorbachev until February.

Reagan administration partisans of the theory that Gorbachev cannot afford to lose in Geneva because of his shaky mandate believe this greatly strengthens the president's hand. They mean that Gorbachev needs an arms control deal for domestic economic reasons far more than Reagan. The president, buttressed by polls showing high approval of the way he handles foreign policy, can avoid buying an arms control pig-in-a-poke.

But Shultz has labored hard and honorably to work out an arms control package as the centerpiece of Geneva. On Oct. 22, in the final National Security Council discussion of Reagan's U.N. speech, Shultz advised Reagan to insert a couple of strong paragraphs on arms control to accompany the basic thrust of the speech on "regional" issues such as Afghanistan and Angola (though that emphasis originated in the State Department with Shultz's approval).

Reagan was quickly told that if he followed the secretary's suggestion, the headlines would center on arms control and the Soviet-backed regional conflicts Reagan wanted to emphasize would be lost. That would advance Gorbachev's plan for an arms control summit, strengthening him back home.

Hence the concern among Shultz's colleagues in the administration about what may emerge from his Moscow talk with the Soviet leader. They hope he will engage in positive thinking about Gorbachev's slender Kremlin mandate. While the secretary of state is under domestic and NATO pressure to talk arms control, it can only strengthen the president's adversary at Geneva.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans made from tough fiber

Some people think the country has gone to blazes because we watch too much television. Some people think we are down the tubes because we legalized abortion on demand. Some people think there is no hope because we won't abolish the Federal Reserve. And some people think it's all over because youth gave up dirt and pot for soap and money.

Charley Reese

I think all of these people seriously underestimate our ability to survive our own mistakes. I also think they are ignorant as heck of our own history.

America has never been a land of saints. I am always amused at refined, hoity-toity people who brag about their early ancestors as if that provided them with a pedigree of gentility. It amuses me because if they were to meet their ancestors they would probably be horrified at what a rough and ready, profane, opportunistic, lusty and bloodthirsty lot they were.

It took a lot of guts to come to North America. About the only things the continent had to offer were hardship, dirt, danger, death and opportunity. For the most part, anybody who had a decent life in the old country stayed there. We got the misfits, the dis-inherited, the nothing-to-inherit, the troublemakers, the bankrupt and what passed at the time for religious nuts.

No less a people could have taken a raw continent and in two centuries turned it in to such a land of milk and honey that leisure, good food, modern conveniences, and the best that money can buy are killing more of us than angry Indians ever did when they were scalping our ancestors.

Maybe I'm getting old, but I'm sure tired of watching post-college crusaders and neurotic middle class women discover sin for the first time. There is no crime, sin, outrage, land fraud, con, scheme, grand theft, graft, or plot to plunder the public treasury that hasn't been done and tried a thousand times.

The crime rate in the South Bronx may impress Hollywood film makers and social workers but I suspect you are better off dealing with a mugger there than you would have been dealing with a river pirate on the Ohio or the killers on the Natchez Trace. The general procedure after a brawl in a frontier tavern was to sweep up the eyeballs and ears that littered the floor.

I have faith in America's future because we have hard blood in our veins and because we are still attracting a hardy breed of immigrant. It still takes guts to come to America and start from scratch to build a new life. Whether they come by boat from Asia or Cuba or on foot from Central America or Mexico, these poor people coming here are the kind of people with grit and determination.

They'll make good citizens, too. The Scots, the Welsh, the Irish, and the Europeans who came earlier didn't know anything about American ways either, but they learned them, added to them, improved on them, and the new generation of immigrants will do the same. They'll endure the prejudice and the hard times. They'll put down roots and build families and businesses. And a few generations from now, a new group of hoity-toity types will be bragging about their ancestors who came from Saigon or Juarez.

America is a very special place and Americans are a special people. We work hard, play hard, and fight hard. We struggle. We sin. We try this extreme and then that extreme. We are impetuous and impatient. We think the words no and can't are synonyms for challenge. Greedy, extravagant and opportunistic? Yes, we are, but we are also generous and kind and caring.

The world has never seen such a people as we are because nowhere else did the world give so many poor-born people a chance to show what they were made of.

We are many colors and speak with many accents but when tested we are one people of one nation and don't ever sell us short.

Frozen pasture grass can poison livestock

Kiker

Frost will be hitting Midland County before long, and this could lead to prussic acid poisoning in livestock grazing certain pasture grasses and forage.

Although many plants contain the toxic material that causes poisoning, those causing the highest mortality in livestock when grazing after they have been frozen and wilted are Johnson and Sudan grasses and sorghum or hybrids of these.

The most dangerous time as far as the grazing of these plants is concerned is following frost when the plant material begins to wilt. Livestock should not be allowed access to the wilted material until it has dried completely. This usualy takes three or four days of good sunlight. New plant growth usually becomes nontoxic and can be grazed within 10 days to two weeks following a rain.

As far as prussic acid poisoning is concerned, the poison acts rapidly and can kill animals within minutes. In most acute cases, animals become affected within 10-15 minutes after eating toxic material and can die in two to three minutes. Symptoms may include a brief period of stimulation followed by depression and paralysis. Signs of colic may be present. Stuper (loss of sensibility), difficult breathing and frequent convulsions may result. Death is caused by suffocation since oxygen remains in the blood and is not exchanged to the tissues. This also causes the blood to appear bright red.

To prevent prussic acid poisoning in livestock these steps should be followed:

- Allow plant material affected by frost to dry thoroughly before grazing. This may require a week or more of good sunlight.
- Feed animals hay or a supplement before turning them in on plants that may contain prussic acid. Animals that are not hungry will not be affected as seriously by toxic material since their intake will be limited.
- Remove all animals from the pasture if one in the herd show any signs of poisoning.
- Call a veterinarian immediately if an animal appears to be poisoned. An antidote to treat affected animals is highly efficient if given early. This product is availabe from veterinarians.
- Have suspect plant material checked by the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratories at College Station or Amarillo. Local veterinarians will be happy to submit samples for you.

The overall key to prevent prussic acid poisoning in livestock is to be aware of plant materials that may cause poisoning and then to keep cattle from grazing such plants until a safe period has passed.

Arizona farmer raises love range-grass seeds

ELFRIDA, Ariz. (AP) — Roger Major is hooked on love grass — not the kind of grass the cops like to confiscate, but the kind cattle like to munch.

Major, who farms north of Elfrida, said he thinks he might be the only commercial grower of irrigated Cochise love grass seed. The love grasses are natives of South Africa. The heat-and drought-tolerant species have been brought to the United States to help revegetate deteriorating rangeland and abandoned farmlands.

Range-grass seed fell into the right hands when it met up with Roger Major. Raised on a Washington state dairy farm, he majored in agriculture in college. He graduated from the University of Arizona in 1972 with a Ph.D. in agronomy. His specialty was seed physiology.

After he graduated he went to work on a ranch near Elfrida that was raising test plots of range grasses. The ranch discontinued its experiment, but when Major moved on to his own farm he remembered the tough grass.

"It's not a big moneymaker," he said, but it fits in with his diversified farming operation and requires little water.

"Economics have been tough," Major said of farming, but the fact that his family can work it together helps. His wife, Barbara, and their five children help out by "pruning, packing squash, whatever. We kind of do it together," Major said.

The trend nationally toward smaller, family operated farms is encouraging to him.

STATE

A fast-moving cold front triggered very heavy thunderstorms today as it roared across Northwest Texas.

Very heavy thunderstorms were reported at dawn in an area from just northeast of Sweetwater to near Stamford in Northwest Texas. Forecasters said brief heavy rain could be expected in the thunderstorms as they moved eastward at 15 mph.

Forecasts called for a partly cloudy and mild day over most of Texas today as the front moved eastward, spreading showers and thunderstorms across northern sections of Texas.

Lows tonight will be near 30 in the Panhandle and in the 40s and 50s elsewhere. Highs Saturday will be in the 50s and 60s over most of the state, reaching into the 70s in the Big Bend area South Texas.

Snow-prompted travelers' advisories were issued for the mountains of northeast Oregon, where up to 6 inches of snow was forecast, and for the mountains of the Idaho Panhandle. Colorado's mountains also had snow.

Gale-force wind warnings were posted for the coast of Washington and the northern coast of Oregon.

Thunderstorms ranged along the eastern Gulf of Mexico coast and across the North Carolina coast.

Rainshowers extended from Florida into Maryland, from Georgia across northern Mississippi, the Tennessee Valley, the Ohio Valley and the upper Great Lakes

'Dogs won't roll over and die for Mojo

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Playoff hopes are gone but that doesn't mean Midland High wouldn't like a say in who gets which berth from District 4-5A. In fact, the Bulldogs have both of the top two playoff contenders on their schedule in the final two weeks.

The Bulldogs can't knock either Odessa Permian or Midland Lee out of the playoffs by themselves since both teams can clinch a berth with only one victory. But, who wins the district and who finishes second is still in doubt.

Permian is going into tonight's 8 p.m. game with Midland High with a 7-0-1 overall record, 4-0-1 in 4-5A play. The Panthers are a half-game up on Midland Lee, 6-2, 4-1, in the standings and 1½ games ahead of Odessa High and San Angelo, both 6-2, 3-2.

Should the Panthers lose to the Bulldogs, they can still gain playoff entry next week with a victory over Odessa High.

Lee, on the other hand, can go into next Friday's game with the Bulldogs already in the playoffs. The Rebels are at Ratliff Stadium tonight against the Bronchos and can clinch a berth with a victory.

At 4-4, 2-3, the Bulldogs are out of contention. But, ~~that~~ doesn't mean they are ready to play dead.

"The season isn't over," said Bulldog head coach Doug McCutchen. "Our chance to represent the district is gone but we still have two ball games left. The kids still want to go out and win."

"We're approaching this game as a playoff game, that's what it amounts to for us," said Permian coach John Wilkins. "We win this game and we're in the playoffs. Midland High has a lot of pride and character. They finish the season against two traditional rivals, us and Lee, and I'm sure they'll play as hard as they can."

BOTH THE Bulldogs and Panthers are coming off victories — Midland High defeated Abilene Cooper and Permian beat San Angelo — and both teams appear to be in a fairly good injury situation.

The Bulldogs aren't missing anybody this week who played against Cooper. "We're in real good shape," said McCutchen.

Permian does have a few players on the mend but only one starter will be out of the lineup.

"We're going to be missing Kevin Wilson," said Wilkins. "Kevin dislocated an elbow and missed the San Angelo game. Kevin is a starting guard and has played a lot on defense. He's one of our team captains. Hopefully, he'll start working out next week.

"Of course, Rich Fletcher (early season knee injury) is still out but he'll start working out next Monday. Mike Sanders, on specialty teams, broke a toe and he's still out. Everybody else, I think, is ready to go."

There is one other player Wilkins lists as "banged up," and that's quarterback/split end Greg Anderson.

"Anderson got hurt in the game Friday night. We'll wait until Friday to see what he looks like."

Anderson or Jason Harrington will get the call at quarterback against Midland High. If Harrington calls the signals, Anderson will move over to his regular split end position.

OFFENSIVELY, BOTH teams like to mix up the run and pass.

"Permian has really come on since playing Lee," said McCutchen. "They're playing much better now than they did against Lee. They haven't been making as many mistakes or as many turnovers.

"The main thing as far as Permian's offense is it's consistent, with a lack of turnovers. They're very consistent moving the football, very patient on offense. But, they have the ability in breaking the big play with Anderson out there.

"They've got a real good scheme, particularly against our kind of defense," said Wilkins. "They mix the pass well with the run, an extremely well balanced team. Like I told our team, the way they throw the ball, especially late in the game, they're never out of it."

On the other side of the ball, McCutchen is concerned about the historical defensive tradition of the Panthers.

"Traditionally, a Permian team is always strong," said McCutchen.

To the winners go the playoff spoils

Lee win over OHS means Rebs in playoffs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland Lee coaches and players can put away the slide rules at 8 p.m. here tonight when the Rebels clash with the Odessa High Bronchos at Ratliff Stadium in a key District 4-5A football confrontation.

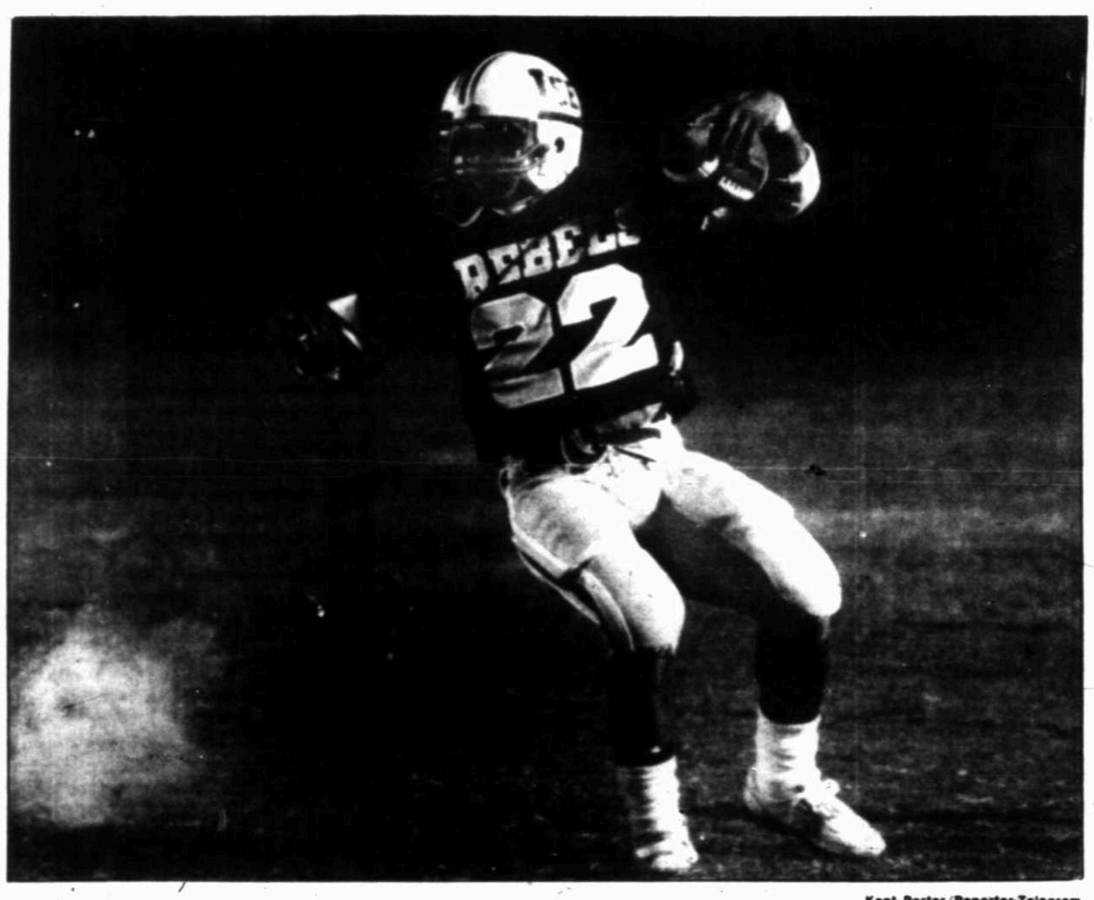
The computer calculations are in and the results are simple enough. If Lee can pull off a win tonight, the Rebels are back in the state playoffs for the third consecutive year.

Should Lee lose? Well, bring back the slide rules, wait another week and risk missing the playoffs.

It's the second possibility that has Lee pointing toward OHS. The 6-2 Rebs can make things easy on themselves with a victory and they would like nothing better than to enter the cross-town matchup with Midland High next week with their name already penciled into the state's 5A playoff bracket.

"WE'RE GLAD to have the opportunity to be playing for a playoff spot. This is what you work so hard for all year," noted Lee coach Jack Tayrien. "It's really simple for us. We win this week and we're back in the playoffs. I hope our kids can rise to the challenge because a lot of people are telling them that they are going to be back in the playoffs. People expect that now. We've got to win first and you don't back in in this league."

Despite a 34-16 loss to Big Spring last week, OHS owns the same 6-2 season record as the Rebels. Odessa High usually gives Lee fits on the football field, but Broncho head coach Jerry Millsapps threw a monkey wrench into tonight's shootout when he announced his resignation, effective at the end of the season, following the loss to the Steers.



Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Lee's Rodney Sims leaves behind a cloud of dust as he makes a cut upfield.

WHAT PART that action will play in the game is the big question begging for an answer and neither coach knows if that will be a factor or not.

"I really don't have any idea how our kids will react," noted Millsapps this week. "That's something you can never tell about until we play a game. We're still in the hunt, so it's a big game for us. I know that. I'll coach as long as we play this year. I think I'll be more relaxed since everything is out in the open. I was going to resign at the end of the year anyway."

Millsapps, who has always had the respect of his players, then deadpanned, "I really don't even know if the kids even care that I'm leaving. It may not be a factor at all."

MILLSAPPS' resignation hasn't gone unnoticed in the Lee camp, but Tayrien isn't playing any guessing games with this one.

"This game is too important to be worrying about how Odessa High reacts to Jerry's decision," said Tayrien. "I don't know how they will react. They could be down, or they could play these last two games for Jerry like it was a holy crusade. It really doesn't matter to us because we have no control over that situation. It's our job to control our own situation and get our kids ready to play."

LEE ENTERS the game with a 4-1 league mark, owning sole possession of second place. San Angelo and OHS both stand at 3-2. That means if Lee wins, it doesn't matter if the Rebs were to lose to MHS next week since they already own the tie-breaker against San Angelo after a 12-7 win on 4-5A's opening night.

But Tayrien knows that OHS is an explosive team and that a victory will be hard to come by.

"Odessa has some tremendously talented backs and they probably have the most underrated offensive line in the league. They have the capabilities of breaking the big play from anywhere on the field," said Tayrien. "Odessa has great team speed on both sides of the ball."

Millsapps, however, has his own problems. "Lee scares you to death. Their offensive line is the best around. The center and two guards (Wade Weisepape, Jake Young and Ricky Lee) are the best I've seen. Our defense is going to be severely tested in this one."

Millsapps has his own unique way of putting the game in perspective, saying, "What it comes down to is that we have to try and score one more point than Lee. It's really simple and that's probably why I'm leaving."

LEE HAS some added problems heading into the game. Starting quarterback Tuey Rankin may be sidelined again with a dislocated knee cap, suffered in the Abilene High game last week. A shoulder separation sidelined him earlier this year. Rankin rushed for more than 100 yards for the first time in his varsity career last weekend before the injury.

"We're listing Tuey as doubtful right now. He hasn't worked out with the team this week, but has been working on the knee. We don't think it is an injury that will keep him out long, but we're looking at him on a day-to-day basis," said Tayrien.

Also, starting tackle Paul Sharrick has had a touch of pneumonia and is doubtful against OHS.

Junior Rodney Johnson, Lee's leading passer, has proven to be a key cog for Lee when Rankin has been injured and will probably start in the place of Rankin. Junior John Bradley will replace Sharrick at offensive tackle.

BOSTON (AP) — Fenway Park in Boston, a long-time legend for its Green Monster Wall in left field, added another more subdued conversation piece in the 1985 season.

It was one red chair among a bunch of blue seats 12 rows in back of the Red Sox bullpen in right field. It marks the spot where Hall of Famer Ted Williams hit a home run in 1946 that landed and remained on the top of a fan's straw hat.

Candy robbing time in 4-5A?

Midland High and Odessa High hope to play the role of rude hosts tonight as they put on Halloween masks of George Brett and uniforms of the Kansas City Royals.

They hope to rob the playoff candy bags of Odessa Permian and Midland Lee. How MHS and OHS will play tonight is the key question being asked in District 4-5A football circles.

Things are simple for Permian and Lee. Win tonight and they both are in the state playoffs, Permian for the sixth consecutive time, Lee for the third straight time.

If Permian (4-0-1) and Lee (4-1) can win it won't matter next week if they win or lose. They could be making playoff arrangements over the weekend.

Should both lose, we have another can of worms to open next weekend, so the question comes back to MHS and OHS. Just what kind of mood will they show up with tonight?

Should Permian win against MHS and OHS, which they are favored to do, the Panthers would earn their sixth consecutive 4-5A title and no team in the league has ever done that.

Lee has never before been in the state playoffs three years in a row, so the incentive is with the favorites.

Meanwhile, another little drama will occur to the north Saturday at 2 p.m. when Amarillo Palo Duro meets Amarillo High. Both are unbeaten in District 3-5A play and both are playoff bound. The Saturday winner will meet District 4-5A's runnerup while the loser will face 4-5A's winner in two weeks when the bi-district round of the state playoffs begin.

It will be interesting to see how all these little dramas will workout this weekend.

Here's a look at how it will turn out while carrying a 34-10 picking record for 4-5A teams. While the percentage is pretty good, there is no one perfect week to show for it. Upsets seem to happen weekly in 4-5A, but Lee and Permian seem to avoid the major spills.

Odessa Permian 42, Midland High 14: Never try to grab candy from Mojo when playoff glory is on the line. This is where the Panthers become Murder, Inc.

Midland Lee 28, Odessa High 7: The key factor here is how the Bronchos will react to the resignation of head football coach Jerry Millsapps. The thought here is that it won't make much difference because the Rebels have their own set of incentives — playoff incentives.

San Angelo 62, Abilene Cooper 0: Isn't this where the Bobcats left off last year? The Concho Kitties still have slim playoff hopes, but even this rout of the Cougars won't help them in that area. They still must learn to defeat either a Lee or Permian to be a serious title threat.

Abilene High 38, Big Spring 24: The pressure is now off both of these teams and they are opening up the offense in a have-fun-while-it-lasts attitude.

Amarillo Palo Duro 21, Amarillo High 14: This isn't a 4-5A game, but the result effects the league. What this score means is that Lee will face Palo Duro in bi-district play — a rough state playoff opener for the Rebels.

A new Super Conference among Public Ivies

A couple of years ago the New York Times came out with a college evaluation that declared that the traditional Big Three of Academia were fading into the background, no longer, presumably, able to keep pace.

Today's Big Three, Yale, Harvard and Princeton of yesteryear, said the Times, updated would be, or is, Brown, Virginia and Stanford.

No follow up was forthcoming on the havoc the news might have created in Cambridge, New Haven or the plains of central New Jersey, but an educated guess is that the applications for admission have suffered dramatically.

Undoubtedly all three were moved to reevaluate their situations.

It seems tragic. Once these hallowed halls of higher learning commanded respect and admiration all over the world.

In fact, I distinctly remember a bumper sticker exclaiming proudly, "UTEP, the Harvard of the West." No greater tribute could be accorded a fellow institution.

PERHAPS the hand writing was on the wall a year or so ago when another bumper sticker appeared in Tennessee, or maybe it was in Massachusetts where the envy showed, which declared, "Harvard, the Vanderbilt of the East."

And now the coup de grace. Richard Moll's new book on colleges deplores the climbing cost of education among the Ivy League colleges and has come out with an alternative....The Public Ivys...eight state colleges offering Ivy quality career preparation at less than half the price of any Ivy education.

Moll evaluated the colleges on costs, admissions, academic quality, student concerns, faculty and campus atmosphere.

Moll's annoucnement will, of course, bring immediate reaction. First, and most obviously, a meeting of college presidents and athletic directors will be called to discuss this latest turn of events and you can bet it will pose cause serious reprecussions in the Pac-10, SWC, Big 10, ACC, Mid-American and Southern conferences.

IT IS only natural that institutions with common interests, goals and lofty academic standards should be moved to review their present associates and perhaps consider alternatives. The logical step for such sister institutions is the formation of an athletic conference to address the needs of the Public Ivys, providing competition for its own kind.

It just doesn't seem fitting and proper that Moll's select list should continue to associate with the riff-raff of their current conferences. It can only lead to trouble and NCAA reprimands and suspensions.

Of course, if these schools band together out of academic considerations, by wild chance, it might also lead to a Super athletic conference that would dominate the college athletic world.

Think of it....the University of California, University of Michigan, University of Vermont, College of William and Mary, University of Texas-Austin, Miami University, Ohio, University of Virginia, and University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Admittedly, it, at first glance, seems like a strange blend of big, small and what-is-it, as in the case of Miami and William and Mary. It was always thought both were private colleges.

ATHLETICALLY, they seem to have little in common, but with a little imagination....the potential is staggering. It wouldn't be just a football league like the SWC, a baseball conference like the Pac-10 or a basketball hotbed like the ACC.

Texas, of course, would be the new league's candidate to rule college football, provided the Longhorns could dispose of Michigan.

North Carolina would dominate basketball and W&M would supply the historical presence that would make its athletic contributions incidental. UVA would be the league's soccer-lacross-rugby, or whatever, power.

And in this kind of company, Vermont might be encouraged to do the little extra that would bring it the NCAA ski championship, instead of those galling second place finishes to Utah and Colorado every year.

If any one ever needed a football coach, Miami would have an Ara Parseghian ready.

Sounds wonderful and noble, doesn't it?

I know, I can't buy it either. I did my best in the interests of No Pass, No Play rule to make it sound palatable, but, let's be honest, it would make a lousy football conference and the travel would bankrupt the athletic programs. Besides, there's no way that Texas and Michigan could field football programs on a par with the other members.

As ideal as it may sound, it just won't work. But I suppose the college presidents and AD's will meet and discuss their mutual problems, but let's hope they don't get any ideas.

Tyler closes in on Juco grid championship

TYLER (AP) — The Tyler Junior College Apaches need only one more win to clinch at least a tie for the Texas Junior College Conference championship, but the league's top offensive club, Henderson County, stands in the way this weekend.

Tyler, perennial rulers of Texas junior college football, has a perfect 4-0 record in league play after its 34-17 triumph over Ranger last weekend and is ranked eighth nationally by the National Junior College Athletic Association.

In other conference action last week, Kilgore defeated Blinn 35-19 and Navarro defeated Cisco 27-24. In a non-conference game, Henderson County fell to Northeastern Oklahoma A&M 35-17.

Quarterback Scott Williams, with 93 of 184 passes for 1,141 yards, and running back Kerry Joe Beasley, with 100 carries for 719 yards, have sparked the Henderson County Cardinals, who are averaging 383.7 yards per game.

However, Tyler still has the league's leading runner in Marvin Allen who has picked up 823 yards on 150 carries.

Navarro maintains its stronghold in team defense. The Bulldogs have given up only 180.6 yards a game and have held their last two opponents to minus-20 yards rushing each.

Tyler's sophomore kicker Matt Banks leads the league in scoring with 62 points — on 13 field goals and 23 extra point kicks. Banks already has broken conference records of 11 field goals in one season, 19 field goals over two seasons, and 52 points in a season by a kicker.

The Apaches have a 1½-game edge over Henderson County and Kilgore, both of whom are 2-1 in league play.

Ranger is at Blinn in a Thursday game. In Saturday action, Henderson County is at Tyler, Kilgore at Cisco and Northeastern Oklahoma A&M at Navarro.

Tech's Smith has knee surgery

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech halfback Timmy Smith underwent surgery Wednesday to repair torn cartilage in his left knee and will miss the rest of the season, officials said.

The 6-foot, 205-pound junior from Hobbs, N.M., led the team in touchdowns with four and was the squad's fifth-leading rusher with 140 yards in 26 carries despite seeing limited action since suffering the injury in a season-opening 32-31 victory over New Mexico.

Smith had 97 yards and two touchdowns in seven carries in the win over New Mexico.

Eric Broussard of Port Arthur holds the 300-pound test line as Joey Gonsoulin hauls in one of six alligators caught on this morning expedition outside of Port Arthur.

Leave that switch home

Beef, 330-pound line recommended

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Baseball-sized pieces of beef lung and frog parts had been baited on huge hooks and dangled tantalizingly on cane poles about one foot above the bayou surface the night before.

The hooks were secured to a 300-pound test fishing line and looped back to a fence post on the shoreline.

And now the early morning marshland silence is pierced by the noisy roar of the airboat's motor, carrying the hunters to check their lines.

The boat skimmed past a cane pole still intact with its bait undisturbed. But at the next stop, the cane pole had been tossed aside and the strong test line was taut, obviously detaining something powerful beneath the water.

WITH ONE hand, Donnie Broussard, a veteran hunter, pulled away some alligator grass and water hyacinth for a better view over the side of the airboat. In the other hand, Broussard held a .30-06 rifle.

Joey Gonsoulin, 22, held a firm grip on the line, trying to gently pull the catch to the surface.

"Don't get him upset, we don't want him any madder than he already is," Broussard cautioned. "Pretend you're bass fishing. If he wants to run, let him run."

Tense seconds later, a large, dark form could be seen nearing the surface and the report from Broussard's rifle coincided with its break to the surface.

Alligator hunters call it "dispatching" their prey.

BROUSARD'Ss first catch of the day was a 10-foot-6 alligator, taken on the Big Hill Bayou in Murphrie Wildlife Refuge near here. He added three more catches within an hour, one an 11-footer.

Texas second alligator hunting season in 16 years closed Sunday. The reptile went on the endangered species list in 1969 and had been protected until last year when a limited hunt in 11 southeast Texas counties resumed.

Wildlife biologists say the two year harvest has not diminished the gator population in the state.

Texas Parks and Wildlife officials say it will be about two weeks before figures on this year's hunt will be available.

Wildlife officials decided last year to issue 780 alligator tags. Only 474 tags were purchased from the state and only 437 alligators were actually harvested.

Kirby Brown, manager of the Murprhie Wildlife Refuge near here, said 925 tags were available this year and about 750 were purchased.

Broussard, 42, recalls hunting alligators as a youth for spending money and was eager to resume his hobby last season.

"It seems like we're catching bigger gators this year," he said. "They want us to take the bigger ones out here."

When the species started its comeback in the state, alligator nuisance calls became more and more commonplace.

"The more gators you have the more nuisance problems you have," Brown said.

ALLIGATORS are becoming more cautious after being shot at for two seasons, Broussard said, but some are still almost like pets. Broussard, who owns a duck hunting camp on the bayou, said he regularly feeds "Herman."

"Herman comes right up here to the dock," Broussard said. "But we haven't seen Herman since the season started."

This year's hunt was carried out under strict guidelines set out by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department designed to catch all alligators hooked.

Alligators find the dangling bait with their accute sense of smell They swallow the bait and the hook becomes embedded in the gator's stomach. He then waits to be "dispatched."

In addition to the valuable alligator hides, hunter Jerry Norris foresees a good market for gator meat, which is often described as tasting similar to chicken.

"The meat can be marketed on the east and west coasts," Norris said. "It's better than beef and it's better for you. It has less cholesterol than beef. I guess I shouldn't be saying that in Texas but it's true."

Alligator farming is not out of the question, Norris said.

"They're just like hogs, they'll grow as long as you feed them," he said.

In addition to the contract hunters, the state experimented with a "free-swimming hunt," allowing 44 tags to hunters who could harvest alligators by any means.

A state-appointed observer accompanied each free hunter to report on their methods and success.

"I'd say 30 percent to 40 percent of alligators we considered to be hits, have not been recovered," Brown said.

ONE OF the observers said "There may be some safety problems involved. I personally hate to see the waste of a hunted animal."

But Tommy Stansbury was not among those who allowed his gator to escape.

Hunting the far backwaters of Murphrie, Stansbury wounded an alligator and then startled his observer by diving into the water when the gator appeared to be escaping.

Stansbury was rewarded by hauling in a 12-foot-3-inch alligator that weighed over 520 pounds.

"I was lucky to have help from the observer," Stansbury said. "But he told me he'd help from inside the boat."

Wisconsin cancels bear hunt

By JIM CARLSON

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Like all Wisconsin bear hunters, Dale Decker found himself locked out of the woods this year.

The state canceled its bear season as a way of stopping what game managers say have been excessive kills in recent years.

Decker, who heads the Wisconsin Bear Hunters Association, said that after missing the bear hunt, he might repeat last winter's hunting trip to Wyoming, where he saw a mountain lion but didn't shoot it.

But Decker said his group has no quarrel with the state Department of Natural Resources over a proposal that would let the DNR issue a limited number of permits to restrict the bear kill.

"The quota system isn't really that bad, if they feel that's the only way to control the harvest," he said.

In the past, the DNR issued an unlimited number of bear hunting licenses. But the DNR said recent annual kills of 1,000 or more bears trimmed the population to about 3,600 after last fall's hunt. That compares with a goal of maintaining a population of about 5,500.

LAST SPRING, the legislature failed to approve a proposal that would have given the DNR authority to issue 500 bear-hunting permits. A stumbling block proved to be a provision that would have allowed people to buy separate permits for pursuing bears with dogs but not actually hunting.

When the legislature failed to act, the state Natural Resources Board in June canceled the bear hunt.

Ironically, the cancellation came during the same year that hungry bears caused a drastic rise in nuisance complaints, especially in the northwestern corner of the state.

DNR wildlife researcher Bruce Kohn blamed the coincidence on poor luck for game managers that wound up being good fortune for bears.

"It would be a very bad year to have a hunt," said Kohn. "We could really overharvest when they come in to the bait stations."

He said the number of nuisance complaints, which quadrupled in some areas, is not directly related to the population, but it is related "to the nutritional stress the bears are going through right now."

KOHN SAID weather conditions resulted in poor crops of berries and other wild plants and insects on which bears feed. Many reacted by invading backyard bird-feeders, garbage cans or other sources of food.

Decker and Kohn said not having a bear hunt stopped hunters who use bait from following their usual preseason routine of setting apples, old pastries and other foods out as early as July.

"There was tons and tons of bait that was hauled up there to feed the bears," he said. "This year, none of that was hauled up there."

Various groups recently helped prepare a bear hunting proposal expected to come up for action by the legislature and Natural Resources Board this fall.

Decker said closing the hunt prompted many hunters to head for Michigan or Canada. He said he went on practice runs during the dog training season July 10 to Aug. 31 and experienced the thrill of treeing a bear.

"I enjoy that as much as the hunt," he said, adding that he finds the bear a "magnificent" animal capable of butrunning and outsmarting the dogs used to pursue it.

"They are the masters of the woods," he said. "They're not afraid of anything ... They're really a magnificent animal."

Cavaliers shed monkey before it grows

Associated Press

The Cleveland Cavaliers, in the words of World B. Free, were hoping a monkey wouldn't grow into an ape.

"We got the monkey off our backs," Free said Thursday night after the Cavaliers beat the Washington Bullets to win for the first time in four starts. And that, devout followers of the National Basketball Association realize, is a remarkable improvement.

Last season, the Cavaliers, who beat the Bullets 114-107 to hand Washington its first loss in four games, didn't win until their 10th try.

"That wasn't a monkey," said Free, who scored 24 points. "That was an ape."

Cleveland avenged a defeat Tuesday at the hands of Washington by storming to a 44-20 lead in the second quarter and holding on. The lead was built on a 13-point run in the first period.

"We probably could have played all night and not caught up," Washington Coach Gene Shue said. "In the first quarter, we did about as much as you can possibly do wrong."

But the Bullets, led by Jeff Malone, who had a game-high 25 points, pulled to within 44-32 with a 12-point streak of their own in the second period.

Roy Hinson matched Free's 24 points, and Phil Hubbard added 21 for Cleveland. Darren Daye had 21 and Dudley Bradley 16 for Washington, including three three-point goals.

Warriors 110, Knicks 104

An end to someone's frustration was guaranteed, with both teams non-winners going in.

"Patrick can't straighten out his left arm," New York Coach Hubie Brown said of Ewing, who picked up early fouls, played only 14 minutes and scored but six points in the first half. "He's nowhere near top condition. Give him credit. He is playing with a sub team and an injury."

Ewing scored 27 points but is still troubled with a stiff left arm, the result of a pre-season scuffle with Indiana's Steve Stipanovich.

Joe Barry Carroll won the battle of the big men, scoring 28 points as Golden State won its first game after three losses. Ewing fouled out with 32 seconds remaining.

"We had to take the ball to him (Ewing) and attack the basket," Golden State Coach John Back said of the strategy that limited Ewing's aggressiveness.

Sleepy Floyd added 22 points for the Warriors, while Pat Cummings scored 23 for the Knicks, who fell to 0-3.

"I'm never going to get used to losing," said Ewing, whose Georgetown team won the 1984 NCAA title.

Lakers 144, Suns 107

There was no reversal of form as far as Los Angeles and Phoenix were concerned, with the unbeaten Lakers rolling to their third victory while the Suns fell to 0-3.

Byron Scott scored 16 of his game-high 31 points in the third period when the defending league champion Lakers turned a 72-53 halftime lead into a 103-71 margin.

Mike McGee added 20 points for the Lakers, James Worthy had 15, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and rookie A.C. Green 14 each.

Denver 90, Seattle 73

Seattle's inept attack helped Denver, which climbed to 4-0, set a defensive record for the fewest points allowed in franchise history. The Nuggets had limited the New York Nets to 78 in 1976.

The Sonics also set an NBA record for fewest points in the fourth quarter with eight.

A pair of three-point goals by Mike Evans during a 17-2 run in the final period keyed the Nugget victory. Seattle actually had a 15-point lead in the second period.

NBA scoring leader Alex English — who was averaging 37.7 points per game — was limited to 17. Lafayette Lever added 15.

Clippers 120, Bulls 112

The Los Angeles Clippers tied a franchise record — set by the Buffalo Braves in 1976 — by increasing their record to 4-0. In so doing, they handed Chicago its first loss in four games.

Marques Johnson scored 17 of his 33 points in the third quarter, but the Clippers had to rally once more after a 10-1 Chicago spurt gave the Bulls a 104-99 lead with 6:57 remaining. Jamaal Wilkes scored five of 10 unanswered points, and the Clippers were ahead to stay.

Derek Smith scored 21 points for Los Angeles. Cedric Maxwell added 15 and guard Franklin Edwards chipped in 13 points and 15 assists.

Chicago, playing without injured Michael Jordan, was led by Orlando Woolridge's 28 points. Sidney Green added 17 points for the Bulls, and newly acquired George Gervin had 15.

Kings 122, Rockets 116

Sacramento came away a winner for the first time after a pair of losses. The Kings took the lead for good when Eddie Johnson scored to make it 115-114 with 1:13 remaining.

Larry Drew, who scored 14 points, sealed the victory by stealing an inbound Houston pass with 11 seconds to go and hitting a layup.

Sacramento, which led by as many as 18 points, got 37 points from Johnson. Akeem Olajuwon led all Houston scorers with 30.

Spain's Seve denied PGA card for 1986

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Seve Ballesteros' membership in the PGA Tour has been revoked and the Spanish golfer will not be allowed to play in tour co-sponsored tournaments in the United States next year, Commissioner Deane Beman announced Thursday.

Ballesteros, however, will remain eligible for the Masters, the U.S. Open and the PGA.

Those tournaments, the American-based trio in golf's Grand Slam events, have their own rules involving eligibility. They are not considered "co-sponsored events" by the tour, but rather are "approved events."

Ballesteros, one of the world's leading golfers, has won two Masters titles and a pair of British Open championships.

He also will be allowed to play in the USF&G Classic in New Orleans March 20-23, in which he is the defending champion.

THE RULING, made by the tour Policy Board at a meeting in New York Tuesday, came as a result of Ballesteros' failure to play in a minimum of tour 15 events in 1985, as required to retain membership.

Ballesteros, playing in the Portugese Open in Almancil, Portugal, said he had known about the ruling, but declined comment. "I'll say something later," he added.

He played in only nine American tournaments — including the Masters, PGA and U.S. Open — this year. In that limited schedule he collected $206,638 and won the New Orleans tournament.

In a prepared statement, Beman said:

"The board felt strongly that the basic structure of the PGA Tour in which players impose on themselves the obligation to support the tour and honor their playing commitments was important to uphold, more important in this case than the wishes of an individual player however prominent he may be."

Beman also said Ballesteros "will be welcome to play in 1987 ... subject to membership requirements."

The flamboyant Ballesteros first became eligible for tour membership after winning the 1978 Greater Greensboro Open.

HE DECLINED at that time, however, after a dispute over the number of U.S. tournaments he would be required to play and the procedures involved in playing non-American events.

In 1983, the so-called "Ballesteros" rule was instituted and he accepted American PGA Tour membership.

Under the terms of that rule, he was required to play a minimum of 15 American tournaments but would not be restricted in the number of events he could play on the European Tour.

'Black and Blue' Super Bowl on way?

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

A National Football League official, pondering the first half of the 1985 season, brought up the idea. How about, he asked, a black and blue Super Bowl?

Black, as in Raiders. Blue — dark, bruising blue — as in Bears. A collision that might blow the roof off the Louisiana Superdome, where Roman Numeral 20 will be played next Jan. 26.

Off the first half the NFL season, a distinct possibility.

While the defending champion San Francisco 49ers have stumbled to a 4-4 record and the Miami defense has betrayed it in a 5-3 halfseason that could be much worse, 1985 has turned into the year of the Bear.

While the Raiders are simply one of a half-dozen other teams playing well enough to show Super Bowl potential, Chicago has dominated the first half of 1985, both on its record and the panache with which it's played.

THE BEARS' devastating defense of a year ago, featuring all-Pros blitzing from all angles, has been augmented by offensive glitz that doesn't quite fit Coach Mike Ditka's blue-collar image.

"We may score 60 points some day," says Walter Payton, who's finally getting some help after 11 years as a one-man offense.

It features quarterback Jim McMahon of the purple shirts and polka-dot sunglasses — finally healthy and maturing in his fourth season; Payton, quietly having one of his finer years; and receivers like the heralded Willie Gault and the unheralded Dennis McKinnon and Emery Moorehead.

And, of course, the 1985 NFL conversation piece — William "The Refrigerator" Perry, the 308-350 pound rookie defensive lineman, who has one sack, but made it to the "Today" show by lining up in the backfield twice and producing offensive stats that read:

Carries 3, Yards 5; average 1.7; longest 2, touchdowns 1.

Plus two devastating blocks on "Monday Night Football" that made a bowling pin of George Cumby, a Green Bay linebacker 100 pounds lighter.

THE BEARS are one reason NFL TV ratings are up after three years in decline — Chicago is a major television market and the "Refrigerator Game" drew a 21, highest of this year and higher than 20 of 21 primetime last year. But the other major-market teams also are helping — the freeway and subway championship matchups that didn't happen in baseball could happen in football.

But there won't be an I-70 Super Bowl — St. Louis and Kansas City, both 3-5, rank among the major disappointments of 1985.

A Freeway matchup? The Raiders are 6-2 and tied with the Broncos for the AFC West lead and the Rams matched the Bears win for win until they ran into San Francisco last Sunday. Still, they lead the disappointing 49ers by three games despite the fact that Eric Dickerson, who set an NFL rushing record last season, still is stumbling after a 47-day holdout.

The Subway — er, New Jersey Transit — Super Bowl?

The Jets, with a defense rejuvenated by newly hired coordinator Bud Carson, lead the AFC East with a 6-2 record and would be a surprise — but not a shock — as the champion in what looks like the weaker of the two conferences. A lot depends on whether running back Freeman McNeil can stay healthy.

If the season had ended this week, here are some players who would be in line for honors:

OFFENSIVE PLAYER: McMahon; McNeil; Simms; Roger Craig, 49ers; Ron Jaworski, Eagles; Tony Hill, Cowboys; Louis Lipps, Steelers; Boomer Esiason, Bengals.

DEFENSIVE PLAYER: Howie Long and Mike Haynes, Raiders; Wes Hopkins, Eagles; Leonard Marshall, Giants; Andre Tippett, Patriots; Joe Klecko and Lance Mehl, Jets.

COACH: Ditka; John Robinson, Rams; Joe Walton, Jets; Dan Reeves, Broncos; Marty Schottenheimer, Browns; Darryl Rogers, Lions; Tom Flores, Raiders.

OFFENSIVE ROOKIES: Eddie Brown, Bengals; Mark Bavaro, Giants; William Perry, Bears.

SURPRISES (Positive): Lions, Eagles; Kevin Mack, Browns.

Denver continues pitch

DENVER (AP) — Mayor Federico Pena will accompany a delegation to New York next week as Denver makes its pitch to major-league baseball's expansion committee and Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

"We're trying to do all we can to get a major-league baseball team in Denver," said Pena. "We hope to make a good presentation and demonstrate that Denver is once again the No. 1 city in the country for major-league baseball."

Denver and 11 other areas will have one hour each to address baseball's criteria for expansion and how their areas meet those criteria.

Besides expansion, relocation of an existing franchise remains on the minds of several of the representatives.

Pena said the Denver delegation will emphasize the city's proven fan support and the immediate availability of a stadium.

Sonia and Mike Garza of Midland Lee make running a family affair. Both will run Saturday in the Regional cross country meet in Lubbock.

Garzas run Rebels into regional meet

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Running seems to run in the Garza family, and if one of them isn't careful, they could get run over.

Mike and Sonia Garza, both juniors at Midland Lee, are headed for the Region I Cross Country meet Saturday in Lubbock along with the Midland High team led by Valdemar Ruiz. It's a brother-sister act that gets a lot of help from home. Parents, Salome and Yolanda Garza, see to it that the two get the proper training — and sometimes that means that the family pickup plays a big part.

Mike revealed, "Sometimes my dad drives the pickup behind us when we run. He sets it on 10 miles per hour and I've found out that can be dangerous if you don't keep the proper pace."

Mike won the District 4-5A cross country title last weekend in Big Spring while Sonia won her berth with a fifth place finish. Ruiz was third overall while the Bulldogs took second in the district meet behind San Angelo to earn a team berth. The top five in each the boys and girls division last week earned a Region I berth and Saturday, the top 10 in each divtsion will earn a state berth.

MIKE WILL be making his second Region I appearance while this is the first for both Ruiz and Sonia. Mike also won Region I track berths in both the mile and two-mile last spring as a sophomore.

Still, Mike says that it was sister Sonia who got him started running long distance races.

"I started running 800 meters in the fifth grade because of my sister. She started earlier," says Mike.

Sonia added, "I started running in the third grade when we lived in California. I got started first and Mike followed."

The two train with each other under cross country coach Eddie Wolski, who also serves as an assistant football coach at Lee.

"I work them in the morning before school," noted Wolski, "but I don't have to worry much about those two because their parents see to it that they get all the running in they need.

"In fact, Mike told me that we will have to get into the football playoffs before he will be able to see Lee play football. His parents make them go to bed early on Friday nights because they always run in meets on Saturday morning."

RUNNING IS a family affair with the Garzas and you can be sure they will be ready when called on to run.

"Our parents have always been supportive of us," says Sonia. "They go to all the meets and bring the Gatorade for the whole team. They keep up with the times and yell to us during the races. They are our cheerleaders.

"Both of them run with us (when they aren't in the pickup)," says Sonia.

"Dad encourages us and mom takes us," is the way Mike put it.

Running cross country — three miles for boys and two miles for girls — is no easy task. The training is hard work.

Sonia and Mike do speed work before school under the direction of Wolski and then train on over distance of three miles after school with Salome and Yolanda.

"We run quarters, 800 and 200 meters at pace times before school," said Mike. "After school, our parents take us to run for the long distance training."

Shirley Stephenson, head girls basketball coach, has been taking the Lee runners to the cross country meets this year since Wolski is tied up with football.

She says, "I'm just the driver. I don't really do any coaching. I just see that the kids get to the meet and I've really enjoyed watching these kids compete. It's been fun for me.

"There is no doubt that the Garzas have everything under control when we go to a meet. The whole family is always there, pulling for each other. I think they are special people."

MIKE AND Sonia will turn their thoughts to the track season following the cross country season. Mike is already a track veteran at Lee, but Sonia will be making her spring debut.

There is one problem Saturday. Lubbock won't allow any pickups on the Mae Simmons Park course. But you can bet money on where the Garza family will be Saturday — together and running.

The Bulldogs, a surprise runner-up in last week's meet, will take Ruiz, Eraclio Sanchez, John Fernandez, Jose Hernandez, Tony Rodriguez, Ray Najara and Junior Natividad to Saturday's Regional in Lubbock.

McCrory-Curry scuffle will unify welterweights

NEW YORK (AP) — Milton McCrory and Donald Curry, a pair of undefeated welterweight champions who are eying heavier weight classes, will fight on Friday, Dec. 6 in Las Vegas, Nev., to unify the 147-pound title.

Both boxers have cleaned out their division and have nobody left to fight — except each other. And when they are done with that, both said Wednesday they will move up to the 154 and eventually the 160-pound classes.

Curry, who owns the World Boxing Association crown, said, "This is the fight I definitely have been waiting for. I'm on a mission to gain recognition. I want to go down in history as one of the best fighters of my time."

MCCRORY, THE World Boxing Council champ, called the Curry match, "a fight me and Donald both need. It will be a gate-opener for both of us."

Curry, 24, has won all 23 of his pro fights, 18 by knockout. McCrory, a year younger, is 27-0-1 with 22 knockouts.

McCrory's only non-victory was a March, 1983 draw with Colin Jones for the vacant WBC crown. He outpointed Jones for the title five months later and has defended it four times since then, including a three-round knockout of Carlos Trujillo in his most recent fight last July.

Without new home, Giants' move likely

By KENNETH REICH
Los Angeles Times

A move by the San Francisco Giants, most likely to Denver, seems a definite possibility, according to baseball insiders, unless steps have been taken by Jan. 1 to move ahead with construction of a privately funded baseball stadium in downtown San Francisco.

Although Denver seems the most likely city to get the Giants, Vancouver and New Orleans are regarded as other possibilities. In any case, the Giants would remain in the Western Division of the National League.

The situation, as it has developed in the last year:

—OWNER BOB Lurie of the Giants, a real estate magnate, threatened last fall to sell the team unless a new stadium were guaranteed. But Lurie ultimately withdrew his offer of sale and agreed to play through 1985 without such a guarantee in the old stadium that has proved a persistent loser — windy, cold Candlestick Park.

—The Giants drew an average of only 11,000 fans at Candlestick last summer. In recent weeks, Lurie has said emphatically that the Giants will not play another year in Candlestick. When he suggested that the Giants might move across the Bay and play in Oakland, pending completion of a new stadium in San Francisco, the idea was promptly rejected by Oakland authorities. Lurie now is in an even more exposed position than he was last year. Unless he gets a new stadium under way or moves in some direction, he will look weak.

—Corey Busch, the Giants' executive vice president for administration, said this week that Lurie is going to have to have some firm indication that a new San Francisco stadium is assured by the first of the year. The strong implication was that if no stadium deal is reached by then, the Giants will start looking around.

BUSCH SAID that negotiations with other communities are not under way yet, but he and others said that they could be concluded rather quickly, once begun, especially if Lurie remained the owner of the club even after a move. Denver, Vancouver and New Orleans all have stadiums ready and waiting and have actively been seeking expansion clubs or existing franchises.

In San Francisco, Mayor Dianne Feinstein has maintained that no public money will be used to construct a stadium. The latest idea for a privately funded stadium involves a venture by real estate developer Peter Stocker in which the Giants would be expected to invest perhaps $20 million.

Lurie and Stocker have talked, but Lurie is reported reluctant to make such a large commitment and is still unhappy with Feinstein and other local politicians because of their unwillingness to make a commitment.

LURIE IS a San Franciscan whose holdings, valued at up to $200 million, are centered in the city. He has often spoken of his devotion to San Francisco but apparently has been losing patience.

The proposed stadium would be built north of the freeway leading to the Bay Bridge and west of the Embarcadero — very close to the center of downtown. It would seat between 40,000 and 42,000 for baseball and be a part of a complex of shops and other facilities. Most parking would be in existing off-street parking facilities. According to planners, the stadium would be free of much of the wind that has plagued Candlestick.

Meanwhile, the pressure has been mounting on Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and the club owners in general to either increase the number of teams in the major leagues or agree to the relocation of ailing franchises. At least 12 cities are expected to send delegations to a two-day meeting Ueberroth has called in New York next week to consider expansion.

It was announced this week that Denver Mayor Federico Pena will lead his city's delegation to the New York meetings, at which each city will have an hour to present its case for a franchise. Other cities expected to be represented in New York are Vancouver, Washington, Indianapolis, New Orleans, the New Jersey suburbs of New York, Miami, Tampa-St. Petersburg, Buffalo, Phoenix and Columbus, Ohio.

Regardless of such expansion conclaves, It seems unlikely, however, that baseball will either expand or relocate franchises within the next year. If Lurie chooses to move, it is far more likely to be a matter of direct negotiations with the city or cities that emerge as possibilities, with perhaps Ueberroth having a behind-the-scenes role.

IN SUCH negotiations, the Denver authorities are thought at this point to have the inside track. The Denver Baseball Commission has been highly active, even to the extent of gathering pledges for the purchase of thousands of season tickets, and Denver has been close to acquiring a major league franchise before. Several years ago, the Oakland A's came close to moving there.

The Giants' situation in San Francisco has been deteriorating for a long time, and there has long been a question whether the Bay Area is big enough to sustain two franchises. Lurie's statements of the last two years have, in the words of one San Francisco observer, "painted him into a corner." Perhaps, at last, something is going to happen.

Rose will be a Red for at least 3 more years

CINCINNATI (AP) — As Pete Rose clowned with a bottle of champagne, Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott announced the signing of the player-manager to a new, three-year contract worth at least $1 million.

Schott brought out the champagne for Thursday's news conference and invited reporters to toast Rose, who as manager guided the Reds to a second-place finish in the National League West and as a player broke Ty Cobb's major-league career hit record of 4,191 in 1985.

Rose, 44, seized the champagne just before the Riverfront Stadium news conference and pretended to empty it over the owner's head. Schott smiled and said, "Next year," an apparent reference to her hopes of having a champagne-drenched championship celebration at the end of the 1986 season.

SCHOTT SAID Rose's contract was worth $1 million, but she didn't say whether that is Rose's annual pay or the overall value of the contract. Jim Ferguson, the Reds' vice president for publicity, said he didn't know the contract amount. Rose's old $225,000 contract expired Thursday.

The Reds distributed pencils proclaiming, in red letters: "Pete Rose — One in a Million."

Schott said the contract amount is intended "not so much as salary, but to reward him for what he has done."

Rose said his new contract doesn't depend on the number of fans the Reds draw, and does not require him to play any certain number of games.

SOME CRITICS, including a few Reds players, have suggested that because Rose is comparatively old and lacks power at the plate, he should bench himself in favor of using younger players regularly.

Rose noted, however, that the Reds were 64-46 in games he started. "It didn't seem like I was hurting the team.

"I'll play whenever I think I can help the ballclub. How long do I intend on playing? As long as I can do the job. The thing that helps me as a manager is my ability to get along with people, to communicate."

Last season, Rose collected 107 hits in setting a major-league career record of 4,204. Rose, who began his major league career with Cincinnati in 1963, batted .264 in 119 games in 1985. He platooned at first base with veteran Tony Perez and said he plans to continue that arrangement.

IN HIS first full season as Reds player-manager, he directed the club to a 1985 season record of 89-72, 5½ games behind Los Angeles in the National League West. The 19-game improvement — the Reds were 70-92 in 1984 — was the best in the major leagues.

"I'm more excited about 1986 than I was about 1985, and you all know how excited I was about 1985," Rose said. "We got the thing going in the right direction, both on the field and off the field."

Bruins cop 'lazy, dumb' win from LA

Associated Press

BOSTON — Butch Goring, the Boston Bruins' rookie coach, doesn't like horror shows, even ones with a happy inning.

However, Goring planned today to force himself to sit through a one-hour Halloween night party which he considered almost a prank.

Goring used sharp words, such as "lackluster ... lazy ... dumb," in describing the Boston performance Thursday night despite the Bruins 7-4 National Hockey League victory over Los Angeles before 10,214 oftenbored fans at the Boston Garden.

"Tomorrow is another day," Goring said. "I want a chance to watch the game again on tape. I can make some assessments after that."

Many of the Bruins, particularly some defensemen, would be better off avoiding Goring after he views the film.

Even though he allowed four goals for the first time this year, goalie Pete Peeters was the star of the Bruins' victory.

"Pete Peeters played a terrific game," Goring said. "He had a lot of key saves, especially in the early part of the game when we needed them. There's no question that if it weren't for Pete in the first period we would have been down two or three."

"WE HAD a lot of people who worked and I'm disappointed," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Quinn, whose Kings fell to 2-9. "Peeters is an outstanding goaltender. He's the reason we're standing here with nothing."

Red Wings 2, Devils 2

Doug Sulliman scored off a scramble with 28 seconds remaining and goaltender Alain Chevrier pulled for an extra attacker, tying the game for the host Devils. Sulliman shot Mark Johnson's rebound over fallen goalie Greg Stefan.

Kelly Kisio had given Detroit a 2-1 lead 1:18 into the third period on a power play. Gerard Gallant also scored for the Wings, while Johnson scored New Jersey's other goal.

Dollar falls

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell to a 4½-year low against the Japanese yen today but remained steady against leading European currencies. Gold bullion prices were mixed.

Traders in Tokyo attributed the dollar's decline to heavy selling in New York on Thursday after the U.S. government announced trade figures for September showing a record deficit.

At the end of today's session in Tokyo, the dollar was quoted at 209.85 yen, down from 211.80 yen Thursday. It was the first time the dollar has closed below 210 yen since March 31, 1981. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 209.675 yen.

—2.606 West German marks, unchanged

—2.1408 Swiss francs, up from 2.1395

—7.9395 French francs, down from 7.9475

—2.94 Dutch guilders, down from 2.942

—1.3668 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3664

The British pound edged down to $1.434 from $1.4435.

Trading in silver and gold bullion, meanwhile, was described as light.

London's five biggest bullion dealers fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $324.65 a troy ounce, up from $324 late Thursday.

The precious metal was quoted at a bid of $324.50 in Zurich, down from $325.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold fell to a bid of $325.14 from $326.78.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid of $6.06, down from $6.13.

Oil minister says OPEC price structure collapsing

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Oil minister Mana Saeed Otaiba said OPEC's pricing structure and production quotas have virtually collapsed because of competition from non-OPEC exporters.

"The OPEC member countries are henceforth not committed to the (production and pricing) procedures for which they had suffered so much," Otaiba told Abu Dhabi state television Thursday.

He complained that oil exporters who are not members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are producing freely and selling at "whatever prices they liked."

Otaiba's comments suggested that the United Arab Emirates and other cartel members might consider producing more oil to outsell what he called the "enemies of OPEC."

Arab diplomatic sources in Abu Dhabi said there was no OPEC-wide accord on abandoning the pricing structure and production quota, stressing that Otaiba's statement was the result of disarray over prices and production that has battered the cartel for about five years.

In Los Angeles, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Otaiba's remarks apparently had been prompted by Mexico's announcement Wednesday that it would drop the price of its heavy crude oil by 40 cents a barrel and raise the price of its light crude by 60 cents a barrel.

Mexico does not belong to OPEC.

"OPEC is infuriated at what Mexico did," Lundberg said.

Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg Letter oil industry survey, said members of the cartel decided earlier this month to leave pricing and production structures "as is" in an attempt to impose price stability on the market. But the Mexican pricing decision may disrupt OPEC's plans, he said.

"The Mexican decision by itself would not create an effect in the price of gas at the pump, but if this trend that Otaiba speaks of gets rolling, it could have an effect on the price at the pump," Lundberg said.

Otaiba warned that OPEC countries will not tolerate the current market conditions, where non-OPEC countries "have been overtaking the markets, flooding them with oil at whatever prices they set."

The outspoken oil minister is known for his effective lobbying within OPEC in the quest for unified pricing and production levels.

Industry analysts said Saudi Arabia had set the stage in recent weeks for a termination of the OPEC pricing structure and production quota limitations.

King Fahd of Saudi Arabia warned in September that his nation no longer could be counted on as OPEC's "swing producer," limiting its exports and maintaining its high prices to balance the price discounts and barter deals of other OPEC members.

The government of Kuwait quickly seconded the Saudi monarch's warning. The Kuwaiti oil minister, Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, said that it was no longer feasible to have some OPEC countries making "production sacrifices" while others were violating the cartel's decrees.

Responding to a question Thursday, Otaiba said that even though exporting countries "scored unlimited gains" as a result of the 1973 Arab oil embargo against Israel's Western backers, OPEC is now suffering because of that move.

"In 1973 we had a sellers' market, where the oil exporting countries had been able to dictate their terms," said Otaiba.

But he said the embargo and dramatic price increases forced importing countries to seek alternatives to oil such as coal and nuclear energy, and that OPEC countries are "now facing the consequences."

"Had the members of OPEC adopted a policy of gradual price increases, the importing countries would not have been seeking alternatives to oil," he said.

The United Arab Emirates is the seventh-largest producer of crude oil among among the 13 OPEC members. It has a daily quota of 950,000 barrels, and its 1984 production rate was 764,000 barrels a day.

Unemployment total freezes at 7.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment remained frozen at 7.1 percent last month as a record number of women gained jobs and service-oriented businesses posted large job gains, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the jobless rate for teen-agers registered a big jump during the month but other major categories either remained unchanged or posted slight improvements.

The country's depressed manufacturing industries also registered an increase of 60,000 jobs in October, but the gain still left employment in this important sector 270,000 below where it stood in January.

Civilian employment last month reached another record level, 107.9 million workers, a gain of 325,000 over the September level.

The 7.1 percent October jobless rate matched the September level, which was a slight deterioration from the 7 percent joblens rate in August. That figure had been the lowest level reached during the Reagan administration.

Even with the improvement, unemployment has been stuck at historically high levels for a recovery that is about to enter its fourth year.

Part of the reason has been the battering the country's manufacturers have taken from foreign competition.

For only the second month this year, the manufacturing sector registered a small job gain in October as factory employment climbed to 19.3 million workers, but the 60,000 increase did not replace all of the jobs lost in September.

TAB paying interest up front on special CDs

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

To put more money in Midland pockets, while pumping more money into the local economy during the Christmas season, Texas American Bank, Midland, is offering an unusual option on certificates of deposit — they'll pay the interest up front, in advance on special one-year certificates.

A special pilot program, called the "Cash Dash for Christmas CDs," starting today through January 15 Midlanders will be able to purchase a Cash Dash CD for as little as $5,000 and will be paid a full year's interest. At today's rate of 8.15 percent, the advance would amount to about $400.

According to Texas American Bank, the program was launched to provide customers with extra Christmas shopping money or the year-end option of reinvesting the interest in another interest-bearing account, such as a TABank Fund, IRA or even another CD. The program will be offered at all 33 banks in Texas.

"We perceive this as both a chance to spread some Christmas cheer and at the same time introduce an aggressive new product to the financial marketplace," said Charles G. Grimes, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Texas American Bank, Midland. "This is an alternative to giving toasters and other types of premiums for CDs."

Ann Quinn, TAB vice president-marketing, said that according to the bank's research this was the first time a bank had ever offered an interest-up-front promotion of this kind. She said the program differed from other promotions around the state in that customers receive cash up front and can buy anything they want instead of having to choose a gift.

Interest rates on the Cash Dash CDs will be set daily by a TAB bank economist in Fort Worth on a competitive basis and would be subject to daily to change. The simple interest would be paid the following business day in the form of a check or deposit to an existing or new account.

Penalty for early withdrawal will be the forfeiture of three months' simple interest plus the remaining interest which was advanced, reducing the face value of the CD.

Oklahoma, Kansas ranked highest in bank closures

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Federal bank regulators say the highest number of bank failures in the country are in Oklahoma and Kansas, closely followed by Texas, Nebraska and Iowa.

However, Paul Heafy, with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in Oklahoma City, said Thursday it is not fair to label the entire Oklahoma banking industry as problem-ridden.

"I think that when Robert Empie puts out his statement that banks have failed because of 'imprudent lending practices,' I think that's probably true of most in what has happened in Oklahoma," Heafy said.

Empie, the Oklahoma bank commissioner, and Heafy and the FDIC have closed 11 banks in the Sooner State this year.

Kansas also has had 11 bank closings.

"This certainly isn't the way we like to put it," said Heafy, "but Oklahoma and Kansas are certainly tied for number one in the country. Basically, if you cut right down the middle of country, the most bank closings this year have been in Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Texas."

The FDIC in Washington said its figures show nine bank closings each in Nebraska, Texas and Iowa. Missouri has had five banks to close. There has been one bank closing in Arkansas. Nationwide, 95 banks have closed in 1985.

The most recent closings in Oklahoma were the First State Bank of Jet on Oct. 18 and the Farmers State Bank of Afton, a day earlier. Both reopened as branches of other institutions.

But Heafy said there's too much being made of the bank closings figures.

"In a unit banking state like Oklahoma, where there are 550 individual banks, 11 closings in a year is a very small percentage of failure when considered as a whole. The same is true for Texas, which also is a unit banking state," he said.

Unit banking, officials said, is where each bank is considered a separate entity.

"So taken all together, the closures are not really a high percentage of the total number of banks in the state. Of course, a number of failing banks in a state with only 10 banks is significant. But generally we feel too much is being made of the figures," Heafy said.

But Heafy said the FDIC recognizes that any percentage of bank failures means somebody is making mistakes.

"We aren't minimizing the problem," he said. "If you have a 2 percent bank failure, it is obvious that those 2 percent aren't doing something right, or are doing something the others aren't."

And Heafy said federal and state banking officials might take a harder look at applicants for bank charters.

"We are talking about people having to show a real strength in banking backgrounds," he said.

Federal officials said five new bank charters were approved for Oklahoma in the first six months of 1985, three applications were accepted for study and two were denied.

Continental emerges profitable

HOUSTON (AP) — A pilot union's 2-year-old strike against Continental Airlines has been grounded, and the carrier's profits are soaring despite the walkout.

Continental and the Air Line Pilots Association annouced Thursday they have settled their longstanding dispute in an agreement approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge T. Glover Roberts.

ALPA was the only one of three unions that remained on strike against Continental. The Union of Flight Attendants and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers ended their walkouts in April.

The pilots' walkout is the longest strike in airline history and cost the union more than $58 million — most of it in strike benefits, which totaled $2,400 a month per pilot.

Continental has emerged as a low-cost carrier that stood its ground in disputes with its employee unions and recently posted its largest quarterly profit ever.

Tenneco announces three-cent increase

HOUSTON (SWN) — Tenneco Inc. announced an increase of three cents in its quarterly common stock dividend, effective with the fourth quarter of this year.

James L. Ketelsen, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said that Tenneco's board of directors voted to raise the dividend from 73 cents, which has been in effect for the first three quarters of this year, to 76 cents.

The new rate on an annual basis is now $3.04, compared with the previous annual rate of $2.92. Ketelsen said that this makes 1985 the 14th consecutive year in which total annual dividends paid per share have increased.

The dividend is payable December 10 to stockholders of record at the close of business on November 8. This is Tenneco's 153rd consecutive quarterly cash common stock dividend.

Dividends were also declared on the company's various issues of preferred, second preferred and preference stock. The preferred stock dividend is payable January 1, 1986, and the second preferred and preference stock dividends on December 31, 1985, all to holders of record on November 22.

Southland tests Oklahoma wells

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Southland Royalty Co. has announced test results on two significant development wells in Oklahoma.

Southland recently tested its Sledge No. 1-14 in Stephens County, Oklahoma, in which the company owns a 100 percent working interest. The well tested for an initial pumping potential of 710 barrels of oil and 450 MCF of gas per day from perforations in the Viola formation between 7,405 and 7,788 feet.

In Oklahoma County, Oklahoma, the company has recently extended the Prairie Bell Northwest field to the east with its Oak Tree No. 1-3.

The well flowed on a test at a rate of 273 barrels of oil and 1,100 MCF of gas per day on a 1/2-inch choke from Bartlesville sand perforations between 6,292 and 6,307 feet. Flowing tubing pressure was 150 pounds.

AGA forecasts price drop for natural gas consumers in 1985

PHOENIX — "The natural gas industry has emerged from the upheavals of the past year stronger than ever," the Chairman of the American gas Association recently said.

In a speech before the Association's Annual Meeting, Louis Reif, president and CEO of National Fuel Gas of Buffalo, NY, said the natural gas industry is ready to meet the challenges of a more competitive environment.

Reif called the stabilization of gas prices in 1984 and continued decline in 1985 "good news for consumers." AGA is forecasting consumer gas prices will drop about 8 percent this year, he said.

The AGA chairman said the gas supply abundanee "has restored consumer confidence in the gas industry's ability to meet residential, commercial and industrial demand.

"There are nearly 3 trillion cubic feet of gas available in excess of current demand, which is about 18 Tcf" Reif said, "and this surplus is expected to continue throughout the remainder of this decade," he continued.

Reif called the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's decision earlier this month to revise the way the gas industry operates a "landmark decision" and said that to the extent it enhances competition and reduces consumer parices it will be supported.

"Of much greater benefit however," Reif said, "would be the repeal of the Fuel Use Act and the incremental pricing provisions of the Natural Gas Policy Act. Repeal of these two deterrents to increased industrial use of natural gas could more to boost demand than any other action in Washington."

MMH head speaks out against Amendment 5

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Speaking out against a proposed state constitutional amendment, Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson addressed the Midland County Hospital District Board of Trustees at Thursday's monthly meeting.

"Amendment 5 is a proposal to regulate hospital districts like ours," said Branson. "What it would do to us would introduce elements we would not need. It would have no advantage for us."

Amendment 5, which appears on Tuesday's ballot, reads, "The constitutional amendment to authorize the Legislature to regulate the provision of health care by hospital districts." Midlanders will vote for or against 14 different amendments in the upcoming election.

Branson was fearful of legislative authority dictating local decision-making.

"The amendment would take local decision-making away from us," he said. "For example, the Legislature might decide that we need to offer open-heart surgery here, when it's just not necessary."

Branson added that the amendment could work positively for some areas.

"On the other hand, there are some hospital districts that do nothing and (the statute) would require them to do something," he said.

Branson also said the Texas Association of Public and Non-Profit Hospitals had taken no official stand on the amendment. MMH recently joined the association.

Reporting a continuing decline in the occupancy rate and the average length of stay per patient but an excess of revenues for the year to date, Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson wrapped up the fiscal year's financial situation and presented a three-year statistical comparison at Thursday's meeting.

"September did not end the fiscal year with a flourish when compared with July and August 1985 and September 1984," said Peterson.

Peterson reported 3,967 patient days — 650 less than expected — and a 68 percent occupancy rate.

"This compares with patient days of 4,574 for August, 4,370 for July and 4,493 for September 1984," he said. "Year to date, patient days of 52,499 compare with a budget of 57,065 and a 74 percent occupancy rate."

Peterson added that at the end of Fiscal Year 1984, 56,240 patient days were reported with an occupancy rate of 79 percent. The number of admissions, while not increasing dramatically, was holding stable, he indicated, with 919 admissions for September compared with 898 in September 1984.

Peterson said the excess of revenues over expenses for the year to date was $148,355.

"We exceeded the budget by 15 percent," he told the trustees. Peterson also told the group that due to the transfer of $2.1 million into the construction fund, MCHD would have monies for capital projects over the next year.

"With the closing of the bonds, we will transfer $2.1 million into the construction fund and will be drawing on excess construction funds in the next fiscal year for capital projects," he said.

Continuing high payments for indigent neo-natal patients transferred out-of-district were also a concern at the Board of Directors' meeting.

"During September, an abnormal amount of infants were transferred to Fort Worth Children's Hospital," said Peterson in his report. "Indigent care expenses during September of $418,610 exceeded budget by $181,610. For the year to date, indigent expenses of $2,917,000 exceeded budget by $117,636."

The directors approved several indigent care payments, including $11,494 to Cooks Childrens Hospital in Fort Worth, $8,066 to Lubbock General and $194,110 as reimbursement to MMH from MCHD.

Peterson reported a total billing of $685,767 from Fort Worth Children's Hospital in FY 85 with 535 patient days and payments of $543,036 made so far. More than $143,000 was charged at Lubbock General, with 14 patients accumulating 210 patient days.

"The average payment to Fort Worth is $38,788 while at Lubbock General it's $9,595," he said. "We're paying $648 per day at LGH and $1,025 per day at Fort Worth."

Peterson stated that September was a particularly heavy month for indigent expenses.

"We budgeted $2.8 million for the fiscal year and had actual expenses of $2.917 million," he said. "We had a total of $418,000 in September. We really 'hit the bell' that month."

Peterson recommended that part of October's tax collections go to pay an outstanding bill at Fort Worth Children's Hospital.

"We had $158,000 in the MCHD fund from tax collections this month," he said. "We recommend that $117,344 go to pay a current account in Fort Worth."

The directors approved the payment.

Other payments and partial payments included $140,932 to Area Builders. The payment, according to Peterson, leaves MCHD only $210,000 short of completion from the $9,988,000 owed the firm which handled the MMH expansion project.

Another partial payment of $284,194 as reimbursement to MMH.

Bids and contracts approved at the meeting included $14,995 for a blood gas analyzer, $6,854 for medication carts and accessories, $5,400 for suction regulators, $4,172 for new lockers, $3,176 for rescucitation bags, $6,900 for an oxygen analyzer and $7,498 for a personal computer for the cost accounting area. Also approved was new pediatric equipment.

In other business, the directors approved First City National Bank as the hospital's depository for the next two-year period, starting Jan. 1, 1986.

St. Lawrence's NovemberFest offers best of wurst

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ST. LAWRENCE — For the 29th year, the St. Lawrence community of German-stock family farmers will hold their annual Fall Festival Sunday on the grounds of the St. Lawrence Catholic Church.

"The festival is kind of a tradition," said Alfred Schwartz, who has been the king-pin of sausage-making here for 27 years. "This community is primarily of German ancestry. There's a lot of German people here, and they follow a lot of the old traditions."

Funds raised in the event will benefit the church.

"Everybody in the community works at this thing," Schwartz said. The festival annually attracts between 2,000 and 3,000 people from West Texas.

The parish of about 250 families is 10 miles south of Garden City off Texas Highway 33 and then five miles east off Farm-to-Market Road 2401.

The "NovemberFest" event, held on the first Sunday in November, will be highlighted by the 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. German-style dinner of sausage, pit-barbecued beef brisket, red beans, potatoes, cabbage slaw, cakes, pies and "all the trimmings," said Schwartz.

Coming with the feast, priced at $5 a plate, will be old-style German music played by the Bavarian Two, an Austin-based two-man band.

"You'd think it was an entire huge band," said Schwartz. "They're really good. Each guy probably plays two or three instruments at one time."

The musical dinner will be followed by a 2:30 p.m. auction, led by auctioneer Herb Henderson of Wolfforth, featuring the sale of bales of cotton, chemicals, lubricants and other farm and household items donated by area merchants.

Game booths at the feast will include dig-for-gold, cake walk, spin-a-wheel, bingo, balloons, grab bag and ring toss. A country kitchen of food stuffs will be set up.

Then, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., a sausage-sandwich supper will be served. All the while, uncooked German-sausage will be sold for $2.50 a pound to those who want to take the wurst home for cooking and eating.

Contests sponsored by the various church organizations will feature a handmade quilt of Grandpa's farm design, a satellite disc, stereophonic system, and a Midkiff contest featuring a choice of $400, a trip to Las Vegas, Nev., or a videocassette recorder. In addition, a quilt will be given away to benefit the Franciscan Mission in the Philippines.

The evening festivities will include a dance, played by the Country Showmen, from 8:30 p.m. to midnight. Admission is $4.

The 7,200 pounds of sausage for the feast will be made Saturday morning on the church grounds. Cooking of the 1,500 pounds of beef brisket will start at midnight Saturday. The sausage will be cooked immediately prior to being served Sunday.

The sausage is a mix of 60 percent pork and 40 percent beef, said Schwartz, who farms cotton and raises cattle and hogs.

"It (the sausage recipe) was handed down to me by my parents," said Schwartz, 57. "And the recipe was handed to them from theirs."

The St. Lawrence community was established in 1946.

Cultural differences barrier to U.S. firms

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Cultural differences in foreign countries and failure to consider these differences present significant problems for U.S. companies trying to do business overseas, members of the West Texas International Trade Forum were told during a Thursday luncheon.

Ron Christensen, El Paso Hydrocarbons director of technical relations, product applications and licensing of technology, explained some of the problems experienced by the Odessa-based company in dealing with foreign corporations and countries to about 30 WTITF members and guests at UTPB.

Christensen was substituting for Troyt B. York, the new director of the Permian Basin Center for Energy, Technology and Economic Diversification. York was the scheduled speaker but he was detained in Washington, D.C.

Christensen used Venezuela as an example of a country where language by itself can present problems. Most Americans, he said, think the Spanish word "manana" means tomorrow. But in countries where Spanish is the mother tongue manana means "not today," which can be very frustrating to Americans who want everything to happen yesterday.

In many foreign countries, Christensen said, Americans trying to do business in foreign countries quickly find out that time doesn't mean the same thing to businessmen in those countries as it does to them.

The rest of the world takes much more time to culminate business deals, he said, noting that dealing with countries with controlled economies, such as the Iron Curtain countries, can be particularly frustrating because it is often difficult to identify exactly who is in control.

The Far East, especially Japan, can be equally frustrating to Westerners who are accustomed to being direct in their business dealings, Christensen said. The Japanese are more leisurely, they tend to wear Westerners down, to work out compromises and learn everything there is to know about your product or service before entering into any business deal. Westerners doing business in foreign countries also find that, because many foreign companies are government supported, incentive is almost non-existent for risk taking because rewards are minimal.

Posing the question of how companies can respond to the difficulties of doing business in foreign countries, Christensen said, "Poorly, in some instances," noting that El Paso Hydrocarbons spent three years negotiating a contract in China.

UTPB Professor Howard Lukens, who teaches international business management, spoke briefly on the goals and needs of the recently-formed West Texas International Trade Forum.

Noting that UTPB has provided WTITF office space, Lukens said the organization has undertaken the task of trying to identify the purpose of businesses in the Permian Basin and West Texas.

Lukens said everyone knows his general capabilities, but to be successful in exporting technology and services it is necessary to know specifically the capabilities of each business. Citing the example of a company involved in the manufacture of sprockets, he said, if such a company makes very large sprockets for oilfield use, the possibility is strong the operation might be scaled down to produce sprockets for bicycles if the need can be found.

Lukens also noted WTITF needs all the ideas and input it can get from members if the organization is to be productive. Bill Gruer, El Paso Hydrocarbons personnel, who is WTITF vice chairman, said the organization is in the process of developing a document that will outline specific goals, which will be provided members.

Bullock: Tax structure must be changed

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas must change its state tax structure to better take advantage of the state's economy and keep up with growing demands for services, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday.

Bullock mentioned — but did not endorse — a personal or corporate income tax as one option legislators could use to reverse the trend of fewer tax dollars available to finance burgeoning state government. He also suggested imposing taxes on services or new industries to replace declining income from oil and natural gas severanee taxes.

"The industry that is growing the fastest — services — is hardly taxed at all," Bullock, the state's tax collector, told a blue-ribbon committee studying the future of higher education. "On the other hand, the industry we rely on for a large share of our tax revenues — oil and gas — is declining."

Colleges and universities, he said, will be competing with public schools, highways, prisons and other state services for dwindling state revenues.

The problem, Bullock said, is that only two-thirds of the state's tax income — from taxes such as the sales tax and corporate franchise tax — grows in proportion to inflation and population growth. Another 15 percent — such as gasoline, alcohol and cigarette taxes — mirror population growth but not inflation. The remaining 20 percent, which includes the oil and gas severance taxes, keeps up with neither.

"The plain fact is that either revenues must be increased or state expenditures reduced," he said.

Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, a member of the Select Committee on Higher Education that listened to Bullock's analysis, said he doesn't believe the public is yet concerned enough about state services to call for new taxes — especially an income tax.

"Unless there is a serous turnaround in the petrochemical industry, a serious turnaround in the economy and deregulation of natural gas, we're going to be scratching for enough tax money to maintain state services," Parker said. Asked where he might start scratching, he said, "I don't know."

Lawmakers will probably feel the itch when they return in 1987 to write the 1988-1989 state budget, Bullock said. The Legislature barely balanced the 1986-1987 budget with tuition and fee increases and some cuts in agency budgets this year. The 1987 Legislature, he said, "will have just enough money" to keep services at the current level.

"If they want to write a budget that keeps up with our inflation and population trends, they will need to raise about another $2 billion to $3 billion over and above expected revenues," Bullock said. "And if they want to add any new programs or expand existing programs, they will need even more above that."

Bullock joined two other professional fortune tellers who attempted to give the committee some idea of what Texas will be like in the year 2000. Gov. Mark White has charged the committee with proposing higher education reforms that will lead the state into the 21st century.

Crystal-ball estimates of the state's turn-of-the-century population ranged from Bullock's 20.7 million to a Department of Health prediction of 25.3 million. The forecasters offered three different projections of a number the committee particularly wants to know: how many Texans will attend college by the end of the century?

— Bullock said a decline in the number of 18-to-20 year olds should produce a slowdown in enrollment.

— Dr. Vic Arnold, director of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas at Austin, said an increase in the number of older Texans returning to school should produce "stability at best" in enrollment.

— Dr. Steve Murdock, chairman of the department of rural sociology at Texas A&M University, predicted that with more blacks and Hispanics continuing their education, enrollment could increase from 1980's 732,000 to as many as 1.26 million by 2000.

Auto insurance rates to drop 5.1 percent

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The cost of an average automobile insurance policy for Midland County drivers will drop by $53 next year.

With a beaming Gov. Mark White looking on, a divided State Board of Insurance Thursday approved an average 5.1-percent decrease in automobile insurance premiums effective Feb. 1, 1986. Commissioners voted 2-1 against a motion to cut insurance rates 8.4 percent despite White's support for the larger decrease.

"I'm very proud of the action the board took," he said. "I would have liked to have seen a larger reduction. But it was a very significant reduction."

The Texas Automobile Insurance Office, representing more than 400 insurance companies, had requested a 10.6-percent rate increase. But the state's new mandatory seat belt law convinced commissioners no increase was necessary.

Premiums for the average Midland County policy will drop from $606 to $553 next year, an 8.7-percent decline. Identical rates will prevail for Ector County motorists as well.

The board defines the average policy as one providing minimal liability coverage, $5,000 personal injury protection and collision coverage for a 1985 low-to-medium priced Buick, Chevrolet, Ford, Honda, Mazda, Nissan, Oldsmobile, Plymouth, Renault or Volkswagen not used in business with no male operator under 25 years of age and no female operator under 21.

"If there was ever a time for policyholders to realize a significant rate adjustment, it is now," said board member Carole Keeton Rylander, who had proposed the larger reduction. "It is somewhat unconscionable that industry would come in with a request of over 10 percent with the mandatory seat belt law."

But industry spokesman Rick Gentry said it is impossible to foresee how many Texans will comply with the seat belt law. "There is simply no reliable way to indicate seat belt usage until you have experience with it," he said.

The mandatory seat belt law took effect Sept. 1, but police will refrain from ticketing offenders until Dec. 1. Commissioners based their decision on the assumption that two-thirds of Texas drivers would comply with the law, but Rylander said compliance will exceed 70 percent. The measure is a "primary enforcement law," meaning police may pull drivers over solely for not wearing seat belts.

Commissioners warned that if the compliance rate is lower than anticipated, they may have to raise rates next year. "The incentive that has provided this decrease obviously has been the mandatory seat belt law," said board Chairman Lyndon Olson. "If the citizens of this state do not continue to observe the mandatory seat belt law, then there probably will be some adjustment."

While White had favored the 8.4-percent decrease, he praised the board's decision.

Speaker's confidant 'switches rather than fight'

By STEVE LEVINE

AUSTIN — State Rep. Charlie Evans, House Speaker Gib Lewis' closest confidant and chief lieutenant, became a Republican Thursday.

Evans, who has represented suburban Fort Worth in the House for 13 years as a Democrat, made the surprise announcement at a press conference in his hometown of Hurst. Two GOP candidates for governor — including recent Republican convert Kent Hance — and Party Chairman George Strake joined Evans at the podium.

"While I will not change my philosophy of government, representation or vote, I now find that to be personally comfortable with that philosophy of government and continued representation of the constitutents that I represent, I must change my political affiliation," Evans said. "It would be less than honest of me in service to my constituency to offer my candidacy for future election as a nominee of the Democratic Party."

Evans, a 46-year-old attorney, had gained a reputation as a conservative Democrat, as Lewis' chief hatchet man, as a lawmaker whose position and knowledge of the system made him a formidable opponent and valuable ally. The balding redhead has turned down three governors' offers of appointment as a state district judge.

Lewis said he spoke with Evans shortly Wednesday afternoon. "I said, "Are you sure?' and he said, "Yes,' and I didn't try to talk him out of it," Lewis said.

State Rep. Charles Evans, left, of Hurst, poses with former Texas Governor Bill Clements in Bedford Thursday. Evans, formerly a Democrat, announced at the meeting that he was switching to the Republican Party.

"I hate to see anybody get in a position where he has to change parties," Lewis said, adding that he is "still very comfortable" as a Democrat.

Gov. Mark White, a Democrat facing re-election next year, also visited with Evans Wednesday. White told reporters Thursday that he told Evans "he shouldn't do such things."

In an interview with the Beaumont Enterprise in March, Evans hinted at the pressures he faced. President Reagan carried 83 percent of the vote in his district in 1984.

"The district which I represent is the second most Republican district in the state of Texas," he said then. "I am the only Democrat within 20 miles of there who is elected to any post."

One of Evans' long-time Democratic colleagues said he was not surprised by the decision. But he added that he felt Evans could win re-election in his district on any party's ticket, "just because of his personal popularity."

At his press conference Thursday, Evans said that unlike Hance — who endured enormous pressures from Strake and Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm before defecting — his was a personal decision.

"I want to emphatically say that I have not discussed this decision with anyone in the leadership of the Republican Party," he said. "They did not recruit me."

Evans, who served as chairman of the powerful House Government Organization Committee last session, becomes the second of Lewis' committee chairmen to switch parties since the legislative session closed in May. Abilene Rep. Gary Thompson, chairman of the County Affairs Committee, jumped to the GOP in June.

Evans' move leaves 55 Republicans in the 150-member House. Six of the 31 state senators are Republicans.

New PUC member will be 'tough but fair'

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Consumer advocates and electric company officials alike say the surprise appointment of Jo Campbell to the Public Utility Commission Thursday will ensure tough but fair regulation of the state's utilities.

Ms. Campbell, an assistant attorney general, will fill the slot PUC Chairman Phil Ricketts vacated Oct. 7. She will join commissioners Peggy Rosson and Dennis Thomas on the three-member panel which regulates electric, telephone and water utility rates throughout the state.

Gov. Mark White said Ms. Campbell is "knowledgeable in utility law," and has the ability to keep utility rates as low as possible while maintaining adequate, reliable service.

Since Ms. Campbell has "never taken a position in a rate case before the PUC," she is ready to take an active role in every rate case now pending before the commission, White said.

He added that Ms. Campbell has agreed with Thomas to elect Ms. Rosson chairwoman of the commission sometime "in the near future."

During her two-year stint with the energy division of the attorney general's office, Ms. Campbell defended both the PUC and the Texas Railroad Commission on appeals. Before that, she worked for five years as a hearings examiner in the gas and utilities division of the railroad commission.

Ms. Campbell, 54, is a native of Waco. She graduated from Baylor University in 1954 and earned her law degree from Cleveland State Law School in 1977.

For the last two years, Ms. Campbell worked as an assistant attorney general within the energy division of the attorney general's office. She defended both the PUC and the Texas Railroad Commission in appeals. Before that, she worked for five years as a hearings examiner in the gas and utilities division of the Railroad Commission.

Gulf States Utilities Co. spokesman David White said the utility is hopeful Ms. Campbell will be fair and reasonable, and that she "take into consideration the needs of everyone involved."

"She's obviously been involved in the subject matter for the last few years," he added, "and I would hope that that would put her in good stead."

State consumer lawyer Jim Boyle, who represents residential and small commericial ratepayers at the PUC, said Ms. Campbell will be "tough but fair — she's a quality appointment."

Tom Smith, executive director of the Ralph Nadar group Public Citizen/Texas, also lauded the appointment.

"I think it speaks well of White to appoint another woman to the PUC," Smith said. "Her experience as a hearings officer at the Railroad Commission bodes well. She should be able to see through all the smoke and mirrors and balance the needs of the utilities and consumers."

Consumers Union director Carol Barger also praised Ms. Campbell's appointment as "one that should balance both consumer and utility confidence in the PUC."

Brad Wiewel, president of the Texas Consumers Association, said Campbell "has the experience in both telephone and electric cases to do an excellent job."

Thursday's announcement puts an end to recent controversy over White's apparent first choice for the job, Beaumont native David Young. The appointment of Young, a utility consultant, drew considerable criticism from consumer groups who claimed he lacked sufficient experience.

State Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos of Austin held up Young's appointment for several weeks. Young lives in Austin and is one of Barrientos' constituents. The Senate must confirm all gubernatorial appointments, and the tradition of "senatorial courtesy" allows a nominee's hometown senator to block that nomination.

White said he considered more than 20 people for the job before settling on Campbell.

Gary Don Moore, 4508 Spence, reported missing a $512 videotape recorder, a $500 television, a $200 gold chain, a $150 ring and various other items in the Thursday burglary. Entry was gained by kicking in the front door, reports said.

Ike Oldaker, Route 3, Box 3483, reported the loss of a $200 stereo and a $200 television in a burglary which occurred sometime between Tuesday and Thursday. Also taken was a Jack Daniels bottle containing $50 in change, reports said.

Two semi-automatic pistols worth a total of $800 were reported stolen by Milton Fletcher, 4813 Spring Meadow. The pistols were taken in a burglary which occurred sometime between Oct. 16 and Oct. 17, reports said.

John Duppenthaler has been upgraded to satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman. The 31-year-old Midland man was critically injured Monday in a motorcycle accident as he tried to exit Loop 250 near West Highway 80.

Recent rulings limiting Open Meetings Act

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has had an Open Meetings Act since 1967, but a city planning commission still can shut its doors and meet in private if it so desires.

Recent rulings by state judges and the state attorney general's office have held that committees and commissions below the governing body of a city, county or school district are not required to hold open, public meetings.

"When you find public officials finding loopholes (in the Open Meetings Act) and using them, then you have to close the loopholes so they can't abuse the public right," said John C. Henry, an Austin newspaper editor and spokesman for the Society of Professional Journalists-Sigma Delta Chi.

These "loopholes" in the public's right to know what their public officials are doing have become of prime interest to print and broadcast news media throughout Texas.

The Open Meetings Act basically requires public, policy-making bodies to conduct business in public. It calls on them to post notice of those meetings and to admit the public to the dicussions.

Representatives of SDX, the Texas Daily Newspaper Association, Texas Press Association, Texas Association of Broadcasters, Texas Associated Press Managing Editors Association, Texas Press Women and the Freedom of Information Foundation will meet in Austin Nov. 19.

"This will be an exploratory meeting to see if all these various media groups can work together effectively and sufficiently relate our efforts," said Ben Hansen, Beaumont Enterprise editor.

Dallas neighborhood relents, doesn't black out Halloween

DALLAS (AP) — Although some residents in the Swiss Avenue Historic District turned a cold shoulder on Halloween, others doled out fistfuls of candy to throngs of youngsters from nearby low-income neighborhoods.

Residents of the district were criticized earlier in the week by neighbors planning to use the silent treatment on the mostly Hispanic, black and Vietnamese trick-or-treaters.

On Halloween night, some people living in the area said it seemed as though more homes than usual were giving out treats. But some blocks remained dark as children shuffled by silently.

Cut-a-thon to benefit cancer center

From Staff Reports

Salon Unique, celebrating its grand opening at a new location in the Northwest Shopping Center (Midland Drive and Loop 250) will be holding a cut-a-thon to benefit Allison Cancer Center.

The benefit will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, with the $25 minimum donation benefiting the equipment fund for Allison.

"I chose the Allison Cancer Center because when my father died of cancer, there were very few treatment centers and little equipment available," said owner J.C. Small, "We want to contribute our part and continue to help fund-raising efforts and public awareness for this increasingly common disease."

During the grand opening, George Orsatti, a nationally known tricologist (hair specialist) will be on hand for free consultations during the day.

Salon Unique will be accepting appointments as well as walk-ins for haircuts and blow-dry styling. Interested persons may call 684-4837.

Mattox sues lead smelter's owners

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox on Thursday filed suit in Dallas against the newest owners of a lead smelter, alleging that the owners had failed to develop a plan for safely closing the plant.

Mattox's suit names as defendants the Murmur Corp., Homer Kirby and Linton Barbee, corporation officers and investors in Murmur.

Mattox said Murmur had acquired the smelter from its former owners, RSR Corp. and Murph Metals, in May 1984.

He said a 1983 suit by Mattox and the city of Dallas resulted in a court order requiring RSR and Murph to pay for cleaning up lead contaminated soil around the facility. The cleanup, which is near completion, has cost approximately $3.8 million, Mattox said.

NAS to review dump-site process

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The National Academy of Sciences will review the process by which three sites were chosen as finalists for the nation's first dump for highly radioactive wastes, state officials said Thursday.

An independent review had been requested by Gov. Booth Gardner, who accused Energy Department officials of rushing the choice of the Hanford nuclear reservation in southeast Washington, Deaf Smith County in Texas and Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

A final environmental assessment of the sites had been set for release in December but will be delayed at least two months by the review.

"We want to have scientific confidence that what we are doing is scientifically sound," said Ginger King of the department's Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management in Washington, D.C.

"If two months will help to create a more sound result and will add additional assurance, it's worth it," she said.

Ministers banned from performing city hall weddings

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In what the marrying ministers of City Hall see as a breach of an almost sacred tradition, city officials have booted the clergymen out of the building and banned weddings there.

For as long as anyone can remember, about a half-dozen ministers have been allowed to congregate near the marriage license office at City Hall and solicit weddings on the spot.

Until recently the practice was conducted in a polite fashion.

But after a squabble broke out over who got which marriages, with some of the ministers allegedly making threats and yelling, Public Safety Director Thomas A. Villa banned both solicitations and weddings.

Villa said the ministers' operations had long struck him as inappropriate for a city hall.

"...These guys set up folding chairs outside the license office and solicited everybody that walked out," he said. "We don't need that. They're not city employees, and they reflect badly on the city."

One of the clergymen, the Rev. Darrell Hall, said all of the ministers were being punished because of the actions of one or two.

"I think it's totally unfair," said Hall. "Maybe he should have reprimanded those involved right then."

The ban is hurting people who want to get married quickly, he said. "What's going to happen to those people who only have a limited amount of time, like a lunch hour? We were performing a needed service."

Recorder of Deeds Sharon Quigley Carpenter, whose office issues marriage licenses, admitted the move will make it harder for people wanting a spur-of-the-moment marriage. "They'll have to look outside City Hall," she said.

Ms. Carpenter said she was not sure how many weddings took place in City Hall, "but there are lots of them." And she said the custom was unique.

Alderman Jimmy Matthews said the ministers had been given a raw deal and that he was making every effort the get them reinstated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Twins enjoy very good luck this weekend. Get in touch with loved ones living at a distance. Sports could be the focus of a domestic argument. Seek a compromise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Eating junk food and avoiding exercise could restore lost weight in a hurry. Be careful not to undo all your good work! Make "moderation" your watchword. True friends are supportive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A brainstorming session with family members gives you the strategy you need to stay ahead of the competition. Public service brings wonderful rewards. Share the spotlight with romantic partner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are entering a very productive period. Those who stay close to home get better results than those who travel. Keep track of your expenditures and you'll find new ways to save.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your family should come first. Devote more thought to loved ones' needs. A frank discussion brings new peace of mind. A temporary sacrifice will be richly rewarded. Buckle down to work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hitting the open road could be a great idea if you have extra time and money. Outdoor activities prove invigorating for those in good physical shape. Be careful not to overdo it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your drive and determination to good use. Raising funds for your high school or college can be a heart-warming and wholly satisfying experience. New romance is possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Ask practical questions about a prospective partner before making any long-term decisions. A family member relies on your honesty. Lay any financial problems on the table. A discussion produces a solution.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Look within your own heart and you will find a peace that has eluded you recently. Love triumphs over adversity. Forgive someone who has disappointed you. Better days lie just ahead!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get a glimpse at the future when you help a loyal associate solve a problem. A book or newspaper article provides valuable information. You may want to contact its author.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You find that a family meeting is the right forum for airing a beef. Avoid saying anything you might regret later on. A last-minute invitation could lead to romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do whatever you can to repair a personal relationship that has been torn by conflict. A phone call brings good news. An old friend is eager to see you again.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Among the taboos that we are constantly warned against is giving declarer a ruff and sluff. However, the longer we play this game, the more we realize that there is no room for the word "never" in the bridge player's lexicon.

South's heart suit is a trifle insubstantial even for hardened four-card major bidders. No one can quibble with West's overcall or with North's decision to leap to four hearts.

West led the king of spades, and the sight of dummy did not gladden his heart. He could see two spade tricks and a trump, but with a red aces surely in the opening bidder's hand, where was the setting trick coming from?

For better or worse, West decided that he was going to try to promote an extra trump trick. Accordingly, he continued with ace and another spade. Declarer ruffed in dummy, then took the right decision by electing to come to hand with the queen of clubs to lead a low trump toward dummy. West grabbed the king and, following up on his original line of defense, committed the bridge "crime" of leading another spade, thereby giving declarer a ruff-sluff.

However, declarer was not pleased with this turn of events. He had nothing to discard for dummy's clubs would take care of all his losers. Yet he was doomed to defeat whether he elected to ruff in dummy or his hand!

If he pitched from dummy, East could assure himself of a trump trick by ruffing with the nine to force the ace. If he ruffed in dummy, East would simply discard and he could then assure himself of a trump trick by covering dummy's remaining trump honor, thereby promoting the nine.

Will senator seek new life, civilizations?

Sen. Garn

NEW YORK (AP) — Utah Republican Sen. Jake Garn, the first politician to orbit the globe, calls his April space shuttle ride the "greatest experience of my life" and says he now believes there's life on other planets.

"I don't think the words exist to convey what it's like to see the Earth from space," he wrote in an article to appear in Parade magazine on Sunday.

"The curve of the Earth, the swirling eddies, the patterns of clouds marbling the surface above the brilliantly blue color of the water and the blue-green of land...the sheer beauty of being in a position to see it made this the greatest experience of my life," he said.

Carne

NORTHAMPTON, England (AP) — Actress Judy Carne faces a court appearance Dec. 16 on drug charges, police said.

The 46-year-old British actress, former wife of actor Burt Reynolds, was arrested Oct. 10 at the home she shares with her mother in this city in central England. She was charged with possession of cocaine, amphetamines and marijuana, said a police spokesman who refused to give his name.

Miss Carne was the "sock-it-to-me" girl on the 1960s comedy series "Laugh-In."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hamilton Jordan, former aide to Jimmy Carter, says after five weeks of chemotherapy, "It looks like I'm headed for a quick remission."

The former White House aide told USA Today that he's "trying to lead a normal life" after being diagnosed as having lymphoma, but concedes that with "blood tests and chemo and X-rays and pills to take every day and hair falling out, it's hard to get away completely."

Jordan, 41, began chemotherapy on Sept. 21, his birthday, and is scheduled to continue experimental cancer treatment at the National Cancer Institute through January.

"I'm one of the lucky ones," Jordan said. "I've got a type of cancer that's treatable and curable." He said there's no guarantee he'll recover, but added: "There are no guarantees in life, anyway."

LONDON (AP) — New Zealand novelist Keri Hulme has won Britain's top fiction award for "The Bone People," which the judges said blends dream and reality and "gives a deep insight into human nature and breaks new literary ground."

Ms. Hulme, 38, who is part Maori, beat out such well-known writers as Doris Lessing and Iris Murdoch, two of the five runners-up for the $21,600 Booker McConnell prize for fiction.

The awarding of the prestigious prize is the subject of heavy betting with British bookmakers every year. Ms. Hulme is in the United States to promote her novel and did not attend the presentation dinner.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A top Los Angeles County prosecutor has asked a defense attorney to substantiate his suggestion that producer Steven Spielberg and others may have known about plans to illegally hire two child actors who were killed in a 1982 accident on the "Twilight Zone" movie set.

In a letter mailed last week, Richard W. Hecht, director of the district attorney's Bureau of Central Operations, asked lawyer Harland W. Braun to come forward with information on the possible involvement of Spielberg and associates Kathleen Kennedy and Frank Marshall in hiring the children. Braun has not yet responded to the request.

Hecht's letter was prompted, an official said, by comments Braun made during a Sept. 23 meeting with Los Angeles District Attorney Ira Reiner, during which Braun unsuccessfully sought a plea bargain for the five "Twilight Zone" defendants who are scheduled to go on trial next April on multiple charges of involuntary manslaughter.

Braun, who represents director John Landis, had suggested that the district attorney's office drop all the manslaughter counts, allow three of the five defendants, including his client, to plead guilty to charges of conspiracy to illegally employ the child actors and dismiss the cases against the other two defendants. Reiner rejected the proposal.

Landis, 35, was directing a segment of "Twilight Zone — the Movie," during the early hours of July 23, 1982, when a helicopter, disabled by a special-effects explosion, plunged from the sky and killed actor Vic Morrow, 53, and the two children — Renee Chen, 6, and Myca Dihn Lee, 7.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Singer Peggy Lee is improving daily after her heart bypass operation three weeks ago, a hospital spokeswoman says.

Miss Lee, 65, underwent routine minor follow-up surgery on Thursday to clean a bypass incision that became infected, said Sue Stewart, spokeswoman for Touro Infirmary.

The Grammy-award winning singer was in fair condition after the 12½-minute procedure, Ms. Stewart said. "She's been walking around more each day," the spokeswoman said. "The doctors say she is improving daily."

Miss Lee underwent double bypass heart surgery on Oct. 8. She had a second operation on Oct. 22 to drain and treat an infection.

Children thrive on 'the best'

HONOLULU (AP) — Are they Yuppie Puppies or Superkids? What are the preppy preschools, computer lessons, yoga and dance and gym classes that start with 2-year-olds doing to these children? And where do they go from here?

For a positive answer, listen to Dana Davidson, assistant professor of child development from the University of Hawaii's Department of Human Resources:

"There seems to be a negative connotation to this, that somehow these are the kids of Supermoms and Superdads — rushed, pressured, upwardly mobile people who try to do it all and have it all, but somewhere fall short.

"I don't think so. I do think that providing a child with a good education, good health care, a good environment, good clothes — yes, teachers often pay more attention to the well-dressed child — can enhance development.

"Certainly," she adds, "socio-economic status has a lot to do with this. It costs money for lessons, computers, travel, magazine subscriptions. There is a new wave of programs for preschool children in infant exercise, listening to foreign languages, playing computer games. It's a move to give children the best."

THE DANGER IS to believe earlier is better, she points out. But, on the positive side, she adds, these children are nurtured by concerned parents who know more, and the children are learning earlier.

They have been born into the age of computers, and are able to do things faster than their developmental sequence indicates. That means that although a 4-year-old hasn't the fine motor skills to write with a pencil, he can hit the keys on a word processor and play computer games, Davidson explains.

Superkids, Davidson says, are not necessarily gifted children nor superachievers. "They show a range of abilities but they can usually plan and complete a task, they follow through. There are plenty of kids who have great ideas, but they don't see them through to the finish."

Short of designer rompers and trips to Disneyland, how to you develop a Superkid of your own? You start, she advises, by developing the child's self-esteem, his positive self-image.

"This requires having at least one totally involved vested person (a person in charge of and responsible for the child) who really believes in that child — and one is enough. A single parent can be the one, whether the child is a boy or a girl."

BUT SHE BELIEVES it is also important for a child to have a good relationship with the parent of the same sex or some other adult of the same sex, and to have access to adults of both sexes. And along the way, the child needs one good friend, a contemporary.

Early in life, the child should be encouraged to develop a sense of responsibility.

"The child from infancy should be able to explore in a safe, interesting environment, to touch and try out and master skills. A family that respects learning and achievement, although they may not have achieved the heights themselves, will instill self-esteem in their children."

A trouble-free home, though, is no guarantee of success, she notes. In a study of 400 geniuses, only 58 came from homes that were relatively trouble-free. Children from overly perfectionist families have low self-esteem.

"Superkids need unrestrained spontaneous affection, physical and verbal. They need time alone. Where we have so many working parents with children in day care from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m., there has to be some planned time ... for the child to think things out alone."

Superkids also need opportunities for failure and regression, relief from the constant pressure to perform. Despite all these lessons and classes and group play, Superkids sometimes find themselves the victims of what Davidson calls "benign neglect."

This happens when their parents are so caught up in their own lives and careers that much of the care of the child is left to other people, highly qualified though they may be.

"It is a good model for a child to see a parent involved in many things, but interests and experiences should be shared and explored," she says. "This requires an effort to develop mutual interests when the child is young. It's too late to make up something you can do together when the child is in high school.

"These children are growing up fast. Preschool programs for 4-year-olds are what kindergarten used to be, kindergarten is what first grade was. These kids are better prepared and the trick is to keep them going."

AT WIT'S END

Money can't buy love

By ERMA BOMBECK

Erma Bombeck

Maybe money can't buy affection, but it can buy everything else these days.

It all started when Mothers sought work outside the home. A replacement was needed for her responsibilities and the fine art of Nannying was revived.

From that has come a host of personal services. I've seen ads aimed at divorced fathers who lead active lives offering to write letters to their children with the compassion of a saint and the regularity of an overdue bill ... on a retainer basis.

There was a pitch the other day to "big spenders" who were caught up in demanding careers and ridden with guilt for not spending more time with their elderly parents. The P.O. box number offered to call or visit Mom and Dad in their apartment, nursing home or hospital and make them feel alive again and promised everyone they could feel better.

Even kids who go away to college can buy a service that will send letters home written by a fellow student who will charge a few bucks every month to tell your parents you are alive and well.

There's even a personal service company that will supply you with an exemplary wife. The woman promises to be a gem.

I'm thinking of starting a service for the man who has everything and is in the market for the quintessential wife. We're talking top of the line here. Not a work horse, who picks up after him, but a woman of his dreams.

This woman would insist, "Tell that wonderful story about the restroom in Milan" and laugh just as hard as she did the first 47 times she heard it eight years ago. She would keep her mouth shut when a husband refuses instructions on a rental car he is driving and accidentally releases the hood on the freeway. She would give him credit when the children were successful and absolve him from their failures by telling everyone he phoned in the conception.

She would eat hamburgers for 20 years and sit back and listen to testimonials later that described him as a self-made man. She would say she's tired when he doesn't want to go out.

Personal services may be the wave of the future. But don't be surprised if a computer gets a Father's Day card ... a post office box number gets named in Mom and Dad's will ... a child runs to the Nanny when it is hurt ... and men realize that dropping off your film and waiting for the repairman is not what a wife is all about.

DEAR ABBY

Letters' trail leads to past

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been living with a man for two years. I'm 20 and he's 29. We both know we want to get married eventually. He was my first and only lover. He told me that I was the first girl he ever loved and he was a virgin before he met me. I found that hard to believe, but I did believe him.

Recently, while home alone, I accidentally came across some letters he had received from various women. I read them and learned that he had lived with at least two other women and had a love relationship with a third. This would not have bothered me so much if he had not told me otherwise.

When I would ask him about his past, he said he didn't have any — that I was his first love.

I feel so hurt and betrayed. I feel the need to do something, but I want your input before I do something rash. I love him very much and don't want to ruin my future with him.

What is your advice? — BETRAYED

DEAR BETRAYED: You may have accidentally come across some personal correspondence, but you deliberately read it. (That you should not have done.) You owe him an apology for violating his privacy, and he owes you an explanation of why he felt it necessary to present himself as a virginal lover.

Now that you know he is capable of deception and he knows that you are capable of snooping, chalk it up to a good learning experience, and don't turn your back on each other. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My stepdaughter, with whom I have always had a good relationship, married recently in a small ceremony (no family members present).

My husband (her father) suggested that we send printed announcements of her marriage. She agreed and suggested this format, which I find unacceptable:

Mr. John Johnson and Mrs. Johnson (in loving memory)
announce the marriage of their daughter, "Alice"

Abby, Alice's mother died three years ago, and although I understand her wish to remember her mother, I am "Mrs. Johnson," and I would be extremely offended by the above form.

I think the following form should be used:

Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson announce the marriage

Would you advise me to convey my feelings to Alice? Should I ask my husband to do it? Or should I just let it go? — OFFENDED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR OFFENDED: Although your stepdaughter is to be commended for wanting to remember her mother at this time, this is not the way to do it. Ask your husband to tell Alice. The form that you prefer is proper. The other is not.

DEAR ABBY: When I call a person on the telephone and hear, "Hello, I can't come to the phone right now, but if you will leave your name and message, blah, blah, blah — and don't start talking until you hear the beep," I get so rattled that when I hear the beep, I forget my own name and telephone number, so I hang up. I am just not prepared to make a recording.

Am I some kind of weirdo? Or are there other people like me? — HATES MACHINES

DEAR HATES: You are not alone. Trust me. Since you know you have this hang-up (no pun intended), write your name and phone number on a piece of paper and tape it to your telephone.

(Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. TV movie tugs at actors' hearts

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lindsay Wagner says she and co-star Chris Sarandon deeply felt the emotional experience of fighting for a child when they portrayed a couple whose adoption is challenged in court.

In the NBC movie "This Child Is Mine," Miss Wagner and Sarandon play parents who adopt an infant given up by its unwed mother. They then spend the next two years in court battling to keep their daughter after the real mother decides she wants the child.

"Chris and I both have children the same age as the child in the film," said Miss Wagner. "Usually when you're doing a film you have to reach down and pull out the emotions. With each of us having children of our own, we had to hold back the emotion."

Miss Wagner said her own sympathies are with the baby, "regardless of the feelings of the parents...I don't think it ever helps the child to be torn away from the parents she's been bonded to."

Nancy McKeon also stars as the real mother in the two-hour movie, which NBC will broadcast Monday night.

Miss Wagner and Sarandon play Bonnie and Craig Wilkerson, a couple who feel their lives are incomplete because they cannot conceive a baby. After exploring adoption through an institutionalized agency and by means of an independent adoption brokered by a family attorney, they decide to go with the agency.

They adopt an infant girl given up by a distraught, unmarried teen-age mother. But the mother files suit to get the baby back before the six-month statute of limitations expires. The case drags on until the baby is 2½ years old.

It's a film that pulls the viewer in two directions. The adoptive couple and the real mother have legitimate claims, although the story seems to favor the adoptive parents because they are the only parents the baby has known. But someone has to lose, so keep a hankie handy.

"I was doing another project with (producers) Bill and Pat Finnegan when they asked me to take a look at the script for this," said Miss Wagner. "Beth Polson, who is executive producer, had made a documentary on five couples this had happened to. I was unaware of how frequently it happens."

Miss Wagner is staying busy doing TV movies. Earlier this season, she appeared in "The Other Lover" for CBS. She and Robert Urich starred in "Young Again," a Disney movie due on ABC early next year. And she is currently working on "Who Hears the Child's Cry?" for CBS.

She also is developing a new series for a possible midseason slot on ABC, and her own company is developing a movie for CBS about a female gold miner on the Amazon River.

"Young Again" is about a man who is successful but unhappy and yearns for his lost youth. An angel makes him a kid again and he sets out to find his high school sweetheart. Miss Wagner, who plays his lost love, said, "I do most of my scenes with the 17-year-old version."

Miss Wagner's first TV series, ABC's "The Bionic Woman," which ran from 1976-78, earned her an Emmy as best actress in a drama series.

But the actress said her last TV series, ABC's "Jessie," was a mistake from the beginning.

"Nothing went right from day one," she said. "That series never should have been made. The thing that was wrong with the concept was that ABC wanted it to go one way and I wanted to go another."

"Jessie," in which she played a police psychiatrist, lasted only two months at the beginning of the 1984-85 season. ABC wanted more action, and Miss Wagner wanted it to have a more cerebral tone.

Cable TV operators scramble for votes

By BILL McCLOSKEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Worried that their television screens will go dark, owners of backyard satellite TV dishes want Congress to block plans by cable TV programmers to scramble the hundreds of shows they have been watching free.

A year ago, legislation made it clear that home viewers were free to point their dishes at any of the more than 100 TV signals coming from space. Congress also made it illegal for programmers to scramble their pictures full-time until decoders were widely available.

Decoders are now being built, scrambling tests are under way and prices have been announced.

But the Satellite Television Industry Association Inc. wants a new law that guarantees that prices are set by negotiation in a competitive marketplace.

That cannot happen, the association argues, if the same company that sells cable TV programs markets the decoders to viewers and sets the fee for each service it is programmed to decode.

In an attempt to get their point across to Congress, dish manufacturers and owners planned to erect a display of earth stations on The Mall in Washington earlier this week to dramatize their call for legislation delaying scrambling for two years.

Home Box Office and Cinemax, the largest providers of movies and other programs for cable operators, have begun scrambling their signals for part of each day. Cable News Network plans to start scrambling July 1, 1986, and Showtime-The Movie Channel expects to scramble full-time by mid-1986.

Cable programmers such as HBO use satellites to distribute their programs to large satellite dishes owned by local cable companies. When the satellite signals reach the ground, they are distributed by cable to home viewers for fees ranging from around $20 a month to more than $50 a month.

Scrambling was unnecessary when only the local cable operators owned the expensive earth stations, but prices gradually dropped to today's $3,000 for smaller dishes and cable TV began losing potential customers.

Tola Murphy-Baran, director of industry public relations for Showtime-The Movie Channel, insisted scrambling was not a result of the 1 million backyard dish owners.

"It's the high number of commercial operators around the country using our services without paying for them," she said, estimating that the programmers and cable companies are losing $500 million a year because of piracy by bars, apartment complexes, trailer parks and hotels.

The original backyard dish owners were those Americans too far from a TV station to receive a signal or blocked from the station by a mountain or other obstruction.

"What brought it to the attention of the cable industry is these are not just a factor of rural America anymore, they are coming into the suburbs where cable is already available," said Steve Tuttle, communications vice president for the National Cable Television Association.

He estimated one-third of the 40,000 to 60,000 dishes sold each month are being set up in areas where cable is available.

Programmers are anxious to be friendly to the cable operators who provide the bulk of their income, so most of them favor scrambling, even though it means an extra expense.

With scrambling, a dish owner will have to buy a decoder for $400 or rent one and pay a monthly fee to have the decoder set for each program he or she wants to watch. Unless a single scrambling standard is set, individual decoders might be necessary for each programming company's product.

There are no federal limits on the amount that could be charged for descrambling a signal.

'Jagged Edge' corners top spot

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Jagged Edge," a courtroom thriller starring Glenn Close and Jeff Bridges, took the No. 1 position at the box office over the weekend, while the rap-music movie "Krush Groove" debuted in second place.

Up a notch from the previous week, "Jagged Edge" brought in $3.2 million to boost its four-week total to $18.4 million, unseating Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Commando."

"Krush Groove," the Warner Bros.' release starring singer-percussionist Sheila E., picked up $2.9 million.

"Commando" dropped from the top to No. 3 in its fourth week, grossing $2.8 million for an overall total of $26.4 million.

The long-running "Back to the Future" brought in $2.4 million to raise its 17-week total to $170 million.

Class explores the fear of death

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Death.

It's a subject most people refuse to talk about.

"Really, we don't even like to use the word 'death,' " says Gayle Schmidt, an associate professor of health and physical education at Texas A&M University. "We say people have 'passed on' or 'passed away.' "

She's trying to take the fear and uncertainty out of the subject by teaching a course about aging, dying and death.

"As human beings, we may not admit it, but we like to think of ourselves as immortal," she says. "We never say 'When I die,' but it's 'If I die.'

"One of the things we work toward reaching is that we can realize that yes, one day, I will die. And when I die these are the things I would like to have happen, or before I die these are some of the things I would like to accomplish."

Ms. Schmidt believes death is the end of the natural progression that begins at birth. And very often, for people who are living with a terminally ill person, death is "right there in front of us.

"Yet we talk about everything under the sun except the fact that a person is dying," she says. "We lose some quality time and important relationships if we don't open our eyes."

About a dozen students, most of them going into higher education or some kind of public service work, have taken the graduate-level course each time it's been offered, starting about six years ago.

"I wanted to take the course because death really scared me," says Nancy Nilson. "It still does. But the speakers were more helpful than anything."

Ms. Schmidt arranges visits to funeral homes, so students go through the process a family would experience if a relative died. They also have visited retirement communities and heard from people who belong to groups which counsel parents who have lost children. Other people have talked to the students about the death of a spouse.

"It's a very emotional class," Ms. Schmidt says. "Frequently, by the time the semester is over, the students and the teacher know each other very, very well because of the kinds of experiences shared."

Assignments vary, depending on the makeup of the class.

"One of the things I ask students to do is to develop some educational techniques that they can use in a community setting or in a public school or in a university," she says.

One student, a high school teacher, had her own students visit a nursing home to collect oral histories from long-time residents of their town.

"The neat thing was to see some of these football-player-type boys out at the nursing home visiting with grandmothers and granddads," Ms. Schmidt says. "A bond developed between some of them and they continued to go and visit after their assignment was over, which was one of the goals in the first place."

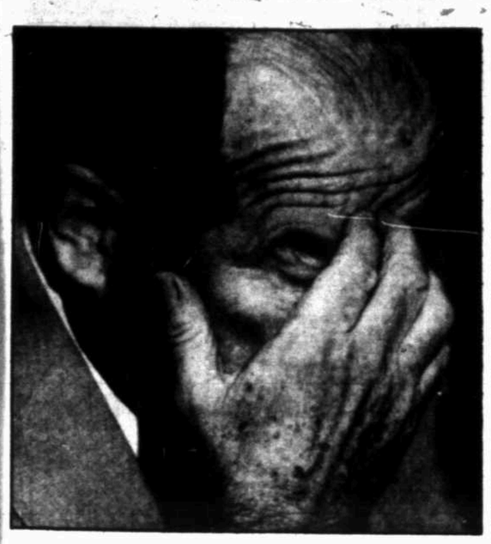
Pilot: Controllers miss big picture



AP Laserphoto

Dr. Richard Bray, an aerospace engineer with NASA, takes a break after giving his testimony at the National Transportation and Safety Board hearing in Irving Thursday.

IRVING (AP) — An experienced Delta Air Lines pilot who studied the Aug. 2 crash of Delta Flight 191 says air traffic controllers are "too busy looking at the little dots" to see the big picture at an airport.

The assessment came Thursday during hearings before the National Transportation Safety Board, which is seeking to determine the cause of the L-1011's crash, which killed 137 people, and to suggest possible safety measures.

The four-day public session, scheduled to end today, has focused on the weather, air traffic control, cockpit instruments and pilot procedures.

Capt. William Melvin, who has flown with Delta for 25 years and who served on a committee that studied the crash, said the Federal Aviation Administration should assign an additional controller to each tower to consider the total air traffic picture.

"I think the individual air traffic controller is too busy looking at the little dots" to consider overall factors such as changing weather conditions, he said.

An author of articles on wind shear, dangerous winds that rapidly change direction, Melvin also said simulated wind-shear training should include the effects of gravity.

A sudden, downward blast of wind can cause a dramatic loss in lift and poses serious problems for planes on takeoff or landing.

Wind shear is considered a major factor in the Delta crash, which occurred during a violent thunderstorm. It also was blamed for the 1982 crash of a Pan Am jetliner at Kenner, La., outside New Orleans, which killed 154 people.

Capt. H.C. Alger, Delta assistant vice president of flight operations, said co-pilot Rudy Price had helped update a manual on the Lockheed L-1011, the Delta jet that crashed.

"He became obsessed with wind shear," Alger said. "He learned all he could. He felt we needed to write more procedures."

William Smith, a former Lockheed engineering pilot, testified that few pilots could have pulled out of the turbulent wind conditions that contributed to the crash.

Judge clears way for Gramm audit

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has cleared the way for the Federal Election Commission to audit Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's campaign records, but attorneys for the FEC say the process could take months.

U.S. District Judge Robert W. Porter of Dallas said Thursday that the Friends of Phil Gramm, the freshman senator's campaign committee, will have to submit most of the records requested in an FEC supboena.

FEC staff members have questioned whether Gramm's campaign accepted donations above the $1,000 limit for individual contributors set by campaign finance laws and failed to itemize some campaign debts, according to court documents.

Friends of Phil Gramm had filed a lawsuit in June seeking to block the FEC request for an audit.

Porter said the campaign records would have to be submitted after attorneys for the FEC and Gramm's campaign privately discussed the specifics of the supboena for more than an hour.

Joseph Stoltz, an FEC auditor, testified Thursday morning the records requested in the supboena were needed to get an accurate picture of the Republican senator's campaign finances.

Porter had already ruled that the FEC has a right to audit Gramm's records. Thursday's hearing was to determine exactly how much information the FEC should get.

"We got what the subpoena sought," Ivan Rivera, an attorney for the FEC, said.

Rivera said concessions were made where the supboena requested records that did exsist. He said an order outlining the agreement will be written and signed by the judge.

James F. Schoener, an attorney for Gramm's campaign, said Thursday morning that the supboena requesting records for the audit is "harassment." But after the hearing, he said he was pleased with the agreement.

Gramm's campaign will not have to submit minutes of meetings relating to the campaign committee's reporting responsibilities under the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 or documents and materials relating to loan records because they don't exist.

The committee will have to submit financial records dating back to Feb. 12, 1983, including all amendments filed or anticipated to be filed to the financial reports. Documents relating to contribution records also will have to be turned over to the FEC.

Rivera said getting the campaign records is the first step for auditors.

"The audit could take awhile," he said.

Lois Lerner, another attorney for the FEC said the audit could "take months" to complete.

Schoener said there "always are little violations" in financial records. But he said believed most of the problems with the records had been solved.

He called the problems "technical violations" that occur often in reporting campaign finances.

TWC officials shocked by sewage dumping

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of the newly reorganized Texas Water Commission, which has just begun an inspection tour of the Houston area, say they are shocked at the amount of raw sewage that is pouring into Houston's bayous.

Almost 25 million gallons of raw sewage flow into the city's bayous on a rainy day, carrying enough pollutants to infect anyone who ventures into the water, water specialists say.

"No one in their right mind would expose themselves to direct contact with any of the waters from any of the bayous in this part of the world," said City Councilman Dale Gorczynski, who has a master's degree in water quality.

The water commission, which recently started an inspection tour of the Houston area, can slap fines of $10,000 a day on polluters. The agency recommended earlier this week that the city of Austin be fined $165,000 for polluting the Colorado River.

However, no action has been taken against Houston.

State officials, who have investigated a few locations in Houston, suspect that more overflows of raw sewage may be pouring into bayous from other locations.

Raw sewage has been dumped into Houston's bayous for decades, city officials concede. In 1983, an engineering study found that millions of gallons of untreated sewage flowed into the bayous daily.

City and state officials, however, disagree on the extent of the pollution.

"I'm finding in the last week or two that there are more (problems) than I thought there would be and of a higher magnitude," said Gerald Hord, regional director for the water commission's southeast region.

Sewage overflows are not limited to the city of Houston.

Twelve-year-old Wehtahnah Tucker and her controversial hairstyle that has prompted Houston's Spring Oaks Junior High School to keep Wehtahnah isolated from the other students.

Hair-raising do nets officials' ire

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials at Spring Oaks Junior High School say Wehtahnah Tucker won't be allowed to attend her regular classes until the 12-year-old's hair-raising haircut gets more normal.

In the meantime, Miss Tucker will spend her school time in relative isolation in a counselor's office.

Miss Tucker's hair is cut short on the sides and then extends straight up to a point about six inches above her head.

"I can't stand it," she says. "I don't get to see any of my friends. It's way in the back, where no one can see me. They even bring me my lunch."

Her mother, Robin Tucker, said Wednesday that school officials had spoken to her but she told them the hairstyle was fine with her. She describes her daughter's punishment as "solitary confinement."

AUSTIN (AP) — They donned faded uniforms. Many wore their medals. Some carried flags. A few came in wheelchairs. All heard their former commander, Gen. William Westmoreland, tell them to stand proudly.

"You men are stouthearted men. I'm glad to be among you," Westmoreland told Texas Vietnam veterans Thursday as their march from Dallas to San Antonio reached the state Capitol.

Westmoreland joined the marchers Wednesday night and walked several miles in what organizers call "A Journey to Remember — The Last Patrol."

Standing on the Capitol steps with former first lady Lady Bird Johnson, Westmoreland won cheers from a crowd of about 200, some 60 wearing uniforms, when he said it wasn't the veterans' fault the war was lost.

"You men did a magnificent job on the battlefield in Vietnam. You did what the country asked you to do, and you did it well," he said.

"That's right," they replied.

"The war was not lost on the battlefield by the military. It was lost by virtue of public opinion here in the United States," he said.

"All right," they said.

"And as you realize — but I must say many Americans do not realize — when the North Vietnamese militarily took over South Vietnam, there were no American fighting troops on the battlefield," he said.

"You tell 'em, General," they shouted.

The march, which began Oct. 19, was organized by Michael Martin of Dallas and Tim Holiday of Hawkins, veterans and songwriters who said they wanted to call attention to both veterans and the plight of the missing.

Ethiopian stowaways granted parole status

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Blatoh Mula Gitahon and Ayalow Tilahun Dista left their Ethiopian homeland more than three months ago, illegally boarding a ship in Sudan in hopes of finding a better way of life.

After spending more than 50 days in isolation at a Port Arthur motel, the two 20-year-old stowaways were granted parole status by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"They have been paroled for six months, mainly because they weren't able to get travel documents to send them back to Sudan," said Nancy Falgout, an immigration counselor with the YMCA International Society in Houston.

Gitahon and Dista were transferred to Houston on Wednesday into the protective custody of the YMCA society, a refugee resettlement organization.

"Right now, our case workers are going to find a place for them to stay with Ethiopians who live here, and we're going to try to help them to find a job," she said.

Even though the parole is limited to six months, Ms. Falgout said when the two arrived in Houston, "they knew something good was happening...even though they were a little worried."

They entered the United States illegally by boarding a ship more than three months ago in Sudan, which borders Ethiopia, because they could not get proper refugee or immigration papers, authorities said.

When they reached the United States, they asked for political asylum.

Both contend they would be executed if turned over to the Sudanese or Ethiopian governments — Mula because he deserted the Ethiopian Army, and Tilahun because of his involvement with an underground movement that opposed the communistic regime of the country.
