Asphalt plant raises clouds of complaints

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Asphalt may not be as volatile as nuclear material but its possible appearance in the county has sent blast waves rumbling through residents who live in the Skyview Estates development northeast of the city.

To the residents of Skyview Estates, a nuclear plant next door would be no worse than the asphalt plant that will be going in across the street east of County Road 1160 North.

And like the anti-nuclear groups staging protests across the country, this group of residents will be holding a rally at 10 a.m. Friday on the site where the asphalt plant will be placed.

President of the company which is putting in the asphalt plant said he was granted a permit from the state in August and that if he has done anything wrong, he's ignorant of it.

Backing him up is the acting regional superviser of the Texas Air Control Board in Odessa.

At the nucleus of the explosion is the permit granted Aug. 11 to Petroplex Land and Development Co., Inc., of Midland, with developer Clyde White listed as president.

IN GENERAL TERMS, the permit allows the company to place an asphalt plant on land east and adjacent to County Road 1160 North, known in the area as Todd Road, and about four miles north of East Highway 80. That places it southwest of Skyview Estates, with the nearest house about half a mile away.

Upset that they found out about the plant only after the permit was granted, residents are trying various methods to get the permit rescinded.

One way, according to organizer James M. Logan of 309 Irvin Drive, is to get enough letters sent by protesting residents to the Air Control Board's legal department in Austin.

A second, according to resident Neal Hail, is through the protest rally. "We're going to do all we can to stop it."

If so, they had better act quickly because White said he had planned to start putting up the plant this week.

Logan said the residents were upset because the permit had been granted without a public hearing. The public hearing was waived because, according to John T. Haagensen who heads up the Odessa Air Control Board office, the application met the required exemptions.

"There's a list of exemptions approved by the board and reviewed annually," he said, adding that it falls under the New Sources Performance Standard category. Those standards include being at least half a mile from the nearest residence or business, and meeting particulate emissions level. The application cites one to four pounds of particulate will be emitted from a 30-foot stack per hour. That particulate, he added, is dust.

"THE DUST WON'T be harmful," Haagensen said. "It comes from rock piles, or the materials to make asphalt. It will go through a scrubber and a dryer" before the dust is emitted. "We do have enforcement action we can take if there are problems with dust emissions."

Questioned about the possibility of sulfur being emitted, Haagensen said the only place it could come from is the fuel. "They'll be using a low-sulfur fuel. There should be no or very low sulfur emissions."

Logan said he had found some errors in the application and was hoping that would go against the company. The application shows the plant to be seven miles from the city limits, which actually run about 1½ miles to the west. And the legal coordinates listed show the plant should be farther north than where it's being located.

Haagensen, however, predicted that won't stop the permit, although the 'Friends of the Animals'

Four members of an informal group called "Friends of the Animals" attended this morning's arraignment of eight persons arrested on cruelty to animal charges, a Class-A misdemeanor, after law enforcement officers raided a pit bulldog fighting arena in the county late Sunday night.

"We're here to see what's going to be done about it," said 42-year-old Trucie Tiner, spokeswoman for the group. "It's cruel and barbaric. We'd like to see it made a felony.

"Animals can't speak for themselves. They're like children. Someone has to defend them, care for them. If we don't, who will? The more attention that's paid to it (dog fighting), maybe people will be less likely to do it."

The eight defendants were arraigned before County Judge Bill Ahders and pleaded not guilty. They were arrested after the sheriff's department received a disturbance call about 11 p.m. Sunday. Deputies and Department of Public Safety troopers said they found several persons gathered around a homemade arena at County Road 146 and FM 715 when they arrived on the scene.

The suspects were freed on $1,000 bonds set Monday by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Twenty-two animals were confiscated, according to 26-year-old Maureen Dotson-Wall, another member of the group. She said a number of them had to be treated by a veterinarian before being taken to the city's animal control center, where they are being claimed by their owners.

Some of the dogs had been reported stolen, and one man told members of the group that his dog's chain had been cut and the animal taken from his yard. The maximum penalty on conviction of a Class-A misdemeanor is a $2,000 fine and a year in jail.

Postal Service preparing to bite back

By VINCE GIORGI

The U.S. Postal Service and its mail carriers, long-suffering victims of vicious dogs and insensitive pet owners, plan to bite back.

In response to what the Postal Service terms an "alarming" number of dog bites this summer, Postmaster General William F. Bolger warned U.S. dog owners to restrain their pets or face suspension of home delivery service. He also vowed legal action by the Postal Service and individual mail carriers to recoup damages and lost wages for carriers injured in dog attacks.

Midland post office officials are planning a public education campaign to inform city residents of mail carriers' difficulties with dogs. Stan Sartain, customer services manager for the Midland post office, said postal officials are seeking to have Sept. 19-25 declared Dog Awareness Week by Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins. Sartain said city residents will be alerted to the problem in a variety of ways, including placards in post office lobbies and notices to residential areas with troublesome dogs.

"We're having more and more of a problem delivering the mail, especially the door delivery," Sartain said. "We're trying to get the public aware that we are having a problem with the dogs. If they don't get their mail for a few days, this is the reason."

ABOUT 5,700 mail carriers were bitten by dogs in 1981, according to Postal Service officials. One California carrier died from wounds inflicted by a pit bulldog.

In the past month, three California letter carriers suffered severe facial injuries when attacked by dogs, including one carrier who suffered serious wounds to the face, neck, abdomen and arms when assailed by a pit bulldog. Bolger said the attack was so violent that rescuers used a claw hammer to fend off the dog, which had injured two other people earlier this year.

MMH, TESCO working on outage problems

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Now that the summer thunderstorm season is over, Midland Memorial Hospital officials will decide what to do about an equipment failure problem they say was caused, in part, by electrical power interruptions.

During the past thunderstorm season, the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center experienced several power interruptions, causing equipment failure, according to Mickey Cappadonna, MMH honorary governor and president of the regional advisory council to the Allison Center.

Although the failure of the state-of-the-art cancer therapy machines has not caused major problems such as interference with patient treatments, it has been noted in a recent MMH building committee report that each interruption in power caused approximately $1,500 to $3,000 in damage to the machines.

"These costs occurred last year (1981)," A.C. Buchanan, MMH vice president of operations, said. "From August to December 1981 the accelerator was down 17 times, but some of these were due to installation adjustments, internal power distribution and power outages. The interruptions this past season did not cause financial repairs, but the accelerators were down."

Buchanan explained that the cancer therapy machines — the 6 and 20 MEV (Million Electron Volt) linear accelerators are sensitive pieces of equipment that not only have an adjustment period when they are first installed, but also must go through a warming up process once they've been shut down.

"What may seem like a blink of the lights to us can cause the machines to completely shut down, sometimes damaging various parts," Buchanan said. "However, for some reason or another the problem has mainly been with the 20 MEV."

Since these machines are on a continuous power source, it has been the weekends that have caused most of the problems.

"We're thankful we have Rod McDougall, our physicist," Buchanan said, adding that McDougall also has an engineering background which enables him to repair the damages.

"That $1,500 to $3,000 went to replacing parts and labor time for Rod," he said. "You never know how long it could take to repair — an hour to a day."

In an attempt to alleviate this "down time," the MMH building committee asked Texas Electric Service Company to look into the matter.

TESCO monitored the cancer center with a sophisticated recorder called a systems analyzer for an eight-week period during May through July.

"This is our thunderstorm season," Cappadonna said. "And during this time Texas Electric recorded nine times that power went out."

However, Dave Dorchester, a representative of TESCO, said "We did have eight or nine circuit interruptions, but in five of those instances the machine did not go down.

"Our whole aim is to help them (MMH) solve their problem," he added. "The conclusion we have reached is to continue monitoring the Allison Center. Since the situation has improved over last year, we'll keep monitoring and see what happens in the next four or five months."

Dorchester said some of the equipment failure was caused by internal circuit interruptions which have been corrected.

"There was no damage to the machines in these past circuit failures," Dorchester added.

"So far we think we have corrected the distribution of internal power interruptions," Buchanan said, explaining that part of the problem was caused by the elevator system.

"Since we know that these down times are not always due to power outages, we needed to put our finger on what was causing it," he said. "And that's where Texas Electric came in with the monitoring device."

Consequently, Cappadonna said the MMH building committee is "looking

JERSUALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet today rejected President Reagan's proposal for renewing Mideast peace efforts, Deputy Prime Minister David Levy said.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin interrupted a vacation to convene the emergency Cabinet session, and an official announcement was expected shortly.

Rejection of the Reagan proposal — which calls for a freeze on Jewish settlement in occupied Arab territory and ultimately Palestinian self-government in association with Jordan — had been predicted.

Levy told reporters Reagan's proposals were "one-sided, anti-Israel and contradictory to the spirit of the Camp David accords" governing future peace moves.

He said Reagan's ideas could lead to Palestinian statehood in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. There are some 80 Jewish civilian settlements with about 25,000 residents in the occupied territories.

Energy Minister Yitzhak Berman chastised Reagan for raising proposals which he claimed should have waited until after the five-year interim period of Palestinian autonomy stipulated in the Camp David accords of 1978.

Berman said "whether the proposals are good or bad is irrelevant. It's the timing that counts. Coming up with such proposals now simply damages the United States' effectiveness as a mediator."

Tourism Minister Avraham Sharir complained that Reagan's proposals had taken Israel by surprise. "This is in certain measure a diktat," he said. "We weren't consulted."

Sharir charged that Reagan's proposals "could revive the PLO."

Levy told a crowd at a dedication ceremony Wednesday for the West Bank settlement of Maale Adumim that "settlement in the Land of Israel will not stop."

Maale Adumim, five miles east of Jerusalem, will expand from 2,000 residents to 50,000 if government plans are fulfilled.

Reagan called Wednesday night for a freeze on Jewish settlements in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, which Israel has occupied since 1967. The Begin government, in contrast, has consistently supported new settlements in the territories.

Reagan said, "It is clear to me that peace cannot be achieved by the formation of an independent Palestinian state in those territories," rejecting the fundamental demand of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

But he said the territory ultimately ought to be governed by the Palestinians "in association with Jordan," although he did not define that association. Reagan added that the final status of the territories "must be reached by negotiations."

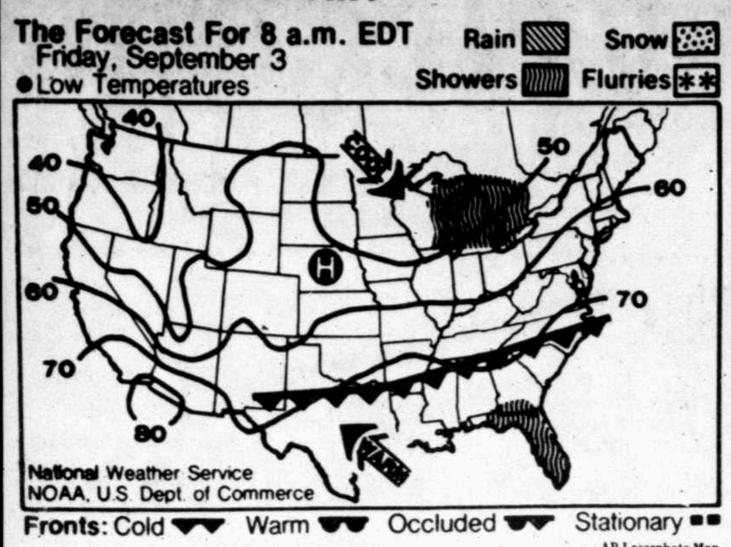

Jordan's ambassador to the United States said his government was studying the proposal. "There are very good, positive points in the peace initiative," Ambassador Abdul Hadi Majali said Wednesday night in an interview on ABC's "Nightline."

The Begin government has laid claim to the territories as part of the Biblical heritage of Israel and has insisted that Israel will never surrender control of them.

Reagan also said the United States feels that "Jerusalem must remain undivided, but its final status should be decided through negotiations." The Begin government successfully sponsored legislation making the 1967 annexation of Arab Jerusalem part of Israel's fundamental law, and Begin says the entire city is Israel's "eternal capital."

While Reagan's positions did not depart sharply from those of former President Carter and previous administrations, his speech laid out the American differences with Israel more clearly than anything he has said since his inauguration in 1981.

Cleared land in the foreground designates location of the asphalt plant that is being placed there by the Petroplex Land and Development Co., Inc. Half a mile to the north lies Skyview Estates, whose residents are up in arms about the asphalt plant and are planning a protest rally at 10 a.m. Friday on the plant site.

Asphalt plant producing controversy protests could bring about a public hearing.

"We didn't expect opposition to this," he said. "If the legal division sees a huge amount of public opposition they may try to hold a meeting and explain what is happening."

Logan disagreed with the application's two-year time limit. "The city has said there should be a housing development with apartment complexes in that area," he said of land directly south of the proposed plant. "He (White) said he needed the plant to do the roads in that development. I feel he's going to use it to bid on streets like Loop 250" which eventually will be extended that far east before curving south to hook into East Highway 80.

DOING ALL THAT work, Logan claimed, "will take appreciably more than two years."

Even though the application sets a two-year time limit, Haagensen admitted the Petroplex Land and Development Co., Inc., isn't bound by it. "He's not legally held to two years," he said of White's operation. "Once he's granted the permit, he can stay there as long as he likes."

The letter being mailed to the Air Control Board's legal department and signed by Skyview Estates residents contends the asphalt plant will lower property values and emit offensive smells. The housing development consists of about 40 residences with the price range starting around $100,000.

Because the land on which the plant will be located is included in the tract that was approved for annexation at the City Council's Sept. 28 meeting, the residents are hoping it might be covered by city regulations.

Logan pointed out that the application for the permit was filed July 13, which was the same day that the city was considering annexation. He questioned the city as to whether or not it could take jurisdiction in that area because of the date.

City Attorney Joe Nuessle said his department was researching it, but hadn't come up with an answer.

"I know we would have jurisdiction if we had completed annexation of that area," he said. Even so, the company will have to obtain a building permit from the city's offices since the tract was approved on first reading, Nuessle added.

Since that council meeting, Mayor G. Thane Akins said he hasn't given the plant much thought. "Being outside the city limits and if it conforms to state law, there's nothing we can do about it. But with the plant next to a housing development, it's hard for me to think it's compatible," he said.

And White, president of the company, said Wednesday he was unaware of the residents' objections until he heard of the comments made at the council session.

"I'M SITTING HERE with a permit from Austin. The state called me and said I had my authorization," said White.

He was unperturbed about the Friday protest rally. "They can go out and protest to anything they want to; this is a free country."

A Midland developer for the past 32 years, White said he had no intention of hurting those residents when he applied for the permit. "If someone had told us earlier, we wouldn't have put this much time and money" into the asphalt plant at that location. To move it would cost about $300,000, he added.

"We're many more feet away from the nearest house. I even moved the plant farther back than what was required," White said.

"I went through all the channels and it's all been OK'd. If we've done something wrong, then I'm ignorant of it. I'm concerned about it. I thought I had a good relationship with the people over there."

An alternative to the interruptions would be to purchase an UPS (uninterrupted power source) battery, but the sophisticated device which would be the main power source for the accelerators is approximately $150,000 to $175,000, Cappadonna said.

"This is a major expense that doesn't add on one thing," he added. "We're dissappointed that this (power interruption) has happened," Cappadonna said.

"It (the equipment failure) is still annoying, but it hasn't cost anything yet this year," Buchanan said.

But, Buchanan noted that the word "yet" is the key to the whole situation. He explained that the building committee also will meet with Varian, the manufacturer of the accelerators, to discuss the possiblity of the UPS.

"We have a maintenance contract with Varian which has a regional office in Dallas," Buchanan said. "They must be involved in this decision because it will affect the cost of our maintenance. The more risk with the gun going out, the more money we will have to pay. We have to consider the options.

"The options are two-fold," he said.

"One is purchasing the UPS, or two, acknowledge the risk without the UPS — if we have a major failure, we will have to buy the $55,000 gun that could be damaged with these down times," Buchanan noted, referring to the wear and tear that the equipment failure puts on this particular part.

The "gun" which ususally lasts for five years is a device on both accelerators that assists in producing the radiation beam.

"If we continue to have frequent crashes the probability of the gun lasting two years instead of five is greater" Buchanan said, adding that the decision to purchase the UPS is like "any insurance decision — how much risk are we willing to assure ourselves versus how much are we willing to spend to protect ourselves."

postmasters to stop mail service to any pet owner who does not meet the responsiblity to confine a dog which constitutes a menace," Bolger said. "Furthermore, I am putting dog owners on notice that the Postal Service and its employees will seek to recover damages for injuries and losses incurred as a result of what I view as gross irresponsibility on the part of the owners."

Despite Midland ordinances requiring that all dog owners license and leash their pets, "a dog bite is a postman's occupational hazard," according to Hoot Gibson, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers Midland local which numbers about 96 members. "The city ordinance is just generally unenforced concerning dogs," said Gibson.

ON AUG. 3, Midland carrier Joe M. Daniel was nipped on the ankle by a small dog as he made his rounds on Versailles Drive. Carrier Johnny Mancha was bitten by a dog Nov. 4, 1981.

"There are a lot of dogs running loose in this city, which is contrary to the law," Gibson said. "And every year, when some dog has 13 puppies, we've got that many more dogs running the streets."

Dalton Byerly, director of Midland animal control, agreed that city letter carriers have "a legitimate complaint" concerning dogs on the loose.

"We have a loose dog problem in Midland and really not so much a stray dog problem," said Byerly, who encouraged post office officials to report bothersome dogs to animal control.

Byerly emphasized the importance of educating the public about the problem and said the postal service might also benefit by providing animal behavior training for its carriers.

ALTHOUGH DOGS harassing mail carriers is traditional comic material in cartoons, television and elsewhere, Gibson and other mail employees fail to see the humor.

"When you're the recipient of a dog bite, it's not funny. It's not funny at all," Gibson said. "Because we're required by law to go on that property to deliver that mail. It only takes but a split two or three seconds out there and it's over with. You have to endure the pain and the disfigurement."

Daniel, a letter carrier in Midland for five years, said he had delivered mail to the residence on Versailles Drive for nearly two years.

"You try to get to know the dogs as well as the people," said Daniel, who was bitten on the ankle after the dog leaped from behind some shrubs. "The dog just decided on that day that he would bite me."

Daniel, 32, received a tetanus shot and reported the dog to supervisors. Since the incident, the owners have leashed the dog within reach of the mail box and delivery to the home has been suspended.

DANIEL SAID a package and three to four inches of letters and bills have piled up, "and they're not going to get it until the dog is moved.

"I'm not afraid of dogs, I have three of my own," he said. "But I don't like getting bit, I don't think anybody does."

Daniel has been bitten twice in five years delivering mail around Midland; once during two years work in Big Lake. "That doesn't really sound like too much," he said, "but any is unnecessary."

Gibson said that female letter carriers, often physically smaller than their male co-workers, could be especially susceptible to injury from attacks by large dogs. He said a mail bag, while sometimes effective, is often the only means of defense available to a letter carrier.

But, Gibson added, "we're not duty bound to be injured on a route." He said when a carrier is confronted with a belligerent dog, "the first thing you've got to do is get away from him, safely."

He said the carrier can then contact his supervisor and explain why the mail was not delivered. Recurring problems in a particular area could mean suspension of service to several houses, perhaps the entire block.

"Did you ever try to live among neighbors that had their mail cut off because of your dog?" Gibson asked, noting the potential influence neighbors may exert on lax dog owners.

Gardendale man killed in traffic mishap

ODESSA — A young Gardendale man was killed when he turned his 1978 Chevrolet sports car into the path of an 18-wheeler near here early Wednesday night.

Charles Edward Thompson, 21, of Gardendale, died in Medical Center Hospital at 8:45 p.m. — an hour and a half after the accident, which occurred on the Andrews Highway, two miles east of Texas 385, about 7:15 p.m.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Thompson was westbound at a slow rate of speed when a westbound semi swung out to pass him. Thompson apparently didn't see the truck and made a lefthand turn in front of it.

Services are pending at the Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Coahoma man turns himself in to police

BIG SPRING — A Coahoma man has turned himself in to the Howard County Sheriff's Department in connection with the Tuesday night hit-and-run death of a Big Spring woman.

Ricky Jack Martin, 18, walked into the sheriff's office at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, according to a Department of Public Safety spokesman, who said Thompson was charged with failure to stop and render aid. Bond was set at $10,000.

The woman, 56-year-old Opal Lee Black, was killed as she walked along the north service road of Interstate 20, a half-mile west of Salem Road in Howard County, about 9 p.m. Tuesday. Her body was taken to a Big Spring Funeral Home.

Fire damages Haystack apartments

Firemen spent more than two hours at the scene of a fire that heavily damaged an apartment at the Haystack apartment complex, 2439 Whitmire, early this morning.

Five fire units responded to the 1:15 a.m. blaze in apartment 42-G, which was occupied by Greg Caddell. His apartment sustained heavy fire damage, while moderate smoke and water damage was reported in 12 other apartments. Cause of the blaze was listed as an improperly used outdoor grill.

Appeals court reinstates conviction of Texas grocery chain employee

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has reinstated the conviction of a South Texas grocery chain employee accused of threatening to poison food if he was not paid $125,000.

Joe Corona Valdez of Carrizo Springs was convicted on two counts of mailing threatening communications with the intent to extort money. But U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon threw out the conviction, saying he considered the circumstantial evidence insufficient to warrant a conviction.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated Wednesday a San Antonio jury's decision to convict Valdez, and ordered Shannon to sentence him. The U.S. Justice Department had appealed Shannon's action.

The maximum penalty on each count is 20 years' imprisonment and a $5,000 fine.

Valdez was employed in the meat department of the H.E.B. store in Carrizo Springs, and was told in November 1980, that his scheduled pay raise was being delayed because of a poor performance rating. He also was demoted when an outsider was hired to train for the job as meat department manager.

A letter demanding $125,000 was sent to H.E. Butt, owner of the grocery chain, on Feb. 15, 1981.

Two policemen reassigned pending probe of 11-year-old boy's shooting

BIG SPRING — Two Big Spring policemen have been transferred to desk duty pending investigation of the Tuesday night shooting of an 11-year-old boy during the stake-out of a storage building reportedly containing stolen merchandise.

The incident occurred at approximately 10 p.m. Tuesday as Stapp and patrolman Pam Jordan staked out a storage building at Planter's Gin. Officers believed that power tools stashed in the storage building after a Monday night burglary of the gin would be retrieved by the burglars.

The 11-year-old boy and a 14-year-old companion entered the storage building at 10 p.m. Tuesday and went directly to the tools, according to a police spokesman. The two officers identified themselves as policemen and the youths fled, prompting the single shot from Stapp's firearm.

Firms learning about cancer

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Eight business community representatives from five companies gathered Wednesday at Texas Instruments in Midland for an orientation seminar in cancer education.

The workshop program was made available through a recent agreement between the United Way and the American Cancer Society. The two organizations agreed they would cooperate in fund raising and education in the business and industry sectors of the community, according to Sara Smith, executive director of the Midland United Way, and Nancy Martin, executive director of the Midland chapter of the American Cancer Society.

While the United Way kicked off its fund-raising campaign at Texas Instruments Wednesday, the American Cancer Society set up its training program to educate the business representatives about cancer.

Purpose of the program was to train the members of the business community to develop in-service programs for their company's employees.

The four-hour program which began at 8:30 a.m. included a preview of the American Cancer Society's educational seminars, including "Assessing Risks" with Dr. J.E. Mendez, "Breast Self-Examination" with Carmen Edwards, a registered nurse, and "Lung Cancer" with Ron Rosignol.

Ms. Martin said the cancer society would provide employers with films, literature and other support materials for the education programs.

"We'd like people to be more educated about the prevention of cancer and the early warning signals of cancer," Ms. Martin said. "In-service programs like these will reach many people. We teach the employers how to give an education program by teaching them the proper information — what they should say and not say."

Regarding the information on how to give a breast self-exam workshop, Vincent, a representative from Drilco Industrial, said the education programs could be "very effective if they are reinforced in the different companies on a monthly basis."

Bethea, representing Exxon, added that it was a good program, especially considering the limited percentage of women who are actually doing the self-examinations.

Man charged with torturing son, 2

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A man has been arraigned on a child-torture charge in the death of his toddler son, whom a doctor and a policeman say apparently was beaten to death.

Willie Woods, 27, of Grand Rapids, was arraigned Tuesday in Grand Rapids District Court and released on his own recognizance. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Sept. 9. Conviction is punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

Woods' 2-year-old son, Hadji, died Aug. 5 at Blodgett Memorial Medical Center about three hours after he was taken there by his parents.

Lt. Robert Delano said the boy apparently had been beaten with a blunt object. Dr. Stephen Cohle, who performed an autopsy, said the child appeared to have been beaten on his back and chest. The doctor said he was awaiting more test results before ruling officially.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — They were childhood sweethearts and romance bloomed with the years. But Paul Fagan says the wedding ceremony was really a "parting gift" for his bride, paralyzed by a brain tumor.

Elizabeth Fagan, 28, died Monday — 18 days after the wedding. She was buried Wednesday.

"It was a good way to say goodbye to her," Fagan said.

"She was in a wheelchair for the wedding," he said Tuesday. "She was totally paralyzed and unable to speak for the most part. But I think I heard her mumble 'I do' at the appropriate time in the ceremony. She had been practicing it."

Fagan, also 28 and an independent producer of industrial films, called the wedding the "parting gift" of a romance that began when both were in junior high school.

"We planned on getting married long before it (the brain tumor) was diagnosed," he said. "It was a gesture I wanted to make to her. My brother commented last night that if he could sign a contract that two weeks before his death he would be at a large party surrounded by his best friends and his family, he would sign it."

Fagan and his bride attended East Lansing High School and the University of Michigan together. After earning her bachelor's degree, Elizabeth took a job in Chicago, where Fagan joined her in September 1980.

Fagan said it was January 1981 when Elizabeth began to feel a tingling in her leg — "as though it had fallen asleep." A brain stem glioma, a type of tumor, was diagnosed that April.

"Since nobody had ever cured that kind of tumor before, there wasn't much reason to hope," Fagan said. "But we thought we might find a miracle.... I spent a good deal of my time calling all over the country and the world."

Several experimantal treatments were tried without success.

With Elizabeth enduring chemotherapy, the couple became engaged in September 1981 and moved back to East Lansing last January.

"We (had) decided to get married a couple of years ago but planned on holding off until we were about 30," Fagan said. "Betsy's medical condition kind of made us move our plans up.

"We thought about getting married when we first got engaged. But we had heard many stories of (terminally ill) people who would hold on for a big event and then die. We thought it would be better to make it a long engagement. It would give Betsy something to hold on for. She had many painful experiences to go through and the wedding gave her something to look forward to."

Elizabeth's family has established a memorial fund in her name and hopes to use the proceeds to award some type of scholarship.

With court's approval, doctors abort pregnancy of comatose accident victim

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — An accident victim lingering in a coma had an abortion last week, two days after her mother obtained court approval, the family has disclosed.

As anti-abortion groups continued their efforts to join the court case, the family of Patti Ann Wunsch held a news conference Wednesday to announce that the issue was moot.

The operation was performed Aug. 27 at Chester County Hospital, said the family's attorney, C. Barry Buckley.

Miss Wunsch, 23, of Downingtown, has been in a coma since an auto accident June 24. Her mother, Dorothy Pettit, won a ruling last week from Chester County Judge Lawrence E. Wood allowing doctors to abort the fetus if necessary to save Miss Wunsch's life.

Buckley said the abortion was carried out with the mother's permission on the advice of Miss Wunsch's doctors.

The hospital would not comment on the abortion, but a spokesman said Miss Wunsch was still in critical condition.

Appeal of dam issue expected

AUSTIN — The Stacy Dam controversy may wind up in the Texas Supreme Court after the 3rd Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to rehear the matter. An attorney representing the Lower Colorado River Authority, which opposes the dam, said he expects an appeal to be filed within 30 days.

The 3rd Court in June decided in a split vote that the Texas Water Commission properly issued a construction permit to the Colorado River Municipal Water District for Stacy Dam.

At that time, the central Texas river authority said it was considering an appeal to the Supreme Court. LCRA officials argue that the Colorado River's water rights already are committed.

Also, the LCRA claims that the river doesn't have enough water to support itself, the Highland Lakes above Austin and the Stacy Dam project.

When finished, Stacy Dam's reservoir is expected to provide 113,000 acre-feet of water a year for municipal and industrial customers in Big Spring, Midland, Odessa, Robert Lee, Snyder, San Angelo and Stanton.

Reagan asks Israel to give up West Bank

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's new peace initiative for the Middle East sends Israel an unmistakable message that victory on the battlefield should be followed by compromise at the bargaining table.

"It is not unknown in human history that in the wake of victory comes magnanimity and compromise," a senior official told reporters Wednesday night.

Reagan is asking Israel to give up its claim of overall sovereignty over the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip which the Israeli leadership wants to keep.

While the plan holds out the promise of a lasting peace for Israel as the chief incentive, Israel would have to yield most from its previous positions. Officials here were anxiously awaiting the formal reaction of the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin, which was briefed in advance of the president's speech.

An Analysis

The president called on Israel to immediately declare a freeze against any new or expanded Jewish settlements in the West Bank or Gaza Strip, among the lands it occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

REAGAN DID SAY — significantly — for the first time that the United States would oppose creation of a separate Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza Strip as many Palestinians have demanded. But Israel has said it would never allow creation of such a state anyway, and clearly has the military might to prevent it.

Reagan also said that while Israel's military successes in Lebanon have proven its military superiority in the region, armed force "alone cannot bring just and lasting peace to Israel and her neighbors."

Reagan's plan envisions giving self-rule to the 1.3 million West Bank and Gaza Palestinians "in association with Jordan," saying this offers the best chance "for a durable, just and lasting peace." The nature and degree of Jordanian control isn't spelled out and is left for negotiations.

A SENIOR ADMINISTRATION official said the borders of the West Bank would have to be redrawn to reflect Israel's security needs, which he said remain a paramount consideration.

Reagan appeared far more sympathetic to Palestinian needs than he has been previously and appeared even to show sympathy for Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas whose evacuation from Beirut was completed Wednesday.

He did not differentiate between the PLO and Palestinians when he said, "The departure of the Palestinians from Beirut dramatizes more than ever the homelessness of the Palestinian people."

"Only through broader participation in the peace process — most immediately by Jordan and by the Palestinians — will Israel be able to rest confident in the knowledge that its security and integrity will be respected by its neighbors," he said.

Reagan also made what could be a key concession to the PLO, which in the past has refused to accept U.N. resolution 242 on a Middle East solution in part because it dealt with the Palestinian problem as a "refugee problem."

SAID REAGAN: "Palestinians feel strongly that their cause is more than a question of refugees. I agree."

The administration has said repeatedly recently that if the PLO will recognize Israel's right to exist and accept resolution 242, it would be willing to talk with its leaders, such as PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

Whether the new plan goes anywhere beyond Reagan's speech remains to be seen. A senior official who briefed reporters had no next step to disclose, saying only he hoped those involved will take Reagan's plan seriously. He insisted it was entirely consistent with the 1978 Camp David peace accords, and he apparently was correct in that those accords don't rule out anything that Reagan proposed.

While there is no timetable for actual negotiations, the official stressed that Reagan wanted to move quickly in the wake of the war in Lebanon to propose a new negotiating framework.

"IT WAS IMPORTANT THAT we put the U.S. views out there before others get frozen into their positions," the official said, stressing that Reagan's plan is subject to negotiation.

Not only is the Israeli reaction important to whether anything comes of Reagan's ideas, but also the reaction of the Arab world, particularly King Hussein of Jordan and whether he will join in the peace negotiations that he so far has spurned.

U.S. officials hope Hussein sees that he has much to gain by getting back some control over the West Bank territory he lost in the 1967 war.

The incentive for everyone should be peace, said the senior official. "The principle leverage the United States has — and I think it is very powerful leverage — is the possibility of peace."

Reagan proposes autonomy for West Bank Palestinians

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Here, at a glance, are key points of President Reagan's plan for the Middle East as explained in his nationally broadcast speech Wednesday night, with reaction:

— Full autonomy for the Palestinian inhabitants of the West Bank and Gaza, but in association with Jordon.

— Free elections for a self-governing Palestinian authority in the occupied territories to prove the Palestinians can run their own affairs.

— Immediate freeze of Israeli settlement in the area.

— Peaceful and orderly transfer of domestic authority from Israel to Palestinian inhabitants of the West Bank and Gaza over five years, without interference with Israel's security requirements.

Reagan said:

— The United States "will not support the establishment of an independent Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza and we will not support annexation or permanent control by Israel."

— "Self-government by the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan offers the best chance for a durable, just and lasting peace."

— "The Arab-Israeli conflict should be resolved through negotiations involving an exchange of territory for peace."

U.S. Arabs, Jews warily praise plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Arabs and American Jews both found something to praise in President Reagan's proposals to seize the "new opportunity for Middle East peace" that follows the war in Lebanon.

But the praise was tempered by caution and there was little reaction from the embassies involved.

Congress was not in session and there were only scattered comments from congressmen about the nationally televised address Wednesday in which Reagan proposed that Israel yield the West Bank and Gaza Strip to eventual Palestinian autonomy in association with Jordan.

Spokesmen for embassies of two Middle East countries closely involved, Ezzeldin Shawkat for Egypt and Nachman Shai for Israel, declined immediate comment.

"THE PRESIDENT HAS placed the ball in King Hussein's court," said Thomas Dine, executive director of the American-Israeli public affairs committee. "He has made it clear that Hussein must recognize Israel and directly negotiate with the Jewish State. If he refuses — as he has in the past — then he alone will be responsible for the impasse."

But he also said that "this proposal undermines Camp David, which intentionally left the outcome open to negotiation. Dictating the outcome will prevent progress rather than produce it."

Abdul Hadi Majali, Jordan's ambassador to the United States, said, "I think the effort which has been done by the U.S. government is unique because this is the first time we've heard the U.S. view concerning certain elements of the problems of the Middle East."

"We hope that the final settlement will be according to the United Nations Resolution 242, that the West Bank will be back as a home for the Palestinians and that the peace will last in the area," he said on ABC's "Nightline" Wednesday night.

"AS THE PRESIDENT said, the most important thing is the peace which will come about by the acceptance of the people of the area," he said.

Dr. Akram Barakat, spokesman for the embassy of Jordan, said of Reagan's plan, "There are certainly very positive points in it, but it has to be studied in all its aspects. I hope it will lead to a new peace process for the Middle East."

The president said the agreements in Lebanon provided an opportunity for a far-reaching peace effort. In return for Israel's concessions, he said, Arab nations would have to recognize Israel's "right to exist in peace behind secure and defensible borders."

"I think the president is to be applauded for his attempt to beat those swords into plowshares," said Nathan Perlmutter, national director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. "I think too that the first step to be taken, if there is to be any negotiating process, is some indication on the part of the Arab nations that they're prepared to sit and talk in the context of the Israeli right to exist within secure borders."

ROBERT JOSEPH, president of the National Association of Arab-Americans which claims some 40,000 members, said, "We particularly appreciate as a positive feature the statement that the ultimate status of Jerusalem is negotiable and the call for a freeze on the existing number of (Jewish) settlements" on the West Bank.

The United States, he added, should foster a dialogue among all parties involved in the Middle East, including the Palestine Liberation Organization — "the internationally recognized and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

The Reagan administration has previously rejected any role for the PLO and Reagan mentioned none in his speech.

Henry Siegman, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, said if the president sticks with the conditions he set for Israeli security then the proposals "are reasonable and deserve consideration by Israel and the Arab countries."

"BOTH OF THE HORNS of the dilemma must be capped in order to find peace," said Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md. "One is the need of Israel for security. The other is the need for Palestinian people for national expression."

Mathias said Reagan had put the problem "out front ...where we can offer our suggestions for a solution soon."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said Reagan's address "was a generally supportable one with noble goals with which most Americans agree."

Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, said the president "offered a real chance for hope and displayed very positive movement for peace in the Middle East."

Inventor defeats obstacles

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Mike Benjamin thought a cheap, do-it-yourself solar collector would be a boon to homeowners tired of heating bills, but he found himself steaming as he tried to patent and sell his invention.

"I probably would do it again," said the 33-year-old inventor, who quit his job, sold his home and moved from Iowa to Florida for the sake of his device. "But only after keeping the day job and making sure I had a shrink for a friend."

Benjamin took a 2- by 8-foot piece of Styrofoam, etched its length with acid, covered it with a clear plastic and used it as a solar panel, which produces heat from the sun. In Iowa, he said, five or six panels would heat an average home during a sunny day at zero degrees.

Benjamin says his solar collector is cheap, easy to make, and does without the copper and aluminum panels, high-temperature insulation, glass glazing, metal frames and other materials that can boost the price of the usual panel to thousands of dollars.

His idea almost four years ago was to get a ready-made solar heating system on the market for $300 to $1,000, or to provide plans for a do-it-yourselfers for much less. The ready-made price would be about one-tenth that of sophisticated solar energy systems.

"I became paranoid," he said. "Surely someone, somewhere had already done this."

So he consulted a friend, lawyer Vic Ines, who decided they needed a disinterested opinion because the idea did seem too simple. They showed the collector to scientists from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, who liked it.

"With all of this support, I decided to put my money where my mouth was" and get a patent to protect his invention and help interest potential investors.

"I had some money saved up, and I figured I would be a millionaire shortly, so I quit the day job and moved to Florida. There is lots of sun in Florida..." he said.

Benjamin moved to Cape Canaveral, but soon spent his savings and wound up painting houses, making deliveries, and working as a part-time radio announcer while waiting for patent approval.

Help came with a $23,000 grant from the federal Department of Energy to show how the collector could be used by the public — and he received thousands of inquiries after an Associated Press story on his work.

So he got into the mail-order business, selling detailed plans for do-it-yourselfers, but wound up in legal difficulties with the U.S. Postal Service. By the time they were resolved, the grant money was spent and the publicity had faded.

Mexico restricts alien boats

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico does not plan to allow foreign boats to fish within the country's 200-mile sea limit because they have depleted a number of species in the past, the nation's Fisheries Department says.

Alfonso Lopez Cruz, the department's Director of International Fishing Affairs, said earlier this week only two Japanese firms currently hold permits to fish for shark and a few other species within Mexican waters and no new permits will be issued.

He said a number of foreign fishing boats have been recently apprehended catching squid illegally, and the species is one of several being depleted by overfishing. He said the year's squid production is estimated at 40,000 tons, way below what it was in past year.

Legal alien, working to support family in Mexico, dies

DALLAS (AP) — Diego Penaloza came to the United States legally to work, so he could send money to his wife and six children back in Mexico.

But Wednesday, when Penaloza was riding his bicycle to work, he veered into the path of a truck and died instantly, sheriff's officials said.

Investigator Jack Jackson said Penaloza, 28, was riding the bicycle back to work after taking a lunch break when he turned into the path of an empty dump truck.

Penaloza was struck and carried across the road, the investigator said.

Jackson said no charges would be filed against the driver of the truck, a 26-year-old Arlington man, although the case routinely will go to the Dallas County grand jury.

PUC analyzes Bell's rate request

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Relatively quiet protests greeted Southwestern Bell's 1982 rate increase request as the Public Utility Commission began its analysis of the $471.5 million package.

A consumer group that in past years filled the hearing room with balloons and signs offered only two witnesses and a handful of placards Wednesday as the hearing began.

Although quieter than in past years, the protests were the same.

"Bell must be very creative in their accounting to try to justify a 50 percent increase," said Willo Hardin of the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now.

Two ACORN members and a Beaumont recreation vehicle dealer were the only three Southwestern Bell customers to testify against the increase Wednesday.

"Why can't Southwestern Bell cut corners like the rest of us mortals?" asked Lottie Mae Banks, a Fort Worth member of ACORN. "Most of us are senior citizens. We don't get but just a little money a month."

Southwestern Bell wants $4.60 more a month for basic residential service. Paul Roth, vice president for revenue and public affairs in Texas, took the stand Wednesday as the company's first witness in the hearing that could last eight weeks

"Our customers expect us to provide service on demand, and as a regulated utility, we are required to meet that demand," Roth said in prefiled testimony. "We must, therefore, have sufficient facilities in place to satisfy our customer needs."

But customer J. David Malloch of Hardin County said the service has not been good. He complained telephone service in his subdivision has been "inferior" for many years, with entire exchanges sometimes out of service.

Malloch also complained about Yellow Pages salesmen who come to his Beaumont recreation vehicle delearship. He said their "ethics and procedures border on tactics which could be considered deceptive."

Specifically, he said, the salesmen told him there was a 68 percent increase in "telephone activity" in Jefferson County. Malloch said he later found out that "activity" included disconnections.

Roth and other Southwestern Bell officials now will spend several days trying to defend their cost studies and statistics. Attorneys for about 20 intervenors will try to poke holes in the studies.

The company's rate increase request is the largest ever submitted to the Utility Commission. PUC staff members will argue for a $304.5 million increase for the telephone company.

CD funds spent to repair first 12 houses

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The first 12 houses being rehabilitated with Community Development Block Grant funds are costing an average of $5,200, according to a report presented Wednesday afternoon before the monthly session of the Housing Authority.

Meeting in City Hall Council Chambers, Horace Berry said 12 houses are under contract and the total for repairs adds up to $62,716.33, which is $5,226.36 per house.

Berry is rehabilitation inspector for the program that will use $500,000 of the $1 million allotted by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for 1981-82.

Susan Howell, CD coordinator, said 71 applications had been approved, and she now has a waiting list of more eligible homes. As to how many can be rehabilitated depends upon cost of the repairs.

"Some will cost quite a bit; others won't be as much," said Berry, who has sent out for bids on five more homes. "These should run a little more than the average of $5,200."

He added that the total repair bill also includes his fee.

"Gosh, we're doing great," said Chairman Gene Abbott of the repair costs. In setting up the program, repairs had been estimated to cost $7,500 to $10,000 per house with the money going to fix up a maximum of 45 homes.

"What runs the price up is the roof and some will need windows replaced," said Berry.

The board decided to tour some of the homes under repair at its next meeting Oct. 6.

In other action, the board approved a revised list of charge-backs to tenants in Hillcrest Manor, the 100-unit apartment complex for low-income elderly and handicapped persons.

And the Broad Range of Income Policy for selecting new tenants from the list of applicants was revised to allow more tenants from a higher income range, according to Secretary Fred Kester.

A list of tenants showed more coming from the higher ranges and the policy was adapted to reflect the actual situation, he said.

Jury weighs sentence for convicted killer

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The jury that convicted an 18-year-old Amarillo man in last year's rape and strangulation of an elderly nun was faced with the decision today whether to recommend a life sentence or death by injection.

The capital murder trial of Johnny Frank Garrett moved into the punishment phase soon after jurors ended more than four hours of deliberations late Wednesday afternoon with its verdict.

For Garrett to be sentenced to death, the state must prove he will be a threat to society in the future.

Prosecutors put a state judge and an Amarillo woman on the stand late Wednesday to testify that Garrett had a bad reputation in the community and had been sent to a juvenile detention center four years ago. The defense was to present its witnesses today.

The jury concluded that Garrett broke into St. Francis Convent across the street from where he lived, then raped and killed 76-year-old Sister Tadea Benz last Oct. 31.

Garrett showed no emotion when the verdict was read, but began to cry and swept a book off the table after State District Judge George Dowlen ordered jurors from the courtroom.

During the trial, Dowlen allowed the prosecution to enter into evidence a statement that police said Garrett made when he was arrested about 10 days after the slaying.

According to the statement, which Garrett said was untrue and a concoction of the Amarillo Police Department, Garrett admitted breaking into a lower window of the convent in the early morning hours of Oct. 31. Police said Garrett told them the nun woke up while he was in her room and that he choked her until she passed out, then had sex with her.

One of the victims of a hit-and-run driver who sped down the crowded Bourbon Street pedestrian mall Wednesday lies at the corner of St. Peter Street with his leg in a splint. Fifteen people were injured by the car.

Teacher arrested after car plows through revellers on Bourbon Street

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A teacher was arrested after his speeding car plowed through tourists, vendors and street entertainers along crowded Bourbon Street, sending pedestrians flying and injuring up to 15 people, police said.

Among those hurt Wednesday night was a 14-year-old street dancer, struck and dragged briefly after the car burst through steel barricades and careened about seven blocks down the pedestrian mall in the nightclub heart of the French Quarter, officers said. The street is closed to vehicles during the evening.

The car's driver "wasn't hitting anything but people," said Bonnie Harnois, whose flower cart is at the corner of Bourbon and Toulouse. Witnesses estimated the vehicle sped at up to 40 mph down Bourbon Street, which is hardly wide enough for two buses to pass each other.

Homer Robinson, 32, a teacher from the Algiers section of New Orleans, was arrested after the car was stopped at the edge of the quarter, said Police Sgt. Ray Burkhart.

Robinson, being held at Charity Hospital for examination and blood analysis, would be booked on 15 counts of causing negligent injury, reckless driving and related charges, Burkhart said.

"At this point we have no motive or reason why the man did what he did," said police spokesman Gus Krinke.

Within an hour of the 8:20 p.m. incident, the neighborhood's nightclubs were again blaring out jazz while striptease dancers enticed passing pedestrians and hot dog vendors and flower sellers pushed their wares. At least seven major conventions were in town.

A car careened along a similar Bourbon Street route in April 1972, killing one person and injuring 18.

Also hurt was his 19-year-old brother, Darryl, who said the two teen-agers were "standing by the barricade and this dude came from Canal Street. He stopped a little bit but then he just slammed on the gas. He ran over my little brother" and dragged him.

Security officer dies while chasing suspect

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A security officer is dead of an apparent heart attack and the man he pursued through a shopping mall was in stable condition after being shot by an off-duty police officer.

The chase began Wednesday after a man attempted to use a stolen credit card and fled when a clerk discovered the card had been stolen.

An off-duty police officer shot the man in the back at the end of the chase, a police spokesman said. He was under guard today at John Peter Smith Hospital.

Ridgmar Mall's chief of security, Samuel Herrell, 59, died at 4:47 p.m. at Harris Hospital, police said.

Herrell was summoned when a man tried to use a credit card at a mall department store and a trace showed the card had been stolen, officers said.

Authorities said an off-duty officer from the suburban Westover Hills Police Department joined the chase. The officer, whom police would not identify, said he was in the parking lot with his wife when two men ran by. He joined in pursuit and returned to his car to get his gun when the fleeing man pushed him down in a store, he said.

Nova's Inc. executive attributes lawsuit to 'poor' legal advice

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

An executive of Nova's Inc. Wednesday blamed "poor" legal advice for a lawsuit and other legal difficulties the company has encountered in Texas and as many as eight or 10 additional states.

Included in the company's legal problems is an agreed temporary injunction signed by Travis County Court judge Mary Pearl Williams Aug. 24. The injunction prohibits Nova's Inc. from conducting business in Texas until a lawsuit filed against the firm by the state attorney general's office is resolved.

Don Curtis, board chairman of the Salt Lake City-based firm, said the company has also encountered legal obstacles in Washington, Oregon, Montana and several states he was unable to specify.

The injunction followed a 10-day, temporary restraining order issued Aug. 10, one day after the suit was filed alleging violations of the state's Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act.

Zoleta Courtney, assistant attorney general in the consumer protection division, said agreement on the injunction was reached after negotiations Aug. 18 with Ken Michael, a Phoenix attorney recently retained by Nova's Inc. to handle the lawsuit.

CURTIS SAID the company hired two "very reputable" Utah law firms to research the statutes in those states to which the company intended to extend its multi-level marketing operation.

He said the company received "poor counsel" from the two firms, which he declined to name. "We are at this point changing certain policies and procedures to bring us into compliance in Texas," he said. "We did it with counsel every step of the way. The counsel was poor, we recognize that." Curtis said the company has since ceased dealing with one of the firms.

The attorney general's office obtained the temporary restraining order after Nova's Inc. failed to secure a certificate of authority from the secretary of state, mandatory for all out-of-state companies operating in Texas.

Nova's Inc. operates a "buying club," in which consumers pay a $35 membership fee and $15 monthly dues for the right to purchase a variety of consumer goods at 3 percent more than dealer cost. Members receive 10 percent of the dues paid by people they recruit. They also receive commission on the recruits' recruits, producing a geometric progression of commission payments.

THE ILLEGALITIES charged in the Aug. 9 lawsuit concern alleged violations of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, including article 20 of section 17.46, which prohibits "selling or offering to sell, either directly or associated with the sale of goods or services, a right of participation in a multi-level distributorship."

According to the act, a multi-level distributorship is "a sales plan for the distribution of goods or services in which promises of rebate or payment are made to individuals recommending or securing additional individuals to assume positions in the sales operation, and where the rebate or payment is not exclusively conditioned on or in relation to procceds from the retail sales of goods."

Also, the lawsuit alleges that the company led consumers to believe that it was operating with state approval, violating articles two and five of the Deceptive Trade Practices Act. Company representatives also allegedly failed to provide consumers with cancellation forms as required by the Home Solicitation Transactions Act.

Curtis said the multi-level marketing portion of the company's business is the basic point of contention in the suit. He said the company is "making adjustments to comply with the laws of Texas."

ALTHOUGH HE declined to specify the "adjustments" planned, Curtis said "there has to be a fundamental change to comply with the law. That change is being affected." Curtis added that he thinks the lawsuit will be resolved soon.

He said that attempts have been made to contact Nova's Inc. members by mail and inform them of the temporary injunction against transacting business. But, because of the nature of the multi-level system, he said "it's just very difficult for us to communicate with everybody in the system."

Curtis defended the multi-level marketing idea, calling it "the wave of the future."

"In a sense, every sale that gets made in America could be termed multi-level," he said. As an example Curtis said fees paid to an auto mechanic are passed on, in varying amounts, to a service manager, a car dealership owner and parent company stockholders.

He said the commission paid to members is similar to payment for advertising, except the company advertises with people instead of in a newspaper or magazine.

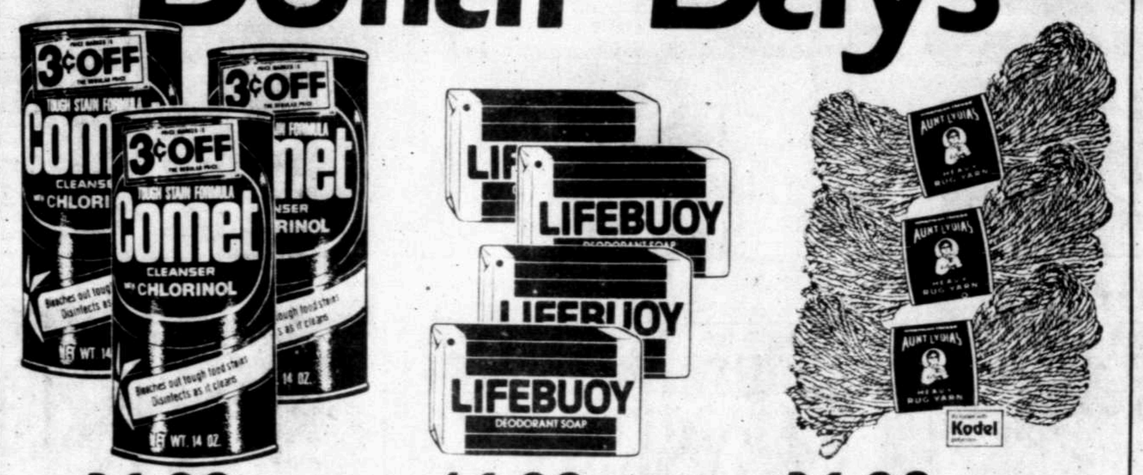

Curtis said his staff suspects that part of the impetus behind the legal actions against his company stems from pressure exerted by Texas retailers who fear competition from companies such as Nova's Inc.

"Nonetheless, whatever brought it about, we're glad that it happened," he said. He explained that the legal roadblocks came when the company's membership was relatively few, enabling the firm to more readily alter its policies.

He said the company had about 15,000 members at the end of July, with about 8,000 of those in Texas.

'Little person' teaches little people

DALLAS (AP) — When parents walked up to Lois Lamb on the first day of school last week and asked her where the teacher was, she wasn't insulted.

The slight, which Mrs. Lamb attributes to first-day-of-school confusion, also might be the result of Mrs. Lamb's height — 4-foot-1.

Students in Mrs. Lamb's kindergarten class at Elisha Pease Elementary School in South Dallas see their teacher eye to eye, and that's just the way she likes it.

"People come in all sizes, shapes and colors. When I was made by God, he decided I was going to be a little person and teach little people just like you," she told her class of 22 similar-sized students.

Dallas Independent School District officials say Mrs. Lamb is the first dwarf to teach in Dallas public schools.

"One of the great things about Mrs. Lamb is that she's more than willing to explain about her size," said Pease principal Melvin Howe. "She wants to be accepted for what she is as a human being, and that's fantastic."

Mrs. Lamb explains to the class that she is a dwarf, not a midget. And she tells the class that school is going to be more fun since everyone in the classroom is the same size.

"Now, can you say that: Mrs. Lamb is a little person?"

"Everybody remember that. Am I something to be afraid of?"

"No," said the class in unison.

"Since I was a child, I always wanted to be a teacher. It's very important; you're laying the groundwork of their lives," Mrs. Lamb said.

"Society is accepting little people more and more. You never would have found this type of work in the 60s," she said.

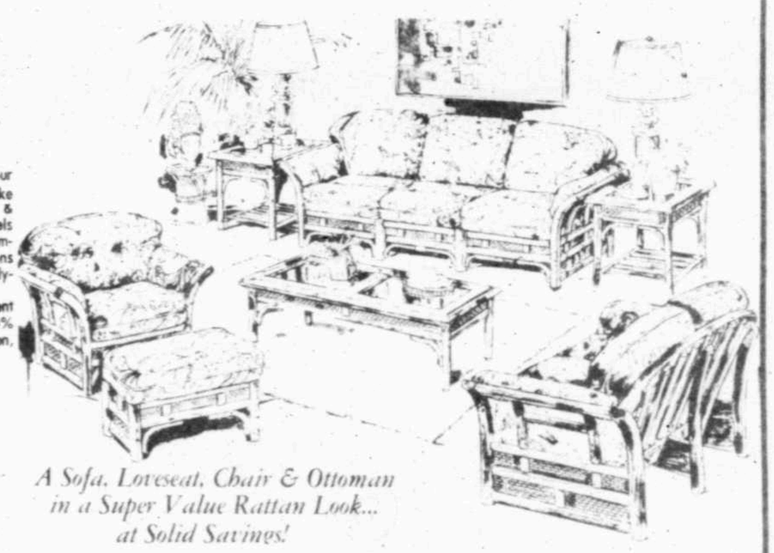

Mrs. Lamb said she thinks she will set an example for the class to show the obstacles a person can overcome. And she thinks her job will help dispel myths that dwarfs can find work only in circus shows or wrestling arenas.

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actresses Eileen Brennan (of TV's "Private Benjamin"), Valerie Perrine and Kitty Carlisle celebrate this birthday with you. Also born on this date: the late Alan Ladd and singer Hank Thompson. Some of the personal burdens you have been shouldering will soon be lifted. A pension, insurance dividend or other retirement benefit increases, and you feel more secure about your and your loved ones' future. New business opportunities open up. Be careful not to be taken in by a smooth talker. Family members become more involved in your everyday life. Although this means added profits for you, it could also cause tension. Be diplomatic.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You now have a better idea of what you want from life. A new idea receives a favorable response from those in authority. Your popularity is on the rise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Morning hours favor forming new alliances. Get agreements in writing and review legal papers with attorneys. Do not become bogged down in dull routine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A common sense attitude will help solve a difficult emotional problem. Your mature attitude impresses someone influential. You get a second chance with mate or partner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Share your knowledge with someone who has shown his/her devotion in the past. Welcome an opportunity to travel and meet fascinating people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A business or personal relationship mellows. You are concerned about something mysterious during early afternoon. A small child solves the puzzle!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A career decision may involve a move to another city. Consult mate or partner before pursuing the matter any further. Your need for privacy increases.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial matters dominate. A raise or promotion is in the offing. An older person pulls some strings to help you. Spend time alone with loved one tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get out and meet people from different walks of life. Loved ones are more appreciative than in the recent past. Pamper yourself later today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Develop a plan of action to deal with people who take too long to make decisions. Give co-workers a definite time limit. Reconsider loved one's request.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance is intertwined with business today. Your non-stop pace begins to wear you down. Let up a bit! A financial question needs an immediate answer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not accept an offer unless you know exactly what is behind it. A personal relationship improves when you decide to ventilate your anger instead of suppressing it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Something is taking place behind closed doors that will affect your career in a positive way. Do not let work dispute upset the applecart! Avoid conflict.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

We are often asked to give a bidding sequence for freak hands. Usually, we reply quite honestly that there is no right or wrong way to bid those hands. We simply have not had enough experience with eight-, nine-, or ten-card suits to know how to handle them. A correspondent from abroad swears that this hand was dealt in an Italian tournament, and that the bidding shown actually occurred at the table. Knowing the volatile nature of bridge players, he is probably right.

Certainly, after the two club opening bid, East's jump to four spades cannot be faulted. And South might have been warned by his wasted values in spades that a heart slam would need some luck. We are inclined to agree with West's double.

Since he could not lead a spade even if he wanted to, West's decision to lead a club is hard to fault. He reasoned that there was a good chance that his partner would be void in clubs and would get a ruff. Logical, but only half right. East was indeed void in clubs; unfortunately, he did not have a trump with which to ruff.

Declarer was quick to seize his opportunity. He took all four of dummy's high clubs, discarding a diamond and a spade from his hand. Next came the king of diamonds. Had East not covered, declarer would have discarded his remaining spade. When East produced the ace, declarer ruffed and entered dummy with the ace of trumps. On the queen of diamonds declarer pitched his remaining spade, and he conceded only one trump trick.

Obviously, declarer would have gone down three had West led a diamond — the defenders would have scored a diamond, a spade, a spade ruff and the king of trumps. Equally obvious is the fact that South's judgment to bid over four spades was correct in one aspect — East would have made four spades, losing only a trump trick and two diamonds.

A built-in deficit

If there seems to have been quite a lot of moaning and gnashing of teeth over this year's federal budget deficit, it's probably because the "type" of budget deficit the government is now seeing has never been seen before.

Oh, federal budget deficits are nothing new; they've been around quite some time. In fact there have been 10 deficits in the past decade, 19 in the past 20 years, 32 since World War II and 45 since the New Deal year of 1932.

It's likely that what is so frightening to politicians — and to us — is the specter of the deficit that won't go away. Now for the first time, says Business Week, "the U.S. economy is suffering from a built-in deficit, one that will remain astronomically high even if no new spending programs or tax reductions are enacted."

Business Week's outlook for the government's economy is depressing to say the least. It predicts that even if a solid recovery takes place, the economic shortfalls will remain huge.

"From 1982 to 1985 the U.S. will add almost $500 billion to the national debt, more than it had in the preceding 30 years," the magazine indicated in its Aug. 16 edition.

Furthermore, it's apparent that the government has lost long-term control over the balance between expenditures and revenues. The magazine noted that spending as a percent of gross national product will grow at an unprecedentedly high 23 percent from now until 1985, while the percentage of federal revenues will decline steadily to less than 20 percent.

The current deficit has "taken root" despite 10 years of talk about a balanced budget. The Budet Control Act of 1974 was supposed to get expenditures in line with the nation's receipts. And, of course, we all know the mandate given President Ronald Reagan when he was elected to office.

The current task facing the nation's elected officials is to live up to economic reality and to regain control of federal receipts and expenditures. If not the nation's economic situation will only continue to worsen, making the remedy all the worse.

With every passing day the chore only becomes more difficult, the nation in worst economic straits. We honestly hope President Reagan's tax reform turns out to be a true reform.

A common sense ruling

The newly passed federal legislation overturning the U.S. Supreme Court decision which had prohibited divorced wives from sharing in the former husband's military pensions was a victory not only for the thousands of women adversely affected by that perverse ruling. It was, more important, a victory for fairness and common sense.

The decision in question, handed down by the Supreme Court just over a year ago (in McCarty vs. McCarty), held that divorce courts in community-property states could not require retired military personnel to share that part of the pension earned during the marriage with their former wives, as the state courts had been ordering. In effect, said the U.S. Supreme Court, military pensions were not part of community property (as nearly all other pensions are) but, absurdly, a sort of remuneration for current services.

The court's reasoning for that conclusion was that retired military people were always subject to involuntary recall and were thus being compensated for that possibility. The fact that none have been so recalled for many years and that everyone else in the society is, in the event of a national emergency, subject to a similar call was conveniently ignored.

The law passed by Congress overturning the decision — it's part of a military authorization bill — in fact puts ex-wives of military pensioners in a somewhat better position than they were before McCarty. It permits divorced wives to ask the Defense Department to pay them their court-ordered share of pension payments directly, provided that they were married at least 10 years while their husbands were on active duty, thereby guaranteeing prompt and certain payments. In addition, it provides certain divorced spouses for the first time both continuing military health care and commissary provisions.

The law, of course, remains limited. It applies only to those states which have community-property laws and it protects only those arrangements that are ordered by the courts as part of a divorce settlement. Which is to say that it returns to the states the prerogatives they had before McCarty was handed down.

It is, nonetheless, a substantial victory and, not coincidentally, a major triumph for the organizations of ex-military wives who had fought for this legislation. As one leader of such a group pointed out, it demonstrated to women who had never been politically involved before just how much could be done at the right time in the right cause with the proper organization.

Another View:

The prayer amendment

Speaking to the Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus, President Reagan repeated his backing of a constitutional amendment to permit prayer in the public schools.

"I think you'll agree with me — we need a prayer amendment, we need it badly," he said, and then delivered a glib platitude if there ever was one, saying, "we are to have freedom of religion, not freedom from religion."

All Americans have freedom of religion and freedom from religion. The men who drafted the Constitution and the Bill of Rights saw to that.

Some of the Founding Fathers were religious men, and some were atheists, and some came down on the side of don't know, but one thing virtually all of them agreed upon was the necessity of building, in Jefferson's words, "a wall of separation" between church and state.

Steeped in history as they were, they knew how, in the England from which most of them or their ancestors had migrated, Protestants had persecuted Catholics, and in France, Spain, Portugal and Italy, Catholics had persecuted Protestants, and in the German states each had persecuted the other, and the Jews were fair game for both.

They were determined to establish freedom of religion in the new country they were founding, and they did. They also were determined to establish freedom from religion, and they did that, too. In the United States everyone can pray as he pleases, but no one can force anyone to pray.

The Founding Fathers wanted to protect religion from the state as well as the state from religion. They believed in rendering therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's.

The proposed amendment would alter the religion clause in the Bill of Rights, breaching the wall of separation between church and state which has stood up well through the centuries. That is the issue, and the president is obligated to the people to address it with more than a meaningless one-line slogan.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Lebanese valley is crux of hashish trade

WASHINGTON — The military focus in the Middle East has shifted from Beirut to the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon, where Syria and Israel are building up their forces.

Jack Anderson

At stake is one of the most fertile areas in the whole Middle East. But the most important crop isn't melons or wheat; it's hashish.

Intelligence sources in Israel, Lebanon and Washington agree that hashish production has increased since 1976, when the Syrians occupied the Bekaa Valley as a United Nations peacekeeping force. Some sources suggest that hashish is one reason Syria wants to stay in the valley.

A classified "narcotics intelligence estimate," prepared with the help of the CIA and shown to my associate Dale Van Atta, estimates that the valley's annual production of hashish was 230 to 260 tons — almost double what it was before the Syrian occupation. Nearly 75 percent of the crop has been going to Egypt each year, the report notes.

"Generally, only one crop is grown per year," the narcotics report explains. "It is ... harvested from mid-August to mid-September, before the advent of the rainy season."

In other words, the Lebanese farmers are harvesting their crop right now; at least, they're trying to. The intelligence experts say this year's hashish crop isn't nearly as big as usual, because of the Israeli invasion. But no one can even guess at the exact size of the crop because, as one report notes, "the flow of narcotics intelligence from Lebanon has been seriously curtailed because of the turmoil there."

Anywhere from 9,000 to 13,000 acres of the Bekaa Valley are devoted to cultivation of cannabis, the plant that produces marijuana and hashish. Because of the valley's lushness, an acre yields a 3,080-pound crop. This can be transformed into more than a ton of marijuana, or 35 to 60 pounds of hashish.

When the Syrians moved in, "some of the land abandoned by Christian villagers (was) confiscated by Moslem farmers and put into cannabis cultivation," the narcotics estimate reports. It adds that "the livelihood of two-thirds of the valley's population" depended directly on hashish cultivation under the Syrians.

Before the Israeli invasion, the Bekaa Valley was controlled "by approximately 20 family organizations," each of which had its own "well-armed, para-military force whose arsenals reportedly contain automatic weapons and, in some cases, tanks," the report states.

From the Bekaa Valley, the hashish is taken to the Lebanese ports of Beirut, Tripoli and Jounieh, where small craft like rafts or lifeboats deliver the stuff to ships waiting beyond the 12-mile limit.

Lebanese authorities have generally winked at the lucrative, illicit traffic. In fact, it is one of the ironies of Lebanon that the hashish trade has been one of the principal areas of close cooperation between Moslems and Christians.

"Traditionally, Christians have controlled most of the business and financial arrangements of the hashish trade, (including control of) two of the major hashish export cities in the north," says a classified government report. "Moslems, on the other hand, have been the hashish cultivators."

Clearly, this unholy alliance is still operational, waiting only for the Syrians and Israelis to settle their differences and let the hashish traffic get back to normal.

POST-ELECTION PURGE: After the November elections, President Reagan is expected to authorize a major purge of Cabinet members and White House aides. The ax will probably fall between Thanksgiving and Christmas, when most of Washington has its mind on turkeys, sugarplums and lame ducks.

Administration insiders say those headed for the block include Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, Interior Secretary James Watt, Education Secretary Terrel Bell and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce. In the White House itself, Budget Director David Stockman, communications assistant David Gergen and counsel Fred Fielding are reported on the hit list.

All of them have either embarrassed the president in one way or another, haven't performed up to expectations or simply don't like their jobs. No official list has been drawn up yet, nor has Reagan formally approved any firings. Every effort will be made to get the targeted officials to go quietly.

"Ronald Reagan doesn't like to fire anyone," a longtime associate explained. "If he did, a couple of these guys would be long gone already."

WATCH ON WASTE: In this time of massive layoffs, lucky is the worker who gets severance pay to soften the blow. Uncle Sam is generous in this regard — too generous, according to investigators in the General Accounting Office.

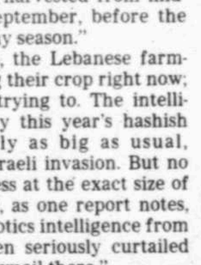

Federal employees who are laid off collect a week's pay for every year of service, plus an additional week's pay for every year over 10. Those over 40 also get a bonus. What upset the GAO auditors, though, was the practice of giving severance pay to employees who were rehired immediately by government contractors to perform their old jobs, often in the same offices.

GEORGE F. WILL

Defining 'Palestine' remains the obstacle

WASHINGTON — A small dam of words burst last Sunday and the wave that washed over the Arab-Israeli dispute rinsed a large rock that lies in the path of peace. Careful words from a king and crafty words from a Palestine Liberation Organization operative revealed deep Arab disagreement even about what the word "Palestine" designates.

George F. Will

On ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" Bassam Abu Shareef of the PLO said "an" aim of the PLO is establishment of a state on "part of" — on "any" part of — Palestine. A state on the West Bank and Gaza would be "satisfactory."

Question: "Does this mean that (the PLO) can accept the simultaneous existence of Israel as a Jewish state?"

Shareef: "This is the PLO program. It was very clear, and although many people decided not to read it carefully because they don't want to read it carefully, we now read it to you carefully."

Oh? What "PLO program"? Not the Palestine National Charter adopted in 1968, the first point of which is that Palestine is an "indivisible" part of the Arab world, and the second point of which is: "Palestine, with the borders it had during the British Mandate, is an indivisible territorial unit." (More in a moment about why the PLO accepts the British "imperialist" definition of Palestine.)

Shareef's statement, another example of PLO "moderation" for American media, refers to the PLO's 10-point program adopted in 1974. It held that "any" liberation of Palestine is but a step toward the destruction of Israel (point four) and — note well — the overthrow of the Jordanian regime (point five). When Shareef was asked if the PLO's argument about title to the West Bank is not "as much with Jordan as it is with Israel," he said: "Well, who told you that we differentiate greatly betwee Begin and Hussein?" There, suddenly, the mask of moderation slipped, the dishonesty was revealed.

Shareef was immediately followed on ABC by Hussein. He was asked about recent statements by Israel's foreign and defense ministers (Shamir and Sharon) that Jordan is a Palestinian state. Before considering his answer, consider this:

The first modern use of the word "Palestine" to designate a specific territory was for the territory mandated to British when the Ottoman empire collapsed in 1918. The League of Nations' mandate designated land on both sides of the Jordan River — all that is now Israel and Jordan — as Palestine. Later, Britain separated Transjordan (now Jordan), restricting the name "Palestine" to the West Bank and what is now Israel. But remember what Hussein never forgets: the PLO charter endorsed the original, inclusive definition of Palestine.

Responding to Israeli statements that Jordan is Palestinian, ethnically (65-70 percent) and geographically, Hussein said, obliquely: Jordan has given "a chance to feel at home" to "Palestinians awaiting a resolution of their problem, on their legitimate soil." By "Palestinian soil," he means everything west of the Jordan River. He spoke on Sunday of "Palestinian soil under occupation by Israel, and the West Bank, Arab Jerusalem and Gaza."

So "Palestinian soil" includes more than territories occupied by Israel in 1967. Unlike the PLO, Hussein says (or seems to) that there is no Palestinian soil east of the Jordan River. Like the PLO, he says (or seems to) that all soil west of the Jordan — Tel Aviv, Haifa, everything — Palestinian.

For 19 years (1948-67) Jordan controlled the West Bank that Hussein now calls "Palestinian soil," but made no move to offer it up to what Hussein now calls "legitimate Palestinian Arab rights." On ABC Hussein called it "inaccurate" to say Jordan annexed the West Bank more than 30 years ago. He said, "It was an Arab effort to save what could be saved of Palestine" after the 1948 war. But no Arab nation supported Jordan's annexation. The United States never recognized it. Only two nations — Britain and Pakistan — did. Ironically, Israel sort of did, de facto, after 1967, by using Jordanian currency, applying Jordanian law, and maintaining Jordanian education and civic practices.

On Monday, the Reagan administration declared that Jordan is not a Palestinian state. But on Sept. 3, 1980, Ronald Reagan said: "Israel and Jordan are the two Palestinian states envisioned and authorized by the United Nations. Jordan is now recognized as sovereign in some 80 percent of the old territory of Palestine."

Hussein's subtlety, even artistry, was on view Sunday. In September, 1970, his army killed many times more PLO members than Sharon's army killed in Lebanon. Last Sunday, when an ABC correspondent said "the Palestinians" were expelled from Jordan in 1970, Hussein deftly, almost unnoticeably rejected the equation of the PLO and "the Palestinians." He simply said: "Not many left Jordan in 1970. A very few did so...." That is true. Most Palestinians are still there, in Palestine.

ART BUCHWALD

Nice guys don't always finish first!

I was walking down Pennsylvania Avenue with my wife when a nice fellow came out of this big White House and stuck a 20-dollar bill in my hand.

"What is that for?" I asked.

Art Buchwald

"It's a tax cut," the man said smiling, friendly as he could be. "I promised you one, and I always keep my promises."

"Take it," my wife said, "and don't ask any more questions."

This nice fellow said, "I'm going to give you one of those every week."

"What for?" I wanted to know?

My wife kept tugging on my arm.

"So you'll use it to do some good. I want you to go out and spend it or save it or use it to give someone a job. I want to spread the wealth."

"But if you keep giving away 20-dollar bills, you won't have any for yourself."

The nice guy smiled. "That's what you think. The more money I give away to people like you the more I'll have coming back. It's a new economic theory and I can't miss."

My wife was getting angry. "It's his money and if he wants to give it to us, we should take it."

"There is a catch to it somewhere," I whispered to her so he couldn't hear. "No guy who lives in a big White House gives 20-dollar bills away."

"Maybe he's an eccentric and wants to make other people feel good."

"Next year," the nice guy said, "I'm going to give you twice as much as I gave you this year."

"I think the guy has lost his marbles," I whispered to my wife. "Either that or it's some chain letter scam."

The nice guy was handing out 20-dollar bills to everyone walking by.

"I don't care what it is," my wife said. "Let's get out of here before the police come."

I stuck the 20-dollar bill in my pocket and hurried down the street.

A few nights later my wife and I were taking a walk around the back of the big White House and a man came out of the shadows and said, "Your money or your life."

I looked around and much to my surprise it was the nice guy who had given me a 20-dollar bill.

"What gives?" I said angrily? "A few days ago you were handing out money like there was no tomorrow and now you want to take it away from me?"

The guy smiled. "I made a mistake. I gave away more money than I thought I had. Now I have to get it back."

"Give it to him and don't ask questions," my wife said hysterically.

"You should be ashamed of yourself," I told him.

"I am, but I still want your money."

"All right," I said. "Here's your 20 dollars."

"I need more than that." He was going through my wallet. "I'm flat broke."

"You should have thought of that before you started giving everyone 20-dollar bills."

"One thing has nothing to do with the other," he said. "What I do in front of the house is one thing. What I do in the back of it is another."

"Don't take my Social Security card. I may need it," I pleaded.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 2, 1945, the Independent Vietnam Republic was proclaimed by Ho Chi Minh, who became president.

On this date:

In 1666, the Great Fire of London started, virtually destroying the city in five days.

In 1962, the Soviet Union agreed to send arms to Cuba.

In 1967, Ilse Koch, serving a life term for atrocities she committed at the Buchenwald concentration camp in World War II, hanged herself at a Bavarian prison.

In 1979, a hurricane battered the Bahamas, leaving 640 people dead.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Army ended its review of the My Lai massacre in the Vietnam War, formally reprimanding a colonel and a captain, and ordering a sergeant ousted from the service.

Five years ago: Millionaire Arizona developer Max Dunlop went on trial in Phoenix for the murder of investigative reporter Don Bolles more than a year earlier.

One year ago: A Soviet newspaper suggested the CIA was behind a Tehran bombing three days earlier that killed the president and prime minister.

Today's birthdays: Author Allen Drury is 64.

Thought for today: Martyrdom is the only way in which man can become famous without ability. — George Bernard Shaw, Irish-born playwright (1856-1950).

Canton quadruplets 'unite' for their first day of school

PEKING (AP) — Their four names, written together in order, mean "unite," and the 7-year-old Luo quadruplets of Canton did just that as they prepared to start elementary school, said the Canton newspaper Yangcheng Evening News.

An older sister has taught them a little arithmetic already and they can write their first names — Da Lian, Er He, San Qi and Si Lai, it added.

Da, er, san and si mean eldest, second, third and fourth, and "lian he qi lai" means unite.

The quads were born in December 1974 to a rural commune official and his wife, a Canton worker, the paper said.

Robert Young

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robert Young, whose calm, avuncular demeanor has epitomized the "no-jitters" appeal in Sanka coffee television commercials, says he's been handed a pink slip.

Young, 75, said the coffee-maker decided to adopt a new advertising approach that would feature "man-in-the-street" testimonials. The end of his five-year association with General Foods Inc. and the Young & Rubicam ad agency was "absolutely" amicable, he said.

"I've known about it for some time," he said Wednesday. "It was one of the most gracious, considerate and responsible dismissals I've ever had in my life."

The former star of the "Marcus Welby, M.D." and "Father Knows Best" TV shows said General Foods had pledged to establish a scholarship fund in the name of Young and his wife of nearly 50 years, Betty, at the school of their choice.

Dorothy Bush

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — Vice President Bush's only daughter was married at a 20-minute ceremony near the family's summer seaside home.

Dorothy Walker Bush, 23, the youngest of the vice president's five children, married William H. LeBlond of New Canaan, Conn., at St. Ann's Episcopal Church on Wednesday.

About 300 guests attended the ceremony.

Miss Bush was graduated this year from Boston College, and her 25-year-old husband, son of a New York bank executive, is a 1981 graduate of Boston Univeristy.

Flip Wilson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Flip Wilson, who says his arrest on drug charges was invalid because the evidence came from an illegal search, is asking the state Supreme Court to reconsider his appeal.

Wilson's attorney, Paul Moore II, told the court Wednesday the rejection of Wilson's appeal in July had been based on a law that hadn't been passed until 15 months after Wilson's arrest.

In a petition, Moore said the 2nd District Court of Appeal improperly had applied the Proposition 8 initiative, known as the victim's bill of rights.

The court ruling was an illegal retroactive use of the laws, which expand law officers' rights to search suspects, Moore said.

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana appreciated the gift of a WAPL-FM T-shirt for their royal baby, but would like future presents sent to charity, a spokeswoman says.

Earlier this summer, the radio station, noting its call letters match the initials of Prince William Arthur Philip Louis, had sent him a T-shirt, hat, bumper-sticker and belt buckle advertising WAPL radio in Appleton.

In a letter received Tuesday by WAPL-FM, lady-in-waiting Anne Beckwith-Smith said Charles and Diana were grateful for gifts the station had sent to Prince William.

However, "It is no longer possible for their royal highnesses to accept gifts from commercial enterprises," Ms. Beckwith-Smith said.

The letter, dated July 27, said the royal couple hopes "charities helping underprivileged children may benefit from presents offered to their son."

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Maria del Carmen Millan Acevedo, an academician and former director of Mexico's state-run Channel 13 television network, died early Wednesday, a relative announced. She was 68 years old.

A family member said she had been suffering a heart ailment for the past six months. She was hospitalized two weeks ago for treatment.

A native of the small town of Teziutlan in the eastern state of Puebla, Miss Millan Acevedo held a doctorate in Spanish literature from the National Autonomous University of Mexico.

Local Jaycees again to operate weekend Labor Day Rest Stop

The statewide Jaycee Labor Day Rest Stop begins Friday at 6 p.m. and will remain open until midnight Monday.

The Midland Jaycees' Rest Stop will be located just east of Midland on the north access road of Interstate 20. Purpose of the project, according to a spokesperson for the Jaycees, is to furnish refreshments for holiday motorists, to relieve travel fatigue and to promote safety.

Last year, more than 1,000 motorists visited the Midland Rest Stop on Labor Day weekend.

Among those attending a rally Wednesday support the Rev. Everett Sileven and Faith Christian School in Louisville, Neb., is 6-year-old Eric Spear, son of the Rev. Dale Spear of Lincoln's Plains Baptist Church.

School to defy order, begin term

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — A minister who operated a fundamentalist school despite a court order has refused to return to jail, and defiant church officials say their fall term will begin as scheduled.

The Rev. Everett Sileven had been ordered in May to return to jail at noon Wednesday to complete the remaining 3½ months of his four-month jail term for reopening the Faith Christian School.

Authorities ordered the school closed because it didn't hire certified teachers, as required by the state.

Cass County attorney Ron Moravec said he would seek a warrant for Sileven's arrest today.

About 200 people attended a rally at the Faith Baptist Church in support of Sileven on Wednesday, and his supporters said they expected a larger turnout at a rally today.

Bob Gelsthorpe, pastor of the North Platte Baptist Church, said Sileven would remain in the Faith church 24 hours a day until authorities either barge in or decide they don't want to arrest him.

Church officials plan to reopen the school on Sept. 7, regardless of whether Sileven goes to jail, Gelsthorpe said.

Sileven said Wednesday that going to jail again would have been "an admission of wrongdoing" and that he isn't guilty of a crime.

District Judge Raymond Case said David Gibbs, an attorney for the Christian Legal Association, told him Wednesday that Sileven probably wouldn't show up to serve the rest of his sentence.

Case and Moravec said they didn't know whether Nebraska law allows officials to arrest someone in a church.

The state has waged a five-year battle to close the school. The case reached the U.S. Supreme Court, where an appeal by Sileven and his church was turned down.

Sentenced to four months in jail in February, Sileven served 13 days before the congregation closed the school to free him. The school reopened in April, and in May, Case ordered Sileven back to jail on Sept. 1.

Case said he picked that date for completing the jail sentence because he wanted it to coincide with the opening of school.

Moravec has said that if the school reopens, he might begin new legal proceedings against parents of students to force compliance with the court order.

Michigan teachers end three-day strike

By The Associated Press

Teachers in Michigan's second-largest school district ended a three-day strike and cleared the way for classes to begin today, but nearly 6,000 teachers remained on strike in four states, affecting about 113,000 students.

However, most schools around the nation don't open until after the Labor Day weekend and national teachers union officials said they don't expect a massive wave of strikes this year.

In Flint, Mich., the 1,800-member teacher's union reached a tentative contract agreement and members voted Wednesday night to return to work after walking off the job Monday.

Administrators expected classes for 31,000 students to begin today, although a ratification vote on the contract — which calls for raises of 6 percent each year for three years — has not been scheduled. Current salaries range from $14,759 to $27,065.

In Butte, Mont., a week-long strike by 500 teachers ended early today with a tentative one-year agreement for a 3 percent wage increase over current salaries of $10,000 to $26,000, and a new seniority clause. Classes for 6,800 students will begin Tuesday, officials said.

A dried-out grain sorghum field in South Bexar County is indicative of the crop destruction caused by Texas' driest summer since 1938. Only 2.06 inches of rain fell during June, July and August.

Dry summer threatens crops

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The driest summer this area has seen since 1938 is threatening the dryland peanut crop and sending hundreds of cattle to early slaughter for lack of grass and water.

Agriculture officials warn the situation could worsen if September does not bring more moisture.

"Dryland peanuts are the crop coming on now. If we don't receive rain on them, we just won't make any," said Thurman Kennedy, Bexar County Agriculture Agent. "We're in bad shape. This July and August has been devastating.

"What's going to wipe us out down here is the rangeland. That's our No. 1 industry," he said.

"It's horrible," said Bubba Kothmann, an official at the San Antonio stockyards where ranchers this week auctioned off a "terrific run" of 4,300 cattle, about 1,000 more than normal because of "emergency sales."

"We haven't had any rain, you know a good rain, in about three months," Kothmann said.

Although many parts of Texas have received rainfall all summer, a persistent high pressure system has caused this part of South Texas to record the third lowest amount of rainfall in June, July and August since 1885 when records first were kept here.

The National Weather Service reported Tuesday that rainfall totalled only 2.06 inches at the San Antonio International Airport for the three months, the smallest amount for the period since 2.00 inches in 1938. The record dry summer was in 1911 when only 1.81 inches of rain fell from June through August.

"We've had this subtropical high over us a good part of the summer," a weather service spokesman explained. "It has dominated our weather picture. We've had a few showers when that high has broken down or weakened. When that occurred, we had a few showers, but not much."

The forecaster said something has to happen to disperse the high pressure and bring in moisture, such as a tropical storm in the Gulf of Mexico or a cold front from the north.

Kennedy said spring rains, supplemented by "fortunate" showers in early June, helped produce a fair grain sorghum crop and a poor corn crop, but that dryland peanut farmers and cattlemen are threatened as summer closes.

Joe Pena, an economist for the Texas A&M University Extension Service in Uvalde, estimated that the cattle industry amounts to 65 to 70 percent of the agriculture economy in the region.

"I'd say half again more of livestock than normal are being marketed early because pastures are sparse," Pena said. "If surface tanks go dry, the ranchers have to send the cattle to market because they don't have any water for them."

Pena said rainfall in Southwest Texas is four to inches inches below normal, superimposing drought problems on farmers and ranchers already in an economic squeeze because of low prices for their commodities.

He said a shower fell in Uvalde last week but that "it was just enough of a sprinkle to mess up a car."

"We're dry," he said. "It's been erratic — too much in a very short period of time, then none at all."

Farmers with water have had to irrigate 150 percent more than normal, increasing costs and cutting profit margins, Pena said.

LaSalle County agriculture agent David Wolfe said some ranchers in the Cotulla area already have begun supplemental feeding, but so far none have had to burn the stickers off prickly pears for emergency food.

Costs of farm price supports may nearly double next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional efforts to rein in government farm price supports, budget analysts now predict the programs will cost nearly twice as much next year as they originally expected.

The Congressional Budget Office reported Wednesday that its estimate of less than $6.5 billion for 1983 price supports made earlier this year has been negated by the flagging rural economy. Instead, they will probably cost the government more than $12.1 billion.

That's just about what the administration expects to spend on price supports this year, meaning that government efforts to reduce the cost could effectively amount to nothing.

Analysts said the revised cost projection would have been even higher if Congress had not exceeded by about $500 million the 1983 spending cutbacks that were originally proposed.

Lesher cited the administration's own 1983 cost estimate of $8 billion. But he added, "I personally think that is low and maybe $4 or $5 billion more is not too far off the mark given the current circumstances."

Grain and fiber stockpiles from last year's record crops, coupled with prospects for the 1983 corn, wheat and soybean harvests that are expected to exceed or match past records, will keep market prices down and force the nation's farmers to rely on government programs to stay afloat, the CBO report said.

"Exports markets hold little hope for price improvement because of a strong dollar, favorable production among competing exporters and the lack of a long-term trade agreement with the Soviet Union," the report added.

Farmers are expected to need $2.3 billion more in commodity price support loans than analysts originally thought, and continued depressed market prices will probably see them default on $1 billion more of those loans next year than previously expected, the report said.

Under most price support programs, farmers faced with market prices they feel are too low can get government loans on their crops from the Commodity Credit Corp. If the market price rises before the loan is due, they can repay the government, ususally with interest, and redeem the crop for sale on the commercial market. But if the loan comes due and the price is still too low, the government keeps the crop and the farmer pays nothing.

Farmers also get direct payments from the government for idling set amounts of land and when the national average market price falls below a preset level.

The CBO said payments for idling land next year will probably be $400 million to $500 million while payments because of persistent low market prices will jump from the original $500 million estimate to $2.5 billion.

The CBO increased its cost estimates for support of every commodity except milk and peanuts. In August, Congress approved a major revision in the operation of the dairy price support program that budget analysts say will slash its 1983 cost from nearly $2 billion to less than $1 billion.

Nebraskan named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert H. Sindt, a native of Nebraska, has been named deputy manager of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp., an Agriculture Department agency.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block announced the appointment Monday. Sindt served for the past year as executive assistant to the department's general counsel, A. James Barnes.

Warmer autumn forecast for area

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fall will be cooler than normal in the northeastern and north central United States, but warmer than usual in the South and Far West, the National Weather Service predicted today.

The agency's 90-day forecast also said rainfall should be above normal in all areas expect the Northwest and the coastal Southeast.

Specifically, the weather service predicted:

—The probability of cool weather at 55 percent or better from the northern Great Plains east through the Great Lakes and northern New England, reaching a maximum of 60 percent from North Dakota through upper Michigan.

—The probability of warmer than usual temperatures at 55 percent in the far Northwest and Southwest and along the Gulf and southeast Atlantic coasts.

—Rainfall probabilities of at least 55 percent in the Southwest, north and central Great Plains and Midwest and a maximum of 60 percent in a band extending from eastern Colorado through Nebraska and Kansas to Wisconsin and Michigan.

The probability of less rain than usual reaches 55 percent only in the Columbia River basin and along the Carolina coast.

The forecast for September, meanwhile, calls for temperatures averaging below normal from Montana east through the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley to the middle and north Atlantic coastal states.

Cattlemen expected to 'break even'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Projections by Agriculture Department economists indicate that cattle producers may hold about even with expenses in the coming months if prices turn out as projected.

The department's Economic Research Service says choice-grade steers may bring $65-$67 per 100 pounds in the third quarter and then rise to an average of $67 in the fourth and to $68 to $72 in the first three months of 1983.

A new cost analysis issued by the agency shows that if a feeder bought a 600-pound steer in June and feeds it for six months, it would have to bring $66.93 per 100 pounds in December to recover all its costs.

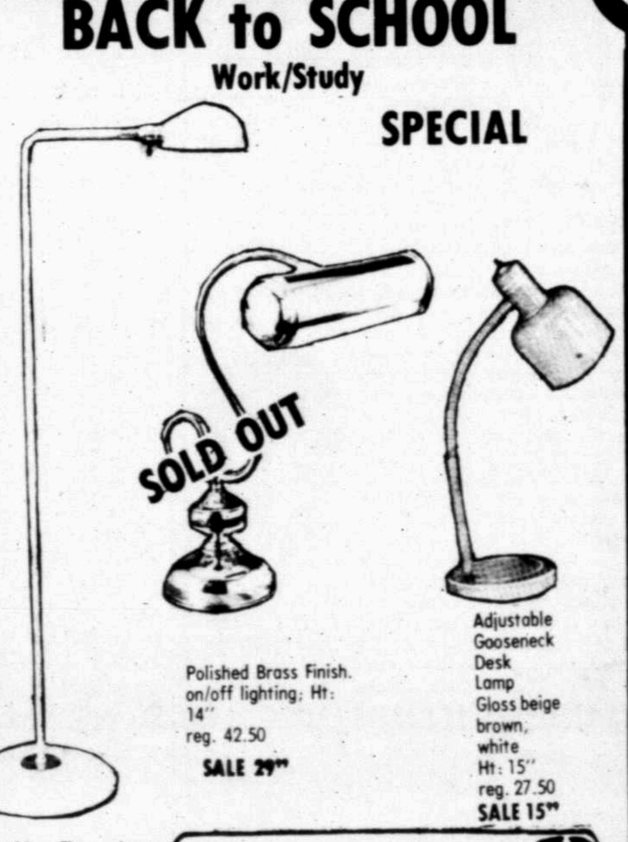

The break-even price to recover only the original cost of the steer and its feed to grow it to a weight of 1,050 pounds would be $56.45 per 100 pounds, the analysis said.

According to the breakdown, the typical 600-pound feeder steer would have cost about $393 in June. Transportation, feed, labor and other expenses would have boosted the animal's total cost to nearly $703 by December.

Thus, the producer would have to get $66.93 per 100 pounds to break even when the steer is sold.

Chelation therapy: Controversial treatment for arteriosclerosis

By SUZANNE CHONEY
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — They come from Canada and Mexico, from Laguna Hills, Calif., and Yuma, Ariz., to "take the treatment" in the unassuming two-story building on North Mollison Avenue, sandwiched between suburban El Cajon's fast food restaurants and homes.

They sit and read, play cards, or snooze — whatever their pleasure — in brown Naugahyde recliners while a clear liquid drips slowly through plastic tubes into their blood system for two to three hours.

Throughout the day, the patients come and go, in and out of the recliners, well-worn now by the 8,000 patients who have used them in the past 10 years.

THE EL CAJON TREATMENT CENTER is one of the best-known on the West Coast to those whose blood vessels are choking and whose hearts are pumping less of the vital cells through their vascular system.

They suffer from arteriosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, and many have been candidates for bypass surgery. The surgery involves grafting a section of vein from another part of the body to the coronary artery, and it is a dreaded, risky and expensive procedure which offers no guarantees.

Instead, they opt for intravenous injections of the drug EDTA — ethylene diamine tetraacetate acid, or disodium edetate — through a method known as chelation therapy, which is not approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for use in treating arteriosclerosis.

"We know it's out there, and we're concerned about its improper use," said Bruce Brown, an FDA spokesman in Maryland.

"It's a fraud; a bit of mystical magic," said Dr. Paul Saltman, University of California at San Diego professor of biology and an expert on trace minerals.

BUT THERE ARE NO rabbits being pulled out of hats, said Dr. William Saccoman, who operates the El Cajon treatment center and is a leading advocate of chelation therapy. Somewhere between 300 and 1,000 doctors throughout the United States practice the treatment.

"It's a pioneering endeavor as far as health is concerned, and it works," said Saccoman, a friendly faced doctor who wears a bola tie and white leather shoes.

"I've never had anyone die as a result of my treatment," he said matter-of-factly. "I've prevented people from dying."

CHELATION THERAPY has been used for a long time — with government appoval — to treat persons suffering from lead poisoning, by removing heavy metals from the bloodstream.

The word "chelate" is from the Greek word "chele," meaning claw. When EDTA is administered into the bloodstream for circulatory problems, it acts somewhat like a "chemical 'rotary-powered snake' that cleans out clogged blood vessels," according to one leading author on the subject, with EDTA removing calcium deposits clogging arteries, taking and removing the deposits through the kidney and out through the urinary tract.

"Sure, what you'd like is something like the concept of Drano to dissolve calcium plaques," said Dr. Guy Curtis, a cardiologist and professor at the University of California at San Diego's School of Medicine.

"It's an attractive notion, but it's never been shown in a controlled study to be effective," he said.

It is EDTA's effects on the kidneys where past and potential problems lie, the medical establishment has argued.

IN HIS BOOK, "Chelation Therapy," Dr. Morton Walker cited the initial use of EDTA in 1954 as being the cause for two deaths in which there were "serious overdosages" of EDTA, resulting in kidney complications. Later, he said, the recommended dosage was lowered, making the treatment safer.

Dr. Joseph Consentino, chief medical consultant for the California Board of Medical Quality Assurance, said there was a recent malpractice case in Southern California involving irreversible kidney failure caused by chelation therapy.

He said the case was settled for $1 million, and "the physician was disciplined."

"There are a number of physicians and osteopaths who use chelation therapy," he said. "The recognized internists and cardiologists don't use it. It's not that it's controversial; there's just not agreement from the standpoint of scientific validity."

THE USE OF EDTA for treating arteriosclerosis itself is not illegal because the FDA says once a product is approved for "any single use, a physician may use the product for any other use," as long as that use is not advertised by a physician, according to Brown of the FDA.

But neither is it endorsed by the regulating agency.

"Our concern is the safety, not effectiveness of chelation therapy," said Brown.

"If EDTA or any other agency dissolves arteriosclerotic plaques abruptly, it would be anticipated that chunks of the calcium and fat-filled plaques would break off and lodge in a smaller blood vessel, blocking it," said an FDA official in a recent FDA magazine article.

SACCOMAN SAID a patient's kidneys are checked before treatment is started and once it is, the drug heparin is added to EDTA treatments to prevent clotting.

His patients attest to never having felt better in their lives and to the joy of throwing out bottles of prescription medicine.

Six years ago, at age 54, "I couldn't function in the morning without my medication and without a lot of pain," said LeGrand Rane, a Chula Vista, Calif., resident and vice president of an insurance company, who suffered from angina and whose physician recommended he have a coronary bypass operation.

After hearing about chelation therapy through a friend, Rane went to see Saccoman, and he said after 10 treatments, "I quit taking the medication and have never taken any since, nor have I had any angina pain. I ski in the winter now; I do anything I want."

The missing stamp of approval from the FDA "bthers" Rane, but he, like other patients of chelation therapy and physicians who practice it contend, "it's a matter of economics within the medical profession."

A SERIES OF 30 TREATMENTS — considered standard — of chelation therapy can cost about $2,000 — a coronary bypass operation would cost several times that amount. The treatment is not covered by health insurance plans.

"This is an inexpensive way to overcome the problem; the alternative (a bypass operation) is expensive," said Rane. "This has little discomfort or risk. A bypass involves much discomfort and risk."

Grandmother makes dangerous swim

By MARY BATTIATA
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Ionthe ("Yonty") Rhodes, a 54-year-old grandmother from Virginia's rural, impoverished Eastern Shore, got up sometime before the sun and the seagulls Saturday morning and boarded a small fishing boat with her family and a few friends. Without fanfare, she lowered herself into the four-foot swells at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay and spent the next 11 hours swimming.

Stroking steadily in an eastward arc of about 18 miles, always within sight of two small boats bearing family and friends, Rhodes made the Virginia Beach shore at 6:10 p.m., apparently becoming the first person to swim solo through the swift-moving waters where the Chesapeake empties into the Atlantic.

Borne east into the ocean by the morning's ebb tide, and then slightly westward by the afternoon flood tide, Rhodes came ashore at the northern end of Virginia Beach's Atlantic shoreline, two miles south of her planned landing at Cape Henry. "I was never worried," she huffed as she clambored up the beach and rubbed her salt-encrusted eyes. "Well, I'm glad its over," said her 8-year-old daughter, Adria.

RHODES, WHO MADE the swim for a local charity, persevered despite jellyfish (she was twice stung), stingrays (twice sighted), the possibility of sharks (a 260-pounder caught in those waters just last week), winds, waves andiboredom.

What did she think about with only channel buoys to break the horizon? "I thought about this," said Rhodes, digging her foot into the dry sand. "And I thought about nothing."

According to Eastern shore old-timers, the only person known to have ever considered swimming the mouth of the bay was a fisherman named John Half. He accepted a dare in the '50s, but never actually started the swim.

THAT DECISION probably earned him more respect than disdain, judging by the respect bay fisherman continue to accord the swift-moving, dangerous waters around the 17.6-mile-long bridge-tunnel that connects the shore with Virginia Beach. "That's dirty, dangerous waters," said George Etz, who has been working the waters off Cape Charles for nearly two decades. "You got all those rivers — the James, the York, the Elizabeth, the Susquahanna — they're all pouring down through there. And you got sharks, too. I give her credit. You won't find me trying to swim across the bay, no."

SATURDAY'S SEAS were so rough, according to the captain of the Virginia Beach lifeguard patrol, that danger signs were posted along the shore and swimmers were allowed to go only waist-deep into the water. "Yesterday the surf was rolling, there was a lot of chop," said Edward (Ned) Kuehn. "Somebody in good shape can do side-stroke just about forever; it's much easier than overhand crawl. But she had the waves, and the salt water."

By late afternoon the water temperature had risen, but Rhodes was beginning to complain of cold. "That's exhaustion more than anything else," said Basil (Dusty) Rhodes, her husband and chairman of the Northampton Red Cross Chapter that was to benefit from pledges made during the swim.

ALONG WITH NEIGHBORING Accomack, Northampton County is one of the poorest counties in Virginia, with an average income of $6,000 and an unemployment rate at a steady 14 percent. Large farms, a few packing plants and the bridge-tunnel are the major employers. The Northampton Red Cross is virtually bankrupt. Rhodes and three of her children swam the same course last year in a relay and raised over $1,000.

The solo swim was supposed to make people dig deeper into their pockets. But as of Sunday the effort had raised only $370. "If I had had any idea that this was all we would raise, I would never have done it," she said. "When you consider how much so many people put (to help the swim), it just couldn't begin to compensate."

As she swam Saturday, her husband perched anxiously on the bow of a patrol boat and watched his wife 20 feet away. "I'm thinking about her safety," said Rhodes, who had vetoed his wife's plans to make the same swim last year.

THE SWIM HAD ATTRACTED more attention this year, it wasn't simply a worthy cause that heightened interest in the swim, he said. "No, it's like a bullfight. There's a chance she'll drown, and people know that."

In an era of sophisticated super-sportsmanship, Rhodes' style was iconoclastic. There were no trainers, no special diet for the short, stocky Red Cross water instructor. Not even a bathing cap for her head. "I don't own one," she said. To get in shape she swam a mile or two each day in a 32-foot pool that she cleaned before her daily swimming classes.

Rhodes got only five hours' sleep the night before her swim. She made lunches for her family and had no time to eat breakfast before leaving the house. She ate only four candy bars and two lemonades during the swim.

ON FRIDAY NIGHT the weatherman had predicted northeast wind and sloppy water, and at impromptu press conference at Etz's ("Famous Crab Salad") Restaurant in Cape Charles, many county residents — and not a few skeptics — gathered to wish her well. "I think she's crazy," said waitress Margaret Ulrich. "But I hope she makes it."

"I don't think she'll make it, but she's determined," said one waterman. "She's stubborn," said her husband. "When she wants to do something, she does it."

RHODES' 6 A.M. LAUNCH was from a mosquito-ridden sand flat off a Cape Charles inlet. As daylight gathered about a half-mile off the shore, in sight of the bridge-tunnel, Rhodes jumped in and began her swim with her 16-year-old daughter, Ilia. The water was a chilly 69 degrees, the wind from the northwest at about 15 knots.

By afternoon Rhodes was swimming alone, Ilia having been felled by leg cramps. Rhodes sidestroked implacably, the three-foot waves lifting her up and down, hiding her close-shorn head, then lifting her high.

"Watch out! There are lots of gulls here — they are feeding on something," she called to her husband at about 5, as the condominiums on the Virginia Beach oceanfront poked through the haze. "They're feeding on something. And if they're feeding, something else is too!"

"THAT'S PORPOISE," her husband said as a school raced beyond Rhodes in their powerful arabesques.

"Why don't you hitch a ride?" her daughter called out. There was no reply.

By 5:30, the buildings on the shore were well defined. "Can you see people?" Rhodes asked, no longer smiling, her eyes slits. "Can you see people?" she called again. Yes, people were visible. "Oh, thank God," said Rhodes. "We're only a half-mile from shore."

'Valspeak' can be cured, says expert

By LENNIE LA GUIRE
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY, Calif. — As a Valley Girl status symbol, some Vals might not even consider it worth the trip from the good part of Encino. But Dr. Lillian Glass thinks her service — breaking San Fernando Valley teens of their bizarre speech patterns — is as essential to Val development as shopping at the Sherman Oaks Galleria.

Glass, a 29-year-old Beverly Hills speech pathologist, reports that a large part of her thriving practice consists of Vals trying to unlearn "bitchen," "gnarly" and "gag me with a spoon," whether they like it or not.

"A lot of children don't want to wear braces, but their parents drag them to the orthodontist," Glass says. "It's the same phenomenon — at least initially."

THE CULT OF VAL came to light with the hit single, "Valley Girl," on which Frank Zappa's 14-year-old daughter, Moon Unit, recited the litany of phrases of overprivileged suburbia.

The first step in stamping out "Valspeak" consists of showing the afflicted teen-ager a videotape of herself speaking, Glass said. Then Glass proceeds to a battery of audio and video equipment to correct the Val's characteristic nasal, monotonous, ultraglib dialect.

Moon Zappa says she's skeptical that Glass will succeed in reforming any hard-core Vals. "Not if they've had 'Valley-ite' etched into their skulls," she said. "It's a state of mind, not a state of mouth, but if she thinks she can do it, 'Go fer it.'"

A TWO-MONTH COURSE is usually enough to cure the speech pattern, Glass says. She won't say what she charges for a 45-minute "sesh," but claims her rates are "competitive."

Glass maintains that Valspeak is a pervasive, nationwide phenomenon. But what sets Valspeak apart from earlier forms of teen dialect — Glass herself remembers intoning "gross" and "I'm hip" when she was a teen-ager — is the spillover of the disorder into the "outside world."

Glass says that Vals unknowingly lapse into the dialect at inappropriate moments, and parents fear their children's "subnormal" vocabularies will create the wrong impression in the business or academic worlds. Glass agrees — passionately.

"We are what we speak," she says with an unblinking gaze. "Communication is the bottom line."

GLASS APPEARS on Los Angeles ABC-TV affiliate as resident communications expert in segments called "Your Total Image." She also is an adjunct assistant professor of communication arts and sciences at the University of Southern California. Among her celebrity clients are Dustin Hoffman, whom she trained to speak like a woman in the upcoming film "Tootsie."

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — About four months go, 27-year-old Julie Grass told her husband she wanted to change her image. She proceeded to buy a whole new wardrobe. She replaced her classic, somber-colored suits and dresses with bright-colored pedal pushers, minidresses and metallic tunics worn over trousers. Her prim, carefully styled, mid-shoulder-length hair was, as she put it, "finallys set free, replaced by a shorter, wavier, wash-and-wear cut.

"My husband tells me that he hopes I can keep this up afterwards," says Ms. Grass, who is pregnant with her second child. "I don't think I've ever dressed this stylishly in my life."

Ms. Grass, a hospital consultant with a 2-year-old son, seems to be typical of a whole new breed of pregnant women who are every bit as concerned with looking as fashionable in maternity clothes as they do in regular clothes. And, like Ms. Grass, far from hiding their bodies in muted colors or shapeless tunics, they are stepping out in everything from miniskirts to tuxedos.

"The first time I was pregnant, I bought a few staples but mostly borrowed clothes from my friends," says Ms. Grass, one of about 10 women who recently attended a seminar on pregnancy at Motherhood Maternity boutique here. "The feeling was that being pregnant is a temporary thing, so why waste money and time on trying to look glamorous?

"I was so involved in that pregnancy and so consumed with the arrival of the baby that I lost myself in the process. But this time is different. I am making a conscious effort to do something for myself. My husband is really pleased."

Adds Chris Bahler, 24, nine months pregnant with her second child: "This time around I spent more money on clothes, such as knickers, shorter skirts and more fun-type things. Maybe the reason is that I'm older, and fashion is more important to me now."

Ms. Bahler and Ms. Grass agree that, along with their new interest in looking chic during their pregnancies, they have noticed a marked change in the maternity wear market. "Three years ago, I would walk into a maternity shop and cry," says Ms. Grass. "The clothes were all so awful that my self-image went right down the tubes. Now, it is actually an up to go shopping. Maybe it's because pregnant women are older now — I don't know. It seems as though everybody is having a baby."

Indeed, according to the U.S. Census Bureau, the U.S. birthrate is higher now than it has been in more than a decade. After dipping as low as 14.5 babies per 1,000, the rate rose to 16.2 per 1,000 in 1980 and is expected to hit 17.1 per 1,000 this year. Although women in the 18-to-30 age group continue to bear three-quarters of all babies, there has been a 15.2 percent rise in the number of births by women who are 30 to 44, an age group once believed to be slightly beyond the primary childbearing years.

In addition, there has also been what seems like a sudden rash of pregnancies among highly visible, over-30 film and television stars who are apparently not the least bit shy about being photographed with big tummies. Jaclyn Smith, 35, recently posed, seven months pregnant, on the cover of Time for a story on "The New Baby Boom." Other actresses who recently gave birth include Jill Clayburgh, 37, Sissy Spacek, 32, Mimi Kennedy, 33, Blair Brown, 32, and Donna Summer, 32.

Because of these statistics, Motherhood Maternity designer Joyce Ewing Bradley says she has made a conscious effort over the past few years to create trendier, more sophisticated clothes. She now does a whole new group of career clothes, including city suits and city dresses with jackets as well as dressy, often-flashy evening clothes such as satin or crepe de chine cocktail dresses; sparkly, metallic sweaters; and several styles of tuxedos.

DEAR ABBY

Heartless daughter speeds dad's death

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps there's no answer for me, but I must try. Because of multiple medical problems, I'm dying much sooner than I should. My heart, however, is dying faster.

I was divorced from my daughter's mother when my daughter was 3. Since that time I have given my daughter everything she ever wanted. She is now 19, attending college locally — five miles from my home, and one mile from her mother's home.

My daughter drives a beautiful sports car — a gift from me. She doesn't pay one cent for fuel, upkeep, repair, taxes, etc. I do. She has no money worries, thanks to the trust fund I established for her. She wears beautiful clothes and jewelry — gifts from me. Everything I own has been willed to her with no strings attached. All these years I have remained unmarried, and have skimped in order to give my daughter all these things.

My daughter doesn't come to see me. She drove over here seven weeks ago and stayed five minutes. She's never spent a holiday with me. Christmas Eve she came to pick up her presents and didn't even sit down. When she talks with me on the phone, it's always in a sarcastic, hateful manner. Once she came right out and told me she didn't care if she never saw me again!

I am barely able to move around and must remain on oxygen 22 hours a day due to cardiopulmonary disease. I am going into a VA nursing home because I can no longer care for myself physically. My daughter won't even consider handling things for me. She wrote saying, "I don't want you to talk to me about death." I haven't, but I do use the phrase, "If I'm not around anymore."

If anyone has any suggestions, I would appreciate them. However, don't tell me to tell my daughter I love her. I've told her a million times. — BROKEN-HEARTED IN ABILENE, TEXAS

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Your story is not new. ("How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!" — Shakespeare.) If there's a message in your sad letter, it's this: Love cannot be bought with money.

DEAR ABBY: There have been many theories explaining why some people are always late for appointments, meetings, engagements, etc., but do you have any idea why some people have a mania for being early? — C. IN THE BRONX

DEAR C.: People with a mania for being early probably have a phobia about being late.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Bill in Columbus, Ohio": My sympathy, Bill, for I suffer an advanced stage of "quatrogenarianism" and, what's more, I've been exposed to "quinigenarianism" through my husband.

It could be worse, I guess, as it's well-known that if these conditions persist, one can develop centenarianism, and the prognosis is not too terrific! — ELIZABETH IN SEATTLE

DEAR ELIZABETH: Rejoice! Your chances for developing centenarianism (translation, "making it to 100") are vastly better today than they were 50 years ago. And I think that's pretty terrific.

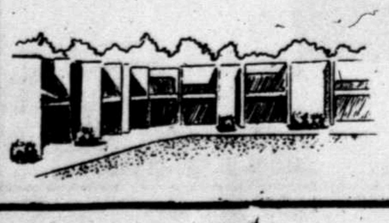

DEAR ABBY: Your column about men and women in the service who rarely wrote home, much to the dismay of their parents, brought back memories. During World War II, I served aboard the U.S.S. Salamonie.

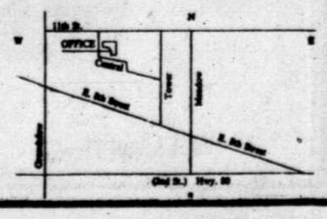

I didn't write home, so my mother wrote to Franklin D. Roosevelt, then the president of the United States!

Capt. Holbrook called me in for a little talk and requested that I write to my family. He also requested that I ask them not to write to the president again.

That did the trick. I wrote home every week thereafter. — LAWRENCE A. SMITH JR., OXNARD, CALIF.

Back-to-school may mean head lice

By ELLEN PFEIFER
Hearst Feature Service

BOSTON — Scratch. Scratch. My 2-year-old daughter has rubbed her itchy eyes until there are purple circles around them. At the back of her neck and behind her ears are patches of red, irritated skin. Under her bangs, her forehead is full of small, red welts, where she has scratched obsessively.

The diagnosis? Head lice. I'm tempted to call it the Heartbreak of Head Lice, for despite my doctor's reassurances it still sounds like an affliction born of squalor and filth. I associate it with the crowded and miserable slums of Calcutta or the cramped quarters of an immigrant ship.

My inclination is to look around my none-too-tidy house and blame myself as an incompetent housekeeper and negligent mother. And watching the little beggars perch on my daughter's eyelids, brazenly waving their little legs, drives me to a hysterical pitch of recrimination.

Upon investigation, however, one learns that head lice is as common (particularly among young children) as the common cold. Back-to-school time is a particularly popular season for lice. Because it is so socially unacceptable, most other mothers don't like to talk about it either. But if you ask, you often get the response, "Oh, yes, my child's whole nursery school class had it."

The technical term is pediculosis capitis, but it is known colloquially as "nits." It is characterized by tiny insects — they look like whitish or brownish pinhead-sized specks with legs — that inhabit the hair and scalp and suck blood from the skin. They can also reside on the eyebrows, eyelashes and even the hair of the chest and armpit.

The lice cause severe itching. When a child or adult scratches vigorously, he can produce sores which then can become infected. It is this secondary infection which is cause for worry.

Making themselves right at home in your hair, the lice reproduce by laying eggs that are attached to the base of the hair-shaft. The eggs are tiny, silvery ovals which take approximately a week to hatch. Within two weeks, the newly-hatched insects reach maturity and begin the reproductive cycle all over again.

So what can you do about it?

According to Joseph Poges, an epidemiologist for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the preferred method now is to shampoo with Kwell, a gamma benzene hexachloride. While the technical terminology may be Greek to you, it connotes a terrifically potent and toxic drug.

Lethal to lice, Kwell is so potentially irritating to human skin that it should be used only once every 10 to 14 days. It is available only by prescription, but it does the job. It will kill all adult lice, and your itching should stop almost immediately. You will probably need to repeat the Kwell shampoo about 14 days after the first treatment.

The effect of Kwell on the eggs is a matter of some dispute. Most doctors maintain that it has no effect and that the eggs should be removed with a fine-toothed steel comb, available only through a pharmacist. Some recommend dipping the comb in a weak solution of white vinegar and water to loosen the eggs' tenacious glue. But pediatrician T. Berry Brazelton contends that Kwell does kill the eggs.

As a somewhat less effective alternative to Kwell, Poges recommends a product known as A-200, an over-the-counter preparation. A third treatment, which falls into the home remedy category, is to shampoo with undiluted white vinegar. Poges maintains that this has only a "germicidal" effect. "It probably cuts down on the attachability of the eggs," he said.

Just as important to the treatment is ridding the environment of lice, Poges said. Any clothing, bedding, head-gear, stuffed animals or towels that have come in contact with the affected areas should be washed and dried in a dryer. If not washable, these items should be put through a cycle in the dryer or sent to the dry cleaner. Combs and air brushes should be sterilized. One should consider similar treatment for — or disposal of — hair ribbons, hair pins, elastics, barrettes, etc.

Metal evening purses withstand test of time

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Liza Minnelli clutches one when she wears her beaded Halston minis. Joanna Carson and Barbara Sinatra frequently carry one, too. And it seems that there's hardly a socially prominent woman in town who doesn't palm the hottest little accessory ever — the minaudiere, or as it is more commonly known, the metal evening purse.

Minaudieres have not only survived the decline of last season's metallic craze, they've withstood the whims of fashion for more than 60 years. The reason is simple — a classic design. Constructed of rigid metal, they come in solid gold, silver and precious stone versions, as well as affordable gold-and-silver-plated aluminum models.

Compact purses haven't been this popular since their heyday in the 1920s, when Cartier, the New York jeweler, sold hundreds in an art deco style called the "Necessaire." Much smaller than today's metal evening bags, they could barely hold a tube of lipstick and press powder. It was another jeweler, Van Cleef & Arpel, who coined the term "minaudiere," which over the years has become generic for the metal evening purses.

Perhaps the only drawback to the purses is that they're pint-size. About the length of a hand, their approximate size limit is a lipstick, a compact, keys and a small amount of cash.

Feminist memorabilia in demand

DUBLIN, N.H. (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment may have failed ratification, but in the world of collectibles the women's movement is generating more enthusiasm than ever, says the editor of a magazine for collectors.

Feminist memorabilia — books, periodicals, buttons and posters — produced over the course of two centuries of American history, have never been more popular or commanded greater prices, says Charles Jordan, editor of Collectibles Illustrated, a national bimonthly magazine published by Yankee Publishing Inc. here.

"The push for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment generated an unprecedented amount of banners, buttons, posters, and other collectibles," Jordan said. "The ERA movement is just the latest stage in women's history, with each stage producing its own collectibles."

One of the hottest items of the women's movement is the first issue of Ms. magazine, published in the summer of 1972, he says. The publication, 250,000 of which were printed, is already finding buyers at $200 per magazine.

Mary Wollstonecraft's "A Vindication of the Rights of Women," published in Philadelphia in 1792, might today bring $400. And the Alderney Bible, the first translation of the Scriptures by a woman, issued in 1877, is valued today, according to Jordan, at $350.

The first 20 years of the century were strewn with collectibles from the women's movement. Among the most popular center around the days when women won the right to vote. "Votes for Women" banners, some just a few inches square, can bring $40-$60. Suffrage hatbands, everywhere in evidence in those days, bring $25 apiece. One poster, "The Women's Hour Has Struck," a 1917 full-color lithograph revealing a young woman ringing a bell, was recently quoted at $400.

The latest items to join the women's movement collectible ranks are comic books and trading cards. "Dazzler," Marvel Comic's new superwoman, fights crime on disco roller skates. According to Jordan, she may eventually rival the value of the original All-Star Comic 1940 heroine, "Wonder Woman." An early mint-condition "Wonder Woman" comic can bring $700-$800.

"Supersisters" is a deck of trading cards dealing with real superwomen. The series of 72 cards features women such as Margaret Mead, professional skier Susan Chaffee and jet pilot Bonnie Tiburzi. Over 15,000 sets have been sold at $7.50 a deck, and they are already turning up at card and paper shows for $9-$10 a set.

Barbara Waltzer of Cambridge, Mass., an ardent women's movement collector, is starting to collect advertisements such as the Virginia Slims (You've Come a Long Way Baby!) cigarette ads. She says they appeal to "a new kind of woman."

Fad diets often not sound

By JOSEPH CAREY
Hearst Feature Service

BOSTON — "Eat as much as you want . . . as often as you like without fear of feeling ill. After seven days . . . you will be lighter by 10 to 17 pounds and have an abundance of energy."

So says the so-called "Lahey Clinic" Diet, the latest in fad diets, which some who have followed this seven-day plan say is the best diet they've ever been on. But like so many of its genre, this diet has no connection to its namesake, nor does it offer lasting weight reduction.

ON SUCCESSIVE days, the "Lahey Clinic" Diet calls for one-of-a-kind foods. First, all fruits, then vegetables, water or unsweetened juice, fruits and vegetables, bananas and skim milk, beef and tomatoes, brown rice, fruit juice and vegetables, and, on the last day, beef and vegetables.

THE DIET claims that "One of the secrets of the effectiveness of this seven-day plan is that the foods eaten burn more calories than they give to the body in caloric value." But what it doesn't explain is that most of the weight loss from eating these foods is water, which is quickly regained once a person goes back to eating regularly again.

"This diet is not a good diet," says Johanna T. Dwyer, director of the Frances Stern Nutrition Center at New England Medical Center. "Dr. (Frank H.) Lahey would roll over in his grave if he knew about it. The only reason to go on the diet would be to end up in the Lahey Clinic.

"IT IS INADEQUATE in nutrients and dangerously low in energy. I doubt that on most days it is higher than a couple of hundred calories," continued Dwyer. "It's missing a whole bunch of nutrients, including vitamins A and B, calcium, iron and protein. If people stayed on this, they would eventually develop serious problems."

The diet works because it produces dramatic deficits right away from water loss, like many of its predecessors, including the Beverly Hills and Scarsdale diets. "So a person will dump a lot of water, but even so, he or she is not likely to lose 10 to 17 pounds," Dwyer says.

UNPROVEN scientific claims is one problem; another is the phenomenon of fad diets untruthfully linking themselves with respected organizations. The Lahey Clinic has received more than 75 phone calls from persons wanting to know if the diet is legitimate.

"There is no single Lahey Clinic Diet," says Dr. Eugene P. Clerkin, chairman of Lahey's department of internal medicine. "People differ in their needs and we recommend diets specifically suited to individual requirements. The best approach to weight loss continues to be a balanced, low-calorie diet combined with a program of exercise so that the individual loses one or two pounds weekly until a predetermined goal is reached."

* Look for plans that require a physician's approval if you want to lose more than a few pounds.

* A weight loss of one to two pounds a week — a realistic and safe goal.

By DOROTHY TOWNSEND
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — More than 1,000 walkers and some runners puffed and panted through six miles of Los Angeles streets Saturday to raise money to fight political candidates who helped defeat the equal rights amendment.

"We'll remember — each November," the marchers chanted as their sponsors, the National Organization for Women, supplied the media with a hit list of officeholders they most would like to unseat.

The list contains the names of Republicans and Democrats alike who failed to support the ERA in state legislatures that rejected the amendment which was passed by Congress but fell three states short of ratification.

Goal of the walkathons here and in other U.S. cities was to raise a $1 million war chest — $100,000 in Los Angeles — for political action committees, "the basic tool of political activism today," said Toni Carabillo, president of NOW's Los Angeles chapter.

"I know one walker here today who has $2,000 pledged on her," Carabillo said, beaming. "The average, though, may be around $100 (per walker)."

Walkers embarked on their 10-kilometer course shortly after 10 a.m. They returned to the starting point to lunch on hot dogs and fruit, to browse at festive booths and to congratlate each other before settling down for a two-hour rally featuring mainly political speakers.

This year's walk was a scaled-down version of last year's massive celebrity-studded turnout to drum up homestretch support for the women's rights amendment which then had 10 months to go before the ratification deadline of June 30. There were fewer celebrities this time, but the fervor was no less intent.

"The mood is different," Carabillo said. "If we have cause for celebration today, it is that national public opinion polls are indicating that women have it within their power to decide virtually every election in the country."

Business lunches all alike

By ERMA BOMBECK

I gave up the "business lunch" five years ago during Lent and never got back to it.

I did this when I realized I was sitting through three-hour lunches that were called to reach a decision on something and the decision was made to postpone any decisions until a luncheon meeting could be called for the following week.

Male or female business lunches are all the same. They're essentially divided into three parts.

Part I is the "You look wonderful" speech. It's a business lunch staple. It doesn't matter if you've just taken a cab over from a recovery room, you'll still get the "You look wonderful" speech.

Part II is "What are you going to have for lunch?" This consumes a good 3/4 of the business lunch as everyone has to justify what they are ordering. They are on a diet. They're going to be eating dinner late. They've been eating at their desk all week. They never get croissants FRESH! Eating with you is a special occasion and they're going to pig out.

Part III is the business speech. You have to be quick to catch them as they're sandwiched in between, "I've got to have your recipe for the cake you brought to Evelyn's anniversary party" and "Don't anyone move. I can't find my parking ticket to validate."

The business is usually a one-liner like, "Then it's agreed. We invite Alan Alda to speak at the Mother-Daughter Sodality breakfast. Does anyone have his address?"

Of course no business lunch would be complete without the post-lunch check fumble. Two hands meet over a check and begin tugging it back and forth like a Ouija board while each fights over the tax deduction.

Maybe it's my age, but I've been leaning toward the Nobody's Business lunch. We just meet and skip Part I and Part III and concentrate heavily on Part II.

I don't have to lie about how my book is coming along. They don't have to lie about how their business is. Our conversation centers on disgusting, shameless gossip and the dessert we're going to have.

When the check comes, we gasp and agree to cut our own losses. If there's a big business decision to be made . . . we call one another and do it in a 15-second phone call.

Chinese press conducts heated debate on art, literature

PEKING (AP) — An extraordinary, vitriolic debate on art and literature — always a volatile subject here — is under way in the Chinese press in a rare display of public and political mudslinging.

It comes at a time of increased restrictions on literary freedom and warnings to artists and writers to endorse the Communist Party and socialism and extinguish bourgeois liberalism.

At the same time China has declared that the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung was wrong in his attitude toward intellectuals and wrong in saying art must serve politics. Now, it says, art must serve the people.

"It's like walking on eggs here," said one intellectual. "The situation is vastly improved, but the relative freedom expands and contracts and we still have a long way to go."

In China, where political debates in the press frequently are couched in allegorical terms, this is a clear slugfest between two monthly magazines and their supporters: The literati of the Literary Gazette and the hardliners and leftists with army connections of the Report of the Times. The latter became famous last year for its rapacious attack on the army writer Bai Hua who criticized Maoism and the Communist Party.

The debate itself is windy and arcane, turning more on politics than art itself but in China the two are inextricably bound. It centers on a single phrase first used last June by Report of the Times.

That seemingly innocuous phrase was "16 years since the Cultural Revolution."

The Cultural Revolution was a period of artistic retrogression and persecution of intellectuals which officially began in 1966 and ended with Mao's death in September 1976. It officially has been declared a decade of disaster.

Last month the Literary Gazette leaped upon the expression "16 years," saying it distorted history and blurred the distinction between the end of the Cultural Revolution and present political and artistic achievements.

It said the "16 years" formulation ignored landmark Central Committee meetings of December 1978 and June 1981 — orchestrated by the current top leader Deng Xiaoping — which repudiated the Cultural Revolution.

Then Report of the Times accused the Literary Gazette of the same things and of ignoring Mao's dictums in a widening debate on leftism, rightism and bourgeois liberalism.

In a curious twist, the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily has published the accusations of both sides without taking sides — so far. So have other publications.

Such debates always are messy in China, foreign diplomatic observers note, recalling last year's tempest over the writer Bai Hua which finally was called off by party Chairman Hu Yaobang.

So far, they say, the party probably has decided to stay away from a hot issue, let both sides fight it out, demonstrate some admirable impartiality and hope for a compromise.

"On the one hand, it's always disturbing that these kinds of debates go on," said one foreigner. "On the other hand it's probably a good sign that the party can tolerate this kind of open debate."

One Chinese artist shrugged and said, "I don't bother to read about it. I just do my own work. My paintings may not be hung in public, but at least nobody tells me what to paint in my studio."

In the current debate Report of the Times said the Literary Gazette and others "are mobilizing public opinion and organizing a joint attack on us. They want to treat us as an ultra-left publication and destroy us....

"But they have revealed themselves, showing they give only lip service to the third plenum of the Central Committee but are in fact trampling the line of seeking truth from facts."

It accused the literati of "sophistry." It denounced the "brutal, nonscientific attitude of glossing over one's faults and manifesting a disgusting style of using a big stick and putting political labels on others at random which was widespread during the Great Cultural Revolution."

The hardline magazine also accused some intellectuals of "becoming excited like a bull in a bullfight when it sees a red cloth" and hears criticism of bourgeois liberalism.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Some cosmetics hurt pre-teens

Dear Dr. Solomon: The "in" thing in my neighborhood these days is for young girls to use cosmetics, and I mean girls 11 and 12 years of age. Is it a good idea for kids this age to be using cosmetics? — Mrs. E. O'C., New York City

Solomon

Dear Mrs. O'C.: A variety of cosmetic products are being marketed for use by pre-teen girls, and some of these products have the potential for causing skin problems. Dr. Guinter Kahn, of St. Francis Hospital in Miami Beach, mentions hair and bubble-bath preparations as falling within this category.

If a youngster uses any of these cosmetics, it would be advisable for the parents to check on the ingredients and make certain they are used according to the directions and that sufficient care is exercised.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You are an M.D. writing a syndicated column which reaches millions of readers, therefore, I found it disturbing that you published the letter concerning the treatment of crossed eyes by an optometrist. There is already massive confusion concerning the boundaries between the ophthalmologist (who is medically and surgically trained eye specialist) and the optometrist, (who has no medical training) and should, I feel be directing his practice towards optics and not eye disease.

In this letter he states, "optometric techniques which are non-invasive are frequently the best procedure to be used in solving the problems of binocularity." His subtly disguised inference is that conservative management belongs within the realm of optometry, while only surgical problems are of concern to the ophthalmologist. Starbismus (misalignment of the eyes) is an ocular disease belonging entirely within the realm of medically trained personnel. It is in fact the usual ophthalmic practice to attempt conservative measures prior to the consideration of surgery. There are multiple causes of strabismus in children, and on rare occasions may signal serious illness, i.e. ocular tumors, retinal degeneration, and optic nerve diseases. Only the medically trained eye specialist is adequately prepared to make such determinations. I feel the optometrist has little place in the treatment of strabismus unless working closely with an ophthalmologist.

In addition, let us remember that the eye truly is the window of the body...often revealing significant findings about the patient's entire state of health, such as high blood pressure, diabetes, and atherosclerosis. I feel it becomes obvious that the M.D. is necessary for the thorough and holistic approach to eye care. — Robert J. Balkan, M.D., New Orleans, La.

For J.S. (New York City): I have seen patients who have an ATPase deficiency. These people have difficulty taking weight off and keeping it off. I theorized that these patients do not burn up their calories properly. I find that it is difficult but not impossible to help them.

Perot Jr. attempts world trip in chopper

DALLAS (AP) — The 23-year-old son of Dallas entrepreneur H. Ross Perot lifted off Wednesday morning in a specially modified million-dollar helicopter on a 30-day trip to be the first to circle the globe in a helicopter.

The voyage is one even his father admires. The 52-year-old world adventurer and millionaire successfully organized the 1979 jailbreak of 11,000 prisoners in Iran and unsuccessfully tried to get supplies to American POWs in Vietnam in 1970.

"This is something I've always wanted to do," said Ross Perot Jr. on the eve of his departure from Dallas Love Field. "But the hardest part was convincing my father to let me."

Perot and a pilot from his father's computer firm, Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems, plan to stop in 26 nations during the 26,000-mile journey.

The most difficult part of the journey may be making the 1,600-mile stretch from Japan to the Aleutian Islands, without landing in the Soviet Union for refueling.

Associates of the elder Perot said he may have a scheme up his sleeve to help his son — possibly supplying a ship to refuel the helicopter, which has added fuel tanks to give it a maximum range of 1,000 miles.

Perot Jr. said he only began planning the trip three weeks ago, about the same time as Australian storeowner Dick Smith left Fort Worth on a year-long around the world helicopter tour.

"Since America has always been the leader in aviation, I thought it was a shame for someone not a citizen of the United States to set the world record," Perot said.

Construction to boost hospital capacity

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Completion of construction at Midland Memorial Hospital next week will bring the hospital to a 195-bed capacity with 11 additional beds for same-day surgery by Sept. 13, according to A.C. Buchanan, MMH vice president of operations.

MMH is licensed for 195 in-patient beds, but the hospital has not had all of the beds available for use. The average daily census (number of patients per day) has averaged about 160 a day. The additional 11 same-day surgery beds do not need to be licensed, according to hospital officials.

The finishing touches of a $26,000 renovation of the hospital's nursing administration and same-day surgery beds will allow 13 medical/surgical beds to be opened.

This construction is not related to the hospital's current certificate of need application for an additional 77 beds which will be reviewed at a public hearing Sept. 14 by the local health systems agency.

With a little rearranging here and there at MMH, the renovation has cost a considerable amount less than the estimated $250,000 which was originally planned to relocate 13 medical/surgical beds in the hospital.

"Originally we thought about adding 13 more medical/surgical beds in the nursing administration area on the fourth floor," Buchanan said, adding that the construction would have involved installing individual bathrooms with showers and medical gasses needed for these type of beds.

"Instead, nursing administration has been relocated to the basement where accounting was," Buchanan explained. "Accounting moved to the Mast Clinic across the street from the hospital. And 11 same-day surgery beds were relocated in the old nursing administration area."

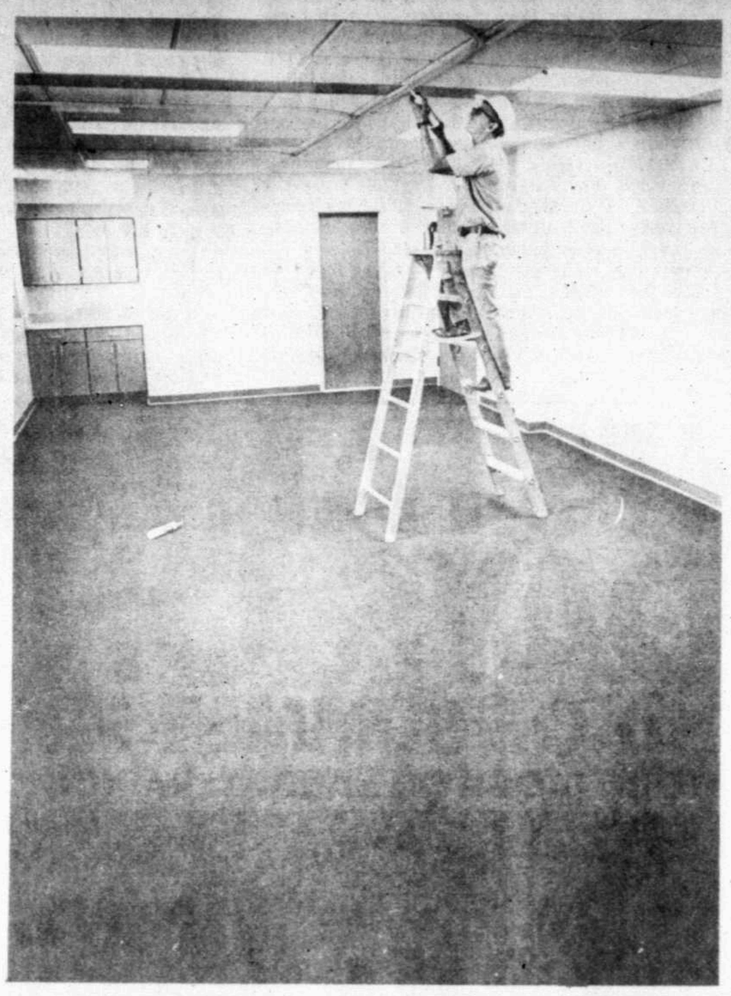

Same-day surgery beds are used for those patients who are hospitalized, sometimes for half a day.

Because medical gasses and individual bathrooms with showers are not needed for same-day surgery patients, the fourth floor nursing administration area accommodated the beds better than its previous location, on the west end of the third floor.

Buchanan said that since "three-west was freed from the same-day surgery beds," it allowed the hospital to use these rooms which are equipped with bathrooms and medical gasses for the 13 medical/surgical beds.

The construction began in early August and has now been completed except for some cabinet work, curtain tracks between patient beds and a nurses call system in the same-day surgery area.

"This will take a couple of months to install," Buchanan explained. "Until then, we will use a hand bell system. The nurses will be close enough to hear the bell — six beds are ten feet away from the nurses station."

Earl Smith, a carpenter with Area Builders, puts the finishing touches on one of the new rooms at Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday as he caulks a track for a curtain that will separate beds in the room. Completion of the rooms will bring MMH up to its 195-bed capacity.

In addition the other five same-day surgery beds are located adjacent on each side of the nurses station.

The nursing administration offices were easily relocated in the MMH basement area, but the nursing conference room that was used for in-service education could not be relocated as easily.

"We are studying the feasibility of using the Knorr Building (located across the street from the hospital) for in-service education," Buchanan said. "It now stands empty, but we are evaluating it for other hospital purposes."

Rare okapi born at Dallas Zoo

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Zoo today announced the birth of an okapi, an animal that resembles the giraffe and has stripes like a zebra, and said it was the first member of the endangered species born in a U.S. zoo this year.

Kamili weighed 35 pounds when born at 11 p.m. Tuesday, said zoo spokesman Bill Stewart.

The last previous birth at the zoo was that of Kamili's mother, Liana, in 1974. Kamili's father, Max, is on loan from the Oklahoma City Zoo.

U.S. zoos have 16 of the mammals and six are in the Dallas Zoo, Stewart said.

"We've been working for years to propagate and preserve this rare species," Stewart said, adding that 10 of the rare animals have been born at the Dallas Zoo. "This one literally is priceless."

The okapi is striped in deep brown and white and has a sloping back and low hindquarters, and when fully grown weighs 500 pounds, Stewart said. In its native Africa, the animal forages for fruits and vegetables.

U.S. lessening pipeline penalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Against a backdrop of rising protests from West European allies, the Reagan administration is reducing penalties against companies using U.S. technology to help construct the Soviet natural gas pipeline.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters Wednesday the administration will only bar the firms from receiving exports of U.S. oil and gas equipment and technology, rather than all U.S. exports as first ordered.

The Commerce Department last week slapped two French companies — Dresser-France, a subsidiary of the Dallas-based Dresser Industries, and Creusot-Loire — with a total export ban in retaliation against the shipment of pipeline compressors to the Soviet Union.

That order, banning the firms from receiving "all U.S. products, services and technology," may need "a little redefinition...a clarification of what was meant," Regan said.

Last Thursday's Commerce Department order "was, perhaps, misinterpreted or, perhaps, in its original, pristine form, was a little too sweeping without giving a precise definition of what was meant," Regan said.

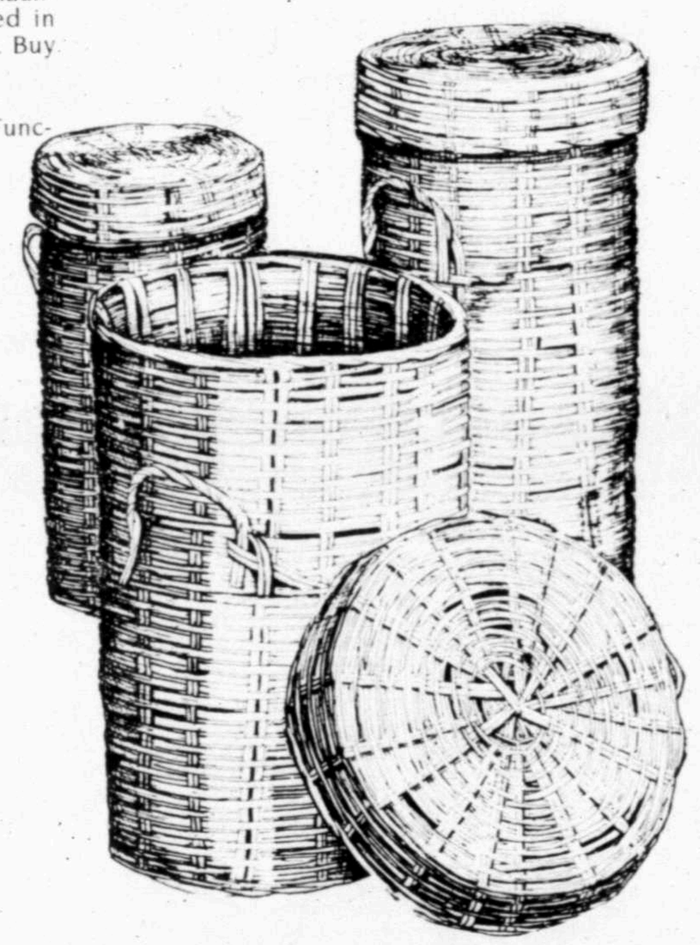

The treasury secretary said revisions in the order will limit penalties only to a ban on "purchases and use of oil and gas equipment and technological information from U.S. sources."

The "redefined" penalties are expected to be imposed soon on the John Brown Engineering Co. of Glasgow, Scotland, which is preparing to ship turbine parts, produced with American technology, to the Soviet Union.

Earlier this week, a Soviet freighter in the port of Glasgow began loading 500 crates of turbine parts produced by John Brown for use in the 3,500-mile long trans-Siberian gas pipeline to Western Europe.

Uranus aurora located

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — An aurora similar to the northern lights on Earth has been discovered in the atmosphere of the planet Uranus, proving that it has a strong magnetic field, a University of California astrophysicist says.

Before the discovery about the seventh planet from the sun, only Earth, Jupiter and Saturn were known to have strong magnetic fields. Uranus's aurora seems to be stronger than ones observed on Saturn and Jupiter, said John T. Clarke.

When the solar wind — a flow of electrons from the sun — meets those fields, the electrons are caught and accelerated. They hit atmospheric atoms and molecules that increase in energy, releasing light and other radiations as auroras.

On Earth, where oxygen is common, the aurora is predominantly light green. On hydrogen-rich Uranus, it would appear red, Clarke said earlier this week.

Clarke said the discovery could help scientists understand the way electron streams react with magnetic fields, a crucial question in the effort to develop power plants run by controlled thermonuclear — or fusion — reactions.

Clarke spent 32 hours looking for ultraviolet emissions from Uranus, using a spectrometer aboard the Earth-orbiting satellite International Ultraviolet Explorer. A satellite was needed because the Earth's atmosphere blocks the particular spectrum of ultraviolet light he was seeking.

"The planet is so far away, it looks just like a point source (of radiation) from Earth," Clarke said. He said the Voyager spacecraft, due to reach Uranus in 1986, should be able to determine where the aurora is located on the planet.

The location is important because Uranus is the only planet with a strong magnetic field whose poles are pointed at the sun. If the aurora is located at the poles, it would tend to disprove a theory that the angle at which a planet spins affects the way it reacts with the solar wind.

Clarke said the discovery should support the theory that the speed of a planet's spin helps create a magnetic field. "Uranus is spinning fast enough that it should have a magnetic field," he said.

Smuggling decreases in Florida

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug smuggling into south Florida has dropped significantly since military authorities joined the battle, a federal official says.

Since March, more than 150 pounds of cocaine and 411 tons of marijuana have been seized in the Florida area, John M. Walker, assistant Treasury secretary, told a House Government Operations subcommittee Wednesday.

Walker said the reduction in drug smuggling is due to military technical and training help from the Defense Department approved by Congress and President Reagan.

Tough new economic policy begun in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Americans and other foreigners entering Mexico must convert their currency into pesos under a tough new policy to stop capital from leaving the country during the worst economic crisis in 70 years.

All banks were closed through Friday following President Jose Lopez Portillo's nationalization of private Mexican banks. Only banks are allowed to change currency now, and officials did not say how the new policy would be implemented or enforced.

Regulations issued shortly after Lopez Portillo's state of the union address Wednesday said the government will control all currency exchange transactions. The regulations go into effect upon publication in the official newspapers, which was expected today.

All unauthorized currency transactions will be illegal and considered the same as trafficking in contraband, the government said.

Mexicans leaving the country will be forced to apply for permission to buy dollars, while people entering the country will have to declare how much money they are bringing with them and convert that currency into pesos.

That means Americans will have to convert their dollars into pesos at the port of entry. They will get a receipt and can change leftover pesos back into dollars when they leave Mexico, the government said.

The peso is the only legal tender in Mexico now and only banks can cash in dollars.

In his last state of the union message before leaving office Dec. 1., Lopez Portillo said the hardline measures were intended to prevent the flight of dollars by investors who own up to $25 billion in U.S. real estate. He said Mexicans have opened as much as $14 billion in foreign bank accounts recently.

The presidential decree came as Mexico, strapped for cash because of falling oil revenues, faced its worst economic crisis since the 1910-1920 revolution.

The economic trouble includes 60 percent inflation, an $81 billion foreign debt — largest in the Third World — and a recession that is feeding chronic unemployment and underemployment now gripping 40 percent of the nation's work force.

The nationalization will halt the free flow of money from Mexico, in part caused by banks "that are sacking us," the president said in his 3½-hour speech delivered before a joint session of Congress.

President-elect Miguel de la Madrid, former budget and planning minister under Lopez Portillo, was among the dignitaries attending.

"The critical conditions now require and justify (these measures)," Lopez Portillo said. "It is now or never. They have already sacked us. Mexico is not finished. They will not sack us again."

Lopez Portillo also reviewed the nation's foreign relations, chiding the United States for a "threatening and ostracizing" attitude toward communist-ruled Cuba.

He said such an approach was not in keeping with "the beautiful tradition of liberty and tolerance of the American people."

Response to the presidential speech was generally reserved. Lopez Portillo occasionally daubed his eyes as he spoke emotionally about the nation's problems. He received a standing ovation from legislators and bankers when he announced the nationalization and exchange controls.

Well-placed financial analysts said some smaller banks are near collapse because of the shortage of credit and the exodus of money during the current economic recession. Government control of those banks could guarantee their survival with the backing of the Bank of Mexico, the nation's central bank.

The economic crisis developed as a result of declining prices for oil, silver and other commodities, which brought a shortfall in revenues of more than $10 billion this year. Mexico no longer was able to pay for a series of ambitious development projects begun in its petroleum-powered boom of the late 1970s, and faced problems with raising the $25 billion to $28 billion it needs for payments this year on foreign debt.

Last month, Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog negotiated a 90-day moratorium in debt payment with international banks as the nation came to the brink of defaulting on its debt. A bail-out plan includes billions of dollars in credits and advance oil payments from the United States.

The government also devalued the Mexican peso in August, the second devaluation of the year. The peso has lost 65 percent of its value, closing at 130 to the dollar Wednesday in New York trading.

Mexicans living along the 1,760-mile border with the United States will receive special concessions for obtaining dollars under regulations that follow nationalization of Mexican banks and exchange controls ordered Wednesday by Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

The regulations, issued shortly after the president's state of the union message, also outlaw a black market in dollars and strictly control the exit and entry of foreign currency.

Mexicans who live along the border would have special rights to obtain dollars to pay debts or make purchases based on a still-to-be-announced quota system. The government said currency trading outside banks would be illegal, placed in the same category as trafficking in contraband.

Other Mexicans would have to apply for permission to receive dollars either to travel or pay foreign debts.

Portillo acknowledged the growing problem of Mexican illegal aliens crossing into the United States in his state of the union address Wednesday.

But the Mexican leader offered no solutions on how to end the illegal alien problem, aggravated by Mexico's weakening currency and the government's inability to provide jobs for an estimated 40 percent of working age Mexicans who are unemployed or underemployed.

He said Mexico refuses to put barriers or patrol its 1,760-mile border with the United States. "We will not lend ourselves to any scheme that limits the constitutional liberties of all inhabitants to travel or leave Mexico," Lopez Portillo said.

"The presence of undocumented workers in the United States is a problem of real demand for labor in that country," he added.

He said his government had "achieved the essential things" in dealing with the problem of illegal aliens by "creating more jobs here and making the human and labor rights of our compatriots be respected while they continue having to emigrate."

The number of illegal aliens caught trying to get into the United States has reportedly soared since the Mexican government announced the second major devaluation of the peso this year.

At current exchange rates, if an illegal alien earned as little as $5 per day on a job on the U.S. side of the border he would still be making more than the daily minimum wage in his homeland.

Financial markets cool off after rally

By The Associated Press

The nation's financial markets are cooling off after August's red-hot rally, doused by a mixed bag of economic news and higher projections for the federal budget deficit.

Interest rates rose moderately Wednesday and the stock market turned lower.

Although many analysts said a slowdown in the stock market was expected, the government's latest economic reports provided little for investors to cheer.

The Commerce Department said construction spending in July fell 0.7 percent after posting a revised 1.1 percent increase the month before. The construction and housing industries are two of the most depressed sectors of the national economy.

In a new indication of the recession's squeeze on business, Dun & Bradstreet Corp. reported 696 companies failed last week, the highest one-week total this year and the highest for any week since January 1932 when the weekly average was 799.

Dun & Bradstreet, a business information firm that regularly reports on business failures, also said in its latest report that failures this year averaged 466 per week through Aug. 26. The rate is the fastest pace of corporate collapse since the Depression year of 1932, when the weekly average for the comparable period was 612.

The Congressional Budget Office said in a report to Congress that while the worst of the recession seems over, it is not certain a recovery has begun. The budget office did, however, forecast an increase in economic activity later this year.

In a prkjection that differs sharpy from that of the Reagan administration, the budget office said the federal budget deficit for the fiscal year startng Oct. 1 would reach a record $155 billion despite an expected drop in interest rates.

In her previous report to Congress in July, Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, had estimated the 1983 budget deficit at $141 billion to $151 billion.

The administration's official estimate is $115 billion, while the forecast contained in the budget plan approved by Congress in June calls for a $104 billion shortfall.

The prospect of large deficits has been a stumbling block for the financial markets. Many investors are concerned that the government's huge borrowing needs will crowd out private borrowers, thereby putting upward pressure on interest rates.

In other economic news:

—American steelmakers urged the International Trade Commission to impose duties on imported steel from seven countries to offset subsidies those governments give their own steel companies. The commission is scheduled to decide by the end of September whether to impose such duties.

—The Agriculture Department said net farm income this year is expected to drop to about $19 billion, the third annual decline in a row. The figure for 1981 was $19.6 billion.

SEC extends shelf registration rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission has extended a rule that makes it easier for corporations to issue new securities, while endorsing a bill to clamp down on traders who benefit from inside stock tips.

The one-year extension applies to the SEC's "shelf registration" rule, which allows companies whose stock is widely traded to file a detailed financial statement with the commission and then float bonds or offer stock at any time during the next two years without updating the statement.

The rule, which enables firms to take advantage of favorable market conditions, took effect last March and was due to expire Dec. 10. It now will expire in December 1983.

The old rule required a new statement before each securities offering, and the statement took at least 48 hours to win SEC approval.

The proposed legislation the SEC endorsed on insider information is intended to strengthen the deterrent against use of inside tips.

Federal securities law generally bans securities trading by certain "insiders," such as directors, on the basis of information not generally available to the public.

The proposal would authorize penalties equal to three times the amount of profit gained or loss avoided in the illegal trading, instead of current forfeiture of the amount of profit.

It also would increase the maximum fine for using insider information from $10,000 now to $100,000.

The SEC said there has been growing abuse, particularly by traders with advance knowledge of developments in tender offers and mergers that can send the price of a stock skyrocketing or into a nosedive.

In another action, the commission took steps to speed up approval of new money-market mutual funds offered by securities firms.

The SEC's decision arose from its concern over the interpretation of a 1933 law which bars commercial banks from dealing in corporate stocks and bonds.

The commission stopped approving new money-market funds in July pending an examination of the issue of who may legally offer the funds. Wednesday, the commission said it would resume prompt action on applications by securities firms to offer the funds.

The SEC withheld any action on bank sponsorship of the funds until it has time to study a statement from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation received just before its meeting.

That statement said the FDIC believes the 1933 law does not prohibit securities activities by affiliates of banks that are not members of the Federal Reserve System.

The FDIC statement noted that other regulations could keep banks from such operations in certain instances — if, for example, they were subsidiaries of bank holding companies.

But its main point was contained in its opinion that "while the Glass-Steagall Act was intended to protect banks from certain of the risks inherent in particular securities activities it does not reach the securities activities of a bona fide subsidiary of an insured nonmember bank."

U.S. opposes doubling money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will oppose doubling of national contributions to the International Monetary Fund during the fund's meeting this weekend in Toronto and will propose an expansion of a smaller emergency fund instead, according to Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

Regan told reporters Wednesday the United States would support only a "modest" increase in the quotas, which several European countries believe should be doubled in light of heavy demands on the fund.

The IMF lends money to countries to help them through balance-of-payments difficults. Frequently it requires budgetary stringency in the recipient country as a condition for the loan.

Penalty duty on imported steel could cost consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imposing penalty duties on subsidized steel imports could cost U.S. consumers hundreds of millions of dollars without helping troubled domestic steelmakers, a Federal Trade Commission attorney says.

"An erroneous finding of injury could lead to losses for United States consumers and the economy of up to $480 million annually," FTC attorney Benjamin Cohen said Wednesday.

Cohen testified before a U.S. International Trade Commission hearing on the possible steel trade duties. America's major steelmakers have requested that the United States impose the financial penalties.

Apart from Cohen's remarks, the FTC took no formal position on whether the U.S. International Trade Commission should impose so-called countervailing duties on imported steel from several foreign nations to offset subsidies the foreign governments grant their companies.

Representatives of foreign steelmakers, who say the U.S. government provides similar subsidies to its own companies through tax incentives, were scheduled to present the ITC with their response to the charges late today.

Cohen said that the ITC, before setting any duties, must be positive that subsidies have caused many of the domestic industry's problems. Otherwise, he suggested, duties will increase consumer costs even as the domestic manufacturers continue to encounter difficulties.

Moreover, imposing duties could prompt foreign governments to retaliate by blocking products exported by the United States, he said.

During the opening day of hearings on the steelmakers' request, however, industry spokesmen pressed for the duties. They warned that without relief from steel subsidized by foreign companies, the domestic industry will crumble, eliminating tens of thousands of jobs.

"I know of no privately funded steel company that can continue to sustain this," said Dale Armstrong, senior vice president for United States Steel Corp. "We have a bottom, and we're under it now."

Industry spokesmen said the subsidies, verified last week by the Commerce Department, have allowed foreign competitors to unfairly undercut the prices of American producers. Because of the price desparity, the foreign share of the U.S. steel market rose from 19.1 percent a year ago to nearly 23 percent, they said.

The commission is scheduled to reach a decision by month's end. If it agrees with the steelmakers, duties likely would be imposed within weeks. They would be equal to the amount of subsidy provided by the individual foreign governments.

Last month, the Commerce Department found that steel products shipped to the United States by 13 foreign manufacturers were benefiting from government subsidies of up to 26 percent of their value. The subsidies came through a variety of means, including low-cost loans.

The nations involved were France, Italy, Luxembourg, Great Britain, West Germany and Belgium. All are members of the European Economic Community and are cited in the complaint filed by the U.S. companies.

Also in August, the Commerce Department and the European Economic Community proposed a plan limiting European steel imports.

Jailed unionist to hospital

KINGSTON, Pa. (AP) — Former United Mine Workers president W.A. "Tony" Boyle, sentenced to life in prison for the murder of a union rival, has been hospitalized for heart problems, officials say.

Boyle, 80, was transferred from the intensive care unit to a room at the Nesbitt Memorial Hospital on Wednesday, said prison Lt. Charles Lavan.

Boyle, who has a history of heart and stomach problems, was admitted to the hospital on Monday. He is serving three life terms at the State Correctional Institution in Dallas, Pa., in the 1969 murders of union rival Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

The Yablonskis were shot as they slept in their Clarksville, Pa., home on Dec. 31, 1969. Yablonski had just lost a bid for the union presidency to Boyle and was planning to challenge the loss.

Boyle's medical problems prompted his transfer in 1980 from Graterford state prison to Dallas, which has a prison hospital.

Sneaky Bulldogs open season against Plainsmen

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The 1982 football season at Midland High kicks off Friday night with the Bulldogs traveling to Lubbock to face the Monterey Plainsmen at Lowrey Field for an 8 p.m. game.

The game, which was rescheduled from 7:30 p.m., will pit two teams with a vast difference in personnel and style of play. The Bulldogs run a small and sneaky offensive attack out of the Wing T formation, using misdirection as a method of blocking to overcome their lack of size, while the Plainsmen have four 200-plus men on the front line to do the heavy work and a 225 pound fullback to carry the ball with power out of the I formation.

After seeing films of the Monterey-Lubbock Estacado scrimmage game, MHS coach Pat Culpepper was impressed with the Plainsmen offense saying, "They looked good against Estacado and Estacado is ranked pretty high in 4A. Monterey handled them. Monterey has a 225 pound fullback named (Gary) Warren and their tailback (Jay Douglas) ran an 85-yard punt back on us last year and they also have a great big tight end (Gino Simpson) at 6-foot-6, 240. They have a lot of muscle and they used it well against Estacado. The tailback has enough speed to get outside."

But speedy tailbacks and other such ball carriers probide one of the reasons Culpepper utilizes the eight-man line — to stop the run.

Monterey coach James Odom seems to have gained a lot of respect for that defensive line and for the running-backs his Plainsmen will have to face on defense.

"As far as Midland is concerned," said Odom, "they're not a very big club but they live and die with their defense. They have a sic'em type defense. I'm also impressed by the way thier backs run, especially (Raymond) Chambers."

The offensive backfield is one of Midland High's stronger points with three returning lettermen in John Hibbitts, Alex Mata and Ricky Madrid and with Chambers who was a junior varsity player last season.

The Bulldogs also have a quarterback, Mark Page, whom Culpepper feels has the ability to guide the team on the ground and can hit the receivers, tight end Chuck Dickenson and split ends Earl Phillips and Todd Shiplett who will carry new plays into the huddle on an alternating play basis.

SINCE IT will be a game of muscle vs. finesse, big vs. quick, both coaches see an outside element as a factor: the heat and humidity.

"They're quite a bit bigger than we are," said Culpepper. "The heat will be a factor as it will with all teams this early in the season. We'll have to keep some players fresh. I think the heat will be harder on them because they are bigger. A big piece of meat will pop and sizzle on the frying pan. I don't think they'll be in as good of condition as we are either."

Coach Odom doesn't seem to think so either.

"Depth will be a big problem," he said. "The humidity has hurt a lot of the big players more than I expected it to, they wear down quicker than I expected."

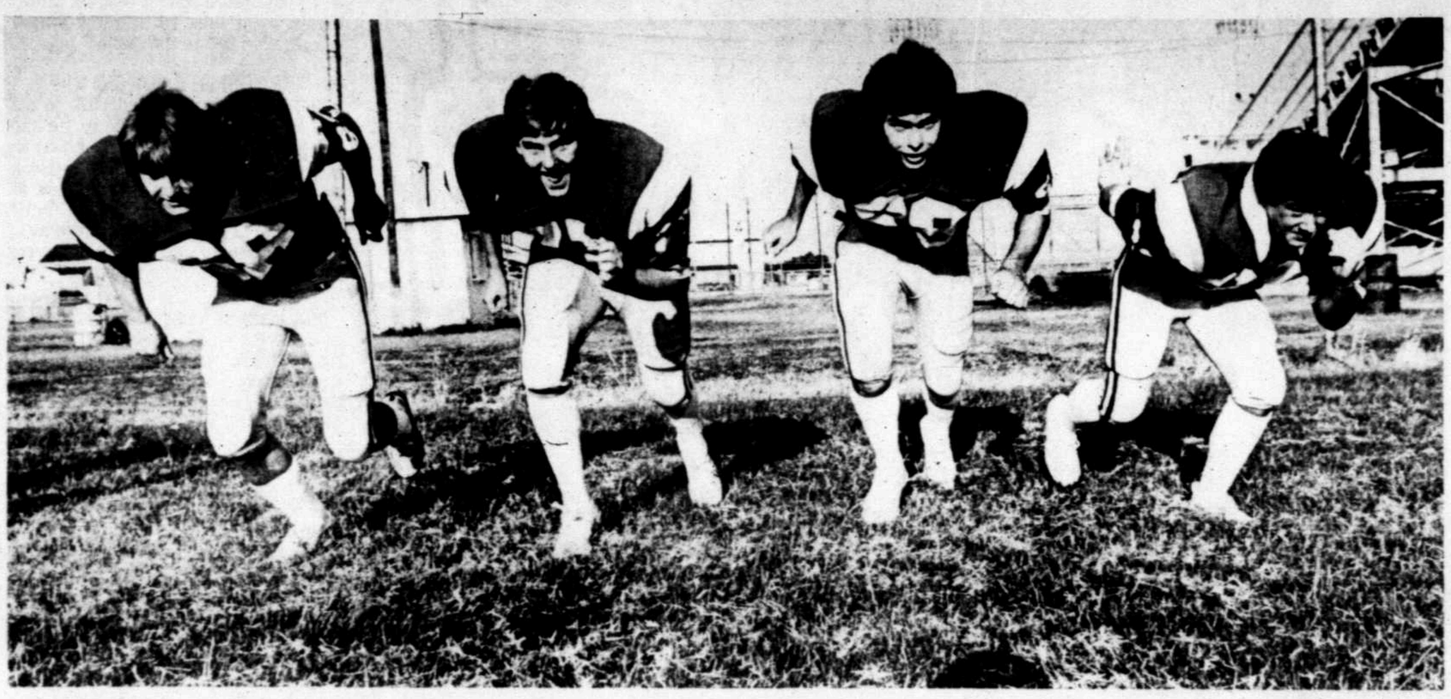

Culpepper also looked back at his team's scrimmage game against Dallas South Oak Cliff on Friday and because of the "embarassment" his players suffered he feels the team has worked harder this week to keep it from happening again.

"We've had a real good week of practice and we're all interested in seeing how it pays off Friday. "This game against Monterey is not going to make or break our season, but it would be good to get off with a win. I think we'll have to attack real quick on offense and defense to keep them off balance. We also need more team intensity. After getting manhandled (by South Oak Cliff) this next week will show the character of the team. Are we a physical team or not?"

For Friday's game, the starting lineups are:

A key to the success of an eight-man defensive line is how well the down linemen can stop the inside run and how much pressure they can apply on the quarterback in passing situations. Ranging in size from 145 to 182, these Bulldogs will have to make up for their lack of size by being in better condition and quicker off the ball than their opponents. From left to right they are: Bobby Hillin (68), tackle; Tommy Davis (77), guard; Cliff Hines, (69), guard; Chad Hughes (63), tackle.

Crane host Owls as Texas' only real sporting season begins

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

Friday the cool night air will be filled with the sounds of rabid football fans yelling their teams on as Texas celebrates the opening of the high school football season.

It will be a welcome time for the coaches and players as well. As the weeks of two-a-day drills and scrimmage games come to a close, everyone involved will get the chance to find out if all the sweat can be turned into a victory on the gridiron.

But for some the season has already been shortened.

When Reagan County travels to Crane, Gregg Fisher will be sitting on the sidelines. The 170-pound senior was scheduled to start at tailback for the Owls but he tore a muscle in his back during a scrimmage game against Van Horn.

"HE TORE a muscle in his stomach when he was a sophomore and played two weeks later," he said. "But this one is a little worse. I just hope we can get him back in time for district."

The Owls run out of the I formation where the tailback is a critical part of the offensive attack. In Fisher's case the importance is amplified by his performance of last year.

Fisher rushed for 1,287 yards in nine games while averaging over six yards per carry as a junior. He had a string of six consecutive games in which he broke the century mark including a 250-yard performance against Friday night's opponent, Crane.

Davis has picked freshman Timothy Thompson to fill in for Fisher against the Golden Cranes.

"I'm confident Tim will step in and run hard," he said. "Our offensive line should make the difference for him, they have a lot of experience and they are our main strenghth."

ON THE other side of the ledger Crane will have its field general as a spectator also.

Last years' starting quarterback, Jeff Pinkston, has been sidelined with an arm injury. He is expected to be out for two weeks. Last year the 5-foot-11, 175-pounder threw for more than 1,100 yards including a 19-of-38 performance that almost pulled out the game against Reagan County.

"Needless to say we won't be passing as much this year," said Coach Rickey White.

White still hasn't decided who will start at quarterback but undoubtedly both Eugene Morris and Todd Rogers will see action for the Golden Cranes.

Morris, a 5-foot-10 senior, will start at cornerback along with any calls he might get to run the offense. Rogers is a junior with a bit more size than Morris being an inch taller and 10 pounds heavier.

WHITE SAID that the Cranes have accomplished the things they wanted to in practice and the one controlled pre-seeson game they had.

"We had some breakdowns offensively against Morton," he said, "but we've made corrections. Defensively we played well."

The breakdowns he's referring to are fumbles and even in practice games they make a difference. The Golden Cranes had 10 first downs in their 30 plays while shutting down Morton's offense. None the less, when the smoke cleared the score was even, 0-0.

"We're as sound as we were before," he said, "just not as dengerous."

IN OTHER area games Jal, N.M., travels to Greenwood for an interstate contest, while class AA McCamey will host class A powerhouse Iraan at home.

Stanton and Rankin will take a step up in class to open the season. The Buffaloes will entertain the first of three AAA opponents, Tahoka, while the Red Devils will play host to AA Eldorado.

In district 2-AAAA Andrews will open on the road in Seminole while at home, Lamesa will try to improve on last year's record by winning their opening game against Levelland.

Dodgers beat Cubs, 4-2

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Cubs will enter the Western Division playoffs with a two-game losing streak after dropping the last regular season game of the year here Wednesday to the San Antonio Dodgers, 4-2.

The Dodgers used three homers, two by Greg Smith, to beat the Cubs. Tom Beyers connected for his 10th as Cub manager Brian Murphy let four of his relief pitchers pitch two innings each.

Rob Blyth suffered his first loss of the year by giving up two runs in the first two innings of play. Bob Voight won his 12th game of the year against 13 defeats with seven innings of work, and didn't allow a earned run.

The Cubs drove to El Paso Wednesday night and will rest today prior to Friday's 7:30 p.m. game with El Paso in the best-of-three, two-day playoff. Saturday's first game will be at 6:30 p.m. and will be nine innings. If the second game is needed, it will follow 20 minutes after the first and will be a seven inning game.

If the Cubs win two of the games in El Paso, the Texas League championship series will end in Midland. The TL championship series will start in the Eastern division hometown, either Tulsa or Jackson, on Sept. 6 and Sept. 7. Sept 8 will be a travel day and the series moves back to the west on Sept. 9.

If Midland wins in EL Paso, playoff tickets for Sept. 9-11 will go on sale Tuesday with season tickets holders having the first right of refusal on their seats. Season ticket holders must pick up tickets by 3:00 p.m. Sept. 9. The rest will go on sale to the general public. Prices are $4.50 for box seats, $3.50 general admission and $2.50 for children.

Martina Navratilova smashes a return to Laura Dupont in their rain-delayed match at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in New York Wednesday night.

Navratilova takes time, Gerulaitis, Clerc upset

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova had express instructions from John McEnroe as both top seeds prepared for their opening matches at the problem-plagued U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Their Wednesday night tournament debuts were stalled by a 1½-hour downpour and when she finally took the court, Navratilova followed directions, playing hurry-up tennis and defeating Laura DuPont 6-1, 6-1, in just 44 minutes. The match was interrupted by a 17-minute rain delay, but Navratilova couldn't help that.

IT TURNED out not to be fast enough, though. McEnroe and Tim Gullickson were tied at 3-3 in their first set when a section of stadium lights at the National Tennis Center went out, delaying the match. The lights still had not been restored when 25 minutes later, it began to rain again. That was when officials suprendered and postponed the completion of the match until today.

Earlier, Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded fifth, was eliminated by Fritz Buehning 6-4, 7-6, 6-3, and No. 7 seed Jose-Luis Clerc bowed to Kim Warwick 3-6, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1, 7-6 in the day's major upsets.

IN OTHER important pairings, Wimbledon champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 2 seed, survived a first-set tiebreaker and defeated Jeff Borowiak 7-6, 6-2, 6-3, third-seeded Tracy Austin, the defending women's champion, defeated Catherine Tanvier, who retired in the second set with an ankle injury, and Andrea Jaeger, No. 4, beat Lena Sandin 6-1, 6-1.

Navratilova, who carried a sizzling streak of 64 victories in her last 65 matches into the Open, said she was confident that she can win this tournament for the first time.

"I BELIEVE I can win," she said. "There's nothing wrong with saying you believe that. Coming in, I'd rather be in my shoes, having played so well and won so many tournaments. It's a good record, if I may blow my own horn."

Connors, who celbrated his 30th birthday today, got no gifts from Borowiak. He struggled through a tough first set and attributed his troubles to jitters, a problem that has affected several of the top players here.

"I started off pretty slow but it is like all my first matches in a big tournament," he said. "I start off pretty nervous and I work my way into the matches."

GERULAITIS, who reached the semifinals in this tournament a year ago, warned interviewers that he would talk only about tennis and said he would leave the interview area if there were any questions on other subject, such as recent reports linking him to a drug probe.

Buehning said he thought the headlines might have interfered with Gerulaitis' mental preparation.

"A few guys in the stands said a few things and maybe he got upset," he said. "I'm sure it had a little bit to do with it."

Turners' cable TV deal makes owners drop idea of player lockout

By DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer

If the National Football League owners' decision against a lockout puts pressure on the players, it suits Ed Garvey just fine.

In the latest chapter in the league's ongoing labor dispute, the NFL owners on Wednesday ruled out a lockout of players even if no agreement is reached on a new contract by the time the season opens Sept. 12.

In announcing the decision, Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said, "From a labor relations standpoint, a lockout makes quite a bit of sense. But after a free discussion of that issue, the owners decided that they owe it to the fans and to the players who have been through the two-a-days (workouts) to open up the season."

Contacted by Cable News Network after Donlan's announcement, Garvey, the executive director of the NFL Players Association, said, "The owners have put it (the pressure to settle the dispute) back on us and that's where we wanted it all along. I never thought they'd seriously lock out, though there's a difference of opinion on our staff about that.

"The deal we made with Ted Turner made it impossible for them to lock us out. But things have a tendency to change, and I'll believe it when we get to the point of striking."

Donlan said that the decision not to have a lockout was made unanimously by the six NFL Executive Committee members who attended the meeting:

Jim Kensil of the New York Jets, Leonard Tose of Philadelphia, Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh, Mike Brown of Cincinnati, Chuck Sullivan of New England and Hugh Culverhouse of Tampa Bay. The committee's seventh member, San Diego's Gene Klein, did not attend.

AP Sports Writer

The New York Mets have been anything but a championship contender lately. Still, as Pete Falcone pitched the ninth inning against the Houston Astros, he felt as if he was a part of something very special.

"It was like a World Series game," Falcone said Wednesday as the Mets registered their first victory since Aug. 15, a 5-1 triumph which snapped a 15-game slide, the longest losing streak in the major leagues this season. The smallest crowd of the year at Shea Stadium — 4,408 — was in attendance but, as Falcone noted, "They were very loud."

For once, the Mets' bats were loud, too, with George Foster leading the way with a two-run homer. Falcone went the distance, surrendering Houston's only run with two out in the ninth on a homer by Alan Ashby.

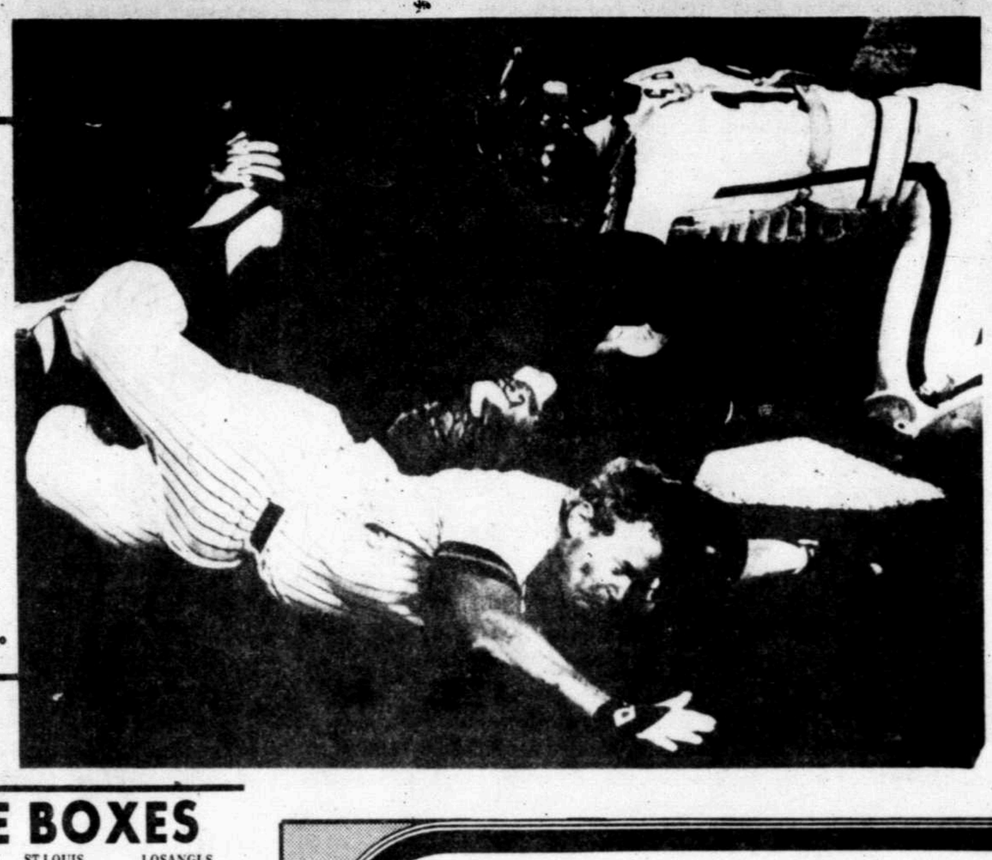

"Sure, I wanted the shutout, but if you're going to lose it, I'd rather it be on a homer like that than on three singles, and they get a rally going," said Falcone, who pitched a six-hitter and was helped by some brilliant — for once — fielding.

"This is the best we've played defensively in a long time," he admitted. "They really showed me something by not laying down."

Foster also was proud that the Mets did not quit.

"We didn't give up," he said. "As a losing streak progresses, I think it puts more pressure on the team you're playing than the one in the losing streak. It was good to get this out of the way. Now we can go out and play spoiler."

As for his two-run shot in the third inning, Foster explained: "It's an indication of what I am able to do. But even though I've done it before, I know I still have to do it now."

Braves 4, Phillies 0

Atlanta blanked Philadelphia for the second straight night, with Rick Camp going seven innings and Gene Garber picking up his 27th save by pitching the eighth and ninth. Bob Horner broke out of a slump with an RBI single and run-scoring double. Pete Rose went 0-for-3 to set a major league record for lifetime outs, passing Hank Aaron, who had 8,593 outs.

"There is no way you can rest now with 29 games to go," said Camp, who has a bone spur in his arm. "There is no way I can miss a start. I feel OK after I loosen up. I take 10 minutes longer warming up before the game."

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 5

St Louis blew a 4-0 lead built in the first inning, had to rally to tie the Dodgers in the ninth, then won it on an infield hit in the 13th. The Cardinals got four runs against Jerry Reuss as Willie McGee singled home Lonnie Smith, David Green's single brought in Keith Hernandez and Steve Sax's error allowed two more runs to score.

The Dodgers chipped away, helped greatly by Ron Cey's solo homer and McGee's error in center field. In the eighth, Mike Scioscia beat out a high hopper as Pedro Guerrero scored the go-ahead run.

But the Cards rallied in the ninth, tying it on Tito Landrum's RBI single, then won it on Ozzie Smith's infield single in the 13th.

Rookie Kelly Paris, in his first major-league appearance, singled to lead off the 13th, was sacrificed to second and$scored from there when Smith rapped a shot toward center that second baseman Sax could only knock down.

Cubs 7, Giants 6

Jerry Morales pinch hit a two-run double in the sixth as the Cubs rallied with the help of two errors by Giants first baseman Reggie Smith, who had homered earlier. After one-out singles by Keith Moreland and Jay Johnstone, Steve Henderson's grounder was fumbled by Smith for one error. Then he fired the ball into left field trying to get Johnstone at second base. Morales followed with his decisive hit.

Leon Durham had a two-run homer for the Cubs.

Expos 2, Reds 1

Randy Lerch, the first of four Montreal pitchers, won in his first start since being acquired from Milwaukee Aug. 14. Jeff Reardon got the final two outs to record his 21st save. Soto gave up only five hits and struck out nine in going the distance for the 10th time.

Padres 4, Pirates 1

Juan Eichelberger gave up eight hits in his first start since July 9 and Joe Lefebvre drove in a pair of runs with a single and home run. Eichelberger spent three weeks on the disabled list with a shoulder injury but managed his seventh complete game of the year.

Richest horse race has long history

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Seated in front of his barn, a furlong or two from the most lucrative homestretch in horse racing, trainer Jack Brooks recalled the dream that took shape one autumn afternoon 23 years ago.

"In 1959 I squeezed through the fence and watched my first All-American," said Brooks. "I was 22 or 23 then and from that day on I knew it was the race I wanted to win most."

Today, Brooks is considered one of the top quarter horse trainers in the country. His horses consistently earn thousands of dollars for their owners in the many big money races that have sprung up as the quarter horse racing industry continues to grow at an astonishing rate.

Horse racing in New Mexico took off in earnest after 1933, when the New Mexico Legislature approved a pari-mutuel horse racing bill. By 1959 there were four racetracks in operation, luring bettors and horsemen from non-pari-mutuel betting states like Texas and Oklahoma. With New Mexico next door, the horsemen from those states came here to watch their horses run for money, and to bet on them.

But while it was the Legislature that ensured a place for horse racing in the state, it was one race — the All-American Futurity — that put it on the national racing map.

It has been said the spirit of the All-American Futurity was born at "the old Miller cornfield," a rocky racing strip east of town where cowboys gathered on Sunday afternoons to match race their horses for thousands of dollars.

But it took Gene Hensley, the controversial owner of Ruidoso Downs in its early years, to promote the idea that an obscure track in the Southwest could put on one of the richest horse races in the world.

The first All-American Futurity was run in 1959, with the purse topping out at $129,686. The winning horse, a filly named Galobar, earned $62,843 for the 20-second sprint in the 400-yard race down the Ruidoso Downs straightaway.

Two years later the purse money had reached $202,423, a figure rivaled only by prestigious thoroughbred races like the Kentucky Derby and Preakness. The quarter horse racing industry had found a home in New Mexico, and the magic had caught on.

The formula for building the big purse was simple. Quarter horse owners nominated their stock as yearlings, and kept them eligible for the race through a series of two-year payments that totaled $2,500. In return for their gamble that their horses would develop into winners, the owners got a shot at the ever-growing purse.

But even Hensley underestimated the race's potential. Instead of the two dozen nominations he expected for the inaugural futurity, there were 122 horses paid up through the trials.

In 1972 the purse money topped $1 million and this year has escalated to $2.5 million, with the winning horse picking up a flat $1 million. So popular has the race become that 354 horses were still eligible when the first of two sets of elimination trials began this month to determine the 10-horse field for the futurity on Labor Day.

The success of the All-American gave rise to other big money races for quarter horses. Today, Ruidoso Downs, Sunland Park and La Mesa Park feature more than a dozen quarter horse races with purses ranging from $150,000 to $2.5 million. The big money fever has carried over to the West Coast, where at California's Los Alamitos Park a similar trend is developing.

It also has turned the dream of winning the futurity into a high-stakes game.

Special Effort, the unbeaten colt who won the race in 1981 and went on to become the leading money winner of all time, was purchased for $1 million by oilman Dan Urschel of Canadian, Texas. Urschel bought the colt in early June, before he had won a single major race.

Three months later, just before he won the All-American, Special Effort was syndicated for $15 million, with horse agent Don Tyner of Oklahoma City marketing most of the shares in a single weekend at Ruidoso Downs.

This year Urschel spent $450,000 to buy another promising 2-year-old named Glo Billy Sims. He spent another $30,000 by way of a late entry fee to get the horse into the first round of the All-American Futurity elimination trials. But this time, the gamble backfired as Glo Billy Sims stumbled, threw his rider and failed to survive the first round of the trials.

This summer Tyner, who has masterminded numerous major sales and syndications involving quarter horses and thoroughbreds, spent $4.5 million to buy the 2-year-old Sail On Bunny, then announced plans to syndicate the colt for the same amount.

Further illustration of the sums of money involved in quarter horse racing is the fact the world record syndication of $30 million was put together on the great sire Easy Jet two years ago. That figure easily topped the amount that the thoroughbred star Secretariat was syndicated for after his Triple Crown victories.

But along with the big races and big money have come mammoth problems.

TOTOWA, N. J. (AP) — Tony Ayala, the unbeaten junior-middleweight who is undergoing treatment for alcohol abuse and personal problems since being arrested for burglary, says he knows what to do to be a successful boxer, but has a lot to learn outside the ring.

"I want the people to like me not only because of my boxing career, but also as a complete man outside of boxing," Ayala said in a prepared statement realeased by promoters here Tuesday. "Through my own determination and the help of other people, I am trying to learn how to do that — one day at a time. I don't want to drink anymore. I want to lead a clean and trouble-free life."

Ayala will not make any more statements until he has completed the treatment program, said comanager Lou Duva. Ayala, who has a 22-0 record, with 18 knockouts, is scheduled to fight Roberto Duran Nov. 19

He was arrested Aug. 15 in his hometown of San Antonio, Texas, and charged with burglary after being found in a neighbor's house.

Ayala contended he was drunk and that he wandered into the house by mistake. He had bought a house in the neighborhood three weeks previously and had lived in it for only three days.

A hearing is scheduled in San Antonio Sept. 16 on whether to revoke the 10-year probated sentence Ayala received in 1980 after pleading guilty to assaulting a 17-year-old woman when he was 15. Ayala said he was drunk.

An effort is being made to postpone the hearing until Ayala leaves the hospital, where he is scheduled to remain for at least 28 days.

"Tony has a lot of remorse about the things he did when his brain was confused," Dr. Joseph Pursch, who is caring for Ayala, said in a statement. "He has the right attitude to learn how to change himself. So far, he is a model patient."

As for Ayala's prognosis, Pursch said, "That will depend on how well he does throughout the treatment and on what happens when he is released from here. The prognosis is best for those patients who complete the treatment program and return to the same job they had prior to treatment. Also, they need aftercare treatment on an outpatient basis."

RUIDOSO (AP) — New Mexicans can get a taste of the professional golf tour Oct. 11 when a dozen pros compete at the Inn of the Mountain Gods course near Ruidoso.

"People are always saying why don't you get started on a major tourney here," said Jack Warlick, head pro at the lodge. "So we decided to have a little pro-am to see how it goes."

The inn and Ruidoso community groups are organizing the tournament, the proceeds of which will go to New Mexico Junior Golf. The money will be used too pay expenses of golfers nine to 18 years old who must travel to compete in national tournaments, Warlick said.

The tournament will pit 12 teams of five golfers against each other in a handicapped best ball event. Each team will have one pro and four amateurs, Warlick said.

The amateur slots cost $1,200 each and he said some are still available.

"It's a rare opportunity for them to play with these pros because New Mexico doesn't have any pro tourneys," he said.

Warlick said the entry fees will be used to pay for the purses for the winning pro, the winning amateur and the winning team and the rest will go to Junior Golf.

"I don't want to make the impression that the Inn of the Mountain Gods is making a killing here," he said. "We're not. We'll probably lose on it. It's a tremendous amount of work."

Tommy Morel, sales manager at the inn, said some 225 volunteers would be at the tournament to control the crowds, drive golf carts and do other jobs.

Warlick and Morel said the tournament could become an annual event if it is well-received.

Th tournament is the last event in Apsen Week, the tourist town's annual festival. In the week preceding the Monday tournament, the town is sponsoring events ranging from mule races to tractor pulls to a motorcycle rally.

Warlick said the tournament also comes at an advantageous time for attracting pros because it is the first day of a week's vacation on the Profession Golf Association's tour. The event follows a tournament in Abilene, Texas.

The pros will be flown to Ruidoso From Abilene in private airplanes in time for a party the night before the tournament, Warlick said.

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

It was Lucky 7 night in the American League, and Texas rookie Mike Smithson made out best of all — once he got done ducking the flying bats.

Four AL teams scored seven runs Wednesday night and each won. One of those clubs was Texas, which downed the Kansas City Royals 7-3 behind the six-hit pitching of Smithson, who recorded his first major-league victory.

The bats that Smithson had to elude weren't the flying animal kind. Instead, they were the wooden ones Kansas City's Amos Otis was tossing.

In the third inning, Smithson hit Otis and Frank White with pitches. And when Otis came up in the sixth inning with the Royals down by five runs, the trouble began.

Otis flung his bat on three straight swings, once into the stands behind the Texas dugout, then into short left field and then to the left side of second base.

Both benches emptied as Otis was ejected, but no punches were thrown.

"I didn't mean to do it, but I'm not going to tell him (Otis) that," Smithson said. "It's part of the game. The ball got away from me."

Along with offering no apologies, Smithson, now 1-1, said he wasn't about to leave the game.

"I told the umpire, 'This is my first big league win and nothing short of a hurricane is going to upset me,'" Smithson said.

Otis had left the stadium by the time the game ended, but Rangers Manager Darrell Johnson was talking.

"In my opinion, he should be suspended," Johnson said of Otis. "It was one of the bushest things I've ever seen. I'd just like to be around this team next year when we see Kansas City — I'm talking about one man."

It was the second consecutive loss for Kansas City, but the Royals retained a 1½-game lead in the American League West over California, which lost 5-3 to Detroit.

In other AL games Wednesday, Minnesota topped New York 7-2, Milwaukee beat Seattle 7-3, Boston defeated Oakland 7-4, Detroit topped California 5-3, Chicago shut out Cleveland 6-0 and Baltimore beat Toronto 5-2.

Orioles 5, Blue Jays 2

Jim Dwyer hit a solo homer to trigger a four-run second inning that carried the streaking Orioles past Toronto. Baltimore won its fifth straight and 12th of its last 13 behind Dennis Martinez, 14-10. Dwyer also had a run-scoring single in the third.

Brewers 7, Mariners 3

Cecil Cooper and Paul Molitor each belted two-run homers to key the Brewers' victory. Doc Medich, acquired from Texas Aug. 11, upped his record to 3-0 with Milwaukee and 10-11 overall. Mike Stanton, starting his first game since 1975 after Jim Beattie was scratched because of a sore shoulder, took the loss for Seattle and fell to 2-4.

Red Sox 7, A's 4

Carney Lansford doubled and homered to highlight Boston's victory in a game interrupted in the sixth inning for one hour and 15 minutes by rain. Carl Yastrzemski singled to join Hank Aaron as the only players ever to get 100 hits in 21 seasons.

White Sox 6, Indians 0

Twins 7, Yankees 2

Gary Gaetti had a two-run triple and Kent Hrbek added a two-run double to back the six-hit pitching of Al Williams. Williams, 6-7, gave up a first-inning homer to Jerry Mumphrey and then settled down. Minnesota racked four New York pitchers for 15 hits in pinning the loss on starter Dave Righetti, 8-7.

Tigers 5, Angels 3

MacPhail labels Steinbrenner intemperate, petulant

NEW YORK (AP) — American League President Lee MacPhail, asked to comment on a recent outburst by New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, says it is time to deal with "intemperate, petulant and problem-causing public statements by baseball personnel."

MacPhail made his remarks Tuesday after Steinbrenner criticized umpire Dallas Parks during the weekend. Parks had ejected New York's Roy Smalley in Toronto on Saturday for disputing a called third strike in a game against the Blue Jays.

Parks ejected New York designated hitter Oscar Gamble on Friday night after Gamble was called out on a play at first base. Parks later reversed his call when the ball was dropped.

Steinbrenner, in a statement released in Toronto Sunday, called the ejections "ludicrous" and said Parks "has had it in for the Yankees ever since I labeled him and several of the umpires as scabs because they worked American League games in 1979 during the umpires' strike."

MacPhail, responding to Steinbrenner's remarks, said he felt "parts of it are objectionable. In the release, Mr. Steinbrenner asks that the matter of umpiring be placed on the agenda for our next league meeting. This will be done."

"I am also placing on that agenda the matter of intemperate, petulant and problem-causing public statements by baseball personnel and the question of how the league feels such should be dealt with."

Cowboys picked in NFC East despite loss of Lewis, Waters

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys, despite shortcomings in the secondary and at linebacker, are heavily favored to repeat as champions of the National Conference Eastern Division.

"Coach Landry was sending us a message and the message is that he didn't like the way the last two years ended," said All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White.

The Cowboys lost by a point to San Francisco last year in the NFC title game and were denied their sixth Super Bowl visit the year before when they fell to the Philadelphia Eagles.

LANDRY HAS been concerned about the retirements of weakside linebacker D.D. Lewis and strong safety Charlie Waters.

"We lost a lot of experience there," Landry said.

And he is concerned that his 12-4 Cowboys of 1981 may have to be better in 1982 just to win the division.

"If everything remained the same as in 1981, we wouldn't have to be better to win the division," Landry said. "But I see a major improvement in the division teams."

The NFC East provided an NFL first in 1981 — three playoff teams, the Cowboys, the Eagles and the New York Giants.

Landry said the 10-6 Eagles "will rebound this year, mainly because they are the top defensive team in the NFL."

HE SAID the 9-7 Giants, who reached the playoffs for the first time since 1963, "have improved greatly and will be tough."

Landry said the 8-8 Washington Redskins "are coming on now with their new system" and the 7-9 St. Louis Cardinals are a threat "because of Neil Lomax's emergence at quarterback."

"I think last year's Cowboys' team was the best we've had since the 1978 team that went to the Super Bowl," Landry said. "Now we have to get better."

"The challenge again this year is going to be on defense because of the retirements," Landry said.

Coach Dick Vermeil is 54-45 in six seasons and needs 12 more victories to tie Earle "Greas " Neale as the winningest coach in the team's history.

"WE WERE a better team but everyone evaluates whether you were a better team on the basis of wins and losses," Vermeil said. "I don't know whether we're going to win any more games (in 1982), but physically and mentally, right now it's the best football team I've ever had. Now, whether it's going to end up being that will be determined by how our level of motivation and attitude say as we go through training camp. But physically it's by far our best team."

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs got his NFL indoctrination with five straight losses in his first head coaching job, but the team rallied to finish at .500.

"The most rewarding thing about last season is that we found we have players who just won't quit," Gibbs said.

The Cardinals will start Lomax in place of 17-year veteran Jim Hart this year.

"We've added quite a few new players but not for the sake of change," St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said. "Most, if not all of them, won their jobs outright."

ST. LOUIS' defense yielded an NFL-high 408 points last year and new assistant head coach Floyd Peters has changed the Cardinals from a 3-4 to a 4-3 defensive front.

The Cowboys' offense should again carry the team, with Tony Dorsett some five pounds heavier but still as fast as ever. Dorsett gained more than 1,600 yards last year.

"Our offense should be better," Dorsett said. "If our defense comes along, we'll be hard to handle."

Texas League ends regular season

Kurt Kingsolver's two-run homer boosted the El Paso Diablos to a 6-5 Texas League baseball victory over the Amarillo Gold Sox in a game delayed more than hour while groundskeepers dried out the field after vandals flooded the field.

Jeff Ransom and Randy Gomez each had three-run homers for Shreveport as the Captains bounced back for a 6-4 victory in the second game.

Greg Smith had two homers and Tom Beyers added a homer as the San Antonio Dodgers took a 4-2 victory over the Midland Cubs.

Klein offers money, says the owners have players' best interest in mind

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Owner Eugene Klein of the San Diego Chargers said that a football players' strike can be avoided this season, but if the players walk out "the owners will still exist."

"There's only one issue — money," Klein said. "The players are entitled to more. I'm for giving them more.

"But Ed Garvey is not going to become my (business) partner," Klein added, referring to the demand by the National Football League Players Association that the players receive 55 percent of the league's gross revenues.

Klein made his comments Tuesday in an interview with the Los Angeles Times.

Carefully avoiding criticism of the union's rank and file, Klein said Garvey seemed to be the one who was pushing for a walkout.

"All he talks about is strike, strike, strike," Klein said. "He wants a strike.

"Garvey has over-promised so much to the players, and now he's only looking out for himself. We (the owners) have the players' best interest in mind."

Garvey said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from his Washington, D.C., office that the owners have not yet started any meaningful negotiations and whether there will be a strike will be the players' decision — not his.

"We want to avoid a strike," Garvey said today. "But it can only be avoided if management starts bargaining in good faith. Whoever is there (at the negotiations) should be given the authority to bargain and that has not been the case. It would help if Gene Klein came to the table and heard for himself the position of the players."

Klein said that Jack Donlan of the NFL Management Council was being paid to represent the owners and he didn't see why the players wanted owners at the negotiations.

"Can you imagine the head of General Motors actually sitting down at the negotiating table?" Klein said. "It's not my job, it's Donlan's job."

Garvey said, however, that this was the first time the owners have refused to bargain with the players.

"Klein's a little out of date," Garvey said. "I can imagine having owners at the table because they were always there in the past. The current (1977) contract was settled by Wellington Mara (owner of the New York Giants) and Dan Rooney (owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers)."

Hunting season is upon us, so let's go do some fall fishing

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Yes, we know that the hunting seasons is here and we know that thousands of Texans have benn taking to the fields since Sept. 1. But don't forget that fishing is really good in these early fall months.

In order to better prepare you for the upcoming fall freshwater fishing scene we're going to talk about a few lakes in Texas and Mexico that will put a lot of fresh bass fillets on the table for you and your family.

I'll be hunting doves the first part of September, but after these first few hunts, I'm taking to the water once again for some fablulous fall fishing.

Fall fishing, whether in Texas or Mexico is good on almost all lakes. In Texas, we have to consider Toledo Bend, Amistad and Falcon as the best. In Mexico, Guerrero and Dominguez are best bets.

LET'S BEGIN with the two South Texas reservoirs, Amistad and Falcon. Both lakes are generally excellent fall fishing lakes. Both are situated on the Rio Grande River and both are international reservoirs.

Being situated in South Texas means those cold fronts that move into Texas in the fall don't reach the southern borders with nearly the fierce intensity as usual, and sometimes they don't reach that far south at all.

Amistad lake has been stocked with Florida bass the past five years and now those initial stockings are putting dozens of the fast growing fish in the livewells of many Texans.

The best fishing times on the huge international border are from the middle of September through Nov. 15. Early morning and late evening are the best for bass.

During these times, topwater fishing is at its best. Using the ever-popular buzzer, the "Lunker Lure", Pico Pops, Chuggers and Tiny Torpedoes fished over weed beds and in the back end of coves can be very productive for the patient topwater angler.

BECAUSE TOPWATERS don't always work, don't overlook fishing for the scrappy largemouths with crank baits, plastic worms and plastic grubs. The Amistad bass normally are on the prowl thoughout these fall months and they will readily hit most artificial baits presented in a professional manner.

According to guide, H.C. "Smokey" Janes, September through November are his favorite months for fooling largemouths with topwater baits.

"Each year I can't wait until fall for the fabulous Amistad topwater fishing," he said. "Out of all the months I fish, September and October are the best months I've encountered while fishing Amistad for more than eight years now."

Moving on down the Rio Grande, Falcon Lake, not nearly as large as its neighboring cousin Amistad, is another one of those reservoirs that need not be overlooked for fall fishing. The lake is considered older than Amistad, therefore the fishing shouldn't be as good. But that theory is incorrect.

FALCON, TO many surprised experts, has flourished with an amazing fishing comeback. Fishing these days at this border reservoir near Zapata has proven to produce some of the finest black bass fishing in the country.

Jerry Broyles, at Falcon's Beacon Lodge said, "We've had some impressive bass catches this spring and summer. And I'm just as excited about this fall's fishing as I've ever been."

But what's really shocking is the fact that these phenominal catches are producing a lot of heavyweights, five and six pounders.

Falcon, like Amistad has a wonderful reputation as being a fine topwater lake in the autumn months. Points, back end of coves, brushpiles and weed patches are dangerous places for having your arms broken by an oversized largemouth.

There's very little need to go into Toledo Bend, other than to say you can hardly go wrong by fishing this East Texas reservoir in the fall. If you are really serious about catching a lot of bass, give Toledo a shot in October. But make plans now. The "snowbirds" migrate to the fertile and warm climate of Toledo Band and take up all or most all the campsites and lodges on the lake.

TOMMY MARTIN, guide on Toledo Bend and world famous professional bass angler, claims his fair lake is the finest in the U.S. in October.

"I normally fish the year round when I'm not fishing the tournament circuit and I'll have to say that October is by far the most productive month for catching limits of good fish," Martin said.

"We catch more fish in October than any other month," he said, "And its topwater fishing time too."

"We normally fish the moss beds throughout the fall months with topwater and plastic worms." Martin said. "The fish are very active as they prepare to stuff themselves for the upcoming winter and very few days go by that we don't catch a good limit of largemouths."

Now if you would rather do a little more expensive bass fishing, get your rods, reels, tackle and reservations in order for Mexico's Guerrero or Dominguez lakes.

Dial Dunkin, owner of Hacienda Alta Vista, the best lodge on lake Guerrero said, "I would rather fish our lake in October and November than any other month."

If you can get Duncan away from dove and duck shooting long enough, he can catch those scrappy Guerrero largemouths by the dozens. It's hard to visit Guerrero in the fall without hunting, so plan on setting up a day or two of hunting, along with bass fishing. The hunting in the area is as super as the fishing.

However don't try to much fishing on this lake in October. The lake is normally full and murky due to the late summer and early fall rains. But about mid-November, fishing really peaks.

IT MAY be somewhat early to forecast fishing on Dominguez for this fall, but according to Joe Don Scott, the American booking agent for Bill Chapman's Hunting and Fishng service, he would rather take reservations now than wait.

Fishing at Dominguez is unlike anyplace in the world. It's not uncommon to fish for half-a-day and come in with 20 to 30 bass ranging anywhere from three to six pounds. Topwater spinnerbaits, crankbaits and worms are all good largemouths baits on this bass-filled Mexican reservoir.

Alborn says Rice will be better

HOUSTON (AP) - Clenzie Pierson, Doug Johnson, Dewayne Burnett, Eddie Gentry — Rice Coach Ray Alborn's conversation becomes animated when he talks about them.

They are in a special class to Alborn, an avowed fan of the underdog. He enjoys talking about the player who came from nowhere to somewhere or the player who overcame adversity.

"He is to me what this is all about," Alborn repeated often Saturday as he entertained visiting newsmen on the Southwest Conference football tour.

Pierson, a tackle, will anchor the Owl defensive line this season with a bright pro future ahead of him. But four years ago, he spread a mere 208 pounds over his 6-7 frame and was recruited only by the Owls and Arizona.

Alborn expects Pierson to open the season at 265 and says the San Antonio Southside product will weigh 280 when he fills out in the pros.

"In practice the other day he reached across a blocker and with one hand grabbed (running back) Tim Sanders by the collar and pulled him off his feet," Alborn laughed. "Sanders muttered he was glad Clenzie was on our side."

JOHNSON, A highly touted quartrback prospect from Pasadena Dobie, finally was redshirted after spending much of last season in limbo, recovering from two knee surgeries. Now he faces an uphill battle for playing time at quarterback and may face the added confusion of having to play two positions.

But Alborn never questioned his desire.

"We had some rough time between njuries last year," Alborn said. "He wants to play so badly.

"There have been times here at Rice when I'd call for volunteers and they'd be huddled up behind me like Custer's last stand. So I appreciate it when a guy wants to play so badly that he'll play anywhere."

Johnson currently is the No. 3 quarterback behind starter Michael Calhoun and Philip Money and could be moved to tight end or fullback.

Alborn praised Gentry, the Owls' starting center, as being the most improved player during Alborn's 10 years at Rice as an assistant coach and head coach.

"When Eddie first came here I said if we had to line up and play with him, we ought to resign," Alborn confessed. "He was about 220 pounds then and he'll play at about 255 this year.

"Everybody has a plan at this time of the year. But this is the best group of kids we've had in my 10 years on the campus. I think we have a chance to be better," Alborn said.

"Once again we're being picked low but that's a trap everybody gets into. They just don't expect us to do well."

Burnett so far has survived the homesickness that enelopes mot freshman.

"I saw a Blue Bell truck go by the other day but it didn't bother me," Alborn quoted Burnett a-saying. "I just followed it for a little while and then went on back to the campus."

Wood settles with ABC-TV

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — ABC-TV has settled out of court with a Texas high school football coach who sued the network after it suggested in an edition of "Good Morning America" last year that he hit his players, the coach says.

Brownwood head coach Gordon Wood declined Wednesday to reveal terms of the settlement, but said earlier published reports that he sought $20,000 in damages were too low. ABC could not be reached for comment.

The settlement to the civil suit, which was filed Jan. 11, was agreed upon in an Austin bank Tuesday, Wood said.

During the Sept. 15 broadcast, host David Hartman showed a film clip of a coach slapping and berating his players and said the clip was taken from a 1974 ABC-TV show at Brownwood High. He asked Wood how he could treat his players like that.

"That wasn't me," Wood replied.

A stunned Hartman apologized, and ABC-TV officials determined two days later that the film clip had been misidentified as Wood.

ABC-TV executive producer George Merlis said the show was, "a crude attempt to ambush the gentleman."

"That coach in the film was hammering kids on their heads, shoving them, throwing them on their backs," Wood said later. "I'm not even strong enough to do that."

Since going to Brownwood in 1960, Wood's teams have won 226 games, 15 district titles and seven state championships. The Brownwood Lions are pre-season favorites to win the Class 4A state title again this season.

Wood said he was asked to represent the National High School Football Coaches Association on the panel, hosted by Hartman, to balance the presentation on violence in school sports.

Stanger hits amateur cold spell

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Seeing two of golfing's greats on television whetted Bob Stanger's appetite for the game, but he probably never saw them hit a cold spell like he ran into at the 82nd U.S. Amateur golf championship.

The 23-year-old assistant golf coach at Duke University stumbled to four straight bogeys Wednesday, then recovered to snare co-medalist honors with former pro Bob Lewis with scores of 141.

"I used to watch (Arnold) Palmer and (Jack) Nicklaus on television when I was a little kid," Stanger said. Palmer won the U.S. Amateur in 1954, and Nicklaus took it in 1959 and 1961. Now Stanger has a chance to follow in their footsteps.

Of the field of 282, 64 golfers survived the two-day qualifying test for the match play phase that began today. After Wednesday's round, 63 positions were determined. The final match-play participant was chosen this morning in a playoff among 13 players who tied at 152.

After shooting 69 at the par-72, 6,896-yard layout of The Country Club here Tuesday, Stanger finished with a 72 Wednesday on the easier par-70, 6,532-yard course at the Charles River Country Club.

"With those four bogeys in a row, I was beginning to wonder if I was losing it but then I sank a 25-foot downhill putt on the 12th hole and that saved me," Stanger said.

"I've been a pretty good match player," said Stanger, who needed just 11 putts on the back nine Tuesday. "Match play is good for putters. You make a couple of 30-or 40-footers and it gets you going."

The 37-year-old Lewis, who regained his amateur status in 1978, also expressed confidence after shooting 73 at The Country Club to go with his opening 68.

"I'm a good match player. Whoever beats me is going to have to play well," said Lewis, runner-up in this tournament in 1980 and a semifinalist last year.

"Losing last year was a big disappointment," the Warren, Ohio, businessman said. "Ever since, I've been priming myself for this tournament."

Stanger and Lewis were the only golfers below par for two rounds. Tied at 143, one over par, were Richard Fehr and Tom Pernice Jr. Brad Faxon, Chris Perry, Billy Andrade, Eric Levi Johnson and Kevin Dillen tied at 144.

Johnson had Wednesday's best round, a 2-under 70 at The Country Club. Four players were one under par there. No one broke par Wednesday at Charles River.

Sims just wants to talk with Ford

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Detroit running back Billy Sims says his familiar No. 20 will be in the Lions' backfield in their National Football League opener against the Chicago Bears a week from Sunday — IF.

If Lions' owner William Clay Ford will meet personally with Sims, the star halfback will end his holdout and report for practice, Sims said Wednesday.

Whether the Lions' owner will agree to such a meeting, however, is unclear. A club spokesman said Ford would meet with Sims if club lawyers gave their approval. However, Ted Nash, the Lions' attorney, said that his opinion in the matter had not been sought.

Sims, who already has broken many of the Lions' rushing records in only two NFL seasons, was escorted into a crowded news conference at a hotel in suburban Detroit by Lions Coach Monte Clark and the entire Detroit offensive line.

Tackle Keith Dorney said the players and coaches wanted Sims to know they were behind him, then the players and coach left.

Sims signed a four-year contract paying him $1.24 million in salary and bonuses. But the fourth-year salary figure has not been negotiated. Sims says Lions General Manager Russ Thomas agreed verbally to negotiate that now. Thomas says he agreed to negotiate only after the end of the current football season.

It was thought that Wednesday's news conference might have been called to tell Lions' fans that Sims had decided to report. Basically, however, nothing new came out of the puzzling session. Sims' position hasn't changed.

"The only way this is going to get resolved is for me to meet with the top, for Mr. Ford and I to meet," Sims said. "I'm coming back, as soon as I have this meeting with Mr. Ford, because I'm positive he'll give me the assurances I want."

Sims, who already has spoken with Ford by telephone, insisted that a face-to-face meeting would be necessary to get him to report. Sims said such a meeting would allow him to "clear the air and save face."

A meeting had been scheduled for Tuesday, but Ford canceled on the advice of Nash. The Lions claim they are adhering to the July 15 moratorium on individual contract negotiations, an embargo put in place by the NFL Players Association when the union's basic agreement expired with the owners' management council.

'Hill Street Blues' shoo-in for Emmys

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking for a sure thing? Bet your local patsy that somebody from "Hill Street Blues" will win an Emmy for best supporting actor when the awards are handed out Sept. 19.

It's a lock. All five nominees in this category come from NBC's classy cop show: Taurean Blacque (Neal Washington), Michael Conrad (Phil Esterhaus), Charles Haid (Andy Renko), Michael Warren (Bobby Hill) and Bruce Weitz (Mick Belker).

This is another example of how "Hill Street," which received 21 Emmy nominations, is exceptional. Most dramatic series are star vehicles. Tom Selleck is "Magnum, P.I." Jack Klugman is "Quincy." William Shatner is "T.J. Hooker."

The supporting casts in these shows are not memorable. They may be moaners, cynics or cheerful helpers, but they never get to develop as characters. They serve primarily as foils for the main man, or because it wouldn't look good to have Magnum always talking to himself.

But "Hill Street" is a true ensemble show of 14 living, screaming and kicking characters. Executive Producer Steven Bochco says only Capt. Frank Furillo, played by Daniel J. Travanti, is indispensable.

The acting on "Hill Street" certainly contributes to its quality, but so does the writing. Characters who are credible and identifiable need to be nurtured on paper before becoming real on screen.

And, more than anything else, that's what sets "Hill Street Blues" apart from the rest of the TV world, making the program a good bet to win its second consecutive Emmy as best dramatic series.

No other show can spur cocktail party conversation about the qualities and quirks of its characters. These players are real people on film, receiving loyalty, compassion and understanding from their viewers.

Two other "Hill Street" players were singled out for Emmy nominations: Barbara Bosson (Fay Furillo) and Betty Thomas (Lucy Bates) for supporting actress.

Each day, crews from ABC, CBS and NBC trek up into the Santa Ynez Mountains and focus powerful lenses down on Reagan's ranch, about 2½ miles away, hoping for a picture of the president horseback riding or doing ranch chores.

The competition for the closest shot has been gradually escalating with the arrival of more and more powerful equipment on each Reagan vacation.

CBS cameraman Greg Amadon said the network was renting the lens, rated at a maximum 40,000 millimeters, for $600 a week from a company in San Francisco.

On a recent clear morning, CBS was able to zoom in on the president walking from his ranch house to his stables. Viewers saw the president brushing down his horse and riding away.

The CBS pictures are so good that ABC producer Leo Meidlinger said he is thinking about using a similar lens on future trips.

NBC producer Jim Lee said his crew's lens, while not as big as the one used by CBS, is so powerful that it can't be used at full strength because heat waves and haze distort the picture. ABC and CBS have a similar problem, and it shows up with a wavy picture on the news.

"It offends my sensitivity to privacy," admits CBS producer Susan Zirinsky. However, she argues Reagan gave up his right to privacy when he ran for president.

Even so, she said the crews stay on the mountain long enough only to get a shot of Reagan's activity, usually four or five hours a day, and are not camped out at the observation post around the clock.

The networks' lens and camera equipment stood underneath a tent on the mountaintop to shield it from the sun during the day. At night, all the equipment is protected by a guard who also watches over a microwave transmitting dish.

"I think he thinks it's a little silly," said the official. "It's the same stuff every day. He feels sorry for the guys (cameramen) who have to go up there every day.

A powerful white Arabian thoroughbred named El Alamain has taken over at the ranch as First Horse, replacing Little Man, who died earlier this summer at age 20.

There was concern about El Alamain because he was so spirited that he used to rear up on his back legs and paw the air when he was saddled up, and he caused the other normally good natured horses on the ranch to kick and bite.

However, El Alamain recently underwent surgery transforming him from a stallion to a gelding, and that has made a big difference.

"The president rides El Alamain everyday now," says an aide. "It's calmed down a lot. The president has had no problem with him."

Hockey lover produces winning club in Arizona

He's come to make ice skating and hockey a reality in a seemingly absurd setting — the southwestern desert. And, he's succeeding.

"Whether you're in Chicago or Tucson or Edina, Minn., most of your skating is done indoors on artificial ice," Golembiewski said.

With minimal support and under adverse conditions at best, he has started a hockey club team at the University of Arizona which has won two championships in its first two full seasons.

He played goalie for four years at Illinois Benedictine College before spending parts of two seasons in the St. Louis Blues organization of the National Hockey League. When he didn't make it to the Blues, he decided to teach and coach.

As a coach on both the high school and college level, he says he's had to be "the mother, father, brother, coach, best friend" and motivator.

Golembiewski first visited Tucson in 1973 and fell in love with the desert and mountains. In 1977, as he started on a master's degree at the University of Arizona, he began thinking of Tucson as "a great place to start a hockey team."

His coaching philosophy, he said, is built on "discipline, dedication and sacrifice — and that constant urge to give 110 percent. Give a little more."

"Play your position, don't fight at all," he says. "We body check when we have to. You've got to be in great condition — and we've done it with a 120-foot rink."

The rink they practice on — the only one in town — is about half regulation size. Most of their "home games" have been played in Tempe, though they'll play 12 games in the Tucson Community Center this season.

Golembiewski has taken over operation of the Tucson rink, hoping to instill thoughts of ice skates among a populace keyed to sandals and tank tops.

"I went into coaching to try to prove that American kids can play as well as Canadian," he said. "The thing that used to get me deep in my heart was these kids had no place to go."

He admits he harbored resentment over the favoritism openly given Canadian players in college recruiting. But he added, "The biggest problem with American hockey players is that they haven't had good coaches."

At Arizona, he led the Icecats to a 1979 record of 5-3. In 1980, they joined the Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Hockey Association and posted a 17-1 record, winning the championship, before repeating last year at 12-5-2, flush with recruits from the Midwest.

Golembiewski says that he has one more goal: "I have this desire to be a coach in the NHL — at least an assistant."

But for now, he says, his mind is on Arizona's future. And during the torrid summer, his thoughts are turned toward cooler weather, pads, sticks, pucks and ice.

"Where else should you be if it's 106 degrees and muggy outside than where it's 55 degrees and cool?"

Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, son of the late mayor Richard J. Daley, discusses politics in his Chicago office recently, but refuses to comment on the possibility of his candidacy for mayor of Chicago.

Daley's son considering running for Chicago mayor

CHICAGO (AP) — The RMD buttons are popping up on suit lapels in City Hall. Banners are flying bearing the city's most famous political name. And it appears as if Richard M. Daley is ready to battle for a family legacy — the mayor's office of Chicago.

Daley, 40, son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, is inching toward a public announcement of his candidacy — an event that promises to set the stage for a political donnybrook with a rival who was once his father's protege — Mayor Jane M. Byrne.

Currently the Cook County state's attorney, Daley gave coy assurances for months that he had no intention of seeking the seat of power his father held for 21 years. But recently he acknowledged for the first time he was seriously thinking about running for mayor in 1983 and would make a decision in November.

Political observers say the decision already has been made — and barring some unusual circumstance — the name of Richard M. Daley will be on the ballot.

"I'm sure he's going to run," says Milton Rakove, a political science professor at the University of Illinois-Chicago. "All the signs are there."

One sign was a fund-raiser Tuesday night that Daley's 34-year-old brother William says is designed to raise seed money for a mayoral campaign and finance a poll on the mayoral race. Outside polls taken recently show Daley leading or running neck and neck with Mrs. Byrne.

There are other signs.

Daley has started taking lessons to improve his speaking skills. Banners, buttons and T-shirts with the Daley name are being sported about town. In July, a mysterious banner urging that Daley be drafted for mayor drifted over Mrs. Byrne's Taste of Chicago festival which celebrated the city's diverse ethnic cuisine.

The emergence of Richard M. Daley as a mayoral candidate comes as little surprise to observers who've witnessed a political metamorphosis in Daley since his father died in 1976.

Once considered by some critics as little more than an errand boy in the Legislature, Daley, a former state senator, shed that image by promoting improved mental health and nursing home legislation while in Springfield.

But the old lackluster reputation still serves Daley well, says Don Rose, a political strategist who helped mastermind Mrs. Byrne's campaign.

"The expectations can be so low that even if he's ordinary, people say he's brilliant," said Rose.

Politically, too, Daley carved out his own niche. Instead of relying on support solely from his father's cronies in the regular Cook County Democratic organization, he formed new alliances with independent leaders.

"I think Richie has moved in the direction the old man never did," Rakove said. They've (Daley and his aides) adapted to the times."

And when Daley sought the state's attorney's office in 1980, he ran as an outsider in a bitter primary — smashing the candidate endorsed by the mayor and the once-vaunted party his father dominated for two decades.

The result: Daley has emerged as a tough campaigner, a savvy politician and the candidate most likely to challenge Mrs. Byrne — who faces increasing disenchantment among blacks and liberals, two forces that helped propel her into office.

"That is his No. 1 strength," said Rose. "The fact that he is his father's son has shown up in all the polls. People think well of him without having specifics."

The name has another benefit, says Phil Krone, a political consultant, close friend and Daley supporter. He said if Daley runs, there's no need to announce early because "the only reason politicians do that is to get name recognition."

Strategy is another Daley strength, says Paul McGrath, a former aide to Mrs. Byrne. "Richie and his people are extremely cautious," he said. "They don't do anything that hasn't got a...100 percent chance of success."

Rose agrees, saying Daley "has done a very good job of putting together and maintaining a political organization of his own."

Despite these advantages, various factors could complicate the mayoral race — particularly if there are more than two candidates. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, the powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has been urged to run.

The black community also wants to field a challenger and if a viable candidate enters the fray, most agree it would hurt Daley by siphoning off anti-Byrne votes.

Nationalists try to soften reunification obstacles

By JOHN RODERICK

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The Chinese Nationalists here still dismiss a 3-year-old offer from Peking to negotiate unification of Taiwan with the mainland. But they worry that the outside world will think them unreasonably obstinate and inflexible.

Seeking to soften that picture, Nationalist leaders have shifted ground, moving from initial demands the mainland Chinese government drop communism to a proposal that the principles of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, founder of republican China, serve as a common meeting ground. Under that framework, they suggest, obstacles to reunification will be "reduced naturally with the passage of time."

That phrase was used by Premier Sun Yun-suan on June 10, eight days after President Chiang Ching-kuo had thrice referred to Taiwan as "this bastion of national revival" and vowed to "smash the Chinese Communists peace talks."

Sun was more specific. After proposing unification on the basis of Sun Yat-sen's principles of nationalism, democracy and people's livelihood, he said:

"If the political, economic, social and cultural gaps between the Chinese mainland and free China continue to narrow, the conditions for peaceful reunification can gradually mature."

Even that promise of rapprochement in a vaguely distant future has alarmed some of the 18 million Chinese of Taiwan. The government felt it necessary following the premier's speech to reassure them that talks were not imminent.

In dealing with Peking's campaign — launched Jan.1 1979, the day the United States officially recognized the Communists in Peking — Taiwan confronts a dilemma: how to avoid an image of hard-headedness which could hurt its international prestige while doing nothing to undermine its stability.

The Communists have promised to let Taiwan keep its present political, economic and military system in exchange for unification. It also suggests negotiations on exchanges of mail, people and trade.

Word that talks are to start would almost certainly create a crisis of confidence in the Nationalist regime and touch off an alarming flight of capital and people from the island.

The third party in the reunification tug-of-war is the United States. Peking maintains that if it continues to sell arms to Taiwan, the Nationalists will grow even more obdurate. The Nationalists retort that without

The Reagan administration — friendly to Taiwan but persuaded of Peking's strategic value as a deterrent to the Soviet Union in Asia — announced on Aug.17 continued sales of F-5E fighter planes to Taiwan and a phasing out, in an unspecified future, of all military sales to the Nationalists.

The F-5Es have a range which would allow them to reach Shanghai and Canton on the mainland. The advanced fighters Taiwan wanted have 60 or 70 percent more firepower and would have brought the more distant big cities of Changsha and Wuhan within range.

If the government and the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) cultivate an air of qualified reasonableness on the reunification issue, most Chinese here — Nationalists and Taiwan-born alike — do not.

"Taiwan is the best," says 23-year-old Chen Yuan-dong, a technician with the Silver Arrow Film Studio. Just back from two weeks in Japan where he learned how to develop and print color photos in four hours, he says he read and heard a good deal about the Chinese Communists while there.

"If a vote was taken here tomorrow, a majority would oppose reunification with the Communists," he says. "If the United States wants to maintain security in the Pacific area, it will sell Taiwan advanced fighters." He says Taiwan will have 280 F-5Es by September 1983 compared to 3,000 Chinese Communist fighters of a similar capability.

Frank Wu, publisher of the Independence Evening Post, and another leading opposition leader, says the political situation on the mainland is too uncertain for Taiwan to engage in reunification talks. He fears the Maoist ultra-leftists could make a comeback and repudiate any agreements the moderates of China's current leader, Deng Xiaoping, might make.

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 150 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
