Summer's goodbye

Americans began saying goodbye to summer over this Labor Day weekend, flocking as usual to beaches, parks and campgrounds, while some pursued more exotic diversions, like an antique car race, ponytail contest or sternwheel riverboat regatta. In Boston, where more than a quarter-million students attend colleges and universities, the annual invasion began, with tens of thousands of budding scholars jamming streets with fleets of rented moving trucks. Fifty-thousand door keys were expected to change hands on Sunday alone.

Evans back in jail

GULFPORT, Miss. — Donald Leroy Evans, who claims he killed dozens of people in the United States and Canada, was back in his jail cell Sunday after leading authorities on a fruitless search for bodies in Arizona. Evans, 34, returned Saturday after officials failed to uncover the remains of three women Evans claims he buried in 1985, said Capt. Rick Gaston, warden of the Harrison County jail.

Stamp who's who

WASHINGTON — George Washington is first in war, first in peace and among the first in the hearts of his country's stamp collectors. The nation's first president has appeared on 283 stamps. But he wasn't on the nation's first postage stamp — that honor went to Benjamin Franklin. Washington appeared on stamp No. 2, and since then has been featured on more U.S. stamps than anyone else, including Franklin, a distant second with 122 appearances.

Annual telethon set

LAS VEGAS — Celebrities gathered Sunday for appearances on Jerry Lewis' 26th annual Labor Day telethon to raise money for the battle against muscular dystrophy and other neuromuscular diseases. Telethon officials hoped to surpass last year's record of $44,172,186 in pledges during the 21½-hour show. Ed McMahon signed up for his 26th year as anchor of the show.

Soviet hard-liners might seek political coup

KGB purge stirs new CIA debate

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The dissolution of the Soviet Union and the humiliating purge of the KGB have injected new urgency into the painful debate over the role of the American intelligence services in a world where the communist competition has left the playing field.

Even before the tumult that began in Moscow last month, Congress was forcing the Central Intelligence Agency and the military intelligence agencies to rethink some of their priorities — and even their budgets — to adjust to a declining Soviet military threat.

But at this crucial juncture in history, the world's only superpower is MOSCOW (NYT) — Insurgent politicians warned on Sunday that an emergency national Congress that is to convene today to seek a new formula for reviving the exhausted Soviet political system could provide an opportunity for communist reactionaries to seek a constitutional coup to depose President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Notably, such a warning was issued by Alexander N. Yakovlev, the Gorbachev adviser and party critic who predicted the coup by ranking communist officials two weeks ago.

"The coming congress could itself come out putschist," Yakovlev said on Sunday evening in a television interview in which reformers noted the considerable powers of the Congress and called for it to act only on transitional needs and not on any substantive changes in government.

Labor's clout wanes, ties to party fray

By Peter T. Kilborn
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — For all their exuberance, participants in today's Labor Day parades have rarely had so little to celebrate.

No problem illustrates labor's waning influence better than its failure to join with its historic ally, the Democratic Party, to exploit an issue that both acknowledge could be a runaway vote getter: a declining standard of living for most workers.

Throughout the Reagan-Bush years, most of the nation's families have been losing ground economically, finding it harder to make ends meet, while a minority of families, those with higher incomes and who are primarily Republican, have gained ground.

This coincides with the continuing erosion of labor's membership. Only one worker in six belongs to a union today.

The House majority leader, Richard A. Gephardt, calls falling living standards the "over-arching issue" of the times.

For homeless, empathy turns to intolerance

By Isabel Wilkerson
N.Y. Times News Service

Ten years after the wan face of homelessness first captured the nation's attention, empathy is turning to intolerance as cities impose harsher restrictions on homeless people to reduce their visibility or force them to go out on their own.

New York, Santa Barbara, Calif., and a number of other cities are acting out of both frustration and desperation, pressed by hard times and by a public that has grown increasingly impatient with a problem that has worsened despite the programs aimed at relieving it and previous shows of good will.

Driver loses control, crashes into home

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A 1988 Ford Mustang came to a stop in the kitchen of a northwest home Sunday after the driver, possibly suffering from a heart attack, lost control of the vehicle, police officials at the scene said.

Clarence Michael Trantham, 38, of 2915 Northtown Place, was undergoing tests at Midland Memorial Hospital late Sunday after being transported from the accident scene, hospital officials said.

The maroon-colored car, with a 5.0-liter engine, was estimated to have been traveling about 60 mph when it crashed into the back of the 2901 Goddard Place residence about 5 p.m., police said.

According to witnesses, the northbound car was stopped at an intersection on Whitney Drive at Moss Avenue, police said. The car engine revved followed by the sound of an explosion, witnesses told police.

But there was no explosion. The sound came from the car crashing into the closed garage door, police said.

From the intersection, the vehicle passed a house then jumped the curb on the left side of the roadway before striking the house, police said.

The car went into the garage, crashed through a door to a utility room and stopped in the kitchen and partially in the living room.

No one was home. Trantham was seen slumped over, holding his chest, witnesses told police. Trantham reportedly has a history of cardiac problems, officials said.

The wheels of the car continued to turn after the vehicle stopped. The stench of burned rubber filled the air for about an hour.

A crowd of about 25 watched as police and emergency crews worked the accident.

Thurman Noland and his son, Craig, 12, arrived home — the accident scene — about 30 minutes later. They had been at the mall.

Willie Nelson, IRS hope for a 'Tapes' smash hit

■ 'It'll sell a lot better once it hits the stores,' country-singer says.

By Allison Leigh Cowan
N.Y. Times News Service

Since Willie Nelson's "Who'll Buy My Memories? (The IRS Tapes)" went on sale in June, it has sold only 160,000 copies. Under Nelson's unusual arrangement with the government, the collection of 25 songs must sell at least 4 million copies if it is to erase the singer-songwriter's tax obligations.

"You got to be positive," Nelson said in an telephone interview last week. "It's not unheard of. I could sell three million albums. I've done it before."

He hopes sales will improve when the collection is available in music stores; it is sold now only through phone orders advertised mostly on late-night television.

Disabled anchorwoman in dispute with talk radio station about pregnancy

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Aaron James Lampley was only a few hours old when a local radio station dedicated a second program to the circumstances of his birth.

Last week's show on KFI-AM refueled a dispute that pitted the station against activists for the disabled and raised questions about freedom of speech and society's treatment of the disabled.

Aaron was born Wednesday with ectodactyly, a hereditary condition in which the bones of the feet and hands are fused. His mother, KCBS-TV anchorwoman Bree Walker Lampley, also has the syndrome and knew the child had faced a 50 percent chance of inheriting it.

Her other child, a daughter, also has the disability.

KFI had outraged Mrs. Walker Lampley and advocates for the disabled with a July 22 call-in show in which host Jane Norris asked if it was fair for the anchorwoman to give birth when the child had a "very good chance of having a disfiguring disease."

SOVIET: Yeltsin promises Gorbachev vote protection in Congress

chase Gorbachev president in the first place and has the power — theoretically, at least, in these highly uncertain times — to vote him out.

This can only be done through an elaborate impeachment procedure, involving a two-thirds vote of the congress on findings that the president violated the constitution. While such an action by the Congress would undoubtedly infuriate the public, the fears of insurgents that the party is not yet done fighting remain considerable.

But Boris N. Yeltsin, the president of the Russian republic, which holds sway over half the nation's population and economic power, promised to use his republic's votes to protect Gorbachev in the congress from any such challenge.

"We will defend him tomorrow," he declared after a meeting with the visiting British prime minister, John Major, at which the Russian leader said he stressed that Gorbachev clearly "is not the same man he was before the coup."

As the nation slid deeper into political and economic crisis, Gorbachev appealed to Major, representing the seven leading industrial democracies, for economic help for his crumbling Soviet superstate.

"Now is the time for the West to support us," said the beleaguered Soviet president.

Gorbachev, facing the likelihood of American recognition of the Baltic republics today, shifted to a more conciliatory tone on the issue himself.

In an interview with CNN, he was less insistent than in the past on elaborate procedures for settling various territorial and political problems, although he said this issue will be up to the Congress. If independence is "the definitive will and intention" of any republic, he added, "then I am sure we must take that into account and agree with that."

Apart from whatever fresh intrigues might be attempted against Gorbachev, the congress will be dealing with the larger issue of how to begin moving the nation toward political reconstruction.

tion, an issue bolstered by rising public pressure for fast action.

The search for some new national government formula continued during the day at the Kremlin, where Gorbachev met with 11 of the 15 republic leaders.

There was no immediate report of a consensus approach among the republics, which have been busy lately with separate independence declarations to secure bargaining rights in the creation of whatever might emerge as a post-communist political system.

"We now need measures, actions which return the whole of our society to its normal channel," Gorbachev said in the CNN interview. "We have enough problems to solve. The people expect solutions."

The special congress is itself shaping up as an unpredictable factor in the volatile political situation following the failed Kremlin coup and the collapse of Soviet communism.

At the very least, the talk of a constitutional coup was a measure of the anxiety that grips the nation as the old Soviet system dissolves.

Insurgent critics of the party have been warning that the congress, elected two years ago in a semi-democratic fashion that left it heavy with communist loyalists, might use the emergency to attempt a constitutional stand against the wave of anti-communist reform that is sweeping the nation.

Concern that hard-liners might try to rally the Congress to defend the party's old system of government patronage and privilege was expressed by Nikolai N. Vorontsov, the former environmental minister who was one of the few Gorbachev Cabinet members to immediately oppose the coup.

"The next attempt is going to take place at the Congress," Vorontsov predicted in a television interview. "It's going to be an attempt to carry out a constitutional coup, to express a vote of non-confidence in the president and to oust him."

Gorbachev, who in the past has made a strategic habit of threatening to quit his post, reiterated on Sunday in the CNN interview that he considers it his obligation to stay on unless the idea of union itself is totally abandoned.

Yeltsin has been trying to tailor a new national formula rooted in the republics' economic interdependence, with a redesigned political union loosely flowing from that. Other republic leaders, speaking to home audiences in the first flush of their independence declarations, have talked of ending the union in favor of a commonwealth.

Gorbachev told CNN that economic alliance was a minimal requirement, but that he still preferred some form of political union, although one with far more sovereignty for the republics than might have been the case before the coup attempt.

"What the congress will hear is not the views of the president, but the collective views of the republics," Gorbachev said.

Gorbachev appeals to Major for aid

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev appealed to Prime Minister John Major of Britain on Sunday for economic help for the crumbling Soviet Union.

"Now is the time for the West to support us," the Soviet president told the visiting Major, who is the current chairman of the Group of Seven leading industrial democracies.

The British leader is making a flying visit to try to chart a course for Western economic diplomacy as centralized Soviet power continues to flow out to the country's constituent republics, eager for independence from Moscow.

The Russian republic's president, Boris N. Yeltsin, who has emerged from the failed hard-line coup last month as the rallying figure for the reformers in Moscow, told the British leader in a separate meeting that Gorbachev had become a more enthusiastic reformer since his brush with political extinction.

"I got the clear impression today that they are both aware of the need to work with one another for the Soviet Union," Major later observed of the two men.

Major's mission here is to recommend to the United States and the rest of the Group of Seven whether to move faster to support Soviet democracy with economic aid than the rich countries thought when they last met with Gorbachev in July, but the upshot seemed to be a finding that the time was still not right for vast infusions of Western money.

While it is clear that the Soviet people have chosen the path of freedom, Major said, it is still not so clear how they intend to head toward a market economy — together as one country, or separately as 15.

Major said Sunday night that he had urged Gorbachev and Yeltsin to name an individual or a group to work closely with the International Monetary Fund, to begin carrying out its advice on how to transform the Soviet economy to a market system. In July, the Group of Seven recommended a special restricted form of membership for the Soviet Union in the IMF.

Progress is being made, Gorbachev said. He asserted that his talks with the republics' leaders were moving toward agreement on continuation of joint armed forces for the whole country, on a common currency, and on what he called a "common economic space," said a British official who briefed reporters on Major's talks with him on Sunday.

The British leader was also urgently seeking word on how the Soviet nuclear arsenal would remain under control if the country continued to split apart.

"I got assurances from both President Gorbachev and President Yeltsin that utmost care would be taken to insure strict central control," he said Sunday night.

When the Group of Seven — the United States, Japan, Canada, Britain, France, Germany and Italy — met with Gorbachev in London before the failed coup, it decided to hold back large-scale economic aid to the country until it was clear which way it was heading economically. But in his meeting Sunday night with Yeltsin, Major was told that the equation had changed.

As communism collapses, Cuba must go it alone

MIAMI (NYT) — On Thursday, when Cuba's Marxist-Leninist government broke a 10-day silence over the political upheaval in the Soviet Union, it was to announce to the world that it would never veer from its "revolutionary and scientific" path, even after what it called the failure of communist experiments elsewhere.

The same day, the Communist Party's official newspaper said in a front-page editorial: "Whatever happens in the Soviet Union, we will not move away from the path we have chosen. We will continue with our independent, Cuban, socialist line."

Despite this defiant tone, however, experts on the island's affairs say that the breakup of the Soviet Union, Cuba's principal benefactor, will give the government of President Fidel Castro new challenges that it may not be able to surmount without dramatic economic and political reforms of its own.

As the clouds of change over the Soviet Union grew more ominous in recent months, Castro had begun to speak of a "zero option," in which he envisioned Cuba's survival cut off from its traditional supporters and living almost alone in the world.

For three decades, through generous economic aid packages and elaborate barter arrangements, Moscow has provided Cuba with almost all its oil and three-quarters of its other goods — from much food and medicine to machinery and raw materials. Suddenly, as the Soviet republics sort out their non-communist future, the reliability of receiving these supplies has been thrown into doubt.

"If it turns out that they are forced to swim without the Soviet life preserver, there is little doubt but that they will drown," a United States official who monitors Cuban affairs said. "It would only be a question of time."

In the last year, partly in response to growing Soviet economic disorder, Cuba has introduced a battery of unpopular austerity measures that have included a major expansion of the country's Spartan rationing system, cuts in public transportation, factory closings, shortened working hours, and the use of bicycles as the principal means of mass transportation.

While Cuban office workers are now rotated through rural cooperatives in an effort to achieve agricultural self-sufficiency, housewives in Havana and other cities spend long, hot hours waiting in line for meager rations of milk, bread, and eggs. For most, meat and fresh fish disappeared long ago.

Castro's bleak "zero option" talk has emboldened human rights groups and political dissidents to make more direct challenges to a system that many Cubans see as failing.

Armenia seizes assets; hostages taken in enclave

YEREVAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Armenian officials on Sunday supported a U.S. congresswoman's call for U.N. peacekeeping forces in the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh, where fighters have seized 25 hostages.

The proposal came from visiting Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Cal. "I'm afraid if we do nothing, we could have the makings of something with very serious consequences," she said. Armenian Prime Minister Vazgen Manukyan called the idea "brilliant."

"May God hear your words," Garlen Petrossian told Boxer in the refugee-laden city of Kirovakan, which she toured later. Petrossian heads a committee formed to take care of refugees fleeing violence along the Armenian-Azerbaijani border.

Boxer was on a fact-finding mission in the tense southern region two weeks after a failed Kremlin coup triggered a rush toward independence by Soviet republics.

The developments raised new questions about disputed areas like Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian enclave within Azerbaijan that is claimed by Armenia.

There was no immediate reaction to Boxer's proposal from the Azerbaijani side.

Six ethnic Azerbaijanis and four Armenians have been taken hostage in Nagorno-Karabakh in the last two days, the Tass news agency said Sunday. Their capture brought the number of hostages held by each side to 17 Armenians and eight Azerbaijanis, Tass said.

It said interior ministries of both republics were trying to negotiate an end to the hostage standoff.

Refugees in Kirovakan, about 60 miles northwest of Yerevan, said Azerbaijanis continued to harass Armenians in the border region. Aznibe Gabrilian, choking back sobs, told how five Azerbaijani police stopped her car and beat her, saying they were getting even for outrages committed by Armenian men against Azerbaijani women.

Ethnic and territorial differences flared into open violence in 1988 between predominantly Muslim Azerbaijan and Armenia, whose residents are mostly Christian.

Armenian Vice President Babken Ararktsyan said 76 Armenians have been killed since May.

Bloodshed continues, as peace prospects pick up

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Yugoslav presidency and the country's feuding republics on Monday accepted a European Community plan designed to stop months of fierce fighting among Croats, Serbs and the army.

It was unclear, however, whether the latest plan would succeed in ending months of bloodshed in this troubled nation. Earlier attempts at truces have failed.

"The presidency accepts the declaration of the EC ministers," a spokeswoman told reporters gathered outside the conference room where the eight-man presidency had met.

The plan envisages an international peace conference on Yugoslavia and the dispatch of foreign cease-fire monitors to the battle-torn republic of Croatia. Before implementation, it had to be accepted by leaders of Yugoslavia's six republics, also gathered in the federal capital.

It was approved 7-1 by the presidency, with Montenegro, Serbia's ally, opposed, the spokeswoman said.

The presidency began the closed-door session only hours after the arrival of Dutch Foreign Minister Hans Van den Broek, current president of the 12-nation European Community, who was carrying the peace plan.

Although cautious, Van den Broek said before the talks that a cease-fire and truce monitoring plan could be signed within hours.

"We have received sufficient positive indications that make us hopeful that we can conclude this agreement" with all parties, he said.

Serbia was the last holdout, accepting the EC plan Saturday. But even as the peace process was going on, so was the bloodshed. Five people were killed Sunday in renewed fighting, Croatian officials said in Zagreb.

Meanwhile, all but one of Croatia's airports reopened Sunday. The republic's airspace was closed a day earlier when army jets intercepted a Ugandan plane that reportedly carried contraband arms to Slovenia, for transshipment to Croatia.

The announcement of Serbian acceptance of the EC peace plan was made Saturday by Serbian Foreign Minister Vladislav Jovanovic. Croatia and the federal government had agreed to it earlier.

Serbian acceptance came a day before an EC ultimatum to comply elapsed. The EC said it would take unspecified action against Serbia, the nation's largest republic, if it didn't accept the plan.

Zulu supporters make revenge rampage

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Zulu supporters of the Inkatha Freedom Party shot and hacked their way through a neighborhood Sunday, killing at least two people in what Inkatha members said was a revenge attack.

Scores of Zulu warriors, wearing their distinctive red headbands, rampaged through the Jabulani section of Soweto with guns, spears and sticks.

An Associated Press photographer saw two men who had been shot to death and a third with hack wounds to the head.

Members of Inkatha, a Zulu-based movement, said the fighters were avenging a Saturday night attack on the Mshenguville shantytown, where three people were killed and shacks of Inkatha supporters were burned.

A police report, released Sunday morning, said officers found three bodies in the Mshenguville camp killed in overnight clashes. Police did not say who was responsible. The squalid camp has been the site of repeated faction fights. Supporters of Inkatha and the African National Congress have been waging virtual war for the past five years, leaving thousands dead.

There was no evidence that the victims of Sunday's attacks by Inkatha supporters had been involved in the previous night's violence.

The Zulu attackers had left a demonstration Sunday where some 10,000 Inkatha backers gathered to commemorate victims of recent township violence.

Singapore's leader shaken by vote

SINGAPORE (NYT) — The prime minister of Singapore, who campaigned as the politician to lead this prosperous Asian city-state away from authoritarian government, spoke on Sunday of broad changes in the way the nation is governed after his governing party failed to achieve the resounding victory it sought in this weekend's general election.

His People's Action Party won the election by what would be considered an overwhelming majority almost anywhere else in the world, taking 77 of the 81 seats in Parliament.

But it is a sign of the party's tight hold over so much of the life of the 2.7 million people of Singapore that those results were considered a defeat for Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong. The party's overall share of the vote, about 61 percent, was down from its 62 percent in the last general election, in 1988.

"In my view, life cannot go on as before," Goh said, appearing shaken at an early morning news conference called to discuss the election results. "The solid endorsement that I wanted has not come."

His political opponents did not dispute Goh's evaluation of the results, leaving the same questions to be pondered on both sides: will Singapore, with one of the world's freest and most vibrant economies, ever be able to secure an equal degree of political liberty, or will Goh's party see the election results as an opportunity to retreat from even the appearance of greater openness? Do the election results mean new repression, or new tolerance?

Opponents say they fear that Goh and his party, perhaps intentionally misreading what the voters tried to say with their ballots, will try to impose a new brand of authoritarianism on Singapore.

Hong Kong battles wild monkeys

HONG KONG (NYT) — In a hilly patch of woods on the very edge of a crowded urban neighborhood here, 700 wild monkeys have created their own unlikely little kingdom, where the young learn not only to swing through the treetops and pick tender bamboo shoots, but also how to cross a concrete bridge and open a pop-top can of Tsingtao beer.

These animals, which zoologists believe are largely descended from abandoned pet monkeys, live a startlingly urban life in the small wood that Hong Kong residents now call Monkey Hill.

Today, their very success in the face of the rigors of urban life threatens their survival, as neighbors complain that the monkeys have grown too numerous and too audacious to be allowed their freedom. A zoologist called in by the World Wide Fund for Nature concedes that in the end the only answer to the problems of Monkey Hill may be to trap and kill some of the more aggressive monkeys.

"Something must be done," an elderly Chinese woman said. "I cannot leave my house to shop, to walk, without carrying a stick to keep away the monkeys."

Indeed, the animals have become so accustomed to receiving food from admiring visitors to Monkey Hill that when they need more, they steal.

Quick, agile and intelligent, the monkeys have learned to travel beyond the green trees of the Kowloon reservoirs, leaping onto nearby apartment balconies, darting across the roofs of houses, even dancing along telephone wires in search of food.

Neighbors say the monkeys, which range from tiny babies to 30-year-old, 20-pound adults, snatch food from children, raid their small gardens and even grab whole bags of groceries from passing shoppers.

Students at the Sir Robert Black School of Education near Monkey Hill complain that the animals menace them as they walk across the concrete pedestrian bridges that span busy Tai Po Road.

Subway disaster needs answers

Broken bodies and twisted steel in the Lexington Avenue subway tunnel in New York City last week gave awful evidence of the terrifying instant when routine travel exploded into a fatal accident. Now, in the aftermath of five deaths and some 171 injuries, an anxious public waits for answers.

The cause is still unknown but three apparent facts reverberate: An empty crack vial was found in the motorman's cab and a blood test showed alarming results... the train had reportedly been operated erratically before the crash, speeding and missing stations... earlier this year the motorman was suspended for a speeding violation.

There may turn out to be more to it, but those facts alone warrant rapid official reaction on several points. The first is to test workers in sensitive positions for drugs. Peter Stangl, chairman of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, spoke up promptly last Wednesday in favor of random drug testing.

That was mandated by the federal Urban Mass Transit Agency until a federal court ruled it had to have express legal authorization. An effort to provide that authority failed to pass earlier this year.

The subway tragedy should give grim momentum to a new legislative effort. And there may, in fact, be more effective ways to assure safety. The American Civil Liberties Union, for instance, urges the use of "performance testing" — daily electronic monitoring of employees' capability.

The motorman's earlier violation creates an obligation for the MTA to offer an accounting of disciplinary procedures. While drug-testing may raise constitutional issues, there can be no objection to rigorous investigation of all operating-rule violations. But for the moment, pending elaboration of these and other points, New Yorkers are left to share the shock and mourn the pain of the victims; so many victims.

Interior minister bit hand that fed him

WASHINGTON — The suicide of Boris Pugo should have sobered Mikhail Gorbachev more than other Soviets. Pugo was Gorbachev's interior minister who betrayed him and became part of the Gang of Eight that tried to overthrow Gorbachev. When the coup collapsed, Pugo apparently figured death was the only way out for him.

Anderson

Gorbachev appointed Pugo to replace a moderate, allowed him to run roughshod over the Baltic republics and expected that would appease Pugo and other hardliners. Of course, it didn't. Pugo had tasted blood and was not publicly taken to task by Gorbachev for ordering brutal attacks against unarmed nationalist demonstrators in the Baltics. Emboldened, Pugo decided to bite the hand that fed him. There was no mourning in the Baltics when Pugo took his own life, unless it was by those who would like to have done it for him. He was the man in the central government who commanded the ruthless Black Berets, and he got the job after serving as the head of the KGB in Latvia.

The Black Berets are trained as commandos in the regular Soviet military (most of them in the Navy) and then turned over to the Interior Ministry to keep the domestic population in line.

Pugo quickly identified them as having the potential to become his personal band of thugs, ready to carry out the political agenda of the hardliners to the extent that he could get away with it without alarming Gorbachev. It didn't take much to convince the Black Berets that they had every right to kill and maim other citizens of the Soviet Union. Pugo pumped them up by telling them they were fighting "fascists" and enemies of the nation. He lavished gifts on them (consumer items that they couldn't find in the stores), paid them well and praised them generously.

Pugo was determined to put down the rebellious Baltic republics. Soviet army paratroopers drew first blood in Vilnius, Lithuania, when they used tanks and guns to crush and shoot unarmed protesters trying to protect the Lithuanian TV and radio tower.

Seven days later, Pugo's Black Berets followed the example and shot their way into a Latvian government building in Riga. They took hostages and opened fire on a crowd of protesters, killing five. Pugo was in his office that night, and knowledgeable intelligence sources have consistently maintained that he directed the attack. But Pugo said he knew nothing about it.

To his shame, Gorbachev publicly absolved the Red Army of its actions in Lithuania and the Black Berets of their attack in Latvia. Gorbachev agreed with a whitewash investigation which claimed that the victims in Vilnius, the ones who were run over by tanks, were actually killed in traffic accidents or were stuffed under the tanks by other Lithuanians who were trying to create martyrs.

As for the Black Berets, Gorbachev lamely said he would investigate the matter, and he never did. In fact, he stood by silently while the Black Berets repeatedly raided border posts set up by Lithuanian and Latvian officials who were trying to assert the sovereignty of their countries and stop the smuggling of Baltic products into the rest of the Soviet Union.

The border posts have been routinely burned by Black Berets since January. The unarmed men in those posts are beaten, and sometimes stripped naked to humiliate them.

From Gorbachev, there was only silence. Getting away with murder in the Baltics gave Pugo the courage to join the coup plotters and try to overthrow the president he had come to see as weak, wishy-washy and vulnerable.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Diplomats overlook advantage to disunion

WASHINGTON — I've been out of touch for a few weeks; anything happen while I was on vacation? No Rip Van Winkle could be more delighted: Communism is dead. The Soviet empire is breaking up. This is a glorious moment for human freedom.

Safire

We should savor that moment, thank God, NATO, the heroic dissidents in Russia and the internal empire, and the two-generation sacrifice of the American people to protect themselves and the world from despotic domination.

We should seize the moment, too, to urge our new comrades in freedom to use counter-coup momentum to destroy the institutions and bring down the elite that oppressed them.

Mikhail Gorbachev is still half-measuring: the KGB chief has been arrested and some top brass demoted, while its troops are reassigned to the Defense Ministry and much fuss is made over the tearing down of the statue of Iron Feliks Dzerzhinsky.

But that means the secret police is intact, awaiting the moment for new leaders and a reassignment of assets to seize power. Free people need no secret police; the KGB's entire budget should be seized and used to buy food to help people get through the winter. Unpaid agents and bureaucrats will have an incentive — hunger — to go out into the fields and bring in the harvest.

Why isn't the president of the United States on the air welcoming the Russians, Ukrainians and all to the free world, urging the dissolution of the police and cutbacks in the army, showing the path to prosperity?

Part of the answer: He does not want to make another foreign-affairs mistake. This spring President Bush blundered grievously in the giveback of Iraq; this summer, in his disarming "Chicken Kiev speech," he lectured Ukrainians against self-determination, foolishly placing Washington on the side of Moscow centralism and against the tide of history.

The rest of the answer is that Bush and his advisers have long feared the breakup of the empire that calls itself a union. The scare words are "disunion, dismemberment, disintegration." The fear is not irrational: tight central control of the Soviet nuclear command "football" is in our vital national interest.

But the strategic advantage to an end to imperialism is compelling.

The moral advantage to disunion is overlooked by diplomats hung up on tidiness. Personal freedom is often aligned with self-determination; diverse cultures that want to assert independence should have America's support, not finger-wagging at ethnic hatreds to conceal our preference for foreign central control.

The argument is moot; disunion is a fact. Democrats from Bill Bradley in Washington to Gary Hart in Moscow are spelling out serious responses, while Bush, in a policy paralysis he calls prudence, is barking "not so fast" from a golf cart.

Downtown maze, no drive in park

Going to the post office to mail a package and then eating lunch at my favorite spot sounded like such simple tasks. Today, however, I was reminded why one really should not even attempt such atrocities in downtown Midland unless one has plenty of time and a significant amount of change in his pocket.

When you're driving south on Main Street you can easily wind up in a left-turn-only lane, with no chance to get in the right lane, where it suddenly changes from four lanes to two about a block before you get to the post office. Oh well, just circle the block and try to do better next time around.

Now here we are at the post office, except that it's on the left-hand side of the street and you can't turn left into the parking area. We can turn right on Missouri, right again on the next street, then left onto Wall, skip the next street because it's one-way going the wrong direction, left on Colorado after waiting through three red lights for a break in traffic, left back onto Missouri for three blocks, and then one final left now heading north on Main; then turn right and park right in front of the post office. How convenient. Great fun, too, especially if you like mazes. Somebody really put a lot of thought and foresight into planning this.

Now it's time for lunch. Why are all the parking places in front of the court house vacant? All I have to do is park and walk across the street, and it looks like all the other parking spaces are either loading zones, leased parking, or already taken anyway. Trying to find someplace to get change for a dollar in order to put two quarters in the parking meter really isn't that much of a hassle; it just seems that way.

One hour and two minutes late, I arrive at my car just in time to be personally handed a citation for overtime parking. Parking has now cost more than lunch (excluding the tip, of course). I guess that's only fair, since it did take longer. At least the maze leading to the post office was free.

I can hardly wait until the next time I've saved up some extra money and accrued enough vacation time to go back to the post office and eat lunch at my favorite spot in downtown Midland.

It's 'calling kettle black' by fining for weedy lots

This letter is written mostly to anyone who saw the news program Friday evening (Aug. 23) regarding the recent rains and the fact that lot owners had not been keeping the lots mowed. The city was going to fine those that they had to come out and mow.

My question: Has anyone bothered to look along the railroad tracks that run parallel to Industrial? Has anyone bothered to look at South Midkiff Street before it goes over Interstate 20? Has anyone bothered to look at the interstate? Has anyone bothered to look at the county roads that run up to the interstate? It is getting where you have to get out into traffic to see around the weeds to see if any traffic is coming!

My other question: Who fines the city, the county, the highway department for not doing their mowing? After all, isn't the city "calling the kettle black" by not mowing their grass either?

Just wondering!

CHARLEY REESE

Don't be conned by exaggerated crimes

The American people are being misled and duped by exaggerated claims of rampant crime. The fear caused by these exaggerated claims is fed further by the incessant fictional violence served up to the public in movie houses and on television screens.

Reese

There are many reasons for this exaggeration. Law enforcement people like bigger budgets, and more crime is a good justification. Journalists love melodrama, and crime stories are perfect melodrama. Politicians love to demagogue, and crime is a good issue for demagoguing (a politician can be against crime without offending anyone, a rare issue).

There are more sinister reasons, I think, that involve people's lust for power. One way to get people to give up their liberty is to scare them so that they think the alternative to a vast increase in police power is violence and chaos.

Let's look at the facts and you see how you are being bamboozled. The FBI reports 23,438 people were murdered in 1990. Measured as murders per hundred thousand people, the number is 9, and that rate is four percent lower, I said lower, than in 1981.

So 9 people per 100,000 were murdered in 1990. Wow. Terrible, huh? Well, flu and pneumonia killed 31.3 people per hundred thousand in 1989 (latest year statistics are available). Liver diseases killed 10.6; diabetes, 16.2; cancer, 198.3; cardiovascular diseases, 394.5; and accidents, 38.9.

Compared to the 23,438 homicides, 22,500 people were killed in accidents in their own homes and 49,900 were killed in motor vehicle accidents.

You've heard all the propaganda from Handgun Control. Well, 9,923 people were murdered with handguns, but 12,400 were killed in falls. Perhaps we should ban gravity or impose a seven-day waiting period before delivery of a stepladder or a second-story in a house.

The FBI has no statistics for those famous assault rifles, but under the general heading of rifles, which could be any kind, they were used in 743 homicides, which put them well behind old-fashioned knives, which were used in 3,503 homicides; blunt objects, which dispatched 1,075 people; and bare hands and feet, which were used to kill 1,112 people.

Now compare those numbers with all the bull you've read, seen and heard about assault rifles and machine guns — how these terrible weapons have to be taken off the streets because they are being used to slaughter people. Oh? Where are they? Not in the FBI report, the single authoritative source of crime statistics. Where they are is on TV and in the movies because special effects people love machine guns.

You've probably heard and seen TV stories and TV discussions about how black youth are slaughtering black youth and what a God-awful horrible crisis this is. You certainly get the impression from TV and other journalistic accounts that most black neighborhoods are free fire zones.

Again, what are the facts? The facts are that in 1990, out of 26 million American blacks, 971 black youth under 18 were homicide victims, just a hair more than the 942 white youths under 18 who were homicide victims. Compare those numbers to 4,600 people who drowned, the 4,400 who died in fires, 3,900 who choked to death on food, and the 5,600 who were accidentally poisoned.

You are being conned and misled about crime. People are inflicting you with unnecessary fear to satisfy their greed for budget increases, their lust for sensationalism, their yen to reduce people's liberty, with perhaps a little racism thrown in.

I checked a jail census in my town where we are supposed to be awash in a crime crisis. On the night I checked, out of 153 people brought to jail, only 13 were accused of serious crimes; only 15 were charged with drug-related crimes and most of them were possession of marijuana. The largest category were traffic related. Fifty-four people were booked either for driving under the influence, driving while their license was suspended or driving without a license. The rest were petty stuff, from petty theft to camping to worthless checks.

Don't let them con you.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Libertarians see year of growth

CHICAGO (AP) — Society digests new ideas in three phases, says Libertarian Party member Jon Kalb. First they're ridiculed, then debated, and finally accepted. The Libertarians believe they have gotten past the ridicule phase.

"I think we're in the phase where our ideas are starting to be debated and I think people who consider our ideas with an open mind are starting to accept them," Kalb said at the party's presidential nominating convention, which continued through Sunday.

Acceptance is the most Libertarians dare hope for in 1992; they acknowledge that their presidential nominee, Andre Marrou, hardly stands a chance.

With the Democrats in disarray 14 months before the election, President Bush looks like a shoo-in for another term, said delegate Dottie-Lou Brokaw of Woodstock, N.Y. "To say otherwise would be silly," she said.

But like many members of the country's third-largest political party, Brokaw was confident of winning converts next year.

The Libertarians hope to be on the ballot in every state, and say they expect to get a lot of anti-Bush votes from people who see no significant difference between the GOP and the Democrats.

The platform of the 20-year-old Libertarian Party is radically different from those of the major parties. Libertarians advocate personal freedom and voluntary cooperation. They oppose taxes and regulation and see national defense as the federal government's main function.

Several convention speakers said they favored making all drugs legal, under the Libertarian view that the government should let people make their own mistakes.

Many Libertarians find their individualist philosophy defined in the works of author Ayn Rand, whose best-known novels are "The Fountainhead" and "Atlas Shrugged."

The four-day convention was attended by 453 delegates from all 50 states — mostly white men in their 30s and 40s.

Gary D. McGath of Penacook, N.H., said he was splitting his time between the Libertarian convention and the World Science Fiction Convention at another hotel.

"There's a lot of overlap between the Libertarians and the sci-fi people," he said.

The Libertarian Party, founded in 1971 in Colorado, met its greatest success in the 1980 election when a ticket headed by Edward Clark received 921,000 votes.

Evans back in jail cell

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — Donald Leroy Evans, who claims he killed dozens of people in the United States and Canada, was back in his jail cell Sunday after leading authorities on a fruitless search for bodies in Arizona.

Evans, 34, returned Saturday after officials failed to uncover the remains of three women Evans claims he buried in 1985, said Capt. Rick Gaston, warden of the Harrison County jail.

He is scheduled to appear Tuesday in county circuit court for a preliminary hearing on capital murder charges.

Evans, of Galveston, Texas, is accused of killing 10-year-old Beatrice Louise Routh after abducting the homeless girl from a beach park Aug. 1.

He led police her body Aug. 11. She had been strangled after being raped, officials said.

Evans pleaded guilty to a federal kidnapping charge and will be sentenced Oct. 24. The crime carries a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Searchers dug for bodies about 40 miles north of Phoenix, beginning Wednesday and stopping Friday night.

Dummy incident nixed as kidnap

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — Police across Rhode Island were put on alert when a woman reported seeing two women stuff a girl into a car trunk, cover her face with a blanket and drive off.

But the "victim" turned out to be a hairdressing dummy.

About 20 minutes after the witness report Friday, Warwick police stopped 19-year-old Kristen Russell near her home.

"I asked what the matter was," Russell said. "They said: 'Could you please step out and open the trunk.' I was shaking to death. I thought they thought I stole something."

"When they saw what was in the trunk, they just started laughing. They couldn't believe it. And I started laughing, too."

It all began when Russell and her friend, Traci Wrench, went shopping with their two infant daughters. After leaving a store, they opened the car trunk to stow Wrench's baby stroller.

That's when Catharina Baxter, 47, of Warwick glanced over while walking to her car, and decided to call police.

"I saw this big head of hair in the trunk, and it looked just like a little kid," she said. "Then I heard one of them say 'Cover her head.'"

The hair was on a mannequin head that Russell used at beauty school. She asked Wrench to cover the head so the stroller wouldn't damage it.

Jury convicts seven in drug conspiracy

CHICAGO (AP) — A business man and six reputed leaders of the El Rukn street gang were convicted by a federal jury Sunday of taking part in a murderous conspiracy to distribute drugs in Chicago.

"This trial took out the day-to-day street leaders, the most violent people," Assistant U.S. Attorney William Hogan said. "We eliminated the entire upper echelon of the El Rukn organization."

The defendants included millionaire businessman Noah Robinson, half brother of two-time Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson.

This trial was the third of five stemming from the indictments of 65 reputed El Rukn leaders in 1989 that prosecutors say broke the back of the once-powerful street gang. So far, 33 of the 65 have been convicted or pleaded guilty in the case, Hogan said.

Prosecutors say the gang used threats and murder to further its narcotics trade in the city in the mid-1980s.

The jury convicted all seven defendants on most of the serious charges against them, including murder conspiracy, narcotics conspiracy and other racketeering charges.

Robinson and defendant Edgar Cooksey were acquitted of witness tampering charges.

Robinson

All the defendants face life terms without possibility of parole. U.S. District Judge Marvin E. Aspen scheduled sentencing for Dec. 12.

Robinson was convicted, among other charges, of conspiring to kill a business associate and a witness against the El Rukns. He also was convicted on charges he put jailed El Rukn leader Jeff Fort in touch with drug dealers from the East Coast and shared the profits from the deal.

"Robinson gave them a facade of legitimacy," Hogan said. "The El Rukns were one step away from being an organization as difficult to penetrate as the Mafia."

Robinson also was convicted of hiring El Rukns to kill Leroy "Hambone" Barber, a former employee and childhood friend. Robinson is appealing a felony accessory to murder conviction in South Carolina in connection with Barber's slaying.

Jackson has described his relationship with Robinson as strained. He was not at his Chicago home Sunday and his wife declined to comment. Jackson's number in Washington is not listed.

The other defendants were Jeff Boyd, Andrew Craig, Charles Green, Sammy Knox and Felix Mayes.

Defense lawyers said they would appeal the verdicts. Several said their clients were convicted more for their connections with the El Rukns than any specific acts.

Convicted mass killer faces execution Friday

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Donald Henry Gaskins, who has admitted killing 13 people between 1970 and 1975, faces death in the electric chair Friday for blowing up a fellow prisoner.

Gaskins, nicknamed "Pee Wee" and called a "redneck Charlie Manson," and "a master of trickery" by prosecutors and victims' families, was serving 10 life sentences when he was convicted of the 1982 slaying of death row inmate Rudolph Tyner at Central Correctional Institution.

Gaskins stabbed, shot or drowned his free-world victims, burying them in backwoods graves near the rural community of Prospect in the heart of the state's tobacco belt.

A jury sentenced him to die for one of those killings, but the sentence was tossed out when the state's death penalty was ruled unconstitutional.

Gaskins made a bomb that looked like a homemade radio. It blew up when Tyner put it to his ear on Sept. 12, 1982, earning Gaskins another death sentence.

Reform isn't an option for Gaskins, said Dick Harpootlian, who as deputy solicitor prosecuted the case.

"The only time we can relax our vigilance on Pee Wee is when he is in hell," he said. "He's not afraid of prison. But he's really scared of that electric chair."

In a recent interview, Gaskins called electrocution "one of the most malicious, most cold blooded, premeditated murders that there is. It can't be no worse than if I was to sit down and plan to kill somebody."

Defense attorney Jack Swerling said it's ironic Gaskins faces death for killing another man sentenced to die.

Authorities still don't know how Gaskins smuggled plastic explosives into prison to make the bomb. But Gaskins was a prison maintenance man and had access to tools.

He committed the murder for Tony Cimo, whose mother and stepfather had been killed by Tyner during a convenience store robbery.

A 1986 CBS television movie, "Vengeance: The Story of Tony Cimo," detailed Cimo's growing frustration over Tyner's lengthy appeals.

Gaskins recorded phone conversations with Cimo, planning to use the tapes to extort money. When he learned he was a suspect, he recorded reruns of "Hogan's Heroes" over the tapes, hoping to make authorities look foolish.

But investigators were able to extract the conversations to use as evidence.

Gaskins, who is white, said he agreed to kill Tyner because Tyner was black. He said his desire to keep the races separate was behind some of the killings.

Boy dies in sewer pipe

NEW YORK (AP) — A 12-year-old boy tumbled 600 feet to his death Saturday down a water pipe after he and two friends went exploring at a construction site.

Rescuers spent 15 hours trying to reach the boy, winding four miles through sewage pipes at the construction site in New York City's Bronx section.

"He was just badly crushed by the impact on his body," said Jerry Sanford, a fire department spokesman.

Don'te Carroll and two friends entered the pipe Saturday afternoon at a horizontal section and were trapped in a U-shaped portion that bent downward.

The other boys, Anton Dennis and Giovanni Rios, both 12, were rescued before they could slip downward, Sanford said.

"He must have wandered away or continued or got separated," Sanford said. "These kids were completely in the dark."

Using high-powered binoculars, rescuers spotted the boy's bloody body Saturday night in a shallow puddle at the bottom of the 36-inch-wide pipe.

During the search involving more than 150 rescuers, Mayor David Dinkins rushed to the construction site, where questions arose over who was responsible for capping the open shaft.

Genevieve Brooks, deputy borough president in the Bronx, said her office will investigate why the pipe wasn't covered.

Los Angeles jail inmates riot

SANTA CLARITA, Calif. (AP) — More than 90 inmates rioted early Sunday at a Los Angeles County jail after a face-off between Hispanic and black prisoners. Thirty-five inmates were injured.

The hourlong melee stemmed from an earlier argument over use of a telephone, sheriff's Deputy Rich Erickson said.

Hispanic and black inmates confronted each other in a dormitory in the maximum-security area of Pitchess Honor Ranch, about 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles, Erickson said.

All 92 prisoners in the dorm, some with homemade knives, joined in the riot, he said.

The 35 injured prisoners were taken to three hospitals for treatment of concussions, stab wounds and cuts. All were in good condition.

The fight stemmed from an incident Saturday when a Hispanic inmate and black inmate argued over use of a telephone, Erickson said.

The phones are used by inmates on a first-come, first-served basis.

Get Thee To A Winery

LUBBOCK — The West Texas wine industry is rapidly coming of age.

In the 15 years since Llano Estacado Winery opened in a 3,500-sq. ft. cinderblock building a few miles south of the city limits here producing 1,300 cases in its first season, the firm has matured into a major economic and oenological force.

During the current six-week crushing season which began Aug. 1, the winery — now one of four on the South Plains — expects to harvest more than 900 tons of fruit and produce more than 50 times as much wine as in their first season.

But Llano's story is not one only of numbers.

In recent years, the fledgling winery and its winemakers have been honored nationally and internationally, topping competition among reds and whites.

The company's 1984 vintage Chardonnay was the first wine in Texas' 300-year wine-growing history to bring home the prestigious double gold award from the San Francisco Wine Fair in 1986.

In the next three years, Llano's 1985 Cellar Select Cabernet Sauvignon took top honors at the London International Wine & Spirit Competition and at the Les Amis du Vin Competition.

The winery is open daily for tours, which allows visitors a glimpse of potential award-winners in the making.

Through the end of harvest at mid-month, visitors can follow the product from the vine to the bottle in a fascinating hour-long tour and tasting.

WINE: West Texas wine industry ripens to perfection

(From 1B)

Crews of seasonal agricultural workers virtually fly between the vines, snipping the fruit loose and letting it fall into "lugs" that they move along the row with their feet.

At 40 cents per lug, experienced pickers are able to clear a halfdozen vines or more in an hour, filling as many as four or five lugs per vine, according to assistant winemaker Mark Penna.

From the fields, the grapes go into destemming and juicing machinery on its way to the press. The pulp, called "must," is pressed and most of the seeds and solids are removed.

The juice of red and white wines alike are clear, the color is imparted during the fermentation process, when red wines are stored with their fruit skins.

Initial fermentation takes place in 12,000 gallon tanks, where cultured yeast strains are added to the sweet juice. The fermentation period varies with the type of grapes and wine being produced. "At this point in the process our goal is to create a 'spice rack' of flavors which can be blended for the characteristics we want at bottling time," explained chief winemaker Don Brady.

The wine is chilled to 27 degrees in order to stop the fermentation of the yeast and to precipitate suspended solids out of the mixture. A clay binding substance and sulfur dioxide also are introduced to heat-and cold-stabilize the wine. "American consumers are very conscious of the cosmetic quality of their wines," Brady said.

The wine is then "racked," drawn off of the top of the tank and transferred to oak barrels. It typically takes three barrels — at a cost of $600 for American oak to $1,800 for French wood — to hold the wine from a ton of grapes.

Viticulture — the growing of grapes — is both a labor-and capital intensive venture, requiring an investment of $3,000-5,000 per acre during the three years before the vines bear any fruit, plus 15-20 minutes spent on each plant training the vines along the arbors. Depending on the variety of grape, there are 500 to 1,000 plants per acre.

All types of farming are dependent on the vagaries of the weather, but in grape growing "there is a tremendous amount of magic in the cycle of the plants," Penna said.

Next year's crop is largely determined by the amount of vine growth in May of this year, explained Bob Reed, one of Llano Estacado's founders and the grandfather of the South Plains wine industry.

The pipe dream of commercial grape growing on the High Plains first took root in the mid-60s, in the backyard of Reed, a horticulture professor at Texas Tech at the time. With Bob McPherson of Tech's chemistry department, Reed began experimenting with fermenting his "patio wine," and dreaming of a boutique winery.

After several years of working with American hybrids grown in Cochran and Bailey counties, the first-ever crop of vinifera European grapes was planted at Llano Estacado in 1978.

The first varietal wine at Llano was bottled in 1980. That effort was rewarded the next year with the "Best Wine Cup" honor at the Texas State Fair.

The winery's first major expansion to commercial status followed in 1983 and the industry hit its full stride by the mid-80s, as farmers seeking additional cash crops got into grape business.

With typical vineyards of less than 10 acres, there are more than 1,250 acres on the South Plains devoted to viticulture, supporting four local wineries.

After barrel aging, the wines are blended and bottled. In order to bear a varietal label — such as Cabernet Sauvignon, Chenin Blanc or Johannisberg Riesling — at least 75 percent of the wine must be from those grapes.

In addition to those varietals and the winery's generic red, white and blush wines, Llano bottles distinctive "Signature" red and white wines that are important to the winery's burgeoning reputation as a quality producer.

The complimentary tours and tasting room business are vital to the winery as well, Brady said.

"Every retail sale of wine and merchandise we make here means more to our profitability because they're not shared with a wholesaler and a distributor."

As grape and wine production have grown, so have Llano's sales and distribution network covering 18 states and five European countries. But the winemakers have not forgotten their roots, more than a third of their market is still in West Texas, Brady said.

"I think it reflects well on our wine to be that strong at home," Brady said, adding that Texas is the nation's fifth largest wine market. Texas-produced wines own only 2.5 percent of that market, compared to more than 17 percent for in-state wines in states like Washington, he noted.

The winery is open for tours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

One arrest made in weekend murder cases

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

One arrest had been made by late Sunday in connection with three separate murders that occurred during the weekend, law enforcement officials said.

Arturo Urias, 35, 5215 E. County Road 83, remained jailed late Sunday in lieu of a $50,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, jail officials said.

Urias turned himself over to Midland sheriff's officials about 12:15 p.m. Saturday in connection with the shooting death of Jose Luis Lozoya, police said.

Lozoya, 32, was shot three times outside his 1717 Mineola St. home just before midnight Friday, police said.

Meanwhile Lozoya's brother, Roberto Lozoya, 30, of 1721 S. Mineola St., remained in serious condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Sunday night due to two gunshot wounds, hospital officials said.

Another man, Enriquez Galindo, 24, of 1902 S. Colorado St., injured during the same shooting incident, had been treated and released from the hospital, officials said.

Galindo, the apparent target of drive-by gunmen, ran into the yard where the Lozoya brothers and a third man were talking, and then the shooting began.

Galindo escaped his pursuers and serious injury by jumping through Lozoya's kitchen window.

The Lozoya family and friends had just finished a late-night barbecue dinner before the shooting began.

The shooting was believed to have come from an assailant armed with a rifle in a car and another person with a small-caliber handgun in a pickup, police said.

Police continued to investigate the shooting Sunday.

Law enforcement officials also were looking into two other murders Sunday, but had yet to make any arrests.

Javier Granado, 27, 1208 South St., was fatally stabbed, once in the upper-right chest and once in the lower abdomen with a 6-inch knife, about 3:45 a.m. Saturday at a 1360 N. Pecos St. apartment, police said.

Granado reportedly was stabbed while sitting in a chair and the assailant then fled the scene in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo, police said. No motive had been determined for the stabbing.

The suspect was described as a Hispanic man in his 40s, about 6-foot-2 and 160 pounds with black hair.

In a separate incident, Jose Rodriguez Pina, 38, of 1512 N. Main St., was found stabbed to death early Saturday morning on a lease road north of County Road 150 near Cotton Flat Road, sheriff's officials said.

Details in that death were not available Sunday.

Workers laid off from care home return as volunteers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The work was familiar this weekend for the 22 workers who usually run the San Antonio AIDS Foundation's residential care home.

But this time their efforts won't bring the financial rewards they relied upon before layoffs wiped out the entire staff last week.

"We are going to do as much as we can," said Denise Williams, a nurse's aide who began working at the home a week ago. "Sure, we need to make a living, but we aren't going to turn our backs on anyone."

The workers were laid off Friday after state payments for a $122,000 grant were delayed. City Health Director Dr. Fernando Guerra said the city also experienced a delay in receiving payment on a $530,000 AIDS grant.

He said he expected a delay of up to two months because of special legislative sessions to balance the state budget.

So the workers are volunteering to provide the services many patients have come to expect.

"At the hospital, they were afraid to touch him," a 35-year-old Bexar County woman said of her older brother, Juan, who has been a patient at the home since July. She asked that her name not be used.

Juan's 68-year-old mother, who visited her son Saturday, is worried that the home may close.

Car accident kills passenger

Staff Report

ODESSA — A car that crashed into a house early Sunday morning took the life of a passenger, police said.

Christopher Michael Gaule, 19, was killed as the result of the accident that occurred about 3:15 a.m. near the intersection of 52nd and Ninth streets, police said.

The driver, Enrique Tony Garcia, 21, remained in critical condition with head injuries at Medical Center Hospital Sunday evening, officials said.

According to police reports, Garcia was driving a 1990 Suzuki Swift west on 52nd Street when the vehicle went over the north curb and partially left the roadway.

Garcia then took evasive action but overcorrected the vehicle, sending it into a roadside skid. The vehicle subsequently went over the south curb, hit a Chevrolet pickup and crashed into a house at 400 E. 52nd Street.

Officials report early morning robbery, beating

Staff Report

A 63-year-old man was beat and robbed of an unknown amount of money early Saturday morning, police officials said.

Ted Castellon was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was treated for an injury to the head, officials said.

According to police reports, Castellon was approached by two men and a woman about 6:28 a.m. in the 1300 block of South Street.

The three asked Castellon for money then beat him with a rock and a two by four piece of wood, police said.

DEAR ABBY

Patriots do more than wave flag

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: During the recent surge of patriotism, I have seen many T-shirts proclaiming support for U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf, American dominance and victory.

I think there are many better ways to support our country and our troops than simply by putting a message on a T-shirt to tell everybody you love your country.

For starters, don't litter on the land you are proud of; keep it beautiful by picking up trash.

If you are a student, study hard so you will be able to help your country compete in the world market.

If you are employed, do a good job, and don't cheat your employer. Don't shoplift; it puts retailers out of business and hurts the economy.

If you are a defense contractor, don't cheat the government — regardless of how easy they make it. Write letters to your legislators telling them your views. How can they represent you if they don't know what you want? You can bet that foreign interests and special interests are telling Congress what THEY want.

Everyone who has the right to vote should vote. It's a privilege.

Read the newspapers and watch the news to keep up on current events so you'll know what's going on.

Unless we want our servicepeople returning to the Middle East, we must learn to conserve energy and reduce our oil dependence. Some ways to do this are to "Drive 55," carpool, select fuel-efficient cars and do not waste electricity.

Or is all of the above too much trouble? It's a lot easier to wear a T-shirt.

I realize this letter may be too long to print, but I hope you will print at least part of it if you agree with me. — NORTH CAROLINA PATRIOT all of it. It takes more than hoisting a flag or donning a T-shirt to show patriotism for one's country. Thanks for a dandy letter.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 years of age and have been married three and a half years. Lately I have felt that my husband is acting cold toward me. We just had a talk about this and he said, "Maybe marriage isn't for me," and, "Maybe we got married too young," and, "Maybe after being with you for eight months, I realize what being married to you is really like." (My husband is in the Navy, and this is the first time we have spent so much time together.) Yet, he also claims that he loves me.

For the past two or three months, we have been trying to start a family. This was his idea. It is hard for me to understand how a person can feel the way he says he feels and still want to start a family. His reply was, "Maybe what we need is a baby."

Abby, isn't this the wrong solution to our problem? — CONFUSED IN LONG BEACH

DEAR CONFUSED: Yes. Children should be brought into this world because they are wanted, not to serve as glue to hold a troubled marriage together. What you and your husband "need" to save your marriage is to discuss his reaction to your eight months of togetherness with a professional counselor. Then decide if you are ready to have a family.

A baby is a lifelong responsibility, not a cure for an ailing marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding thank-you notes: I believe I received the tackiest thank-you note ever — my canceled check with "thank you" written in the "memo" space. — APPALLED IN SODUS, N.Y.

Washington rates first with collectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Washington is first in war, first in peace and among the first in the hearts of his country's stamp collectors.

The nation's first president has appeared on 283 stamps. But he wasn't on the nation's first postage stamp — that honor went to Benjamin Franklin. Washington appeared on stamp No. 2, and since then has been featured on more U.S. stamps than anyone else, including Franklin, a distant second with 122 appearances.

The first two stamps actually were issued the same day, July 1, 1847, but the Postal Service and collectors consider the 5-cent Franklin to be the first U.S. postage stamp and the 10-cent Washington second.

Franklin was the first postmaster general, and the Postal Service uses his name for its stamp clubs aimed at getting youngsters interested in collecting.

"Various factors make individuals popular with collectors, but of all the individuals who have been repeatedly portrayed, the top favorites are Benjamin Franklin, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln," says Wayne Youngblood, a specialist in U.S. stamps at Linn's Stamp News, a weekly newspaper for collectors.

Don Smith of the American Topical Association in Johnstown, Pa., reports that John F. Kennedy, who has appeared on three U.S. postage stamps, is extremely popular with collectors. There are "many, many" foreign stamps featuring Kennedy, he noted.

The association, which serves stamp collectors interested in specific areas, doesn't count the number of people specializing in each president, he said.

But Smith noted that Franklin D. Roosevelt — a collector himself — Abraham Lincoln and Washington all have been popular among collectors.

The availability of lots of George Washington stamps helps, Smith noted, "after all, who collects President Polk?"

A total of 417 people have appeared on American postage stamps. They are described in the book "Who's Who on U.S. Stamps," by Richard Louis Thomas and published by the Sidney, Ohio-based Linn's Stamp News.

State alcohol agency considered to be one of strictest in nation

HOUSTON (AP) — Liquor labeling is no joke according to the files of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

It seems that other brews have taken the heat of the agency's wrath before the authority was spooked by Louisiana's Dixie Blackened Voodoo Lager or placed limits on the Bud Man's generosity, the Houston Chronicle reported in Sunday editions.

Voodoo Lager was temporarily banned from sale in Texas because the name conjured up images of witchcraft. The commission put a stop to a recent Bud Man promotion because it is illegal in Texas for manufacturers to induce customers to buy their products with any kind of giveaway. The promotion, which is legal in most other states, offered cash and beer as prizes.

Last January, the agency banned the sale of Original Hooter's California Chardonnay and White Zinfandel wines because of the label wording.

The labels stated: "A selection of the Iowa wine valley's finest grapes (just kidding!) delicately stomped into a full bodied, robust, voluptuous, sensuous blend that any wino could savor, bag or no bag."

The commission ruled that reference to "winos" should be deleted as alcoholic beverages should not be sold to a person who is intoxicated or is a habitual user of alcoholic beverages.

The agency also objected to the jocular reference to Iowa grapes, even though the label clearly identifies the wine as a California vintage.

Texas was the only state to take action against Hooter's wine.

Another brewery that had sales stopped in Texas was Little Kings' Kentucky Derby Ale.

The commission objected to the beer name because it conjured up images of gambling. Pari-mutuel betting takes place at the Kentucky Derby.

Then there was Black Death Vodka, which has yet to grace the shelves of Texas stores. The vodka was banned because the label shows a grinning skull donned in a black top hat.

"We feel that the label's appearance and description is detrimental to the alcoholic beverage industry and against the peace, welfare and safety of the general public," the commission ruled.

These kind of rulings have labeled the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission as somewhat stodgy among those in the liquor industry.

"Texas is one of the more rigid states, as far as getting anything controversial through the approval process," said Marie Nikic, director of operations for Blair Importers, the New York company that tried to import Black Death Vodka from Luxembourg to Texas.

"Nothing Texas does surprises us," an unidentified spokesman at Little Kings said.

Cajun couple believe they have healing gift

CHINA, Texas (AP) — The trim and tiny white house in this southeast Texas farm town doesn't look much like a place for healing. But inside, Verlie and Wilma Bergeron are using faith healing as a supplement to modern medicine.

When ailing people cross the threshold at the Bergerons' home, the retired couple offers ancient prayers and soothing words of the "traiteurs", or Cajun faith healers.

The Bergerons and other Cajuns like them believe they are conduits between sufferers and God — or that through their prayers, those who believe can be healed.

Their musical accents hint at childhoods in the bayous of French-speaking Louisiana, whose border is about 45 miles from China. A 3-foot statue of the Virgin Mary in their living room bears testimony to their Catholic faith.

"When we were growing up there wasn't any such thing as going to a doctor when you were sick," Verlie Bergeron said. "If you got sick you went to somebody for a treatment."

But the Bergerons do consider modern medicine a God-given gift of the era.

"We always tell people to keep taking their medicine and do just what the doctor tells them to do," Wilma Bergeron said.

"You know a doctor can't do anything for shingles," she adds. "A treatment can take the pain right out of the shingles."

The couple has learned specific sets of prayers for shingles, blood and bleeding problems, general healing and relief of suffering.

Although they had known about traiteurs all their lives, the Bergerons said they never thought about becoming healers themselves until a few years ago, when Mrs. Bergeron was suffering with a stubborn ulcer on her leg for several years.

The Bergerons and others like them believe they are conduits between sufferers and God.

When traditional medicine failed, the couple went to see a traiteur. The old man said the prayers and suggested that Bergeron join his ranks.

The ulcer on Mrs. Bergeron's leg healed up, but she sometimes still suffers leg pains. She seeks conventional medical treatment, but she often asks her husband for prayer treatments, too.

For treatment, Mrs. Bergeron sat in a straight chair in front of her husband, her leg stretched out. She held a picture of the Virgin Mary.

Bergeron took holy water and traced a long cross down her leg and prayed silently.

He won't divulge what the prayers say.

"If we told what it was, we'd lose the gift," Mrs. Bergeron said. "We can't demonstrate it to anybody else."

As Bergeron prayed, he stroked the leg, then touched his own breast three times. The treatment was over.

Although they gladly treat all who come for help, "it's sometimes hard on us," Mrs. Bergeron said.

Electromagnetic emissions may affect sleep patterns

AMARILLO (AP) — Radiation from everyday appliances may be keeping their users up at night, according to a researcher who studies sleep disorders.

Dr. Russel Reiter of the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio told the Amarillo Globe-News that electromagnetic fields generated by power consumption reduce the production of a hormone that controls sleep.

Reiter said as a person sleeps, the brain's pineal gland produces a hormone called melatonin. Among other functions, melatonin controls the body's rhythm, telling it when to sleep and when to rise.

When light diminishes the production of melatonin, the person wakes up. Conversely, darkness stimulates the pineal gland, making a person sleepy.

Electromagnetic radiation consists of a large spectrum of wavelengths, including radio and television signals, the infra-red radiation we feel as heat, light's visible spectrum of colors, ultraviolet radiation, microwaves, X-rays and gamma rays.

"We live in a heavily electrified environment," said Reiter.

Gamez falters

FRANKLIN, Wis. (AP) — Mark Brooks, despite some wayward shots on the closing holes, shot 2-under-par 70 to beat Robert Gamez by one stroke Sunday for the championship of the Greater Milwaukee Open.

Brooks, who ended 18-under-par for the 72 holes, was tied with Gamez at 19-under after 15 holes, but Gamez bogeyed two of his last three holes for a 70 and a total of 271.

Brooks sent his drive on the par-5 18th hole into the gallery but recovered out of the trees to par the hole. On the par-3 17th hole, his tee shot went into the sand trap.

But he recovered for a par, then ended with a bogey on No. 18 to win the GMO's $180,000 first prize with 270 total.

Next at 15-under 273 was Steve Jones, who shot a 5-under 67.

Jeff Maggert, who started the final round tied for second at 15-under, was fourth at 14-under after a 1-over 73.

Gamez, 23, seeking his first tour win since March 1990, set a GMO opening-round record of 11-under 61, then shot 66 to go to 17-under before last week's hot, humid weather gave way to gusting winds Saturday. Brooks gained the lead with a 2-under 70 Saturday that put him 18-under, one stroke ahead of Gamez.

Tie aids Angels

■ Midland can clinch a playoff berth with a win today.

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — The Midland Angels used a rain-imposed 3-3 tie to lower their Magic Number in the Texas League West race to one here Sunday night, even though second-place El Paso swept a double header in San Antonio, 5-4 and 6-4.

The Angels, who were scheduled to play a pair with the Wranglers, barely completed the fifth inning of the opening game before heavy rains washed away the twin bill and TL officials tabbed the 3-3 deadlock an official game.

But a tie was as good as a win for Midland as far as lowering the Magic Number is concerned. El Paso's sweep upped the Diablos' record to 36-31 with one game left to play in the regular season, today in San Antonio.

But the Angels, who are slated to finalize their regular season with a double header here today, beginning at 12:15 p.m., stand 36-29-1 in the second half. That means just one Angel win here today — or an El Paso loss — would put Midland in the playoffs as second-half champion in the Western Division.

El Paso won automatic home-field advantage for the best-of-three divisional playoff by capturing the first half title in the West. The Angels will play in that series beginning Tuesday unless they are swept today and El Paso finishes with a win. Or because of more rain.

Worth noting is that after rain forced the postponement of Saturday's game and following the mid-inning halt Sunday, grounds may be wet enough to hinder or even cancel today's scheduled games in Wichita.

If that were to happen, only an El Paso loss could dent the Angels' Magic Number.

Dallas tight end Jay Novacek, right, beats Cleveland Browns defensive back Stephen Braggs on a four-yard touchdown reception in the second quarter of the Cowboys 26-14 win over the Browns Sunday.

Cowboys sting Browns

■ Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman, who threw two touchdown passes, is in heaven despite seven stitches in the chin.

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Even the seven stitches in his chin couldn't wreck the way Troy Aikman felt Sunday.

"I probably feel better than I have in a long time," Aikman said after he passed for 274 yards and two touchdowns as the Cowboys beat the Browns 26-14.

Aikman entered the game with a completely healthy right arm for the first time since college. Successful surgery last January repaired his right shoulder and removed bone chips from his elbow that had bothered him since his junior year at UCLA.

The chin was sewn up after he was sandwiched between two defenders as he released a pass in the second half.

"I'm fine," Aikman said. "Two guys hit me on a completion to Jay (Novacek). It could've been worse."

The Cowboys improved their NFL-best record in openers to 24-7-1 and ruined the coaching debut of the Browns' Bill Belichick.

Aikman directed the Cowboys to scores on all four of their first-half possessions, including short touchdown passes to Novacek and Michael Irvin and a pair of field goals by Ken Willis. The 3-yarder to Novacek, which put the Cowboys ahead for good, was set up by a brilliant fake to Emmitt Smith that had the entire defense running one way while Novacek ran the other.

"It's unusual to have anybody open like that," Aikman said. "We went with the naked bootleg, and we had some guys open."

The Cowboys dominated the half, taking a 20-7 lead while allowing the Browns to run only 17 plays.

The Browns needed just one play to get back in it. Bernie Kosar threw a 62-yard touchdown pass to wide-open Webster Slaughter on the first play of the second half, getting the Browns within six. It was the longest completion in a Browns opener since Reggie Rucker caught a 69-yarder in 1978.

But the Browns were unable to sustain any more scoring drives, as the Cowboys held an opponent under 300 yards of total offense for the seventh straight regular-season game. The Cowboys haven't allowed an opposing quarterback to throw for 300 yards in 20 games.

The Browns totaled 32 yards rushing.

"I think all of us are kind of embarrassed about what happened out there with our running game," Kosar said.

Houston's Ray Childress, 79, takes down Los Angeles Raider quarterback Jay Schroeder for a nine-yard loss as the Oilers rock-and-roll in their NFL opener Sunday.

Full Moon rises

■ Houston's Warren Moon passes for two touchdowns and runs for another in a 47-17 victory over the Raiders.

Associated Press

HOUSTON (AP) — Warren Moon passed for two touchdowns and ran for one and the emerging Oilers defense set up three touchdowns with turnovers en route to a 47-17 victory over the Raiders on Sunday.

Allen Pinkett, starting in place of holdout running back Lorenzo White, had his best day as a pro, gaining 144 yards on 26 carries, including 48 yards on eight runs during the opening drive of the game.

The Oilers started the game trying to protect their young and injured defense with time-consuming drives and took a 16-7 lead at intermission on runs of eight yards by Pinkett, one yard by Moon and Ian Howfield's 34-yard field goal. The Raiders had the ball for only 1:17 of the first quarter and didn't score until 2:44 remained in the half when Jay Schroeder hit Willie Gault on a 59-yard pass play.

The defense, which has four rookies in the secondary depth chart, demonstrated it didn't need protection.

Ray Childress, who missed four weeks of preseason with a broken bone in his right leg, sacked Schroeder on the Raiders' first play. Safety Bubba McDowell ended that possession with an interception at the Raiders 38, setting up Moon's 1-yard touchdown dive 1:20 into the second quarter.

Defensive tackle Doug Smith shook Marcus Allen from the ball and McDowell recovered the fumble at the Raiders 35, setting up Moon's 23-yard touchdown pass to Ernest Givins with 2:43 elapsed in the third quarter for a 23-7 lead.

Moon completed 18 of 33 passes for 250 yards and was sacked twice by the Raiders.

Quarterbacks fall on NFL's first day

Associated Press

Randall Cunningham and Dave Krieg are gone, and Bobby Hebert and Jim McMahon are back.

Cunningham, the Eagles' happy-footed passer, was carried off early in the second quarter Sunday with torn ligaments in his left knee. McMahon, who enjoyed his greatest days as the leader of the Bears, stepped in to throw for two TDs as the Eagles beat the Packers 20-3.

Krieg broke the thumb on his passing hand, forcing Jeff Kemp to step in. While Kemp performed well, he couldn't overcome Hebert, who threw a TD pass with 1:11 to play that gave the Saints a 27-24 victory over the Seahawks. It was Hebert's first outing following a one-year contract holdout.

Cunningham was carted off the field after the first play of the second quarter. A preliminary diagnosis said he tore two ligaments in his left knee and could miss the season. More tests were scheduled Monday.

A preliminary diagnosis by team physician Vincent DiStefano revealed that Cunningham had torn the medial collateral and posterior cruciate ligaments of his left knee.

"At this point the tears look complete," DiStefano said. "If that's the case he'll be out for the year and require surgery."

"I got hit pretty good but I thought I was going to be able to get up," Cunningham said. "I heard it pop but I've been hit before so I was optimistic that I could come back in."

McMahon, who threw only 12 passes last season, came on to throw for two touchdowns, including a 75-yarder to Fred Barnett with 6:51 left. He also found Keith Byars for 32 yards and Roger Ruzek kicked two field goals.

Don Majkowski, in his first regular-season game since rotator cuff surgery last December, was intercepted three times and lost a fumble in a dull performance for the Packers.

Saints 27, Seahawks 24

Hebert, who regained the starting spot he held in 1989 after a summer-long battle with his 1990 replacement, Steve Walsh, rallied the Saints' sagging offense by completing five of eight passes for 64 yards during a six-minute, 68-yard drive. He capped it with a 10-yard touchdown pass to Floyd Turner on fourth down with 1:11 to play.

Kemp drove the Seahawks 60 yards, completing three of five passes for 47 yards. A 34-yard pass interference penalty got the Seahawks a first down at the Saints 8-yard line. On third down from the 5, Kemp completed a pass to Tommy Kane, who was ruled out of bounds in the back left corner of the end zone.

The Seahawks bench was assessed an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for arguing the end zone call, adding 15 yards to John Kasay's field goal attempt. The 37-yarder sailed wide left.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Cut your ties to negative people and life will become much more satisfying. A partnership may be everything you ever wanted. In late fall, pick up the reins of leadership from someone who seems to have lost interest. Romance will make a swift recovery from a setback in December. Spectacular career progress is featured in January and February of 1992. Travel will let you combine business with pleasure next June.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Mark Harmon, author Cleveland Amory, quarterback Terry Bradshaw, tennis star Jimmy Connors.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reaching an agreement with an aggressive member of the opposite sex will benefit you both materially and emotionally. Make a special effort to stay on schedule this afternoon.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel requires extra caution. Be sure to observe all traffic laws on this busy holiday. Pent-up emotions could lead to an explosion. Discuss any differences with your mate privately.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):

Travel is favored today, especially if you go by air. Stay off crowded highways. A young person you meet socially gives you wonderful new insights. Do more listening than talking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to relax with your family. Financial negotiations are best left for another day. Spend a quiet evening at home with those close to your heart. A frank talk with your mate clears up a misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Others will look to you for leadership today; do not let them down. Travel is favored. The pieces of a romantic puzzle fall into place, giving you a new outlook on an old problem.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The morning hours prove highly productive. Your excellent memory will impress an influential newcomer. A job offer needs careful review before you make a final decision. Consult romantic partner about a social event.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Real estate ventures require advice from experts. Regular exercise will improve your figure and boost your self-confidence. Your best relationship now is with someone you work with. Take nothing for granted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An attractive person asks an important question. Be honest if you are not ready to make a commitment. A brother or sister could alert you to a golden business opportunity. Share the loot!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hold off on making any big purchases while you spruce up your home. Someone's suggestions could lead to a brainstorm tonight. Take loved ones into your confidence. Rekindle an old romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You electrify a crowd with your brilliant ideas. Do not be tempted by get-rich-quick schemes. A brief encounter could produce an emotional tidal wave. Try to let go of the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curb a tendency to fritter money away or overindulge in rich food or drink. An older person offers invaluable advice. Follow it and you will avoid making costly mistakes. Romance intensifies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Indulge your love for the outdoors. A picnic or barbecue provides the perfect setting for a family reunion. Loved one shares a terrific secret. Count your blessings! Devote more time to children.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AK9 ♥AQJ105 ♦A873 ♣J
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 1NT Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—With 19 high-card points opposite a minimum of 6-7 in partner's hand and a source of tricks in your self-sufficient heart suit, you should insist on reaching some game. The way to explore while advising partner of your power is to jump shift to three diamonds.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AJ65 ♥J4 ♦AKQJ10765 ♣Void
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♥ 2♦ ?

What do you bid now?

A.—An immediate cue-bid of the enemy suit suggests partner's suit as trumps—not the impression you wish to convey here. Since it is a moot question where you want to play the hand, you will need room to explore. For the moment, be content with a simple bid of two diamonds. A new suit by responder is a one-round force.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠4 ♥Q6 ♦AKQJ10765 ♣94
What is your opening bid?

A.—If you abide strictly by the Rule of Two and Three, you should open four diamonds. Here, however, you have a solid suit with 150 honors. That gives you an additional cushion, and our choice would be five diamonds.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠74 ♥AK93 ♦A8 ♣AKJ43
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A.—This hand meets neither of the requirements for a jump shift: a self-sufficient suit or a good fit for partner's suit. Therefore, bid two clubs now, then show your hearts at your next turn. That will establish a game force at a low level and leave you room to explore for the best contract.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A104 ♥Q98 ♦9763 ♣1097
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A.—You have a dead minimum, balanced response, so the last thing you want to do is encourage partner even slightly. Therefore, do not even think about raising diamonds. Respond one no trump.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q98 ♥AK ♦AKQ4 ♣J652
What is your opening bid?

A.—Most players open one diamond when they hold two four-card minor suits. Here, however, tactics suggest that you open one club. You intend rebidding two no trump over partner's probable major-suit response, and it could work to your advantage by deflecting a club lead or shift.

Former 'Star Trek' TV stars tour Kennedy Space Center

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — As Mr. Sulu on the starship Enterprise, actor George Takei spent a lot of time pushing buttons. The real thing was a bit more frightening. Takei and fellow "Star Trek" stars Nichelle Nichols, better known as Lt. Uhura, and James Doohan (Mr. Scott) toured Kennedy Space Center on Friday.

Nichols and Doohan had visited the center often, but it was Takei's first trip. "It was frightening to be in the control center," he said. "With all of those buttons and blinkers, and to know that if I touched something, something would happen."

Mr. Sulu spent much of his time serving as the helmsman on the bridge of the Enterprise.

"Of course, the buttons didn't do anything anyway," he said.

The trio were on their way to a weekend Trekfest in Orlando to celebrate the television show's silver anniversary. The science-fiction drama first appeared on television in 1966.

"This is like stepping back in time and seeing where we came from," Nichols said.

NEW YORK — Katharine Hepburn says she doesn't regret not having children because she would have felt sorry for them.

"What the hell would I have done with them," the 84-year-old stage and screen legend asks in the September issue of Vogue.

Hepburn, whose memoir, "Me," is due out soon, said she considers herself a selfish "pig."

"I don't think children are happy with an egomaniac," she said. "They want to be the egomaniacs. Everybody wants to be an egomaniac, and if you're going to bring someone up, you have to bring them up in freedom."

MARIETTA, Ga. — Flying ace Chuck Yeager says he's not nostalgic about the P-51 he piloted in World War II.

"An airplane's an airplane," he said. Still, he was interested enough in a restored P-51 to take it up for a test flight Friday during a reunion with his famed 357th Fighter Group.

The P-51 was the plane Yeager, a brigadier general, piloted when he shot down five German planes during a single mission with the 357th.

Yeager went on from the 357th to find a place in aviation history books when he first broke the sound barrier Oct. 14, 1947, in a Bell X-1, causing the first sonic boom ever heard.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Former President Ronald Reagan told 23,000 chanting Amway distributors they may have a role in the world's emerging democracies.

"Democracy and the free enterprise system face formidable obstacles in many countries — we must help as teachers, not preachers," Reagan said Saturday night during an appearance at an Amway convention.

"Perhaps there is a role for Amway in that," he said.

Reagan also spoke to other gatherings of the direct-sales giant during a swing through North Carolina and South Carolina on Friday and Saturday.

LAREDO — U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher may be "Mr. South Texas," but he's not a friend to the state's headcounters.

Mosbacher will be honored during Laredo's 1992 George Washington Birthday Celebration for his support of a proposed free trade agreement with Mexico, said Fernando Zuniga III, chairman of the Mr. South Texas selection committee.

Mosbacher is named in a lawsuit filed by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales seeking to have the U.S. Census Bureau correct its admitted undercount of Texans, especially minorities.

LOS ANGELES — Actor Judd Hirsch, star of the television series "Dear John" and "Taxi," was booked for investigation of drunken driving early Saturday, authorities said.

California Highway Patrol officers on a drunken driving sweep downtown stopped Hirsch's car about 1:55 a.m., Officer Teri Dzida said.

He was booked on a charge of driving under the influence after a breath test showed his blood-alcohol level at between .08 percent and .09 percent, Sgt. James Roberts said.

Drivers are considered legally drunk in California at .08 percent.

Bird shocker

DALLAS (AP) — A North Texas entrepreneur is using non-lethal, electrified wires to persuade birds to take their droppings elsewhere.

"People chuckle and say, 'You do what?'" said Richard Seizer of Rockwall. "We relocate birds."

Seizer's company, Flyaway, lines building ledges with wires that produce enough electricity to persuade birds to flock somewhere else.

His method has freed hospitals, hotels, restaurants, courthouses and churches in several states from persistent pigeons and other fowl.

"The word gets out among the pigeons that the building is off-limits," Seizer said. "The birds will come up and hover and then go away because they know if they don't land, they don't get shocked."

The fledgling firm now faces a challenge larger than the fowls it's geared to chase away. Seizer says he wants to convince the federal government that he can make the Lincoln and Jefferson memorials bird-proof.

"They roost inside in the winter and use Thomas Jefferson as a perch," said Dr. Donald Messersmith of the University of Maryland, who's helping determine how to drive out the birds.

Bird infestations is a major problem at the Lincoln Memorial, which is enclosed on three sides, said Messersmith, a member of a National Park Service project to preserve the two monuments.

"The wind doesn't blow through, so it's warmer," he said. "The birds are bad enough that they have to clean Lincoln about once a week."

The preservation project's lead architect said he wants to give Flyaway a try because the 4-year-old firm has refined the shocking technology.

Unlike older systems, Seizer's uses only one wire per ledge because pigeons land on and take off from the edge in a sort of dive, he said.

But pigeons are not the only targets. Seizer has run off buzzards from an office building next to a suburban Houston freeway.

Cleaning up bird droppings can be an expensive chore. Large jobs can cost more than $50,000, Seizer said. But that doesn't mean business is booming.

"I'm breaking even about now," he said.

After robust start, housing sales slip

By Thomas J. Lueck
N.Y. Times News Service

After five months of robust sales gains during the spring and early summer, the nation's housing markets have lapsed into a sluggish, uneven recovery. Still, prices are increasing gradually in most areas, while new construction is rising steadily.

"This is a very weak and spotty recovery," said David Shulman, a real estate analyst for Salomon Brothers Inc. He said he did not expect home sales and housing construction to rebound swiftly, in contrast to what happened after previous recessions and housing slumps.

Real estate experts said the erratic nature of the upturn was underscored last week by reports that new-home sales in July had fallen 8.5 percent and that sales of existing homes were down 6.7 percent, compared with June. That followed sharp rises in each month since February.

July is normally the peak of the summer buying season for families with school-age children, and the weak sales offered little comfort to frustrated builders and home sellers in some regions, particularly the expensive areas of the California coast and the Northeast, where prices have plummeted by more than 20 percent during the last two years.

But despite the July drop, analysts said the housing markets were stronger than a year ago and far more robust than during the second half of 1990, when Iraq's invasion of Kuwait led to a steep decline in consumer confidence that was most apparent in home sales.

It may be sloppy, these people said, but it is still a recovery.

"It would be a mistake to jump to the conclusion that the recovery is now over," said Lyle E. Gramley, chief economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. He said mortgage interest rates, down a full percentage point from a year ago, should continue to decline, attracting more home buyers.

The downturn in July might have been expected after the sharp increase in sales earlier in the year, he said, adding, "People were euphoric at the resolution of the Persian Gulf war, but it didn't take long to wake up and realize the unemployment is still high and the economy still weak."

The robust sales earlier in the year were reflected in the second quarter, when sales of existing homes rose 3.5 percent, compared with the 1990 quarter. The pace of housing construction, which rose each month since March, continued upward in July, climbing 3.7 percent, to an annual rate of 1.07 million housing starts.

Median selling prices have also risen steadily, but at a far slower rate than during the booming 1980s. The National Association of Realtors said the median for July was $103,000, up 1 percent from June and 12 percent from the depth of the slump in December, when it was $91,700.

Area codes' stock is low

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Hello! Hello!! "Area code crisis" calling. But don't hang up. There's a solution.

After California splits the San Francisco Bay area code Monday — the first of three planned divisions in the state's near future — only five unused area codes will be left for the rest of North America.

However, a revised area code system adding 640 authorized three-digit area codes to the existing 152 is due in mid-1995, just in time to save the day.

"We do have a short-term area code crisis because we're running out, but we're prepared for change," said Cynthia Lucenius, media relations manager for Bellcore, which assists the nation's seven regional telephone companies.

"The thing is, in 1960 or even 1970 no one really envisioned this problem. Now, a lot of homes have two phone lines and new businesses open and, of course, all the new technology is taking up the access lines."

Blame it on population growth and 30 million Californians' love affair with the telephone, facsimile machines, pagers and computers that have voracious appetites for telephone access lines.

"People have phones at home, at the office, in their car and they carry them around now," said Pacific Bell's Paul Hirsch, who oversees California's area code changes. "They can't get away from them."

California, which got its first area code for Los Angeles — 213 — in 1947, has a record 10 area codes but soon will break the mark again with a total of 13. More than two dozen states have only one area code.

In the San Francisco Bay area, the 415 area code will split Monday with communities east of the huge inlet — Oakland, Berkeley and all of Contra Costa and Alameda counties — becoming 510, nicknamed the "five-and-dime." The last 415 split came in 1959 when 408 was created for the San Jose area.

Pacific Bell is allowing a five-month grace period through Jan. 26 for people to get used to the change so both 510 and 415 area codes will get through. A recording will warn callers that the old code's time is up.

On Nov. 2 in Southern California, the 213 area code will split for the third time, making Los Angeles the only city with three area codes. Areas to the south and west of downtown Los Angeles and Hollywood will become 310. The area north of Los Angeles was assigned the 818 area code in 1984.

In November 1992, the 714 area code for Orange County and parts of San Diego County will split. A new 909 area code will cover western and central Riverside County, San Bernardino County and eastern Los Angeles County, Pacific Bell says.

Elsewhere in the nation, Maryland will split down the middle with the western half keeping 301 and the Baltimore area becoming 410.

And in New York City, the telephone company expects to create a 917 area code sometime in 1993 to overlap some parts of Manhattan, now 212.

Bellcore says the five unused area codes are 210, 810, 910, 706 and 905, the last two just imported from south of the border where they were used for foreign access until a recent Mexico dialing change.

Texas company admits bid rigging

SEATTLE (AP) — A Texas company has become the fourth to plead guilty to federal bid-rigging charges on a dam repair project.

Dallas-based Bencor Corp. of America, Foundation Specialist, entered the plea in U.S. District Court.

Justice Department attorneys say top executives of Bencor and three other companies conspired to inflate the cost of a repair project on Mud Mountain Dam by millions of dollars. The dam is located on the White River east of Enumclaw, 42 miles south of Seattle.

ICOS Corp. of America, based in Englewood, N.J.; SIF Bachy, a French construction company in Levallois Perret, near Paris; and Bauer of America Corp. of Peabody, Mass., pleaded guilty July 19 to bid-rigging.

Bencor balked July 19 at pleading guilty, saying it couldn't agree to a statement of facts presented by a government lawyer.

Bencor's attorney, Cyrus Vance Jr., on Thursday entered a special guilty plea in which the company wasn't required to accept all of the government's statements.

The bid-rigging involved a November 1987 contract to build a concrete cutoff wall to stop water seeping from the rock-and-earth-fill dam. The dam, operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, protects the Puyallup and White river valleys and Tacoma from seasonal flooding.

Repairs were ordered after cracks were discovered in the dam's core. The corps originally estimated the project's cost at $20.5 million.

ICOS submitted a low bid of $39.5 million. The three other companies submitted bids of more than $40 million. No other bids were submitted.

Reader's Digest starts new edition for affluent

N.Y. Times News Service

Seeking to remind advertising agencies that The Reader's Digest does indeed reach beyond Middle America, the magazine is starting an edition for its most affluent readers.

The Reader's Digest Power Plus edition will be sent to the monthly's readers in those neighborhoods, identified by federal census data, offering high concentrations of households with incomes of $50,000 and up.

The new edition, being presented to agencies this week, will make its debut in March and then appear again in June, September and December.

Like many other magazines' demographic editions, Power Plus will carry the same articles as the regular edition; the sole difference will be in the advertising.

Power Plus is part of a program to "make our sales efforts much more focused," John Donoghue, publisher of The Reader's Digest, said in an interview last week.

For Power Plus, the circulation rate base, or total circulation guaranteed to advertisers, will be 4.1 million, compared with 16.25 million for the flagship magazine.

A four-color ad page will cost $95,000, compared with $131,000 in the flagship edition.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Joint ownership stock is equally owned

By Bill Doyle

Q. When my husband was widowed 20 years ago, he made his stepson joint owner of the stock in the retirement plan at the company for which he worked. Now that he's retired, my husband needs the money for the stock.

The company refuses to let him cash the stock without the stepson's signature. The stepson refuses to sign. We have no association with this man. We have tried several lawyers and even flew to another state to ask the stepson to sign, without success.

We have been married 15 years. Is there any way we can have the stepson's name removed?

A. There is no legitimate way. Joint ownership of stock, technically called "joint tenancy with right of survivorship," means just what the word says. Such stock is owned equally by the registered owners.

The stepson owns that stock just as much as your husband does. That's been the story from the day your husband had it registered in joint ownership. Like many people, your husband evidently did not realize that.

Stock cannot be "cashed" by the company that issued it. To get money for it, stock must be sold in the marketplace. And that requires signatures of the registered owners -- both owners in this case.

Q. How can I transfer 20 shares of stock I now have in my brokerage account to my son's account at a different brokerage firm? I want to do this as a gift and save selling and buying charges for both of us.

A. It might be possible to arrange that transfer through a very friendly broker with whom you have an active account -- meaning you do a lot of transactions generating commissions. But don't count on it.

Here's another way. "Order out" the stock by instructing your broker to register the 20 shares in your name and deliver the stock certificate to you. Then, fill in the assignment form on the back of the certificate. Have your signature there guaranteed by a brokerage, commercial bank or trust company.

Send that certificate to the stock's transfer agent, whose correct name and address you will find in the annual report of the company whose stock is involved. For safety sake, do that by registered mail, return receipt requested.

The transfer agent will destroy your 20-share certificate and send a new certificate, registered in your son's name, to him. He can turn the certificate over to his brokerage so the 20 shares will be held in his account. Or, if he likes, your boy can hang on to the certificate.

Q. In October 1976, we bought a $5,000 utility company 8.25 percent bond, due December 1991. Five months ago, we were advised by the bond trustee that $2,000 of our bond was called for early redemption. The notice said to turn in our bond, so we would receive $2,000 and a $3,000 new bond.

We delivered the $5,000 bond and the information to our broker. As of this date, we have not received the new bond. Our broker knows we want our certificates in our possession and they have been delivered in the past.

Are we justified in feeling uneasy?

A. Not really, as long as the broker has given you a receipt for the $5,000 bond. The new $3,000 bond, no doubt, is in your account at the brokerage and should show in the statements you receive either monthly or quarterly.

However, since you want to hold your certificates, you should lean on your broker so that certificate is delivered to you.

It's clear bonds of that issue are available in registered form for delivery to investors. Things would be different if that bond issue came only in book-entry form, with all record of ownership on computers and no certificates printed.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.

• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!

• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!

• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting employees in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
