Party committee to elect Begin's successor

- Begin says he 'can't go on any longer'
- 'Front-runners' to succeed Begin represent Israel's major factions

—Page 2A

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir failed today to get his chief rival to step aside in the battle to succeed Prime Minister Menachem Begin, and Israel radio said the Herut Party's 930-member central committee would meet Thursday night to elect the successor.

Supporters of both Shamir and Deputy Prime Minister David Levy said they were sure of victory. But passing the decision to the committee enhanced Levy's chances because of his strength with the rank and file.

The broadcast announcement came after a day of negotiations in which the 68-year-old foreign minister failed to persuade the 45-year-old Moroccan-born formr construction worker to withdraw his candidacy.

"A contest is unavoidable," said Shamir. "Obviously one can't choose a candidate for such an office without the central committee voting."

Although Shamir was favored by senior Herut leaders and picked up the support of Ariel Sharon, the influential former defense minister, Levy supporter Micha Reiser commented: "If we didn't think we had a very good chance for our candidate to win, we wouldn't have worked so hard for it for it to be decided by the central committee."

Shamir lieutenant Ronnie Milo said he was convinced the foreign minister would win. But he said he feared the delay would strengthen the opposition Labor Party's chances of forming its own coalition and ousting the Likud bloc from power.

Begin, meanwhile, was in his office conducting business as usual. There was no indication when he would tender his letter of resignation to President Chaim Herzog.

On Tuesday, he wearily told his ministers, "I cannot go on any longer," and they asked him to delay until they chose his successor. After he resigns, he and his Cabinet continue in office as a caretaker government until a successor appointed by Herzog can put together a majority in the Knesset, the Israeli parliament.

Labor Party leader Shimon Peres was critical of the way Begin had resigned. He said in a television interview that "more and more factions in the government are convinced" that a Labor-led coalition is ready to take power, suggesting that small factions in the Likud bloc were ready to defect to Labor.

No faction has publicly stated its readiness to defect.

The Likud has 64 seats in the 120-member parliament. The Labor Party has 50.

Begin has not stated his reasons for resigning. Aides say he was despondent over the death of his wife, Aliza, last November, the failure of his Cabinet to curb Israel's inflation rate of up to 160 percent, and the protracted war in Lebanon.

Lebanese take tanks into Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese army tank columns rumbled along downtown streets today and the military command said 10,000 troops backed by heavy artillery fire attacked strongholds of rebellious Druse and Shiite militiamen. At least 18 people were killed and 37 wounded.

An army communique proclaimed an indefinite curfew during the three-pronged push into predominantly Moslem west Beirut, where snipers fired from rooftops at the advancing soldiers. The communique said armed pedestrians would be shot on sight.

U.S. Marines in the multinational peacekeeping force went on full alert and some of their positions were sprayed by errant gun and shell fire, but there were no new injuries among the Marines and a spokesman said no peacekeeping troops were engaged in today's fighting.

Fire from rocket-propelled grenades and automatic rifles was almost constant in many districts.

Militiamen fought with Lebanese soldiers in the narrow shop-lined streets just outside the Commodore Hotel, and Associated Press correspondent Terry A. Anderson said army troops took control of the offices of Beirut's leading An-Nahar newspaper, the unfinished 40-story Morr Tower skyscraper near the mid-city "green line", and the neighboring area of Lebanon's prime ministry, central bank and the Italian embassy.

Police said the casualties today, the fourth straight day of fighting in Beirut, brought the overall casualty toll since Sunday to 72 killed and 275 wounded.

Families in neighborhoods where street battles raged huddled in basements and bomb shelters, while radios appealed for blood donations and reported hospitals were running short on plasma. The state radio said a block of mid-city apartment buildings was on fire, and appealed to civil defense squads and fire brigades to hurry to the scene and save trapped tenants.

Rightist-controlled radio stations reported Druse and Syrian army positions in central Lebanon's mountains were shelling Christian neighborhoods in east Beirut and instructed residents to stay indoors.

The state radio said President Amin Gemayel, a Christian, and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem, were supervising the sweep from the Defense Ministry compound in suburban Yarze, five miles east of Beirut.

An emergency Cabinet session was scheduled at the nearby presidential palace in the pine woods of Baabda, the state radio said.

Hance has list of dos, don'ts in Senate race

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Hance

Kent Hance works on the premise there are certain things the government should provide people — like good highways and good schools.

But in his race to get the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate post, he will also emphasize there are things the government shouldn't do — like "throw money at everything that comes along."

The U.S. representative for the 19th District, which encircles Odessa but not Midland, said at a news conference Tuesday afternoon in the Petroleum Club here that he can beat out the Democratic frontrunners Lloyd Doggett and Bob Krueger.

A state senator from Lubbock before he survived a tough congressional race in 1978 against Republican George W. Bush of Midland, Hance is betting on that work experience to give him the edge.

"The biggest issue is the fact that I'm the only candidate that has had experience for a continual time since 1974," he said.

Like the race in 1978, Hance is announcing 16 months ahead of the election. And he's planning on it being tough, down to the finish line in the general election.

"I get stronger as the laps get longer," he said of the lengthy campaigning.

El Paso Chemical lays off 400 workers

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Waggoner

ODESSA — Today, the El Paso Company announced indefinite layoff of 400 employees of Odessa's El Paso Chemical Company, part of El Paso Products. Roughly 300 employees, said El Paso Products president J.V. Waggoner, will lose their jobs here.

"All locations, all levels of the (chemical) company are affected," he said, "except the company president." Six officers of El Paso Chemical received their notices.

Most people were notified Tuesday, although some were still getting calls at 7 a.m. today, Waggoner said. "Surplused" employees may leave immediately, or be asked to stay for one to four months. Allowances of 4 percent salary for every year employed, or at least two months' pay for short-term employees will be paid to those let go.

Total reduction in staff will put the chemical business at 1,200 employees from the 1,600 employees it had a few days ago. For 950 employees in Odessa (in the slimmed-down El Paso Chemical) the average yearly pay is $32,000 a year — meaning the reduced payroll is still worth more than $30 million to area residents.

"We continue to be an important corporate citizen," Waggoner said.

Roughly $9 million a year saved in reduced payrolls will help El Paso Chemical compete, Waggoner said.

GISD board has surprise for taxpayers

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

In a pleasantly unexpected turnaround Tuesday night the Greenwood school board approved a 1983 tax rate of $1.22 per $100 valuation. More than 50 residents of the district came to the meeting prepared to protest a proposed tax rate increase of 20 cents, only to hear trustees quickly and unanimously approve a rate eight cents lower than last year's.

"There was some money we were not aware of that we had," board president Patsy Herrington explained. Superintendent James Warlick said he misfiled a $150,000 certificate of deposit and had not included it in previous calculations. He also discovered the surplus from the 1982-83 budget was much more than he had anticipated.

"We all wanted to come with a paper bag on our face," Ms. Herrington said, "but we decided we'd be man enough and woman enough to face you. We feel like we have egg on our face, and we deserve to have egg on our face, and we're going to try to be more aware of what's going on from now on."

"Are you saying this whole deal is a misunderstanding on the board's part?" a man asked.

"Yes, sir," Ms. Herrington confessed.

"I did a poor job of informing them," Warlick added.

A number of taxpayers questioned how such a large sum of money could be misplaced, and asked if Warlick was the only person responsible for keeping track of funds.

"I don't think it's a question of integrity on anybody's part," one man said, "but this is a business matter."

"This will not happen again," Ms. Herrington promised.

The meeting was the second of two public hearings required by law when the proposed tax rate exceeds the effective tax rate by more than 3 percent. About 40 taxpayers attended the first meeting to protest a tax hike of 24 percent.

Although the fiscal year does not end until today, Warlick finalized the 1982-83 budget Tuesday and learned the district had a carryover of $670,000. He had projected a $400,000 surplus.

"I still stand behind my figures, and I'm not far off," he stated.

Trustees held an emergency meeting and recalculated the budget, arriving at the lower rate.

In addition to the unexpected surplus and the misfiled CD, the board also included in projected revenues cafeteria money from the state that in previous years had been considered a cushion and had not been figured into the budget. It was determined GISD had $700,000 in available funds and would receive $1,183,000 from the state. With a projected budget of $4.3 million, that left $2.5 million to be raised in local revenues.

The Greenwood district has a tax valuation of $204.6 million. A tax rate of $1.22 would raise $2.5 million in taxes.

"I'm kind of worried about it because it's based on a 100 percent collection rate, and there's no way we can do it," Warlick said. Last year the district had 7 percent of delinquent or uncollected taxes.

Trustees are hoping to make up the difference by cutting the budget. "They felt like I should cut another 5 percent from the budget," Warlick said. "That's my goal for the year from the board."

Additional income from the sale of hot lunches and tickets to football games should also help make up the deficit, Warlick said.

"The problem is, the carryover of $600,000 or so will be used to pay bills for two months," Warlick said, "After that we'll have to borrow money from the bank. The board felt like it was better to borrow money than have a surplus.

"Deficit financing always costs more money," he continued, "and there won't be any carryover next year. We're hoping the value of the district will increase next year and that we'll get more money from the state to offset the lack of carryover. I don't believe in deficit financing because in the end it catches up with you. But if our valuation continues to go up it will increase our revenues, unless the economy goes down."

Warlick said the district would also increase its efforts to collect delinquent taxes from previous years, which total about $150,000.

Begin's decision still unexplained

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — Here are questions and answers about Prime Minister Menachem Begin's decision to resign.

Q. Why did Begin resign?

A. He hasn't explained himself in public yet, but people who met with him Tuesday, trying to change his mind, quoted him as saying, "I cannot go on any longer." He is 70 years old, has had two heart attacks and is deeply saddened by the death of his wife Aliza last November as well as by the mounting Israeli casualty toll in Lebanon. His government has been unable to stem Israel's inflation, now running at 130-160 percent annually, or cure other economic woes.

Q. How does Begin actually resign, and does he leave office immediately?

A. Israeli law requires him to resign by letter to State President Chaim Herzog. Begin wrote the letter but had not delivered it by Tuesday evening. Begin's resignation means that his government also resigns, but it remains as a caretaker Cabinet until a new one is formed. Begin will be a caretaker prime minister until the next Cabinet takes office.

Q. How long does that take?

A. Top figures in Begin's Herut Party, the main part of the governing Likud coaltion, began meeting Tuesday to consider the new political situation, but there's no telling how long it will take them to decide. It could be done by Wednesday morning but also could last weeks, depending on how tough the fight is for the premiership.

Q. Are new elections required?

A. It would depend on whether the new leadership of Herut and the Likud is accepted by the smaller parties in Begin's current coalition. If all parties accept the new Cabinet lineup, no election is required until late 1985. But if the coalition doesn't agree, there would be a period of instability that could lead to elections sooner.

Q. Who is likely to be the next prime minister?

A. The two top contenders are Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who like Begin led an underground fighting group during the Jewish struggle against the British mandatory power in Palestine, and Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, whose Moroccan ancestry makes him popular among Israel's Sephardic Jewish majority. Most observers think Shamir is the front-runner. Since he is 68 years old and not particularly charismatic, many think he might serve in an interim capacity until the next elections.

Q. What about people like Ariel Sharon, Defense Minister Moshe Arens and former defense minister Ezer Weizman?

A. Sharon, a former defense minister and now minister without portfolio, may also put himself forward as a candidate. Arens and Weizman, though they have the advantage of popularity with Israelis, are not members of parliament now, and they cannot serve as prime minister. They might be top candidates in the next elections, though.

Q. Does the opposition Labor Party have a chance at this stage?

A. Technically Labor has a chance because it is the largest single party in parliament with 50 seats in the 120-member Parliament, and by custom the president should ask the largest single party whether it can form a majority after a government has resigned. But if no parties desert the Likud coalition, Begin's political organization would still have at least 61 seats, and perhaps 64, in the 120-seat Knesset.

Q. Whom would Labor put into office if it were to form a government?

A. Shimon Peres, who was defense minister in the last Labor government, is chairman of the party and would be Labor's prime minister. But the opposition party is bedeviled by the long-running rivalry between Peres and former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Although they recently agreed to stop feuding, most observers expect their struggle to resume. Yitzhak Navon, who was widely admired during a five-year term as Israel's president, also could contend for Labor's leadership but is not now a member of parliament and could not seek the premiership unless he ran in the next election.

If Labor did manage to take power a Labor government might reverse or alter such Begin policies as widespread settlement of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan and make new attempts to extricate the Israeli army from Lebanon.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, saying he "can't go on any longer," will resign his post.

Frontrunners represent ethnic divisions

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The two front-runners to succeed Menachem Begin as Israel's seventh prime minister are representatives of Israel's two main Jewish ethnic groups, those of European and Sephardic origin. Here are short sketches of Polish-born Yitzhak Shamir, the foreign minister, and Moroccan-born David Levy, the deputy prime minister.

Shamir, 68, is one of Begin's oldest political associates. Like Begin he was born in Poland and joined Betar, the right-wing Zionist youth movement founded by Begin's mentor Zeev Jabotinsky. Also like Begin, he studied law, at Warsaw University, but cut his schooling short to emigrate to Palestine at the age of 20.

He joined the militant underground force, Irgun Zvei Leumi, or the National Military Organization, which Begin was subsequently to lead. Shamir went to the even more militant Lehi splinter group when the organization split in 1941.

He was Lehi's chief planner and twice escaped from the British who arrested him after a series of bank robberies and assassinations perpetrated by the group.

He went into private business when Israel became independent, then served for 10 years in Paris as a secret agent for the Mossad, Israel's counter-intelligence agency. He joined Begin's Herut Party list and won election to Parliament in 1973, becoming speaker of the house when Begin became prime minister in 1977.

Before he was named foreign minister in 1980, Shamir opposed the Camp David accords with Egypt and abstained when Parliament voted on the accords that led to a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt. He would be expected to follow Begin's strong nationalist policy, but without Begin's strident rhetoric.

David Levy, 45, was born in Morocco and immigrated to Israel in 1957 with his family. Working as a laborer in the poor border town of Beit Shean, he endured the brunt of what Sephardic or North African Jews considered the contempt of the Ahkenazi or European Jewish elite. He was jailed for 12 days when he wrecked a local employment office after believing he had been insulted.

He turned to political action by organizing a strike in a kibbutz farm, which helped win him election to the Beit Shean town council. He won Begin's recognition when he manipulated power in the council away from the Labor Party in 1965. He then became a respected figure in the Labor-dominated Histadrut Trade Union confederation.

In 1977 Begin made Levy immigration minister, then housing minister, and after the 1981 elections he was made deputy premier. He has spoken out strongly for ethnic conciliation.

During the Lebanon war, Levy led the Cabinet's doves against then Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and warned that Israel must consider America's interests in the Middle East. He is considered to be as nationalistic as Begin, but more open to compromise.He is married with 11 children.

Reagan says U.S. presence essential

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan says the 1,200 U.S. Marines in Beirut, targets of mortar, rocket and small-arms fire, are essential to peace efforts in Lebanon and he cannot estimate how long American troops will be needed there.

As the Marines donned flak jackets and combat helmets under a third day of fire Tuesday, the administration refused to characterize the fighting as a combat situation subject to a congressional decision whether to order withdrawal of U.S. forces.

Speakes called the shelling of their positions "isolated incidents" and said, "If we were conducting combat operations then it would be different, but we're not."

He said the Marines, who have been stationed in Lebanon one year, now were operating under "Condition One" — their highest state of readiness — and that their commander "will take whatever means necessary to protect his troops."

While no American casualties were reported after Tuesday's fighting, four French soldiers were killed and six wounded. Two U.S. Marines were killed and 14 wounded Monday.

From his mountaintop vacation ranch, Reagan sent identical letters to Senate and House leaders updating them on the fighting through Tuesday.

The president said a cease-fire — described by aides as not a formal cease-fire — had taken hold by late Tuesday and that firing on Marine positions had stopped.

"In the meantime," the president added, "U.S. forces will be prepared to exercise their right of self-defense should such attacks recur.

"I believe that the continued presence of these U.S. forces in Lebanon is essential to the objective of helping to restore the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon," Reagan said.

"It is still not possible," the president added, "to predict the duration of the presence of these forces in Lebanon; we will continue to assess this question in the light of progress toward this objective."

Speakes said the administration had completed a review of its compliance with the 1973 War Powers Act and had concluded that it was meeting all its obligations.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, want Reagan to act under the law to give Congress a chance to decide whether to keep the Marines in Beirut or order them brought home.

"These are matters of interpretation," said Speakes, referring to the administration's refusal to invoke provisons of the law.

A senior administration official, speaking only on condition that he not be identified, the administration would consider the troops as being involved in combat if, for instance, they were deployed alongside the Lebanese army in the Chouf mountains and took part in a military sweep of the area.

He drew the distinction that although the Marines at the Beirut airport are exposed to danger, "they are in stationary positions, they are there in a peacekeeping operation and they are are not conducting combat operations."

The official said that as long as the Marines are firing only in retaliation, "it is not combat."

In Washington, Vice President George Bush, who interrupted his vacation Monday because of the fighting, presided over the second meeting in two days of a "special situation group" of national security officials assessing developments in Lebanon.

Bush planned to resume his vacation in Maine today. Speakes said Reagan's 25-day trip away from Washington was not expected to be cut short.

In his letter to Congress, Reagan provided a detailed report of the fighting Sunday through Tuesday.

Reagan said the Marines came under small arms fire Sunday near the airport and returned fire.

On Monday, when the two Marines were killed and 14 injured, the Americans were attacked with mortars, rockets and small arms fire.

Hance plans to emphasize government role

Hance, a member of the conservative Boll Weevils in Congress, jumped into the race last week after incumbent John Tower, R-Texas, announced he wouldn't seek re-election. Hance said he had been considering the race before Tower's announcement and was "90 to 95 percent sure" he would make a run for the seat even before Tower dropped out.

He is looking to West Texas and the petroleum industry to support him strongly in his bid. And he has coordinators in every city of at least 20,000 population. That grassroots organization should bring in about $6 million, the amount Hance said is needed to take him through a primary, run-off and general election.

Hance wants the Senate seat because "I'll be one out of 100" rather than the 434 others with whom he now works. "The Senate is a smaller body and able to focus on more issues. The senator from Texas, California or New York becomes a national figure by speaking out on issues."

Krueger, he said, will be defeated for "some of his liberal positions," which Hance later explained as aid to New York City and labor law reform that would have hurt Texas but which Krueger voted for during his tenure in Congress.

Of the minority groups which are gaining power, Hance said Doggett and Krueger "will promise every group everything." His opposition to amnesty for illegal aliens won't defeat him in the Hispanic sector, said Hance, because they also oppose it.

Looking back to his five years as a representative, Hance put stars beside his work on reducing the Social Security tax from 16 percent to 11.8 and on cutting income taxes with passage of the Conable-Hance bill which saw taxes theoretically reduced by a total of 25 percent over a three-year period. The final installment of that bill became effective July 1.

The issue in this campaign will be economic policy, he said, adding that "the monetary policy has destroyed the economy."

By the time the filing deadline hits in February, Hance predicted the race will have grown to 30 to 40 candidates. Nor did he foresee a problem if former Democratic cohort Phil Gramm of College Station runs and gets the Republican nomination.

"I feel very confident we'll win. The polls showed it was a winnable race before Tower got out," he said. "We're getting a lot of Krueger's supporters from 1978 who supported him then out of necessity."

Millicent Fenwick takes on new fight — world hunger

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Millicent Fenwick, the outspoken, pipesmokin' former grande dame of Congress, has taken up a new pursuit — fighting world hunger.

Next month, the 73-year-old Mrs. Fenwick begins work at her new post in Rome as President Reagan's ambassador to the U.N. food organizations.

Her position is a key one, given that the United States is the world's largest food exporter and its policies can affect food supplies in many nations, particularly in the Third World.

Mrs. Fenwick, widely regarded as the model for the eccentric millionairess-turned-politician "Lacey Davenport" in the "Doonesbury" comic strip, intends to use her fluent Italian and experiences from her farming days in rural New Jersey in her new job.

"My uncle gave me a Guernsey bull for my wedding," she recalls with a laugh. "We used to sell eggs and milk to the most exclusive restaurants in New York City."

In a telephone interview from her Bernardsville, N.J., home before she left last week, Mrs. Fenwick, commenting more seriously, said her primary responsibility will be to deal with the "proliferation" of international groups that deal with food and agriculture problems.

Although formal confirmation of her nomination as ambassador has been stymied for a time by Senate Democrats, she said she thinks it will be approved after Congress returns from its summer recess Sept. 12.

"In the meantime, my dear," says Mrs. Fenwick, "my reading material has been leaning toward "legumes, animal genetics and booklets entitled 'Sanitation Without Water.'"

"Really, my dear, did you know that even latrines can make fascinating reading? And did you know that Sweden has the most? It is amazing what organic waste can do!" says Mrs. Fenwick, recalling her nickname "Outhouse Millie," from her days in the state legislature when she backed improved working conditions, including toilets, for migrant laborers.

The former congresswoman, renowned for her elegant suits and plucky wit during debates, served four terms in the House. But her political career ended last fall after she lost her bid for a Senate seat to Democrat Frank R. Lautenberg.

As a Reagan appointee, she serves no set term. But she says she is undaunted by her task.

"I'm not after a cushy job," she said. "I know there are problems of turf in these international organizations and that a lot of money goes to the numerous groups and the officer corps. ... But what's the alternative? Better more people working to help, than one all-powerful organization that could suppress information."

Mrs. Fenwick said her key position will be serving as the U.S. representative at the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.

Two Braniff Boeing 727 jets wait at Dallas Love Field for Fort Worth Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers to approve Braniff's reorganizaton plan. Attorneys for Braniff's creditors told Flowers Tuesday that their clients approve of the plan.

Braniff reorganization plan waits for approval

FORT WORTH (AP) — Attorneys for Braniff International and its creditors were told to return to court today where a bankruptcy judge is considering putting his stamp of approval on a plan to put the airline back in business this winter.

Braniff lawyers told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers on Tuesday that creditors voted overwhelmingly to go ahead with a reorganization plan that would pump a $70 million Hyatt Corp. investment into the bankrupt airline.

But representatives of creditors who oppose the plan complained to the judge about the voting-counting procedures and challenged the outcome.

Flowers tentatively approved the vote Tuesday, but continued the hearing until today without making a final decision.

If Flowers approves the proposal, 30 planes and 2,000 employees could go back to work, marking the end of the lengthy court battle that began when Braniff declared bankruptcy and halted operations in May 1982.

Hyatt has offered the $70 million in exchange for 80 percent of the stock in the new company.

At the Tuesday hearing, Tracy Mai, a trust officer at Mercantile National Bank, Dallas, who served as ballot agent for Braniff, explained in detail the voting tabulaton procedure.

Creditors were divided into different classes, such as secured and unsecured, under the bankruptcy procedure. Votes were tabulated for each category. Approval ranged from 85 percent to 100 percent of the total number of shareholders voting in each class.

Attorneys for the Bank of New York, the federal Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp. and individual shareholders or groups of shareholders complained to the judge of the procedure followed in tabulating votes.

An attorney for the PCBG said the irregularities would change the outcome of the vote. Braniff attorneys disagreed.

"They're wrong," said Rick Schifler of the Washington law firm of Arnold and Porter. "Even if you disallowed all the 'irregular' votes, there would still be 68 percent approval within the class (which includes the PCGB). And that's the class that had the narrowest margin for approval."

Interested parties have 10 days to appeal Flowers' decision. An earlier Braniff reorganization attempt was scrapped during the appeal phase.

That proposal called for Braniff to lease its planes to Pacific Southwest Airlines.

Hollings says U.S. faces grim economic future

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings says he'll try to claim the Democratic presidential nomination without concentrating on such traditional constituencies as minorities, labor union and students.

Speaking Tuesday before the Dallas Democratic forum, Hollings also said the United States faces a grim economic future unless the federal budget is reduced and industries are protected through trade sanctions.

Hollings, of South Carolina, said the Democratic Party has "been postured as the party of the special interest. We've been appealing to interests at the expense of the common good."

The United States should set up a common market with Latin American countries and, at the same time, enforce trade sanctions on Asian and European countries until they ease their restrictive policies, Hollings said.

Asked later if he was advocating trade barrier, Hollings said, "You call it barriers. I call it policy. You can't be a world power and not have some economic backbone in your country."

Hollings also said he would eliminate federal deficits by rolling back the tax cut "for the rich," eliminating indexing of income taxes and cutting defense spending slightly.

If the budget is not balanced, high interest rates will make it impossible for American industry to expand and modernize to compete with foreign companies, Hollings said.

Civil rights violation case slated to begin

HOUSTON (AP) — The government today prepared to unveil its case against a former Texas sheriff and three deputies accused of torturing prisoners to extract confessions by shackling them to chairs and nearly drowning them.

Former San Jacinto County Sheriff James C. "Humpy" Parker and three of his former deputies are charged in U.S. District Court in Houston of violating jail inmates' civil rights and with depriving people of liberty without due process of law.

The four were named in a six-count indictment issued in May, a month after a federal judge rejected as "inappropriate" a plea bargaining agreement in which Parker pleaded guilty to similar charges. The guilty plea was withdrawn following rejection of the agreement.

Federal authorities say as many as 15 people may have been tortured between September 1976 and April 1982.

Scott Woodward, the assistant U.S. attorney handling the government's case before Judge James DeAnda, said at least six of the victims would testify today.

A jury of seven men and six women, chosen after day-long questioning Tuesday, will consider the evidence. One of the 13 will be an alternate.

Attorneys expect the trial to last about two weeks, although DeAnda warned jurors, "This is going to be a long trial." Some of the sessions would stretch into the evening hours, he said.

Parker resigned in March as sheriff of the county about 50 miles north of Houston. He and the three deputies on trial with him — John Glover, Carl Lee and Floyd Baker — are free on bond.

Parker said after Tuesday's session that he was "fine" but said any other comments would be made by his attorney, Thomas Taylor of Houston. The former sheriff appeared in good humor, chatting and laughing with attorneys during one recess.

Taylor told the court he planned to call 30 witnesses and was prepared to call 45 more. Among them were judges and law enforcement officers from San Jacinto and several neighboring counties.

"I didn't know it was going to be so comprehensive," Woodward said of the defense witness list.

Taylor refused, however, to indicate a defense strategy. "Let him guess," he said, nodding toward Woodward. He also asked reporters not to speak with Parker.

The alleged torture involved handcuffing victims to a chair, sometimes shackling their feet, then tilting the chair backwards and placing a towel over their face. Water was poured into the towel, causing the person to nearly suffocate and drown, federal court documents say.

The civil rights violation carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Challenger's astronauts launch Indian satellite successfully

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's "lobster shift" astronauts early today launched a unique 3-in-1 satellite for India that will improve weather forecasting on the vast subcontinent and bring telephone and television service to many isolated communities for the first time.

"The deployment was on time,...and the satellite looks good," mission specialist Guion Bluford reported as the payload spun away. He said the crew felt a "slight clunk" as the craft was released.

It was the sixth successful communications satellite launch for a shuttle crew.

On the shuttle's 18th turn around the Earth, Bluford, America's first black astronaut, gave the commands that started the satellite spinning at 40rpm for stability. At 3:49 a.m. EDT, he pushed a button that sprung the payload out of the cargo bay.

Commander Richard Truly fired Challenger's engines so the ship was a safe distance, about 12 miles away, when the satellite's onboard rocket fired 45 minutes later to propel it toward a stationary parking space 22,300 miles above the equator south of India.

More than an hour after deployment, Mission Control informed the crew that the Hassan, India, tracking station had confirmed the firing and that it had gone "real well."

INSAT, an acronym for India National Satellite, is to reach the high outpost on Friday.

Operating on their day-is-night schedule, the five astronauts began Day 2 of the eighth shuttle mission at 9:32 p.m. EDT Tuesday night, as Mission Control in Houston wakened them with the music of the Georgia Tech fight song.

"That's the spirit," commented Richard Truly, Challenger's commander, who is a Tech graduate.

Fire kills eight in Georgia dormitory

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Fire erupted today in a dormitory at a home for the mentally retarded, killing eight people, authorities said.

The building at Annandale Village was "a total loss," said Laura Lee Maxwell, a dispatcher with the Gwinnett County fire department.

"We have had eight confirmed deaths," Ms. Maxwell said at about 7:30 a.m. "We have just gotten the all clear, so as far as we know, there are no other victims."

Sixteen people were in the dorm when the fire broke out, and eight managed to escape, authorities said.

Most of the bodies were found in the basement, because the floors of the building collapsed, officials said.

Jean Cartwright, secretary to the executive director at the residential home, said the fire began about 1:30 a.m.

"We assume it (the cause) was the wiring but it is being investigated," she said. "It's just awful. I just can't talk about it."

Blacks support Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backed by a New Right political action committee, a group of black professionals has formed a "Blacks for Reagan" organization to support the president's re-election next year.

"This administration has done more for blacks than any other administration this century with the possible exception of John Kennedy's," Jay Parker, head of the Lincoln Institute in Philadelphia, said Tuesday at a news conference held to announce the group's formation.

But Parker conceded the group will have difficulty overcoming widespread black opposition to President Reagan, who has not announced whether he will seek a second term. "We have no illusions," he said. "It will take quite a while to change that."

According to public opinion polls, Reagan's standing among black voters is very low. Only 10 percent of blacks surveyed in June by a CBS-New York Times poll said they would support a re-election bid by Reagan while 83 percent opposed a second term for the president.

The group will receive at least $200,000 from the National Conservative Political Action Committee to conduct advertising and direct mail campaigns, said John T. Dolan, head of NCPAC.

The announcement was made on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, the site of last Saturday's civil rights rally that attracted 300,000 people who gathered to condemn Reagan's policies.

Parker, who was joined at the news conference by actress Mabel King and Los Angeles businessman Henry Miller, criticized the marchers as representing special interests.

"Those who were here Saturday were representing the interests of the Democratic Party," he said.

The group that organized the march, meanwhile, announced it would push for passage of 14 pieces of legislation, including a public works jobs bill and a measure making the late Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday a national holiday.

Walter Fauntroy, a Democrat who is the District of Columbia's non-voting delegate to Congress, said the New Coalition of Conscience does not merely represent Democratic Party interests.

"It so happens that the policies we espouse have not, in the main, been espoused by this administration," Fauntroy said.

Police serve as chauffeurs

DALLAS (AP) — The best police protection money can buy may be behind the wheel of the family car.

Two enterprising patrolmen in University Park, a fashionable Dallas suburb, have started a chauffeur service with drivers who are all off-duty patrolman.

Curtis Clary, 29, and Larry Schoolcraft, 28, hope to attract a large clientele from affluent north Dallas, University Park and Highland Park, and say they already have received 30 to 40 calls from people wanting to hire a chauffeur.

"What many executives want for themselves and their families is a driver who is not only trustworthy but who is armed," Clary said. "Most people know that police officers are only off duty to a point."

Clary and Schoolcraft have the blessing of their boss, University Park Police Chief David Beidelman, who said he thinks Parks Cities Chauffeurs is a good idea.

"Some of our residents wear expensive jewelry, and to have a police officer chauffeuring them adds a great measure of safety," Beidelman said.

Clary said he has lined up 20 off-duty officers for drivers, who were told to get a chauffeur's license and "be ready to jump behind the wheel of a Mercedes." The minimum charge for one of the chauffeurs is $75 a three-hour minimum at $25 an hour, he said.

The customer ordinarily supplies the car, but the company will rent a limousine for an extra charge, Clary said.

"Most Park Cities residents probably would rather be driven around in the $45,000 Mercedes parked in their driveways than in a limousine, anyway," he said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, September 1, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of "Tarzan" creator Edgar Rice Burroughs, United Auto Workers leader Walter Reuther and Jack Benny's popular announcer and sidekick Don Wilson. Also sharing your birthday: comedienne-actress Lily Tomlin, heavyweight boxer Rocky Marciano and country music's Conway Twitty. Enthusiasm helps you find a way to revive a business and escape a financial crisis. Stop scattering your energies and zero in on your most important goal. Raises and loans are possible. The help you give a friend or loved one this fall will benefit you most of all. A casual romance turns serious. Know your own heart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not crawl into yourself just because someone has hurt you. Your sadness will disappear quickly if you go out and socialize. You have more friends than you realize.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Strive to win the attention of someone who can help you become active in your field again. Creditors are understanding if you explain the circumstances. Take a chance on an old friend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Neighbors lend you a helping hand. A last-minute replacement at work will aid your career. A sudden trip may be necessary. Be prepared to leave at a moment's notice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your goals will prove elusive unless you set a schedule and follow it. Encourage a former employer to rehire you. Pick up the phone and call loved one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Attachments that have become burdens should be severed. Keeping careful records could save you time and money in the future. Lost belongings reappear. Get in touch with distant relatives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be less skeptical and others will react positively to your suggestions. You could make a lot of money if you are in the right place at the right time. Confide in loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not be thrown by a sudden shift in loved one's mood. Be more self-reliant. Efforts to mix business with pleasure now could prove embarrassing. Romance takes a back seat to work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day for travel, scholastic affairs and business negotiations. Your chances for advancement are excellent if you make a greater effort. Try to develop better organizational skills.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Communication is an important tool in your business. Handle a delicate personal matter with tact. You and your loved ones will be pleased with the results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance is puzzling! Work harder to improve communication. Gambling will not help you balance the budget. Complications arise if you fail to check details.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Current trends indicate a prosperous career. Make good use of your powerful contacts. A friend offers to back a pet project. Go all out to improve an intimate relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone may try to pry into your personal affairs. Guard both your privacy and your money. Travel holds interesting possibilities. Spend more time with family members.

Job not the same at CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Working conditions are not good for George Crile.

The embattled producer suspended by CBS News from editorial responsibilities still goes to work every day. Crile's assignment is helping lawyers prepare CBS News' defense in the $120 million libel lawsuit filed by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the result of a documentary that Crile produced.

Facing cold shoulders and blank stares from colleagues isn't easy. Crile isn't likely to hobnob with the boys, join in the office football pool or sing carols at the CBS Christmas party.

"It's been rough for a year and a half," he says. "Most people tend to ignore you, they treat you like you've disappeared. They're embarrassed to come and talk to you, and you don't feel like corralling them and asking them to hear your defense. But I always knew the documentary was unassailable."

Some important people at CBS News, like Dan Rather, Mike Wallace and Bill Moyers, have offered Crile advice and consolation. But, Crile says, "The difficult thing has been my inability to have an internal forum at CBS.

"It's one thing to be misunderstood and not have your own defense in the outer world. It's another thing to be closed off in CBS and not be able to explain yourself to your peers. You want to be able to tell CBS people that there is a defense."

The documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy — A Vietnam Deception," accused Westmoreland of conspiring to falsify enemy troop figures during the Vietnam War. Months after the January 1982 broadcast, TV Guide charged that Crile had violated several CBS News procedures while preparing the film.

Then, CBS' own internal investigation accepted the validity of many of TV Guide's charges, although the report, prepared by CBS News executive Burton Benjamin, did not dispute the underlying substance of the broadcast.

Then, last June, after CBS learned that Crile had taped an interview with former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara without telling McNamara — another violation of CBS' guidelines — the producer was suspended.

Crile says his biggest mistake was accepting CBS' edict that he keep silent while Benjamin conducted his internal investigation.

"I blame myself for that vow of silence," he says.

The Life Master Pairs was one of the premier events at the recent North American Summer Championships in New Orleans. It attracted most of the continent's top players, so it is not surprising that the standard of play was high. Watch Joel Friedberg of New York in action on this deal.

When West's one spade bid was passed round to him, South elected to balance with one no trump. (Purists might claim that he was a point or two shy for that action.) North had an easy raise to three no trump.

West elected to lead the king of hearts. Declarer played low from dummy and East signaled with the eight. West continued with a low heart, and dummy's jack won. Declarer came to hand with the king of spades and successfully finessed the jack. East stuffed a heart.

Declarer led a club to the king and then a low diamond. To avoid a later end play, West won the ace of diamonds and cleared the ace of spades as East discarded another heart.

Why had East chosen to stuff hearts? Declarer decided that it could only be because East did not have spare cards in the minor suits; i.e., he had started with a 1-4-4-4 distribution.

Now that he had read the hand, the rest was easy. Declarer cashed the ace of hearts and king of diamonds, and then threw West in with a spade. West could cash his two spade winners, but then he had to present declarer with his contract by leading away from the queen of clubs into declarer's A-J tenace.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Flight of time

If you didn't crawl out of bed at 2 a.m. (EDT) Tuesday to watch the launch of the space shuttle Challenger, don't feel unpatriotic. They're were plenty of other sleepyheads around, too.

The fact that you and millions of other Americans slept peacefully through the launch of a spacecraft is a stark testimonial to the success of the American space program. After numerous space shuttle launches, successive moon missions, more long-range space probes than most people can remember, space flight has become old hat. It's part of the everyday life of Americans and certainly nothing to stay up nights about.

Quick, how many shuttle launches have there been? Well, if you're stuck on that question, how many different shuttle crafts have been used? Okay, we'll make it really easy. What was the name of the first space shuttle launched by the United States in 1981?

Space buffs will be able to answer most of those questions. The rest of us — well, we were sleeping. But just because an event becomes so familiar that it doesn't hold our attention as it formerly did isn't to be construed as insignificance. The space shuttle program is paving new roads for Americans to follow; they're just skyroads.

Think back. It was only 22 years ago that man had never broken free from his earthly confines. In those 22 years Americans have scaled unscalable peaks in space technology, putting men into space, into orbit, on the moon. And now, we're shuttling flights in and out of the earth's atmosphere every few months. Americans have put their first woman astronaut in space and the current shuttle flight is carrying the nation's first black astronaut.

Americans have not conquered space, though. Rather, we have taken space in our hands and are molding it to our use, reaping the benefits of a dream that less than a quarter of a century ago was just that, a dream.

The future boggles the imagination when one considers what the past 22 years have brought. We relish the adventure of the future as man learns to live — and play — in the extraterrestrial.

But can't somebody at NASA get the launches rearranged to, say, 10 a.m.?

Iron curtain cuties

By curious coincidence, the Soviet bloc nations of Hungary and Poland will be conducting national beauty contests within a few days of the finals of the United States' own Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, in September.

Considering that the Polish and Hungarian competitions will take place under the baleful glares of the Kremlin masters who have denounced such spectacles as evidence of Western decadence, the determination of the two countries to proceed with their programs can be interpreted as further disaffection with the Moscow regime.

The contests certainly seem to signify a breaking away from Russian restraint, for the pageant in Hungary will be the very first since World War II and the one in Poland will be the first since 1958.

Both Poland and Hungary abound with beautiful young women who could qualify as candidates for any such contest in any part of the world. So it is fervently to be hoped that for benefit of both the girls and the spectators, the "talent" phase of the contests will dwell on the two peoples' lovely music, dance and poetry and not be limited to dull recitations from the gospel according to Karl Marx.

Another View:

Chiding hardly helps

The record of the last few years in Chile seems to show that the people are willing to tolerate, and even endorse, authoritarian rule so long as it supplies peace and prosperity.

But when an economic crunch comes along, authoritarian rule becomes intolerable. Protests occur. And since protests are intolerable to dictators, repression occurs and, inevitably, so does violence. Twenty-four persons were killed in recent Chilean unrest following protests sparked by the country's flagging economy.

The unemployment rate is at least 20 percent, and another 13 percent have public-works jobs that pay only $30 a week or less. Labor unions and centrist political parties have demanded the resignation of President Augusto Pinochet, who overthrew Salvador Allende in a military coup 10 years ago.

A Chilean worker interviewed by the New York Times no doubt spoke for many when he said: "There would be no protest if there were work. I don't know what a change of government would mean. I only care if a government will give me work or not."

In 1980, when work was plentiful and the political turbulence that marked the Allende years was minimal, Chilean voters extended the reign of Pinochet through 1989. It is unlikely, given the recent protests, that Pinochet would receive a similar mandate if the vote were held today.

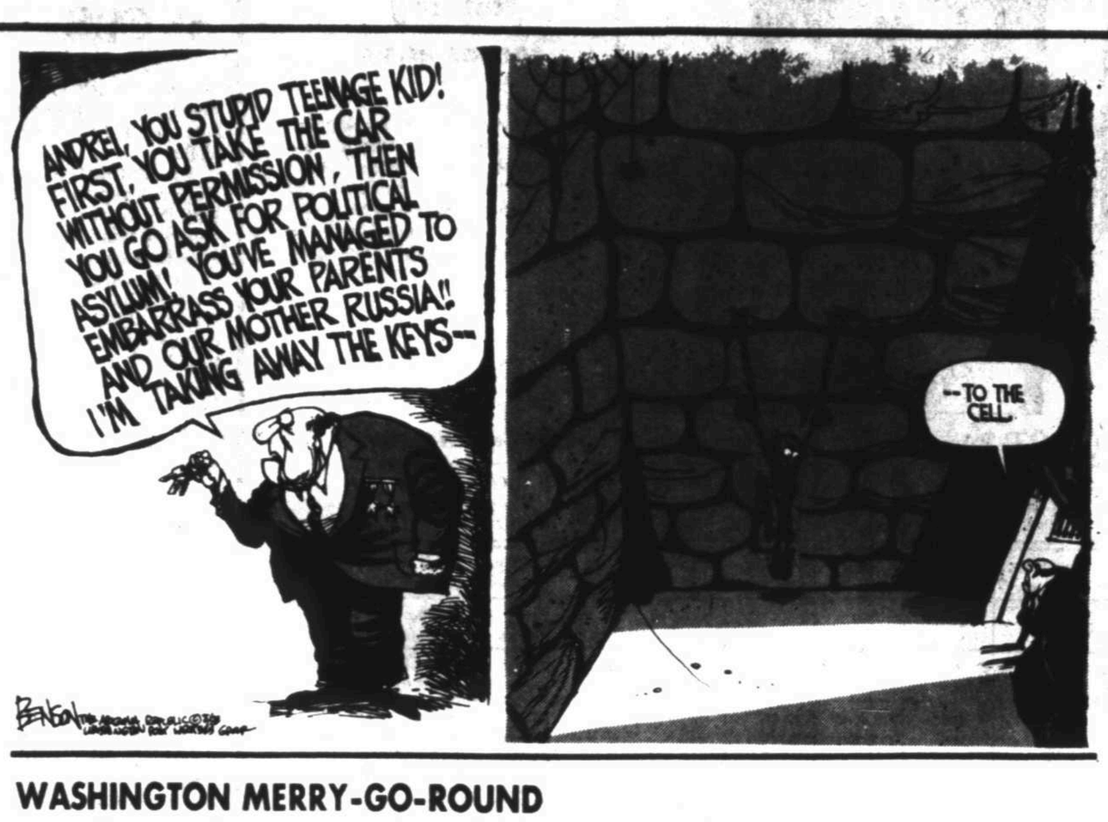

Chilean officials have spoken of amending the constitution to advance the date of congressional elections, now scheduled to be held in 1990. But the promises are vague, and in any case are unlikely to mollify political or union critics or the Catholic Church.

It is unlikely, too, that the Chilean reformers were much impressed with the U.S. State Department's recent statement deploring "the loss of life and the injuries" in Chile. Some protest! When workers and political opponents backed by the Catholic Church are repressed with deadly force in right-wing Chile, the United States deplores and regrets; when similar acts occur in, say, left-wing Poland, drastic U.S. action results, including economic sanctions.

Chile's economic woes, and to some extent its political troubles, are shared by many other countries. Since the economic sickness is global, it's not going to be helped much by anything the Chilean government can do.

But what that government can do, and what the Chileans are demanding that it do, is ease up on the repression. That, at least, would make the poverty and the joblessness easier to bear. Why couldn't the United States demand that of Chile, too?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Drug probe drops from sight

WASHINGTON — The breakup of a Capitol Hill cocaine ring set in motion the criminal investigative process which, under the public spotlight, should have been difficult to nullify. But the cover-up squad at the Justice Department apparently has succeeded in thwarting the investigation.

Jack Anderson

The department has announced that there is not enough evidence to prosecute three members of Congress who were under investigation for allegedly buying drugs from the ring. This establishes precedent that will also end the investigation of six other members who had been identified as cocaine customers.

The investigative files are not available to the press or public. We are in the position the Justice Department likes to have us in: We have to take their word for it.

Government has grown very knowing about the press — about its limited resources, its short attention span, its difficulty in pursuing libelous stories, its inability to function when information is cut short.

It's hard to go beyond a prosecutor who will not prosecute the higher-ups. Nor can we circumvent defendants who plead guilty and keep their silence.

And so the case against the congressmen has been passed over — with only unanswered questions to tempt our interest on a quiet day. The Capitol Hill cocaine scandal, like a block of cement heaved over the Fourteenth Street Bridge, has vanished out of sight.

But occasional putrefying remnants bubble up from below now and again to pother the calm surface, marking the spot where the scandal disappeared.

Narcotics investigators developed important leads, for example, pointing to the accused congressmen. But the record shows that the prosecutor, Dan Bernstein, failed to pursue them.

By relentlessly pressuring one of the dope dealers to plead guilty, Bernstein also prevented a trial that was sure to have brought out evidence embarrassing to Congress.

The indicted dealer, Troy Todd, 23, for months refused to plead guilty. But Bernstein apparently didn't want the case to go to trial. He made repeated calls to Stanley Dietz, one of Todd's attorneys, who said Bernstein threatened to investigate other members of the Todd family if his client failed to enter a guilty plea.

The prosecutor also made several phone calls — some of them after office hours — to Todd's father, who said Bernstein "pressured" him to persuade his son to plead guilty.

Todd finally pleaded guilty, and the potentially explosive trial was called off. He is awaiting sentencing with his co-conspirator, Douglas W. Marshall, who had pleaded guilty earlier.

A public trial would have brought out the fact that members of Congress were the focal point of the original investigation, according to a source close to the case. In fact, a federal grand jury, in the presence of a high Justice Department official, heard testimony that Bernstein had mishandled the case and had either ignored or brushed aside leads pointing to congressmen.

Here are other examples, gathered by my reporters Indy Badhwar and Bill Bartman, of the way Bernstein limited the scope of the investigation:

— The official record of the case, including several sworn statements by investigators and suspects under questioning by Bernstein, contains not a single reference to drug trafficking on Capitol Hill. In contrast, the files of the Drug Enforcement Administration contain detailed references to the distribution and use of cocaine on the Hill.

— The grand jury that indicted Todd and Marshall did not receive specific information about members of Congress identified by the drug dealers — though such information was readily available to the prosecutor. In fact, Bernstein failed to subpoena at least two witnesses named by a narcotics official as having information on drug use by congressmen.

— When a narcotics investigator obtained a subpoena for documents relating to a Capitol Police investigation of drug abuse in the halls of Congress, the police chief called Bernstein, who quashed the subpoena. The Capitol Police documents were then destroyed. Bernstein made no effort to investigate this possible obstruction of justice.

Taken together, these are elements of a cover-up: destruction of evidence, withholding information and witnesses from a grand jury, and pressuring a defendant to plead guilty to avoid a trail that could have rocked the Capitol.

This conduct, said U.S. attorney Rudolph Giuliani in New York City, an experienced narcotics prosecutor, was "unusual, I hope, unethical or at least pretty close."

Footnote: Bernstein and his superior, Don Campbell, chief of the Justice Department's major crimes division, admitted to conversations with Todd's attorney and father but denied putting pressure on them. "The case against Todd was so strong that there was no need for any pressure," Campbell said.

LABOR LAG: Like American athletes, American workers are no longer the world's best. Their productivity has lagged, yet their appetites have increased. They keep demanding higher salaries for lower-quality work.

The International Monetary Fund has just completed an exhaustive study of the problem, stamped "Not for Public Use" and "Contains Confidential Information." Here are the reasons it gives for the decline in U.S. productivity:

— U.S. companies have placed greater emphasis on short-term profits than long-term goals. Antitrust laws have also discouraged corporations from pooling their research to improve U.S. products. In contrast, joint research not only is encouraged but is organized by the Japanese government. The resulting lag in U.S. technological and scientific research, says the report, has "contributed ... to the productivity slowdown."

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Latin America waiting on U.S.

WASHINGTON — Latin America is working its way out of the worst recession the region has seen since the 1930s, according to a prominent inter-American banker.

William Giandoni

But the long- and medium-term prospects of the other American republics depend in great part on the economic recovery of the United States and other industrialized countries, Dr. Jorge Ruiz Lara, an Inter-American Development Bank official, said recently.

"Evidence of recovery has been seen in the United States, Japan and some European countries since last November," according to Ruiz Lara.

"This has had positive effects on Latin American economic development."

However, for the next several years Latin America will need financial resources from abroad on favorable terms, with rates of interest "not as high as those of 1981," and over longer terms.

The area also will have to be able to sell its raw materials and manufactured goods to the industrialized countries, he added.

If those conditions are met, Ruiz Lara said, the Latin American countries will be able to pay back the loans they have obtained from U.S. and other foreign banks. Principal, as well as interest, he emphasized.

The size of the foreign debts of Brazil and Mexico, at record heights of $90 billion and $80 billion, according to most estimates, doesn't disturb hemisphere bankers too much. After all, Brazil's population is around 125 million and Mexico's about 74 million. That would mean that each individual Brazilian's per capita share of the country's foreign debt would be around $720; each Mexican's around $1,080.

Most of the Latin countries face another lean year or two, but by 1985-86 Latin American economies should have positive rates of growth, Ruiz Lara predicted. Among the signs that bankers see that the United States and Japan are recovering economically are improvements in employment, which should mean it will be easier to keep the U.S. market open to Latin exports.

Europe is another matter, though. Ruiz Lara doesn't expect much economic improvement in the Old World for the next three to four years and warns that that may accentuate the tendency toward protectionism, which limits Latin access to European markets.

He warned that the sustained recovery Latin America is counting on in the United States and Europe will depend on interest rates not increasing to the 1982 levels. "If they do," Ruiz Lara said, "the recovery will be short-lived."

As an indication that Latin America is working itself out of serious difficulty, he noted that recently both the value and volume of the hemisphere's most important commodity exports are increasing. The only exception is coffee, the price of which is low. But prospects are improving for other commodities.

Ruiz Lara spoke in the name of the Inter-American Development Bank on the occasion of announcement of the release Aug. 22, of its 1983 report on "Economic and Social Progress in Latin America."

The bank's report showed, though, that there was no statistical progress in Latin America last year.

"After more than 15 years (1964-1980) of impressive expansion, Latin America in 1983 entered the third year of a severe recession," the bank said. Gross domestic product fell for the first time since World War II, by about 1.2 percent in 1982.

In seven countries — Argentina, Bolivia, Costa Rica, Chile, El Salvador, Guyana and Uruguay — by the end of 1982 incomes had dropped more than 10 percent compared to 1980 levels. In four others — Barbados, Brazil, Guatemala and Honduras — the drop was between 5 and 10 percent, the bank reported.

Only one country, Trinidad-Tobago, recorded an improvement.

Latin America's trade balance did show a surplus of $7.7 billion, but that was because, after paying on their foreign debt, they had to slash imports from the United States and the rest of the world.

"Most notable was the trade performance of Mexico, whose surplus reached $6.9 billion compared with a $3.4 billion deficit in 1981," the bank noted.

"Latin American exports decreased by 9.8 percent in 1982," according to the bank. "Imports decreased at a much higher rate, 19.4 percent. In Chile imports fell by 46 percent, in Argentina by 45 percent, and in Mexico by 37 percent."

Despite it all, the bank finds that "Latin America's economic potential remains undiminished," and said "there are strong reasons for expecting that the region will resume its dynamic growth."

ART BUCHWALD

Don't win without a fight!

All I know about baseball is what I see on television. And the only thing they show on the news about baseball is managers and players pouring out of the dugouts, slugging each other over some question concerning an umpire's call. Baseball owners are now aware that the fans expect at least one good fight on the field or they don't feel they got their money's worth.

Art Buchwald

It is for this reason that owners have changed their thinking about the type of baseball managers they must hire for their teams.

"Corky, I'm going to have to let you go."

"Why, Mr. Stillwater? The club is in first place in our division, and we've never been playing better ball."

"Have you seen the attendance records for our last 28 games? We haven't filled half the park. Do you know why? Our team doesn't have the fighting spirit."

"How can you say that, Mr. Stillwater? Morale has never been higher and the players are determined to get to the World Series."

"I'm not talking about that kind of fighting spirit. I'm talking about the kind that sells tickets. When was the last time one of the infielders tried to deck a pitcher from the opposing team?"

"I don't approve of that kind of stuff, Mr. Stillwater."

"It's obvious you don't. And that's the reason we're getting such poor gates. I have attended every home game and not once have I seen one of our outfielders throw his bat at a first baseman after he struck out."

"If he did that he could be tossed out of the game."

"What's the big deal if he's thrown out of the game?"

"He also could be fined $500."

"I'm glad you brought that up. Do you realize this team has the least fines for unsportsmanlike behavior of any club in the league? We're the laughingstock of the division."

"But we're role models for kids all over the country. Throwing bats at opposing players could give the game a bad name."

"Perhaps, but we have to think of the box office, Corky, or there would be no role models for the kids to follow."

"I can't do anything about it if my players follow the rules."

"It's obvious, and that's why I'm letting you go. You're a good manager when it comes to baseball but you don't have pizazz."

"What do you mean by pizazz?"

"Have you ever kicked any dirt in an umpire's face when you objected to a call?"

"No, sir."

"Have you ever spit tobacco on one who threatened to throw you out of the game?"

"I don't chew tobacco."

"Have you ever grabbed an umpire's hat and thrown it on the ground?"

"Not that I recall."

"That's what I mean by pizazz. Do you realize every time you come on the field to protest a call, the TV people go to commercials?"

"I don't like to hold up the game."

"You're hopeless, Corky. You're so polite the crowd doesn't even know your name. No wonder nobody ever asks you to do television commercials."

"But I've given you a winning baseball team."

"I don't want a winning baseball team. I want one that will pour out of the dugout every other inning and beat the tar out of the opposition. That's money in the bank. Let's face it, Corky, you're no Billy Martin."

"Why the sudden decision to fire me now?"

"I decided you just couldn't hack it when George Brett had pine tar up to the top of his bat, and you didn't say a word about it."

"We tossed him out at third base."

"Yeh, but not one station carried us on the evening news. Let me give you some advice, Corky. If all you think about is winning, and not fighting, you'll never work in baseball again."

Suspect leaps from tall building in single bound, sprints to freedom

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A burglary suspect cornered in a church jumped from a second-story window, sailed over a 7-foot fence and sprinted to freedom, authorities said.

The fence was about 15 feet from the church, and police officers with dogs had been waiting under the window early Tuesday in case the suspect emerged.

Other officers, also aided by police dogs, were searching inside the Centenary Methodist Church in Memphis.

"They thought if he jumped down the dog man would get him," said police Lt. Hank Thomas. "But he jumped over them, dog and all."

The suspect was described as 6-foot-1, 170 pounds and agile.

"He could possibly be a hurdler," Thomas said.

Shooting death 'unjustified act'

BALTIMORE (AP) — The shooting death of a black motorcyclist was "an unjustified act on the part of an off-duty officer," according to a state attorney who announced the indictment of the white officer on manslaughter and handgun charges.

Officer Daniel Shanahan, a 10-year police veteran, shot and killed 49-year-old Booker Lee Lancaster on July 13 after an apparent altercation.

The incident prompted a petition drive by Baltimore's black community calling for the grand jury to investigate the shooting.

Judge cuts off woman's appeal

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A judge cut off the last avenue of appeal for Jean Harris, convicted of murdering Scarsdale Diet developer Herman Tarnower, when he denied her motion for a new trial.

Mrs. Harris' lawyers contended she was psychotic, suicidal and addicted to amphetamines during her trial and was unable to make intelligent decisions about her defense, but Westchester County Judge Aldo Nastasi refused Tuesday to order a new trial on those grounds.

Mrs. Harris, 60, is serving a 15-year-to-life prison term for the March 10, 1980, shooting of Tarnower, her lover of 14 years. Her conviction has been upheld by the state's Court of Appeals, and the U.S. Supreme Court has refused to hear the case.

Hiker won't be criminally charged

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — No criminal charges are planned against a hiker who accidentally dislodged a rock that killed a 10-year-old boy, but he will be fined $25 for traveling off a trail, officials say.

Lover lost his temper

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The spurned lover of Dominique Dunne admitted Tuesday he strangled the actress in an explosion of rage so violent that it wiped out his memory of what happened.

"I just lost my temper. I remember just, like exploding," said John Sweeney, testifying in a monotone about the Oct. 30, 1982, strangulation which resulted in Miss Dunne's death five days later.

"I just exploded and lunged at her," he said.

When his attorney asked if he remembers now what happened after the lunge, he said, "No, sir."

The last thing he recalls, he said, is "I remember Dominique and I screaming at each other."

"In retrospect, you know you choked Dominique, don't you?" asked attorney Mike Adelson.

"Yes," Sweeney said.

Sweeney, 27, a former chef at the posh Ma Maison restaurant has pleaded innocent to a murder charge in the attack. Superior Court Judge Burton Katz ruled Monday that Sweeney cannot be found guilty of first-degree murder because there was no evidence that the attack was deliberate or premeditated.

Sweeney said the violent confrontation came moments after the 22-year-old actress, who appeared in the movie "Poltergeist," told him their love affair was over and accused him of obsessive love for her.

Sweeney's description of the night he attacked Miss Dunne came after a lengthy discourse on how much he loved her and how they had planned a reconciliation with an eventual goal of marriage and children.

He said her decision to call it off took him by surprise and led to a loud argument on the front porch of the home they had shared. It was in front of the house that Miss Dunne was found strangled, though still alive, with Sweeney leaning over the body.

"I remember feeling Dominique underneath me," Sweeney said, speaking almost as if in a trance. "I saw Dominique's face, and at that time I knew I had my hands around her neck...Sometime after that I picked her up and I tried to make her walk...I was shaking her and talking to her."

A hijacker escorts a hostage Tuesday outside of the commandeered Air France Boeing 727 airliner parked at Tehran International Airport in Iran. The hijackers finally surrendered their hostages early today.

Hijackers of Air France jet finally surrender in Tehran

By The Associated Press

The four hijackers of an Air France jetliner surrendered to Iranian authorities today at Tehran airport and 15 hostages held captive since Saturday were freed unharmed, French officials said.

The Arabic-speaking hijackers asked for political asylum in Iran, a spokesman for the French Embassy in Tehran said, but there was no immediate word on how that request would be received.

There were 10 passengers and a seven-member crew remaining on board when the Boeing 727, hijacked Saturday between Vienna and Paris, landed at Tehran Sunday. A Frenchman and his wife were released later for the woman to receive medical attention for exhaustion.

No further details about the surrender were immediately available.

Before the surrender, Iranian authorities had accepted a demand by the hijackers to hold a news conference today. The agreement came after a fresh threat they would blow up the plane, the official Iranian news agency IRNA reported.

The hijackers also agreed to negotiate with two Lebanese and two Iraqi Islamic clergymen after refusing to do so earlier, IRNA said. The clergymen reportedly urged the gunmen to surrender.

The developments came shortly after the hijackers ordered the pilot to start the plane's engines and announced they would take off because the French government had not yet replied to a new list of demands they had submitted during the night.

But Iranian authorities responded by parking several vehicles on the runway in front of the Boeing 727 to prevent it from moving, IRNA said.

IRNA said the four hijackers, reportedly armed with guns and a bag of grenades, had made a series of demands and proposals Tuesday involving the release of some or all of the hostages.

IRNA said the new proposals were:

—Exchange all their captives for the French charge d'affaires in Tehran, Jean Perrin.

—Swap the passengers, said to number 8 to 10, for the release of all Arab nationals imprisoned in France.

—Release the pilot, two of the six other crew members and two United Nations officials among the passengers if France withdraws its troops from Chad, halts military aid to Iraq and refuses to supply Iraq with Super Etendard bombers.

Iran has been at war with Iraq for the past three years and has strained relations with France because it supplies weapons to Iraq.

In a telephone interview with a French radio station this morning, Perrin said there was "no question" of exchanging himself for the hostages.

The hijackers negotiated with Iranian authorities Tuesday, and one of the gunmen fired a shot in the air when he emerged briefly from the aircraft with a hostage, an Air France spokesman said.

Tehran Radio said the men claimed to belong to the Iraqi Mujahedeen (Iraqi Holy Warriors), an underground group supported by Iran that is opposed to the Iraqi government of President Saddam Hussein.

The hostages reportedly included two Americans, Clayton L. Thomas, 61, of Brimfield, Mass., and his wife, Margaret Ann, 54; a Briton, Martin Lees, 42, of the U.N. Development Program in New York; a Swedish woman; four French passengers, and seven French crew members.

Japanese recall 'Great Kanto quake'

TOKYO (AP) — "Earthquakes, lightning, fire and father are the four most fearful things in life," says an old Japanese proverb.

The image of the omnipotent family patriarch may have diminished in modern Japan, and the chances of being hit by lightning are statistically slim.

But earthquakes and fires remain as distinct possibilities.

That's why, on Thursday, Sept. 1, more than 4 million residents of Tokyo will take part in annual earthquake drills and recall the day 60 years ago when the capital was struck by the "Great Kanto Earthquake."

In the quake and resulting fires that engulfed Tokyo and the nearby port city of Yokohama, at least 140,000 people perished. It was the worst natural disaster in Japan's history.

It's more than just an anniversary, though. In recent years, Japanese scientists have talked about a "60-year cycle theory," which holds that massive earthquakes strike the tremor-prone Tokyo region about once in every six decades.

"The theory is based on historical evidence of earthquakes dating as far back as the 9th century," said Yoshimitsu Yoshimura of the Coordinating Committee for Earthquake Prediction, a governmental agency responsible for issuing earthquake warnings.

"We do admit there is ample scientific evidence that a large amount of seismic energy gathers potential in cycles. But we know nothing about the exact intervals between big earthquakes nor how much seismic energy is released in lesser earthquakes."

To date, no earthquake warning has been issued by the government, but scientists on the committee say there is a strong possibility of a major tremor striking Shizuoka prefecture (state), about 94 miles west of Tokyo. Many local city and town offices in Shizuoka and in neighboring prefectures have set up elaborate communication and disaster facilities.

The "Great Kanto" quake, named for the flat Kanto plain around Tokyo, hit at two minutes before noon on Saturday, Sept. 1, 1923, just as thousands of housewives were firing up hibachis to cook lunch on open charcoal fires.

When the quake hit, the little cooking fires spread swiftly through crowded neighborhoods of wood and paper houses, the heat becoming so intense it generated firestorms that leveled vast areas.

One such firestorm burned alive or suffocated 38,000 people who had fled to an open field in Honjo, in downtown Tokyo. Authorities have since estimated that of the perhaps 140,000 casualties in Tokyo and Yokohama, 90 percent died by fire.

In a followup tragedy to the quake and fires, some self-defense teams, organized to prevent looting, embarked on killing sprees against Korean residents, on the basis of widespread rumors that the latter were attacking Japanese in gangs and poisoning water wells.

Historians have never pieced together the full scope of the massacres, but the most often-used estimate by newspapers today puts the death toll at 6,000.

Although the Richter scale, which measures earthquake intensity as recorded on seismographs, did not exist in 1923, the Great Kanto upheaval has been estimated at 7.9, a major quake capable of widespread damage. Every full digit on the Richter scale represents a 10-fold increase in intensity.

A study by the Tokyo Metropolitan Government says a quake of that magnitude today probably would cause about 36,000 deaths, leave 63,000 injured, destroy 200,000 homes on impact and trigger some 300 fires that would wipe out 470,000 more homes.

"In that simulation, we assumed that the earthquake hit around noon on a dry winter day, the worst possible timing. But even then, we did not take into account casualties which could result from tsunami (post-tremor ocean waves), falling glass from skyscrapers, and other causes which are difficult to predict," Kenichi Ginbayashi, an official of the Tokyo Metropolitan Disaster Prevention Bureau, said in an interview.

Mass hysteria, a condition which prevailed after the 1923 quake and helped encourage the massacres of Koreans, is less likely after a major earthquake now, said Professor Kazuo Shimada of Sacred Heart Women's College, a specialist in social psychology.

Police deployed to prevent protest

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Heavy concentrations of riot police were reported in the Baltic port of Gdansk and the southern industrial city of Nowa Huta today to head off protests on the third anniversary of Solidarity.

Witnesses in Gdansk who reported the police buildup said Lech Walesa, leader of the outlawed union, abandoned the white minibus he usually takes to his job at the Lenin shipyards and took a train instead.

They said this indicated he would join a transit boycott in the afternoon. Walesa said he also may defy the Communist authorities and speak, if pressed by Solidarity supporters, at a wreath-laying ceremony.

At the Vatican, Polish-born Pope John Paul II described the accords that established Solidarity as "particularly important" and called for the application of the pact.

Speaking in Polish at the end of a weekly general audience, the pope called for prayers "so that these accords may be applied in the context of a genuine dialogue between the government and the society."

The Polish government on Tuesday turned down Walesa's request to hold a rally outside the Lenin shipyards and said it would allow a wreath-laying ceremony instead. An agreement signed at the Baltic port city three years ago created the Soviet bloc's first independent trade movement.

"The ideals which Solidarity stood for still enjoy the full and sincere support of Polish society," Walesa said in a statement. "The authorities are aware of this, and that is why they resort to such infamous decisions."

Walesa said he may speak at the wreath-laying ceremony before a monument to workers erected near the shipyard.

"My decision is that I will not speak. But if there are people around and they press me into speaking, then I guess I'll have no choice but to speak," he told The Associated Press in an interview.

The ceremony was permitted in an apparent last-minute attempt to defuse expected unrest.

Solidarity supporters are expected to stage marches and a rush-hour boycott of public transport today in Warsaw, Gdansk, Nowa Huta and other strongholds of the outlawed labor federation.

But Solidarity's call for a nationwide show of support appeared headed for mixed results, as workers entering Warsaw factories this morning said they either would not join the transit boycott or had not decided what to do.

"Let's wait and see how it goes," said one man entering the sprawling FSO car plant on the east bank of the Vistula river.

Another worker declined to indicate whether he would observe the boycott, but said, "I'm expecting some merry developments later today."

The Vienna-based Wochenpresse quoted Walesa as saying in an interview he doubted any massive demonstrations will take place despite the call from Solidarity's underground.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban told a news conference Tuesday that the government hoped "there will be no demonstrations" and said security measures had been taken to "ensure peace."

Twelve Solidarity activists have been arrested in recent days for distributing leaflets urging people to participate in street demonstrations, Polish television reported Tuesday night.

Strikes and demonstrations in Gdansk led to the Aug. 31, 1980 agreement that created Solidarity.

British lawmaker wants troops out

LONDON (AP) — A prominent Conservative lawmaker today called for the withdrawal of British peacekeeping troops from Lebanon, one day after the soldiers were fired on for the first time.

"I think they're just useless," said Sir Anthony Kershaw, former chairman of the All-Party House of Commons Foreign Affairs Committee. "One squadron of light tanks is not going to make the slightest difference, and they're sure to have casualties if this sort of thing goes on — to no purpose whatever."

Troops from the United States, Britain, France and Italy comprise the international peacekeeping force in Lebanon. Two U.S. Marines and four French troops have been killed in fighting that began Sunday between Moslems militiamen and government troops in Beirut.

On a routine patrol Tuesday, British forces came under fire for the first time, attacked by rifles and rocket-propelled grenades. There were no injuries.

In an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., Kershaw also said: "I suppose the real reason they are there is to show solidarity with the United States, which I'm all in favor of.

Brooks leads Cubs over El Paso

Regular season ends tonight for Texas League

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Trey Brooks has made winning ninth-inning home runs so common place that teammates are calling his shots for him.

In the on deck circle before Brooks went up to lead off the ninth, Tom Lombarski advised matter-of-factly, "You'll hit a home run on the third pitch."

"He got behind 2-0 and I knew he had to come in with a fast ball," Trey explained. Sure enough, pow, a high, arcing drive that had the fans holding their breath until it just cleared the barrier to give the Midland Cubs an 8-7 win over the El Paso Diablos at Cubs Stadium Tuesday night.

The homer came off Bryan Duquette, 2-2, and gave Jim Gerlach, 5-4, who pitched shutout ball over the final 2 2/3 innings, the win.

Trey had hit a ninth-inning game-winner at San Antonio last week and on the last homestand his dramatic two-run homer in the ninth gave Midland a 2-1 victory over Beaumont.

What made this one especially satisfying was that it broke a personal 0-for-33 stretch against El Paso pitching.

BUT BROOKS' homer, his 11th, was just the finish of a wild night of baseball in which Midland rallied for three runs in the seventh to tie it at 7. But it was Don Hyman's defensive play of the game in the eighth that may have been the game saver.

The reckless running Diablos had three runners thrown out stealing, two more picked off base and a couple of more cut down trying for an extra base.

None was more important to the Cubs than the one in the eighth when Hyman showed why he was picked as the Cubs' Mr. Hustle.

With Frank Thomas on first after a lead off walk in the eighth, Juan Castillo bunted down the third base line. Lombarski raced in to make the throw to first and with third unattended, Thomas headed for third with the tie-breaking run. But Hyman got there in time to take Mike Anicich's return throw and apply the tag. The Cubs still weren't out of it, however. Earnest Riles reached first on an error and Stan Davis singled to left. Riles dug for third and was cut down by Bill Hatcher's bullseye throw from the corner.

THE CUBS and Diablos do it again for one final time at 7:30 p.m. tonight, ringing down the curtain on the regular Texas League season, with Ron Richardson pitching for Midland against Dan Burns, 2-5,

The two guys who kept Midland in the game until Brooks' homer were outfielders Randy LaVigne and Carlos Lezcano. LaVigne had two triples and two rbi while Lezcano had a single, double and hit his 12th homer for a three-rbi night.

"I've never seen two guys hit the ball any harder than those two have for the last month," said Manager Tom Harmon. "Lezcano has been hot lately."

Just how hot? Carlos, still with hopes of returning to the majors, is 25 for 62 (.403) with six home runs during that stretch. His homer Tuesday cleared the fence in right center.

LaVigne, meanwhile, is five-for-eight and 32-for-65 (.492). His first triple scored Brooks, on with his first of three walks, in the fourth and would have been a homer if the fence in center wasn't double-decked. It, in effect, went further than most home runs hit at Cubs Stadium. His seventh inning triple again scored Brooks and rattled the boards in right center. Lezcano then homered to tie it at 7.

THE GAME was not the type you'd expect from a couple of teams just playing out the string, one marking time until the playoffs, the other with bags packed ready to head for home.

"We got out of a lot of jams tonight," said Harmon. And the Cubs even survived a "bonehead" play by first baseman Anicich after a run had been wild pitched home by Bill Johnson in the Diablos' three-run seventh which gave the second half winners a 7-4 lead. A runner was still on second. Eric Peyton hit a smart grounder to Anicich, who got halfway through his throw to the plate, when he realized no one was on third. The half throw wound up between home and the stands.

"We've been working on that home-to-first play," Harmon grinned later, "but it didn't work this time."

Johnson came in with Midland ahead 5-4 and runners on first and third and wild pitch away his chance to tie the Cubs' all-time save mark of 14 set by Jay Temple in 1976 as Castillo raced home with the tying run.

"Johnson has been great for us on some nights," Harmon said, "And tonight he was not so great."

While most of the Cubs will be heading for home, Hatcher, Darryl Banks and Johnon will head for Iowa and the American Association playoffs, beginning in Denver. And Sept. 14 all three plus Brooks, Rich Buonantany and Jeff Rutledge will report to Mesa, Ariz., for the two-month Fall Instructional League.

IN OTHER Texas League games Tuesday night, Beaumont rebounded with a 2-1 win in the nightcap against San Antonio after losing the first game of the doubleheader 10-8.

Jackson beat Tulsa 10-8 in 13 innings and Arkansas downed Shreveport 4-2.

Beaumont got both of its runs in the nightcap in the fourth. Ozzie Guillen hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly to score one run, before Steve Johnson added an RBI single.

Mark Williamson, 6-3, nabbed the win in his first start of the season. Felix Tejeda, 1-2, was charged with the loss for San Antonio.

The Dodgers won the first game behind the big bats of Larry See and R.J. Reynolds. See had two RBI doubles and a single, while Reynolds added a double and two singles.

The winning pitcher was Rick Felt, 4-8. Beaumont's Walt Vanderbush, 9-13, took the loss.

Vance McHenry provided the game-winning RBI for Jackson with a 13th-inning single that drove home Jim Woodward, who had walked and advanced to third on Mike Bishop's single.

Jackson's John Gibbons hit a three-run homer in the seventh.

Tulsa's Randy Asadoor hit a grand-slam homer in the fourth and added a two-run smash in the eighth.

Rob Schilling, 5-9, the sixth Jackson pitcher of the night, claimed the win. The loser was John Buckley, 3-3.

Arkansas beat Shreveport with a two-run eighth inning. Bob Heisom scored Rod Booker on a sacrifice fly before Tim Wallace added an RBI single.

Booker also had an RBI double in the third.

Mike Barba, 5-7, was the winner in relief. Chuck Lusted, 1-1, was the loser.

U.S. Open starts with Big Mac attack, upsets

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe moved perilously close to a possible suspension on the opening day of the United States Open Tennis Championships, while two other top players bowed out of the tournament, one on the court and the other before lifting a racket.

McEnroe had to struggle through five tough sets Tuesday and survive a penalty point and a dispute with a heckling spectator before beating Trey Waltke 6-3, 5-7, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Afterwards, he was fined $1,850 for his behavior, leaving him just $200 away from the $7,500 limit for the last 12 months. If he hits that figure, he would draw a three-week post-Open suspension from Volvo Grand Prix and Davis Cup, although he could appeal.

Defending champion Jimmy Connors, seeded No. 3, had a quieter time at night, subduing Ramesh Krishnan of India 6-2, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Eighth-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc was the tournament's first upset victim, beaten in straight sets by Tim Wilkison, 6-2, 6-3, 7-6.

No. 4 Tracy Austin, who won the Open two years ago, withdrew from the tournament because of nagging injuries which she said have allowed her to play at only 60-70 percent of her capacity. She had been scheduled to play Yvonne Vermaak today.

The only other seeded loser on the first day of the tournament was No. 15 Virginia Ruzici, who bowed to Catherine Tanvier 6-3, 6-3.

Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded No. 15, was nearly a casualty. He dropped the first two sets to Marcos Hocevar, but recovered and survived the first round 3-6, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5, 6-4.

McEnroe was in a similiar fix against Waltke. After winning the first set 6-3, Super-Mac saw a 4-1 second set lead melt away. He lost that set 5-7 and the next one 4-6 before coming back for the victory.

"I was playing my type of match, keeping him off guard," McEnroe said. "But I couldn't move him around. I just missed a lot of unforced shots and you can't win tournaments that way."

Before long, Waltke had the lead and McEnroe was jawing with a troublesome fan, finally tossing some sawdust at him.

"The guy was egging me on and I don't like people when they egg me on," said McEnroe, whose temper has often surfaced in other tournaments. "They clap when I double fault and miss shots. It's the same old story. I just get to a point where I snapped. It really bothered me. I totally lost my concentration."

Waltke, who had beaten McEnroe in two of their previous three meetings, lost steam in the fourth set. "I thought it was two out of three," he joked. "I felt everything caving in, physically, and John got a little psyched up."

Part of the psych may have been caused by a point penalty assessed by umpire Stu Saphire when McEnroe exchanged words with him. The penalty came as Mac was winning 12 of the last 13 games in the final two sets to clinch the match.

"I'd rather have had an easier match," McEnroe said. "I'd rather have played better. I wouldn't win the tournament if I played like that."

While McEnroe was having trouble with the fans, Connors, seeking a fifth Open crown, was enjoying them.

"The people here come out and really get involved in the matches," he said. "They want to see two guys killing each other. They're used to the hockey and football and baseball and bigtime tennis. I enjoy giving it to them."

Wilkison won the first two sets against Clerc and then ran into trouble.

"I knew I was tired," he said. "He came back and broke service twice. I said to myself, 'Here's a great chance for a big win. I have to show a little character.' "

NFL teams trim rosters before opening play

By The Associated Press

The waiver wire got a good reading as National Football League teams began preparations for the season openers.

The Minnesota Vikings placed five players on the injured reserve list, cut seven others and acquired two more to bring the team's regular-season roster to the required 49-player limit.

The injured players were defensive tackle Ray Yakavonis, rookie linebacker Mark Stewart, tight end Joe Senser, kicker Rick Danmeier and wide receiver Sam McCullum. The Vikings claimed rookie tight end Mike Mularkey on waivers from the San Francisco 49ers and signed kicker Benny Ricardo, cut by the Raiders last week, to replace rookie Steve Schonert, who was among the final cuts.

The Chicago Bears placed wide receiver Rickey Watts, running back Calvin Thomas and linebacker Al Chesley on injured reserve.

Robin Earl, one of seven veterans cut, was upset at Head Coach Mike Ditka's method of announcing them.

"I told Mike this morning that there's a lot of grumbling," said Earl, who was cut along with offensive tackle Dennis Lick, safety Lenny Walterscheid, tight end Brooks Williams, running back Willie McClendon, guard Perry Hartnett, tackle Andy Frederick, linebacker Dan Kimble, quarterback Tim Clifford and defensive end Henry Waechter.

"By releasing all these veterans, we're taking the club in a different direction," Ditka said. "We might have made some mistakes ... but I feel these are the people who are going to play for me."

Terry Bradshaw is not going to play for Coach Chuck Noll for at least four weeks. The Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback, who has an injured elbow, was formally placed on injured reserve, along with offensive tackle Tunch Ilkin.

Pittsburgh also waived eight players, including punter John Goodson; tight end Craig Dunaway, its eighth-round draft choice this year; and tackle Ken Dallafior.

The New York Jets, whose outstanding defensive line hasn't been completely healthy since 1981, placed tackle Abdul Salaam on the injured reserve list with an injured shoulder.

The Jets, who will be missing Johnny "Lam" Jones in their opener Sunday at San Diego, picked up wide receiver Preston Brown on waivers from the Baltimore Colts.

The Chargers received a boost Tuesday when Head Coach Don Coryell announced that Dan Fouts, who had missed the last two exhibition games with an injured foot, would start at quarterback against the Jets.

San Diego late Tuesday also recalled three-time All-Pro defensive tackle Louie Kelcher — just one day after waiving him — and placed Doug Wilkerson on the injured reserve list with a broken arm.

Kelcher, one of the team's most popular players since he came to San Diego in 1975, was waived Monday along with 11 players. The 315-pounder will be on the active squad and he is expected to be at practice today.

Washington claimed defensive back Brian Carpenter, cut Monday by the New York Giants, and placed lineman Donald Laster on injured reserve, while San Francisco placed safety Carlton Williamson on injured reserve.

Dallas, which cut rookie tight end Cleo Simmons on Monday, recalled him Tuesday. The Cowboys also placed veteran running back James Jones on injured reserve. Two other Cowboys cut were claimed by other teams — fullback George Peoples by New England and defensive back Monty Hunter by St. Louis. The Cardinals also waved safety Don Bessillieu.

The Denver Broncos announced the waiving of defensive backs J.T. Thomas and Wade Manning and wide receiver Orlando McDaniel and the placing on injured reserve of guard Tom Glassic, linebacker Weedy Harris and running back Gerald Willhite.

Detroit said it signed reserve running back Rick Kane to a multi-year contract Tuesday, leaving punter Tom Skladany as the club's only holdout. Mike Black, a rookie, will be the Lions' punter in the season opener at Tampa Bay.

Kansas City traded tight end Al Dixon, a seven-year pro, to Philadelphia for an undisclosed draft choice. Dixon, the Chiefs' starting end the past two seasons, missed almost the entire training camp because of a holdout.

The Los Angeles Rams, who picked up quarterback Mark Reed from the Giants on waivers Monday, traded him Tuesday to Baltimore and obtained linebacker Mark Jerue from the Colts.

Things to see during football's opening night

Anticipation is the greatest thing about every new high school football season. Hopes are high on all fronts. Everyone is tied for first place. There are no losses on the ledger — no red ink, so to speak.

The fans are united behind the favorite team and they have dreams of what will happen on opening night. Opening night comes Friday for Midland High and Midland Lee.

So it's time to list some things we would like to see on opening night. Here's my list. No. 1 priorities for the openers:

I would like to see — Lee assistant Eddie Wolski able to carry on a decent conversation prior to a game. That blank stare is a little unnerving...MHS assistant Bernie Hagins carrying an ice bucket around for quarterback James Welborn, who throws 110 passes...Lee halfback Walter Jones breaking one in excess of 50 yards, the first of 10 times this year...

MHS receiver Alan Foret break one after catching a Welborn missle...Lee's third string quarterback John Abbott scoring a touchdown in his chance at No. 1...MHS lineman Jimmy Essman playing at full potential...Lee linebacker Reggie Ellis making 12.4 tackles, last year's average...MHS running backs dispel the notion that the Bulldogs can't run...

A game without a coin flip at the end, my last memory of the 1982 season...Harold Williams at a football game. Hey, Harold, baseball is over...MHS assistant Tim Smith still wanting a feature column on his defensive line...A "real" hotdog at halftime, imported from Rankin (the home of the best football hotdogs in America)...

A home game for MHS so the bus won't break down...Another road victory for Lee, who has lost only once on the road since Spike Dykes has become head coach...MHS head coach Pat Culpepper with a another quoteable quote after an upset over Lubbock Monterey...Any type of quote from Dykes...

Lee assistant Van Tom Whatley calling one play right from the pressbox...Tim Whalen figuring out how to turn on the Memorial Stadium scoreboard...Someone coming out of Memorial Stadium without a seat full of splinters...Lights on both sides of the field leaping into action with the first burst of juice...

The MHS band...The Lee band, great halftime shows as always...Cheerleaders who forget to do two-bits...Twirlers who look older instead of younger every year...MHS band director Clyde Wilson surviving his band's first performance after being the only person in the stands to find the mistakes...Some busses for Lee band director Randy Storie...

Football games that start at 7:30 p.m....A loss by Mojo...A sports writer who doesn't get the deadline shakes by 9:45 p.m....A typewriter that works...A car that can make a round trip to Lubbock...A phone that works...A sports editor who will accept a collect call...A news desk that answers the phone. Bill Modisett are you listening?...

A wife who understands the importance of Friday night...A first game with less than 10 penalties...A game with less than three fumbles...Official Bruce Brenneman having nothing to say after blowing a call...A good night for all officials...Officials who show up...

An injury free night for Doc Dodson and Jeff Bass...Team managers who don't forget the kicking tee...A program that has all the right numbers to go with the right names...Popcorn that wasn't made in June...Game films that show both halves...

A surprise from some player who wasn't supposed to play much...A good lead for Saturday morning's paper...A story worth writing...Saturday morning coffee while playing arm chair quarterback...A one-sided coin for Midland AD Gil Bartosh...A kickoff return for six...Deep six anytime, anywhere...

A coughing spasm by KCRS' Ed Clements...Dead camera batteries for Skip "Going Where the News Is" Baldwin, Big Two's John "Big Guy" Smistad and KOSA's John "Get That Quarterback Another Football" Hambrecht...

And another Friday night — quick...

Australia II critics turn copy cats in America's Cup

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The crew of Australia II worried less than a week ago that its 12-meter yacht might be disqualified from the America's Cup competition due to the radical design of the boat's keel.

Now that the keel has been ruled legal, the Aussies say they're amused at how quickly their one-time critics have tried to imitate the wing-like design.

"When one considers the flak we've been forced to endure, it's now amazing to look at these items protruding from the keel of our opponents," Warren Jones, manager of the Australia II syndicate, said after inspecting a wing-like device attached Tuesday to the bottom of Freedom, a practice boat for the U.S. 12-meter yacht Liberty.

"Just four weeks ago every supposed expert was saying this design is illegal, and now here is Freedom with the winged keel and Defender is up getting modified and the English have one on," Jones said. "...Somebody's worried."

The Aussies have dominated the foreign field this summer with a 44-5 record, including a 7-2 mark against their rival in the foreign finals, Victory '83 of Britain. The two boats will try again today to begin their final best-of-seven series. Poor fickle winds have delayed the series for three days.

Much of the Aussies' success has been attributed to the boat's revolutionary keel design, which apparently consists of a ball of weight at the front of the keel's bottom which then flares back in a wing-like design.

The design aids the boat when it is sailing into the wind by changing the flow of water beneath the yacht. It adds greater stability and turning ability in tacking duels.

The New York Yacht Club, which runs the races, had protested the design to international yachting authorities, saying it made Australia II too large for the 12-meter class of sail boats. But the NYYC dropped its protest Friday.

The British have stuck two removable fins on the side of their boat's keel.

Workers from the Liberty syndicate Tuesday installed a simple board across the bottom of the keel of their trial horse, Freedom. The board looks like small wings when viewed from the bow.

"We don't know what the effect will be until we test it," Johan Valentijn, the designer of Liberty, said as he supervised the work on the Newport docks.

The Providence, R.I., Journal also reported Tuesday that the Courageous camp was making similar efforts to modify Defender, which has been idle since it was dismissed from the 1983 races Saturday.

Despite winds problems, the American boats continued their final series Tuesday. Courageous came from behind to defeat Liberty by 49 seconds over a shortened three-leg course.

Quarry tries comeback at 38

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Jerry Quarry wants to be a world champion so badly he's willing not only to climb back into the ring at age 38, but to take the ridicule that's been heaped on him since he announced his comeback attempt.

"I've had so many people run me down. They've called me a fool, stupid, an old man," Quarry said Tuesday on the eve of his first fight in nearly six years.

"But I know what the heck I'm doing. I've always wanted to be a champion. I want a title. I think I can do it.

"There is something to prove not only to myself, but I want all of them to come back and say, 'Hey, I'm sorry I told you that,'" said Quarry, a former heavyweight contender who was fighting the likes of Muhummad Ali and Joe Frazier a decade or more ago.

Quarry, who has launched his boxing comeback in the newly created cruiserweight division, will step between the ropes tonight for the first time since 1977. He will face Lupe Guerra of Omaha, Neb., in the 10-round main event of a six-fight card at the Civic Auditorium.

"I think I can win the cruiserweight title," Quarry said. "The cruiserweight division was created for me. I'll be able to fight guys my own size."

He said he weighed between 196 and 198 pounds for some of his best fights in the heavyweight ranks. Quarry said the cruiserweight limit is 195 pounds.

"I gave away as much as 30 or 40 pounds, plus three for four inches in height and four or five inches in reach," Quarry said. "I had to alter my style. Those guys were so much bigger than me I had to turn into a very aggressive fighter to try and get inside. I'm not very good as an aggressive fighter."

Quarry never managed to beat the best as a heavyweight. He was stopped by Ali and Frazier.

"But how many people beat them," he asked.

His career included unsuccessful shots at titleholders Frazier and Jimmy Ellis. He also lost to Ken Norton, but won against other highly touted fighters like Earnie Shavers, Ron Lyle, Buster Mathis, Mac Foster and Thad Spencer. He also beat Floyd Patterson, although the former champ's glory days had passed.

"I like to move. I like to box and counterpunch. Fighting people my size I will be able to go back to my normal style," said Quarry, who will go in at 198 pounds for this fight because no weight limit was set.

"I've got 18 months to two years maximum," Quarry said. "I figure I've got about seven fights left in me."

Quarry, who said he began boxing at the age of 3, first retired in 1975. He came back for one fight, a ninth round knockout of Lorenzo Zanon in 1977, before hanging his gloves up again.

He said he went back into retirement after that bout because he hadn't trained properly and was lucky to have gotten the knockout.

"I was just kinda goofing off," he said. "I cheated myself and I cheated the public. I won't cheat myself and I won't cheat the public this time.

"I have been training for 5½ months and if I'm not in shape now I'm never going to be in shape."

He said he believes he has lost about 10 percent of the reflexes he had when he was compiling a professional record of 51-8-4, including 31 knockouts.

"What I've lost in reflexes, I've gained in knowledge," he said. "I know what I'm doing.

"I am an intelligent man. I'm not going to get myself hurt or prostitute my body to satisfy my ego and whims."

He also said money makes no difference.

"As far as money, I'm kinda setting pretty right now. It's certainly not the money. In fact, this first fight is no big purse," Quarry said, adding that he will get less than $10,000.

He said his bout against Guerra and a second fight set for Sept. 28 in Scranton, Pa., probably against Steve Mormino, will tell him whether he really is ready to mount a challenge for the title.

"If these two fights don't come out exactly the way I want, there won't be no more," Quarry said.

Guerra, 22-8-1, was named this week as a late replacement for Rocky Casale, who was scheduled to face Quarry. Casale was sidelined by a hand injury while training for the fight, said promoter Pat McLane.

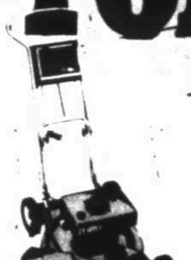

But Quarry said the change shouldn't matter.

"I figure during my boxing career I have fought just about every style of opponent possible," he said. "Somewhere along the line I fought somebody who fights similar to this one.

"I've fought some of the toughest guys in the world. I'm not really worried about my opponent. I'm worried how the heck I'll react to it. I have no idea what's going to happen. It's been almost six years since I've fought so this could be kind of hairy."

Johnson gets shaky feeling

DALLAS (AP) — Butch Johnson didn't do his banned "California Quake" after his first touchdown of the year Saturday night, but he got a lecture from Coach Tom Landry anyway.

Johnson, who said he wanted to "Quake" so bad "My legs started quivering," went to the edge of the end zone and slapped hands with photographers and writers after catching an 18-yard touchdown pass that beat Houston 34-31.

Landry didn't like that, either.

"He didn't make a show, he just said hello to everybody," Landry said. "But he is still doing something to single himself out which we don't want right now."

Huskers Osborne has his doubts

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne said Tuesday he's not so sure his No.1-ranked Cornhuskers are as awesome as they appeared when they routed defending national champion Penn State in the inaugural Kickoff Classic.

"We're probably not as good as many people think we are," Osborne said by phone from Lincoln, Neb. "And Penn State probably is not as bad as people think they are. It was a game that can cause some over-reaction."

The Cornhuskers dominated the Nittany Lions as few teams ever have in their 44-6 victory Monday night at Giants Stadium. It matched Penn State's worst loss since Joe Paterno became their coach 17 years ago.

"I think we're a very good football team. The question in my mind is where do we go from here," Osborne said. "It'd be very easy for our players to believe our No.1 ranking and the nice things said about them and not work hard. If that happens, we'll lose some games.

"On the other hand, they could feel it's a good beginning and want to improve some," he added. "I think we have a lot of potential and if we pay attention to business we can be very good."

Osborne also said there will be added pressure on his club because it was ranked No.1 in the Associated Press' pre-season college football poll.

'I think any time you're ranked No.1 you're going to get an extra effort out of everyone you play," he said. "And if you represent a good school like we do you normally get good efforts from everybody."

Nebraska quarterback Turner Gill, who directed the Cornhuskers on two long touchdown drives in the first quarter, said he enjoyed the challenge of being top-ranked.

"I feel deep down inside we're unbeatable. You have to feel deep inside nobody can beat you," said Gill, who scored on a 1-yard run and tossed a 19-yard touchdown pass to Monte Engebritson to give Nebraska a 14-0 lead.

The Cornhuskers finished with an 11-1 record last season, their only loss coming in the final four seconds to Penn State when Todd Blackledge tossed a 2-yard scoring pass to Kirk Bowman for a 27-24 victory.

Released in spring, Tom Cubs' MVP

When the Midland Cubs Booster Club presented Tom Lombarski with his plaque as Most Valuable Player at the awards luncheon the other day, I suppose it was a demonstration of "what a funny game" baseball can be.

Last spring, as far as the Philadelphia Phillies were concerned, Tom's baseball career was finished, washed up. He could go back to his rock singing career.

Dallas Green got wind of it and asked Lombarski if he would be interested in playing baseball in the Cubs' organization. Of course, it wouldn't be triple A, like last year with the Phillies, but if he was interested in learning another position and didn't mind doing it in the Texas League, he still might have a future in baseball.

LOMBARSKI NOT only added to his repertoire as a Golden Glove third baseman, but set a club record for runs batted in, stole more than 20 bases and hit for average.

So what started out as a bummer concluded on an upbeat note.

Going into the season's final Texas League series against El Paso, Lombarski's 123 rbi topped the club record of 108 set by Wayne Tyrone back in 1974.

It was one of four new records set this season. Bill Hatcher has scored 129 runs, which tops the 122 by Dan Rohn in 1979 and Rick Baker's 61 steals eclipses the 52 stolen by Henry Cotto last year. In fact, as Manager Tommy Harmon promised in Mesa last spring, it was a running club. The Cubs, with 210 stolen bases according to the last statistics compiled by TL statistician Ed Williams, set a new record in that department, bettering the 189 stolen in 1979.

CUBS CAME close in several other categories. Baker had 12 triples when he called it a season over the weekend. Pete LaCock set the club record with 13 in 1972. Hatcher went into the last series with 160 hits, just 10 behind Mel Hall's record 170 in 1981.

Hatcher's 32 doubles is six short of the club record 38 by Tom Grant in 1980.

Perhaps it is significant that the records were all set on offense. No pitching records were threatened. Darryl Banks had a shot at Donnie Moore's 14 wins in a season, back in 1975, but finished with 12. In 1975, four Cub pitchers finished with ERAs under three. This year no Cub pitchers finished under 4.00.

In the won-lost column, the Cubs didn't do as well as expected, but the success or failure of the season will not be determined for a few seasons. From the distance of time, Midland's success this year will be decided by how many players make it to the majors. As a rule, however, won-lost and player development success go hand in hand.

Still, one Bruce Sutter produced by the minor league operation can wipe out the disappointment of a lot of over "players who never realized their potential."

Rams' Robinson 'scared to death' as his first NFL season nears

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — As time for his National Football League head coaching debut draws near, John Robinson feels relatively the same emotions he felt during his distinguished career as a college coach — excitement, anticipation and fright.

"I'm scared to death," the new Los Angeles Rams coach, smiling nonetheless, said Tuesday. "I think everybody is excited and feels a sense of anticipation. And fear is a part of doing anything well.

"By Sunday morning, I'll want to sneak out of town. I felt that way every Saturday morning in my career."

He added, "But when I get to the game, everything will be OK."

Robinson, who guided Southern Cal to a 67-14-2 record during his seven seasons there, will send the Rams out Sunday against the New York Giants in New Jersey.

The coaching philosophy Robinson inherited and expanded upon at Southern Cal is expected to be immediately obvious in the Rams. While striving for a pass-run balance offensively, he'll be counting on rookie running back Eric Dickerson to spearhead the attack — as tailbacks did for his Trojan teams.

"The best way to give a great runner the football is in the I formation," said Robinson. "Lining up in the I gives him a good start and good vision..."

Robinson indicated, however, that Dickerson, the Southern Methodist All-American who was the second pick in the NFL draft, will not be overworked.

"We'll rest Eric," the coach said. "It's a 16-game season and the collisions on this level take a lot out of a running back."

Los Angeles, which was a dismal 2-7 during the strike-interrupted 1982 season, appears to have the personnel to provide a good blend of run and pass. In quarterback Vince Ferragamo, the Rams have one of the better pure passers in the league.

"I think Vince has matured in his position," said Robinson. "He's a very unselfish player and just wants to make the offense work. He played very well in three of our four preseason games.

"I think our offense will be effective in its balance. I think it will mature into a superior offense."

Football Syndrome is back

By MIKE KING

It is upon us once again. That time of year when football fans return to the stadiums and television sets. It's the time of year when wives lose their husbands to that dreaded disease known as "football syndrome."

We know the fatal symptom when husbands prefer watching football over anything else.

This season will be no different. My wife will lose me once again to "football syndrome."

The season is all planned. Friday night is for high school football. Saturday night is college football. Sunday is devoted to the pros...and all other nights are for highlights.

During the off season I attempted to rehabilitate myself by avoiding other spectator sports, but it just made me crave football even more. I can once again look forward to scornful looks from my wife while I attempt to watch those wonderful games. And she can look forward to my sudden outbursts of screaming at the television set.

If this sounds familiar, then you probably suffer from "football syndrome", too. If it doesn't sound familiar, try it. You might like it.

Actually, my interest in this phenomenon is not the thrill of victory or the agony of defeat but the prospect of making money. You see, I am in search of a cure for "football syndrome." Once I have the cure, I will be able to sell it to wives for use on their husbands, or I can take payoffs from husbands not to sell the cure to their wives.

I get excited just thinking about the prospects.

However, it does present on very interesting dilemma. Should I sell the cure to my wife?

Biles smiling despite hot seat

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have not won a National Football League game in almost a year, including an 0-4 preseason performance, and Coach Ed Biles is in the final year of his contract.

Yet the embattled Biles, with an 8-17 record as head coach, is smiling because he can see improvement in the offensive line and there have been several pleasant surprises in individual performances that offer hope for the future.

"Despite the record, I think we had a good preseason," Biles said. "I can't say it was great because we didn't win a game but we got a lot accomplished.

"With the draft we took a weakness and made it into a strong point," Biles said of the offensive line where three first or second year players are probable starters.

Center David Carter will be the only returning starter assured of keeping his position.

Bruce Matthews, the 1983 first round draft choice and 1982 first round pick Mike Munchak are the guards, 1983 second round pick Harvey Salem and rejuvenated veteran Doug France will start at tackles.

Matthews missed the first 13 days of training camp in a contract dispute and then was hobbled by an ankle injury but he drew praise from Biles following the final preseason game against Dallas following a shoving match with Cowboy defensive end Ed Jones.

"That's the kind of thing you like to see when a rookie can get a veteran upset," Biles said.

It's a slow process, rebuilding a football team, but Biles thinks he's made the right decisions.

"I think people are going to start realizing that we are doing it right," Biles said. "We know we're not there yet, but when it gets there, that's when the fun will start."

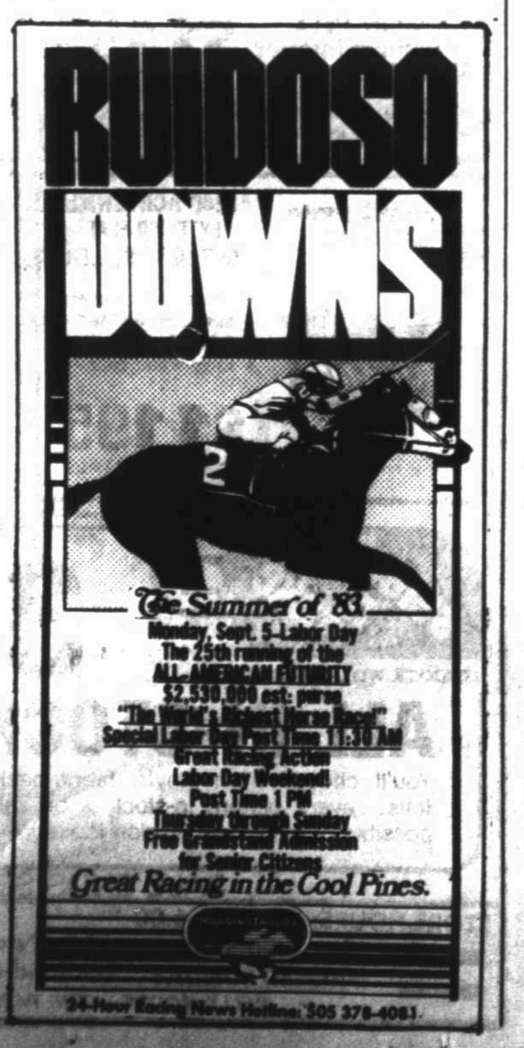

The Oiler offensive line was not a fun spot last season when it ranked last in the NFL, and the offensive line got the brunt of the blame for Earl Campbell's drop in rushing production.

Campbell has blossoomed again in the preseason and Biles credits the offensive line.

"They're saying Earl is back but he's never been away," Biles said. "It was just a situation of getting the blocking he needed."

There have been several surprises that have made it easier to accept the winless preseason including Salem, tight end Chris Dressel, wide receiver-kick returner Herkie Walls and France.

"Salem is farther along than we thought a second round draft choice would be," Biles said of the rookie from California-Berkeley. "It would be hard to anticipate Salem progressing the way he has."

Rosewall vs. Father Time

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Name 10 people you knew 30 years ago and then ask yourself if you would recognize them on the street today, or be able to pick them out at a class reunion.

Then, you take Ken Rosewall, the tennist, and you want to hit yourself on the side of the head. Thirty years fade away. You look at him and it's like 1953 again. He still has that thick shock of jet-black hair, that sincere, gaunt little face. The eyes are steady and unbespectacled. The weight is the same 140. He still plays that pesky little all-court game.

The years roll away and it's 1953 again in the Kooyong Stadium in Melbourne and the U.S.-Australia Davis Cup matches are hanging in the air and they all come down to a match between the American veteran, E. Victor Seixas, of Philadelphia, and an 18-year-old upstart who had trouble convincing the spectators he wasn't a ball boy. The "ball boy" won the Davis Cup for Australia, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

WHEN THEY TALK of prizefighters, they usually say that, pound for pound, so-and-so was the best there ever was. When they talk of ballplayers, they resort to inch for inch.

Well, there's very little doubt that, inch for inch or pound for pound, Ken Rosewall was the best there ever was in his sport. Certainly, year for year he was. Imagine a man who played on winning Davis Cup teams in 1953 and again in 1973 (when his Australian team won, 5-0). Picture a player who was in the finals at Wimbledon in 1954 – and again in 1974. Who was in the U.S. finals in 1955 and again in 1974.

Rosewall was a picture player. He was like a golfer with a perfect swing, a ballplayer who was never out of position, a boxer you could never hit. The Willie Pep of tennis. Playing him was like fighting China; you tended to get swallowed up.

STILL, HE WAS more than a retriever, more than just a clay-court backboard. He was not just a fighter who can take it. He could attack. He was relentless. He played an errorless game, dogged, persistent. His service, while hardly marshmallow, relied on spin and dip like a knuckleball. You could catch it in your teeth – if you could find it. No one ever found out what his second serve was like. He seldom needed it. His backhand was the cannonball. You served to it at your peril. He covered a court like the dew. "I know his secret," pro Myron MacNamara said once. "He's twins."

They tried to tell Rosewall when he first picked up a racket that he was too short, too frail, too slow, too pale, too young, too everything. He was overshadowed most of his career by his blond-bull young partner, Lew Hoad.

But Rosewall was more a victim of timing than of physique. His tennis peaked in the limbo era between outright (or old-fashioned) professionalism and the more permissive era of "open" tennis. Like Hoad, Gonzales and, to an extent, Laver, his great years, the ones in which he could have been presumed to have been winning at Wimbledon and Forest Hills, he was considered a benighted "tradesman," a professional unworthy of treading the same baselines as the white-on-white simon pures.

HE TURNED PRO in 1957. Tennis didn't turn pro till 1968. Rosewall spent his 11 best years traveling to tarp-covered courts in municipal arenas all over the world. The most money he earned in those years was $67,000. Consider that John McEnroe ended up with $941,000 last year, not counting endorsements.

Ken Rosewall was in no fewer than four Wimbledon finals two decades apart, three U.S. finals 20 years apart. In the years when he was a nonperson, there was usually only one player in the world who could beat him – and then only on alternate years.

But what distinguished Ken Rosewall, what made him a court legend was his affability, his dependability. He played the steady, poker-faced, controlled game of the guy who knew he had to make a pair of treys stand up. You could count on Rosewall.

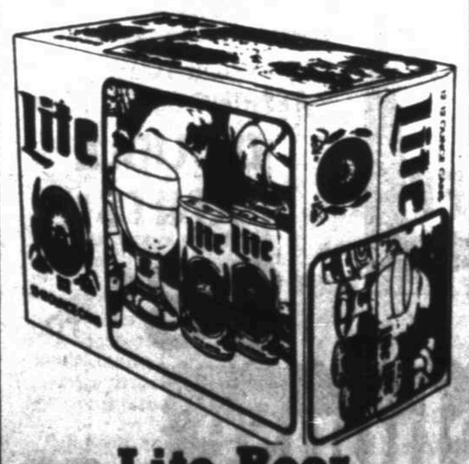

Temper tantrums, umpire baitings, audience taunting were as foreign to his arsenal as double faulting. "We didn't dare," he says laconically today. "We had brash young men in Australia, spoiled young athletes, racquet throwers, sulkers. What? You never heard of them? Too right. They disappeared. Nobody in Australian tennis in those days would put up with them."

Ken Rosewall never missed a match point, an ad court – or a scheduled radio, TV or press interview. "I think a Bjorn Borg is a superb athlete," he says, "but he saved himself for the big tournaments. He never put back into tennis one-tenth of what he took from it. We weren't trained that way. We played for Australia, for cups, in cement courts, in basketball courts."

KEN ROSEWALL, NOW nearing 49, is the grand old man of the game, the player who took the small skills to the highest point of the courts. The Queen herself recognized this special position when she awarded him the Member of the British Empire, and he was taken into the All-England Tennis Club, an honor normally bestowed only on Wimbledon winners.

He's still touring, with the Foster's Lager Tennis Legends Championship. You'll have no trouble recognizing him. He'll be the one making you feel as if you've stumbled on a 1953 newsreel. Or, as MacNamara would say, "They're not fooling me. That's his son out there."

Memorial looking to dethrone West Brook

By the Associated Press

It's been nine months since Houston Memorial fell to Class 5A rival Beaumont West Brook in the Texas high school football playoffs, but Mustangs football coach Wayne Hooks has not forgotten.

Memorial, top-ranked in The Associated Press 1983 Preseason Schoolboy Football Poll, lost to the Bruins 28-22. This year, Hooks is bracing for a comeback, having rehashed the Astrodome playoffs contest over and over in his mind.

The Bruins' Gerald Landry dropped back to pass, avoided the rush, and hit Darrell Colbert with a 21-yard pass to the 17-yard line for a first down. Two plays later, West Brook's Jerry Ball ran 15 yards for the winning touchdown.

"You never know from year to year how good you will have to be," said Hooks. "We felt at the time that we played West Brook last year that we were probably better than in 1979, when we got beat in the state championship game. West Brook beat us fair and square, but we felt like we were as good as they are and could have won the state championship if we'd hung on to that play."

West Brook went on to rout Dickinson 49-30, San Antonio Judson 27-12 and L.D. Bell 21-10, for the Class 5A championship.

Houston Memorial kicks off its 1983 season at 7:30 p.m. Friday against Pasadena Rayburn.

The Mustangs were 10-2-1 in 1982 and return 11 starters — six on offense and five on defense — along with seven other lettermen.

"We returned six offensively and five defensively. Our kids coming back say that we are as good as last year," said Hooks. "This year, we feel like we have a good offense. We have an excellent quarterback in Shannon Kelley. We have the big offensive line and we feel like that they and Kelley will dictate what we do.

"Defensively, we have some good athletes," he said. "We have a starting defensive tackle back, a noseguard, one linebacker and a cornerback. The rest were backup or on junior varsity. We think we have some athletes here with good quickness, but they are untested. We will know a lot more about it in three weeks. We hope that our offense will carry us until we get our feet on the ground."

Memorial quarterback Shannon Kelley, at 6-2 and 180 pounds, certainly doesn't. Kelly, considered the top quarterback in the state, accounted for 1,600 yards of offense as a junior in 1982.

The first time Kelley touched a football, as a 7-year-old for a Houston Little League team called the Park Place Oilers, he ran 80 yards for a touchdown.

Kelley plays behind a line that would make good college material. Memorial's smallest lineman is Scott Thomas, who is 6-2, 215. The best is Omar Saleh, at 6-2, 250. The Mustangs' starting offensive line of Thomas, Saleh, Chris Treat, Dan Wagner and Rick Dobie averages 6-3 and 235 pounds.

"We have to get out of our district to do any good, though, because it is a dog-eat-dog district," Hooks said. "We don't have a bunch of junior high schools that split each school. When these kids play other schools, it is just like brother-to-brother. It is tough to get out of our district, I'll guarantee.

"And it is unbelievably tough in the region," he said. "Whoever comes out of our region will have a good chance of winning state, year-in and year-out."

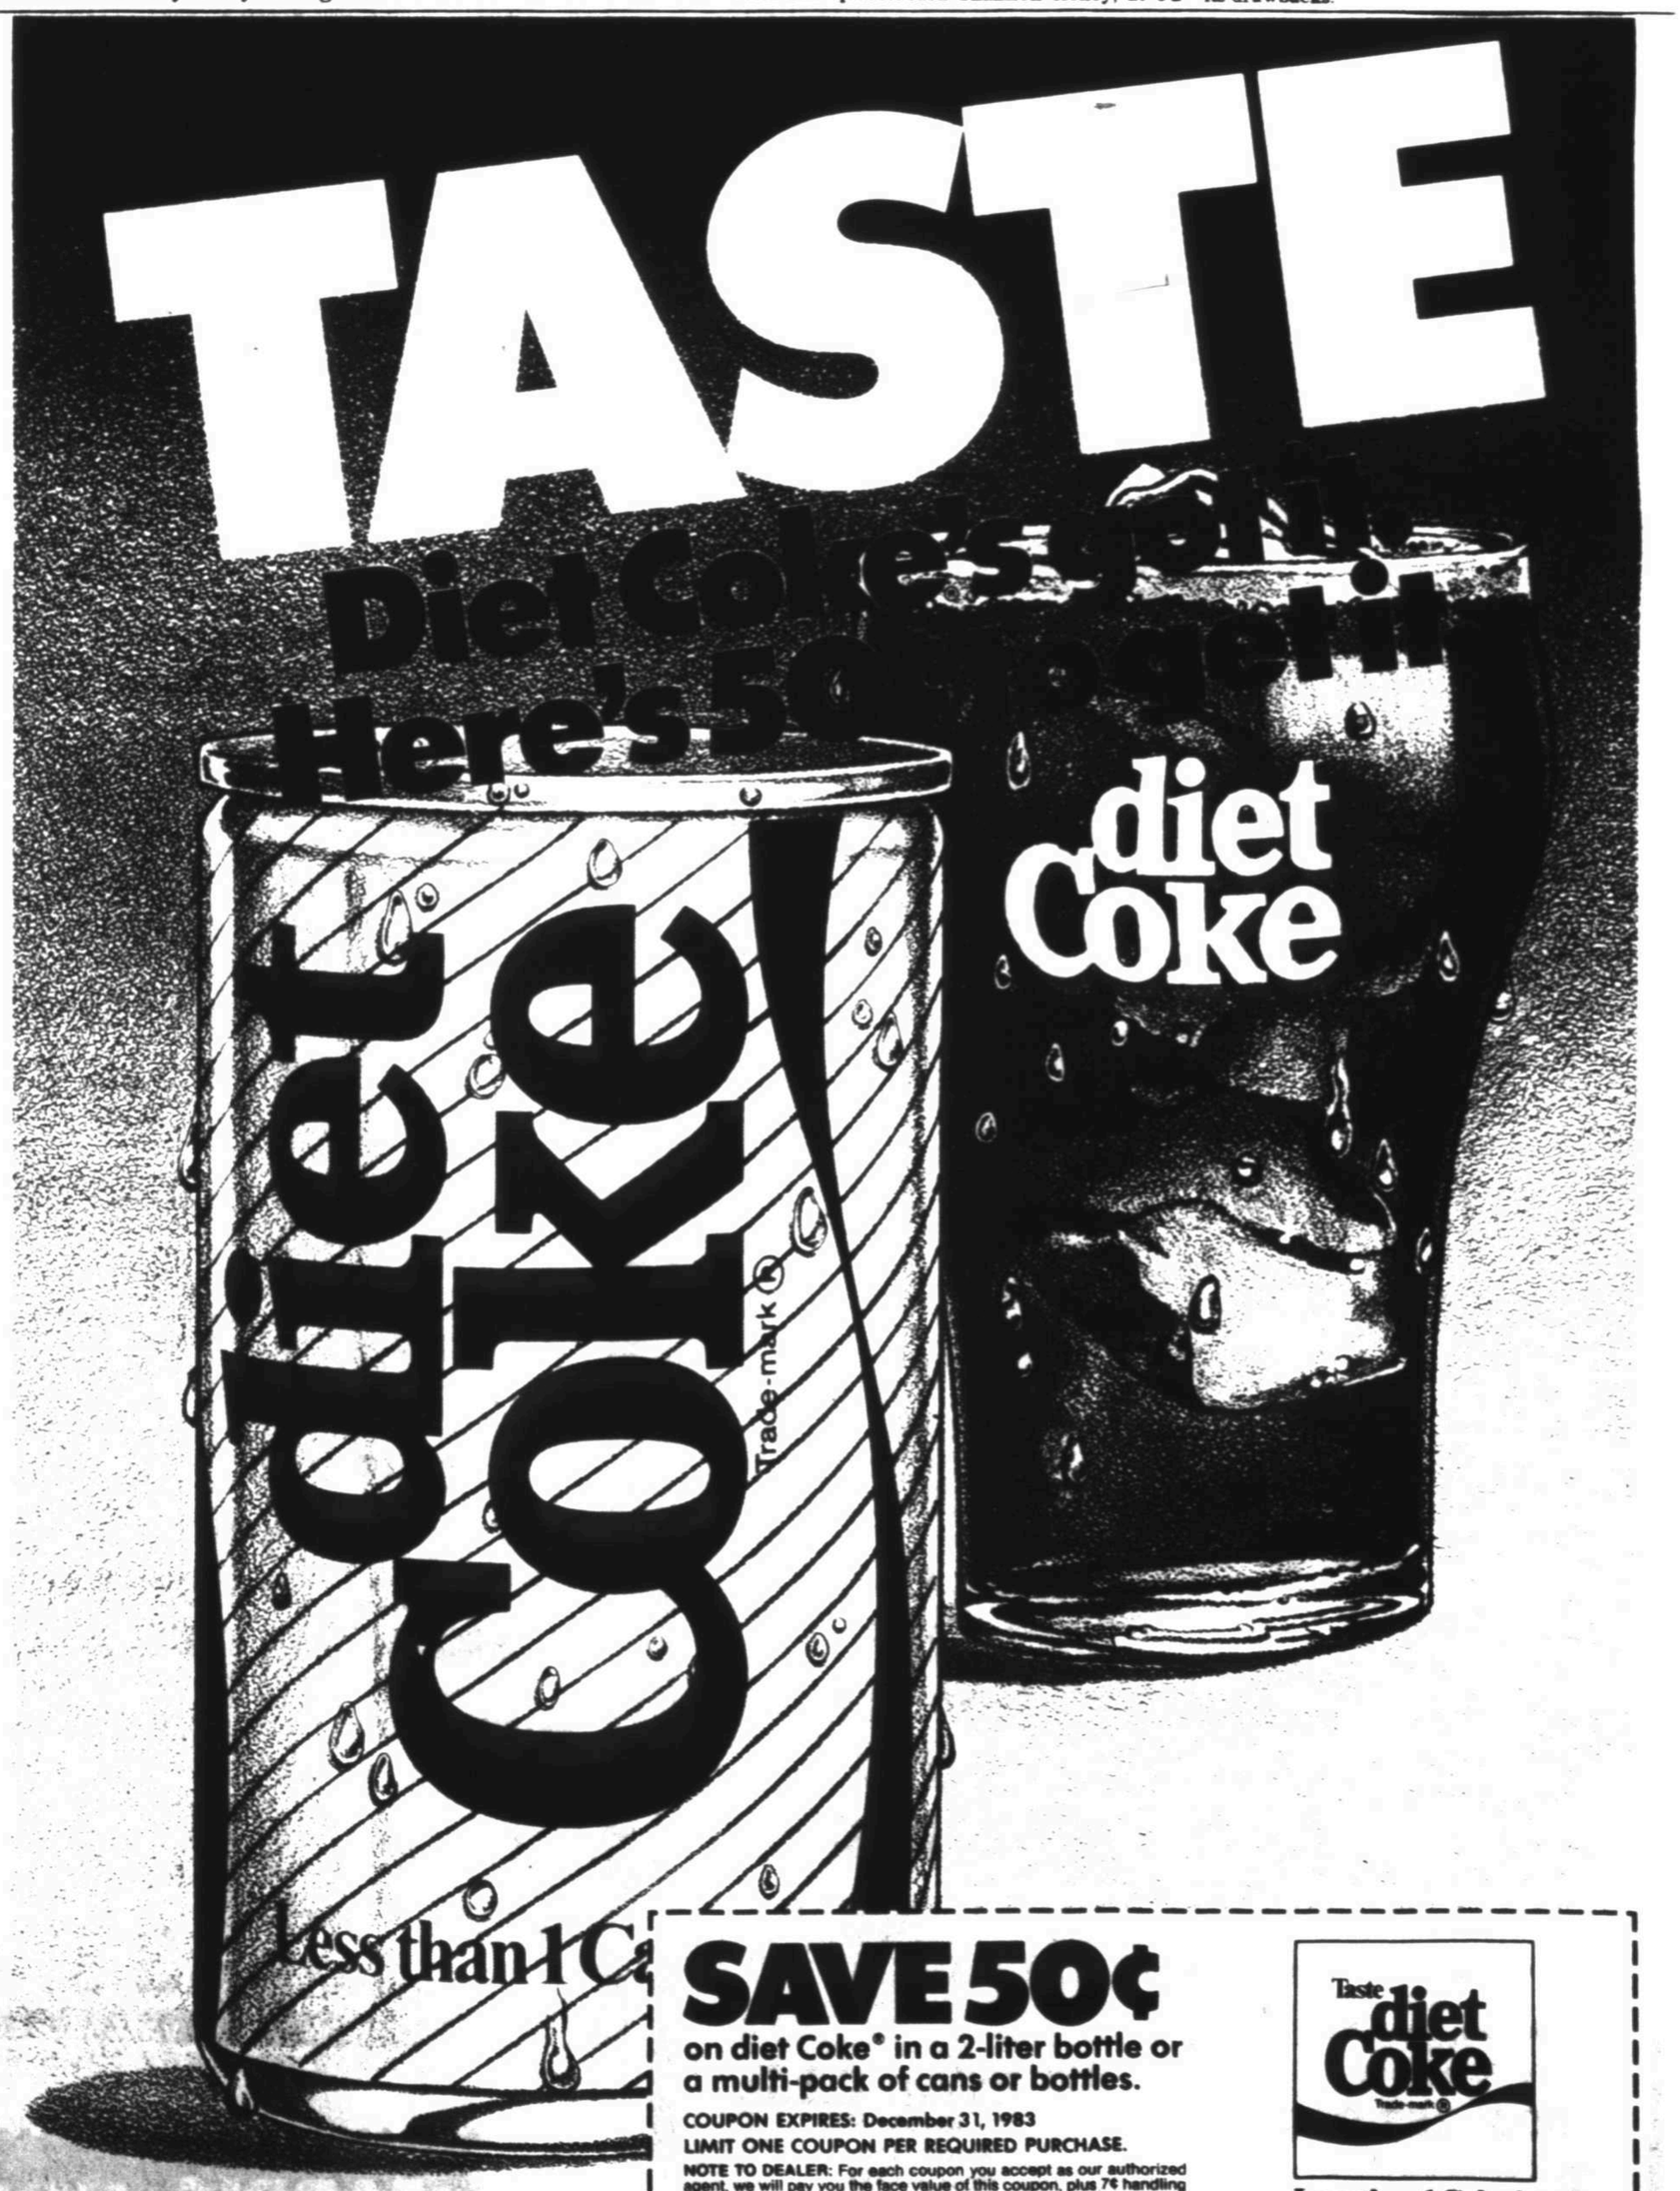

Hooks said Saleh has the potential to be just as good as former Memorial player Doug Dawson, an All-America guard at the University of Texas.

Linebacker Shon Nichols, at 6-3 and 225, leads the Mustangs on defense and is rated one of the best in the state.

"Our kids are challenged now that we are top-ranked," Hooks said. "You will have to play better than you did before because everyone is gunning sky-high for you. Everybody thinks we are this good, so everyone has to play the way that is expected of them. Being No. 1 is a blessing and a curse.

"When it first happened, we thought (the season) was already falling down around us. But the first 10 ball games that we play will be the same whether we are No. 1 or not. We were not getting to slip up on anyone in the district, whether we're No. 1 or No. 10. They are big rivals. But everybody always gets ready for the No. 1.

Irving Nimitz coach Mike Farda said that even being third-ranked in Class 5A in the AP poll has its drawbacks.

Lowenstein wrecks Royals, 12-4

By The Associated Press

John Lowenstein has been a Royal pain to the Kansas City ballclub this season.

While batting a modest .279 against the American League as a whole, the Baltimore outfielder has burned the Royals with 15 hits in 24 at-bats for a red-hot .625 average.

Four of those hits came Tuesday night, when he helped the surging Orioles crush Kansas City 12-4.

"I just try to hit the ball out every time," said the free-swinging Lowenstein, who finished with a triple, two doubles, a single and a walk, driving in a run and scoring twice.

"I think Earl (Weaver, former Baltimore manager) probably impressed that on me more than anybody," he said. "It probably made me a better hitter in his eyes."

The victory was the seventh straight and 14th in 17 games for the American League East leaders.

In other AL games, Boston beat Toronto 5-4, Detroit edged Minnesota 4-3, Chicago blanked Texas 5-0, Milwaukee nipped Seattle 3-2, California outscored Cleveland 10-6 and New York tripped Oakland 8-5.

Lowenstein had a chance for the cycle his last time up in the ninth, but had to settle for a line-drive double.

"That's when I was trying (to hit a homer) for sure," said Lowenstein. "But the kid (reliever Mike Armstrong) moves the ball around well, and I knew it was going to be difficult to get the ball in the air."

Ken Singleton knocked in four runs and Cal Ripken Jr. added three of Baltimore's 15 hits. The Orioles, who had downed Kansas City 9-2 Monday night, banged out 30 hits in two games against the Royals and are hitting .366 in their last five contests.

"It didn't make any difference what we did, they wore us out," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser. "They swung the bats good. I can't explain what happened, it just happened."

Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

In Toronto, Jim Rice's one-out single in the 12th inning scored Jerry Remy from second base and lifted Boston over the Blue Jays. Remy stroked a one-out single and Wade Boggs followed with a base hit before Rice grounded his hit through the left side of the infield to make a winner of John Henry Johnson, 3-2.

Damaso Garcia led off the Toronto 12th with a triple, but Lloyd Moseby popped out and Mark Clear relieved Johnson to get Jesse Barfield and Cliff Johnson on groundouts to end the game and earn his fourth save.

Roy Lee Jackson was tagged with his third loss against eight victories.

Tigers 4, Twins 3

In Detroit, doubles by Tom Brookens and Lou Whitaker keyed a two-run third inning, triggering the Tigers past Minnesota. The doubles tied the game 2-2, then Alan Trammell singled Whitaker home to put the Tigers ahead for good at 3-2.

Lance Parrish belted his 21st homer in the sixth inning off Minnesota starter Ken Schrom, 12-6, for the Tigers' eventual winning run.

Petry, who was in and out of trouble all night, allowed eight hits while striking out three and walking three.

White Sox 5, Rangers 0

In Chicago, Carlton Fisk hit the first inside-the-park home run of his career and Harold Baines added a two-run shot to power the White Sox over Texas.

Britt Burns, 8-8, allowed four hits through six innings. Dick Tidrow pitched the final three innings to earn his seventh save and increase the White Sox's AL Western Division lead to 9½ games.

Dave Stewart, 1-1, took the loss as the slumping Rangers were beaten for the eighth time in their last nine games.

Brewers 3, Mariners 2

In Seattle, Rick Manning's RBI triple in the seventh broke a 1-1 tie and rookie Tom Candiotti won his third straight game as Milwaukee defeated the Mariners.

Candiotti, 3-0, allowed just five hits in 7 2-3 innings, before giving way to Pete Ladd, who earned his 16th save. Since being recalled from Vancouver on August 6, Candiotti has appeared in relief twice, started three times and now has an ERA of 0.62.

Jim Beattie, 8-12, was the losing pitcher.

Angels 10, Indians 6

In Anaheim, Doug DeCinces' three-run double led a 15-hit assault as California downed Cleveland. DeCinces' third-inning double snapped a scoreless tie and came a little before Cleveland starter Rick Sutcliffe was ejected for throwing close to California's batters.

Mike Jeffcoat, 0-3, took over for Sutcliffe, and was immediately touched for three runs in the fourth, two of them scoring on singles by Brian Downing and Rod Carew.

The Indians wiped out the 6-0 deficit by chasing left-hander Tommy John in the fifth. But the Angels came back to take a 7-6 lead in the fifth on Bob Boone's RBI single and added three more runs in the sixth off Dan Spillner.

Yankees 8, A's 5

In Oakland, Oscar Gamble's two-run triple keyed a three-run ninth inning that lifted Ron Guidry and New York over Oakland.

Dave Winfield's one-out single started the Yankee rally in the ninth against reliever Dave Beard, 5-4. Graig Nettles then walked before Gamble lined his game-winning hit into the right field corner. Don Mattingly's RBI single capped the rally.

Guidry struggled through nine innings, giving up 12 hits for his 16th victory against eight losses and his ninth consecutive complete game. He struck out nine.

Optimism abounds at Lee pre-season rally

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It seemed like there were waves of them, pouring onto the grass — big, strong, classy looking kids. It seemed to be different than in the past.

It was only the Lee Chicken Feed, the annual pre-season rally at the Lee Fieldhouse, but just seeing the 1983 edition of the Rebels gathered in the midst of their admirers, gave the feeling of something "extra" this time around.

Yearly master of ceremonies Scotty Alcorn may have put things in perspective of why it all felt different.

"Lee will have around 1,550 students enrolled this year, which makes it the second smallest school in the district," Alcorn said before adding, "but the football team has 150 players out, which makes it the largest program in the district."

The numbers are there. And with just a street-clothes look, it appears there is some talent on hand for the Rebels as well.

"We've got a great school with a great band and great pep squad and great cheerleaders. It's our job to have a great football team and that's what we want to do," head football coach Spike Dykes told the gathering.

"These kids have paid the price to be totally commited. It's the best group of kids I've ever been around. We've made a commitment to excellence and I guarentee that we will show up ready to play football."

It was a night that all Lee boosters have waited for. One in the crowd said, "I never feel like the season is here until we have this rally."

New Lee principal Stan Cobb said, "The only game on the schedule that is not important is the one you just won. We haven't played any games so we have 10 important games ahead. Or should I say 15."

The feeling that Lee has a playoff shot brings out optimism in its followers. All teams feel that glow before the first whistle is blown. It's no different at Lee.

Just looking at the makeup of the Rebel team adds fire to those hopes. Fifty-four seniors are on the team. There is experience in that group. The kids look strong and hungry.

But the test comes on the field and not at any rally. That journey through West Texas fields starts Friday for the Rebels when they travel to Lubbock's Lowry Field to meet Lubbock Coronado at 7:30 p.m. Each passing week will bring another test and the cries of the Chicken Feed rally will be but a fleeting memory. It's a lonely test that this Lee squad will have to face on the daily practice field and the weekly games where mother's face can not be distinguished.

In November two of District 4-5A's squads will be headed for the state playoffs. Lee is hoping to stand up and be counted.

MHS, Lee volleyball win four

For the Midland High and Midland Lee volleyball teams, Tuesday night was one of success as each team won its junior varsity and varsity contests.

For Midland High it was a 15-10, 17-15 varsity victory over Snyder, preceeded by a 15-9, 15-8 JV win. The Bulldogs' elder team is now 2-3 while the JV is 3-3.

"I think we're looking better," said MHS coach Linda Jolly. "The girls are really playing together now. We're really inexperienced but they are enthused about it. They know what they have to do. They realize they can't live on last year's reputation. They have to play good solid ball.

For Lee, it was a 15-11, 15-12 varsity victory over Kermit for a 2-3 record while the JV won 15-11, 15-4.

It was a very good game," said Lee coach Janice Baulch. "Everybody played extremely well, they looked real good."

The Bulldogs and Rebels will have an opportunity to watch each other play Thursday night as the two teams face Wink at Lee Gym.

The Rebels open play at 5:30 p.m. followed by the Bulldogs at 7 p.m.

Pirate rookie sees Red, no-hits Cincy through five

Rookie right-hander Jose DeLeon of the Pittsburgh Pirates may someday pitch a no-hitter. And at this rate, it might be against the Cincinnati Reds.

DeLeon again ripped through the Reds, holding them hitless for 5 1-3 innings, as Pittsburgh downed Cincinnati 5-3 Tuesday night.

On Aug. 20, in his first appearance against the Reds, DeLeon went 6 2-3 hitless innings and finished with a two-hitter while striking out 13.

This time, he allowed two hits in his six innings, fanning seven while walking one.

"That's the second game I've faced him, but I still couldn't hit him," said Cincinnati's Gary Redus. "He's got good stuff."

Before Tuesday's game, DeLeon had made eight major-league starts and on three occasions had taken a no-hitter into the seventh inning.

"If it's going to come, it's going to come," DeLeon, 6-2, said of a possible no-hitter. "I'm just going to try to throw my stuff, get ahead of the hitters, and go six or seven innings. That's all I want right now."

In other National League games, New York split a twi-night doubleheader with Los Angeles by winning the opener 3-2 before losing 2-1, Philadelphia and San Diego split a twinighter with Philadelphia winning 6-0 and then falling 7-5, San Francisco trounced Montreal 13-2, Chicago beat Atlanta 9-6 and Houston downed St. Louis 3-1.

DeLeon went six innings before leaving in favor of a pinch hitter.

"The humidity was too much for me," he said. "I think they did the right thing by taking me out. The humidity was getting to me quick, and our bullpen has been doing a good job lately."

Relievers Cecilio Guante, Rod Scurry and Kent Tekulve scattered four hits over the last three innings. Tekulve got the final two outs for his 17th save.

Dave Parker belted a solo home run and added three singles to provide the Pittsburgh offense.

In the fourth, Parker singled off rookie Jeff Russell, 2-1, and Jason Thompson and Doug Frobel followed with RBI doubles. Parker's ninth homer made it 3-0 in the fifth.

Tony Pena singled home another Pittsburgh run in the eighth and Parker delivered an RBI single in the ninth.

Parker's four hits raised his average to .275; he's batting .314 since the All-Star break.

Mets 3-1, Dodgers 2-2

Pedro Guerrero doubled home one run and Greg Brock added an RBI single as Los Angeles made two first-inning runs stand up in the nightcap.

Pat Zachry, 5-0, making his first start of the season, got the win against his former team with six innings of six-hit pitching.

In the opener, Ron Hodges delivered a run-scoring single with two outs in the eighth inning to lead host New York.

Jesse Orosco, 12-5, pitched two scoreless innings to nail down the victory. In his last 17 appearances, covering 31 2-3 innings, Orosco has allowed only one run while going 8-0 with six saves.

His victory set a Mets record for wins by a relief pitcher, previously held by Tug McGraw.

Phillies 6-5, Padres 0-7

Rookie Kevin Gross tossed his first major-league shutout and first complete game to pace Philadelphia in the first game.

Gross yielded six hits as the Padres' Bobby Brown went 0-for-3, breaking his 21-game hitting streak.

Visiting San Diego rallied in the nightcap to spoil the 39th birthday of McGraw, 3-1, who started for the Phillies after 184 consecutive relief outings, dating back to 1979.

Sixto Lezcano belted a two-run homer for San Diego in the second game.

Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt homered twice in the losing effort and now leads the NL with 32 home runs.

Giants 13, Expos 2

Dave Bergman belted two home runs, doubling his season's output, and drove in five runs to end Montreal's four-game winning streak.

Jack Clark added a two-run homer for the Giants and Tom O'Malley drove in three more runs.

Mark Davis, 3-3, held host Montreal to three hits over six innings.

Cubs 9, Braves 6

In Atlanta, Carmelo Martinez, Ron Cey and Mel Hall drilled home runs to highlight Chicago's 14-hit attack.

Martinez cracked a three-run homer in the second inning and drove in another run with a groundout to pin the loss on Craig McMurtry, 12-9.

Cey knocked in three runs, two with his 19th home run of the season.

Chuck Rainey, 14-10, got the win and Lee Smith, the fourth Chicago pitcher, got the final four outs for his 22nd save.

Astros 3, Cardinals 1

Vern Ruhle retired the first 13 St. Louis batters and gave up just three hits in his 8 1-3 innings.

Ruhle, 8-3, won his seventh straight game and helped himself by driving in a run with a suicide squeeze bunt.

He took a one-hitter into the ninth, but left after allowing a one-out homer to George Hendrick, his 15th.

Helsinki tests negative as drug crackdown continues

LONDON (AP) — Not one of 200 athletes tested at the World Track and Field Championships at Helsinki, including all the medal winners, showed any traces of illegal substances, the International Amateur Athletic Federation reported Monday.

The tests, according to one expert, were the same ones in use at the Pan American Games in Caracas, where 16 athletes were discovered with illegal substances in their blood — 12 of whom had anabolic steroids, a muscle building substances. In addition, 11 United States track and field athletes went home without competing after hearing of the new, stringent standards.

"The Medical Committee representatives have reported to the IAAF that all results had proved negative," John Holt, general secretary of the IAAF said in a final report on the games. He said all medal winners at Helsinki were tested and random tests were conducted in heats, semifinals and qualifying rounds.

The IAAF has been building up an elaborate drug-testing system in Europe, so that athletes know what to expect when they compete in a major international meets. Tests for anabolic steroids have been carried out in 23 countries this year, an IAAF spokesman said.

Dr. Manfred Donike, the West German who headed the drug testing operation at the Pan Am games, said at a news conference last week in Caracas that the same tests in use in Helsinki were used there. Donike, a professor at the West German High School of sports in Cologne, was one of the developers of the new, stringent procedures in use there.

Until the Pan Am Games, Donike said, drug testing procedures were lax in the Western Hemisphere. That was the reason, he said, why there were 16 positive tests in Caracas and none in Helsinki.

So did Dr. Primo Nebiolo, Italian president of the IAAF, who said tests are not made in the United States as they are in Europe.

"We are always in favor of strict drug tests and severe measures against those athletes who fail to pass them," Nebioli said in Italy.

"We have always been doubtful of the results of doping tests on the American continent because there is only one qualified laboratory, in Montreal. That is not sufficient to cover the needs of the whole area.

"We hope this situation will improve after the Olympic Games in Los Angeles next year. It was a tough decision for officials at the Pan American Games to disqualify competitors, including gold medal winners, but I am sure these tests will have a positive effect on sports in America in general."

The U.S. Olympic Committee announced after the Pan Am disclosures that all members of the Olympic team would be pre-tested before they go to the Games in Los Angeles next year. And the Medical Commission of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) and the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee have been planning testing for the games.

On Tuesday, Dr. Edward Steitz, president of the U.S. Amateur Basketball Association, announced that all candidates for the 1984 U.S. Olympic basketball team will be tested for drugs at the men's and women's tryouts next spring.

Steitz said until now, U.S. basketball players had not undergone testing until they had made the team.

He said "it is totally unfair to an athlete to be beaten out for a place on the team by someone who is on illegal drugs so we are going to nip it in the bud by testing everyone at the trials."

Steitz, who noted that a U.S. basketball team had never been cited for drug use, said the drug testing equipment used at next spring's trials will be identical to that used at the Pan American games, where performances on the field were overshadowed by the biggest crackdown on illegal drug use in the history of international competition.

Most doctors involved with drug testing claim that anabolic steroids can now be detected up to four months after the drugs were administered.

In the past the traces would remain in the system for only two to three weeks, although the muscle building effects remained.

With the period extended to four months, it means that no athlete can hope to escape detection if regular testing is carried out. This is what the IOC and the IAAF has aimed for in the last few years, and America has been the loophole in the plan.

Prof. Arnold Beckett, a member of the IOC's Medical Commission, called for action against the U.S. athletes who went home.

"I suggest the U.S. Olympic Committee test them for anabolic steroids," Beckett said in a television interview.

The last proven cases of anabolic steroids in the Olympics was at the 1976 Games in Montreal. Eight weightlifters, mostly from Eastern Europe, were disqualified and some were stripped of their medals.

Rodgers returns to football, joins USFL expansion team

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Memphis Showboats of the United States Football League have hired Franklin "Pepper" Rodgers as head coach, The Commercial Appeal of Memphis reported in its Wednesday editions.

"I'm excited about this, as excited as anything that's ever happened to me in football," Rodgers told the paper.

The Showboats scheduled a news conference for Wednesday morning, but team officials refused to say why it was called.

Rodgers, who now lives in Atlanta, has been out of coaching since 1979 when he was fired as head coach at Georgia Tech.

"The USFL is going to make it in professional football," Rodgers was quoted as saying.

Rodgers sued Georgia Tech for $400,000 after he lost his job, arguing that the school did not live up to the conditions of his contract.

Besides his regular salary, he said the contract entitled him to a country club membership, television show revenues and tickets to Tech games.

His claim was upheld by a trial court, and the case is before the Georgia Supreme Court.

Rodgers also was head coach at the University of Kansas and the University of Southern California.

He was an assistant coach at the U.S. Air Force Academy and the University of Florida.

Logan Young, a millionaire businessman from Memphis, was granted an expansion franchise with the USFL in July.

Young could not be reached for comment Tuesday night.

"I don't know this for sure, but I'd almost bet that some people didn't want to touch me in the college ranks because I had sued Tech," Rodgers told the paper. "That's why I haven't been in coaching, in my opinion.

"Anyway, I still believe in my heart that what I did was right. It was the principle of the thing with me. And as a result of my action, I think coaches all over the country had their contracts changed to include a definitive spelling out of what they are entitled to if fired."

But Rodgers told the paper that's all behind him now.

"I'm at a new position in my life, and making the Showboats the most successful team in the United States Football League is the only thing I'm thinking about."

Zikes wins Waukegan Open

WAUKEGAN, Ill. AP) — Les Zikes rekindled memories of 14 years ago on Tuesday by winning four straight matches to emerge victorious for the second time in his career in the $100,000 Waukegan Open on the Pro Bowlers Tour.

Zikes, a 48-year-old tour veteran from Palatine, had won his only previous title here in 1969. He rolled past four opponents, including top-seeded Johnny Petraglia, averaging 240 along the way and winning no match by less than 40 pins.

Ironically, it was Petraglia, a PBA Hall of famer and 14-time tour champion from Manalapan, N.J., who placed second to Zikes in 1969. This time around, Zikes topped Petraglia, 258-168, in the title match, tossing seven consecutive strikes midway through the game to seal the win.

"It's been so long since I've won, I wasn't sure what it felt like," said the veteran right hander, a member of the American Bowling Congress Hall of Fame.

"I haven't bowled well for so long, I didn't really have the confidence I used to," continued Zikes, who earned $13,000 for the win. "But as I kept going I actually tried to keep the pace up to maintain command."

Petraglia, who placed second for the second time this year and hasn't won in more than three years, won $7,500 for runner-up.

The championship started with Zikes, the fourth-seeded player, defeating Jimmy Certain of Milwaukee, 249-203. Zikes then rolled past Earl Anthony of Dublin, Calif., 210-150, and Tom Baker of Buffalo, N.Y., 246-206, before facing Petraglia.

Baker earned $5,500 for third place, while Anthony took home $4,500 and Certain $4,000.

Football cleared in death

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Test results showed a 14-year-old Frankton High School football player died last week of congenital heart disease, according to Madison County Coroner John Noffze.

Rick Vida Jr., a freshman at Frankton, collapsed at the conclusion of practice last Tuesday.

An initial autopsy showed his heart was enlarged nearly three times its normal size, and further tissue tests late last week revealed the congenital disease, Noffze said.

The coroner said last week's extreme heat had nothing to do with the boy's death.

Sampson injured

HOUSTON (AP) — Center Ralph Sampson, who last week signed a four-year, $5 million contract with the Houston Rockets, suffered a strained left foot in a rookie camp workout Tuesday but the injury was not believed to be serious, a team spokesman said.

Rockets trainer Dick Vandervoort called the injury a strained left foot and X-rays proved negative.

Sampson hurt his ankle when he collided with ninth round draft choice James Campbell during a drill. Campbell was not injured.

Sampson and Campbell were going for the ball when Sampson stepped on Campbell's foot causing the injury, Rockets spokesman Jim Foley said.

FRANK MASHBURN, Big Spring, created the excitement at Lake Spence last week when he landed a 20-pound striped bass. Several good strings of white bass and crappie also were reported, including 90 whites and 70 crappie by Lea Vordon, Midland...

Good to excellent crappie and black bass fishing is expected at Spence for the next year or two, according to a forecast based on a cove sampling.

Bill Follis, marine biologist for the TPWD at San Angelo, said there was an abundance of threadfin shad in sizes suitable for crappie and smaller bass. This means a a good bass population in the lake will have ample forage all winter and should come into next spring with good size and weight.

The sampling was conducted by blocking off four coves with 4½ acres, killing all fish with liquid rotenone, which is otherwise harmless. All fish surfacing immediately and those the second day were collected, then sorted as to specie and sub-type, weight, length, sex and tabulated numerically. On some species, such as bass, liver and scale samples were taken.

It is only by examination of the liver tissue in laboratories that determination can be made whether bass are black or Florida or a hybrid. Scale size in ratio to weight-length, give age readings on bass, as do fins from catfish...

Dove season is around the corner. Don't forget the white-winged dove stamp.

Dove hunters get reminder

Dove hunters are reminded by dove hunters tat a $6 white-winged dove stamp is required to take whitewings in all three zones during the coming dove seasons.

A new zone alignment divides the state into Panhandle, Central and Rio Grande zones.

During the Sept. 3-4 and 10-11 whitewing season in the special whitewing area of the Rio Grande Zone, hunters will be allowed to take 10 whitewings and 12 mourning doves per day. In the remainder of the zone, the daily limit will be two whitewings plus 12 mourning doves during those two weekends.

During the regular mourning dove season, the statewide daily bag limit is 12 doves, not to include more than two whitewings. The mourning dove season opens Sept. 1 in the Panhandle and Central Zones, and Sept. 17 in the Rio Grand Zone.

TPWD officials said that since this is the first time the daily bag limit will include whitewing doves outside the special four-day whitewing area, hunters may not be aware the stamp is required to take whitewings in those areas.

Drought hits ducks hard

By BILL SCHULZ

ATLANTA (AP) — Winter snows and spring rains over the Canadian prairies mean recovery for duck populations hard hit by recent drought.

"Portions of southern Alberta are still hurting, but overall, all three major duck breeding provinces, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, are in good shape," said Richard Grozik of Ducks Unlimited — the 46-year-old conservation group.

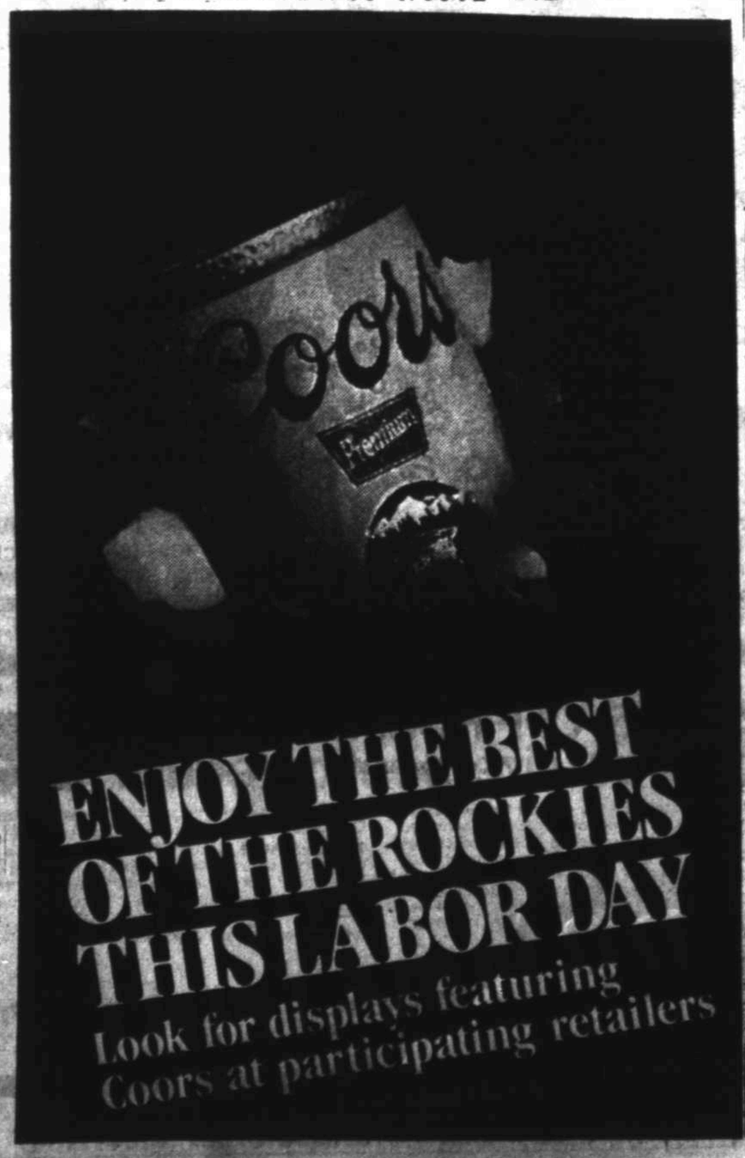

Preliminary breeding population estimates from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service show populations of most major species up from last year's depressed levels.

The mallard population is up 6 to 9 percent; greenwing teal up 15 percent, redheads up 28 percent, scaup up 34 percent. The population of bluewing teal, however, is down 13 percent; pintails are down 1 percent, canvasbacks down 3 percent and widgeon down 7 percent.

"Overall, I think it's not as dismal as people like to paint the picture," Grozik said in a telephone interview. "These birds have remarkable bounce-back capacity. The condition of the habitat is greatly improved over the past three years.

"We're going to have some super habitat awaiting the birds if we get a good snowpack and a good runoff this winter and spring."

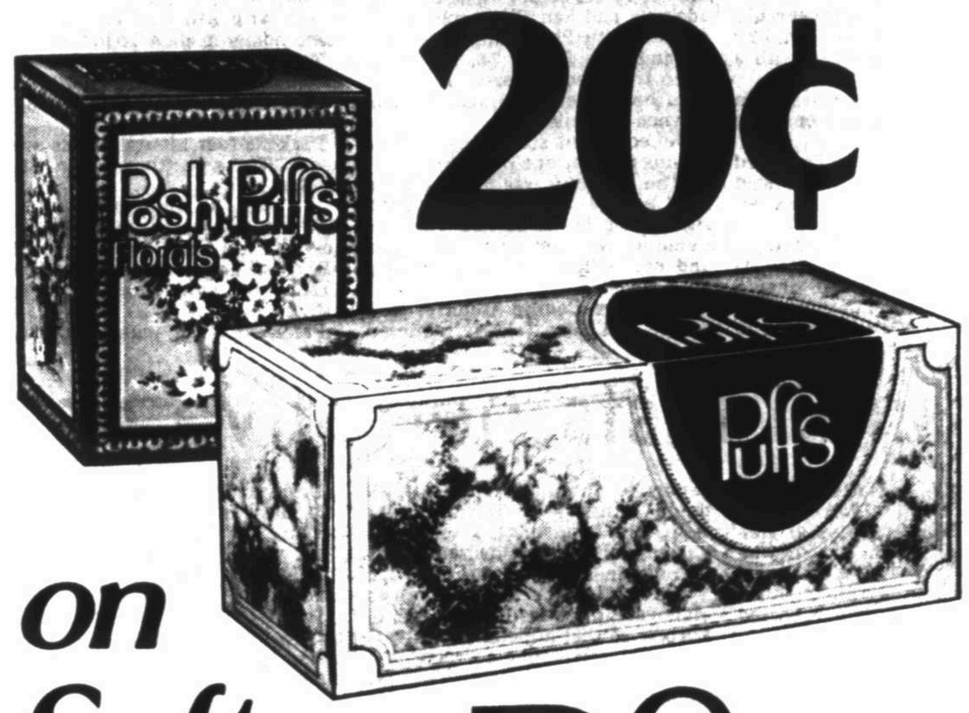

Since 1937, Ducks Unlimited has been working to improve habitat in the Canadian prairies where 70 percent of North America's ducks, geese and swans are born and bred.

Demand for crude taxes known reserves

LONDON — A decade of diminishing reserves and fifteen years of declining crude oil discovery rates, may signal a need for most nations to begin planning for alternate energy sources, the World Petroleum Congress was told today.

In a paper presented to the Congress, Charles D. Masters of the U. S. Geological Survey in Reston, Virginia, discussed the outlook for discoveries of crude oil. The paper was prepared by Masters, David H. Root, also from USGS and William D. Deitzman, of the U. S. Energy Infomation Administration, Dallas, Texas.

According to the paper, world demonstrated reserves of conventional crude oil are approximately 103 gigatonnes (GTO). (One gigatonne equals one billion metric tons. One metric ton for pruposes of this paper, was equated to seven barrels of oil). Cumulative production is 64 GTO and annual production is 2.9 GTO.

The study's assessment of undiscovered resources shows — with 90 percent probability — that the amount of discoverable oil lies between 46 and 202 GTO with 79 GTO being the most likely value. The world's "ultimate recoverable resource" (the sun of production, demonstarated reserves and undiscovered recoverable resources) total is 246 GTO.

Forty percent of ultimate resurces of crude oil is in the Middle East, Masters told the Congress. He added that there are no known frontier areas with large enough potentials to significantly change the present pattern of distribution.

Masters noted the recent trends in oil exploration. "Rates of discovery have continued to decline over the past fifteen years even though exploation activity has increased in recent years. Prudence dictates, therefore, that the low side of the probability range of the assessment of undiscovered resources be responsibly considered and that alternate energy souces be a part of future planning.

To sustain his assessment of 79 GTO of undiscovered resources, Masters said a massive amount of exploration is required. The study's analysis suggested that most of the new oil would come from established areas, but the unexplored arctic, deep water and other frontier areas might contain significant undiscovered resources.

On the basis of area and volume along, Masters said that a significant amount of oil must be calculated for the arctic, but that he foresaw little possibility for the major province. In addition, he pointed to the logistical and environmental problems of the Artic as factors that would deter extensive commercial development.

Becaus extra-heavy oil and bitumen are not projected to be economically competitive with conventional crude oil in the near future, those sources are addressed separately in the study.

The reserves of conventional crude oil were estimated by field and grouped by country and region. Prime sources of data were the well and field files of Petroconsultants Ltd., scientific and trade literature, and government publications.

Approximately eighty percent of the world's reserves, field by field, have been specifically examined by W. D. Dietzman and his colleagues with the EIA," said Masters.

He explained that in a few countries, understanding of definitions and availability of public data for independent analysis were still lacking. Nevertheless, he expressed confidence that his published estimates were proportionally and geographically satisfactory.

Masters concluded, "There is an immense quatity of conventional crude oil in the world. Our capacity for consumption, however, is perfectly capable of challenging that immensity. Though there is much yet to be discovered and produced, there is no room for complacency."

The World Petroleum Congress, the largest international forum to the petroleum industry is held every four years. The current Congress, which is being attended by delegates from some 28 nations, will run through Friday in the Barbican Center.

Merger approved

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shareholders of Natomas Co. and Diamond Shamrock Corp. have approved a $1.6 billion merger in which Natomas' energy operations will be taken over by Diamond Shamrock and its other businesses will be spun off to shareholders.

As part of the merger, approved Tuesday, Diamond Shamrock will swap $1.6 billion of its common and preferred stock for all of Natomas' stock.

A new holding company will be created in which Diamond Shamrock and Natomas would be operated separately.

Natomas has agreed to spin off to its shareholders the company's transportation and real estate subsidiaries.

"This is the beginning of a new era," said Dorman Commons, the Natomas chairman and chief executive.

PBPA thanks legislators for support

Loeffler, Hance talk about O&G bills

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Business-Energy Editor

The Hilton Hotel ballroom was filled to capacity Tuesday by Permian Basin Petroleum Association members there to symbolically givethe area's legislators a heartfelt pat on the back.

Among those honored by the association were: U.S. Representatives Ron Coleman, Kent Hance and Tom Loeffler; State Senators John Montford and Bill Sims; and State Representatives Dick Burnett, Tom Craddick, Jay Gibson, Jim Rudd and Larry Don Shaw.

Loeffler and Hance, two of the petroleum industry's top supporters in Congress, made brief, and somewhat lighthearted speeches.

PBPA has played an influencial role in a number of Congressional actions, Loeffler said.

"It is most fitting to say," he remarked, "on behalf of Kent and myself, had we not had your support at the grassroots level ... we would not have been able to win."

Federal regulation of natural gas prices concerns most in the oil and gas industry. Attempts in Congress to repeal controls have sparked hot debate.

Loeffler told the attentive gathering he is not optimistic a Senate decontrol bill will survive the legislative process.

There are two reasons for his lack of optimism, Loeffler said. First, the bill's content, its wording, is "wrong" and, secondly, it is possible a planned filibuster against the bill will throw it off course.

Loeffler suggested the Senate bill is not a decontrol bill at all, rather it is, in a sense, a recontrol bill.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, has vowed to filibuster against the bill, Loeffler said. If the filibuster is timed right, it could force debate on the issue well into next year, when it could easily become entangled with presidential politics, he said.

A decontrol bill now beginning to move through the House of Representives, Loeffler said, "is the most positive piece of legislation from your view, and certainly from mine.

"It reflects a fine consensus ... of what people in this area would like to see."

However, Loeffler warned, it is likely those in the House of Representatives favoring control of natural gas prices may have the upper hand; and could use their power to alter the bill in a way that would be harmful to the industry. If that proves the case, Loeffler said, the Texas delegation to the House could find itself working to kill the bill as it moves through Congress.

Hance, who recently announced his candidacy for the Senate, talked taxes in a campaigner's way. He reminded the oil and gas men of what he has done to ease their tax burdens over the past couple of years.

Hance said a provision in the Hance-Conable Tax Bill of 1981 would have allowed investors a six-month holding period for capital gains. That provision was defeated. It would, however have been good for the capitalization of the country, Hance said. He forecast a good possiblity that a six-month holding period will meet congressional approval soon.

Hance also reminded his audience of the limited relief from the so-called Wind Fall Profits Tax his tax bill had produced. The first two barrels of oil produced daily from a stripper well are now exempt from the tax.

"The real home run," Hance said, is there will be no more WPT for independent operators of stripper wells.

Hance took credit for a provision in the Hance-Conable bill (which became officially known as the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981) that would lift the burden of estate and gift taxes from most Americans. Because of that provision, Hance said, by 1986, about 94 percent of Americans won't have to pay estate and gift taxes.

Hance said a bill to abolish the Windfall Profits Tax he has introduced probably won't pass. However, he said its in "our" benefit to have introduced the bill.

"Its one of those 'ole' bills' you introduce for strategy," Hance said.

The Congressman concluded with a reminder that he is running for Senate. "I'll put my record up against anyone on oil and gas legislation," he said.

Hance praised the PBPA for its "positive attitude."

In working with Bob Madison (PBPA vice president) and Ed Thompson (PBPA executive vice president), Hance said, "they truly do an outstanding job. It's a pleasure to deal with professionals like that."

Mitchell Corp. reports higher 2nd Q earnings

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp.'s second quarter earnings rose to $19,099,000, or 40 cents per share, from the year-earlier $17,804,000, or 37 cents per share, the company reported today.

Revenues for the three months ended July 31 amounted to $238,559,000, compared with $235,013,000 for the corresponding quarter of the prior year.

In the first half of its current fiscal year, the company earned $38,286,000, or 80 cents per share, on revenues of $479,021,000. In the same period last year, earnings amounted to $34,117,000, or 71 cents per share, on revenues of $466,150,000.

Chairman and President George P. Mitchell said the second quarter gains, like those of the first quarter, were mainly attributable to higher natural gas liquids prices and production and to lower interest expense.

He said earnings were affected by the company's higher provision for income taxes–a 40 percent rate in the first half of this year as compared with last year's 32 percent. But while the higher rate reduced earnings, he noted, it did not affect funds from operations because substantially all of the company's income taxes are deferred. First half funds from operations amounted to $128,494,000, compared with $99,264,000 a year earlier.

First half results were especially gratifying, Mitchell said, in view of the lingering effects on energy operations of the national recession and last winter's unusually warm weather, and the constraints on Houston-area real estate operations stemming from the downturn in the oil and gas industry.

Mitchell Energy & Development is a large independent energy firm with real estate interests. Its shares are listed on the American and Pacific stock exchanges.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Couple better off than average American family

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband is 46 and I'm 45. We own a business, in which we both work and which puts us in the 50 percent federal income tax bracket. My husband really dislikes that business and can't take the pressure much longer. If we sell the business, we would have rental income from eight stores. We have about $500,000 in real estate, free of debt, as well as about $230,000 in savings certificates, bonds and stocks. Our one son, a college junior, has a $16,000 education fund.

You're my last hope. I keep urging my husband to sell the business, so we can change professions and start doing things we enjoy. Do you think we are financially secure enough to do this?

Doyle

A. Indeed, I do. By totaling up your assets and the income you should be getting from them, it's obvious you are far, far better off than the average American family.

Your letter is vague about your real estate holdings and doesn't make it clear if the eight stores are included in the $500,000. Let's say you're getting a 10 percent rental return. That's $50,000. Let's say you're getting 8 percent on your other $230,000 of investments. Another $18,400. If you can't live on $68,400 annually, you have awfully expensive tastes.

Also, you should be able to sell that profitable business for a bundle of dollars, which could then earn more interest and-or dividends for you.

What are you worried about? Based on the information you supply, you can sell that business and do whatever you please. For that matter, you could retire and be in better financial shape than the vast majority of people.

You won't be in the 50 percent tax bracket. That maximum federal tax bite for a married couple filing a joint return applied to taxable income of $85,600 last year and rises to $109,400 this year and $162,400 for 1984 and future years.

Q. We need advice in handling what we have accumulated in 36 years of marriage. We are both 56. Our beautiful home is paid for and valued at $50,000. We also have $2,000 in utility stock, $6,000 in a money market deposit account and $4,000 in individual retirement accounts.

My husband has lost his job as purchasing agent and it looks as if he may not find another. I make $12,000 a year. If he can't get job, would it be wise to sell our home and rent a condominium at $400 a month? We would use the interest from the money received from the sale of the home to pay the rent. We would save real estate taxes and upkeep on the house. Also, because we are older than 54, we wouldn't have to pay federal income tax on the profit from the sale of our home.

A. Leaving aside the obvious fact that a $400-a-month condominium wouldn't provide living quarters equal to your home, your plan is not really a good one. You would be paying $4,800 a year rent, with probable increases in the future. If you receive $50,000 from the sale of your home, and you would probably get less after realtor's commission and other expenses, you would have to get 96 percent interest on that money to equal the rent on the condo.

Unless the real estate taxes in your area are sky-high, which your return address doesn't seem to indicate, and unless the maintenance costs of your home are unusually large, you would lose only by selling and moving into rental quarters.

My advice is to keep your home, if you can do it on your salary. Sell, only if you're really strapped for cash. Like many other families that suffered job losses in the recession, you have a serious financial problem. I'd caution against compounding it, unless the sale is absolutely necessary.

And, don't give up hopes of your husband finding another job. Assuming he keeps looking, he'll find employment, even if it means changing his line of work. The economy is improving. Unemployment is declining.

Q. We have some U.S. Freedom Bonds, which have long since passed maturity. What should we do with them, if we don't want to collect the interest now?

A. You have to be talking about U.S. Savings Notes, also called Freedom Shares. They were issued from May 1, 1967 through June 30, 1970 with original maturities of four years, six months.

Freedom Shares were granted two 10-year extended maturities. That means they are still accuring interest and will continue to do so until their final maturity dates — November 1991 at the earliest.

Since you don't want the money, the wise thing is to simply hang on to those Freedom Shares until their maturity dates. Like E bonds and the newer EE bonds, Freedom Shares will build up interest at the new "adjustable rate," if held for five years past November 1, 1982. That adjustable rate is 85 percent of the average rate on marketable U.S. Treasury securities.

Just don't make the mistake of holding Freedom shares past their final maturity dates, at which time they will stop building up interest.

Q. Rather than send $7.50 to the Superintendent of Documents for savings bond tables of redemption values, I get Xerox copies from my bank — free. Shouldn't you inform your other readers that this can be done?

A. OK. Now, let's hope other readers who ask for that extra service you have been getting deal with truly friendly bankers.

Q. I am 75 and retired. My wife and I live on Social Security and interest from bank savings certificates. We received a mailer about investing in deeds of trust notes backed by home improvement loans and paying much higher interest than savings certificates? Do you think we should invest in them?

A. No. Those notes pay higher interest than savings certificates because there is more risk involved. Unless you have a bundle tucked away, you and your wife are in no financial position to take on risks.

MMH directors approve financing for CT scanner

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital directors approved a $33.5 million operating budget and the purchase of an additional $2 million in revenue bonds for two more projects during a special meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Financing of a CT scanner, a sophisticated machine which provides cross section X-ray images of the inner human anatomy, and renovation of space to accommodate it was called "an interim form of financing" by directors because the project originally was to be funded through donations raised by the hospital's board of governors.

With a two-year fund drive planned, it is hoped the scanner will be "the number one project" for governors, relieving directors of financing the machine and accompanying renovation, estimated to cost $1.2 million, according to Tom Bruner, chairman of the board of trustees finance committee.

The junior lien revenue bonds, with BancTEXAS Dallas N.A. acting as agent, did not require a bond rating, although Moody's Investor Services had offered to rate them, said MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson.

"(Moody's) was not overconcerned," Bruner said. "The only concern they have, of course, is the junior lien revenue bonds will be a burden the hospital would have to pay sometime in the future."

"It's just that we're adding another piece of debt that we didn't seem to be anticipating," Director Frank Cahoon said.

"It comes on the heels of our expansion project," said Tevis Herd, president of MMH directors, adding it will place a "pretty severe restriction" on the financing of future projects.

"I think we need to tell the board of governors this is an interim form of finance," Cahoon said.

Agreements and coverage of the junior lien revenue bonds are similar to revenue bonds issued last spring for a $15 million 77-bed expansion, according to Bruner. In May, MMH officials received a disappointing medium grade revenue bond rating (Baa) from Moody's. Standard & Poor's Corp. declined to give MMH's revenue bonds a rating.

The junior lien revenue bonds, which will reach maturity on June 1, 1985 through 1989, have interest rates ranging from 8.25 percent to 9.50 percent per annum. Total interest should be $708,314, Bruner said.

If any additional revenue bonds are issued, these bonds must be refinanced. Also, "if, for some reason, we don't meet our budget, we would be prohibited from issuing additional junior lien bonds," Bruner said.

The junior lien revenue bonds, also to be used for the financing of a proposed $600,000 parking garage, will be purchased at a 2.5 percent discount.

Directors also discussed whether to put the contract for renovation of space to accommodate the scanner up for bids. Chairman of the Board of Trustees Gene Abbott recommended giving the contract to Area Builders, Inc., which did the original construction.

According to Abbott, the proximity of the area to be renovated to the critical care and post-critical care units requires a company with experience in working in a hospital. Also, he said the mechanical and electrical modifications could be done better by someone "familiar with what's up there and it would be logical for them to do it."

"I sure would hate to get a stranger in there," he said.

Area Builders had submitted an estimate of $237,000 for the project on a cost-plus basis with a 10 percent fee.

"Some folks feel we should bid this work," Abbott said, "but because of the complexity of the modification work...I feel personally the bids would come back higher than the cost-plus, 10 percent base."

Expected to be delivered the first week of September, arrival of the CT scanner was delayed pending approval of a certificate of need from the Texas Health Facilities Commission. A hearing has been scheduled Sept. 16, and no opposition has been filed.

A contract with General Electric for the purchase of the scanner was awarded on a contingency basis — the contingency being the certificate of need is accepted, Abbott said.

Because of the delay in the hearing, Abbott said he felt the situation warranted an emergency exception, allowing for the renovation to proceed without advertising for bids.

If bids were extended, Abbott estimated an additional 90-day delay plus six weeks needed for construction.

"We're losing money and we're losing patients who have to go elsewhere for the Cat (CT) scan," said Director Dr. Walter Parks.

Other directors had reservations, however: "I think there may be some question in some of the public's minds that we could have put this out for bids a couple of weeks ago," Herd said.

Directors approved putting the project out for bids on a cost-plus basis not to exceed a maximum bid with Parks objecting and directors Herd, Cahoon and Wanda Mohr voting approval.

Wise Airline President Malone Mitchell III fields questions during announcement Tuesday of new air service between Midland and San Angelo from Midland Regional Airport. The fledgling commuter line begins service Thursday with two round-trip flights a day.

Airline gets ready to take off

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Wise Airlines takes to the clear West Texas skies Thursday — marking the first time in four years that residents of the Midland-Odessa area can fly directly to San Angelo.

"There'll be two round-trip flights a day," Wise President Malone Mitchell III said during ceremonies at Midland Regional Airport Tuesday.

Initial service will revolve around business schedules, but Mitchell said there are plans for growth — including the possibility of non-stop service to Las Vegas in the not-too-distant future.

"We'll stay small and sound at first and grow naturally, instead of forcing it," he said, attributing the demise of Permian Airways four years ago to over-development.

The adult fare for the Midland-San Angelo route is $45 one-way and $85 round-trip. Servicemen can fly for $40 each way, while the one-way student fare is $25.

"Our schedule is designed for the San Angelo and Midland pleasure traveler and business person to make connections to cities all over Texas and the United States," Mitchell said, adding:

"We have been fortunate to attract some of the finest aviation professionals in the country and they will be putting their considerable expertise to work for customers."

FNB denies it agreed to buy back loans

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The First National Bank of Midland has denied that it ever guaranteed to repurchase $4.5 million loans which two East Texas banks bought from the Midland bank beginning in 1981.

The First National Bank in Clarksville and the First National Bank in Bells filed a $10 million lawsuit in federal court against FNB-Midland after $2.4 million of the original $4.5 million in loans was outstanding. That lawsuit was filed in August.

The two banks, which are seeking treble damages, began buying the loans from FNB-Midland in September 1981, according to court records. They claim that FNB-Midland promised to buy back the loans. Many have defaulted, the complaining banks contend.

Most — 30 — of the 44 loans represented in the $2.4 million have 1983 maturity dates. One matured in 1982. Another is not fully due until 1992. They were made to energy companies, including drilling, fishing and mud companies, to individuals and businesses, including food and housing interests.

On several key issues raised by the East Texas banks, here's how FNB-Midland replied:

—In dispute: FNB-Midland guaranteed that each loan was of "good quality, but many of the loans have defaulted" and FNB-Midland was aware that the loans were not of good quality.

FNB-Midland denies the claim.

—In dispute: FNB-Midland "contracted and guaranteed" to repurchase each loan upon demand of the East Texas banks.

FNB-Midland denies the allegation.

—In dispute: FNB-Midland "promised and guaranteed to service" each loan "in a proper and adequate manner" but "failed to service, collect and attempt collection of the delinquent loans in accordance with good banking practices."

FNB-Midland says it "serviced such loans in a proper manner" but denies the remaining charges.

—In dispute: FNB-Midland represented that it was "in solvent financial condition and could and would repurchase each participation loan upon demand" of the two East Texas banks. "...In fact," says the complaining banks, "the defendant was in a poor and deteriorating financial condition...."

FNB-Midland denies the allegation.

—In dispute: FNB-Midland has "wholly failed" and refused to repay any of the loans as demanded by the complaining banks and as guaranteed by FNB-Midland.

FNB-Midland acknowleges that it "has not repaid" any of those loans and denies that it "at any time guaranteed the repayment of such loans."

—In dispute: FNB-Midland "engaged in two or more acts of racketeering" and in fraud.

FNB-Midland denies such allegations.

The case is to be heard by U.S. District Lucius D. Bunton.

Houston bank files suit against FNB

A Houston bank which says it declined to participate with the First National Bank of Midland in the renewal of a $3.5 million loan has filed a $1 million suit in 142nd State District Court in Midland against FNB-Midland.

The complainant, University State Bank, says that it and FNB acquired ownership of a participation interest in the $3.5 million loan made by FNB to Gene Murrell. University's ownership was $1 million.

The loan reached maturity on June 30, says University.

When the loan became due, FNB would not require payment in full, says University, "but rather would renew and extend the maturity of such indebtedness."

University says it declined to participate in renewal of the indebtedness because it would not be in the bank's "best interest" and demanded payment of its interest after FNB extended the maturity of the loan.

The banks entered into the certificate of participation in December 1982, says the suit's petition.

Collateral on the loan was oil and gas properties in Duvall, Hemphill and Fayette counties, according to court records.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The hot summer has been bearing down on Tom Loeffler, and it was beginning to show Tuesday afternoon. As he leaned back in the padded chair and put a cowboy-booted foot against the desk top, the congressman closed his eyes for a few seconds before answering the next question.

His August recess from Congress has involved all work and no play. As representative from the 21st District — a land mass larger than Pennsylvania and stretching from Midland to San Antonio to Fort Stockton — demands from the drought-stricken farmers and ranchers have kept him on a hot, dusty trail seeking help. It's been coming in spurts — not in the form of rain — but in assistance from the federal government.

The sun's hot rays seemed to melt all other issues from Loeffler's mind, until he was asked questions. And then the rest of the world came into focus as he opened his eyes and dug slowly into the recesses of his memory for those issues which seemed so important before the drought.

Ah, yes. It was the economy and nuclear missiles and strategic arms talks and labor unions and elections. It became a game of which comes first: The chicken or the egg, the labor unions' high wage demands or the recession, more missiles or more talks, or a new president?

Loeffler voted against giving Chrysler Corporation that multi-million dollar loan a few years ago. "I feel the private sector has the chance to fail or succeed on its own" without the federal government stepping in to save a company.

Rep. Tom Loeffler

When the car manufacturer repaid its debt recently, Loeffler was delighted and he attributed the company's success to Lee Iacocca's leadership.

Chrysler got into trouble for three reasons: government regulation, overbearing labor unions and poor management decisions, said Loeffler.

And that leads back to the causes of the country's recession, the recovering economy and the possible re-election of a president who is trying to force the Soviet Union into reducing its nuclear arms.

Labor unions quietened demands for higher wages during the recession, continued the congressman. "In the last two years, members of the unions recognized jobs were the most important thing. Jobs first; wages second, or they'll price themselves out of the market.

"Labor unions for too many years have exercised too much power over the individual worker. It's all served to reduce the power of the labor unions in recent years."

A 95-degree summer "breeze" wafted through his office in the federal building as Loeffler sipped at a cup of lemon-lime, no-caffeine soft drink. That gone, he leaned back in the chair again.

The country is recovering from the two-year recession, he contended. "Unemployment is coming down. In December 1982, it was 10.8 percent. Now it's 9.5 percent. That means more people have a job and that drops the deficit by $30 billion."

Recovery is strong, he feels, looking at industry's productivity rate of 75 percent. "In good times, it's 85 percent" of capacity. And when other industries pick up, that leads to a need for more energy. "Oil and gas will be needed to turn the machines in the industries."

The interest rate has dropped, but not to a reasonable limit. The rate is 11 percent, he said. But with inflation at only 4 percent, the interest rate should be no higher than 8 percent. "That problem is still one of the worst economic indicators we have. Traditionally, when recovery is strong, there is a 4 point spread between the rate of inflation and the prime rate."

But Congress is to blame for the Federal Reserve's reluctance to drop the rate, he contended. "A strong, fiscally responsible Congress is not there. The financial community is nervous. A $200 billion deficit causes extreme concern."

This past Congress has been more liberal than the last one, said Loeffler, reflecting on that dream session when President Reagan and the conservatives were successful in pushing through their spending and tax cuts.

While the House no longer has the majority it needs to carry a spending cut bill, Reagan can veto the legislation that clears all hurdles to his desk. And the House does carry enough votes to uphold that veto, said Loeffler with a smile.

With the factions split this way, neither side will be successful in the next year, he predicted. "The liberals will pass bills; the president and the conservatives will veto them."

For that reason, Loeffler feels it "is exceedingly important we return more conservatives to government." And he predicts the Republican presidential candidate will be Reagan.

Another rest for his eyes. Then the next topic: the nuclear arms questions.

Lawmakers review past year's business

Rep. Tom Craddick

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The Republican rattled off a list of successful and unsuccessful bills.

The Democrat joked about them.

But State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, and State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, agreed on the biggest issue — money — and their unwillingness to institute or raise taxes to fund more spending bills.

The two legislators appeared Tuesday night at a League of Women Voters Annual Summer Happening to review the past year's work. Craddick, in his 16th year, focused on the problem of funding all the requests while Sims, in his first term, recalled the loss of a water bill. Both supported pari-mutuel betting and pondered whether more money would solve teachers' problems.

Although the Legislature wound up its year with a final bank statement that reflected $2 billion less than what had been predicted in January, the budget for the next two years is 15 percent more than the last two, according to Craddick.

And the state got tougher on drunk drivers, he said, explaining provisions of the Driving While Intoxicated bill. A mandatory jail sentence is required for all offenses, although first-time offenders might be given a probated sentence if they undergo therapy. Second-time offenders must stay at least three days in jail; third-timers get at least 10 days. If an injury or death is involved, that person must serve a minimum of four months in jail.

"Supposedly, it's worked in other states," said Craddick. "After you've spent a couple of nights in jail, you'd think twice."

Local phone hookups will be on hold for about six weeks

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The recent telephone strike will leave some Midlanders, who want home and business hookups, on hold for about six weeks.

The national strike by the Communications Workers of America against American Telephone & Telegraph has caused a backlog throughout the country.

Although a national agreement was reached Aug. 21, in the strike which began Aug. 7, settlement was held up by local negotiations between the CWA and 34 Bell subsidiaries, including Midland's Southwestern Bell.

Sam Ogletree, representative for Midland Southwestern Bell, said service will be done on a first come, first serve basis.

"We have a backlog of about 1,200 to 1,300 for new service and 60 percent of these are new connection orders," Ogletree said. "We'll average 150 orders a day, but it will be on a first come, first serve basis for for about six weeks. Those people who wanted service when the workers went on strike are first."

While some 500 Midland union workers were back to work Monday, a few Southwestern Bell employees were shipped to Houston Tuesday to help with interrupted phone service from Hurricane Alicia, said Polo Cervantes, district manager for installation maintenance in Midland.

"We have six occupational (craftsmen) people and a supervisor from Midland," Cervantes said. "They went along with nine occupational people from Odessa and three more from Big Spring. They should be there today to help get service back in order."

Meanwhile, installation and repair service in Midland may be a little slow.

"We can handle a repair case today, depending on the type," Ogletree said. "When you have a work stoppage, you've got to put some things aside and get your house back in order.

Customers who have reached a service representative should not have to wait as long as those who need installations in their homes or businesses, according to Ogletree.

"If a service rep gets an order and the customer picks up the set the next day, we can get service on that day, if we don't have to send an installer out," Ogletree said. "Now, the customer doesn't always appraise the situation correctly, so if he doesn't get service immediately, there may be a chance that an installer must be there. Otherwise, we can connect in the central office."

Begin's decision still unexplained

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — Here are questions and answers about Prime Minister Menachem Begin's decision to resign.

Q. Why did Begin resign?

A. He hasn't explained himself in public yet, but people who met with him Tuesday, trying to change his mind, quoted him as saying, "I cannot go on any longer." He is 70 years old, has had two heart attacks and is deeply saddened by the death of his wife Aliza last November as well as by the mounting Israeli casualty toll in Lebanon. His government has been unable to stem Israel's inflation, now running at 130-160 percent annually, or cure other economic woes.

Q. How does Begin actually resign, and does he leave office immediately?

A. Israeli law requires him to resign by letter to State President Chaim Herzog. Begin wrote the letter but had not delivered it by Tuesday evening. Begin's resignation means that his government also resigns, but it remains as a caretaker Cabinet until a new one is formed. Begin will be a caretaker prime minister until the next Cabinet takes office.

Q. How long does that take?

A. Top figures in Begin's Herut Party, the main part of the governing Likud coalition, began meeting Tuesday to consider the new political situation, but there's no telling how long it will take them to decide. It could be done by Wednesday morning but also could last weeks, depending on how tough the fight is for the premiership.

Q. Are new elections required?

A. It would depend on whether the new leadership of Herut and the Likud is accepted by the smaller parties in Begin's current coalition. If all parties accept the new Cabinet lineup, no election is required until late 1985. But if the coalition doesn't agree, there would be a period of instability that could lead to elections sooner.

Q. Who is likely to be the next prime minister?

A. The two top contenders are Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who like Begin led an underground fighting group during the Jewish struggle against the British mandatory power in Palestine, and Deputy Prime Minister David Levy, whose Moroccan ancestry makes him popular among Israel's Sephardic Jewish majority. Most observers think Shamir is the front-runner. Since he is 68 years old and not particularly charismatic, many think he might serve in an interim capacity until the next elections.

Q. What about people like Ariel Sharon, Defense Minister Moshe Arens and former defense minister Ezer Weizman?

A. Sharon, a former defense minister and now minister without portfolio, may also put himself forward as a candidate. Arens and Weizman, though they have the advantage of popularity with Israelis, are not members of parliament now, and they cannot serve as prime minister. They might be top candidates in the next elections, though.

Q. Does the opposition Labor Party have a chance at this stage?

A. Technically Labor has a chance because it is the largest single party in parliament with 50 seats in the 120-member Parliament, and by custom the president should ask the largest single party whether it can form a majority after a government has resigned. But if no parties desert the Likud coalition, Begin's political organization would still have at least 61 seats, and perhaps 64, in the 120-seat Knesset.

Q. Whom would Labor put into office if it were to form a government?

A. Shimon Peres, who was defense minister in the last Labor government, is chairman of the party and would be Labor's prime minister. But the opposition party is bedeviled by the long-running rivalry between Peres and former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. Although they recently agreed to stop feuding, most observers expect their struggle to resume. Yitzhak Navon, who was widely admired during a five-year term as Israel's president, also could contend for Labor's leadership but is not now a member of parliament and could not seek the premiership unless he ran in the next election.

If Labor did manage to take power a Labor government might reverse or alter such Begin policies as widespread settlement of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan and make new attempts to extricate the Israeli army from Lebanon.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, saying he "can't go on any longer," will resign his post.

Front-runners represent ethnic divisions

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The two front-runners to succeed Menachem Begin as Israel's seventh prime minister are representatives of Israel's two main Jewish ethnic groups, those of European and Sephardic origin. Here are short sketches of Polish-born Yitzhak Shamir, the foreign minister, and Moroccan-born David Levy, the deputy prime minister.

Shamir, 68, is one of Begin's oldest political associates. Like Begin he was born in Poland and joined Betar, the right-wing Zionist youth movement founded by Begin's mentor Zeev Jabotinsky. Also like Begin, he studied law, at Warsaw University, but cut his schooling short to emigrate to Palestine at the age of 20.

He joined the militant underground force, Irgun Zvei Leumi, or the National Military Organization, which Begin was subsequently to lead. Shamir went to the even more militant Lehi splinter group when the organization split in 1941.

He was Lehi's chief planner and twice escaped from the British who arrested him after a series of bank robberies and assassinations perpetrated by the group.

He went into private business when Israel became independent, then served for 10 years in Paris as a secret agent for the Mossad, Israel's counter-intelligence agency. He joined Begin's Herut Party list and won election to Parliament in 1973, becoming speaker of the house when Begin became prime minister in 1977.

Before he was named foreign minister in 1980, Shamir opposed the Camp David accords with Egypt and abstained when Parliament voted on the accords that led to a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt. He would be expected to follow Begin's strong nationalist policy, but without Begin's strident rhetoric.

David Levy, 45, was born in Morocco and immigrated to Israel in 1957 with his family. Working as a laborer in the poor border town of Beit Shean, he endured the brunt of what Sephardic or North African Jews considered the contempt of the Ahkenazi or European Jewish elite. He was jailed for 12 days when he wrecked a local employment office after believing he had been insulted.

He turned to political action by organizing a strike in a kibbutz farm, which helped win him election to the Beit Shean town council. He won Begin's recognition when he manipulated power in the council away from the Labor Party in 1965. He then became a respected figure in the Labor-dominated Histadrut Trade Union confederation.

In 1977 Begin made Levy immigration minister, then housing minister, and after the 1981 elections he was made deputy premier. He has spoken out strongly for ethnic conciliation.

During the Lebanon war, Levy led the Cabinet's doves against then Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and warned that Israel must consider America's interests in the Middle East. He is considered to be as nationalistic as Begin, but more open to compromise. He is married with 11 children.

Tower to consider use for campaign coffers

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Senator John G. Tower, R-Texas, said Tuesday he will meet in a few days with attorneys to study Federal Election Commission regulations and decide how to use the nearly $1.7 million in campaign contributions now that he has decided not to run for re-election.

"We are getting together to decide what constructive political purpose I can use the money for," said the senator. "We have now between $1.6 and $1.7 million in the bank."

Tower said he expects to campaign for the re-election of President Reagan. Asked if that means that Reagan will run for the presidency again, Tower said "That is my instinct now." Then he added, "The president has not told me yet."

He described Reagan as disappointed when he told him that he had decided not to run again.

As for himself, Tower said he had decided to bow out "because you get to the place some times where you just feel as if you ought to move on and let some one else take over the job and run it."

As for his future, he said "I will not permit any one in business or industry talk to me about a job offer until I have finished with this job." He has 18 months to go.

Asked how his departure from the chairmanship of the House Armed Services Committee leaves Texas military bases, Tower replied: "Our Texas military installations are in good shape."

He said he will move back to Texas to live.

Reagan says U.S. presence essential

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan says the 1,200 U.S. Marines in Beirut, targets of mortar, rocket and small-arms fire, are essential to peace efforts in Lebanon and he cannot estimate how long American troops will be needed there.

As the Marines donned flak jackets and combat helmets under a third day of fire Tuesday, the administration refused to characterize the fighting as a combat situation subject to a congressional decision whether to order withdrawal of U.S. forces.

Speakes called the shelling of their positions "isolated incidents" and said, "If we were conducting combat operations then it would be different, but we're not."

He said the Marines, who have been stationed in Lebanon one year, now were operating under "Condition One" — their highest state of readiness — and that their commander "will take whatever means necessary to protect his troops."

While no American casualties were reported after Tuesday's fighting, four French soldiers were killed and six wounded. Two U.S. Marines were killed and 14 wounded Monday.

From his mountaintop vacation ranch, Reagan sent identical letters to Senate and House leaders updating them on the fighting through Tuesday.

The president said a cease-fire — described by aides as not a formal cease-fire — had taken hold by late Tuesday and that firing on Marine positions had stopped.

"In the meantime," the president added, "U.S. forces will be prepared to exercise their right of self-defense should such attacks recur.

"I believe that the continued presence of these U.S. forces in Lebanon is essential to the objective of helping to restore the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon," Reagan said.

"It is still not possible," the president added, "to predict the duration of the presence of these forces in Lebanon; we will continue to assess this question in the light of progress toward this objective."

Speakes said the administration had completed a review of its compliance with the 1973 War Powers Act and had concluded that it was meeting all its obligations.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, want Reagan to act under the law to give Congress a chance to decide whether to keep the Marines in Beirut or order them brought home.

"These are matters of interpretation," said Speakes, referring to the administration's refusal to invoke provisons of the law.

A senior administration official, speaking only on condition that he not be identified, the administration would consider the troops as being involved in combat if, for instance, they were deployed alongside the Lebanese army in the Chouf mountains and took part in a military sweep of the area.

He drew the distinction that although the Marines at the Beirut airport are exposed to danger, "they are in stationary positions, they are there in a peacekeeping operation and they are are not conducting combat operations."

The official said that as long as the Marines are firing only in retaliation, "it is not combat."

In Washington, Vice President George Bush, who interrupted his vacation Monday because of the fighting, presided over the second meeting in two days of a "special situation group" of national security officials assessing developments in Lebanon.

Bush planned to resume his vacation in Maine today.

Armed robbery suspect jailed

ODESSA — An armed robbery suspect remained behind bars this morning after an unusual holdup at the Golden Skillet Restaurant here Tuesday night.

Jailed under $20,000 bond set by Municipal Court Judge Larry McMillion was 28-year-old Charles Darnell of 3122 N. Jackson.

Police said the manager of the restaurant, located at 2718 N. Dixie Blvd, told them he received four phone calls during the day telling him the establishment would be robbed.

About 7 p.m., a man entered through the side door, waved a pistol at the manager and said: "I want your money."

The manager, 21-year-old William Waldron, handed the man $101 from the cash register. At that point, according to police, the man dropped the money on the floor and fled for no apparent reason.

He was arrested at his home after police said they recognized him from the description provided by Waldron, who later made positive identification. Police said they were unable to determine who made the phone calls or why the suspect ran off without taking the money.

Man released on $5,000 bond

Jose Pablo Sanchez, 32, of 507 E. Estes, was released from custody Tuesday after posting $5,000 bond on a charge of failure to stop and render aid, following a hit-run traffic accident in the 1800 block of North Lamesa Road Monday night.

Sanchez is accused of fleeing the scene after his pickup truck allegedly struck a pedestrain, 19-year-old Mary Ann Navares of 1100 "A" E. Parker.

Police said she was walking south along the curb on Lamesa Road about 10:35 p.m. Monday when Sanchez' southbound truck hit her. She suffered multiple injuries and was in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning. She was intially listed in serious condition when admitted to the hospital Monday night.

Fayrene King of 412 E. Dengar reported the theft of $550 in cash from a cash box under a bed at her home. The theft occurred sometime in the past week.

In another theft complaint, Berrell W. Harmon of 4606 Wilshire said a tool box and assorted tools valued at $300 were stolen from a pickup truck parked at 107 W. Pennsylvania Ave. Tuesday.

And in a burglary complaint, jewelry and assorted change were reported taken from the Boyd Walker residence at 5101 A Street. A window was broken to gain entry, according to police.

Hance plans to emphasize government role

Hance, a member of the conservative Boll Weevils in Congress, jumped into the race last week after incumbent John Tower, R-Texas, announced he wouldn't seek re-election. Hance said he had been considering the race before Tower's announcement and was "90 to 95 percent sure" he would make a run for the seat even before Tower dropped out.

He is looking to West Texas and the petroleum industry to support him strongly in his bid. And he has coordinators in every city of at least 20,000 population. That grassroots organization should bring in about $6 million, the amount Hance said is needed to take him through a primary, run-off and general election.

Hance wants the Senate seat because "I'll be one out of 100" rather than the 434 others with whom he now works. "The Senate is a smaller body and able to focus on more issues. The senator from Texas, California or New York becomes a national figure by speaking out on issues."

Krueger, he said, will be defeated for "some of his liberal positions," which Hance later explained as aid to New York City and labor law reform that would have hurt Texas but which Krueger voted for during his tenure in Congress.

Of the minority groups which are gaining power, Hance said Doggett and Krueger "will promise every group everything." His opposition to amnesty for illegal aliens won't defeat him in the Hispanic sector, said Hance, because they also oppose it.

Looking back to his five years as a representative, Hance put stars beside his work on reducing the Social Security tax from 16 percent to 11.8 and on cutting income taxes with passage of the Conable-Hance bill which saw taxes theoretically reduced by a total of 25 percent over a three-year period. The final installment of that bill became effective July 1.

The issue in this campaign will be economic policy, he said, adding that "the monetary policy has destroyed the economy."

By the time the filing deadline hits in February, Hance predicted the race will have grown to 30 to 40 candidates. Nor did he foresee a problem if former Democratic cohort Phil Gramm of College Station runs and gets the Republican nomination.

"I feel very confident we'll win. The polls showed it was a winnable race before Tower got out," he said. "We're getting a lot of Krueger's supporters from 1978 who supported him then out of necessity."

El Paso Chemical Co. of Odessa lays off 400 employees

The cost-cutting was forced on a reluctant El Paso Products management by the parent firm, El Paso Company, so chemical and plastic products can be made at more competitive prices. El Paso Chemical and El Paso Hydrocarbons Companies must be made into independent units.

El Paso Company, said Waggoner, is seeking a buyer for the chemical business. It will retain the hydrocarbons company. If it cannot locate an independent purchaser it will sell to an employee-management buyout group.

Randy Clements, president of El Paso Chemical, is working with a team from Merill Lynch's New York office to try to sell that company. But Waggoner said the chance of a third-party buyer walking in with a big check to buy it "gets slimmer every day" and the management-employee buyout plan looks best.

"I wish there was some way I could convert rumors into profits," Waggoner said of the layoffs. El Paso Chemical has been losing money for some time, and rumors of El Paso Products' demise have been circulated. The parent firm, El Paso Company, was recently bought by Burlington Northern — but Waggoner said the new owner had not influenced these decisions.

Some decision may be made to sell to employees by Oct. 1, Waggoner said, if no corporate buyer appears. The company would be renamed.

In March, El Paso Products offered 70 long-term employees an early retirement plan, and it is trying to reduce its "surplus" of employees through this program.

Today's announcement affects 300 employees who will not be called back to work in the Midland-Odessa area. Others affected by the layoffs are in El Paso Chemical's Bayport plant and Houston sales office.

The reductions are "absolutely necessary to preserve a majority of the jobs and to permit the new company to succeed (in) our industry," said a letter to El Paso Products employees dated Aug. 30. This letter followed an informational letter sent to them on July 14 regarding the company's future and plans made to divest El Paso of its chemical company.

The competitive cost position Waggoner wants El Paso Chemical to achieve could "have the chemical company making money in 1984," he said, despite losses suffered in a soft market for chemical-hydrocarbon-thermoplastic goods.

If it is not able to make products more efficiently, or if all functions of the staff necessary to make and deliver high-quality product can't be handled by remaining employees, "We'll have to hire some back," Waggoner said. "I think we have achieved all that can be practically done in staff reductions — and we may have gone one or two people too far" in some departments.

Staffing for achievement in the long-term, Waggoner said El Paso Chemical "can't afford luxury" in its business, whether it is sold to a third party, sold to an in-house buyout team, or kept in the El Paso Company.

Timing of many of the layoffs will coincide with the completion of three major research projects at El Paso Chemical — two of them are nearly finished.

Overall activities have been tightened, Waggoner said. The company has increased security to prevent losses of the kind suffered recently at some locations.

Rollups feature 'out-of-rut' fish cooking style

These fish fillet rollups, filled with chopped broccoli, are rolled and baked with a delectable sauce of orange juice and amaretto. Buttered, cooked carrot slices mixed with fresh orange sections are a delicious complement to the rollups.

If you enjoy compliments on your culinary skill, you might like to have a new recipe or two up your sleeve. For instance, consider these Fish Rollups. A delicious combination of flavors and textures, this attractive dish is distinctive enough to be featured at a fine restaurant.

In this recipe, flounder fillets are rolled around a chopped broccoli filling, a pleasant change from the usual spinach.

FISH ROLLUPS

6 flounder fillets
1 package (10 oz) frozen chopped broccoli, cooked and drained
Salt and freshly ground pepper
12 thin slices butter or margarine
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1 small onion, minced or 3 scallions, chopped
1/4 cup flour
3/4 cup orange juice
1/4 cup amaretto
1 tsp. grated orange rind
1 cup (1/2 pint) heavy cream

Place fillets on work surface and top with broccoli. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and top each mound of broccoli with 2 thin slices of butter or margarine. Roll fillets enclosing broccoli and place seam-side-down on a greased baking dish.

Bake in a preheated moderate oven (350-F) for 15 minutes. Remove from oven and drain pan juices. While fish is baking, prepare sauce. Heat butter or margarine in a saucepan and saute onion for 5 minutes. Stir in flour. Gradually stir in orange juice, amaretto, orange rind and heavy cream. Stir over medium heat until sauce bubbles and thickens. Spoon half of the sauce over fish and return to oven for another 15 minutes. Place on serving plates; top with remaining sauce and garnish with few slivers of orange rind. Serve with buttered, cooked carrot slices.

Makes 6 servings.

With a fork whisk together mayonnaise, Parmesan and scallion; spread over fillets. Broil about 6 inches from high heat until fish is opaque when flaked with a fork and topping is golden — about 4 minutes. With a metal spatula, remove fillets to hot dinner plates. Serve. Elegant chilled salmon offers colorful cool comfort

Poached salmon dijon is a cool, colorful way of entertaining for summer guests. If fresh salmon is not available, salmon steaks can be used for the same tasty effect.

Entertain in cool comfort using fresh or canned salmon. The pink salmon makes a colorful entree when garnished with dark green endive and sunny lemon cups. Look for fresh salmon fillet. Salmon steaks can be substituted for the recipe and can be just as tasty.

CHILLED POACHED SALMON WITH DIJON SAUCE
Makes 8 servings

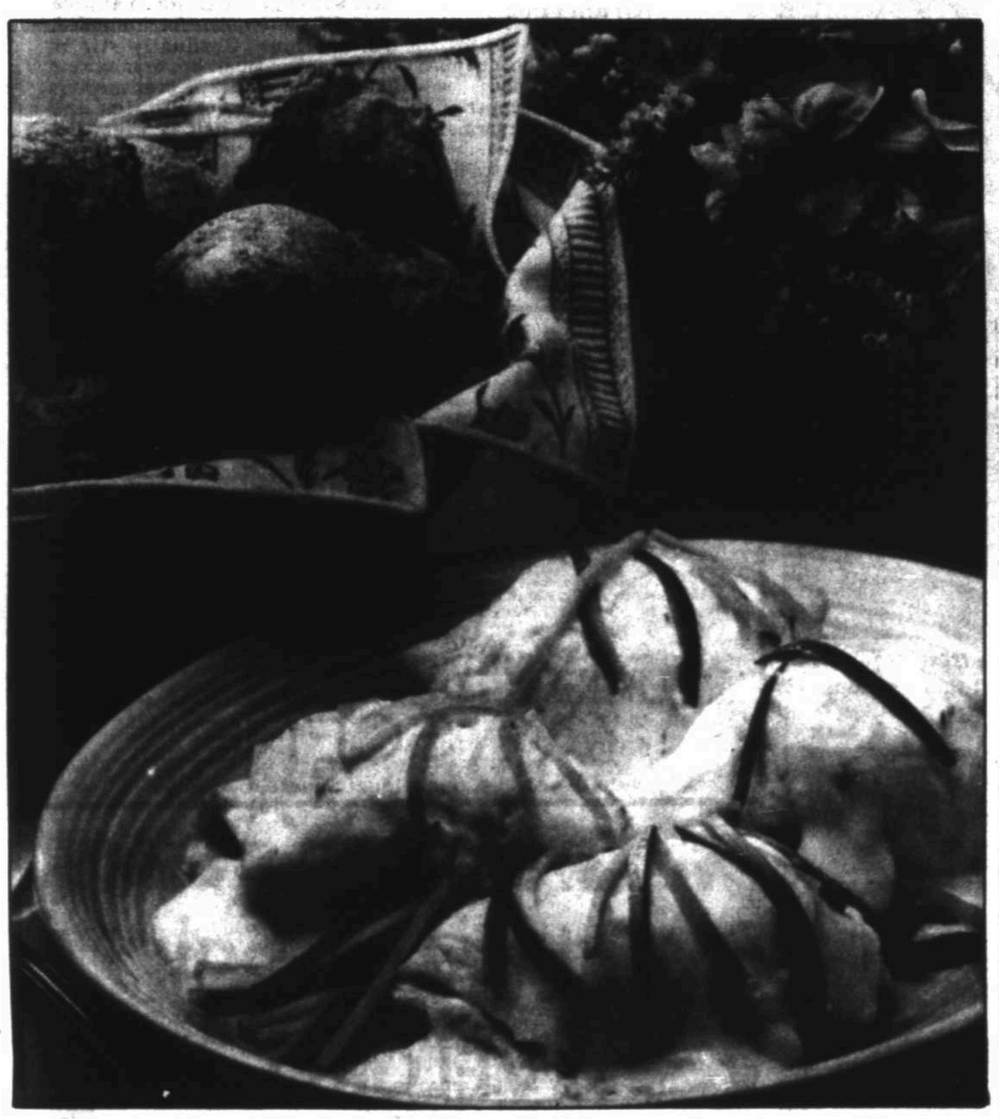

Salted water
1 onion, cut into quarters
1 stalk celery, cut up
3 pounds fillet of salmon (or 8 salmon steaks)
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 cup chopped green onions
2 tbisp. dijon mustard
2 tbisp. lemon juice
1/4 tsp. seasoning salt
1/4 tsp. tarragon leaves or herb seasoning lettuce
lemon

Pour about 1 inch salted water into large shallow pan with rack (such as a large roasting pan). Add onion and celery. Wrap salmon loosely in cheesecloth and place on rack in pan. Cover and simmer 10-15 minutes, until salmon flakes easily when pierced with fork. Lift from water using cheesecloth. Chill salmon. Stir together mayonnaise, sour cream, onions, mustard, lemon juice, seasoning salt and tarragon. Serve salmon on lettuce with sauce. Garnish with lemon.

Though the dill sauce is mixed with dairy sour cream, it can be made into a low calorie fish entree by using a cooking spray instead of butter or margarine.

Fish, dill sauce low in calories

Eating right may include less snacking but it may also mean thinking before you cook. You can cut out calories by thinking about the way you cook and making a few simple changes.

One easy way to cut out calories is to use a cooking spray when sauteing or pan frying. Cooking this fish and the julienne vegetables with a spray instead of oil actually helps reduce calories.

FISH WITH DILL SAUCE AND JULIENNE VEGETABLES

1 pound fillet of sole or flounder (2 large or 4 small)
1 medium carrot, cut into julienne strips
1 small zucchini, cut into julienne strips
2 green onions, cut into julienne strips
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup water
2 tsp. cornstarch
1 tbisp. water
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1/4 tsp. dill weed

Spray inside of shallow baking pan with non-stick cooking spray according to directions. Cut each fillet (if large) into 2 pieces. Fold fillet crosswise in half; place in pan. Apples good for autumn cooking

Copley News Service

In his famous ode "To Autumn," the great English poet John Keats describes the "season of mists and mellow fruitfulness," when autumn conspires with the sun:

"To bend with apples the moss'd cottage trees,

"And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core."

Apples are, as everyone knows, a great snack food and they're easily packed in back-to-school lunches. A crisp one, eaten as dessert, can even help to clean the teeth by removing other food particles! And at around 70 calories per medium-sized apple, even dieters can afford to indulge.

Apples will keep longer than most other fruits. Keep ripe apples in your refrigerator's vegetable drawer. They'll stay fresh and crispy for 10 days or longer. Apples should not be exposed to dry air because they will lose moisture; try to keep them in a moist atmosphere at about 32 F. Smaller apples will keep longer than larger ones.

CARAMELY BAKED APPLES

4 large tart apples
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 tbsp. raisins
1 tbsp. chopped walnuts
Ground cinnamon
½-cup whipping cream

Core apples (such as Pippin, Granny Smith, Rome Beauties) and peel skin fro top half of each apple. Arrange in 8-inch round glass baking dish. Partially fill center of each apple with brown sugar, then stuff with nuts and raisins. Add more brown sugar to fill centers. Spoon any remaining brown sugar into bottom of dish.

Sprinkle each apple lightly with ground cinnamon. Then drizzle whipping cream carefully over apples, pouring some into the brown sugar in each core. Cook in microwave 8 to 10 minutes until apples are tender when pierced with fork, turning dish two or three times during cooking. Transfer apples to individual serving dishes. Cook remaining brown sugar and whipping cream until mixture boils; stir well. Spoon sauce evenly over each apple. Serve warm. Serves 4.

APPLE-NUT BREAD

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
2 tbsps. water
2 cups flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup chopped apple

Cream butter or margarine with sugar; beat in eggs, combining well. Add vanilla and water, beat until smooth. Toss together flour, baking powder, soda, salt, nuts and apples. Fold in.

Microwave in 9x5-inch glass loaf pan lined with brown paper for 5 to 6 minutes, or until done in center. Rotate one-half turn and cook 5 minutes longer. If you wish, you may brown the bread in a 425 F. oven for about 10 minutes. Let cool before slicing.

ACORN SQUASH AND APPLES

Salt
2 medium apples, peeled, cored and sliced
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ cup butter or margarine
Cinnamon

Pierce whole squash (you may substitute butternut squash if desired) and mirowave for 10 to 12 minutes or until squash feels soft to touch. Let stand for 5 minutes. Cut in half, remove seeds. Place, cut side up, in 2-quart (12x7-inch) glass baking dish. Fill centers of squash with apple. Top each with 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 tablespoon butter and dash of cinnamon. Microwave, covered, for 7 minutes or until apples are tender. Let stand, covered, for 3 minutes before serving. Serves 4.

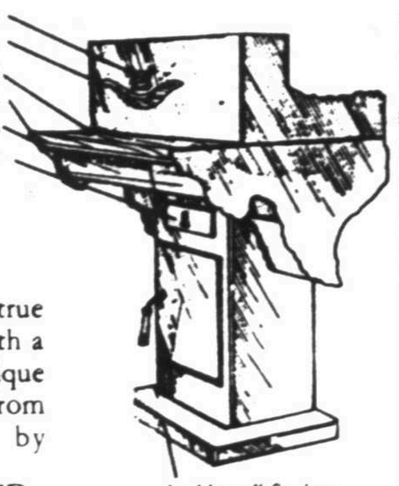

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Pears flavored with Dijon mustard

MUSTARD PEARS

Halve 4 ripe Bartlett pears lengthwise and remove stem structure. In a large skillet stir together ½ cup apricot preserves, 2 tablespoons prepared Dijon mustard, ½ cup water and 2 or 3 tablespoons of lemon juice. Add the pear halves to the skillet. Cook gently, covered, until pears are tender. Add 4 to 8 very thin lemon slices; cool. Makes 4 to 8 servings. —(AP)

Potato-Tomato Gazpacho is a chilled soup, which can cool the last days of summer.

Tomato gazpacho cool, lively

If your soup making is limited to hot, steamy broths served only from November to March, you are missing one of the greatest joys of the summer — chilled soups.

Made with garden-fresh tomatoes, Potato-Tomato Gazpacho has a lively flavor and color. In this easy version of the popular Spanish soup, mashed potato flakes thicken the pureed tomato mixture.

The soup is served with toppings of chopped green pepper, cucumber and tomato to add a crunchy texture. Calorie counters will be pleased with the mere 80 calories a serving of the satisfying gazpacho.

POTATO-TOMATO GAZPACHO

3 cups (3 medium) chopped fresh tomatoes
8 oz. can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon basil leaves
⅛ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
3 cups water
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 cup mashed potato flakes
1 tablespoon oil
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped cucumber
½ cup chopped tomatoes

In blender or food processor, combine 3 cups tomatoes, tomato sauce, sugar, basil and hot pepper sauce. Puree; set aside.

In large saucepan, heat water, onion and bouillon cubes to boiling, stirring to dissolve bouillon cubes. Remove from heat. Add potato flakes, oil and garlic powder; mix well. Add tomato mixture; stir to blend. Refrigerate. Serve cold, topped with chopped green pepper, cucumber and tomatoes. Makes 6 one-cup servings.

Cookbook for single parents

Hearst Feature Service

The only thing Thomas Jacobs would change about his cookbook is the title. Instead of "Dad Let's Eat! The Single Father's Cookbook," he would make it "The Single Parent's Cookbook," because as many women have ordered it as men.

A couple of years ago, Jacobs, a Phoenix attorney, found himself facing four hungry children in a kitchen that contained some camping utensils and a can of sterno. He took them out for dinner, but resolved to master the kitchen.

By taking notes, encouraging child participation and clipping recipes, he became not a chef, but a parent who could put together a respectable meal. And his kids, Matthew, 12; Alexander, 10; Natalie, 7; and Juliane, 6, enjoyed the "experimental" approach to meals. "They taught me more than I taught them," he says.

The most difficult part was coordinating the meal so each dish was ready at the same time. "Dad's serving rocks again," the kids complained, until he learned to put baked potatoes in the oven before preparing anything else.

Jacobs' book is more than a cookbook — it's a culinary survival guide, with chapters on menus, what to do with leftovers, snacks and "sick-day meals." Here are some of his cooking suggestions:

— Leave fresh fruit and/or peanut butter, cheese, milk, juice, raisins, fresh vegetables or yogurt on the kitchen table or on the lower shelves of the refrigerator and cupboards, so hungry kids coming in from school can help themselves.

— Cut down on sugar, but don't autocratically rule it out. Jacobs admits that shopping with kids is rough. It's hard to say no every time one of them reaches for a sugar-coated cereal or candy. He tries to do a balancing act with some give-and-take about grocery lists.

— Remember the four basic food groups when planning meals, but keep in mind that children's appetites change from month to month.

Meatless menus expand with ethnic cuisines

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

I have never been fond of most health foods, despite the undeniable value of such fare. But recently I changed my mind.

The reason was a new book that contains 1,300 recipes — all without meat. ("American Wholefoods Cuisine," by Nikki and David Goldbeck. New American Library, 1633 Broadway, New York NY 10019. $17.95.)

The few dishes I have tried were surprisingly tasty, and some bordered on the gourmet.

Authors Nikki and David Goldbeck had been living on a diet of meat and anything else they liked. Then, in 1970, they decided to go vegetarian for a week. They liked it so much, they've been on it ever since.

I certainly would not want to go without beefsteak the rest of my life. But a meatless day now and then is a pleasant change.

Meat substitutes like rice cheeseburgers, bean balls and nut steaks turn me off, but there are many tasty offerings, such as this recipe for Pakistani Curry.

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon turmeric
½ teaspoon cumin
1 pound mushrooms, sliced
1½ pounds potatoes, cut into ½-inch cubes
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups fresh green peas
2 medium tomatoes, chopped
4 eggs
¼ cup minced scallion

Heat oil in 15-inch skillet and cook garlic and ginger about 1 minute. Add chili powder, turmeric and cumin and cook 1 minute more. Add mushrooms, potatoes, salt, peas and tomatoes. Cover and cook 25 minutes until potatoes start to soften. Carefully break eggs and place on hot vegetables, keeping yolks intact. Cover and cook until egg whites are set and yolks lightly cooked; about 10 minutes. Sprinkle with scallions and serve. Serves 4.

FRESH PLUM PIE

You may want to serve this a la mode.

1½ cups sugar
⅛ cup cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ground ginger
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon orange juice
Pastry for 2-crust 9-inch pie

Quarter and pit plums — measure 1 quart. In a large saucepan thoroughly stir together sugar, cornstarch, salt and ginger; add plums, butter, orange rind and orange juice. Stirring constantly over medium heat, cook until sugar dissolves and mixture comes to a boil; continue stirring and boiling for 3 minutes. Cool slightly. Line a 9-inch pie plate with half the pastry; form a high edge; add plum filling. Top with remaining pastry cut into strips, making a lattice pattern. Seal edges. Bake on rack below center of a preheated 425-degree oven for 10 minutes; continue baking at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Cool. (Catch spills by placing foil below pie plate as necessary.)

Cherries take cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Food Editor

Twenty-five years ago a recipe for "Clara's Sour Cream Coffee Cake" appeared in Good Housekeeping Magazine. Then it was in the 1963 edition of "Good Housekeeping Cookbook." Its popularity swept the country.

Many other versions of the coffee cake have been published in cookbooks, magazines, newspapers and my columns.

When we came on a sour cream coffee cake variation — this one filled with fresh cherries — we eagerly tried it. It's rich, flavorful and moist.

But a word of warning: because most cooks dislike sifting and few American kitchens have reliable scales, our coffee cake calls for measuring the flour by scooping it up with a 1 cup and a ⅓ cup measure — 2⅓ cups in all are needed. The flour is is leveled off in the cups using a small metal spatula. Thus the batter may differ slightly each time.

FRESH CHERRY SOURCREAM COFFEE CAKE

2⅓ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup soft butter
1¼ cups plus 2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 large eggs
1 cup sour cream
1 cup (⅓ lb.) pitted, halved sweet red cherries
⅓ cup chopped nuts
½ teaspoon cinnamon

In bowl stir together flour, baking powder and soda.

In large bowl of an electric mixer at medium speed, cream butter, 1¼ cups sugar, vanilla and lemon rind. Beat in eggs singly, until blended each time. Add sour cream, beat until blended. Gradually beat in flour mixture until smooth.

Stir together cherries, walnuts, 2 tablespoons sugar and cinnamon.

Turn 1⅓ cups of the batter into greased and floured 9-inch tube pan. Sprinkle with ⅓ cherry mixture. Repeat layers. Spread with remaining batter. Sprinkle with topping.

Bake on rack below center of 350-degree oven until done— 60 minutes. Cool on wire rack 5 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out on rack; cool topside down. Invert on cake plate, serve top side up.

TOPPING: Combine 1 tablespoon sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon.

Chef says cooking should be fun not serious

By VERNE B. PALMER
Copley News Service

Puckish: Full of mischief; impish.

The term could have been coined for Wolfgang Puck if it weren't for the inescapable fact that it's been around a lot longer than he has.

At 33, Puck is one of this country's premiere chefs, the owner of one of Los Angeles' more chic restaurants, the head of his own cooking school, and the author of a cookbook praised from coast to coast.

And he's managed to do it all without taking himself unduly seriously.

NO MARTINET IN starched white here. No towering figure with equally towering ego. No slave to classical cuisine.

He's moved from Maxim's to Ma Maison, from haute cuisine to nouveille and beyond, with a natural freshness and spontaneity that have become a byword.

"Cooking is fun and people shouldn't be too serious about it," he says, settling the lilac and white baseball cap he sports more securely on his head.

"The only way to get people involved in cooking is to make it fun. If you make it so serious, so stuffy, they won't go home and try it, they'll take-out."

Chef's hats are OK for some restaurants, but that's not what Spago (the Sunset Boulevard restaurant he opened some 18 months ago) represents.

It was nouvelle cuisine that freed chefs from the restrictions of classical cuisine, he believes.

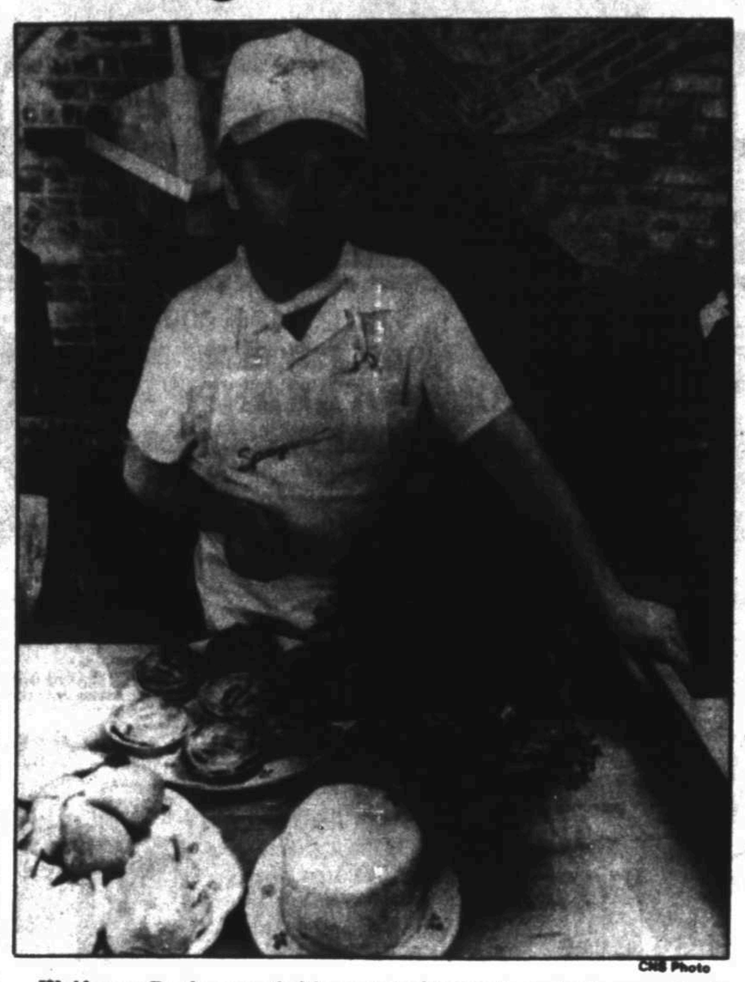

From nouvelle, with its emphasis on fresh foods, light sauces and less of just about everything, it was an easy step to what's been described as "California cuisine," a style of cooking he is helping to pioneer.

IT'S A STYLE of cooking that embraces locally grown fresh foods rather than imported products, light cooking — especially for vegetables and fish, a health-conscious mentality and an openness to a variety of different cooking techniques (Mexican, Oriental, French, etc.).

Puck attributes its success to the heightened public awareness of food and nutrition that emerged with nouvelle cuisine and hasn't peaked yet.

"People are very health-conscious," he says. "They know they don't need 12,000 calories a day and they've developed an appreciation for simple dishes such as sliced fresh tomatoes with olive oil and a little basil."

It's a far cry from the European perception of America as a land of hamburgers and Louisiana gumbo.

CNS Photo

Wolfgang Puck, one of this country's premiere chefs, says 'Cooking is fun and people shouldn't be too serious about it.'

"We don't have an extensive history of cooking here," Puck says, "which really works out quite well. There's more flexibility, more openness to new ideas and techniques."

PIGEON WITH PEARS and Red Wine is taken from his book, "Wolfgang Puck's Modern French Cooking for the American Kitchen."

PIGEON SALMIS AVEC POIRES AU VIN ROUGE (Pigeon with Pears and Red Wine)

⅓ cup sugar
1 tsp. black peppercorns
6 Bosc pears, peeled, halved and cored
6 young pigeons
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
4 medium shallots, minced
1 cup brown veal stock (recipe follows)
⅓ cup unsalted butter, cut into small pieces

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees F.

In a saucepan, combine wine, sugar and peppercorns. Poach the pears in this liquid until tender but still firm. Reserve.

Remove wings and neck from each pigeon and place in a heavy roasting pan. Truss the pigeons with kitchen string.

In a skillet, brown the piegons on all sides. Season to taste with salt and pepper, arrange atop wings and necks in the roasting pan, and roast approximately 25 minutes, or until meat is medium rare. Remove the birds from the pan and keep warm. Discard wings, necks and excess fat from the pan.

ADD THE SHALLOTS to the roasting pan and over moderate heat, saute until lightly browned. Deglaze the pan with ⅓ cup of the wine in which the pears were cooked. Add the stock and reduce until ⅓ cup remains. Strain into a small saucepan and whisk in the butter, one piece at a time. Correct seasonings and keep warm.

Cut each pear half lengthwise into 3 slices. Carve each pigeon into 4 pieces.

Presentation: Nap each plate with sauce. Arrange 6 pear slices and 1 carved pigeon atop the sauce. Pass any remaining sauce in a sauceboat.

Suggested wine: A vintage Cabernet Sauvignon.

Note: Cornish game hens, pheasant, squab or other small game hens may be substituted for the pigeons in this recipe, and peaches, plums or cherries may be substituted for the pears.

A GOOD BROWN stock is essential to a fine sauce. The browning of the bones gives the stock its wonderfully dark color. The following recipe makes ⅛ gallon stock, 1 quart demi-glace, or 1 cup glace.

FOND BRUN DE VEAU (BROWN VEAL STOCK)

10 lbs. veal bones, cut into 2-inch pieces (beef bones may be substituted)
2 onions quartered
2 carrots, chopped
2 stalks celery, chopped
1 leek, chopped
2 tomatoes, quartered
1 bouquet garni
1 gallon water (approximately)

Preheat oven to 450 degrees F.

Arrange the bones in a large roasting pan an brown on all sides, turning as often as necessary. Transfer the bones to a large stockpot. Add the vegetables and bouquet garni. Discard the fat from the roasting pan.

On the stove top, deglaze the pan with 1 cup water, scraping up any particles that stick to the bottom of the pan. Add to the stockpot and pour in enough water to cover by 2 inches.

Bring to a boil. Then reduce heat so that the liquid continues to simmer. Skim foam as it accumulates.

CONTINUE TO SIMMER for at least 6 hours, skimming and degreasing as necessary. Add more water as necessary to keep the bones and vegetables covered at all times.

After 6 hours, strain off the liquid into a clean pot. Degrease and skim if necessary. Reduce over moderate heat until 2 quarts remain.

Cool and store in covered containers, or continue to reduce to 1 quart (demi-glace) or to a syrup (glace).

Death aborts wine career

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

TEMECULA, Calif. — Steve O'Donnell, the wine maker at Callaway Vineyards, died in his sleep at 42 July 29, and his passing takes one of the brightest, most jovial and honest wine makers from the wine industry.

Rarely was there an occasion where Steve wouldn't come up with the perfect quip to set the tone of the affair, and often his humor was self-effacing.

On one occasion, at a barbecue on the grounds of the winery, after many bottles of wine had been served, winery owner Ely Callaway announced that he was going to serve his special Sweet Nancy dessert wine.

People oohed and ahhed, since Sweet Nancy is Callaway's name for a very sweet Chenin Blanc that normally costs about $50 a bottle.

THE WINE WAS served, and as people gurgled at having such precious nectar, O'Donnell leaned over and whispered, "Frankly, I can't drink too much of the stuff. It's so damn sweet!"

On another occasion, I called the winery to get details about a Chardonnay O'Donnell had made. I liked it, and I told him the wine had scored well in a recent tasting done by the California Grapevine newsletter.

"Hey," he said, "I know we make untraditional wines, so when I see comparative tastings, I look at the last-place wine in the group, and if it isn't mine, then I know we weren't in the judging!"

TRUE, CALLAWAY'S WINES had a reputation of being so non-traditional that they rarely scored well in competitive judgings, yet O'Donnell had made strides toward changing that.

His 1982 Fum Blanc, '82 Sauvignon Blanc, '82 Chenin Blanc and soon-to-be released Port, all are better wines than he had produced. And a sparkling wine he made, to be released in 1985, is reportedly excellent.

Five days before he died, O'Donnell hosted friends and members of the media to an unveiling of a new grape-crushing facility and bottling line building, complete with new offices.

It is always a shock to lose someone as young as O'Donnell, but doubly sad when the wine maker was just about ready to hit his stride and gain the recognition he deserved. After 5½ years as an assistant wine maker at Beringer Vineyards, O'Donnell had gained a good reputation inside the industry for his talent.

WHEN, IN May of 1976, he accepted the position of head wine maker at Callaway, in untested Temecula, O'Donnell knew he would be dealing with growing conditions, soil, drainage and other unknown factors. Callaway put in the area's first large plantings of premium wine grapes, and they gave their first full harvests in 1976.

In the next four years, O'Donnell experimented — occasionally against the wishes of Callaway himself — to find the best ways to adapt these unique conditions to the grapes and vice versa, then to magnify the positive elements in the resulting wine and diminish the negative.

By 1981, when the winery was sold to Hiram Walker & Sons Ltd. of Canada, sales were expanding to restaurants — Callaway's original goal — faster than projections. And in 1982, a year in which sales of California wines rose just 2 percent, Callaway's sales increased 35 percent.

"I think we're doing something right," O'Donnell said in his typical understated manner.

"STEVE'S SENSE OF of humor was pervasive," said Ely Callaway the other day. "He was fun-loving, really wacky. But that also made him a great wine educator. He was so good with large groups. He could explain technical details in words anyone could understand."

Origin sweet

Marshmallows are named for the marshmallow plant, whose roots exude a sticky substance like raw egg whites.

Europeans once made sweet treats from the substance.

Mother Nature may know best

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Sometimes Mother Nature knows best. That came home to me again when I tasted some of California's so-called "mediocre" 1979 Cabernet Sauvignons.

Wine buffs know of the excellence of the 1978 Cabernets; they have been trumpeting that fact for quite a while. The wines are big, ripe and intensely flavored. Wine makers also note that '79s, by comparison, are "lean." It was a cool year, the grapes didn't ripen as perfectly as they did in '78, and thus the wines are, well, OK, but nothing to write home about.

"Dear Mom," I am tempted to reply, "The 1979 Cabernets are far better than anyone initially thought."

Three of the best, from a recent tasting of various '79s still available, are the Beringer "State Lane", Stag's Leap Wine Cellars and Sterling.

The Beringer and Sterling have a subtle herbal-spice charm, neither has excessive tannin, and the richness in the mouth is not as obvious as the '78s, but nonetheless attractive. The Stag's Leap is subtler than the others, yet shows perfect Cabernet character.

For those who like drinking their Cabernets a little younger, without having to wait a decade before they "come around," the '79s are good buys, and Mother Nature has imbued many of them with the structure to age well, too.

For those who are prepared to wait, however, the 1980s appear to be even better wines than the '78s.

The surplus of wine in California and Europe is driving prices down to ludicrous lows, and the dropping of prices hasn't slowed. New imports of quality table wines are being seen at $2 to $4.

Barbecue grill not for burgers only

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Americans from coast to coast utilize their charcoal grills all summer for barbecue cookouts. This year, many backyard chefs are acquiring a gourmet touch.

Meat cooked over hot coals or embers goes back to the days of the cave dweller who began grilling the day's game catch after the discovery of fire.

For generations, barbecues in America consisted mainly of grilled hamburgers and hot dogs with an occasional steak or chop. But in recent times keepers of the grill have been preparing complete meals over the embers.

They have found that mushrooms, for instance, can be stuffed with chopped ham and herbs, then grilled. Or crab meat that has been breaded and spiced can be wrapped in bacon and placed over the coals.

Vegetables are tasty with that charcoal touch, but care should be taken to prevent charring.

Filipinos follow Aquino's coffin

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An estimated 1 million chanting Filipinos mourned assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino today as his body was borne on a black-draped flatbed truck to a martyr's grave.

At a funeral Mass, Cardinal Jaime L. Sin praised Aquino's fight against "tyranny and oppression."

Aquino's casket, on a bed of yellow flowers, was taken to Manila Memorial Park, 19 miles from the church where the funeral Mass was said, as darkness fell.

The funeral procession inched past throngs packed up to eight feet deep along the streets. They chanted "Ninoy," Aquino's nickname. The procession climaxed 10 days of mourning since Aquino, the chief political rival of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, was assassinated at Manila airport Aug. 21.

No official crowd estimates were available, but today's huge turnout — achieved despite sporadic thundershowers — was estimated by one police officer at about 1 million people. It easily raised the number of people personally participating in the mourning period to more than 2 million.

There was no violence, but police said one man was killed and six people hospitalized for shock when a lightning bolt struck a tree. The victim was identified as Crisanto Cagui-cia Bobadilla, 47.

AP Laserphoto

Walls of people lead the truck carrying the coffin of Beningno Aquino through the streets of downtown Manila, Philippines, today.

In a Mass at the Santo Domingo church in suburban Quezon City, Sin eulogized Aquino as one who "personified the Filipino courage in the face of oppression."

Sin, the Roman Catholic primate of the Philippines, called on the "national leadership" to "resolutely seek to liberate us from the tyranny and oppression that could fan the flames of violence and division."

Among the 3,000 mourners jammed into the church were members of the diplomatic corps, including U.S. Ambassador Michael A. Armacost, and numerous Aquino political allies — some of whom have charged that the government had a hand in the murder.

Neither the president nor First Lady Imelda Marcos was present and it was not clear if anyone represented Malacanang Palace, the Philippine White House. Spokesmen reached by telephone said they could not answer the question.

Marcos has denied any government complicity in the Aquino slaying, and said in a television appearance Tuesday that it would be "idiotic" for a Filipino politician to engineer such an act.

Monster hunters track 'the big one'

DRUMNADROCHIT, Scotland (AP) — Monster-hunters are out in force on Loch Ness again. So are skeptics, who attribute photographic "proof" of Nessie's existence to tricky lighting and ducks.

"I have been here three weeks and at least 20 people have told me they have seen the Loch Ness monster — and they were drinking tea, not whiskey," said Erik Beckjord, 35, of Seattle, Wash., a wildlife photographer who is convinced that Nessie exists.

Beckjord believes that film showing a white wake and three dark shapes moving away, which he videotaped on Aug. 6 in Urquhart Bay, possibly shows three of the creatures.

But skeptics at Drumnadrochit, the village of 400 people which is the hunters' main base, say the images on the videotapes are ducks and the dark shapes are mistaken impressions caused by tricks of light.

Electrical engineers Rikki Razdan from Boston and Alan M. Kielar from Buffalo, N.Y., both 24, are on the Loch shore with $100,000 worth of electronic scanning gadgetry, linked to a raft filled with sonar out in the bay.

The equipment has recorded fish but nothing like a monster and both men are skeptical.

"We have studied all the books and all the photographs going back 50 years, and all the sonar recordings of strange shapes underwater and we find no scientific evidence for the claim that monsters are here," Kielar said.

London shaken by bomb blasts

LONDON (AP) — Bombers attacked an Israeli-owned bank, the offices of a diamond merchant and a private home in three separate explosions across London during the night, police said today.

Commander Bill Hucklesby, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad, said nobody was hurt in any of the blasts although no warnings had been given.

He said the worst explosion was at the Israeli-owned Leumi bank near Oxford Circus in London's West End. Detonated on the sidewalk outside, the bomb extensively damaged the bank's ground floor and shattered windows in nearby buildings, he said. He estimated about a pound of explosive was used.

The bank blast, which occurred shortly after midnight, was preceded by an explosion about a mile away in the doorway of a diamond merchant's premises at Holborn, Hucklesby said.

It was followed by a bombing outside a private house in Knightsbridge in the West End, where three people, including a 2-year-old boy, escaped injury, he said.

Explosions in Assam reported

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Officials reported two explosions in troubled Assam state in the second day of a civil disobedience protest called by native Assamese against the government's refusal to expel Bengali-speaking Moslem immigrants.

One blast occurred Tuesday at a government transport office in Nowgong, 370 miles northeast of Calcutta, injuring one person, officials said.In Lakhimpur, a bomb exploded in the house of a government official but no one was injured.

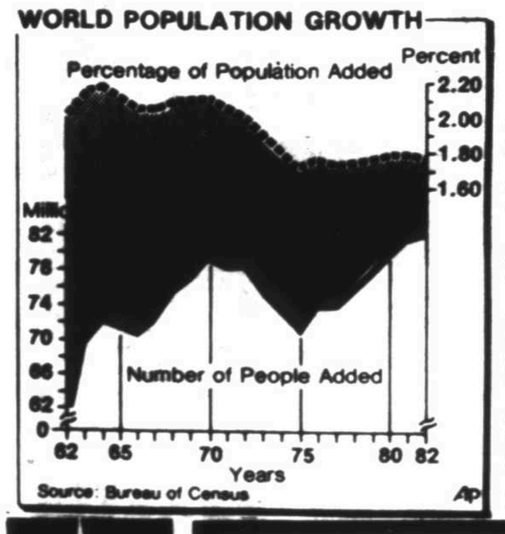

Work in offices and banks was disrupted, vehicles stayed off the roads and many shops closed for the second straight day of protests against Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government.

Burning oil injures firemen

MILFORD HAVEN, Wales (AP) — The walls of a burning oil storage tank at a refinery ruptured early today, spilling tons of blazing fuel into a ditch, and six firemen were injured, a fire brigade spokesman reported.

The spokesman said the firemen received minor burns. He said the rupture reduced the level of crude oil in the tank and eased the job of fighting the fire at the Amoco refinery on the Welsh coastline.

Population grows by 225,000 daily

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enough people are being added to the world every day to populate a city slightly bigger than Richmond, Va., a new Census Bureau report discloses.

The Earth's population experienced record growth during the 12 months ended June 30, the report estimates, reaching a total of 4,721,887,000.

That means 82,077,000 people were added during the year, just under 225,000 every day. By comparison, Richmond has about 219,000 residents.

The population growth follows diminishing success of birth control efforts in many areas and improvements in health care, which have reduced the death rates in the past few decades, observed Jean Van Der Tak of the Population Reference Bureau.

The lower death rate among young people has an added effect, since it also provides a larger pool of women in child-bearing ages, and consequently more births, Mrs. Van Der Tak noted.

Sam Baum of the Census Bureau's Center for International Research noted that worldwide population growth rates peaked in 1964-65, at 2.2 percent.

This growth declined to about 1.8 percent by the mid-1970s and has remained at about that level, said Baum.

But because that same percentage applies to a growing base population each year, the actual number of people added grows annually, he explained.

The world population increase in real numbers had peaked at more than 79 million in the year ending June 30, 1971, and then declined following the dropoff in the growth rate. But the leveling off of the rate allowed the total to begin rising again. It climbed back to the 1971 level in 1981, grew by 81,592,000 last year, and topped that this year.

"And it will get larger each year unless the growth rate starts down again," Baum observed.

Mrs. Van Der Tak added that better censuses have found that declines in growth reported earlier in China and Indonesia weren't as large as had been thought, and there has been little improvement in India's efforts to limit births in recent years.

Alicia expected to cost $1 billion

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Illinois-based State Farm Insurance Co. said Tuesday that preliminary damage claims from Hurricane Alicia indicate the total insurance industry loss will probably run between $1 billion and $1.4 billion.

Company spokesman David Hurst said State Farm Fire and Casualty of Bloomington is the biggest property insurer in Texas.

State Farm says it expects 90,000 property damage claims from the nine county area of Galveston and Houston.

Inmate drowns in stock pond

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Authorities are investigating the death of a Texas Department of Corrections inmate who drowned in a stock pond at the TDC Wynne Unit.

Willie Lee Steward, 23, of Houston, died Friday, said TDC spokesman Charlie Brown. Steward had been serving a 25-year sentence for convictions of robbery and aggravated robbery in Tarrant County, Brown said.

Walker County Chief Deputy Sheriff Ted Pearce said Steward was taking part in a dog-training exercise when he jumped into the pond and started to cross it on a tire tube. The inmate developed cramps, fell off and drowned, Pearce said.

Program to inventory resources

AUSTIN (AP) — Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Tuesday the state will join in a Natural Heritage Program to inventory the state biological resources.

Mauro told a news conference the General Land Office would cooperate with The Nature Conservancy for a study that will compile the state's valuable plant, aquatic and animal species and the outstanding geological formations in one centralized program.

The program, the cost of which will be divided between the General Land office and the Texas Nature Conservancy, will compile data from existing information systems and then will incorporate new data.

Judge dismisses murder charge

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed for lack of evidence a murder charge against a Memphis State University teacher who had been accused of the stabbing death of a woman killed on the Padre Island National Seashore.

U.S. District Judge Hayden W. Head granted a defense motion to dismiss the charge against Timothy John Albers, 26, who has been free on $100,000 and has continued to teach.

Albers was indicted in February for the murder of Gundi Martha Ressin, a German native and also a Memphis State teacher, who was stabbed to death Aug. 10, 1982, while vacationing with Albers on Padre Island.

Southland Corp. buys oil company

DALLAS (AP) — Shareholders of the Southland Corp., which owns the 7-Eleven chain of convenience stores, have approved the company's acquisition of CITGO Petroleum Corp. from Occidental Petroleum Corp., Southland officials said Tuesday.

CITGO is an oil refining, marketing and transportation subsidiary of Cities Service Co. Southland owns 7,300 7-Eleven stores in the U.S. and Canada, as well as the Chief Auto Parts chain, the Dairies Group, and food processing and distribution centers.

Southland officials have said the acquisition of CITGO will aid the company's expansion into gasoline sales by its 7-Eleven stores.

First Miss Teen USA crowned

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — A dark-haired, dark-eyed Miss New York Teen became the first Miss Teen USA, beating out four entrants from the South.

Ruth Zakarian of Amsterdam, N.Y., was speechless as she stood in a flood of television lights after she won the crown Tuesday.

Miss Zakarian, 17, said she hadn't decided yet what to do with the estimated $100,000 in prizes and money she won.

The first runner-up in the pageant was Miss Virginia Teen, Tina Marrocco of McLean, Va. Third was Miss Kentucky Teen, Krista Keith, fourth was Miss Georgia Teen, Kelly Jeries, and fifth was Miss Texas Teen, Sheri Scholz.

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Pia Lindstrom, daughter of the late actress Ingrid Bergman, surprised the audience at a tribute to Miss Bergman with some previously unseen film clips from 1916 showing her mother as a baby.

At age 3, the actress was seen already hamming for the camera, watering plants in a family garden and pushing a wheelbarrow at her home. The family film clips, shot by Ingrid's father Justus Bergman, became part of a moving ceremony attended by such a large number of big name personalities that it rivaled the Academy Awards.

Olivia de Havilland, who met Miss Bergman while filming "Gone With The Wind," Claudette Colbert, Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston and Walter Matthau flew from Hollywood for the event. Also in the audience at the Venice Theater Tuesday night were Liza Minnelli, Roger Moore, Dudley Moore and Maximilian Schell.

Miss Lindstrom, 44, Miss Bergman's daughter from her first marriage, is a television film critic in New York.

Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and ABC-TV news correspondent Barbara Walters have something in common, according to Harper's Bazaar — a lot of pull.

They and seven others have been chosen by the magazine's editors as the country's 10 most influential women.

The editors said they regard Mrs. Reagan as influential because of her strong support of the foster grandparents program and for her role in the battle against drug and alcohol abuse.

Mrs. Onassis "has been part of the public consciousness for nearly a quarter century," the magazine noted.

Ms. Walters was selected for expertise in interviewing celebrities and asking the "very question" the public wants an answer to.

The other seven, named in the magazine's September issue, are:

Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor; civil rights leader Coretta Scott King; Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole; former opera singer and general director of the New York City Opera Beverly Sills; San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein; feminist Gloria Steinem and U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Jeane J. Kirkpatrick.

Brinkley

NEW YORK (AP) — Supermodel Christie Brinkley, who has graced several of Sports Illustrated's famous swimsuit issues, has signed up to put her name on a line of swimswear and sportswear.

Miss Brinkley "exemplifies the active...yet casual lifestyle of today's woman," said Harvey Rosenzweig of Russ Togs, Inc., as the company announced Tuesday that the lithe, blonde-haired model will be featured in advertising for a Christie Brinkley Division.

Miss Brinkley also will "provide input concerning the taste level and type of clothing to be produced," Rosenzweig said. He said the sportswear will be unveiled early next year.

Financial terms of the contract were not disclosed.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Doctors have advised U.S. Sen. Jeremiah Denton to rest a week following minor surgery for removal of a swollen lymph node, described as "entirely free from any malignancy."

A congratulatory kiss for the first Miss Teen USA, Ruth Zakarian of Amsterdam, N.Y., is bestowed by Miss USA Julie Hayek.

After the operation Tuesday at Pensacola Naval Air Station hospital, doctors declared the Alabama Republican to be in excellent health.

Denton returned to his home in Mobile following the surgery.

Doctors had decided to remove the lymph node from Denton's left armpit to examine it for signs of cancer.

During the senator's 1980 Senate campaign, he underwent surgery for removal of a melanoma, a form of skin cancer, from his chest. The malignancy was removed and doctors said there was no trace of cancer after the surgery.

CATHEDRAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Simon Oakland, a character actor who appeared in dozens of plays, films and television shows, has died at age 61. Oakland, who died Monday, appeared as the psychiatrist in Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho," and the 1977 Pulitzer Prize-winning Broadway play, "The Shadow Box."

VALENCIA, Calif. (AP) — A jammed accelerator sent an offroad stunt vehicle crashing into a camera crew and others filming ABC-TV's "The Fall Guy," injuring nine men, three seriously, authorities said.

The accident occurred Tuesday at Indian Dunes, 30 miles north of Los Angeles, near the site where actor Vic Morrow and two children were killed in a July 1982 helicopter crash while filming the movie version of the "Twilight Zone."

Lee Majors, who stars as a movie stuntman-bounty hunter in "The Fall Guy" series, was not involved in the accident, said 20th Century-Fox spokesman Chuck Panama.

Majors, along with co-stars Doug Barr, Heather Thomas and Markie Post, was working at 20th Century-Fox studios in West Los Angeles, 50 miles from the scene, Panama said.

CAMAIORE, Italy (AP) — Film producer Michael Wayne says his father "would have been proud to be placed on this horse," part of a 21-foot sculpture of a cowboy and horse dedicated to the memory of American western hero John Wayne.

The work of American sculptor Harry Jackson, depicting Wayne in cowboy gear and riding a horse, was unveiled in this Tuscan village Tuesday at a ceremony attended by U.S. Ambassador to Italy Maxwell Rabb and Mayor of Camaiore Fabio Pezzini.

"It's a wonderful tribute to my father," said the late movie actor's 48-year-old eldest son. "He would have been proud to be placed on this horse."

The statue, to be cast in bronze for display in a Beverly Hills, Calif., plaza in July 1984, was commissioned by Anthony C. La Scala, executive vice president of Great Western Finance Corp. of Beverly Hills. Wayne did television commercials for the corporation during the three years before his death in 1979.

What is September 3, 1783? America's 'birthday,' that's all

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

With a few scrawls of a quill pen, 13 disparate, raw and rowdy former colonies became free and independent states and a shaky new nation.

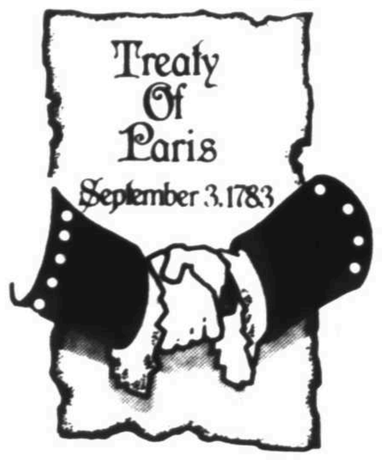

July 4?

No, it was September 3, 1783.

Where are the brass bands, the flowing colors, the speeches, parades, picnics and fireworks? The bicentennial of America's final freedom is upon us, and who's to celebrate? Whoever thinks of Sept. 3?

It was on that date in 1783, 200 years ago Saturday, that the long American Revolution that had become a world war came to an end, and the world formally acknowledged what Thomas Jefferson and the Continental Congress had claimed years earlier, American independence.

The Treaty of Paris of 1783, signed on that day, remains the most remarkable diplomatic accomplishment in this country's history. Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and John Jay secured at the conference table what George Washington had won in the field.

Even the victory at Yorktown had not done much to relieve the anxiety of statesmen or soldiers. Cornwallis had been taken, along with 8,000 men, thousands of arms and two dozen ships. But the British held fast to New York, Charleston and Savannah. For two years, Washington sat and watched and worried over a war that was over but wouldn't end.

By early 1783, two years after the Yorktown campaign, the Army was so underfed, underpaid and unappreciated that a military coup almost undid freedom. An anonymous address circulated in the American camp at Newburgh, N.Y., damning mistreatment of the Army by Congress and calling a meeting where protest, and perhaps mutiny, might be formed.

On March 11, one of the most critical but least remembered dates in the country's annals, Washington called a meeting of his own. He had written a speech but managed only a few words before pausing and groping for a pair of spectacles.

Maj. Samuel Shaw described the scene as Washington "begged the indulgencce of his audience while he put them on, observing at the same time that he had grown gray in their service, and now found himself growing blind."

"There was something so natural, so unaffected, in his appeal, as rendered it superior to the most studied oratory," Shaw wrote. "It forces its way to the heart, and you might see sensibility moisten every eye."

As Washington withdrew, the disgruntled officers adopted resolutions affirming their allegience and pledging new patience with Congress. The revolution was saved. There would be no slide into anarchy, no reign of terror, no vulnerable country open to reconquest.

Except for frontier skirmishes with the Indians, the fighting was over in America. But it raged on elsewhere, and the British took heart from new victories.

The French court strove to discourage reconciliation among the feuding but blood-bound English-speaking peoples. France maneuvered for a mediated truce, a status quo that would have left Britain in control of large chunks of America.

Wiley John Adams scotched this ploy by letting it be known he would accept mediation so long as the Americans participated as independent and equal parties. He guessed rightly that the potential mediators, Austria and Russia, would not sponsor anything that allowed rebellious democrats to sit as equals with the monarchies of Europe.

Although they had been instructed by Congress to act only on with the advice and consent of the French court, the Americans in Paris began separate talks with the British. Disposing of the American problem, both suspected, would make it easier for England to come to terms with her other adversaries.

On Nov. 5 a set of articles was agreed to by the U.S. and British commissioners, and the French foreign minister, Charles Gravier, Comte de Vergennes, was outraged.

"I am at a loss, sir, to explain your conduct," the minister who had provided millions in loans, cash and arms for the American cause sulked to Franklin when he learned the Americans had negotiated their own peace behind his back.

But Franklin's guile and diplomacy saved the day again. He assured Vergennes that nothing had been agreed to that was contrary to the interests of France. Then the American sage wrote a brazen warning, couched in the most friendly terms, that Vergennes could not quite believe or ignore.

"The English, I just now learn, flatter themselves they have already divided us," Franklin wrote. "I hope this little misunderstanding will therefore be kept a secret, and that they will find themselves totally mistaken."

Franklin won on all counts. The English did believe they had driven a wedge into France's global alliances. France feared they might. Vergennes decided to live with the American coup rather than make a public fuss.

Privately, Vergennes was amazed that Americans with no power, no world standing, a ragtag army and no navy, bankrupt and threadbare, had swept all the chips from the table while the big players stared at each other over their cards.

"Their concessions exceed all that I could have thought possible," Vergennes said of the English settlement.

The American peace could not become official until the general peace was concluded. Britain signed preliminary articles with France and Spain on Jan. 20, 1783, and hostilities ended Feb. 4.

Congress ratified the provisional treaty April 15. The final treaty was signed in Paris on Sept. 3 and was ratified by Congress on Jan. 14, 1784. On May 12, ratifications were exchanged to complete the long peace process.

The nine articles of the final settlement made remarkable concessions to the Americans. The first was the most important, proclaiming that "His Britanic majesty acknowledges the said United States ... to be free sovereign & independent States."

The treaty also established boundaries for the new country running along the St. Croix River between Maine and Nova Scotia, the St. Lawrence-Atlantic watershed, the 45th parallel, a line through the Great Lakes westward to the Mississippi River, down the Mississippi to the 31st parallel, where it turned eastward following the line across west Florida to the Apalachicola and St. Marys rivers to the Atlantic.

This was a vast empire, bigger and potentially as rich as any held by the ancient powers of the Old World.

John Adams also won for his New Englanders the right to fish off Newfoundland, and Britain gave up its demands for restitution to American loyalists persecuted in the war. Congress agreed only to "earnestly recommend" that the states restore their rights and property — something Congress was powerless to enforce and the states unwilling to do. This provided Britain an excuse to hold onto posts in the Northwest Territory and keep the frontier inflamed for another decade.

Psychologists discuss wide range of topics

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Diets, AIDS and computers were this year's hot topics as 9,000 members of the American Psychological Association invaded Walt Disney's home turf.

All told, there were 1,200 hours of overlapping speeches and programs during the convention, which ended Tuesday.

One listing in the inch-thick guide offered a presentation called "How to Survive the Convention."

Protesters demonstrated during the five-day conference over the appearance of such figures as education psychologist Arthur Jensen, who believes whites genetically are more intelligent than blacks, and Edward Taub, a laboratory researcher charged with cruelty to animals.

Most of the work presented inside the convention center a few blocks from Disneyland was less controversial, however, including a speech entitled "Mickey Mouse: A Brief Psychohistory."

Then there was "Kleptoparasitism: An Alternative Foraging Strategy in American Widgeons." Translation: how some ducks snatch food from other birds.

Some association members sought to unwind in bars such as the one at the Anaheim Marriot, where cocktail server Karen Letter found the conventioneers ... unconventional.

"I don't find a lot of sense with this group," she said. "They're always asking, 'Is it OK if I sit here?' You know, things that I would do automatically."

Ms. Letter and bartender John Aspiridy said psychologists drink less than dentists, auto workers, gynecologists and emergency room nurses. And they "always ask for separate checks," she said.

"They analyze every dime they spend," Aspiridy said.

Most of the association's 58,000 members did not attend. One was Ray Novaco of the nearby Irvine campus of the University of California, who decided to boycott the get-together when it was moved from Chicago in protest over Illinois' failure to adopt the Equal Rights Amendment.

That sort of reasoning is psychologically unsound, he said.

"There's nothing in what we know about psychological change that leads you to believe that this kind of action will change people's attitudes," Novaco said. "If anything, it makes them more entrenched."

Association spokesman Donald Kent noted that this convention focused more on topics related to physical health than in previous years.

There were programs on how diet affects emotions and work performance, why youngsters start smoking, new ways to quit and how a mother's emotional state affects the outcome of pregnancy.

Other new issues on the agenda were whether microwaves are harmful to health; the psychological impact of acquired immune deficiency syndrome on victims, family and friends, and how diminished work opportunities affect young adults in the United States.

Among the many computer exhibits was a machine that interrogates patients.

"Clients feel more comfortable answering questions with a computer," said Dieter Scherer of Psych Systems Inc. of Baltimore.

Convention even puts sense of humor to test

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — People who like nonsense jokes are likely to be jolly souls willing to find humor in anything, while those who like satire may be imaginative but tyrannical, psychologists say.

A research team is developing a sense-of-humor test as a key to personality, says Dr. Harvey Mindess of Antioch University in the Venice area of Los Angeles.

In the test, which is still being refined, respondents are asked to rate the humor of various jokes and cartoons, he said Tuesday.

"The sense-of-humor test is something new. We're trying to produce something that's analagous to an IQ test (a measure of intelligence). From that we feel we can also make inferences about your personality," Mindess said.

He said the test, which he and his associates presented at this week's American Psychological Association Convention in Anaheim, has been administered to 250 people. The group was also given a traditional personality test that is widely accepted in the psychological community.

Their responses to the humor test were correlated with their personality types as categorized on the traditional test.

"There turns out to be certain patterns," he said, such as the finding that people who have an overall low appreciation of humor tend to be anxious, worrying, moody and apprehensive.

Results may seem contradictory in some categories. Those who like social satire — jokes like "military intelligence is a contradiction in terms" — tend to be "jealous, dogmatic, tyrannical and irritable," Antioch researcher Amanda Bender said, and they may also be "imaginative" and "absorbed in ideas and theories."

Nonsense jokes — "A stepped-on grape says nothing, it just gives a little whine" — appeal to people who are "self-assured," or "untroubled, placid, cheerful and resilient," Miss Bender says.

Respondents are asked to react to 40 jokes in 10 categories, including: sexual, nonsense, philosophical, satircal, ethnic, hostile, scatalogical, sick and degrading to men or women.

Video phone conferences 'coming of age'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than half a century after the president of AT&T and then-Commerce Secretary Herbert Hoover made the first public test of a telephone with pictures, the video conference has come of age, officials say.

One of the most enthusiastic boosters is ARCO, the Los Angeles-based oil company, which today unveils a $17 million, seven-city network that officials hope will pay for itself in savings from the corporate travel budget.

But ARCO isn't alone in trying to tap into video conferences.

AT&T Communications in New York currently offers its year-old PicturePhone service in 13 cities in the United States and intends to expand to 42 cities by the end of next year, John Zellweger, manager of its video conference division, said Tuesday. The system beams pictures onto 25-inch monitors.

Holidays Inns, based in Memphis, Tenn., owns part of a satellite and 252 earth stations .
