Wearing civilian clothes, a Moslem leftist militiaman runs to take position in the Fakhani port area of West Beirut Wednesday as he and many like him begin firing on advancing Israeli troops.

Street fights again tear through Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Under cover of mock jet raids, Israeli tanks and troops battled leftist militiamen for control of west Beirut today, and by midafternoon the streets quieted when the leftists announced they had agreed to stop fighting.

Israel announced it controlled "all key points" in west Beirut and Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan called for urgent U.S. help to end what he called Israel's conquest of the war-shattered city.

The Israelis began their push into former PLO strongholds of west Beirut early Wednesday, hours after the assassination of President-elect Bashir Gemayel. They said they launched the drive to keep leftist militiamen from teaming up with Palestinian guerrillas still in the city and launching a new wave of bloodshed.

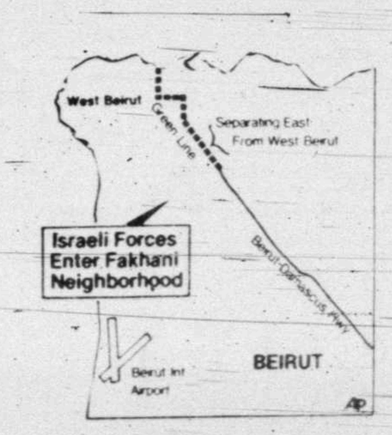
They met resistance from leftists firing automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades, but the Tel Aviv command said today that its forces had fought their way past the leftists and guerrillas, whom they termed "terrorists," and controlled "all key points."

The communique called on "citizens to return to normal activities and on all terrorists and other armed persons to lay down their arms. All refugee camps in which terrorists were concentrated remain surrounded and closed."

The radio station of the Mourabitoun, the largest militia of Lebanese Moslem leftists, announced in midafternoon that the "common forces" of leftist fighters had agreed not to confront the Israelis. The station of Gemayel's rightist Phalange Party also reported an agreement by the leftists not to fight.

The reports said representatives of the Mourabitoun and the Communist and Socialist Parties walked out of a meeting at which Israeli officers had "demanded" an end to the resistance. But the reports added that the leftists then met among themselves and agreed to stop fighting.

Lebanon state radio said Israeli forces had seized control of all strategic areas along the five-mile stretch of beaches surrounding west Beirut before closing in on the two shopping districts of Hamra and Corniche Mazraa.



Israeli military sources said their troops were instructed to fire only if fired upon. Israel army radio earlier reported the Israelis had ceased firing, but the Tel Aviv command denied a unilateral truce had gone into effect.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin summoned an emergency Cabinet meeting today to discuss the west Beirut situation, and officials in Tel Aviv said it was unlikely the troops would pull out until the danger of renewed civil war eased.

The officials, who requested anonymity, denied Wazzan's assertions that Israel moved into west Beirut in violation of the U.S.-negotiated agreement under which most Palestinian guerrillas evacuated several weeks ago.

They said the agreement made no mention of Israeli deployment in west Beirut.

Eliahu Ben-Elissar, chairman of the Israeli Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Security Committee and a close associate of Begin, told Israel radio that Israeli forces moved into west Beirut because once Gemayel was gone, the Lebanese army lacked the leadership to maintain control of the sector.

"We had to fill this vacuum," Ben-Elissar said. "Otherwise, different movements could have been created, thus resulting in a very dangerous situation. It is in order to prevent possible disorder that we had to do what we did."

Wazzan issued his appealed for urgent U.S. intervention from his office in west Beirut.

"The United States has a great responsibility," Wazzan said in a statement broadcast by state-radio. "We are waiting, and the whole world is waiting, for the American action. We shall not sell out our Lebanese sovereignty."

Wazzan claimed Israel used the Gemayel assassination as an excuse to invade west Beirut despite what he called U.S. guarantees to shield the city from an Israeli onslaught.

Hospitals said seven Lebanese were killed and 53 wounded in Wednesday's action, when Israeli forces pushed 2.5 miles into the predominantly Moslem sector of the capital, where thousands of Moslem leftist militiamen and Palestinian fighters remain entrenched. Israel said two soldiers were killed and 42 injured in the operation.

"This step has been taken to prevent any renewed organization between the terrorists and the leftist militias," the Tel Aviv command said.

"Terrorists" is the term Israel uses for Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas. Although 8,000 PLO fighters departed west Beirut three weeks ago for eight Arab nations under a U.S.-sponsored evacuation plan, Lebanese newspapers and Israeli military sources say 2,000 guerrillas remain.

Twelve miles east of Beirut, in Gemayel's hometown of Bikfaya, weeping relatives and Christian militiamen on Wednesday buried their 34-year-old leader, killed in a bomb blast at his Phalange Party headquarters in Christian east Beirut. At least 26 senior aides also died in the huge blast. No one claimed responsibility for the bombing.

"You have spent your life working for Lebanon, believing in God and Lebanon," President Elias Sarkis said in a eulogy before thousands of mourners. The crowd included Moslem and Christian Lebanese officials and U.S. special envoy Morris Draper, who flew in from Jerusalem to attend.

Marcos greetings seem 'orchestrated'

By LAURENCE McQUILLAN

WASHINGTON — The red, white and blue banners were all the same size and shape, as were the placards welcoming Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos to Washington.

They all had the ring of bureaucratic workmanship rather than the passion of the people. "Welcome, Beloved President Ferdinand E. Marcos," read one, and "President Marcos, Hope of Filipine Youth" proclaimed another.

Many of the same signs, and many of the same people are following Marcos around Washington to project an image of popularity — a task officials of the nation of 7,000 islands are not leaving to chance.

A crowd of about 1,300 was on hand roughly 90 minutes before Marcos and his wife, Imelda, arrived Wednesday in a White House helicopter near the Reflecting Pool, which stretches out between the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial.

They all had Filipino blood in them, and a history of support for the Marcos regime. That's why they were brought to the site in one of 15 buses chartered by the embassy.

"Look for your delegations," reminded a middle-aged man with a bullhorn. "Be where you are supposed to be."

Placards attached to long poles were tied to a temporary fence put up to limit the crowd. On one side they hailed the visitor, and on the other they told the crowd where to stand.

"NY Delegation," "Virginia Delegation," and so on.

There were numerous instructions over the battery-powered bullhorn.

"Remember, please proceed from here to the Shoreham Hotel" after the arrival, the crowd was told.

Marcos is staying at the elegant Washington Hotel, only a few blocks from the White House. The Blair House, the traditional quarters for foreign dignitaries, has been closed temporarily for repairs.

Don't forget the T-shirts," reminded the bullhorn voice. "For those of you who did not get T-shirts, there are plenty. For the next few days you will have many chances to greet President Marcos and Mrs. Marcos."

Large brown cardboard boxes — all addressed to "The Ambassador, Embassy of the Philippines" — were brought out onto the field behind the crowd.

Inside were white T-shirts proclaiming in red letters "Ako Ay Pilipino," which in the dialect of Tagalog means "I am a Filipino."

Despite the rather vocal complaints over the visit by dissident groups, only a handful of protestors showed up, carrying banners made from six bedsheets. They stood quitely in the distance near a path populated by joggers.

No chances were taken, however. Filipino security agents mingled with the crowd, constantly smiling and constantly scanning.

There were also freelance Americans, towering incredible hulks whose muscles had muscles. They didn't smile. They just stared at the crowd with the warmth of bouncers in a rough bar on a busy night.

"Have you been hired for the entire visit," a reporter politely asked one of them.

"I don't have to answer your questions," replied a vocal box that sounded as strong as the rest of the body.

The reporter agreed and walked away, grateful for the opportunity to leave.

Again the bullhorn came to life, and the crowd cheered and waved the small paper flags distributed courtesy of the embassy.

Then Marcos arrived, stood and waved broadly to the various television crews and still cameras, and entered a limo for his hotel.

The crowd began moving swiftly, toward the buses that took them to the hotel for another show of support.

Philippine president arrives in U.S. for rare official visit

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, accompanied by a dozen of his Cabinet members and close advisers, arrived in Washington Wednesday for a state visit to the United States designed by both governments to demonstrate broad public approval for the longstanding U.S.-Philippines relationship.

Security was tight on the Washington Monument grounds as Marcos and his wife, Imelda, arrived in separate presidential helicopters to be greeted by Secretary of State and Mrs. George P. Shultz.

Several hundred flag-waving members of the Filipino-American community, along with a band, welcomed Marcos as he stepped from the helicopter. Drowned out in the noise were the shouts of a dozen protesters who had been relegated to a small knoll behind a screen of trees, where Marcos was unlikely to have seen them.

Both the welcome and the protest demonstration were temperate in contrast to expectations raised by the elaborate preparations of the Philippine Embassy.

It is Marcos' first visit to the United States in 16 years, since the first year of his presidency in 1966. His country has been a staunch supporter of the United States throughout his rule, but relations between the two governments became tense during the Carter administration with its emphasis on human rights.

Westmoreland blasts nuclear arms freeze

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Maintaining an adamant stance on issues ranging from the draft, women in the military and a freeze on nuclear proliferation to the public's and the media's ever-changing view of the military, retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland addressed questions from Odessa College students and the media during a visit to the OC campus Wednesday.

Westmoreland addressed the public on "Taking Stock in America's Security in a Rapidly Changing World" Tuesday night.

A nuclear freeze, urged by several citizen groups across the nation, only would serve to weaken the U.S. military and strengthen that of the Soviet Union, he said.

"It's hard for me to rationalize how the people came to this choice," the retired four-star U.S. Army general told students in reference to increasing U.S. public support of a freeze. "I view it as a very serious development.

"IT SEEMS TO me to be an emotional reaction," he continued. "I think other considerations will be brought in and people will pause-

Parks funding takes 'gifted' approach

EDITOR'S NOTE: As Midland has grown, its parks system has not. As a result, the city's Parks and Recreation Department has been trying to recoup after years of being low on the list of city priorities. This is the third of a four-part series on the issue.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Instead of standing in line for its yearly handout from the budget, the Parks and Recreation Department over the past four years has changed its philosophy of using only city money to embrace the idea of an "open arms attitude."

Picking up on a philosophy that President John F. Kennedy promoted back in 1960, the city of Midland now is asking what the citizens can do to help the parks and recreation system.

MIDLAND
parks & planning

And to further the city's "open arms attitude," the department head is planning ways to market its needs to the public in hopes of getting more of the private sector involved. As the years have passed, the involvement appears to have increased.

"We can't afford to sit back" and wait on money from the budget, said Director Wayne Kohout. To begin with, "we use the Parks Commission to expose our needs to the council. The council listens better to them. There's a tendency of the council to think we're empire building."

Mayor G. Thane Akins agreed that the council uses the Parks Commission as a sounding board. "We need their input to help us make decisions. We often don't do as much as they want us to do; they can't see the overall budget requests."

BEFORE KOHOUT BECAME department director in 1977, he said, the city staff wouldn't even consider taking monetary gifts for specific projects. "It was like looking a gift horse in the mouth."

But when Kohout took over the reins, he asked City Manager James Brown for permission to initiate a program of soliciting funds from the community for projects which the council wouldn't fund.

"He said for me to take a soft-sell approach, that the commission could do the hard-sell," Kohout recalled.

Since then, Kohout has been taking his needs to the public by speaking to various organizations. "I suggest major projects that could be undertaken by groups."

Occasionally, an item catches someone's attention and the city winds up with another project completed with

Appraisal district discusses delinquent taxes

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Appraisal District renewed its efforts to collect delinquent taxes, passed a resolution on not accepting "part payments" of taxes due to the complications in bookkeeping, and is awaiting preferences on accepting half-payment of taxes from its taxing entities.

In its regular meeting Wednesday, the board went into executive session to discuss possible candidates for the $50,000 a year chief appraiser's job and then recessed the session until 9 a.m. Wednesday in the Board Room at Dellwood Mall. Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr., 52, last month submitted his resignation to be effective by the end of the year.

The board noted that approximately $400,000 in delinquent taxes fall beyond the statute of limitations — 20 years on real estate and four years on personal property — and may not be collected. Of that total, about 95 percent represents personal property, such as cars, inventory, stocks and jewelry.

"THE PERSONAL property is gone," Board Chairman Gil Tompson said of many cases. "And you're never going to collect that. You're fooling yourself if you think you can collect that," he said in citing a hypothetical example of a Midland County automobile transported to California.

Jones said that approximately "250 pieces of land" fall under the delinquency heading on the pre-1962 tax rolls.

"Statute of limitations is an affirmative defense" against paying taxes on property, said Jimmie Oglesby, the board's counsel.

"You're right," agreed Joe Nuessle, board secretary who is the city of Midland's city attorney. "It is an affirmative defense."

"You can make a career out of some of those doggone suits and end up dry," Nuessle said.

ALL TOLD, about $1.3 million is on the delinquent tax rolls for the city of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland College and Midland County Hospital District.

"We have a full-time go-after-it man (Oglesby) to take care of that (delinquent taxes)," Tompson said.

Tompson noted that the district needs "to keep a top-notch record" to be "responsive" to the needs of the taxing entities.

Auditor John Marsh of Main & Hurdman, certified public accountants, noted that the issue of old delinquent taxes "as far as I'm concerned is water under the bridge."

But Tompson said the delinquent taxes are not to be ignored.

"If we can collect it, go after it," said Marsh.

Board member Charlie Welch said he wants "the real thing. I want the hospital to know what they might expect."

Tompson said he doesn't want the conscientious taxpayers to be "carrying a bunch of deadbeats. We want to move in and collect those taxes."

TOMPSON NOTED that the district's aim is to collect delinquent taxes from petty amounts to larger sums.

"We didn't want a skim-the-cream operation," he said.

Unless he waives his fees in special instances, Oglesby collects a statutory 15 percent fee — a surcharge — on collected delinquent taxes.

"We don't want to just pick the big boys and leave the little ones," Tompson said.

The board deferred action on half-payment of taxes; half-payment is an option allowed by law but must be approved by the majority of the four taxing entities for which the chief appraiser and staff collects taxes, which exceed $30 million. Taxes for the Midland County and the Greenwood Independent School District are handled by Midland County Tax Asssessor-Collector Frances Shuffield.

"We've been doing this forever," Nuessle said of the city's old policy on taking half-payment of taxes. "A lot of people take advantage of it."

If adopted by the district, a half-payment policy would call for half of the taxes due to be paid by Nov. 30. The balance would not have to be paid until the following June 30. As a rule, taxes are due each Oct. 1 and become delinquent Feb. 1. Under a half-payment plan, the balance due would be exempted from the Feb. 1 delinquency date and would not incur penalty and interest if paid by June 30.

Otherwise, the penalty and interest on delinquent taxes ranges from 7 percent in the first month of delinquency to 20 precent within eight months of delinquency and after that soars to 120 percent on taxes on the roll for 20 years to almost 270 percent for taxes on the rolls dating to 1939.

TOMPSON SAID taxpayers would fare better if they would go to the bank and get a better deal. On top of the penalty and interest is the 15 percent surcharge. The prime interest rates at the banks are about 13½ percent.

"Half payment is a statutory procedure that they (taxing entities) vote on," said Oglesby.

Nuessle, who said he would recommend the option, added that unless the district gets a three-quarters vote for the half-payment plan, "we can't extend it to anybody."

The board was not as receptive to piecemeal payment of taxes. "It's more trouble that it's worth," said Tompson of the bookkeeping work entailed in recording "part payments" and then routing revenue to the taxing entities.

The board's resolution not to accept part payment on taxes says:

—"The chief appraiser shall not be required to accept any payment tendered to him which is inadequate in amount to completely clear a single years' taxes plus penalties or interest required to be collected thereon by law.

—"The chief appraiser is encouraged to work with any taxpayer who owes multiple years of back taxes and is financially unable to pay same in a single payment; and the chief appraiser may, in such instances, allow such taxpayer to pay such tax bill over a period of time in installments so long as each installment corresponds in amount to the tax, penalties and interest needed to clear a single year's taxes at the time of such payment;

—"The above and foregoing policy is not intended to affect in any way the subject of split or half-payments as authorized by the Tax Code; such subject being expressly reserved for separate action by the Tax jurisdictions represented by this district."

"It's going to disappoint a lot of taxpayers," said Welch of the resolution.

The board noted that piecemeal payment of taxes mostly comes from people living in the poorer sections of the city.

Pat Estes, a hospital director who monitored the five-member appraisal board, told the board that "you have to respect those people" for their willingness to pay their taxes.

"Yeah," said Jones. "They're making an effort."

Big Spring man held in robbery of Stanton business

STANTON — A 17-year-old Big Spring man charged with the armed robbery of Bill's Friendly Foods here on Monday morning was being held in the Martin County Jail today, while lawmen try to trace down another man who held up Koonce's Exxon Service Station off Interstate 20 near Stanton late Tuesday afternoon.

Held in jail in lieu of posting a $50,000 bond was Bob L. Moore, who allegedly wielded a .38-caliber automatic pistol in the robbery of the grocery store.

Moore reportedly had taken money from one cash register, shifted to a second register, tucked his pistol in his belt loop, covered it with his shirt and was waiting for some more "bills."

Instead, he got a punch from Bill Coggins, the grocer, who reportedly came from the back of the store after a clerk had called him by name. Police theorize that Moore mistook the call for Coggins as a prospect for additional "bills" to bolster his loot.

After Coggins came forward and noted the robber wasn't holding a pistol, he slugged Moore. A clerk joined in the tussle. Shortly afterward, Police Chief Rick Kennedy and Patrolman Ricky Silva arrived and arrested Moore.

About 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Gary Walton, the attendant at the service station, was robbed by a man who first asked for change and then "claimed he had a gun but he never showed it," said Deputy Sheriff Mike Welling, who investigated the robbery.

The man took $500 from the station, Welling said, and told Walton to go into the restroom and stay there for five minutes. A companion to the robber reportedly was waiting in a car at the station, Welling said.

"At this time, we're looking a suspect in Lamesa and Midland, but nothing is definite," said Welling.

NAACP dropping appeal of Dallas order

DALLAS (AP) — The NAACP is dropping its appeal of the Dallas school district's desegregation order, a lawyer for the civil rights group says.

"We do not intend to appeal at this point," said Thomas Atkins, the NAACP's national attorney who decided to appeal the case last spring.

"We were not sufficiently dissatisfied with the order to pursue an appeal," Atkins said in a telephone interview Wednesday from New York.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders issued his final order Feb. 1, and NAACP officials said they were disappointed in it. A month later, the group filed a notice of appeal with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, where the case is pending.

During the month-long trial last year, NAACP lawyers sought to include all Dallas school children in court-ordered busing. Sanders refused.

The surprise move to drop the appeal prompted some Dallas school officials to suggest the school district should drop its appeal, too.

"I think it's fantastic," said Richard Curry, a board member from southeast Dallas who first voted against an appeal by the district, and then voted to appeal only if the NAACP did.

New category of animals protected by government

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — For years, the Interior Department has watched over "endangered" and "threatened" species, protected "migratory birds" and restocked bodies of water with fish. Now it has a new category: "national species of special emphasis," or 67 kinds of animals and one plant group that it thinks deserve particular attention.

While agency officials say the designation is simply for planning and budgetary purposes, environmentalists are concerned that it will tend to promote hunting and fishing at the expense of truly endangered species.

Under the program, a new Office of the National Planning Coordinator will manage the popular gamefish and gamebirds, as well as coyotes and endangered species such as the bald eagle, sea otter and grizzly bear and the lone plant to make the list, an endangered group of cactus.

"We are doing this because there are too many (subagencies) concerned with only part of the total picture," said Jon M. Andrew, a staffer in the new office.

But Sumner Pingree, fish and wildlife specialist for the Wilderness Society, said the plan will give "special attention to those species that are of interest to sportsmen" such as the mallard duck and the Atlantic salmon.

Pingree noted that the Interior Department last year considered seeking congressional authorization to set priorities among species that were either on the endangered species list or being considered for designation. "What they've done here," he said, "is to invent a new category to get around the office of endangered species."

"Although they say this is an internal planning system, it's all going to have an effect on where the money goes," Pingree said.

12 congressional incumbents nominated

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Congressional incumbents swept to victory from coast to coast in 12 state primaries Tuesday, preserving their nearly perfect record for the year and confounding prophets of a toss-the-rascals-out political tide.

The narrowest incumbent escape Tuesday was that of four-term veteran Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., who turned back a stiff intraparty conservative challenge from Rep. James D. Santini, D-Nev.

Cannon's razor-thin victory, by fewer than 1,800 votes, was easily the most dramatic of the year's busiest day of primaries, but it was of a piece.

All incumbent senators and members of Congress who sought renomination Tuesday were winners, and of the eight incumbent governors on the ballot all but Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King prevailed. King lost the Democratic gubernatorial primary to former governor Michael S. Dukakis, whom King beat four years ago.

In all the primaries this year only eight congressional incumbents have been defeated, and five of those were in races against other incumbents as a result of redistricting. Just New York, Hawaii and runoffs in some Alabama, Florida and Georgia races remain.

Tuesday also was a day of victories for moderate and liberal candidates. In Wisconsin, the liberal view on nuclear arms policy prevailed as well. By more than 3 to 1, voters approved the year's first statewide resolution calling for a nuclear weapons freeze.

The elections also could be seen as a repudiation of the National Conservative Political Action Committee's intervention in two Senate primaries. NCPAC spent money on behalf of Santini and in opposition to Sen. Paul W. Sarbanes, D-Md. "It was a good day for progressives," Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles T. Manatt said Wednesday.

The one notable exception to the leftward tilt Tuesday was in Minnesota, where former Democratic governor Rudy Perpich, a maverick and a fiscal conservative, upset state attorney general Warren Spannaus, the endorsed Democratic Farmer Labor Party candidate.

Spannaus is a protege of former vice president Walter F. Mondale, and his defeat was not welcome news in the Mondale presidential camp.

The incumbents' strength this year puzzles many political strategists, who have files stuffed with polls chronicling the voters' low regard for Congress and, presumably, a throw-the-rascals-out frame of mind.

"It's a very strange political year," said Leon Billings, executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. "The stability is almost disconcerting."

One explanation is a familiar one: the incumbents' fund-raising edge in a time of vastly escalating campaign costs.

The other is psychological. Democratic pollster Peter Hart said Wednesday that, despite the nation's economic woes — or possibly because of them — he has been expecting a good incumbent showing for some time.

"In periods of instability, people look to their moorings," he said. "This year, day in and day out, the headlines are filled with stories of war and economic misery." He compared the current political season with that of 1968, a vintage year for congressional incumbents despite the upheavals of the Vietnam war, assassinations and student and urban unrest.

Rounding out his safe-port-in-a-storm theory, Hart noted that the winners of four gubernatorial primaries are former governors: Dukakis in Massachusetts, Perpich in Minnesota and, earlier this year, former Democratic governors Bill Clinton in Arkansas and George C. Wallace in Alabama. Wallace won a plurality in his primary and faces a runoff Sept. 28.

The Cannon and Perpich victories came as the biggest surprises. The fallout in each case may be to give the Republicans an unexpected opening for November.

Republican strategists privately conceded that if Santini, the western "Boll Weevil" who sided with President Reagan on most economic votes, had won he would have been hard to beat. They can be expected to revive the allegations of corruption that have dogged Cannon and to pour maximum resources into the race.

This is particularly likely since Cannon's opponent is former state senator Chic Hecht, a Las Vegas businessman with close ties to Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., who beat developer Rick Fore, a newcomer to Nevada who might have been vulnerable to carpetbagger charges.

Similarly, in Minnesota Spannaus was considered a more formidable fall candidate than Perpich. But the colorful Perpich, who said he didn't know he had won until he heard the radio when he woke up, demonstrated this week that he could still run a poorly financed race with little party support and win. His opponent is businessman Wheelock Whitney.

CRMWD ends August in 'comfortable' condition

BIG SPRING — The Colorado River Municipal Water District finished August in a comfortable fiscal condition due in part to operation costs lower than budget estimates and higher revenues.

Revenues for August were $1,043,636, the first time that a single month had topped the million dollar mark. This brought to $7,308,615 the revenues for eight months, or $294,000 more than estimated for the period.

On the other hand, operating expenses of $649,534 pushed to $4,345,310 the costs for the year. This was $259,109 less than estimated for the period. The big contributing factor was that power costs fell well under estimates. In August energy cost $497,624, making $3,009,211 for the year, or $302,000 under budget estimates.

Primary reason for this savings was an alternation of pumping patterns. In August, for example, the heaviest demand occurred on the west end and had to be satisfied to a greater degree with Ward County well water, which, due to proximity and lower lift, is less costly to produce. The eight-month power bill, however, is $636,666 more than for the same period last year. Last year electric energy through eight months accounted for 65.64 percent of operational costs; this year the fiture is 69.29 percent.

Revenues were based on sale of 2,095,725,880 gallons of water, of which 1,230,299,000 came from Lakes J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence, or 58.73 percent of the total.

For the year, however, the total of 9,163,845,547 is 72.38 percent of the total.

Weather conducive to step-sitting

The good news is, you can sit on the steps and enjoy the mild weather. The bad news is, you may get soaked by the lawn sprinkler.

The National Weather Service forecast calls for partly cloudy skies tonight and Friday, but the chance of rain is mainly on the wane. Tonight's low should edge into the mid-60s with winds from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph. Friday's high should reach the upper 80s with winds from the south at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday's high of 87 degrees fell a "baker's dozen" short of the record 100 set in 1965. Conversely, the overnight low of 63 was 13 degrees warmer than the record 50 set in 1951.

No precipitation in the last 24 hours leaves monthly and yearly rainfall totals at a trace and 10.19 inches.

Sunset tonight comes at 7:54 p.m.; sunrise Friday is at 7:34 a.m.

little or none of the taxpayers' money expended. Even though the department has its list of priorities, Kohout said he doesn't stick by it when a person or group wants to donate money.

"If someone gives you only $20,000, what do you do with it? You pick out the item that costs $20,000 and do it. If someone wants to give for a lower priority item, we'll take it. We have an open-arms attitude. Special interest groups don't care about our Top 10 list."

PETRO PARCOURSE is a prime example of Kohout's technique, and represents the largest donation by any one group. Speaking to the Junior League, Kohout mentioned a parcourse was on the list of priorities. "There happened to be a jogger there — Carol Mann. She picked up on the idea during the talk," gathered fellow joggers and raised the money from numerous petroleum-related businesses.

Additional help on other projects has come from the Jaycees, Lions, Kiwanis, Junior League and the high schools, said Kohout.

The director isn't turning down any kind of assistance from anyone, he said. Recently, a group of church girls ages 14 to 16 asked what they could do. Kohout put them to work painting signs at Hogan Park.

"Even if it's one individual like an Eagle Scout or Brownies to pick up trash, we'd like to organize it to a better degree."

To do a better selling job, Kohout is considering a brochure, somewhat like a shopping list that people could use to select the project they want to fund. It's an idea, he said, that's being used by other cities in Texas.

But before the brochure can be compiled, he would like to see the Master Plan updated and incorporate its suggestions into the brochure.

"We would like the Master Plan to be able to sell things for us. We can take the art work from it one step further to explain to the public how parks are developed. A lot of parks in the city have never been developed fully. We would hand these brochures out to people and service organizations; it helps to paint an idea for them."

TAKING THE LAST Master Plan that was developed in 1974-75, Kohout pointed to an illustration of how Fasken Park could be developed. "It's a good plan, showing the most we could do dollar-wise and space-wise. We would like to target 12 to 13 areas and market it, including for parks on the south and east sides."

Fasken, selected because it is a "typical" two-acre neighborhood park, would be developed with an open play area with a sandlot softball diamond and backstop; a shaded seating area with picnic tables and benches; a fenced spray pool with benches; and a children's play area with standard equipment, paved bike trail and earth play mound. Landscaping would be redeveloped with new trees, shrubs and ground cover, as described in the Master Plan.

Backers of the Petro Parcourse used a brochure to sell their plans and Kohout said that's why the group was so successful in obtaining its money.

Even without the brochures, increasing assistance has been coming from various sports organizations who are willing to raise a certain amount of money for a capital expenditure if the City Council will match it. The idea has worked successfully with the Soccer Association and Softball Association, with the latter group attempting to raise $100,000 for a new softball complex in Hogan Park. In addition, the softball group will put out about $30,000 to pave a parking lot if the council hands out $30,000 for restrooms.

Petro Parcourse at Wadley and A Streets stands as a prime example of how citizen cooperation brought an idea off a priorities list and onto the ground. Unable to get money for all its desired projects from the General Fund, the Parks and Recreation Department has started a system whereby groups and neighborhoods are involved time-wise and money-wise in getting what they want.

OVER THE LAST four years, Kohout estimated the department has received in excess of half a million dollars from the private sector "and that's not counting the cost of labor donated."

Akins said the council responds more quickly to requests from groups who are willing to put up part of the funds.

"Getting money from private groups is a great thing," said Akins. "People can get involved in their neighborhood parks and corporations can put something into the community that can be viewed and used by the community."

When neighborhoods or organizations contact Kohout about the need for various projects or for developing a park, he advises them of three routes to take: provide seed money, get petitions signed and call the City Council.

"These are very effective," he said of the methods used by the groups. "If someone asked us for something, we'd ask the council and then be turned down. Now, we meet with the group and see how the idea fits in with our Master Plan. We show them our track record (on not getting projects approved). We don't tell them they have to raise money or get petitions. We just tell them they'll have better success if they do this themselves."

Akins is hoping the idea can be developed for parks on the south and east sides. Although the council has started directing money from federal Community Development funds to those parks, "We're trying to get more for the south and east sides by getting the people there to help out.

"I feel there will be more public-private partnerships in the future, not only in parks but in everything," the mayor added. "There's a maximum of what the public will tolerate in ad valorem taxes to fund all the desired projects.

Candidate's wife criticizes Clements' radio spots

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The wife of Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark White criticized radio commercials being aired by Gov. Bill Clements during a buffet luncheon Wednesday in the Petroleum Club.

Linda Gale White had stopped in Midland on a three-day swing through West Texas that will conclude this evening in Lubbock.

Noting that Clements has $9 million to spend in comparison to her husband's $3½ million, "he should be running on his record. Obviously, he doesn't have a record to run on. He's been creating his own stories."

A former teacher who holds a bachelor's degree in business administration, Mrs. White quipped that she would give Clements an "A" in creative writing and an "F" in reporting facts. "I'm disappointed that Clements seems to be creating facts and figures."

Through these radio ads, she continued, the governor's plan of attack shows that he is trying to depict White as "an incompetent attorney general. The record shows he has won 98 percent of his cases."

Citing the prison case as an example, she said Clements is claiming that White had to hire outside counsel. The case in which a federal judge was calling for more prison space was sent to the law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski, Mrs. White said, after Clements insisted on hiring the firm.

"Mark said he had enough lawyers to handle it. But Clements said he wanted an outside law firm and he even named the one he wanted," she said, adding that White has the letter in his Austin office to confirm it.

Teachers' salaries is the key issue in this campaign, according to Mrs. White. Currently, beginning prison guards make more money than beginning teachers. "School teachers are molding the future leaders of Texas," and the inequity in salaries is unfair, she contended.

Looking back on the attorney general's race four years ago when White fought Republican James Baker for the post, Mrs. White said the two men stuck to the issues, running a "clean race."

But it hasn't been that way against Clements and the radio ads reflect that, she contended. A graduate of Baylor University, she noted that White and Clements have clashed over the four years. "But they didn't start out totally disagreeing on everything. Basically, they're two conservative candidates. It's just the way they present themselves" that differs.

Linda Gale White

She described the governor as "bull-headed and dogmatic. He wants to do it his way. There are lots of issues and lots of people. You need someone who will work out solutions and listen to both sides."

Money is important to the campaign, and Mrs. White questioned why the governor would need so much this time. "Clements needed a lot of money last time because no one knew who he was. Now he has name identification", but the polls reflect that may not be helping much.

According to Mrs. White, one poll showed her husband four points ahead while another showed him behind by a few points. The race is neck-and-neck between the two men, she added.

Looking back a year ago before the race began, Mrs. White said she wasn't surprised when her husband decided to try for governor. "I've known all along he would do this some day, so I wasn't surprised.

"I feel very strongly that Mark is the right candidate," she said. "He's someone we can be proud of, someone who represents everyone."

Westmoreland opposes nuclear weapons freeze

Strengthening conventional warfare, of upmost importance, had been ignored during recent years, Westmoreland said.

"We must concentrate on conventional military warfare," he said, adding that he sees the next war as being a conventional rather than a nuclear war.

The Soviets, he continued, are slightly behind the U.S. in space technology.

"We've done things in space that they haven't," he explained. "I'd say we're about 5 years ahead of the Soviets in space technology. But I'm concerned that the space programs are being underfunded. In 10 to 15 years, we might find them equal or pulling ahead of us."

During the press conference, Westmoreland went into greater detail concerning Soviet-U.S. relations.

"A NUCLEAR WAR is so terrifying," he told reporters. "No one really wins although you may prevail. Tight military forces, in my opinion, will be very useful in the future."

Admitting that he has been retired for 10 years, and therefore is "not current on information," Westmoreland said: "The army is improving; I feel very good as to the trends of military forces. It's going to take money and we've got a long way to go."

While the U.S. presently "has the edge," Westmoreland, who served 36 years as an officer, said much of it has been given away.

"A lot of technology has been given away by a third person, some has been given directly and some has been stolen by the Soviets." He added that the Soviets have more money and equipment designated to their military than the U.S. and the importance of the military is more heavily weighted in the Soviet Union than it is here.

"I think they are abreast of the U.S. in many areas and ahead of us in several."

THE MEDIA HAS a very important responsibility to the public, Westmoreland said in response to a student question concerning the anti-military tone of today's media.

"That (the anti-military tone) is your impression," Westmoreland told the students with a laugh. "I don't think the media would agree.

"In this country, the media has an awesome power," he continued. "The media, at this time in history, has more power than the president of the United States because of the influence they have in the public eye. It's very important that they show a lot of responsibility and they must be very cognizant of their public responsibility. Many do; but face it, some don't."

Westmoreland presently is involved in a $120 million suit against CBS Network, although he refused to elaborate because of pending litigation.

Referring to the passive view of the public in the 1960s and the flower children days mentioned by one student, Westmoreland said, "There are emotional waves that pass through our society from time to time. If they have merit, they stick; if they don't, they won't. If they have stability, they'll stay. The flower children didn't; the flower children faded fast."

LATER, WHEN asked by reporters if, in his opinion, the views of the American public had changed any since the Vietnam War, where Westmoreland served from January 1964 through June 1968, he responded with a smile, "I can't answer that — I should ask you."

Also addressed were the following topics:

—Mandatory draft: Westmoreland stated the draft should obtain a cross-section of society. "I think it should demand that," he said. "We need to make it equitable and not a lower and middle income draft." He spoke on the "rough times" the volunteer army has experienced with high unemployment and other factors and said that in the case of a crisis, the Selective Service was necessary. "It'd probably be close to two months before we could get the machinery together and mobilize," he added. "The Selective Service will save the government a lot of time and money."

—Women in the military: "By putting women in jobs where they do not have high aptitude, it is unfair to the women, unfair to the men and unfair to the military." A public belief about women in the Israeli army is false, he said. According to Westmoreland, the women are forbidden to participate in combat. When fighting does break out, the women have orders to move to the back as soon as possible. He cited an incident in 1972 where the women were caught in combat. "In some cases, the (Israeli) men manning the tanks stopped to help the women," he said. "It was instinctive. In an crisis like that, people act on instinct."

—THE ABORTIVE attempt to rescue hostages in Iran. "I didn't think at the time that it was a wise decision," he said. "It was a rapidly planned operation and the troops used were not necessarily prepared for as delicate an operation. The plan of action was a risky one and to work there could be no mistakes."

—The Vietnam War. "I have no apologies and nothing to hide. It was a political development. I guess it was the first war we ever fought in that was not supported by public opinion. And no war can be won without the support of the public." When asked if he thought the U.S. would have won had he been given "free reins in Washington," Westmoreland replied, "I think ultimately, we would have been victorious. I did my best to cooperate with LBJ. But I understand some of the political restrictions."

PLO accuses Israel of violating cease fire, calls for intervention

ROME (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization, accusing Israel of violating the cease-fire agreement in Lebanon, today asked the United States, France and Italy to intervene to halt the Israeli push into west Beirut.

"The Israeli army has invaded the western sector of Beirut, despite the guarantees given by the multinational force and especially the United States to protect Palestinian refugee camps and their residents," the PLO said in a statement.

THE BRIEF STATEMENT was issued on the second day of a three-day visit by PLO leader Yasser Arafat who met with Pope John Paul II and dined with Italian President Sandro Pertini on Wednesday. Today, starting a meeting with Rome city officials, Arafat likened himself to the apostle St. Peter.

Israeli forces, who began their thrust Wednesday after Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel was killed in a bombing, were reported to have seized most strategic areas in the predominantly Moslem area, held by PLO guerrillas until last month.

THE UNITED STATES, France and Italy pulled out their peacekeeping contingents from Beirut last week after supervising the U.S.-arranged evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas and Syrian troops.

PLO officials said Arafat, at his meeting with Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo Wednesday evening, called for joint action by the three Western countries to stop the Israeli advance. Italian officials were not immediately available to comment on the PLO statement.

Arafat began the day with a visit to the Rome city hall.

GREETED BY Mayor Ugo Vetere, a Communist, at the entrance of the Michelangelo-designed city hall square, Arafat likened himself to St. Peter and told dignitaries that he came here to "penetrate the hearts of the Romans" with a message of peace.

"Many years ago, a man came to Rome from Palestine," Arafat said, speaking of St. Peter's biblical journey. "He was a fisherman and he not only entered the city but also the hearts of the Romans.

"Today, another man came from Palestine. I am not a fisherman but an engineer, but I also want to talk to the heart of the Romans so they can support the cause of my people who suffer."

GRINNING AND flashing a victory sign, the Palestine Liberation Organization chief embraced top city officials before sitting for an hour-long meeting in a richly decorated conference room. He wore an olive green military outfit and a checkered black and white Arab headdress, but it was impossible to see whether he was packing his customary pistol.

Correction

A suggestion by Nada Baulch, chairman of the Parks and Recreation Commission, in Part II of the parks series which was published in Wednesday's edition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram was reported incorrectly.

To raise more money for parks, her recommendation should have read that the city could take one penny out of every dime brought in by the city sales tax.

The article said she asked for a one-cent increase in the ad valorem tax. Her intent is not to raise taxes, she said.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

At home among mountain gorillas 10,000 feet up in Rwanda's Virunga mountains in central Africa, Dian Fossey plays with a group of the young.

Mountain Gorilla Project trying to save rare breed

By SUSAN LINSEE

RUHENGERI, Rwanda (AP) — They huff and puff up the slopes of the dormant Virunga volcanoes in this misty cool corner of central Africa, hoping to catch a glimpse of the world's few remaining mountain gorillas.

Last year, about 2,500 people made the journey — 10 times the number of mountain gorillas estimated to roam the 65-square-mile Volcano National Park.

It's a delicate task trying to balance the number of visitors and an expanding native population with the needs of gorillas and the researchers who study the large, shy primates.

More than two years ago the Swiss-based World Wildlife Fund, in conjunction with the Rwandese Office of Tourism, set up the Mountain Gorilla Project to help save the animals from extinction.

The mountain gorillas, distinguished by long, dense hair, are much rarer than their smaller lowland cousins. Male mountain gorillas can attain a height of up to six feet and weigh as much as 450 pounds in the wild.

According to Jean Pierre von der Becke, the Belgian project director, an immediate goal is to protect the gorillas from poachers. The most recent poaching occurred last September when an adult female was killed and several young captured.

Marc Gutekunst, president of the International Gorilla Federation based in Strasbourg, France, said natural history museums in Europe will pay as much as $10,000 for an adult gorilla skeleton.

Gutekunst said the fee is considerably higher for a live gorilla, but he added reputable zoos are wary of purchasing animals that may have been poached.

Zoos in Frankfurt and Cologne, West Germany, as well as the Bronx Zoo in New York and the Center for Primate Studies in Atlanta, Ga., own mountain gorillas, he said, but they were acquired before the animals were declared to be endangered species.

The gorillas' natural habitat includes a volcanic mountainous region in East Africa that extends into Zaire, Rwanda and Uganda, but only Rwanda, under part of the Belgian Congo, has tried to protect the animals.

Von der Becke said continuing fighting in Uganda after the ouster three years ago of dictator Idi Amin has not directly affected the gorillas, but it has made it easier for would-be poachers to obtain guns.

He said the park has a staff of 50, including guides and armed guards. A major portion of the private and public donations received for the project goes toward sending the staff to wildlife management schools in Tanzania or Cameroon.

One problem is that mountain gorillas face direct competition from farmers for land in Rwanda.

The Volcano National Park — including Mounts Sabinyo, Visoke, Gahinga, Murhavura and 14,873-foot still active Karisimbi — also serves as a natural watershed for the northwestern corner of Rwanda, the most intensively cultivated area of the small country.

"Normally, the gorillas would live at an altitude of about 8,500 feet," von der Becke said. "But farmers in search of new land moving up the mountain sides have pushed them to heights of 11,550 feet. Up there the gorillas sometimes die of the cold."

The fee for visiting the park and observing the gorillas is about $22.

With the help of guides, up to 11 visitors a day are allowed to attempt the five-hour climb over spongy terrain, potato fields and Alpine-like vegetation in hopes of seeing one of three groups of gorillas described by park employees as "visitable."

One of the first jobs of the Mountain Gorilla Project was to accustom these animals to human beings, von der Becke said.

School facilities approved

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Mark White has ruled Texas Tech Health Sciences Center may construct medical school facilities on land conditionally deeded to Tech by Odessa and Ector County.

Tech President Lauro Cavazos had asked White to rule because of provisions in the constitutions against expending public funds for the benefit of private entities or "municipal or other corporations" without a "valid public purpose and adequate public benefit."

Cavazos noted that the city and county had conveyed approximately 6.2 acres to the school, but with restrictions for the land to be returned if construction isn't completed, or if the facilities cease to be used for medical school-related purposes.

The land also is to be used for "parking and like purposes" until Tech begins construction.

White said that it would be possible that "the medical facilities to be built...could revert to the grantors" if construction stopped over 18 months, or if the facilities were not used for medical school activities.

However, he said, Tech had the ability to prevent that from occurring, and he concluded that the school "has statutory authority to build a medical facility on the land deeded to it, and that expenditures for this purpose will be for a proper public purpose and will result in an adequate public benefit."

FBI ends recruitment

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The FBI has announced an end to recruiting at the University of Wisconsin Law School, five days after learning students had complained about FBI discrimination against homosexuals.

Assistant Dean Edward J. Reisner informed the agency Sept. 3 that the Student Bar Association filed a complaint saying the FBI's refusal to hire homosexuals violated Wisconsin law.

On Sept. 8, H. Ernest Woodby, FBI special agent in charge in Milwaukee, notified the law school that it would no longer recruit on campus, as it has for the past seven years.

Midlander to fill post

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements has named Harriet Daniel Herd of Midland to the Texas Commission on the Arts for a term ending Aug. 31, 1983.

Mrs. Herd is a Midland Chamber of Commerce volunteer and is active in the United Way.

She attended Sweetbriar and The University of Texas undergraduate schools.

She will fill the unexpired term of Margot Birmingham Perot of Dallas, who resigned.

The appointment was announced by Clements' office Tuesday.

Gorillas separated

DALLAS (AP) — A rare, lowland gorilla has been separated from its mother at the Dallas Zoo because she has a "checkered history" with offspring, zoo officials say.

The 5-pound, 10-ounce baby, born at 7:10 a.m. Monday, was placed "under medical wraps" about four hours later and was doing well on Tuesday, said zoo spokesman Bill Stewart.

The mother, Shamba, "has kind of a checkered history as a mother," Stewart said. 'She's done fine sometimes, and then sometimes she does fine for a while and then just kind of loses interest."

There are only about 8,500 wild lowland gorillas in Africa and about 500 in zoos worldwide, he said.

New UPI president chosen

NEW YORK (AP) — William J. Small, a broadcast news executive who held top posts at NBC News and CBS News, will take over as president and chief operating officer of United Press International.

In a statement released Tuesday by the news agency, Small said he was "honored to have been chosen" for the job.

"I am confident that under its new ownership, there is the will and the ability to provide a service to newspapers and broadcasters we can all view with pride and confidence," he said.

Small, 55, replaces Roderick W. Beaton, who retired Sept. 1 after 10 years as UPI president.

UPI, which has been losing money for a decade and reportedly had a deficit of $10 million in 1980, was sold in June for an undisclosed price by E.W. Scripps Co. to Media News Corp., a privately owned company based in Nashville, Tenn.

Describing Small as "a first-class newsman and a news executive of scope and imagination," Ruhe said Small would be responsible for all UPI's operations.

UPI, which employs 2,000 people and serves more than 7,000 news organizations, is the second-largest news agency in the United States after The Associated Press.

Small joined CBS News in 1962 and later became its Washington bureau manager and senior vice president. In 1978 he was named vice president of CBS Inc.

He was president of NBC News from September 1979 through March of this year.

A Chicago native and graduate of the University of Chicago, Small was news director of WHAS radio and WHAS television in Louisville, Ky., from 1956-1962. Before that, he was director of WLS radio in Chicago for five years.

Small has written two books on the news media: "To Kill a Messenger: Television and the Real World," and "Political Power and the Press."

Handgun law passed

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Only police, antique firearms collectors and members of the city's lone gun club will be allowed to own handguns when a new law takes effect in this Chicago suburb.

The City Council voted 10-7 Monday to outlaw possession of most handguns, making it the second Illinois city to take such action. The community of Morton Grove passed a handgun ordinance last year.

Evanston's ordinance will become law 10 days after Mayor James C. Lytle signs it, probably Friday.

Cone drop investigated

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says it will investigate the fall of a tail cone from an AirCal DC-9 jetliner as the plane was coming in for a landing.

None of the 103 passengers or six crew members aboard the Sacramento-to-Orange County flight were injured when the 12-foot tail cone, which covers the back emergency exit, flopped onto the runway Monday at the John Wayne Airport.

Such incidents are not uncommon, but an investigation will be made anyway, said Don Armstrong, assistant manager of the FAA office in Long Beach.

Your horoscope

BY JEANE DIXON

Friday, Sept. 17, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Anne Bancroft, who now lives a bicoastal life with her equally talented husband Mel Brooks, shares your birthday. Also born on this date: football great George Blanda, U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger, actor Rodd McDowall, Philadelphia Phillies coach Bobby Wines and "Three's Company's" John Ritter. Travel convinces you to make a move in the coming year. Job and family questions arise, but whatever you decide will be best for all concerned. Your parents or offspring help you solve a nagging financial problem. Professionals join forces to build a team destined for success. You are able to act in a more independent manner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Computers aid family members and increase productivity at work. Yesterday's discarded plans fit in beautifully with a new project. Loans are repaid. Plow profits back into business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Introduce two old friends to each other. It could be the start of something wonderful for them. Someone who had the wrong impression of you gains a new view.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are able to juggle your bills and income, but still need to develop a better budget. "Romance is lively!" Young people benefit from the experience of working.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stop guessing! It is important that you ask questions and demand answers. You become much more interested in music, thanks to a loved one's influence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your support gives an older person new hope. Use the next few days to get your career back on track. You will rise or fall on your own talents and efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New endeavors bring the greatest measure of success now. Get out there and fight for your share of the market. Encourage a young person to have greater faith.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You receive money from consulting or moonlighting. A previous rejection now becomes an acceptance. An introduction at a party results in a new job offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stop being so "logical" about love and trust your emotions. Your intuition is strong right now. It may be time to make a commitment. Repay loans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your colleagues are anxious to work with you but feel that you are not a team player. Explain why you must tackle some things alone. A friendship takes on romantic overtones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Triumphs are near for those in politics and the arts. Salespeople need to be more creative. If you feel the time is ripe, push for a promotion. You get a good loan.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not jump at the first job opportunity that comes along. When switching positions, you should investigate every possibility before making up your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Deal with a nagging problem before it becomes insoluble. Open new lines of communication. Your social contacts help your business prosper.

The San Francisco team of Ron von der Porten, Kyle Larsen, Peter Pender, Hugh Ross, Chip Martel and Lew Stansby won the Grand National Team Championship at the Summer North American Championships in Albuquerque, N.M., in July. In doing so, they became the first team to qualify for the trials to select the U.S. team for the 1984 World Team Olympiad.

Von der Porten, South, liked his hand's playing potential enough to overcall two diamonds even though the quality of the suit left something to be desired. East interjected a club bid as a lead director. Since South knew from his partner's cue-bid that he would find good trumps in the North hand, he persevered with five diamonds.

The opening lead left the club situation unclear. East won the ace of clubs and shifted to the king of hearts. Declarer ruffed and, since East was a favorite to hold the king of diamonds, he continued with a trump to the ace. Next came three rounds of spades, and when everyone followed, the stage was set for an end play. Declarer simply exited with a trump, not really caring who won the king.

East was on lead with the king of diamonds, and he was about to solve declarer's problems in the club suit. If he returned a club, marking him with that suit, declarer would have finessed the jack and then shed his last club on the thirteenth spade. As it was, East was down to nothing but hearts. When he perforce led a heart, declarer discarded a club from hand while ruffing in dummy, then took a discard of the jack of clubs on the thirteenth spade.

In the other room, the Detroit team took a phantom sacrifice at six diamonds doubled. San Francisco gained 14 International Match Points on the hand and went on to win the final by a score of 160-94 IMPs.

A neighbor in need

Mexico's Independence Day, being celebrated today, commemorates a lengthy struggle for liberty, just as the United States' own Fourth of July celebration does. The kinship between the two nations cannot and should not be overlooked, for one affects the other.

When Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla led the first violent rebellion against Napoleonic rule on Sept. 16, 1810, it marked the beginning of the struggle for liberty against oppressive foreign and domestic rulers. But even after Mexico achieved political stability five decades ago under the National Revolutionary Party, a kind of struggle for independence continued.

That struggle has been against poverty and backwardness more than for political liberty. Since World War II, the Mexican economy has grown at a rate of at least 6 percent a year. And the discovery of giant oil reserves in the 1970s led to further economic development.

The price for that economic growth, though, has been a steadily mounting foreign debt and by the beginning of this year Mexico's foreign debt had become the largest in the world, exceeding even that of Brazil.

Mexico's bubble burst recently, sending gold prices soaring and giving the entire financial world a bad case of the jitters. Why? Because a number of U.S. banks have invested heavily in Mexico.

Through the years, people on both sides of the Mexico-U.S. border have seen how interdependent the economies of the two nations are. There is little doubt that the current Mexican economic crisis will have an adverse effect on the economy of the United States, too.

And with the upcoming change of presidents in Mexico there is reason for some concern about the stability of the government south of the U.S. border. Political turmoil that close to home is always worrisome.

Those factors and others combine to make the celebration of Mexico's Independence Day today an important event. A number of countries — the United States among them — have stepped forward to try to minimize the effects of this economic crisis. Overcoming this crisis and keeping Mexico on the road toward economic and political stability can only be in the best interests of both countries and the Western Hemisphere in general.

'The invisible man'

They called him "the invisible man" for the first few weeks, but in recent days he has started to become more visible. The gentleman in question is George Pratt Shultz, for the past two months this nation's 60th secretary of state.

The reason he has been labeled "invisible" is that he likes to go about his duties in a low-key manner. But in the case of the new chief of the state department, low-key means anything but weak.

George Shultz is truly a strong man. He is a former Marine and has been known to make decisions with the decisiveness of a Marine sergeant. He is an economist and administrator, coordinating these two talents with great success when he served as dean of one of the nation's most respected schools of business administration, the University of Chicago.

He has been the head of Bechtel, Inc., an international construction and engineering firm. His government service is unique. He has served as secretary of labor, secretary of the treasury and director of the Office of Management and Budget.

It may seem ironic that a man of this tremendous track record should ever be called "the invisible man," but it is a genuine tribute to the new secretary of state during his first two months in office. It says he is a good listener. It says he is not flamboyant. It says he is ready to examine American foreign policies, including the Camp David accords and take a flexible approach in reassessing them.

Secretary Shultz already has been saluted by a state department underling who appreciates the fact he can say what he pleases without fear of reprimand. His appraisal of the Shultz atmosphere at Foggy Bottom went like this:

"You don't have to worry about whether your report will coincide with some preconceived notions. Shultz may reject your ideas but you won't suffer for it."

In these first two months "the invisible man" has established a highly visible profile as a reasonable and respected statesman.

Another View:

An honorable task

Israel responded to President Reagan's Middle East peace initiative with an immediate and scathing rejection. Arab leaders meeting in Morocco last week took the more circumspect approach of simply ignoring the Reagan proposals. Instead, they proffered their own peace plan, the "Fez Charter," a document notable more for the unusual consensus that it represents than for any progress in Arab thinking that it might suggest.

The Fez Charter is essentially recycled politics. Explicitly, it dusts off and dresses up slightly the plan that Saudi Arabia submitted last November to another Fez conference — an action that led to the prompt and unharmonious collapse of that get-together. Implicitly, it reinvokes the Arabs' 1967 Khartoum conference call for no negotiations, no peace, no recognition of Israel. All this, as Secretary of State George P. Shultz told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, represents a considerable variance with what the United States has in mind. That is a diplomatically prudent understatement.

The Reagan administration nonetheless plans to persevere with the president's initiative, ignored or rejected or not, and so it should. The proposals in that initiative are sound, the outlines for a settlement that they sketch are realistic. No proposals could simultaneously satisfy the antithetical conceptions of "right" that are held by Israel and the Arabs. But there are ideas that can be made to work. This is what the United States is after.

There is, plainly, a vast distance to go, and there is no assurance of success at journey's end. Reagan has called for direct Arab-Israeli negotiations, which remain anathema to the Arabs. He wants territorial compromise on the West Bank, to give Israel more secure borders. Prime Minister Menachem Begin opposes that, because he wants the whole of the West Bank. The Arabs oppose it no less, continuing to demand Israel's withdrawal to the 1967 borders.

Reagan wants no separate Palestinian state; the Arabs say that there must be one. Reagan insists that Israel must have negotiated, secure and recognized borders. The Arabs, at Fez, have held up only the weak reed of U.N. Security Council "guarantees" of peace for all states in the area — Israel was not mentioned.

And so it goes, and so it is likely to go for some time. No one should be surprised. The uncompromisingly rigid doctrines embraced by Arab and Israeli leaders alike are not going to bend overnight at a word from the president. The "new realism" that Reagan has asked for is not going to be perceived in an instant. But that realism is not likely to be perceived at all unless the United States is persistent in calling attention to it. That is the honorable task that this country has set for itself.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Slave labor used on Soviet gas pipeline

WASHINGTON — Secret intelligence reports portray an awesome human epic now unfolding in Siberia. A long, lonely stream of slave laborers — tens of thousands of faceless men, existing on starches and water — are working from dawn to dusk, laying the Siberian pipeline.

Jack Anderson

The reports describe the anonymous workers as Soviet prisoners sentenced to forced labor and Vietnamese "volunteers" shipped to Siberia to help pay off Vietnam's debts. They reportedly are working under grim conditions for bare subsistance.

Our European allies are supplying vital equipment for the pipeline construction, which makes them indirect partners in this massive crime against human rights.

Of course, the Kremlin doesn't permit the Moscow Evening News to film the brutal conditions for all the world to see. So hard proof is lacking to bring formal charges against the Soviet taskmasters.

But letters from the Vietnamese laborers, postmarked in the Soviet Union, have reached the outside world. Our intelligence agencies have also put together other jigsaw pieces which form an appalling portrait of human exploitation.

The State Department has been the most cautious about accepting the intelligence findings. Its Bureau of Intelligence and Research published a classified summary a few months ago citing reports — with no conclusions — that the Soviets are using slave labor to construct the controversial pipeline.

But the Human Rights Bureau, insiders say, is convinced of the terrible truth. Pentagon intelligence experts also believe the evidence is compelling.

Intelligence sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the Russians don't even hide the fact that Vietnamese "volunteers" are working in the Soviet Union. The precise number could be as high as 100,000.

The sources insist, however, that the youths are not volunteers at all, but are sent to Siberia against their will to work in the harsh environment. According to one report, many are children of families that opposed the Viet Cong during the war.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., has received several letters from Vietnamese emigres who have heard from relatives about the victimization of the laborers. Some letters have actually slipped through the Iron Curtain.

"It is already two months since I last heard from my family in Vietnam," wrote one desolate captive. "I do not know what the future has in store for me ... I am being tightly controlled ... The pay is very low and living conditions in this infamous area are cruel ... My life here is several times poorer and harsher than in Vietnam."

He tells of dreaming vainly of ways to escape and closes with this poignant plea: "Can you spare some money? Can you send me a few clothes? I tell you truly, I have just two sets of clothes and two pairs of shoes and one woolen sweater and one nylon coat and one fur hat. Just that to get me through the winter."

THOSE WERE THE DAYS: Now that the fighting in Beirut has died down, authorities are fondly recalling the friendly arrangement that existed between Israel and Lebanon before the civil war erupted in 1975.

Until then, a top secret CIA document records, there was an "unwritten agreement" between military forces facing each other on the border to deliberately fire off-target when Israeli patrols penetrated Lebanon to raid PLO nests.

Said the report: "The Lebanese reaction to Israeli patrols (was) normally limited to two rounds of artillery fire deliberately intended to miss a target by about 500 meters. If the rounds came too close, the Israelis returned the fire — also deliberately inaccurate — as a 'reminder.'"

According to the report, this agreement allowed Lebanon to "maintain the politically expedient fiction that it (was) reacting to the Israeli incursion."

The arrangement to avoid a confrontation was worked out during discussions periodically held at a border village between Lebanese and Israeli officials.

PERSUASIVE PRESIDENT: Ronald Reagan hit the Oval Office phone hard in lobbying for votes to enact his controversial $98 billion tax increase. It passed with the bipartisan help of the Democratic leadership in Congress, but the president himself turned around 10 Republican congressmen from his home state of California.

When the tax hike bill was sent from the Senate, Reagan was informed that of the 21 California GOP House members, he had the support of only one — Rep. Clair Burgener. When the showdown came, the president had converted 11 of the state's Republicans to his side — another demonstration of his arm-twisting prowess.

SPIT AND POLISH: Every year, a high-flying contingent of 50 top brass of the Air Force's Military Airlift Command take off from Scott Air Force Base in Illinois to inspect the 18 MAC bases scattered throughout the world. MAC spokesmen claim the unique spick-and-span brigade costs the taxpayers only $63,000.

The command, however, neglects to list flight expenses on grounds the planes would be going to the overseas bases anyway. And at one installation, office headquarters was painted twice in two months — once to pass the local commander's inspection and yet again for the visiting brass.

GEORGE F. WILL

Lead poisoning taking its toll in human life

WASHINGTON — A synonym for "leaden" is "dull," but the problem of lead in the environment is fascinating. It is a childhood health problem that illustrates how society's hazards are often distributed regressively — persons lowest on the social ladder have special handicaps for climbing.

George F. Will

Recently the Reagan administration moved to strengthen restrictions on lead additives in gasoline. Although different refiners have different interests, this was, basically, a victory for environmentalists over industry. One refinery blamed the decision on "politics." Well, yes: Politics is the assignment of social values and costs in accordance with a concept of equity. The Republican role in God's plan may generally be to lighten regulations, but this case illustrates how strong government can serve conservative values.

America uses 1.3 million tons of lead annually; 600,000 tons of this useful, ubiquitous and toxic metal are released into the environment. Because of high metabolism rates, children are especially susceptible to lead poisoning, which can cause retardation, brain damage, anemia, seizures, hyperactivity and death. Analysis of polar ice layers suggests that lead in the environment has increased 200-fold since industrialism began.

People are exposed to lead from food, household dust and the air. Burning a tankful of gasoline emits, according to one study, up to two ounces of lead. Upwards of 28 million buildings have lead-based paint which tastes sweet to children. A flake the size of a fingernail can be damaging. Some pre-1950 houses have paint with 100 times more lead than is now permitted. Lead in paint is the most dangerous source, but reduce lead in gasoline and you will reduce lead in children. The mean blood-level of lead in children has declined 25 percent since the beginning of restrictions on lead in gasoline.

According to one study, four percent of preschool children have excessive levels of lead in their blood. That would be dismaying enough even if the distribution were geographically, and hence socially, even. But high lead concentrations are among the things that, say, Shaker Heights and downtown Cleveland do not share equally. The percentage of black preschoolers with excessive lead levels is six times higher than the percentage of white preschoolers. Other studies indicate excessive levels in one-fifth of black children from low-income families.

Children often are deficient in iron, calcium and zinc. Poor children are especially apt to be deficient. The more deficient children are the more apt they are to absorb lead. Federal budget cutting and recession-related reductions of local revenues have reduced programs for screening for lead poisoning in children, and for removing lead-based paint from old buildings. Philadelphia's health commissioner says that if the city loses 10 percent of its lead-poisoning detection funds, that means 200 fewer homes visited, and five more cases of retardation. Studies have found correlations between even relatively low elevations of lead blood-levels and measurable reductions of I.Q.

Any childhood disease that threatened affluent children as lead-poisoning threatens poor children would produce public action faster than you can say "swine flu." As things are, government spends upwards of $1 billion annually on children with lead poisoning, 80 percent on special education for the learning disabled.

Conservatives dissolve in admiration for this insight: "There is no free lunch." It means: Someone must pay for anything that has costs. That, although hardly a sunburst, is true enough. So is this: Society shall pay (for example, with slightly higher energy costs) for reducing lead use; and society shall continue to pay a lot (for injuries to its human capital) if it does not reduce lead use.

In Saul Bellow's most recent novel, "The Dean's December," a scientist offers "the real explanation of what goes on" in slums: "Millions of tons of intractable lead residues poisoning the children of the poor ... Crime and social disorganization in inner-city populations can all be traced to the effects of lead. It comes down to the nerves, to brain damage."

The Dean thinks: "Direct material causes? Of course. Who could deny them? But what was odd was that no other causes were conceived of." The Dean is properly dubious about thorough-going materialism, that neglects society's cultural, spiritual ingredients. But the body is not just a temple in which the mind rattles about; the mind is not a ghost in a machine.

Mind is grounded in matter, woven into our physical constitutions. Conservatives, who rightly prefer equality of opportunity to equality of outcome as a social goal, have yet to come to terms with how complex and elusive their goal is, in light of all that we are learning about social influences on human capacity.

ART BUCHWALD

Once baby arrives, it all changes!

The lady came in to see Senator Jesse Beenbag the other day. She was carrying a baby in her arms.

Art Buchwald

Beenbag immediately called in the Senate photographer to have his picture taken with it.

"It's mighty kind of you to stop by," the senator said, trying to usher her out of his office after the picture taking.

"I didn't come to have my picture taken," the woman said.

"Then why are you here?"

"You're leading the fight against abortion, and I thought you could help me with this unwanted baby."

"You mean you don't want this baby?"

"No, sir. I have five more at home and I can't afford to feed them. I figured since you are so interested in human life, you could tell me where I could get some help to raise this one."

"My interest in human life starts at conception and ends with the fetus. Once the baby is born, you're on your own."

"That's what I was afraid of. How come if the Reagan government is so concerned about preventing people from having abortions, they keep cutting back on all the services for unwanted children?"

"The government cannot afford to take care of children after they're born. We can't fund every screwball social program for unwanted children, or we'll never have a balanced budget."

"So what do I do with the kid?"

"Madame, I have no idea what you should do with your child. But if you think the anti-abortion forces are going to support it from the cradle to the grave, you're sadly mistaken. The federal government has to get out of the child-rearing business."

"Since you're so concerned about the value of human life, why don't you take the kid?"

"What would I do with a child?"

"That's the question I keep asking myself."

"Have you gone to the local child services office?"

"They closed it because the government cut off all their funds. The local charities have no money, and all the food programs are going out of business."

"Then get a job," Beenbag said impatiently.

"I'm trying to. But even if I found one I couldn't afford the day-care center. I decided to come to you as a last resort because of your interest in a baby's right to life."

"You came to the wrong person," Beenbag said angrily. "My bill makes it a federal crime NOT to have a baby. But it doesn't provide continuing services for people who have one. Why is your kid crying?"

"I guess he's hungry," the lady said. "Unwanted children cry a lot."

"You're not going to change my stand on abortions just because your baby is crying," Beenbag warned. "Were you sent by the Planned Parenthood people?"

"No, it was my idea. I saw you on television a while back saying it was a mortal sin for a pregnant woman to abort, so I had my baby. Since you were so adamant on the subject I thought you or President Reagan might have some ideas as to what I do now."

"Madame, I'm a very busy person. I'm trying to get prayers back in school, protect the tobacco industry, and fight the hand-gun control lobby. I don't have time to worry about your child's welfare."

The lady put the baby on Beenbag's desk.

"What are you doing?" Beenbag screamed.

"I'm changing his diapers. You don't have a large handkerchief to spare, do you?"

"Get out of my office and take that bawling kid with you," Beenbag said.

"If you support right to life," the lady said, "you have to support right-to-life functions."

"But he just did it all over the President's letter of support for my bill," Beenbag cried.

The lady smiled, and said: "Naughty boy."

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Final summations were scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today in the case of a Midland businessman accused of raping his 13-year-old niece while his children slept in an upstairs bedroom last July.

Robert Dean Rhoden, 33, owner of R & R Electrical Contractors Inc., 3105 West Industrial Ave., is charged with raping the girl on a couch in his Greentree Estates home in the early morning hours of July 19.

In a trial that got under way Wednesday morning, the Fort Worth girl haltingly gave the nine-man, three-woman jury this account of the events leading up to the alleged rape:

She was visiting relatives here this summer and had gone to Rhoden's house to see her cousins, ages 9 and 11, about 5 p.m. July 18. Other relatives, including Rhoden's sister, were present, and they sat around talking and drinking wine.

SHE DRANK two or three glasses of wine and Rhoden had drunk "close to a bottle" when he decided to go for a ride and she asked if she could accompany him because she was afraid he had had too much to drink.

They drove around for a while, then about 11 p.m. he stopped in an isolated area about 10 minutes from the house and began kissing her and removing her clothes. She said she didn't respond and in fact told him she wanted to leave. He apologized, saying "he couldn't help it for being a man."

She testified that he then took her to one westside club where she used the bathroom. They left and went to another club, leaving it after she couldn't produce proof of age. They went to a third club but found it closed. He then bought two bottles of wine at a convenience store and took her to his office.

They stayed at the office a while and then went for a ride, stopping in another isolated area off Cottonflat Road. She said there were a few houses nearby but no lights were visible. He took her clothes off again, removed his own clothing, and "started kissing me."

THE GIRL testified she was "confused as to what to do or say," but finally told him she wanted to leave. "He ignored me and was moving on top of me from side to side."

He eventually put his clothes back on and started driving around, offering to let her drive after she got dressed. Up to this time, according to the girl's testimony, there was no "penetration" — the legal definition of rape and a crucial point for the state to prove.

She told the jury she drove back to Rhoden's house and arrived there about 12:30 a.m. July 19. She said her cousins were asleep upstairs and no adults were present when he picked her up and laid her on the couch in the living room after she emerged from the bathroom.

She testified that he removed her clothes and took his off again. As they were lying there naked, he laid down on top of her and began "moving up and down."

In response to a question by Assistant District Attorney David Joers, the girl paused for several moments before nervously saying penetration had occurred on the couch and that "it hurt. It hurt real bad."

SHE SAID SHE complained of the pain but didn't cry for fear of waking her cousins. She also tesitified that she had cried earlier in the car. "He was kinda nice and said, 'Don't cry.'"

Later, however, he told her to "shut that mouth up" and warned her that if she told anyone what happened, people would think she was "crazy because he was my uncle."

After he fell asleep on the couch, she said she lay there a while, then got dressed and went to sleep in an upstairs bedroom. The girl testified that one time during the night Rhoden told her she just "grew up too fast."

The next morning she said she discovered what appeared to be seminal fluid in her underwear and between her legs. She showered and didn't tell anyone what happened until the next day, a Tuesday, when Rhoden's ex-wife Pam stopped by the house to pick up the girl's cousins.

The girl said she has "bad dreams" about the incident and no longer feels comfortable around men.

PAM RHODEN testified that the girl approached her in the kitchen, appeared concerned about being pregnant, and asked if her ex-husband had had a vasectomy. When the woman asked her why she wanted to know, the girl replied that "her Uncle Dean had raped her."

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Hal Brockett, the woman admitted there had been visitation and child support problems with Rhoden since their divorce four years ago, but denied that she had put the girl up to saying her uncle had raped her.

The woman said she took the girl to Dr. Walter S. Park's office that Tuesday, then drove her to the police station where the girl made a formal rape complaint — despite the fact that Dr. Parks said his examination failed to reveal conclusive evidence of "penile penetration."

The girl testified she had been advised by counselors at the Rape Crisis Center that it "would be best" to report the incident to police and that she, not her ex-aunt, made the decision to do so.

Under cross-examination by Brockett, the girl said she didn't tell Dr. Parks penetration had occurred because: "At the time I wasn't positive."

APPARENTLY alluding to the possibility that the girl had been coached after Parks' examination, Brockett asked what penetration meant and why she now believed it had occurred.

"It means to go inside," she stammered. "And I thought about (what he was doing) when he was laying on me."

She also admitted having "five or six swallows" of wine during the course of the night — in addition to the two or three glasses she had drunk earlier.

Parks, an obstetrician and gynecologist, testified that he examined the girl July 20 and found one small contusion at the opening of the vagina. "In my opinion, it only indicates trauma," he added. "I can't say what caused the contusion."

In contrast to earlier testimony by a nurse from Midland Memorial Hospital, Parks said he found no irregularities of the cervix and that the bleeding the nurse testified she had discovered in the cervical area during an examination July 21 could have been menstrual blood.

The nurse, Terry Smith, testified she had found several vaginal bruises and abrasions and, coupled with the cervical bleeding, concluded: "Something had penetrated the vagina all the way to the cervix."

She admitted under cross-examination, however, that something other than penile penetration could have caused the injuries and that menstruation could have been the reason for the blood she found.

Parks said his final conclusion was that "penile penetration was unlikely." But he also testified: "I could not rule out that she hadn't had (at least) slight penetration."

After both sides rested their cases late Wednesday afternoon — the defense doing so without calling Rhoden to the stand — Judge Vann Culp told the jury that summations would begin this morning and that he would instruct them on "the law applicable to this case" before they begin deliberations.

Body parts may not be human

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Body parts found floating in Lake Conroe near here may not have been human, a spokesman for the sheriff's office said here today.

Ed DeForest, the spokesman, said the parts, thought to be five neatly severed feet and four hands, have been sent to the Harris County Medical Examiner's office for testing.

"They appear to be human and we'll treat them as such until we know better," he said.

DeForest added, however: "A game warden has told me that when the paws of a bear are stripped down they have an amazing resemblance to human hands and feet."

A spokesman at the medical examiner's office in Houston said the body parts have not yet been examined, but are expected to be sometime today.

Divers at Lake Conroe, meanwhile, began searching the murky waters for other remains.

The body parts were found Wednesday afternoon under a bridge near Corithian Point, a fashionable subdivision 15 miles northwest of here, authorities said.

The grisly discoveries were being treated as a multiple homicide, said Montgomery County Sheriff's Capt. Art Collins, head of the detective division.

The mutilations looked like a "neat job," Collins said.

Divers will continue to look for other parts, and Sheriff Joe Corley called a 3 p.m. CDT news conference today to discuss the bizarre events.

Judging from the size of the feet, Graeter said, one victim appeared to be a male and one a female. He said authorities were unable to determine the sex of the third victim.

Graeter said the parts were "neatly severed at the ankles and wrists, almost as if surgically cut."

One officer who did not want to be identified said the fingertips had been cut off so the victims could not be identified through fingerprints. The officer said the dismemberments looked like the work of professional killers.

General Telephone Co. employees found a severed foot and hand floating in the water Wednesday afternoon and called sheriff's deputies.

Divers then found the other body parts, which were taken to the Harris County Medical Examiner's office in Houston. Graeter said the pieces may have been in the water eight to 10 hours.

Bearded youth allowed to return to high school

HOUSTON (AP) — Jagjit S. Jolly, a student who was expelled from high school for refusing to shave his beard, was readmitted today after officials agreed that growing facial hair was part of the youth's Sikh religion.

Jolly, a 16-year-old junior, was expelled last Friday after several confrontations with Eisenhower High School principal Roy Smith, who had insisted that the youth shave his beard.

Jolly said he explained that it was against the tenets of his religion, but the youth quoted the school official as saying "It doesn't matter. Rules are rules."

Aldine Independent School District superintendent M. O. Campbell said Wednesday that Jolly will be readmitted today.

"We're inviting him back," said Campbell.

Only minor injuries were reported when this 1967 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by Kenneth Leon Hellman of Wichita, Kans., struck a parked car in the 3900 block of Monty about 9:15 p.m. Wednesday. Police said Hellman was westbound at a high rate of speed and crossed the center line, causing the accident. He was ticketed for driving on the wrong side of the road, according to police.

Reagan defends rights record before black Republican group

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, making a bid for black support in an election year, is defending his administration's civil rights record while promising the Republican Party will reach out for black votes.

Speaking before a group of black Republicans Wednesday night, Reagan said critics who claim his administration has backed off civil rights enforcement are talking "just plain baloney."

"There is no room in the Republican Party for bigots and the record shows that we have been firm in protecting civil liberties since entering office nearly 20 months ago," the president told a receptive audience of about 1,300 at a National Black Republican Council fund-raising dinner.

Reagan was responding indirectly to a letter, made public over the weekend, from 33 advisers to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission that said the president is responsible for a "dangerous deterioration" in civil rights enforcement.

The letter charged that administration budget cuts and political appointments "guarantee the emasculation" of civil rights enforcement efforts.

Reagan also stated his often-repeated contention that his administration has "laid the groundwork for better economic times ahead..." He pointed to the increases in the leading economic indicators and the surges in the stock market along with decreases in inflation and interest rates.

Reagan said the nation's economic health was damaged by Great Society social programs in the 1960s when the government "began eating away at the underpinnings of the private enterprise system."

Reagan said blacks "would be appreciably better off" if the programs, begun under President Lyndon Johnson, had never been implemented. They created "a new kind of bondage" for millions of American, Reagan said, threatening "the character of our people."

Drilling specialist found innocent of theft charges

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

James Ike Wheeler, a former drilling specialist for Superior Oil Co., was found innocent Wednesday by a 142nd State District Court jury of charges that he had stolen approximately $5,000 from Superior in 1980.

"He was accused of selling those used (drilling) bits and keeping the money," said Assistant District Attorney Jim Rex, who prosecuted the case. "He had the buyers of the bits make the checks out to him and kept the money for himself," Rex said.

However, Wheeler, 52, maintained that he had been authorized to sell the bits and to use the proceeds for a company-approved employee party.

"It was my contention that he had permission from his boss (to sell the bits and to hold the proceeds)," said defense attorney Edward T. Garza, who noted that the boss "did not admit to that" in the trial.

Testimony in the trial indicated that Superior's policy in selling used bits was to get three bids on the bits. After that, the buyer would make the check for the bits out to Superior and forward the funds to Superior's Houston office.

"His (Wheeler's) only mistake," said Garza, "was that he kept the money too long." Garza said Wheeler, who was earning about $42,000 a year in Superior's employ, had agreed to turn the money over to Superior but the funds were refused. The theft indictment against Wheeler stemmed from an "internal investigation" of Superior, Garza said.

In turn, Garza said the criminal proceedings against Wheeler may have invited a civil suit.

"We're considering filing some kind of lawsuit for defaming my client's name in the community," Garza said. "I'm sure he'll probably be blackballed. His name's been defamed, and he'll never be accepted in the oil field again."

Garza said Wheeler had "refused to talk plea bargaining," which likely would have netted him a probated sentence had he pleaded guilty to the offense, and insisted on taking his case to trial before a jury.

The jury deliberated about four hours Wednesday before finding Wheeler "not guilty" of the offense.

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is not considering "at this moment" holding a "summit" meeting with minority leaders as requested by Civil Rights Commission Chairman Clarence Pendleton, White House Communications Director David Gergen said Wednesday.

Pendleton acknowledged that he had not been told that the president had agreed to holding the high-level meeting but had heard "through the grapevine" that Mr. Reagan was considering it.

But, Pendleton added, "I think this president needs to hear public policy from a minority point of view."

Gergen was asked about the president's attitude toward the meeting with minority representatives after a variety of news media reported that he had agreed to the black summit session at his Camp David retreat.

"The president did not agree to such a thing," Gergen said.

The communication's chief said the issue "was raised, but not agreed to" at a meeting with Pendleton.

Asked if it was possible the proposal would be accepted later, Gergen said, "It's not being considered at this moment."

Later in the day, Pendleton was asked about the summit before a meeting of the Civil Rights Commission.

He first emphasized that his proposal was for a minority summit, not just a meeting of blacks with the president. Although he had made the suggestion to the president, Pendleton said, "They get to pick the (minority) leaders. I'm not going to pick them."

When told of Gergen's statements, Pendleton shrugged and said, "That's their decision to make."

Judge halts U.S. funds cuts in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge has granted a temporary restraining order halting cuts in federal funds for Planned Parenthood of Utah by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Judge John Pratt said Wednesday he had signed the restraining order in District Court for the District of Columbia, Washington. He said he would hear Planned Parenthood's plea for a preliminary injunction Sept. 24.

Tuesday's decision halts the department's plans to dry up Planned Parenthood funding by Oct. 1, when the Utah State Health Department is to get a $566,801 grant to expand its own family planning services.

Planned Parenthood would lose $312,000, about 27 percent of its budget, if the move is allowed, said spokesman Michael Chulad.

He said 70 percent of the state residents who obtain subsidized family planning aid get it from Planned Parenthood.

At issue is the organization's provision of both family planning services and abortion counseling to minors without parental consent.

Utah law requires parental notification before birth control devices, counseling or family planning education can be given to minors.

The department order also affects the Park City Community Clinic, which provides family planning services to all, regardless of age, but not abortion counseling, said clinic director Diana Maxwell.

Late summer: Time to bring houseplants back indoors

By DX DENTON
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

While there are still plenty of warm, sunny days ahead, a look at the calendar reveals the awful truth: summer is just about over.

And that means it's time to start thinking about fall chores, in particular moving those houseplants back indoors form their summer vacation. Throughout the summer these plants have enjoyed lots of fresh air, sunlight, humidity, and fresh and beautiful breezes. For them, it was like a visit to their native tropical lands.

But that kind of weather is drawing to a close and it's time to start the process that will end with the plants returned, once again, to their more permanent homes indoors.

WHAT WE'D REALLY like to be able to do is simply pick up the plants, carry them back into the house, set them back in their "old home," and be through.

Unfortunatley, for many plants, the summer outdoors wasn't the vacation they anticipated. There are bug holes, broken limbs, some sunburn, some drying out, hidden insects and diseases, torn leaves and other problems. If some of these plants are not old family favorites, your solution might be the obvious one — thrown them out and replace them. But you can only do so much of that.

So make your goal the restoration of your vacationing houseplants. Follow a checklist of recommendations to see if you can get your favorites back into shape so they are ready to come back indoors.

START PUT BY STEELING yourself to the idea that some of them will have to be discarded; such as those that are ratty-looking, stringy, dried-out, brown-tipped, or badly sunburned. This may well have to include some old family favorites. Once you've made it a little easier do that to your old friends, we'll make it a little easier on you: set them aside. We may be able to save some of them by taking cuttings.

Once you've set those aside, take a good, long look at the plants that are left. Look for insects and insect damage: slugs, crickets, grubs, ants and ticks, all hidden in the soil; sowbugs, earwigs and centipedes, usually in damp spots, such as the plant's saucer; leaf miners and hoppers, springtails and many others challenging your supremacy right out in the open. To round out the scenario, let's not forget your year-round visitors: the white flies, mealybugs, aphids, spider mites and scales.

THAT DETAILED INSPECTION is a small price to pay for the pleasure we get from these plants through the long winter. So let's start our "back to home" movement by handpicking any insects or bugs you can see.

This is usually most effective with the largest of the creepy-crawlies. Once this has been completed, spray the entire plant and drench the soil in the pot with an all-purpose insecticide. Be sure you reach all parts of the plant. Use only the amounts recommended by the manufacturers.

If you're really worried about insects, this is a good time to change the soil. Carefully unpot each plant and gently wash the soil away from the roots, preferably outdoors with a hose. Use a slow, gentle, steady stream. When the soil has been removed from the roots, repot in a new or clean pot using sterilized soil.

ONE OF THE BEST TRICKS you can use, to make sure you haven't missed any pests on your plants, is to put them into an isolation cell. Simply take each plant, place it in a plastic bag and spray insecticide into the bag through a small opening. Seal the bag and let it stand overnight. When you take that plastic bag off, you can be sure there won't be any more pests left to bother your plant. In lieu of spraying, you could insert a piece of no-pest strip in the plastic bag. Before you try either one of these suggestions, make sure the plant to be treated can "take" this kind of treatment or chemical. Very tender plants can be ruined by the wrong chemicals. With insects eliminated, you can move on to the other things that need doing before plants come back inside.

Do some repotting. There isn't a better time for this chore. See which ones need larger pots. Remove the plant from its present pot. Never pull the plant or try to wiggle it out of the pot. Instead, turn it over onto the palm of your hand (your fingers should straddle the part coming out of the soil), and give the pot's bottom a good solid rap with your other hand. It will plop out into your hand.

PUT SOME SHARDS or pebbles into the bottom of a next-size-larger pot, put in a little soil, the plant, and then refill the pot with fresh soil. If you don't buy the premixed potting soil, make your own of equal parts of good top soil, or loam, peat moss and sand or vermiculite. If there are any damaged or obviously old roots in the root ball, clip them off before repotting.

If your plant's root system has grown thicker than you'd like it to be, or if you want to keep the plant small, slice off some of the root system with a sharp knife. Repot the plant using fresh soil, then trim off a proportionate amount of foliage. Don't do any top trimming on ferns or spider plants.

This is also an excellent time of year to give your returning plants a shot of fertilizer. This feeding should be smaller than the ones you have been giving throughout the summer months.

SOME FOOD IS REQUIRED by the plant, but since the growth rate will slow down as the amount of daylight decreases, less food will be needed. You still may want to feed your plants during the fal and winter months, but be sure it is a small feeding. That's about all the plants need and will tolerate. One of the best ways to feed houseplants, to be sure you are not overfeeding, is while you are watering. Instead of a single full feeding, give many smaller ones. A bit of liquid fertilizer every time you water will do much more for your plants than a single major feeding. No change for plant "indigestion" with this method, either.

If your plants have grown too large for their spots indoors, prune them back, cutting just above a new leaf bud or stem crotch. This trimming will give you better looking and more compact plants.

HANG ON TO THE CUTTINGS that come off these newly pruned plants. And remember the old family favorites you set aside? This is the time to take cuttings from those plants as well, so they can live on as new, fresh and sturdy old favorites.

Fill a tray with a moist material such as sand or perlite. Slice the stems of the cuttings at an angle to give the greatest area for rooting. Remove the lower leaves of the cutting if they will interfere with your setting the cutting into the moist medium. Treat with rooting hormone. Insert the cutting into the medium, slip the entire tray into a clear plastic bag and seal the bg tightly. Put the individual greenhouse or propagator into a warm, shady spot.

Allow the tray to remain there until new top growth indicates the plant has formed a good root system. Then enjoy your new freebies. Most plants can be propagated this way but, of course, there are some that cannot.

Apologetic fashion firm offers to provide year's scholarship

By KATHLEEN BIRD
AP Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — "What would New York be without Dior?" asked the ad by Christian Dior, the fashion and fragrance company.

The answer was "Newark," but officials in New Jersey's largest city didn't think it was very clever — even though the ad never ran after word of its wording leaked out.

So the company came to apologize Tuesday, bearing kind words and a gift — a one-year college scholarship for a local teen-ager.

Dior didn't want the city "to think we were against Newark," said Colombe Nicholas, president of the New York division of the Paris-based firm.

She presented the scholarship to Dyan Nelson, 16, a Newark high school senior who wants to pursue a career in fashion.

"I wanted to do something for the city," Ms. Nicholas told city council members who earlier lambasted Dior for the ad.

A revised version of the ad, with New York becoming "naked" without Dior, instead of "Newark," is scheduled to appear sometime this fall, said Ms. Nicholas.

Councilman Henry Martinez, who introduced the resolution to censure the company after he read about the proposed ad in July, wore a light blue Dior shirt with his polyester suit.

"It wasn't donated," Martinez said of his shirt.

Ms. Nicholas, whose company had sales of $214 million in the United States last year, said she believed Martinez "single-handedly" tried to find out if "Christian Dior loved Newark."

"The answer is 'yes,'" she said.

She said Dior regretted any embarrassment the firm may have caused Newark even though "we were accused of something that actually never took place."

Guerrero to talk at conference

Mrs. Rosa Guerrero of El Paso will be keynote speaker for the Hispanic Women's State Conference for 1982, which will begin Friday in the Holiday Inn Holidome.

Registration will be from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Guerrero is known nationally and internationally as a writer, educator, dance historian, consultant and film maker. Her film, "Tapestry," has appeared on nationwide PBS stations. She will do consultant work in oral languge development through the arts for the Midland Independent School District. She has received numerous awards for her work on brotherhood and cultural understanding. She taught 20 years in El Paso and has bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees. Currently she is directing her dance school in El Paso and directs the Rosa Guerrero International Folklorico.

A social hour with entertainment will close the Friday events.

Saturday, the conference will start with registration from 8 to 9 a.m. Opening remarks to the general audience at 9 a.m. will be followed by 10 workshops which will be held throughout the day. A luncheon and fashion show will be held from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. Martha Cotera of Austin will give the closing address at 3:45 p.m.

There will be music and dancing from 8 p.m. to midnight. Registration fee is $25 and may be paid at the door.

The conference, which is open to the public, is co-sponsored by the Human Relations Council and the Mexican American Advisory Council. Chairmen for the conference are Isabel Rey, Corina Hernandez, Maria Mata and the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Additional information may be obtained by calling 684-5866.

Hats needed in fashionable wardrobes

By JUDI HUNT
Hearst Feature Service

Just about every wardrobe is going to seem empty if there's not at least one fashionable topper in it this fall.

And that's OK with Larry Shiller, national fashion consultant for Betmar, one of the largest — and oldest, he says — American hat manufacturers for women.

Shiller's delighted to see the end of the hatless era of the '50s and '60s, when many women gave up hats because of their teased hair. "There were hats then, of course, because there's always been the 'hat lady' who loved the statement that's made when a hat is worn."

BUT WOMEN WILL NEED to know something about selecting and wearing hats, especially if they've not worn them.

It's appropriate to wear a hat anywhere, Shiller says. "There is no occasion when some sort of hat can't be worn to the office, out to dinner, to the theater, even to a picnic."

It is perfectly "all right, for example, to wear a hat while going on a job interview," Shiller says, "especially if you are applying for a job in an office. I think you'd find it a little unnecessary if you're looking for a service-type job."

He likes the idea of a job applicant wearing a hat "because a hat creates an illusion of confidence and of self-assurance. A woman carries herself differently when she's wearing a hat, because she feels better about herself.

"And yes, she can leave the hat on during the interview, unless she'd rather take it off. The etiquette for wearing a hat is that since it's part of a woman's outfit, she leaves it on, just as she would a scarf that's an accessory.

"The exception would be if it obstructs someone's view — say in a theater — or if she's on a bus where it might get jostled and damaged. And of course, she'd take the hat off in the office once she starts working."

THE TYPE OF HAT chosen for each situation is extremely important too, Shiller says. "You don't want to wear a frilly, veiled and extravagantly feathered hat when you're applying for a job, for instance. You'd pick something more tailored, like a fedora. The color doesn't necessarily have to be subdued, but it should coordinate with the oufit and also be flattering to the woman's complexion and hair coloring."

And the hat should take into consideration the woman's face shape and body build as well. "There is a style of hat for every woman," he insists. "It's a matter of finding out what looks best on you. Once you find the type of style for you, it's not difficult to find a wide range of hats — tailored or more dressy — that will go with almost any outfit."

HE DOES BELIEVE that certain types of hats look best on certain builds. "A woman of average to taller height can wear just about any style, whether it's medium or wider brim. She should, however, refrain from choosing very narrow brims because they tend to narrow her almost to a pinpoint at the top."

SHORTER WOMEN should avoid shallow rounded crowns because "that style tends to cut them off short. Instead, wear something like a fedora or a creased crown that gives the illusion of additional height," Shiller suggests.

"And the shorter woman is better off not trying to wear the cloche (the close-fitting hat was so popular with flappers in the '20s)."

Although the selection of hats can seem a little scary to the first-time millinery shopper, in fact there are really just three major looks for the fall season. "One is romantic, which is part of the whole 'Chariots of Fire' look," Shiller says.

Next is the dandy look, perfect for the fedora style worn with suits, vests, bow ties and the man-tailored designs women are donning on both coasts (and in the Midwest too, he says).

THE THIRD STYLE would be the dressy hat that is being paired frequently with the tuxedo look, which as you can see is going to be very strong this fall. These hats are being done in black and white combinations. In black they range in style from the little pillbox with veils; flowers and sequins to the tailored fedora with satin bands and rhinestone stick pins."

Shiller says women of all socio-economic levels and ages will be wearing hats this fall, from "women in their early 20s all the way up to the 80-year-old grandmother."

ONE REASON is that a hat pulls together an outfit and is fun to wear, without being a major investment, Shiller says. "While hats aren't as inexpensive as they used to be, and nothing is, they can retail from $25 to around $45 — although there are some milliners whose hats go from $100 to $300.

"So a woman can find a number of styles to complete her hat wardrobe without investing a tremendous amount of money. And if she buys reasonably conservative hat styles, they never go out of fashion. So the hat you buy this year can be worn for several years."

If, that is, you take care of your hat.

"Always place the hat on a peg or head of some sort to keep it in shape. If that's not possible, tissue should be stuffed in the crown. Never place on a flat surface or the brim can flatten or roll up. Stuff enough paper in it so it won't rest flat."

PLACE THE HAT in a box or cover it with tissue or plastic to keep dust off. Periodically brush the hat lightly with a very soft brush, "a soft bristle paint brush one or two inches wide will do."

If it rains, try to protect the hat in some way. "If a hat gets totally drenched, it's unlikely that it can be salvaged. If it just gets a light misting, it shouldn't hurt the hat to any great extent.

"But try to blot water up as soon as possible," Shiller advises.

The Happiness Crew will be docking at Kids Only from 10 am to 2 pm. Come by for free balloons and Happiness Crew membership pins. All Happiness Crew merchandise will be on sale all day.

When it comes to teeth, anything goes

By A. KENT MACDOUGALL
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Through the ages, men and women have searched for a magic mixture to make their teeth cleaner, whiter, sexier and pain-free. And almost nothing has been too awful to be tried at least once.

Long before the invention of the toothbrush, ancient Greeks and Romans scrubbed their teeth with bits of cloth coated with the burnt and pulverized heads of mice, moles and rabbits on the theory that contact with these strong-toothed animals would make human teeth firm. Other tooth cleansers of the day contained pumice, iron rust, the ashes of dogs' teeth mixed with honey, and even one's own urine.

Such ineffective and even dangerous dentifrices would seem to have no place in a technologically advanced society in which science has long since overpowered superstition. Yet long after the invention of the toothbrush — and until the U.S. Government banned their use within the last dozen years — modern Americans brushed with toothpastes containing hexachlorophene, an antibacterial agent so potent its misuse as a disinfectant proved fatal to babies; chloroform, a flavor enhancer that can cause cancer; and cyclamate, a synthetic sweetener that is likewise carcinogenic. Toothpaste tubes made of lead leached the poison into the toothpaste itself. And abrasives so harsh they damaged tooth surfaces were common.

Even though nearly all brands on the market today are sweetened with saccharin, a suspected carcinogen, toothpaste industry experts insist that dangerous substances have been removed and that no toothpaste is now hazardous.

Be that as it may, there is no doubt that the toothpaste industry has improved its products in recent years and is demonstrating more restraint in promoting them. Advertising seems more responsible, with fewer exaggerated claims. And major brands are more alike than ever.

WITH FUNCTIONAL improvements harder to come by, manufacturers have been shifting their attention to nonfunctional innovations in flavor and form, notably, clear gels instead of conventional opaque pastes. As these line extensions are force-fed into already congested retail outlets, slower-selling brands with more modest advertising and promotion budgets are being squeezed off store shelves.

The escalation of marketing costs, while growth in consumer demand is slowing, has pinched industry profits. Procter & Gamble Co., Colgate-Palmolive Co., Lever Brothers Co. and Beecham Inc., which among them control more than 90 percent of toothpaste sales, are feeling the effects of sharper competition in a mature market that is nearing the saturation point in household penetration.

Getting the toothbrushing public to use more toothpaste depends largely on increasing public confidence in the product's effectiveness. And this would be easier if the dental profession itself had more confidence in how toothpastes work. But more than 20 years after the American Dental Association endorsed Crest as an effective decay preventative, the ADA still is not sure just how Crest and other fluoride toothpastes work. And while there is no doubt that fluoride toothpastes work on children, there still is almost no clinical evidence that they reduce tooth decay in adults with healthy gums and normal salivary flow.

Although one would never know it from the insistent TV commercials and other ads on which toothpaste manufacturers lavished $161 million last year, fluoridated water actually is much more effective than fluoridated toothpaste in preventing tooth decay, at least in children. Studies show that school children who drink fluoridated water have 50 percent to 65 percent fewer cavities, whereas regular brushing with a fluoride toothpaste cuts cavities 20 percent to 30 percent.

Dr. Howard L. Ward, a periodontist and assistant dean of New York University's College of Dentistry, says that adults derive little or no benefit from drinking fluoridated water because after teeth are fully formed in adolescence, systemic transmission of fluoride to the teeth declines sharply and the fluoride no longer becomes part of the structure of the teeth.

On the other hand, the ADA maintains that applying fluoride topically to the teeth with a fluoridated dentifrice helps protect adults against caries, although the protection is only to the tooth surface and is only short-term. In addition, fluoride may reduce the level of bacteria in an adult's mouth. "So as a preventive measure, one should use a fluoridated toothpaste," Ward concludes.

TO BE SAFER still, people should brush their teeth or at least rinse their mouth after each meal to wash away sugary food particles, brush or scrape the top of their tongue to reduce the level of bacteria in the mouth, and run dental floss between the teeth and under the gums where no toothbrush can reach. "Dental floss is more important than the dentifrice," Ward says.

Some dentists continue to recommend salt and baking soda (sodium bicarbonate) as a dentifrice for their patients. And the American Dental Associaton accepts Arm & Hammer baking soda as a mildly abrasive alternative to toothpaste. However, the ADA notes, "Surveys have shown that most people object to brushing without a pleasant-tasting toothpaste."

People who do not like the sweet, minty taste of toothpastes and find baking soda messy, can usually brush their teeth clean without any dentifrice, experts say. A toothbrush and water alone are usually enough to remove plaque, the sticky film that forms continually on teeth and generates caries-causing acids through bacterial action on sugar-containing food.

However, people who drink coffee, tea, grape juice or red wine, eat iron-rich foods, or smoke are prone to unsightly yellow-brown stains on their teeth. To maintain stain-free teeth, an estimated one in five adults needs to brush several times a day with an abrasive in order to cut through the stain and plaque and remove the invisible film that forms continuously on teeth as the enamel absorbs proteins in the saliva, providing the surface on which stain and plaque accumulate.

Experts agree that a toothpaste should be no more abrasive than need be to clean the stains from teeth. Instead of polishing teeth and making them smoother and less receptive to plaque, an abrasive that is too gritty can actually dull and even abrade teeth. The danger is not so much to the hard enamel surface, although even that can be scratched, but to the softer dentin and cementum. These bony structures of the tooth root normally are protected by tooth enamel or by the gums, but often become exposed in adults through recession of the gums.

OVERLY ENTHUSIASTIC brushers using a hard-bristled toothbrush and a back-and-forth sawing motion along the base of the teeth, rather than the soft brush and swirling motion recommended by dentists, have been known to wear V-shaped notches in the exposed dentin along the gumline, and to damage plastic fillings.

Harsh abrasives, including even pumice, used to be common, particularly in tooth powders and in toothpastes claiming to "whiten" teeth. The concerned ADA commissioned a laboratory to test the level of abrasivity of dentifrices, and in 1970 published the results for each brand. This sparked a general reduction in abrasivity, and today the ADA reports it knows of no highly abrasive dentifrices among the three dozen or so brands on the market.

Manufacturers of most major brands have replaced abrasive as the leading ingredient with a humectant such as sorbitol or glycerin. For instance, Lever Brothers packs Aim with 67 percent sorbitol and only 10 percent abrasive. Both sorbitol and glycerin provide a syrupy medium for the other ingredients, add to the sweetness already provided by saccharin, and enhance the flavor, which the formerly high levels of abrasive tended to smother.

Among low-abrasive, high-humectant toothpastes, the sweetest and strongest flavored are the gels. Unlike conventional toothpastes, which are creamy, almost pudding-like in consistency, clear gels melt and disperse quickly in the mouth.

The first gel toothpaste, introduced by Lever Brothers in 1970, was Close-up. With a translucency that consumers generally associated with mouthwash, a novel cinnamon-type flavor, and an advertising claim of fresher breath and whiter teeth, Close-up captured the kiss-conscious set's fancy and started a stampede toward gels, which now command 50 percent of the market.

The sweet, strongly flavored gels that have supplanted conventional toothpastes in millions of medicine chests strike many conscientious brushers as frivolous. Yet there are unsweetened, unflavored fluoridated gels that especially cavity-prone people can have applied at the dentist's office or use themselves at home. However, these gels require a prescription and are not considered toothpastes because they contain no abrasive.

As manufacturers after the war replaced the small amount of soap that had been a traditional ingredient in toothpaste with synthetic detergents, they attempted to endow these foaming agents with revolutionary properties. Sodium N-lauroyl sarcosinate, which subsequently was found to irritate mucous membranes, was the fancifully named Gardol in Colgate that "fights tooth decay all day ... with one brushing." Sodium lauryl sulfate was the "powerful decay fighter" WD-9 in Ipana, as well as the Irium in Pepsodent that "fights tooth decay."

Reasons for doctors' rates varies

By DON BRANNING
Hearst Feature Service

Competition tends to standardize physicians' fees, but there are variances between doctors, neighborhoods and regions. And for no discernible reason of background or ability, a few doctors charge extremely high fees.

That's the diagnosis, furnished mostly by insurance companies, for the patient who may wonder whether there is a rationale for what the doctor charges. The doctor bases his or her fee mostly on what the insurance carriers will pay and what his or her colleagues are charging, say the insurers.

Doctors' fees are higher on the West Coast than they are anywhere else in the country. A 1980 survey by the American Medical Association showed that a general practitioner in New England charged $20 for an initial office visit. In the East-North Central part of the country, it was $19; in the Western Mountain region, $21; and on the Pacific Coast, $26.

The differences in fees were similar for the most widely practiced specialties. The average surgical charge for an appendectomy was $463 in New England, $423 in the East-North Central area, $474 in the Western Mountain region, and $601 on the Pacific Coast.

A spokesman for Blue Shield said the insurance carrier does not want "high fliers" among its physician members.

"These are guys — with nothing in their background or abilities to warrant it — who will charge $200 for an initial office visit," he said. None of the other insurance carriers will pay such inflated fees, either, but another insurance investigator said, "Sometimes these guys will set an inflated fee and tell the patient, 'We'll fight the insurance company for it.'"

Dr. Earl Maile, medical review officer for Blue Cross, said that charges for most physicians' services will fall within a standard range. The insurance companies base their payments largely on what they call the "usual, customary and reasonable" charge for a service, based on averages.

DEAR ABBY

CB'er comes in loud and clear

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a neighbor with a home-based CB radio. He talks with people along the Gulf Coast and in Canada. He is on his CB some mornings, all afternoon and most nights. He loves the theme from "The Lone Ranger" and plays it often. How do I know? Because it comes over my television set.

I watch TV for my own entertainment, not to hear this man. Don't get me wrong, he's an upstanding citizen with a charming wife and family, but my set isn't the only one that his CB interferes with. Almost everyone in the neighborhood knows when he's on because we hear everything he says.

Many of my favorite TV shows have been interrupted, which frustrates me no end. What a man does in his own home is his own business, but when it comes into MY home, it becomes my business.

What should I do? — TIRED OF "15-4" IN CHARLESTON, S.C.

DEAR TIRED: If you haven't already complained directly to your neighbor, you should. If you have but to no avail, either call or write to your LOCAL Federal Communications Commission office and ask someone there to please send you the booklet, "How to Identify and Resolve Radio-TV Interference Problems." The booklet offers tips on how to correct this interference. (Perhaps your set is at fault.)

If the problem persists, write to: The F.C.C., 1919 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20554.

DEAR ABBY: This isn't exactly an earthshaking problem, but it's one I'm sure many people have had to wrestle with. Friends keep giving me gifts — little knickknacks that should be displayed. I love these people and don't want to offend them, but my house is beginning to look like an arts and crafts shop. There is also the problem of having to keep them dusted. Add that to the fact that I have a small apartment and dislike clutter.

Is it necessary for me to keep all these gifts on display indefinitely? My wee apartment already looks like I'm ready to hold an auction. — ENOUGH ALREADY IN PALM BEACH

DEAR ENOUGH: Accept each gift graciously, display it for a while, then put it away. Your surroundings should please YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I asked one of my closest friends to be my bridesmaid, and she immediately said, "No, I can't afford the dress." A week passed, and I called and told her I would pay for the dress. Then she hemmed and hawed and asked, "Are you really going to have a formal church wedding?" I said, "Yes, of course."

Then she asked, "Won't you feel hypocritical having a wedding like that after living with your fiance openly for two years?"

I told her, no, I would not feel hypocritical. Then she came right out and said she couldn't be my bridesmaid because she didn't think I deserved to have a church wedding with a gown and veil and bridesmaids.

I felt hurt, angry, and shocked that she would sit in judgment of me. (She is not exactly a saint herself, if you know what I mean.)

Should I invite this girl to my wedding? — BRIDE DOWN IN UPLAND, NEB.: Someone said, "Health is the greatest wealth." And may I add, " — and the least appreciated until it's threatened."

DEAR BRIDE: A bride usually invites friends and relatives to her wedding. This young woman doesn't seem to qualify in either category.

Drugs overused to treat high blood pressure, doctor says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Too many Americans with borderline cases of hypertension are given drugs to treat the condition, a prominent researcher says.

Dr. Norman M. Kaplan told a conference co-sponsored by the Department of Health and Human Services on Monday that the widely used estimate that 60 million Americans suffer from high blood pressure is artificially high and that drug therapy is indiscriminately being given to many who do not need it.

Kaplan, in a leadoff speech to a conference on nutrition and blood-pressure control, called for "a more cautious, less evangelistic, less aggressive posture toward both the diagnosis and treatment of the 'silent killer.'"

Kaplan, of the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, said evidence from mass clinical trials in the United States and Australia suggest that people with mild cases should try such non-drug therapies as sodium restriction, weight reduction, relaxation and isotonic exercise to bring blood pressure down.

'Inversion boots' leave many people just hanging around

By GAIL ROSENBLUM
Hearst Feature Service

SAN ANTONIO — Many people are putting a little swing into their lives these days and claim to be feeling great about it, though skeptics are waiting for what might be called the pendulum effect.

The swingers are using "gravity inversion systems" which, quite simply, leave them hanging upside down. Users of the contraptions in places from hospitals to health clubs claim better blood circulation, relief of back pain and firmer stomach muscles.

Carl Sackett, owner of Mr. Health of Texas, said the contraptions — boots on a hanging bar over reclining stretchers — have been around for years, but gained popularity recently through extensive publicity.

He said one of the most common systems is the "inversion" or "gravity" boots. The boots cost about $80 and are attached to a $20 bar that is wedged in a door frame.

"There's a hook on the front of the boots," explained Sackett. "First, you attach the bar to a door frame. Then you chin yourself up to hook the boots into the bar or you can hoist yourself up with the aid of a rope, making it into a loop and using it as a stepping stone."

Elia Palmieri, co-owner of Mercy Medical Equipment here, said her customers are mostly older persons with back problems and younger persons wanting to avoid similar aches and pains.

"The inversion boots are like reversing gravity," Palmieri said. "Gravity pulls you down. That's why people have pot bellies and saggy chins. This system cleans the body out and provides better circulation."

When the back gets compressed, she said, the disc starts shortening, which is why people shrink with age. "The bar and boots allow the disc to stretch out and it helps alleviate pinched nerves."

Palmieri said she prefers to follow the preventive route. "We like to keep people healthy. The boots are safe and comfortable. It feels really good to hang upside down.

"But you shoudn't do it after you eat," she cautioned, "because you will get nauseous."

Sackett carries another form of the contraption, a back swing which he says stretches the body and puts it in traction by means of one's own body weight. Cost is about $350, although more elaborate systems run as high as $800.

"It's like you're on a teeter-totter, strapped in so you won't fall off. By guiding with your arms, you can balance to be totally or partially inverted," Sackett said.

"The system, which is adjustable to all heights and weights, also helps to realign the organs. People over 60, after walking upright all their lives, tend to start pushing everything down," he said.

Chiropractor Dr. James Hogsed said he bought an inversion system for himself about four months ago, "to see for myself if it works before I start recommending it to my patients." Hogsed uses a system much like the one Sackett carries, describing it as a "trampoline." Cost is $395.

"I lie on it and my ankles are automatically locked in," he said. "It's a system of counterbalance where you can go back very slowly, completely or alternating."

Hogsed said he uses the system every night when he comes home from work, for about three to five minutes, "because as a chiropractor, I'm bent over all day long. It's very relaxing and it helps greatly with the circulatory system.

"It does have therapeutic value, as it decreases compression on the disc in the lower back," Hogsed said.

But Bernie LaReau, trainer for the University of Texas-San Antonio Athletics Department, isn't quite sure people should hang at all.

"We feel that Families in Action will be a helpful step toward strenthening the importance of the family unit. Keeping the parents and community informed about the positive and negative influences on our children, will be a helpful tool to us in our most important role as parents."

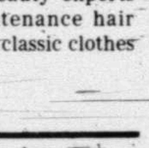
AT WIT'S END

American way of dieting



By ERMA BOMBECK

I was watching a TV starlet (who shall remain nameless) on a talk show the other afternoon and when the host asked her how she had lost all her weight she said, "I ate less."

I dropped everything and ran for a pencil and paper to take down what she ate.

When I got back the host was saying, "How does it work?" She said, "I just eat less food than my body can burn up."

I could have screamed. What kind of advice is that? Does she think Americans are stupid? We've known that for years. What we really want to hear is how we can lose weight and still eat everything and as much of it as we always did. I want someone to tell me what I can have from list A and list B. I want to measure food that I hate on scales and suffer. I want to feel disgust and guilt when I put sugar on my grapefruit. I want a diet that is so dramatic and you lose weight so fast, you have to put a belt on your underwear.

Five out of five Americans go on a diet every Monday. You know why? Because everyone respects a dieter. Dieting books have outsold sex manuals for the last decade. And of 200 million Americans, there is not one who admits to being a perfect weight.

Dieters are the modern-day heroes and heroines. And why shouldn't they be? They staple their ears, wire their mouths shut, go to overweight camps, overpriced spas, take pills and candies to curb appetites, take tucks in their tummies and undergo hypnosis.

They hook their vacuum sweeper bags to silicone jump suits, knead their cellulite, wrap themselves in chamois soaked in herbs, drink water until their liver floats and change fruits every 15 minutes and dance.

To eat less? It's unnatural.

Besides, eating sensibly would only tarnish the memory of those sainted people who starved courageously with Drs. Stillman, Pritkin and Atkins and stopped off at those calorie-starved cities of Scarsdale, Beverly Hills and New York.

I stared at the TV screen and said out loud, "You don't know nothin' 'bout dieters, Miss Starlet. They exist on technology. They want to believe the ads about a pill that turns fat into water and flushes it out of your body by the gallon. They want to believe the stories that say, 'Yes, Virginia, there is a starch burner that allows you to eat pasta until you faint.'

"Eat less! Maybe if you could list something that we could mimeograph and pass around the office . . . it might fly."

Overbuying causes waste of food

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Large packages of food are generally a better buy than small amounts, but if the food can't be used quickly enough it isn't a bargain, says Barbara Brown, Extension food specialist at Oklahoma State University.

Since more than half of U.S. households have only one or two persons, she points out, such families should consider availability of storage before investing in a large quantity of food. Freeze leftover meats if they won't be used within two days, she advises.

Chinese compete with Westerners for china market

JINGDEZHEN, China (AP) — The ancient Chinese city that gave the world chinaware and won renown for making the emperors' porcelains now finds itself struggling to compete for the Western market in fine dinnerware.

The imperial kilns are gone from Jingdezhen, 100 miles northeast of Nanchang in southeast China's Jiangxi province. But the porcelain industry still employs about 50,000 of the city's 250,000 people. Smoke from coal-fired kilns often blackens the sky and handcarts carrying clay and china fill the streets.

China traces its ceramics back to the Han Dynasty (206 B.C.-A.D. 221), but Jingdezhen began making what we know as porcelain in the Sung Dynasty (960-1280) and gained prominence as the main imperial kiln in the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644).

JINGDEZHEN PRODUCED great amounts of porcelain and was at its peak in the years when the West was making its first extensive contacts with China, so what the world knows as "china" came from Jingdezhen.

One still can buy good copies of the exquisite blue and white Chinghua glaze vases made for Ming emperors. One of the originals recently sold for nearly $1.5 million at auction in Britain, say researchers here, who point out that cost was no object to the emperors, either.

But the art market is limited, and Jingdezhen is pinning some of its development hopes on winning a bigger share of the dinnerware market dominated by English bone china and more recent products turned out by adaptable Japanese makers.

"We have confidence we can do what Japan did," said Meng Xianliang, an engineer with the Jiangxi Provincial Ceramic Industry Co.

CHINA HAS CHEAP labor and abundant material and, after all, china "is our great invention," Meng said.

He said Jingdezhen produces about 280 million pieces of porcelain worth about $105.3 million each year, and about half is exported.

In the Ming Dynasty, when exports were prohibited, foreign sales were lucrative enough to make the risks worthwhile, said Zhen Li, director of the Jingdezhen Ceramic Museum.

Chinaware was put in baskets and covered with beans which then were watered, and the resulting bean sprouts formed the cushiony packing material, she said.

Now export hopes lie with companies like Universe Chinaware Co., a factory with nearly 2,700 workers that is like a small city with its own hospital, shops, theaters, library and some housing.

FAN PU, THE FACTORY manager, said it recently began selling dinner sets in the United States.

Among its products is a 45-piece set for eight, with decoration made to order, selling at the factory for about $42.

Last year, the company made profits of $395,000 and, after turning over a large portion to the state, kept $63,150 under a new policy intended to provide Chinese factories with greater incentives, Fan said.

That translates into bonuses for the workers who, Fan said, make an average wage of about $30 a month.

The products move down assembly lines and, after shaping and glazing, are put in giant oil-fired brick kilns 280 feet long.

In contrast, there is the "old kiln," a 2-year-old factory dedicated to preserving methods passed down over the centuries in this city that grew up around large deposits of kaolin, a very pure white clay necessary for the creation of fine, hard porcelain.

IT HAS A WOOD-BURNING kiln where the correct temperature, about 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit, is determined by a veteran kiln master who spits through a small window.

Its workshops are old Ching Dynasty (1644-1911) and Ming Dynasty-style buildings moved to the site from other Jingdezhen locations where they faced demolition.

The factory's 400 workers range from 78-year-old artisans with a half-century's experience, to 14-year-old apprentices whose hands are suitably flexible to learn how to shape the clay, Xiong said.

All work is done by hand and the products copy old styles, right down to the name of the reigning emperor painted on the bottom.

They sell for as much as $15,790 for a 60-inch-tall vase, Xiong added.

FOR A CITY DEVOTED to traditional art, the turbulent, radical Cultural Revolution of 1966-1976 hit hard with its attack on anything old and its suspicion of artists.

Factory directors said some artists left when it became dangerous even to paint something like tigers on vases.

At a time when Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung was idolized as the sun in the east, they said, a tiger with an obvious eastward background would be denounced as symbolizing a "devouring of the sun." An equally dangerous westward background would be seen as depicting the sun in decline, they added.

One artist landed in trouble for painting a tiger between two trees, they said. Political zealots said the painting was in praise of Lin Piao, the former defense minister who allegedly died in a plane crash in 1971 after failing in an attempt to assassinate Mao.

THEY REASONED that the Chinese character for "lin," meaning forest, is an ideograph depicting two trees. "Piao" means young tiger.

Huang Linyuan, director of the Jingdezhen Art Porcelain factory, said many of the veterans have come back to work now that Mao and the Cultural Revolution have been replaced by Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping and his modern, industrial goals. And the returning veterans are teaching apprentices, often their own sons and daughters, said Huang.

The Cultural Revolution also caused problems for the Sculpture Porcelain Factory, which turns out figures of characters in Chinese history, legend, religion and mythology.

MUCH OF ITS business depends on export, said director Xiong Gangru, and foreigners were not interested in buying that period's mandatory depictions of revolutionary workers, peasants and soldiers.

Creighton University basketball player Kevin Ross starts class earlier this week with 7th and 8th graders at Chicago's Westside Prepatory School. The 7-foot, 9-inch student said he wants to learn the basics he missed in high school and college. The school is run by Marva Collins, who gained a reputation for teaching students who found it difficult to learn.

Basketball star returns to high school

CHICAGO (AP) — A 23-year-old man who spent four years in college on an athletic scholarship has gone back to elementary school to learn the basics.

Kevin Ross, who is 6-foot-9 and played center and forward at Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., said he slid by in school on his athletic abilities.

He started school Tuesday with seventh- and eighth-graders at Marva Collins' Westside Preparatory School.

"I'm here to catch up," he said.

Ross said he needs to learn the basic skills he missed at Creighton and at Wyandotte High School in Kansas City, Kan.

"My reading is about 65 percent," he said. "My spelling is about 40 percent. And reading comprehension, I can't get a percentage on."

Westside Prep, which specializes in teaching youngsters who've been given up for lost educationally, has 244 students, mostly pre-schoolers through eighth-graders.

It was founded eight years ago by Ms. Collins, who called Ross' motives "very admirable." She said he hoped to "make up in one year what he wasn't able to do in four years."

The books on his desk Tuesday included an introduction to algebra, Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle," Alexander Pushkin's "Little Tragedies," a college dictionary and a college entrance exam handbook.

Ross said he wants to be a teacher, as he did when he entered Creighton. The university is paying his tuition and a small living allowance, Ross said.

Ross injured his knee during his junior year. He said the injury has healed, but he doesn't plan to play serious basketball for awhile.

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AFP) — The Afghan government intends to draft all adult males between 16 and 55 into a civil defense organization that will relieve war-weary regular troops from patrol and guard duty, Western diplomatic sources here said earlier this week.

The diplomats said an official document circulated secetly in the Afghan capital maps out government plans to mobilize all the country's men, starting with Kabul and extending to the entire country by March, into a civil defense corps under the authority of the Defense Ministry.

Draftees would be assigned night patrol and guard duties to allow regular troops, drained through fighting and desertions, to be devoted entirely to combating the Afghan resistance, the sources said.

Conservatives say control of emissions costs too much

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulation of auto emissions is reducing pollution, but the control devices are costing consumers more than they're worth, according to a report sponsored by a conservative think tank.

Lawrence J. White, an economics professor at New York University who conducted the study for the American Enterprise Institute, said it is costing billions of dollars each year to clean up the emissions.

White's report, released Tuesday, says the 14-year program to reduce auto emissions now adds $1,400 to the cost of each car, averaged over the life of the car.

The figure includes the cost of the devices, maintenance expenses, and extra fuel needed to operate them, White says.

'Pops in the Plaza' to be held soon

The annual Midland-Odessa Symphony's "Pops in the Plaza" is scheduled for noon Sept. 23. The concert will be held in Midland at the First National Bank's plaza downtown.

The lunchtime concert has become a favorite of audiences and the orchestra alike. Music featured this year will include "Chariots of Fire," the theme from "M*A*S*H," "Rose Garden," as well as an old-fashioned sing-a-long. Also, The Thouvenel String Quartet will make a special appearance.

Season subscription tickets for this year's concert season, which go on sale Wednesday at the Symphony offices at Terminal, will be available for purchase at the Pops in the Plaza concert.

For more information contact the symphony at 563-0921.

Youth orchestra to hold auditions

Auditions for the West Texas Youth Orchestra will be held Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Midland-Odessa Symphony's rehearsal hall at Terminal.

Conductor for this year's orchestra will be Charles Nail. The youth orchestra was formed last year to provide young musicians with an opportunity to perform with other youth in the area. Students are welcome to audition regardless of age or grade.

For more information call 1-362-6039 or 682-0241.

Around 12 exhibitors, including several local dealers, are expected to participate in the show. Items include juke boxes, china dolls, quilts and furniture.

All items are reported to be at least 100 years old or collectable in nature.

Ballet company to hold auditions

The Permian Civic Ballet Company is holding auditions Saturday for the company and for the December presentation of "Nutcracker."

The auditions will be held at 3320 N. Big Spring St. In addition to dancers, the company is looking for men to act in the first act of "Nutcracker."

Summer Mummers meeting postponed

No new date has been set at this time.

Burton guest stars on 'The Fall Guy'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The call sheet for the ABC series "The Fall Guy" listed the guest star as "Beyond Reason" and the character name as "Burton."

But at 20th Century-Fox Studios when the actor showed up, his name was really Richard Burton. The call sheet listing was to keep visitors from swarming the sound stage to see Burton.

Television industry congratulates itself with Emmys

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — The television industry gets to pat itself on the back Sunday night, when ABC presents coast-to-coast "thank yous" on the Emmy Award show. Here are our choices. Thankfully, the acceptance speeches will be short.

Outstanding Drama Series: "Hill Street Blues" is writing the book on how a soap opera can be powerful, poignant, funny, sexy and dramatic. Nothing on TV comes close. All other cops on TV rinse out a pale blue. "Lou Grant, canceled by CBS, may get some sentimental votes. "Fame" is the year's best newcomer.

Outstanding Comedy Series: "M*A*S*H." The Korean War will end this season after 11 years. Throughout, "M*A*S*H" has kept the patients and one-liners going. Despite its 1950s setting, "M*A*S*H" stays fresh with insights into human struggles, strengths and weaknesses. Won't ABC be embarrassed if "Taxi," canceled by ABC and picked up by NBC, wins? "Love, Sidney" is top new sitcom.

Outstanding Limited Series: "Town Like Alice" was THE dramatic love story of the year, the two movies about Prince Charles and Lady Di notwithstanding. Public TV dominates this category, with four of the contenders, including the funniest series, "Flickers." Only network nominee is "Marco Polo."

Outstanding Drama Special: "Skokie" made the events and divergent perspectives from the Nazis' march come alive. Danny Kaye, in his first dramatic role for TV, truly is "multitalented."

Outstanding Variety, Music or Comedy Program: "SCTV Network" was a winner every time out, and it needed to be, arriving in the late, late-night Slim pickings elsewhere, although "Night of 100 Stars" — with actually more than 200 stars — may have enough invitees to pad the voting box.

Outstanding Information Series: The networks also left this field to public television. Something about priorities. Tough choice between "Creativity With Bill Moyers" and "Middletown," which pointed its cameras at Muncie, Ind., and photographed a nation. Edge to "Middletown."

Outstanding Lead Actor in a Dramatic Series: Ed Asner ("Lou Grant") has alienated too many voters with his political stands, so that leaves it open for Daniel J. Travanti of "Hill Street Blues," whose Capt. Frank Furillo, the latest sex symbol, pulls off toughness and tenderness convincingly.

Outstanding Lead Actress in a Dramatic Series: The object of some of that tenderness is Veronica Hamel (Joyce Davenport). When she cried or went through a career crisis, we believed. And, when she cuddled up to Pizza Man in bed, it looked like they were playing for keeps.

Outstanding Lead Actor in a Comedy Series: Another difficult call. Alan Alda in "M-A-S-H" is the wise-cracking medic who sometimes lets a feeling out. Judd Hirsch in "Taxi" expresses a few more emotions and is our pick, although Hal Linden may get the sentimental vote because "Barney Miller" ended its long run.

Outstanding Lead Actress in a Comedy Series: Carol Kane, who will be a regular this year on "Taxi," was better at her dialect than Andy Kaufman, and he invented the language. If she wins, let's hope she says "Tank you bery much." Swoosie Kurtz held her own against Tony Randall in "Love, Sidney."

Outstanding Lead Actor in a Limited Series: Mickey Rooney in "Bill" was so good as a retarded man that he made us forget how childish he can be in real life. And that takes some real acting. Anthony Andrews and Jeremy Irons will split the "Brideshead Revisited" faction.

Outstanding Lead Actress in a Limited Series: Wracked by the cancer that would kill her, Ingrid Bergman gave a courageous, beautifully acted performance. She was "Golda Meir."

ENTERTAINMENT

Returning this year for his fourth year as conductor is Dr. Stanley Engebretson. Chorale membership is now close to 80.

Other audition times can be arranged by making an appointment with Dr. Stanley Engebretson, the chorale's director. No solos are required for auditions.

This year's chorale season begins in November with the World Premiere of "In After Time" by John David Earnest, a native Odessan now living and working in New York City. Also on the first program will be Poulenc's "Gloria," Vaughan Williams' "Five Musical Notes," and other works.

In March the chorale will present "The Glory of Venice," an evening in which the audience will be surrounded by sound created by the chorale, a brass section and an organ. Also featured will be the works of Gabrieli in an antiphonal setting.

Other chorale activities include an annual Christmas concert, featuring traditional carols and other favorites and the season's grand finale, the Verdi "Requiem."

For more information call the symphony office at 563-0921.

Gospel music award-winner to perform in Midland Saturday

Cynthia Clawson, winner of the Dove Award for Gospel Music's Top Female Vocalist in 1980 and 1981, will make a one-night stop in Midland during her current East to West Coast tour of the United States.

Miss Clawson will perform Saturday at the First Baptist Church. She will be accompanied by a 10-piece orchestra.

Miss Clawson has been working to develop her singing voice, which has an almost four octave vocal range, since she was three. A professional singer for the past 12 years, Miss Clawson has produced a number of solo albums on the Triangle label, with her single "Words and Music" from her album, "It Was His Love," being named one of the top 10 gospel songs for 1979-80.

Other albums by Miss Clawson include "In the Garden," "The Way I Feel," "You're Welcome Here (winner of a Dove Award) and "Finest Hour."

The daughter of a Southern Baptist preacher, Miss Clawson has been the featured soloist at many Southern Baptist Convention meetings and with the Billy Graham crusades. She has also made guest appearances on The 700 Club, The PTL Club, and The Bobby Jones Show as well as the Carol Burnett Summer Replacement.

The public is invited to attend this free concert.

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Cineastes and those who derive pleasure from a solved mystery have reason to take heart over news out of London, where respected film archivists Kevin Brownlow and David Gill, co-producers of a series of Thames Television programs about Hollywood, have found a lost work by one of film's immortals: Charlie Chaplin.

After getting permission from Chaplin's widow, 57-year-old Lady Oona Chaplin, to rummage through dozens of film cans buried in a screen archive, Brownlow and Gill have discovered an unseen movie by the man who came to be known and loved as "The Little Tramp."

But it's not exactly another "Modern Times" or "City Lights." The film Brownlow and Gill have disinterred is a 23-minute short, shot in 1918 and titled "How to Make Movies."

Described by Bryan Cowgill, managing director of the British commercial television network, as part documentary and part Chaplinesque comedy, the movie was found in rough-cut form.

WICHITA FALLS — TYLER — LONGVIEW — MIDLAND

Fran Jeffries 'perfect' singer, actress

By DOROTHY TRELOAR
Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — Perfection is a much abused word, yet it is the exact word to describe singer-actress Fran Jeffries. She's a feast for the eyes with a Grecian beauty of face, and a voluptuous figure any starlet would admire and envy. I was impressed when I arrived at her Hollywood apartment as she was in the midst of rehearsing a song for a new album.

Sans makeup, wearing jeans and a yellow T-shirt with the words "Playboy's Best," she looked like a kid. I reminded myself that this lady, on display in the nude in the September Playboy Magazine is in her mid-forties. Over a cup of coffee, she loses no time with the interview.

"I was asked to pose for Playboy Magazine and without hesitation I said YES! Hugh Hefner thinks it's one of the magazine's best layouts and is instigating a nude layout of 'Glamorous Women Over 40' for future issues." Fran set a precedent, but then she always has. Music critic Leonard Feather commented after hearing her sing: "As for her personality, nobody as enticing as Jeffries has any cause for concern, with her easy verbal rapport with her listeners."

Fran says, "it all began in Palo Alto, Calif., where I was born Frances Makris of a Greek father and French mother. I studied on my own with records and at 12 won an amateur talent contest. At 16, I actually became a pro singing in the Bay City area.

"I was in seventh heaven," she sighs gleefully, "and at 19, I met Dick Haymes, who was 40 years old, fell in love and married him. We appeared together in a number of top clubs and on TV shows until Dick started drinking himself to death. We split, and I had to start making it on my own. Although I was pregnant with our daughter, Stephanie, I was asked to be on many top TV shows. I had to shed Dick because of his alcoholic sickness, which was affecting the relationship with our daughter.

"I begged him to find help, but he refused. I was getting offers from Las Vegas, and because I had a child to care for, I grabbed these opportunities. I must add that I remained friends with Dick until his death and will always remember that he taught me some sort of 'class.' I toured with Jack Carter, Jan Murray, Bill Cosby and Schecky Greene. After my divorce, I met and fell in love with (director) Richard Quine.

"We eloped," she sighs, "and it was crazy, but fun. We lived in a fabulous house in Beverly Hills with wall-to-wall stars dropping in constantly, including such legends as Jennifer Jones, Jack Lemmon, William Holden, Natalie Wood, Warren Beatty. Imagine Barbra Streisand stopping off for a soft drink right after she had auditioned for 'Funny Girl.' She was marvelous."

Director Blake Edwards chose Fran to sing the Henry Mancini blockbuster "It Had Better Be Tonight" in his "The Pink Panther" feature. The record sold in the millions. Then Fran starred with Tony Curtis in "Sex and the Single Girl," appeared opposite Elvis Presley in "Harum Scarum," and continued to star in over 20 TV shows.

Divorced from Quine, and after a brief marriage to a business man, Fran is alone for the first time in years, but has picked up where she left off starting a whole new career.

Producer George Cahan is setting up a show titled "Women Over 40," which she will hostess. She's booked in Vegas, and starts rehearsals in December for a dinner theater tour in a play titled "Live a Little." All this because she appeared nude in Playboy at age 45.

A photograph by Max Hutchins of Midland has been included in the 1982 Loan Collection of the Professional Photographers of America, Inc.

An estimated 4 percent of the approximately 5,000 photographs entered in the competition were chosen for the touring collection.

Hutchins's photograph is entitled "Apache Tear." The selection process involved 58 jurors from around the country evaluating the works on the basis of impact, color harmony and balance, composition and technial quality during a five-day period.

After being displayed at the PPA's annual convention, the photograph is currently touring with the PPA's Loan Collection. The Loan Collection is retained by PPA to be displayed across the country as a representation of the best in professional photography for 1982.

Hutchins receives two merits for his photograph. One is for acceptance into the General Exhibit and the other is for the acceptance of his work into the Loan Collection. The merits are applied toward a master of photography degree, which requires 25 merits, 13 of which must be exhibition merits such as these. To date, only 1,000 members of PPA have earned this degree since the degree was created in 1937.

Founded in 1880, PPA provides educational services and establishes standards of professional performance for its more than 14,000 members and 200 local, state, regional and international affiliates.

Ripley's 'Believe It or Not' returns to TV

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Museum built from a single tree! Hopping Festival of St. Vitus in Luxembourg! Remarkable builders of the Sphinx and the Acropolis! Origins of King Arthur, and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde!

Who else could come up with such a string of exclamation points but Robert Ripley? The durable artist, who started as a sports cartoonist in San Francisco when he was very young, presented the first radio series about his often-weird and unworldly discoveries himself. Three months after he launched his 1949 television series, "Believe It or Not," Ripley died.

The show limped along for another season with Robert St. John as host and a guest cast enacting one after another of Ripley's presumably true tales. But then, like the artist himself, the program faded away.

Ripley's idea never died, though, and it has endured for decades in dozens of newspapers. Last year ABC decided to give Ripley another shot on television, ordering three specials from producer Jack Haley Jr. They starred Jack Palance, a man born to tell stories to make the hairs rise at the back of your neck.

The specials drew remarkably large audiences. People still wanted to see freaks of nature and hear about unfortunates who had triumphed over adversity. Never let it be said that television doesn't take advantage of a good thing.

"Ripley's Believe It or Not" returns to ABC this fall as a weekly show, Sundays at 7 p.m., opposite CBS' "60 Minutes" and NBC's newcomer, "Voyager." If Ripley can survive and flourish against Wallace, Safer, Reasoner, Bradley and Rooney, it will have worked a true "Believe It or Not" miracle. The latest ABC victim of the 7 p.m. Sunday time slot is "Code Red," which went down in flames with Lorne Greene at the controls of a big red engine.

Ethel Merman confident about her abilities

NEW YORK (AP) — She's been Reno Sweeney, Annie Oakley, Momma Rose and even Gopher's mother on "Love Boat," so after 52 years in show business, it's not surprising that Ethel Merman exudes confidence when talking about her latest venture into musical comedy.

"I know I did two fine numbers and I know that they were great," she said recently, referring matter-of-factly to her role on the reborn "Texaco Star Theater," which returned to television Sept. 11 after a 26-year absence.

Miss Merman sang two songs by Jerry Herman on the 90-minute salute to Broadway entitled "Opening Night," on NBC. One, "Before the Parade Passes By," was from "Hello Dolly," the last show she played on Broadway.

The other, "There's No Tune Like A Show Tune," came from a little-known off-Broadway musical "Parade," that Herman wrote before he became famous with "Dolly" and "Mame."

For a woman who introduced songs by George Gershwin, Cole Porter and Irving Berlin in a voice that could be understood in the last row of a theater, today's melodies are decidedly unmelodic.

"You can't sing to the music because there is no music. There's nothing singable. There's nothing from a lyric standpoint either," Miss Merman said. "Remember method acting — Joe Mumbles. Now I call it method singing, because I don't know what they're singing about."

She isn't any easier on current musicals.

"Half the time, there is no plot. There is no chemistry at all between the songs and the situation."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How dare David Soul!

How dare he what? Soul is playing the role of Rick in the NBC series "Casablanca," due in January. Everybody knows that's Humphrey Bogart's role!

But Soul swears he's not doing a remake of the movie. In fact, the series takes place before the movie, before Ingrid Bergman shows up. Her role won't be in the show, but Sam will still be tickling the ivories at Rick's Cafe. Scatman Crothers plays Sam.

Soul says "it's a little scary, the idea of doing 'Casablanca.' One thing I do believe — whoever did the role would have to face the same criticism."

Negotiated surrender offered underdog in merger war

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
Los Angeles Timew-Washington Post
News Service

United Technologies Corp. offered Wednesday to negotiate a merger with Bendix Corp. as a way of ending the tangled, three-cornered takeover war among United, Bendix and Martin Marietta Corp.

The surprising offer by United Technologies Chairman Harry Gray would amount to a negotiated surrender for Bendix instead of the unconditional surrender demanded earlier by United and its ally, Martin Marietta, the aerospace firm based in Bethesda, Md.

United would pay $85 a share for a majority of Bendix's stock, raising the ante in the complex struggle, and would take control of the Michigan-based company, with the terms to be negotiated.

Bendix officials had no comment, but there was no indication it was willing to give up its attempt to take over Martin Marietta and resist the counter moves by its two opponents.

If Bendix declines Wednesday's offer, United Technologies will press ahead with its attempt to take over Bendix through a $75-a-share tender offer to Bendix stockholders.

Martin Marietta, which responded to Bendix's original takeover attempt by making its own offer for Bendix, said Wednesday that Bendix stockholders who have pledged their stock to Martin for $75 a share should not reclaim their stock. If Bendix merges with United Technologies, Martin said, "arrangements will be made" for Bendix shareholders who pledged stock to Martin to get the $85 price offered Wednesday by United.

Martin has received pledges for about 63 percent of Bendix stock, but it apparently cannot count on obtaining an actual majority when its tender offer expires Sept. 22. The shares offered so far include the biggest single block of Bendix stock, 23 percent of all the shares, which was tendered by Citibank, trustee of the Bendix employees stock option plan, but Citibank said Wednesday it would withdraw those shares before the deadline in response to instructions from Bendix management.

After Wednesday's skirmishes in a conflict that has stunned and fascinated the financial world, the position of the combatants was this:

Bendix's offer to purchase Martin Marietta for $48 a share remained in effect. About 58 percent of Martin's shares have been tendered to Bendix in response to the offer, and Bendix can begin buying them Friday morning. Martin Marietta stock closed at $35.50 per share in Wednesday's New York Stock Exchange trading, unchanged from Tuesday.

Martin Marietta's counterattack against Bendix, an offer to buy 11.9 million Bendix shares for $75 a share, also remained in place. Martin can begin buying stock under that offer on Sept. 23, and could succeed in taking over Bendix before being taken over itself because of differences in the laws of the states where the two are incorporated.

Without the shares controlled by Citibank, however, Martin would not have a majority of Bendix. Martin sued Citibank and Bendix in federal court in New York Wednesday seeking to prevent Citibank from withdrawing the shares. Bendix stock closed at $59.50 Wednesday, up $2.25.

United Technologies left its own $75-a-share offer for Bendix on the books, and increased the pressure on the Bendix management with its merger proposal. That proposal was made with Martin Marietta's knowledge and approval, according to sources close to the company, and the agreement between United and Martin to carve up Bendix between them if either succeeds in its tender offer remains in effect, they said.

Under that agreement, if Bendix succeeds in taking over Martin, United will attempt to take over Bendix, and will then restore Martin's independence and sell it $600 million of Bendix assets. Meanwhile, Wednesday, attorneys for Martin Marietta argued in federal court in Baltimore that Bendix's original tender offer violated federal securities laws because, they said, Bendix did not disclose its plans to divest itself of some Martin operations.

Marc Chernow, an attorney for Bendix, said Bendix never had any such plans. In sworn depositions, he said, Bendix Chairman William Agee "testified unequivocally that there is no intention, plan, proposal or whatever you want to call it" to divest any Martin Marietta divisions. Judge Joseph Young said he would rule Thursday on Martin's request that the Bendix offer be invalidated.

United Technologies' offer to work out a merger with Bendix was made in a letter to Agee from United Chairman Gray. "We believe," Gray said, "that the present competing tender offers by Bendix and Martin Marietta create an intolerable situation for both companies, their shareholders and employees. Our offer is an alternative that will resolve the situation."

United, based in Hartford, Conn., builds a range of high-technology and construction products, including helicopters and jet engines. Bendix is also a diversified manufacturer of auto parts, robots and other products.

Under Wednesday's offer, United would buy 11.9 million shares of Bendix for $85 a share cash — or $1.01 billion — and acquire the rest by exchanging one share of United stock for each share of Bendix stock. United stock closed at $49.25 Wednesday.

Gray said the offer "would allow Martin Marietta to remain an independent company. With the cooperation of all three companies, there would be no antitrust issues, and the merger of Bendix and United Technologies would be completed in a short period of time." The Justice Department has already given antitrust clearance to a Bendix takeover of Martin, but it is still reviewing the implications of a merger of Bendix and United, which compete in some areas.

Bendix shareholders are scheduled to meet at company headquarters in Southfield, Mich., on Tuesday to vote on revisions of the corporate charter that would make a takeover more difficult, and Agee has ordered Citibank to vote the stock option plan shares in favor of the amendments.

By ARELO SEDERBERG
Hearst Feature Service

Wall Street runs on rumor, gossip and tips, but also on an information flood that rivals the Government Printing Office.

Each day thousands of pages of investment advice pours out from the research departments of brokerage firms, ranging from in-depth studies of industries and companies to just plain stock touting. Most of it, especially the touting, is available free — most certainly free to customers of the firms.

There are, in addition, hundreds of market letters, including hot line up-to-the-second advice, which cost a pretty penny. Among the better known are those written by Howard Ruff, Joe Granville, Bert Dohmen-Ramirez and Tom Holt. There also is a Newsletter Digest, which does just that — digests the other letters.

Have these letter writers ever been wrong? Of course — especially on timing. All or most of them missed the upward jolt in the markets that started August 13. Granville had said that he expected a big rise (followed by a big fall), beginning in October or perhaps even January.

Given the fact that they missed and remembering that they can miss, what are they saying now? Basically, the same. The bears are still bearish and the bulls are still bullish.

Howard Ruff, as he slaps the Reagan administration for raising taxes instead of massively cutting the budget, still believes the next move will be inflationary. So he's high on silver and gold. Precious metals, by the way, had the biggest run-up of all in the month of glory.

Both Holt and Dohmen-Ramirez remain so bearish you look for fur to sprout from their arms. "... a spectacular crash seems hard to avoid," says Holt. Dohmen-Ramirez echoes: "Even periods of depression in the economy see strong stock market rallies. The similarities between 1930 and 1982 are increasing by the week."

The sharp market run-up has been almost entirely due to heavy buying by institutions such as mutual funds and pension funds; there has been little public participation. But now that stock news has been page one, the public may be coming in.

There are bulls, to be sure. Stan Weinstein of the Professional Tape Reader is one. This rally, he says, "is the real thing." He expects it to spill over into secondary stocks, beyond the Blue Chip buying that has pushed up averages.

Weinstein expects a substantial comeback in housing, which has been battered to the floor. In addition, he's bullish on aerospace, beverages-soft drinks, grocery chains, hospital management and restaurants. And Weinstein warns to put "mental stops" on all your buys – that is, if they recede a few points, dump them.

What are the brokerage houses saying? In a word, they're happy, the big volume promises them one of the best years in history. Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins hit it on the nose, advising customers to get out of cash and into stocks on August 18. That was when Wall Street economists, such as Henry Kaufman, were beginning to say interest rates would take a real fall.

Passengers bound to notice Southwest is different

News Service

LOS ANGELES — When Southwest Airlines inaugurates Los Angeles service Saturday with flights to Phoenix, passengers are bound to notice that the carrier does things a little differently.

For example, tickets can be purchased in 10 seconds through an automatic ticketing machine similar to a cash register. Flights will usually leave the gate only about 10 minutes after arriving, as opposed to the 20 or 30 minute waits common on other airlines. On board, many stewardesses will wear hot pants, or might dress as Dracula on Halloween or as Santa's helpers on Christmas.

Southwest's entrance into Los Angeles is the latest step in what observers say is its bid to become the dominant carrier in the fast-growing Southwest, challenging much-larger and better-known carriers such as United, Delta, Western and Republic.

The bid, analysts, say, has a great chance of succeeding because 11-year-old Southwest — through shrewd management, a highly productive labor force and a strong balance sheet — is the nation's most profitable non-commuter airline. Its low costs and ability to charge low fares while still making a profit are the envy of the airline industry.

Some, in fact, say the Dallas-based carrier could in time become one of the top five carriers in the nation — moving up from its No. 22 ranking last year — and emerge as the leading carrier in such fast-growing western Sunbelt cities as Phoenix, Las Vegas and Albequerque to match its top status in intrastate Texas markets. This year, when other carriers were retrenching amid the industry's worst losses ever, Southwest opened new service to San Diego, Las Vegas, Phoenix and Kansas City.

"They're the Pac-Man of the airline industry," says Michael Derchin, airline analyst at the Wall Street brokerage of First Boston Corp. With their low costs, "they can make money at fares nobody else can. So everybody else drops out" or reduces service.

Perhaps so as not to arouse competitors, Southwest Chairman and President Herbert D. Kelleher downplays his airline's expansion plans. "I wouldn't say we're going to dominate" the region, he says, although he admits he plans to make Phoenix a major hub comparable to Dallas and Houston.

The airline began service in 1971, serving cities only within Texas. Consequently, the carrier was exempt from Civil Aeronautics Board regulations designed to protect interstate carriers from fare wars or other cutthroat competition.

The airline developed perhaps the industry's most productive labor force. Although its pilots are fully unionized and earn as much as comparable workers at other carriers, they fly about 40 percent more hours per month because they are paid based on flights rather than time on the job, Kelleher says. The employees also are motivated because they own about 13 percent of Southwest's shares and participate in a generous profit-sharing plan, he says.

Southwest also flies Boeing 737 jet liners exclusively. These fuel-efficient, 118-seat aircraft are the ideal size for Southwest's high frequency, short-haul markets. In addition, having all the same aircraft reduces the time and cost of aircraft maintenance.

Analyst Derchin estimates that these factors enable Southwest to enjoy an average per-passenger cost of only $20, even with its relatively short average flight distance of 300 miles and with only about two-thirds of the seats filled.

Even with its bargain-basement fares, Derchin says Southwest has an operating profit margin of 16 percent, highest among U.S. carriers with annual revenues of more than $100 million. The margin was more than 20 percent last year, but has been hurt somewhat because of start-up costs for Los Angeles and other new markets. Last year, Southwest's earnings rose 20 percent to $34.2 million on revenues of $270.4 million.

And now that airline deregulation allows the carrier to fly anywhere it wants at whatever price, other carriers with higher costs may find themselves in a bind trying to compete.

That already has been the case for Minneapolis-based Republic Airlines, which inaugurated its own Los Angeles-Phoenix service Wednesday. Republic had planned to charge an unrestricted one-way coach fare of $85 and a restricted fare of $50. But Southwest later announced plans to offer an unrestricted fare on that route of $45 in the peak daytime travel hours and only $30 during the off-peak evening hours. Republic was forced to match Southwest, but analysts question whether it can make money at the lower rate.

Southwest also appears to be surviving a challenge in its lucrative Texas markets from Muse Air, a new Dallas-based carrier formed by Lamar Muse, the former president of Southwest who left in 1978 during a management squabble. (Muse Air plans to initiate Los Angeles service on Oct. 1 with flights to Houston.)

Largest S&L slashes rate

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — In a move that may inject some life in the comatose housing industry, Home Savings of America, the nation's largest savings and loan, slashed its interest rate on adjustable home loans Wednesday to 13 3-4 percent from 15 3-4 percent.

Other large California-based savings and loans reacted cautiously, saying they have no immediate plans to match the new low rate. The previous industry low for an adjustable mortgage was 14 1-2 percent.

Analysts viewed the sharp cut by Home Savings as a major step toward reviving home sales and housing construction, which have practically halted in the last year as high interest rates pushed up buyers' monthly payments. Although the new 13 3-4 percent interest rate may not be low enough for many buyers, mortgage rates may continue to decline over the next several months.

Home Savings' new prime mortgage rate applies to 30- and 40-year loans on single-family homes of up to $150,000. Monthly payments will only be adjusted annually, and the interest rate on the loan can rise or fall no more than 7 1-2 percentage points a year.

Los Angeles-based Home Savings, a subsidiary of H.F. Ahmanson Co., lowered its rate to "stimulate a little real estate activity," said Robert Jacobson, executive vice president of loan administration. "Demand (for loans) has been spotty for a number of years and we hope this will change that."

Home Savings was able to cut its prime mortgage rate because of the sharp decline in short-term interest rates during the last several weeks, which have lowered financial institutions' cost of funds to make loans.

Home Savings' prime mortgage rate reached a peak of 17 1-2 percent in February and the previous low was 12 3-4 percent in May 1980, Jacobson said.

Most savings and loan associations currently are making adjustable loans at rates of between 14 1-2 percent and 15 1-4 percent, said Cris Pierce of the California Savings and Loan League. S&Ls charge more for conventional fixed-rate loans, ranging from 14 1-2 percent to 16 1-2 percent. The rate on loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration is 14 percent. Home Savings no longer makes fixed-rate loans, Jacobson said.

On a $100,000 loan, monthly principal and interest payments would drop to $1,165 at the 13 3-4 percent rate from $1,324 at 15 3-4 percent.

Jacobson acknowledged a $1,165 monthly payment would still be beyond the reach of many potential home buyers, but "I think it will put it within the reach of others."

Pierce said the move cracked the psychological "14 percent barrier" that has frightened consumers away from the housing market.

"Economists who watch our industry have been saying that for the home market to really get moving, rates have to drop to the 12 1-3 percent range," she said, "so Home is getting close."

"I think it's wonderful," said Harry Lorber of the Building Industry Association of Southern California. A rate of 13 3-4 percent "in my opinion could get a lot of people out of the woodwork."

Rates are still beyond the means of many would-be buyers, but "obviously the old days of 8-9 percent mortgages are gone forever," he said.

"We may be preceding the market to some extent," Jacobson said. "You have to be optimistic to be in the mortgage lending business."

Negotiations progressing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Negotiators trying to get public buses back on the road say they made "substantial progress" before recessing today and leaving 600,000 commuters facing a second day of packed parking lots and traffic jams.

A bargaining session wound up at 2:30 a.m., and spokesmen for the Southern California Rapid Transit District and United Transportation Union issued a joint statement saying that "substantial progress" was made.

But RTD spokesman Jim Smart and UTU spokesman Goldy Norton honored a news blackout and would not elaborate on the outcome of more than five hours of discussions except to say the two sides would meet again this afternoon.

During an early-morning break, UTU General Chairman Earl Clark said, "Things are going fine. We're still here and it's a good atmosphere."

"Right now we've got some things we're looking at and it's difficult to say whether they're going to be acceptable or not. We're trying," he said.

Factory use at lowest levels since 74-75 recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory use by U.S. manufacturers declined to 69.4 percent of capacity last month, the lowest level since the 1974-75 recession, the government reported today.

The decline of one-half percentage point from July was the 11th in the past 13 months, according to the Federal Reserve Board in a new measure of the depth of the current economic downturn.

News of the decline in factory use came one day after the Federal Reserve said industrial production by the nation's factories and mines dropped 0.5 percent in August, also the 11th decline in 13 months in that measure.

The two reports tend to echo each other because slower output almost inevitably means businesses are using less of their production capacity.

Earlier this week, the Commerce Department reported that national retail sales also fell in August, raising new questions about when recovery from the recession might begin, or how strong the recovery might be.

Today's report said capacity utilization dropped sharply in August for makers of motor vehicles and parts and for producers of petroleum products. The rate also declined for producers of primary metals.

Equipment-producing industries continued to reduce output in August, the report said, as the electrical and non-electrical machinery and aerospace and miscellaneous transportation equipment industries idled more of their capacity.

In contrast, operating rates rose for the textile and paper industries, the report said.

Overall factory use neither rose nor fell in July rather than falling by 0.2 percentage points as estimated earlier. The only increase in the past 13 months came in February.

The last time the operating rate was lower than in August was when it sank to 69 percent in March 1975, the lowest it fell in the severe 1974-75 recession.

Administration wants to make changes in impact statement

By SANDRA SUGAWARA
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In 1978, a mining company asked the Forest Service if it could rebuild and use an abandoned road in an area of California's San Gabriel Mountains where bighorn sheep live. The Forest Service granted the permit and the company was ready to proceed.

But environmentalists objected, and this summer, four years later, a federal appeals court nixed the arrangement because the Forest Service had failed to do one thing — issue an environmental impact statement before approving the permit.

In the 12 years since Congress gave birth to the impact statement in the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the EIS has been praised and denounced, credited with protecting environmental treasures from a host of federal builders and criticized for adding undue delay to projects of minimal importance.

The Reagan administration, like its predecessors, is taking a look at the EIS to see how it might be modified. The Council on Environmental Quality, the environmental arm of the White House, is in charge of the effort, and officials there say they anticipate making only minor changes in the procedures. But the Environmental Protection Agency, which has to do most of the legwork on EISes, has come out in support of narrowing the scope of the law.

Under the 1970 legislation, all federal agencies must consider environmental factors before taking actions such as funding an urban renewal project, widening a highway or expanding a military base. Eighty-nine federal agencies have what is called a NEPA liaison officer, a staff member who worries about complying with the law.

In routine cases, the agency only has to perform an "environmental assessment." But in cases involving a major federal action that could have an effect on the environment, a formal EIS is required. That means detailing the potential environmental impact of a project and suggesting alternatives that the agency could take.

During its infancy, the EIS process ballooned into an unwieldy animal as environmental groups discovered a new vehicle for court suits and federal agencies began preparing 15-volume EISes to cover themselves in case of litigation.

The CEQ eventually decided that the system had run amok and in 1978 issued regulations that set deadlines that EPA and the other agencies had to meet and limited an EIS for a routine project to 150 pages.

Under CEQ's procedures, agencies file both their draft and final EISes with EPA's Office of Federal Activities, which now receives an average of 18 statements a week. A staff of three reviews them to make sure the proper procedures and forms have been followed, a process that takes about three to four hours. About 20 percent of the EISes are found to have problems and must be sent back to the agencies for revisions.

When the impact statement is returned to EPA, it is reviewed for substantive issues to make sure it reflects the requirements of NEPA and the Clean Air Act. Nearly all of these reviews are handled by the regional offices. A small staff in the federal activities office, which has dwindled from about 15 to 9 in the past two years, reviews EISes with a national scope, such as those for Outer Continental Shelf development, decommissioning of power plants and barrier island regulations.

While an agency must outline alternatives, it does not have to pick the one that is best from an environmental point of view. After it received the draft EISes, EPA has traditionally urged the agencies to adopt plans that were more sensitive to the environment. But since the start of the Reagan administration, this has dropped off, according to a staffer who has worked with the program for many years.

If an agency fails to address potential environmental problems raised by EPA or other agencies, then the objecting agency can refer the case to the CEQ for arbitration. Over the years, only 20 projects have been referred to the council.

Outside groups that are unhappy with CEQ's decision can turn to the courts, the avenue that i available to those unhappy with any part of the environmental review. In 1980, 140 cases were filed challenging federal actions under NEPA, most contending that an agency failed to prepare an EIS when it should have or that the statement was inadequate. But injunctions were issued in only 17 of the cases.

The National Association of Manufacturers, which represents several companies that have had permits tied up because of EIS litigation, has recommended that Congress amend the law to make the CEQ the "final arbiter" of whether an EIS is satisfactory, rather than the courts. Daniel W. Cannon, the NAM's director of environmental affairs, said environmental groups have used litigation to "foster indecision and to delay projects badly needed."

But a wholesale rewrite does not look likely now. When CEQ Chairman A. Alan Hill took office last year, he solicited comments on how the EIS process could be improved. The agency received about 150 comments, most suggesting specific revisions, but few recommending that the law be rewritten, according to a CEQ staffer.

One of the more negative comments came from EPA. At recent public hearings, EPA officials criticized the EISes for failing to assess the negative economic impact of abandoning or changing a project for environmental reasons. The agency said the EIS should be changed to allow applicants to consider fewer alternatives.

Offshore worker stayed still when sharks got close

MARRERO, La. (AP) — An offshore oil worker who said he fell from a barge in the Gulf of Mexico and just stayed very still when sharks got too close was spotted by a Coast Guard plane and rescued after 15 hours in the water.

Galley chef William T. Ames, 47, of Pensacola, Fla., said his life vest didn't work properly, so he stayed afloat by treading water.

And when the sharks came by him, he said, "I didn't do anything. I just held my breath."

Ames was contacted at West Jefferson Hospital, where he was taken after being plucked from the water Wednesday.

He went overboard from the drilling barge Cherokee, about 160 miles southwest of New Orleans, about 10 p.m Tuesday, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Doug Bandos.

Ames wouldn't say how he fell from the barge, and attempts to learn how he got in the water were not immediately successful. Neither the night dispatcher for Santa Fe International, owner of the barge, nor Food and Services Inc. owner Chuck Autin, Ames' employer, would discuss the matter by phone from Houma.

"I don't like to think about the beginning. I like to think about the part where I saw the boat," Ames said.

"The waves were coming in on me all night. They were really bad. They were going right down my mouth and my throat," said Ames.

But he said he never worried — he trusted God to save him.

"He's never let me down yet in a situation like that. "I went through Hurricane Frederic in my Datsun in Pascagoula. Right through the eye and everything. So it was just matter of time, how long it takes for it to work its way out."

Ames said helicopters passed overhead time and time Wednesday again before a Coast Guard plane finally spotted him and sent a crew boat to pick him up.

"It was unbelievable. I'd had nine helcopters all over me all day," Ames said. "They were just about everywhere — I mean to my right and my left and right over my head.

"And I was jumping out of the water, throwing my life preserver up and splashing water all over the place, but they never did see me."

By the time the plane spotted him, said Bandos, currents had carried Ames six miles north of the barge.

Ames said the boat's crew didn't see him until it was about 40 feet away.

Doctors at West Jefferson said he would be admitted for observation but was in good condition.

Wild gas well under control

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — More than 1,000 people were back in their homes today after a team of special firefighters controlled a runaway natural gas well, authorities said.

Oil firefighter Red Adair and his Houston crew worked throughout the day Wednesday to control the flow from the well.

Crewman Paul Faulnier said it would take two or three days to seal the leak. However, he said people living within a one-mile radius and campers at nearby Lake Lilvingston State Park were in no danger.

The well blew out Tuesday, and authorities quickly evacuated six subdivisions near Lake Livingston.

"It sounded like a tornado or a jet plane flying over real low," said Polk County Sheriff's Capt. Chuck Staton. "It had a roar you could hear for a mile."

According to the Texas Railroad Commission, a manifold on the wellhead apparently malfunctioned and the well could not be shut.

However, a borehole of the well collapsed and cut off much of the gas flow, said a Railroad Commission spokesman who did not want to be identified.

About 50 people were housed Tuesday night at Camp Choyah, a church camp, but most of those evacuated found shelter with friends.

House Committee votes to approve import bill

Los Angeles Times- Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The House Energy and Commerce Committee Wednesday night approved, 24 to 17, a controversial bill aimed chiefly at Toyota and Datsun auto imports. It would require cars sold in the United States to be built with a substantial amount of U.S. parts and labor.

Proponents of the Fair Practices in Automotive Products Act, seeking to make it more workable and politically more palatable, made substantial revisions in the original version during the markup process. The changes were proposed by the bill's original sponsor, Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y.

Among other things, they eliminated much of the bill's potential impact on Volkswagen and Honda, which already build cars in America.

"I for one am tired of seeing the U.S. serve up Pablum to the Japanese and Europeans while these countries are flooding our markets with their products while keeping our products out of theirs. Sometimes you have to hit someone between the eyes before they change their ways," Ottinger said after the vote.

The requirements would apply to automakers whose annual sales of cars and trucks exceed $100,000 — the higher the sales, the higher the requirement. The starting date would be model year 1984, with complete implementation by 1986.

Under the bill, leading Japanese auto importers could be required to build as much as 70 percent of their cars here, down from the 90 percent sought in the bill's original version. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, who have stayed officially neutral on the bill, still would face the original 90 percent requirement.

The formula is tied to sales. For example, after the 1985 model year, a car maker with sales of 600,000 would divide that figure by 10,000 and realize a "domestic content" requirement of 60 percent.

The bill goes next to the Ways and Means subcommittee on trade, and could reach the floor for a House vote a week to 10 days later, committee sources said.

The administration adamantly opposes the bill, calling it a disastrous protectionist measure. Embattled auto workers have lobbied feverishly for passage before the Nov. 2 general election, claiming that more than 800,000 jobs will be created or saved.

Midland Lee quarterback Paul Cox made the longest run of the year by a Rebel Friday with his 95-yard romp against Monahans. Friday night he'll be one of two signal callers Lee uses as the Rebels travel to El Paso to take on the Eastwood Troopers at 7:30.

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels have one more game to play before the District 4-5A season gets underway, but it will be a long and hard trip before it's over.

Friday night the Rebels will be at Eastwood High School in El Paso to take on the Troopers at 7:30 and it's a game that could be a battle of the long touchdown, a battle of pass vs. run.

In the opening two games of the season for Midland Lee, the Rebels picked up two running scores from long range. Against Lubbock Coronado, Darrell Fennell scored on a 90-yard romp and last week in Monahans, Paul Cox scored from 95 yards out.

For Eastwood, against El Paso Coronado, four touchdowns came through the air with receiver Arnold Ducre scoring three on passes from quarterback Eddie Burgoyne, the shortest going for 69 yards. The fourth TD was a Burgoyne to runningback Brad Kitchin pass that covered 39 yards.

"They've got an outstanding football team. They've thrown for more than 600 yards (674 officially) the last two weeks," said Lee coach Spike Dykes. "They've got a great quarterback, a boy named Eddie Burgoyne who is a returning starter, and they have a great wide receiver in Arnold Ducre. They've certainly got great hands and great speed."

Coach Dykes also mentioned Kitchin and James Givens as two other fine Eastwood offensive players.

"We haven't seen any films on Lee but we've had scouts looking at them and they were really impressed," said Eastwood mentor Todd Ware. "They've got some speed and can throw the ball as well as run with it and they have good size up front. I know Spike real well and I know he's got a good program. We expect to have our hands full and hope we can give them a good battle. We understand they are a very good team."

NO MATTER how well a team runs the ball or how well they throw it, it's the offensive line that opens the way and both teams are nearly equal in size in the trenches.

Guard Kelvin Patterson is the smallest lineman for the Troopers at 175 pounds, but the two tackles, Henry Ontiveros and Bob Everett break 200. All that size up front combined with the speed and long-gain capability of the backs and receivers should help make for an interesting offensive attack.

Defensively, "They have a big front line that averages about 200," said Dykes. "They have an excellent defensive tackle at 6-foot-4, 230, David Furtrell and a fine defensive end, Keith Skelton, 6-foot-2, 215. Alex Rasor is an excellent secondary player with fine speed. Overall they're very tough."

According to Dykes, while Eastwood has been piling up the yardage through the air, they've also given up points and that the secondary is one of their weak spots.

"People have hurt 'em throwing the football," he said.

According to Ware, the Troopers, who run out of pro set 4-3 on defense, "haven't really found a strong point yet but I guess that would be the secondary right now. We're really inexperienced on defense with only two starters coming back, Keith Skelton and Alex Rasor."

Overall, Eastwood has seven returning starters from 1981, and five are key players in the offensive attack. Lee, without any returning starters on the squad, is even less experienced but playing very well.

MONAHANS IS an opponent the Rebels and Troopers have in common and both schools came away with victories. Lee stopped the Lobbes 27-14 Friday while Eastwood scored a 34-27 win two weeks ago.

Since both teams were able to score, and both were scored upon, it makes the Lee-Eastwood game seem like a tough matchup.

McCamey, Rankin resume storied War of Upton County

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

"It's been going on for years, longer than either coach can remember. It is the Upton County high school football championship between McCamey and Rankin.

"I've been here 12 years," said Dwayne Tuner, head mentor at Rankin, "and the rivalry was going a long time before I got here."

Turner's Red Devils are is 7-4-1 against the Badgers with the tie coming in last year's contest.

"Both of our teams were ranked and we both had powerful offensive units," McCamey coach Larry Nabors said. "But like most good games it boiled down to defense, and the ended game in a 0-0 tie. That's the kind of tough contest I expect this year."

Moore graduated from McCamey High School, only to grow up and become the mayor of Rankin.

"I'm always pulling for McCamey," he said, "until this game."

"The contests are hard and close, and always have more intensity," Moore said. "I'm looking foward to the game, anything can happen."

Although Moore and McCamey mayor Manuel Aguilar haven't wagered any bets they said they would both be in attendance and they agreed the game is a matter of pride to the residents of their cities.

BOTH TEAMS are undefeated in their first two games in which they have averaged more than 25 points per game.

McCamey would seem to have a slight advantage as a class AA school and Rankin a single A. But in their opening game, the Red Devils defeated Eldorado 29-19. Eldorado plays in the same 8-2A district that McCamey is in.

"McCamey lost its entire backfield from last year," Turner said. "And to be honest I thought they might be a down a little. But their line is experienced and good, and their backs have come around for them."

Turner appraised his teams line play much the same way. "Our line is experienced and we've gotten good blocking for our backs too," he said.

Both coaches said they would stick to the kind of game that has gotten them where they are and neither of them expects any surprises.

TURNER ECHOED the importance that Nabors' put on having a solid defense. "We've got to stop their option play," he said, "they work it real well."

But Rankin's offense is no sloutch either and Nabors is well aware of its' strenghth.

"Dennis Black is one of the premier running backs in West Texas," Nabors said, "and how well we control him will tell us a lot about our team."

"I'm a little concerned about our defense," he said. "Usually it's a little ahead of our offense this time of of season, but this year it has been reversed."

"We've given up more points in two games (35) than we did in 11 games last year (34)," Nabors explained. "I think it may have something to do with intensity...we get ahead in a game and relax. Rankin will be the test we're looking for."

IN ANOTHER clash of undefeated teams, Stanton (2-0) will host Crane (2-0). For class AA Stanton it is their third game against a class AAA opponent. If defensive statistics are any measure it should be a hard hitting battle. Neither team has given up a point this year.

For Greenwood (0-2) there seems to be no let up in the schedule. After losing to powerhouse Wink last week, the Rangers will face Iraan (1-1), a team averaging 25 points per game. The Indians only loss was a one-pointer to undefeated McCamey.

The withdrawal of Odessa Ector from district 2-4A left each of those teams one game short on their schedule. So each team drew a district opponent to fill the gap and this is the week that non-district preview game will be played. Lamesa (1-1) had the bad luck of drawing preseason favorite Lakeview (2-0) for their makeup game and Andrews (1-1) will travel to Monahans (2-0).

Class AA Reagan County (0-1-1), still suffering from the loss of all-district tailback Greg Fisher, will have a hard time breaking into the win column as they host undefeated, class AAA Ozona.

Nevil beats wind to lead by 4

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Dwight Nevil shot a 67 Tuesday using borrowed clubs in the opening round of the North Texas PGA/Sahara Slacks Sectional tournament at Green Tree Country Club.

Wednesday, using his own clubs, recovered after they had been stolen Monday, Nevil shot a 69. No, the 38-year-old pro from Tanglewood on Texoma isn't ready to give the clubs back in disgust. "If I hadn't had my own clubs, I would been fortunate to score a 75," he says.

(See Summary, 7C)

The big difference over Tuesday was the unexpected wind, which blew in at 11 a.m. and caused scores to soar.

As it turned out, Nevil's 69 was the low round of the day and enabled him to vault from two strokes behind Fort Worth's Benny Passons into a four-stroke lead with a two-round score of 136.

Passons, who had a 65 Tuesday, ballooned to 75 Wednesday, which left him tied for second with Plano's Ras Allen. Allen had a 72.

The second best round of the day, however, belonged to Rives McBee, former Midland CC pro who is now playing out of Irving's Los Colinas. Rives called upon all his knowledge of WT winds to carve out a 70. That left him at 142.

The big difference Wednesday, Nevil said, "Was the wind and the pin placements, which were very severe. With the speed of the greens and the crazy pin placements on hills and slopes, it was impossible to get the ball within 15 feet of the hole."

Nevil noted that the tees were pushed back as well. "They made it about as tough as it can be today."

Nevil was especially grateful for the return of his clubs, which had been stolen from his motel room following a record-tying 63 in Monday's Pro-Am.

"With this wind I was missing a lot of greens and I needed my sand wedge to recover. Then, too, I would have been lost without the putter I've been playing with for several months."

The key hole to Nevil's round turned out to be No. 13. "I hit a lousy second shot over the green. I had a tough chip shot and was just trying to get close. It went in and again it helped to have familiar clubs."

Apparently, the thief heard or read about his crime and developed a guilty conscience. Or maybe he's a frustrated golfer.

"The clubs were found along I-20 near Colorado City," Nevil related. "There was a note pinned to the umbrella which said, 'Please return to Pottsboro (Nevil's home), I'm sorry, David.'"

A farmer near Colorado City discovered the clubs, phoned Nevil's home in Pottsboro and Dwight was notified. He drove to Colorado City Tuesday night and recovered them.

In the two previous sectionals, Nevil has been the runner up. "Both times I was either tied or behind by one or two after two rounds. But in this field, I don't feel safe with a four-stroke lead. But anybody would be crazy if he told you he'd rather be behind than four ahead."

Play winds up with rounds today and Friday. The field was scheduled to tee off on one and 10 today to speed up play. Tee offs began at 8:30 a.m.

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Around Cleveland in the late 1950's, Dave Pelz was so good on the golf course no one could beat him.

When it came time to go to college, he was torn between two loves, golf and basketball. "I turned down the basketball scholarship, because I knew I'd never make it in the NBA. I had the moves, but I was slow and I couldn't jump."

Golf was a different story. "I knew I could make it on the PGA tour, so I accepted a golf scholarship to Indiana University."

"The only trouble was I kept bumping into this fat kid from Ohio State and he kept beating me. I was 0-for-22 against him. It got so bad I finally asked myself, 'If I can't beat this fat kid now, what am I going to do when I come up against a real pro?'"

WITH THE handwriting on the wall, Pelz chucked his PGA golf career and got his degree in Physics.

In 14 years, he did quite well in the space program. He was assigned to NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center and eventually became a senior scientist.

"But it continued to bug me, how this fat kid from Ohio State kept beating me," Dave admits now. "There wasn't any justifiable reason for it."

"I was a better athlete than Jack Nicklaus. I beat him in everything we competed in, except golf. I was in better shape physically (the waistline was proof). He wasn't any smarter than I was...he got his degree in business and I got mine in physics. So, how come I could never beat him in golf?"

"I hit the ball further than Jack off the tee. In fact, my coach made me use a three-wood when I played Jack, just so I stayed in the fairway, because I always tried to outdrive him. If all boiled down to one thing. Jack was a better putter than I was," Pelz, a husky blond 6-5, who still drives the ball out of sight, ruefully admitted.

That, as it turned out, is what led Dave to his present business, that of analyzing, building and perfecting put-

Thursday, Sept. 16

On this date in baseball in 1975:

Pittsburgh's Rennie Stennett tied Wilbert Robinson's 1982 record by going 7-for-7 — four singles, two doubles and a triple — as the Pirates mauled the Cubs 22-0, at Wrigley Field in the most decisive shutout in major league history.

On this date in 1960:

At the age of 39, Milwaukee's Warren Spahn set a club record with 15 strikeouts and hurled the first of his two career no-hitters, beating Philadelphia 4-0. It was the second time in less than a month that the Phillies had been no-hit by the Braves (Lew Burdette blanked them on Aug. 18).

Vikings hope to add run to Kramer's passing tonight

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Despite quarterback Tommy Kramer's passing prowess, the Minnesota Vikings' offense is looking for a more balanced attack this season, leaving the Buffalo Bills with a little more to worry about.

Minnesota, which achieved just that last Sunday in beating the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, will once again try to prove its backfield can run as well as catch when the Vikings meet the Bills at 7:30 p.m. at Rich Stadium in a nationally televised game.

Last Sunday against Tampa Bay in their 1982 National Football League opener, the Vikes rushed for 101 yards and a touchdown and passed for 115 yards in beating the Bucs 17-10.

Last year, Kramer threw for 3,912 yards — the Vikes' pass offense ranked second in the NFL — and Minnesota picked up three yards in the air for every yard gained on the ground.

"We went in this year with the idea of opening up the run," said Ahmad Rashad, Minnesota's all-time leading receiver.

Ted Brown, the fourth-year veteran, rushed for 1,063 yards last year and once again is Minnesota's leading rusher. He caught 83 passes.

"He's as good as any new back I've seen in the 11 years I've been in the league," Rashad said.

"Nelson is going to turn that 5-or 6-yard completion into an 80-yard run at the end," Bills' Coach Chuck Knox said. "He's to their team what Joe Cribbs is to ours. He's dynamite."

Cribbs, an All-Pro his two years with the Bills, is holding out for a new contract and won't play tonight.

Minnesota, which finished 7-9 last year, showed indications of improvement in several areas besides running against Tampa Bay. The Vikes held the Bucs, NFC Central champs last year, to just 65 yards rushing, and they intercepted three passes. The offensine line also opened holes for Brown and Nelson and didn't allow a sack.

New York bullpen blows lead

Orioles again beat Yanks

By Associated Press

For the fourth straight game Wednesday night, the Yankee bullpen blew a lead and the result was an 8-5 loss to the charging Baltimore Orioles, who won their 23rd game in the last 27.

"It seems like everything they do is right," said New York Manager Clyde King. "But when you're as hot as they are, you make a lot of your own breaks."

"We've been ahead in all four games and hit nine home runs, and we haven't won yet. It's going to take a shutout to stop them."

The triumph kept the Orioles 1½ games behind Milwaukee in the AL East race. The division-leading Brewers stopped Detroit 5-3.

As they had in the three previous games with the Orioles, the Yankees took the early lead — this time 5-2 after 5½ innings — on a pair of two-run homers by Smalley and a solo shot by Winfield, all off starter Mike Flanagan. Smalley has hit eight of his 20 homers in the last 12 games and Winfield eight of his 34 in the last 13 games.

But the Orioles came back to score six runs in the sixth inning. Cal Ripken Jr. tied the score with a two-run double and then scored the go-ahead run on Eddie Murray's double.

Royals 5, Mariners 4

Willie Wilson opened the 11th by beating out an infield bouncer for a hit, then stole second. Walks to U.L. Washington and George Brett by Seattle reliever Bill Caudill, 11-8, loaded the bases and set the stage for Hammond.

Brewers 5, Tigers 3

Howell's RBI double featured a two-run second inning and his two-run single in the fifth provided the Brewers with a 5-2 lead.

White Sox 8, Angels 3

Vance Law stroked a two-run triple to highlight a five-run fourth inning as Chicago defeated California and snapped the Angels' five-game winning streak. Law's triple in the fourth knocked out Geoff Zahn, 16-8, and gave the White Sox a 5-1 lead at the time.

Indians 7, Red Sox 4

Blue Jays 3-12, A's 2-11

A pair of Oakland errors allowed Damaso Garcia and Al Woods to score in the seventh inning and Luis Leal scattered four hits in 7⅔ innings as Toronto downed the A's in the first game of their doubleheader.

Twins 10, Rangers 2

Castillo, 10-11, saw his streak of 20⅔ scoreless innings snapped in the sixth inning on a two-run triple by Jim Sundberg. Loser Frank Tanana, 6-18, lasted until the fifth, when the Twins scored three runs for a 6-0 lead.

NCAA TV schedule gone

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A federal judge's ruling that frees every NCAA school to sell television rights to its football games without restriction was hailed as a smashing victory by some and a prelude to disaster by others.

In the meantime, NCAA attorneys sought to block immediate implementation of the ruling which, among other things, throws out NCAA contracts with ABC and CBS for college games this year. Even if the NCAA does not get a stay of the order, the networks said Wednesday they would go ahead with this weekend's telecast schedule.

But if the ruling stands peFng an NCAA appeal, all television schedules this season could become meaningless, with schools marketing their games on a week-to-week basis either independently or through conference tie-ups.

The ruling by U.S. Judge Juan C. Burciaga also is timely in light of the threatened strike by National Football League players. Several schools have already expressed a willingness to switch their games to Sunday. With the networks suddenly in need of football programming, many of the major college powers might be in line for big paydays.

SHORTLY AFTER the ruling was filed in federal court in Oklahoma City Wednesday, the NCAA said it would appeal to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. If the NCAA ruling withstood an appeal, there is little doubt it would be the beginning of a new era in college athletics.

Ruling on a suit brought by Oklahoma and Georgia, Burciaga held that the NCAA had violated antitrust laws in selling game rights. Burciaga also held that "the right to telecast college football games is the property of the institutions participating in the games, and that right may be sold or assigned by those institutions to any entity at their discretion.

The decision was applauded by big-time football interests which have been fighting the NCAA for control of football television.

"To a large degree, the judge fully vindicated what the CFA attempted to do," said Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association, through which most college football powers sought exclusion from the NCAA contracts.

"The selfish interests of a few could destroy college football as we know it," said Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten Confernce, whose members are not part of the CFA.

BOTH SIDES were surprised Burciaga made his ruling effective immedately.

"That would be unreasonable, and the courts seldom do unreasonable things," Dan Gibbens, a law professor and Oklahoma's faculty representative, said in June during the trial. Gibbens was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

"We find it incredible that the judge waited until this far into the season to issue an order that purports to be effective immediately and can have the disastrous affect on college football that his decision could have," the NCAA said in a written release.

Burciaga noted that immediate enforcement of his order would work a hardship on the NCAA and the networks but added:

If the ruling stands, it will be a major victory for Neinas, the former Big Eight commissioner who has been the chief organizer and spokesman for big-time football interests.

Happy Hooton blanks Padres, 5-0

Dodgers up lead to 2 ½ as Astros beat Braves

By Associated Press

Hooton underwent knee surgery on June 21, missed six weeks and only now is recapturing the form which has made him a mainstay of the Los Angeles Dodgers pitching staff. On Wednesday night, Hooton indicated that the remaining aches and pains are a minor annoyance as he blanked the San Diego Padres 5-0 on three hits. The Dodgers' sixth straight victory upped their National League West lead to 2½ games over Atlanta, which lost 5-4 to Houston.

"It's been a long time for me," between complete games, Hooton noted. "And it's especially gratifying to come against a club like San Diego with such a tough lineup."

It was Hooton's second shutout of the season, but his first since April 29. In his eight starts since his surgery, he has allowed 12 earned runs in 49 innings, a 2.20 earned run average.

"I can't say I'm all the way back," said Hooton, whose record is now 3-5. "I can't say that until I've put a few of these (games) back-to-back.

"Tonight I had better control with my fastball, I was getting it where I wanted, and I felt I had more consistency with all my pitches."

And he wasn't bothered much by the nagging physical problems which have lingered with him this season.

"My knee doesn't bother me any more. There's kind of a dull ache, but not like before. Before it would kick me pretty good. But I still have this bursitis in the shoulder, and it was starting to stiffen and I didnt' know if it would loosen up, but it did."

Expos 5, Mets 4

Andre Dawson, another player plagued by injury, ripped his 20th homer of the season in the 11th to lift the Expos over the Mets. Montreal is two games behind St. Louis in the East, but just a half-game in back of second-place Philadelphia.

Chris Speier cleared the bases with a three-run triple in the seventh to aid the Montreal cause.

Dawson, who is bothered by sore wrists, said, "Winning this game is more important than my wrists. I think I should be able to hit 20 homers and steal 30-35 bases each year, so it's no big thrill."

Cardinals 8, Phillies 0

If anyone had doubts about the Cardinals' pitching, all they needed was to see the performances St. Louis' hurlers put on in Philadelphia this week. Joaquin Andujar threw a three-hitter Wednesday for his fifth shutout of the season as the Cardinals grabbed a 1½-game lead over Philadelphia in the NL East. It was the second straight shutout for St. Louis — John Stuper and Bruce Sutter combined on one Tuesday — and the Cards surrendered only two runs in losing to Steve Carlton on Monday.

George Hendrick had a two-run single and two sacrifice flies for St. Louis.

"The first day I got hurt, I knew I wouldn't miss my turn. I knew I'd be out there Wednesday," said Andujar, 13-10, who has won five of his last eight starts, with no decisions in the other three. He has pitched 23 consecutive scoreless innings.

Cubs 7, Pirates 2

The Cubs used the longball to subdue Pittsburgh as Jody Davis smashed a three-run homer and Keith Moreland and Leon Durham added solo shots. Ferguson Jenkins gave up 11 hits in posting his 275th career victory, good for 20th on the all-time list.

Astros 5, Braves 4

Houston severely damaged Atlanta's pennant hopes by sweeping the Braves. Dickie Thon's three-run double snapped a 2-2 tie in the seventh and the Braves couldn't catch up against Nolan Ryan and Dave Smith, who pitched the ninth inning to earn his 11th save.

"We've played well on the road all year. Now, we have to," said Bob Horner, who belted a two-run homer off Ryan. "We play 13 of our last 16 games on the road. We are running out of days and weeks, and we are already out of months."

Giants 5, Reds 4

Rookie Chili Davis, in his first pinch-hitting appearance of the season, cracked a two-run homer with one out in the eighth to boost the Giants to their 12th win in the last 14 contests. They remained six games behind Los Angeles.

Two-run homers by Dan Driessen and Ron Oester had given Cincinnati a 4-3 lead before Davis' 17th homer. Jack Clark also homered for the Giants.

Cowboys-Steelers set Monday record

FOOTBALL—Monday Pittsburgh-Dallas NFL game drew a 24.9 rating on ABC-TV, the highest for any prime time television opener in the 13-year history of the series. The figures showed 20.7 million homes were tuned into the game which attracted a 42 share of the sets in service...

Wide receiver Sam McCullum, who became a member of the Minnesota Vikings, says a strike in the NFL is inevitable. McCullum's release by Seattle raised questions as to the team's motive. The NFLPA filed a complaint with the NLRB asking the Seahawks be enjoined from releasing McCullum. Coach Bud Grant called McCullum "one of the better wide receivers in the league. We never had any trouble with him when he was with our club (in 1974 and 1975) and we have no reason to believe that we would have any problem with him now."...

AUTO RACING—Rick Mearsn can clinch the CART-PPG Indy Car World Series championship for the second time in a row and the third time in four years by finishing fifth or better in Sunday's Road America 200. In fact, he may not have to finish that high to win the national title. If Mears earns one of the two bonus points available for winning the pole position in qualifying, or leading the most laps in the race, he needs only to finish sixth or better. If he takes both points, the defending champion needs only to finish seventh or better to win the title.

LaPorte stops Miranda in 10

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a real battle for featherweight Juan LaPorte, but after about an hour he sweated off a pound and made the weight limit. The fight for the title seemed easier.

"I had trouble losing that last half-pound," said LaPorte, who had little trouble beating Mario Miranda Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden for the World Boxing Council featherweight championship. He weighed the class limit of 126, a half-pound more than Mirandra.

LaPorte dominated the action, losing only two rounds on each of three cards, before winning the title when Miranda's corner to referee Octavio Meyran of Mexico that the Colombian could not answer the bell for 11th round.

"I hope to be champion for a long time," said the 22-year-old LaPorte, who steps into the role played, and played wel Salvador Sanchez of Mexico, who was champion for 2½ years and10 defenses before he was killed in a car-truck crash Aug. 12.

One of those defenses was a 15-round decision over LaPorte Dec. 13, 1980, and Wednesday night's show as supposed to feature a rematch between the two.

Upon Sanchez' death, LaPorte, ranked No. 3 by the WBC, was matched with the top-ranked Miranda, who missed fighting Sanchez July 21 because of an injury, with the stipulation the winner fight No. 2-ranked Ruben Castillo of Tucson, Ariz., within 75 days.

"I was supposed to fight Sanchez tonight," said LaPorte, a Puerto Rican livng in New York. "May Sanchez rest in peace. Let's not forget him."

Miranda, who is 5-foot-9½, had a 4½-inch height advantage and a seven-inch advantage in reach, but LaPorte had big edges in hand speed in power.

Finally, in the 10th round, LaPorte put his lanky opponent on the floor. Miranda, badly marked about the left eye, was hurt early in the round by a right lead to the jaw. Then as he backed across the ring, he was caught by a left-right, left-right to the head that knocked him down.

Mirando got up quickly and lasted the round. But his corner decided he had had enough.

LaPorte, making his third bid for a title, also lost a controversial decision last January to Eusebio Pedroza in a bid for

Floyd faces 'must win' win situation this week

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Ray Floyd faces a must-win situation this week in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Classic, a lame-duck event that will drop off the PGA Tour schedule next year.

"It's obvious that I must win at least once more to have a chance," Floyd said of his uphill stuggle to overtake Craig Stadler on golf's money-winning list.

The veteran Floyd, enjoying one of the finest seasons of his two-decade career, is the favorite in a 156-man field that includes only two of the year's top 10 money winners.

But even a victory here would not do it for Floyd. He trails Stadler by $54,492 with only five more official events remaining on the schedule this season.

Dodgers' long search for center fielder ends

The Washington Post and Los Angeles Times

Back in the dark ages when the Brooklyn Eagle was closed down forever following a strike, a wag was moved to observe, "That leaves Brooklyn as the largest city in the United States without a daily paper, a mayor, railroad station or left fielder."

But when the team moved to Los Angeles, the problem moved 30 feet to the left. Center field has been the big void for the Los Angeles Dodgers. In the 25 years the club has been in the West, it has had several daily newspaper, mayors, railroad stations, but only one center fielder — Willie Davis.

It has been a frustrating problem. Left field has been successfully patrolled by Wally Moons, Tommy Davis, Lou Johnson, Billy Buckner, and Dusty Baker. For center field, the club had to prowl the Yellow Pages. Names like Billy North, Jimmy Wynn, and Glen Burke kept cropping up.

CENTER FIELD is more than a position on a contender, it's a pivot. It comes with the pennant. It's not entirely necessary a center fielder be able to hit, hit with power, run the bases, or lead by chatter. But it's absolutely essential he be in command of his position. He's the emperor of the outfield. The other players take their cue from him. Old-timers still talk about Terry Moore, who hit .300 only once in his career, but played the outfield alongside the likes of Pepper Martin, Joe Medwick, Country Slaughter and Stan Musial, no less. And a guy named Kiddo Davis stood between Mel Ott and JoJo Moore and Jimmy Ripple, sometimes with a .239 average. Everyone knows what a great center fielder Joe DiMaggio was. Few know that his brother Dominic might have been better. Dominic never hit in 56 consecutive games but he made sure a lot of other people didn't, either.

"The center fielder has to be a rogue," insists Montreal scout Charlie Fox. "He has to take charge out there. He has to go looking for trouble. He has to feel 'center field' extends from foul line to foul line. He has to take every fly ball personally."

CENTER FIELDERS are in such short supply that the best-selling song "Willie, Mickey, and The Duke" was composed because of the extraordinary situation where a single city, New York, had three of the best practitioners of the art a subway ride apart.

Which is why the Dodgers reached out for Kenneth Francis Landreaux in the spring of '81. Kenny seemed to have the speed, range, and attitude of a Mr. Center Field. Unflappable, stoic, but capable, he seemed like the guy you could pencil in the line up at a start of the game and figure everything that stayed in the ballpark thereafter was going to be caught.

The critics were not so easily pleased. "He plays too deep," a Yankee scout complained before the '81 World Series. "It's like he's too afraid of something going over his head." "He's a born left fielder," a broadcaster held forth. "But about center field, I don't know. He plays defensively out there. It's like, at the end of the year, you think back and you don't recall a single super play he made all season."

Manager Tom Lasorda, however, thinks that's the good news. His hat doesn't fall off. "But you notice he makes the play, don't you?" Others are still not so sure: "He's too self-effacing. Sometimes he doesn't even call the other fielders off on his ball." Even the team brochure refrains from throwing its hat in the air. "Gives the Dodgers consistent, if not spectacular, play in center field," is its faint praise.

KEN LANDREAUX didn't make a single error in 1981. He's made only 20 in his life. "Center field is mentally demanding," he explains. "You get tired. You move around on 100 pitches out there. Your concentration is constant. Your positioning depends on what kind of pitch and what kind of hitter. You got to take the attitude anything hit in the general direction is yours. I mean, you get that best look at it. The others look to me to take the ball all the time. They listen for me first to see if I'm going to call the ball off them."

Does he feel he should play with more fire, more excitement? "You have to catch the ball," he says, deadpan. "Sometimes, that's not very exciting. But if you miss the ball, that can be very exciting. Is that the kind of excitement they want?"

Alamogordo overwhelmed

By Associated Press

Mustering the most sincere tone that he could, Alamogordo High School football Coach Gary Hveem tried to explain how his young Tigers might be overwhelmed by a little Astroturf and a lot of city.

"Playing in Albuquerque is a real treat for us," said Hveem. "It's a bowl game type of thing for us, getting to play on the nice stuff (Astroturf). We're just a bunch of little guys from the desert."

The fact is neither Hveem nor the Tigers have ever been awed by the prospects of taking on an Albuquerque team. Last season Alamogordo won the District 3AAAA title, beating out perennial Albuquerque powers Highland and Sandia.

On Saturday night, Alamogordo makes its first of two trips to Albuquerque to meet Del Norte in a non-district game. The Tigers are 2-0 and ranked No. 7 in AAAA while Del Norte is struggling in the early going with an 0-2 mark.

WEST TEXAS SPORTS

MC hosts Major Zone net play starting Friday

Some of the state's best pros and amateur tennis players will competed at Midland College Friday through Monday in the United States Tennis Association Major Zone tournament.

"This tournament counts toward national and state rankings by the USTA, which makes it quite important for players trying to achieve national stature," said Dr. Leon Dulin, Midland College coach and tournament director.

The tourney is for adult rankings with championship brackets in men's and women's singles and doubles. Also slated are open men's and women's singles, mixed doubles and husband-wife doubles.

Play begins at 8 a.m. each day and Friday's schedule includes championship and open singles. Doubles begin Saturday.

Billy Freer, pro at Lakeway Club, is the top seeded player while Ron Hagerman, a teaching pro from Dallas and defending regional champion, is No. 2 seed. Also expected to compete for the men's title is Jon Brotherton, teaching pro from Weeks Park Club, Wichita Falls.

"All our Midland College players are competing and I'm excited about seeing them in action, especially the men," Dulin said. "We have three returning players from last year's team, but all nine of our men are new to MC this year. All they've done is play each other and I want to see them competing against other players."

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech cagers from teams of the 1960s will square off against another team of Tech graduates rounded up from the 1970s at 12:30 p.m. Sept. 25 at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The Alumni game will be part of homecoming festivities which conclude with the Tech-Baylor game at 7:30 p.m.

Former Odesssan Dub Malaise, organizer of the game, rounded up the team from the 1960s, which will include the starters from the 1962 title team. Among the players will be Midland's Royce Woolard. Malaise, who led Tech to the 1965 SWC title, still holds nine Tech records.

Coach Gerald Myers, who played back in the 1950s and does not qualify, will coach the 1970s team, which will include Abilene's Richard Newton and Keith Kitchens, now coaching in Shallowater.

NFLPA threatens strike Tuesday, unless

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association will go on strike Tuesday, just two weeks into the season, unless there is a breakthrough in contract negotiations resuming Friday, union leader Ed Garvey says.

Garvey confirmed Wednesday night what sources in the NFLPA and elsewhere in the labor movement told The Associated Press earlier, that Monday night's Green Bay Packers-New York Giants game will be the last one played until a new collective bargaining agreement is reached.

The formal decision will be made by the union's nine-member executive committee at a meeting Monday in New York, Garvey said.

The first game to be affected by pro football's first regular-season strike would be Atlanta at Kansas City on Thursday.

The owners have indicated they will try to put on games despite a strike, using free agents along with any regular players who defy the union. The NFLPA has signed a contract with Ted Turner's cable television superstation, WTBS, to stage a series of makeshift all-star games.

"This is totally consistent with what we have heard all along," Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the owners' NFL Management Council, said of the Tuesday strike date. "The NFLPA has had a master plan to strike."

He vowed that a strike will not gain the players their main goal, a salary scale based on a fixed percentage of the 28 clubs' gross revenues.

Sources who asked not to be identified told the AP that the executive committee decided earlier this week to walk out Tuesday with virtually no advance notice for fear that the players would be locked out by the owners.

Garvey, the NFLPA executive director, at first called the report premature. However, he was quoted in today's editions of The New York Times as saying later, "Our choices were to announce a strike for Tuesday or to wait a week. In any event, we were going to announce it Monday. But the sentiment is to do something sooner, if we find Friday that the owners are still not serious about bargaining."

Lake Livingston received high marks in recent fishery surveys conducted by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists.

The sprawling 82,600-acre reservoir blossomed into a fine largemouth bass fishery shortly after impoundment in the early 1970s, and biologists believe the fertile reservoir is continuing to be productive for largemouths and a number of other game fish species.

Livingston is a water-supply reservoir contfolled by the Trinity River Authority and it covers portions of Polk, San Jacinto, Walker and Trinity Counties.

District Management Biologist Charles Menn of Houston, who supervised the management survey of the lake, said the overall fertility of the water, abundant aquatic vegetation and other fish-holding structure and good forage bass apparently have combined to support a vigorous fishery in the 12-year-old reservoir.

BIOLLOGISTS conducted water quality analyses and used gill nets and electroshocking equipment to collect data on the status of the various fish communities. They also interviewed fishermen, marina operators and TRA personnel.

Menn said the surveys indicated the largemouth bass population has held up well since the previous survey.

The reservoir's continuing popularity was reflected by a total of 53 bass tournaments held there during 1982 — the fourth largest number for Texas lakes. Further evidence of the good largemouth fishery was the 1981 bass club survey conducted by the department where tournament results were evaluated in five categories. Livingston was ranked 11th in the state.

WHITE BASS populations appear also to be maintaining high levels.

Menn added that good populations of both gizzard and threadfin shad may be one reason for high game fish populations and are a major diet item for largemouth bass as well as white bass and stripers. "In fact, about 44 percent of all fish taken in the cove rotenone collections were threadfins, at about 28 pounds per acre," he said.

The survey also indicated good populations of crappies and the three major catfish species, blue, channel and flathead or yellow.

HUNTING PLACES — If you are trying to find a trophy deer hunting ranch now, you are probably out of luck. Especially for those well known trophy white-tail ranches in South Texas. About the only thing you're going to find that might be decent for whitetails or mule deer are day leases. And where I don't know.

But maybe we've solved some of your problems. A good friend of mine and ex-West Texas farmer called me the other day and said, "I'm now in the hunting outfitter business and have put together some excellent mule deer, whitetail, aoudad sheep and turkey hunts in West Texas, New Mexico and Colorado." And according to his credentials and land he has leased, this might just be your answer.

The man's name is Ted Smith. He now offers mule deer and elk hunting in Colorado and whitetail and mule deer plus aoudad sheep, turkey and quail in West Texas.

I can't advise you on his out-of-state hunts because I'm not familiar with the areas, but he says he will be hunting the area around Crested Butte which is a good region for big bull elk and trophy-size mulies.

But I do know about a place in West Texas he has leased and for sure it's a dandy. It's the P.K. Ranch near Dickens. But who would think a good population of whitetails would inhabit this barren-looking region? I thought that the first time I ventured onto the ranch, but the first day out made a believer out of me.

I normally try not to tell of various hunting outfitter transactions, simply to save my name, but I believe this man knows what he's doing and he's got some fine ranches to hunt. There are so many outfitters in Texas and elsewhere that are out for a buck and that's not a buck deer either.

Give Ted a call at 806-596-4312 or write him for information C/O T Bar Hunting, Route 1, Box 140, Paducah, Texas, 79248.

Martinez, Garza top Honor Roll

By Associated Press

Glenn Youngblood, Venustino "Tuffy" Martinez and Sammy Garza were masters of the comeback for their schoolboy football teams last week.

And for bringing their teams back from the brink of defeat, the trio has earned mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

A few miles away in Port Isabel, Martinez was busy quarterbacking the Tarpons and intercepting three passes, the last a 55-yard return for the winning touchdown with 5:53 toplay in a 1-12 victory over Class 4A Brownsville Pace.

Youngblood scored the winning touchdown on a 13-yard run with one minute to play to give Three Rivers a 40-35 victory over Nixon.

Moments before scoring the winning touchdown, Youngblood, a 6-2, 165 halfback, had returned an interception 100 yards for a touchdown. He also caught a 43-yard touchdown pass.

"He doesn't look like he's running fast but those long legs are stretching out," Three Rivers Coach Curry Newport said. "He's just a good all-around athlete. He runs on our sprint relay and mile relay team and he was an all-district basketball player last year."

Port Isabel Coach Alex Leal had to do a double-take after watching Martinez' winning run.

"He ran over four or five tacklers and he's only about 150 pounds," Leal said. "It was sheer determination. When he broke into the open it looked like everyone else was on the ground."

Garza completed 16 of 22 passes for 236 yards, had touchdown passes of 27, 20, 16 and 10 yards and ran one yard for another score.

"The most impressive thing was the last drive where he was a general on the field," Harlingen Coach Jim Walker said. "He took us all the way down the field and never lost his composure. But that's what winners do, they come through in the clutch."

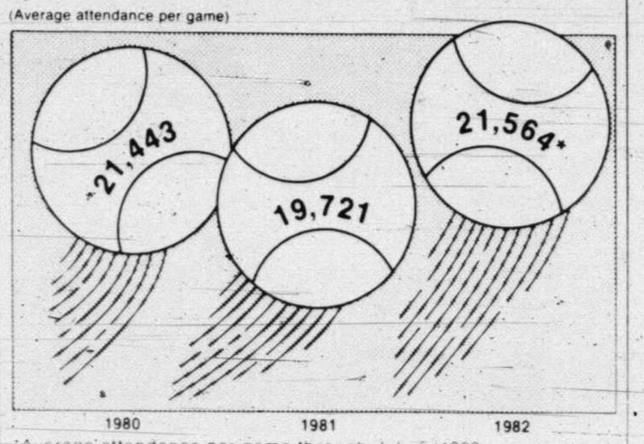
Baseball game attendance up despite 1981 strike

Although attendance in 1981 dropped from an average of 20,865 per game before the strike to 18,362 afterwards, by the end of the season it had picked up. Year-end totals for 1982 could break previous attendance records.



*Average attendance per game through July 5, 1982

ting strokes.

"AT GODDARD, I had the best instruments in the world. I was putting satellites around foreign planets, so it was easy to measure my stroke and develop devices to analyze putting. I had discovered I would break my wrists at the point of contact, thereby detouring from a straight line from club head to cup."

Eight years ago the Pelz Golf Research firm was formed for the purpose of marketing products Dave had developed during his midnight studies.

"I took a year's leave of absence from NASA to start the company," relates Pelz. "I lost every cent. But I had such faith in what I was going that I mortgaged the house and both cars to raise capital to keep going."

It eventually began to pay off. "The pros heard about it and began coming to me. I currently work with 10 men and three women on the tour. I don't give away any equipment. I make them buy it. If you give somebody something, chances are they won't use it.

Some of Pelz's clients have so much faith in what he is doing that they have purchased stock in the firm.

TOM KITE, who plays out of Midland's Green Tree CC, is one of the pros who is sold on Pelz' methods. Others who use his putting aides and come to Dave for advice are Andy North, Tom Jenkins, Joe Inman, Allen Miller, Jim Simon, Mark Hayes, Tom Pritchett, D.A. Weibring and Peter Jacobson. His women clients are Beth Daniel, Jan Stephenson, and Vivian Brownlee.

Before the golfer can make best use of such items as Pelz' Teaching Putter and metal Putting Track, his stroke has to be analyzed. This is done scientifically with a computer. "At first, it was about six feet long. It recorded the complete putting stroke, including the direction of the face of the clubhead at the all important point of impact, whether it was open or closed, by shooting out a light beam. We have since reduced the size of the computer so that it is more compact, about the size of a dozen golf balls."

PELZ IS particularly proud of the success Simon has enjoyed. Each of his wins has come after visits to the plant. "Simon has been in contention to win tournaments five times during his career and he has won four of them."

"We discovered in analyzing his putting style, he didn't line up his putter face and follow through on a straight line. However, he made adjustments at point of impact to correct it, unwittingly, of course. As a result, sometimes he putted beautifully and sometimes poorly. What he lacked was consistency."

It's easy to keep the devices handy. "All of our aids are designed so they fit right into the golf bag," says Pelz.

IT HAS been less than a month since Pelz moved his entire operation to Abilene. "We had our production plant in Chicago and our research facilities in Laurel, Md., where I lived. It was wearing me out hopping from one place to another."

"Kite and Jenkins both suggested Abilene's Fairway Oaks because it had a great golf facility and superb greens, much like these at Green Tree," Pelz said.

"I had never been to Abilene, but from the description it was just what I was looking for. And the year round weather was just what I needed, a place where golf could be played the year round, particularly in November and December when the golfers come off the tour and work on their game."

Pelz lives off the tenth tee and the plant is in a new building adjacent to Fairway Oaks, home of the LaJet Classic. And now Pelz is into developing his own line of woods and irons.

Pelz is still adjusting to Texas and asked about the sandstorms, obviously hoping someone would tell him it wasn't really so. "You mean the sand gets in the house, even with the windows closed?"

"I GET calls at all times of the night from pros having putting troubles. Frequently, they fly in for a quick fix and that's another thing that makes Abilene ideal. It's so easy to get to and from the airport."

Does it still bug Dave that he could never beat Nicklaus?

"Not really. In fact, although I don't get to play golf as much as I would like, I really am enjoying it more. It doesn't bother me when I shoot an 80."

As a rusty sometime golfer, he shot a 69 in Monday's NTPGA Pro-Am.

Of course, at this stage in his career, Jack is having trouble with his putting. Dave says, "Jack was such a natural putter that he never thought about what he was doing. Now, that his touch has deserted him, he doesn't know what he's doing wrong. He really doesn't know where to look to correct it."

"Golfers like those I work with, have taken apart, analyzed and rebuilt their putting swings. They know what they are trying to do. It helps."

The ultimate irony: Has Jack come to you for help, Pelz is asked?

Rockets send Moses Malone to 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers, perennial playoff contenders, may have found the big rebounder they need to win a National Basketball Association championship in center Moses Malone, last season's Most Valuable Player.

The Houston Rockets, who traded the 6-foot-10 free agent to Philadelphia on Wednesday, are looking toward the future — specifically, the future of the Cleveland Cavaliers and possibility of getting two-time college basketball player of the year Ralph Sampson of Virginia.

Houston sent Malone — who had signed a six-year, $12.7 million offer sheet with Philadelphia on Sept. 2 — to the 76ers for 7-foot forward Caldwell Jones and Philadelphia's first-round pick in the 1983 college draft. That first-round pick was acquired by Philadelphia from Cleveland in a 1977 trade for the late Terry Furlow, meaning the Rockets will now draft in Cleveland's spot.

"Cleveland won 45 games last year and the club closest to them had 31 victories, so the law of averages suggests Cleveland will not finish very high in 1982-83," said Houston General Manager Ray Patterson.

Moses Malone ...for Caldwell Jones

The Rockets hope to use that pick to draft either the 7-foot-4 Sampson or possibly 7-foot Georgetown center Pat Ewing, if he chose to pass up his last two years of college eligibility.

"We're capable of winning a championship, but everybody's got to play together and everybody's got to work hard," Malone said at a press conference in Philadelphia.

Malone, 28, a five-time All-Star and two-time MVP, said he thought he would fit in well with Philadelphia's fast-break style, rather than Houston's deliberate offense.

"I think I'll be a better player with a team that runs," he said.

Malone has been one of the top centers in the NBA since coming to the league in 1976. He is considered one of the best rebounders in league history.

Last season, Malone played in 81 games and averaged 31.1 points, second in the league, and better than 14 rebounds per game, best in the NBA. He handed out 142 assists.

Jones, 32, played six years with the 76ers and averaged 7.2 rebounds per game.

The trade ended a dispute over the multimillion dollar offer sheet signed by Malone, who has been with five teams during an eight-year pro career.

Houston, which had until Sept. 18 to match the offer, claimed that the offer contained illegal provisions aimed only at making the Rockets pay more to keep Malone. NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien and the Rockets challenged the agreement.

Year makes difference

CINCINNATI (AP) — Flashback to National Football League Opening Day 1981: Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson, intercepted twice, is booed by hometown fans and ultimately replaced by Turk Schonert, who rallies the team to victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

One year later, Opening Day 1982: Anderson completes 29 of 40 passes for 354 yards and two touchdowns against Houston, showing the same form that made him the NFL's Most Valuable Player last season.

Fan reaction? Wild applause. After leading the Bengals to a 12-4 record and their first appearance in the Super Bowl last season, Anderson no longer is subjected to boos in Riverfront Stadium.

But Anderson, as articulate as he is low-key, accepts the applause with little more emotion than when he was booed. It's not his style to criticize or alibi when losing, or to get big headed when he's a hero.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Work history, hobbies part of health record

Dear Dr. Solomon: The plant where I work is providing complete physical examinations to all workers. When I went for mine, the doctor asked me a lot of questions about all of the jobs I ever held and even asked if I had any hobbies. Is this the way an examination is usually done and, if so, what's the purpose of it? — Vincent, Beckley, W.Va.

Dear Vincent: A number of illnesses, such as lung disease, can be traced to environmental exposure to various hazards. For example, lung disease may be caused by asbestos or coal or several other industrial products. By taking a complete history of a person's work experience and hobbies, a doctor may be able to arrive at a diagnosis that could otherwise be made only by performing a biopsy.

The history is particularly important in the diagnosis of lung disease since the condition often does not develop until many years after the individual has been exposed to the particular hazardous product.

Dear Dr. Solomon: From what I understand, many of the illnesses we have today are due to the kind of life we lead. Many of us eat too much, drink too much and smoke too much, and this causes us to get sick. Since I have arthritis, I'm wondering if this is due to the fact that people aren't as active today as they used to be. I don't remember hearing my grandparents complaining about arthritis, but they were a lot more physically active than I ever was. — Jimmy, Atlanta.

Dear Jimmy: Arthritis is not a new disease. A study by Dr. Juliet Rogers, of the Royal Infirmary in Bristol, England, suggests that arthritis was as much of a problem to our ancestors as it is to us; however, the types of disease and the disability they caused may have been different from what they are today.

She bases her conclusions on an investigation of 400 skeletons dating as far back as the first century.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor dropped in to see me while I was giving my child an alcohol sponging because he had some fever. She said that alcohol should never be used this way because it is too dangerous, and that she uses lukewarm water. Is this her own idea or is there something to what she says? — Mrs. K.F., Waynesboro, Va.

Dear Mrs. F.: Many parents use alcohol sponging to lower temperature when a child is feverish. However, there is always the possiblity that some of the alcohol may get into the child's eyes if the youngster struggles or moves around a lot. Therefore, some physicians suggest that sponging with lukewarm water may be a better idea since it is safer, even though it is not as effective as alcohol.

For Mrs. A.W.: There is no definite answer to the question of why fetal movements increase when a pregnant woman exercises. One theory is that it results from a decrease in oxygen as a result of the exercise but, as I say, this is just a theory.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Childhood cancer has forgotten victim: siblings

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SEATTLE — The forgotten victims of childhood cancer — the brothers and sisters of those who fall ill — are often confused, frightened and ignored by their parents, according to a new study.

But the research by the University of California-San Francisco graduate nursing program also found that siblings can eventually derive strength from the ordeal.

"The stresses of living with a brother or sister (with leukemia) had a profound impact on the lives of the healthy siblings in this study," said Robin F. Kramer, who gave the report Tuesday at the 14th International Cancer Congress.

"Their statements reflected the magnitude of the deprivation, social isolation and anxiety they felt," she said.

On the other hand, the stresses also have positive effects "such as enhanced awareness, sensitivity and communication," Ms. Kramer said.

A few decades ago, a diagnosis of leukemia was almost a death sentence for children stricken with the blood disorder. Now well over a third of some 2,500 American youngsters stricken annually will survive more than five years and many recover and live normal lives. Even those who can't be saved often live several years with the disease.

This prognosis poses "a new challenge for families" as they try to maintain a normal home life, Ms. Kramer said.

To study the impact of leukemia on families, the nursing team talked to 11 healthy siblings, ages 6 to 16, of children with the disease. Each child was interviewed for an hour.

A major source of stress, the study found, was the parents' preoccupation with the sick child. "Because the illness required enormous amounts of time and energy, all family activities began to revolve around the leukemic child's needs," it said.

The youngsters felt their parents expected more from them and tolerated less, and many were hungry for attention, Ms. Kramer said. Such conditions, she said, produced "anger and resentment which ... eventually led to feelings of guilt" heightened by fears that the sick brother or sister would die.

The study found the children felt confused and lonely because parents spent days with a hospitalized child or made constant trips to clinics and doctors.

As the sick child's condition deteriorated, or during painful therapies, confusing changes in appearance and behavior occurred. "This was extremely frightening to (brothers and sisters) and led to fears surrounding their own ... vulnerability," the study said.

But the youngsters interviewed also showed positive signs, she said. "They talked about 'growing up a lot,' being more tolerant of others, having a better attitude toward most things and developing inner strengths."

She said many of the problems might be eased by keeping all members of the family informed of the disease and its progress, and more directly involved with the sick child.

What will happen to my local rates? Is it true they're going to skyrocket?

What about my telephone service?

I've heard the telephone company's splitting up. What's happening?

LET'S TALK

Let's Talk. You're probably heard about changes coming to Southwestern Bell. You may have questions about those changes. If so, we want to make sure you get answers.

Q. I've heard stories about "divestiture" and the telephone company splitting up. What's happening?

A. AT&T has agreed with the Department of Justice to separate itself from the local operations of 22 Bell telephone companies. So within 18 months of when the agreement goes into effect, Southwestern Bell will become an independent company.

Q. If Southwestern Bell is "on its own" without AT&T behind it, won't the quality of my telephone service be affected?

A. No. You can expect the same dependable service you have now. And you'll have the same dedicated people standing behind it.

Q. What will happen to my local rates? Is it true they're going to skyrocket?

A. Rates are not going to skyrocket. But they will go up. Local rates will rise because of many factors, among them inflation and changes in accounting and financial procedures. In addition, Southwestern Bell has been subsidizing local telephone service with profits from long distance and other services. In the future, local service will have to pay more of its own cost.

If you've got other questions, let's talk. Just call 1-800-555-5000 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

One last look

A dark wood coffin containing the body of Princess Grace of Monaco, former American actress Grace Kelly, was returned to the palace Wednesday. The princess, 52, died Tuesday of injuries she received Monday in an automobile accident. Also injured was her 17-year-old daughter, Princess Stephanie. At left, residents of Monaco gather outside the Palatina Chapel, waiting for a chance to view the body.

Princess lies in state in palace chapel

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MONACO — Bereaved citizens of Monaco entered the palace chapel here Wednesday to pay their last respects to Princess Grace, whose death at age 52 Tuesday raised questions about the official version of the autmobile accident that killed the United States-born former actress.

Only natives of the principality — from government minsiters to the humblest citizen — were allowed inside the chapel, where the body of the princess, wearing a white lace dress, was lying in state in an open dark-wood coffin.

Six soldiers in ceremonial uniform stood guard around the catafalque, which was surrounded by arrangements of orchids and candlesticks.

The state funeral, to be attended by political and cultural figures from around the world, is to be held on Saturday, the palace announced.

Flags were lowered to half-staff following the midight announcement that Princess Grace had died late Tuesday of the injuries sustained when her Rover 3500 plunged into a ravine in the hills overlooking Monte Carlo on Monday.

Throughout the old city perched on the Monaco Cliff overlooking the Mediterranean, stores, restaurants and museums closed their doors, adorning the window portraits of the princess with black ribbons in sign of mourning, while the celebrated casinos of this gambler's paradise also remained closed Wednesday.

Early Wednesday, as residents heard the news on morning broadcasts, crowds of hushed onlookers formed outside the palace, held back by police as official cars ferried prominent Monaco figures to offer condolences to Prince Rainier.

Much of the whispered conversation centered on the shock of the announcement that Princess Grace had died overngiht of a brain hemorrhage.

The princess — who was returning to Monaco with here younger daughter, Stephanie, from the family property in Roc Agel, France, when their car missed a hairpin turn — had been reported to be suffering only broken bones.

Worried speculation also grew over the condition of Stephanie, 17, who was officialy said to be suffering from "superficial bruises."

Informed sources said Wednesday that the young princess had in fact sustained injuries to the cervical vertibrae, had been fitted with a neck brace and would not be released from hospital for several weeks. They added that she had not yet been told of the death of her mother.

The cause of the accident that cost the life of Princess Grace and injured her daughter remained unclear Wednesday, as French police in Menton, near the principality, kept tightlipped about the circumstances.

According to the official version, the driver was Princess Grace, who lost control of the car due to a "defeciency in the braking system," sending it hurtling 40 yards downhill before it came to rest in the garden of a villa near the hillside town of La Turbie, France.

PUBLIC NOTICE

On September 8, 1982, Texas Electric Service Company, a subsidiary of Texas Utilities Company, together with Dallas Power & Light Company and Texas Power & Light Company, also subsidiaries of Texas Utilities Company, filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas a joint request for a determination under Section 63 of the Public Utility Regulatory Act that a proposed corporate reorganization involving such companies is consistent with the public interest.

Under the proposed reorganization the three subsidiaries will be consolidated into a single electric utility company, Texas Utilities Electric Company, but each will retain its local identity and continue to provide electric service to its present customers as divisions of the new company. A fourth division will be organized to assume the engineering, design, construction and operation of power plants for the system. The rates for electric service of Texas Electric Service Company will continue in effect for the customers served by it.

Further information concerning this filing may be obtained from the Public Utility Commission of Texas and a copy thereof is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices.

TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — What other actors and actresses yearned for and tried to fake, beg, borrow or buy, Grace Kelly was born with and never gave a second thought.

The matter of class is almost beyond definition. It's knowing instinctively what is the right thing to do in any given situation, keeping your dignity when all about you didn't have much to begin with, having values that carry Roman numerals instead of price tags.

The families in Ireland and the American-bound boats may not have been that far back in years, but the time-telescoping way that things can turn out nicely in this country meant that there was something old and patrician about the Kellys of Philadelphia.

Her patrician good looks were so different from the vivid good looks of a thousand other young actresses that she was a novelty. In the group picture you would place her with Katharine Hepburn, Greer Garson and Deborah Kerr.

Grace Kelly was a very good actress, as she proved convincingly in "The Country Girl" with William Holden and an uncustomarily dramatic Bing Crosby. But she was also a most engaging comedienne, and her insouciant and kittenish charm in "Rear Window" opposite James Stewart enhanced a sophisticated romantic performance that was one of the best of its kind.

She would certainly have become an even better actress had she stayed with it. But if your private life has the makings of a fairy tale, you really have no choice but to play it out.

And if the empire you are to rule consists mostly of croupiers and tax avoiders, that role, too, can be played with a most marvelous dignity and reserve.

Without a lot of fanfare and personal acclaim, Princess Grace made Monaco and the palace centers for good works, in aid of the International Red Cross and the betterment of television, the one undertaking was no less monumental than the other.

It is just that the allure of the strong and elegant woman who will see her man eye to eye, not from beneath fluttering lashes, has been rare on the screen. You think of Garbo and Hepburn again. It was a bafflement and perhaps even a trouble in a town where women preferrably come out of molds, and don't break them.

I have no idea whether the fairytale life was as pleasing as it looked.

But whatever she felt, including whatever she felt about the publicity attending her elder daughter's conspicuous and unsatisfactory marriage, remained her secret. She had not had to acquire royal dignity as a princess; she had conducted herself with a serene and regal dignity all the days of her professional life.

She managed, better than most actors and actresses, the private life of a public figure. She also reminded us what a various and sometimes contradictory institution Hollywood can be. It seems a shame that she did not make more movies; it seems a tragedy that there was so much vibrant life ahead of her when she died on Tuesday.

Ronald Reagan president who can 'live beyond the day'

By V.H. KRULAK
Copley News Service

At rare moments in history, there appear men who, as Oscar Wilde said, "can think beyond the moment; live beyond the day."

President Reagan is one of those men. He seized the attention of the whole world when he told the Soviet Union that he was not interested in SALT — strategic arms limitation talks — but that his goal was START — strategic arms reduction talks.

And he qualified himself as a man of vision when he proposed to the Soviets that they join in a major reduction in theater nuclear arms in Europe. The Russians are still pondering how to react to these initiatives.

His proposal of concrete steps to bring peace to the troubled peoples of the Middle East exhibits the same kind of vision. The world sees, at long last, a proposition that could put meat on the skeleton of the Camp David accords, offering hope of solution to a problem, some of whose roots are 25 centuries old.

It is quite understandable that neither side welcomed the plan. Like any good compromise, it is unpopular with all concerned.

THE PLO HAS NO INTENTION of endorsing the Reagan formula. Violent armed action against Israel is their meat and potatoes and recognition of Israels's right of survival as a nation under U.N. Resolution 242 is not consistent with their aims, nor is an autonomous Palestinian posture on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

But in the final analysis, Yasser Arafat and his hard-line aspirations are not likely to be the critical factor. His PLO is badly hurt by the Beirut defeat, fragmented and dispersed, and actually does not represent the Palestinians at large.

The decisive force on the Arab side must be Jordan and the attitude of its King Hussein. His initial reaction, rejecting the Reagan plan because it did not provide for a Palestinian state, had to be a knee-jerk act. Certainly, he cannot want a nation led by a group of terrorist extremists on his border and he will be well advised to join with the more moderate Arab countries in negotiating with Israel on the basis of the Reagan formula.

NOR CAN PRIME MINISTER Menachem Begin's summary rejection of the peace plan hold up. His contention that relinquishing the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip will hazard Israeli lives is not valid. Begin knows, given today's military technology, that Israeli occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip will have little effect on the physical security of his country, one way or the other. It is a melancholy fact that relatively cheap and simple rockets with a 40-kilometer range can menace the heart of Israel from positions well outside Gaza or the West Bank.

No, the security Begin seeks will come only if there is a disposition to peace on the part of the activist Arab world that has so troubled Israel in the past. And he has no chance whatsoever of creating that disposition to peace without taking some chances. That is what President Reagan was trying to tell him when he announced the American plan, appealing to Israel to sacrifice territory for peace.

THE ISRAELI PRIME MINISTER would do well to take the president's appeal to heart, remembering John Paul Jones' words: "He who will not risk, cannot win."

There are several factors, apart from its timeliness, that tend to give strength to the Reagan plan. Among them are the attitudes of Egypt and Morocco which genuinely want peace, of Syria, exhausted by the Lebanon war and disenchanted with its Russian patron, and of Saudi Arabia which cannot be excited about having to bankroll the reconstitution of the decimated PLO.

The meeting of the leaders of 22 Arab countries in Fez, Morocco, lends credence to this scenario. While their announced basis for negotiation is tough — a Palestinian state, relinquishment of occupied Gaza and the West Bank, a piece of Jerusalem — it is a first offer, and they are prepared to negotiate.

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — When the strikingly modern Sanctuary of Guadalupe opens next month in this northern industrial city, prayers will be heard with the help of some Texas businessmen.

Acoustical engineers from the Dallas-based consulting company of Joiner, Pelton, Rose Inc. planned how to cut the echo that would have garbled speech inside.

"They would have had a big barn," said David Joiner of Dallas, the company's president. "We came on board when the structure was up. There's no one in Mexico who does this type of work."

Joiner said that after the acoustical work was done people can stand 50 to 60 feet apart in the pyramid-shaped Roman Catholic cathedral and still be understood.

"This one was particularly difficult because of its shape and size," he said.

The work includes selecting the materials that will absorb sound properly, shaping the walls and developing the mechanical sound system.

Joiner said the company, which has an office in Monterrey, is working for expenses only because it is a community project.

Gemayel's death may have killed Lebanon

BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel died because he was making unexpectedly good progress in gaining the cooperation of several of Lebanon's rival factions prior to assuming office next week.

An Analysis

Only hours before his slaying, Gemayel persuaded the Druze chieftain, Walid Jumblatt, to accept a cabinet post in his new government, suppressing for the time being the blood feud between them.

When, earlier this week, older Moslem politicians crossed into Christian-dominated East Beirut to pay hommage to Gemayel as their country's new president, it proved too much for extreme leftists in the Moslem sector of the city. They resumed fighting, attacking Lebanese army units, the Christian militia and even French soldiers of the cease-fire supervision force. The incident turned out to be a prelude to Gemayel's assassination.

THE INTRICACIES OF LEBANESE politics are fatally imprinted by years of carnage. Nonetheless, there is a relatively clear answer to the question of who stands to benefit most from the president-elect's elimination. The answer is: Syria.

Behind the mind-boggling complications of the Lebanese scene, one indelible fact never changes. The Syrians look on Lebanon as an integral part of Greater Syria. Their long-term program is to annex it once its inability to maintain itself as a cohesive state has been demonstrated to the world's – especially the Arab world's – satisfaction.

Whatever else he was, Gemayel represented Lebanese determination to resist that policy. The Maronite Christians, whose chief he became in succession to his elderly father, consider themselves the historical founders and defenders of Lebanese independence.

He and his Phalange militia followers had much blood on their own hands. During the 1975-76 civil war and after, they fought and killed not only opposing Lebanese leftists, Palestinians and Druzes, but also competing Christians. Survivors may have been only too eager to avenge themselves on Gemayel personally.

BUT IN AN INTERVIEW WITH this reporter during the Israeli siege of west Beirut, Gemayel unmistakably expressed the shame he felt at the anarchy and degradation that had overtaken his country. His sincerity seemed beyond doubt. He spoke bitterly of the many corrupt Lebanese politicians who had become little more than the suborned agents of the Syrians, the Saudis or the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Gemayel was widely condemned by Arab extremists for friendly relations with Israel. But even they did not accuse him of taking Israeli bribes. He appeared to be a rarity among Lebanese politicians: he was money honest.

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

PEKING (AFP) — China and the Soviet Union will hold their first major bilateral talks in more than two years next month, Western diplomatic sources said here Tuesday.

The sources said that the talks between the two communist giants, at odds for two decades, would likely be held in Peking and include discussion of a range of issues affecting Sino-Soviet ties.

It was not clear if the discussions would focus on their long-standing border dispute or normalization of relations. The broder talks were suspended in 1978, and China broke off the normalization negotiations in January 1980, after the Soviet invasion of Afghansitan.

But the countries have had talks since then on trade and border navigation.

The Chinese have said they would use any border talks with the Soviet Union to raise other issues, such as Afghanistan and Cambodia. Moscow's ally, Vietnam, has more than 150,000 troops supporting a communist government in Cambodia.

There was no confirmation of the diplomats' report from the Chinese government, which claims that the 4,200-mile border with the Soviet Union is the result of "unequal" treaties between Czarist Russia and Imperial China.

The dispute has triggered bloody clashes between the two countries, including a confrontation in 1969 that left dozens dead on both sides on the banks of the Amur and Ussuri rivers along the border.

Soviet sources also declined comment on a resumption of talks, but noted that China had still not responded to Moscow's latest note last February in a year-long campaign to resume border negotiations.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, faces reporters Wednesday on Capitol Hill, after Senate leaders shelved legislation that would have limited a woman's right to abortion. The Senate tabled the anti-abortion measure after refusing for the third time to halt a filibuster against the legislation. Despite strong backing from the president, the anti-abortion forces failed to muster the 60 votes needed to impose debate-limiting cloture against the filibuster by a block of Senate liberals and moderates. Hatch said he would abandon efforts on the constitutional amendment, which would allow either Congress or state legislatures to prohibit or regulate abortions.

Senate tables anti-abortion bill

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a narrow but major setback for President Reagan and New Right conservatives, the Senate shelved legislation Wednesday night that would have limited a woman's right to an abortion.

By a vote of 47-46, the Senate tabled and thus killed an anti-abortion measure by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., after refusing for a third time to halt a filibuster against the legislation.

The vote in favor of cloture was 50-44, the best showing in attempts by Helms and his conservative allies to halt the filibuster. But it fell 10 votes short.

Before the cloture vote, Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who broke with his fellow conservatives to oppose the anti-abortion efforts, moved to table the Helms' legislation. The narrow adoption of Hayakawa's motion by a one-vote margin appeared to end the abortion battle for this session of Congress.

The anti-abortion amendment sponsored by Helms would have made permanent the present temporary ban on any direct or indirect federal financing of abortions, and would have provided for expedited Supreme Court consideration of any new abortion disputes.

Earlier, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, agreed to postpone until next year debate and possible Senate action on his proposed constitutional amendment that would give both Congress and the states the right to prohibit or restrict abortions.

Although defeated on the abortion controversy, Helms touched off a new filibuster by seeking a vote on a second social issue championed by Reagan and New Right conservatives — school prayer.

Helms asked the Senate to act on his proposal that would bar the Supreme Court from ruling on state laws that permit voluntary prayer in the public schools. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., one of those who filibustered the anti-abortion legislation, promptly served notice a new filibuster was underway.

Helms has sought to attach both his abortion and school prayer measures as riders to a top-priority bill to raise the ceiling on the national debt to $1.3 trillion. This bill must be approved by Sept. 30 to prevent the government from running out of borrowing authority. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker [illegible] who had promised Helms and the conservatives ample time to debate their social issues, showed increasing annoyance over the Senate's inability to act on the debt-limit bill.

"We've got to get this bill passed," Baker told the Senate while [illegible] raised the school prayer matter. "We've d[illegible] of this big issue," he added in reference to [illegible].

Abortion and school prayer are major items in a broad agenda of social issues the New Right forces had hoped to get enacted into law this year. Others include curbs on school busing, a constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget and tuition tax credits for parents of students in private schools.

Young accuses Reagan of inertia

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Detroit Mayor Coleman A. Young, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, accused the Reagan administration Wednesday of "standing on the sidelines" while cities suffer physical and economic decay.

This inaction, Young said, is driving city officials to formulate their own urban policy, which will be proposed to Congress in January.

"No other major country in the world today has a national government that refuses to help stabilize the economies of its population centers or disavows any role in helping its major industries increase their competitive edge in the world marketplace," said Young, whose own city is among those hardest hit by the recession.

Young's remarks, delivered in a stinging speech to the National Press Club, came shortly after he and six other big-city mayors met with President Reagan to discuss a wide range of urban problems, including inadequate mass transportation, decaying streets and sewers and shrinking federal aid.

The Detroit mayor said that although Reagan listened during the 45-minute meeting, it would be a "mistake to think the president has deserted his philosophy." The administration has made it clear that if wants cities to assume a greater share of the cost of their upkeep.

Experts' estimates on the cost of repairing the nation's decaying cities range from $1 trillion to $3 trillion. Testifying before the House Public Works subcommittee on Economic Development Wednesday, H.C. Heldenfels, president of the Associated General Contractors of America, said half the nation's highways, bridges and railbeds need repair.

In his speech, Young said that if such problems are not dealt with soon, "not only will America be unable to start moving forward again, America will not be able to move at all.

"Two years of misery is enough," he said. "Supply-side economics has not worked. It is not working, and it will not work."

In order to combat the "crumbling of America," Young said, the Conference of Mayors — a group of about 850 mayors representing all cities with populations above 30,000 — is meeting with businesses, industries and labor groups to develop its new urban policy.

A draft of the policy is expected in November, and the final version should be presented to Congress in January, Young said.

A conference spokesman said the policy will contain such recommendations as continuing revenue sharing, establishing an emergency jobs program and maintaining federal transportation aid.

Coleman urged Reagan and Congress to "respond to that agenda." He said cities cannot solve their problems alone, "but the fact is that when we look to Washington for leadership, we find the federal government standing on the sidelines and watching us struggle, as though the government were some sort of disinterested party."

Republicans indicate bills will be ignored

Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — House and Senate Republican leaders signaled President Reagan Wednesday that Congress is likely to brush aside much of his campaign-year legislative wish list as it rushes to pass essential spending bills and go home to campaign early next month.

The leaders indicated that among the president's pet projects likely to be sidetracked are school prayer, tuition tax credits, a balanced-budget constitutional amendment, crime control legislation and anti-abortion legislation, which was tabled in the Senate Wednesday.

"Presidents are like senators, they ask for more than they are going to get," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who joined House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., in suggesting that Congress may do little more than pass "must" legislation to continue the government's borrowing and spending authority before Congress recesses in early October.

Even then, there is a "substantial prospect" that Congress will have to return after the Nov. 2 general election to continue work on appropriations for the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1, said Baker, who opposes such a "lame-duck" session but says he feels it may be necessary.

One reason, he indicated, is pressure from appropriations committees for a relatively short-term continuing resolution that would maintain pressure on Congress to pass regular appropriations bills.

Baker met with House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., on the issue of a post-election session Wednesday and is to consult further with other leaders before the issue is resolved.

Although some of Reagan's favorite campaign issues may be relegated to the congressional dustbin, he appeared likely to get at least one appropriations bill from the Democratic-controlled House that he can sign.

The House Wednesday began work on a $47 billion spending bill for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and 17 independent agencies. Republicans said Reagan would sign the measure on the understanding that it would fall within congressional budget ceilings.

The bill does not include money for new subsidized housing projects because authorization levels have not been set. It was agreed on the House floor that any spending over budget targets for projects included in the bill will be offset later by comparable reductions in spending for housing.

With that understanding, "We will have a (presidential) signature on this one," said Rep. Silvio O. Conte, Mass., ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee.

The bill included more money than Reagan requested for operating existing housing projects and for the Environmental Protection Agency, as well as many smaller programs.

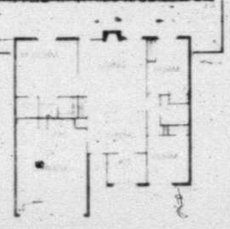
Northgate



You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $91,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 150.7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15.7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7.50% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date the adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 13.50%.
