How's the water?

One of Midland's few negative attributes has been the taste of its water. Last month the city began receiving a mixture of water from Lake Ivie and its two previous sources (Lake Thomas and local wells). Since this new mix has been running through the pipes have you noticed an improvement in taste? Or do you feel Midland water still tastes the same as before? Call Cityline's Community Pulse Poll at 560-2400 and enter category 7655. If you have noticed an improvement in taste, Press 1. If you feel Midland's water has not changed, press 2. You also will have a chance to share your comments. We ask that you leave your name, but that is your option. The non-scientific poll will remain open through Friday at noon; results will be published in the April 16 Reporter-Telegram.

Analysts study bank lending

Top regulators worry about excessive loan risks

■ If committee finds risky loans, it will ask or order changes in policy.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Increasingly concerned that American banks are taking more risks, top regulators are moving to rein in aggressive competition among banks seeking to make business and consumer loans.

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, a Treasury Department agency that oversees the nation's 3,400 federally chartered banks, announced Saturday that its most experienced credit analysts would form a committee to double-check whether the nation's large banks are taking excessive risks.

The committee will work with the agency's bank examiners, who already conduct periodic reviews of banks' business practices.

Banks are charging many customers, particularly large companies, interest rates that barely exceed the banks' own borrowing costs. Banks are also offering more generous terms on loans, like longer periods for repayment.

There is even some evidence that banks are offering more loans to companies and people with bad credit records, although regulators disagree on the extent to which this is a problem.

In recent months, Eugene Ludwig, the comptroller of the Currency; Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Federal Reserve, and other regulators have been giving speeches to bankers urging restraint.

But the actions of the comptroller's office, in creating a new credit-review committee, raises those rela-

Commission looks at 1995 as beginning

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Members of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission are looking at 1995 as a new beginning for the organization, even though it was established almost 20 years ago.

"We are rebuilding the commission," said Maxine Hannifin, who is co-chairman of the commission with Jerry Walton. "We kept those members who were truly interested in the commission and appointed those who had shown an interest in it. We have a really good group now."

Ms. Hannifin said she didn't want to dwell on the past year, which she said was "not very good." She preferred to talk about plans for the commission, which serves as a liaison between the community and various law-enforcement agencies.

WalkAmerica generates funds for healthier babies

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

Working for healthier babies and children is what the March of Dimes strives to do. One way to do that is by raising money for research and education through fund-raisers like WalkAmerica.

The March of Dimes' mission is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects and infant mortality. Through its "Campaign for Healthier Babies," the March of Dimes funds programs of research, community service, advocacy and education, said Mary Applegate Cearley, division director for the March of Dimes.

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the largest walking event in the nation — WalkAmerica. The walk generates thousands of dollars locally and nationally for the March of Dimes Cam-

Vietnam War writer remembers chaos 20 years ago: end of war, death of nation

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer covered the Vietnam War for The Associated Press and was in Saigon when it fell to the Communists. He was expelled from the country, but returned in October 1993 to reopen the AP's bureau in Hanoi.

By George Esper
Associated Press

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — "Finis! Finis!" the South Vietnamese police officer yelled, his arms flailing wildly, his eyes crazed with fear. He raised his pistol to his head and pulled the trigger.

As he lay mortally wounded in the downtown Saigon square, hundreds of his comrades stripped off their uniforms in a desperate attempt to blend in with their victorious northern Communist foes.

By then, the sole remaining American allies — 11 Marines — already had scrambled aboard the final helicopter leaving the besieged U.S. Embassy.

Twenty years ago, on April 30, 1975, a dispirited South Vietnam surrendered to North Vietnam, its lifeline of American blood dried up, its supporting U.S. war machine turned off.

The U.S. toll: 58,153 dead. The Vietnamese toll: 1.1 million Communist fighters, 223,748 South Vietnamese soldiers and nearly 2 million civilians, according to Vietnam's official casualty report, which was released April 3.

The end came in chaos — with South Vietnamese clawing frantically at the U.S. Embassy's chain-link gate, thrusting their babies at American strangers with bags of gems and gold, desperately trying to bully or bribe their way onto the departing helicopters.

Any plans for an orderly evacuation collapsed in panic and bedlam, and hundreds of Vietnamese allies promised safe passage were left behind.

"It still leaves a bad taste in my mouth 20 years later," says Col. Harry G. Summers Jr., then an American negotiator in Saigon. "It was just disgraceful. It was the Vietnam War in microcosm. Good intentions, but fatally flawed execution. The whole thing was just tragedy working itself out."

The beginning of the end came with the dawn of April 29.

For more than three hours, from 4:10 a.m. to 7:15 a.m., North Vietnamese gunners rained rockets and artillery shells onto Tan Son Nhat Air Base, home to the U.S. Defense Attache's Office, the so-called Pentagon East.

The last two Americans killed on Vietnamese territory, Marine Cpls. Charles McMahon Jr., 21, of Woburn, Mass., and Darwin Judge, 19, of Marshalltown, Iowa, died in the assault.

The relentless barrage hastened orders from Washington to pull out all Americans and as many as possible of the Vietnamese thought to be marked for death or prison.

Operation Frequent Wind was the biggest helicopter evacuation in history. The Marines carried 1,373 Americans and 5,595 Vietnamese and other foreigners to safety aboard U.S. carriers in the South China Sea, logging 1,054 flight hours and 682 sorties.

But back in Saigon — immediately renamed Ho Chi Minh City after the legendary Communist leader — all was disintegrating.

The vastly outnumbered South Vietnamese soldiers deserted by the thousands, fleeing with their families. Some were firing their rifles in the air, yelling at the Americans, "We want to go, too!"

"They were nothing more than hoods ... running around with weapons, not even defending their own country," said one of the 11 final Marines, Sgt. Maj. Terry Bennington, now 42.

Vietnamese refugees escape from Vung Tau by boat to wait for U.S. ships to pick them up in March, 1975

Across from the U.S. Embassy, the crowd stripped and stole dozens of abandoned embassy cars. They looted the apartments of departing Americans of furniture, bathroom fixtures, air conditioners, typewriters, books, radios, stereo equipment and food.

As hundreds of South Vietnamese stampeded the embassy gate or tried to scale the surrounding 14-foot wall to reach the helicopters, Marines and civilians beat them back with anything they could find.

"I will die if I stay," screamed a teen-age girl.

Col. John H. Madison Jr., a U.S. negotiator who attempted to calm the mob, reported to Washington that "the situation was clearly beyond control of the Marine guards who began to resort to force. This, in turn, tended to intensify the panic."

Summers, a noted military strategist and author, said in a recent interview that he was furious some Vietnamese were left behind because of the lack of direction.

"I went to Hanoi a week before the fall of Saigon, knowing we were going to get the terms of the U.S. withdrawal. And I asked the embassy what my instructions were, since I had diplomatic status. And the answer was, 'Damned if I know.' And I said, 'What am I supposed to do?' And he said, 'Well, do the best you can.'"

President Nixon had begun a phased withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam in 1969, culminating four years later with the signing of the Paris Peace Agreement. Under terms of that accord, which ended direct U.S. military intervention in Vietnam, North Vietnam released 591 American prisoners of war over the next three months and the United States withdrew its last 23,000 combat troops.

The agreement allowed the United States to maintain 50 military attaches and 1,200 civilians at Pentagon East and 150 Marines at the U.S. Embassy.

As conditions worsened, the United States hurried to evacuate 226 Vietnamese orphans, but Operation Babylift ended in tragedy. The Air Force C-5 carrying the children made a crash landing April 4 after a lock system failed and the doors flew off the plane; 135 people died, including 76 orphans, and more than 100 children were injured, many suffering brain damage from the lack of oxygen.

They fled the country April 21. In a tearful and bitter farewell address, he said the United States had broken a pledge to intervene if North Vietnam violated the 1973 agreement and had "led the South Vietnamese people to death."

Country emerges from chaotic past; Peruvians to vote for president

LIMA, Peru (AP) — In 1990, the last time Peruvians elected a new president, their country was on the brink of anarchy. Inflation was running at 60 percent a month and car bombs exploded in the capital almost daily.

Today they go to the polls in a far different environment. Inflation is down to 1 percent a month and the once deadly Shining Path rebel movement is one step from the grave.

President Alberto Fujimori, the man responsible for the dramatic turnaround, is running for reelection against 13 opponents.

He is clearly favored in the polls, but if he fails to obtain a majority of valid votes today, he will be forced into a runoff against the candidate with the second highest vote total.

Some 12.5 million registered voters will also elect a 120-member unicameral Congress.

In 1990 terrorist attacks and hyperinflation were the dominant electoral issues. In a sign of how things have changed, a recent public opinion survey showed only 4 percent of Peruvians ranked terrorism as a problem today.

"We inherited a disaster in 1990," Fujimori, 56, said Friday night in a nationally televised address closing his campaign. "Reconstructing the country practically from zero has cost enormous efforts and sacrifices. It has been a time of belt-tightening and a hard war against terror."

The public opinion survey showed 50 percent of Peruvians considered unemployment as the next president's top priority. Another 20 percent ranked poverty as the number one problem.

Former U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, 75, Fujimori's chief foe, has focused on those two issues throughout his campaign. Ending his campaign Friday night, he pledged to create 2 million jobs if elected.

"This government has reduced social spending to incredible limits," he said in a nationally televised address. "Poverty is defeated with the creation of jobs. Only 15 percent of work-age Peruvians are adequately employed."

Fujimori's free-market reforms ended a five-year recession and generated nearly 20 percent economic growth in the last two years, the highest rate in Latin America.

But reducing the government deficit and ending hyperinflation also meant eliminating hundreds of thousands of government jobs. More layoffs came as private businesses, struggling to compete with imports, slashed their payrolls.

Fujimori lashed back at charges that he failed to take steps to help the poor when he imposed the severe austerity measures.

"Jobs are created with strong economic growth, not at political rallies with dazzling promises of millions of jobs," he said, clearly angry with what he considered unfair criticism.

Perez de Cuellar also renewed his attacks on Fujimori's authoritarian governing style and accused him of systematically lying to the Peruvian people.

Fujimori "says he is going to take care of the poor but how do we know he is telling the truth this time? How much trust can we have in someone who swore to respect the constitution and then violated it?" Perez de Cuellar said.

He was referring to Fujimori's decision to close the opposition-controlled Congress in April 1992. Fujimori said the step was necessary to push through his economic reforms and crush the Shining Path insurgency.

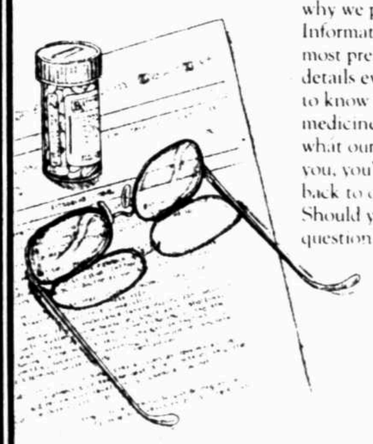

A new Congress later wrote a constitution that made his reelection to a successive term possible.

But Fujimori's weakness as he asks voters for a second five-year term is not his tough governing style. It's jobs.

Gusty wind to blow into Midland

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 90 and southwest winds 20-30 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be mostly clear with a low in the mid-40s.

Monday will be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 53, Saturday's high was 89 compared with the record high for that date of 95 in 1963. The record low for today's date was 28 in 1938.

STATE

It was sunny, breezy and warm across Texas on Saturday with lake wind advisories posted for much of the state. Gusts reached 66 miles an hour in Guadalupe Pass of West Texas.

Temperatures warmed into the 80s and 90s.

The North Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies Sunday with a chance of thunderstorms in the west, with some possibly severe. Highs in the low to mid 80s. Mostly cloudy Sunday night with thunderstorms likely, some possibly severe. Lows ranging from near 50 in the west to mid 60s in the southeast. Cloudy and cooler Monday with showers and thunderstorms likely. Afternoon highs from the low 60s to upper 70s.

South Texas is expected to have partly cloudy skies and southerly winds. Highs in the 80s and 90s with lows in the 60s.

NATION

Rain, snow and wind brought winterlike weather back to the West on Saturday, while record heat warmed parts of the East.

Thunderstorms dropped hail on western Oregon and parts of Idaho and northern Utah.

Snow advisories were in effect for the Cascades. In Oregon, 8 inches of snow fell at Crater Lake, 5 inches on Mount Hood and smaller amounts at Klamath Falls.

Up to 6 inches of snow accumulated in the mountains of northern Utah, mainly east of Logan. Temperatures in the Salt Lake City area had dropped about 25 degrees over the past few days.

Gusty winds of more than 50 mph accompanied thunderstorms in southern Idaho, eastern Nevada and northwest Utah. Strong winds also blew across the California deserts, kicking up dust and sand.

In the Plains, another storm produced snow across eastern Montana and the western Dakotas into the Black Hills. Up to 4 inches of snow fell in northern South Dakota, particularly at Redfield, Chelsea, Roscoe and Edmunds.

SON: Mother learns importance of March of Dimes

(From 1A)

Ms. Sandate and her son have become familiar fixtures at the clinic. It was there that Dr. W. F. Ballesteros diagnosed Joe Lewis as having nephrotic syndrome.

A urine test confirmed the diagnosis. The little boy, who also suffers from high blood pressure, is now on steroids and three diuretics.

The nephrotic syndrome will eventually cause his kidneys to fail and in a few years he will need to be on dialysis. After that he'll need a transplant.

Joe Lewis' form of nephrotic syndrome is more severe than many cases, his mother said. She said he also suffers from focal segmental glomerulosclerosis, which causes damage to the kidneys.

She said treatments have been tried and failed thus far. She said even if he gets a transplant, if the focal segmental glomerulosclerosis is not corrected it will damage the new kidneys.

The disease was found after the reaction to the ant bite. His mother took him to the doctor and he was diagnosed with impetigo and then eczema.

"We took him to the dermatologist, who cured him on the outside, but not the inside," Ms. Sandate recalled.

The prednisone steroid he takes gives the boy a "moon-shaped" face and causes the child's weight to fluctuate between 30 and 40 pounds. Depending upon the day, his clothes range between a sizes 4 and 8 or 10.

A year ago, the boy ballooned to 49 pounds and was in the hospital in Midland for several weeks before being transferred to Fort Worth. He sees Ballesteros and Dr. Alma Medina at the clinic here either once or twice a week and has blood drawn weekly.

'We want people to be more aware and help out more. Before Joe, I may have donated a little by putting a dime in a store display and I didn't realize how important it (The March of Dimes) is'
— Kathy Sandate, mother

Normally, he sees Dr. Bill Allen in Fort Worth every three months, but now he is seen every month in search of a treatment for the glomerulosclerosis. The diuretics are part of the interim treatment, his mother said.

He tires easily and has a hard time keeping up with other children, Ms. Sandate said. She said if he gets too hot, he swells up. If he gets too cold, he has muscle cramps.

The Sandates were asked to be the ambassadors for the March of Dimes by Kristie Trammell, clinic manager.

"We want people to be more aware and help out more. Before Joe, I may have donated a little by putting a dime in a store display and I didn't realize how important it (the March of Dimes) is," Ms. Sandate said.

She's learning, by taking small steps, what it means to be the ambassador.

She started off speaking to students at Coleman High School and stressing the importance of their help in the fight against birth defects and in efforts for healthy babies and children.

Prenatal care will also be an important message for the young mother.

A teen mother herself, Ms. Sandate was only 15 when Joe Lewis was born. She had only seen a doctor once in her pregnancy — that was the week the child was born.

"I was 15 and I didn't know the importance of prenatal care ... now if I had it to do all again I would," Ms. Sandate said.

While prenatal care would not have prevented Joe Lewis' disease, Ms. Sandate said maybe she could have made better preparations.

"The clinic benefits from the March of Dimes, from prenatal care to the vaccines provided. We see a lot of teen moms and we benefit from the March of Dimes research. Joe Lewis is a success story for us," Ms. Trammell said.

"He has given us a lot of enthusiasm and he's doing great."

"We wouldn't make it without the community clinic," Ms. Sandate said.

Ms. Sandate said the clinic has helped by having a dietitian assist them with Joe Lewis' diet, which has to be sodium-free because of his kidney condition.

Without salt, not much fast food is on Joe Lewis' diet.

However, Ms. Sandate said three restaurants help out — Kentucky Fried Chicken, CiCi's Pizza and Central Park. She said they call them up and "we tell them Joe Lewis is coming so they start cooking for him."

"The day he was diagnosed we went out to a movie, ate some popcorn and pizza. The next day Dr. B asked us what Joe Lewis ate and I told him and he said 'no more.' That was when we learned about the special diet," Ms. Sandate said.

But, special diet aside, what is the boy's request for a special drink? Coffee with lots of milk. But, his grandmother tells him "only in the mornings."

"He pretty much gets what he wants," his mother admitted.

Among his favorites — Barney the purple dinosaur, football, baseball and Tejano music.

"We had to buy him his own television and VCR or we would never get to watch TV. He loves to watch Barney," his mother said.

When asked to sing his favorite Barney song, the almost 3-year-old hid his face shyly and began singing "I love you. You love me. We're a happy family with a great big hug and a kiss from me to you." Then he trailed off a bit as he was distracted.

"He has good days and he has bad days," his mother said. "He has bad mood swings."

But, not on this day as he mugs for a camera, flirts with some nurses and basically shows off a winning grin.

Ms. Sandate and Joe Lewis will participate with the clinic in the March of Dimes WalkAmerica on May 13. Plans are for Joe Lewis to ride in a wagon.

"The walk is important to show how people can help. We depend on the community to work for others who need the help," Ms. Sandate said.

"I think people should be aware. Not just because it's my kid, but I would hate for it to happen to someone else's kids too."

BENEFIT: WalkAmerica is about healthy children

paign for Healthier Babies.

Volunteers throughout the Midland area can participate in a five-mile walk on May 13. Each walker solicits contributions from individual sponsors. More than 1,000 walkers are expected to participate. The goal for this year is to raise $60,000.

The theme for this year's walk is "Walk for Someone You Love."

Festivities begin with registration at 8 a.m.; the walk begins 9 a.m. at ClayDesta Plaza. The five-mile route will end at the starting point.

"Your steps in WalkAmerica mean life and health for real babies. To remind yourself of that, why not walk for a special baby — your own child, a niece, a friend's baby. Walk for a baby who was born healthy so that others will be, too.

"Or walk for one of the many thousands born each year with birth defects. Maybe someone you know. Your steps could mean life-saving treatment or even a cure. You might even walk for a pregnant mom and a baby yet unborn," according to the WalkAmerica brochure.

Money raised will enable the March of Dimes to continue funding research, education, and medical services for the prevention of birth defects, Ms. Cearley said.

The area chapter of the March of Dimes has funded grants to a number of area agencies for research and programs, including childhood immunizations and prenatal care.

"Anything to make babies and children healthy," Ms. Cearley said.

The March of Dimes can always use volunteers to keep the efforts going, Ms. Cearley said. Duties include whatever the volunteer's talents are — from helping with mailings and clerical jobs to helping with WalkAmerica from event logistics to handing out water.

WalkAmerica is the March of Dimes' biggest fund-raiser of the year, with 40 percent of the money providing local programs and services within the Northwest Texas Chapter — which includes Midland — and 60 percent going to research.

"To show just how much has been accomplished by the March of Dimes, a few years ago a baby was born with a birth defect every 2 1/2 minutes. Now that figure is one every 3 1/2 minutes. It's getting better. There are still too many babies born with birth defects, but it's getting better," Ms. Cearley said.

"But, March of Dimes isn't just about birth defects, it is also about immunizations and diseases that can be prevented — it's about healthy children," she said.

The following statistics— provided by March of Dimes — are figured for every day in the United States: 411 babies are born with birth defects; 100 babies die; 275 babies are exposed to cocaine in the womb; 140 babies are born with alcohol-related problems; 100 mothers and fathers know the unspeakable grief of losing a baby.

March of Dimes has helped accomplish the following scientific breakthroughs:

- a nationwide rubella immunization program to eliminate the disease, which is a major cause of birth defects;
- the first successful surgical correction of a birth defect in an unborn baby;
- the first successful prenatal diagnosis of sickle cell anemia;
- the first successful bone marrow transplant for treatment of a birth defect; and
- diagnosis of fetal alcohol syndrome — the first time in the United States that birth defects were linked directly to alcohol consumption.

Anyone interested in participating in WalkAmerica, becoming a volunteer or making a contribution can contact the office at 570-0172.

NEW: United Way names executive director

sisted of a cross-section of Midland volunteers, business and community leaders. The nationwide search drew applications from 78 people; Zapora was selected out of four finalists.

Zapora has 15 years of United Way experience. He most recently served as director of resource development and marketing for the United Way of the Quad Cities in Rock Island, Ill. More than $6 million was raised in Zapora's last campaign. He has also held campaign and executive positions with United Way organizations in Oradell, N.J.; Bethlehem, Pa.; Elmira, N.Y.; and Reading, Pa. Campaigns that Zapora directed experienced average annual increases of 8.47 percent; over a 15 year period, his campaigns outperformed the national United Way average by 108 percent.

"The search committee was impressed with Carl's breadth of United Way experience, especially since he had served as the chief executive officer at a United Way the same size as ours," Conaway said. "Carl brings a strong marketing perspective to the job, which we believe will be important to Midland in the future."

Zapora also possesses United Way agency experience. He serves as board president for the Volunteer Center of the Quad Cities, a position that Zapora said "has given me a new appreciation for the hard work done by United Way agencies."

Zapora received a bachelor of science degree in accounting from Albright College in Reading, Pa. He also attended Temple University in Philadelphia for MBA work in marketing studies.

"I'm excited for the opportunity to work with the people and agencies in Midland," Zapora said. "Everyone I have met so far has been very welcoming.

"My first challenge is to learn how we can work more closely together to better serve the needs of the community," he said. "I'm anxious to learn more about this United Way's customers and discover what they want United Way to be doing now and in the future."

United Way of Midland provides funding to programs at 16 local health and human service agencies. The 1994 campaign raised $2.733 million, an increase of 4.7 percent over 1993.

CRIME: 19-year-old commission starts over

School District police officers.

"We don't send other soldiers into duty unarmed," Ms. Hannifin said. "We believe there is a legitimate danger to our officers who serve the school district. And, there is the potential for lawsuits if parents do not feel that the officers protected their children."

Ms. Hannifin said the commission will take its concerns to the school board, which ultimately will decide on whether to arm the officers.

The commission also sponsors the city's annual National Night Out. Ms. Hannifin said Midland's Night Out is celebrated in October instead of August — when most cities nationwide hold the event — so that the event will coincide with Crime Prevention Month.

In addition, the commission has been responsible for distributing drug- prevention magazines and coloring books to second- and sixth-graders and was responsible several years ago for "Operation Kick-It," a program that allowed Texas Department of Corrections inmates to visit with junior high and freshman high school students.

In addition to educating the public, commission members are continuously educating themselves. At a recent meeting, local law-enforcement officials told commission members about street gangs, including how prevalent they are in Midland, how to read the gangs' graffiti and how to identify a gang member.

Ms. Hannifin said the next scheduled meeting will focus on sexual offenses.

The Midland Crime Prevention Commission was formed in 1976 and accepted by the Midland City Council as a city commission in 1980. Members are elected by the City Council for three-year terms. Members can serve two consecutive terms, but must step down from the commission for one year if they wish to serve more than two terms.

The commission has 21 members and seven officers.

POLICY: Banks may be too risky with loans

tively mild warnings to a new level.

If the new committee or the examiners find excessively risky loans, the examiners responsible for the bank will ask — or, if necessary, order — changes in bank lending policies, Ludwig said in a speech to bankers Saturday.

He also warned in the speech about a trend among banks to issue credit cards, auto loans and second mortgages to borrowers with such bad credit histories that they previously had to turn, in some cases, to finance companies and other lenders catering to risky borrowers.

Separately, the Federal Reserve has urged its bank examiners to be thorough. "I am concerned that there has been some pursuit of market share at the risk of not getting properly compensated for the risk in the loan," John LaWare, the Federal Reserve governor who heads the central bank's committee on bank regulation, said in an interview on Friday.

LaWare said he was concerned about banks' offering low interest rates and generous loan terms but was less worried that banks might be making loans to customers with bad credit histories.

Bankers have also begun talking among themselves about their fears that intense competition for business is forcing them to take too many risks and causing some of them to lose sight of more cautious practices instituted after the collapse of the commercial real estate market in the late 1980s.

Banks and their regulators have been on a roller-coaster ride in recent years. Lax regulation was blamed for allowing much of the savings and loan debacle of the 1980s — which wound up costing taxpayers $200 billion as the government seized and shut insolvent institutions.

Since then, as banks and savings institutions adopted much stricter standards during the economic downturn of the early 1990s, they were blamed for causing the credit crunch that left many small and medium-sized businesses struggling to find loans.

The regulators' worries follow shifts in bank activities prompted by rising interest rates. Banks have sought to increase their commercial lending as profits on government securities have dwindled.

At the same time, the most creditworthy companies have been raising money by selling notes and bonds instead of seeking bank loans.

While regulators do not have the power to dictate specific standards of creditworthiness or profit margins on loans, they have considerable influence over bank policies.

Mounting evidence reinforces the regulators' concerns. A recent survey by the National Association of Home Builders found that 61 percent of its members were able to borrow money to build homes without lining up buyers in advance.

"Banks that wouldn't talk to us a couple years ago are calling us," David Seiders, the group's chief economist, said.

The latest indication of aggressive bank lending came late Friday afternoon, when the Federal Reserve announced that automobile loans rose at an annual rate of 10.5 percent in February, while outstanding balances on revolving consumer loans — mainly credit cards — shot up at an annual pace of 22 percent.

Astronauts have limited contact with Mission Control Moscow, and they like it that way

RUSSIAN SPACE CENTER (AP) — At Mission Control Moscow, flight controllers wander in and out so irregularly and infrequently it's as though they are checking the laundry instead of the Russian space station.

Flight controllers need to be at their computers only when there is radio contact with the orbiting Mir station and its crew. That's two to 10 hours spread throughout the day, usually closer to two.

So for the rest of their 24 hour shift — they work one full day and then get three days off — they do whatever they want. Lyudmila Savina, for example, plays computer games and chats on the phone with her family in between communication sessions with Mir.

You won't hear Mir's two Russian cosmonauts or its first American astronaut, Dr. Norman Thagard, complaining about the limited contact with Earth. They like the autonomy: no one hassling them, no one following their every move as they go round and round Earth month after month.

Compare this to NASA's Mission Control in Houston, where flight controllers have almost continuous contact with an orbiting shuttle and crew thanks to a superior communications satellite network. They seldom leave their computers during their eight- to nine-hour shifts and plan practically every moment of an astronaut's day in space.

For these controlling controllers, the Russians' casual approach is astounding. Yet it works, and NASA is taking note.

"We're satisfied with what they're doing," said NASA's Tommy Holloway, head of the program to send American astronauts and the space shuttle Atlantis to Mir several times over the next three years.

Holloway said he is not worried about Thagard being incommunicado in orbit for hours at a time. In the event of a space station emergency like a fire, there is little ground controllers could do to help anyway, he said.

"It doesn't end up being a significant safety issue," Holloway said. "What it ends up being is when you're trying to maximize productivity, which of course we tend to do when we're flying short missions, the ground can help you respond quicker and get back into a productive world.

"When you're flying 365 days a year, the Russians' overall philosophy is, 'We'll get to it tomorrow.' A shift in that direction for long-duration missions is probably an appropriate thing for people to do, for us to think about as we get into the real space station business."

Agency's involvement shadows Guatemala's bloody past

By John Rice
Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — Lilies droop amid the weeds and dying grass around a dirty slab of concrete at Verbena Cemetery. A grim chapter of Guatemala's bloody past is buried underneath.

"There are about 15,000 people" in the grave, said Luis Humberto Rivas, the cemetery director.

They were poor or forgotten, their bodies never claimed. Some were among the "disappeared" — people kidnapped and killed by security forces and "death squads" in attempts to stamp out a leftist revolt.

For most of the past four decades, the United States — and especially the CIA — stood beside the Guatemalan government as it fought leftist insurgents in a ruthless struggle. The war killed perhaps 120,000 people, most of them civilians, and drove at least 40,000 into exile.

Florencio Morales Rojas, a 75-year-old cemetery worker, said many of the unclaimed bodies arrived at Verbena during the rule of Gen. Romeo Lucas Garcia in 1978-82. "There were 12 to 15 a day," he said.

He said he did not know how many were political killings, but the rate of nameless coffins arriving at the cemetery doubled. "There were stacks and stacks of them," he said, giggling slightly.

The bloodshed was thrust back into the news in the United States last week after a U.S. congressmen claimed a Guatemalan colonel on the CIA payroll was involved in killing an American citizen, Michael Devine, in 1990 and Efrain Bamaca, a captured guerrilla married to an American lawyer, in 1992.

The shock in Guatemala is largely that the report was made public.

"We are surprised by the unexpected interest of the government of the United States in the participation of the CIA ... because it has always been known," said Nineth Montenegro, coordinator of the Mutual Support Group, which claims a membership of 10,000 relatives of the disappeared.

Army rule and CIA influence have long been taken for granted in Guatemala, Central America's most populous nation, where the Indian majority is improverished and largely excluded from power.

Army officers, many retired, have occupied the presidency for most of the past 120 years. Some have been elected freely, some through fraud. Some have taken power in coups. Generals have been heroes of the left, champions of the right.

Civilian rule is such a novelty that Guatemala never had a change of power between one elected civilian and another until 1991.

In 1954, the CIA organized and ran a coup that toppled the elected leftist government of Gen. Jacobo Arbenz. In 1960, it set up camps to train Cuban exiles for the Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba.

The rebel movement, now mostly comprised of highlands Indians, grew out of a failed 1960 coup by leftist army officers angry about the Cuban camps.

The rebels gradually became more Marxist in their orientation and have a vague list of demands such as strengthened democracy, redistribution of property, controls on prices and equality among Indians and non-Indians.

Once a viable military movement, the rebels now number perhaps 1,000 in four groups. They are seen as more of a nuisance than a threat.

U.S. influence permeates this country of 10 million, from the English lettering on the "steak houses" in rich parts of Guatemala City to the dollars sent home by impoverished peasants who go north to find work. U.S. economic aid has topped $100 million a year.

But open U.S. military aid was tiny compared to that in El Salvador, Nicaragua or Honduras — totaling only about $30 million during the 1980s — despite the ferocity of Guatemala's conflict.

Social activists, religious workers and union leaders were murdered in the cities. Paramilitary death squads operated in the 1960s and 1970s, and government security forces seemed to take over the job by the 1980s.

In the countryside, whole villages were erased to stamp out zones of support for the guerrillas. More than 40,000 people fled to Mexico. Thousands are afraid to return.

Officials in both countries openly say the CIA aided Guatemala's intelligence services despite a human rights record that led Presidents Carter and Bush to suspend U.S. military aid.

The United States wanted "strong government, tough government, anti-Communist government. That was the plan of the '60s and '70s," said retired Gen. Efrain Rios Montt, president in 1982-1983 and now head of Guatemala's Congress.

"In the '80s they began with human rights. And the policy changed there. It appears today as the great defender of human rights," he added. "Who? The one who was paying to violate human rights."

The levels of payments admitted by officials is not high.

Acting CIA Director William Studeman told a Senate committee Wednesday that funding to Guatemalan intelligence agencies peaked in 1989 at about $3.5 million a year. A White House official indicated an additional $1 million a year went to the CIA's own activities in Guatemala.

'We were terribly wrong'

McNamara admits he thought U.S.' role in Vietnam was mistake

By Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — As defense secretary for two presidents — one of John F. Kennedy's "best and brightest" — Robert McNamara helped draw the United States deeply into the Vietnam War.

Now he admits: "We were terribly wrong."

With the upcoming release of his memoirs, McNamara is breaking his quarter-century public silence on the war that left 58,000 Americans dead and bitterly divided the country.

The memoirs of other officials, along with declassified documents and other reports, have described how dissension grew in the Johnson White House over Vietnam policy as the war worsened.

McNamara, whose internal criticism led Johnson to replace him in 1968, is the highest-ranking former U.S. official to say publicly and unequivocally that pursuing the war was a mistake.

"We of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations acted according to what we thought were the principles and traditions of our country. But we were wrong. We were terribly wrong," the 78-year-old McNamara told the AP Radio Network.

"We were just wrong, both military leaders and civilian leaders, in failing to recognize the nature of the conflict and failing to recognize early on that the strategy we were following would not accomplish our objective," McNamara said.

McNamara has written a book, "In Retrospect," due in bookstores soon. The April 17 Newsweek, on newstands Monday, has excerpts from the book.

They say that President Johnson sought advice from former President Eisenhower on bombing Vietnam. In a Feb. 17, 1965, meeting, Eisenhower counseled that "LBJ's first duty was to contain communism in Southeast Asia," even if it meant threatening nuclear war.

Eisenhower said he hoped a huge ground war wouldn't be necessary but if it were, "So be it." And if the Soviets or Chinese threatened to intervene, Eisenhower said, "We should pass the word back to them to take care lest dire results (i.e. nuclear strikes) occur to them.'"

In the AP interview, to be broadcast today, McNamara said, "The first major mistake we made was in exaggerating and misjudging the security of the West and the security of our nation (in case of) the loss of Vietnam to the Communists."

He added: "It wasn't Eisenhower's responsibility, it was Johnson's responsibility, and (Secretary of State) Dean Rusk's and mine."

According to the Newsweek excerpts, North Vietnam made "a very specific peace offer" in 1966 but withdrew it after the United States went ahead with bombing raids that had been delayed by bad weather. Johnson feared that rescheduling the raids "would be interpreted as weakness," McNamara wrote.

McNamara told the AP that he and Henry Kissinger, then a Harvard professor, came close to setting up U.S.-North Vietnamese negotiations in the fall of 1967. "Unfortunately, through, I think, clumsiness on our part, the effort came apart," he said.

He denied that he and Johnson prevented the military from fighting the war with all its resources. He noted that the United States dropped far more bombs on Indochina than it did in all theaters of World War II.

McNamara said he became deeply involved in Vietnam policy soon after he became defense secretary in 1961, one of the White House aides whom Kennedy called "the best and the brightest" of their generation.

The fighting in Indochina escalated, and McNamara remained defense secretary when Johnson became president after Kennedy's assassination in 1963. McNamara writes that Johnson asked him to be his vice-presidential nominee in 1964 but he declined, citing his lack of political experience.

In 1967, McNamara privately urged Johnson to seek a diplomatic solution to the Vietnam War, but Johnson and other aides rejected the suggestion.

He said he regrets not having pushed Johnson harder and earlier to consider a negotiated settlement to the war. But the stand he did take left him and Johnson "at loggerheads," he writes, and the differences couldn't be bridged.

In early 1968, McNamara stepped down as defense secretary to become president of the World Bank. He said he learned Johnson arranged to get him the job.

McNamara writes that he still doesn't know "whether I quit or was fired," but he denied reports that he was nearing physical and emotional collapse.

He told the AP that he didn't publicly criticize the war while still defense secretary because "that would be totally contrary to my responsibilities to the president, under the Constitution." And he said he wasn't permitted to discuss national politics during his 13 years as World Bank president.

McNamara writes that he is admitting blame publicly now because "I have grown sick at heart witnessing the cynicism and even contempt with which so many people view our political institutions and leaders." He blamed that cynicism on Vietnam and Watergate and other scandals.

He quoted the ancient Greek dramatist Aeschylus: "The reward of suffering is experience."

McNamara added: "Let this be the lasting legacy of Vietnam."

Collision kills six teens

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — A freight train collided with a car full of teen-agers at a rural crossing Saturday. All six youths were killed.

The Burlington Northern train was heading north at about 43 mph when it collided with the car, which rolled and burst into flames, state patrol spokesman Scott Nathlich said.

The victims' were not identified.

The teens apparently were trying to beat the train to the crossing and Nathlich said alcohol may have been a factor in the crash.

The crossing did not have guard gates but Nathlich said flashing red warning lights were going off at the time of the crash.

The Solution: Laser Surgery

Laser surgery can be an effective way to remove small varicosities (veins) on the nose & cheeks. These veins occur as a result of sun damage and other factors. Laser surgery offers a superior way to remove these with little to no evidence of surgery. No down time, fast healing, and excellent results are common.

Gingrich's TV speech is a symbol of shift in control, analysts say

By Jill Lawrence
Associated Press Writer

AP Laserphoto

House Speaker Newt Gingrich helped build a Habitat for Humanity house Saturday in Powder Springs, Ga.

WASHINGTON — Newt Gingrich highlighted the softer sides of himself and his agenda in an unprecedented prime-time TV appearance Friday night that temporarily endowed a House speaker with the trappings and reach of a president.

The overriding political message was simple and significant: Republicans kept their word. They promised to vote on the "Contract With America" legislative agenda in the first 100 days of a GOP House, and they did.

The more immediate impact came from Gingrich's mere presence on screen — and President Clinton's conspicuous absence. "It was a metaphor for the shift in control of the political agenda to congressional Republicans," said William Connelly, a political scientist and Congress-watcher at Washington and Lee University.

Gingrich's TV odyssey started more than a decade ago with slashing late-night floor speeches seen by viewers of C-SPAN. Never known for timidity, he petitioned this year for a half-hour of network prime time. Sometimes it pays to ask.

One can only imagine what Clinton was thinking as he read a book en route to California rather than watch Gingrich. Or Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, preparing to announce his White House candidacy Monday in Kansas.

From speech to setting, a presidential tone suffused Gingrich's appearance — the flag at his side, the marble columns outside his window, the reference to Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the appeals for Republicans and Democrats to remake the government together, for the sake of the children and their futures.

Yet the speech also was calculated to deal with two political problems pinpointed by polls: the public's wariness about Gingrich, and its uncertainties about the contract that Gingrich rammed through the House in three hard-driving months.

The speaker Americans saw on TV was no Democrat-bashing ogre, but a calm, newly trim, overly made-up man of a certain middle age who made sure everyone knew he was a dad, a son and a son-in-law.

He showed off a child's drawing of George Washington, commiserated with inner-city parents and, in a particularly effective moment, reassured the elderly that he'd never gut Medicare because his own parents rely on it.

"In 20-second sound bites he sometimes can be incendiary," said John Pitney, a congressional specialist at Claremont McKenna College in Claremont, Calif. He said the half-hour format allowed Gingrich to develop his arguments and "show people that his forehead doesn't bear horns."

Gingrich's discussion of the contract that served as the guiding treatise for GOP House candidates last fall focused on two highly popular constitutional amendments: the balanced budget amendment that passed the House and failed in the Senate, and a congressional term limits amendment that went down in the House.

The speaker tried to counter charges that his party was cutting child nutrition programs, but for the most part he glossed over the more controversial elements of the contract — welfare reform that involves cutbacks (and, some say, cruelty); tax cuts that some contend are unfair and-or unaffordable; regulatory changes that critics say would compromise health, safety and the environment.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle raised these points in a televised response to Gingrich, and Clinton spoke along similar lines earlier in the day. They claimed the GOP agenda is at worst damaging and at best removed from the concerns of ordinary Americans.

The theme could well resonate at the polls next year, but the back-to-back Friday-night congressional speeches also hinted at possible problems for Democrats.

Gephardt, Daschle and even Clinton, to some extent, were boxed into reactive critical roles, coming across as negative and occasionally dour — an unflattering contrast to Gingrich's invitation to a bright Third-Wave future, minus the burdens of big government and crushing debt.

Worse yet for Democrats, even if people think they're right on the substance of what they're saying, it may not matter. "Americans don't get into details," Connelly said. "But pretty soon they'll have a general idea that politicians made promises and kept them."

Plane crashes into yard; 4 die

POLLOCK PINES, Calif. (AP) — A small private airplane crashed into the back yard of a house on Saturday, killing all four people aboard.

People in the house were not injured, the El Dorado County Sheriff's Department said.

Authorities were investigating unconfirmed reports that a second aircraft was involved in the crash, which occurred about 2 p.m. in this town 50 miles east of Sacramento, Deputy Patrick Harris said.

Witness Lesper Robson said he heard a loud engine noise and saw parts and luggage falling from the plane.

"I just watched it for as long as I dared and then ran over to the fire station," said Robson, who watched from a store parking lot.

Denver airport is 'super,' some travelers say

By Sandy Shore
AP Business Writer

DENVER (AP) The petulant automated baggage system has behaved since Denver International Airport finally opened in February. And flight delays are a fraction of what they used to be.

Not bad for an airport that was $3.2 billion over budget and whose opening was delayed 16 months by construction problems and a baggage system that gobbled bags.

"We're delighted. It's working very well for us," said John Philp, a spokesman for United Airlines, the only carrier with a hub in Denver.

The automated baggage system serves only departing United flights and odd-size luggage on arriving flights. Everyone else uses a traditional tug-and-cart system.

During the airport's first month of operation, just 0.5 percent of its 42,000 passenger, cargo and private jet flights were delayed, compared with a 3.3 percent rate at Stapleton a year earlier.

Joe Jenney of Fort Wayne, Ind., has had three smooth trips through the airport. "The first day, everybody was going through their paces but after that it's been super," he said.

"We were expecting the worst, but had a pleasant experience," said traveler Pat South of New York City. "It's so unique."

Built on 53 square miles of prairie, the $4.9 billion airport is bigger, 17 miles farther from downtown Denver and more expensive than Stapleton, which closed Feb. 27, a day before DIA opened.

The picture's not entirely rosy: the parking lots are packed like sardine cans and the wind blows into dust-storms that have some people wearing goggles.

National Car rental employees have worn them during wind storms, said Sandy Haze, general manager for company's airport operation.

"The dirt reduces visibility to almost zero. It gets into the cars, we've had computers go out ... it's so bad when the wind blows that it comes right through everything," she said.

Airport spokesman Steve Klodt said the culprit is ground cover denuded by construction, but the areas are being landscaped to anchor the soil.

Crowds of travelers have been more of a worry to airport officials, who have logged an average of 90,000 passengers a day.

But during peak travel times, subways and parking lots have been packed and lines at airport toll booths have seemed endless.

More parking places are planned, but in the meantime, the city extended the grace period for free parking from 60 minutes to 75 minutes to soothe complaints.

"I followed a lady to her place," said Julie Norcorss of Broomfield. "If you're patient and come early enough, you can find a place."

The new airport also costs more to get to and more to use than Stapleton.

The airport is about 23 miles from downtown Denver and 12 miles from the nearest service station and hotel, though two hotels plan to open nearby. Getting there costs $38 by cab from downtown Denver and $6 on a bus.

And most airlines added $40 to round-trip fares to help offset higher operating costs at the airport.

The hugeness of the airport itself also can be daunting, with its three concourses arranged in a row stretching a mile from the main terminal.

"It seems a little distant," said Shirley Stroble of San Jose, Calif. "It seems like it would be difficult for older people to get around."

Dogs search for possible bomb in university library

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (N.Y.T.) — Bomb-sniffing dogs roamed among the stacks in the main undergraduate libraries at Rutgers University here Saturday, searching for explosive devices like the two found earlier this week.

The four dogs did not discover anything suspicious. Security guards also searched all backpacks and satchels brought into the buildings.

The dogs were first used on Wednesday after a small bomb exploded in the East Room at the Mabel Smith Douglass Library. All four undergraduate libraries here were evacuated and closed on Friday after the discovery of another small bomb in the Douglass library.

The searches caused brief lines to form outside the entrances of the libraries, whose openings were delayed for two hours while the dogs worked.

"They are sensitive to sniffing out bomb components, and that is what we are doing through all the major libraries on the campus," said Chief Anthony Murphy of the Middlesex County Sheriff's Department.

The grounds around the Kilmer Area Library on the Livingston campus were deserted. The only sign of unusual activity was a male German shepherd named Lasso bounding around the lawn nearby and a police car with "K-9" on its side.

The libraries were evacuated and closed on Friday following the discovery of a small bomb in the East Room at the Douglass Library. A similar device exploded in the same room just after midnight Wednesday morning, and since then students and workers at the building have been jittery.

The FBI, which is helping in the case, would not describe the bombs, but library employees who saw the wreckage from the explosion said the device seemed to consist of a small amount of explosive, perhaps an M-80 firecracker or two.

"It was on a top shelf, and it went into the ceiling above it," said Linda H. Levitan, 19, who works in the building. The university public affairs office said the explosion damaged 10 books and caused $100 in damage to the shelves and ceiling tiles. No one was injured in the blast because that section of the library had already closed for the night. Students working elsewhere in the building reported a pop.

Leslie A. Fehrenbach, Rutgers assistant vice president for public safety, said no one had claimed responsibility for the devices.

Clinton defends call for program review

By Tom Raum
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, California — President Clinton told a Democratic audience including many vocal affirmative action activists on Saturday that the party must be sensitive to grievances of "so-called angry white males" and be prepared to abandon minority preference programs that don't work.

Jumping into the battle for public opinion for the next 100 days, Clinton gave the strongest defense yet of his decision to order a top-to-bottom review of such programs — already under fierce assault from the Republican majority in Congress.

"We have to realize that there is a real problem out there. We can't deny that," Clinton said.

Clinton had been expected to focus his speech, to a meeting of the state Democratic party, on a repetition of his problems with remaining items in the GOP "Contract with America," and his vow to veto programs that make large cuts in education, environmental and other social programs.

He did that at first. But, confronted with hundreds of activists in the audience waving green signs proclaiming "No Retreat — Stand up for Affirmative Action," Clinton launched into an impassioned defense of his decision to review affirmative action programs.

"We don't have to retreat from these programs. ... But we do have to ask ourselves — are they all working? Are they fair?

"This is psychologically a difficult time for a lot of white males, the so-called angry white males ... most of them are working harder for less money than they were making 15 years ago."

'This is psychologically a difficult time for a lot of white males, the so-called angry white males... most of them are working harder for less money than they were making 15 years ago.'
— President Clinton,

His words at first drew chants of "no retreat, no retreat" from the sign-waving activists.

"Don't scream, let's talk," he said at one point. "That's just what they want us to do. They want to get this country into a screaming match. ... We have to lower our voices."

As he spoke on, making his case, the chants receded and finally his words drew widespread applause from the audience of several thousand Democrats.

An initiative proposed for the 1996 ballot in California would repeal state affirmative action laws for government employment, contracting and university admissions. The proposal, drafted by two college professors and supported by Republican Gov. Pete Wilson, requires 600,000 signatures to qualify.

Supporters want the Legislature to vote to put the issue before voters next March — at the time of California's newly shifted presidential primary. Failing that, supporters say they will qualify it themselves for November 1996.

Early statewide polls show it has strong support.

Clinton said Democrats can't allow themselves to be forced into a position by Republicans of defending programs that may be indefensible; and should recognize that there are many examples of reverse discrimination in the country against white, often middle-aged males.

"What we have done is to give more opportunities to women and minorities. This is a very good thing and we should not stop doing it," Clinton said. At the same time, he told the audience, "we do not need to say that we're insensitive" to the concerns of those who feel they have been the targets of reverse discrimination.

Clinton said it was time to have a "national conversation" on the issue and not permit Republicans to maneuver Democrats into a "screaming match" in defense of programs that may have outlived their usefulness.

At issue are more than 100 programs, many of them begun in the Nixon administration a quarter decade ago, that give preference to women and minorities in housing, education and employment.

Clinton had planned to deliver a major affirmative action speech later in the month.

But his spokesman, Mike McCurry, said Clinton wanted to "speak to the frustrations of the angry white male" population sooner rather than later. "Ninety-nine percent of the people we've talked to in the last 24 hours were ready for him to address that issue today," McCurry said.

Later, in a speech to the National Education Association in Los Angeles, Clinton lashed out at House-originated proposals to cut education programs, including one to promote "safe schools."

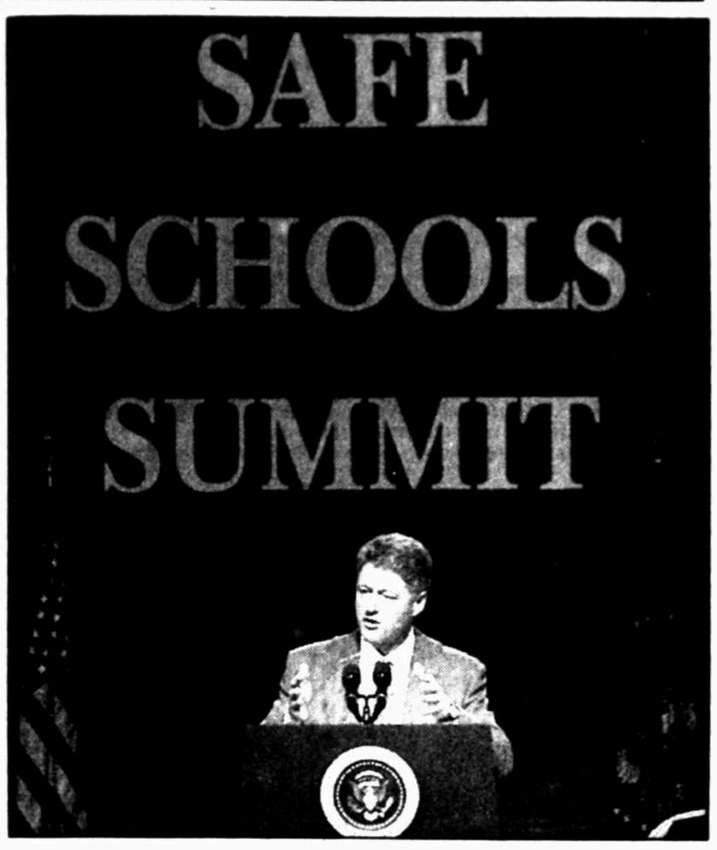

Noting a new Center for Disease Control study that said one in 12 students carried guns into school in 1993, Clinton said in prepared remarks: "This is a national crisis that requires a national response."

After his speech to the NEA, Clinton played golf with the Republican mayor of Los Angeles, Richard Riordan, and later was to attend a $50,000-a-couple fund-raiser at the home of Hollywood movie director Steven Spielberg, where the president and his wife were to spend the night. Entertainment at the fund-raiser included comedian Robin Williams and singer k.d. lang.

The president was on a three-day swing through California — which is crucial to his 1996 re-election hopes, with its 54 electoral votes, one fifth of the 270 needed for election.

Even though it went for him in 1992, the state is becoming increasingly conservative and Republican. And Democratic strategists were particularly worried about a GOP challenge expected to be mounted by California's Republican governor, Pete Wilson.

Clinton used his Saturday radio speech to continue a stepped up veto-threat assault on the Republican's "Contract with America" that he had begun the day before at a meeting of newspaper editors in Dallas.

Inmate lends his musical talents to churches, temples

By Jacques Steinberg
N.Y. Times News Service

HUDSON, N.Y. — It's no wonder that Bob Cohen looked haggard after racing through his schedule on a recent weekend.

First, there had been a Sabbath service on Friday night at a synagogue in Kingston, where he played the organ. The next afternoon, he played 50 miles away at a Roman Catholic church in Castleton-on-Hudson. On Sunday, he played the organ again at two more Masses before rushing off to Albany for a Pentecostal service. And then, Monday evening, he was on stage at the Hudson Middle School, rehearsing his role as Tevye in a community production of "Fiddler on the Roof."

He finally got to relax later that night — at the Hudson Correctional Facility, the prison where he is completing a four-year sentence for Medicaid fraud.

Cohen, 57, is a participant in the state's work-release program, which allows him to travel up and down the Hudson Valley, stopping at houses of worship requiring his musical talents.

"I consider myself a Jew," he said on a recent Friday night, after dancing to a boisterous "Hava Nagila" at Temple Emanuel in Kingston. When inmates ask him why he plays at so many different kinds of services, he tells them, "I needed all the help I could get."

Cohen had been office manager for a Manhattan psychiatrist, a job that landed him in jail in November 1991, when he was convicted of helping the doctor embezzle $1.3 million from Medicaid. After serving three years in several state prisons, Cohen, who had no previous record, earned his partial release last fall.

Now, Wednesdays through Sundays, he sleeps in a rented $375-a-month studio apartment in Kingston, 40 miles south of here. Then, on Monday and Tuesday nights, he returns to a converted church on the grounds of the Hudson Correctional Facility, shedding his street clothes for a green uniform and sleeping in a dorm room with 50 other inmates.

At a time when the work-release program is under fire — in January, Gov. George E. Pataki barred violent felons from participating — it seems to be working for Cohen.

"I see him succeeding," said Fran Caruso, his parole officer. "I'm not afraid to say that."

A pianist since age 8, Cohen became a bit player on the folk-music scene in the early 1960s, occasionally performing, he said, alongside Bob Dylan, Pete Seeger and Peter, Paul and Mary in Greenwich Village clubs.

WHY PEDIATRIC DENTISTRY?

• The American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry says that a child's first dental visit should be within six months of the eruption of the first tooth and no later than one year of age.

• Primary teeth are important in the development of speech, facial and oral muscles, upper and lower jaws. They save the space for and help guide permanent teeth into position.

• It is important, easier and more cost-effective to recognize and treat minor problems early, before they become major and inhibit the development of permanent teeth.

• A child's early exposure to dental treatment sets the foundation for future dental health.

• Together, we can give your children a lifetime of fewer cavities, healthier teeth and gums - and more confident smiles!

Residents continue to suffer from chemical leak eight months later

RODEO, Calif. (AP) — The leak began slowly, just a trickle of chemical mist wafting from the top of a tower at an oil refinery near San Francisco Bay.

There was an initial flurry of concern, an emergency was declared and the county health department was notified. But bad decisions and missed chances allowed 100 tons of toxic chemicals to leak for 16 days last summer.

Hundreds of residents in the blue collar San Francisco suburb and dozens of Unocal Corp. employees suffered nausea, nosebleeds and headaches.

Nearly a year later, some still have eye problems they blame on the leak. Others have suffered miscarriages, fetal deaths, rashes and fainting spells.

Even pets and farm animals are sick or dying, they say.

More than 1,000 people have filed lawsuits claiming the leak made them sick, said Scott Cole, a lawyer for a group of plaintiffs.

Unocal took responsibility for some of the illnesses and funded a clinic to treat those affected. The company will not comment on the lawsuits.

The company also could face millions of dollars in fines from regional environmental officials and a criminal investigation from the Contra Costa County prosecutor.

The company admits it made a mistake not shutting the plant down sooner, according to spokesman Lon Carlston.

The leak started Aug. 22, when steam, carbon dioxide and traces of a solution called Catacarb began escaping from a small hole near the top of the 180-foot hydrogen processing tower. The solution is used to remove carbon dioxide from hydrogen which, in turn, is used to remove sulfur from gasoline.

Unocal notified the county health department as required, but said the leak didn't pose a threat.

The company decided the release was too small to warrant a shutdown.

Company managers sent memos to employees seven days into the release, saying the solution was not harmful.

On Sept. 4, an employee complained of sneezing and watery eyes and residents noticed a sticky substance on cars and windows.

It was only after repeated complaints from employees that managers shut down the plant Sept. 6.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press outline incidents leading up to the leak.

Six months earlier, the company decided to delay a routine overhaul of the tower from because equipment looked good.

In addition, production was booming and employees stood to gain bonuses if it continued until the rescheduled maintenance, according to a memo workers got three weeks before the release began.

Employees began to turn off the unit at first, but their superiors told them not to, said Howard Spencer, president of Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, Local 1326.

Employees were afraid to insist, according to a memo signed by 15 workers.

The memo also said the leak was worse than officials let on.

But Carlston said the exact time when the leak worsened is being investigated.

Trio explains dog's cross-country trip

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — The cross-country odyssey of Buddy the mutt isn't such a mystery after all.

The dog made headlines and earned himself a spot on David Letterman's show after he turned up in Colorado just three days after he disappeared from his home in Central Islip, N.Y., 1,600 miles away.

The mystery was solved last week, when Joseph VanWart, Robert White and John O'Brien said they were heading West in a car and found Buddy at a gas station near his home, nosing through the trash with a bagel in his mouth.

"We called it over — the next thing we knew it was in the car," VanWart said. "We thought, 'OK, that'll save it from getting hit by a car.'"

And off they went, through New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia. Somewhere in the Appalachians, they stopped for food. That's when they discovered Buddy had tags.

"We got worried — we were wondering after we picked up the dog, did he belong to a little boy," VanWart said. They decided they would find Buddy's owners when they reached their destination.

On March 14, they pulled into Fort Collins, stopping at the home of O'Brien's uncle and letting Buddy free to run around. He was gone the next morning.

Someone had taken him to a humane society, where workers tracked down Buddy's owner, Brian Harrington, through his tags.

New press box to improve Christensen Stadium

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

The new press box at Christensen Stadium is to be completed in time for the Midland Angels home opener on April 16.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Completion of a new press box — which made room for additional spectator seating and a concession stand — at Max H. Christensen Stadium is expected soon in anticipation of the Midland Angels first home game of the season on April 16. The renovation is among several improvements to the stadium in recent years.

"Over the last four to five years, we've done quite a few improvements out there," said Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca.

That has included added seating to accommodate about 1,500 people, expansion of the picnic area and the addition of a second one, construction of a dressing room for the visiting team and expansion of the Angels dressing room, improved field lighting, new restrooms, a new marquee, expansion of the business office, and parking lot and landscaping improvements, officials said.

The latest improvement has been the construction of the new 2,400-square-foot press box, which is nearly complete, according to Mark Phillips, director of facilities and fleet management. "It's pretty impressive," he said.

An elevator — to meet Americans With Disabilities Act requirements — for the press box will be installed in mid-May. City officials unsuccessfully tried to get a variance through the state using alternative accommodations for the handicap.

The old press box was a wooden structure that dated back probably to when the stadium

Cotton farmers work for weevil eradication plan

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Cotton's perennial pest, the ol' boll weevil that folk legend portrays as a poor wanderer who is "just looking for a home," is settling into West Texas and Midland County much to the grief of cotton farmers and other agri-business people.

Uncontrolled and spreading in droves, the migratory weevil can and has devastated cotton acreage in much of the Cotton Belt.

"It's already here," said Midland farmer Al Spinks.

"There are no natural predators to the boll weevil," said farmer Mike Denny. "That means you have to spray it or move on. That's the reason I'm out here. My granddad was run out of East Texas by the boll weevil (in the 1920s)."

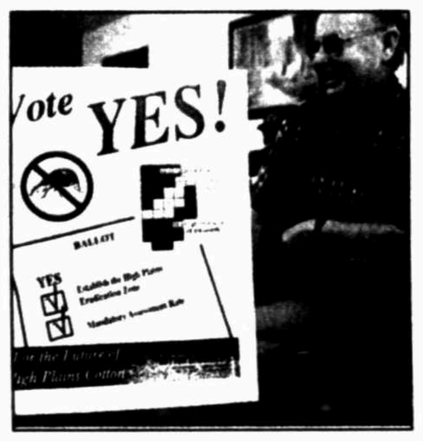

The boll weevils, or cotton beetles, are able fliers.

"Boll weevils had to carry canteens on their backs to get out here," quipped Denny, who figured that some cotton farmers, particularly those in the Cotton Belt's Southeastern United States, would have been smart to have switched to peanuts and corn and stayed there.

Instead of moving out themselves, farmers are counteracting the boll weevil's intrusion through an expensive two-tier crop-dusting or aerial-spraying program.

Through April 15, West Texas cotton farmers and farmland owners are casting ballots through the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation to establish the High Plains Boll Weevil Eradication Zone.

It's a costly program for cotton producers in a 30-county area from Midland County northward into the Panhandle and takes in farming country in the areas of Midland, Big Spring, Odessa, Andrews, Stanton, Lamesa, Gail, Seminole, Seagraves, Lubbock, Brownfield, Canyon, and Amarillo.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

The annual cost of the boll-weevil-control program, which begins with the fall diapause spraying regimen, is a maximum of $1.25 per planted cotton acre in those 30 counties and an additional per-pound cotton charge.

For Midland-Odessa-Big Spring-Lamesa area farmers, the per-pound costs of the program would be $1.25. Farmers in the Lubbock area would be paying 75 cents a pound.

In the past 20 years, the per-pound price of cotton, depending on the grade, staple, and supply and demand, has ranged from about 50 cents to $1, but most frequently has been on the lower end of that range.

Private school students win at state contest

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Students in two of Midland's private schools were top competitors in the recent Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools state competition that featured 101 Texas schools.

Trinity School won the 1995 TRPPS District 1 Academic Competition in Lubbock on March 6 and 7.

"In what bodes well for future competition, only two Trinity finishers will be lost to graduation this year," said Trinity spokesman Floyd James.

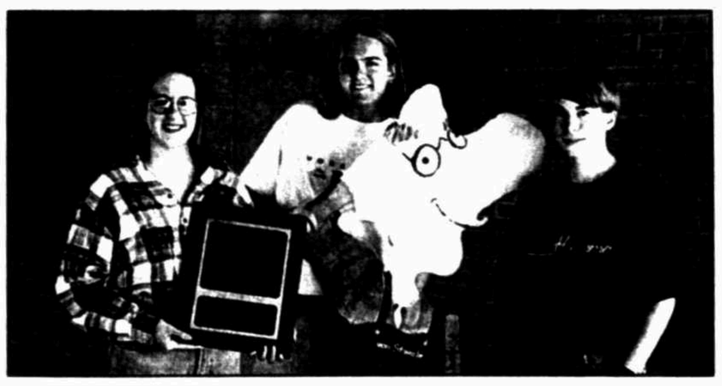

First-place Trinity High School student finishers were Matthew Dickman in mathematics, Eric Watkins in computer science, and art students Will Crump for ceramics and Laura Wilson for printmaking. Dickman also won second place in number sense.

Individual Trinity students who placed in the state competition include Sara Billingsley and Will Coombes, fifth place, duet acting; Blaine Boman, sixth place in computer science; John Driscoll, second place in math; Patrick Durham, sixth place in advanced math; Michael Gensert, fifth place in science; Jessica Harvey, second place in ready writing; and Chris Wood, fifth place in computer science.

Midland Christian School honorees are Hilary Euitt and Church Rundus, fourth place duet acting; Mike Sawyer, sixth place, history; and Marty Ballesteros, sixth place in calculus and applications.

Faculty sponsors of the Trinity students include Jack Hickman, Bill Coombes, Doris Cooper and Mary Rulla.

Midland Christian sponsors included Brenda Euitt.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Several Trinity School students recently won first-place awards at the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools state competition: Laura Wilson, art, from left; Matthew Dickman, math; and Eric Watkins, computer science. Will Crump also won for art - ceramics.

Minor accidents provide good storytelling opportunity

There is a little bit of the storyteller in all of us.

We just like to take an event from our past and then with great fanfare force — uh, I mean, — relate those facts to our friends and loved ones. We assume, since they are our friends and loved ones, that they will find our stories to be of great interest. And to make sure they do, we tend to spice up the details ever so slightly.

Ott

OK, we spice them up a lot, but the point is, we take a certain delight in telling others about the latest happenings in our lives.

This is especially true when no one else was around when the event in question took place, thus leaving us with ample opportunity to exaggerate to our heart's content.

Being involved in a minor traffic accident is a classic example, especially if your car is still driveable. That way your co-workers will spot the damaged vehicle the next morning in your office parking lot and initiate the conversation.

"Good heavens," they will exclaim. "What happened to your car?"

You then can sort of shrug your shoulders, roll the eyes upward and say, "I was darn near killed last night. If it wasn't for my seatbelt, I wouldn't be here today."

That's a blatant lie, of course, but now you have their attention. The stories can really begin to roll.

"Was anyone hurt?" is usually the next question. Again, this will provide you with considerable leeway. You can truthfully reply, "No, fortunately not," or you can, shall we say, stretch the truth a bit by uttering something like, "I don't think so, but this poor woman was trapped in her small compact car for several minutes. She would have been a goner for sure if I hadn't been able to rip the passenger door off and get her out."

Your co-workers won't believe a word you say, of course, but since they weren't actually at the scene you hold the advantage. Play it for all it is worth.

Foremost, it means you can absolve yourself of all blame. "I was sitting at the intersection minding my own business when, wham, I got smashed from behind," you point out with an exaggerated shrug. "What can a guy do?"

Once you have established yourself as the innocent victim, you then can expand your role as the "hero at the scene."

The best way to do that is to present yourself as "Mr. Take Charge."

You might try this approach.

Gather up your co-workers, at least those foolish enough to still be listening to your story, and say, "I tell you, everyone was just standing around doing nothing. So I took over. I mean, someone had to. I called the cops and while we waited for them to arrive I directed traffic. Then, I helped push three of the damaged cars to safety."

It is at that point that you generally lose the last of your audience. They offer feeble excuses about "having to get back to work," but that is not quite true.

What they really mean to say is, "I'd rather do anything, even get back to work, than listen to this garbage."

DEATHS

James Acree

CORSICANA — Services for former Lee High School head football coach James Dewitt Acree are set for 4 p.m. Monday at the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Conley Dugger officiating. Visitation is set for 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today at Griffin-Roughton Funeral Home.

Acree died Friday in Coriscana.

He was born April 17, 1928, in Maud, Okla.

He graduated from Maud High School where he earned 12 letters in football, basketball and track. He was elected to the 1947 Oklahoma All-Star Football Team as an end.

Acree attended the University of Oklahoma on a football scholarship and played on the 1949 winning streak team.

He served in the U.S. Army in Korea and Japan in the Korean War. After his discharge he returned to O.U., where he boxed and was Oklahoma Heavy Weight Champion in 1954. He graduated from college in 1954.

He coached 29 years in high school and college in Texas. He coached in Bonham, where he got his first head coaching job. He then coached in Corsicana from 1960-68 where his team won the 1963 3A State Championship and was selected 1964 High School Coach of the Year.

He coached three years at Southern Methodist University and later at Texas Tech University then returned to high school coaching at Midland Lee for eight years.

At Lee, Acree had a record of 47-34-2 as head coach in the 1970s. He won two district championships in 1974 and 1976. The 1974 title was the first district championship in Lee football history. He had a 1-2 record in the state playoffs. The win was 17-0 over Euless Trinity in the 1976 bi-district game.

He defeated Odessa Permian twice, 34-7 in 1974 and 14-13 in 1976.

In his 17 years as a head coach, Acree's record was 130-52-4. His teams won 23 titles producing eight All-State players. He served two years as director of the Texas High School Coaches Association. In 1976, he was named Midland Man of the Year.

In 1978 he returned to Corsicana and was with Collin Street Bakery for 10 years. Returning to coaching in 1988, he coached three years in Palestine and three years in Corsicana. He retired in 1993.

Acree was a member of First United Methodist Church, Texas High School Coaches Association, the American Legion, Texas Retired Teachers, and Kiwanis.

Survivors include his wife Rosemary Morphew Acree of Corsicana; a son, James Felix Acree of Houston; three daughters, Susan Kane of Richardson, Debby McCall of Austin, and Nancy Skalsky of Weatherford; three brothers, Stan Acree of Oklahoma City, Sam Acree of Maud, Okla., Dee Acree of Ganbury; three sisters, Janette Johnson of Kirbyville, Midge Richards of Maud, and Imogene Mask of Shawnee, Okla.; nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

COTTON: Farmers work to eradicate pest

(From 1b)

Though expensive, the cost of implementing the program is economical compared with doing nothing, which would result in heavy production losses and could lead to farmers' losing their livelihood and farms, Spinks said.

"There's really no way to control the boll weevil individually," he said. "It takes a group effort."

The brownish, quarter-inch beetle that uses its snout to feed on young succulent bolls has moved heavily into the Midland area in recent years.

"Five mild winters in a row have allowed him to move in here (in infestation numbers)," farmer George Anderson said.

The projected cost of implementing the 30-county High Plains Enhanced Diapause Program is $13.6 million in 1995. Costs in 1996 and 1997 are expected to lower, as the boll weevils "are pushed back," according to the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

Funds not spent in the diapause-spraying program would be set aside and built up toward funding the more expensive and more intense eradication program, which would begin in 1998.

The insecticide Malathion, which is employed in mosquito control along creeks and draws and in city alleys and that was used in California's Medfly program, is used in the aerial spraying of boll weevils.

The insecticide DDT, which attacks insects' nervous systems, previously was used in boll-weevil control but was banned by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1972 due to its long life and harmful effects on animal and plant life.

For the past 31 years, the Plains Cotton Growers has operated a boll-weevils control program and had made progress in holding off the cotton beetle by establishing buffer zones in its aerial-spraying program.

"The boll weevil has always been here to some degree," said Dennis Wallace, a Midkiff farmer who also is program-assistant agent for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consolidated Farm Service Agency for Midland County.

"(During) the last few years with the mild winters, they've just exploded," Wallace said. "Their numbers have gotten just ridiculously high."

Those buffer zones established by the Plains Cotton Grower has "failed miserably" in recent years due to the mild winters, Wallace said.

Farmers had counted on the hard freezes of severe winters to kill the boll weevils by causing them to starve. The colder the winter, the more body fat the boll weevils need to survive.

In the diapause program, boll-weevil-invested cotton is sprayed from mid-September until the first freeze, which usually arrives in early November or late October. Saint Lawrence-area cotton farmers are in that phase now and have been since the 1970s. Diapause spraying "targets the last generation of boll weevils in the fall basically to wipe them out, so there's nothing left to over-winter," Wallace said. "(There's) nothing left to go into hibernation to come back next spring."

In the eradication program, cotton is sprayed weekly from the first bloom of mid-summer, generally in July, until the first freeze.

"A (cotton) grower is fighting them (boll weevils) all summer," Wallace said. When farmers go into the intense eradication program, "you are going to wipe them out."

The boll weevil, which moved into the United States from Mexico in 1892 at Brownsville, was eradicated in the Southeastern United States, specifically in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Florida, Georgia, and Southern Alabama, and in California, Arizona, and northwest Mexico. The boll-weevil eradication trial program first was conducted in North Carolina and Virginia in 1978 and 1979.

The boll weevil is still making inroads in Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas.

Doug Paxton, Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologist for Midland and Martin counties, noted that the boll weevils "have been here (in West Texas), and they are well established. And unless we eradicate them, we won't get rid of them."

If left uncontrolled, the boll weevil could cost West Texas farmers more than $160 million in yield losses, fiber-quality reductions, and increased insecticide costs, according to James Leser, extension service entomologist in the Lubbock area.

Most of the 5 million bales of Texas Upland cotton in 1994 was produced in West Texas and was valued at almost $1.6 billion. Texas is the nation's leading cotton-producing state. The standard bale weighs 480 pounds.

The boll weevil recently "outflanked" the Plains Cotton Growers' control program and has moved into uninfested areas at an "alarming pace in the past two years," Leser said. The boll weevil has taken advantage of the recent mild winters, he said.

"The worst case scenario is that the weevil could put us out of the cotton business," Leser said.

NEW: Press box renovations improve Christensen stadium was renovated in 1971, Phillips said. "It was unstable, particularly when the wind blew," he said.

"The new one is two stories and basically twice the size and has some VIP rooms which the old one didn't have," Phillips said.

The new press box also afforded room for 112 box seats and a concession stand to serve the seat users. "We sold them in three days back in the fall. We always have a demand for premium box seats here," said Angels General Manager Monty Hoppel.

Cost of the press box will run about $260,000, Phillips said.

As part of an extension contract to keep the Angels here to 2001, the city must financially help maintain minimum standards for the minor league ballpark.

"We're basically trying to get this stadium to be as nice a facility as other cities around that have these double-A ball teams," Phillips said.

Officials announce cutbacks for Texas Air National Guard unit

AUSTIN (AP) — Pentagon cost-cutting measures have prompted cutbacks in a Wichita Falls-based unit of the Texas Air National Guard, military officials said Saturday.

The Air National Guard will eliminate about 47 positions in its 181st Aerial Port Flight unit, which will be deactivated effective July 1.

The unit's personnel include two full-time employees.

"The reorganization we are announcing today reflects the reduction in force that is taking place all across the United States in active duty, National Guard and reserve forces," said Maj. Gen. Sam C. Turk.

The Port Flight unit provides the only aerial port services to Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls for the active Air Force. Responsibilities included cargo processing, inspection and aircraft loading and unloading.

But the planned cuts represent a net loss of only one percent of the state Air National Guard's current authorized strength of 3,735 personnel.

The Wichita Falls unit's workers could be reassigned to other Texas Air or Army National Guard installations.

Program provides health care for rural students

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press

'They never went to the doctor, so they didn't know they were supposed to. They just thought an earache hurt until it went away.'
— Retta Knox, school nurse

HART (AP) — A melancholy procession of runny noses and sore throats was making its way into the school clinic this Wednesday morning.

One baby arrived with a rash. A 4-year-old girl needed blood tests. A teen-ager sought treatment for her irregular menstrual cycle.

Dozens of sick children and adolescents would flow through the crowded building by time the clinic closed for the evening and Dr. Mike O'Neill headed back to Lubbock.

This weekly dose of health care — dispensed in a campus structure previously used as a cafeteria, bus barn and ag shop — fills a medical-access void for these rural students.

"They never went to the doctor, so they didn't know they were supposed to," said school nurse Retta Knox. "They just thought an earache hurt until it went away."

A clinic staffed by nurse practitioners also serves this Texas Panhandle town of 1,200 people. But a trip to the closest hospital requires about a 30-mile drive past vegetable farms and feedyards to Dimmitt, Plainview or Tulia.

And then there's economics: The U.S. Census Bureau classifies 29.3 percent of Castro County residents as impoverished.

So Ms. Knox went looking for a way to provide health services that were more convenient and consistent for Hart children.

Two years ago she received $89,000 from the state to run a clinic under contract with the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center pediatrics department. Another $76,000 followed to help the school open a dental clinic last year.

The result, observers say, is long-overdue services for youngsters who live in the Hart Independent School District, and who often lacked the transportation or money to go to the doctor.

"When you're talking $40 or $50 to treat strep throat, there just wasn't the means," Ms. Knox said.

Now the students can obtain handy health care at reduced fees.

The doctors and Tech medical residents who staff the clinic can keep tabs on young patients with allergies or asthma. Checkups there have detected diabetes, heart murmurs and hernias.

O'Neill said the clinic provides a base for people who otherwise might apply home remedies to their pains and illnesses.

He alternates with other doctors every Wednesday and said he likes the setting.

"In the emergency room, that's your turf," O'Neill said. "Here they (the children) feel a little safer, like they belong here. You get better communication."

Absentee rates have dropped. And teachers point out that parents already trust the school.

"We can get people to come to the school," said kindergarten teacher Judy Dotson. "They know us. They're comfortable here. We're available."

The clinic features two exam rooms and a small waiting room. Ms. Knox and two of her aides orchestrate the indoor traffic.

Ramiro Vega was awaiting a checkup on his athlete's foot. Without the clinic, the 16-year-old basketball player acknowledged, his condition probably would go untreated.

"Mom thinks it's pretty cool because she works and I can just come here," he said.

"I don't have to miss school," 11-year-old Lindsey Martinez chimed in despite her cough and sniffles.

The clinic in its first year saw 464 students who made 1,401 visits. Ms. Knox said Medicaid pays the bills for children who qualify. Others who can't pay get free services.

The dental clinic next door opened in November and operates every other Thursday to fill cavities and extract teeth.

Dr. Richard Lampe, chairman of pediatrics at the Tech center, said the clinic demonstrates how various agencies can coordinate for rural health.

"Seldom is any one thing the answer," Lampe said. "But if it's one part of the puzzle, it's worthwhile."

A federal block grant of about $1.5 million funds the Hart operation and 14 other school-based clinics in Texas, said Mary Jackson, nurse consultant for the Texas Department of Health school health program.

The 15 clinics, in places like Houston, Galveston, Dallas, El Paso and McAllen, all enjoy strong community support, Ms. Jackson said.

But she foresees a murky future for such sites.

"I see more of them happening because of local people saying this is how they need to address their health needs," Ms. Jackson said. "... I don't know what's going to happen as far as (federal) funding."

Conservative critics fear that school-based clinics could encourage sexual activity among teenagers.

But people who make such charges misunderstand what the clinics do, others say.

Judy Jonas, project director for the Austin-based Texas Comprehensive School Health Initiatives, talked about cost-effectiveness.

"Healthier children learn better, so the more we can help them stay healthier, the better the education," Ms. Jonas said. And "if you can meet the needs of the kids where they are, that cuts down on those who may show up in an emergency room later on."

Back in Hart, parents who see Ms. Knox at the grocery store or ball games get nudged to fill prescriptions. Parents thank her for the clinic, she said.

"If we take the service away now, they're going to feel deprived," she said. "They didn't feel deprived before."

Too much traffic

River of cars, trucks on Interstate 35 may be beyond highway's capacity, official says

AUSTIN (AP) — Interstate 35 is getting crowded.

Night and day, north and south, cars and trucks: The mechanical river not only never stops flowing, it's getting bigger.

Hit I-35 in Dallas or Austin or San Antonio at rush hour and forget it. Nothing rushes in that slow-moving traffic but motorists' blood pressures.

Add the expected increase in international truck traffic brought by the North American Free Trade Agreement, and you may be talking a flood.

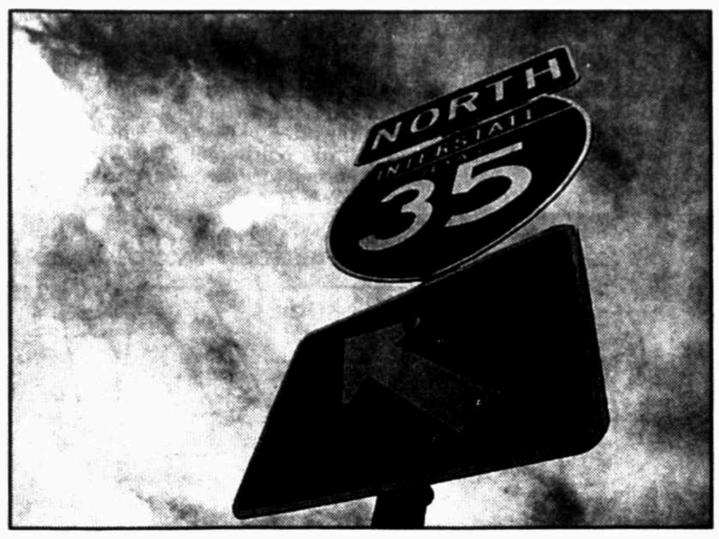

"Commerce is transportation, and Interstate 35 is one of the most critical links through which Texas participates in today's world economy," said Robert Cuellar, the Texas Department of Transportation's deputy executive director for planning and development.

In testimony to a legislative committee last fall, Cuellar said, "Today, most of I-35 is functioning at or beyond its traffic-carrying capacity."

The transportation department says traffic on the highway has increased "dramatically" since 1960, and the numbers show it.

The highest volume is a daily average of 233,000 vehicles on the section of I-35 East that runs through Dallas, said Alan King, DOT spokesman. Another 111,000 vehicles a day take the western leg through Fort Worth, he said.

According to the transportation agency, the greatest increase in non-urban traffic since 1960 has been on the section of I-35 between San Antonio and Austin. It's up 754 percent to 49,000 vehicles a day.

AP Laserphoto

Interstate 35 runs a straight shot through Texas linking the United States with Mexico. It's been called a river of trade, the very backbone of the great state of Texas.

Between Waco and Hillsboro, 7,000 vehicles per day in 1960 soared to about 35,000 per day by 1993.

South of San Antonio, traffic has increased 575 percent, from about 2,000 vehicles per day in 1960 to 11,500 daily in 1993.

Interstate 35 stretches for 503 miles from the Oklahoma border in the north to the Mexican border at Laredo.

It's the sole, central land route linking the three North American Free Trade Agreement partners — Canada, the United States and Mexico — and it provides access to all major interstate routes running east to west across the United States.

The highway links four of the state's six largest metropolitan areas. It runs through Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Minneapolis, and at Laredo connects with the highway to Monterrey, Mexico.

The Texas DOT says NAFTA is not only bringing new trade, but new challenges — protecting highways from accelerated deterioration due to additional use and overweight vehicles.

An indication of NAFTA's potential impact may already have been recorded. The DOT says that more than 32 percent of the I-35 traffic increase since 1960 has occurred since 1990.

From 1992 through the summer of 1994, costs for construction, reconstruction and preventive maintenance on I-35 ran about $148 million.

Lawmakers have been told that in the next seven years, the DOT plans to spend more than $342 million to expand and improve I-35.

Officials say most of that money will go for expansion of the segment from San Antonio to Hillsboro, south of Dallas-Fort Worth, to a minimum of six lanes.

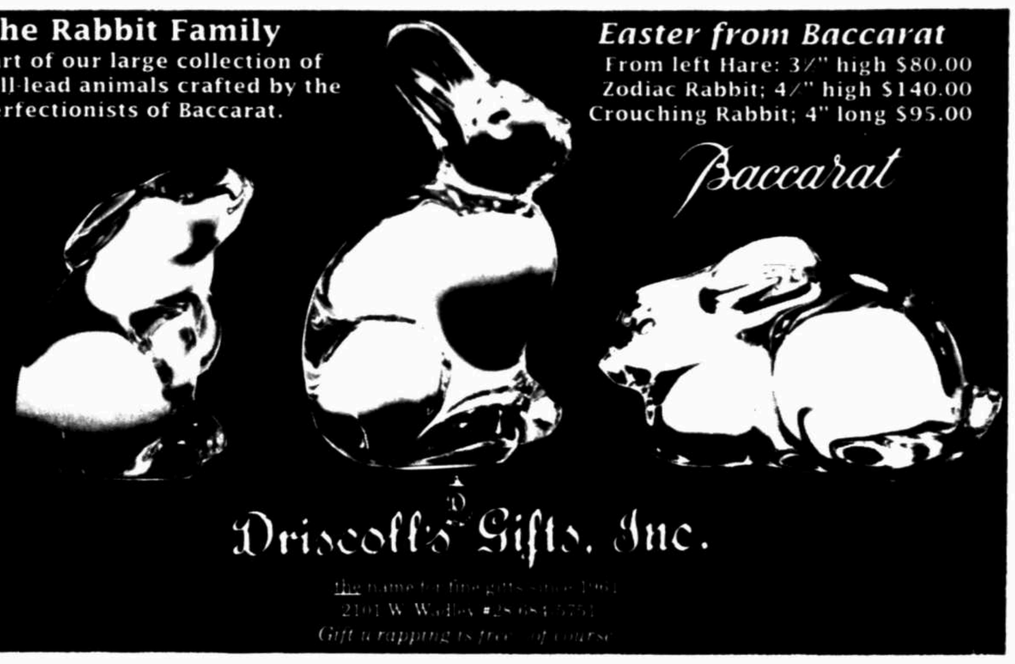

About $16 million is to be spent on improvements between San Antonio and Laredo. Relief routes around Austin and the Dallas central business district also are planned.

Al Luedecke, of the transportation department's planning division, says that even without NAFTA, I-35 would have gotten busier.

"We try to predict these things as best we can," he said. "Twenty years ahead, you never really know for sure.

"The trade between the major urban centers that have grown up along I-35, even if we weren't on the border with Mexico, would be increasing because of the economy along that corridor. Twenty years ago, Austin was a sleepy little capital city out here in the middle of nowhere. Look at it today."

Proposed bill would require use of special DWI plates

TYLER (AP) — Convicted drunken drivers would be required to display special license plates under proposed legislation by state Rep. Ted Kamel.

The plates would be red and would have the letters "DWI" as part of the lettering code, said Kamel, R-Tyler.

"We need to send the message clearly to everyone — adults and especially our young people — that there is definitely a stigma for drinking and driving and it is an unacceptable stigma that we no longer tolerate," Kamel said Friday. "It has the Scarlet Letter effect. In fact, some call it the Scarlet Letter bill."

The bill's nickname refers to Nathaniel Hawthorne's novel about a woman forced to wear a scarlet "A" as a punitive mark of adultery.

It will be discussed during a House committee meeting on April 24. If approved, it would take effect Sept. 1, 1995.

If the bill is approved, citizens convicted of driving drunk would be required to surrender their license plates and registration receipt of the vehicle they were operating at the time of the offense.

If they do not own that vehicle, the driver could be required to surrender those materials pertaining to their own car.

The impounded license plates would be replaced with the special "DWI" plates for 10-180 days, according to the proposal.

South Texas town's economic woes grow as government shrinks

ENCINAL (AP) — The woes continue to grow in as the city government in this South Texas town has downsized to nearly nothing.

As of Friday afternoon, the lone telephone in City Hall had been disconnected because of unpaid bills. The single municipal employee, City Secretary Armando Aguirre, had quit to find a better-paying job but hadn't yet told the mayor.

City Hall was closed, garbage collection has been shut off for two months, municipal street lights are off because of an unpaid bill, and a grassroots movement to remove Mayor Roy Salinas has begun.

Salinas, who is an agent for the U.S. Border Patrol in Laredo, told The San Antonio Express-News that Encinal's problems were well-intentioned efforts gone awry.

He expects phone service to City Hall to be restored by next week, once he finishes paying the bill, but City Hall will remain closed next week for an internal audit of the books.

"In three months, we'll have everything straightened out, and the city will be back on its feet," Salinas said.

This city, 40 miles north of Laredo, has been in turmoil since the street lights were turned off March 7 after the Central Power & Light Co. bill went unpaid for months.

Many residents have installed security lights around their homes to make up for the loss.

The phone service was cut after Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. spent months demanding payment of an $1,100 bill, spokesman Bob Ferguson said.

"We made telephone calls to City Hall every day and no calls were ever returned," Ferguson said by phone from San Antonio. "We regret having to do it, but none of our efforts to resolve it have worked."

Encinal, one of the smallest incorporated entities in South Texas with only 620 residents, is flat broke, said former City Secretary Aguirre, who was cutting his lawn Thursday afternoon.

Aguirre, whose work week was slashed from 40 hours to about 12 when Salinas cut City Hall operations and expenses in March, said he decided Monday to quit to find a better-paying job.

As of Friday, he had not gotten around to telling the mayor.

He begged residents to understand his decision, saying: "I can't afford to work without being paid."

Salinas, who receives no salary as mayor, said much of the problem is that many residents were not paying municipal fees levied for the street lights and garbage pickup. He suspended the garbage pickup and told CP&L to cut off street light service in an attempt to force compliance.

Salinas has fought a running battle with the Encinal Water Supply Corp., a private, non-profit company that runs the city's water system.

He has sought to have the water company collect the street light and garbage levies with the monthly water bill and to cut off water service for failure to pay the electric and garbage portions.

But company officials have balked at tying the other payments to water service.

Mike Flores, who is retired, says he now is working hard to get Salinas out of office before his term ends.

"Definitely, we're going to try and get rid of him," Flores said Thursday.

"People don't trust him," Flores said. "They think that he is either mismanaging or maybe misappropriating funds. Our situation is to get him arrested otherwise, we'll just have to wait until next election rolls around in 1996."

Former developer receives 10-year prison sentence, $4 million fine

HOUSTON (AP) — A former real estate developer and bank chairman has been sentenced to 10 years in federal prison and ordered to pay $4 million in restitution for his part in defrauding Texas National Bank-Westheimer.

John Riddle, former chairman of Texas National, was sentenced Friday for his conviction last year on six charges of conspiracy, bank fraud, misapplication of bank funds and making false entries.

The charges were related to a land-and-loans swap scheme that so far has cost the bank $13.4 million and helped drive it into insolvency in 1987.

Victor Bane, the 54-year-old bank president, already has been sentenced to three years in prison and a $50,000 fine in relation to the scheme.

Prosecutors alleged that Riddle and Bane conspired with convicted savings-and-loan crook Don R. Dixon to defraud Texas National by diverting money for Riddle's personal use.

According to evidence, Texas National bought $9 million in outstanding loans from Dixon's Vernon Savings & Loan Association.

And they're off!

There was a large turnout at the new Retama Park racetrack in Selma, Texas Friday, as big-time horse-racing returned to the San Antonio area for the first time in 58 years with the first race at the park.

Mechanical failure causes mishap

GRAPEVINE (AP) — A commuter plane rolled off a runway at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport on Saturday after a mechanical problem, officials said.

American Eagle Flight 4456, with 27 passengers and three crew members aboard, was arriving from Tyler on a taxiway when the turboprop Saab 340B aircraft veered into grass.

"Apparently, there was some mechanical problem that caused it to go off into the grassy area," said Angel Biasatti, an airport spokeswoman.

No one was injured, said American Eagle and D-FW officials. The incident was under investigation by the airport and American Eagle, the commuter line of Fort Worth-based American Airlines.

Airport Department of Public Safety and operations crews responded to the incident as a precaution

The twin-engine aircraft was able later to taxi back onto the runway under its own power. Mechanics were checking out the craft.

An American Eagle spokesman called the incident minor. On Monday, a Mexican charter jet with more than 150 passengers aboard was forced to return to D-FW after a cockpit light warned of a fire minutes after takeoff.

Two people received cuts and bruises as they slid off a wing to safety, but no fire was found.

Police claim ignorance of self-confessed killer's serial murders, report says

HOUSTON (AP) — Police in jurisdictions nationwide say FBI agents never told them of claims by self-described serial killer Donald Leroy Evans that he had killed in their areas, the Houston Chronicle reported in Sunday editions.

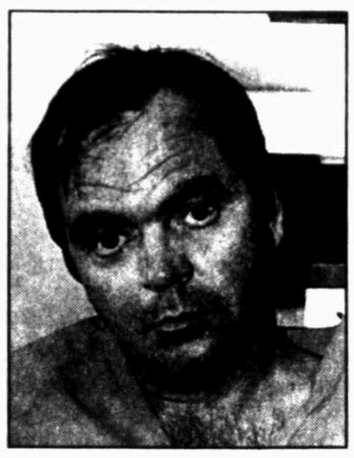

Some of the departments, which learned of Evans' claims only recently during the newspaper's investigation, said they have reopened murder probes and will examine the claims.

The Galveston drifter has already been sentenced to death for kidnapping and killing a homeless, 10-year-old girl in Gulfport, Miss.

He is jailed in Broward County, Fla., while awaiting trial in the 1985 strangling of Ira Jean Smith in Fort Lauderdale.

Smith was one of the 72 people in 22 states and one person in Canada whom Evans says he has killed. The FBI set up a nationwide task force to investigate the claims in 1991, but dropped the effort when the claims could not be verified.

But police detectives who have details about killings in their areas have never evaluated Evans' statements. Specific murders Evans says he committed remain unsolved, and the victims' survivors were never told that he claimed responsibility for the deaths, the newspaper said.

Lynn Miller, an Idaho Springs, Colo., sheriff's deputy who unsuccessfully investigated the 1983 disappearance of her older sister, said she never heard from the FBI that sister Beth was on Evans' list of victims.

"I was the lead investigator on my sister's disappearance, and I had never heard this," Lynn Miller said. "I can't think of any good reason why this information wouldn't have been passed on."

FBI Agent Tom Bush in Jackson, Miss., the ranking task force agent, told the newspaper that all agencies in the locales in which Evans claimed murders had been apprised of the confessions.

However, when told that authorities in several areas had claimed ignorance, Bush said he could not discuss specific agencies or crimes without seeing a list of those agencies. Bush declined the newspaper's offer of a list.

Bush also refused a letter from Evans requesting that he provide evidence to "debunk" the killer's claims.

"I do not feel called upon to prove or disprove anything that Donald Evans says," the agent said.

Police in at least six cities and counties in California, Colorado, North Carolina and Kentucky hope to check out Evans' statements. They said they would have done so previously had they known about them, the Chronicle reported.

Earlier this year, Evans began contacting the newspaper with details of numerous murders, nine of which can be confirmed as among those he originally claimed to the FBI, the Chronicle said.

Of those nine, the task force had relayed one to local authorities. That was to Evanston, Wyo., near where Evans insists that he had murdered a woman he identified only as "G.G." in 1981. The confession has not been matched with a known killing.

Police in six communities where Evans says he killed the other eight victims say they have no record of any contact from the FBI, nor had they heard of Donald Evans or his confessions.

Those communities are: Ford, Ky.; Raleigh, N.C.; Wilmington, N.C.; Greensboro, N.C.; Coalinga, Calif.; and Idaho Springs, Colo. No known victim has been found in any of the cases, but authorities said Evans' descriptions of their areas are correct and they are continuing to investigate.

Gulfport, Miss., Police Lt. Steve Barnes, who traced Evans' employment and arrest records over a 25-year period, said it was difficult to connect Evans to many of the crimes he claimed and equally difficult to refute his claims.

"There's a period in the early 1980s in which there are large gaps," said Barnes. "I can't say where he was for large blocks of time."

Evans, who once seemed eager to confess to the killings, now says he won't talk to police about his crimes, mostly because Broward County Jail prohibits cigarettes. He also accuses federal authorities of reneging on promises to house him in a federal facility and let him see his girlfriend.

"I just want them to honor the agreement that was made in the first place," said Evans. "It's not that I want to sit on these cases. I'd rather give them up, but they want Donald to give, give, give like the Eveready Rabbit while they don't live up to their promises."

I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Galveston center for homeless children likely to feel effects of budget cuts

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Galveston County Daily News changed the names of the children interviewed in this story to protect their privacy. All attend the supplemental education program at The Children's Center.

By Heidi Lutz
The Galveston County Daily News

GALVESTON — The average 9-year-old probably has not witnessed a murder or had to care for an alcoholic parent. But, chances are, the average child at The Children's Center has.

Among the homeless in Texas are the sometimes-forgotten children of homeless parents. Their average age is 9, but many already have experienced a lifetime's worth of nightmares.

The Discovery Club at The Children's Center is a home away from home for some of Galveston's forgotten children. But budget cuts in Congress could bring an end to the program — and to the hope it has given the children who stay there after school each day.

"I would be dead," said Mike, a 15-year-old at the center. "If I wasn't here, it would be just like I was on the streets."

He said the Discovery Club is just like a home he can come to after school. The staff members are like mothers and fathers to him, he said. Mike and the other children who come to the Discovery Club are homeless, said Claudia Koch, the director of the program.

According to the state, a person is homeless if he or she lives in a shelter, a place that is not normally suitable for inhabitants or with friends and family because of financial reasons. Some of the kids in the Discovery Club live at the nearby Yeager Center, a shelter for homeless children. Some live with different family members each week. Others have parents in prison. But none has what is considered a traditional home.

When asked where he goes every night after the Discovery Club, David said "home." But David, one of the elementary school students in the program, does not have one place to call home. He jumps from one house to another, staying with friends and family members. Another boy said he went home to Dallas each night.

Koch said it is answers like these that prevent the state from getting an accurate count of homeless children in the state. She says the best estimate was made during the fall, when the Texas Education Agency conducted a survey in schools. According to that survey, the state has about 125,000 homeless children. Koch could not even guess how many of those are in Galveston.

Her program alone helped 712 students in 1994. Each day, 25 to 30 students are tutored on the second floor of the center at 2127 Ave. M. Children often are ashamed of being homeless and will not tell school officials they are, Koch said. Her program, she said, gives these children hope for their futures.

"These kids want to be like everybody else," she said. "We're not going to let this program die."

Koch has organized a phone and letter-writing campaign to Congress to keep the program alive. On the front door of the center is a notice to visitors to call the senators on the finance committee that will handle the bill that cuts the center's funding. The children there have written letters explaining why they want the Discovery Club to stay open. Among the reasons the children give members of Congress to keep the center open is because "it is fun and safe."

Billy, a second-grader, addressed his letter to Congress. He wrote, "Give us some money," and underlined "money" three times. All he asked for, though, was $15.

> 'I would be dead. If I wasn't here, it would be just like I was on the streets.'
> — Mike, a 15-year-old at the center

The Children's Center receives $143,000 each year through the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Education for Children and Youth Act. The House Appropriations Committee's Labor, Education and Health and Human Services subcommittee cut funding for the act, which provides more than $29 million to educate homeless children. The subcommittee also took back any unused money for this year. The bill, which is scheduled to go before the full House soon, will have a rule attached to it that forces someone who wants to restore funding to one program to take it from another, said Elaine Lang, a spokeswoman for U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin. In other words, the programs are competing against one another for funding, and someone will lose.

There is a chance the money could be given back to the program if the Senate feels differently about the cuts. From the House, the appropriations bill goes to the Senate for consideration, where it will be subject to more committee hearings and floor votes. A conference committee between the House and Senate follows, and it is always possible something could change, Lang said.

The cuts made in the House are part of the Republican "Contract With America." In the contract, Republicans promise to consider, within the first 100 days, a Personal Responsibility Act. This act includes many of the welfare reform cuts promised by campaigning Republicans. As the bill reads now, it would take the money from all of the programs like the McKinney Act and lump them together in one block grant. Then, from that sum, appropriations would be cut by 30 percent, Lang said.

U.S. Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Friendswood, a signer of the Contract With America, was unavailable for comment.

Discovery Club director Koch emphasizes reading and math in her after-school and summer programs, and the kids say they like coming to the "club."

"The children are confused," said Lettie Young, one of the teachers at the center. "We try to provide a happy environment so they like academics."

Also funded through the $143,000 is a tutoring program Koch organizes at the Yeager Home for homeless children. Some of the older students there are not comfortable coming to the Children's Center, but still want help. The Discovery Club also teaches the children that life is not all about having things given to them, Koch said. Part of her program consists of helping others in the community. The kids took a trip during the summer to a beach in Galveston and picked up trash. They cleaned the rooms in a retirement center.

And watching them study together, it's obvious each one has a good idea of what the word "sharing" means. The Discovery Club is important to the students because it's the stable family most do not have.

David, the elementary school student, summed up what it means to him to have the Discovery Club to come to every day. "You can be somebody's friend," he said.

Residents complain that town's new rules cramp their lifestyles

By Emily Jauregal and Sito Negron
El Paso Times

SOCORRO — Trini Lopez moved to Socorro 12 years ago to get away from the restrictions of city life.

But in 1986, Socorro reasserted its city status, creating a city council. The town, which had been incorporated since 1871, began to plan for its future.

Now, in its effort to transform itself into a "real" city, Socorro is experiencing growing pains, with some longtime residents and businesses enduring what they say is more than their share of the hurt.

"We come here ... to build our own homes by our own efforts because we didn't have the money, and suddenly these beautiful ideas come up from these (City Council) people and we're forced to comply with stricter regulations than El Paso has," Lopez said.

Mayor Rogelio Lozoya says it's "a small number of people that complain."

"Most residents understand that we want to live in a better city and that's going to take some rules — much like other cities (including) El Paso."

In recent years, city officials started issuing citations on all that is ugly. Residents can no longer build homes like shacks, pile trash on their lots or start businesses in residential areas.

City officials are particularly picky when it comes to the Mission Trail, its prime tourist attraction.

The Mission Trail — home to three historic missions — winds through the Lower Valley, mostly along Socorro Road.

Lopez and others are upset because they say city officials have been targeting certain businesses and homes in their staunch efforts to clean up the city, containing the historic trail.

They say the city also has no experience and is running roughshod over the rights of those who moved to the area to get away from restrictions on how they run their businesses or homes.

In Socorro, public inspectors are allowed to carry guns, which residents say is intimidating.

But Mayor Lozoya insists inspectors need weapons because some property owners can get "mean and ugly" when inspectors come calling.

And he said the city has the right to control growth and clean up the city, which has long been a center for such unsightly businesses as junk yards and garages.

To Minerva Aguilar Assado, cleaning up the city means spending $350 to build a twig fence.

To keep her young children from running into the street, she put up a chain-link fence in the front yard. But she didn't know she needed a permit, prompting city officials to give her a costly ultimatum: Replace it or cover her home in stucco to fit in with the look of the Historic Mission Trail, a far more costly proposition.

"I'm so sad. I barely have money and all of the money that does go to this is money that should be going to my three children," said Ms. Aguilar Assado, a widow and janitor at El Paso Community College.

To Lopez, the city's plans amount to what he calls constant harassment.

He said a city inspector visits regularly because of the numerous cars in front of his home and garage along the Mission Trail.

Lopez things he ought to be able to fix vehicles in front of his business: It's both an advertisement and a way of ensuring that someone is always in front to help a customer.

"The code inspector stopped by my place and told me, 'You know what, you have too many cars in this place — you have to get rid of some of them.'

"I said, 'This is my living,' He said they're not good for tourism. But I'm working for a living, not to make somebody else look good," Lopez said.

City officials see it another way. Everyone will benefit from increased civic pride in a beautiful city, they say.

They call Lopez a troublemaker who objects to everything. Plus, they insist city officials are reasonable, that they cite residents only after a warning and 30 days to fix problems.

"This area is more than 300 years old. All we want is to do our best to conserve what we have," said city inspector and historic preservation officer Rafael Padilla. "A lot of people like Mr. Lopez just aren't used to these permits and they're going out of their way to make trouble."

But Lopez charges that he isn't merely being asked to clean up. He thinks the city is trying to make it so difficult on him that he'll pick up and move.

City officials, without specifically saying they're going after Lopez, say generally they're trying to relocate "undesirable" businesses such as garages and junk yards away from the historic trail.

"They're just not appropriate for the Mission Trail," Padilla said.

Mechanic Martin Cabral feels trapped by the Mission Trail.

He tried to start his own small business on Socorro Road, but said slow business and too many city restrictions killed his dream.

Cabral has tried to move his shop with a friend just down Socorro Road. But the mechanic said city officials won't let him fix cars there.

The lot the garage sits on, off the Mission Trail, is zoned only for "light commercial" uses, such as oil changes.

"This is already a car shop, so I don't understand why they won't let me work to feed my family," said Cabral, who has been barred from hanging a sign to advertise his business.

Socorro officials have strict rules about business signs. A business can only have one sign, and the letters can't be too large — no more than six inches high.

Proposed overhaul of emissions testing threatens to put station out of business

Tejas has an exclusive contract with the state to test vehicles in three polluted Texas urban areas: Fort Worth-Dallas, El Paso and Houston. Emission testing has been on hold since Jan. 31, when the Legislature imposed a 90-day moratorium so the program could be revamped.

FORT WORTH — The latest proposed overhaul of Texas' unpopular emission testing program would exempt Denton and Collin counties, remove Beaumont-Port Arthur from testing requirements, and send most drivers back to neighborhood inspection stations.

The proposal, which is scheduled for debate Monday before a state Senate committee, could prove fatal for Tejas Testing Technology, company spokesman Bill Miller said on Friday.

"The bottom line is the Senate plan puts us out of business," Miller said.

Tejas has an exclusive contract with the state to test vehicles in three polluted Texas urban areas: Fort Worth-Dallas, El Paso and Houston. Emission testing has been on hold since Jan. 31, when the Legislature imposed a 90-day moratorium so the program could be revamped.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which must approve any changes in Texas' emission testing program, would be concerned about eliminating the two counties from inspection requirements, EPA spokesman Tom Diggs said.

A final draft of the plan is being completed this weekend in preparation for a public hearing and a final vote Monday by the Senate Select Committee on Emissions.

If, as expected, the bill is approved, it will go to the full Senate for consideration.

A vastly different measure before the House, however, could mean major changes when the two go to conference committee.

The major provisions of the Senate proposal would:

- Exempt Collin and Denton counties, with the understanding that remote sensing devices, used in California to detect high polluters much as radar guns detect speeders — but which have not proved effective in testing — would eventually be installed on major highways into Tarrant and Dallas counties. The change is intended to catch commuters who pollute but minimize inconvenience to others.
- Allow privately owned vehicles to be tested annually at neighborhood inspection stations at the same time that safety inspections are due. All commercial vehicles and government fleets would go to Tejas' centralized inspection stations. Individuals could voluntarily go to Tejas for testing.
- Motorists would pay $10 for the emission test and $10.50 for the safety inspection.
- Testing in Fort Worth-Dallas and El Paso would begin May 2, when the moratorium ends. But Houston and surrounding counties would not resume emission testing until Jan. 1. State officials have requested that Beaumont-Port Arthur be exempt from the testing.
- Give new cars a four-year test exemption in exchange for a $20 fee, which would go into a fund used to buy heavy-polluting vehicles or help pay for their repair. Lawmakers are considering requiring new-car buyers statewide to pay the fee, said Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, chairman of the select committee and sponsor of the bill.
- Call for ticketing of vehicles that emit smoke on highways for more than 10 seconds.

The House plan, which Tejas and EPA officials say comes closer to meeting their approval, would exempt new cars for six years in exchange for a $10-a-year repair fund fee. Cars would initially be tested at Tejas' centralized stations, but those needing repairs could be retested at neighborhood inspection stations.

That plan, proposed by Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, is also being finalized this weekend.

Midland rules seventh-ranked Cooper, 15-1

■ Midland High makes the most of eight Abilene Cooper errors as the Bulldogs stay in the playoff hunt with run-rule victory.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Shock waves continue to hit the District 4-5A baseball race as the Midland High Bulldogs delivered the latest blow, bashing Abilene Cooper 15-1 in a run-rule, five inning game Saturday at Christensen Stadium.

This is the same Cooper team that was tied with Midland Lee for the district lead only four days ago. Now Cooper is mired in a three-game district losing streak and sinking as fast as a western winter sun.

Meanwhile, Midland High is now 4-4 in the league race, owning a very real chance at making the playoffs. Cooper slides to 5-3, and the way the sliding Cougars are playing right now, coach Lee Driggers has some real reasons for concern.

"I don't have the answer to what has happened to us," Driggers said after the stunning loss. "This whole thing is just hard to believe. All I know is that we got our butts kicked good and we've lost three in a row. I do know that we have a better team than the way we are playing now and we have to turn it around somehow."

Although Midland High played a near flawless game, Cooper helped the Bulldogs with eight errors, allowing 12 unearned runs. Still, MHS made only one error of its own and got a solid mound performance from Craig Coleman, who went the distance with little trouble from the troubled and suddenly silent bats. It was Coleman's third complete game in district play this season.

■ District 4-5A Baseball

"We had a good offensive day and that really took the pressure off of me," Coleman said. "All I had to do was throw strikes and let the defense get them out. If we hit the ball and don't make errors, this team can go a long way."

The Bulldogs got only seven hits in the game, but made the most of them. A prime example came in the second inning when the Bulldogs took a 4-0 lead on only one hit. But it was a big one — a bases loaded triple by Chad Villareal.

"I just wanted to get the ball into play," Villareal said. "I knew a hit would give us some more runs and it was early in the game. I knew I wanted a hit then."

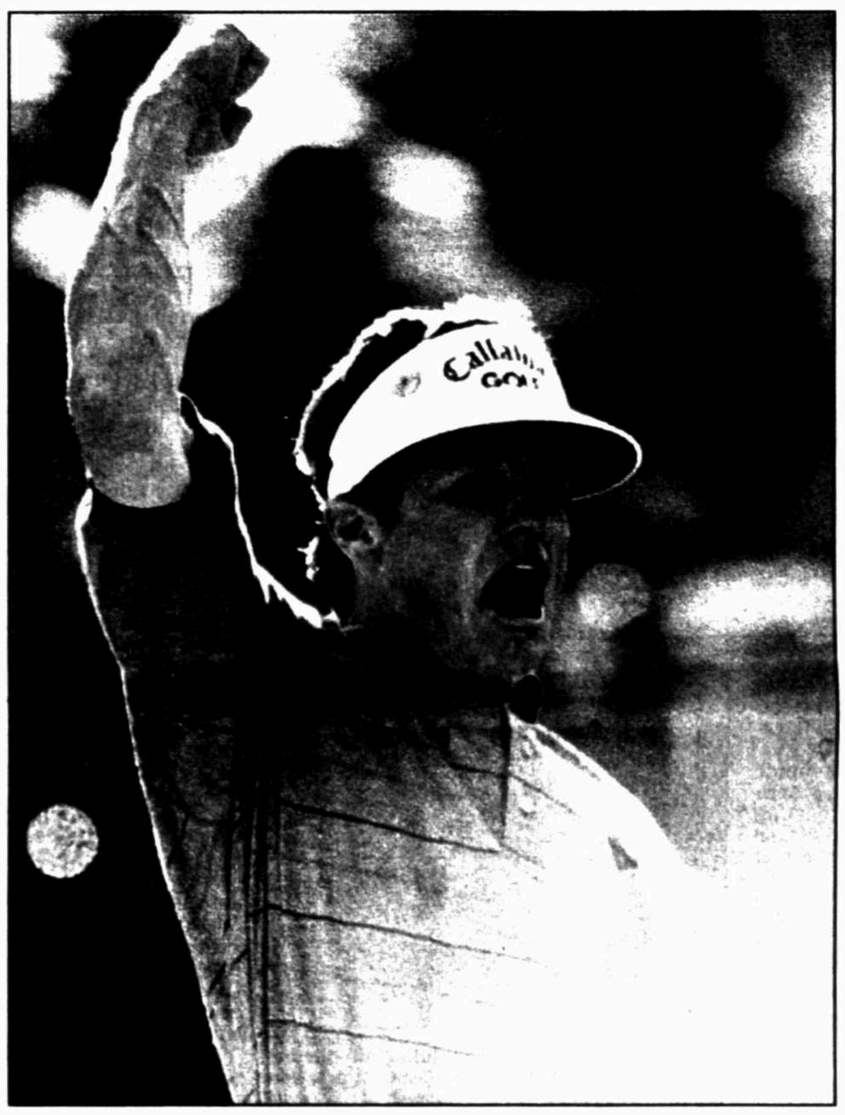

After that Cooper seem to die on the field and never answered

THE MASTERS

Rookie sneaks to top of leaderboard

■ Rookie Brian Henninger and Texan Ben Crenshaw share lead going into today's final round of the 59th Masters.

By Ron Sirak
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — No one really wanted to talk about Saturday in the Masters. They couldn't stop looking at the leaderboard and thinking about today.

"That board is stacked and it's going to be some tournament," said Ben Crenshaw, who shared the third-round lead with Brian Henninger at 10-under-par 206.

"With all those people right there, you can imagine what kind of free-for-all it will be."

The numbers were staggering. Sixteen players were within five strokes of the lead.

"There is a darn good chance it's going to be a three- or four-man playoff," said Fred Couples, tied for second at 207, a single stroke back, along with Jay Haas, Phil Mickelson, Steve Elkington and Scott Hoch.

"You're not going to be able to shoot 70 and win," Couples said, "not with the number of players we have up there now."

Brian Henninger sinks a birdie on the 16th hole to tie Ben Crenshaw heading into today's final round of the 59th Masters.

AP Laserphoto

Crenshaw, a former champion with the silky soft putting stroke perfect for the greased-lightning greens of Augusta, shot 69, and Henninger, a 31-year-old journeyman playing in his first Masters, shot 68.

But that was not good enough to create any distance from the rest of the field.

Curtis Strange, David Frost and John Huston were at 208, two strokes back, while Greg Norman and Davis Love were at 209.

Duffy Waldorf was at 6-under-par 210 along with Corey Pavin. Mark McCumber, Raymond Floyd, Nick Faldo and Mark O'Meara were at 211. And Tom Watson, Hale Irwin, Ian Woosnam, Lee Janzen and defending champion Jose Maria Olazabal were at 212, six strokes behind Crenshaw and Henninger.

Jack Nicklaus made an eagle-2 on the 435-yard fifth hole for the second time in the tournament, holing a 7-iron second shot. He posted 70 to be at 1-under-par 215.

And 19-year-old Tiger Woods struggled to a 77 and was at 221, 5 over par.

Posting a 65 even before the leaders turned the front nine and getting in the clubhouse at 8-under, Strange put up the kind of low score early that makes the sun feel a little hotter, the wind swirl a little trickier and the greens putt all that much faster for those still on the course.

"The greens are getting faster by the minute," Strange said after his nine-birdie, two-bogey round.

Lady Rebs finish year perfect-Lee

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

If Lee softball coach J.C. Gotcher is walking with more spring in his step today, it is probably because shoulders have been relieved of a tremendous amount of weight.

That happens when your team fulfills season-long expectations such as winning the District 6-5A title and going undefeated throughout the season like the Lee Rebels did Saturday with their 3-0 win over Abilene Cooper at the Bill Williams' Softball Complex.

"I feel like a 250-pound gorilla hopped off my back," Gotcher said. "Going undefeated is a heck of an accomplishment for this team. (Going undefeated) It is has weighed on the girls' minds and it has bugged me.

"Take the law of averages and it will get you. The kids handled it really well."

For the players, the win was equally as exciting.

Injuries trip up Tall City teams

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

Just as the beginning of spring marks the beginning of track and field season, the Tall City Invitational has for years represented the last gasp before the District 4-5A meet. And typically the season takes its toll on those who compete.

Saturday's annual running of the meet at Memorial Stadium was no different. Despite nagging injuries and general fatigue, the Midland High and Midland Lee boys and girls track teams dug deep and came up with some inspirational individual performances. But with the district meet looming less than a week away, the coaches hope some quick healing can take place.

Here were some of the more gut-wrenching accomplishments:

• The Midland High girls won two relays going away despite a nagging back injury that hampered their star sprinter, sophomore Tami Zachery, several of the Lady Bulldogs are nursing minor ailments.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Midland High's JoAnn Brito puts the shot during Saturday's Tall City Relays at Memorial Stadium.

• Midland Lee's Melvin Dunson, who has been favoring a sore leg all week according to coach Mike Quimby, blistered the field in the 100 meters in a time of 10.76 seconds. The second-place time was a distant 11.01.

• The Midland High boys came from behind in the 400 relay, behind a strong anchor leg from star running back Roy Coats, to nip favorite San Angelo Central at the tape in a season-best time of 42.08. Coats has been splitting time between baseball and track and is still not in the best running shape but he turned on the burner in the last 100 meters.

• And Midland Lee girls coach Bill Martin is still struggling to find out exactly what has been ailing his 800-meter spe-

Western Conference flexes muscle during weekend All-Star Classic

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

Whether Midland College's conference or the Eastern Texas Conference has the better women's basketball players will have to go unanswered. But MC's Western Junior College Athletic Conference did have the best team at the Texas-New Mexico All-Star Weekend, winning the championship game at Chap Center Saturday 85-72 over Eastern Conference Red. And the All-Star Weekend wasn't meant to be a showdown between the two Texas conferences anyway.

"We win the national championship a lot more," Tyler Junior College and Eastern Conference Red coach Lee Ann Riley said in answer to the 'which conference is best' question. "They're the two best conferences in women's (JUCO) basketball by far. And Texas junior college women's basketball is the best there is."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

The Texas Eastern Conference's Trinity Valley Community College won the national title in 1993 and played in the tile game this year. Kilgore Junior College has won the national championship four times in the last eight years. And the eight-team conference split up into all-star teams this weekend and still fared well against one team each from the WJCAC and the Northern Conferences.

But Midland College women's coach Ron Jones feels the WJCAC was, overall, better than the TEC this year.

"The Eastern Conference is not as strong as us top to bottom," Jones said. "But we don't have a team as good as Trinity Valley."

Riley didn't want to reduce this showcase of junior college sophomore talent to a battle of conferences.

"This is for the kids," Riley said. "I don't think its' a TEC versus Western Texas thing. If we did our job a kid got a scholarship

Lee survives Abilene High

ABILENE — Midland Lee bit another bullet in the District 4-5A baseball race here Saturday, scoring seven unearned runs with two outs in the ninth inning to defeat stubborn Abilene High, 10-4.

Lee's Mike Phillips hit a routine pop fly with the bases loaded to Abilene High right fielder Cortinaz with two outs in the ninth, but the ball was dropped and the flood gates opened. Three runs scored on the play. Mark Holly doubled in another run while Justin Ham and David Greene both tripled in runs during the onslaught.

Lee holds first place in 4-5A with the win, owning a 7-1 league mark. Abilene High, now 3-5, had beaten Abilene Cooper on Thursday and was looking for another huge upset.

Lee's Kevin Jordan smashed a huge two-run homer for the Rebels in the first inning and Holly delivered a solo blast in the sixth inning. Ham also had two hits in the game.

Lance Watters, now a perfect 4-0 in 4-5A play, went the entire nine innings for Lee to get the win.

Lee will host Odessa High at 4:30 p.m. at Ernie Johnson Field Tuesday.

MHS upset by Abilene High

ABILENE — The Midland High softball team lost out to the Lady Eagles of Abilene High 12-7 here Saturday in District 6-5A.

MHS, 16-6 and 6-5, snapped a four-game winning streak and will be in a must win situation Tuesday if they hope to keep third place in the District 6-5A race.

Katrina Kelley, whose record falls to 7-3, took the loss as Abilene High scored 12 runs on 14 hits. Kelley struckout one and walked one in six innings of work.

Midland High got eight hits. Joye Lewis went 2-for-4 and Jamee Stennett went 1-for-4 with double and a two RBIs against the 16-8 and 5-6 Abilene High team.

Midland High will come back to the friendly confines of the Bill Williams Softball Complex for its season finale against San Angelo.

G'wood drills Sonora

SONORA — The Greenwood baseball team defeated Sonora 11-0 in District 8-3A play Saturday.

Greenwood, 8-8-1 and 1-1 in district play, relied on the arm of Jeff Jones who won his season debut throwing 12 strikeouts and allowing one hit.

Jones also had a double and a RBI. Other offensive contributors include Casey Otho with two hits, Rusty Purser with a 2-for-4 and three RBI performance, Michael Otho 2-for-2 and an RBI, Matt Gilly 2-for-3 and three RBIs, Chad Berry 1-for-2 and Bucky Smith two RBIs.

Greenwood will travel to Big Lake for its district game on Tuesday.

Midland Christian wins title

The Midland Christian boys baseball team won the TAPPS District 1 title Saturday, defeating Dallas Gospel Lighthouse 15-14 in Midland.

Midland Christian, 14-5 overall and 3-1 in district play, scored a run in the bottom of the seventh to win the game as Carey Patteson scored on a Gospel Lighthouse balk.

Midland Christian, who didn't have Colby Lee who broke his leg Friday, was led by Alex Autry with 3-for-4 and 3 RBIs. Jeff Sigler, who went 4-for-5 with an important seventh inning double. Patteson's 2-for-4 performance and Allan Autry, who went 2-for-5 with two doubles and three RBIs to add to his .580 batting average.

Patteson pitched 4 1/3 innings and Alex Autry was the winning pitcher.

Midland Christian will play a double header against Coahoma on Tuesday at 4 p.m.

Midland Christian girls just miss

The Midland Christian softball team dropped a close one, losing to Coahoma 11-10 in nine innings Saturday at the Bill Williams Softball Complex in a non-conference game.

Midland Christian, 6-6 overall, had a nice pitching performance by April Sheppard who had 11 strikeouts.

Sheppard was also productive at the plate batting 2-for-4 with four RBIs. Amanda Miller went 4-for-5 with two doubles for the Lady Mustangs.

Midland Christian, 3-0 in TAPPS 1A play, will qualify for the playoffs with regionals starting up May 1-May 5.

MHS JV drops close one

The Midland High junior varsity baseball team lost to Abilene Cooper 11-10 Saturday at Zachery Field.

MHS' Clyde Tedrick took the loss, pitching one inning allowing two hits and one run. Tedrick relieved Russell Dunlavy, who went five innings, striking out six.

MHS, 7-7 and 5-2 in district, had multiple hit games by Lyle Hodam (2) and Mike Carrasco (2) and a double by Hector Morales. Hodam, Carrasco, Morales, Dunlavy and Eric Clark drove in RBIs for the Bulldogs, who will play Odessa Permian Monday.

Cole, Griffin lead MCC event

Steve Cole and David Griffin teamed up with the score of Fred Couples at The Masters to lead the "A" Flight of the Midland Masters 95.

Cole and Griffin shot a low-ball score of 67 to combine with Couples' 67 in Augusta for a 134. Barry Levin and Charles Ray shot a 67 to go with Greg Norman's 68 to take second. Jay Jerman and Courtney Cowden shot a 74 to go with Steve Elkington's 67 for a combined 141.

In the "B" flight, Buddy Gieb and Frank McCabe had a 68 while their partner via the draw Ben Crenshaw shot a 69 for a 137. That score ties them with Don Bishop and Bill St. Clair who shot a 70 to go with Couples' 67.

The tourney will go on today with the scramble format for the players in Midland. The Augusta portion of the tournament will be televised.

BULLDOGS: Coleman picks up win

the challenge presented them.

"This surprises me," said MHS coach Lew Kennedy. "Even though we lost to Lee last Wednesday, I think our kids used that game as a springboard to this one. We lost to Lee bad the first time and then we showed we could play with the best in the league. I was extremely proud of the way our kids have responded because we had our backs to the wall, and this does keep us in the race for the playoffs.

"Cooper lost to Abilene High (Thursday) and I think that hurt them emotionally. Still, I was worried that they would come back at us hard. I was wondering if they could be upset two times in a row. It was a real worry. But I never expected anything like this. We were preparing for a close game all week."

Coleman gave up Cooper's only run in the top of the third, but the Bulldogs answered with three more runs in the bottom of the inning for a 7-1 lead. It was over then, but MHS added eight runs on five hits and four Cooper errors in the fourth.

In addition to Villareal's three RBIs, Jeff Perez drove in three runs with a sacrifice bunt and a two-run single. Jeremy Kimble drove in two runs with two hits, including a double. Keith "Kodiak" Lant also delivered a stinging run scoring double in the game.

Midland High travels to Odessa Permian Tuesday in a key outing, one that could vault the Bulldogs right into the thick of the playoff run. Permian is 5-2 and in sole possession of second place, thanks to Midland High's shock wave Saturday.

LEE: Lady Rebels play solid defense

(From 1C)

"It feels great," senior outfielder Christian Lance said. "We got so pumped up for this game. Team work was what it was and everybody contributed."

Lee, 24-0 for the season and 12-0 in district play, got an indication right off the bat that it would be tough for the Lady Cougars to score when sophomore left fielder Crystal Smith ran down and caught a ball headed for the left-center field gap. It was the start of what would be solid defense play which proved to be the key.

"I have extreme confidence in our defense," senior catcher Amee Pullen said. "We always have a good effort. Whenever we got the lead, we kept it going."

The defense remained strong, but for the first three innings, Cooper's was equally as strong. It wasn't until the fourth inning that the Lady Rebels were able make holes in the Cooper defense and in their pitcher Hallie Woods, 12-2 and 9-2.

In the bottom of the fourth, Cooper's defense showed the pressure of the big game, committing four errors and allowing two runs. With one out, Lee's April Rice hit a fly ball that fell out of the glove of Cooper shortstop Jill Malone. Following a second out, Malone would again be picked on as Lance hit a rocket to the Lady Cougar, who allowed the ball to go through her legs and into center field. Cooper center fielder Melissa Parker made matters worse throwing the ball over third base, putting runners on second and third.

Error No. 4 came on Emily Hayes' ground ball to second that Cooper's Bridget Varner just could not make the throw to first while Rice and Lance scored.

Lee would add another run in the bottom of the fifth when designated hitter Marci Villa singled and then moved to second on a sacrifice. After April Rice's double, which put runners on second and third. Lee's Susanna Reed drove in the third run of the game on with a ground ball to second. It would be all that Lee would need.

Three runs is the most allowed by Lee's senior pitcher Hayes this season. It would be apparent that the left hander would not create a season high in this game. Hayes, 15-0 for the season, threw 90 pitches (65 strikes and 25 balls), striking out seven, but most importantly, put the ball in play to let her defense make the plays. Having faced Cooper (in the 2-1 victory in Abilene) once this season, gave the Hayes and Pullen an advantage this go around.

"We knew more of what to call," Pullen said. "When you play them (Abilene Cooper) before, you know what they will swing at and what they won't."

The loss was the second to the Lady Rebels and second of the season for the 13-2 and 9-2 Lady Cougars. The loss also taints what was a strong effort for Woods, whose performance was hurt by a defense that proved to be inferior on this day. Even with the bottom of the fourth when she threw 28 pitches, Woods only needed 79 pitches (56 strikes and 23 balls). It was a win that not only means so much for the championship, but also because Lee defeated a tough Cooper team.

"They (Cooper) are dedicated and play so hard," Gotcher said. They are tough to beat and never say die."

Lee will play San Angelo Lake View on Tuesday for its first warm up game for the state playoffs. The Lady Rebels will not make their playoff debut for two weeks (the week of May 24th).

Greene upsets Lewis at Texas Relays

AUSTIN (AP) — Unheralded Maurice Greene upset Carl Lewis in the 100-meter dash on Saturday to highlight the final day of the 68th Texas Relays.

Lewis and his Santa Monica (Calif.) Track Club won the 400-meter relay, as expected, but not spectacularly.

Lewis, who has won eight Olympic gold medals, couldn't overcome a poor start and finished third behind Greene and Raymond Stewart of Prime Time Sports, a two-time NCAA champion while at Texas Christian.

Greene's winning time was a wind-aided 9.88 seconds.

"I tried to treat this race like it was any other. But any time you run against Carl Lewis, it is a pleasure," said Greene, who finished fourth in the 60-meter dash in the 1995 World Championships at Barcelona, Spain.

"I think everybody thought Carl would win the race, but I knew I was just as capable."

Greene, 20, is a native of Kansas City, Kan., and three-time Kansas state champion in the 100-meter dash. He was voted the outstanding male athlete in the relays.

Lewis said running the anchor leg for Santa Monica in the 400 relay slowed him later in the 100.

"After the relay, I was cramping. So in the (100-meter) race I came out easy. Other than that, it felt good," Lewis said. "I'm as fast as ever. You can see that, but I didn't want to cramp up in the race."

The race also marked the second straight year in which a wind-aided performance led to a record or near-record time.

■ Texas Relays

Last year, Leroy Burrell ran a wind-aided 9.85, which would have broken Lewis' world record of 9.86. Burrell set the current record of 9.85 later in 1994 in Switzerland.

Santa Monica easily won the 400-meter relay, but a bad handoff between Mike Marsh and Burrell prevented them from besting their meet record of 37.89, set last year. Their time of 38.43 was still among the best ever at the relays.

"We're not really happy where the team is right now," Burrell said. "We haven't had time to practice like we should have. That handoff was a result of our lack of practice time."

In other highlights, Round Rock High's Jessica Koch was named outstanding female athlete of the relays after winning her second distance win of the meet Saturday.

The LSU women's team was named outstanding team of the meet for its two relay wins.

'Amigo' tries to return to Broncos

The Associated Press

DENVER — Two years after saying adios to Denver, former Broncos wide receiver Vance Johnson may be catching passes from quarterback John Elway in 1995.

Johnson, a member of Denver's self-promoting "Three Amigos" receiving corps from 1985 to 1993, ran a 4.41-second 40-yard dash during a workout Friday at Broncos headquarters.

By comparison, highly touted Colorado receiver Michael Westbrook ran a 4.49 on artificial turf in February. Johnson's time came on a slower natural grass surface.

"Not bad for an old man," the 32-year-old Johnson said after the second of two 40-yard sprints. His other time was 4.43 seconds.

Denver coach Mike Shanahan was in San Francisco and was unavailable for comment, but Johnson said he would like to return to Denver, where he caught 403 passes — second in team history.

"Some players are made for certain teams and I was made to be a Bronco," Johnson said. "If I have to play somewhere else, I will. But Colorado's my life and my home. And I know John Elway. I know what he needs."

Elway and the Broncos need a fourth wide receiver. In addition to Johnson, they have interviewed Minnesota receiver Anthony Carter and Indianapolis wideout Odessa Turner.

49ers moves

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Defensive end Shane Collins was acquired by the San Francisco 49ers in a trade Friday with the Washington Redskins, who received an undisclosed 1996 draft pick in return.

Collins, a second-round pick out Arizona State in 1992, appeared in seven games for the Redskins last season, all in a reserve role, making 19 tackles.

He had 55 tackles in his first two seasons with the club, 29 of them solo stops. He also registered a sack and a fumble recovery.

Steelers moves

PITTSBURGH — Los Angeles Rams offensive guard Tom Newberry likes playing in the cold. And now he's going to get a chance.

The Pittsburgh Steelers signed Newberry to a 3-year contract. He'll replace Pro Bowl guard Duval Love.

Newberry, 32, has been with the Rams for nine seasons. Last season, he started 14 of the 15 games he played. He played both center and guard for the Rams and made the Pro Bowl in 1988 and 1989.

Love, a former teammate of Newberry's with the Rams, signed with Arizona as a free agent after three years with the Steelers. Love reached terms with Arizona after his agent, Ralph Cindrich, said the Steelers were late in making their final offer.

The Steelers have signed two unrestricted free agents, Newberry and punter Rohn Stark of Indianapolis, and lost four: tight end Eric Green (Dolphins), defensive end Gerald Williams (Panthers), safety Gary Jones (Jets) and Love.

Angels drop one-run decision, 2-1

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Moments after the Angels failed to get the runner at first on a double-play attempt, San Antonio's Areste Marrero drove in the deciding run in the Missions' 2-1 win here Saturday. It was the series' second straight one-run game and left Midland with a 1-2 record. San Antonio is now 2-1 and tied for first place in the Texas League Western Division.

The Angels thought they had James Martin out at first in the bottom of the eighth inning on a 6-4-3 double play try. But Martin was called safe. Angel manager Mario Mendoza protested the call to no avail.

The play set up Marerro's game-winner, giving him the decisive hit in both Mission wins over Midland this season. The Mission designated hitter went 2-for-4 for two RBIs, giving him seven RBIs in the three-game season.

Angel starter Willard Brown took the loss in his first start. He went 7 2/3 innings and gave up two runs but went to 0-1.

The Angels opened the scoring by getting on the board in the first inning, which they have done in all three games this year. George Arias walked and scored when Todd Greene's line drive was mishandled by right fielder Martin.

But San Antonio tied the game at 1-1 in the fourth when Eddie Rios singled and was driven in by Marerro. Mike Metcalf and Rios got back-to-back singles in the eighth for the Missions before Martin's turn at bat.

Mission Keith Troutman got the win in relief of starter Jose Prado. Daniel Camacho earned his second save as three San Antonio pitchers combined to hold Midland to five hits. Angel leadoff hitter Jovino Carvajal was the only Midland player to get more than one hit, going 2-for-4.

The teams play again tonight at 6 p.m. when Midland's Bryan Harris faces San Antonio's Gary Rath.

Bears breakaway from Owls in slugfest, 21-18

WACO — Ben Bronson and Lance Lacy scored in the fourth inning to help the Baylor Bears take the opener of a doubleheader against Rice, 21-18, on Saturday.

Rice (7-6) broke fast from the opening pitch, scoring six runs in the first on homers by Mark Quinn and two others.

Baylor (5-4) responded uncertainly, stranding three runners in a scoreless first. But the Bears exploded for 19 runs in the second and third.

Baylor's Steve Martinez had three runs in the second and third periods, with the first after he doubled and Lacy singled, then advancing to second on an error.

In the fourth, Lacy and Bronson singled and Marty Crawford reached on an error.

Rice had an eight-run inning in the fourth, with RBI singles by P. Hallmark and Quinn.

Aaron Lineweaver (3-5) was credited with the victory.

Quinn (3-2) took the loss.

Texas 13-6, Texas Christian 2-2

AUSTIN — Shea Morenz went 6-for-8 at the plate, scoring two runs and batting in four, as Texas swept a doubleheader from Texas Christian.

Morenz had three doubles on the day while going 3-for-4 in each game for Texas (35-10, 8-6 Southwest Conference).

In the opener, Texas scored in every inning, including a five-run sixth, the winner was Jake O'Dell (8-2). For TCU, the loser was David Meyer (0-2).

In the nightcap, Texas broke a 1-1 tie when Chris Edelstein, Danny Peoples, Morenz and Steve Randolph scored in the third. Mark Senterfitt took the win (7-2) for the Longhorns, while Flint Wallace took the loss (5-2) for the Horned Frogs.

Erik Brown was the offensive leader for TCU (21-16, 8-5), going 3-for-8 with a double and one RBI.

Signing frenzy for free agents continues

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

Orel Hershiser, Bob Tewksbury and Andre Dawson switched leagues and Jim Abbott, Dave Stewart and Larry Walker shifted teams Saturday in baseball's latest big changeover.

Kevin Brown, John Burkett, Bobby Witt and Bill Swift also found new homes. A day after there were nearly 50 deals, there were more than 20 moves as clubs hurried to reshape rosters by opening day April 25.

Tewksbury

The frenzy to sign free agents came the same week Marquis Grissom, David Cone, John Wetteland and Ken Hill were traded. There also was one trade in this mini-winter meeting: Months after it was first rumored, Boston sent third baseman Scott Cooper and pitcher Cory Bailey to St. Louis for outfielder Mark Whiten and pitcher Rheal Cormier.

The premium has been on pitching, and the supply of top-name talent may soon start dwindling. But hitters Brett Butler, Mickey Tettleton and Benito Santiago are among those players still available.

Hershiser, a lifelong member of the Los Angeles Dodgers, signed with Cleveland. Abbott went to the Chicago White Sox, Stewart went back to Oakland, Tewksbury signed with Texas and Brown went to Baltimore.

"I've been on top before, and I want to get there again," said Hershiser, who got a one-year contract worth about $1.5 million.

"If I'm not the MVP of the World Series, I want to be there to shake the MVP's hand," he said. "The Cleveland Indians that win the World Series are going to be a remembered team. I want to be one of those 25 guys."

The Colorado Rockies and Florida Marlins, the last two expansion teams, were the big spenders.

The Rockies signed Walker to a four-year, $22 million contract and got Swift for a three-year deal worth $13.1 million.

Walker, 28, hit .322 with 19 home runs and 86 RBIs in the strike-shortened season for Montreal. He gives the Rockies left-handed power and strong defense in the outfield.

Swift, 33, was 39-19 with a 2.70 ERA in the last three years with San Francisco.

"Of all the free agents, these are the two we felt could improve our ballclub the most," Rockies general manager Bob Gebhard said.

The Marlins bolstered their young staff by signing Burkett and Witt, then boosted their bench by adding Dawson.

Burkett, 30, won 22 games for the Giants in 1993. He was traded to Texas last December for two minor leaguers, but the Rangers did not sign him. He got a two-year deal worth $6.9 million from the Marlins.

Witt, 30, led the Oakland staff with five complete games and three shutouts last season.

Dawson, 40, had 16 homers and 48 RBIs for Boston last season despite knee problems. A native of Miami, Dawson has 428 lifetime homers and wanted to finish his career at home.

Stewart, who won World Series rings with Oakland, Toronto and Los Angeles, returned to the Athletics with a one-year, $1 million contract. He made $4.25 million last year with Toronto.

Stewart, 38, originally said last season would be his final year, but decided to return after the strike.

Firestone
The Legend Returns

This year, the thunder of IndyCar™ engines mark the return of an American classic... Firestone. With 48 wins at the Indy 500® this racing legend holds a record unmatched by any other tire manufacturer. The return to IndyCar racing serves notice to drivers everywhere that Firestone is strengthening its position as a pre-eminent tire company.

IndyCar racing requires tires that can perform at speeds over 240 MPH on super ovals and tires that can maneuver at speeds in excess of 180 MPH on the same city streets you drive. This variety of track configurations and surfaces places different surface demands and stresses on tires. The research and development that has gone into Firestone's new IndyCar race tires has taken Firestone to the leading edge of tire design.

The same fierce competitive spirit that brings Firestone back to IndyCar racing also brings you the full line-up of Firestone Firehawk street performance tires for your car. We've poured everything we've learned into our newest Firehawk designs. The result is a line of performance tires that meets the exacting demands of performance tire customers everywhere. And each Firehawk is backed by the Firestone Gold Pledge Warranty--our ultimate statement of quality assurance.

See the power of Firestone IndyCar race tire technology at this year's Indy 500! And see us today to find out how much it can mean to your car. Firestone. The legend is back and better than ever.

TALL CITY: Harriers warm up for district

(From 1C)

cialist Kendra Albus. She came into the meet with the best time in the district at 2:27 but fell short on the final 100 meters after leading the entire race to finish third with a time of 2:33 "Poor thing, we can't figure out what is wrong," said Martin. "It's something above her hip and evidently her hip started hurting her on the final stretch and she couldn't kick."

But if the trainers worked overtime this week and get those ailing bodies healthy, there should be some outstanding performances next week when it counts.

Zachery, a sophomore who has been troubled with a lower back problem before, reaggrevated it on her first attempt in the long jump. She spent the rest of the morning in the training room but was healthy enough to anchor the sprint relay that was way out in front before she got the baton as they cruised to the win in a time of 48.47 — about two seconds better than second-place Odessa High.

"Half the team is hurt," said Zachery. "It didn't hurt the first 50 yards but when I got to the 40-yard line I felt it pull. This is the worst it's ever felt. I think I have a curse on me. I don't know that I'm going to do next week."

MHS' two relay wins along with a couple of strong individual performances by Shelly Ray, who won the 100, and Talitha Belcher, who was second in the 200, wasn't enough to catch a deep Odessa Permian squad. The Lady Panthers won the meet with a total of 180 points to 129 for San Angelo Central and 108 for MHS. Odessa High was fourth with 87 while Lee was fifth with 72.

Despite two terrible handoffs on the second and third exchanges, the Lady Bulldogs also ran away with the 800 relay in a time of 1:46.48. Belcher, who anchored the relay, said she felt strong in the final 200 meters.

"It felt good to me running the last leg," said Belcher. "We're worried about the handoffs but we feel like we can get them down by the time district is here."

The Rebels matched the Lady Bulldogs performance in the team standings with a 100-point third place finish led by two gold medals by Roderick Mayfield in the 110 high hurdles and the 300 intermediate hurdles and a win by Issac Smith in the 400. As expected, San Angelo Central totaled 160 to easily win the team race despite a win by Odessa High in the 1,600 relay. The Bronchos, who finished with 148 points, pulled within 12 points of the Bobcats with that final performance but San Angelo's depth was the recipe for success. Amarillo High was fourth with 85 1/2 while MHS was fifth with 79 1/2.

Smith, who anchored the mile relay and as a result strained a hamstring, said his adrenalin gave him the boost he needed to take the early lead in the 400 and hang on for the gold in a time of 50.77 ahead of MHS' Victor Leggett, who finished in 51.37. Lee's Antwan Alexander was third in 51.63.

"I just felt a little nervous (before the race) which I know is good," Smith said. "It gave me some adrenalin and I felt real strong ending up."

The MHS boys had the second-ranked sprint relay in the league behind San Angelo coming into the meet and despite beating them on Saturday still sits there because the Bobcats have an earlier performance of 41.44. But Coats said the outcome could not have been different because of his teammates' performances.

"Everyone else ran such a good leg, there was no way we were going to lose," said Coats. "I just kicked into high gear on my leg. That is the best time we've run all year."

The Lady Rebels were led by three underclassmen, who Martin hopes will be a building block for his program. Sophomore Kim Edwards outdistanced Permian's Mercedes Alvarado in the 100 hurdles in a time of 16.74 — more than two tenths of a second better than the Lady Panther. Sophomore Toya Strambler also brought in a gold medal in the 400 in a time of 1:01.49. Junior Tina Valdez finally broke out in the high jump with a winning leap of 5 feet, 2 inches.

"She's been jumping that in practice but she hasn't been able to clear it in a meet," said Martin of Valdez' performance. "They're young but they've been working really hard. And we've got a good class over at Lee Freshman that ought to help us out a bunch next year."

Results Saturday from the Tall City Invitational track and field meet at Memorial Stadium:

Plano wins fourth state title, 3-0

The Associated Press

PFLUGERVILLE — Plano has won the high school boys' soccer champion of Texas, shutting out Katy Mayde Creek 3-0 in the University Interscholastic League finals Saturday.

The Wildcats got single goals from Yi Cheng, Mark Doughty and Zack Oldham at a wind-swept Kuempel Stadium.

It was Plano's fourth state boys' soccer title, tops in the state. The Wildcats (23-2-2) won three straight titles in 1991-93, the only other years it has advanced to the state tournament.

Cheng scored first with 28:28 left in the first half on a kick past Rams goaltender Scott Bucic and defender Jed Hildebrand.

Doughty scored the second goal when Bucic bobbled his kick into his own net with 35:24 left in the second half.

Plano's Oldham added the final goal with 1:03 left.

Mayde Creek (21-5) had reached the final in its first state UIL tournament appearance.

Humble Kingwood 1, Arlington Martin 0

Julie Pinkerton's breakaway goal gave Humble Kingwood a 1-0 victory Saturday over Arlington Martin, wrapping up the Mustangs' undefeated season with their first girls state soccer title.

■ UIL Soccer

The Mustangs (29-0-0), who lost the title in their three previous trips to the University Interscholastic League championships, became the first team to go undefeated and untied since Plano in 1986.

Pinkerton, a junior forward, scored with 18 minutes, 33 seconds. On the play, she beat Martin goalkeeper Leslie Herd, who had nine saves.

Martin (22-4-1) chose to have the estimated 25 mph wind at its back for the first half, but the Warriors failed to take advantage on offense. The 1992 champions suffered their second straight finals defeat.

The Mustangs were sluggish in the game's first 10 minutes, barely getting the ball past midfield, but came around to outshoot Martin 9-3 before gaining the wind advantage in the second half.

Santana keeps WBC belt after Norris' late hit

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — For the second straight fight, Luis Santana was taken from the ring on a stretcher. And for the second straight time, he was the winner on a bizarre disqualification.

Santana retained his WBC super welterweight title Saturday night when Terry Norris hit him well after the bell ending the third round and he stayed down in the corner.

It was a strange ending to a fight that was supposed to be Norris' redemption for the fight he lost to Santana by disqualification Nov. 12 in Mexico. Norris had lost that fight when he hit Santana on the back of the head during the fifth round and Santana stayed down. The blow was ruled illegal and Santana declared the winner.

The ending to the rematch was even more spectacular — and the foul even more flagrant.

"I didn't know the round was over," Norris protested. "The referee told me to go ahead. I was ready and hit him with a good shot. I didn't hear the bell. I thought they had stopped the fight."

Nevada boxing officials, though, said the punch was deliberate.

"It was an intentional foul," said Marc Ratner, executive director of the Nevada State Athletic Commission. "The other man clearly could not continue; therefore, Santana is the winner by disqualification. It was clearly an intentional foul, no doubt about it."

Santana collapsed after being hit and was on his back on the canvas for about five minutes as ringside physician Dr. Flip Homansky examined him and gave him oxygen. He was taken from the ring on a stretcher to Valley Hospital.

"He responded to me very well when he was down," Homansky said. "I think he's going to be OK."

Norris had lost his WBC title to Santana in their first fight in Mexico, a bout he dominated until he hit Santana behind the head in the fifth round and the challenger from the Dominican Republic went down and stayed down.

"I think Norris should be banned for life from boxing," said Santana's manager, Grant Elvis Phillips.

The former two-time champion was also dominating in the rematch and had knocked Santana down twice in the first three rounds.

The fighters were in a neutral corner as the bell sounded to end the round. Both stood there without going back to their corners and the referee turned to Santana to deliver a warning about low blows.

At that point, Norris suddenly lashed out with a right hand that caught Santana fully on the head and he went down.

Norris, 38-6, had been a 12-1 favorite in the fight, the first of five title fights on a card at Caesars Palace topped by Oliver McCall's first WBC heavyweight title defense against former champion Larry Holmes.

It was the third time Norris had lost by disqualification in a fight.

Santana, 153, improved to 40-15-2 and earned $400,000 to $150,000 for Norris.

Santana was admitted to the hospital overnight for precautionary reasons.

■ Boxing Roundup

Tucker—Seldon

LAS VEGAS — About four years after he thought about giving up boxing, Bruce Seldon became the WBA heavyweight champion when his battle with Tony Tucker was stopped after seven rounds.

Seldon pounded Tucker's left eye closed and ringside physician Dr. Flip Homanski also thought Tucker's nose was broken. After going to Tucker's corner at the end of the seventh round, Homanski advised referee Mills Lane to stop the fight, angering Tucker's corner.

"He was just getting his second wind," complained George Benton, Tucker's trainer. "He wasn't taking a beating. The fight was as competitive as hell."

The scheduled 12-round bout for the vacant WBA title outdoors at Caesars Palace was one of five title fights on the card. In another one, Oliver McCall was to defend to WBC heavyweight championship against 45-year-old Larry Holmes.

Seldon's big punch was his jab to the head. He often missed with his right to the head but did land that hand effectively to the body.

Although his eye began to close early, Tucker made things close throughout. He shook Seldon with a right hand early in the second round and outpunched him in the most action-packed round of the fight.

Tucker, who weighed 243, seven pounds more than Seldon, also hurt Seldon in the third and sixth rounds with rights to the head.

Chavez-Parisi

LAS VEGAS — Julio Cesar Chavez moved closer to his goal of 100 fights by beating a boxer who barely put up a fight.

Chavez chased Italy's Giovanni Parisi for 12 rounds, winning a lopsided decision to retain his WBC super lightweight title over a challenger who seemed more interested in surviving than winning.

It was the 96th fight for Chavez in a pro career that stretches back 15 years, but Parisi made sure it wouldn't be the most memorable.

Parisi waited until the 11th round to try and mix it up with the Mexican champion, trading a flurry after raising his arms to mock Chavez. By then, however, Parisi would have to have knocked out Chavez to win the bout.

Phil Mickelson pitches out of a bunker on the 16th hole during the Masters on Saturday. He is one shot out of first heading into today's final round.

MASTERS: Couples lurks near top

(From 1C)

"And the wind is just enough to make you think down in the corner," he said of Amen Corner. "And that's all you need."

Player after player battled with the Augusta National course, making birdies here and then giving them back there with bogeys.

Haas, who started the day at 9-under, double bogeyed No. 3 when he called a one-stroke penalty on himself because his ball moved on the green and bogeyed Nos. 4 and 6, but balanced it with five birdies on the day.

Huston teed off at 8-under and immediately slipped to 5-under with a four-putt triple bogey on the first hole but bounced back with a 32 on the back nine to get back to 8-under.

Norman, who got back into the hunt with a 68, expects more of the same today.

"It's going to be a very back-and-forth battle," Norman said. "I think it is going to be one of the great battles in the history of the championship because of how many people are in it."

The course, while continuing to dry, was still soft from Thursday's rain and the greens were still holding approach shots. As a result, the assault on par continued. The field averaged under par at 71.34 in Saturday's round.

Elkington and Couples both shot 67 and Mickelson had a 69 after starting the day with two bogeys.

Norman got back in it by continuing his domination of the par-5 holes. He has played the par-5s in 12 under, making 10 birdies and an eagle.

"I'm hitting irons at all of those holes," Norman said.

Strange, who said he lost his desire for the game a bit after his second consecutive U.S. Open championship in 1989, seems to have that fire back.

'It's going to be a very back-and-forth battle... I think it is going to be one of the great battles in the history of the championship because of how many people are in it.'

— Greg Norman.

"I ain't going to wait for it," he said. "I hope I can grab it tomorrow. I want to win."

He finished off his brilliant round in which he birdied the first three holes and Nos. 13 through 16, with a 12-foot putt to save par on No. 18.

Today's pin positions will be difficult, as usual, and the greens should be even faster.

"You've just got to go out there and keep yourself as patient and even-keeled as you can," Norman said about the final round.

As always, the Masters will be decided on the back nine.

"To me, the back side tomorrow is very exciting," Strange said. "Hell, I like watching it."

Astrodome celebrates 30 years of sports history

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The late Judge Roy Hofheinz likely would have approved of Drayton McLane as the current steward of the Astrodome, which celebrates its 30th birthday today.

Hofheinz and Harris County Commissioners fired shots from Colt .45 pistols into the ground in 1962 in a bizarre groundbreaking ceremony that was fitting for what was to become the futuristic Astrodome.

Very little has been ordinary about the first-of-its kind facility since that ceremony.

McLane, the current Astros owner and Astrodome leaseholder through 2023, doesn't have the Judge's flamboyance, but he has the passion to take what Hofheinz started into the 21st century.

"It's like taking a beautiful home and modernizing it from time to time just like they've done with the White House," McLane said. "It still looks like the White House but it's just been modernized and brought up to date. That's what we need to do on a continual basis for the Astrodome."

Hofheinz, a former Houston mayor, lawyer, promoter, put all of his skills into the building of the Astrodome.

Some wanted to call the place the Harris County Domed Stadium. Too drab for Hofheinz, who called it the Astrodome, the eighth wonder of the world. Other stadiums had luxury boxes. Hofheinz demanded sky boxes.

"It has tradition," McLane said, gazing up from home plate at the giant rafters. "The first of anything has tradition, if we preserve it.

"The name Astrodome is one of the best brand names in the world. You can go anywhere in the world and they'll know it. I was in Europe 10 days ago. In Portugal, I mentioned to several people about the Astrodome and they knew exactly what I meant."

Hofheinz the showman made the Astrodome the home of such diverse events as bloodless bull fights, midget auto races and the world's largest indoor rodeo.

An argument could be made that the March Madness of the NCAA basketball playoffs started Jan. 28, 1968 with the first nationally televised college basketball game between the University of Houston, with Elvin Hayes, and UCLA, with Lew Alcindor.

The Cougars won 71-69 before a then-record crowd of 52,693.

On Sept. 20, 1973 Billy Jean King and Bobby Riggs staged their Battle of the Sexes tennis match in the Astrodome. It drew 30,472 and King won 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

Billy Graham's sermons, an Elvin Presley concert have echoed through the Astrodome, and also, conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses and the roar of motorcycles at motocross events and tractor pulls.

The 1992 Republican Convention staged it's show in the Astrodome.

It's been home for the Astros, NFL Houston Oilers and University of Houston football team.

It's hosted two major league baseball All-Star games, one NBA All-Star game, one NCAA Final Four and three world heavyweight championship fights.

It holds many personal memories for those who have performed there.

Larry Dierker, once an all-star pitcher for the Astros, has spent all but two of his years in baseball either as an Astros player or broadcaster. Dierker's no-hitter in the Astrodome on July 9, 1976 was a highlight of his career.

His first visit to the Astrodome also remains a big memory.

"It was awesome," Dierker recalled. "It was sort of like going into that new park at Arlington (The Ball Park at Arlington) but even more so because now there are some other really nice new parks. There was nothing like the Astrodome."

One of the sad moments in Astrodome history was the disposal of the huge scoreboard, 474-feet long and four-stories tall.

Opponents cringed anytime an Astros player hit a home run. The giant screen erupted in a 40-second explosion that featured a snorting steer, a galloping cowboy on horseback and a fireworks display.

It had to yield to progress in 1987 when officials tore it down to make space for a 10,000-seat expansion.

"That was a sad day for me," Dierker said. "All these multi-use stadiums are pretty much the same. The roof made the Dome stand out but the thing that really stood it apart was that scoreboard."

The Texas-sized scoreboard was replaced by two DiamondVision screens (26 1/2 by 37 1/2) two auxiliary matrix boards and a game-in-progress board.

No snorting steer, no cowboy, no fireworks.

"Nobody's ever come close to matching something like that," said Paul Darst, director of video production and scoreboard operations. "And I don't think anyone every will. There will never be anything like that again."

Gordon downplays 'King' title, goes for First Union flag

The Associated Press

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — While his success has elicited the inescapable comparisons, Jeff Gordon wants no part of being dubbed the next king of NASCAR.

The problem is, he's making it hard to ignore the idea that he'll succeed Richard Petty as legend in the sport.

At 23 and in his third full season, he's won five Winston Cup races, including the inaugural running of the Brickyard 400 at Indianapolis Motor Speedway last August. Gordon also won NASCAR's longest event, the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte, last May.

This season, Gordon has three victories and is fourth in the Winston Cup driver standings. He'll be going for his fourth checkered flag and a higher spot in the championship race in today's First Union 400 at North Wilkesboro Speedway, starting from the pole for the fourth time in 1995. If he's trying to avoid the title of hero, Gordon is doing a poor job of dodging it.

"I don't think about, and when people say it to me, I guess I don't listen to it because it doesn't matter who they compare me to," Gordon says. "I've still got to go out and do my job."

If anything, Gordon wouldn't mind emulating people like Rick Mears, more because he's been described as a nice man off the track as well as a successful competitor. He acknowledges Dale Earnhardt's seven Winston Cup titles as a possible goal, but Gordon also faces reality.

"I could be falling on my face in 10 races. I don't know," Gordon says. "Right now, we're just going to take advantage of it."

Gordon also is enjoying the edge of driving a Chevrolet, which right now is the hottest car in Winston Cup racing. The new Monte Carlos are unbeaten in six races, and have won five of seven poles.

He is the only driver to lead at least one lap in the previous six races, and of 2,213 possible laps raced, Gordon has been out front for 1,002 of them. That's more than twice a many as any other driver.

One sure challenger to Gordon's early supremacy is Earnhardt. He starts fifth Sunday on a track where he's been very successful.

Earnhardt has 32 starts at the .625-mile track, and has been among the top 10 finishers in 28 of those races.

"I enjoy to go out there and do the best that I can," he says. "Comparing me to anybody else, whether it be a race car driver or another athlete, I don't do it. I don't compare myself.

"But when other people do, I think it's a great thing to hear and a great thing for people to say," he says. "But, it's tough to live up to some of those things, too, if you put too much emphasis on them."

Gordon compares his spot to that of Michael Jordan. He's just one component of a larger group.

"I'm a big basketball fan. When I see those guys do what they do, that's all them," he says. "Their team helps them win the game, but they're the ones doing the things that Michael does.

Argentine Grand Prix

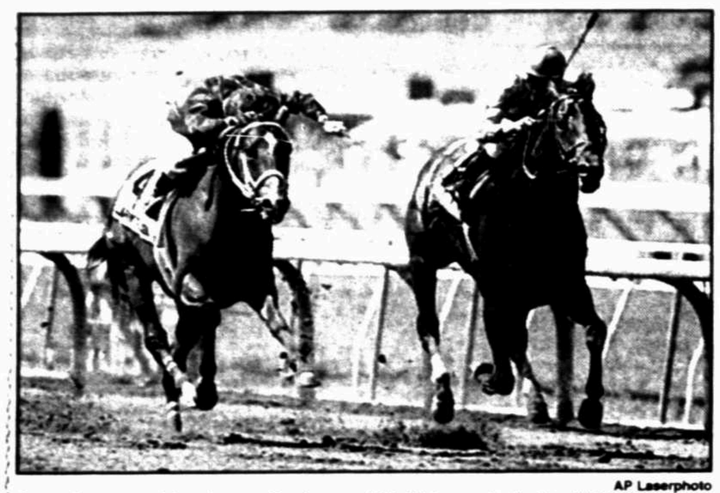

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Scotsman David Coulthard held onto the pole for the Argentine Grand Prix, beating Williams-Renault teammate Damon Hill by almost a second Saturday in the final day of time trials.

Defying heavy rain and low visibility, Coulthard, the overnight leader, recorded the fastest time of 1 minute, 53.241 seconds, averaging 84.180 mph in his last lap around the slippery 2.647-mile circuit.

Britain's Hill went from fourth to second on the grid. Defending Formula One champion Michael Schumacher of Germany, who struggled to handle the circuit Friday in his Benetton-Renault, sprinted into third place.

Heavy rain soaked the course just 20 minutes before the trials began, and dashed drivers' hopes for faster speeds after Friday's disappointing times in similar conditions.

"I'm pretty happy to have improved on my position," Hill said. "The qualification session was very exciting, and David did a good job to get his first pole position. It's a good feeling."

Larry the Legend wins Kentucky Derby prep

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Larry The Legend might yet live up to his name.

On Saturday, the namesake of a Little League coach caught Afternoon Deelites at the wire and won the $700,000 Santa Anita Derby, the richest of all the Kentucky Derby preps.

What was to have been a duel between two top Kentucky Derby hopefuls, Afternoon Deelites and Timber Country, turned into a giant block party for the locally popular Larry The Legend.

"I think he gave the fans here exactly what they wanted to see," owner-trainer Craig Lewis said. "There's a reasonable chance we'll run in the Kentucky Derby now."

It also was the third straight victory in this race for jockey Gary Stevens, and now we know why he flew all the way back from Hong Kong just to ride Larry The Legend in this race.

Afternoon Deelites, meanwhile, lost for the first time in six career starts, while 2-year-old champion Timber Country, who was fourth, now has lost three in a row since winning the Breeders' Cup Juvenile last Nov. 5 at Churchill Downs.

Larry The Legend broke second and ran near the early pace of Fandarel Dancer through mid-backstretch.

At that point, Afternoon Deelites, who had beaten Timber Country in his previous start in the San Felipe March 19, made a move under Kent Desormeaux. Afternoon Deelites took the lead going into the final turn and settled in along the rail to await the anticipated charge from Timber Country, ridden by Pat Day and trained by D. Wayne Lukas.

Timber Country moved once, then stalled, moved again and was gaining ground at the end. Jumron, an English-bred colt trained by Gary Lewis, staged a better late rally, however, and was third.

The best rally came from Larry The Legend, however, who moved on Afternoon Deelite's outside and won by a head at the wire. Afternoon Deelites held on for second, a neck in front of Jumron, who was another length ahead of Timber Country.

Lake George was fifth, followed by In Character, Louisiana Derby winner Petionville and Fandarel Dancer.

The time for 1 1/8 miles was 1:47 4-5. Larry The Legend returned $13.60, $5 and $4, Afternoon Deelites paid $3.60 and $3.20.

Spurs roll to 14th straight win

■ David Robinson's 36 points ignites San Antonio to club record 14th straight win, 112-98.

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — David Robinson scored 36 points and San Antonio won its team-record 14th straight Saturday night by beating Golden State 112-98.

Sean Elliott and Terry Cummings each had 19 points and Vinny Del Negro added 18 as the Spurs remained the NBA's hottest team despite playing the last 11 games without injured Dennis Rodman. The streak surpassed the previous franchise mark of 13 straight wins from Jan. 22-Feb. 21, 1994.

Clifford Rozier's career-high 26 points led the Warriors, who again played without leading scorer Latrell Sprewell.

San Antonio had a season-high 36 assists, including nine each by Avery Johnson and Doc Rivers. Robinson was the main beneficiary, scoring time after time on layups and dunks. He was 18-of-21 from the field.

Carlos Rogers scored 18 points before leaving late in the fourth quarter with an ankle injury. Chris Mullin had 17 and Donyell Marshall 16 for Golden State.

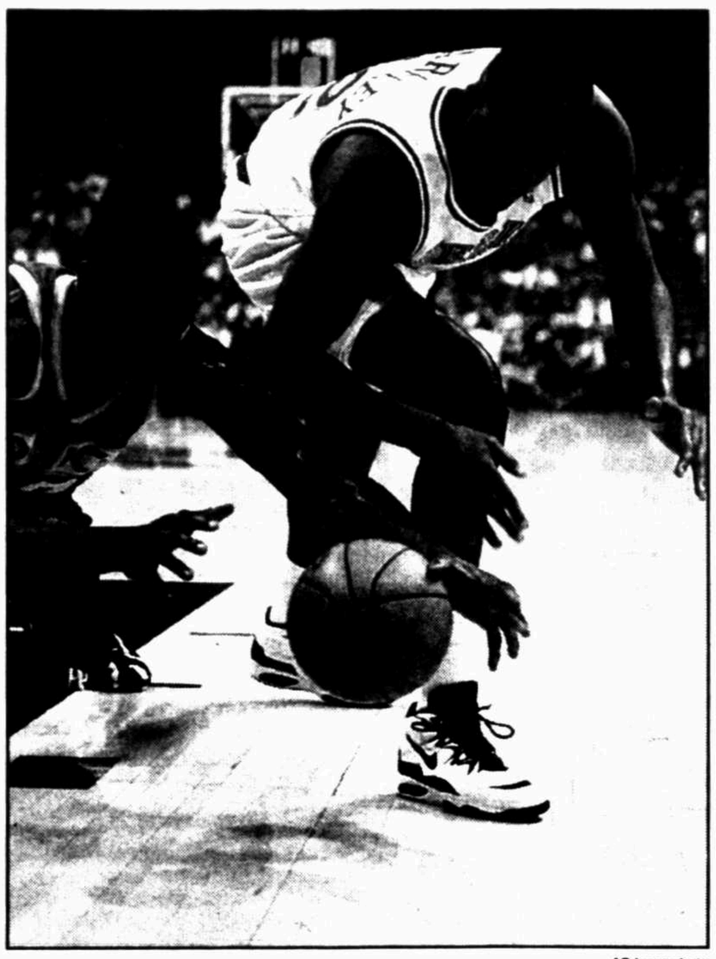

San Antonio took a 94-81 lead when Del Negro opened the fourth quarter with a steal and layup. Chris Mullin then hit a 3-pointer despite being fouled by Del Negro, and added the free throw, pulling the Warriors to 94-85 with 10: 13 left.

But San Antonio quickly ended any threat of a Golden State rally, taking off on a 14-0 run. Robinson ignited the burst with consecutive baskets, a hook shot and a dunk after driving the length of the court.

SuperSonics 125, Mavericks 98

DALLAS — The Seattle SuperSonics are biding their time, waiting for the playoffs to atone for last season's embarrassing first-round loss to the Denver Nuggets.

"We don't want people talking about us right now," guard Gary Payton said after the Sonics routed Dallas for their 14th victory in 16 games. "There was too much hype last year. We like it the way it is right now."

AP Laserphoto

Seattle forward Shawn Kemp dives for a loose ball in front of Dallas' Roy Tarpley as Seattle blew past Dallas in the second half, 125-98.

Payton had 21 points, eight assists and four steals to lead a balanced Seattle attack. Detlef Schrempf scored 22 for the Sonics, while Shawn Kemp had 21 and Sam Perkins 20.

The Sonics broke the game open in the third quarter, outscoring the Mavericks 43-23 while making 17 of 19 shots from the field. Kemp had 17 points and five dunks in the period.

"You've got to take what they give you," said Kemp, who finished 10-for-13 from the field with 12 rebounds.

Perkins said Seattle's defense was the key in the decisive third period.

"Our defense really came alive," Perkins said. "We got our hands on some passes and were able to get out and run. Sometimes things can happen very quickly for us."

The 43 points matched the most ever in the third period by a Dallas opponent, and the loss was the most lopsided for the Mavericks this season.

Lucious Harris scored a career-high 31 points for Dallas, which saw its five-game home winning streak snapped.

The Mavericks got only 12 points from leading scorer Jamal Mashburn and lost coach Dick Motta with 10: 50 left in the third quarter when he got his second technical of the game. The ejection was Motta's fourth of the season.

"We got hit by a buzz saw tonight," Motta said. "They just whipped us. You have to give their defense a lot of credit. They're so darned athletic."

The loss was a setback for Dallas' playoff hopes. The Mavericks are battling Sacramento and Denver for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff spot.

Knicks 113, Pistons 96

NEW YORK — Anthony Bonner scored a season-high 15 points and his scrappy defense helped New York hold Detroit's Grant Hill to just 15.

Patrick Ewing scored 19 points to lead a balanced Knicks attack. Hubert Davis added 18 and John Starks 17.

Allan Houston had 28 points for Detroit, while Joe Dumars scored 18 of his 24 in the third quarter.

The victory enabled the Knicks to open a 1 1/2-game lead over idle Indiana in the race for the second-best record in the Eastern Conference.

76ers 109, Magic 99

PHILADELPHIA — Dana Barros had 25 points, 15 assists and a career-high 10 rebounds as Philadelphia handed Orlando its second straight loss.

Rookie Derrick Alston had a career-high 22 points for Philadelphia, while Shawn Bradley had 19 points and six blocks. The 76ers, who have the second-worst record in the Eastern Conference, had lost eight in a row to the Magic, which has the second-best record in the NBA.

Horace Grant had 25 points and 14 rebounds for Orlando, while Shaquille O'Neal had 23 points and 12 rebounds.

The Magic, who played without starters Anfernee Hardaway and Nick Anderson, have lost 13 of their last 16 road games.

Nets 103, Heat 93

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Armon Gilliam scored a season-high 33 points as New Jersey snapped a six-game losing streak and kept their slim playoff hopes alive with a victory over Miami.

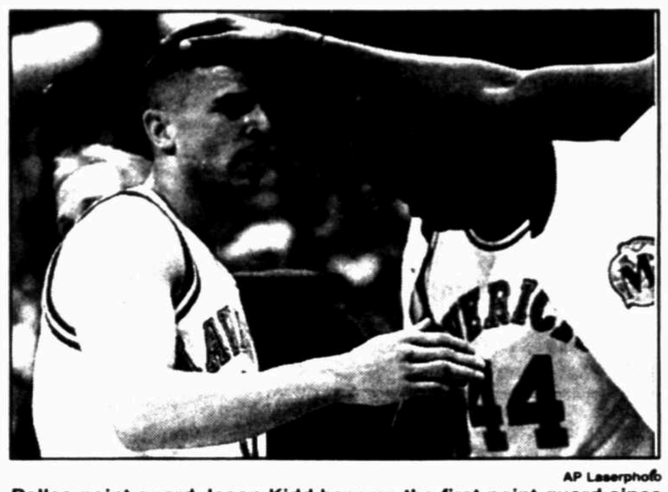

The Nets, playing without injured starters Derrick Coleman, Chris Morris and Kenny Anderson, moved to within 3 1/2 games of idle Boston for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Miami, which has lost three of its last four, trails the Celtics by three games.

Gilliam, who also grabbed 15 rebounds, put the Nets ahead for good at the end of the third period with two free throws and a short turnaround for a 76-73 lead.

Rex Walters had a career-high 20 points for New Jersey, while P.J. Brown had 17.

Dallas point guard Jason Kidd became the first point guard since Magic Johnson to record back-to-back triple doubles oin Friday.

Kidd matures quickly into fast-paced NBA

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks point guard Jason Kidd hasn't been shy in expressing his desire for the NBA's Rookie of the Year Award, on the court or off.

Kidd was named Rookie of the Month for March and is off to an even-better April with the first two triple-doubles of his career on Wednesday and Friday.

"At the beginning of the year, everybody had given it to Grant (Hill of Detroit)," Kidd said. "But things have gotten a little interesting. There's still another month left to make things even more interesting."

Kidd had 11 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds for the franchise's sixth-ever triple-double in Dallas' 111-94 blowout of the Minnesota Timberwolves.

It came just 48 hours after the fifth such feat in club history, when he had 19 points, 12 assists and 10 rebounds in a 130-111 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

Forward Jamal Mashburn, who scored 31 against the Timberwolves, had no remorse that his third straight 30-plus-point game was upstaged by Kidd.

"He deserves (the attention)," Mashburn said. "He's so good, he should average close to (a triple-double) a couple of years from now."

Kidd's late-season charge, which has come once the Mavericks lost Jim Jackson and his nearly 25 points per game to an injury, has pulled Dallas within 1 1/2 games of Denver and Sacramento for the eighth seed in the Western Conference playoffs.

The victory over the Timberwolves also was significant because it gave the Mavericks five straight wins at home for the first time in four years and it was coach Dick Motta's 300th win in Dallas.

But the night belonged to Kidd who, despite a 2-for-13 shooting performance from the field, got the back-to-back triple-doubles were the first in the NBA since Charlotte's Larry Johnson did it two seasons ago.

The headlines Kidd has been drawing may help him close the gap in the rookie race with Hill, who started the NBA All-Star game as its leading vote-getter.

Hill began the year getting the most publicity and seemed to have the honor secured. Now, Kidd and Milwaukee Bucks forward Glenn Robinson are getting closer, although Hill had his first triple-double Friday.

Hill averages 20 points, six rebounds and five assists per game.

out of the way she played here."

And one of those kids might be Midland College's only sophomore from this season, post player Joanna Kailahi. The 6-foot-3 Lady Chaparral from New Zealand scored 18 points in Saturday's final to gain team MVP honors. After the game West Texas A&M coach Bob Schneider approached her.

"She's strong, understands the inside game and makes good post moves," Schneider said. "We're a post oriented team and she would certainly fit into our program."

Schneider said he saw representatives from Lamar, Rice, Texas Women's University and Abilene Christian at the tournament.

What they saw in Saturday's final was the Red team go on an eight minute and 27 second scoring draught that allowed the Western team to take a 66-59 second half lead. The game was tied 11 times in the first half with the Western team leading only once. The Red team led 59-53 before going into it's scoring funk, getting only one field goal in the last 10: 53 of play.

"That's just basketball," Riley said.

South Plains College's Kiki Baker, who had all 10 of her points at the free throw line, hit five of six from the line between a Amber Lacy (Howard College) 3-pointer and a Kailahi layup. That run gave the Western team its 66-59 lead.

"I didn't realize I was bringing us back until I looked at the score," Baker said.

The Northern Conference team won the third place game over Eastern Blue 84-78. Trinity Valley's Melissa Rollerson took MVP for her team. The North's Jackie Jenkins of Temple Junior College and Eastern Blue's Wendy Morris of Tyler Junior College won MVP for their teams.

Morris also won the 3-point contest by hitting 14 3's in 60 seconds. Grayson County College's Lori Brown won the free throw shooting contest going five-for-five.

Bulls fans gobble up playoff tickets in less than hour

CHICAGO (AP) — With Michael Jordan back in the lineup and a turn in the tide of the Chicago Bulls' fortunes, tickets to the team's NBA playoff games sold out in less than an hour at the United Center.

More than 400 people were in line when the office opened at 10 a.m., and some people had been waiting since early Wednesday.

The tickets also were offered at 80 Ticketmaster outlets throughout the city, but immediate word on sales from Ticketmaster was not available.

Joe O'Neil, director of ticket and stadium operations for the United Center, said a total of 20,000 tickets went on sale Saturday, averaging about 2,500 to each of the six playoff games. Most playoff tickets already belong to season ticketholders.

Ticket prices ranged from $18 to $70.

At the stadium, staffers tried to ease the wait by handing out numbered arm bands to those near the front of the line about midnight Friday. Those too far back to receive arm bands were urged to go home.

Gingrich has showed he is a true leader

Less than 100 days into his reign as Speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich has achieved what few Americans thought possible in January — 1) The GOP's "Contract With America" proposals have been presented and some of them enacted and 2) A good start has been made at redirecting the course of government.

Meanwhile, however, polls still show that this man called Newt is viewed by many Americans with uncertainty or wariness which could mean that any positive political fallout that results may benefit the Republican Party rather than Gingrich personally. And President Clinton is said to be virtually jubilant about what the Republicans have achieved in this session of Congress since if a backlash develops over the proposals enacted in the "Contract With America," he figures Gingrich and the Republicans will suffer rather than him and the Democrats.

Many Americans appear to be cautious in judging the "Contract With America" thus far. That probably is a result of the fact that only two of the proposals — congressional accountability and action on unfunded mandates — have actually been signed into law at this point. Two others — the balanced budget amendment and congressional term limits — were defeated. Additionally, a "Star Wars" missile defense were knocked out of a national security bill.

There is no question that Gingrich and Company have not been 100 percent effective, but they point with justifiable pride to what they accomplished during the first 93 days after taking control of the Congress from the Democrats. Even Democrats concede that Gingrich and the Republicans have been extremely successful this term. White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta was quoted as saying, "You obviously have to give them credit for their ability to be very disciplined and single-minded about getting the contract accomplished in the House."

Panetta added, on ABC's "Good Morning America," that "the problem is the first 100 days have largely been about Newt Gingrich and the Republicans and the special interests and the privileged who have benefited the most. I think the second 100 days hopefully will be about the rest of America."

One thing is certain: Gingrich has proven that he can be tremendously effective as House speaker. That means he bears watching in the weeks and months ahead.

Ax-wielding budget-cutter should bypass farmers

Cutting federal spending to put the national purse in order spells pain across the board. The tricky part of budget-balancing comes in seeing that no one's pain is terribly worse than another's. That includes the oft-criticized farmer.

Farming has enjoyed fat subsidies. But those payments have not been on a par lately with spending on entitlements.

This is one of the key points made in a letter sent to House Speaker Newt Gingrich by 25 Republican congressmen. The group urges the GOP leadership to "ensure that any additional spending cuts not adversely impact the ability of U.S. agriculture to meet the food and fiber needs of consumers at home and abroad."

The group says farmers already have taken big hits. From a high of $26 billion in 1986, farm spending dipped to less than $11 billion last year. And this is from a sector with foreign sales of over $43 billion that produce a positive trade balance of $18 billion for the U.S. economy. ...

A reorganization of the U.S. Department of Agriculture is expected to trim as much as $3.6 billion over the next four years as 1,200 USDA field offices are closed. No other department or agency of the federal government has undergone such an extensive "downsizing."

As far as we can tell, farmers aren't saying "don't touch us." What they have every right to say, however, is that they should not be unfairly singled out for more than their share of whacks by the economizers' budget ax.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Palm Sunday, April 9, the 99th day of 1995. There are 266 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 9, 1865, with the Civil War at a virtual end, Confederate General Robert E. Lee surrendered his army to Union General Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Court House in Virginia.

On this date:

In 1682, the French explorer Robert La Salle reached the Mississippi River.

In 1833, the first tax-supported public library was founded, in Peterborough, N.H.

In 1939, singer Marian Anderson performed a concert at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington after she was denied the use of Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

In 1940, Germany invaded Denmark and Norway.

In 1942, during World War II, American and Philippine defenders on Bataan capitulated to Japanese forces; the surrender was followed by the notorious "Bataan Death March," which claimed nearly 10,000 lives.

In 1959, NASA announced the selection of America's first seven astronauts: Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper, John Glenn, Gus Grissom, Wally Schirra, Alan Shepard and Donald Slayton.

Ides prove to be good omen for senator

WASHINGTON — When Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., paid a surprise visit to Senate Minority Leader Thomas A. Daschle's Capitol office on March 15 — the infamous Ides of March — it may have seemed like a bad omen.

Anderson

The anniversary of Julius Caesar's stabbing death on the floor of the Roman Senate was a curious day for a history buff like Byrd to drop in on Daschle — especially with speculation swirling about bad blood between Byrd and Daschle. Byrd campaigned against the South Dakota Democrat in the leader's race, and has sometimes appeared to be upstaging him.

But Byrd's visit marked the day Daschle earned his senatorial stripes from one of its most venerated members. In fact, after a shaky start, Daschle has won converts by making war with Republicans while making peace with two erstwhile rivals: Byrd and Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

On the Ides of March, Byrd received the initial copies of his latest book, "The Senate of the Roman Republic." The 77-year-old Byrd walked from his Appropriations Committee office on the first floor of the Capitol up to Daschle's suite on the second floor to hand-deliver the very first copy he gave away.

It was a short trip that has helped bridge much distance. At a dinner in January, for example, observers noted that Byrd conspicuously sat at Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole's table instead of Daschle's. Dole, however, received the second copy of Byrd's new book.

During an interview Daschle jumped to his feet to show off the book on his desk that Byrd hasn't inscribed yet. "He said, 'It's more important to me that you have the book the day that I receive it than it is that I put an inscription in it today,'" Daschle recalled. He rejects talk about how he needs to shove Byrd out of the way in order to solidify power and says the key is to work in "tandem."

That opportunity came during the debate over the balanced budget amendment: Byrd ground down the GOP with long, impassioned speeches, while Daschle deployed his troops against the Republicans' failure to protect Social Security.

"I feel as if each week gets a little better, a little more steady," Daschle told us. "There's just a sense of... momentum. Our caucus is as unified as I think it's ever been."

Early diplomatic overtures to Dodd may be one reason for the unity. Dodd was seen as a more seasoned candidate for the minority leader's job than Daschle and lost it by only one vote. Daschle turned around and pushed for Dodd to become chairman of the Democratic National Committee — despite the fact that the two men would be vying for the spotlight.

Daschle says that when he called President Clinton to support Dodd, "it took the president aback a little bit." Dodd later thanked Daschle with a note joking that he wasn't sure whether either man really had won a prize given the task ahead.

The knock on the soft-spoken South Dakotan during the leader's race was that he wasn't aggressive enough for that task. But one of Daschle's top lieutenants, Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., illuminates another side of the Daschle demeanor. Rockefeller recalls that he was out of town when former Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell announced his retirement last March. But less than two hours after the announcement, Daschle located Rockefeller and was already lobbying for his support.

Daschle was headed for South Dakota when he heard the news. He secluded himself in his parents' home that weekend and called every Democratic senator in what he describes as one of the "critical moments in my campaign.... I was going to be inclusive. I was going to be aggressive and I wasn't going to delegate this to other people."

Giuliani aims for normality with budget cuts

NEW YORK — When students at the city university recently jammed streets around city hall to vent indignation about budget cuts that portend tuition increases, they carried signs denouncing Mayor Giuliani, but misspelling his name, as well as "tiution" and "priorty." Those signs were indications either that more money is needed for higher education, or that less money should be entrusted to the people responsible for that university. Whichever, the turmoil was just one manifestation of resistance to budgets that Giuliani calls "reality therapy."

Will

It is an old axiom that in politics if you have no choice, you have no problem. That is the only sense in which Giuliani has no problem. He has no choice but to cut continuously at the city's government because the alternative is implosion. That occurs when rising taxes and declining quality of life drive more and more of a city's tax base — people and businesses — to flee the city, leaving the remainder of the steadily shrinking base to bear a steadily increasing burden.

Last year the city budget was smaller than the year before, and this year Giuliani has proposed a still smaller budget achieved by spending cuts of a severity not seen here since the depths of the Depression. He says his aim is to make New York "more like a normal city." That is the reverse of what New York has, through much of this century, striven to be politically, but it is a worthy aspiration for a city that has more people on welfare (1.2 million — more than one in seven people) than in public schools and that has three times more admissions to Rikers Island jail each year than to the freshman classes on the city university campuses. Normality would be welcome in a city where in a recent year there were 78,000 calls — one every seven minutes — to the 911 emergency line reporting gunshots, which are so common that many go unreported.

New York in its proud abnormality spends twice as much per capita on its residents as Chicago or Boston, twice as much per capita on welfare as Los Angeles. Chicago has approximately 14 city employees for every 1,000 residents. New York has 50. Giuliani proposes privatizing three of the 16 city-run hospitals. It is a rare city that operates even three hospitals. The city owns a television station and two radio stations. Why? Because for decades the political culture here was not receptive to the question, "Why is government doing this?"

What the city government was trying to do was teach the rest of the nation how to be progressive. The city was proud to be "the capital of the American century" and "the world's destination," and part of this chosen role was to extend the New Deal idea — largely a product of New York political and intellectual circles — of government that is omnipresent and omniprovident. One result is that today New Yorkers must bob and weave to avoid paying 28 different taxes.

Giuliani, required to balance the budget, has asked Gov. George Pataki to cut spending on welfare and Medicaid even more than Pataki has planned, because the city must match such spending. There is a proposal for earning $10 million by selling advertising in city parks — on basketball backboards and softball field fences. And then there is the matter of taxis.

The fleet of yellow cabs numbers 11,787. It has been that size since 1937. As a result of this government restriction of entry into the business, a taxi medallion — a license to operate a taxi — now sells for about $175,000. The city could raise more than $60 million by selling 400 new ones, but that would depress the value of existing medallions, so the taxi interests will fight to keep the city forever in 1937.

Want to buy a city-owned golf course? A city-owned hotel? One of those radio stations? Do policemen, who can retire on full pensions after 20 years in uniform, really need a paid day off each year to purchase uniforms? If all the public school teachers were actually teaching, the pupil teacher ratio could be 16 to 1 instead of 30 to 1. But inch after agonizing inch, Giuliani is making progress. For example, prompted by the prospect of privatization, garbage collectors now work more than six hours a day.

New York in its political vanity used to be called "the city that longs to belong to another country." Today the municipal government that once fancied itself the nation's moral model is reduced to scrambling for small sums, like an indigent groping for change between the cushions of a sofa in the lobby of a seedy hotel.

Abandonment of Morse code prompts S.O.S.

The Coast Guard has abandoned the Morse code. Or to express it in an anguished cry of that now obsolete tongue: "Dit-dit-dit, dah-dah-dah, dit-dit-dit."

It has to be said very fast — "ditditdit dahdahdah ditditdit" — and means, of course, SOS.

Baker

Morse code was invented by Samuel F.B. Morse, who sent the first coded message in 1844. As every schoolchild once had to learn, that message was, "What hath God wrought."

Communications machinery has improved mightily since 1844, but the same cannot be said for the quality of messages. Neil Armstrong's first moon message — "That's one small step for a man, but a giant leap for mankind" — doesn't hold a candle to "What hath God wrought."

This is not to belittle Armstrong. He is a brave, intelligent and perhaps even wise adventurer. His rare refusal to exploit his deed for fame and fortune has been one of the century's noblest displays of honorable character.

Nevertheless, Armstrong's message is not in the same league with "What hath God wrought." It has the sound of writing that has been exhaustingly labored over while dozens of government titans looked over the poor author's shoulder. Imagine the editing:

"You can't use a musty old word like 'hath,' Neil. And that 'wrought,' baby, that's one of the forget-'em antiques. And don't get us wrong, fella, we're not hypocrites or atheists or anything, but God in a Federal-program context is strictly a no-no these days."

It is not easy to produce memorable messages, of course, even when censors are not leaning over you. Here, for instance, is Wink Wingender of Glen Burnie, Md., who, according to The Baltimore Sun, sent and received Morse code both at sea and ashore for many years. What did he say upon learning that the Coast Guard was abandoning it?

"You can't stop progress," he said.

Here was a chance to say, "What hath God unwrought," but Wingender, probably flustered to discover himself talking to a newspaper reporter, could only produce that dubious old line about the unstoppability of progress.

Anyone who has ever found himself suddenly confronted by the trouble implicit in a newspaper reporter will sympathize with Wingender's failure to realize that the auto industry has stopped progress for the past 50 years, that Newt Gingrich has not only stopped progress but also started to roll it back, that —

But we were talking of the end of Morse code. Sentimentality doesn't dampen my eye, but I do feel a bit sad. Here is another instance of a hard-earned skill suddenly declared useless.

Learning the code was one of the more satisfying experiences of my Navy career, possibly because it seemed a little like being able to hear music with a musician's ear. Each letter and number makes a distinctive rhythmic sound.

After repeated listening conditions the ear to recognize each distinctive sound, you have the same sort of pleasure professional musicians must feel in listening closely to complex music, or so I thought.

It was a skill I never needed, as things turned out, but it was useful for entertaining small children, or at least those with enough wit to be amused by hearing their names — dit-dah-dit, dah-dah-dah, dit-dit-dit, dit — in Morse code.

Still, it was a skill that until last week might have made me valuable to the Coast Guard. Now — useless. As useless as my skill at maneuvering a propeller-driven plane through a perfect Immelmann turn, followed by a flawless slow roll.

The purpose here was to enable me to destroy the air arm of the Imperial Japanese Empire, which fortunately collapsed before the skill had to be tested and, probably, found inadequate.

Nearly all skills, no matter how painstakingly learned, must eventually become obsolete, leaving once valuable workmen feeling suddenly valueless. The "downsizing" of American heavy industry and the resulting end of well-paid jobs in both labor and management is the bad news of our age.

Ditditdit, dahdahdah, ditditdit. Ex-bosses fear ending as burger dispensers. Nobody needs a perfect Immelmann anymore. What hath God wrought?

Ask why state chooses not to do right thing

The Whistleblowers Act was enacted by our legislators whom we the taxpayers elected to represent us. The act was put in place to afford we the taxpayers protection from retaliation in the event we choose to "do the right thing" by reporting illegal or corrupt acts. We are not to fear losing our jobs or being black-balled if we turn a supervisor in for illegal or corrupt dealings.

This is a good act. It will keep our state and our society from being ruled by Mafia-type threats and actions should we find ourselves in a position to "do the right thing."

Before you find yourself becoming too peaceful with the knowledge of this protection, be aware that the law does not apply to the state of Texas, which in fact, is made up of people we the taxpayers elected. The state seems to be immune to court-ordered actions — appellate court-ordered actions and state Supreme Court-ordered actions. The state does not fret about being ordered to pay millions of dollars, plus millions more in interest, because if the legislators do not appropriate the funds, the state does not have to pay the debt nor the interest. Seems simple enough. Just do not try to use this reasoning regarding appropriating funds in your own budget for debts.

There is in excess of $50 million due citizens of this state that is "not being appropriated" at this moment. It seems our elected officials have decided not to "do the right thing" and our judicial system is helpless to enforce its decisions. That's a comforting thought. Our judicial system has no clout.

Each citizen should ask his congressman why these debts are not being paid. Ask why the people on whom the whistle was blown are still employees of the state and their illegal activities are still costing the Texas taxpayers more than the debts that are owed. Ask about the court case: George Green vs. the state of Texas and the Department of Human Services. Ask those whom we have elected to represent us and manage our money why the state of Texas chooses not to "do the right thing."

Parents need to stand firm against alcohol

Had my teen-age daughter been at the airport hangar the night 25 MIP citations were issued and she was one issued a citation, I hope I would have the courage and parental insight to hold her fully responsible for her wrong actions. I also hope I would be thankful and appreciative to the police officers who broke up an illegal situation that held potential for tragic consequences, instead of calling to complain my child wasn't treated fairly.

What is it going to take for the parents of this community to stand firm against the serious alcohol and drug problem we have here in Midland? Most important, what are you teaching your children by the actions you chose to take?

I sincerely hope that what I consider irresponsible action by these parents (four to six cases of beer were present there that night!) does not deter or inhibit our police officers from issuing future MIP citations.

High-speed chases are dangerous, necessary

In a letter published in the April 2 Reporter-Telegram, Marcellous Weaver pleaded with Midland to outlaw high-speed chases. While I agree that it would be a tragedy if "some nice, innocent family" were to be injured during a chase, I wonder if Weaver considered the ramifications of outlawing high-speed chases? Let us say, for argument's sake, that the city of Midland indeed issued an edict barring police officers from pursuing fleeing suspects at a rate of speed greater than 20 mph above the posted speed limit. I seriously doubt the pursued will abide by that rule. Is Weaver comfortable with the fact that all a criminal would have to do to elude arrest is to drive 30 mph over the speed limit, forcing the police to abandon pursuit?

It is indeed sad when an innocent bystander is injured during any attempt by law enforcement to bring a suspect to justice. But the citizens of a community need to realize that the risk of harm to the public is greater if these suspects are not apprehended. Our peace officers are already hampered enough in their efforts to protect the citizens of this community. We should applaud their efforts, and their willingness to place themselves in harm's way to protect the nice, innocent families of Midland.

Extending Interstate 44 would be better choice

I recently was in San Angelo and heard much controversy over extending Interstate 27 from Lubbock south through West Texas with Midland-Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene in a heated battle to show the best support in hopes of winning the extension.

However, I feel this proposed extension would not be too beneficial for the area because it only would give motorists an interstate to Amarillo, where I-27 terminates at Interstate 40. There is no interstate north from Amarillo, and Midland motorists likely will not travel to Amarillo to head east on I-40. They would be more likely to travel east on Interstate 20 to Dallas and depart on different highways there, or depart I-20 on one of the major highways between Midland and Dallas, such as U.S. Highway 277 in Abilene. Using these various highways only makes sense because the distances are shorter and many motorists today are in a rush when they travel and are looking for the shortest distance.

I believe there is great potential for developing an interstate highway in this area of Texas, and I have a recommendation that I think would be beneficial to most cities. Instead of extending I-27, why not consider extending Interstate 44 from Wichita Falls to Del Rio? This route essentially would follow U.S. 277, but probably could have a straighter alignment between Wichita Falls and Abilene (passing near Throckmorton). This highway passes through Abilene and San Angelo on its way to Del Rio and Eagle Pass, with a distance of 388 miles (according to the Texas Department of Transportation's map) between Del Rio and Wichita Falls. That is 77 miles further than the proposed route of Interstate 69 between Laredo and Houston, which eventually will run to Indianapolis. A straighter route between Wichita Falls and Abilene would reduce the mileage total.

I believe Midland residents would benefit from this, because it would give them an interstate traveling north-northeast that would allow easier access to the Midwest and Northeast. This proposal also would benefit the cities of San Angelo and Del Rio, both of which are growing, and neither have interstate highways running through them nor four-lane access to an interstate. I believe this proposal would benefit Midland residents as they could travel east on I-20 to Abilene and pick up I-44, which would be a much shorter driving distance than going north to Amarillo and east on I-40.

Officers couldn't positively identify which teens possessed alcohol

There was recently an article in the Midland Reporter-Telegram describing an incident where the Midland Police Department issued a large number of citations to minors for the violation of Minors in Possession of alcohol.

Shortly thereafter was another follow-up story and it indicated that the Midland Police Department had initiated the action of canceling those citations with the courts. Since that time there has been much criticism aimed at the Midland Police Department for the cancellation of those citations. I think that it is appropriate for the Police Department to explain the reasons behind those actions.

On March 25th, the Police Department received a report of persons driving on the runways of Airpark. A single police officer responded to that call and he did find persons riding a motorcycle with lights out on the runways. He pursued them and followed them to a hangar and upon exiting his vehicle, went into the hangar and found a large group of minors and several containers of alcoholic beverages. The officer called for assistance and when his assistance arrived and after due consideration it was felt that they should write citations to all persons present for Minors in Possession of Alcohol.

The officers also made the decision to call the parents of all these minors and have them respond to pick up the minors. Both of these decisions by the officers appeared appropriate at the time. The following week the Midland Police Department received a number of calls from parents questioning the legality of issuing every juvenile a citation. An investigation was conducted by the Midland Police Department and it was determined that the officers made an error in judgment.

Texas State Statutes state "a minor commits an offense if he possesses an alcoholic beverage." The minor is defined as "a person under the age of 21." The law also describes "possession" as meaning "the actual care, custody, control or management of an item." In questioning the officers after this incident and most especially the first officer on the scene who found the juveniles in this hangar, he stated that he could not positively identify which ones had alcohol in their possession and those who did not. It should be noted that this is a critical element of the law and both prosecutors and judges require that this element be present in prosecution.

Upon learning that our officers could not honestly testify that any one of these particular juveniles was in possession it was determined to dismiss all cases. The alternative would have been to allow each case to go to court and make a motion at the time to dismiss the case. It was felt that it was more expedient and cost effective to dismiss them all at one time. The Midland Police Department also recognizes that what occurred was a deficiency in the area of officer's training. We felt that perhaps we had not made it clear enough in their training to understand that an element of the charge of Minor in Possession is you must positively identify that the minor had alcohol in his/her possession. This deficiency in training is being dealt with and all officers will receive special training to understand, positively, the elements of a Minor In Possession.

The Midland Police Department does not excuse these minors for being present at this particular party. One of the most important decisions that the officers made was to call each parent. It is our hope that each parent recognizes that it is their responsibility to know where their children were and to take the necessary corrective action to prevent it from happening again. These types of incidents are serious and minors involved in the consumption of alcohol could lead to some very serious circumstances including auto accidents and death. The Midland Police Department does not want that to occur.

We also feel that it is important to recognize our mistakes. We made our mistake public in order to allow the citizens of Midland to understand that no special deals were made and no special class of citizens were dealt with in order to give them favors. An honest mistake was made and we took the proper steps to make the correction.

Politicians directing reform are problem

The vast majority of hard-working Americans has growing concerns of the effects of the legislative agenda that is working itself through the Congress. Here are some logical answers to the most asked questions:

What was the result of the 1994 election? The result was a broad new group of elected officials qualifying for an unjustified salary, excellent health-care benefits (they don't see any problem), unlimited access to money (PACs and special interest) and an out of this world retirement benefit package compliments of the American taxpayer (average retirement income for Congress is $200,000; for average Americans is $32,000.).

What do you get when you cut welfare programs? More Americans in need and a nice tax cut for the rich. As for the school lunch program going to the state, simple mathematics will tell you that the program will suffer by 16 percent. The Congress claims they will increase the level of spending by 4 percent each year, but don't mention that 20 percent can be spent elsewhere. Merry Christmas from the Congress, Gov. Bush.

What do you get when the majority in Congress does not possess the courage to pass a term limits bill? The need for the appointment of special prosecutors to look into book deals, career politicians furthering their own presidential aspirations, astronomical budget deficits, unjustified defense spending, and finger pointing for failure to fulfill a contract promise.

What do you get when you abolish affirmative action? Class distinction and a reinforced glass ceiling designed to maintain ethnic and gender separatism!

What do you accomplish by increasing the minimum wage? More money to be used on consumable goods. Less campaign contributions to career politicians.

All facts considered, the politicians directing the alleged reform in government have been the problem all along and in varying degrees represent not the constituency but corporate America!

Football game was waste of manpower

I attended part of Saturiday night's football game where Midland's Blue played New York's Finest. I commend the Midland guys for donating their time and bodies in support of the D.A.R.E. and D-FY-IT programs, which are very worthy causes. I am in agreement that the community must pull together and raise money for worthwhile projects. I didn't stay for the entire game because quite frankly, it made me mad to witness such a wasteful use of Midland's finest manpower, and taxpayer dollars.

Whoever thought-up the football games between the police and Fire Department or other police forces had only the fund-raisers' success in mind. I, however, see things differently. Before the end of the first quarter, two men had gone to the emergency room. One, a Midland Sheriff's Department officer I've been told has a broken back. The previous fund-raiser held about six months ago between the Midland Police Department and the Fire Department, I understand resulted in three firemen being injured, one of which has still yet to be able to return to work. In the end, the previous fund-raiser between the two departments raised less than $2,000.

I believe the taxpayers of Midland have a right to know what the total cost to the city is for such games. I doubt that Saturday night's game will be worth the broken bones, surgeries, rehabilitation, loss of time from the job, let alone the risk factor of a paralyzing injury. Midland needs, what I call Midland's Finest, doing what they do best. I'm convinced there is a safer and more economical way to raise money without having the grossly disproportionate return on investment witnessed Saturday night. I may be completely off-base with my information. If I am, set me straight. Either way, the mayor and council members should report the TOTAL cost of such events to the taxpayers of Midland.

SPEAKING OUT

Scouting programs need support

By Frank Cowden Jr.

A lifetime Midlander, Frank Cowden Jr. is a West Texas rancher who has been involved in scouting for 40 years.

Will Rogers once remarked that he had one problem with the Boy Scouts: "There aren't enough of them."

I have been involved with some of the finest organizations in Midland for the better part of my life. One that I am most supportive of brings together many aspects of life that help build youth into the leaders our future most desperately needs...scouting. The scouting program helps youth to develop character, recognition of responsibilities, duties to God and country and service to others. The concluding lines of the Scout Promise summarize the program:

"...to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

Each year the Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America recognizes someone for outstanding community leadership at its Distinguished Citizens Award Dinner. This year, the honoree will be native Midlander and leader Laura Bush, the first lady of the state of Texas.

The dinner will be held April 18, at Green Tree Country Club. Previous recipients for this honor include Hy Davidson, Rep. Tom Craddick, Clayton Williams Jr., Gov. George Bush, Helen Greathouse and a certain West Texas rancher that will remain anonymous for the balance of this article. Your attendance at this dinner will show not only respect for the distinguished citizen, but your support for the important programs that scouting brings to this community.

The Distinguished Citizens Award Dinner is more than a recognition event — it also helps raise money to continue the scouting programs offered by the Buffalo Trail Council.

The council covers an 18-county area. With the help of more than 1,800 adult volunteers, 4,000 Permian Basin youth are served through the Cub Scout, Boy Scout, Exploring and Learning for Life programs. The council provides camping facilities such as the Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains and the Hughes Aquatic Base on Lake Colorado City; insurance coverage for youth, adults and sponsoring institutions; a professional and support staff to work with volunteers; training courses for leaders; activities and recordkeeping.

The goal of the council is simple: organize new Cub Scout packs, Boy Scout troops, Explorer posts and Learning for Life groups and help make them successful in serving youth.

"Character Counts!" is more than a theme for the BSA; it summarizes what scouting is all about. As we reflect back on the 85 years of service the BSA has provided America, the need for young men and women of character is more apparent than ever before. Today's society sends youth the messages that traditions, values and respect are situational concerns rather than a code of conduct.

Character is not just an issue, it is the ONLY issue! Proverbs tells us to "train up a child in the way he should go and he will not depart from it."

These programs, however, need funding to be continued. The council enjoys a strong relationship with the United Way to provide part of its funding. The balance is obtained through activities, a trust fund and direct solicitation campaigns known as "Friends of Scouting." A part of these campaigns are special events, such as the annual pro-am golf tournament, and this Distinguished Citizens Award Dinner.

Join me April 18 in recognizing Laura Bush for her years of service. And you will insure that scouting programs will continue to be available to any young person in the Permian Basin.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Great Family Value!

Located in a very quiet part of town, the Crestgate 9 subdivision in northern Midland, this wonderful four bedroom family home offers an interesting design coupled with instant appeal.

Set on a landscaped corner lot which boasts mature trees and hedges, this fantastic home is in 'move-in' condition having been redecorated within the last year.

Once up the garden path, visitors are greeted by an elegant, tiled entryway which leads into the large family room. The high beamed ceiling adds to the general impression of space in this room, while refined touches such as the louvered doors to the wet bar add another dimension. Wooden bookcases and an entertainment center are built-in to one wall, imparting a pleasing warmth to the room.

The quality of design and construction in this house at 3613 Bermuda Court, extends throughout the property. Nowhere is this more evident than in the master suite which is of a very high standard.

The master bathroom takes advantage of all available space and offers a separate bath and shower, double vanities and a large walk-in closet which contains built-in storage space. The suite's elegant accents are enhanced by the intelligent use of recessed lighting and mirrors and the end result are a pair of rooms that are a joy to be in.

Unusually, the other bedrooms have also received careful attention to detail. One even has built-in bookcases and desks that were designed to accommodate computer monitors and other hardware. This makes it an ideal room for teenagers or for use as a study.

The family rooms in this pretty house are as practical as they are charming. For example, the formal dining room next to the kitchen boasts a view over the side yard as well as elegant mouldings. The kitchen is, as one would expect, an attractive and functional room that offers everything a gourmet chef could need. Masses of work and storage space, coupled with stylish oak cabinets and a large pantry compliment the tiled floors and practical layout of appliances.

The kitchen also offers a big utility room plumbed with both gas and electricity and a half bath.

For more information about this property, which is listed at $112,900, call Cheryl Parish of Century 21 Realtors at 689-0021 or attend the open house which will be held between two and four o'clock this afternoon.

Unusual "Tips" help seller prepare home for sale

Peggy Strong, CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

A common goal among all home sellers is to obtain the highest price for their investment. So how does that happen? What makes one home in a neighborhood sell faster and for more money than a similar home in the same neighborhood?

Here are some unusual tips for helping sellers achieve their goals. The suggestions eliminate what many buyers express as a "fear of the unknown" - and will help prospective buyers view your home in a more favorable light.

• If your home is still covered by a home warranty plan, check to see if it transferable to a buyer. Most warranties are transferable to a buyer. Most warranties are transferable, and having a home warranty is a strong selling point. You may want to consider purchasing a one-year service policy to cover your home's working components.

• Gather all the manufacturer's warranties on your appliances and mechanical equipment. Even if the warranties have expired, the booklets will provide helpful operating instructions, service tips and emergency information.

• Make a list of any home improvements you've made over the years. Include when they were done, how much they cost and the name of the contractor. This list will highlight improvements and help justify any increased price on your home versus neighboring homes for sale.

• Create a list of your actual expenditures for utilities and property taxes. Even though a buyer's utility bills may vary from yours, this helps a prospective buyer get a feel for what to expect, and again, helps eliminate that fear of the unknown.

• Have your home examined by a professional home inspector. If the home comes out in tip-top condition, the inspection becomes an additional selling point. If the inspector finds a problem, you'll have time to fix it before it stops a sale, or at least be aware of the problem.

Selling a home today means having a plan which takes advantage of market. Get your own plan rolling with a phone call to me so that I can show you what's happening in your neighborhood, and how your home can be most effectively marketed to obtain the best price in the shortest period of time.

Proper first steps put home sale into motion

Kay Sutton
Kay Sutton, Realtors

If you are considering putting your home on the market and wondering where to start, why not start at the curb and approach your own home as if you were a stranger, and see what you notice first. Is the yard manicured and the flower beds free of weeds and dead grass and/or plants? Is your front door clean and attractive? Painting a front door is a comparably small task for the impact it gives. Washing windows lightens up the home and costs only some effort.

Walk through the garage and see if you feel that you are walking through an obstacle course. Are your teenager's walls so covered with posters that it is difficult to know what color the walls are painted? Cluttered rooms, and cluttered walls, make a house feel small. If your home is over furnished consider renting a storage room or using part of the garage to store the overflow. Clean out closets and get rid of items not used, or store items which are seldom used.

When putting your house on the market, be sure to think about anything which is attached but which you may not want to leave. This would include such items as ceiling fans, attached bookcases which are not built in, or a water softener. Remember, anything which is permanently attached is expected to remain and pass with the property unless it is specifically reserved. Sometimes an owner has a special light fixture or chandelier which they wish to move to their new home. It is usually better to remove such an item and replace it before showing the home to prospective buyers.

A Realtor can walk through the house with you and make suggestions about what you should or should not repair, and which repairs should take priority. Many times a Realtor will mention things you might not have noticed and many times these items are quite inexpensive.

If you have questions, call your Realtor for assistance.

Real Estate Facts

Exclusive buyer agency agreement helps purchaser

Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

In a very high percentage of all home sales, a real estate agent is involved. To buyers and sellers alike, it is important to know who is being represented by the agent.

Traditionally, most agents have been employed by, and thus represent the interests of the owners. The sellers pay the agent a fee in exchange for the agent's expertise in locating suitable buyers for their home. The agent has a fiduciary relationship with the sellers, and an obligation to pursue a course of action in their best interests.

When the agent represents the sellers, what relationship exists between that same agent and any buyers who are shown the home? The relationship is that of a salesperson/customer. The agent is obligated to treat the customer honestly and fairly, but is clearly looking out for the best interests of the property owners, not the buyer.

Can buyers hire an agent to represent them? They certainly can. Just as homeowners sign an exclusive listing agreement with their agent, buyers can hire the services of an agent by signing an exclusive buyer agency agreement. Such an agreement carries with it certain rights and obligations. The buyer has the right to expect the agent to negotiate a purchase in their best interest, paying special attention to price, terms, inspections and closing details which benefit the buyer.

Homebuyers who employ a buyer's agent also have the obligation to compensate the agent for services rendered. There are a variety of compensation plans which should be discussed directly with the agent.

Dual agency, discouraged by most, is a third alternative. In dual agency, both buyers and sellers are represented by the same agent, a situation which carries with it an inherent conflict of interest.

When buying or selling a home, ask the agent who is being represented, then proceed with an informed decision.

Re/Max Midland sales associates receive awards

Approximately 380 RE/MAX associates from across the state recently "Waltzed Across Texas" during the Associate Appreciation Night hosted by RE/MAX of Texas, Inc. This year's awards were held in Dallas in conjunction with the RE/MAX International convention.

During the awards, John Lozeski, executive vice president RE/MAX of Texas announced that sales volume for the year was $4.4 billion, reflecting an increase of 8.1 percent over 1993's year end figures. In addition, RE/MAX associates across the state participated in 41,390 transactions during the year. Approximately 34,000 properties were listed by RE/MAX associated carrying a listing volume of $3.9 billion - - an increase of eight percent over 1993's same figures.

During the event, RE/MAX affiliates from Texas were also recognized and awarded for their 1994 achievements. Several associates from RE/MAX Midland received awards for yearly production. Norma Barnes, Kirk French, Jan Melton, Joel Oldham and Billie Sherman were recognized as members of the President's Club. Receiving recognition for the Executive Club were Joyce Brickey, Jo Braden, Anita Noles, Bill Scott, Clemmie Sorge, Sandy Scott, Mary Jo Drury and Raymond Doss. The 1994 members of the 100% Club were Marilyn Jo Smith, Ruth Young and Debbie Hatfield.

Receiving a special award were co-franchisees Anita Noles and Marilyn Jo Smith who were recognized as the 1994 Broker/Owners of the Year for a Small City. Noles and Smith received this award for excellence in every facet of owning an office.

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, APRIL 9, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BJ Services, Western Co. to close merger this week

Staff Reports

HOUSTON—BJ Services Co. said that special meetings of stockholders of BJ Services and The Western Co. of North America are scheduled to be held in Houston at 11 a.m. Houston time on April 13, 1995 to approve the merger between the two companies. If approved by the requisite votes of stockholders the closing date of the merger is expected to be April 13, 1995. This notice is required under the terms of the merger agreement.

Pursuant to an election by Western's stockholders, each share of Western's common stock outstanding immediately prior to the effectiveness of the merger will be converted into the right to receive, without interest,

- $20.00 in cash and 0.2 warrants to purchase one share of BJ Services common stock at $30.00 per share (subject to adjustment), or
- 1.0028 shares of BJ Services common stock (which number was based on the average daily trading prices of BJ Services common stock on the New York Stock Exchange during a 20-trading day period commencing March 9, 1995.)

Under the merger agreement, Western's stockholders are entitled to elect whether to receive cash consideration or stock consideration, or a combination thereof as well as the warrant consideration.

Such elections are required to be made on election forms previously furnished to Western's stockholders. To be effective an election form must be returned, together with the corresponding stock certificates (or a proper guarantee of delivery), to the First Chicago Trust Co. of New York by 5 p.m. E.D.S.T. on April 11, 1995.

Such election forms may be tendered in writing by mail to First Chicago Trust Co. of New York, Exchange Agent, Tenders & Exchanges, P.O. Box 2563, Suite 4660, Jersey City, N.J. 07303-2563, or by courier to First Chicago Trust Co. of New York, Exchange Agent, Tenders & Exchanges, Suite 4680-BJS, 14 Wall Street, 8th Floor, New York, N.Y. 10005. Election forms may be requested by telephone at 201-324-0137.

BRIEFING

Drilling improves

Drilling activity was mixed for the final week of March, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count rose nine rigs to 115 for the week, above last year's 108.

The national rig count continued to slump, dropping four to 648 for the week. A year ago the count was 732.

Seagull cuts back

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Seagull Energy Corp. is closing its Shreveport office at the cost of 100 local jobs.

The natural gas company said the closure was being done to cut costs and consolidate its operations to its headquarters in Houston.

Besides Shreveport, the company is cutting about 60 jobs in Amarillo, Texas, the company said.

Seagull did not say when the cuts will take place.

"Difficult industry operating conditions dictate that we take these actions at this time," said Seagull chairman Barry J. Galt in a press release.

According to the company, it will close its exploration and production offices in Shreveport and Amarillo. Approximately 90 of those jobs will be transferred to Houston while nearly 90 more workers within the company will lose their jobs.

Prices climb

Crude prices climbed to levels not seen in over seven months on the New York Mercantile Exchange late this week.

Prices were boosted by strong demand for gasoline, where prices have risen to 11-month highs due to refinery problems and tightened supplies.

Late in the week, West Texas Intermediate for May delivery closed at $19.77 a barrel with the posted price at $18.

Natural gas futures closed late in the week at $1.63 per thousand cubic feet.

Mobil in Venezuela

FAIRFAX, Va.-- Mobil Corp. announced that its exploration and producing affiliate in Venezuela, Mobil Exploration and Development Venezuela Inc., has formed a consortium with Veba Oel AG and Nippon Oil Exploration U.S.A. Limited to evaluate exploration opportunities in the Venezuelan New Areas Exploration Opening scheduled to occur in 1995.

Mobil is the operator of the consortium with a 50 percent interest; Veba holds a 30 percent interest and Nippon holds a 20 percent interest.

The consortium will evaluate exploration acreage to be offered in the New Areas Opening, in preparation for the bid round expected, pending congressional approval, to take place later this year.

Many synergies already exist between the consortium partners and Petroleos de Venezuela (PdVSA), the state oil company. In Venezuela, Mobil is participating with Lagoven, an affiliate of PdVSA, in a joint feasibility study of Orinoco heavy oil upgrading and refining.

In Germany, Mobil (50 percent), Veba Oel (25 percent) and PdVSA (25 percent) are partners in the Neustadt refinery.

'Corporate welfare' concerns producers

■ The "corporate welfare" movement on Capitol Hill could cost the oil and gas industry existing tax benefits.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

As Congress goes through the painful process of cutting spending and reigning in the federal deficit, a new movement has sprung up targeting tax benefits for businesses.

The movement is known as "corporate welfare" and oil and gas industry associations are keeping a watchful eye on the movement it includes tax benefits for industry, including intangible drilling costs and the percentage depletion allowance.

"On the surface, we see this as really a push to increase taxes on business, and it's certainly not the way to move forward on the debate on tax increases versus spending cuts," said Denise Bode, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of American.

"This is an example of how crazy things are here," she said in a phone interview from her Washington, D.C., office.

"Corporate welfare is being thrown out by the Democrats who are focusing on increasing taxes on business instead of cutting spending, and that's not what we were promised last November."

The industry came under strong attack last week from U.S. Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., and senior Democratic member of the House Resources Committee.

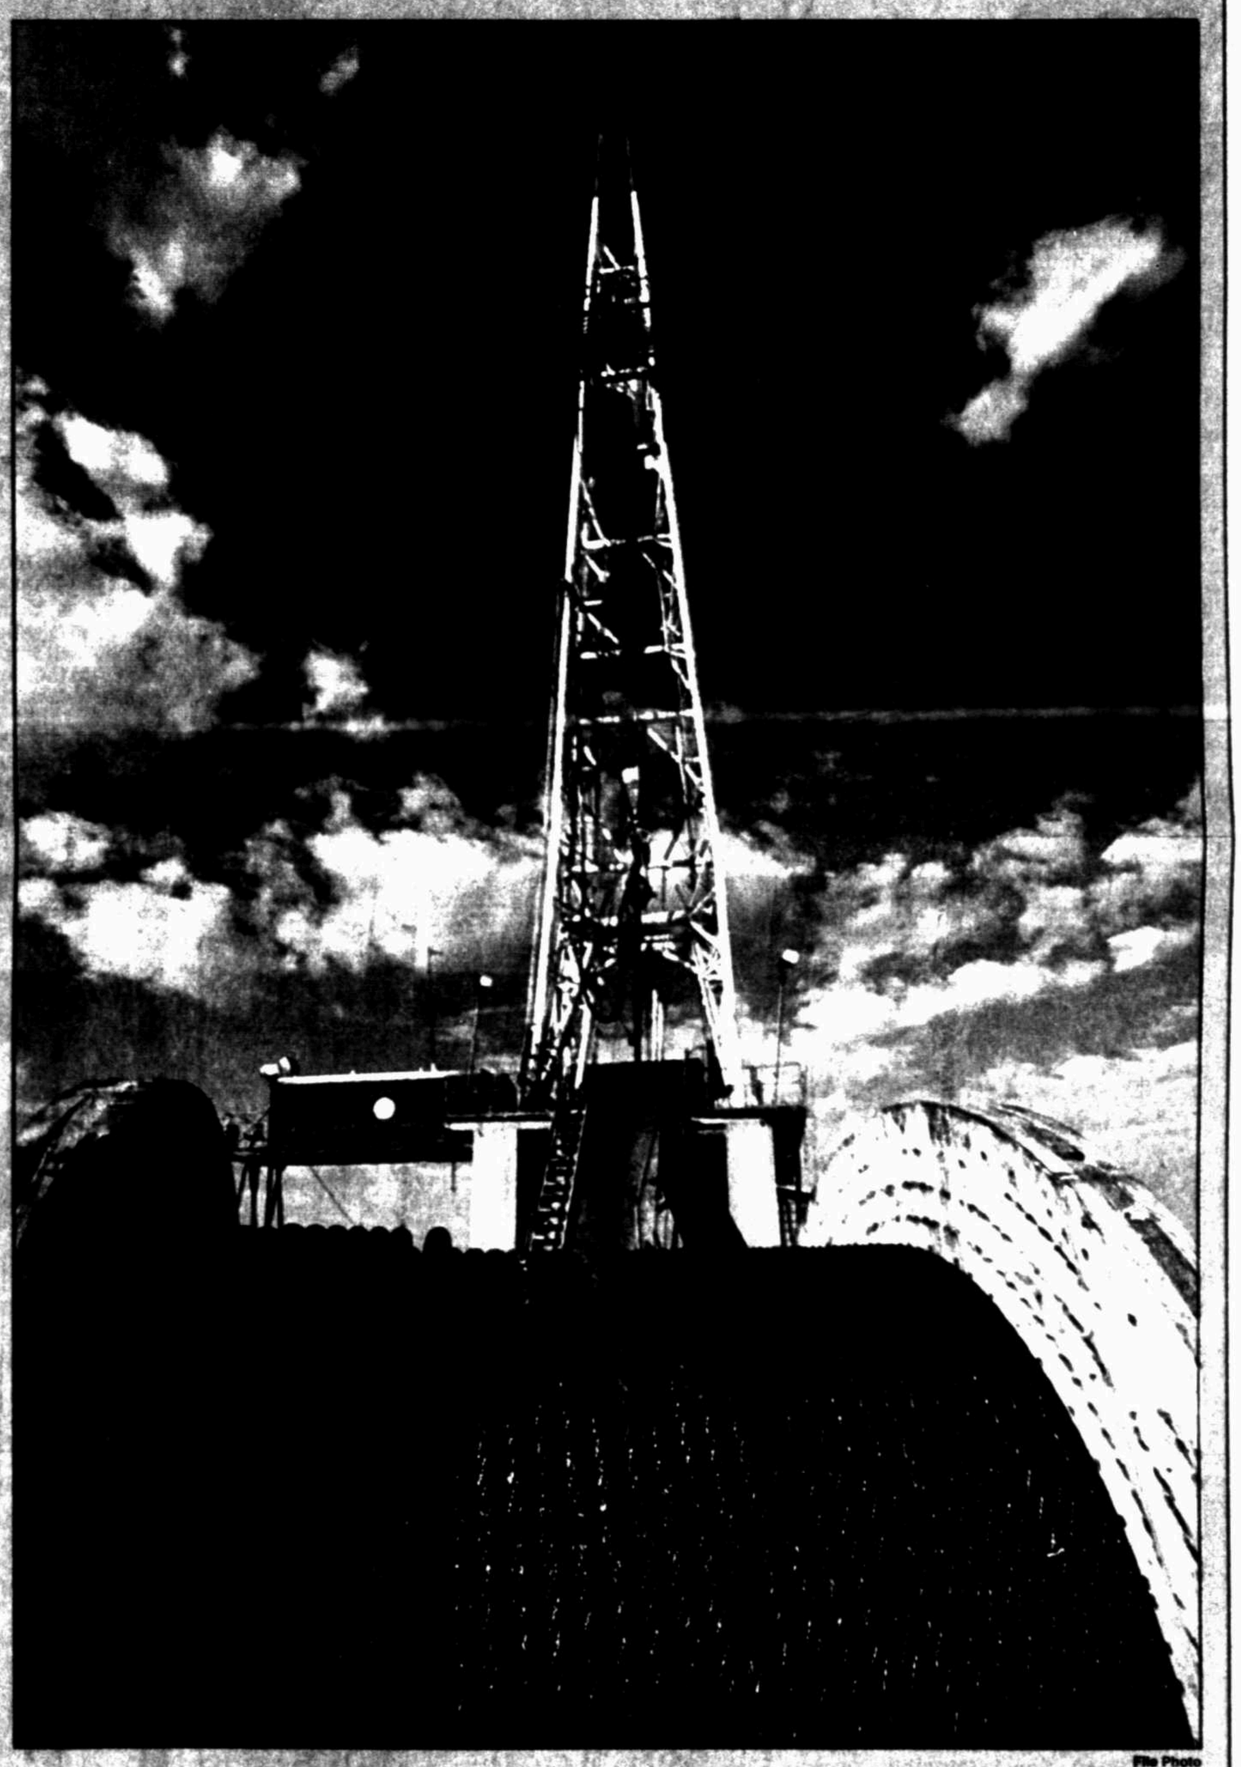

In a letter to his colleagues, Miller protested Senate Bill 158, which would provide royalty relief for producers who drill in the Gulf of Mexico's ultra-deep waters.

"This royalty relief, in addition to the extremely favorable tax treatment the oil and gas industry already enjoys would make for a very generous gift during a time of fiscal constraint," Miller wrote. "According to the Congressional Research Service, the effective tax rate for oil and gas companies is 17 percent, and independent oil and gas producers enjoy an effective tax rate of zero due to the depreciation, depletion allowance, alternative minimum tax and other tax credits."

"I saw the letter," Ms. Bode said. "I actually worked on the Senate Finance Committee and I'm a trained tax attorney. I've looked at the study on tax rates Miller talks about and the study isn't a study, it's basically one person who sat down and brainstormed about what the producers' tax return could look like," she said. "He didn't go through any actual returns. This is not a survey of the effective tax rate on either integrated producers or independents; there are no facts underlying this.

"We actually surveyed our members and we have a tax study from two years ago that says the effective rate on producers is 72.5 percent —the highest effective rate of any industry. It's not zero, it's not close to zero. And what the study Miller mentioned demonstrates is a lack of knowledge by whoever did the analysis. Under the Alternative Mini-

Tax benefits such as intangible drilling costs and the depletion allowance, which give producers incentives to drill wells, are coming under attack by members of Congress who are complaining about "corporate welfare" and want to remove all tax benefits for businesses, including IDCs and the depletion allowance.

Researchers develop "big rigs" using alternate fuels

By Bill Virgin
N.Y. Times News Service

MOUNT VERNON, Wash. — Those diesel trucks hauling trailers over the nation's interstates may not be diesel-powered in a few years.

Pushed by clean-air regulations, manufacturers such as Paccar Inc. are developing trucks powered by alternate fuels.

At Paccar's technical center here, researchers have equipped a Peterbilt 330 truck (a Class 7, slightly smaller than the big Class 8 trucks most people think of as semis) with a triple fuel system — capable of using diesel, compressed natural gas and liquid natural gas.

The truck has been operating on the two-mile oval test track behind the research center as researchers figure out what it will take to convert a truck to alternative fuels.

"As a user, we've learned the problems the customers are going to have," says James Reichman, manager of advanced technology at the center.

"It's not something where you can drop in an engine and drive off with the truck," says James Bechtold, general manager of the Paccar Technical Center. "We need to understand what the technical issues are so we can help Kenworth and Peterbilt (Paccar's truck nameplates) know what they need to design in."

Paccar is not alone in this effort. Competitor Freightliner Corp., with headquarters in Portland, Ore., has been working with parent Daimler-Benz AG (owner of Mercedes) on research into alternate fuels. It also recently announced a partnership with Chrysler to modify gasoline engines to use either compressed or liquid natural gas for medium- and light-duty trucks.

Mercedes is also a 20 percent owner of engine manufacturer Detroit Diesel, and Freightliner is working with that company on natural-gas-powered trucks. Freightliner has trucks running in tests conducted in conjunction with Detroit Diesel, Federal Express and Penske Express.

Navistar Inc. has been testing a variety of fuels, says company spokesman John McDonald, but a particularly promising one is dimethyl ether, a chemical used as an aerosol propellant. Navistar and its co-developers say diesel engines could use dimethyl ether with little modification.

Truck customers aren't clamoring for alternate-fuel trucks at the moment — but they will be. The Clean Air Act of 1990 requires that by 1998, companies that operate 10 or more trucks in 21 metropolitan areas that don't meet pollution criteria must commit to having 50 percent of their trucks powered by alternate-fuel systems.

That requirement is for Class 6 trucks and smaller, most often seen making in-city deliveries. Currently, there is no national mandate on heavy-duty trucks, but it is a reasonable bet that low-emissions laws are headed that way. Truck manufacturers want to be ready for that day.

"Right now, we're getting requests for one and two," Reichman says. "We won't see large numbers of orders until late 1996 or early 1997." Paccar plans to have factory-built units ready in 1996.

But executives say the trucking industry is in for a bigger transition than just pulling up to the pump and choosing a different fuel.

"We're sure it can be done; it's just at what cost," Freightliner President James Hebe says. "We're looking at factors of engine costs double today's. Right now, the cost differential is dramatic. And there's no infrastructure to support vehicles out there."

At Paccar, researchers looked at a number of fuels dubbed as alternatives, such as methanol, but settled on two forms of natural gas as the most promising possibilities.

Compressed-natural-gas systems use gas held at about 3,000 pounds per square inch. In liquid-natural-mum Tax, the rate can never be lower than 20 percent, even if you're losing money."

She pointed out that the energy industry is a capital-intensive industry "and to say this industry is being granted special treatment is really unfair because producers spend a tremendous amount of money investing in exploration for oil and gas and that's where tax initiatives come in, to help in that process."

Ms. Bode said such tax benefits as IDCs are the same benefits granted to other industries, but because oil and gas is part of the resource industry, the benefit is known by a different name.

"This is a tax incentive every other business deducts. Why don't they just say 'let's have an effective 100 percent tax rate and no one deduct anything,'" she said.

She said she doesn't see Miller's moves as being a real threat to the industry because he is known as the industry's harshest critic on Capitol Hill. But the IPAA, she said, will remain concerned and will respond to Miller's attack and any other similar moves with detailed information.

Buddy Sipes, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and president of Chisos Operating, said that the efforts to end tax benefits "aren't what they're billed as far as the legislation that's proposed. They're talking about taking away everything that has to do with tax incentives or anything to do with social engineering, if you will. As such, I don't believe it stands much of a chance in Washington at this time because when people see the repercussions that come from the effort, they won't be quite so eager to support it."

Dick Beveridge, president of Western Reserves Oil Co., said he thinks the movement can be held off, but he thinks members of Congress who lead such movements are inherently anti-business and should be removed from office.

In singling out the oil and gas industry, Beveridge said, "Our enemies are just relentless in wanting to dismantle and eliminate this industry and I just don't understand it."

BOTTOM LINES

PrimeEnergy posts 1994 net income

STAMFORD, Conn.—PrimeEnergy Corp. announced that it had net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1994, of $577,000, or 9 cents per share, compared to $389,000, or 6 cents per share, for 1993.

Consolidated revenues for 1994 were $17,034,000, compared to $17,225,000 for 1993. Total assets at Dec. 31, 1994, were $22,027,000, compared to $20,507,000, at Dec. 31, 1993. Net income for the quarter (unaudited) ended Dec. 31, 1994. Net income for the quarter (unaudited) ended Dec. 31, 1994, was $77,000, or 2 cents per share, on consolidated revenues of $4,378,000, compared to $380,000, or 6 cents per share on consolidated revenues of $5,330,000, for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1993.

Hugoton sees record revenues, production

WICHITA, Kan.—Hugoton Energy Corp. announced record revenues of $26.0 million for 1994, compared to $19.3 million during 1993. The company recorded a net loss of $676,000 during 1994, compared to a net loss of $2.5 million for 1993, including a $3.3 million non-recurring, non-cash compensatory stock option expense recorded in July 1993. The 1994 net loss is a result of the company's aggressive exploration program, low natural gas prices and curtailed natural gas production. The exploration program, including 3-D seismic costs, resulted in charges of $3.0 million during 1994.

Production for 1994 reached record levels of 12,491 million cubic feet (MMcf) of natural gas and 369,000 barrels (MBbls) of oil and condensate compared to 7,717 MMcf and 154 MBbls during 1993.

Edisto reports net income for 1994

HOUSTON, Texas—Edisto Resources Corp. announced net income of $7.1 million, or $.55 per share on revenues of approximately $300 million for the year ended December 31, 1994. Edisto's results for the fourth quarter reflected a net income of $.1 million or $.01 per share. Edisto's operating income for the year ended December 31, 1994 was $6.4 million.

Hawkins Energy earnings improve for 1994

TULSA, Okla.—Hawkins Energy Corp. reported net income of $1,049,000 or 8 cents per share for the year ended December 31, 1994 compared with net income of $288,000 or 3 cents per share for 1993. The 1994 amount includes a pre-tax gain of $1,880,000 resulting from the disposition of the company's Arkansas gas properties. The company reported revenues of $13,755,000 for 1994 compared with $9,038,000 for the same period in 1993.

Arch Petroleum reports net loss for 1994

FORT WORTH, Texas—Arch Petroleum Inc. announced that it was reporting a net loss of $1,830,000 ($.12 per common share) on revenues of $82.7 million for its latest fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1994. Net income for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1993 was $176,000 on revenues of $44.2 million.

Toreador Royalty posts 1994 earnings, reserves

DALLAS—Toreador Royalty announced that it earned $125,584 in 1994, equal to $0.02 per share, as compared with $333,652 or $0.07 per share in 1993, which included $95,217, equal to $0.02 per share, from the sale of securities.

Discretionary cash flow, defined as net income plus non-cash charges, was $404,653 in 1994, as compared with $566,975 in 1993, excluding the sale of securities. The major difference in net income and cash flow stemmed from an increase in costs associated with dry holes and abandonments to $125,838 in 1994 from $2,733 in the prior year.

The company's balance sheet reflects net working capital of $4.6 million and no debt.

Proved developed oil reserves were 398,000 barrels, an increase of 26 percent as compared with 315,000 barrels a year ago. Proved developed gas reserves were 2.621 billion cubic feet, up 14 percent from 2.304 billion cubic feet at the close of 1993. On a barrel of oil equivalent (BOE) basis, the company achieved a 19 percent reserve increase, from 699,000 BOE to 835,000 BOE.

RIGS: Developing new system hasn't been easy gas systems, the fuel is held in liquid form by supercooling it to minus 260 degrees Fahrenheit.

Both systems have drawbacks, but compressed natural gas is the less attractive of the two. Compressed natural gas doesn't have a high-energy density. In basic terms, that means a highway truck would need tanks and fuel weighing 4,000 pounds, compared with about 1,200 pounds for conventional diesel trucks. On Paccar's test truck, four torpedo-shaped tanks carry enough compressed natural gas to equal 20 gallons of diesel fuel. Mounted just ahead of those tanks, under the door of the cab, is a 50-gallon diesel tank, which takes perhaps a third of the volume of the gas tanks.

Using liquid natural gas eliminates some of those problems. Chilling gas to a liquid state causes such impurities as butane to drop out. And in its liquid form, the gas weighs about the same as an equivalent amount of diesel fuel, so trucks using liquid natural gas have more range. The fuel is held in what Reichman calls "a giant thermos bottle" that can keep natural gas as a liquid for up to a week without any refrigeration equipment if the truck doesn't move, and even longer if it's driven.

Hitches? Of course. Natural gas is by nature odorless; gas companies add mercaptan so people can smell a leak. But mercaptan is one of the impurities that drops out of natural gas when it's cooled. That means trucks and repair shops will need detectors to alert people of any leaks.

Fueling systems for liquid natural gas are also much more expensive. Compressed natural gas is available "anywhere you have gas," Reichman says.

"Because of the lack of fueling stations, we think the market at least in the beginning is very urban," Bechtold says. "The customer can go out and come back to the same place at night."

Whether liquid or compressed, natural-gas engines have some disadvantages. They aren't as powerful as diesel engines; in the larger versions, a natural-gas engine produces 260 to 290 horsepower, compared with 330 for a comparably sized diesel. However, engine manufacturers believe they'll be able eventually to boost the power of natural-gas-fueled trucks.

Modifying the engines also presents problems. Diesel engines don't use spark plugs; the fuel ignites under pressure. Natural-gas engines have "much more complicated spark and (fuel) injector systems," Freightliner's Hebe says.

Finally, natural gas is not the same everywhere in the country, and the differences in the mixture between methane and butane can cause preignition, or knocking.

"It's the state the diesel market must have been in in the '20s and '30s," Bechtold says. "Eventually, industry and government organizations came up with a standard fuel."

Those technical questions will get answered, but at a price that could prove eye popping to those who buy trucks.

"The engines are more expensive, and the fuel systems are a lot more expensive. Customers can expect to pay anywhere from $30,00 to $40,000 more per truck," Reichman says.

And that doesn't count what they'll have to pay to train mechanics and set up fueling stations and repair shops to deal with the new trucks.

"In the medium term, you'll not see alternate-fuel trucks at the same price as gasoline (trucks)," Hebe says. Truck customers will "elect to buy fewer trucks and make the trucks they buy do more."

But truck manufacturers don't think they can wait.

"In time, as the market matures and grows, reliability and performance will improve," Reichman says. "In the long term, the feeling is the market for diesels will become smaller due to clean-air regs. Whether we want to or not, we need to come up with a better, more reliable product."

Sonat Marketing signs 20-year supply accord

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Sonat Marketing Co., a unit of Sonat Inc. announced that it has signed a 20-year contract to supply natural gas to Brooklyn Navy Yard Cogeneration Partners, L.P.

The natural gas will help fuel a 286 megawatt cogeneration facility that will provide low-cost energy to Consolidated Edison Company of New York and to the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Natural gas deliveries to the Brooklyn Navy Yard are scheduled to begin in April 1996. The contract calls for a volume of 10,000 MMBtu of natural gas per day and a fixed price for 20 years. For the first five years of the contract, Sonat Marketing is providing innovative pricing that allows the project to take advantage of the lower of a fixed price or a market-related price. The estimated value over the full term of the contract is more than $150 million.

Sonat Marketing currently sells 1.9 billion cubic feet per day of natural gas, and is marketing agent for Sonat Exploration Company, which has total proved reserves of 1.8 trillion cubic feet of natural gas equivalent. Sonat Marketing's 1994 sales volumes rose 69 percent, with most of the increase coming from activity on natural gas pipelines that serve the Midwestern and Northeastern markets.

Sonat Marketing's parent company, Sonat Inc., is an integrated oil and natural gas company engaged in exploration and production of oil and natural gas and in natural gas transmission and marketing. It also has significant investments in the oil field services industry.

Brooklyn Navy Yard Cogeneration Partners, L.P. is a joint venture of affiliates of Mission Energy Company and York Research Corporation (Nasdaq-NNM: YORK).

MEETINGS

Computer users host Landmark representatives

The Computer Users Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:20 a.m.

The guest speakers will be Kandy Lukats and Adam Shamban with Landmark. They will demonstrate the Landmark integrated workstation and how it can take a multi-discipline team through all stages of reservoir development from prospect to abandonment. The demonstration will illustrate the ease of interpreting seismic, making maps, performing log analysis, with actual fiel data all in one common database.

Cost is $12 per person. Free mouse pads and software will be given to each attendee and there will be a drawing for a dinner for two at Outback Steakhouse.

Solar powered systems topic for instrument group

The Instrument Society of America, Permian Basin section, will meet Tuesday at Mission Dorado Country Club beginning with social hour at 6 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Michael Argo of Texaco Exploration & Production Inc. His topic will be "Design Basics of Solar Power Systems for RTUs' and will introduce the process of sizing the components of a photo voltaic power system as utilized by a Remote Terminal Unit or Programmable Logic Controller.

Argo is an electrical engineer in Texaco's Operations Technical Support Group in Midland. He has over 15 years experience in the oil and gas industry designing and installing power distribution and facility automation systems.

SPE study group hosts panel discussion

The Reservoir Study Group, Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, will meet Thursday at the American Legion hall with a buffet served beginning at 11:15 a.m.

A panel discussion on Reserve Determination will begin at noon. Members will include Claude McMichael Jr., senior engineering consultant, Mobil Exploration & Production; Lisa Floyd, vice president of technical services, Apache Corp.; and Ronald Harrell, executive vice president and director, Ryder Scott Co.

Cost is $8 per person.

Desk, Derrick Club plans monthly meeting

The Desk and Derrick Club of Midland will meet Thursday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin with social hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

The program will be "Murder on the Orientation Express" and will be presented by the club's various 1995 committee chairman.

Reservations can be made by calling 682-5600.

Mobil representative to address geophysicists

Stan Lee of Mobil E&P Technical Center will address the Permian Basin Geophysical Society Wednesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Lee's topic will be "Pseudo-wavefield Study Using Low Fold 3-D Geometry."

He will discuss the Limted 3D method whichuses one or many fixed receiver lines perpendicular to a source line to obtain a correct 2D section from a 3D geological environment.

Reservations can be made by calling 682-7356.

Midland site of legal secretaries annual meeting

Midland's Holiday Inn Country Villa will be the site of the Texas Association of Legal Secretaries' 40th annual meeting and educational conference May 18-21 from 8 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. each day.

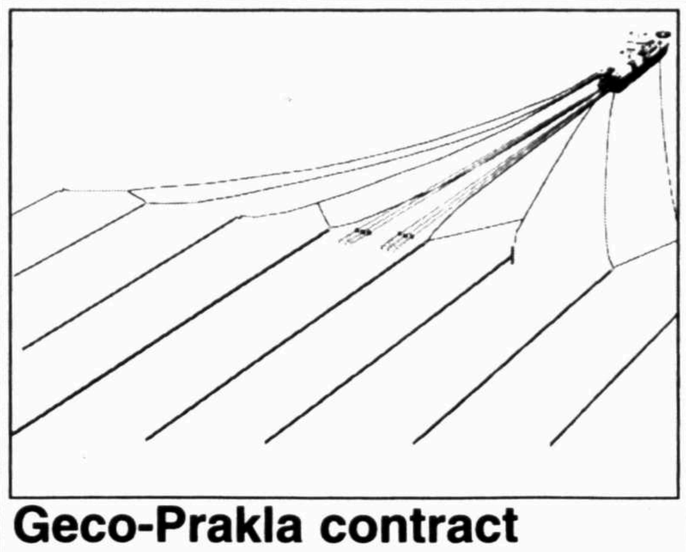

Among the speakers will be Mary Lou Cassidy and Carol Reiner of Midland, who will speak on "A Primer for Oil and Gas" on May 19. Other speakers will include Robert C. Giles, speaking on "DNA Testing." Steven C. Kiser on "The Americans With Disabilities Act" and William C. Morrow on "Mediation."

Home-based businesses group to meet

The first organizational meeting of the Midland-Odessa chapter, Texas Home-Based Business Association will be Monday at the Ector County Library, 321 W. 5th, in the Rotary Room, beginning at 7 p.m.

An overview of the newly formed association will be presented by the president and founder of the association, Steve Campbell.

Membership is open to individuals in business start-ups, those already successfully operating a home-based business and non-home-based businesses supporting home businesses. Information is available by calling 367-1528.

Geco-Prakla contract

Geco-Prakla has been named preferred contractor by 22 oil companies for data acquisition in the West of Shetlands, U.K. sector, and has been awarded 3D marine seismic acquisition contracts covering some 3,729 square miles. The contracts represent the vast majority of the 1995 3D seismic work in the West of Shetlands area. The work will be carried out by two newly upgraded seismic vessels , such as the one shown above, working on separate projects, each with eight long streamers, wide-tow configuration and two sources.

Convest Energy agrees to acquire Edisto unit

HOUSTON —Edisto Resources Corp. and Convest Energy Corp. jointly announced that they have signed a purchase agreement providing for Convest to purchase the stock of Edisto's oil and gas exploration and production subsidiary, Edisto Exploration & Production Company ("Edisto E&P"). The consideration payable to Edisto will be $10,000 in cash and 6,185,400 shares of newly issued Convest Common Stock. These newly issued shares, combined with Edisto's existing 31 percent interest in Convest, would give Edisto approximately 72 percent of the outstanding Common Stock of Convest. The parties had previously announced in November 1994 that they were negotiating the terms of this transaction.

If the proposed transaction in consummated, Edisto's nominees will constitute a majority of Convest's Board of Directors. Also, upon closing of the transaction, Michael Y. McGovern will become the chairman and chief executive officer of Convest and Richard T. Howell will be the president and chief operating officer.

Under the terms of the purchase agreement, the proposed transaction is subject to, among other things, approval of Convest's shareholders and the receipt of appropriate fairness opinions by both parties. Convest filed today, with the Securities and Exchange Commission, its preliminary proxy statement for the shareholder meeting to approve this transaction. The parties expect this transaction to close sometime in June 1995.

Maynard Oil acquires area wells

DALLAS (SWN) —Maynard Oil Company today announced that it successfully completed an acquisition of producing oil and gas properties from a large independent oil company. Maynard purchased an interest in 212 producing wells in eight counties in West Texas. This $10.5 million acquisition is expected to add approximately 570 net barrels of oil and 2,600 net mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas to the company's daily production. The funds to acquire these properties were provided by $1 million of the company's cash resources and $9.5 million in bank financing.

Maynard Oil Company is engaged in exploration, development and production of oil and natural gas in the United States. The company's common stock is traded over the counter under the NASDAQ Symbol MOIL.

Cross Timbers closes two acquisitions

FORT WORTH, Texas (SWN) — Cross Timbers Oil Co. said that it has closed two previously announced acquisitions for a combined purchase price of $24 million. Estimated proved reserves attributable to the acquisitions total 28.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 1.2 million barrels of oil. Current combined production from the acquisitions averages approximately 7 million cubic feet of natural gas per day and 400 barrels of oil.

On March 29, 1995, Cross Timbers purchased producing oil and gas properties from Apache Corporation for $20 million. The acquired interests consist of primarily operated, working interests in the Hugoton and Damme Fields of southwestern Kansas, the Carthage Field in the Oklahoma Panhandle and the Hugoton and Panhandle Hutchison Fields in Texas. Cross Timbers' internal engineers estimate proved reserves as of April 1 to be 24.6 billion cubic feet of gas and 1.1 million barrels of crude oil and condensate.

On March 23, 1995, Cross Timbers acquired producing working and overriding royalty interests in northwestern Oklahoma from Meridian Oil, and certain of its affiliates for $4 million. Cross Timbers engineers estimate proved reserves to total 4.2 billion cubic feet of gas and 61,000 barrels of oil and condensate as of the effective date, Oct. 1, 1994. In addition, Cross Timbers receives a gas balancing position from Meridian estimated to be worth $600,000.

Cross Timbers Oil Co. is engaged in the acquisition, exploitation and development of quality, long-lived producing oil and gas properties. The firm, whose predecessor companies were established in 1986, completed its initial public offering in May 1993 and is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

BRIEFS

Pride Petroleum acquires rigs in Argentina

HOUSTON—Pride Petroleum Services, Inc. announced that it has executed a letter of intent to acquire DI Argentina, S.A., a subsidiary of DI Industries, Inc. of Houston, Texas. The purchase includes seven land drilling rigs which are operating in Argentina and other related oilfield assets. Revenues from the operations to be acquired are estimated to be approximately $20 million over the next 12 months. The purchase price, which was not disclosed, is to be effected through the payment of cash and a note payable.

Scana, Fina agree to explore Louisiana tract

COLUMBIA, S.C.—SCANA Petroleum Resources, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of SCANA Corp., and Fina Oil and Chemical Company have entered into a joint exploration and development agreement providing for the exclusive oil and gas development rights on approximately 183,000 acres of onshore lands owned by Fina in Terrebonne and LaFourche Parishes in southern Louisiana.

The agreement calls for SPR and Fina to begin an extensive 3-D seismic acquisition program on the property beginning this summer and continuing over the next several years. Fina will be the operator of the multi-million dollar seismic program which will be financed and owned on a 50-50 basis between the companies.

According to Max Earwood, president of SPR, the joint agreement, which has a minimum term of five years, could result in the drilling of numerous exploratory oil and gas wells and related development wells. SPR's participation in the seismic and drilling activity will be financed largely with internal cash flows from the existing SPR business.

The first exploration well to be drilled by SPR and Fina will commence in April. The Fina Fee No. 1 well will be drilled to approximately 18,000 feet in northern Terrebonne Parish. Based upon results, additional development drilling would follow.

Amerada Hess reports well completions

NEW YORK—Amerada Hess Corp. announced the drilling of successful wells on Garden Banks Block 215 and Garden Banks Block 259 offshore Louisiana in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Garden Banks Block 215 Well No. 2 discovered 170 feet of net oil pay in two reservoir sands in a previously untested fault block approximately two miles north of a discovery announced earlier by Amerada Hess on Garden Banks Block 260. The Garden Banks Block 259 Well No. 2 was drilled as a sidetrack from the Garden Banks Block 215 Well No. 2 and encountered 115 feet of net oil pay in the same reservoir sands. A total of six successful exploration wells have been drilled by Amerada Hess in this area. Amerada Hess is currently drilling a well on Garden Banks Block 216 to confirm the areal extent of this most recent reserve addition.

Pride buys Gulf of Mexico coiled tubing fleet

HOUSTON—Pride Petroleum Services, Inc. announced that it has executed a letter of intent to acquire the assets of Reeled Tubing, Inc. of Harvey, La. Reeled Tubing operates 10 coiled tubing and six nitrogen injection units, principally in the Gulf of Mexico. The business has annual revenues of approximately $15 million. The acquisition will be effected through the issuance of Pride common stock.

Dresser-Rand buys stake in Paragon Engineering

CORNING, N.Y.—Dresser-Rand Company announced that it has acquired a 60 percent interest in Paragon Engineering Services Incorporated, based in Houston, Texas. Terms were not disclosed.

Paragon provides quality engineering services to the oil and gas industry and has a broad range of experience involving project development and management for production facilities, offshore platforms, gas compression, pipelines, cogeneration and process safety management. The company is active both onshore and offshore in North America, South America, Asia, Africa, the Middle East, and in Russia and other countries of the former Soviet Union.

Arco Pipe Line makes organizational changes

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Management changes within ARCO Pipe Line Co. (APL) reflecting recent announcements concerning the Seaway Pipeline Co. joint venture were announced by Mark Hazelwood, senior vice president of Pipeline Operations for ARCO Transportation Co. (ATC).

Four Business Unit managers, all vice presidents of APL, will now report to Hazelwood.

■ Karen K. Caldwell will lead APL's mid-continent Business Unit with responsibility for the terminalling and services provided by APL at its trading hubs in Cushing, Okla., and Midland, Texas, as well as APL's wholly owned and joint venture crude pipeline systems in the Mid-Continent. Caldwell was also recently named president of ARCO Seaway Inc., an ARCO subsidiary, following formation of the Seaway Pipeline Co. partnership with Phillips Petroleum Co. Caldwell has been with ARCO for 15 years. For the past three years, she has been Marketing, Scheduling and Business Development Manager for APL's Mid-Continent Business Unit.

■ Steven E. Beck, previously manager of APL's Crude Oil Pipeline Business Unit, will be responsible for Business Development. Beck's function will emphasize asset and volume-related enhancements to APL's business in the United States and overseas. He is a 23-year ARCO veteran.

■ Daniel C. Reyneveld will be in charge of APL's West Coast Business Unit which includes all assets previously included in Four Corners Pipe Line Co., which was merged with APL at the end of last year. Included in this business unit are ARCO Terminal Services Corp. (ATSC), ARCO Western Pipe Line Co. and the West Coast common crude oil business. Reyneveld, a 12-year ARCO veteran, had previously been the ATSC Business Unit Manager.

■ Richard J. Desiderio will retain responsibility for APL's Petrochemical Pipelines Business Unit. Desiderio has managed this business for APL for the past three years. Prior to joining APL, he spent 22 years with ARCO Chemical Co., holding positions of increasing responsibility in the engineering, manufacturing and commercial departments.

Others reporting directly to Hazelwood from APL are: Larry E. Shakley, vice president of Operations; John C. Havard, vice president of Engineering and Technical Services; and Susan E. Alberti, vice president of Finance, Planning and Control.

Beck, Caldwell, Desiderio, Shakley and Alberti are based in Houston. Reyneveld and Havard in Long Beach.

Parallel completes discovery well

MIDLAND — Parallel Petroleum Corp. announced the completion of a Yegua gas sand discovery well, the Cox & Perkins Mollnar No. 1, located in Wharton County, Texas, onshore the Texas Gulf Coast, utilizing data developed by three-dimensional seismic imaging.

A four-point test was conducted using choke sizes ranging from 6/64 to 9/64 inches. The open flow potential of the well was calculated to be 22.5 million cubic feet of natural gas and 663 barrels of condensate per day. Flowing tubing pressures ranged from 5,885 to 6,066 pounds per square inch. The production is from perforations made selectively in a 73-foot interval from 9,159 to 9,232 feet in the Downdip Expanded Yegua sand. The operator's intent is to produce the well at a daily sales rate of approximately 5 million cubic feet of gas per day plus associated condensate estimated at approximately 150 barrels per day. Parallel owns a 20.0 percent working interest and a 15.0 percent net revenue interest in the Mollnar No. 1 well.

Privately held Cox & Perkins Exploration, Inc., Houston, is the operator.

Chevron celebrates second year of operating Tengiz field in Kazakhstan

SAN FRANCISCO — The Republic of Kazakhstan and Chevron Corp. celebrated the second anniversary of Tengizchevroil (TCO), their joint venture to produce and sell oil from the giant Tengiz oil field.

The project, the largest and one of the best known joint ventures in the former Soviet Union, is designed to produce and export for hard currency some 6- to 9-billion barrels of oil from the Tengiz field.

The first stage of the $20-billion, 40-year project is completed, and now has a processing capacity of 85,000 barrels per day (4 million tons per year), and the ability on short notice to expand to 130,000 bpd (6 million tons per year).

The anniversary was observed in a ceremony at the Tengiz field on the northeastern Caspian Sea coast, attended by Kazak leaders, including the Republic of Kazakhstan's Oil Minister, Nurlan Balgimbaev, and Chevron Vice Chairman Dennis Bonney.

To mark the anniversary, Tengizchevroil formally began operation of its newly constructed, $102 million demercaptanization plant to remove sulfur compounds from Tengiz crude oil prior to pipeline shipment.

"Completion of this plant means that TCO is providing low mercaptan crude oil, which is required for shipment through the Russian pipeline system," said Morley J. Dupre, TCO general director.

Dupre outlined other highlights of the joint venture's significant accomplishments during its first two years:

Capital projects — Completed construction of a new crude oil processing plant that has increased processing capacity to more than 85,000 bpd (4 million tons per year).

Environment — Completed environmental baseline, air quality and groundwater quality studies; established a sanitary landfill and a recovery center for recycling; reduced water discharge by improving water effluent plant operations.

Safety — Trained all supervisors and emergency response groups; implemented a wellhead preventive maintenance program on 59 wells; purchased new fire fighting trucks and emergency response vehicles.

Employees — Upgraded medical care and general standard of living; provided technical, operational, and safety training to more than 2,500 employees; implemented educational assistance and scholarship programs.

Community — Donated time, medical equipment and pharmaceutical supplies to local clinics, and laboratory equipment and building supplies to local schools and institutes; provided police agencies with vehicles; assisted in local road and bridge repairs.

Local business development — Utilized local companies and institutes to perform technical laboratory analysis and research; provided skills training to employees of local companies; utilized 49 local businesses in 1994, up from 33 in 1993.

Technology — Installed central computer capability for financial and operational software and 800 personal computers on a fiber-optic computer network linking TCO with worldwide networks; brought in state-of-the-art technology for upgrading operations.

Exports — Reduced light mercaptans in crude oil from 350 to less than 5 parts per million; established a joint task force with Kazakhstan to study transportation alternatives; sold all crude oil that TCO was permitted to export; established pipeline contracts with 10 pipeline/terminal companies.

In addition, projects were completed in the Atyrau Oblast (regional area). This five-year, $50 million social program managed by TCO with the involvement of Oblast administration officials has spent more than $21 million to date on upgrading medical, heating and potable water and housing facilities. Work is progressing on further upgrades to water treatment and distribution systems and medical facilities and services.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Wolfcamp discovery pumps 27 barrels crude

Staff Reports

BROWNING OIL CO. INC. has completed a modest Wolfcamp discovery in Yoakum County, 7.5 miles west of Plains.

On potential test, the No. 1 Invincible pumped 27 barrels of 40.9 gravity crude, 3 Mcfd and two barrels of water from perforations 9,476 to 9,560 ft. No treatment was reported.

Scheduled as an 11,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 9,742 ft. and plugged back to 9,565 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,650 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 9,476 ft. on ground elevation of 3,785 ft.

Location is 2,451 ft. from north and 1,696 ft. from east lines of Section 400, Block D, J.H. Gibson survey, Abst. 1605.

Dawson field gains second producer

A second producer has been completed in the Sean Andrew (Pennsylvanian) field of Dawson County, a north offset to the field opener, 15.9 miles northwest of Lamesa.

PATRICK PETROLEUM CORP. finaled the No. 1 Chevron Patrick "122" to flow 206 barrels of 45.4 gravity crude, 72 Mcfd and 25 barrels of water on a 22/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 103 psi. The well flowed from Pennsylvanian perforations 8,256 to 8,306 ft.

Total depth was 8,306 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,256 ft.

Location is 233 ft. from south and 930 ft. from east lines of Section 122, Block M, EL&RR survey, Abst. 599.

The Sean Andrew (Pennsylvanian) field was opened in October 1994 with completion of Hilllin-Simon/Prime Exploration's No. 1 Patrick Chevron "123" to flow 643 barrels of 43 gravity crude and 213 Mcfd on a 28/64 inch choke from open hole interval 8,187 to 8,329 ft.

Manano finals third well in Midland field

MANZANO OIL CORP. has added a third producer to the Parks South (Pennsylvanian) field of Midland County, a west-southwest extension to the field opener, 15.5 miles south of Midland.

On potential test, the No. 2 Windham "SV" flowed 300 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 390 Mcfd on a 12/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1200 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,213 to 10,255 ft.

Permitted as an 11,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,113 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 10,308 ft.

Location is 2,425 ft. from north and 1,126 ft. from west lines of Section 32, block 40, T-3-S, T&P survey, Abst. 1297.

The Parks South (Pennsylvanian) field was opened in June 1994 by Manzano's No. 1 Windham "SV," tested to flow 325 barrels of crude and 422 Mcfd on a 14/64 inch choke from perforations 10,164 to 10,228 ft.

Tannehill extended in King County field

Tannehill production has been extended south and west in the Croton Breaks field of King County, 11 miles southeast of Guthrie.

POLK PETROLEUM INC. tested the No. 1 Niblo "48" to pump 13 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 13 barrels of water from Tannehill Sandstone perforations 3,022 to 3,026 ft.

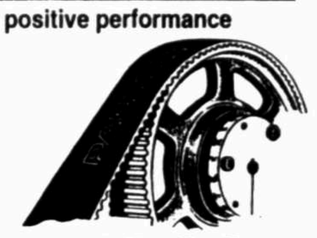

Total depth was 3,026 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,022 ft.

Location is 638 ft. from south and 2,641 ft. from west lines of Section 48, Block F, H&TC survey.

Exxon buys stake in Azerbaijan

IRVING, Texas—Exxon Corp. announced that its affiliate, Exxon Azerbaijan Limited, has entered into an agreement with the State Oil Company of the Republic of Azerbaijan (SOCAR) to participate in the development of the Azeri and Chirag fields, as well as the deep water portion of the Guneshli field in the Azerbaijan sector of the Caspian Sea.

Under the terms of the agreement, Exxon Azerbaijan Ltd. will acquire a 5 percent participating interest from SOCAR under a production sharing agreement executed by SOCAR and certain parties in September 1994. In addition, Exxon Azerbaijan has agreed to assist SOCAR with the financing of a portion of SOCAR's interest in these projects. These new arrangements will become effective following their ratification by the Government of Azerbaijan and receipt of necessary approvals from the parties to the September 1994 agreement to SOCAR's assignment of interest to Exxon.

The fields involved contain estimated oil reserves of about 4.0 billion barrels with an estimated development cost of $7.5 billion. Exxon's share of the reserves will be about 200 million barrels and first production from the project could begin as early as 1996.

Louisiana firm reports joint venture

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — J. Ray McDermott, an offshore marine construction company, has agreed to a joint venture with a French counterpart to service petroleum projects in the Far East, the Mediterranean Sea and Africa.

The agreement, with EPTM S.A., a subsidiary of GTM-Entrepose S.A., is expected to be final this summer.

Under the agreement, J. Ray McDermott also would have a minority interest in a new ETPM subsidiary that would be a partner in the joint venture. Also, ETPM would have a minority interest in a new McDermott subsea construction company.

The McDermott-ETPM venture currently operates in the Middle East, West Africa and the North Sea.

From the weather to the water to the people who live here, Texas is a different kind of place.

Ask anyone and they'll tell you Texas and Texans are unique. There are some who will even go so far as to say the air changes for the better as soon as you cross the state line into Texas. That may or may not be fact, but then Texans have been known to take the truth and dress it up a bit.

In fact, so good are Texans at fancying up dull stories that even when they are telling the exact, to-the-letter truth, they are not always believed.

Jack Maguire, in his book, "Talk of Texas," gathered snippets of little-known Texas facts that he claimed were absolutely true. "Not a single name, date or place has been changed to protect the innocent," he wrote.

For instance, most Texans would have a hard time imagining their beloved state without its equally beloved shrine to Texas independence, the Alamo. Maguire wrote, the Alamo, a site that today is regarded as almost sacred and which certainly represents Texans' refusal to be bossed around by anybody, "was both a wholesale grocery and a liquor store during the 69 years it took the Legislature to recognize it as a shrine." After the fall of the Alamo in 1836, its ownership was up in the air until 1847, when the Army recognized the property as belonging to the Catholic Church, but went ahead and established a quartermaster post there anyway. Soldiers were stationed at the Alamo until 1879, Maguire continued, until the Catholic Church sold it to a businessman who established a wholesale grocery store in what is now Texas' most famous building. After his death, the location housed a liquor store. "Finally, in 1905, it was purchased by Clara Driscoll and the Daughters of the Republic of Texas to ensure its becoming a shrine." Which it remains to this day.

Texas' military history doesn't end with the Alamo, however. Maguire wrote that many famous soldiers served at Old Fort Clark at Brackettville. "Between 1852, when it was founded, and 1946, when it was deactivated ... the fort's officer roster read like an Army 'Who's Who.' " Some of the famous men who served there were Gen. U.S. Grant, who later became President Grant; Gen. Phil Sheridan; and Gen. George Patton, who served as post commander in 1938. Also, "Fort Clark was the last command that Gen. Jonathan Wainwright had before he was sent to the Philippines and a place in history in World War II," Maguire concluded.

Other military men who served in Texas before they became famous include Zachary Taylor and Franklin Pierce, who also became U.S. presidents; Jefferson Davis, first and only president of the Confederacy; and Civil War Generals Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson, Albert Sidney Johnston, Joseph E.A. Johnston and Joe Hooker, he wrote.

Even though bravery is a character trait Texans are proud of, not all brave Texans served in the military. Some had more colorful occupations. A young woman named Adah Menken, from Nacogdoches, is said to have introduced the art of strip tease to the stage in 1860, Maguire wrote. "As a young girl, she ran away with an actor in a touring troupe and launched a career that was to make her world-famous as the first actress to perform 'in the nude.'

"The play was 'Mazeppa' and it opened on Broadway June 3, 1860. Cast in the title role, Adah was called upon to strip to apparent nudity and ride a horse off the stage. Actually, she wore skin-colored tights from neck to ankles, but the deception was so good that the play became a great hit."

Another colorful Texan who was a performer at heart was Judge R.E. B. Baylor, according to Maguire. "An ordained Baptist minister, he always carried a Bible, a law book and a fiddle in his buckboard. He liked to announce his arrival in town with a rousing concert, followed

Reception honors special Midlanders

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Midlanders turned out in large numbers recently to pay tribute to Mrs. Novadean Hogan and her husband, the late Fred Hogan, and Lissa and Cy Wagner, at a reception at the Museum of the Southwest.

McKnight-Harrison

The Hogans donated 17 paintings by Santa Fe artists and the Taos Society of Artists to the museum a number of years ago. These paintings form the core of a collection of works donated by the couple over the years. The Wagners' generosity made possible the new Hogan Gallery in the south wing of the museum.

Denna (Mrs. Allen) McGuire, president of the museum's Board of Trustees, unveiled a plaque, signifying the Hogan Gallery.

Held in the Turner and Thomas Galleries, the reception featured music by Midland High School strings players, Victor Leggett, Daryl Lewis, Deric Lewis, Stephanie Burden and Sarah McCullough and a cocktail buffet, with delicious hors d'oeuvres catered by Murray and the Frenchman. Ron Huse designed a spectacular ceiling high floral centerpiece, with greenery cascading to the floor over the serving tables.

Mrs. Hogan's grandchildren, former Midlander Shelley Smith of Santa Fe and Chris Finseth of Midland were present for the dedication. Among others seen in the throng of almost 400 were Dottie and Earle Craig, Betty and Clem George, Rhonda and Lynn Durham Jr., Ben Hoffacker, Janet and Deane Stoltz, Karen and Spencer Beal, Joanie Holt, Andrea and Richard Catania, Helen and Stan Bellows, Betty Lloyd Ross and Elizabeth Locker.

HELEN ANGELO made her appearance into the world on March 30, 1895. One hundred years later to the day, she was honored with a mass and reception to mark her century of living.

Father Fred Nawarskas celebrated the mass at St. Ann's Catholic Church. A reception followed at the home of Mrs. Angelo's son and daughter-in-law, Ernest Jr. and Penny Angelo.

With family coming in from around the country, festivities continued over the weekend. A family picnic was held on April 1, and guests availed themselves of local attractions, including our outstanding museums.

A native of West Virginia, Mrs. Angelo moved to Midland over 20 years ago from Covington, La., after her husband's death. The late Ernest Angelo taught horticulture at the University of West Virginia and the University of Minnesota before moving to Louisiana to help establish the tung oil industry.

A homemaker throughout her adult life, the honoree continues to live in her own home. She enjoys reading, knitting and crocheting and remains interested in current events.

Mrs. Angelo is the mother of four children, two of whom are deceased; 10 grandchildren, and 27 great-grandchildren. Among family members here for the occasion were her daughter and son-in-law, Katy and James Evans of Troy, Mich.; and Ernie and Penny's children, Helen (Mrs. Frank) Kisner of Midland, Patricia Angelo of Fort Worth, Ernest and Margo Angelo of Wilmington, Del., and Clifford Angelo, a student at the University of Texas-Austin.

MIDLAND COUNTRY CLUB was the setting for a fun party last weekend to honor an April bride and groom-to-be.

Heath Pennell and his fiancee, Jennifer Cochran, both of Lubbock, were feted with an "Around the Clock" shower. A jukebox n the club's Hideaway provided background music, as guests enjoyed a hamburger supper at tables decorated with hurricane globes, candles and ivy.

Special guests included the groom's parents, Bennie and Bob Bledsoe of Midland, and his cousins, Jay and Mary Callaway, and Jennifer's parents, Carolyn and Ed McGee, all of Lubbock.

Host couples were former Midlanders Marcie and Mike Bray of Dallas, Ann and Dick Dunbar, Karissa and David Beldsoe, Sue and Dan Secker, Karen and Tim Thompson, Schatzie and Charles Tighe, Nickie and Les Oppermann, Gladys and Scott Hickman, Sherry and Jerry Hewett, Betty and Bill Gilmore and Jane and Gary Garlitz.

Heath and Jennifer will be married April 29 in Lubbock.

THE MINUET CLUB held its spring dance recently at the Petroleum Club.

Masterpeace of Lubbock provided the music for the dancing and listening pleasure of the crowd of 150. A late night breakfast was served.

Guests were greeted in the upper foyer by club president Joann (Mrs. John) Foster, president-elect Betty (Mrs. Bill) Sumner and other members of the board.

Among those seen at the event were Pat and Brent Blonkvist, Betty and Don Ewan, Sally and Bill Reeder, Judy and Don Floyd, Linda and Rodney Satterwhite and Donnette and Ron Schwisow.

DID YOU HAPPEN to watch the TV movie, "Friends at Last," Sunday evening April 2? We can say we knew its star, Kathleen Turner, "when." Kathleen, or Kathy as she was known then, spent the summer of 1973 in Midland and appeared in the Summer Mummers 25th anniversary production, "Plotting on the Planet," as the villainess.

Her mother, Pat Turner, now of Springfield, Mo., was director of the Midland Girl Scouts at that time. Kathleen always knew she was going to succeed in show business, but we hear her mother suggested she get her teacher's certificate to fall back on, "just in case."

Kathleen, who made her TV movie debut last week, has starred in a number of movies on the Big Screen, including "Serial Mom," "War of the Roses," "Peggy Sue Got Married," "Romancing the Stone" and "Jewel of the Nile."

TEXAS: Tall tales come from big state

by a fiery sermon. Once these preliminaries were over, he was ready to hold court."

Some Texas stories involve characters so colorful and tales so tall you almost have to believe them. Maguire wrote that legend has it that John Wilkes Booth did not die after the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, but instead escaped to — where else? — Texas, where he lived as "one John St. Helen (who strongly resembled photos of Booth)." Seems this mysterious St. Helen, who worked as a saloon keeper in Granbury, suddenly took sick, and, believing himself to be dying, asked to see a priest. "St. Helen told them (the priest and saloon owner F.J. Gordon) that he really was John Wilkes Booth and directed Gordon to a Granbury house where he claimed to have hidden the gun with which he shot Lincoln.

"Gordon found the gun and offered it to U.S. authorities, but was told that the case was closed. Meanwhile, St. Helen recovered and moved from Granbury to Glen Rose, in Somervell County."

EVIDENTLY ST. Helen found his niche as a saloon keeper, as he had a reputation as a heavy drinker, and while in his cups "he delighted in reciting long passages from Shakespeare... Booth, of course, was a Shakespearean actor," Maguire continued.

"During his career, Booth had suffered a slight forehead wound in a big of sword play on stage and had crushed his thumb while moving stage sets. In escaping from Ford's Theater after the assassination, he had fractured a shin bone.

"When St. Helen died in 1903, his body was given a careful examination by physicians. The body revealed a nicked eyebrow, a crushed thumb bone and a shin fracture!" Maguire wrote.

As a side note, St. Helen was not the only interesting person to call Granbury home. According to Linda Johnson and Sally Ross, in their book, "Historic Texas Hotels and Country Inns," Carrie Nation, who became so violent in her crusade against alcoholic beverages that she took to breaking up saloons with a hatchet, "came to Granbury in 1905. By the time she left in 1906, the saloons were gone." Also, they wrote, "Billy the Kid studied the violin as a boy in Granbury, and Belle Starr is said to have hid out once near here. Elizabeth Crockett, widow of Davy, moved to Granbury and is buried in the nearby Acton cemetery."

In "The Book of Texas Lists!!" which was edited by Anne Dingus and contributed to by such notable Texans as Liz Smith and Roger Staubach, the Granbury grave site of Elizabeth Crockett is listed as Acton State Park, located in Hood County, which "is a mere 0.006 acre. It is the site of the cemetery plot of Davy Crockett's second wife, Elizabeth Patterson Crockett, who came to Texas 18 years after her husband died in the Alamo."

Another story involving both cemeteries and Granbury — not to mention a notorious outlaw — is in Johnson and Ross's book. The story goes that "Jesse James was buried in the Granbury cemetery on Aug. 18, 1951," they wrote. "The coroner who examined him said that he had numerous bullet wound scars, and several of James' relatives were at the funeral to whisper their goodbyes. Who knows?"

Texas must be the favorite grave site for the infamously famous. Billy the Kid is rumored to have lived to a ripe old age and died in Hico in the early 1950s.

TEXAS LORE also is rich in colorful characters who made their mark here while still living. "The Book of Texas Lists" names several, including C.W. Post, developer of Post Toasties and the drink, Postum, who "turned to developing a model city with ideal health care. The city of Post, in what is now Garza County, had everything from a sanatorium to a hotel. Post laid the town out in perfectly identical blocks an built a large house on each for every one of his 1200 colonists. In his own little kingdom he was free to indulge in his favorite hobby, experimentation. He imported strange new stains of crops, tested (strange) machinery designs and once tried to induce rain by exploding dynamite in his colonists' fields."

PERHAPS THE most colorful character to live in this century was Texan Howard Hughes. "The Book of Texas Lists" noted that "Howard Hughes would have been called crazy if he hadn't been so rich. He owned and ran Hughes Tool and Hughes Aircraft and, at various times, three airlines, a film company and a multitude of Las Vegas casinos and hotels." He also produced movies and set flying records, but toward the end of his life, he was most famous for being a recluse. "He lived alone in a Las Vegas penthouse and in various other secret places in the world and what he did for the rest of his life is a mystery; supposedly he spent all his time watching movies, taking drugs and being finicky about his food," the book went on. His death in 1976 caused more of an uproar than his life did. "After his funeral a profusion of wills sprang up and a fierce contest began over what state — Nevada or Texas — would get to clam him as its legal resident and collect millions in inheritance taxes," the book said.

In spite of all his wealth and fame, probably few people really knew Hughes. However, another colorful Texan, Hondo Crouch, was probably known and loved by multitudes. The book lists Crouch as "one of Texas' best-loved characters" who "owned, ran and popularized the little hamlet of Luckenbach," which, in itself, was made famous musically by two other Texans, Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings.

"Hondo was a man of many talents," the book went on. "Besides being sheriff, chief of police and mayor of the town, he was a philosopher, journalist (pen name: Peter Cedarstacker), whittler, storyteller, actor and prankster (he once blew up an outhouse during a theater performance). ... Hondos' trademarks were his red bandana, battered pickup truck and grizzled beard. He died in 1976." And real Texans everywhere mourned his passing. He was what Texans like to call a "good ol' boy." The state is famous for them.

And what good are good ol' boys if they don't have memorable names — such as Hondo Crouch — or at least great nicknames? "The Book of Texas Lists" suggests some of the more memorable: Oail "Bum" Phillips, former coach of the Houston Oilers (yes, it's really Oail); Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, famous lawyer; John Nance "Cactus Jack" Garner, two-term vice president under Franklin D. Roosevelt; and Erastus "Deaf" Smith, from early Texas history.

In fact, the very name of the state has been used as a colorful name. The book lists famous people named Tex, including Tex Ritter, country singer; Tex Schramm, former president of the Dallas Cowboys; and Joe Tex, singer. Even Hollywood, in California, makes use of the name. Ever noticed how many characters from various movies are named Tex? Even "Forrest Gump," this year's Oscar winner for Best Picture, has one.

EVEN BIGGER than Hollywood for Texans, though, is sports. Witness the world-wide fame of such Texas teams as the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers in football, Houston Astros and Texas Rangers in baseball, and Houston Rockets and San Antonio Spurs in basketball. And of course, the state's college teams are legendary. And perhaps only in Texas could there be a magazine devoted entirely to high school football.

But team sports aren't the only ones Texans are addicted to. In "Talk of Texas," Maguire wrote that "Galveston had the first golf course and country club in the state. It was opened to members in 1848." That's only 12 years after the Alamo and three years after statehood.

Texans like to claim that their state is unique — the sky is bluer, the horses (and pickups) faster, the men are taller (and so are the tales) and the women prettier (and with bigger hair) than any other place. And they are probably right.

Just ask a Texan.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Beautiful landscapes require time, money, effort

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Inside our homes, decorating themes are chosen, colors blended and textures selected, all to delight the eye, provide comfort and create a comfortable place to live. This coordination shouldn't stop with the inside, but should continue to the outdoor living spaces as well. Exterior decorating is just as important as interior decorating.

Benge-Frost

Exterior decorating, also known as landscaping, can double or triple the living spaces of your home. If planned and designed correctly, you can establish outdoor living rooms. The design and plants chosen can create conditions that provide shielding harsh environmental forces, providing protection and screening from noise, wind and undesirable scenes.

With proper planing, not only are the living places increased but the entire landscape will become more more functional. In landscaping terms, every landscape should have a public, private and the all-important "service area." These areas are identified by taking a logical look at the property, building, orientation and existing features.

Public areas are generally associated with the front door, street and any other part of the home that people access. This is the part of the landscape that you want to look good and be low maintenance. It's the first thing people see, and first impressions are important — your landscape says a lot about you. The public area directs traffic, highlights the front entrance and accents your architecture.

The private area of the landscape is very important. This is your space to do with what you like. It can be a peaceful retreat, a place to entertain, an outdoor dining area and just simply a place to relax. If you have children, a play area in the private area is essential and can be incorporated with planning.

The service area is often overlooked and unplanned, but may be the most important area of the landscape. Service areas need to be located near gates accessing the alley, driveway, garage or storage buildings. Service areas often accommodate the storage room, dog run, clothes line, compost pile, vegetable garden and the boat or RV. You can see it's very important.

All of this can come together in a beautiful, pleasant, functional home landscape, but it doesn't happen by accident. Learn how to design the landscape you've always wanted by attending the Home Landscape School 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, and April 17-18 at Confederate Air Force Museum at Midland Air Terminal. Regardless of whether you are planning a new landscape, updating an existing one or working with a professional, this school can teach you how.

You must preregister to attend. Come by the Midland or Ector County Extension Service on Monday to preregister. Midland County Extension Service is located at 2445 E. Business Loop 20, next to the Midland County Exhibit Building (call 687-1351). Ector County Extension Service is at 1010 E. 8th Street in Odessa (335-3071).

A few common landscape question we get this time of year include:

Q: We are wanting to plant a new tree in our yard. What is a good shade tree for our area?

A: Several things to consider before choosing a tree include planting site, available space, utility lines, exposure and purpose of the tree (shading, screening, specimen, etc.). After these questions are answered, you'll have a better idea of what size tree is needed, whether it should be evergreen or deciduous, and other factors.

The extension service has a list of outstanding landscape plants for our area, including the top 10 trees in small, medium and large categories. Just a few you might consider are:

Small — "Oklahoma" Texas redbud, vitex, pinon pine, desert willow and possumhaw holly.

Medium — Chinese pistache, Texas red oak, Western soapberry, flowering pear, lacebark elm and goldenrain tree.

Large — Bur oak, chinquapin oak, cedar elm, live oak and bald cypress.

Come by the county extension office for a list of recommended landscape plants.

Q: We recently bought a house that's about 40 years old. Very little has been done to the landscape except watering and mowing. The shrubs are very overgrown and haven't been pruned or hedged. Should I start over or cut them down to size and hope for good regrowth?

A: The first thing I'd do is evaluate the condition, placement and age of the existing shrubs. You may want to take a combination of steps to update your existing landscape. Plants that are old, in poor condition or simply growing in the wrong place need to come out. Some shrubs that are overgrown but in good condition can be cut back drastically and recover nicely. Texas sage, eleagnus and nandina are examples of this. Still other overgrown shrubs in good condition and growing in a suitable location may be worthy of saving.

These monster shrubs can be trained into small trees, which can be an ideal solution. By removing lower branches and twiggy undergrowth, the overall size is reduced and the trunk or trunks are revealed. This solution can save plants, money and time. If you end up removing lots of shrubs, leaving a few of these small trees will give your landscape a more finished, polished look.

Crapemyrtle, Burford holly, Chinese photinia, yaupon holly, ligustrum and euonymus are just a few of the large shrubs that can be trained into small trees. After the transformation from big bush to stylish small tree, dwarf shrubs, grand cover and/or color can be planted at the base.

Q: We recently updated our landscape and added new beds with a tree, dwarf shrubs and ground covers. During the summer, bermuda grass started popping up in the bed and spreading over from the lawn area. What can we do to stop this, besides all the digging?

A: Digging helps, but if the grass gets ahead of you, there are a couple of herbicides designed for landscaped beds. Poast and fusilade can be sprayed over the tops of many ornamentals to take out grassy weeds. Check the label to make sure it can be sprayed over the plants in your landscaped bed. The best control of bermuda occurs when sprays are made when the grass is growing, but before runners get longer than six inches. A surfactant added to the herbicide also will enhance the herbicidal action.

Spring is an excellent time to be planting trees, shrubs and flowers. Make your time, money and effort count by taking the Home Landscape School. Call the county extension service for more information on home landscaping.

John A. Halligan, executive chef at the RIHGA Royal Hotel in New York City, uses regional foods to create what he calls "nouvelle down-home cuisine."

New York City chef creates 'Nouvelle Down-Home' cuisine

By Linda Beaulieu

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — "Nouvelle down-home cuisine" is how chef John A. Halligan describes his eclectic menu.

As the executive chef at the RIHGA Royal Hotel in New York City, Halligan pulls key ingredients from every region of America and marries them in innovative ways: smoked lobster chili served in copper pots on a bed of seaweed; home-cured salmon smoked over hickory chips and marinated in maple syrup; lemon-flavored yogurt mashed potatoes; Southern fried quail; black-eyed pea chili; roasted and lightly smoked rack of lamb; and mascarpone and rosemary risotto.

According to Halligan, the regional foods of America have yet to become fused into one national cuisine. New York City restaurants are serving a mix of everything, he told an audience at Johnson & Wales University.

"I strive toward three things: presentation, taste and texture. If you accomplish this, you'll do pretty well," he said. "I personally like dishes with height, food that's coming at you at different angles."

Halligan says some 1,200 to 1,400 meals are served each day at the RIHGA Royal Hotel, a 500-suite hotel overlooking Central Park with 11 banquet rooms, six kitchens, a pastry shop and a 100-seat restaurant, Halcyon.

As he smoked a rack of lamb on top of an electric stove, Halligan gave an animated description of what it is like to work in the kitchen of a large hotel, where everything is prepared in-house.

He painted a realistic picture of hotel chefs who must deal in a single day with simultaneous formal dinners and guests requesting baby food at 2 a.m.

Halligan's approach to cooking pays homage to classic cuisine and, at the same time, reflects a belief in "the cuisine of today" — healthy, eclectic, imaginative, unrestricted by ethnic boundaries and always expanding.

The following is his recipe for rosemary and mascarpone cheese risotto, made easy to fix by using any packaged risotto mix.

ROSEMARY AND MASCARPONE CHEESE RISOTTO

2 cups cooked risotto
½ cup heavy cream
½ cup mascarpone cheese
2 tablespoons fresh rosemary, chopped
1 tablespoon fresh chives, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste

Following the directions on the package, cook risotto using a good chicken stock as the liquid.

Cook until rice is al dente, or tender to the bite. In a sauce pot, add cooked rice and heavy cream. Cook rice until heavy cream reduces and rice starts to thicken.

Add mascarpone cheese, fresh rosemary, chives, salt and pepper. Serve immediately.

Makes 6 servings.

Campbells expands refrigerated dip line while Pillsbury 'marries' with Jell-O pudding mix

Associated Press

Campbell is expanding its line of Marie's refrigerated dips. New on the market is Marie's Bacon Ranch Dip. The suggested retail price for a 12-ounce tub of the sour cream-based dip is $2.19.

In a further move of "marrying" brand names, Pillsbury is introducing Pillsbury Moist Supreme Cake Mix with Jell-O brand pudding in the mix along with Creamy Supreme Frosting made with Jell-O brand pudding. The suggested retail for the mix is $1.39; for the frosting it's $1.29.

Some matzo is 'more' Shmurah

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — All matzo prepared for Passover is shmurah, or watched. But some matzo is more shmurah than others.

The matzo made by the ultra-orthodox Lubavitch community must be as shmurah as it gets.

In a warren of rooms in an unmarked building in the Brooklyn neighborhood of Crown Heights, dozens of workers make matzo by hand, much as it has been for centuries. The result is an Old World flavor and a pedigree that make their matzo a popular mail-order product — even at $11.65 a pound, compared with $5.99 for a five-pound box of machine-made matzo in New York supermarkets.

During the week of Passover, Jews are supposed to eat no foods that are leavened. Observant Jews scour their homes to rid them of even any crumbs of bread or cake.

Matzo, unleavened bread made of just flour and water, is eaten at the Passover Seder, a feast at which blessings are recited and symbolic foods are eaten to commemorate the exodus from Egypt. Matzo is made and eaten in recognition that the fleeing Jews had no time to let their bread dough rise.

Time is a key element in the watching of matzo. And 18 minutes is the key amount of time. If the matzo is baked within 18 minutes of the dough being started, it will not rise.

Lack of contamination is also key. Everything must be beyond clean to ensure that not even a smidgeon of dough from one batch touches the next — because that little bit might rise.

For most matzo, this is accomplished by machine, plus a supervising rabbi, or watcher.

At the tiny, cramped, buzzing, hot bakery (it has no formal name) in Crown Heights, it is accomplished with a remarkable, concentrated care — plus a rabbi.

"At Passover, everything is done more carefully," says Rabbi Sholom Baumgarten, program director for a Lubavitch children's organization called Tzivos Hashem, or Army of God.

This making of matzo is done so carefully that every 18 minutes:

■ The short dowels used as rolling pins are sent through a sander to remove traces of dough.

■ The long dowels used to place the matzo in the oven are sanded by hand and left to cool, lest any heat from their moments in the oven cause the next batch of dough to begin rising.

■ The people who roll out the matzos, mostly women, wash their hands and line up for inspection by a rabbi wearing white gloves who makes sure no dough remains in the creases.

■ The wide stainless steel mixing bowls get washed and furiously dried to a gleam.

■ The long sheets of brown paper on which the dough is rolled are changed.

Every night, the brown paper that covers nearly every surface in the bakery is replaced. Water for the dough is drawn from a well and allowed to sit overnight in the bakery to cool, again to avoid heat that might start the leavening.

A flour man and a water man each stand in a small booth — separated to avoid any chance the two ingredients might inadvertently come in contact. A third man holds a large stainless steel bowl. From a window in one booth comes a measuring cup full of flour. From the other, one of water.

When the water hits the flour, the rabbi hits the timer, the mixer says a brief blessing and starts kneading, and the 18 minutes begin, marked by a kitchen timer and the time written on the wall.

Each batch of dough makes 16 to 20 matzos. And the rules allow as many batches as can be done in the 18 minutes before everything is cleaned again.

ABOUT 30 PEOPLE, mostly women, stand along both sides of a long narrow table. Each is given a knob of dough to roll out to one matzo. When done, she holds up her dowel and calls out "matzo," so a runner can bring it to another table.

There, the dough pierced all over, to keep it from puffing during baking, and hung on a long dowel.

Those dowels then are passed to a bearded man drenched in sweat who gently places them in a huge wood-fired brick oven that runs 24 hours a day and reaches more than 2,000 degrees. A matzo cooks in half a minute, tops.

The noise is constant, the movement, too. None of the workers can take time to talk about their job. It is clear why it is a mitzvah, or good deed, to make matzo.

These workers turn out 400 or so pounds of matzo five days a week, Baumgarten says.

Matzo is mailed all over the world from Crown Heights. Places like Brazil and Argentina have no bakeries like this one. Canada has one and Israel has some, Baumgarten says. There are seven or eight others in Brooklyn but none elsewhere in the United States, he says.

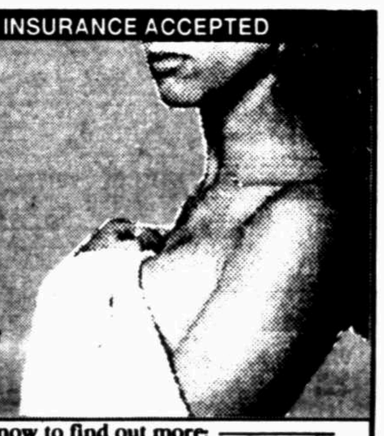

While this is the matzo Baumgarten has eaten at Passover for all of his 38 years, he doesn't say it is objectively better than machine-made, which he calls "100 percent kosher."

"I'll find you other religious Jews, like us, who trust the machine better," he says. But he favors the old way, as close as possible to the way that ancient Jews made it in Egypt.

DEAR ABBY

Prayer offers words of wisdom for parents struggling to cope

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I found a wonderful clipping from your column dated 1969. It was in an old scrapbook belonging to my mom. Mom is gone now, but I remember how much she loved "A Parent's Prayer." Will you please run it again? — ELVA HARRIS, ABERDEEN, WASH.

Van Buren

DEAR ELVA: Thank you for your kind words, but I was not the author. "A Parent's Prayer" was written by the late Gary C. Meyers, co-founder of Highlights for Children, a wholesome, educational monthly children's magazine. It is now in its fourth generation.

I, too, loved "A Parent's Prayer," and here it is:

A PARENT'S PRAYER

Oh, God, make me a better parent.

Help me to understand my children, to listen patiently to what they have to say and to answer all their questions kindly. Keep me from interrupting them, talking back to them and contradicting them. Make me as courteous to them as I would have them be to me. Give me the courage to confess my sins against my children and to ask of them forgiveness, when I know that I have done them wrong.

May I not vainly hurt the feelings of my children. Forbid that I should laugh at their mistakes or resort to shame and ridicule as punishment. Let me not tempt a child to lie and steal. So guide me hour by hour that I may demonstrate by all I say and do that honesty produces happiness.

Reduce, I pray, the meanness in me. May I cease to nag; and when I am out of sorts, help me, O Lord, to hold my tongue.

Blind me to the little errors of my children and help me to see the good things that they do. Give me a ready word for honest praise.

Help me to treat my children as those of their own age, but let me not exact of them the judgments and conventions of adults. Allow me not to rob them of the opportunity to wait upon themselves, to think, to choose, and to make decisions.

Forbid that I should ever punish them for my self-ish satisfaction. May I grant them all of their wishes that are reasonable and have the courage always to withhold a privilege which I know will do them harm.

Make me so fair and just, so considerate and companionable to my children that they will have a genuine esteem for me. Fit me to be loved and imitated by my children.

With all thy gifts, O God, do give me calm and poise and self-control.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I would be able to contribute to your column, although I have been a fan of yours (and your sister's) for many years.

I thought you might enjoy this little limerick-style poem I ran off this morning.

ABBY AND ANN

Twin sisters named Abby and Ann
Devised a remarkable plan
Of answering questions
And making suggestions,
(Providing a service to man)...
Through the years as these ladies matured,
And reflecting on all they've endured,
Came to find themselves famous
(Like Andy and Amos)
And beloved by all they've assured...
To end this attempt at light verse,
(Believe me, I've written much worse)
I'll be a big fan
Of Abby and Ann
'Til they carry me off in a hearse.
— HERB NASH, PORT ORCHARD, WASH.

DEAR HERB: Thank you for the poem. I think it's terrific! Are you related to Ogden Nash, who wrote these immortal words?

Candy
Is dandy
But liquor
Is quicker.

For Abby's favorite family recipes, send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet No. 1, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Commercial gourmet baker's treats go to the dogs

By Edythe Jenson
N.Y. Times News Service

MESA, Ariz. — The morning routine at the Finger household starts when three dogs hear the alarm clock and jump on their owners' bed.

"Then they jump off the bed, run to the kitchen where they stare at the cookie jar, then they run back to the bed, then back to the kitchen, stare at the jar . . . until we get up and give them a treat," Cami Finger said.

Dogs Micki, Boze and Freckles live with a commercial baker of gourmet dog treats.

Finger's Puppy Gourmet Bakery, a fledgling home business, takes canine cuisine to a new level. Gourmet $4.99-a-pound dog biscuits in beef, chicken, peanut butter, honey oatmeal and carob flavors are the beginnings of the treat menu.

Doting pet owners can celebrate their dog's birthday with a decorated carob cake for $8.99.

For other occasions there are mint miniature pupcakes: carob cupcakes with a hint of mint at $5.80 a dozen.

Micki Doodles are named after the senior cocker spaniel in the Finger household; they're cookies topped with honey and cinnamon.

Peanut butter treats topped with raw peanuts, molasses cookies and crunchy Barkaque rib biscuits slow-basted with homemade sauce are some of the selections.

Some customers are members of the Puppy Gourmet of the Month Club, and their dogs receive a pound of fresh-baked biscuits decorated according to the season or holiday, and one birthday cake.

There's no sodium, sugar or preservatives in any of Finger's delicacies. She started with a basic dog biscuit recipe and her knowledge of health foods. Expansion came when she introduced peanut butter and carob: a doggie version of a Reese's Peanut Butter Cup.

Because chocolate is harmful to dogs, carob is a mandatory substitution, Finger said.

Micki is the taste-tester, although Finger admits that the dog will eat almost anything.

"He sits next to me when I'm baking; anything that falls on the floor is his," she said. "He's a little on the hefty side."

She developed treats baked with rice flour for dogs allergic to wheat, and is working on a rice-and-lamb-flavored biscuit at a customer's request.

To market her treats, Finger takes a catalog and business card to dog shows.

In the six months since her business started, Finger has a following of regular customers and some winter visitors who want their biscuits shipped to the East Coast.

They're baked the night before they are shipped.

"I usually have to tell my husband, 'Sweetie, I don't have time to make dinner. I have to bake dog biscuits'," Finger said. She holds a secretarial job during the day and often bakes until midnight.

She is expanding to treats for potbellied pigs and llamas.

"Some day I'd like to have my own full-size bakery, for animal food only, of course," she said.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only of winners, not runners-up or contestants. These announcements will be published on a space available basis.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and with anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements.

Portrait photographs of the bride only or photos of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements.

A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements. Anniversaries photos must be relatively current.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Photos can be picked up in the Lifestyle Department after publication, or a self-addresses, stamped envelope can be enclosed for the photo to be returned by mail.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

DRUMMONDS MARK FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Drummond were honored by their children and grandchildren with a Golden Wedding Anniversary reception at the Primitive Baptist Church dining room on March 14, 1995. The Drummond's children are Dr. and Mrs. Paul Drummond of Boonville, Missouri, Mr. and Mrs. James Meadows of Houston, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Drummond of Durham, N.C. They have six grandchildren - five of whom were present.

Mrs. Stella Shattuck May, who was her sister's maid-of-honor, assisted at the reception.

Nelle Shattuck became the bride of Corporal Robert Drummond on May 12, 1945, at the home of her parents in Midland. They lived in Alamogordo, NM, where Drummond was stationed in the Army Air Force, for several months until he was sent overseas. He served the balance of his active duty at Schemya Air Force Base, Alaska. Following his discharge in 1946 they returned to Midland and have lived here since that time. Both of the Drummonds and all three of their children graduated from Midland High School.

Drummond is a Master Plumber who owned and operated a major plumbing repair business for many years. He is semi-retired at this time.

The Drummonds are long-time members of the Primitive Baptist Church where he has served as a deacon since 1951.

They have also been active in many Lions Club projects. Mr. Drummond has served in many offices of the Westside Lions Club and is currently Secretary of the Club. Mrs. Drummond served two separate terms as President of the Lioness 700 Club as well as other offices.

Both have been active in Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops and in Midland High School Choir Boosters.

New plant species found in N.C.

Associated Press

A species of sedge found in North Carolina has been confirmed as new to science, according to the botanical journal Sida. Formally named Carex flava, the grassy-looking plant grows to about two feet and produces flowers and fruits in spring.

First discovered three years ago on the Nature Conservancy's Lanier Quarry Preserve, it has since been found by scientists in five populations in a rare wet savanna habitat in southeastern North Carolina.

Pruning Guide

Most trees and bushes benefit from judicious pruning, making them denser and sturdier and keeping their size within bounds, according to a guide offered by Ames, manufacturer of lawn and garden tools. Pruning is necessary for newly planted trees to balance top growth with the root system. Hedges will be thicker as well as neater with regular pruning care.

For a copy of the guide, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ames Pruning Guide, Box 1774, Parkersburg, W. Va. 26102.

'Dental Boot Kamp' showcases talents of salesman

By MARTY SABOTA
Hearst News Service

HUNT, Texas — In a glass-walled room of a Hill Country ranch perched on a mountain bluff overlooking the Guadalupe River, sagebrush guru Walter Hailey is conducting the latest of his "motivatin'" seminars.

Although this charismatic super-salesman caters to a wide variety of professions, his "Dental Boot Kamp" is a favorite because he does more than change the way dentists do business — he changes their lives.

"We're very fortunate he took a liking to us because we really need him," said San Antonio dentist Ed Staffel, a Boot Kamp graduate and avowed Haileyophile.

Sure, the dentists are interested in the obvious — better marketing. But for them, the need for Hailey's comments goes deeper than the bottom line on the balance sheet.

People associate dentists with pain, Hailey tells the 175 acolytes who nod vigorously in agreement. Consequently, this group of professionals equate their own livlihoods with bad news. It's no wonder that dentists rank high on suicide, divorce, clinical depression and alcohol abuse lists, he says.

"They feel people don't like them and thus they get a low self-image, although they're very capable professionals," Hailey says. "The missing link is self-promotion."

The former insurance salesman, who now is a multimillionaire, points out that 15 percent of a dentist's success comes from technical expertise and 85 percent comes from marketing ability.

For the privilege of spending four days with this slight, droll, animated dynamo, 50 dentists have plunked down $1,950 each. The remaining 125 — mostly dental staff — are charged $950.

The boot campers are roused out of bed at 5:30 a.m. ("because 70 percent of sales are made in the morning"), forced to exercise and eat healthy and remain confined in hard chairs until sundown.

There is a waiting list to hear the oratory of this Texas native — an unlikely amalgamation of Lee Iacocca, Zig Ziglar, Socrates, Leo Buscaglia and Will Rogers.

For the recent Power of Persuasion seminar, San Antonio colleagues Victor Press, Cam Janse and Gordy Gonzales made the 1½ hour scenic trip west on Interstate 10 to Canyon Springs Ranch, a 500-acre paradise nestled between Ingram and Hunt.

In an afternoon exercise, Hailey asked everyone to write his or her problems on a lined sheet titled "Junk." Then they were told to crumple up their worries "and throw them at us."

A laughing audience obliged — symbolically pitching their problems.

The raucous sessions have the appearance of a late-night infomercial, but the enthusiasm is real as the recruits respond to Hailey's directive: "Get off of the constipated look."

Hailey has a humorous and youthful delivery that belies his 67 years.

What could be a dull lecture on how to keep patients from canceling appointments has the audience paralyzed with laughter as he plays the roles of an impossible patient, an irritable receptionist and a bumbling dentist.

He speculates that he would never have attained success if the folks back home in Mesquite, Texas, hadn't nicknamed him "Bitsy" when someboy cooed over the "itsy-bitsy" infant.

Instead of letting his boyhood timidity and pint-size stature hold him back, he reached up — all 5-foot-6 inches — and seized the brass ring. Forty-five years ago, Hailey's claim to fame was as emcee for a "Texas Swing" band called the Light-Crust Doughboys.

He went on to make even more dough as an insurance whiz, developing a marketing system that enabled him to bill $1 billion worth of insurance sales in eight years.

In 1978, Hailey sold his company, Lone Star Life, to Kmart for $78 million.

He sold salve, oil and a lot of other stuff over the years, but everyone agrees that the best thing Walter Hailey sells is himself.

So, largely from boredom in retirement, Hailey began imparting his sales techniques and philosophies to groups at his ranch.

It has become a second, full-blown career.

Since 1987, Hailey's three-day Power of Persuasion boot camps have been eagerly received by thousands of sales executives and chief executives, as well as hardware dealers, police officers, football coaches and aircraft builders.

Hailey's program "will make anyone's life more exciting, fulfilling and profitable," according to former San Antonio Spurs owner Red McCombs in an endorsement on the back of Hailey's book, "Breaking the No Barrier."

With a business clientele that includes the Hyatt and Westin Hotels, IBM, Merrill Lynch, GTE and Southwestern Bell, Hailey's company, Planned Marketing Associates, projects revenues of $6 million in 1995.

"Walter doesn't have to do this, but he lives off this stuff," says Hailey's right-hand man and company president, Steve Anderson. "He'll probably die on stage."

France great place to learn about French cooking

By Suzy Patterson

PARIS (AP) - A fine way for foodies to travel and gourmandize without guilt is to take cooking courses, gaining lore and knowledge as they devour foie gras and soak up the Bordeaux or Champagne.

Some of the schools, like Paris's Cordon Bleu and the Ritz-Escoffier, give professional courses, totalling 16 weeks or more and costing many thousands of dollars.

But they also offer week-long practical courses, or simply walk-in demonstrations, which can be a joy for vacationing food buffs. Other schools or private teachers give short, intensive but delicious and fun courses in the countryside. You stay at the manor, hotel-chateau or nearby and absorb recipes and techniques along with food and wine.

All courses listed here have English-speaking chefs or interpreters. (Check prices before enrolling, since exchange rates have been widely fluctuating this season.)

■ Cordon Bleu. This is the Grandma of French cooking schools, founded 100 years ago by a French journalist named Marthe Distel so that famous chefs could give lessons to her subscribers. The clients usually sent their domestics, since "ladies" didn't cook then.

By the late 1940s the school had been bought by Elizabeth Brassard, and after World War II, the clientele changed. By now pupils included ex-G.I.s (on the G.I. Bill) and Julia Child — as yet an unknown former O.S.S. officer, married to a diplomat. By 1988, the school had also started to train many young professional hopefuls from around the world. Mme. Brassard sold Cordon Bleu to Andre J. Cointreau, a descendent of both the family making the famous liqueur of that name and the Remy Martin family, the brandy makers.

Today the school offers not only daily demonstrations in French and ethnic cuisine (for about $40 each), but a four-day "lean-cuisine" (hands-on course) for 3,200 francs (about $650), a day-long crash course in Paris markets, courses in cooking for guests, bistro cuisine, regional cuisine — each for four days, and costing less than $1,000 — and much more.

The setting is high-tech, somewhat sterile, but the ambience is bustling and pleasant.

Cordon Bleu. 8 rue Leon Delhomme, 75015 Paris, France. Phone: (011 33-1) 48 56 06 06. Fax: (011 33-1) 48 56 03 96. Also Pleasantville, N.Y., (914) 741-0606, fax (914) 741-0869.

■ The Ritz-Escoffier Cooking School was started at the famed hotel in 1988 in a cheery, underground setting next to the vast and beautiful kitchens where the regular staff turn out dishes for the privileged clientele.

Certain exceptional demonstration-tastings are in exotic cuisines, from Japanese to Russian, and cost about 250 francs ($50) per session.

The school's chefs and guest chefs offer weekday afternoon demonstrations (230 francs, about $47), and special five-day certificate courses, like discovering the provinces of France via cuisine (June 26-30, July 3-7). Learn to make Provencal bouillabaisse, Lyonnais-style quenelles de brochet (pike dumplings) Nantua sauce, and so on, for 6,000 francs ($1,300).

Week-long practical and demonstration courses in bistro and brasserie cooking include lunch and dinner at both a famous brasserie and bistro, and come to 6,700 francs ($1,340). Prices are for cooking lessons and tastings only — no hotel fees.

Ritz-Escoffier Ecole de Gastronomie Francaise. 15, Place Vendome, 74001 Paris. Phone (011-33-1) 43 16 30 50. Fax (011-33-1) 43 16 31 50.

■ Learning cooking with Princess Marie-Blanche de Broglie is also discovering how the aristocracy in France entertain at home, since her Paris classes are in her elegant apartment near the Invalides.

Congenial Marie-Blanche has often toured America and speaks beautiful English. She has a twice-monthly demonstration by a top Paris chef but also gives courses herself (very small classes, no more than 8). Then you sit down for lunch with wine hosted by Marie-Blanche; specialties are served on her own beautiful porcelain, a Limoges design she calls Limesy, which is for sale.

Lessons and lunch at home with Marie-Blanche come to about $150 each, as you sample food both traditional (such as fish and vegetable terrine) and inventive (veal scallops with hazelnut sauce).

Her star summer program coming up is a Week in the Vendee (South Brittany) in August, for groups of eight only. Participants stay at a private chateau with spectacular views, studying cooking mornings and touring with Prince Francois de Broglie (pronounced Broy, like boy) afternoons, with evenings spent discussing l'art de vivre with Marie-Blanche. Five-day tours, excluding transport to and from Brittany, come to 14,000 francs per person (about $2,850).

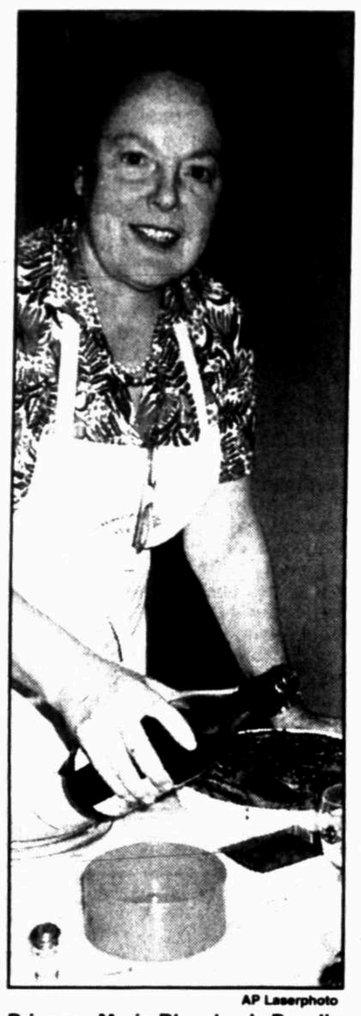

Marie-Blanche de Broglie. 18, Avenue de la Motte-Picquet, 75007 Paris. Phone (011-33-1) 45 51 36 34, fax (011-33-1) 43 47 38 68.

■ Anne Willan regularly takes her expertise for her La Varenne cooking school to the Greenbrier, at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., but she also receives groups at La Varenne in France, at her Chateau du Fey in Burgundy, in summer and fall. From June 18-July 8 she'll be giving an intensive orientation program ($7,545) with those who have only a beginner's knowledge of French cooking. One-week sessions (for $2,795), run from June 18 to July 22.

A three-week program in September ($8,895) focuses on classic traditions, artisan as producer and chef and the contemporary scene, with several excursions featuring wine and food. One-week portions of this program cost $3,495, as does the gastronomic course which follows Oct. 8-14 and Oct. 15-21.

Registration for these courses should be made through Willan's stateside representative, Janis McLean, at La Varenne, P.O. Box 25574, Washington, D.C. 20007, (202) 337-0073 or 1 (800) 537-6486, or fax (703) 823-5438. Prices include everything except airfare — classes, meals, wines, excursions, and accommodations.

Another U.S. contact is Judy Terrell in Dallas, 1 (800) 537-6485. Phone numbers in France are (011-33) 86 63 18 34 and fax (011-33) 86 63 01 33.

■ Kathie Alex, an American who fell in love with French cuisine, gives lively lessons in Julia Child's former house near Cannes in southern France. The house is on the pastoral property that belonged to Simca Beck, famed cooking teacher and co-author with Julia Child. Simca was Kathie's main mentor, and Kathie revels in carrying the torch of Simca's cuisine, ranging from classic French methods to regional provencal specialties.

This is a bargain by today's cooking-school standards. A six-day tour with market excursions, visits with two top chefs and restaurants and three practical cuisine lessons by Kathie including room (double occupancy), breakfast, lunch and wine, comes to $1,650 a person.

Kathie Alex, Bramafam-La Pitchoune, 06740 Chateauneuf-de-Grasse, France. Phone and fax are (011-33) 93 60 10 56.

■ If you revel in rich specialties like foie gras or preserved goose, try Danielle Delpeuch, in her native southern Perigord, with courses beginning again next fall.

Personal top chef to French president Francois Mitterrand from 1988-1990, Daniele can dissect a duck faster than Omar Sharif shuffles cards. Three hours of cooking per day, excursions to farms, walnut-oil mills, cutlery demonstrations, and so on, come to about 2,700 francs ($550) for a five-day week; reasonably-priced rooms available nearby. Contact Daniele Delpeuch, La Borderie, 24120 Chavagnac, France. Chavagnac, France. Phone (011-33) 53 51 00 24 or fax (011-33) 53 50 53 71.

■ Another possibility is a week in Touraine at Montbazon's Domaine de la Tourtiniere, overlooking the Loire Valley. The chateau-hotel's owners, Denise Olivereau-Capron and her son, Xavier, receive guests for six-day regional cooking classes, excursions, trips to wine cellars for comparative tastings, a visit to a goat cheese farm, and markets, plus several dinners at the hotel's Orangerie and other restaurants.

A five-day stay at the hotel with regional cuisine lessons, three meals a day and excursions costs 13,500 francs (about $2,800) in a single room, or 14,500 ($3,000) in a double.

Show brings back memories of '60s

By Patricia Leigh Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — If there was a moment of deja vu at the "Psychedelic 60's Pop, Op and Peace Show" at the 26th Street Armory last weekend — New York's first "antiques" show devoted to the ugly-beautiful 1960s and early 70s — it wasn't the spectacle of $500 Peter Max lunch boxes or so many orange objects it made one yearn for a bad-taste conspiracy trial.

Rather, it came when a uniformed National Guardsman approached a dumbfounded Gary Moise, who was arrested at the 1971 May Day exercises in Washington, and asked him to take down the American flag decorated with a huge marijuana leaf that Moise had hoisted in his booth "for history's sake."

Nearly 30 years later, the emotions engendered by such a symbol are still powerful and real.

PERHAPS NO period in the recent past is as rife with myth as the 1960's. The 6,000 or so people who strolled through the armory last weekend, some who grew up in the era, others who wished they had, sifted through a bazaar of the culture — a sort of Woodstock '95 of design — hoping to find talismans that would briefly connect them.

The antiques vendors, who brought new meaning to the word "dealer," still looked the part. Their hair tended to be wild and woolly, and many wore past arrests on their sleeves like tie-dye. They looked wistfully at the clothes they used to wear in their youth, especially bell-bottoms, painfully aware that their centers were not holding.

Rose Klein, 43, was at a loss trying to explain to her two daughters — Jessica, 15, and Alanna, 7 — who Spiro Agnew was and what a whirling motion lamp was for.

It is indeed a strange sensation to realize you're history.

("All the stuff I want is what my mom threw out," said Sara DiFrancesco, 15, who was spotted with her 43 year-old mother Ellen buying "over-the-knee hose for the NOW look.")

But to one who grew up toward the end of the era, which felt a little bit like hanging on for dear life to the wisp of a comet's tail, the ironies of "Pop, Op and Peace" only begin there.

WHAT TO make of a 60s antiques show when the essence of the era was (records and stereos aside) about not having objects. What to say about nutty, high-style sculptural furniture like Wendell Castle's "Double Molar" settee — a set of glinting white plastic teeth that seem so evocative of the period — when for this observer the 60s was about rejecting furniture?

In my memory, the quintessential 60s interior was in a coffeehouse on the outskirts of Chicago called "It's Here," in which an empty room was made mystical through folk music, communal floor cushions, souk-like beaded doorways and walls and ceilings brought alive by light.

It was light, the most evanescent of design — especially black lights and strobe lights and slimy liquid-light projections of oil and water meant to simulate illicit experiences — that today captures the era's essence.

There were no strobe lights, beaded doorways or floor cushions on display at the armory. Nor were there waterbeds, shag rugs or bean bag chairs — which in taking on the shape of the body seem so sweetly expressive of a bygone sexual innocence.

The armory show, which cost $8 to enter and was organized by the Stella Show Management Co., in part to lure young collectors, lacked the essential political and cultural icons — "Siddhartha" or even underground newspapers — that might have put the disconnected shards of the 60s into context. Amazingly, there was not one comprehensive album collection.

AND AS with any youthful experience, much of what was prized at the time cannot be explained, let alone collected — be it sandal blisters from a peace march or an orange bike reflector garnered at New York's first Central Park Be-In, which was meant to be gazed through while under the influences.

But even the most commercialized objects have a sort of joyful wacky innocence. Consider the label on a 1972 inflatable bubble light, a truly goofy fixture that looks like a beachball suspended in midair: "Deflated, it looks like a growth! Inflated, it looks like a giant white donut. It's wild & wacky and excruciatingly personal! Just imagine the THRILL of seeing your breath hanging over a table!"

There was so much Peter Max, whose designs were licensed by some 70 companies back then, that you began to experience what Steve Barnett, an anthropologist with the Global Business Network in Manhattan, calls "pattern exhaustion," an archeological term that refers to the tendency of visual patterns in any culture to eventually repeat themselves.

But what was striking beneath the vaulted roof — which was also eerily populated with fatigue-clad members of the National Guard bearing military rifles — was how many interpretations of the 1960s there were, most of which had some resonance.

In what some believe was a reaction to "Eisenhower gray," color saturated everything from Pucci pocketbooks to mushroom-shaped furniture that proudly proclaimed itself to be "100 percent polyurethane."

This flamboyant profusion, such a contrast to today's black, led Hugh Hegarty, a 19-year-old history major at Fordham University, to observe that "the whole era jumps out at you."

THE RENEGADE furniture from Italy, France and Finland still looks — happily —like visitors from another planet. Sofas of soft interlocking shapes were born to express 60's social arrangements. Seen through today's eyes, however, there seems no better metaphor for the Me Decade than Finnish designer Eero Aarnio's "Globe chair," a fiberglass and metal ball with cushy red upholstery and stereo speakers, where, as Lawrence Converso of the Chicago firm 1945 put it, "you could be into yourself in a piece of furniture."

The objects that most dreamily encapsulate the era are the ones that were originally free. Rockers immortalized by graphic artists like Wes Wilson, Victor Moscoso, Stanley Mouse and the late Rick Griffin may have faded from memory, but the crisp psychedelic imagery still feels exhilaratingly handmade and spontaneous. The dizzying colors and languid typography, drawn from organic Art Nouveau and other sources, reflect the euphoria and confusion of a world expanding — "everything happening all at once," as the artist Wes Wilson, now 57, puts it.

Vacation hideaway is flooded with memories

By Erma Bombeck

As my husband tells the story (which is often), it was my idea to take a short vacation to Carmel in northern California during the recent 100-year storm. He also adds with a crooked little smile, "She tried Bosnia, but the hotels were overbooked."

Bombeck

It's all timing. What traveler hasn't gone to London when it was closed? Spent a week in Hawaii in a Red Cross shelter? Or visited New York where the only group not on strike was the credit union?

Personally, we were not one of the headlines of the March 9-11 devastation. The loss of lives and property was devastating and cannot be minimized. We were the lucky ones who had intermittent electricity, no phone, television that faded to black a lot, no newspaper or mail delivery, and eventually isolation as the Carmel bridge collapsed. It left us with no access to food or supplies to the north and no escape to the south because of mud slides.

For nearly a week, we lived in the twilight zone, with more togetherness than a couple should be required to have.

First, there was the matter of food. You get real creative when your freezer is down to a bag of ice.

I leafed through my California cookbooks. There were 138 dishes I could not make because I did not have fresh cilantro. I eliminated another 92 that required goat cheese. There were no casseroles built around cocktail onions and clam juice.

The worst of it was the sameness of days.

"I'm going to boil some water," I announced.

"That's what I planned to do today," said my husband. "Why don't you wait at the end of the drive and watch helicopters land and take off?"

"I did that yesterday," I said.

"You could think about dinner," he said.

"I have thought about dinner. We are having a hot dog over a bed of Asian rice and a can of crushed pineapple."

On Day Eight, there was a knock on our door and our hearts quickened. It was the FedEx man, who had come over some treacherous road from the south to deliver two mirrors from the Pottery Barn. "Can you come in for a week and visit?" I asked. He said he had to move on.

Most vacations fade and are relegated to a few snapshots in the old shoebox. I don't think I'll ever forget the caring neighbors, fire department, block workers and volunteers, and especially Big Al, who came in and out of our lives that week.

Someone asked if we missed the O.J. trial.

O.J. who?

Author says miniskirt of '60s represented attitude of era

By Tom Robbins
N.Y. Times News Service

Even though as a novelist I have long since left the period behind me, I continue to believe that the 1960s were the nearest this country has ever come to being the host of a golden age.

Yet I am not — nor was I then — particularly enamored of 60s and 70s design and decor. While the myriad thrift-shop tapestries, Persian carpets, overstuffed sofas, beaded lamp shades, peacock feathers, incense burners, macrame, paisley cushions and florid neo-Nouveau poster art provided a soft, sensually rich tactile environment in which to get congenially, entertainingly stoned, there was something about it — the clutter, the closeness, the density, the inevitable dustiness and fake Orientalism of it — that was somehow almost Victorian.

Whether I had inhaled or not, it made me want to cough.

The interiors I chose to inhabit then are very much like the one I dwell in now: an array of clean, bold, simple primary colors set against a background of starkest white. Having said that, however, I can think of two material items from the 60s and 70s that ought to be honored: the miniskirt, for its glorious debut, and the brassiere, for its martyrdom, its retreat.

The widespread donning of the miniskirt and doffing of the bra symbolized the rebellion against constraint — sexual, cultural, political, economic and religious — that characterized the era.

Our culture was being re-feminized, and unharnessed women in abbreviated loin-wrappings — looking good, feeling free! — expressed this in a way every bit as direct and immediate as men in waist-length hair. It wasn't merely that miniskirts (and their sisters in emancipated style, hot pants) were sexy. Rather, they were sexy in a decidedly playful way. And this playfulness carried over into many other aspects of life.

People were being playful in the face of adversity, violence and turmoil. This is the sort of playfulness that can transcend whimsy and frivolity to become a form of wisdom, a means of survival, a kind of grace. Women might protest an unjust war or battle for civil rights, but as evidenced by their attire, they refused to let the issues of the day make style victims of them or drag them down into despair.

Eventually, of course, the pendulum swung.

On the one hand, the old Judeo-Christian fear of license precipitated a vicious backlash. On the other, when the establishment press got around to decreeing that thigh-flash and bra smoke were absolutely de rigueur, the sense of mischief was compromised and all the fun expired.

Short-short skirts have come back several times since then. Some designers will trot them out this spring. But you know I'm right when I say it's not the same. Ah, but while it lasted, the 60s miniskirt was a sight to behold. More than a garment, it was a flag without a country, a banner without a slogan, a pennant without a team. Leather or satin, snug or flared, smooth or pleated, sassy or coyly demure, it was the all-embracing banderole that flew from the masthead of a heroic escapade. It was the happy standard of the heart.

Oatmeal bars win first place in Quaker Oatmeal recipe contest

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

The following recipe recently took top honors in the fifth Quaker Oatmeal "Bake It Better With Oats" Recipe Contest. Ohio graphic designer Lori Shamszadeh took home $10,000 for her creation.

FRUIT AND NUT MORNING BARS

16-ounce package hot roll mix
1 cup quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
¼ cup all-purpose flour
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¾ cup dried fruit, see Note
⅓ cup finely chopped nuts
3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons margarine or butter, softened
2 tablespoons grated orange peel
1 egg, room temperature
1 cup very warm water (120 to 130 degrees)
2 tablespoons margarine or butter, melted

NOTE: Use any one or a combination of the following dried fruits to equal ¾ cup: dried cranberries, dried cherries, raisins, diced dried mixed fruit or chopped apricots.

In large bowl, combine hot roll mix and its yeast packet, oats, flour, sugar, fruit and nuts; mix well. Add cream cheese, margarine, orange peel and egg; mix well. Add water; mix until dough pulls away from sides of bowl. Turn dough out onto lightly floured surface. Knead 5 minutes, adding additional flour if dough is sticky. Shape dough into a ball; cover with bowl or plastic wrap. Let rest on surface 5 minutes. Cut dough in half; cut each half into 6 pieces. Shape each piece into a smooth ball; place on cookie sheet. Brush tops with melted margarine; sprinkle with additional oats, if desired. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm place 20 to 30 minutes or until slightly puffy. Heat oven to 375 degrees. Bake uncovered, 26 to 28 minutes or until golden brown. Remove to wire rack; cool slightly. Serve warm.

Williamson to be guest speaker at luncheon meeting

Staff Reports

Midland County Republican Women will meet for luncheon 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Midland Hilton Ballroom. Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Barry Williamson will be guest speaker. For reservations call 697-7519.

Williamson, who has served as a West Texas oil producer, oil and gas attorney and director of two federal energy agencies, was sworn in as Texas Railroad Commissioner on Jan. 5, 1993.

He is a member of the Gas Committee of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners (NARUC) and a member of the Texas Alternative Fuels Council. He is second vice chairman of Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission and was appointed to IOGCC by Gov. George Bush this year.

Williamson began his career with Turpin, Smith, Dyer and Saxe law firm in Midland, and later founded his own oil and gas production company. In the late 1980s, he left Midland to serve as director of the Office of Policy, Planning and Analysis in the U.S. Department of Energy, and was later chosen to be the U.S. Department of Interior's Director of Minerals Management Service.

Williamson earned undergraduate and law degrees from the University of Arkansas. He and his wife, Holly, have two sons, Holt and Ashlin.

Barry Williamson

Dorothy Perkins

Meeting planned

En Amie Review Club will have a luncheon meeting at noon Wednesday at Midland Woman's Club. Dorothy Perkins will review "Nine Lives" by Lynn Snowden.

Ms. Perkins earned a bachelor of arts degree in English from Texas Woman's University and a master's degree in English from Middlebury College in Vermont.

She is retired from the English Department at Midland High School and is a docent at Museum of the Southwest and a member of Midland Woman's Club, Midland Community Concert Association, Shakespeare As We Like it and the Chancel Choir at First United Methodist Church.

Caribbean, gardens, castles are great destinations

By Jerry Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

The Caribbean is just a place to go in winter. Right? Wrong.

As growing legions of visitors are realizing, the Caribbean is a year-round destination, and a particularly good time to visit is summer, when prices at resorts drop as much as 50 percent. The weather stays in the 80s with cooling breezes from the trade winds, and there is an abundant array of things to do and see on these 34 diverse island-nations.

No matter what your interests, there is an island for you. Some are better known for beaches, others for shopping. You can find Las Vegas-style night shows or just quiet nights. On land, there are golf, tennis, horseback riding — and history. The St. Thomas Synagogue is about to celebrate its 200th year with a series of events beginning in August and going to June 1996.

While the temperature remains constant, prices fall. At the Grand Palazzo (telephone 800-545-0509), considered St. Thomas' premier resort, summer rates (June 1-Nov. 30 and Dec. 1-19) are $1,890 a couple for three nights, including taxes and gratuities. This compares to the winter rates of $2,500 for a comparable time period. At Biras Creek (800-223-1108) in Virgin Gorda, a Summer Family Package at $3,490 includes a second suite for the children, breakfasts and dinners and family outings. At Sandy Lane on Barbados, April 15 means extra savings. Guests who book by that day receive a $1,040 deduction off the rack rate on a 10-day summer season vacation (the resort has a private 18-hole golf course and features transfers in a Rolls-Royce). Call Forte Hotels at (800) 225-5843. The Sonesta Curacao offers a Summer Sizzler (April 17-Dec. 19) package at $99 a person a night and includes dinner, breakfast, a casino coupon, a supervised program for children, tennis and other activities. Those staying four nights receive the last night free. Call Sonesta at (800) 766-3782. At the Four Seasons Nevis, the only AAA Five Diamond resort in the Caribbean, rates drop June 1-Oct. 31 by half of the winter rates. A Sporting Spree package, for example, is $900 a night in winter, $450 in summer. Call (800) 332-3442.

For those interested in participating in the St. Thomas Bicentennial Jewish celebration, the Bolongo Elysian Beach Resort on St. Thomas offers a package at $210 a night Aug. 1-Dec. 22 and April 11-June 30 next year. Call (800) 524-4746.

MONTSERRAT INFO

Montserrat, the island with the Irish heritage in the Caribbean, now has a toll-free number for information. Telephone (800) 646-2002 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for a packet of information.

CARNIVAL SEASON

The St. Thomas Carnival begins April 24 and continues with a lively beat until April 29. There will be parades, stiltwalkers, bands, calypso music and j'ouvert (wake up at dawn and join in the tramp into town). This carnival is said to be as exciting as New Orleans' Mardi Gras. Carnival, which began in 1912, has been an annual event since 1952. For information, call the US Virgin Islands tourist office at (800) USVI-INFO.

St. Maarten begins its 16 days of merrymaking on April 18. Carnival takes place on the Dutch side of this half-Dutch, half-French island and is held later than most because its dates were originally set to center on April 30, the birthday of former Queen Juliana of the Netherlands. For information, call (800) 786-2278.

GARDEN TOURS

The famed Chelsea Flower Show in London will be one of the highlights of a 12-day tour of England's finest gardens sponsored by the Scituate Garden Club. The May 18-29 trip is open to all interested in horticulture and gardening. The $2,795 package includes air fare, most meals and membership in the Royal Oak Foundation. For information, write to Gwen Ferrini, travel consultant, 80 First Parish Road, Scituate, MA 02066; telephone (617) 545-3535.

WGBH Learning Tours will have two garden tours this spring. Tulip Time in the Low Countries, April 27-May 6 offers a tour of Belgium and Holland. The package is $2,820, including air fare. The Gardens of Ireland ($3,220) is the subject of a tour June 1-11. Peter Seabrook of "The Victory Garden" will lead both tours. For information, call Cy Britt, WGBH Learning Tours, at (617) 492-2777, ext. 3761.

DINING TREATS

The Four Seasons Hotel Boston begins its three-month Celebrity Chef Series dinners in Aujourd'hui, just named the fourth-best restaurant in the nation by Conde Nast Traveler.

Aujourd'hui chef Jamie Mammano will be joined by visiting chefs from around the country. Elka Gilmore of Elka and Liberte of San Francisco begins the series Wednesday. Elka, as she is known, shares time between her two restaurants, one known for its "definitive seafood," the other for "French food cooked in America." Chef Mammano has earned a reputation for his light, tasty dishes based on the freshest regional ingredients available. For information, call (617) 451-1392.

This was the last week of the Celebrity Chef Festival at the Copley Plaza in Boston. On Saturday, executive chef Gary Clauson of the Hotel Bel-Air in Los Angeles had a cooking demonstration and wine tasting at 4 p.m. Today, Copley's launches its Sunday Caribbean Brunch featuring items from conch chowder and spicy fish cakes to baked grouper and cinnamon pork chops. For information on other Copley events (such as the Ocean Harvest Celebrations on Fridays), call (617) 267-5300, ext. 1542.

EASTER ON HIGH

An unusual way to spend Easter this year is to join the EduTrip atop New England's highest peak, Mount Washington. The view Easter morning could be spectacular; then again, trip leader Ben English says the weather generally is "uncooperative," with visibility limited to a few hundred feet. The overnight visit includes basic map reading and compass skills and a tour of the observatory. For information, call (603) 356-8345.

Also in New Hampshire, Easter sunrise services are planned atop Cannon Mountain in Franconia (call 603-823-5563) and Mount Tecumseh at Waterville Valley. For information on lift and lodging packages, which range from $39 to $49 a night per person (those under age 12 stay free) at Waterville, call (800) 468-2553.

SUMMER SAVINGS

Summer cruises aboard the luxurious 800-passenger Marco Polo to intriguing Asian capitals should have added appeal for singles and couples. Single travelers pay no supplement on the cruises, and, for couples, the second passenger's fare on the June 14-Aug. 17 sailings will be discounted 30 to 50 percent. The seven- to 20-day cruises begin at $2,650 a person; air fare is extra. For information, call (800) 333-7300.

FESTIVE YEAR

It's a grand year for touring Europe. Among this year's festivities: Spain will be celebrating its Islamic heritage with exhibitions at Granada's Alhambra, and from April to July, Cordoba will focus on Moorish architecture. Europe will be marking the 50th anniversary of the ending of World War II.

In Denmark, a miles-long, two-hour laser show along the Jutland coast takes place May 4 to mark the anniversary of the ending of the war. Christo, who is known for his large drapings on Florida islands and placing of sheets over California hills, will wrap Berlin's historic Reichstage in aluminum sheeting this summer. Luxembourg City is Europe's cultural capital, with special performances throughout the year.

Ireland will be commemorating the Famine Years of the 1800s. It will be Christmas in July in Copenhagen. From July 20 to 22, Father Christmases from all over the world will gather for their 34th annual summer conference, and even help the folks at Tuborg Brewery make their famous holiday brew.

Germany's Bavaria will be celebrating its Fairy-Tale King, Ludwig II, who was born 150 years ago. His castle is considered the model for the one at Disney World. In London, they will be opening the Globe Theatre, a replica of the 17th-century one, and will begin performances of — what else? — Shakespeare in August. England is also celebrating a Festival of Arts and Culture just about everywhere, and in Scotland, the 250th anniversary of the ill-fated Jacobite Uprising led by Bonnie Prince Charlie will be commemorated.

PAINTED PRAYERS

A rare view of India is being seen in the dazzling "Painted Prayers: Women's Art in Village India" (Rizzoi International Publications, $50). Stephen Huyer, who lives in Camden, Maine, offers 170 photographs and informative text that tells of the rituals, traditions and beliefs behind the art that has to now been obscured by its anonymity.

The painting on walls, ground and in home furnishings are designed for personal communication with the gods, not for artistic expression. Ground and floor paintings are routinely swept away and then restored, often in a pre-dawn ritual. The book certainly presents a different view of this vast country by an observer who has spent at least four months for each of the last 23 years traveling to Indian villages. It is indeed a beautiful book and testimony to the rich traditions that have been handed down from mother to daughter.

The photographs will also be on view at San Francisco's Asian Art Museum through June 30; University of Denver's Driscoll Gallery, April 23-June 5; the Museum of Art in Santa Barbara, June 10-Aug. 27; and the Smithsonian's Arthur M. Sackler Gallery in Washington, July 23-Jan. 1.

ROYAL PLEASURES

Experiencing the life of kings and queens of France is an offering from Trianon Place in Versailles. The program is inspired by life at Le Petit Trianon and Marie Antoinette's Hameau and includes learning dances of the 18th century, visiting the private apartments at Versailles, obtaining fruits and vegetables from Louis XIV's kitchen garden, cooking lessons from two-star chef Gerard Vie, concerts and more. The program is $5,268 and includes seven nights' accommodations, meals and airport pickup. For information, call (800) 772-3041.

TURKEY DISCOVERED

More and more travelers are discovering Turkey, and the reasons are many. The country has been referred to as "the world's largest open air museum" having been home to some of the world's greatest civilizations. Ephesus, even in its ruins, shines as when it once was the ancient world's greatest city.

Even Turkey's coastline is inviting, so much so that Mark Antony presented part of it to his bride Cleopatra as a wedding present. For travelers, Turkey is a very affordable destination with a favorable exchange rate, four-course meals with wine for under $20 and even domestic flights of no more than $50 one way. Last year more than 200,000 Americans visited in the first nine months, and this year tourism is expected to rise by at least 10 percent. For information on the country, call the Turkish Tourist Office at (212) 687-2194.

FREE GUIDES

A free 80-page guide to Sweden is available by writing to the Swedish Travel and Tourism Council, 655 Third Ave., New York, NY 10017; telephone (212) 949-2333. According to the tourist council, the dollar buys 30 percent more than previously.

For a free copy of Finland for Visitors, write to the Finnish Tourist Board at 655 Third Ave., New York, NY 10017; telephone (212) 949-2333.

Balloons, boats and block parties to mark beginning of Triple Crown race season

N.Y. Times News Service

Balloons, boat races and block parties will herald the Kentucky Derby, to be held in Louisville, Ky., on May 6, and the Preakness Stakes in Baltimore on May 20, two of the three horse races of the Triple Crown; the third is the Belmont Stakes on June 10 at Belmont Park on Long Island.

The Derby and the Preakness are both preceded by festivals.

The Kentucky Derby Festival starts on April 21, the first day of a 10-day hole-in-one golf contest and the opening day of the Downtown Chow Wagon, which offers light fare, beer and live entertainment. The next night, 30,000 fireworks will be exploded over the Ohio River.

Other major events include a hot-air balloon race on April 29, a steamboat race on May 3 and the 40th annual Pegasus Parade with floats, bands, mounted units and giant balloons on May 4.

Many events are free; those with entry fees range from $2 to $200 a couple for the Derby Ball on April 21. Seats for the race at Churchill Downs are sold out, but standing room is available at $30 at the clubhouse and $20 in the grandstand or infield. More information: (502) 499-0905.

The Preakness Celebration begins May 12, eight days before the Preakness Stakes, with a liftoff of some 50 hot-air balloons and a downtown block party, which will be repeated nightly.

There will also be a balloon race, a five-kilometer run and the 22d annual Preakness Parade, all on May 13; a country music festival May 12 to 14, jazz concerts on May 13 and 14, the Triple Crown Ball on May 18 and an alternative ball, called the Preakness Eve Bash, on May 19.

Admission to the Triple Crown Ball, a charity event, is $275 a person; to the Preakness Eve Bash, $75.

The music events are $10 a day in advance, $15 at the gate. Standing room at the race ranges from $12 to $20. More information: (410) 837-3030.

Jo Ford, Veterinary Technology administrator, watches as Sue Dolan, Dupont representative, installs a sodium/potassium analyzer donated by Dupont.

The Veterinary Technology program recently received provisional accreditation through the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA). The accreditation means the program can now attract new students. It also indicates that the MC program meets AVMA standards, according to Veterinary Technology instructor Dr. Kerry Coombs.

Parenting classes offered

Midland College and Centers for Children & Families will present "Stress Management in the Workplace" 7-9 p.m., Tuesday, April 11.

The seminar will be in room 114 of the MC Allison Fine Arts Building. Cost is $15 per class.

For more information, call Debbie Lindsey at 561-5508.

Counseling seminar set

Members of the Permian Basin Counselors Association will meet in the Midland College Scharbauer Student Center's Roadrunner Room 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m., Tuesday, April 11.

The meeting will include information about student services at Midland College including financial aid, concurrent enrollment, TASP testing and freshman orientation.

"The Governor's Show" sponsored by the Texas Photographic Society will be on display in Midland College's McCormick Gallery through April 21.

McCormick Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday; 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m.- 5 p.m. Sunday.

Changes bring program into 90s

■ Office System Technology instructors Leanne Jamison and Rebecca Bell think that change is good—and it is that philosophy that keeps their program on the leading edge of business and industry demands.

Office Systems Technology (OSTE) instructor Leanne Jamison doesn't pause before answering the questions about changes in the Midland College program in the last four years.

"We brought this program into the 90's," she said.

When Jamison came to Midland College in 1990 the program used outdated computer hardware and software, still relied mainly on typewriters for instruction and the program was called Office Education (OFED).

But, by the time instructor Rebecca Bell began teaching in 1991 the program was undergoing big changes.

"We did a lot more than changing the program's initials," Jamison said.

Jamison and Bell proudly list the additions to the program since 1991. New computers replaced typewriters, and the two full-time instructors and five part-time instructors teach classes on a full-range of software including the spreadsheet program Excel 5.0, CorelDraw for desktop publishing and Microsoft Word for Windows.

They also have added courses on medical office procedures and medical transcription.

But, the biggest change for the program may be in the philosophy. "We want to be leaders not followers," Jamison said.

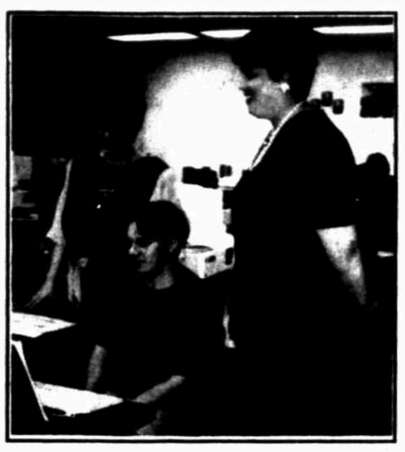

It is a philosophy that keeps the instructors jumping to "stay on the leading edge of business and industry demands," Bell said. In four years at Midland College, Bell has taught three versions of WordPerfect. Since software is changed more frequently than the textbooks that support it, Bell and Jamison find themselves teaching courses without textbooks and they rarely teach the same material twice.

"We're good at changing quickly," Bell said. "We can't remain static. If we don't change then there's no point in teaching the course."

However, the payoff for their dedication is high. "We give people a career not a job," Bell said.

The program has an 88 percent job placement rate for the OSTE students who complete the 35-hour certificate program or MC's associate degree program.

"Teaching something people want to know" has been the key to the success of the OSTE curriculum that includes a full semester of instruction for each computer application, business English, business calculations and marketing.

Students also are encouraged to take accounting to aid them in jobs that require payroll and bookkeeping.

Training in MC's OSTE program prepares students for jobs in office administration and office management. Jamison and Bell have several methods to make sure their program meets the demands of local employers.

The OSTE advisory board, which gets business people from the community involved in the program, is a "good cross-section of the business community" Bell said.

Jamison and Bell also rely on personal experience to keep them current with business trends. Jamison, who has a master's degree in Business Administration, and her husband describe themselves as "entrepreneurs in the Midland retail industry."

Bell, who has a master's degree in Human Resources, works with Temporary Resources in the summer.

While Jamison and Bell fight to keep track of industry trends, they never forget the student comes first.

"We hope students' children will come to Midland College because their parents have had a positive experience here," Bell said.

Students receive top awards

Welding students Carbajol, Davis, Hubbard, Latzel and Qualls.

Midland College/Lee High School VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) students displayed their prize-winning welding projects at MC recently.

These students received superior ratings in state competition for projects produced in welding classes at Midland College.

An agreement between the Midland Independent School District and Midland College allows students to attend vocational classes at MC along with their regular high school classes and earn credit for both.

The students took their projects to the state competition in Dallas March 30-31.

Superior ratings were awarded to projects earning at least 90 out of a possible 100 points. Casey Davis received a perfect score of 100 points with his basketball rack design.

New entrance to Bookstore joins it to 'circle of life'

A new entrance that allows customers to enter the college's Bookstore directly from the Scharbauer Student Center has put it back into the "circle of life" on campus, according to Bookstore manager Dorothy Cleere.

Cleere is celebrating the remodeling with new merchandise and expanded services, but the entrance is also part of an overall plan to make the registration process more convenient to students.

Students who register early for interim classes April 18-20 and students who go through early registration for summer classes April 24-26 can register for classes, pay fees and buy books for class all in one area of the Student Center—one stop shopping for registration.

The Bookstore and the campus club Re-Treads are sponsoring an Easter Bonnet Contest at noon, Thursday, April 13 in the Student Center.

There will be a division for children and another for adults and the Easter Bunny will make a special appearance. Stop by the Bookstore or call 685-4547 to enter the contest.

Starting Young

Mi Vida

Top right, Yessica Navarrete, 12, hangs a photograph of her parents. Above, Denisse Pineda, 11, gets help from Melanie Mathewes, the museum's curator of education. Two of the young photographers, at right, hang their work for the "My Vida" exhibit. The photo in the foreground is the work of Jesus Obed Ortega.The youngest photographer with work in the exhibit, Gabriel Prieto, 6, shown at left, holds a picture — which he mounted and matted himself — of his bicyle.

The influences shaping the lives of 12 youngsters between the ages of 6 and 13 form the perspective of the exhibition "Mi Vida: People and Places that are Important to Me" on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through April 15.

"I'm very proud of the project," said Melanie Leigh Mathewes, curator of education for the museum. "I'm very proud of the children. The whole project seems to have been a success."

The endeavor began months ago when the Arts Assembly of Midland approached the museum about working in collaboration with the assembly and Casa de Amigos through a grant from the Texas Commission on the Arts.

Mrs. Mathewes had in mind a project that she had not been able to find the resources to initiate. She wanted to teach children to display their work in an exhibition they had designed. The idea was approved by all involved.

That was last fall. In January, classes began at Casa for children whose parents were in the English as a Second Language Program. Both classes met the same nights.

"We started by bringing the children over to the museum and giving them a tour and discussing what an exhibit was, what kind of things you find in it, why it's done the way it's done, why you use labels," Mrs. Mathewes said. "We just broke it down, and broke it down until it was easy for the children to understand."

Next, in the twice-weekly classes at Casa, came the discussion of what subject matter would form the nucleus of the exhibition. Among the topics suggested were lizards and car stereo systems.

"I told them if they do a topic like that, then they have to research all the information so they can tell people about lizards or speakers," Mrs. Mathewes said. "We decided that instead of doing that kind of topic or presenting that kind of information, we wanted to do something we were experts in, something we knew something about as a group.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Guest to speak

Thomas Esteban Chavez is to speak at the Museum of the Southwest's Under Starry Skies Lecture Series at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Chavez — director of the Palace of the Governors of the Museum of New Mexico at Santa Fe — is to talk on "The Second Great Encounter, Manifest Destiny, and The Black Legend." He will discuss stereotypes of Southwestern Hispanic history, negative connotations and the influence of 16th century Spain on settlements and independence in the Southwest.

A historian with a doctorate from the University of New Mexico, Chavez specializes in the American West, colonial Latin America and the United States to 1880. He has been a Fulbright Fellow during research in Spain on the role of Spain in the American revolution. This research is being published this year as "An Intrinsically Great Gift: Spain and the Independence of the United States."

Cost for the lecture is $3 for museum members and $5 for nonmembers. The lectures series is sponsored in part by the Reporter-Telegram and the Midland Hilton.

Parents attending the lecture may bring their children to the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, museum complex, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., for supervised play from 6:30 to 8:39 p.m. for no charge. This service is made possible through a grant from the Abell-Hanger Foundation.

For more information call 683-2882 or 570-7770.

■ Association to meet

Midland Arts Association will meet at 2 p.m. today at Stables Gallery at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

A demonstration in watercolors will be conducted by local artist Jean Johnson. The monthly business meeting will follow the demonstration. The public is invited to attend.

Also, MAA members will supply an Open Show Small Works Exhibit at the Midland Woman's Club, East Wadley at Hogan Park, May 1-24. A reception is planned at the Woman's Club from 2 to 4 p.m. May 7. Each member may enter one original painting, drawing, print, collage or photograph ready to hang. Size limitation is 16 inches by 20 inches including frame.

Several MAA members took awards at the 37th annual Juried Show sponsored by the Odessa Art Association.

Cynthia Wolfe received Best in Show with "Book of Fish 3: 12" and an honorable mention for "Disarray at Tea Junction." John E. Meyer took the Grumbacher Award for best use of color for his work "Hondo Apples."

Other winners were Helen Gilmore Pogue, third place, oil and acrylic, for "Day Break on Bigham Ranch, Turnersville;" Kitt Blair Beck, first place, graphics for "Survivor" and honorable mention, crafts and sculpture for "Pathway"; Mary E. Jackson, graphics honorable mention for "Collage No. 3": Olivia Hill, third place, photography for "Incunabula"; Sharon Navage, honorable mention, photography for "Taking Stock"; Sireesha Amaran, honorable mention, pastels for "Shilpa's Room"; Janet S. Haney, first place, watercolors for "Ring of Life" and an honorable mention for "Frenzied Moments"; and Charlotte Seay, second place, watercolors for "Remnants of the Past."

■ Exhibit displayed

ODESSA — An exhibition of works by Gary Bain entitled "Industria II" is on display at Proteus Gallery, 112 W. 5th, through May 27.

Gallery hours are 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 P.M. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information call 580-4244.

■ Opree planned

ODESSA — Odessa's Gospel Opree is set for 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Saturday at the Globe Theatre, 2308 Shakespeare Road, Odessa College campus.

The performance will feature "Country Spirit" with Vickie Smith and "The Glovers." Tickets for the show are $5 for open seating. For more information call 1-915-332-1586.

■ Pops Concert set

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Symphony will present "High Class Brass" at the Target family Pops Concert April 22.

The orchestra and 120-voice symphony chorale will perform music from the award-winning motion pictures "The Lion King" and "Forest Gump." Concert time is 8 p.m.

A Russian documentary film team will film the event.

General admission tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $4 for students, may be purchased at the symphony office or Target.

■ Tickets on sale

LUBBOCK — Reserved seat tickets are on sale for the Tim McGraw and Little Texas concert at Lubbock Coliseum May 4.

Special guest for the 7:30 p.m. show is Blackhawk. Tickets may be purchased by calling 1-800-735-1288.

■ Talk show airs

Fourth-generation Texan Jim Gough has introduced Southwestern culture into talk radio. The call-in talk show, "Texas USA," airs every Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. on TSN affiliates throughout the state.

The program originates from KRLD Radio's new studios in Arlington and can be heard in neighboring states on KRLD 1080 AM.

The show features personal interviews with legendary and contemporary performers, writers, musicians, actors and poets. Recent guests have included Roy Rogers, the Texas Playboys, Don Edwards, Patsy Montana and Michael Martin Murphy.

■ Exhibition opens

ANDREWS — The 22nd annual Andrews Art Exhibition opens April 23.

Entries will be accepted from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. April 20. Cost is $5 a entry. There is not limit. No entry fee will be refunded.

"The Early Ones" by Harvey Johnson will be part of "The Legend Lives" exhibition at The Cowboy Artists of America Museum, Kerrville.

Exhibit to celebrate 30 years of work

KERRVILLE — The Cowboy Artists of American Museum is going to host a landmark exhibit celebrating 30 years of artwork by one of the most noted and enduring coalitions of Western artists in the country.

"The Legend Lives: 30 Years of the Cowboy Artists of America" will be on display April 28-July 16.

The association began in 1965 when a few cowboys got together in Sedona, Ariz., to discuss the future of traditional Western art. For the founding foursome — Joe Beeler, Charlie Dye, John Hampton and George Phippen — Western art masters Frederic Remington and Charles Russell were heroes. A friendly conversation led to the formation of "The Cowboy Artists of America."

Three decades later, the association has grown to include 26 active members, whose works set the standard in Western art today.

"The Legend Lives" will include around 60 paintings and sculptures from active and emeritus CA members.

Categories include oils/acrylics, watercolors, pastels, graphics, miniatures, photography and sculpture/pottery.

For more information call Linda Culp, 1-915-523-5821, Jo Coats, 1-915-523-9096, or Flo Patton, 1-915-523-2068.

■ Open Show set

Gallery 1114 is hosting its ninth annual Open Show through April 27.

In addition, the exhibit "Digs at the Boydsville Tell" by local artist Boyd Harris is on display through April 27.

The gallery at 1114 N. Big Spring St. is a co-operative center for modern and contemporary art. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday. For more information call 685-9944 or 687-7104.

■ Singers to perform

The Adult Choristers of The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and the Sanctuary Choir of First Presbyterian Church will present works by G.F. Handel at 3 p.m. today in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian, 800 W. Texas Ave.

No admission will be charged. A nursery will be provided.

Lester Ackerman, director of music at First Presbyterian, will conduct the combined choirs. Vocal soloists will be Janet Menzie, Joe Duerksen and David Morrow.

In addition to the choral works, Darryl Knapp, organist and choirmaster of Holy Trinity, will perform Handel's Organ Concerto Opus 4, No. 2 in B-flat Major.

■ Dolls on display

BIG SPRING — A century of history shows in the faces, hairstyles and costumes of a devoted doll collector's lifetime hobby, on display at Big Spring's Heritage Museum, 510 Scurry.

The exhibit, which includes about 1,500 dolls from the collection of a Big Spring family, recreates one of the city's landmarks — the Doll Museum, Third and Gregg streets.

■ Concert scheduled

Stephen Stills comes to Midland College's Chaparral Center for an 8 p.m. concert April 21.

Tickets are priced at $15 and $18.50. They may be purchased at Midland Sound, Dollar Western Wear, Endless Horizons in Odessa, Circuit Electronics in Big Spring, and Dan's Music and Video in Pecos.

■ Collection shown

ALPINE — The Mescalero Gallery, 400 Walker St. is presenting the first part of the Eley Collection of Agate to the public through May 1.

A reception is planned from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday. Inda Benson will be on hand to answer any questions concerning the work of the late Lawrence Eley. Eley served on the staff of the University of Pennsylvania for some 40 years. He traveled extensively in this country and abroad searching always for agate.

Ms. Benson, a native of Alpine, knew Eley during the later years of his life. She purchased the extensive collection from his estate.

The collection includes hundreds of stones ranging from small cabachons, which could only be cut with the aid of a microscope in order to preserve the intricate patterns found in the agate, to large cabachons, which could be set in jewelry for men or women.

■ Jazz Party set

ODESSA — The Odessa Jazz Association is presenting the 29th annual Odessa Jazz Party May 16-21 at the Holiday Inn Centre.

Musicians performing include Milt Hinton and Jack Lesberg, bass; Ken Peplowski, clarinet; Joe Ascione and Jake Hanna, drums; Bucky Pizzarelli, guitar; Ralph Sutton and Ray Sherman, piano; Harry Allen and Jim Galloway, saxophone; John Allred and Dan Barrett, trombone; and Ed Polcer and Randy Sandke, trumpet.

Hours are 8 p.m. to midnight May 16-20 and 2 to 6 p.m. May 21. Admission for all sets is $150 per person. Make checks payable to Odessa Jazz Association, P.O. Box 7948, Odessa, Texas 79760. for more information call 1-915-332-7871.

Buttons may be picked up at the Holiday Inn Centre May 16 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and again at 7 p.m.

■ Broadcast set

"The Ghosts of Versailles," with music by John Corigliano and libretto by William F. Hoffman, will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House at 12:30 p.m. Saturday over radio station KCRS.

James Levine will conduct a cast that includes Teresa Stratas as Marie Antoinette, Tracy Dahl as Florestine, Hei-Kyung Hong as Rosina, Marilyn Horne as Samira, Allan Glassman as Begearss, Paul Groves as Leon, Gino Quilico as Figaro, and in their Met broadcast debuts, Kurt Streit as Count Almaviva and Hector Vasquez as Beaumarchais.

■ Book signing set

Author D.G. "Mac" McWilliams will sign copies of his book, "Never Too Old to Cry," from 2 to 5 p.m. on April 22 at Pages and Prints Bookstore.

In "Never Too Old to Cry," McWilliams brings to life six young Marines in the midst of the Wolrd War II battles for the Pacific Islands.

McWilliams joined the U.S. Marine Corps in 1943 and served with the First Marine Division in the Pacific during the war. He was stationed in China until his discharge in 1946. He earned engineering degrees from Texas Tech University. He worked for Tenneco Oil Company, and he and his wife, Maggie, lived in Lafayette, La., until his retirement in 1986. Since his retirement, he has been researching "Never Too Old to Cry" as well as writing other fiction. He currently lives in Fair Oaks Ranch, Texas.

"Never Too Old to Cry," available in trade paperback, is being distributed by Ingram and Baker &Taylor.

■ Artists added

Gallery A of Midland, ClayDesta Center, Suite 2620, has added four artists to those it is representing: Cyrus Afsary of Scottsdale, Ariz., Kathleen Cook of Kerrville, Floyd Gentry of Fort Worth and Carolann Haggard of Garland.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and by appointment. Owner is John L. Inman. For more information call 686-7653.

■ Collection on loan

RUIDOSO, N.M. —The Museum of the Horse at Ruidoso Downs will open "The Imperial Russian Horse: Equine Art from the Reign of the Czars" April 23.

This collection of paintings and bronze sculptures are on loan from the Museum of Horse Breeding in Moscow. The art will remain through Sept. 10.

The exhibit will open with a gala April 22.

■ Deadline set

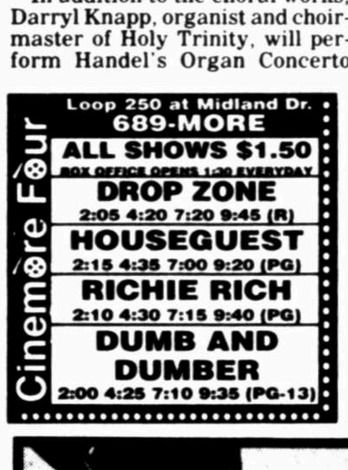

Deadline for applications for Septemberfest is April 15.

Categories for the juried show include, among others, ceramics, fiber, leather, jewelry, oil, pastels, photography and pottery.

Those interested in receiving an application or more information may write to Los Manos Septemberfest, P.O. Box 50668, Midland, 79710, or call the artist chairman, 694-6828. Las Manos, the auxiliary organization for the museum, sponsors the event.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, APRIL 9, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Courage will help you find success in business and happiness in love. Refuse to be bullied or nagged into doing something that does not feel right. Although teamwork is the key to swifter career advancement, there will be times when you must work alone. Next fall, focus on building a wider base of support. New alliances could mean higher profits! Give young adults an opportunity to find their own niche. Too much "guidance" can undermine self-reliance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: model Paulina Porizkova, golfer Seve Ballesteros, Playboy founder Hugh Hefner, actress Keshia Knight Pulliam.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Funds held in common could be affected by a third party's actions. A younger person offers a friendly warning. Do not panic! You have the inside track.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An inspiring sermon or talk could rekindle your faith. An interest in education grows stronger. Consider giving or taking a class in the arts. Romance heats up when you reveal more of your plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance takes a turn for the better. Although you do not have to blend in with the crowd, you should not try to offend people either. Avoid behaving erratically; loved ones will not understand.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not let a stubborn streak upset a family member's plans. Do everything possible to promote domestic harmony. Paying bills on time protects your credit rating. Be diligent.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your nesting instinct comes to the fore. Go ahead and host a wonderful reunion or birthday party. Sharing the cooking and clean-up chores will give you more time to enjoy your guests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Those who give more than they demand will eventually gain their heart's desire. Focus on removing an obstacle to your love life by peaceful means. Finesse, not force, is required. Speak from the heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A partner may be going through a period of transition. Encourage growth and self-knowledge. Although invitations come your way, you may be feeling shy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Welcome a reconciliation with a brother or sister. Vacation travel is possible. A stable home is of vital importance. Wear your heart on your sleeve; romantic partner will respond favorably.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Contention is likely between partners as well as competitors. Emphasize good public relations. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day for your personal and professional ambitions. You may be asked your opinion on a real estate venture. Settle a domestic conflict peacefully, compromising when necessary. Others admire your spunky attitude towards life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A relationship will bring you more than you bargained for. Luckily, you are in the mood for a challenge. Adventure beckons! Interesting people seek your company. Shake up your life in any way possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try to forget past disappointments. An element of good luck seems to follow you today. A relationship improves when you feel self-confident again. Good-hearted actions produce a nice pay-off. Friends applaud.

The bidding:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
Pass	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

Take a vote among cognoscenti for the best card player ever, and Blue Team star Giorgio Belladonna would be right there in the top five. However, this hand, accredited to him by many of his admirers although he never claimed it himself, is actually a problem by the gifted composer, the late Paul Lukacz of Tel Aviv, Israel.

The opening bid of four spades is a normal action opposite a passed hand and there are many possible lines, most of which offer several chances. For example, after winning the ace of diamonds, declarer can lead a heart toward the king. If that loses and a trump is returned, declarer can try the finesse.

As the cards lie, that, too, fails, but declarer can win the trump return in hand and either attempt the club finesse or cross to the ace of clubs and lead a heart toward the jack. Neither is destined to succeed, so a one-trick set is declarer's fate.

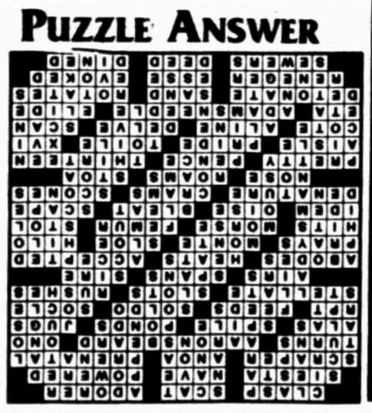

However, there is a sure-trick line that succeeds even with everything wrong. At trick two, declarer must cross to the ace of clubs and lead a low heart away from the king!

Let's suppose that East plays low and the jack of hearts loses to West's queen. West cannot return a trump without sacrificing a trick, and with any other return declarer will be able to ruff a heart in dummy and lose only two heart tricks and a trump. If the offenders are able to remove dummy's spades, declarer will lose three heart tricks but no trump.

What if East wins the heart? Whether it be with the queen or the ace, declarer will then lose only two heart tricks and a trump. Beautiful!

A project of the Arts Assemby of Midland

YOUNG: Children hand their museum exhibit

(From 1G)

"They decided the thing that they were experts in were their own lives. They knew about what was happening to them, so that's where we got the title for the exhibit — "mi vida," which means my life.

"But, since they were doing photography, they realized they couldn't take pictures of themselves. They decided to focus on the people and places that were most important to them. That's where we got the second part of the title."

Next, the youth were taught how to use their cameras. After briefly working in color, they learned about black-and-white photography, and how to use it to make a statement.

Helping with the project was photographer Teronneau Mathewes.

"He took the film and processed it and made the contact sheets for the children," Mrs. Mathewes said. "Then the children took their contact sheets and selected their favorite image. They got in the darkroom with the photographer and enlarged their print."

The children also matted their prints, framed them and wrote the labels, in English and Spanish. Then, the photographer selected an additional shot from each participant. These are displayed as "Instructor's Choice."

"Throughout the entire project they had been keeping journals," Mrs. Mathewes said. "I went back through their journals and pulled out their biographies and one significant remark made within their journal entries."

The final step was having the 12 participants hang their work.

"I think for the rest of my life I'm going to remember one child's response in particular," said Mrs. Mathewes, referring to 10-year-old Ruben Socarro.

After he hung his picture, he stood back, his arms stretched up over his head and sort of announced to the world, 'Yes.' That made me feel so good. He had followed the project from beginning to end, and he definitely had a sense of accomplishment."

Twenty-four children moved through the project, Mrs. Mathewes said. The 12 who saw it through from beginning to end are the ones whose work hang in the exhibit.

Those youth are Eloisa Gonzalez, Jaime Jaquez, Yessica Navarrete, Jesus Obed Ortega, Lorena Ortega, Mindy Ortega, Denisse Pineda, Gabriel Prieto, Irene Socarro, Ruben Socarro and Ivon Villescas.

For the visitors who come through the exhibition, Mrs. Mathewes hopes "Mi Vida" will "make a difference.

"The children made remarks commenting on their lives and their community and that is Midland, and all of us live here. And all of us in some fashion or another affect the lives of these children. We are part of what we see.

The Under Starry Skies Lecture Series

April 13
The Second Great Encounter, Manifest Destiny, and the Black Legend

The Director of Santa Fe's Palace of the Governors, Thomas Chavez, Ph. D., will discuss the history of Hispanic stereotypes in the Southwest. Also, he will address the influence of sixteenth century Spain on settlement and independence in the Southwest.

All lectures are held at the Museum of the Southwest on the second Thursday evening of each month from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. The cost of each lecture is $5.00, $3.00 for members. A ticket for the complete series is $27.00, $15.00 for members, and can be purchased on the first night of the series. The Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum will be open the evenings of the lectures from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. for the children of parents attending the lectures. Supervised play will be offered at no extra charge.

The Under Starry Skies Lecture Series is sponsored in part by the Midland Hilton and the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Artist's pastel works to be on display

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, is presenting "Mysteries of Light and Shadow," an exhibition of pastel paintings by Kathleen Cook, through April 16.

"Though not especially fond of labels in art, I believe my work is most comfortable in the category of contemporary realism," Ms. Cook said. "I am fascinated by the skill necessary to capture people and things as they really are. But, from this academic foundation of accuracy, I strive to reach beyond the obvious to give my paintings a fresh point of view."

A resident of Kerrville, Ms. Cook has been a professional artist for 26 years. Working exclusively in the vibrant pastel medium for the past 14 years, she is a signature member of the Pastel Society of America.

"Due to my continual involvement with the figure I use pastel almost exclusively," Ms. Cook said. "I prefer pastel because of its amazing versatility in capturing the luminosity of flesh."

Her paintings have won major awards in national and international competitions.

"The subjects in my paintings are recognizable and often common everyday items; but, through the use of unusual combinations of objects, asymmetrical compositions, dramatic perspectives and strong light and shadows, I like to create magical environments that produce a sense of mystery and give the viewer the impression of having 'happened upon' a strange scene that we are not normally allowed to observe."

She has been featured in American Artist and Southwest Art magazines and is listed in "Who's Who in American Art," Bowker Edition.

"As an artist I constantly try to approach each painting with a fresh eye and attitude," Ms. Cook said. "I am not content to slavishly copy nature or to repeat paintings I have done in the past. there are so many subjects and painting ideas waiting to be brought to life, so much to be learned, that my only regret is that I won't live long enough to finish them all."

Art Institute hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. for more information call 550-3811.

Pastel Mysteries

A showing of "Mysteries of Light and Shadow" by Kathleen Cook, will be held at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin. Included in the exhibit will be "Dream Watch," shown at right; "The Uninvited Guest," below; and "In the Shadows," bottom right.
