MCHD board certifies tax rollback petition

■ MCHD board's acceptance of petition clears the way for rollback issue to be put to a vote.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

The Midland County Hospital District (MCHD) board, meeting in a Thursday evening session to accommodate members of the public, certified the rollback petition it received Monday from members of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse.

"We had 20 days to certify it and we did it in two," said board chairman Tom Bruner.

He said the petition contained 5,694 qualified voters' signatures, significantly more than the 10 percent of the 48,658 registered Midland County voters it required.

"Since there are 800 more signatures than were required, I'd recommend that we save the expense of hand-certifying each one and certify the petition as received," Bruner said.

Since the board has the responsibility of challenging the petition, its acceptance of it clears the way for putting the rollback issue to a vote.

Ted Kerr, the district's legal counsel, told the board that it could not call the rollback election earlier than 30 days after getting the petition. He suggested the board present the election order at the next board meeting, scheduled for Dec. 20.

The election would give citizens the option of scaling down the district's 19.6 percent tax increase to fund indigent care costs to an 8 percent increase.

The rollback would decrease property taxes from 16.6 cents per $100 valuation to 14.9 cents. The owner of an average $53,180 home would see $9 in savings with the rollback.

Bruner said the election and the successful rollback would cost the district about $745,000 in refunds, election costs and postage.

"It will have to come from hospital operations," he said. "The cost of indigent care won't go away just because its on the ballot."

In defense of its tax rate, the board called on its public relations director, Laurie Johnson, to describe the board's ranking among the 13 hospital districts serving populations of greater than 100,000.

Ex-soldier held

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A former U.S. soldier with relatives in Kuwait and Iraq was ordered held without bail Thursday on charges he plotted to kill President Bush and other government officials, and attack military installations.

Jamal Mohamed Warrayat, 32, allegedly discussed a plan to kill Bush, Secretary of State James Baker and members of Congress with an undercover FBI agent.

Court papers also said he conspired, as the leader of a group of seven people, to attack unspecified military installations in North Carolina and Texas.

Execution stay

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted a stay Thursday for alleged serial killer Henry Lee Lucas, who was scheduled to die by injection Monday for a 1979 slaying.

The court issued the reprieve so it could consider a claim by Lucas' attorneys that the trial jury should have been able to consider mitigating circumstances before sentencing him to death.

Nerve disease frustrating for once-active teen

■ Golf tournament planned to help pay expenses of teen suffering from rare Guillain-Barre syndrome.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Three months ago, Bryan Brookings, 15, spent every free moment on the golf course. He was on the Lee High School golf team and worked as a bag boy at Green Tree Country Club. Now he's puttering around the house, literally.

Bryan is using a putter as a cane to support his steps these days. He's recovering from his second bout with Guillain-Barre syndrome, a rare peripheral nerve inflammation that causes temporary paralysis.

Both occurrences of the syndrome were triggered by standard school vaccinations: DPT this time and a flu shot in 1980.

Bryan noticed the numbness in his toes that signaled the onset of the illness on the same day, Sept. 6, both times.

"I felt a numbness in my feet a few days after the shot. After a day the numbness progressed up through my legs to my upper body. A week or two later I was paralyzed from my neck down," he said.

"Needless to say, he's not taking any more shots," said Bryan's dad, Randy Brookings.

"Yeah, I would've rather had the flu," Bryan added.

U.N. vote sends message to Saddam, Bush says

■ U.N. Security Council votes 12-2 authorizing use of force against Iraq if troops don't withdraw from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. Security Council, led by the United States, voted 12-2 Thursday to authorize military action to free Kuwait if Iraq does not withdraw its occupying troops and release all foreign hostages by Jan. 15.

The only other time the council, created 45 years ago to iron out international disputes, has sanctioned force in its history to counter aggression was during the Korean War.

China abstained, to the disappointment of the Bush administration, while Cuba and Yemen cast dissenting votes in a session arranged by the United States in a show of international solidarity against Iraq.

In an extradordinary meeting of 13 foreign ministers, the council handed Iraqi President Saddam Hussein an ultimatum to vacate the small oil-rich sheikdom that his troops invaded Aug. 2, or risk military conflict with U.S.-led forces. The session ended with a round of handshakes and embraces.

In Washington, President Bush called the U.N. vote "a very strong and powerful message. It will go around the world loud and clear that this guy's got to get out of there.

"Once again, the United Nations, exercising its proper responsibility and its peacekeeping function,

Lee High student body to vote on Rebel flag, other symbols

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Emotions have run high over the controversy of Lee High School's Rebel flag, the song "Dixie," and other Confederate-influenced school trappings. But what do the students really think? The students will have their say today in ballot form.

A multi-racial task force committee of students — advised by a multi-racial committee of teachers, parents and adults — Thursday drew up a ballot for the student body to vote on.

LHS students said that Thursday was relatively uneventful on campus. "The principal announced a list of things that were on the ballot over the loud speaker," one sophomore said. "Other than that, there wasn't much talk about the ballot."

Students will receive the ballots in their first period class today.

Each student will vote "yes" or "no" on keeping symbols which are out of compliance — those items which were never approved by the school board. Stu-

Reagan misled group examining Iran-Contra scandal, Tower says

DALLAS (AP) — There were efforts by President Reagan and his top aides to mislead the Tower Commission and cover up White House involvement in a key aspect of the Iran-Contra affair, former Texas Sen. John Tower said.

In his soon-to-be-published memoirs, Tower said he was shocked when Reagan denied the White House gave advance approval for an August 1985 shipment of missiles to Iran, contradicting an earlier statement.

The longtime Republican lawmaker said Reagan's about-face seemed part of a "deliberate effort" to cover up then-White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan's involvement in the affair, the Dallas Times Herald's Washington bureau reported Thursday.

Tower also raised the possibility that by subtly showing investigators that aides prepared a statement changing his story, Reagan was "deliberately tipping us off that Donald Regan was up to something fishy."

The Tower Commission's report noted Reagan's shifting stories about the missile sale. But the newspaper reported Tower's book marks the first time a principal figure has suggested that the changes were part of a deliberate cover-up.

In a Jan. 26, 1987, meeting with the Tower board, Reagan said that sometime in August 1986, he approved a shipment of arms by Israel to Iran. In a meeting with the Tower board two weeks later, Reagan said that he and Regan had gone over the matter a number of times and that Regan had a firm recollection that the president had not authorized the August shipment in advance.

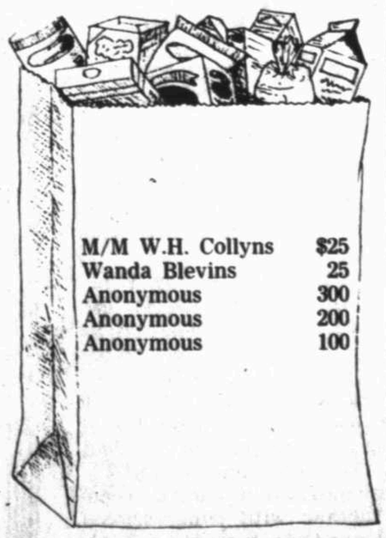

The president said he didn't recall authorizing the August shipment either. Then on Feb. 20, 1987, the president wrote the board a letter, changing his story again. In the letter, he said he simply couldn't recall whether he approved the August shipment in advance or not.

Tower, tapped in 1986 to investigate the scandal, said in his

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Gulf troops reportedly on alert

LONDON (AP) — Commanders of the anti-Iraqi multinational force ordered their troops on alert for the first time Thursday, a British news agency reported. But a Saudi official denied his country's forces had made such a move.

Asked about the British report, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams in Washington declined comment, saying it's a matter of policy not to discuss alert status of troops worldwide. However, another source, speaking on condition of anonymity, denied U.S. forces are on heightened alert.

The British news agency quoted unidentified military sources as saying an unspecified movement of Iraqi forces triggered the alert.

Its report said the alert stems from fears of an Iraqi air attack in retaliation for Thursday's U.N. revolution authorizing use of force unless Iraq withdraws from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

The Defense Ministry in London refused immediate comment on the report by the Press Association's defense correspondent.

The correspondent said troops in the gulf were put on yellow alert, one stage down from full alert.

"We are on alert for an attack from the air," Maj. Peter Cross, chief-of-staff at a British base at the port of Al Jubayl, was quoted as saying.

Saudi forces have been on alert since August, when Iraq invaded Kuwait, said a Saudi official on condition of anonymity.

But there is no heightened status because of the U.N. action, he said.

U.N. 'force' measure draws mixed emotions from hostage families

Associated Press

Relatives of Americans hostages wrestled with mixed feelings about a proposed U.N. resolution aimed at forcing Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait.

"I've got a son over there and, of course, when the bullets start flying he's in danger," said George Carroll of Winfield, Kan. "But I still think it's about all we can do. We can't let this go on forever."

Carroll, whose son is a pediatric neurologist trapped at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, only regrets that U.S. troops "didn't walk in there immediately." He is resolved that military action is inevitable.

But he is still afraid, as anyone with a loved one at risk would be.

"People have forgotten the agony of a major war and are just now being reminded of what that loss could be," said David McDonald Jr., whose close friend and client is hiding out in Kuwait.

"We haven't received a letter from (my friend) since late October," said McDonald, who asked that the Midwestern dentist's identity be withheld. "But all I can do is guess that he would still want action taken."

And military action could be imminent under a U.N. resolution authorizing an attack if Iraqi troops aren't withdrawn from Kuwait and all hostages hostages aren't released by Jan. 15. The Security Council on Thursday authorized that action.

> 'I want to know what gives our president the power to decide that on a certain date we're going to start a war.'
> Donnita Cole, wife of hostage

"My friend is not a warmonger, but I think he realizes it's the only realistic option if Saddam is to be stopped," McDonald said.

But Donnita Cole, who was among a group of hostage relatives scheduled to visit Baghdad next week, said she could not abide an offensive stance — at least not until every diplomatic option had been exhausted.

"I want to know what gives our president the power to decide that on a certain date we're going to start a war," said Mrs. Cole, whose husband is among Saddam's "human shields."

"What gives him the power in the month of November to say that in January we're going to start a war?" she asked.

Allies praise U.N. resolution authorizing force

Associated Press

U.S. allies overseas were quick to praise the passage Thursday of a U.N. resolution authorizing military force, saying it was major victory in the campaign to oust Iraqi troops occupying Kuwait.

A Saudi Arabia government spokesman said Iraq has until Jan. 15 to vacate Kuwait, which it was occupied since Aug. 2, or "it may have to suffer grave consequences."

In Cairo, Egypt's minister of state for foreign affairs, Butros Ghali, said, "The Security Council resolution is a victory for the peace cause and will contribute to the enforcement of the rules of international law."

He added, "The resolution is a clear signal to the Iraqi government concerning the necessity of its withdrawal from Kuwaiti territories and the return of legitimacy as it was before Aug. 1, and the release of all hostages."

In Dhahran, Saudi spokesman Adel Al-Jubeir said the vote "shows that there is a united front to confront aggression, that the world is determined in trying to get Iraq to withdraw unconditionally and completely from Kuwait," he added.

Army mobilizes Valley National Guard battalion

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — A battalion in the Lower Rio Grande Valley is the Texas National Guard's first combat unit to be mobilized in response to the Persian Gulf military buildup, officials said Thursday.

The 3rd Battalion, 141st infantry of the Texas National Guard has been mobilized in the regular Army effective Dec. 7. Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday announced the activation to involve about 820 men in the mechanized infantry unit.

"It's the first Texas combat unit to be called," said Col. Barry Ottley, chief of staff for the Texas National Guard's troop command. "The others have been support units."

Troop command directs about 6,200 members of the Texas National Guard who are not in the 49th Armored Division, based in Austin.

Ottley was in McAllen Thursday to supervise the sudden upsurge in activity at the armory since the activation was announced. He described the 3rd Battalion as "one of our premier units. They're trained to operate worldwide in any type of environment."

The battalion was alerted on Nov. 15. It will mobilize at its home station armories on Dec. 7, then move to its mobilization station at Fort Hood, Texas within a few days, Clements' office said Wednesday.

After mobilization at Fort Hood, the unit will move to Fort Irwin, Calif. for desert training, Ottley said.

It will become part of the 155th Armor Brigade of Mississippi, according to present plans. They have no orders to go overseas, but could be sent, officials said.

Soldiers with the battalion, which is based in McAllen, have trained primarily with the M2 Bradley fighting vehicle. The armored personnel carrier looks similar to a tank, but has no large cannon. It is equipped with a 25-millimeter cannon, a TOW anti-tank weapon and machine gun.

Their training schedule to date has included a weekend per month at their eight armories scattered from Mission to Brownsville, and two weeks each summer at Fort Hood, near Killeen in Central Texas.

Arnulfo Esqueda, executive officer for the McAllen battalion, said the men are proud to be the first Texas National Guard combat unit called up.

"It's seen as a great honor," Esqueda said.

"I'm kind of gung-ho," said Sgt. Raul Ortiz, 40, who stopped by the McAllen armory Thursday to get some of his equipment ready.

No plans for draft, Bush says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Thursday the nation's all-volunteer army "is as strong as it can be" and he has no plans to ask Congress to reinstitute the draft.

In an interview at the White House with Univision, the Spanish language network, Bush said he was "definitely not" considering bringing back the draft.

"Because we don't need it. We have an all-volunteer army. It is as strong as it can be," the president said. "We don't need a draft."

Bush also said he wanted to confer further with congressional leaders on the subject of a possible "lame duck" session of Congress to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis. He meets Friday with congressional leaders.

"I am very anxious to know what they think would be productive because it is important that we send a solid signal," Bush said.

Gorbachev admits his, other Communists' failures

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Thursday pronounced himself and other Communists "guilty before the working class" in a candid admission of blame for the country's worsening economy and political paralysis.

He told nearly 1,000 delegates to the 28th Moscow City Communist Party Conference that the Soviet Union faced increasing difficulties with food supplies, ethnic conflicts, crime and "a battle of laws that has led to a paralysis of power."

"The reasons," Gorbachev said, were "errors in the actions of central organs, above all in the Central Committee of the Communist Party, and including the actions of the general secretary and president."

WORLD

Gorbachev, 59, is both the country's president and general-secretary of the 18-million-member party.

In his hourlong speech, he promised immediate steps to increase food supplies, reiterated his determination to hold the restive republics together, and urged the delegates to keep the common man in mind.

He said failure by the party leadership to address workers' concerns was responsible for its defeat in recent elections around the country.

"We are guilty before the working class, I think, all of us, and I personally take responsibility," he said.

But Gorbachev told the delegates earlier Thursday he had no intention of quitting as party leader. He also said he was firmly for maintaining the party's dominance in society.

Standing on a podium near an 8-foot bust of Lenin, he spoke confidently and extemporaneously, occasionally referring to handwritten notes taken while listening to seven hours of earlier debate at the conference.

The speech appeared aimed at disarming his critics, led by Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin, by accepting a measure of blame while vigorously asserting that the party is on the road to renewal and can solve the country's problems.

A poll published Thursday in the government newspaper Izvestia indicated the number of people who "fully trust" the party fell from 27 percent in December 1989 to 14 percent in July. Izvestia gave no details on the polling.

Gorbachev and Yeltsin differ on how to go about achieving a market economy, and Yeltsin's Russian Parliament claims the right to pass laws superseding national ones.

Nearly all of the 15 Soviet republics have taken similar steps toward autonomy. Several have stopped shipping food outside their borders.

GULF: China abstains in Security Council vote made a very powerful statement. Everybody ought to understand how strong it is and how important it is," Bush said minutes after the vote.

"Our aim today must be to convince Saddam Hussein that the just, humane demands of the Council and the international community cannot be ignored," said Secretary of State James A. Baker III, top representative for the United States as president of the council.

"If Iraq does not reverse its course peacefully, then other necessary measures, including the use of force, should be authorized," said Baker. "We must put the choice to Saddam Hussein in unmistakable terms."

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, in a speech both tough and philosophical, warned that Saddam would be held "personally responsible" for any use of chemical weapons and breaches of the Fourth Geneva Convention guaranteeing the rights of civilians in time of war.

He said the international community has shown "genuine magnanimity in giving the side which breached the peace time to think again. ... We have started the countdown of the pause of good will ...

"Those who breached the peace should know that all necessary means will, indeed, inexorably be used against them."

Shevardnadze later told reporters that the Soviet Union would not consider committing any Soviet troops to an international force at this time. He cited painful memories of World War II.

The resolution gives Saddam "one final opportunity, as a pause of good will," to retreat.

But the Iraqis appeared intransigent.

Chinese Foreign Minister Quian Quichen casts his abstaining vote to the U.N. Security Council's resolution authorizing use of military force against Iraq.

"If war is imposed upon us by the United States, this will be our destiny," said Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari. "Our people will not kneel, we will rise to this responsibility."

Baker at this juncture appeared to glare at the Iraqi representative and flipped through a copy of the U.N. Charter. British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd twirled his earphone. All the ministers in session wore dark suits and sat somberly around a circular table in the vaulted council chamber.

The chamber is decorated with a mural of a peaceful world arising from the ashes of war.

Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jaber, however, was not pacified, saying, "The intransigence of the Iraqi regime is pushing the region to a conflagration which we do not want, but which appears to be the only avenue to restore our rights."

The Kuwaiti representative denounced the "wild beasts" from Iraq whom he said were pillaging his country and murdering his people. "The Iraqi aggressor showed no sense of mercy or compassion, indeed, no respect for the divine or human codes of conduct."

Previewing the U.N. vote, Bush said: "I think the main thing that I hope will come out of today's session of the United Nation is that we send perhaps the clearest signal of all to Saddam Hussein that the world is deadly serious about reversing this aggression and this economic oppression that he's wought on many, many countries that can ill afford it."

Iraq's ambassador accused the council of preparing to let the U.S.-led multinational forces "lynch" his country.

"The council is but a willing tool in the hands of the American administration," al-Anbari said.

"Iraq calls for peace, it desires peace, not for us alone but for the entire Middle East region," he said. He linked Iraq's willingness to cooperate with a broader Mideast peace settlement that would include a homeland for Palestinians.

"This would be the most dangerous resolution ever passed by the Security Council," al-Anbari said before the meeting, "and a violation of the U.N. Charter."

Iraq has said it would defy the resolution, as it has the previous 11 adopted since the invasion.

This latest council resolution strengthens Bush's hand with Congress and the American people in calling for offensive action against Baghdad.

Nine affirmative votes were required for passage. Any of the five permanent council members could have vetoed the measure. Three — the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain — sponsored the brief resolution. The other permanent members are China and France.

Saddam responded defiantly to the developments at the United Nations. He declared he was not afraid of fighting the United States, which he said had been overly influenced by "Rambo" movies.

"The Americans are still influenced by Rambo movies but this is not a Rambo movie. This is something different," he said.

"We do not underestimate American military power, but we scorn their evil intentions," he said in remarks carried by official Baghdad radio.

In other gulf-related developments Thursday:

■ Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has urged patience in the gulf crisis, shifted his tone and called for "military pressure" to force Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

However, he repeated his desire to avoid war, and did not elaborate on what he meant by military pressure.

MCHD: Board certifies tax rollback petition

(From 1A)

Ms. Johnson said Electra Memorial Hospital in Wichita County has the highest property tax rate at 32.7 cents per $100 valuation. Lubbock General Hospital has the lowest rate, 10.9 cents, but is a teaching hospital for Texas Tech and receives federal funds.

Ector County's Medical Center Hospital has a 12.6 cent rate, but also has revenue from a 1 percent sales tax, Ms. Johnson added.

Bruner said the 1 percent sales tax was equivalent to about five cents in property tax.

Ms. Johnson said the average tax rate is 20 cents, higher than MCHD's 16.6 cent rate. Even with the rollback to 14.9 cents, MCHD would still have the third lowest tax rate.

"You mean we've the lowest except for two and these people want to roll back our taxes?" Bruner asked rhetorically.

Kerr discussed strengthening the Midland County residency requirement for would-be indigents with the board, which requested his advice on a way to cut back on indigent care costs and fight rumors that non-resident indigents were having their bills paid by the district.

While the district cannot place a limitation on residency, it can "put the spotlight" on patients who have lived in Midland County for fewer than six months to test their intention to make the county their home, Kerr said.

He recommended a stringent examination of supporting proofs of residency, including driver's license addresses, rent and utility receipts and enrollment records. Kerr said such an examination would not be unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court has ruled that a time limitation on residency requirements is unconstitutional.

During the public comment period, directors once again fielded questions on the use of property taxes and promised the 10 citizens in attendance that the money was used only to pay for hospital care of the medically indigent.

Edna Walger, a founder of CATA, asked who owned the hospital. When she was told that it belonged to the residents of Midland County, she said she didn't appreciate that the hospital's purpose seemed to be "money-making, not care-giving."

Director Stephen Wiesenfeld leaped to the defensive.

"You arrogant and ignorant people show up only when we're facing indigent care issues," he said. "I hate to see that everyone is jumping at your behest. You're angry at taxes in general and we're your local scapegoat."

In other business, the board:

■ For the first time discussed its plans to enlarge the emergency department when it agreed to hire the Houston-based firm of Melton Henry/Maurice Robison to draw up a schematic of the proposed expansion.

According to Director Sheldon Viney, an emergency room physician, the emergency department has seen a 12 percent increase in patients in the past year and has only eight rooms in which to see to patients. He said most hospitals Midland Memorial's size have 12 to 15 rooms.

Hospital senior vice president Harold Rubin said the expansion would also improve the outpatient entrance, enlarge the testing and diagnostic center and combine it with the same-day surgery program, and expand the lab area.

Bruner requested that the design team also consider creating a ward system for reducing the costs of indigent care.

The schematic will cost $80,000, which will be rolled over into the project budget if the board approves the plans, Rubin said.

■ Decided against changing its grievance procedure, a move suggested by Gene Collins, the president of the Odessa chapter of the NAACP, who spoke in favor of a peer review board at last month's board meeting.

Richard Pehl, the hospital's director of human resources, said a survey of Texas hospitals indicated that its procedure is in line with the majority of hospitals, which also do not have a peer review board as part of their grievance policy.

Pehl said that since 1985, only nine employee grievances have gone all the way to the president's office, which he interpreted as an indication that the current system works. Two of those terminations were reversed by the president, he said.

Also, Pehl said the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission had investigated 11 cases at the hospital since 1985 and ruled in each case that there was no probable cause of discrimination.

■ Honored Sam Vest and his fixed-wing air ambulance service AeroVesta for five years of service to the hospital. AeroVesta has flown 494 trips and 365,000 miles to transport patients in and out of Midland Memorial Hospital and other area and state hospitals.

TOWER: Ex-senator writes memoirs

memoirs scheduled for publication in February that he sent his wife and children into hiding on FBI advice when anger against Texas conservatives in the wake of President John F. Kennedy's 1963 assassination grew worrisome.

In other revelations, Tower said he was offered an appointment as ambassador to West Germany upon retiring from the Senate in 1984, but declined the Reagan invitation.

Tower said he seriously considered passing up a re-election campaign for a second Senate term in 1966 after Democrats swept Texas elections in 1964. But he was persuaded by state GOP officials to continue a congressional career that spanned an additional 20 years.

GOLF: Tournament to help teen with paralyzing disease

(From 1A)

The paralysis kept Bryan in the hospital, first in Midland and then in Dallas, for about two months, where he underwent daily plasmaphersis, blood cleaning to remove the virus from his body. His blood was completely replaced seven times.

When Shirley Rosignol, a friend of the family, heard of the expenses Bryan's illness had incurred, she decided to help out.

Since her son Danny Grainger and Bryan are good friends and avid golfers, holding a benefit golf tournament was a logical choice.

"He's like a second son to me," Ms. Rosignol said. "If you ever wanted somebody to get well, it's Bryan. He's a neat kid."

Bryan Brookings' Buddies Open will be held Saturday and Sunday at Green Tree Country Club. Ms. Rosignol said community response has been terrific.

Fifty teams are signed up to play and another eight are on a waiting list. The $40 entry fee will benefit a trust account Ms. Rosignol and Tim Mathes have established for Bryan. Twenty-five high school teams will play Sunday with a $25 entry fee.

Bryan will attend both days of the tournament, riding in a golf cart.

For the active teen, the weakness and pain his paralysis brought have been terribly frustrating. A homebound teacher helps him keep up with his classes, but he can't stand long enough to balance or swing a golf club.

Although it takes some Guillain-Barre syndrome sufferers up to five years to regain their strength, Bryan hopes to be back in school when the new term starts in January.

"The most depressing thing is going from being active to being able to do nothing overnight and having to have everyone do everything for you," he said.

"When I got home I could barely crawl, then I used a wheel chair and now it's just my putter. It takes a lot of self-motivation."

People who would like to contribute to the trust account can contact Tim Mathes at 685-5197 or Shirley Rosignol at 686-1553.

For more information on Guillain-Barre syndrome, call the GBS Foundation at (215) 667-0131.

FLAG: LHS students to vote

dents will also have the option of writing in other choices for a mascot, alma mater or other school spirit symbols.

Administrators will tally ballots and verify students' names today. It is expected that ballots will result in a recommendation from the student body, which will be presented to school board trustees in a called meeting at 7 p.m. next Friday at Midland High School.

That meeting will be open to the public.

If the Midland school board and community can't resolve the issue, then the Austin-based Texas Education Agency may step in. "But we will only intervene if the presence of the flag disrupts the learning or teaching process," said Walter Rambo, TEA director of complaints and administration.

In a phone interview from Austin, Rambo said, "The Midland community should be able to handle this itself. I think the Midland school administration should get an 'A' on the way they are handling this situation."

Rambo said he gave his stamp of approval to the decision to allow a multi-ethnic task force draw up the ballot.

Although Rambo has heard some complaints from Midland citizens about the Rebel flag controversy, no lawsuits have been filed. "I've had a few telephone conversations, that's all," he said.

The TEA director said his agency has intervened in some Texas school districts and asked that Rebel flags be removed in some instances. "In other cases — where there has been no disruption, we have allowed the schools to keep their flags," he said. "I think the Midland school administration is following all the necessary procedures, and it should be able to resolve this issue."

Bulgaria's premier quits, no successor named

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Premier Andrei Lukanov and his government of former Communists resigned Thursday under unrelenting pressure from strikes, street protests and the halls of Parliament.

The Socialist premier, blamed for the Balkan country's political and economic anarchy, accused unions and the opposition of making it impossible for him to govern.

Lukanov

"For me, it is therefore pointless to remain at the premier's post, and . . . I resign my office," he said in a statement broadcast on state radio and television.

No successor was immediately named to replace Lukanov, a reform-minded Socialist Party member who helped oust longtime Communist leader Todor Zhivkov last November. Lukanov, 52, was appointed premier in early February.

But it appeared certain the resignation would end a four-day nationwide strike that had gained strength daily, and would draw the opposition Union of Democratic Forces back into Parliament. Its lawmakers walked out last week.

The resignation of the 52-year-old Lukanov had been expected since he and other political leaders struck a deal in talks Thursday to end a stalemate that has prevented Bulgaria from tackling its worst postwar economic crisis.

The accord came in a meeting called by President Zhelyu Zhelev, as the strike continued and Sofia's streets filled with thousands of people demanding an end to political turmoil.

Bulgaria is suffering its worst postwar crisis. Electricity is rationed in Sofia and elsewhere. Many basic consumer items are either rationed or unavailable. The country cannot make payments on its $11 billion foreign debt.

The political stalemate has blocked officials from moving quickly to improve the economic situation.

But though political leaders agreed during the meeting on Lukanov's resignation, they apparently had been unable to reach final agreement on who should succeed him.

Lukanov was one of the few politicians in Bulgaria with the experience and stature for the job.

Protesters swarm Dhaka streets; 50 reportedly killed, 1,000 wounded

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Gunfire crackled through the Bangladesh capital Thursday as police battled protesters demanding the ouster of President Hussain Muhammad Ershad and an end to a state of emergency, witnesses said.

Opposition leaders said 50 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded Wednesday when demonstrators swarmed into the streets of Dhaka and four other cities in defiance of curfews.

The casualty toll could not be verified. The claims were made in written statements circulated in Dhaka that reached India through unofficial channels. Some previous claims of the opposition have been exaggerated.

Diplomatic sources in New Delhi said they had reports of four dead and 15 wounded in the Bangladesh capital during clashes with paramilitary forces Wednesday.

The curfews were imposed Tuesday night as part of a state of emergency Ershad declared to try to quash the growing movement against him. The decree also suspended civil rights and imposed press censorship after six weeks of often-violent protests.

Ershad, a former general, is facing one of his worst crises since seizing power in a bloodless coup in 1982. The diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said his support in the army appeared less solid than earlier believed.

Witnesses said demonstrations continued Thursday, but they did not know about casualties.

Kurt Hensena, a businessman based in Hong Kong, said he heard gunfire when he left his Dhaka hotel for the airport Thursday afternoon. He said there were rumors one person was killed.

"It was bam-bam-bam-bam and then it was quiet again. It was shotgun, rifle fire. I heard a lot of people shouting," Hensena said upon arrival in Bangkok, Thailand. He did not give his nationality.

The witnesses said fighting was heavier on Wednesday.

"Yesterday and today it was mostly rock-throwing," said an American, also arriving in Bangkok on the first flight from Dhaka since Ershad's crackdown Tuesday night. He and some other travelers spoke on condition they were not identified.

A Dutch traveler said he had been trapped by roadblocks Wednesday, and his car was stoned as he drove through the crowd. "There was shooting and there was some burning of cars," he said.

About 300 students gathered outside Dhaka University during curfew hours chanting "Down with Ershad!" and "We don't accept curfew, no emergency!" said unofficial reports reaching New

Students urged to chew gum

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Chewing gum in school is not just OK around here. It's required.

Some 4,000 elementary school students in Polk County will take part in a two-year study on sugarless gum and cavities.

"We're certainly not going to have to fight to get kids to do this," said Stephen White, principal of Hillcrest Elementary School in Lake Wales, one of 13 Polk County schools participating in the University of Florida study.

Research has shown that sugarless gum prevents tooth decay in children by reducing plaque, Conti said. The study will compare two sugar substitutes used in gum, sorbitol and xylitol.

Starting next week, the students will be required to chew gum for 10 minutes each day at school, as well as at home. Participants will receive toothbrushes and annual dental checkups at no cost to parents.

The university also will donate $325,000 to the schools and the school district's scholarship fund, Conti said.

Leaders of Solidarity rally around Walesa's candidacy

N.Y. Times News Service

WARSAW, Poland — Staggered by the electoral appeal of Stanislaw Tyminski and uncertain what it portends for the Dec. 9 presidential elections, the leaders of the deeply divided Solidarity movement are closing ranks behind the candidacy of Lech Walesa.

In a recrimination-filled meeting that ended early Thursday morning, the caucus of Solidarity legislators approved a resolution of support for Walesa, who seemed uncertain how to counter the surge in popularity that carried Tyminski to a second-place finish in the initial phase of the campaign.

"I really have my doubts about this man," Walesa declared at an open meeting of the lawmakers. "This man fell off a bamboo branch. He is tickling me, and I just can't take a swing at him. You must all get to work or we will lose.

"We must go forward together," continued Walesa, who has for months argued that the Solidarity movement should divide into opposing camps to speed the development of Polish democracy. "I can't imagine that when we fought together for so many years that we could part now."

In Sunday's voting, Walesa finished first with 40 percent, Tyminski won 23 percent and Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki was third with 18 percent.

Rumors continue to swirl around Tyminski, who until a few weeks ago was virtually unknown in Poland and in Canada, his adopted country. His attendance at parties given by former Communists and the Soviet ambassador has touched off widespread speculation here that he has had some connection with foreign or Polish intelligence.

Tyminski said at a news conference this week that spies from Poland and from a foreign country tried to recruit him as a young man, but that he had rejected the overtures.

In his campaign, Tyminski has separated himself from the legacy of the Solidarity movement, which came to power here in 1989.

France orders more troops to Chad, says rebel offensive grows in size

PARIS (AP) — Saying a rebel offensive in Chad is growing, French officials Thursday ordered 150 more troops to that North African country but said they won't join the fighting.

Chad's government contends the rebels are backed by Libya, a view endorsed this week by the U.S. State Department. However, France has described the 3-week-old war as an internal conflict between Chadians, and Libya denies backing the rebels.

A French Foreign Ministry spokesman said Thursday that "the situation is worsening, and the battles are more severe." He said the rebel offensive has grown in size, "and government forces are encountering difficulties on the ground."

Other French sources said rebel leader Idriss Deby's forces are moving steadily westward, away from the border with Sudan and toward the Chadian capital, N'Djamena.

The French Defense Ministry said a 150-member company of the Second Foreign Parachutist Regiment of the Foreign Legionnaires would be sent to N'Djamena. The move is aimed at "bettering the security of our troops and assuring, if need be, the protection of our nationals."

There are an estimated 1,250 French civilians in Chad, a former French colony.

France already had 1,000 troops in Chad. It recently shifted a company from N'Djamena to the northeastern town of Abeche near the main combat zone.

Defense Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement said France is studying requests from Chad for arms, but he did not say what the response would be. "It's clear the Chadian army could have substantial needs," he said without elaborating.

However, he also said French policy is to refrain from defending even friendly governments from internal opposition.

Bush blames Iraq for recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, blaming the nation's economic slowdown in part on Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, told a group of bank officials on Thursday that any recession will be a short one.

"I am confident that it will run its course," Bush said.

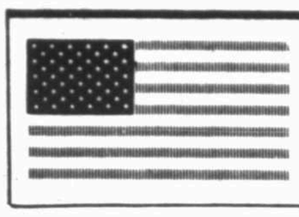

He defined "it" as "the slowdown or the recession or whatever one would call exactly what we're in now."

At the same time, Bush expressed disappointment that interest rates had not come down further in response to enactment of a bipartisan, five-year $500 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts.

"Interest rates, frankly, are higher than any of us would like them to be," Bush said, adding that he didn't want to be seen "as a Fed basher or anything of that nature."

He said he was glad the Fed helped to nudge rates down a bit following passage of the plan, which he conceded was "not the world's most popular piece of legislation."

And he said he hopes the agreement will eventually lead to even lower rates.

NATION

'I suspect that each one of you here has economists that you believe in; some are saying recession and some saying downturn.'

— President Bush, on the matter of to what extent the economy has slipped.

Speaking to the Association of Bank Holding Companies, Bush said that oil price increases in the aftermath of the four-month-long Iraqi occupation of Kuwait were battering the economies of both large and small nations.

"And it's very clear that they are having a very bad effect on our economy," he said.

Bush renewed his determination to prevail in the Iraqi confrontation and said, "there's an economic side to this equation and economic effects are devastating those who can afford it the least."

As he has done in the past, Bush sidestepped the issue of whether the nation's economy has already slipped into a recession.

"I suspect that each one of you here has economists that you believe in; some are saying recession and some saying downturn."

"But one positive thing is that most if not all people are suggesting that whatever it is, it won't be long lasting. And I think that is very important to the overall good of the American people."

Bush told the bankers that he hoped a bank law overhaul package his administration will unveil in January would provide "significant structural reform" to help banks be more competitive.

"In the age of the ATM (automatic teller machine) and the 800 number, and in the face of intense competition from non-banks to meet the consumer's credit needs, we must rethink and re-examine our existing regulations," Bush said.

"The legislation we will propose will make a significant contribution to the long-term health of the banking system," Bush said.

He said that he would propose a variety of measures, including "provisions on deposit insurance."

Treasury officials have said that, among other possible changes, they are considering restricting depositors to no more than three federally insured accounts.

Currently, there are no limits on the number of different accounts that an individual may maintain.

Bush signs 'Irish Bill'

■ The newly signed immigration measure represents the first major rewriting of U.S. immigration law in 25 years.

By Dan Freedman
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Thursday shuffled the deck of U.S. visas and dealt new cards to prospective legal immigrants the world over by signing an immigration bill that he characterized as a "bridge to America's future."

The law represents the first major overhaul of legal immigration in 25 years. Known at its inception as the "Irish Bill," it gives prospective immigrants from Ireland, Poland, Italy and other European nations a total of 40,000 additional visas a year. Some 16,000 of the 40,000 are earmarked for Ireland.

It also reserves a niche for immigrants with technical skills necessary to fill jobs that Americans either do not want or cannot fill because they lack training. These include positions in engineering, medicine and computer science.

In all, legal immigration will rise from about 600,000 a year now to 700,000 a year between 1992 and 1994. It will then level off to 675,000 a year thereafter.

"This bill is good for families, good for business ... and good for America," Bush said after signing the measure into law at a White House ceremony.

The bill also:

■ Eliminates restrictions, dating to the 1950s, on visas for Communists and gays. Political belief and sexual orientation no longer will be grounds for exclusion or deportation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

■ Leaves it to Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis Sullivan to decide whether AIDS victims or HIV-infected persons should be barred from the United States. Previously, the INS had been guided by a 1988 amendment of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., stipulating that testing positive for human immunodeficieny virus, which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, was an automatic reason for denying entry into the United States.

■ Sets aside 55,000 visas per year between 1992 and 1994 for spouses and children of formerly illegal immigrants who were granted amnesty under the 1986 immigration law. Civil rights and immigration groups had complained that it was unfair to keep out the families of those given legal status.

■ Beefs up anti-discrimination provisions of the 1986 immigration law, which requires employers to check identification of prospective workers to make sure they are legally qualified to work. Illegal aliens are not considered qualified, but until the 1986 law was passed, employers were not compelled to inquire about the immigration status of their employees.

Civil rights groups had complained that employers were using the law's threat of imposing fines against them if they failed to check employees' background adequately as an excuse to exclude job applicants who appeared to be foreign-born.

A General Accounting Office report issued earlier this year concluded the 1986 provisions had resulted in a "widespread pattern of discrimination," particularly against Hispanics and Asians.

The antidiscrimination provisions in the new law restrict employers from asking for extra documentation from an applicant who looks foreign-born. Also, fines against employers for discrimination will now equal those assessed for failing to check a job applicant's documents.

But civil rights advocates still object to the remaining requirement that employers must check whether workers are legally entitled to work.

"Our bottom line is we believe these sanctions (against employers) should be repealed," said Wendy Young, immigration policy associate with the National Council of La Raza. "This is the first time in a long while that we've had a federal law that we know to be causing discrimination, yet we allow it to remain on the books."

Until 1965, American immigration policy had favored the traditional "melting pot" immigrant groups from Europe, the "huddled masses yearning to breathe free" referred to in a poem carved at the base of the Statute of Liberty.

The law was changed that year to allow greater immigration from Asia and Latin America. Also, illegal immigration, particularly from Mexico, rose to a record of 1.6 million a year by the early 1980s, leading the Reagan administration to declare that U.S. borders were "out of control."

The 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act attempted to stem the illegal tide.

The law signed by Bush on Thursday "is the logical next step (to) enhance the total numbers of people allowed to come into this country lawfully," said Thomas Boyd, director of the Justice Department's office of policy development.

"It strikes what we believe to be the proper balance" between admitting those with desirable job skills and those seeking to join their families, he added.

Under the new law, visas for immigrants with technical skills will more than double, from 54,000 per year to 140,000 per year.

Most immigration experts say this group would take jobs left unfilled by U.S. citizens. For instance, some businesses and institutions such as hospitals are having difficulties recruiting qualified staff.

But some experts questioned whether the new immigration law is a thinly veiled attempt to cover up deficiencies in education and job training for Americans.

Newspaper sues union group on RICO charges

NEW YORK (AP) — The Daily News filed a $150 million civil racketeering lawsuit Thursday against a group representing striking workers and 23 drivers for allegedly conspiring to force the News to accept wasteful contracts or to sell the paper to them.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, alleges a conspiracy including attempted murder, coercion, arson and robbery. The filing comes three days after police said there was no evidence of a conspiracy in 229 strike-related incidents since the walkout began five weeks ago.

The lawsuit asserts that the unions want to coerce the tabloid into accepting a settlement that contained featherbedding abuses the News has striven to eliminate in 10 months of negotiations.

Nine of the newspaper's 10 unions representing some 2,100 strikers have been off the job since Oct. 25. The newspaper has published daily despite distribution problems, some of which have been linked to threats against vendors and attacks on trucks.

RICO, or Racketeer Influenced, Corrupt Organizations Act, has been used successfully by federal prosecutors. Provisions of the act enable law enforcement officials to assess stiff civil penalties tying up the assets of alleged organized crime figures.

Holiday season spreads our love

When the lights to the City of Midland's Christmas tree surge to brilliance this evening, the Christmas season will be officially under way in the Tall City.

Although overcoats and mittens may not be suitable clothing for the temperatures the Midland region has been experiencing lately and yule logs may have to be postponed for awhile, the Midland community will get to enjoy its own special start to the Christmas season this year.

The city tree-lighting, set for 6 p.m. today in Centennial Plaza, is a good and seasonal start for the holiday period and there's the traditional Jaycees' "downtown office party," but there's more Christmas fare in store for Midlanders.

On Sunday, renowned entertainer Andy Williams will launch the Christmas season with a tree-lighting ceremony at Midland College, where the singer's Christmas Show is to perform. That event promises to make this a memorable Christmas season in Midland.

Of course, Midland becomes a "special place" during the holiday season in much the same way that all communities take on an air of significance as the Christian holiday approaches. Christmas holds high the hallmarks of brotherly love, human kindness, and selflessness that have made it a shining example of the spirit that is needed daily in our world. For this holiday, people from lands around the globe lie down their arms, put aside their differences and join hands in the brotherhood of worship and rejoicing for the coming of a King.

The celebration of Christmas manifests itself in many ways, from holiday shopping excursions to the seasonal greetings exchanged by passersby on crowded city sidewalks or the joy expressed in a child's eyes while decorating the family Christmas tree. Regardless how the spirit is revealed, however, it spreads brotherly love and in that way changes the world for the better one more time.

This Christmas season be certain to spread the love of the holiday to all the people you know and meet.

3 dozen cheers for the Iron Lady

'I am not a consensus politician," said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. "I am a conviction politician."

And so she was, and is, God bless her; and though in the end firmness of conviction brought her down, so for a season it made her great; and her country greater than it had been in decades; and her countrymen freer and more prosperous than in long, long years.

The poet Yeats — not quite a countryman, being Irish, but not so distant in spirit from Mrs. Thatcher — had observed bleakly many years earlier, in "The Second Coming," how "The best lack all conviction, while the worst are full of passionate intensity."

The West, by the '70s, wore a "Kick Me" sign on its back. The West hated itself — its history, its traditions, its religion. Its enemies, full of passionate intensity, denigrated Western values — like freedom — virtually without fear of rebuke.

So that when Margaret Hilda Roberts Thatcher, in 1979, became the queen's first minister, the world didn't know what to make of a conviction politician. She couldn't be serious, this lady? All that talk about freedom and responsibility? About hard work and old-fashioned values?

It turned out she was deadly serious. With all her heart she believed. No sly builder of consensus here: rather, a political leader with the delicacy and instincts of a Sumo wrestler.

Not since Winston Churchill had a British politician believed with like intensity and fervor, or attempted with such verve to shove a stumbling nation to its feet; to prod it back onto the path of growth, freedom, and mission.

Her polar opposite was A.J. Balfour, the languid, aristocratic prime minister of 80 years earlier. Churchill, back then, had said of Balfour: "Office at any price was his motto, at the sacrifice of any friend or colleague, at the sacrifice of any principle. . . ." Maggie Thatcher was famous for sacrificing colleagues — in behalf, not in spite of, principle. Office, as she saw it, had no meaning apart from the principles that office-holders should uphold and work for.

Britain, in 1979, was ridden with strikes, inefficiency, and burdensome government. The socialists, with Tory acquiescence, and sometimes connivance — tut, tut, old boy: all for The Common Good — had reduced British splendors to drabness.

Then came Maggie Thatcher, scourging the temples of ease. She hectored a people sorely in need of hectoring. She sold off inefficient, government-owned enterprises. She reinvigorated free-market processes and private ownership. She sat on bloated, arrogant labor unions until they hollered uncle. She took back the Falkland Islands, and stood up to the Soviets, who called her "the Iron Lady." About time, Britons reasoned, that a Western leader possessed a spine made of something more durable than aluminum foil.

The '80s — the Reagan-Thatcher era, when two tough conservatives dominated the West through conviction and force of character — are gone. Reagan is gone. And, yes, to the world's astonishment, Margaret Thatcher is gone.

Likely Mrs. Thatcher wore out the very people she labored to save. Saviors, after a time, begin to irritate ordinary folk who just want to be left alone to drink their tea. Saviors keep the pot perpetually stirred up. We start saying waspish things about them to the opinion surveys. One day, all of a sudden, poof! — no more savior.

This is of course to miss the present point: Modern Britain's savior saved. Not for always, but long enough, and conspicuously enough, to lift consciences and spirits, the world around.

For a decade, a British prime minister and an American president evoked the human possibilities inherent in free choice and the shouldering of personal responsibilities. Maggie Thatcher and Ronald Reagan, just by being themselves, probably did more than Mikhail Gorbachev to undermine communism.

"Hail and farewell" is paltry under the circumstances. For the Iron Lady, three dozen cheers. No public figure of our time worked harder to deserve the Western World's sadly ephemeral gratitude.

JACK ANDERSON

Soviets seek leverage by exposing Castro

WASHINGTON — Cuban dictator Fidel Castro claims only one son, but he has at least seven children by three women. He preaches socialist equality, but has 32 houses to call home and three luxury yachts.

Anderson

Those are some of the revelations about Castro that are now coming to us, and to the Central Intelligence Agency, from Soviet sources, including the KGB.

It is the kind of information that the CIA used to pay tens of thousands of dollars for — the kind of information that kept Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega on the CIA payroll. Except in the old days, Noriega might have made up the information because he knew the CIA was hungry for inflammatory stories about Castro's personal life. Sometimes Castro himself would help Noriega make up nonsense.

But the information from the KGB sources is considered genuine, and the Soviets are sharing it because they are fed up with their heavily subsidized dilettante in Havana.

Castro is an unreconstructed socialist, in word if not in deed, and he refuses to pull his nation into the new decade. Even students at the University of Havana, from which Castro spawned his revolution three decades ago against dictator Fulgencio Batista, have taken to calling him "el loco" behind his back.

The one thing sure to anger the paranoid prima donna is an examination of his personal life, which is why our Soviet sources shared the details:

■ Castro lives well in his 32 houses. Three of them are in Havana, and two are underground bunkers because Castro fears a nuclear attack by the United States.

■ He has a bodyguard force of 9,700 men. Some 2,800 of them are stationed in Havana. If he is feeling especially paranoid, Castro can summon another 20,000 men from the Ministry of the Interior and the Army.

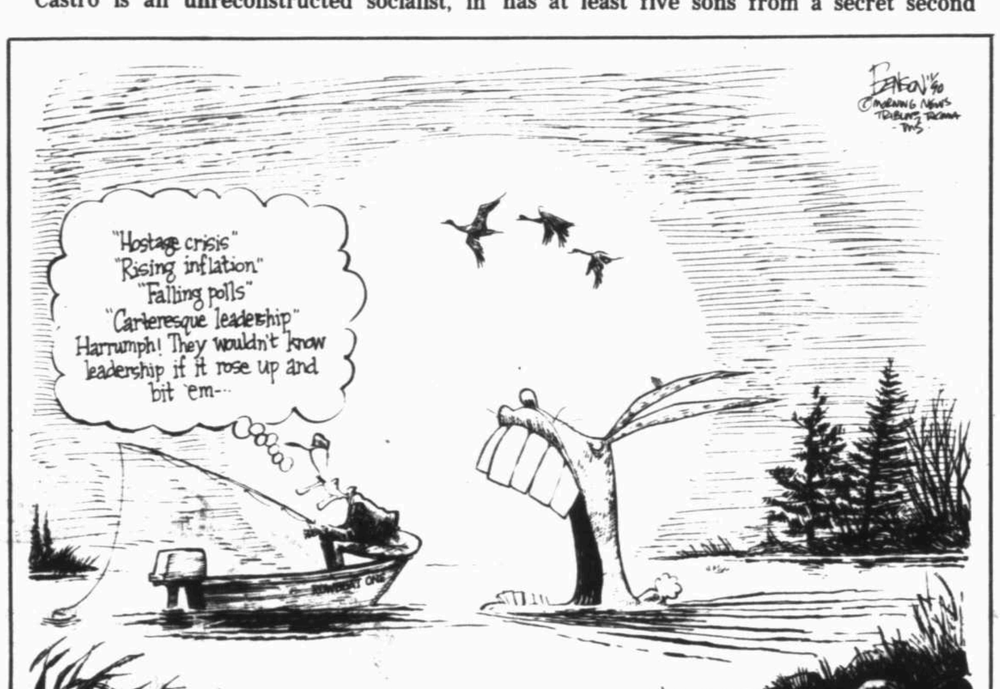

■ He was spooked by past bizarre plots of the CIA to, among other things, make his beard fall out and poison him with toxic shellfish. So, when Castro indulges in his favorite sport of scuba diving, he has more than 100 frogmen check the waters for any foreign objects, and protect him while he dives.

■ Castro is known to be divorced from his first, and only acknowledged, wife who now lives in Spain. But the Soviet sources say he has at least five sons from a secret second marriage. They all have names that start with "A." (Castro's own middle name is Alejandro.) The Soviets know the sons well because they were schooled in the Soviet Union where Cuban security agents posed as their parents. Castro also has an illegitimate daughter named Alma Fernandez Revuelta who is in her mid-30s.

■ Castro's only acknowledged son, from his first marriage, is Fidelito, head of Cuba's nuclear agency. Fidelito married and then divorced a Soviet woman. He then married a Cuban, but is about to drop her for a Spanish aristocrat.

■ Castro's younger brother, Raul, has not been allowed the luxury of divorce that Fidel gave himself. At Fidel's whim, Raul stays married to Vilma Espin even though they despise each other. Raul, who heads the Cuban armed forces, has consoled himself with the bottle, and an affair with the director of Cuban television (with whom he had a daughter) and more recently with a Bulgarian mistress.

While the details of Castro's personal life seem suitable for the tabloids, they serve as political leverage for the Soviets who don't mind exposing Castro as a hypocrite.

NUCLEAR THREAT — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has been none-too-meticulous about the safety at American nuclear power plants, but even if it had been, there would still be a nuclear threat that U.S. officials can't regulate. Mexico's Laguna Verde nuclear reactor north of Vera Cruz has set a world record for emergency shutdowns, and it has spilled more than 2.5 million gallons of radioactive water into the Gulf of Mexico. Mexican officials are privately worried about the threat of a meltdown, but they have nevertheless given Laguna Verde the go-ahead to operate at full power.

MINI-EDITORIAL — If George Bush had been given a choice, he could have picked a better Arab nation to rescue than Kuwait. The Kuwaiti aristocracy flaunted its wealth in front of the rest of the Arab world. That opulence was resented by other Arabs, particularly Palestinians. If the United States is able to reclaim Kuwait for the Kuwaitis, Bush should not expect a standing ovation from the Arab world. Arabs may have allied themselves with the United States to stop Saddam Hussein from marching across the Middle East, but they care little about the fortunes of Kuwait.

CHARLEY REESE

We're at wrong place for wrong reasons

I have a message for the warhawks. If you're going to advocate war, don't hide from what you're advocating.

No, if it's war you want, then stick your face into the ugly, stinking reality of it and stop hallucinating on myths and fantasies about brave young lads marching off on a glorious quest to make the world more peaceful and just.

Reese

Face the truth: The lads and lassies won't die for truth and goodness. They will die for a debauched, greedy and arrogant ruling family put on the throne by British bayonets of a country created out of Iraqi territory by British cannon.

They won't die to defend the principle that one nation cannot commit aggression against another. They will die in the act of committing aggression against a nation whose principal sin is that its nationalist leader will not kowtow to Anglo-American financial interests.

They will die from weapons produced or financed by the very financial interests who are sending them to die. They will die with overpriced weapons in their hands and burning up around them that men made huge profits selling.

Nor will they die defending the U.S. Constitution. They will die because a millionaire president disregards the Constitution and, in his arrogance, thinks that he alone can decide which countries we will defend and when and against whom we can go to war.

The use of the first person plural is figurative, of course. We will not go to war. A bunch of lower middle-class kids, enticed into the military by slick advertising that made it seem like a combination of summer camp and high-pay vocational school, will go to war.

It is they who will lose legs and eyes and arms and lives. Tears will fall in humble homes and apartments in the United States never visited by the high and mighty politicians and columnists who beat the war drums and offer their pathetic schemes for quick victory.

Black Americans, whose highest aspiration is a decent job, a clean little house for their family and decent education for their children, will die instead of those who live off oil company trust funds and vacation in private resorts.

They will all die for a government that lied to them, plundered them, broke its promises, and abandoned their fathers in stinking prisoner of war camps in Laos and Vietnam. They will die for a government that increases its own pay, sends $15.5 billion to various foreign pockets, while telling their mothers and grandmothers to get by on less, to pay more in taxes.

They will die for a government that cares more about the Kuwaiti Al Sabar family than about Americans living on the streets, than about American kids with inadequate education, than about American families who can't afford health care or decent housing or heat for the coming cold.

I'm ready to go war, but the war I want to fight is here, not in the Persian Gulf. It is not Iraq which threatens American interests. It's corrupt politicians and bureaucrats who have sold their country and their souls to the almighty dollar. It's lickspittle journalists and scholars-for-hire who support this corrupt establishment.

No Americans should die in battle overseas until we here at home have provided them with a government worthy of their sacrifice. The war to achieve that has only just begun, but that, at least, is a just war for a noble goal.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Stay tuned to willy-nilly Milli Vanilli hoax

There was a photograph in the papers the other day of Milli Vanilli, the rock duo that won Best New Artist Grammys for their best-selling single and album, "Girl You Know It's True."

Grizzard

Now they're singing the blues since it was a fraud. Milli Vanilli were moving their lips and Milli Vanilli were making a few million smackers, but somebody else, whose name escapes me, was doing the singing.

I studied the photograph at length. Sideways, too. The question occurred to me, which of these birds was Milli and which was Vanilli?

They both had long hair and soft features — a nice way of saying either could pass for a girlperson in a dimly lit room.

But I decided the one on the left was Vanilli and the one on the right was the other one.

Milli sort of reminded me of a pagan dancer in one of those old biblical movies. That and a fortune teller named Madame Ruth I once visited to see if there would be anything left of my fortune after the divorce trial.

This is not to say I didn't also have some doubt as to just how high Vanilli's testosterone level goes, but if I had to go out with one of them or die, I'd pick Milli and go someplace very crowded. Like Istanbul, where I don't know a soul.

To be perfectly honest about it, the fact that Milli Vanilli music-making was a hoax (which would be an even better word were it pronounced ho-axe) doesn't bother me at all.

First, before the news about the chicanery broke, I had never heard of Milli Vanilli.

Asked to identify Milli Vanilli at a previous time, I would have been like most middle-aged individuals — who think all music made since 1962 is the work of bedwetting subversives — and guessed, the Italian version of Haagen-Dazs?

Second, I like an occasional ho-axe and if the truth be known, the public likely has been hoodwinked in this manner lots of times.

What if:

Johnny Carson isn't really that funny and Ed McMahon is a master ventriloquist?

Two Live Crew are actually Bible-thumping, polite, nerdy intellectuals who want to reveal their true selves, but their agent won't let them, fearing drops in album sales?

Rocky V is Rocky II played backwards?

Wrestling isn't really fake? It's just a bunch of loud no-necks who don't know how to fight very well.

Jesse Helms is gay?

Saturday Night Live is taped Thursday morning?

Saddam Hussein is actually a pussycat?

The Bush administration was behind the whole Milli Vanilli thing in an effort to shift focus to somebody else whose lips got them into serious trouble?

Think about it. The president's dog is also named Millie (the "e" is silent) and the more I looked at Vanilli the more convinced I became he actually could be Dan Quayle disguised as a tribal warrior with a serious hormone imbalance.

And didn't Watergate start sort of the same way? Stay tuned. This could get interesting.

NASA's Galileo earthbound for gravitational 'fill up'

N.Y. Times News Service

An interplanetary spacecraft is headed for Earth.

The Galileo spacecraft, taking the long way to Jupiter, was launched from Earth in October 1989, swung around Venus in February and is now racing back this way, aiming for the first of two long loops around the planet to get a gravitational kick for its ultimate journey to explore the Jovian atmosphere and moons. The craft is expected to pass within 600 miles of Earth on Dec. 8.

Although spacecraft have often observed Earth from an orbit close by or near the Moon, Dr. Torrance V. Johnson, the project scientist at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said: "This is the first scientific flyby of the Earth from the outside. It's a chance to look at Earth as we have been viewing other planets, approaching from afar and passing by for a quick look."

Dr. William J. O'Neil, the project manager, said at a news conference in Pasadena on Thursday that the spacecraft adjusted its course slightly on Wednesday and was traveling 18,000 miles an hour on a course for its closest approach to Earth at 2:35 p.m. Central time.

It should pass 593 miles, plus or minus 16 miles, over the Atlantic Ocean east of Florida, cross Central America and much of the Pacific Ocean before streaking off again into deep space.

"Galileo continues to perform beautifully," O'Neil said. "We don't have to do anything on the ground. We don't have to do anything on the spacecraft to have a successful gravity assist at Earth."

Scientists and officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said there was virtually no risk that the spacecraft would crash into Earth and scatter any of the radioactive plutonium fuel aboard for operating its two electric power generators.

It (Galileo) should pass 593 miles ... over the Atlantic Ocean east of Florida, cross Central America and much of the Pacific Ocean before streaking off again into deep space.

■ Nation in brief/12C

A few antinuclear power organizations sought to stop Galileo's launching by a space shuttle because of the possible risk of an accident spreading radiation.

Galileo's second swing by Earth, a year from now, will be even closer: about 180 miles.

As a bonus, scientists were able to test Galileo's scientific instruments and cameras during the encounter with Venus. Photographs of the Venus cloud cover in infrared and visible light are expected to help scientists understand the planet's dynamic atmosphere.

Likewise, Galileo is to photograph the Earth and Moon, concentrating on observations of the far side of the Moon with sensors not available to the Apollo scientists 20 years ago.

The spacecraft is also being directed to measure water content and other properties of the air high above Earth, part of a study of the possible consequences of pollution on the atmosphere.

AIDS vaccine tests begin on 50 people

Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — A potentially powerful AIDS vaccine that passed a crucial test in San Antonio this summer is being tested for the first time in humans.

In June, Jorg Eichberg, a veterinarian and researcher at the Southwest Foundation for Biomedical Research, proved the vaccine shielded two chimps from the AIDS virus.

The vaccine, produced by California-based Genentech, Inc., is a genetically engineered version of a major protein found on the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus called gp120.

When given the vaccine, the chimpanzees developed stronger defenses against AIDS and did not become infected after being exposed to the virus.

More than 50 human volunteers now are taking the vaccine at Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington, D.C., said a spokesman for Genentech.

The volunteers are people who tested positive for the HIV virus but have not yet developed AIDS. The tests are expected to last 10 months.

"Since the immune system of an infected individual is able to fight the virus during a long latency period, a vaccine may be able to boost the body's immune system and further delay illness," said Dr. Arthur J. Ammann, director of clinical research for Genentech.

Testing AIDS vaccines on uninfected people is controversial, but Genentech officials are considering performing such experiments.

Eichberg was attending an AIDS conference in New Orleans and could not be reached for comment.

AIDS climbs as killer of women

ATLANTA (AP) — AIDS is steadily spreading among U.S. women and by next year will become the fifth leading cause of death for women of childbearing age, federal health researchers reported Thursday.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control study is the latest to show that AIDS has become a serious health threat for women.

Another study, released Thursday in Geneva by the World Health Organization, said the incidence of AIDS among women will increase dramatically worldwide, mostly because women don't suspect they can contract the disease from heterosexual contact.

The latest reports on AIDS and women came just two days before World AIDS Day will be observed, with this year's theme being the disease's impact on women.

In Midland, the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition (PBAC) will host a program on woman and AIDS on Saturday, World AIDS Day.

Carol Hale, the PBAC director, said the program will feature a panel discussion on the disease's symptoms, its prevention and ways to care for people who are HIV positive.

"We're focusing on women because there are still a lot of women who think AIDS is primarily a man's disease; because women are not diagnosed with the disease until much later

Midland tops in donations

■ Much of Midland's success this year is attributed to an increased influx of donations from new sources.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland is in a class by itself when it comes to generating dollars during United Way campaigns.

The United Way campaign here led the state in 1989 in per capita donations, with the average Midlander giving $24.43, state United Way figures show. The number was based on estimated 1989 population figures.

This year, based on 1990 preliminary census data, the per capita figure for United Way contributions was $30.17, a 23.5 percent increase.

"The people of Midland at all levels respond to United Way," Kay Bivens, campaign director, said Thursday. "We have some very generous supporters."

Among six of West Texas' largest cities — Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Abilene, San Angelo and Lubbock — no United Way campaign has come close to Midland's the past two years.

Donations here totaled about $2.7 million this year, approximately $175,000 more than the goal, after the campaign ended earlier this month. United Way raised about $2.4 million here in 1989, exceeding the goal that year by $124,700.

"Midland, based on my own personal experience, has a substantial amount of community pride, despite the recent economic problems," said Bill Link, the Austin-based president of the state United Way organization.

Link said it was no surprise that Midland's average United Way contribution in 1989 topped that of every other Texas city.

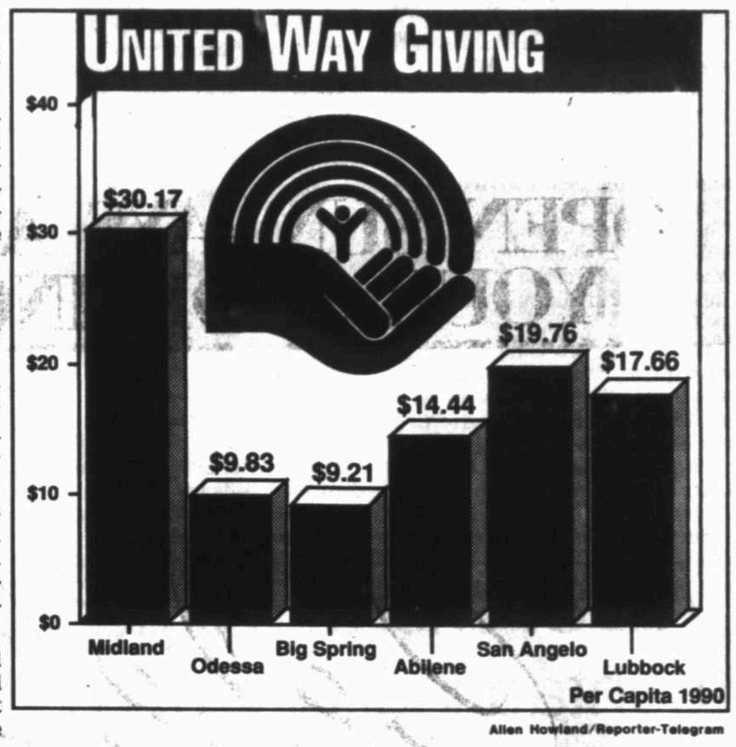

"Midland has a number of very community-minded foundations," he said. "Sometimes other communities do not have as many family or corporate foundations."

Statewide per capita rankings for this year were not available, but the 1990 figure for Midland was far higher than for the Odessa, Big Spring, Abilene, San Angelo and Lubbock campaigns.

San Angelo, with $19.76 donated per resident, ranked second among the six cities this year. Last year the per capita figure there was $15.55.

Meanwhile, Big Spring had the lowest with $9.21 per person. The figure was down 26.7 percent from 1989, when the contributions averaged $12.57 per person.

The 1990 per capita donation for the other cities was $9.83 for Odessa, up from $6.59 last year; $14.44 for Abilene, up from $13.44; and $17.66 in Lubbock, up from $17.12.

Allen Howland/Reporter-Telegram

Ms. Bivens attributed much of Midland's success this year to an increased influx of donations from new sources.

"A lot of people who didn't give last year gave this year," Ms. Bivens said. "We give the credit to our wonderful volunteers and our wonderful people of Midland who want to help people who are less fortunate."

The city ranks at the top statewide because of generous donations from local foundations and the regional offices of major oil companies, she said.

"The corporate community as well as individuals provide wonderful support," Ms. Bivens said. "Plus we have an outstanding group of volunteers. It's a combination of things."

Officers seek suspects in robberies

Staff Report

Three apparently unrelated aggravated robberies that occurred Wednesday night and early Thursday morning have Midland police seeking suspects, the police department reported.

The first incident occurred at 9:23 p.m. Wednesday at Kentucky Fried Chicken, 2311 N. Big Spring.

According to reports, a man entered the store and demanded money from the cash register, telling the clerk he had a handgun. He fled on foot with $150 in cash.

The suspect was described as being a black male, about 26 to 28 years old, 6 feet tall, 185 pounds, wearing a dark blue jacket and a maroon cap.

A robber struck the Kent Kwik Convenience Store at 2910 N. Big Spring at 2:14 a.m. Thursday and was observed assaulting the clerk with a screwdriver or box cutter by a patrol officer making rounds in the area.

The officer radioed that a robbery was in progress and then entered the store, ordering the suspect from behind the counter, the report said.

While the officer was checking the clerk, who had cuts and abraisions to her head and hand, the suspect ran from the store without any money. The officer chased the suspect but lost him when he scaled a six-foot fence, the report said.

Other units at the scene were unable to find the suspect, who was described as being a black male between 20 and 30 years old, 195 pounds, wearing a blue shirt and dark blue pants, the report said.

The Holiday Inn at 4300 W. Highway 80 was robbed at 2:50 a.m. Thursday by a man who threatened the clerk by saying he had a gun, although no gun was displayed, police said.

The suspect took $180 from the cash register and fled on foot. The report described him as being a black male between 17 and 20 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall and 130 pounds.

Grassroots group gathers on school district issues

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland school district issues are overshadowed by the Rebel flag controversy, and that needs to change, according to Citizens Concerned About Education.

"The issue is that our schools are overcrowded," shouted one parent, nearly overcome by emotion. "This is not a rumor. This is real."

The remark was greeted with murmurs of approval from a large percentage of more than 100 other parents and Midland citizens who gathered at 7 p.m. Thursday at Quanah Parker Elementary School.

The meeting, which was open to the public, was hosted by members of the newly formed committee — Citizens Concerned About Education. Many attendees were parents of children who are dealing with adverse conditions in overcrowded elementary schools.

"This group is an example of a grassroots organization," said Elisa Goodwin. "It was begun by parents and concerned citizens. It is independent of — but we are working with — school administrators."

Ms. Goodwin, who has co-chaired the committee with Darrell Dunton, said that only a dozen people turned out for the organizational meeting. "Now we are just growing and growing."

Ms. Goodwin said the committee has been investigating alternatives to building new schools since the Oct. 6 school bond issue failed.

"The voters didn't know everything there was to know about where the needs really are," she said. "We are united behind the conviction that our schools are truly overcrowded and something must be done."

Several parents of children in elementary schools presented reports explaining tax rates and options to ease overcrowding.

Bobby Eads, who spoke about property taxes, said, "Half of the school district budget, $36 million, is funded by local taxes — commercial, residential and minerals."

He said he was surprised that only 12 percent of property taxes are garnered from minerals. "Odessa gets about 60 percent of its property taxes from minerals," he said, "About 33 percent of the taxes in Midland are paid by residents and another one-third by commercial property owners."

Although several attendees noted that nobody likes to see their taxes increased, their research showed that new buildings were needed to solve overcrowding.

Kathy Dill, who presented a report on year-round schools, said that multi-track school schedules would only be a short-term solution. "Additional funds would also be needed to pay extra staff, including custodians, cafeteria workers and clerical workers," she said. "Test scores seem to be improving in districts that have year-round schools, but their findings are not complete."

Robert Stewart, Quanah Parker principal, said he recently attended a seminar on year-round schools in San Diego. "While it works great in some places, in other places it is a disaster," he said, when asked to speak by committee members.

An audience member asked if year-round schools were being threatened if the next bond issue failed.

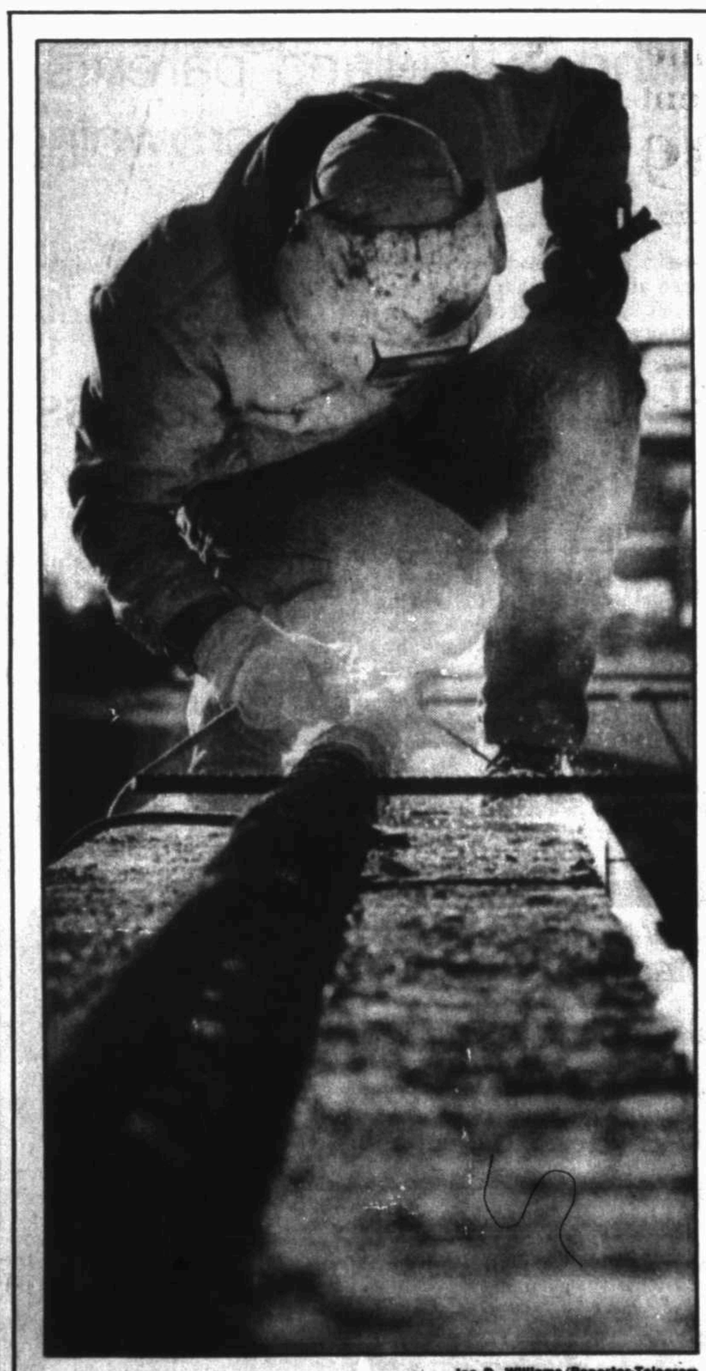

"Going to a year-round school is not a threat," Stewart said. "But something will have to be done and we have to look at all alternatives. The reality is that something will have to be done. And as a principal — one way or another — I'm going to make it work. The kids are important."

Ken Marks, a Midland Independent School Board trustee, said "There are over 2,000 more youngsters in the schools than we had three years ago and there is no place to put them. That is just the bottom line."

After questions, answers and discussion about the positive and negative aspects of year-round schools, portable buildings, several audience members decided that building new schools would be the only viable long-term option to easing burgeoning enrollments.

"Construction is our best alternative," said Ms. Goodwin. "We have real needs for real buildings. These are tough times right now. We aren't asking for luxuries."

Jury finds man guilty in stabbing, assault

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A 238th District Court jury found Jan Jerrot Allen guilty Thursday of aggravated sexual assault and attempted murder in the July rape and stabbing of a Midland woman.

The eight-man, four-woman jury — which took an hour and 45 minutes to reach its verdict — is scheduled to assess Allen's punishment today.

Aggravated sexual assault is punishable by five to 99 years or life in prison, while the punishment range for attempted murder is two to 20 years in prison. Both offenses carry a maximum fine of $10,000.

Allen, 27, whose trial began Monday before Judge John Hyde, was accused in a July 2 attack which left a 41-year-old woman hospitalized with 11 or 12 stab wounds and a collapsed lung.

The woman, who testified earlier this week, said she invited Allen into her apartment at 4315 Neely Ave. sometime after 2 p.m. on July 2 because she'd met him previously and thought he was a friend of her daughter.

After a few minutes of small talk — during which Allen told the woman his name and that he had recently moved to Midland from Las Vegas, Nev. — the woman asked Allen to leave, she told jurors.

The woman said Allen then pulled out a knife and stabbed her in the arm before dragging her to the bedroom, where he knifed her several more times, beat her and raped her.

Allen, whose attorneys pointed to alibis provided by Allen's friends and family members as evidence of their client's innocence, declined this week to take the witness stand.

James Eubank, one of Allen's lawyers, reminded jurors that five people had testified that Allen was at his grandparents' apartment at 1902 N. Midland Drive at the time of the attack — between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m.

"To convict Mr. Allen, you're going to have to find that Mr. Allen's grandfather and his grandmother and his uncle and two basketball players are not telling you the truth," Eubank said.

But District Attorney Al Schorre said the alibis provided by Allen's friends and family members were confused and in some cases were the product of wishful thinking.

"I think they're doing the best they can to remember it ... the way they want to remember it," Schorre said.

Defense attorneys also questioned police procedure in the case.

"If the physical evidence had been handled correctly I don't think we'd even have a case here," said Eubank, who reminded jurors that blood, hair and tissue samples were not collected from Allen in order to connect him with the crime scene.

The prosecution presented no evidence of the sexual assault other than the victim's testimony, Eubank said.

"Everything in this case came from (the victim)," he said.

Tom Hirsch, Allen's other lawyer, said the only piece of physical evidence linking his client to the attack was a drinking glass bearing Allen's fingerprints which was found at the crime scene.

The victim said she had given Allen a glass of water when he came to her apartment the day of the attack. But Hirsch and Eubank suggested that Allen had used the glass the day before during a party at the victim's apartment complex.

Schorre said the victim had washed the glass the night before the attack.

"She said she washed it in hot, soapy water...and set it up in the drain," he said. "They (the defense) have yet to explain how the washed glass got his fingerprints on it."

Schorre, who described the July 2 attack as "bizarre, aggressive ... unwarranted and unprovoked," reminded jurors that the victim identified Allen as her attacker than men and they're getting more ill, quicker; and because women are the primary caregivers of HIV positive adults and children," Ms. Hale said.

AIDS: More women contacting disease

"It's a very isolating disease for women and there is no sisterhood around us," she said. "There are still a lot of double standards."

Ms. Hale said that there are 177 AIDS cases among men, women and children in the Permian Basin and perhaps three times as many people who have been diagnosed as HIV positive.

For reservations to PBAC's Women and AIDS program, to be held at the Best Western Airport Hotel from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., please call the AIDS Coalition at 362-3301.

The CDC said in its weekly report that by the end of 1990, more than 15,000 women will have AIDS, accounting for 11 percent of all reported cases. More than 9,000 will have died from the disease.

It said 85 percent of women with AIDS infections are between ages 15 and 44.

"In 1982, AIDS wasn't even on the chart," said Dr. James Curran, director of the agency's AIDS program. "In 1987 it was eighth leading cause of death among women 15-44, and we project it to be fifth by 1991."

Cancer is the No. 1 killer of women of childbearing age, followed by accidental deaths, heart disease, homicide and suicide, the CDC said. Curran estimated AIDS is currently the sixth or seventh leading cause.

In the last year, AIDS in women increased 29 percent, to an average of 4.3 cases and about 2.7 deaths per 100,000. AIDS rose 18 percent among men, according to the CDC.

The disease is most prevalent among women who are poor or minorities, the CDC said. Though black and Hispanic women make up 19 percent of all U.S. women, they represent 72 percent of women with AIDS.

Women are most likely to become infected from sexual contact with men who have the AIDS virus. The disease, which destroys the body's ability to fight disease, still occurs mostly among homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

The share of AIDS infections around the world resulting from sex between men and women will rise from 60 percent to 75 percent to 80 percent by the year 2000, the World Health Organization report said.

The organization forecast that by the end of the decade the number of HIV carriers would rise to between 25 million and 30 million worldwide, including 10 million children born to infected mothers.

The organization said about a third of the 9 million to 11 million people now carrying the virus are women.

"I think these findings are a cause for alarm for almost everyone," said Dr. Constance Wofsy, an AIDS specialist at the University of California, San Francisco.

Ms. Wofsy said that, because women tend to get AIDS from heterosexual contact, few ever suspect they're at risk and many fail to take advantage of preventive measures.

When women get sick, they usually go to doctors who are not inclined to look for HIV infection, she said.

"Physicians are going to have to become detectives," Ms. Wofsy said. "It's here now."

In other AIDS reports:

■ The CDC said a study in New York has provided more evidence of an association between the AIDS virus and cervical disease in women. But the CDC stopped short of saying that HIV-infected women are at an increased risk for cervical cancer.

The study found that among patients receiving care at two city clinics for HIV-infected women, the prevalence of cervical disease was eight and 11 times greater than for women living in the respective communities.

■ Based on the first nationwide survey of AIDS at colleges, the CDC reported in the New England Journal of Medicine that between 25,000 and 35,000 of the nation's 13 million college students are infected with the AIDS virus.

Staff writer Erin Blair contributed to this report.

Border Patrol enforcing drug smuggling laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug smugglers along the Rio Grande beware. You can now be arrested by the Border Patrol.

Under legislation signed into law Thursday by President Bush, the arrest authority for Border Patrol agents has been expanded from immigration law violations to other crimes, including suspected drug activity.

The bill, the first sweeping reform of legal immigration in 25 years, also makes it tougher for criminal aliens to delay their deportations by as many as seven years, backers said.

But critics say the law could actually deprive all aliens — not just those arrested or convicted of a crime — of their legal rights. They also question giving the Immigration and Naturalization Service, of which the Border Patrol is a part, additional authority. They say the agency is in chaos and shouldn't be trusted with such sensitive responsibilities.

Bush, however, said the law "boosts our war on drugs and crime, allowing us to send back alien offenders who threaten our streets and who make up nearly a fourth of our federal prison populations. It will help secure our borders — the front lines of the drug war."

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, sponsored the bill's provision giving the nation's 3,800 Border Patrol agents additional arrest authority and said it will help in the war on drugs.

"There are 3,800 more people who can arrest drug smugglers than before; it streamlines operations and saves time. They do not have to wait to call in a (Drug Enforcement Administration) agent, and for agents in rural areas, there often is no DEA agent nearby," Smith said.

Wade Henderson, associate director of the Washington national office of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the ACLU is concerned about expanding the INS' authority to enforce other federal criminal statutes, largely because INS agents haven't been trained as thoroughly as other law officers.

"The agency itself is in a state of administrative chaos, and to give INS agents this brand new authority, when it's having difficulty in enforcing its immigration responsibilities, is presently a mistake," Henderson said.

Wendy Young, immigration policy associate for the National Council of La Raza, said she is also concerned about the INS' expanded powers.

"There are enough human rights violations going on the border as it is," she said. "There is a siege mentality at the border — INS personnel feel they are under siege and tend to strike back, and anything that enhances that ability ... is scary."

The INS estimates that more than 72,000 aliens will be arrested annually on drug charges alone. Yet in 1988, fewer than 6,000 total criminal aliens were deported, Smith said.

"Under current law, aliens have more rights than U.S. citizens. They can delay deportation proceedings almost indefinitely simply by not showing up in court. No U.S. citizen has the right to delay proceedings by not showing up," Smith said.

Under the law, aliens will forfeit their right to an appeal if they fail to show up for a hearing within a certain time. Smith said the bill should make it easier to deport criminal aliens.

But the ACLU, La Raza and the American Bar Association said all aliens would be affected by the law and their rights could be trampled as they seek asylum.

from photographs and in court.

He pointed out that the victim recalled details of Allen's background — such as where he worked and from where he had moved — when describing her attacker to police.

"He told her everything about himself" prior to the attack, Schorre said, and those revelations helped police track Allen down several hours after the stabbing.

Allen was arrested around 10:20 p.m. July 2, reports show. On July 18, he was indicted on one count of aggravated sexual assault and one count of attempted murder. He remained in custody Thursday in lieu of $50,000 bond.

The victim, who said she required ear surgery because of the attack, spent seven days in Midland Memorial Hospital following the assault.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Felony indecency

Staff reports

ODESSA — An Odessa man was arrested and charged with felony indecency Thursday after allegedly exposing himself to a 15 year-old girl, Odessa police reported.

James Richard Hatmaker is being held in the Ector County jail on $5,000 bond. The alleged incident occurred at Crump Park at 10th and Washington streets.

According to the report, the girl was walking back home from the park when the suspect is accused of pulling up next to her in his Nissan pickup and called her over to him. When she approached she saw that his pants were off or down around his knees, the report said.

The girl got a license plate number and fled. Police arrested the suspect shortly thereafter.

Home destroyed

An early morning fire at 1710 E. Walnut totally destroyed a house Thursday, the Midland Fire Department reported.

The family of Juan and Elva Losoya discovered the fire in a back bedroom at 6:47 a.m. after it apparently was started by an open frame space heater, the report said.

When firefighters got to the home it was completely engulfed in flames, the report said. No one was hurt in the blaze.

Alleged serial killer given execution stay

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted a stay Thursday for alleged serial killer Henry Lee Lucas, who was scheduled to die by injection Monday for a 1979 slaying.

The court issued the reprieve so it could consider a claim by Lucas' attorneys that the trial jury should have been able to consider mitigating circumstances before sentencing him to death, said assistant Texas Attorney General Bob Walt.

On Wednesday, the appeals court had rejected a claim that the trial court did not have the authority to set Lucas' execution date.

Lucas had once claimed to have killed nearly 600 people in 26 states but he later recanted those confessions. He said Wednesday he might have confessed to as many as 4,000 crimes because of threats against him or promises made to him.

The one-eyed drifter maintains his innocence and has recanted his confessions to all the slayings except one — that of his mother.

Lucas, 54, was scheduled to die before dawn Monday for the slaying of a woman known only as "Orange Socks," which is all she was wearing when her body was found Oct. 31, 1979, next to a culvert near Interstate 35 north of Georgetown.

But Lucas contends he was in Florida at the time of the Orange Socks slaying and was forced by police to confess.

"I tried to explain," he said of his confessions to police. "The more I tried, the more it became impossible to do. I know what they told me. I only repeated it back to them."

The Orange Socks conviction is Lucas' only death sentence although he has at least six other life terms, two 75-year sentences and a 60-year term for other Texas convictions. He also is wanted in Florida on three first-degree murder charges for slayings in 1980 and 1981.

'Just for kids' video isn't, lawsuit claims

EDINBURG (AP) — A woman who bought her grandchildren an animated video tape was stunned to learn the tape also included film of a man and woman involved in various sex acts, a lawsuit filed Thursday said.

A judge Thursday issued a restraining order prohibiting the toy store and the California-based manufacturer from marketing the tape with packaging that states it is "fully animated" and "just for kids."

The video is titled "Filmation's Ghostbusters, Spirits, Spooks and Specters." But after the cartoons end, a grainy pornographic video with the title "Squeal of Fortune" plays for about 10 minutes.

"This consumer found to her dismay, and after her grandchildren had viewed the film several times, that the film contains almost 10 minutes of sexually explicit scenes at the end of the feature presentation," according to the lawsuit filed in state district court by Assistant Attorney General Al Alvarez.

The woman reported the problem to the pastor of her church, who then contacted Alvarez.

Noel Bloom, chairman of Woodland Hills, Calif.-based Celebrity Home Entertainment Inc. producer and distributor of the video, said the company issued a recall of the tapes almost a year ago. He said the company had received four or five complaints nationwide, similar to the Texas woman's.

Bloom said the company does not know how those tapes were altered. He said he suspected "some sort of sabotage" by an employee of a company that duplicates the tapes for Celebrity Home Entertainment.

"The big problem now is we're talking about the height of Christmas season," said Alvarez, director of the state's Consumer Protection Division office in McAllen. "We're talking about people going into toy stores to purchase toys for children. Video formats like this one, VHS tapes for children, are very popular in terms of a gift. We're having this particular gift being distributed without the consumer purchasing the gift knowing that it contains sexually explicit material."

Alvarez said the video apparently has been distributed nationwide. He said the attorney general's office in California also received a complaint last year from a woman who had bought a copy of the same video tape in Massachusetts.

The woman wrote the attorney general a letter stating that her young cousin, described only as "a little boy" became upset while watching the tape in her Hyde Park, Mass., living room last Christmas Eve.

She wrote: "He had come running out into the kitchen saying, 'I don't like this. It looks funny, bad, bad,' he said. Meanwhile, my guests & relatives & myself heard these strange noises.

"I went in & I saw the tape ...I quickly pulled it out of the VCR & explained that the Ghostbusters are not like that, that the film was broken & I had to return it."

No one was available to comment late Thursday afternoon at the Kay Bee Toy Stores corporate office in Pittsville, Mass.

Radon survey to get under way in January

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Department of Health's Bureau of Radiation Control will conduct a random survey of Texas households in the first three months of 1991 to study radon concentrations.

The bureau received a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for the survey, which will help identify any potential areas where radon may be a problem.

The grant also provides for training staff members, developing a data management system, providing public information and responding to radon problems.

Radon is an odorless, colorless radioactive gas that occurs naturally by being released from certain rocks and soils.

It poses no problems outdoors, the Health Department said, but radon can accumulate to dangerous levels if trapped inside an enclosed space.

An increased risk of lung cancer is a potential health effect associated with exposure to elevated levels of radon over a long time.

Letters will begin going out in December to 13,000 Texas residents asking for participation. A maximum of 4,500 radon detection canisters will be put in homes.

EARNEST KIKER

Pecan growers break from past with new show

The Midland Pecan Growers Association is sponsoring the first-ever Tri-County Pecan and Food Show, Monday and Tuesday, December 3-4, Dellwood Mall, Illinois and Midkiff avenues.

Kiker

This is the first year that Midland, Ector and Glasscock counties have come together for this show. This is however the Midland Pecan Growers Association's 15th year to sponsor the show.

Entry rules and regulations are:

■ Participants are limited to one entry of each named variety they grow. The grower may enter as many seedlings, known hybrids or natives as he wishes. Sample entries from one orchard CANNOT be entered in two county shows. Pecans should be from the county or adjoining counties which do not have a show. In rare instances, samples can be entered from a distant county, but the county show entered by the distant entry should be the nearest county show.

■ The exhibitor must be the grower.

■ A minimum of 40, 42 nuts are necessary for each entry. This minimum sample of 40 should represent the variety and be uniform in size and shell color. Mixed samples (more than one variety in an entry) are disqualified.

■ The growers may wish to select the heaviest pecans by weighing individual nuts.

■ A variety entry may be composed of nuts from more than one tree. For example, if the grower has ten Choctaw trees, each tree could contribute nuts to the grower's one Choctaw entry.

■ Nuts should be without insect and disease damage.

■ The pecans should be free of dust, dirt and shuck remnants. They should not be rubbed to the extent that shape or color is altered.

■ Avoid discolored shells and kernels. These problems may result from peeling pecans from the shucks too early.

■ Pecans exhibited must be from the 1990 crop.

■ Closing time for pecan entries is Saturday, Dec. 1, 1990, at 5:00 p.m.

■ All entries become the property of the Midland County Pecan Growers Association and CANNOT be returned to the exhibitor.

■ Pick-up points for pecans are:

— La Casa Verde, 2615 N. Midland Drive, during business hours only,

— Marge & Art Shaw, phone 682-0315,

— Boyd Reese, 2010 Ranking Hwy.,

— Earl Sellman, 5809 S. Hwy. 349, after 5:00 p.m., please,

— Phyllis & Claude Reames, 2601 Cessena Dr., 694-0763,

— Midland County Extension office, 1010 E. 8th St., 335-3071,

— Glasscock County Extension office, Glasscock County Courthouse, 354-2381

Food Show entry rules

■ Entries will be accepted from any resident of Midland, Ector or Glasscock counties.

■ Food entries will be accepted between 3-5 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 2, 1990, or between 7-9 a.m., Monday, Dec. 3, 1990, at DELLWOOD MALL, SOUTH ENTRANCE. Judging will begin at 10:00 a.m. Monday.

■ There are three divisions: Adult, Junior (ages 12-17) and Youth (ages 6-11).

■ The food categories are: Appetizers, Breads, Cakes, Pies, Cookies, and Candies.

■ The food entry must be prepared by the exhibitor.

■ Only one entry will be accepted in each food category from any exhibitor.

■ Food entries will be exhibited only on "NON-RETURN" DISPOSABLE containers and MUST be covered with clear plastic wrap. Plates or other containers will not be returned. Items requiring refrigeration or warming will be disqualified.

■ Pecans for food exhibitors DO NOT have to be grown by the exhibitor. Pecans must be a part of the recipe ingredients. Food entries using pecans for decoration only will be disqualified.

■ Each food entry must be accompanied by two copies, typed or printed on a 3" by 5" card. Recipe must give EXACT measurements, such as teaspoons, tablespoons, cups, etc., not packages or cans. Recipes WILL NOT BE RETURNED to the exhibitor, and all food entries become the property of the Midland County Pecan Growers Association.

South Texas, Coastal Bend parched

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — South Texas and the Coastal Bend, still gripped in chronic drought for up to three years, stand in sharp contrast to the generally good soil moisture conditions found in most of the rest of the state, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

South Texas soil moisture remains much too short and "ranges and pastures are still in drought condition," said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Extension Service.

He said similar problems are found along the Coastal Bend, where three years of abnormal rainfall have left native pastures almost bare of forage.

M. Lin Wilson of Corpus Christi, district Extension Service director, said current Coastal Bend conditions compare closely to the dry falls of 1988 and 1989.

"Winter and spring rains will be critical for 1991," Wilson said. "Cattle are generally in fair condition and some locations have adequate grazing, but some cattle are on full winter maintenance feeding programs in other areas."

Carpenter said even the normally-wet Upper Coast could use rain on winter pastures. Rain also would be welcome in the Panhandle and a few counties in East Texas.

Panhandle wheat is responding well to warm weather but needs more moisture. Some wheat is being irrigated where water is available, said Paul E. Gross of Amarillo, district Extension director.

This week's cold front probably will not help these dry regions, according to the National Agricultural Weather Service at Texas A&M University.

"The front will drop temperatures into more seasonal levels, with some parts of upper Texas getting near freezing. East Texas and a few other areas will likely get some showers," said Richard Wynne, meteorologist with the weather service.

He said the past week was 8 to 11 degrees above normal throughout Texas for this time of year and below normal in rainfall.

'The peanut harvest (in Southwest Texas) continues, with farmers working long hours to stay ahead of weather problems. The peanut market is close to an all-time high with an excellent crop.'

— Jose Pena, Extension economist, Uvalde

The mild weather has spurred harvesting of cotton, sorghum, peanuts and other crops in the northern third of the state, Carpenter said. Rolling Plains cotton harvesting continues at a rapid pace and is getting a half to more than two bales an acre.

"Rolling Plains wheat pastures are making excellent growth but stocking of wheat pastures is restricted because of lack of capital for financing purchase of cattle for grazing," said Ed Garnett of Vernon, district Extension Service director.

He said cattle already on wheat are making "excellent gains."

"Pecan harvesting is continuing but a hard freeze is needed to open shucks," Garnett said. Peanut harvesting is 70 to 90 percent complete, with yields and quality rated as good.

In Southwest Texas, Extension Economist Jose Pena of Uvalde said small grains, ranges and pastures, and winter vegetables are growing well but need rain for winter growth.

"The pecan crop is about complete," Pena said. "The peanut harvest continues, with farmers working long hours to stay ahead of weather problems. The peanut market is close to an all-time high with an excellent crop."

District Extension Service directors reported the following specific crop, livestock and weather conditions for the past week:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is generally short. Wheat is responding well to the warm weather but rain would help. Some wheat is being irrigated because of dry conditions. Cotton and sugar beet harvesting is moving fast and good cotton yields are being made. Cattle are in good shape and stockers are moving onto wheat fields.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture is mostly adequate. Wheat looks good after recent rains and livestock are in good shape. Cotton is about 65 percent harvested, with favorable yields reported in irrigated fields. Only 10 percent of the sorghum crop remains to be harvested.

ROLLING PLAINS: Warm weather is pushing cotton harvesting and yields range from a half to more than two bales an acre. A hard freeze would help final cotton harvesting operations. Although wheat is making excellent growth, lack of financing is holding back stocker cattle operations on wheat fields. Cattle already on wheat are gaining weight fast. A hard freeze would split pecan shucks and expedite harvesting. Peanut yields and quality are good in a harvest now 70 to 90 percent done.

NORTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is adequate. Cotton, peanuts and soybeans are almost all harvested, with good to excellent yields. Pastures and cattle are in good to fair condition and calves are getting favorable prices. Hay supplies are sufficient. A very short pecan crop is up to 70 percent harvested. Good crops of turnips, greens, pumpkins, squash and radishes are being harvested.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture is short to adequate. Warm, damp conditions have hindered cotton harvesting. Cotton grades are fair to good and yields vary from 1.6 bales to 3 bales an acre. Ranges are good to excellent but there is some maintenance feeding of livestock. Pecan quality is good. Balmy weather has slowed deer hunting.

SOUTHWEST: Small grains, winter vegetables, and pastures and ranges are growing well but need rain to maintain vigor during winter. Harvesting of cabbage, spinach and other leafy greens is under way. Pecan harvesting is almost finished. The peanut harvest continues, with growers working hard to stay ahead of weather problems. Peanuts are excellent in quality and markets are near an all-time high.

WEST CENTRAL: Soil moisture is adequate. Cotton harvesting continues and early-planted wheat is providing excellent grazing. Peanut farmers need sunshine and dry weather to finish harvesting. Peanut yields and grades have been declining. Livestock condition is excellent because of good forage available. Stocker calves are grazing wheat. Pecans are up to 90 percent harvested.

CENTRAL: Early-planted oats are being grazed. Timely rains have late oats up to excellent stands, although grub worms are causing problems. A poor pecan crop is yielding smaller nut sizes than usual.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture is so short that conditions are being compared to the droughty falls of 1988 and 1989. Winter and spring rains will be critical for 1991. Cattle are generally in fair shape and there is even adequate grazing in some counties, but cattle are on full maintenance feed in other areas. Pecan harvesting is mostly finished.

SOUTH: Ranges and pastures are in drought condition because of persistent dry soil. Sugarcane, now 35 percent harvested, is yielding lower than usual because of freeze damage last December. Push-and-burn work continues on freeze-damaged citrus trees. Pepper harvesting is under way, and carrots and onions are growing normally, although whitefly numbers are still very high. Worms are light on cabbage.

Export value to drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The value of U.S. agricultural exports is expected to drop 4 percent this fiscal year to $38.5 billion, the Agriculture Department said this week.

The value of those exports rose to a nine-year high of more than $40.1 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

The volume of shipments also will drop 6 percent to around 139.5 million metric tons, about 154 million short tons, as sales of corn and other coarse grains decline, the department's Economic Research Service said.

Also, the report said, larger 1990-91 world wheat output has brought sharply lower wheat prices.

U.S. agricultural imports were projected to drop slightly to $22 billion in 1990-91 from a record $22.5 billion last year.

Arthritis research benefits from reproducing disease in rats

STATE

DALLAS (AP) — The study of spinal arthritis and related diseases has led to the development of genetically engineered rats that mimic the maladies in humans, researchers said Thursday.

The breakthrough, plus the discovery of genetic connections between a family of the diseases, may lead to faster and more accurate development of treatments and therapy for 200,000 American sufferers.

"This is a significant piece of science," said Dr. Maxwell Cowan, vice president and chief scientific officer of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at Bethesda, Md. "The only reason that the diseases could be understood is by developing an animal model."

The institute and the Harold C. Simmons Arthritis Research Center funded the work by scientists at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas. The findings are reported in Friday's editions of the journal Cell.

"Six months ago, there was no animal model for these rheumatic diseases and ankylosing spondylitis," a form of arthritis, Dr. Peter Lipsky, director of the Simmons Center, said at a Thursday news conference announcing the results.

"Now, there is not only an animal model, but an authentic animal model for humans. The disease can actually be diagnosed in the rats," he said.

A colony of such animals is being developed to begin the full-scale search for treatments of the diseases, which affect mostly younger Americans, said Dr. Kern Wildenthal, UT-Southwestern president.

No new treatments for humans have yet been developed from the research, but the future is bright, said Dr. Joel D. Taurog, one of the two principal investigators.

"You can look for gold, but you can't plan to always find it," Taurog said. "We can only hope that the lines of research that lead from this development help prevent the diseases in the future."

Researchers said that for the first time they used transgenic technology, insertion of foreign genes, to produce two strains of inbred rats that carry human genes for the tissue type HLA-B27, found in many patients with the group of diseases called spondyloarthropathies.

The animal model found that a protein molecule long known to be a genetic marker for the disease group may be one cause of the disorders, which often involve spinal inflammation.

"This convincing animal model will help reveal the mechanisms that cause these arthritic disorders, which affect hundreds of thousands of our young people," said Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, Department of Health and Human Services secretary.

The Howard Hughes Institute and the Simmons Center have applied for a patent on the transgenic rats. Though genetic alteration of mice is common, it had never been accomplished in rats before Taurog and Dr. Robert Hammer, senior associate at the Hughes institute, established the HLA-B27 link.

The association between the protein and spondyloarthropathies was first noted in 1973.

Illicit use of drug causes poisonings

ATLANTA (AP) — A drug called GHB, gaining popularity among illicit users, has made people sick in at least nine states, including Texas, federal health officials said Thursday.

California, Georgia and Florida had by far the most numerous cases; Texas was among three states reporting only one case each.

The Centers for Disease Control began surveying poisoning from gamma hydroxy butyrate, or GHB, in August after officials in San Francisco reported a series of poisonings resulting from use of the drug.

GHB is illegal for use in the United States, except in government-sanctioned research, said Dr. Steven Auerbach, a medical epidemiologist at the Atlanta-based CDC's Center for Environmental Health and Injury Control.

But he said it has become popular in the last few months because it produces a trance-like state. It also has been sought by bodybuilders for weight control and as a sleep aid.

Auerbach said the drug has turned up in the Atlanta area in a "cocktail," mixed with amphetamines and called Max.

The CDC has received reports, however, of illnesses include vomiting, drowsiness, loss of consciousness and seizures after people ingested GHB. The reports came from California (25 cases), Georgia (15), Florida (seven), South Carolina (three), Minnesota (two), Arizona (two), Ohio (one), Texas (one) and Virginia (one).

In most cases, the individuals dissolved up to three teaspoons of GHB in water and drank the mixture. Among those reported, 11 people were hospitalized after taking GHB, though the CDC said there have been no deaths.

UTEP initiates heavy metal concert ban

EL PASO (AP) — The crunching guitar sounds of heavy metal won't be heard on the University of Texas at El Paso campus until school officials decide if the music promotes drug use and dropouts.

The decision drew an angry response from the school's student newspaper, but reaction on campus Thursday was mixed.

UTEP President Diana Natalicio ordered the heavy metal moratorium Monday after a nurse complained about drug use and violence she saw at one of the shows at the UTEP-owned Special Events Center.

The nurse, Jill Field, coordinated the first aid station at a Nov. 14 Judas Priest concert.

"The university tells kids 'don't do drugs' and 'stay in school' and then hosts this kind of event. That's too much of a dichotomy," she said.

Glen Williams, UTEP's vice president of finance and administration, said the moratorium was not meant to be an outright ban of such concerts.

"We decided to put a moratorium so we could review shows on a band-by-band basis ... and make sure that we are creating an image we think a higher learning institution should have," he said.

The university has formed a committee of staff and students that will meet Monday to review scheduled bands and upcoming shows, said Carole Barasch, media relations director. She did not know what type of criteria the committee would consider.

The student newspaper, the Prospector, criticized the decision in an editorial Thursday.

"Banning heavy metal concerts from this campus is not going to rid this campus of the "undesirables" that administrators feel tend to gather at heavy metal shows," the editorial said.

FAMILY MATTERS

Holiday season can cause feelings of depression

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My mother called yesterday and changed "our" Christmas plans for the third time in two weeks. Everything in our family revolves around what my "little" brother and his spacey wife are going to do. My husband was just mad at my mother for changing everything to please my brother but now he is mad at me because I won't do anything about it.

May

I feel like Christmas is going to be ruined completely this year. If my mother doesn't have everything just the way she wants it, she makes me feel like it's my fault. Then I get depressed and go into a funk for a week. My family used to laugh about it, but because it's Christmas, this time no one thinks it's so funny. They all want me to make our own plans and not worry about what my mother wants. I just couldn't do that. If I ruined my mother's Christmas I would never forgive myself.

Mother is all alone now that Dad died and I can't bring myself to see her suffer. My brother creates enough problems for her already and I don't want to be a problem too.

Can you suggest something that I might do that would make everyone happy? All that I ever seem to do is make everyone mad and I'm getting more depressed just writing this letter. Help me fast! — LOST THE JOY

DEAR LOST: It must be very frustrating trying to please everyone and yet not pleasing anyone. Often when we try to be all things to all people we wind-up not being anything to anyone.

It's sort of like being a tennis ball. The tennis ball is in the game but it's just getting pounded from one side to the other. You know what an old tennis ball looks like don't you?

It also is completely appropriate that you would feel depressed. One of the causes of depression is a sense of hopelessness and helplessness. Sounds like that fits.

I would suggest that you have a family meeting and share your feelings with your family. Share your dilemma — you want to support your mother, but you recognize the wisdom of their observation and their feelings. It is not fair to you or to them to have your Christmas orchestrated by someone like your brother.

There obviously is no easy answer here but there may be a compromise that would capture the spirit of Christmas. After all, as Christ said, they will know we are Christians by how we love one another.

DEAR READERS: This is often a time of the year that many people experience a sense of "feeling blue" or a sense of loss or of sadness. The sources of such season induced depression are many and varied. A very common source is from our experiences in our family of origin.

During these periods, I have found it very helpful to write about my feelings. I keep a journal that is my private journal for such purposes. For years, Christmas was a very difficult and depressing time for me. Through my journaling I came to realize that my feelings were grounded in a profound sense of disappointment associated with Christmas. Despite my mother's significant efforts, there was always a powerful sadness that prevailed in our home due to my father's alchohlic antics.

I continued to react to that sadness for years by avoiding Christmas to the extent that I could. I was always active in church and all that stuff but could never understand why I felt so different than everyone else seemed to feel. So I would hide in my work. I would not take the risk to find out what was wrong, rather I would make every effort to avoid the situation that created the feeling.

It was only in the process of recovery that I have been able to "recover" that sad child. While painful, it was worth the price. The child is still unhappy but he's growing.

If you are experiencing unexplained sadness, depression, feeling down — I would encourage you to start journaling your feelings. Let your inner feelings begin to come forth. If you need some help, write me and I will send you the process that I follow.

I believe that recovery depends in great part on obedience and discipline. As noted Biblical scholar William Barclay observed, "Fellowship with God and the revelation of God are dependent on love; and love is dependent on obedience. The more we obey God, the more we understand him; and the man who walks in his way inevitably walks with him."

Crimes against joggers preventable with precautions

Associated Press

Crimes against joggers, such as rape, are rare but not rare enough.

That's why the Road Runners Club of America is working hard to prevent such realities from catching up with runners, according to Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

Here are several tips for running safety, prepared by the RRCA.

■ Carry identification or write name, phone number and blood type on the inside sole of a running shoe. Include medical information.

■ Don't wear jewelry.

■ Carry change for phoning. Call police immediately if something happens or if danger is suspected.

■ Run with a partner.

■ Leave word of running routes with family and friends.

■ Run in familiar areas, and alter the route regularly. In unfamiliar areas contact running stores or police for safety tips. Check where phones are located and which stores are open at the time you are running.

■ Stay alert to dangerous situations. Avoid unpopulated areas, deserted streets, overgrown trails, poorly lighted areas, parked cars and bushes.

■ Don't wear headphones.

■ Ignore verbal harassment. Look directly at strangers, but keep your distance and keep moving.

■ Run against traffic to see oncoming autos, and wear reflective material if running before dawn or after dark.

■ Carry a whistle.

■ Respect intuition. If a person or area feels unsafe, honor that feeling and run away from trouble.

To obtain a free copy of the above running safety tips, send a SASE (business size) to RRCA, 629 S. Washington St., Alexandria, VA 22314.

DEAR ABBY

Man's secretive past casts shadow on ex-employee

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For several years, I worked for a man who had a lot of trouble with the truth. Apparently, he is still lying. Although I no longer work for him, the woman he has been dating called me recently for some information about him. I acknowledged that she had guessed the truth about one area of his past, but I immediately regretted I had said anything.

Van Buren

When she started quizzing me further, I suggested that she ask him directly — which she has never done. She seemed annoyed with my refusal to tell her more than I had. It seems that she plans to go to Houston (without telling him) to track down the whole story. I told her that the answers she wants are not so bad, but I felt that the telling of his story was up to him. She still insisted that she had no intention of asking him.

Although I am not in touch with this man, I've considered contacting him to tell him that he needs to be honest with this woman — especially since she has already guessed some of the truth. I've also thought of calling her back and suggesting that he may be annoyed when he finds out she made a trip to Houston — the people at that end will probably tell him. I also hesitate to do that. Shall I just keep out of it and not call anyone? Thanks for helping. — UNEASY IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR UNEASY: Your last idea was by far your best. Don't call anyone. And in the future, the less you say to anyone concerning a third party — especially to a stranger on the telephone — the better.

DEAR ABBY: I own a small pet shop in Illinois. Today when I came to work, I noticed a box in my parking lot. When I opened the top, a large cat jumped out! A note inside read, "Hi! My name is Bear. I am very friendly. I know you will find a good home for me because you love animals, too."

Well, I didn't find a good home for Bear, because the frightened animal slipped out of my hands and into the street in the middle of traffic and was killed instantly.

Abby, people have dumped boxes of sick kittens, malnourished puppies, half-dead rabbits, baby hamsters and guinea pigs at my store with no note — nothing! As far as I am concerned, these people have no hearts and no brains. My veterinary bills for these animals have run into the hundreds of dollars in the two years I've been in the pet shop business. I simply cannot afford to take care of other people's problems.

Abby, please tell your readers to take these animals to the local Humane Society so they can find homes for them or euthanize them. Although "putting down" an animal is not an easy thing to do, it's far more humane than letting a cat fry in the heat in someone's parking lot or get killed in traffic. — LOVES ANIMALS IN CHICAGO

DEAR LOVES ANIMALS: Thanks for giving a voice to the voiceless.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "I'd rather be right than be president"? I say it was Wendell Willkie. My husband says it was Adlai Stevenson. — EUNICE AND SHELDON

DEAR E. AND S.: You're both wrong. It was Henry Clay, who campaigned unsuccessfully for president five times. (P.S. I think what this country needs is a person who can be right and be president at the same time.)

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Look for nearest exit off highway of good health

By Erma Bombeck

Did you ever wonder about all those people on television commercials and in magazine ads who exercise in their living rooms on those cross-country ski machines? They intrigue me.

Bombeck

Are they married? Do they have any other furniture? Is a flat stomach really that important?

It amazes me how there they are in the middle of nowhere, gliding back and forth with their arms attached to a pulley and rope, smiling to themselves. No kids hanging around their knees, no dogs nipping at their heels, no nagging spouse to tell them to "Keep the noise down, I'm watching TV" and no one yelling in their ears, "Telephone!"

No, just men in L.A. Gear with inflatable muscles skiing along on the highway of good health. Just women in full makeup in iridescent tights and leotards with matching headbands running as though they're expecting a visit from the NFL. Howdy Doody wasn't that happy.

The appeal for all this equipment is certainly directed at the right people — armchair procrastinators. These are persons who have been losing the same 10 pounds for the last 30 years and are looking for any excuse not to exercise, including leaving the house.

Their reasons are inspired. "They don't have classes early-/late enough." "I have to make a lefthand turn at a peak period." "I can't go into work sweaty." "I'll work out when I lose a few pounds and look better in shorts." "I have a bad back and don't want to 'pull' something."

The ski track in the middle of a living room is the latest in the parade of guilt toys. The first diversion to catch my attention was the trampoline. I didn't just see it as an object the size of a helicopter pad smack in the middle of my bedroom, but a monument to good intentions. I was going to jog my way to a size 8, twist my way to a waist the size of a canning jar lid, and, who knows, even perfect my dives. (I don't have a pool.) It was in the bedroom three days when I tripped over it on the way to the bathroom one night and sold it within a week at a garage sale.

Our house and garage are a museum of good intentions past. I said I'd hang by my feet, but I didn't. I said I'd attach elastic bands to the door frame and reduce my arms, but I lied. I said I'd row and pedal my way to thin, but I buried the machines in the garage.

I'm well now. I can watch those people glide back and forth on their ski tracks without so much as a bead of perspiration on their foreheads. I can watch them fold the apparatus and shove it under their beds until the next day and feel nothing.

Call me crazy, but do you know what I think? I think they're models and they're paid to look happy.

Social Security reform needed

By Steve Sakson

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Ozzie and Harriet version of the American family is nearly extinct, but the Social Security system designed around it is much the same. As a result, women are the losers.

Married working women usually earn no more Social Security retirement than if they'd never worked a day. Most divorced women get only half the benefits earned by their former husbands.

Women who become widowed in their 50s face up to 10 years without any death benefit checks.

These inequities have been acknowledged since the mid-1970s, but reforms went nowhere because the system went through a financial crisis. Tax increases passed in the early 1980s have prompted renewed calls for reform.

Two House subcommittees are considering legislation. A task force appointed by Social Security Commissioner Gwendolyn King is working on its own bill.

"I think we have a responsibility to at least look at whether we're serving the needs of families in this country in the 21st century," King said in an interview at Social Security headquarters in Baltimore.

THE OLDER Women's League, an advocacy group, explains the problem in dollars.

The average monthly Social Security retirement benefit for women in 1989 was roughly three-quarters of that paid to men — $488, compared to $639, according to the league.

Compounding the problem, by 2030, only one in three women over 65 will be married, compared with 40 percent today.

"More and more women will be living in poverty," said Joan Kurianski, director of the Older Women's League.

Two factors put working women at a disadvantage. They usually earn less than men and they often stop working to care for children or elderly relatives.

The system gives these women a difficult choice.

They can base their Social Security check on their own earnings or they can get a check equal to half their husband's benefits. Because their earned benefit is usually lower than the 50 percent spousal benefit, the years they worked and paid taxes go for naught.

Divorced women, unless they've earned high incomes themselves, get only the 50 percent spousal benefit — and then only if they've been married 10 years.

Reform advocates also bemoan what they call the widow's gap — a quirk in the system that can put widows in their 50s in poverty.

WHILE THEY are too old to begin most careers, Social Security won't pay death benefits until age 60 because they don't have young children.

Lucille Leffall, 65, is a retired beautician in Baltimore who is twice divorced and now gets $300 per month Social Security. She works part time at a senior citizens center and depends on her daughter and son-in-law for help.

Without that, Leffall said, "I would get married again, I guess — if I could find the right person who would go along with my way of thinking."

One proposal to equalize benefits between men and women is called earnings sharing. The total lifetime wages of a husband and wife are combined, then divided to compute each person's retirement check.

"The principle is, marriage is an economic partnership and even if I'm not in the paid labor force, I'm contributing to the marriage," said Laurel Beeden, a researcher for the American Association of Retired Persons.

BUT EARNINGS sharing cuts benefits to some people, such as divorced men, so it's never gotten far in Congress. Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, has tried to solve these inequities with earnings sharing legislation that prohibits anyone's benefits from dropping.

Although this would drastically increase the cost, Oakar says the Social Security Trust Fund can afford it.

"If you did the whole bill in one fell swoop it would cost in the neighborhood of $30 billion (a year), but remember, as we speak we have about $90 billion in the trust fund, and by the year 2000, they say it will be up to about $1 trillion."

Prevention prevents need of cure

By Dr. Henry F. Page

Have you noticed recently that the height-weight scales say you have shrunk three inches and that the mirror reflects a possible dowager's hump? That at times your bones vaguely ache and are sensitive to touch. Does a fractured wrist interfere with your playing your piano or a broken hip slow down your jogging? Did lifting a stuck window create a stabbing pain in your back or legs? If any of these things are true, you may well have a condition called osteoporosis!

Page

Osteoporosis is a thinning of the skeletal bones in the sense that they are less solid primarily because of the lack of calcium. One must remember that bones are not hard, inert, stony material but rather one more part of your living body growing, receding and changing like the rest. New cells are constantly being laid down and others absorbed by complicated metabolic, endocrine and physical factors. In some situations, too much calcium is resorbed; in other situations not enough is being laid down.

Symptoms are logical. Atmospheric pressure compresses the soft interspaces between the vertebrae, thus reducing a person's height and also pressing nerve endings to produce pain. Spinal curvature may develop due to muscles pulling on bony attachments. Fractures can occur without the victim actually falling — just a strong muscle jerk on the hip joint from imbalance or twisting.

Treatment, as in all conditions affecting the older person, is multi-faceted and primarily preventative.

Calcium by mouth in some asorbable form such as milk, or on rare occasions by injection, comprises the key component. Vitamin D and protein are also dietary necessities, along with female sex hormones in women, to encourage utilization of the calcium.

Exercise, particularly in the form of swimming and walking strengthens the stress areas of the skeleton. Persons that walk, despite occasional falls, look and feel much better than those that don't and actually have fewer hip fractures.

The management of osteoporosis, therefore, provides a good illustration of the old adage — "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

Company offers videos for aging

By Chip Brown

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A company has produced four videos to help aging Americans and those who care for them sort through the bewildering choices about insurance and health care.

Jeanette Vaughan studied health care in college, but couldn't think of a way to market her research. After seeing "L.A. Law" character Arnold Becker peddle a video of himself giving advice on divorce, Ms. Vaughn plunged in.

She made the videos "All About Aging" and created AgeView Inc., which distributes them. The series sells for $195, and is marketed to hospitals, nursing homes and health care agencies.

By 2030, 21 percent of Amercans will be over 65. But Ms. Vaughan said most of the country hasn't considered the idea of an older America.

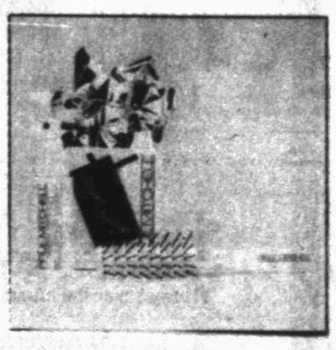

"The first ones feeling the impact are the women over 40 who are working and also trying to take care of aging parents," said Ms. Vaughan, 28.

Among the topics on the tapes are how to obtain Medicare, Medicaid, private insurance and home health care; the psycho-social views of aging and how to relate to older relatives; and details on nutrition, safety and equipment use for elderly patients cared for at home.

Delores Moyer, executive director of Alverno Health Care Corp., based in Memphis, Tenn., is one of the agencies in 275 U.S. cities that uses the tapes.

"We plan to start broadcasting the tapes across our closed-circuit TV network in the hospitals so patients and families can view the tapes while they are in the waiting room," said Ms. Moyer, whose company operates nine hospitals.

DALLAS (AP) — The Houston-Arizona State football game, originally scheduled for Saturday at 11 p.m. CST, will be played 24 hours earlier on Friday at 11 p.m. CST.

The teams are playing in the Coca Cola Japan Bowl.

The game will begin at 2 p.m. (Tokyo time) Saturday in Japan with a 15-hour time differential, according to University of Houston officials. The change was confirmed late Thursday.

Cannon banned

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas A&M University won't get as big a bang out of any scores against the University of Texas in Saturday's football game since UT officials have banned the Aggies' howitzer cannon from Memorial Stadium.

UT also has restricted the number of caretakers for A&M's mascot collie, Reveille. And it said A&M's "boot line" must be formed underneath the stadium.

The changes are necessary because space will be limited when 2,800 temporary chairs are set up in the south end zone.

Running Rebels will defend national title

■ The NCAA reverses itself by making Nevada-Las Vegas eligible for the 1991 basketball tournament.

N.Y. Times News Service

Lifting a ban imposed in July, the National Collegiate Athletic Association has decided to allow Nevada-Las Vegas to defend its 1990 national basketball championship in the 1991 college basketball tournament, but only after the university and its head basketball coach, Jerry Tarkanian, agreed to accept even stiffer penalties next season.

Tarkanian

The new penalties, which were announced Thursday, are a ban on any post-season play in 1992 and a total blackout on any television appearances during the 1991-92 regular season.

■ Kansans fume over decision/2C

In addition, the university and Tarkanian agreed to pursue no further legal action in a case that has dragged through the courts for 13 years.

"This case has been resolved," the university's president, Robert C. Maxson, said Thursday.

He spoke after he and Tarkanian agreed to accept one of two penalties offered by the NCAA's committee on infractions in exchange for allowing the Runnin' Rebels to play in next spring's NCAA tournament.

The alternative they rejected would have coupled a ban on tournament play in 1992 with a suspension of Tarkanian from any participation in the 1991 tournament.

"It took us about 30 seconds to choose," said Maxson, who had spoken by phone with Tarkanian in Vancouver, B.C., where Nevada-Las Vegas is

Steers must stop pass

■ Big Spring's defense will face pass-happy Burkburnett in tonight's Class 4A region semifinal.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Steers face a different kind of challenge in tonight's Class 4A Region I semifinal against Burkburnett at 8 p.m. in Abilene.

After the Big Spring defense stifled Hereford in last week's 17-7 area round win, the Steers must deal with pass-happy Burkburnett if they are to play the Snyder-Stephenville winner in next week's state quarterfinal.

"We have to play good pass defense against them," Big Spring coach David Thompson said.

That may be an understatement. Coach Jerry Watson's Bulldogs have gone from 0-9-1 to 9-3 with a pass-oriented attack that has enabled quarterback Stephen Smith to throw for more than 1,800 yards this season.

Also tonight, Rankin will try to pull off an upset win over third-ranked Farwell in a Class A Region I semifinal at Seminole, while fifth-ranked Garden City will battle Axtell in a Class A Region II semi at Brady.

Also, unsung Fort Davis will try to knock off top-ranked Munday in the other Region I semi at 7:30 p.m. in Stanton.

Area Football

Watson, in his fourth season on the Texas-Oklahoma border near Wichita Falls, said it was just a matter of time before the Bulldogs jelled.

"When our juniors and seniors were in eighth and ninth grade, we knew we would have a pretty good group," Watson said. "Our juniors were district champs (at the freshman and junior varsity levels, respectively) each of the last two seasons."

The Bulldogs might have won a game or two last season with some sophomore starters, but Watson opted to keep the entire class on the JV.

"We were planning for this year," he said.

While the Bulldogs generally run a Pro-I formation, they will also move into double slot and wide slot formations with three and sometimes four wide receivers.

"It ought to be interesting," Thompson said.

The Steer secondary of safeties Freddie Rodriguez and Pat Chavarria and cornerbacks Nick Roberson and Abel Hilario helped hold Big Spring opponents to 45 passing yards per game during District 3-4A play, though Hereford quarterback T.J. Head passed for 147 in the area round game.

Burk can run, too. Tailback Skip Hicks dashed for 219 yards in the Bulldogs' area round win against Fort Worth Poly.

But Big Spring can do a little running and passing

Girls tourney opens today

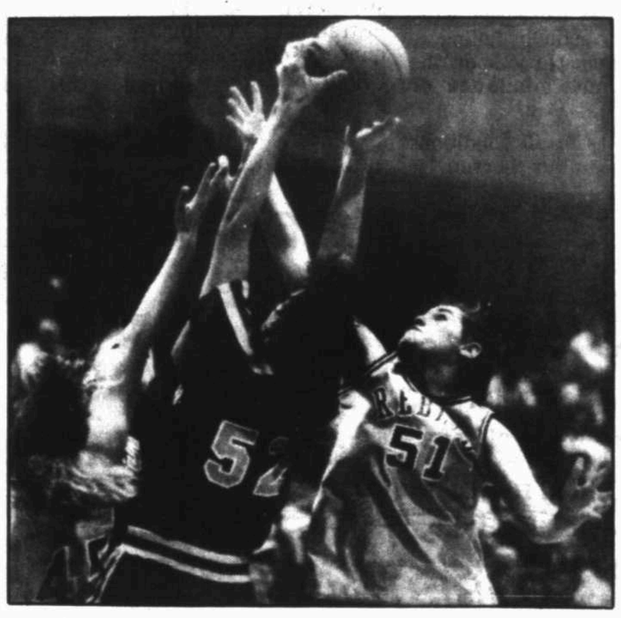

Staff Report

The Tall City Girls Invitational basketball tournament begins at 1 p.m. today at the Lee gym and the only thing for certain is that there will be a new champion when the smoke clears after the 8:30 p.m. championship contest Saturday.

Lubbock Monterey, the tournament's defending champion, will not be back to defend its title. The tournament also has another twist in that games will be played in the Lee gym instead of Chaparral Center where the big junior college "Meeting of Champions" is taking place tonight and Saturday with Odessa College and Midland College hosting national powers Dixie and San Jacinto in games at 6 and 8 p.m. each night.

The local girls also have given themselves some tough tests in the tournament openers today as Midland Lee plays El Paso Eastwood at 3 p.m. and Midland High takes on Class A playoff power Borden County at 7 p.m.

Stars host Soviet pros

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Shootin' Stars hope that their collective indoor experience will be enough to defeat Nistru Kishinev when the Soviet professional team invades the Permian Basin Sports Center for an exhibition match at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Indoor experience hasn't been enough for any other Sunbelt Independent Soccer League team during Nistru Kishinev's highly successful U.S. tour.

The Soviet team, based in the Moldavian city of Kishinev near the Romanian border, outscored four SISL foes 32-11 in the early stages of its two-week tour.

Nistru Kishinev opened the tour with 10-2 and 8-4 wins over the Arkansas Diamonds on successive nights Nov. 20 and 21, followed up with a 9-4 win over the Oklahoma City Warriors on Nov. 23, a 2-0

For Tim Whalen, it's always somethin'

Normally about this time of year, Tim Whalen would be supervising incoming baseball players on the mechanics of the game, teaching them to swing, pitch and what not. Weight training and conditioning are other first steps, but for the first time in 20 years, Whalen is not in charge of all that.

Patterson

For the first time since 1971, the former Midland High head baseball coach is not coming to work in baseball spandex. Nowadays, it's just his blue jeans and Stetson, your basic assistant athletic director attire, at least in Midland.

It's been almost four months since Whalen was named Midland schools' Ass't A.D. As Jack Tayrien's right-hand man, Whalen handles all the chores others would, well, sometimes rather not.

Transportation to and from games, scheduling, handling incoming and outgoing meal money. The to-do, will-do and must-do lists go on and on.

It's the paperwork Whalen would just as soon live without.

"When I'm doing intense paperwork, the kind that I get memos about," Whalen said, "I'd just as soon be teaching a 15-year-old kid how to hit a curve ball. Because I know how to do that."

It's not that Whalen doesn't like his new post. It's just all new ground. For someone who's spent the majority of his life either in a dugout or on the back of a horse playing polo, pushing a pencil and working an adding machine is pretty much foreign ground.

"It's been an experience, to say the least," Whalen said. "But I've really enjoyed it."

The phone calls — most of the them from people with either questions or complaints — almost literally take up the majority of the day. People wondering why Midland kids don't stand quiet at football games during the prayer ... one caller wondering since MISD had run out of tickets for a Lee game, why they didn't just print more ... another caller wondering how she could get tickets to the Midland Lee vs. Open game.

Through everything that has happened to Whalen in his first several weeks on the job, there were a couple of experiences occur on his first day that top almost anything else that has happened since.

The very first task he was put in charge of after walking in the door Aug. 5 was cleaning up a mess in Memorial Stadium. Not just any mess. But one left in the end zone by a rather large dog.

"I was here 20 minutes, and I had to go to the fieldhouse for something," Whalen said. "My first day as an administrator, and a lady stops me and says 'Young man, do you work here?' And I said 'Yes ma'am.' And she said, 'There's a dog out there in the end zone.' I told her we'd try to get the dog out of the stadium and she told me the dog had messed and that we needed to take care of it."

Later in his first day on the job, a man called about the concessions at Memorial Stadium. Whalen was lucky enough to pick up the phone.

"The man wondered what kind of burritos we were going to serve," Whalen said. "And he wanted picante sauce to go with his burritos.

"The phone was ringing off the wall, coaches wanting purchase orders and what not, and this guy wanted to know if we were going to have the same burritos as last year. So I told him no, we'd just have the same batch as we had last season ..."

Always something to do. Always a phone to answer.

"Always something moving and shaking," he said. "I tell you, I was a whole lot safer in the batting cage."

UNLV: Shark drops case

preparing to open its season with a game against Alabama on Saturday.

No explanation was offered for why the university had chosen an alternative that will cost it television revenues next season over one that would have been cost-free.

One university official, however, suggested the choice represented both a consideration for Tarkanian, even though he had offered to step aside during the 1991 tournament, as well as a recognition that because of the provisions of a restrictive television contract the TV ban will not be all that costly.

For example, the university will net only about $90,000 of the $600,000 the networks are paying for the Runnin' Rebels' participation in six televised games this season.

The rest goes to the Rebels' conference, the Great West, and the producers of the telecasts.

By contrast, the university, which had to find a neutral site for its scheduled home opener against Alabama on Saturday because its arena is being used for a rodeo, is being paid $75,000 to play the game at the B.C. Place in Vancouver, even though the game is not being televised.

As a result of what amounted to a compromise with the infractions committee, Nevada-Las Vegas will be able to defend its 1990 championship with a team that is largely the same as the one that overpowered Duke in the final of the tournament last spring.

This season's team has four returning starters, including two 1990 all-Americans, Larry Johnson and Stacy Augman. Both passed up a chance to turn pro in order to return to Nevada-Las Vegas this fall.

Jayhawks plenty steamed about NCAA

Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — While UNLV celebrates, Kansas seethes.

"I sure wish they'd given us a multiple choice penalty," Jayhawks basketball coach Roy Williams fumed.

"I can't believe what the NCAA did," said Jeff Gueldner, a guard on Kansas' national championship team of 1988 that was barred from the 1989 tournament. "It looks to me like the rules are not applied uniformly."

Kansas followers were angered Thursday when the NCAA gave UNLV a choice it did not give the Jayhawks. After barring UNLV from defending its 1989 title because of violations stemming from a 1977 infractions case, the NCAA on Thursday changed its mind and offered the Rebels two alternatives. UNLV chose the second alternative, and will be able to defend its title this year after all.

Thus, Kansas will remain the only NCAA basketball champions barred from defending its NCAA championship.

"I'm stunned by this news," athletic director Bob Frederick said.

Del Brinkman, a vice president at Kansas and the school's longtime faculty representative, issued a one-sentence statement.

"I didn't think it was possible to negotiate with the NCAA," he said.

Williams followed Larry Brown as Kansas coach after Brown and two-time All-American Danny Manning led the Jayhawks to the 1988 title. Because of violations primarily involving a player who never enrolled at Kansas, the Jayhawks were given a three-year probation with recruiting restrictions and the one-year tournament ban.

"I'm happy for the players at UNLV," Williams said in a brief statement. "What the NCAA did, though, just amazes me. I sure wish they'd given us a multiple choice penalty. I have no other comment to make about those decision-makers."

Gueldner was a sophomore reserve on the 1988 team and is now finishing up a business degree after exhausting his eligibility last season.

"If they're going to start making special exceptions, I wish they had started with us," he said. "I think this is going to make it hard for the NCAA. It is unfair to the UNLV players to punish them for something that happened way back in the 1970s. But none of the guys on our team had anything to do with the allegations that were levied against us. We even had a whole new coaching staff. It would have been nice for us to have an option, too."

Unlike the Rebels, the Jayhawks had lost most of their nucleus, including Manning, and were not favored to repeat as champions.

"They might be thinking that since UNLV has almost all its talent back, they will give them a break, and we had lost Danny and coach Brown so it was different for us," Gueldner said. "I would hate to think that would go into their decision."

Leonard back in ring

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The modishly dressed man wearing rings in both ears was called to the podium by Sugar Ray Leonard, who put his arm around him and said, "This young man here is just six years older than my son."

The young man was Terry Norris, who is six years older than 17-year-old Ray Charles Leonard Jr.

On Thursday, Feb. 9, Norris will fight 34-year-old Ray Charles Leonard Sr. in Leonard's first fight in Madison Square Garden.

Norris is the champion (World Boxing Council junior middleweight). Leonard is the attraction.

"This indeed is an opportunity to fulfill a lifetime treat to fight here in Madison Square Garden," Leonard said Thursday at a news conference in which the dais was a ring set in the middle of the almost empty arena.

"When my career is over, I will be able to tell my kids I fought at Madison Square Garden," Leonard said.

"I've kind of modeled my style around Leonard's," said Norris, who was 12 when Leonard won the first of his world titles. "I followed his career closely."

"It's not about money," said Mike Trainer, Leonard's advisor.

Trainer's company, Victory Promotions, will promote the match in association with Garden. Leonard has the desire to fight yet again, although he is financially well off and wouldn't seem to have anything to prove.

Leonard will get between $4 million and $7 million, Trainer said. Asked what Norris would make, Trainer said only: "He will be well paid."

Trainer put some of Leonard's previous purses at $15 million for his third fight against Roberto Duran, $14 million for his second match against Tommy Hearsn and $13 million for his fight against Donny LaLonde. Trainer also said Leonard made $10 million and $7 million, respectively, for his first two fights with Duran.

The fight will be televised by Showtime, which reportedly paid $2 million for the rights.

"That figure is in the ballpark," Trainer said.

Trainer said The Mirage at Las Vegas was interested in holding the fight, but that it could provide only a 4,000-seat indoor arena. He said that the Mirage also wanted to co-promote the fight at the Las Vegas Hilton, which has a bigger indoor arena.

Huskies narrowly avoid loss

Associated Press

John Gwynn's underhand scoop with 1:29 remaining enabled No. 15 Connecticut to avoid an upset and edge Yale 49-48 on Thursday night.

The Elis (1-2) had a chance for the upset when Dean Campbell stole the ball from Rod Sellers with 14 seconds left. But Ed Petersen, pressured by Connecticut's Chris Smith, threw up an airball from 15 feet as time ran out.

Gwynn scored 12 points in the second half and 14 overall as the Huskies overcame Yale's patient offense. The Elis consistently ran the 45-second clock down and frustrated the Huskies (3-0).

Yale led 43-42 when Connecticut's Scott Burrell hit a fadeaway jumper with 2:51 remaining and Smith stole the inbounds pass, hit an easy layup and made a free throw to give the Huskies a 47-43 lead with 2:44 left. But they scored only one basket the rest of the way, while Campbell's two free throws and Staurt Davies' basket kept the Elis close.

Smith had 15 points for the Huskies and Sellers had 12. Petersen and Davies had 12 points for Yale and Travis McCready added 10.

Temple 70, No. 24 Villanova 57

Mik Kilgore scored 21 points and Donald Hodge added 17 as Temple took command with a 14-1 second-half run and whipped No. 24 Villanova.

Temple (1-1) led 39-29 at halftime in the meeting between Big Five rivals and was ahead 49-40 after two free throws by Mark Macon with 14:25 to go. Villanova (2-1) then scored seven straight points, including a 3-point shot by Lance Miller, to move within 49-47 with 13:25 remaining.

But the Owls then used their 14-1 run to take a 63-48 lead and were not seriously challenged again.

The teams were tied at 18 with 13 minutes left in the first half before Kilgore sparked Temple and the Owls took a 33-25 lead on a slam dunk by Hodge with 6:01 remaining.

Temple hit on 16 of 25 shots in the first half. Kilgore was 6-for-8 and led all scorers with 15 points.

Macon scored 17 points for Temple, while Miller had 16 and Greg Woodard 15 for Villanova.

No. 23 Missouri 81, Florida A&M 52

Jamal Coleman and freshman Jevon Crudup led four players in double figures as No. 23 Missouri routed Florida A&M in its 1990-91 home opener.

The Tigers (1-1) raced to a 7-0 lead and never let the Rattlers get closer than five points en route to their 33rd consecutive victory at the Hearnes Center. Missouri, the defending Big Eight champion, built a 46-30 halftime lead by shooting .656 from the field and led by at least 25 points for most of the second half.

Coleman had 18 points and Crudup added 17.

CHAMPIONS: OC returns veterans

From 1C

Friday's schedule has OC versus Dixie at 6 p.m. and MC versus San Jacinto at 8 p.m. On Saturday, OC plays San Jac at 5:30 p.m. and MC plays Dixie at 7:30 p.m.

San Jacinto has made 13 trips to the National Junior College Athletic Association basketball tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., winning four national titles. Dixie College won the 1985 NJCAA crown.

Since Midland and Odessa are just 20 miles apart, their rivalry is natural. And some of their many games are the stuff of legend. One such memorable game was at Odessa's old gym on Jan. 20, 1983. Spud Webb, already a legend and returner from the Chaparrals' 1982 national championship team, was at point guard for MC.

OC's point was a 6-5 player from Lubbock, Craig Ehlo, who later played at Washington and now is in the NBA. In an effort to hold down the high-powered Chaparral offense, OC held the ball for minutes at a time trying to disrupt the flow of MC's game. It almost worked, but the Chaparrals finally won 45-34 in Midland College's lowest point total ever ... as well as the lowest score for any MC opponent.

The 16 years of the MC-OC rivalry have been quite even, with MC winning 24 and OC 18. For those fans of more recent encounters at the new Odessa College Sports Complex and Chaparral Center, the names of Larry Johnson, Mookie Blaylock and Ricky Grace are the stuff of legends.

And while Johnson was the most dominant player in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference for two years, he was never able to get the Wranglers past a pair of regional championships. The 1989-90 team, however, put the Wranglers past that obstacle as they won the Region V crown, then proved it could finish in the top half of the field at their first-ever NJCAA tournament.

Some of those NJCAA tournament veterans are back for OC head coach Dennis Helms. Rodney Dent, the 6-10 post player is hitting more than 70 percent of his field goals, blocking numerous shots and grabbing lots of rebounds. Dent is getting plenty of help from sophomore Calvin Sinkfield, 6-6, and 6-8 freshman Anthony Murry on the inside, plus perimeter shooting from 6-7 freshman Robert Shannon.

MC, which had an open date on Thursday while the rest of the WJCAC began playing, starts its WJCAC action Monday at Chap Center against New Mexico Military. The Chaps have had a week off after two long weekends of tournaments in Levelland and Dodge City, Kan.

Emerging for the Chaparrals is strong play from the sophomores. Leading the scoring parade with more than 20 points per game is Carroll (Hawk) Boudreaux, the 6-9 strongman from Louisiana who is also becoming one of the top rebounders in the conference. Sophomores Charlie Craine and Eugene Witherspoon are providing lots of help for Boudreaux around the paint.

But the outside shooting of sophomore Eric Walker is relieving pressure from the inside players.

SJ Ravens can score

Staff Report

One thing basketball fans acknowledge is that the San Jacinto Ravens of Pasadena always like to light up the scoreboard.

This year is no exception. And fans can see the high-powered San Jac team twice this weekend at Midland College's "Meeting of Champions" doubleheaders on Friday and Saturday at the Chaparral Center.

MC takes on the Ravens at 8 p.m. Friday following the opener between Odessa College and former national champions Dixie College of St. George, Utah, at 6 p.m. On Saturday, opponents swap as OC plays San Jac at 5:30 p.m. and MC goes against Dixie at 7:30 p.m.

San Jacinto head coach Scott Gernander can look at his 12-man roster and see names of ten players who averaged in double figures last season.

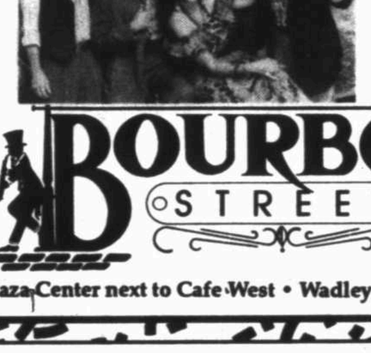

His freshmen recruits include Len Moffett, an All-Chicago player who averaged 18.6 points and All-New York City ace Leonard Williams, who averaged 17. Another player, 6-3 guard David Gray led the state of Illinois in three-point shooting.

itself, and Watson knows it.

"First of all, we have to stop (tailback Jermaine) Miller and (wingback Neal) Mayfield," Watson said. Miller has rushed for more than 1,000 yards, while Mayfield runs, catches, kicks and punts for the Steers.

Watson is also impressed with Steer quarterback Gerald Cobos, who has come into his own the last several weeks.

"I like him because of the way he handles himself," Cobos said. "He makes good decisions, and he passes well enough when he has to pass."

Cobos completed five of his first six passes to four different receivers to stake the Steers to a 14-7 first half lead against Hereford.

Despite Cobos' recent success, Thompson still wants to establish the running game, i.e. Miller, in the early going tonight. But he knows that just running the football probably won't get the Steers enough points to advance.

"They (Burkburnett) line up in a bunch of different stacks, so we'll probably have to mix in the pass," Thompson said. "But we'd like to establish the run first."

PREPS: Boys hit the road

From 1C

Lubbock Monterey, the tournament's defending champion, will not be back to defend its title. The tournament also has another twist in that games will be played in the Lee gym instead of Chaparral Center where the big junior college "Meeting of Champions" is taking place tonight and Saturday with Odessa College and Midland College hosting national powers Dixie and San Jacinto in games at 6 and 8 p.m. each night.

The local girls also have given themselves some tough tests in the tournament openers today as Midland Lee plays El Paso Eastwood at 3 p.m. and Midland High takes on Class A playoff power Borden County at 7 p.m.

Other opening round games are El Paso Bowie against Lubbock Estacado at 1 p.m. and El Paso Jefferson taking on Lubbock High at 5 p.m.

Action continues Saturday with loser's bracket games at 8:30 and 10:15 a.m. and winner's bracket action at noon and 1:45 p.m. The seventh place contest will be held at 3:15 p.m. and the consolation championship will be decided at 5 p.m. Third place action is scheduled for 6:45 p.m. while the championship game calls for an 8:30 p.m. start.

Meanwhile, both the Lee and MHS boys will hit the road tonight in an effort to make up for home losses Tuesday.

The Bulldog boys fell to 5-2 with a tough 81-78 loss to Monterey Tuesday and will take on Lubbock Coronado at 8 p.m. today in Lubbock.

The Lee boys, also losing a tough 67-63 decision to Lubbock Dunbar Tuesday to fall to 4-3, will travel to Monahans for an 8 p.m. contest. Class 4A Monahans escaped Class 3A Greenwood by a narrow 50-49 margin Tuesday.

SOCCER: Home field advantage

From 1C

Indoor experience hasn't been enough for any other Sunbelt Independent Soccer League team during Nistru Kishinev's highly successful U.S. tour.

The Soviet team, based in the Moldavian city of Kishinev near the Romanian border, outscored four SISL foes 32-11 in the early stages of its two-week tour.

Nistru Kishinev opened the tour with 10-2 and 8-4 wins over the Arkansas Diamonds on successive nights Nov. 20 and 21, followed up with a 9-4 win over the Oklahoma City Warriors on Nov. 23, a 2-0 outdoor win over the Austin Sockadillos on Nov. 24, and a 3-1 win over the Phoenix Hearts on Sunday.

Shootin' Star midfielder Chad Peterson saw the Moldavians clobber Arkansas last week. Consequently, the 20-year-old Midland College student has an idea of what will it take to beat the Moldavians, most of whom are several older than the average Shootin' Star.

"It won't take so much of a perfect match, as a steady match," Peterson said.

Peterson is one who thinks the Stars' indoor experience will help against the Moldavians, who do not play indoor soccer in the Soviet Union.

"It's quite an advantage, in that we have several players who have played indoors most of their lives," Peterson said. "But they play a strong game.

"In Europe, the game is strictly played. If you foul, you foul, and if they call it, fine.

"I didn't see them (the Soviets) play out-and-out dirty, but they're a strong team."

Forward Vinson Brown thinks the Stars playing at home will be an advantage.

"We're so used to the field," Brown said. "We know the tricks of the wall, and that can come in handy quite a bit."

Brown, another 20-year-old, played two seasons ago for the nationally-ranked Richland Junior College team not far from his hometown of Garland. After redshirting last fall, he joined the Stars this indoor season.

Stars' owner John Dyer said Saturday will be the first time any professional team from the Soviet Union has visited the Permian Basin.

The Soviets will visit Andrews from 4 to 7 p.m. today, and are tentatively set to visit both Midland and Odessa, though nothing definite was set at press time.

NOTES — Soviet players will be available to sign autographs 4-5 p.m. Saturday at the Permian Basin Sports Center ... Admission for the event is $6 until 5 p.m. Saturday, $8 thereafter.

Akers quits Purdue job after 2-9 season

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue football coach Fred Akers, who did not have a winning season in four years with the Boilermakers, resigned Thursday.

Purdue athletic director George King cited declining attendance in each of Akers' four years and problems with player discipline as the reasons for a coaching change.

"It's a sad day for us," Akers said, accompanied by his wife, Diana. "The things that were a concern to our administration were things that I didn't feel I could do a great deal about."

Akers, however, said he was not forced to resign.

Akers said he was proud of his recruiting.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The gains you make in the coming months will be substantial and lifelong. You finally recognize your true talents and begin to use them wisely. The career and business outlook will be especially exciting in February and March 1991. Romance may demand the lion's share of your time next June. If single, you could decide on a late summer wedding. Married couples are urged to take that long-overdue second honeymoon.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Mark Twain, actors Richard Crenna and Efrem Zimbalist Jr., entertainer Dick Clark.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Something you learn today you will use to your advantage later on. A close friend plays a crucial role in resolving a misunderstanding. Show your deep appreciation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful not to tackle a project until all the materials you will need are at hand. Friends may offer to help. Heed your instincts. Go over your accounts and pay any overdue bills.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid discussing controversial subjects when your defenses are down. It is much better to compromise. Channel nervousness into your work or athletic games. A love relationship rebounds.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A highly productive day is in store. You can make big gains at your job by buckling down to work. A creative urge makes itself known. Plan a small party for your friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Anything that genuinely captures your interest deserves a closer look. It may lead to new experiences. An ingenious investment plan could augment your savings. Go slow. Love is in bloom.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): "Doing what comes naturally" could upset the applecart. Do not let your emotions get the best of you. Spruce up your home with a few house plants or colorful posters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Certain trends are unmistakable. If necessary, chart a new course. Careful planning will be required before you can feel confident of success. Set aside time to relax at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Improvements to your home or property may be seen as a good investment. A romance is in its prime. You feel lucky to be loved so much. Do nothing to rock the boat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may feel pressured by younger people to following the emotional rather than practical line. Older and wiser heads counsel moderation. A romantic gesture pleases you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those who have self-confidence rarely dread what the future may hold. It is a good policy, nevertheless, to accumulate loyal allies. Some of your investment ideas are truly visionary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Continue to display the leadership qualities that have so impressed your close associates. Only time will bring the results you desire. Your sense of humor wins raves at work.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although someone's unpredictable behavior makes it difficult for you to plan ahead. Extra caution is recommended in financial matters. Put romance on the back burner.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are good sports who appear incapable of holding a grudge. Count on these Sagittarians to be great storytellers and writers, even if they like to exaggerate at times. Occasionally these youngsters' bluntness can land them in hot water. Emphasize the need for tact. Although these Sagittarians can become impatient with people they find stodgy, they can walk into the dullest affair and lighten it up with their enormous wit and charm.

Opening lead: Eight of ◇

"Unusual play," observed the kibitzer. "Declarer lost a trick in a suit in which he had no loser, and conceded none in a suit where he might have lost two!" This is the paradoxical deal.

South had just one message to convey, and he did so forcibly when he elected to jump to four spades at his next-to-last turn. With first-round controls in all the side suits and a key trump honor, North, who had been biding time while South confirmed a spade one-suiter, felt justified in raising to slam.

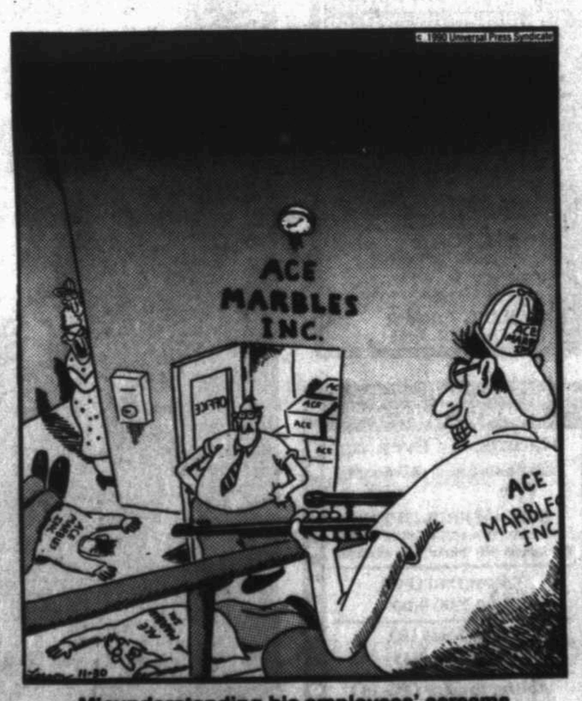

Had West chosen to lead from either four-card suit, there would have been no story to tell. Leading from an honor was unlikely to cost, given the auction, since the lead would have been through the stronger hand and any finesses would have been there for the taking anyway. But West chose the "safe" lead of a diamond, and paid a terrible price.

It would appear the fate of the contract hinged on the club finesse, but declarer saw no hurry to rely on an even-money bet. South won the opening lead in hand, led a trump to the nine, cashed the ace of diamonds and then ruffed a diamond. When both defenders followed, declarer realized he had a sure-trick line for his slam, but some preliminary work still needed to be done.

Dummy was re-entered with the queen of spades, which picked up the outstanding trumps, and another diamond ruff eliminated the defenders' cards in that suit. Now declarer led his singleton heart and finessed the ten! East scored a surprise trick with the queen, but did not relish having the lead. If the defender returned a club, the table would score two club tricks and the ace of hearts would take care of declarer's remaining club. If East returned a heart into dummy's ten-ace, declarer would discard two clubs and lose no trick in that suit. Beautiful.

Col. Powell leading King parade irks SCLS chief

ATLANTA (AP) — Gen. Colin L. Powell has agreed to be honorary grand marshal for the annual King Week parade Jan. 21 in the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s hometown.

Powell, the first black to serve as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, often quotes the slain civil rights leader in his speeches.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, criticized the King Center's decision to invite a military leader, saying it conflicted with King's teachings of non-violence.

"While I have a great deal of admiration for Colin Powell ... I think it creates an awkward set of circumstances that neither a King holiday nor General Powell ought to have to face," Lowery said Wednesday.

King once declared the U.S. government to be "the greatest purveyor of violence in the world" and vehemently opposed the Vietnam War, in which Powell served two tours of duty.

King Center spokesman Steve Klein defended Powell's invitation, saying the center wanted to engage ideological adversaries.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Robin Leach, host of TV's "Lifestyles of the Rich & Famous," is suing a radio station over a commercial that he said imitated his voice.

Leach filed a $350,000 lawsuit in federal court Tuesday against WMJQ-FM of Buffalo and the Niagara Frontier Homebuilders Association for the commercial advertising a home show last June.

"Robin Leach's voice is his trademark," said Daniel C. Oliverio, Leach's attorney. "It's the way he earns his livelihood."

Oliverio said the commercial could have led listeners to believe Leach was promoting the show.

But spokesmen for the defendants said the commercial was a harmless parody.

"I'm sure there was no effort to harm Robin Leach or to deceive anyone," said Larry Levite, president of Algonquin Communications, the station's owner. "It was just an effort to make something cute and a little bit creative."

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Author Garrison Keillor has an English class at the University of North Dakota to thank for spotting a discrepancy in one of his stories published in New Yorker magazine.

Keillor thanked the class with a box full of his books and tapes of his radio show, and a letter inviting the class to dinner, his manager, Jennifer Howe, said Thursday from New York.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors decided against bringing sexual battery charges against Milli Vanilli's Rob Pilatus.

Pilatus, who with partner Fab Morvan lip-synced his way to stardom before being stripped of a Grammy award last week, was arrested Tuesday at his Bel-Air home for investigation of sexual battery against a 25-year-old woman.

"The district attorney does not doubt the credibility of the victim, but the conduct described does not rise to the level of a sexual crime," said police Lt. Ron Hall, reading a memo from the district attorney's office.

Pilatus said his arrest may have been set up by people in the record industry.

"We said we were warned that if we make troubles, our lives will be ruined, and it looks ... it just looks like to me that that's what certain people are interested in," he said Wednesday.

Prices lose

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices slipped in volatile trading on Thursday as traders staged a sell-off hours before the U.N. Security Council voted to permit a military strike to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

Light sweet crude for January delivery eased 37 cents a barrel, settling at $32.91 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 50 cents, to $31.75.

The sell-off came in the session's last 10 minutes as traders sold oil to avoid the risk they could lose money if the U.N. resolution was rejected and prices dropped in response.

The price dip occurred at the end of a day of volatile news that sent the market up and down. But traders were generally bullish, keeping in mind that the U.N. resolution was expected to pass.

Dollar rebounds

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar bounded higher Thursday as nervous investors sought a safe haven in advance of a U.N. Security Council meeting on the Persian Gulf crisis.

Gold prices also gained before the meeting, which began in New York late in the afternoon.

Economic factors were also behind the dollar's advance.

Robert Ryan, corporate foreign exchange manager for Bank of New York Co., said the dollar continued to draw support from comments Wednesday by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, who told Congress he was concerned by the currency's recent sharp slide.

In New York, the dollar jumped to 133.25 yen from 130.10 yen late Wednesday.

The British pound, which has fallen amid concerns about interest rates under the incoming Major government, continued to slide against the dollar. Sterling fell to $1.9435 in New York from late Wednesday's $1.9695.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's rates, included: 1.5040 German marks, up from 1.4860; 1.2805 Swiss francs, up from 1.2700; 5.0775 French francs, up from 5.0140; 1,129.50 Italian lire, up from 1,118.10; and 1.16445 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

Gold, considered another safe investment in times of international strife, rose in New York, picking up $3.20 and closing at $388.90 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange.

In London earlier, gold rose to a late bid price of $386.75 from $385.50 late Wednesday. In Zurich, the metal rose to a closing bid of $386.75 from $384.50.

Silver slipped 4 cents on the Commodity Exchange to close at $4.085 a troy ounce.

Canadian gas expanding in U.S.

■ Free trade, competitive prices and environmental concerns will cause natural gas from Canada to play an expanding role in the U.S. says a top Canadian official.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The United States can look for Canada to play a larger and larger role in its market, according to a top Canadian energy official.

Brian Frank, Director of Natural Gas Exports, for the Canadian office of Energy, Mines and Minerals, told the Permian Basin Natural Gas Producers at a monthly luncheon meeting Thursday that Canadian gas exports to the U.S. had grown from about 700 billion cubic feet in 1983 to an expected 1.4 trillion in 1990.

From 1990 through 1995 exports are expected to grow from 1.4 trillion cubic feet to 1.9 trillion. Frank noted that the most dramatic export growth will come in the Northeast and California with exports into the Midwest and Pacific Northwest remaining relatively flat.

By 1994 the office of Energy, Minerals and Resources, the approximate equivalent of the U.S. Department of Energy, estimates that Canadian natural gas exports will grow to the point only 500 billion cubic feet short of Canadian consumption, which is expected to peak at almost 2.5 trillion cubic feet.

U.S. natural gas consumption is expected to hit 20 trillion cubic feet during the same time frame with most of the demand increase coming from electrical utilities.

"The environmental qualities of natural gas, along with competitive price and an abundant and secure supply of natural gas will insure expansion of the markets," said Frank.

Canada now exports natural gas into the U.S. through nine export points along the U.S.-Canadian border. Of the 1.32 billion cubic feet exported in 1989, 37 percent went to California, 14 percent to the Pacific Northwest, 42 percent to the Midwest and only 8 percent to the Northeast.

It is the Northeast market the Canadians are looking to crack with the Trans Canada Pipeline and Iroquois extension into New England and Long Island. And it is that project that has become a bone of contention among U.S. gas producers who claim that bringing Canadian gas into the U.S. under a different rate structure would penalize U.S. producers and cause gas prices to fall 40 cents at the wellhead.

"The claim that Canada's rate structure would create an unlevel playing field is a red herring. There is no level playing field in the U.S., because with all the variables of contracts and pricing it is better to transport gas over some systems than others," said Frank.

He noted also that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission appeared to be moving toward adopting the Canadian rate system.

In a slap at FERC, Frank said it had taken four years to receive certification for the Iroquois pipeline, that it would have taken less than half that time to approve a pipeline in Canada.

He said four out of five decisions issue by the National Energy Board of Canada were not taken to the courts. "Our environmental policy is also very straight forward. There is not all the opposition that you have here. The NEB does an environmental review and gives the conditions to the builder of the project to comply with."

Consumer spending at a standstill

■ Analysts say a stall in consumer spending and confidence indicates that recession is here.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending, the driving force behind eight years of U.S. economic expansion, did not budge in October, the government said Thursday in a report analysts contend was further evidence of a recession.

"The consumer has retrenched," said economist Gilbert Benz of the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York. "It clearly supports those who say we're in a recession."

John Silvia, an economist with Kemper Financial Services in Chicago, agreed.

"It looks like consumer spending will be negative in the fourth quarter" and the gross national product will decline in both the current quarter and the first three months of next year, he said.

Consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity, was unchanged from September at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.73 trillion, the Commerce Department said. Personal incomes rose just 0.1 percent, to a $4.71 trillion rate.

The marginal increase in incomes failed to match the 0.6 percent increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index in October. It also was the smallest gain since incomes were unchanged in August 1989. Spending had posted gains each month since last May, when it was unchanged.

Disposable incomes, or incomes after taxes, also inched ahead 0.1 percent, down from a 0.4 percent gain the previous month. It was the smallest gain since after-tax incomes fell 0.1 percent last April.

The spending and income figures were not adjusted for inflation. When adjusted, spending actually fell 0.7 percent after a 0.2 percent increase in September. Disposable income dropped 0.5 percent, even more than the 0.4 percent declines in the previous two months.

"Consumer spending can survive a lot of things — temporary shocks, consumer confidence, oil surprises — but three months in a row of negative disposable income suggests that people are going to have to cut back even more," Silvia said.

Indeed, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan on Wednesday noted that shrinking employment and the number of hours worked were causing personal income to decline while rising energy prices "are squeezing many household budgets.

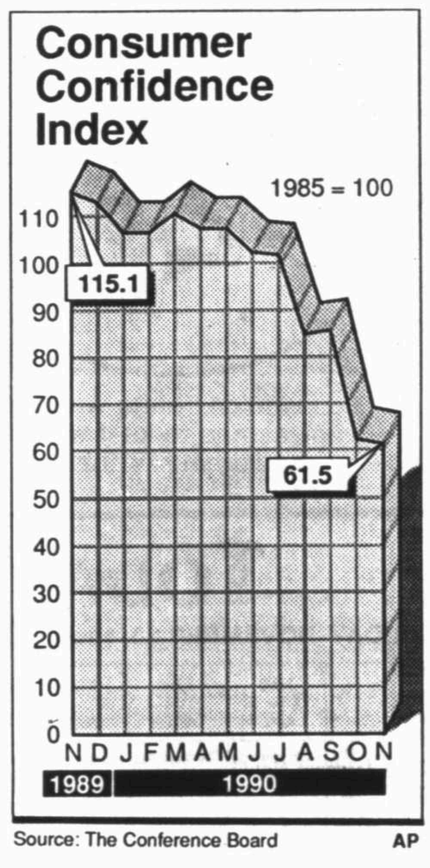

"This drop in real purchasing power, along with plunging consumer sentiment, does not bode well for the near-term trends in consumer demand," he told the House Banking Committee.

It was the first look at consumer spending in the final quarter of the year. The department on Wednesday revised personal consumption in the third quarter down from a 3.6 percent annual rate in its initial report to 3.2 percent, suggesting spending was slowing toward the end of that period.

"There was weakness across the board" in October, Benz noted. "There's every indication that consumers are spending less on everything."

Purchases of durable goods — usually expensive products expected to last at least three years — fell $8.4 billion in October. Non-durable consumption was off $1.5 billion. And while spending on

Showdown looms on insurance regulations

DALLAS (AP) — Natural and economic disasters have helped set up another showdown in the Legislature over the tumultuous Texas insurance industry.

Independent insurance agents, who have seen more companies this year refuse to write policies for Texas homeowners and drivers, hope lawmakers will end state regulation of rates. They say that will spur competition and cause rates to go down.

Consumer advocates say deregulation will lead to higher rates. They want the Legislature instead to even things out by enacting rules for county mutuals and other insurors that are now unregulated by the State Board of Insurance.

The new Legislature will likely face several insurance matters. A special committee of the Texas House and Senate will meet next Wednesday to decide which of 50 policy proposals will be introduced when lawmakers convene in January.

"The problems in insurance in Texas are wide and deep," Sen. John Montford, the Lubbock Democrat who chaired the joint committee, said earlier this week.

The industry's troubles caught public attention with the $54 million failure of Dallas-based National County Mutual Fire Insurance Co. in 1988 and the struggle to reform workers' compensation laws, which took the Legislature two special sessions last year.

Nineteen Texas insurance companies failed in the state's last two fiscal years, up from 5 in 1987. Fort Worth-based National Benefit Life Insurance Co. will close its doors Friday.

The number of companies to be placed in the supervision or conservatorship of state regulators has declined from 58 in 1987 to 31 this year.

Some of the problems in the industry have been aggravated by natural disasters. Insurance companies in the past year have been stung by huge payments for losses in Hurricane Hugo and the San Francisco earthquake. Flood and storm losses have been heavy in Texas during the last two years.

Insurors have also been beset by higher payments for medical costs and large jury awards in lawsuits.

"They just haven't been able to raise the rates to keep up with that," said Ernie Stromberger, executive director of the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas.

Several large national insurors, including Crum and Forster, Allstate and Maryland Casualty, began cutting back homeowner and automobile coverage, the so-

Make sure surviving spouse due benefits

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK–A reader in Virginia, a widow, recently wrote me a letter about what for her was a doubly tragic loss. At age 59, her husband had died of a heart attack. When she asked his company how large her widow's pension would be, she was told "zero"--even though he had worked there nearly 30 years.

Quinn

The company was right. She and her husband had made a mistake in handling his company benefits. They tripped over a point that many employees don't understand: What, exactly, is due a surviving spouse and how do you go about securing it?

As a spouse, the extent of your protection depends on the kind of pension plan the company has.

Take the classic pension, where the size of your benefit depends mainly on your salary and the number of years you worked (this is called a "defined-benefit" plan).

The spouse is entitled to a "pre-retirement survivor's annuity." If the worker dies in harness, the spouse will receive a lifetime income. It's worth half of what the worker's benefit would have been had the worker retired early. But it's reduced for age, so the younger the worker at death, the smaller the annuity.

Normally, the Virginia widow would have collected this annuity. But she elected to waive that benefit. If you waive it, and the worker lives until retirement, the worker gets a larger pension.

Not knowing about the husband's heart condition, the Virginia couple gambled on skipping the pre-retirement survivor's benefit. But they thought that they were waiving only the pre-retirement benefit. At retirement, they thought that the spouse would be covered, even if she had become a widow.

Not so. If you waive pre-retirement benefits, a surviving spouse loses post-retirement benefits, too. "If the employee dies," says Peter Elinsky, national director of executive compensation and employee benefits for Peat Marwick, "the pension goes right into the box with him."

So don't waive the pre-retirement benefit if the spouse will need the worker's pension to live on. If you have already waived it and the worker is still alive, the company lets you change your mind.

Defined-benefit pension plans offer yet another form of spouse protection. If the worker lives to retire, and then dies, the spouse gets a lifetime income worth at least 50 percent of what the worker was getting, and often 100 percent. That's called a "joint-and-survivor" payout.

The spouse can waive this benefit, too (in writing, and notarized, so the company knows it was for real). In that case, the worker gets a larger check each month. But when the worker dies, the pension ends. If the worker can take a lump-sum benefit, the spouse has to approve that, too.

It makes sense to waive a joint pension if: (1) the spouse has a good pension of his or her own; (2) the spouse is ill unto death and not likely to outlive the work-

LOOMS: Insurance regs

called personal lines, to Texans this spring.

Consumers haven't felt the pinch yet because Texas law requires insurors to renew a customer's policy for one year after deciding to pull out. But independent agents are scrambling to find companies who will pick up the slack.

"I think Texas is facing an extreme problem in companies not making their product lines available to our customers," said William Harrison, an independent insurance agent in San Antonio.

Some insurors find Texas an expensive place to do business because the state has strict regulations that aren't found elsewhere, Stromberger said. A company that launches a nationwide property policy has to exclude Texas or spend money to make it meet state rules, he said.

"The expense of doing business is a direct result of the complicated regulatory system we have here," Stromberger said.

Consumer advocates say the state has helped keep insurance costs down. They say insurance is still available but at a higher cost generally from insurors who are not regulated by the State Board of Insurance.

Unregulated county mutuals and Lloyd's companies, have taken customers who are better insurance risks and offered them lower premiums than allowed by state regulators, said Tim Curtis of Texas Citizen Action, a consumer advocacy group.

That leaves regulated companies, who have a harder time making rate adjustments because they must be approved by the State Board of Insurance, with customers who are statistically poorer insurance risks.

Those policies return less profit or even a loss for an insuror. Companies may then cite the lower return as a reason for the State Board of Insurance to approve higher rates, consumer representatives said.

"If all risks were to be rate regulated, the better risks would offset the poorer risks in the regulatory scheme and a reasonable and adequate rate for all policies would exist," Kay Doughty, insurance counsel for the state Office of Consumer Protection, said earlier this month.

SPEND: Spending stalls as Americans save more services rose $8.9 billion, the advance was slower than the gains of $13.5 billion in September and $21.1 billion in August.

A key component of the income category — wages and salaries — fell $9.3 billion after gaining $16.7 billion the previous month. It was the first decline since November 1989, when it dropped $7.6 billion.

Silvia said the major prop in the 0.1 percent gain in overall personal income was transfer payments such as unemployment insurance and cost-of-living adjustments in the food stamp program — both further evidence of a weak economy.

Americans' savings rate — savings as a percent of disposable income — edged up to 3.8 percent from 3.6 percent in September. The September rate was the lowest since a 3.5 percent rate in January 1988 and an indication that consumers having to dip into their savings to pay for their purchases.

Americans' savings rate for all of 1989 was 4.6 percent.

QUINN: Don't waive pension

(From 8C)

er; (3) the couple has so much money that the spouse doesn't need the pension to live on.

But if the spouse will need the income, never waive the pension. Once done, you cannot change your mind. And don't accept an insurance policy in place of the pension. Insurance schemes almost never work.

What if your company offers a profit-sharing plan (known as a "defined-contribution" plan)?

If the worker dies before retirement, all the vested benefits in the account normally go to the spouse. If, at retirement, the worker wants a lifetime income, the pension annuity has to cover both worker and spouse, unless the spouse waives that right.

However, if the plan allows lump-sum distributions, the worker can take all the money and the spouse has no say. It can be rolled into an Individual Retirement Account, or left to the zoo. Nothing compels the worker to use that money to provide a retirement income for the spouse--although most workers do.

Moral to spouses: Never waive any benefits you might need. And discourage lump-sum withdrawals from pension plans. They're too easy to dissipate.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned decisively lower today after stalling at slightly depressed levels, but the move was exaggerated by thin volume.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 15.35 points at 2,519.80 at midafternoon on the New York Stock Exchange.

Decliners outnumbers gainers by about 3 to 2, with 849 down, 554 up and 530 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 101.49 million shares as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Among actively traded Big Board issues, McDonald's was off 1¼ at 27⅞ following rumors of a price drop in the restaurant chain's products; BankAmerica was off 1½ at 22; Johnson & Johnson was up 1 at 68 following analysts' recommendations; Upjohn was up 1⅛ at 37¼, and Philip Morris was down ¼ at 48⅜.

NATION IN BRIEF

Martinez ready to accept job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Florida Gov. Bob Martinez arrived in the nation's capital Thursday to be nominated as the nation's next drug czar.

Bush administration officials acknowleged that Martinez, who lost a re-election bid earlier this month, would be announced Friday as the next director of the Office of Drug Enforcement.

He replaces William Bennett, who President Bush wants as the next chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Martinez arrived in the nation's capital Thursday. His chief of staff, Brian Ballard, said only that Martinez will be in Washington for two days.

But Bush administration officials, speaking on the condition they not be identified further, acknowledged that Martinez' appointment would be announced Friday at the White House. The position is subject to Senate confirmation.

Martinez was defeated in the Nov. 6 gubernatorial election by Democrat Lawton Chiles.

FDIC examines loophole

WASHINGTON (AP) — Regulators are moving to close a loophole that threatened to allow savings and loans to evade some of the changes in last year's thrift bailout law.

The board of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. voted 5-0 to ask for public comment on a regulation that would prevent S&Ls from avoiding certain restrictions by becoming state-chartered savings banks.

State savings banks are hybrid institutions, a cross between a commercial bank and a savings and loan. Depending on the state, many of them have retained broad investment powers, including the right to buy junk bonds and, in some instances, own subsidiaries engaging in activities normally considered too risky for banks.

Since passage of the S&L law in August 1989, there's been a growing movement by S&Ls to change their status to state savings banks.

Outlets request tapes

MIAMI (AP) — Four news organizations went before a federal judge Thursday seeking court transcripts of Manuel Noriega's taped prison conversations.

Cable News Network fought to keep the transcripts secret, accusing other media of trying to scoop the network with its own story.

Robert Bernius, representing Gannett Co. Inc. and USA Today, which Gannett owns, said that in the wake of U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler's decision Wednesday to lift his 3-week-old ban on airing the tapes, the transcripts were of vital public importance.

"We ... want to know why a First Amendment crisis was precipitated by these tapes," Bernius said.

Hoeveler said he would rule by Monday.

Gannett and USA Today joined The Miami Herald, The Associated Press and the Miami-area Post-Newsweek station WPLG-TV in the effort to obtain the transcripts.

James Filla examines a shoulder socket from the remains of the "Carlin Giant," a massive dinosaur unearthed recently in Wyoming during a University of Colorado-Boulder expedition.

CU-Boulder expedition rekindles keen debate

DENVER (AP) — The discovery of two giant dinosaurs in Wyoming is reigniting debate over why the huge beasts became extinct.

Colorado paleontologist Robert Bakker, who led the team that found the dinosaur remains, said Thursday the discoveries reinforce his theory that dinosaurs became extinct gradually.

A scientist at the Smithsonian Institution who supports the theory that dinosaurs met their end suddenly, in a cosmic collision, says the latest finds prove nothing of the sort.

The extinction of dinosaurs is "a big area of controversy right now in science," said Dr. Richard Stucky, paleontologist at the Denver Museum of Natural History.

Scientists offer dozens of theories about the mysterious mass extinctions, including a change in the Earth's motion, famine, parasites, poisons, climatic changes, meteorites and even extraterrestrial hunters.

The debate is on again since Bakker's team of University of Colorado scientists unearthed a 70-foot-long, 25-foot-high Haplocanthosaurus. A member of the cetiosaur or "whale dinosaur" family. The "Carlin Giant" found near McFadden, Wyo., was the largest cetiosaur ever located, Bakker said.

The second find is the only brontosaurus scientists have placed in the Cretaceous Period, which began 135 million years ago.

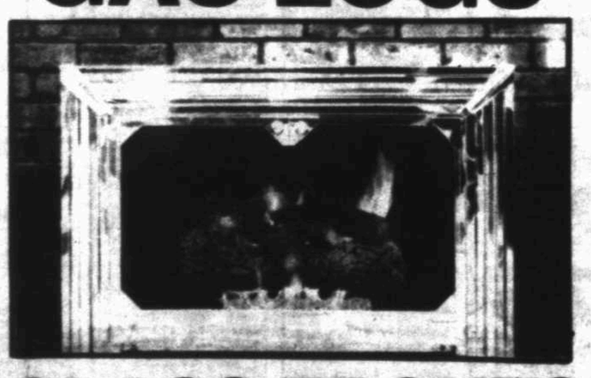

Before that discovery, near Rock River, Wyo., in a fossil deposit known as Breakfast Bench, no brontosaur had been found that was less than 137 million years old.

Bakker announced the discoveries Wednesday.

"The fossil record clearly indicates that these mass extinctions were not the result of a Saturday night of cosmic mayhem," Bakker said. "The last remains of different (dinosaur) families are strewn through millions of years of rock," he said.

Nicholaus Hotton, a curator of paleobiology at the Smithsonian Institution, disagrees. He still subscribes to a collision theory, which he said is evidenced by iridium-rich sediments in the deposits marking the end of the Cretaceous Period. Iridium is a heavy metal found in platinum ores.

310 General Help Wanted

AVON -- For extra Christmas money. Start now by calling Verla - 699-0119.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
