Farmers Blockade Peacefully

2,000 Demonstrate At Mexican Border Bridge

HIDALGO (AP) — Striking farm workers, their numbers swelled to about 2,000 by new arrivals from across the nation, Saturday blockaded the same bridge over the Rio Grande that resulted in their being tear-gassed and hauled off to jail earlier in the week.

But under terms of a notarized pact their leaders signed earlier in the morning, they made only a token demonstration and moved off the bridge after 30 minutes. In return, police left them alone.

The farmers jammed the 50-foot-wide, 525-foot-long bridge, detained a couple of vegetable trucks and backed up traffic for two miles on each side of the Texas-Mexico border before disbursing.

A few strikers crawled atop two trucks carrying low-cost Mexican onions into the United States and held up bags of the vegetables while the crowd jeered.

The label of one bag was read aloud, indicating it was packaged in Mexico by a company owned by McAllen Mayor Othal Brand, owner of 40,000 acres in the Valley and a man considered responsible by many farmers for the arrests of more than 200 protesters Wednesday.

The only law enforcement officers in view were Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmelejo and two Department of Public Safety troopers, although the sheriff said other officers were on call.

The blockade came during an annual fiesta weekend celebrated by Hidalgo and Reynosa, its sister city across the bridge.

Because of the fiesta, traffic around the bridge was heavier than normal, and spokesmen for the farmers said they wouldn't hold up the flow of traffic long. They said they didn't want to make the local celebrants unhappy.

The farmers were joined on the bridge by about 50 members of the Texas Farm Workers Union who were on strike in sympathy with them.

Some of the farmers, particularly those who had driven in from other states specifically to participate in Saturday's blockade, were unhappy with the agreement to end the blockade so quickly.

"Don't think you've driven 1,500 miles for nothing," spokesman Tommy Kersey of Unadilla, Ga., told them in a rally after they moved off the bridge.

"You've driven 1,500 miles for less than this. You've driven your tractor a whole damn year for nothing," he said.

The farmers announced the possibility of blockading another bridge in the Rio Grande Valley, perhaps at Brownsville, in the next several days, and also said they will go to Nogales, Ariz., to blockade the border bridge there.

When the blockade began Saturday, only a couple of cars were on the bridge. They were allowed to pass, but two pro-

Briscoe Backs Parity

McALLEN (AP) — Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe held a meeting with some 200 striking farmers at the McAllen Airport Saturday afternoon, pledging 100 percent support of their main goal of total parity and giving the okay to his tenant farmers to cut production by half.

Briscoe farms no land himself, but said he leases land to others. One of the strike goals has been to cut production in half.

The farmers, most of them from Texas and all members of the American Agriculture movement, asked Briscoe if he supported their goal of 100 percent parity.

"One hundred percent yes," Briscoe said.

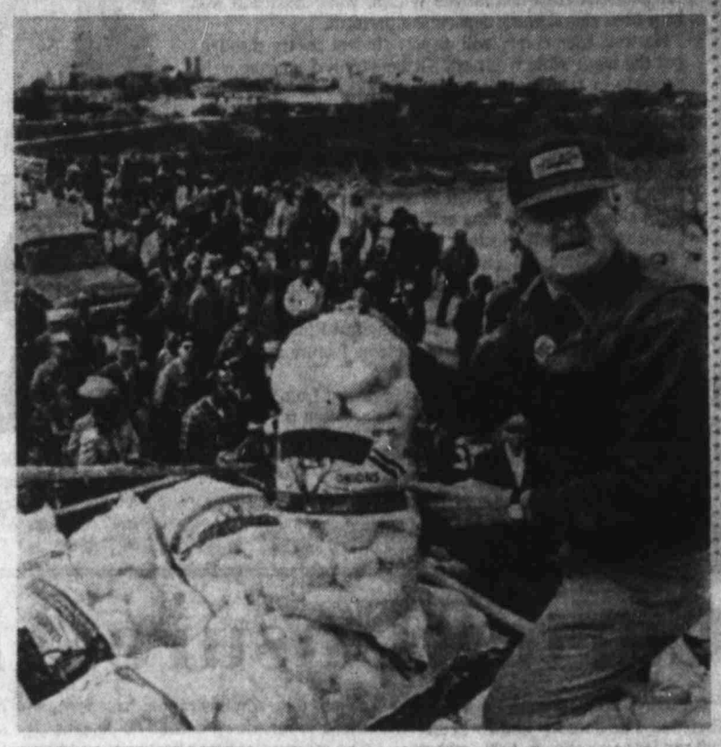

Briscoe stood on a chair and spoke to the farmers through a bullhorn, receiving several rounds of applause.

But there was one instance of booing, and Corsicana farmer Joe Flanagan was less than enthralled.

"He's just three days too damn late," Flanagan said. "Well, he made a speech. I think he made a good speech, but a little late all the way around. Hell, he could have got them out of jail, maybe without any charges."

Miners Heavily Voting Down Pact

Administration Renews Back-To-Work Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early returns in coal field balloting showed striking miners voting 2-1 against a tentative contract Saturday as the Carter administration issued new warnings of swift government intervention if the 89-day walkout continues.

Administration officials said President Carter was ready "to move immediately and decisively" — very likely invoking the back-to-work provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act as early as Monday — if the pact is rejected.

With 264 of the United Mine Workers' locals reporting, 21,624 miners had voted against the pact, and 9,854 had voted for it. That represents about one-third of the 794 UMW locals, or about one-fifth of 160,000 union members.

Carter was being advised of the vote count as he spent the weekend at Camp David, Md. The walkout by about 160,000 miners has forced power curtailments and industrial job layoffs in scattered locations.

Late Saturday afternoon, an administration source close to Carter said the president was "extremely concerned about the progress of the vote." The source also left little doubt that Carter was ready to seek an 80-day back-to-work order under the Taft-Hartley Act as early as Monday if the miners reject the agreement.

"It's hard to see how the president would have any choice in this matter," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

The administration official, in an apparent 11th-hour attempt to convince the miners to ratify the pact, said Carter was ready "to move immediately and decisively as soon as the vote is in."

The source said it was Carter's view that rejection of the contract would be "a great tragedy."

He said there appears to be an erroneous belief among the mine workers that they would be better off working under a back-to-work order than under the proposed contract. "We're trying to explain that's just not true," he said.

The source said under Taft-Hartley, the miners would be working under the old contract and those that refused to go back to work would lose such benefits as food stamps if they had previously been eligible for them.

There is widespread feeling that many miners would refuse to return to work under a Taft-Hartley order.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, the president would appoint a three-member board of inquiry to make a report on the strike. On the basis of the report, which would contain no recommendations, the president could have the attorney general seek a court order directing miners back to work for an 80-day "cooling off" period.

Administration officials said affidavits

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MORRIS SHEATS, fresh from a confrontation early last week with U.S. Rep. George Mahon, now faces a mild controversy surrounding a Jan. 20 meeting at the caucus room in the Cannon House Office Building in Washington.

In a news release issued by the Sheats organization, the congressional candidate was said to have been "instrumental in bringing together West Texas farmers and several urban congressmen in the nation's capital (Jan. 20)."

"Sheats called the meeting to give the farmer an opportunity to explain his situation to congressmen who are unfamiliar with the agriculture industry," the release stated.

The controversy arose when charges were made that the meeting was not attended by "urban congressmen," as the release indicated, and that the number of congressmen present had been overstated implicitly by the word "several."

Don Langston, a farmer, said Saturday he attended the meeting Jan. 20 that included four congressmen, including Carroll Hubbard Jr., Romano L. Mazzoli and Carl D. Perkins, all of Kentucky, and Rep. Richard Nolan of Minnesota.

Only Mazzoli, who was born and maintains his home in Louisville, is categorically an "urban" congressman. Hubbard of Mayfield, Perkins of Hindman and Nolan of Waite Park are considered to represent primarily rural areas.

Sheats arrived at the meeting about 9 a.m. and had to leave for travel considerations about 11:30 a.m., according to Langston. Thereafter, Langston said, Hubbard and Nolan, a member of the House Agriculture Committee, arrived as Sheats made his exit.

Langston said about 20 to 30 area farmers, most of whom live south of Lubbock, attended the meeting. The conclave had been disturbed somewhat by a heavy snow that fell that day, Langston said.

Contacted Saturday, Sheats said he had telephoned Hubbard to tell him of Sheats's impending visit to Washington, and Sheats said he suggested organizing a meeting between farmers and urban congressmen.

Sheats gave Hubbard much of the cred-

Unmentioned Busing Still Implicit In Any School Desegregation Plan

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

YOU WON'T FIND "busing" mentioned anywhere in federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward's integration order for Lubbock schools. And that emotion-laden word may not be used in the proposals school officials are expected to issue this week to comply with the court ruling.

Fact is, the jargon of school integration — as noted in Woodward's Jan. 27 order — calls for terms more complex than mere transportation: "the pairing and clustering of schools, changes in attendance boundary lines, the utilization of space in schools now under capacity, the closing of schools, the full use and implementation of a majority-to-minority transfer policy..."

Those suggested tools of desegregation may indeed require busing students from one area of the city to another. But each device is unique in its use of transportation.

When the school board makes public its plan for submission to Woodward, said Superintendent Ed Irons, "parents need to be familiar with these different terms. Busing itself is not a desegregation plan. It's how busing is used to accomplish a specific objective — such as pairing or clustering — that's important."

Lubbock Independent School District administrators have studied each of Woodward's suggested devices for integrating the nine minority schools he found to be "constitutional violations."

The district generally has discarded redrawing attendance zones of the schools at issue to bring in more white students from adjacent neighborhoods. That was the tool employed in the 1970 desegregation plan for Dunbar High and Struggs Junior High.

"Attendance line changes simply are not effective as a long-term solution. After about five years, the area that is zoned into a previously minority school becomes a minority residential area, and the school is resegregated," Irons said.

"We want a plan that will give us permanent success in

Insulation Ordinance Clarification Asked By Builder Group

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LUBBOCK'S recently amended insulation ordinance may be due further alteration or at least a fresh interpretation Monday when a builders' association airs a grievance to the Building Board of Appeals.

Robert Anderson, president of the Southwest Systems Builders Association, said he will ask the board at its 4 p.m. meeting in the Emergency Operation Center for an interpretation of how the new guidelines affect certain aspects of the building industry.

He said the association, a South Plains organization of erectors of pre-engineered metal structures, will pose two requests:

- For either insulation standards for cement buildings or non-appliction of the requirements to metal buildings; and
- For an interpretation of insulation requirements in combination office/warehouses.

In proposing requirements for cement buildings, Anderson said what's fair for one is fair for all."

He explained that the pre-engineered metal building industry vies with cement structure builders for the same market.

And in order to compete fairly, he said, costs and requirements must be kept in line for both industries.

As the ordinance is written, cement buildings are exempt from the insulation requirements because they are not "of frame construction." However, the city includes metal buildings in that category, Anderson said.

"There's no way it's fair," he said. And, he added, "What we save on energy they (cement buildings) are going to waste."

Although the association wants one uniform standard to apply to all buildings, Anderson said the group prefers to have cement structures brought into the fold instead of exempting metal ones.

He explained that he believes energy-saving insulation requirements are good. And, he added, most metal building buyers prefer the addition.

Carter Unsure About Re-Election Bid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says he does not know whether he will run for re-election in 1980 or whether he will win if he does.

"No president has served two terms since Eisenhower because of either tragedy or reluctance to run or because of defeat in the campaign," he told a group of college newspaper editors in an interview released Saturday.

"I don't have any way to project yet whether I will or will not run in 1980 or whether I will or will not be elected.

"The fact of the matter is that in the public opinion polls my rating is still 70, 75 percent, and the analysis of how good a job this administration has done is much lower, down around 50 percent ... The measure of how effective the administration is has a lot to do with other people, how well the Congress responds to my request for major legislation, like on the Panama Canal treaties, how well our foreign affairs efforts are successful ...

In the first question and answer exchange, observed by White House reporters and reported Friday, he said conclusion of a second-stage Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty might require a summit meeting between him and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Dealing with a domestic political issue, the president said the only regret he has about firing U.S. Attorney David Marston is the publicity it generated, and he would not hesitate to present the facts behind that action to review by House investigators.

The administration came under intensive criticism when it announced its intention to remove Marston, a Republican, as U.S. attorney in Philadelphia and replace him with a Democrat. Marston prosecuted several Democratic politicians on corruption charges and reported investigating another Democrat who asked Carter to expedite his removal.

Asked his reaction to a motion now before the House that would provide for investigation of the Marston matter, Carter said Marston's replacement was being chosen on the basis of merit alone.

"There is nothing about the Marston matter at all that causes any regret to me except the extraordinary publicity that ha been brought to it," he said. "So I would not hestitate to recommend any presentation of the facts about the Marston case."

Informed sources in Philadelphia said Saturday Marston will announce this week his intention to run for governor of Pennsylvania on the Republican ticket.

On the political front, Carter said he means to campaign for Democratic candidates in this year's congressional and gubernatorial elections, and will participate in Democratic party fund-raisers in Texas, California, New York and Chicago.

LIONS RELOCATE MEETINGS

The Lubbock Lions Club will meet for the final time at KoKo Palace at noon Tuesday. Members voted recently to move the noon luncheon meetings to the Civic Center. The first Civic Center Session will be at noon March 15; but subsequent sessions there will be at the regular hour each Tuesday, according to Charles J. Lane, president of the largest Lions club in the nation.

Thumbs Up For Lions?

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A reprieve may be in the works for two 4-year-old Tulsa Zoo lions who had been facing death.

Publicity about the zoo's plans to put the animals to death because they were under constant stress and because no homes could be found for them resulted in dozens of offers to take the animals, said David Zucconi, zoo director.

"We had at least 50 calls Friday," said Zucconi, "and only one was negative. The rest were from concerned people offering suggestions as to how we might avert having to put the lions to death.

"The most hopeful was from Rafael Elias, the Bolivian consul at Oklahoma City, who said the zoo at La Paz, Bolivia, probably could take one of our lions."

GEM WISE
By Jim Anderson

LOVE AND THE DIAMOND

Why are diamonds so cherished and admired? Have you ever looked closely at a fine quality diamond? It catches and flashes light like no other gemstone. It displays a unique combination of icy white brilliance and dazzling fire — a truly spellbinding combination.

Due to its tremendous hardness (it is the hardest substance known to man), diamond has come to symbolize eternal love. It must be understood, however, that hardness only means resistance to scratching. A diamond will break or chip if struck a heavy blow. This can occur because diamond has very definite cleavage planes which are often used to advantage in cutting the stone. A diamond will retain its special beauty forever if given proper care just as love will endure if both parties concern themselves with the other's safety and happiness.

If you are shopping for an engagement or wedding ring, consider one set with one or a group of diamonds. There is no better choice to express your hopes for a bright and happy future together.

We at Anderson Bros are American Gem Society jewelers. We are trained to a through understanding of diamonds and can help you select a stone or piece of jewelry which will give you a lifetime of pleasure. We also believe that the owner of a fine jewelry item should understand gems and metals and their proper care. Ask us for our complimentary pamphlets on gemstones, jewelry fashion and jewelry care.

Farmers Return From Border

By KAY BELL
and JIM BUSBY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A small group of Levelland farmers received a hero's welcome at Lubbock International Airport Saturday from area strike supporters waving placards and applauding the farmers' roles in the Texas-Mexico border blockade at McAllen last week.

Some of the returning farmers had been jailed Wednesday with about 200 other American Agriculture strikers from across the state following confrontations with city, county and state lawmen.

About 100 persons gathered at the airport to hear the "bridge veterans" firsthand accounts of the border trouble.

One returning Levelland farmer, who said he barely escaped arrest at the Rio Grande bridge in Hidalgo County, described the tear gassing and police violence used to clear the strikers from the 175-yard span as a "horrifying thing."

But the American Agriculture strike hat of Levelland farmer Willie J. Ivey now bears a "criminal number." He was one of the strikers arrested following what was to have been a "friendly demonstration" at the bridge Wednesday, he said, to protest the importation of Mexican agricultural products into the United States.

Ivey said McAllen Mayor Othal Brand had agreed to join farmers at the international bridge at 1 p.m. Wednesday, "but he didn't show up."

Instead, about 150 law enforcement agents wearing gas masks greeted demonstrators at the bridge.

Ivey said the strikers were told to clear the bridge after blocking the passage of a truck, but claimed that demonstrators had not had time to get off of the bridge before law officers fired tear gas into the crowd of about 250 to 300 protesters.

"It'll set you afire," Ivey said of the gas cloud that was slowly dispersed by a light border breeze.

The "slower folks and women" were unable to get off the bridge before McAllen police and the Hidalgo County sheriff's officers "literally beat the hell out of them," Ivey said. State troopers, he added, apparently did not take part in those beatings.

Farmers were given a jail courtyard to sleep in until rain prompted jailers to move them inside to sit and sleep on jail floors.

The jailed farmers refused to post bond until Friday morning, demanding instead that the charges of obstructing a public passageway, a Class B misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine, be dropped.

Ivey said the jailed farmers agreed to the release terms, which included fines of $28.50 each, when a Hereford spokesman told them "things are getting real sticky outside (the jail)" and violence appeared imminent.

"We (American Agriculture strikers) do not advocate violence in any way," Ivey said.

"We felt like we had been led into a slaughterhouse," Ivey said, referring to Brand's failure to join the Wednesday afternoon protest as farmers alleged he had promised.

While the Levelland strikers were being welcomed home, other South Plains farmers remained in South Texas continuing their protests of Mexican imports.

Mrs. Herman Wheatley Jr. of Brownfield, whose husband also was jailed in the Wednesday melee, said that Wheatley told her in a Saturday phone conversation the strikers had stopped traffic on the bridge Saturday morning for about 45 minutes.

Wheatley told his wife, however, that law officers and strikers cooperated during the second demonstration.

One produce truck that was stopped as it entered Texas, according to Wheatley's report, was carrying vegetables in sacks marked "grown in McAllen" and "grown in Hereford."

About a dozen Brownfield farmers who participated in the Hidalgo protests returned home late Saturday night.

JODY MILLER

Jody Miller To Star In 36th ABC Rodeo

Jody Miller, television personality and country music country music singing star, will headline the 36th annual ABC Rodeo here April 5-8. Performances will be at 7:30 p.m. daily in Municipal Coliseum.

The former Grammy award winner will appear all four nights, according to officials of the sponsoring Downtown Chapter of the American Business Club.

Jiggs Beutler of Elk City, Okla., will produce this year's event. Rick Young, the "Ragin' Cajun" from Tickfaw, La., and Bucky Bogner will serve as rodeo clowns and bull fighters. Bogner also has acts featuring a buffalo, horse and dog. John Mann of Amarillo will be the announcer.

The mobile home ticket office will open in Town and Country Shopping Center, at 4th Street and University Avenue, March 17. However, tickets priced at $3, $5, $6, and $7 will be available at all western wear stores and at Dunlap's before then.

One of the top rodeos in the nation, the event is sanctioned by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association and annually draws more than 200 of the top money winners and several reigning and former world champions.

Miss Miller, a stage performer who has been a former rodeo queen, has appeared with most of the major stars in the business. Her travels to rodeos and fairs have taken her from Cape Cod, Mass., to several points in California.

She lives in Blanchard, Okla., with her husband Monty and daughter Robin. She is at home training Quarter horses for racing.

Investigation Fails To Nail Nixon Pal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate Special Prosecution Force conducted a 16-month wild goose chase that failed to find any evidence against Richard Nixon's Florida pal Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo, newly released documents show.

The prosecutors combed through thousands of pages of documents, issued more than 200 subpoenas, questioned 123 persons ranging from then-President Nixon to the gardener at Nixon's compound at Key Biscayne, Fla., and brought 28 people before a grand jury.

Finally, they concluded in October 1975 that there was "plainly no basis for any indictments" and no reason to continue their investigation.

On the way to reaching that conclusion prosecutors chased numbers of bum leads, including one found to have originated with a convicted confidence man and another discovered to be pure speculation by an El Paso airport employee.

The sometimes comical account of the Rebozo investigation is contained in a 270-page memoranda dated Oct. 16, 1975, and written by Paul R. Michel, who headed the investigation. The memo was released as a result of a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit brought by the Fund for Constitutional Government, a public-interest law group financed in large part by philanthropist Stewart R. Mott.

The document is heavily censored to eliminate names of witnesses and allegations that had not been publicly associated with the investigation; 115 pages are blank and most of the rest contain at least a line or two of deleted material.

Nevertheless, the memo gives a new glimpse into one of the most tantalizing episodes in the Watergate story: the $100,000 cash hoard which Rebozo said he got as a campaign gift for Nixon from the elusive multimillionaire Howard Hughes.

Before the probe ended, prosecutors chased suspicions or allegations of a million-dollar cash donation to Nixon from Arab oilmen, and that Nixon kept a multimillion dollar slush fund in a secret bank account in the Bahamas. No proof was found.

Investigator Michel cited his probe of the alleged Bahamian bank account as one example of the problems he encountered.

Michel wrote that an IRS informant reported in July 1975 that Rebozo deposited several million dollars in 1969 into a secret account maintained for Nixon at a bank in the Bahamas. But he said a bank official cited by the informant denied that.

"Further investigation revealed that the informant in question had made the same precise allegation some years ago, except had charged that the account was (former Supreme Court Chief Justice) Earl Warren's," Michel wrote.

"The informant, moreover, turned out to be a con man with a criminal record who, when confronted with the evidence of the falsity of his allegation, refused to take a polygraph test." A polygraph is the technical name for the so-called lie detector.

Michel said the informant originally had showed investigators deposit slips that appeared to back up his story, "however these slips, like the informant's statements, were ultimately determined to be fraudulent."

ZARB TO SPEAK HERE — Frank Zarb, energy czar under the Ford Administration, is scheduled as the keynote speaker at the "Lincoln Dinner" Monday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Zarb, who is presently affiliated with a New York investment firm, is expected to deliver a major address, critical of President Carter's energy package. A limited number of tickets remain for the 7:30 p.m. event.

Republicans To Host Former Energy Czar

A limited number of tickets remain available for Monday's "Lincoln Dinner" featuring keynote speaker Frank Zarb, a former energy czar with the Ford Administration.

Lubbock County Republican chairman Ruth Schiermeyer said last-minute tickets for the dinner and two earlier receptions can be obtained by calling County GOP headquarters at 799-3038.

Besides Zarb, dinner and reception guests will have a chance to meet a number of prominent Republicans, including gubernatorial candidates William Clements and Ray Hutchison and lieutenant governor candidate Gaylord Marshall.

Contenders for the GOP 19th Congressional District nomination George Bush, Joe Hickox and Jim Reese also will be present, along with a number of other local office seekers.

The Lincoln dinner is an annual affair sponsored by local Republicans as a fund raiser for the party. It traditionally is held near the date of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, the country's 16th president and first Republican president.

A slide presentation, "Lincoln's Hope Renewed," will precede Zarb's speech.

Zarb, now affiliated with a New York investment firm, is expected to deliver a major address critical of President Carter's proposed energy package, Mrs. Schiermeyer said.

His speech will come on the heels of a Friday break in the three-month deadlock between key senate energy negotiators on energy proposals. The tentative accord reached then would lift price controls from natural gas by the mid-1980s.

The dinner will get underway at 7:30 p.m. after a public reception at 7 p.m. Tickets for that combined affair in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center are $15 per person.

An earlier reception, at a cost of $100 per couple, including dinner, will be held at 6:15 p.m. in the Civic Center Terrace Suite.

Girlfriend Remembers Park

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Korean businessman Tongsun Park asked Tandy Dickinson to be his No.1 girl, she said he promised: "I'll make it worth your while."

So, she says, they traveled together all over the world, vacationing at Park's villa in the Dominican Republic and giving exclusive parties at Park's elegant mansion. Those parties were attended by some of the most important people in Washington.

"Tongsun loved parties and he loved powerful people and they loved being around him, too," said Mrs. Dickinson during a recent interview in her small apartment, located in the fashionable Watergate complex and decorated in Oriental style.

These days, those celebrated parties are being talked about again as Park testifies before the House ethics committee. He has been indicted by a grand jury on 36 counts of bribery, conspiracy, racketeering, mail fraud, illegal political contributions and failure to register as a foreign agent.

But Virginia-born Mrs. Dikcinson, 35, model-pretty with honey-colored hair, doesn't believe any of the reports that Park used parties, gifts and money in an influence-buying scheme for the South Korean CIA.

"I believe he was a businessman acting on his own behalf, using political figures as a backdrop for bigger and better business deals," said Mrs. Dickinson.

"Tongsun never told me to say or do anything or ask for anything. It was never discussed what they (those who attended) might get out of the party or what he might get out of it. The party was given for the sake of a party," said Mrs. Dickinson. "He and I never talked business. It made things much more pleasant."

And she loved being the hostess and seeing people like Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, now speaker of the House, and then-Rep. Gerald Ford have a good time.

"It was interesting to see men let their hair down at some of these parties and then imagine them standing on the floor debating a bill and thinking, 'why they're just like anyone else. They sneeze. They burp. They're not infallible,'" said Mrs. Dickinson.

But all that is in the past.

Now she fields requests for interviews, pictures and appearances on television shows. People want to know about her friendship with Park.

"I know my name is tied to Tongsun Park. I am a mirror of him. He has made me notorious. But I'm fascinated with all that's happening because maybe what I have wanted to be all the time was famous," said Mrs. Dickinson. "But I wish I could use this for something worthwhile. I wish I had something I was trying to sell or promote."

She said Park used to tell her: "Use me. I can probably help you to do just about anything you want.

"But all I ever wanted was to be happily married and well-off," said Mrs. Dickinson, a divorcee who was formerly married to a millionaire Maryland builder. "I was born in a period where women were taught to respect and serve a man. I have been accustomed to being taken care of. I never had the urge or desire to do anything on my own."

Mrs. Dickinson said her relationship with Park "is as strong as ever. I would do anything for him. He has always remained glamorous and is still a mystery to me and that's why I'm still excited about him."

She said she doesn't know Park's future plans but feels they might not include her.

"Tongsun said, 'I'm not going to baby you. Make up your mind what you want to do. If you want to marry someone, I'll be supportive,'" said Mrs. Dickinson. "That sort of let me down a little bit. I thought he'd fight for me more."

Energy, Farm Ills Solutions Related

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Solving the current problems facing American farmers may in turn help answer the nation's energy needs, says Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas.

"Agriculture is the only item in U.S. commercial trade that's bringing in money from outside. That's what is bringing in the dollars we need to expend on energy," the ranking majority member of the House Agriculture Committee told 350 participants at the 12th annual Texas Legislative Conference Friday.

Negotiations look promising with 70 countries for American agricultural products which would add $5 billion toward reducing the current trade imbalance, he said.

De la Garza's district includes Hildalgo County, where farmers were arrested last week following demonstrations against importation of Mexican food products.

"It's a matter for local authorities to handle. There's no federal solution to what a local chief of police or sheriff will do," he said.

Another view of energy problems came from W. L. Fisher, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin.

"Oil and gas production annually is 20 million a day which is over one-half of the total energy supply in the United States," Fisher said. "By 1985, production will shrivel to less than half that."

Reduction in imports, doubling of coal production, increase in nuclear capacity and research into alternative energy sources is necessary, Fisher said, adding he thinks President Carter's energy proposals have the right goals but the policies are "not entirely adequate."

The nation also needs a non-fuel minerals policy to ease dependence on imports of aluminum, cobalt and other important minerals, Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Texas, added.

Reliance on federal solutions to all problems must stop, several speakers told their audience of mostly businessmen from New Braunfels, Austin and San Antonio.

Government regulation is hurting the small businessman, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said.

"Businessmen have suffered the most from endless forms to be filled out. Especially small businessmen, who can't afford the battery of lawyers and accountants to take care of those forms," he said.

"Now we have almost total involvement of the federal government in the life of the citizen," said Lubbock Congressman George Mahon, who will end 44 years in Congress with his current term.

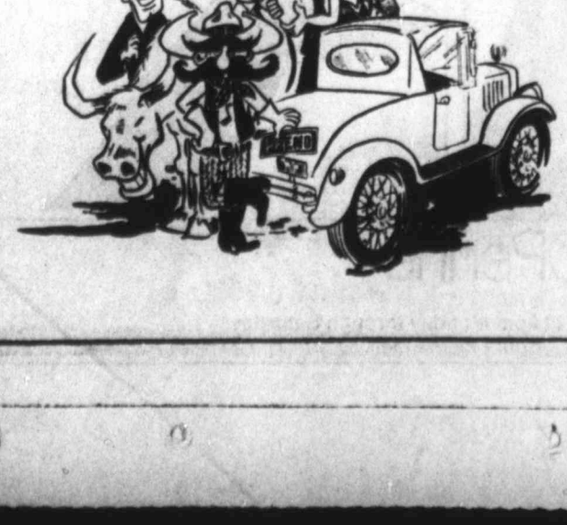

"But the country and the world have moved forward," Mahon said. "As President Carter said in his State of the Union address, 'Government cannot solve all our problems, set all our goals, or define our vision,'" he quoted.

Instead of strictly federal, state or local solutions, America has turned to regional answers since World War II, said Elspeth Rostow, dean of the LBJ School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin.

"There's been an increasing emphasis on the creative capacity of regional units to seek better solutions to problems than might be envisioned from Washington or the microcosm of the locality," she said.

Coal Pact, If Approved, Will Add Costs

NEW YORK (AP) — Even while the United Mine Workers' rank-and-file members were assessing the proposed contract for this weekend's ratification vote, some economists were saying that it will add to consumer costs in a variety of ways.

The proposed contract offers generally higher wage and cost-of-living benefits than other recent major labor settlements, but economists say that exact comparisons are difficult because of differences in fringe benefits.

Its maximum wage and cost-of-living benefits of $2.50 per hour over the contract's three-year life top the $2.35 package the United Steelworkers agreed to last year.

First-year provisions for both industries were considerably higher than the nationwide median of 45 cents an hour for all types of industries in 1977. The UMW contract calls for a $1 wage increase in the first year. Last May's United Steelworkers contract provided a 71-cent boost for the first year.

Because the coal industry is depended upon by utilities and other industries, electric utility rates may rise because of the expected increase in the cost of coal, but there likely will be some absorption of higher coal costs that won't be directly passed on.

Joel Price, an economist at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., estimates that the proposed contract will increase labor costs 8 percent to 10 percent in the first year and 15 percent to 20 percent over its three-year life.

In turn, he expects the cost of a ton of the type of coal most often burned by utilities to rise between $1.25 and $2.60 a ton because of the higher labor costs and inflation's effect on materials. It was selling at about $22 a ton prior to the strike.

"Any time you have pass-through costs that are higher than productivity, it will have an inflationary effect," says Price, who adds that productivity has been a major coal-industry problem in recent years.

Richard Scott-Ram, an economist at Chemical Bank, expects coal prices to rise $2 to $4 a ton "and maybe more."

Such calculations are often difficult, says Charles Rehmus, a University of Michigan economics professor. Until recently, the hisory of coal settlements has resulted in a trade-off of higher wages and benefits that has resulted in fewer workers but not necessarily less production or corresponding increases in the price of coal, he says.

From a broader perspective, however, Rehmus believes that that cost of coal may well rise above the additional cost of labor because the industry may face increased demand and may have continued productivity problems because of wildcat strikes.

Rehmus and others believe that the terms of the coal contract, one of the major ones this year, will not play a major role in influencing terms of other contracts.

The coal industry, because of its history and hazards, generally has not been a major influence on other industry contract negotiations, he said.

In other business developments in the news this week:

• It was disclosed that the nation's trade deficit for January was $2.4 billion, continuing at a rate that led to a record $26.8 billion deficit last year, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

The January deficit was the largest since a record $3.6 billion deficit in October, and it followed deficits of $2.4 billion in November and $2.1 billion in December.

President Carter and other administration officials have said they expect the deficit to ease this year because of fewer oil imports and improvement in the economies of purchasing countries. However, during the month, petroleum imports rose 4 percent from $3.1 billion to $3.2 billion while almost all other imports and exports declined.

• The Labor Department reported Monday that prices consumers pay spurted a seasonally adjusted 8.4 percent in January while consumer purchasing power declined at a record rate.

The traditional consumer price index, which the department will eliminate at mid-year, rose an adjusted 0.7 percent in the month, equal to an 8.4 percent annual rate. The increase followed gains of an adjusted 0.4 percent, or 4.8 percent at an annual rate, in November and December.

The January increase was the largest since the adjusted 0.8 percent rise, or 9.6 percent at an annual rate, last April.

The department also published two new indexes, which both showed that inflation was even more serious, as prices rose at an adjusted 9.6 percent rate in both cases.

• The Commerce Department announced that the index of leading indicators, a key barometer of future economic trends, plunged 1.9 percent in January, its biggest decline in three years.

The drop in the widely followed measure, which had been expected, was tied to the large number of storms that plagued the country during the month.

Specifically, the index fell to 132.8 percent of the 1967 average, and was the first decline after six months of increases. In December, the index rose 0.7 percent, in November by 0.1 percent and in October 1 percent.

• The embattled U.S. dollar continued to suffer declines against most other major world currencies in foreign exchange trading.

In Washington, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal on Wednesday expressed "real concern" over what he said was the "quite unwarranted" drop in the currency's value. But he added that the U.S government has been in touch with foreign officials abroad in hopes of finding a way to alleviate the pressure.

Inflation Worries Rated Top Problem For U.S. Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest government figures on consumer prices have once again put inflation high on the list of the worries confronting the stock market.

The Labor Department reported at the opening of trading last Monday that the consumer price index rose at an 8.4 percent annual rate in January, based on the old method of calculating the index.

Under two new methods of measurement, the department calculated that consumer prices climbed at a 9.6 percent annual pace.

Commissioner Julius Shiskin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics said severe winter weather and other special factors contributed to the increase, which was the sharpest in nine months.

But even considering those unusual influences, Shiskin said the figures were "a cause for concern."

Stock market investors apparently felt the same way. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 7.89 points on Monday and another 6.23 on Tuesday, reaching a three-year low of 742.12.

The average staged a mild recovery later, but still finished the week with a net loss of 8.93 at 747.31.

Other weekly readings showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index down .52 at 48.67, and the American Stock Exchange market value index off .78 at 123.09.

Big Board volume averaged 20.23 million shares a day against 20.39 million the week before.

The consumer-price data was by no means the only worrisome news that confronted Wall Street during the week. The government's index of leading economic indicators registered its sharpest drop in three years, and the dollar encountered more pressure in foreign exchange.

Investors also were waiting uncertainly for the outcome of this weekend's vote by members of the United Mine Workers on a proposal to settle the coal strike.

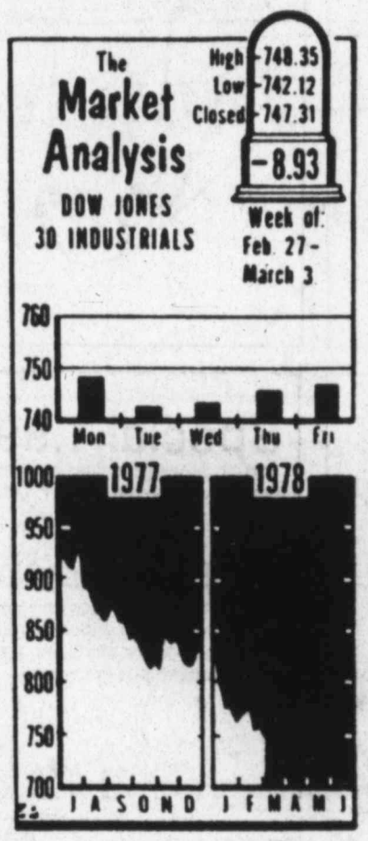

But inflation has been a perennially touchy subject for the market. And, as Standard & Poor's Corp. concluded in a study published last week:

"Investors have good reason to be sensitive to inflation news. The stock market over the years has shown a clear tendency to turn sour during periods of high or rising rates of inflation and to respond bullishly to moderation of inflationary forces."

The firm's study covered the past 40 years, comparing December-to-December changes in the consumer price index with yearly changes in the S&P composite index of 500 stocks.

In the 10 of those 40 years in which consumer prices posted their sharpest increases, the S&P 500 averaged a decline of 3.9 percent. In 20 years of "moderate" inflation, the S&P index averaged a 9.7 percent gain. And in the 10 years when prices rose least, or actually declined, the S&P index averaged a 12.7 per cent gain.

In every year since 1968, S&P noted, "stock prices declined when the rate of inflation rose from that of the preceding year, and advanced when the rate of inflation slowed from that of the year before."

Economists at New York's Bankers Trust Co. cited several reasons for a recent increase in concern over inflation prospects.

"Notwithstanding last year's bumper grain harvests, food prices have begun to edge higher in recent months. Prices of industrial raw materials also have risen since the summer.

"And the disappointing productivity record during the past year, with the accompanying squeeze on profit margins, is prompting manufacturers to raise their selling prices wherever market conditions permit.

"Recent government actions—notably the boost in Social Security taxes and the hike in the minimum wage— also will be tending to push up prices, particularly in the services area, while the depreciation of the dollar in foreign exchange markets is making imported goods more expensive."

Though those signs point to some increase in the inflation rate, Bankers Trust contends that no "sharp acceleration" is likely.

For one thing, it said, "in the industrial area, the existence of unused plant capacity both here and abroad will continue to limit the ability of most producers to raise prices."

"Even so," the bank observed, "the existing inflationary pressures—and the heightened fears of inflation— will remain a major factor influencing the behavior of the financial markets, and the economy, in the months ahead."

Hill Staff Said Used For Political Inquests

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe accused Attorney General John Hill Saturday of using his official staff for politically motivated investigations of the governor's office.

Briscoe also told campaign workers his top legislative priority if re-elected will be tax reductions — most likely property tax relief and repeal of the sales tax on utilities.

In another development, Briscoe received the endorsement of the state convention of the United Auto Workers.

"The endorsement came by virtue of the governor's previous record and working relationship with Texas labor," UAW spokesman Dave Perdue said.

The UAW also endorsed Joe Christie for U.S. senator, Mark White for attorney general and Jake Johnson for railroad commissioner.

Briscoe did not mention Hill by name but made it clear he was speaking of no one else. His other major Democratic primary opponent is former Gov. Preston Smith.

"For months he has used his official staff for political investigation of every part of the governor's office. He has attempted to use the press both overtly and covertly to smear my administration," Briscoe said of Hill.

"No one knows how much of the taxpayers' money has been spent in this smear campaign, but it has failed to succeed," he added.

Hill's staff is involved, along with two investigators hired by Briscoe and members of District Attorney Ronald Earle's staff, in a probe of alleged misuse of federal manpower funds administered by the governor's office.

Asked by reporters what else Hill was investigating that involved the governor's office, Briscoe said, "The statement speaks for itself. ... "You know perfectly well what I am talking about."

Reese Hits Busing As Race Starts

As about 50 of his supporters looked on, 19th Congressional District candidate Jim Reese of Odessa Saturday launched his Lubbock campaign by opining that "forced busing must be stopped."

JIM REESE

Reese officially opened the doors to his storefront headquarters at 34th Street and Flint Avenue about 9:30 a.m. In a prepared statement, the former Odessa mayor challenged our nationally-elected representatives to "re-establish the authority of the Congress over the courts in the matter of forced busing."

The 47-year-old Republican candidate said introduced legislation already exists that would bring the controversial issue within the purview of the Congress.

Reese is co-chairman of the National Congressional Council and read several telegrams from members of that group Saturday. All were unanimous in their support for Reese's stand on busing. One went so far as to suggest "busing the bums out of Washington, D.C."

Reese himself noted that "we need someone up there rattling the cage. I'm a pretty good cage rattler," he observed.

The Odessa businessman predicted the largest priority in the district over the next five years will be "solving the water shortage." He said Northern states need to be educated about the water problem. Farmers in the 19th Congressional District produce a fourth of the nation's cotton, he said, and 21 percent of the country's grain sorghum.

Reese, in his 1976 bid to unseat Congressman George Mahon, D-Tex., of Lubbock, advocated limited terms for congressional electees. He reiterated his stand on limited terms Saturday, though he stopped short of specifying any exact term.

Reese said he favors a mandatory prison sentence for persons convicted of a crime who had a gun in their possession at the time of the offense. He termed such tactics, "not gun control, but criminal control."

Following the opening of his headquarters, Reese left the Hub City for Abilene where he was due to attend a Young Republicans meeting. By that time, however, some of his Lubbock volunteers were already manning the phones.

'Clean Cut' Thief Robs Local Store

A shopper-turned-robber — described as "real clean cut" and "not a regular customer" — fled with $50-70 demanded from managers of a Texas Avenue furniture store shortly noon Saturday, the managers told police.

The managers, Mr. and Mrs. Cuba Womack, said the suspect, a black man about 25 years old, entered Lubbock Furniture Co. at 1510 Texas Ave. and asked to see a portable television set. The couple told the police the man left the premises, then returned to inquire about a "small table" before demanding cash from a register near the rear of the store.

The thin, 5-foot, 10-inch bandit reportedly held an object he claimed was a weapon against Mr. Womack's back during the robbery, but the Womacks said they never saw the supposed weapon.

Mrs. Womack said the suspect ordered that the back door to the business be unlocked and then, before fleeing on foot, shoved the Womacks into a bathroom and "told us he'd cut our heads off if we came out of the bathroom."

Mr. Womack said he did not see a getaway vehicle.

Police received word of the robbery at 1:43 p.m.

The Womacks said the Saturday incident marked the 6th time the business been robbed.

City Church Offers Festival Of Praise

The Festival of Praise Choir, the Spurrlows singing group and a nine-piece concert brass band will be featured in a "Festival of Praise" presentation at Lubbock's Trinity Church at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, according to church officials.

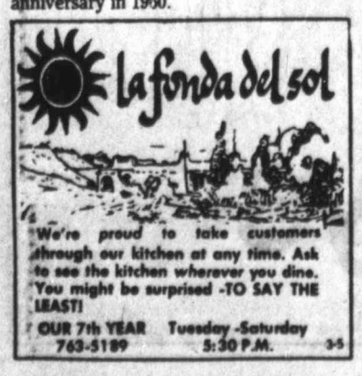

The "Festival of Praise" will be an evening of choral and solo music with instruments in support.

Director will be Bob Pickett. The 50-voice choir is a national touring group of adult singers. The Spurrlows are a separate group, and both will be supported by the "Concert Brass of Instruments."

"Festival of Praise" has been in concert in many large churches across America and featured on several television programs, including The 700 Club and PTL Club.

Chicago Daily News Folds After 102 Years

Avalanche-Journal News Services

CHICAGO — "So long, Chicago," mourned the banner headline Saturday in the last edition of the Chicago Daily News.

Distinguished by generations of talented journalists whose accounts of life and death from Manila Bay to Chicago's Loop filled its pages over the decades, the News silenced its presses for keeps after 102 years of operation.

"We die knowing we did our job to the utmost and to the very end," eulogized editor M. W. Newman in the lead story of the weekend edition — a composite requiem for the city's last afternoon newspaper that was born in the raucous days of Chicago's frontier.

Pedestrians queued up at Loop newsstands in the crisp morning cold Saturday to purchase the collector's item last edition.

"We should sell at least 1,000 (copies). But who knows, we could sell as many as 2,000 or even more," chortled vendor Walter Ginchowski at the corner of Clark and Randolph Streets.

But the numbers were what finally choked the struggling matriarch during its final years. Circulation, crippled by the rise of television, dwindled from about 614,000 during the peak years of the 1950's to the final figure of about 315,000. The final edition's press run was about 450,000.

The bottom line showed losses of $21.7 million in the last 3½ years, and an infusion of funds that recently financed the redesigning of graphics and a massive advertising blitz provided only a stay of execution. Publisher Marshall Field, in announcing plans last month to shut down the paper, projected a deficit of $11 million this fiscal year.

The newspaper, winner of 15 Pulitzer Prizes — journalism's highest honor — typified the sprightly world of Chicago journalism. It was also known for its political reporting and foreign coverage. The Daily News Foreign Service, started in 1898, was terminated in 1976 because of the newspaper's financial problems.

The News, born as a four-sheeter in 1875, was sixth largest in the nation in circulation when its final edition ran. But television, reader apathy, tough competition from city and suburban dailies, expressways that siphoned newspaper-reading riders from trains and buses and even its own editorial aggressiveness were also blamed for the News' death.

"About the only good thing that can be said for working on a newspaper that folds is that it is sort of like reading your own obit," wrote columnist Mike Royko, the latest News star in a constellation that once included Carl Sandburg, Ben Hecht, Keyes Beech and Peter Lisagor.

The classic play about American journalism — "The Front Page" — was written by Hecht and another Chicago journalist, Charles MacArthur, who later turned to fulltime playwriting. It dramatized the city's journalism of the 1920's — with green eye-shaded editors and snapbrim-hatted, hard-drinking reporters — at its most comic and colorful.

Royko wondered why the News failed to survive. He said the paper's aggressive reporting on civil rights, on the police shooting deaths of two Black Panther leaders, and on the chaotic 1968 Democratic national convention offended some of its white, middle-class readers.

"Courage didn't kill the Daily News, but it undoubtedly shortened its life," he wrote ruefully.

"If it had been a cheap rag, it's death would have been easier to take," Royko, a Pulitzer winner, wrote. "But the Daily News, while it had some bad days, was still one of the best newspapers in the country."

Saturday's edition was a retrospective of the last years of the city, its arts, sports and entertainment and on the Daily News itself.

"The Chicago Daily News, the writers' newspaper, ends as it began — a momentous Book of Life. It took 102 years to finish, and these are the final pages," editor Newman wrote.

The Daily News, Newman said, became victim of Chicago's own problems — white flight and the accompanying loss of jobs. Chicago "has seemed to be breathing very spottily itself lately — despite its wealth and smashing skyline and reputation as a slugger."

"The Daily News was one of the most elegant and easily readable papers anywhere. So you can't say it died of old age. You can say it died of urban complications."

Arizona Governor Dies

PHOENIX (UPI) — Gov. Wesley Bolin, in office a scant four months, collapsed and died early Saturday apparently of a heart attack. He was 68.

Attorney General Bruce Babbitt was sworn in as governor a few hour later.

Dr. Merlin Kampfer, Bolin's personal physician, told reporters an autopsy would be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

BOLIN

BABBITT

Bolin's aide, William P. Reilly, said the governor was found dead about 7 a.m. by his wife, Marian, in the bathroom of their North Phoenix home. Reilly said Bolin apparently collapsed and died about four hours earlier.

"It was a great shock and a tragic personal loss for the family and for the state," Reilly told a news conference.

"Bolin considered Arizona to be his family and had done things over the years to protect that family."

Bolin was elected to 13 terms, serving nearly 29 years, as Arizona's secretary of state and was sworn in as governor Oct. 20, 1977, when Raul Castro resigned to become U.S. ambassador to Argentina.

Although Bolin had never run for governor, he often said it was his ambition to serve in that capacity. Shortly after succeeding Castro, Bolin said he would be a candidate for a full four-year term in the elections this fall.

Bolin had been honored at a dinner Friday evening attended by former President Gerald Ford and House Minority Leader Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz.

On Friday, Bolin had declared a state of emergency in Arizona because of three days of torrential rains, which left many areas flooded.

Babbitt, 39, a member of a pioneer Arizona family was elected attorney general in 1974 in his first try at public office. His family has extensive ranching and business holdings in Flagstaff and other sections of northern Arizona.

Bolin was born on a farm near Butler, Mo., July 1, 1909 and moved to Phoenix when he was seven years old.

He won his first elective office in 1938 as constable of West Phoenix Justice of the Peace precinct. He served as justice of the peace from 1943 until 1948 when he was elected secretary of state, a post he held until succeeding Castro.

Survivors include his widow, Marian, and five sons.

Nursing Home Ills Set For Hearings

DALLAS (UPI) — The Senate Human Resources Committee will conduct the eighth in a series of statewide public hearings on problems in nursing homes on March 7 in the University of Texas Health sciences Center.

Committee chairman, Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said public testimony concerning new state nursing home regulations will be invited. The new rsgulations, which tighten state regulations and increase penalties for patient abuse, were approved by a special legislative session last year.

Dr. Raymond Moore, deputy commissioner of the State Department of Health, will report to the committee on implementation of the regulations.

Contest Winners Announcement Set

Winners of the School Beautification Awareness Contest, sponsored by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, will be announced during a 10 a.m. press conference Monday in the chamber offices at 14th Street and Avenue K.

All 53 schools in the Lubbock Independent School District participated in the competition for the second time this school year. First-half winners were announced December, 1977.

The purpose of the contest, according to Jose Ramirez, committee chairman, is to help students become more aware of the part they play in keeping Lubbock and their school community clean.

Police Seek Robbers

Lubbock detectives Saturday were investigating a number of thefts and burglaries as well as an armed robbery that occurred late Thursday.

Police responding to an "alarm down" call at 1802 Idalou Road Friday found a distraught cook and witness at Bob's hamburger stand.

Gloria Alvarado said she was at the back door at the business when a black man showed up about 10:40 p.m. and said "Wait a minute," when she started to retreat.

The suspect reportedly produced a "small, black gun" and followed her inside. Moments later a second man appeared in the doorway, stepped inside and ripped the wires to the telephone.

One of the men walked to the cash register and took an estimated $30 in cash from it, before the pair ran out the back door and headed southeast on foot.

Meanwhile, burglars hauled away $2,821 worth of personal property from Tommy Sturtz' 2605 Ave. W residence in a break-in Friday. Sturtz said the burglars took two checks made out for a total of $363, nine silver dollars, a $200 shotgun and a $700 rifle, a handgun valued at $50, a reel-to-reel tape recorder valued at $800, along with $35 in cash and a tapeplayer.

Gonzalo Rojas of 2905 E. Colgate St. said someone broke a window to gain access to his home Friday, then took a television, a watch and a gun, valued together at nearly $300.

Burglars who broke into a business at 3824 50th St. Friday stole a $200 postage meter, according to Marvin Crossnoe.

A night of entertainment at a local club wound up costing Cindy McShan of 2717 Third St. more than the cover charge. She told police while she was inside a club in the 4300-block of 19th Street Thursday, someone broke into her car and stole her CB radio, an 8-track player, her shoes and a clutch wallet. She estimated her losses at $382.

About $28 worth of building materials were stolen from McCoy's Building Supply Center, 4200 W. Loop 289, Thursday, according to Dan Detillion of 5705 Emory St.

At least 10 Hub City residents were hubcapless recently, according to reports filed Saturday. They included:

George Gilkerson of 3209 56th St.; Jackie Moore of 6402 28th St.; Daniel Marshall of 3702 94th St.; Jack Geaslim of 1919 34th St.; Art Lavergne of 1917 40th St.; Annie Woodard of 1703 E. Amherst St.; Francisco Posada of 2105 Cornell St.; Ronnie M. Scyrkels of 4805 15th St.; Tony Thomas of 211 Third St. and Ed Leake of 612-B N. Elkhart St.

Floyd Stark Rites Set; Ex-Mayor Of Seminole

STARK

Burial will be in the Seminole Cemetery under direction of the Singleton Funeral Home here. The El Paso Masonic Scottish Rite temple will conduct memorial graveside rites following services at the church.

He died at 12:10 a.m. Friday in Methodist Hospital in Lubbock after a lengthy illness.

Stark, who had been a resident of John Knox Village in Lubbock since last September, had previously lived in Seminole for 72 years. He moved there with his parents in 1905. He was born in Mills County.

He was a charter member of the First United Methodist Church here where he served in every lay capacity at the church at one time or another.

Stark was a member of the Seminole Masonic Lodge 957 where he was Worshipful Master from 1943-45 and District Deputy Grand Master from 1953-55. He received the 33rd Degree in 1962.

He was also a member of the El Mida Shrine in El Paso, and was a member of the Eastern Star Chapter 855, where he served as a past worthy patron.

He was a partner in Stark & Son Hardware here. He sold the business in 1945. He also raised prize-winning Hereford cattle and raised registered quarter horses.

Stark helped organize the County Soil Conservation District and served as president of the board of supervisors.

He was county Democratic chairman and was one of the city's first city councilmen and the second mayor.

Stark served on the Farm and Home Administration board and was a executive board member of the Boy Scouts of America. He was also a member of the area rationing board during World War II and was a charter member of the Seminole Rotary Club and a past president of the local organization. He was also district governor of the Rotary Club in 1962-63.

He married Eunice Bynum, August 21, 1916.

He was a partner-for-life of Cal Farley's Boy's Ranch, and a member of a Lubbock trailor club.

Stark was also a graduate of Seminole High School.

Survivors include his wife; five sisters, Gladys Elam of Rosehill, Calif., Lou Mattie Payne of Odessa, Betty Townsend of Lubbock, and Gracie Lee Jones and Edna Mae Stark, both of Seminole; six brothers, Glen and Terry, both of Seminole, Calvin of Hobbs, N.M., Homer of Fort Worth, Frank of Kilgore, and Galen of Lubbock.

Bookmobile Starts Regular Operations

The new, improved Lubbock City-County Library Bookmobile will resume its regular schedule of service Monday with improvements for increased safety of operation.

Printed schedules will be available at any of the library facilities, but library officials announced the schedule for the next two weeks as follows: this week's schedule: Monday, 11th Street and Slide Road; Tuesday, Shallowater; Wednesday, Mackenzie Shopping Center; Thursday, Wolfforth; and Friday, 66th Street and Indiana Avenue.

Schedule for the week of March 13-17 will be: Monday, 11th Street and Slide Road; Tuesday, New Deal; Wednesday, Mackenzie Shopping Center; Thursday, 83rd Street and Indiana Avenue; and Friday, 66th Street and Indiana Avenue.

Hours for each day will be 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2-6 p.m. except for the Wolfforth and New Deal visits, which will end at 5 p.m.

Some locations are served every week, while others are served on alternate weeks.

LeCroy Orders Autopsy After Man's Body Found

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy was withholding a ruling Saturday, pending an autopsy, on the cause of death of a 32-year-old Big Spring man.

Melvin Whiteside, who reportedly checked into the Johnson Motel at 4801 Ave. Q, early Friday was found dead in his motel room about 4:35 p.m. Saturday.

Farm Failure Predictions Not Met

By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Financially-beleaguered South Plains farmers, despite poor crop forecasts and low farm prices, aren't selling out this season as rapidly as American Agriculture Movement leaders had predicted, an Avalanche-Journal survey shows.

Additionally, area farm equipment dealers — also said to be hard hit by the farmers' plight — said business was indeed bad, but not bad just because of the farmers' striking activities.

Earlier this year, American Agriculture representatives testifying before the House Committee on Agriculture claimed the small family farmer was an endangered species that would soon be extinct unless laws legislating 100 percent parity prices were soon enacted.

Many family farmers, they said, were on the verge of bankruptcy and would soon go under without crop price aids.

But area farm auctioneers — the people who usually are called on to sell those bankrupt lands and unpaid-for equipment — said crop conditions this year haven't added any significant number of farm sales to their list of jobs.

"It's sort of like this I guess," auctioneer Danny Burns says, "surprisingly, most of the farmers who ought to go ahead and get out of the business have gotten themselves in a situation where the bankers and lenders are willing to support them for one more year, and so they're going to stay on and try one more time."

"We're seen only a few farmers going out because of the way things are, but it's nothing compared to the usual and certainly not anything more than the usual," Burns said.

Most other auctioneers agreed with Burns' basic premise: farmers go out of business generally only at the time of their death or retirement, whichever comes first.

"We've had about 20 percent more farm sales this year," says auctioneer James Cruce, "but most of them are just folks who were planning on retiring, and since it is a hard year they figure now is as good a time as any. They really aren't leaving because of the problems. They were going to anyhow. This just gives them an excuse to say they didn't quit farming."

Cruce said, based on his experience with farm sales, that those farmers staying on "one more year," will probably find themselves out of work next season, though, because " it's hard enough to make a profitable crop when you start out on an even keel, but when you're under to begin with and the situation doesn't look optimistic, you might as well forget it."

Likewise, area farm implement dealers say their sales have gone down, an indication farmers aren't purchasing as much or as costly items as usual, but dealers also said salvage sales are up considerably.

Bozeman Machinery Tractor Salvage, Inc., owner Corky Bozeman said his sales of new equipment has dropped two-thirds, but salvage sales — meaning farmers are fixing old equipment rather than buying costly new items — has risen about 50 percent at least.

"It's dropped about 35 percent here," says Elmer Adams of A.R. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc. "Business is ordinarily much better this year this time, but the farmers come spring will be planting as much as they've always done. They're just going to be getting by with the minimum requirements. There'll be just as much planted though."

Bozeman, Adams and most other farm dealers contacted said most of the farmers they've talked with plan on scheming to make more this year by making their neighbors 50-percent cutback promise pay for them.

If some farmers cut back to 50 percent of their normal production, some farmers have decided they can raise their usual crop and take advantage of higher prices brought on by the lower supply, the dealers said farmers had indicated.

Depending on the number of farmers trying that method of profit increase though, it could backfire and farmers would end up with the same surplus they now have.

"I doubt if any of them will cut back to the 50 percent," said Adams. "Nobody I've talked to, and I've got customers from all the way west of Lubbock to the far south and east, and nobody is planning on cutting back."

Dealers blamed their slow sales on farmers' reluctance to buy new items combined with poor weather, and which of those two took precedence was debatable.

"They haven't been able to get in the fields to work for 60 days nearly, and between that and the strike, that's about killed business," Red Rivers, manager of Bryant Farm Supply said. "Which did what, I wouldn't know."

Administrator Takes Honors At Post Fete

POST (Special) — Jack Alexander, principal of the primary and elementary schools of Post and past president of the Post Rotary Club and Post Lions Club, was named "Citizen of the Year," here Saturday night before a crowd of some 420 persons at the Community Center.

Alexander, an elder in the First Christian Church of Post, has chaired a committee which has been largely responsible for renovation of old buildings in Post during the past year, according to Superintendent of Schools William F. Shiver, who presented the award.

Alexander, his wife Sandra and their two children have been active participants in church and civic organizations here.

Banquet guest speaker was Danny White, quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys.

The Community Center sold out of tickets Thursday, according to Lee Norman, outgoing president of the Chamber.

Officers for the new year will be:

Men's Division: president, Larry Willard, president of the First National Bank of Post; vice president, Mike Beard. Women's Division: president, Joy Greer, assistant manager of Sentry Savings and Loan of Post; first vice president, Geraldine Butler; second vice president, Betty Posey; treasurer, Phyllis Morris; and secretary, Weaver McKamie.

Phyllis Morris will be chamber secretary for both divisions, managing the operations of the chamber for the 1978 year.

The welcoming invocation was by the Rev. Frank Pickett, pastor of the First Christian Church of Post. Dinner was furnished by the senior class, catered by Jackson cafeteria, and dinner music and special music were by the Post High School Boys Quartet under the direction of Georgie Wilson.

Australian Teacher Conducts Research

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — Dr. Jon Martin, instructor in the department of genetics at the University of Melbourne in Australia, is conducting six weeks of research in Eastern New Mexico's Natural History Museum.

Dr. Martin and Dr. James E. Sublette, dean of the College of Graduate Studies at ENMU, have been collaborating for 10 years on projects dealing with taxonomy (classification) and cytogenetics of chironomid midges (type of insects).

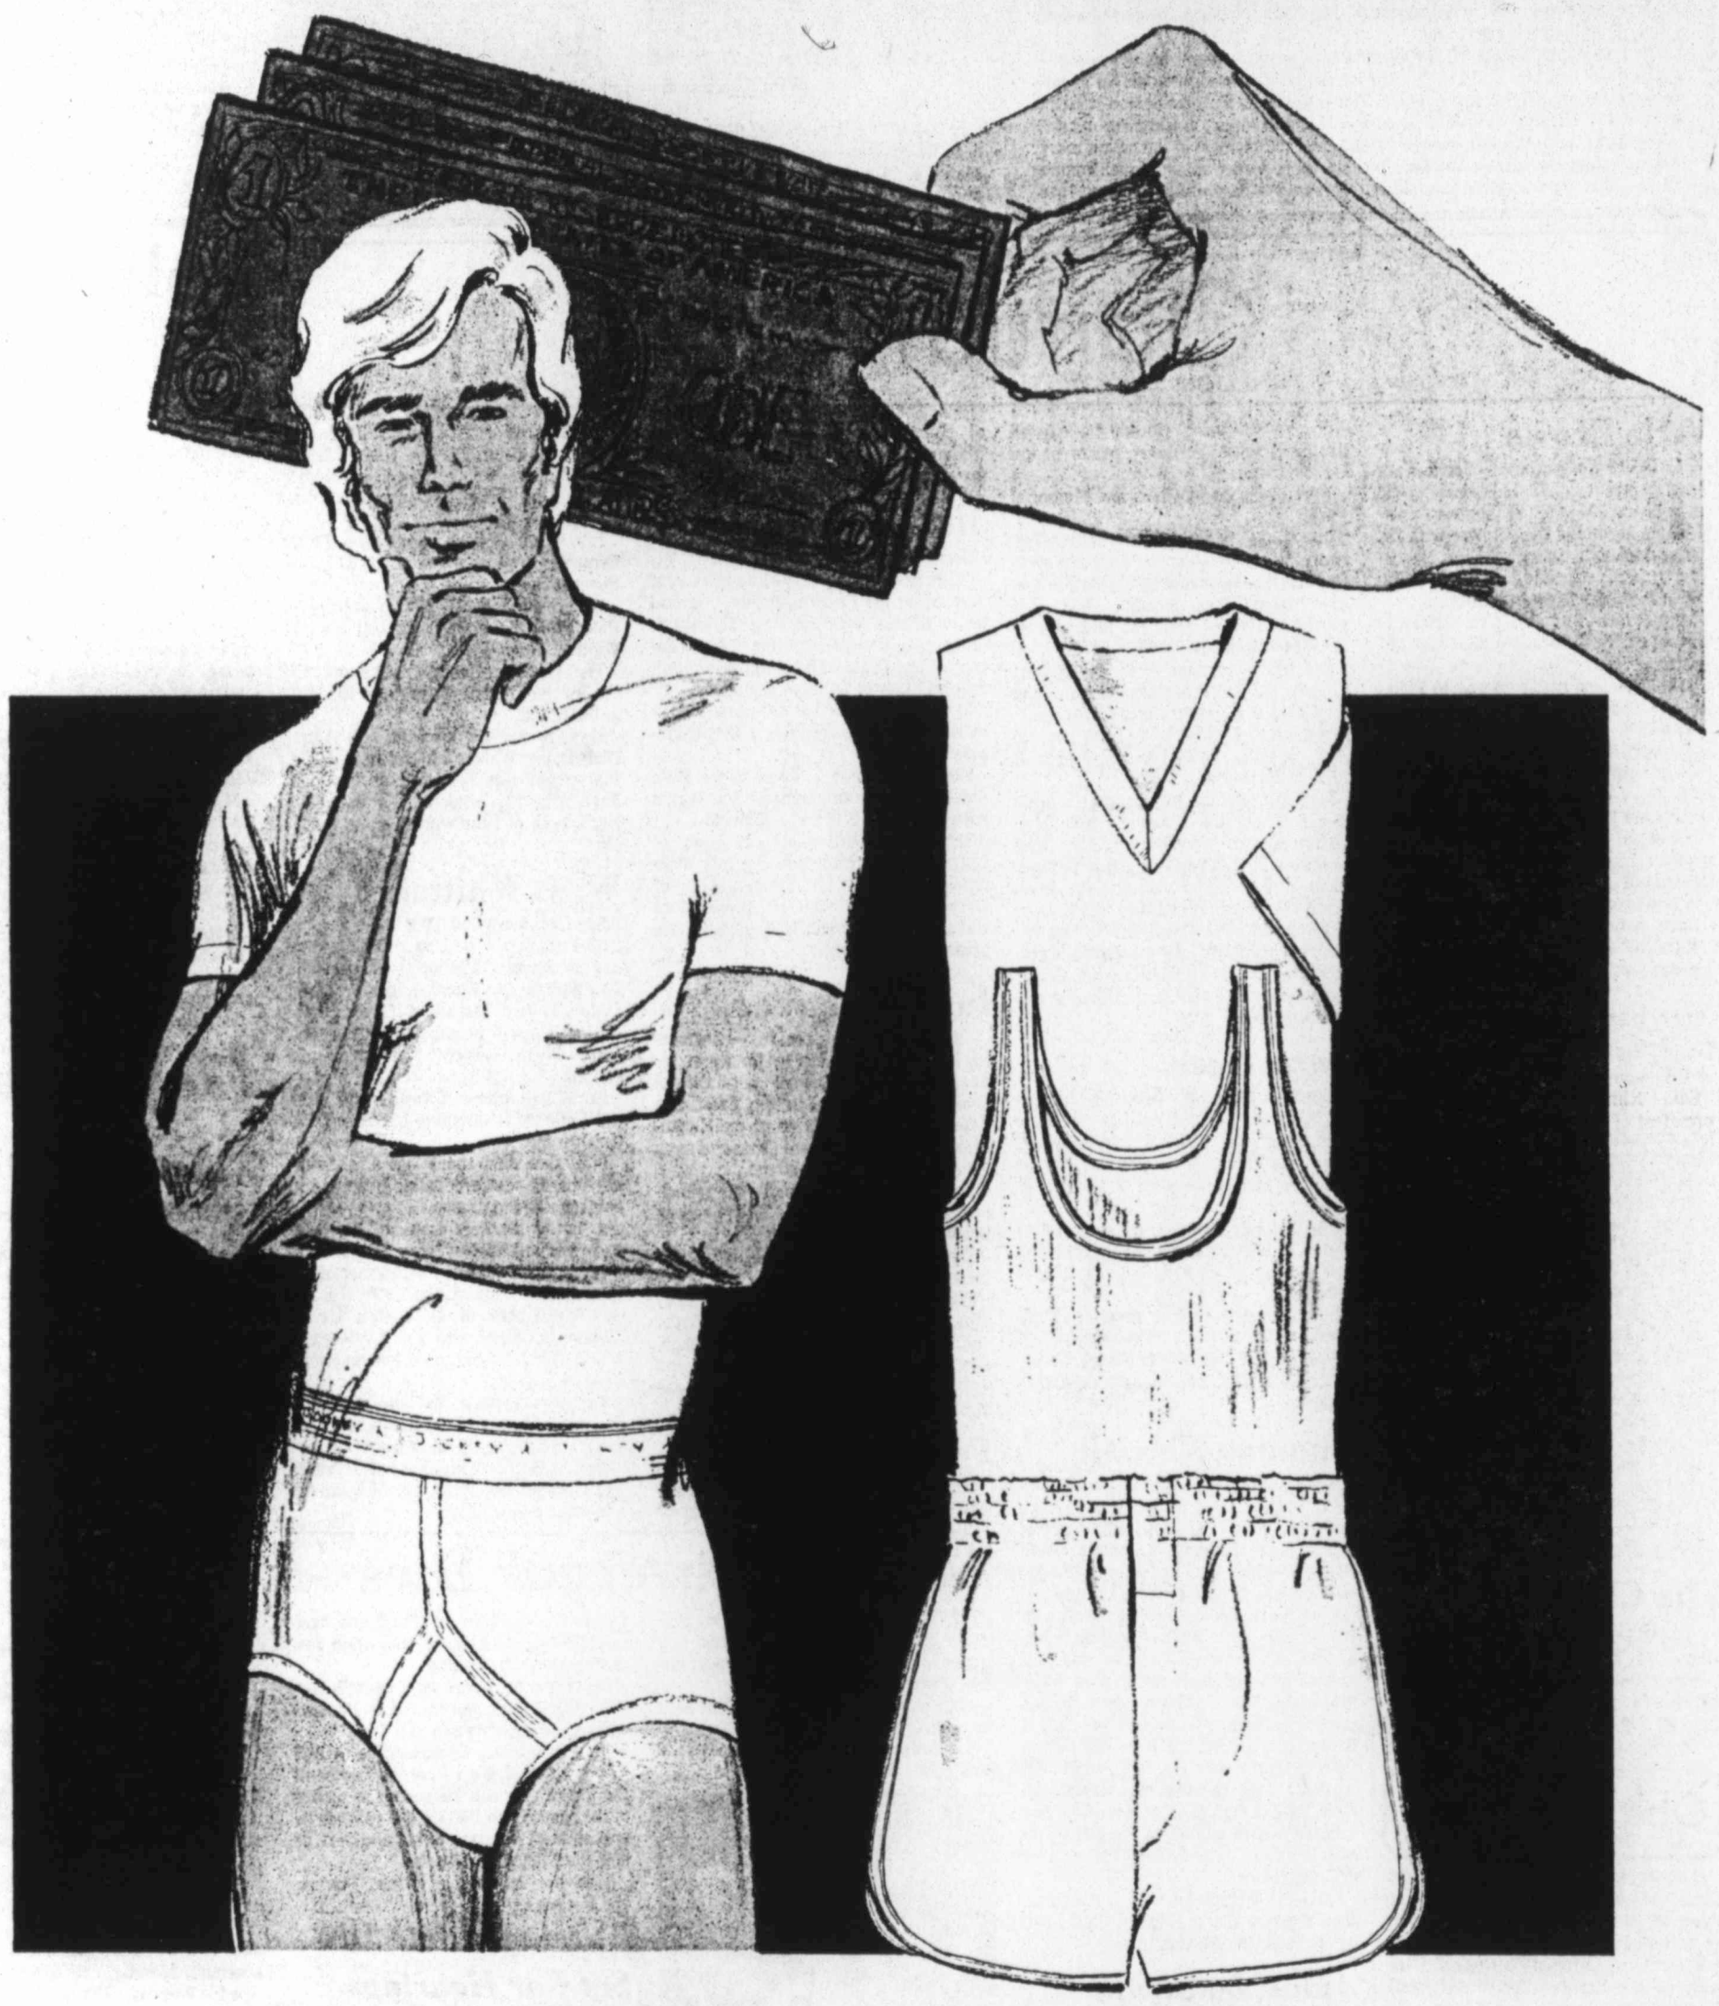

One concern of the research is the possibility that the insects might be carried from island to island by transport, causing a quarantine problem.

"We are tyring to establish what types of insects are present in New Mexico streams in areas being considered for energy power station sights," Dr. Martin said. "This will provide basic data for determining whether the power stations are having any adverse effect on the environment."

'Roots' Popular In West Germany

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The television version of "Roots," Alex Haley's search for his ancestors, has become a favorite with West German viewers.

The tabloid Bild-Zeitung reported that 18 million of the nation's 62 million people watched the first installment Sunday, and 20 million saw the second on Monday. The miniseries is being shown in 11 parts.

Texas Politicians View Redistricting Possibility

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Chills must have run up and down the spines of many Texas politicians when they read or heard of the U.S. Supreme Court decision on Tarrant County state representative districts.

Those frigid vertebrae were due to the fact that representatives, senators and congressmen know that the 1980 census is coming — and when the census comes, redistricting cannot be far behind.

Redistricting is probably the only activity which can make passage of a tax bill, normally ranked below the removal of fingernails without anesthesia, look like fun.

Politicians are fiercely territorial — and when it comes time to divide up districts, interests inevitably clash.

Still, Texas will be better off than some states when the census figures come in, at least on the congressional level.

Texas may gain two congressional districts — and it's much easier to fit in two more congressmen than it is to remove two congressmen — which is what will happen in some other places, if Texas does indeed gain.

Determining how to draw congressional districts is never simple, however, and the degree of difficulty is about that of the average Middle East peace settlement, if one thinks of untamed Comanches being added to the Israelis and Arabs.

At the time of the last redistricting, one member of the redistricting committee was asked how committee members decided to draw the districts of one long-term, powerful congressmen.

"Oh, that was simple," the legislator facetiously explained. "We just took every house where the residents had voted for him for the last 20 years, and put those in his districts — and everyone else we took out."

Unfortunately, it's not that simple.

Federal courts have frowned on districts which vary too much in population, or which meander about excessively, or which are fashioned so as to dilute the strength of ethnic groups.

But doing that without having districts which cross county lines, to say nothing of municipal boundaries, isn't easy.

And lawmakers contend, with reason, that trying to make districts which are perfectly balanced in population, and which are reasonably compact, can result in districts which are so confusing that neither candidates nor voters are sure where the districts lie.

Another consideration, largely unspoken (at least publicly) is not to disturb existing boundaries more than necessary, in order to protect one's colleagues and one's self.

What lawmakers tend to forget, one member pointed out to his comrades in legislation during a debate on redistricting, is that they aren't entitled to have a district that guarantees then re-election.

That representative, for the record, was redistricted into a House district with another incumbent — who beat him.

Redistricting won't come until 1981, for most of Texas, unless there is a special session. That's possible — if federal courts decide to intervene before the legislation comes back to do the job.

But there seems to be some safe bets on redistricting: that rural areas will lose some power in the House and Senate to the growing metropolitian areas, particularly Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio; and that someone will take whatever plan is passed to court.

Still, there are clearer guidelines for legislators on what to do, and what not to do, on redistricting than there have been in the past.

The concept of one-man, one-vote is well accepted, and elimination of the at-large places in the metropolitan counties has been carried out.

However, it won't be easy, and it won't be fun, and judging by Tarrant County and elsewhere, neither will it be fast.

Financial Firms Go To Court

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Banks and credit unions are going to the mat again — in federal court — on the use of share-draft accounts.

Outcome of the lawsuit by the American Bankers Association against the National Credit Union Administration could be the trigger for litigation in states, including Texas, where share-drafts have been a source of irritation to the banking community.

And indications are the federal suit decision will be out any day.

Reports have circulated that Texas bankers are eyeing a challenge of their own, but no announcement has been made on any effort to challenge what bankers contend amounts to the offering of checking accounts by credit union.

Sam Kimberlin, executive vice president of the Texas Bankers Association, says his group feels the ABA position "is correct and has merit."

Meanwhile, the credit unions are saying the bankers are incorrect — and are making a great to-do over a program that hasn't gone over as well in Texas as some of its promotors had hoped.

Dick Williamson, vice president for public affairs of the Texas Credit Union League, says share-drafts haven't met with "an overwhelming response" in Texas since they were authorized about four years ago.

Last year, Williamson reports, 60 million share drafts were written by 1,050 credit union nationwide, by some 500,000 customers.

About half of those credit unions, he estimates, were state-chartered.

Total share drafts amounted to $3.12 billion for the year, an increase of about 400 percent over the 1976 figure.

But in Texas, at the end of February, 39 credit unions were offering share-draft services and seven others were approved to offer them — a low total for the 1,424 credit unions operating in the state, he feels.

Of those 46 credit unions, Williamson says, 22 or more were federally chartered.

If federal Judge Aubrey Robinson rules against credit unions on the share draft issue, or likely enough, even if he does not, credit union representatives feel it's just a matter of time before there's a challenge in Texas courts.

"I think everybody is watching what's going to happen on the national scene," Texas Credit Union Commissioner John "Pete" Parsons says.

Parsons notes that any decision likely would go on to the U.S. Supreme Court, and that the issue, in all events, should be a "hot potato" for some time.

Use of share-drafts in Texas isn't widespread, Parsons agrees, partly because of the uncertainty of share-draft regulations, but primarily because most Texas credit unions hold assets of less than $1 million.

"They don't have the resources — either people resources or financial resources — to jump into this thing until it's proven," Parsons says.

Turning to another aspect of credit unions, Parsons reports that, based on the growth rate of the 100 largest credit unions, total assets of all state-chartered credit unions in Texas rose from $1.432 billion to $1.7 billion for 1977.

This is the third year in succession, Parsons says, that the growth rate has been in the neighborhood of 20 percent.

Largest state-chartered credit union in Texas last year was Government Employees of San Antonio, which registered a gain in assets from $173,593,262 to $215,030,870.

CASTING THE VOTE — A miner looks at his ballot as another comes out of a voting booth at Virginia local. The proposed mine contract appeared to be registering heavy disfavor. (AP Laserphoto)

Mine Union Voting To Reject Contract

to support the requested back-to-work order already have been drawn up.

They also said they believe the president has selected his appointments to the board of inquiry and the government could be prepared to be in court as early as Wednesday.

Miners in most of locals were slated to vote Saturday and today. With a close tally forecast, officials said it might be Monday, when the last votes were cast, before the outcome would be known.

In the coal fields, comments from miners reflected their concern with some contract provisions.

"There are some parts of it that are pretty good and some not so good," said Paul Culpepper, a 47-year-old miner from West Frankfort, Ill. "There won't be any wildcat strikes the way this is set up."

The proposed contract would permit coal operators to discipline miners who organized wildcat strikes although it would protect miners who respected wildcat picket lines.

George T. Lowe, president of Local 1569 which extends from Harlan, Ky., to Oliver Springs, Tenn., said he was pleased that the vote was running against the contract.

He claimed the union leadership "has given us a contract that's totally unacceptable."

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd told strikers that rejecting a proposed contract in hopes of getting a better settlement through government intervention is "a bad gamble."

"I seriously doubt that the nation's coal miners would get as much out of government seizure of the mines as they would out of the proposed settlement they are now voting on," the West Virginian said at a weekly news conference.

Even ratification by the miners would not automatically end the strike. The union has been negotiating with the American Bituminous Contractors for a separate pact to cover an estimated 14,000 construction miners. Bargainers were reported several days from reaching an agreement.

UMW officials said miners would be unlikely to cross a picket line set up by striking construction workers. But they said it was possible the construction workers would refrain from picketing if negotiators reached agreement and the pact was awaiting ratification.

A dispute involving construction miners delayed an end to a miners' strike three years ago.

If the strike continues, other possibilities for the Carter administration include asking Congress for special legislation, such as a bill authorizing temporary federal seizure of the idle mines or one imposing binding arbitration on the two sides.

Bomb Explosions Mark Proposed Settlement

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Five small bombs exploded in scattered sections of Salisbury Saturday, a day after the signing of an agreement for black-majority rule in Rhodesia. No one was injured and it was not known who was responsible, but immediate speculation centered on foes of the constitutional plan.

A leading black moderate, meanwhile, began a campaign abroad to gather support for the agreement among the Western powers.

Police said one bomb went off at this capital city's main post office and the others exploded over a 2¼-hour period in garbage cans and postal boxes in four suburbs — two white, one black and one racially mixed.

Police cleared shoppers and office workers from the downtown area for three hours while officers searched buildings for more bombs. One policeman shouted through a bullhorn: "Please clear the city center. This is not a bloody game. This is the real thing."

Observers said the devices might have been planted either by blacks loyal to guerrilla movements not included in talks that culminated in the agreement for black rule by Dec. 31, or by white militants opposed to ending more than five decades of white-minority rule.

The military command last August blamed black nationalist guerrillas for bombings in two downtown Salisbury buildings that killed 11 black and white shoppers and injured more than 70 other persons.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, one of three black moderates who signed Friday's agreement with Prime Minister Ian Smith, arrived in London, where he is to discuss the settlement Monday with Foreign Secretary David Owen.

Smith and the three black leader are seeking the support of the United States and Britain. Smith unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965 to avoid moving toward black rule.

Muzorewa told reporters: "Britain is the legal (colonial) authority and the British government must be involved as much as they can."

The 52-year-old American-educated clergyman, a Methodist, said he was confident the eventual government of Rhodesia, to be called Zimbabwe under black rule, would be accepted internationally.

"It's going to be recognized. I can promise you that," he said.

The immediate U.S. reaction to the agreement has been non-committal.

State Department African experts said the administration wants to see how popular the settlement is with Rhodesia's 6.7 million blacks. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance called it a "significant step" but said America and Britain still hope for an agreement accepted by all Rhodesians, apparently meaning the black guerrillas based outside Rhodesia as well as the internally based moderates.

Muzorewa predicted that the 5½-year guerrilla struggle to overthrow Smith would die out under the new government. Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who lead an estimated 14,000 guerrillas, have rejected the "internal" solution and vowed to escalate the conflict.

Rainstorms Trigger Floods, Slides In Southern California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands of residents fled their homes in storm-battered areas of Southern California and northern Mexico Saturday as floods and mudslides killed at least two persons in suburban Los Angeles.

As the latest of a series of rainstorms appeared to be subsiding, mudslides sent a hospital parking lot tumbling onto a downtown freeway, but police spokesman Carl Berlin said no cars were trapped and nobody was injured. Other freeways were also blocked by mud.

In Ensenada, Mexico, 20,000 people were left homeless by floods. Ensenada Mayor Luis Gonzalez Ruiz said Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo had declared the city 80 miles south of the California border a disaster area.

In Los Angeles, mud collapsed the back of a suburban Woodland Hills home, trapping a maid and a child inside. The maid was killed but the child was rescued by a 17-year-old youth who lived nearby, said city fire department spokesman Ned Chatfield. He said three other homes in the suburb slid down a hillside. Twenty-five homes in Topanga Canyon were reported flooded.

Another resident was killed in the exclusive Bel Air section of Los Angeles.

Portions of at least two freeways in metropolitan Los Angeles were closed as were numerous city streets.

Several dams in the foothill area north of the city were near capacity and flood control spokesmen were concerned that further rains could pose severe problems.

The Army Corps of Engineers used earth movers to cut through California 126 in Fillmore to let water from swollen Sespe Creek pass through.

In neighboring Ventura County, sheriff's helicopters were airlifting people off rooftops of homes in the Fillmore and Ojai areas, said sheriff's Lt. Lou McCombs. National Guard units were called in to assist with evacuation of the residents, trapped by flood waters rising as high as seven feet.

Hillside Coming Down

"Within the last three hours, the whole hillside has started coming down, sweeping cars into cars," film producer Paul Mazlansky of Malibu said Saturday morning.

"Irwin Allen (a producer of disaster movies) could write a script on this. He's made enough disaster pictures like this scene."

As many as 60 people were evacuated from four Baldwin Hills apartment buildings, said Los Angeles city fire department spokesman Doc Holloway.

"The mud is apparently approaching these apartment buildings from the rear," he said. "In one building the mud has entered (from the rear) and has gone all the way out windows and doors in the front."

At the Malibu sheriff's substation, Sgt. Archie Cross frantically tried to set up an evacuation center while struggling to respond to dozens of calls from all over the 200-square-mile region.

Clarification Of Insulation Ruling Sought

tion administrator, said the issue originally arose in 1973, when the insulation ordinance was drafted. The matter remained in limbo, unresolved, he added.

But, he noted, "You can't fill concrete walls with anything because they're already solid."

Anderson acknowledged that, but proposed the problem could be met by spraying insulation on the concrete walls and then sandwiching it with a stud wall.

"It will cost some money to do it," he admitted.

He added that his first meeting with the board members will not be to propose changes but to "get their reaction."

The issue of insulating office/warehouses needs a board policy interpretation, Anderson said. He explained that in many metal structures, the office is insulated fully while the warehouse receives minimum application.

Usually the warehouse has only a small heater to "take off the chill" and enough insulation to retain heat to keep water pipes from freezing, he said.

So, he asked, should full insulation requirements be met in warehouses at great costs to builders?

That is the question he said he hopes the board will resolve. "Do I have to have the same R-values back in the back as in the office? No one can say," he added.

The builders association is not upset by the ordinance but would like clarification on requirements and fairer application, he said.

The organization's challenge will be the first for the ordinance, radically amended last month by the city council on the building board's recommendation.

As approved, the ordinance sets R-factor standards, outlines information requirements and demands that surety bonds be posted and insulation permits secured.

Sheats Parley

it for organizing the meeting. The Kentucky legislator could not be reached in Washington Saturday, nor was there any answer at his home telephone in Mayfield.

Asked if his description of the meeting to the media was overstated, Sheats said Saturday, "I don't think it was overstated. There were a number of farmers there and those who were there felt it was very profitable.

"I worked for three weeks on the phone to get the meeting together. It was my idea from the start," Sheats said. But "Carroll Hubbard should get most of the credit," he added.

Sheats said the mild controversy had "upset" him. "Somebody is gunning for me continually," he added.

He stressed that the Washington meeting was not political gimmickery:

"I worked hard on (the meeting). I believe in the fact that (farmers) have got problems. It's not because I'm running for Congress (that the meeting was arranged)."

The Lubbock minister ran afoul of Mahon last week when the "West Texas News" (a Sheats handout inserted in several area newspapers) showed him with the Lubbock congressman in a picture with the words, "to recall the Washington visit and extend best wishes."

Mahon told reporters he believed the picture was an implied endorsement of Sheats's candidacy and he reiterated at that time his intention to have no influence on the choice of his successor.

However, Sheats said the photograph was intended simply to pay tribute to the veteran lawmaker.

Farm Blockade Held Peacefully

duce trucks were detained.

About 220 farmers were arrested after Wednesday's demonstration and charged with obstruction of a public place. The arrests followed a violent scuffle with local police riot squads equipped with billy clubs and tear gas.

About 160 farmers remained in jail for two days until negotiations led by Texas Attorney General John Hill led to a reduction of their charges to attempted obstruction of a public place, a class C misdemeanor.

Two representatives of the Justice Department were on hand, and sources said the two men viewed films of police arresting the farmers Wednesday. Much of the film footage showed police and highway patrolmen beating the farmers with clubs. The Justice Department officials had no comment.

'Food Strike' Plans Set For Tuesday

MCALLEN (UPI) — Militant farmers announced plans Saturday to organize strike efforts they hope will halt the transport of food across the nation.

Strike leader Jerry Carpenter of Levant, Kan., said American Agriculture leaders had decided to begin "a nationwide food strike" Tuesday to dramatize their need for a better financial return on their needs.

"We're going to keep thing (food strike) going on until we get something through Congress we can live with," Carpenter said. "To really get the power to this thing (push for better prices), we're going to have to shut the food off to the public so they'll know how critical our situation is."

Tommy Kersey of Unadilla, Ga., said the effort would be coordinated in Wall, S.D. He said farmers would peacefully stop train and truck shipments and already had been promised the cooperation of an independent trucking association.

Briscoe Backs Parity

movement. "I'm glad to be here as governor," he told the group. "I'm not here to play political football with your movement."

But in Austin, Attorney General John Hill, who is running against Briscoe, unleashed a campaign-style blast before Briscoe left for McAllen.

"This event confirmed my belief that our state cannot risk for one minute longer the policy of benign neglect our present governor follows when he is confronted with this type of crisis," Hill said.

He said that while he made a trip to Edinburg to try to solve the conflict, Briscoe stayed home, "judging this volatile confrontation from 300 miles away."

Briscoe told the farmers to put together a committee to meet with him later in the week, and denied ever saying jailed farmers "got what they deserved."

He said he supported House Speaker Bill Clayton's proposed investigations into produce imports and packaging.

"The situation for the individual agriculture producer is serious," Briscoe said, "if not more serious that during the dark days of the Depression in the 1930s."

He told the farmers his father went broke during that Depression.

meeting the court order, not just initial success," he said.

Besides that, few whites live in the areas adjacent to the nine schools that must be integrated — Dunbar, Struggs and Wheatley, Iles, Posey, Martin, Guadalupe, Sanders and Mahon elementaries.

Irons and his Administrative Council worked this weekend preparing "two or three" plans for desegregating the schools. Those options will be considered at 7:15 a.m. Monday by the school board in a closed session.

The superintendent said each proposal may involve a "variety of tools" — such as pairing, clustering and magnet programs. "We are not committed to any one device. The final plan probably will be a combination of ideas," Irons said.

"I've studied the desegregation plans of several other school systems, looking for things that worked and things that didn't. Probably the most important conclusion one can draw is that Lubbock's plan must be tailored for Lubbock. Every city is different."

With the exception of attendance zone revisions, the other tools mentioned by Woodward "could be effective," Irons said.

Those tools include:

•Pairing schools. This involves matching a minority school with a predominantly white campus and exchanging students between the two. Each school may continue to house all the younger children in its particular neighborhood, but there would be a transfer of pupils in the middle and upper grades.

A minority elementary school, for example, may send half its intermediate-grade students to a corresponding white campus, which in turn would assign half its intermediate-grade pupils to the minority school.

•Clustering schools. This is similar to pairing, but involves three or more schools. The cluster may include, for example, one white, one black and one Mexican-American school.

Again, each campus may continue to house its own neighborhood's lower elementary grades. But the white school perhaps could take in all fourth-graders from the three neighborhoods; the black school, all fifth-graders; and the Mexican-American school, all sixth-graders.

•Closing schools. Many districts have responded to integration orders by shutting down minority schools and dispersing those students to other campuses. Irons said such actions can be "far more emotional than busing" and, unless balanced with other tools, unfair to minorities.

School officials have not hinted of any school closings here to comply with Woodward's order. But they still have that option open.

•Utilization of space in schools now under capacity. Most of the nine schools named by Woodward are under-enrolled. They could accommodate more students not just for integration purposes, but to justify expanded course offerings and other programs.

Irons said the district hopes to increase "both the racial balance and the enrollment" of the schools to be integrated.

•Full use and implementation of a majority-to-minority transfer policy. Lubbock already has a policy allowing any student to transfer from a school in which his race is in the majority to a school in which his race is in the minority.

But more students could be encouraged to take advantage of that policy by putting "magnet" programs — after-school care for younger children or special academic courses, for instance — on minority campuses, in hopes of voluntarily attracting whites from other parts of the city.

Woodward's order also mentions another possible desegregation device — construction of new schools south of Loop 289, as authorized by voters last year.

The judge says the building program needs further study in light of its effect on integration. But, he said, "it may very well be that this new construction will be a useful tool in implementing desegregation of the schools in question."

And paraphrasing Woodward, Irons noted, "it's not where the schools are built, but rather, who is going to attend them, that's most important."

For instance, while whites are being reassigned to integrate the nine minority schools cited by Woodward, minorities may be reassigned to integrate the proposed new schools.

Except for magnet programs, the suggested desegregation tools will require some busing, Irons said. Any schools to be paired or clustered would have to be relatively distant from each other to draw an adequate racial mix, he said.

But the district hopes to minimize the years any student is assigned outside his neighborhood by distributing busing as evenly as possible through the community, Irons said. Students probably will continue to attend their nearest schools for most of their public school careers, he said.

And "if at all possible," children in kindergarten and the lower elementary grades will be exempt from any busing, Irons said.

In letters to Irons, many parents who oppose busing have suggested that the district simply allow students to attend whichever schools they want, without regard to any attendance zones.

But the superintendent noted that's not an option.

"People repeatedly bring up this suggestion. But letting everybody choose a school to attend would not meet the guidelines of the court. The so-called 'freedom of choice' plans were ruled out by the Supreme Court about 10 years ago, because they do not assure desegregation," Irons said.

Area Counties Set To Field Winners Of Spelling Bees

Five of the 24 area counties slated to enter the 26th annual Regional Spelling Bee April 15 will determine their regional contestant in meets this week.

Three county meets will be Tuesday. The Floyd County Spelling Bee will begin at 7 p.m. at the Lockney Junior High School library. The contest is under the direction of Sally Carthel, who also will serve as pronouncer for the event. Eight school winners from two schools will be competing for the chance to go to the regional meet. Judges will be chosen the night of the meet.

Twelve students from the Levelland, Smyer, Whitharral, Pep, Ropes, and Anton schools will be vying for the Hockley County title. The contest will be at 2 p.m., Tuesday, in the Science building at South Plains College in Levelland.

Virginia Yarbrough of the Levelland public schools, is director of the meet. Norma Boggs has been selected as the pronouncer. Judges will include Dick Lawson, Nancy Campbell, Geraldine Spencer, and Freda Tubb.

Crosbyton will be the site of the Crosby County Spelling Bee at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday, in the district courtroom of the Crosby county courthouse. There will be a senior bee and a junior bee, with two contestants from each school entered in both. Participating schools are Crosbyton Elementary, Crosbyton Junior High, Lorenzo Elementary, Lorenzo Junior High, Ralls Middle School and Ralls Elementary.

Pronouncer for the event will be Les Treat, director of the Crosby County bee. Two directors from each of the participating schools will be judges.

Michelle Evatt, a seventh-grader from Ralls, will be competing for her third consecutive title as county winner.

March 9 is the date chosen for the Dawson County bee. Beginning at 1 p.m. at the Lamesa Middle School, 80 students from the Lamesa Middle School, North Elementary, South Elementary, V.Z. Rodgers, Sands, Klondike, Dawson, and Central schools will be competing for the county title.

Co-directors of the county bee are Vicki Anderson and Gay Hester of Lamesa Middle School. Shelly Barron is pronouncer and judges are Cheryl Robertson, Sue Davis, and Barbara Hooks.

Sixty school winners from Lubbock County schools will gather at Smylie Wilson Junior High, at 9:30 a.m. Saturday to determine the Lubbock County Spelling Bee champion. James Baker, LISD consultant for language arts, is director of the Lubbock County bee. Nancy Phillips, Lubbock High School counselor, will serve as pronouncer. The judges are Wayne Dickey, LISD language arts consultant; Virginia Lauderdale, Bayless Elementary assistant principal; and Larry Mullican, Wolffarth Elementary assistant principal. Drew Jackson, principal of Overton Elementary, will be recording judge, and dictionary judge is Rachel Harmon, LISD demonstration teacher. Mark Martin, a teacher at Murfee Elementary, and Carolyn Marlett, LISD demonstration teacher, will serve as audience hosts. Stage hosts are Drew Foster, LISD language arts consultant, and Nettie Edwards, LISD demonstration teacher.

State School Student Shows 'Natural Talent' In Art Works

By DEAN GLAZE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For most of his 20 years, Keith has lived in a world far away from the common concept of reality.

Finally, he is making his escape from the mental confinement of autism. But now, Keith is encountering material barriers.

Emerging with Keith is a long obscurred artistic ability his art teacher at the Lubbock State School calls, "the only thing in my life to make me believe there is a such thing as natural talent."

However, Sheila Crall, a former high school art teacher, fears Keith's potential may never be fullfilled because the school can afford neither the time nor money necessary to advance his art education.

"At this point, Keith needs individual attention," she says. "There are really not the facilities or materials out here for Keith to really get into art."

"All he has ever worked with in water colors is construction paper and pan water colors. Who knows what he could some nice water colors or oil paints, and be out in the beautiful world."

Keith was given art therapy when he was much younger, but it was discontinued because it didn't seem to do any good. However, Mrs. Crall says now, things Keith learned from that therapy are beginning to appear in his work.

When Mrs. Crall started teaching Keith less than a year ago, he wouldn't acknowledge presence even by eye contact. It took several weeks to establish communication.

During those first few weeks, she said Keith would sit for long periods of time and draw only pictures of crayon boxes. Finally in an attempt to encourage him to draw other things, his teacher began tearing up the pictures of crayon boxes. It took several days, but she says he finally began to turn his talent toward other things.

"Keith's got it all up here, (the head) it's just a matter of wanting to use it." Mrs. Crall said he has tested out as normal in some intelligence testing.

She says now, Keith's main means of communication is through acting out his message. If he is relaying an incident, good or bad, he will mimic all the dialogue and actions of each person involved.

When he mimics, he uses complete sentences, whereas he usually speaks in one word sentences.

Keith's favorite art subjects are food, especially cookies, and other things important to him.

There is also a special person in Keith's life, named Stacy. "He draws her with such care and with the most beautiful eyes," says Mrs. Crall.

His teacher says Keith will often include numbers in drawings for some unknown reason. She said numbers run through his head constantly. He often sits and fills pads full of numbers and he can add and subtract into the thousands.

"With the proper training and if he could become socially adjusted, he has the ability to make a living artistically," she says.

She says her gifted student is unaware of the difference an expanded artistic talent could make even though a livelihood of art would be more interesting than his present job, punching out watch stems in a factory setting. It is a job with which he is said to be getting bored.

"Art is a reinforcement to him because he likes it. He has no concept of money or anything like that. He's real passive and not competitive," Mrs. Crall said.

"I guess he will always be in an institution."

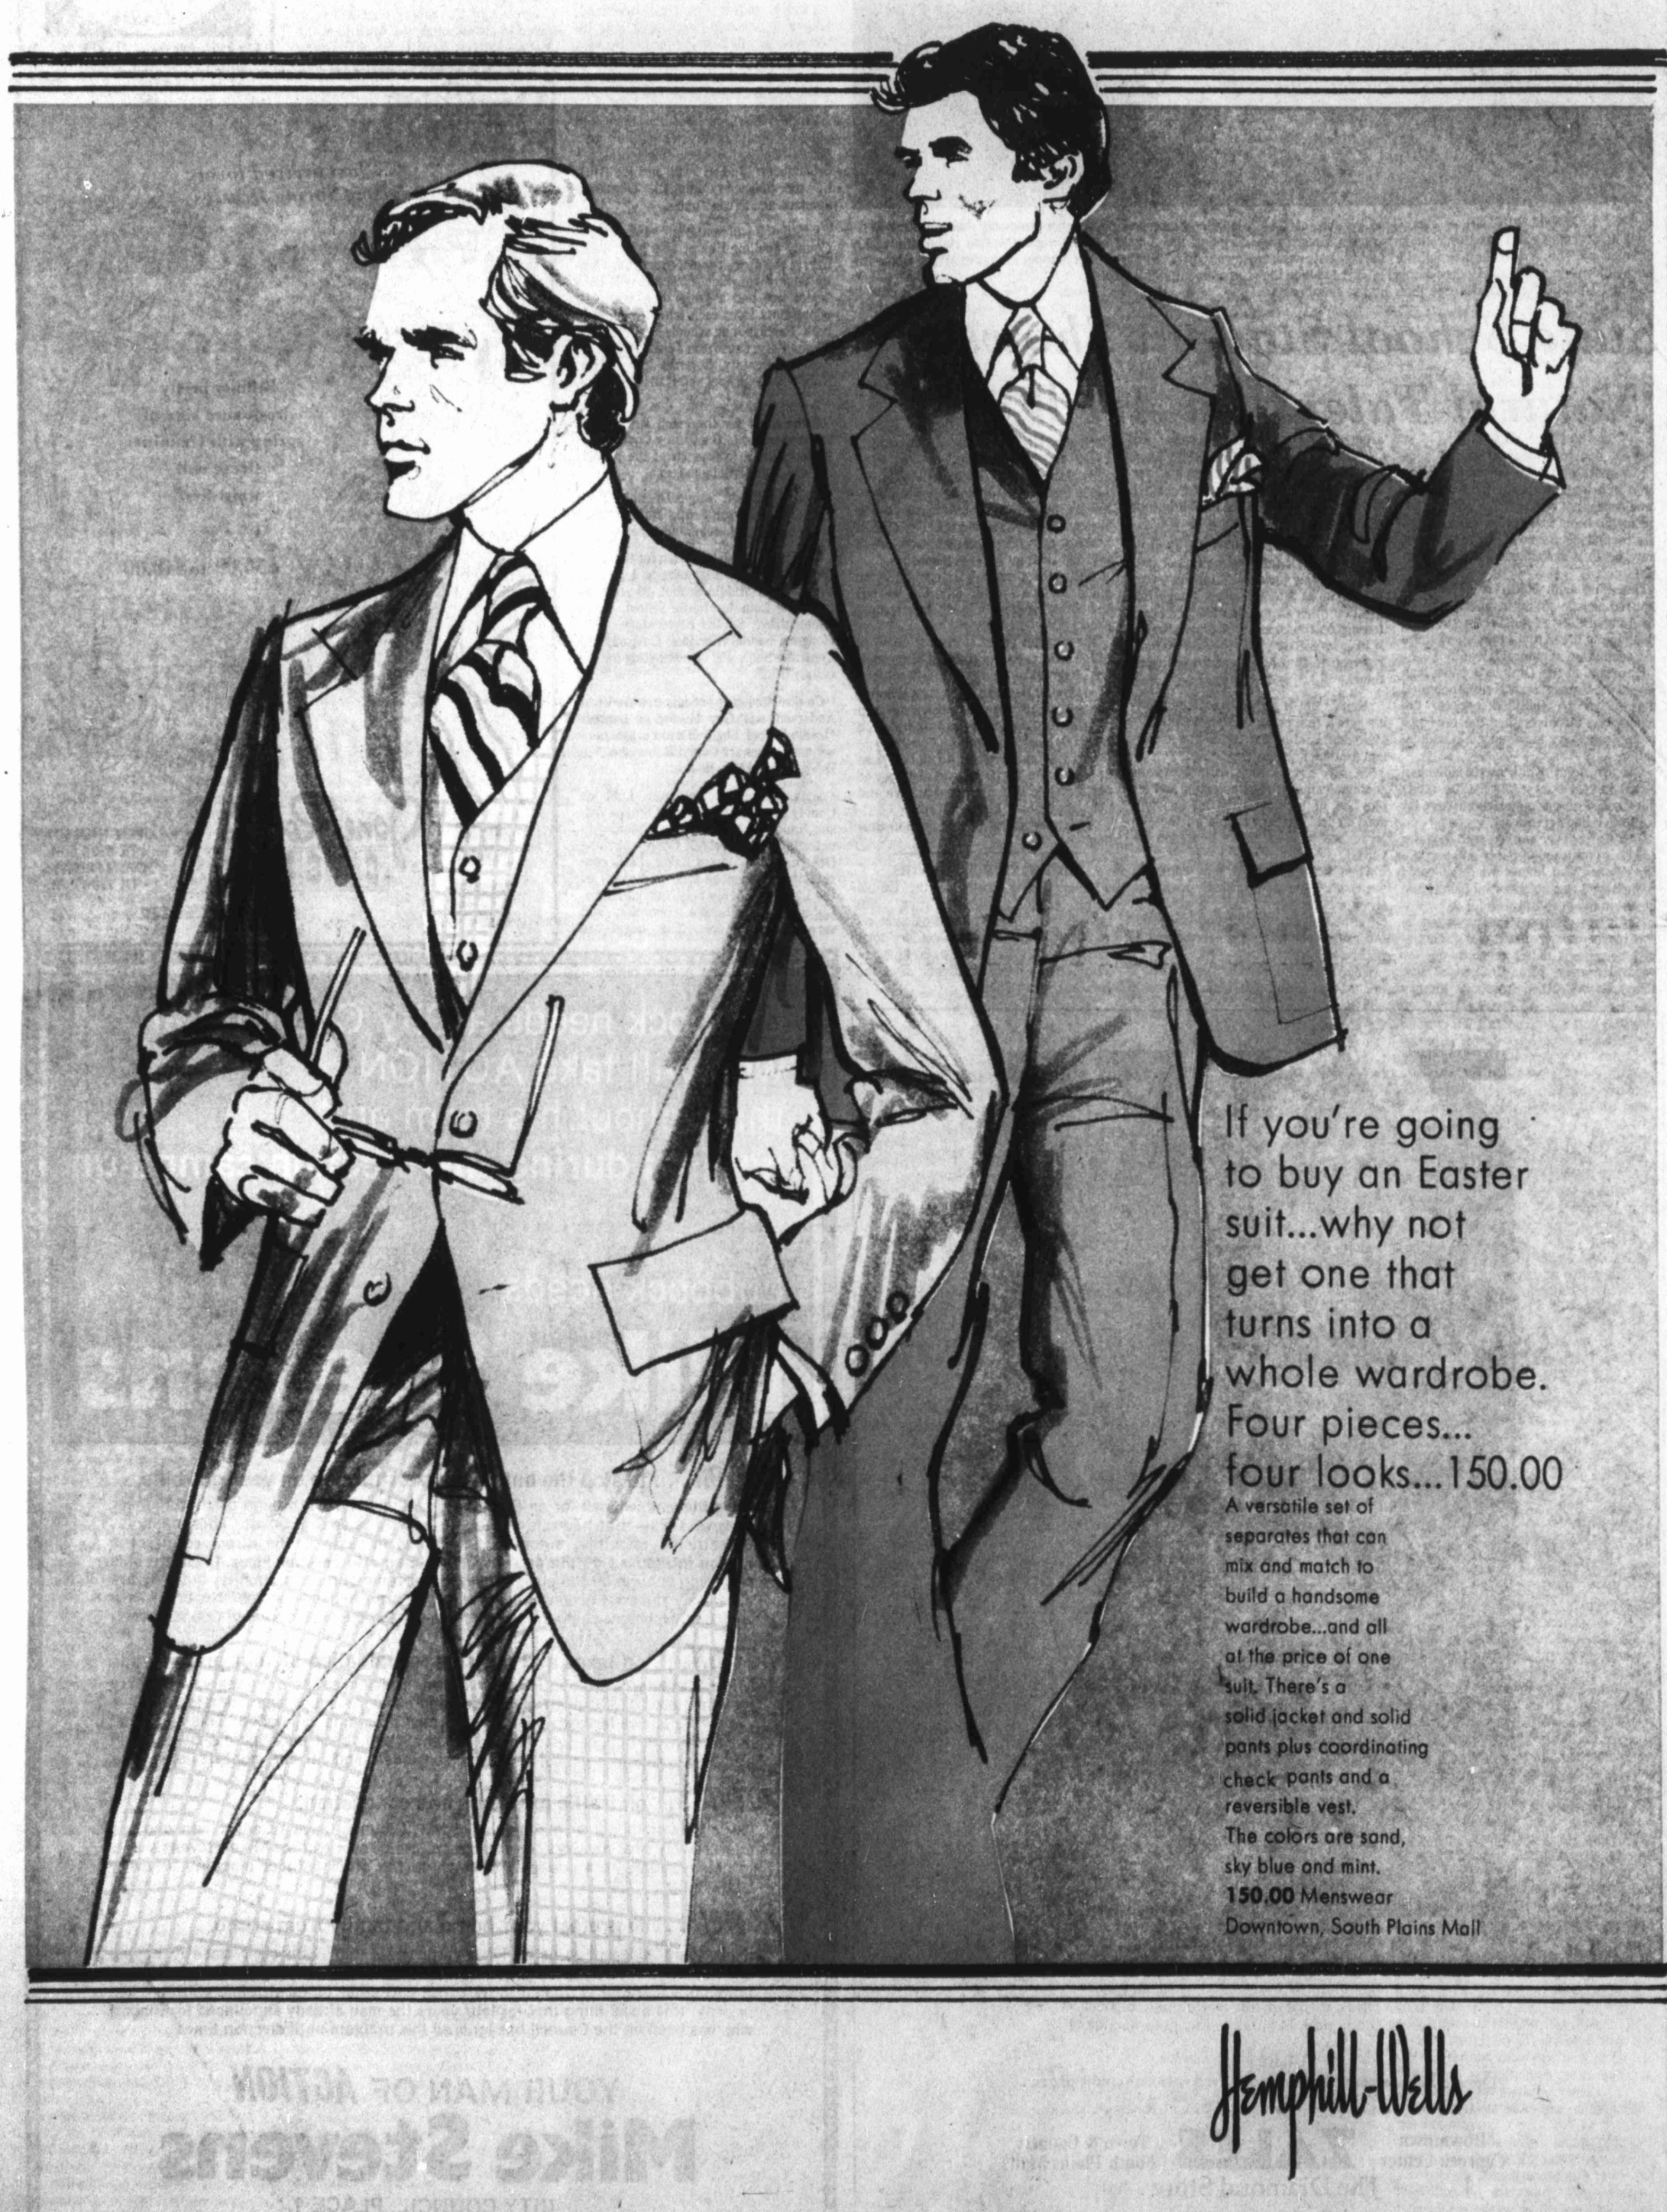

MOTOR VEHICLE DEATHS

Motor vehicle deaths in the United States totaled 2,100,000 from 1900 through 1975. American battle deaths resulting from wars in this century total 425,783, or one-fourth of those killed in automotive vehicle accidents, says the National Safety Council.

Lubbock needs a City Councilman who will take ACTION throughout his term and not just during the election campaign
Lubbock needs
Mike Stevens
ACTION . . . to stop the automatic passthrough on your gas bills.
Mike Stevens will call for an END to the automatic pass-through granted Pioneer Natural Gas—that has allowed our utility bills to skyrocket. This massive, unrestricted, monthly, automatic, cost plus increase is the direct result of a motion introduced by the present Councilman also seeking Place 1. Utility bills are tough enough on the struggling young people of our community, but they are absolutely devastating on our senior citizens on a fixed income. No one has a choice of which gas company to patronize—they do have a choice of Councilmen.
ACTION . . . on taxes and massive reevaluation of your property.
Mike Stevens is opposed to any futher tax increases or massive property reevaluations. The growth of our city increases revenues approximately 17% a year. This allows for both inflation and new programs as needed. This city must live within its budget just like its citizens. Also, back door increases—through property evaluations—must be closely controlled, and citizens' appeals listened to.
ACTION . . . on traffic problems and congestion.
Our city is no longer a small country town. We must have a Councilman who will aggressively seek answers to problems of cross-town traffic. Mike Stevens wants to help you get from one part of town to the other without stopping at every traffic light.
ACTION . . . to protect your home and family from crime.
It has been apparent to us all for several years that Lubbock is close to having open prostitution by allowing massage parlors to operate openly. Putting an end to this practice that is related to narcotics and other types of crime will be a top priority. It is a sad thing that for four years the man already announced for Place 1 who has been on the Council has ignored this problem until election time.

Houston Climbs SWC Summit

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Cougars used the inside strength of Mike Schultz, Charles Thompson and George Walker Saturday night to outmuscle Texas, 92-90, win the Southwest Conference tournament, and advance to the NCAA playoffs.

The Cougars, unheralded through most of the season because of a series of close losses, survived a controversial finish to earn a berth in the NCAA tournament March 12 in Tulsa, Okla., against a team to be named today.

It will be the first NCAA appearance in five years for the Cougars, who finished third in the SWC but swept to the tournament victory with back-to-back wins over the league's co-champions — Arkansas and Texas.

The Longhorns, who were hoping to provide Coach Abe Lemons with his 400th career victory, dropped to 22-5 for the season and still hold hopes for a post-season tournament bid.

The Cougars' game plan was to go inside as much as possible to use its strength against the Longhorns. And that strategy worked, since Thompson scored 21 points and Texas centers Gary Goodner and Phillip Stroud both got into foul trouble.

Thompson's layup with 28 seconds left in the game gave Houston a six-point lead, but the Cougars still had to cope with an unusual finish that saw the Longhorns have one last chance to tie the game.

With eight seconds left, Texas' John Moore drove for a layup that cut the deficit to four points, and he was fouled on the play. Officials ruled the foul wus intentional and Moore was given two free throws.

Moore made the first shot, missed the second, got his own rebound and was fouled as he tried to shoot. Moore then missed his first free shot, but made the second with four seconds left to cut the deficit to two points.

Thompson took the inbounds pass for Houston but was immediately fouled. He missed his first free-throw attempt, however, and Texas rebounded and Ron Baxter put up a shot from midcourt that was on-line but just short of the basket.

Schultz, who scored 28 points Friday night in Houston's one-point victory over Arkansas in the semifinals, finished with only 10 points, but dominated both boards and was named the tournament's outstanding player.

Walker, a backup forward, came in to score 13 points when Houston's outside shooters cooled off.

The Cougars' Ken Williams scored 20 —14 in the first half—and made a crucial steal with 1:31 remaining to produce a layup that gave Houston a six-point lead.

Baxter led Texas with 26 points and Jim Krivacs bombed in 23.

Texas' chances' for victory began to dim late in the first half when, owning a one-point lead, it hit a three-minute cold streak.

Houston ran off nine points in that stretch and assumed a six-point lead at halftime, 47-41.

Houston, last year's runnerup in the NIT, had lost twice to the Longhorns this season — a 100-89 setback in Houston and a 73-72 defeat in Austin.

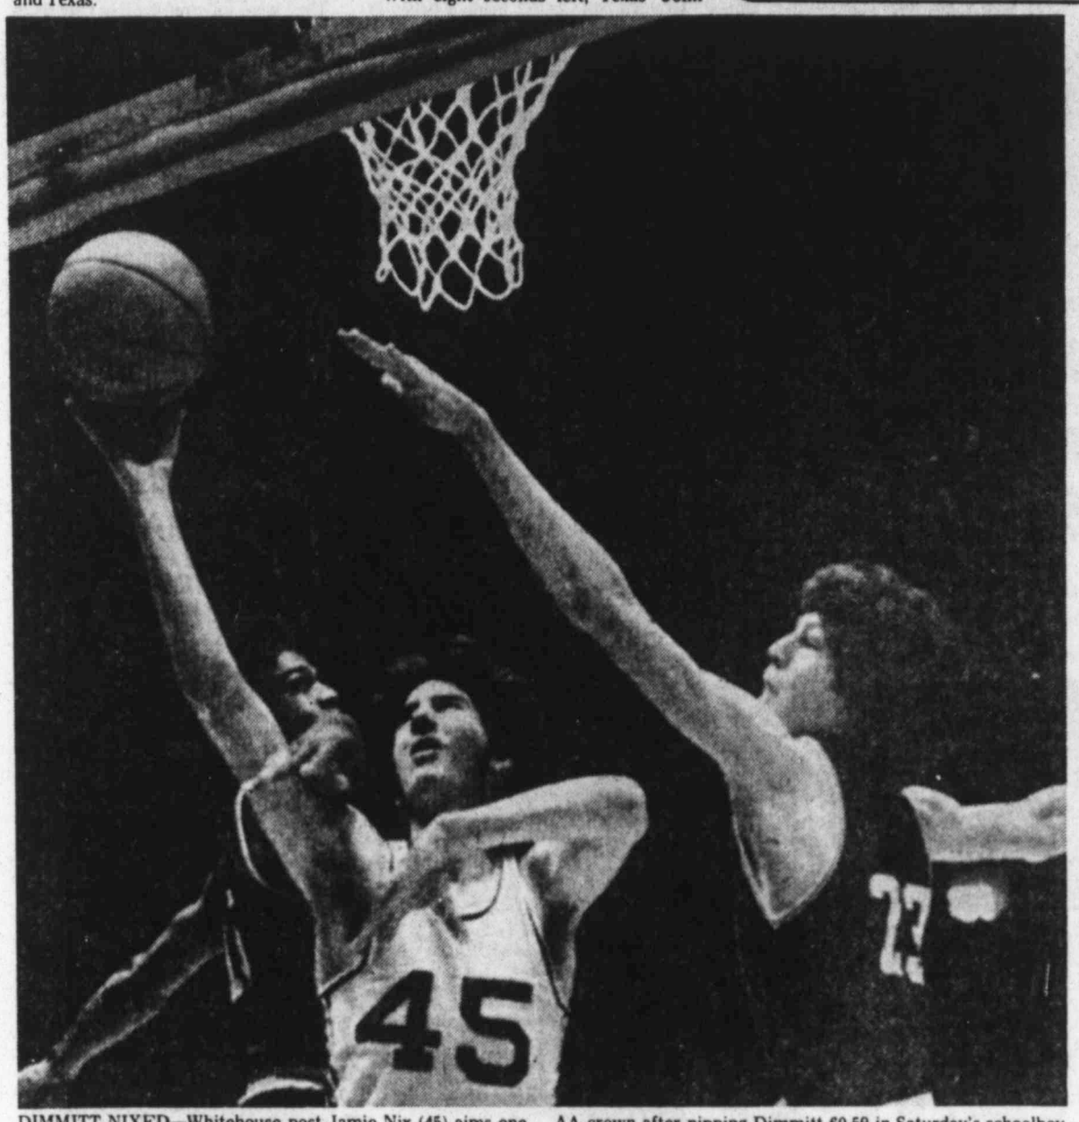

The second loss to Texas was one of five one-point decisions that went against the Cougars as they compiled a 25-7 record.

Monterey Girls Nab State Tourney Spot

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ABILENE — In the tense closing moments of Saturday's Class AAAA Region I basketball finale, Monterey's Margaret Grennell bounced around and fired shots as if she enjoyed it .

The 5-8 junior seemed to shoulder more pressure than ever because her scoring mate, Marilyn Beckner, was sitting on the bench. Yet, Miss Grennell did anything but choke as the Plainsmen battled from behind in the fourth quarter. She scored Monterey's last six points and 10 of the team's last 12 points as the Plainsmen edged El Paso Parkland 55-52 in Abilene Christian's Moody Coliseum.

The win earns Monterey a regional title and a state tournament berth next weekend in Austin's Super Drum. MHS plays Friday in the state semis at either 4 or 8 p.m The time and opponent will be named Monday morning. Not bad for coach Phil Hood's squad, considering it is the first season for Lubbock schools in University Interscholastic League-sanctioned girl's basketball. It is also the first time any Hub City team has entered a UIL state cage tourney since the Dunbar boys did it in 1968.

Coach Hood benched Miss Beckner after she missed two foul shots and Monterey trailed 42-39 with 5:49 to play. Afterwards, Hood felt the move was a blessing in disquise.

"Rebekah (James) can drive better," he said. " I thought this would help Margaret (Grennell) to get inside. Marilyn had shot an airball on one of the two freeshots and I thought she was tired. Physically, Parkland is just as strong as Canyon is. This is the first time we've played from behind in a real pressure situation. They had two tremendous inside people (Kim Layne and Gwen McCray)."

With the two inside players at his disposal, Parkland coach Larry Vanley used one at each end of the court and switched the two frequently. One of the two left the struggle when Miss McCray fouled out with 5:18 to play. That was the time when Miss Grennell started her 10-point spree as Monterey trailed 46-43.

Miss Grennell hit two fouls shots to cut the deficit to one point. After each team committed a turnover, Monterey regained the lead for the first time since midway in the first quarter. Parkland's Lane deflected a shot but MHS retained possession under its basket. Miss Grennell received a pass from Miss James and canned a fall-away jumper from 10 feet to the right of the bucket.

Parkland regained the led 50-47 with two minutes to play as its leading scorer Fudge Maxwell, hit four straight points. Miss James countered with a short bank shot to narrow the gap to 50-49. Then Monterey's Barbara Ragus rebounded a missed shot by Parkland's Robbie Smith and Miss Grennell lifted Monterey ahead 51-50 with a 10-foot shot from the right baseline . Parkland's Layne charged into Monterey's James with 1:32 to play and coach Hood called timeout to install his delay game. Miss Grennell was appointed the primary ballhandler for foul shooting purposes.

Miss Grennell hit the front end of one-and-one situations with 38 seconds and 14 seconds left in the game. On each occassion, she missed the second shot but MHS still led 53-50. Parkland's Maxwell sank two free shots, narrowing the lead to 53-52 with 13 seconds to play. However, she fouled Monterey's backcourt ballhandler Janet Mears with 11 seconds left. The infraction sent Miss Grennell to the line once more and the cool shooter clinched the win with two free shots.

"We pulled ahead and I thought we would win with 11 seconds left," Miss Grennell said. "It had put more pressure on me when Marilyn was out of the game because we depend on each other a lot."

The teams were tied five times in the early going. Neither side gained a decisive edge until Parkland jumped ahead in the final 20 seconds of the half.

Whitehouse Nips Dimmitt 60-59

AUSTIN (Special)—Jamie Nix sank the first free shot in a one-and-one situation with one second remaining Saturday to complete a furious Whitehouse rally and give his team a 60-59 victory over Dimmitt and the Class AA state basketball championship.

With four minutes left in the game, Whitehouse trailed 53-43. The only other time this season that it had trailed was in a 51-49 loss to Tyler Lee, its only defeat in 37 games this year.

However, Whitehouse quickly rectified the situation.

Dwight Pettigrew, who led the winners with 23 points, scored his team's next eight points on a layup, another basket after a steal, a long jumper and a pair of free throws. In that span, Dimmitt countered with just two points, and the Bobcats' lead had dwindled to four points at 55-51.

The count was 57-53 after a Dimmitt bucket and then a steal by Dwight Pettigrew and a feed to brother Dwayne for a layup.

With 1:32 remaining, Dimmitt's Thompson Mayberry made good on the front end of a one-and-one situation, but he missed the second shot, and Dwight Pettigrew later stole the ball and made a layup to make it 58-55.

After the Bobcats' Jim Bradford made the first shot and missed the second of a one-and-one, Nix hit an 18-foot jumper with 41 seconds left to bring his team to within two points.

Soon after, Mayberry missed the first shot in a one-and-one situation, and Bradford fouled Cary Nix of Whitehouse. Nix, too, missed on the front end of a one-and-one, but the Bobcat's Dennis Veals fouled Dwayne Pettigrew in the fight for the rebound, and Pettigrew sank both shots of the one-and-one to tie the game at 59 with 16 seconds remaining.

Dimmitt ran the clock down and Rocky Rawls missed a shot from about 17 feet with four seconds remaining.

With one second left, Dimmitt's Johnny Merritt—who had just come into the game to replace Veals, who had fouled out—fouled Jamie Nix, and he made the free throw that accounted for Whitehouse's winning margin.

He missed the second shot, but it made no difference, as a long, desperate Dimmitt shot at the buzzer was off the mark.

The Bobcats, who finished the season with a 32-5 record, outrebounded Whitehouse 47-37. Bradford and Jeff Bell had 11 rebounds apiece for Dimmitt, and Veals grabbed 10. Dwight Pettigrew had 10 boards for the winners.

Slaton's Fems Triumph

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Cathy Wilson has been there before — twice as a matter of fact. And now she's returning again.

Her destination? Austin and the state girl's basketball tournament.

Miss Wilson, the first-year coach of the Slaton Tigerettes and the ex-mentor of the Nazareth Swifts — the defending class B champions — watched as her team overpowered the Dimmitt Bobbies 66-51 Saturday during the finals of the Region I Class AA tournament at the Lubbock Coliseum.

The win sends the ninth-ranked Tigerettes to the first round of the AA playoffs at the Super Drum on the campus of the University of Texas and Miss Wilson to her third consecutive state event.

Dimmitt, which saw its 20 game win streak snapped by the Tigerettes, ends the season with a 27-9 record. With the win, Slaton's won-loss mark stands at 22-5.

In the finals of the Class A regional, Vega used the 27-point performance of Tanya Hall to wade past Shallowater 55-45.

Because of her golden touch with fem basketball teams, Miss Wilson may soon change her name to King Midas. During her first two of years out of Wayland Baptist College, she guided the Nazareth Swifts to the state tourney twice, winning the coveted Lone Star title last year.

"I guess I just always been lucky to get a group of hustling girls to work with," Miss Wilson explained. "That's how its been this year."

That statement can be easily justified, too.

Slaton, which coasted through District 5-AA with a healthy 9-0 mark, grabbed a commanding 20-8 first-quarter lead. Despite the fact the Bobbies cut the SHS margin down to eight on three different occassions in the second-quarter, it was obvious the Dimmitt group was no match for the Tigerettes.

The Tigerettes, lead by all-tournament forwards Lynn Webb and Roxanne McDonald, built a lead 19 points (63-44) with 4:30 left in game and that proved more than Dimmitt could overtime, although the Bobbies did cut the margin to 12 (63-51) with a minute remaining.

Miss Webb led all scorers with 37 points (18 field goals and a free shot) and Miss Robinson had 18.

Dimmitt also placed a member of its forward unit on all-tourney team, Norma Sandoval. Despite leaving the game with what appeared to be an ankle injury, Miss Sandoval finished the contest with 18 points. The leading DHS scorer was Lori Dyer with 24.

Rounding out the Class AA elite squad were guards Cindy Gressett of Spearman and Debbie Bednary and Roxanne McDonald both of Slaton.

According to Miss Wilson, the win over the Bobbies capped an banner season for Slaton.

"This has really been an up and down year," she said. "We've been knocked around some, but we've always managed to come back and win."

The former Flying Queen, admitting she is becoming " a little spoiled with all

. . .Of Cups And Cover Boys

HOUSTON—WHEN TIME and space run short. . . It's a fan's game, too, is seems. Last weekend, when TCU played Arkansas in the Ozarks in the first round of the SWC tourney, Frog coach Tim Somerville didn't like an official's call and walked to the end of the bench in disgust and kicked a water cup. Well, a few minutes later, when he returned to his seat, there was a tap on his shoulder. He disregarded the first two taps, then finally turned around—to be greeted by a full cup of water thrown by a fan. But, justice triumphed, as Somerville wiped away the water and surprise, cops ushered the fan out of the arena. . .

While West Texas State gears up to search for a new basketball coach, other coaching positions are winding down. Arkansas aide Gene Keady, who came in with Eddie Sutton four years ago, is supposedly one of the two remaining in the race for the head job at Western Kentucky. Definite word may come this weekend. . . Remember those green jerseys the Irish unpacked and used in that devastation of Southern Cal last football season? Now, ND basketball caoch Digger Phelps is taking credit for suggesting the psychological boost to grid mentor Dan Devine. . .

WHILE THE SNOW is on the ground —well, in spots—it's time to think of baseball. And, if the Texas Rangers' additionaly seats aren't ready for the April 8 home opener, blame it on the snow and bad weather this winter. Arlington Stadium is getting 5,000 new seats on an upper deck, 400 chairs on the second level and 18 super boxes for the upper crust. Construction, although picking up with warmer weather, is still lagging. . .

Gerald Myers pulled Mike Russell with about a minute remaining Thursday night, to give a chance to salute him with a standing ovation. Then, it was announced he was one rebound shy of the tourney record (held by Raider Rick Bullock). Myers put his star back in, and his teammates tried their best to get him that 19th carom. Kent Williams put up a shot, trying to miss, but it went in. Then, freshman Ralph McPherson missed a free shot intentionally, to give Russell another opportunity. But, all efforts failed. Still, the 18 rebounds, 34 points, 12 of 13 free shots, a steal and one blocked shot will stand as one of the shiniest individual efforts in the three years of the tournament. . .

THE SWC TOURNAMENT is getting better, but it needs to give credit where credit is due. The PA man, Rice's Bill Whitmore, in trying to keep the fans' interest, would occasionally pitch in a bit of color, including the home towns of the players who scored or made an exceptional play. He did this until informed from someone within the SWC's top echelons to cut this out. Seems there were too many out-of-state players being mentioned and the SWC thought that didn't sound too good. Sound rather petty? . . .

Rumors popped up again this winter that Georgia Tech is interested in the seven-team Atlantic Coast Conference. But, seems as if this rumor surfaces every two or three years. The Wreck is in the Metro-7, which is not a football league, however. . . Word is that Phyllis George is getting out of the sports TV announcing business: she wants an challenge, possibly her own sitcom show. . .

MIGRATION EASTWARD continues. Brooks Tinsley, the ex-Tech grad and former A-J sports writer who now works the SWC office, will join ex-Tech sports tubthumper Ralph Carpenter at Ole Miss. . . Listening to radio broadcasts of the SWC tourney makes Lubbock fans appreciate the talents of Jack Dale. The SWC's arrangement to go to a central team for all tourney games doesn't seem like the answer. They may be good announcers, but . .

With a wealth of outstanding cagers in the state of Texas this year, Arkansas coaches may be spending quite a bit of time in such cities as Fort Worth, Corpus Christi and Tyler. There is only one outstanding prospect in the state of Arkansas, coaches feel. . .With the SWC coaches openly disgruntled with the league officials, there is talk making the rounds of bringing in refs from another conference —such as the WAC or SEC—for the tournament. The Atlantic Coast Conference went to such a plan this for its tournament. Such is the plan for football bowl games, as no league officials work a bowl in which one of its teams is competing. . .

Ali Says He Deserves Rematch

NEW YORK (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali went on national television Saturday to present his arguments why Leon Spinks, who beat Ali 17 days ago for the crown, should give him a rematch.

"I'm truly the No. 1 contender in the eyes of the world," declared Ali. "I'm deserving. The world is waiting for it. It's tradition — the first defense goes against the ex-champion. Leon Spinks should fight me."

Ali made his statement at a news conference that was televised as part of the CBS Sports Spectacular.

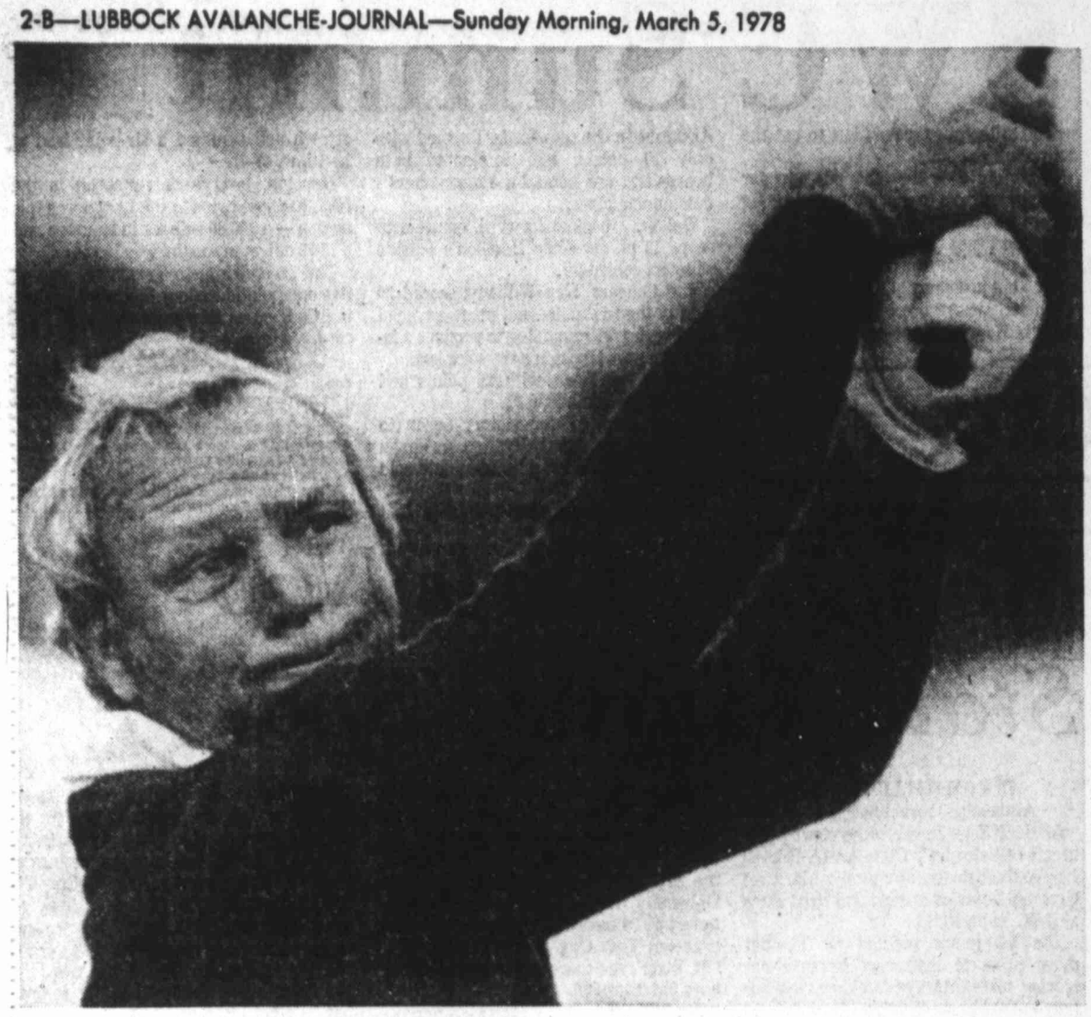

"There's been a lot of talk going on about who Leon Spinks, the new champion, should defend his title against, myself or Ken Norton," said Ali, beginning the news conference with a prepared statement.

"I'm not asking them to do more than I did myself," said Ali. "I fought Sonny Liston and immediately gave him a rematch to prove it was no fluke. It's only fair to give him a chance, since he gave me the chance. Leon Spinks should do the same.

"Mr. Ken Norton says he deserves the first shot, but I'm truly the No. 1 contender in the eyes of the people of the world. My mail is 10-1 in favor of Leon Spinks and myself getting together again.

"Mr. Norton is crying, saying he's being deprived. Twice my title was taken away unjustly. I didn't complain. So why is Ken Norton complaining? Who is more deserving of a shot at the world championship — Ken Norton or Muhammad Ali?"

Bob Arum of Top Rank, Inc., who has a contract to promote Spinks' next five bouts, has offered Norton $200,000 for Spinks' first title defense. Norton, after calling the offer "insulting," accepted the chance at the title.

HANGING ON—Arnold Palmer blasts one down the 10th fairway Saturday at the Citrus Open in Orlando, Fla. Palmer was one of three tied for the first round lead, but in Saturday's second round, he could do no better than a 73, and finished 4 shots off the pace at 138. (AP Laserphoto)

Two-Way Tie Develops; Arnie Tumbles Back

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Australian David Graham and Mac McLendon, tied for the second round lead in the rain-delayed $200,000 Florida Citrus Open golf tournament, agreed that the double-round, 36-hole windup scheduled for today is preferable to extending the event through another day.

"I like the 36 holes," McLendon said Saturday after a spectacular string of five birdies and an eagle in seven holes had produced a 65 — the best round of the cold, wet, windy day — and vaulted him into a tie for the lead at 134, 10 shots under par on the rain-drenched, 6,929 yard Rio Pinar Golf Club course.

"The first tournament I won, the Magnolia, was over 36 holes on the last day.

"It's hard on all of us, especially on a wet course, but it can work to your advantage."

The 31-year-old Graham was asked if the double-round finish, expected to take some nine hours, would place a greater burden on an older player.

"That depends," he grinned, "on whether you're asking me as a young player or an old player.

"I've won several tournaments: here, in Australia and in England, over 36 holes. I think we'd all rather play 36 than have to go to Monday. It's better for the sponsor to get the benefit of TV and it's better for the winner to win on TV. It's just better all the way around."

Graham, who hasn't made a bogey in the tournament, triggered his 4-under-par 68 with an eagle 3 on the 10th hole.

The gate was opened for their move into a share of the top spot when Arnold Palmer, tied for the lead before Friday's play was washed out by a violent thunderstorm, faltered slightly in the wet and chilly weather.

The 48-year-old Palmer, seeking his first American triumph in five long years, was one of three tied for the first round lead at 65. But, despite the urging of his heavily bundled gallery, he could do no better than a 73 — including a double bogey 5 on the eighth hole — and finished 4 shots off the pace at 138.

Tom Kite, who said the unpleasant conditions made the course play 2 or 3 shots harder than in Thursday's opening round, shot a 70 that left him 1 stroke off the pace at 135 and 21-year-old rookie Tim Simpson was next at 136 after a solid 68.

They were followed by Ben Crenshaw, J.C. Snead, Jerry Pate and Wally Armstrong at 137. Snead and Armstrong shot 67s, Crenshaw and Pate 69s.

RJC, Angelo Win Titles

Ben Omodiale paced Ranger to its fourth straight title in this event in the junior college division. His division record time of 47.0 seconds in the 440 knocked a full second off the old mark set by Ranger's Curtis Lenson in 1975.

Omodiale then anchored the Ranger mile relay team than finished first with a time of 3:21.3.

Chilly temperatures in the 40s hampered some performances but didn't stop Rickey Hayley of Tuloso-Midway from setting a new schoolboy mark in the pole vault.

San Angelo won the schoolboy division team title with a strong overall performance. The Bobcats' Neville Leverette gathered in 20 points to tie for top individual honors with Dan Pitts of Del Rio and Matt Harlien of Corpus Christi King.

Larry Sims of South Plains College was the top individual scorer in the junior college division with 26 points.

Ranger's strong performances in the running events helped it total 116 13 points to best runnerup Odessa College, which finished with 96 points. South Plains was third in the division with 94 1/3, followed by San Jacinto and Southwest Christian.

San Angelo amassed 63 points in the schoolboy division to lead Houston Madison with 56, Houston Washington with 42 and San Antonio Houston with 40.

Lubbock Splits Games With Midland High

MIDLAND (Special)—Lubbock High and Midland High split a baseball doubleheader Saturday, the Westerners winning the opener 11-7 and the Bulldogs taking the second game 7-6.

In the opener, Lubbock got two runs in the first three in the fourth and won the game with six in the fifth.

Their fifth-inning runs came on RBI-doubles by Terry Brady, Andy Vasquez and Noel Jaime and run-scoring singles by David Rush, Larry DeLeon and Ernest Day.

Abel Cardenas started and went all the way on the mound for Lubbock to get credit for the victory.

In the second game, Midland got six runs in the first three frames and then a fifth-inning run that accounted for its winning margin.

Rebels Down Mustang Nine

MIDLAND (Special) — Midland Lee handed the Coronado Mustangs back-to-back losses here Saturday in a pair of high school baseball encounters. LHS won the first game 7-6 and the second 11-1.

The two losses drops Coronado's season record to 1-2, while Lee remains unbeaten at 3-0.

In the opening game, Coronado jumped out to a 2-0 lead. However, Lee, behind the stout hitting of Steve Pitts, John White and Terry Willis, notched the score at 4-4 in the bottom of the third.

Lee scored three more runs in the fourth and then held on as countered with two scores in both the fifth and seventh innings.

Ricky Powell was saddled with the loss. Starter Craig Van Horn garnered the win, despite being relieved by Doug Schmidt in the fifth stanza.

Lee outhit Coronado 11-8. Both teams picked up errors each.

Lee notched six runs in the fourth inning and three more in the fifth to go along with a pair in the first stanza to roll past the Ponies in the second game of the double header.

Carolina Record Set, Again

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Buddy Baker became the 10th driver to break the old track record in qualifying for today's $145,000 Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race in sunshine after the snow and ice melted.

Baker, who was unable to qualify back on Thursday with the rest of the frontrunners because of a burnt valve in his Chevrolet's engine, topped the final group of qualifiers with a speed of 139.454 miles per hour around North Carolina Motor Speedway's 1.017-mile oval.

Neil Bonnett earned the pole position earlier with a record speed of 141.940 miles per hour. He was one of nine drivers that day to exceed the old record of 139.117 m.p.h., set two years ago by David Pearson.

Cold temperatures, improving track conditions and a new left side tire design were credited with the big jump in qualifying speeds.

Fifteen positions were decided Thursday, with the remaining 21 slots in the 36-car starting lineup up for grabs Saturday. A snow and ice storm early Friday scratched that day's scheduled activity.

"I was worried it might be too cold today for the track to dry, and that we might not get to qualify," said Baker after his run. "If we didn't get to run today, they (officials) would have started us at the back of the field, without a chance to check out our new engine.

"The problems seem to be all sorted out now, though. We're ready to race."

Officials had planned to assign starting berths for positions 16-36 if weather problems had persisted Saturday. A plan was devised to permit those who qualified too slow Thursday to make the top 15 to stand on their times. The remaining spots would have been drawn for or merely designated.

As it turned out, only four drivers, Ed Negre, Woody Fisher, Cecil Gordon and Frank Warren, elected to keep their Thursday speeds.

The forecast was for clear but cold weather to continue through today's race, which is scheduled for an 11 a.m. start.

Lotus Auto Nabs African Grand Prix

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Ronnie Peterson of Sweden slipped his Lotus Mark IV past Patrick Depaillier's faltering Elf Tyrrell-Ford three turns from the finish and won the South African Grand Prix Saturday.

Peterson, a 34-year-old veteran of more than 100 Grand Prix races, stole a seemingly certain victory from Depaillier when the Frenchman's car, holding a comfortable lead, developed fuel problems and the engine began cutting out.

Peterson passed Depaillier on a curve and screamed to the finish two-tenths of a second ahead.

The winning time for the 78-lap, 200-mile circuit was one hour, 42 minutes, 15.77 seconds, an average speed of 116.62 m.p.h.

John Watson of Ireland finished third in a Brabham-Alfa Romeo, followed by Alan Jones of Wales in a Saudi Williams, Jacques Lafitte in a Ligier Gitanes and Didier Pironi in an Elf Tyrrell.

The race was free of serious accidents or injuries, but it took a heavy toll of machines. Only 12 cars in a field of 26 finished.

Ricardo Patrese, a 23-year-old Italian driving a brand new Arrow-Ford, seized the lead on the 29th lap, built a sizable edge and blew his engine on the 63rd lap.

Jody Scheckter of South Africa, another early leader, dropped out with a stalled engine on Lap 58.

Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., was ahead early in the race and was near the front most of the way, but he ran out of fuel with only three laps to go, but he was able to coast to the finish line for seventh place.

However, he remained at the top of the 1978 Grand Prix point standings with 12, while Peterson moved into second with 11, followed by Lauda and DePaillier with 10 each.

BIATHLON WINNER

HOCHFILZEN, Austria (AP) — East German Frank Ullrich won the 10-kilometer biathlon world championship title Saturday, beating two other East Germans. Biathlon consists of cross-counry skiing and shooting. Bad shots mean additional cross-country laps.

Connors Heads To Finals

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Top seeded Jimmy Connors battled through a second set that saw six service breaks Saturday to defeat Jose Higueras 7-5, 6-3 in the semi-finals of the U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Connors will play the winner of a Saturday night semi-final match between seventh seed Sandy Mayer and Tim Gullikson.

Connors, who won this title three times between 1973 and 1975, took the first set after breaking Higueras in the 11th game when the Spaniard's forehand went long. He served out the set, smashing the ball for 40-30 and waiting for an error by Higueras to finish the game.

Higueras' weakness, however, was that he could not often get to the net against Connors.

"I went up three or four times, but I couldn't see the ball. It was so fast," Higueras said. The Spaniard had beaten Frew McMillan, countryman Manuel Orantes and John Boyd to attain the semi-finals.

Connors, who had never before encountered Higueras, was complimentary of his opponent.

"He played very well—a lot of good groundstrokes from the very beginning," Connors said.

"I lost my concentration a little bit when I had 3-0 (in the second set' on my ad and I had a double fault."

Higueras won that game for a service break, suffered another break by Connors in the next, then managed his second and final break for 2-4.

Both held serves in the next two games, before Connors served out the next set easily for the break.

DRIVING FOR THE BUCKET—Despite the tight defense by all-tournament guard Roxanne McDonald of Slaton, Dimmitt's Vicki Cleveland (10) attempts to drive for an easy layup during second quarter action at the Region I girls' tournament Saturday at the Lubbock Coliseum. the success", said she would make no predictions on the upcoming state meet which starts Thursday except "we'll give it our best shot."

Slaton outhit Dimmitt 32-21 from the field. However, the Bobbies were more proficient from the free throw line, outscoring SHS 9-2.

Despite the 38-point performance of Shallowater's Terri Stanton, the Mustangs could not overcome a 30-22 Longhorn-halftime lead during the finals of the Class A portion of the tourney.

Vega held a narrow 12-10 first-quarter lead and upped the margin 30-22 during the second quarter by outscoring Shallowater 18-12.

In the third quarter, Vega continued to roll as it outpointed the Mustangs 10-8. Both teams scored 10 points each during the final quarter.

Along with Miss Morris' stellar showing, Dawn Harwell, an all-tourney selectee, hit 18 points. Dawna Rea added 10. The trio were the only Longhorns that managed to hit the bucket.

Miss Stanton, also an all-tournament performer, canned 13 of Shallowater's 16 and 12-13 of the Mustang's free throws. Jamie Hart's four points also helped the Ponies, who finished with a 15-11 record.

Vega, which outhit Shallowater 20-16 from the field and 15-13 at the line, advances to the state meet with a 14-8 mark.

Also named to the Class A all-tournament team were guards Melanie Mason of Vega, Kay White of Phillips, and Cindy Jackson of Shallowater. Forwards honored were Debbie Smith of Hawley, along with Misses Stanton and Harwell.

Raiders' Pendleton Qualifies

Running in a meet at Middle Tennessee State, Pendleton placed fifth in the mile run, with a time of 4:05.1. The effort bettered his own outdoor mile mark of 4:0.51 established two years ago.

The qualifying standard for the NCAA indoor championships is 4:06. Tech now has two athletes who have qualified for the nationals, long jumper Jim McAndrew meeting the standard in winning the SWC title three weeks ago.

Pendleton has completed his outdoor track eligibility and has only this season of indoor competition.

Tech, Owls Split Two

HOUSTON (Special)—After dropping the opening game 2-1, Texas Tech rallied to defeat Rice 5-4 to gain a split of their Saturday doubleheader.

The set concluded an SWC-opening three-game series for both teams. Rice had won Friday's game 2-1.

Rice, however, came back with two runs in the fourth frame.

Later, Michalek scored when Tech leftfielder Larry Selby overthrew first base trying to pick off Grossman, who had made a wide turn around the bag.

Rice pitcher Allan Ramirez allowed just three hits and struck out 13 batters in winning his first game against two losses.

In the second game, Tech took a 1-0 lead in the first frame and stretched it to 2-0 in the second. In the first inning, Laughlin hit a sacrifice fly to score Vestal.

In the second inning, Brooks Wallace walked, Scott Leimgruber reached base on a fielder's choice, and both scored on a throwing error by Rice shortstop Mike McGee.

Rice tied the game with three runs in the bottom of the fourth, but Tech regained the lead with a run in the top of the fifth when Vestal walked and scored on two consecutive wild pitches.

The Owls tied it again in the bottom of the fifth, but the Raiders got their winning run in the eighth when Craig Noonan walked and later crossed the plate on Rice third baseman Robert deLeeuw's throwing error.

Tech is now 5-8 for the season and 1-2 in SWC action. Rice is 6-5 and 2-1.

Arkansas Nips Texas Twice

AUSTIN (AP) — Ted Wendlandt's wild pitch with the bases loaded in the 12th inning gave Arkansas a 2-1 Southwest Conference baseball victory Saturday over Texas.

Arkansas also won the first game by a 5-4 count. The games opened the conference season for both teams, who play again in a single game today.

Wendlant was relieving Ricky Wright.

Baylor Sweeps Two From SMU

WACO (AP) — First baseman Luke Prestridge doubled in two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday to give Baylor a come-from-behind, 5-4 victory over Southern Methodist. Baylor also won the first game 9-5.

Baylor had an easy time in the first game with junior Burl Coker going the distance in the 9-5 victory.

The Bears appeared to be in good shape in the nightcap with a 3-0 lead heading into the eighth inning. SMU, now 4-6 for the year, exploded for two runs in both the eighth and ninth innings. The big blow was a two-run triple by centerfielder Larry Long.

Cougs Top Ags In SWC Opener

BRYAN (UPI)—Senior righthander Billy Blum held Texas A&M to six hits Saturday, and Danny Lopez hit a three-run homer to lead the Houston Cougars to a 6-2 victory in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

Blum, who went the distance in picking up his third win of the year without a loss, held the Aggies scoreless until the ninth inning. A single by Gary Bryant, a triple by Mark Warriner and a single by Kyle Hawthorne pushed A&M's only two runs across the plate.

Pickings Slim In Agent Draft

By The Associated Press

The pickings appear slim in the National Basketball Association free agent market this summer, with only a handful of quality players likely to be switching teams.

Last year, Jamaal Wilkes, Truck Robinson and Bobby Dandridge were the top prizes from a free agent pool of more than 50 players. While Wilkes has been something of a disappointment to Los Angeles, Robinson leads the league in rebounding for New Orleans and Dandridge has solved Washington's long-standing problem at small forward.

This time around, between 30 and 40 players will have completed their contractual obligations at the end of the 1977-78 season. But most of them are bench-warmers, fringe players for whom free agency may well turn out to mean unemployment.

Among the best-known players eligible to switch teams this summer are Rick Barry of Golden State, John Havlicek of Boston, Earl Monroe of New York and Wes Unseld of Washington.

Those are pretty fancy names, but Havlicek has already announced his retirement and the others are highly paid but aging and not likely to switch teams this late in their careers.

Therefore, most of the attention will probably be focused upon players like Campy Russell of Cleveland, Dan Roundfield of Indiana, Scott Wedman of Kansas City and Marvin Webster of Seattle. All are young players who have not yet reached their peak and do not carry with them the reputation — or the salary — of a Barry or a Monroe.

Of those four, Roundfield is the most likely to switch because of Indiana's financial problems. Seattle will probably make an all-out effort to sign Webster, who in his first year with the Sonics has shown promise of becoming a dominating center. Kansas City and Cleveland, two of the season's bigger disappointments, will probably think twice before letting first-rate players like Russell or Wedman get away.

One thing to keep in mind regarding NBA free agents is that unlike baseball, the team that signs a player must pay compensation to his old team.

Pro Grid Hall Rates Top Signal Callers

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Otto Graham and Ken Stabler are the top two passers of all time, but when it comes to quantity in passing, Fran Tarkenton wins hands down, according to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Figures compiled following the 1977 National Football League season show Graham the lifetime leader in passing in professional football, with a point rating of 86.8.

Graham led the Cleveland Browns to 10 successive divisional or league championships between 1946 and 1955. The rankings are based on records from all major professional leagues, including the All-America Football Conference, which operated from 1946 to 1949.

If Graham's NFL record was considered alone, he would have been ranked 10th in the career ratings, with a 78.1 score, the Pro Football Hall of Fame said.

The hall rates players using a mathematical formula, based on quality of performance in percentage of pass completions, touchdown passes, interceptions and average yards for each attempt.

Stabler, of the Oakland Raiders and in his eighth professional season, is the NFL's career leader with an 83.6 score.

He jumped to the No. 2 spot on the all-time passing rankings in the first year he passed the 1,500-attempt mark necessary to qualify for consideration.

Tarkenton, the 17-year veteran who was injured in 1977 with the Minnesota Vikings, ranked 6th in the qualitative standards, with a rating of 81.5, behind Sonny Jurgenson of Washington, Len Dawson of Kansas City and Ken Anderson of Cincinnati.

But he surpassed everyone in passing totals in all four categories, with 5,895 attempts, 3,341 completions, 43,535 yards gained passing, and 317 touchdown passes.

Rounding out the top 20 were Roger Staubach, Dallas; Bart Starr, Green Bay; Johnny Unitas, Baltimore; Frank Ryan, Cleveland, tied with Bob Griese, Miami; Norm Van Brocklin, Philadelphia and Los Angeles; Sid Luckman, Chicago; Don Meredith, Dallas; Roman Gabriel, Los Angeles and Philadelphia; Y.A. Tittle, San Francisco and the New York Giants; Earl Morrall, Baltimore, New York Giants and Miami; Frank Albert, San Francisco; Greg Landry, Detroit; and Daryle Lamonica, Buffalo and Oakland.

Foreign Absentees On Masters List Mysterious

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Golf Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Two of the world's finest players, Graham Marsh and young Nick Faldo, are conspicious, unexplained and mysterious absentees from the list of foreign players invited to the Masters golf tournament in Augusta, Ga.

In the case of Marsh—a globe-trotting veteran with unimpeachable credentials—the lack of an invitation could help force him off the American pro golf tour.

"Actually, one of the principal reasons I came to America was to increase my chances of playing in the majors (the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA). Ironically, my chances are being cut down," the articulate veteran from Australia said earlier.

"I'd reached the point in my career where I figured I had to make a major attempt in the Big Four events. As a foreign player, I really had a chance to compete in only two of the Big Four, the British and the Masters.

"By coming to the States, I thought I'd double my chances. If you're not playing in the States, you're not going to be eligible for the PGA and there's two weeks of qualifying for the U.S. Open.

"But now, I find I'm not in the Masters. It's very disturbing."

The Masters' list of 11 foreign invitees was released Saturday. It includes Severiano Ballesteros, Antonio Garrido and Manuel Pinero of Spain; Tsuneyuki Nakajima, Jumbo Osaki and Isao Aoki of Japan; Gary Player and Bobby Cole of South Africa; David Graham of Australia; Peter Oosterhuis of England and British amateur champ A.P. McEvoy.

The Masters has a long-standing policy of not explaining or commenting on its foreign invitees. The tournament's announced policy is to invite foreign players who can provide the best competition for American stars. None of the invitees have records better than Marsh.

He joined the American tour last year as a 33-year-old rookie, won the prestigious Heritage Classic and more than $107,000 on the American tour. In addition, he won the rich Chunichi Crowns tournament in Japan, the Lancome Trophy outside Paris and, importantly, the World Match Play championship in suburban London, one of the world's top dozen tournaments.

In the Match Play, he won over a field that included Masters foreign invitees Oosterhuis, Graham, Ballesteros, Pinero, Player and Americans Tom Watson, Hubert Green, Lanny Wadkins, Hale Irwin and Ray Floyd.

Analysis

Overall, he won about $250,000 and could rank no worse than third in worldwide standings.

"Maybe there is some logical explanation but it does all seem a bit strange," he said.

"I've been at an overseas players' dinner at Augusta before when the late Clifford Roberts has stressed the importance of having the strongest possible foreign challenge to the Americans.

"Usually the best foreign players compete in the United States so logically you would think they would receive the first overseas invitations but it just does not work that way.

He shrugged.

"It's an incentive, anyway."

Faldo's crendentials aren't quite so gaudy, but are impressive.

The 20-year-old, probably the brightest prospect produced in Britain since Tony Jacklin, won two European titles and gained enormous respect for his performance in Britain's losing Ryder Cup matches against the United States.

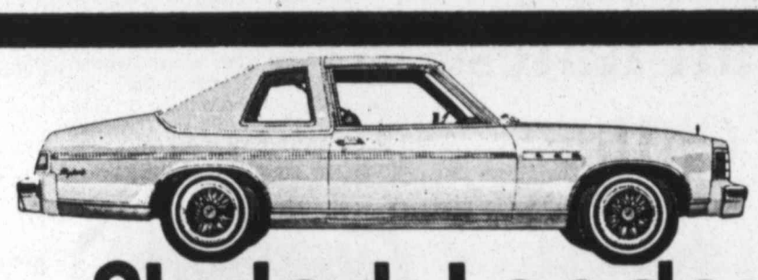

He paired with Oosterhuis for team victories over Jack Nicklaus and Floyd, over Floyd and Lou Graham and then, in singles, scored an upset 1-up victory over Player of the Year Tom Watson. It was, possibly, the brightest spot for British golf since Jacklin's 1970 U.S. Open triumph.

Queen Of Tennis Back

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The winds at Marina Bay whipped up gusts of 30 miles an hour, but they failed to ruffle the intent young lady in white.

Concentration seemed to ooze from every pore of Chris Evert.

She grooved her shots down the sidelines and drilled them to the deepest areas of the court. She came to the net, lunged to make a two-fisted backhand volley and put away an overhead smash.

"She's hitting the ball pretty well," said her father and coach, a gray-haired man in shorts who stood on the sidelines and retrieved balls. "But she's not tournament tough yet. You get tournament tough only in tournaments."

After a 3-month layoff, the first in her meteoric 7-year career, the queen of tennis is back.

She will return to competition in the Virginia Slims tournament at Boston March 13-19, then will play in Philadelphia March 20-26. Then there is a 2-week gap before she gets another shot at her adversaries in the Family Circle event at Sea Pines, S.C. — on her favorite surface, clay.

Chris hasn't lost a match on clay since 1973. During the span she has won 23 consecutive tournaments and 113 match victories. Although she curtailed her Virginia Slims tour activity this year, she has a lifetime won-lost record of 518-46 and a winning percentage of .918.

She has dominated the game since 1974, playing virtually 52 weeks a year.

"I had to take a break," the 23-year-old Fort Lauderdale miss said after a brisk 90-minute workout at a secluded private club near Fort Lauderdale's international airport.

"The rest was the best thing that ever happened to me. But I felt myself getting edgy, the old competitive urge coming back. I knew I had to get going again and this was the most appropriate time.

"After the Family Circle in April, I will concentrate on World Team Tennis — I've transferred to Los Angeles, you know — until Wimbledon time."

While Chris enjoyed her self-imposed holiday, she kept being confronted with unsettling reports in the daily newspapers. One of her chief rivals, Martina Navratilova, the Czech defector, had moved in to take over the women's tour.

Martina, 21, a strong left-hander, has won six tournaments, 30 matches in a row, beating all of the top lady competitors including Virginia Wade, Evonne Goolagong, Billie Jean King and Dianne Fromholtz.

"I hope too much is not expected of me at first," Chris said. "It takes time to get hardened to tournament play again. But I am working very hard and am eager."

She said she wasn't surprised at Miss Navratilova's sensational success in the early stages of the 1978 tour.

"Martina is very strong," she said. "Physically, she has it. All she has to do is put it together mentally. From what I read and hear, she perhaps has done this. She has settled down."

Miss Navratilova sprang into international prominence by scoring a victory over Chris in her first visit to this country at age 18. Later she sought political asylum and moved to Dallas.

Inclined to impatience and temper tantrums, Martina has not fared too well against Chris overall, winning only four times in 18 meetings. Chris has found Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong tougher opponents but she still holds an edge over these and all other rivals.

"Evonne has been having a lot of bad luck," Chris said. "First she had an attack of the flu and then suffered a foot injury here not long ago. We have had some close matches. I don't know how tough she will be now that she has come back."

Starting her break after the Wightman Cup matches last November, Chris said she hardly picked up a racquet for six weeks.

Doubles Players Plan Crusade

By The Associated Press

In the days of big-money big-name tennis that has made superstars of its players, a handful of pros still earn their living playing doubles, the fast-paced game that nets them only a fraction what the singles players reap.

Bob Hewitt, who with South African countryman Frew McMillan forms the world's leading doubles team, is on a crusade to upgrade the lot of the hard-working doubles player.

It's really out of our hands," he says. "I think that's wrong."

But the issue boils down to more than earnings. You might say the doubles dilemma is a complicated one of love and money.

Doubles play gets only a tiny fraction of the attention singles action draws. The doubles finals and semifinals are usually scheduled last in a tournament—thus very late in the day.

The press traditionally devotes little coverage to doubles.

"The public is being hoodwinked that they should go and see Jimmy Connors play in the singles," Hewitt said.

Plainly, doubles players don't feel appreciated.

Currently, in most tournaments, the prize money distribution is 80 percent for the singles draw and 20 percent for the doubles competition. Recently, the Professional Tennis Council, made up of player representatives, tournament directors and representatives of tennis associations from different countries considered changing the distribution to 85-15.

"What right do three ILTF (International Lawn Tennis Federation) members and three tournament directors have to tell me how much I can make from playing tennis?" says an angry Hewitt, who earned $219,163 last year playing in 34 tournaments. About $50,000 of that was from singles play. Another $85,000 was a bonus for winning the most points in the Grand Prix circuit standings for doubles. So he made about $85,000-$90,000 in regular tournament doubles prizes.

On the other hand, Jimmy Connors, who never plays doubles, earned $428,919 last year in just 15 tournaments. That includes the $100,000 first prize he netted in the Grand Prix Masters tournament in January.

Hewitt says he took a survey of about 60 players last September that indicated 40 percent of those players favored a prize distribution of 65-35 percent, 20 percent favored 60-45, 20 wanted 70-30 and 20 preferred 75-25. "Not one player signed for 80-20," he said.

"What is wrong with making some superstars out of doubles players," says Hewitt.

Bob Briner, executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals, the organization that represents player interests, says that group is trying to turn the heads of tournament directors.

But, he insists, people staging tournaments believe the way to make money is by promoting the singles stars. "We're trying to make them understand that doubles is an important part of the game," says Briner, also a member of the Professional Tennis Council.

No had data is available — in other words, no one has attempted to collect it — regarding spectator preference, whether the fans want to see more doubles, whether they like what they're seeing now or even understand it.

"Many, many fans come to see the singles, then stay to watch the doubles and they really enjoy it."

"And it's not all that difficult to understand," Hewitt said, "and it's more exciting...the emphasis is not on running the ball down. It's on quick reflexes, quick recoveries and eye-hand coordination. Some of the most exciting matches in tennis are in doubles."

And to the criticism doubles does not attract fans, Hewitt said, "Listen, buddy, when you got to the club, what do you play? They (many recreational players) can relate to a doubles player in a way they cannot relate to a singles match."

Kentucky Routs Rebels

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Rick Robey scored 26 points and Jack Givens added 22 as top-ranked Kentucky used a 9-0 run midway through the second half to begin a 92-70 rout of Nevada-Las Vegas Saturday afternoon.

Kentucky's deciding burst came with 6:15 remaining in the nationally televised game when two Givens free throws gave Kentucky a 72-62 lead. The Cats ran off the next seven points, opening a 79-62 lead with 4:27 left, breaking the backs of a Las Vegas team that stayed close in the first half on the outside shooting of Tony Smith, who led all scorers with 29 points.

The victory lifted Kentucky to 24-2 and dropped UNLV to 20-8.

Kentucky opened a 29-20 lead with 7:44 remaining in the first half, when Smith went to work.

He scored on a pair of free throws, Reggie Theus and Jackie Robinson scored consecutive baskets, and Smith's corner jumper made it 29-28 at 5:50.

'Richest' NCAA Field Expected

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Following an all-day, closed-door meeting, the Division I Basketball Committee will announce the brackets and at-large teams today for the 1978 NCAA basketball tournament, expected to be the richest ever.

Television cameras were set to record the 2 p.m. CST announcement at NCAA headquarters and NBC planned to air the proceedings during halftime of the nationally televised UCLA-Michigan game.

UCLA, Big 10 champ Michigan State, Kentucky and San Francisco were among the few teams asssured of invitations prior to the Saturday night championship finals of a host of post-season conference tournaments.

Automatic invitations will go to the winners of the Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Missouri Valley, Ohio Valley, Southwest, Southern, Metro 7 and East Coast and Pacific Coast Athletic conference tournaments, all scheduled to conclude Saturday night.

The three Eastern College Athletic Conference regional champions will be seeded as at-large teams, leaving 11 at-large invitations for the committee to extend.

Among the independents, the most likely candidates included defending champion Marquette, the top-ranked independent; DePaul, Detroit, Illinois State and Notre Dame.

The committee, chaired by Big 10 Commissioner Wayne Duke, was also expected to take second teams from several conferences — depending on the outcome of the post-season tournaments.

The Atlantic Coast Conference, with North Carolina and Duke, seemed likely to field two tournament entries, along with the Southwest Conference, where Texas and Arkansas tied for the championship and Houston counted five one-point setbacks among its losses. Should any highly ranked conference champions stumble in post-season affairs, such as No. 5 Kansas, they would join the ranks of at-large contenders.

The 1977 tournament resulted in a payoff of more than $35,000 for every qualifier and the championship netted Marquette more than $312,000, plus expenses.

"We expect the revenue to be substantially increased for this year's tournament because of increased television coverage," said an NCAA spokesman. "It's impossible to say right now how much."

This will also be the first year any kind of seeding arrangement has been used. Four at-large teams will be picked for each of the four eight-team regional playoffs and they will be seeded against the region's four conference qualifiers. Conferences have been seeded based on their won-loss record in tournament competition the past five years and independents on their season performances.

Teams from the same conferences will be seeded in opposite brackets, assuring that they will not meet until the championship finals in St. Louis March 27.

Oklahoma Blanks Raider Netters

Oklahoma crushed Texas Tech 9-0 in a dual tennis match Friday night. The match was what was left of an invitational, round-robin tournament which was altered when the University of New Mexico's team pulled out.

The closest match came in singles, where Tech's Davis Crissey lost the tiebreaker in the first set, took the second 7-6 and dropped a 6-4 verdict in the deciding set.

Wheatley Tops Fox Tech 84-83

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston Wheatley's swarming defense forced 34 turnovers, and Gilbert Thomas hit three clutch shots as Wheatley edged San Antonio Fox Tech, 84-83, in overtime Saturday for the Class AAAA schoolboy basketball championship.

It was Wheatley's fifth title — a record for AAAA teams — but it needed a crucial official's call to hold off Tech.

Melvin White of Tech grabbed a rebound and pushed in a field goal to give Tech an apparent 80-78 victory in regulation play, but an official signaled without hesitation that time had expired.

Thomas had tied the game 78-78 on an 18-foot jumper with 21 seconds left.

In the three-minute overtime White tossed in a short jumper for an 83-82 lead as he was almost knocked off his feet by Ron Flournoy of Wheatley. White missed the followup free throw, however, and Wendell Woodard fouled Thomas as they both went for the rebound.

Thomas quieted the boos of the Tech fans in the near-record crowd of 12,500 by tossing in two free throws.

Only a crowd of approximately 13,000 that watched Wheatley and Houston Worthing at Hofheinz Pavilion in 1973 was thought to be larger for a high school game in Texas.

CLASS AAA

HUNTSVILLE 55, MINERAL WELLS 49

In the biggest point spread of the five state title games, Huntsville won the championship by defeating top-ranked Mineral Wells, 55-49.

Mineral Wells cut a 42-32 deficit to 48-47 with 1:37 remaining, but Melvin Ray missed a field goal and De Artis Nickerson missed two free throws to allow Huntsville to pull away.

It was Huntsville's 19th consecutive victory and broke Mineral Wells' 21-game winning streak.

Royce Craft, a 1977 all-tournament player, scored 14 for Huntsville, including two slam dunks, and Curtis Wallace and Edgar Crawford each had 13.

Class B

Krum 69, Avinger 68

Krum nipped defending champion Avinger, 69-68, in the Class B finals on Keith Copp's free throw with one second remaining, after a time out by Avinger Coach David Murphy had cost his team two points.

In hitting his charity toss, Copp redeemed himself for fouling Anthony Hatten, who had tied the score at 68-68 on two free throws with 16 seconds left.

A Hatten field goal with 31 seconds remaining did not count, however, as Murphy frantically signaled time out just before the shot was launched. He shook his head in disgust as Hatten's jumper popped through.

Jimmy Powell led Avinger with 24 points, including 10 of 10 free throws, but it was his fifth foul that sent Copp to the line for the climatic free throw.

Chuck Hall, a two-time all-tournament player, scored 25 for Krum and Copp had 19.

Krum, a North Texas team, also won the title in 1971 and was runnerup in 1956 and 1967. It finished with a 40-3 record. Avinger, from northeast Texas, had a 38-3 record.

Class A

Snook 63, Coppell 62

In the fourth championship game decided by one point, with the winning score again coming on a free throw, Snook squeezed past Coppell 63-62 for the Class A title.

It was Snook's fourth championship and tied the record for the most crowns by a Class A team. Snook's other three championships, however, came in Class B before it moved up into the higher classification.

B.J. Heil swished a free throw with 11 seconds remaining to give Snook its first title since 1969.

Coppell quickly brought the ball downcourt, but John Talley's pass went through the hands of Weldon Hamm, who was within five feet of the basket.

Nazareth Girls Bop Groom In B Final

LEVELLAND (Special)— Nazareth disposed of its competition for the Region I Class B basketball champsionship Friday, then enjoyed all the action Saturday.

Thus, the Swiftettes will return to Austin next weekend to try to defend their state championship.

Saturday, Nazareth chopped down Follett 76-64 in the semifinals and disposed of Groom 75-60 in the night finals. And, it was Cheryl Hartman who destroyed Groom, as she scored a whopping 51 points in the title game.

What made it all possible, however, was the Swiftettes' 60-59, come-from-behind win over Eola in Friday's opening round which permitted their return to Austin.

Nazareth held only a 20-18 lead after a quarter Saturday night, but by halftime, the Swiftettes had pulled away to a 40-31 advantage. And the Groom girls were unable to come back.

In addition to Miss Hartman's total, Karen Schulte tossed in 15 points. Connie Dean netted 31 points for Groom.

Nazareth will take a 35-4 record to the state meet, and Groom closed out with a 31-7 recorecord. Sands' final record was 32-4, and Follett finished 25-9.

Walton Needs Foot Surgery

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton, star center of the Portland Trail Blazers, will undergo an operation on his right foot today that may keep him out of National Basketball Association action for three weeks.

John White, a spokesman for the NBA champions, said Saturday that Dr. Robert Cook, the team physician, would perform the operation this morning at Willamette Falls Hospital in nearby Oregon City.

He said Walton, who has missed the Blazers' last few games with a sore leg and a sprained ankle, is suffering as well from an ailment called interdigital neuroma.

Ron Culp, the team trainer, explained the ailment as "a form of pressure on the nerves in the foot in the area of the toes. They have to relieve the pressure surgically so the foot will function normally again."

He said Walton would be out of action one to three weeks after the operation.

Walton sat on the bench in street clothes, looking disconsolate, as the Blazers beat Cleveland 105-100 Saturday afternoon in Portland.

Asked how his foot felt, he replied, "No good."

Walton has missed four of the Blazers' 62 games this season because of injuries. The team has a 51-11 record, best in the NBA.

During his other three years of playing with the Blazers, of the 82 games each season, he missed 35 the first year, 51 the second year and 65 last year.

Matadors Cop First

Led by the performances of Danny Grace and Jamie Woods in the boy's division and Tracy Lacewell and Kim Reid in the girl's category, the Flying Matadors captured first place at an all-age gymnastics meet Saturday.

Idalou finished second and the Jumping Jacks of Slaton and Southland were third.

SE Texas Pheasant Hunt Improves

AUSTIN (Special)—Despite terrible weather conditions, hunter participation and success during the nine-day pheasant hunting season held in January in Jefferson, Liberty and Matagorda counties improved over last year's initial season.

In Jefferson and Liberty counties, 662 hunters bagged an estimated 686 cock pheasants, according to Parks & Wildlife Department biologist David Mabie.

Mabie judged the hunter success "pretty good" considering the prohibitive hunting conditions and the fact that many hunters were still learning techniques for taking pheasants in Southeast Texas.

In Matagorda County, approximately 275 hunters took an estimated 305 cocks from the 55,000 acres of the county open to hunting.

For next season, biologists are proposing the hunt be held in November, when more birds will be available, so hunters will be able to take advantage of generally better hunting weather. Also, it is proposed that the hunt area be expanded to include a portion of Wharton County, Reid said.

Duke, Others Lock Up NCAA Playoff Berths

By The Associated Press

Duke won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship Saturday and clinched one of several berths that were locked up in the NCAA basketball playoffs.

New Mexico, La Salle, St. John's, St. Bonaventure and Rhode Island also won and advanced to first-round games of the prestigious post-season tournament.

The 15th-ranked Blue Devils defeated Wake Forest 85-77 in the finals of the ACC playoffs to move into the NCAA's East regionals, which start first-round action next Sunday at Charlotte, N.C.

New Mexico, the nation's No. 8 team, clinched the Western Athletic Conference with a 93-74 victory over Wyoming and advanced to the West regionals starting Saturday at Tempe, Ariz. La Salle nailed down an at-large berth in the East regionals by winning the East Coast Conference playoffs with a 73-72 decision over Temple.

St. John's, St. Bonaventure and Rhode Island also won at-large berths with triumphs in various divisions of the ECAC playoffs, but their NCAA regional assignments are still to be determined.

St. John's took the ECAC's Metropolitan region by edging Army 65-63; St. Bonaventure topped Virginia Commonwealth 63-61 in the ECAC's Upstate New York-Southern division and Rhode Island upset 18th-ranked Providence 65-62 in the New England region.

Center Mike Gminski scored 25 points and freshman Eugene Banks had 22 as Duke earned its first ACC basketball championship since 1966. Duke trailed by five points at the half but fought back to take the lead for good at 47-46 with 16:46 remaining when Banks made two baskets from inside.

The Blue Devils then outscored Wake Forest 12-2, with eight of the points by Banks, to lead 55-48 with 14:33 left. Wake Forest's Rod Griffin led the Deacons with 25 points despite missing several minutes of action after taking a hard fall in the second half.

New Mexico crushed Wyoming behind the 32-point scoring of Marvin Johnson. The Lobos recorded the best league record in the 15-year history of the WAC with a 13-1 mark. Their overall regular season mark of 24-3 was the best in the history of the school.

Johnson, who scored a conference record 50 points against Colorado State Thursday night, came back with another fine performance in Saturday's regionally televised game before a standing room crowd of 18,382.

Darryl Gladden's 25-foot jumper with two seconds to play boosted La Salle over Temple. Wayne McKoy scored 14 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead St. John's past Army.

Wayland Drubs Texas; Tech Falls To SFA

SAN ANGELO (Special)—Top-seeded Wayland Baptist College smashed Texas 98-76 Saturday night to win the Texas AIAW state championship and qualify for the regional round to be held Thursday throgh Saturday.

Texas Tech fell to Stephen F. Austin 79-64 in the third-place game but still qualified for the regionals. The top four teams here will advance in the regionals.

Wayland, 27-3, got 25 points from Jill Rankin while Marie Kocurek and Valarie Goodwin had 14 each, and Breena Caldwell had 12.

Texas, 23-7, was led by Kim Basinger's 20 points, and Cathy Burns added 13.

The Flying Queens led 47-35 at halftime and had a 30-point lead at one juncture in the second half. This was the third win of the season for the Flying Queens over Texas.

Kathy Thomas poured in 24 points, and Barb Brown added 20 in leading Stephen F. Austin to its win over Texas Tech.

SFA opened a 41-33 halftime lead and then was able to control the game the rest of the way.

Marilyn Payton paced the Tech scoring with 16 points. Cheryl Greer and D'Lynn Brown had 11 each. Rosemary Scott contributed 10.

Stocking Job Completed

A Parks and Wildlife Department project to stock the Lubbock lakes with fish was completed last week when a large number of largemouth bass were placed in the lakes.

Joe Kraii, a fishery biologist from Canyon, said, "This release will virtually finish up the stocking of these lakes for several years. We got the channel cat, sunfish, and forage base in last year."

"It's estimated that approximately 20 bass per acre are being released in these lakes," stated Bill Provine, a fishery biologist regional supervisor from San Angelo. The number of fish per acre is considered to be a heavy stocking for the lakes.

Most of the fish released were between 7 to 11 inches in length. Some of the smaller bass should easily reach a length of 10 inches by July of this year.

Kraii added, "These fish should spawn this year and that will establish the bass population for several years to come. Area residents will soon find some really good fishing in these lakes."

In the months to come, the fishery project will include an evaluation of the underwater tire shelters for fish by TP &WD.

P&WD Notes

AUSTIN (Special) — All shad aren't bad.

Fishermen describe this freshwater fish in uncomplimentary terms ordinarily reserved for carp, buffalo, gar and other "rough' fish. Actually, shad don't deserve this poor public image.

Fishermen often blame poor fishing on excessive populations of shad, but biologists believe that shad are a vital part of the predator-prey relationship in most Texas reservoirs, and high shad populations are not necessarily indicative of poor fishing or low gamefish production.

The gizzard shad is the most common type in Texas waters and is an important food fish for native crappie, black bass and white bass, and for the newer exotic species such as striped bass and walleye, according to the Parks and Wildlife Department. The trouble with gizzard shad is that they sometimes grow too large (reaching 16 inches in length in some lakes) to be eaten by smaller gamefish.

The other major variety of shad, however, seldom exceeds 5 inches in length. This feature makes the threadfin shad valuable forage fish throughout its life cycle. Threadfins also may spawn when less than one year old, and often have two spawning peaks in a year—spring and fall. This also enchances their value as a year-round forage species for gamefish.

The department does not propagate threadfin shad for stocking, but the fish have been placed experimentally in several lakes which were lacking in forage species. In some game fish production increased dramatically after the threadfin populations reached their potential.

AUSTIN (Special)—Parks & Wildlife Department officials will begin this month interviewing fishermen at 12 lakes as the first step in a comprehensive creel survey to determine trends in catch rates, pressure, and harvest of sport fish.

Lakes chosen for the survey's initial phase are Meredith, Fort Phantom Hill, Nasworthy, Corpus Christi, Garza-Little Elm, Whitney, Canyon, Athens, Welsh (Swauano Creek), Fairfield, Steinhagen (Dam B), and Somerville.

Motorists Warned About Deer

By J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Dept.

BIG SPRING—Investigations by Texas game wardens have verified that all of the dead deer found along the major highways in the Big Spring-Sterling City region is the direct result of confrontations between vehicles and the feeding animals.

"What little rain and snow we have received in the Big Spring vicinity has furnished just enough moisture to green the winter grasses growing along the roads, and the deer are finding easier pickings outside the ranchland fences," said local game warden Roger Carlile.

"Many of these deer are killed by trucks, but a few hit by passing cars and normally the driver reports the accident due to vehicle damage," Carlile added.

If a deer is hit by any driver, the Parks & Wildlife Department should be notified, and this can be done by calling the nearest law enforcement office of the sheriff, Department of Public Safety, local police department or nearest game warden.

Motorists are advised to drive at the legal speed of 55 miles per hour and if deer are spotted along the roadway, dim the headlights and blow the horn. The driver should also watch for more than one deer as many motorists hit the second or third animal running across the highway.

Outdoors

You Won't Believe This

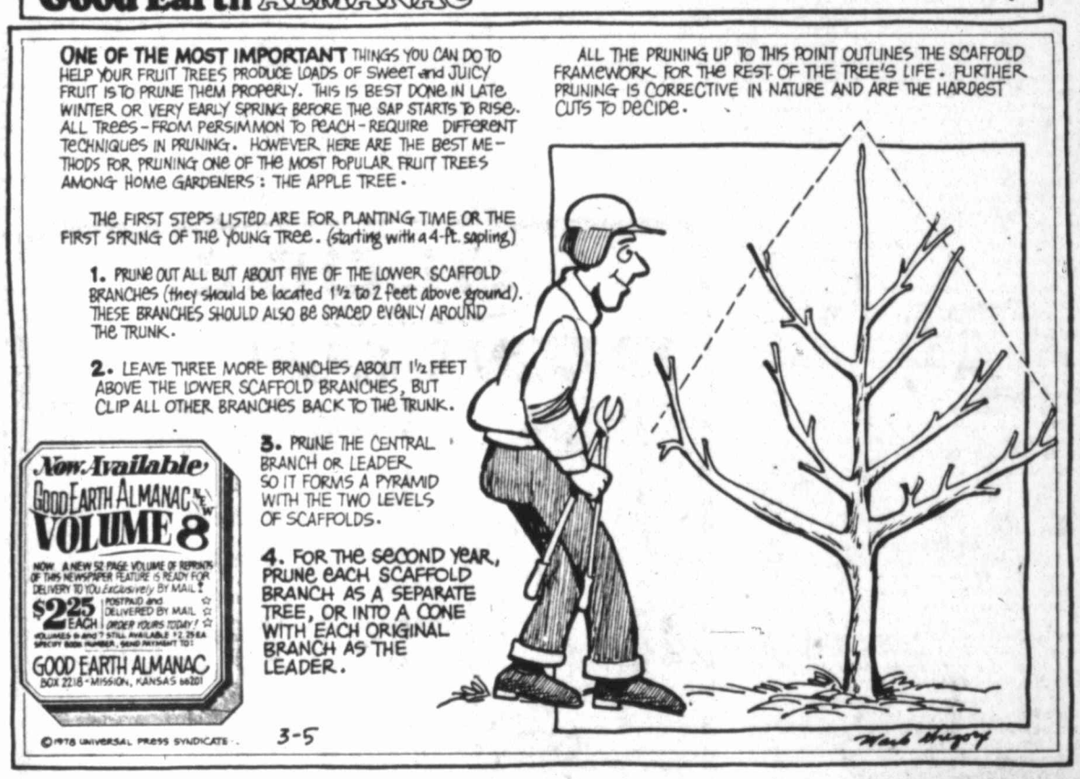

AUSTIN (Special)—You've heard of the "wolf at your door," but probably never a vulture.

Parks & Wildlife Department nongame biologist John Smith recently received a call from a Rockport man who had a problem. A black vulture was trying to force its way into his house.

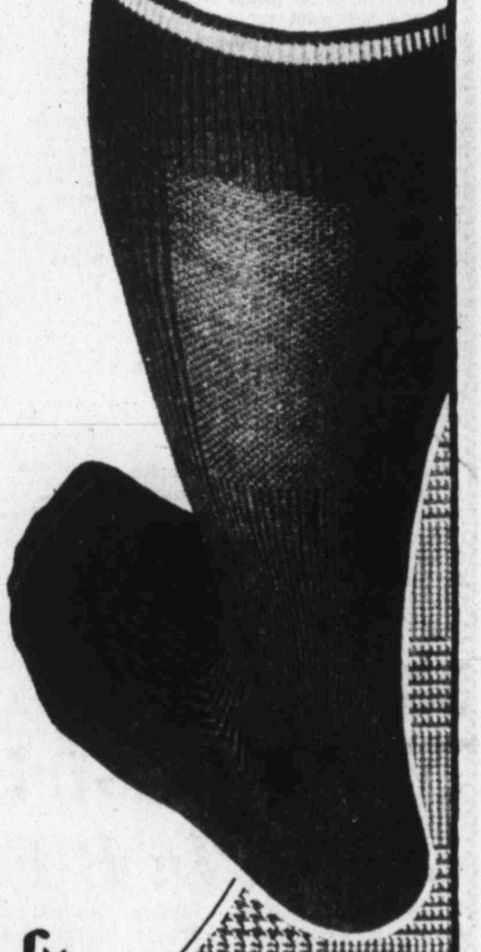

Smith answered the call and sure enough there was a vulture waiting at the front door. It wanted in, but it avoided capture. The home owner decided to lure the bird by putting a dish of hamburger meat on the kitchen table and opening the door. The vulture went for the hamburger and Smith grabbed it.

The vulture—which must have been someone's abandoned pet—was taken several miles away and released.

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake—A worse-than-usual winter has kept most area anglers at home or in the crappie house. But, pike fishing can offer some action this time of the year. Barnie Greenfield at the concession suggests that anglers who want to try for pike should head for the deep water around the cattails or the dam. The water 25 to 30 feet below the surface is warmer and a favorite depth for pike as well as bass during cold weather. Large minnows are good bait for the pike at that depth. Nice strings of crappie continue to be taken from inside and around the crappie house. The lake is in good condition.

Lake Colorado City—The fish are biting! A few days of warm weather improved the fishing as Frank Hernandez of Odessa brought in a 12-pound yellow catfish, L.T. Derrington caught a 6-pound bass, and Tom Crouch landed four Nile perch. Crouch also managed to pull in 14 bass, the biggest weighing 6½, 6 and 5½ pounds. Odessa anglers were well represented. Leroy Hollman caught 30 good sized crappie on minnows at the Fisharama, and Hoppy Pearce brought in two black bass, several white bass, a good string of crappie and 60 perch. Anglers report seeing plenty of white and black bass in the shallow water on calm days. The lake is in good condition.

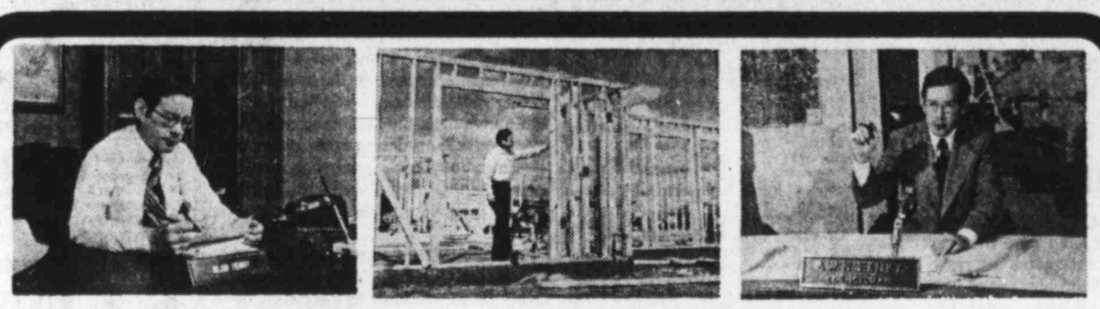

Oak Creek Lake—The crappie fishermen are fairing better than the bass anglers. Most of the bigger fish of all species are being caught in the warm water area. Ike Pate at Sportsman's Lodge reports, "The big crappie are just not in this deep water at the present time. We think the upper ends of the creeks are the better places to look." Terry Boley of Sweetwater landed a bass weighing 7 pounds 4 ounces. The fish rated third at the time it was caught during the statewide Big Bass of the Month (February) contest.

White River Lake—"The fishing last week was great!" exclaimed Mrs. Eloise Yeager at the marina. James Lee of Lubbock used a combination of shrimp and worms for bait to take home a good string of channel catfish. Ronny Howard of Slaton brought in a 3-pound 2-ounce bass from the mouth of White River while using a black jig and eel. George Dalton of Wolfforth tried the east side of the lake and landed a 4¼-pound lunker. Dalton's big bass of the week was taken with a Little N lure. A 3¼-pound bass was attracted with live minnor bait by Tiny Wallace of Crosbyton. Buckets of small crappie continue to be taken from the crappie house. With a surface temperature of 33 degrees and no ice, the lake is in good condition.

Place 1 on the City Council is the most important position on the Council next to that of the mayor. Place 1 carries with it the responsibility of Mayor Pro Tem which means the person serving in that capacity should have experience and an in-depth knowledge of city government. Alan Henry has served on the City Council for the past 4 years. His record of service is impeccable. He's stressed zero based budgeting while supporting adequate funding for vital city services. Alan Henry has helped YOU receive full value for every tax dollar spent.
As a member of City Council, Alan Henry has helped establish a climate of growth and economic stability. Our economy has never been better. It takes responsive city leadership to continue the progress that Lubbock has made during the past 4 years.
Alan is working to assure future generations of Lubbock citizens an adequate water supply. Thanks to a hard working City Council and staff, negotiations are now in progress on several fronts to acquire badly needed water sources. Alan understands these negotiations and has the background to complete them in a way that will be most beneficial to Lubbock.

FARM MACHINERY AUCTION
WEDNESDAY MARCH 8, 1978
10:00 A.M.
Highway 75 South Howe, Texas, 75059

We have just had our special February sale which turned out to be a real success. The machinery market was very active and with the break in the weather we are expecting even bigger things in the coming sales.

We at Catching Bros. Auctions have always strived to make this the market place in the Southwest for good clean farm machinery. Buyers and sellers from all parts of the U.S. depend on Catching Bros. marketing skills.

With spring just around the corner it is time to check your inventory and or farming needs, as you will always find all good clean selection of tractors and field equipment at our sales.

Do you have equipment you no longer need in your farm operation? You can turn it into cash at C.B.A.

Watch for our on site auctions coming soon.

We take house calls.

Plains National Bank's Mortgage Loan Department still takes house calls. And we get lots of them: regular Plains customers calling to ask for current rates on new homes; young families in Lubbock calling to check on credit requirements to own rather than rent; newcomers to the South Plains calling to inquire about neighborhoods, builders and schools.

Most everyone who calls tells us that there are many advantages to having your home loan where you bank.

There are several good mortgage lenders in Lubbock. But there's only one Plains National. We're right in the middle of Lubbock — and we welcome house calls.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
CDWO 7714

Sealed bids will be received by the City of Lubbock at the Office of the Purchasing Agent, Room 103, City Hall, Lubbock, Texas, until 2:00 P.M. March 15, 1978, for furnishing and installing well collector lines in the Sandhills Well Field consisting of approximately 6,900 feet of 4 inch pipe, 2,300 feet of 10 inch pipe, 950 feet of 12 inch pipe and 2,700 feet of 14 inch pipe together with necessary valves, fittings and appurtenances.

The City Council will consider the bids on March 23, 1978, subject to the right to reject any or all Bids and waive any formalities. Bidders are required to submit a cashier's or certified check or Bid Bond in the amount of 5% of the total bid and the successful Bidder shall provide Bond in the full amount of the contract price executed by a Surety Company authorized to do business in Texas.

Bids without required check or Bid Bond will not be considered.

By: Floyd P. Nesbitt
Purchasing Agent

"Sealed Proposals addressed to Mr. Ralph Williams, President, Board of Trustees, Klondike Consolidated Independent School District, Dawson County, Texas, shall be received in the library, located in the High School Building, Klondike Consolidated Independent School District, Dawson County, Texas until 7:30 p.m., Monday, March 13, 1978, at which time they will be publicly opened and read aloud, for the furnishing of all labor, materials and performing all work required for the replacement of the gymnasium floor for the gymnasium located at the Klondike High School and for the furnishing of all labor, materials and performing of all work required for the replacement of roofs on existing school buildings for the Klondike Consolidated Independent School District Dawson County, Texas in accordance with Plans, Specifications and Contract Documents as prepared by Huckabee and Donham, Architects and Planners, Andrews, Texas. Lump sum Proposals will be received for each of the General Constructions. A Cashier's Check, Certified Check or acceptable Bidder's Bond Payable to the Klondike Consolidated Independent School District in the amount of not less than 5% of the largest possible total for the bid submitted must accompany each bid. Attention is called to the fact that the contractor must comply with all Federal, State and Local Labor Laws. The successful bidder will be required to enter into a contract with the Klondike Consolidated Independent School District, Dawson County, Texas, and furnish a Performance and Payment Bond in the amount of not less than 100% of the contract price, conditioned upon the performance of the contract. Attention is called to the fact that the Owner is exempt from the payment of the State Sales Tax normally levied against material costs. In order to take advantage of this exemption, materials and labor costs must be identified by the successful bidder. In developing this division of labor and material costs, the bidders are cautioned to include all costs and allowances not representing direct material costs with labor. The contract sum, as identified by the Base Bid shall not include any allowance for the payment of State Sales Tax on materials required to complete the work. The successful bidder, upon award of the contract, will be furnished with a permit number which will enable him to purchase the required materials without payment of such taxes. Specifications and Plans may be obtained from the Architect in accordance with the stipulations set forth under Deposits and Refunds. The bidder acknowledges the right of the Owner to reject any or all bids and to waive any informality or irregularity in any bid received. In addition, the bidder recognizes the right of the owner to reject a bid if the bidder failed to furnish any required bid security, or to submit the data required by the bidding documents, or if the bid is in any way incomplete or irregular.

World Marts Shaky

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sinking overseas value of the dollar threatens to worsen U.S. inflation and high-ranking government officials say there may not be much that can be done about it.

Further, if the dollar's slide on international money markets continues, it could undermine economies throughout the world, slowing trade and adding to global unemployment, in the view of one government monetary expert.

For American consumers there will be obvious effects from the dollar's ailments. For instance, the drop in the dollar against a particular currency means imports from that country, such as auto and electronic imports from Japan, will be more expensive.

Tourists from Japan, Switzerland and Germany will find travel in the United States much cheaper this year because their money will be worth more U.S. dollars, while the opposite will be true for Americans abroad. U.S. servicemen in Germany say the decline in purchasing power of military paychecks is pushing them into near poverty.

The Carter administration and the Federal Reserve Board have been making a concerted effort to halt the slide in the dollar in recent weeks without pressing the panic button.

Although the dollar rebounded somewhat on Thursday and Friday, it had fallen steeply during the previous two weeks, despite the government's efforts, and there is apparently no reason for confidence that the slide won't continue.

In the past 12 months, the dollar has lost 15 percent in value against the German mark, nearly 27 percent against the Swiss franc, and 15.5 percent against the Japanese yen. It slipped briefly below the psychological barrier of two marks to the dollar last week, although it closed the week at 2.02 marks.

But it is only in the past weeks that the administration has become alarmed as the plunge has become steeper. The government has stepped up its purchase of dollars in currency markets to counter what it considers "disorderly market conditions."

While increased prices of imported items may mean higher costs for American buyers, government economists say that measures only part of the inflationary consequences of the falling dollar. They say that as prices rise for imported goods, it removes some competitive restraints on domestic prices, so U.S. businesses may be tempted to mark up their price tags, too.

There already is some evidence this has happened in the steel industry, and as prices of Japanese autos increase, economists expect U.S. automakers to follow suit, at least in part.

One high government official said that as prices of imported goods rise, it could reduce demand for them in this country and that could increase unemployment among U.S. trading partners.

As economies further deteriorated abroad, it could reduce even more the sluggish demand for U.S. goods, with the result that production and employment could suffer in this country as well.

One official estimated that for every cent of the dollar's over-all value that is lost in world trade, the cost of living in the United States will rise by about 0.2 percent, as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

Pacts' Slow Progress Irks Solons, Public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday the public and some members of the Senate are growing impatient with the slow consideration of the Panama Canal treaties.

Byrd also said that senators opposing ratification of the pacts are learning that delaying tactics will not help their cause. Some Senate treaty opponents withdrew a few proposed amendments Friday in what was seen as a gesture to indicate that they are not stalling.

"It's obvious to the proponents and certainly is becoming obvious to the opponents that the lack of progress is beginning to become apparent to the American public and there is a need to move on," Byrd said.

"One gets the impression that what we're witnessing is a filibuster that doesn't appear to be a filibuster," he told reporters at his weekly news conference.

He said that work on the treaties is preventing Senate consideration of other issues because it limits the time committees are allowed to meet and consumes nearly every moment that the full Senate is in session.

The Senate has spent three weeks on the treaty. During that time eight amendments and one motion have been disposed of. At least 58 amendments and half a dozen motions remain, Byrd said.

Byrd, who has endorsed with treaties with certain minor modifications, acknowledged that its opponents have raised some valid points during the debate. But he said the discussion has begun to get repetitive and that he is receiving complaints about the length of the debate from Senate members and from constituents.

He said he's "not sure today" that the treaty will win the two-thirds vote needed for ratification, but he's still feels "cautiously optimistic."

Study Asserts Society Fails To Reward Blacks

NEW YORK (AP) — Black youngsters have consistently performed at lower levels in school than whites because of the realization that they face a bleak future on the job market as adults.

This is the primary finding of a new Carnegie Council on Children study by John U. Ogbu, as associate professor at the University of California at Berkeley, who says a caste-like system exists in the nation which rewards whites significantly better than blacks.

His thesis, set forth in "Minority Education and Caste: The American System in Cross-Cultural Perspective," once again challenges previous theories on the poor school performance of minorities, which suggested that blacks were genetically inferior or lacked parental encouragement to excel academically.

Ogbu's 410-page study is being published on the 10th anniversary of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders' findings on the division of the races and the causes of street rioting.

The blue-ribbon, presidential panel, known as the Kerner Commission, found that white racism was largely to blame for black retaliation to injustices in the form of looting and burning. The panel recommended that a segregated, unequal society could only be avoided through the institution of programs designed to encourage integration of blacks into the mainstream of society.

The Carnegie report, 10 years later, virtually recommends the same thing, supporting the feeling of many blacks and some whites that little has changed in the lives of American minorities during the past decade.

"Better access to jobs and real dismantling of discrimination in such areas as health care and housing are as essential as better schooling for improving the educational performance of large numbers of black children," said Ogbu at a Carnegie Council news conference. But desegregation cannot take place, he said, unless it is recognized that the U.S. has created a caste-like system for the races.

"The economic reality of most adult blacks' lives is still more discouraging than that of whites and at virtually all income levels," said the Nigerian born anthropologist. "This discouraging reality profoundly shapes black children's skills and attitudes, including their skills and attitudes for learning.

"Even very young black children — and American Indian, Mexican-American and Puerto Rican children — pick up discouraging but quite realistic messages about the comparatively poor payoff that education is likely to have for them," he continued. "They live every day surrounded by adults whose education is connected only dimly to their jobs, or who cannot find jobs at all."

The most widely acknowledged genetic endowment theory of the races was that set forth by Arthur R. Jensen in 1969 in the Harvard Educational Review. He said that about 80 percent of IQ was inherited and the rest attributable to environment. Blacks and whites were in different genetic groupings, thus accounting for the dispartiy in IQ testing between the two races. The theory came under attack from many educators and social scientists who questioned Jensen's methodology.

According to the most recent nationwide testing of reading skills administered by the national Assessment of Educational Progress, 13 percent fewer blacks than whites were able to correctly answer questions. This failure, says Ogbu, is not "studpidity, not a failure of genes and not the result of poor encouragement by parents. Rather it is a functional adaptation to reality."

And the entire process is a legacy of centuries of racial discrimination and injustices toward minorities, which ultimately has created a two-society, separate but unequal system that the nation has been unable to wrench itself from.

"At a time when it is all too easy to feel that most significant differences due to race have been eliminated in this country, Ogbu's book reminds us that race still creates significant barriers to our children," said Kenneth Keniston, professor of human development and psychology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "The racial line is more subtle now than it has been, but it is real nonetheless."

The Ogbu report, which has been sent to some 400 policy makers in government, colleges and universities and the private sector, also calls for the elimination of biases in school testing, labeling and textbooks. "And as barriers fall, good remedial programs in schools can help to speed up changes in learning habits and attitudes toward school," said Ogbu.

He further urged that the federal government strictly enforce existing affirmative action legislation.

"Violence is not inevitable," he said. "It can be avoided."

ATLANTA (AP) — Former budget director Bert Lance and his wife, LaBelle, plan a 10-day whirlwind tour to promote Friendship Force, the people-to-people program President Carter initiated while he was governor of Georgia.

The Rev. Wayne Smith of Decatur, Ga., who heads the international exchange program, said the Lances will leave New York on Wednesday and visit Great Britain, Spain, Italy, Austria, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Switzerland, Denmark, the Netherlands and France.

Lance, a co-chairman of Friendship Force, is going on the trip at his own expense, according to Smith's announcement Friday.

Costanza Entertains Group

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House public liason Midge Costanza mixed humor and seriousness in killing 10 minutes before President Carter arrived for a news conference with 200 college newspaper editors Friday.

In twisting a cliche to feminist terms, she pointed at ABC reporter Sam Donaldson and told the student journalists: "I never thought he was very good at his job. He's just got nice legs."

Costanza told students that Carter has done more than talk about openness of the White House.

"For the first time, the Women's Group of Peace and the National Gay Task Force and others have come inside the White House instead of marching in front of it."

Blacks Sense Prejudice

TORONTO (AP) — Two members of the all-black Broadway musical "The Wiz" say they've sensed prejudice during their stay in this Canadian city.

Ken Prymus, who plays the cowardly lion in the traveling stage adaptation of The Wizard of Oz, said it may be his American citizenship instead of his race.

"There is an attitude that, since we're an American show, Canadians could have done it better," he told a Canadian interviewer.

Dancer Charlotte Neveu said it was racial prejudice.

"The other day I was hailing a cab in front of the theater and the driver slowed down and looked right at me, then did a U-turn and picked up a white woman on the other side of the street," she said.

Insurance Policy Contested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An insurance company has filed suit in Superior Court, seeking determination of who is the rightful beneficiary of a $50,000 life insurance policy taken out by the late actor Jack Cassidy.

Cassidy died in December 1976 in a fire at his apartment.

Life Insurance Co. of North America says Shirley Jones, Cassidy's former wife, was listed as beneficiary on the policy, but the executors of his estate dispute that because she is not listed as an heir in Cassidy's will.

Dino Martin Files Complaint

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dino Martin, son of entertainer Dean Martin, says in a formal complaint that he was verbally abused and lost a $500 diamond stickpin when he was arrested on a reckless driving charge while here for a tennis tournament.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman, who would not comment on the case, said he has ordered an investigation.

Martin was arrested earlier in the week, but City Court Judge Horace O. Pierotti dismissed the charge after Martin said he was an out-of-towner unfamiliar with city streets.

The arresting officer counters that Martin pulled a gun on him.

Puzzle Lovers Undeterred

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Some 150 crossword puzzle lovers were undeterred by a four-letter word for a variety of precipitation, and one veteran puzzler confessed not even criticism close to home could keep him from his addiction.

"I've been doing them for a good 30 years," Ed Christiansen, 61, of Canaan, said of his daily chore. "My day doesn't start right unless I get the puzzle done in The New York Times."

And has anyone ever suggested he was wasting his time on puzzles, he was asked. "You're talking about my wife now," he replied.

Christiansen and the others gathered at the Marriott Hotel for the "The First Annual American Crossword Puzzle Contest," which began Saturday and was to end Sunday.

Hotel spokesman Mike Dolan said it was believed to be the first such competition in the United States but such contests were common in Britain. The contestants were to tackle five puzzles of increasing difficulty for prizes up to $125.

By The Way...

By HELEN DIXON

What do you do?

What SHOULD you do?

Should you try to remove the injured from their vehicles or carry them out of the roadway to the relative safety of the shoulder? Should you give first aid? How should you deal with the bystanders who congregate to gawk at the accident scene?

One of your first responsibilities is to help prevent any additional accidents. That means you should get your own car well off the road and attempt to direct traffic around the scene.

Never move anyone who is hurt unless there is danger of fire or you need to reach an important pressure point to stop bleeding. Even the slightest unnecessary movement can make an injury worse.

As soon as you can, dispatch other motorists to summon the police and an ambulance. Get the names and addresses of any witnesses to the accident to give to the police.

All motorists should carry warning flares, first-aid kits, flashlights and other emergency equipment.

During our last spell of bad weather as many as five cars have been involved because of one collision.

We should all be aware of the rudiments of emergency procedures.

There can be "fender-benders" and worse, even on a sunny June day.

All we know about money matters is that money matters.

Much interest has developed lately in the theory that eating high fiber foods such as bran, whole grains and certain fruits and vegetables will prevent a variety of diseases.

This is the theory of a number of British physicians who have observed that some diseases are virtually unknown among Africans living in rural villages, but they do occur in Africans who move to urban areas and eat the typical low fiber, high fat, processed diet of Western man.

No matter what theory you accept, you might be surprised how much fiber you may already be eating. For almost a decade, cellulose made from wood pulp or cotton has been added to dozens of foods. It is used in low calorie salad dressings to keep ingredients from separating, ice cream to keep crystals from forming, diet drinks to add thickness, and now it's even in bread. It's tasteless, odorless, and doesn't change the color, flavor or aroma of food, so it goes virtually unnoticed.

There's been so much talk about the importance of fiber in the diet that you probably figure it's good for something, but you're not sure what.

To help you sort out what's good about fiber, and why too much fiber isn't so good, the Food and Drug Administration has a free reprint entitled "Grandma Called It Roughage." Just send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 658F, Pueblo, Colo. 81009 for your copy.

Biscuits and speeches are improved with shortening.

It's little wonder there's so much confusion about products labeled "organic" "natural" or "health" foods.

There is no legal definition for these terms, and they are used so often and in such a variety of ways that it is almost impossible to tell exactly what is meant.

No single food or combination of foods has any special health-giving properties other than the nutrients provided.

There is no scientific proof to support claims that health, organic or natural foods are superior. Strictly speaking, all foods are "organic." What you can count on, however, is that products labeled "health, natural, organic" are considerably more expensive than their conventional counterparts!

If you don't want your children to hear what you're saying, pretend you're talking to them.

If you don't have time to take care of indoor plants, try bottle gardening. All you need to turn a dull corner into a bright and colorful spot is a waterproof container, tap water and cuttings of some favorite plants, according to a suggestion from Everett Janne of the Texas Agricultural Service.

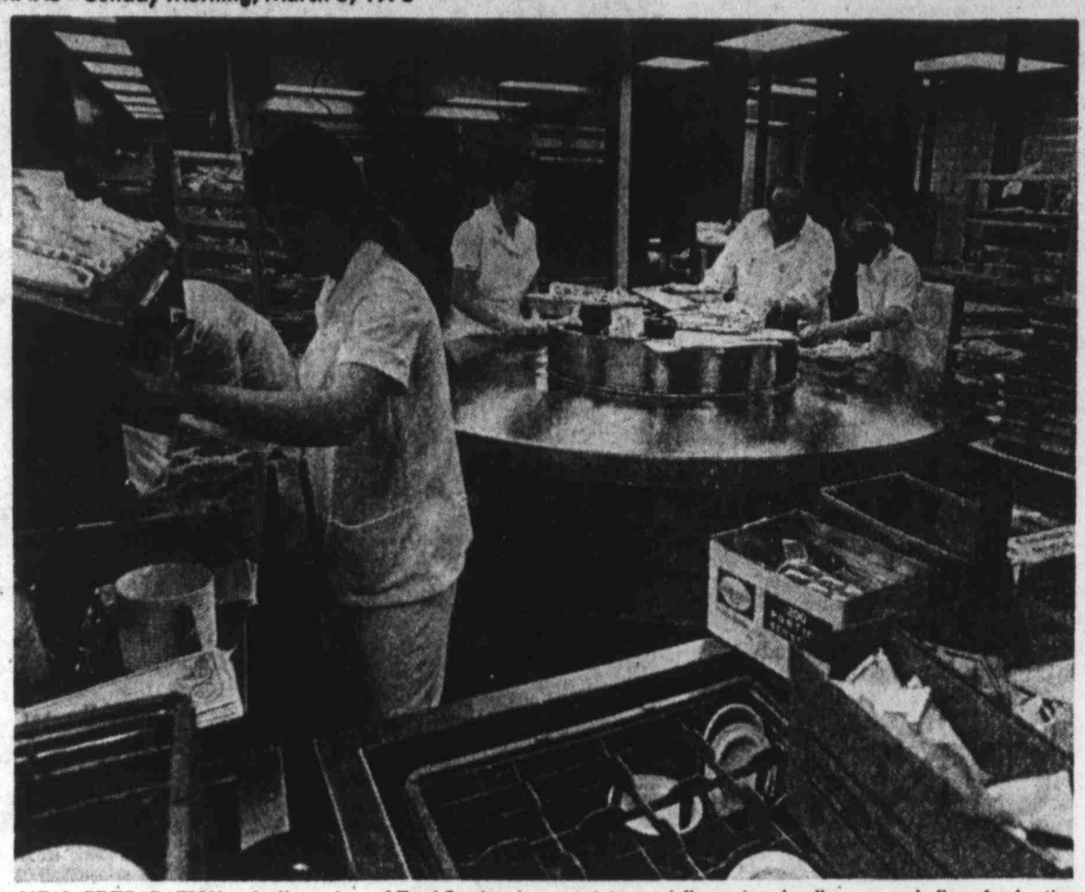

Beverage bottles, vases, canning jars and fishbowls all make good containers. Use cuttings from any plant with a thick stem, such as myrtle, geranium, oleander, wax begonia, coleus or hibiscus.

To begin, clean out a bottle with hot water and detergent, rinse well, and then add tap water. Make a fresh cut on the basal ends of the branches or stems you want to use, remove the lower leaves so that none will be below the waterline, and place them in the water. Arrange them in any manner that looks good to you.

Change the water at least once a month. Wash the container thoroughly and scrub the plant stem with a soft brush, then make a fresh cut on the stem to improve water uptake. Turn the container once a week to keep the arrangement from bending toward the light source.

When stems start deteriorating, replace them with fresh ones. In addition, any of the cuttings which develop roots can be planted in pots or flower beds.

Wouldn't it be slick if Bob Griese played quarterback for the Houston Oilers?

Menu At Hospital Gourmet Delight

By SALLY LOGUE
Family News Staff

Filet of fish poached in lemon sauce and served with rice pilaf? or beef burgundy in wine sauce served over fluffy long grain rice?

These selections may sound like entrees from one of Lubbock's finer restaurants, but actually they are daily luncheon and dinner selections from the patient menu at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The restaurant style menu is available to all patients.

The menus were prepared by Lucille Mattson, director of Dietary Service for the hospital.

Mrs. Mattson said she devised the menus based on her past experiences of complaints by patients about 'hospital' food.

The style and content of menu itself is enough to make the hospital's food service unusual, but the equipment used is the really innovative part of the system.

"Our meals are 'plated' cold in the kitchen and then taken to the floors where they are heated in specially equipped galleys," she said.

Each galley, staffed by dietary technicians, is equipped with four high speed convection ovens, two refrigerators, a microwave oven, a toaster, storage areas and a sink. This procedure, based on the same system airlines use, ensure the patients' food will arrive piping hot.

"The system also allows us to serve on demand. If a special problem arises, such as tests, X-rays or a sleeping patient we are able to hold that meal back until it is convenient for patients," said Mrs. Mattson.

Mrs. Mattson noted the main reason behind the upgraded menus is to give patients the kind of food they are used to at home.

"The varied menu for people on modified diets is also a way of demonstrating there is a broad spectrum of foods they may select," she said.

Mrs. Mattson said the majority of her staff has been trained in the commercial food service business.

"The staff members have good backgrounds. Commercial food business focuses more on the human aspect and people are more likely to learn that important facet in the commercial world rather than in an institutional situation," she said.

Anniversaries

HANSARD

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Hansard were honored with an open house Saturday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kreiger, on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

OVERMAN

SNYDER (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Overman will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary today.

Overman and the former Mavis Nixon were married March 5, 1928, in Whiteface.

Children of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J. Dwayne Overman of Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. S. Berle Overman of Muleshoe, the Rev. and Mrs. Fred G. Overman of Atlanta and Mr. and Mrs. J. Marlin Overman of Louise; they also have 13 grandchildren.

CROWDER

Mr. and Mrs. L.O. Crowder will be honored with a reception marking their 50th wedding anniversary from 3-5 p.m. today.

Hosts for the party will be the family of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Crowder Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Crowder, all of Lubbock.

Crowder and the former Nollie Johnson were married March 4, 1928, in Friona, and lived in Sudan before moving to Lubbock in 1934. He is retired.

The couple also has six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Puppet Program Set

Fred Cowan Puppets will present an all-new production of Circus Showcase, an unusual program of entertainment which combines the magic of marionettes and the excitement of the circus.

The show will be performed at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the showroom of Don Crow Chevrolet, at Loop 289 and Slide Road.

Featured 'acts' include acrobats on trapeze, tight-rope walkers, animal routines and an illusion act of knife-throwing.

There is no charge for admission, and the public is invited.

BYE-BYE DRY SKIN

If dry skin plagues you during the winter, consider a humidifier for your bedroom, at least, or a vaporizer.

Christofle
...a name you will associate with refined elegance. The finest of silverplate from France.

More and more brides are choosing silverplate, and with good reason. Christofle, since 1839, is still produced by the founding family, and its original moto "One quality only, the best", is still upheld.

The base of Christofle flatware is "nickle silver" stronger than most used in flatware and the same color of silver. Coupled with Christofle's unique heavy plating process, it is guaranteed for a lifetime of durable service.

Come see the unparalled workmanship — each piece hand finished to perfection. And the smart pattern stylings are Classics, with design a true reflection of the representative period. Shown, Malmaison, 3 pc. place setting, $42.00. Yes, with good reason, more and more brides are choosing Christofle silverplate. Let us show you how beautiful Christofle will be in your home.

Ancient Cosmetics Kohl, Henna Enjoy Contemporary Popularity

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

In this age of technology, billions of dollars are spent annually for beauty-enhancing products. There are many choices of color, type, brand, desired effect, and cost. The basic forms of cosmetics, however, have been in use for thousands of years.

The ancient Egyptians spent large amounts of time and energy on their personal appearance. They used cleansing creams made of animal or vegetable oils and lime or chalk; rouge made of a red ochre mixed with a vegetable or tallow grease base; scented oils and fats for protection against the dry climate; various forms of eye makeup; and henna to dye their hair, hands, feet and nails.

Henna and kohl (a type of eye makeup) are often still used in their original form.

Henna is a natural dye made from parts of a shrub found in India, Iran, and along the African coast of the Mediterranean. To form the dye, the leaves and young twigs of the shrub, sometimes combined with pulverized catechu or lucerne leaves, are ground to a fine powder, which is mixed with water to form a paste. Henna in its simplest form produces a red color or tint.

Henna has been known and used by many cultures over the centuries. The Egyptians called it khenna; in Arabic-speaking countries it is referred to as al khanna; to the Indians it was known as mendee; the English termed it Egyptian privet; in the West Indies it was known as Jamaica mignonette; Persians called it henne; and the Hebrews knew it as camphire.

Eastern women use henna to dye their fingernails, the palms of their hands and soles of their feet an orange-red color. This coloring is considered a decoration of great beauty, much on the same order as is betel-chewing in Asia.

In ancient Egypt it was considered indecent to refrain from dyeing one's fingernails with henna. Men, especially the Persians, also used the dye. Beards were dyed red, then changed to black by adding an indigo mixture. Henna has also been used on horses' manes and tails and to dye animal skins and morocco leather when tannin is added.

In modern usage, henna is available in several shades, including a clear rinse. Henna's greatest appeal to women today is that it is a natural product. It is completely organic, and gives hair as little or as much tint as is desired. Henna is also a natural conditioner, coating the hair and so protecting it against the elements. It gives hair more body and helps it hold a curl. The treatment lasts three to six months, depending upon the frequency of washing. However, once the hair is coated with henna, other types of hair treatment will not be effective, as other chemicals cannot penetrate the coating.

Henna treatments can be given at home, although it is said to be best to have it done the first time at a salon.

When purchasing henna, only Egyptian or Indian henna should be used. "Tunisian" henna is not actually henna but a metallic compound. Also, henna bought pre-mixed in a bottle is probably not real henna. Henna comes as a powder which is mixed with water as it is used.

Another ancient cosmetic still used in the modern world is kohl. Eye makeup was originally used as a protection against dust and glare, or to ward off flies and other insects. In earliest times, green malachite (a green copper ore) and galena (a dark grey lead ore) were used as eye makeup. Later Egyptians used kohl as a cosmetic.

Kohl means "to stain" in Arabic, and is usually composed of finely powdered antimony, a bright, silvery-white metallic element. Smoke black is obtained from burned almond shells or frankincense. It sometimes consists of soot or a mixture of galena and lamp black, and is applied with a small rod made of wood, bone, ivory or metal, which is moistened with water and dipped into the powdered preparation.

Eastern women use kohl to darken their eyelids and increase the lustre of their eyes. The ancient cultures developed the art of eye decoration to the greatest extent. The underside of the eye was painted green, and the eyelids, lashes and eyebrows were blackened with kohl.

Times have changed but, overall, cosmetics have not. The products we use today are the same as those used for thousands of years but in a modified form. Personal appearance has been consistently important through the ages, and, as always, some means are found to improve one's appearance.

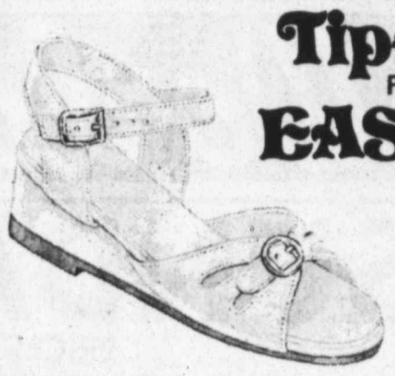

Clip 'n' Cook

SHOOFLY PIE

1¼ cups regular all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. sugar
½ cup packaged corn flake crumbs
1/3 cup vegetable oil
2 tbsp. cold water
¾ cup packaged corn flake crumbs
¾ cup regular all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. ground cinnamon
⅛ tsp. ground nutmeg
⅛ tsp. ground ginger
⅛ tsp. ground cloves
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 tbsp. shortening
½ cup light molasses
¾ cup water
¾ tsp. baking soda

Measure flour, salt, sugar and corn flak crumbs into small mixing bowl. Add oil and water, stirring with fork until well mixed. With back of spoon, press mixture evenly and firmly around sides and in bottom of 9-inch pie pan to form crust. Set aside. Measure corn flake crumbs, flour, baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, cloves and brown sugar into large mixing bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse meal. In small mixing bowl, combine molasses, water and baking soda. Pour 1/3 of the molasses mixture into the pastry-lined crust. Top with 1/3 of the crumbs mixture. Repeat twice, ending with crumbs. Bake in oven at 350 degrees about 30 minutes or until filling is set. Cool completely before serving. Yield: one 9-inch pie.

Extension Update

Most Sundays I quickly scan the section of the paper with all the pretty brides' pictures and engagements to see if anyone I know is entering that "blissful state." If you'll notice, from now through early summer there will be scads of weddings, showers, graduation parties and other parties just to celebrate the arrival of Spring.

All of these parties will have hostesses, and these hostesses will serve countless cups of punch. In fact, I've already had several people who have requested good, inexpensive punch recipes for parties.

I have two recipes to share with you, but first, there are a few things that might help you in your hostess endeavors with beverages.

1. Color is important. Feature only one deep-colored juice, such as grape or cranberry. Too many strong colors detract from the appearance of the punch.

2. When you use sparkling beverages, always add them, well chilled, just before serving.

3. Tips on serving: Ladle the beverage into punch cups from the punch bowl on the serving tray. Or fill the cups in the kitchen and pass on trays, serving refills from the punch bowl.

4. For extra rapid service of fruit-juice punches (no sparkling water), fill the punch cups in advance and place them on serving trays in the refrigerator. Chill the remaining punch in pitchers or clean quart milk bottles. If you have more punch than your refrigerator accommodates, put the rest in the refrigerator as soon as possible.

5. Ice dilutes the perfection of the punch. For this reason, place a small block of ice rather than ice cubes in the punch bowl: dilution, then, will be minimized.

6. Don't throw away leftover punch; freeze one quart of the leftover punch in ice trays in the refrigerator, then use the punch cubes to chill fruit juices. Or substitute leftover punch for all the liquid in your favorite fruit-jelly recipes made with unflavored gelatin. Omit the sugar, as punch is already sweetened.

This recipe was a smashing success at a recent reception that my co-worker, Mildred Patterson, helped with:

BANANA CRUSH PUNCH

4 cups sugar
6 cups water
1 46-oz. can pineapple juice
2 12-oz. cans frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed
1 12-oz. can frozen lemonade concentrate, thawed
6 bananas, mashed
7 28-oz. bottles of ginger ale or soda water

Dissolve sugar in water. Add juices and mashed bananas. Stir well. Put all ingredients except ginger ale in milk cartons and freeze ahead of time. Take out of the freezer two hours before serving. Have ginger ale chilled and combine in large punch bowl with banana mixture. Yield: 6 dozen servings.

I used the following recipe for several organization functions while I was in college. It's relatively inexpensive, and oh so good!

CHERRY PUNCH

2 3-oz. pkgs. cherry-flavored gelatin
4 cups boiling water
1 cup sugar
1 qt. chilled pineapple juice
1 qt. orange juice
1 qt. ginger ale

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water; add sugar and stir until dissolved. Cool to room temperature (this is very important. Do not chill in refrigerator). Add fruit juices. Just before serving, add ginger ale. Yield: 25-30 servings.

THIS WEEK'S HAPPENINGS

You are invited to a Fashion Fandango and Sew Fair on Monday, from 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. at the Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University. Sessions during the morning include fashion trends, clothing for the handicapped and sewing tips. At 1 p.m., Latham's will present a fashion show followed by a program on fitting jumpsuits and pants. I'm really looking forward to going, and hope I'll see you there.

FRUIT FOR THE BIRDS

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Birds are a mixed blessing to the home gardener who grows fruit. Some people cover their plantings with netting with three-fourths to one-inch mesh if birds are a serious problem. Pomologist John P. Tomkins of Cornell University has another suggestion: plant a little extra to share with the birds. They will pay you back by helping control some insects.

Miss Lubbock-USA Deadline Saturday

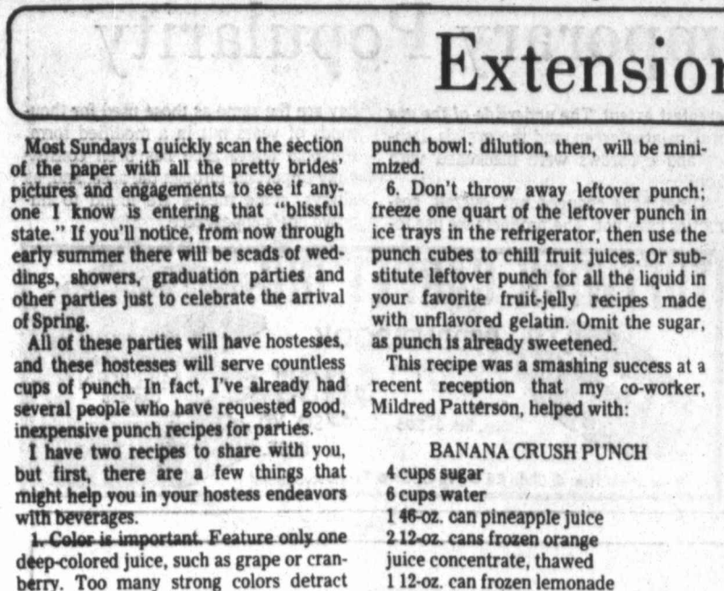

State pageant officials have announced that Saturday is the final deadline for filing an application for the 1978 Miss Lubbock-USA pageant, to be held Apr. 8 in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Theater.

The pageant is an official Miss USA-Universe pageant, and the candidate selected Miss Lubbock-USA will compete at the state pageant in August.

Judging for the title is based on poise, personality, beauty and intelligence; there is no talent requirement.

Applicants must be between 18 and 28, never married and a resident of Lubbock for at least six months. College dormitory students are eligible.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY RECEPTION PLANNED — Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Simpson will be honored on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception from 2-5 p.m. today in their home. Simpson and the former Iora Tomlinson were married March 4, 1928, in Hockley County, and lived there until they moved to Lubbock 38 years ago. They are retired. Children of the couple, who will be hosts for the celebration, are J. Lee Simpson of Bryan, Arvin L. Simpson of Caddomills, and Willy D. Simpson and Mrs. John M. Horn, both of Lubbock. The couple also has eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Gladney Home Benefit Scheduled Tuesday

By MARTHA BOWDEN
Family News Staff

"Pregnant? Don't make a quick decision — make the right one."

For unwed mothers who face various choices concerning the future of their unborn children — abortion? marriage? motherhood without a husband? adoption? — such advice is welcome. Many women in the dilemma of being pregnant but unwed need counsel and direction. To whom do they turn for help?

One answer is the Edna Gladney Home in Fort Worth which was first organized in the 1890's by I.Z.T. Morris and known as the Texas Children's Home and Society. The early aim of the organization was to find homes for abandoned and orphaned children.

In 1925 Mrs. Edna Gladney became director of the home and the purpose was broadened to provide for both infants and unwed mothers. Mrs. Gladney was also interested and instrumental in having the word 'illegitimate' removed from Texas birth certificates. Her dedication and leadership after 35 years of service was honored in 1940 when the name of the home was changed in her honor. In 1942 she was further honored when "Blossoms in the Dust," a movie starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, portrayed her life's work with children.

Today the Edna Gladney Home is a nationally known and reputable maternity home under the direction of Mrs. Ruby Lee Piester, and both its program and facilities have expanded since the home's inception.

Staffed by professional social workers, a psychologist, psychiatrist, three obstetrician-gynecologists and nursing personnel, the home offers unwed mothers counseling services, maternity services and adoption services. Educational and vocational services are also available for both those residents of the home who have not completed high school and for those who are eligible and wish to take college courses.

Facilities of the Edna Gladney Home are modern, comfortable, and designed to create a cheerful home-like environment. Dormitories and apartments on the home's campus house residents during their stay at the home, and each has a swimming pool for occupants. Duncan Memorial Hospital (the home's own hospital licensed by the Texas State Dept. of Health), Pate Memorial Chapel, a recreational building and educational building are on the home's campus.

Confidentiality is a key feature of the Edna Gladney Home. In order to protect the privacy of each resident, a 'hospital name' is assigned each resident. All records are confidential.

Through its outreach program, the services of the Edna Gladney Home have been extended to many areas of Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Oklahoma through auxiliary groups.

The Lubbock Auxiliary of the Edna Gladney Home (formally organized in October of 1977) is an example of the Home's outreach program. The Lubbock Auxiliary consists of approximately 200 Gladney adoptive parents, and all Lubbock citizens interested in the problems of unwed mothers are encouraged to join.

An upcoming project of the Lubbock Auxiliary is a benefit for the Edna Gladney Home scheduled for Tuesday evening at the Gridiron Restaurant. The owners of the restaurant plan to donate a percentage of the evening's total receipts to the Edna Gladney Home.

For further information about the benefit, the auxiliary or its programs, please contact Pat Northington, president of the Lubbock Auxiliary, at 792-0406.

No Limits, Discernible Patterns Seen In Animal Cruelty Cases

By JANICE JARVIS
Family News Staff

It was late evening when neighbors heard the sound of a gun shot. Minutes later, a blood stained retriever, his foreleg dangling by a thread of muscle, limped to the porch of his owner's house.

As in most animal cruelty cases, no one was prosecuted. Without witnesses the case had little chance of standing up in court. Even though the veterinarian who treated the animal was of the opinion the shot was deliberately aimed to maim the animal, there was little the owners could do. They are left with large veterinary bills, and a gnawing anger, described by the pet owner as "the sickening reality that the person who did this will never be known."

Animal cruelty knows no boundaries, and there are no patterns to record, explained Gretchen Scott, member of the Lubbock Humane Society. The cases range from neglect to brutal beatings.

The frequency of such crimes is unknown, but as many as two cases weekly are reported to the Humane Society. A local veterinarian noted that he sees several deliberate abuse cases on the average of every two months.

In contrast, several other local veterinarians reported they see neglect cases daily. The reported cases are only a fraction of the number that occur: as an example, dogs hit by automobiles are rarely calculated in the statistics.

Drawing the line between neglect and deliberate abuse is difficult. Often violent abuse cases are disguised as neglect. The cases where children have strangled an animal by tying a rubber band around its neck appear to be abuse. (Quite often it is neglect on the part of a parent.)

Mrs. Scott described neglect cases as a part of a "chain of pathetic and horrible acts of cruelty." What begins as simple neglect explodes into violent abuse.

"In one case a dog was tied by a chain, unable to eat or drink" said Mrs. Scott. "The owners of that animal saw it suffer every day and it didn't bother them." In another case a dog wore chains so tight the metal became imbedded in its neck.

In many cruelty cases, the pet's owner is the target of cruelty rather than the animal. In one case, a kitten was beaten to death while the owner's five-year-old daughter watched, unable to restrain the man. In another case a puppy was beaten with a rock while in its owner's back yard.

The aspects of animal cruelty become even more frightening when money is involved. In one case, a man returned a lost cat to the pet's owner, demanding a $50 reward. When the woman refused, the man slit the animal's throat in her presence.

The cases, no matter how violent, rarely catch up with the animal abuser. Although the penalty for cruelty to animals is a fine up to $1,000 and six months in jail, few people ever serve time for animal abuse.

Lack of prosecution is attributed to several causes. "People get too emotional when it happens to them," noted Mrs. Scott. And without evidence the case has little chance.

Often there are no witnesses, making a case impossible to prosecute. Even when there are witnesses, most are reluctant to testify.

"People don't care enough to stick their necks out," explained Mrs. Scott. Even when a witness is willing to testify, there is little chance for a case.

"We also have the feeling that if someone killed an animal, what makes you think he'll stop there?" she added.

Under the best of circumstances, the cases are difficult to prosecute. In neglect cases, there's always the excuse that the defendant had taken care of the animal when no one was around, noted Mrs. Scott.

In one case, a man actually witnessed the shooting of his pet. Although he was willing to testify in court, the case never made it to a courtroom. The man who was accused of shooting the animal suddenly left town, before the case could come to trial.

"But that accomplished something — after all, he's not in the city to do it to someone else's animal," noted a local veterinarian,

There are few answers concerning why cruelty occurs. In childhood, a game may end up in a vicious act of cruelty, noted local psychologst Jim Jenkins.

"A child may experience severe symptoms of hostility, and when that hostility explodes, a pet may be the nearest living organism," said Jenkins.

"It's similar to voodoo — the animal is the target, rather than a voodoo doll," he added.

In some cases, the child may be imitating what he sees at home. Animal cruelty often shows up in families where child abuse, wife battery and alcoholism are prevelant.

Other theories suggest that animal cruelty is just one of the symptoms of a violent society. Children see violence on television, or they play with BB guns or other violence-related toys; it's not surprising that they might shoot a cat just because it's a moving target, noted a local psychiatrist. Often children are unaware of the harm they can cause.

The motivation for violent animal cruelty is even more difficult to understand in adults.

"It seems that adults don't have a conscience when it comes to hurting animals," said Mrs. Scott.

"Ignorance is often the reason for certain forms of cruelty — people just aren't aware of the care a pet needs," said a veterinarian. Like children, many adults might view animals as a target for their frustration.

While taping the mangled leg of one cruelty victim, a local veterinarian remarked, "It's beyond most people's understanding. Even the people who commit animal cruelty crimes probably don't know why they do it."

SCENIC CLOCKS

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (UPI) — A home-furnishings manufacturer has a great idea for windowless kitchens and eating areas: a battery-operated wall clock in a threedimensional window frame. The clock face is superimposed on a full-color photographic landscape such as an autumn farm scene. The case has louvered shutters and a windowsill in pine tone finsh. The case measures twenty-one-by-twenty-three and a half inches. The manufacturer says the clock operates for a year or more on a single 1.5-volt flashlight battery.

BEST PLOT
DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — What's the best spot for a home garden? Vegetable breeder Theodore C. Torrey recommends a plot that gets sun most of the day. It should be away from shrub and tree roots and with good drainage to get rid of puddls after heavy rains. If the soil is not reasonably fertile, it can be improved by working in organic material such as compost, well-rotted manure or peat moss or a complete garden fertilizer.

Clip 'n' Cook

MERINGUE GLACE
2 egg whites
Dash of salt
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
2/3 cup granulated sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
2/3 cup flaked coconut
¼ cup confectioners' sugar
Ice cream and chocolate sauce

Beat together the egg whites, salt and cream of tartar until foamy. Gradually beat in the granulated sugar and continue beating until mixture forms stiff straight peaks — about 10 minutes. Add vanilla. Toss together the coconut and confectioners' sugar and fold into the whites. With a spoon, shape into 3-inch rounds, 1¼ inches wide, on brown paper-lined cookie sheet. With the back of a spoon, make a depression in the center of each. Bake in a preheated 250-degree oven for 40 minutes. Turn off heat and cool in oven for 1 hour or overnight. Store in a tightly covered tin box. Fill with ice cream and top with chocolate sauce. Makes 4 to 6 shells. Recipe may be doubled.

YORKSHIRE KEBABS
2 lbs. cubed New Zealand spring lamb from the leg or shoulder
½ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup oil
2 tbsp. soy sauce
1 tsp. each of oregano and curry powder
¼ tsp. pepper
2 large onions, quartered
4 large green peppers, seeded and cut into squares

Place lamb cubes in a large ceramic bowl and toss with remaining ingredients. Cover and let stand 1 hour or refrigerate, covered, for up to 48 hours. Thread meat, onions and peppers on metal skewers. Cook four inches from a charcoal fire, turning and basting the kebabs frequently with the marinade, until meat is cooked to the desired degree of doneness. Makes 6 kebabs.

NORMAL RAINFALL

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rainfall in California's vineyard areas is normal this winter after two years of drought. Reports compiled by the Qine Institute, a trade organization, indicate rainfall ranging from just under an inch over normal in one area to as much as four to eight inches above normal in Napa, Sonoma and Mendocino counties north of San Francisco. This year had been regarded as critical for the state's drought-stressed vines.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D.

No home ever seems to have enough storage — but you can do something about it.

You can use various furniture pieces for storage and thereby not only add the necessary convenience to your every day living, but also add more beauty to your home with storage pieces that are nice to look at.

For instance, the right room divider that has drawers or compartments could be used between a living room and dining room -and could be used to store things for both rooms.

And, you can consider any one of a number of different kinds of beautiful cabinets that give you shelves or drawers, such as credenzas, breakfronts, buffets, hutches and so many more. Then, as just one more example, there are coffee and end tables that have doors and storage space underneath. So many of these pieces are both "storage-full" and beautiful.

Today's furniture manufacturers are making more and more things that combine good looks with efficient use to help you solve the ever-present storage problem.

Studies Confirm Car Safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two new studies of insurance claims for 1974-76 confirm earlier findings that the smaller the car, the greater the risk to occupants in a crash and the greater the chance of a large repair bill.

The Insurance Institute for Highwuy Safety says the principal findings include:

Smaller vehicles have the highest frequency of injury claims under both medical payments and personal injury protection coverage, and larger vehicles, the lowest injury claim frequencies. This proved true for all model years and ages of cars in the studies.

Within each car size group, two-door models consistently had higher injury claim frequencies than four-door models and sports and specialty cars generally had the highest injury claim frequencies.

Youth Art Month Spotlights Student Talent

An exhibit of works by Lubbock art students will begin with a reception from 2-5 p.m. today in the Municipal Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University.

The display, which continues throughout the month, is part of the Lubbock observance of Youth Art Month, and is designed to acquaint the public with what's happening in the secondary art program in Lubbock public schools.

During Youth Art Month, which was first observed in 1961, a special effort is made to emphasize the importance of art experiences in the education of all students.

Work from ninth through 12th grade art classes will include acrylics, water colors, graphics, prints, weavings, stitchery, pottery and sculpture.

Several paintings by Lubbock art students went to Austin recently to be hung in the state Youth Art Month exhibit in the rotunda of the state capitol. Those students whose works were selected are Brenda Seright of Mackenzie Junior High School; Linda Fisher of Lubbock High School; Stacy Halibertern of Coronado High School; Robert Green of Estacado High School; and Willis Bagley of Dunbar High School, whose picture is on exhibit in the governor's mansion.

Works by Bagley, Miss Seright and Miss Halibertern will be shown at the National Art Education Association Convention to be held March 17-22 in Houston, at which only 60 pictures from across the state will be displayed.

Five comprehensive art classes are available to students in Lubbock secondary schools: a fundamental survey course for ninth-grade students; a similar course for sophomores, featuring an in-depth study of design and color theory; and painting, graphics and pottery design for juniors and seniors.

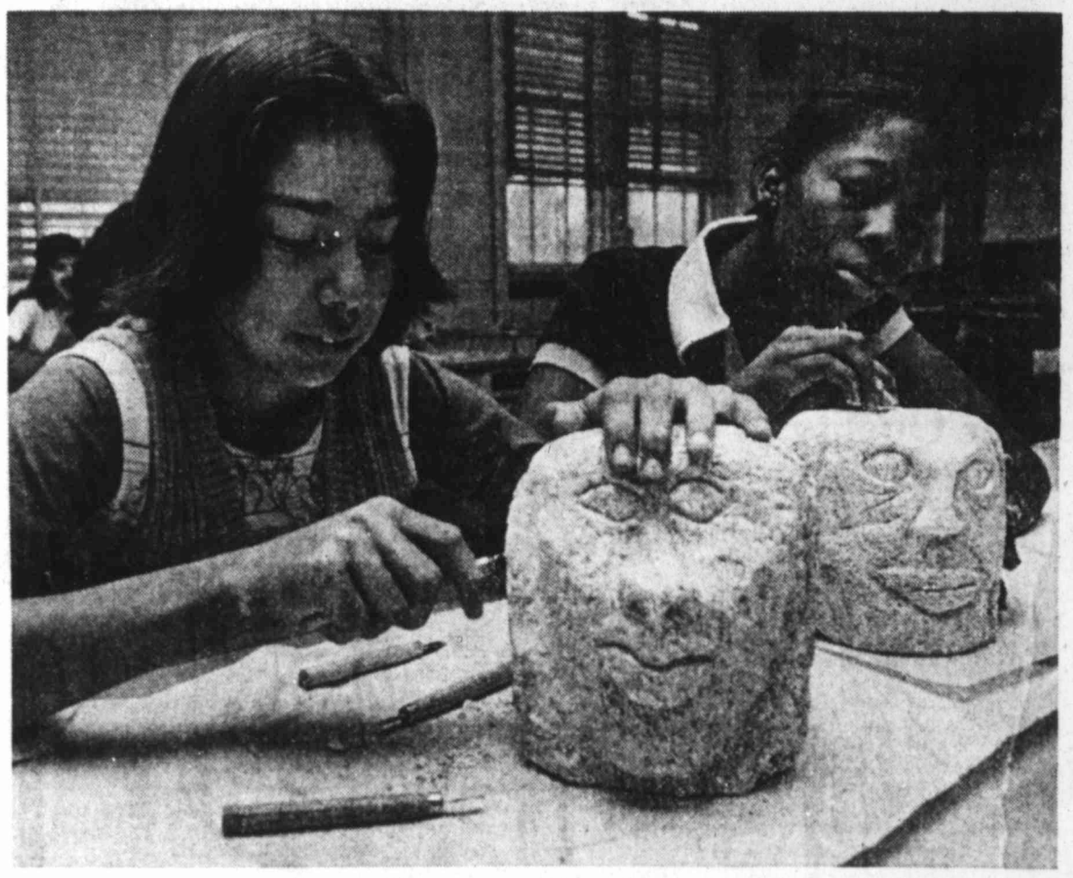

Painting classes also study various media and techniques of painting and drawing, as well as art history and appreciation.

Graphics classes emphasize print-making techniques, illustration and lettering.

A brief history of ceramics is offered to pottery students as well as various methods of working with clay, sculpturing, glazing and firing techniques.

An advanced, individualized study program is also available to seniors planning to further their art training in college.

Tune In Tomorrow

JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Estelle tipped off Phil that Ray showed up at her place. Phil was knocked out by Ray, who was stabbed in a scuffle with Phil's partner Mel. Ray's in critical condition. Phoebe didn't approve of Claudette's attentions to Linc. Nancy called off the wedding to Carl. Danny lost his job while he was cavorting with Brooke. Jeff asked Chris to marry him. Erica made Ellen aware that Mark's too young. There is no trace of Donna.

ANOTHER WORLD: Rachel returned home after the bandages were removed, and she is slowly regaining her sight. Elena refused to help Liz break up Russ and Gwen. Gwen fretted that her own disapproving mother would arrive and stop the wedding. Regine and Cliff were offered a wedding in the Cory mansion. Alice was suspicious after Willis fell for Angie and Vince's jealousy trap. Dennis moved out of Iris's.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Jay confessed to Carol he was with Melinda the night of the murder but that it was all innocent. Melinda testified, however, that she had to fight off Jay's advances. Kevin asked Sandy for a reconciliation after recovering from a drinking bout at Susan's. Dan warned John not to get involved with telling Betsy that Dan is her real father. Lisa learned that Bob is dating Karen who told him she loves another man. Ralph insisted he is not going to wait for Mary forever.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Larry forced himself on Julie and then laughed that anyone would believe that he raped her when she threatened to go to the police. Maggie was angry that Mickey spent time comforting Laura who refused to forgive Bill. Marlena finally accepted Don's marriage proposal. Chris and Mary argued about his getting a better job at the company. Linda nixed Bob staying the night because of Melissa.

THE DOCTORS: Pressured by Billy, Greta consulted Dr. Portnow about an abortion but learned she needs parental consent. Hugh McClosky asked Jason to run for State Supreme Court. Tom returned home to M.J. and Ricky. Barney and Virginia lost their chance at buying a candy store. Doreen and Colin discovered they live in the same building.

THE EDGE OF NIGHT: Denise spotted Miles kissing Nicole after she got a TV job. Draper assured April that he didn't propose because she was ill and they set an April wedding date. Charlie refused to be bought off by Denise. Raney admitted his love for Deborah and hired Chip, a crooked crony.

FOR RICHER, FOR POORER: Lee hired Bentley as a mechanic in Lee's garage when Lee's secretly peddling cars stolen by the Savage Avengers. Megan told Bill to forget her. Connie had a fainting spell after Amy and Lee pressured her to tell Bill the truth. Jason fretted that Barbara's suspicious he's having an affair with Laurie. Austin gave up art for full attention to the company.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Lesley fretted when Laura disappeared. Laura later called and reconciled with Les. Katy told Mark she wants to divorce Lamont who has changed his mind about Mark since his own recovery. Maria threatened to expose Monica as one of Greg's mistresses during Maria's legal battle with Gail. During Laura's absence Scotty succumbed to Barbara's charms. Heather accepted a house-keeping job for Lesley and Jeff decided he wants to try again with Heather.

GUIDING LIGHT: Ed and Mike came to verbal blows after Ed ordered Bill to return to Vancouver and stay out of the Bauers' lives. Bert informed Steve she's seeking a divorce from Bill. Max's story broke. Justin was replaced as head of cardiology by Emmet. Brandy eased the pain. Eve decided to take Braille lessons, as well as Ben's sculpting class. Alan was sexually attracted to Brandy after being furious that she'd told Elizabeth he'd bought Liz's job. Shafer tipped off Mike that Georgene may appear at the post office to pick up money she asked him to send.

LOVE OF LIFE: Arlene pulled a turnabout about marrying Tom. She ran to Ray and agreed to apply for a marriage license with him after he assured her he could accept Ian's child. Meg taunted Michael about Cal, then pointed out Mary's ad for him. Vanessa tried to act brave in the face of impending widowhood. Mia plotted to get Ben to pay more attention by returning his manuscript.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Jenny told Brad she thinks she's pregnant after he unjustly accused her of flirting with an intern. Will caught Talbot dating Samantha, who was trying to make Tony jealous. To keep Larry away from Cathy, Karen claimed she was attacked by a rapist. Larry fell for it but Ed thought her tale had too many loose ends. After being bailed out, Richard proposed marriage to a noncommittal Becky. Dorian made things miserable between Peter and Melinda by implying that she had first grabs on Peter. Paul feared Pat's on the verge of a breakdown.

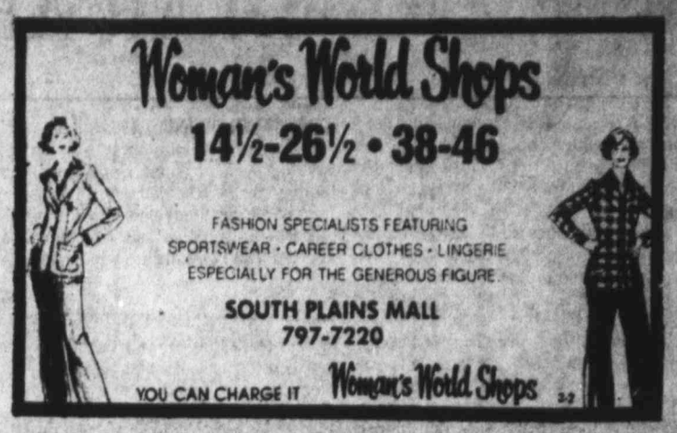

RYAN'S HOPE: Tom explained to Faith that Liam is seeking blood retribution because Tom is blamed for the accidental death of Tom's teen-lover, Liam's sister. Tom is an illegal alien. Frank warned Rae not to advise him about his relationship with Jill, who admitted she loved Seneca before Seneca underwent surgery. Faith asked Tom to cool their romance until the heat is off, then Liam tracked down Tom and shot him.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Bruce struggled to resist taking advantage of Donna, while Amy went on an extended seminar. Steve realized Bill is out to get him. Meredith took a powder after she couldn't handle Evelyn's arm-twisting. Janet tried to stop wallowing in grief over Wade.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Lance halted the trip with Laurie after Leslie went to pieces because Jackson printed the story. Laurie denied she tipped off Jackson. Chris was crushed that the psychiatrist's report judged the Beckers competent to resume custody of Karen, who wanted to see Nancy. Jill wouldn't believe Kay's story that she's married to Derek, who also thought Kay was lying and went to confront her.

Clip 'n' Cook

PEANUT RUM CHIFFON PIE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup light rum
¾ cup hot milk
¼ cup peanut butter
3 egg yolks
¼ cup sugar
1 cup chopped peanuts
3 egg whites
¼ cup sugar
1 (9-inch) baked pie shell
Whipped cream (optional)
Peanuts (optional)

Sprinkle gelatin over rum to soften. Heat milk to boiling but do not boil; using a wire whisk blend the peanut butter into the hot milk. Beat the egg yolks with ¼ cup sugar until fluffy. Stir a small amount of hot peanut butter mixture into egg yolks; return to saucepan and cook and stir over low heat until mixture begins to thicken. Remove immediately from heat; add rum and gelatin stirring until gelatin dissolves. Add peanuts and cool over cold water until mixture begins to mound, stirring occasionally. Beat egg whites until fluffy; add sugar slowly and continue to beat until soft peaks form. Fold into peanut mixture. Mound into pie shell and chill until set. If desired, serve with whipped cream and extra peanuts. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR READERS: Although this column deals with people and their problems, I'd like to devote a little space to animals, who are unable to speak for themselves.

There are approximately 35 to 40 million dogs in this country and 22 to 30 million cats, but the problem is the number of people who neglect their animals. Take dogs, for instance.

Thousands of dogs are destroyed every day at the pound because their owners don't care. Pets are traffic victims because they're allowed to run free. They starve too, because they are fed improperly — or not at all.

A few questions and rules for dog owners should be considered before a dog is made part of your household:

Every dog should have a license. Will yours have one?

Who will be responsible for feeding and grooming the pet?

Who will walk the animal regularly, on a leash, for exercise?

Who will see that the puppy gets the necessary shots?

Who is to housebreak the dog, teach it manners and provide a fenced-in place for it?

Allowing a dog to breed accidentally is cruel. Have your pet spayed (or neutered) if you don't want her tribe to increase.

Owning a pet can be a mutually loving and rewarding experience — if the owner will accept his responsibility seriously. To do less is a dirty trick on man's best friend. And that goes for cats, too.

Love,

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: First let me explain that mine is not a "have-to" wedding. "Tony" (made-up name) and I have just found out that I'm three months pregnant and my wedding is four months off. I know I probably shouldn't wear a white gown and veil, but I already bought mine and if I can get into it, I plan to wear it.

I haven't told anybody except Tony, but I may have to tell my mother because I feel rotten in the morning and she may guess the reason. Abby, would it be okay to go ahead and have a big church wedding like I planned? (We would tell people later the baby was premature.)

Please rush your answer to me as I am nervous and confused. Sign me...

BLOWING UP

DEAR BLOWING: Under the circumstances I would suggest a simple wedding — and soon! Don't count on fooling anyone who can count to nine — least of all the clergyman who will officiate at your wedding and will be called upon shortly thereafter to baptize the baby.

DEAR ABBY: I have been courting a 30-year-old divorcee who has five boys between the ages of 4 and 10. I am 47, in excellent health and own a good business.

This woman is barely getting by between her job and the little support money she gets from her ex-husband.

I want to marry her, but I am not having much luck. She says she likes my company, but for a husband she'd prefer a younger man. I've tried to tell her that with five boys to raise she will have a tough time getting a younger man. I like children, Abby, and I'm honest, sober and solvent. Can you think of some other arguments in my favor that I could use to win her?

NOT IN INDIANA

DEAR NOT: For a marriage to succeed there must be mutual willingness. If you were to "win" her because you had more "pro" arguments than she had "con," yours would be a very sorry union indeed. If she thinks she can do better, let her try. But if you change your phone number, let her know. She may want it.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How to Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Altrusa Selects Mrs. William R. Moss As 1978 Woman Of Year

MRS. WILLIAM R. MOSS
1978 Woman of the Year

By DALE RAYMAN
Family News Staff

As the Lubbock Altrusa Club's 1978 Woman of the Year, Mrs. William R. (Marian) Moss joins a select circle of women whose lives have been significantly involved in service to Lubbock and its people.

Announcement of the award was made Thursday at Altrusa's annual Woman of the Year banquet at the Lubbock Women's Club.

The Altrusa Club, whose members are professional women from many fields of endeavor actively involved in service to the community, requests nominations for the annual award from all civic organizations. From the nominees, the club selects the woman who most reflects the club's philosophy of unselfish service.

Mrs. Moss was nominated by the Junior League of Lubbock. In submitting her name for consideration, the Junior League's nomination said, "Marian Moss' concern for those less fortunate, physically and mentally, places her in the company of far too few."

Among the responsibilities and offices undertaken by this busy woman are the advisory committee for Mental Retarded Services for the Human Development Center and liaison responsibility between the advisory committee and the Mental Health/Mental Retardation board; secretary of the Southwest Lighthouse for the Blind; treasurer of the Well Baby Clinic board; president of the PTA of Wheelock Elementary School and several positions of leadership in the Junior League.

As the wife of attorney Bill Moss and mother of 17-year-old Charles (a junior at Monterey High School) and 12-year-old Mitchell (a sixth-grader at Wheelock), Mrs. Moss is also active at First Christian Church, where she has taught Sunday school classes for children and adults, and where, for four years, she has been chairman of New Horizons, a social program for adult former mental patients.

She has recently received recognition as the creator of LAERS (Lubbock Area Extended Rehabilitation Services), a program which has been designed to provide shelter and workshop employment to those who are severely handicapped and have been neglected.

The Altrusa Club of Lubbock, founded in 1939, is one of many Altrusa organizations in 13 countries throughout the world, and is dedicated to civic service in a variety of activities.

It actively supports Meals on Wheels and annually grants a music scholarship at Texas Tech University along with several international grants-in-aid at Tech and two scholarships to outstanding vocational students of the Lubbock Independent School District. The organization also maintains a loan fund for Tech law students.

The primary project of the Lubbock Altrusa Club this year has been the establishment and implementation of a language bank, through which translators for a number of languages will be available for various needs in the community.

Among the former recipients of Altrusa's Woman of the Year honor are:

MRS. CECIL CAGLE
1948 Woman of the Year

The third recipient of the award, Mrs. Cagle worked extensively with the Girl Scouts to establish camping for the girls of Lubbock. She served on the board of the Community Chest, worked with the children's program at First Christian Church for many years and worked with Mrs. Milam at the Milam Children's Home. She assists in the arts and crafts room at John Knox Village and maintains contact with the Lubbock Girl Scout program, in which she was active for 27 years.

MRS. A.E. JONES
1950 Woman of the Year

Mrs. Jones was one of the early proponents for the creation of the cerebral palsy clinic, and helped generate interest for its founding. With cooperation from the school board and local physicians and legislative support, the school was founded in 1945. She also helped organize the Asbury United Methodist Church interdenominational Sunday school in 1932.

MRS. W.T. (LILLIAN) MILAM
1946 Woman of the Year

Mrs. Milam has a long history of service to the children of West Texas. She and her husband moved to Lubbock in 1926 and began caring for children in their home. This home care eventually became the Milam Children's Home, now known as Buckner Children's Home. Mrs.Milam was active in the Women's Missionary Society of First Christian Church and in the Delphian Study Club. In 1960 she was named Lubbock Mother of the Year, and in 1961 the Children's Training Center was renamed in her honor, in recognition of her many years of service.

MRS. JAMES G. ALLEN
1956 Woman of the Year

A former assistant professor of journalism at Tech, Mrs. Allen was recognized for her work on the provisional board of the YWCA and the Community Planning Council. A charter member of St. John's Methodist Church, she taught the junior girls' class there. She served as president of the Lubbock Women's Club and the Lubbock branch of American Association of University Women. She was instrumental in the establishment of a chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, now Women in Communications, at Tech.

MRS. MARVIN C. ARMSTRONG
1975 Woman of the Year

A continuing interest in PTA is reflected in the list of PTA offices Mrs. Armstrong has held: district president, program chairman, regional vice president, state mental health chairman and president of the Texas Congress of PTA. She is active on the board of directors of the Beautify Texas Council and was Lubbock's representative to President Lyndon Johnson's National Beautification Conference. She was also a charter member of the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce, and is a past president of the Lubbock YWCA. She is historian of the Lubbock Women's Club and a past president of P.E.O.

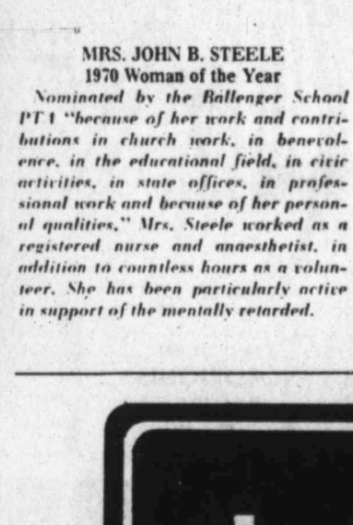

MRS. ROBERT J. ALLEN
1954 Woman of the Year

Instrumental in the organization of the City-County Child Welfare Unit, Mrs. Allen was a charter member of the Lubbock Social Welfare Organization. She participated in the first Christmas Seal drive in Lubbock, and was active in Girl Scout and Cub Scout work. Active in Lubbock PTA, Mrs. Allen served as general chairman of the state PTA convention in Lubbock in 1938. She was president of the Lubbock Bar Association Auxiliary, P.E.O. and the Women's Auxiliary of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. She is particularly interested in service to the blind and serves on the board of Southwest Lighthouse for the Blind.

MRS. JOHN B. STEELE
1970 Woman of the Year

Nominated by the Ballenger School PTA "because of her work and contributions in church work, in benevolence, in the educational field, in civic activities, in state offices, in professional work and because of her personal qualities," Mrs. Steele worked as a registered nurse and anaesthetist, in addition to countless hours as a volunteer. She has been particularly active in support of the mentally retarded.

MRS. JAMES W. SPEARS

Mrs. Spears became active in volunteer work shortly after arriving in Lubbock more than 30 years ago. Among her many activities are sustaining membership in the Junior League, the Salvation Army board, Lubbock Women's Club, Symphony Guild, Women's Council of The Museum of Texas Tech University, Garden Study Club and P.E.O. She was honored for service to the Camp Fire program in 1967, and with her husband is active in Second Baptist Church.

FOR GOOD NUTRITION — The sixth annual National Nutrition Week begins today, and these members of the Lubbock Dietitians Association are planning local involvement. From left are Patsy Morgan, publicity chairman; Mary Adams, president; Tyra Carter, secretary; and Connye Kuratko, community nutrition chairman. The purpose of the observance is to provide the public with the latest information about nutrition and food selection for health. (Staff photo by Gary Davis)

National Nutrition Week Begins Today

The sixth National Nutrition Week for the American Dietetic Association begins today, according to Billie McCowling and Mildred Patterson of the expanded nutrition program of the Lubbock County Extension Service.

The symbol for the program, "Nutribird," is being used to help encourage good dietary habits by emphasizing the need for good nutrition obtained by eating a balnaced diet according to individual food needs.

"Food fads and nutrition nonsense have created a major public health problem," Mrs. McCowling said, "with Americans squandering $2 billion on food fads."

"People are fooled, because they don't know — or won't accept — scientific facts about foods and nutrition," Mrs. Patterson said.

"Ignorance, indifference and fear are the major factors that contribute to the situation," she added.

The agents noted that food fads and nutrition quackery are dangerous because essential nutrients may be lacking from the fad diets, and because children following a fad diet may not get the nutrients they need for growth and development.

"You can learn to separate fact from fiction by learning the basics of good nutrition," the agents said. "Read materials about nutrition obtained from the government, universities, Extension services and accepted nutrition organizations."

Balanced meals, they note, begin with the minimum servings from the four basic food groups: meat or meat alternate, dairy products, fruits and vegetables and whole grain products.

For more information about National Nutrition Week, call the County Extension Office at 792-4789.

CHILI CHUTNEY

Two 29 oz. cans fruit cocktail, drained
1 large onion, coarsely grated
1 cup sugar
1 cup cider vinegar
One 1¾ oz. envelope season mix for chili
½ cup raisins

In a large saucepot stir together all the ingredients and bring to a boil. (Add the seasoning mix just as it comes from the envelope). Let bubble gently, stirring occasionally during the first part of the cooking period and often toward the end, until thick — about 1 hour; it will thicken more after it cools. Store in the refrigerator. Makes 1¼ quarts.

READY TO DO THE BUNNY HOP — Easter is just around the corner, and this young Easter Parader is most suitably attired in an easy-care denim jeans and shirt-jacket suit. The denim is a comfortable, long-wearing blend of cotton and polyester.

DELL CITY COUPLE NOTES MILESTONE — Mr. and Mrs. George S. McConnell will observe their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house from 3-5 p.m. today in the Dell City Community Center. The party will be given by their daughters, Mrs. Georgia Faye Huffman of Alvord and Mrs. Dolores Ann Young of Lubbock. The couple was married in Hereford on March 4, 1928, and lived there and in Washington, D.C., before moving to the desert valley project that was to become Dell City. They are both licensed pilots and have traveled extensively. Mrs. McConnell was postmaster for the community and has been the high school librarian; he has served as president of the school board and in positions in county government and area organizations. They also have 12 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Chef Adds Elegant Touch To Outdoor Meals

By JOHN LESAR

CHICAGO (UPI) — Beans and franks burned over an open fire are not Alberto Pipea's idea of "roughing it."

Pipea thinks more in terms of beef stroganoff, coq au vin or even roast leg of lion — cooked over an open fire or on an outdoor grill.

No ordinary outdoor buff, Pipea has hunted and fished from the Canadian wilderness to the African jungles. The leg of lion he roasted was cut from a beast he shot on safari in Africa.

He seasoned it with fresh ground pepper and a little garlic and braised it in white wine.

"I was determined I was going to eat some of that lion," said Pipea. "Our native camp cook was superstitious. They think that if you cut up the lion or eat it the lion will come back and eat you. He wouldn't make it, so I had to. It tasted a little like roast veal, but it's not red meat. It's all dark meat."

Pipea, chef and proprietor of Chef Alberto's continental restaurant on Chicago's North Shore, also has cooked elephant and hippopotamus.

"Whenever I go hunting or fishing the guys always elect me camp cook," he said. "It's no trouble. It just takes planning. And then, you have to like to cook. If you don' like it — it shows.

"The trick is to have everything ready — whether you're making coq au vin, veal scaloppine, chicken cacciatore or beef stroganoff. Have your meat cut up and ready; have your seasonings on hand.

"It doesn't take long. You can make beef stroganoff from scratch in 20 minutes — and cook it over a charcoal burner, an open fire or a propane gas stove. That's faster than a TV dinner. Those take 35 to 40 minutes."

He suggests some basic herbs and spices for outdoor enthusiasts — a little fresh black pepper, salt, some garlic, and wines — a dry and a sweet.

SHAMPOO SAVER

If you use lukewarm water to rinse your hair of surface dirt before shampooing, you'll need less shampoo.

He said the key to success for cooking at camp or on hunting or fishing trips lies in reading the recipe before leaving the house and pre-cutting the meat and premixing seasonings when possible.

"That way when you get ready to cook all you have to do is assemble the meal," he said.

For a fisherman's feast, Alberto Pipea suggests butterfly filleting the morning catch, seasoning the outside of the fillet with butter, lemon and fresh ground pepper, then placing butter, a layer of thinly sliced onion and a light sprinkling of brown sugar inside. The fish is then folded — with the onion-butter-andsugar mixture inside like a stuffing — wrapped in foil and thrown on the grill or into the glowing embers.

"Best tasting fish anywhere," Pipea said.

CAST AND DIRECTOR — Rehearsals for the University Theater's production of "School For Scandal" have been underway for months, and the results will be made available when the play opens at 8:15 p.m. Friday at the Texas Tech University campus theater. The popular comedy of manners, satirizing sentimental affection and scandalmongering, will run nightly through March 15. Holding featured roles are Toni Cobb, left, as Mrs. Candour and Heather Hollingsworth, center, as Lady Teazle. Ronald Schulz, right, is directing the show and has chosen to place it in the century setting in which it originated. A goodly amount of emphasis has been placed on the lavish costumes. Reservations and further information are available by calling the University Theater box office. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

B.J. Thomas Headlines Pop Concert At Coliseum

B. J. Thomas will headline a pop concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Lubbock Coliseum. Tickets are on sale at the Baptist Student Union, B&B Records, Good News Book Store, Baptist Book Store, Furr's Family Center, Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall and the Texas Tech University Center ticket office.

Most people know that B. J. Thomas sang the theme to the popular movie "Butch Cassidy And The Sundance Kid." That song, "Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head," left everyone humming the melody. But too many have forgotten that Thomas also made big hits out of the following songs: "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," "Eyes Of A New York Woman," "I Just Can't Help Believing," "Mighty Clouds Of Joy," "Rock And Roll Lullabye" and "Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song."

Thomas' first singing experience was with school and church choirs. At the age of 15, he joined a local Houston rock band named the Triumphs. With Thomas as lead singer, the band recorded the Hank Williams hit "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry" in 1965. The record landed the band a contract with Scepter Records and the song became the first of many million-selling records for Thomas.

Soon afterwards, Thomas hit the road as a solo performer, touring primarily with the Dick Clark Caravan of Stars. In 1966, Cashbox magazine named Thomas the "most promising vocalist of the year." He followed with hits like "Eyes Of A New York Woman" and "Hooked On A Feeling."

Thomas' record sales peaked at 8 million copies, but success was hindered by an accident which left him with a punctured lung. With recuperation came drugs. At 25, Thomas had seen it all.

Another Scepter artist, Dionne Warwick, was impressed with Thomas and helped him land the "Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head" tune by Hal David and Burt Bacharach. When Thomas sang the song at the 1970 Academy Awards, his total record sales had passed the 20 million mark.

He continued the streak with "Mighty Clouds Of Joy," making him an across the boards star. But the stress and excess of his career soon saw Thomas turn to drugs for the energy necessary to carry on.

Thomas says, "The more hit records I had, the more miserable I became. I got a lot of reasons why from my friends and 'shrinks,' but that was no answer. When I sat down to drink, I would drink too much. I was smoking three to four packs of cigarettes a day."

He went hitless for two years, finally scoring again with "Rock And Roll Lullabye" in 1973 and then "Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song." But Thomas states the personal problems were not solved until he became a born again Christian in 1976.

He recalled, "That experience really brought everything into focus. It set my priorities right — making records, my personal life, everything. For the first time in my life, a year ago, I had ambition. When I started cutting records, I knew I could sing, but I had no ambition. I just cut records and when one made it, that was fine; and if it didn't, it made no difference ... but I couldn't do it myself."

Thomas has seen the ups and downs. But through it all, he's remained a notable singer and performer.

Reviewer Carl Ditz wrote last year, "Neil Sedaka may have been the comeback sensation of the mid '70s, but after hearing B. J. Thomas ... I have to believe the late '70s will see Mr. Thomas replace Mr. Sedaka at the top of the charts."

B. J. ON HIS WAY — MCA recording artist B. J. Thomas will be featured in concert at 8 p.m. Friday at the Lubbock Coliseum. Tickets are on sale at the Baptist Student Union, B&B Records, Good News Book Store, Baptist Book Store, Furr's Family Center, Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall and the University Center ticket office. Thomas has had hit songs in "Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head," "Mighty Clouds Of Joy" and "Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song."

'Calcutta' Coming To City

"Oh! Calcutta!" continues its national tour with an 8 p.m. performance Saturday at Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium. The production has heretofore never toured the United States and has never played the Lubbock area.

Tickets are on sale at Furr's Family Center, Flipside Records and Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall.

The revolutionary musical, which was the first legitimate stage production to feature complete nudity, was devised by the noted British critic and author Kenneth Tynan and features original skits and songs by such noted writers, composers and lyricists as Sherman Yellen ("The Rothschilds" and "Rex"), Leonard Melfi ("Birdbath"), Dan Greenberg ("Something's There" and "How To Be A Jewish Mother"), David Newman and Robert Benton ("Bonnie and Clyde") and Sam Shepherd ("Zabriskie Point").

The contemporary music score of "Oh! Calcutta!" — an amalgam of jazz, rock, folk and country music — was composed by Peter Schickele, Robert Dennis and Stanley Walden.

The national tour of "Oh! Calcutta!" is produced by B & J Music, with Barry Singer the executive producer in association with Dyke Spear. Tour direction is under the auspices of Broadway Productions, Dyke Spear as executive producer.

Since its original production in New York — where it is now running for the second time — more than 10 million people have seen and cheered various productions of "Oh! Calcutta!" in London (where it is still playing at the Duchess Theatre after seven years), Stockholm, Amsterdam, Brussels, Paris, Copenhagen, Sydney, Hamburg, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Miami.

The creation of "Oh! Calcutta!" caused an overwhelming tide of excitement and, as the first totally nude stage production ever, it broke tradition and set the precedent for a whole new wave of legitimate theatrical works all over the world.

Mrs. Barber Wins Honor

Barbara Barber, director of Texas Tech University's Suzuki string program and assistant concertmaster with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, recently was named the winner of the 1978 Young Artists Auditions of the Oklahoma Symphony Orchestra. The announcement came shortly after Mrs. Barber completed her performance of Tchaikowski's "Violin Concerto In D Major" with the Joel Lazaar directed symphony.

Mrs. Barber will return to Oklahoma City April 1 to receive a cash award and perform the concerto with the symphony again, this time under the direction of conductor Ainslee Cox.

The Texas Tech graduate was a finalist in the college division of the Midland-Odessa National Young Artist Competition in 1975.

As director of the Suzuki string program, a program through which small children learn to play the violin, Mrs. Barber had the privilage of working with Dr. Shinichi Suzuki at 1977's International Conference on Talent Education in Hawaii.

SHEER BRILLIANCE — That's how A-J rock correspondent Doug Pullen described progressive country recording artist Joe Ely after listening to Ely's new MCA record called "Honky Tonk Masquerade." Ely, who played for years in the bars and honky tonks of Lubbock, received good notices from critics after his debut album, but "Honky Tonk" is said to capture the real persona of the singer. The LP was produced by Chip Young.

New Ely Album Rates 'Sheer Brilliance'

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

EVERYBODY LOVES AN underdog. The underdog is symbolic of everyone's desire to "make it." He is the guy who wins against the most stacked odds. He is the guy with as much or more talent than the big guys, but he hasn't yet earned admittance into their world.

Joe Ely is such a person. The local singer-songwriter has knocked around Lubbock and area night spots (especially the Cotton Club) for years, grinding out his peculiar brand of country and western music. What separates Ely from his more pompous contemporaries is his fundamental approach to music.

Simplicity is a virtue, one which Ely has mastered, as is evident after listening to his second album called "Honky Tonk Masquerade" (MCA). It may be a bit too early to tell, but the degree of musical and compositional greatness which Ely and his bunch achieve on "Honky Tonk" is, in many areas, nothing short of sheer brilliance.

A brilliance that comes naturally to Ely and his band.

Ely has displayed his admirable talents before — both on stage and on his 1977 debut album. But the first LP was disappointing and only a small number of people outside the West Texas area have come to appreciate Ely's talent. But as the singer escalates his touring, and if the album gets some promotional backing from his label, fans across the country might begin to recognize Joe Ely as a major talent.

"HONKY TONK" IS A raw album. The pomp and circumstance of Nashville has been reduced to a minor role. The emphasis is on real music — the kind of music one creates only with gut feelings. Lyrically, Ely provides personal insights as each original composition takes on a charm and character of its own.

That "Honky Tonk" is a much livelier album than Ely's debut is not surprising. Anyone who has ever seen Ely knows his raucous, rollicking shows sway to the singer's whims. The new album contains Ely's alcoholic sound and has more rock to its roll.

West Texas is a popular subject in Ely's tunes. He is the tree that bends when the wind (his lover) blows in "Because Of The Wind." Undying love marks a show favorite, "I'll Be Your Fool." Ely frolics uncaringly with "Fingernails," a short but vivacious boogie.

"Honky Tonk" is patterned after one of Ely's shows. Like a Joe Ely concert, the album offers a balanced blend of country and honky tonk music. But the street grittiness of songs like "Fingernails," "Fool," Butch Hancock's "West Texas Waltz" and Hank Williams' "Honky Tonkin'" make the album come to life.

A piercing lead guitar solo by Jesse Taylor marks "Boxcars." Ely's own figurative perseverance and straightforwardness are present throughout "Jericho," another Hancock original.

MEMORIES OF ELY'S self-styled and exhausting stage shows recur with each listening of "Honky Tonk Masquerade." The album may well be one of country's most important new releases. Its significance lies in the very rudimentary approach taken by Ely. The album was recorded in an obscure Tennessee town, away from the ridiculousness and falsehoods which make cities like Nashville thrive.

Ely's grass-roots appeal is at the core of "Honky Tonk." One can only hope that Ely will continue to release albums like this. His presence on record is much like his presence on stage: a joyful obliviousness to everything going on around him. He has always been an integral part of the good times which can be had at one of his concerts, but he is not exactly what you would call magnetic.

It's the music which Ely relies so heavily upon, a music which he combines with his distinctive sense of humor and astute observation. And, like the underdog, Joe has everybody on his side. Let's just hope that his raw talent, combined with superb backing, will make Joe Ely the star he deserves to be.

FOOTNOTE: Ely is not that popular outside Lubbock and Texas. His first album sold well in this area, but did not come close to cleaning up in record stores outside the state. Nonetheless, he has received glowing reviews from the more esteemed critics nationwide. Ely is now touring Europe promoting his albums.

LINER NOTES. Joe Ely: lead vocals, acoustic guitar. Lloyd Maines: steel guitar and vocals. Gregg Wright: bass and vocals. Bonti Bone: accordian and piano. Jesse Taylor and Chip Young: electric and acoustic guitars. Steve Keeton: drums. Shane Keister: moog and piano. Farrell Morris: percussion. Lea Jane Berinati, Ginger Halladay, Lisa Silver and Butch Hancock: backing vocals. Produced by Chip Young.

Michael Lorimer Classified Among Best Classical Guitarists In World Today

Michael Lorimer, a brilliant young American artist, is one of the world's leading classical guitarists. Each season he presents numerous concerts throughout the United States and abroad, and he will make his first Lubbock appearance at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Texas Tech University Center theater.

Tickets are on sale at the University Center ticket booth and Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall.

Born in Chicago and reared in Los Angeles, he began guitar studies when he was 10. By 1963 he was taking master classes with the great Andres Segovia. He became a favorite pupil of the master, who, when asked in a recent National Observer interview about a possible successor to carry on his tradition, said of Lorimer: "I am certain that in a few years his name will be respected and esteemed in the United States and abraod."

Segovia further expressed his feelings about his protege by asking him to write an article entitled "Segovia as Teacher" for a booklet about Segovia which was being published by Hurok Concerts.

Lorimer is the first American classic guitarist invited to perform in the Soviet Union. In 1975 he toured the major cities of the U.S.S.R. to enormous acclaim. He has been invited to return in April.

With special affection for and knowledge about the baroque literature, he has performed early works on original instruments — baroque guitar and lute. Lorimer's instrument is an exact copy of a guitar constructed in 1687 for one of the daughters of Louis XIV and is the first modern-day exact copy of a baroque guitar. Irving Kolodin described its sound as being of "enchanting purity, decorous clarity, and singular refinement."

After Lorimer's UCLA concert this season, Los Angeles Times critic Harry Cohen said of Lorimer's baroque guitar playing: "In the style peculiar to the period — a combination of strummed chord flourishes and individually plucked notes — the artist utilized complex and well-articulated ornamentation giving the listener the irresistable impression he was improvising in the manner of the times."

Also interested in contemporary music, Lorimer has encouraged and assisted composers to write for guitar. He gave the American premieres of Andre Previn's guitar concerto and Maurice Ohana's concerto for guitar and orchestra. In 1975 he premiered William Bolcom's "Seasons" for solo guitar. This season he premiered "Folios" by Toru Takemitsu in New York's Alice Tully Hall.

Lorimer has participated in a number of experimental programs in arts presentation, including the highly successful Michigan Orchestra Association Artist-in-Residence Program which, in addition to having an artist perform and give master classes, shares his talents with schools and service clubs so that an artist is known by the community. Mrs. John Rapanos, president of the Michigan Orchestra Association, said, "Michael Lorimer has made an enormous impact. He is a most powerful communicator musically and verbally, and his personal commitment to the people of our community has endeared him to us all."

In addition he has given master classes at universities and conservatories across the country.

Some of his many arrangements and transciptions have been published by Charles Hansen in a special series — the Michael Lorimer Edition.

LORIMER TO APPEAR THURSDAY — Michael Lorimer, one of the world's leading classic guitarists, will be featured in concert at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Texas Tech University Center theater. Lorimer was the first American classic guitarist asked to perform in the Soviet Union. Tickets are on sale at the University Center ticket booth and Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall. Call the UC ticket booth for further information.

Lubbock Writers Plan Daylong Workshop At Garden Center

"I refuse to believe there's anyone out there who is so dumb or who possesses so little talent that he couldn't write some form of article. For example, there's always the question and answer interview story. The dumbest writer could take that and sell it."

Etta Lynch, who has put over a million words down on paper, certainly doesn't mince them when talking about the writing profession. And she should know, having published three non-fiction books — "The Power Behind The Comb," "Help Is Only A Prayer Away" and "Tender Tyrant: The Legend Of Pete Cawthon" — and sold oer 150 articles to various periodicals.

She and Wanda Evans, another commercially successful Lubbock writer, will hold a day-long Writer's Workshop March 18 at the Lubbock Garden & Arts Center, 4215 University. The workshop is designed not only to show those so-called dumb writers how to market their latent talents, but also to help the rest of the aspiring area writers learn about contacts, style and writing markets.

"Everything I ever published came about as a result of workshops: the suggestions I got from editors, the contacts. I decided I wanted to write when I was nine years old. Something was driving me. ... But the workshops helped me find a direction."

Both Miss Lynch and Miss Evans confess a love for fiction writing, but sell mostly non-fiction. Why? Miss Lynch was quick to respond, "Because 85 per cent of the market now is non-fiction." Miss Evans elaborated, "That's about all you see these days. Books on self help. How To books."

Describing themselves as "the senior members of the South Plains Writers Association" who are admittedly more "commercial" than "literary," both Miss Evans and Miss Lynch emphasize that the workshops are also designed to lend inspiration and confidence to beginning writers.

And despite recent writing success, both writers admitted there have been times when their confidence was tested. Asked if they remembered when their first stories were accepted for publication, Miss Evans said, "Of course, its like when your first child is born."

However, even the best writers go barren occassionally. Two years passed before Miss Evans sold another article.

The workshop is designed to help writers sell on a consistent basis. Miss Evans said, "We tell them to check other magazines for style and ideas, and not to give up just because you get a rejection slip. That rejection slip could mean nothing more than the fact the editor had a headache or a fight with his wife."

Miss Lynch added, "Always write for the reader. Never worry about the editor. And never write for your own satisfaction. ... We also stress the writer should know his markets. You should have at least four markets in mind, and preferably six, before you even start to write. Because if you only have one market and it sends you a rejection slip, what are you going to do? Just put your story away in a drawer?"

She concluded, "I can take any story and slant it for three separate markets."

Dedication is another matter. Miss Lynch writes each day from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Miss Evans, employed as public information officer for the City of Lubbock, usually writes from 8 p.m. to midnight. But both stress the commercial writer works every day.

"If you only write when the mood hits you, you're not really a professional. A professional will write under all circumstances. A professional will even write on days when he's sick with the flu," said Miss Lynch.

But both insist that their manner of writing pays off. Though Miss Lynch said, "Like the old cliche says, you have to throw away your first million words to be a good writer," she adds that the opportunities are great.

"Editors are hungry to find new writers," she said. "The older writers, people like James Michenir and Agatha Christie, are going to die. The publishers know they have to develop a new crop."

Information about the upcoming Writers Workshop, including price details, can be obtained by calling the Garden & Arts Center.

Exhibition To Feature City Artists

Lubbock artists Carolyn Ratcliffe and Joan Harvey will be featured in an exhibition of jewelry and stitchery opening from 2 to 4 p.m. today at the YWCA, 3101 35th.

The exhibit will remain at the facility through the end of this month.

Mrs. Harvey uses gold, silver, bronze, brass and copper to create jewelry and small objects. Currently studying at Texas Tech University, she has also studied with Francis Stephen and has attended workshops held by Richard Mawdsley of Illinois State University and Donald Wright of Santa Fe, N.M.

She will also display a number of ceramic objects done in the raku technique.

Mrs. Ratcliffe uses wool yarn extensively to create her wall hangings and framed pieces. She studied with Janie Beitler of Lubbock; Helen Rumpel of Santa Fe, N.M.; and Wilcke Smith of Albuquerque, N.M.

Her work has been accepted for state tour by the Texas Fine Arts Association, and she received three awards for work she presented in the 1977 Southern Regional Show in New Orleans. She has also previously exhibited in Lubbock.

Watercolor Class To Begin Monday

The class will meet from 10 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 3 p.m. on Monday, Thursday, March 13, 16 and 20.

Texas Tech's Terry Cook Gains Opera Competition Semi-Finals

Cook's achievement at the regional auditions brings him not only a national honor, but also $2,000 in stipends and a trip to New York City for two weeks of coaching with the Metropolitan Opera Staff.

Cook also has received a contract with the Santa Fe Opera apprentice program for the summer where he will understudy the role of Gremin in Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin." He also will sing Second Soldier in "Salome."

There were 17 regional auditions. The Southwest Regional includes Texas and New Mexico.

The semi-final competition, consisting of the regional winners, will be held april 2 and the finals April 9, at the Lincoln Center.

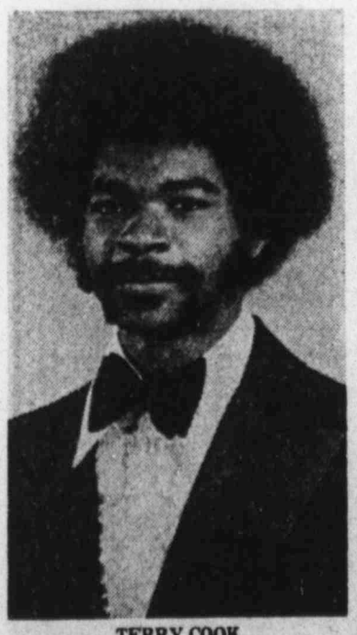

Cook also is the recipient of the Hewitt Vocal Award for Musical Excellence. The $55 award was established by Lubbock physician A. Lee Hewitt to assist the recipient in furthering musical studies.

Other honors won by Cook include third place in the Tuesday Music Club of San Antonio and first place in the Midland-Odessa National Young Artist Competition, as well as second and third place awards in the annual National Association of Teachers of Singing competition.

Performances by Cook have included parts in "Showboat," "Trial by Jury," "The Barber of Seville," "The Shepards," "Camelot," "Rigoletto," and "Gianni Schicchi." His most recent appearance was as Figaro in "The Marriage of Figaro."

The singer is a student of John A. Gillas, Texas Tech professor of music and director of music theater.

Cook plans to seek a career as an opera singer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Cook of 1308 W. 3rd St. in Plainview. He graduated from Plainview High School in 1974 and is an honor student at Texas Tech.

Tech Theater Department Gains Honor

The theater arts department of Texas Tech University was honored with two Amoco gold medallions at the regional American College Theater Festival in Fort Worth on Feb. 25.

The Texas Tech University Theater has hosted the Texas Area III festival for the past four years, and was awarded a medallion for its fundamental support of the American College Theater Festival at the state level.

Dr. Richard A. Weaver, director of theater at Tech, received the other gold medallion as the American College Theater Festival Award of Excellence. Weaver, with James Barton of Southwestern Texas University in San Marcos, organized the Texas state committee for the American College Theater Festival. He served as state chairman from 1974-1978 and as playwriting chairman from 1974-1977.

Tech Bands Concert Set Today

The Varsity Bands of Texas Tech University will be featured in concert at 3 p.m. today in the University Center theater. There is no admission charge.

The Brass Band is a replica of the old English brass bands of the 1900s. Directed by Richard Tolley, this band will play music by F. von Suppe, Pi Scheffer, Maurice Clark and W. Rimmer.

Varsity Band II, under the direction of Anthony Brittin, will play music by William Bergsma, Francis McBeth, Jean Sibelius and John Philip Sousa.

The program will conclude with Robert Mayes directing Varsity Band I, which will play music by John Barnes Chance, C. Teike, Clifton Williams and Francis McBeth.

Outstanding Artists Appearing With Symphony

Appearing with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Civic Center theater will be the dynamic baritone Kyung Wook Shin and pianist Judith Burganger.

Shin was a big favorite when he sang with the Lubbock Symphony in May, 1976. He studied voice with the late Hak Sang Kim and Dr. Ralph Appleman. Since joining the faculty of Texas Tech University in 1973 as an associate professor of voice, he has appeared for Lubbock audiences in opera productions of "Madame Butterfly," "Carmen," "The Barber of Seville," and "Rigoletto."

He has also given solo recitals and sung as soloist with the Tech Choir.

Shin is a native of Seoul, Korea with degrees from Seoul National University and Indiana University. He has sung numerous roles with the Seoul Opera company and the Indiana University Opera Theater. Some of the best known are Germond in "La Traviate," Marcello in "La Boheme," Valentine in "Foust," Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet," and Papageno in "Magic Flute."

He was conductor of the Korean Broadcasting Station Chorus before coming to the United States and was first winner in a National Music contest sponsored by the Korean Government. Monday and Tuesday evening he will perform the "Prologue" of Pagliacci with the symphony.

Judith Burganger, a pianist of high accomplishment, will be performing Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 ("Tonight We Love"). Miss Burganger was recently appointed the Eva Browning Artist-In-Residence at Texas Tech. In two short seasons, she has launched an impressive re-entry into her concert career.

She has performed with such notable conductors as Haitink, Maazel, Tilson Thomas, Akiyama, Mata and Zinman, receiving great critical praise. This past season she performed in Canada and Europe, and has recently returned from a tour of Japan. She has had an active concert schedule, performing with the Chicago Symphony, Pittsburgh Symphony, Buffalo Philharmonic, Detroit Philharmonic, Vancouver Philharmonic, Baltimore Symphony, and the American Symphony Orchestra.

Other engagements have included The Orquestra de la UNAM in Mexico City, the Syracuse Symphony, and the Berlin Symphony.

A native of Buffalo, N.Y., Judith Burganger studied with the late Laura Kelsey, playing her first solo recital at the age of six in the Kleinhans Music Hall in Buffalo. She made her orchestral debut at the age of 12 with the Amherst Symphony. In 1956 she won the Merrriweather Post competition and was invited to attend the inaugural concert for President Eisenhower.

Later she moved to Germany where she pursued her studies at the Stuttgart Musikhochschule with Wladimir Horbowski. In 1965, Judith became the first American to win the International Piano competition in Munich, a success all the more significant since this prize had not beren given for six years. Among other prizes were the International Piano Competition in Geneva, the Cultural Association of German Industry Award and the Association of West German Musikhochschulen award.

Patrons unable to attend the concerts are asked to please call the symphony and release their seats for resale. It is not necessary to return the actual ticket because the manager can write a new ticket. Students are then allowed to purchase these released seats at 8 p.m.Monday and Tuesday.

Benji Reaping Rewards Of Popularity

DALLAS — "The merchandising of Benji products has been very rewarding for the past three years, but the announcement that Benji will have two network television specials airing in 1978 has caused a tremendous upsurge in development of new products relating to the floppy-eared star," reports Joe Camp, president of Mulberry Square Productions and creator of Benji.

With the recent licensing of King-Seeley Thermos (lunch kits), Kellwood (sleeping bags) and Horsman Dolls (children's umbrellas), the little canine star will soon have over 40 different products in the United States marketed by 20 different companies.

In addition to the newest items, the current lineup of Benji products includes: paperback books (Bantam); Viewmaster slides (GAF); posters (Dargis); greeting cards, calendars and accessories (Norcross); T-shirts (Velva-Sheen); children's books, magic slate, coloring books (Western Publishing); paint by number (Craftmaster); board games, puzzles, lotto, dominoes (House Of Games); costumes and masks (Collegeville); stuffed animals (Commonwealth Toy & Novelty Company); poster art (Craft House); bank (Relic Art); Benji & Tiffany gift sets (Breyer Molding); "Benji" and "For The Love Of Benji" soundtrack albums (Epic Records); plus a wide variety of items being manufactured and distributed in various foreign markets.

Benji's first special, "The Phenomenon Of Benji," will air this May and "Benji's Very Own Christmas Story" is scheduled for December. Both will be produced for ABC Television by Mulberry Square.

East German Theater Plans 'Rock' Opera

BERLIN (UPI) — The Rostock municipal theater company in East Germany has begun rehearsals for the country's first rock opera, "Rosa Laub."

The libretto was written by Waltraud Lewin, a well known East German author, while Horst Krueger wrote the music.

Krueger has written numerous pieces for rock groups and singers.

The world premiere, acccording to the East German news agency ADN, has been tentatively scheduled for early 1979.

New Books In Review

THE INVESTIGATION. By Dorothy Uhnak. Simon & Schuster. 345 Pages. $9.95.

When it comes to writing about policemen and how they do their jobs, Dorothy Uhnak ranks right up among the very best.

Once a New York City cop herself, the author gave a major show of her writing talent and special knowledge in the powerful novel "Law and Order." Now she does even better than that in "The Investigation."

The novel deals with the deaths of two very young brothers. They have been murdered. They are the sons of Kitty Keller, a beautiful New York City housewife with a secret life. Not long after the bodies of the dead boys are found in a vacant lot, the police decide the boys were slain by their mother.

But one detective isn't quite so sure that the case is as simple as all that. He's Joe Peters. Despite repeated hints from higher-ups that he should keep his views to himself, Joe decides to conduct an independent investigation to determine if Kitty did kill the boys and if she didn't to find out who did. His hunt takes him into some rather sordid sections of society as well as into the world of the very rich.

As the investigation goes on, the reader is presented with such an array of conflicting evidence that it is impossible to judge whether Kitty is guilty or innocent. And Uhnak is a good enough story spinner to keep the reader hanging until the very surprising ending.

While the story of the investigation itself is constantly absorbing, Uhnak makes it even better with her descriptions of behind the scenes power struggles and her dramatic detailing of police detection techniques. This is a hard book to put down.

THE SECOND DEADLY SIN. By Lawrence Sanders. Putnam. 412 Pages. $9.95.

Those looking for a long, entertaining book to read during a seemingly endless rainy weekend ought to be sure to get their hands on a copy of Lawrence Sanders' "The Second Deadly Sin."

It's a murder mystery to be sure, but far above the average run of such novels. Solving the crime is the thing, of course, and Saunders does so in a most satisfying manner but before the captivated reader finds out who did the dirty deed he is given a fascinating tour of the contemporary art world as well as an in-depth study of how the mind of the modern detective works as he goes about solving the seemingly insolvable.

The detective is Edward X. Delaney, a former New York City chief of detectives called out of retirement to work on and, it's hoped, to solve the murder of Victor Maitland, an artistic genius but a generally loathsome person.

The case interests Delaney because it has proven impossible to crack. To Delaney, this is a disorder and he is a man who "found a curious satisfaction in this task of putting things in order. That's what a cop's job was all about, wasn't it? To restore and maintain order in a disordered world."

All Delaney knows at the start is that Maitland was stabbed repeatedly when he turned his back on someone he apparently knew while working in his studio. Delaney sets out to find out who that someone was and he does, but not before taking a close, compelling look at the art world — the people in it and the way it operates.

With "Dreamland," George V. Higgins continues his move away from the world of small-time criminals. The shift is not a totally happy one.

Higgins is a good storyteller and "Dreamland" is a moderately interesting read — especially when compared to some of the other novels currently being published — but stacked up against his own earlier work it's considerably less in stature. In "The Friends Of Eddie Coyle" and again in "The Digger's Game" and "Cogan's Trade," Higgins drew superb word pictures of life on the seamier side that held the reader magnetized.

Higgins' specialty is dialogue. He is expert in it as he has shown in the earlier novels, and he utilizes it again in "Dreamland." But this time, even though it still rings hard and true, it's just not as interesting, probably because the characters uttering it aren't.

Perhaps it's the shift from the lower class to the upper class, from the world of small-time crooks to the world of big-time lawyers, that causes interest to flag.

"Dreamland" is narrated by Daniel Compton Wills, the fourth generation of his family to practice with the same law firm. When Wills was growing up, his father brought into the household an English widow and her son, Andrew. Although the two boys grew up together, they did not especially like each other and the feeling remains the same over the years, particularly now that Andrew, a crack journalist, is suspicious that Wills' father was a secret agent of sorts during World War II and sets out to prove his thesis.

What is discovered by the time this novel ends is of moderate interest, but not all that exciting nor satisfying.

John Langone went "to the ice" to chronicle the work of the scientists who descend upon Antarctica each summer ostensibly in search of pure and applied knowledge.

But when he got there he turned his reporter's eyes to the broader view of life in Antarctica, and in the process found some handy targets for pomposity-shattering darts of wit.

A science and medicine writer for the Boston Herald-American, Langone paints a vivid portrait of how Antarctica's semi-permanent and transient inhabitants cope with the world's worst climate, and living conditions that are cramped and uncomfortable at best.

He sketches in the background of earlier Antarctic exploration without burying the reader in detail, yet succeeds in conveying the hardships endured by Scott, Amundsen and others who first sought to conquer the South Pole. And, while emphasizing the raw courage that enabled them to challenge the elements, he doesn't shy away from describing such baser instincts as self-aggrandizement — which often played an equally important role in their undertakings.

He looks at the scientists in Antarctica with equally jaundiced eyes, but he is at his best in capturing the spirit of the Navy men (mostly Seabees) who provide the brawn and muscle which keep Antarctica going — and growing — today.

WANT TO GET SMALL? — Steve Martin, that zany comic who managed to win a Grammy Award with his first album last year, will make yet another appearance in Lubbock at 8 p.m. March 31 at the Municipal Auditorium. His last appearance drew a sellout crowd to the Texas Tech University Center theater. Tickets for Martin's upcoming show go on sale Monday morning at the Auditorium box office. There will be only one ticket outlet. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

CONTINENTAL PICKER — Ladd Roberts will play Tuesday through March 26 at the Continental Room Lounge atop Metro Tower, entertaining as a solo on week nights and teaming with Travis Ware on weekends. Ladd began his professional career in the early '70s while a student at Texas Tech University. He has an album out called "Lady Up The Stairs" and has played on the same bill with Willie Nelson, Kinky Friedman, Leon Russell and Dr. Hook. Call the Continental Room for further information.

IMPRESSIVE PICKIN' — Texas guitarist Kurt Van Sickle drew large crowds to the University Center courtyard at Texas Tech University Wednesday with a free display of picking and singing. Van Sickle has been featured on nationwide TV and has headlined the American Folk Festival and Kerrville Folk Festival. His appearance was yet another Courtyard Concert, one of a series offered by Tech as free entertainment. (Staff Photo by Paul Moselv)

MERLE TO TRY IT AGAIN — After being snowed out of Lubbock last month, country music star Merle Haggard will be giving it the old try again this week. He's booked to return to Cold Water Country Wednesday night, with the club management making some unique plans to accomodate his fans. Haggard's appearance at the club last July saw crowds lined up for the equivalent of city blocks. For this reason, Cold Water will open its doors at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday. The Rob Moorman Band will begin playing at 6:30 p.m., followed by The Moonlighters and two sets by Merle Haggard. The Moonlighters, an excellent band in its own right, will then headline Thursday night's show. Ticket information for both the Wednesday concert by Merle Haggard and the Thursday concert by The Moonlighters is available by calling Cold Water Country. Those who purchased tickets for last month's Haggard appearance may use the same ducats for this week's show.

11th Annual Jazz Band Festival Set

The 11th annual jazz band festival at Texas Tech University will wind up with a public concert at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Texas Tech University Center theater.

your National Parks Right Around Home
by Ben Moffett

LYNDON B JOHNSONn National HIstoric Site is in the Hill Country of central Texas. The green rolling grasslands are outlined by spreading live oaks and junipers, better known to local folks as cedars.

In spring, wild flowers add masses of color to the countryside, which molded the life of the 36th President of the United States. "It is impossible to live on this land without being a part of it, without being shaped by its qualities," President Johnson said of the Hill Country.

Last year almost 400,000 visitors came to see this historic site which consists of two units—the Boyhood Home and the Johnson Settlement in Johnson City, Tex. and the LBJ Ranch, located some 15 miles away on Highway 290.

The frontier heritage that shaped the life of Lyndon Johnson is recalled at the Johnson Settlement. Visitors, after a brief orientation in the visitor center, walk across the street and take a guided tour through the former President's boyhood Home.

On this 20-minute tour, you'll see the home President Johnson lived in from age five. Here are some of the symbols and images that helped structure his view of how the world ought to be.

AFTER TOURING THE Boyhood Home and the other buildings in the area such as the washhouse, barn and outhouse, you're ready to begin participating in some Park Service "living history."

Take a horse-drawn wagon ride to a nearby area where Lyndon Johnson's grandparents lived in the 1860s. Qualified mule skinners take you on the free ride to the settlement while chatting with you about the background of the Johnson Family.,

Hop off the wagon at the Exhibit Center—a modern building constructed of native rock—and get a firm grip on the two time periods you'll be looking at. The first, 1867-1872, deals with the President's grandparents and the open-range cattle industry of the Americans west; the second, 1872-1900, interprets the close of the open-range cattle industry in the Hill Country and the conversion of the frontier to a settled agriculture and stock cattle economy.

Living history abounds. Smell the food cooking on the open fireplace as meals are prepared in the 1860s long house.

Talk to the chuckwagon cook as he prepares a meal for hungry cowboys. The chuckwagon is patterned after those that accompanied Kansas cattle drives.

Look at the Longhorn cattle pastured in a nearby field, illustrating the type of cattle the Johnsons were driving to Kansas in the 1867-1892 era.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE personnel, dressed in historic costume, are stationed in the area, doing the chores of another era. You can ask questions as you tour the historic John Bruckner Barn, the Sam Ealy Johnson Log House and a stone building that served, at various times, as a cooler, smokehouse and storehouse.

When you've finished soaking up the sounds, smells and sights of this historic area, which will take an hour or so, you can catch a wagon back to the Boyhood Home or walk over a marked path. The distance is about a quarter mile.

After the tour of the Johnson City site, you're only half done. Take Highway 290 west and you are at LBJ State Park and the LBJ Ranch area. Another three hours are required to see this equally interesting spot on the Pedernales River, which will be taken up in another article.

IF YOUR AREplanning to visit a National Park Service area on your vacation, write the agency at P.O. BOx 728, Room P, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501. You'll be sent a free vacation planning guide that lists NPS areas within an easy drive of your home and charts the facilities and services available at each.

Campus Ministries Set Hunger Emphasis Days

Campus Ministries at Texas Tech are sponsoring Hunger Emphasis Days Tuesday and Wednesday.

Two goals for the special days are to increase community awareness about the world's hungry people; and to raise money to feed some of the hungry while more permanent solutions to hunger are sought.

A meal will be served at St. John's United Methodist Church at 7 p.m. Tuesday, followed by a fast which will last until midnight Wednesday. Money saved by the fast will be donated to the Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP).

"Hunger Emphasis Day" for Lubbock was proclaimed by Mayor Roy Bass for Wednesday and all residents were urged to give thought to the "worthwhile endeavor and to help people throughout the world who are less fortunate."

U.S. Women Plan Assault On Annapurna

By BHOLA RANA

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — A 10-member expedition of American women is planning an assault on a 26,504-foot mountain in central Nepal, a rare and difficult mountaineering feat if it can be accomplished.

The leader of the expedition is Arlene Blum, a 32-year-old biochemist at the University of California at Berkeley and a member of the American Bicentennial team which scaled Mt. Everest.

"They are serious," said Michael Cheny, the expedition representative in Katmandu and base camp manager of the successful British Everest team of 1975. "They are getting support."

The peak in question is Mt. Annapurna, first climbed by a French team in 1950 in an epic led by the renowned alpinist Maurice Herzog. He nearly lost his life in the endeavor.

Miss Blum's team hopes to assemble in Katmandu by the first week of August and then make an arduous month-long trek to their base camp at the foot of Annapurna. She was here in December for a survey of the mountain she and her distaff colleagues will attempt to conquer.

Female expeditions are rare in the Nepalese Himalayas, although a Japanese women's expedition scaled Everest three years ago.

Miss Blum has decided to abandon the 1950 French route to the summit of Annapurna — through the north face — because it is highly avalanche-prone. The American women will instead take the northeast ridge, which will involve more rock climbing.

Cheny said the team would have to pitch five to six camps before the final assault. The climb has the endorsement of the American Alpine Club and requisite permission of the Nepalese government, he said.

What will make the climb still more hazardous is that the women will be climbing in the autumn season, which is shorter, colder and more windy than the spring season. The latter is longer but warmer and the fierce winds blowing on the face of the Hmalayas from Tibet are not as strong.

The northeast route was only recently opened to mountaineering by the Nepalese government. It had been closed for a number of years because the approach to Annapurna passed through Tibetan Khampa-controlled areas from which the Khampas launched raids into Tibet against units of the Chinese army.

But the northern route still is not as hazardous as the south, which now is scrupulously avoided by expeditions after a number of serious accidents.

Ramblin' Rhodes

—By DON RHODES

"SOMEONE ONCE TOLD me, 'You're the king of country music.' I said to him, 'Don't remember I'm the king. Just remember I'm one of the boys who sings country music and enjoys it."

The reply was an understatement for the man sitting in his favorite chair in dressing room No. 1 backstage at the Grand Old Opry House.

To say Roy Acuff is just "one who sings country music" is like saying Jimmy Carter is just "one who likes politics" or Reggie Jackson is just "one who likes sports" or Billy Graham is just "one who likes to preach."

ROY ACUFF

A short time after telling that story, Acuff was in the back of the buffet line with other Opry stars for the WSM luncheon when humorist Jerry Clower offered to move Acuff to the head of the line. "Someone who has done as much for the world-famous Opry as you should not be waiting in line," Clower said. Acuff politely declined, apparently preferring to be "one of the boys."

AT THE TRUTH of the matter, Roy Acuff IS the Grand Ole Opry. He represents the Opry more than any one individual. His yo-yoing, balancing his fiddle bow on his nose and singing "Wabash Cannonball" and "The Great Speckled Bird" are still what many people most vividly recall from their visits to the Opry.

George Hay founded the Opry in 1925, with Acuff joining the Opry show in 1937. Acuff had married Mildred Douglas on Christmas Day in 1936.

She says of their long marriage, "I don't know if there is a secret to it really. I think it takes a lot on both sides." The Acuffs live on the highest peak of land on the side of the Cumberland River opposite the side containing Opryland, but they cannot see the amusement park from their home due to trees and buildings.

Acuff's honored position at the Opry makes him the only star who is always assigned dressing room No. 1, the closest to the Opry stage. Still, he downplays his importance.

"YOU WILL FIND me tomorrow or the next day to be the same type of person," he said during our conversation. "I'm not wishy-washy. That's not how I live."

He continued, "I've always tried to be an honest person, more than anything else. I look to other people hoping they are like me, honest in every way. I don't live one week to another to just sing songs for people to cheer me."

When asked specifically what he believes will be his legacy—what he hopes people will remember him for—Acuff paused a few seconds to think. Then he replied with a far-off, serious look on his face, "I think someone else will have to answer that other than Roy Acuff. I think, though, there's more to an entertainer than singing a song or playing a musical instrument.

"He has to impress people with his own self. Each day of his life he's representing himself and what he stands for. Bill Monroe represents bluegrass music, but he also represents Bill Monroe. That's where a lot fail. They think if they have a hit song, they've got it made, but they have to follow it up and stay with it.

"You can't be one fellow one day and one fellow another. If you're going to perform country music, perform it all the time. I don't fall out with a person because he does songs I don't like to do. Be thankful for what you've got."

HE DISCUSSED the warm applause he receives when he does his old numbers. When I said true American music fans will always like the old songs as well as the new, Acuff replied, "I think that, too. I hope we're both right. I can see where they are trying to kill it out and destroy it. I think, though, it will continue to be successful as long as people play it."

Acuff was asked if he lives his own life to the old adage of being true to yourself. "I've tried to do that to a certain extent," he replied. "You can't satisfy everyone. If you can get a small percentage to like you, you should be happy. I hope I have a good following."

Sheep Have Hair, Not Wool

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — To the layman a herd of experimental sheep at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center look like ordinary white or black sheep.

But they have hair instead of wool.

The exotic newcomers, natives of the West Indies, are being used in a search to intensify lamb meat production.

Dr. Charles Parker, animal scientist at the center, has 15 Barbados and 15 St. Croix sheep, 11 ewes and four rams of each breed. In the distance the snow-white St. Croix look like normal sheep that have been shorn of wool. The Barbados have short brown hair and black underlines and look somewhat like deer at first glance.

Parker is interested in a number of traits which these hair sheep are said to have. He said they were reported to have early sexual maturity, high lambing rates, short breeding intervals, natural resistance to internal parasites and greater heat tolerance than standard breeds.

Parker will work with the test animals to verify to what extent the traits exist. He has crossbred both the Barbados and St. Croix with some Rambouillet to see if any of these traits can be incorporated into available standard breeds.

The offspring from the crossbreeds are an interesting mixture of lambs with hair and lambs with brown and black wool in varying patterns.

The Univeristy of Florida at Gainesville and Utah State University at Logan are cooperatively experimenting with the St. Croix to see if performance results are similar in different parts of the country.

Other experiments involve the hair sheep, their offspring, and the crosses with other breeds under complete year-round confinement and partial confinement combined with forage utilization.

'All-America Boy' Lives Down Stigma Of 'Bad' Discharge

By PAULA BUTTURINI

DALLAS (UPI) — In 1964 Tommy Thompson was an allstate linebacker, co-captain of the Irving High School football team, a class officer and prizewinning artist.

Two and a half years later he had received a bad conduct discharge from the U.S. Army for possessing and smoking opium and assault in Vietnam; been committed to a state mental hospital; been diagnosed a chronic alcoholic and drug abuser; been arrested seven times and been disowned by his parents.

Today Thompson has a steady job, earns $25,000 a year by working 65 hours a week, has remarried the woman he divorced during the time he says he was "crazy," and has not been arrested since 1967 when he joined Alcoholics Anonymous.

Thompson said he has sat back quietly for 10 years, accepting the consequences of his "crazy" period. The consequences included loss of all VA benefits including disability, education, home loan guarantees, hospitalization and medical care and loss of civil rights such as the right to vote, run for public office or carry a firearm outside his home.

Now, he said, the time has come for some forgiveness. He said he believes he has received harsher treatment than most Vietnam drug addicts simply because he was arrested, charged and convicted early in the Vietnam conflict — before the Army had established the drug rehabilitation programs organized when hard drug use became a widespread problem.

Thompson said he first tried opium in Vietnam while he and eight other Americans were stationed with two Korean divisions.

He explained: "There was no liquor and some Koreans smoked opium. I liked it. It gave me a relief."

Thompson was transferred back to his regular American outfit after he "OD'd real bad one day with some Koreans and caused a ruckus." Addicted by that time, he was confined to his tent. He slipped out to town for more of the drug, got caught, and bit two soldiers who were trying to restrain him.

That got him transferred to the Saigon stockade — "where I really learned to take drugs" — and he remained there for two months awaiting trial.

"All I knew was I faced 11 years imprisonment. I met a civil lawyer and he got me a guilty plea with six months confinement at hard labor, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and a bad conduct discharge. All I knew was it looked a lot better than 11 years. And I was guilty in my own mind," he said.

Army sources said Thompson probably got harsher treatment than he might otherwise have received because of the assault charges.

Property Should Be Properly Marked

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

Property identification techniques date back as far as 3,000 years when ancient Chinese rulers used their thumb print in wax to form a seal of authority identifying the item bearing the kingly seal as belonging to and originating with the person whose print is embedded in the wax.

The use of a fingerprint seal has been used as recently as 1882 when Gilbert Thompson of the U.S. Geologic Survey led an expedition into what is now New Mexico. He used the thumbprint seal technique to verify the authenticity of purchase orders. It semms that even among the ranks of his trusted followers were those whose integrity and honesty were something less than desirable.

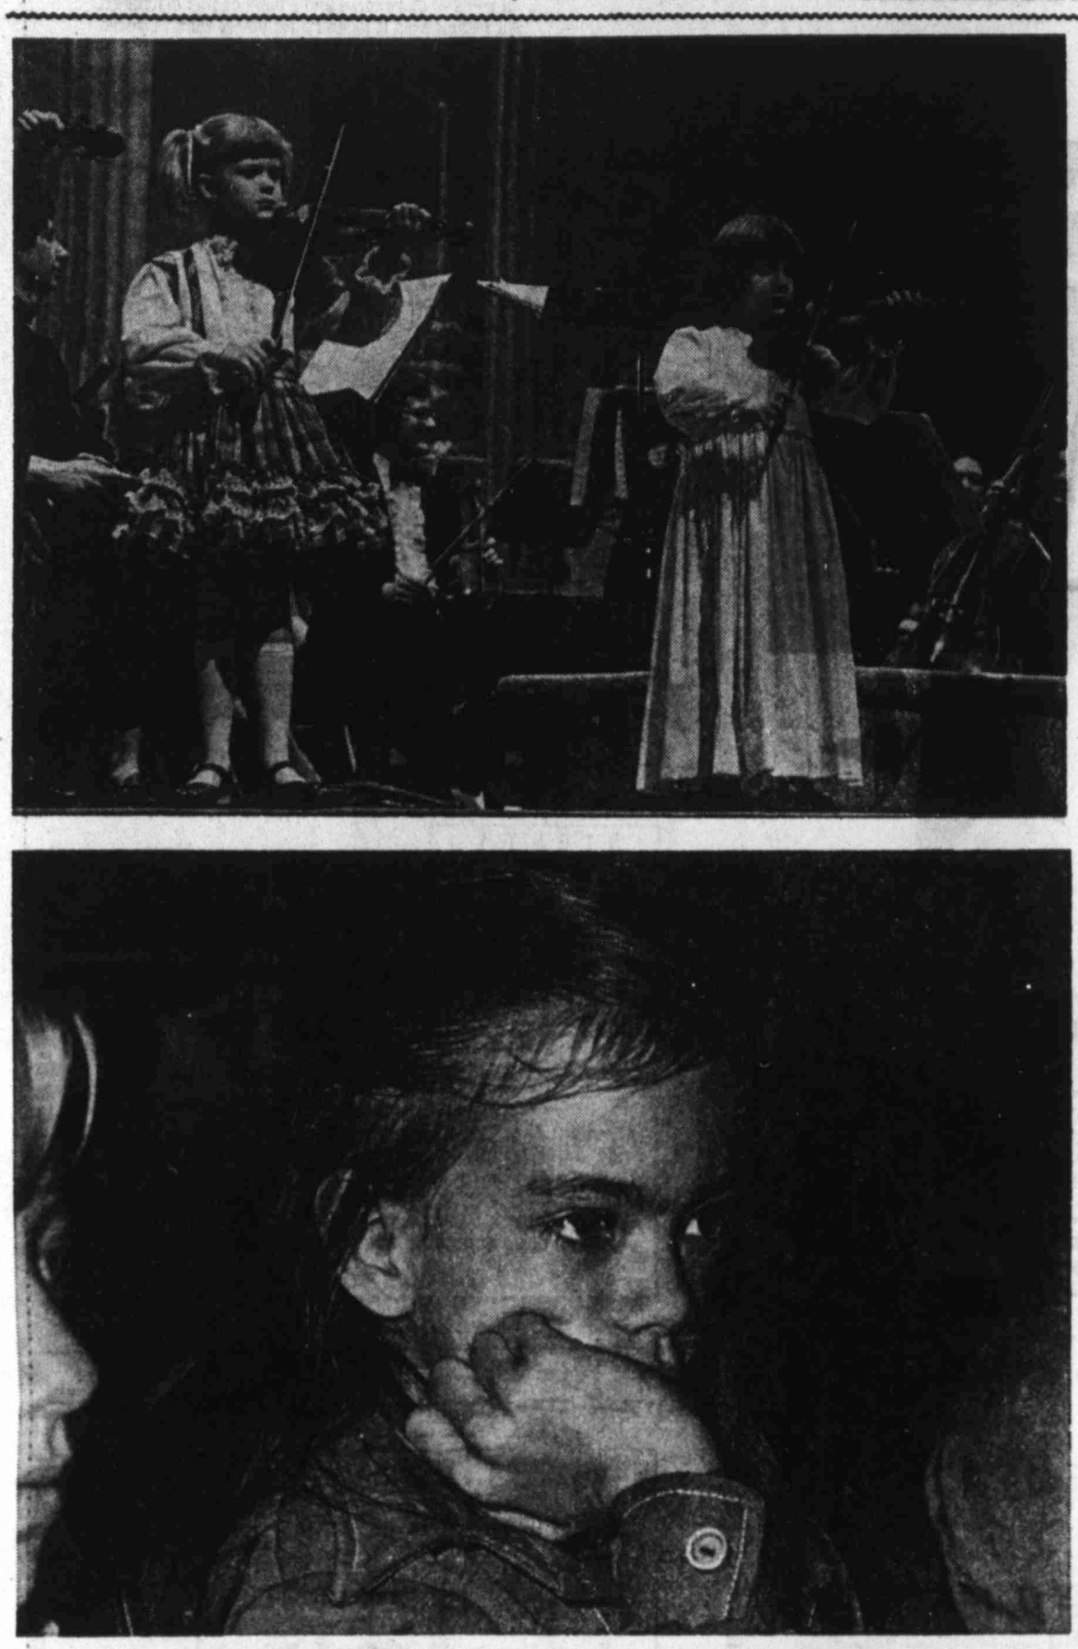

Times have changed and so have the methods used to identify personal property. Individual "marks" and "symbols" have long been used to represent the "signature" of the user. In fact such symbols are not uncommon even today in the interior of Mexico. Even among the educated classes.

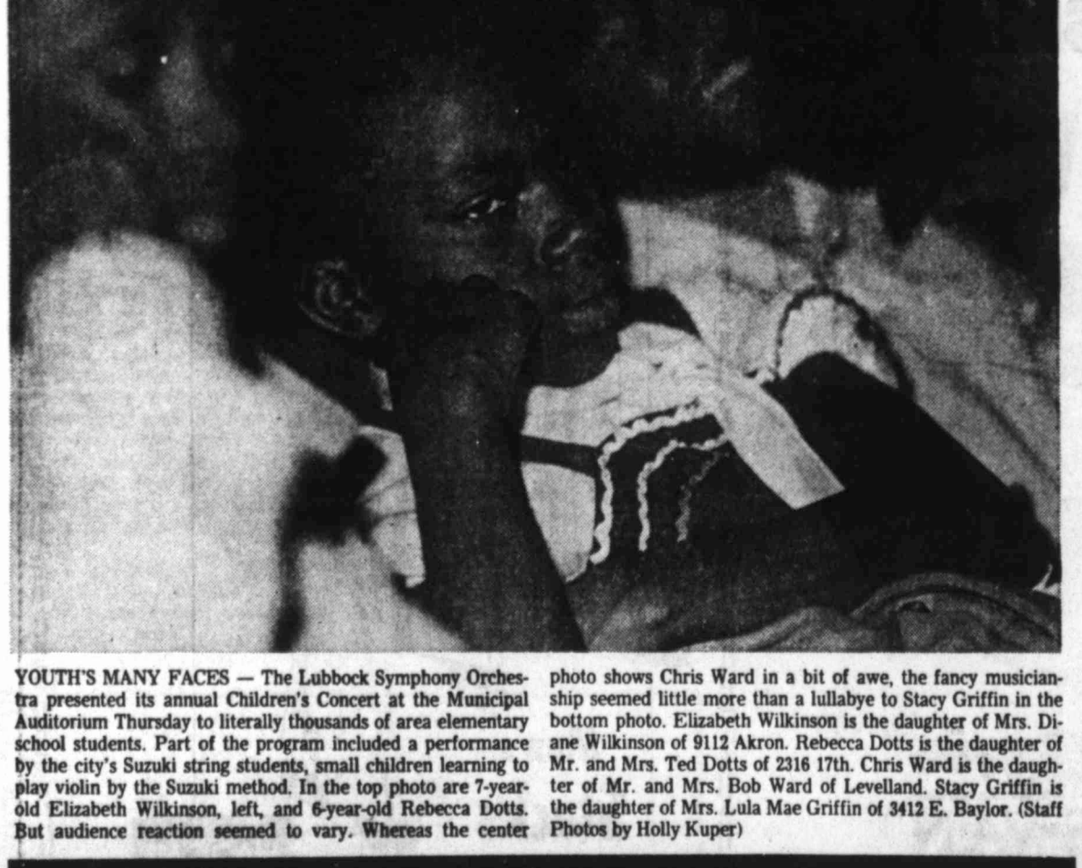

To a large degree the seal or symbol has found its place in the productive societies throughout the world. Consider the emblem on your automobile. No other manufacturer is permitted to use an emblem so similar to it that a person might mistake that company's "seal" as belonging to another firm.

Distinctive symbols which are properly registered and recorded are used to identify livestock. Sometimes these symbols are little more than the way in which an ear is "notched." In more frequent instances the use of metal tags and tatoos are employed, although branding with a hot iron is widely used to identify horses and cattle.

All valuable property should be sealed with an identifying "mark" that sets that property aside as belonging to one and only one person and family.

You have an identifying number like no other and it should be placed on your valuable property. It's your drivers license number.

Does your spouse know where to find important family papers and docuemtns —for example, insurance policies, bank books, wills, deeds, tax records, stocks and bonds, records of purchase and sale? If not, you're risking extra hardship, including legal and tax difficulties, for your family in the event of your death, especially if you should die suddenly.

The standard deduction for married taxpayers filing jointly and for certain widows and widowers with dependent children has been increased to $3,200. Therefore, don't assume that it's better to itemize than to take the standard deduction, even if you've been itemizing in the past. Work out your tax returns both ways to be certain you're paying only the tax that's necessary.

CERTIFIED COTTON SEED

Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Regional Irrigated Cotton Variety Tests show Paymaster 303* is #1.

1. The recently completed 5-year (1972-1976) summary of cotton variety performance at Lubbock shows that Paymaster 303 yielded more pounds of lint per acre than any of the 25 competitive cotton varieties tested.

2. In a single year test (1976) at Lubbock, Lamesa and Halfway, Paymaster 303 yielded more lint lbs. per acre than any of the 30 competitive cotton varieties tested.

3. A 2-year study at Lubbock of the effect of commonly used herbicides on various cotton varieties proved Paymaster 303 to be the most tolerant to herbicides of any cotton variety on the market.

The rapid acceptance of this variety placed it on approximately ½ million High Plains cotton acres just two years after its release. Paymaster 303* is not just a variety for wilt ground but for a wide range of conditions including old corn or sorghum ground and late planting.

If you are not planting this variety in 1978 — it just might be costing you money.

Super Heavy Elements Program Expected To Draw Scientists

Some 100 leading scientists from 15 countries and 50 or more institutions will meet at Texas Tech University Thursday through Saturday to report on and hear reports on what may be the latest developments in the search for super heavy elements.

The "International Symposium on Super Heavy Elements," according to Texas Tech physicist M. A. K. Lodhi, International Advisory Committee chairman, will look at the latest laboratory and natural evidence regarding the existing or non-existence of super heavy elements.

There also will be reports on the latest theoretical predictions regarding stability, reaction mechanisms, possible methods of production and structure of the elements. The meeting will make possible discussion of unsolved and controversial problems in this area.

It will provide opportunity to focus on needed critical experiments and calculations and foster interchange of ideas among specialists in this area and researchers in related areas.

The search for possible phenomena in super-heavy-element research could make universal contributions, Lodhi said. It is possible that if such elements were found, they could provide a variety of applications for the benefit of human society.

The research may reveal other findings, and entirely new phenomena in other research areas could be discovered, the Texas Tech physicist said.

The scientists are challenged by the unknown, and their innate curiosity can lead to discoveries which would have almost revolutionary results not only in the fields of physics and other sciences but also in other disciplines and knowledge, he said.

At least two Nobel Laureates and three Bonner Laureates are participating. The Nobel Laureates are Drs. E. M. McMillan and G. T. Seaborg of the University of California, Berkeley; the Bonner Laureates, Drs. H. Feshback of Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), W. A. Fowler of California Insitute of Technology, Pasadena, and M. Goldhaber of Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island.

The Nobel prize is the highest given in general physics, and the Bonner the highest in nuclear physics.

Richard C. Atkinson of Washington, D.C., director of the National Science Foundation, also will attend and participate.

Seven sessions will be held, all in the University Center Senate Room. The first is scheduled for Thursday morning and the last on Saturday. An informal work session also will be arranged, if possible, in which the work in progress and incomplete reports can be presented with free discussion, Lodhi said. This work is not intended to be included in the proceedings.

W. O. Milligan, director of research, Welch Foundation, will chair the opening session. The inaugural lecture will be delivered by O. Lewin Keller of Oak Ridge National Laboratories. It will present an overview on the history and perspective of the search for super heavy elements.

The second Thursday morning session will be on searches for super heavy elements as accelerators. That afternoon's program will be on the quest for the elements in nature.

Friday sessions are on theoretical predictions for the elements and relevant atomic phenomena. Saturday meetings are on model and techniques pertaining to super heavy elements, as well as a final plenary session.

A summary of the symposium will be presented at the plenary session by Dr. George Cowan of Los Alamos, N.M., Scientific Laboratory.

Two outstanding women scientists will deliver papers at the symposium. Dr. Darleane C. Hoffman of Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, will summarize work being done in Russia. Dr. Daphne F. Jackson of the University of Surrey, England, will present the proposal of a new theory designed to help identify super heavy elements.

Tenneco Plans New Natural Gas Project

HOUSTON (Special) -Tenneco Inc. has announced plans for a new natural gas storage project that will improve significantly Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co.'s ability to meet peak-day delivery requirements on its interstate natural gas transmission system.

Tennessee Gas Pipeline is a Tenneco division and the operator of a multi-line, Texas-to-New England pipeline system with gas deliveries to utilities serving 21 states.

A new subsidiary, Tennessee Storage Co., and Southern Gas Storage Co., a subsidiary of Southern Natural Gas Co., will participate in a joint venture for the development of an underground natural gas storage project in the Bear Creek field, Bienville Parish, Louisiana.

The project, estimated to cost about $260 million, including related pipeline facilities, is designed to provide Tennessee Gas Pipeline and Southern Natural each with about 32 billion cubic feet of additional storage capacity and each with a maximum winter peak-day deliverability of 450 million cubic feet.

The two companies expect to file a joint application with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission soon for authority to develop the Bear Creek storage project. If prompt regulatory approvals are received, service from the new facilities may be available for the 1980-81 winter season.

Sun Announces Contract For New Platforms

HOUSTON (Special) -Sun Production Co. has announced it has contracted for construction of two, 12-slot offshore platforms to be installed on the outer continental shelf approximately 100 miles off the Gulf Coast of Louisiana.

One will be located in East Cameron Block 338 and the other in Eugene Island Block 380.

The platforms will support additional development and operate as satellites in conjunction with primary platforms already in place.

The Bayou Black Division of Avondale Shipyards Inc., Morgan City, La., will fabricate both platforms, with completion set for August, 1978.

Installation will be by J. Ray McDermott Inc., also of Morgan City.

Participating with Sun in Block 380 are Anadarko Production Co., Diamond Shamrock Corp., Pan Eastern Exploration Co., and Texas Pacific Oil Co. Inc.

Plant Construction Slated By Champlin

FORT WORTH (Special) -Construction of a 400 million pound per year petrochemical manufacturing facility at Corpus Christi, has been announced by William T. Smith, president of Champlin Petroleum Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Union Pacific Corp.

The $27-million plant, scheduled to be completed in the first quarter of 1980, will be located at Champlin's Corpus Christi refinery.

Feedstocks for the facility will be supplied from the recently expanded Champlin refinery and from the Corpus Christi Petrochemical Co. complex now under construction nearby, in which Champlin has 37.5 percent interest.

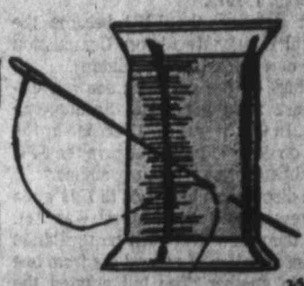

Product from the new plant will be marketed by Champlin's Petrochemical Department. A large portion of the plant's output is already committed under a long-term contract to a major industrial company.

In commenting on Champlin's petrochemical interests, Smith said, "This plant further expands Champlin's participation in the growing petrochemical industry in the U.S.A."

If fuel costs are squeezing the profit out of your corn crop, plant

PIONEER. BRAND 3780

The Cost Cutter

Less Irrigation Cost — Lower Harvest Costs Because of Lower Moisture — Less Drying Cost

Pioneer® brand 3780 can cut your costs to improve corn profits in four ways —

★ Less Irrigation Cost — 3780 needs less total water than commonly grown corns because it grows off fast. And because of its early water use, 3780 uses early-season rainfall more efficiently than other corns or crops.

★ Less Harvest & Hauling Cost — Fast drydown with good standability and ear retention lets 3780 dry in the field — you harvest and haul less moisture from the field.

★ Lower Potential Weather and Insect Loss — Because of its rapid growth feature and fast drydown, 3780 is ready for harvest well ahead of commonly grown corns. Fewer days in the field mean less exposure to potential bad weather and late-season insect problems.

MORE NET INCOME PER ACRE

High Plains farmers have consistently found 3780 producing more net income per acre than competitive corns of later maturity . . . even though the green weight of later maturing corns may have been more.

With 3780, you don't take big cuts in yield like you might expect. In fact, in 96 tests under many conditions in the past four years, 3780 has averaged 7,817 pounds per acre. Few farmers will boast of a higher four-year-average, dry-corn yield than this.

Yields like you'd expect from corn with input costs similar to grain sorghum . . . that adds up to more net income per acre.

Helmuth Quebe — Plainview
Planting date: April 11
Harvest date: August 20
Results: 8,200 lbs./A. at 15.0% moisture; prewater plus three waterings; outyielded later maturing competitive corn by 600 lbs./A.
His comment: "I like 3780 because of its early maturity."

R. E. Lance — Hereford
Planting date: April 20
Harvest date: September 25
Results: 6,500 lbs./A. at 19% moisture; watered 3 times.
His comment: "3780 did as good as I thought it would."

Don Ott — Dimmitt
Planting date: April 27
Harvest date: September 10
Results: 8,590 lbs./A. at 19% moisture; watered 5 times.
His comment: "3780 had a very good yield for a fast maturing variety."

Vernon Jackson — Stratford
Planting time: April 7
Harvest date: August 5
Results: 8,680 lbs./A. at 16.5% moisture; watered 5 times. Popular competitive variety in same field planted earlier, received 1 additional watering, yielded less, and was harvested 12 days later at 24.5% moisture.

PIONEER. BRAND SEEDS

J. L. Francis — Kress
Planting date: June 2
Harvest date: October 20
Results: 7,100 lbs./A. at 14% moisture; watered 5 times.
His comment: "My 3780 was planted after a hail and I was really satisfied with the results."

Cotton Farmer's Corn

3780 is an ideal companion crop for cotton because of its unusual water use pattern. Because it reaches peak demand much earlier than cotton or sorghum, 3780 promises better irrigation efficiency than sorghum when used as a companion crop to cotton.

Supreme Court Adds New Pages To Gas Price Control History

A-J Oil News

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has added another chapter to the turbulent history of the natural gas price controls dispute that dates back to 1938.

Congress possibly will write the next major chapter if and when a conference committee deadlock on natural gas price controls is broken.

The Supreme Court has refused to change a lower court ruling upholding wellhead ceiling prices the old Federal Power Commission established for new natural gas sold in interstate commerce since Jan. 1, 1973.

Last October, the FPC became the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in the new Department of Energy.

Rulings on the gas price controls dispute are nothing new to the Supreme Court. In fact, it was a 5-3 decision by the court on June 7, 1954, that gave the FPC its wellhead price regulatory authority.

The dispute can be traced to 1938 when Congress passed the Natural Gas Act. Until then there had been no regulation of transportation of natural gas from one state to another. The bill granted the FPC certain regulatory authority at the consumer end of interstate pipeline sales but said such authority should not apply to the production and gathering of natural gas.

In the years that followed, the FPC ruled on 11 separate occasions it did not have authority over wellhead prices of natural gas sold by independent producers to interstate pipeline companies.

The 11th such ruling by the FPC prompted the legal battle the Supreme Court eventually settled in 1954 by saying the commission held regulatory authority over wellhead prices on interstate sales.

The 1954 decision was preceded and followed by presidential vetoes of bills that would have eliminated such federal authority at the wellhead.

In the early 1940s, producers, fearful the FPC eventually might change its position, began pressing for congressional action to clarify the Natural Gas Act by spelling out the FPC's lack of jurisdiction.

The Senate approved such a bill on March 29, 1950, and the House sent it on to the White House two days later.

On April 15, 1950, however, President Harry S. Truman vetoed the bill, saying "to remove the authority to regulate, as this bill would do, does not seem to be wise public policy."

Truman also said the bill would have imposed limitations upon effective competition among sellers of natural gas.

The 1954 Supreme Court ruling renewed the producer efforts for congressional action and another decontrol bill reached the White House in early 1956.

On Feb. 17, 1956, however, President Dwight D. Eisenhower vetoed the bill despite saying "I am in accord with the basic provisions."

Eisenhower blamed the veto on arrogant lobbying tactics by "only a very small segment of a great and vital industry." He said such individuals "have been seeking to further their own interests by highly questionable activities."

Both the bills that were vetoed had survived extremely close votes in final passage in the House, 176-174 in 1950 and 209-203 in 1956.

With Eisenhower's endorsement, another decontrol bill appeared to have excellent chances of reaching the White House in 1958 until a $100 a plate Republican fund raising dinner in Houston set off a political furor.

A letter promoting the dinner had said it would be up to Rep. Joe Martin, R-Mass., then the House minority leader and the dinner's honor guest, to muster "Republican votes to pass the gas bill this year."

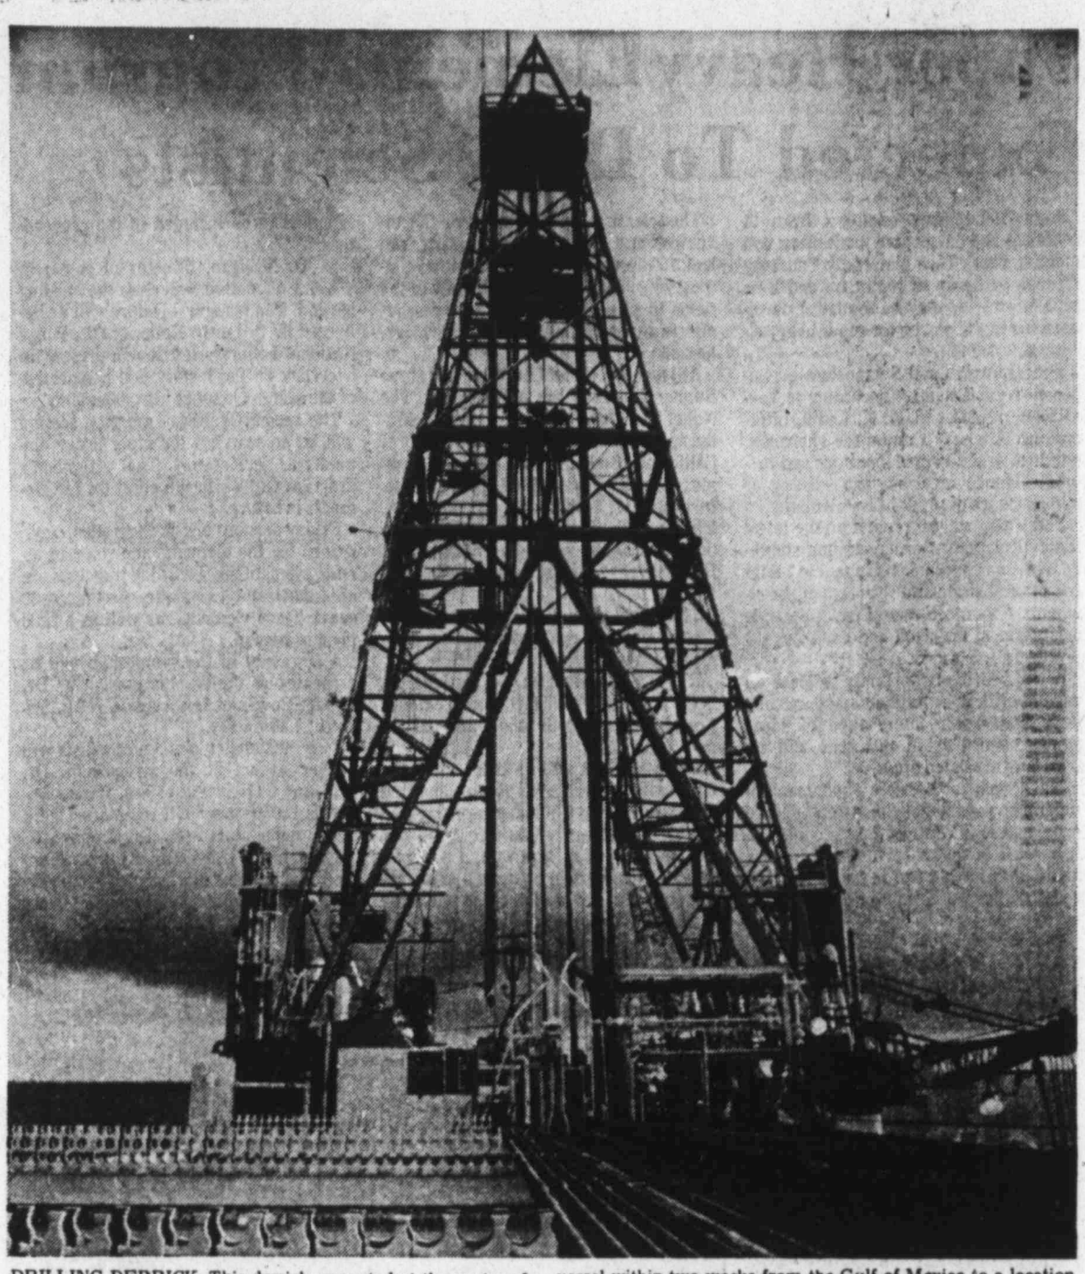

Martin and the White House disavowed knowledge of the letter.

The National Republican Committee refused to accept any funds from the dinner.

The Democratic National Committee blasted the episode as a "shoddy exercise in mass bribery, a flagrant exchange of money for votes, cynical and unethical."

The gas bill was dead.

The decontrol bill was dead.

DRILLING DERRICK–This derrick, mounted at the center of the Glomar Pacific, is used to raise and lower drill pipe and other equipment employed in drilling. Exxon U.S.A. will move the vessel within two weeks from the Gulf of Mexico to a location 95 miles off the New Jersey coast to begin exploratory drilling on leases in the Baltimore Canyon area.

Industry Plans Call For New Expenditures

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -The petroleum industry plans to spend a record $28.9 billion on U.S. capital and exploration projects this year, 8.8 percent more than the estimated outlay during 1977, the previous peak year.

The combined budget, projected in the Oil & Gas Journal's annual capital-spending survey, has increased every year since 1972.

This year's planned outlay is 10.4 percent higher than domestic capital spending during 1976, latest year for which final figures are available, and more than three times the budget levels characteristic of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Included in the survey are 13 gas-pipeline firms with plans to spend $534.9 million for U.S. exploration and production this year, compared with $362.6 million in 1977.

Also in the Journal is a new supplement showing foreign-spending plans of 19 American oil companies. The respondents say they plan to invest $8.5 billion in capital and exploration outside the U.S.—39.5 percent more than their estimated foreign expenditures in 1977.

Spending for U.S. drilling and exploration, production and Outer Continental Shelf lease bonuses will account for more than two-thirds of the total budget this years as the industry tries to shore up U.S. production and reserves.

Capital outlays in those categories will be 12 percent higher than they were last year and 5.6 percent higher than they were in 1976.

The 1978 drilling and exploration is $10.5 billion, up 12.3 percent from estimated spending of $9.3 billion last year. The production budget this year is $6.7 billion, compared with $6.6 billion in 1977.

OCS lease bonus expenditures are expected to total $2.4 billion, a 53 percent increase over last year, when only two offshore lease sales were held.

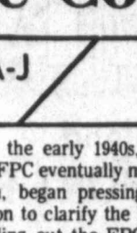

The Journal also conducted a survey of the Canadian petroleum industry. In both polls, figures from respondents were extrapolated to reflect industry-wide spending plans.

The Canadian petroleum industry's capital and exploration budget this year is 13.5 percent less than its record 1977 outlay. Biggest spending cutbacks are in refining, transportation and lease bonuses.

The Canadian total budget for 1978 is $5 billion, compared with $5.8 billion last year and $3.8 billion in 1976.

In exploration and production, the Canadian industry plans a 1.4 percent increase over the 1977 budget, even though the lease bonus component is down 40.6 percent to $425 million. Canadian firms plan to spend $1.6 billion for drilling and exploration, compared with $1.5 billion last year, and $1.2 billion for production, compared with $1 billion last year.

Companies in the U.S. survey sample accounted for 17.2 percent of U.S. wells drilled in 1977.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

DEMAND FOR PETROLEUM, which has been growing rapidly during the past several years, is beginning to show signs of slowing down.

The Energy Research & Education Foundation of Rice University reports that demand during December, 1977, was 19.56 million barrels, a decline from the peak of 20.50 million barrels daily in December, 1976.

Throughout the year, however, consumption did increase by 306 million barrels (5 percent) above the 6.38 billion barrels used in 1976.

On a worldwide scale, production of oil set a record of 59.8 million barrels a day last year. The rate of increase was lower, with the 1977 growth figured at 4.4 percent, compared to a 7.9 percent increase during 1976.

Both demand and imports decreased in January of this year, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

The API lists total demand for petroleum products at 19.31 million barrels per day, compared to 20.68 million barrels per day in January, 1977.

Crude oil imports fell 7.7 percent from an average of 6.3 million barrels per day in January, 1977, to an average of 5.8 million barrels per day during the first month of this year.

INDUSTRY OBSERVERS do not believe that favorable trend will continue, however.

Frank N. Ikard, API president, said, "The improvement in January of our petroleum supply-demand situation was more apparent than real. Demand declined relative to January, 1977, because the weather was warmer and because natural gas was in greater supply. However, the heavy snowfall and the continuing coal strike will probably have substantial impact upon the report for February.

"The increase in crude oil production," Ikard said, "was merely a reflection of the rising output from the Alaskan North Slope. Elsewhere, production showed no perceptible increase as no major new areas came into production."

Total U.S. oil production is estimated by the Energy Research & Education Foundation to have increased by 35.5 million barrels to 3.01 billion barrels in 1977, for the first increase since 1970. All the increase was in the last six months of the year, following completion of the Alaska North Slope pipeline. Without production from the North Slope, 1977 crude oil production would have shown a decrease of 74 million barrels from 1976 volumes.

The United States imported a total of 3.15 billion barrels of crude oil and refined oil products during 1977, compared with 2.67 billion barrels in 1976. Imports represented 47.1 percent of all oil consumed in the U.S. last year.

THE TIGHT OIL MARKET which accompanied the embargo and the original price hikes has now vanished, according to Frank M. Sands of David L. Babson & Co. Inc.

He notes that many industry observers now feel that the prospect of an oil shortage has been delayed, at least until the mid-1980's.

"Public policies have made little contribution to this change, although more efficient energy use and substitution of alternative fuels have helped somewhat," Sands reported in a recent issue of the company's weekly staff letter.

"The real cause has been the predictable market reaction to higher prices for this vital fuel: slower growth, both in the overall world economy and in the demand for oil. Exploration for new oil has picked up in response to higher prices, improving the supply picture for the next few years," he said.

Sands says the moderate improvement in the oil outlook is merely a reprieve, not a pardon.

"The Free World remains hooked on petroleum, and the addiction will take a long time to cure. Switching over to other fuels is extremely difficult, costly and time-consuming, and counter-productive government policies are making it more so. For many applications, such as transportation and petrochemicals, finding substitutes is virtually impossible."

IMPORTS ARE EXPENSIVE, according to Sands. The cost of U.S. imports have risen from $4 billion to over $44 billion a year since 1972.

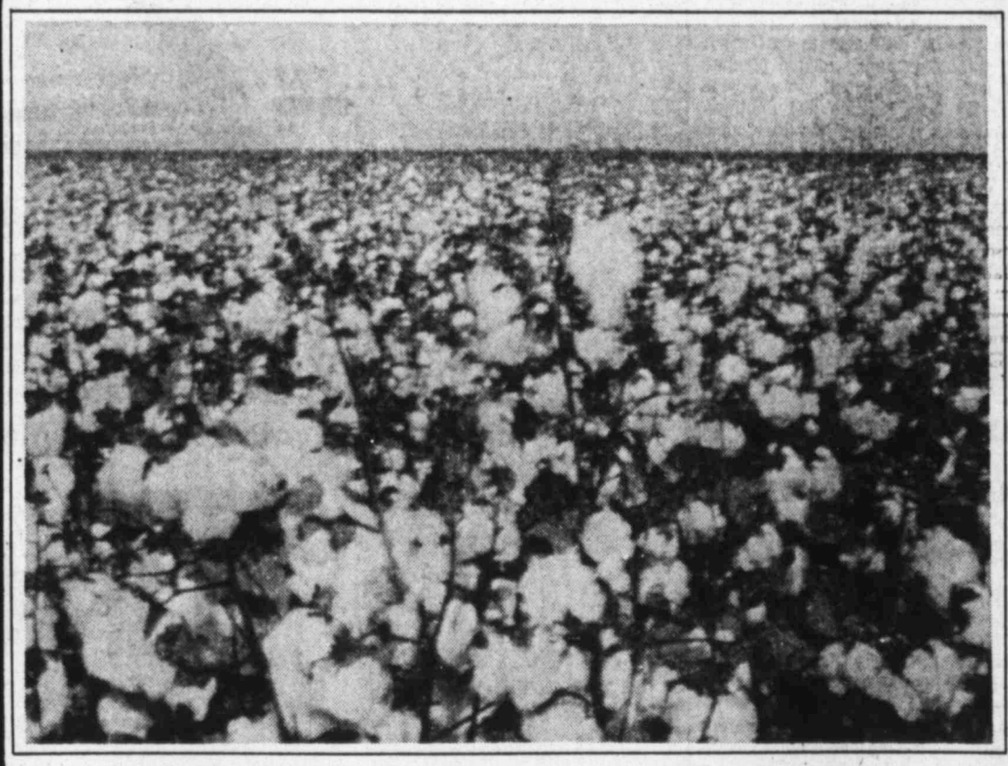

Japan, more dependent on imported oil than most nations, paid $4 billion in 1972, and $25 billion last year.

The cost of European oil imports have quadrupled since 1972, Sands said.

Major new discoveries are vital to the consuming countries, he notes. "Additional safe oil will impede the growing influence of the politically volatile Arab nations on world supplies."

Sands said, "In the U.S., crude oil imports have doubled since the embargo, and the OPEC share of the total has gone from 68 percent to 88 percent. The Arab OPEC natrions now supply 45 percent of our imports, up from 31 percent. So, national security, as well as good economic sense, demands that exploration for new reserves be fostered in every possible way."

A FIELD OF THE NEW GREGG 35 XL

IT WILL PAY TO GROW THE NEW GREGG 35 XL

- A cotton of outstanding fiber qualities
- Average staple length on a field of 219 bales — 34.4
- Brought an average of 450 points above 15/16 in the loan—some bales as high as 580 points. (Staple length, the only differential)
- Being a glandless cotton, the seed will grade 5 to 10 points higher at the oil mill
- After last irrigation will hold up 10 days longer than others
- Fast maturing—even with its longer staple
- Marvelous production when irrigated according to proven procedure. Enough water for any variety is ENOUGH — more is going to cost — COST in a higher water bill, cost in lower grades, and more often results in lower production; and the gin will charge for every pound of trash and knots

Texas Ginners Due Here

Cotton ginners and allied industry people by the hundreds and guests by the thousands will converge here Friday and Saturday at the Memorial Civic Center for the 65th annual meeting of the Texas Cotton Ginners' Association(TCGA).

This is the convention's first appearance in Lubbock and TCGA executive vice president Tony Price of Dallas expects attendance of 4,000 or more, some 800 greater than the previous record.

Ninety-three exhibitors will use more than 28,000 square feet of floor space to show machinery, supplies and services related to cotton ginning, production and marketing.

Keynote speaker for the business session at 9:15 a.m. Friday in the Memorial Civic Center Theater will be U.S. Rep David Bowen, chairman of the House Cotton Subcommittee.

Charles Russell, National Cotton Council economist, will speak on cotton export prospects and opportunities for 1978.

Presiding at the business session will be TCGA president Morris Jones of San Juan, and vice president Gayle Craft of Plains.

A highlight for the woman at 10 a.m. Saturday in the convention center banquet hall will be a "Harvestfaire" featuring presentations by five food consultants on microwave and crepe cooking. Two microwave ovens will be given as door prizes.

For entertainment TCGA is bringing in "Grand Ol Opry" stars Jeannie Pruitt, Ronnie Profit and other musical groups to close out the meeting on Saturday night. Tickets to the performance will be free at exhibitor booths throughout both days of the convention.

Another special event is the "Last International Ginners Pinto Bean and Cornbread Cookoff" featuring cooks from all over Texas and a few out-of-state chef.

This is the first time in TCGA's 65-year history that its directors have chosen to hold the annual meeting outside Dallas, where the association is headquartered. The meeting was moved to San Antonio once in the 1930s and to Fort Worth once in the 1940s both times because space was not available in Dallas.

Cotton Sales To Europe Eyed

RALEIGH, N.C. (Special)–Prospects for increasing exports of American cotton to Western Europe appear to have brightened following a precedent-setting meeting here recently.

Sponsored by Elanco Products Co. in cooperation with Cotton Inc., the meeting saw a group of leading cotton producers, merchants and marketing cooperative officials join seven top executives of major European textile mills for two full days of discussion.

When the final gavel had fallen on the Western Europe Cotton Export Forum, there was agreement all around that an important first step had been taken in removing the obstacles that stand in the way of significant sales of U.S. cotton to the Western European textile industry.

This was underscored by encouraging comments made by some of the European visitors during the closing stages of the forum.

"We have learned a lot," said Ernest Haecker, president and chief executive officer of Textilgruppe Hof, Salle, West Germany. "Maybe we can do more on our part to get more U.S. cotton in Europe."

Before returning home, some of the Europeans indicated they would immediately start investigating the possibility of ordering some shipments of U.S. cotton.

The forum, however, also made it clear that restoration of this country as a principal supplier of cotton to Europe–a status that existed until shortly after World War II–is going to require a strong commitment by the U.S. cotton industry to meet the special needs of the European mills, and that follow-up efforts are essential to sustain the impetus generated by the meeting.

As cotton producer Donnell Echols of Lamesa, put it: "It's imperative that this exchange exist in the future."

To assure this end, a liaison committee was appointed to work with Cotton Inc.'s international marketing division in maintaining continuing communications with the European mills. The committee members include Echols and fellow producer William A. Falls of Webb, Miss.; Tom Akers, executive vice president of Calcot, Ltd., Bakersfield, Calif.-based cooperative; merchant W.B. Dunavant Jr., president of Duanvant Enterprise, Inc., Memphis, Tenn. and John McNutt, Cotton Inc.'s international marketing vice president.

Collectively, the European mills represented–in Germany, Great Britain, Belguim and Italy–use some 800,000 bales of cotton a year. However, while exports of U.S. cotton to Asia have grown steadily in recent years, most of the European mills now purchase their raw cotton supplies from other sources, such as Africa, the Soviet Union, Turkey and South America.

The mill executives told the American cotton leaders that their reasons for turning away from U.S. cotton over the years primarily have concerned the lack of consistency in the quality of the fiber, although higher price also was cited as a factor in some instances.

They said their emphasis on producing high quality products demands cotton that is clean and consistent in fiber length, strength and uniformity, and often American cotton has fallen short of these requirements.

However, J. Dukes Wooters Jr., president of Cotton Inc., emphasized that these obstacles represent opportunities for the American cotton industry.

"Through service, quality and price, we want to make U.S. cotton the number one cotton in the world," he said. "We want to make U.S cotton more than just a run of the mill commodity; we want to make it an agro-industrial product."

Addressing remarks to the American cotton merchandisers, Wooters added, "I say, go where the dollars are; go where the volume is. I would certainly cultivate the Western Europe market, and I would find a way to give them what they need.

"They face more competition (from cheaper exports from the developing nations) and they have to go with finer yarns and fabrics. They may need more information, so let's find a way to give it to them. The American cotton growers want more markets."

South Texas Planting Underway

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Warmer temperatures and intervals of sunshine brought South Texas farmers into their fields with planting equipment.

As soil temperatures warmed, farmers began planting corn and grain sorghum in the Rio Grande Valley. Watermelon planting also got underway in Brooks County, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Ranchers and farmers in the western portion of the state are hopeful that needed rains will come soon as planting time arrives. Pastures and ranges—along with small grain crops— are in need of good general rains in most of Extension Districts 2, 6, 7, 13 and the upper part of 12, as well as much of 8, 10 and 14.

In areas with sufficient moisture, oats, wheat and other small grain crops began perking up in response to warmer daytime temperatures and sunshine.

Panhandle: Warmer daytime temperatures melted most snow, which provided beneficial moisture. Wheat fields are beginning to green up, but pastures and ranges remain average to below average. Some cattle losses reported due to cold, wet conditions. Heavy feeding of cattle continues. Markets up on all classes.

South Plains: Moisture is short over entire district. Land preparation is underway in most counties. Irrigated wheat is in fair condition, while dryland wheat is responding to recent moisture. Cattle in fair condition, pastures below average.

Rolling Plains: Recent snowfalls throughout the district brought needed moisture, but only four counties report adequate moisture. Small grains responding to warmer daytime temperatures and moisture. Light greenbug damage noted in two counties. Heavy supplemental feeding of livestock continues.

North Central: Most counties have adequate moisture, and warmer temperatures should boost small grain growth soon. Pastures remain below average, with little if any grazing available. Livestock are in poor to fair condition as supplemental feeding continues heavy. As weather permits, land preparation continues in area.

Northeast: Soil moisture adequate to surplus. Small grains are making new growth, and commercial and home vegetable gardens are being planted where land is dry enough. Pastures are average to below average, with cattle feeding a major item.

PRESTON LYDA

Cooperative Award Given Lyda

ANTON (Special) — Preston Lyda, former manager of the Anton Producers Cooperative, was presented a Distinguished Service Award at the recent 26th annual meeting of the Texas Federation of Cooperatives in Houston.

Lyda retired last April after a long career as gin manager. He began farming at Anton, in Hockley County, in 1932 and has farmed continuously.

After managing an independent gin for six years, Lyda began working for the Anton Producers Cooperative when it was organized in 1941 and became manager in 1945.

Lyda has served on the Anton School Board, is active in the Anton Lions Club, and has supported Future Farmers of America, 4-H, Little League and other organizations. He is a director of the of the Citizens State Bank of Anton and a member of the First United Methodist Church.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE USDA IS PREPARING AN OPTION paper for a presidential decision on key farm issues, including possible cutbacks in cotton acreage and a soybean support rate.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland met last week with the Council of Economic Advisers, the Office of Management and Budget, and President Carter's domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat.

No decisions were reached. Recommendations will be sent to the White House Tuesday and it is hoped Carter will take final action by Friday.

Bergland earlier had recommended raising the soybean support rate from last year's $3.50 per bushel to $4.50, but Carter has not acted on the recommendation.

THE USDA IS THINKING ABOUT requiring cotton farmers to reduce 1978 plantings from last year. Unlike with a set-aside, the land taken out of cotton production could be planted to other cash crops.

The plan has been in the talking stage for some time. It involves a possible 10 to 20 percent mandatory reduction in the 1978 cotton acreage in order for farmers to qualify for federal price supports and other benefits.

As previously announced, the cotton program does not require farmers to reduce 1978 plantings from last year, but does provide that they can voluntarily cut back 20 percent and thus be guaranteed full target price payment benefits on what they produce.

It was announced earlier that the national program acreage would be 10,248,000 and that there would be no cotton set-aside. The NPA is the acreage the USDA believes is needed to fill domestic and export requirements and bring the carryover down to about 4 1/2 million bales.

SINCE THE TARGET PRICE AT 52 CENTS is much higher than the loan at 44 cents, payments are more nearly possible than in recent years. And under the new law the payment limit, at $40,000, is doubled.

Producers therefore will be taking a harder look at the proportion of their plantings that will be eligible for payment in case the weighted average price received by farmers in calendar 1978 falls below the 52-cent target.

If individual growers voluntarily cut their plantings to 80 percent of their 1977 acreage, their total plantings will be eligible for payment. But an individual farmer, as the program stands at the moment, does not have to reduce acreage to qualify for target price payments.

A grower would be eligible for payment on some percentage of his planted acreage even if no cutback were made. The key element in determining the number of acres eligible for payment is the allocation factor, which will be determined late in the year by dividing the national program acreage by the estimated 1978 harvested acreage.

ASSUME, FOR EXAMPLE, THAT USDA estimates (probably in August or later) that the 1978 harvested acreage will be 13,664,000. The allocation factor would be 75 percent (10,248,000 divided by 13,664,000).

A farmer who planted 100 acres both in 1977 and 1978 would be eligible for target price protection on 75 acres. If the farmer chose to reduce his 1978 acreage by 20 percent (the announced reduction factor), his full 80 acres would be eligible for target price protection.

If the grower chose to reduce acreage but by less than 20 percent, the allocation factor would be adjusted proportionately.

It would take more than 13 million acres to produce an allocation factor as low as 80 percent, and the January intentions survey showed farmers in 15 states were planning to plant 12,516,000 acres.

THUS FARMERS WHO PLANT THE SAME amount as in 1977 could expect to be eligible to receive payment on at least 80 percent of their acreage — probably more — and those who cut back modestly would qualify for payment on a larger proportion.

For very large growers, the $40,000 payment limit would make reductions for payment purposes less attractive.

For all these reasons, it appears that the government cotton program itself — as originally announced — would cause only a marginal acreage reduction in 1978.

Economic considerations, rather than the cotton program, would be expected to play a more important role in farmers' decisions to plant cotton or alternative crops.

County Agent's Report

By KEN COOK
Lubbock County Agent

SWINE PRODUCERS SHOULD BE AWARE of USDA regulation cnanges involving interstate movements and indemnity provisions to fight swine brucellosis. Indemnity regulations became effective Dec. 23, 1977 and shipping regulations will become effective March 23.

The new regulations require testing of sows and boars over six months old that are moved interstate for breeding purposes and and identification of such animals moved interstate for slaughter purposes. The identification requirement will allow tracing of swine found infected at slaughter back to their herd of origin.

Indemnity regulations allow up to $25 indemnity per head for purebred swine and $10 per head for other breeding swine tested on farms and found infected. Known infected swine moving interstate must be identified as reactors and must move directly to slaughter or to markets to be sold for slaughtre.

TESTING REQUIREMENTS CALL FOR a negative blood test of breeding swine within 30 days of shipment across state lines unless they are from a validated brucelloses-free herd or area.

Sows and boars sold interstate for slaughter must be identified as to a herd of origin by an APHIS (Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service)–approved tatoo applied to the back to each animal before it is mixed with other swine or moved interstate.

Approved identification tags can be used instead of the tatoo if this is requested in writing by state animal health or officials. Provisions are also made for shipments from farms of origin to slaughter or to markets for sale to slaughter.

Brucellosis is a contagious disease of livestock that spreads through movement of breeding animals. It may also affect humans who come into contact with infected animals.

Watching Washington: The Forgotten Agencies

H NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Sun., March 5, 1978

BY DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Annual Assay Commission met again this month to do the job it has been faithfully performing since April 2, 1792, even though government officials say it is an agency that no longer performs a useful function.

The four-member commission, one of the oldest agencies in government, has had the duty of measuring the precious metal content and weight of the nation's coinage since the days when money really was measured in silver and gold.

Today, with coins containing primarily non-precious metal alloys, there is little if any need for the agency to assay coins as it has since the beginning of the republic. Whatever testing is needed is done by the Bureau of Standards.

"It's largely a ceremonial exercise," a Treasury official says. "It no longer serves a useful function."

The commission, whose budget is only $2,500 a year, is one of many such "forgotten agencies," large and small, that are scattered throughout the federal bureaucracy.

Some, established on a temporary basis, have never achieved their original goal, despite decades of existence. Others have survived long after their original purpose was achieved. Some are so obscure they exist without full congressional oversight.

For example, a three week investigation into these "forgotten agencies" found:

— The 12-member Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Commission, created in 1955, continues an unending search for a suitable monument to FDR. But despite two decades of work and nearly half a million dollars it has yet to complete its task.

— Although it has been over a century since Uncle Sam last herded Indians onto reservations, the Navajo and Hopi Indian Relocation Commission today is moving Indians from one place to another in spite of considerable resistance from the two tribes.

— In 1946, President Roosevelt established the Joint Mexican-U.S. Defense Commission to coordinate defense activities against the Nazis. The commission still exists, holding what one Pentagon official describes as "formal gatherings, formal luncheons each year."

— An obscure office within the Department of Housing and Urban Development spends its time issuing studies about foreign countries and literature about the European influence on American communities and "new towns" in Russia.

President Carter's reorganization task force is currently evaluating whether some of these agencies should continue to exist or be merged into other departments. House and Senate committee staffers say some of them should be abolished.

One of them is the National Commission on Productivity and Work Quality. Created by Congress in 1970, it has undergone several name changes, its scope enlarged and its budget up to nearly $3 million. The 24-member panel has a staff of 39 employes.

The agency issues a vast amount of literature about productivity, including its third edition "Guide To Productivity Improvement Projects," a collection of cost saving ideas thought up by cities and towns around the country.

The book reports how "vacuum-cleaner-like extension hoses" were used in Winston-Salem, N.C., to collect leaves and how the town of Oxford, Ohio, drilled holes through its parking meter posts so cyclists could chain their bikes to them.

Are they doing any good? A Senate committee official involved in overseeing the agency was asked. His answer: "They are having a bit of trouble showing us that they have."

The American Battle Monuments Commission began in 1923 under Gen. John J. Pershing. Today it oversees 23 military cemeteries abroad plus 14 monuments and memorials to our armed forces.

The agency has a paid staff of 388, including eight Army officers and is currently building two new military memorials, one for Vietnam dead and another for World War II veterans. Congressional appropriations experts say the commission's work could be handled by the Army.

Though not widely known, the federal government has been selling insurance abroad, providing policies to America's biggest corporations to protect them against the risks of war, expropriation of property, and currency inconvertibility.

Since the Overseas Private Investment Corporation was created in 1969 to provide both insurance and loan-guarantees for U.S. investors abroad, it has written billions of dollars' worth of policies, mostly for firms on Fortune's list of 500 biggest companies and 50 biggest banks.

Stung by reports about OPIC's low interest loans to resorts for the rich like Haiti's ultra-swank Habitation Leclerc, Congress moved two years ago to end its insurance-writing function. But OPIC survives even though Congress allowed its authority to sell new policies to expire last December.

The Navajo and Hopi Indian Relocation Commission was enacted in 1974 to solve a complex and longstanding land battle between the tribes over grazing and other rights on some 2.5 million acres in Arizona.

The panel is authorized by Congress to move some 5,750 Indians, voluntarily if possible, paying moving costs and other benefits to purchase new homes. In three years the three-member commission has relocated only 58 families, all voluntarily.

A Senate panel this month is for the first time taking a close look at the commission. A proposal has been introduced to allow those Indians who don't want to move to remain on their property for their lifetime.

Almost every agency must be fully reviewed by both houses of Congress, once to approve its budget and once to review its operating authority. But at least one agency has managed to elude full congressional oversight.

The Office of Minority Business Enterprise, created by President Nixon in 1969 as part of his "black capitalism" campaign, is budgeted at $50 million a year, but no Senate legislative committee has responsibility for the agency.

"It just fell through the cracks," says one committee official. "No one has authorization oversight over OMBE in the Senate."

OMBE has appeared regularly before appropriations subcommittees for budget approval as well as the appropriate House panels. But the Senate Select Small Business Committee — which should have jurisdiction over it — has never held hearings on the agency's program authority, an aide said.

Staffed by 206 workers, the agency supports 225 business development organizations whose 1,600 federally paid employees provide consulting services for minority businessmen nationwide.

Yet other agencies provide numerous financial services and assistance for small businesses, including minorities, such as the Small Business Administration, the Economic Development Administration, Community Services Administration and the Agriculture Department's rural development programs, among others.

"There is no reason why the SBA can't perform this function," says a Senate aide experienced in small business programs.

Meanwhile, deep within the Department of Housing and Urban Development lies the Office of International Affairs which, HUD says, has been "the pioneer in international urban development for almost three decades."

But several congressional staffers were unaware of HUD's involvement in foreign matters even though it oversees at least nine bilateral agreements.

With a staff of 13, OIA issues, among other things, housing and urban development profiles on foreign countries for "American businessmen interested in foreign business opportunities and investments."

One OIA booklet tells of "The Influence of the Foreign Heritage on the American City." Another analyzes the growth, organization and resources of new towns in the Soviet Union. The agency also maintains a computer bank filled with over 7,000 documents on foreign housing and urban development.

The Office of Management and Budget has for several years urged that OIA's activities be turned over to the State Department.

Since 1954 the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission has been adjudicating American repayment claims for property seized or destroyed in foreign countries. Now, after 23 years of operation, some government officials say there are not enough remaining claims to warrant a separate agency.

Staffed by 30 employees, it has three commissioners, each of whom are paid $47,500 a year. The agency's annual budget is $1 million. Its chairmanship has been vacant since December.

The commission is focusing on East German claims, about 1,000 of which have been received thus far. It recently completed processing 384 claims on property in China worth some $197 million and 5,911 Cuban claims totalling about $1.8 billion.

Once claims are cleared by the agency, they are turned over to the State Department to negotiate payment. Congressional oversight committee officials suggest the agency could be absorbed by either the State or Justice Department.

In the area of agency duplication, two of the government's oldest perform much the same function in a related field: the Bureau of Customs, created in 1789, and the Immigration Service, established in 1891.

Customs has some 5,000 inspectors at 300 points of entry checking for contraband, collecting duty fees, and verifying import cargo. Yet 1,543 Immigration inspectors fulfill a similar inspection and clearance mission at border crossings and points of entry.

"Their roles are very similar," said one budget official. "It's been demonstrated that both can handle the same assignment. There's no need to have two agents, in different uniforms, performing essentially the same kind of job."

The 26-member Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations was begun in 1959 under the Eisenhower administration to recommend improvements in dealings between the federal and local governments.

It has a budget of $1.5 million and 35 employees and meets four times a year.

One of the commission's biggest accomplishments is a 14-volume study on federal grants and aid programs. The panel also publishes a quarterly magazine that goes to 25,000 federal, state and local government officials, plus numerous studies like "Trends in Metropolitan America" and "Who Should Pay for Public Schools."

President Carter's reorganization experts say the list of similar agencies is "almost inexhaustible," with many of them duplicative, unnecessary or outdated.

An internal reorganization memorandum lists five committees for the handicapped: Advisory Council on Employment of the Handicapped; Committee for Purchase from the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped; National Center for Education Media and Materials for the Handicapped; National Planning and Advisory Council of the White House Conference on Handicapped Individuals; and the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

Administration reorganization officials say that while many agencies are relatively small in terms of budgets, "there are a lot of hidden costs."

Their very existence generates other, unseen costs — preparing background investigations on appointed officials, reports and documents, accommodations and travel costs, pensions and other benefits.

But even though reorganization investigators believe a great deal of government deadwood exists, getting rid of it is a different matter.

"There is no agency so small or so poor that it does not have a group somewhere to support its function whatever that may be," said Tread Davis, a deputy associate director of the reorganization project.

Even the Annual Assay Commission has supporters among coin collectors, because of their interest in old coins, and vending machine operators concerned that lighter coins would not work in their machines.

For many agencies there are strong pressure groups, Davis says, and this makes pruning unnecessary or outdated federal functions more difficult — maybe even impossible.

"Many of these agencies have a very strong constitutency," he says.

When asked if there are agencies that are politically protected from any reorganizational change because of their constituencies, even though they may accomplish very little, Davis' answer is terse but candid: "Sure."

Still, some agencies faced with dissolution manage to spring back to life again.

A case in point is the Advisory Commission on Information, begun in 1948 under President Truman, which has a staff of three and a budget of $83,000 a year.

The five-member commission is about to go out of business as part of a merger between the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department's Bureau of Cultural and Educational Affairs. The new agency will be called the International Communications Agency.

But the advisory commission, which held four meetings last year and issues an annual report, has been enlarged by Congress into a seven-member panel to continue dispensing the advice it has been providing for the last 30 years.

National Handwriting Day is observed on Jan. 23 in the United States.

Jay Solomon Has Dull, But Important Job

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the face of it, Jay Solomon has the dullest important job in government. Very important and very dull.

The agency he runs, the General Services Administration, is the government's purchasing agent, housekeeper, maintenance man, building manager.

The federal government requires 37,000 people to take care of it and of the 10,000 buildings across the country it owns or leases.

GSA buys everything the government needs "from paper clips to helicopters."

It buys 20,000 cars a year and is the world's biggest purchaser of birth control pills. Last year it bought 1.86 billion of them for $14,593,000 for distribution abroad by the Agency for International Development.

All told, GSA spends $3.5 billion a year on "common use" items, $1 billion on construction and $700 million on new computers.

Solomon says he finds nothing dull about all this.

"I sit here from 8:30 in the morning until 7:30 at night listening to the problems of the United States government," he said. "I work harder here than I ever worked in Tennessee."

Previously, in Chattanooga, he had been chief executive of the country's largest developer of shopping centers. The firm owned 184 shopping centers.

He came to Washington through the influence of his son, Joel, who worked with Jimmy Carter at Democratic national headquarters in 1974.

Solomon said he intends to use the GSA's marketplace girth to combat inflation. When bids for metal filing cabinets came in at $8,452,000 last year, he rejected them. New bids came in 11 percent lower.

But he opposes the longstanding requests of consumer groups that GSA make public the brand names of what it buys.,

"If we bought a whole slew of tires, the public would get the idea we were endorsing this tire," he said.

Solomon wants to buy more sculpture, paintings, murals, tapestries and wall hangings for government buildings.

GSA commissioned 55 major works of art for $3.5 million over the last 15 years, making the government a major patron of the arts.

Solomon plans to leave room in future government buildings for ground-floor restaurants and shops and to rent some space to private offices.

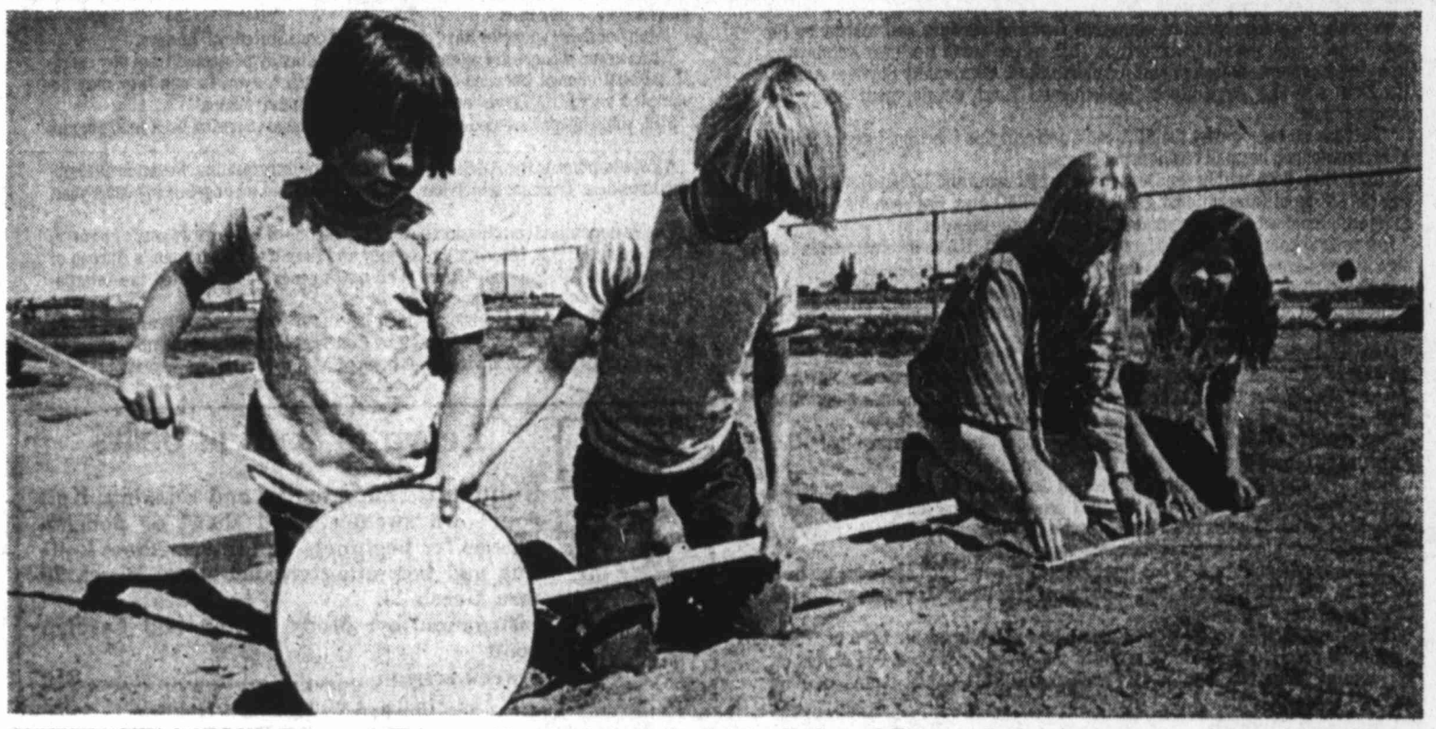

The idea is to make these buildings part of the community and to help revive downtown areas.

"If you go to a shopping center before it opens, you'll see all the oldtimers taking their daily exercise up and down that mall, then they'll sit in the center court and talk, then they'll go have lunch," he said.

"Why shouldn't the federal courthouse be a place where people accumulate and talk and carry on?"

Solomon has another unusual role. Congress is empowered to name government buildings after individuals but the GSA administrator is the only person in government with that authority.

GSA has done this only nine times, and only once after a sitting member of Congress. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., was honored by the Republican GSA administrator in 1975.

Survival Course Tests Stamina Of Today's Youth

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK
UPI Education Editor

"We had to keep crossing the river, but I had to go slow," Carol C. wrote in a notebook.

"My boots have been cutting into my ankles and making it hard.

"We stopped and made a little fire ... and ate. I finished eating my dog food."

Her journal entries were part of the requirements in a tough land survival course offered by Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. Dog food is among the rations.

Three thousand have taken the course since its inception in 1967.

Many were on a waiting list for a year or more.

The seven credit course tests bodies, minds and spirits. Survival is the goal as the youths pit themselves against the wilderness, using homemade tools.

A commercially manufactured pocket knife and a hunting knife are the exceptions. These come in handy when killing and processing a sheep, another survival course requirement.

Reading journals of several recent course participants one gains great respect for those who have endured the trials in the mountain and canyon lands of southern Utah.

The journals, of course, are private. Permission to read them — to get "the feel" of the rigorous testing of a human's inner and physical resources — was gained only upon promising not to reveal names.

Carol C. wrote she kept pushing forward even though her feet became blistered, then bloody, and her socks stuck to the macerated skin.

"We wanted to make it out of The Gulch today," she wrote, "but we ran into some water in a big hole like the pool in Hot Canyon.

"In the sand ... was scratched, 'you must swim.' We said a prayer first. I wasn't afraid because I knew the Lord was with me.

"The water came up to our necks. We took our packs off and they helped keep us up like a life preserver."

Brigham Young University is a Mormon school — belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints. But the course that each summer turns away hundreds of students also enrolls non-Mormons.

There may be from four to 15 non-Mormons in a group of 35. Spiritual exercises, the singing of hymns and prayer sessions are integrated into the survival course.

Trials in the course are from heat and cold, from water, wind and sun and, at times, no water.

Excerpts from the journal of a male student:

Monday — "We climbed in rugged country, from 6,200 to 9,680 feet, but only covered 10 miles. I was all done in by the time we got to the end of the trail, cold and hungry. After dinner, we went to bed."

Tuesday — "It's really interesting to see how your perspective changes with a full belly and a bit of warmth and sleep. I'm looking forward to our ascent of Mount Elden today."

Later that day, he wrote:

"We climbed it, but when we got to the top we were hit by a blizzard and by the time we were able to don our ponchos we were almost frozen. We then hurried off the mountain to lower ground.

"While we were up there, there was enough static electricity to cause tingling. We slid down a snow field on our ponchos and we got some real water. All we had been drinking was melted snow."

The next day each started an independent hike of 25 miles across the desert. This youth wrote he started running but had to cut back to a walk after three miles. His feet were sore. He made the 25 miles in about eight hours.

The lower age limit for the course is 18. But there have been many exceptions. High school students 14 and above have gone on occasion. Several adults are allowed in each group.

And sometimes a husband and wife participate.

"Looking at it from a foot's point of view," wrote Allen P., "it's like this — to walk 300 miles it would take about 635,000 steps of average length — as long as those steps are all about two and a half feet long.

"Then, again, if there were many hills to climb, some of those steps would only be one foot long. This means as many as one and a half million steps.

"If it takes 30 days, you'd have to walk 50,000 steps every day on an average to reach the end. But since there would be no walking on Sundays, it'd work out to about 12 miles a day.

"During the foot work you'd notice sooner or later some of the steps are on blistered feet, some on feet wet from the Dirty (and that means dirty) Devil River; sandy from the sand dunes on Robbers Roost Flats; hot feet in the Escalante Desert and cold feet in the snow on Henry Mountains."

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

THE HOBBY called numismatics includes collecting several items other than coins.

Some collectible items were coins at first, but have been changed into something else.

Take a coin. File the design off one side (both sides, if you're enthusiastic). Engrave, or have someone engrave, a bouquet of flowers or a country scene or the initials of your wife or sweetheart (Or, if you're a lady, your husband or suitor.)

You've just created what's called a love token. And if relatively few collectors specialize in these, love tokens are nonetheless a fascinating branch of our hobby.

Some love tokens are quite plain: simply a name or bit of design added to a coin without even removing one side's design.

A few years ago I came across a cent across which someone had engraved the name "Helen." It was a pleasure to present this to a friend of mine with that name.

As you've probably guessed, the term "love token" includes tokens of this type that were made for many different purposes. I've even heard of "love tokens" made for funerals!

People have engraved and given love tokens since long before there were U.S. coins. The practice was most popular around 1850-1900.

Dimes are the most popular U.S. coins for transforming into love tokens. But skilled engravers have used every value from the copper half-cent to the gold $20 coin! Even some of the rare $3 gold pieces were made into love tokens.

I used to have trouble believing that anyone would really use a gold coin for this purpose. Then I was lucky enough to buy for my own collection a love token made from a gold dollar. It has the carefully engraved initials "FCL" and a hole at the top. Maybe FCL wore this on a bracelet or hung from a delicate chain around the neck.

And I shall always wonder who she was, and what her life was like.

For even more than coins, love tokens have stories behind them.

Who was the lady whose initials decorate the love token in your collection? Did the flowers, Cupids, or arrow-pierced hearts have some special meaning for that couple? Did the two marry or drift apart?

In only a few cases are we lucky enough to learn the answers. The others remain, little-noticed and obscured by the veil of time, among the never-solved mysteries of our hobby.

Next week: "Medal News"–Some items you might want in your collection.

Church Offers Bible Classes

Available each Sunday night at Lubbock's Southcrest Baptist Church, located at 4810 Avenue P, are opportunities for Bible study.

These are:

—Young Adults Class, under leadership of Barbara Brandon, is studying the Biblical teaching of the church "What Baptists Believe" and "Why We Believe It."

—Pastor's Class, which has just started, meets in the Fellowship Hall and is studying the Biblical teaching of the church. This class is for all those not otherwise involved in any class on Sunday night.

—College-Single Adults Class, under leadership of Kent McElroy, studying "What The Bible Teaches Us About God."

Student Can Save With 'Prepaid' Tuition

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — If you can get $17,200 and have a college-bound teen-ager at home, Washington University has a deal for you.

The Tuition Stabilization Plan is a new concept aimed at holding down rising tuition costs and preventing private universities from pricing themselves out of the middle-income market.

The plan is simple: you pay the four-year tuition in advance and Washington U. guarantees that the tuition, $4,300, will remain the same for the full four years. The university invests the money and gains in interest what it normally would gain in tuition increases.

Any unused tuition is refunded on a pro-rated basis.

The plan was devised by John Biggs, vice chancellor for financial affairs. It takes effect this fall for students not receiving financial aid. It has tax benefits as well as budgetary advantages for families who borrow from the university.

The borrowers also get a tax break, chancellor William H. Danforth said in an interview. Interest deductible on federal income tax forms rasults in a smaller tax burden.

Information supplied by the umiversity shows a family in a 50 percent tax bracket that borrows $17,200 at nine percent and repays $250 a month for eight years saves $731 in income taxes in the first year — more than twice the tuition increase of $350 announced for this fall.

Of course, the family will be paying its $3,000 annually for eight years, not just the four years a student is in school.

Danforth said the university is prepared to make about 50 loans at nine percent. He especially likes the idea that the school will be investing in its students.

"We're willing to invest in our families and help them face inflation," Danforth said. "The interest charged isn't based on a rate any higher than what we'd expect to make off the money."

The tuition can come from other resources, of course, such as existing investments or loans on other equities.

"We think most families would be better off borrowing at their own bank or increasing their mortgage," Danforth said. "We're not anxious to become a lender, but if a family doesn't want to go elsewhere, this money will be available."

Inflation makes the stabilization plan necessary, Danforth said. Tuition has been rising eight or nine percent a year, he said.

With no end in sight for rising costs, Danforth thinks Washington U. will be watched closely by other schools suffering the same tuition growing pains. "I think if we're successful, other universities will follow," he said.

Peter Ustinov Directing Offenbach's Operetta

BERLIN (UPI) Actors Peter Ustinov recently made his debut as stage director in West Berlin with a production of Jacques Offenbach's seldom played operetta "Banditen" (Bandits).

The work had its world premiere in Paris in 1869 as "Les Brigands."

"The original fireworks of aggressive charm has been turned into a puffed up state theater farce, adorned with some nice gags and brilliant music," one critic said of Ustinov's production.

National Geographic's Conger Sweeps Photographic Honors

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Dean Conger of National Geographic won the World Understanding Award on Saturday in the 35th annual Pictures of the Year competition at the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Conger became the first person ever to receive each of the three highest honors in this photojournalism contest.

Conger was named Newspaper Photographer of the Year in 1954, 1955 and 1958 while with the Denver Post. He then joined National Georgraphic and was named Magazine Photographer of the Year in 1961. His latest award is for his two-year documentation of the Russian people in the book "Journey Across Russia," published by National Geographic.

Michael Wirtz, 25, of the Suburban Trib of Hinsdale, Ill., was named Newspaper Photographer of the Year.

David Harvey of National Geographic was named Magazine Photographer of the Year.

The competition is sponsored jointly by the MU School of Journalism and the National Press Photographers Association. Awards include $10,000 in cash, cameras and trophies. A total of 827 photographers and editors participated this year. The winners were announced by journalism school Dean Roy M. Fisher.

Awards will be presented on Photojournalism Day, April 5, during the School of Journalism's 69th annual Journalism Week.

Contest judges were Hal Buell, Associated Press assistant general manager for newsphotos; Ken Heyman, winner of the World Understanding Award in 1976; Al Moldvay, syndicated columist and twice Newspaper Photographer of the year; Chuck Scott, picture editor and associate professor at Ohio University; and Harry Sonneborn, executive editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel.

Runner-up to Wirtz as Newspaper Photographer of the Year was Eddie Adams of the Associated Press, New York, with third place going to Kurt E. Smith, Yakima (Wash.) Herald Republic.

National Geographic swept the Magazine Photographer of the Year category, with Martin Rogers runner-up to Harvey, and Loren McIntyre in third place.

In the World Understanding category, special recognition went to Ernie Leyba of The Denver Post and Michael O'Brien of the Miami News.

Fonda, Voight Star In New Movie 'Coming Home'

Produced by Jerome Hellman and directed by Hal Ashby, "Coming Home" was filmed from a screenplay by Waldo Salt and Robert C. Jones, based on a story by Nancy Dowd. Director of photography is Academy Award winner Haskell Wexler. The film is released by United Artists.

"Coming Home" represents a strong personal statement and commitment by Miss Fonda and other company members. As described by Hellman, "it is a story of the regenerative powers of love as well as of the senseless destruction brought about by war."

The war is the Viet Nam conflict, but the story is set in California, where the impact of that bitter struggle is felt by the wives, lovers and friends of the warring servicemen — and above all, by the wounded veterans.

"Coming Home" marks a creative reunion for star Jon Voight, producer Hellman and screenwriter Salt, all of whom won acclaim for their contributions to "Midnight Cowboy," a prior Oscar winner.

Pipeline: Piece Of Pie For Eskimos

BY ROBERT C. MILLER

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Upon two words, "in kind", Alaskans plan to build their biggest industrial complex, a $1.7 billion petrochemical project owned partly by native Eskimos.

The planned development includes a refinery capable of handling 150,000 barrels of crude a day and several satellite chemical plants to convert the newly accessible North Slope crudes into a broad range of building block chemicals. The benzene, toluene, xylene and olefins are used in the manufacture of tires, pharmaceuticals, textiles, detergents and herbicides.

The unique aspect of the project is the crude oil. It would come from Alaska's share of the estimated 1.2 million barrels a day that engineers say will flow down the Alyeska pipeline from the Prudhoe Bay fields when full production is reached. The state takes this one-eighth royalty share "in kind" — in crude, rather than in dollars.

"We propose to purchase all the state's North Slope royalty crude oil for a period of 25 years," explained John D. Barbour Sr., president of Alaska Petrochemical Co. "ALPETCO would construct a petrochemical refinery complex in Alaska to produce refined fuel products for consumption in Alaska and a broad range of petrochemical products for sale to customers outside the state."

No definite site has been selected for the industrial center, but ALPETCO's engineers say several areas along the Kenai Peninsula southwest of Anchorage offer possibilities for the refinery.

Organized last July, ALPETCO is owned by three corporations: Alaska Interstate, Barbour Oil and Alaska Consolidated Shipping. Six AlaskanCorporations own 51 percent of the stock in Alaska Consolidated Shipping.

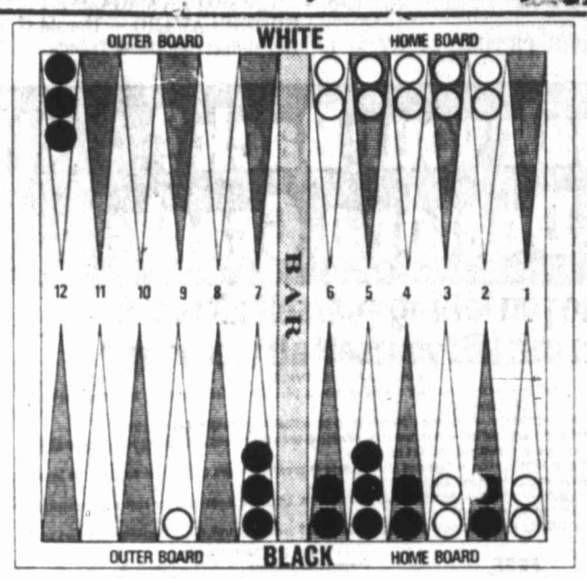

ALPETCO estimates the petrochemical refinery complex would create at least 1,800 permanent jobs and 2,600 construction jobs for about five years. The contract stipulates that Alaska residents are to be given job priorities along with native training programs.

Barbour said the Alaska crude arriving at the Valdez terminus is worth about $13 a barrel.

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif

Black rolls 4-3. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

At first glance, it might look as if there is some sort of misprint in this problem. After all, Black can use the 4 to hit the White blot on his 9-point, then use the 3 to bring the man to safety on the 6-point. Is Sharif losing his mind?

Not yet, though I must admit that this isn't the first time I have been accused of just that. Before committing me to an asylum, let's study the position.

White has two points deep in Black's home board, and that is the ideal position to have for playing a formidable home board—the second key factor in a Black game.

The way to combat a Black game is to force the opponent either to break his home board or to abandon his outposts in your home board. The longer your opponent can maintain his position, the better are his chances.

In this position, White has only one free man. In two rolls, if White rolls average numbers, that man will be inside White's home board. Once that happens, White will either have to break his home board with any number lower than a 6 that he rolls, or if he rolls a 6, he will have to play it by running with a man from Black's 3-point. That will expose the man in Black's outer board to a shot, and the man in Black's home board to being pointed on.

If in this position Black hits the White blot, he will be slowing White down. If White should happen to remain on the bar for a few rolls—and this is not at all unlikely—on each roll White would be only a 5-to-4 favorite to reenter, White will have retained his position and be in a good situation to hit any blot Black might have to leave in bearing off.

Wait until White breaks before hitting. Play the 4-3 by moving a man from White's 12-point to the Black 10-point and then on to the 6-point without hitting the White blot.

Arizona Firm Transforming Go-Carts Into Auto Replicas

F. W. and Associates Inc. of Tempe, Ariz., has transformed the lowly go-cart into a colorful replica of some of the classic automobiles of the past 20 years.

Equipped with a fiber glass body and a three-horsepower Briggs & Stratton engine, the machine is aimed directly at the future motorist sector, with an occasional veteran driver allowed to participate also.

Rick Stevens of the Sunray-based Midtown Motors Mini-Cars, currently is establishing dealers in the Lubbock area for the replicas, which he says can begin deliveries shortly.

While the mini-cars have been in production for two years, the firm recently shifted its goals toward nationwide distribution.

Stevens said the 150-pound vehicle is approximately 28 inches high, with a length of from 63 to 84 inches, and a 43-inch wheelbase. Top speed with the governor in operation is approximately 15 miles per hour. Without the controlling device, speeds up to 37 miles per hour are possible, he indicated.

Designed to sell for $595, the vehicles come in eight different colors and 22 different models. Included are replicas of the Oldsmobile Cutlass, Buick Regal, Pontiac Grand Prix, AMC Jeep Golden Eagle and Army Jeep, Ford pick-up, Ford van and '57 Thunderbird, Plymouth Roadrunner, Aspen, Dodge van, Volkswagen beetle, '63 Corvette and Monte Carlo.

The carts are designed to be operated on parking lots and in rural areas. They achieve approximately 65 miles per gallon.

Taiwan Promoted As Natural Wonder

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — Taiwanese tourist authorities are pushing the island as not only friendly and inexpensive but one of subtropical natural wonders easily reachable by lund or air.

Air-conditioned trains head south from Taipei hourly, and a flight of less than an hour to the largest southern city of Kaohsiung costs about $20 oneway.

For the same price, the visitor can fly over huge marble mountains to Hualien in eastern Taiwan. Accommodations at first-class hotels average around $40 per night.

Fort Hood Test Site For New Defense Concepts

By JAY B. LEWIS

FORT HOOD, Texas (UPI) — The U.S. Army believes it knows what will happen in the chaotic first days of a nuclear war, and that bleak "worst case" scenario is the basis for changes in the training of its "close" management people, the sergeants.

The new training emphasis, which also grew out of some lessons learned in Vietnam and alterations in military philosophy, is routine at the 48,000-member garrison at Fort Hood, the heaviest concentration of troops and equipment in the Army. It is far from routine, however, for civilians who rarely hear about important decisions made daily in the U.S. Army, vintage 1978.

The III Corps, the most important of the units at Fort Hood, maintains combat readiness for instant use anywhere in the world. Because of the need to keep the two divisions comprising III Corps at top alert, the new training concepts are tested there first.

Sergeants at III Corps — in a much subtler way than in past years — are the backbone of the Army, primarily because of that "worst case scenario."

Army strategists believe that after a nuclear war small units, led by sergeants, will be scattered over a wide area, functioning without communications with their officers, many of whom were killed in the first strike. Leadership, the military believes, will survive within these small groups of soldiers.

Sergeants interviewed at Fort Hood say the modern NCO must, therefore, be versed in technical developments, law, social science and increasingly complex tactical doctrine.

The changes have not all been technical, or produced by war planning. Since the late 1960s, the Army has implemented social changes which came from outside the military. The Army has taken an increased interest in the welfare of the troops, and the character of the individual soldier has changed, making obsolete a style of leadership that was developed for World War II.

Two NCO's at Fort Hood — one the top-ranking sergeant in the First Cavalry Division and the other a squad leader in the 2nd Armored Division — were asked for their views on changes in the Army and in the role of its leaders. Command Sgt. Maj. Douglas Hayes and Staff Sgt. Thomas Ford agreed that the Army is placing a greater share of the leadership load on its sergeants. That means keeping informed on daily developments.

"Since I first came in (in 1967), a lot of guys have gotten out because they couldn't keep up with the changes," said Ford, whose 10-man squad scored highest in the division in infantry skills last year. "I spend at least 60 to 70 percent of my time reading new regulations and changes to the manuals. A squad leader is supposed to know all the resources available to him to to solve any problem his men may have."

The biggest change in the sergeant's job, at least since the Vietnam War, is toward more responsibility for planning, and more flexibility in carrying out policy. The modern NCO is no longer just an extension of the commander's office.

For example, Fort Hood's primary mission is training. While the post commander and his staff allocate resources and access to training areas, individual units work within a general list of training demands. The master training schedule is made up by sergeants at the level of squad (about 12 men) and platoon (about 40 men).

"We give the squad leader the maximum flexibility," said Hayes. "If his men need additional training, he schedules it. He knows what his men need."

The sergeant's approach to leadership has evolved considerably since the Korean War, when Hayes first entered the Army at Fort Hood. The modern NCO spends more time coaxing, counseling and instructing than simply barking orders and delivering tongue lashings.

"When I first came into the Army (in 1953), the soldiers then might have thought their sergeants were a little rash at times," Hayes said. "The leadership was a little more forceful then than it is now; discipline was a little harder."

Hayes attributes the change in the sergeant's approach to a change in the character of the average individual soldier as much as anything else.

"The individual soldier today might ask a question or two," he said. "The younger soldier is much better educated, and you can motivate him a little easier. In a lot of ways we hold the individual to answer for his performance, so he asks a lot more questions."

Since the Vietnam War, the Army has stressed a concern for the welfare of the individual, and Hayes said the responsibility for that has fallen on the sergeants.

"The non-commissioned officer today looks at the welfare of the individual trooper, makes sure he is taken care of," he said. "We're real concerned about that. That means a lot to the soldier and his family."

Ford said he deals directly with the problems of his men, and wouldn't have it any other way.

"Here in the States you have a tendency to drift away from your men," Ford said. "But I have a policy: all my men have my home phone number. If one of them has a problem — even if he thinks it's not important — he's to call me."

Both Hayes and Ford served in Vietnam, Hayes as a sergeant major in the Americal Division, and Ford as a gunner on an assault vehicle in the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Hayes said the need for experienced NCO's was never more apparent than in Vietnam, where they were conspicuous by their absence.

"We had 'instant' NCO training at Ft. Benning then, because we were so desperately short of NCO's in Vietnam," Hayes said. "But if you train an NCO overnight, he lacks experience. That was a problem."

Vietnam produced many NCO's with combat experience, but most of these have left the service, or have been promoted into jobs at higher command levels, leaving a leadership vacuum closest to the soldiers. Hayes said the Army now tries to identify potential early and groom those men and women as they rise through the ranks.

"We spot ... even the (privates) with potential, and we have a special school for these guys," he said. "During lax periods, we squeeze in training for non-commissioned officers. You can't train them fast enough."

The purpose of all this training is reflected in the mission of the units at Fort Hood, which is to be prepared to deploy on short notice anywhere in the world. At Fort Hood, sergeants train their men literally as though their lives depended on it.

"If a man knows his job and works hard, I'll do everything I can to get him promoted," Ford said. "If I were to get killed, I want someone there who can take over."

Miss Gardner used a basic pastry dough and added such things as vaseline, glue, toothpicks, nails, matches, steel wool, hair curlers and wax to resemble various pastry creations. (AP Laserphoto)

Lots Of Energy In Electricty

MOSELEM SPRINGS, Pa. (UPI) — Science students at the elementary school here have found that it takes the equivalent in human energy of pedaling a bicycle almost 200 miles to produce 8 cents worth of electricity.

Twenty Students, with technical guidance from the local subsidiary of General Public Utilities Corporation, hooked up a stationary bicycle with a small electrcc generator, equipped with a meter.

In one phase of the classroom project it is estimated the students taking turns on the bicycle 45 minutes a day for 45 days exerted the energy needed to produce two kilowatt-hours of electricity. Consumers in the school's area pay about 8 cents for this amount of energy.

Passing Of Time, Slimmer Sopranos Vindicated 'La Traviata'

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

Some operas fall to earth only to rise again and soar to heavenly heights.

One of them was Verdi's "La Traviata," which was panned by the critics of those days and booed by the audience. At its premiere, the soprano, who was supposed to be wasting away from galloping tuberculosis, exhibited an abundance of avoirdupois, bringing forth repeated snickers when the action called for tears.

Of course, "La Traviata" was a masterpiece and time — and slimmer sopranos — vindicated Verdi.

Another opera which got bad mouthing from the critics was Puccini's "Edgar." Unlike "Traviata," "Edgar" was thumbed down because Puccini's tibrettist, Ferdinando Fontana, was an incompetent writer and something of an opportunist.

This opera was based on a dull play by Alfred de Musset. Fontana disregarded the only redeeming features of the drama and distorted its more sensational aspects.

Puccini previously had suffered from Fontana's ineptness but was forced by contractural agreements to retain him.

Even though "Edgar" was a failure and almost doomed to oblivion, Puccini also was to be vindicated because his music had character.

Almost 90 years after its premiere at La Scala, Eve Queler brushed the dust off the score and revived it at Carnegie Hall in New York. The result was not only satisfying but sensational.

Miss Queler conducted the Opera Orchestra of New York and guided a great cast consisting of Carlo Bergonzi as Edgar, Renata Scotto as Fidelia, Gwendolyn Killebrew as Tigrana, Vicente Sardinero as Frank, and Mark Munkittrick as Gultiero.

The Carnegie Hall presentation was recoded (Columbia 34584) completely for the first time. Thus a full comparison cannot be made because the only previous recording from Edgar was the final act.

"Edgar" is not a long opera, covering only four sides in the recording, and the tantalizing music makes it seem shorter.

Another splendid recording of an operatic performance is the protogue to Arrigo Boito's "Mefistofele," sung by the powerful Bulgarian basso, Nicolai Ghiaurov.

The Boito excerpt is part of an all-Faust album. The first three sides of the two LP album (Deutsche Grammophon 2707 100) is Liszt's "A Faust Symphony," with tenor Kenneth Riegel and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus led by John Oliver. Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra on both the Faust symphony and the Mefistofele prologue. Here is an excellent recording of two prominent pieces based on the same theme.

Opera buffs with a sense of musicul history will want "Columbia's 1903 Grand Opera Series" (Odyssey Y2 35232). The fidelity is not the kind that will make those who have been weaned on stereo jump for joy, but it is good enough to bring out the quality of the singers — Suzanne Adams, Giuseppe Campanari, Edouard de Reszke, Charles Gilibert, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Antonio Scotti, and Marcella Sembrich — in their heyday 75 years ago.

There are two renditions of the Toreador Song from "Carmen" — one by Campanari and the other by Scotti. Among the other familiar arias is the Jewel Song from "Faust" by Suzanne Adams, the Prologue from "Pagliacci" by Scotti, and the Largo al Factotum from "The Barber of Seville" by Campanari.

Putting Record Straight: Kirkwood Debunks 'Chorus' Myths

By GLENNE CURRIE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Now that "A Chorus Line" has passed its 1,000th performance on Broadway and scored major successes wherever it has played, it may be time to destroy a myth.

The myth is that most of the finished script derived from tapes of rap sessions between the dancers and director Michael Bennett when "A Chorus Line" was just an idea.

"Only about five percent of the final show came from the tapes," says James Kirkwood, co-author, with Nicholas Dante, of the show.

"I heard the tapes and I leafed through the transcripts. But we'd only get a line here and a line there," he said in an interview.

"Many of the types were there, of course: the girl who's over the hill, the new one, the veteran who finds there are fewer jobs for her charms...

"A lot of the characters were real. One of the big speeches was Nick's own story. The director was a combination of Michael and Bob Fosse. Cassie was partly Donna (McKechnie), who'd had a couple of hit shows and then flopped in Hollywood."

Kirkwood, 47, is the son of silent movie actress Lita Lee and movie actor-director James Kirkwood. He is unmarried, explaining: "My father was married five times and my mother four times. I don't want to subject myself to that."

He had the messy sort of childhood that background might indicate — "schools, military academy, never stayed in one place long enough to make friends. But I always took it for granted I'd be in show business."

He served with the Coast Guard after World War II, on a troop transport. When he got out he studied acting and singing at the American Theater Wing under the G.I. Bill.

At the Theater Wing Jim Kirkwood teamed up with Lee Goodman and they put together a comedy cabaret act which played supper clubs round the country, and they were in a Broadway show, "Dance Me a Song." At the same time, Kirkwood was acting in radio soaps — he was the son of "Valiant Lady" for four years.

"Then I went out to California. I thought I was going to be a movie star. Instead I went for six months without work and got spooked. I was getting into my 30s and I wasn't living a life of any dignity.

"And so I decided to write a novel — 'There Must be a Pony' —autobiographical, about my mother and me."

The novel sold and was made into a movie. There have been four other novels, and he's written screenplays for two of them. He also wrote a play, "P.S. Your Cat is Dead."

"It took so long to get a production that I decided to do it as a novel," Kirkwood said. "It's been a bit backward."

"P.S." finally was produced on Broadway in April, 1975, but lasted only 16 performances. However, it has had several regional productions and a new production started previews in February at the off-Broadway Promenade Theater.

"This will be about the ninth production I've seen and the fourth I've nursed," the author said. "It's done well around the country and audiences seem to like it. This is about the third rewrite and this time I've done major surgery.

"I used to get scored for getting into SM (sado-masochism) and for three extraneous characters. Both worked in the book. But productions all over the country all showed the same trouble spots. It's so good to get them out now, and I could kick myself for not doing it before."

It was "P.S." that indirectly got Kirkwood involved with "A Chorus Line."

"Michael Bennett at one time was thinking about directing 'P.S.' and that's how we met. I later bumped into him in a theater and he asked if I'd like to do a musical.

"He said, 'It's going to be about dancers; maybe about auditions.'

"I was touring with Martha Raye in 'Call me Madam' for six months, so I felt a great empathy for people who have to make a living by auditioning. I knew how agonizing it was...

"Nick and I had good times. Michael would get us all together and we never broke up in bad humor. The good thing was, we had three months rehearsals. We knew the cast, and it was no problem in writing for them or assigning them lines. It's the ideal way to do a show."

"A Chorus Line" appeared first at the off-Broadway Public Theater run by Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival. It opened with the same cast on Broadway in July, 1975 — three months after "P.S." got roasted — and has been selling out ever since. The profits from "A Chorus Line" on Broadway and elsewhere have underwritten the Shakespeare Festival ever since.

Kirkwood still has the acting bug.

"I've just done a pilot for CBS," he said, "and I'm going to play a part. If I didn't have more writing commitments I'd have played in 'P.S.' If it runs and Peter (Simon) has to leave I might go into it and play it for a while.

"It's about seven years really since I did any acting. I did a tour of 'Mary, Mary' with Kathy Crosby.

"I miss the camaraderie; you don't get any help on your own. That's what I miss — the company."

The Almanac

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday March 5, the 64th day of 1978 with 301 to follow.

The moon is moving from the last quarter toward a new moon.

There is no morning star.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

American lithographer James Ives of the Currier and Ives team was born March 5, 1806.

Also on this day in history:

In 1770, British Colonial troops killed five civilians in the so-called "Boston Massacre."

In 1953, the Soviet Union announced Premier Josef Stalin had died at the age of 73.

In 1966, a British airliner crashed into Japan's Mount Fuji, killing all 124 persons aboard.

In 1977, President Carter discussed his problems and policies in the course of answering questions from 42 callers from 26 states on a natiowide radio broadcast from the White House.

A thought for the day: Soviet Communist leader Josef Stalin said, "In the U.S.S.R., work is the duty of every able-bodied citizen, according to the principle: He who does not work, neither shall he eat."

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Is Barbra Streisand's live-in hairdresser, Jon Peters, still being supported by the superstar?—R.C., Pasadena, Cal.

A: He never was. Long before he met Streisand, Peters was self-sustaining. So much so he operated his main chain hair salon in a building along one of Beverly Hills' most distinguished business areas. Recently the Jon Peters Organization made a deal to record new talent for the Columbia label, developing his own roster of artists. He made his bow as a record producer on Streisand's album, "Butterfly." And his "Superman" album turned gold with three million copies sold. In his capacity as producer of the film remake of "A Star Is Born," Peters (no longer "Mr. Streisand") conceived, produced and marketed, worldwide, the soundtrack of that film. Which, at this writing, has sold some seven million copies. Whatever happens personally between Barbra and Jon, it's apparent that for now, at least, Streisand hardly wants to "Wash That Man Right Out of Her Hair."

Q: A survey taken by a new national magazine reveals that 37.2 percent of the girls between 15 and 19 have had premarital sex, with about a tenth of them getting pregnant. The magazine is "Planned Parenthood." What do you think of this report?—Ellie B. Peoria, Ill.

A: We think, with items such as this one, the magazine should change its masthead to "Unplanned Parenthood"

Q: Did Elvis ever comment on why he was just billed as "ELvis," not Elvis Presley?—Antoinette S., Memphis.

A: Yes, indeed. Back in '57 he said: "I like to see myself billed in lights as just "Elvis." It makes me feel like Garbo, whatever her other name is"

Q: Is Robert Blake really quitting his hit TV series? And might it continue with another actor playing Baretta?—C. Schmidt, Milwaukee.

A: That's doubtful. Blake IS Baretta—no one else could play the character and be believable. But the answer to the first part of your question is yes. "It's all over," Blake swears. "There is no way in the world I'll come back...You can only climb a mountain once. When it's over and done with it, it's time to move on and climb another mountain." The "mountain" to which he refers is a feature film titled "The Border." For which, he reveals, Sagittarius Productions will pay him half a million bucks outright—plus 10 percent of the gross.

Q: Any ideas how much New York City's July 1976 blackout cost the city and its taxpayers?—R.G., Las Vegas.

A: No accurate figure has yet been determined. What is clear however (according to Harper's) is the looting loss during the blackout. It came to nearly one billion dollars.

Q: I've seen Sophia Loren doing commercials for a water purifer on TV recently, and wonder does she need the money that badly?—IRene T., philadelphia.

A: Sophia's motivation isn't money—it's her way of helping others less fortunate. Her contract with her sponsor (the same firm that employs Joe DiMaggio as "Mr. Coffee"), stipulates that her fees (said to be in the million-dolalr bracket) be turned over to charity.

Q: Whatever happened to Will Jordan, who did such an honest take-off on Ed Sullivan? He was on Ed's show at least half a dozen times?—J.O., New Haven, Conn.

A: Where there's a will there's a way; Jordan has resumed playing Eddie, this time in a Universal comedy film about six youngsters from New Jersey whose lives were changed by the Beatles' first visit to the U.S. Even the film's title is flip—"Beatles 4 Ever."

Q: When Tom Seaver did color commentary on the World Series, you suggested his "audition" warranted his getting a regular berth on TV. So what happened?—Patty T., Tulsa, Okla.

A: He did get a syndicated show, thanks to critical acclaim. The pitcher will host a show this spring interviewing superstars in the world of sports—Mark Spitz, Rod Laver, Gordie Howe, Joe Namath, etc. Concluding with a challenge to the living legends (according to "US.") to beat all-comers at their own games. "I've learned," Seaver said, "that no matter what the game, the highs that come from playing competitively are exactly the same." (The only things different about Tom's new role will be that every time he faces the mike mound, he hopes to make a hit, not keep his guests hitless.)

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked that" P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

BARETTA WINDING DOWN—Robert Blake, who plays the title role in TV's "Baretta" says it's all over for the series. "There's no way in the world I'll be back," he says.

Most Forecasts Have Proven Inaccurate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The future has been hard on those predicting it.

Author Paul Dickson, in "The Future File," reports that an analysis in 1976 by the General Electric Research and Development Center of 1,556 predictions by American inventors, industrialists, writers and the like between 1890 and 1940 showed that less than half had been or were being fulfilled.

A third had been false. The jury was still out on the rest.

Dickson collected these examples of forecasts that have gone sour:

— By Adm. William Leahy to President Harry Truman on the atomic bomb: "The bomb will never go off, and I speak as an expert in explosives."

— By astronomer Simon Newcomb in 1903, two months before the Wright Brothers' flight: " ... Aerial flight is one of that great class of problems with which man can never cope ..."

— By Cleveland Moffett in 1900 on the use of the automobile: "... We shall probably find public taste changing so that many people will prefer to travel from place to place more slowly than at present."

— By Lee DeForest on commercial television in 1926: "While theoretically and technically television may be feasible, commercially and financially I consider it an impossibility, a development of which we need waste little time dreaming."

— By Rear Adm. Clark Woodward on the future of naval warfare in 1939: "As far as sinking a ship with a bomb is concerned, you just can't do it."

— By Science Digest in 1948 on a moon landing: "Landing and moving around the moon offers so many serious problems for human beings that it may take science another 200 years to lick them."

Thoroughbreds Have One Birthday

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Chinese New Year has started and throughout 1978 it's the Year of the Horse. Chinese "Horse" years actually come only once every 12 calendar years, say the experts at Chun King, which is involved in things Oriental. But there is only one thoroughbred horse birthday in the American calendar for purposes of determining age.

U.S. thoroughbred horses are considered "born" on Jan. 1 in the year of birth regardless of the month and date on which they are really born. Thus, a thoroughbred born on Dec. 31, 1977, and one born on Jan. 1, 1978 — a one-day difference — are officially one year apart.

Batten Down Hatches; Tornado Season At Hand

By TOM MADDEN

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — In the predawn hours of April 4, 1977, a killer storm developed 40 miles south of Jackson. At 11 o'clock the system churned east across what is known as "tornado alley" on a death march that would claim 94 victims by nightfall.

The storm, packing tornadoes, hail and torrential rains, raced across Mississippi about midday, causing minor damage. Between 2 and 2:30 p.m. a tornado slammed into a Birmingham, Ala., subdivision where it killed 22 and destroyed or damaged 192 homes.

The storm, moving at more than 60 miles per hour, then roared into Georgia. Water and hail from the storm were listed by government investigators as the main reason for the crash that same day of a Southern Airlines plane near Atlanta that killed 72.

"We knew early in the morning that this was a bad one," Clifton Green, director of the National Weather Service's Jackson office, said. "But, we didn't know how bad it would become. All we could do was wait for it to break out."

Officials said the development of the April 4 storm is similar to hundreds of other such weather patterns each year in the Southeast —a region that has been labeled "tornado alley" because of the high number of twisters.

"Most of the southeast region is a weather battleground," Allan Pearson, director of the National Service Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo., said in a telephone interview. "This is especially true in the spring, which is usually the worse time for tornadoes in the Southeast. This is because it is the Southeast where the warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico collides with the cooler air from the north."

Green said the term "tornado alley" used to apply only to the Plains and Midwest region, but statistics indicate the storm tract has shifted in the last few years.

Since 1916, more than 3,500 persons in the Southeast have been killed by tornadoes — 1,119 victims in Mississippi alone. Alabama stands second with 947, followed by Georgia with 585, Tennessee with 431, South Carolina 213, Florida 78 and North Carolina 76.

"I think the primary reason behind this high death toll is because there is so little warning on tornadoes in the Southeast," said Pearson. "Most of the twisters in the region are masked in rain and low clouds. In the Midwest you can see a tornado for miles, but in the Southeast it is on you before you know it."

Pearson said although the April storm last year ranked in severity among the top 5 percent of those recorded in the previous 20 years, it was minor when compared to storms in 1974 that killed more than 300 in 13 states in what is called the "most massive outbreaks of tornadoes in U.S. history." The twisters ranged from Alabama to Canada.

"There is no way to describe the 1974 outbreak," Pearson said. "Tornadoes were everywhere."

In a 16-hour period on April 3-4 of 1974, 148 tornadoes killed 307, injured 6,000 and caused $500 million in damage. More than 70 persons died when twisters swept northwest Alabama on April 3 and another 34 died in Xenia, Ohio.

Since 1960, according to Weather Service figures, more than 3,000 tornadoes have been reported in four Southeast states, Florida leading the list with 939, while Mississippi reported 597.

The worst single tornado on record occurred in Natchez, Miss., on May 7, 1840, when 317 persons were killed. More than 200 persons were also killed in a central Alabama tornado in 1932 and during a Tupelo, Miss., twister in 1936.

In 1977, Alabama topped the list with 23 deaths from tornadoes, followed by Illinois with six, Missouri with three and Mississippi with two. Georgia, Louisiana, Michigan, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Wisconsin, Arkansas, Indiana, Florida and Texas all reported one death each from twisters.

Pearson said 1977 was a relatively light year in the number of persons killed by tornadoes. "Statistics indicate severe tornadoes run in cycles. The relatively small death toll should not mean that people can let their guards down," he said.

Pearson said the crucial period for possible tornadoes would be in the next five to six weeks. "If it stays cold in the north and warms up in the South, then the probability of a tornado is greater," he said.

Pearson said the peak period for tornadoes runs from January to May, but tornadoes have occurred in the fall and winter months.

He said the Severe Storms Center, which is the nationwide monitoring center for tornado and thunderstorm activity, has been conducting an ongoing education program throughout the country.

The program is aimed at educating the public on tornadoes. He said the program includes explaining the difference between watch and warning advisories. A watch is issued when weather conditions are favorable for a tornado and a warning is released when a tornado has been sighted.

"These two terms are the most important we issue," Pearson said. "Most people don't want to believe there will be a tornado. We have tried to get the message home that when a person hears these terms they should take notice and do something quick."

Green said he felt the program was having an impact.

"We feel the education program is working, but despite what you do a tornado is such a destructive force and so erratic no plan is perfect," he said.

New Staff Members Named By MBFA

Land D. Wall, president of MBFA Foundation, has announced the appointment of Alvin Chilton as vice president of quality assurance.

Chilton will be reviewing the delivery of health services throughout MBFA's operations in Texas, which cover a 134-county area.

Chilton holds an associate degree in applied sciences and an associate degree in nursing from Amarillo College, with major studies and business experience in business administration, accounting and data processing.

He comes to MBFA from Mutual of Omaha Medicare in Omaha, Neb., where he served as a regional nurse field consultant to administrators and directors of nursing facilities, hospitals, home health agencies, utilization review committees, medical directors, state personnel and Social Security Administration regional officers.

Wall also announced the appointment of Pat Wheeler as administrator for MBFA's newly acquired Lakeside Memorial Nursing Home at 4306 24th St. Wheeler holds a B.A. degree in personnel management from Texas Tech University, and an M.B.A. degree in management from Pepperdine University. Before joining MBFA, Wheeler was director of personnel for Challenge Ministries.

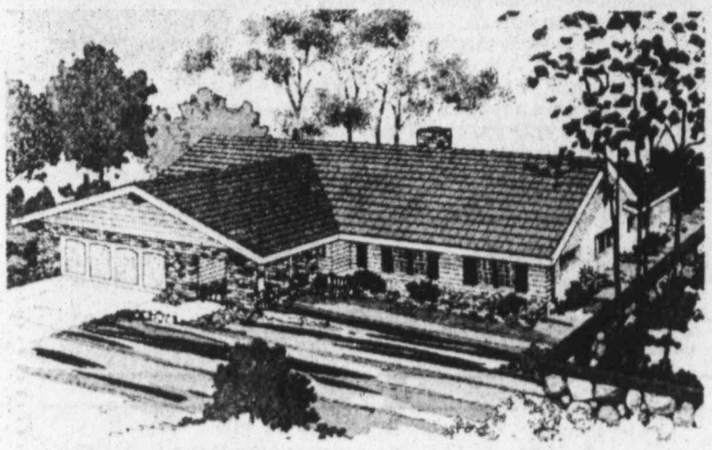

Mrs. Cathy Kelley has been appointed director of public affairs. She recently joined her husband, who is director of Llano Estacado Museum at Plainview from Waco, where she was executive producer and interviewer for a TV talk show, Cathy's Corner, which aired for 21 years on KCEN-TV.

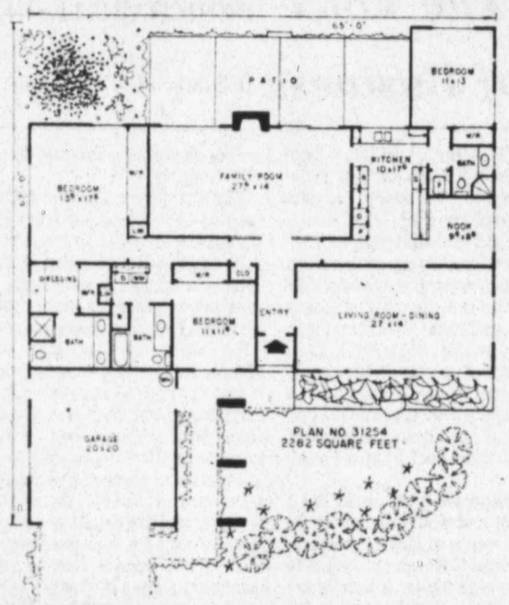

She has also served as executive director of the first congregate luncheon and service program for the elderly in a five-state area and participated in McLennan County's first RSVP program to encourage the elderly to become active volunteers in their communities. Mrs. Kelley holds a B.A. degree from William Jewell College and an M.S. degree in education from Baylor University.

In addition to these new staff members, Mrs. Fleta Pribble, RN, is now MBFA's vice president of nursing home operations, with direct responsibility for Crestview Memorial Home in Throckmorton, Gibson Memorial Home in Aspermont, Kent County Memorial Home in Jayton and Hart and Oaks Memorial Homes in Commerce.

Jim Wilson is now vice president of home health operations. In addition to his responsibility with the Lubbock Provider, West Texas Home Health Agency and South Plains Homemaker Service, he will coordinate contracts for health services with federal, state and local agencies.

MBFA Foundation is a Lubbock-based non-profit organization serving the health needs of the elderly and disabled through home health and homemaker services and nursing homes in Texas.

$1,949,859 In Permits Approved

Lubbock contractors have received permits for $1,949,859 in future construction projects, according to city records.

Commercial programs accounted for $157,000 of the total, and residential projects were $1,792,859.

Professional offices for Texas State Optical have been planned at 3822 50th St. by James Colson Inc. The project, expected to cost $65,000, will involve 2,457 square feet of floor space.

Maness Construction has scheduled a warehouse and office facility at 5848 50th St. for an estimated cost of $40,000. It will contain 4,000 square feet of space.

Buddy Ramsel will build an office furniture storage building at 2211 34th St. at an expected cost of $27,000.

In the residential classification, two duplex projects have been scheduled by Carl Sanders and W. W. Williamson. Williamson will build a two-family structure at 7907 Aberdeen for $75,000, and Sanders will construct a duplex at 4709 58th St. for $78,000.

Six single-family homes have been scheduled by Ken Flagg. Locations and estimated costs include: 8201 Joliet, $45,000; 3402 86th St., $52,000; 8002 Richmond, $54,000; 8215 Joliet, $46,000; 8018 Richmond, $54,000; and 8202 Jordan, $52,000.

Remington Homes has scheduled three new projects in the 7000 block of Winston Ave. Estimated costs are $33,000 each.

Contractors planning two homes each, include: Webb Construction, 3707 95th St. ($75,000), and 3215 91st St. ($36,000); Burl Kizer, 5501 68th St. ($50,000), and 5501 69th St. ($50,000); Revere Homes, 8401 Vicksburg Ave. ($48,000), and 4705 88th St. ($45,000); Aries Development Corp., 4807 59th St. ($40,000), and 4803 59th St. ($38,000).

Other single-family homes with estimated costs and contractors, include: 3525 92nd St., $63,000, Glenn Duncan; 8623 Jordan Ave., $49,750, Jim Hatchett; 4809 64th St., $50,000, Johnny Beavers; 3518 92nd St., $40,000, John Givens; 5732 2nd St., $39,500, Sonny Arnold; 4806 84th St., $65,000, Gary Bennett Construction; 6130 38th St., $34,000, Cherry Dale Homes.

Each Area Of Home Design Contributes To 'Livability'

By HIAWATHA ESTES

This exciting home offers a lifetime of livng ease. Each area of the design contributes to its overall livability.

Although the plan has numerous features, perhaps the most outstanding is the location of the living and family rooms. We have designated the front room as the living-dining with the rear room being the family room. If preferred, the use of these rooms could be switched so the family room would be at the front of the home with the living room-dining at the rear.

Two bedrooms are located at one side of the design while an extra bedroom is isolated on the opposite side of the plan. This room could be utilized as a maid's room, study, guest room or bedroom for a member of the family desiring more privacy.

Used brick veneer and planters, wood roofing, horizontal siding, and double hung window shutters have been combined to create a pleasing Colonial exterior. The gable roof over the garage continues over the walk leading to the front porch and entry.

Complete working drawings for plan 31254 can be purchased for only $16.95 for the first set and $9 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until July 5, 1978. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $3. ALso available are six home plan books illustrating in excess of 900 plans—a $9.75 value—for only $7.75 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all order to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J. Northridge, California 91328.

'Advertising For Profit' Topic Of Seminar Friday

Philip J. O'Jibway, director of the Small Business Administration's Lubbock District, has announced that a seminar entitled, "Advertising for Profit," will be jointly sponsored Friday by SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives), the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and SBA.

The seminar will be held in the Meeting Room at the Chamber of Commerce, 14th Street and Avenue K, from 8:30 a.m. until noon on Friday.

The program will be presented by three retired advertising executives: O. G. Bates, former owner of Bates-Wells Agency; Dick Cook, former advertising manager of The Avalanche-Journal; and Culver Hill, former advertising director at Hemphill-Wells in Lubbock.

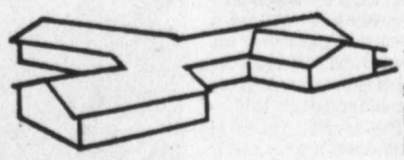

Bates has a vast background in advertising and sales, and has won national recognition for his more than 10 years as a SCORE counselor. Both Cook and Hill have won the Silver Medal from the Lubbock Advertising Club.

Topics to be discussed include: "Advertising With a Purpose"; "What to Look for in Buying Advertising"; "Goodwill Advertising"; and "Salesmanship, Advertising's Companion."

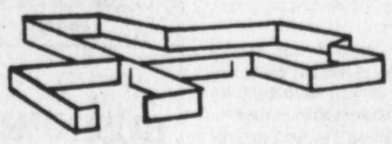

The program is designed to assist small business managers with advertising and promotion, and in working with ad agencies and advertising media.

ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME built to save
The key to saving IS INSIDE . . .

. . . THE WALLS AND CEILINGS
The outside walls of the ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME meet standards according to three options. The first option uses 6 inch studs with 6 inch batt-type (R-19) insulation. Option two has 4 inch studs and 3 inch insulation (R-11) with 3/4 inch styrofoam sheathing. The third option uses R-15 minimum insulation with any other method. All options include a vapor barrier of 6 mil. polyethylene or foil-backed sheetrock. Sill insulation or sill caulking between the bottom plate and the floor also is required. The ceiling is insulated with R-30.

. . . THE DOORS AND WINDOWS
Outside doors and all windows on the ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME are weather stripped and caulked. In addition, double pane glass or storm windows and insulated core or storm doors are vital contributors to the dollar-wise built to save ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME. A recommendation is made that maximum glass area comprise 8% or less of floor space.

. . . THE FLOORS
The very foundation of the ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME — the floor — is an important factor in saving energy and money. Slab floors contain vermiculite in the cavity between bricks and slab up to the top of the floor. An alternate is a layer of rigid urethane or styrofoam (minimum of 3/4 inch thickness) from top of floor along the outside edge of the slab down to the brick ledge. Wood floors (pier and beam) must be insulated with R-13.

When you're planning to buy or build a new home, you start by taking a really good look inside. Because the key to comfort and saving is INSIDE . . . INSIDE the walls, in the doors and windows, under the floor and in the ceiling. So peek INSIDE the ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME — really INSIDE. You can see that it's BUILT TO SAVE — Energy and Money.

Identity Crisis Afflicting Quiet Houston Suburb

By BRUCE NICHOLS

BELLAIRE, Texas (UPI) — Most residents of this Houston suburb have decided they didn't really want their modest skyline — one 14-story and two 10-story office towers — that other cities would welcome as symbols of growth.

Some citizens also talk of limiting traffic through town, perhaps by redirecting major thoroughfares. Barricades already are in place on some side streets.

It's all part of an identity crisis afflicting the 20,000 residents of this quiet, mostly white middle class three-bedroom community of three and one-half square miles.

The conflict arises from the fact that Bellaire is completely surrounded by booming, sprawling Houston, an unzoned metropolis where high-rise buildings are popping up everywhere and traffic is horrendous.

Developers like Bellaire, but its citizens are debating exactly how to respond to that interest which could mean a lot of money for the city budget and some property owners.

The long-simmering conflict flared Aug. 13 when voters recalled Mayor Joe Poindexter and three council members who favored more high-rise construction along a part of Loop 6, an expressway that cuts through the town.

A new anti-high-rise council elected Oct. 1 immediately imposed a moratorium on commercial development except for an eight-story building already approved. The moratorium will end with adoption of a new master plan later this year.

The disagreement could be an issue in the regular spring elections.

"I think you've probably got two-thirds that feel the way they do and one-third that feel the way we do," said Poindexter, a businessman for whom the issue is low taxes and Bellaire's continued fiscal independence.

"The only way for our existence to be is to have a tax base that we can solely rely on ourselves to do what we want to do," he said. High-rise construction "would add to our tax base 10-fold."

Councilman David DeWhitt, who calls himself a middle-of-the-roader in the dispute, said high-rise construction helped raise the tax rolls from $45 million to $181.8 million in recent years.

Poindexter, who said he's through forever with city government, argues the new council's anti-high-rise posture is unrealistic. And, although he favors neighborhood street barricades, he said Bellaire cannot shut Houston out.

"We don't want to shut Houston out," said new Mayor Rod Rethwisch, who has announced for election to a full term.

"There's a big misconception that this current administration advocates a no-growth structure. The community wasn't going all that wrong under Poindexter. People just felt like it was going too fast.

"You can up my taxes 10 percent. Just give me some peace and quiet,'" said Rethwisch, a salaried engineer atJohnson Space Center.

Besides, he said the city is in "good financial shape" with a $6.2 million budget and a planned reserve of $1 million.

Rethwisch also said the new council plans to regenerate the city's existing business district, built mostly in the 50s and early 60s, and to allow low-rise, six-story or lower, office building in some areas.

No one charges any of the ousted council members had any improper personal gain at stake in high-rise development, but most say increased business activity in the community and a general pro-growth attitude were factors.

"It's a difference of philosophy," said David Nagle, president of the Bellaire Civic Action Club. "The bottom line on the one hand is the quality of life. The bottom line on the other hand is essentially a profit motive.

"It's been very bitter," Nagle said.

Indeed, some city employees and officials have quit. Planner Bob Schernig left complaining of "frustration" because he was unable to communicate with the new council.

Banker Ralph Williams, president of the Greater Bellaire Chamber of Commerce, said part of the bitterness arises from a "misunderstanding of the business community and how it operates.

"They think ... all business wants to do is exploit them for a profit," said Williams. "That's a misconception. Businesses paid almost half the taxes in Bellaire last year."

And, he might have added, the salaries of Bellaire's citizens, most of whom work in Houston. 4

Williams said the moratorium "impedes progress" but that he is more immediately concerned about some master plan proposals: downzoning some commercial property to residential, narrowing at least one major street and automatic biennial review of the plan.

"If you devalue property, you hurt the owner," he said. "If you narrow Bissonet Street (something Rethwisch said is unlikely), it's going to force traffic off it (into neighborhoods)."

As for automatic review every two years, Williams said: "There are basic construction or development guidelines that have to be established and cannot be changed every two years."

But Williams said the chamber has adopted a low profile and still hopes for peace in Bellaire.

"We don't want to be inflammatory. By raising Cain, you're just going to close doors whereas if you keep them open you can negotiate and possibly unite. At this point, they (the new council) have done nothing unreasonable."

If they become unreasonable, DeWhitt, who considers the moratorium a "copout" and "crutch" which "responsible human beings" don't need, fears the city may risk a major lawsuit.

Nagle, a leader of the anti-high-rise group, doubts the dispute will end up in court.

Anyway, he said judges recently have ruled in favor of cities. He cited Petaluma, Calif., which he said won a federal court fight with a developer over limitation of growth to 250 new homes annually.

"A city has enormous unchallengeable power under the law if it will use it for the citizens," Nagle said.

New Chain Letter Twist Bared

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A reader in Honesdale, Pa., asked us to check on an offer he received through the mail telling him he could earn more than $800,000 in 50 days.

He noted the offer sounded "suspicious" and asked us to check it out.

The letter is not only suspicious but probably illegal as well.

It's a twist on the old chain letter device, with aspects of a pyramid scheme. The letter basically asks for $2 apiece for four pamphlets which allegedly tell the user how to make big money at home.

Once you've bought the pamphlets you are urged to make 500 copies of the original chain letter advertising the leaflets, buy a mailing list or use the telephone book to construct your own, and then sit back and wait for the money to start rolling in.

As orders for the pamphlets come in, you are free to reproduce them and sell them. The chain letter which you send out originally carries your name and the names of three others who supposedly have gotten into the scheme before you. Each new person who gets into the "business" puts his name at the top of the list and pushes the three following names down one space, eliminating the last of the four names.

In any event the letter promises that if everyone follows through by sending out 500 more letters you will reach seven million potential customers and be rolling in dough in a matter of days.

As is probably obvious by now the only people who would make any money are the peoppe who put out the original letter. If everyone contacted followed through by sending out 500 letters, everyone in the country would have been contacted in a matter of days. And the "market" would be dried up almost instantly.

The U.S. Postal service tells us that any chain letter which seeks "something of value" may be in violation of either the mail fraud statute or the federal lottery statute.

Chain letters which seek to circulate recipes or other things not of value are legal.

The Postal Service is precluded by a Supreme Court decsion, however, from rendering decisions on whether such letters are legal. That's up to the courts.

We did ask the postal inspector in Seattle if he had received any complaints about this company, since the letter was mailed from a city in that state. He said none had been recorded, but we are forwarding the letter to him for further investigation.

If the Postal Service decides the company is in violation of the law, it can ask a court to issue an order stopping the firm from using the mails to further its fraud.

"The theory behind the chain letter is that somebody has got to lose," one postal official in Washington says. "Everybody can't win. Mathematically its impossible for everyone to get rich. And there's the fraud."

Interestingly enough chain letters are always in vogue, officials tell us. There is always someone looking for an easy way to make money.

There's a new book on the amrket which may be of valueto hom,howners trying to save energy. Called the "Energy Savers Catalog," (G. P. Putnam and Sons, New York) the 160-page book is one of the most comprehensive efforts we've seen to pull together information on specific products.

There are easy-to-understand diagrams and explanations of how various appliances work, and how they can be improved in terms of energy use. Mailing addresses for the companies which make the products listed by brand name are carried in an index at the rear of the book.

The publication, which sells for $6.95 in paperback and $14.95 hardbound, appears to be light on specific information about solar or wind power devices; but it does feature information on such subjects as skylights, chimney cleaning techniques, reflective film to paste on the inside of windows to ceep the sun out, light dimmers, water savcng devices for commode and shower, how to caulk cracks which let in cold air and so forth.

The Voice of Business

By RICHARD LESHER
President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON–The business community breathed a hugh sigh of relief when Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps abandoned her push for a federal Corporate Social Performance Index.

The idea was for Commerce to collect and compile data on corporate social projects—charitable contributions, minority employment, pollution abatement, etc. This material would then serve as a standard to which a corporation could compare its own efforts. According to a Commerce Department spokesman, participation would have been "voluntary," and findings "might not" be made public.

Voluntary corporate good works are a fine idea. What scared the business community was a lesson of long experience: When the Federal Government begins to collect data on something, it usually develops an irresistible urge to regulate the object of its attentions. And that—had it happened—would have had a stultifying effect on corporate social projects.

Inevitably, the government would have established "norms," then begun expecting (or requiring) all companies to work toward them. The first casualities of this process would be the innovation and flexibility that are the prime virtues of voluntary activity.

Yet flexibility and adaptability are essential, for the very obvious reason that needs differ from one community to another. Minority training and employment may be important in City A, but not in City B, which needs higher priority, and so on.

Certainly, such decisions can best be made by persons who are on the scene and familiar with local conditions. And certainly, truly original ideas are unlikely to flower in an atmosphere of bureaucratic norms.

Another problem with a taxpayer-financed Social Performance Index is that it isn't needed. As is so often the case, the private sector is already finding ways to do the same thing at far less cost. Individual companies are experimenting with various forms of "social accounting" to keep track of their own efforts.

Some companies and industries are publishing comprehensive digests of activity in the field. And at the National Chamber we periodically compile reports on social projects and circulate them to our members.

The Commerce Department originally wanted $428,000 to develop its "index," an amount that was later cut back as the trial balloon lost altitude. Undoubtedly, an ongoing program would have grown to cost the taxpayer far more than that, as all federal programs have a way of doing.

But we're safe...at least for now. Thanks are due for the appropriate skepticism of the relevant House Appropriations Subcommittee, and for the good grace with which Secretary Kreps allowed the project to languish.

Harassed executives will not get a new set of forms to fill out, the overburdened taxpayer will not get a new set of bureaucrats to support, and the business community will remain free to exercise a maximum degree of creativity in seeking solutions to social problems that the government has failed to cure.

Louise Cummins Serving In Diocesan Post

Appointed last November, Louise Cummins of Lubbock, is serving a as vice president for christian social relations for the Diocesan Churchwoman of the Northwest Texas Diocese of the Episcopal Church.

A native of Craigmont, Idaho, she was graduated in 1957 from the University of Idaho with a bachelor of science degree in education.

Confirmed at St. Stephen's Church in Seattle, Wash., in the Diocese of Olympia in 1959, she is a communicant of St. Stephen's Church of Lubbock.

A Lubbock resident since 1970, she is the wife of David Cummins, a professor in the Texas Tech University law school.

She is the mother of two children: Stephen, 13, and Shelley, 10.

Since moving to Lubbock, she has taught church school classes and held local offices in Episcopal Churchwomen.

Mrs. Cummins is a director of the League of Women Voters of Texas and is chairman of the board of South Plains Information and Referral Systems, a new organization she said "that is seeking to provide a better way to provide human service delivery.

She is a member of the lay advisory council for the West Texas Library Systems, a member of the Lubbock City-County Library Board, and the Lubbock Campfire board of directors.

As Christian social relations vice president, she succeeds Margaret McNallie, formerly of Abilene.

Mrs. Cummins serves without vote on the diocesan Commission of Christian Living and Education.

Adjustments Arouse Ire

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The severe winter is bringing costly utility bills and questions like this one from Big Stone Gap, Va:

"I am writing in regard to my electric bills. I was told thc fuel adjustment clause was illegal to start with and has been outlawed in some states. We have been paying it for quite some time and it keeps steadily going up.

"Last month it was more than doubled. Our December bill, the electric part was $45, the fue ad ustment was $12. In January our b ll was $65 and the fuel adjustment was almost $32. As you can see it really took quite a jump.

"Prices are going up and the average family can no longer make it."

Fuel adjustment clauses that allow utility companies to pass on increased fuel costs to the consumer vary from state to state and utility to utility. They are not illegal.

In some states such as West Virginia, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania, they are no longer automatic; that is, the state regulatory commission must approve them.

In other states such as Montana, they don't exist at all because the fuel source is hydroelectric.

No legislation is being seriously considered currently in Congress to restrict fuel adjustments.

The main energy bill now before Congress has a provision that would require state utility regulatory commissions to investigate fuel adjustment clauses to make sure they provide for efficient use of resources.

The bill would give citizens groups the chance to challenge a regulatory commission in court if they feel the agency has not correctly reviewed adjustment clauses.

Meanwhile, the prices of coal, oil and gas keep going up, and so do utility bills.

The Consumer Product Sufety Commission has conducted another investigation of Bounce fabric softener and concluded it is not to blame for clothes dryer fires.

The question was raised by a company that supplies laundry equipment to apartment buildings and other commercial establishments. The company claimed a fire hazard is created if consumers use sheets of Bounce over and over again until they shred and clog the filter or if too many sheets are used for a single load.

After investigating several reports of fires in dryers, the safety agency said it believes "it is unlikely that Bounce presents any more of a risk of fires in clothes dryers than the clothes themselves."

The agency also quoted the manufacturer, Procter and Gamble, as saying the product actually helps prevent fires because its lubricating action helps prevent lint from developing.

The company submitted test results showing Bounce sheets did not catch fire during two hours of exposure to oven temperatures well above those in dryers.

It was the commission's second investigation of the product. The first, made to determine if Bounce caused allergic reactions among persons exposed to clothes treated with it, also cleared the product.

Dale Tardy Wins Water Quality Certification

Dale Tardy, owner of Culligan Water Conditioning Co., 5280 34th St., has passed the certification examination of the Water Quality Association, a national group headquartered in suburban Chicago.

According to the Water Quality Association, Tardy is the only such certified water conditioning dealer in the Lubbock area.

The primary purpose of the certification program is consumer protection, the association indicated.

Water conditioning has become a highly sophisticated technology, according to Tardy. It requires training in such skills as chemical treatment, reverse osmosis, demineralization, filtration and disinfection.

"Water is what we make it," Tardy said, "and with today's technology we can tailor make it to almost any specification."

New Air Freight Manager Named

A. C. Bullard, formerly of ICX Freight Lines, has been appointed to the position of station manager for Burlington Northern Air Freight.

Burlington Air Freight offers service to all airport cities in the United States and many other countries, Bullard said.

Thigpen Named To New Post With Pioneer

AMARILLO (Special) -Ralph B. Stewart, president of Pioneer Nuclear Inc., has announced the promotion of B. F. Thigpen to the position of senior vice president.

Thigpen will remain vice president of Pioneer Uravan Inc., which has uranium exploration and mining interests, and treasurer of Pioneer Coal Co.

Thigpen was first employed by Amarillo Gas Co., a Pioneer predecessor company, in 1946, as a billing clerk. He was named assistant treasurer for Pioneer Natural Gas Co. in 1954. He became assistant chief accountant for the company in 1957.

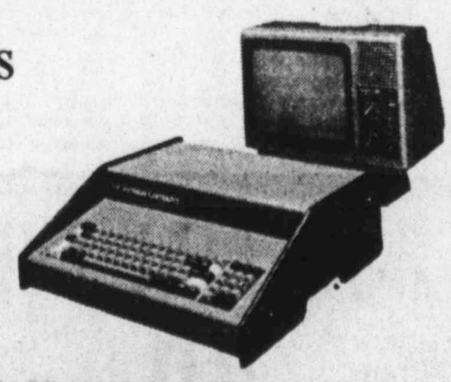

He transferred to another Pioneer subsidiary company, Amarillo Oil Co., in 1958, where he was named treasurer, a position he held until this year.

Pioneer Corp., through its subsidiary operations, is engaged in the exploration for and production of oil, natural gas, liquid hydrocarbons, coal, vanadium and uranium.

Court May Rule In Antenna Case

By MIKE WENDLAND

It looks like the U.S Supreme Court will finally decide the controversial issue of just how high a CB or amateur antenna may be.

The case is an old one, going all the way back to 1973 when a California amateur radio operator, John Schroeder, erected a tower and antenna in excess of the 40-foot limit set by a zoning ordinace in the city of Cerritos.

As a result, Schroeder was served with two criminal complaints, one for violating the zoning ordiance, the other for disturbing the peace. After numerous state legal appearances, the disturbing charge was dropped but the ordinance violation continued.

The case went all the way through the state court system, with appeals filed after each setback. Last month, after California's highest courts refused to invalidate the ordinance, Schroeder's lawyers went to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The outcome of that case will hold great significance to two-way radio operators nationwide. In state after state, CBers and hams have been taken to court in record numbers for violations of local antenna height laws.

As in Schroeder's situation, the basic reason for the localized antenna laws has to do with aesthetic considerations. The local communities simply don't like the appearance of large antennas.

What the pro-ham and CB lawyers say, however, is that since the FCC regulates all areas of communications, municiplities cannot enact any law which affects those communications. As a side argument, some attorneys contend that discriminatory antenna ordinances restrict free speech and thus violate the First Amendment.

Before an individual can use a two-way radio, he must first be licensed by the federal government. And an antenna is required to properly operate that radio equipment. Thus, argue the communications specialists, antenna height limitations are the responsibility of the government. As evidence, the attorneys point to antenna regulations set by the FCC.

The anti-antenna forces, meanwhile, argue that federal antenna regulations are far from detailed. No minimum height limits are set, only maximum: 200 feet for ham operators, 60 feet for CBers. Concluded one California court: "The FCC has not exhibited concern over antenna heights."

The free speech issue is thornier still. In the Schroeder case, his attorneys argue that, if he is to exercise his ham privileges and communicate around the world, he must have an antenna over the limit set by his city's zoning ordinance. The courts, however, note that Schroeder can communicate within a radius of 2,500 miles with a lower antenna at the legal height set by the ordinance.

The courts so far have held that the ordinance does not constitute a "blanket limitaiton of freedom of speech" as Schroeder can still communicate over a wide area.

Schroeder's attorneys hope to argue their case before the Supreme Court by the end of summer. A decision is expected by year's end. Since the case is the first involving communications law as it affects amateurs or CBers, it promises to break new ground.

Q. A few months back, you said the Coast Guard planned to start monitoring CB this year. What channel will they listen to? W.A., St. Petersburg, Fla.

A. They'll be listening to Channel 9, the national CB emergency frequency, same as most land-based emergency help groups. For a full discussion of CB's use in an emergency, see my book, "The Wendland CB GLove Compartment Bible," available postpaid for $3.95 from Sheed Andrews and McMeel, 6700 Squibb Rd., Mission, Kan. 66202.

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: I've had it. My CB gear is all up for sale. The FCC should be investigated by Congress for selling us a worthless bill of goods. There's been so much skip lately that I can't even use my CB to talk more than a mile. It's pretty ridiculous when Italy comes in better than my neighbor. CB should be moved to a new frequency where skip doesn't jam everything. F.L., Golden, Col.

Dear Mr. Wendland: I'm having a ball working the world on CB. So far, I've talked to Hawaii, California, Mexico and Puerto Rico on CB. Sure, I know that it's illegal for CBers to work skip. But better skip than none. And with all the skip CB has had lately, distant situations are the only ones that you can hear. B.K., Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear CB Static: If anyone ever wondered about the value of CB, the blizzard we had around here in January sure proved how life-saving CB can be. I can't even count the number of rescues I heard. CBers were on snowmobiles and in four-wheel-drive vehicles helping people all over the place. Sure, in non-emergencies, CB can become a bit of a hassle. But when the chips are down, CBers really know how to help. S.K., Toledo, Ohio.

Got a CB gripe, compliment or suggestion? Write Mike Wendland, CB Static, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan. 66201. And for a complete discussion of CB, see his book, "The Wendland CB Glove Compartment Bible," available postpaid for $3.95 from Sheed Andrews and McMeel. 6700 Squibb Rd., Mission, Kan.

TIPS FROM YOUR BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

ONE OF THE most common complaints, coming to your Better Business Bureau, has to do with the unhappy buyer of a used car. People come to us to ask the Bureau's help in getting the seller to do something about a used car that is not running properly.

People should understand that, unless represented otherwise, a used car is usually not warranted in any way. The law of "implied warranty" only covers new items. For example, if one were to buy a new car that failed to work, then the law would require the seller to either put it into working condition or to replace it. The theory here is that a new car that fails to work is, in fact, not a car even though it may resemble a car in appearance. On the other hand, a used car falls into a different category and is not assumed to be warranted and therefore represents the truest example of a "buyer beware" product.

How then can one be certain that they are making a good purchase on a used car? Your Better Business Bureau has several suggestions that, if followed, should improve your chances of making a good buy. First of all, be sure you pick a reliable dealer. Check him out with your friends, relatives and, of course the Better Business Bureau. Does the dealer sell new cars? This doesn't mean that used car dealers don't offer reliable cars, but a new car dealer has first choice of trade-ins and often sells off the less desirable ones at car auctions. Also, there is a better chance that the new car dealer knows the history of the used car and its service record. If the dealer does not have first hand knowledge about the car, then you should ask for names and addresses of previous owners. Check with the former owner to find out whether or not the car was reliable at the time they traded it in and what mileage they had on the odometer at the time of trade. Shop around to compare prices. Have an independent mechanic look at the car to ascertain its condition. Look for telltale signs of abuse and wear such a ripples or spots in the finish, loose bumpers or other indications which might imply collision or body damage. Examine doors, windows and the trunk lid for close fit and ease of opening and closing. These are signs of a well-kept car. Check front tires for uneven wear that might indicate bad alignment. Check the end of the tail pipe. Black, gummy soot in the tail pipe may mean worn rings or bad valves. Sit on the upholstery to check for bumps or sags. Look under the floor carpet for rust. Be sure the front seat will lock into position after it is moved. Check the acceleration and brake pedal pads. Start the engine. If it is difficult to start, it could mean a bad battery, electrical system, or poor compression in the engine. Watch for blue smoke out of the tail pipe. This could mean bad valves or rings. Feel the engine for clunking or rumble when the acceleration is depressed. This could mean bad rods or main bearings. With automatic transmissions, listen for a whining sound. If it whines, check underneath for signs of fluid leaks. The steering wheel should not have more than two inches of play. The brake pedal should be firm and not spongy. Try all electrical items such as windshield wipers, lights, turn signals, heater, radio and air conditioner.

Finally, take the car for a road test. Make several starts and stops. Try turning at various speeds. Go over a rough road and listen for rattles and clunking sounds.

If you are satisfied with all your tests and with the price you are ready to consider buying. If you need financing, check several sources. A good buy means a car that you can afford and that will provide you with many miles of good transportation. Remember, next to your home, this is your largest purchase. Be sure it is what you want!

ARCHITECTURALLY SPEAKING

(By Members Of Lubbock Chapter, TSA)

THE TEXAS SOCIETY OF Architects (TSA) have embarked on an ambitious program this year of "Town Meetings" on Texas — The Quality Life. This year-long program will be sponsored by the various chapters of TSA in communities throughout Texas.

These programs, which will have TSA support in funding and services, will focus on local issues selected in each community as significant to the future quality of life as the citizens of that community envision it.

Quoting Preston M. Bolton, TSA president, "Our purpose is to help maintain or enhance the quality of life in Texas in a time of change. We do not believe that Texas needs to repeat the mistakes of the older sections of the country in dealing with growth and prosperity. And we do not believe that present or future resource constrants need diminish the quality of life in Texas if we design for the future with a thorough understanding of the variety of options that are available to develop the diversity of lifestyle choices the citizens of Texas want."

Throwing its full support into this program the Lubbock Chapter of TSA is planning several "mini-town meetings" throughout the summer and scheduling the "grand town meeting" sometime around the first of October.

THE "MINI-TOWN MEETINGS" will be planned by and in cooperation with the many interest groups and concerned citizens throughout Lubbock. The meetings are to provide a forum for the citizens of Lubbock to speak out from the grass roots on the issues they feel are most urgent to attaining or preserving the quality of life in Texas as they would like to live it.

Lubbock architects want to try to understand how the citizens of our community see the quality of life, to stimulate wider acquaintance with all possible options and—wherever they can—to apply the understanding they develop to their own work. They want to know how environmental design affects the quality of life for individuals, as individuals see it. They want to know how people feel about their buildings and their towns—what they like and dislike, what is convenient and inconvenient, what is pleasant or unpleasant, what makes working harder or easier, what makes shopping more or less inviting, or recreation more or less fun, or school more or less tedious, or hospitals more or less forbidding. We want the people of Lubbock to help design their buildings and their communities.

NOVEMBER 1-3 THE 1978 annual meeting of TSA, to be held in San Antonio, will become a kind of statewide "town meeting" derived from the experience of all the community town meetings held throughout the year. A "State of the State" report on Texas — The Quality Life will be published for distribution to state officials, including the Governor and the Legislature, the media, all town meeting participants and all members of TSA.

The architects of Texas, through the Texas Society of Architects and its chapters in many cities and towns want to invite the citizens of Texas to articulate their aspiration in new ways which might stimulate new perceptions of the different questions that need to be asked—and, somehow, answered—in each of our communities.

We want to know what people feel is necessary to add "quality" to their lives. For, above all, we want to help out fellow-citizens achieve their individual visions of TEXAS — THE QUALITY OF LIFE.

The Energy Experts

Charles Soodak And Herbert Cullis

QUESTION— My house has very uneven heating from the hot air registers. The kitchen—the room closet to the furnance—remains 75 to 80 degrees all day, while the family room is only 55 degrees.

During winter we move the TV into the living room, creating disorder for several months. My husband speeded up the furnance fan—making it even noisier—in hopes of stirring the air better. But that was of no value. What more can we do?

ANSWER— In a perfectly designed duct system—which you obviously lack—hot air is delivered to each room in proper proportion to keep the entire house at a uniform temperature. Ideally, the system would need no dampers (shut-offs, inside the ducts) to obtain this perfect proportion.

Most systems, however, require at least one damper, and many have a sheet metal flap in the duct just behind each register. That flap may be bent to cut down the air in rooms receiving excess heat.

In a poorly designed system like yours with gross heat imbalance, we suggest cutting the fan speed down. That will decrease noise and equalize the flow to the registers. We have seen cases when a decrease in fan speed worked near miracles in heating cold bedrooms.

QUESTION—Please settle an argument for me. I am saving energy by cutting my use of household appliances.

I know my iron uses lots of electricty, so I do not keep it on a minute more than necessary. Ditto the electric frying pan. And I only run the dishwasher once a week.

I know I'm saving energy—but my boyfriend says my scrimping won't save as much energy as cutting out one trip to the beauty parlor. He's all wet, isn't he?

ANSWER— Sorry, he is almost dry. According to figures compiled by the Edison Electric Institute, the average annual combined energy cost for a dishwasher ($18.85), frying pan ($5), hair dryer (70 cents), hand iron ($3), radio ($4.30), toaster ($1.95), coffee maker ($5.30) and shaver (3 cents) totals $39.13 per year.

If by scrimping you cut that amount by 10 percent, you will in a year's time save $3.91—the cost of six gallons of gasoline. How far away is your beauty parlor?

QUESTION— I recently saw a display of odd looking krypton light bulbs at the supermarket. This is a put on, isn't it? Krypton is just a green substance that makes Superman weak.

ANSWER— Krypton is an honest-to-goodness colorless gas. It is present in the air at one part krypton to one million parts of air. Due to its low concentration, krypton is quite expensive.

Most light bulbs used in homes contain a small amount of argon gas. This retards the evaporation of the tungsten filament, (Evaporation hastens the failure of the lamp and reduces light output by blackening the bulb).

The effectiveness of the gas at retarding evaporation is related to the mass of its atoms or molecules. Krypton atoms are twice as massive as argon. Therefore, the lamp's life is extended—or the lamp will last the same amount of time while burning brighter.

The krypton lamp can be designed to produce 20 percent more light than a conventional lamp of the same wattage and life expectancy. With the same light output, the life expectancy will be 60 percent greater for krypton.

We recommend these bulbs if their cost is less than 60 percent above that of standard bulbs, and if they will get a good deal of use. They are not economical for rarely used lamps or for lamps subject to abuse or vibration.

QUESTION— I read that the huge cooling towers being built near my house are going to spew clouds of pollution on my neighborhood and arectually wasteful of heat energy. Is that correct?

ANSWER— That is absolutey wrong! Such towers are used to cool both air conditioning and condensors in big buildings and steam in generating plants. They only produce a clean, water fog—commonly known as clouds or rain water.

Pollution is put into the air from smoke stacks, tail pipes and fireplaces—but not from cooling towers.

Three Receive Top Honors At Banquet

Planning Consultants was host to its representatives and staff at a banquet and presentation of awards ceremony held recently at the Lubbock Country Club.

The program featured Coach Faye O'Dell, athletic director of the Perry Public Schools, Perry, Okla., as guest speaker. Guest of Honor was James P. Zachry, president of Tower Life Insurance Co. of San Antonio.

Top production honors went to Wayne E. Ricketson, CLU, "Man of the Year," and Billie W. Leach, "Pacesetter." A special award went to John W. "Dub" Malaise for his outstanding client service.

In addition, several other members of the Planning Consultants organization were cited for outstanding production and periods of service.

The Lubbock-based firm, which maintains offices in Wichita Falls, Amarillo and Midland, was also celebrating the production of almost $110 million in life insurance volume since 1971. Facilities have recently been expanded and production goals for 1978 have been set at $1 million in new life premium.

In 1976, approximately 134 million licensed drivers in the United States put nearly 1.4 trillion miles on their odometers going to work, running errands, making visits, taking vacations and providing services.

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

The Hour Is Near Midnight

"AS I TRAVEL from coast to coast and border to border, and talk with people from all walks of life, I have never seen such frustration and pessimism except in times of war."

Those words by a San Antonio businessman, as quoted in a recent ad he placed in The Wall Street Journal, are worth thinking about.

A VISITOR FROM another planet would be confused by what he would find in America today.

In a land of plenty for most persons, he would find a discontent and undercurrent of strife, and even inequality, that is hard to explain.

In a land which guarantees and practices a degree of personal freedom and opportunity unmatched in history, millions feel insecure, fearful for the safety of their lives and possessions.

And in a nation which long has been a bulwark for not only Freedom at home but a foe against oppression abroad, we now find ourselves regarded as a fading leader of the Free World, not only unable to defend our friends, but ourselves as well. The will to do so plays almost as big a role as the ability in this case.

IT IS EASY to take note of these faults which are paralyzing our ability as a people and a nation to understand the past, cope with the present or face the challenge of the future.

It is another to recommend alternatives, possible solutions to "what ails us."

One of the problems is that the illness has been with us for far too long now and in the recent past has been steadily eroding our physical and mental capacity to deal with it.

WHILE THIS may sound like an exercise in semantics to some, what we are saying is as real as tomorrow's workday, the week's paycheck, a Senate debate on the Panama Canal, rabble-rousing rhetoric on human rights or what the Sabbath and a belief in God really means to each of us.

In brief, "what ails us" starts with each of us.

And the medicine it is going to take to cure the ailment must be taken by each of us.

In some ways, we are, we hope, starting on the road back. More and more, the so-called "silent majority" is speaking its mind. More and more persons are "getting involved" in what is happening at every level of government from the school board to the White House.

Whether or how much anyone is listening remains the unanswered question.

BUT, IN DROVES, Americans are suddenly awakening to the fact that all they have to lose is their nation and a way of life most of them treasure.

How to protect it remains the problem.

Today, far too many of us still talk to one another, complain to one another and then do not take an active role in political affairs, in helping choose, work for and vote for the best candidates to serve us.

In another area, far too many of us are seeking to solve our problems, not by rational discussion, debate and persuasion—Reason, if you please—but by emulating the ragtag and fractured nations of Europe. That is, we are "taking to the streets."

In a period where the right of peaceful—we emphasize Peaceful—assembly is threatened, where the right to speak out in a reasonable public forum may be denied, then "taking to the streets," or "dumping the tea" in the harbor might be acceptable.

But, in the context of today's complicated and highly volatile world, such emotional solutions can lead only to confrontations, and as has been demonstrated, no concrete solution or progress.

THE ANSWER, we suggest, to restoring confidence in The System, in the American Way of Life, in Ourselves, is to look within and apply some age-old and historic guidelines.

First, we must Do Unto Others As We Would Have Them Do Unto Us. Really do this in everyday life, in seeking to iron out problems, whether it be the farm problem, integration or a dispute between labor and management.

Secondly, we must restore responsible government at all levels. Those chosen to be "public servants" must be responsive to the majority, not the fragmented axe-grinding demands of the special interest blocs. The latter must be worked into the scheme of things and share in the nation's bounty. But, the minority can not dictate for the majority.

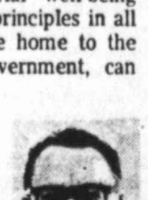

AND LASTLY, we must impress upon everyone from the White House to the newest member of Congress that only a nation prepared to defend itself can defend itself.

Today, one of the most insidious conspiracies in world history is slowly pushing its tentacles into every area of the world. International Communism's next major goal is the vast wealth, in men and minerals, on the continent of Africa. Next, it well could be South America, then the United States itself.

In the hours of a nation's destiny and a time for decision, the clock stands near midnight for America. Only a great reawakening, major sacrifices on the part of each of us—perhaps even in material well-being—and a return to Christian principles in all facets of our lives, from the home to the school, to business and government, can cure "what ails us."

ART BUCHWALD:

How Could They Do It If They Were Friends?

WASHINGTON—I think for me the saddest thing about Watergate is that members of the old Nixon gang have turned against each other.

Who would have ever dreamed that on the David Frost show former President Nixon would have implicated John Ehrlichman and Bob Haldeman, whom he considered his "sons," in the coverup of a third-rate burglary?

Who would have thought that John Ehrlichman would write a fiction novel based on President Nixon showing him in such an unfavorable light?

How could anyone have predicted that Bob Haldeman, one of the great White House stonewallers, would let down his hair and blow the whistle on Nixon, Charles Colson and Henry Kissinger?

WHATEVER THEY did in the past I always said to my wife, "At least you have to admire them for their loyalty to each other."

I always dreamed the Nixon crowd would meet together on the Tenth Anniversary of Watergate and have a nostalgic reunion, reliving those wonderful days when they were all fighting in the White House bunker.

It would be a scene out of "White Christmas," with John Dean calling up everybody and saying, "Let's go out to San Clemente and show the old man that, while the rest of the country may have forgotten him, those of us who fought with him still really care."

I COULD SEE them gathering on the lawn overlooking the blue Pacific and everyone would break into "Hail to the Chief" as Nixon came out in the suit he wore when he was President.

There would be tears in his eyes as he looked at those familiar faces, and then he'd say, "I want you all to shape up. I've never seen such a bunch of sloppy White House aides in my life."

Then they would all sit around the pool drinking California wine and listening to the tapes, once again thinking back on those wonderful days when it was "us" against "them."

But apparently the reunion will never come off. And once again the Nixon administration people have the media to blame.

IF THE NEWSPAPERS, magazines, television and book publishers hadn't dumped all that money on them, this great group of honorable men might never have ratted on each other.

The tragedy of post-Watergate is that in order to pay their lawyers, all those involved in the break-in and the coverup had to go their own way to make their stories worth the megabucks their agents had gotten for them.

Those of us who thought that Watergate was behind us now realize that the wounds are too deep and the book advances too high for any of the people involved to stick together.

MY WIFE HAS taken it harder than I have.

When the Haldeman excerpts from his book were printed, she said tearfully, "How could he have done it to Nixon?"

I said, "How could Nixon have done it to him?"

Then she said, "How could Colson have done it to Haldeman?"

And I said, "How could Dean have done it to all of them?"

Perhaps it's futile for people who weren't there to speculate why these fine, outstanding men would turn against each other at this stage of the game.

My own theory is that it never would have happened if Checkers had been alive.

Lubbock Man Offers Views On Handgun Control Laws

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In the Feb. 19 Avalanche-Journal there appeared a letter from a Kathryn W. Roberts defending the National Coalition to Ban Handguns as a proper humanitarian activity of its member religious groups. She attributes Lubbock's "daily human carnage" to a lack of gun control laws.

To test her thesis, I invite Roberts to visit New York City and take an evening stroll in Central Park. New York state has had a strict gun control law for half a century. The result is that the criminals have guns, and they use these and other weapons with impunity because they know law-abiding citizens are defenseless.

On the other hand, she could take an evening stroll anywhere in Switzerland unmolested. There, almost ever male citizen of military age has in his home a submachine gun with live ammunition. The Swiss adhere to the barbaric custom of jailing criminals, and this is more effective than gun control laws.

Isn't it strange that these name religious groups who are so avidly trying to "protect" Americans from guns are, through their contributions to the World Council of Churches, actually buying guns and grenades for Marxist terrorists in Southern Africa?

I encourage all readers of The A-J whose religious contributions are being used to finance such insanity to protest verbally and demonstratively by stopping such financing at the source.

Reader Urges Carter To Act Now 'To Save America'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

President Carter must unite all Americans for the benefit of our country. We must fight inflation as we would an enemy invading our shores.

The people must add their talents, their courage and their will to work for a more prosperous America. We must keep America strong to fight injustices to all people.

An America ever vigilant to protect our blessed freedoms. We need everyone's unselfish help to build our economy: not to detract from it for their personal comforts. We must love our America.

You must work fast, Mr. President, otherwise, God Forbid, we may lose our beloved America!

Denver City Woman Sees Cause For Nation's Plight

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

While the Common Market Countries and Japan are enjoying a profitable and unrestricted trade with the oil-producing nations of the Middle East, who are spending vast sums of money to improve their standard of living, we of the United States must sit by and watch our dollar decline on the world market, our balance of trade deficits widen, our farm products sell at less than cost-of-production prices and the worst depression in history looms on the horizon.

This situation has been brought about by the Arab-haters who control our government and the destiny of our nation.

She Thanks All Who Aided In Extended Rehab Program

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

This letter is to thank your paper for the recent coverage of the continuing efforts in Lubbock to establish much needed opportunities for the severely handicapped to hold jobs and live independently.

Your articles were most kind in ceding to me primary credit and responsibility for organizing this work through the Lubbock Area Extended Rehabilitation Services (LAERS).

However, many persons and organizations have been involved in the planning and execution of this work and should be recognized for their contribution.

Tony Maddox of the Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center, F. B. Sexton of the Lubbock State School, Rex Davidson of Goodwill Industries, Dr. Jerry Parham of the Research and Training Center for the Mentally Retarded at Texas Tech University, Dr. Cecil Green of the Lubbock Independent School District, A. O. Robertson of the Southwest Lighthouse for the Blind, and D. C. Fair of the Lubbock Housing Authority have all given their expertise to this undertaking.

Also, the United Way, the Commission for the Blind and the Department of Public Welfare have given us their support as ex-officio members of the LAERS Board, as have state officers from the Texas Commission for the Blind, Texas Mental Health and Mental Rehabilitation Commission has been most helpful through Charles Schnabel, its Director of Extended Services and Dick Lupia, who serves as the LAERS Counselor.

The members of the boards of the local member agencies and the members of the LAERS board have, for almost a year, donated their time to work through the myriad of problems to make extended services possible for the Lubbock area severely handicapped.

It is only right that these concerned citizens be thanked and recognized for their important role in the formation, organization and planning of the LAERS program.

Amarillo Man Hopes Egg Won't Sidetrack Issue

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

As you have reported recently, the agricultural strikers are making 'talked about' news here in Amarillo and Congress, too.

But hopefully the egg that is making national news won't sidetrack us from considering the facts and their importance to our national welfare and the Texas economic situation.

One of those facts is that our farmers produce a dependable supply of agriculture products, making Texas third in the U.S. in total export sales.

The importance of this fact concerns our national balance of payments problem and our very viable Texas economy. Let's not all end up with egg on our faces by taking hasty actions or making emotionally charged decisions.

I was there when Sec. Bergland was hit by that egg and while I did not actually see the unfortunate incident, I would bet some farmer's son thought it was a good joke.

Reader Says It's Time Nation Realized Dangers

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I would just like to thank you for the editorial views of your paper.

I look forward to reading each morning as they 98 per cent represent my views about our country.

We will not be a free society very long if red-blooded Americans do not stand up and be counted. To vote for giving our canal away is a vote for a Communist takeover in this country.

I believe we have enough serious thinking papers and Americans in this country to educate the American people as to how serious problem confronts us and write their Congressmen and tell them to vote no to the canal treaty.

Hits And Myths...

THE VIENNA police's arrest of Gerhard Berger, 36, involves a 1970 United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) treaty. The treaty concerns the control of the international traffic in cultural artifacts.

And the respected Art Dealers Association—along with the whole art world—is likewise involved.

The police claim millionaire partygiver Berger was enmeshed with art thieves. They found in his home a Tintoretto and other paintings stolen from the Rector's Palace, Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia.

It was worth a minimum of $5 million. Berger's yacht was docked at Dubrovnik at the same time.

The police also raided the home of a Viennese in the Tyrol who was a close friend of Berger. They unearthed precious Byzantine icons stolen in 1973 from Vienna's great St. Michael's Church.

THE MYSTERY deepened for Berger owned a 300-employe engineering firm, an Austrian air taxi company, a hotel in the Bahamas and other enterprises, flew an executive jet, sailed on his lush yacht, skied in the Tyrol, lived in an opulent residence in Grinzing, a Vienna hillside suburb, and drove a Rolls Royce.

The Tintoretto the police alleged Berger stole was signed. But this is not always the case. Even in the case of such great masters as Tintoretto, the art world is accustomed to no signature or a signature that is false.

Immortal Michaelangelo was only in his 20s when he began the "Pieta"—regarded today as his masterpiece—and it was the only work he ever signed.

In 1972 American art collector Norman Simon paid $3 million for the unsigned (but authentic) Raphael "Madonna" for his Los Angeles Museum. Raphael copied Perugino, his teacher.

SUPERB 16TH century Andrea del Sarto, in turn, copied Raphael. He did so anonymously. Del Sarto's pupils did the same.

Simon exhibited the Raphael "Madonna" in Los Angeles and around our country, but it was the second time he had difficulty. In 1973 Simon paid $1 million to buy the famous Indian Nataraja bronze idol.

The issue involved lawsuits in Los Angeles, New York and London and an intense search for the idol's antecedents by Scotland Yard, the U.S. Customs Bureau, etc.

Rembrandt had many remarkable pupils. They copied him. Painter and diplomat Sir Peter Paul Rubens employed many craftsmen. He used mass-production methods. He operated a picture factory. But Rubens insisted that all the pictures were his own. He signed them.

Francisco de Goya was a police informer. Often a fugitive, his life was too endangered to sign his true name or any name at all.

Art experts usually treat Vincent Van Gogh as two separate personalities; one before his breakdown and stay at St. Remy and the other after. But the art world is constantly plagued by Van Gogh's imitators in both periods.

IMMORTAL TITIAN copied Giorgione, his teacher. But Titian died at 90 and never stopped painting. Giorgione died at 33 and only 10 paintings are incontestably attributed to him. Today a Giorgione is worth more than a Titian.

However, the worst perplexity the art world faces is that of magnificent artists who are of themselves an utter mystery.

Take the case of an arist identified only as Master P.M. He certainly flourished in the late 1400s in Cologne, Germany. That is all that is known of Master P.M.

Yet a dealer in London paid $89,000 for merely a print of Master P.M.'s "The Woman's Bath." It was only one of five known to exist.

Moreover, the art world is full of absolutely non-existent myths.

THE LONG LIST includes Cleopatra's ruby ring; the Kohinoor diamond's bigger and better partner; the Holy Grail; Michaelangelo's "Goliath" to match his "David";

Leonardo's jewel casket of secrets; Robin Hood's diary; Sir Francis Drake's two volumes of poetry; Friar Bacon's perpetual clock; King Arthur's sword "Excalibur"; Shakespeare's last play, "King Penda";

Prince John's necklace; Russian Czar Alexander's secret will; the "Judas Pair" of ancient flintlock dueling pistols; Rembrandt's French landscapes; Chippendale's design books and other non-existent objects.

Nevertheless, art dealers still search all continents for them.

...Pass It On

IF YOU QUESTION the financial plight of the farmers, sir, consider the fact that the price of farm land nationwide has dropped slightly in recent months for the first time in 17 years. To be specific, it was down 1.2 percent in the last quarter. What other real estate had decreased in value?

"EVERYONE NEEDS something we offer," according to Dr. Joe Williford, director of the Texas Tech Programs for Older Texans (TPOT).

Founded in 1976 under a grant from Title VII of the Older Americans Act, TPOT is a multi-faceted program serving Lubbock county residents over the age of 60 years.

Williford estimated there are 19,000 persons over 60 in Lubbock county and about 17,500 of those live within our city limits.

"TPOT is aimed at elderly people who can still leave their homes. We try to find the isolated person and get them back into society and involved with life again," said Keith Cochran, director of supportive services for the program.

Under the requirements of their funding, TPOT serves a noon meal, and thus provides 1/3 of the recommended daily nutritional requirements each day.

Williford said TPOT also provides support services in seven areas, in addition to the daily meal.

Transportation is a service most elderly persons need on a regular basis. Transportation is supplied not only for special events and field trips regularly sponsored by TPOT, but also to a doctor's office, government offices, for shopping, as well as other places to which the elderly may need rides.

AN ESCORT SERVICE is also available to accompany those elderly persons who request help.

A health and welfare counseling service provides programs aimed at familiarizing the elderly with special health services as well as other programs that are available in Lubbock county.

Shopping assistance to key Lubbock shopping centers, where participants are often given special senior citizen discounts under group rates, are also arranged through TPOT.

The program also offers many recreational activities for its participants including arts and crafts, fitness programs, field trips, dominoes, cards, and other activities.

The information and referral service is one of the more important functions of TPOT, according to Williford.

"Because we are a diverse agency the odds are good if we can't answer a question, we can refer the person to someone who can," he said.

Williford said TPOT staff members will follow up on requests for information to be sure the participants received satisfaction. "If the person didn't receive satisfaction then we go with them and offer any assistance necessary," he said.

TPOT programs and meals are offered in seven centers located in sections of the city to reach the greatest number of the program's target group, said Williford.

MUCH OF THE WORK done at TPOT is provided by volunteers. These volunteers come from classes at Tech, various civic and social groups both on and off the campus, and by individuals.

Williford sees continued growth for TPOT in the future. "Already we are serving the optimum number of meals we are funded for, (240 a day)" he noted. When the program started two years ago, only 40 meals per day were served during the first month.

The fact that the program has reached the maximum number of meals it can serve per day, raises the question of expansion of the program.

Williford said TPOT officials can project a problem for the future. "We traditionally have an increase in the number of people to whom we serve meals and that could result in a problem this spring," said Williford.

He also said that Title VII is now under review in the federal legislature. The programs current federal funding expires in September of this year.

"This act is really the 'flower child 'of congress, so I really don't believe there will be a cut in funds available, but the community needs to be made aware of the problems the elderly face and accept some of the responsibility," he said.

WILLIFORD NAMED Abilene as a city that has taken financial and moral responsibility for its elderly citizens. "The elderly are still a part of the community, a growing part of it, and I feel the younger citizens owe the elderly their support and help," he said.

"These people worked all their lives and paid into the system and now they are on a fixed income. Inflation has eaten into their income to the point that they now must accept a different standard of living."

Williford emphasized that TPOT is for all residents of Lubbock County who are 60 years old, or older, as well as for their spouses.

For more information anyone may go to any of the seven centers or call the TPOT office at 742-3924.

'Dennis' Comic Book Series Being Used To Spur Children's Interest In Bible

WACO (Special)—Since Dennis, the Menace "got religion," more than 500,000 Bible comic books have been sold, according to publisher, Word Books at Waco.

'Dennis and Jesus' is one of a series of six books, created by Hank Ketcham and Fred Toole, in which Dennis meets various Bible characters and learns their stories from his parents, friends, and even "good ole Mr. Wilson.

Pat Sites, staff writer of The Texas Methodist, proposed the question "Can Dennis Teach Bible?"

"Not alone," said Dr. Howard Grimes of Perkins School of Theology at SMU, Dallas.

"Dennis and the Bible Kids," comic book series on the Bible, isn't a bad way at all to spur United Methodist children's interest in Bible heroes and heroines but it should be just that: a spur, and never the whole thrust," Dr. Grimes said.

When Dennis Mitchell's pal "Joey" identifies with that earlier "Joseph"—or when Dennis himself looks at his own slingshot and hears that, in Bible times, a similiar instrument, did quite a job on Goliath—youthful readers also can identify better with Bible characters, Dr. Grimes pointed out.

Comic books can and should be used constructively in the church—like other media children are accustomed to learning from. And this particular series is "on the whole well done," Dr. Grimes maintains, with good quality paper and art and "a lot of good insights" as well.

However, the series should not be used as a substitute for regular church school curriculum, he warns. Nor should it simply be made available to children in the classroom without discussion.

It could well be used, he believes, at a learning center with an adult leader. Or, during a unit on Moses, "Dennis And Moses" might be one resource, followed by the question: "Is this true to the Moses story as we read it in the Bible (or in our student books)?"

The "Dennis" series might also be used at home, Dr. Grimes says, and serve as good conversation starters for parents and children.

Theologically, the series follows a fairly conservative line, he says. Educationally, he finds both language and abstract ideas a bit too difficult for children younger than sixth grades. And not everything in the books is in the best of taste: the use of the title "Dennis and the Girls" in the comic book on Bible women, bothers Dr. Grimes. So does, a drawing of David holding the head of Goliath in his hands, which is streaming blood.

On the other hand, the series depiction of a pastor who relates well to children and is not stereotyped pleases him.

All told, he said: "Dennis and the Bible Kids" used intelligently, may have some things to say to our children but let's not invite them into the classroom just to keep the children busy."

Discipline Key In Sports–Life

By DON COCKROFT
Place Kicker, Cleviand Browns

IT WAS OUR MOST important game of the season. My team, the Clevland Browns, was playing the Pittsburgh Steelers on our home field. We had to win to get a chance at the play-offs for the Super Bowl.

We started the game like a house afire, running up a 20-3 lead. But then the Steelers came roaring back and with just minutes to play we were trailing, 24-23.

DON COCKROFT

Suddenly I could sense it was all coming down to me—and a try for a field goal. I was having a good season kicking, but knew I needed a big pressure kick to establish myself in the NFL (National Football League)

With two minutes and five seconds left in the game, I ran out on the field. Municipal Stadium, jammed with 83,000 fans, hummed with anticipation. Our quarterback, Mike Phipps, would be holding the ball and my attempt would be from the 27-yard-line. Since I hadn't missed from under 40 yards all season, I was fairly confident.

As I was lining up the kick, three things a place kicker must always were going through my mind. First, he must relax. Next, he must step straight and make a solid plant with his foot. Finally, and most important, when his foot makes contact, a kicker must keep his head down, watching the ball. To look up and see how you've done is a great temptation and it almost always throws the ball off course.

TAKING A DEEP BREATH, I positioned myself behind the ball. After two quick steps I lifted my foot. Then, in the anxiety of the situation—just as my shoe hit the pigskin—I couldn't resist an urge to glance up and see where the ball was going. I took just a little peek, but enough to do the harm—the ball missed the crossbar by a fraction of an inch.

Sitting on the bench, I felt like quitting football. Just then a teammate yelled over to me. "Hey, Don, get your head up. You're going to get another shot at it."

As the minutes and seconds ticked away, I saw that we did indeed have the ball once more. And with 13 seconds remaining in the game I was again called out on the field to kick, again from the 27-yard-line. "Keep your head down, you idiot," I reminded myself.

Calming down, I lined up the ball, came forward and put everything I had into it. I didn't look up unitl I heard the crowd yell. Then I saw the scoreboard; we had won, 26-24.

WHEN I THINK BACK to that game I can see I missed that first field-goal attempt all because of one thing: I had ignored a basic rule in place kicking —discipline. The word has a harsh, demanding sound to it, for often we must discipline ourselves to do the difficult or the unpleasant in order to obtain future benefits.

For a long time I thought one needed discipline only in physical areas of life.

But discipline, I've discovered, also plays a very important role in a person's spiritual life. Souls as well as bodies need constant exercise and strengthening —on a regular basis. I found this out two years ago.

My wife Dianna and I had dedicated our lives to the Lord back in 1972. But with my erratic schedule in professional football, it was difficult for us to have the kind of active Christain home life we wanted and needed. We both felt the need of more time with the Lord, especially since our two young daughters, Michelle and Melinda, were at an age where they were ready for more family spiritual sharing.

Then one day I said to Dianna, "Let's try a devotional time, but how on earth will we ever fit it in?"

"Breakfast is about the only time that we're all together," she replied. "Let's try it tomorrow morning."

We tried it. We learned immediately that a devotional isn't something you can just plunge into without some preparation.

WE HAVE FOUND the devotionals have become easier, more enjoyable and more rewarding. A new closeness to the Lord that was so real you could see it in our daily lives developed in our family.

Through those daily devotionals, I have learned that the word discipline appears only once in the King James version of the Bible. It is in the Book of Job, where Job is told that those who open their ears to the discipline of the Lord "shall spend their days in prosperity, and their years in pleasure." (Job 36:10-11)

I have found this to be true on the football field and, much more important, with my family during our time of devotion.

Class Has Phenomenal Growth

Lubbock Bible Class had its beginning in the Broadway Church of Christ Sunday School program.

This unique class started with a group of 25 to 30 persons as an outreach program to reach persons not attending a Bible class.

The Lubbock Bible Class met for the first time, in January of 1973, in the Continental Cinema Theater near the Broadway Church of Christ on Broadway. The class now meets in in the Rix Chapel, located at 1901 Broadway. The class convenes each Sunday at the same time Bible classes are beginning at Broadway Church of Christ.

Each lesson of the adult class meeting in the Rix Chapel is broadcast live from the chapel beginning at 9:30 a.m. on Radio Station KEND, 1590 on the dial. Each program is taped. By using the radio media to air the class, the listening audience is expanded to those who are shut-in, traveling, hospitalized, or unable to attend for any reason.

Messages are presented each Sunday by Joe R. Barnett, Broadway Church of Christ minister, who is class teacher. Ralph Bumpass is co-teacher. The Lubbock Bible Class Singers, composed of Homer Martin, Wade Martin, Russell Young and Mrs. Carisse Berryhill, minister in song.

In its five years of existence, the class has grown by leaps and bounds. It has met 269 consecutive Sundays with only one exception. On two occasions, there have been more than 400 persons in the class, and several times, there have been more than 200 persons present. There have been 3,500 different persons visiting the class.

Growth is attributed to enthusiastic class members, a spokesman said. Each week, class members contact prospects and members by mail, telephone, and personal visits. Persons attending the class are greeted warmly by outgoing, friendly Christians, according to a class spokesman.

Growth also has been attributed to the open-Bible concept. The Bible is the only textbook. Bibles are distributed to all who attend, and are mailed to radio listeners who request them.

The class has been described as radiating a warmth and friendliness that make attendants feel welcome. Every age group and persons from all walks of life are invited to join the fellowship of "working Christians."

The co-teacher, Ralph Bumpass, said: "Regardless of who you are or where you live or your church membership, there is a place for you in the Lubbock Bible Class. Visitors are welcome to Rix Chapel, 1901 Broadway, at 9:15 a.m. each Sunday."

Evangelist To Hold Services

Jesus The Healer Crusades with evangelist Ed Dufresne will hold a "miracle service" at 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday nights at The Church of The Good Shepherd at 1122 45th St.

There will be no admission charge and the public is invited.

Kathy Palmer will be ministering in music.

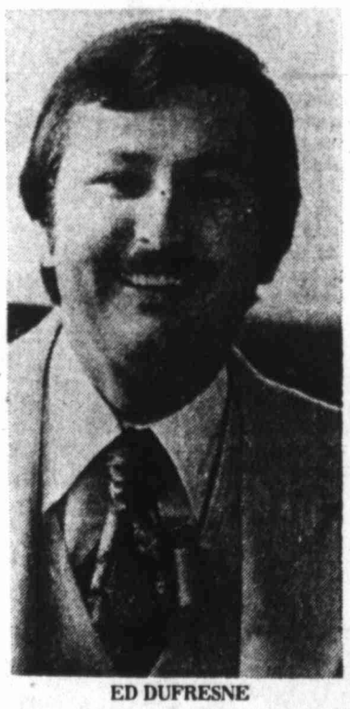

A church spokesman said "the Crusades do not spotlight a man, but 'Jesus' is the healer."

Dufresne announced he is not a "faith healter" but rather "a vessel God used to get his healing power to people."

The evangelist is pastor of Palos Verdes Faith Center in California. The church has more than 300 members.

Dufresne is now on radio with a program "Jesus The Healter Broadcast."

The evangelist is a native of Southern California and said before he received a call into the ministry, he operated his own building maintenance business.

'Adopt-A-Bird' Program Aids Wildlife Work

EDGARTOWN, Mass (UPI)—For just $10 you can become a foster parent to a bird.

The Felix Neck wildlife sanctuary has started an "adopt-a-bird" program to help pay its $20 daily feed bill.

A spokesman for the privately-run, 250-acre sanctuary on the resort island of Martha's Vineyard said that more than a dozen species and an estimated 600 birds flock there in wintertime, and they've been eating more and more every year.

For $10, she said conservationists now can become forster parents to the wild bird of their choice—although chances are slim they'll ever meet.

"It started as a Christmas idea, and we're expanding it year-round," the spokeswoman said. About 350 "adoptive parents" have been selected so far, she said.

She said foster parents can rest easy, knowing their bird is fattening up on a variety of seeds and food for fowl.

Although they won't be able to meet in person, parents will receive a bird drawing and visiting privileges for one year, the spokeswoman said.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

A FRIEND WHO WOULD often sound off at weekly luncheons of the Rotary Club on "the low quality of American youth of today," and had no use for them at all, maintained that rough treatment was the only way to handle these "young jerks." "Better try to love them, Fred," I said, "then you'll understand them. They've got something on their minds." "What minds?" he growled in contempt.

It so happened that shortly thereafter the son of a mutual friend from out West was arrested in New York for stealing a car. The judge asked me if I wanted the boy paroled to me, as his father had requested. "No, Judge; please parole him to Dave," I suggested. It was done; and Dave had the boy on his hands and the kid was a real problem, and no fooling. But Dave stuck with him, and after a while reported, "You wouldn't believe it, but I like that kid, wild as he is. We'll make something of him yet." And was Dave proud on that day four years later when he was present at the boy's ordination into the ministry.

"And," said the young fellow, "if it hadn't been for the love and faith Dave gave me when I was making a complete fool of myself, I would have gone down the drain. That man's love saved me. And do I love him."

THE FIRST PESON one must learn to love is himself. If you do not love yourself, that is, have respect for your own self, you will not really be able to love anyone else. The Bible statement, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," actually means, "Have the same regard for the other fellow that you have for yourself." Then he will grow to like you, too.

Of course there is an abnormal self-love called narcissism, in which the individual becomes enamored of himself and totally concerned with himself. This is a personality sickness, resulting in alienation from the community of men, and is a far cry from that wholesome esteem for your own self which leads to a similar regard for all other people.

We have often prescribed more emphasis on outgoing attitudes for those uptight, tense, unhappy people who are trying futility to make sense of life. But the use of the word "love" causes problems, for the tendency is to equate it with some perfumed, sophisticated Hollywoodized concept. People romanticize the word love, when actually it means simply to treat people with common decency, with the respect due to every man as a brother.

GO OUT AND GET interested in the human problems that are everywhere around us. Help to imporve the human lot, and you will find that this servicing type of love is perhaps the healthiest of all attitudes. It puts one into the mainstream of the human race, and as you participate and get involved and learn to know people and they you, life will become really good.

Love is never a soft, genial attitude; indeed, when you really love the poor and underprivileged you will get out and fight for better conditions for all men, and the fight is often against prejudice and entrenched greed, and it is no easy struggle to overcome it. Love is tough, and it never gives up as long as anyone is the victim of injustice and mistreatment.

This type of love was illustrated by the experience of Abraham Lincoln when he saw a slave girl being sold on the block like a horse or cow. She was being sold away from her family, and he saw the fright and terror in her eyes. "This must stop," he said; and he fought a terrible four-year war to stop slavery because of his love of mankind. Injustice today must also go, and if we love enough to do something constructive about such problems, we will receive love even as we love. Loving and being loved are opposite sides of the same coin.

Restructuring Of Campus Ministry Eyed

A task force for the Texas Tech University chaplaincy has been considering restructuring the diocesan ministry on the Lubbock campus.

According to an article by Evelyn Anderson, comounicant, in the "The Adventure," monthly publication of the Northwest Texas Diocese of the Episcopal Church, the task force began its work for the Commission of Ministry and Mission after the Rev. Charles Pedersen announced plans to move from his position as Texas Tech chaplain to become rector a parish in Newton, Kan.

The chaplaincy was discussed at the first 1978 meeting of the diocesan commission in January.

New members welcomed to the commission include: the Rev. George Carlile of Amarillo; Carolee Patterson of Sweetwater; and Howard Mercer of Lubbock.

The commission will sponsor a laymen's conference at the Conference Center in Amariplo, May 5-7 this year.

Construction Underway On Addition To Center

Despite bad weather and parish staff commitments to activities outside the parish, the new Lubbock parish of Saint John Neumann (formerly St.Elizabeth's Catholic Church) is progressing with construction toward the dedication of new facilities.

The first phase of construction—a Parish Center addition to St. Elizabeth's School—is underway.

The Rev. Joe James, pastor of St. John's, and Leroy Behnke, deacon candidate, went to Houston for the National Audio-Visuals Association convention, and bids were opened for the selection of a contractor for the first phase of construction.

Recently, a ceremonial groundbreaking was held on the site of the Parish Center addition at St. Elizabeth's Catholic School site, 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue. Site of St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, which became St. John's, is 2305 Main St.

At the groundbreaking, Liturgy was celebrated, followed by turning of the first shovel of earth. Despite the cold and snow, dozens of persons took turns at scraping the frozen earth with the spade, marking the beginning of the young parish.

Tony Reis, head of the Building Committee, symbolized the vital role he has played in the development of plans for the new structures. Taking a pick axe, he broke the hard ground into a texture that could be managed by persons handling the shovel. He indicated "months of planning and effort have begun to bear fruit."

The actual groundbreaking was January 25. Construction support equipment was moved into place, fences were erected, and machines fired up. The sidewalk was torn up and stakes were driven into place.

The new parish of St. John Neumann had started roots into its home site.

Family Night Service Offers OMS International Speakers

Three speakers representing OMS International will be guests at Lubbock's Oakwood United Methodist Church's Family Night Service at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The speakers will be Dr. Charles W. Spicer Jr., former life insurance executive, whose travels created his exposure to missionary work which resulted in a changed vocation to world mission work; his wife, Phyllis, a mother, homemaker, and now secretary; and Dr. Edwin W. Kilbourne, a third generation missionary.

OMS International (formerly known as The Oriental Missionary Society) is an evangelical, non-denominational faith mission, founded in 1901 for the purpose of reaching around the world with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Spicer is a graduute of John Hopkins University. He now is doing special assignments for OMS and travels extensively. It was during his travels as insurance executive that he became exposed to mission work and changed his vocation.

Mrs. Spicer has actively participated in civic affairs as well as theatre, art and music. She attended the Peabody Conservatory of Music. She was an active secretary and still does secretarial work for her husband, who also is treasurer of OMS. They have a daughter, who is a graduate of Asbury College in Wilmore, Ky,

Born in Japan, Dr.Kilbourne has spent most of his life in the Far East. Twenty-six years have been spent in overseas missionary service.

POPULAR CULTURE
COURSES BY NEWSPAPER

(Editor's Note: This is the seventh of 15 articles exploring "Popular Culture: Mirror of American Life." Here Nat Hentoff of "The New Yorker" Magazine and "The Village Voice" begins a two-part analysis of popular music with a discussion of how it reflects our changing dreams. This series was written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.)

By NAT HENTOFF

WHEN A MEMBER of the Chinese delegation to the United Nations asked one American friend not long ago if all American popular music sounded the same — as he supposed from listening to the radio — the friend arranged for the Chinese official to hear an evening of jazz.

He listened with great absorption and then said, "I believe I understand. This is American folk music. It has your own kind of spirit. Are there other original American musical sounds and forms?"

Many, he was told, and in a wide variety of popular as well as folk music. The man from the Chinese delegation has since been looking into this unexpected news about America.

Among the performers I have suggested he hear to broaden his sense of our diversity is James Talley.

Not a jazzman, but rather a 33-year-old, Oklahoma-born, popular singer-composer who is a favorite of Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter and millions more Americans.

Talley's music — a blend of country and blues from the South and Southwest — celebrates working people, from truckers to "black lung" miners, telling of the plain, everyday valor that enables them to survive. Just as jazz began by telling of everyday black valor. And like black music, James Talley's has deep American roots.

HE COMES FROM a long tradition in American popular music — going back to Woody Guthrie and Jimmie Rodgers ("The Singing Brakeman"), and beyond them, to the musicmakers of the American frontier who sang of independence and of the hard work, with some whiskey on the side, that might make their dreams take palpable shape.

Dreams power all forms and idioms of popular music. Different dreams nourished by people of profoundly different backgrounds. In what came to be called country and western music, the early dream was of unending spaciousness, always somewhere unspoiled to travel.

And Americans now, so many of them still on the move or at least fantasizing a move to a last big strike, are still attracted to traveling music and the dauntless loners who create it. Kris Kristofferson, for instance, and Bob Dylan, Johnny Cash, Carlie Rich.

These present-day songsters are seen as perhaps the last of the frontiersmen, needing no college degrees or professional licenses to reap large rewards as they roam the land, riding their guitars.

THE COUNTRY WESTERN DREAM—Johnny and June Carter Cash, performing at Mississippi Memorial Stadium in June, 1975, symbolize the dream of the self-made person and open spaces.

In an age of corporate envelopment, they keep alive the dream of the self-made American whose success comes not from "selling out" but just from being himself.

AND THERE ARE OTHER kinds of dreams. Black music, for instance, was eventually to color all popular sounds, even white country. In the "cry" of Charlie Rich's voice are echoes of the black work and religious songs he heard as a white boy in a small Arkansas farming town. But the foundations of black music are obviously built on centuries-long experiences largely unknown to other Americans. So viscerally unknown still that the televising of Alex Haley's "Roots" was a shock to millions of his fellow white citizens.

Field hollers were used to send messages; religious songs both shared the spirit and, in code, prophesied freedom. And the blues, as novelist Ralph Ellison has pointed out, were "one of the techniques through which Negroes have survived and kept their courage."

The blues were not only about hard, shattering times but were also ironic, defiant, proud. There was triumph in the blues, with heroes who had gone so far down they had nowhere to go but up. And up they came.

IT IS NO WOMDER that the blues have never lost their strength, having been tested so much. And so the textures of the blues continue to pervade the "soul" music that now reaches huge numbers of white as well as black listeners.

More showy than classic blues, rhythmically driving, and mixed with gospel, "soul music" distills the black urban experience while also projecting young dreams of love and power. From Aretha Franklin to Stevie Wonder, both soul "superstars," black music still propels a directness of emotional force that no other American musical language has yet equalled.

Although blues recordings and performances were once limited to black communities, except for a few white aficionados, since the 1950s the blues and other black music have "crossed over" to all other popular audiences. Accordingly, the Top 40 lists are not only thoroughly integrated but also contain records by white singers and musicians who are heavily influenced by black sounds.

IN FACT, THERE IS not a single white rock band unaffected by the blues.

Rock music began in the early 1950s as a white version of what was then called black "rhythm and blues." As white and black strains merged more completely than ever before in American popular music, ecumenicism became the rule.

In the 1960s, rock — mirroring the "counterculture's" impatience with restrictions and categories — fused country cadences, jazz, blues, and various styles of pop music, from ballads to simple "good time" songs. Significantly, the most widely inluential figure in the history of American rock, Elvis Presley, was himself stylistically an amalgam of what used to be heard as opposites — white country music and what he called "the real lowdown" black Mississippi blues singers.

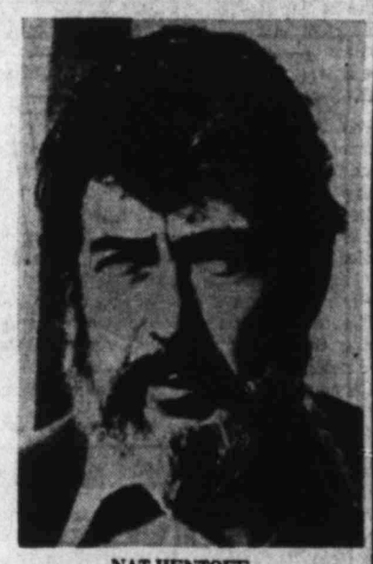

One of the key reasons so many of the young have been drawn to rock has been its seemingly egalitarian nature. That is, in previous generations, it was generally felt that the making of popular music was limited to such highly skilled and sophisticated specialists as George Gershwin and Cole Porter. Even the singers, from Bing Crosby to Frank Sinatra, with their difficult big-band experience and coolly urbane manner, appeared to belong to a distant aristocracy.

ROCK, ON THE OTHER HAND, has given status to thousands of singers and instrumentalists who look and act very much like their fans; who write their own songs; and who, in many cases, have skills not too far removed from those of a dedicated amateur.

The views expressed in COURSES BY NEWSPAPER are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the funding agency, or the participating newspapers and colleges.

NEXT WEEK: Mr. Hentoff concludes his discussion of popular culture and popular music.

FROM THE BOOKSHELF

From time to time in this column, we take note of new chess publications —books, pamphlets, magazines. Having just co-authored another book myself, what better time to revive this custom?

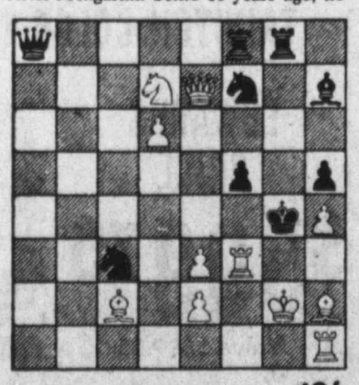

Mine is Checkmate by George Koltanowski and Dr. Milton Finkelstein; Doubleday; 370 pages with 550 diagrams; $9.95 ($10.60, because of tax, in California)

We took three years to research this volume and are quite proud of it. It contains all the patterns of winning mating attacks and, we believe, will be a standard work for starting players. As Harold Dondid, Chess Editor of the Boston Globe, writes: "An excellent book for beginners which develops the various mates."

If an autographed and dedicated copy is desired, send your order to me at 1200 Gough St., Apt. D-3, San Francisco, CA 94109.

Reversed King Pawns: Mengarini's Opening is by Hugh Myers; the Thinker's Press, 1506 Harrison St., Davenport, IA 52803. It's only 43 pages long and costs $3.75, but it's worth it.

I have always had a high opinion of Rr. Ariel Mengarini. Some 30 years ago, he wrote a thesis on chess that was most impressive but never saw the light of day. It should have, for his ideas are brilliant and original. Hugh Myers develops one of these ideas at some length here. If you like original chess thinking, and you have reached Expert class, this booklet is for you.

196

Leonard Barden has turned out Chess Puzzle Book; Faber Paperback; $2.95. Ideal for taking along on plane trips. Of special interest is Chapter 9, "Can You Beat the Masters?"

FORMAT FOR WORLD TITLE MATCH

At the recent meeting in Caracas, Venezuela, FIDE, the world chess federation, came up with the rules and regulations that will govern the July match for the world title between Anatoly Karpov, USSR, and Viktor Korchnoi. Formerly of the USSR, Korchnoi was defeated in 1976.

Though it looks at first glance as if FIDE approved the demands Bobby Fischer made in the last cycle, the terms actually are closer to those created in 1971, before the Fischer-Spassky event.

Draws will not count (so theoretically the match could last indefinitely), and the first player to win six games wins the match. If Karpov loses, he is entitled to a return match within a year or so, to be played under the same rules except for the rematch provision.

Fischer's conditions called for ten victories in an unlimited match, but the match would be drawn (and Fischer remain champion) if the score reached 9-9. Under the Caracas rules, a 5-5 score is meaningless except for the pressure it would put on remaining games, which would become sudden death—barring the limitless number of draws.

FIDE gave in at the time to Fischer's demands for ten wins with no points for draws, but balked at the unlimited games requirement, finally setting the limit at 36. What broke everything up, and ultimately resulted in Fischer surrendering his world title, was the 9-9 provision. Neither FIDE nor Fischer would compromise on this point.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. B-KN1, QxRch; 2.PxQ mate; or 1...P-B5; 2. N-B6 mate; or 1...N-K5; 2. R-B4 mate; or 1...R-N3; 2. BxP mate, etc.

MINE SUPERINTENDENT—William "Doc" Coffey, superintendent of Justus mine near Stearns, Ky., holds up bullets and cartridge cases left by those who fired into the mine buildings, he says. "They've shot up some of our buildings so bad they look like screen doors," he says. A lifelong resident of the area, Coffey says that he and his family have suffered "unbelievable abuse" during the long strike. (AP Laserphoto) is the world's first computer controlled stereo cassette deck. Thanks to Sharp, the age of the computer has finally caught up to the age of music. Sharp has put it all together in the RT-3388, the first stereo cassette deck actually controlled by a micro processor. The micro processor is a "built in brain" with no less than five memory functions and a wealth of other functions that are matched only by the sound reproduction of the tape deck itself.
