Congressmen curious about defense probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecutor in charge of the Pentagon bribery and fraud investigation is meeting with members of Congress who are demanding to know how far — and how high — the investigation is likely to reach.

Henry Hudson, U.S. attorney for northern Virginia, was scheduled to travel to the Capitol this afternoon to brief legislators on the 2-year-old investigation.

The lineup for the meetings was uncertain because so many legislators wanted private meetings that the prosecutor responded by saying he would only talk about the case to Senate and House leaders, according to congressional sources who declined to be named.

One figure implicated through wiretaps in the case, meanwhile, has agreed to cooperate with Hudson's prosecutors and another is on the verge of agreeing to tell what he knows, according to sources familiar with the case.

It could not be determined whether the target who is cooperating is a Pentagon employee, a consultant or a defense contractor.

The case involves allegations that defense contractors and consultants, many of whom are former Pentagon employees, paid bribes to Pentagon officials for inside information about planned weapons. The details could be vital in winning contracts worth billions of dollars.

President Reagan, at a news conference at the end of the economic summit in Toronto, said that he was "very upset" about the reputed scope of the problem, but said "I should think it should be understandable how such things can happen in something as big as our government is."

Reagan also said that he was not surprised that prosecutors did not inform him or other top administration of the probe until it became public last week, saying investigators first needed to determine the scope of the alleged fraud.

Prosecutors said that they made widespread use of wiretaps in the case, recording 4,764 telephone conversations. Of those, 671 were considered incriminating. Some wiretaps were in place for 290 days last year.

Marine sues over family's AIDS battle

BOSTON (AP) — A Marine officer infected with the AIDS virus has sued the federal government for $55 million, alleging that Navy doctors gave his wife an AIDS-tainted blood transfusion that eventually killed her and their son.

Martin Gaffney, 39, filed the negligence lawsuit Tuesday in U.S. District Court, claiming the Navy mishandled his wife's pregnancy by causing their baby to be stillborn, then giving her a transfusion that transmitted the deadly virus to him, his wife and a son born later.

"I've asked for an apology," said Gaffney, a chief warrant officer in the Marine Corps. "Even the Soviet Union has apologized for killing an American soldier. But my own government won't apologize for being responsible for the deaths of my wife and son even though I serve them."

Gaffney said he filed the lawsuit because he wants to provide for his 4-year-old daughter, Maureene. She is the only member of the family to escape infection and will likely become an orphan, Gaffney said.

Fire calls up 60 percent this year, chief reports

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland firefighters have answered more than 600 calls within the city so far in 1988, up 60 percent from the same period last year. More than a third of the alarms this year have been responses to grass fires, Fire Chief James Roberts said Tuesday.

And, in Midland County outside the city limits, firefighters have answered nearly twice the number of alarms this year as they did last year. Ambulance runs by department paramedics are also up sharply, according to fire service statistics.

"It seems to be because there is a lot more activity in the area," Roberts said. "We know there is more building, residential building and road projects. When that happens, there is going to be more industrial accidents, and more ambulance runs. They also raise the number of fire alarms."

Through May, the familiar yellow trucks have answered 632 alarms within the city limits. During the first five months of 1987, firefighters answered only 393 alarms.

In the county, 226 alarms were answered through May this year, compared to 118 during the same period in 1987, according to the figures.

Firefighters are answering about the same number of "non-fire" alarms in the city and county, such as false alarms and smoke scares.

The number of residential fires in the city through the first five months of the year is about the same, though in the county 11 residential fires have been reported this year compared to four last year, according to the statistics.

Seven family members, rescue worker die after car-train crash

CHEROKEE, Kan. (AP) — A train struck a station wagon at a rural railroad crossing that lacked warning signals, killing all seven in the car, and an ambulance worker collapsed and died trying to save one of the victims.

The driver, who was accompanied by her sister and their five children, apparently did not see the train as she crossed the tracks Tuesday afternoon, said Crawford County Sheriff Lynn Fields.

The crossing in southeast Kansas does not have signals, lights or arms, but it is a clear intersection, Fields said. Other car-train collisions have occurred there.

The station wagon was crossing the tracks on a country road two miles northeast of Cherokee when it was struck on the passenger side by a Burlington Northern engine pulling seven cars, Fields said. The car burst into flames.

"What we've found out so far is that the driver didn't even look up," Fields said.

Coy Willis, director of animal control, points out one of the many cracks that are visible at the Midland Animal Shelter. The Orchard Lane building sits on an old landfill.

Shifting, cracking just tip of animal shelter's ills

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

There's more to the Midland Animal Shelter than just Sport and Puff. In fact, it's a never-ending adventure.

Just ask Coy Willis, director of animal control.

He was there the day they had to evacuate the building a year ago when it began to "belch" methane gas.

He's also a shift veteran — building shifts, that is — who has seen more cracks develop in this one-story structure then Humpty Dumpty.

The king's men and his horses won't help the shelter. Neither will thousands of dollars that the city could pump into it to make cosmetic repairs. That's because the building is sinking.

"It's been like this ever since I've been here," Willis said. "It just kind of rocks back and forth."

Willis never has actually felt the building move, but the evidence is obvious. Cracks line the walls, hallways and walkways of the Orchard Lane facility.

Willis said he's not concerned about the place caving in. On the other hand, he's not sure it can be repaired given the shelter's present location — on top of the city's original landfill.

"We've had some problems with it...we really have. It (the fill) created some structural problems... it's not going to fall down around our ears, but it's not 100 percent either," he said.

Those concerns, and the fact that the shelter is in dire need of space, has created a somewhat unsettling situation.

"This is news to me," said Midland City Councilwoman Oralia Corrales. "He (Willis) never mentioned there was a problem.

But the city's Animal Control Advisory Committee is aware of it. And, according to Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor, the city is negotiating with the YMCA on separate maintenance agreement in exchange for its vacated Orchard Lane property.

Corrales acknowledged the shelter's space problem, but added that other city departments face the same daily dilemma.

As for the settling aspect of the landfill, she said that problem existed since the building was first constructed as a nursery school "I'm sure it was sinking when my kids went there."

Willis is sure its sinking too. "I've turned in (to the city) a pictorial report explaining some of the problems we're having."

But he doesn't think repair work is the answer. "The shifting will probably never stop," he said pointing to a vertical crack in the wall.

And, of course, there's always the excitement of waiting around for Mt. Methane to erupt again.

The incident — which occurred a little over a year ago — forced the evacuation of the shelter when gas from the fill began seeping into the shelter.

"It's (the fill) probably building up a good one right now," Willis said.

Teachers prepare to fight state grievance policy

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

While a Texas teachers union is dissatisfied with state officials' lack of timeliness in assessing grievance claims, the Midland school district is working more quickly and may liberalize its grievance procedures.

The Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) is filing suit to change the way a Texas Education Agency (TEA) commissioner handles the complaints once they cross his desk.

Meanwhile, Midland Independent School District trustees next week likely will approve changes allowing teachers to contest their evaluations and file grievances as a group, said Ted Miller, MISD communication director.

TSTA's Midland representative, Alma Marshall, said Tuesday her union is satisfied with the new local procedure and has had few complaints with the district's grievance policy in the past.

But the TSTA statewide has filed suit against TEA Commissioner William Kirby for what it sees as an untimely handling of grievance claims.

"Our attorneys estimate that there are between 600 and 700 cases — dating back to 1985 — backlogged in the TEA appeal process," said TSTA President Charles N. Beard Jr.

"This foot-dragging by the TEA has left the careers of many teachers on hold for years and has denied them access to the court system because appeals must go through the TEA before court action is sought," Beard said.

MISD is "very timely with its handling of grievance complaints," Ms. Marshall said. "I've got to give them that...even though we've lost most of them."

However, changes in district policies are often made after an employee's grievance claim, she said, so the "losses" can also be construed as "victories."

About one-third of the MISD's employment staff belongs to the TSTA, Ms. Marshall said.

The "wide range" of grievances those members file with her organization often center around harassment charges, Ms. Marshall explained.

If a school district employee wants to appeal a local school board's grievance decision to the TEA, Kirby is the man who decides whether the case should continue to court or stand, a union representative explained.

There lies the glitch, Ms. Marshall explained.

"There are a lot of teachers waiting for rulings being held up by Kirby," Ms. Marshall said. "Some are favorable, and he's just sitting on them because he doesn't want to go through with them. Some are precedent setting."

The TEA questions the TSTA's numbers and claims its problem is the result of legislation, said Joey Lozano, assistant director of public information.

TEA figures indicate there are only about 360 appeals pending and about 60 of those are two-years-old, Lozano said.

Also, House Bill 72, a 1985 sweeping state education reform, created more responsibilities for the TEA in the area of handling grievance decisions, Lozano said.

However, the TEA claims budget cuts have pared down the staff handling those complaints to about four people, he continued.

Instead of filing suit, Kirby wants the TSTA to work together with the TEA to pressure the state Legislature for more money for the grievance department, Lozano said.

Despite AIDS advice, postman wears gloves

DALLAS (AP) — Although the federal government recently spent $17 million mailing a brochure explaining that AIDS cannot be contracted through casual contact, a letter carrier uses rubber gloves to deliver mail to Dallas' only residence for people with AIDS.

The "easy-to-understand" brochures were mailed to every home about three weeks ago, but postman Peter Hogan said Tuesday that's not enough assurance for him.

"The government can spend $100 billion on brochures, but if there's a chance that I could get AIDS, I'll wear gloves," Hogan said. "I don't walk out in the open highway in front of cars."

Doctors say gloves are unnecessary.

"It's an incredible incongruity that one governmental agency in clear English lets the public know there is no danger of contracting AIDS from casual contact, then another arm of the federal government encourages its employees to deliver the mail with rubber gloves," said Mark Rogers, director of resource development for the People With AIDS Coalition, which operates the residence called A Place For Us.

Hogan, a father of five, said he dons surgical gloves before he leaves his car to deliver mail every afternoon at the 22-unit home. When he returns to his car, he peels the gloves off.

The postman has been granted a transfer to another route because of the AIDS residence, he told the Dallas Times Herald.

"I delivered the (government's AIDS) brochure and I read it," Hogan said. "What happens if the government is wrong? The government also once told me cigarettes weren't harmful.

"You can call me narrow-minded, you can call me ignorant, but I don't have AIDS."

Hogan says he fears the dermatitis on his hands makes him more vulnerable to contracting the AIDS virus. Medical experts, however, say this condition does not place him at risk.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be fair tonight with the low in the middle 60s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Winds will be southeasterly 5-10 mph.

Thursday is expected to be sunny and hot with the high in the middle 90s. Southeast winds will be from 10-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 95 was 12 degrees cooler than the record high of 107 set for that date in 1934. The overnight low of 65 was five degrees warmer than the record low of 60 degrees set for this date in 1973.

STATE

Typical summer-like weather will continue across all of Texas through Thursday as forecasts call for sunny skies and hot temperatures.

There is a chance for scattered showers and thunderstorms, mostly the afternoon and early evening variety, across Southeast Texas, East Texas and in the Panhandle.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s.

Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 90s across West Texas, ranging from the mid 80s in the mountains of West Texas to near 102 in the Big Bend area, in the 90s across North Texas and in the 90s over all of South Texas except along the coast where afternoon readings will remain in the 80s.

It was mostly clear across the state early today. High pressure was over most of the state while a weak trough of low pressure centered over the Central Plains moved into the Panhandle.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s except in the mountains of Southwest Texas where readings dipped into the 50s. Extremes ranged from 54 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 76 at Laredo.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 67 at Amarillo, 69 at Wichita Falls, 72 at Fort Worth, 73 at Waco, 71 at Austin, 74 at San Antonio, 70 at Houston, 72 at Brownsville, 72 at San Angelo, 67 at both Lubbock and Midland and 69 at El Paso.

NATION

A persistent heat wave baked several spots around the country today while thunderstorms struck the central Plains and South after whipping up destructive winds in Arkansas and Alabama.

Tuesday's high temperatures in the central United States were the hottest in some spots that have been observed during the month of June. Afternoon highs soared to 109 at Huron, S.D., 108 at Sioux City, Iowa, 103 at Des Moines, Iowa, 102 at Fort Wayne, Ind., and 101 at South Bend, Ind.

The high temperature of 110 degrees at Sioux Falls, S.D., equaled its all-time record.

A cold front in the north central United States offered some relief from the heat but not much hope for rain.

A thunderstorm Tuesday night in Arkansas produced high winds at Black Oak that damaged four homes and a trailer home, injuring two people. A thunderstorm in Alabama stirred high winds north of Hamilton, destroying a house, ripping the roofs off three barns and downing many trees and power lines.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms swept through the central Plains and the Great Lakes region early this morning. Strong thunderstorms also hit parts of Wisconsin and Michigan. A cold front brought showers to the northern Pacific coast. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with clear skies in the south central nation.

25-year-old hotline called 'insurance policy for peace'

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — The Washington-to-Moscow hotline has helped cool tensions between the superpowers since its creation 25 years ago this week after the Cuban missile crisis put the United States and Soviet Union on the brink of nuclear war.

"The best quote I've seen about it called it 'an insurance policy for peace,' " Norm Covert, a spokesman for Fort Detrick, said Tuesday. "I think it's the best description of the system and why we have it."

Fort Detrick, an Army installation just north of Washington, was made part of the hotline system in 1978. The communications line was established June 20, 1963.

The president has access to other forms of communication with the Soviet Union, but the hotline provides a direct link between the two heads of state, Covert said. The hotline, often used when either country is planning military action in some part of the world, provides a way for the leaders to communicate without going through diplomatic channels.

The hotline was established less than a year after tensions mounted between the superpowers during the Cuban missile crisis.

After learning the Soviet Union had missiles in Cuba capable of striking U.S. cities, President John F. Kennedy set up a blockade and ordered Navy ships to turn back all vessels delivering Soviet missiles to Cuba. War seemed imminent for about a week, but the Soviets eventually ordered offensive missiles removed and Kennedy lifted the blockade.

Soon after, Jess Gorkin, a senior editor for Parade Magazine, wrote an open letter to Kennedy, suggesting that a communication line be opened, allowing the two leaders to communicate directly, without the chance for misinterpretation, Covert said. Kennedy embraced the idea and the hotline was established in 1963.

"We don't know that he (President Reagan) uses it unless he tells us," Covert said. "I believe he said he used it just before we invaded Grenada."

Unlike fictional descriptions of the hotline, a red telephone is not part of the system. "The only telephone there is the one the technicians use," Covert said.

Fort Detrick is one of two independent satellite stations in the hotline network. The other is in Etam, W.Va., he said, adding that communications technicians check the line with Moscow every hour. The Soviet Union's satellite earth station is just south of Moscow.

DEFENSE

One wiretap picked up a conversation which can be interpreted as suggesting that former Navy Secretary John Lehman Jr. warned his former procurement aide, Melvyn Paisley, about the investigation, sources said.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III refused to say this week if Lehman is among those under scrutiny. Paisley and another former Lehman aide, retired Adm. James A. "Ace" Lyons, have been implicated in search warrants.

The sources said investigators are examining the possible warning as a potential obstruction of justice.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Dan Howard said he didn't know if Lehman had been briefed about the probe, which was started by the Naval Investigative Service in September 1986. The FBI later entered the case.

Howard did say NIS officials gave general briefings to James H. Webb, Lehman's successor as Navy secretary; William Ball, who succeeded Webb; and Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge.

But the three men weren't told the FBI had broadened the scope of the case and Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci wasn't told about the probe until the day before search warrants were served last week, Howard said.

Carlucci has ordered that any Pentagon employees who are subjects in the investigation be reassigned so the purchsing system is "free from question," Howard said.

The directive affects five officials identified last week in search warrants along with a sixth, still-unidentified employee whose office wasn't searched but who is still under investigation, the sources said.

Paisley, whose office was bugged and whose telephone tapped, has emerged as a principal target in the investigation. After he left his top-level Navy job, he opened a consulting business and quickly signed a number of major defense contractors as clients.

In related news Tuesday, the Defense Department made public the financial disclosure forms provided by Paisley — who worked for the Pentagon from 1981 to March 1987 — and his long-term associate, James Gaines, the now-reassigned deputy assistant secretary of the Navy for acquisition management.

Paisley listed assets of between $417,000 and $1.2 million in May 1987, two months after he left government. His liabilities — mortgages on three rental properties — were between $80,000 and $200,000.

Gaines, who had worked for Paisley at Boeing and the Pentagon, listed assets of between $240,000 and $795,000 in a form filed in 1987.

He said he also decided to sue after the Navy responded with an "insulting" settlement offer of less than $1 million to a complaint he had filed internally.

"It's been a very long, frustrating time waiting for the Navy to act," Gaffney said in an interview Tuesday. "I realized I wasted six months of my life waiting for the Navy to act."

Gaffney's wife, Mutsuko, 38, a Japanese national, died in May 1987. The couple's 13-month-old son, John, died in 1986. Gaffney lives with his daughter on a Navy base in South Weymouth, about 15 miles south of Boston.

Though Gaffney's health is still good, he said he has made provisions for his daughter to live with his brother when he dies.

The Gaffneys were married in 1981, three years after meeting in Okinawa, and their first child was due that August.

The lawsuit claims Mrs. Gaffney went into the Navy Regional Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., one Saturday certain she about to give birth and a nurse sent her home.

Two days later, doctors discovered the baby had died. During a subsequent Caesarean section, Mrs. Gaffney was given two units of blood, one of which was contaminated with the AIDS virus, the lawsuit says.

Navy officials traced the two donors, and one tested negative for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, Gaffney said. The other refused to be tested and it was learned he had been discharged from the Navy for homosexual activity, Gaffney said.

Gaffney's claimed Navy officials have lied to him on several occasions and never apologized to him for what has happened to his family.

Navy spokesman Lt. Ken Ross declined to comment on the lawsuit or Gaffney's charges of bad treatment.

Gaffney said his life has worsened since he filed the internal claim against the Navy last year.

"There are so many things I have to put up with every day," Gaffney said. "It's hard to put on that uniform every day. And I'm afraid every time I get my hair cut. I'm afraid that if I'm nicked I'll have to stand up and tell them who I am and what they have to do to protect themselves."

Gaffney must cut his hair regularly under Marine guidelines. He said he used to get his hair cut on base but now goes to different civilian barbershops.

But Gaffney said his Marine colleagues at the base have been supportive and sympathetic.

POST

"He won't come into contact with the virus through handling mail or a door knob," said Ann Freeman, director of the Dallas County health department's AIDS prevention project. "Gloves really aren't necessary."

Both Hogan and Postal Service officials say he has been told to don the rubber gloves.

"Yes, he wears rubber gloves, he's instructed to do so," Catherine Flemming, a supervisor at the Oak Cliff station, said. "We only follow instructions. If they tell us to carry the mail a certain way, then we do it a certain way."

Ms. Flemming declined to say who issued the instructions.

Barbara Buck, a Postal Service spokeswoman at Dallas, said carriers decide for themselves whether to wear gloves, which are available to all workers.

No educational programs about acquired immune deficiency syndrome have been offered to postal workers, Buck said, because "there hasn't been any need."

But the U.S. Postal Service several months ago issued a "hazard alert," suggesting carriers make the AIDS home the last delivery of the day and return to the station to be disinfected with surgical soap.

John Miller, the Postal Service's manager of delivery and retail operations, says gloves and disinfectant are only issued to the postal workers on this route.

FIRE

The increase in the number of alarms is concentrated in the grass and trash fires category, Roberts said. In the city, 225 of the 632 alarms answered through May 31 this year were trash and grass fires. In the county, 151 of 226 alarms answered were in that category, according to statistics.

Last year's heavy rains created additional grass and brush growth, and coupled with strong winds and low humidity created ideal conditions for grass fires, Roberts said.

Grass fires reached a peak in February, with 62 grass and trash fires reported. In March, 59 were reported, according to the statistics.

Despite the increase in calls, Roberts said the department is not overtaxed.

"It has had no adverse overall effect," the chief said. "But the problems we have had are the standard problems, like keeping the minimum number of people here during the summer, which is the peak vacation period. And we are way into our overtime budget."

Already, $90,000 of the $100,000 allocated for overtime this fiscal year has been spent, Roberts said.

The pattern of increased activity is not showing up at the police department. In fact, the number of police calls is down this year.

Police have answered 21,597 calls through May, compared to 22,821 through the first five months of last year, according to department statistics.

"I think that most of our calls will come during the summer months," police Cpl. Jim White said. "I don't think the fluctuation, the drop, is any particular trend.

"We still expect a marked increase through the summer months."

Roberts said the fire and ambulance calls will continue to come in as long as the area is healthy — and growing.

"Business is booming," Roberts said. "People talk about how the area is down and depressed and all that, but not for us.

"I still think we are growing. I don't think we are losing population at all."

Originator of suit fears for safety

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK

TENNESSEE COLONY (AP) — Inmate David Ruiz, whose lawsuit triggered wholesale changes in the Texas prison system, is back in state custody but fears for his safety even though he's kept in isolation.

Ruiz

"It would be kind of difficult because they escort me everywhere I go and with handcuffs behind my back," Ruiz said Tuesday about the possibility of violence against him.

"But the first thing two or three boys (guards) will do is run. And with my hands tied up, I'm just like a sitting duck.

"It may happen. It can happen."

Ruiz, 46, filed a 30-page handwritten suit in 1972 that protested conditions in Texas prisons. Thirteen years and thousands of hours of legal battles later, the state and attorneys for inmates and a federal court agreed on a series of reforms that changed the state's prisons forever at a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars.

Prisons and guards were and continue to be added, crowding is being relieved and court-ordered regulations mandate the way the nation's third-largest prison system is run.

Ruiz, who has spent time in institutions since he was teen-ager, returned to Texas two weeks ago after three years in a federal prison in Indiana where he went because he feared for his life in Texas.

But after an attack there and because he wants to be closer to his family in Austin, he now is in administrative segregation in the new Texas Department of Corrections Michael Unit, where Warden Jack Garner insists he is treated just like any of the 475 inmates kept there in segregation.

"There's 38,000 inmates in TDC," Garner said. "What warden would want him in his (general) population? He can't protect himself and I think he understands it.

Ruiz is kept in isolation because he is a member of the Mexican Mafia, a prison gang, Garner said. Ruiz denies his participation in the gang, blamed for much violence in state prisons.

"Ninety-five percent will deny," the warden said. "That's a part of the constitution of their membership."

"If a prisoner is disliked, they can use that to keep him isolated and you continue in confinement," Ruiz contended in an interview Tuesday.

"They claim a person (who) has dislike toward me or wants to make a name for himself might decide to attack me. I can see their precautions. But why not house me in a unit where there is less possibility of that occurring?"

Prison officials said Ruiz was placed in the Michael Unit because it was the most secure and because it has a large capacity for segregated inmates.

"I could be attacked by anyone," Ruiz said. "They could open the cell. I don't put anything by certain officials."

Ruiz said he also fears attacks from former building tenders — inmates who guarded and once wielded great control over other inmates. The practice was outlawed as a result of his suit.

Ruiz said of the changes he has noticed in Texas prisons, the most surprising was the use of women guards. He also said medical care had improved.

"I don't want any problems," he said. "But if my life is threatened, I will do anything necessary to eliminate that danger. That's human nature."

In 1981, Ruiz was paroled from a 1968 sentence for aggravated robbery. His parole was revoked when he was arrested for aggravated perjury, and in January 1985 he received 25 years for lying at a parole revocation hearing.

In December 1985, Ruiz was convicted of aggravated robbery and sentenced to life for his part in an Austin apartment robbery.

Ruiz believes he will have that conviction overturned on appeal.

His first jail term began after a fourth stint in a state reform school. At age 17, he served eight years for robbery and assault.

"I can't blame anybody for my mistakes," he said. "A person has his own mind or will."

Pentagon allegations first surfaced in '84

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defense contractor told federal agents four years ago that a private consultant routinely provided his company with secret Pentagon documents and "every major corporation gets the same material."

The comments of Walter R. Edgington, then vice president of GTE Government Systems Corp., meshed with remarks by a former Pentagon investigator Tuesday that the Justice Department had "substantive evidence that there was massive fraud" in military weapons purchases three years ago.

Robert L. Segal, a former Drug Enforcement Administration agent who investigated procurement fraud cases at the Pentagon for one year until his resignation in January 1985, said there was "extensive evidence" of wrongdoing even though only a handful of companies were charged.

GTE Government Systems was one of the companies against which criminal charges were brought nearly three years ago after an investigation by the Defense Criminal Investigative Service for which Segal worked.

The widespread Pentagon investigation now under way centers on allegations that defense contractors and consultants bribed Pentagon officials to obtain inside information that would give them a competitive advantage in the multimillion dollar procurement sweepstakes.

Edgington and Bernie Zettl, a former GTE consultant, were indicted on charges of espionage and theft of government property, while Robert R. Carter, a former GTE marketing manager, was charged with participating in the alleged conspiracy.

The company agreed to plead guilty and was fined $500,000. But nearly three years after the indictment, the rest of the case still has not come to trial, and all charges have been dropped except a conspiracy count against Zettl.

Delays have resulted from lengthy legal disputes over the release of classified material.

On Feb. 29, 1984, Edgington was interviewed by two Pentagon investigators, according to a document in the court file. The defense contractor told the agents that when he first started with GTE in 1966, "everyone within the office had unauthorized classified documents."

To get a handle on all of the paper, Edgington said, he got "a good sergeant major and put all the documents in the file room so that they could at least be controlled," according to the report on the interview.

"Every major corporation gets the same material," Edgington told the agents, but he declined to reveal names of other companies with the unauthorized material.

Edgington did say that Zettl provided the documents to a GTE employee who routed them to the proper people inside the company. The GTE vice president said he never asked Zettl how he came upon the material because he wasn't interested.

Edgington defended possession of classified documents as a tool in "major technical planning."

We Help You Do It Right...

Question...How do I choose the right roller cover?

Answer...Generally, smooth surfaces require a short nap roller cover and rough surfaces require a longer nap roller cover. When flat paint is used on interior drywall or plaster, a 3/8" to 1/2" nap should be used. When enamels are used on a smooth surface, a 1/4" nap or mohair roller cover should be used.

Question...What is the most effective way to apply paint with a roller?

Answer...Fill the tray half full with paint and roll the paint roller partially into the paint picking up just a little of the material. Don't overload the paint roller with material. Roll the paint roller back and forth on the decline section of the tray to disperse the paint evenly on the roller. Repeat until the roller is evenly covered with paint. Any excess paint can be rolled off on the decline section of the tray.

Using a light and even pressure at medium speed, begin the application with an upward stroke and make the letter "M" on a section of the wall. (Rolling too fast will throw off a spray. Rolling too slow may cause paint to bubble). Roll back over the section making the letter "W" to fill in. Each section should be about three square feet. Move to a new section repeating the same steps.

Question...How do I choose the right size brush?

Answer...Use the surface to be painted as your guide. The larger the surface the wider the brush. Use a 4" brush for exterior siding, a 3" brush for gutters, trim or for cutting in interior corners, and a 1" to 2 1/2" brush for sash and trim depending on the width of the woodwork.

Rain falls in Midwest; Eastern farmers worried

Associated Press

Rain answered some prayers in the parched Midwest, where neighbors informed on water wasters by the hundreds, but as the nation buckled under record heat Eastern farmers began worrying that drought conditions were heading their way.

More record high temperatures today were expected to burn lingering moisture from drought-choked soil in the nation's farm belt. Temperatures topped the 100-degree mark in 23 states Tuesday, the first day of summer, and set 67 records.

However, "it looks like things will be not quite as hot as they were the last couple days," said Hugh Crowther of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo., who also forecast some scattered showers today but no major rainfall.

The heat and lack of rain also continued to shrink water levels on rivers, stanching traffic on parts of the Mississippi and Ohio as barges ran aground or became snagged in bottlenecks.

"I can't keep the (Mississippi) river open," said Cmdr. Michael Donohoe with the Coast Guard near Memphis, Tenn., where officials expect a towboat traffic jam of up to 1,800 barges. "Mother Nature is going to make that decision for us."

Tuesday, the Army Corps of Engineers managed to free a 26-barge tow that ran aground near Rosedale, Miss., reopening 730 miles of the Mississippi downstream from Memphis to the Gulf of Mexico.

Heavy rain fell Tuesday on part of the drought-ravaged northern Plains, but it was scarcely enough to quench dusty pastures.

Lightning ignited dry timber and grass in northwestern South Dakota, where firefighters were trying to control two fires that burned a total 6,500 acres.

Regis Krebs, a farmer from Beckemeyer, Ill., near St. Louis, discovered the fire risk when a spark from his combine set part of his wheat field ablaze.

"He lost a couple acres of wheat in about 10 minutes," said Fire Chief Vincent Pollman. "Everything is bone dry and it went up quickly."

On the Chicago Board of Trade, drought worries Tuesday drove corn futures prices up to their daily limit for the sixth straight day. Soybean futures also rose sharply while wheat futures retreated.

Commodities analysts said the weather service's latest six-to-10 day forecast for hot, dry weather in the Midwest threatened further damage to corn, oat and soybean crops.

"With the corn crop, each week that goes by without rain means another 10 percent is lost," said Joel Karlin, an analyst with Research Department Inc. in Chicago. Some estimate anywhere from 10 percent to 30 percent of the U.S. corn crop already has been ruined.

Hay was so scarce that a hay hot line was started in Dayton, Ohio, for farmers seeking fodder from as far away as Kansas. For the most part those with livestock face the choice of feeding hay stored for the winter, buying feed at higher prices or selling their herds in a falling market.

"I see tears. I see anger," said Laura Koenig of Stratford, Wis., who runs a program to help farmers deal with stress. "I see very tired men, women giving up and walking away, children saying, 'I don't want to go in the barn.'"

"There's no hay, no prospect of getting any," said O.H. Campbell, 71, of Henderson, Ky.

Many utilities hit record peak loads Tuesday and asked customers to cut back on electricity. Water use restrictions were widespread, prompting many residents of Oakland County, Mich., to inform on neighbors who violate them, officials said.

"The people have begun to realize the severity of this," said Al Beanblossom, assistant manager for the Waterford Township Water and Sewer Department. "That's why I think people are turning in their neighbors."

No retaliation planned against Haiti leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convinced that tough action will hurt Haiti's innocent poor, the Reagan administration will continue a $36 million humanitarian aid program and try diplomacy to nudge the Caribbean nation's new military government toward democracy.

"There is no break in the diplomatic relations; we're not contemplating it," State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Tuesday.

She repeated U.S. expressions of dismay at the overthrow of Haiti's civilian president, Leslie Manigat, on Monday by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy and said the United States hopes for observance of human rights and steps toward restoring civilian rule.

Once again, she denounced the coup as a setback for democracy.

But she and other State Department officials, some of whom spoke on condition of anonymity, made clear that the United States would work with the new military regime.

"I think there are examples of many governments around the world of whom we don't particularly approve, with whom we have relations and have dealings," she said.

"We're talking about the situation as it evolves in Haiti. We're continuing the operation of our embassy there," the spokeswoman said.

She said there are no plans to halt U.S. humanitarian assistance, which is distributed directly to Haitians by non-governmental agencies, including many based in the United States. This fiscal year's plan calls for $30 million for development and relief programs and $6 million in the form of surplus American food.

A U.S. diplomat said, "There was no thought of interrupting this assistance. Who would it hurt if we stopped the aid? The poor people of Haiti, not the leaders."

Economic sanctions also have been ruled out, the diplomat said. Such sanctions would hurt the estimated 40,000 Haitians who have jobs assembling products for American markets. These 40,000 people, in turn, each support an average of five other people, he said.

Haiti has the lowest per capita income in the Western Hemisphere.

Discovery's move step toward flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle Discovery traveled just 1,000 feet in 25 minutes, from one hangar to another. But it was a major step toward the first space shuttle flight since the Challenger disaster 2½ years ago.

Tuesday's move to an assembly building ended 600 days during which Discovery underwent an extensive overhaul of many of its systems in a hangar.

Hundreds of space workers applauded as a tractor towed the gleaming white and black shuttle over the short route. Today, they were to begin joining the 80-ton vehicle with its external fuel tank and two 126-foot solid fuel booster rockets.

"This is like a rebirth," said Discovery flow director John "Tip" Talone. "We're in business again and we're going to stay in business. It's got to be a tremendous boost to the workers here."

The mating of the spaceship with its tank and boosters is scheduled to take nine days. Discovery then will be transported to Launch Pad 39B to be readied for launch.

The latest launch date is September 3, but National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said it is still possible to achieve a late August liftoff.

"A lot of things have to go right to make the end of August; if not, we'll go a few days after that," Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said after Tuesday's move.

Since Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, killing its crew of seven, public attention has focused on the redesign and testing of the faulty solid fuel booster rocket blamed for the accident.

But engineers also have been modifying other shuttle systems, and 210 changes have been made and tested on Discovery since it was moved into the processing hangar on Oct. 30, 1986. Many had been planned before the Challenger explosion but several resulted from studies made after the accident that pinpointed potentially troublesome safety areas.

Major improvements have been made to the three main liquid-fuel engines, the mainframe structure, the brakes and landing gear. A blowout hatch has been installed in the cabin to allow the astronauts to bail out with parachutes in case of trouble while the shuttle is gliding to a landing.

"This is the cleanest orbiter we've ever moved," McCartney said. "Those workers deserve a lot of credit."

U.S. should avoid Khomeini 'clone'

Mark May 15, 1988, in your calendar as a significant date in history. What does it signify?

The Soviet Army began its pullout from Afghanistan. After the death of 15,000 troops and numerous casualties and causing hundreds of thousands of Afghan deaths and dislocations, the Soviets moved to end their 8½-year occupation of Afghanistan.

The pullout also marked the beginning of an offensive by Moslem rebels to reconquer provincial cities on the march to retake Kabul. High in morale but fratricidal, the Islamic factions face an army that is heavily armed but poorly motivated. If the aftermath of the U.S. pullout from South Vietnam is any indication, Kabul can be expected to fall to Moslem rebels.

The date also marks, in the view of some analysts, the beginning of the end of the Cold War.

"The Soviet Union has lost the Cold War," say James Chace and Caleb Carr of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, writing in The Los Angeles Times. "This does not mean the principles of Western democracy have triumphed inside the Soviet Union or, indeed, in much of the Third World. But it does mean the policy of containing the Soviet Union laid down 40 years ago has worked."

Like Chinese-carved ivory globes fitting inside each other, these three events — Soviet defeat, Moslem victory and a beginning to the end of the Cold War — present a model of reality that is neatly comprehensible, but too simplistic.

It is clearly good for the proponents of freedom that the Soviets realized their folly and are retreating from Afghanistan.

But before slapping ourselves on the back and toasting the Afghan freedom fighters, Americans should ask whether the rebels' eventual victory will bring freedom to Afghanistan — or whether extremist fundamentalists among them will impose a Khomeini-style fundamentalist Moslem dictatorship there.

A bloody civil war looms in Afghanistan. Rebels who believe in a fundamentalist theocratic state, based on Ayatollah Khomeini's Iran, are already threatening moderate rebels who believe in democratic principles.

America has given the rebel coalition billions of dollars in arms, food and support. We should now use our influence to back a cease-fire among rebel groups and to support those who believe in democratic principles.

As the Soviet empire contracts, we may be witnessing the rise of a new religious empire, theocratic and expansionist, between the East and West blocs.

Headquartered in Tehran, but spreading its branches throughout the Islamic world, fundamentalist fanaticism portrays itself as an alternative to the consumer materialism of the West and the dialectical materialism of the East. It poses a new ideological conflict between religious fanaticism and democratic pluralism.

The nature of this new threat to freedom and pluralism is not only Islamic, however. As the ideological virus of fascism began in Italy, quickly spread to Germany and even to America, the new ideological virus of fundamentalist fanaticism is spreading around the world.

There are fanatics in all religions, including Christianity and Judaism. Zealotry is increasingly attractive to larger numbers of disenfranchised, lost people in the West and in the Soviet bloc, as well as the Middle East.

To counter the Soviet threat of Marxist revolution, the U.S. government created its policy of containment. That policy, some say, has worked. But, in Afghanistan at least, containment against communism has given rise to a resurgence of religious fanaticism.

Our goal in Afghanistan should not be to support blindly all opponents of the Soviet Union, some of whom are rebels allied with Ayatollah Khomeini. We must support Afghan rebels who embody the democratic principles of freedom, not fanaticism.

We should take notice of the rising threat of religious fundamentalism. We must not demonize it, as we did the "Red Menace" during the McCarthy era. But neither must we hide our heads in the sand, as we did during the rise of fascism in the 1930s.

Don't trade a Soviet puppet for a Khomeini clone.

Reducing hunger

No major newspapers picked up the item. It drew less attention than the Nancy and Raisa spat. But tucked into the 16-page communique released at the conclusion of the Moscow Summit this month was a bit of information that could be of great significance to the world's poor.

According to the communique, "Both leaders reaffirmed their support for the WHO-UNICEF goal of reducing the scale of preventable childhood deaths through the most effective methods of saving children. They urged other countries and the international community to intensify efforts to achieve this goal."

Meanwhile, Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., were working to give flesh to those goals. Their Global Poverty Reduction Act, part of this year's foreign-aid spending legislation, directs the next president to consult with host-country governments, non-governmental organizations and international agencies to establish a plan for targeting U.S. development assistance.

The aim would be to target the assistance to achieve three specific poverty-reduction goals by the year 2000. (A companion bill in the House is sponsored by Reps. John Miller, R-Wash., and Mel Levine, D-Calif.)

The legislation seeks to achieve the following:

— An under-5 per 1,000 children by the next century. UNICEF, the United Nation's Children's Fund, considers the under-5 mortality rate the primary indicator of a less developed country's progress in providing for the health of its children. It also reflects the overall health quality of the country.

— A female literacy rate of 80 percent by the year 2000. The female literacy rate is the percentage of females aged 15 and over who can read and write. Female literacy is acknowledged as among the most important factors for improving the health and survival of women and their children.

— Not more than 20 percent of the population living below absolute poverty by the year 2000. The absolute poverty level is that income level below which a minimum nutritionally adequate diet plus essential non-food requirements are not affordable.

The goals seem unrealistic — until we recall the remarkable results of the World Health Organization and UNICEF in recent years in getting children in developing countries immunized. Both agencies have proven track records in getting low-cost child-protection methods to parents the world over. This country's effort to help, which is scheduled for Senate consideration next week, deserves enthusiastic support.

Soviets easily snoop White House

WASHINGTON — No administration has done more to keep its phone lines from being tapped than Ronald Reagan's. But, at the same time, the White House phones have leaked like a sieve to Soviet electronic intelligence snoops.

Jack Anderson

We recently reported that the Central Intelligence Agency believed the Soviets listened in on nearly every phone call Nancy Reagan has made to her California astrologer since 1981. The first lady normally used unsecured phone lines from the White House or from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

White House officials admitted that Mrs. Reagan used unsecured lines. But they differed on whether it mattered.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater dismissed the importance of the calls by portraying the first lady as a chatterbox who said nothing important. The only thing the Soviets could learn from a Nancy Reagan phone call was "how many pizzas are ordered by the first family," Fitzwater said.

But our confidential sources said that simply because of who she is and what she is likely to say about the president — his schedule, his moods, his plans — the calls are of immense intelligence value to the Soviets.

Since we published the news that Mrs. Reagan's calls probably were intercepted by the Soviets, we have received highly sensitive information indicating that the first lady was not the only unwitting leak to the Soviets. Many others in the White House have secrets they wouldn't dare spill to reporters, but blab to friends and relatives across the country on unsecured phone lines, and the Soviets have the capability of listening in.

"The biggest telephone security problem we have historically faced is the turnover of 2,000 to 3,000 officials within the White House complex and Cabinet agencies with every change of administration," a top White House communications security expert confided to us in exasperation.

"Most of these people know nothing about intelligence technology and the security education is uneven or non-existent," he said. "Depending on where they're from — in this case, California — they get in the habit of calling back home on open lines through the White House switchboard to talk to family, friends, colleagues or mentors about the most sensitive policies we have going. Of course, the Soviets know this, and that's why the White House prefixes are their number one intercept targets."

That communications security expert and others reported overhearing White House officials talking about some of the nation's sensitive secrets over long-distance lines with friends or family.

"It drives me nuts," another White House official told us. "The point is, it's these couple thousand prima donnas who come into the White House and think they own the world, and they're not intelligence professionals. So they talk about whatever they want to over the phones." He contrasted it to military bases, where the lowest-level G.I. is drilled with the rule that no one talks about sensitive topics on an open phone line.

The administration has tried to put a finger in the leaks, but most of the help was too late. Reagan issued a presidential directive aimed at tightening telephone security. The net result is that the administration will buy 500,000 new secure phones for government and civilian offices.

The need became glaringly apparent when the National Security Agency figured out that the Soviets could listen to two-thirds of all long-distance calls made in the United States, because those calls went by satellite rather than cables. The Soviets picked up the satellite signals on fishing trawlers, through a "big ear" intercept station in Cuba, and at offices and homes in Washington, New York, Chicago, San Francisco and elsewhere.

A Central Intelligence Agency expert told us the Soviet interception antennaes could simply be shut down by U.S. authorities. "People always tell me, 'We can't do that.'" The fear is the Soviets would shut down U.S. interception devices and "we won't get all that great stuff," the CIA source said. "Great stuff. I read it every day, and it ain't that great."

SHULTZ STRATEGY — Secretary of State George Shultz is determined to bring the Arabs and Israelis to the peace table. On his last visit to the Middle East, Shultz couldn't budge Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. But Shultz is a patient and plodding man. His associates say he will wear down Shamir until Israel is willing to make concessions.

Shultz's strategy is to convince the Israelis that it is in their own best interest to make concessions to the Palestinians. Israel has hurt itself by continuing to occupy the territories seized in 1967. The occupation is eating away at Israel from the inside and increasing the military danger from the outside.

MINI-EDITORIAL — We were among the early critics of the presidential AIDS commission. Because of the makeup of the commission and the naivete of its chairman, James Watkins, we feared the commission would merely add to the morass of administration paperwork on the subject. We are pleased that the commission did not live up to its billing. Watkins had the self-confidence to admit that he learned a lot, and he had the guts to criticize the way federal officials had responded to the AIDS crisis. Aside from the considerable work of the commission, Watkins' own evolution should serve as an example to others who have prejudged AIDS and its victims.

Today's Highlight in History:

Best way around drought's good rainstorm

As the drought continues through the South and the Midwest, I have been trying to learn the many ways individuals are conserving their water during this crucial time.

Grizzard

I instructed my able staff of researchers to spare no expense in learning water conservation techniques that could be passed on to others.

My staff has returned from the dry spots all over with its report. I have selected the most ingenious, as well as the most practical ways Americans are conserving the precious fluid of life:

■ HARLEY KNOCKWORTH, Cantwhupme, Ala.: "I give up my Saturday night bath. I figure if I can go six other nights a week without a bath, what's one more? Of course my wife and kids run off and left me and so did the cat. But the dog stayed. But I don't miss none of 'em, especially the cat. I never did like to have a pet around that bathed more often than me."

■ POLLY WOLLYDODDLE, Atlanta, Ga: "I am head of the Junior League 'Save the Water Project' and we've all made a pledge to wash our hair in Perrier until the drought is over."

■ MONK HUCKABEE, Merle Haggard, Okla.: "Me and the boys quit drinkin' water with our bourbon. We figure that ought to save enough water every week to drown a good-sized aluminum siding salesman."

■ HOG PHILPOT, Coweta County, Ga.: "Me and my wife, Cordie Mae, decided we'd start gettin' in the tub together to save water.

"Course we both are sort of heavy and when we got into the tub, the doublewide tipped over and it took the fire department three hours to get the trailer back upright.

"It took longer than that to get Cordie Mae back on her feet again. She got knocked on her back when the trailer turned over and had to just roll around there like an upside down turtle, until Purvis Wilhoit came over with his tow truck."

■ RAUNCH BOTTS, Hogansgoat, S. C.: "I drained my water bed and got 38 gallons of water out of it. I have encouraged those of my neighbors who have water beds to do the same. Everybody said they would except Grover Thistlewaite and his wife — they're a little strange anyway.

"The other night when they came home, Grover was dressed up like a chicken and his wife was wearing a Col. Sanders mask. I think they watch Jimmy Swaggart a lot."

■ JIMMY FLOURNOY, Terre Haute, Ind.: "I poured the water out of my goldfish bowl and washed my face in it in order to conserve water. I put Arnold, my goldfish, in a shoebox. He's been lying very still lately."

■ GOFER KILGORE, Dirt Road, Miss.: "Me and Hazel — that's my wife — been freezing all our water. In case things get really bad, we got a freezer-locker full of the stuff. Want to buy a cube? They ain't but a dollar apiece."

Lord, let it rain.

Listen! You'll hear the windbags of change

LONDON — The British press is knocked out by the "New Russian Revolution," end of the cold war, winds of change — oh, what a lovely peace.

William Safire

Few observers consider the roots of glasnost. Economic realists in the Soviet Union, led by the KGB's Yuri Andropov in the early 80s, recognized communism's failure. They put a new clique in place to overhaul the Soviet machine without losing control of the levers of political power.

Central to the Andropov plan was the mobilization of both the intelligentsia and "masses" against the 18 million party members who had been living off the fat of the land. Enter glasnost — the "freedom" to criticize only those past and present targeted by the new elite — which has seduced so many Western leaders into wanting to press financing and technology on the overhaulers.

I don't want to be the skunk at the garden party. Here are 15 suggestions to Gorbachev for changes that would begin to silence the surly squares who used to be the ruling circles.

1. Shut down the East Bloc support network for terrorism. Bulgaria, East Germany, Hungary and Yugoslavia operate training camps and offer safe haven to Red Guard and P.L.O. terrorists; a word from you could end that.

2. Reconfigure your military forces from offensive to defensive. Soviet generals conduct only offensive war games; NATO has only defensive games. (The feint-toward-Iran maneuver, drawing NATO troops southward, was especially distressing to our war-gamers.) Soviet forces are equipped with long flexible pipe to refuel vehicles rolling forward; take that kind of equipment out of your force structure.

3. Publish a telephone directory. Stop treating the phone book as a military secret, and drop the barriers that make it impossible for your people to dial the outside world. In that connection,

4. Permit internal computer networking. Stop waiting for Western computer help; allow your institutes and academies to hook into each other. Use the analogy of Lenin and electrification, if your less daring comrades object to the loss of central control of information.

5. Stop jamming Radio Free Europe. On the eve of the summit talks, you revoked the visas of two crack R.F.E. Sovietologists, displaying your fear of uneuphoric coverage. Let the broadcasters and their signals into the Soviet Union; if you must jam, jam the innocuous Voice of America.

6. Tear down the Berlin Wall, and order border guards to stop killing people who try to cross the Iron Curtain. As long as you treat your inhabitants as prisoners, no fundamental change in the perception of the Soviet Union as the home of the gulag is possible. And in that connection,

7. Stop encouraging anti-Semitism in the guise of free speech or religious liberty. Organizations like Pamyat and pet church leaders have found it easy to spread anti-Jewish hatred under glasnost. Your record on emigration is not nearly as good as Brezhnev's; drop your new requirement of a family connection abroad and let the refuseniks — all of them — go.

8. Cancel your agreement to rent Fidel Castro's army to prop up a regime in Angola; instead, you have increased those 40,000 mercenaries by 15 percent in recent months. And while you're in Africa,

9. Order your 2,000 advisers in Ethiopia to persuade General Mengistu to stop practicing genocide-by-starvation on his own people.

10. Permit Natan Sharansky's book, "Fear No Evil," to be published in the Soviet Union, which would be more relevant than the publication of Pasternak; then publish your own accurate figures on your defense budget, troop strength and the reality of your current deficit.

11. Stop using the U.N. as a staging area for K.G.B. spying in the U.S., and quit using your Mount Alto location in Washington as a huge, intrusive listening station.

12. Permit an opposition party ; without it, all talk of secret ballots and competing candidates is meaningless.

13. While you're rewriting history, tell the truth about Felix Dzerzinsky, the first secret police chief, whose reputation your K.G.B. supporters insist you protect.

14. Pledge to refrain from rolling in your tanks if coming uprisings get out of hand in Romania and Poland.

15. Follow up your syndication of Gary Hart's new column in Moscow News with fearless publication of pundits like William F. Buckley, Jeane Kirkpatrick and Pat Buchanan. For openers, run today's Essay.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and U.S. President Ronald Reagan talk during lunch Tuesday for delegates to the Economic Summit in Toronto.

Summit leaders critical of Reagan in private

TORONTO (AP) — America's major allies had effusive words of praise for Ronald Reagan in public, but in private some weren't as kind, handing the president a series of defeats at his eighth and final economic summit.

The bickering got so intense Tuesday, the last day, that the final negotiating session ran an hour longer than scheduled as the world leaders tried to settle their differences.

The 14th annual economic summit between the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada was not a total disaster for Reagan.

The allies did voice approval for his favorite free-market economic themes and the economic coordination process the United States has championed since the 1986 Tokyo summit.

But in the area of farm subsidies, Third World debt, aid to the Philippines and drug trafficking, the United States either suffered defeats or had to accept less than it wanted, reflecting perhaps the waning influence of a lame-duck president with only seven months left in office.

Little of this was visible on the surface. The leaders used the occasion of the public reading of the final communique to salute Reagan on his last foray into economic summitry.

"His leadership has been strong, his accomplishments substantial and his place in history secure," Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said on behalf of the other world leaders. "We shall all miss his warmth and wisdom."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a philosophical soulmate of Reagan's, called the president "marvelous," even though Mrs. Thatcher was one of the leaders who pushed Reagan to relent on his insistence for the complete phase-out of all agricultural subsidies.

On that issue, the United States was forced to settle for vague language in which the countries promised to seek ways to reduce subsidies, instead of the U.S. goal of eliminating them.

French President Francois Mitterrand, a Socialist who has often clashed with Reagan, was even more of a problem for the president during the three-day meeting.

Mitterrand objected to a Reagan initiative to have the countries cooperate more closely on the problem of drug trafficking, contending the seven summit nations did not have the authority to set up another international body.

"In whose names do these seven countries decide for the rest of the world?" Mitterrand grumbled. America settled for a call for an international study group with the participating countries to be chosen later.

Haiti holding aides of ousted president

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The new military government has arrested former aides of ousted President Leslie Manigat, who was overthrown in an army coup, sources said today.

The information minister, Col. Acedius St. Louis, confirmed over the independent Radio Antilles that an unspecified number of prisoners have been held since Sunday, when the military deposed Manigat's 4-month-old civilian government and restored Lt. Gen. Henry Namphy to power.

St. Louis gave no names nor details but said the prisoners were being treated well.

He also said the private home of Roger Savain, Minister of Information under Manigat, was being guarded for protection against vandalism. Another independent radio station, Radio Metropole, reported today the pillaging of the private home of Lionel Desgranges, Manigat's chief of staff.

A government source, speaking on condition of anonymity, late Tuesday identified former Manigat aides under arrest as Savain, his son Roger Savain Jr., Desgranges, and former Information Ministry officials Rodney Marcellus and Jean Narces Lescouflair.

"It is now possible for the army to redeem itself," Sylvio Claude, leader of the Haitian Christian Democratic Party, told Radio Lumiere today. "For the present, we neither condemn nor congratulate the army."

Louis Dejoie II, another opposition leader, said Tuesday in Puerto Rico that he wanted to talk with Namphy about holding elections. Claude, Dejoie, economist Marc Bazin and human rights activist Gerard Gourge were considered the leading candidates in the Nov. 29 elections but boycotted the army-run voting on Jan. 17.

The deposed president, meanwhile, called Tuesday for the international isolation of Namphy's restored military government. But he virtually conceded he has joined the long list of Haiti's ex-leaders.

In Washington, the State Department said it would maintain diplomatic relations with Haiti and keep up humanitarian aid.

A government communique Monday afternoon announced a reshuffling of the military, returning officers involved in the coup to their commands and giving most promotions. Manigat had sided with Col. Jean-Claude Paul, commander of the Dessalines Battalion, last week in an apparent rift with Namphy.

Manigat had rescinded Namphy's order transferring Paul, then retired or transferred other officers and placed Namphy under house arrest. But after Namphy was freed by loyal troops Sunday night, Paul was at Namphy's side Monday when the military government was announced.

Paul wasn't mentioned in the government communique on the army promotions, but he was back at his Dessalines command after the coup as the 7,000-man military united behind Namphy. Paul's battalion was linked to violence that scuttled attempted elections last Nov. 29, and he is under federal drug indictment in Miami.

Among the promotions was Gen. Carl Michel Nicolas to major general and commander-in-chief of the armed forces, Namphy's former title. Col. Wilthan Lherisson was promoted to major general and as Nicolas' assistant commander. Both had been retired by Manigat.

Col. Prosper Avril, reputed a leader of the effort to free Namphy and put him in power, was promoted to brigadier general and adjutant general of the armed forces.

Fire outside Egyptian monastery kills 47

ASSIUT, Egypt (AP) — A fire set off by sparks from a cooking booth swept through a city of tents housing thousands of Coptic Christians attending a religious festival, police said. Forty-seven people were killed.

The victims, most of them children, either died in the blaze or were trampled to death in the rush to escape, a senior police official said.

The fire broke out late Tuesday in the tent city at the foot of the al-Muharraq Monastery in al-Qusiyyah, north of this southern provincial capital, authorities said.

The fire began when sparks from a makeshift food booth touched some tents, igniting them and setting off a chain reaction in which about three dozen butane lamps exploded, the police official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. He said the booth's two owners, both Copts, were arrested.

Witnesses said monks quickly closed the monastery's massive door when the fire broke out. This caused panic-stricken pilgrims, who initially dashed to the building for refuge, to turn back and rush to the gate of the fenced tent city.

"There was was a big rush from the pilgrims towards the main gate of the camp. Some children fell and were trampled to death," the police official said.

The police official said 26 children, 15 men and six women died in the blaze. He said 15 people were injured trying to escape.

The monastery, a 10-acre compound with 70 to 80 monks in residence, was not damaged.

Foul play was not suspected in the fire.

The police official said authorities had authorized burial of the dead, which in Egypt is allowed only when the cause of death is not in question and a corpse is not required for criminal investigation.

"The fire caught us by surprise," said a survivor, one of the pilgrims. The man appeared dazed and refused to give his name.

"There wasn't enough water in the tent city to extinguish the fire. Apparently there was no firefighting equipment at the monastery," said the survivor.

Fire engines were summoned from nearby villages and eight of them arrived on the scene "a full hour after the fire started," he said.

A preliminary police report estimated damage at $420,000.

The monastery is built at the site of a cave where tradition says Joseph, Mary and the infant Jesus took shelter on their flight into Egypt. The Holy Family left Palestine after King Herod ordered all male children killed.

The church, inside the monastery, is among the oldest in Egypt, although its exact origins are unknown. The name of the monastery means "The Burnt Monastery."

The pilgrims were at an annual festival dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Fire blamed on Arabs burns 50 acres in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — A fire blamed on Arab arsonists destroyed 50 acres of treasured forest in northern Israel today, and a rash of stone-throwing signaled new momentum in the 6½-month-old Palestinian uprising.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir called the new wave of violence an attempt to destroy the Jewish state.

"There is a wave of aggression, whether arson or murder, against the Jewish presence everywhere in the land of Israel," Shamir told Israel army radio. "The problem is one of survival."

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, most businesses and schools were shut today by a general strike called for in leaflets from the uprising's underground leadership.

Israeli troops captured four armed Palestinian guerrillas trying to infiltrate from south Lebanon and wounded three after a brief firefight, the army said.

It was the 15th infiltration or attempted infiltration since the Arab uprising began Dec. 8.

The army said in a statement the guerrillas planned to attack one of Israel's northern settlements. It said there were no injuries to Israeli forces.

Israel radio said the guerrillas were captured north of Israel's self-declared security zone and belonged to the pro-Syrian Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Also, a woman was injured when Palestinians stood in the middle of a West Bank highway and stoned a bus heading for the Jewish city of Ariel, Israel radio reported. It said the bus also was hit by a firebomb but not set ablaze.

Police, firefighters and volunteers, backed by army helicopters and planes, were on alert for arson. The uprising's leaders had ordered Palestinians to set fire today to Israel's farms, forests and factories.

An overnight blaze scorched 50 acres of woodlands in Mount Gilboa, 70 miles north of Jerusalem, some of it part of a reforestation program.

"You see years of work go up in smoke in a few minutes," Avraham Yariv, head of the Gilboa regional council, told Israel radio. "You stand helpless before this terrible sight."

Yariv said the fire was obviously arson because it started in four places.

The destruction of trees is especially painful to Israelis, who take pride in having made the desert bloom. Many of the trees were bought by American Jews in memory of relatives.

Another fire broke out near the northern Israeli Arab village of Umm el Fahm, destroying 80 trees, said David Angel, spokesman for the Jewish National Fund, which manages Israel's forests. He blamed arsonists.

The Israeli-owned Itim news agency reported three other small fires, which did not cause serious damage, in widely scattered parts of the country.

Police commissioner David Krauss said the fires were set by Palestinians, some of them as young as 8 or 9.

In the past two months, fires have destroyed 35,000 acres in Israel, much of it cherished farmland and forest, about 10 times last year's total.

Officials have blamed at least half the fires on the uprising, which has claimed 210 Palestinian and four Israeli lives.

WORLD in brief

Syria has located hostages, London newspaper claims

LONDON (AP) — Syria has located the place in Lebanon where 15 foreign hostages are believed held by Iranian-backed guerrillas, the Independent newspaper reported today.

The London daily quoted unidentified Syrian intelligence officers as saying the hostages are imprisoned inside the Hay Madi barracks of Hezbollah, or Party of God, in Beirut's southern suburbs.

The report could not be independently confirmed.

The newspaper said the Syrian officers are convinced the hostages and their kidnappers "are bottled up in an area no more than 1,000 yards square and that there is no possibility of the captors moving out."

But the Syrians also acknowledged that the hostages cannot be rescued by force and that negotiations are needed with Hezbollah, a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militant faction, if the hostages "are to be extricated alive," wrote correspondent John Bulloch.

Mecca water project begun

JIDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — King Fahd inaugurated a major Red Sea desalination project that will daily pump 35 million gallons of water into Mecca, greatly increasing the kingdom's water supply for the annual pilgrimage.

The $400 million plant, inaugurated Tuesday 70 miles south of the port city of Jiddah, also will produce 15 million gallons of water daily for the summer resort city of Taif. It will generate 325,000 kilowatts of electricity.

The project is part of a massive development plan to better accomodate the estimated two million Moslems who converge on Mecca and neighboring Medina during July for the annual hajj to Islam's holiest shrines.

The kingdom, which claims to be the world's largest producer of desalinated water, currently has 22 plants with a total capacity of 550 million gallons of water per day.

Shultz's motives questioned

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega charged that Secretary of State George P. Shultz plans to seek support for U.S. aggression against Nicaragua when he visits Central America next week.

Shultz will visit El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and Costa Rica from June 29 to July 1 to discuss the collapse of Nicaraguan peace talks.

Ortega Tuesday noted that Shultz would not visit Nicaragua.

"What does this mean?" he said. "The United States doesn't have any interest in a negotiated solution to the problems with Nicaragua."

Peace Corps volunteer far from home

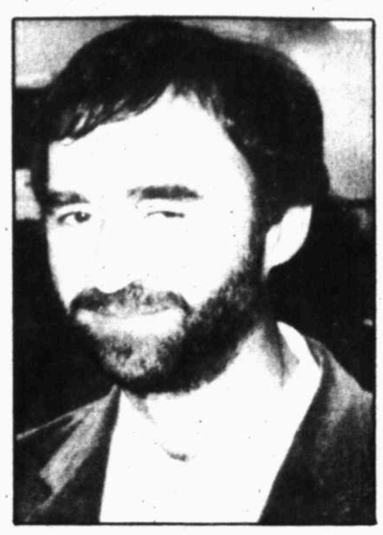
By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

For 10 years, Buddy Shanks as both a Peace Corps volunteer and program administrator has lived in west Africa — learning its customs, eating its food and helping its residents. The locale is a far cry from his native Stanton.

"I don't think I ever imagined as a student at Stanton High School that I ever would do this," said Shanks Tuesday during a telephone interview from Dakar, where he is director of Peace Corps activities in Senegal.

A product of West Texas farming stock, Shanks said, "I can remember standing out in the fields on a really hot day and seeing the planes flying overheard, and I wondered what it would be like to be someplace else."

After tours of duty in Mali, Zaire and Gabon in addition to Senegal, the 39-year-old Shanks now knows.



Buddy Shanks

Shanks downplayed the romance of foreign service, noting that about 8 percent of Peace Corps volunteers who arrive in Senegal don't make it past a three-month-long, Dakar-based language and customs training course. He mentioned homesickness, loneliness and culture shock among reasons for the dropouts.

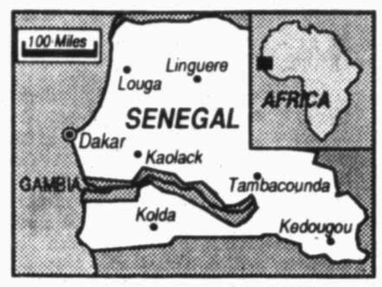
Sickness accounts for many of the 6 percent of volunteers that leave before their normal two-year tour of duty ends, he said, noting his own eight bouts with malaria.

"When you get sick and you don't have loved ones very close, that takes a lot of the romance out of it," he said.

The poverty of west Africa also tends to color new volunteers' first experiences, he said. "It's hard for people to come into, say, Dakar, which is the capital, and see the kids who are beggars on the street," he said. "And then the people who have leprosy approach you. It's quite a shock."

Another African scourge that has developed into a worldwide plague — AIDS — hasn't affected Senegal as much as its neighbors, Shanks said.

"During the last five years, there's been a large amount of publicity about AIDS," he said. "So many people here have TVs and radios."



Graphic/Rick Brown

In addition, French-speaking Senegal has a "strict Moslem society" which "may be the reason we don't have as much of a problem here," he said.

As a program administrator in a relative metropolis, Shanks now has life easier than when he was a green volunteer living in an outback village. But he recalls those times and tries to frequently visit the 110 volunteers he overseas in rural Senegal.

The country he described as similar in terrain to West Texas, but slightly lusher.

Helping the Senegalese mainly comes down to offering expertise in health and agriculture. A Sahara Desert that is moving slowly into the northern portions of the country makes the Peace Corps' land reclamation program a top priority, he said.

Recalling his 10 years of service, Shanks recalled shining moments in foreign lands. Gabon he described as "the last frontier."

"It's one of the last places you might call a tropical paradise," he said.

Shanks' African experience also has affected him in human terms. "I remember when I was first a volunteer out in a small village in southern Mali," he said. "An old guy — a former cook for a French diplomat — came by asking for work.

"He just involved himself in taking care of me," Shanks said of the friendship that developed. The man, Sory Ballo, helped Shanks deal with sickness and learn Malian culture.

"He was just this old fellow who took me under his wing kind of like a grandfather would," recalled Shanks. "I'm sure he's passed away by now — he was probably in his early 80s."

Only under a special extension in Peace Corps hiring policies has Shanks been able to stay with the service for 10 years, he said. He will have to leave the corps when his current two-year tour ends.

Afterwards, while he likely will return to Stanton to visit family for a while, Shanks plans to find work in international development — in a French-speaking country, if possible.

His thirst for understanding new customs, people and experiences likely will keep Shanks oversees. "There's always something new that you're going to learn," he said.

ECISD trustees approve sex education plan

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The efforts of a 12-member Sex Education Task Force drew praise Tuesday night as Ector County school trustees voted to implement a new curriculum that will stress abstinence, as well as teach contraceptive methods and provide information on sexually transmitted diseases.

Only nine people, including former State Rep. Jay Gibson, appeared to comment on the proposed program. Seven of the nine, describing the curriculum as "comprehensive," urged board members to approve implementation.

However, Michael and Diana Lynn Pierce, 1816 Cord, while supporting the teaching of sex education generally, opposed instruction in contraceptive methods.

Pierce presented board members with copies of a publication that statistically contended the teaching of contraception does not prevent teenage pregnancies.

Gibson, saying he had two children in Ector County schools, expressed unqualified support of the sex education program proposed by the task force, including the teaching of contraceptive methods.

"I have never believed withholding information is the way to make better people," said the former state representative.

Rene Brister Chambers, who also has children in school, told board members she had talked to teenagers who believed "they were not getting all the information they need," and urged the board to approve implementation of the entire sex education program, including the teaching of contraceptive methods.

Another parent with children in school, Lois Hale, 2812 Keystone Drive, said that, in reading the task force recommendations, "It appears to me that the task force has been very considerate of the values and attitudes held by citizens of Ector County and has taken a position which is, if you will, more progressive than our neighbors to the east. For that I am very grateful," she said.

She was referring to the Midland Independent School District's sex education program which teaches only abstinence.

Saying she is "familiar with Sex Respect as a program" and finds the emphasis on abstinence for teenagers" to be reasonable." However, she added "In and of itself, I feel it is limited and naive."

Task force proposals to teach contraceptive methods and pregnancy prevention are to be commended, she said.

"It is certainly in the best interests of our ECISD students...and I commend the members of that task force for their insight into the difference between the world we would like our children to live in and the world that they are, and will be expected, to live in. That is the world that we must prepare them to live in," Mrs. Hale stated.

Kathleen Cox, 2724 Fairoaks, another parent with children in the ECISD schools, expressed the belief that it is "absolutely essential" that students be provided information on contraceptive methods and sexually transmitted diseases. "Our children need to be informed," she said. "They will not all make the choices we wish they would make and if they make the wrong choice they need to be informed."

Superintendent Hugh Hayes asked board members to make only one concession to administrators — to allow them sufficient time to determine how the recommendation regarding creation of a health supervisor position will be finalized.

Hayes said it has not been determined if simply creation of a new position is needed now, or if another option, yet to be explored, would be more viable.

Board upholds suspension of cheerleader

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Alleged inequitable application of rules regarding grade requirements for members of the Permian High School cheerleading squad led to a dispute at Tuesday's Ector County Independent School District board of trustees meeting.

The dispute involving suspension of Shane Stanfield from the PHS cheerleader squad for one year because his grade in one subject dropped below 75 is "excessive," according to Roger Jatko, the attorney retained by Stanfield's parents to plead his case to school trustees.

However, board members voted to uphold the decision of PHS Principal Gerald McClary and PHS administrators.

Arguing Stanfield's case, Jatko said he had no objection to standards set for participation in various activities as long as they are equitably applied.

In a brief interview following his appearance before the board, Jatko cited the case of a cheerleader at PHS last year whose grade in one subject fell below the required 75 percent. "For him, they made an exception, followed by a stern warning that there were going to be no more exceptions," he said.

"That's what I was trying to explain to the board, that this kind of rule, a rule this harsh, you're bound to have people trying to make exceptions. "It's only human."

The Odessa attorney contends the board should take another look at the rule "and make it reasonable."

Jatko said he would have no problem with the rule if it coincided with the "no-pass, no-play" requirements that suspend students from extracurricular activities for a six week period when grades fall below the accepted level.

"Shane's not asking for a free ride," Jatko said, "He feels like he should be suspended if he doesn't make the grade," but not for all of next year.

The way the rule is now, he said, "It's bound to create inconsistencies because people are not for it. They don't believe it's reasonable and, therefore, they're going to try to create exceptions when they can. That's what happens whenever you have a bad rule," stated Jatko.

Jatko said he and Stanfield's parents believe Shane should have been suspended until his grade came up to the required level, but not for the entire year. He urged board members to review the rule with an eye to revising it to the point that "it would be considered reasonable by most people."

He told board members he wouldn't care if the grade level requirement was higher, "even 80," as long as the suspension period was contingent on raising grades to the level that would allow a return to the team.

Jatko did not indicate the intention to file a civil lawsuit but, barring further action by the ECISD board, that may be the only hope Stanfield will have of overcoming the one year suspension from the cheerleading squad.

Cates new MC associate dean of students

From Staff Reports

Dr. Donald Cates today was confirmed as Midland College's new Associate Dean of Students and Registrar.

Cates

Cates was introduced at the college's regular monthly Board of Trustees meeting by college president Dr. Jess H. Parrish. Cates is replacing Dee Windsor, who is retiring August 31 after 34 years in Texas public education, the last 16 years at Midland College.

Prior to his appointment, Cates had been serving as Dean of Admissions and Executive Director of Student Affairs at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. His experience also includes serving as Registrar at Texas Tech and 18 years as Dean of Admissions and Registrar at West Texas State University. Cates begins his duties June 27.

"Don Cates is exactly the type person we sought to replace Dee Windsor," Parrish said. "He has experience at the university level, is familiar with West Texas and Midland College, and has skills in computerized registration and student records programs. We think Don Cates will be a great addition to our administrative staff."

Born in Odessa and educated in San Angelo, Cates received his Bachelor of Science degree from Howard Payne University and earned both his Master of Education and Doctor of Education degrees at Texas Tech University. He has served as an elementary teacher, coach, and principal in San Angelo, Brownfield, and Slaton. While completing the doctoral program at Texas Tech, he was a graduate teaching assistant and served as Registrar, designing Tech's first "coliseum-type" registration system.

He has served as board member of the Panhandle Plains Higher Education Authority, president of the Texas Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, and is a member of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers. He has been a member of Rotary International in Canyon and Odessa, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Odessa Cultural Council and United Way of Odessa.

"Don Cates is exactly the type person we sought to replace Dee Windsor. He has experience at the university level, is familiar with West Texas and Midland College."

"David Drake has spent his career in community colleges, believes strongly in the community college role, and has experience in the most advanced computerized systems being instituted in the finest learning centers in the Southwest. He should be a great asset to the staff of the college," said Parrish, college president.

Supreme Court rules Midland oilman didn't break lease

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Supreme Court of Texas ruled this morning that Midland oilman H.L. (Sonny) Brown did not break his lease when he moved out of the Paragon Building in Midland four years ago.

Republicbank First National Midland, Brown's landlord in the case, sued Brown for about $240,000 in rent he owed on the 2½ years remaining on his lease when he moved out. In an 8-1 decision, the high court reversed two lower court rulings by saying that Brown complied with a 30-day notice provision in a previous contract and that that contract applied to the case.

Chief Justice Tom Phillips disagreed, saying the 30-day notice provision had expired when Brown moved out and that the previous contract no longer applied. "Reading contracts together does not justify bodily taking a paragraph from one contract and transplanting it into another," Phillips wrote.

Phillips agreed with four other justices on a different point of law: that the landlord had to make "reasonable efforts" to re-lease the space. Landlord-tenant law in Texas differs from most other types of contract law in that the landlord has no duty to mitigate damages, that is to try to re-lease the space, when a contract is broken.

"The time has come for this court to abandon the traditional view that a landlord has no duty to mitigate its damages," Justice William Kilgarlin wrote. "It is more sensible to impose the rule of contract which requires an injured party to exercise reasonable care to minimize its damages."

Kilgarlin called the traditional view "an anacronism that is counterproductive to sound public policy."

Three other justices signed on to Kilgarlin's concurring opinion in the case. Because Chief Justice Phillips simply agreed with that argument in his dissenting opinion — and did not sign on to Kilgarlin's concurring opinion — that argument probably does not set a new precedent in Texas law. Board members agreed.

Dog dies after being left in officer's pickup

HOUSTON (AP) — Tarzan, a drug-sniffing police dog, died after apparently succumbing to extreme heat inside its handler's truck, which had left open by the officer but was closed by someone else, police say.

The 3-year-old Belgian Malinois was inside officer Doyle Green's truck Tuesday — with the tailgate open to allow ventilation — while the officer attended a criminal court proceeding, said Houston Police Department spokesman Al Baker.

"Unfortunately, someone came by and closed the tailgate of the truck," Baker said. "It's a great loss to the handler."

Tarzan came to the public's attention earlier this year when he became sidetracked during a courtroom test of his ability to sniff out illegal narcotics.

At that time, Green blamed Tarzan's confusion on pressure. He said the dog had discovered $14 million worth of illegal drugs at Hobby Airport over a 10-month period.

Ex-columnist writes about ordinary people

By KEVIN McPHERSON

MILLER GROVE, Texas (AP) — Bill Porterfield finds the most interesting stories from the most ordinary people.

In fact, he's found enough to put together a collection of heart-warming stories in his new book, "Fathers and Daughters."

"The stories sort of ran the gauntlet of emotions," Porterfield said of his sixth book. "There are a few sad stories, but most of them are very touching."

Over the past decade, the former Dallas Times Herald columnist has changed the way he works and the way he lives. Instead of the fast-paced city lifestyle and working under constant deadlines, Porterfield is able to keep his own hours as a self-employed writer-rancher on his farm in Miller Grove.

"I've spent 15 years in the city," he said. "But I was raised in the country. My father was an oil roughneck and I lived in 22 towns in 17 years, but they were all small farm towns.

"I've been living out here for about six years and have been able to spend most of my time writing books."

But it wasn't always the easy life, either. Editors and publishers stay on top of Porterfield's progress and give him periodic deadlines.

"The hard thing when you're on your own is discipline," he said. "Because when the bills come and the wolf's at the door, you have to write regardless of what time you get up in the morning."

Porterfield spent about two years writing the anthology, which includes over 100 photographs by Dallas photographer Mollie McKool.

But finding the stories wasn't the hard part of the book, he said. "It's odd. You don't go out there looking for them. They just fall upon you," he said. "Many of them I had run upon before and had stuck in an old trunk or whatever. Mollie's photographs really make the book."

And Porterfield found similarities between writing the book and how he used to conjure up a general interest column.

"I wrote a lot of this book on the road, but it was nothing new," he said. "When I was out in rural East Texas, I wrote quite a bit in cheap motels, using an old portable manual. Then I'd go down to the Western Union and file it by wire."

Porterfield, who has also had features published in "Texas Monthly", "D" magazine and the "Saturday Evening Post," spent his last two years at the Times Herald traveling the state, visiting people and places that caught his fancy.

"One of the strangest pieces I ever did was about a group of old maid sisters who lived in Seguin," he said. "They were known as the 'Seven Sisters of Seguin.' I got several columns just from them.

"They never married, well, they never even dated. They ranged from their 60s to 90s and all lived in the same house they were born."

He also remembers coming across a small commune of midgets in Van Zandt County. "They had retired from the circus and were living on a farm," he remembers. "Most of them were married and had families. I always like those wonderful people-type stories. You can find a lot of interesting things in the most simple places."

Kim Poor's art to be displayed at mall

From Staff Reports

Works by Kim Poor are included in the Festival of Art at Midland Park Mall Thursday through Sunday.

"Mr. Poor's skill and technique are impeccable, but his subject matter is unique — stunningly realistic views of worlds other than our own," says a news release from the mall.

Poor's work has been featured regularly in OMNI and he has illustrated articles in, among others, Science Digest, Discover, Sky & Telescope and Astronomy. His art has been commssioned for textbooks, book covers and by the National Air and Space Museum.

"He is a prime mover in the new art movement commonly called 'Space Art,' whose artists strive to create realistic and scientifically accurate scenes of the cosmos," the release says. "Space Art is now coming into vogue as part of the new renaissance in realism. So realistic are Kim's paintings, that many people mistake his work for photography. Soon they realize that these scenes are not yet photograph-able, and some may never be."

Also on exhibit will be illustrations which Poor recently completed for the new Carl Sagan book, "Comet"; a new Time-Life book series; the new Smithsonian book, "Space, Time & Infinity"; and recent magazines.

"It's an exciting time to be alive," says Poor, who hopes to be the first art astronaut to ride aboard the space shuttle. "I enjoy meeting people one-on-one, discussing the wonders of the universe and our place within it."

Poor will be demonstrating his technique during the exhibit.

Odessan elected to head local ostomy group

From Staff Reports

Margie Triplitt of Odessa has been elected as the 1988-89 president of the Midland-Odessa Chapter of the United Ostomy Association. Also elected were Alton Hatfield of Midland, vice-president; Marion Sims of Midland, secretary; and Donna Parsons of Odessa, treasurer.

The local chapter is one of more than 600 throughout the United States and Canada, which includes a total membership of almost 50,000.

As a non-profit paramedical service organization, its purpose is to help rehabilitate people who have had colostomy, ileostomy or urostomy surgery caused by disease, birth defect or injury. The UOA estimates there are almost 1,500,000 ostomates in North America.

Ostomy surgery requires the creation of an opening (stoma) on the abdomen for elimination of body wastes because of loss of normal bowel or bladder function.

The local chapter provides monthly meetings, counseling, educational publications and pre-operative and post-operative visits by trained members with the prior consent of the patient's physician.

The Midland-Odessa chapter meets the third Sunday of each month at 2:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

For more information, call Margie Triplitt in Odessa at 367-7840, or write the United Ostomy Association Inc., 2001 West Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90057.

Judge doesn't lower bail of man charged in rape

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has refused to lower the bonds for a Mexican national who is among 10 men charged in the alleged kidnapping and gang rape of a 19-year-old woman.

Jaime Garza, the court-appointed attorney for 28-year-old Felipe Chew, sought to lower Chew's bonds from $150,000 to $50,000.

But Judge Ricardo Garcia Tuesday declined the bond reduction, a move opposed by a prosecutor.

"There's nothing to keep him here," Rodolfo Gutierrez, first assistant district attorney for the 229th Judicial District.

"I was not surprised at the judge's ruling," Garza said.

The defendant was returned to the Duval County Jail on charges of sexual assault and aggravated kidnapping.

He and nine other men were indicted April 21.

The alleged victim said she was abducted March 26 and raped by as many as 20 men over a period of several hours.

The judge set a July 11 pretrial hearing for Chew.

Only one other defendant remained in the jail Tuesday. Roberto Perez, 26, was in the jail in lieu of bonds totaling $250,000 on

Teacher takes out loan to help Mexican family

DALLAS (AP) — A schoolteacher took out a $1,000 loan to help undocumented immigrants from being deported and allow the family to take advantage of the government's landmark amnesty program.

Abel and Antonia Maria Cisneros and their children were planning to leave for Nuevo Leon, Mexico, in December. They were living in Dallas and were well-short of the $1,000 needed to apply for the government's landmark amnesty program, although they were certain they could qualify.

Abel Cisneros was unemployed. The family had car problems, bills were piling up, and relatives and friends just couldn't spare the money.

"I had already been praying three days with all of my heart," Antonia Cisneros told the Dallas Times Herald, choking back tears. "I was very sad, because my husband wanted us to go back to Mexico because we had no more chances."

But they did have a chance.

Dallas schoolteacher G.O. Lagbara, 46, heard about the family's plight. Moved by Antonia Cisneros' sincerity and deep faith in God, Lagbara took out a $1,000 loan at a local bank to help the five Cisneros family members apply for amnesty.

At the time, he wasn't sure the family would repay the money, but it did. On Monday, Lagbara smiled as he watched the Cisneros family make the final payment — $165 — on the unsecured loan.

"I think that people who have things have a responsibility to put something back in the community or help other people. There's a line in the Bible that says those who are strong should help those who are weak," Lagbara said.

"I know that sounds hokey, but I really feel you should help other people."

Members of the Cisneros family, proud owners of temporary residence cards, say they will never forget Lagbara's generosity.

Antonia Cisneros reflects, in Spanish, "For a man to do this for us, his heart must be very big."

Relief to be available for farmers, ranchers

ALICE (AP) — Farmers and ranchers of arid border rangeland heard their options for federal aid from the chairman of the House Agricultural Committee, who said officials had braced for a summer drought.

Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng "knew the drought was coming last March and is on top of the situation," U.S. Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, said.

Cattlemen said federal aid would be welcome relief.

"I've had to cut back on my herd by 30 percent and I'll probably have to cut back some more," said Arty Berthold, who has a 700-acre ranch just north of Alice.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bill Clements said in Austin Tuesday that comparing Texas drought conditions to the infamous Dust Bowl of the 1930s is an overreaction.

"I think that comparing where we are today to the dust bowl situation of the 1930s is too extreme," Clements said in response to remarks by Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"We're not there yet and hopefully we'll never get there," Clements told reporters.

"I think the conservation methods that our farmers and ranchers have put into place since those desperate days of the 1930's will keep us from getting there."

Hightower, a frequent critic of the Reagan Administration's farm programs, claimed on Monday that the White House had dismantled many of the soil and water conservation programs developed in response to the Dust Bowl years.

De la Garza, speaking in Alice Monday, said that the federal government would spend billions of dollars in affected areas, including South Texas.

"We've already spent millions of dollars on drought assistance and the task force (Congressional Drought Task Force) is meeting again Wednesday to discuss the problem," said de la Garza.

Acres of dried corn line Highway 44 between this South Texas city and Corpus Christi, on the Gulf of Mexico. Many Texas counties have been approved for emergency haying or grazing.

De la Garza did not estimate how much the government would be spending on drought assistance but said he expected spending to be in the billions.

"There's no hay to cut because there's no rain, and we're even running out of dry grass," rancher Berthold said.

He said the most rain he has received at one time during the last year is 1.2 inches.

"This time of year, I should be spending $300 to $400 each month for supplemental feed and it's costing me $900 to $1,000 a month," said Berthold. "I'm losing a lot of money."

He said he is selling calves at 200 pounds "when usually I sell them at 400 to 450 pounds."

The drought, which has plagued the nation's midsection and the Southeast for several weeks, forced ranchers to sell off cattle they can't afford to feed and to plow under dried up crops.

More federal programs should be made available in Texas, said Kraig Gallimore, drought program specialist with the Texas Department of Agriculture in Austin.

"I don't think they do such a swell job in Washington," he said. "This is just June 20, not July 20 or Aug. 20...We're in some severe trouble here and it's early."

Authorities on Friday approved 57 Texas counties for emergency haying or grazing of set-aside acres enrolled in the 1988 farm program. Set-aside acres are those on which a farmer plants soil-conserving crops in order to be eligible for loans and price-support payments.

Hector Hinojosa, program assistant with the ASCS in Jim Wells County, said the emergency haying and grazing will not help many in his area.

"The farmers can't really hay or graze this acreage because many didn't ever plant anything on it because the ground was too dry," he said.

A federally funded Emergency Feed Program is available in 38 counties in Texas.

Man tosses acid at apartment manager

HOUSTON (AP) — An apartment manager was in critical condition today after a man walked into her office and tossed a bucket of sulfuric acid on her, authorities said.

Pat Schoales, 38, was in her office at the Shibui Apartments early Tuesday when the man came in and threw the bucket of acid at her.

She was burned over 80 percent of her body. She had burns on her face, arms, legs, chest and abdomen, Hermann Hospital officials said.

She also ingested some of the acid, which damaged her left eye, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Capt. Andy Brown, a member of the Houston Fire Department hazardous materials team, said the office carpet had to be removed because the acid had eaten through it.

"It was a very powerful substance," Brown said. "It ate through all of the papers on her desk and her glasses."

Police had no leads or suspects and were not sure what prompted the incident.

"She's the only one able to tell us anything, because she is the only one who saw him," Officer M.E. Lentschke said.

Schoales and her husband, Randy, have managed the 40-unit complex about two weeks, an apartment resident said.

"She was real nice," resident Charles Bills said. "She always got things done whenever you called. She may have had some problems with the people she evicted, but I don't remember her talking about offending anyone."

Defendant didn't think petitions would be used

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Houston political consultant Rocky Mountain told a jury that although he instructed workers to sign others' names on petitions to put a GOP presidential candidate on the state primary ballot, he never expected the signatures to be used.

Mountain testified in the forgery trial Tuesday that it was "probably one of the dumbest things I've ever done in my life" to give teen-agers and other temporary workers beer and tell them to sign names from a computerized list on petitions for candidate Pete du Pont.

However, Mountain said, "I don't believe it constitutes a crime." The defense, which began its side of the case Tuesday, rested after Mountain's testimony. The trial is in its second week.

Mountain and the company for which he is a vice president, Southern Political Consulting, Inc., each were indicted on 64 counts of misdemeanor forgery. But Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross threw out 26 of the counts Tuesday on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Mountain said he did not intend to defraud or harm anyone with the petitions, but simply meant to present them to du Pont aide Scott Malfitano. Mountain said he was angry at Malfitano because of pressure from the du Pont campaign to get signatures.

"I wanted to get a whole big stack of petitions, dump them on Malfitano's desk and say, 'You want petitions, man, here's the petitions,'" Mountain said. He said Malfitano used the firm's offices for several days.

"Never in a million years did I imagine he was going to turn them in (to the Republican Party of Texas). We all agreed there was no way to use those petitions," Mountain said, adding that consulting company president Kevin Burnette also was involved in the conversation and said the petitions could not be used.

Defense lawyers have said they have tried but been unable to get Malfitano to testify.

Republican Party rules required candidates to submit 5,000 voter signatures to get on the ballot. The rules since have been changed to allow candidates to pay a filing fee or submit signatures.

Mountain also said the signature-gathering for du Pont was his project, not a company project. He asserted that the law was being selectively enforced. He and his firm are the only ones to be indicted, Mountain noted, even though apparently forged signatures were found on a number of presidential candidates' petitions.

Mountain faces a fine of up to $2,000 per count and up to a year in jail. The firm could be fined up to $10,000 per count.

Police officer quits after being cleared of charges

DALLAS (AP) — Assistant Police Chief Charles Busby says he quit his job with a sense of relief after a grand jury cleared him of any wrongdoing in his job-brokering activities for off-duty police officers.

"I just felt like with the report of the grand jury, my name was cleared and it was the right time for me to leave," said Busby, who has been with the department for 26 years.

"I've got a sense of relief and satisfaction, and I'm happy. I can walk away feeling proud and hold my head up."

The grand jury declined to indict Busby Tuesday, a week after it heard testimony from state officials who investigated his ownership of an unlicensed private security firm.

Busby told acting Police Chief Lou Caudell that he would retire July 1.

"He had seen the allegations that were being investigated and had a chance to respond to them," Caudell said. "Whether or not that played a part in his decision-making is a matter of conjecture, I guess. I would imagine that it probably did, frankly."

Caudell said that he did not ask Busby to step down. As head of the Administrative Services Bureau, Busby, 48, was fourth in command, overseeing the legal liaison, planning and research, and fiscal affairs divisions.

Busby discussed an internal affairs investigation into the matter with Caudell Tuesday, but he said that didn't affect his decision to quit, made several weeks earlier.

Caudell placed Busby on paid administrative leave April 13, less than one month after The Dallas Morning News reported that Busby controlled access to most off-duty security jobs at city facilities.

Secretary convicted of capital murder

AMARILLO (AP) — Tearful jurors rejected a Houston secretary's claim that she was "framed" and convicted her of capital murder for plotting the the death of her boss' wife.

Jane Ada Callaway, 36, was convicted Tuesday on a charge of hiring a man to shoot Jury Saragusa, 39. The victim was the wife of Michael Saragusa, a prominent, wealthy Houston liquor distributor.

Jurors were to return to court today to begin hearing evidence on punishment for Ms. Callaway. She faces either death by injection or a life prison term, the only options available under a capital murder conviction.

Prosecutors alleged that Ms. Callaway, who had a brief affair with Saragusa, wanted Saragusa's wife killed because she envied her wealth and position.

"Jane Callaway set out to be a fancy dresser, a Rolex watch wearer, where Judy Saragusa was not that way," prosecutor Chuck Rosenthal said in closing arguments Monday. "She tried to show that she would be a type of person more fitting to Michael Saragusa and his financial status."

The verdict in State District Judge Michael McSpadden's court came Tuesday after jurors had deliberated about 17 hours. The case was moved from Houston to Amarillo on a change of venue because of extensive pre-trial news coverage.

When the jury was brought out before the verdict to discuss the possibility of sending them home early enough to watch the final game of the National Basketball Association championship series, one of the female jurors was crying. When the jurors finally returned with the verdict, three of the female jurors wept.

The victim's husband cried when the verdict was read.

Anthony Saragusa, brother-in-law of the victim and co-owner of Quality Beverage in Houston, said that the the capital murder conviction was the only decision honest jurors could have reached.

"It's been quite traumatic for us," he said. Defense allegations that his 52-year-old, $200 million-a-year business is in financial trouble have hurt, Saragusa said.

Because of a gag order, Anthony Saragusa was the only family member or participant in the trial who could speak to reporters.

Prosecutors alleged that Ms. Callaway paid Leon Hawkins Jr. to kill the woman.

Defense Attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes grabbed Ms. Callaway's hand as McSpadden polled the jury. When the judge read that she was guilty she dropped her head, then turned to look at her parents.

The judge later allowed Ms. Callaway to meet in his chambers with her parents and a friend.

Jurors made 16 requests for testimony and evidence Tuesday before ending deliberations that began late Monday afternoon.

Two of the notes prompted defense attorney Dan Cogdell to call for a mistrial but McSpadden refused.

The admitted middleman in the killing, Michael Wayne Richardson, 24, is charged with conspiracy to commit capital murder. He agreed to plead guilty to a lesser charge of conspiracy to commit murder in return for his testimony against Callaway.

Hawkins, 21, the alleged triggerman, is in Harris County jail charged with capital murder.

STATE IN BRIEF

Railey's wife to be admitted to hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of a Dallas hospital say they will admit Margaret "Peggy" Railey, a former Methodist minister's wife who was the victim of a near-fatal choking attack.

Mrs. Railey, the wife of Walker Railey, will be admitted to Baylor University Medical Center today, said spokesman Steve Habgood.

The decision to admit Mrs. Railey was made after a medical and physical investigation, Habgood said.

Mrs. Railey, 39, had remained comatose at a Tyler nursing home since her admittance.

Railey, former senior pastor at the First United Methodist Church in Dallas, said he found his wife on the garage floor of their home on the night of April 21, 1987.

Not long after the attack, Railey attempted suicide. Later, he surrendered his ministerial credentials and moved to San Francisco with a Dallas psychologist, Lucy Papillon, who admitted a romantic relationship with Railey dating back to 1986.

Mrs. Railey's parents filed a civil lawsuit that accused their son-in-law in the attack.

Whitmire's aide dies

HOUSTON (AP) — Clintine Cashion, one of Mayor Kathy Whitmire's key aides for more than six years, was found dead in her home Tuesday. She was 52.

Ms. Cashion sufferd a chronic breathing disorder and she apparently died of natural causes sometime during the night, said Paul Mabry, the mayor's spokesman.

She was found dead in her home about noon by a family friend who had been called to check on Ms. Cashion after she failed to show up for work Tuesday, Mabry said.

Ms. Cashion was Mrs. Whitmire's campaign manager in 1981 and joined the mayor's staff the next year.

She is survived by her mother, four grown children and several grandchildren, Mabry said. Services had not yet been scheduled.

Court justice to resign

AUSTIN (AP) — A state Supreme Court justice says he will step down to look for a better-paying job, making him the third justice to resign in less than a year.

"I'm tired of being the lowest-paid lawyer in the courtroom," Justice James Wallace said Tuesday. Justices are paid $79,000 a year.

Wallace said he would resign Sept. 1, a move that would put the seat on the November ballot and allow Democratic and Republican officials to pick candidates. Republican Gov. Bill Clements will appoint an interim justice to serve until the November election results are certified.

Wallace was elected to the court in 1980 and re-elected in 1986. His current term ends in 1993. He said he would practice law in Austin or Houston.

Chief Justice John L. Hill and Justice Robert Campbell, both Democrats, submitted their resignations late last year. Hill quit to devote time to his push for appointed, instead of elected, state judges. Campbell quit to campaign in favor of keeping the elected system.

Authorities seize cocaine

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities seized 200 kilos of cocaine — about 440 pounds — worth an estimated $25 million and arrested two men in the raid.

Houston police officers and federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents found the cocaine in a northwest Houston home about 5:30 a.m. Tuesday, police spokesman Al Baker said. Authorities had a search warrant to enter the house.

The cocaine seizure and arrests were the result of an ongoing investigation that began about three months ago, Baker said.

Charges were pending against the two men arrested, he said. Two automatic weapons also were seized at the home, he said.

NATION in brief

Female Vietnam vet statue draws criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Memo to politicians: Looking for an election-year issue as surefire as the flag, baseball or Mom's apple pie? Maybe a statue honoring American women? Even better, women veterans of Vietnam?

Well, think again.

Although the Senate overwhelmingly approved the idea last week, 98-1, proposed legisation to add a woman's statue to the national Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington ran into all sorts of trouble in the House on Tuesday.

Members of the House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on libraries and memorials witnessed a genteel clash between actress Loretta Swit, who favored the statue, and Maya Lin, the softspoken designer of the Vietnam memorial, who said it would be a mistake.

The panel also cited reports of allegedly extravagant spending and mismanagement by former officers of the statue's Minneapolis-based sponsoring group, a possible conflict of interest by the sculptor of another statue at the Vietnam memorial and political pressure from former Interior Secretary James Watt.

Catchall tax bill formed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee is putting together a catchall tax bill that includes help for students and farmers but offsets every penny of relief with higher taxes on someone else.

In addition to farmers who buy diesel fuel and students who receive education aid from an employer, the winners in the legislation include owners of shares in mutual funds, low-income workers, first-time homebuyers and corporations with big outlays for research.

The losers: defense contractors, purchases of single-premium life insurance and corporations that own less than a 20 percent share of other corporations.

The bill would take away a considerable portion of the tax benefits associated with single-premium life insurance and other investment-oriented policies. The income from such policies, whose purchasers usually have high incomes, is now tax-deferred and policy loans are tax-free.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, presented his proposal Tuesday to members of the panel and they immediately began considering it behind closed doors.

Gun waiting time favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's support of a waiting period for would-be buyers of handguns runs counter to the traditional views of many of his conservative supporters that there be little or no restrictions on individual access to weapons.

But Reagan's comments Tuesday won immediate praise from Sarah Brady, whose husband, White House Press Secretary James Brady, was wounded by presidential assailant John Hinckley. Reagan also was injured in the March 1981 attack but recovered completely.

The president, answering a question at a news conference in Toronto, expressed support for the waiting period as well as for instruction of new gun buyers.

"In California, for a citizen to buy a gun, that citizen has to come in, lay down the money of course, name, address, and so forth," Reagan said. "And this goes to an agency in the state government that looks into that person's entire background as to who and what they are.

The National Rifle Association opposes the bill, arguing that such waiting periods, aside from not preventing serious criminals from getting handguns, are unconstitutional and divert police resources to looking into the private lives of law-abiding citizens.

Owners sue in bull's death

COLFAX, Wash. (AP) — Blitz, a prize bull highly sought for breeding, died from injuries suffered when he tried to defend his cows from a trespassing bull, the owners of a breeding company claim in a $150,000 lawsuit.

But the owners of the trespassing bull maintain their unnamed Hereford bull never attacked Blitz. Instead, say Ed and Karen Hinnenkamp of rural Pullman, Blitz may have overexerted himself while mating.

A Whitman County Superior Court jury this week is considering how Blitz died.

Alvene and Emily Leinweber, owners of Blitz and Palouse Pinzgauer Breeders, are seeking $150,000, the amount they said they could have earned from Blitz's semen, which they sold for $20 a sample.

Adoption agency sued

NEW YORK (AP) — The state has filed a civil lawsuit against the operators of an illegal adoption agency that amounted to "a large-scale baby selling business," State Attorney General Bob Abrams said.

The agency, based in New York City and in Scranton, Pa., sold babies to the highest bidder for prices of up to $36,000, Abrams charged Tuesday.

The agency, Childhaven of Northeastern Pennsylvania, exploited both the biological mothers and the adoptive parents, he said.

Abrams did not file criminal charges against the operators of the business, identified as Harriet and Lawrence Lauer of Brooklyn and their attorney, Seymour Fenichel of Manhattan.

May durable goods orders dive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for "big ticket" durable goods plunged 2.2 percent in May, the steepest dive in nine months, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said orders for durables goods, items expected to last three or more years, totaled a seasonally adjusted $114.8 billion last month.

It was the biggest drop in new orders since August, when orders plummeted 2.3 percent, and followed a 1.8 percent increase in April, revised upward from a previous estimate of 1.0 percent.

The entire May decline can be accounted for by a precipitous 9 percent decline in orders for transportation equipment.

Economists were surprised by the report. Most had predicted a rise of more than 2 percent in orders on the strength of two big orders late in May to Boeing Commercial Airplanes Co., one from United Airlines, the other from American Airlines. But those orders apparently were not recorded in the Commerce Department's preliminary estimate of durable goods.

Excluding transportation, orders increased 0.3 percent. Excluding just aircraft, overall orders increased 0.6 percent.

Cynthia Latta, senior financial economist at Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm, said excluding aircraft and defense, order levels are "not half bad."

"I think what we're seeing is what we want to see, which is continued growth, but maybe some moderation of the pace," she said. Stronger growth would inject inflation pressure into the economy, she said.

Orders in the volatile defense goods category fell 16.6 percent to $8.3 billion, following an increase of 1.9 percent a month earlier.

Excluding defense, orders declined 0.9 percent following a 1.8 percent rise in April.

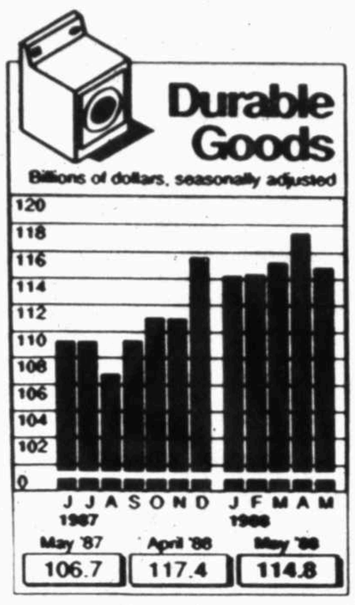
The key category of non-defense capital goods, considered a sign of business expansion plans, fell 6.9 percent last month, following a 3.4 percent rise a month earlier. Despite the setback in May, analysts still expect export-producing manufacturers to spend heavily on modernization and expansion.

Orders for primary metals, such as steel, zoomed 5.5 percent following a 1.6 percent rise in April.

Orders for electrical machinery also posted a strong gain, 3.5 percent, following a 5.0 percent rise a month before.

There was a 2.4 percent decline in orders for non-electrical machinery, more than erasing a 1.2 percent gain in April.

Shipments of durable goods rose 1.5 percent in May to $114.4 billion, following a 0.9 percent decline in April.



Texaco-Saudi deal called dangerous

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texaco's sale of refineries and service stations to Saudi Arabia brings short-term benefits but poses long-term dangers for the domestic energy industry, Democratic Railroad Commission candidate Clint Hackney said Tuesday.

Hackney, now a state representative from Houston, used Thursday's $800 million deal between Texaco Refining and Marketing Inc. and Saudi Refining Inc. as an example of growing foreign investment in U.S. refining, distributing and marketing ventures. He faces incumbent Republican Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance in the November elections.

On the positive side, Hackney said at a Capitol news conference, the sale could help hold down prices at the gas pump and provide job security to Texaco employees worried about the company's financial problems. "We're probably less likely in this nation in the short term to be faced with an embargo since these nations are going to want to supply themselves with their own crude oil," he added.

But such foreign investments pose long-range problems, Hackney warned, because they help the Saudis hold down the price of oil. "If they can keep the price of oil down for a long enough period of time, they will eliminate the American oil producer and the Texas oil and gas producers," he said.

'Luigi' named to Hall of Fame

His 'restaurant that couldn't' turning 30

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Louis Hochman, owner of Luigi's Italian restaurant, laughs when he recalls the advice he received from the Midland Chamber of Commerce president 30 years ago.

"I told him I was going to open an Italian restaurant, and he said 'It'll never work. Midlanders won't go for it.' It upset me so much I didn't join the chamber for three years."

Luckily for Hochman — and Midland — Hochman persevered. The restaurant that "wouldn't work in Midland" became a dining institution.

Hochman not only stopped being mad at the Chamber of Commerce but went on to become a member of the board of directors and a top notch salesman for Midland, as chairman of both the Convention & Visitors' Bureau and the Midland Center board.

He also went on to become a leader in the Texas restaurant industry and this month the industry honored him with a place in the Texas Restaurant Association's Hall of Fame.

The Midland restaurateur became the 46th Texan to be so honored by the association which selects five outstanding industry leaders each year. Others named to the honor this year are Jim L. Peterson, president and chief executive officer of Whataburger; Earl Abel, founder of Earl Abel's Restaurants; H.M. "Bill" Bennett, of Bill Bennett Restaurants and Steakhouse in the Sky; and Guy T. Jones.

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Louis Hochman, owner of Luigi's, says he is proud of the support Midland has given him since he opened his business 30 years ago.

To qualify for the honor, nominees must have been a member of the TRA for at least 15 years, and must be judged by his peers, employees and community members to have superior business ethics and success as a food service operator.

Placement coordinator Kathi Wallis of the Texas Employment Commission helps students like high schooler Sandy Luna find summer jobs.

Students apply themselves to find scarce summer jobs

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The first wave of the annual "student summer job hunt" was fairly successful, as reflected in the May unemployment figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

A portion of the success can be attributed to the summer job placement effort by the TEC and the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission's job training and placement assistance (JTPA) program.

The TEC reported 500 more job seekers in the labor pool during the month, but a like number were added to the work rolls during the same period.

The PBRPC's program, which covers a 17-county region, expects to have placed 1,200 student workers by the end of this week, according to Willie Taylor, director of employment and training services for the commission.

The JTPA is designed to assist economically disadvantaged youths find summer employment. The program uses the poverty guidelines established by the White House Office of Management & Budget in determining eligibility, Taylor said.

Changes in store for McCrory's

By MELLA McEWEN

McEwen

Midland shoppers can expect to see some changes in the local TG&Y-McCrory store at 36 Village Circle in the near future, according to Chuck Goodrich.

Goodrich is on the McCrory's team renovating the chain's stores, and recently returned from a trip to Las Vegas where a prototype McCrory's store was set up.

"Our teams go in and remodel and update the stores and turn them into a series of little shops within the store. It will become a sort of 'mini mall,' he explained. "There'll be a candy shop; a bath shop; shops for what we call our soft lines (clothing, lingerie). We're going with a low profile where the customer can walk in the front door, see what they're looking for and go right to it. It'll be easier and more convenient." He added there are three to four members on a team, which hire local companies to do the renovations, which helps local economies.

He noted that Midland shoppers may already have noticed lower counters and product groupings in the Midland store, which is the initial step in the renovation.

Goodrich is an "assistant Green Beret" for McCrorys, which is owned by Meshulam Riklis. He explained that Riklis is a strong believer in the Green Beret program. "He says we're just like the Green Berets. Whenever the army has a problem, the Green Berets go in and fix it. Whenever the company has a problem, we go in and fix it."

In addition to interior design, Reddy will offer a selection of fabrics and wallpaper for sale, so that customers can come in and browse for decorating ideas.

Office hours are from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

Recently opened in Midland is VENEZIA, an Italian restaurant located at the former Bella Roma location, No. 20 Plaza Shopping Center.

Ralph Garza, general manager, said that the restaurant's menu is northern Italian, which he says is not as heavy as Sicilian fare. "We strive for light sauces, light everything."

Entrees — such as lasagna or chicken parmiagiana — come with pasta, vegetables, and bread. Venezia also offers homemade deserts. In addition, there is a different seafood special every night, he said. The only alcoholic beverages offered are beers and wines.

There is a lunch menu, which contains eight different salads, soups, pastas and a couple of entrees, according to Garza. Patrons can dine inside or outside on the restaurant's patio.

Hours are 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and 5 to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; the restaurant stays open until 11 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, and is closed on Sundays. It is owned by Carmine Scarcelli.

For those curious about the construction taking place in the parking lot of the old Hodge Theater on West Illinois, it is a clinic. The clinic will reportedly house dentists, pediatricians and a pharmacy, and will not result in the demolition of the theater.

MARKETS

New contracts up but lose ground

July contracts for crude oil, which expired, came under immediate pressure when trading began Tuesday and dragged down the rest of market, observers said. August delivery contracts opened trading Wednesday down another 11 cents at $16.24.

A rush of buying in gasoline futures contracts provided some support for an otherwise bearish energy market, as prices recovered late in the day as contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline made strong gains.

Tuesday the July contract for West Texas Intermediate on the New York Mercantile Exchange settled 11 cents lower at $15.89 per barrel. Contracts for delivery in later months generally were higher.

July unleaded gasoline gained 0.52 cent to 49.99 cents a gallon, while home heating oil gained 0.10 cent to 43.28 cents a gallon.

The buying in gasoline was sparked by traders staking positions in advance of the release of new supply figures. Traders believe demand will be high and supplies tight for gasoline during the summer driving season, analysts said.

But analysts said the fundamental tone of the market remained bearish following the lack of new initiatives to contain production by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Dollar pierces 126-yen level

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in early European trading today with the piercing of two significant chart levels spurring on a bullish, moderately active market.

Gold prices were lower.

Foreign exchange dealers said large institutional investors in the Far East were heavy buyers of dollars after the U.S. currency rose above a significant chart level of 126.50 yen.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 1.27 yen to a closing 127.60 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted higher at 128.15 yen.

In London, the dollar edged up against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.7770, compared with $1.7855 on Tuesday.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

— 1.7627 West German marks, up from 1.7548

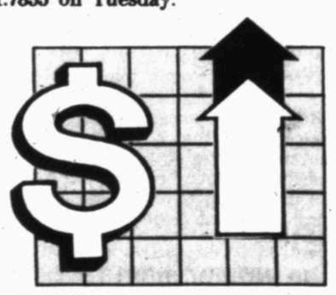
— 1.4645 Swiss francs, up from 1.4623

— 5.9395 French francs, up from 5.9245

— 1.9822 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9755

— 1,307.75 Italian lire, up from 1,304.00

— 1.2075 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2079



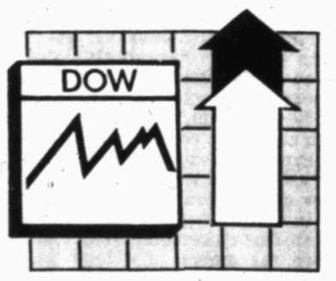
Gold opened in London at a bid price of $449.50 a troy ounce, down from late Tuesday's $451.00. At mid-morning Tuesday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $449.80.

In Zurich, the bid price was $449.95 down from $451.50 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.29 to close at a bid $451.46.

Silver bullion was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.12 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $7.19.

Dow erases 20-point Monday loss



NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices advanced sharply late Tuesday and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average back over the 2,100 level after a see-saw session influenced largely by conflicting signals on inflation and interest rates.

Buying intensified near the close and pushed the key index of 30 industrials 25.24 points higher to 2,109.17, more than erasing the 20.09-point loss of the previous session.

Broader stock indicators also rose, but trading was erratic and mixed through most of the day, reflecting considerable confusion about the market's immediate direction.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9-to-5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 937 issues up, 543 down and 467 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE totaled 155.06 million shares, considerably more than the 116.75 million shares traded Tuesday, one of the slowest days this year.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 180.70 million shares.

The NYSE composite index of all listed issues rose 1.33 to 153.29.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 3.11 to 313.87, and S&P's 500-stock composite index rose 2.73 to 271.67.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.76 to 306.88. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 387.75, up 1.76.

The Wilshire Associates Equity Index, the market value of NYSE, Amex and OTC issues, rose by $22.87 billion or 0.85 percent.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Icahn gone, but not soon to be forgotten

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. may have beaten Carl C. Icahn in a critical proxy battle, but the corporate raider is by no means vanquished.

Icahn is keeping even the most seasoned professionals guessing about just what he will do with his 14.9 percent stake in the oil giant.

After conceding defeat Monday in his quest to win five seats on Texaco's 14-member board, Icahn said through a spokesman that he was weighing his options, which run the gamut from making a hostile tender offer to holding his shares to selling them to a third party.

Senate votes to ground 'golden parachutes'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted to curb the huge bonuses called "golden parachutes" that sometimes are paid to corporate managers ousted after their companies are acquired in hostile takeovers.

The lawmakers on Tuesday inserted the provision into legislation the Senate has been debating since last week that is aimed at limiting hostile takeovers.

The golden parachute amendment is aimed at payments, sometimes amounting to tens of millions of dollars, that can be made to executives who are fired by new corporate owners. The provision would require such bonuses to be approved by a majority vote of shareholders.

Suspect in Pentagon fraud to cooperate

WASHINGTON (AP) — One person implicated through wiretaps in the Pentagon procurement bribery and fraud probe agreed to cooperate with the government and another is on the verge of agreeing, sources familiar with the investigation said.

Also on Tuesday, Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci reassigned six Pentagon officials under scrutiny in the investigation. He ordered that anyone under investigation be moved to new jobs that have nothing to do with procurement.

Under investigation are allegations that defense contractors and consultants, many of them former military men, bribed Pentagon officials for contracting details that could help win contracts.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Bonds' market value, interest move opposite

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a little confused about the values of bonds. As I understand it, bond prices go up when interest rates decline. Does that mean, if I sell all my bonds when prices are up, the dollar amount I receive will be less than it would be if I had sold when prices were down?

Doyle

A. Please don't think I'm picking on you, but you are more than "a little" confused. Think things through and you will realize you get more money by selling your bonds — or anything else you own — when prices are high than you would by selling when prices are low.

You are correct about interest and bond values. Changes in interest rates are the major factor changing the values of "marketable" bonds — those bought and sold in the marketplace — and already "outstanding," meaning they were previously issued and are owned by investors.

Let's say you own a $1,000 face amount bond paying 10 percent interest. You collect $100 annual interest from that bond.

And let's say interest rates in general fall so that newly issued bonds of the same quality and maturity as yours pay 8 percent. Anyone who invests $1,000 in one of those new bonds will get $80 a year interest. That makes your 10 percent bond worth more than the 8 percent bond. The market value of your bond will rise to approximately $1,250.

At that point, your bond will have a "current yield" — $100 annual interest divided by $1,250 market value — of 8 percent. That's the same current yield available on newly issued bonds paying 8 percent interest.

Now, let's say interest rates rise. The market value of your bond will fall, bringing its current yield into line with the interest rate paid on newly issued bonds.

Summed up, the market values of outstanding bonds move in the opposite direction of interest rates. Bond prices go up when interest rates fall. Bond prices go down when interest rates rise.

Q. Do the market prices of tax-free bonds rise and fall in reaction to interest rate changes in the marketplace? Or, does that happen only to taxable bonds? Also, what about taxable and tax-free funds?

A. Interest rate changes affect the prices of all marketable bonds. It makes no difference whether they be municipal bonds paying interest not subject to federal income tax or bonds paying taxable interest, such as corporate or U.S. Treasury securities.

This also applies to mutual funds and closed-end funds holding bonds as investments. The value of every fund's shares goes up and down in line with the market value of the securities it holds.

Q. A banker told me it is safer to buy bonds with short maturities, rather than those with long maturities, just in case I have to sell. Do you agree?

A. Certainly, if you will permit me to change "safer" to "less risky." There is some risk in all marketable securities.

That banker's reasoning is excellent. Bonds due to mature in short periods of time usually are not subject to big price swings, even when interest rates change drastically. That's because they will be paid off at face value upon maturity — unless they go into default.

The market prices of "long" bonds, on the other hand, can jump up or down in reaction to interest rate changes. The owner of a bond due to mature in, say, 25 years can't be certain of getting the bond's face value for a long time. But long-term bonds normally have higher yields than short-term bonds.

Q. The only bonds I have ever owned are U.S. Savings Bonds. Could their values fall as the result of interest rate increases?

A. No, because they are not marketable bonds. When you want cash for a savings bond, you don't sell it. You turn it in to Uncle Sam for redemption.

When you cash a Series E or EE savings bond, you get its redemption value — the price you paid plus accrued interest. When you redeem a Series H or HH savings bond, you receive the bond's face value.

JOBS

The jobs arranged by the JTPA for its clients are minimum wage positions with "public domain entities," such as city, county and state agencies — from school districts and hospitals to the Departments of Human Resources and Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Job duties include clerical, computer operation, painting, library, light construction and general maintenance, Taylor said.

The $2 million of Department of Labor funding the PBRPC received through the state this year is responsible for the largest summer program the agency has ever administered. The monies limited the JTPA to assisting only 1,200 youths, Taylor said, adding that the commission received at least 1,800 applications this year.

Those individuals who do not qualify or were too late for the JTPA jobs are referred to the TEC, he added.

Private sector placements are coordinated through the TEC, according to Phyllis Preston, who is responsible for the Midland office's program.

The summer job market is somewhat tighter than usual this year, she said, although there are some jobs available, mostly in the service field — delivery, maintenance, custodial and fast food jobs.

One factor working against younger summer workers is a greater willingness of adults to hold one or more part-time jobs since the economic downturn of 1986, Preston said.

"Competing with adults for some jobs makes it harder for students, who haven't had a chance to gain work place skills," she added.

Summer job applicants are "pretty realistic about their job expectations," according to TEC youth placement coordinator Kathi Wallis.

The TEC currently has about 200 job seekers registered for jobs and has placed another 50 to 75 applicants, Wallis estimated.

Wallis, a temporary summer worker herself, said she hasn't noticed a significant slowdown in the number of job orders from employers as the summer moves along. Wallis, who graduated from Howard Payne University in Brownwood this spring, hopes to find a job teaching junior high or high school social studies this fall.

Hardest to place are the youngest job hunters, between ages 13 and 15.

"Many companies' insurance won't cover workers under age 16, which makes them unwilling to hire younger students," said Preston.

Not all employers are looking strictly for short-term workers, Preston said. Some are looking for youngsters who will be available for several summers, over holiday vacations or part-time during the school year.

Growing foreign investments will also hurt Texas' attempts to boost the natural gas industry, Hackney charged. "As long as Saudi Arabia can keep pumping in cheap oil, then you're going to displace any markets that we can create for our natural gas," he said.

The sale also poses national security problems, he added. "We could end up being subject to holy wars or international causes that we're either opposed to or not that concerned with," Hackney said.

"I'd hate to think of jet out here at (Austin's) Bergstrom Air Force Base that needs to take off on a mission but can't do so because they can't get the fuel supply."

Ron Harris, director of communications for the Independent Petroleum Association of America, and Julian Martin, executive vice president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, agreed with Hackney's conclusions. "If this succeeds for Texaco and the Saudis," Martin predicted, "the thing will spread."

Hackney also called on Congress to pass a law requiring the disclosure of foreign investments in the U.S. energy industry. "You can't just call the Department of Commerce and find out what nations own what interests in the energy industry in the nation or this state," he said.

"We've got to be able to obtain this type of information before we're going to be able to come up with a direction that we've got to take."

LUIGI

Hochman is quick to credit the TRA with helping him learn how to run his restaurant. He admits that when he moved to Midland from Lubbock to open the restaurant, he knew nothing about the business. Born in Romania, he was still a baby when his family came to the U.S. He was raised in St. Joseph, Mo. "When I was little, I hung around with an Italian family, and the mother was always cooking. I guess I absorbed some of that," he said.

He was a master sergeant in the Army Corps of Engineers, serving in both World War II and the Korean War. After leaving the service, he supervised a chain of stores, then moved to a major department store in Lubbock.

During his last year at the store, the owner was very ill. "It was a traumatic year for me, and when he passed away, I felt I had to leave," he recalled. He had a friend who owned an Italian restaurant and wanted the two of them to start a chain of restaurants, and Hochman agreed.

Hochman, his wife Zelda and their four children moved to Midland, found a location for the restaurant at 403 W. Wall and, on Sept. 2, 1958, opened.

"What I didn't know was Midland was in one of the worst slumps in the oil business," he says. "But when we opened, we were mobbed." He moved the restaurant to its current location at 111 N. Big Spring 17 years ago. He says he's never had a bad year. He has even managed to put all four of his children through college.

He credits his success not only to the TRA and his wife Zelda, but the fact that he's enjoyed his work. "The secret is we've made this restaurant personal. The customers aren't customers, they're friends. Also, not knowing the business turned into an asset rather than a liability, because we could make up some of our own rules."

He's very proud of the fact that many of his employees have been with him a long time. One cook has worked at Luigi's 29 years, and a dishwasher has been there about 20 years. "I have a pension plan, and to qualify you have to be here at least three years. There are now 10 employees in the program."

He's also proud of Midland, and swears that he was named to the Hall of Fame, and was able to hold every office in the TRA because he came from Midland. "There's a spirit here that's inspiring." That is why he has been so active in the TRA and the local community, he says. "I wanted to give back some of what was given to me."

CARIBBEAN-INSPIRED SUMMER DELIGHTS

The Caribbean Islands were discovered by Christopher Columbus, who described them as countries "far surpassing the rest of the world" in their lush beauty and exotic array of flora and fauna.

You can enjoy a touch of this legendary island magic by creating Caribbean-inspired summer-perfect treats. Luscious fruits, fresh seafoods and a dash or two of spice—the staples of Caribbean cuisine—are among the ingredients featured in these tempting recipes.

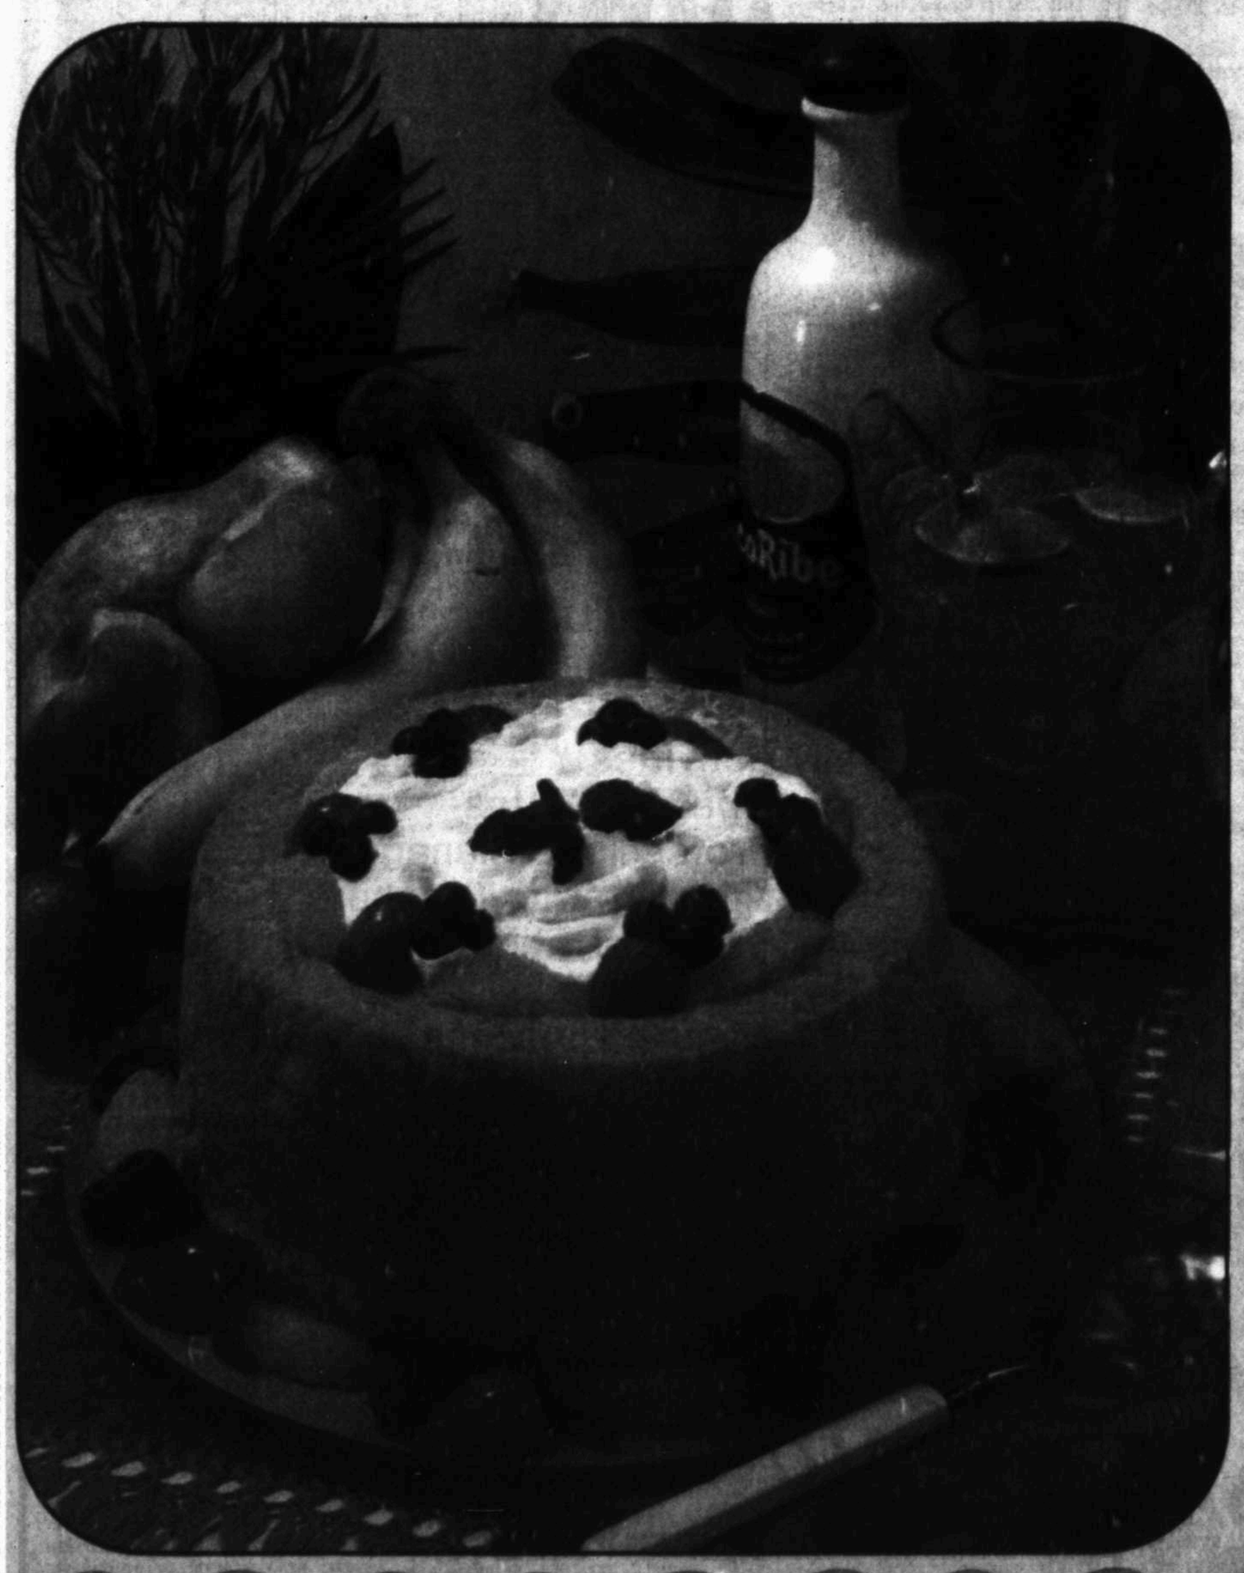
Seafood Salad Montego Bay is the perfect main course to serve on a sultry summer night. This spirited combo of assorted seafoods, pineapple chunks, papaya and bananas features a flavorful dressing prepared with coconut rum, a tantalizing blend of coconut and Virgin Islands rum that conjures up the tropics even in your backyard. Feel free to substitute fruit or seafood at whim—the more colorful the better.

Sweet Pepper Corn Bread is a spicy, colorful sidekick for the Seafood Salad. Flecks of red bell pepper and a dash of Tabasco lend a punch of flavor to this appealing dish.

Of course, no tropical paradise is complete without a cooling rum punch. The CocoJuanita cocktail combines coconut rum, pineapple juice, guava nectar and lime juice. Serve this sunset-pink concoction in a tall, frosty glass with a lime garnish. And be sure to keep a large pitcher on hand for thirsty chaise lounge dwellers.

Luscious summer fruits take center stage in CocoCalypso Cake, the grand finale to this tropical menu. The dessert's spectacular looks belie its ease of preparation: it begins with an angel food cake (prepared from a mix) with a scooped out center, into which is spooned a delightful melange of summer fruits, freshly whipped cream and a coconut rum accent. Garnished with mint leaves and whole berries, CocoCalypso cake is a light, festive way to conclude a meal.

Any of these colorful treats is sure to add a dash of Caribbean flair to your next dinner party.



SEAFOOD SALAD MONTEGO BAY

- 6 cups water
- 1/2 fresh lime, sliced
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 bay leaf
- 8 peppercorns
- 1-1/2 pounds mixed seafood, (shrimp, scallops, whitefish)
- 3/4 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup coconut rum
- 1 teaspoon lime juice
- 1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh ginger
- 1 can (1 pound 4 ounces) pineapple chunks, drained; or 1 small fresh pineapple, cut into chunks
- 1 ripe papaya, peeled, seeded, cubed
- 2 ripe bananas peeled, sliced
- Lettuce leaves
- 1/4 cup chopped scallion

In large saucepan combine water, lime slices, salt, bay leaf and peppercorns; bring to a boil. Add seafood. Reduce heat; simmer 3 to 5 minutes until seafood is cooked through. Drain. Place seafood in large bowl; cover; chill. In small bowl combine mayonnaise, coconut rum, lime juice and ginger; mix well. To seafood, add pineapple, papaya and bananas; pour mayonnaise over all; toss gently. To serve line serving bowl with lettuce leaves; spoon salad over lettuce. Sprinkle with scallions. Yield: 6 servings.

SWEET PEPPER CORN BREAD

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup yellow cornmeal
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 large eggs
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1/4 teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
- 1 cup coarsely chopped red bell pepper

In a large bowl stir together flour, cornmeal, baking powder and salt. In a small bowl lightly beat eggs. Stir in buttermilk, melted butter, honey and Tabasco sauce. Make a "well" in center of dry ingredients; add milk mixture all at once; stir just to combine. Stir in chopped red pepper. Spoon batter into a greased 9-inch square baking pan. Bake in a preheated 400°F. oven 20 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Remove to wire rack. Cool 10 minutes. Cut into squares and remove from pan. Serve warm. Yield: 12 pieces.

COCOJUANITA

- 1 cup coconut rum
- 1 cup pineapple juice
- 1 cup canned guava nectar
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- Fresh lime slices
- Ice cubes

In one-quart pitcher combine all ingredients. Serve in tall glasses. Yield: 6 servings.

COCOCALYPSO CAKE

- 1 box (14.5 ounces) Deluxe Angel Food cake mix or 1 packaged angel food cake
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 3/4 cup coconut rum, divided
- 5 cups mixed fruit (strawberries, orange sections, blueberries, melon balls, sliced peaches)
- Fresh mint for garnish, optional

Prepare cake mix according to package directions. Remove cooled cake from pan; invert onto serving plate. Using a long serrated knife, enlarge the center hole by cutting a circle around top of cake about 1-inch from outer edge. Cut about two-thirds of the way down through cake. Working from cut circle to center hole, lift out wedges of cake; and use wedges to plug center hole so that the cake forms a container. Just before serving, beat cream with 1/3 cup of coconut rum until stiff. Fold another 1/3 cup coconut rum into whipped cream mixture. Sprinkle remaining coconut rum over cake. Reserve 1 cup mixed fruit for garnish, if desired. Gently fold remaining fruit into whipped cream. Spoon cream mixture into center of cake. Garnish with reserved fruit and fresh mint, if desired. Serve immediately. Yield: 12 to 14 servings.

Saturated, non-saturated fat controversy rages on

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

If every step you take toward the meat counter or candy store turns into a guilt trip these days, you may want to re-evaluate your itinerary.

It's not as costly to your health as you might think.

At least not until the next scientific study comes along to accuse your taste buds of a cholesterol-raising conspiracy.

Some of the saturated fat, in the form of stearic acid, that is found in chocolate and beef can actually reduce the damaging low-density lipoprotein cholesterol in our blood, University of Texas researchers reported recently in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Good news, to be sure. Especially on the heels of studies that seem to put red flags and warning signs on our favorite foods faster than we can eat them.

But the findings, welcome as they are, don't absolve fats from playing a significant role in heart disease. The non-damaging stearic fatty acid accounts for about 20 percent of the fat found in meat and 34 percent of the fat in chocolate — hardly enough to give the cholesterol-conscious among us a clean bill of health.

SCIENTISTS AND physicians point out that the palmitic fatty acid in both products does, indeed, elevate blood cholesterol.

"It's dangerous to assume it's OK to eat beef and cocoa-butter products because they're rich in stearic acid," said Dr. Sydney Smith, president of the California chapter of the American Heart Association.

"It's important to recognize this as an early study, a valuable one, in helping us to choose the right type of fats for our diet. Specifically, it (stearic acid) could help in butter substitutes."

Nutrition maven Paul Saltman, on the other hand, views the study as a reaffirmation of the value of beef in our diet.

Said the University of California at San Diego professor and author: "It does as I have tried to do for years: remove the fear that meat is a toxic substance.

"With all this craziness about saturated vs. non-saturated fat and cholesterol in the diet, when push comes to shove, there is one fundamental issue: calories.

"Too many can result in obesity. It comes back to the fundamental difference of freedom and anarchy. Personal responsibility. It gives us the pleasure of eating meat, getting the nutritional value from eating it and at the same time being rational.

"There is no license to eat 2-pound steaks larded with fat. Not because of the kinds of fat but because of the total calories."

And the calories in all forms of fat are, indeed, created equal: nine per gram, as opposed to four per gram for carbohydrates and protein.

Fred Mattson, an adjunct professor of medicine at UCSD who helped discover the fat substitute olestra while a chemist for Procter & Gamble more than a decade ago, said the findings about stearic acid confirmed what scientists had suspected for years.

"THE QUESTION was: How do we make recommendations to the public," said Mattson. "It was so confusing. So most organizations (that issue dietary recommendations and guidelines) said 'no' to (all) saturated fatty acids.

"It's going to be hard to explain even when the whole thing is firmly established. I don't know how it will be handled in nutritional labeling. Before, it was easy enough to say saturated and unsaturated fats. Now it's a question of some saturates are all right and some are bad."

Saturated fat generally is solid at room temperature. Foods high in such fats are red meats and whole milk products such as butter and cheese. Four kinds of vegetable fats also are saturated: coconut oil, palm oil, kernel oil and hydrogenated vegetable oil.

The other basic forms of fat in our diet are monounsaturated (such as olive and canola oil) and polyunsaturated (several vegetable oils).

According to Ron Goor, coordinator of the Coronary Primary Prevention Trial at the National Institutes of Health, saturated fat is the most potent determinant of blood cholesterol levels.

"There has been an intense campaign by the AHA to get cholesterol down, and one of the methods is to reduce the fat content of the American diet from 37 percent to 20 percent," said Smith.

"In order to do that, we must substitute and modify, and this study suggests stearic acid could be incorporated into margarine and other food products to give them more body and taste.

"It would be a mistake, though, to go ahead and eat a lot of beef and chocolate.

ULTIMATELY, SAID Smith, the recognition of stearic acid "may allow a wider choice of foods and diets designed to decrease the cholesterol level."

Smith, in reviewing the study, said both the total cholesterol and LDL cholesterol were lowered in subjects in liquid formula diets.

"Cholesterol fell 21 percent in patients on a diet high in stearic acid," he said.

It is likely, said Smith, that a synthetic form of stearic acid would have to be reviewed by the Food and Drug Administration before it could be incorporated into the American food supply. Two other fat substitutes — olestra and Simplesse — are being evaluated by the FDA.

Simplesse is restricted to use in unheated products such as ice cream and salad dressings, pointed out Mattson. Olestra, on the other hand, could be used in cooking oils and bakery products.

Both — like stearic acid — are said to provide the same taste and consistency as saturated fat.

"But the big question," said Mattson, "remains to be seen. Will they be accepted by the American public, assuming they are approved by the FDA?"

Papaya boats give tropical flavor to supper

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Give a supper salad a tropical twist by using a papaya as the serving bowl. Available all year round, papayas are rich in vitamins A and C. Look for fruits with smooth, unblemished skin. If they're firm, allow them to ripen at room temperature for three to five days or until the fruit yields to gentle pressure.

PAPAYA BOATS

Lettuce
2 tablespoons lime juice
2 tablespoons honey
¼ teaspoon ground coriander
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese, drained
1 (11-ounce) can mandarin orange sections, drained
2 tablespoons slivered almonds, toasted

With sharp knife, cut papayas in half; remove and discard seeds. Peel halves. To make papaya set flat, cut small slice from rounded bottom of each half. Place each half on lettuce-lined plate.

For dressing, in small mixing bowl stir together lime juice, honey and coriander; brush about half the mixture over papaya halves. Spoon ¼ cup cottage cheese into each papaya half. Arrange mandarin orange sections around cheese. Top with almonds and remaining dressing. Makes four servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Large family favors reunions

EDITOR'S NOTE: "What's Cooking" currently is featuring nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks along with some of their members' favorite recipes. This article is the fourth concerning the Midland Surburban Lioness Club.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Mary Adams

Mary Adams, a member of the Suburban Lioness Club for only a year, said her husband Darrell has been a member of the Lion's Club for 28 years. "Darrell was one of the original members of the Terminal Club which met at the airport," Mrs. Adams said.

Although Mrs. Adams, a Midlander "for 30 plus years," said she is not a "joiner," she is no stranger to large gatherings. She may not devote her time to formal club organizations, but she does meticulously plan an annual reunion for all members of the Adams family.

A mother of seven and grandmother of seven, Mrs. Adams has devised a plan to eliminate the dilemma which faces all large families at Christmas time: how to shop for and survive the expenses of buying Christmas gifts for everyone. "Instead of spending all our money on Christmas gifts, we have a family reunion every summer," she said. "It takes the pressure off of everyone at holiday time and we try to do something different every year at the reunion. We recently attended Germanfest in Muenster, where my mother lives."

Although buying Christmas gifts has generally been eliminated, Ms. Adams said the younger children still receive gifts. "We quit buying gifts for family members once they reach the age of about 14. Then the gifts consist of things like paying hotel fees at family reunions," she said.

A family tradition of providing mementoes from each reunion has also evolved. Mrs. Adams has windbreakers, cup holders and other keepsakes sporting the Adams family name and date of the reunion.

Even though Mrs. Adams is accustomed to cooking for more than two ("There is no such thing as cooking a small amount of spaghetti," she said), with all of her children grown, she has modified her cooking habits. She has also changed her cooking methods to be more "healthful" since her husband has to watch his cholesterol level.

"I basically do not bake anymore," Mrs. Adams said. "There is just too many calories for the amount of nutrition you get in baked goods."

Mrs. Adams said she has modified some of her recipes to reduce fat levels."My carrot cake recipe, for example, is very low in fat as it contains only one tablespoon of butter and no eggs or milk. It's a moist and sturdy cake, great for people who have to watch their cholesterol intake. It's also great for breakfast," she said.

Mrs. Adams tries to use whole grains such as brown rice whenever she can, and substitutes brown rice for white rice in rice recipes. Her healthy eating habits also includes using fresh fruit. In one of her creations, Mrs. Adams combines fresh berries, bananas, watermelon, strawberries and grapes served in a hallowed out watermelon cut in the shape of a basket shape, a family favorite.

"I use whatever fresh fruit is available," Mrs. Adams said. She said one of her favorite garnishes is fresh mint, picked from the family's spacious yard.

One recipe which has become a family favorite happened by accident, according to Mrs. Adams. The Camper's Special was created during a camping trip in Big Bend with the Adams' high school and college age children.

"A wild javelina destroyed our cooler which contained our meat. I had to cook ten pounds of ground meat quickly," Mrs. Adams said. She cooked the meat, added onions and ranch style beans, and devised a one-dish meal that she now makes at home on occasion.

The secret ingredient to the Camper's Special is to cook the onions "tender crisp," Mrs. Adams said. "And it isn't necessary to add salt," she said. "Most food has enough salt content, and the palate can be re-educated to accept the taste of food without additional salt. Salt is an acquired taste."

Mrs. Adams said she enjoys experimenting with recipes. "The only problem with working without a recipe is that when you create something wonderful you wish you could remember what all you put it in," she said.

When not working part-time for a veterinarian, Mrs. Adams also enjoys sewing. "I like making fun things not utilitarian items," she said. "I like to make party dresses and I am currently working on dresses for my daughter's friend in Houston, who is planning a wedding."

Mrs. Adams included some of her favorite recipes.

CAMPER'S SPECIAL

Ground meat (three parts ground turkey, 1 part ground meat)
1 onion, coursely chopped
Ranch style beans

Brown meat and onions together in heavy pot. Cook onions until tender crisp. Stir in beans. Heat through. Serve with crackers, chips or tortillas. Top with cheese if desired.

GREEN RICE

¾ cup green onion, thinly sliced, including tops
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 cup rice (uncooked)
½ cup green pepper, minced
¼ cup parsley, minced
2 cups chicken stock
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook onion in salad oil until soft but not brown. Add remaining ingredients. Pour into two-quart baking pan. Cover tightly and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until tender. Toss lightly with a fork before serving.

Variation: Use brown rice and add a small minced jalapeno pepper (no seeds). If brown rice is used, increase liquid to three cups and baking time to 45-50 minutes.

GUACAMOLE

3 ripe avocados
1 fresh tomato
Garlic
Salt
¼ cup fine chopped onion
¼ cup picante sauce
Lemon juice (optional)

Mash avocados until chunky. Add onion and picante sauce. Mix well. Add salt and garlic to taste. Stir in chopped tomatoes. (Add a touch of lemon juice if desired to prevent avocados from darkening). Serve with chips on a bed of lettuce.

FRUITCAKE

1 package (1 pound) pitted dates
4 ounces red candied pineapple
4 ounces green candied pineapple
4 ounces red candied cherries
4 ounces green candied cherries
1 pound shelled Brazil nuts or pecan halves
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla or rum extract

Halve dates and cut pineapple into chunks. Combine with whole cherries and nuts. Sift together dry ingredients. Add to fruits and nuts, coating well. Stir in eggs and vanilla. Pour into two non-stick 8½x4½x2½-inch loaf pans sprayed with non-stick coating. Bake in 325 degree oven for one hour or until done.

CARROT CAKE

In a medium saucepan place:
1⅓ cups sugar
1⅓ cups water
1 cup raisins
1 tablespoon butter
2 large finely grated carrots
1 teaspoon of cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Simmer the ingredients together for five minutes. Then cover and let mixture sit for 12 hours. Then add:
1 cup chopped walnuts
2½ cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
3 teaspoons baking powder

Place mixture in two non-stick loaf pans sprayed with a non-stick cooking spray. Bake at 275 degrees for two hours. Cool and serve.

Nutritious portable snacks suggested

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

Food is an indispensable part of most summer outings, but what you take along will be determined by the mode of transportation. If a car trunk is at your disposal, there are almost no limits; when it is foot power or pedal power that gets you from point A to point B, there are limits. Add taste and good health considerations to the equation, and you're talking about advance planning, especially since the chances of finding healthful snacks at a tiny country store are almost nil.

What you're looking for are refreshing, thirst-quenching, appetizing, noncrushable, healthful snacks that are easy to carry. Drinks are even more important than snacks, since even a quiet walk in the country requires supplying the body with liquids. It may sound like a daunting list of requirements, but it's not.

Start by dividing foods into three categories: calorie-dense foods like trail mix that are intended for the young and the thin, and for endurance outings where sufficient calories and carbohydrates are essential; foods moderately high in calories, like dried fruits, for people who think that what they lose walking or biking they can afford to put back on eating; and low-calorie foods like fruit, perfect for people who want to use the outing to drop a pound or two.

In the calorie-dense department, trail mixes (or granola) come first to mind. Most commercial varieties, however, contain too much oil, even for those who can afford the calories. Better to make your own. The recipe provided here is high in flavor and calories but low in fat. A simplified version would be a mixture of peanuts and raisins. Just make sure the peanuts are unsalted; you'll be thirsty enough from the exercise and won't need added salt in your diet.

Peanut butter and jelly sandwiches on pumpernickel-raisin bread are particularly tasty, highly portable snacks. Use pure peanut butter — the kind without sugar, salt or hydrogenated oils added — and unsweetened apple butter instead of sugary jelly.

Breakfast cereals like bite-size shredded wheat or Cheerios mixed with raisins, dried cherries, pieces of dried apples or apricots are also easy to eat with your fingers. If you want something more elaborate, mix the cereal with a low-fat fruit-flavored yogurt and eat with a plastic spoon.

Those who want something satisfying but low in calories can select from a wide range of fruit. Oranges and apples travel well. Grapes, cherries and bananas do fairly well, too. Others, if properly packed, should pose no problem. Use a plastic container with a tight-fitting lid for berries, chunks of melon or sliced peaches.

Even if you don't eat on your trek, you must drink. Fruit juices, milk and plain water are much more thirst quenching than soft drinks, and just as easy to transport.

Many fruit juices now come in individual cardboard containers complete with straws. If you are in the moderate- to high-calorie division, you can also choose among cranberry juice cocktail and pear, peach and apricot nectars, which have sugar added. Milk, both low-fat white and chocolate flavored, is also available in this aseptic packaging, which does not require refrigeration.

Serious bikers and hikers will tell you, however, that the most thirst-quenching drink is water. If you like it cold, freeze it in pint containers. It will defrost quickly in the sun.

GRANOLA

3 cups rolled oats
1½ cups wheat germ
½ cup dry skim-milk powder
1 cup slivered almonds or roasted unsalted peanuts
½ cup sesame seeds
1 cup hulled sunflower seeds
½ cup polyunsaturated oil
¼ to ⅓ cup honey
1 cup raisins
½ cup dried apricots, cut up

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Toast oats in a shallow pan for 15 minutes.

In a large bowl combine the wheat germ, skim-milk powder, nuts, sesame and sunflower seeds.

Heat oil and honey until just warm.

Combine the oil and honey with the mixture in the bowl. Combine the contents of the bowl with the toasted oats and spread out in shallow pans in a thin layer. Continue toasting, stirring occasionally, for 15 minutes, or until ingredients are toasted.

Spoon into large container; stir in raisins and apricots.

Yield: 10 cups, approximately.

NOTE: This granola will keep for weeks if stored in the refrigerator.

Spicy egg salad served as snack

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Serve this spicy egg mixture over tomato or avocado wedges topped with alfalfa sprouts. Or spoon it into large pita bread rounds that have been halved and lined with lettuce and a slice of boiled ham. Either way, count on 4 servings.

CURRIED EGG SALAD

6 eggs
¼ cup dairy sour cream or plain yogurt
¼ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon sliced green onion
1 teaspoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Place eggs in a large saucepan. Add enough water to cover; bring to boiling. Reduce heat; cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Pour off water. Fill pan with cold water.

When eggs are cool enough to handle, remove shells; chop eggs. In a bowl combine sour cream, olives, green pepper, onion, curry powder and salt. Gently stir in eggs. Cover and chill.

Jambalaya pleases crowd

Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Food mavens, who tend to argue about the right way to cook almost anything, have reached a broad consensus about jambalaya, one of the most famous dishes from Cajun country out south and west of New Orleans.

They agree that there's no single recipe for this munificent dish. Recipes for jambalaya roughly equal the number of cooks who prepare it. Most formulas call for shrimp — but some do away with seafood altogether. Usually the ingredients include tomatoes — but by no means always. Chicken often shows up — but just as often it doesn't.

Every year, the inhabitants of the small town of Gonzales, La., between New Orleans and Baton Rouge, hold a jambalaya festival in which cooks bring out their favorite recipes as they vie for the local championship. Each entry is always at least a little different from all the others.

The experts, such as they are, also have agreed on another point about jambalaya, that the dish is a direct descendant of the classic Spanish rice dish, paella. Some versions show the lineage more strongly than others.

The heritage is plain in our lead recipe. Add a little saffron, the characteristic flavoring of a paella, and you would turn our jambalaya into something very like the Iberian original.

The family resemblance should come as no surprise, because, despite its overlay of Gallic culture, the Louisiana territory was actually under the Spanish flag through most of the colonial period.

In jambalaya, just like paella, rice is braised with a variety of flavoring ingredients. The possibilities are so broad in both cases that the published recipes are little more than idealized versions of what a native cook might set on a table.

Jambalaya and paella often call for a long list of ingredients, each of which contributes to the complex flavor of the finished product. This has an important practical consequence — it's hard to make a little jambalaya. Add a bit of this to some of that, and pretty soon you're looking at a lot of food. That's what makes a big jambalaya a perfect choice for an informal gathering of friends who share a liking for solid, unpretentious food.

Our lead recipe is adapted from perhaps the best of the Cajun-Creolè cookbooks, "The New Orleans Cookbook" by Rima and Richard Collin. It originally appeared in 1975, way ahead of the recent craze for this cuisine, and has recently been reissued by Knopf in paperback format.

The second jambalaya is probably closer to standard issue because it contains both tomatoes and shrimp, widely regarded as typical ingredients although neither is inevitable.

Finally, we end up with a version from the Commander's Palace, among the most famous restaurants in New Orleans.

CHICKEN JAMBALAYA

4 tablespoons cooking oil
4 cups chopped onion (yes, really)
¾ cup chopped green pepper
¾ cup chopped scallions including the green part
1 tablespoon finely minced garlic
3 tablespoons finely minced parsley
⅓ cup chopped ham
1 pound lean pork, cubed
6 smoked sausages, or try the Italian type
3⅓ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
¼ teaspoon cayenne (or more or less)
½ teaspoon chili powder
2 bay leaves, crushed
¼ teaspoon dried thyme
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon dried basil
⅛ teaspoon mace
1½ cups raw long grain white rice
⅔ cups water

Yields 10 to 12 servings.

In large chicken fryer or saute pan, holding 7 to 8 quarts, brown chicken well in cooking oil. Reserve chicken. Leave oil in pan to cook other ingredients.

Add chopped vegetables to same pan along with ham and cubed pork. Reduce heat to medium and "sweat" mixture for 15 minutes, stirring from time to time. Add sausage and seasonings. Cook for 5 minutes more.

Add rice and water. With juices in pan there should be about 3 cups of liquid altogether. Add reserved chicken pieces. With high heat, bring pan to boil, then lower heat and simmer gently for about 30 minutes or until liquid has been absorbed and rice is done.

Serve immediately.

SHRIMP JAMBALAYA

3 cups chicken or fish stock
2 pounds shrimp, shelled and cleaned
Cooking oil
1 onion, chopped
⅔ cloves garlic, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
2 stalks celery, chopped
1 cup chopped ham
2⅓ cups canned Italian plum tomatoes
2 cups long-grain rice, raw
2 teaspoons parsley, chopped
Salt, pepper
Red pepper to taste

Yields 6 servings.

Heat stock to boiling. Poach shrimp until it just turns pink. Reserve shrimp. Set stock aside.

Saute chopped vegetables and ham in large pan filmed with cooking oil. Add tomatoes, reserving juice. Bring to simmer. Add raw rice and coat well with other ingredients. Add hot stock and seasonings. Simmer covered for about 25 minutes or until rice has absorbed liquid. If rice seems too dry add a little of reserved tomato juice. Stir in shrimp and let them heat through, but keep them tender.

COMMANDER'S PALACE JAMBALAYA

1 pound boneless chicken meat, cut into chunks
4 tablespoons cooking oil
½ pound Louisiana andouille sausage or other smoked sausage, cut into chunks
½ pound smoked ham, cut into chunks
12 medium shrimp, shelled and cleaned, cut into chunks
1 medium onion, chopped
2 medium celery stalks, chopped
1 bell pepper, chopped
5 garlic cloves, chopped
1 (28 ounce) can Italian-style peeled tomatoes with juice
1 cup chicken broth
5 bay leaves
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
Red pepper to taste
3 cups converted rice (do not use instant or plain)
Chopped scallion for garnish

In large chicken fryer or other pan large enough to hold all ingredients, saute chicken in cooking oil until lightly brown. Then add sausage and ham and cook for another minute or 2.

Add shrimp and chopped vegetables and cook for another 2 minutes, stirring occasionally. Stir in tomatoes and their juices. Add chicken broth and seasonings. Simmer for 5 minutes.

Stir in converted rice and quickly bring to a boil. Reduce heat to moderate low. Simmer 12 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cover, remove from heat and let stand for 10 minutes, again stirring occasionally, or until the rice is tender.

Summer tastier with flavor of plums

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

The fruits of summer have begun to appear, among them a juicy crop of luscious plums (the season should run through about mid-August).

The fruit sports various hues, ranging from yellow and green to deep black-purple. Cut a plum open and the flesh will appear yellow, red, greenish, or almost any color in between.

Close to 90 percent of U.S. plums are grown under a California sun, mostly in the fertile San Joaquin Valley, and the more than 140 varieties include names like El Dorado, Friar, Laroda, Red Beaut and Santa Rosa (the most popular plum of all).

When shopping, look for firm plums with a tip end that is slightly soft and yields to gentle pressure.

To hasten not-quite-ripe plums to the eating stage, place in a loosely closed paper bag and leave at room temperature for several days. Be sure to check every day, as plums can easily overripen. (If this should happen, use salvageable plums immediately in blender drinks, fruit soups or compotes.)

If you would like to save some fresh summertime plums for later use, be advised that you can freeze them. They won't be good for eating out of hand, but they will be fine for cooking purposes. Just spread plum quarters (discard pits) in a single layer over a cookie sheet so that pieces don't touch. Freeze until firm, then transfer to double-thick plastic bags, twisting tightly to close. These will last several months.

BREAKFAST PLUM FRAPPE

3 fresh, ripe plums, pitted and coarsely chopped (about 1 cup)
3 ice cubes
⅓ cup plain yogurt
2 tablespoons each wheat germ and honey
Dash ground cinnamon
Squeeze fresh lemon juice (optional)

Yields 1 serving.

1¼ cups whole-wheat pastry flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon each salt and ground nutmeg

Exercise important

NEW YORK (AP) — The "middle-age spread" is a myth, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau. It says research shows that the time people devote to aerobic exercise — not their age — determines fat level.

Physiologists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging compared body fat percentage of two groups of men, one in their 20s and the other in their 50s. They found fat levels had nothing to do with age, only with the amount of time the men exercised.

Frittata versatile version of omelet

By MELANIE BARNARD
and BROOKE DOJNY
Copley News Service

A frittata is an open-faced omelet that has its origins in Italy and the other Mediterranean countries. Unlike a French omelet, which is always plain cooked egg wrapped around a filling in the middle, a frittata usually has its additional ingredients mixed in the eggs before they are cooked.

The basic cooking method is simple. The eggs, with their addition of vegetables, cheeses, meats, etc., are cooked unattended, without stirring, in a covered skillet over very low heat on top of the stove until almost set. Then, since there is always the problem of the bottom of the omelet being cooked while the top is still runny, the frittata is finished off by setting it under the broiler for about a minute until the top is set. The whole process takes only a few minutes. The only caution is to be sure to use a heavy pan and very low heat so the eggs don't overcook into a tough, chewy state.

A frittata makes a wonderful quick supper. Possibilities for fillings are limitless, and can be a perfect use for leftovers.

Our two recipes are a Pizza Frittata, which uses ingredients and flavors usually associated with that favorite American food, and a light and delicate Asparagus and Ham Frittata, made with Swiss cheese.

Other possible fillings include sliced cooked potatoes, sauteed bell pepper, leeks or fennel, cooked chicken or sausage, cooked spinach, eggplant or zucchini. Use almost any kind of cheese and any herb. Just follow the basic formula that calls for 3 tablespoons of butter or oil and seven eggs and substitute at will.

Frittatas can be cut into large wedges and served hot for supper, with a large green salad and some crusty bread or rolls. They are also good eaten at room temperature and, cut into small squares, make a lovely summer hors d'oeuvres.

PIZZA FRITTATA

3 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, sliced
7 eggs
1 teaspoon dried oregano
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
4 ounces (1 cup) shredded mozzarella
2 plum tomatoes (about 3 ounces each), cored and thinly sliced lengthwise
4 ounces pepperoni, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes

Preheat broiler.

In 10-inch skillet with broiler-proof handle (preferably cast iron) heat olive oil over medium heat. Saute sliced onions for 3 to 4 minutes, until slightly softened.

In bowl, whisk together eggs, oregano and pepper. Stir in cheese.

Reduce heat under skillet to low. Pour egg mixture over onions and stir gently to combine. Arrange sliced tomatoes over eggs, then scatter pepperoni over tomatoes. Cover skillet and cook frittata over very low heat for 10 to 12 minutes or until eggs are set underneath but still somewhat runny on top.

Sprinkle Parmesan cheese over frittata. Place skillet about 5 inches from broiler element and broil until top is just set and flecked with brown, about 1 minute.

ASPARAGUS AND HAM FRITTATA

8 ounces slender asparagus
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup thinly sliced scallions, including green tops
7 eggs
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
4 ounces (1 cup) grated Swiss cheese
4 ounces (1 cup) diced cooked ham (any type)
2 tablespoons grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
Freshly ground black pepper

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes.

Bring pot of water to boil to cook asparagus. Preheat broiler. Lightly salt water. Break off and discard tough ends of asparagus and cut stems into ½-inch lengths, leaving about 1½ inches of tip. When water is boiling, cook asparagus at rapid boil for 3 minutes. Drain in colander and run under cold water to stop cooking.

Heat butter in 10-inch skillet with broiler-proof handle. Saute the scallions over low heat for 2 minutes.

In mixing bowl, whisk together eggs, mustard, salt and red pepper flakes. Stir in cheese and ham. Pour egg mixture over scallions and stir gently to combine. Scatter cooked and drained asparagus over eggs. Cover and cook frittata over very low heat for 10 to 12 minutes, until eggs are set underneath but still somewhat runny on top.

Sprinkle Romano or Parmesan over top of frittata. Place skillet about 5 inches from broiler element and cook until top is just set and flecked with brown, about 1 minute. Grind black pepper over top before serving.

All-American egg cream available now in U.S.S.R.

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

I met my first egg cream when I was 13 years old, on a visit to the Bronx to see a camping friend. It was love at first slurp. I savored my latest egg cream four weeks ago at 24 Rustaveli Prospect in Tbilisi, the capital of the Soviet Republic of Georgia.

An egg cream in the Soviet Union? Not by that name, and not of the quality provided by practiced hands in New York City: The head of foam, for example, was rather pathetic. But this egg cream (called Lagidze voda or "Lagidze water," after Mitrofan Lagidze, who introduced flavored, fizzy mineral-water drinks to Soviet Georgia) had all the marks of the great summertime treat. What's more, having originated at the turn of the century, it may have been a precursor to what New Yorkers have always considered their own.

The origins of the egg cream are hazy at best. The drink is closely associated with the Jewish immigrants who came to the United States at the turn of the century. Many came from the Ukraine. Some certainly came from Georgia; perhaps one brought the secrets of the egg cream. Tbilisi is the only place in the Soviet Union where I found the drink during a five-city tour last month.

Of the New York egg cream, only this much is known for sure: It contains seltzer, milk and syrup, usually chocolate, sometimes vanilla. It contains neither eggs nor cream. David Fox, president of H. Fox & Co. in Brooklyn, the manufacturers of Fox's U-Bet chocolate flavored syrup, suspects that heavy cream was once an ingredient. Fox, a grandson of the company's founder, also speculates that "at one time they used egg white, which gave it its tremendous head." And its name.

There are not many places, either in New York or in Soviet Georgia, where you can order an egg cream. Fox recommended Triplets Rumanian Restaurant, 11-17 Grand Street (entrance on Avenue of the Americas) or Sammy's Famous Rumanian Restaurant, at 157 Chrystie Street (Delancey Street). In both places, all the fixings are on the table; customers make their own.

In the Soviet Union, buying an egg cream can be a complex task. First you stand in a line to buy a voucher in the amount of the price. Chocolate without cream costs about 12 cents; other flavors are about 8 cents. With cream, add 8 cents.

Then you stand in a longer line to order the item itself. You turn in your voucher and tell the Georgian version of a soda jerk what flavor you want and whether you want it with cream. (In Soviet Georgia, Lagidze's soft drinks are made with flavorings like peach, lemon, coriander and pomegranate, but, as in New York, chocolate is the most popular.)

The flavors and the cream are dispensed from large glass cylinders, which are attached to a central pole and revolve for accessibility.

Here are David Fox's directions for making an egg cream. In addition to the syrup and the milk, you will need seltzer in a pressurized cylinder.

Into an tall, straight-sided 8-ounce glass, spoon one inch of Fox's U-Bet chocolate flavored syrup. Add one inch of whole milk to the glass. Tilt the glass, and spray seltzer off the spoon so that you get a big chocolaty head. Stir and drink.

Summer picnic foods hazardous if handled incorrectly

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mountain parks and waterside beaches beckon Americans by the millions in summer to pack up their lunches and picnic. A seemingly simple meal, however, can pose a hazard if not properly prepared and handled.

Sometimes it seems like the scientists are trying to take the fun out of everything with their warnings. Yet the Department of Health and Human Services reports that as many as one American in six will be the victim of food poisoning in an average year.

And nearly all of these cases are easily preventable with a little common sense, say food safety experts in the government.

To get out that word, the Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture are testing a toll-free hotline for food safety questions this summer.

The test, limited to the states of Florida, Illinois and Massachusetts, will continue through the end of August. Residents of those states can call in with questions at 1-800-426-3758 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. EDT.

Of course, residents of other states have been known to picnic too, and many of their questions may be answered by the Agriculture Department's Meat and Poultry Hotline, which can be reached at 1-800-535-4555.

In general, the common food safety rules apply: Keep hot foods hot and keep cold foods cold. That means hot foods should be stored and served at 140 degrees Fahrenheit or more, cold foods at 45 degrees or lower.

Meantime, here are some suggestions from the USDA:

■ Shop with a plan. Pick up perishable items last so they can be taken home and refrigerated speedily.

■ You can pack non-perishable items the night before the picnic — things like paper plates, plastic utensils, napkins, potato chips and so forth. Bring along extra plastic bags for trash and garbage.

■ Pack the cooler on the day of the picnic. Use plenty of ice and a well-insulated cooler containing only the items that need to be kept cold, such as hot dogs, hamburgers, salads, eggs and the like. Make sure the foods are tightly wrapped.

■ Uncooked hamburgers and other raw foods should be sealed in plastic bags or containers so juices cannot contaminate other items.

■ Scrub vegetables and other items that may be eaten raw to remove parasites and germs as well as any insecticide that may have been sprayed on them.

■ At the picnic, keep the cooler in the shade, keep the lid closed and remove items only when they are needed.

■ Hungry picnickers may urge speedy cooking. If you have chicken, chops or other items that take time to cook, cook them at home in advance and then just reheat on the picnic grill to save time. When reheating, barbecue sauce will keep meats from drying out.

■ Be sure to cook raw meats thoroughly, food-poisoning organisms can sometimes survive a short cooking time.

■ Don't start cooking until people are ready to eat so food won't sit around and wait for them to get hungry. When foods are left standing for two hours or so, bacteria multiply rapidly.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

How you play a hand could be influenced by whom you are playing against. To illustrate this point, cover up the East and West hands and suppose that you are declaring six spades. At your left is one of the best card players in the world, Martin Hoffman of London.

You have reached six spades on a natural and logical auction. North's jumps, including jump support of your suit, have guaranteed a singleton in the unbid suit, so your final bid is only a slight stretch—a doubleton heart and three clubs would have made the slam a laydown. However, North could, and perhaps should, have had the queen of hearts for his powerful bidding.

West leads the queen of clubs, then shifts to the nine of hearts. How do you play the hand?

Left to your own devices, the percentage play in hearts would be to lead to the ten and finesse should West follow with a low card. Has his shift made you change your mind and try for Q-J bare instead?

Think for a moment. If West, who is an excellent defender, is looking at three low hearts, he knows the contract might hinge on a heart finesse; and if that is the case, the slam is doomed to fail. Therefore, he will lead anything other than a heart rather than expose partner's holding in the suit.

The only reason West is leading a heart is that he is trying to talk you out of the winning line. Don't fall for it. Go with the odds and finesse the ten! Then claim when both defenders follow to the first round of trumps.

Judy Garland's ruby slippers sold for $165,000 at Christie's auction

NEW YORK (AP) — A house had to drop on a witch before Dorothy could get the magic ruby slippers, but $165,000 did the trick for a man bidding on the shimmering shoes that Judy Garland wore skipping down the Yellow Brick Road.

The auction room at Christie's East, which seats about 400 people, was standing-room-only Tuesday as a bidding war drove up the price to more than eight times the presale estimate of $15,000 to $20,000.

"When our expert asked him (the anonymous buyer) what he'd do with them, he said, 'Treasure them,'" said Lee Anne Fahey, spokeswoman for Christie's East.

Later in the auction of movie memorabilia and other collectibles, $53,955 was paid for 96 unpublished color slides of a young Marilyn Monroe taken in Los Angeles in 1945 by William Carroll.

The slides were sold in 16 lots, all to anonymous buyers. The most expensive, for $6,380, featured eight color studies of Miss Monroe, seated on a seaside boulder and wearing white suspender shorts and a red and white T-shirt.

Carroll, who owned a film processing laboratory, hired the 19-year-old model, then known as Norma Jean Dougherty, to pose for advertising cards that he displayed on counter tops at photo stores. None of the counter cards are known to remain in existence, Christie's said.

The size 6B "Wizard of Oz" slippers — topped with 2,300 crimson-dyed sequins and soled with orange felt to muffle footsteps on the sound stage — were among seven or eight pairs worn by Miss Garland while filming the 1939 MGM classic. Only five sets are known to exist today. Roberta Jeffries Bauman of Memphis, Tenn., had won this pair in a contest in February 1940 when she was 16.

"They are considered the 'purest' by those who believe in their magic, and are the best known to Oz fanciers, having been in private hands 30 years longer than any other pair," the auction catalog said.

The price, which included a 10 percent commission to Christie's, was a record for any type of shoes sold at auction and for a single movie property, Ms. Fahey said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte, suffering from terminal cancer, has been released from Walter Reed Army Medical Center but is staying in residential quarters on hospital grounds, a spokesman for the Salvadoran Embassy says.

Duarte, one of the United States' closes allies in Latin America, was released from the hospital on Monday and moved to nearby quarters, said Alfredo Milian, El Salvador's deputy ambassador to the United States.

Duarte, who was admitted to Walter Reed on May 31, underwent three hours of cancer surgery on June 7. During the surgery, doctors removed a portion of his stomach but left his cancerous liver alone.

A spokesman for Walter Reed, Peter Esker, said late Tuesday that Duarte, 62, had been released from the hospital because "he's recovered from his abdominal surgery." Esker said he expected Duarte would be "back (in the hospital) in about a week for re-evaluation of his condition."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Cassidy, the squeaky-clean rocker of "Partridge Family" fame, has been sued by a woman who says the actor fathered her 18-month-old daughter and refuses to pay child support.

Model-actress Sherry Williams, 35, says Cassidy, 38, is the father of her daughter Katherine Evelyn Cassidy, according to the paternity suit filed Tuesday in Los Angeles Superior Court. Lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, best known for claiming "palimony" rights for the live-in lovers of Hollywood celebrities, filed the lawsuit.

The complaint seeks to establish paternity and asks for $5,000 a month in child support and medical care.

Cassidy, who is divorced, was in Europe and couldn't be reached for comment, said his manager Melanie Green.

Cassidy was 20 when he starred as the teen heartthrob on "Partridge Family," which also starred his stepmother Shirley Jones. He also turned out several records before returning to acting on stage a decade later.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Joan B. Kroc, widow of the McDonald's fast-food magnate, has donated $1 million to the mayor's campaign to attract a monthlong Soviet Arts festival that the city hopes will boost its cultural reputation.

Mayor Maureen O'Connor, who announced the gift Tuesday at a news conference, is scheduled to leave Friday for the Soviet Union to discuss the proposed 1990 event with Soviet officials and to recruit performers.

"We are well on our way to having a very successful festival, if we can get the Soviet Union's permission and cooperation, which I think we can if we go to the Soviet Union with $1 million in the bank," O'Connor said.

The City Council will formally accept the donation today, which comes in the form of McDonald's stock and will remain in an interest-bearing account until it is spent, City Attorney John Witt said. The event could cost as much as $4 million.

Kroc, widow of Ray Kroc and owner of the San Diego Padres, was out of town Tuesday.

Lakers make it two straight

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The chore has been completed, the challenges met and the chronicles of basketball stamped with their imprint.

The Los Angeles Lakers, fighting and making history at the same time, are still champions of the NBA.

With brilliant play from James Worthy and fierce determination from his teammates, the Lakers survived the Detroit Pistons 108-105 Tuesday night to win their second consecutive title.

The seventh-game triumph made Los Angeles the first repeat champion since the 1969 Boston Celtics, who also clinched that series at the Forum.

They became the first team since the 1978 Washington Bullets to overcome a 3-2 deficit in the finals. And, until Tuesday night, the Lakers had been 0-5 in seventh games of championship series.

Now they have won five titles in this decade and 11 overall.

"We've been a great team over the past eight or nine years," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "I think from now on people are going to refer to us that way."

Detroit's Isiah Thomas did just that after the Lakers claimed their 4-3 victory in the best-of-seven series.

"It's not disappointing," said Thomas, who had 10 points and seven assists in 28 minutes despite a severely sprained right ankle suffered in Game 6.

"We played in the NBA finals," he added. "We lost to a team that's going to go down in history."

In turning back the challenge of the first-time finalist Pistons, who closed a 15-point fourth-quarter deficit to two in just 4½ minutes, the Lakers met the challenge of their coach.

Soon after Los Angeles beat Boston to win last year's championship in six games, Coach Pat Riley said, "I'm going to guarantee everyone we're going to repeat."

Riley started title drive after '87 win

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers' drive for a fifth NBA title this decade started just minutes after winning their fourth.

In the Lakers locker room after they had just beaten the Boston Celtics for the 1987 championship, Coach Pat Riley was asked if they could repeat this year.

"I'm going to guarantee everyone we're going to repeat," he said.

Some of his players were shocked that he would deny them a chance to celebrate one victory before making them think about another.

But because no NBA team had won consecutive titles since 1968-69, Riley believed the two seasons had to be packaged into one goal. To his way of thinking, the Lakers' job was half done — they had to win again to be considered a great team, the team of the 1980s.

Now that they have won again, the Lakers have left no doubt they are that team.

"We had three years experience with not repeating and we know how it feels," said Magic Johnson, referring to the team's failures after winning in 1980, 1982 and 1985. "This year, we decided the way to do that was to go into the season without thinking in terms of defending last year's championship, but winning this year's championship. We set our minds from training camp on winning, not repeating."

The road to the finals, however, wasn't easy despite a league-best 62-20 regular-season record that assured Los Angeles a homecourt advantage in every playoff series.

It was an advantage they would come to need. In their four previous title seasons in the 1980s, the Lakers had lost a total of five games in the playoff rounds preceding the finals. This year alone, they lost six games — three each to Utah and Dallas in seven-game series.

Los Angeles was the only team to sweep its first-round series (3-0 against San Antonio). In fact, the Lakers have never lost a first-round game since the NBA playoffs were expanded to 16 teams five years ago.

But the Jazz and Mavericks were another story, extending the Lakers to seven games in back-to-back series for the first time since 1966.

Led by John Stockton and Karl Malone and with 7-foot-4 center Mark Eaton frustrating 41-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the Jazz upset the Lakers at the Forum in Game 2 and took a 2-1 lead in the series with a victory at Salt Lake City.

Velarde homer not enough in Yankee loss

Associated Press

Everyone was sure the Yankees would win, even the Detroit Tigers.

Even Alan Trammell.

"This was a game we were supposed to lose, it looked like," said Trammell, whose grand slam in the ninth inning gave the Tigers a dramatic 7-6 victory over New York Tuesday night. "I'm just like a little kid. The last thing I expected was to hit a grand slam in the ninth to win the ballgame.

"Heck, I wasn't even expecting an at-bat."

The Yankees had breezed through the first eight innings, knocking out Detroit ace Jack Morris in the second and leading 6-1 behind the strong pitching of reliever Neil Allen and the first major-league home run by former Midland Lee standout Randy Velarde, who had been called up earlier this week.

Velarde was two-for-four in his first major league start at second base for the injury-plagued Yanks.

Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman led off the ninth with a single and when Darrell Evans walked, Allen was replaced by Dave Righetti. After allowing a single to Matt Nokes to load the bases, Righetti appeared to settle down, retiring Pat Sheridan on a fly ball and striking out Tom Brookens.

American

Red Sox 10, Indians 6

Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a homer and three singles and Jim Rice drove in four runs with three hits as Boston won its fourth straight.

The Red Sox' 10 runs on 15 hits gave them 39 runs and 59 hits over their past three games. Greenwell has 10 hits, including four homers and 12 RBI, in the last three games.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 2

Cal Ripken hit an RBI double in the sixth inning and tripled home two runs in the eighth and Oswaldo Peraza earned his first major-league victory for Baltimore.

Angels 5, Twins 4

Chili Davis hit a two-out home run in the top of the 10th inning and California won its sixth straight game.

Davis hit his ninth homer of the season off Minnesota reliever Mark Portugal, 0-1, who allowed only two hits in four innings.

Greg Minton, 2-1, got the win despite allowing a game-tying single by Dan Gladden in the seventh.

Stu Cliburn gave up a leadoff single to Steve Lombardozzi in the bottom of the 10th and Gladden sacrificed him to second. But Bryan Harvey struck out John Moses and got Kirby Puckett to fly out for his sixth save.

Royals 6, White Sox 2

Frank White drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Mark Gubicza won his fifth straight decision as Kansas City snapped a four-game losing streak.

Gubicza, 10-5, became the American League's fifth 10-game winner, allowing eight hits in six innings. Jerry Don Gleaton and Steve Farr finished up.

Chicago's Jerry Reuss, 6-3, had his four-game winning streak snapped.

The Royals took a 1-0 lead in the first when Kurt Stillwell led off with a walk and scored on George Brett's double. The White Sox tied the game in the second on Dan Pasqua's sixth homer but the Royals scored three times in the fourth.

Athletics 4, Brewers 2

Dave Parker hit his third homer in as many games and Curt Young won for the first time in three weeks for Oakland.

Rangers 6, Mariners 0

Paul Kilgus pitched a six-hitter for his third shutout of the season and Jeff Kunkel drove in three runs as Texas defeated handed Seattle its ninth straight loss.

The Mariners have lost 14 straight games on the road, a club record.

McEnroe enjoys new attitude

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The last time John McEnroe came to Wimbledon, he only came to lose.

Three years, one wife, two children and one new attitude later, he has rediscovered the will to win, and has the scent of success in his nostrils.

"It's a totally different set of circumstances," the three-time Wimbledon champion, now 29, said after renewing acquaintances with the Grand Slam tournament Tuesday for the first time since 1985.

"Last time I was here, I was negative. I'd been through five straight finals. My mind wasn't on tennis," he said. "I didn't want it enough, I was looking for a way to lose."

Lose he did, bounced out in the quarterfinals against big-serving Kevin Curren.

This time, losing was the farthest thing from his mind.

"I think I'm on the right road again," McEnroe said after whipping Horst Skoff of Austria 6-1, 7-5, 6-1 in a first-round match. "It feels good to be here."

While McEnroe had a day to absorb his emotional return to the All England Club, three of his biggest rivals for the men's title were slated for second-round action today.

Ivan Lendl, the top seed from Czechoslovakia, was up first on Centre Court, pursuing his quest for a first Wimbledon title against Darren Cahill of Australia.

Pat Cash, the defending champion, was up against Javier Frana of Argentina in the second match on Court No. 1, following a women's match between Zina Garrison and Australian Diane Balestrat.

Boris Becker had to be content with playing on an outside court. Becker, champion in 1985 and 1987, was second on Court No. 2 against Czechoslovakia's Karel Novacek. Next came Chris Evert's second-round match against Wendy Turnbull.

And Steffi Graf, the dynamic West German teen-ager on the third leg of a Grand Slam bid, also was consigned to the outer courts.

Graf was second-up on No. 3 court against Karine Quentrec, a lucky loser.

The rapturous ovation McEnroe received from the packed Court No. 1 crowd in his triumphant return was a testimony to his new image.

Gone were the screaming tantrums and racket-throwing that marked the lowest point of his heyday and earned him a stream of nicknames from the Fleet Street tabloids.

Instead, McEnroe was thoughtful and subdued, scowling and shaking his head only when he made a mess of an easy shot.

Although his reactions were slower than in his prime, especially when trying to cut off passing shots, his touch play and timing baffled the stocky Skoff.

"I've got some good grass-court players ahead of me and it'll be a big test," said McEnroe, seeded eighth even though he's rated No. 19 in the computer rankings. "If I'm on my game, I like my chances. Hopefully the guys I play will pick me up. The more momentum I get, the better chance I'll have."

NCAA meet sparks lively debate

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — An NCAA forum on issues such as the structure of divisions and aid to athletes generated innovative and provocative proposals and left members in the mood for reform, Executive Director Richard Schultz says.

But, he added Tuesday, it's hard to predict what changes are likely in the aftermath of the NCAA Presidents Commission forum.

"When you talk to people about what they would like to see that change or that reform be, you have about as many ideas and concepts as people you have talked to," he said.

About 500 college and university presidents, chancellors and other administrators attended the meeting, which was scheduled to conclude today.

Schultz and commission chairman John B. Slaughter said the forum achieved its goal of generating debate among NCAA members about key issues. Spirited small-group discussions followed speeches recommending changes in NCAA policies.

"We had presented to us ... some truly excellent ideas, some ideas that in many ways are mind-expanding and in some cases very radical and certainly controversial," Slaughter said. "But those are the kinds of things that forums like this should present."

Slaughter predicted that legislation concerning membership structure and financial aid will be proposed at the NCAA's annual convention in January.

Schultz said one area where the forum made progress Tuesday was the subject of financial aid. Some members believe athletes from poor families should receive more aid than current limits permit.

"A lot of the athletic administrators were really finding some things out about need-based aid that they didn't understand before," Schultz said. "There were some financial aid officers at each (small-group discussion) that were willing to take the time and say ... 'You can really get what you want for the needy students by doing it this way. We're doing it for our other students.'"

Michigan State economics professor Cecil Mackey said the NCAA should increase compensation for athletes because they face more restrictions than students who excel in other extra-curricular activities.

Among Mackey's recommendations were that athletes receive modest monthly cash payments and that trust funds be established to pay athletes for endorsements and personal appearances.

EP Diablos use clutch hits in win

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

When the chips are down, it looks like the El Paso Diablos are the team to beat.

Tuesday night at Angel Stadium, the Diablos defeated the Midland Angels 4-3.

It may look like a simple one-run game, but it wasn't — all four of El Paso's runs were scored with two outs.

After opening the second half of the Texas League season in good fashion with a 2-0 record, the Angels have crawled back down to the .500 level following two straight losses to the Devils.

Midland manager Max Oliveras was noticeably upset after the loss.

"We couldn't hit with men on base," Oliveras harrumphed. "We couldn't make contact with the ball. When you do what they did, you're going to win.

"I guarantee you you'll win 80 percent of the time if you can score with two out."

Despite the Angels' early 1-0 lead in the third, El Paso recaptured the lead three times to claim the victory.

Diablo first baseman George Canale who, with his league leading 100th strikeout Tuesday night, was also responsible for the game winning RBI in the sixth.

CANALE, WHO finished 2-for-3 with two RBI and one run, accounted for 75 percent of the Diablos' run production.

In the sixth, El Paso's Freddie Williams reached on a walk and went to second on Gary Sheffield's single. At second, Williams came home on Canale's single for the Diablos' fourth, and game winning, run.

'Missing link' McReynolds comes through for Mets

Associated Press

In the New York Mets' chain of success this season, Kevin McReynolds has been missing a link.

Until Tuesday night.

McReynolds, struggling in clutch situations throughout the year, hit a grand slam and tied a career-high by driving in five runs as the Mets routed the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-0.

"It's been very frustrating," McReynolds said of his slump. "I've been anxious. I'm swinging at bad pitches. That's why I've failed."

McReynolds, a consistent run producer during his career, was batting only .240 with runners in scoring position entering the game. He had come up 14 times with a runner on third base and less than two outs, but gotten only four of them home.

The National League East-leading Mets dropped second-place Pittsburgh to 6½ games behind. The teams concluded their three-game series at Shea Stadium this afternoon.

Ron Darling, who scattered seven singles for his third shutout this season, and Pittsburgh's Doug Drabek were locked in a scoreless game until the sixth.

Len Dykstra led off with a single and Wally Backman followed with a bunt single. A fly out sent Dykstra to third, and the Pirates elected to intentionally walk Darryl Strawberry to load the bases.

"We weren't going to let Strawberry beat us," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "It was not a show of disrespect to McReynolds, only respect to Strawberry."

Agreed McReynolds: "If I were Leyland, I would have done the same thing."

In his previous at-bat, McReynolds came up with runners on second and third and hit a grounder that resulted in an out at the plate. But this time, McReynolds foiled the strategy by lining a full-count fastball into the left-field bullpen for his second career grand slam.

"Drabek's got a great curveball, but he didn't throw me one all night," McReynolds said. "So that was one pitch I wasn't looking for. If he had thrown me a curve, he would have caught me looking at a third strike."

McReynolds fouled off two pitches with the count 3-2.

"I didn't want to walk him, but I also didn't want to lay it up there," Drabek said. "I went with a pitch I had gotten him out with before. Only this time it never went down."

McReynolds followed his eighth home run with an RBI single during a five-run eighth. Earlier, he made a perfect throw from left field that nailed a runner at the plate.

"This game took a lot of pain out of the season," McReynolds said.

Darling, 8-4, walked none and struck out three. He lowered his earnedrun average to 2.60 and also hit his first major league triple.

"McReynolds is an important man on our club," Darling said. "When he's hitting, our whole lineup gets stronger."

Andy Van Slyke went 1-for-4 for the Pirates, but failed to drive in a run for the first time in 12 games. He fell one short of Paul Waner's team record for consecutive games with an RBI, set in 1927.

US cagers nip French

PARIS (AP) — The last time a United States national basketball team played in Paris, it lost to a French squad. It was a bit humbling, especially since that American team went on less than a month later to win the World Basketball Championship in Spain in 1986.

The Americans — a U.S. Select team — returned to Paris with some players from that team and handed a 100-82 beating to a similar French squad to win their fourth straight game on their current European tour.

David Robinson, the 7-foot center from Navy, and Steve Kerr, the 6-foot-1 guard from Arizona, were members of the team in 1986. They remember how they arrived in Paris and were playing less than 24 hours later in a stuffy gym, meeting a determined French squad that beat the Americans by 15 points.

But the Americans came to France this time after three games in Finland ad a week of getting acclimated to European time and playing conditions.

Dyron Nix, a forward from the University of Tennessee, remembers the 1986 loss — and he wasn't even there.

"We came here to play a basketball game. We had been beaten by them in Paris so we didn't get too carried away with trying to see Paris," Nix said.

Nix knew that there will be time for sightseeing later. He scored 17 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to pace the victory Tuesday.

The Select team is on a six-game, four-city European swing which will determine additional finalists for the U.S. Olympic team. The final camp begins July 17 at Georgetown and 16 players have already been assured they'll be there — including Robinson and Central Michigan's Dan Majerle, who are on the Select roster.

Robinson is on the team to get back into peak playing shape after being inactive from high-level competition. He was the college player of the year in 1986-87.

Majerle is on for another reason, according to George Raveling, who is coaching the squad in Europe and will be an assistant to U.S. Olympic coach John Thompson.
