Allen says no word on replacement from Reagan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — White House national security affairs adviser Richard V. Allen said Friday that he has not been told that President Reagan is about to replace him with Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark "or anyone else," nor was he ever consulted about the president's reported decision to upgrade the post.

Allen, who has been on administrative leave from his job, made his comments after The Washington Post reported Friday that the president had decided to elevate the job of national security adviser and was expected to ask Clark to replace Allen in that post.

Clark's move to the White House job awaits a final decision by Reagan on whether to retain Allen, who has been cleared of any illegalities by the Justice Department. But Allen still awaits a White House counsel's review of whether White House codes of conduct were violated in his contacts with former Japanese business associates and by his listing of incorrect dates on his financial disclosure forms.

One administration source said Friday that Allen had been told unofficially that the president plans to replace him with Clark. But Allen said in a telephone interview this was "categorically not so."

"I HAVE NEVER been told that I was being replaced by Clark or anyone else," Allen said. "The first time I heard of this was by reading The Washington Post on New Year's Day. Since that was my birthday, it was the first of my birthday gifts for the day."

He said he has spoken with a number of presidential aides in the last couple of weeks, but not with Reagan. And he expressed the belief that he will return to his White House job soon. "One of my beliefs is that President Reagan is a fair and just man," Allen said.

Allen said he was not consulted about the study of the National Security Council staff operations recently completed by presidential counselor Edwin Meese III. Meese recommended to Reagan that the job be elevated so that the adviser reports directly to Reagan rather than through Meese, as Allen has done. "The idea, of course, makes sense," Allen said.

In Palm Springs, Calif., White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes Friday said only that Reagan has before him several recommendations prepared by Meese for revamping the national security machinery, but he added that no decisions have been made.

Other officials confirmed that Reagan is likely to decide on the new structure for the job within a week and that the aim is to give the national security adviser greater authority and direct, daily access to the president.

ALLEN HAS BEEN on paid leave pending the outcome of a White House review of his conduct in receiving a $1,000 honorarium intended for Nancy Reagan and accepting three watches from Japanese friends. Allen says the money was put in an office safe and forgotten about for eight months.

From the start of the Reagan administration, Allen has maintained a low profile in keeping with the desire of Reagan and Meese to avoid the power struggles that developed in earlier administrations between national security advisers and secretaries of state.

Allen has continually said he expects to resume his White House post, but White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver have argued that he should be replaced because his conduct has damaged the president.

Speakes said the object of changing the national security structure now would be to improve "communication and coordination."

Reagan Friday continued his vacation, staying inside on a rare rainy day in Palm Springs.

New Year's brings babies, football games

By ELLEN NIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

The first day of 1982 began with a New Year's baby's baby, followed with parades and wrapped up with football, and the weather threw in an unwelcome twist.

New Year's Day was a day in millions of homes when television was the centerpiece, what with almost uninterrupted parade pageantry and gridiron combat. And it was a day when hundreds of thousands wished they'd slept more and drunk less.

For Kevin Fish, it was his 32nd birthday, and he also became a father for the first time. His wife, Donna, gave birth in Falls Church, Va., to their red-haired daughter, 10-pound, 10-ounce Erin Lynn, at one second after midnight.

In New York City at about that time, a giant apple made of red lights and sporting a green stem completed its downward slide to mark the beginning of 1982 in Times Square as 150,000 people watched and cheered.

An electronic billboard flashed the words to Auld Lang Syne for the uninitiated or forgetful. Police reported 14 arrests for disorderly conduct, robbery and assault.

BY MIDMORNING, A few straggling revelers were still headed home. But for most Americans, the business of the day was beginning: parades and football on TV.

Only an estimated 300,000 fans turned out for the start of the Rose Parade because of rainy weather, and the stalwarts were drenched by showers just before the floats and bands passed by. Officials had expected about 1.4 million people at the 83rd annual event preceding the Rose Bowl football classic in Pasadena, Calif.

Skies cleared as actor James Stewart led the way in a 1932 Packard, and an estimated 1 million people eventually showed up to watch the 60 flower-covered floats, 22 bands, 230 horses, 14 elephants and countless marchers.

"We have a final crowd estimate — a million and 42. That's official," said police spokesman Rocky McAllister.

oo were troubled by the weather. The 62nd annual Mummers Parade was postponed until Saturday because of rain in Philadelphia. And Thursday, Atlanta's Peach Bowl Parade was called off because of cold weather. Six girls suffered hypothermia.

BUT IN MIAMI, there were no weather problems for the 48th annual King Orange Jamboree Parade, and police estimated some 350,000 spectators turned out.

"In Nicaragua, parades are military marches with political motives," said Carlos Belasques, a visitor to the Thursday night parade. "This is for fun."

Midland's first New Year's baby

Gavin Tye Walker, the first New Year's baby born in Midland, receives a warm welcome from his mother and numerous prizes from Midland merchants in the first baby of the year contest. Born at 1:17 a.m. Friday in Midland Memorial Hospital, Gavin weighed seven pounds and was 20 1/4 inches long. Parents of the baby boy are Tim and Kristy Walker, 4610 Comanche Drive.

Corruption lead to overthrow in Ghana

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — When Ghana gained independence from Britain 24 years ago it was the world's leading exporter of cocoa and had a booming economy. Since then smuggling, "verandah boys," "dash" and "kalabule" have left the economy in ruins.

In one way or another, all those Ghanaian slang words mean one thing — corruption. And that was what former air force Lt. Jerry J. Rawlings said led him to overthrow the civilian government of President Hilla Limann on Thursday. It was the fifth military coup since independence.

RAWLINGS IS CONCERNED not so much by the small-time bribe or "dash" that is the daily lubricant of Ghanaian life, but by large-scale corruption involved in the awarding of government contracts, kickbacks for import licenses, payoffs for passports and the abuse of government offices for personal gain.

The 34-year-old Rawlings has tried to root out corruption before. In June, 1979, he overthrew the military government of Lt. Gen. Frederick Akuffo. One of his first acts was to blow up the central Makola market in the capital city of Accra, home of black market trade — "kalabule."

Then Rawlings executed six high-ranking military officers, including former national leaders, for alleged corruption.

But despite immense popularity across the country for his intentions, Rawlings stepped aside to allow Limann to assume office in September 1979 after free elections.

At the time Rawlings said he thought it was the role of a civilian government to turn the West African country of 11 million people around. But in a broadcast Thursday to the nation, Rawlings said the past two years of Limann's government had only intensified "corruption and repression," though observers say Limann himself is considered honest.

RAWLINGS HAS NOT yet made public how he plans to deal with corruption this time.

In the two and a half years of Limann's administration, daily newspapers have been filled with charges by political parties over irregularities in government purchasing and marketing boards, in the national airlines and just about every other aspect of public life.

Parliamentary commissions were formed every month to investigate the allegations, but nothing ever seemed to come of their efforts.

The charges included claims that several members of the ruling People's National Party had arranged a deal to print the Ghanaian currency in Britain for a "commission" of about $5 million.

There are weekly reports of hundreds of sacks of rice imported by the government or sent as foreign aid disappearing from ports, only to turn up later in black market shops.

IT IS UNOFFICIALLY estimated that more than 75 percent of the drugs imported in Ghana for public hospitals are siphoned off to black market dealers while still in the port.

Political analysts say the corruption began soon after Ghana gained independence from Britain in 1947 when various political factions sought to build up support not accused of personal corruption, he was criticized for using government jobs and influence to create a group of followers loyal only to him.

These followers, many of whom came from nowhere to gain great wealth and influence, were known as "verandah boys." Critics said they had been lounging around on the verandahs in front of shops waiting for someone like Nkrumah to come along.

There is little private industry in the country and it is estimated that at least three-fourths of all salaried workers in Ghana are on the public payroll.

Guardian Angel death called 'cold-blooded'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The county prosecutor on Friday took over the investigation of the shooting death of a Guardian Angels squad leader by a policeman in what has been called a "cold-blooded" killing.

Meanwhile, WNBC-TV in New York reported that an autopsy of the victim appeared to validate the Guardian Angels' account of the killing and contradict the police version.

"The public has a right to be confident that the investigation being conducted by a law enforcement agency is credible," Police Director Hubert Williams said in announcing that Essex County Prosecutor George Schneider had taken over the probe.

"This police department has a reputation of credibility ... but the atmosphere has been charged," Williams said.

Frank Melvin, 26, a patrol leader of the anti-crime group, was killed by a policeman Wednesday night. Police said the fatal shot was fired from a rooftop by Officer Milton Medina's gun, but Guardian Angels founder Curtis Sitwa charged Medina is a scapegoat, and the gunshots actually were fired by another officer at street level.

"The rap is being taken by officer Medina who happened to be a friend of Frank Melvin," Sitwa said Friday after police released ballistics test results that the fatal shots were fired from Medina's revolver.

WNBC quoted Newark Medical Examiner Dr. Thomas Santoro as saying his findings concluded the slug did not travel at an angle, as it would have if it were fired from the roof, but went on a horizontal plane straight through Melvin's body.

Special privileges announced for Polish workers

By The Associated Press

Special privileges will be granted more than 2 million Polish workers — from chemical industry workers to teachers — who perform dangerous tasks or hold jobs that are mentally and physically taxing, the official PAP news agency reported Friday.

The agency quoted a Council of Ministers decree as saying special privileges would be accorded to those "who perform tasks hazardous to health, work in conditions causing rapid physical exhaustion, run a high degree of occupational risks and do work requiring special physical and mental efficiency."

The agency dispatch, received in London, made no connection between the new privileges and the government's attempt to strengthen Poland's shaky economy, which has been further bruised by protests and strikes since the imposition of martial law nearly three weeks ago.

The report said those who qualify for special privileges include: teachers; truck, bus, tram and trolley drivers; workers in lignite mines and in aluminium and cadmium processing plants; all chemical industry workers who come into contact with toxic substances; light industry workers employed in asbestos processing, and printing industry workers exposed to the effect of lead and other harmful substances.

Also included are radio-telegraph operators, telephone and telex operators, other communications workers, lake and river fishermen, and workers in slaughterhouses and meat processing plants.

PAP SAID WORKERS falling into those categories will qualify for retirement at age 60 for men and 55 for women. Their disability pensions also will be increased by 5 percent, the agency added.

In other official reports Friday, Warsaw Radio said Poland's former radio and television chief will stand trial next week on corruption and mismanagement charges filed during a drive to call to account those people deemed responsible for the nation's economic and social crisis.

Maciej Szczepanski, a close associate of ousted Communist Party chief

Edward Gierek, will go on trial Tuesday with other, unidentified defendants at Warsaw Provincial Court, the radio said.

The broadcast said the investigation "lasted several months."

Specific charges against Szczepanski were not disclosed.

Szczepanski lost his job following labor unrest in the summer of 1980, when the independent labor federation Solidarity was formed and Gierek was brought down.

Normal communications from Poland were cut when the crackdown began and censorship was imposed. Western news agencies have been restricted, and most independent reports are assembled from travelers, exiles, diplomats and other sources.

POPE JOHN PAUL II, in a New Year's message Friday, prayed for an end to martial law in his homeland, telling his countrymen in a speech from St. Peter's Square, "May the Lord save you from violence, from the state of war and siege."

He also said "workers have a right to institute independent unions."

Warsaw Radio, in an unusually short report of the pope's message marking World Peace Day, said the pontiff had "thanked those who prayed for Poland." It did not mention his defense of Solidarity and workers' right to organize.

A fugitive Solidarity leader urged Polish martial law troops to defy orders and told families of thousands of internees that their suffering would give birth to a Poland "without constant fear," according to uncensored reports reaching the West.

Zbigniew Bujak, head of the Warsaw chapter of the now-suspended Solidarity union, told Polish soldiers to "listen to the voice of their conscience before that of their orders. I hope you all remember that first you are human beings and Poles and only second the executors of orders."

"I WISH THE TIME will come when you will not be used against your own society, when instead of being tools in the hands of the criminal authorities waging a war against the nation, you will become its real defenders."

Bujak's message, received in the West through uncensored reports Thursday, was described as a New Year's greeting to Solidarity members and "to all our friends in Poland and abroad."

Writing to families of those detained in the crackdown, he was quoted as saying "that out of your suffering will come a Poland without prisons and internment camps, a Poland without police roundups and without constant fear."

Bujak, 27, a former paratrooper described as a possible successor to Lech Walesa as head of Solidarity, predicted "the final victory will be on the side of Solidarity, on the side of the nation."

Bujak, the senior Solidarity leader still at large in Poland, said the independent union was still able to function because of defiant members.

WALESA REPORTEDLY was arrested by the military authorities hours after the declaration of martial law Dec. 13. Reports earlier this week said he had agreed to negotiate with the government but there was no confirmation the talks ever took place.

Cuts in budget may endanger East St. Louis

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — Nearly half the 55,000 residents of East St. Louis get public aid, and over 50 percent of the city's budget is federally funded. Now officials fear Reagan budget cuts may deliver a knockout blow.

At risk are projects aimed at turning around the fortunes of southern Illinois' largest city, where vacant lots and ramshackle buildings are a sharp contrast to the skyscrapers of thriving St. Louis just across the Mississippi.

These days, an estimated quarter of East St. Louis' population is out of work. There is no chain grocery store or daily newspaper, and store closings have reduced the business district to two blocks around City Hall. Of three movie theaters, one is in business — with X-rated films.

Already, federal cuts have reduced or wiped out benefits to hundreds of recipients, says Bill Kreeb, coordinator of a budget cut task force appointed by Mayor Carl Officer.

And about 1,200 people had their heat cut off as winter closed in because welfare payments already were inadequate and they couldn't pay bills, he said.

The federal government now provides $3.9 million in Community Block Grants to East St. Louis, more than half its $6.9 million budget. The school system, one of the poorest in the state, is the city's largest employer.

The $3.9 million will be cut by 12 percent under the new federal budget. The money goes to repair streets and sidewalks and to rehabilitate housing, 81 percent of which is rated substandard or deteriorated.

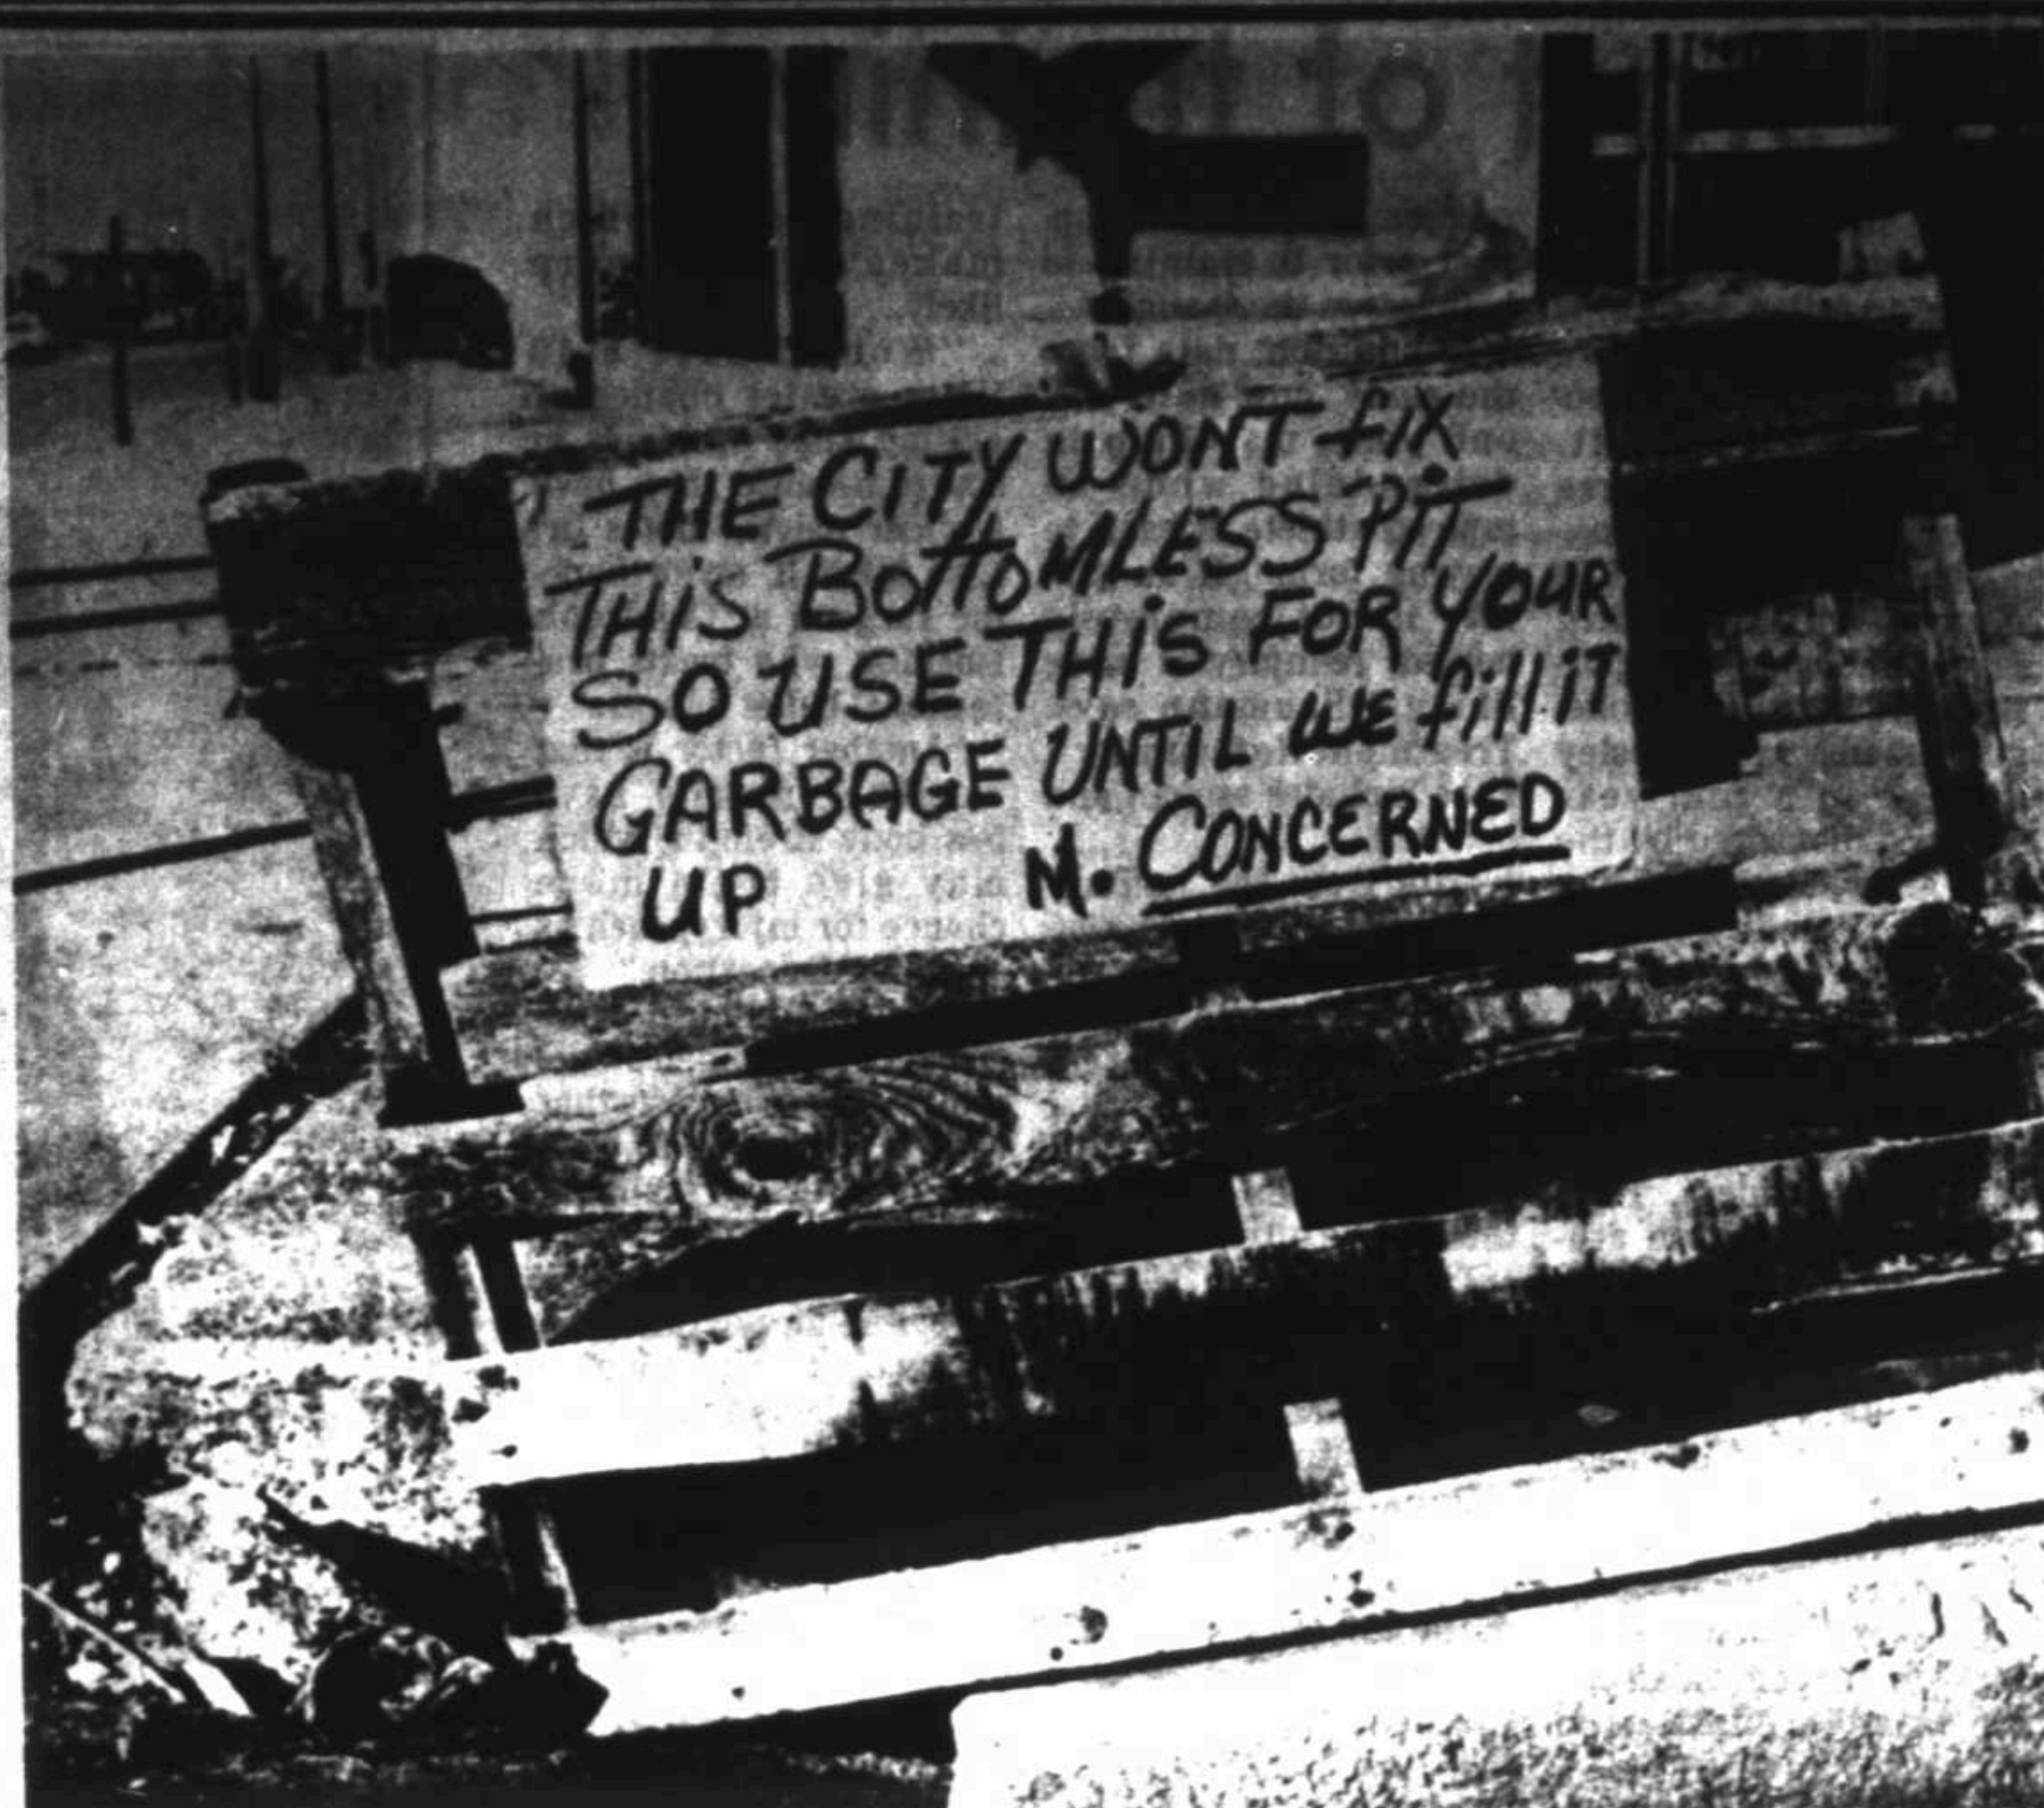

THE POLICE AND FIRE departments, meanwhile, depend heavily on the shaky future of federal revenue sharing.

The city is trying to shore up its coffers, suing 8,000 residents for $3.3 million in overdue sewage and trash collection services.

"The effect (of federal cuts) has been catastrophic," says state Rep. Wyvetter Young.

A century ago, the conditions couldn't have been predicted.

The city was settled because of its river location, and railroads later made it the nation's second-largest switching yard behind Chicago. The meat-packing industry followed.

AP Laserphoto

Potholes dot the streets of downtown East St. Louis, plagued by a swiftly diminishing tax base. City officials now fear that federal budget cuts could be a knockout blow to the city.

But there were drawbacks. With commerce booming, a corrupt political machine took over. Prostitution flourished in "The Valley." Chicago gangsters took control of taverns and vending machines.

And in 1917, the city was the site of the nation's first major race riot. Nine whites and dozens of blacks — official estimates ranged up to 100 — were killed in fighting attributed to poor working conditions and World War I tensions.

The real decline began around World War II as trucks took over the transportation business. The railroads stayed, but the meat packing industry departed.

A third of East St. Louis' residents have left in the past two decades, and the population is now 90 percent black.

The political machine retained power by diverting federal funds to a padded work force. City property values declined from $161 million in 1970 to $38 million this June as industry fled.

In 1972, Mayor James E. Williams called a railway explosion which destroyed 2,500 abandoned homes a "shot in the arm" because the city wouldn't have to tear them down.

Mayor Officer, elected in 1978, is credited with wiping out corruption. "The city of East St. Louis has been living on federal welfare for the past 10 years," he said in paring the work force from 549 to 300.

Hyatt settlements now total $15.1 million

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)

Attorneys involved in lawsuits stemming from the July 17 Hyatt Regency Hotel disaster say $15.1 million has been paid in out-of-court settlements.

Over 140 lawsuits seeking at least $3 billion were filed after two skywalks collapsed in the hotel's crowded lobby during a "tea dance," killing 113 people and injuring about 200 others.

Of the 74 out-of-court settlements reached so far, 28 were the result of lawsuits originally totaling more than $320 million, lawyers said Thursday.

Michael E. Waldeck and Lawrence M. Berkowitz, attorneys representing insurers for the Hyatt Corp., the Crown Center Redevelopment Corp. and Hallmark Cards Inc., said in a statement that settlements have been "proceeding vigorously."

They said negotiations were continuing with another 25 victims or their families.

Waldeck and Berkowitz attributed a recent surge in settlements to "a general recognition by some of the claimants and the insurer that the time is right to attempt to put the lawsuits behind them."

The suits were filed in Jackson County Circuit Court and U.S. District Court. The federal court has considered consolidating the cases under one class-action lawsuit, another factor which may have helped speed up some of the settlements, the lawyers said.

Runner's knee occurs at start of training

But four days into her training, the shock to her knees has become so painful that she can hardly walk.

The reason: "runner's knee" or chondromalacia.

This condition frequently occurs at the start of training and includes aching or soreness under the knee cap. Symptoms are often aggravated by running uphill or climbing stairs.

"In most cases, it's due to abnormal mechanics of the lower leg," says Bill

Squires, a trainer who is a member of the U.S. Olympic Development Committee.

Chondromalacia appears twice as often in women as in men. It comprises nearly 28 percent of women's athletic complaints.

The condition occurs when the knee is flexed and extended. The knee cap glides up and down in the groove between the rounded edges of the thigh bone, causing cartilage to become rough.

In recent years with an increased emphasis on running, doctors have found that by physically measuring what is called the quadriceps or Q-angle, they may be able to predict the problem. The Q-angle is formed by the intersection of the lines drawn from the pelvic hipbone and the center of the bony projection just below the knee to the center of the kneecap.

A Q-angle of more than 15 degrees, which may occur in athletes who have a wide pelvis, knock knees or fallen arches, is believed to be a possible indicator that chondromalacia may result. Women typically have wider pelvises than men.

The Q-angle is one of 38 measurements being taken among women participants in 10 intercollegiate teams at Wellesley College in a four-year study co-sponsored by the U.S. Army. Measurements include flexibility, muscle strength, body fat and anatomical structure.

The plan is to test about 300 women athletes and then develop norms for each measurement. Then by looking at those athletes who either exceed or fall short of the norm and injury complaint records, researchers may determine which musculoskeletal factors show up most often with certain kinds of injuries.

One preventive measure for chondromalacia, for example, might be to recommend an arch support prior to training to help lessen the Q-angle.

In addition, data from the study, now in its second year, may help in determining when an injured athlete is back in playing form. "If an athlete is not completely healed, re-injury is more likely," Baumann says. Treatment for runner's knee includes aspirin and bed rest.

Data from the military and inter-collegiate athletics show that women athletes get the same injuries as men — mostly stress fractures of the foot and lower leg — but that women seem to suffer them more often.

They occur in 10 percent of women as opposed to only 1 percent of men and equal a third of all women's athletic injuries.

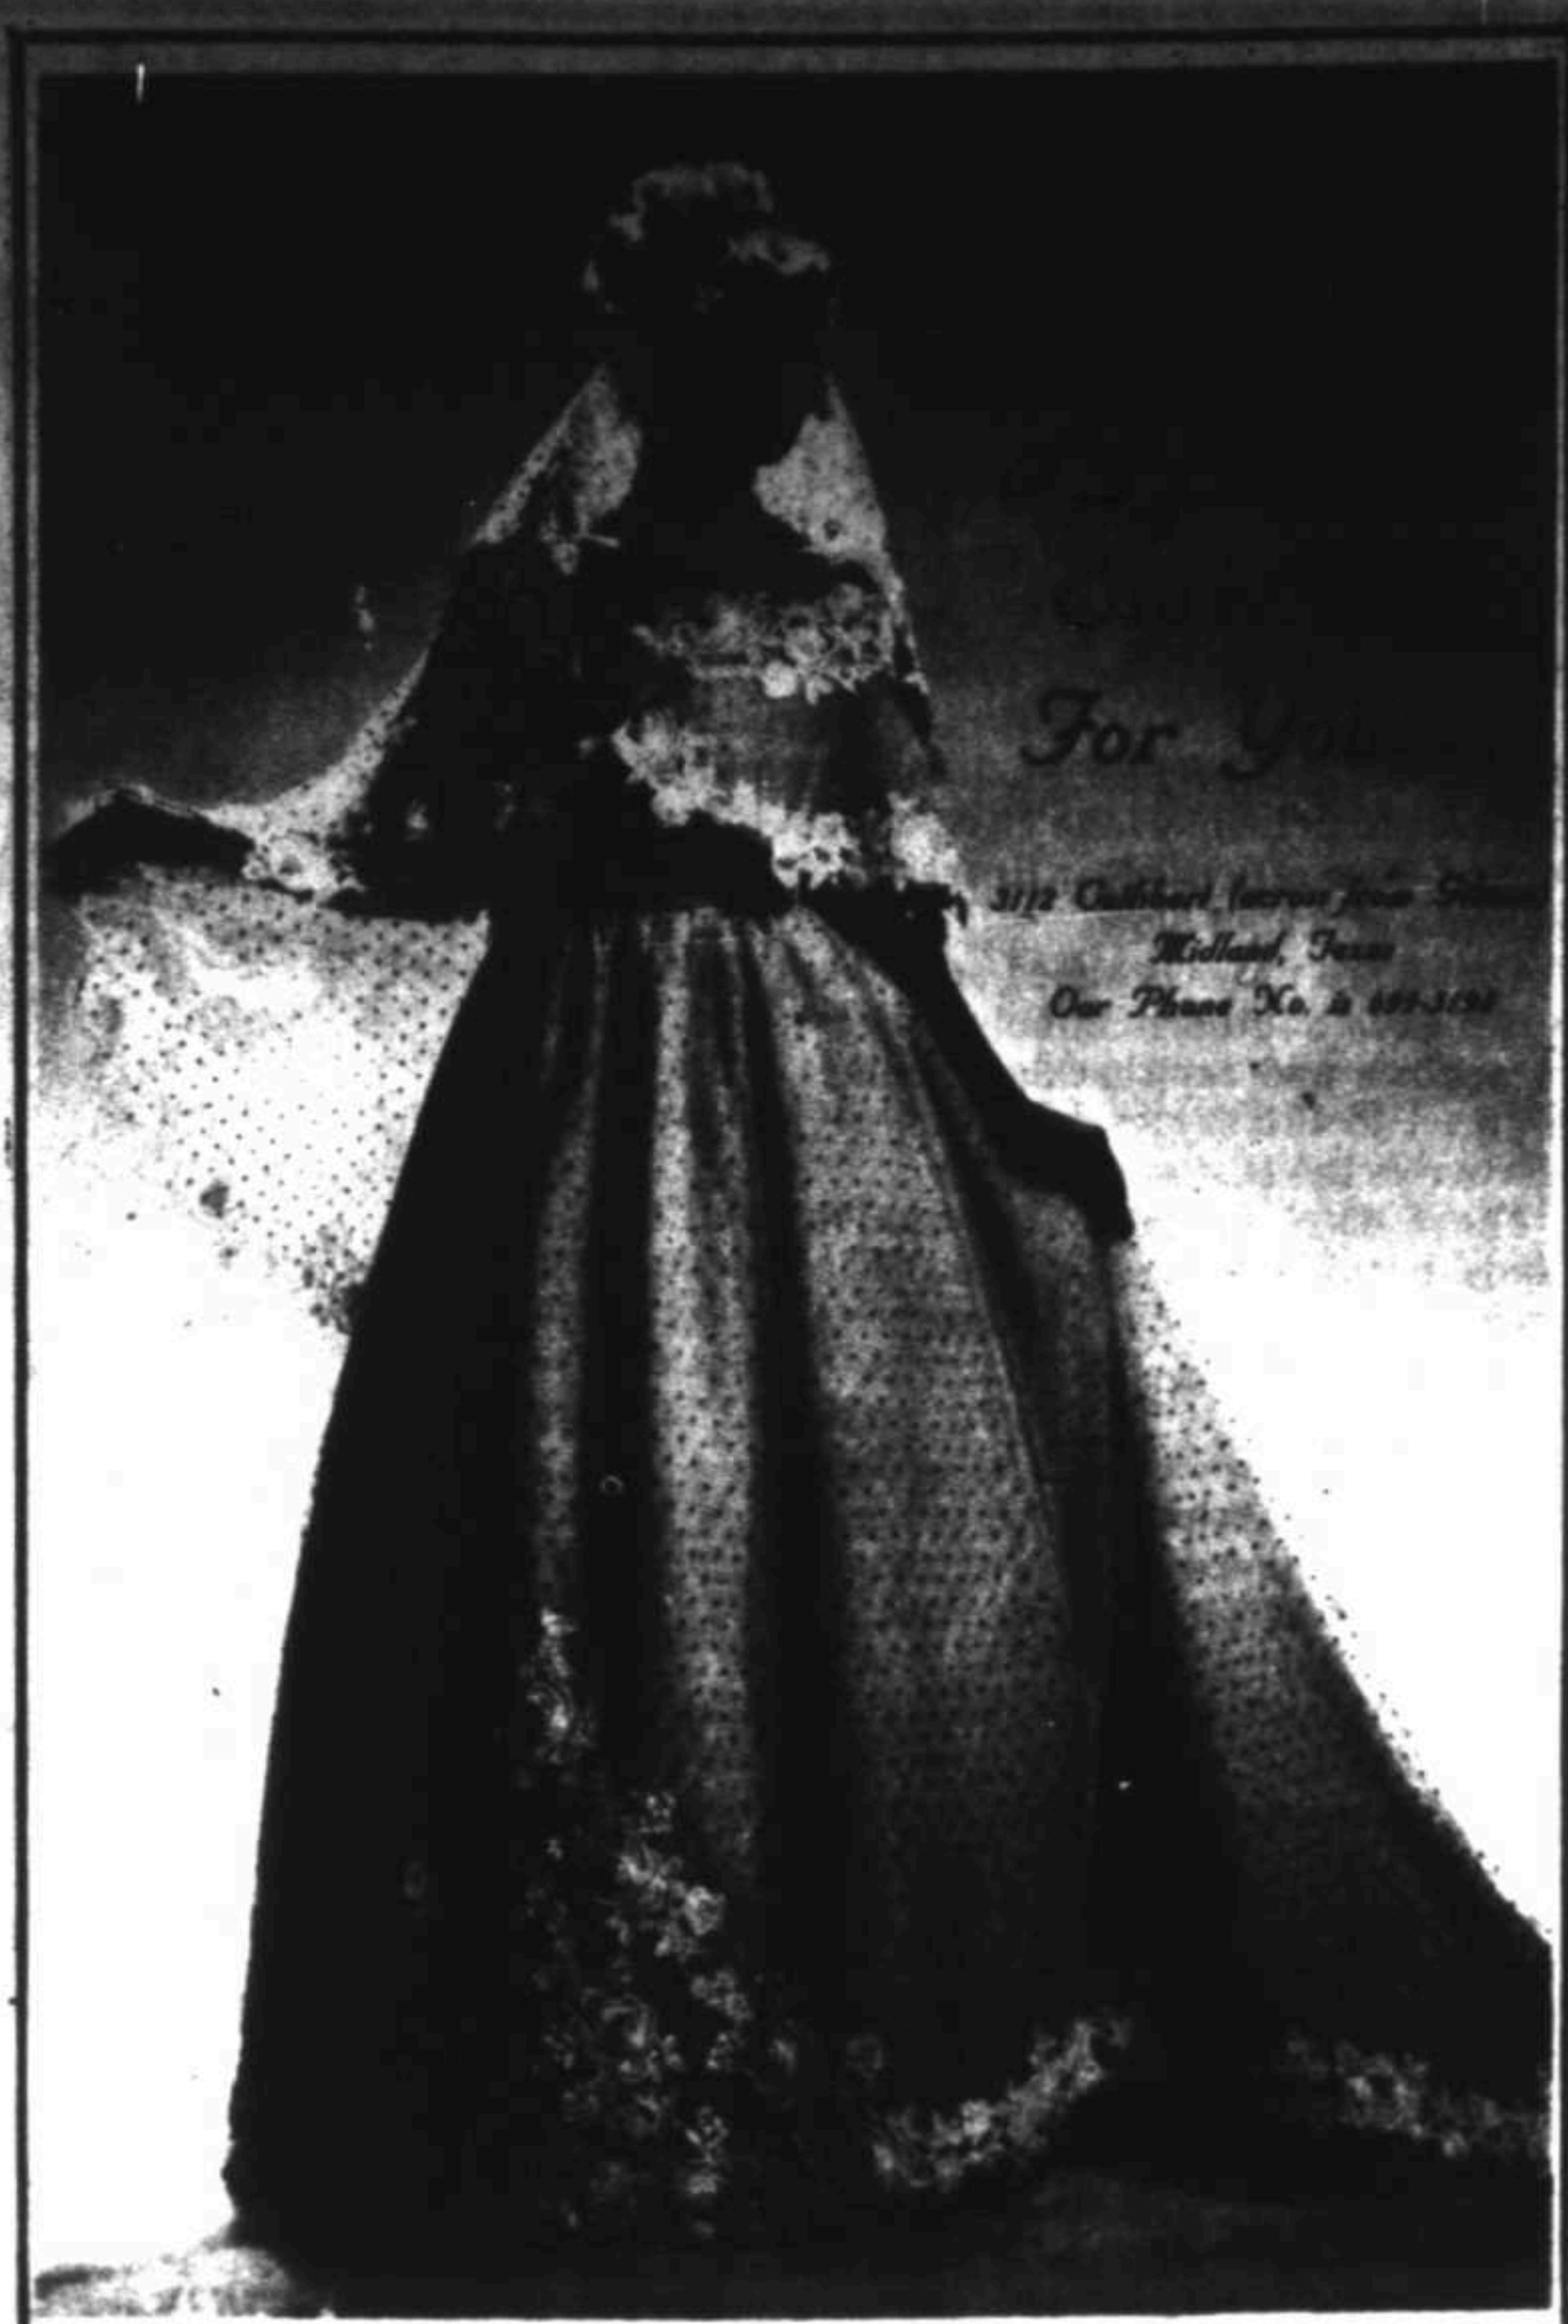

Because of societal influences, men may enter athletics in better shape, Bauman says. In addition, women are often subjected to a rapid training period which makes injuries more likely.

"Women have a 10 times greater chance of getting knee problems in sports because they have a wider pelvis," notes Dr. Lyle Micheli, an orthopedic surgeon at Children's Hospital who treats professional ballet dancers.

"Another factor is that women generally have less body strength, which may give them more chance for injury, such as shoulder dislocation."

"Our own clinical experience with women's running injuries suggests that careful attention to slow and progressive training, in addition to instruction in running technique, is of prime importance in preventing these injuries," Micheli says.

Latin America not immune to spread of Marxism

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — At one time, Latin America was considered immune to the spread of Marxism. But not anymore.

Mostly Catholic countries, the argument went, would not fall victim to the snares of an ideology that, among other things, proclaims religion to be the opiate of the people.

Until recent years, it appeared that might be the case.

Priests, nuns, bishops, archbishops, cardinals and, of course, their flocks took their guidance from the Vatican, which considers communism intrinsically evil, and the clergy, at least, generally stayed aloof from partisan politics and ideological conflicts.

There were exceptions. Most notable would be Father Miguel Hidalgo, the father of Mexican independence who, in 1810, launched the war that led to independence of Mexico from Spain.

Cuba probably was the first Latin American nation, in relatively recent times, at least, where the Catholic Church and churchmen became deeply involved in revolutionary activities, in the struggle that led to the rise of Fidel Castro in 1959. But the clergy there limited itself to preaching and writing in favor of the revolution which, at that time, was avowedly non-Communist.

Even though, once in power, Castro clamped down on the church, it seemed that many churchmen, particularly younger, U.S. and European educated priests, saw nothing objectionable in the Castro-Cuban model.

There have been "revolutionary" priests in many Latin countries. Some still reportedly are fighting along with the guerrillas in Central America but, for the most part, those clergymen who espouse what has come to be called "Christian Marxism" do so in sermons from their pulpits, in study groups and the like. They are not directly involved in the armed violence that scourges some Latin American countries.

Actually what their critics within the church term "Marxist Christianity" or "Christian Marxism," they prefer to call "Liberation Theology."

Liberation theologians were particularly active in Chile and Peru in the 1960s, in Central America in the 1970s and in Brazil even yet.

In Chile they enjoyed the support of Cardinal Raul Silva before the Marxist coalition government of President Salvador Allende came to power in 1970. Some became disenchanted during the three years the Marxists ran Chile and had changed their minds by the time the Chilean armed forces toppled the Marxist government. But the subsequent years, under the rule of President Augusto Pinochet's military junta, and the prospect he will remain in power until 1989, may have won them new support.

A vaguely similar political situation exists in Brazil, where the armed forces toppled a left-leaning government in 1964 and have held power since. In Brazil, it seems, the theology of liberation has spread widely, with about half of Brazil's cardinals appearing to favor it.

None of the prelates in Brazil or other countries link Marxism and Christianity in their sermons and other pronouncements, although some priests do.

But the talk over the years of the church's "preferential option for the poor," and the search for a solution to the problem of poverty, led some to consider a Marxist solution, even though it has not resolved the poverty of the Soviet Union or anywhere else.

Violence didn't stop after New Mexico prison riot

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Violence didn't stop at the New Mexico State Penitentiary after a bloody uprising nearly two years ago left 33 prisoners dead and more than $10 million in damages. Since then, six inmates and two guards have been stabbed to death.

"We would like to think that the era of violence and trauma, after the riot, is over," Corrections Secretary Roger Crist said recently. "Reality tells us there will be incidents, but hopefully not a whole string of them."

Repercussions are still being felt. A state Office of Special Prosecutions, formed to handle investigations of riot crimes and prosecute inmates involved in the disturbance, obtained indictments charging 26 inmates with the murders of 17 inmates during the disturbance at the state's maximum security prison.

Ten inmates have been charged with initiating the riot and related crimes, including kidnapping prison guards.

Five defendants pleaded guilty to riot murders during 1981. The first man to go to trial, Jose Moises Sandoval, was convicted in September of first-degree murder and sentenced to a life term. Later in the fall, two men tried for riot deaths were acquitted.

The bulk of the trials are scheduled to begin later this year.

The original rampage, which occurred Feb. 2-3, 1980, lasted 36 hours. The assessment of why it happened and how to prevent a recurrence is still continuing.

EFFORTS BY CORRECTIONS officials, legislative committees, the state attorney general and a committee of private citizens created to oversee their work led to a comprehensive corrections reform program, approved and funded by the 1981 New Mexico Legislature.

Major legislation approved during the past year include:

—A corrections industries act, that will expand the scope of prison industries which now include rebuilding and repairing furniture for state agencies and making signs for the state Highway Department.

—A corrections personnel act, to give the secretary of corrections direct control, for a trial two-year period, over the hiring of prison personnel. Previously, prison employees were hired by the State Personnel Board.

—A $68.2 million construction fund for the building of new prison facilities and renovation of existing institutions.

Crist said the authorizations have enabled his department to make a start on reform.

"The reality is, you first build the foundation and then put up the sides and the roof," Crist said. "I think we've done a good job of building the foundation."

The inmate population at the maximum security prison was reduced from 1,157 before the riot, to the current 700. Another 80 inmates are expected to leave early this year after a new medium security prison opens.

But the road to reform has been rocky — three inmates were murdered in late 1980, and the level of violence increased in 1981. Three more inmates were killed in February, April and August. Two guards also died.

Correctional Officer Louis Jewett was fatally stabbed last February during a disturbance in the maximum security unit. It had been 25 years since a prison guard had been murdered.

And six months later, another correctional officer, Gerald Peter Magee, was stabbed to death after being taken hostage during an aborted escape attempt. After Magee's death, Warden Harvey Winans locked down the prison for seven weeks.

SINCE MAGEE'S MURDER, violence has subsided at the prison, with only one minor stabbing incident reported.

There were other problems. A lawyer was hired by the Corrections Department to monitor the prison's compliance with reforms ordered in settling a federal suit brought by inmates over prison conditions. The lawyer, Daniel Cron, told the court in April that the state had failed to comply with the agreement.

Following Cron's report, the American Civil Liberties Union, which brought suit on behalf of the prison inmates, asked the court to find the state in contempt for non-compliance. A ruling is expected later this month.

Crist and Gov. Bruce King have been main targets of the criticism of the state's efforts in corrections reform.

"THE CRITICISM IS counter-productive," Crist said. "It deters you from your goals. I have spent a tremendous amount of time during the year trying to respond to all different investigative groups, and I have cooperated with all of them."

Justice loses suit to stop computer mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals has cleared the way for the Postal Service to begin on Monday a new computerized mail system designed to benefit mass mailers.

A court panel ruled 2-1 that it would not grant an injunction sought by the Justice Department to prevent the service from starting until legal arguments could be heard.

The department contends the Postal Service failed to follow the legal requirement to get approval from the Independent Postal Rate Commission for the plan. The Postal Service decision also is unfair to private telecommunications firms, the department contended.

While the panel's majority denied the department's motion here late Friday, it did agree to hear the case on an expedited basis, and asked that legal papers be filed by Jan. 11.

The order was issued on behalf of appellate judges J. Skelly Wright and Roger Robb. The third judge, George E. MacKinnon, said he disagreed with the decision to deny the injunction.

ECOM would allow mass mailers to hook their computers into the new Postal Service computers in 25 cities around the country. The mailers' computers would transmit address lists and the texts of letters to the Postal Service computers.

The letters would then be printed, stuffed in envelopes and addressed in the post office before delivery. Examples of mail that may be sent are financial statements, fund-raising letters and recall announcements.

Airlines go two years without fatality

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's major airlines have logged 26 consecutive months of flight travel without a fatal accident, eight months longer than the previous record, the Federal Aviation Administration said Friday.

The government agency noted that this record was established "despite the firing of 11,453 striking air traffic controllers."

In a statement, the FAA said it marked the first time that the airlines had gone two full calendar years without a major accident involving a large passenger jet.

The record was set during a period in which the airlines flew well over a half-billion passengers on over 10 million flights," the FAA said. "This sorts out to more than a trillion revenue passenger miles, enough to take every man, woman and child in the country on a flight of more than 2,000 miles."

The agency said the previous record for non-fatal crashes by major airlines was 18 consecutive months, established between February 1964 and August 1965.

The last fatal crash of such a jet operated by a U.S. airlines was an accident involving a Western Airlines DC-10 in Mexico City on Oct. 31, 1979, in which 70 people were killed.

In the last 26 months, however, there have been two fatal accidents involving other kinds of aircraft operated by the country's flag trunk and local service airlines, the FAA said.

One occurred on Jan. 20, 1981, when seven people perished in a small, twin-engine propeller-driven airplane in Spokane, Wash., and 13 people died in the crash of a small, twin-engine turboprop at Valley, Neb.

"Despite the record set by large jets in terms of crashes," the FAA said in its report, "the airlines did suffer four fatalities in non-crash accidents during the 26-month period."

In one accident, a mechanic was caught in a landing gear door that closed inadvertently and in another, a flight attendant was crushed when a food service elevator lifted unexpectedly. Two other fatalities involved a ramp attendant who was struck by an airplane tire and a passenger who fell from a boarding ramp.

Search for fifth crash member halted

SALIDA, Colo. (AP) — The four survivors of a Christmas Eve plane crash high in the storm-battered Colorado Rockies were reported in improved condition Friday after organized efforts to find the fifth member of their party were halted, officials said.

"There's nobody up there looking today," said Chaffee County Sheriff's dispatcher Jeff Blondeau. "They'd be crazy if they were because they'd be the next ones to get lost. We got another foot of snow yesterday and it's been snowing like the dickens all night."

Meanwhile, the survivors of the crash were reported in good condition at Salida Hospital.

Patricia Meeks of Dallas and her two step-sons, Gary Meeks Jr., 18, and Darren Meeks, 15, both of Houston were lifted from the crash site Tuesday in a dramatic nighttime rescue and taken to Salida Hospital. The fourth survivor, Stephen Smart, 33, of Port Mansfield, Texas, stayed behind with rescuers and joined the Meekses at the hospital Wednesday.

The missing man, pilot Gary Meeks, 42, of Dallas, was dressed in cowboy boots, jeans and a leather jacket when he walked away from the crash site Christmas Day in search of help.

He hasn't been seen since, and officials held out little hope of his survival.

The other four occupants of the plane, huddling in the snowbound fuselage to keep warm, were rescued after spending five days without food on the frigid mountain a few hundred yards from the ridge of the Continental Divide.

It's better to plant outdoor trees and shrubs during the winter when they are dormant. These plants when dormant will channel all their energies toward establishing root growth that will greatly benefit their ability to gather nutrients in the spring and become greener, healthier plants. You'll also find a much greater selection of these plants now. For spring shade and landscaping beauty plant your trees and shrubs early.

Coroner's office under fire in L.A.

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles County coroner's office, the nation's second-largest, has a record of making serious mistakes that have a direct effect on criminal investigations, murder trials and life insurance settlements.

A study of the department by the Los Angeles Times revealed inaccurate and misleading drug tests, long-standing police complaints about damaged murder evidence and county records that lay the blame at least in part on poor management.

Two sheriff's criminologists told a reporter that they have resorted to snatching evidence from bodies — evidence that by law belongs to the coroner — because they were afraid that a poorly trained coroner's investigator would ruin it.

Dr. Ernest Griesmer, chief of coroner's toxicology, admitted that he has been "sweating it a bit" over the accuracy of some drug tests in recent years. Thanks to new quality controls, however, he said he now feels that his lab is "comparable to the best."

BUT SEVERAL TOXICOLOGISTS say accuracy standards are still so lax that they doubt that the lab could pass state standards required of private labs.

Dr. Randall Baselt, an associate professor at the University of California at Davis Medical School and author of forensic toxicology textbooks used by the coroner, said in an interview that he is puzzled by the coroner's lab.

"Instead of being one of the worst outfits in the state, the Los Angeles office should be one of the best," he said.

And records show that jewelry, guns and even gold teeth have been stolen from bodies in the county morgue in the last few years. At the coroner's office, some call it "fringe benefits."

Coroner's investigators say stealing is far from uncommon at the death scenes, where investigators are often alone with bodies. Interviews with coroner's staff and records of union grievances and employee logs, indicate that thefts are almost taken for granted, both in the field and in the office.

THE CRITICISMS ARE surprising given the department's glamorous international reputation. A prototype for the television series, "Quincy" the department is renowned for its work on Hollywood deaths. It is headed by Dr. Thomas T. Noguchi, a controversial, flamboyant forensic pathologist with a flare for publicity.

Often dubbed "coroner to the stars" Noguchi frequently refers to his office as "an international forensic science center" that is one of the world's outstanding coroner's offices.

The office processes 17,000 cases a year on a $5 million budget and with a staff of 140, below standards set by the National Association of Medical Examiners.

Holiday death toll 27

By The Associated Press

A rash of highway accidents killed 27 people on Texas roads and highways during the early portion of the New Year's weekend and state officials feared the final toll would exceed the original estimate of 36 fatalities.

A head-on collision four miles north of Rockport killed two men, four pedestrians died while trying to cross highways and 21 others perished in one-fatality accidents, said DPS spokesmen.

State officials acted the final toll outlasted, 43, of Morganspoint and Clifford Claude Antrim, 28, of Austin died when their vehicles collided head-on on Texas 36 on the Copano Bay Causeway early Friday.

Farmer hawks backwoods nostalgia and charm

By BETH WATERS
Associated Press Writer

Hale and the countless number of vendors throughout the Piney Woods cannot be missed as they parade their jams and jellies, sweet potatoes and greens, handmade furniture, dolls and sunbonnets.
"I knew you could sell, but I didn't know you could sell so much ... I tell you, nobody is farming anymore," Hale says.
What Hale has discovered, in a roundabout way, is that he has something to offer that is much in demand — and it's not just the sugarcane and produce. Hale is hawking nostalgia and backwoods charm from an open-air shack on U.S. 96 between Jasper and Kirbyville.
He began his informal business in the last year and since then has seen a fair profit, and in "good weeks" makes more than $100 and can sell 50 stalks of his sugarcane, at 25 cents each, per day.
"Yep, this is my supplemental income," he says, noting that his produce brings in as much, if not more, than his Social Security checks. And the longer he is in business, the more Hale becomes streetwise to the ways of his vehicular customers.
"Lots of times, they wanna go out and pick their own," he says, motioning to the 30-odd acres behind the produce stand that he purchased because "I was born here and farmed here when I was real young."

Defense league gives Jews a bad name

By NORMA MEYER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A panting guard dog at his feet, a loaded rifle in his hand, media-conscious Irv Rubin argues that his Jewish Defense League is not just a bunch of pugnacious bullies.

"It does not give me pleasure to know there is a need for a militant Jewish group in the community," the 36-year-old national director of JDL says in his booming voice.

Rubin has relocated his Los Angeles headquarters in the Fairfax district to a fortresslike building in nearby Culver City.

"We're not in this to make it a paramilitary organization," said Rubin, contrary to the perceptions of some other Jewish groups, which shun him like the plague. "We're not the KKK. We don't wake up in the middle of the night and take our sheets with us."

In the next breath, he motions toward a black-and-white poster, a clamped fist superimposed on the Star of David, and the words, "Never Again," referring to the 6 million Jews killed in the Holocaust.

"See the clenched fist," said Rubin, who boasts a national membership of 18,000. "Our image is if you mess with the JDL, you're liable to get hurt."

It is that kind of talk that brings comment from the executive director of the community relations committee of the Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles.

"The world is not a street fight between street gangs," said Murray Wood, who contends Rubin can only attract about 30 members at local demonstrations. "The JDL is our version of the street gang and I'm being nice to them."

But Rabbi Allen Maller of Temple Akiba in Culver City said of his new neighbors:

"It's nice to have them around. Their heart is in the right place if their head isn't always there. There is a place for people who are militant Jews."

Rubin says his group elicits a negative reaction because it forces Jews to confront anti-Semitism, instead of wishing it would go away.

And, he says, there are people who need the JDL's toughness, like the Agoura woman whose Iranian neighbors yelled anti-Semitic remarks at her, scrawled slogans on her car and reportedly pointed a gun at her.

"Up from the closet comes Super Jew," says Rubin. The JDL paid the neighbors a visit.

"Independent sources say their noses were introduced to their ears," Rubin said.

They moved out two days later, say JDL members. "We can call on a hard-core anti-Semite and mediate a problem," he says, referring to JDL house calls. "Let them know there is no guarantee on their future."

There are others who need the firm hand of the JDL, Rubin says, such as elderly Jews who have been harassed but have been unable to get a response from the police or established Jewish groups. There are individuals who have found swastikas on their garages and want protection for their families.

And there are late afternoon and early evening foot patrols in the area, where JDL members, in their identifying T-shirts, try to prevent elderly Jews from becoming victims of crime.

"If, God forbid, they need it, there are at least tough people who can go out and physically respond to purse snatchings and mugging," said Rubin, a one-time Oriental rug salesman and postal worker.

"We don't want to be the eyes and ears of the Los Angeles Police Department. We're not running to the phone booth to call the LAPD. By the time I run to a phone booth and the police arrive, another phone booth could be built."

"We use as much force (on a suspected criminal) to top them and hold them on the ground. Hopefully, LAPD will arrive before we rearrange their facial features."

While other Jewish groups are passing out literature and gathering statistics, Rubin says, anti-Semitism is on the rise.

He points to the desecration of synagogues, the fire-bombing of one temple, an attack on a nearby Jewish cemetery, the emergence of the suburban Torrance-based Institute for Historical Review, which contends the Holocaust never occurred, and individual attacks, such as the painting of a swastika on the driveway of a home.

Even some who disagree with JDL tactics have praised the members for speaking out first for Soviet Jewry. But critics still contend the JDL does more harm through clashes with police in front of Russian embassies, or fistfights with the Nazis, KKK members and PLO supporters in front of television cameras.

But Rubin, who once offered $500 to anyone who, in defense of the Jews, killed or maimed a Nazi — $1,000 if the ears were brought to the JDL — is now trying a new community approach in Culver City, where he plans to hold Jewish heritage and cultural classes.

Rubin says the JDL moved from the hub of the Jewish community because of the need for more space and better security. Once a jewelry manufacturing plant, the building in Culver City has reinforced brick walls.

"It would take something more than a .357 magnum to go through them," said Bruce Derflinger, 35-year-old editor of the JDL newspaper and a weapons instructor.

A donated printing press, which Derflinger says turns out 10,000 copies of the paper, is in a room once used to store gold. A bullet-pierced poster of a Nazi hangs on the wall.

Shortly after the JDL moved in, a note was attached to the outside door which read, "This could have been a bomb." Members say there were three weeks of constant threatening phone calls.

But, on this particular day, the wrought-iron gate is not locked and the rear door, the one used as an entry, is wide open. Weapons are within reach, but there is a certain casualness as JDL member Hal Freeman takes orders for McDonald's, a loaded gun strapped around his waist.

Who is the JDL? At its headquarters, it is people like Carl Ryan, who, like many members, is a Vietnam veteran, but unlike the majority, a non-Jew. He says he got fed up with the discrimination his Jewish wife faced in the Army.

There's Derflinger, former director of Hillel, a Jewish campus group at California State University, Long Beach, who joined because he saw a passivity among traditional Jewish organizations.

There's Freeman, a middle-aged owner of a tile manufacturing plant, who turned to the JDL after swastikas were painted on his business. The police, he says, simply attributed the vandalism to juveniles.

But to others the JDL is a splinter group that gives all Jewish people a bad name.

Wood says the JDL may inspire some acts of anti-Semitism. He says the police and other groups, such as the Anti-Defamation League, which stresses education to combat prejudice, are adequately dealing with such problems.

Says Derflinger in defense of the trouble-making image:

"If someone wants to go ape and pounce on everybody, they're removed from the JDL."

It happened recently with a long-term member.

"He was becoming too radical," Derflinger said. "He had the addresses of the KKK and he said, 'Let's go blow them away. Let's go out with our .45s and do a job on them.'"

"We told him we're the Jewish Defense League, not the Jewish Offense League."

School of Christian Living to be held at Midland Center

The School of Christian Living will be held this year Jan. 10-14 at Midland Center, 106 N. Main St.

The faculty includes Pat Bloistic and Frances Tafari, both of the Franciscan Missionary Sisters of the Immaculate Conception of the Mother of God; Tom Boyd, an associate professor of philosophy at the University of Oklahoma; Mary Lee Loving, director of the mental health division of MHMR in Amarillo; S. Garrett Short, most recently associated with the Genesis Project; and the Rev. Joseph Schley, rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church in Midland.

Registration fees are $15 per family.

$10 for an individual and $5 for students and senior citizens. Registration will open for classes at 6:30 p.m. Jan. 10 and 8:45 a.m. Jan. 11. Each two-hour session will have a 15-minute coffee break.

Morning sessions will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and evening sessions will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Morning classes will duplicate the previous evening's class in content and material. The first session will be Jan. 10 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

A nursery will be provided for children under five years at First United Methodist Church, 306 N. Baird St.

The school is sponsored by the Midland Association of Churches.

Dallas Rev. to be principal speaker at Foursquare Church

The Rev. S.O. Westbrook of Dallas, the supervisor for the South Central District of Foursquare Churches, will be the principal speaker during the morning and evening services Sunday at the Midland Foursquare Church, 415 W. Alta Ave. Sunday marks the beginning of the church's prayer and mission week.

A documentary film depicting the Foursquare Missions work around the world will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The films include, in order of presentation, "So Proudly We Hail" is a travel log to many mission stations; "Beyond the Rivers Bend" shows the ministry of one of the native workers in the Philippine Islands; "Life Up Your Eyes" depicts the Brazilian Revival; "Life to Life" tells of the first white man to preach the gospel in Central America; and "Victory at Midnight" the church's work in the Far East including Hong Kong, Thailand and New Guinea. The public is invited to attend.

St. Luke's has talk with pastor

The Lay Organization of Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church will sponsor a talk with the pastor — "Elements in the Sunday Worship of God: The Pastor, Choirs, Ushers and You" — at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Participants will discuss such topics as the history and meaning of the Order of Service, the duties of the choir and the ushers and the spiritual participation of the laymen. Consultants will be the pastor, the Rev. W.O. Johnson; president of the Senior Choir, Carrie Newels; and the president of the Senior Usher Board, Annie Jewel Taylor. W.T. Gilbert is president of the Lay Organization.

Bishops opposed to arms race

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Adding to a rising tide of church opposition to the nuclear arms race, the nation's United Methodist bishops have called for intensified efforts in that cause, saying:

"The most crucial issue facing the people of the earth today is the threat of nuclear holocaust which would destroy the created order as we know it."

A NEW YEAR

Beginning a new year is like writing a new book. Every page is white and clean. It's a fresh start. And what you write on the pages of the book of life will have everlasting consequences. I would urge you to start 1982 in step with God. To do so will enrich your present life immensely, and will prepare you to spend eternity with God.

Stearman 'war birds' can be adicting

By JOHN M. BOGERT
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Strapping into the Stearman biplane is a bit like sliding into armor or buckling into a formula race car. It is perfectly uncomfortable.

A parachute makes for a hard seat cushion. Strung around both thighs, across the chest and over the shoulders beneath the tightly cinched three-way seat belt, it's enough to make the passenger in the foremost of the two open cockpits feel compressed as Quasimodo.

The anachronistic, truly archaic sight of two matching blue and yellow World War II biplanes is enough to make the passenger forget that he is stacked up at the end of the suburban Torrance Airport runway.

Add to this sun-filled, late afternoon scene the noise of the single 220-horsepower, seven-cylinder Continental engine and the feel of the gale-force propeller backwash pressing goggles into his face and forcing its way up under his leather helmet. Even the fact that he's wearing a leather helmet is enough to make him long for dawn over an RAF field somewhere in England.

IN THE PASSENGER'S imagination, he'd go about calling the planes, owned jointly by Torrance businessmen Art Valdez and Keith Nelson, "lovely kites."

Of course, he'd have to develop a British accent and grow a salt-and-pepper mustache and be fearless and believe that he'd live forever, even though he knows that the closest he'll get to heaven is when he pulls back on the stick and lets this tail-dragger pull him skyward.

Somewhere in that vision lies the reason why these two men have devoted so much time and money to buying and restoring these classic Boeing-built trainers.

There isn't much between you and God but the fabric," John Nelson, a medical instrument manufacturer, as he clears the Stearman for takeoff, throttles forward, centers the pale afternoon moon in the center of the plane's three-pane windshield, and noisily cuts the craft free of gravity.

THERE'S SOMETHING magical in the uniform color of these meticulously hand-restored planes, in the expense of the leather flight jackets and helmets, in the camaraderie inspired by doing something different and slightly dangerous.

There is also the reward that comes from doing something that requires skill and wits and intelligence that keeps these men coming back. It keeps them talking about the war birds — their names for privately owned military planes — and their respect for the former military pilots that form a skilled hierarchy even here at the small local airport where they house their planes in their own hangar.

Before he took the plane up, Nelson told his passenger that the difference between flying the Stearman and flying a closed cockpit plane is the difference between driving a sedan and riding a motorcycle.

But motorcycles don't fly, so the earthbound eagles will never know the ecstatic feeling of, well, flying, really flying wing-to-wing over the faded green Palos Verdes Peninsula, near here. Flying close enough to give a thumbs-up to Valdez and company in the next plane is enough to make a guy happy, and glad he never had to fight on such intimate terms.

CLEARLY, THIS is enough to keep them coming back nearly every afternoon for more.

It's a narcotic, one that Valdez, a real estate developer, got hooked on when another Stearman owner took him for a ride.

"He took me out and we did some aerobatics and that was it. It was so different from flying my Cessna. Most modern planes are not built for aerobatics, so most modern pilots never learn to fly like this."

"But it has other attractions," says the former electrical engineer. "It is strong. Built with a metal fuselage and wooden wings and covered all around with dacton-based fabric, it is virtually indestructible. Mostly, it is nostalgic and a hell of a lot of fun."

THE NOSTALGIA factor is probably one of the biggest draws for Valdez. And it was strong enough to make him buy a Stearman and spend two years worth of weekends to restore the craft.

While restoration went on, another Stearman came up for sale.

"Thinking we would like to take our wives along, we bought it," says Valdez, who began flying in 1968.

Though nearly 12,000 of the 2,800-pound trainers were built in Wichita, Kan., not all of them — owing to their high center of gravity and tendency to ground loop on landing — survived the training, and their postwar use as crop dusters.

"THEY BECAME inefficient as dusters, but they have become very attractive to antiquers. At the moment, a Stearman in good condition is worth between $30,000 and $40,000," says Valdez.

"They're at least maintaining their value against inflation."

"Still, there is a fair number of the planes around, considering they're into their third life. At any air show you'll find a dozen of them."

"And there is among the owners of these planes a great amount of camaraderie. There's even a Stearman restorer's association which will help owners find scarce parts and help them trace a plane's history."

"ANY WHERE YOU go with these planes, you attract a crowd. It's really a thrill, especially meeting the pilots who trained on these planes during the war."

Still, he says, the greatest satisfaction he gets comes from having his family involved in the operation.

On this day, the preflight cleanup is accomplished by his wife, Sherry, and their 14-year-old daughter, Darian. Also on hand is their Chihuahua-poodle, Allerton.

"I'm sort of the main coffee-maker," says Mrs. Valdez, with a wry smile. "But I also get to fly aerobically and go to the air shows and that is an awful lot of fun."

NELSON CAME TO a slightly different understanding with his wife.

"I don't do stained glass and collect antiques and she doesn't fly," he says, laughing.

With all this talk of fun, a passenger might find it odd that the pilots are so serious up here, doing 80 miles per hour at 2,500 feet and heading straight for Catalina's Island's double humps which are towering Mount Fuji-like from the gathering fog.

But, as Nelson puts it, "This is the kind of plane you fly until you switch it off."

With only two rudder pedals, a wooden control stick and what amounts to little more than a bicycle frame holding all these wires and bits of wood together, this attitude is understandable. In fact, it's necessary.

As one pilot put it, flying is, after all, a toy for serious children.

Weather gives Rose Parade a real break

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Led by actor James Stewart in a 1932 Packard, the 53rd annual Rose Parade marched down Colorado Boulevard today as a downpour gave way to dry skies that brought an estimated 1 million people out to cheer the festivities.

The rain had barely stopped when the parade began in west Pasadena, and only 300,000 people were on hand. But police said the crowd swelled as the floats moved to the east end of the 5 1/2-mile route.

"We have a final crowd estimate — a million and 42. That's official," said police spokesman Rocky McAlister.

The estimate of a million was still 400,000 short of what had been predicted earlier for the crowd.

McAlister said 250 people, mainly drunks, were arrested during overnight revelry that preceded the New Year's classic.

STEWART, grand marshal of the tournament, said he wore his "long underwear" for the parade, which he led off in an open 1932 Packard Phaeton.

"When this is all over I may write a poem about it," he said.

Behind him came 60 flower-covered floats, including one carrying Rose Queen Kathryn Potthast, 17, and six princesses, all Pasadena area students, 230 horses, 14 elephants and 22 bands.

Sharon Graham, 20, a University of Iowa pharmaceutical student, took a 36-hour bus ride and arrived in Pasadena just in time to sit in the rain for five hours.

"This better be a good parade, really good and they better win the game, too," she said. "I was pretty miserable."

MISS GRAHAM sat on a soggy beach chair, the bottom half of her body in a giant plastic baggie, the top half protected by two sweaters, a coat, mittens, rain hat and umbrella.

Julie Roybal, who came from Santa Fe, N.M., with her daughter, Bernice, to see the parade, said, "It had better clear up because I've got to get some pictures to take back home."

Many of the early arrivals set up sleeping bags, lawn chairs or makeshift plastic tents, played card games or guitars, or simply cruised the route along Colorado Boulevard through downtown Pasadena.

The annual parade precedes the Rose Bowl football game in which the University of Washington — the Pacific-10 Conference champion — meets the University of Iowa, which won the Big Ten Conference championship.

Meanwhile, the 60 floats had formed up at the assembly area ready for the kickoff, and organizers hoped the rain did not increase enough to seriously damage them.

This year's parade, with the theme, "Friends and Neighbors," included 60 flower-covered floats, 22 bands, 230 horses and 14 elephants.

The elephants were there to tow a band wagon float for the Casablanca Fan Co., ineligible for a prize because it was too high, at 30 feet.

THE PARADE was being telecast this year in Mexico and Japan, which had entries, as well as in Canada, represented by three floats.

Actor Jimmy Stewart, grand marshal of the Tournament of Roses Parade, wave to the crowd Friday as he is accompanied by his wife Gloria during the parade in Pasadena, Calif.

One of the floats carried Rose Queen Kathryn Potthast, 17, and her court of six princesses, all Pasadena-area students.

The march had not been rained on since 1955 and was rain-delayed just once, in 1969.

The Sweepstakes prize for most beautiful non-commercial float was awarded to the Benevolent Order of the Elks, for its entry representing children riding on carousel animals. Judging was done overnight.

The Grand Prize, for the most beautiful commercial entry, went to Avon Products' "Beauty of the Orient" float, with a flowered Kabuki dancer standing in a Japanese garden.

The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs won the prize for the most fitting presentation of the parade's theme, "Friends and Neighbors," with a float of red and white carnations, marigolds and maple leaves forming the flags of the United States and Canada.

The Bank of America won the Governor's Trophy, the theme prize for commercial entries, with its duplication in flowers of the "It's a Small World" attraction at Disneyland. The float consists of a flower-covered canoe, gondola, and kayak, which seem to float along the street.

THE ISABELLA Coleman Award for most effective presentation of total decoration went to the City of Arcadia's depiction of peacocks and koalas, representing its sister-city relationship with Newcastle, Australia.

The City of Long Beach and FTD Florists won the prizes for most effective use of roses.

Bus wreck injures 31 school children

BLITHEWOOD, S.C. (AP) — A bus carrying high school students home from a religious convention ran off a road and crashed, apparently after the driver fell asleep, and 31 students suffered minor injuries, police said.

All those injured were treated at hospital and released.

The bus, driven by 51-year-old Robert L. Whitefield, was one of four carrying students from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., high schools home after a church convention in Gatlinburg, Tenn., according to Highway Patrolman T.H. Robertson.

He said that Whitefield apparently fell asleep at about 6:30 a.m. and the bus left Interstate 77 near the Blithewood exit. The bus rolled down a 30-foot embankment and wound up on its side, 426 feet from the highway, he added.

Robertson said authorities were investigating the accident and that no charges had been filed immediately.

The worst injuries appeared to be a badly bruised leg and severe facial cuts, Robertson said.

One of the students on the bus said everyone aboard was shaken up, and another youngster said most passengers were sleeping when the crash occurred.

The students were taken first to Trinity United Methodist Church in Blithewood to rest and later to a motel in Columbia, about 15 miles south of here.

Air Force says MX missiles will be built on single base

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force says it will put the first batch of 40 MX missiles in fortified Minuteman silos on a single Air Force base rather than scatter them among Titan silos.

Announcing the decision Thursday at the Pentagon, the officials said one reason for the change is that it would be easier to protect the MX with an anti-ballistic missile system in Minuteman silos because they are closer together than the 52 Titan silos originally contemplated.

The officials, who declined to permit use of their names, told reporters they will decide next spring on which of six possible Air Force bases will be used for the first 40 MX missiles.

The program outlined last October by President Reagan calls for a total deployment of 100 missiles, with the initial ones ready for operation in 1990.

The six bases with Minuteman silos under consideration for the revised basing scheme: Malmstrom in Montana, Ellsworth in South Dakota, Whiteman in Missouri, Minot and Grand Forks in North Dakota and Francis E. Warren in Wyoming.

The Titan silos cited earlier as likely homes for new MX weapons were in Arizona and Arkansas.

Although one of the officials said "there is no way you can make any missile deployment without running into some opposition," the initial reaction to Thursday's announcement was favorable.

South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow said, "If it will contribute to the national defense, South Dakota always said yes. We don't want to be the only one that does things, but we'll do our share."

He suggested placing MX missiles in South Dakota would not increase the state's vulnerability as a target since they would be housed in some of the 150 Minuteman silos already dotting the western part of the state.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., whose Tucson district includes 18 Titan missile silos, greeted the decision with relief.

"I think it's good that Tucson finally won't be one of the top targets aimed at by Soviet missiles technicians," he said.

Barbara Bush: One-woman public relations force

By WANDA MCDANIEL
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — A few months ago, Barbara Bush, the equable wife of Vice President George Bush, breezed into Milwaukee in her own inimitable way and faced the nation — sort of.

A group of schoolchildren played the interviewers. One particularly outspoken child — the Ted Koppel of the grade school set — took the floor.

"Mrs. Bush," grumbled the youngster, "my mother gets up every morning and makes our breakfast. She makes the beds. She goes to work all day long, and then she comes home. And makes our dinner. And cleans the house."

"Now, what I want to know is: What do you do?" Barbara Bush faced another segment of the nation recently when she arrived in Los Angeles to address members of the prestigious cultural-charity organization, the Amazing Blue Ribbon of the Music Center. In her casually delivered, often humorous talk and private press interviews afterward, Washington's Second Lady proved once again to be one of the current administration's shining assets.

In the press meeting, she was called upon more than once to explain, and consequently, defend First Lady Nancy Reagan's somewhat checkered public image. At each turn, Barbara Bush came steadfastly to the rescue — a superb, one-woman public relations force for the Commander in Chief & Co.

After the introductions, Mrs. Bush took on the task of explaining just what it is she does — weaving a dizzying tale of American history just past.

In 11 months, Barbara Bush traveled to 48 different U.S. cities, 24 states and 10 foreign countries. "When George and I were first married and were very poor, he used to say, 'Now stick with me. I'm going to show you the world some day.' What he didn't tell me was that he was going to show it to me a country a day at a time." In one grueling seven-day period, the Bushes crossed a remarkable 17 time zones.

"And during the same period," said Mrs. Bush, breaking into a wide smile, "I admired George Bush a lot."

On the personal side, she revealed that she exercised daily and frequently did needlepoint. The Second Couple bought one and sold two houses this year and rebuilt his grandfather's house in Maine. Their fourth son was married and they welcomed into the world twin granddaughters. "I'm not going to tell you their names because I do cry when I talk about that." And they worked on the vice presidential home — a large Victorian house built in 1880 by the Navy that, since the Bush occupation, has housed such guests as Lowell Thomas, Billy Graham and Charlton Heston, who "added a bunch" of glamour. "It is filled with beautiful paintings that we have borrowed from the National Gallery, the Corcoran and the Houston Museum of Fine Arts," she said. "And it has three bedrooms. They're big — but only three."

In addition, Mrs. Bush serves as president of the Senate Ladies. Thanks to that position and numerous others, she took a candid look at herself and decided, "I am the best."

At home, she has coffee and tea receptions — for ever. I have eaten luncheons and dinners for hospitals, for cancer, for heart, for the arts.

One of Mrs. Bush's most time-consuming duties was answering rooms of mail. "I get mail about my hair. Some like it. Some don't. I get letters about Mother's Day, about weddings, about Easter, about barnraisings. I get lots and lots of 'aren't we related' letters. And then I get a bunch of letters that say, 'Please pass this message on to the president.' If you think I answer and greying with age, Massa suffers from arthritis and has taken to sleeping a lot during the day.

mail, I can't imagine what Nancy Reagan does."

While Mrs. Reagan recently added drug abuse to her personal projects, Mrs. Bush continues to campaign for wiping out illiteracy. "A long time ago I asked myself what was the one thing I could do that was the most helpful to the country, knowing full well the vice president's wife could draw a crowd. I thought of all the things that worried me, like crime, aging, pollution, the economy. Well, all of these things can be helped if more people could read. Thousands of jobs go unfilled because we have people without the most basic knowledge in reading, writing and math."

Automation used in more offices

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Melinda Shapiro scans an instruction manual, trying to figure out how to get the television-like screen before her to copy from a small printing device to a button.

She presses a button and the machine immediately produces six copies of a letter. Task completed.

Shapiro is enrolled in a two-week course on how to use word processing equipment. For a $350 registration fee, she uses the system four hours a day, working with an instruction manual. An instructor is available if assistance is needed.

"By learning how to use a word processor, I can increase my per-hour income," she explains. "Besides, demand is high for word processing skills."

While the office traditionally has lagged far behind factories and warehouses in terms of automation, automated office equipment — including not only word processors but a wide variety of devices that do everything from producing payroll checks to printing letters from voice recordings — is appearing in more and more offices.

"The office is now being dragged, kicking and screaming, into the 20th century," says George Liptak, IBM's manager of world-wide shared logic systems requirements. Those companies that have automated their offices are finding they can reduce costs, grow without adding a lot of personnel, produce better quality work and meet deadlines more easily.

And the economy's poor shape has spurred the trend toward automation, some experts believe. "As the economy slows down, businesses receive greater incentives to automate because they can't continue to add staff, and they must be able to respond more quickly to customer requests and complaints," observes Linda O'Keefe, president of the International Word Processing Association.

The need for skilled personnel is increasing as more companies automate.

At the secretarial level, where most of the growth in automated equipment has taken place, a number of training options have developed. Community college and high school courses are now common, supplemented by shorter but more expensive private training programs.

"Some specialists predict that at least 70 percent of all typewriters will be replaced by electronic equipment within five years," notes Sharon Campbell, president of Wordtec Office Systems Institute. "So individuals who want to stay on top need to retrain."

Texas rallies to defeat Alabama in Cotton Bowl

Longhorn quarterback engineers comeback in fourth quarter

AP Laserphotos

University of Texas fullback Terry Orr (37, top photo) scampers into the end zone untouched with the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter of the Longhorn's Cotton Bowl battle against Alabama Friday. Orr too the ball from quarterback Robert Brewer and ran it in from the eight-yard line to give Texas a 14-10 lead. The Longhorns later gave up a safety to gain the free kick in the final stages of the game and held on to win, 14-12. Earlier in the game, Crimson Tide quarterback Walter Lewis (10, right photo) pitches on the option play under pressure from Texas line-backers Doug Shankle (48) and Bruce Sholtz (51). The pitch went to halfback Joe Carter who carried for a first down in the second quarter.

Penn State hands USC 26-10 defeat

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Penn State's Curt Warner ran for 145 yards and two touchdowns Friday, overshadowing Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen of Southern California and giving the seventh-ranked Nittany Lions a 26-10 Fiesta Bowl victory over the No. 8 Trojans.

Warner, a junior tailback who was injured part of this past season, carried 26 times and scored on runs of 17 and 21 yards.

His first touchdown came just 15 seconds into the game and followed Penn State's recovery of an Allen fumble on the Trojans' 17. His second scoring run gave the Nittany Lions a 24-7 advantage early in the third quarter.

PENN STATE'S determined defense held Allen, who gained an NCAA record 2,342 yards rushing this season, to just 85 yards on 34 carries, and converted two fumbles by him into 10 points. It was the first time this season Allen was held below 100 yards.

The other Penn State scoring came on a 52-yard pass from Todd Blackledge to split end Gregg Garrity, a 21-yard field goal by Brian Franco in the second period, and a safety in the third quarter when Dave Paffenroth blocked a USC punt attempt and the ball rolled out of the Trojan end zone.

Southern Cal had tied the game 7-7 late in the first quarter when line-backer Chip Banks returned an interception of a Blackledge pass 20 yards for a touchdown. The other USC points came on a 32-yard field goal by Frank Jordan in the third quarter.

The victory closed Penn State's season at 10-2. The Trojans finished 9-3. The game, the first between the schools since Southern Cal beat Penn State 14-3 in the 1983 Rose Bowl, attracted a Fiesta Bowl record crowd of 71,053 to Sun Devil Stadium.

Penn State, holding the Trojans' vaulted rushing game in check as no other team has been able to do in recent years, gave up just 60 net yards on the ground. The Nittany Lions, meanwhile, had 218 yards rushing.

HALFBACK ROGER Jackson and tackle Leo Wisniewski spearheaded the aggressive Nittany Lion defense.

Jackson plucked Allen's fumble out of the air to set up Penn State's first score. Wisniewski recovered Allen's second fumble, with Jackson making the tackle, to set up Franco's field goal in the second quarter.

Penn State's second score was one of just two sustained touchdown drives during the game, both by the Nittany Lions. The first march covered 69 yards, with Garrity cutting in front of Trojan defensive back Joey Browner to grab the scoring pass.

Warner's second score capped an 80-yard drive that took nine plays.

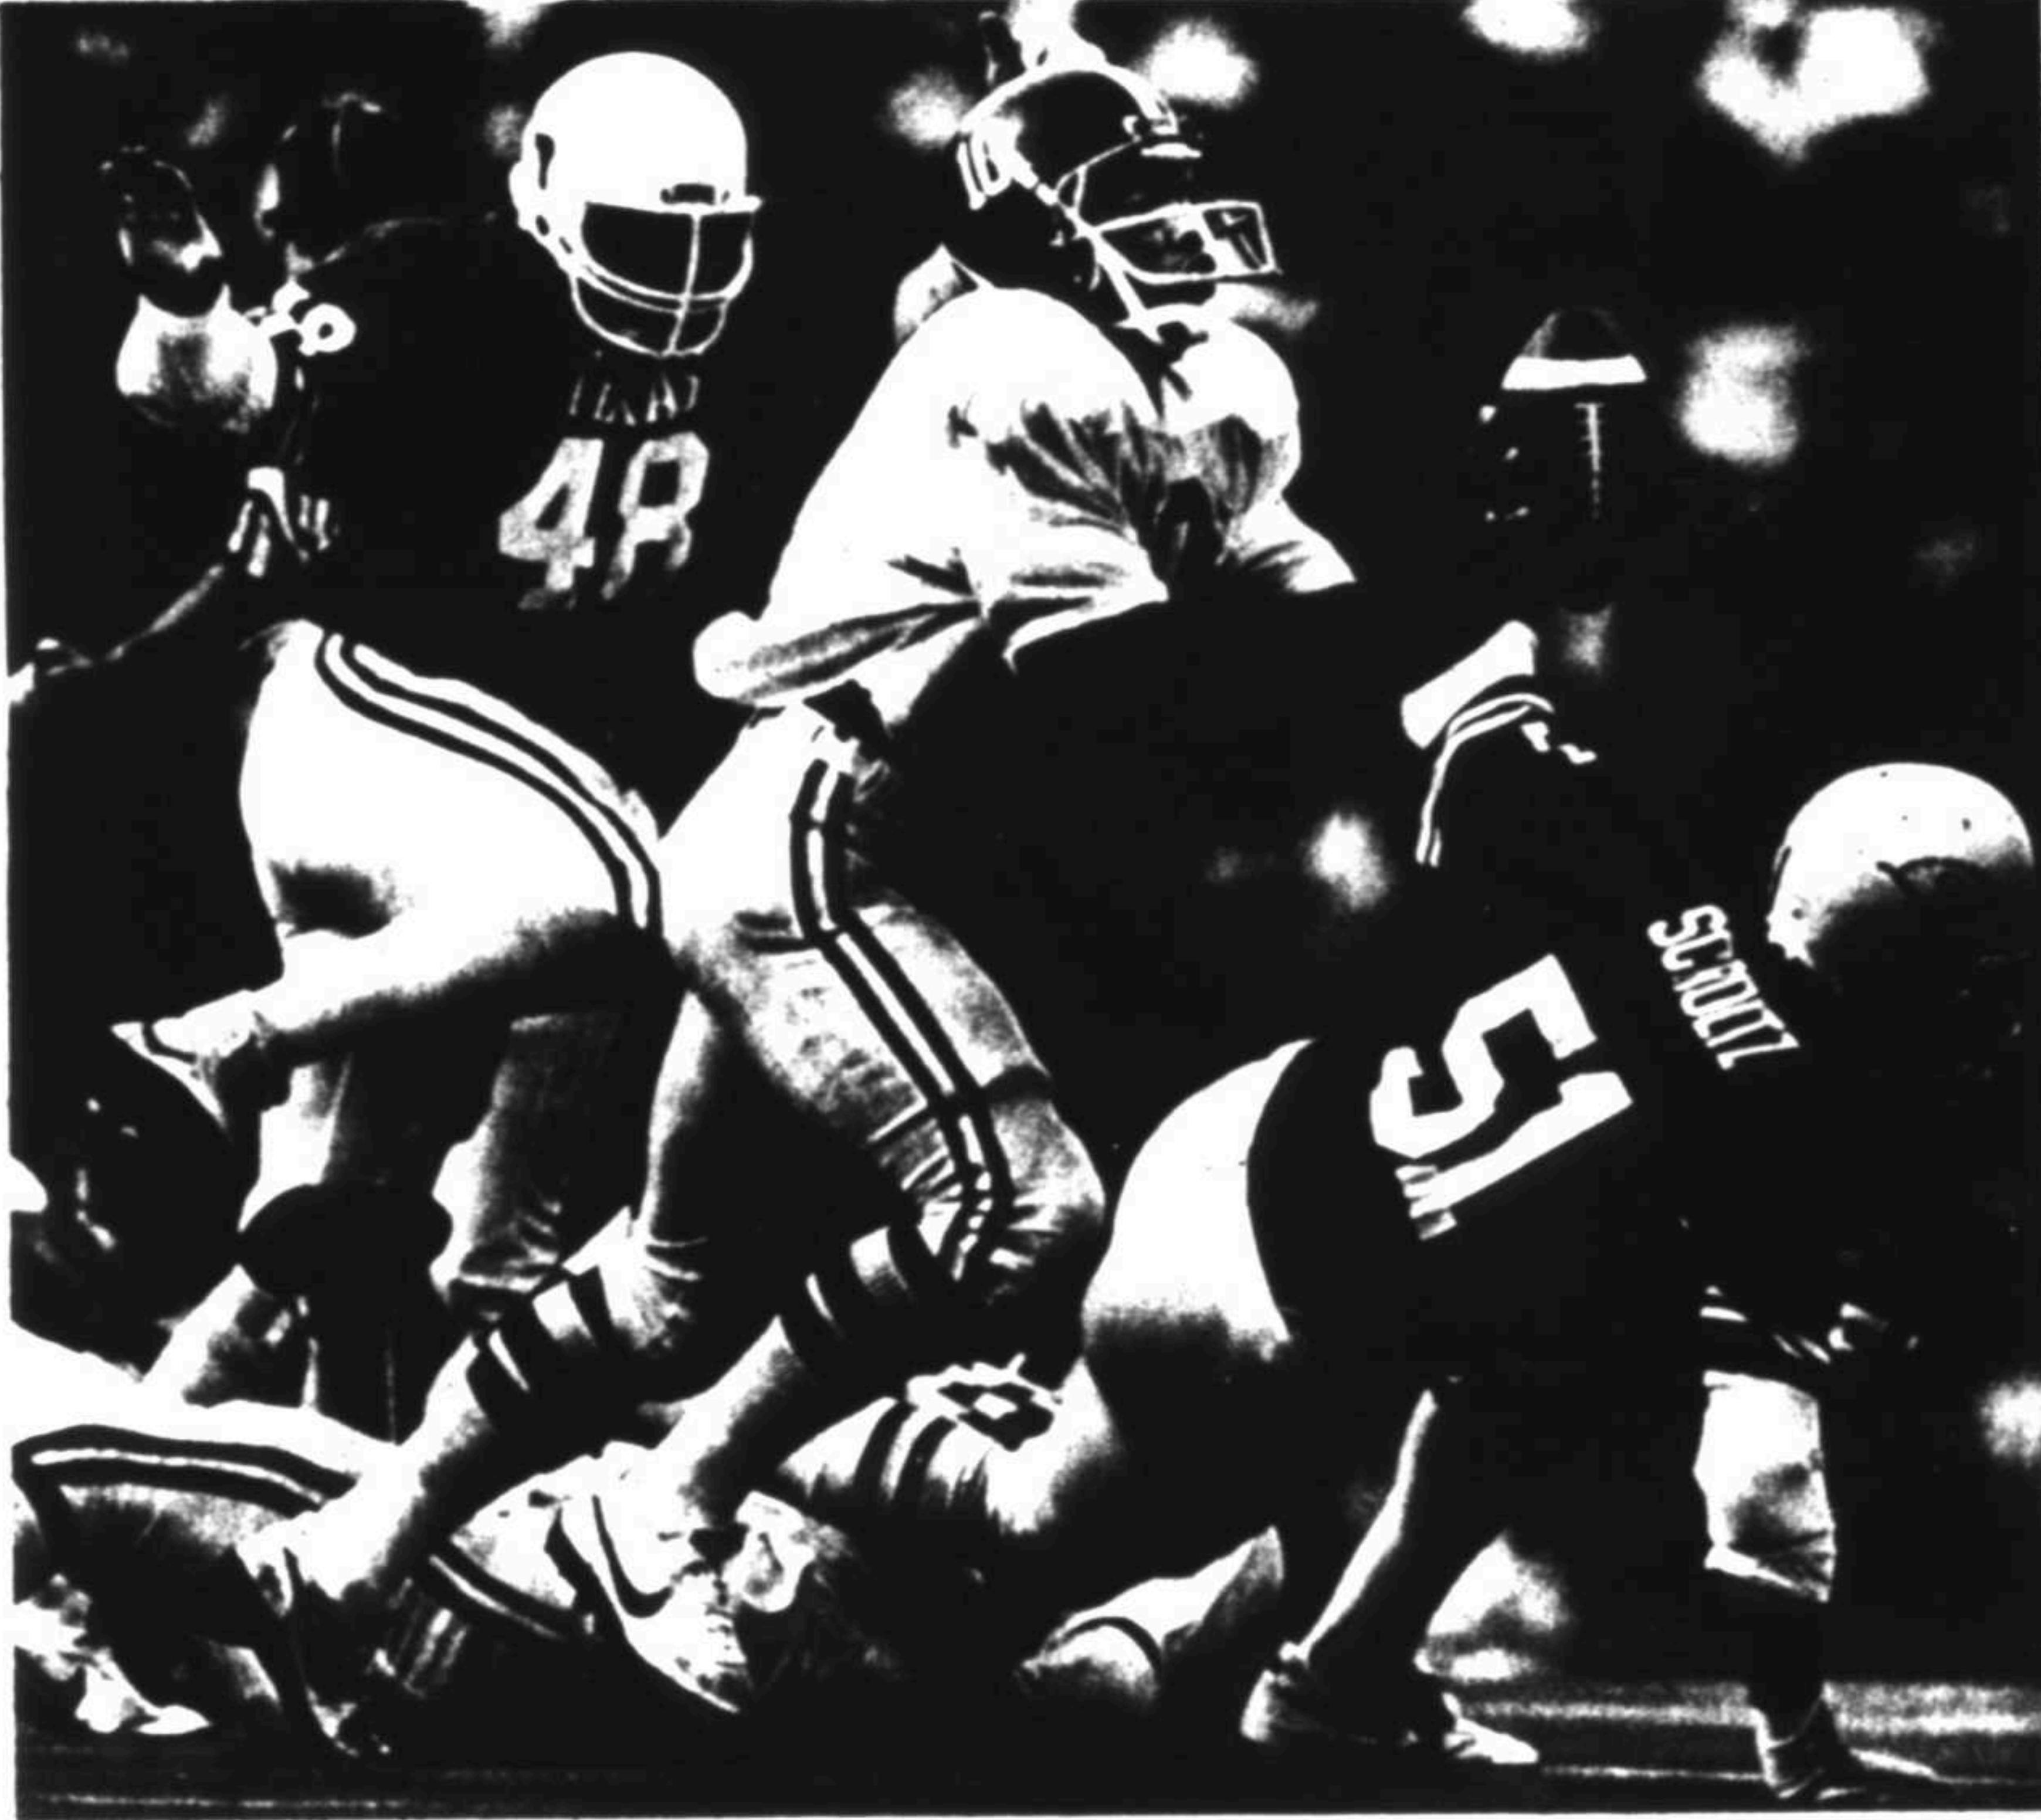

Blackledge, a sophomore, finished the contest with completions on 11 of his 24 throws for 175 yards and was picked off twice.

John Mazur connected on 11 of 23 for USC, for 123 yards. He, too, was intercepted twice.

Huskies beat Iowa in Rose Bowl, 28-0

Freshman tailback sparks Washington to win

PASADENA, Cal. (AP) — Freshman tailback Jacques Robinson provided the Washington Huskies' spark Friday, leading his team to a 28-0 victory over Iowa in the 68th Rose Bowl football game.

Robinson, a 204-pound speedster from San Jose, Calif., ran 1 yard for Washington's first touchdown and went 34 for another as the underdog Huskies regained control for the Pacific-10 over the Big 10 in Rose Bowl play.

The shutout was the first for Washington this season and made it 11 victories in the last 13 Rose Bowl games for the westerners and seven out of the last eight. Washington gained revenge for its 23-6 loss to Michigan a year ago and Iowa lost for the first time in three visits here.

The 12th-ranked Huskies finished with a 10-2 record while the Hawkeyes, No. 13 in the latest rankings, wound up 8-4.

Robinson, who said before the game he hoped to become the first Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Washington, was named the most valuable player of this game.

IOWA QUARTERBACK Gordie Bohannon was guilty of four turnovers — two fumbles and two interceptions.

Washington's second touchdown, also coming in the second quarter, was aided by a pass interference penalty against Iowa's Lou King on Aaron Williams in the end zone on a second-down play from the 19. Vince Coby then scored from the 1.

Robinson's long run brought the third touchdown and reserve quarterback Tim Cowan scored the finale on a 3-yard run. That followed a Bohannon fumble at the Iowa 18 recovered by Lynn Madsen.

Washington's solid defense was led by senior linebacker Mark Jerue, who was the leading tackler of the game.

Although it rained Thursday night, skies were clear and the field relatively dry for the game.

Robinson, who played sporadically during the season, led all rushers this New Year's Day with 142 yards on 20 carries.

Washington sophomore quarterback Steve Pelluer hit 15 of 29 passes for 142 yards for the Huskies, who went into the game 2½-point underdogs to the Big Ten champions.

DALLAS — The announced attendance was 73,243 for Friday's Cotton Bowl game, and Texas quarterback Robert Brewer could have sworn that 60,000 of them were members of the media.

An hour after the game, the junior from Richardson was still under siege, explaining Texas' 14-12 victory over Alabama.

It was Brewer who engineered a comeback in the final 10 minutes that kept Alabama coach Paul "Bear" Bryant from swelling his all-time record college career victory total to 316. And to Brewer's credit, he handled the press with as much poise and patience as he had shown against the Crimson Tide defense which had kept the Longhorns' offense bottled up for the first 50 minutes of the game.

IT WAS billed as just another meaningless New Year's Day bowl game through most of the week, and for the first three quarters it lived up to its billing as another win for Bryant and a forgettable bowl appearance for Texas. Alabama had just taken a 10-0 lead with 12:27 left in the game on a 24-yard field goal by Peter Kim and the way the Tide, which had eight sacks to its credit, had been playing defense, it looked like icing on the cake.

Two minutes later, the Cotton Bowl was stamped toward one of its most exciting finishes after Brewer broke 30 yards up the middle on a third-and-10 draw play that found the Alabama defensive secondary off in the stands someplace chasing Texas receivers.

"I wasn't too popular when I called time out on the draw," Brewer said, "but the linebackers were stacked for a blitz. The draw play was a great call by Coach (Fred) Akers. I had a hunch it might work. It was so wide open, my only worry was to get my rear in the end zone and I guess the fans helped me."

THE DRIVE that made it a game again covered 60 yards in eight plays and twice Brewer kept it going with big third down plays. With third-and-19 at the Texas 43, he found Herkie Walls on a 27-yard pass to the Tide 30 and then the TD run off the draw also came off of a third-and-10.

In fact, when Texas launched that drive on the UT 40, after a 22-yard kick-off return by Jitter Fields, it was the best series-starting field position for the Horns.

"It got a little frustrating," Brewer admitted. "We were moving the ball, all day but from our 20 to their 40. And that pass to Herkie was completed because of his speed. They were man-to-man inside and he flat outran them."

The winning touchdown came after Texas blunted the Tide's retaliatory drive at the Texas 45. Malcolm Simmons' punt eluded a Tide player covering and barely skipped into the end zone or the Longhorns would have been rubbing their backs against the goal post once again.

It took 11 plays but when Abilene Cooper's Terry Orr scooted in from eight yards out the dramatic was almost complete. Only 2:05 remained but 'Bama still had time after Joey Jones returned the kickoff 61 yards to the Texas 38. The return was a Cotton Bowl record.

On first down quarterback Walter Lewis, who had come off the bench to spark the Crimson into its 10-0 lead, went for the go-ahead points and wound up with nothing when weak safety William Graham intercepted on the one.

ASKED IF he was surprised at Alabama's bid for a six-pointer on first down, Akers said "Oh, were they going for six points? I thought they were going for the pass interference, which isn't a bad idea against us sometimes."

Bryant said, "The play was designed to go to the trailing halfback, and I think the films will show he was open on the play."

Graham a senior from Stillsee, explained, "We were in zone coverage so we played the ball and not the quarterback or receiver. We break for the ball when it is released. I anticipated the pass, stumbled going back but as I recovered, I saw Lewis throwing the ball and the receiver coming. I kept my eye on the ball and made the play at the last second."

After three plays into the line, Texas was in a punting situation from its four, and 1:36 still remained. Texas took a delay of the game penalty and then John Goodson stepped out of the end zone after using up as much time as possible.

The safety put Alabama within field goal range, but Akers' thinking was, "I wanted to get them as far away from my goal as possible and use up as much time in the process."

BRYANT SAID he didn't expect the safety and the team apparently didn't either or they were just lazy because they let Texas use up 11 or 12 seconds. But it was a smart move by Akers.

Both teams went into the game realizing that if everything fell right, the winner had an outside chance at No. 1.

Alabama's touchdown came on a seven-yard Lewis to split end Jessie Bendross pass with 8:49 left in the second period on a play that flirted with disaster. Tackle Bill Heathcock and end Eric Holle were pursuing the scrambling Lewis at the 30 when he spotted Bendross alone in the end zone. The Alabama drive devoured 82 yards in seven plays with a Lewis to tight end Bart Krout pass moving the ball from the UT 40 to the 12 to set up the score.

Lewis, the make-something-happen quarterback, replaced starter Alan Grey who squandered a 'Bama drive at the Texas nine with a fumble in the first period. For most of the game it seemed like a master stroke.

Bryant, however, said Grey was replaced because of a wrist injury.

Lewis wound up with seven completions in 12 attempts and 122 yards passing and rushed 24 times for 79 yards.

FOR ALABAMA, which finished 9-2-1, it dropped the Tide's Cotton Bowl record to 2-4 and while Bryant may be 315-81-17 against the rest of the world, he is 1-4-1 against Texas, the lone win coming when he was at A&M back in the 1950's.

However, the Bear as usual was gracious in defeat. "They just whipped us in the fourth quarter. Not only did they have a better second half than we did, but they got stronger toward the end of the game. Texas played great defense. They shut down our offense except for Walter Lewis, who made some fine runs."

Lewis had two possible touchdown runs thwarted first in the first half by one of his own linemen who knocked him down after he had broken into the clear. And then in the second half he was in an open field when he stumbled.

As far as Akers was concerned, the game pivoted on Alabama's 45-yard nine-play drive in the third quarter, a sortie on which the Tide was forced to settle for a field goal.

"Anytime you stop a team like Alabama and force it to go for a field goal, you've got to feel you were successful defensively," Akers said.

As for Brewer, a fourth-string quarterback at the season's start, the kid who couldn't pass completed 12-of-21 for 201 yards. His favorite target was former quarterback Donnie Little who caught seven for 92 but in the second half Lawrence Sampleton caught two important passes for 56 yards including one that set up the final touchdown.

"Before the game we thought that Donnie Little was our best receiver and we would have to attack Alabama's defense with him. However at halftime we saw something in the Alabama defense that prompted us to go to Sampleton," Akers said.

Brewer agreed, noting, "Sampleton was open all afternoon but he bit his tongue and was patient, and he was there when I needed him."

The Longhorns finished the season with a 10-1-1 record and went into the game No. 6 in the Associated Press poll.

Paterno interested in Patriot coaching job

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Penn State football Coach Joe Paterno has encouraged friends to tell the New England Patriots he's interested in the head coaching spot there, according to a published report.

According to an unidentified source quoted Friday by The Philadelphia Inquirer, "Paterno's people have let it be known that he wants to sit down after the (Fiesta) bowl game and discuss terms of him coming to New England."

Paterno, mentioned as one of the candidates to replace fired Patriots' Coach Ron Erhardt, had refused comment on the matter before Friday's Fiesta Bowl, in which his seventh-ranked Nittany Lions beat No. 8 Southern California, 26-10.

Erhardt was fired after a dismal 2-14 season. "He is very well-known and very highly respected up here," the source said of Paterno. "He'd be a guy who would certainly eliminate the big problem of a dropoff in season ticket sales. I would think what the Patriots want to do is determine how sincere his interest is."

Dolphins faced playoff pressure all season long

MIAMI (AP) — The play-off road is one sudden-death game after another. Win and you stay alive. Lose and kiss the year good-bye. It's the kind of pressure that can wreck some teams.

But the way the Miami Dolphins see it, they lived through that pressure enough during the regular season to make today's (5 p.m., EST) American Conference divisional play-off against the San Diego Chargers just another life-or-death game.

"A couple of times during the season, we hit periods when we weren't playing nearly as well as we were capable of playing," said defensive end Vern Den Herder, an 11-year veteran with the Dolphins and the only link on the defensive unit to Miami's Super Bowl teams of the early 1970s.

Den Herder referred specifically to a 31-28 victory over Baltimore, a 28-26 tie with the New York Jets and a 31-21 loss to Buffalo in one stretch, and a 30-27 overtime victory at New England and a 38-17 loss to Oakland on successive Sundays later in the year.

"At either of those points the whole season could've gone downhill," Den Herder said. "But I think each player individually took it upon himself not to give up. And we turned ourselves around, won the last four ballgames. So in that respect I think we learned a lot about ourselves right there."

"With Coach (Don) Shula," said nose tackle Bob Baumhower, who plays next to Den Herder, "every game's a pressure game. We've been through a lot of pressure situations the last four games. We were in a must-win situation all four times and we went into those games with the attitude that if we lost we'd be out of the play-offs."

The only difference between those games and the play-offs themselves is that if you lose from now on, you don't have another game to follow it. But I think we've got guys who are intelligent enough to know what's on the line without letting the pressure get to them.

"You try to develop consistency more than anything else," Den Herder said. "It isn't a situation where you say to yourself, 'OK, I'm going to be this high for this week and next week I'm going to be this much higher.' It doesn't happen that way. You just go out and try to do your job the best you can each week."

Besides, he said, the defense went through an emotional peak in the game against Kansas City, the 17-7 victory which gave Miami a play-off berth.

as he is tackled during the second quarter of the Rose Bowl game Friday in Pasadena. The Huskies went on to post a 28-0 victory over the favored Hawkeyes.

Pfister, Denton gain MAO semifinals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Rocket-serving Americans Hank Pfister and Steve Denton joined South African Johan Kriek and former champion Mark Edmondson in the semifinals of the $400,000 Marlboro Australian Open today.

Both Pfister and Denton dropped only one set as they advanced through their quarterfinal matches.

Pfister defeated last year's runner-up, Kim Warwick, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, while Denton outlasted Israel's Shlomo Glickstein 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-0.

The Americans face each other Saturday for a slot in Sunday's final, while Kriek plays the Australian Edmondson.

Despite Friday's relatively effortless win, Pfister is not overconfident of his chances Saturday.

"Anyone who beats Glickstein scares me," he said. "I was beaten by him in London and the score was about 6-2, 6-1. I just hope Steve leaves his serve at the hotel," he said.

Swirling winds in the Kooyong center court "bowl" again played havoc with the players' games.

Pfister said on his service toss up the wind was moving the ball around about eight inches. "We were both just trying to make contact, that's why we were breaking each other so much."

Both players also had to cope with numerous bad bounces from the dried-out court.

Pfister predicted that his biggest problem Saturday would be returning serve against Denton.

"I know he's going to just come out there smoking," Pfister said. "I'm worried about Saturday's match because I don't have any answers."

Pfister also said he strained a groin muscle during practice and was a bit shaky against Warwick. But he practiced with doubles partner John Sadri the morning of the match and ran for the first few balls without any ill effect.

Pfister said he would take ultrasound and ice treatment for the strained muscle shortly before meeting Denton.

As in earlier matches in the tournament, the linesmen received a tongue-lashing from the players.

In the ninth game of the final set, Warwick served what both players agreed was a clean ace when the score stood at 30-all.

But the center linesman called fault and Pfister claimed the umpire had also called a fault before changing his mind about 20 seconds later and asking for a let to be played.

After a short discussion between the umpire and the Grand Prix supervisor, American Ken Farrar, the fault call stood.

"How can you have confidence in the umpires when a guy in a quarter-final of a grand slam tournament makes a simple mistake," Pfister said.

He also said he had no confidence at all in the recently imported "electronic eye" machine that is supposed to pick up service faults.

"Warwick hit several slow second serves against the wind and it missed them — how is it going to pick up a serve travelling at 150 mph?" asked Pfister.

Denton, known mainly for his doubles successes, fired 19 aces today as he overpowered Glickstein, a former Israeli army sergeant.

Denton continued his dramatic rise up the world computer rankings with his third successive semifinal spot.

Earlier, he was successful in quarter-final matches in South Africa and last week in the New South Wales Open. Denton has skyrocketed from 440th in the world to his current ranking in the mid-30s.

Denton stands to pick up his biggest purse this week. He will win more than $17,000 even if he loses the semifinal against Pfister.

Denton beat Pfister in a 6-4, 7-6 encounter in the New South Wales Open quarterfinals last week. There was only one service break in the match.

SCRATCHPAD Two football players die

(AP) — Derek Singleton, who was the leading rusher at the University of Colorado when he was stricken with meningitis before a football game against Iowa State, died Friday in Los Angeles, the university said.

Singleton, who was 19, had been released in early November from the Ames, Iowa, hospital where he had been treated for 12 days. He was hospitalized again at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center while visiting his family over Thanksgiving, the university said in a news release. His condition worsened as he developed adult respiratory distress syndrome, a condition in which the lungs stop functioning, and he died at 7:02 a.m. PST Friday at the UCLA hospital, the university said.

"Everyone at the University of Colorado and the Boulder community shares in his family's sorrow," said football Coach Chuck Fairbanks. "Derek was a truly outstanding young man in every respect," he said. "His infectious smile and positive attitude on life and athletics was an inspiration to all of us. He was a joy to coach because he had the ability and competitive spirit to perform..."

Chris Emerson, a University of Kansas football player from Mesa, Ariz., who was held out of competition this season, died early Friday at a Lawrence hospital.

Sid Wilson, Kansas SID, said the 19-year-old fullback was taken to Lawrence Memorial Hospital Thursday night after complaining of chest pains and shortness of breath. Wilson quoted hospital officials as saying Emerson died about 1 a.m. of pulmonary embolism.

Emerson transferred to Kansas last spring from Scottsdale, Ariz., Junior College, and was held out of the 1981 season after undergoing arthroscopic surgery to repair a knee injury. He had surgery on the same right knee a month ago and was spending the Christmas holidays in Lawrence to begin a rehabilitation program.

Wilson said Kansas Coach Don Fambrough called the team and coaches together to tell them of Emerson's death after they arrived in the Topeka, Kan., airport Friday afternoon from Birmingham, Ala. "We are all saddened by this tragedy, and our thoughts and prayers go to his parents," said Fambrough. "Chris was a fine young man who worked so very hard. He will be missed by his teammates and coaches..."

DALLAS (AP) — The Cotton Bowl Athletic Association and CBS Sports announced Friday an extension of a long-term agreement that will give CBS the broadcast rights for the Cotton Bowl game through New Year's Day 1985. The 1982 Cotton Bowl game between Alabama and Texas marked the 25th consecutive CBS broadcast of the annual football classic...

Women's basketball Coach Pam Parsons, whose unbeaten South Carolina Lady Gamecocks are ranked second nationally, has resigned for health reasons, the school announced Friday. Parsons, who has led her teams to 101 wins and 43 losses in more than four seasons at South Carolina, turned in a letter of resignation Thursday...

Roger Ruud of Norway won the New Year's ski jumping competition Friday with leaps of 329 feet and 325 feet to move into second place in the overall standings of the 30th Four-Hill Tournament after two events. Manfred Deckert of East Germany, leader in the Four-Hill standings, was second with two 329-foot, collecting 236.6 points compared with Ruud's 237 in the rain- and fog-hampered competition. West Germany's Andreas Bauer, with jumps of 322 and 325 feet and 5,232.4 points, finished third.

Three jockeys were injured Friday in a three-horse spill during the second division of the $60,000-added La Prevoyante handicap at Calder Race Course. One mare had to be destroyed.

Jockeys Alfredo Smith Jr., Dave Penna and James McKnight reportedly were all conscious and able to move following the accident. They were rushed to Parkway General Hospital in Miami, where a spokeswoman said one was hospitalized and the others released. According to observers, Smith was pitched over the head of his mount, Ligne Grise, after she stumbled and fell. He was knocked out momentarily. McKnight was spitting blood and Penna complained of head pains.

Heavily favored Just A Game led all the way in the race to score by three lengths over Sweetest Chant...

Pierre Rioux scored two goals and had one assist and Marc Habscheid added two more goals to lead Team Canada to an 11-1 victory over Team Switzerland in the IHL junior tournament Friday night.

The Canadians, now 6-0, can clinch their first amateur championship in 20 years with a victory over Czechoslovakia in Rochester Saturday night. Switzerland fell to 0-6 in the tournament. The Canadians scored four goals in the first period and stretched the lead to 7-1 after two periods. Switzerland scored their lone goal early in the second period when Peter Moser connected on a power play. The Canadians, who finished seventh in last year's tournament, could take their first international amateur title since taking the 1961 world senior hockey championships.

Ballesteros ups Sun City advantage to three shots

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Seve Ballesteros said he faces more pressure than the others in the elite field chasing the biggest prize in the history of golf.

"I need the money more than they do," Ballesteros insisted with a straight face after he had stretched his lead to three strokes Friday at the halfway point of the $1-million Sun City Golf Challenge.

The other four in the invitational field — Jack Nicklaus, host Gary Player, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino — all rank high on the all-time list of golf's money-winners.

While Ballesteros, a former winner of the Masters and British Open, has become a wealthy man through his golf exploits, he doesn't begin to approach the wealth of the others.

"I remember how my father told me he worked 16 hours a day for 30 pesetas, about 50 cents," the young Spaniard said.

"He told me I must try hard to do better than that in my life."

And Ballesteros, who made only $5 a month in a 6-month stint with the Spanish Air Force a few years ago, now is playing — and leading — in the chase for a $500,000 first prize.

"Seve is going to be a hard man to catch," Trevino said after Ballesteros had built his lead with a blistering, 5-under-par 31 on the back nine Friday, finishing off a 68 that gave him a 137 total, 7-under-par on the 7,693-yard Gary Player Country Club course.

"A lucky round," Ballesteros shrugged.

Trevino disagreed.

"I was afraid of this," he said. "I was afraid someone was going to get out in front and run away. And, he's the guy to do it."

Nicklaus, with another 70, and Miller, with a second round 66, shared second place at 140.

"I just wanted to stay close," Miller said. "I didn't want to do something dumb and get too far behind. I wanted to stay in the thick of it."

"I want to be able to tell my kids I was there and I had a shot at it. And now I do."

Nicklaus, who has played two good but not spectacular rounds, was conceding nothing.

Trevino, however, missed eight greens in the second round and said he "was fortunate to shoot 74," a figure that put him at par 144 and seven strokes off the pace. Player was three more strokes behind at 147 after a 77 on the course he designed in the crater of an extinct volcano and adjacent to this $100-million resort complex some 100 miles from Johannesburg.

Haas up by three in Spalding Invite

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jay Haas shot a 6-under-par 66 at Old Del Monte Friday to take the third-round lead in the $150,000 Spalding Invitational golf tournament being contested over four Monterey Peninsula courses.

Haas was at 198, 17-under-par, after three rounds in this five-round tournament that continues Saturday on all four courses and ends Sunday at Pebble Beach.

Three strokes back at 201 was Rick Acton, who followed his course record of 64 at Old Del Monte Thursday with a 67 at Carmel Valley Friday.
