Two planes collide

Airliner crashes into commuter craft

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A USAir Boeing 737 airliner coming in for a landing Friday struck an outbound commuter plane and caught fire at Los Angeles International Airport, killing at least five people and injuring 25, officials said.

The airliner collided with a Sky West commuter plane, Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Elly Brekke said, adding that they crashed on the ground.

Scores of people survived the crash and at least five were confirmed dead, said Bob Dambacher, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County coroner's office.

Three hours after the crash, USAir spokeswoman Agnes Huff said 29 people from the two planes were unaccounted for, while 72 people were accounted for. Those accounted for included the dead, she said.

"Something exploded. The airplane started jiggling. I saw flames," USAir survivor Chun Hong, a doctor from Canton, Ohio, said. "Everybody became panicked. I jumped over a seat when I saw it was impossible to go out the front.

"Someone had opened an emergency exit in the rear," he said. "The airplane was broken completely in half. It was smashed into two pieces."

"We saw a flash," said Gretchen Emig, a witness. "We could see people jumping out."

Black smoke and bright orange flames poured out of the jetliner's windows and the runway was flooded with firefighting foam. The commuter plane, with 12 people aboard, was not visible in TV broadcasts and there were unconfirmed reports it was trapped underneath the USAir jet.

"The plane came in without its landing gear," Roger Boatright, who works near the airport, told CBS Radio. "We saw it fly over our building and me and my boss were talking about it not having its landing gear down. And the next thing you know there was like a bright flash, and that's when we started seeing the smoke."

The flaming 737 slid into an abandoned fire station near the runway, witnesses said.

"It ran into a building. There was a huge blaze," said witness Rodney Bingley. "We saw people running away from the aircraft. We saw people trying to get away from the wreckage itself."

Witness Glen Bergstrom viewed the scene from his balcony with a telescope.

"I saw three passengers, what I thought were passengers ... one guy

Khafji battle winds down

■ While Iraqi soldiers withdraw from the Saudi town, reports indicate mechanized unit on the move across the border.

Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Iraqi and U.S.-led forces probed and parried Friday in Saudi Arabia's battle-hot Khafji corner, the winding down of skirmishes in which Marines and Iraqis sometimes battled just yards from each other in the frigid desert.

The hard-hit Iraqi intruders withdrew from the town of Khafji on Thursday in what American commanders called a thorough defeat for Baghdad. More than 500 Iraqi prisoners were reported taken.

Sketchy reports Friday said Iraqi mechanized units were on the move again across the border in Kuwait, raising concerns about a new assault. But U.S. military spokesmen, dismissing those reports, said they saw no "pattern" signaling an offensive.

Iraqi positions at the Saudi-Kuwaiti frontier were struck again and again Friday in hundreds of sorties by Desert Storm bombers, the U.S. command said. Giant B-52s joined in pounding the Iraqi troops.

The aggressive strategy Iraq unleashed this week against the alliance's front lines seemed designed to throw them off balance as they ready an eventual offensive to reverse the 6-month-old Iraqi invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

But the U.S. command sounded undisturbed, and its feelings were shared out in the field.

"We'd rather have them come to us than we go in there," said Sgt. Lyle Sam, one of the Marines at the embattled town of Khafji.

As the Desert Storm air war went on without let-up, Iraqi radio claimed U.S. and allied warplanes were machine-gunning pedestrians in Iraq. Captured pilots should be treated as "war criminals," the radio declared.

De Klerk wants to repeal all apartheid laws

■ Scrapping apartheid laws will not resolve the country's racial and political conflicts; a new political system must still be devised.

Associated Press

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk said he would repeal all remaining apartheid laws Friday to mark the "end of an era" of decades of conflict and clear the way for a multiracial democracy.

Enraged right-wing white conservatives stormed out of Parliament to protest de Klerk's landmark speech as thousands of blacks marched around the country or boycotted work to demand immediate formation of a multiracial government.

PTA volunteers fingerprint students so parents will have identification

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"Messy," "gooey," "slimy" and "fun" were just a few of the words uttered by Rusk Elementary School students as they described having their fingerprints made.

City Council Parent Teacher Association volunteers set up an assembly line of fingerprint forms, ink pads and hand cleaner as they prepared to get fingerprints of 600 elementary school pupils Friday.

"Getting my finger prints made was real fun," said Davina Murdock, 12. "But that gunky stuff you have to wash your hands off with was real slimy."

Abraham Gutierrez, 12, said this was the first time he ever had his prints made. "Cleaning my hands with that slimy stuff was pretty gross," he said.

Letrisha Arteaga also was surprised at the texture of the hand cleaner, but said it was effective. "I kind of liked that gooey stuff," she said. "It worked real good and really got the ink off my hands."

Although the children enjoyed getting their fingerprints made, few knew the purpose of having them.

The fingerprinted forms, when completed, will be given to parents of children fingerprinted, according to Jeannie Waldorf. Ms. Waldorf said the forms will serve as identification if children are lost or kidnapped.

"Parents had to give permission for their children to be printed," Ms. Waldorf said.

America West cancels flights

Staff Report

America West passengers this month may get an unpleasant surprise because some flights have been cut temporarily, Midland International Airport spokeswoman Marcy Blauvelt said Friday.

The airline cut its daily round trips to Phoenix from three to one in order to meet the demands of expanded routes in California, Ms. Blauvelt said.

Effective immediately, she said the midday and evening round trip flights will be axed until March 1. Similar cuts are being made at the Lubbock, Palm Springs, Calif., and San Jose, Calif., airports, she said.

"It's not a good news thing," Ms. Blauvelt said. "We're not real pleased about it. They apologized for the short notice."

She said American West needed to pull planes from the affected cities in order to use them for new routes inside California. Delivery of new aircraft for those routes has been delayed, she said.

She said Southwest and American airlines are honoring tickets from the affected America West flights. Passengers also are being booked on other America West flights, she said.

America West officials could not be reached for comment.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies forecast

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for sunny skies, with a high in the upper 60s. Winds will be from the south at 5 to 15 mph. There will be increasing cloudiness tonight, with a low in the mid 30s.

Sunday is expected to be remain cloudy, with a high in the mid 60s.

Friday's high was 61, compared to the date's record high of 80 set in 1963. Friday's low was 32. The record low for today's date is minus 11 degrees, set in 1985.

STATE

A continuing warming trend across Texas Friday failed to bring temperatures into the 70s, but most sections of the state reported clear skies with low relative humidity after a high-pressure system moved through, according to the National Weather Service.

Afternoon readings hovered in the 60s statewide, with 55 degrees at Galveston.

Winds were mainly southerly and southwesterly at 10 to 30 mph under the influence of a low-pressure trough in the Panhandle, and light and variable elsewhere.

The warming trend was expected to continue this weekend across Texas, with highs Saturday and Sunday from the 60s to 70s.

Overnight lows through Sunday should range from the 30s in the Panhandle to the 40s in North Texas and 50s in the south.

A slight chance of rain was forecast in South Texas on Sunday, with partly cloudy skies through most of the region.

Precipitation was also forecast in northern regions, the weather service said.

NATION

Rain splashed the far northern corner of the Pacific Coast and parts of Florida on Friday, with some snowfall in Michigan and Pennsylvania, while temperatures soared to unseasonable levels on parts of the Plains.

At midday, rain fell over east-central Florida and the northern one-fourth of the Pacific Coast. Heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. EST was 1.40 inches at Quillayute, Wash.

Snow showers were scattered over northern Lower Michigan and north-central Pennsylvania.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

GULF: Pentagon identifies female MIA

(From 1A)

Forty-four Americans and others are listed as prisoners or as missing in action, many of them pilots.

The Pentagon on Friday identified the first woman missing in action as Melissa A. Rathbun-Nealy, 20, of Newaygo, Mich. An Army specialist, Rathbun-Nealy disappeared with a male soldier during a transportation mission near an oil pipeline in northern Saudia Arabia.

Rathbun-Nealy is believed to be the first servicewoman reported missing in action since World War II, the Pentagon has said. The male soldier who disappeared at the same time was identified as Army Spc. David Lockett, 23.

She is with the 233rd Transportation Co. based at Fort Bliss, Texas. With the Army for 2½ years, she has been in Saudi Arabia since October, said her parents, Leo and Joan Rathbun.

In a statement, the couple said, "We were told that Melissa and the other soldier's jeep was found abandoned in the desert with their duffel bags and gas masks inside the vehicle. We can only hope and pray that she's OK."

In battered Baghdad, AP correspondent Salah Nasrawi reported several houses destroyed by what Iraqi officials said were two Tomahawks, low-flying cruise missiles launched by U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf.

A British TV report from Baghdad said one or two incoming missiles were shot down by ground defenses and crashed into a residential suburb.

Allied commanders say they target only military and other strategic targets, but acknowledge that civilian casualties are inevitable. The Iraqis have reported more than 300 civilian deaths in the 15-day-old air war.

The battle over Khafji, an abandoned oil town in Saudi Arabia's northeast corner, was part of a four-pronged advance late Tuesday and early Wednesday by 1,500 or more Iraqi troops, led by tanks, along a 25-mile front. Most of the Iraqi attackers were repulsed, but some seized and held Khafji through long hours of bloody street fighting.

By late Thursday, Saudi and Qatari troops, supported by U.S. airpower and artillery, retook the town, the Saudi military said. Baghdad, which first described the battle as an Iraqi victory, acknowledged in a military communique Friday that Iraqi troops had withdrawn from Khafji.

But the dueling did not end.

From Khafji's southern edge, the boom of artillery exchanges could still be heard Friday, and Marine officers told AP correspondent Neil MacFarquhar that Iraqi armor had not yet retreated back across the Kuwaiti border, 8 miles north of town.

Reports persisted, too, of scattered Iraqi snipers remaining in Khafji. The Marines said the Saudis were going house to house in search of holdouts.

Marines told of confusion among the allies in the difficult counterattack on Khafji early Thursday.

A member of a Marine reconnaissance unit in town throughout the battle said Saudi armored vehicles rolled into Khafji and "once they encountered fire they just started shooting all over the place" — at Iraqis, at Marines, at other Saudis. Another Marine said communication was difficult among the American and Arab allies.

Iraqi tanks punched across the border again late Thursday about 50 miles west of Khafji, rolling south into Saudi territory from the Kuwaiti border town of Umm Hujul, news pool reports said.

Units of the 1st Marine Division called in air strikes and artillery support, and three Iraqi tanks were destroyed, the reports said.

In earlier fighting west of Khafji, where freezing temperatures chill the desert overnight, Marines and Iraqis engaged in close combat, sometimes coming within 25 yards of each other, the pool reporters said.

Eleven Marines were killed in that earlier action — the only U.S. combat deaths in the ground war thus far. The military was investigating whether some of the Marines, in a light armored vehicle, were killed by a missile fired by a U.S. warplane.

In the fighting west of Khafji, the U.S. command said, allied forces destroyed 61 Iraqi tanks and armored personnel carriers, but it gave no Iraqi casualty figures. In the Khafji battle, 15 Saudi and 30 Iraqi soldiers were killed, the Saudi military reported. The allies took more than 500 Iraqi prisoners, the U.S. command said.

Some Saudi and U.S. officers said Friday that Iraqi mechanized brigades were on the move again within Kuwait. But Pentagon operations chief Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly said later in Washington the movement was "in all directions, north, south, east and west. ... We didn't see any real pattern to it."

Some Iraqi units could have been moving to alternate defensive positions and some may have been returning from the Khafji fighting, he said.

But front-line troops clearly were not letting down their guard.

"The Iraqis are on the move north of the border and we are ready for anything," said Army Lt. Col. Jack Petri, a liaison with the Saudis at Khafji.

Lt. Gen. Walt Boomer, top Marine in the Persian Gulf, told reporters the Desert Storm coalition would go ahead with its ground assault plans "when we're ready, not when he's ready" — meaning Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Alliance warplanes flew more than 2,500 sorties against targets in Iraq and Kuwait on Friday, the U.S. command reported. It said over 600 air strikes, including B-52 bomb drops, hit positions of the Republican Guards, backbone units for the Iraqi defense of Kuwait.

The allied bomb runs also focused on Iraqi armor and infantry positions along the Saudi-Kuwaiti border, the command said.

It confirmed reports that a U.S. AC130-H gunship — a transport plane outfitted with cannons and machine guns — went down behind Iraqi lines Thursday and all 14 aboard were listed as missing.

Local environmental company may help in gulf spill clean-up

Staff Report

The Veltmann Corporation, a locally owned environmental company headquartered in Midland, has been invited to meet with officials of the Pentagon and the United States Coast Guard to review and possibly assist in cleaning up spills created by Iraq's dumping of oil in the gulf region of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

Clyde Veltmann, president of the company, will travel to Washington next Wednesday to meet at Coast Guard headquarters with Department of Defense and Coast Guard personnel to discuss options for rendering assistance if and when it may be required.

The Veltmann Corporation has served oil and related industries in the area since 1987. Services include hazardous spill clean ups, environmental surveys, air monitoring, underground storage tanks, and OSHA & EPA training.

The company was recommended to Washington officials by congressional representatives from Texas following investigations of capabilities and qualifications of environmental companies throughout the country.

CRASH: USAir jet collides with commuter plane jumped from the plane to the pavement ... two other people slid down the ramp," he said.

Later, "there was so much smoke coming out of there I couldn't see anything, the whole plane must have been on fire," he said.

The USAir jet was Flight 1493, airline spokesman John Bronson said. The Sky West plane was Flight 5569, Ms. Brekke said.

There were 83 passengers and a crew of six aboard the Boeing 737-300, said USAir spokeswoman Agnes Huff. The flight originated in Syracuse, N.Y., than stopped in Washington, D.C., and Columbus, Ohio before traveling to Los Angeles.

Ten passengers and two crew members were on board the commuter craft, a Swearingen Metroliner, said Jeff Rich, an air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board. The twin-engine turboprop plane is used mainly by short-haul commuter airlines, with a passenger capacity of 20 people.

Ms. Brekke said the crash was reported at 6:04 p.m.

Ambulances rushed to the scene along with 11 companies of firefighters.

The Boeing 737 is a twin-engine jetliner with passenger capacity ranging from 120 to 145. It has two-person cockpit crew.

Ms. Brekke said the Sky West plane was en route to Palmdale, about 50 miles north of Los Angeles.

A team of National Transportation Safety Board investigators was preparing to fly to Los Angeles and inspect the crash site, spokesman Ted Lopatkiewisc said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Drug bust

Staff Reports

Three more people were in custody Friday night at the Midland County Detention Facility in connection with a Permian Basin Drug Task Force drug bust which began Thursday.

Arrested and jailed were: Thomas Bonilla, 33, three counts of cocaine delivery, bond set at $20,000 for each count; Terry Dan Ratliff, 26, one count of delivery of a simulated controlled substance, bond set at $30,000; and Lupe Valdez Valadez, 47, one count of cocaine delivery, bond set at $20,000.

The additional arrests, which occurred between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 11 p.m. Friday, brought to 15 the total number of arrests in the sweep and to 19 the total number of indictments served. Task force officers had set out to serve 37 indictments in the roundup, which targeted Midland drug dealers who had sold narcotics to undercover officers.

Man sentenced

A 39-year-old Midland man was sentenced to 50 years in state prison Friday after pleading guilty to sexual assault of a child, the Midland County District Attorney's Office reported.

Waymon Howard, 713 S. Tilden St., pleaded guilty in connection with an Aug. 1, 1990, incident involving a 9-year-old girl.

Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty, who prosecuted the case, said Howard molested the girl after accosting her at the corner of Lincoln Street and Kentucky Avenue around 7 p.m. Aug. 1. According to testimony, Howard took the girl to an abandoned house where he sexually assaulted her.

After Howard left, the girl rode her bicycle home and told family members about the incident, reports said. Based on information provided by the girl, police arrested Howard on Aug. 2. The girl later picked Howard out of a photo lineup and identified him as her assailant, Petty said.

Howard had been awaiting trial in the Midland County Detention Facility on $25,000 bond.

Judge Hyde assessed Howard's punishment in accordance with a plea agreement, Petty reported.

Cycle, car wreck

A Midland man was slightly injured Friday night in an accident involving a car and a motorcycle at the intersection of Garden City Highway and FM 307, the Midland Police Department reported.

John Leonard Gallinari, 32, was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital following the accident and released, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman said.

The wreck occurred at about 5:15 p.m. when a 1982 Mercury Grand Marquis driven by Rita Acosta Moreno, 63, pulled into the path of a 1980 Harley-Davidson motorcycle driven by Gallinari, the police report said.

Ms. Moreno's car was northbound across Garden City Highway from Lamesa Road to FM 307 when Gallinari, who was westbound on Garden City Highway, collided with her, reports show.

Gallinari was transported to MMH suffering from spinal injuries, abrasions and lacerations, according to reports.

Ms. Moreno was not injured in the wreck, the report stated.

Attempted murder

ODESSA — A 70-year-old man was arrested Thursday and charged with attempted murder in connection with the stabbing of a 16-year-old boy on Jan. 26, police said.

John W. Holland Jr. remained in jail Friday under a $10,000 bond set by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly.

The day the stabbing took place, the suspect and victim reportedly engaged in an argument of unknown nature, police said.

The victim told officers the suspect knocked on his door later that day and when he opened it, the suspect forced his way in. The suspect allegedly pushed the victim up against a dresser and stabbed the youth in the left forearm, under the right bicep and in the chest, police said.

Both the victim and the suspect lived in the same apartment complex at 1800 Andrews Highway, police said.

DE KLERK: President calls for end to apartheid laws

(From 1A)

Parliament that once lawmakers adopt his proposals "the South African statute book will be devoid, within months, of the remnants of racially discriminatory legislation."

He said the government would scrap the last three major legal pillars of apartheid — the Group Areas Act, the land acts and the phasing out of the Population Registration Act.

While clearly signaling de Klerk's intentions to end white domination, the scrapping of apartheid laws will not resolve the country's racial and political conflicts after 300 years of racial division. A new political system must still be devised and blacks and whites learn to live together in peace and equality.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler called de Klerk's proposals "dramatic and far-reaching." But she said South Africa has yet to release all prisoners persecuted for their political beliefs or detained without trial.

Freeing the prisoners would be necessary for the United States to consider removing economic sanctions imposed by Congress in 1986.

U.S. sanctions ban new investment in South Africa; the import of South African arms, iron, steel, gold coins and agricultural products, and bars South African Airways' flights into U.S. territory. The sanctions also restrict banking activities.

The Group Areas Act segregates neighborhoods by race, the Land Acts limit blacks to 13 percent of the country's territory and the Population Registration Act classifies all citizens into race groups. The first two will be scrapped outright and the third phased out.

The government's strong majority in Parliament ensures the laws will be scrapped. The country has 30 million blacks and 5 million whites.

The speech came one year after de Klerk stunned South Africa and the world by announcing he would scrap apartheid. He legalized the African National Congress and other opposition groups and released ANC leader Nelson Mandela, jailed for 27 years, within days.

Once apartheid laws are scrapped, de Klerk must still hammer out a new constitution acceptable to both white and black opposition groups. He has said this could take years.

De Klerk's speech triggered a walkout among all 39 outraged lawmakers of the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, the official opposition party.

Some Conservative lawmakers were ordered from the chamber after yelling that the president was a "traitor to the nation" and the "hangman of the Afrikaner" — the politically dominant whites of mostly Dutch descent.

De Klerk appeared unperturbed and continued his speech after quipping that demonstrations were part of democracy. State television said it was the first time a party had walked out in protest during the opening of parliament.

De Klerk spoke in general terms of black-white power sharing, but his speech did not provide any fresh details on his plans. Though he called for "universal adult franchise," he has said that simple majority rule will replace white domination with black dominaiton.

His address offered few new ideas on problems threatening to derail his reforms, such as the black factional fighting that claimed 3,000 lives last year, the worst year on record.

De Klerk's National Party has governed South Africa since 1948 and codified apartheid.

"The repeal of these last remaining discriminatory laws will bring us to the end of an era, an era in which it was sought to deal with the reality of a diversity of peoples ... by means of discriminatory coercion," he said.

As de Klerk spoke, at least 10,000 protesters calling for the end of the white-minority government marched peacefully through Cape Town as part of nationwide protests by black opposition groups. About 8,000 protesters marched peacefully in Pretoria.

Tens of thousands of black workers took part in a "stayaway" from work to back calls for multiracial elections for a constituent assembly to write a new constitution.

Protest leaders said they wanted immediate elections for a constitutent assembly to draw up a new constitution and clear the way for a multiracial government. Whites, Asians and Coloreds or mixed race people have separate chambers in parliament, but blacks have no political representation.

FINGERS: Students had prints made

(From 1A)

The messy process involved making black ink prints of finger tips and three fingers of each hand. Kindergarten children had the entire palm side of their hands printed.

The PTA volunteers, who wore protective aprons, said they obtained their supplies from the police department. "We were also trained by the Midland Police Department," Ms. Waldorf said.

She said that all elementary school children in the district will be given the opportunity to have their fingerprints made.

Mother, son divided over U.S.' role in war

By Denise Lavoie

WINSTED, Conn. (AP) — Norman Newfield kissed his mother goodbye before leaving for a rally to support the Persian Gulf War, although he knew he'd see her there — at the other end of the park, demonstrating against the war.

The national divisions created by the war run through the middle of the Newfield family.

Norman Newfield points to the lessons of history and his own tour of duty with the Navy in Vietnam to justify the war. Amande Newfield's feelings are rooted in experiences no less personal: watching three brothers risk their lives in World War II and agonizing over her only son while he patrolled Vietnam's coastline for three years.

"He's my son and I love him, but as far as the war goes, we don't see eye to eye," said Mrs. Newfield, a 71-year-old retired factory worker who retains a slight French-Canadian accent, more than 60 years after she emigrated from Quebec.

Mrs. Newfield stood with her sister, her daughter and 30 other protesters during a rally at the town's East End Park. Her 47-year-old son was the only family member across the green, where some 200 people rallied in support of the war.

"No one wants to go to war, not even people in the military," Newfield said that day. "But there are certain things you have to do. If we were not involved in World War I and World War II, what would Europe look like today? They'd be goose-stepping in Paris."

A few days later, Newfield declined to talk. Talking about the political schism within his family, he said, would trivialize both the war and his family. But his mother wanted to talk.

"As soon as the U.S. sent troops, I said, 'Oh, God, we're gonna have a war.' And he said, 'Yeah ...' " she recalled, sitting in her parlor, surrounded by pictures of her children and her late husband.

"Well, that was like putting a match to kerosene and we've been talking about it ever since," she said.

Newfield retired from the Navy in 1989 and moved back to his mother's yellow house in this old New England mill town after his father died. He was divorced, and his mother was suddenly alone after 46 years of marriage, so they could keep each other company, he told her.

He worked as a substitute teacher and they led a quiet life until the Persian Gulf crisis interrupted their domestic tranquility.

Mrs. Newfield wanted the United States to give economic sanctions against Iraq time to work.

"My husband and I used to get up every morning and listen to the radio and cry on each other's shoulders, wondering what Norman was doing," Mrs. Newfield said. "Not one drop of our boys' blood is worth this war."

Now, mother and son watch different network newscasts on different televisions in different rooms of the tiny house.

When Newfield sits at his kitchen table for his morning coffee, the first thing he sees is the latest editorial cartoon slamming the decision to go to war. The cartoons have been carefully taped to the kitchen wall by his mother.

"He looks at it, but he pretends he doesn't see them," she said, giggling.

Despite such playfulness, she also finds their differences distressing.

"Yes, we sometimes get angry," Mrs. Newfield said. "But then a few minutes later he says, 'Ma, can I help you with the trash?' "

The day of the rally, Newfield told a reporter his family is close enough to weather their differences over the war.

"We all love each other," he said. "We get along fine, although sometimes we trade some verbal salvos."

Ex-U.S. prisoner returns to action

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — A Navy flier shot down and held prisoner in Syria and rescued by Jesse Jackson in 1983 is fighting in the Middle East again.

"I hope this mess gets over with and I hope he comes home safely," said Ernest Bryant, father-in-law of Robert Goodman.

Jackson won Goodman's freedom in negotiations with Syria 30 days after the A-6 in which the lieutenant was a navigator-bombardier was shot down. Recently, Goodman, 34, now a lieutenant-commander, was sent to the Persian Gulf as a fighter plane navigator aboard the USS Roosevelt, said Bryant.

Journalists appeal for help in finding newsmen

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-four U.S. journalists and news executives appealed Friday to Iraq and four other Middle East nations for help in finding four CBS newsmen who disappeared Jan. 21 while covering the Gulf War.

"It is possible they were detained by Iraqi forces," said those signing the appeal, organized by public TV anchorman Robert MacNeil, a friend of a producer in the CBS crew headed by correspondent Bob Simon.

The signers included anchormen Tom Brokaw, Dan Rather and Bernard Shaw, former CBS anchor Walter Cronkite, Washington Post Executive Editor Ben Bradlee, and Louis D. Boccardi, president and general manager of The Associated Press.

Jim Lehrer, MacNeil's co-anchor on public TV's "The MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour," also joined the appeal.

It was sent to Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, to U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar, and to the ambassadors representing Yemen, Tunisia, Saudi Arabia and Jordan, a spokeswoman for MacNeil said.

MacNeil is a friend of CBS producer Peter Bluff, who with Simon, cameraman Roberto Alvarez, and soundman Juan Caldera disappeared while working in northern Saudi Arabia near the Kuwait and Iraqi borders.

The four were without a military escort. They were last heard from Jan. 21, and their abandoned car was found two days later by a Saudi patrol.

CBS spokesman Tom Goodman quoted Don DeCesare, a CBS News vice president who visited the region, as saying, "Our crew is most likely in the hands of the Iraqis" and probably are in Iraq or Kuwait.

CNN correspondent Peter Arnett has reported from Baghdad that Iraqi officials say they have no information about the journalists.

The missing men "are known to us as professional journalists of the highest repute," said the appeal sent out Friday.

Questions remain about Khafji defense

By Charles J. Lewis
Hearst News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — There's a major unanswered question about how well U.S., Saudi and Qatari troops were defending Khafji Tuesday night.

That's when Iraqi forces were able to move five tanks and 100 troops traveling in 15 armored personnel carriers right down the main highway under a full moon into Khafji.

It's unclear how they made the trip undetected and unscathed, given the U.S. air armada in the region.

U.S. Marines who helped the Saudis retake the city on Thursday said the Iraqis fought well during the battle.

"They were good," said Cpl. Jeff Brown, referring to the Iraqi troops. "They kept the Saudi forces out of the city."

Brown, 21, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was on one of the Marine reconnaissance teams that were in the city from the time the fighting began until the Iraqis were expelled on Thursday. He suffered a slight wound during the battle.

At one point, Brown said, his team was hiding in a four-story apartment building with Iraqi troops entered the building. The team maintained radio contact with Marines outside the town and directed artillery fire by transmitting in short bursts and in code. Nevertheless, the Marines suspected that the Iraqis were picking up their broadcasts and were looking for them.

The Marines in the building placed mines in the staircase and were ready to detonate them if the Iraqis came up the stairs.

The Marines also destroyed their sensitive codewords and orders for fear they might be discovered.

The other Marine team reported that the Iraqis parked their armored personnel carrier directly in front of the Marines' hiding place.

Carlos Dayrit, a Navy corpsman on the team, said he could hear the Iraqi soliders laughing and joking throughout the night.

Both teams of Marines escaped without serious injury.

The commanders of one unit are trying to instill a sense of historic opportunity in their troops.

Maj. Gen. Ronald H. Griffith, commander of the 1st Armored Division, told a battalion recently that, "This is something you ought to be writing to yourself about and writing home about. Its unprecedented and it's historic."

Sgt. Maj. Juan Mendez used slightly different language to make the same point.

"Some day when you're sitting in a bar 20 years from now and you hear some dirtball talk about this time, you're going to snicker," said Mendez. "You'll know that you were there."

• • •

■ Their field conversation is picking up some Arabic words. All troops know at least two words: wadi, for a dry creek or shallow depression; and sabkha, a salt marsh that vehicles from tanks to hummvees seek to avoid.

■ Sgt. Dexter Head of the 1st Armored Division, on why he pumps iron: "Mostly everything on a tank is very heavy. If you can't lift it, you can't tank."

■ Marine Cpl. Jeffery Donders, 25, from DeWitt, Mich., on how the United States should respond if Iraqi uses chemical or biological weapons against U.S. forces:

"My personal opinion is we should isolate a target specific enough that it has a military orientation and nuke it. I hope it doesn't come to that, though."

■ Air Force Lt. Gen. Chuck Horner, commander of Air Force operations in the Persian Gulf, talking about why Saddam Hussein ordered an attack on Khafji, Saudi Arabia: "It's hard to see where he really gains a lot from this. He gets publicity. I think he sees it as sort of a Tet (offensive). I think he's fighting us in Vietnam."

Tel Aviv ghost town after dark

By Louis J. Salome
N.Y. Times News Service

TEL AVIV, Israel — When the sun goes down these days, this city, known for its nonstop street life, becomes a ghost town.

The threat of Iraqi Scud missiles plunging to earth at night has sent thousands of Tel Aviv residents seeking refuge to the north, south and east.

So large has this exodus been that Mayor Shlomo Lahat called those who have left Tel Aviv "deserters who would be just as ready to leave Israel next."

While the toll from the eight Iraqi missile attacks has been moderate — four deaths, more than 200 injuries, and damage to thousands of homes — they have profoundly disrupted Israeli society.

For months before the Gulf war began Jan. 16, many Tel Aviv residents refused to visit Jerusalem because they feared the encroaching violence of the Palestinian uprising.

Now that the Palestinian uprising has been quieted by a suffocating curfew in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, many Israelis are making the 45-mile trip from Tel Aviv find accommodations in Jerusalem.

Roads leading to Tel Aviv from every direction are jammed each morning. Most of the cars are filled with Tel Aviv residents who have spent the night outside the metropolitan area, but are returning to work during the day.

In late afternoon, those roads are backed up for miles with residents going to spend the night in Ashdod and Ashkelon to the south, Haifa and the Galilee to the north, and Jerusalem to the east.

Wealthier Tel Aviv residents have taken unusual winter holidays in the southern port city of Eilat. Poorer ones, and tens of thousands who simply refuse to be driven out, stay put.

Almost all the residents who stay vacate Tel Aviv's shops, restaurants and sidewalks by 5 p.m. Their gas masks in hand, they head for home to be near the rooms they have sealed off as protection from any poison gas attack.

Even on Friday night, the beginning of the Jewish Sabbath, Tel Aviv is normally a hustling city.

But on Dizengoff Street, usually the busiest street of all, only one store was open shortly before 5 p.m. Friday.

Lev Ben-Moha, 15, said only an occasional customer drives up for a quick stop at the tiny candy, soft drink, snack and liquor store he tends. "There is no one on the street after dark," he said.

Two blocks away, 75-year-old Sara Rosenberg was closing the Keton restaurant she said she has operated for 45 years.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

Military investigating whether Marines killed by 'friendly fire'

NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — The U.S. military command said Friday it was investigating whether some Marine deaths during a battle with Iraqi troops were accidentally caused by American or other allied fire.

In a separate incident, bombs apparently dropped by an allied aircraft early Friday fell near a Marine camp, with shrapnel hitting as close as 15 yards from where some Marines slept. No injuries were reported, and an investigation was begun into that incident as well.

Army Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens IV said the investigation into Tuesday's deaths would seek to determine if any Marines were killed by "friendly fire." If they were, the investigators would consider whether operational plans could have been faulty.

"They died in action, under fire, and that's about all I can give you at this point," Stevens said at the military's regular daily briefing in Riyadh.

Marine Lt. Col. Jerry Humble said late Thursday that the four-man investigative team includes a munitions expert who will examine the hulk of the light armored vehicle in which the Marines were killed.

Eleven Marines died in the fighting. It wasn't clear how many of those were in the vehicle.

A Pentagon source in Washington, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said one reason for the investigation is that a hole in one vehicle came from a 30mm gun, which is the weapon aboard the Air Force's A-10 Warthog, an anti-tank plane.

Humble, operations officer for the 1st Marine Division, said the Marines were "saddened and disappointed" deaths might have been caused by friendly fire. "But historically, there's always casualties by friendly fire in close battles because it's a fight for your life," he said.

Marines and Iraqi ground forces were locked in close combat during much of Tuesday night's fighting, and U.S. Air Force A-10 and other aircraft were called in to provide air support, including missile attacks on Iraqi tanks that had crossed into Saudi Arabia from southwest Kuwait.

Marines involved in the fighting said they were forced to pull back at one point partly because of crossfire and the difficulty of telling friend from foe.

"I'd be thinking, What's this? What's that? Who are we supposed to fire at?" said Lance Cpl. Brad Denning, 23, of Wadsworth, Ohio.

In the second incident, two jets dropped cluster bombs that fell near the camp of a Marine infantry battalion camp.

Maj. Bob Weimann said one bomb fell 220 yards from the base command post and another 770 yards away.

Cuban farm workers rock around the clock

EL PARAISO, Cuba (NYT) — It's not exactly a socialist utopia. But here at a farm called Paradise, sex, rock-and-roll and revolution abound.

Communist Youth Union organizers try to avoid the grim cheerlessness of other work farms by making El Paraiso more like a love-in than a gulag. Here, recreation of the masses is officially encouraged.

In observance of Fidel Castro's economic emergency plan, bathroom signs encourage workers to save water by showering with their paramours. Drawings of scantily-clad, buxom women decorate the walls.

Those overwhelmed by impulses of revolutionary love can seek out the Kimbo de Amor, an Angolan-Cuban term for "House of Love." The thatched shack, discreetly set at the back of the camp, is officially designated as the haven for nighttime trysts. It's so popular, they are building another one.

"We're profoundly revolutionary, but also profoundly happy," said Jose Angel Rodriguez, a well-built camp director with tousled, sandy hair and piercing jade-green eyes.

Rock-and-roll is supplied in limitless quantities.

Acting as disc jockey was an official from the Cuban Interior Ministry, which includes the intimidating East German-trained state security police.

"We dance every night, and then in the morning, we go out into the fields," said Rodriguez, who insists that the happy campers adhere to a strict work ethic.

Gorbachev backs off on Baltics

WORLD

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev eased his hard-line pressure on the Baltic republics' independence drives on Friday, appointing Kremlin delegations to begin a "discussion of issues" with the embattled republics.

The Soviet leader's reversal toward a more conciliatory approach followed worldwide criticism of his handling of the Baltic crisis, in which a score of civilians have died in recent weeks at the hands of Soviet soldiers.

The Kremlin announcement carried no specific promise of the detailed negotiations long sought by Baltic residents who want to restore the independence that the Baltic republics had before World War II.

Rather, Gorbachev's decree, which was later significantly qualified by Kremlin aides, seemed designed mainly as the sort of signal of a "move away from violence" that President Bush said he expected following expressions of concern to the Kremlin.

The initial reaction from the Baltic republics was wary at best.

President Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania took exception in particular to the Kremlin's continued objection to the breakaway republic's laws of sovereignty and to Moscow's references to the "Lithuanian Socialist Republic," almost 11 months after the democratically elected Parliament proclaimed independence.

"It is not a sign of good will," Landsbergis said in Vilnius, the capital, concluding that the wording of Gorbachev's decree "signifies that Lithuania must first capitulate" for discussions to proceed.

But Landsbergis, speaking from his barricaded Parliament building, added, "It seems some talks and discussions will take place, and maybe there will be some better prospects."

The Estonian prime minister, Edgar Savisaar, also reacted with doubt that the new discussion commissions could achieve any breakthrough. He said individuals and pro-Moscow organizations "which were earlier forced to retreat are now trying to get their revenge," according to a report on the the Baltfax independent news wire.

Speaking for the Kremlin, Rafik N. Nishanov, chairman of the Council of Nationalities, a chamber of Parliament, stressed that while the promised discussions were under way it would be "necessary to freeze anti-constitutional" laws enacted by the republics "and not to enact new such decisions during this period so as not to aggravate the situation."

Gorbachev had no personal comment on the creation of the separate Kremlin commissions authorized to travel to the three republics — Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia — that the Soviet Union forcibly annexed in 1940.

The commissions include political and military officials empowered by Gorbachev "to discuss a package of political, social and economic issues," according to the announcement by Tass, the Soviet news agency, which emphasized that a "discussion of issues" is something less than full negotiations.

Even so, the presidential decree promises to move the simmering Baltic crisis back toward the quieter discussion stage that had fitfully existed before the Gorbachev government, in facing hard-line pressures from the military and police, resorted last month to direct military force in Lithuania.

With that domestic quarter somewhat appeased now, Gorbachev is apparently trying to restore some foreign credibility in his original promises for greater Soviet democratization.

The "discussion" commissions were announced following a closed Kremlin meeting of the Council of Federation, the new presidential advisory panel created by Gorbachev to include representatives of the 15 republics and ease their pressure on the Kremlin for greater sovereignty.

The announcement gave no immediate indication that the full council had endorsed the decree or the conditions stressed by Nishanov for the freezing of sovereignty laws in the Baltics. These laws, which clashed with the Soviet military draft and other union provisions, have been heatedly opposed by Gorbachev as unconstitutional.

While the net effect of Gorbachev's latest action appeared to turn the whole contentious process back to last fall's inconclusive preliminary talks about how to negotiate hard standing points of difference, the attempt at a conciliatory tone was unmistakable as Nishanov expressed the Council of Federation's sympathy for the families of the people killed in Soviet army raids.

Breakup

Riot police in Istanbul, Turkey, try to break up an anti-war demonstration by hundreds of people leaving Friday prayers. At least 10 people were reported arrested.

WORLD in brief

Lebanon site of 'new front'

RASHAYA, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli forces battled with howitzers and rockets in south Lebanon on Friday in the fourth day of what one Beirut television station called "the new front in the Gulf War."

Police said there was no word of casualties in the exchanges around Palestinian-held hills of the Apple Province and Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone," an occupied strip running the length of the 54-mile Israel-Lebanon border.

In Beirut, the government met for three hours under President Elias Hrawi and apparently decided to postpone the deployment of Lebanese government troops in the Apple Province.

The Palestinians have not directly linked the clashes to the war between Saddam Hussein's Iraqi forces and a U.S.-led coalition seeking to liberate Kuwait.

But some Palestinian factions have repeatedly threatened to escalate attacks against Israeli targets to retaliate for the allied offensive against Iraq that began Jan.17.

109 die in earthquake

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan was rocked early Friday by an earthquake measuring 6.8 on the Richter scale, knocking down mudhuts while their inhabitants were asleep and killing at least 109 people. Officials said another 350 were injured.

The quake, centered hundreds of miles away in neighboring Afghanistan, shook for a minute at about 4 a.m., collapsing the fragile sun-baked huts in clouds of dust.

Pakistani rescue officials and the Associated Press of Pakistan reported a steadily increasing death toll throughout the day as reports from remote parts of this impoverished country of about 100 million trickled in.

In Lahore in eastern Pakistan, doctors said at at least 10 people suffered heart attacks after the quake.

There were no immediate reports on the quake from Afghanistan.

Party joining coalition

JERUSALEM (NYT) — The Israeli government signed an agreement on Friday allowing the country's most extreme right-wing political party, which advocates expelling all Palestinians from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, to join the ruling coalition.

The accord with the party, Moledet, was signed just before the Sabbath and as attention in Israel and throughout the world is focused on the gulf war. The timing was apparently intended to deaden leftist and centrist opposition to the accord.

AIDS cases rises in January

GENEVA (AP) — Nearly 9,000 new cases of AIDS were reported to the World Health Organization during January, increasing the global total to 323,378 since the start of record keeping in 1980.

In its monthly update published Friday, WHO said updated reports from Europe and South America were largely responsible for the rise in acquired immune deficiency syndrome cases.

France notified the U.N. agency of 3,427 new victims, bringing its total to 13,145. Elsewhere in Europe, Romania said it had documented 1,168 cases, 113 up on the previous month. Germany reported 5,612 cases, an increase of 112.

Brazil reported 2,144 new cases, bringing to 14,549 the number of cases in the country.

There was no new report from the United States. Figures submitted to WHO at the end of 1990 put the overall number of AIDS victims in the United States at 154,791, more than half the world's total.

It is not known how many of the AIDS victims have died.

WHO says there have been no recorded cases of AIDS in 20 of the 159 countries reporting to its Geneva headquarters. Albania, North Korea, Vietnam, Afghanistan and Iraq are among those claiming to be free of the disease.

WHO reports do not cover those infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which can lead to full-blown AIDS.

The health agency estimates that 9 million to 11 million people may already carry the HIV virus, spread by sexual contact, infected syringes, contaminated blood and by pregnant women to their babies.

WHO forecasts that up to 30 million people will carry the virus by the end of the century, including 10 million children born to infected mothers.

■ Even the MVP of the just completed Super Bowl makes the NFL's Plan B list for the third straight year.

N.Y. Times News Service

Some of the National Football League's most honored players, including Mark Bavaro and Ottis Anderson of the New York Giants and Roger Craig and Ronnie Lott of the San Francisco 49ers, were left unprotected Friday as the league's teams filed their annual Plan B free-agency lists.

Anderson, 34, the running back who was the most valuable player of Super Bowl XXV, said he had expected to be left unprotected for a third consecutive year. "I would be insulted if I wasn't," he quipped.

The fact that they are unprotected doesn't necessarily mean that these four one-time Pro Bowl players will be leaving their teams.

This is the third year of Plan B free agency, and it works like this: Each of the 28 teams lists 37 players who are "protected." This leaves 15 to 20 other players per team who are free to make deals with other clubs until April 1, with no compensation to the original teams required.

After that, an unprotected player who has not made a deal with a new team again belongs to his original team. This year, 518 players were left unprotected.

"It's strange about the way Plan B has developed," the Giants' general manager, George Young, said Friday after submitting his list. "Most of the teams have pretty much developed the same formula: you save your young guys, you save your big guys.

"You take chances with guys in those positions you can replenish. Certain ones, like quarterbacks, you can't find, you don't put them out there."

Some of the names left unprotected Friday are mere historical footnotes. Others conjure up recent dramatic memories: The Buffalo Bills did not protect Scott Norwood, who missed a field-goal attempt that would have won the Super Bowl last Sunday if it was good, and the James Lofton, 34, one of the team's big-play receivers all season.

But the Bills also announced that Lofton and Norwood had signed new contracts, suggesting that neither is expected to look elsewhere for work during the next two months.

Bavaro, 27, the Giants' tight end, who had five receptions in the Giants' 20-19 victory last Sunday, was slowed last season by a chronic knee problem. He had surgery on it twice last year. He will soon undergo shoulder and knee surgery. Thus, it is unlikely another club will offer him a contract; he will make $750,000 with the Giants if he stays with them.

Craig and Lott were mainstays of the 49ers' of the 1980s, who won four Super Bowls. Two other well-known 49ers also were left unprotected: Matt Millen, the linebacker, and Dave Waymer, the safety.

Permian girls strike early, beat Rebels

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Odessa Permian scored 28 unanswered points early in the game and all 10 Lady Panthers suited up scored at least once en route to a 59-37 win over the Midland Lee Lady Rebels.

Permian's win, combined with Abilene High's 69-47 win over San Angelo Central, sews up the two available playoff spots in District 4-5A. AHS is 11-0 in the league, Permian, 9-1. With playoff appearances assured for the two, the Lady Eagles and Lady Panthers meet next Tuesday in Odessa. With two games left for Permian, the Panthers hold a three-game edge on third place Central.

Interpreted as overly brutal by the Lady Rebels, Permian coach Terri King and Lee coach Shirley Stephenson agreed that the Lady Panthers' physical style of play, exhibited by everyone from starters to role players, was, along with the 28-0 run in the first half, the unquestionable advantage for the victors.

"It's a rough game," King said. "We're not going to back down."

Stephenson said Permian was "just too physical for us. That's the most physical I've ever seen them."

Permian routinely used size and speed to block Rebel shots and force turnovers.

"Our heighth is definitely a factor," King said. "And our speed. Abilene may be faster than us, but we're taller."

A 5-5 tie mid-way through the first quarter would be the last time the Lady Rebs would witness first hand anything resembling the light of day. Following a Lachette Crisp free throw to tie the

Permian fouls Lee by 77-69

ODESSA — Somewhere among the 80 free throws heaved at the Odessa Permian Fieldhouse goals Friday, a District 4-5A boys basketball was played.

With a set of nitpicking officials presiding in a fashion, Permian and Midland Lee shot it out at the line — and had five players foul out between them — before the Panthers finally emerged with a 77-69 win over the Rebels.

"We just missed our free throws. Our kids had a hard time figuring out how to play them tonight, but it really was our inability to make free throws," said Lee head coach Jon House.

The Permian win kept the Panthers' playoff hopes somewhat alive, with a 10-16 overall and 4-4 district record. San Angelo Central leads the race at 8-0, with Midland High second at 7-2, and Abilene High 5-4 in the 12-game schedule.

Lee's record went to 9-18 and 2-7.

Actually, Permian did worse than the Rebels on the stripe. While Lee made 22-of-40 (55 percent), the Panthers went 21-of-40 (52.5 percent) — all coming from 57 whistles.

Where Lee really ran into trouble was in the fourth quarter when three starters, including two of the team's top three scorers, were hurried to the bench with five personal fouls apiece.

Sophomore Martin Lattibeaudiere took his 12-point average and 13 for the game to the sideline 1:02 into the final period. Center Brian Massey followed at the 4:25 mark, then senior Eugene Hicks was called for charging on a move to the basket — the second player-control foul called on him in the game — for his fifth with 3:56 to play.

Bulldogs survive overtime

■ The playoffs loom nearer for MHS after a 67-65 OT win over OHS.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Odessa High Bronchos put an overtime scare into the Midland High Bulldogs at Chaparral Center Friday night, but the Purple Pack survived, 67-65, to move ever so close to a state playoff berth.

MHS, now 7-2 in the league race, has a full two-game lead over 5-4 Abilene High for second place and a state playoff berth. Abilene High lost 90-79 to league leading San Angelo Friday night in the Concho City.

The Bulldogs trailed OHS for the better part of three quarters, but caught the Bronchos in the fourth period as Scott Allen scored eight of his 11 points. In fact, MHS almost won the game in regulation, but OHS' Levi Christian nailed a three-point shot at the fourth period buzzer to send the game into overtime.

Earl McDonald gave the Bulldogs a 66-65 lead in the overtime with a layup with 20 seconds left and Allen came down with a key rebound of a missed free throw to salt the victory.

Allen, who had only three points through the first three periods of play, turned out to be a major key to the win when he hit three of four shots in the fourth period and nailed two free throws.

"We didn't play at all in the first half," Allen said. "You try not to be overconfident because you know Odessa has good athletes, but they are not the team we are.

"I'm a senior, and all the seniors, knew we had to go out and play in the second half, or we might not make the playoffs at all. We're still playing for a district championship and not second place. All the wins are a step closer to that goal."

Odessa High has given the league giants fits, but have yet to slay one. The Bronchos, who lost by only three points to San Angelo Tuesday, controlled the tempo of the game against MHS, but lost three players to fouls. OHS was called for 31 fouls while MHS was tagged with 12.

After the game, OHS coach Keith Thompson would only say, "I have absolutely no comment at all."

Ira Young scored 19 points for the Bronchos, hitting seven of nine from the field and four of four from the charity line. Fred Givens also had 19 points.

The Bronchos, now 2-7 in league play, were also playing without starter Sand Williams, who is missing a couple of games due to disciplinary reasons.

"I told the kids before the game that they (OHS) didn't have Williams, and as happens so many times, Odessa players played a little harder. We went through the same thing with the loss of (Rodrick) Hickey," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said.

"This was a really big win for us because we now have a two game lead on the playoffs with three games to play.

"We're going to have to play a little better than we did tonight. They had my heart fluttering a little in this one. But this is a crazy game, and you take what you can get. I think our guys looked over at their bench and saw they had only eight players and relaxed a little."

McDonald led MHS with 14 points while sophomore Antwan Goodley had 12 to go with Allen's 11.

In junior varsity action, Scott Lunsford scored 20 points and Phil Koss 10 as MHS beat OHS by a 64-44 count and climbed to 18-7 for the year. Leon McDaniel had 18 points for OHS.

In the sophomore game, MHS is now 17-6 after a 66-59 win over OHS. Marcus Anderson led four players in double figures with 13 points. Others were Chris Mayfield 11, Brian Roberts 10 and Andre Gill 10. Erick Hartman had 25 for OHS.

PERMIAN: Fourth period effort not enough for Lee game, Permian proceeded to roll to a 33-5 lead before another shot would fall for Lee.

(From 1B)

Ranee Franklin hit a lay-up with 1:49 in the second, well over eight minutes after the last Lee points. A Michelle Stewart free throw would be the only other Lee scoring in the quarter as Permian held a 33-8 lead at the half.

After having shot just 12.5 percent from the field in the first half (3-of-24), the Lady Rebels came out in the second half still cold, hitting on just 4-of-18 in the third quarter.

The tide finally turned in the fourth when Lee out-scored a Permian group largely composed of bench players, 20-10.

Stephenson said she was glad to see her group hang in late, despite the early disparity on the scoreboard.

"I think athletes like to play," Stephenson said. "They get satisfaction from playing defense, or making a shot. Whereas coaches only get satisfaction out of winning."

Crisp's 12 led the Lady Rebels, who fell to 10-17 overall, 4-7 in district.

Playing only about half the game, Permian's starting front court of LaShon Powell, Kaelie Butler and Anita Wright combined for 31 points.

King's mass substitutions made it clear the Lady Panthers had no intention of piling up points on the Lady Rebels.

"It wasn't intentional," King said. "Lee had a lot of rim shots that didn't go in."

The junior varsity Lady Panthers were victorious as well, 54-34.

The basketball scene for the Permian girls has gone through dramatic changes over the past two years. A scant 24 months ago, the Lady Rebels routinely beat the Lady Panthers, something both coaches can recall.

"Believe me, I've had it done to me before," King said of lopsided losses. "I remember Shirley used to beat me by 30 points just a couple of years ago."

Added Stephenson, only half-joking: "And I hope she doesn't forget it. Because we're coming back."

LEE: Permian's Talbert leads all scorers with 22

(From 1B)

When the quarter started Lee was behind 59-55. By the time Hicks was ousted, the Rebs were down 71-60.

According to Permian head coach Willie Spears, who saw his squad blow a 17-point lead in a 69-68 loss to Lee Jan. 8, those fouls-outs were the product of a plan.

Hicks and starting forward Wayne Wilson both has three fouls at half, while Mojo's Erskine Talbert also carried a trio of PF's into intermission.

"Lee had some kids with fouls, so we tried to go to them (in the second half,) especially Eugene," Spears said.

Lattibeaudiere was the top Reb scorer, with Hicks adding 12 points and Wilson 10. Talbert ended with a game-high 22 points for Mojo, as Reuben Loud scored 16 and Nicky Spain 15.

In junior varsity play, Permian downed Lee 73-62 with Patrick Kimble and Watu Todd scoring 16 each for the Rebs. In the sophomore game, Lee won 59-51. Anthrone Jones scored 22 for Lee, while Armando Martinez came in with 15 and Scott Butler 14.

Nunn permitted to defend crown

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Legislative leaders said Friday they have cleared the way for middleweight champion Michael Nunn to defend his International Boxing Federation title in Iowa.

The fight is tentatively set for May 10 between Nunn and challenger Steven Collins of Ireland.

The agreement ends a battle by Rep. John Connors to bring a major boxing match to Iowa.

Azinger in control at Pebble

N.Y. Times News Service

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Perfect conditions prevailed Friday for the second round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, and no one took better advantage of them than Paul Azinger.

Azinger, playing the Pebble Beach course, shot a second consecutive 67 for a two-round total of 10-under-par 134. That gave him a lead of two shots over Jay Delsing and Rocco Mediate, and of three over Davis Love 3rd and Larry Mize.

After the first day of competition Thursday, on which a one-day tournament record of 61 subpar scores were shot, Azinger's total today was threatening the tournament record of 14-under-par 273, shot by Tom Weiskopf in his victory in 1977.

Play Friday featured a double-eagle 2 by Payne Stewart on the 515-yard seventh hole at Spyglass Hill, where he holed a 2-iron from 231 yards, and a hole-in-one by Mediate on the 199-yard 15th at Poppy Hills, the third course being used in the tournament.

The courses are playing easy because of several factors: drought conditions that have made the fairways very fast, little wind and smooth, fast and true putting surfaces. The AT&T is frequently played in damp or wet conditions that make the courses play long and the greens soft and bumpy.

"I think the lack of rain here has really helped," Azinger said. "I've never seen Pebble Beach lok so good."

Azinger, 31, and a professional for 8 years, made 5 birdies in the first 10 holes Friday with putts ranging from 4 to 20 feet, and then saved par out of bunkers on two holes coming in to complete his 5-under round.

"I'm putting these greens well for the first time ever,' said Azinger, who has played in this event since 1982. "I've finally figured out how much pull the ocean has on the break. Before this year, I think I have only broken 70 in this tournament one time."

Darkness falls with three-way tie for LPGA Classic top spot

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — Dottie Mochrie, Meg Mallon and Colleen Walker were sharing a one-stroke lead with 8-under par 36s Friday when darkness halted second-round play in the $400,000 LPGA Classic at Wycliffe Golf and Country Club.

Thirty-nine players were unable to finish, a carryover from Thursday's incompletion of the opening round due to heavy fog that delayed start of play.

Among the 39 were three with a chance to grab or tie for the lead. Donna Andrews was 7 under par with three holes left, Susan Sanders was 6 under with four remaining, and Cindy Mackey is 6 under with eight to play.

The 144-player field will be cut to the 70 low scores and ties when the second round is completed Saturday.

Mochrie, the tournament winner in 1989 and sole leader after Friday's first round.

Barkley returns to ignite 76ers

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley, a surprise starter after missing seven games with a foot injury, had 24 points, 12 rebounds and eight assists, and the Philadelphia 76ers outscored Phoenix 19-5 in the final 7:10 to defeat the Suns 96-89 Friday night.

Barkley, sidelined with a severe sprain of the left ankle and a stress fracture in his left foot, shot 10-for-16 from the field. Two field goals came in the final 1:32 as Philadelphia rallied to win the game.

The Suns, led by Xavier McDaniel's 34 points, led 84-77 with 7:10 left before the 76ers outscored the Suns 11-2 to go ahead 88-86 on a tap-in by Ron Anderson with 3:29 remaining.

Kevin Johnson converted a free throw and McDaniel scored on a layup for an 89-88 Suns lead, but Philadelphia scored the next eight points for the victory. The Sixers lost five of their seven games without Barkley.

Bulls 101, Mavericks 90

DALLAS — Michael Jordan scored 14 of his 31 points in the final eight minutes as Chicago won its fifth consecutive meeting with Dallas.

Jordan re-entered the game with 7:44 to play after Dallas trimmed a 12-point Chicago lead to four. Jordan converted 10 of 12 free throws, hit a layup and a 10-foot jumper to close out the Mavericks.

Derek Harper scored 24 points and Rolando Blackman 23 to lead Dallas. Scottie Pippen had 20 points and 13 rebounds and Horace Grant scored 19 points for Chicago.

Pistons 80, Bullets 75

LANDOVER, Md. — Detroit held the Washington Bullets to 25 first-half points, then blew a 17-point lead before Joe Dumars lifted the Pistons to a win.

Dumars scored eight of his 22 points in the final 6:44 for the Pistons, who improved to 5-0 since Isiah Thomas went on the injured list with an injured wrist. Detroit has not allowed more than 84 points in any of those five games.

Washington made only nine of 47 field-goal attempts (19 percent) in the first half, which ended with Detroit holding a 38-25 lead. It was the third-lowest halftime point total of any NBA team since 1955.

The Pistons built their advantage to 51-34 midway through the third quarter before the Bullets used a 22-5 run to pull even early in the fourth period.

Hornets 92, Celtics 91

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Rex Chapman, fresh off the injured reserve list, made two free throws with 5.1 seconds left, lifting Charlotte to a victory.

It was the first-ever win for the Hornets against Boston.

The Hornets, in their third season, are 1-10 against Boston, leaving Detroit, Portland and the Los Angeles Lakers as the only teams they have failed to defeat.

The Celtics, now 26-2 against the four newest expansion teams, played their 13th straight game without Larry Bird, out with a strained back. Boston is 6-7 in his absence and 32-12 overall.

Bucks 117, Kings 112

MILWAUKEE — Ricky Pierce scored 33 points and the Milwaukee Bucks rallied in the fourth quarter to beat Sacramento, breaking a six-game losing streak.

The Bucks, trailing by five early in the final period, rallied as Jay Humphries scored 11 of his 16 points, Pierce 10 and Alvin Robertson nine of his 19 in the quarter.

Sacramento, suffering its 17th straight road loss, was led by Lionel Simmons's 26 points and 24 from Travis Mays.

Greenwood survives Sonora

Staff Report

Heather Donnell banged in a jumper with six seconds left to give the Greenwood Rangerettes a 33-31 win over Sonora and sole possession of first place in the District 6-3A second half race.

The Rangerettes, 13-12 overall and 3-0 in district play, held the ball for more than a minute before Donnell took the last shot. Sonora called time out to set up a play, but Greenwood's Kendra Underwood intecepted the inbounds pass and held onto the ball to run out the clock.

The Greenwood boys also took a victory over Sonora Friday, 61-51, behind the hot hands of Eric Clutter and Jason Swopes, who scored 13 and 12 points respectively.

Simpson spurs Lady Tors to win

Staff Report

LAMESA — Dina Simpson scored 10 of her 22 points in the first quarter to lead the 12th-ranked Lamesa Lady Tors to a 76-47 romp over the Lubbock Estacado Lady Matadors in District 3-3A girls basketball action here Friday.

The Lady Tors, 20-6 overall and 7-2 in district play, can clinch a playoff spot with a win over Snyder in their regular season finale on Tuesday. A win over Snyder would put Coach Terry Simpson's team in the bi-district playoffs against fifth-ranked Canyon Randall the following week.

Bobcats stay unbeaten

Staff Report

District 4-5A

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo's Bobcats kept their District 4-5A slate clean here Friday night with a 90-79 win over Abilene High, dealing the Eagles' playoff hopes a big setback.

Coupled with Midland High's 67-65 overtime win over Odessa High, 7-2 MHS owns a full two-game lead for second place and a state playoff berth over Abilene High, the three-time defending champion of 4-5A.

San Angelo is a perfect 8-0 in league play with a two-game lead over MHS and will host the Bulldogs Tuesday.

San Angelo got 30 points from Corey Grays and 16 each from Dewayne Lofton and Joe Lavendar. Daniel Brooks had 26 points for AHS while Tyerone Washington had 19 and Allan Hewitt 16.

In girls action, Abilene High's girls won at least a share of the District 4-5A championship with a 69-47 win over San Angelo. AHS is 11-0 in league play.

Sharon Green led the way with 19 points and was supported by LaKeita Richardson 16, Tamara Jones 12, Amanda Horton 11 and Thelma McDow 11.

Foster rallies to win 60-meter hurdles

Associated Press

Millrose Games

NEW YORK — Balding Greg Foster showed he still has the speed of a youngster, racing to his eighth hurdles victory in the Millrose Games on Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

Foster, 32, who won his first Millrose title in 1980, rallied to win the 60-meter event in 7.48 seconds, beating 1990 national indoor champion Tony Dees.

Dees was out quickly, but the redoubtable Foster, the two-time world outdoor champion in the 110 hurdles and the world indoor record-holder, caught him at the second hurdle and led the rest of the way. Dees finished second in 7.53.

The victory moved Foster closer to the nine Millrose hurdles titles won by Harrison Dillard from 1947-55.

"I was more surprised than happy," Foster said. "I spoke to my wife earlier and told her I was nervous because this was my first race (of the season)."

Meanwhile, Andre Cason, former NCAA indoor champion from Texas A&M and one of the two conquerors of Ben Johnson this season, won the men's 60-meter dash in 6.61.

After three false starts by the six-man field, Cason, noted for his quick starts, was first out of the blocks and maintained the lead in edging world indoor champion Lee McRae (6.63).

Daron Council, the other sprinter to defeat Johnson this year, finished third in 6.64.

"I thought it was a very strong field and that anyone could win," Cason said. "Toward the middle of the race, I felt McRae start to fade."

The world indoor record-holder in the women's 60-meter dash, Nelli Cooman of The Netherlands, also was a loser — and a last-place finisher.

Sabatini downs top-seeded Graf

TOKYO (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini defeated top-seeded Steffi Graf 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 (8-6) Friday in the quarterfinals of the Toray Pan Pacific Open, winning their 2½-hour match in a third-set tiebreaker.

Martina Navratilova, the No. 3 seeded playing in her first tournament since knee surgery in November, breezed past fellow American Robin White 6-2, 6-3.

Sabatini meets Fernandez and Navratilova plays Gildemeister in the semifinals Saturday.

Pokes pick Ram assistant to run offense

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson on Friday named Los Angeles Rams assistant coach Norv Turner as the team's offensive coordinator, hoping to spark an offense that's ranked near the bottom of the NFL for two seasons.

Turner replaces Dave Shula, who was demoted on Jan. 9 to receivers coach and passing game coordinator. On Tuesday, Shula took a position as receivers coach with the Cincinnati Bengals.

Turner said he talked to Rams coach John Robinson and offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese before accepting the Cowboys' offer.

"Both of them said when this job became available, 'That's a hell of an opportunity. Go for that one,'" said Turner, 38, who was an assistant with the Rams for six seasons, including the last four as receivers and tight ends coach.

"Besides knowing what he can do, I think his style fits our offense," Johnson said.

Turner said he would introduce the Zampese offense in Dallas, something Johnson said would benefit quarterback Troy Aikman. The Rams finished third in passing the NFL last year and fourth the year before.

"I think it's going to utilize his arm strength in getting the ball downfield," Johnson said. "I feel like things are in place. I think we can be considered a playoff team at this stage."

Turner said he was excited about joining a young and improving Cowboys team.

"The people in this league ... see that the Cowboys are on the move," Turner said at an afternoon news conference at the Cowboys' training facilities where his appointment was announced.

San Antonio lands rights to Olympic Festival

DALLAS (AP) — San Antonio, St. Louis and Denver landed U.S. Olympic Festivals Friday, but South Florida and Maryland came out the big losers.

President Robert Helmick announced that the U.S. Olympic Committee had given San Antonio the rights to the Festival in 1993, followed by St. Louis in 1994 and Denver in 1995.

A $250,000 guarantee is required of each city.

The Festival, which is held on non-Olympic years, is in Los Angeles, site of the 1984 Olympic Games, this summer.

"We had some excellent bids and our decision was made after 18 months reviewing the proposals from 11 cities," Helmick said.

"Of course, that piker Atlanta dropped out after it got another bid," Helmick joked, referring to Atlanta's selection as the site of the 1996 Summer Olympics.

Porter said San Antonio's determination after a failed 1989 bid also played a big part in the city's selection.

4-5A soccer teams back in action today

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

The District 3 soccer race appears to be up for grabs after a competitive opening day Tuesday.

Neither Midland Lee coach Eddie Bull nor Midland High mentor Tom Esikhati would argue the point.

"It's going to be real competitive," Bull said minutes after his Rebels pulled out a 1-1 tie with their crosstown rivals on a goal by Chris Murray with less than two minutes left in the second overtime.

Esikhati agreed.

"It's a close district," Esikhati said.

Midland High hosts Abilene High at 2 p.m. today in the grand opening for the Bulldogs' new field, better known as the band practice field on A and Tennessee. Also today, Lee visits district co-leader Abilene Cooper, while Odessa High visits San Angelo Central.

After Tuesday's game, Esikhati was as happy as a coach could be with a tie.

"I didn't expect my boys to play as well as they did," he said. The third-year MHS mentor warns of more to come from the Bulldogs.

"We're not big and not fast, but I feel like our execution has improved to the point where we can compete."

While MHS partisans were glad to get out of Tuesday's match with a tie, Bull wasn't so pleased.

"We're not happy (with the tie)," he said. "I thought for 99 minutes, we outplayed them."

Indeed, MHS scored its only goal in the final minute of the first overtime after a foul in the penalty area. In contrast, Lee's goal was set up when Mark Ferguson controlled the ball at midfield and was able to fire a perfect pass to Murray, who then beat MHS goalkeeper Bryant Mueller on a low shot to the left of the goal.

Mueller, who played a key role in MHS' playoff run two years ago before playing hurt last season, said he's healthy — which could be trouble for Bulldog foes, because the senior was generally considered the best District 3 keeper as a sophomore.

"I'm ready to go," Mueller said. "I feel so much better this year."

Navy cagers have more on their minds than hoops

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The seniors on Navy's basketball team have a lot more on their minds these days than jump shots and zone defenses.

There's a war going on, and some of their friends who used to shoot basketballs are now shooting guns.

While the Gulf War has been a distraction, it also has made many players realize that wins and losses on the basketball court really aren't all that important.

"We talk about the war constantly and worry about what's going to happen to us after graduation," senior guard Erik Harris said. "Something like this certainly puts everything in its proper perspective."

Several former Navy players, including Vernon Butler and Cliff Rees, are stationed in the gulf. Butler is the school's second all-time leading scorer behind David Robinson, and Rees played with Robinson on the Navy team that took a 26-6 record into the 1987 NCAA tournament. Navy officials would not say where in the gulf the two are stationed.

Barbara Rees, Cliff's mother, was at the Navy-Richmond game at the Naval Academy when she heard that war had broken out. Upon receiving the news, she leaned on her husband's shoulder and wept.

Life for her, and the basketball team, has not been the same since that night.

"We think about it an awful lot," Navy coach Pete Herrmann said. "Every day at practice and before games, we try to remember the guys over there."

Harris and other seniors don't have to worry about being sent to Saudi Arabia immediately after graduation, but they know their futures could turn out to mirror the lives of Butler and Rees.

"No one knows how long this war will go on," Harris said.

Pride overshadows money at Pro Bowl

Associated Press

HONOLULU — As New York Giants punter Sean Landeta sees it, there's one final detail remaining for the 1990 NFL season.

Sunday's Pro Bowl at Aloha Stadium.

"One more game we've gotta win," Landeta said.

The stakes aren't very high by NFL salary standards — the winners get $10,000 each and the losers $5,000 apiece — but there always seems to be a great deal of pride involved in the Pro Bowl.

"The best players in the game are here and you want to do your best against them," Buffalo defensive end Bruce Smith said.

Pro Bowl

"You want to have fun, not get hurt and, of course, win the game," said Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor, who will be making his 10th Pro Bowl appearance, the most of anyone in Sunday's game.

This year's Pro Bowl has most of the NFL's best players on hand, even the quarterbacks who were voted into the game by their fellow players around the league.

Warren Moon of Houston is the AFC starter, with Jim Kelly of Buffalo expected to share playing time despite a sore left knee. Randall Cunningham of Philadelphia and Jim Everett of the Los Angeles Rams are the NFC quarterbacks.

Everett is the only fill-in among the four, replacing Joe Montana, who can't play because of a hand injury.

Last year, Montana, John Elway of Denver and Boomer Esiason of Cincinnati all missed the game because of injuries. Don Majkowski of Green Bay didn't come to Honolulu because his contract with the Packers had expired and he apparently didn't want to take a chance of getting hurt in the all-star game.

Although most of the players seem to enjoy the week — the camaraderie, the short practices and lots of beach time — quarterbacks often seem to have a certain amount of apprehension.

They have some reasons: the league's best pass rushers will be coming after them, the artificial turf at Aloha Stadium has a reputation for providing hard landings, and the fact that the blockers have had just a week to work together sometimes leads to blown assignments and free shots at the quarterback.

As an indication, three of the past six player of the game awards have gone to defensive ends — the Bills' Smith in 1988, Reggie White of the Eagles in 1987, and Mark Gastineau of the New York Jets in 1986.

Pirates lose seven million in '90 season

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Even though the Pittsburgh Pirates won the National League East in 1990 and set a club attendance record, the team had an operating loss of $7.03 million.

The Pirates, who lost $2 million in 1989, said Friday that part of the 1990 loss was due to the $280 million collusion settlement with the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"Our 1990 financial results are indicative of the serious and sobering dilemma currently existing in major league baseball," Pirates president Carl Barger said.

The collusion settlement comes out to $10.77 million per team, however the 26 clubs do not have to pay the full amount until April 15, 1992. The Pirates deducted $2.7 million from their 1989 statement and $8.1 million from their 1990 statement.

Pittsburgh, which sold 2,049,908 tickets, an increase of 675,000 over 1989, said that revenues increased by $10 million in 1990 to $42.8 million. The team's payroll increased by 48 percent from $11.1 million to $16.4 million.

Pittsburgh also wrote off nearly $2.1 million because it released pitcher Walt Terrell, who mad more than two years remaining on his guaranteed $3.6 million, three-year contract. Terrell is now with the Detroit Tigers.

The Pirates' net book loss for 1990 was $7.6 million, compared to a loss of $4.3 million in 1989.

Accountants calculate net figures by amortizing player contracts, other intangible assets bought with the franchise, and other non-operating income or expense items, including interest payments.

Barger cited the difficulties off small-city teams, which have less lucrative television and radio contracts that big-city clubs.

"Obviously this is further exacerbated by the continuing escalation of player salaries, particularly that which occurs after a successful season," he said.

At least two Pirates, outfielders Bobby Bonilla and Barry Bonds, are seeking long-term contracts worth at least $4 million a year. Bonilla is seeking a five-year deal worth at least $20 million. He can become a free agent after this season.

Todd to turn pro

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Todd Marinovich, programmed almost from birth by his father to be a star quarterback, ended weeks of speculation when he decided Friday to enter April's NFL draft.

The Southern California quarterback, whom scouts say is unlikely to be selected until at least the third round, informed Trojans coach Larry Smith of his decision on Friday. The move seemed assured since Marinovich was arrested Jan. 20 on suspicion of possession of cocaine.

Friday was the deadline for underclassmen to declare their intention. The decision by Marinovich capped a month in which he was suspended indefinitely from the Southern Cal football program and arrested nine days later.

Upwardly mobile pocket change in lunchtime status quo

By Robert M. Andrews

WASHINGTON (AP) — The power lunch, that mid-day pause for schmoozing and politicking, is on the wane — giving way to cleaner living, tighter expense accounts and even brown-bagging at your desk.

Tables are going empty in some of Washington's fanciest restaurants, which until recently were jammed with political bigwigs making lunchtime deals over smoked salmon, goat cheese and truffles.

After the crash-landing of the high-flying 1980s, Americans are returning to the warm comfort of meatloaf and mashed potatoes, which have the added virtue of being cheap. Even the movers and shakers of Washington are hunkering down over a brown-bag lunch at their desks.

Owners of such trendy eateries as Maison Blanche, i Ricchi and La Colline unanimously report sales have sagged by 10 percent over the past few months. The swank Le Pavillon restaurant closed its doors in December amid rumors that others were in serious trouble.

"I'm not looking for a profit, I'm just looking to pay the bills," moans restaurateur Duke Zeibert, who counts talk show host Larry King, former Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss and Washington Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke as loyal regulars at the establishment that bears his name.

"We're seeing fewer people coming in for power lunches," said Chris Ricchi, co-owner of the posh i Ricchi, whose Italian cuisine has been sampled by President Bush and his friends.

Some prominent fixtures on the lunch circuit are switching to increasingly popular "power breakfasts" at the posh Hay-Adams Hotel and elsewhere. Early-morning customers say the mind is clearer, seating is quick and the bill is easier on the wallet.

"The power lunch is old hat," said syndicated columnist Art Buchwald, who was a regular at Washington's first power lunches in the early 1960s. "It has been replaced by the power golf game."

Buchwald says it wasn't the recession that killed the power lunch, but a government regulation issued in 1987 that generally prohibits federal officials from accepting free meals from lobbyists, journalists or government contractors.

Restaurateurs also blame Congress, which passed tax reform legislation in 1986 that reduced the tax writeoff for business meals by 20 percent.

Business has been hurt, too, by a slump in tourism and convention bookings, not to mention the consumer shift toward lighter, health-conscious fare washed down with bottled mineral water. Once-lucrative sales of hard liquor and expensive wines are down sharply, they say.

"Nobody has a cocktail anymore," said lawyer Joseph A. Califano Jr., a former special assistant to President Johnson and secretary of health, education and welfare. "Everyone is having a sandwich or a salad at their desks."

The demise of the Washington power lunch is a reflection of hard times in the restaurant business everywhere.

The National Restaurant Association projects that restaurant and lunchroom sales, not counting inflation, will be completely flat this year, after posting annual gains of 3 percent to 5 percent throughout the 1970s and 1980s.

Nell Ruiz, the chapter's recording secretary, will be the speaker. Mrs. Ruiz and her husband, Sal, live in Monahans and have four children. Her topic is "Learning to Hear the Voice of God."

The Scripture topic is Matthew 11:28. For more information call 694-2896 or 684-6405.

Fitness program set

First Place, a Christ-centered fitness program with emphasis on weight control, is coming to Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford St.

The first session is set for 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. Friday.

The program includes weekly Bible studies with commitments to prayer, Scripture memory, exercise and diet. The program lasts 15 weeks.

This program was started in 1981 at First Baptist Church in Houston and has grown throughout the United States, said sponsors from Fannin Terrace Baptist Church.

Church members and non-members are welcome to participate.

Also, Sunday services will deal with prayer. At 11 a.m. the Rev. John Rasco will speak on "Christ's Prayer for Our Church." The sermon topic for the 6 p.m. service will be "Why Prayer Did Not Get What I Wanted."

Choir workshop set

A Youth/Adult Choir Workshop is slated for 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Feb. 9 at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave. The event concludes with a Festival Concert at 3 p.m.

The event is sponsored by the West Texas/Permian Basin Chapter of Choristers Guild. The youth portion will be directed by John Yarrington, director of music and arts at Pulaswki Heights United Methodist Church, Little Rock, Ark.

"Dr. Yarrington is a sought after clinician throughout the entire country and has been in the Permian Basin on many occasions working with local church adult and youth choirs," said a release from the local Choristers Guild.

He has served on the board of directors for Choristers Guild International and is the past president of the Fellowship of United Methodist Musicians and Others Related to the Arts. Yarrington recently has written and published the book, "Building the Youth Choir."

Debby Vester, musical assistant at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, will serve as the accompanist for the choir.

Catholic order helps homeless in New Haven

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Pat Maurer has devoted her life to helping this city's homeless people, but there are days when the despair of the men and women in New Haven's soup kitchens and shelters seems to overwhelm her.

In these periods of self-doubt, Mrs. Maurer turns to fellow members of Emmaus, a new Roman Catholic religious order whose mission is assisting the homeless.

Emmaus operates a transitional house here for homeless people who are hoping to move from shelters to permanent housing.

Its members, who wear hooded gray robes or half-robes when they do charitable work, conduct special church services for the homeless.

The order, which is seeking official recognition from the Vatican, is also a religious community for people who work with the homeless and are looking for support from others like themselves.

Mrs. Maurer says the fellowship of the order gives her the strength to press on when the people she is trying to help seem lost in a world of spiritual, as well as physical, poverty.

"It's very difficult to give love and not have it returned," she said.

Emmaus was founded in 1984 by Brother Denys Cormier, a former Trappist and Franciscan monk who became disturbed by the growing numbers of homeless people in New Haven. City officials estimate that this winter about 1,000 people sleep in shelters every night.

Cormier, who often sleeps with the homeless in the New Haven railroad station, said that like others who have founded Catholic religious orders, he responded to a need.

"What St. Francis and St. Benedict did is respond to the spirit of their times" when they founded the Franciscan and Benedictine orders, he said. "That is what we are trying to do here."

But he emphasized that he also formed Emmaus to help meet the needs of the people who spend dozens of hours each week trying to help the homeless.

"Part of our frustration is the complexity of dealing with people who have a chance, but some people who are not taking that chance," Brother Cormier said. "In the Scriptures, Christ raised people from the dead. We don't have in the Scriptures people who refused to be raised from the dead. But that's what we're dealing with some of the time."

Emmaus's philosophy focuses on addressing the spiritual alienation of homeless people by empathizing with them and acknowledging that every person is in some way lost.

"I feel personally in my life that I am homeless until I find myself with God," said Pat Kral, a 40-year-old member of the order. "I find myself with God in community with other people. When you give something, there is space within yourself to receive something."

Members of Emmaus "see themselves in a prostitute, a drug addict and a maniac," said Cormier, who is 36. "We don't judge as much as we see that we could all be the same thing, if we were brought up that way, or the situation happened by circumstance."

Emmaus, which has 25 members in New Haven and about 70 others around the country works closely with Catholic officials in Connecticut and in other states, including New York, Maine, Oregon and Pennsylvania.

Cormier said he is planning to visit Rome soon, where he hopes to petition the Vatican for recognition. Catholic officials in Connecticut support this effort, which they said could take years.

"As with other orders established in the church, whether Franciscan or Jesuit or Dominican, they were all started by some individual with vision, an ideal, a sense of direction, a feeling of mission," said the Rev. Howard Nash, the Dean of Clergy in New Haven.

"They gathered people around them, though they didn't have official recognition," he said. "But they applied for it, and I hope Emmaus gets it."

Emmaus includes monks like Brother Cormier, who are celibate, and others who are considered "members of the community" and may be married, like Mrs. Maurer, a 53-year-old legal secretary, or of other Christian denominations.

Other Catholic orders, like the Franciscans, also have groups that are affiliated with monastic communities.

Members of Emmaus do not proselytize, but they do tell homeless people about the order's work, like its church services. By encouraging them to attend such activities, the members hope to help them gradually re-establish ties with society, Cormier said.

'What St. Francis and St. Benedict did is respond to the spirit of their times when they founded the Franciscan and Benedictine orders. That is what we are trying to do here.'

—Brother Denys Cormier
Former Trappist and Franciscan monk

Five monks live in New Haven at the Emmaus monastery at 179 Cold Spring Street on the south side of the city, a small house where the order holds services and meetings.

The order, as well as the transitional house at 624 George Street on the north side, , are both financed by donations and by profits from the sale of products that Emmaus manufactures, which include dessert toppings made from Cormier's recipes.

If Emmaus is recognized by the Vatican, the monks would live by the church's regulations, while the others would form an ecumenical community affiliated with the monks and bound only by the rules of the order itself.

Woman serves in Army as rabbi

N.Y. Times News Service

MESA, Ariz. — Of the 3,765 chaplains in the United States Army, Capt. Bonnie Koppell — Rabbi Bonnie Koppell of Temple Beth Sholom in Mesa — is the only female rabbi.

The Army reservist is one of only two female rabbis in the entire American military chaplaincy program. The other, Rabbi Julie Schwarz of Cincinnati, Ohio, is a Navy lieutenant who served three years of active duty (1986-89) before going into the Naval Reserve chaplaincy.

The military has no woman rabbi on active duty. The main reason: there are only about 200 women rabbis in the United States.

EARNEST KIKER
If you need to determine fertilizer needs, check soil

It's not too late to test soil samples to determine fertilizer needs for spring crops.

Kiker

When farmers look for ways to reduce production costs, they often consider reducing fertilizer usage. But such a practice may result in yields too low to cover production costs.

A soil test may indicate that fertilizer is needed to attain a desired yield goal. Fertilizing at recommended rates will increase the probability of boosting yields enough to more than pay for the fertilizer and provide some margin of profit.

On the other hand, savings can also result when a soil test shows adequate levels of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium or other necessary nutrients.

In either case, following soil test recommendations would effectively reduce the per-unit production costs and increase the chances of making a profit.

The Texas A&M Soil Testing Laboratories at College Station and Lubbock routinely analyze soils to determine the amount of available nitrogen present in the soil. This analysis is especially important to determine carryover nitrogen following a dry or low-yeild year. A reduced nitrogen recommendation results in savings without sacrificing yield.

There is no substitute for knowing a soil's nutrient balance when planning for spring crops. Testing can provide an economical means of determining a soil's nutrient status and can help a farmer make those major economic decisions with greater confidence.

Ernest C. Kiker is the Midland County Extension agent.

Agriculture Department cites headway in hirings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report issued Thursday showed the Agriculture Department has made some progress in opening more jobs to minorities and women, but said they still are under represented in management positions.

The report was unveiled at a glitzy ceremony in USDA's inner patio, including trumpeters and a military color guard. Speakers included Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, and Constance B. Newman, director of the office of personnel management.

Last year the department adopted goals "to build a diverse work force mirroring the nation's labor force" at beginning levels, mid-levels, senior and executive levels by the year 2000.

Yeutter, in the report, said USDA should become "a house built upon the rock of equal opportunity" and urged the department's 100,000-plus employees to pitch in with "innovative approaches" to realize that goal.

The 13-page report cited examples of projects begun or in the works to help beef up the department's work force with women, minorities and disabled people.

A chart showed that the USDA work force in 1990 was made up of 52.16 percent white males, compared with 53.6 percent in 1989.

White females made up 31.04 percent last year and 30.09 percent in 1989. Increases were also indicated for black, Hispanic, American Indian and Asian employees.

"The demographics of the USDA work force have begun to change," the report said. "Recent statistics show that the number of disabled, women and minority employees is increasing, but that these groups remain under represented in high level positions."

All rolled up

It appears that a farm worker in Jackson, Miss., got caught up in his work and wound up inside a large bale of hay near McComb. Actually, it was a farmer's prank. Alan Pounds stuck two sticks in the hay and placed a spare pair of boots on them to create the image of the baled man.

Smugglers face stiffer penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Travelers who attempt to smuggle meats, fruits or vegetables across the Mexican border into Texas face stiffer fines starting Sunday.

The Agriculture Department said the fine for failing to declare prohibited goods will double, from $25 to $50, while cases involving concealment or misrepresentation may result in fines of $100, up from $50.

Any attempt to smuggle meats, fruits or vegetables into the United States is a federal offense.

"Bringing foreign meat and plant products into the United States poses a serious threat to the health of U.S. crops and livestock," said James W. Glosser, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

James Fons, senior operations officer for port operations of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the fines were raised because officers in the field believed they were too low to serve as a deterrent. The current fines have been in place for the past six years.

APHIS last year collected fines of $723,345 on produce and meat products that were either not declared or not declared and hidden by travelers coming into the United States across the borders, at airports, or from Hawaii or Puerto Rico.

Fons said there were 300,834 interceptions of plant material on the U.S.-Mexico border last year, and 29,860 interceptions of meat and poultry products.

Fons said APHIS officers logged 610,938 interceptions at airports of plant material in baggage entering the country from overseas, as well as 10,990 interceptions of meat products.

According to USDA, no fines are imposed for prohibited products if they are declared during baggage inspections, and all illegal items are confiscated with no compensation.

"APHIS spends millions of dollars to eradicate destructive pests and diseases that enter the United States inside fruits, vegetables and meats packed in personal luggage," Glosser said. "Our most recent effort to eradicate Mediterranean fruit flies from California cost over $50 million."

Tropical fruit such as mangoes, avocados, papayas and limes are among the illegal items most frequently intercepted at ports of entry. Also prohibited are most meat products, most fresh fruits and vegetables, and potted plants.

Study: One-fourth of children live in poverty in 1980s

WASHINGTON (AP) — More Texas children were living in poverty and dying violent deaths at the end of the 1980s than at the beginning of the decade, a study indicated Friday.

"The 1980s were a decade of deterioration for children," said Judith Weitz, coordinator of the Kids Count children's census.

In Texas, the study found that one-fourth of Texas children were living in poverty at the end of the decade, up from 18.7 percent in 1979. The percent of teen out-of-wedlock births also rose 21 percent over the decade — more than twice the increase nationwide.

The number of teens dying violent deaths increased 6 percent and the juvenile incarceration rate rose 35 percent.

"Obviously, we have to do better for our children," said Bill Cryer, press secretary to Gov. Ann Richards. "This report card that has been sent out confirms some of our worst fears. The juvenile incarceration rate is way too high, the percentage of children in poverty is way too high, violent teen deaths is awful, obviously."

Conducted by the Center for the Study of Social Policy, a non-profit research and policy organization, the study said Texas made gains on three key indicators of child health. The state had a 1 percent drop in low birth weight babies, a 26 percent decline in the infant mortality rate, and a 24 percent drop in the death rate for children ages 1 to 14.

While the Texas high school graduation rate improved 3 percent, to 65.3 percent in 1988, the state still ranked 44th out of the 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Cryer said Ms. Richards was working hard to maintain social service programs, despite the state's budget crunch.

"At least in the short term that's where the emphasis will be for us, to keep these programs funded as fully as we can," Cryer said.

He said the governor was also working to make sure the state receives all federal funds in human services to which it is entitled.

"This country fell behind or stalled on six key indicators of child well-being," said Ms. Weitz. "America's fate in the 21st century depends on how we treat our children today. We won't be ready unless we reverse these trends in the 1990s."

Here are the study's findings for Texas:

— The percent of low birth weight babies decreased from 6.9 percent in 1980 to 6.8 percent in 1988.

— The infant mortality rate, per 1,000 live births, dropped from 12.2 in 1980 to nine in 1988.

— The child death rate, per 100,000 children ages 1-14, fell from 45.6 in 1980 to 34.5 in 1988.

— The teenage violent death rate, per 100,000 children ages 15-19, increased from 73 in 1984 to 77.6 in 1988.

— The percentage of births to unmarried women under 20 increased from 6.1 percent in 1980 to 7.4 percent in 1988.

— The juvenile incarceration rate, per 100,000 juveniles ages 10 and older, increased from 81 in 1979 to 109 in 1987.

— The percentage of children in poverty rose from 18.7 percent in 1979 to 24.5 percent in 1985-89.

— The percentage of students who graduate from high school increased from 63.6 percent in 1982 to 65.3 percent in 1988.

STATE IN BRIEF

O'Hair protests Day of Prayer

AUSTIN (AP) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair criticized President Bush for declaring Sunday a national day of prayer, saying that he is combining government with religion and insulting atheists' intelligence.

In his proclamation, Bush asked for prayers for the safety of troops in the Persian Gulf, for their families, for the United States, and for peace.

"The deliberate destruction of the nation of Iraq is George Bush's war; not a war of the American people; not a war of our young military men and women who are sent by him to die in the Gulf," said a statement signed by Ms. O'Hair, founder of American Atheists, Inc., and Jon G. Murray, president of the group.

"What Bush needs is impeachment; not prayer," said the statement.

Nabors reappointed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards reappointed Mary Scott Nabers to represent employers on the Texas Employment Commission.

The appointment, announced Friday, is subject to Senate confirmation.

Ms. Nabers is a native of Cross Plains, Texas.

Richards said Ms. Nabers "has done an excellent job of bringing government services to Texans at the local level."

Jobless rate drops some

DALLAS (AP) — The news got a little better for job hunters in Texas last month, but the state's unemployment rate still topped the national average.

January unemployment figures in Texas fell to 6.4 percent, down from 7 percent in December, according to figures released today by the U.S. Department of Labor.

The national average in January was 6.2 percent.

But Nic Santangelo, analyst for the Bureau of Labor Statistics office in Dallas, cautions against making too much of the figures.

"This is only slightly higher than the 1990 average of 6.2 percent in unemployment rate. I'm not ready to make too much of that decline," he said. "It's pretty much consistent with the volatility in our Texas data.

"If we compare that 6.4 percent with a year ago, we find that we're 1.1 percentage points higher in January of 1991 compared to January of 1990."

There were 547,000 Texans looking for work last month, compared with 595,000 thousand unemployed people in December.

The state's labor force shrunk from 8.54 million in December to 8.51 million last month.

The nation's unemployment rate in January reached its highest level since 1987. Last month's rise in the civilian jobless rate was up slightly from December's rate of 6.1 percent.

Officials say that means unemployment since June has shot up at its fastest pace since the last recession.

Family tries to save bank

AUSTIN (AP) — Bank of the Hills, principally owned by the family of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was shut down by state regulators despite attempts by the family to keep it afloat.

The 18-year-old financial institution, once the leading independent bank in Central Texas, reopened its three offices Friday as branches of Fort Worth-based Team Bank, the largest state bank in Texas.

When real estate loans soured, the Johnson family, owners of more than 90 percent of the Bank of the Hills, supplied $9.5 million in additional capital, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Johnson's daughter Luci Turpin owned about 10 percent of the bank.

Trusts of the families of Ms. Turpin and her sister, Lynda Robb, owned Banchills Bancorp Inc., which had 81 percent of bank stock, the newspaper said.

Lady Bird Johnson, who has never been a stockholder in Bank of the Hills, said the bank "unfortunately has suffered the same hard blow that has hit so many financial institutions in this part of the country."

Nominees narrowed

AUSTIN (AP) — Four finalists remain in the running for Texas education commissioner as the State Board of Education plans to meet this weekend to consider choosing a nominee for the post.

The board will forward its nomination to Gov. Ann Richards, who will appoint a replacement for retired Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby. Senate confirmation is required for the appointment.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Friday the finalists are Thomas Anderson Jr., deputy commissioner at the Texas Education Agency; Lionel Meno, New York's deputy commissioner for elementary and secondary education; Blandina Ramirez, director of the Office of Minorities in Higher Education at the American Council of Education in Washington; and Victor Rodriguez, San Antonio Independent School District superintendent.

Eight finalists initially were chosen from 147 candidates for the job.

Prison escapee caught

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — California authorities have recaptured a Texas prison inmate who escaped last month when a prison employee let him visit a relative, prison officials said Friday.

Roy Hooper, 40, was arrested Thursday night at a hotel in the Los Angeles suburb of Culver City, Calif., Texas prison spokesman David Nunnelee said.

Hooper, an inmate in the Ellis I Unit, fled Jan. 16 when a prison supervisor allowed him to visit a relative during a maintenance parts-buying trip to Houston.

The supervisor, John L. Flanigan, remains free on bond after he was charged with aiding Hooper's escape.

Hooper was serving a 30-year sentence for forgery and aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon in Harris and Travis counties.

Mother charged in death plot aimed at making daughter a cheerleader

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — A woman described as "the ultimate stage mother" allegedly tried to hire a man to kill the mother of her daughter's rival in a cheerleading tryout, authorities said.

Wanda Webb Holloway of Channelview apparently believed the girl would be so upset by her mother's death that she would drop out of the competition, thereby improving her own daughter's chances of winning, authorities said.

The two 13-year-old girls were vying for a spot on the cheerleading squad at Johnson High School in the Channelview Independent School District. Channelview is a town east of Houston.

Ms. Holloway, 36, was arrested Wednesday afternoon at her home following a three-week investigation. She was charged with solicitation of capital murder and released Thursday from Harris County Jail on $10,000 bond.

Authorities became aware of the plot when Ms. Holloway contacted an acquaintance about finding someone to kill Verna Heath, 38, said Harris County Sheriff's Detective George Helton.

That person informed authorities, and an undercover officer contacted Ms. Holloway, posing as a hit man.

Ms. Holloway allegedly offered the officer $7,500 to kill Ms. Heath and Ms. Heath's daughter, whose name was not disclosed, but later agreed to pay $2,500 to kill Ms. Heath only. She gave a pair of diamond earrings to the undercover officer as a down payment, police said.

Helton described Ms. Holloway as "the ultimate stage mother, who would go to almost any length, apparently, to further the career and popularity of her daughter."

Deaths of burned men may be drug related

RIO GRANDE CITY (AP) — The deaths of four Donna men whose gunshot and charred bodies were found in Starr County appear connected to the gunshot slaying of another Donna man found earlier this week, an official said.

Eugenio Falcon, the Starr County Sheriff, said he believes all of the deaths are drug-related.

The sheriff said Friday that autopsy reports revealed that the four men found Wednesday died of gunshot wounds before their bodies were torched beyond recognition in a bullet-riddled van. Officials said diesel-soaked hay fueled the fire that burned hot enough to melt parts of the van.

Falcon said all four lived in Donna, located 12 miles from the Mexican border in neighboring Hidalgo County. They were identified as Alejandro Garcia, 44; brothers Ruben Pina, 49, and Gregorio Pina, 39; and Juan Arguelles, 30, nicknamed "El Gallo" (the rooster).

Falcon said he believes their slayings are related to the multiple-gunshot death of another Donna resident, Rogelio Nieto, but the sheriff declined to elaborate further. Nieto's body was found Monday in Hidalgo County between Donna and Weslaco.

In an apparently related development, Hidalgo County deputies on Friday found a burned pickup truck that they said victim Alejandro Garcia recently was seen driving. Officials would not provide further information.

Paramedic fired in death case

DALLAS (AP) — A paramedic was fired in connection with the death last October of a man who was administered the wrong medication during treatment after being involved in a traffic accident.

The Highland Park Department of Public Safety announced on Friday that the dismissal of Dennis R. Loftis followed completion of an internal investigation into the death of Kenneth C. Bryant, artistic director of the Dallas Theater Center.

James E. Coleman, attorney for the city in the case, did not immediately return a telephone call late Friday to The Associated Press.

A Dallas County grand jury late last year no-billed Loftis in the Oct. 2, 1990 death. Bryant, 35, died after being treated by Loftis following a minor traffic accident in the Dallas suburb.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You have a tendency to see even the most complicated issues in black and white. Do your best to view controversial matters with greater objectivity. Career progress depends on your ability to open fresh lines of communication in August. Changes on the domestic scene could result in greater financial security by next October. A close relative presents some intriguing business ideas in November. A romantic partner expresses renewed confidence in your love.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: model Christie Brinkley, comedian Tom Smothers, jazzman Stan Getz, actress Farrah Fawcett.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Good luck prevails where business and real estate matters are concerned. A hunch pays off. You dazzle an attractive new acquaintance. Take steps to consolidate recent financial gains.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You need to take the initiative if you want an active social or love life. A great day to visit old friends or accompany someone on a shopping trip. Share upbeat stories.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Indulge heartfelt passions today. Time spent with your family or romantic partner brings joy. Home is a cheerful haven from the workaday world. Why not invite a few friends over tonight?

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do any chores early in the day. A romantic interlude could leave you with a desire for a permanent commitment. Discuss what is in your heart. Partner has big plans for the future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look forward to a day of relaxation and fun. Money you spend for pleasure will not be wasted. Your keen sense of humor makes you an instant hit at a party. Romance beckons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be more tactful or a valuable relationship could break down. Unexpected visitors are featured. Offer a warm welcome! Invite old friends and former neighbors to join a celebration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Continued effort will transform your home into a dream place. Team sports and hobbies are favored. Rent a classic video and bring on the popcorn tonight! Romance is almost certain.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your home may be the perfect place to entertain important guests. A carefully chosen gift enhances your image. Curb a tendency to be too outspoken in public. Diplomacy is essential.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If you let too many tasks pile up, you will regret it. Remember that once begun is half done! Sharing money or settling a debt gets a partnership back on its feet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A financial venture involving your relatives or home is in the spotlight. You should be willing to give emotional support as well as receive it. Love is a two-way street.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An uprising could be brewing. Your family or neighbors are involved. Show your willingness to compromise on certain issues. A loved one deserves the benefit of the doubt.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A new pact could provide the foundation for future success. Keep in close touch with someone many miles away. People who are unfamiliar to you might make good allies.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are idealistic, outspoken and analytical. They often astound their parents and teachers with their intuitive understanding of social and international problems. They want to know all about the way other people live! A year abroad or a stint in the Peace Corps will open their eyes even further. Somewhat secretive about their private lives, these Aquarians are quick to speak out for causes they believe in. They enjoy wielding authority and make better leaders than followers.

Three NBC female journalists expect babies in coming months

NEW YORK (AP) — It's baby time at NBC News, where three of the network's best-known female journalists are pregnant — Katherine Couric, "Today" co-anchor Deborah Norville and former "Sunday Today" co-anchor Maria Shriver.

Shriver

NBC said Friday that Couric, the "Today" national corrrespondent, is expecting her first child in July. She is married to Washington attorney Jay Monahan.

Couric will substitute as co-anchor on "Today" when Norville, who expects her first child in March, goes on maternity leave, NBC said. Norville is married to Karl Wellner, a Swedish businessman.

Shriver, who left "Sunday Today" last year after the birth of her first child, a daughter, still is doing specials for NBC News. But Shriver, whose next special will be shown Feb. 28, now is expecting another child, due "sometime this summer," an NBC spokesman said. Shriver lives in Los Angeles with her actor husband, Arnold Schwarzenegger.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — A Wayne Newton concert was delayed 20 minutes when band members left the stage to retrieve belongings from their burning bus. No injuries were reported.

Fire broke out under the rear of the band's bus Wednesday night as it was parked behind the Paramount Theater auditorium, said theater director Brad Mayne.

The fire was believed caused by a short in the bus generator and was contained to the rear underside of the bus, authorities said. Concert officials made new transportation arrangements for the tour.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The country music band Shenandoah has filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition because of debts arising from three years of trademark litigation over the name.

The five-member group from Muscle Shoals, Ala., is nominated for a Grammy award this year for their song "Ghost in This House."

Bill Carter, manager for the band, said Thursday there are four other acts working under the name "Shenandoah" in the country and lawsuits over the trademark left the band with insurmountable debts.

The band will continue to perform concerts and make records, Carter said. Under a Chapter 11 petition, the band would be freed from the threat of creditors' lawsuits until it can develop a plan to put its finances in order.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Illusionists Siegfried & Roy reached their first anniversary of performances at the Mirage Hotel on Friday.

Their show grossed in excess of $30 million in its first year at the Las Vegas Strip resort, a show business record for a stage attraction, according to producer Kenneth Feld.

"Siegfried & Roy continue to make as much magic at the box office as they do on stage," said Feld, who also produces Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus and Walt Disney's World on Ice.

Mirage chairman Steve Wynn signed Siegfried & Roy to a $57.5 million, five-year contract before the resort opened in November 1989. Wynn and Feld then invested $25 million each in the theater where their extravaganza is presented and in the show itself, which is known for its use of exotic animals such as white tigers.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A scheduled concert Saturday by singer Pat Boone in Jakarta had to be postponed for an undetermined time because of the Persian Gulf War, the organizer said Friday.

Boone

Boone, who was in Hong Kong, advised that the decision to postpone was made following consultations with his manager, Tim Swift, said Ary Sudarsono, president of Apro Ltd., sponsor of the concert.

Sudarsono promised that his company would soon repay those who bought tickets for the concert.

HOUSTON (AP) — Veteran astronaut Robert "Hoot" Gibson has soared to an unofficial record-breaking height in the same aircraft that was involved in a fatal accident last year.

The 44-year-old Navy commander and former test pilot unofficially set a new altitude record Thursday for light aircraft, soaring to 27,040 feet, exceeding the record set two years ago by 1,880 feet.

Gibson made the flight in a single-engine "midget" airplane that collided with another plane during an air show near New Braunfels, Texas, last July.

Gibson was sternly disciplined by NASA after that accident, which killed the pilot of the second plane involved.

NASA officials had cleared Thursday's flight.

Fed hopes economy will respond to prime-rate cut

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the face of stark new evidence of the nation's economic weakness, the Federal Reserve moved Friday with unusual force to stimulate the economy by sharply reducing the interest rates it controls.

Large banks across the country responded immediately by reducing their prime rate, the benchmark rate for many mortgages and other commercial and consumer loans.

But many economists predicted that Friday's steps would not be enough to bring the country out of recession. "I think the war has to end," said Jerry L. Jordan, chief economist at First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

"I don't think you're going to get people borrowing and spending again until they are confident that the war is not going to spread."

The pessimistic view of the economy, based largely on the government's release Friday of new, disappointing data about employment and manufacturers' purchases, is quite a contrast to the judgment that prevailed only a week or two ago when economists were saying the worst of the recession might be over.

"These numbers are so devastating that they suggest the worst is ahead of us and not behind us," said David M. Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a Wall Street bond firm. They show that "the recession could carry through to next year," he added.

The Labor Department reported Friday that unemployment rose to 6.2 percent in January, the highest level since 1987; that payrolls, not counting farm workers, fell by 232,000 jobs, and that the average workweek shrank by half an hour.

The combination of bad economic news and the Federal Reserve's actions caused interest rates in the credit markets to plunge, but the stock market appeared to focus more on corporate profits and fell slightly.

■ More nation news/ 1D

Within minutes of the Labor Department's release of the employment figures Friday morning, the Federal Reserve announced that it had cut the discount rate to 6 percent, from 6½ percent.

This is the rate the central bank charges on loans to commercial banks. Since banks rarely borrow from the Federal Reserve these days unless they are in serious trouble, the discount rate is important mainly as a signal of policy intentions.

Later in the morning, the Federal Reserve bought large quantities of government securities to indicate to the financial markets that it wanted to lower its target for the crucial federal funds rate, apparently to 6¼ percent, from 6¾ percent.

This is the rate commercial banks charge one another for overnight loans and is often a determining factor in the rates they offer customers. It was the second half-point cut in the rate in six weeks.

In Alan Greenspan's three and a half years as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve has almost always limited changes in the funds rate target to one-quarter of a percentage point at a time.

This was the first time the Federal Reserve changed the discount rate and the federal funds rate target on the same day.

Large commercial banks, including Citibank and J.P. Morgan in New York, the First National Bank of Chicago and BankAmerica Corp. in San Francisco, immediately reduced their prime rate to 9 percent, from 9½ percent, and other large and small banks will surely follow suit.

"The employment numbers were so dreadful that the Fed had no choice but to respond immediately with decisive, unambiguous action," said Robert H. Chandross, chief economist in the New York office of Lloyds Bank.

The Federal Reserve's actions also reflected a report by a private group, the National Association of Purchasing Management, showing that its purchasing managers' index had fallen to its lowest level since May 1982, in the midst of the last recession.

Jones, who has just completed a book on the Federal Reserve under Greenspan, says the chairman pays especially close attention to the monthly purchasing index, which measures what manufacturers are buying.

The Federal Reserve announced the discount rate cut shortly after 9 a.m. EST Friday morning instead of waiting, as it usually does, until after the financial markets closed.

The vote to reduce the discount rate was 5-0 with one governor, Wayne D. Angell, absent. The board has one vacancy.

Bush proposing $1.7 billion more for SDI, sources claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is proposing a defense budget of $295 billion for fiscal 1992 that includes $4.6 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative and money for four B-2 stealth bombers, congressional sources said Friday.

The request for SDI would, if approved, be $1.7 billion more than the $2.9 billion Congress and the administration agreed to last year. Approval for four B-2s would double the number Congress financed last year.

The overall budget, a decrease of almost $4 billion from last year's amount, is the first Persian Gulf war budget that also reflects a downturn in defense spending.

The budget does not include any of the costs of the war and U.S. participation in Operation Desert Storm, which the Congressional Budget Office estimates could range from $28 billion to $86 billion.

Among the major terminations in the president's proposal, according to sources who spoke on condition they not be identified, are the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the Trident submarine and the Air Force's Advanced Tactical Aircraft.

Last year's budget amounted to $298.9 billion in real spending and $285.6 in the authority given to the Defense Department for the budget.

Consistent with the levels set by the Bush administration and the Congress in the budget agreement reached late last year, real spending in the new budget is $295.2 billion while the authority totals $290.8 billion.

The budget follows the steep reduction of 25 percent in military personnel proposed by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney over the next five years, even through the war has forced the Pentagon to call up reservists and National Guard units.

Army divisions will be cut from 28 to 18 by fiscal 1995, the number of ships in the Navy will drop from 545 to 451 and the total of tactical fighter wings will decrease from 36 to 26, according to sources.

The Pentagon envisions that the current total manpower of 2.1 million will be reduced to 1.9 million by Oct. 1 of this year and drop down to 1.6 million by fiscal 1995.

The number of active aircraft carriers will drop to 12 by fiscal 1995, although the budget for fiscal 1993 includes $852 million in advanced procurement for a new carrier. The Navy now maintains 15 aircraft carriers, with one always undergoing renovation and 14 active.

Certain to be a major issue in Congress is the Pentagon's request for four B-2 stealth bombers.

Last year, the House voted to stop the program at the 15 planes currently under development while the Senate narrowly agreed to allow the program to go forward with the Pentagon's goal of 75 planes.

Last year's budget included $4.1 billion for the B-2 stealth bomber program, including $1.8 billion for research and $2.3 billion for procurement.

Senate proponents of the aircraft said the money is enough for the Air Force to buy radar-evading planes No. 16 and No. 17. Opponents of the plane in the House [illegible] the amount will cover only cost overruns on the first 15 planes.

On the contentious issue of two land-based nuclear missiles, the new budget includes $550 million in fiscal 1992 for the Midgetman missile and $458 million in research and development money for the MX missile.

The administration has no procurement money in the budget for the multiple-warhead MX missile.

Last year's budget significantly cut the administration's request of $2.2 billion for placing MX missiles on railroad cars and $202 million for development of the Midgetman nuclear missile.

Instead, the budget included a strategic pot of $680 million for the two missile systems.

Although the new budget terminates the Trident nuclear submarine program at 18, it calls for buying 28 Trident missiles in fiscal 1992. The budget also proposes one SSN-21 Seawolf submarine at a cost of $2.4 billion and five DDG-51 guided-missile destroyers at $4.2 billion.

The Navy had originally planned to buy 24 Trident submarines through fiscal year 2001.

The number of advanced cruise missiles in the budget are 120 at a cost of $626 million. The budget also calls for six C-17 transport planes at an expense of $2.8 billion.

Los Angeles faces serious water crunch

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — With water supplies seriously strained by drought, Mayor Tom Bradley is calling for a two-phased rationing program to force residents to cut back by 10 percent on March 1 and by 15 percent on May 1.

Also Friday, two Los Angeles City Council members proposed a moratorium on water hookups to all new development while water rationing is in force.

The mayor said that he is asking for mandatory rationing — which must be approved by the City Council — because snowpack levels in the Eastern Sierra Nevada, a key source of city water, are at their lowest point in recorded history.

"The snowpack figures that are in are astonishing, frightening," Bradley said at a City Hall news conference. "We want people to believe we're serious. I think we have to go to this mandatory program so the people get the conservation message."

To lessen the potential economic hardship, Bradley said that he is proposing that supplies to businesses that depend on water for their products be cut by a lower amount — 5 percent by March 1 and 10 percent by May 1.

Under the rationing plan, city Department of Water and Power customers will be forced to reduce their water below 1986 levels for their homes or businesses or face surcharges and penalties.

Households or businesses that have grown since 1986, or which need extra water for health or safety reasons, would be able to seek an exemption from one of five proposed DWP appeals boards.

Even with mandatory cutbacks of 15 percent, however, stricter limits might be required later this year if the drought persists, said Mike Gage, president of the Water and Power Commission.

"I'm afraid that this is not the last time you will hear from us on saving water," said Gage, one of several officials attending Bradley's news conference. "We may have to come back with even higher levels of savings."

The DWP commission is holding an emergency meeting on Monday to discuss the mandatory plan. It will then go the council's Commerce, Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Councilwoman Joan Milke Flores, who heads the committee and last year opposed going to a mandatory plan, said that she will hold hearings as soon as possible to bring it before the City Council within the next two weeks.

"I think there's no question that we need this now," Flores said. "We asked people to save and they did a pretty good job. But the situation has reached a point where we have no option but to go to the mandatory program."

The Los Angeles Daily News surveyed 12 of the 14 council members Friday (there is one vacancy), and of them only Councilman Nate Holden voiced opposition to rationing.

"People already are saving as much as they can," Holden said. "This is the winter months and the base amount people are using is down. During the summer, it's a lot easier to save water."

Under the proposed rationing plan, customers will be advised how much water they must save for each two-month billing period, and those who fail to meet those goals within a four-month period will face additional charges that will escalate with repeated failure to meet the limit.

Gage defended the more liberal restrictions on commercial and industrial water users.

"In case you haven't noticed, we're also in the midst of a recession," Gage said. "In everything we're doing, we try to take into consideration the impact on the economic health of the city."

The proposal to ban water hookups for new developments came from Council members Ruth Galanter and Zev Yaroslavsky.

EPA orders utility to cut pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, saying it was acting "to protect one of the Earth's most priceless natural wonders" — the Grand Canyon — on Friday ordered a nearby power plant to drastically cut its pollution.

Environmental groups, however, accused the agency of backing away from tougher controls on the plant.

Instead, the EPA said it would require the Navajo Generating Station to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions by 70 percent between 1995 and 1999 to rid the canyon skies of haze, especially in winter months.

Thatcher, Reagan to reunite for his 80th birthday bash

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher, a world figure turned wall flower, is about to return to the public eye — in the United States, where she will help old friend Ronald Reagan celebrate his 80th birthday.

Some insiders say the Iron Lady is doing fine without the burdens of office, but another old ally says, "She's lost. She doesn't know what to do with herself."

Since resigning Nov. 28, Mrs. Thatcher has rarely taken her seat in the House of Commons and never joins in debates. Her public utterances have been brief and few.

The U.S. schedule for Mrs. Thatcher, who left Friday, is thinly spread over a week in the Los Angeles area. There are a couple of laboratory visits, stops at the Reagan Library, as well as trips to a conservation park and to attend the ex-president's birthday party on Wednesday.

After dominating the Conservative Party for 15 years and governing Britain for 11½ years, Mrs. Thatcher was forced out by a revolt within the ranks. They had wearied of her spats with the rest of the European Community and feared her increasingly authoritarian image would cost them their seats in the next election.

Except for one brief British television interview — "now they know we're fighting back" — Mrs. Thatcher has even kept quiet through the Gulf War.

When Iraq invaded Kuwait in August, Mrs. Thatcher was in her element. She was visiting Aspen, Colo., and appeared alongside President Bush, declared Britain's immediate support and rushed British warplanes to the Gulf. On the day she decided to resign, she also decided to send more tanks and troops to Saudi Arabia.

Now John Major, her mild-mannered chosen successor, is sticking to the policy, with none of the old passion.

"She does feel under constraint now," said a former aide, speaking on condition of anonymity. "She was ill-prepared for this (losing office) ... the most difficult thing in the world is to give it up with dignity and panache."

For the woman who worked 18-hour days, life now centers on a suite of offices loaned to her by building magnate in a house near Parliament.

She has a staff of eight and is setting up the Margaret Thatcher Foundation to promote her political views. There'll be a multi-million-dollar fund-raising campaign.

She has so far avoided the lecture tour circuit, though the offers flood in, particularly from the United States.

At her behest, Queen Elizabeth II made her husband, now Sir Denis Thatcher, a baronet. She chooses to remain plain Mrs. Thatcher.

She's withdrawn from the public eye. But that helmet of stiff blonde hair, not one out of place, still frames the best-known face in Britain. Coupled with the bodyguards, it does not make for an ordinary life.

That, perhaps, was never on.

"Whoever wants an easy time?" she said at a rare public engagement last month, opening a laboratory west of London. "How terrible and boring."

NATION IN BRIEF

TWA withholds bond payment

NEW YORK (AP) — The troubles facing the air travel industry became more visible Friday, as Trans World Airlines Inc. defaulted on a $75.5 million bond payment and others prepared to scavenge the remains of Eastern Airlines.

"While I am troubled by the need to withhold payment from certain of our creditors, I believe it is imperative for the survival of TWA," TWA Chairman Carl Icahn said.

TWA's chief lawyer said, however, there were no plans to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors.

Even as TWA was hoping to find ways to restructure its debts, the industry's stronger carriers were preparing to meet privately Monday to bid for Eastern assets such as gates in various U.S. airports.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland ordered the auction after it became apparent that more than one carrier is seeking hunks of the grounded airline.

Eastern stopped flying last month after it ran out of money, despite recent cash infusions approved by the judge and a marketing program that offered first-class service at regular fares.

Gun crackdown begins

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida began cracking down on gun purchases Friday with buyers required to show a photo I.D. and wait while their names are run through state and federal crime computers.

The program isn't a cure-all but is better than the previous "lie and buy" system, said Tim Moore, commissioner of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

In the past, Florida has been a source of firearms smuggled elsewhere for criminals and revolutionaries. Of the 135 weapons confiscated in Trinidad after a revolt collapsed last year, 105 were traced to purchases at gun shows and shops in Florida by one man, said Joe Vince, assistant special agent in charge of the Miami office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The new program, mandated by a 1989 state law and modeled after a Virginia law on handguns, requires all licensed gun dealers to call the FDLE on a toll-free number and give every gun purchaser's name, gender and date of birth.

SPJ launches program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest organization of journalists unveiled a state-by-state campaign Friday to improve public and news media access to government records and proceedings.

"Project Sunshine is being launched now, during the bicentennial of the First Amendment, to gain back ground lost in the past two decades in the fight for open government," said Frank Gibson, president of the Society for Professional Journalists.

Paul McMasters, an editor with USA Today who heads an SPJ committee on freedom of information, added, "The real focus of Project Sunshine is to apprise the public of governmental actions that concern them ... to let the public find out how the government is doing its job."

Gibson said the program would be a supplement to current efforts by such groups as the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press. Gibson said his organization hoped to "beef up" those efforts and devise "a comprehensive way of attacking (access) problems."

AGENDA
ZONING BOARD OF ADJUSTMENT
FEBRUARY 14, 1991

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held by the Zoning Board of Adjustment of the City of Midland, Texas, on Thursday, February 14, 1991, in the Council Chamber, City Hall, City of Midland beginning at 3:00 P.M., to consider the following:

BD-91-002
Consider a request by John C. Edgar for a Special Exception to the Zoning Code concerning the side yard setback requirements, for a vehicle entrance, as an expansion of a nonconforming structure at 1410 W. Indiana Avenue. This property is described as Lot 7 and the West 29' of Lot 8, Block 26, West End Addition, City and County of Midland, Texas, and is located at the northeast corner of the intersection of "H" Street and Indiana Avenue, 1410 W. Indiana Avenue.

BD-91-003
Consider a request by Merrilyn Walker for a Special Exception to the City code to allow a minor encroachment into the required front yard setback area on Lot 1, Block 2, Park Hill Addition, City and County of Midland, located on the South side of Tennessee Avenue approximately 170' west of its intersection with North "D" Street, 1201 W. Tennessee Avenue.

Home With A Pool That's Not Over Your Head!
Only 5-1/2 years ago the owner had this gorgeous pool built in the middle of mature landscaping. The atrium doors off the fireplace - warmed den allows you to commune with nature year-round! The sequestered 5th bedroom is perfect for guest or teenager. Nestled in a friendly, family neighborhood at superb value of $93,900. Call Vicky Garrett today.

For Less Than Rent...
You can own this 3 bedroom, 2 bath with built-in appliances, screened-in porch, large living area with recessed lighting for just $28,500. Talk to Vicky Garrett.

What are the neighbors doing? For a complimentary market analysis on your neighborhood, call Vicky Garett.
