Planting Delayed By Heavy Rains

Heavy rains pounded Scurry County, especially areas to the north of Snyder and down the east side of the county, over the weekend, delaying what was to have been cotton planting day.

May 24 had been set as the uniform planting date, but fields were too wet for any activity this morning after weekend rains totalling up to 5½ inches fell on the heels of earlier showers that had the ground pretty well soaked already.

Billy Roach, county extension agent, said reports he had received indicated that the entire county was soaked. Flash flood warnings were out Sunday night in Snyder as heavy rains fell again on the Deep Creek watershed.

However, the creek crested at around six feet, well below flood stage in Snyder.

More than three inches of rain fell over the weekend in the Fluvanna-Dermott area, most of it Sunday night. Hard rains also fell north of Snyder, with up to five inches reported about five miles north of town.

County Commissioner Eldon Perry said he had around 5½ inches on his place east of Snyder over the weekend and that many terraces were broken in fields. The heavy fall continued to the southeast to the Roscoe area.

Up to four inches was reported in the Dunn area, which had missed some of the earlier rains and there were similar reports from the Hermleigh area.

Lake J. B. Thomas had 1.20 inches Sunday night after receiving .30 Saturday to make a total of 1.50 for the weekend. Lake Thomas had picked up about 2,500 acre feet of water, Colorado River Municipal Water District officials reported this morning. Both Bull Creek and Gavett Creek were still flowing this morning, but no inflow had been reported from the river. Bull Creek was still flowing about four feet deep at the Murphy Crossing, and Gavett Creek was reported about 40 feet wide.

Meanwhile, Lake E. V. Spence had picked up 15,000 acre feet of water and the river was still flowing five to six feet deep at Silver. Much of this had come from Scurry County via Deep Creek.

CRMWD officials said promising rains in the Lamesa area Sunday veered to the south and consequently produced little in the Colorado River watershed.

Rains had moved to the south and east this morning, although forecasts called for more scattered showers in this area tonight and Tuesday.

A flash flood warning was issued early today for Real and Uvalde Counties, including Garner State Park and the Nueces, Frio and Sabinal Rivers and their tributaries.

Much of South Central Texas was under a flash flood watch today.

Other showers and thunderstorms moved across North Central Texas at 25 mph. Forecasters warned that street and underpass flooding was likely in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Roads and streets in Lamar County in extreme North Texas were under water following heavy rainfall Sunday night and early today.

Walnut-size hail was reported at Goodfellow Air Force Base near San Angelo and pea-size to marble size hail was reported at San Angelo.

Street flooding was reported during the night in the Abilene area. Farm Road 610 was under water in places in extreme southwest Stonewall County and water was over Farm Road 1835 between Old Glory and Hamlin.

There was an unconfirmed report of a tornado near the Big Spring airport.

Marble-size and golf ball-size hail was reported at Welch in Dawson County during the night.

Some street flooding was reported at Midland where rainfall was estimated at the rate of two-three inches per hour during a heavy thunderstorm.

Thatcher Rejects Pope's Peace Call... Sanctions Are Extended

By The Associated Press
British newspapers reported today that commandos seized a heavily defended Argentine airstrip on the Falkland Islands, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher rejected Pope John Paul II's call for a truce.

In Falkland Channel, British seamen were battling to save their frigate from fires ignited by Argentine rockets. The frigate, which was not identified, was hit in another day of fierce air battles over the islands Sunday as British forces struggled to expand the foothold they established at Port San Carlos.

Mrs. Thatcher told the pope Britain will not stop fighting for the Falklands until Argentina withdraws from the British colony it seized April 2.

"Our cause it just," she told the pontiff in a message delivered by Britain's ambassador to the Vatican.

John Paul asked leaders of Argentina and Britain over the weekend to call a cease-fire. He is to visit Britain on Friday, the first such trip by a pope. Vatican officials said the six-day trip may be cut short but not canceled despite the Falklands conflict.

In Brussels, eight of 10 Common Market nations voted at Britain's request to extend indefinitely the week-long renewal of sanctions against Argentina scheduled to expire tonight. As in the previous extension Ireland and Italy abstained but pledged not to undermine the sanctions by buying more Argentine goods than normal.

Britain's Defense Ministry refused to confirm the newspaper report its forces had recaptured Goose Green airstrip, 20 miles south of Britain's invasion site of San Carlos on East Falkland. An estimated 1,000 Argentine troops were dug in around Goose Green.

The Guardian, Daily Mail and Sun all reported the British capture of the airstrip at Goose Green, 45 miles southwest of Stanley, the capital.

British press reports said today that Mrs. Thatcher's inner "War Cabinet" ordered troops to retake Stanley "within days" to restore British sovereignty. Other sources predicted Britain would gain control over East Falkland within a week.

In Sunday's fighting, Britain said it shot down six Argentine Mirage jets, one A-4 Skyhawk and one Puma helicopter, and probably downed another Mirage, two other helicopters and two other Skyhawks.

Argentina acknowledged losing one plane and claimed it damaged three British ships. The government news agency, Telam, said a "big offensive" was under way to push the British landing forces back into the sea, but the British reported no engagements with Argentine ground troops.

Britain has lost two ships, the destroyer Sheffield and the frigate Ardent, in the Falklands campaign, leaving the task force with three light cruisers, three destroyers and at least seven frigates. Four ships have been reported damaged but still operational.

On Sunday as the fighting continued, Argentina again expressed a desire for a peaceful settlement but not willingness to meet Britain's demands for withdrawal from the islands.

Responding to the pope's peace appeal, President Gen. Leopoldo F. Galtieri said Argentina was "willing to share a cessation of the hostilities that would allow re-establishment of peace and in that climate the search for a peaceful, honorable and just accord."

John Paul decided Saturday to go ahead with his plans to visit Britain unless advised against it by his British bishops, and the press officer for the visit, the Rev. Kevin O'Connell, said: "Everyone is convinced in their own mind that the papal father will touch down at Gatwick (airport) on Friday morning."

At the United Nations,

Panamanian Foreign Minister Jorge Illueca said he planned to press the Security Council for a resolution urging a cease-fire even though the British would probably veto it. Illueca, a supporter of Argentina, said a British veto would "show opposition to a civilized settlement."

Most of the speakers in the third day of Security Council debate Sunday called for a new resolution asking Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to make another mediation effort. His first ended in failure last week, just before British forces landed at Port San Carlos.

Psychiatric Study Ordered

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Prison psychiatrists have been ordered to determine whether Sirhan Sirhan, whose 1964 parole date was turned down last week, has a character similar to that of "other political assassins."

The California Board of Prison Terms ordered the study to be completed before the man convicted of killing Sen. Robert F. Kennedy appears for his next parole hearing in six months.

Board Chairman Ray Brown said the panel wanted more data on reports that Sirhan remains as much a "loner" today as he was before he shot Kennedy on June 5, 1968 in Los Angeles.

"The panel is concerned with the 'loner' status of Sirhan prior to commission of the crimes which brought him to prison and the same continuing pattern within the institution," a board report said. "Prisoner's pattern of withdrawal appears self-imposed to suit his own purposes."

Fatal Fire Investigated

CHICAGO (AP) — A fire that killed four people and injured up to 20 at the Conrad Hilton Hotel might have claimed fewer lives if there had been sprinklers and if guests had stayed in their rooms, a fire official says.

Authorities blamed a smoldering cigarette for the blaze that began Sunday morning on the 22nd floor of the 25-story hotel, which was built in 1927 and is one of the world's largest.

Police Superintendent Richard Brzezczek said a preliminary investigation showed the fire was accidental. An unidentified man believed to have been in the room where the blaze began was questioned by police Sunday night, but early today police said no one was being questioned any more and there were no suspects.

Talks Could Resume Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev has replied to President Reagan's call for resumption of strategic arms reductions talks, and a date for the negotiations could be set soon, according to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Speaking on the CBS "Face the Nation" program Sunday, Haig confirmed that Reagan had received a response from Brezhnev.

The secretary of state declined to make public any details of Brezhnev's reply but said, "We anticipate through diplomatic channels at the State Department level to confirm, hopefully before too long, a date for the resumption of START negotiations."

14 Killed In Car Bomb

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car carrying a bomb drove into the French Embassy compound in Moslem West Beirut today and exploded, killing 14 people, police said.

At least 15 others were injured when the car exploded under the flagpole flying the red-white-and-blue French tricolor, 10 yards inside the iron gates of the walled compound.

At least 10 of the victims were blown to pieces by the explosion, the police spokesman said.

Khorramshahr... Iran Claiming Control Of City

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran claimed today its forces "liberated" the port city of Khorramshahr after 578 days of Iraqi occupation and drove Iraqi troops out of Iran's oil-rich Khuzistan province.

"The city was liberated after a heroic and vigorous fight by the Iranian armed forces, Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, irregular and popular forces," the official Iranian news agency IRNA said.

There was no immediate response from Iraq, which earlier in the day reminded its Arab neighbors they are treaty-bound to aid Iraq.

If Iran's claim is true, the fall of Khorramshahr would mean a virtual defeat of Iraq in the border war it launched 20 months ago to gain control of the Shatt-al-Arab waterway to the Persian Gulf. Foreign correspondents are rarely allowed to the front to verify the conflicting war claims of each side.

Iran's news agency said the attacking Iranian forces first overran the town of Vali Asr to the west of Khorramshahr and blocked all supply and escape routes on land and through the Shatt-al-Arab from southern Iraq before storming into the besieged city from its main western gate.

Ask Us

Q.—Is it true that Snyder's emergency warning sirens are sounded by people in Fort Worth or Abilene?

A.—No. Civil Defense officials say they also have been asked this question. The sirens here are sounded only by local officials, and only three have authority to activate the sirens. City Manager John Gayle, Civil Defense director, says sirens in our system are similar to those used in Fort Worth, which may account for the question, but the system here is completely locally controlled. In addition to the Civil Defense director, the fire chief and police chief may activate the local sirens if conditions warrant action.

Polish Refugee Likes Living In Texas Now

By Noble Bryant Young
After nearly a year of traveling across Western Europe and five months in an Italian refugee camp, Stanislaw Metelski is finally settled in Houston and beginning to work on the dreams of a lifetime.

Stanislaw and his two children, Blanka (8) and Stanley (11), came to Snyder last weekend for a visit with Ruby Butts and some other Snyder residents who have helped him get through the last year of his flight from Poland and settlement in the United States.

Metelski met Ruby in Poland in 1979 while she was traveling with a tour group of American home economists. He served as their official interpreter.

After returning to Snyder, Ruby sent a thank you letter to Metelski that proved valuable in his quest to settle in Texas three years later.

When he finally arrived in New York in early March of this year, Metelski was told by U. S. immigration officials that he would have to prove he was related to or at least knew someone in Texas if he was to be allowed to move here.

A much folded copy of Ruby's letter provided immigration officials with a name and address on which they allowed him to come to Texas.

Metelski, a physicist by education and desire, is well on his way to getting permanently settled in the Houston area. He and his children are currently living with a sponsor family and he is working for the BearKat Company. He is involved with sophisticated dirt working techniques utilizing laser beams to level construction sites.

The 36 year old Metelski says that his nine month odyssey from Poland to Houston is the culmination of a lifelong dream. His journey to freedom began in June 1981 and led him and his children across Denmark, Germany, Switzerland and finally Italy where they waited five months before being granted political assylum in the U. S.

Although he professes a great love for his native country, Metelski talks of 12 years of frustration prior to fleeing for the U. S. In 1968, he was an up and coming physics student at Warsaw University with dreams of someday being able to work in a space program.

After the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia in '68, Metelski became active in student protests in Poland. The Polish government responded to the protests by closing the universities and requiring all students to reapply for admission. He was refused readmission.

Since then, he had been relegated to the role of interpreter for English speaking tourists.

He tells of a two month struggle with Polish cultural officials to name his son Stanley. When he first applied to name the boy, Stanley was rejected by the government as being too western. Stanislaw See Refugee, Page 7

Prevent the cough

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the past seven months my husband, age 40, has been going to the doctor with what the doctor called a lung congestion and arthritis in his hips and legs. The thing that worries me the most is that he has started passing out.

He will start to cough, his eyes roll back, he turns red, his arms shake some and he passes out. He's only out a few seconds, but when he comes to he is as white as a sheet, very weak and doesn't remember anything that happened.

The doctor told him that he had cough syncope. He said it came from smoking, being overweight, middle-aged and male. He said to stop smoking. That would not cure it but may keep him from passing out so often.

I know cigarettes can cause a lot of problems but it is hard to believe that cigarettes can do all this. I am afraid for him to drive or do things that might be dangerous. Do you have any information on this?

DEAR READER — Your letter describes cough syncope (fainting) perfectly. It usually occurs in middle-aged males who have chronic bronchitis, most often from smoking, and who cough forcefully.

There are several mechanisms that can cause the faint. The cough builds up pressure inside the chest and interferes with blood returning to the heart. This in turn prevents adequate blood flow to the brain. The cough may increase pressure of the cerebrospinal fluid in the brain and this increased pressure prevents blood flow into the brain. Then the explosive cough may act like a concussion to the brain. In any case there is usually no damage after the cough.

The first American police force, the Ratlewach, was founded in 1658 in New Amsterdam, which is now New York City.

Treatment is directed toward preventing coughing, that means improving lung function and perhaps using a cough suppressant. You are right that it is dangerous for him to drive with this condition.

I like to see these patients have a neurological examination because sometimes a plugged vessel or other problem in the brain makes them more susceptible to attacks.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-2, Fainting; Loss of Consciousness or Syncope, to explain faints to you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had some X-rays of my back because of a back injury. They showed I have calcium in my aorta. I am a bit of a hypochondriac and talked it over with my family doctor.

He said my heart was fine and it "was nothing to worry about," but I do. I am a 55-year-old female and I was with my dad when he died of a heart attack last year at age 85. Could you please give me your opinion of this? The very sound frightened me.

DEAR READER — If you have no other evidence of heart disease I would agree with your doctor. It is not unusual for calcium to deposit in the aorta, the large artery along the spine. In much older people the aorta may become almost solid with calcium. Surgeons often call these "glass aortas." If operated on, they may shatter like glass. The small amount of calcium will not harm you.

I would want to be sure that your cholesterol level and blood pressure are normal and that you don't smoke. If you take good care of yourself, with your family history of longevity, you and your aorta may live to over 90.

Hopefuls Line Up For Babies

DALLAS (AP) — Couples who lined up for a weekend wait to adopt a child — not just any homeless child, but a healthy white baby — get their chance at the Hope Cottage Children's Bureau today.

For the first time in two years, the private adoption agency opened its "Anglo infant intake" program Monday, signing up the first 100 couples on a first-come, first-served basis. People started lining up Friday to apply. By Sunday, hopeful parents in lawn chairs, many accompanied by their children, lined the walkway to the office building.

One couple brought a camper, another pitched a tent.

About 67 couples were on hand Sunday afternoon, each taking a number and answering periodic roll calls to keep their places in line. They had to wait because they wanted children seldom given up for adoption these days.

"The issue today is that all of these people want Anglo, healthy infants," said Sonja Romanowski, program director at the agency. "This is still the American dream. What's happening is that American reality is starting to come up more and more often."

Children with "special needs" — black, bi-racial, physically or emotionally handicapped, or older children — are available for adoption now. There's no need to stand in line to give these children homes, she said.

Ms. Romanowski said that about half of the 51 children placed last year were black, Mexican-American, or of mixed racial background.

But the number of available white infants is declining, she said, because most young or unmarried women keep their children today. Ten years ago, 80 percent to 90 percent of the 400 mothers annually served by the cottage gave up their babies. "Now, it's completely flopped, and of that 400, only 10 percent give up their children," Ms. Romanowski said.

Pam and Jim Hastings were first in line at 8 a.m. Friday, followed closely by Clifford and Barbara Bond, who brought a camper loaded with groceries.

In 1980, the Bonds stood in line to place an application. They eventually were rewarded with the adoption of a daughter.

While waiting Sunday, the Bonds planned to celebrate Meredith's second birthday and make one wish. As Meredith blew out the candles on her birthday cake, the Bonds wished for a brother or sister for their blond, blue-eyed daughter.

The one energy indispensable to life on this planet — the one energy of which we have more than anybody — is food.

Why don't we use it? By withholding food from belligerent nations we could get them to back off...

And we could motivate backward nations to move forward in the development of their own agriculture.

Ours is the carrot mightier than the stick.

Lowell Ponte, for Readers Digest, traveled 14 nations re-evaluating our nation's food policy. He concludes that we should be using this mightiest weapon for power, for profit — and for peace.

More than 170 nations sit in the United Nations; only eight of them grow more food than they eat.

The United States and Canada, Australia and Argentina, France and New Zealand, South Africa and Thailand — all "Western-aligned nations," please note — produce food for export.

But the United States, all by itself, controls the biggest share (57 percent) of exportable grain. With Canada, we produce and control 85 percent.

We have a greater potential stranglehold on the world's food supply than the OPEC nations have on the world's oil supply.

It is not inexhaustible. Our soil is being depleted as surely as world oil is being depleted.

Before our fertile topsoil is spent, we had better learn to husband what remains of this irreplaceable energy resource. President Carter tried to use food as a weapon in 1980, failed.

When the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, President Carter cut off further grain sales.

There were several reasons the embargo hurt us worse than it did them.

For one thing, there was enough grain "in the pipelines" to keep the Soviets supplied for many months. Also, the embargo "leaked;" Eastern Europe bought our grain and resold it to the Soviets. And our allies among food-producing nations doubled their own exports.

So the Carter embargo fizzled. The glut of unsold grain in the United States depressed prices so that our own farmers were punished mercilessly.

Lowell Ponte concludes that our nation's global humanitarian food policy has done more harm than good. It discouraged under-developed nations from developing their own agriculture and encouraged them to breed more babies.

Even now we sell our grain much too cheaply.

While oil has gone from one dollar a barrel to 30 dollars and more, our bushel of wheat or corn sells now for less than then!

If we would join with the other seven world grain producers to form an OPEC-like cartel, we could get top dollar for our grain, conserve topsoil, and prompt other nations to produce more food on their own.

We tried using food as "a stick" and failed.

As a "carrot" it might benefit everyone on Earth.

Gas Demands May Not Help Stations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The price gap between no-frills gasoline stations and the major brand dealers is shrinking, and even a summer boost in demand isn't likely to restore the non-major stations' advantage, an oil industry analyst says.

In some parts of the country the average retail price difference between the major and private brand dealers has slipped to just .34 cents a gallon, according to the weekly Lundberg Letter, which tracks oil industry trends.

"It is highly questionable whether a summer pickup in demand will be enough to bring back the competitive edge for the private branders," said Tribby Lundberg, editor of the weekly letter published by her father, Dan Lundberg.

Lundberg's May 7 nationwide price survey of self-serve regular gas showed a difference of 1.86 cents a gallon between the average prices of major and private brand stations.

A similar survey on May 5, 1978, showed a difference of 2.98 cents, the letter said.

The non-major stations rely on volume to compensate for their lower prices, Ms. Lundberg said Saturday. But with gas prices on the rise again, drivers this summer will likely be more conservative in their vacation driving, and won't provide the volume of gas sales that the non-major brand dealers need, she said.

Reagan Administration Ready To End DOE

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of behind-the-scenes maneuvering, the Reagan administration is finally sending Congress its plan for dismantling the Energy Department. Elimination of the Cabinet agency created under the Carter administration had been made a campaign issue by Ronald Reagan, who contended government involvement had only worsened the nation's energy problems.

Reagan was scheduled to sign a letter transmitting his dismantlement plan to Congress at a White House ceremony today attended by several key senators and Cabinet members.

Reagan Is Pressuring House To Ok Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, having won a 1983 budget blueprint to his liking from the Senate, is pressuring the House to ignore Democratic leaders and follow the same course.

But as the House begins voting today to sort through a dizzying array of seven separate budget outlines and 68 amendments, neither Democratic nor Republican leaders can claim a majority for the plans they are pushing.

They agree, however, that it won't be easy getting votes for the election-year decisions necessary to keep the 1983 budget deficit below $182 billion.

That's the deficit that congressional and administration experts say could probably be expected without action on Capitol Hill.

The plans before the House contain "no first choices for political people. All of the choices are second choices at best — third, fourth and fifth choices more likely," says House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla.

The Democratic-controlled House is beginning work as the Republican-controlled Senate has completed action on a $784 billion 1983 budget outline.

After a week of often bitter partisan debate, the Senate voted 49-43 along party lines Friday night for a package that calls for tax increases of $23 billion in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 and $107 billion over three years.

It also projects deficits of $116 billion in 1983; $92 billion in 1984 and $65 billion in 1985.

Reagan, in a radio address to the nation Saturday, said the Senate had taken "responsible action," adding, "I would have liked more reductions in spending but at least it's another step in the right direction — the direction we started to go last year."

The president also told his listeners that if they "want interest rates to come down and the economy to get going," they should tell their congressmen to vote for a budget outline drafted by House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Refugee

was finally able to get the required approval for the name after research uncovered a priest in old Bohemia named Stanley who had lived several centuries ago.

Giving his son an American name was a desire that would not be frustrated.

When questioned about the whereabouts of his wife he responds that he simply doesn't know. He replies that they are probably divorced under Polish law but he has had absolutely no word one way or the other. Stanley and Blanka's mother, he says, is a devout Communist, and she refused to have any part in his plans and struggle to reach America.

Even though he has been allowed no communication with relatives still in Poland since the declaration of martial law last December, he is optimistic about chances to get his mother, sister and brother-in-law out of the country. He does know that his father and brother have gotten out and are now in Denmark.

When asked why he chose to leave last June, he says that he, and others who were politically active, were able to see the signs of the coming crackdown during the proceedings of the 1981 congress of the Polish Communist Party.

One thing he says he likes best about the U. S. is the absence of any sort of active Communist party. When he talks about his home, he describes a land of freedom unprecedented within the Communist Bloc. According to him, Russian tourists were so amazed by the freedoms in Poland that they thought they were in the U. S.

Metelski says that life in the U. S. is getting better and better each day as he accomplishes some new goal. He says one of his first and proudest achievements was earning his Texas drivers license. For the future, he plans to move into his own apartment around the first of June and eventually finish his physics studies at an American university.

He has already been in contact with NASA officials in Houston and he says he is very excited about the prospect of possibly getting a job in the U. S. space program after he completes his studies and gets his U. S. citizenship.

Eleven year old Stanley, says that the thing he likes best about the U. S. are the schools. He tells of the closed doors of classrooms in Polish schools and says that his school in Houston doesn't even have doors on the rooms. He finds this vastly preferable.

Metelski says he chose Texas over other parts of the U. S. because it represents a collection of everything he had heard of that was good in America.

Texas he says, has it all. From the romance of the cowboys and Indians of the old west to the most advanced technology in the world at the Johnson Space Center, it's all in Texas. So far he says, he has not been disappointed.

letter to editor

To The Daily News:

The Scurry County Unit of the American Cancer Society wishes to express their appreciation to co-chairmen, Jerry and Connie Springer, for the benefit dance held to help raise money for the Cancer Crusade. Thanks to John and Lou Ann Walker; Tommie and Johnnie Riley; Ford and Doris Spikes; Howard and Jo Sterling; Leroy and Nona Key; Raymond and Lenora Boydston and Toby Martin for their help. Also, Bill Harrison and his Well-Tex crew for setting up tables and chairs, the Noon Kiwanis Club, who ran the concession stand and donated all proceeds to the Crusade, and to all who came and to those who stayed and helped stack the tables and chairs, or helped in any way—a big thank you!

It is unselfish people like you and all volunteers, giving of your time and talent, that makes Scurry County the fine place it is to live and raise our children.

Professionals Expand Decorative Tile Uses

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures
Decorative building materials once were tied closely to what was available in the immediate vicinity.

Wood was used in forested areas, brick where brickworks were handy, and natural stone where boulders dotted the fields.

Transportation and the demands of international trade have helped widen the range for many decorative building products, which helps explain why a group of Italian tile producers recently hired 19 American design firms to create interiors using ceramic tile.

In Italy, a leading producer of tile, the product is used in many indoor and outdoor applications, and the Italians currently supply about 18 percent of the tiles used in the United States.

But to gain more sales, the tile producers decided to show how to use tile creatively in entryways, dining areas, boudoirs, living areas and even a billiard room which was part of a recent model room group show at the Italian Tile Center in New York City.

Generally speaking, the welltrained hands of the interior designer were evident in each room. But the designers also came up with some interesting ideas for do-it-yourselfers.

If you are working without a designer, use tile simply in a single color for both floor and wall surfaces, several suggested. They explained that intricate patterns require meticulous planning to come out right.

"If you take one color and stick to it for floors and walls, you can't go wrong," said David E. Bell, who did something similar in a bathroom he and his associate, Donald Cotter, designed.

Eric Bernard agreed. If you use the same color grout as tile, any small imperfections in installation will be almost impossible to spot, he said. According to Bernard, "the larger the tile, the more expensive the installation and the more skillful the installer must be." By using 6-inch square or smaller tiles, a do-it-yourselfer will eliminate much of the cutting which makes tile installation difficult.

There was a difference of opinion as to how complicated it is to lay tile. The consensus was that jobs involving laying only a small number of tiles are well within the scope of most consumers.

Paul Leonard, who built a tile table top in his room, said the project was simple. He used a ready-made base that normally supports a butcher block top and laid decorative tiles on a plywood top with a tile adhesive. Next he applied the grout and then covered the table edges with wood moulding.

The resulting table was displayed in a cheerful kitchen, but Leonard suggests the same idea would work well for a patio picnic table or a table in a garden room or living room. Any sort of table base can be used, he said.

Another do-it-yourself project could be a table base of tile. That's what Chuck Giordano and Charles Kaminskis did in an all-white dining room. Their table base also has a tubular neon light in it. But if you leave out the light, it's a simple matter of gluing on a few tiles. The plywood base can be constructed after measuring the tiles so there is no cutting to do. The designers laid a glass table top on their base, getting it up to proper height by the addition of a plexiglass block.

Oswald: "I first met Al Roth in the finals of the 1941 Reisinger. My team won, but this youngster of 20 almost beat us single-handedly."

Alan: "Al is over 60 now and plays much less than he used to, but his dummy play is still the best. Here is one of his recent hands."

Oswald: "West was in some sort of end play at trick one, but found the best opening of the ace and the four of clubs. Al won the second trick and led a spade, but East hopped up with the ace and led another club. West ruffed with the nine of trumps and Al undertruffed."

Alan: "Al had found the only way to make his contract. The undertruff was necessary since Al had to retain four hearts and three diamonds in dummy. West was now completely end played. If he led a heart, South would let it run to his jack and eventually discard a diamond on dummy's fourth heart. If he led a low diamond, it would run to South's queen. West would then be squeezed in hearts and diamonds when South ran off all his trumps."

Oswald: "If Al had chucked a heart from dummy, West could lead a heart. While all hearts would be good, South would be left with a diamond loser. If Al had chucked a diamond, West could lead a diamond. Al would get two diamond tricks, but have to lose a heart at the finish."

Dear Abby

Abby Discusses Her Reruns

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Over the years readers have written to request a rerun of a certain letter or column. Many have told me that they have carried a favorite clipping around for so long that it has become yellowed with age and too worn to read.

While some letters are valued for their humor, others are a painful reminder of the consequences of thoughtless behavior.

Twenty years ago I printed a letter signed "Too Late," and judging from the number of requests I've had to run it again, that letter obviously touched a sensitive nerve with a great number of Dear Abby readers.

"Too Late's" poignant plea says something about the way some folks treat their aging parents, and what it says is not very pretty:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old gray-haired parents. They sat at home loving me just the same. It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them."

"I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time, for it is later than you think. — TOO LATE"

The above letter has been rerun in my column no less than half a dozen times, and each time it appeared, I've been deluged with requests to repeat it. Even though times have changed since I first started writing this column, many things have remained the same, and I find that some letters are as pertinent and helpful today as they were 25 years ago.

My purpose in writing this column has always been to provide my readers with information, advice and entertainment. In the past, I have repeated columns on Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's, Mother's Day and so forth, usually, but not always, identifying them as reruns. There have been other letters that in my opinion have carried an important message and also deserved to be repeated. The best explanation for repeating a special letter is this: Some personal problems have endless variations, and over 25 years I've seen hundreds of them. If I recall and have an "old" letter that addresses itself exceptionally well to one of those problems, I've republished it as the most effective way of illuminating an issue. My ultimate goal, after all, is to be maximally effective and interesting.

Because of the recent publicity given to the re-running of published material, I shall make it a policy to identify all letters that have been previously published.

Apropos "repeats": Tomorrow I will rerun a column on the Living Will, a document a person can sign to let his loved ones know that should he ever become terminally ill with absolutely no hope for recovery, he will not be kept alive by artificial means.

Although I have publicized the Living Will at least a dozen times, I still get letters from readers saying they read about it "a few years ago" but paid little attention to it at the time, and now they need to know how to get one.

I am told that I have been responsible for putting the Living Will into the hands of nearly 5 million people both here and abroad. I consider this an important public service.

So while some readers may find reruns boring, dull or a waste of space, others find them invaluable.

It's difficult to please all of the people all of the time, but if I please most of the people most of the time, then all the time and energy I have put forth in writing this column will have been worthwhile.

DINAMAP—Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary recently donated $3,603.76 to the hospital to purchase two vital signs monitors. The dinamap displays control settings as they would appear on a hospitalized patient during a typical monitoring procedure. The monitor is capable of automatically calibrating vital signs; systolic and diastolic, blood pressure, heart rate, and mean arterial pressure. It gives up-to-date readings at approximately one minute to 16 minute intervals using a combination of switches. Measuring the extremity and selecting proper size cuff, the dinamap is capable of monitoring infant to adult vital signs accurately. One is in use in ICU-CCU and the other is used in the surgery recovery room. In the picture above, Barbara Davis, R.N., center, demonstrates the use of the machine on Inez Brown, auxiliary chairman of cigarette machines, as Lucille Joyce, chairman of afternoon floor workers, looks on. Revenue to purchase this equipment came from memorial contributions which are reserved for life saving equipment for use at the hospital. Mrs. Flo Joyce is chairman of the auxiliary memorial fund. Dental Assn. Moves To Serve Handicapped

CHICAGO (AP) — How can you visit the dentist if your wheelchair doesn't fit through the office door? How can you clean your teeth if you don't know what a toothbrush is? How do you get a cavity filled if you can't get out of bed?

These are just a few of the obstacles that prevent the institutionalized, homebound and handicapped from receiving the dental care they need, Dr. Robert H. Griffiths, president of the American Dental Association, points out. Many of these people, he adds, need care very badly because their teeth have often been neglected for years.

A few years ago, the dental profession decided to do something about this problem, Griffiths reports. Working at the local, state and national levels, dentistry has devised a variety of programs aimed at improving the dental health of handicapped persons and those confined to homes or institutions.

Several of these programs are run by the National Foundation of Dentistry for the Handicapped, an organization supported by the ADA and the Kellogg Foundation. More than 33,000 handicapped people in 34 communities across the country now benefit from the foundation's Campaign of Concern.

In each participating community, a dental hygienist operating under the supervision of a coordinating dentist visits facilities that care for the handicapped. The hygienist assesses the dental health of each individual, cleans teeth, and refers those who need additional treatment to dentists or clinics that have agreed to accept handicapped patients.

An important part of the program is teaching and motivating the handicapped to care for their own teeth.

"At a time when physicians who make house calls are a remembrance of the past, increasing numbers of dentists are treating patients in their homes," said Griffiths. The Foundation of Dentistry for the Handicapped and a growing number of dental societies now spon-

BROCCOLI SOUP
It's delicious and a lovely green color.
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup chopped onion
¾ cup chopped celery
Two 10-ounce packages frozen chopped broccoli, thawed enough to separate
2 cups clear fat-free chicken broth
1 cup milk
Salt and white pepper to taste
Thinly sliced scallions, if desired

In a medium saucepan heat the butter; add the onion and celery and cook gently until wilted. Add the broccoli and the broth; quickly bring to a boil. Cover and simmer until broccoli is tender — about 5 minutes. Puree in 2 batches in an electric blender.

In a saucepan, stir together the broccoli puree, milk and salt and pepper; heat. Makes about 5 cups. If soup is thicker than you like, add broth or milk and correct the seasoning. Pass a small bowl of the scallions, if you like, as a help-yourself addition.

Fergus Holds On To Win At Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) - It went in the books as a bogey 5, but it was just the ticket Keith Fergus needed for victory.

Fergus still had to sink a 20-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff to capture the $300,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic Sunday, but it was the 448-yard 15th hole that ruined the day for three other players.

First, there was Wayne Levi taking a quadruple bogey 8 that spoiled an otherwise brilliant performance in which he recorded nine birdies.

Raymond Floyd, the victim of Fergus' playoff birdie, took six shots to complete the toughest hole on the 7,007-yard, par-72

Atlanta Country Club course.

Larry Nelson, the 1981 PGA champion who had led after each of the first three rounds and was tied with Fergus after 14 holes, took a triple bogey 7 and never got back into the race.

Fergus claimed the $54,000 first prize and the second victory of his career with the playoff birdie after lipping out a 15-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole for a 69-273.

Floyd, who has been struggling and remains winless this season, had his 18-foot birdie putt stop at the edge of the cup, completing a 68 for his 15-under-par score.

Levi finished alone in third place with a 68-274.

Win It 5-3...

Royals Rap Rangers; With Key Relief Help

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - The more work, the better, as far as Dan Quisenberry is concerned.

And Sunday the Kansas City Royals' ace reliever especially wanted to work against the Texas Rangers.

"I usually pitch with very little emotion," said Quisenberry, who quelled a ninth-inning Ranger rally for a 5-3 Kansas City victory and his 11th save of the season.

"But I felt a lot of emotion out there today after getting hit hard last (Saturday) night. I was a little pumped."

The sinkerballing Quisenberry, a 3-1 loser in 12 innings Saturday night, came on in the ninth Sunday with runners at first and second and nobody out.

But he retired George Wright on a groundball to first, struck out pinch-hitter Bobby Johnson and got Buddy Bell to ground to third to preserve the victory for Mike Armstrong, 1-0.

It was the third consecutive appearance for Quisenberry, who has pitched in 17 of Kansas City's 39 games.

Pinch-hitter Cesar Geronimo delivered the game-winning hit, a bloop double in front of diving right-fielder Larry Parrish that drove in two runs in the bottom of the eighth.

The Rangers owned a 3-2 lead by virtue of a two-out error by shortstop Onix Concepcion and singles by Randy Bass and pinch-hitter Bill Stein in the top of the eighth.

But Amos Otis and Hal McRae touched Texas starter Rick Honeycutt, 0-5, for one-out infield hits in the bottom of the inning before Willie Aikens struck out. Steve Comer replaced Honeycutt, and Martin greeted him with a lazy single to right, scoring Otis.

Then Geronimo, who hadn't batted since May 8, pinch hit for Frank White and lofted his game-winning hit to hand the Rangers their 21st defeat in their last 26 games.

Lamar Johnson's two-out single gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the second, but the Royals tied the score in the bottom of the inning on an RBI single by Concepcion.

In the sixth, Texas went ahead on John Grubb's sacrifice fly. Singles by

Explosive Teams Expected To Turn Strategists During Bi-District Series

District 2-4A baseball champ Snyder is 24-5 for the season, boasting a 16-game win streak. The Tigers have won six games by 10 runs or more; four by the 10-run rule. Estacado, 23-3, has won 12 games in a row. The Matadors have won 11 games by 10 runs or more; eight by the 10-run rule.

Despite all that, don't look for high scores when the two teams meet this week.

By BILL McCLELLAN

LUBBOCK -- This week's bi-district baseball playoff between Snyder and Lubbock Estacado isn't expected to be a slugout. It shapes up as a cat-and-mouse game, a chess match - a strategists dream.

Game One of the best-of-three series begins here tomorrow, 4 p.m. at Estacado Field. Game Two is set for 2 p.m. Friday at Moffett Field in Snyder, with a Game Three to follow, if necessary. Game One looms as very, very important.

"We're not out of it by any means if we lose that first one in Lubbock," says Snyder Coach Albert Lewis, "but there's no question it will be much harder for us to come back and win two in a row against a team like Estacado. We've done it before though. But winning that first game would be a plus for us."

Lubbock Estacado is expected to open with Wayne Dotson, already a two-year veteran of Snyder-Estacado playoff wars. Dotson, heralded as one of the top pitchers in the area, boasts an ERA of 1.24. He'll be up against Tiger strength John Wilson, 10-1, who holds a 1.43 ERA.

"We'll go with Wilson every first game (of the playoffs) and they'll go with Dotson," assured Lewis, who is also certain of the pitching in the second game. "We'll start Tommy (Gressett) in the second game and they'll go with Joe Benavidez."

Benavidez, who also played against Snyder in the 1980 and 1981 playoff series, has an ERA of 0.90. He also claims an 18-strikeout performance over the Tigers this year, when Estacado beat Snyder 6-1 in the finals of the Snyder Tournament.

Gressett comes in at 4-1 with an ERA of 2.39. In 35% innings, Gressett hasn't walked a man.

But if there is a major difference between the two squads - if - then it is probably in the pitching. Favor Estacado because of experience.

"If there is one key advantage they have over us it's with their pitchers, Dotson and Benavidez," says Lewis. "They've got seven years varsity experience between them. And they're both very good."

But unless it's a bad day for pitchers and the batters dominate, the series is expected to come down to the little things...a walk and a single, a sacrifice, a bunt, a stolen base, a wild pitch, an error. These are the things that could make the difference.

"Estacado is a great team, there is no question about it," says Lewis. "But they can make mistakes. And when they do, we have to be ready to take advantage of them. They're good, but they aren't unbeatable."

Snyder swept a playoff series with Estacado two years ago, winning 4-3 and 8-1, while the Matadors took the Tigers in two games last season, 9-3 and 8-1.

The Mats are coached by Hodie Garcia.

Jones Shuts Out Houston Astros

HOUSTON (AP) - New York Mets pitcher Randy Jones knows the good and the hard times very well.

Sunday night was one of the better times as the left-hander shut out the Houston Astros, 2-0, for his sixth win in eight decisions.

Jones, the 1976 Cy Young Award winner, struck out five, gave up one walk and scattered four hits. It was his first shutout in two years.

Jones relied on his sinker to force Phil Garner into a fielder's choice with two men on base in the sixth inning. That out effectively quelled the Astros only serious threat in the game.

White and Willie Wilson - who has a 14-game hitting streak - sandwiched around an error by second baseman Doug Flynn enabled the Royals to make it 2-2 in the seventh.

New York got their two runs in the third inning. Tom Veryzer singled to left, went to second on a sacrifice, moved to third on a ground out and scored when Wally Backman singled to right. Backman stole second and went to third and eventually scored on two Joe Neikro wild pitches.

Neikro, 3-4, was the loser.

76ers Win; Take Series

BOSTON (AP) -- Philadelphia's 76ers rebounded from an 88-75 loss Friday night to outplay the Boston Celtics 120-106 Sunday and claim the Eastern Conference NBA title.

The victory earned the 76ers a date in Philadelphia Thursday night for the opener of the best-of-seven title series with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Sharpshooting Andrew Toney, who had scored 39 points in the fourth game but only three in Game 6, fired in 14 of 23 field goal attempts and 34 points to lead all scorers Sunday.

A slice in golf, a shot that curves to the right, is caused by clockwise spin on the ball.
