West Texas Potash Deposits Value Set At Nine Billions

SURVEY MADE BY UNIVERSITY BUREAU HEAD

Dr. E. P. Schoch Reports Vast Potash Resources In Midland County

AUSTIN, Sept. 19. (AP)—Potash deposits in west Texas of a potential value of $9,200,000,000, and the most extensive of any field in the world, are described in a report made by Dr. E. P. Schoch, director of the industrial chemistry division of the University of Texas, made to officers of the Standard Potash company which has holdings of 70 square miles in south Midland county. Tests costing over $100,000 were carried out in making the survey.

The United States government has set aside half a million dollars in a bill sponsored by United States Senator Earle B. Mayfield, to assist in developing the vast potash resources of Texas, and creating a world market for the Texas product.

Dr. Otis Smith, director of the United States geological survey is quoted to have estimated the value of a square mile with deposits five feet thick, and a potash content of 11.21 percent at $160,000,000.

Many Hre Anxious On Fate of Friends In Florida's Storm

Anxious Wichitans with friends or relatives in the storm stricken area of Florida called the Record News at frequent intervals Sunday night to learn the latest reports on the situation. A considerable number of residents of this city, it appears, have relatives in Miami Palm Beach or other points which felt the fury of the hurricane.

Joe Art has a brother and sister in Miami, he reported, and had heard nothing from them Sunday. A. Mrs. Slayton, Stratford hotel, has a son in Miami and tried unsuccessfully all day to get a message through to him. Several other persons whose name could not be learned called Sunday to make induiry.

Reports from Florida indicate that several days will be required before messages can be sent through with any semblance of regularity. The first wire communication established will be devoted to the press services and for the handling of official messages.

Texas Progress Gauged Through The Years By Development of Fairs

The Star Fair Built Dallas; Fort Worth Has Profited by the Fat Stock Show, Waco by the Cotton Palace—Now Wichita Falls.

BY HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff

A mighty oak had its beginning in the little acron that sprouted in the earth. This is a mystery of nature. A mighty fair had its beginning when a small coterie of individuals with vision gathered round the table in a small and dingy office room. This is the story of the origin and the tremendous growth of the greatest fair on the continent of North America.

All mammoth institutions or enterprises had small beginnings. They had to creep before they were able to walk. They had to walk before they expanded and became colossal structures. Dallas has its fair and exposition. It is one of the mightiest in existence. It had its beginning when Dallas had a population of less than 30,000. It was launched and Dallas grew with the fair. Now Dallas has a population, counting its suburbs of 250,000.

Fort Worth has its livestock show. It had a small beginning. It was launched when Fort Worth was a frontier town. Now Fort Worth is one of the great cities of the southwest, and Fort Worth has grown with its great livestock show and rodeo. Waco has its Cotton Palace. It is one of the most unique exposition that the south, the home of the fleecy staple, has known. It was launched when Waco was a very small city.

Waco is a large and a rapidly growing city and the Cotton Palace and Waco have walked side by side in the years of growth and progress under Lone Star skies. There are hundreds of fairs and rodeos and expositions in the southwest. Progressive men, men who vision the future of their town and of Texas are the builders of these enterprises. Less than five years ago the embitious citizens of the embitious city of Wichita Falls launched the Texas-Oklahoma Fair and Exposition.

Business and professional men led off. They placed their money behind it. They call it the Blue-Ribbon Baly of the Bluebonnet state. Not one of these fairs and expositions which were launched years ago received aid from state or county or city. They were started off by funds taken from the private purses of the people who believe in city building and state building. Truth is year in and year out in its early stages the Dallas fair was sustained by the selling of tickets to the people after large blocks of tickets had been taken by business houses, by men in all fields of endeavor, who could afford to buy them and send them as gifts to the people in the nearby counties and towns.

This made Dallas a trade center. For sixten years the writer was drafted to serve as the publicity and advertising director of the Dallas Fair and knows whereof he speaks. Months before the coming of the annual Dallas Fair, the secretary and his assistant, the only salaried officers of the enterprise would begin the advance sale of fair tickets.

Many a year the fair started off on the money received by this advanced sale and drawing attractions, including grand opera and all of the star amusement hits of the season, would be signed on the strength of the cash in the box which came from the sale of tickets to the people of Dallas and Dallas county.

A man who could afford to purchase a hundred tickets advanced the money gladly. He was doing it for his town. A man in humble circumstances, who could afford to purchase two tickets, handed in his money. He was doing his part. Those who are familiar with the history of the Dallas Institution know that it would have fallen by the wayside and sease to function had it not been for the pride of the people in their city and their willingness to do all in their power to start off the annual show as it should be started.

Alex Sanger was a merchant prince. He was a director of the fair for years. Then he was drafted to serve as president of the fair. He left his office, his business, and camped at the fair grounds for two months. All the business men and all the people got in behind him. He made a stupendous success of it that year. He was drafted for a second term. He made another success. Yes, the writer knows. He was drafted to serve Alex Sanger for two months the first year and two months the second year.

Jump from Dallas to Waco. Read the history of the Cotton Palace, an enterprise that has a record of achievements behind it and a promise of a glorious future if the signs of the time can be made the basis of prophecy. In Waco the builders of the town, the merchants of the town, the men of affairs of the town always banded together. And the newspapers of the town spread the value of the Cotton Palace as an educator and a trade getter and a city and country builder to the utmost ability of the man who directed them.

People of Waco know all about the advanced sale of tickets. They know all about underwriting coming expositions. They know all about going down in their pockets

DANIELS SEES LONG MEETING ON SCHOOL AID

Wichita Falls Solon Predicts Five Week Necessary To Handle Bill

AUSTIN, Sept. 19(AP)—Members of the 39th legislature reassembling here to rthe reconvening Monday of the call session discussed with interest Sunday night the persistent report of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson early in the week will recommend the passage of a 3 cents a gallon tax on gasoline to raise the per capita scholastic appotionment from $11.50 to $15.

Apparently the only basis for the report are Gov. Fergusons's repeated advocacy of such a tax, and the presentation to her last week of a petition signed by 94 members of the house asking that she provide ways and means of increasing the scholastic apportionment.

In her communication to the legislature, however, the governor suggested validation of district road bonds and investigation of state departments should be disposed of before the taking up of other business.

Sees Long Session.

Representative Roy J. Daniels of Wichita Falls said that if the governor should submit the question of raising the apportionment, the legislature would be in session at least five weeks.

He said the submission of increasing the tax on gasoline likely would provoke a spirited contest.

All indications are that validation of $100,000,000 of district road bonds, the primary purpose for calling the legislature into session, will be consummated this week. More than 450 of 556 necessary validating bills have been introduced.

The contest over the ordering probe of the state departments, specifically the highway commission textbook commission, and pardon board, furnished in the house the most fiery legislative pyrotechnics of last week, with the followers of Attorney General Dan Moody winning a decisive victory over the Ferguson side of the house.

Speaker to Act.

Speaker Lee Satterwhite Wednesday or Thursday will announce the investigating committee of nine, which will report to the 40th legislature. With all conceding Moody leaders will dominate the committee, the only point for conjecture is whether the Ferguson minority will be given representation. Moody supporters in putting over the resolution won 104 to 22. Should Satterwhite approximate this ratio on the committee, he would name seven Moody followers and two Ferguson supporters.

Confirmation of Hal Moseley of Dallas and John Cage of Stephenville as highway commisisoners is an important item before the senate this week.

1926 BUSINESS RECORDS GAIN

New High Marks Certain In Many Lines Of U. S. Industry

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. (AP)—An examination of business results so far this year and of prospects for the approaching fourth quarter seems to warrant the conclusion that 1926 will mark the establishment of new high records in most lines of industry.

Commercial reports last week revealed that the autumn trade was developing at a prominsing rate, with manufacturing operations speeding up.

The main off-setting influences, which might eventually become important enough to retard the forward movement of business, have been the gradual hardening of money rates, complaints of narrowing margins of profit, declining commodity prices and a slight increase in inventories. Unfavorable though they are, none of these factors has yet become a symptom of reaction.

Agricultural districts in the midwest have been adversely affected within the past week by the damage to crops from severe storms and floods.

Conditions on the whole, however, are regarded as satisfactory. Little doubt remains that the railroads this year will carry the largest volume of freight in their history and that 1926 likewise will be a banner year from the standpoint of earnings.

The prosperity of the railroads has long been accepted as an index to the general prosperity of the country.

As was the case last year, the automobile industry is finding that autumn sales, stimulated by the introduction of new models, are keeping pace with those of the spring months.

Trans-Atlantic Hop Deferred On Account of Bad Weather

WESTBURY, N. U., Sept. 19. (AP)—Guarded by two deputy sheriffs and two torpedo men, assigned by the navy department the Sikorsky biplane S-35 stood idle in its hangar today, awaiting favorable weather for the New York to Paris non-stop flight.

Captain Rene Fonck, who will be commander of the flight, visited the hangar for a few minutes, scanned the weather reports briefly and then departed. Tuesday still stands as the tentative date for the hop-off, but the start may be earlier if conditions improve.

FOUR HURT IN WRECK

Car Turns Over on Road Near Port Arthur Early Sunday

BEAUMONT, Sept. 19. (AP)—Four person were injured, one seriously when an automobile in which they were riding overturned in the West Port Arthur road near Spindletop oil field before 1 o'clock this morning.

They are Miss Thelma Adcock, 19, of Port Arthur, suffering from internal injuries and shock; J. B. Evans, 22, of Beaumont, broken collar bone; Miss Alma Griffith, of Port Arthur, broken collar bone and John Wilson of Beaumont, bruised.

Man Found Dead In Barn at Vernon

VERNON, Sept. 19.—H. V. Chaney, 65, of Corsicana, was found dead early Sunday morning in a barn on the J. T. Bacon place in this city. A coroner's inquest held after body was found returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

Chaney had been in Vernon but a short time and little was known of him. He was identified by papers and cards found in the pockets of his clothing.

A brother, Will Chaney, and a sister, Miss Fannie Chaney of Corsicana were notified and directed that the body be sent to them for burial. It was shipped from Vernon Sunday night.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

There is a law on the statute books of Texas that has never been enforced locally to aid the traffic situation. It ought to be dug out of its coffin and used.

So says Judge John C. Kay—or rather, so he said in his regular weekly address to his Men's Bible class Sunday.

The judge offered a highly pertinent suggestion, and he also had some other common sense observations to make on various phases of law enforcement.

Turn to page 8 and read his address in full.

MAN HURT IN CYCLE CRASH

Dale Mendenhall Injured At Fair Grounds Race Track Sunday

Dale Mendenhall, 3311 Seymour road, was painfully injured about 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon when motorcycle he was tuning up on the race track at the fair grounds got out of control and plunged through a fence. Mendenhall was hurled some distance and sustained a fractured leg and severe cuts and bruises.

An ambulance was called and he was taken to the clinic hospital where an examination revealed that he was not critically hurt. He will be confined to the hospital for some time, however.

Mendenhall is believed to have lost control of his machine when it skidded monmentarily.

General Howse Dies Following Operation

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19. (AP) Major General Robert Lee Howse, commanding officer of the fifth corps area, U. S. A., died here today following an operation yesterday for gall and bladder trouble.

General R. L. Howse, who died Sunday at Columbus, O., was well known in Texas, having commanded the Fort Bliss cavalry forces at El Paso and later a divisional organization at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio. His brother, Dr. Joe Howse, is a prominen physician of Austin, Texas.

Property Loss Estimates Run As High As $125,000,000 In Last News of Stricken Area

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 19. (AP)—Estimates of the loss of life from the hurricane which swept over lower Florida amounted to over one thousand tonight in revised figures from the storm stricken area.

The casualty list in the Miami section, which bore the brunt of the storm was placed at 804 by Jerry S. Owen, general superintendent of the Florida East Coast Railway. He estimated 500 dead in Miami; 250 in Hollywood and 54 in Hialeah, both of the latter places being suburbs of Miami.

Other reports placed the dead in Fort Lauderdale at 100 and in Moore Haven section at 140.

Additional indications of the appalling toll of the storm were given in a message picked up here by an amateur wireless operator from Sheriff Henry Chase, of Dade county, appealing to Governor Martin for help in obtaining six hundred coffins. The message was relayed by telegraph to the governor at Saint Augustine, where he had gone from Tallahassee to expediate the movement of troops and relief to the stricken area.

Estimates of dead, injured and homeless, compiled at 11 o'clock, Central Standard time tonight from latest reports from all sources: Miami, 500 dead; 700-800 injured; 28,000 homeless. Hollywood, 250 dead; 1,000 injured; 10,000 homeless. Moorehaven and Clewiston, 140 dead; 35-40 women and children drowned. Miami Beach, 150 dead. Fort Lauderdale, 100 dead. Hialeah, 54 dead. Dania, 11 dead. Homestead, 3 dead; 1,000 homeless. Coral Gables, 3 dead. Hallendale, 2 dead. Larkins, 1 dead. Ojus, 1 dead.

Miami and vicinity and Fort Lauderdale appear to have borne the brunt of the storm. Water is flowing in the streets of Miami, while practically every place of business was said to have been damaged, no drinking water was immediately available and phones and electric lights were out of commission.

Reports from Miami said stores were closed and restaurants were not serving food on account of lack of water, electricity and gas. In response to urgent appeals, doctors, nurses supplies and water were hurried into Miami from sister cities of Florida.

STORM STARTED ON FRIDAY.

Originating in the Bahamas, the hurricane struck Miami in all its fury Friday night. For nine hours it raged over Miami and Miami Beach, leaving destruction in its path. Desolation also was wrought in Hollywood, 30 miles north of Miami.

Miami Beach was swept by a 120-mile wind and high waves swept over it. During a lull, hundreds of persons ventured forth in an attempt to salvage their household effects, but another storm hurled itself against the city. This later wind raged unabated for two hours and was more intense than the first.

Accounts placed Miami Beach with the greatest number of dead, the estimate there being 150, and 80 more bodies were said to be in Miami, undertakers being unable to care for them. The property damage in these two places was estimated at from $25,000,000 to $100,000,000.

The storm swept on across Fort Lauderdale, north of Miami, wrecking property which so far has not been estimated and leaving a casualty list placed at 100.

DEAD STREWN ROADWAY.

Reports said Moorehaven, 70 miles northwest of Fort Lauderdale, suffered heavily. The dead at Moorehaven and Clewiston was estimated at 140, and one report said bodies were strewn along the road. Another report said that from 35 to 40 white women and children were drowned in the lake region near Moorehaven.

The death toll in Hollywood was placed at 12, 11 at Dania, one at Ojus, one at Hileah, and two at Allandole, all in the vicinity of Miami. Homestead, 40 miles south of Miami had one death.

Property damage at Palm Beach and West Palm Beach was estimated at $1,000,000 with no loss of life.

While the damage at Hollywood was unestimated, those familiar with that city said in the past two years approximately $40,000,000 worth of building and development had been done and property loss must have been great.

Fuel, water and medical supplies were urgently needed in the stricken cities.

Governor John W. Martin ordered several companies and hospital attaches of the national guards in the storm swept sections to aid the civil authorities in preserving

STORM DUE INLAND NEAR PENSECOLA.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. (AP)—The hurricane that devastated the Miami section of Florida will pass inland probably not far from the Pensacola-Mobile section early Monday morning, the weather bureau announced tonight.

The wind had reached a velocity of 52 miles an hour from the northeast and the barometer stood at 29.60, the bureau said.

Hurricane warnings remain displayed from Burrwood to Apalachicola, Florida, and storm warnings between the latter point and Tampa.

STORM Bulletins

SEBRING, Fla., Sept. 19. (AP) Dykes on the south shore of Lake Okechobee have been broken and farms inundated by the wind and rain storm that hit there early Saturday morning and lasted 18 hours, little damage was done to houses but all early winter crops suffered and wire service crippled.

Much apprehension is felt here for Moorehaven and Clewston as the wind came from the northeast and these towns are on the southwest side of the lake.

Four miles of Conners highway at East End is reported covered with water from an overflow of Palm Beach canal, but cars are still able to pass.

Hundreds of snakes have been killed on highways as a result of wild life seeking high ground. One houseboat and one large launch broke their moorings and were washed ashore, but no lives are believed lost.

FORCE OF HURRICANE DEMOLISHES SKYSCRAPER

STUART, Fla., Sept. 19. (AP)—Passengers on an east coast railway train which left Miami at 2:30 o'clock this morning confirmed reports of the mounting death toll and property damage in the area between Miami and Fort Lauderdale.

An American Legion militia company and all the reserve police of Miami are enforcing marital law in the city and in Fort Lauderdale.

Eye witnesses said the Myer-Keyser building, a new skyscraper, was a total loss. The building of the Miami Daily News was a heavy sufferer with much of the front walls blown in.

Many dead have been reported in Fort Lauderdale, Dania and Hollywood.

FORCE OF GALE RIPS SAILS OFF SCHOONER

ANASTACIO ISLAND, Fla., Sept. 19. (AP)—The Schooner Lydia Baxter at New York was anchored in 17 fathoms of water and leaking badly twenty miles from Jupiter this afternoon it was reported to the United States government radio station here.

The small schooner, the second reported sea victim of the hurricane, was said to have had all of its sails ripped off by the heavy winds. Coast guard cutters were requested by the boat which is said to have been anchored.

STORM POINTS NOSE TOWARD LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19. — Falling barometers here and at Mobile, Ala., and Morgan City and Burrwood, La., late today gave evidence of the approach to the Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi gulf coast of the storm that swept over Florida Friday night and Saturday.

Late afternoon readings from Burrwood and Morgan City showed a drop of two points since the 1:30 reading, the pressure being recorded as 29.70 inches at both points. At Mobile the barometer stood at 29.74 and at New Orleans 29.97.

A twenty-six miles an hour wind was blowing at Mobile with a 24-mile blow reported at Burrwood.

JUDGES TO CONFER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. (AP) Chief Justice Taft has summoned the senior federal circuit judges to a conference here on September 27, to discuss the condition of litigation in federal courts throughout the country.

4 PAY SANDS IN NEW AREA

Woodson Territory Northeast Of Breckenridge Has A Good Show

BRECKENRIDGE, Sept. 19.—So far four pay formations have been encountered in the Woodson territory 25 miles northeast of Breckenridge. The first two of these formations are sands, one at 2,800 feet and the second at 3,150 feet. Below this last level the Breckenridge lime, that from which the Red Bank Parrott No. 1 is producing heavily, is encountered at 3,940 feet, while the fourth formation is that picked up at 4,130 feet by the Red Bank's Elliott No. 1 which began flowing at the rate of 10 barrels hourly by heads through a bridge on top of the formation. A heavy gas flow accompanies this flow, shooting the oil at times 50 feet over the derrick top.

The field is attracting considerable interest as the result of this new formation and hopes for a boom which had been dimmed by repeated failures to find the 3,490 pay are again brightened.

In the other extremity of the area, one and three-quarters of a mile east of the Red Bank Parrott No. 1, two new wells have been started down in the vicinity of the Humble Oil and Refining company's Stubblefield No. 1. They are the Humble's Graham No. 1 in section 992, four locations due south of the Stubblefield, and the Reiter-Foster Graham in section 955, three-fourth of a mile to the west of the Humble Graham 1.

The Gulf Production company's Lee Nol, which found heavy gas at 840 feet, was drilled on through the formation into salt water. It is being continued to deeper pay.

World Court Will Honor U.S. Dmands

GENEVA, Sept. 19.(AP)—All right enjoyed by nations holding seats in the council of the league of nations in connection with requests for advisory opinions from the world court of justice will be extended to the United States if that country decides to adhere to the court.

Such was the decision as the committee of 14 of the world court delegate conference which reached an agreement to accept all the American reservations as interpretative of the protocol.

STOCK-A-DAY

DOUGLAS-PECTIN CORP.
5 1-2 Year Record

A merger of the Douglas Packing company and the Pectin Sales company, Inc., resulted in the organization of the Douglas-Pectin corporation in 1925. The company also controls a Canadian subsidiary. It is engaged in the manufacture and sale of "Pectin," "certo" and apple vinegar. "Pectin" and "Certo" differ only in the way they are packed, the former being sold in cases holding two 5 gallon cans for benefit of makers of jams, jellies and marmalades and the latter being sold in bottles for household use. They are pure concentrated fruit products, the jellying principle of fruit and are made mostly from apples.

The company owns and operates plants at Fairport and Canastota, N. Y., Charlemont, Mass., South Royalton, Vt., and Cobourg, Ont.

There is no funded debt, the entire issue of 7 per cent bonds of a subsidiary having been called for payment April 1, 1926, at 105 and interest. Capital stock consists of 300,000 shares outstanding of no par value. Initial quarterly dividends on the stock of the present company were inaugurated in July, 1923, and have been paid regularly at the rate of 25 cents a share a quarter since. An extra dividend of 25 cents a share was paid December 31, 1925.

In 1925 net income was at the rate of $1.52 a share as compared with $1.28 a share in 1924. For the quarter ended March 31, 1926, net sales were $669,751 and net income $135,524. As of that date, current assets totaled $3,063,007 and current liabilities $921,075, leaving net working capital of $2,141,932.

"Keep Thy Shop, And Thy Shop Will Keep Thee!"

Being in the printing and publishing business as he was, Benjamin Kranklin, to whom these words are attributed, must have had some thought about ADVERTISING in his mind when he spoke.

Many local merchants and skilled workers find it a convenient method to "keep their shops" by telling their story through Record News Classified Ads.

At a low cost they reach thousands of readers, and their business forges steadily ahead.

The Classified Ads are ready to serve YOU, too; whether you desire to buy, sell, rent or exchange. Read and use them regularly.

BUILDING PERMITS

Permits For Week Reach Total of $54,900, One By One

Building in Wichita Falls showed a decided gain the past week over the previous week, but is still under the heavy rate maintained throughout the spring and summer. Building permits issued during the week totaled $54,900 which was about $10,000 more than the previous week. As usual residence property represented most of the items there being only three permits issued during the week for business property.

The largest single permit was for the erection of a one-story brick building at 812 Tenth street next to the new Marchman hotel and is being constructed at a cost of $10,000.

The past week's permits runs the total for the year up to $7,614,695, and with expected impulse to building in the fall will run the total for the year near to the ten million mark.

Permits for the week were:

Childress Is Using Gas For School

CHILDRESS, Sept. 19.—Gas is coming into use in Childress, and a cooking school will begin Monday morning, demonstrating cookery with gas. Miss Celia S. Bush and George E. Dunn of Dayton, Ohio, representatives of the Estate Gas Stove company, are presenting the demonstrations.

Materials to be used in the cooking school are obtained from Childress merchants, thus giving access to every woman the same ingredients used by the teachers.

Tuesday will be cake day, it was announced.

SHOOT TO KILL IS ORDER FOR GIRL BANDIT CHIEF

SOFIA.—Bulgarian and Roumanian authorities have joined hands in an effort to destroy a bandit gang which pillages in both countries. This gang, led by Mlle. Eva Maneva, numbers more than 200 members. "Shott to kill," is the order given to both nations gendarmes. The girl bandit is to share the same fate as her companions if she resists arrest. The bandits are armed with rifles, hand grenades and machine guns, so there probably will be desperate fighting if there lair is ever discovered.

THE PETTER

—By— Beatrice Burton
Author of "Love Bound" "Her Man"

Illustrated and Copyrighted by Johnson Features, Inc., 1819 Broadway, New York City

READ THIS FIRST:

MERRY LOCKE, pretty and gay as her name, is a born flirt. She has no ambition beyond having a good time and plenty of beaus. At 20 she falls in her course at business school, because she won't study. Then, when her father dies, she goes into LILLIE DALE'S beauty shop at a tiny salary.

At that time she is having the first real love affair of her life. The man in the case is TONY GAINES, an ambitious young lawyer, who wants to marry her. Their engagement ends when he learns that Merry goes out with other men. He goes to Montana to live, and a year later Merry hears that he is engaged to marry a girl there. She tries not to care.

HELEN, her oldest sister, marries and later dies in childbirth.

Then CASSIE, the second oldest, marries her rich employer, MORLEY KAUFMAN. Merry envies her her soft, easy life, despite the fact that Morley is not true to her. Through Cassie, Merry meets BILL ERSKINE, a wealthy bachelor. She becomes engaged to him, but he keeps putting off the date of their wedding.

MOMS, her mother, takes in two boarders to help make both ends meet. One of them is Lillie Dale and the other is a MR. HEFFLINGER. A year later she marries him.

JINNY, the youngest sister, never forgives Moms for her second marriage. She leaves home and marries DERRICK JONES, who lives next door, and goes to live with his parents.

Bill Erskine goes to Florida to be with his dying father. He promises to marry Merry in the spring, but when spring comes he writes and tells her that he does not think she is the girl for him—that she is too young and flighty for him. Merry knows that he hears about her love affair with LES PURCELL, a married man. She tells Moms about the letter and Moms promptly announces the engagement and writes Bill a letter that she says will make him "sit up and take notice."

Several days pass by. Then Bill writes to say he is coming to town.

One night, after Merry has been out with Derrick and Jinny on a "bat," Cassie comes to the house, all alone, carrying two bags with her. Merry is sure that she has left Morley at last.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LII

In the dimness of the hall Merry saw Cassie put a warning finger to her lips. "Sshh!" she whispered.

She started up the stairs, carrying her heavy bag, and Merry followed with the big hatbox.

Stealthily they crossed the upper hall and tiptoed into Merry's bedroom, whose windows faced the street.

Cassie went to them and pulled down the shades. Then she carefully switched on the lights without making a sound.

In their glow her face was so white that her lips, with their coating of paint, were startling. Merry noticed that she kept biting them with her teeth as she sat down on the edge of the bed. Her eyes were swollen, as if by long hours of crying.

"How do you happen to be awake this hour of the night?" she asked Merry in a whisper.

"Been out with Jinny and her crowd of kindergarteners," Merry whispered back, as she climbed into bed. "What's happened to you, Cassie? Had a fuss with Morley?"

Cassie nodded.

She began to take things from her over-night bag. A linen nightgown so fine that it was like silk. A pair of orchid satin mules. An orchid chiffon bed-jacket. A delicate cloud of perfume arose from them—the jasmine perfume that Cassie paid sixteen dollars a bottle for!

She laid them in a little pile on the counterpane and kicked off her shoes.

"I thought perhaps you'd been out somewhere with Bill Erskine!" she whispered loudly. "I knew he was in town—"

"What?" Merry's whisper was almost a shriek. "Here in this town? Bill?" She sat bolt upright in bed, her eyes wide and starry.

Cassie stared at her in amazement, evidently forgetting her own troubles for a moment.

"Didn't you know he was here?" she asked, pulling off her hat and running her hands over the smooth gold of her hair. "Haven't you seen him."

Blinking, Merry shook her head stupidly.

"That's funny," Cassie answered. "I saw him this noon, having lunch at the Towers Hotel."

"It couldn't have been Bill," her sister answered. "I'm sure that if he were in town he'd call me up the very first thing."

Cassie gave a shrug and a dry little laugh.

"All right, have it your own way," said she, "but I saw him with my own eyes, and he spoke to me."

She got up from the bed and began to undress.

In silence Merry lay back on her pillows and watched her.

Cassie's preparation for the night was long and painstaking.

First of all, she drew her hair back into a net. Then she rubbed cold cream all over her face and neck. Then she took it off with a wad of cotton dipped in a lotion that closed her pores. Then she patted thick, yellow anti-wrinkle cream around her mouth and eyes. And last of all, she bound a linen strap under the slight double chin that was beginning to show.

She was a queer-looking figure as she got into bed beside Merry and stretched up her arm to turn off the light.

As she did it, the sound of a Ford tearing up the street broke the night-time stillness. It turned into the driveway and stopped just behind Cassie's great car, with a shrill scream of the brakes.

"That's Derick and Jinny getting home," Merry whispered.

"But I Saw Him With My Own Eyes, and He Spoke to Me!" Cassie said.

"Listen to them. They're enough to wake the dead!"

They were. They were laughing wildly and talking as loudly as if it were high noon instead of early morning.

"Don't ever tell me you can carry your liquor as it should be carried, Derrick Jones!" Jinny's shrill soprano came floating up to the bedroom where the two sisters lay, side by side. "Why, you can't even walk straight. Come on, lean on me, Grandpa—" Evidently she was helping her lord and master into the house.

A door closed and then the sound of it echoed in the narrow street. After that there was stillness.

"They get along together like a couple of lame ducks, don't they?" Cassie whispered, raising herself on one elbow.

"Yeah," Merry answered. "They haven't any money, and they have to live with Mr. and Mrs. Jones, but they manage to be awfully happy, anyhow."

There was a long silence. Then she spoke again, softly. "Poor kids," she said. "They took me down to the White Peacock Inn tonight and tried to show me a good time. And I was nasty to them. I got peeved because the day nursery they had with them didn't want to dance with me." She smiled bitterly into the darkness.

"Cassie, I'm an old woman as far as the young sheiks are concerned," she added. "I actually felt old tonight with Jinny, and the sixteen-year-olds she races around with! Honestly, I did!"

Cassie was silent and Merry knew she was not listening.

Presently she gave a long, quivering sigh and lay down, her hands interlaced behind her head.

"Merry, you remember Fifi Pell?" she asked in a low tone, and Merry whispered that she did remember her.

For a second a vision of Fifi Pell flashed through her brain, as she had last seen her—wrapped in a scarlet shawl, with her white face raised to Morley Kaufman's face in the darkness of a staircase landing.

"What about her?" she asked.

It took Cassie a minute or two to find her voice. Merry could tell that she was struggling with tears.

"Never mind—I'll tell you in the morning," she managed to say at last, in a strangled voice.

Merry's first waking thought the next morning was of Bill Erskine. He came into her mind before she opened her eyes to the gray drizzle of the spring day.

If he had been in town since yesterday noon why hadn't he called her up? Did his neglect of her mean anything?

Was he still unwilling to marry her? Or had he come up from Florida with the purpose of doing it—of marrying her?

"Oh, jimminy!" thought Merry. I wonder if ever a girl had to scheme and fret and worry over getting married the way I have to? Love seems to be a job, not a joy!"

But was there any love between her and Bill? What was the thing he felt for her? Wasn't it just infatuation? Just the most earthly kind of infatuation?

"And how do I feel about him?" she asked herself.

She knew how she felt about him only too well. She had almost reached the point where she hated him.

She went to the window and pulled up the shades, sweeping back the curtains so that the gray light filled the room.

For a moment she stood by the bed, looking down at the woman who slept there. Cassie's lips drooped, even in her sleep. Her brows were locked in a frown. If ever there was the face of an unhappy woman, it was Cassie Kaufman's face on that April morning.

Down at the foot of the bed her dressing case stood open. The gold and crystal bottles and brushes in it, gleamed in the cold light.

Across the foot of the bed lay the chiffon bed jacket. On the dresser Cassie had flung her glittering rings, her jeweled bracelets, and the short string of real pearls that she had bought for herself on her last birthday.

Merry looked at them, and then back at the discontented, haggard face on the pillow.

"She has everything that money can buy," she said herself. "She has all the things that I want—all the things that money can buy. I wonder if I really want them? I wonder if I want Bill Erskine after all?"

Under her stare Cassie's lashes fluttered and she opened her eyes.

"Hello," she said with a yawn.

Downstairs the telephone rang stridently. A moment afterward Moms' voice called shrilly from below.

"Mer-ree! Mer-ree! You haven't heard anything from Cassie, have you?"

"She's up here. Been here all night with me," she answered. "Why? Who wants to know?"

"Morley. He's on the wire," Moms replied. "She'd better come right down and talk to him—I've got to 'tend to my breakfast! It's burning on the stove."

Silent and sullen, Cassie just sat there. Her narrowed eyes showed a pale icy green between her lashes, as she shook her head.

Things did not move so smoothly in the Locke household and Cassie expresses her opinion of Mr. Heffinger in Chapter LIII tomorrow.

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 19.—Miss Elizabeth Hicks of Vernon, and Miss Mary Dodson of Vernon were pledged by the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority at the close of rush week. Misses Norma Andrews of Electra, Elizabeth Couper, Wilton Wade, Helen Knott, Ruth Moore, Elizabeth Carrigan of Wichita Falls by the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Leslie King, Vernon, and Jane McAllister of Wichita Falls by Zeta Tau Alpha.

Caraway Denies He Saw Insult Phrases On Tombstones

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. (AP)—Senator Caraway of Arkansas, in a cablegram to the Paris post of the American Legion, denied personal knowledge of the reported desecration of the graves of American war in France. The senator who in a pronouncement after a recent trip abroad, said such inscriptions as "to hell with America" had been written on the white crosses that mark the graves, cabled that the "statement made by me rested upon no personal information of mine."

"I was careful to make it plain that I had not been in that part of France," he added.

Senator Caraway quoted David A. Reed of Pennsylvania who is a member of the American battle monuments commision as having told of the desecration of the monuments at a meeting of the senate military affairs committee last spring.

FRANCE ORDERS QUIZ IN DESECRATION CHARGE

PARIS, Sept. 19. (AP)—So great was the feeling caused by publication in the French press of Senator Caraway's charge of the desecration of American war graves in France that the minister of pensions messaged all sectors of the battle front where American soldiers are buried, ordering a rigid inquiry.

The investigation is said to have revealed no basis for the senator's charges. On the contrary, the authorities state it should show that isolated graves in local cemeteries are scrupulously kept up by the French although they are visited by Americans only once a year, on Memorial Day.

BOYS TOLD TO "BE SERIOUS"

Prelate At School Opening Deplores Tendency Of Students to Play

AUSTIN, Sept. 19. (AP)—Declaring that there is today an insideous philosophy of life spreading throughout America and undermining the morales of the people, the Rev. Joseph Burke, C. S. C., president of St. Edwards university, urged his young audience to make good use of the opportunity to gain a proper view of life. The sermon was delivered during the solemn high mass that marked the formal opening of the school year.

The celebrant of the mass was the Rev. Joseph Maguire, vice-president of the university. The Rev. James Quinlan was deacon of Rev. James Quinlan, was deacon of the mass and the Rev. George Holderith, sub deacon. The Rev. George Mcnamara was master of ceremonies. The university choir, under the direction of Charles M. Schenider, sang Bartholomew's mass. Besides the St. Edwards student body, a number of friends of the university were present.

Referring to present conditions Father Burke said, "the commandments are no longer accepted as a rule of conductance. It is thought that these must be modified to conform to changconditions and to so-called intellectual progress. There is a disregard of law, such as would have greatly alarmed the founders of this nation. The right of free speech is used to undermine the government that guarantees the right."

The speaker deplored the love of pleasure and the distaste for serious thought and serious effort that so often marks college students, saying that the university failed in its purpose if it did not obtain serious attention to studies.

BODY TO DUNDEE

The body of Ben Capps, 38, who died Friday night in a local hospital was forwarded Sunday to Dundee for burial by the Merkle Undertaking company.

He is survived by his wife and three children. Mr. Capps was in the garage busines sat Dundee and was well known in that community.

BURIES SON AT DOOR

Back in the Orient—what do they say about TEA—?

Who produces the finest quality?

WHOSE tiny leaves yield the greatest fragrance, the most delicious taste, that delightful piquancy that makes a cup of tea so irresistible?

These questions, women of America, have been answered for you by Oriental experts in this manner:

At the tea expositions held in India and Ceylon, the tea empires of the world, first prizes and gold medals have been awarded to—LIPTON'S TEAS!

And the reason for their supremacy is that Sir Thomas Lipton grows, cultivates, blends and packs his own tea. In other words, controls its peerless quality from tea bush to tea pot.

Hence, for the best tea —buy Lipton's.

COLORADO AND THE KLAN

COLORADO for four years has been a stronghold of the klan of the invisible empire workers who had captured control of the machinery ot fhe republican party and the offices. Clarence Hamlin of Colorado Springs is the republican national committeeman. For two years he had waged a merciless warfare upon the invisible empire organization. Senator Lawrence J. Phipps and Senator Rice Means are the klan leaders.

Hamlin organized the anti-klan republicans of the state and named Charles W. Waterman for the senatorship against Means and former Governor Oliver H. Shoup against the klan candidate. John F. Vivian who was backed by the two senators. Vivian is the federal prohibition administrator for Colorado, Utah and New Mexico. He had the backing of the drys. If the newspaper writers of Colorado have been telling the truth, the battle for control of the republican party and its machinery and major offices, was the most spectacular and perhaps the most scriminous staged in Colorado since free silver days.

Waterman, the Hamlin candidate for senator, was convention manager for President Coolidge in Colorado two years ago. Shoup, the Hamlin candidate for governor, served four years in that office and retired four years ago when the klan first obtained a foothold in Colorado and captured the republican organization. Now that the returns from the primary election are in, National Committeeman Hamlin remains the undisputed leader of his party in the centennial state. Waterman defeated Means for the senate by a very decisive majority, and Shoup is the republican nominee for governor.

Hamlin put over his ticket. He won the battle which he had waged for two years. He retired Means from the senate. He sent Vivian back to his pro enforcement law duty. He captured the state machinery of the republican party. Coolidge and his world court proposal did not lose. Waterman, the senatorial nominee, is a Coolidge republican; Shoup the nominee for governor is a Coolidge republican. Really the world court appears to be popular in the west.

Wesley Jones, a world court supporter, was renominated by the republicans of Washington. Samuel Shortridge, a world court supporter, was renominated by the republicans of California. Tasker Oddie, a world court supporter was nominated by the republicans of Nevada.

National Committeeman Hamlin of Colorado is a world court supporter and friendly to the Coolidge administration. Politics is a fascinating game. Clarence Hamlin, newspaper publisher and a man of wealth, is said to play the game to the limit. Now he is sitting on the top of the California world.

MAIN DID NOT GO HELL BENT

MAINE did not go hell bent this year for the republicans. There was a falling off in the total vote of 67,000 as compared with two years ago and the republican majority is 17,000 less than it was two years ago. Republicans re-elected Ralph Brewster governor. They re-elected all four congressmen. They defeated an amendment to the constitution which prohibited legislative appropriation of money for private schools.

Four years ago Brewster was a state senator. He had a hobby. He insisted that publci money should not be appropriated for the support of private schools. He was made governor on the issue two years ago. His legislators submitted the amendment to the people. He championed the adoption of the amendment and he advocated his own election as governor.

He won by 25,000 majority in his own race and if the returns are correct as carried by newspaper gathering agencies the amendment went down in defeat by a majority of 12,000. A queer situation to say the least. The voters of Maine re-elected the man and rejected his hobby.

ANOTHER SMITH WENT OVER

SSENATOR ELLISON R. SMITH of South Carolina voted for the world court proposal. Brown of South Carolina did not like it. They held a primary and Smith lead. Brown was the runnerup and dial was tossed out of the game. A run-off followed. It was a red hot affair. Smith nosed out by a few thousand majority leaving Brown to hold the bag.

George of Georgia and Smith of Carolina were marked for defeat because they voted for the world court. They were not defeated. George won by a heavy vote. Smith by a small majority. Smith is a farmer. No, not a farmer; a planter. He is for peace for the world and peace at home. If there is any way to prevent wars, he is for their prevention.

Why not?

HOW MICHIGAN VOTED

MICHIGAN has been a republican Gibraltar. Alexander J. Groesbeck has been its governor four years. He aspired to a third term. State Senator Fred A. Green, a big furniture manufacturer, did not like Groesbeck or his policies. He mad ethe race as a candidate. Behind Green was Mayor John Smith of Detroit.

Mayor John Smith has served in the state senate. He had served as posmaster of Detroit. He is less than 40. He began life as a newsboy. He was Roosevelt progressive in Bull Moose days. He was elected mayor of Detroit not many months ago and the klan leaders did all in their power to take his scalp.

They did not get the Smith scalp. Just before election day Henry Ford advised the voters of Detroit to elect John Smith mayor. They elected him mayor. John Smith, as has been stated, backed Green. Green was nominated at the primary election by a majority of 130,000. There was a time when the rural district of Michigan dominated the politics of the state.

Now Detroit and the lesser cities are becoming all powerful on election day. John Smith, mayor of Detroit, hopes to be governor some day. If Henry Ford lives to back him, John may go over. He put Groesbeck out of the running and Groesbeck was the man who appointed James Couzens, a former partner of Henry Ford, to a seat in the senate of the United States, when a vacancy occurred.

Couzens is the man who has made life interesting to Andrew W. Mellon. He served the appointed term and then people of Michigan gave him a full term of six years on a platform, personal so to speak, of light wines and beer.

CAUTIONED AND ADVISED

IT IS just as well that all those who may plan to work or to employ workers in the republic of Salvador pause to realize the new conditions recently imposed in that little land. The legislative assembly of the Central American state, according to advices received and made public by our own federal government, has issued a decree that at least 80 per cent of all persons employed by domestic or foreign companies engaged in agricultural, industrial or commercial pursuits in Salvador shall be Salvadoreans. Failure to comply with this law will subject the employer or employing concern to a fine from 2 to 10 per cent of the year's profits, the fine to be given to the most charitable organization in the locality. This ought to come pretty near making jobs safe for native sons. The plan is not new, an almost identical law being passed in Rumania two years ago, but is one that will be wise for the gringo to keep in mind before accepting employment, or giving employment, in any Salvadorean enterprise.

BROUSARD OF LOUISIANA

LOUISIANA democrats renominated Edwin S. Broussard over former Governor Jared Y. Sanders by a maqority of 3,000 votes in the recent primary election. Broussard is a wet; Sanders is a dry, but the wet and the dry issue had very little to do with the election.

Mayor Arthur O'Keefe of New Orleans is the head of the democratic organization known as the regulars. Mayor O'Keefe did not like Broussard; he did not like Sanders. And the religious issue had nothing to do with it. Broussard and O'Keefe are members of the same denomination. Sanders isn't, but he is a very vigorous opponent of what is known as the invisible empire.

New Orleans is wet and the mayor of New Orleans and his regulars threw all the votes they could muster to the dry candidate for United States senator, not because he is a dry, but because they declared Broussard should be put out of the running and sent back to his law-office and sugar plantation.

All the democratic congressmen were nominated. They had the backing of the regulars in the city of New Orleans district, and upstate they had the backing of their own district machines. Broussard is for a tariff on sugar. Broussard is the champion of huge appropriations for gulf and inland waterways. For years and years he has been a power in the democratic politics of Louisiana. He had a close call this time. Mayor O'Keefe and his regulars played havoc with his fences.

Texas democrats who attended the Madison Square Garden convenion should be able to recall O'Keefe, a very quiet man, a very modest man but a man all powerful in the politics of Louisiana and very close to the delegates who were sent to the Madison Square Garden by the democrats of the Pelican state.

A miss is said to be as good as a mile. Broussard will remain in the senate to protect his native state. He is for Louisiana first, not a bod slogan.

'Spunky' Edwards' Wonderful Chemical Discovery——

The Infernal Machine

By F. Britten Austin.

The gale grew worse as the day wore on. Even Jake Bhovinsky, immured in his steel cell far below decks, could tell that its violence increased from hour to hour. The loose fittings of the cabin jangled and rang in the staggering impact of the ship into the great waves which smote her at brief and almost regular intervals. The steaming glass disc of the port rose disturbingly towards a zenith which flooded the confined space with a cold grey light, and fell back again through a long arc to souse itself in green waters and a temporary gloom. Though he could see nothing, the panic-gripped wretch crouched upon his bunk could imagine the totality of the scene—the great liner wallowing in the enormous rollers which ran upon her in an endless succession of lifting, moving ridges diagonally to her bows, the beaten smoke-still in uninterrupted emergence from her funnels—mingling with the spume and spindrift flying over her upper works.

At every few moments a vicious intensification of the whirring vibration of her turbines was eloquent of propellers lifted clear of the seas and racing in furious and futile energy. Then, with a thudding crash, that shook every atom of her structure, her bows lifted again to get another wave on which the propellers, once more immersed, drove her fiercely forward.

Hour after hour crept by in alternate illuminations and sousings of the porthole, in disconcertingly sudden drops that lifted the stomach in their apparent bottomlessness, in a never-ending succession of savage crashes and violent blows that checked for the instant the mighty momentum of that enormous mass of steel, driven onwards and yet onwards by its own unconquerable power. And still the whirring vibration of the machinery that was the heart of her continued, continued until once more it became the dominant perception of his overwrought brain, continued through minute after minute, hour after hour, where to him each instant menaced awful cessation.

Once more, to his horror, he found his brain identifying itself with those rapid revolutions. Once more the machine in his head began to whirr, beyond his control, presenting vividly to his mental vision these terrifying pictures of disaster—the upgush of flame, the eviscerated ship plunging into the depths. And now to these pictures was added another, suggested by his experience of the morning—the wind—torn seascape of white foam creaming upon the heads of an infinity of waves leaden—grey under a sullen sky. No boat could live, be launched even, in such a sea. He visualised, nevertheless, involuntarily, the ugly, panic-stricken rush for the davits—and then remembered, with a sickened shudder, that down here he was debarred even from participation in that hopeless fight for life, had not even that slender chance.

The pictures repeated themselves, over and over again, to the accompaniment of the whirring turbines. He felt himself going crazed, tortured into madness, under their diabolical insistence. If only he could shut them off, stop that infernal whirring cinema machine in his head!

Food came to him midway through that endless, timeless day, was pushed into the cabin as to a kennelled dog by a callous steward who slammed the door upon him, and would not wait for the cry he was so long in bringing to utterance. He had had a vague idea of calling for a doctor—anything to stop this maddening visualisation of the impending terror, to stop that infernal machine whirring, whirring, whirring relentlessly in his tortured brain. He tried to eat for a distraction. Faint though he was, the food sickened him. He pushed it away untouched.

Night came. The port that lifted itself in its long, slow rise above the waves ceased to be a disc of light; it rose and fell in an equal gloom, water leaking in through its brass circumference. The cabin was illuminated only by a diffused radiance entering by the narrow slit above the door from a source somewhere along the corridor.

Still his brain remained terror-riveted upon the one theme, a furiously-whirring machine out of control—he found himself still staring, against his will, at a funnel whose rolling, heavy smoke suddenly shot upwards upon a sheet of red flame, a geyser of flying cinders. . . .

The hours passed in the half-light of his steel cell, far down in the depths of the great ship that crashed and thudded tirelessly into the buffeting seas. The dishes slid, overturned, upon the floor as she pitched and wallowed and shivered in the ever-renewed collision of blindly meeting forces. Still the feverish whirring vibration of the turbines continued undiminished, permeating every atom of her structure as it did every fibre of his body, blurred ever and anon by the heavier vibration of propellers racing free in the instant or two before their automatic check came into play, stunned into abeyance every minute or so by the smashing impact of yet another great wave that swept down her length in a swish and scatter of flying water.

Up above there—the scene came vividly to him—behind the oil-skinned watch upon her bridge, the great funnels were still belching black smoke into the blackness of the night. Under them—he thrilled with fanatic hatred—damnably, confident passengers in their evening finery were seated at flower-decked tables in gilded saloons. Under them again, far, far below, the firemen were shovelling, shovelling, naked to the waists in the eye-scorching hell of the open furnace doors. From the bunkers the coal was tumbling down to them in an avalanche of black chunks, all indistinguishably like each other.

His hyper-excited mental activity began to find new channels for itself. He found himself speculating—unable to stop speculating, a new form of torment reeled out by that ceaselessly whirring machine in his head—on the nature of the explosion when it should occur. Would he hear it in this part of the ship? He remembered, in newspaper accounts of torpedoings during the war, the statements of passengers in big liners who had heard nothing, felt only a slight shock, when the ship's side was blown in. That diabolical little German-Jew's infernal machine would explode deep down in the very center of the vessel—"blow de belly out of her"—the forecast rang in his ears. What sound would come to him here? A mighty roar, rending her vitals, flinging everyone prostrate, or . . ?

Questions from the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

"EVERYTHING THAT MAKES MAN INDEPENDENT OF WOMAN REDUCES HER CHANCES OF MARRIAGE," WARNS DOROTHY DIX.

Whatever else women are, their worst enemy cannot accuse them of being long-sighted. They never look any further ahead than their noses, and then, when they are hoisted with their own petards, they are surprised.

A sad but pertinent example of this afforded by the fact that women have been the main instruments in establishing industrial schools in which boys are taught to sew, and only a few days ago an exhibition was held in which the star feature was a lot of needlework done by youths.

There were piles and piles of dainty little garments, which were cut and basted and sewed by masculine fingers and women not only beheld with equanimity this melancholy spectacle of their waning sovereignty, but had actually instigated the crime!

Of course, any one who has ever listened to a man trying to sew on a button, and witnessed his sufferings as he attempted to draw one end of a needle through a bit of cloth with his teeth, while he pressed the other end of the needle against the wall, has realized his need of expert teaching on the subjects, but his very helplessness is foman's opportunity.

It is man's inability to cope with servants and landladies and holes in his socks that finally drives him into matrimony. With every man his own cook and seamstress, the marriage registrar could shut up shop and go out of business.

It is the young man out west, or in some frontier place, who has to eat his own sinkers and doughnuts and pin his clothes together with a horseshoe nail, who is so enamored of feminity that he is willing to marry anything in petticoats that comes down the pike. The gilded youth whose club chef is an artist and whose calet knows his business has no need to marry for a home, and he is likely to remain single until late in life.

Everything that makes man independent of woman reduces woman's chances of marriage, and how these women who are teaching boys to sew will answer to the husbandless girls of the next generation is a question we must leave with their consciences to settle.

To offset the boy who does tatting, and who spends his evening studying out in the "Ladies Own" how to "drop two, purl one and skip three," we have the strenous young woman who is being taught how to do carpentry, and who is warrented to be able to drive a tack in the wall without mashing her thumb and spoiling a square yard of wallpaper.

Theoretically, this criss-cross system of education may have much to recommend it.

No one can deny that men would be better employed spending their time knitting little Johnny socks or working a set of Battenburg dollies for a birthday present for their wives than in sitting about smoking and swapping race stories.

It would also be money in a man's pocket if his wife, when she is smitten with a mania for making an empire chair out of a cheesebox, could do the work herself instead of calling in a $10 a day carpenter to do it, but there is another and a practical side to the question that bodes no good for domestic happiness.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

The Toast.

We gathered 'round with merry sound,
For many a friend was there,
And many a toast we gave the host,
And many a lady fair.
To every friend with gold to spend
We drank a cup of praise,
And with a tear to friends not here,
To friends of other days.
"And now, old man," they cried to Dan,
Who next the toast shall be?"
And Dan arose and said, "Suppose
We drink a toast to me?"

"So here's to me, where'er I be,
Wherever I may go,
A friend of mine, a friend as fine
As any I shall know.
If poor or rich, no matter which,
With heavy-laden shelf
Or empty dish, I have a wish
I want to wish myself.
I've drunk your toast to friend and host,
To ladies fair to see,
I've drunk to kings and flags and things—
Now here's a toast to me!"

And then the crowd laughed long and loud,
And some were hot with ire.
He stood his ground and looked around,
His eyes were eyes afire.
"May I," he cried, "keep clean inside,
As clean as clothes I wear,
Toast not one lass but all who pass,
And leave them all as fair.
I know the right—God give me light
And strength the right to do,
For he loves best, loves most the rest,
Who to himself is true."

And then the throng cheered loud and long,
And every man arose
And filled his glass to every lass,
Whatever land she knows,
And there were tears as well as cheers,
Hands sought for hands to grip,
And like a flame to fellows came
A closer fellowship.
And then somehow, united now,
Forgotten place ad pelf,
Each lifted up the gleaming cup
And drank to him himself.

1. What is cream made up of?
2. Why does cream rise?
3. Why does cream sour faster than milk?
4. What is the advantage of cream over milk as food?
5. What is the advantage of milk over cream as a food?
6. What other animals beside cows are domesticated for their milk?

Answers to these questions in tomorrow's Record News.

Putting Microbes into Milk.

We have all been taught the dangers that arise if we allaw bacteria to get into our milk; we shudder to think of the dread diseases carried by microbe-infested milk and shun the pitcher after a fly has fallen into it. But it is the business of some wise men to raise bacteria for the express purpose of putting them into perfectly pure milk. These, however, are friendly bacteria, very helpful in forming cream. Different sorts differ in their effects on the cream, which is why cream varies so much. Bacteria for cream making can be sent to the farmer from their factories by mail.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to yesterday's questions: 1. The sun is one millions times larger than the earth. 2. The sun is believed to be cooling off, but no difference in its heat has been observed in the history of science, so slow is the change. 3. The sun rotates on its axis. 4. The sun has no orbit. 5. The sun is moving very rapidly toward the sun called Vega; this is in general a direction which on the earth would be called north. 6. The noture of sun spots is not precisely understood; they appear like storms within the raging fire of the sun's surface.

ONE OF THE MARVELS OF SCIENCE

On a hotel porch at a summer resort a visitor approached, in the dark, the spot where a beautiful young thing with bobbed hair and melting baby-blue eyes was sitting with an adoring youth.

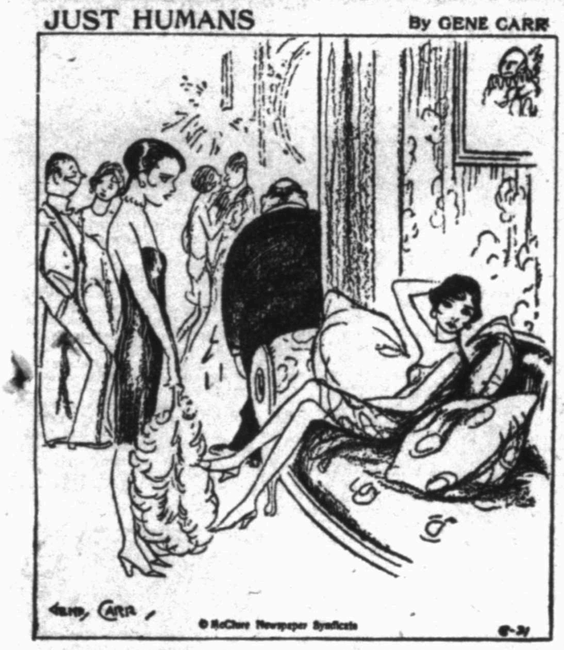

As he neared the pair the newcomer heard her say: "Aren't the stars just beautiful tonight? I love to sit and look at the stars on a night like this and think about science. Science is so interesting so wonderful; don't you think so? Now you take astronomy: Astronomers are such marvelous men! I can understand how they have been able to figure out the distance to the moon and to all the other planets, and the size of the sun, and how fast it travels and all. But how in the world do you suppose they ever found out the right names of all those stars?"

McCallum Arranges Big Slate For Coyotes Prior To Regular League Play

High School Youngsters Invade Lawton Friday Then Tackle Cameron Aggies Next Week

Bub McCallum has planned a thorough preparatory course for his Pack that should certainly give much opportunity to knock out some of the greenness in the relatively young and inexperienced squad. Mac is far from satisfied with the performance Saturday, when the Coyotes beat Walters, 19 to 0, even though it looked good to the spectators, and is determined to assign plenty of work. The line especially is going to get plenty of attention this week, said the coach Sunday night.

Next Friday the Coyotes go to Lawton, for a game. The following Friday Cameron Agricultural college, antoher tough one for the high school lads, will come here. The Saturday following Decatur Baptist College will be called on to give the Pack another good working out. The last date before the league schedule opens is still unfilled.

October 23 league activities begin when the ancient and honorable foe from Electra will defend the home lair against the invasion of the Pack. October 30 finds the Coyotes in their second league contest at Quanah. Vernon will be the final assignment in this district division, to be played on November 6 at a place to be decided later.

McCallum announces that a big event had been scheduled for the boys Thanksgiving when the Pack journeys to Oklahoma City to play the Classen High school of that city. The out-of-town date was arranged as the Junior College plays here this year.

FAREWELL HORNSBY

The people's choice stands in a sweet way of catching it in the nape before the rest of the race is run. John's noble Giants knocked over the favorites yesterday while Hendricks' proteges observed the Sabbath.

* * * *

Rajah and his tribe lay off this p. m. giving the Reds a chance to overtake 'em while they loaf. Cincy engages the, of late weeks, boisterous Braves in a double header. Just a game behind, they may catch up today.

* * * *

Cards probably go into the discard before the week's out. Brooklyn's on the bill Tuesday and Wednesday. More tough sledding with the Giants Thursday, trouble again Saturday with the same adversary and the windup Sunday in what may be the pennant-decider at Cincinnati.

* * * *

The outlay looms as an exceedingly bumpy one for the nation's hopes whereas Cincy has a comparatively smooth voyage ahead, judging by past performances of the teams that will be encountered. The Reds are at Boston again tomorrow and at Philadelpjhia, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

* * * *

So, under the conditions, if the combination of Donohue, Rixey, Luque, Mays, Lucas and May can't overcome that one-game lead by the week-end there's something abundantly wet again in Sweden.

* * * *

The eminent Mr. Boone remarks that acquisition of Brainard brought Dallas the pennant.

* * * *

However, the departure of Brainard is NOT the reason Wichita Falls failed to cop the bunting.

* * * *

Brainard is in luck, at that. His cut of the Dixie series velvet no doubt will exceed very much the difference between the salary of a Dallas center fielder and a Spudder and a Spudder manager for a matter of two months or so.

* * * *

In speaking of comparative strength of the series competitors, the venerable Boone avers Dallas has but three "money players," meaning athletes who can stand the strain of an important series and deliver in the clinches. He lists these as Hap Morse, Rhino Williams and formerly out Mr. Brainard.

* * * *

The question remains, how many "money players" has New Orleans. Posibly several more than three.

* * * *

Now that it's settled as to who is going to capture the Dixie series let us to something else, for instance—

* * * *

WHY IS A THRILL?

The world's heavy weight championship biff contest Thursday night. It's coincidental that the coy little Al Mantell, commonly known as just Dutch, fraternizes fistically and otherwise with the turbulent Yaqui Jose, Mexico's enemy and a source of much irritation to Germany, on this same Thursday evening.

* * * *

In the Battle of the Sesqui there are millions at stake, also the highest honor in pugulistdom. In the Battle fo Eleventh and Ohio there is nothing at stake, merely the incentive of a grudge one Dutchman has for an Indian and one Indian has for a Dutchman.

* * * *

Thousands will attend the boxing match, the fight of champion. A few hundred will attend the "wrestling" match. Yet, lay aside for a monment the importance of one bout and the lack of importance of the other, and slowly but positively you'll see one of life's most peculiar quirks. That match between Yaqui Joe and Dutch Mantell no doubt as far as dynamic action fierce, primeval fighting, bitter and dogged battling is concerned will eclipse the world's heavyweight championship embroglio at Philadelphia the same hour. Yet the thousands who witness the battle of the behemoths probably will go away proud they saw the championship fight, pleased with what they saw and prepared to talk for years to come about that "memorable" mill between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney. Of the mere handful by comparison who will see the Joe-Mantell affair, some will be pleased, others displeased and all will forget in a few days.

* * * *

So after all, it's not the quality of the entertainment in the sporting world, not the bustle and go of the action, but the import, the size of teh stakes that creates the demand. There are many prize fights better than a championship event. There are many football games better than a championship game. And there are many series better than a world's series or Dixie series. But your great American fan wants his thrill and he cannot get it no matter how great the action unless the stakes are heavy, unless a fight, a football, a baseball or mayhaps a croquet CHAMPIONSHIP is at stake.

* * * *

A world series between a couple of class D teams would draw just as heavy were it possible to be given the same amount of preseries ballyhoo and had a St. Louis, a Cincinnati or a New York behind it.

TIGERS SHADE SENS

DETROIT, Sept. 19. (AP)—Pinch hitters decided today's Washington-Detroit game in favor of Detroit, 8 to 7, the Tigers overcoming a one-run lead in the ninth when Neun and Cobb hit safely in pinch roles for Collins and Fothergill, respectively. Neun opened with a double, Neun scoring with the tying run. Manush crossed the plate with the deciding score when McNeely let Cobb's drive get through him.

BUCS ROUT ROBINS

BROOKLYN, Sept. 19. (AP)—After losing three straight to the Robins, Pittsburgh turned about today and defeated Brooklyn, 7 to 4 in the final meeting between the clubs this year. Ray Kremer hurled effectively and in winning hung up his 19th victory of the season.

Walter Mueller was the batting star of the day with five singles in six times at bat. He also nipped seven flies in left field. Paul drove out three safeties, one a triple.

Pittsburgh won 13 of 22 games played between the two teams this season.

Boxers Have Beaten Fighters In Heavy Title Tilts—By Hughes

Do you consider Gene Tunney as clever a boxer, as keen a ring general as Dempsey is menacing as a fighter type? Most people don't. However, if you do, then on past performances in the heavyweight championship clashes between these two distinct types of ringmen give Tunney something of an edge. The boxer type has three times vanished the fighter in these regal jousts of gloveland. Twice the fighter has crumpled his headier, though less rugged foeman. All this is pertinent only to the extent to which you may appraise Tunney as a boxer. At any rate, compared to the champion, the challenger is considerably more of a boxer than he is a fighter.

Tunney hasn't a quarter of Jack Dempsey's cyclonic aggressiveness. Gen eis a cautious, calculating, fisticuffer, generally. He prefers to let the other fellow do the forcing and the leading, the while he feints, spars and prepares for the explosion of gloves. Tunney is quick with his counters, nevertheless, and if the lead calls for a rapid-fire exchange he tunes in with his hits generously enough. However, he is far removed from the aggressiveness as that quality is defined by Dempsey. Compared to Dempsey, Tunney's "killer instinct," the paramount earmark of the fighter type is of the negative sort. He punishes his man, wears him down gradually without taking what he regards as unnecessary chances.

Carpentier, figuratively speaking, died of old age before Gene stepped in and punished him over. That was a typical Tunney battle, quite unlike the lightning finishes that have characterized most of Dempsey's encounters. Also Tunney hasn't anything like the crushing power that is encased in the fearsome mitts of Dempsey, the super-fighter. Dempsey is undoubtedly an extra-ordinary fighting type. Tunney is the boxer, nothing marvelous, but reasonably efficient for all that, in the opinion of this scribe.

Corbett Greatest Boxer

The first modern boxer type to whip a redoubtable fighting type like Dempsey possessed skill far beyon that of a dozen Tunney's. Had Tunney a half of Jim Corbett's wizardry the day the latter beat John L. Sullivan this boxer-fighter "dope" might have prophesied victory for the ex-marine. Corbett's all-around ring science has never been equalled, or even approached by any heavyweight since his time. However, in whipping an unusual fighting type, as represented by Sullivan, some credit must be sliced from the feat. John L. had deteriorated, physically, to something akin to a shadow of his old vigorous self of the Ryan, Mitchell and Kilrain days.

Nevertheless, skill prevailed over brute force, sledgehammer hitting quality and untamed aggressiveness when John L. collapsed in the damp sand before Corbett at New Orleans. The fighter wasn't "in it" at any time during the twenty and a half rounds consumed by the master boxer in cutting down his man.

The fighter type, however, was very much in the picture in the next tussle which witnessed the crowning of a new heavyweight champion. This time the combat produced a fighter and a boxer, both at the zenith of their prowess. Fitzsimmons was the fighter, Corbett the boxer. The battle terminated in the fourteenth round, after the boxer had relinduished an early lead to fight on about even terms until the fighter put over his finisher. It was the greatest victory ever registered by a fighter, a man who put punching power before skill, unpolished but wondrously effective cunning before deft glove play.

Fighter met fighter when Fitzsimmons caved in before the heavy onslaught of giant Jim Jeffries. Jeffries later learned to box a bit and to speed up his footwork but esesntially he was a fighter type, and a most convincing specimen.

Jack Johnson, next heir to the fistic throne, was a singularly brilliant boxer. In establishing his right to the crown the clever black polished off two fighters, Tommy Burns and Jeffries. Johnson, like Tunney, was a punishing hitter, but he rarely indulged in quick knockouts. He stalked his prey, out-guessed him, outpunched him, finally reducing him to a state where any fairly healthy smach would conclude the battle.

Johnson Took Few Risks

Again, Johnson, like Tuneny, was careful, wary, almost to a fault. He ran no risks, realizing that constant dropping of water wears the stone. He stalled along for fourtene rounds before hacking down little Tommy Burns. The latter, in fact, was almost out in the second round when Johnson dropped the champion with a jarring right uppercut. Jeffries was fit for the fistic undertaker after a half dozen rounds had been waged at Reno. Johnson was satisfied to end it in the fifteenth round, when old Jeff crumpled up from sheer exhaustion as much as anything. The combination of boxing and fighting qualities is a rare thing in the ring. And the talented boxer is generally an individual of Job-like patience, as the records will testify.

Jess Willard attained to some degree of boxing skill, but largely it was his huge bulk and stiff punching that made him a champion. Willard, the fighter, finally wore down Johnson, the master boxer, and knocked him out in the twenty-sixth round.

When Dempsey and Willard met it was another case of two fighters going at it, with Willard more of a boxer than the challenger. The fighter, Dempsey, had the upper hand all the way over the boxer-fighter, Willard.

Great ringsters, as this writer once proved, have usually been beaten by ring specimens of their own breed. A rough and ready scrapper with a knockout wallop is more likely to beat Dempsey than a clever boxer. Firpo almost did it. Carpentier made a showing in the second round at Jersey City.

If Dempsey is half his old self, Tunney will more than likely be forced to fight Dempsey in the champion's own fashion. That is, likely to prove fatal to the challenger's chances. Tunney doesn't appear to be sufficiently gifted as a boxer to subordinate Dempsey's ability as a fighting man.

McGraw Clan Edges Out On Cards By 6-5 Score

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. (AP)—The New York Giants reduced the lead of the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League to a full game today by winnnig the opener of a series by a 6 to 5 score before more than 40,000 fans. Many of the spectators rooted for the Cardinals.

It was the third straight game that the Giants have taken from the Western contenders by a single run margain. McQuillan hurled a steady contest for New York with the exception of the fifth inning when St. Louis bunched five of its 12 hits for three runs. Haines started for the visitors but was ineffective and his successor, Sherbel, yielded what finally proved to be the deciding run. St. Louis started off with two runs in the second inning. L. Bell singled and advanced to third on Hafey's double and came home on an infield safety by O'Farrell, on Thevenow's grounder to Lindstrom. The latter hit Hafey with the ball and the runner scorer. O'Farrell reached third and Thevenow second, but McQuillan fanned Haines and retired Douthit on a foul to Kelly.

New York came right back with three in its half. Kelly opened with a single and was forced by Terry. Tyson bunted safely and Jackson's double scored Terry. McMullen fanned but McQuillan hit a long single to left, scoring Tyson and Jackson.

The Giants added two more runs in the fourth.

The Cardinals tied the score by bunching fit hits for three runs in the fifth. With out one, Douthit hit an infield single and advanced to third on base blow by Southworth. Hornsby doubled scoring Douthit and singles by Bottomley and L. Bell sent home Southworth and Hornsby.

New York took the lead in the sixth on singles by Frisch, Kelly and Tyson and a pass to Jackson.

In the eighth Muller, traded by the Cardinals to New York in the Southworth deal threw out St. Louis' tieing run at the plate.

St. Louis had another chance to tie in the ninth. With one out Hornsby walked. L. Bell fouled to McMullen, and Bottomley's single put Hornsby on third. Hafey, who made two doubles previously fanned.

As the Reds were idle today, they gained half a game on the Cardinals.

YANKEES TURN ON CLEVELAND

Bam Socks 43rd Home Run In 8-3 Victory Over Levsen

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19. (AP)—After losing four straight games to Cleveland New York rallied today and defeated the Indians, 8 to 3, the Yankees increasing their lead in the American League race to 3½ games. The victory was the result of the batting of first Baseman Gehrig who made three doubles and a home run, driving in four runs and scoring one. Ruth made two hits, one a home run inside the park, his 43 of the season.

Levsen who defeated the Yankees Thursday, 2 to 1, tried to come back but was batted hard throughout.

BROWNS BIFF MACKS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19. (AP)—The Browns came from behind to win from the Philadelphia Athletics today, 5 to 4, in 10 innings. Robertson brought in the winning run when he doubled, advancing to third on Gerber's sacrifice and went home after Williams filed out.

Gulf Production Beats All Stars

C. M. Bowwow Barker, hurling for Gulf Production company, won a decision over Dick Morgan and the Burk All-Stars Sunday at Burkburnett, 8 to 5, although the All-Stars got 13 hits to nine.

Both clubs fielded sensationally with Tony DeFate and Pete Turgeon performing snappily for the All-Stars.

McElreath, Gulf left fielder, jerked off the fielding sensation of the game in the seventh inning when he made a leaping stab with his back to the grandstand of a drive by DeFate. It had looked like a home run.

Both DeFate and Turgeon got a couple of hits.

STEERS LEAVE FOR LOUISIANA GAMES TODAY

Texas Detachment Confident Of Victory in Dixie Series

DALLAS, Sept. 19. (AP)—The Dallas Steers closed their six-game exhibition with Longview, class D champions of Texas, this afternoon and made ready to defend the five-year supremacy of the Texas league in the Dixie series, which opens in New Orleans on Wednesday.

The New Orleans Pelicans, champions of the Southern Association, ended the season Sunday with a double victory over Mobile and await with eagerness their second Dixie series since the southern baseball classic was officially inaugurated in 1921.

The two contenders clash in New Orleans Wednesday and Thursday lay off Friday and reopen the series with three games in Dallas Saturday, Sunday and Monday. If a sixth game is necessary it will be played in the Crescent city Wednesday. Should a seventh contest be necessary, a toss of the coin will determine where it will be played.

After Sunday's game with Longview, Manager Snipe Conley announced that the Steers would leave for New Orleans Monday evening, giving the team a day of rest before the first game.

More than 2500 Dallas fans will leave by five or more special trains Tuesday night, arriving in New Orleans Wednesday morning for the two games there.

Love vs. Mastina.

Edward (Slim) Love, who won 21 games for the Steers this season will pitch the first game of the series for Dallas. Love is a left-hander and won the strike out honors in the Texas league this season by whiffing 216 batters.

It is expected that Smokey Joe Martina, former Texas league star hurler with Beaumont will oppose Love in the opening clash.

Martina is a fast ball hurler and the Steers have shown that they are exceedingly weak against this type of pitching all season.

Both teams are given until Wednesday morning before presenting a list of 16 players that will participate in the series. Ray Gardner, shortstop for the Pelicans, has been out of the game with an injured ankle and officials of the club asked that the time be extended to Wednesday.

Manager Conley has announced the following 16 players will represent Dallas: Catchers: Hungling and Billings; pitchers, Love, Pence, Hunter, Riviere and Shuman; first base, Riley; second base, Morse; shortstop, Gross; third base, Tate; left field, Woeber; center field, Braniard; right field, Miller; utility infielder, Bauman; utility outfielder, Williams.

Hunter Hill and Henry Fanning of the Texas league and Bill Brennan and Vick Campbell of the Southern Association will umpire the series.

Dan at Opener.

Dan Moody, gubernatorial nominee and Mrs. Moody will witness the first clash in Dallas Saturday. Mr. Moody will throw the first ball of the game.

Dallas officials are preparing to accommodate 25,000 people for the Sunday game. The present record for a Dixie series game is 17,000, made in the fourth game of the Atlanta-Fort Worth series in 1925.

Betting on the series is reported as even in New Orleans while Dallas fans are wagering heavily on the Steers to win at even money. This is the first time in the history of the Dixie series that any club other than Fort Worth has represented the Texas league in the series, and interest is at high pitch throughout northern Texas.

All games will start at 3:30 p. m.

CHISOX SWEEPS SERIES

CHICAGO, Sept. 19. (AP)—Chicago made a clean sweep of the five-game series with Boston by taking the final game, 6 to 3, and running their winning streak to six straight. Thomas held the visitors to two hits until the ninth inning when he eased up and permitted Boston to score three times. Chicago bunched hits for runs.

Coyotes Give Demonstration of Power In Wichita Game That Augurs Many Grid Glories

Just a little listening in was all that was needed after Saturday's 19-0 victory over Walters to discover that many conversations were already beginning the art of dopeweaving and predicting for Bud McCallum's gang. Not even the magic words, "state champions," were missing from the fan-talk. While it is yet too early to chime in on any state title dreams, it must be admitted that the pack performed considerably above expectations, and in spite of its relative greenness uncorked a brand of football at certain stages in the flood of substitutions that showed a good possibility of finding an efficiently working combination.

Linemen in more than sufficient numbers showed themselves capable of easily taking care of the Sooner attack. Especially gratifying was the sight of the frequency with which men broke through the opposing first defense and spilled plays before getting started or for actual losses.

Hobbs Looks Good.

Marconi Hobbs, letter man of '24 and ineligible last year on account of the looks of his report cards, performed in splendid style and promised to give Pinney, the center of expected first call, a hard race for the berth. Anybody who can pass the ball accurately and in the face of fast opposition get through and toss the ball carrier for a ten-yard loss, as Marc did Saturday, isn't a stiff at the game of football.

Captain Dobson at end demonstrated a fighting spirit and an ability to get tackles where most needed that set a good example for the rest of the gang.

Hunkie Ray, besides fitting very capably into his place at guard, displayed a healthy boot that should help to solve a problem or two in punting that has worried the Red and Black ever since the departure of Baldwin. In the final quarter Saturday three of his boots in succession were good for 40 or more yards, one actually netting a final gain of near 60 measures. Nothing bad in that this early in the season! Just a little work to develop consistency and to eliminate occasional bad ones is needed.

"Squirt" Holstein, the slightly (?) heavy-set tackle with experience from the Coyotes of '24, bids fair to be bulwark of the left side of the line.

R. J. Brown, a powerful youngster, playing his first game of football Saturday, showed up in a way that assures much power on the other side of the line. Out of the field of other line candidates there should be a good possibility of building a more powerful forward wall than any boasted by the Pack for several years.

Francis Stands Out.

With Coyal Francis the only regular in the backfield, things opened exceedingly doubtful against Walters' Purple Devils. Ray and Mills, while looking every inch good football material, both were participating in their first game ever played. Few of the new candidates had experience to speak of. But it took only to the second period when substitutions threw together a combination that worked in almost mid-season form with a variety of football tricks. Francis stood out with his steady generalship and his running and pass receiving. The hardest slamming any one got during the day only seemed to make him grin. With Dickey and Rayzor as two other capable quarterbacks, McCallum should have little to worry about his key position in the backfield.

Perk Ray, with his plunging, placing the ball, running and accurate passing brought visions of a real threat at fullback. His passing was the coolest and surest found in a Red and Black for quite a stretch. Six completed passes, with few bad tries, two passes through enemy blockers for touchdowns and another over the opposition for extra point—that all doesn't sound like first-game stuff. Perk's basketball experience will stand him in good stead in this department and a little experience should make him a good man for the fullback post.

Sisk And Lynch Flash.

Two other first class performers were discovered in Jewel Sisk, shifted to half from his old position at end and Lynch, the speed boy broken field runner from Sulphur Springs, who rounded out the backfield with Francis and Ray into a fine scoring machine.

Many spectators commented on the sudden appearance of this foursome as a seeming find in a versatile attack that would be hard to stop in the league contests this year. The little while Lynch had to demonstrate his pedigree treated the fans to some classy end running, incidentally scoring a touchdown for the Pack.

Among the youngsters Allred gave a good account of himself with his running and twisting return of punts. Mills and McKinney, though both without experience, handled their assignments promisingly and with a little more work under actual fire would round out a second backfield of dependable worth.

All in all, even though in the face of most discouraging performance in scrimmages thus far, the Pack gave a demonstration of power that makes fans look forward happily to a return of the grid glories of '23. It will take worlds of work to knock out the bushels of greenness still evident in the bunch, but there is time to accomplish a lot before the opening of the regular conference play.

Ed Hughes' Column

GENE'S PLAN OF BATTLE LIKELY TO GO AWRY

Gene Tunney has a mysterious, deep-plotted plan of combat by which Jack Dempsey is to be deftly shorn of his world's heavyweight glory. It is especially designed to deposit another abject wreck of once mighty fighting mechanism on pugilistica's junk heap. At least, so runs a story under his signature. The diabolical diagram which is to brand Dempsey with Queensberry's stigma of impotency may at present be catalogued as strictly cabalistic. Other than the challenger, his relatives and a few bark-close friends, no one is aware of it. Mayhap, Tunney, himself, may not as yet be thoroughly familiar with its intricate, annihilative details. If it is characteristic of the man, the ruse is not likely to prove a simple one. Gene, we are having it dinned into us, is not a common sort of gladiator—a coarse, unenlightened bruiser of the fistic pits. On the other hand, he is a scholar; a sublimated creature generally attuned to nobler things than cauliflowering ears and leveling the proboscis of his fellow man.

As such he bears the distinction of being "a credit" to the knuckle fraternity at the possible cost of some disfavor in the starry realm of culture. The trick, it is thus inferred, will be of Napoleonic dimensions, something downright staggering in its immensity. Little wonder that even Gene's trenchant wits have not yet mastered its pulissant particulars. However, the ex-leather-neck disclaims that the whole shebang will be enfolded within ropes at Philly on the 23, and that its wonder workings will strike the breath from King Dempsey's regal frame and the glittering crown from his swarthy brow. Until then a yearning curious public must remain as such.

In the meantime there is balm for the itching, suspense ridden fan. Tunney may, ha he claims, have a wondrous surprise in store for all of us. Nevertheless, ring precedent bellows otherwise. Jess Willard's terse summing up on the subject reflects the unwielding evidence of past performances. Jess scorned the idea that any scrapper ever doped out a ring campaign in advance and then executed it. Everything that happened in a championship mill was the result of blind destiny or sheer accident, he maintained. "I can't find," he chirped, "any fighter who ever studied out a particular wallop or trick in advance and got away with it. You take the fight as it comes, and meet the situations as they occur, often lightning-like, as best you may."

HOW JEFFRIES PLANNED.

Willard was more than half right. So far as this writer can discover, only one scrapper ever upset big Jess' contention. That man was Jim Jeffries and the occasion was the Big Fellow's first encounter with Robert Fitzsimmons. Tommy Ryan, a boxer noted for marvelous skill and animal-like ring cunning, taught Jeff a trick that helped him detach the great Fitzsimmons from his heavyweight bay leaves. Fitzsimmons was a tremendous body puncher; Jeffries a lumbering, unschooled giant with little but magnificent physical power and courage to recommend him. Plainly Jeff could not win should the dreaded Fitzsimmons be presented with inviting targets for his crushing shots. So Ryan decided to make Jeff as targetless as possible. He coached him to crouch in such a manner that the great challenger's body would be more or less immune to Fitz's deadly "solar plexus" shift that had ruined Corbett and agonized Tom Sharkey four months previous. When Jeffries advanced, almost doubled over, the left struck out like a menacing jibboom to meet Fitz, the latter was almost unhinged with amazement. All the feinting in the world could not dislodge Jeff from this weird, effective pose. Fitz might as well have left his famous solar plexus rap at home in his bureau drawer at Bensonhurst. He found few chances to use it on the stubborn challenger, who wound up the battle by knocking out the disappointed Fitzsimmons in the eleventh round.

Otherwise the history of heavyweight championship encounters has been barren of such innovations on ring technique. Defending champions have displayed the form which made them familiar and famous. Challengers have uniformly followed the same course from Sullivan to the present day Jack Dempsey.

Sullivan, before he whipped Ryan, was noted for his tiger-like ferocity, his scowling phiz, lordly self-assurance and bone-cracking punching qualities. He used all of these and nothing else in dethroning Paddy. Moreover, he boasted that he would trim Ryan in precisely the manner he did.

* * *

Jim Corbett won recognition from Sullivan and the fight populace by his wizardous boxing. His rapid-fire hitting, confusing feinting and will-o-wisp like footwork had all been laid on the boards in his memorable sixty-one round battle with the redoubtable Peter Jackson. Corbett, of necessity, flashed everything he had in that long, drawn out joust with the scientific black. If Corbett had claimed he had a new trick for Sullivan, the authorities would have ordered an X-ray of his dome. As it was, Corbett humiliated Sullivan with exactly the stuff with which he held off the skilled Jackson. There was no room for anything new up his sleeve, and Corbett was not stupid enough to claim there was.

FITZ STOOD ON RECORD.

Fitzsimmons, in tackling Corbett, stood on his past performances with Maher and Tom Sharkey. He was a genius in the knockout knack with blows delivered from almost any angle and position. His style and every capability was household gossip with the fight fans of his day. The solar plexus shift was old stuff to them. With it he had crumpled up Tom Sharkey, as clean a knockout as ever was delivered, though the victor was robbed of the decision. In relation to his victory over Corbett, the only "new" thing about it was the name "solar plexus." A physician, in describing the punch, made it famous with his scientific phraseology. "Mr. Fitzsimmons hit him in the solar plexus," the erudite medico explained. The line became universally celebrated. The peasantry thought it was a "wind" wallop.

Dempsey Shares Honors With Jeffries and Johnson In Span He's Been Champ

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.(AP)—Heavyweight boxing history has been traced back more than century, to 1719, when the fistic game first flourished in England, but the world's championship held today by Jack Dempsey dates back only about three decades, to 1890, when John L. Sullivan became generally recognized as the king of them all.

Seven men have held the heavyweight scepter since the reign of the Boston "Strong Boy." All but one have been American ringmen. Bob Fitzsimmons, the freckled Cornishman, was the only foreign pugilist to wear the crown.

Dempsey shares with Jack Johnson, the noted negro fighter, and Jim Jeffries the distinction of holding the championship the longest, seven years. Jeffries retired undefeated but was knocked out by Johnson when he attempted a come-back as a "white hope" after the negro had lifted the championship from Tommy Burns.

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett held the title for five years, Jess Willard, four years; Burns, three years, after Jeffries' retirement, and Fitzsimmons, two years.

In the last championship fight with bare knuckles, Sullivan knocked out Jake Kilrain at Richburg, Miss., July 8, 1889, in seventy-five rounds. Sullivan held sway with the gloves until 1892 when he was knocked out by Corbett in 21 rounds.

The list of principal fights for the title since 1892:

x 1892—James J. Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan in 21 rounds with big gloves at New Orleans, September 7.

1894—James J. Corbett stopped Charley Mitchell in three rounds at Jacksonville, Fla., January 25.

x 1897—Bob Fitzsimmons stopped James J. Corbett in 14 rounds at Carson City, Nev., March 17.

x 1899—James J. Jeffries stopped Bob Fitzsimmons in 11 rounds at Coney Island, June 9.

1899—James J. Jeffries defeated Tom Sharkey in 25 rounds at Coney Island November 3.

1900—James J. Jeffries stopped James J. Corbett in 23 rounds at Coney Island May 11.

1902—James J. Jeffries stopped Bob Fitzsimmons in eight rounds at San Francisco, July 25.

1903—James J. Jeffries knocked out James J. Corbett in 10 rounds at San Francisco, August 14.

1904—James J. Jeffries knocked out Jack Monroe in two rounds at San Francisco, August 26.

1906—Tommy Burns beat Marvin Hart in 20 rounds at Los Angeles, February 23.

1907—Tommy Burns beat "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien in 20 rounds at Los Angeles, May 7.

1907—Tommy Burns stopped Bill Squires of Australia in one round at Colma, Cal., July 4.

x 1908—Jack Johnson defeated Tommy Burns in 14 rounds at Sydney, N. S. W., the police interfering, December 26.

1909—Jack Johnson knocked out Stanley Ketchel in 12 rounds at Colma, Cal., October 16.

1910—Jack Johnson knocked out James J. Jeffries in 15 rounds at Reno, Nev., July 4.

1912—Jack Johnson beat Jim Flynn in nine rounds at Las Vegas, N. M. the police interfering, July fourth.

1914—Jack Johnson beat Frank Moran on points in 20 rounds at Paris, France, June 27.

x 1915—Jess Willard knocked out Jack Johnson in 26 rounds at Havana, Cuba, April 5.

1916 — Jess Willard defeated Frank Moran by popular verdict in New York (no decision) March 25.

x 1919—Jack Dempsey knocked out Jess Willard in three rounds at Toledo, Ohio, July 4.

1920—Jack Dempsey knocked out Billy Miske in three rounds at Benton Harbor, Mich., September 6.

1920—Jack Dempsey knocked out Bill Brennan in 12 rounds at New York, December 14.

1921—Jack Dempsey knocked out Georges Carpentier of France in four rounds at Jersey City, N. J., July 2.

1923—Jack Dempsey won on points from Tom Gibbons of St. Paul in 15 rounds at Shelby, Mont., July 4.

1923—Jack Dempsey knocked out Luis Firpo in two rounds at New York, September 14.

x—Title changed hands.

Dallas Amateurs Grab Federation Baseball Crown

GALVESTON, Texas, Sept. 19. (AP)—The Victory-Wilson baseball team of Dallas won the amateur baseball championship of Texas today when they took both games of a double header. The scores were 11 to 5 and 6 to 3. In winning the two games today the visitors showed a complete reversal of form, slugging offerings of Fitzgibbons and Niederman to all corners of the lot.

The visitors took the lead early in both games and were never headed by the locals. With the double victory today won the silver trophy offered to the team winning the championship.

GALVESTON, Sept. 19. (AP)—Naming Taylor and Wernicke specifically, the Galveston Amateur Athletic Federation tonight wired Koger Stokes, president of the Texas federation, to investigate the amateur standing of the Victory-Wilson team of Dallas which today defeated the McFadden compress team of this city for the state championship. The wire declared the local team will not contest the games played here but asks that if the amateur standing of the Dallas team be found cloudy that President Stokes declare a "no championship."

REDS TREMBLE IN BEAN TOWN

Boston Braves Stiff Hurdle Fo rCincinnatians in Their Flag Fight

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.(AP)—Jack Hendricks and the Cincinnati Reds today were afforded the opportunity of writing into baseball history a modern version of Jason and his Argonauts in their quest for the golden fleece of the 1926 National league championship.

Trials that beset the mythical expedition of the Argo confronted the Cincinnati crew as it approached a crucial series with the Boston Braves.

Cincinnati is due to ride the gauntlet starting tomorrow in Boston faced with the non-cheering fact that the troublesome Braves left their imprint on the league leading Cardinals and shattered the bunting prospects of the once contending Chicago club.

Stopping at the hub center on their fnial swing through the east, the Cards dropping three out of a four-game series to the Braves and were toppled temporarily from the peak, In their wake, the Cubs succumbed in four out of five starts. In the season's series between the Reds and Braves thus far, Cincinnati has won 10 of 19 struggles.

Braves Lead List.

The Braves headed the performances of the past week in the National with five victories out of six engagements while Cincinnati won six games and lost two and St. Louis won five and lost two.

Cleveland's desperate attempt to overtake the Yankees in the American scramble was marked by six triumphs and a single defeat which was the best average for the circuit. The White Sox came out on top in five of six frays.

Connie Mack's Athletics were engaged in the defense of third place against the Senators in the battle for division of the world's series spoils. Only a game and a half separated the clubs.

The badly buffetted Philadelphia Nationals are now sailing without their regular pilot as the result of a bandy of phrases between Manager Fletcher and Ump Klem. The rumpus originated when Klem chased Fletcher off the field in one of the games of the Cardinals' series at Philadelphia, proceeded to a sign tabled "Catfish" Klem which decorated the club house and ended when President John A. Heydler suspended Fletcher for the remainder of the season.

The Phillies' manager has taken an appeal from Heydler's punishment and the outcome is still pending.

The Week's Record.

The week's major league record of games won and lost, runs, hits, errors, opponents' runs and home runs, including games of Saturday follows:

WHY DID PREACHER ORDER .. HIS SERMONS DESTROYED

EXETER, Eng.—The deathbed will made by Rev. Henry Walter Mc Grath, for many years a preacher at Pershare, Welborough and Exeter, has provided his friends and acquaintances with a myster they cannot solve. The preacher, who left an estate worth $350,000 directed that all his sermons be destroyed immediately upon his death, but failed to give any reason for such action. He also directed that his body be interred "with plainness and privacy," but requested his executors not to select any cemetery around London or Exeter.

Lillian Leitzel, Aerial Circus Queen, Teaches Children of White Tops

LILLIAN LEITZEL, WORLD'S GREATEST AERIAL GYMNAST

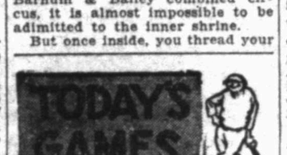

Behind the scenes of the greatest show on earth is a fascinating realm crowded with bespangled folk of all nationalities. Unless you know one of the officials connected with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circus, it is almost impossible to be admitted to the inner shrine.

But once inside, you thread your way between perfoming bears, elephants, giants, midgets, clowns, acrobats and riders until you come to the "drawing-room" tent of Lillian Leitzel.

Miss Leitzel, who performs prodigies of strength on a single rope, throwing her body over her shoulder 100 or more times, is hte gymnastic marvel of the great show. And she indulges in a hobby. She has taken all the children of the circus under her wing and organized a school.

"Whatever interests children and keeps the mabsorbed in their task," says Miss Leitzel, "is good for them. That is just why I use a wholesome story like 'Davy Winkle in Circusland' to teach them to read. There are a dozen or more who go to regular school during the summer. Circus children are the same as others with perhaps a more intense love for the open, sunshine, grass, flowers and trees."

Miss Leitzel, "her children' 'and all the 1600 people of the wonderful city of white tents are to be here Wednesday, September 29.

NEW FINANCING GETS INTEREST

Uneasiness Over Conditions In Credit Field Continues To Hold Front

NEW YORK, Sept. 19. (AP)—Reawakened interest in new financing and the growing tendency of investors to favor foreign obligations over domestic issues were the most noticeable development in last week's bond market. Uneasiness over credit conditions persisted, despite the retention of the four per cent federal reserve rediscount rates and a temporary easing of money quotations after the heavy quarterly requirements had been satisfied.

The market for new bond issues, which had been relatively quiet for several weeks, was aroused to renewed activity by the introduction of a varied assortment of offerings aggregating $118,000,000.

Foreign Bonds Popular

The obvious attractiveness of the yields on foreign bonds even in the face of the substantial price advances recently recorded, continued to draw buyers to this field.

Domestic railroad and industrial liens did not fare so well. Many of them apparently have found it impossible to regain the heights recently attained and last week saw recessions taking place all along the line. Special speculation accounted for the independent strength of a few issues.

Credit in Demand

With the new season at hand when credit will be in greater demand to finance crop developments and expending autumn trade, the investment community hardly expects that the record volume of new financing set in the first half of the year will be watched in the second six months' period.

George Learned To Golf in Back Yard

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 19. (AP)—George Von Elm learned how to play golf in his own back yard. The new 25-year-old champion who took the American amateur title yesterday by beating Bobby Jones, began driving and putting when he was eight years old.

As a school boy he laid out a miniature golf course in his back yard and spent many hours there when free from his studies. He imitated noted golfers about whom he read or had seen play. Von Elm's home was in Salt Lake City then.

An Evidence of Refinement

Good taste and good health demand sound teeth and sweet breath.

The use of Wrigley's chewing gum takes care of this important item of personal hygiene in a delightful, refreshing way.

Wrigley's removes odors of dining or smoking from the breath by cleaning the teeth, by stimulating the flow of digestive juices, and by the antiseptic action of the flavoring extracts for which Wrigley's is famous—"The Flavor Lasts!"

The result is a sweet breath that evidences care for one's self and consideration for others—the final touch of refinement.

Wrigley's is a thrice daily routine of people of refinement.

INFIRM CURED AT SERVICES

1,500 Attend Faith Sermon At Tent On Eighteenth Street

A crowd of at least 1,500 persons attended the divine healing service at the tent on Eighteenth and Broad streets Sunday night, when almost a score presented themselves for the prayer of faith to be prayed for by Evangelist A. E. Davis who is conducting the revival. A mother brought her tiny baby to the altar; a small boy; lame in one of his ankles, was led to the altar; a young woman deaf in one ear for a number of years and older men and women came for healing of various troubles.

Deafness Is Cured

According to the testimonies of several, miraculous healing took place. Lola Keim of 2303 Brobk, who had been deaf in the left ear for a number of years could hear after the prayer and before the throng of people, she proved that she could hear from the affected member.

James Harris Whitlock of Burkburnett who has had rheumatism for years walked from the platform where the healing service was carried on, and said he no longer felt any pain in walking. Another man whose name was not obtained, was also cured of a deafness and could answer to questions and conversation carried on in a moderate tone.

Testimonies of the others who asked for the prayer of faith will be given at the meetings during the week, and they will tell of the changes in their conditions. Some of the sufferers are ill of chronic complaints, and the effect of the prayer of faith may be felt within a few days.

Singing Opens Service

Congregational singing led by Evangelist Davis with Mrs. Fisher at the piano featured the opening of the Sunday night service. Enthusiasm was manifested throughout the evening by the throng assembled under the tent, outside its roof and in the cars parked nearby.

Evangelist Davis took his text from the third chapter of Genesis, and gave a lesson of faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please God. If we have faith, all things are possible to him that believeth."

No morning service will be held Monday, but the regular evening service will be held each evening at 7:30 o'clock and other mornings during the week at 9:30 o'clock, it was announced.

PROGRESS

and meeting deficits. They put it over in the years gone by. They made it a success. There was another Sanger in the city of Waco, Sam Sanger of the House of Sanger, now departed. W. V. Crawford for many years has been the Sanger manager and general utility man. These Sangers, wherever located, knew how to build and how to get trade. W. V. Crawford, responsible man of the Waco House of Sanger, was loaned year in and year out to push along the Cotton Palace.

He was identified with the state association for the building of good roads, and the securing of the proper legislation to make modern highways possible. These three institutions of the state and the southwest had very small beginnings. They had a rough road to travel. The people who were interested assisted by advancing cash in exchange for tickets before the annual show started and they are mighty monuments today to the progressive spirit of the men who made them in the years that have flown.

Away out in northwest Texas is the Blue Ribbon Baby of the Bluebonnet state. Its builders seemed determined to make the Bluebonnet Baby an institution for the Panhandle and northwest Texas like unto the Dallas fair for the people of that section, the Fort Worth livestock show for the people of Texas who are interested in an industry which has an investment of more than $600,000,000, the Waco Cotton Palace which serves a territory populous and rich in crop productivity and ever adding new attractions for the education, the edification, the recreation and the amusement of a vast number of people.

Do not overlook the fact the history of one is a history of all these instiuttions or enterprises. They were built by people who believed in themselves, believed in their town and its growth, believed in their state and that the day would come when it would be one of two or three leaders and the survivors of the old guard who launched these enterprises realized long ago that they builded wiser than they knew.

Austin is the capital of the largest of American commonwealths. Travis and surrounding counties are among the richest in productivity that can be found anywhere under western skies. Austin should be the setting of what will be in time one of the greatest fairs and expositions under the skies of north America.

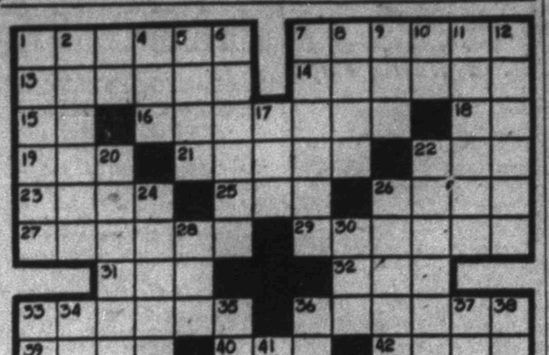

It is not a county fair. It is not a district fair. Its founders started right when they launched the Texas State Fair. It should be as wide as the state, and in time, as great as the commonwealth which has traveled faster in a quarter of a century than any one of the American commonwealths in the south or west, a state where the mineral wealth is staggering to the mind, where the agricultural wealth goes beyond a billion a year, a state whose exports in 1925 passed the billion dollar mark and yet, a state in its infancy in the development of its natural resources and millions of broad acres which have never ben touched by plow or hoe.

Death List For Miami Alone Placed At Over 200 In Latest Dispatches

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 19. (AP)—The death list from the hurricane at Miami and Miami Beach was estimated at 230 persons by a reporter for the Miami Herald who reached here late today from Miami. He said one hundred and fifty of these were in Miami Beach and that an undertaker in Miami was unable to care for eighty other bodies there. At the same time, George H. Beane of the News-Tribune, who went into the storm area today, telegraphed the Associated Press that hundreds of lives had been lost in the storm stricken territory and that property damage will run into millions of dollars.

The hurricane, after sweeping the lower east coast of Florida, passed to the Gulf of Mexico. Thousands were reported injured in Miami, Fort Lauderdale and Pompano as the hurricane laid waste an extensive area along a sixty-mile path.

The first passenger train from Miami since the city was isolated last Friday night reached New Smyrna, Fla., at noon Sunday bringing a message from the sheriff to Governor John W. Martin, asking for 250 soldiers "as quickly as possible," and reporting the city of Hollywood, 12 miles to the north of Miami, in dire need of supplies and medical aid.

Governor Martin at Tallahassee immediately ordered troops and hospital units rushed to the scene of the disaster and food supplies were dispatched from several points.

Untold Suffering In Wake.

Untold suffering has been left in the storm's wake, with thousands of homes levelled and innumerable families seeking relief in any form. The situation generally was characterized as appalling and throughout the section no attempt was made to identify any bodies, as medical aid was administered to hundreds of injured persons.

Urgent appeals were sent from here today to Governor John W. Martin, petitioning martial law and requesting immediate relief. Arrival of newspapermen from Miami at noon occasioned the dispatch several hours later of a train bearing doctors, nurses and sufficient supplies, including water, which has been at a premium.

Sweeping in from the Bahamas Friday midnight the hurricane desceneded with fury on Miami, centering there during the greater part of the nine hours which it raged and veering northward to carve a path of desolation in Hollywood and its vicinity, 12 miles to the north.

Miami bore the brunt of the damage through the area in property losses, but increasing fatalities in the region between Hollywood and Fort Lauderdale indicated that loss of life would be largest there.

Rain began falling in Miami soon after midnight, attended by rising winds and a new barometeric decline. The storm advanced alarmingly and by one o'clock the wind had attained a velociay of 65 miles an hour, the barometer fell to 28.84. Two hours later light and power service snapped the Miami district except in the heart of the city. The storm bore down with greater intensity in the early hours of the morning and at 5:40 o'clock the weather bureau reported a record low barometeric pressure of 27.75, said to be the lowest mark ever registered in the United States. Miami Beach at the same time was helpless in the face of a 120 mile an hour wind and mountaineous waves swept over the island.

A brief full giving indication of a cessation, prompted hundreds to venture forth in attempts to salvage their wind-swept household effects but a twin storm, believed to be the re-curving disturbance, hurled itself flush against the city soon after 8 o'clock. The fence of this latter storm was more intense than its predecessor and raged unabated for two hours.

Miami's bay front was subjected to a terrific battering, as the violent wind storm struck from a more dangerous angle. The bay crept high over its accumtomed level and raged like a mill pond waist deep from the Miami river northward to the county causeway.

WAVES ARE MOUNTAINOUS

Mountainous waves broke over Miami Beach and the two causeways, hurtling abandoned automobiles into the bay and destroying in this second onslaught many homes that escaped with light damage before. The water was three to four feet deep in many places.

When the gale spent its force in the late forenoon Sunday, downtown streets for blocks lay several feet under water. Flood conditions prevailed generally in the lower sections of the city and especially at Hialeah, where residents were reported imperiled by unusually high waters, added to the overflow during the several perilous days of the Everglades canals. Attempts to administer aid were handicapped seriously.

Downtown skyscrapers and business houses were shorn of their windows and plate glass fronts, and thousands upon thousands of dollars of merchandise was ruined in exposed places. Roofs gave way in some instances, and the super-structure display signs were razed everywhere. Streets throughout the city and neighboring communities were cluttered for miles with debris and were impassable. Tangled wires lay on every thoroughfare, and broken telephone poles, uprooted trees, furniture and demolished automobiles, testified to the fury of the storm.

ALL COMMUNICATION DISRUPTED

With the general disruption of all telephone and telegraph lines, communication with the outside world was severed early Friday morning when the storm reached its peak. Communication was largely local, as each community or town struggled to clear away its own wreckage.

Shipping in Miami suffered greatly. More than 250 boats, ranging from coastwise steamers and palatial yachts to the small bay craft were damaged. The large ocean vessels remained at their moorings and weathered the storm with little damage. More than 150 smaller boats, in exposed bay front berths or at anchorage in the the harbor, were hurtled out of the water and crashed to splinter wood on shore. No check was possible among residents of these boats, nor among others known to live in several of the 75 craft in the harbor.

Considerable suffering was caused in the northern suburbs. Rapid transit buses and automobiles, commandeered for relief service, worked throughout Saturday bearing injured persons to hospitals and emergency centers. Incomplete reports indicate that in these three communities possible a dozen persons lost their lives and more than 250 others received medical aid. No check has been available anywhere.

At Okjus and Hallandale, as well as other smaller towns south of Hollywood, various reports indicated that several persons had lost their lives and that the others injured had been given aid. Blocked country roads prevent contact with outlying homes.

Hollywood, a product of the development era, presented row after row of razed dwellings, a main street of demolished buildings and debris everywhere.

The Associated Press staff correspondent in Miami was the first to reach the outside world with the story from the stricken city of Miami. He left the city at 4:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon and traveled through woods and railroad tracks over which water was flowing. In a blinding rain he proceeded on foot north of Fort Lauderdale. Telephone and telegraph poles and wires block ing the road, he walked the railroad track to Fort Lauderdale and slept in the women's club with 50 refugees, water was so scarce at that place it was portioned out half a glass at a time.

GERMANS LIKE SHAW.

BERLIN, Sept. 19. (AP)—Elizabeth Bergner, Germany's favorite stage and screen star, is booked to appear this season in a preponderance of foreign plays a number of which are said to be of her own choosing. She is scheduled to play Cleopatra in Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" which is to be followed by the German Julius Berestels comedy "Dover Calais," and later by Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat."

MONARCHIST TREND.

BERLIN, Sept. 19. (AP)—A reichstag investigation appears probable into the activities of numerous scholastic fraternities which are openly demanding the return of a monarch. The "Kyffhauser Verband," a national students organization, at a recent convention passed a resolution declaring:

"We renew adherence to our old slogan 'With God for Kaiser and Fatherland.'"

PRICE SLUMP HITS COTTON

11-Point Drop Registered In Week's Market List Skid Downward

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19. (AP)—The cotton market experienced a week of activity accompanied by a sharp recession in prices, which carried values down 11 points from the high of the week, for December established on Monday. At the lowest of the week, reached Saturday, the price level was 221 points below the figures ruling just before the publication of the last government report on September 8.

The decline was the result of active liquidation by long interests, acumulcated before the last bureau report on accounts of crop damage during August and on the belief that as a result of such reported damage the government's indicated crop would be under fifteen million bales. Another reason for the decline was the placing of hedges on a large scale against cotton accumulated in the interior.

The decline was helped in the latter part of the week by liberal selling based on the expectation that the government estimate to be issued September 23, will show a further increase in the crop prospects over that issued September 8. This belief was increased by private reports and estimates.

The week was featured by a sharp increase in the movement of the crop into sight and also by heavy sales of spots at the leading southern markets. Big sales would seem to indicate that spinners, both domestic and foreign, have come in to supply their needs encouraged perhaps by the much lower prices prevailing — eight cents a pound less than last year at this time.

The report that the tropical storm had struck the Florida peninsula and would probably move into the Gulf of Mexico, had little effect in checking the decline which during the short session Saturday amounted to approximately 40 points.

Mayflower Cover On Display By Historic Society

CANYON, Texas, Sept. 25.—A center table brought over on the Mayflower and loaned by Mrs. J. M. Glover of Spearman, Texas, to the Panhandle-Plains Historical society museum is one of the most interesting recent additions to the society's collection. This table was brought to Canadian, Texas, where it was sold at an auction sale and was secured there by Mrs. Glover.

The table is of walnut; the top, which is eighteen inches square, was originally one inch thick, but is worn down to a half-inch. It was secured upon a recent trip of J. Evetts Haley, field representative of the historical society, to Spearman, Texas.

Alan King of Spearman loaned the society an old will which was made in 1849. An interesting feature of this will is one clause which bequeaths to an heir "one negro boy." The will was that of Denton Geoheagen, the great-great-grandfather of Alan King.

Mr. King also loaned the society an old bible purchased in 1838, a spoon made from six silver dollars about seventy-five years ago, and a counterpane made by hand in 1876 by Mrs. Lizzie Klinglesmith and given by her to Mrs. M. A. King. This article constitutes an interesting addition to the large museum in possession of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society.

Pershing Pays Visit To War-Time Leader

PARIS, Sept. 19. (AP)—General Pershing, during his visit to Paris, called at the city residence of Marshal Foch, only to find the former commander in chief of the allied armies was at his country home, the Chateau de Morlaix, in Brittany.

"By Jove," Pershing is quoted as having exclaimed, "It won't ever be said that I came to France and failed to see Marshal Foch."

"The Marshal might be informed of your desire," Foch's aide de camp suggested to Pershing.

"Yes and perhaps bother the marshal and have him come to Paris," interrupted Pershing. "I shall not permit that."

"It is up to me to call on Marshal Foch. Am I not always his subordinate?"

General Pershing took the next train for Brittany, where he spent two days with the marshal before sailing from Cherbourg.

Spanish Bullfighters Dodge Wine Bottles

ST. RAFAEL, Sept. 19.—Dodging empty wine bottles instead of the sharp horns of bulls furnished entertainment at the Frejus Arena, near St. Rafael, to a large number of spectators who had gone to witness what had been advertised as a bull fight.

Neither bulls nor matadors seemed to know anything about the game. None of the six fighters had any of the finness of the great belmonte, and the bulls were docile. Three spectators were arrested while leaning off the ring barirers and prodding the sleepy animals with pen knives.

Finally some of the crowd attempted to get some amusement for their money and sent a fusillade of bottles at the fighters and the bulls. One matador was struck on the head. When the show was over, police had to protect the bull fighters as they made their way out.

WHO'LL SWIM IT NEXT?

LONDON, Sept. 19. (AP)—With the English channel conquered first by a maid and then by a mother, the question is now being asked who will be the first grandmother to perform the feat. So far, there seemingly are no really promising candidates in sight to carry on the sequence started by the performances of Miss Ederle and Mrs. Corson.

"Too Neglectful About Our Laws," Judge Kay Tells Class

TROUBLE LIES WITH PEOPLE, HE DECLARES

Speaker Asserts Public Responsible for the Statutes' Success

The laws of the state and nation are in the main, all right. The trouble is that when they aren't properly enforced it is usually because the people don't want them enforced.

Such was the comment Sunday of Judge John C. Kay in his regular weekly address to his men's Bible class Sunday morning. A total of 284 persons heard the address which, in full, was as follows:

"I sometimes think,—in fact, I sometimes know,—that one of the meanest streaks in my disposition is the spirit of criticism; that spirit that is in most of us, if not indeed, is all of us. We feel like our neighbor and our friend and our fellow citizen hasn't done as well with something as he might have done, or should have done. When my digestion is working good, and my business going along fair, I feel, then, like the mayor, and the police department, and the school board, and the churches and the county commissioners court, and the whole bunch, is just doing grand. Then, I will have another day when I feel like everybody ought to be impeached. Now, if you have spells like that, I want you to agree with me that you will try to take something for it and do better.

A Word On Religion

I want to talk to you, for a moment, about the meaning of the word, "religion." In the mystic white light that beat about the throne of God, there was a mandate went forth that man be created. And, the elders of heaven, who sat about at that time, said we will make him different from all the other animals on earth, let us endow him with reason, capable of infinite effort. Let us endow him with the right of choice, so that he may accept that which is good and reject that which is evil. Let us give him eyes to see and care to hear and a mind to think with, and set him free in a free world, to see what he can or may accomplish. But, said one of the council what profit is it to heaven that we do all these things for man? Is he going to have gratitude for all these wonders that are conferred upon him? Is he going to look upward from whence his blessings come, and worship and love His Maker.

"They said, in order that he may do these things, in order that he may have respect for the Creator, we will give him a new passion on the earth called "Religion."

"Religion, then, according to my conception, is in some degree represented by the amount of gratitude that a man feels toward his Maker for the blessing conferred upon him. It breaks out in thanksgiving to his Maker for the blessings, and I think that, that very thing, perhaps, more than anything or things, marks the man or woman of true religion. Too many of us, I think are disposed to take credit upon ourselves for whatever we accomplish that is worth praise, and to lay at the door of our neighbor all of our failures and shortcomings. You know, I like to think that the sunshine and the rain, and the harvest and the shelter and the food, and the clothing and the blessings of education and of civilization, all come slipping down to us from God. I want to say to you this morning that that is my belief; that that is the thing that I think is the great fact of religion, that we accomplish nothing in ourselves. If we think about it all night, we get a grander conception about that the word, "Religion" means. That is the kind of religion that you have to have every day in the week, and every hour in the day.

Fewer, Better Laws

Now the Sunday school lesson this morning is about the law. Sometimes I touch on the lesson here in spots. Occasionally, you hear a fellow running over Texas hollering that we need fewer and better laws, and that sounds like a pretty good slogan to a fellow who doesn't stop to think, but you will notice that the fellow who is hollering about them, never tells you what law he wants to repeal. He just has a big high-powered, empty slogan. The reason we have so many laws is because civilization is growing. We didn't need an automobile law until the automobile came and that, I think it is fairly obvious to most of us. We didn't need a law against cocaine until some scientist found you could cook the crystal salts out of the cocoa leaves and make it.

We don't want to listen too much to the cry that we have got entirely too many laws, but there is a slogan that something might be made out of politically, socially and even religiously. Out of the thousands of laws that we have, we do have too many laws that are a dead letter on the book, too many laws that nobody thinks about.

I used to be a prosecuting attorney, as my young friend over there is now. I don't know how he finds it, but I always found the public never was interested in more than one or two laws at a time. I remember when all Texas had about 103 degrees of fever, that is, their fever was about 102 on prize-fighting. The time was when all Texas was wrought up about fence-cutting. To stop the playing of poker used to be one of the great ambitions of the public, and the oficers would catch them at it, so it seems we have, in Texas, some legal epidemics. One time we want one thing, and another time, another thing. What we want to do, if we can, is to enforce all the laws alike.

I am going to call your attention to a law here that was never yet known in Wichita Falls, that, I think, has caused 80 per cent of the automobile accidents in town. It is against the laws of the state of Texas for one car to pass another at a street crossing. I can sit on my porch and see them bump together most any evening on account of that. There is another reason why that is against the law, because you can't get up much speed in a block to pass a fellow. It would keep down speed. It is the best law on that subject that I know anything about, and it ought to be dug out of its coffin and used here in Wichita Falls. I wonder how many of you gentlemen would be willing to enforce that law yourselves, and quit trying to pass your neighbor at a crossing? That is where the accidents, and broken fenders, and twisted axles, and bleeding faces, most of them, come from. That is a sample of one of the laws that we are not thinking about much.

I think the people are doing pretty well about these laws about stopping at these little stop signs they have got in the street, and I think the police are doing pretty well with the traffic laws. Of course, a few policemen can't be at every corner all the time, in a town the size of Wichita Falls. They are not omnipresent.

Now, the prohibition law seems to be the subject of the text book here. You can't enforce the prohibition law with a group of people that are thinking about nothing else but prohibition. Before you enfore that law, you have got to have a body of citizenship that respects every law on the books, because a fanatic who would run into the burning house and save just one law can't enforce that one. We have got to become a law abiding people in all particulars or in none. I don't know how well, nor how far the prohibition law is enforced in Wichita county. I have never looked into it much, but I do know, and you must know, that it can only be enforced by a people who respect all the laws of their country.

On The Lowest Plane

The Bible, talking here about the law puts it on the lowest plane. You have to do that sometimes in dealing with men. Sometimes you can't put up a high spiritual proposition to a common man. That is no compliment to you or to myself, but it is true. So, the Bible tells these people that if they will keep the law, they will have plenty to eat, and to wear. In other words, they are going to have material gains, but I am going to put it on higher ground to you, this morning, than was thought proper to put it on that occasion, and say to you, as I must say, that if we keep the law if we are law-abiders, that we are going to raise up a great citizenship, to make some of our sons stars of the first magnitude.

How many of you men ever talk to your sons about the law of the country? You know that is not easy to talk to your boy. I used to imagine it was, but it isn't. How many men in this audience who have boys, can sit down and talk in a sober conference with that boy, and point out to him his duty as a citizen, and his duty in respect to the laws of his country? Now, that is the kind of teaching that does good. That is the kind of talk that will make a great people and a great state. We have been too neglectful along these lines. I, myself, haven't done enough of it. Many of you, I think, haven't. We are just running around here, aiming to get some money, and some of us fall down on that, miserably. I think the biggest fool in town is the fellow that is greasy and covetous, and trying to get rich, and can't get away with it. I have had some little fever on that line myself, as most of you have.

A man ought to find out, by the time he is as old as I am, and some of you, that he is not good at money-making, and ought to strike out on some other line.

Keeping the laws of your country is not religion, of course, in the eyes of the world, and in the eyes of the church, but it is a long step toward it, and every religious man will keep the laws of his country, so let us think about that a little.

Takes Agency for Line Of Quality Goods

Paul Rutledge, who has been assistant purchasing agent of the Texhoma Oil & Refining company for the past several years has recently made connection with the Manufacturers' Agency business and is representing in Wichita Falls those manufacturers and jobbers handling first class products.

Heretofore, these concerns have had no local representative in Wichita Falls, though it is evident that there has been a good following. Others are just entering the territory with high class products. The various concerns that Mr. Rutledge represents enables him to serve the oil, industrial, and construction trade in literally every line of equipment of the best materials and workmanship. Concrete mixers, hoists, highway equipment, casing, line-pipe, tubing, wire lines, fittings, valves and countless other products are all of the best quality, according to Mr. Rutledge's description of his line of supplies.

Mr. Rutledge is widely known in Wichita Falls circles, having lived here since boyhood. He is thoroughly familiar with the equipment he represents due to his former connections with oil companies. He has been active in the local oil business, is a member of the Masonic lodge and Church groups, is a graduate of the local schools and has worked his way up to his present standing in a manner highly creditable and entirely by means of his own merits.

Thats what you do to your electric lighting plant

WHEN YOU want to say something is elastic, don't compare it to rubber. Say, "As elastic as the equipment of the Wichita Falls Electric Company.

You are continually squeezing that equipment to its smallest limits, and the next minute stretching it out to its full extent. Just consider—

In the middle of the afternoon, maybe, you are not using the electricity at all. Suddenly a storm breaks, darkness closes down and at once you and everybody else in town switch on lights.

That means this Company must make a quick jump from a small load to a heavy load. You press the button or turn the switch, and great electrical machines respond instantaneously to your touch.

You can keep us on the jump—with your rapid ups and downs in the use of electricity. But you can never catch us napping try it.
