Texans face important decision Tuesday, Wright says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Wright, for whom water has been a pet project for many years, says Tuesday is a big day in Texas.

The House majority leader said the future economy and well-being of Texas may hinge on whether its voters go to the polls and approve a proposed constitutional amendment to create a water trust fund in the state.

Approval of Proposition 4 in Tuesday's statewide vote "is a good step in the right direction. I'm surely supportive of that and am happy to stress that support," said Wright, D-Texas, of Fort Worth.

The amendment, the brainchild of Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton, would set aside half the state's surplus for water development loans and allow the state to obligate up to $500 million in credit for water bonds.

THE AMENDMENT also could benefit many of the small cities of Texas that cannot finance badly needed water projects without outside help.

Opponents complain that the billions of dollars that Proposition 4 earmarks for water projects could be better spent to improve education, prevent crime or modernize public transportation.

Wright disagrees. Without sufficient water, no phase of Texas' economy can prosper, he said in arguing for the amendment.

It is rapidly reaching the point, Wright contends, that a community blessed with an adequate supply of usable water "will be better off by far than if it had gold or oil or uranium or any other resource in the earth but lacked water."

Wright was a longtime member of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee. He would have been chairman had he not been elected majority leader, a position that allows no committee service.

His support for Proposition 4 is in keeping with his oft-stated calls for more long-range planning for water. He wrote a book in 1966 called, "The Coming Water Famine."

ON THE FIRST page of that book, he emphasized in everyday terms the importance of water in all phases of life:

"In the United States today, it takes 300 gallons of the indispensable fluid to produce a single loaf of bread. To grow a pound of beef and to get it to your dinner table requires at least 1,000 gallons of water. About 100,000 gallons go into the manufacture of each automobile."

In his office a few days ago, Wright made it clear his views of a coming water crisis haven't changed.

"I've been interested in this particular subject for all these many years, and I am concerned about the future of our state from the standpoint of water. I think the Clayton proposition is a good step in the right direction," Wright said.

He said President Reagan's new economic policies, stressing cuts in programs across the board, make it even more important that Texas find money to replace funds that once came from the federal government for water programs.

"I think without some long-term water plan in Texas — and a source of money to stop flooding, to store water when we need it, to pump water — our state and our economy will be in serious trouble," Wright said.

"At the present time, we have come to rely on the federal government for water pollution abatement, flood control, and so forth, but that's tightened up, just like all domestic programs are tightening up."

THRISTY agricultural land in Texas, without adequate irrigation, would benefit from passage of the amendment. But so would urban areas, proponents say.

More than 40 major flood protection and drainage projects in urban areas of Texas are planned over the next 40 years, at an estimated cost of $7.5 billion.

Begin urges rejection of Saudi peace plan

By The Associated Press

Prime Minister Menachem Begin says the Saudi blueprint for peace is a plan to "liquidate Israel" and urges President Reagan to reject it. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak says the plan offers a basis for dialogue some time in the future but contains nothing new.

The Israeli prime minister appealed to Washington in a TV interview Sunday "to reject without any equivocation whatsoever the eight points (outlined by) Crown Prince Fahd because they mean the opposite of peace."

In a letter sent Friday to Reagan, Begin said he disagreed with the U.S. position that the Saudis might be on the verge of recognizing Israel's right to exist as a state, according to an official who said he saw the letter .

THE OFFICIAL, who asked not to be identified, said the letter was friendly but firm and indicated Israel's fear that Washington is drifting too close to Saudi Arabia after Reagan's victory in winning Senate approval for the sale of AWACS radar planes and other arms to the Saudis.

In a switch in positions, the State Department said Friday it welcomed some aspects of the Saudi plan and had "some problems" with other parts. It said the United States was "encouraged" by the clause "asserting the rights of all states in the area to live in peace." State Department officials interpreted this to include Israel.

OTHER POINTS in the Saudi plan call on Israel to withdraw to surrender all; the territory it occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War, dismantle its settlements in occupied territory and agree to proclamation of an independent Palestinian state with East Jerusalem as its capital.

Begin, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers, said Israel will not withdraw to its 1967 boundaries because the long-range weapons its neighbors have acquired since then pose a threat to his country. And Israel has made all of Jerusalem its own capital and regards a Palestinian state as a potential base for its enemies.

In Cairo, Egyptian President Mubarak told a group of visiting American businessmen and journalists the Saudi peace plan "didn't bring anthing new, but there are some points which are encouraging. Other points...could be negotiated or be a good matter for any new dialogue in the future — but not now."

"WE ARE optimistic about the prospects for peace and stability," he said. "We are pursuing (the Palestinian) autonomy talks vigorously."

Egypt, Israel and the United States have postponed their next round of negotiations to try to work out a plan for local self-government for the Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip until Nov. 11, Cairo newspapers reported.

Mubarak said things are "now back to normal" in Egypt following the assassination of President Anwar Sadat on Oct. 6. He said police have arrested about 500 Moslem extremists linked to the assassination and subsequent unrest.

Jordan may be allowed to buy more U.S. weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jordan's King Hussein is opening talks with President Reagan amid signals that he may be allowed to buy additional U.S. weapons to keep him from turning to the Soviet Union for arms.

In advance of today's meeting with Reagan at the White House, however, U.S. officials said they did not expect to draw Hussein into the Camp David process for Middle East peace.

The 45-year-old monarch, who arrived in Washington on Sunday, also is to see Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and members of Congress before flying to Los Angeles on Thursday.

U.S. OFFICIALS, speaking anonymously before Hussein's visit, said he has expressed recent interest in buying weapons from the Soviets.

Jordan's military has been largely supplied with American arms for more than two decades, and one official said the United States may be receptive to a Jordanian request for more U.S. weapons.

"We have an interest, obviously, where Jordan would purchase its arms," the official said. "There could be problems with the introduction of Soviet weaponry in another country in the Middle East."

Other officials speculated that Hussein may be keeping his options open in an attempt to exert leverage on behalf of his own viewpoints on the future of the Middle East.

Hussein has remained aloof from the Camp David process.

He has expressed what one U.S. official describes as "deep-seated skepticism" that the talks between Egypt, Israel and the United States will produce a just and acceptable autonomy plan for Palestinian Arabs living in the Israeli occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

"WE WOULD NOT expect that at the end of this visit he would have his name on the line," said one official.

"In the final analysis what we want him to do is to develop a sense of confidence that this administration is going to move ahead with determination to produce a settlement," another official said.

Reagan and Haig said last week that an eight-point peace plan offered by Saudi Arabia is encouraging because it accepts the principle that all people in the Middle East should be permitted to "live in peace." They said that implies recognition of Israel.

Israeli leaders, however, oppose the plan's call for a Palestinian state, with its capital at Jerusalem.

"The king says he knows Israel better than any other Arab leader in the Middle East," one Reagan administration official said.

Nun raped, slain in convent

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The nuns of St. Francis convent offered prayers today for Sister Tadea Benz and for the man who beat, raped and strangled her in her second-floor convent room.

"We're saddened, of course, but now we've offered her up to God," said a nun who identified herself only as Sister Martha. "We've offered prayers for her just as we've offered prayers for the man who did this."

"We're heartbroken," added Sister Bernice Noggler.

Funeral services for the 76-year-old nun, a native of Switzerland who had been a resident of the convent here since 1944, were scheduled at 4 p.m. today. Peace Justice L.B. Bartlett said she had been strangled, noting "her larynx was crushed," and ruled the death a homicide.

Sister Tadea was found dead on the floor of her room early Saturday by other nuns who went to see why she had not attended mass that morning. However, they initially thought she had died from an accident or natural causes.

"There was not blood all over the place," said Sister Bernice. "There was a little spot of blood on her pillow as if she had had a hemorrhage."

Later that day, when the nuns found a broken pane of glass in the convent's commons room, police were summoned to investigate a possible burglary. In the course of that routine police visit, one of the nuns mentioned the death of Sister Tadea, but said she probably died from a fall.

THEY SAID THEY had washed her face, wrapped her in blankets and sent her to a funeral home for embalming, a funeral and burial.

Officers called Bartlett, the acting coroner. He ordered the funeral home to stop the embalming, then asked pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann to conduct an autopsy.

He said Erdman found that Sister Tadea had been sexually assaulted, strangled and badly beaten. Her left eye was blackened and her body was covered with "gouges," knuckle marks and stab wounds from her thighs to her neck, Bartlett said.

The nuns who found Sister Tadea in her room did not notice the black eye because blood covered it and missed the other injuries because she was "covered with a sheet and we didn't uncover her," said Sister Bernice.

"I noticed the wound on her neck," she said, "but the nurse said that when people have hemorrhages, they can't catch their breath and they sometimes scratch themselves.

"We're heartbroken," she added. "We know old nuns die but it was the manner in which she died. ... We want this guy caught."

"We don't have anything at this point," said police homicide Capt. Jimmy Davis on the progress of the investigation.

He said officers found two knives in the room, one of them with a bent blade. They also found a board outside the broken window and confiscated bloody sheets the nuns had taken from the room, he said.

It appeared the intruder's purpose was assault, not burglary, since nothing was taken from the convent, Davis said.

SISTER TADEA was last seen alive by the other nuns about 10 p.m. Friday, as she was sewing in a workroom. She was said to be a skilled seamstress who sold embroidery work to help support the convent. She also taught at St. Laurence Elementary School.

She was born in Marbach, Switzerland, and came to the United States from Colombia in 1932. She became a U.S. citizen in 1937 and a resident of the convent in 1944.

The slaying racalled the attack on a nun at the Sisters of Charity convent in New York Oct. 10. The nun was beaten, raped and had 27 cross cut into her body.

Supreme Court leaves Horton conviction intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact the 1979 conviction of West Texas financier Raymond Horton on charges of conspiring with convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes to conceal assets.

The justices, without comment, refused to hear arguments that Horton's conviction was based mainly on improper "hearsay" evidence.

Horton, of Midland, was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $10,000.

Estes, a fast-talking businessman from Pecos, Texas, who often bragged of his political connections, was convicted in the early 1960s for tax fraud.

HE STILL OWES the Internal Revenue Service tens of millions of dollars in back taxes.

Estes served several years in prison, and one of the conditions of his parole was that he not engage in any promotional activities.

The 1979 convictions of Estes and Horton centered on the government's undercover investigation of Estes' financial dealings.

Estes was convicted of trying to conceal his financial assets and of creating a scheme to bilk leasing companies out of more than $600,000 in an allegedly phony oil field equipment-cleaning operation. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison, and currently is an inmate at the federal penitentiary at Big Spring, Texas.

THE GOVERNMENT'S case against Estes and Horton was built largely on 29 hours of tape recordings made by undercover agents who posed as prospective investors and discussed business deals with Estes.

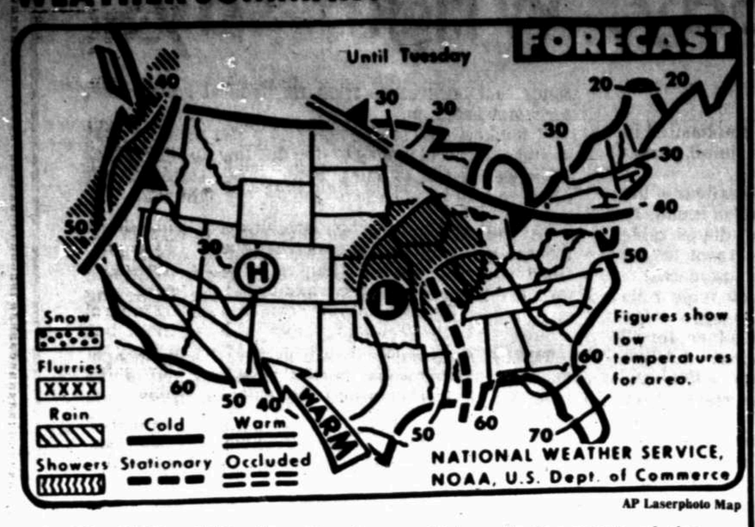

Horton's appeal argued that jurors should have been told that Estes' recorded comments to the undercover agents were, in regard to Horton, inadmissible hearsay.

The appeal said the recorded comments could be incriminating against Estes only.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected that argument in upholding Horton's conviction last May 28.

In other action the court agreed today to resolve whether people who sue or are sued in libel cases have to prove the truth or falsity of an allegedly libelous statement.

Time is running out for Clark's wedding

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Condemned killer Colin Clark said his mother and fiancee visited him Sunday in a vain effort to persuade him to change his mind and fight his execution scheduled for Thursday.

"Yeah, it's something we've talked about quite a bit. It is tearing them up and me up, Clark said by telephone after meeting with his mother, Jean Beavans; his fiancee, Shirley Hunter, and their 3-year-old son, Dylan, in the state prison at Angola.

But he said his decision to die remains firm, even though Richard Shapiro, the lawyer he fired when he gave up his most recent appeal, told him resuming it would put off electrocution for at least six months to a year.

"It's really difficult," he said, his voice flat and subdued. "I know it's really hurting a lot of people and I can see their view when they're here. But when they leave, I'm still here. And I'd stay here. I look down the road and there just isn't any hope."

Meanwhile, death penalty opponents planned somber protests in three Louisiana cities.

The Louisiana Committee Against the Death Penalty arranged evening gatherings in New Orleans and Lafayette, and a mass in Shreveport. Another rally was planned for Monday in Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Beavans, of Cairo, Ga., has an appeal pending before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, but Clark said he didn't expect it to be granted.

"I'm not really worried about it. I don't think anything's going to happen from that," he said. No ruling was expected before Monday.

Mrs. Beavans contends that Clark has become deranged from prison life and drugs. Her appeal, filed Saturday, said he needs psychiatric testing to show he is irrational.

Clark has said his mother was being influenced by the American Civil Liberties Union, which hired a lawyer to handle her case.

He said in Sunday's interview that he is not sure if he will be able to get documents from Talahassee, Fla., in time to allow him to marry Miss Hunter before the execution.

"I don't know. It is looking on the bad side. If I can't get my divorce papers by Tuesday it may be off," he said.

He has said he wants to marry Miss Hunter, of Houma, La., so his son will not bear the stigma of illegitimacy.

Clark, 27, asked for death from the jury that convicted him of killing Baton Rouge restaurant manager Fred Schmidt in 1978, although he maintains he is innocent of the murder.

He once changed his mind and got a stay of an April 5 execution date this year. He then reversed himself again this summer and announced his willingness to die.

Another death row inmate, Timothy Baldwin, is scheduled to die Nov. 14 for the 1978 bludgeon death of an 85-year-old West Monroe woman during a robbery.

FBI plans to review Levi rules on domestic security

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI plans to review its rules on domestic security investigations following the discovery that four radical leftist groups may have been involved in a murderous Brink's truck robbery.

At issue is whether those rules hamper the agency.

Five radical leftist Weather Underground members are under arrest following the Oct. 20 Brink's job in the New York City suburbs, a subsequent shootout and searches. Five members of the Black Panthers, Republic of New Africa and Black Liberation Army also are held or sought.

Reappearance of the four leftist groups, believed dormant or dead since the early 1970s, seems certain to renew a debate between the FBI and some conservatives over rules established in 1976 by Ford administration Attorney General Edward Levi.

Levi drew up the rules within the FBI to prevent abuses of civil liberties by the bureau like those uncovered by a Senate committee in the mid-1970s, some of which ultimately led to the criminal conviction of two of its top officials.

"We look regularly at these guidelines, and an incident like this automatically triggers a review to see whether we should have known about these people earlier," FBI assistant director Roger Young said in an interview last week.

"At first blush, it's hard to say there were any reasonable investigative steps that would have prevented this, but there's no clear answer yet," Young said.

The Senate security and terrorism subcommittee staff is collecting information on the case and will probably hold hearings, but not before next spring, said Steve Allen, an aide to subcommittee chairman Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala.

"This goes to what the subcommittee is all about: finding ways to prevent the epidemic of terrorism in other countries from coming here," Allen said. But, he added, "We're careful not to jump to conclusions and not to hold hearings before we're ready."

Young said the Brink's figures had not been targets of the FBI's 25 current domestic security investigations, because "we had not been able to connect criminal activity to them."

The debate centers on the criminal standard in the rules. Three years before the standard was imposed, the FBI had more than 21,000 open domestic security investigations, one of which had gone three decades without producing a criminal charge.

To open a full domestic security investigation with informants or agents infiltrating a target group, the bureau must have "specific and articulable facts giving reason to believe that an individual or a group may be engaged in activities which involve or will involve the use of force or violence and which involve or will involve the violation of federal law," the Levi rules say.

In a report by the conservative Heritage Foundation last January, Sam Francis, now on the terrorism subcommittee staff, said that standard should be scrapped in favor of investigations "initiated and pursued according to the best judgment of professional counterintelligence officers, limited only by the letter of applicable statutes."

One conservative congressional aide, who asked not to be identified, called the rules "a Catch-22. How can you know when a group begins planning a crime if you can't put an informant inside until they start?"

The Heritage report suggested some government surveillance — from keeping files of publications up to wiretaps and break-ins if necessary — of a list of groups ranging from the Progressive Labor Party to the Ku Klux Klan.

But in an interview three months later, FBI Director William Webster said, "We won't just pick and choose organizations to see if they are doing something they shouldn't be doing. The American people don't want us to do that."

Calling the standard "pretty good," Webster said, "I interpret it now to mean that if anyone is advocating force or violence whose background supports the conclusion that they have the ability and intention to carry it out, we have the right to find out just what's going on."

"We want to be sure we can get in soon enough to head off the bomb if that's possible, although we know it's not always possible," Webster added.

Since Webster took over the FBI, terrorist incidents in the United States dropped from about 100 a year to just 29 last year, though attacks are more frequently against life than property now.

Midlanders can enjoy autumn weather

Midlanders will be able to enjoy crisp autumn weather the next couple of days, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast calls for mild days and cool nights through Tuesday. The temperature tonight is expected to drop into the upper 30s with the high on Tuesday once again climbing up near 70.

Winds will be from the north and northwest 5-10 mph tonight, increasing to 10-15 mph on Tuesday.

The record high of 87, set in 1952, was 17 degrees warmer than Sunday's recorded high of 70. The overnight low of 43 was 16 degrees warmer than the record low of 27 set in 1966.

Local woman hospitalized after accident

A Midland woman was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after the car she was driving collided with a tractor-trailer rig on Interstate 20 Sunday afternoon.

Petra Bermia, 33, of Route 3, Midland, suffered multiple contusions and a compound fracture of the leg in the accident, which occurred six miles west of Midland about 3:45 p.m.

According to police reports, her eastbound 1975 Ford struck the rear of a truck driven by Eugene Lawrence, 45, of Louis, Miss. She was pinned in the wreckage and the Fire Department's Jaws of Life had to be used to extricate her. Lawrence was not injured. A small fire erupted but was quickly extinguished.

Council adopts parking garage resolution

In a brief, special session this morning, the City Council adopted three resolutions — two on Tuesday's consitutional amendment election, and one in support of a proposed new downtown parking garage to be built by a private firm using tax-free revenue bonds.

The garage, which must be built within or adjacent to a blighted area in order to gain the Texas Industrial Commission bonds, will be constructed by the Wilkerson Realty Co. of Midland at the southwest corner of Wall Avenue and Big Spring Street. City officials say the area is adjacent to a blighted area. A date for a public hearing on the matter will be announced later.

The amendment resolutions support Propositions One and Four on Tuesday's ballot. Prop One would allow taxing bodies to grant exemptions on property in a reinvestment zone to encourage development or redevelopment of the zone. Prop 4 would allow half the state's excessi tax revenue to be established in a water development and conservation fund.

Polls listed

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday for Midlanders to make a decision on the seven constitutional amendments — the only items on the ballot.

U.S.-Russia future hopeful

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A year after Ronald Reagan's election as President, the United States and the Soviet Union appear to be moving quietly and cautiously toward a renewed dialogue.

Despite continuing public recriminations, including charges that each side is seeking military superiority, experts here say the two superpowers seem ready to talk over their differences and seek ways to limit or reduce nuclear arsenals.

In the past few months, official high-level contacts between the countries have markedly increased after a virtual freeze; the two countries have agreed to talks on the nuclear balance in Europe; and the United States has pronounced itself ready for strategic arms talks early in 1982. Moscow has been advocating such talks for months.

U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union have also accelerated, and Washington has assigned a full ambassador to Moscow for the first time since last January.

In addition, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's offer, made last February, of a summit meeting with Reagan apparently still remains open.

For all these reasons, opinion is growing that the rhetoric of the past year may have outstripped the reality of the U.S.-Soviet conflict. Important aspects of relations between the two countries may not have deteriorated since Reagan's election last November as much as harsh public exchanges might suggest.

"The Russians have been put on the defensive and irritated by the political offensive of the Reagan administration," claims a foreign specialist in East-West affairs who asked that his name not be used. "But they are also aware that the administration is not relentlessly hostile to them."

He said the Soviets almost certainly have noted the Reagan administration's apparent decision to honor the SALT II nuclear arms limitation treaty, despite the administration's opposition to it.

Reagan also has ordered a scaled-down version of the MX missile system, ignoring claims that the smaller version cannot stand up against a Soviet first strike.

An increase in personal contacts between Soviet and U.S. officials appears to be helping relations between the superpowers.

In July, after six months without any high-level talks between the countries, a Soviet official told a reporter: "Soviet-American relations are at a dead end. We have had only words from Haig. There has been no improvement of relations."

But in late October, the same Soviet official appeared more optimistic. He said the September meeting in New York between Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko was "a good start" toward improving relations.

The Soviets are also thought to be pleased that the new U.S. ambassador, Arthur A. Hartman, is a career diplomat.

Presenting his credentials to Soviet officials, Hartman said, "We will work for a constructive East-West relationship, for genuine arms control, and for the resolution of disputes by negotiation."

Negotiations are due to start Nov. 30 on the nuclear-arms balance in Europe. Haig and Gromyko have said they will meet again early next year, when the United States has said it is ready for talks on the overall strategic balance.

Both sides face growing pressure to talk.

With mass demonstrations in Western Europe against nuclear weapons, the United States may have to negotiate or face cracks in the NATO alliance.

The Soviets, who are now providing heavy economic aid to Poland and facing a disappointing grain harvest at home for the third straight year, can ill afford an expensive arms race.

No one doubts that the arms negotiations will prove difficult. The SALT II treaty, signed by Brezhnev and President Jimmy Carter in 1979 but never ratified by the U.S. Senate, took seven years to negotiate.

Further complicating the picture is what the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda recently called an "air of mutual suspicion" between the superpowers.

Here, as in the United States, fears are voiced about the possibility of a surprise first nuclear attack.

Much as the United States worries about Soviet-backed encroachment in the Americas, the Soviets claim to see Washington's hand in problem areas on their own border

U.S. autos rank high on mileage

By STEPHEN JONES
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Foreign cars have a reputation for fuel economy that is reinforced each year by their domination of the Environmental Protection Agency's highly publicized list of the top 10 high-mileage cars.

But EPA statistics also show U.S.-made cars generally get better mileage than imports in 12 of the 16 weight classes where domestic and imported makes are directly competitive.

And in the most popular categories of compact and subcompact cars, categories accounting for about 57 percent of the U.S. market, domestic makes have superior average fuel economy in eight of nine weight classes.

"The domestic producers have put their money on the line and they have achieved what they started out to do, which was to develop a fuel-efficient, front-wheel-drive car," said Arvid Jouppi, a Detroit-based analyst for Rooney, Pace Inc. "The product, as far as fuel-efficiency, size and everything, is competitive" with the imports.

The apparent contradiction stems from the fact that the top 10 list is dominated by subcompact cars with diesel engines — a market segment that has yet to prove profitable for American automakers.

"It is interesting that small diesels are a dominant item in the top 10, but it is also interesting that these are generally low-volume cars that account for only about 2 percent of industry sales," said a Ford Motor Co. analyst who regularly requests anonymity.

Of this year's 10 most fuel-efficient cars, all were subcompacts and eight had diesel engines. Only one of the 10, the Chevrolet Chevette with a Japanese-made diesel engine, is a domestic car.

"It's not a foreign versus domestic argument nearly so much as it is a technological argument," said Randal Busick, assistant chief of the EPA branch that certifies the mileage tests.

"I think people are observing that the top 10 are all foreign cars when they really ought to be observing that they're all new-technology cars, front-wheel-drive and diesel," he said.

Busick said American automakers have all the same technology available to them but apparently have not used it extensively in the smallest-car categories because low sales volume has kept it from being profitable.

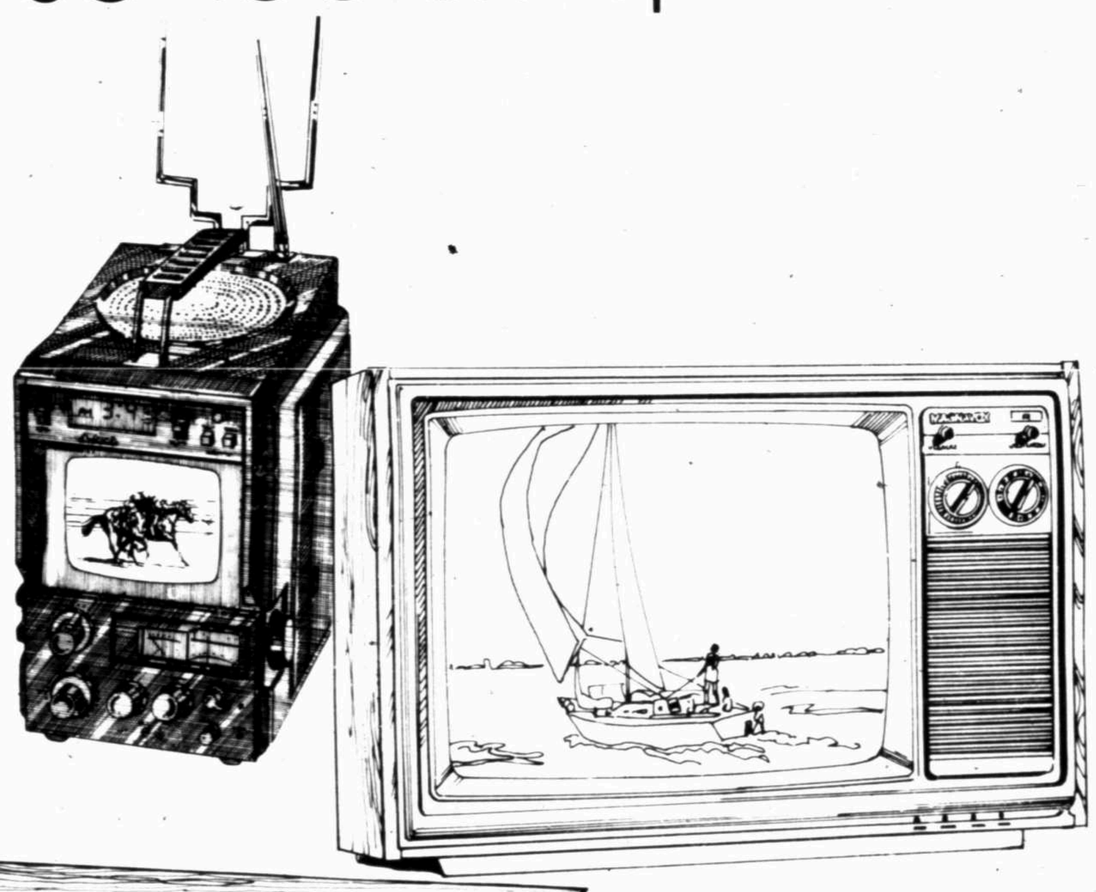

"The Japanese have really dominated the 'econo-box' market," said David Healy, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert in New York.

"I don't think there's any great technological difference between a Japanese car in a given weight class and an American car in the same weight class," he said. But "I just don't think the U.S. companies, with their costs, can compete in that part of the market."

Healy said the major U.S. automakers appear to be relying on agreements with overseas partners to supply cars for the highest-mileage "mini-car" market.

Chrysler already has entries in that market through an agreement with its Japanese partner, Mitsubishi Motors Corp. The No. 3 U.S. automaker markets the Dodge Colt and Plymouth Champ built by Mitsubishi and one model of each car was on the EPA's top 10 mileage list for 1982.

We'll all pay for TMI

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter who you are and no matter how far you live from Harrisburg, Pa., you'll be helping foot the bill for cleaning up after the billion-dollar nuclear accident at Three Mile Island.

The accident happened March 28, 1979, and the plant still sits — idle and dangerous — with eight feet of radioactive water on the floor.

Even after it's decontaminated, the damaged reactor may never produce electricity again.

Whether the cleanup money comes from utility bills, stock dividends, taxes or — as is likely — a combination of the three, all Americans will be dunned for decontamination costs.

Already, the federal government has spent $12 million on radiation research at the disabled plant. Another $19 million is budgeted for this year.

Now Congress must decide whether to endorse a Reagan administration recommendation to spend $100 million more for cleanup. Congress is also weighing legislation that would force utility companies nationwide to contribute to the project.

General Public Utilities Corp., owner of the crippled Three Mile Island plant, is warning that without government help it will go bankrupt. Utility analysts have told Congress that GPU's bankruptcy would shrivel capital investment in electric utilities and cripple the entire industry.

Not everyone buys that argument.

"It's a game of nuclear chicken. Who's going to be the first to blink, the Congress or GPU?" said Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., who opposes federal cleanup aid for TMI. "If we blink because of their threat, we end up picking up part of the tab that belongs squarely on the shoulders of the utility industry."

Markey and other opponents of federal aid for TMI believe utility companies would produce the money to buoy GPU if there were no possibility of federal help.

And the plea for federal funds is particularly galling to lawmakers who were forced to cut job training projects and the school lunch program this year under the Reagan administration's austere spending program.

"It's a budget-busting bailout of a privately owned utility," said Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., chairman of the House energy conservation and power subcommittee. "The Reagan administration continues to spout its rhetoric about the magic of the marketplace while it quietly spends millions of dollars to save the nuclear industry from the verdict of the marketplace."

Utility executives claim that some federal responsibility for nuclear accidents was implied when the U.S. government offered financial incentives to build nuclear power plants. Opponents of federal aid note that the utilities have never shared their profits with the government.

In addition, the utility executives say the Energy Department and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will benefit from research and development conducted during cleanup at the plant.

"The federal government spent $12.8 billion in 1979 dollars from 1950 to 1979 to encourage the commercial use of nuclear power," Louis T. Austin Jr., nuclear task force chairman of the Edison Electric Institute, told Ottinger's subcommittee this fall.

"The TMI accident demonstrated that neither the efforts of the federal government nor the electric utility industry were sufficient to avoid the (resultant) loss. We both have an underlying responsibility to learn from the experience and assist in decontaminating the facility," Austin said.

But in the Republican-controlled Senate, where approval of federal cleanup money is expected, Democratic opponents say manufacturers of nuclear hardware should help pay for cleanup before the government steps in.

"Companies like Westinghouse and Babcock & Wilcox who make the reactors and profit handily from the nuclear program haven't been asked to come up with any of the funding," Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said.

The EEI, which represents 200 utilities, has pledged to contribute $192 million for the cleanup. To make it easier for EEI members to collect that money from ratepayers, the organization has asked for legislation making the contribution mandatory.

So far, the cleanup of TMI is estimated to cost about $1 billion, but further delays could escalate the cost. GPU has exhausted its $300 million in available nuclear insurance money to vent gas from the plant and prepare for chemical decontamination.

To produce an additional $700 million, Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh has proposed a funding plan endorsed by President Reagan.

Under Thornburgh's plan, the utility industry and the federal government each would pay $190 million, while GPU would pay $245 million and the states of Pennsylvania and New Jersey would contribute a total of $45 million.

Critics, pointing to the Reagan administration's promise of only $123 million, predict that the governor's plan will sputter for lack of funds — a suggestion that infuriates Thornburgh.

"This is not an excercise for bean counters. What we have accomplished is that the president of the United States now acknowledges that TMI is a financial priority," Thornburgh said in an interview.

"I cannot tell you the exact dollar amount of what the federal government will eventually pay.

Move over Anita — Bill would prohibit funding for colleges with pro-sex groups

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's Supreme Court will hear arguments Monday on a controversial addition to the state spending bill warning public universities they will lose funding if they allow on campus groups that advocate sex between unmarried people.

Homosexual rights groups, student leaders and top state education officials have expressed opposition to the measure. Attorneys for Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington and the University of South Florida say the amendment, sponsored by Rep. Tom Bush and Sen. Alan Trask, violates the constitutional guarantee of free speech and threatens free assembly.

They also argue it changes state law on matters other than spending, and was "inserted in the appropriations bill to escape normal legislative processes."

"The constitutional guarantee of free speech applies not only to popular speech, but also to unpopular speech," Turlington's attorneys said in briefs filed with the high court. "Legislation like the Trask-Bush amendment cannot be justified because the targeted communications are offensive, disgusting,sickening or immoral."

The amendment says, in part, "No funds appropriated herein shall be used to finance any state-supported public or private post-secondary educational institution that charters or gives official recognition or knowingly gives assistance to or provides meeting facilities for any group or organization that recommends or advocates sexual relations between persons not married to each other."

The lawmakers designed the amendment to ban homosexual groups from state campuses. But at the universities of Florida and South Florida, the homosexual groups' charters say nothing about sex between umarried people, campus officials said.

At USF, however, various student government members created a group — Sigma Epsilon Chi, or SEX — whose only purpose was to advocate sex between unmarried people. The group promised to sue the university if denied registration as a student organization, so USF entered Turlington's suit.

"If the court rules the language to be constitutional, we plan to deny registration to the student organization that has requested it, simple as that," said Dan Walbolt, USF's vice president for student affairs.

A federal judge in Tampa, ruling on a temporary restraining order sought by USF, ordered that money continue to flow to the 23,000-student university. In a ruling on a separate suit filed by the state, Leon County Circuit Judge John Rudd upheld Bush-Trask, saying Turlington didn't demonstrate how his constitutional rights were violated. The 1st District Court of Appeal sent the matter straight to the Supreme Court.

Attorneys for Comptroller Gerald Lewis and Secretary of State George Firestone said in briefs that state laws clearly allow for "proviso language" in the budget to detail any qualifications or restrictions on spending. They also argue the amendment doesn't deny money for higher education.

"Contrarily, the proviso is designed to assure adequate appropriations for education purposes by assuring that appropriated moneys not be spent for a specified non-educational purpose," the brief stated.

Gov. Bob Graham said the language looked constitutionally "suspect," but he didn't veto it because he would have, under the state constitution, vetoed the entire appropriations bill.

Accidents and deaths mar Halloween

A 13-year-old boy shot to death as he trick-or-treated in a soldier's uniform and a man who accidentally hanged himself while peforming a stunt were among six people to die in Halloween-related incidents.

A 58-year-old Louisiana man whose son was killed in the Vietnam War was being held on $250,000 bond Sunday on a charge of murder in the death of a boy who arrived at his door Saturday night dressed as a soldier carrying a toy submachine gun.

Daniel Kevin Breaux was shot once in the chest as he and two other boys waited for treats on Robert James Bouton's front porch in Baton Rouge, deputies said.

"They rang the doorbell and he answered the door," said Sgt. Chris Browning. "He slammed the door, ran to his bedroom and got his .357-caliber Magnum and came back out.

"He stepped out on the porch, said something to the effect that 'You think it's funny, huh?' and he shot him," Browning said.

Bouton, 58, told investigators he had been frightened by a recent rash of armed robberies and rapes, police said.

In Parma, Ohio, Ernest Pacek, 23, died from a stab wound from a knife embedded in a board strapped to the front of his vampire costume. He apparently sent the knife into his chest accidentally with a hammer as he was pounding it into the board, or perhaps fell on it, officer Thomas Zippilli said.

In New Orleans, a man wearing a Halloween mask killed another man in an apparently unprovoked shooting Saturday night in a housing project hallway, police said. There was no suspect in the slaying of Lawrence Mackey, 40, detectives said.

Robert Cecil Huntley, 52, died in Niagara-on-the Lake, Ontario, when he apparently slipped while staging a mock hanging in a stunt he had performed for years to entertain trick-or-treaters.

Two people were killed and 13 were injured when a wagon full of people out for a Halloween hayride was struck by a car near Mount Pleasant, Mich., state police said. Police said the accident was being investigated and no charges had been filed.

A Tucson, Ariz., girl remained in critical condition Sunday after being severely burned when her Halloween costume caught fire. Lynn Rundle, 11, suffered second-degree burns over 45 percent of her body after her straw skirt caught fire when she stood next to a pumpkin with a burning candle inside while trick-or-treating.

Police in Dearborn, Mich., said two brothers were shot by a passing motorist who saw them uprooting political signs as a Halloween prank. The two were treated for abdominal and leg wounds.

In Winnsboro, La., a 24-year-old woman and the two small children she took trick-or-treating were hit by shotgun pellets when an argument they had stopped to watch erupted in gunfire, deputies said. All three were released from a hospital and two 18-year-olds were arrested, officials said.

There were were several fights and a stabbing in Madison, Wis., when about 40,000 costumed revelers showed up for the annual Wisconsin Student Association Halloween party.

Daniel Goodwin signs in at a Chicago police station where he was charged with disorderly conduct and released on a $35 bond after he abandoned his efforts to scale the 1,107-foot John Hancock building Sunday morning in Chicago.

'Spider-Man' attempt fails

CHICAGO (AP) — An attempt by a professional acrobat dressed as Spider-Man to scale the 1,107-foot John Hancock Center ended when the stunt man's equipment apparently failed to do the job.

The acrobat, Daniel Goodwin of Kennebunkport, Maine, abandoned his efforts Sunday when the suction cups he uses for climbing would not stick to the building's surface.

Last May, Goodwin was more successful when he climbed the world's tallest building — the Sears Tower — on Memorial Day. He reached the top after a 7½-hour adventure in which he used metal binders, suction cups and rope to scale the 1,454 foot, 110-story building.

Police said Goodwin started to climb the 100-story John Hancock Center early Sunday morning while wearing a red-and-blue Spider-Man outfit before he was rescued by a Fire Department hook-and-ladder unit at the building's second story and brought safely to the ground.

He was charged with disorderly conduct and released on a $35 cash bond, police said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Thomas has left his role on Broadway, but he's vowing to return to the Great White Way as a song-and-dance man.

Thomas, who played John-Boy in the television series "The Waltons," passed his role in the play "Fifth of July" to Timothy Bottoms Sunday. But he said he will be back on the stage next year in a musical.

"I can't say what it is because it's still in the discussion stage," said Thomas, 30, "but I can tell you it's a classic — a great role with singing, dancing, comedy and marvelous characterizations."

Later this month, he is to appear in "Barefoot in the Park" in Seattle.

SUN CITY WEST, Ariz. (AP) — Compensation offered by the federal government to the 52 Americans who were held hostage in Iran is "totally inadequate," says Robert Ode, one of the former captives.

The former hostages have been offered about $5,550, in addition to back pay, for their 14 months in captivity.

"We lived in danger of our lives and under prison conditions for 444 days and I think the amount recommended by the president's commission is totally inadequate," Ode said in an interview Sunday with the Arizona Republic, a Phoenix newspaper.

"The niggardly sum of $12.50 a day is an insult to the hostages who served their country well," Ode said.

Ode, 65, said taxpayers need not pay for the compensation "because Iran, when it becomes more stable, will want to have diplomatic ties with the U.S."

Reimbursement of the compensation should be a condition of the re-establishment of those ties, said the career State Department employee who came out of retirement for what was to be a six-week temporary assignment in Tehran.

Astronauts flying in for shuttle launch

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Joe Engle and Richard Truly were flying here today, eager to take the shuttle Columbia on its second mission and fulfill a dream of space flight that long has eluded both military pilots.

Columbia's countdown was advancing without a hitch toward a launch at 7:30 a.m. EST Wednesday, and, with the weather outlook brightening, officials were optimistic they would make it right on time.

"We've got our hearts set on 7:30 a.m. Wednesday," said Clyde Netherton, a countdown planner with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Major activity on the pad today was the loading of chemicals for the craft's electrical and environmental systems.

COLUMBIA IS the first spaceship scheduled to make a return trip to orbit, and success will be a major milestone in transforming it into a space truck making routine trips out there.

Engle and Truly were to pilot separate T-38 NASA jets to Cape Canaveral from the Johnson Space Center in Houston, arriving at nearby Patrick Air Force Base in mid-afternoon.

While ground crews refuel their jets, they were to make a few remarks to reporters. Then they were to take off again to fly some fast proficiency patterns over central Florida. One goal: to adjust their inner ears to accelerations to reduce the possibility of motion sickness in orbit.

Motion sickness often has bothered astronauts on their first trips in space, and Engle and Truly both are rookies, although they have a combined total of 31 years as astronauts.

Each had hoped to make a flight years ago. But Engle, a 49-year-old Air Froce colonel, was bumped from the final Apollo moon flight in 1969 by a geologist. And Truly, a 43-year-old Navy captain, saw his dream delayed when the Defense Department canceled a military man-in-space project in 1969.

"It's been a long time coming," Truly said in a recent interview.

"I've waited long enough," Engle, the Columbia commander, said. "I'm ready to go, and I'm really looking forward to it."

THE FIRST shuttle mission was flown by one civilian, commander John Young, and one military pilot, Navy Capt. Robert Crippen.

Engle and Truly were reported in good spirits as they met with flight controllers in Houston on Sunday and received word that the countdown to Columbia Launch II was on time.

Weather forecasters also had good news for them. They said rains and high winds that have buffeted the launch area for several days would diminish, and they predicted acceptable conditions for Wednesday.

If rain does fall on launch day, after hundreds of thousands of gallons of super-cold fuels have been loaded into the huge external fuel tank, the flight would have to be scrubbed for at least two days. Officials said the rain could freeze on the outside of the tank, and if Columbia were launched, chunks of ice could vibrate off and perhaps damage the vehicle.

THE COUNTDOWN, which began Saturday, resumed before midnight Sunday after a planned 8-hour hold designed to provide catchup time in case crews fell behind. But the count had gone so smoothly that it actually was ahead of schedule, so the NASA pre-launch teams got some welcome rest.

Among items activated on the pad Sunday was a $2 million, quick-fix water system that will pour 400,000 gallons of water in 35 seconds into the shuttle's launch exhaust to absorb a potentially dangerous shock wave.

On Columbia's first flight, ignition of the two solid-fuel booster rockets created a pressure wave four times greater than anticipated. It rippled through the length of the 122-foot shuttle and damaged five support struts. The damage did not affect the mission, but officials were concerned it could cause a problem on later flights and devised the water system as an antidote.

Elvis doctor to return to stand

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dr. George C. Nichopoulos faced questioning today from prosecution attorneys on charges he overprescribed narcotics, sedatives and amphetamines for Elvis Presley and eight other people.

Nichopoulos, 54, is on trial in Criminal Court charged with prescribing excessive and illegal quantities of drugs for Presley, Lewis and seven other patients. Two of the counts accuse the internal medicine specialist of prescribing addictive drugs to patients — Lewis and Presley — who were already addicted to pills.

Judge Bernie Weinman has dismissed three counts of the indictment.

Nichopoulos took the stand last week and was questioned by his attorney, James F. Neal.

Principals in Cody controversy still silent

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — When Cardinal John Cody mingles with his public these days, he receives a hero's welcome. But the ovations and plaudits are, in fact, reminders of the controversy haunting the cardinal.

Allegations of misuse of church money have dogged the aging Cody for the last seven weeks. Television crews and reporters have trailed the cardinal, recording nearly every public speech and each burst of applause that inevitably follows.

The Archdiocese of Chicago — the nation's largest — also has been unable to escape the simmering controversy, especially when the mail arrives.

SOME 10,000 letters from around the world have flooded the archdiocesan office and the overwhelming majority of them are reassuring Cody of unwavering support, said Peter Foote, Cody's spokesman.

But while his public is praising and the media is watching, the principals in the delicate investigation are tight-lipped.

There are no readily visible signs of a government investigation of Cody to determine whether there is truth in allegations that he diverted up to $1 million in tax-exempt church money to his lifelong friend and relative by marriage, Helen Dolan Wilson.

Lawyers for Cody and the government began refusing comment shortly after the Chicago Sun-Times disclosed the investigation last month.

"The government can't comment and it wouldn't be fair for us to comment," said Don Reuben, Cody's lawyer, who earlier said his client is answerable only to God and the Vatican, not the Sun-Times.

CODY, TOO, HAS been silent in recent weeks after initially denouncing the Sun Times articles, saying an attack on the shepherd is an attack on the entire Roman Catholic church.

The 73-year-old Cody has denied flatly any wrongdoing and has promised to deliver a response to any specific allegations. His spokesman said a team of archdiocese staffers is working on that response.

Though Cody has said much about the controversy recently, Foote said the supporters — from bishops to parishioners — have been quite open about their feelings.

"The pattern of support is very clear," Foote said. "Every place he goes, he receives a half-minute to a minute ovation." Cody, he said, "has got friends in a great many places."

Not that there hasn't been dissension. Foote said of the 10,000 letters received by the archdiocese, about 140 of them — many of them unsigned — were not supportive.

"There were negative comments he did receive," Foote said. "There's no question about them."

AND THE Cody investigation also prompted another brouhaha within ecclesiastical circles.

Last month, the Chicago Lawyer, a legal publication, reported that the Rev. Andrew Greeley, a syndicated columnist and outspoken Cody critic, masterminded a scheme to oust Cody as part of a plot to rig a papal election.

Greeley denied the allegations and said he played no role in any Cody investigation, although he said that if he had done so "it would have been neither criminal or immoral."

Despite the allegations of Greeley's meddling, Univeral Press Syndicate, which distributes the priest's column to some 100 newspapers — including 40 Catholic publications — says it received no complaints.

Court to hear arguments on execution of juveniles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is hearing arguments over whether the constitutional ban on cruel and unusual punishment bars the execution of juveniles.

At stake is the fate of Monty Lee Eddings, who four years ago at age 16 killed an Oklahoma state trooper with a sawed-off shotgun.

Jay Baker, arguing for Eddings, was scheduled to tell the justices today that executing anyone under age 18 at the time of the offense would be inconsistent with generally accepted standards of decency.

BUT DAVID Lee, an Oklahoma assistant attorney general, was expected to tell the justices that it is up to state legislatures, not the courts, to define appropriate criminal penalties.

The state also argues that the age of a defendant should be considered only as a "mitigating circumstance" when the death penalty is involved.

According to forces working for the abolition of capital punishment, 126 people 18 or younger have been executed in the United States. The youngest was 14-year-old George Stinney Jr., electrocuted in South Carolina in 1944 for murder.

The most recent execution of someone under 18 was Joe Henry Johnson, 17, who died in Alabama for murder in 1961.

As of May 1, 17 of the more than 800 death row inmates nationwide were under 18 at the time of their crimes.

EDDINGS, described in court documents as having deep emotional problems, fled from his Camdenton, Mo., home on April 4, 1977, and took three other juveniles with him.

Larry Crabtree, an Oklahoma highway patrolman, stopped Eddings' car on outside Tulsa the same day after receiving a report that the car earlier had swerved from the highway surface.

"If the ... cop harasses me, I'll shoot him," Eddings told his passengers, according to court testimony.

As Crabtree approached, he was shot in the chest.

In May 1978, after entering a no-contest plea to the murder charge, Eddings became the youngest person to be sentenced to death in Oklahoma.

He has been held on death row at the McAlester State Penitentiary.

THE EDDINGS case is the first of two key death penalty cases the Supreme Cout is to decide this term. The justices also have agreed to decide the constitutionality of executing convicted accomplices of criminals who kill someone during a major crime.

At issue in that case is whether people can be sentenced to die under "felony murder" laws — that is, criminals who didn't carry out the slaying and didn't mean to cause anyone's death.

Shaping Texas' future

There are many good reasons for making your voice heard in Tuesday's constitutional amendment election. We've stressed about all of them at elections before: Patriotism, civic obligation, taking an active role in the political life of the city, state and nation.

Those are all good reasons. Any one of them is more than sufficient to justify participation in our political process. But in Tuesday's election, there's yet another — vastly important — reason for us to vote.

Texas, like other Sunbelt states, is experiencing a tremendous influx of people and industries from the snowbelt states. According to the State Comptroller's office, between 1970 and 1980 Texas' population grew by about three million people. That population trend is likely to continue in future years.

This high growth trend is good for the state in ways, but with it come unavoidable pressures created in large part by the demands of a large population. To adequately prepare for those needs the state's legislators have taken steps that require action by voters during Tuesday's election. The seven proposed constitutional amendments all are important, but some — like the proposal to establish a water trust fund — are vital if the state is to weather this continuing period of high growth without adverse consequences.

Other amendments — like the one that would establish tax increment financing plans and tax abatement programs — are important because of what they offer the state's cities in terms of avoiding the urban decay that has been particularly damaging to cities in other parts of the nation.

It is important that voters adequately familiarize themselves on the merits of all the proposed amendments. It's extremely important that they take the few minutes it will require to stop by a polling place and cast their ballots.

We each have the power and the responsibility to help shape the future of this dynamic state. That's a responsibility we must not take lightly.

Be sure to vote Tuesday.

Year of the insect?

This may well be the year of the insect.

The medfly has been raising havoc in California and also making its presence known in Florida. In between those two states, the Chicago area has its hands full with a record invasion of yellow jackets.

Most people look upon yellow jackets as bees, which is an insult to the mild-mannered honeymakers who generally sting only when they are attacked. Yellow jackets are a breed of wasps that will sting at the slightest provocation.

The number of yellow jackets has doubled in the Windy City during the last two years, keeping exterminators on the run.

Bee production has dwindled vastly this year, which is unfortunate because they have a touch of class the wasp will never attain. Honey bees feast solely on nectar pollen while yellow jackets enjoy swarming around garbage cans and will eat anything they are able to chew.

The present problem may be considerably worse next fall as the yellow jacket population is expected to double unless the area has a bitter winter to help reduce the potential 1982 crop of more mean stingers. Past warm winters have allowed more breeding females to survive in their nest and provide more mature offspring for the following September.

It's not a happy choice, painful bites in autumn or bitter cold in winter. Either way, one seems certain to be a loser.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 2, 1981. There are 59 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 2, 1917, Britain's Balfour Declaration on Palestine called for the establishment of a Jewish national state.

On this date:

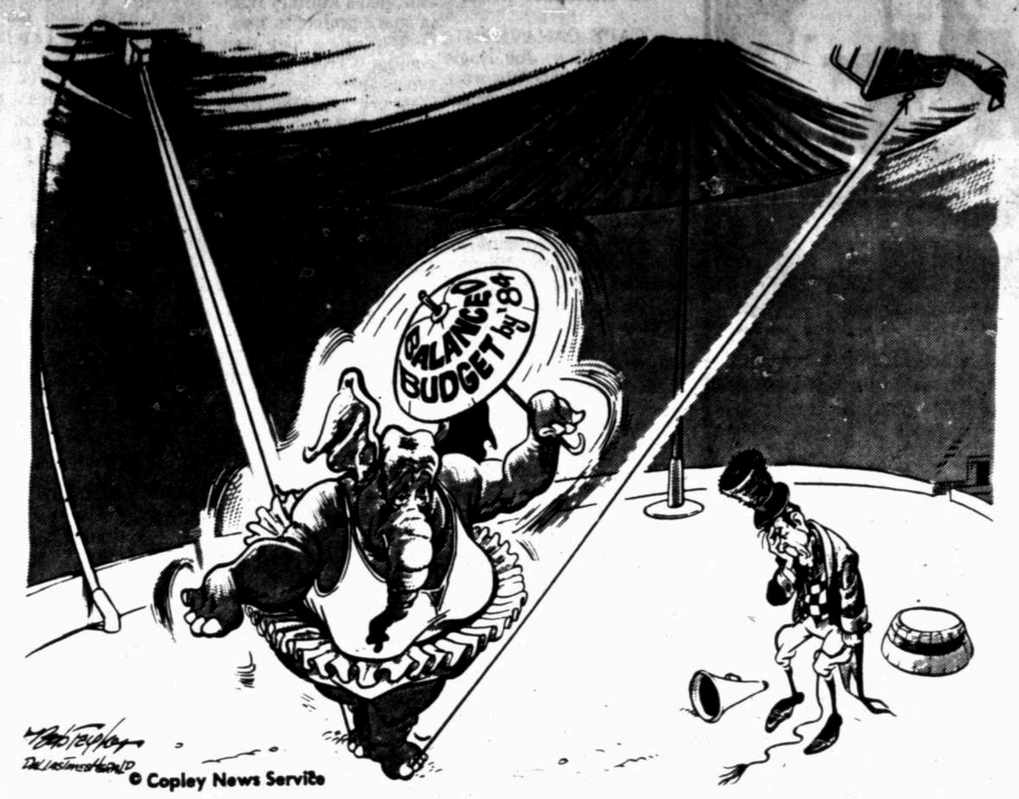

In 1930, Haile Selassie was crowned emperor of Ethiopia.

In 1956, the Hungarian government renounced the Communist-bloc's Warsaw Treaty.

In 1964, King Saud of Saudi Arabia was deposed and succeeded by King Faisal.

And in 1967, white mercenaries and black troops invaded the Congo from Portuguese Angola.

Ten years ago: The Nobel Prize for physics was awarded to Dr. Dennis Cabor of the United States, who developed 3-D photography.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Generals considered Greek election plan

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon stopped short of meddling in the recent Greek election and possibly blocking the controversial Andreas Papandreou from coming to power.

Jack Anderson

During the election campaign, he swore to withdraw Greece from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. This would leave the southern flank of Western Europe dangerously exposed.

The Greek government then in power asked the Pentagon to send combat troops to Greece. The American presence, it was thought, might bolster the government and head off Papandreou's socialist challenge.

The idea received some support inside the Pentagon. A secret proposal, drawn up in Europe and forwarded to Washington, called for stationing a U.S. Army division in Turkey and half a Marine division in Greece. The 82nd Airborne, a crack troubleshooting division, would have been deployed to southern Europe.

The intention not only was to strengthen our Mediterranean defenses but to undercut Papandreou. This was acknowledged in the secret plan, whose proponents argued: "Even if you believe it does not make military sense, there are political imperatives."

Pentagon sources told my associate Bob Sherman that the secretary of the Army once endorsed the plan but was overruled by higher-ups in the Defense Department hierarchy.

Advocates still want to make these moves on the military chessboard. But the biggest obstacle now would be Papandreou who has questioned his country's NATO connection, declaring that the alliance offered only feeble protection if a conflict erupted and would merely result in unnecessary Greek bloodshed. He has now been elected Greece's first socialist prime minister.

OLYMPIC SCANDAL: A nasty drug scandal involving U.S. Army athletes has been uncovered in the little-known Olympic sports of the Pentathlon and Biathlon. According to an intensive investigation, an Army doctor at the Pentathlon training center at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, prescribed sedatives to military sharpshooters trying out for the American Olympic team.

This was in flagrant violation of both Army and Olympic rules which ban the use of nerve and muscle relaxants for competitors in the two events. The participants compete in such sports as marksmanship, swimming, horseback riding, fencing and running.

According to an investigative report by the Army's inspector general, the sharpshooters resorted to the taboo drugs in 1978 and 1979 to steady their nerves and enhance their scores.

In one instance, the investigators charge, Army doctor Col. William A. Taylor Jr. prescribed 20 milligrams of Inderal, a nerve relaxant, to a soldier-marksman an hour before a pistol-shooting competition. Another military competitor took five milligrams of Valium prior to the same event.

Other banned prescription drugs such as Librium, Lomotil, Proprandol and Proponal were also provided.

The pistol scores of the Army team members were noticeably higher in 1979 than in the 1976 Olympics — so much that the United States was favored to win the event at the 1980 games. The U.S. boycott of the Moscow Olympics saved the Army athletes from a tainted victory.

The Army hasn't yet decided what to do about the charges. Meanwhile, the team physician and one coach have been transferred from the Sam Houston training center.

Sources told my reporter Monica McKenna that the Army team has been drug-free for the past two years, with a corresponding drop in its scores.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Assistant Attorney General Jonathan Rose, erstwhile underling to Richard M. Nixon, wants to gut the Freedom of Information law. No wonder. In the early 1970s, he received some disagreeable publicity (1) for avoiding combat duty in Vietnam by claiming a shoulder injury, though he was an ardent tennis and squash player; and (2) for peddling pro-Nixon speeches to receptive senators during the ITT investigation. Rose would like to shut up inquisitive reporters.

— Regulators at the Environmental Protection Agency have become pussycats. Of 61 court cases pending against waste polluters, only six have been filed this year. Yet the General Accounting Office recently found that 96 percent of the sites inspected failed to pass EPA standards to protect the public from poisonous dumping.

— The Big Three of President Reagan's National Security Council are White House security adviser Richard Allen, Secretary of State Alexander Haig and CIA Director William Casey. On Capitol Hill, they have been dubbed "Wynken, Blynken and Nod." Explained a wag: Allen is Wynken because he looks the other way when uncomfortable issues arise; Haig is Blynken because of his blundering statements; and Casey is Nod because he naps during briefings.

— Fired members of the air traffic controllers' union have recently found themselves blacklisted also by the Saudi Arabians who are willing to use U.S. AWACS in the air but not American knowhow in their control towers. My sources say the Saudi boycott was imposed at the urging of the Reagan administration.

INSIDE REPORT:

Issue in New Jersey race to set the trend for the '80s

NEWARK, N.J. — The managers of Rep. Jim Florio's Democratic campaign for governor of New Jersey, well aware that his once-comfortable lead has disappeared, showed they also understand the real issue in Tuesday's election by the nature of their final week's television-radio blitz.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

That issue is not Ronald Reagan's popularity in this state but taxes, specifically the massive tax reduction for business pushed all year by Republican candidate Thomas Kean. Thus, Florio's last media burst ignores Reagan and concentrates on painting Kean's tax plans as a handout for big corporations.

Yet, it is the tax cut that brought Kean from behind to win the Republican primary last spring and is credited with closing the gap in the general election. Republican pollster Robert Teeter's final statewide survey taken Oct. 24 and 25 gave Kean a three-percentage point lead — and high marks on his tax reduction plans.

This tax debate is not only Reagan-Carter revisited but is in fact the issue of the 1980s, an issue transcending taxes. Soft-pedalling the liberal Republican "problem solving" approach to government that was his trademark as speaker of the New Jersey Assembly, Kean now says government is the problem. Florio argues back that government is — or at least ought to be — the solution.

Jim Florio bears no superficial resemblance to the McGovernite Democratic candidates mowed down in the 1978 and 1980 elections. The grandson of an Italian immigrant ice peddlar and son of a shipyard worker, Florio is a high school dropout who worked his way through college after a Navy hitch. His commericals stress this working-class background, in contrast to Kean's blue-blood pedigree (Keans as public servants in every generation dating back to the Continental Congress).

Florio's anti-abortion credentials are clearer than Kean's. His anti-gun control stance makes him a favorite of the National Rifle Association. When he was touring the Revlon factory in Edison six days before the election, a scowling woman worker shouted to Florio: "Bring back the death penalty!" His quiet reply: "We'll try." Indeed, Florio contends his support for capital punishment predates Kean's conversion. Clearly, there is no real difference between the candidates on social issues.

There are differences in abundance on the economy. While Kean pushes economic growth through supply-side tax cuts, a Florio television spot declares: "The only way to keep your taxes down is to make sure corporations pay their fair share." Here is the old zero-sum game, with government redistributing income.

The Florio camp, considering the Kean tax cut a sure political loser for the Republican, was stunned by The New York Times poll showing New Jersey voters preferring Kean's across-the-board business tax cuts to Florio's targeted tax reductions limited to small business. Joe White, Florio's innovative media consultant, called it "pure confusion" on the part of the voters.

That mirrors the attitude of Jimmy Carter's advisers, who never could believe until the very end that voters really liked Ronald Reagan's tax plan. But New Jersey labor leaders, all backing Florio, worry about their rank-and-file's affection for Kean's reduction of taxes and shrinking of government.

To dilute that sentiment, Florio's late blitz of commercials try to paint the tax cut as a handout for big business that will end up increasing everybody's property tax. One favorite TV spot tells the viewer he should favor Kean's tax program if his name is on the following list. The screen then lists Exxon, Mobil, General Motors and a dozen other big corporations.

The Kean campaign is counteracting with 11th-hour charges of secret plans for a Democratic state tax increase (denied by Florio, who makes no promises about what happens after the first year of his governorship, however). But Kean does not seem all that comfortable with the tax issue. His final week's basic campaign speech, scourging Florio as a spender and taxer, mentions "cutting unproductive business taxes" only in passing.

"Tom Kean has tried hard," one New Jersey conservative told us, "but he really is too much of a moderate to wholeheartedly embrace the supply side." Although Kean strikes a responsive note with all Jerseyites who believe government has failed in Trenton as it has in Washington, he somehow evokes the aura of the now-vanished Rockefeller Republicanism, based on making government work.

But if candidate Kean is not the Republican prototype for the 1980s, candidate Florio indeed is the authentic Democratic model: safely conservative on social issues, dedicated to a preeminent government role invigorating the economy and fairly distributing national wealth. However it comes out, the New Jersey election for governor will be repeated throughout the decade in the continuing struggle over which course the republic shall take in its third century.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

President Reagan arrived a reported 18½ minutes late for the opening session of the Cancun summit. The old 18½ minute gap, again. His address must have been typed by Rosemary Wood.

Police in New York have discovered several terrorist bomb factories. If we still had OSHA, they could get them on a violation.

If Charles Dickens were alive today, Reagan would be Scrooge and PATCO would be Tiny Tim.

CHARLEY REESE

Ignorance keeping us from reality

I have a friend who used to be a gun-runner, among other things. If you could see him you'd peg him as a yokel. He prefers to wear over-alls with no shirt, shoes with the toes cut out, and he sports a large and scraggly beard.

Charley Reese

He lives out in the boonies with a quarrelsome German Shepherd and a mean mule. No matter where he sits midst the debris that passes for a living room-office, he is within reach of a loaded gun and in his neighborhood, which is just plain rough, he has the reputation of being the kind of guy who would just as soon shoot you as say, "Hello."

For all that, he has a son in medical school, speaks fluent Spanish, lived for 12 years in Central America, is extremely well-read, has a commercial pilot's license, and is no stranger to such mundane matters as money markets and real estate investments. In other words, he lives the way he lives by choice, not out of necessity.

He and I share a passion for history and an incurable curiosity about the present. He observed the other day, "You know, I think people in general are a good deal more stupid than they used to be." What he meant was that they seem to be farther removed from reality, more easily conned, less knowledgeable about how things really work as opposed to how people believe they work.

I agree. For one thing, the post World War II generation in America has had no experience with hard times. A lot of today's younger people think hard times mean you can't afford a video tape recorder. Being without food, basic transporation and shelter are as incomprehensible to them as the Rolling Stones playing to an empty stadium. Even those kids who take to the road don't know what hard times are. It is one thing to "rough it" when you know that if it gets really bad, all you have to do is make one phone call, and quite another to be deprived of all resources and to know that there is nobody on this round earth who will help you.

That is not their fault; they were just lucky the storks dropped them on the up side of an inflation cycle. It is their fault, though, that they come out of high schools and even colleges with only the vaguest knowledge of history and consider themselves well-informed if they read "Time" or "Newsweek." Technology gave us a communications revolution and we used it to mass market ignorance.

Another prevalent form of ignorance is ignorance of human nature which results, I suppose, from leading a sheltered life and avoiding throughout 16 years of public education the reading of great literature. It is appalling how many educated Americans refuse to recognize human nature as it is. They construct elaborate rationalizations to explain away the evidence of common, ordinary cruelty, brutality and viciousness and stubbornly believe that given the "right" legislation and the "right" policies, the entire world can be transformed into a global Peoria, Ill.

By using circular reasoning, they define the dark side of human nature as abnormal. Only crazy people kill or hurt other people; therefore, those who kill or hurt other people are crazy. All sane people want peace; therefore, only madmen start wars. The concepts of good and evil are religious superstitions; therefore, all conflicts can be resolved by negotiation and all "abnormal" individuals can be corrected with therapy.

My gun-running friend and I are both agreed that this ignorance of human nature has bleeped up both our criminal justice system and our foreign policy. Evil gains an enormous advantage when the victims simply refuse to recognize that evil exists.

"It's kind of like walking through a swamp pretending it's a city park," he said. "You're going to get nailed."

BUSINESS MIRROR

Field-testing Reaganomics

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If recent indicators are worth a thing, Americans over the next year or so are going to observe how well Reagonomics does when the chips are down and the cards aren't cooperating.

Heretofore, it has had pretty smooth sailing. The public has been with the president. And though it is inevitable, the economic downturn from restrictive policies has been mild and probably late in showing up.

But the economic atmosphere is changing now. Customer's aren't buying. Red ink is spreading. Unemployment is moving up. Plants are closing. Bankruptcies are soaring. The statistical indicators are looking awful.

It now appears that the automakers aren't going to recover this year or probably next, that the administration will be unable to balance the budget in fiscal 1984, and that living standards won't be rising.

As all this happens, the political climate is likely to change. To date, the Reagan administration has been promoting the vision of better times to come. Soon, it may have to ask that people bear with it.

Very few institutional economists have issued forecasts of a major recession, but in reading their remarks nobody can fail to detect that their private worries are greater than their official utterances.

A simple example: Many economists foresee interest rates falling, which on the surface is what everyone seems to want. But at what price? Will rates fall because bidders for money have been killed off?

That is, will conditions be such that business is forced to cancel plans to expand and individuals are compelled by job insecurity and tight budgets to wait another year to buy a car, a house or a new set of furniture?

Will the private sector, on which so much rests, be unwilling or unable immediately to pick up the economic slack from government, leaving the economy in such a state that supply side economics loses credibility even with its advocates within the administration?

With economic discontent translatable into votes, as Reagan himself demonstrated in being elected, will the White House feel compelled to step in with a spending plan contrary to its long-term goal?

"Will the White House panic?" That question headlines a "special analysis"issued last week by Albert Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics and a strong supporter of the Reagan economic program.

Cox says he doesn't think so, but he concedes the possibility of "a major recession" and concern in financial markets that Reagan might "throw in the towel" in his fight to bring innflation down.

Such suspicions probably are made to appear more plausible, suggests Cox, by efforts of his former boss, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, to exhort the Federal Reserve to ease up on the money supply.

Though Cox doesn't say so, the same viewpoint might apply to Regan's congressional testimony in regard to budget projections that "things seldom turn out the way you think they're going to." Such projections, of course, were the very keystone of the president's economic program.

And so we come to the first test in the real world, a political world, of the great experiment in new economics, of theories that look very sound in the lab but which have never really been tested in the field.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Making the most of retirement funds

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband opened an individual retirement account (IRA) at our local bank in 1976. Recently, we were presented with material on rolling over that money into an IRA annuity at a life insurance company. The insurance agent had a print-out showing what my husband, who is now 40, could expect to receive in monthly installments from the annuity when he retires at age 65.

The annuity plan, as presented by the agent, looks good. But, we wonder. Would it be better to keep the IRA with the bank?

A. No one can say, for sure, which of the many types of IRAs will perform the best over the next 25 years and provide you with the most income during your retirement years. But, because of recent changes in federal banking regulations, it could be a serious mistake to move that IRA now.

Beginning Jan. 1, "depository institutions" — banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions — will be allowed to offer IRAs without any federal regulatory ceiling on interest rates. And, effective Dec. 1, those institutions will be permitted — but not required — to allow people with existing IRAs to switch their retirement funds to the new higher interest paying accounts, without any early withdrawal penalty.

The same rule changes apply to Keogh plans for self-employed people.

As a result, individual banks, S & Ls and credit unions will be in hot competition for IRAs and Keogh plans. Any depository institution that does't raise its interest rates on IRAs and Keogh plans will see the business go elsewhere.

So, the natural advice is to hold off on any move of your husband's IRA until your bank announces what interest it will pay, come Jan. 1, and whether the bank will allow transfer of existing IRAs into higher-interest accounts.

Q. When I retire, would it be a good idea to withdraw all the money from my individual retirement account (IRA); pay the income taxes immediately; redeposit the balance; and use the interest to supplement living expenses?

A. It could be a very bad idea, because it would most likely cost you a bundle of tax dollars. The money you have put into your IRA and the money it has earned — interest and/or dividends — is tax-sheltered until you withdraw it. If you withdraw it all at once, you'll be kicked into a higher income tax bracket and be hit with a big tax bill.

There's one "out" here. You could use the "10-year averaging" method for a lump-sum withdrawal to reduce your taxes.

For most people, however, it's better to withdraw the money gradually each year and pay taxes on the money you take out of the IRA. Hopefully, you'll live a good deal longer than 10 years past your retirement date. Once you reach age 70½, you have to start withdrawing money from your IRA at a rate based on your life expectancy.

Q. My son, who is single, works for a company that has a small pension plan. He is also self-employed. He has an individual retirement account (IRA) based on his self-employment income. Under the new tax law, will he be able to put $2,000 a year into his IRA?

A. The new federal tax law will allow your son to "triple-dip" in the retirement planning pond, beginning in 1982. He can stay in his company pension plan. He will be able to put $2,000 a year in his IRA — just as any person with earned money income. And he can set up a Keogh plan, based on his self-employed income.

Q. I am the only wage earner in a family of spouse and child. I believe I can put about $2,200 a year into an individual retirement account (IRA) beginning in 1982. Does the money have to be put in as a lump sum, or can it be spread out.

A. You can make your annual IRA contribution any way you like — as a lump sum or in installments. Assuming you have the cash, it's smart to pay in early, so that your money starts earning tax-sheltered interest or dividends sooner.

Because your spouse is not employed, you'll be able to have a "spousal" IRA and tuck away $2,250 a year into your family's own tax shelter.

Eulogy set for anti-Klan victims killed at rally

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Approximately 80 people attended a one-hour service Sunday to honor the five Communist Workers Party members shot to death at an anti-Klan rally two years ago.

The services were held in Maplewood Cemetery on the outskirts of Greensboro, where the shootings occurred at a "Death to the Klan" rally Nov. 3, 1979 and where four of the victims were buried.

Four bouquets of roses were placed on a 4-foot-tall marker above the graves of James Waller, Cesar Cauce, Bill Sampson and Michael Nathan. Nelson Johnson, a local party leader, placed a wreath in the middle of the granite marker.

If space shuttle doesn't succeed, try, try again

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Trade in your car and the dealer might have it on the sales lot an hour later after a quick oil change and a wash. Getting a used spaceship shipshape is a lot more complicated — as NASA is finding out.

When the shuttle Columbia glided majestically to Earth after its maiden flight April 12, officials said the craft had performed so smoothly they hoped to send it aloft again in four months.

But crews encountered unexpected problems, and the August launch target became September, then October and finally Nov. 4 — this Wednesday.

Technicians inspecting Columbia discovered that five struts supporting fuel tanks aboard the vehicle were bent or buckled. It took nearly six weeks to isolate the cause: A shockwave that rippled upward through the vehicle when its two rocket boosters ignited for blastoff.

The pressure generated by the ignition was four times greater than anticipated, and officials feared the force of future launches might seriously damage the shuttle or its payloads.

Several fixes were tested before the National Aeronautics and Space Administration settled on a system of pipes and pumps that spray 400,000 gallons of water into the rocket exhaust holes to dampen the pressure waves. The cost: $2 million and delay.

Columbia, meanwhile, was being serviced in a hangar here. Extensive tests confirmed the engine and electrical systems were in working order. An auxiliary power unit, some electronic boxes, the main landing gear wheels and a few other parts were replaced.

Developing the 30,752 silica tiles that protect the spacecraft from re-entry heat was a major headache before the first launch, contributing to more than two years of postponements. Before the April flight, technicians replaced or strengthened most of them, but left more than 1,000 to be done after Columbia returned from orbit.

In addition, some non-critical tiles were scratched or slightly gouged during the mission — most by ice chips that shook free of a super-cold fuel tank. A total of 350 tiles were replaced, 818 strengthened and about 2,000 repaired.

To prevent an ice buildup on this week's flight, engineers modified a fuel tank venting system.

Workmen also fortified the launchpad in areas slightly damaged by rocket exhausts, and crews also removed test equipment needed only on the first flight. And they installed in the cargo bay a 5,300-pound earth resources payload for flight No. 2 and a 50-foot-long mechanical arm that eventually will be used to deploy and retrieve satellites.

There were other nagging, minor delays. A complete systems check in July took five extra days due to minor problems with ground support equipment.

On Aug. 4, Columbia returned to the Vehicle Assembly Building for mating with booster rockets and a fuel tank. Technical trouble forced another five-day delay.

On Aug. 28, the launch schedule was pushed back from Sept. 30 to Oct. 9. Three days after the announcement, Columbia rolled out to its seaside pad for fueling and countdown tests.

All went well until the morning of Sept. 22, when technicians started pumping caustic nitrogen tetroxide propellant into a forward fuel tank. A valve failed and about three gallons of propellant spilled down the outside of the shuttle over an area about 20 feet long.

The propellant reacted chemically with the glue holding the tiles in place and many of them fell off. None was damaged, but 379 had to be decontaminated, waterproofed, tested and glued back on — a painstaking process that, along with other repairs, took several weeks.

MX missile and B-1 bomber may have to wait

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress deeply divided over calls for further spending cuts and tax increases, a top Senate Republican is suggesting that the backbone of President Reagan's military buildup — the MX missile and the B-1 bomber — may have to wait.

Sen. Bob Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Sunday that he sees little likelihood of passing a "laundry list of 15 to 25 little tax increases" totaling $50 billion to $70 billion over three years. The prospects for any tax increase in 1982 are dim, he added.

If anything, the Kansas Republican said, one or two large tax increases would stand a better chance. Possibilities, he said, include new import fees or excise taxes, a windfall profits tax on natural gas, or a Btu tax on all energy, based on the British thermal unit system of measuring energy production.

"It's more and more difficult to get any consensus on increasing taxes, starting with the president, I might add, on down," Dole said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Dole also said government benefit programs such as food stamps and school lunches cannot be cut much more.

And in response to a question, he said delaying Reagan's plan to build the MX missile and B-1 bomber is "a possibility, particularly on the B-1."

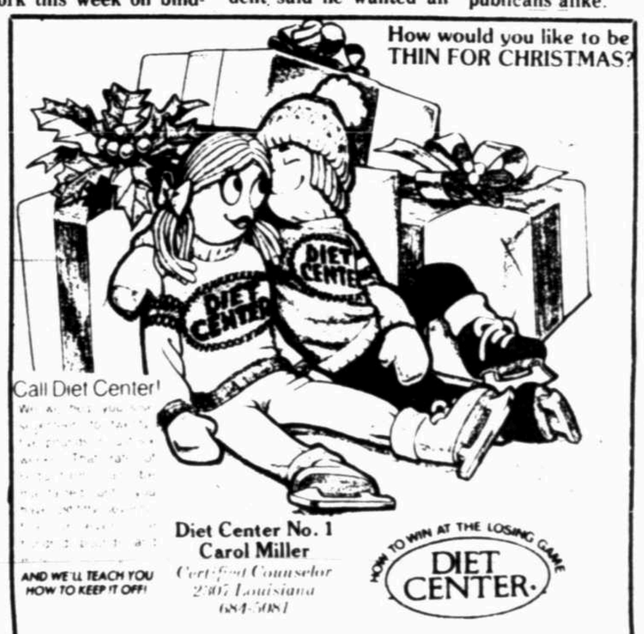

The MX and the B-1, the foundation of Reagan's strategic defense buildup, will be the subject of hearings this week by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger testifies on Tuesday and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on Wednesday.

Dole said some members of Congress who have supported the B-1 development wonder "can we now afford that expense when we're looking at more cuts in social programs or increasing taxes. And those of us who have the responsibility are probably taking a little closer look at some of the defense spending, whether it's the MX or the B-1."

Dole said he expects word from Reagan within 10 days on what course the administration wants to follow in an effort to rein in the federal deficit. Congress begins work this week on binding budget figures for the rest of the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

In addition to the tax and budget cuts Reagan got through Congress last summer, the president said he wanted an additional $13 billion in spending cuts and $3 billion in selective tax increases. But the plan was never formally submitted after running into formidable opposition from Democrats and Republicans alike.

Native plants are cheaper

Have you ever determined exactly how much it would cost to landscape your home? If so, you probably needed assistance to a nearby chair.

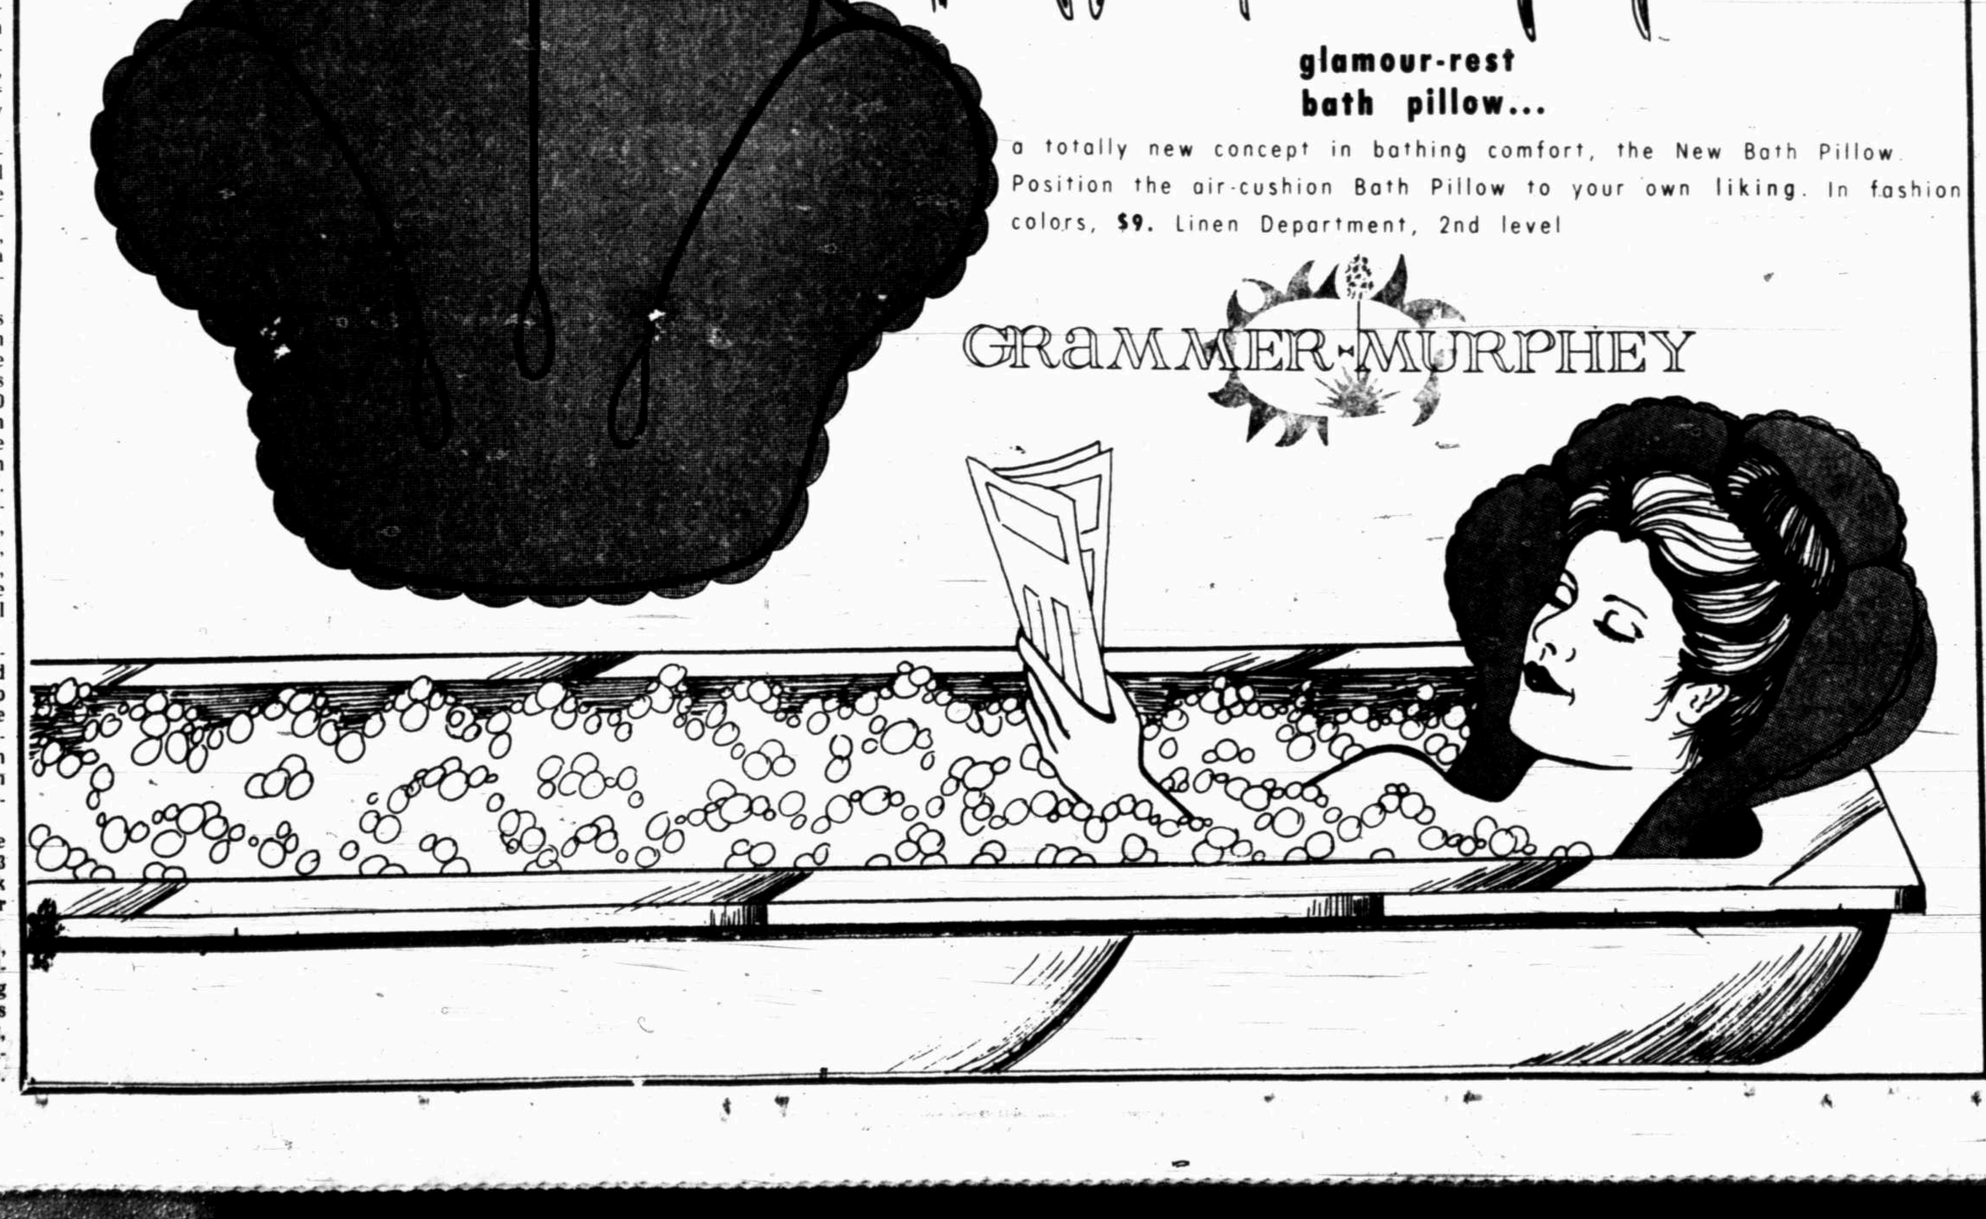

However, don't despair, there are several alternatives available which will ease the financial burden significantly, yet provide you with a beautiful home landscape.

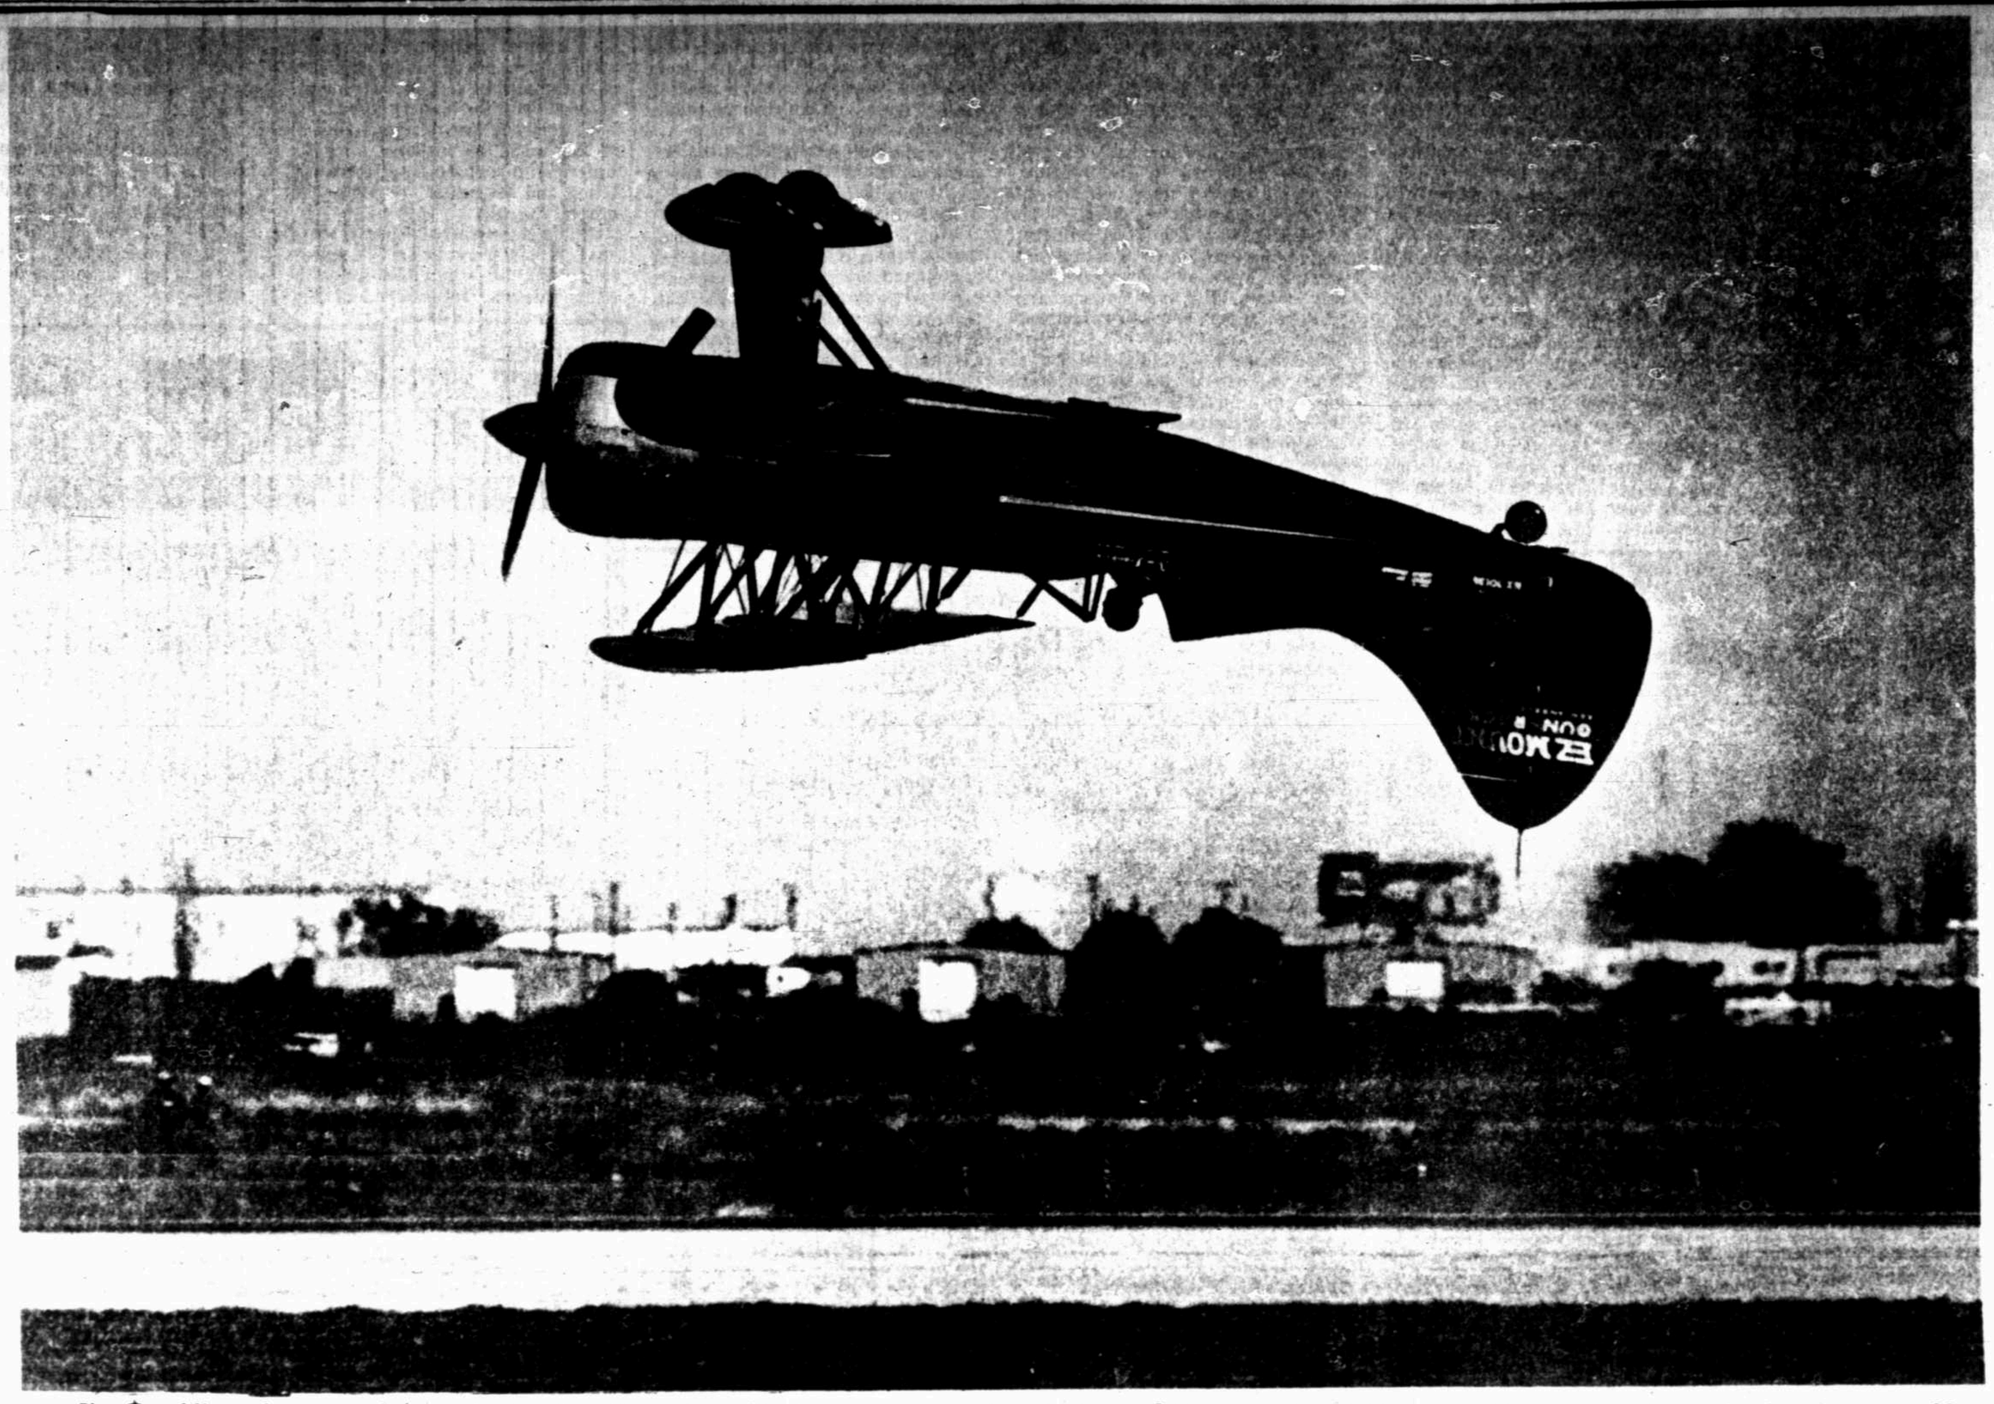

One such alternative is the use of native plants in the development of the grounds. Native species are often as much as 50 percent cheaper than other species, yet are often overlooked when the landscape is planned. There are many advantages to using natives, including adaptibility, low water requirements, few insect and disease problems, and natural beauty.

The Extension Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee can help you solve your landscape problems with an educational program on "Landscape Design Using Native Plant Species."

The program will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. at the Hogan Park Activities Building near the baseball park.

Dr. Austin Stockton, area extension horticulturist, will be discussing such things as species selection, transplanting, cost-cutting and budgeting the home landscape.

World War II returns

Text by Ed Todd
Photos by Paul Gilbert

The 1940s returned.

The Big Bands played. The Andrews Sisters sang. And an air war was fought.

The machinery of war was primed.

Many soldiers, sailers and airmen died for victory on one side.

Many more died in defeat on the other.

Let's Remember Pearl Harbor
As We Go To Meet The Foe

Pilots scrambled. Fighters and bombers took flight. Airplanes with stars fought those with the swastika and the rising sun markings.

Bombers dropped bombs. Fighters strafed and fought one another in aerial-duels-to-the-death called dogfights.

Victory was sought by the Allies. It was also the quest of the Axis Powers.

The scene was World War II air power re-enacted in air space over Midland Regional Airport Sunday afternoon. And the starring cast of pilots flew vintage aircraft in a show staged by the Confederate Air Force's Desert Squadron of Midland and Odessa.

THE SCENE was nostalgic. The whole show, witnessed by 20,000-plus people, reflected patriotism, freedom from bondage, the drama of climactic warring moments, and the imagined glory of war.

"We do not give this show to glorify war, but to show what it was like in World War II," said CAF Col. Jack Morgan, as he and CAF Col. Don Luttrell teamed up to narrate the four-hour show of U.S. Army Golden Knights skydivers; civilian aerobatic pilots doing loops, rolls, hammer-head stalls and flip-flops; fighter planes strafing and attacking bombers; fighters fighting fighters; and bombers bombing.

Yes, Indeed

"(Those) who fought in World War II say it wasn't very glorious, and it wasn't," assured Morgan, who flew in two wars since he flew combat missions in WWII in the P-47 Thunderbolt and the P-40 Warhawk.

But the CAF show sought to put glory in the missions of the rare old warbirds.

Coming In On A Wing And A Prayer

For awhile, the CAF-staged "war" was held in abeyance, as four aerobatic pilots did some precision flying: Doug Warren in the DeHavilland Chipmunk, Buzz Hurt in the clipped-wing Taylorcraft, Gene Beggs in the Pitts Special, and the barmstorming Jim Franklin in the Waco.

"That doesn't take just a good airplane; that takes guts," said Morgan, as a pilot recovered from a hammer-head stall and went into a half Cuban 8 maneuver.

THE PAST returned. Franklin D. Roosevelt's voice came over the radio: He declared Dec. 7, 1941, as "a date which will live in infamy." Japanese aircraft — the strafing Zeros, the bombing Vals and the torpedoing Kates — assaulted the United States Pacific Fleet. A U.S. B-17 Flying Fortress already was airborne and unaware of the sneak attack.

The Norden bomb-sight in the B-17 Flying Fortress offers an ominous, cross-hairs view of Midland.

The U.S. Army Air Forces P-40 Warhawk and the Navy Wildcat launched a counter-assault.

Jack Edwards, a Wildcat aviator who got caught up in the war after the 1942 Battle of Midway, reflected on a warbird.

"It (the Wildcat) was the only one that could turn with the Zero and damn near climb with it. They were really nimble."

So was the Warhawk of Flying Tigers fame. The lone P-40 in the CAF battle did a victory roll, and, piloted by Col. Joe Mabee, returned to base.

Another CAF scene depicted the U.S. building up its air power; trainers, such as the PT-17 Stearman, PT-20, PT-19, C-45, AT-6, Harvard, SNJ and BT-13 became airborne.

THE U.S. and its Allies were deep into the war against Japan and Germany.

Praise The Lord
And Pass The Ammunition

Three B-25 Mitchells took to the air for bombing runs. The P-51D Mustang, the F4U Corsair, Hellcat, Wildcat, and TBM Avenger took to the air. The Zeros and other Nip aircraft were in pursuit. The bombers' bomb bay doors opened, and the old "warbirds" made low passes again and again. Explosions followed, and flashing orange balls of fire and billowing black smoke appeared in the distance.

"We're going to have to get (oilfield firefighters) Boots 'n'Coots or Red Adair," quipped one spectator to another amid the pyrotechnics.

Airplanes were in helter-skelter combat.

Air battles, from Midway to Normandy, and bombing raids, from Ploiesti to Tokyo, were depicted by the old warbirds.

AS THE WAR wore on, "We (the U.S. and its Allies) established air supremacy," said Col. Luttrell.

The B-29 Superfortress and the B-24 Liberator headed skyward. Prop blasts from the show's two P-51D Mustangs and the Warhawk stirred the air and turned light breezes to strong winds. Nazi Germany's air power was represented by pre-war Messerschmitt Me. 108s.

The show again flared up.

The B-29 flew again. The A-20 Havoc, which flew earlier, was grounded due to a flat nose wheel.

On the flight line, bona fide American aces, including Tex Hill of the American Volunteer Group's Flying Tigers, took in the show. Behind the flight line, aviation artist Robert Carlin, displayed his works. And Japanese Zero Ace and Kamikaze commander, Masajiro "Mike" Kawato, and an American Navy aviator, "Ensign" George Gay, who was the only survivor of Torpedo Squadron Eight in the Battle of Midway, autographed copies of their books: "Bye Bye Black Sheep" and "Sole Survivor." Kawato, at age 18, shot down Gregory "Pappy" Boyington of the Baa Baa Black Sheep Squadronin Boyington's Corsair.

The CAF show, which certainly did not de-glorify the war of the 1940s, began to wane. The blast of the props had died down.

American Craft Museum celebrates anniversary

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

This is a year of celebration for the American Craft Museum — 1981 is the 25th anniversary of the founding of the museum as a permanent record of the excellence of American crafts.

If it were simply a matter of recording the passing of a quarter century, there would be little reason to note the occasion, according to Paul Smith, director of the museum in New York, which is sponsored by the American Craft Council.

However, what is being noted is not merely the passage of years. Instead, the vitality and continued growth of American crafts is where the focus should be and is, in Smith's opinion.

Besides numerous exhibitions and special events this year (the latest exhibit is a kind of bird's eye view of all 233 former shows), museum officials recently announced the projected opening of a second exhibition space of 3,500 square feet to be housed on the main lobby floor of the new headquarters of a large manufacturing concern.

The space (donated by International Paper Co.) will have three contemporary craft shows a year after it opens in the spring of 1982. It is the latest in what has been a career of innovation.

As August Heckscher, director of the Twentieth Century Fund and a former New York administrator of cultural affairs in the early days of the museum, recalled, "The craft museum played a courageous role of leadership from the beginning."

Aileen Osborn Webb, the impetus behind the opening of the museum and a potter herself, saw crafts as a way of providing employment and giving meaning to the lives of Americans.

The museum was established at a time when new ideas were invigorating many areas of life, and inevitably the artistic revolutions of the Bauhaus in design and abstract expressionism in art would be reflected in the methods and images of the craftsmen, says Heckscher, adding "Mrs. Webb looked puzzled or sad at times and some craftsmen objected to the avant garde nature of some of the exhibits."

But the museum continued to support experimenting craftsmen. In the late 1960s, when the pursuit of crafts became a way of life for some young people as well as a way of making things, there was a burst of public interest in crafts.

The museum responded to the ferment of the '60s by "kicking up its own heels and joining the general exuberance," recalls Heckscher.

In various themed shows — such as those on the bed, amusements, paper and body coverings — "the museum explored the limits of artistic craftsmanship, reminding us that no corner of the imagination — and no cranny of the home — need be immune to the contagion of the handmade," says Heckscher.

The exhibits continue to explore various aspects of American culture. The message, according to Smith is that "crafts in all their forms are among America's most vital contributions to the world and they provide a significant alternative to an increasingly technical and coldly materialistic world."

Smith says crafts have matured unusually quickly, from what started as a kind of alternative movement with, overall, not very high standards of workmanship, to a fully-developed art form with the highest standards.

"Americans are recognized by all of the world as leaders in crafts. American inventiveness, experimentation and execution are highly admired," he said.

Although the American Craft Museum is in New York, he sees its role as a national one — to introduce to the public through publications and traveling exhibits the best work of today, to report on new directions and to document and collect the works of American craftsmen.

The new gallery to be opened next spring will not only double exhibition space, according to Smith, but will also introduce crafts to new audiences.

"I like the idea of bringing exhibits to people — wherever they gather. One of our most successful shows in this regard was at the San Francisco airport," he recalled.

As for the future, Smith sees a growing role for handmade objects of quality:

Incest illness too lightly treated

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

[illegible] was [illegible] the family was divided. One other half thought the first half was overreacting, or possibly, that we were mistaken about the intentions of a loving old grandfather.

Out of family loyalty, we did not prosecute. We were wrong. Consequently, nothing has been done to get the offender the help he needs.

Abby, this crime must be stopped. I am certain there is much more of it going on than most people realize. The child must be the first concern. Then treatment (forced, if need be) for the sick offender. Please let your readers know that ignoring child molestation hurts everyone. — WITHHOLD MY NAME AND CITY

DEAR WITHHOLD: Child molestation and particularly incest already have one foot out of the closet. There is an organization that has proven to be very helpful.

"Parents United and Daughters and Sons United" chapters have sprung up in many parts of the country. This self-help group is affiliated with a professional treatment program and works closely with the courts. While protection of the child is always given top priority, support is provided for families who want to work out their problems and stay together, and even for those who don't!

Information is available free by writing to: Parents United, P.O. Box 952, San Jose, Calif. 95108. Because this is a non-profit organization, please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 39 and work in the stockroom of my father's sportswear store. A man about my father's age (60), who happens to be a good friend of my father, works with me. This "friend" steals merchandise all the time. I'm the only one who knows it because there are just the two of us back there. He makes no effort to hide his stealing from me — he just takes whatever he wants as though it belonged to him!

Should I tell my father, or should I say something to this man? — "C"

DEAR "C": First, tell the "friend" that you've noticed him helping himself to your father's merchandise, and ask if he has some kind of arrangement with your father that permits him to take what he wants without cost.

Then, check it out with your father.

DEAR ABBY: Tears of anger burned my eyes when I read the letter from "Smothered in Maine," who claimed her mother-in-law was doing too much for Karla, her 2-year-old granddaughter. ("She has bought her way into our lives," she said, "and I am sick of it.")

She ridiculed "Gamma's" offer to baby-sit every weekend and resented all the lavish gifts she showered on Karla.

This is to MY Gamma:

Thank you for your generous gifts that often allowed my parents the extra money to add to my education fund.

Thank you for providing time for my mother and dad to be alone together.

Thank you for letting me bake cookies in your magic kitchen and never mentioning the mess.

Thank you for the nights spent in your big bed, and for not being cross when I threw up on your comforter.

For my first roller skates, for telling me when Grandpa went to Heaven, for holding my hand at the dentist, for helping me look for Snuffy for three days when he was lost, and for all the wonderful years and endless hugs, thank you, Grammie. Dear heart, wherever you are, I love you. — BONNIE

Available jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — Environmental problems caused by some products and industrial plants are leading more and more companies to look for qualified engineers and other experts who can cope with these issues, reports an executive recruiter.

According to Dr. Jeffrey Honig of Richards Consultants Ltd. there are more jobs now available for those individuals capable of coming up with solutions that can help solve or deal with such problems as hazardous waste, air pollution and water pollution than at any time previously.

Hobbies for profit

NEW YORK (AP) — The word "investment" should not be used in the collectibles market.

Tell dealers you are a collector so they will respect your knowledge and give you a fairer price, says Abbot Lutz, a professional philatelist.

Stamps, coins, books, paper money, maps and prints are included in the portable collectibles marketplace, Lutz says.

Taxing times

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Taxpayers should find more "how-to" books on preparing tax returns this winter than ever before.

Susan Reich, director of merchandise buying at Waldenbooks, says there will be "twice as many consumer 'how-to' books on taxes, compared with last year."

A Swedish paratrooper, with face camouflaged, grasps his machine gun Sunday before starting his patrol on islands near the Kariskrona naval base, the site where a diesel-powered Soviet submarine ran aground in a restricted area of the Baltic Sea Tuesday night. Lt. Cmdr. Pyott Gushin, 35-year-old skipper of the submarine, refused to come ashore for interrogation despite instructions from the Soviet embassy in Stockholm to cooperate with Swedish officials.

Americans favor agreement with Russia limiting nuclear weapon use

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans favor a new agreement between the United States and Soviet Union to limit the use of nuclear weapons, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The telephone poll of 1,598 adults Oct. 25-26 also said that President Reagan's job rating for foreign affairs remains steady. And while 68 percent of the respondents said they think it likely the United States will be involved in a war within the next few years, 60 percent said they are not worried that Reagan will get the country into a war.

Seventy percent said they favor a new agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union which would limit nuclear weapons; 21 percent said they oppose such a treaty and 9 percent were not sure.

Reagan has said that the SALT II strategic arms limitation treaty signed in June 1979 by then-President Jimmy Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev is unacceptable because it favors the Soviet Union.

In the latest AP-NBC poll, 45 percent said Reagan is doing a good or excellent job in handling foreign affairs, about the same approval rating he has had since taking office.

Sixty percent said Reagan has set the right tone in his dealings with the Soviet government, while 23 percent said he has not been tough enough, 7 percent said he has been too tough and 10 percent were not sure.

Fifty percent said Reagan has made U.S. foreign policy clear to America's allies in Western Europe, 30 percent said his policies had not been made clear and 20 percent were not sure.

The 30 percent saying Reagan's policies were not clear to U.S. allies said by a 5-1 ratio that this presented a serious problem in American foreign affairs.

Reagan's position on Western Europe has caused concern among other NATO nations in recent weeks, especially since his recent comment that he could envision, in theory, a limited tactical nuclear war in Western Europe that would not result in an all-out nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

In the latest poll, 52 percent said the United States should not respond with nuclear weapons if the Soviet Union launches a limited nuclear attack on an American ally in Western Europe.

Sixteen percent said that the United States should respond with a limited nuclear strike on an Eastern European country, while 13 percent said the United States should respond with an all-out nuclear attack on the Soviet Union itself. Nineteen percent had no opinion.

If there were a nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union, 78 percent said neither side could win. Ten percent said the United States would win, 3 percent said the Soviet Union would win and 9 percent were not sure.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinion of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations. That is, if one could have talked this past week to all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Former embassy official says Carter's human rights stand stalled its Iran policy

NEW YORK (AP) — The Carter administration's emphasis on human rights stalled its policy on Iran as the events that toppled Shah Reza Pahlavi built to a head, according to a book written by a former political officer at the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

Some in President Carter's administration praised the shah's regime as a bulwark of security in the Persian Gulf, but others attacked his human rights record, says John D. Stempel in his book, "Inside the Iranian Revolution."

The actions and statements angered and encouraged the shah's opposition at the same time, while leaving the shah uncertain of his ally, says Stempel, who was Deputy Chief of the Political Section at the Tehran Embassy from 1975 until July 1979.

The speed with which the revolution developed — going from crowds of disorganized protesters in January 1978 to a well-organized opposition by November — prevented the divided Carter administration from getting a handle on events, he says.

Because of arguments over what course should be pursued, he says, the administration adopted a wait-and-see attitude, instead of trying to develop a coherent policy.

Stempel says the shah bears much of the blame for his own fall, but continues that the U.S. encouraged his indecisiveness. The shah was convinced, says Stempel, that the Carter administration would abandon him if he used repressive military force to quell his opposition.

Stempel says that U.S. policy towards the government that emerged after the shah left the country early in 1979 was hurt by further division when officials began to argue over who was to blame for the shah's fall.

Stempel also says that Carter advisers, along with almost all other Western analysts, underestimated the power of the Islamic religion as a vehicle for revolution.

The Tehran embassy was seized on Nov. 4, 1979, and 52 Americans were held hostage by Iranian religious militants for 444 days. Stempel was already gone by the time the embassy was taken over.

Swedish government refuses to refloat Soviet submarine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Swedish navy, taking a cue from the Soviet sub grounded in Swedish waters for six days, has put out a new recruiting slogan saying — "We don't want any whiskey on the rocks."

The Soviet submarine, which ran aground last Tuesday night off the southeast coast near the Karlskrona naval base, is one of the aged Whiskey class that Swedish experts say is specially modified for intelligence missions.

The Swedish government is refusing to refloat the sub until it gets a satisfactory explanation of the grounding and the sub's mission. But the captain, Lt. Cmdr. Pyotr Gushin, has refused to leave the sub for interrogation aboard a Swedish ship.

Gushin awaiting from the base Swedish port. The speculation was being kept aboard because Kaliningrad was interrogating him by radio.

Cmdr. Lennart Forsman of the Karlskrona base told a news conference there had been intermittent radio traffic between the sub and Kaliningrad.

As the stalemate continued, Swedish Defense Minister Torsten Gustafsson said in a TV interview that he could not see any possibility being used by either side to resolve the deadlock.

The Soviet Union has officially apologized for the incident, but the Swedish government said the apology was insufficient. It the Soviet skipper's claim that the intrusion was an accident, saying it took highly skilled maneuvering through tricky waters to get the sub into the area where it grounded.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A 20-year-old Air Force firefighter stationed at Davis Monthan Air Force Base here died after he collapsed while participating in a training exercise, a base spokesman said Sunday.

Airman 1st Class Ronald J. McNeely Jr., a native of Tucson, collapsed Saturday morning as he and other firefighters were attempting to extinguish a fire in a pit.

THE TEXAS SOCIETY
---of---
PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS
URGES YOU TO VOTE FOR WATER FOR TEXAS

To save your taxpayer money in the future, and keep Texas prosperous . . . vote to take action now to deal with the growing water problems facing our state!

The urgent need for water supply, sewage treatment and flood control projects is widely recognized throughout the state. Either we act now to provide funding for those needs in an orderly, flexible manner, or pay the staggering price later for dealing with them piecemeal on a crisis basis, with a strong likelihood of increased taxes.

Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 4 provides for three vital actions:

- Allow an increase in interest that can be paid from the current limit of 6 percent, now preventing sale of more than $200 million in authorized and urgently needed state bonds, to a more realistic rate of 12 percent.
- Create a loan guaranty program which will enable local communities to issue water project bonds at a lower rate because of backing of credit by the state of Texas.
- Set aside one-half of the state's budget surplus every two years to create a priority "nest egg" fund to assist local governments in financing of water and sewage projects and pay for vital research programs.

Say YES to Water For Texas
now and get more for your money!

☑ A vote FOR means we get a plan to finance urgent water projects on an orderly basis at the lowest possible cost . . . and avoid a coming crisis!

☐ A vote AGAINST means the crisis builds . . . our health and prosperity are endangered, and we pay more in the future, with tax increases likely!

Make Texas' surplus work for you now in water supply, sewage treatment and flood control!

Vote FOR Amendment No. 4 on November 3!

Prison officials optimistic about ending inmate takeover

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

GRATERFORD, Pa. (AP) — Prison officials say demands by inmates holding six or more hostages at gunpoint for a sixth day are "somewhat reasonable" and were sending a newspaperman back into the prison today to continue as an intermediary.

Chuch Stone, a columnist for the Philadelphia Daily News who has arranged the surrender of suspects to police on about 20 occasions, met with the leader of the captors for 45 minutes Sunday and left the prison with a handwritten list of 12 demands given him.

The items on the list were not disclosed by Stone or the authorities, but Kenneth Robinson, spokesman for the Pennsylvania prison system, said "we believe they're somewhat reasonable."

The Pottstown Mercury quoted unidentified sources in today's editions as saying the demands generally concerned the treatment of Joseph Bowen, a three-time killer who authorities say is the ringleader.

The inmates demanded that after surrender Bowen be allowed visits by his family and not be brutalized, that he not spend more time in solitary confinement than any other person commiting a similar crime and that none of the 32 inmates who were originally taken hostage be punished, according to the newspaper. The other nine demands were minor, the paper said. There was no demand for amnesty, the Mercury said.

Prison authorities have said they will not grant amnesty to the hostage-takers. It was not immediately clear how many inmates are involved. Authorities say up to seven convicts may be in the ring.

Stone was to go back to the prison kitchen, where the hostages were being held, at 10 a.m. EST. He was called in by the governor's office.

"All I can say is they're not extravagant," Stone said Sunday. "It is extremely delicate; I can't tell you how delicate it is. We're dealing with life and death." Stone said the list contained "concerns," but Robison said state officials "consider them to be demands."

The hostages were taken at the Correctional Institution at Graterford, 35 miles from Philadelphia, after an escape attempt failed Wednesday.

Thirty-eight hostages, including 32 inmates, were taken, but 29 of the inmates were released Saturday. That left behind three guards, three kitchen employees. The three remaining inmates might have been involved in the hostage-taking and may not be hostages, authorities said.

Until Sunday, the convicts requested only heat and blankets, medication and cigarettes for the hostages.

Relatives of hostages and captors were allowed into the prison complex Sunday, but prison system spokesman Kirk Wilson said he thought only Bowen's relatives had spoken directly with the inmates.

Stone, who sat with Bowen's brother, Jeffery, in the hall outside the kitchen, said the talks ended when Bowen said one of the hostages appeared ill. Two hostages are diabetics and another has a bad heart.

"We're sure he's (the hostage) OK," Robinson said later at a news briefing. Prison officials have been getting regular urine samples from the diabetics, and a sample was taken after Stone's visit, he said.

Insulin has been delivered by an orderly who takes it halfway down a corridor leading to the kitchen, where it is left for the convicts. The urine samples are retrieved the same way.

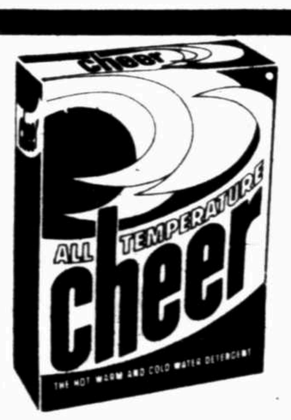

Contract disputes idle shipyards

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Contract disputes idled more than 1,000 workers at two San Diego shipyards just a few days after 5,500 workers at the West Coast's largest shipyard went back to work following a three-week strike.

In the larger of the two strikes, about 1,000 machinists, electricians, painters and carpenters at Campbell Industries walked out when their contract expired early Sunday.

The dispute focused mainly on contract language and issues other than money, said Gabe DeNunzio, a consultant for the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council.

California brush fires almost under control

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters on Sunday completely surrounded the largest of a rash of weekend blazes that scorched about 20,000 acres in Southern California and injured eight people, at least one seriously.

The National Weather Service had forecast continued hot, dry weather with temperatures into the 90s and humidity as low as 11 percent. But the winds were expected to decrease from the 50-mph gusts of Saturday to anywhere between 15 mph and 40 mph Monday.

"I have heard that there are some clouds off the coast. I'd like to see some clouds come in right now, maybe even rain," said Jim Davids, spokesman for the Los Angeles County Fire Department.

The Oat Mountain fire in the Chatsworth area of the Los Angeles County-Ventura county line scorched 17,500 acres, but was contained Sunday afternoon, another county spokesman, John Costley, said.

"Hopefully, tomorrow, we can pick up the hot spots and have it totally controlled," he said Sunday evening.

He said the blaze destroyed five houses and a mobile home, although no damage estimate was available. The cause was unknown and no injuries were reported.

About 1,000 firefighters were on the line at the peak of the blaze, which began Saturday afternoon. Nine helicopters and three fixed-wing aircraft from the U.S. Forest Service assisted, Davids said.

Evacuation centers were set up at Chatsworth and Simi Valley high schools.

Officials said the fire could threaten homes valued at $2.5 million apiece in the Bell Canyon and Hidden Hills areas of Ventura County.

Eighty miles south, at the El Toro Marine Base in Orange County, officials said a blaze there which burned 370 acres Saturday and injured three firefighters, two seriously, was controlled early Sunday.

The base's criminal investigation division "has two suspects that are both minors and apparently it is alleged that they were playing with candles and one of the candles tipped over," said Capt. Tony Rothfork, a Marine spokesman.

A fire that scorched 1,040 acres in the Chatsworth Reservoir area was controlled Saturday afternoon about 2½ hours after it was started by downed power lines, Los Angeles Fire Department spokesman Steve Ventura said.

He said six houses were destroyed and another suffered 20 percent damage. Three firefighters received minor injuries.

No buildings were damaged but two firefighters were injured in a 700-acre fire in Chino Hills that began shortly before noon Saturday and was controlled at midnight, San Bernardino County Fire Capt. Darrell Alexander said. The cause was not known, he said.

In the Canyon Country area about 30 miles north of Los Angeles, 380 acres were blackened by a Friday night blaze.

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
Pass	Dble	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. — Obviously, partner has a strong hand, but he couldn't act over one heart because his suit is hearts. He has shown no interest in your clubs, and there is no reason to suspect that you have a better spot or that you should be any higher. Pass.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ1076 ♡98754 ◇105 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♡	1 ♠	?

What action do you take?
A. — We do not object if you opted to leap to four hearts, but what's the hurry? Your hand might be unsuited to a game contract. We prefer the slightly quieter action of two hearts. What we strongly disagree with is a penalty double — as a general principle, it is unsound to make a low-level penalty double when you have length in partner's suit.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q103 ♡AQ9763 ◇QJ3 ♣K
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A. — This hand has all the appearances of a misfit since partner's bidding shows a long club suit and, possibly, sub-minimum values for a two-over-one response. In such a case, it's wise to get out of the auction as quickly as possible before the doubling starts. Pass.

Q.5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ10762 ♡832 ◇8 ♣AK8
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A. — We suggest you overcall one spade. While this hand is slightly strong for a simple overcall, a takeout double would leave you awkwardly placed if the auction becomes competitive and partner competes in clubs or hearts — you won't know whether or not it's safe to introduce your spades. If partner cannot act over one spade, we doubt that you will have missed much.

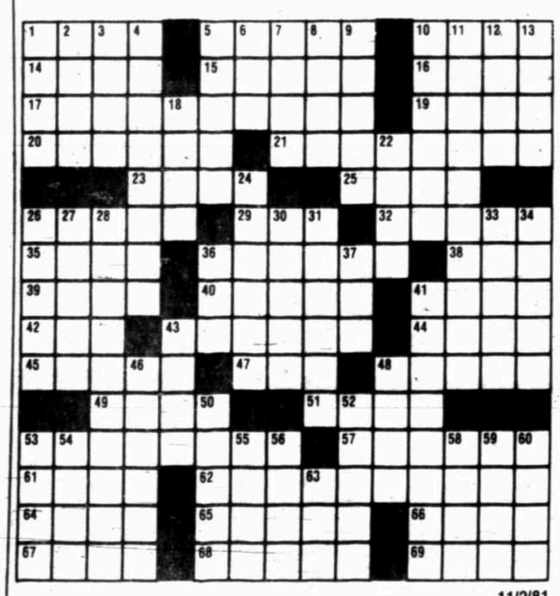

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q76 ♡A9873 ◇KQ10 ♣J7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. — There should be a slam somewhere — the question is where? For the moment, we suggest that you bid three diamonds to see what partner's next move is. The only other action we might consider is a jump to three no trump — a bid of two no trump grossly understates your values.

Bank to test computer system

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Minnesota bank holding company announced today that it will soon launch a major test of videotext technology, offering customers access to news and other types of information as well as the opportunity to bank and shop at home.

The test, unveiled by the First Bank System Inc. of Minneapolis, is thought to be the most extensive such experiment ever undertaken by a bank in the United States. If successful, it could not only spur introduction of the technology but also provide competition for communication firms — such as CBS and Knight-Ridder Newspapers — which have been in the forefront of videotext experimentation.

Videotext involves transmitting written and graphic information for reception on a specially adapted TV set or home computer terminal. By relying on a direct link to a master computer via telephone or cable TV lines, videotext users can request specific types of information, pay bills or place orders for merchandise.

The technology for videotext transmission has existed for some time. But its introduction in the U.S. has been slowed by the existence of three different types of systems and uncertainty about what services would prove attractive to the American consumer.

First Bank System, with more than a million customers in five states, hopes to resolve the latter problem by targeting its service at the substantial number of agricultural businessmen that it now serves.

Announcement of the bank's plan was made simultaneously in Washington and in Minnesota by Intelmatique, the marketing arm of the French telecommunications administration.

The bank's experiment calls for placing more than 250 videotext terminals by mid-1982 in Fargo, Wahpeton and Valley City, N.D.; and in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn. The terminals will be placed in the homes of farmers and ranchers as well as in stores and offices, and customers will gain access to the bank's computer via a local telephone call.

Customers will pay "a nomimal monthly user charge" during the experiment, the bank said, but the equipment will be installed without charge.

The system will offer "decision-making tools such as agribusiness bookkeeping systems, weather, commodity and financial reports," as well as news provided by the Minneapolis Star and Tribune Co., electronic video games, the ability to order merchandise from participating retailers and the opportunity to handle banking chores such as transferring funds, checking balances and paying bills.

Stuart C. MacIntire, senior vice president of First Bank System, said the initial experiment would not be expected to turn a profit. If those using the system like it, however, the bank will establish a for-profit system in the five states where it operates: Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana, MacIntire said.

He added the bank intended to keep the monthly charge for its customers within the range of a telephone bill.

'Crippled' toys help kids deal with handicaps

By MARTIE BARNES
Associated Press Writer

MANOMET, Mass. (AP) — The elephant has a hearing aid, the cuddly bear an artifical leg and the ordinarily frisky monkey can't get out of his wheelchair.

The animals are toys and their creator, Margaret Gibbons of Lowell, has designed them as a comfort to handicapped youngsters and a learning aid for "able-bodied children."

"It's a good way for getting able-bodied children acquainted with handicaps and the paraphernalia that goes along with them," she said.

Ms. Gibbons is an occupational therapist who works with students in the Plymouth-Carver school system in Manomet and now also stuffs and finishes her eight animal creations with colleague Bonnie Stone, a Malden toymaker. They are marketed under the name "Special Friends."

"If a child can take Bear and play with his false leg ... I see the potential of extending it to a real-life situation more possible," she said in an interview at the Indian Brook Elementary School here.

In addition to Elephant, Bear and Monkey, there is Rabbit, who has an artificial arm holding a carrot; Snake, who is paralyzed and rides upon a wheeled and wavy "snakeskate" theoretically controlled with his tongue in the way some real electric wheelchairs are; Penguin, who is blind and carries a walking stick; and Frog, who wears a cast for a broken leg.

"My favorite is Monkey. He's No. 1," said 11-year-old Chris Bell, of Plymouth, a student at Indian Brook. Bell has cerebral palsy and uses a wheelchair as does Monkey, whose legs are sewn together to characterize the tightness and lack of mobility experienced by those with the disease.

Ms. Gibbons conceived of "Special Friends" in 1976 and began making the toys with Ms. Stone in 1977.

The idea evolved from Ms. Gibbons' experience with a paralyzed pet squirrel. Considering his disability, she made several contraptions to increase its mobility and in the process, she said, thought others might be able to relate in the same way with toy animals.

"When I first started putting them out, a lot of adults were offended ... because of their fear," she said. "A number of people put me down for doing it. They said how horrible it was, as if I was putting their children down."

Chlamydia leading cause of blindness

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A venereal disease that affects 3 million Americans a year and is the world's leading cause of preventable blindness has maintained relative anonymity by mimicking the symptons of gonorrhea, a researcher says.

Dr. Priscilla Wyrick, a bacteriologist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said the disease, chlamydia, is more common than either gonorrhea or syphillis but often was treated as a virus or as gonorrhea.

Dr. Stuart Brown of the VD control division of the national Centers for Disease Control said Sunday that about 1 million cases of gonorrhea are reported each year with another 1 million going unreported. He estimated there were 75,000 cases of syphillis each year with between 200,000 and 500,000 new cases of genital herpes.

Symptons of penicillin-resistant chlamydia resemble those of gonorrhea, Ms. Wyrick said in a recent inverview, and often are lumped into that category. But unlike gonorrhea, chlamydia is associated primarily with people of middle and upper incomes between the ages of 20 and 35.

While not life-threatening, chlamydia is the world's leading cause of preventable blindness and can result in male and female sterility, Ms. Wyrick said. The bacterium duplicates itself within cells of the mouth, intestines, lungs and genital region until the growing colony destroys the affected cell.

Her seven years of research on the disease suggests its occurrence in pregnant women may lead to miscarriage, low birth weight, premature birth and an increased risk of fetal and newborn deaths, she said.

"There is a 65 percent chance that a child born to an affected mother is going to develop either eye disease ... or pneumonia," she said. "But eye disease can be cured relatively easily in this country and children don't often die of the pneumonia."

She said the same is not true in developing countries, where people constantly are reinfected due to poor hygiene and medical care and blindness due to chlamydia is common.

The disease stymied researchers for years because it was thought to be a virus, Ms. Wyrick said. And it often was misdiagnosed as gonorrhea because both are characterized by burning urination and a watery discharge.

While the discovery that it is a bacterium helped scientists, it made tests for chlamydia expensive.

Because both chlamydia and gonorrhea respond well to treatment with the antibiotic tetracycline, many physicians have begun prescribing it when in doubt about a diagnosis, she said. A misdiagnosis often led to mistreatment because, "while gonorrhea is quite susceptible to penicillin, chlamydia is not," Ms. Wyrick said.

The wide-ranging effects of chlamydia once led scientists to search for a vaccine against it, Ms. Wyrick said, but repeated failures to come up with a vaccine and better ways to treat the symptoms halted the search.

But she said her laboratory is working to discover the underlying mechanisms of the organism — so scientists will be better able to find a vaccine.

Chlamydia's virus-like ability to get inside the body's cells makes it difficult to cure, Ms. Wyrick said.

"Antibodies produced by the body are ineffective," she said. "It is the bacterium's ability to remain within its host cell that prevents the body from effectively combatting it."

That ability — and an extended dormant stage the bacterium goes through — also limits the effectiveness of antibiotics, she said.

"Chlamydia is rather difficult to completely get rid of. The organism has to be in an active phase of work in order for tetracycline to work. It is quite possible that some of these organisms may not be in that active state."

Halloween candy filled with glass

LONE GROVE, Okla.(AP) — Police were searching today for the source of at least four pieces of trick-or-treat candy spiked with crushed glass and straight pins.

Authorities said the search was narrowed by the fact that one piece of spiked candy was found in the bag of a child who had been to only three streets in one housing addition.

Children turned in their trick-or-treat bags to police after a 14-year-old boy swalled a Tootsie Roll sprinkled with crushed glass, police said.

A search of the bags turned up at least three more pieces of soft candy, all securely wrapped, spiked with either glass or straight pins, a police dispatcher said.

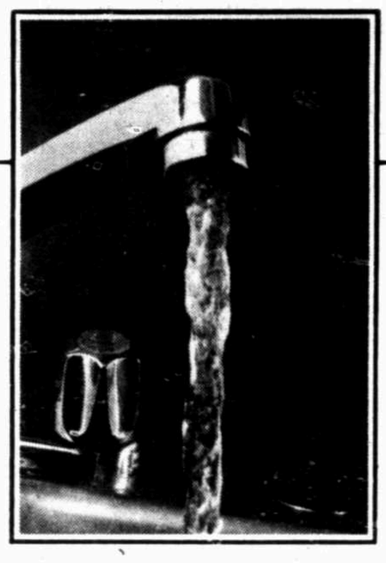

The injured boy, Tim Chamberlain, was treated and released from Ardmore's Memorial Hospital late Saturday after swallowing three-fourths of a Tootsie Roll filled with crushed glass, said his father, Ronald Chamberlain.

The boy, who had been given the candy by a friend who had been trick-or-treating, was home when he ate the candy, helping the family give candy to youngsters costumed for Halloween, Chamberlain said.

"We found one piece of glass," Chamberlain said. "He felt it when he was chewing the candy up. We showed it to the police."

Lone Grove police and volunteers went door-to-door in this southern Oklahoma town of about 3,000 warning parents to either throw away the candy collected during trick or treating or turn it in to police.

LET'S KEEP THE WATER RUNNING IN TEXAS!

In cities and towns all across Texas, local water problems are threatening to erupt into one enormous statewide crisis. Countless communities are facing growing water supply, water treatment, sewage treatment and flood control needs estimated to cost a staggering $50 billion over the next 25 years. To make matters worse, federal funds for water projects have recently been slashed.

But on November 3, Texans have the opportunity to approve a financing plan which will help ease that heavy burden on our local communities by putting a portion of our state budget surplus to work for us.

The plan proposed is Proposition 4, and it's recommended by the Governor, three former governors, two-thirds of the legislature and just about every mayor in the state.

PASSAGE OF AMENDMENT NO. 4 WOULD:

- Make possible the sale of more than $200 million in authorized and urgently needed state bonds to address a backlog of needed projects.
- Create a loan guaranty program to enable local communities to save millions of dollars in issuing future bonds.
- Begin to build a "nest egg" revolving loan fund from part of the state's budget surplus to assist local governments in financing future water and sewage projects.

Texas' water needs must be met, either now or in the future. We can act now, and save money . . . or pay the higher price later for our neglect, with possible increased taxes. If you pay a water bill or a tax bill, it's in your best interest to vote FOR Amendment No. 4.

Basin oilmen drilling four cats, two pay

West Texas oilmen have slated four wildcat projects for the Basin region. One is now being drilled. A couple of 'cats have been made to pay.

DAWSON WILDCAT

May Petroleum Inc., Dallas, will drill the No. 1 Gus White, an 8,700-foot wildcat, four miles northwest of Lamesa.

The location is 833 feet from the north, and 2,173 feet from the west line of section 5, block 2, D.L. Cunningham survey.

It appears there are no wells of comparable depth significantly near the drillsite.

GLASSCOCK VENTURES

Davis Oil Co., Houston, has staked the 11,700-foot wildcat No. 1 Glen Brunson, 13 miles northwest of Garden City.

The project spots 467 feet from the south and east lines of section 6, block 35, T-3-S, T&PRR survey.

It appears the well will be two or three times deeper than any other in the vicinity.

****

Diamond Shamrock Corp., Amarillo, will drill to 11,000 feet the wildcat No. 1 Calverly "24". Shamrock's drilling permit application filed with the Railroad Commission indicates the well will be drilled seven miles southeast of Garden City. However, it spots seven miles northwest of Garden City.

It is staked 1,320 feet from the north and east lines of section 24, block 35, T-3-S, T&PRR survey.

This well, it appears, will be about 3—4,000 feet deeper than nearby wells. The Blalock Lake (Wolfcamp) will be tested at 7,500 feet. The drillsite is south of the Blalock Lake, East field.

STERLING PROPSPECTOR

Wagoner & Brown, Midland are drilling the 8,400-foot No. 186 Becky Terry et al, nine miles north of Sterling City. It's a re-entry of a Gulf well abandoned June 4, 1981 at 8,295 feet.

W&B filed the drilling permit application Thursday, just hours before their lease was due to expire at midnight. Permission to drill came through in time to save the lease.

The project spots 1,980 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the west line of section 86, block 2, H&TC survey.

HOWARD FIND

Worth Petroleum Co. has completed its No. 1 Roberta as a Spraberry discovery in Howard County, 10 northwest Big Spring.

The well pumped 50 barrels of 41 gravity oil, no water, through perforations between 6,626 and 7,603 feet, which had been acidized with 3,750 gallons, and fractured ith 90,000 gallons and 70,000 pounds. Gas to oil ratio is 500 to 1.

The total depth is 10,505 feet, plugged back to 7,700 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,063 feet.

The site is 467 feet from the southwest and northwest lines of section 34, block 33, T&PRR survey.

STERLING DISCOVERY

Astro Energy Corp., Houston, has completed an Ellenburger discovery in Sterling County 10 miles southwest of Sterling City.

The No. 1 Johnson pumped 75 barrels of 45.8 gravity oil plus 40 barrels of water. Gas to oil ratio was 400 to 1.

Production was through perforations between 7,973 and 7,995 feet, which had acidized with 3,000 gallons.

The well was drilled to 7,995 feet, and 4 1/2 inch casing was set at 7,990 feet.

Wellsite is 467 feet from the west, and 760 feet from the north line of section 196, block 2, H&TC survey, abstract 1232.

Marathon bidding may become repeat of Conoco play

By KAREN TUMULTY
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

Spurned as a suitor last summer by Conoco Inc. shareholders, Mobil Corp. has begun a campaign to acquire Marathon Oil Co., the nation's 17th-largest oil company. But analysts are warning this second prospective takeover is likely to become a replay of the first — a protracted, high-stakes bidding war.

Mobil announced Friday a tender offer for as many as 40 million Marathon shares at $85 a share, or a total $3.4 billion.

That price represents a substantial premium over the $67.125 at which Marathon shares were selling on the New York Stock Exchange Friday before the Mobil announcement halted trading in Marathon stock. But analysts quickly pointed out that the offer is only a fraction of the value of Marathon's assets.

Most attractive among those assets is Marathon's oil and gas reserves, which analysts value at about $140 a share. With energy price decontrol and the continuing instability of overseas oil supplies, domestic energy sources have become highly prized by major oil companies. And buying under-valued oil companies is much cheaper than exploring for and producing those reserves, some analysts say.

When Marathon's refineries and other properties are added to its reserves, Marathon may be worth as much as $200 a share, said analyst Laurence E. Tween of the New York brokerage Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Barry Sahgal, an energy analyst for Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., agreed: "If Mobil gets it at the $85 price, it's stealing."

While companies' stocks rarely trade at a price representing the full worth of their assets, the great disparity between the two values in Marathon's case may spur other large companies to attempt to outbid Mobil.

Analyst Sanford Margoshes, also of Bache, said it is "not inconceivable" that Marathon may eventually be acquired for more than $120 a share. Marathon was first rumored to be a takeover candidate during the "merger mania" generated by Conoco's acquisition, which was the most expensive corporate auction in history.

In a three-way battle that lasted throughout July and August, DuPont Co. outbid Mobil and Canadian distiller Seagram Co. for the nation's ninth-largest oil company. DuPont won the bidding with an offer of $7.54 billion in cash and stock.

Wall Street attention also turned to other vulnerable oil companies, and Marathon's stock rose to its current level from about $45 a share.

As speculation grew, oil companies began arranging lines of credit to use in making acquisitions or, in some cases, to fend off larger predators.

Mobil's credit line, originally intended to be used in a Conoco takeover, still contains $5.4 billion in unborrowed funds, a spokesman said. However, Marathon has its own $5 billion line, which analysts said could be used to make a defensive acquisition or to line up a "white knight" merger partner that would save it from Mobil's bid.

Marathon announced last week a preliminary agreement to acquire for $650 million the U.S. oil and gas subsidiary of Husky Oil Ltd. of Calgary. However, Mobil said the purchase will not affect its move to acquire Marathon. Presumably, if Marathon were to attempt to make an acquisition in an effort to fend off Mobil, its target would have to be much larger than Husky.

Additionally, several other oil giants have billions of dollars in credit available to them. Among them are Texaco Inc. and Gulf Oil Corp., both of which analysts said may be attracted to Marathon's huge, secure, domestic oil and gas reserves. Spokesmen for the two companies declined to comment on whether they are contemplating an attempt to buy Marathon.

Marathon, itself, also had no immediate comment on how it will react to Mobil's offer. Mobil Chairman Rawleigh Warner said he is seeking "a prompt meeting (with Marathon management) for the purpose of working out procedures with them to complete this acquisition in a constructive manner."

Natural gas price decontrol controversy may get hot soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan meets with Republican congressional leaders this week to discuss speeding up decontrol of natural gas prices, an action consumer groups say would add billions of dollars to homeowners bills.

Reagan's meeting with GOP leaders in the House and Senate on Tuesday is only one indication that natural gas — the nation's most popular heating fuel — is on the verge of again becoming a major national issue.

The Senate Energy Committee has also scheduled hearings Thursday and Friday on natural gas decontrol. And two contrasting studies on the issue were released Sunday.

Reagan has had before him since August a plan by his Cabinet Council on Natural Resources for speeding up the current timetable under which price controls are being lifted. But officials say concerns over the budget and then the Saudi Arabian arms sale put natural gas on the backburner.

But administration sources, who ask not to be identified by name, say the president is likely to finally put the issue before Congress soon after Tuesday's strategy session.

In anticipation of the battle opening, two groups on opposite sides of the debate issued new reports Sunday on the effects of decontrol.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition predicted that U.S. farmers would face $1.54 billion in increased production costs in 1982 because of accelerated decontrol, primarily through higher costs for fertilizers.

The study predicted a price for nitrogen fertilizers of $275 a ton in 1982 under the current decontrol schedule, but said that amount would be $100 more under a speed-up in decontrol. By 1984, the price difference would be $230 and fertilizer would be selling for almost triple current prices, the study said.

"Thousands of American farmers would stare the spectre of bankruptcy in the eye if they were forced to absorb the devastating price increases predicted in the study," said Robert J. Mullins, legislative affairs director for the National Farmers Union.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, a group of 200 union, consumer and farm groups, in earlier studies has predicted that accelerated decontrol will double homeowners' bills, increase inflation by 2 to 3 percent a year and result in the loss of 3.4 million jobs between 1982 and 1985.

However, the Northeast Coalition for Energy Equity, representing heating oil marketers in nine Northeastern states, said in a study released Sunday that the federal government could increase revenues by as much as $49 billion over the next four years by completely decontrolling natural gas in 1982.

Commission applies for mining grant

The Railroad Commission has authorized its Surface Mining and Reclamation Division to apply to the U.S. Department of the Interior for approximately $409,374 in federal funds for the administration and enforcement of the state's surface coal mining regulatory program.

If approved by the federal agency, the grant would become effective for one year beginning Dec. 1.

The funds would reimburse the Commission for 50 percent of the program's expenses.

Under provisions of the federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, a state with an approved regulation program is eligible for a federal grant which would partially reimburse the cost of regulating surface mining in the state.

The RRC program was approved Feb. 16, 1980, by the federal agency.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When you have the Dallas Cowboys down in the fourth quarter, they have you just where they want you.

The Cowboys, who probably invented the mold for comebacks, did it again Sunday as they rallied for two touchdowns in the final period to beat the Philadelphia Eagles, 17-14.

The Dallas triumph tied the teams for first place, each at 7-2, in the National Football League's National Conference East race. The two meet again, in Dallas, Dec. 13.

The Eagles led 14-3 starting the fourth quarter. But Dallas quarterback Danny White threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Doug Cosbie to make it 14-10, and later Tony Dorsett ran 9 yards for the winning score.

The Eagles rallied to reach a first down at the Dallas 16 with 2:06 remaining. After three plays netted nothing, barefoot kicker Tony Franklin was wide left with a 34-yard field goal attempt.

THE EAGLES had gained the 14-3 lead after Rafael Septien put Dallas in front with a 31-yard, second-quarter field goal. Wilbert Montgomery scored from the 2 in the same period, and quarterback Ron Jaworski completed an 85-yard pass and run play to wide receiver Harold Carmichael in the third.

White tried to explain the Cowboys' ability to stare adversity in the face and laugh.

"It's a miserable feeling when you're behind," White observed. "We always come out and play our best football when we're behind. We've been doing it all year."

Last week against Miami, the Cowboys were down 13 points with little more than four minutes remaining and won, 28-27.

Then, just to add to the Eagles' misery, White said the TD pass to Cosbie was on a broken play. It was supposed to be a short seven-yard route, but White felt pressure and had to step up in the pocket. Cosbie readjusted and went into the end zone to make the catch.

ON THE winning touchdown, Dorett said he thought he was stopped short of the goal line by Brenard Wilson, the Eagles's cornerback he carried across the goal line.

"I felt somebody hit me, but kept digging into the end zone," said Dorsett, the National Football League's leading ground gainer.

Dorsett was held to just 78 yards by the tenacious Eagles' defense, but 24 of those came on the five-play winning drive after a short punt went out of bounds at the Eagles' 39.

The Eagles had one last chance to win, or tie and send the game into overtime. They drove from their 10 to a first down at the Dallas 16. The attack, however, stalled and Franklin missed his field goal.

Franklin made no excuses.

"The snap was good. I just didn't hit it well," Franklin said.

"There is no way to explain it. Now I'm going to be labeled that I choked under pressure. There was no way I should have missed. I'm probably the most popular guy in Dallas right now."

Eagles' coach Dick Vermeil wasted no words.

"We got beat by a better football team. I thought Dallas did a super job," Vermeil said. "They could have beaten us worse than they did."

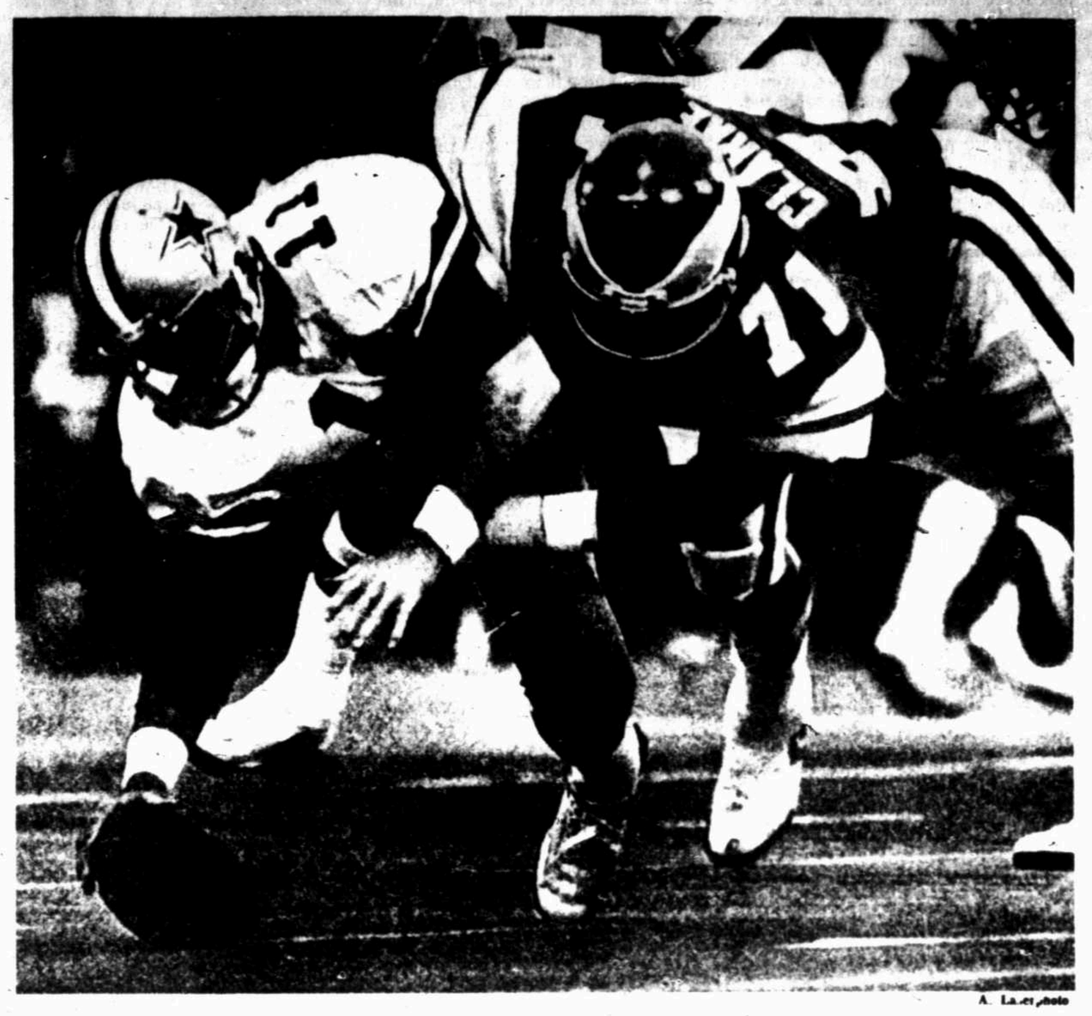

DALLAS reached the Eagles' 4 and Dorsett fumbled with 41 seconds left in the first half. Later, they drove to the 15, and linebacker Jerry Robinson intercepted a pass.

"I thought we had too many penalties, especially by the specialty teams, which left us (after kickoffs) with our backs to the wall," Vermeil said.

Ron Jaworski had to leave the game during his team's final drive when he was speared by Dallas defender Dennis Thurman. Vermeil said Jaworski suffered bruised ribs.

"I thought it was a clean play," said Thurman, although Dallas was penalized 15 yards for the hit.

"He had the ball when I left my feet, and the referee said I hit him with my helmet," Thurman said. "I don't care what people think of me, but I apologize to him (Jaworski)."

A. Lavergne

Cowboys' quarterback Danny White is sacked for 10-yard loss by Eagles Ken Clarke in the first period, but things were to get better for Dallas.

49ers for real, Steelers agree

WILLIAM BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The San Francisco 49ers may have reached the point where they won't surprise anyone else around the National Football League ... unless they lose, that is.

Picked no better than third in the National Football Conference West by most prognisticators, the 49ers raised some eyebrows this year with six victories in their first eight games, including a romp over Dallas and a road triumph against Los Angeles.

San Francisco did it again Sunday with a 17-14 road win over the Pittsburgh Steelers, giving the 49ers six victories in a row and a 7-2 record, best in the NFL along with the Cowboys and Philadelphia.

"When we beat the Rams, I think people started to believe in us," said Carlton Williamson, one of three rookies in San Francisco's defensive backfield. "But we knew this was going to be a big test. Now maybe everybody will believe we're for real."

"This was the best physical test for us, playing away from home and playing in this stadium, where very few teams win," said 49ers Coach Bill Walsh. "I'm proud we could stand in against this team and hold our own.

QUARTERBACK Joe Montana had thrown a 49ers-record 122 passes without an interception until Steelers cornerback Mel Blount picked one off and ran 50 yards for a touchdown to cut a San Francisco lead to 10-7 in the third quarter.

Montana threw another interception — to linebacker Jack Lambert — on the 49ers' next possession, and Pittsburgh converted the turnover into a 22-yard touchdown pass from Terry Bradshaw to Jim Smith.

But Montana engineered a 43-yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter after Williamson intercepted a Bradshaw pass, the Steelers' sixth turnover of the day. Walt Easley ran the final yard for the game-winning touchdown with 5:35 to go.

Raiders 27, Patriots 17

Cliff Branch put Oakland ahead of New England with its first second-half touchdown in six weeks, a 14-yard scoring pass from Marc Wilson in the final period.

Branch's touchdown catch, in the left corner of the end zone with eight minutes remaining, put the Raiders ahead 20-17. They scored again with 1:22 left when defensive end Willie Jones ran 9 yards for a touchdown after Patriots quarterback Steve Grogan fumbled.

Packers 34, Seahawks 24

Quarterback David Whitehurst ran for a touchdown and passed for three more, including a 38-yarder to James Lofton to overcome Seattle's 24-21 lead over Green Bay.

Dolphins 27, Colts 10

David Woodley passed for two touchdowns and ran for a third to lead Miami over Baltimore, which lost its eighth straight game after a season-opening victory.

Woodley ran 3 yards on a draw for the Dolphins first score in the first quarter and later hit Duriel Harris with a 22-yard scoring pass and Ron Lee for a 7-yard TD.

Bills 22, Browns 13

Joe Cribbs caught three touchdown passes from Joe Ferguson and finished with five receptions for 163 yards, 14 yards short of the Buffalo record.

Ferguson connected on TD passes for 58, 15 and 60 yards to Cribbs, who added 85 yards rushing on 23 carries. The Buffalo defense hounded Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe all day, sacking him six times.

Jets 26, Giants 7

Pat Leahy kicked four field goals, Richard Todd threw a 39-yard touchdown pass to Wesley Walker and the New York Jets' defense registered nine sacks to make a runaway of the game between the two metropolitan-area rivals.

Buccaneers 20, Bears 10

Tight end Jimmie Giles and quarterback Doug Williams combined on an 81-yard scoring play and Williams tossed a 51-yard touchdown pass to Kevin House, leading Tampa Bay over Chicago.

Bill Capece kicked two field goals for Tampa Bay, covering 46 and 30 yards. Jerry Eckwood led the Bucs with 110 yards on 21 carries.

Chargers 22, Chiefs 20

San Diego tied Kansas City for the lead in the AFC West, both with 6-3 records, when Rolf Benirschke kicked a 22-yard field goal with 13 seconds left in the game.

Nick Lowery gave the Chiefs a 20-19 lead with a 32-yard field goal with 6:32 remaining, but the Chargers drove 70 yards in 16 plays to set up the winning kick.

Rams 20, Lions 13

Wendell Tyler raced 69 yards for a touchdown just three minutes into the game, then scored from a yard out with 9:59 left in the game to give Los Angeles its victory over Detroit.

Eric Hipple, who passed for 607 yards and five touchdowns and ran for four more in his first two starts for the Lions, completed only seven of 25 against the Rams. He threw 14 yards to David Hill for Detroit's only touchdown and Ed Murray kicked 49- and 45-yard field goals.

Falcons 41, Saints 10

Steve Bartkowski hit wide receiver Alfred Jenkins with three long touchdown passes as Atlanta bombed New Orleans.

Jenkins, who finished with five receptions for 179 yards, scored on plays covering 48 yards in the second quarter, 60 yards in the third quarter and 47 yards in the final period.

Redskins 42, Cardinals 21

Quarterback Joe Theismann threw three touchdown passes and John Riggins ran for Washington's other three scores against St. Louis.

Theismann threw scoring strikes of 38 yards to Art Monk and 51 to Virgil Seay on the Redskins' first two possessions and then hit Monk on a 10-yard TD in the fourth quarter.

Oilers lose game, Earl at Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — For once, the Cincinnati Bengals didn't have to worry about stopping Earl Campbell. An opportunistic offense and a pulled muscle took care of that.

With Houston's biggest weapon watching from the sidelines, the Bengals built a commanding lead late in the second quarter and breezed to a 34-21 victory Sunday that broke Campbell's and the Oilers' dominance over Cincinnati.

With a 6-3 record, Cincinnati also gained sole possession of first place in the American Conference Central Division with Pittsburgh losing to San Francisco.

It was the Bengals' first victory over Houston in the last seven games. Not coincidentally, it was the first time that the Bengals held Campbell, a fourth-year running back, to under 100 yards rushing (he had 74 yards in 14 carries before pulling a hamstring).

"We played our game today," said linebacker Bo Harris, who had one of three Cincinnati interceptions that led to scores. "We didn't let them play their game."

Campbell's injury was only part of the reason. The Bengals' 24-point barrage in the second quarter forced the ground-minded Oilers to go to the air — sometimes with disasterous results.

A PAIR of second-quarter interceptions off quarterback Ken Stabler set up a touchdown pass by Ken Anderson and a field goal by Jim Breech. A third-quarter interception resulted in the last of Anderson's three touchdown tosses.

"We played almost flawless ball," said Bengals tight end Dan Ross, who caught two of Anderson's TD passes on a pattern installed specially for the game. "I think this game and the Pittsburgh game (a 34-7 Cincinnati victory) were two of the best we've put together."

Anderson was almost flawless in the early going, completing 13 of his first 16 passes. He got a rest for part of the fourth quarter, after his third TD pass put the Bengals ahead 34-7.

"He's like a heat-seeking missile," Ross said of the quarterback, who completed 21 of 30 passes for 281 yards.

John Reaves took over for Houston when Stabler hurt his left wrist and directed a pair of fourth-quarter scoring drives.

THE OILERS threw the ball just six times in their 17-10 victory over Cincinnati earlier this season. Stabler and Reaves combined for 25 completions in 37 attempts Sunday for 301 yards.

"This forced us to go to the passing game today," said Houston Coach Ed Bles. "Maybe in the long run it will help us."

Another reason for the Bengals' success was their ability to control the Oilers' special teams. The Bengals bottled up Carl Roaches, who returned a kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown against Cincinnati earlier this year.

The victory gave Cincinnati a one-game lead over Pittsburgh and two games over both 4-5 Houston and Cleveland in the division.

Pure hustle makes 6-error man Series MVP

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK – The World Series, the first one in history where the two teams were certifiably not the best in baseball, came to a merciful end in Yankee Stadium last Wednesday. The Dodgers, who would have been second in their division and third in the league had a full schedule been played, beat the Yankees, who would have been third in their division and fourth in the league.

The game may have been lost in the dugout.

It is the bottom of the fourth inning in this Series where the DH or designated hitters are not permitted on this alternate year. The score is tied, 1-1, and the Yankees have a runner on second with two outs. The pitcher is coming up next, Tommy John, no threat to Stan the Man at the plate. Tommy Lasorda, the Dodger manager, hits on a stratagem. He will walk better Larry Milbourne. This will force Yankee Manager Bob Lemon to an agonizing decision. Tommy John is pitching a masterful game. But Lemon needs that run on second. Or thinks he does. He sighs, sends up a pinch hitter. Bobby Murcer pops out.

The Dodgers feast on the pitchers who succeed John. For only the second time in eight tries, they manage to win in New York.

It is an anticlimactic end to the most bewildering season in all baseball annals. Scholars had to search the box score for a guy to give the gold watch and the scholarship.

I HAD my own candidate and it was probably an exclusive. Bear with me while I make my case.

This Dodger team which finally broke through to a world championship was put together by the registered geniuses of the Dodger organization over a decade ago. This may have been the last game they will play as a unit. They were Lasorda's boys, the Little Boys Blue. He nursed them, nicknamed them, bragged on them, cursed them, prodded them and they won pennants but always came up a dollar short to the lordly Yankees and the sneaky-good A's in World Series.

The second baseman, a feisty little Portuguese-American from Rhode Island, made some of the big plays for them. He hit two World Series homers in one game, he played with the burning-eyed intensity of the self-made ballplayer, self-made infielder. He was part of the longest-lasting infield unit in baseball history. They weren't the most stylish, just the most durable. Nobody wrote any poems about them but they threw in four pennants in eight years and Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance never did that.

SOMEHOW, IN this season when all baseball turned sour, it all turned sour for Davey Lopes. Management turned off, followed by the fans and, to some extent, the media, the town, the world. Davey's batting average plummeted. He began to get hit in the belt buckle by double-play balls. He got down on himself. He was in his twilight as a Dodger, maybe as a ballplayer. The word was out to hide the knives and forks if Davey came in the room and to nail the hotel room windows so he couldn't climb out on any ledges.

You saw him make an abattoir out of second base during this World Series. He set records that may never be broken. Records for ineptitude.

But come with me to the sixth inning of Game 4 of this year's World Series. The Dodgers have been battling back from 4-0 and 6-3 deficits. Jay Johnstone has just hit a two-run home run to bring the deficit to one run, 6-5. They are still one run shy as Davey Lopes comes to bat and lifts a high fly into short right. Outfielder Reggie Jackson has a bead on it. It's a "can o'corn," the ballplayers' term for a routine fly ball.

Davey Lopes does not treat it as a routine fly ball. Davey Lopes tears around first base and he is safely standing on second as the ball comes down on Reggie Jackson's chest.

Not five ballplayers, World Series or no, would have run out that popup as sincerely. Pete Rose would. And Davey Lopes did. On the next batter, he steals third base. When Bill Russell lifts a single to right, Davey Lopes ties the score and, eventually, the World Series.

IN GAME 6 in Yankee Stadium, in the fifth inning, the Dodgers are again tied, 1-1, when Lopes opens the inning with a ground single to left.

Russell sacrifices him to second. Lopes is on second when Ron Cey comes up and hits what appears to be a routine soft grounder behind second base. But Lopes doesn't believe in "routine" anything. When second baseman Willie Randolph unaccountably lets te ball go through his glove and roll dead on the outfield grass, Lopes has torn around third and scored standing up.

That may have been the key play of the game. If an out is made there, it is the third out and the score is still 1-1. But Dusty Baker keeps the inning alive with a single. And Pedro Guerrero triples. The Dodgers have all the runs they need. They have, at last, avenged past humiliations at this historic ballyard.

They awarded the gold watches and the scholarship to triple MVPs: Guerrero, whose homer tied Game 5 and whose RBIs put the final game out of sight: Cey, whose bat and glove mocked the Yanks, and Steve Yeager, the overlooked catcher.

Davey Lopes will be remembered in this Series for making the most errors by a second baseman in the history of the Series -- 6.

THEY DON'T keep stats for running out pop flies to short right field or legging it for home on an apparently sure out to a sure-handed infielder.

Lopes won't get a watch, a car, a headline. All he'll get is "E-4" in the record book. No one will remember that none of his errors figured in the scoring.

In Inning 6 of the championship-clinching game last Wednesday, Lopes drew a walk. He reached second when Russell singled to left and pitcher Burt Hooton scored on a Little League throw from outfielder Dave Winfield. Then he led a double steal, stealing third base for the second time in the Series.

They'll talk of the Dodgers' Kiddy-Kar infield around the watering holes where baseball is remembered in the future. They'll be remembered not for their slick fielding but their robust hitting and the way they found a way to beat you. No one was any better at that than Davey Lopes. No one was any better at that in this Series. I don't care what the vote was. He can have my watch.

Texas leads chase for Cotton berth

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

There are two distinct leaders in the Southwest Conference football clubhouse today.

In first place, a half game ahead of the pack, is the probation-blemished Southern Methodist Mustangs.

In first place to become the host team for the Cotton Bowl is the University of Texas.

The Mustangs, who can't go bowling or appear on television this year because of a one-year probation, outmuscled the Texas Aggies 27-7 Saturday to boost their record to 4-1.

Just a half-step behind comes the Texas Longhorns who sacked Texas Tech quarterbacks 15 times in a 26-9 victory over the Red Raiders. The Longhorns are 3-1.

Arkansas, Baylor, Houston and Texas A&M University are locked with 3-2 records while Rice is 2-3, Texas Christian 1-4, and Texas Tech 0-5.

Houston outlasted the hardluck Texas Christian Horned Frogs 20-16 in a rain-drenched regionally televised game in which TCU lost quarterback Steve Stamp for the year with a dislocated shoulder.

ARKANSAS drilled Rice 41-7 in the only other SWC matchup while defending champion Baylor was idle, preparing for its trip to Arkansas this coming Saturday.

Eric Dickerson scored three touchdowns and rushed for 123 yards in SMU's victory before 62,646 fans in soaked Kyle Field.

The Mustangs, of course, had the bad news going into the game that noseguard Michael Carter has been lost for the season because of surgery to repair torn ligaments and a torn cartilage in his right knee.

SMU surprised A&M with a strong passing game.

"We worked extremely hard this week in practice on being a better throwing team," said Coach Ron Meyer. "We had to take some pressure off the running game."

Dickerson said, "We wanted to try to do some different things to shake up the other team a little bit."

TCU COACh F.A. Dry said Stamp, who hurt his shouldler making a tackle, "is finished, out for the season. I'm no medical authority but I think he's through. I don't know who I'm going to start at Texas Tech but I was pleased with the way Eddie Clark stepped in."

Raul Allegre kicked four field goals in Texas' victory while Arkansas freshman quarterback Brad Taylor directed an offense that rollled up 618 yards against Rice.

Rice Coach Ray Alborn said of the Razorback whipping: "This was our worst game and I'm embarrassed by it. I figure our players are embarrassed too. Hell, I'm concerned about our equipment ... we gave them everything else out there."

The quarterback sacks by Texas amounted to 99 yards in total losses.

In games this week, Rice is at SMU, TCU is at Texas Tech, Baylor is in Little Rock, and Texas travels to Houston. The last two games are night affairs although there is talk the Baylor-Arkansas game could be switched to daytime for NCAA television

Old guard back on top

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The college football season has been one of the screwiest ever, but there are signs that normalcy may be returning.

Nebraska and Oklahoma are 1-2 in the Big Eight, Alabama and Georgia are the only teams with perfect records in Southeastern Conference play and, just like old times, there is Ohio State atop the Big Ten with Michigan right on its heels.

Although they were not ranked in The Associated Press Top Twenty last week, the Ohio State Buckeyes took over the Big Ten lead Saturday with a 45-33 triumph over Purdue as Cedric Anderson set up one touchdown by blocking a punt and scored twice on passes of 47 and 23 yards from Art Schlichter.

That gave the Buckeyes a 4-1 conference mark, just ahead of 15th-ranked Michigan, a 34-13 winner over Minnesota; Illinois, which knocked off No.16 Iowa 24-7, and Wisconsin, which handed Northwestern its 28th consecutive setback 52-0, tying the major college record for futility. Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin all have 4-2 league marks to Ohio State's 4-1. Iowa is 3-2.

THE PACIFIC-10 Conference, which provides the host team in the Rose Bowl, also has a tight five-team race thanks to fourth-ranked Southern California's 41-17 trouncing of No.14 Washington State as Marcus Allen rushed yor 289 yards and scored four times, once on a pass from John Mazur.

Tenth-ranked Arizona State, idle over the weekend, leads with a 4-1 mark. Washington, ranked No.18 and a 42-31 winner over Stanford, is 4-1 to 3-1 for Southern Cal and 3-1-1 for both UCLA and Washington State.

Any hope for a Nov. 28 battle of unbeatens between top-rated Penn State and runnerup Pitt ended when unranked Miami knocked off the Nittany Lions 17-14, the fifth time this season a No.1 team has been upset. Penn State joins Michigan, Notre Dame, Southern California and Texas, all of whom blew earlier No.1 rankings.

With Penn State becoming the latest team to find the No.1 position too much to handle, Pitt and Clemson, last week's 2-3 teams, are the only unbeatens in the Top Twenty. Pitt opened a 29-10 led over Boston College as Dan Marino threw his 20th and 21st touchdown passes of the season and scored another, then held on for a 29-24 victory. Meanwhile, third-ranked Clemson set an Atlantic Coast Conference scoring record in smashing Wake Forest 82-24.

ELSEWHERE in the Top Ten, fifth-ranked Georgia swamped Temple 49-3, No.6 Texas whipped Texas Tech 26-9, eighth-ranked Alabama edged No.7 Mississippi State 13-10 and ninth-ranked North Carolina downed Maryland 17-10.

In the Second Ten, Kansas State upset No.11 Iowa State 10-7, No.12 Nebraska downed Kansas 31-15, No.13 Southern Methodist trounced Texas A&M 27-7, No.17 Florida State mauled Western Carolina 56-31 as Greg Allen rushed for a freshman record 322 yards, No.19 Oklahoma romped over Colorado 49-0 and No.20 Arkansas swamped Rice 41-7.

An 80-yard pass play from Jim Kelly to Larry Brodsky and three field by Danny Miller helped Miami open a 17-0 lead over Penn State. The losers' Todd Blackledge, who passed for 358 yards, threw for a pair of touchdowns in the final period but the Nittany Lions committed two costly turnovers in the final seven minutes — a fumble at the Miami 25 and an interception at the 10.

"The important thing is that everyone in America got a chance to see that this Miami program is on the move, that we can play with anybody in the country and are still improving," said Coach Howard Schnellenberger.

"I can't tell you how very proud I am of my assistant coaches and this team and all the people who have supported it through the last 2½ years. This is a culmination of an awful lot of work by an awful lot of people. I take my hat off to the entire football team."

PITT'S MARINO threw TD passes of 14 yards to John Brown and 32 to Dwight Collins and ran 1 yard for another score before the Panthers let BC get close. Thd Panthers turned the ball over four times in the final period but allowed only one touchdown.

"With a young team, one of your problems can be instant success. We have a lot of young players who have not paid the price to get where we are," said Coach Jackie Sherrill.

Chuck McSwain ran for three touchdowns, Cliff Austin added two and Homer Jordan threw a pair of scoring passes to Perry Tuttle as Clemson never had to punt in crushing Wake Forest. The Tigers, more noted for their rugged defense, set 17 school and conference offense records. One of them was 756 yards in total offense, with 536 coming on the ground.

"We had a good time today," said Tuttle. "The way Wake Forest was playing defense, they were giving our receivers a lot of things or either going man-to-man. We didn't feel they could do either and get away with it."

Southern Cal handed previously tied Washington State its first defeat as Allen boosted his 1981 rushing yardage to 1,725 in 279 carries, with three games left. The record is 1,948 by Pitt's Tony Dorsett in 1976.

"I saw him fly into the Coliseum before the game," WSU Coach Jim Walden quipped. "He goes into a telephone booth back there and changes suits. He's Superman."

GEORGIA'S flu-stricken Herschel Walker played less than half the game but rushed for 112 yards and four touchdowns as the Bulldogs drubbed Temple.

Is Phoenix in NFL's future?

(Compiled from R-T wire services)

Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt reportedly met with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to discuss the possibility of a franchise in Phoenix. Last week, representatives of three groups seeking a pro football team here met with Phoenix Mayor Margaret Hance about the possibility. But Hance said she made it clear to all the groups that the city would support a franchise but not if it meant building a stadium solely with tax-generated money. Arizona State University athletic officials and the state's Board of Regents have long been opposed to any plan to rent out 70,000-seat Sun Devil Stadium in suburban Tempe to NFL teams, excluding exhibition games.

One of the staunchest opponents was ex-Arizona State football Coach Frank Kush, who had a 25-year tenure there before being released in 1979. But Kush, who now coaches the Canadian Football League's Hamilton Tiger-Cats, predicted that "the NFL will have a team in Phoenix by 1985" and said he would like to be its coach...

Trainer Larry Ichinose saw dollar signs when lightweight Andy Ganigan landed a left hook to the ribs of Sean O'Grady, putting O'Grady down for the third time in the second round at Little Rock Saturday. "That opens some doors for us. Now, we have a chance to make some money. We've been fighting for peanuts. For nine years, he couldn't get a break. Then one day we get a call that we can fight Sean O'Grady at Little Rock. It's crazy." Ganigan, 29, was a late replacement against O'Grady, 22, who came in with a 76-2 record. O'Grady was scheduled to fight Howard Davis, who withdrew because of a rib injury.

Pat O'Grady, Sean's father and manager, had said his son had prepared to chase Davis and might not be ready for the left-handed Ganigan. "I hate southpaws. We have nothing to complain about except the horseshoe in Andrew Ganigan's glove."

O'Grady had been knocked down once in his pro career and, in that fight, he got up and flattened his opponent, Ricardo Flores.

Mario Silva, Ganigan's trainer, said he did not think O'Grady recovered from a straight left in the first round. "He caught me early and kept me on the floor," O'Grady said. "I guess he felt that if he kept me on the floor I couldn't hit him."...

Vikings, Broncos, tale of quarterbacks

DENVER (AP) — This is a tale of two quarterbacks, one 38 years old, the other 26.

The former operates on a pair of legs that bear the signs of lengthy warfare in the National Football League. Numerous knee surgeries and constant pounding have caused his knees to nearly face each other, creating an agonizingly slow gait on the mercifully rare occasions when he is forced to run.

He has known both acclaim and derision while playing in Dallas and New York, but mostly cheers in his five seasons as the Denver Broncos' quarterback.

Craig Morton, like a fine wine, seems to have gotten better with age. Always a picture passer despite his other infirmities, Morton has emerged this season as the No. 1 passer in the NFL, having completed 62 percent of his throws for 1,847 yards and 16 touchdowns, with just seven interceptions.

His counterpart on the Minnesota Vikings in Monday night's nationally televised NFL game here is Tommy Kramer, who, in his fifth pro season, is nearing his prime.

Kramer, a prolific passer as a collegian at Rice, interned for two seasons until Fran Tarkenton retired, then took his lumps while learning the pro system.

This season Kramer, despite being injured early in the year, has been nearly as proficient as Morton, completing 54 percent of his passes for 1,853 yards and the same 16-7 touchdown-to-interception ratio as Morton.

Seems like racquetball courts are springing up everywhere these days, but the angle is always the same — crowded dressing areas, hollow-panel courts, and no extras. They serve you poor quality facilities and then backhand you with a top quality price.

At Paul Thorpe Spas, we believe your playing environment should help your game, not hinder it. That's why we offer the official courts of the U.S. Handball and Racquetball Association — Seamless, professional, fast-playing courts with top grade maple floors and solid concrete walls.

With your membership at Paul Thorpe Spas, you also gain access to our indoor pool, indoor banked jogging track, extensive exercise area, and complete wet areas including sauna, steam, sun rooms, whirlpool, and much more. Our memberships are tailored to your interest areas with separate plans offered for our fitness center, tennis facility, handball/racquetball facility and total complex.

So before you join any club, compare the features, quality, and price. You'll see Paul Thorpe Spas beats the competition hands down. Call us at 682-0813 . . . and don't settle for less.

Winfield not that big a loss to SD

By WALTER BERRY

PARADISE VALLEY, Ariz. (AP) — Despite a so-so season in 1980, San Diego Padres General Manager Jack McKeon said his National League baseball club did not miss slugging outfielder Dave Winfield as much as people think.

"Not really," said McKeon, who attended the major league owners and general managers meeting here this weekend. "Nothing against Dave. He gave us everything he had.

"He just wanted to check out other marketplaces and we couldn't afford him. I don't think the Yankees can now, either, after what he did in the World Series."

Winfield, earning a reported $1.4 million a year with the New York Yankees, batted .045 during the Series with one hit in 22 trips to the plate and one RBI.

"One player has never made us," McKeon said. "Without Dave, we made some progress this year in other important areas. We hope to make more in the off-season."

The Padres, after firing Frank Howard, still are without a manager. But McKeon squelched speculation that he is in line for the job.

"At this particular time, I am not a candidate," he said. "I enjoy what I'm doing right now. But I'm not going to rule out the possibility.

"Let me put it this way," added McKeon. "I've managed parts of five years in the big leagues. I like where I'm at now a little more."

John Aloysius McKeon managed the Kansas City Royals from 1973-74 and part of the 1975 season before being replaced by Whitey Herzog. McKeon, 50, had a one-year stay as manager of the Oakland A's in 1978.

"My name usually comes up whenever one manager gets canned and somebody's looking for a new guy. It's the same old business," McKeon said. "Will I manage again? That's pure speculation now ... any easy guess."

McKeon, however, was less glib on the reported swap between the Padres and Los Angeles for Dodger outfielder Pedro Guerrero and San Diego's slick-fielding shortstop Ozzie Smith.

Askey if any progress was being made in the negotiations, McKeon said: "Not that I know of."

But news of the possible deal kept the other owners and general managers gatherd here at this Phoenix-area resort buzzing.

"We keep hearing the Dodgers are making a big pitch for Smith," said Philadelphia Phillies Executive Vice President Bill Giles.

On Friday, Dodger President Peter O'Malley told The Associated Press that his club was "strongly considering" the trade "but we don't want to rush into it."

Most of the baseball heirarchy here agreed that "most of the wheeling and dealing" will be done at the winter meetings in December at Hollywood, Fla.

SW Texas State in special class

By The Associated Press

The Southwest Texas State Bobcats are members of the Lone Star Conference, but there doesn't appear to be a team in their league.

While the Bobcats, No. 1 in NCAA Division II, were giving East Texas State a Halloween horror show in San Marcos, Angelo State knocked off Texas A&I 29-21 in Kingsville.

Angelo State trailed 21-9 going into the fourth quarter in a game that was delayed 15 minutes by rain. But Ram quarterback Doug Kuhlmann seemed unconcerned abut mud and A&I's No. 4 NCAA Division II ranking. He passed for touchdowns of 13 yards to Joey Sims and 10 yards to Dennis Green in the fourth quarter. Running back Anthony Johnson completed the scoring with 47 seconds left on a two-yard run.

For the game, Kuhlmann completed 20 of 38 passes for a school record 318 yards.

Also in the rain, Southwest Texas set a school record with 668 total yards in the 38-7 win over East Texas State before a homecoming crowd of 11,000.

Quarterback Mike Miller, who left the game with 12:45 left in the third quarter after Southwest Texas had a 38-0 lead, was the most prolific of the Bobcats with 225 yards passing and 50 yards rushing. Three of his completions were for touchdowns, and he ran 48 yards for another against the team that was ranked No. 11 in NAIA Division I before the game.

Sam Houston actually picked up its first two victories Saturday when it was announced that Southwestern Oklahoma forfeited its 23-14 win over the Bearkats on Sept. 26. With that news, Sam Houston whipped Howard Payne 29-17.

Phil Harmening kicked an LSC record five field goals, including a school record 52-yarder for Sam Houston. The Bearkats also set school records with 405 yards rushing on 78 attempts.

Howard Payne also had a school record with quarterback Andy Townsend throwing a 95-yard touchdown pass to Carl Cooper.

Abilene Christian limited Stephen F. Austin to 121 total yards in collecting a 31-0 victory. Anthony Thomas led the Wildcat offense with 17 carries for 119 yards and a touchdown and caught two passes for 66 yards and another TD.

Retired U.S. Army officer says Japanese relocation during WWII necessary

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The retired Army officer who administered the relocation of 120,000 people of Japanese descent in World War II said today his actions were necessitated by "tense, explosive and trying times." To condemn them by current standards would be unfair, he argued.

In testimony prepared for a congressionally commissioned panel to investigate the episode, retired Col. Karl R. Bendetsen offered a spirited defense of his own actions and those of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and all under him who carried out the executive order providing for mass detention of West Coast Japanese. Roosevelt signed the order 2½ months after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"To evaluate these past actions in the perspectives of today would not be useful," Bendetsen said.

Others who appeared before a congressionally commissioned panel to investigate the episode have testified that America's action was shameful, undemocratic, unjustified and inexplicable, but Bendetsen said the critics were passing judgments from the luxury of hindsight.

"The sweeping condemnations recently made of the responsible officials cannot be condoned on any basis," he said. "They were each faced with impelling necessity. The slurs and slanders of men who are above reproach demeans the character of those who cast them."

In 14 days of hearings across the nation, the nine-member Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians heard from hundreds of the internees who told of losing their homes, jobs, property and dignity, and of being put in crowded barracks for up to three years. Some survivors asked for financial redress of $25,000 each.

In disagreement with most other witnesses, Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., told the commission in August that such proposals made his "flesh crawl with shame and embarrassment."

A citizen of Canada during the war, Hayakawa suggested the Japanese had to be relocated for their own protection.

Bendetsen said critics must consider the atmosphere of the day and argued that the Japanese were treated humanely.

With reports coming in from the conquered Philippines of Japanese brutality toward captured American soldiers and civilians, he said, "anti-Japanese feeling was intense, particularly in the West Coast states. Violence was near at hand."

Even then, he said, the Army took pains not to mistreat the Japanese.

"We made special arrangements aboard the trains for their protection and for their reasonable comfort and health," he said. "Step by step, we evacuated people from designated evacuation zones into the assembly centers which had been prepared to house them."

Bendetsen said Roosevelt's order was "never intended" to intern the Japanese. Instead, he said, the purpose was to resettle them in the country's interior, leaving them free to raise their families, school their children, farm the land or go into business and to keep them only from returning to the West Coast. He said about 4,000 did resettle independently.

But that phase "came to a regrettable and necessary halt," he said. "Hostility toward the Japanese in the interior, at first minimal, developed quite suddenly and intensively in the western states of the interior as word of the brutalities committed against U.S. military and civilian forces by the Japanese became generally known."

Joan Z. Bernstein, a lawyer who heads the commission, said hearings would be held Nov. 23 in New York to get testimony from East Coast Japanese-Americans who were not interned.

Later, she said, hearings will be held in Boston "to consider legal precedents for redress and possible legislative measures as remedies to prevent a breakdown of the protection of constitutionally guaranteed civil liberites in the future."

The commission will report next year to Congress, which must decide whether to pay redress.

Higher postal rates may mean more ad inserts in newspapers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The higher postal rates that took effect over the weekend may mean more advertising inserts in newspapers and fewer ads sent through the mail.

The new rates which took effect Sunday increased the cost of a first-class letter from 18 cents to 20 cents and the cost of a postcard from 12 cents to 13 cents. The cost of additional ounces of first-class mail remains at 17 cents and parcel post rates remain unchanged.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association had criticized the old rates as below what it cost the Postal Service to handle direct-mail advertisements. It said this diverted business from newspaper inserts.

Pam Riley of the publishers association said the new third-class rate used by the direct-mail advertisers is now "based on cost" to handle the mail. Referring to the Postal Service, she said, "We are not fighting them any more."

What angered the association was a reduction in March in the third-class mail rates used by the direct-mail industry and a weight requirement favorable to the mailers.

Before the March change, the rate was 6.7 cents for each piece weighing up to 3.73 ounces. This allowed mailers, for exampie, to put two 1.5-ounce ads in the same envelope for mailing.

However, the Postal Service then lowered the rate to 6.4 cents and increased the weight allowed to 5.04 ounces. Since March, this change has allowed mailers to put more ads in one mailing while paying less for postage.

Sunday's changes raised the rate to 7.9 cents and lower the weight to 3.88 ounces.

The Associated Third-Class Mail Users, which represents direct-mailers, is appealing the change in a federal suit. "Yes, we had the advantage after March," said Bill Mullen of the association. "But these new rates are unjustified."

John Jay Daly, a consultant to mailers and former official of the Direct Mail-Marketing Association, predicted that the Postal Service will lose volume because of the new third-class rate. "The large mailers will drift to newspaper inserts," he said.

Daly said direct mail still will be used where the advertiser can target certain prospects. For those seeking blanket coverage, such as a department store advertising to all residents of an area, newspaper inserts now are cheapest, he said.

Texas band of Kickapoo Indians is seeking citizenship

By PEGGY ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas band of Kickapoo Indians, a 600-member tribe without a country, is asking Congress to make its people citizens of the nation they once shunned.

Since the early 1900s, the traditional Kickapoo, which split from the Oklahoma Kickapoo tribe in hopes of preserving their aboriginal heritage, have wandered between the Texas border town of Eagle Pass and Nacimiento, Mexico — a distance of about 120 miles.

Neither country has provided them with clear citizenship status, a lapse which complicates their access to jobs, education and health and social services. Some members were born in Mexico, some in the United States.

The band presently calls home a cluster of cardboard and cane huts on a borrowed one-acre plot under the International Bridge at Eagle Pass. Local authorities have provided a spigot and privies. There are no other amenities.

"We were masters of this land," said Nakai Breen, a Cherokee who has spent much of her life working to help the Kickapoo. "Now we don't have so much as a handhold to call our own."

She urged the House Interior Committee on Friday to give the tiny tribe citizenship, a land base and access to services that federally recognized tribes receive.

"I can't think of any insurmountable obstacle to prevent them from taking their rightful place in our society," said Rep. Abraham Kazen Jr., D-Texas, who introduced the bill to help the tribe. "They just want a place they can call home."

The Reagan administration has taken no official stand on the Kickapoo.

Since leaving Wisconsin in 1795, the tribe has signed seven treaties with the United States, winning — and losing — 18 million acres of federal land in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Mexico gave the group 17,000 acres near Nacimiento in 1852 for defending that country's borders against Kiowa, Apache and Comanche raiders.

But for the traditional Kickapoo, Eagle Pass is home.

"Our grandparents, our forefathers are buried there," said Makateonenodua, who also uses the name Raul Garza. "We are not Mexican people. We are American Indians."

Their case for U.S. citizenship hinges partly on an 1832 U.S. Army pass which says they "are under the protection of the United States."

In 1958, they were given "parolee" status by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and now carry cards that say "Kickapoo Indian — pending clarification of status by Congress."

The Kickapoo say the matter is more urgent now.

Rabbi arrested in Canada

TORONTO (AP) — Canadian immigration officials arrested the founder of the militant U.S.-based Jewish Defense League after he spoke at a Toronto synagogue.

Rabbi Meir Kahane of New York City was arrested Sunday shortly after he told an audience of about 500 that Israel should use the threat of nuclear weapons in the Middle East to block completion of the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace process with Egypt.

Immigration spokesman Ron Bull said Kahane was in Canada illegally because he had been expelled previously and had not received permission to return. He was to appear at an immigration hearing today, Bull said.

Kahane was ordered out of Canada in 1971 and returned to New York after going to Montreal with a group protesting the visit of then-Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

Jagger and Stones delight Dallas fans

DALLAS (AP) — Mike Jagger and the Rolling Stones played to 150,000 fans in two Cotton Bowl appearances over the weekend, and a police officer described the musical happening as "very nice."

The group played two concerts in the city-owned football stadium, one Saturday and another Sunday. In all, police arrested 28 people for minor offenses during the Stones' two-day run.

"We had about eight arrested for drugs, seven for being drunk and one streaker," officer L.J. Townley at the city's Fair Park police station said Sunday, after the second concert ended. "But there was no violence either day. It was very nice."

Saturday's concert was dampened, but not deterred, but 3½ inches of rain but a cold front whipped through the area during the night leaving Sunday crisp and cool.

Remark prompts visit

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A derogatory remark about the U.S. space program from a student in Central America so "ticked off" a visiting American businessman that he arranged to have students from 22 Latin American nations witness Wednesday's space shuttle launch.

Three students each from most of the member nations of the Organization of American States will view the launch, visit Disneyworld, tour the Johnson Space Center near Houston, then fly to California to watch the shuttle land in the desert.

The 66 students, most of whom are teen-agers, will be guests of Doyle Brewington, 39, a Houston millionaire whose parents were Presbyterian missionaries stationed in Guatemala when he was born. He says he expects to spend more than $150,000 on the project.

Brewington said the incident that prompted the invitations occurred in the home of a business associate in Central America last April after the first launch of America's space shuttle Columbia. He declined to reveal the name of the country he was in at the time.

"We were looking at the cover of a local newspaper showing the flight of Columbia and I was rather proud, naturally, and his son mentioned to me that in school they were taught that our space program was done in Hollywood," Brewington said.

"That kind of ticked me off. I was pretty angry about it. The next morning I asked the same thing and he said the same thing again. He didn't say it with any malice or intent, just as a matter of fact," Brewington said.

He said he went to the school and asked the teacher about the comment.

"She said she had been on a social studies program to Havana and that's where she got the information," Brewington said.

"She also said a lot of things were being said at this conference about U.S. business, U.S. government and the 'imperialist giant.' That really got me going," he said.

"When I got back, I decided to do something about it," said Brewington, who was an engineer for Honeywell before quitting to start his own company seven years ago.

He said he ruled out seeking help through the U.S. State Department "because anything that's done by the government is suspected of being politically motivated."

So Brewington, whose Multi Systems International Inc. provides logistical support to American construction companies working in Latin America, worked through the OAS to start a science essay contest in 22 of the 27 member nations. Five did not participate.

The participating nations each selected six finalists and sent their theses to judges from Brewington's company, NASA and the OAS. Three winners were chosen from each nation.

The winners were invited to gather in Miami Sunday and attend a Chamber of Commerce supper Monday night. From there, they will travel to the launch site where Brewington said NASA has reserved space in a "preferential viewing area."

The students will then make stops at Disneyworld; Houston; Albuquerque, N.M.; Mojave, Calif.; Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.; Flagstaff, Ariz.; and El Paso, Texas. They will then return to Houston for a banquet with several astronauts.

"My reward will come from watching the smiles on their faces," said Brewington, who is married but has no children. "There's nothing brighter than a smile on a kid's face."

Chili contest was really hot

By JACKIE HYMAN
Associated Press Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The temperature was close to 90 and a brushfire was burning near Chatsworth, but the hottest spot in Southern California Sunday was at Hollywood Park, scene of the World Champion Chili Cookoff.

Fred Drexel, 42, a telephone system salesman from Van Nuys, Calif., brought the trophy back to the Golden State with his recipe for Butterfield Stageline Chili. Phill Pseifer of Washington, D.C., won the trophy last year.

Drexel, who had been working on the recipe for a year, was one of 60 cooks vying for the $20,000 first prize.

"I went out one weekend and helped somebody chop for a contest," Drexel said. "I figured I had to get in on this myself."

Drexel said he didn't know whether he would try to package the chili. "One step at a time. This is too nerve-wracking."

There were other attractions for the 12,000 people on hand, said Carroll Shelby, who founded the annual event 15 years ago in Terlingua, Texas. It moved to Southern California six years ago and now raises money for the Motion Picture Home, a hospital and retirement residence for entertainment industry members.

"The audience watches the moseying contest, the hoot 'n' holler contest, the wet T-shirt contest," Shelby said, adding that the wet shirt event is really "the best T-shirt contest, but somebody always gets around to dropping a little beer on those T-shirts."

'It's 90 degrees out here and there's a sled dog from Alaska running around pulling a bunch of people on a sled. These people are crazy," said Shelby.

But when it comes to chili, the contest is serious business. Competitors had to win previously on local and state levels — Drexel placed in four cookoffs — and came from across the United States as well as England, Australia, Canada, Mexico, France, Tahiti, Italy and Scandinavia.

Among the nine judges were actors Robert Mitchum, William Conrad and Ernest Borgnine, as well as Dr. Roy Nakayama, whom Shelby described as "the world's leading authority on chili peppers at the University of New Mexico."
