Democratic tactics delay defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is beginning work on a $200 billion defense bill after Democratic critics used delaying tactics to protest what they called "flagrant budgetary manipulation" by the Reagan administration to make more money available to the military.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who teamed up with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to thwart plans to extensively debate the bill Monday, said he believed he had made his point clear and would allow work on the legislation to proceed today.

More than four hours were consumed in a quorum call demanded by Kennedy as Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., tried to round up the 51 senators, a simple majority of the chamber, needed to transact business.

Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., was the 51st to appear, in early evening, and Baker then decided to call it a day.

The Senate officially ended an 11-day Fourth of July holiday recess Monday, but many members had delayed their return to the capital.

Metzenbaum and Kennedy were protesting an incident June 28, in the final hours of the Senate Armed Services Committee's work on the bill, when White House and Pentagon budget officials presented $2.1 billion in savings by reducing the projected cost of fuel and trimming inflation estimates.

Among other things, this addition enabled the panel to include in the bill all $5.6 billion the Air Force wanted for its B-1B strategic bomber program and also to certify the plane as eligible for multiyear, rather than annual, contracts.

"There is no question this is a budget flimflam," Kennedy said. "It is flagrant budgetary manipulation."

Metzenbaum also castigated the discovery of the funds as apparent "legerdemain" and said the administration never seems to be able to find last-minute funds for health care, nutrition and other social programs.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the Armed Services Committee chairman, defended the committee's action, saying it had known of the projected savings as early as May 5 and it took until June 28 for the administration to document the savings.

He acknowledged, however, that the Senate Budget Committee, which sets spending ceilings, had not been brought into the process.

Metzenbaum said he also was angered that the defense bill had several provisions for leasing Navy ships and Air Force planes. He said he thought Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger had assured him that the Pentagon planned no immediate leasing beyond the 13 cargo ships Congress authorized last year.

The opening dispute is expected to be followed later this week by floor fights over the nearly $5 billion earmarked in the authorization bill for MX intercontinental missiles and production of a new generation of nerve gas weapons.

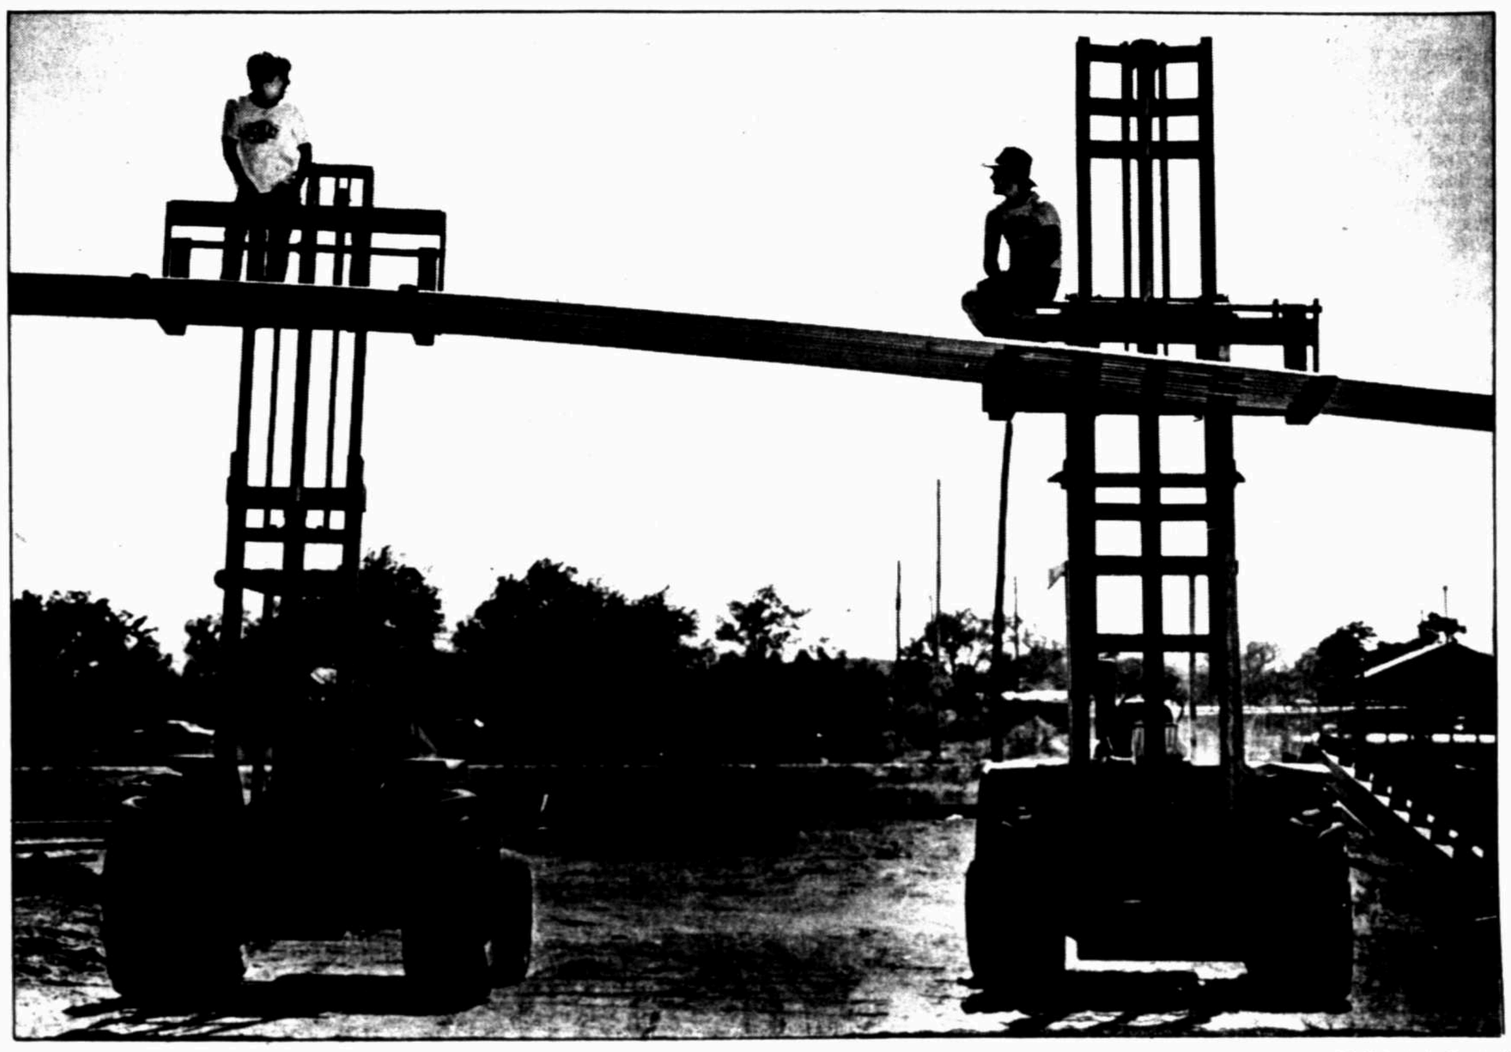

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., leader of the anti-MX forces, has promised "extended debate" — a filibuster — in his attempt to remove the funds for the weapon.

Hart and his allies contend that the administration's decision to place the missiles in existing Minuteman silos would make the weapons vulnerable to attack and thus invite their use before a Soviet strike can be confirmed.

Supporters say the MX is needed to force the Soviets to negotiate seriously on reducing strategic arms.

In line with a congressional budget blueprint, the defense bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 equals a 5 percent increase after inflation over current spending levels, half the boost that President Reagan had sought.

Tower, a pro-defense stalwart, said this limitation "will cause us to take a giant step backward from our goal of finally injecting stability in defense procurement."

Alabama hopes to settle bias suit

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — State officials, faced with the first Reagan administration anti-discrimination suit against a higher education system, say they hope to settle out of court while fighting racial bias in Alabama colleges.

The Justice Department suit, filed Monday in federal court in Birmingham, accused Alabama of maintaining segregated institutions of higher learning despite lengthy negotiations and promises to conform to the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

It alleged the state has denied "qualified black applicants admission to traditionally white institutions because of their race."

William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said the suit was needed, but added: "We still hope to be able to resolve the matter short of full-blown litigation."

The suit said that in the fall of 1980, 77,629 students on the 16 campuses of state colleges and universities included only 13,756 blacks, and only 394 full-time faculty members were black.

Fourteen of the schools had white undergraduate enrollments ranging from 56.3 percent to 96.9 percent and two others had black enrollments of 76.3 percent and 99.5 percent, it said.

Gov. George C. Wallace said he wasn't surprised by the Justice Department action but refused to comment on the allegations without having consulted first with attorneys.

Robert L. Randolph, president of predominantly black Alabama State University in Montgomery, and Bascom Woodward III, vice president of Jacksonville State University, both said they hoped for speedy out-of-court negotiations.

Joe Sutton, director of the Alabama Commission on Higher Education, said the talks would be difficult.

"There are so many different institutions that have their own boards, there has been no single focus on making a decision on the matter," he said.

The suit "is a long time overdue," said Earl Shinhoster, southeast regional director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Chad forces claim recapture of crossroads

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — The government claims its forces have retaken a strategic crossroads, isolating Libyan-backed rebels who seized a third of this war-weary impoverished central African nation in a month-old offensive.

Information Minister Soumalia Mahamat said Monday that loyalist troops recaptured Oum Chalouba, an oasis 150 miles north of the embattled city of Abeche. By doing so, the loyalists could cut off supply routes to the rebels of former President Goukouni Oueddei fighting for control of Abeche.

Mahamat claimed the loyalists inflicted "very heavy" losses on the insurgents, captured about 300, seized large amounts of heavy weapons and called it "a great success." Insurgents seized Oum Chalouba last week.

It was impossible to confirm Mahamat's account because pro-Western President Hissene Habre has banned foreigners from the war zone and has ordered censorship of war dispatches sent abroad.

Radio Bardai, Goukouni's radio station in north Chad, claimed rebels captured Abeche on Friday and controlled the city. Mahamat acknowledged the loyalists withdrew Friday but said they counterattacked Sunday.

Abeche is the town from which Habre launched his successful drive against Goukouni's government in 1981. Habre took power in N'Djamena 13 months ago, continuing the see-saw civil war that has plagued Chad for 18 years.

Army units and rebels were reported fighting in Abeche, 400 miles northwest of N'Djamena, the capital. Mahamat appealed to France for "as many French troops as can be sent."

There was no immediate comment from the French government, but observers in Paris said that while Habre could expect more weapons, France would send no troops.

France granted Chad independence in 1960 and is committed by agreement to come to Chad's defense against foreign attack. It is operating a military supply airlift to N'Djamena.

Libya's ambassador to France, Said Hafiana, told a reporter in Paris for the La Croix newspaper that any intervention in Chad by French troops would be considered "a veritable act of war against Libya."

Habre claims Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has sent at least 3,000 Libyan soldiers into Chad to fight Goukouni's insurgents. They claim Khadafy is trying to extend his influence through Chad to equatorial Africa.

In Paris, the daily newspaper Le Matin published an interview today quoting Goukouni as saying that if French President Francois Mitterrand dispatched troops to Chad he would retaliate by bringing the war to French soil.

Boy Scouts explore life of handicapped

Disabled youths among participants in World Jamboree

By JOHN MARLOW
Associated Press Writer

KANANASKIS COUNTRY, Alberta — Hundreds of scouts experimented with wheelchairs to learn how it would feel to be disabled at the 15th World Jamboree, with one youngster calling the experiment "unbearable."

But 13-year-old Wayde Lever, a Canadian who suffers from cerebral palsy, thought it "fantastic" after navigating the obstacle course in a special wheelchair hitched to an all-terrain vehicle.

One of about two dozen handicapped scouts enjoying the jamboree, Lever bowled with his feet and traveled an obstacle course sitting down.

"It makes me feel more a part of it," Lever said. But he said he would like to see easier access to some of the regular activities.

Bill Sheppard, one of the adult leaders with Lever's troop, said he would prefer better facilities for the handicapped scouts.

"There should be some facilities so he could do some of the chores around here. Maybe something like a special table that he could wheel up to in his chair to help do the dishes," Sheppard said.

"We've had a little bit of a problem with some of the boys (who) feel maybe he's being treated a little bit special."

Raul Chavez of Dallas, a spokesman for Boy Scouts of America, said it is impossible to say how many handicapped U.S. scouts are at the jamboree, but said about 250,000 handicapped boys have been "mainstreamed" into regular units in the country.

The handicapped boys and girls from the United States have been integrated with regular troops at the jamboree.

Hong Kong sent eight handicapped scouts to this international gathering in the shadow of the Canadian Rockies, and one teen-ager, Brian Smyth of Antrim, Northern Ireland, came despite having suffered a severe stroke last November.

Smyth, 17, still walks with a limp, and has limited use of his right hand. But, he said, "I was determined to go to Canada."

At Cap Handi, a special activities area at the sprawling campsite, hundreds of non-handicapped scouts are asked to dial phones or use typewriters without using their hands to learn something of what it means to be disabled.

Lever can walk with forearm crutches but mostly gets around the 750-acre site in a wheelchair strapped to a small trailer, which is pulled by a three-wheel, all-terrain vehicle.

"It's just been fantastic. I've had a lot of fun," said Lever, of Red Deer, Alberta.

His off-road wheelchair carried him easily over the bumpy campsite and obstacle course. But the course was a bit tougher for a group of non-handicapped Ohio scouts who tried it in wheelchairs.

Adam Proctor, 16, of Berea, Ohio, guided a wheelchair over a plywood platform, then almost was upset as he rolled the chair down a ramp and hit the grassy runout.

"(The wheelchair) was hard for a short distance," said Proctor. "A long distance would be unbearable."

"The hardest part was pushing it through the grass when it wasn't level," said Mitch Haney, 16, of Olmstead Falls, Ohio.

Nearby, several Swiss scouts, none of them handicapped, were trying to manipulate typewriters and telephones without using their hands.

"We have them try to type their name and dial their home telephone number without using their hands or arms," explained Marlene MacKenzie of Delta, British Columbia, one of the adult staff members supervising the area.

"They're provided with a stick, but some of them use their feet very effectively. They try different methods — even their noses ... It gives them an awareness of what it would be without being able to use their hands," she said.

Albert Durr, 15, of Berne, Switzerland, walked away shaking his head. "Much easier with the hands," he said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Rain for Texas and showers for northwest Washington and northern New England contrast with the National Weather Service prediction for generally fair skies and warm temperatures for most of the nation Wednesday.

Midland has slight chance for rain

There is a slight chance of relief from the dry July heat in Midland this evening.

The National Weather Service calls for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with lows in the mid-60's and winds from the southeast at 5-10 mph.

Wednesday should be partly cloudy and warm with a high in the mid-90's and winds from the south at 5-15 mph.

Monday's high of 95 was well below the record 106 set in 1964. The overnight low of 66 was sultry compared with the record low of 55 set in 1936.

Manila maintains busy visa mill

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines — Packing a sheaf of documents intended to prove his financial stability, a young Filipino approached the visa window at Manila's U.S. Embassy.

The visa officer recognized that most of the documents were forged.

"I'm sorry to disappoint you, sir, but the law really is very strict," said the American consul officer as he turned away yet another would-be immigrant at the world's biggest U.S. visa mill.

The young man is one of more than 5,500 Filipinos rejected in Manila this year for submitting fraudulent documents to an office that grants 80,000 visitor visas and another 35,000 immigrant visas a year.

There is a backlog of 320,000 Filipinos wanting to move to the United States, where more than one million Filipinos already live.

The waiting time for Filipinos who fall under U.S. quotas is up to 13 years, the longest delay of any nationality. A teen-ager who wants to join a brother or sister in California may be past 30 before his or her petition is considered.

"I think many Filipinos feel they have a right to emigrate to America because of the special relationship our two countries have," said Vernon MacAninch, a burly Texan from Waco who has reformed Manila's formidable and once locally controversial visa operation. He is the U.S. consul-general in Manila.

Filipinos learned English in an education system set up by the United States which won control of the islands following the Spanish-American War. They fought through World War II with the Americans. Although the Philippines became independent in 1946, Filipinos can still join the U.S. Navy, and the country hosts two large U.S. military bases.

Until this year, hundreds of people used to gather daily at the U.S. Embassy gate. MacAninch has moved the lines inside and sat people down in color-coded chairs. The embassy still serves more than 1,000 applicants a day, but now guarantees one-day service on tourist visas.

MacAninch's reforms, his John Wayne looks and his outspoken defense of the United States have made him a favorite for club luncheons, local television talk shows and as a beauty contest judge.

"It's the easiest job in the world, because nearly everybody has a cousin or a brother or at least a very close friend in the United States," said MacAninch. His audiences, he said, often show detailed knowledge of U.S. immigration law.

Some Filipinos find creative ways to defy it.

One man, to prove he wouldn't end up on welfare roles, presented a letter authorizing him to secure $135 billion on behalf of a supposed business.

Another showed a $2,000 American passport in red velvet, a material not used for passports. It was signed by the "Embasidor" and issued by the non-existent "U.S. Department of Foreign Affairs." Embassy officials say they sometimes recognize rented gold watches on applicants, who apparently are trying to look well-to-do.

Fraudulent marriages and attempts to take up the identities of dead applicants are also common, he said.

One ruse involves a Filipino who marries an American woman, secures an easy immigrant visa, moves to America, divorces and then immediately petitions for his Filipino wife and six children.

But most applicants are legitimate.

Filipina Estrada, 33, was named for her country but now she wants to leave it.

"I want to live in America because there will be more opportunities," she said as she awaited visas for herself and two children. Her husband has lived in California since 1978. She waited five years for her name to come up.

Most Filipino immigrants seek a better life. Many live fairly well here but think they will live better in the United States.

Even during the eight years of martial law under President Ferdinand E. Marcos, only a handful of the most prominent emigrants could be considered political refugees.

Marcos' government has spent millions of dollars cultivating the support of American Filipinos. A planeload of the nation's top movie and television personalities was sent last month to perform in major U.S. cities and to urge Filipinos to come home and see Marcos' accomplishments.

Hundreds return each day under a program that gives tax amnesty and other privileges.

The government officially encourages the departure of both skilled and unskilled workers, primarily because of the foreign exchange they send back. Filipinos are taxed on income wherever they go, and contract workers — 500,000 in the Middle East — must remit up to 70 percent of their income home.

Some companies suffer from the exodus. Manila's notoriously poor telephone service is sometimes blamed on the emigration of competent linesmen.

A small crowd still mills about the U.S. Embassy's new visa gate. Most wait for relatives or friends.

Some wait to prey on the rejects.

"I'll lay odds he's from the competition," said MacAninch, pointing to a man in a neatly pressed Philippine shirt. But he acknowledged there is no way to tell how many Filipinos get through with fake travel documents never submitted to the embassy.

Orbit pattern could create quake

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lunar orbit pattern that stretches the Earth "like a football" every 18.6 years could help produce a major Southern California earthquake before 1990, scientists say.

Major Southern California quakes have occurred on this 18.6-year cycle at the time of full or new moons, according to a study by Steven Kilston and Leon Knopoff. The big one could come within a few years of November 1987, the midpoint of the cycle, said Kilston, an astronomer and engineer for Hughes Aircraft Co. in El Segundo.

He said the moon, besides controlling the Earth's tides, produces a gravitational pull that can stretch underground plates that are already shifting. Earthquakes are caused by sudden strong movement between those plates, which run under most of California.

At the midpoint of the cycle, the moon's orbit and the sun become aligned in a way that produces the strongest gravitational pull, stretching the earth a few inches "like a football," Kilston said in a telephone interview Monday.

The pull also could increase northwest and southeast shifting of the plates beneath California's earthquake-prone San Andreas fault, he said.

When added to other natural earthquake precursors, the gravity could trigger a major temblor, concluded an article written by Kilston and Knopoff, a UCLA geophysics professor, for the British science weekly Nature.

Kilston emphasized that the gravitational factor might contribute only .5 percent to causing an earthquake. He called it "a final triggering or a last-straw kind of effect."

That phenomenon appears to have been at work when quakes of a Richter scale magnitude greater than 6.0 occured in 1933, 1952, and 1971, he said. Other major quakes that occurred in 1946, 1948, 1954, and 1968 were within a few years of the 18.6-year marks and were considered close enough to also bear out the theory, Kilston said.

Kilston said the phenomenon seems to affect only Southern California, most likely because of the way the plates are moving beneath the San Andreas fault.

Kilston and Knopoff said they examined the records of 31 instrumentally recorded quakes in Southern California from 1933 to 1980, plus four earlier ones of 1857, 1918, 1923 and 1925.

Quakes of a magnitude less than 6.0 showed no apparent relation to the lunar gravity theory, Kilston said.

Kilston said he first began studying the phenomenon after he looked outside during the destructive 6.4 magnitude Sylmar quake in Los Angeles Feb. 1971 and noticed a full moon setting.

He later found the other major quakes had occurred during full or new moons.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismology instruments. Each factor of 1.0 on the scale indicates a ten-fold increase in the earthquake's power. A magnitude 5.0 quake is 10 times stronger than one that measures 4.0.

Unnoticed earthquake ripples through California's desert

BRAWLEY, Calif. (AP) — A tiny earthquake rippled through this Southern California desert area, but apparently was not noticed by residents.

The quake, measuring 3.2 on the open-ended Richter scale, was centered 16 miles northwest of Brawley in Imperial County, near the unicorporated community of Niland, said Dennis Meredith, spokesman for the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. Instruments at the institute recorded the quake at 3:55 p.m. Monday, he said.

The Imperial County sheriff's office in El Centro, which handles phone calls for the Brawley and Niland area, did not receive any reports from residents who felt the quake, said dispatcher Sharon Stogner.

The Richter scale is a measurement of ground motion as recorded on seismology instruments. Quakes in the range of 3 are considered minor and not likely to cause damage.

Each factor of 1.0 on the Richter scale indicates a tenfold increase in the quake's power. For example, a quake measuring 5.0 would be 10 times more powerful than a 4.0 tremor.

Fish flies invade Mississippi River towns

BURLINGTON, Iowa (AP) — Millions of smelly, sticky fish flies are sickening highways, blacking out windows and piling up a foot deep as they die, in an annual invasion of Mississippi River towns that has residents bugged.

Although officials are fighting back by washing insect carcasses from streets and ordering lights off in Burlington and Dubuque, the inch-long, winged pests already have forced the closing of a bridge and contributed to an accident that seriously hurt a motorcyclist.

The flies, also known as mayflies and Mormon flies, infest the river towns annually, as eggs laid a year earlier hatch in the July heat. The insects mate and die in just 24 hours, but they can be as much trouble dead as alive, officials say.

But Art Roth, Dubuque's health director, said the flies pose no immediate health hazard.

"There were millions of them," Roth said of the assault which began Saturday. This year's pestilence was not unusually severe, he said. "I'd probably rate it a seven on a scale of one to ten."

Tammy Kuster, an employee at Lamb's Diner near Burlington's riverfront, said she had to use a shovel to scoop up the flies that she had cleaned from the diner's windows.

"I washed them off Saturday night, and the pile was so big I couldn't spray them away," she said.

But the major problem Monday night was the odor. "They stink," Ms. Kuster said.

Dead flies were piled a foot deep in spots along the Mississippi River, and some steep streets in this town about 160 miles southeast of Des Moines were impassable because of the slippery bodies of the insects.

The east-bound lane of MacArthur Bridge spanning the Mississippi River was closed from 11 p.m. Saturday to 1 a.m. Sunday because it was coated with flies.

A high-pressure water tanker was used to wash the flies from the bridge and to wash city streets Monday.

Meanwhile, 150 miles upriver in the northeastern Iowa town of Dubuque, a hilltop became so slippery with dead flies that a young man lost control of his motorcycle and crashed late Saturday. He was listed in serious condition Monday at Mercy Health Center.

The insects also coated lighted telephone booths and other outdoor city lights. In an unsuccessful effort to minimize the attack of the flies, authorities in both Burlington and Dubuque ordered blackouts Saturday of business and traffic lights.

Many businesses were still keeping their lights off Monday night.

Storms dot Panhandle

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms dotted the Texas coast and the Panhandle before dawn today as an upper-level disturbance settled over the Gulf of Mexico.

Widespread showers also developed over the southern tip of the state.

Clouds covered much of the eastern half of Texas, while mostly fair conditions were noted over West Texas.

Temperatures were mostly in the 70s. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 68 at Lubbock and Junction to 82 at Galveston.

Winds were light and variable.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies through Wednesday. Scattered thunderstorms were possible over South Texas.

California seeks nation's earliest presidential primary

WASHINGTON (AP) — California may hold the earliest presidential primary ever — with balloting this December — as a complicated partisan fight there threatens to rip apart the entire 1984 nomination calendar.

The California threat comes just after national Democratic leaders calmed New Hampshire Democrats who feared their primary's status as "first in the nation" was being endangered by Vermont and Maine.

The proposed California Democratic primary — part of a complex fight over the state budget, reapportionment and 1984 politics — could be Dec. 13, earlier than any other presidential primary since 1912 when the practice began.

Such an early vote, which would probably be designed to select about a third of the state's 345 delegates, could shatter the 1984 Democratic nomination calendar and put the party's entire structure of rules for the nomination battle in jeopardy.

"That would be a signal to all states that it is a free-for-all. At that point, I throw up my hands and say there are no rules," said George Bruno, New Hampshire Democratic chairman.

Early California polling would clearly violate the party rules, which put all but two of the primaries and caucuses between March 13 and June 12, 1984. The move could lead the party to refuse to seat at the national convention the state's 345-member delegation, the largest at the meeting.

Such a refusal would mean trouble for California Sen. Alan Cranston, whose darkhorse bid is counting on a strong bloc of home state delegates.

It would be embarrassing for national party chairman Charles Manatt, a strong advocate of the party rules and a Californian.

And, it puts the whole Democratic party in an awkward position since it has chosen San Francisco as the site for its July 16-19 nominating convention.

Negotiations are continuing between Republican Gov. George Deukmejian and Democratic state legislative leadership to try to resolve the impasse. The fate of the primary — currently scheduled for June 5, 1984 — will not be clear until that bargaining is completed.

The California primary proposal was the state Democrats' response to a Republican bid to redraw the district lines for Congress and the state legislature. They feared Deukmejian would call a special election in December to vote on the reapportionment plan, which would replace the one devised by the Democrats.

To boost Democratic turnout in such a special election, the state party leaders inserted into the pending state budget bill a plan to hold a presidential primary simultaneously.

These California complications came as national Democratic officials were assuaging New Hampshire Democrats' concerns that early caucuses in Maine and a non-binding primary in Vermont would steal their first-place status.

Attorneys seek delay in murder trial because of new evidence

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorneys faced with unexpected new evidence say they will seek a delay in the trial of a 26-year-old Houston-area man accused of killing his father to put the comatose man out of his misery.

"The point is a principle involved — the court ordered discovery," attorney Jack Zimmermann said Monday, after prosecutors sought to introduce into evidence 14 slides of 24 microscopic tissue samples taken during the autopsy of Robert Clore.

Clore, 62, died April 2, about two weeks after he was shot once in the head with a .45-caliber pistol at the Humble Skill Care Center north of Houston.

His son, Billy Ray Clore, is charged with murder in the shooting.

The case is seen as a test of a jury's thoughts on euthanasia. Clore is free on $7,500 bond and could face up to life in prison if convicted.

The younger Clore, who has pleaded innocent to the charges, told three nurses at the care center that he shot his father, according to testimony from the nurses.

The writ of discovery, granted to the defense in May, made available to defense attorneys any evidence to be used against Clore at his trial, Zimmermann said.

"They had a duty to inform us the slides at least existed," Zimmermann said.

Prosecutor R.K. Hansen defended the evidence, saying he was unaware of it until recently and had not acted in bad faith.

Prosecutors termed the tissue samples "very, very important" to their case.

Zimmermann has attempted to show that the victim, who was being treated for a variety of ailments, was being kept alive by breathing and feeding tubes and was a "vegetable."

Hansen contends Clore was a "living, breathing human being."

Harris County Medical Examiner Joseph Jachimczyk testified Monday that his department's autopsy determined gunshot and brain damage was the cause of death.

Attorneys' discussions with Jachimczyk's office brought to light the existence of the slides containing tissue samples, Hansen said. He said no written report mentioned the slides.

Zimmermann said he would need the delay so experts hired by the defense could perform their own analysis of the samples.

Earlier Monday, the last of three nurses to testify, Cheryl Allen, told the jury of nine men and three women that she sat with a crying and shaky Billy Ray Clore on March 21 after learning of the death of Clore's father.

"I'm sorry about your dad. He's with God and he'll take care of him," Miss Allen recalled telling Clore. At the time, she did not know the man had been shot, she said in testimony before Harris County District Judge Ted Poe.

"He looked at me and said 'I shot him,'" she said.

Two other nurses — the first people to respond to the sound of gunfire from Robert Clore's room — testified on Friday that the defendant also told them he killed his father.

Robert Clore had been undergoing treatment at the center for about three months.

There were no eyewitnesses to the shooting and no identifiable fingerprints on the gun found in the room, according to testimony which began Friday after three days of trying to seat an impartial panel.

New bishop installed in Corpus Christi diocese

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Bishop Rene Gracida, a self-described liberal on social issues and a conservative theologian, has been installed as Corpus Christi's fifth Roman Catholic bishop.

Gracida, who was installed Monday in services broadcast live in Corpus Christi and Laredo, succeeds the Most. Rev. Thomas J. Drury, who was bishop for 18 years.

He was formerly of the diocese of Penascola-Thallahassee, Fla. His new diocese includes more than 300,000 members.

Gracida, who is of Hispanic and French descent, took the opportunity to address in Spanish the "Pueblo Hispano" of the Corpus Christi diocese.

"My presence among you as your bishop is to be a sign of life and faith, making of this a particular preoccupation of the church upon the cultures and traditions of your children," Gracida said.

Gracida kissed a crucifix, and a letter from Pope John Paul II designating Gracida as successor to Drury was read publicly. Gracida then took his seat the "cathedra" under a newly-hewn wooden rendition of his new coat of arms that now includes the three ciboria of the Diocese of Corpus Christi.

Inmate claims kidnapping involvement

CLEVELAND (AP) — A Texas prison inmate who reportedly says he was involved in the disappearance three years ago of 8-year-old Tiffany Papesh is only seeking publicity, the girl's father says.

Television station WEWS reported Monday that it received a letter from a man identified as Brandon Lee Flagner. The man said he was turning himself in "because the guilt is too heavy to carry any longer," the station reported.

Eric Braun, WEWS news director, said the two-page handwritten letter was received Monday.

"I am involved in the kidnap and murder of Tiffany Papesh who disappeared from Maple Heights in 1980," the letter read. "I am soon to be arrested for that case and want the TV-5 news staff to have the option of first coverage."

FBI spokesman John Dunn confirmed that FBI agents interviewed an inmate at the Palestine, Texas, prison last week. He said information was relayed to the FBI in Cleveland and police in Maple Heights, where Tiffany vanished, but Dunn declined to identify the inmate.

"We are attempting to simply run it down to verify or disprove information the individual provided," Dunn said. "We don't know if this is a legitimate break or there is some other motivating factor interjecting this guy into the case."

Tiffany's father, Frank Papesh, discounted the letter, calling Flagner a "kook and a publicity seeker."

"If the man is going to confess, why stop at the question, 'Where is Tiffany?'" Papesh said. "He hasn't come up with any information that he couldn't have gotten from the newspaper or news media."

Three months before Tiffany's disappearance, Flagner was paroled from the Ohio State Reformatory in Mansfield, where he had been serving time on a burglary conviction, according to the television report.

Lucas says he knows perjury suspect

MONTAGUE (AP) — Self proclaimed mass killer Henry Lee Lucas claims to have known a woman wanted on suspicion of perjury in connection with a murder investigation in Brownwood, authorities say.

Texas Ranger Norman Autry said Lucas was questioned last week about the slaying of Donna Mae Inlow, 72, of Brownwood.

Ms. Inlow was found stabbed to death at her business April 27, 1981. An autopsy showed she had been raped, authorities said.

Lucas, 46, who has claimed to have killed about 100 women, is charged with five slayings.

Lucas also was questioned about 59-year-old Bettye Jo Glendining, who is wanted on suspicion of aggravated perjury in connection with Ms. Inlow's slaying, Autry said Monday.

Ms. Glendining volunteered information about the case to a Brown County grand jury in February 1982, authorities said.

Amercian Legion will re-enact motorcade to dedicate U.S. 281

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas American Legion says it will stage a 600-mile motorcade July 18-21 from the Red River to the Rio Grande to honor the state's war dead.

The motorcade will follow U.S. 281, designated the American Legion Memorial Highway, from Burkburnett to McAllen with numerous stops along the way for ceremonies and receptions, including a July 18 ceremony in Burkburnett, re-dedicating U.S. 281 to Texans killed in both world wars, Korea and Vietnam.

John Sanders, director of the tour, said the caravan of American Legion members and auxiliary members, elected officials and other citizens will re-enact the first motorcade in 1935 when the highway, then known as Texas 66, was dedicated to Texas World War I dead.

Windows bashed in jail riot

EL PASO (AP) — Inmates, apparently upset with the new El Paso County Jail's no-smoking rule, bashed in two double-strength glass windows, but no further disturbances were reported, authorities said.

Sixty inmates awaiting transfer from the old jail to the new $31 million facility rioted Friday night. Thirty-one people, including ten officers, were slightly injured in the three-hour uprising.

Sheriff Mike Davis said the ban was imposed because smoking inmates could spark life-threatening fires, but Monday, county commissioners questioned whether the banning of smoking was precipitating more violence.

Judge says he will hear motion

HOUSTON (AP) — Probate Judge Pat Gregory says a fellow judge's decision not to hear a motion barring him from presiding over a multi-million dollar estate battle has left him with no alternative but to hear the motion.

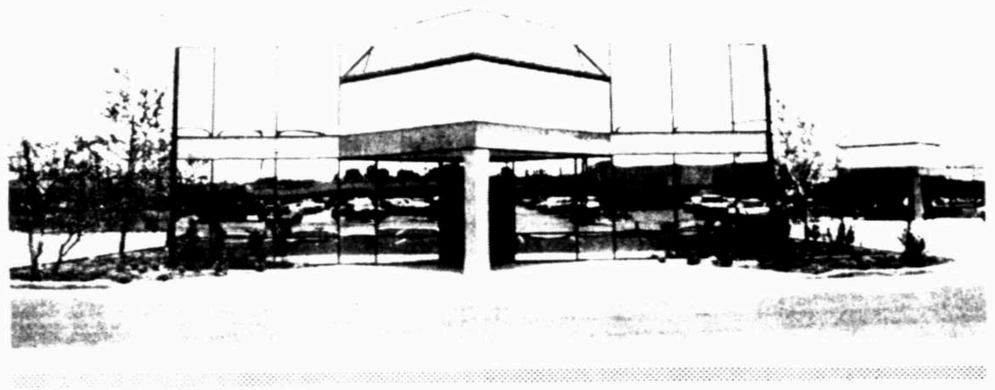

State District Judge Shearn Smith, to whom the motion had also been presented, took no action.

The battle centering around the billion-dollar estate of oil baron Hugh Roy Cullen was complicated two weeks ago when New York attorney Roy Cohn charged Gregory had suggested a method of dividing disputed property of Cullen's estate.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, July 13, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Harrison Ford, French politician Simone Veil, Congressman Jack Kemp (R-NY) and Seattle Seahawks ace reliever Bill Caudill celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Boy's Town founder Father Flanagan and the "Today" show's first host Dave Garroway. How you cope with personal problems affects your boss' opinion of you. Get expert help if you have a financial dilemma. New business and employment opportunities will surface soon. Travel adds to the joy of romance. Do not let pride stand in the way of love. Competition at work spurs you on to greatness. Be prepared to assume a leadership role on short notice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Inside information helps you make the right financial decision. An about-face on your part will be beneficial to both business and romance. Weigh what you hear and avoid confrontations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Partnerships enjoy favorable influences. Be prepared to make intelligent concessions. You need to step up your efforts to trim expenses. Preserve family traditions. Romance is more rewarding than in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use your influence wisely or you could face a serious challenge. A student gets good tips from a former teacher. Although dreams can be prophetic, your finances require that you deal in realities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Showcase your unique talents and others will seek you out. Appearances can be deceiving. Resist a temptation to gamble with your hard-earned money. Avoid acting on impulse.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not let a sudden change upset you. It could be a blessing in disguise! You find new career or business success. Curb a tendency to say, "I told you so."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stop trying to tell others how to live their lives. Keep your promises and meet a deadline. Romance enjoys favorable influences. Do not be afraid to make the first move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You suddenly see the answer to a difficult question. Keep your theories to yourself unless someone asks for them. An old flame re-enters the picture, threatening a current relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A better day for completing old projects than starting new ones. An unexpected recovery is possible. Disregard the flippant remarks of a long-time neighbor or business associate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Resist an urge to splurge. Now is the time to submerge yourself in work. A phone call or letter boosts your spirits. Welcome mate or partner's unusually cooperative mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): By putting forth a little extra effort you can increase your earnings substantially. Distant affairs go better than expected but could still require travel. Romance holds few surprises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19): Financial affairs are sensitive. Do not let your friends dictate your decisions. An influential person will cooperate if you make the first move. The social scene will be lively this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A favor will be granted if you request it early in the day. Concentrate on doing one thing at a time. Greater teamwork is possible if you set a good example.

Ex-batboy writes TV series

NEW YORK (AP) — Only in America can a former Yankee batboy grow up to write a television series about baseball.

Thad Mumford, who wore pinstripes and chased foul balls in the New York Yankees' gory days — when they were worse than the Mets — is creative consultant on NBC's new "Bay City Blues," about a minor league baseball team in a working-class town in California. The Tuesday night series will debut Oct. 25.

Mumford's last TV credit was story editor and producer for "M-A-S-H" during its final four seasons. Before that, he wrote scripts for "Good Times," "Maude," and his "embarrassing sitcoms" — "Waverly Wonders," with Joe Namath, and "Angie."

He also had some preliminary talks, now in limbo, about writing a TV movie based on the life of Yankee catcher Thurman Munson, who died in a plane crash.

But the job on his resume that best qualifies him to dramatize the hardball experience is: Batboy ... Yankees ... 1968-69.

"Actually, I began working as a ballboy," says Mumford. "In the old days, a little after the dead-ball era, there was a pecking order. You began as a foul-line ballboy on the visitors' side, then Yankee side, then visiting-team batboy, then stardom and the Holy Grail.

"It was a real Horatio Alger story. I wanted to be the first black Yankee batboy."

And he was. Sort of.

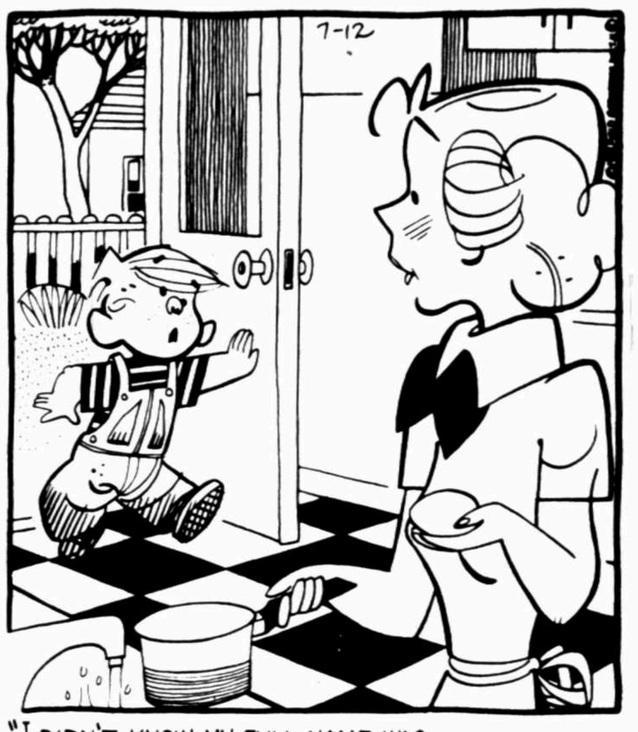

"I couldn't call myself the official Yankee batboy. But on one road trip to Washington D.C., I did his job. Hey, if Roger Maris could have an asterisk, so could I."

By that time, though, Mumford's dream job had lost some of its Hollywood luster. "I remember looking out at the expanse of Yankee Stadium with reverence. But it became a job, particularly during doubleheaders in the middle of July when you had to fight off swarms of mosquitoes."

This first-hand knowledge of the grime behind baseball's glamour is what Mumford brings to the show, which will have Steven Bochco, creator of "Hill Street Blues," as executive producer. "I carry with me a soppy admiration for the remarkable physical skills of athletes, and a perspective of the realities of clubhouse life," says Mumford.

That doesn't mean that "Bay City" will be "Ball Four Blues." "I'm not going to crucify Jim Bouton (author of "Ball Four"), but I respect the omerta (secret oath) of the clubhouse, that certain things don't leave there.

We have frequently been accused of neglecting the female of the species in our coverage of bridge activities. If it is true, we hasten to apologize — we are devoted to the ladies and hate to think of playing bridge without them. Here's a hand from the Women's Team event at the recent Common Market Championships.

What is the correct bid with the South hand? Four spades is as good a choice as any, but we could make a case for one spade or even pass. In any event, four spades was the final contract in the England-France match.

Maureen Dennison of England led the king of diamonds, ruffed by the declarer, Elisabeth Delor. It was almost certain that now East had to have the king of clubs, so it looked as if there was a danger of losing four tricks in the minor suits.

Declarer ruffed and cashed the king of spades to learn there was also a trump loser. Declarer cashed the ace of spades and then elected to try to set up hearts. She led the king of hearts from hand, and East, Dianna Williams, was put to the test early. She came through with flying colors.

She grabbed the ace of hearts and fired back the king of clubs. Declarer could not afford to duck this trick, for then she would have to lose two heart tricks, a trump and a club. But when she won with the ace of clubs, her only entry to the table was eliminated. No matter what she did, she would have to lose two hearts and a trick in each black suit for down one.

We love to watch the ladies!

Hardly civilized

It's the type of thing you expect to see on the silver screen, starring Jack Nicholson or some other "macho" personality. Or you could read about in a cheap novel written by some well-known author whose name you'll likely never ever run across again.

But in reality involuntary servitude is an archaic practice that ended decades ago. Right? Not quite. From the eastern part of the state we hear that a federal grand jury has returned a 24-count indictment against two East Texas men who held 17 Mexican aliens captive at a farm outside the community of Center and forced them to plant trees for no wages.

According to investigators, the Mexicans were recruited and picked up Feb. 11 in Rocksprings, hauled 600 miles across the state in a rental trailer and put to work planting trees. They were fed only enough to keep them alive, threatened with guns and housed in a 10-by-17 foot shack with no toilet or sink and only wooden planks for beds. They escaped by leaping from the back of a pickup in downtown Center.

As he prepares to enter the 21st century, modern man prides himself on his degree of civilization. But are we really civilized when this kind of disgraceful conduct can occur?

Of course these events do occur. They occur all around us. During the 1950s, the bracero program operated by the United States with Mexico was rife with abuses on both sides of the border. Mexicans had to buy their way into the program in their homeland and often worked for unscrupulous ranchers in Texas and elsewhere. Some accounts even indicate that Mexicans were killed instead of being paid.

But these occurrences should merely serve as fuel for change. Yes, the United States experiences a problem with Mexico in relation to illegal immigration. Yes, the United States does need to reform its immigration policy and to deal with those who enter this nation illegally in a swift and sure manner. As a nation though, we're judged according to the conduct of all our people.

The fact that aliens are in this nation illegally does not relieve this nation of the responsibility for ensuring their protection from those who seek to prey upon them.

Slavery will come to an end once and for all only when all people view it with abhorrence. Society may currently be unable to compel that disposition, but it certainly can compel a just punishment for those who practice slavery. This is an example of why it should.

Televising Senate

It's time for the U.S. Senate to join the House of Representatives on the tube. Recently, cable television viewers could see and hear the budget debate on the floor of the House, but the debate in the Senate was blacked out. The House began televising its proceedings four years ago. We know the smaller body moves with more deliberation. But there has been more than enough delay. A resolution authorizing TV cameras is on the Senate floor. It should be adopted. And a filibuster on the matter should not be allowed to succeed, as one by Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., did last year. The Senate deserves equal time.

Another View:

Equality in pensions

Employed women won an important victory in the Supreme Court this week when the justices ruled in Arizona vs. Norris that Title VII of the Civil Rights Act prohibits an employer from offering a pension benefit plan that discriminates on the basis of sex. Although 90 percent of all workers are covered by plans that provide benefits without regard to sex — employees of the federal government and most large corporations fall into this category — some plans, in particular those provided by local governments and nonprofit organizations, pay a lower monthly benefit to women because women generally live longer than men and will therefore receive benefits for a longer period of time. This kind of employer plan will no longer be allowed.

While women's groups are justifiably jubilant about the decision, employers and insurance companies can make adjustments and live with the new rules, too, because the decision is not retroactive. In recent testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee, insurance industry executives said that a decision exactly like the one the court has just made "would not be unreasonable." It is important that the court refused to apply the ruling to persons already retired or to contributions already made, because such a requirement would create enormous unfunded liabilities that could jeopardize the stability of many pension funds. Thus only benefits derived from contributions made after the date of the Supreme Court's judgment must be calculated without regard to the sex of the employee.

The Norris case does not settle all questions of sex-based insurance rates. In fact, the court emphasized that this decision on employment practices does not deal with the larger issue of whether consideration of sex should be prohibited in all insurance contracts. Employers of fewer than 15 people, for example, are not covered by Title VII and are not affected by the decision. Group health and disability policies are priced according to the past experience of the group being covered, a practice that would not be changed by the decision. And policies purchased by individuals rather than employers — annuities, life insurance, automobile insurance and individual health policies, for example — may still vary in price according to sex if such distinctions can be actuarially justified.

Congress is now considering legislation that would outlaw sex differentials in all insurance. It is a sweeping, controversial measure that will be fought hard by the industry. But this week, the issue that had the broadest public support and was of primary importance to the women's movement was settled. The law requires that men and women receive not only equal pay, but equal pensions for equal work.

Senator pushing oil interests

WASHINGTON — Not long after I reported on the legislative favors Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., had done for oil companies that appeared in his personal stock portfolio, he resigned as chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee.

Jack Anderson

Wallop says his departure from the Ethics Committee had nothing to do with the apparent conflicts of interest I reported. He adamantly refused to concede that there had been any conflict at all.

But now that he's no longer burdened with the chore of being the Senate's ethical watchdog, the lanky, Yale-educated rancher seems to have redoubled his efforts on behalf of Big Oil's interests — and, coincidentally, his own.

Wallop's 1982 financial disclosure form shows he has between $35,000 and $115,000 invested in Exxon, Standard Oil of California and Standard of Indiana. He received $18,025 in oil royalties from a Getty subsidiary, bringing his total income from that company since 1978 to nearly $100,000.

Big Oil also contributed $115,000 to Wallop's successful re-election campaign last year.

My associate Jock Hatfield checked the senator's recent legislative record and turned up some flagrant examples of Wallop's penchant for giving the oil industry a helping hand:

— As chairman of a Finance subcommittee, Wallop introduced legislation that would give strip-mining companies an estimated $15 million tax break next year and $21 million more in 1985-1988. The bill would allow strip miners to write off the future cost of land reclamation before the improvements are actually made. Getty, Exxon, Standard Oil of California and Standard of Indiana all have extensive strip-mining operations and stand to reap a windfall if their senatorial stockholder's bill passes.

— Wallop's Wyoming Wilderness Bill, passed by the Senate in April and now pending in the House, would open up 300,000 acres of proposed wilderness — including the pristine Gros Ventre area near Jackson Hole — to oil and gas drilling.

Getty has been battling in court for the right to develop an estimated $2 billion worth of gas and oil reserves in the Gros Ventre region. Wallop's bill would hand them the drilling rights on a platter.

— As chairman of an Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee, Wallop introduced a bill that would have given the interior secretary blanket authority to sell off land administered by the National Park Service — including coal and oil acreage coveted by the senator's preferred oil companies. Wallop denied having tried to slip one by; when the implications of the bill were pointed out by other committee members, Wallop agreed to amend it.

— Wallop led the successful floor fight against a proposal to ban coal leasing on certain federal lands. The ban covered more than 1 billion tons of coal that Wallop's four favorite oil companies have shown an interest in leasing the rights to over the next two years. Their hopes are still alive, thanks to Wallop's efforts.

Footnote: Wallop has refused to comment on these apparent conflicts of interest between his financial holdings and his legislative actions.

A REAL BUMMER: Amnesty International, the human rights organization that tries to smooth over bitter political hatreds by appealing to mankind's better nature, may have gone a bit too far in a recent issue of its newsletter, Matchbox. Included in a graphic collage of "the important things in Georgia's history" to mark Amnesty International's annual meeting in Atlanta was a picture of the most hated damyankee of them all: Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman.

There was Uncle Billy's grizzled mug staring out in such distinguished company as King George II, for whom Georgia was named, the state bird (brown thrasher), flower (Cherokee rose), fruit (Georgia peach) and, of course, a suggestion of the Confederate Stars and Bars.

"We needed a graphic in a hurry, and the artist wanted a photo of someone who had had a historical impact upon Georgia," a chagrined editor Marcia Schwen told my reporter Kathy McDonald. The artist tried to find a picture of civil rights leader and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, but for some reason couldn't.

So they settled in haste on Gen. Sherman, whose impact on Georgia consisted of laying waste to the state "from Atlanta to the sea" — in the words of the old Union veterans' song.

STUDENT GAP: It's not only in Central America and the Caribbean that the Soviets are outpointing the United States in student-exchange programs that could enhance the Kremlin's long-term influence. A secret CIA study cited Soviet efforts in Tunisia and Jordan as "symptomatic of a worldwide phenomenon."

The Soviets "doubled the number of Tunisian students receiving training in the USSR during 1978-1979 and again more than doubled that figure in 1979-1980."

And in Jordan, where U.S. exchanges "are diminishing" the Soviets and East Europeans "are dramatically increasing their exchange activities." One Soviet-Jordanian exchange agreement provided for an increase of 171 scholarships offered to Jordanian students during the last two years.

CHARLEY REESE

High Court practicing 'Alice' law

The United States no longer has constitutional government nor is it a nation of laws. It is ruled by an oligarchy in black robes who have usurped the powers granted them by the Constitution.

Charley Reese

A constitution is a written document which binds the government and which the government cannot alter. Obviously if the government could alter it, it could not bind the government. Handcuffs cannot perform their function if you give the key to the prisoner.

The idea of the framers of the Constitution was to tie the hands of government and leave the power to change the Constitution in the hands of the people. Another way to put it is that the Constitution represents the direct voice of the people and takes precedence over any law or rule inacted by the people's representatives. The supreme law of the land is the Constitution, not the Supreme Court.

For such a system to work, however the Constitution must say what it means and mean what it says. An early chief justice, John Marshall, spelled this out in 1824: "The enlightened patriots who framed our Constitution and the people who adopted it must be understood to have employed words in their natural sense, and to have intended what they have said."

That means the words must be defined in the framer's context, not somebody else's. Their meaning is easy to determine even today, from the words themselves and from the generous record of comments, explanations, and notes left by the framers.

If we look at the contrary proposition, that the Constitution means whatever any judge chooses to say it means, without regard for its own language and for the clear record of intent of the people who wrote it, then the Constitution becomes meaningless. It becomes nothing more than an excuse for arbitrary rule.

Unfortunately, that is what federal judges have done and what Americans have tolerated. Whenever the meaning of the Constitution conflicted with what some judge or group of judges decided was important, they disregarded the Constitution and imposed their own viewpoint. If the Constitution said black and they wanted white, they merely said the word, "black," now means white. That is the Alice in Wonderland school of law.

That puts judges in the business of legislating which is an usurpation of power. The reason they have gotten away with it is that in most cases a lot of people agreed with the end result they were after. The standard rationalization is "Well, the courts had to do it because the Legislature or the Congress wouldn't." That is totalitarian thinking. That's saying the end justifies the means.

If you read the Constitution you won't find anything in it to justify the Supreme Court's decisions on abortion. What the court had to do, to practice Alice in Wonderland law, was discover a right to privacy and then conclude that the right to privacy includes the right to kill an unborn child if the mother decides birth is less fun than conception.

The Constitution says nothing about the right to privacy and on the contrary says the government may search your person, your papers and home and seize your property as long as it follows due process.

The modern liberal mind is emotionally immature and wants what it wants without regard to facts, logic, procedures or consequences. The result of that and of our tolerance of usurpation it produced is the loss of constitutional government. The Constitution gives the Congress the power to correct abuses by federal judges, but we must first elect a Congress with the courage and integrity necessary for them to use that power.

Stockman rehearsed dilemma

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When Rep. David Stockman of Michigan impersonated President Jimmy Carter on Oct. 24, 1980, in Ronald Reagan's debate rehearsal, he vigorously attacked the Republican nominee's position on Medicare — a tactic at the heart of the briefing book affair transfixing Washington two-and-one-half years later.

Stockman's attack on Medicare is offered as the best proof that possession of the Carter campaign's briefing material tipped the debate, and the election, to Reagan. But on the campaign stump, Carter had been incessantly attacking Reagan's Medicare position.

Whether or not the briefing book affair seriously damages the president depends not on its value to the Reagan campaign but on how it was obtained. Nevertheless, high-level Democratic strategists believe that if Reagan's 1980 debate victory is viewed by the nation as bogus, public acceptance of a 73-year-old president running for re-election next year will diminish.

But even if the White House can show that the material was neither illegally obtained nor instrumental in the debate, the affair shows that major shortcomings of the Reagan administration were apparent in his campaign. Deep discord within the White House and Stockman's peculiar behavior as budget director were previewed in preparations for the debate.

Stockman's impersonation of Carter was indeed the premier performance at the Oct. 24 debate rehearsal at Reagan's rented Wexford estate in the Virginia hunt country, but not because he used the illicit briefing material given him the night before to mimic the Democratic president. "What struck me," one senior Reagan aide said, "was the intensity with which he was attacking Reagan."

Stockman displayed that intensity in bringing up Medicare, an issue listed at least three times in the material handed Stockman ("I challenge Gov. Reagan to deny that he led the effort to oppose Medicare."). Medicare was duly slipped into Reagan's own briefing book for the debate, and he was ready when Carter brought up the issue in Cleveland at the Oct. 28 debate.

But no leak from the Carter campaign was necessary to alert Reagan. "I was for Medicaid and Medicare," Carter said at the Wayne, Mich., Ford plant Oct. 1. "My opponent was against Medicaid and Medicare." On 24 additional occasions between then and the debate, Carter zeroed in on Reagan's opposition to Medicare.

Yet, when Stockman addressed the Optimist Club at Cassopolis, Mich., in his congressional district the day of the debate, he could not resist relating how a "pilfered" document had helped him rehearse Reagan four days earlier. That fits Stockman's compulsion to tell all, most recently reflected in his confession to Time correspondent Laurence Barrett that unleashed the present furor.

But it also reflects the bifurcated nature of the Reagan campaign. Longtime Reaganite aides Lyn Nofziger, Stu Spencer, Martin Anderson, Richard V. Allen and Richard Wirthlin had no inkling the campaign had obtained Carter information.

The campaign aides thus far identified as handling the Carter material are mainly newcomers. That included aides inherited from vice presidential candidate George Bush, such as James Baker and David Gergen, and that one-time booster of John B. Connally, Dave Stockman. At no time did they reveal the existence of the secret information to the old Reaganites.

Apart from that unusual breach in internal communications, the Reagan campaign was divided on tactics. The newcomers stressed reaction to what Carter might have to say and, therefore, put heavy emphasis on preparing a briefing book for Reagan; the longtimers declared the governor didn't use briefing books and ought to stress his own ideals anyway.

By and large Reagan was Reagan in the debate, with minimal use of prearranged dialogue. As in the case of Medicare, it is difficult to trace either Reagan's own briefing materials or the use of Carter's materials to his victory. Still, the debate was the making of Stockman and, to a lesser degree, Baker, presaging the split within the Reagan White House and, belatedly, yielding the turmoil that suddenly envelopes the Reagan presidency.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 12, the 193rd day of 1983. There are 172 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 12, 100 B.C., Julius Caesar was born.

On this date:

In 1804, former Treasury Secretary Alexander Hamilton died from a pistol wound inflicted in a duel with Vice President Aaron Burr the day before.

In 1957, a 20-year-old Harvard student, Prince Karim, became the Aga Khan and the leader of 20 million Ismaili Moslems upon the death of his grandfather.

In 1960, France agreed to the independence of several West African nations — Dahomey, Niger, Upper Volta, Ivory Coast, Chad, Central Africa and the Congo.

And in 1975, Ernest Morgan, a U.S. colonel kidnapped in Beirut, was released unharmed to Lebanese premier Rashid Karami.

Ten years ago: Thousands of records of U.S. military personnel who had served before 1960 were destroyed in a fire at a record center in St. Louis.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter condemned the trials in the Soviet Union of Anatoly Shcharansky and other dissidents as attacks on universal human rights.

Attorney disputes videotapes' existence

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — An attorney says he will offer President Reagan videotapes purportedly showing the late model Vicki Morgan in sex scenes with government officials.

If Reagan does not want the tapes, said Robert K. Steinberg, they will be destroyed.

Steinberg, a prominent criminal attorney, said he received the three videotapes over the weekend. He told reporters Monday that the tapes, which allegedly show two high-level "appointed officials" and a congressman, "could embarrass everyone right to the top of the country."

The attorney for Marvin Pancoast, the man accused of killing Miss Morgan, said he was skeptical that such tapes existed.

Steinberg said he would call Reagan today and "if he wants to look at these tapes, for whatever reason ... then I will deliver them to him. Otherwise they will be destroyed."

"He's the only person I would show them to," Steinberg said.

In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said this morning that Steinberg had not called the White House to offer the tapes and there had been no White House contact with him.

Speakes, asked whether Steinberg should destroy the tapes, said "I don't think we'd wish him to do that." Asked why not, he said he thought the lawyer "shouldn't destroy anything" that could be evidence.

"You're telling me that a responsible member of the bar is giving an ultimatum to the president of the United States to either respond about a sex tape he has or he'll destroy it?" asked Arthur Barens, Pancoast's current attorney, in response to a question from reporters. "I should think the president would tell him to go to hell and take the tapes with him."

Steinberg claimed six men and four women are on the tapes, including Miss Morgan and the late millionaire Alfred Bloomingdale, a department store heir and friend of the president who died last year of cancer.

Marvin Pancoast

He would not identify the others. Steinberg said they included a congressman, two appointed officials "of ambassadorial, but not of Cabinet level" and two "prominent businessmen from the construction oil and gas industries."

He said he was able to identify the six with the aid of two other attorneys, including one from the Justice Department. He did not identify either attorney, but said the Justice Department lawyer "was serving just as a personal friend of mine when he viewed the tapes."

Steinberg said it appeared the people involved knew they were being videotaped. He described the activity on the tapes as "basic sex, a little bit of 'S and M' (sadism and masochism) and one scene with two couples having sex."

Miss Morgan's beaten body was found last Thursday at her home.

Steinberg, 46, said he was given the tapes after agreeing to represent Pancoast temporarily.

FBI to study campaign documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI, probing possible political espionage in the 1980 presidential campaign, is sending agents to the Hoover Institution at Stanford University to make arrangements to see original campaign documents stored there, an administration official says.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the House subcommittee investigating how the Reagan campaign received briefing material and other documents prepared by the Carter White House said he had not been assured that his panel would have access to the material at the California campus. But he said he hoped approval would be granted today.

President Reagan, through White House counsel Fred F. Fielding, ordered the Justice Department to give Rep. Donald J. Albosta, the subcommittee chairman, access to any campaign material the department obtains.

Albosta, D-Mich., chairman of the human resources subcommittee of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, said he appreciated Reagan's decision.

"I look forward to working out an arrangement for inspection and copying of those files...in the very near future," he said Monday afternoon shortly after the decision was announced.

"IN REGARD to our access to the Hoover Institution Reagan collection, we still do not have an affirmative answer, but we hope that request will be granted in writing tomorrow," he said.

Subcommittee sources, who asked not to be named, said Albosta would probably very quickly seek subpoena power if the panel's investigators were not granted access to the complete file of original documents at the Hoover Institution.

They said the panel's investigators would not be satisfied with seeing the originals of the documents the Justice Department wanted because the subcommittee's purpose is broader than the FBI's, going beyond simply potential violations of law to ethical questions and whether they is any need for additional legislation.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, announcing Reagan's decision, said the subcommittee investigators "will have complete access, they will have access to all the material."

"It is the president's desire to allow this investigation to proceed, by the Justice Department, by the congressional committee, to proceed unimpeded," the spokesman said.

SHORTLY AFTER Reagan's order was made public, an administration official, speaking on condition that he not be further identified, said the Justice Department had directed the FBI to send agents to the Hoover Institution to discuss the department's access to original documents in the files there.

While the terms under which the papers were donated require Reagan or two of his most senior aides to grant approval before the documents can be inspected or copied, there were no indications there would be problems gaining such permission.

There were these other developments in the briefing book case on Monday:

—Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who is running for the Democratic presidential nomination, said in Council Bluffs, Iowa, that a special prosecutor should be appointed to investigate how the Reagan campaign obtained the material.

—Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said he had seen or heard nothing so far indicating a separate Senate investigation was required. He said Reagan "has been fully responsive to the situation as it presently appears."

"It is clear to me the president was not involved," Baker said.

—SEN. BARRY Goldwater, R-Ariz., said of the briefing book affair in a speech on the Senate floor: "It's a laughable joke what's going on in this town in the name of news."

Fielding, in a letter to Albosta, wrote:

"The president has directed that representatives of the Department of Justice meet with you to work out procedures to provide you and your subcommittee with access to any such materials located in the Hoover Institution or elsewhere to assist you in your investigation while assuring the integrity of the Department of Justice investigation."

A copy of the letter was sent to Attorney General William French Smith.

Albosta had written to Reagan on June 29 asking for any material being provided by the White House to the Justice Department for the FBI investigation. He has also asked the Hoover Institution to retain original Carter documents in its files, rather than send them to the Justice Department.

Charles Palm, acting archivist at the Hoover Institution, said he had told the subcommittee that Hoover planned to retain all original documents. He said he referred to the White House the panel's request to inspect and copy documents, citing the donation agreement's requirements.

At the Justice Department, spokesman Tom DeCair said "the president wants us to cooperate to the fullest extent possible and I'm sure will be able to work something out with the subcommittee."

"It seems highly unlikely there wouldn't be anything we couldn't turn over," he said.

'Night of long knives' slices up Reagan staff

By MAUREEN SANTINI

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — One observer called it the "night of the long knives." But by whatever name, the controversy over alleged political espionage during President Reagan's 1980 campaign is causing the smoldering battle between the old and the new Reagan factions to ignite into a public spectacle.

Conservatives who have supported President Reagan since he was governor of California in the 1960s and even before have always resented the more moderate and pragmatic faction, led by White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and his lieutenants, including communications director David R. Gergen.

Now that Baker and Gergen have acknowledged receiving some of Jimmy Carter's briefing materials during the campaign, the conservatives are gleeful.

"People who are anti-Baker and Gergen are licking their chops," one White House official said, speaking anonymously.

In a recent interview, Lyn Nofziger, a longtime Reagan supporter and conservative who has had public battles with Baker in the past, stated the problem succinctly:

"The (White House) staff has been split, as everyone knows. And it seems on the surface that one of the factions — the new Reagan people — were mixed up in this and the old Reagan people were not.

"I suppose there's some feeling of people thinking maybe it serves them right," said Nofziger, who left the White House and now is a political consultant.

Even though he's had his differences with Baker, Nofziger said he was trying not to be factional in this case. He said no one should have to resign unless evidence surfaces that Reagan aides deliberately tried to infiltrate the Carter campaign to obtain inside information.

There is a growing number of people who believe that either Baker or CIA Director William Casey will have to resign before the controversy ends. The men engaged in what one analyst called a public screaming match over their differing accounts of how the Carter documents were obtained.

Baker said he remembered getting the Carter material from Casey, who was chairman of Reagan's campaign. Casey said he could not recall ever seeing such documents. He also said publicly that Baker had been given responsibility for the Oct. 28, 1980, debate between then President Carter and Reagan.

"They certainly could have coordinated this in private," said a White House official.

He added: "I would imagine Baker is vulnerable because of his enemies, not because of the facts. The slightest stub of his toe is going to bring him criticism."

Baker, a rich Texan who originally worked on George Bush's presidential campaign, has always been a target of opposition by the ultraconservatives who believe the Baker faction is preventing Reagan from adhering to his true conservative principles.

One longtime government official, who would only speak anonymously, said he believed the anti-Baker faction has simply decided "it's time for the night of the long knives. You have your bloodletting and you get it over with" especially before the 1984 presidential election campaign gears up in earnest.

Prospective jurors questioned for Brink's robbery-murder trial

GOSHEN, N.Y. (AP) — More than 100 prospective jurors, many clutching doctors' notes, have been questioned about whether serving in the Brink's robbery-murder trial would pose a hardship for them.

Most said yes. And all appeared a bit nervous Monday as they trooped into the courtroom packed with reporters, security officers and three defendants in the $1.6 million holdup that killed three people.

Identified only by number — the judge has ordered that jurors be kept anonymous — 122 prospects were questioned Monday. Thirty-one were placed in a pool to be questioned in depth later.

Limiting women soldiers' roles damaging, panel reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon decision to close certain specialities to women soldiers on grounds that they could involve combat is damaging the all-volunteer Army, according to an advisory panel on women in the services.

In a letter on behalf of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, Dr. Mary Evelyn Blagg Huey told Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that barring women from 23 more military specialties would seriously damage morale, enlistments, "and the continued success of the all-volunteer Army."

The Pentagon made the June 6 letter public Monday.

"The elimination of women from participation in a broad spectrum of military occupations because of calculations of the potential for involvement in the 'forward' battle area deprives our Army of many skilled soldiers," wrote Dr. Huey, who is president of Texas Woman's University, Denton.

The Army last year raised to 61 the number of military specialties barred to women because of "the probability of direct combat," leaving about 300 specialties still open.

The Carter administration had a goal of 87,500 enlisted women for the Army by 1986.

However, early in the Reagan administration the Army cut that goal back to 65,000 pending the outcome of a special study.

The study led to the adding of 23 more specialties to the list of 38 already unavailable to women.

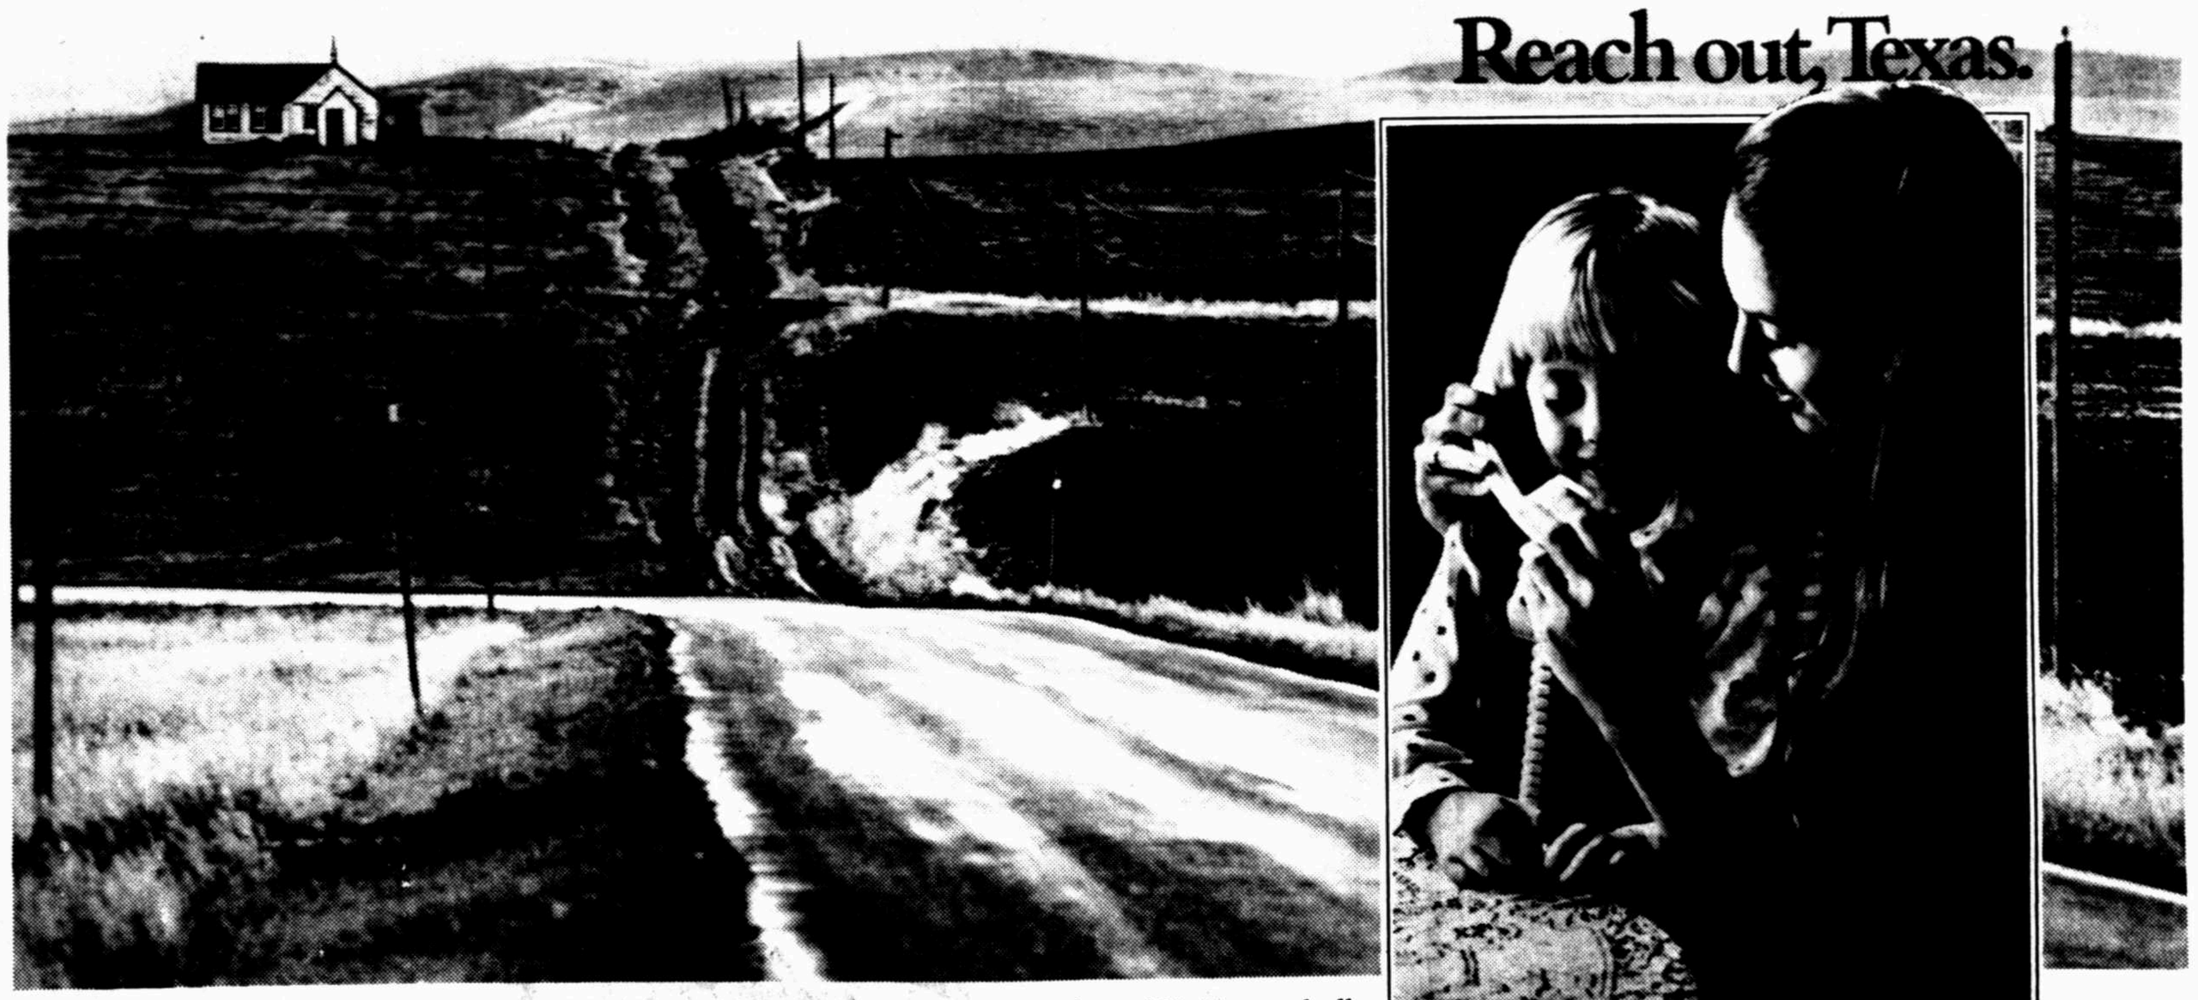

The cap on women was later raised to 70,000. According to the latest available figures, there were just over 67,000 enlisted women in the Army as of March 31.

The number of women soldiers reached its peak during World War II when 93,000 women served.

Dr. Huey's letter did not challenge the Army policy of keeping women out of combat, but she told Weinberger that "there is serious questioning of the definition of combat."

Dr. Huey expressed concern that the closing of military occupations harms career development for women in the Army, making promotion "difficult if not impossible" and keeping women from achieving the higher ranks.

Samantha Smith of Maine, right, poses with her roommate, Natasha Kashirina of Leningrad, after going for a swim in the Black Sea at the Artek youth camp at Gurzuf in the Soviet Union.

Samantha receives hearty welcome at Soviet carnival

YALTA, U.S.S.R (AP) — Samantha Smith didn't dance or sing, but she clearly was the star of the show at the Artek Young Pioneer camp carnival.

Entering the full-sized stadium perched on a hill above the camp, the Maine schoolgirl was greeted Monday night with a roar of applause from 2,000 Young Pioneers.

Floodlights illuminated the arena at the precise moment when 11-year-old Samantha and her Soviet friend, 13-year-old Natasha Kirishina from Leningrad, start to walk around its perimeter.

Samantha waved to the crowd, then greeted a reporter from near her hometown of Manchester, Maine, saying, "You finally got here." Asked how she felt about the tumultuous welcome, Samantha giggled, "Pretty great."

All the while, a woman's voice boomed in Russian over the loudspeakers, "Welcome to our festival tonight, American schoolgirl Samantha Smith. Samantha Smith came to our country at the invitation of General Secretary of the Communist Party ... (and President) Yuri Andropov."

That invitation was extended after Samantha wrote to Andropov asking whether he would start a war.

After the introduction, Samantha, dressed in the white blouse and turquoise skirt that all girl campers wore, settled down to enjoy a colorful display of hundreds of costumed children dancing under twinkling lights and framed by a stage decorated with a huge red-and-pink electronically operated puppet.

The 4,500-foot high Great Bear Mountain formed a dark backdrop to the scene.

Monday evening's noisy spectacle contrasted with the quiet program planned for today.

Samantha's parents, Arthur and Jane, said they were due for a private tour of the Crimean coast — the Riviera of the Soviet Union — with lunch at a restaurant overlooking Lake Karagol in the mountains that rise above Yalta and the Artek camp.

After lunch, a visit to the famed Nikitin Botanical Garden, founded in 1812 just east of Yalta, was scheduled.

Mrs. Smith said she did not know how much of the tour Samantha would undertake in between spending time with her fellow campers.

Both parents seem to want Samantha to spend as much time as possible with the Young Pioneers and away from reporters covering her unusual trip.

Samantha dashed away from a swimming contest at the camp Monday afternoon to stroll with Soviet children. Foreign Ministry officials overseeing the trip told reporters who went in search of the group that Samantha's father had given "very strict orders" that no press disturb the walk.

Smith explained later, "I don't want her to feel under pressure to perform. I want this to be her experience ... when you observe her engaged in these activities, there really isn't anything else to say about them."

Mrs. Smith said, "The press has been very nice to her but when so many people point cameras at her and ask questions all at once it is tiring."

Terrorists attack governing party headquarters, killing two

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Left-wing terrorists machine-gunned and bombed the governing party headquarters while its women's branch was meeting, killing at least two people and wounding 30 in what the government called an attack by "cowardly assassins."

Officials said at least five terrorists, apparently members of the radical leftist Shining Path insurgent group, burst into the Popular Action Party's headquarters Monday night, firing machine guns and lobbing dynamite bombs while 200 people, mostly women, were gathered inside.

The attackers escaped, but Civil Guard commander Gen. Ricardo Rojas said one suspect was arrested later. He did not elaborate.

"The country is at war, and in a grave hour of its republican history," President Fernando Belaunde Terry said after visiting his party's bloodied headquarters in downtown Lima. He offered sympathy to the victims.

The government said two people were killed, but local press reports said the death toll was at least four.

"The terrorists just started shooting their submachine guns and people fell bleeding," said Jorge Azana, departmental secretary for Popular Action's Lima section.

The attack capped a day of at least 15 bombings in Lima, which Belaunde put under a state of emergency May 30 when Shining Path guerrillas blacked out the capital with another string of bombings. Under the emergency decree, police have expanded power to search homes and seize suspects without warrants.

"The blood today will not deter us," Belaunde said. The government's 3-year-old war against Shining Path, he said, "is not against brave enemies... but against cowardly assassins who are intent on causing damage to the nation, sowing unrest and death."

At least five bombs exploded in the headquarters, causing extensive damage and shattering hundreds of windows in nearby buildings, officials and witnesses said.

Rojas said the attackers hurled at least four bombs that did not explode and were safely removed by police. He said one consisted of twenty sticks of dynamite "which would have sufficed to blow the building to bits."

Prime Minister Fernando Schwalb told reporters police should act with "severity to find the authors of this attack."

Party Secretary-General Javier Alva Orlandini called the bombing "the most barbarous attack" since Shining Path began its campaign to topple Belaunde's government in 1980.

Alva Orlandini, who also is a vice president in Belaunde's government, visited some of the wounded who were taken to a clinic near the party headquarters. He identified one of those killed as Aydee Reategui, a leader of the women's group.

President, leading critics face new day of protest

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet, his leading critics in jail, faces a new "Day of National Protest" today — testing his two-pronged policy of cracking down while making concessions to a broad opposition movement.

Hundreds of thousands of leaflets calling the one-day demonstration, the third in three months, have circulated in Santiago and other cities for the past week, spread by activists of the Christian Democratic, Socialist and Communist parties.

Most of the unsigned leaflets urged Chileans angry about high unemployment and political repression to boycott stores and company lunchrooms during the day, then beat on pots and pans inside their homes for two hours at night.

But leftist militants in the capital's working class districts also have called for protesters to march, erect street barricades and sabotage public transport. Some priests in those areas fear the protest could be more violent than the ones on May 11 and June 14, when riot police killed at least five people and arrested 1,800.

A judge investigating the protest leaflets sent Christian Democratic Party President Gabriel Valdes and two other Christian Democratic leaders to jail without charges Saturday. Seven party activists were arrested in a march outside the jail Monday.

U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar and at least 10 foreign governments, including the Reagan administration, protested the jailings. Foreign Minister Miguel Schweitzer told seven West European diplomats the case was "strictly a judicial matter."

Pinochet opponents saw it as part of a crackdown that started with the June 15 arrest of labor activist Rodolfo Seguel. He led the May and June demonstrations, the biggest against the army general who overthrew the elected government of Marxist President Salvador Allende in 1973.

The regime has accused 40 labor leaders of threatening state security in the past month by calling protest strikes. Seguel, who heads the Copper Workers Confederation, remains in jail along with seven others.

After ordering Chilean media to censor news of dissent, Pinochet declared he would tolerate no more "subversive protests" and appointed a new military chief in Santiago, who vowed to use troops to keep order.

"The government has made clear it will not alter its authoritarian style or its economic policy, and under those circumstances there can be no real dialogue," said Christian Democratic ideologist Patricio Aylwin, one of 1,500 signers of a manifesto declaring themselves "coconspirators" with jailed party leaders.

But Pinochet has made concessions. He has extended a limited amnesty program to some political exiles while stopping, for now, the banishment of additional exiles.

All 13 feared killed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — All 13 persons aboard were feared killed when a Philippine air force helicopter exploded over a bay in the southern Philippines, the air force said today.

An announcement said the UH1H helicopter was carrying five crewmen and eight employees of the Southern Philippines Development Authority, a semi-government agency, on an inspection of economic projects on Mindanao Island.

The cause of the crash Monday is being investigated.

Cubs drop 8th straight, 3-2

JACKSON, Miss.—Jackson's Mets handed the Midland Cubs their eighth straight defeat, 3-2, to take a 3-0 lead in the Texas League series Monday night.

LaSchelle Tarver singled to open the seventh and then stole second. When Doug Welenc, who had relieved Jim Wright to start the inning, walked Rick McMullen, Bill Johnson came out of the bullpen. John Christensen promptly nicked him for a run-scoring single that proved the game-winner.

It was the ninth straight game in which Christensen, who also won Sunday's 3-2 game, has hit safely.

The key to the game was Jackson's five stolen bases. Midland had three runners picked off trying to steal. That's a swing of eight base runners.

Bill Latham, just up from A ball, stopped the Cubs on four hits for his first TL win, although he needed relief help.

Things didn't start out promisingly for Latham. He walked Jay Loviglio and A.J. Hill to start the game. However, before Hill ever got to first, Loviglio was thrown out stealing. Hill reached second on a wild throw and Bill Hatcher knocked in the run with a hit.

Jackson went in front in the home first on a bases loaded walk to Billy Beane and a sacrifice fly by John Gibbons.

Midland's other run in the sixth came on a two-out walk to Hatcher and Mike Anicich's triple.

Baker leads Dodgers over Cardinals, 7-6

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Dodgers overcame a bizarre wild pitch and some more sloppy fielding and when it was over, hero Dusty Baker had little to say.

Baker, still fighting his way out of a season-long slump, belted a two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning off St. Louis reliever Bruce Sutter for a 7-6 victory over the Cardinals Monday night.

That blast capped a three-run rally for the Dodgers and a big night for Baker, who finished with four hits, including a two-run homer earlier in the game.

"I've still got some work to do," said Baker, who hit only .231 — 50 points below his career average — during the first half of the season. Since then, he's gone 7-for-14 to raise his average to .244.

"I'll start talking again when my bat starts talking," he said politely.

In other National League games, Atlanta topped Montreal 6-4, Philadelphia powered past Cincinnati 11-7 in 11 innings, San Diego held off Chicago 6-5 and Pittsburgh nipped San Francisco 3-2.

The Dodgers trailed 6-4 in the ninth when Steve Sax and Ken Landreaux belted one-out doubles off Sutter. Baker then drilled his 10th homer into the left-field stands.

"I don't care what Dusty Baker is hitting," said Sutter. "He's still one of the toughest hitters in the league."

Said Baker: "That's the first hit I can ever remember getting off Sutter."

Los Angeles had scored once in the eighth as Baker singled off starter Bob Forsch, which fetched Sutter. The reliever got two outs before Mike Marshall singled and pinch hitter Rick Monday followed with a run-scoring single.

Dodgers starter Fernando Valenzuela took a four-hitter and a 3-0 lead into the sixth inning. But George Hendrick doubled with one out and went to third on Willie McGee's single. David Green then reached on an error by third baseman Pedro Guerrero, allowing Hendrick to score.

Glen Brummer singled to load the bases and McGee scored when Ozzie Smith grounded out. Valenzuela left the game after he walked Forsch, reloading the bases.

Then, with the runners going on a full count, reliever Dave Stewart threw a wild pitch for ball four to Tom Herr, forcing in Green. Brummer raced in from second and when catcher Steve Yeager retrieved the ball and threw wildly to the plate, Forsch also scored.

Joe Beckwith, 1-2, blanked St. Louis over the final three innings. Meanwhile, the Dodgers committed three errors in all, giving them 101 for the season.

National League

Phillies 11, Reds 7

Mike Schmidt, benched the previous two games, drilled a grand slam home run in the top of the 11th inning off Tom Hume to lift Philadelphia.

Schmidt's sixth career grand slam — which was his 17th homer of the season — gave him six runs batted in for the game. He had earlier belted a solo homer and had an RBI single.

His first homer and Cincinnati's fourth error helped the Phillies take a 6-0 lead in the third inning. But the Reds battled back, helped by Cesar Cedeno's two-run homer in the sixth.

Braves 6, Expos 4

Rafael Ramirez, not known for his power on longball-happy Atlanta, cracked a three-run homer to highlight a four-run inning and rally the Braves.

Montreal reliever Woodie Fryman had faced his only batter of the season April 10 before going on the disabled list the next day with arm problems. He came off the disabled list Monday and was the victim of Atlanta's big inning. Ramirez's homer was his third of the season.

Tim Wallach had a two-run homer for the Expos and Al Oliver delivered an RBI double and a run-scoring single.

Padres 6, Cubs 5

Tim Flannery, a utility infielder in his fifth season with San Diego, had never hit a major-league home run before hitting two earlier this year.

Against Chicago, he connected for his first grand slam to cap a six-run first inning. The Padres' uprising came against Ferguson Jenkins, 3-5.

Chicago's Mel Hall led off the game with a home run. He then hit his fifth of the season in the fifth inning. Jody Davis also homered for the Cubs.

John Montefusco, 8-1, worked four scoreless innings and Sid Monge pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Pirates 3, Giants 2

The wind was blowing toward left at Candlestick Park, and Pittsburgh's Mike Easler took advantage with an opposite-field home run to lead off the top of the ninth and snap a 2-2 tie.

Easler, who also singled twice, slugged his fifth homer of the season off loser Fred Breining, 6-6.

Darrell Evans gave San Francisco a 2-1 lead in the third inning with his 20th home run, tops in the NL. It was his first homer in three weeks.

Rangers end losing streak, 5-4

American League

The Toronto Blue Jays, who surprised the baseball world by leading the American League East at the All-Star break, are doing even better in the second half of the season. They are unbeaten since returning to action — and no other team in the majors can make that claim.

The Blue Jays made it four in a row Monday night and maintained their three-game lead over Baltimore and Detroit by defeating the Kansas City Royals 7-4 on run-scoring singles by Lloyd Moseby, Dave Collins and Alfredo Griffin in the 11th inning.

"We've been playing very, very consistently and we should be near the top," said Manager Bobby Cox. "We have a lot of flexibility; that's been a key for us all year. We're very flexible in lefty-righty situations and nobody gets mad when they get pinch-hit for."

In other AL games, the Texas Rangers edged the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 in 15 innings, the Detroit Tigers hammered the California Angels 12-6, the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Oakland A's 7-6, the Chicago White Sox pounded the Cleveland Indians 9-2, the Minnesota Twins downed the New York Yankees 4-2 and the Boston Red Sox shaded the Seattle Mariners 6-5 in 10 innings.

Willie Upshaw tripled to start the Toronto 11th off Keith Creel and Jorge Orta walked. Moseby singled Upshaw home and, after Orta was out at third on Ernie Whitt's bunt, Collins' fourth single made it 6-4. Whitt went to third on a fly ball and Griffin followed with an RBI single. The winner in relief was relief ace Randy Moffitt, who gave up two runs in the ninth as the Royals tied it at 4-4.

Gaylord Perry, the 44-year-old right-hander who was signed last week after Seattle released him, went six innings in his first start for the Royals, surrendering eight hits and two runs.

Rangers 5, Brewers 4

At Arlington, Bobby Johnson hit a solo homer with two out in the bottom of the 15th inning as Texas ended a four-game losing streak and took sole possession of first place in the AL West, one game ahead of California. Johnson connected on an 0-1 pitch from Jerry Augustine and hit a shot that just cleared the center field fence for his fourth homer of the season.

Dave Tobik earned the victory with three innings of one-hit relief after the Rangers tied the game in the bottom of the ninth when Billy Sample led off with a single, stole second, went to third on a grounder and scored on Pete Ladd's wild pitch.

Milwaukee center fielder Rick Manning tied a major league record with 12 putouts.

Tigers 12, Angels 6

At Detroit, Larry Herndon celebrated the birth of his fourth child by collecting five hits, including two doubles and a home run, driving in three runs and scoring four times. Herndon, whose wife gave birth to a son early Monday, collected hits and scored his first four times at bat, capped by a two-run homer in the fifth that give the Tigers a 10-3 lead.

The Tigers jumped on Geoff Zahn, who hadn't pitched since June 2 because of a sore shoulder, for five runs in the first inning, triggered by Lou Whitaker's leadoff homer.

"We really feel good about the whole thing," said Herndon. "The baby started the whole thing. I just felt good. When I came to the park my wife said, 'Have a good day.'"

Orioles 7, A's 6

At Baltimore, Ken Singleton drove in three runs with a single and a homer and Eddie Murray added a two-run homer for the Orioles. Trailing 7-0 after two innings, the A's pulled within 7-6 on an RBI grounder by Dwayne Murphy in the fourth, a two-run homer by Carney Lansford in the sixth, a two-run single by Rick Peters in the seventh and Davey Lopes' homer to lead off the eighth. Dennis Martinez, 5-11, the losingest pitcher in the AL, allowed nine hits before being relieved in the seventh. Baltimore has scored 48 runs in the five games Martinez has won, but only 38 in his other 14 starts.

White Sox 9, Indians 2

At Chicago, Carlton Fisk and Greg Luzinski homered to pace a 14-hit attack and back the five-hit pitching of Britt Burns. Fisk's two-run homer and Luzinski's solo shot came in the fourth inning and gave the White Sox a 6-1 lead. Gorman Thomas homered for Cleveland.

Twins 4, Yankees 2

At Minneapolis, Gary Gaetti tied the game with a two-run homer in the second inning and John Castino and Gary Ward slammed consecutive two-out triples in the third for the go-ahead run. Bobby Castillo scattered seven hits, including a two-run homer to Steve Balboni in the top of the second. Loser Jay Howell gave up eight hits, six for extra bases, and Minnesota scored an insurance run in the sixth on two-out doubles by Gaetti and Tom Brunansky.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 5

At Boston, Dave Stapleton beat first baseman Jim Maler's throw to the plate on Jerry Remy's hard grounder in the 10th inning, completing the Red Sox' comeback from a 5-1 deficit. Stapleton drew a lead-off walk from Mike Stanton, was sacrificed to second and went to third on Glenn Hoffman's single. Remy then hit his hard grounder to Maler, who fumbled the ball momentarily and then fired late to the plate. Boston tied the game in the bottom of the ninth off Seattle relief ace Bill Caudill on consecutive doubles by Remy and Wade Boggs.

USFL at crossroads as inaugural season ends

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The United States Football League, which has had a hard time attracting people to watch its games — both at the parks and on television — is at a crossroads heading into next Sunday night's championship game in Denver.

The Philadelphia Stars played a thriller Saturday in Veterans Stadium — in full view of 56,520 empty seats. On Sunday in the Pontiac Silverdome, the Michigan Panthers attracted 60,237 folks into reduced-price seats.

Each playoff game was, in its own way, an indication of potential trouble.

The Stars had trouble all season drawing crowds. They averaged 18,794 paying fans for nine regular-season games. But they were the only game in town Saturday — and a playoff game at that. So, as is the custom in sports, they raised their ticket prices, in this case about 50 percent.

And although the Phillies were playing baseball in Cincinnati, basketball and hockey were in hibernation and the weather was nothing short of spectacular, only 15,684 people (more than 3,000 below average) filed into the Vet to see the Stars beat Chicago 44-38 in overtime.

In Michigan, the circumstances were quite different. The Panthers averaged 22,251 paid fans during the season. They nearly tripled that number for Sunday's 37-21 victory over Oakland — but more than a few of the fans showed up because the Panthers made the game a marked-down affair by cutting ticket prices, something almost unheard of in postseason play for any sport.

The USFL's inaugural season concludes next Sunday night (no, there's no anticlimactic all-star game — yet). And more important than the final score will be the numbers that lead to dollar signs — the attendance in Denver's Mile High Stadium and the ratings for ABC's prime-time coverage.

The people who pay the freight in the USFL — the advertisers — are expressing concern over the league's low TV ratings for recent games. And that could translate into a loss of revenue next year.

The only previous prime-time coverage by ABC, last June 17, was a statistical disaster. The national rating was 4.8 compared to the 20s for ABC's National Football League Monday night telecasts.

That means the USFL coverage that Friday night ranked 72nd among 72 programs surveyed, collectively the lowest-rated network prime-time program of the entire broadcast season which began last September.

"We are looking to the playoffs and the championship to prove whether the league has generated any general interest among viewers," said David Martin, an executive with Campbell-Ewald, an advertising agency with several clients which sponsor ABC's USFL games. "The game (on June 17) was the first indication of how it was doing," Martin said, "and those ratings were scary."

A similar comment came from Jerry Solomon, an executive at at D'Arcy-McManus & Masius, an advertising agency whose clients include Anheuser-Busch, the USFL's beer sponsor. "The USFL had to have built up its audience before the summer began and baseball got going," Solomon said. And since it failed to significantly do so, "everything will be riding on how the league does in the playoffs."

Further, according to Advertising Age magazine, "none of the major USFL sponsors on ABC reportedly signed ad contracts for more than the first season."

Now Denver's pro football fans, among the more enthusiastic in the country, have a chance to show how they feel about hosting the first title game — and about the treatment they've received from their newest team.

While most other cities greeted the arrival of USFL franchises with indifference, particularly major markets such as Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago and Los Angeles, Denver's fans hailed the Gold by buying nearly 35,000 season tickets and averaging better than 41,000 fans a game.

Then the Gold became the only franchise which failed to sign any of its top draft picks, the first franchise to fire its coach (there was an enormous fan backlash resulting from the dismissal of local hero Red Miller) and the first franchise to be put up for sale.

Ron Blanding, the team's owner, had been asked before the season whether he intended to sell the team in a year or two. "No way!" he replied. "Football isn't an experiment for me. As far as I'm concerned, I'm in this permanently."

Now he's asking $12 million for the franchise — and USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons is wondering about the effect of all of this on the title game. "I don't know how the market will react ... Maybe it will be positive," said Simmons. "I just don't know."

Parent, Kruk 'Drill' homers in ninth to defeat Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Mark Parent and John Kruk slammed ninth-inning home runs to push Beaumont to a 8-5 win over Arkansas in Texas League action.

In other TL contests Monday night, San Antonio edged Shreveport 5-4, Jackson clipped Midland 3-2 and Tulsa beat El Paso 4-2.

Parent's lead-off homer broke a 5-5 tie. Kruk's homer scored Dan Purpura, who reached base on a single.

Mark Gillaspie hit a two-run homer for Beaumont in the third. Terry Pendleton hit a two-run round-tripper during Arkansas' four-run first.

Bob Patterson, 6-4, picked up the victory in relief. Arkansas' reliever Steve Winfield, 3-2, was the loser.

Scotty Madison's eighth-inning homer broke up a 4-4 tie and gave San Antonio the win. Tom Byers and R.J. Reynolds also homered for the Dodgers.

Shreveport's Rob Deer hit his 24th home run of the year, a two-run shot, in the eighth. Deer leads the league in homers.

Roberto Alexander, 3-4, was the winning pitcher for San Antonio. Mark Grant was tagged with the loss.

Tulsa scored two of its four tallies on El Paso errors. Chuckie Canady added an RBI single in the sixth and Jim Foyt drove in a run with a ninth-inning double for the Drillers.

GASP pickets Hall of Fame tennis

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — An anti-smoking group picketed the opening of the $100,000 Virginia Slims Hall of Fame tennis tournament Monday to protest a cigarette manufacturer's sponsorship of the event.

Members of Massachusetts-based "GASP" — Group Against Smoking Pollution — carried picket signs outside the Newport Casino denouncing Virginia Slims cigarettes. One protestor was dressed like the Grim Reaper and carried a scythe

GASP contends the effort by Philip Morris Inc., which makes Virginia Slims, to link tobacco smoking with women's rights and athletic prowess is deceptive.

The group also took exception to the tournament logo, which featured a woman with a tennis racket in one hand and a burning cigarette in the other.

The Rhode Island Lung Association criticized Philip Morris over the weekend for associating cigarettes and athletes.

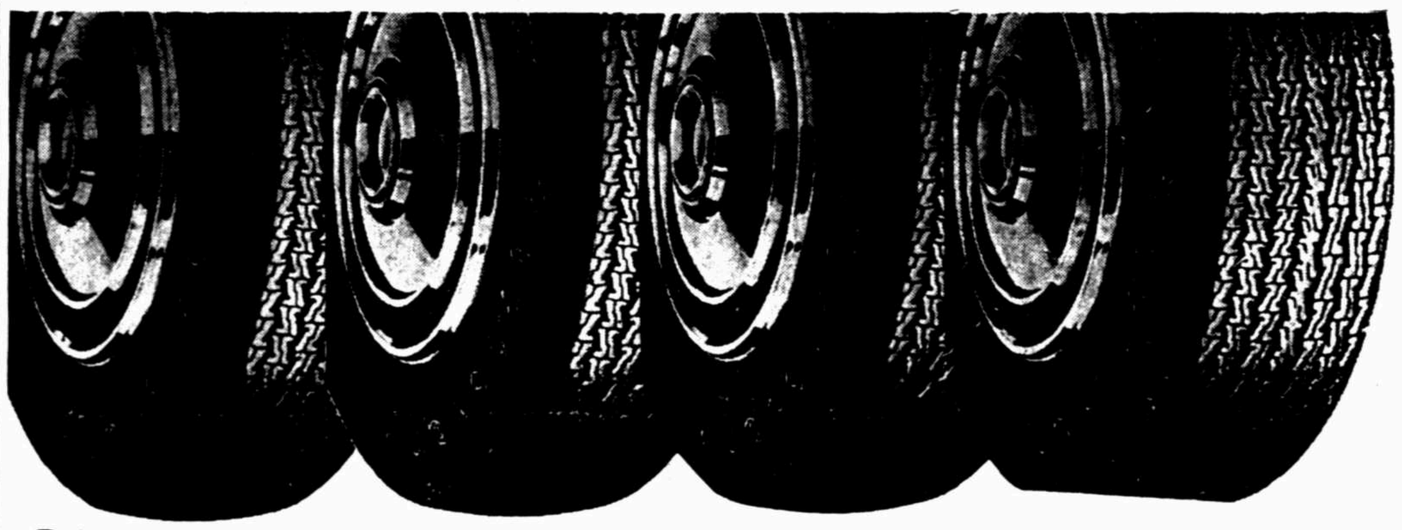

"The linking of the images of athletic success, women's rights and the healthful activity of tennis with the potentially fatal consumption of cigarettes is a travesty," said Richard E. Benson, president of the state organization.

At the casino, Jane Forman of Providence met eighth-seeded Heather Ludloff of Foster City, Calif., in the opening round of the only professional grass court tournament in the United States.

Pat Walker's offers support and motivation

Doylene Land demonstrates the Symetricon Unit at Pat Walker's Figure Salon. The Symetricon Unit was designed to passively exercise every area of the body. The Symetricon aids in the loss of inches as well as pounds. For further information call Pat Walker's at (915) 683-6278.

"There's nothing like it." "I feel terrific." "Can I take it home with me?" These are just a few of the comments made by people who have just received a treatment on the Symetricon Unit at Pat Walker's Figure Salon.

The unit they are referring to was developed 33 years ago by a woman who understands how difficult it can be to lose weight and manage to feel amd look good while doing it.

Ms. Walker designed our Symetricon Unit to passively exercise every area of the body. This passive exercise, used in conjucntion with a sensible eating program, will not only help you to lose weight, but it also provides the firming and toning necessary to keep you from becoming flabby. This firming and toning is essential, as you lose inches along with weight. By using the Symetricon Unit we will be taking one to three inches off for every pound lost. This actually reproportions the body into peak physical beauty.

Among many other benefits provided by Pat Walker's Figure Salon and their Symetricon Unit is added energy, aid in control of high blood pressure and needed circulation for relief from arthritis, bursitis. These benefits aid those physically unable to exercise. There is no physical or mental stress occuring in any area of the body.

The staff at Pat Walker's Figure Salon assists you with a sensible eating program based on your lifestyle, likes and dislikes. The staff provides that persinal touch of love, support and motivation as needed by each patron. They understand that everyone is different and needs individual care to achieve their desired goal.

"The pride and self-esteem reflected on the faces of our patrons as they accomplish their individual goals is comparable only to a summer sunrise", comments Ms. Luera of the MIdland Pat Walker's Figure Salon.

Visit Pat Walker's Figure Salon, located at 14 Oakrigde Square in Midland, or call (915)683-6278.

Computer age is here

Use of a computer enables faculty members at Permian Basin High School to work on an individualized basis with students.

Many of the teachers work extensively with the students on the Apple II computer which was obtained in 1982.

"We feel that the computer is an incredibly flexible machine and a valuable teaching tool," said Glen Walton, administrator. "We can use it for a wide range of learning experiences to supplement our regular one-to-one classroom situation.

"Any computer knowledge our students obtain will be an enrichment to their future, whether it in college classes, business professions or for personal enjoyment," added Walton.

The school is located on the second floor of Building E, 3100 North "A" St. Phone 683-4448.

Lewellen Construction saves energy

Today's economy is making it more difficult than ever for the average family to purchase and maintain an affordable home. Owner Bill Lewellen, of Lewellen Construction, understands the need to protect this investment: to protect it from unnecessary energy loss, damaging weather, and natural day-to-day abuse.

Lewellen Construction specializes in Maintenance-free exteriors. These include U.S. Steel and Revere Siding, soffits and fascia, replacement windows and storm windows and doors.

To save energy and reduce costs of air conditioning, Lewellen Construction offers storm windows and storm doors. Storm windows are available in both aluminum and vinyl. The aluminum storm windows are self-storing windows. They are available in a variety of colors to coordinate with siding and trim colors.

Solid vinyl windows are available in vaarious styles: single hung, horizontal siders and round top windows. Storm windows are offered in colors of mill, bronze, black, white, tan and grey. Storm doors, both full-view and self-storing, are available in these smae colors.

Lewellen Construction offers the option of tinted sun glass in windows and doors. "Tinted sun glass will stop 24% of the sun's heat", says Bill Lewellen. Tinted sun glass is available in solar grey and bronze.

Due to the West Texas climate, wooden windows tend to dry out and warp. This allows dust and heat to easily creep into your home. Replacement windows at Lewellen Construction are custom made to fit each opening.

Replacement windows act to seal your home; prohibiting dust to enter through windows. Air conditioning and heating losses will be cut through the installation of replacement windows.

Lewellen Construction offers replacement windows in various styles, colors and prices. They are available in basic aluminum ranging to the deluxe solid vinyl.

The deluxe solid vinyl replacement windows are designed with energy saving, cleaning and security features. The glass, which is double insulated, tilts in for easy cleaning access. Double cam locks prevent the non-professional burgular from entering your home through windows.

Any question regarding storm doors and windows, replacement windows and U.S. Steel and Revere siding can be directed to Bill Lewellen of Lewellen Construction at (915) 686-8007. Call Bill Lewellen to insure a maintenance-free, energy saving home.

BUSINESS/INDUSTRY NOTES
An introduction to the page

The Business/Industry Notes are published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin and beyond.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry Notes (B&I pages) a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month contract (26 weeks), businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisements, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Midland Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 consecutive weeks, can only promote interest to help a perspective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numerous. Currently, teh B/I notes are graced with businesses such as an executive charter service, lingerie shops, numerous restaurants, auto and truck shops, camera shops and a behavioral hypnotist.

Any and all businesses are encouraged to join the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business and Industry Notes, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, corporate or independent, are invited to consider this opportunity.

For further information contact the advertising department of the Reporter-Telegram at (915) 682-5311. The staff would be happy to quote prices and discuss potential story material. Call 682-5311 and let the Business/Industry Notes work for you.

Well service troubles aired in San Francisco

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Charles J. George started an organization from a handful of oilwell servicing contractors, meeting in a coffee shop in Odessa, and made it into a viable national political force.

Today George's son, Fred, is outgoing president of AOSC, the Association of Oilwell Servicing Contractors, which began its annual meeting in San Francisco Monday — now up to 500 member firms and 500 suppliers that are associated with AOSC.

Fred George not only represents, but is representative of the typical oilwell servicing contractor.

He is president of family-owned Charles J. George Inc., which is a longstanding member of the industry in Odessa with eight servicing rigs, 11 swabbing units, hydrostatic tubing testers and a reverse-circulating rig. The average servicing contractor owns seven rigs and runs a small, independent, family-operated company, trying to compete in the market.

These small servicing companies dominate the industry — they have 70 percent of the operable workover rigs. These are the members of AOSC, which has seen better times.

The oilwell servicing companies that are members of AOSC have a 55 percent nationwide rig utilization rate this year. They take in 27 percent less revenue per hour for the same services as were provided a year ago.

George spoke to The Reporter-Telegram about AOSC in a telephone interview Monday from his San Francisco lodgings.

Today's market is tough for oilwell servicing firms. In marketing, "You have to be able to maintain an efficient and safe operation to compete in the marketplace today. In short, do a better job for less money," said George.

Well servicing companies that will survive the downturn, he said, are those that can bring costs down to a manageable level — and avoid investing heavily in new equipment.

The new equipment and higher technology was in demand when the product was in higher demand. But George sees the existing stock of hydraulic/pneumatic well-servicing rigs and hand tools being used and repaired — rather than replaced with new equipment.

"They (contractors) will just have to patch together existing equipment and carry on," George said. "The funds are not available for capital expenditure within the industry right now, so there will be little replacement of service rigs or advances made in technology, if any, until the industry is allowed to make a decent return on investment."

What might Congress do to help George and other AOSC members? He said, "Lower taxes."

Legislation has been advocated through the AOSC's PAC to reduce taxes paid by independent and major oil companies. Reducing the federal government's take from oil companies is vital, George said, so the tax monies can be put back into the oilfield and the AOSC firms can regain strength and resume utilization of new technologies.

Mrs. Charles J. (Sheila) George, Fred's mother, was named an honorary life member of the organization at the opening day of its 1983 meeting.

AOSC's new president, elected Monday, is Jim Levell of Welltech Inc., Houston. A marketing seminar was held Monday to "review current conditions in the oilwell servicing industry," George said.

As its meeting continues today, AOSC's Political Action Committee meets to discuss legislative actions they might promote, and a meeting of the publications committee — which publishes Well Servicing magazine — will be held. The scholarship committee, and business analysis committee will also meet today. Wednesday, manpower development will meet. Thursday, the board of directors meet.

Bank gators boost business in Alvin

ALVIN, Texas (AP) — Edmond Gillis recalls when his duties at the First National Bank of Alvin included only cleaning the building and taking care of goldfish in the bank's pond.

All that changed in 1969 when Gillis, the bank custodian, became godfather to three alligators.

The 6-inch-long reptiles, donated by a local rice farmer, joined the fish in their pool.

"From that point, everything has gone gator," Gillis said. "(Bank President A. Guy) Crouch told me four years ago, he said, 'They can't die. We can always build another bank, but they can't die.'"

The bank has made gators its motif.

A green alligator symbol grins from a sign directing customers to the entrance of the bank's drive-through lane, Tel-a-Gator.

Bank stationery bears the same symbol, as do the automatic teller cards. Employees wear alligator pins.

When First National began planning a new building in 1978, the alligators were Crouch's first concern.

"We had it designed especially for the alligators," Crouch said. "It cost around $250,000 just to build the alligatrium."

Now two alligators — 7-foot J. Paul Gator and 10-foot Alfred — loll in the glass-enclosed pool that is the center of the building. Crouch said bank officials consult with experts at the Houston zoo for information on keeping the animals comfortable.

Crouch said the two appear to have a truce.

"You have to get along with Alfred," he explained.

J. Paul is one of the original group. The companions of his youth, William Teller and Mitzi Gator, died last year.

The gators have made the bank one of Alvin's major tourist attractions. Not that it takes much to catch attention in this city of 14,000 about 25 miles south of Houston, as executive secretary Gay Foster points out.

"We're the only skyscraper in Alvin," she joked of the five-story bank building.

Gillis said that visitors rank the bank as an attraction "almost next to the Astrodome," touted as the eighth wonder of the world.

This makes the bank alligator pond "about the 12th Wonder of the World," Gillis estimated.

Crouch said the alligators' admirers are in their second generation.

"Now they're banking with us and bringing their children in," he said.

Gillis said the alligators have brought joy to just about everyone and everything, with one major exception — the goldfish pond's original inhabitants.

"The fish got a little stung," he said. "The alligators ate 'em."

Credit card rate ceiling irks bankers

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he may visit with some Texas bankers about their dissatisfaction with new credit card interest rate maximums set by the recent Legislature.

White commented Monday in reply to published reports that some bankers are threatening to move their credit card operations to other states, such as Delaware, that have no interest rate ceilings.

"I would hope they recognize that the state's favorable business climate includes banks," White told reporters at an impromptu news conference.

"I think you will find that the banks agreed to the form in which that bill was passed and I'm a little disappointed they can't make money at 14 percent or 16 percent rate of return when the average cost of money is significantly lower than that."

White said he "may visit with them a little bit and see if we can't persuade them to stay."

The recent legislative change limits interest rates on credit cards and ties the rate to six-month Treasury bills. Currently most credit card rates in Texas are between 16 and 17 percent.

Lectures to honor Fuqua

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Midland, has announced the founding of the H. B. Fuqua Distinguished Lecture Series. Funding for the series will be provided through grants from the Sid W. Richardson Foundation in Fort Worth. The grants, running for ten years, will total $50,000.

The Fuqua lecture series will consist of up to four lectures per year by authorities in the fields of history, earth sciences, museum science, or the petroleum industry. All lectures in the ten-year series will be held in Midland.

The lecture series was chosen by the Sid W. Richardson Foundation as a means of honoring Fuqua, who served on the foundation's board for seventeen years.

H. B. Fuqua began his career in the oil industry as a geologist for Gulf Oil Co. in 1922. He later headed its southwestern operations. Gulf's tremendous success in the Permian Basin occurred under Fuqua's leadership.

In 1949 he became board chairman and chief executive officer of the Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil Company, based in Fort Worth National Bank. Under his direction, the bank actively funded exploration ventures. More than $250 million in such loans was made during his active service as chairman.

Fuqua, active in community causes in Fort Worth, also worked to promote conservation of oil and gas and to protect fresh water supplies from salt water pollution.

In 1973 Fuqua was inducted into the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame for leadership in the oil industry.

The museum tells the story of oil from its creation through its drilling and production. Also told is the history of the Permian Basin through stories of Indians, ranchers, and oilmen who lived here. The museum opened in 1975, and is located on Interstate 20 in Midland. It is open seven days a week.

Students take testing service to trial over invalidated scores

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — A rumor led the Educational Testing Service to investigate the college entrance exams of four high school students accused of cheating, an ETS spokesman said as a trial opened in the students' lawsuit against the testing company.

Four Millburn High School students claim in a suit against the testing service that their scores were invalidated after the investigation "without adequate reason or evidence and without affording them minimal standards of fair play and equal treatment."

ETS, which administers standardized tests to 5 million students annually, commonly investigates rumors and outside reports, even anonymous ones, said the service's general counsel, Stanford VonMayrhauser. He said a rumor from another student prompted an investigation in the Millburn case.

The attorney, speaking Monday after opening arguments, said investigations also are launched if ETS computers find substantial increases in a student's scores over previous tests.

James Denburg, 18, Richard Becker, 17, and Lloyd Berkowitz, 18, all of Short Hills, Stephen Haskin, 18, of Springfield, and their parents brought suit after ETS invalidated the students' May 1982 Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

ETS claims that "extraordinary correlations among incorrect answers" given by the four students supported the action. Further investigation into other test results of two of the students also showed remarkably similar results, VonMayrhauser said.

"That could not have occurred by chance and is evidence copying may have occurred," another ETS attorney, Howard P. Willens, told the court.

Superior Court Judge Richard S. Cohen is presiding over the non-jury trial, which is expected to last several weeks and include testimony from high-ranking officials of the prominent testing service.

The students have graduated. ETS was barred by an April court order from reporting its findings to the colleges the students will attend.

Four former Millburn High School students (clockwise from top left) James Denburg, 18, Richard Becker, 17, Lloyd Berkowitz, 18, and Steve Baskins, 18, pose for photographers during a recess in their trial on Monday to determine if the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., acted fairly in invalidating the college entrance exam scores of the four who are accused of cheating on the tests.

The students said they were given permission to take the SATs earlier than their classmates on May 1, 1982, because they had to compete in a tennis tournament during the regular test time.

Women, minorities Rif'ed disproportionately

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women and minorities absorbed a disproportionately large number of the cutbacks when the Reagan administration laid off federal workers in 1981 to cut government costs, a study finds.

The Merit Systems Protection Board, analyzing the "reductions in force" put into effect in the administration's first year in office, said Monday that women, while comprising 37 percent of the federal work force, accounted for 42 percent of the "RIFs," as they are called in Washington.

Minorities comprise 23 percent of the work force but 37 percent of the RIF'ed workers were minority group members.

The reasons are that workers with seniority and veterans, especially those with service-connected disabilities, are given preference when cuts are made.

The Office of Personnel and Management said the number of layoffs reached 11,337 through last March, but the Merit Systems Protection Board studied the effect only of the 6,134 layoffs that occurred in the government's 1.9-million member federal payroll during 1981.

It reported that the fear of being laid off affected the morale of 65 percent of workers in agencies were RIFs occurred but that 70 percent of surveyed workers and personnel officers said the layoffs had no effect on productivity.

"For the most part" the firings were conducted fairly, the board said, but one-fifth of senior personnel officers said they had been improperly pressured, usually by top management people, to violate the government regulations that determine who gets laid off. They reported relatively few instances of pressure to fire workers for partisan political reasons, however.

FAA official: Fireproof materials toxic

CINCINNATI (AP) — Making airplane interiors more fireproof also creates the possibility they will emit toxic fumes when exposed to high temperatures, a regional Federal Aviation Administration director says.

Jonathan Howe of Atlanta on Monday honored 11 air controllers at Greater Cincinnati International Airport for their performance when an Air Canada jetliner caught fire June 2 and made an emergency landing.

The plane landed safely but 23 passengers perished, apparently from smoke inhalation. Another 18 passengers and the five crew members survived.

Howe told a news conference that the FAA has "devoted a lot of money and a lot of manpower" to the problem of making airplane interiors resistant to both fire and toxicity.

Howe said the FAA worries that fireproofing interior materials can create the possiblity of toxic fumes when those materials are exposed to high heat.

"Basically, it's a tradeoff between fire and toxic fumes," Howe said.

"Technically, it's a very difficult problem because of the tradeoffs involved...It's the smoke that kills," he said.

The FAA has come under criticism that it has acted slowly in carrying out fire safety proposals by the Airline Pilots Association and the National Transportation and Safety Board. Howe countered that the FAA's research and development is "state of the art."

Howe told the controllers: "Because of the teamwork demonstrated by you and your colleagues, many of the passengers on that flight are alive today."

The plane caught fire while en route from Dallas to Toronto.

Friendly Supper Club meeting interrupted by bomb threat

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The third meeting of the Friendly Supper Club — a group founded by an anonymous "Jack Smith" to promote racial harmony — was interrupted by a telephone bomb threat, officials said.

More than 100 people who gathered Monday at Morrisons Cafeteria were asked to leave as authorities searched for a bomb. No bomb was found, said J.O. Cantrell, a district chief for the city fire department.

Ronnie Tatum, a district manager for the cafeteria, said a cashier answered a phone call at 6:30 p.m. from a man who said a bomb was set to explode in the cafeteria in 30 minutes.

Tatum said the threat was the first received by the cafeteria since the supper club meetings began in May.

The club was the brainchild of a person identified by the pseudonym "Jack Smith" who communicates through letters written to a Montgomery attorney.

During the evacuation, club members stood on the sidewalk and joked about the inconvenience.

"If somebody was going to bomb the place, they wouldn't call and tell us," said Bill Stephens, the attorney who delivers the "Jack Smith" communications. Stephens, who said he received a telephone threat at his residence after the June meeting, insists he has never met "Smith" but gets packages and telephone calls from him.

"It just points out the mentality that we're working against," said Randall Williams, a Montgomery attorney who said he has attended all three dinners.

Police permitted the members back inside after a 30 minute wait and Stephens read a letter from the club's founder, informing the guests there would be no further correspondence from "Smith."

"This is the last message that will be coming from Jack Smith," Stephens read from a typed letter.

Military spare parts' cost quintupled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of thousands of spare parts for military aircraft more than quintupled in a three-year period because purchasing officials ignored a directive to cut costs, according to a Pentagon study.

"Navy and Air Force contracting officers were not buying engine spare parts in a cost-effective manner because procedures designed to assure the government pays fair and reasonable prices were not being implemented," according to a draft report by the Defense Department's inspector general.

Copies of the report, dated June 10, were made available Monday by the Project on Military Procurement, a private watchdog group.

The report said too many items were being purchased without competitive bidding despite a directive issued last Sept. 9 by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The report focused on seven Air Force and Navy facilities that purchased $1.2 billion worth of spare parts during the 1982 fiscal year. It said the cost of nearly 65 percent of spare parts bought more than once during a three-year period increased by more than 50 percent.

"During this same three-year period, over 4,000 spare parts increased in price over 500 percent," it said.

Baby stuffed in freezer

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A baby survived despite being put into a trash bag and stuffed into a basement freezer shortly after birth, police said.

The infant was reported in good condition Monday at a local hospital, authorities said.

The mother's father told police he saw his daughter Sunday carrying a plastic bag from a bathroom to the basement. He said he looked in the freezer minutes later and found the child inside the bag, said Detective Keith Allen

Authorities were seeking charges against the woman, said Allen.

Women learn how to manage their money

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Until the day he died Frank had handled the financial matters of the family. Suddenly, Estelle found at the age of 55 she had no idea of her net worth; what, if any, investments she owned or where her money was.

Maybe in time her lawyers could settle everything, but at the moment she had nothing. The banks had put a hold on the joint bank account, her credit card accounts were closed, she had no credit rating of her own, the safe deposit box had been sealed, and Frank's life insurance policy was tied up in litigation with the rest of his estate.

Although legislation has been passed recently to remedy some of these situations, this plight was common just a few years ago.

Misconceptions, misinformation, new laws and little-known statistics about women and finances were discussed at a free seminar offered at Midland College Monday night.

Gay Price

Almost 40 women crowded into the small classroom for the first in a three-part series entitled "Women and Money." Amid the stories of frustration they swapped about credit, loans, wills and estates, insurance and bank accounts, they listened to the lecture presented by Gay Price.

"THE ROLE OF the American woman has changed more in the last decade than any role in society. But we are still lacking in essential knowledge of money," Ms. Price said. "If you relinquish the management of your money, you are relinquishing power and freedom, and most importantly you are relinquishing independence.

"It's a mistake to assume that someone is going to manage your money. It's unfair, not only for you but for that person," she continued. "Paying bills is not participating actively in what should be a partnership. Take an interest in it. Find out what's going on."

Ms. Price has been employed for seven years as an administrative assistant at Bass Enterprises in Midland.

Statistics she quoted from the New York Stock Exchange show women represent 41.9 percent of all adult stockholders. About 13.5 million women own stock or mutual fund shares. Women make up 43 percent of the work force and bring home paychecks totaling $390 billion or more each year, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Enrollment at colleges and universities is now more than 50 percent female. Women control the spending of almost half a trillon dollars a year.

SOME ESSENTIALS Ms. Price said every person needs to know included:

—You must spend money to make money. "For me that was one of the hardest things to learn," she admitted. "I am an ultraconservative."

—You must plan a financial future.

—Social Security must be considered only a supplement for retirement. "You can't make it on Social Security alone," Ms. Price maintained. "If you don't plan actively now, when you're 65 you'll be sorry."

—You must have a good credit rating. "I thought I had a good credit rating. I didn't have a credit rating at all — my husband did."

—You should have a clear idea of your net worth.

—You should have a one-year, five-year and 20-year financial plan.

—You should have some form of tax-sheltered investment.

—You should take financial responsibility.

While the first session was mostly introductory, next Monday's meeting will deal with taxes, and the following class with the stock market.

MS. PRICE SAID ignorance in tax matters is a costly mistake. "The single most important reason you never have enough (money) is taxes," Ms. Price asserted. "We were paying more than twice what the people in our income bracket were paying. You're making a mistake if you do this. If I give more than my fair share, I'm lazy. It's not the federal government's fault."

"All financial planning must begin with an evaluation of your tax bracket," she explained. She added that an active involvement in taxes and tax returns can result in deductions and savings many people don't realize are available. "A CPA (certified public accountant) can only work with what you give him."

She also discussed net worth, budgets, setting financial goals and investments — large and small, short- and long-term, high- and low-risk.

"Any investment is a risk. If it bothers you to do it, don't," she said.

Selected inmates will be repairing leaky jail roof

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While the Midland County Jail limps along, Sheriff Dallas Smith has agreed to put his craftsman-deputy, Lt. Bill Decker, and selected prisoners atop the courthouse to repair the leaking — when it rains — roof.

"I just don't see any sense of wasting money on that roof," said Smith, who offered to patch the 16,000-square-foot roof with $200 worth of the petroleum-based cold tar or, including supplies and tools, with "less than a thousand bucks." The commissioners allowed him up to $2,000 to do the job.

Via bids solicited by the Commissioners' Court, Midland roofing contractors had offered to re-roof the 1930-vintage courthouse for up to $50,000. An additional $36,000 would be required to remove the tons of equipment — heaters, air-conditioners, exhaust fans, the emergency power generator — which serve the fifth-floor jail.

"It doesn't solve the problem," Smith said of the patch work, "but it slows it down."

"That will limp us through," suggested Commissioner Durward Wright.

"Do what needs to be done," Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis told the sheriff.

"Get on and get with it," said Commissioner Win Brown.

At one point in the roof discussion, the sheriff had suggested getting "a good supply of buckets and tarps" to catch leaking water and to cover jail equipment and records.

"If water drips on a deputy, he's not going to die," said the sheriff. "If water drips on a prisoner, he's not going to die. But if water drips on a piece of equipment, it might die."

The commissioners opted not to re-roof the courthouse, since they plan on building a new jail and sheriff's offices apart from the courthouse square.

"If we're going to build a new jail," said Ahders, it (re-roofing and replacing equipment) would be a waste of money."

In doing so, the fifth-floor jail and much of the basement, which now houses offices of the sheriff, constable and justices of the peace, would be utilized for the courts and additional courthouse functions.

Commissioners have yet to select a jail site or how to finance a new jail.

"At some time, we are going to have to re-roof," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

"If water drips on a deputy, he's not going to die. If water drips on a prisoner, he's not going to die. But if water drips on a piece of equipment, it might die."

— Sheriff Dallas Smith

"Now is not the time to do it," responded County Judge Bill Ahders, who noted that with the jail removed from the courthouse, "We don't need that equipment" atop the building.

The mechanical system serving the rest of courthouse is either within the building or at the base of the courthouse. The jail's roof-top system is apart from the rest of the building.

Smith said he wanted to give his prisoners the roof-work experience in readying them to dismantle the jail whenever a new jail is built. The prisoner work route would save the taxpayers about $1 million, Smith said. He acknowledged that roofing work "has its risks and dangers. Any job does."

Atop the courthouse late Monday morning, Decker pointed to deteriorating spots on the roof and along heating and cooling units.

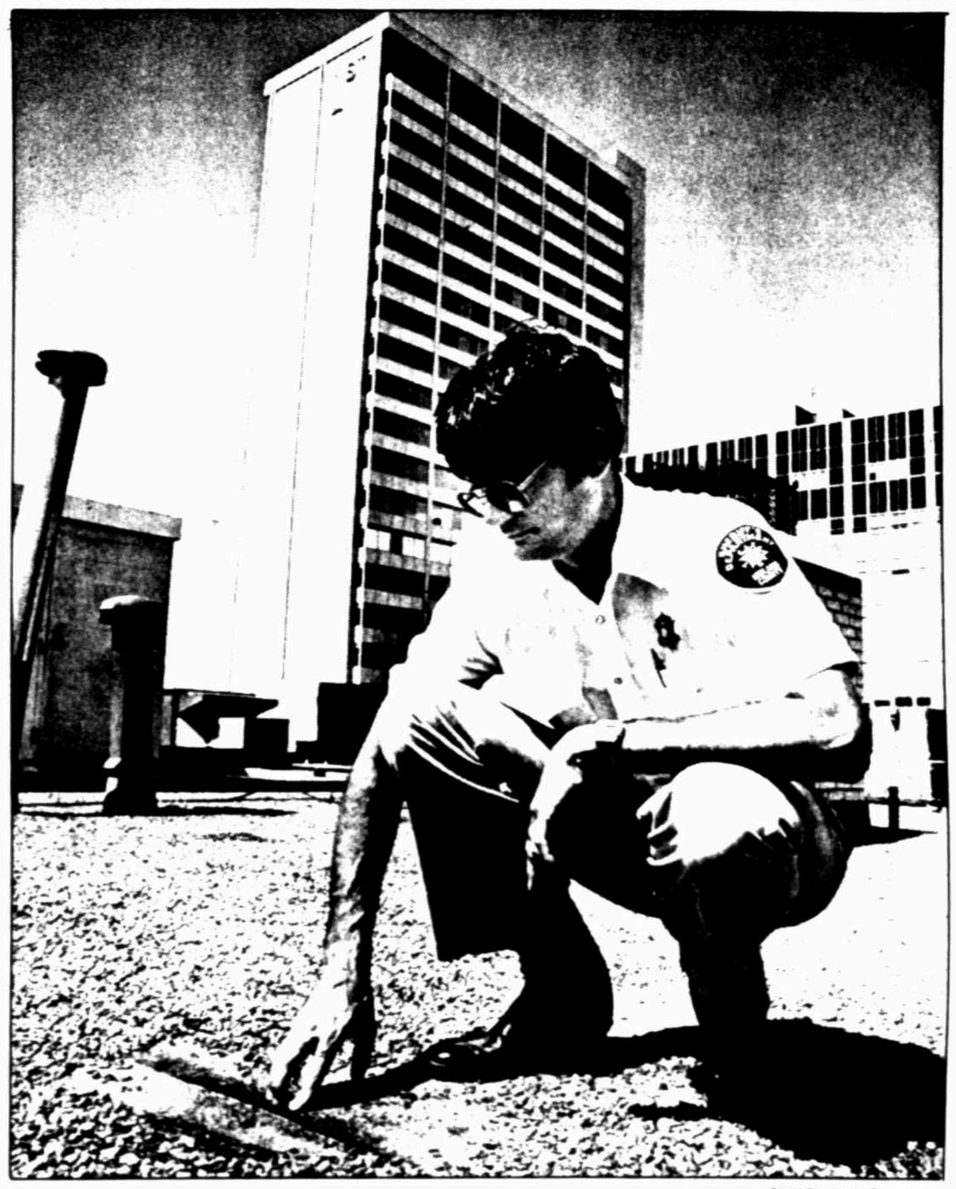

"When the roof was put on (in the courthouse renovation in the early 1970s), it wasn't applied properly." He said the roofer then applied steep asphalt along with the layers of felt and gravel rather than the more durable and versatile coal tar. Rather than steep asphalt or coal tar, cold tar would be used on the temporary patchwork, Decker said. "Maybe it'll last a couple of years; maybe it won't." Coal tar would not blend in with the asphalt already on the roof, he said. Cold tar will.

Decker, who supervised prisoners in building cabinets, shelves and in remodeling the part of the courthouse basement and sheriff's offices, said his choice of working prisoners are murderers and aggravated robbers. Aggravated robbery, he reasoned, "involved some pride."

"They're a little more honest about what they do."

He would not select thieves and, particularly, forgers. "They'll lie about anything.

For his work force, Decker said he prefers convicted and sentenced prisoners over those awaiting trial. "They're kind of settled down." The others are "anxious before they go to court."

County attorney says library proposal unconstitutional

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners are looking for a bargain in a library.

They're weighing the benefits and drawbacks of possibly getting a $4.5 million library for $1.6 million through a pseudo venture with private enterprise.

The project would not be a joint venture but would entail SP (Southern Pacific) Realty & Development Co.'s leasing of "prime" downtown county-owned land for building a luxury hotel.

In exchange for the lease, SP would build a library near the hotel and would finance both developments apparently with industrial revenue bonds.

In 15 years and after both buildings were paid off, the county would own the library, said Daniel J. Hanesworth, SP's regional manager, who on Monday made the Commissioners' Court the offer.

"I still think it's unconstitutional, not withstanding Mr. (Tom) Craddick's bill," advised County Attorney J. Scott Henderson. "I still think it's unconstitutional...and will continue to maintain that. I think the bill itself is unconstitutional."

A bill sponsored by Texas Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland would authorize any Texas county to issue revenue bonds to build a library.

IN VOICING his stance on the proposal, Henderson cited a Texas statute which says "the Legislature shall have no power to authorize any county, city, town or other political corporation or subdivision of the State to lend its credit or to grant public money or thing of value in aid of, or to any individual, association or corporation whatsoever, or to become a stockholder in such coporation, association or company."

By law, he said the county can't even be a dues-paying member of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, though it can support the chamber's community goals and objectives.

Henderson said he would detail the SP-Midland County proposal in a letter to the Texas Attorney General and would seek an opinion on the constitutionality of such an arrangement. "Ninety-five out of a 100 times, the Supreme Court is going to do what the AG says their going to do."

"If we can't do it constitutionally," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, "we can't do it."

Why, asked Henderson, does SP want that particular site, which is 1½ to two blocks east of the courthouse, between Illinois and Texas avenues and in the vicinity of Baird Street?

"Because it's located in a position most advantageous" to an enterprise such has a hotel, said Commissioner Durward Wright, who has supported such an undertaking.

THE LOCATION is a short walk from the George Mahon Federal Building, the U.S. Post Office, Midland Center, county courthouse, the downtown business district and is just across the street from The Midland Reporter-Telegram Building.

"All we're doing is leasing them the land," said Wright. "They (SP) take care of the financing. They build the structures." The county's initial net financial commitment in the proposal would be $1.6 million, Haneworth said.

In effect, Wright noted, the county would be getting about $4 million "for land that's not worth $2 million."

"You've got to sell the AG," Henderson told Wright, "and you haven't sold me."

Later, Wright speculated that the hotel might come under county ownership once the lease eventually runs out.

Commissioner Craig said inititally — before he took office this year — he philosophically was against a similar private enterprise-county agreement. Last year, SP and the county talked about a hotel-courthouse annex complex. That proposal was set aside until outcome of the county's April 23 $11.69 million bond election to authorize the sale of bonds to finance a courthouse-jail addition and renovation of the old courthouse. Voters squashed the proposal by 4-to-1 margain.

Craig said he now has changed his stance on the proposal.

"I'm looking for the best bottom line — (best) dollar (investment) — for Midland County," he said. "I'm not going to vote against it just because it's a joint venture." Craig said he preceived no difference between leasing the land to private business and selling it.

"IT'S GOT to be done right," said Hanesworth.

As did Wright, Commissioner Win Brown seemed to lean toward SP's proposition.

"We've got to look at every possibility," Brown said. "What's best for Midland County?"

Every single parent longs for vacation from the kids

Almost every single parent longs for a break from the children. Not just an overnighter, but a vacation.

It's been eight years and my dream for that "break" has finally become reality — my 12 and 8-year-old boys left for a two-week stay at grandma's house.

The fantasy of being "single" brought visions of soaking in a bubble-filled tub, some classical music in the background and a scotch in hand.

How wonderful! No more fights to referee. No more Michael Jackson's "Beat It" pounding from the stereo. No more "Star Wars" on cable TV — for the umpteenth time.

For two glorious weeks the apartment would be free from sweaty socks over the lampshade, those "near misses" around the toilet bowl and unmade beds.

I'm not trying to give the impression that I wanted to get rid of the little rug-rats, but let's face it — kids can get in the way.

Have you any idea what it's like to juggle work and kids, not to mention an occasional date?

For the past week, I have not had to settle one fight by telephone. There were no messages to "call home" left on my desk. I could stay at the office until 6 p.m., instead of rushing home to throw the hamburger I forgot to thaw in the microwave.

Ah, dinner. A feast. No more three-course meals. Just a simple cup of soup and a tossed salad. Maybe an omelet. This is heaven.

And dates.

Not that this is an everyday occurence, but there are times I want grownup company and activities.

Going with a date — along with the kids — to a baseball game, for pizza or roller skating is fine. But it's still with the kids. You've got to be a mother — watching what the kids say and how they act.

It was a pleasant change to invite my date into the apartment before going out. Usually it's a mad rush to squeeze out the door. I could actually offer him a drink without the 12-year-old's eyes scrutinizing him and the 8-year-old making sure his presence is known.

Single again. A strange feeling, almost one of guilt. For most of my adult life, I've been conditioned to live with kids, and I wasn't going to let guilt get in the way. I feel as though I've taken a trip through the looking glass, where it was one big ADULT party. I am enjoying it.

But I did experience something new. When you go out with a date, there's that time when he's got to bring you home. The kids have always been a good excuse to beg off from a nightcap. And if it looked like things were going in the wrong direction, well, I reminded the ol' chap that the kids were in the next room.

Now what? No kids. I had to think fast. Would he believe I had to visit a sick friend or a story needed polishing. No, not at midnight.

Relax. That's what I had to do. Play it by ear. So, I poured him a drink — and me a double.

"Well," he said, "it's late. I guess I better get going."

Going? What was he saying? Haven't I been the perfect date?

"It's early," I said.

"Yea, I know," he answered. "But, you see, I'm a single parent and there's this baseball game tomorrow. Maybe you'd like to..."

A vacation. A break from motherhood. Eight years waiting and here I am soaking in a bubbled-filled tub with another scotch in hand.

Dollar ceiling raised for cases handled in JP courts

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"I'll bet it'll double our caseload," Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine said in commenting on recent legislation that raises the dollar limit imposed on civil and small claims cases handled by JP courts in Texas.

The current ceiling is $500 in civil cases and $150 on small claims — except for wage disputes, where the limit is $200. Cases exceeding those amounts are handled in county court.

Come Sept. 1, however, those limits will be raised across-the-board to $1,000 — a change wrought by inflationary pressures that have pushed up the dollar amount of claims over the years.

Civil matters handled by JP courts include eviction and repossession cases, while small claims courts provide for the settlement of monetary issues without the parties having to bear the hassle and expense of hiring a lawyer.

Although a minimum of four JP districts exist in each of Texas' 254 counties, not all counties have four JP judges. Midland County, for example, has two: Robert Pine and Charlie Sprayberry.

In the past two years their courts handled a total of 3,198 civil and small claims disputes, an average of more than six cases per working day.

By contrast, the total caseload for the years 1978 through 1980 came to 3,059 — an average of three cases per workday.

"If we get any more work, we'll have to hire more staff," said Judge Sprayberry.

"I certainly feel the new law will necessitate major changes in the amount of clerical and secretarial help — and perhaps even in the number of JPs for Midland. It would be up to the county commissioners to add them."

Man reports theft of jewelry

Among theft and burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Saul Carrasco of 2711 Mariana said $3,150 worth of jewlery was taken during a break-in at his home Sunday.

Two guns, a calculator and personal papers were among the items taken in a weekend burglary of the Russell Mathis residence, 1201 Delmar. Entry was gained by breaking a door latch. Total loss was placed at $1,570.

Tools and a portable radio valued at $2,920 were reported missing from the Carver School construction site at Wall and Carver Streets. The theft apparently occurred over the weekend.

Women learn money manangement

"If you learn nothing else, learn nobody is going to watch over your money like you are going to watch over your money. The only reason other people are interested in your money is because of what it can do for them."

But don't try to do it on your own, she warned. "Eighty percent of the people who invest as individuals in the stock market have lost money."

Other practical advice: when borrowing or investing money shop around and compare, find out ahead of time what your options are; don't go into something with your mind made up.

SHE STRESSED KEEPING abreast of new legislation. Tax laws and investment opportunities change constantly, Ms. Price said. She advised reading at least one financial magazine each month and listening to financial programs on television.

"Now, more than any other time, the small investor has a number of sophisticated tools at his disposal to keep him informed. Take advantage of these."

Attorney says library proposal unconstitutional

"It think it's a very sound proposal," said the commissioner who, as president of the North Texas State University's Board of Regents, on Friday signed a similar agreement between North Texas and the developer of a Sheraton hotel. A Dallas real-estate developer will build a 150-room luxury hotel on the campus's golf course. For five years, NTSU will receive $35,000 per year. Thereafter, the university will get a percentage of the hotel's revenue.

"I think we should pursue it and study it in more depth...and look into the possibilities," Brown said of the SP-county proposal.

Later, Henderson said there are basic differences between the NTSU-Sheraton and the SP-county projects. "The university is benefited by the hotel," he said. "Midland County would not be benefit at all by a hotel."

COMMISSIONER C. DeWayne Davis suggested it "would seem prudent" to check on the constitutionality of the proposal.

"I haven't found Scott to be off home base many times, if ever," he said. In addition, he noted "We need some breathing space in the (existing) library, period." The Midland County Public Library, built in the mid-1950s, has less than half the space of the proposed library. "We're at a crossroads."

The SP-county proposal was viewed with reservations by Larry Rankin, a Midland real-estate broker who earlier had proposed a solution to the county's library needs. Rankin had suggested the county convert the old Howard Hodge Theater to a library.

"Arterially speaking, it's at the hub of the city," he said after presenting his views on the SP-county proposal to the commissioners. The 15,000-square-foot movie theater could be doubled in square footage by building a second floor into the building. After that, a 25,000-square foot library addition could be built onto the old theater. "I think that would be a trade or some other method," he said. He did not elaborate.

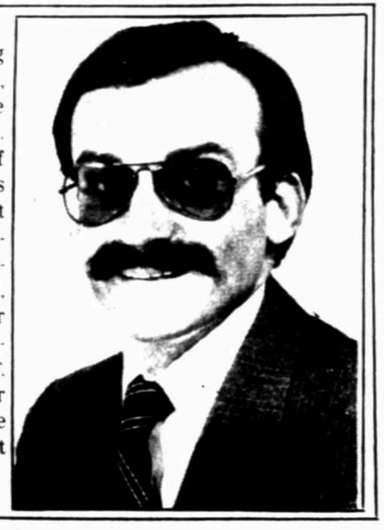

In appearing before the Commissioners' Court, Rankin said he was concerned about the physical upkeep of any hotel on county property. "How do we, in fact, enforce this deal...that the upkeep is in prime condition?" Further, he said that "the county might have to take that (hotel) over if there is a bankruptcy."

"We built the college without any help," said Rankin. "I submit we can built a library without any help...We do not need any help from private enterprise to build a library...."

"I think we're making a dramatic mistake for the people of Midland County," he said.

Wright said he, too, would be "totally against" the hotel-library proposal if the county were co-managers or co-operators of the project or were responsible for the project.

Of the legal issue, SP's Hanesworth said, "I never thought that it was a problem."

Robert Gersten, marketing representative for IBM Corp., was named president of the Midland West Rotary Club. He is an eight year member of the club. Others officers include first vice president Dick Lutton, second vice president John Martin, club service director Jack Townzen, community service director Roy McKenzie, vocational service director Jimmie Leath, instructional service director Peter Vike, secretary Steve Landy and treasurer Mott Williamson.

Projects included in highway planning

ODESSA — Construction projects to preserve and enhance the mobility of the Odessa District are included in future highway planning, said W.A. Lancaster, district engineer.

In an effort to look ahead and provide for an adequate transportation system in the face of projected growth, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation recently has undertaken a "long, hard look at future construction and reconstruction needs," he said.

Noting that provisions have been made for small as well as large projects, based on verified needs, Lancaster listed the construction and reconstruction projects included in the 1984 Federal Aid Secondary Safety and Rehabilitation Program for this area:

—Farm to Market 1788 at Spur 217; 0.9 of a mile; reconstruct, grading, base and surfacing; $303,000.

—FM 1788 from Spur 217 south to near Interstate 20; 1.1 mile; reconstruct, widen grading, structures and surfacing; $1,537,700.

—FM 1053 from 3.7 miles north of Fort Stockton to run 2.8 miles north; recondition, grading, structures and surfacing; $541,000.

—FM 1766 from Ward County line for 7 miles to FM 1450; reconstruct, grading, structures and surfacing; $736,000.

"By taking a functional approach and applying modern management and engineering techniques, I am confident that if we are given adequate funding and personel resources, the Department can provide the required construction and reconstruction of our highway system to insure that Texas will enjoy adequate mobility in the years ahead."

San Diego Wild Animal Park trainer Torrey Pillsbury thinks Cindy, an elephant transferred from the Tacoma, Wash., zoo, is a "sweetheart."

Underneath tough skin is big heart

Copley News Service

"She is by far the most aggressive, malevolent elephant I've ever seen and I suppose possibly the most dangerous in the country."

"She is a real sweetheart. A very nice animal."

The subject of both comments is Cindy, a 20-year-old Asian elephant whose experience may well be a commentary on the environment vs. heredity controversy in animal behavior theories.

Roger Henneous, director of the Portland (Ore.) Zoo's elephant program made the first observation on Oct. 29, 1982, during a five-day visit to evaluate Cindy's behavior at Port Defiance Zoo in Tacoma, Wash., where she lived.

Then on May 4, Cindy was complimented as a "sweetheart" by Gary Miller, elephant trainer at San Diego Wild Animal Park, her new home.

Cindy earned her reputation as a meanie in Tacoma by using her trunk to hit, trip and toss her keepers around her enclosure. In one news report, a handler even said that she seemed to crouch behind her barn door waiting for a chance to grab one of them.

Ultimately, Gene Leo, Port Defiance Zoo director, told the zoo's board that things had "gotten progressively worse to the point now where our keepers have been instructed not to work directly with Cindy for their own safety."

One of an endangered species, Cindy also was the Tacoma zoo's only elephant. Representatives from other zoos were invited to observe and give opinions on reasons for her behavior and, if possible, suggest ways to improve it. Among those representatives were Henneous and Miller.

Miller found Cindy a "healthy, handsome animal," whose major problems were loneliness and cramped living quarters.

As a baby, Cindy belonged to a Boulder City, Nev., grocer who used her in store promotions and donated her to the Port Defiance Zoo when she was 3. For the next 17 years, she lived alone in her own small enclosure and barn. Her only contacts were with the keepers who came to feed her, check on her health and keep her area clean.

At first content with the zoo surroundings, Cindy's hostility grew gradually. In 1977 Tacoma held a successful $7 million bond issue for renovations at the zoo. Plans included a larger enclosure and a mate for Cindy. Expansion work was delayed, however, and Cindy finally became too rambunctious to handle.

The solution to her problem was found in decisions made on Nov. 3, when the Tacoma zoo directors voted to send her to the San Diego Wild Animal Park, and on Nov. 23, when the park's trustees agreed to accept her.

Cindy arrived at the Wild Animal Park on Dec. 15, after an uneventful two-day truck trip, to join seven others in the park's female elephant enclosure.

She had some major adjustments to make and lessons to learn.

"She had spent 17 years alone," Miller said. (Elephants live to about 60.) "She had never seen another elephant before. That scared her. In Tacoma her place was small, but it belonged to her and she made it clear that she didn't like to have keepers in it. Here she had to learn to get along with us and the other elephants."

It took only a short time for Miller and other Wild Animal Park elephant handlers to conquer Cindy's worst behavior problems.

"She tried to get away with some of the things she did in Tacoma," Miller said. "But she had to understand that she had to play by our rules. When she would strike out at us, we would strike back."

AT WIT'S END

Six-course meal: Six-ring circus

By ERMA BOMBECK

I'm a pushover for those magazine articles that tell me I can put out a six-course dinner for eight in less than half an hour. (I can't shave my legs in less than half an hour.)

You know the ones I'm talking about. Those timetables that give you a minute-by-minute game plan of how you proceed with your meal.

I tried one of those timetables a week ago that looked and sounded fantastic. The menu was: beef stroganoff over noodles, green salad, buttered fresh asparagus, dinner rolls and baked Alaska. The company was due at 7:00. I started dinner at 6:30. It went something like this:

6:30: Washed greens for salad.

6:32: Lined kids up to smell their breath to see which one had ripped off the cherry tomatoes for the salad. Sent son with cherry seeds on front tooth to store for new supply.

6:35: Put ice cream out to soften for the baked Alaska and cut pound cake in half.

6:40: Sliced beef and put in skillet to brown.

6:40: Toilet stopped up in hallway. Ran to garage for plunger.

6:42: Found cookie sheet for the rolls under hanging basket in bedroom to catch water from Boston fern.

6:45: Put water on for noodles.

6:47: Smacked dog for licking ice cream that melted down side of cupboard.

6:50: Put on water for frozen asparagus.

6:54: Discovered you had to put baked Alaska on board in very hot oven. Sent kids to find a board.

6:56: Water for asparagus boiled dry and burnt pan.

6:57: Husband announced ice cube trays were empty.

6:59: Put cake on board, filled with ice cream, topped with meringue in preparation for final minutes in oven.

6:59 1/2: Kids informed me they got the board from bottom of bird feeder.

7:00: Doorbell rang. Poured two tablespoons of sherry into the stroganoff.

7:00: Poured remainder of sherry into the cook.

DEAR ABBY

Implant causes woman painful problems

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I could have written that letter signed "Wants to Love Again." The writer had had silicone implants to enlarge her breasts, and a year later her breasts were hard as rocks!

I had that operation four years ago and today my breasts are so hard I hate to embrace my own children. I'm an affectionate person who always enjoyed hugging my friends, but now I avoid close body contact with everyone. I am devastated.

You told "Wants to Love Again" to go back to the doctor who performed her operation and have it done over. This is very expensive, with no help from health insurance. Also, the results cannot be guaranteed.

So many women (myself included) had this done to please our husbands only to find ourselves divorced and left with a condition that makes it impossible to engage in physical intimacy with a man. Maybe it was a coincidence, but my husband stopped loving me as soon as my breasts got hard.

I would like to hear how men feel about this operation. Sign me ... WANTS TO LOVE AGAIN, TOO

DEAR WANTS: I have said repeatedly, never have any kind of cosmetic surgery to please another person -- only to please yourself. My mail overwhelmingly supports the theory that most men couldn't care less about the size of a woman's breasts. No man who truly loves a woman will stop loving her because her breasts "got hard." (Men continue to love women who have had mastectomies.)

A reputable plastic surgeon will inform all candidates for silicone implants that there's a 25 percent to 50 percent chance that hardening of the breasts will occur.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a man who needed to accompany his handicapped wife into public washrooms to assist her. He inquired about a tactful way to do so. You suggested that he approach a woman in the restaurant (or wherever they might be) to ask her to find out if there are any women in the washroom, and if so advise them (and other women approaching the washroom) that a man needs to go in there to assist his disabled wife.

Abby, unless the wife's handicap prevented her from speaking herself (which he made no mention of), she should do the requesting herself. This point is made for two reasons:

First of all, your answer is prejudicial in assuming that a handicapped person cannot speak for her or himself.

Secondly, a woman in a public place would be far more receptive to a request from another woman (whether handicapped or not) than from a man. -- KAREN C., OAK PARK, ILL.

DEAR KAREN: You are right on! The face with the egg on it is mine. Why didn't I think of that?

(If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Alternative mastectomy successful

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A decade ago it was rare when a doctor challenged the necessity of sacrificing a woman's breast to save her life from cancer.

Unless the case was too advanced for surgery, almost every patient underwent a radical mastectomy, an operation that required removal of the breast, underlying chest muscles and all underarm lymph nodes. The scars — physical and psychological — were extensive.

Today the picture is changing rapidly. Radical mastectomies, the mainstay of breast cancer treatment since the late 19th century, have become almost obsolete.

Modified mastectomies, which require removal of the breast but not the underlying chest muscles, have taken their place in medical textbooks. More than 100,000 are performed each year in the United States and Canada alone.

Since the mid-1970s, however, a relatively new procedure, combining surgery and radiation treatment, has made it possible to save a woman's breast without compromising her chances of survival.

So far only a few thousand patients have received the treatment, but the number seeking radiation therapy is rising steadily, signaling a retreat from radical surgery.

"A major portion of patients want the conservative approach with radiation therapy. Cosmetically and medically it is now recognized as an alternative treatment," said Dr. Alptekin Ucmakli, a cancer specialist at South Bay Hospital in nearby Redondo Beach.

The procedure combines surgery to remove the tumor and radiation treatment to kill any cancer left in the surrounding tissue.

First, a biopsy is done to determine the type of cancer the patient has.

Once those results are known, the next step is to surgically remove the tumor and lymph glands. Then the patient has two options: small plastic tubes loaded with pellets of radioactive material can be implanted in a separate operation, or external radiation can be applied.

Implants are left in the site of the tumor for 48 to 50 hours. Once they are taken out the patient undergoes five weeks of external radiation therapy.

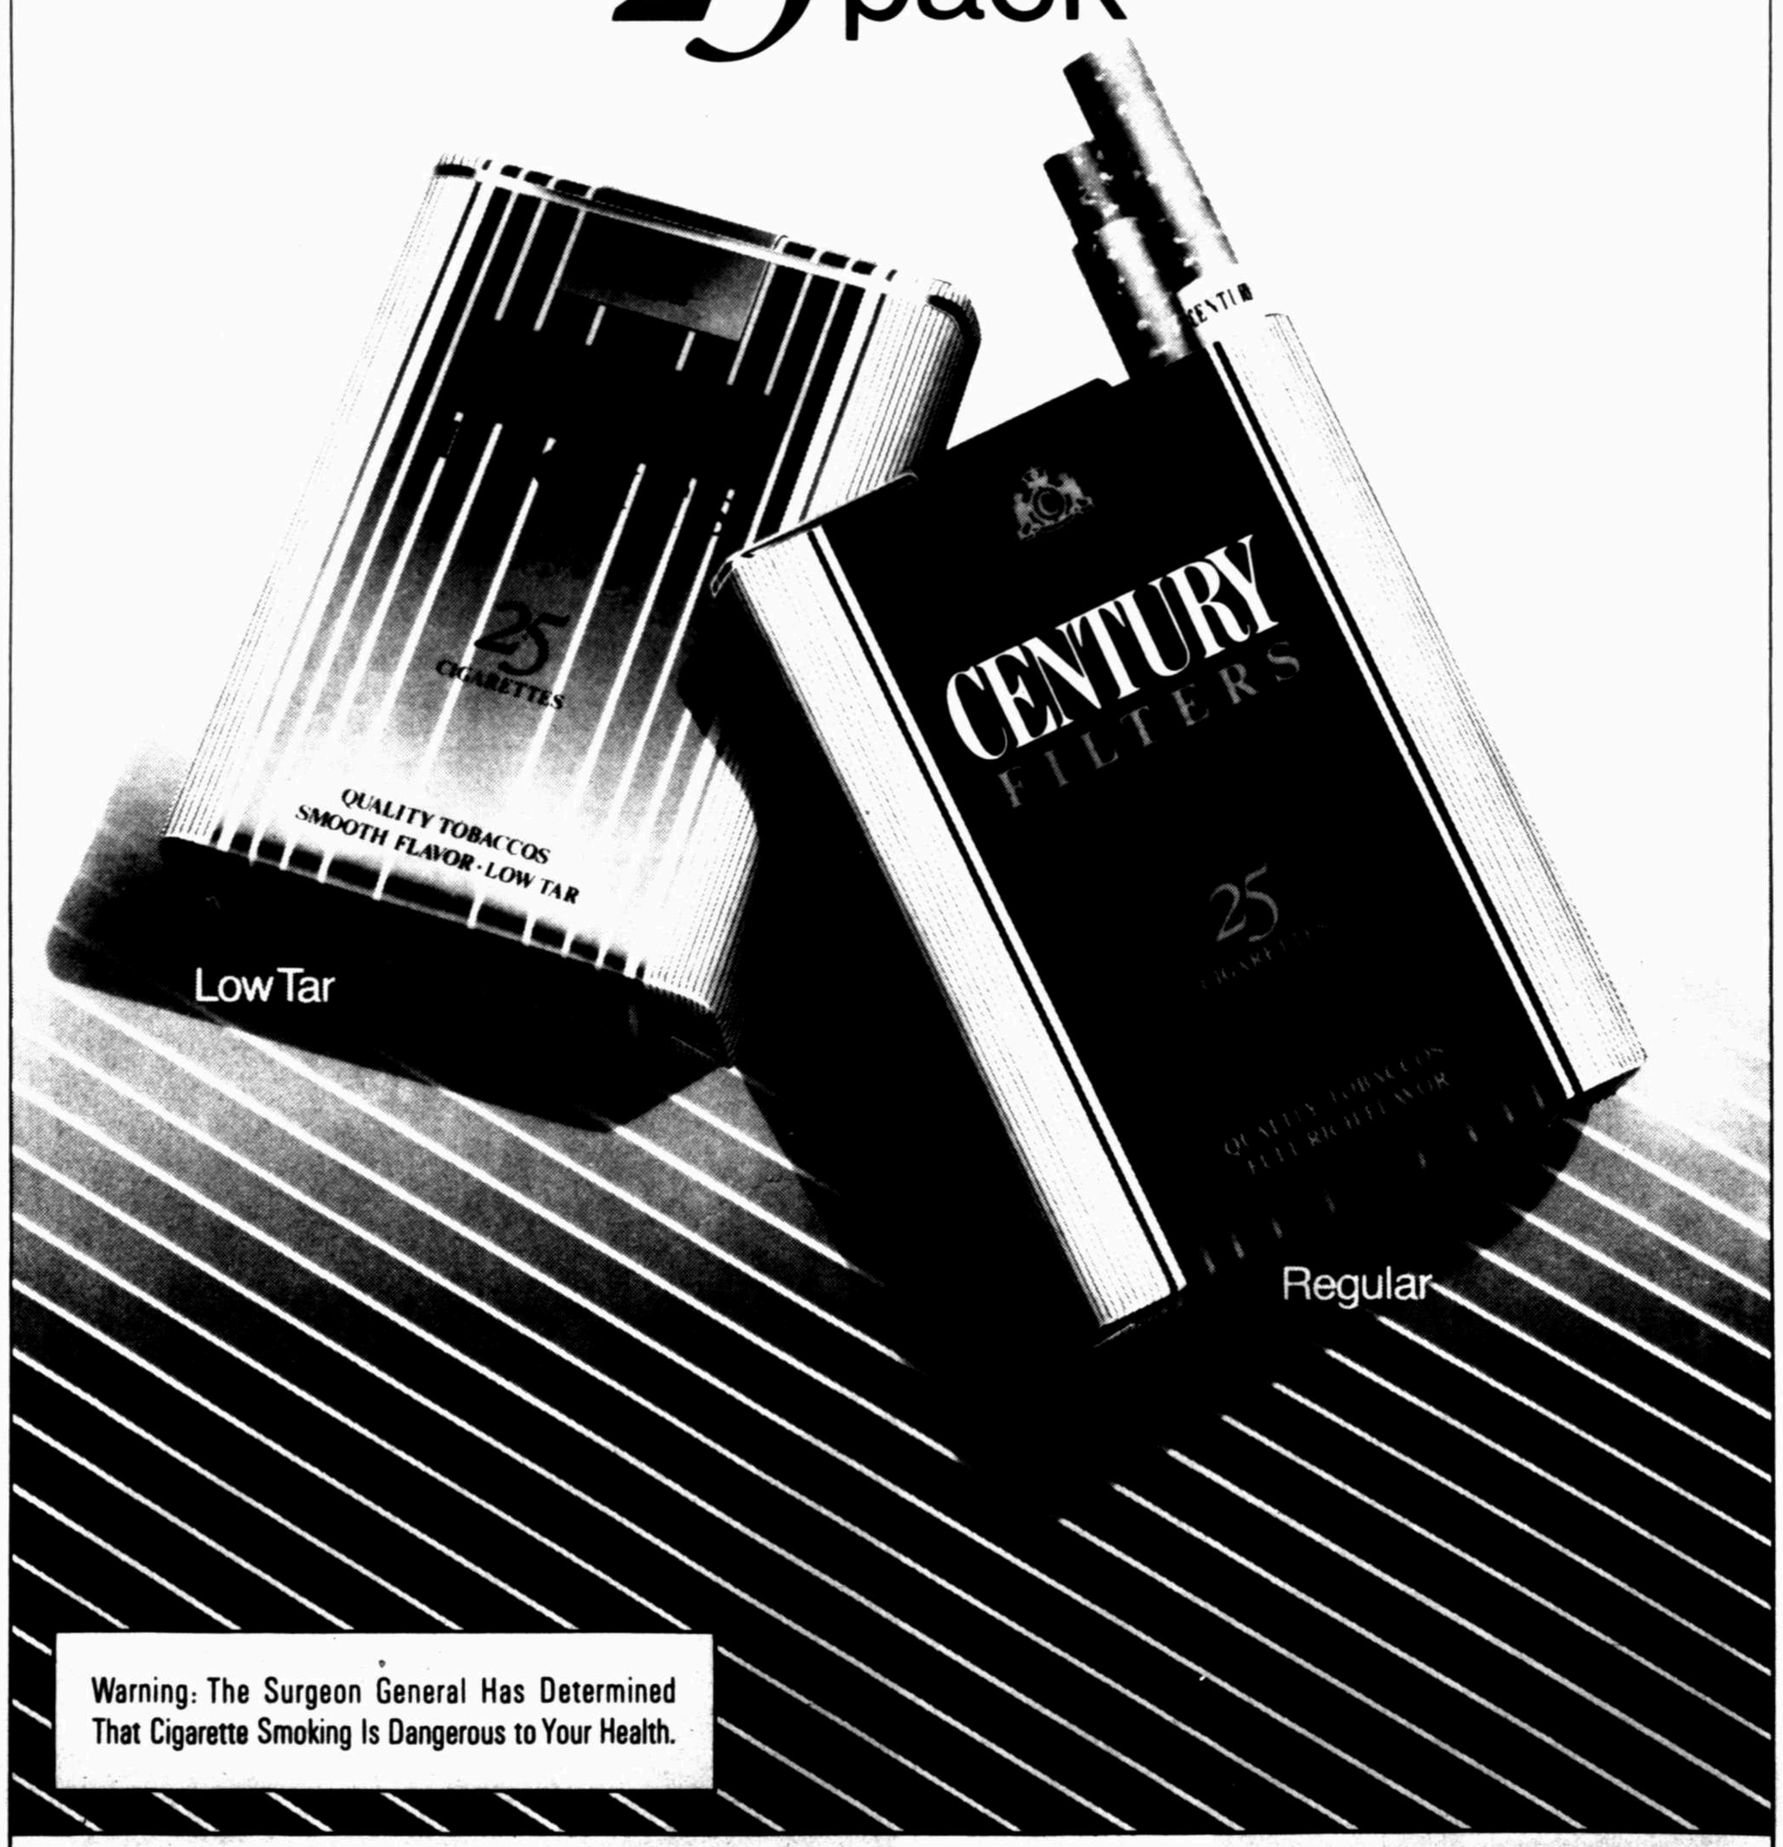

If the biopsy shows the cancer has invaded the lymph glands, the procedure is the same except the patient must have chemotherapy two months before the surgery and eight months after it.

Doctors said radiation therapy is used for treating cancer in its early stages when tumors are small. If the cancer is too far advanced, radiation therapy may no longer be a viable alternative.

There are 130,000 new cases of breast cancer reported in the United States every year. Nationally, the cancer control rate using radiation therapy is running more than 90 percent for patients whose cancer has not spread to the lymph nodes.

In cases where it has, the control rate is 55 to 85 percent, depending on the severity.

world in brief

Restaurant meals to be banned

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Restaurants soon will be banned from serving snake soup, dog meat and earthworm soup in downtown Seoul or near tourist hotels, the city government said today.

City officials said the measure will take effect Sept. 20 following public hearings. It is aimed at sparing tourists from sights such as curled-up, hissing snakes in shop windows along downtown streets.

Some Koreans enjoy these foods as stamina builders, but there have been complaints that they are offensive to foreigners.

The officials said shop owners not complying with the ban might have water and electricity cut off.

The city decided on the ban because shop owners failed to cover display windows or move their shops under an earlier policy of voluntary cooperation.Officials said snake soup businesses could continue outside the central city if they are not on main streets.

Airline management shaken up

LONDON (AP) — Government-owned British Airways has shaken up its top management in a move to increase profits.

The airline said Monday that 70 executives will retire early, reducing the ranks of senior management by 20 percent. The airline also will create eight new route divisions in hopes of focusing on areas where profits can be made.

British Airways has reduced its manpower from a peak of 58,000 five years ago to 37,000 now and has said it wants to reduce its payroll by another 2,000 in coming months.

In the year ending March 31, after job cuts and the abandonment of 33 unprofitable routes, British Airways made a profit of $114 million, its first profit in three years. It still has debts of $1.54 billion.

The airline's chairman, Sir John King, was appointed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to restore profitability and prepare the airline for sale to private owners with a year or two.

'Spill has caused pollution'

GLAND, Switzerland (AP) — The World Widlife Fund says the Persian Gulf oil spill has caused "catastrophic pollution" that poses a long-term threat to marine life and fresh water supplies.

A survey released by the organization Monday said oil has been spilling at a rate of about 1,200 barrels a day from three wells in Iran's offshore Nowruz field since March. Efforts to cap them have been thwarted by the Iran-Iraq war.

Although scientists have been unable to assess environmental damage in detail, the survey said, they have seen about 50 dead sea cows on gulf beaches. The scientists, according to the survey, also have recorded high numbers of dead marine turtles, dolphins, fish, sea snakes, and birds on the beaches.

Contamination has forced closure of desalination plants or curtailment of desalination operations in several Saudi communities and threatens other plants from Kuwait to Oman, the survey said.

Exile receives Soviet complaints

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei Sakharov is being deluged with telegrams and letters from Soviets complaining about an article he published in the United States supporting the West's "peace through strength" strategy, his wife says.

Yelena Bonner told Western reporters Monday that the campaign started after Izvestia, the government newspaper, published an article July 2 signed by four Soviet scientists. The Izvestia piece responded to an article by Sakharov, a dissident physicist and a Nobel Peace Prize winner, in the U.S. Journal of Foreign Affairs.

In his article, Sakharov, who for 3½ years has been exiled in Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, endorsed the Reagan administration's plan to build the MX missile and the Western allies' plan to deploy U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

Opposition leader elected

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Lokendra Bahadur Chand, a 44-year-old legislator, was elected by the National Assembly today as prime minister, succeeding a man he helped drive from office.

Chand ran unopposed for prime minister one day after the unicameral legislature ousted Prime Minister Surya Bahadur Thapa in a no-confidence motion. The motion, co-sponsored by Chand and fellow opposition leader Prakash Chandra Lohani, charged Thapa with dishonesty and corruption.

Chand's candidacy was endorsed by 107 of the 140 members of the partyless assembly. He was the only candidate to file for nomination.

Violence erupts hours before annual Protestant marches due to take place

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — About 500 screaming rioters rampaged through the mainly Protestant town of Ballynahinch for five hours early today, smashing windows and injuring 20 police officers and two civilians.

Police said the riot erupted a few hours before 150,000 Protestants were due to take part in annual marches throughout the province to mark the defeat of Catholic forces 293 years ago.

A press officer at Belfast police headquarters said the Ballynahinch violence began after a street party held as part of traditional Protestant celebrations in the province on the eve of the July 12 anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne in 1690.

The press officer said rioters lobbed a gasoline bomb at the home of a Roman Catholic family in the town 14 miles south of Belfast, then Protestant youths ran wild, hurling rocks through the windows of homes, offices and shops.

THE ANNUAL JULY 12 Protestant marches mark the victory in the battle of William's of Orange's forces over King James II's Catholic army. The outcome of the battle assured Protestant dominance in what later became the British province Northern Ireland.

At one point, rioters flipped a car and set it afire. Police rushed reinforcements to the town from surrounding areas and officers fired plastic bullets to rout the mob. Police said three people were arrested.

Three of the 20 injured officers were reported seriously hurt.

Contrary to earlier reports, the police press officer said she could not confirm that Roman Catholic rioters also were involved in the violence at Ballynahinch. "We are still checking that," she said.

The Roman Catholic family whose home was attacked escaped injury when the gasoline bomb failed to explode, she said.

The British domestic news agency Press Association said intelligence reports by security chiefs indicated the Irish Republican Army and other mainly Catholic guerrilla groups were possibly planning to bomb Protestant marchers. The provincial government placed more than 30,000 police officers and soldiers on alert and canceled leaves for security forces.

THE NEWS AGENCY QUOTED police chiefs as saying all Protestant marchers and security forces were potential targets.

Police said Catholic militants Monday night launched a 14-minute attack with 41 gasoline bombs in an unsuccessful bid to burn down the Orange Order's Londonderry headquarters.

The building overlooking the Catholic Bogside stronghold in the province's second largest city is the scheduled assembly point for about 1,000 parading Protestants.

Several firebombs exploded in Belfast Monday night but caused no damage, police reported.

The marches take place the day before a vote in the House of Commons in London on whether to reintroduce capital punishment for murder in Northern Ireland and the British mainland.

Protestants in the Northern Ireland Assembly voted 35-11 last week to press for a renewal of capital punishment. The vote was only symbolic because the 78-member assembly has only advisory powers, but the Protestants wanted to make their views known prior to Wednesday's vote in Commons.

Capital punishment was suspended throughout Britain in 1963 and abolished in 1969.

The 14 members of the moderate Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party and five members from Sinn Fein, political wing of the banned IRA, did not take part in Friday's vote in the Northern Ireland Assembly. They have refused to take their seats since their election last Oct. 20.

Plane crash investigated after reported explosion

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — The government is investigating whether an Ecuadorean jetliner that crashed, killing all 119 people aboard was sabotaged, after a radio station said witnesses saw the plane explode before it slammed into a mountain.

Investigators examined wreckage today of the state-run military airline Transporters Aeros Militares del Ecuador Boeing 737, which crashed Monday as it attempted to thread a mountain pass to land at the provincial capital Cuenca, 250 miles south of Quito. The crash was Ecuador's worst airline disaster.

The Civil Aviation Authority said it could not rule out sabotage after a radio station, the Voice of Tomebamba of Cuenca, quoted witnesses as saying they saw the aircraft explode before it crashed.

Though the station later retracted the report without explanation, civil aviation director Gen. Eduardo Duran said investigators were still looking for evidence the plane had been rigged to blow up in flight.

Duran did not elaborate on who might have wanted to sabotage the plane. Ecuador does not have an active insurgent group operating against the government or military.

Uncle begs for proof girl still alive

ROME (AP) — The uncle of a teen-age girl whose abduction has involved Pope John Paul II and the pope's Turkish attacker is pleading for proof that she is alive to ease her family's "indescribable anguish."

Mario Meneguzzi said Monday he has spoken by telephone with the man claiming to hold his 15-year-old niece Emanuela Orlandi. He said the purported abductor speaks Italian with an accent that "may be American."

Meneguzzi made a five-minute televised appeal for proof that the girl is not dead. He asked for a snapshot of his niece with a newspaper and the date on the masthead and the answer to where and with whom Emanuela had dinner on June 20, two days before she disappeared.

"It would calm her family," Meneguzzi said of the request. "Since June 22, her family has been living in a state of indescribable anguish."

"For now we are primarily interested in the proof that Emanuela is alive, that she is well physically. And it doesn't take much to give this proof," Meneguzzi said.

An anonymous caller to Italian news media said last week he is demanding freedom for papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca in return for the release of the girl, the daughter of a Vatican employee.

On Sunday, the pontiff said without elaborating that he is doing "all that is humanly possible" to help free the girl, missing since she left a music lesson in Rome.

"What the pope said...was very pleasing. It means a great deal, but beyond that — I don't know," Meneguzzi said.

He told reporters after the television appearance that the suspected abductor, who has called the girl's family three or four times, was "extremely polite."

"He's someone who likes to talk," the girl's uncle said, adding that one call lasted 10 minutes. "It's always been the same man. To me it seems like the accent may be American."

Wedding massacre reported

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Vengeance-seeking rebels massacred about 80 people attending a wedding in Afghanistan's capital city, a Western diplomatic source said today.

The source, who spoke here on condition that he not be identified, said the massacre was part of an intensified campaign by rebels in and around Kabul against the Soviet-backed regime of President Babrak Karmal.

The massacre occurred July 5 during the wedding attended by many former resistance members who had defected to the Karmal regime, said the source, who claimed the information came from reliable accounts in the Afghan capital.

The rebels felt betrayed by the defection and attacked the wedding in revenge, killing 80 guests and abducting several others, including a prominent singer who was featured on government television, the source said. The singer was not identified and the source gave no further details.

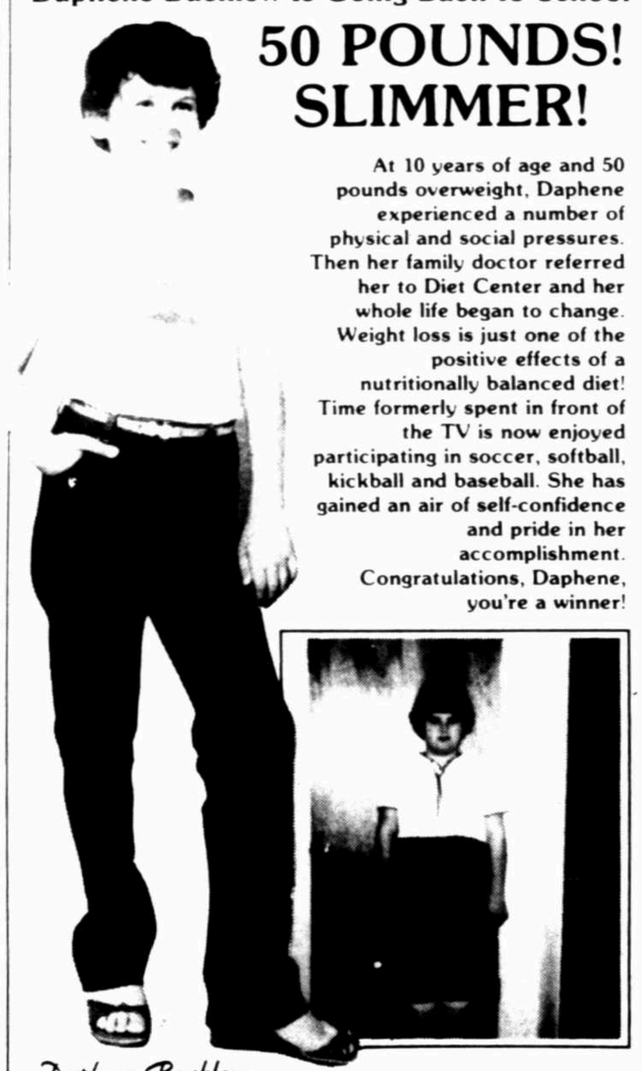

The account could not be confirmed independently because Karmal bans all foreign journalists except Soviet reporters and restricts news coverage, though a wedding massacre by rebels presumably would be publicized by the state press.

The reported massacre was followed by a rebel bombing in Kabul's diplomatic residential district of Share Nau last Friday, the diplomatic source said. Power in the area was cut off for 12 hours but no casualties were reported.

The source said resistance forces in Kabul also attacked two military posts in the Bala Hissar Fort and overran one of them.

Reacting to the announcement of her win as Miss Universe is Lorraine Elizabeth Downes, left, of New Zealand. First runner-up was Miss U.S.A., right, Julie Hayek.

Miss Universe crowned

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lorraine Downes, a hazel-eyed model from New Zealand, was crowned Miss Universe before a worldwide television audience, defeating a California college student and 10 other finalists.

The 19-year-old blonde, a dancing and swimming enthusiast from Auckland, wept as she accepted the crown Monday night from her predecessor, Karen Baldwin of Canada.

First runner-up was Julie Hayek, 22, of the United States, a green-eyed blonde who is a senior at UCLA. Second runner-up was Miss Ireland, 20-year-old Roberta Brown of Derry, who is a world-class runner.

Rounding out the 12 finalists were Lolita Morena of Switzerland, Karen Moore of England, Nina Rekola of Finland, Loana Rabecki of Germany, Federica Moro of Italy, Karen Dobloug of Norway, Lee Lee Bang of Singapore, Ana Garcia of Spain, and Paola Ruggeri of Venezuela.

KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES, England (AP) — Peter Townshend, lead guitarist for the rock group The Who, says "justice has been done" now that the group's financial manager has been sentenced to three years in jail for embezzling $276,000 to pay gambling debts.

Tony Branch, 36, a confessed gambling addict, said he lost the money betting on horse and greyhound races.

"You found yourself with an open till at your hand and kept digging into it," Judge R.I.S. Bax told Branch as he pronounced sentence Monday at Kingston Crown Court in this London suburb.

Branch admitted he embezzled at least 179,000 pounds — about $276,000 — to pay gambling debts.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Trumpeter Al Hirt says filth and crime in the French Quarter forced him to close his night club two months ago, but he may reopen it this summer if the city cleans up its act.

"I'm going to reopen," Hirt said. "I know the world's fair is coming. I'm proud of the city for putting $8 million of work in the French Quarter."

Al Hirt

However, Hirt said the reopening would depend on whether things get cleaned up while he is on the road.

Hirt, 60, made his comments at a news conference which followed a meeting Sunday night with Mayor Dutch Morial.

Hirt has been under fire by local businessmen since May when he said he was closing down. He said he had to sweep mess off his steps every morning and said patrons were afraid of crime in the Quarter.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Jazz singer Sarah Vaughan has filed a $2 million suit against the publishers of the "Irrational Inquirer," a spoof publication that depicted her as endorsing a remedy for intestinal gas.

Sarah Vaughn

Lawyers for Ms. Vaughan, who lives in California, filed the suit last week in U.S. District Court against High Meadow Publishing, Inc. of Manchester, which published on Jan. 1 a one-time-only parody on the "National Inquirer" called the "Irrational Inquirer."

The suit also named Publisher Lawrence Durocher and Associate Publisher Dennis Jolicoeur.

Ms. Vaughan, 59, charges in the suit that she was libeled and that the publication was an invasion of privacy, invasion of the right of publicity and a violation of the Lanham Trademark Act.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Prince Andrew may have some unwelcome company at the America's Cup ball this weekend: protesters who say they'll picket the upper-crust gathering to demand the British withdraw from Northern Ireland.

"We feel the prince's presence should be greeted with more than a champagne breakfast in Newport," James McGetrick said Monday. "And we feel we want to get the message to the prince that a lot of Irish Americans are upset at the British occupation of Northern Ireland today."

Prince Andrew, 23, the second son of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Phillip, was to arrive in Newport on Friday and attend a ball in a mansion. The ball is being thrown by the British syndicate entered in this summer's America's Cup, the top prize in yachting.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A state bar committee has voted 7-0 to recommend that former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst be readmitted to practice law after a year's suspension for lying under oath.

The State Bar of Arizona's disciplinary committee filed papers Monday in Arizona Supreme Court, said Francis J. Slavin, committee chairman.

Lawyers who are suspended are required to petition the court for permission to practice again if they wish to be licensed.

Kleindienst, who resigned as President Richard Nixon's attorney general during the Watergate scandal, was suspended from practicing law by Arizona's Supreme Court until May 9, for lying under oath during an investigation by the State Bar.

The bar inquiry stemmed from Kleindienst's 1976 representation of the corporate interests of Joseph Hauser, convicted of bribery and conspiracy in a multimillion-dollar insurance scam.

HOUSTON (AP) — Sam S. Emison Jr., a family law judge injured May 21 in an automobile accident, is dead.

Emison died Monday at Hermann Hospital. He was 50.

The Fort Worth native had been hospitalized since he lost control of his car on a rain-slick east Harris County road.

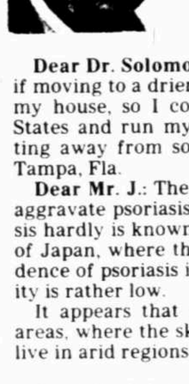

Emison, rated the best local judge by Houston attorneys, gained attention in 1981 while presiding over the child custody battle between Vickie Daniel and the family of her slain husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. Mrs. Daniel was allowed to keep her children and eventually acquitted in her husband's death.

Emison received his law degree from Baylor University and was appointed to the bench in 1977 by Gov. Dolph Briscoe. A Democrat, Emison won re-election in 1978 and again last year.

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Lesley Frost Ballantine, author, lecturer and daughter of the late poet Robert Frost, died Saturday at age 84.

Mrs. Ballantine gained a worldwide reputation for her correspondence with her father's friends and numerous articles and lectures on his work. Mrs. Ballantine also wrote several books for children, including, "Digging Down to China," "Really, Not Really," and "Going on Two."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Humidity helps psoriasis

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have psoriasis and I would like to know if moving to a drier climate would help me. I work from out of my house, so I could actually live anywhere in the United States and run my business exactly as I do now. Would getting away from some of this humidity help me? — Mr. J.J., Tampa, Fla.

Dear Mr. J.: There is some evidence that a dry climate may aggravate psoriasis rather than improve the condition. Psoriasis hardly is known in some regions, such as the southern part of Japan, where the humidity is very high. However, the incidence of psoriasis is high in northern Japan, where the humidity is rather low.

It appears that patients with psoriasis who live in humid areas, where the skin remains moist, do better than those who live in arid regions.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine is a career woman who was married for 12 years before she decided to start a family. Because she was in her middle thirties, she had her fluid tested to see if the baby was alright. It turned out bad and she has had an abortion. But the doctor waited a very long time before my friend was given the choice. Is there any sense to waiting so long after the test is made before doing the abortion? — Ms. D.S., Philadelphia

Dear Ms. S.: The delay between amniocentesis and abortion, assuming the fetus is malformed and the parents choose to have the pregnancy aborted, is not a matter of choice but of necessity. If a diagnosis of a fetal malformation is made on the basis of findings as the result of amniocentesis, there is a delay of from three to four weeks. This is a fact of life that the physician can do nothing about.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter has a wart on her hand and she wants to get it removed. Is this a good idea? If you feel it should be taken off, what is the best way to have it done? — Mrs. J.H., Lexington, Mass.

Dear Mrs. H.: Most warts will disappear with time, so often the best treatment is no treatment. However, a patient may want to have a wart removed if it is growing larger or is becoming painful. Cosmetic considerations may also prompt a person to have it removed.

There is no single treatment that is most effective for removing warts. Among the available procedures are cryotherapy (the use of cold), chemotherapy, and electrosurgery. Some of the newer methods may produce adverse side effects and I suggest that they not be used. The best approach would be to have your daughter seen by a dermatologist.

For Sean, Duluth, Minn.: According to researchers at Florida State University, smoking may have a depressing effect on a man's sex life. They emphasize that their findings apply to the short-term effects of smoking, and do not suggest that smoking is a cause of impotence.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

POSITIVE THINKING

Let 'big you' out in the open

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I remember reading some years ago about the famous Italian tenor Enrico Caruso, surely one of the greatest masters of song ever to step onto a stage. In later life, his confidence was enormous, but at the beginning of his career he was unsure and uncertain.

One opening night at the opera, Caruso was standing in the wings waiting to go on when he was seized by an overwhelming attack of stage fright. His throat became constricted. Perspiration poured from him. He was actually shaking with fear.

Then the stagehands nearby were astonished to hear him say, in a whispered command, "Out! You miserable little me, get out of my way! Out! Out!"

By a tremendous effort of will, Caruso was changing his self-image. He was saying to the fearful, timid element inside of him that the strong, positive element inside him must prevail, would prevail, and in the face of this fierce counterattack, the "little me" shrank away. He went onstage, where he sang with the beauty and power that were characteristic of the great Caruso. At the end, the audience surged up, shouting "Bravo!" Were they applauding the skill of a great artist? Yes, but perhaps intuitively they were acclaiming something more — the man who brought the "big me" out of himself by overcoming the fears and frustrations of the "little me."

I told that story one time to a young wife who came to consult me. She was upset and frightened. Her husband was under consideration for a promotion, an important one. But is was the custom of that particular company to have a party at which top executives had a chance to observe the employee under social conditions. Wives were always asked to this affair, because the company believed, quite rightly, that a man and his wife are an inseparable team — when you deal with one you are dealing with the other.

I said to this young woman, "Why are you so concerned? You are able to handle yourself."

"Oh, Dr. Peale," she said, and her eyes were actually full of tears, "all those other wives have been to colleges like Smith or Vassar or Wellesley. I never got past high school. They'll talk about things I'm not familiar with. I just know I'll be so tense I'll say or do something dumb and ruin Jim's chances for this promotion. I can't bring myself to go, and yet I can't refuse to go. Oh, what shall I do?"

Timidity, you see, timidity even in the presence of a routine situation.

I said to her, "Look, you're a very pretty girl, you dress well, you have honesty and your own quiet charm. Don't worry about those wives from Wellesley. They don't know all that much anyway. Just be yourself. The trouble with a lot of people is that they always try to copy somebody else. If the Creator wanted us all to be alike, He would have made us that way. You are the only person in the world like you. Think of that: millions of people and only one like you! You are unique and very special. So you just walk into that party and be yourself, your own attractive self. Mix right in with those people and you will shake off this inferiority complex. Go among them saying to yourself, 'I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me.'"

Actress takes record swim

NEW YORK (AP) — A Broadway actress who became the first person ever to swim two laps around Manhattan emerged exhausted from the polluted East River and said she planned to "take a bath."

Julie Ridge, a 26-year-old who last performed in the play "Oh! Calcutta!" climbed from the river at about 7:45 p.m. Monday, some 21½ hours after she began.

"I'm fine," she said. "Now, I think I will go and take a bath."

Pennsylvania passes budget; Californians' checks freed

By The Associated Press

A new budget restored Pennsylvania's spending authority today, allowing payments for 230,000 workers and welfare recipients but slashing education funds, while a federal judge freed $80 million in unemployment checks for California residents.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh signed Pennsylvania's $6.9 billion budget Monday just before a midnight deadline, cutting $1.1 billion to balance the spending plan as required by the state constitution.

The 1983-84 budget freed 230,000 welfare and payroll checks frozen since July 1, the start of the fiscal year, but raised the possibility of 2,000 layoffs, Thornburgh said.

The governor said he did not consider the new budget acceptable, and urged the Legislature to "work around the clock" to draft a supplemental budget and tax bills.

Joseph Oravitz, executive director of the Pennsylvania School Boards Association, said that unless a $448 million cut in school subsidies is restored "education cannot continue to function."

To motivate the lawmakers into restoring cutbacks, the Republican governor eliminated a $43 million fund for the Democratic-controlled House, most of which was earmarked for employee salaries.

"It is unseemly to provide them with funds that could be used to take a lengthy, paid summer recess," said Thornburgh.

He also slashed $34 million for state universities and community colleges, and said an additional $33 million will be trimmed from pending appropriations for state-related universities.

In California, U.S. District Judge Milton Schwartz on Monday freed $80 million in unemployment checks for 346,000 residents as a budget impasse continued between Republican Gov. George Deukmejian and Democratic legislative leaders.

The ruling also freed unemployment checks averaging $222 each for 234,000 more people due benefits later this week. But it left frozen checks for 84,000 recipients of state disability benefits.

The judge ruled that federal law requiring payment of unemployment benefits superseded state law.

A separate suit pending before the California Supreme Court would free the disability benefits, which average $272 per recipient, along with $228 million in payments withheld from doctors, nursing homes, pharmacists and other providers of Medi-Cal health care.

Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh

Deukmejian ordered the state Employment Development Department to immediately start issuing unemployment checks, some of which have been delayed since July 1, the start of California's 1983-84 fiscal year. A department spokeswoman said all checks would be mailed today.

Deukmejian wants to balance a proposed $27.2 billion budget by vetoing up to $1.2 billion in state programs and aid. Democrats say the budget is already inadequate and it should be balanced through increased taxes.

U.S. still wants to talk to Salvadoran rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the failure of special U.S. envoy Richard B. Stone to meet with Salvadoran rebel leaders last weekend, the State Department has reiterated its willingness to hold talks with the leftist insurgents.

Alan Romberg, the department's deputy spokesman, said any political settlement of the 3½-year-old civil war would have to be made in the "context of the democratic political process" of El Salvador.

"We regard a serious diplomatic effort to secure democracy, peace and stability in the region as essential," Romberg said Monday.

His remarks came shortly after Stone reported to Secretary of State George P. Shultz on the unsuccessful efforts to meet with guerrilla leaders in San Jose, Costa Rica.

In a statement issued Sunday, rebel leaders said a "propagandistic environment" and procedural disputes prevented the meeting from taking place. The rebels also reiterated their desire for a meeting with Stone.

Even though both sides expressed a willingness to talk, Romberg was not optimistic about the prospects for success. "We have undertaken this effort with our eyes open, aware of both the potential obstacles and limitations involved, but in good faith," he said.

"While the policies of the government of El Salvador and our own regarding the necessity that any political settlement in that country be in the context of the democratic political process, we will continue our policy of not imposing advance requirements on the holding of any meeting," he said.

This statement appeared to be aimed at addressing the concerns of many congressmen who contend that U.S. military aid to El Salvador should be withheld unless there are attempts to negotiate a political settlement.

The governent of Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana has stated it won't negotiate any settlement that would allow the guerrillas to share political power. Instead, Magana has urged the rebels to lay down their arms and participate in December's scheduled elections, an invitation that has been refused.

Rebel leader Joaquin Villalobos said the weekend meeting fell through because Stone wanted to confine the agenda to rebel participation in the elections while the leftists wanted to discuss sharing power.

"We have made it very clear that elections are not a solution to the war," Villalobos said Monday in a broadcast over the rebels' clandestine Radio Venceremos.

"The solution lies in the recognition of the political-military force of the FMLN in the establishment of a new government, the formation of an army in which the FMLN is incorporated, and the end of U.S. intervention," said Villalobos, who was not a member of the delegation that had prepared to meet with Stone.

Murders of three Iranians probably political in nature

UPLAND, Calif. (AP) — The early-morning killings of three members of an Iranian family were political in nature, and a family member has charged that "police know" who broke into the suburban home to commit the slayings.

Authorities investigating the killings of a woman and her two children meanwhile said they are examining the family's finances and political affiliations.

The victims were shot repeatedly Monday by at least two gunmen who broke in through a back door and opened fire with small-caliber semiautomatic weapons.

The killers missed a 14-year-old girl and bypassed two young boys hiding in a bedroom of the two-story Tudor-style home in an affluent neighborhood of Upland, police said. The girl has provided police with a description of one of the men.

A family representative, requesting anonymity, told The San Bernardino Sun the killings were political in nature. "The police know who (the gunmen) are," he said.

Capt. Merle Arneson said investigators began checking the family's background because there was no apparent motive. Valuables in the fashionable home were untouched and "the motive was apparently not burglary or robbery."

Police would not confirm comments by neighbors that the father of the children, in Iran since April, was a supporter of the Shah of Iran, but did say they found no political literature in the house. The shah was deposed in 1979 and died in 1980.

The family's business dealings are also under investigation, said Detective Tom Garner. "We're just trying to cover all the bases," he said.

NAACP board votes to support director

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 64-member board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has voted overwhelmingly to support Benjamin Hooks, its executive director, flying in the face of the chairwoman who recently suspended him.

Margaret Bush Wilson of St. Louis was stripped of most of her powers after she suspended Hooks in May without consulting other board members.

A member who asked not to be named said the board, meeting at the NAACP national convention here, voted overwhelming at a closed-door session Monday to reject Mrs. Wilson's charges against Hooks. He said one member voted against adopting the seven-page, point-by-point vindication of Hooks, and one member abstained.

"The committee concludes that a 33-page confidential report of the chairman submitted to the board is not substantiated by the facts other than the fact that there is a deficit for which the chairman is largely responsible," the seven-page statement said.

Mrs. Wilson had said the suspension was her way of expressing dissatisfaction with Hooks' administration of the NAACP.

Kelly Alexander Sr. of Charlotte, N.C., was named acting board chairman.

Meanwhile, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, who is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, told several thousand NAACP delegates that Reagan administration policies are dividing the United States along racial and economic lines.

Reagan uses "his smoothest tones of celluloid sincerity" when he tries to convince the public that he is committed to civil rights, Askew said.

"At a time when we as Americans should be going forward, we are going backward, going backward to the discriminatory practices and pernicious processes that have no place in American life," he said.

NAACP membership was reported by the board to be 348,000 as of May, up 34,000 from the previous year.

Askew also criticized leaders of his own party for failing to speak out more vigorously against the Reagan administration's civil rights policies.

Vagabond riding the rails to raise money

NEW YORK (AP) — An advertising executive who claims vagabonds steal rides on freight trains "because they are not being cared for in the cities" is opting to ride the rails himself to raise money for the homeless in seven cities.

Todd Waters, 35, vice president of an ad company in Minneapolis, says he has been hopping freights for 14 years. He also claims the number of the nation's vagabonds increased during that time "by 1,000 percent."

"The travesty of seeing people without money, living under bridges, in cardboard and wooden shacks and between piles of tires — I just didn't think it could happen in America," he told a news conference Monday at the Olivieri Center for Homeless Women in Manhattan.

Waters said he is riding the rails cross-country to raise funds for homeless people in seven cities.

His first stop was set for Wednesday in Buffalo, with others to follow in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, Mo., Phoenix, Ariz., and Los Angeles, arriving there July 29.

He hopes people will donate a penny a mile at fund raisers in the cities to local coalitions for the homeless.

"Fifty years ago in the Depression our parents and grandparents made a commitment that this would never happen again, that we'd allow people to die on the streets," he said. "This is an attempt to remind America of that promise we made ourselves."

He said more people were on the streets now because of a cutback in programs.

nation in brief

Protesters demand sentence of child rapist be reconsidered

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Prosecutors say jailing a 650-pound man convicted of raping his 12-year-old daughter would be too costly because of his bad health, but 50 protesters demanded his suspended sentence be reconsidered.

"We don't feel justice was served," said Natalie Babinski, president of the Springfield chapter of the National Organization for Women, and one of the protesters at a courthouse where Ralph Ward Rice Jr., 32, pleaded guilty to rape and incest charges.

Rice was put on three years' probation, ordered to stay away from his six children and to undergo psychiatric treatment.

In a similar case last year, Joseph "Jo-Jo" Giorgianni of Trenton, N.J., who weighed more than 400 pounds, was jailed for carnal abuse. Initially his 15-year sentence had been suspended on grounds of ill health, but it was changed after a public furor.

'El Nino' breaking down

MIAMI (AP) — The warm Pacific Ocean currents that have been blamed for severe weather around the world in the past few months seem to be breaking down gradually, not with a "bang," a scientist says.

It appears to be "the beginning of the end" for the current system known as El Nino, said Bob Case, a National Hurricane Center forecaster, on Monday. However, the breakdown of El Nino full-scale could result in hurricanes this summer, forecasters said.

El Nino is believed by scientists to be linked to a massive shift in barometric pressure in the Southern Hemisphere and may have inhibited the formation of tropical storms during the 1982 hurricane season.

Religious activists cite 'crisis'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of religious activists say there is a growing "credibility crisis" between American churches and the Reagan administration over U.S. policy in Central America.

"Church people are starting to choose between what the U.S. government is telling them about Latin America and what their people are seeing with their own eyes," religious activist Joseph Moran said Monday.

The Rev. William Sloane Coffin, senior minister at New York City's Riverside Church, said the group would lobby Congress to stop covert U.S. support for anti-government rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

Bond set in cyanide-related case

CHICAGO (AP) — Bond has been set at $200,000 for a man who pleaded innocent in the fatal shooting of a Chicago resident, a victim police say may have been mistaken for an informant in the Tylenol-cyanide case last fall.

Roger Arnold, 49, entered the plea Monday. A hearing was set for July 18. Arnold, who was questioned but not charged in the seven poisoning deaths, is accused of the June 18 killing of 46-year-old John Stanisha.

Authorities said they believe Arnold thought Stanisha was an informant whose tip led Tylenol investigators to search Arnold's apartment, where several unregistered weapons were found.

Killer confesses to more slayings

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A convicted killer confessed to his biographer and reporters that he also slew his teen-age son and a 14-year-old boy, leading a district attorney to reopen the cases.

Joseph Kallinger, a former shoemaker, was to be arraigned today for the two 1974 murders, Assistant District Attorney Arnold Gordon said Monday.

Kallinger, serving a 30-to-80-year sentence for robbery and awaiting a life sentence for killing a nurse, has not admitted the 1974 killings to authorities. But Gordon said the statements quoted by reporters and by Flora Rheta Schreiber, author of "The Shoemaker," were sufficient to bring the new charges.

Each portion of said streets, avenues and or alleys as designated by unit number constitutes a separate and independent unit of said improvements and shall be improved, and the improvements constructed therein separately and independent from each and every other improvement unit and assessments to be levied for said improvements in each unit shall be altogether separate, distrinct and independent of and from the assessments to be levied in every other improvement unit and in making and levying assessments against property abutting upon one of said unit, no matter or circumstance in connection with any other of said units shall be considered, or have any effect upon the other, all as fully and to the same extent as if separate proceedings and contracts had been had and executed with reference to the improvements to be made in each of said units.

A hearing will be given and held by and before the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, in the Council Chamber of the City Hall in the City of Midland, Texas, on the 26th day of July, 1983, at 1:35 o'clock p.m. to the real and true owners whether named or correctly named in the assessment proceedings or not, of all property abutting upon said streets, avenues and or alley within the limits to be improved, and to all lien holders or other persons owning or claiming any such abutting property, or anyinterest therein, and to all railways occupying any portion of said streets, avenues and or alleys within any improvement unit as above defined, and to all others interested in any of the proceedings, contracts, or matters and things herein mentioned, or incident or relating thereto or the contract for the construction of improvements herein referred to.

At said time and place, all such persons, firms corporations railways, and estates, and their agents and attorneys, shall have the right to appear and to be heard and offer testimony as to the said assessments, and as to the amount thereof proposed to the assessed against abutting property and the real and true owners thereof, and as to the lien and charge of personal liability to secure payment of said assessment, the special benefits to accure to each such abutting property and the owner or owners there by virtue of said improvements, if any, or concerning any error, invalidity, irregularity or deficiency in any proceedings or contract in reference to said improvements and said proposed amendments, and concerning any other matters or thing as to which a hearing is constitutional prerequisite to the validity of said assessment, proceedings and improvements and on which the owner or owners are entitled to a hearing under the constitution and laws of the State of Texas and the proceedings of said City Council.

Following such hearing, such assessments will be levied against each and every parcel of property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys within the limits above defined, and the real and true owners thereof for that portion of the cost of said improvements determined by said City Council to be assessed against such abutting properties, and the real and true owners thereof, and against railways occupying any portion of said units, and said assessments shall be and constitute first and prior liens upon said abutting properties, from the date said improvements were ordered by said City Council and a personal liability and charge against the real and true owners thereof, as of said date, whether such property be described or correctly described, or such real and ture owners be named or correctly named, in such proceedings, or not, and no error or mistake or discrepancy in the names of such owner or owners, or in describing said property in any of said proceedings with reference to said improvements, shall invalidate any assessment or certificate issued inevidence thereof, but, nevertheless, each parcel of property abutting upon said streets, avenues, and/or alleys and the real and true owner or owners thereof and each railroad, shall be charged with and be liable for said assessment, which shall be valid whether or not such owner or owners be named or correctly named, or such property be described or correctly described, and as provided for under Article 1105-b of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, as amended, heretofore adopted by said City Council as the law under which such improvements, proceedings and assessments are being constructed, performed and levied.

DONE by order of the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, this 28th day of June, 1983.

J. W. McCullough, City Secretary
