Water board awards city limited permit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — The city of Midland, which fast was becoming an outlaw, suddenly found itself within the law here Tuesday, when the commissioners of the Texas Department of Water Resources in a 3-0 vote awarded the city a limited permit to discharge effluent from its holding pond and into Midland Draw.

The city was relieved and delighted by the vote.

"I'm happier," said John Lowe, the city's utilities director, who had expressed fear that the rising sewage waters and northerly winds would cause the city's dikes to collapse.

The county and Greenwood were disappointed.

"WE ARE REWARDING the city for bad management and ignorance of the problem," charged Reagan Legg, a Midland lawyer who opposed the dumping of effluent down the draw and south of the burgeoning Greenwood community.

The three-man commission's order allows Midland to discharge approximately 168 million gallons of effluent down the draw over a 14-day period. Such discharge, the commissioners indicated, would drop the free-board by two feet and eliminate the danger of a dike breaking and the uncontrolled flow of the treated waters. The city's 18 overlapping ponds were approaching their about 250-million gallon capacity.

At 11 a.m. on Jan. 6, the commission may revoke or modify the order, said Commissioner Felix McDonald.

The order specifically permits the discharge of 83 million gallons to lower the free-board to within two feet of the top of the dikes. Furthermore, the order allows for the discharge of an additional 6 million gallon of secondary-treated effluent in an effort to keep up with the volume of wastewater flowing from the city and into the Water Pollution Plant.

HOWEVER, THE outflow likely still will lag the wastewater in-flow of between 8 and 9 million gallons per day.

The order was a reversal of a Water Resources staff-recommended order, which would have denied Midland a permit to dump the effluent and would have made the dumping illegal. Yet, that same order would have more or less sanctioned the breaking of the law: the commission would have set down guidelines for the city to follow should it illegally discharge the effluent.

That order, which was prepared by the Water Resources legal staff even before the commission had heard pro and con testimony Monday, was cast aside Tuesday morning.

The second order gives the city two weeks to get effluent out of the ponds by approved means, such as irrigation of agriculture land.

"I'm pleased," said City Attorney Joe Nussle, who argued the city's case for discharging effluent down the draw. "I think the commission recognized the emergency nature of the situation. This gives us breathing room."

CRITICS, SUCH AS County Commissioner Charlie Welch and Greenwood Schools Superintendent Jim Warlick, of the city's plan to relieve pressure in the holding ponds contend that effluent running down the draw readily will percolate into the underground water system and pollute and contaminate the "drinking water" for thousands of Greenwood-area citizens.

The commission ordered Robert Bradshaw, a Water Resources staffer stationed in Odessa, to supervise the discharge into Midland Draw and to order it immediately halted should it cause obvious damage.

Meanwhile, Commission Chairman McDonald ordered the city to negotiate with landowners to find additional land for irrigation and to continue looking for hydrologically-sealed area, such as an isolated salt lake, to dispose of the effluent for the city, which is approaching 100,000 population.

Earlier in Tuesday testimony, Welch, who has been snapping at the city for months to properly dispose of its effluent, said he pumps "escape water" onto his cotton and wheat land in doing his part in helping the city dispose of effluent. Welch defined "escape water" as water which seeps into and "out of the landfill, seeps out of the bottom of ponds."

FOR YEARS, Midland alfalfa farmer Gene Jones and his sons have contracted with the city to irrigate their farm land and thereby get rid of enough effluent to keep the ponds from overflowing. However, the irrigation of about 1,500 acres largely is in suspension due to saturation of the land and the coming of winter.

Welch vehemently opposed the willful discharge into the draw. He said that the draw's porous bottom and banks acts as a sponge.

"It's phenomenal how fast that draw takes water in," testified Welch under questioning by Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson.

Too, Welch noted that "it would be ridiculous to go ahead and damage additional land" by saturation irrigation.

Nuessle, who rarely agrees with the commissioner, agreed.

"Number one," Nuessle said, "that would be in violation of the permit — just like piping water down the draw."

WELCH SAID that irrigation with effluent should be done "right and proper" to keep the soil from washing away and to minimize the run-off into the draw. Too much water on agricultural land would cut back on the yield, Welch said.

"We (the city) can pay for that (damage)," said Nuessle. "That's no big deal."

"Over-watering might weaken the stand," Welch testified. "Unless it's a very bad situation, you will not kill that crop."

Nuessle recognized that irrigation is not the city's panacea.

"I don't believe it's correct that irrigation is going to solve the problem," Nuessle said. "If it would, we wouldn't be here."

Nuessle contended that funneling effluent into the draw is an emergency measure to deal with a dire situation.

Welch held that the proposal was too drastic and would create additional problems, such as fouling the well water along the draw.

"WHAT'S YOUR solution to this thing?" Nuessle tersely asked the commissioner.

Welch was evasive.

"The chairman (McDonald) said yesterday he wasn't interested in past history," Welch said.

"What do you suggest we do today?"

"I suggest we do the same thing we did last year," Welch said. "I'm irrigating."

Nuessle noted that Welch conceded that "the city is looking" for additional

Pittsburgh Glass not coming to town

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Three years ago, the news was trumpeted that Pittsburgh Plate Glass had made definite commitments to build a fiberglass manufacturing plant at Midland.

On Tuesday, the news was released by the Midland Chamber of Commerce that PPG is dropping Midland from its future plans without ever breaking ground.

Grant Billingsley, acting executive director of the chamber, told the group's board of directors during its monthly meeting Tuesday that "it is not now in their plans to build a plant in Midland County. It's a disappointment," in light of the fact that Midland leaders had been working with PPG officials since 1974 to attract the industry to the Tall City.

PPG had purchased 420 acres of land six miles west of the city in Midland Industrial Park. The land was bordered on the north by U.S. Highway 80 and the Texas Pacific Railroad and on the south by Interstate 20.

BILLINGSLEY SAID THE land would be repurchased by the Midland Industrial Foundation for future use.

When announced in November 1978, plans called for construction to begin in 1979 with startup planned for 1980. The plant would have included a 750,000 square foot building.

However, before plans progressed much further, some residents objected to the plant and complained to the Texas Air Control Board.

In explaining the company's withdrawal, Billingsley said, "It's more a reflection of changes in the production mix."

This marks the second major company to pull out of Midland. Levi Strauss closed its doors recently on its jeans manufacturing plant — the first major effort at diversifying the economy. During the 1970s, city leaders concentrated on pulling in industries other than petroleum-related firms to boost the sagging economy.

BUT DURING A PROGRESS report on Objectives for Midland earlier in the meeting, Chairman Charles Priddy had remarked, "Levi Strauss showed us we don't have the labor force here for diversified industry."

In summarizing progress on the city's objectives, Priddy began, "We're in the normal chamber posture of a lot of talk and not too much action."

Main thrust of the program has been revitalizing; south and east Midland, and Priddy said work is getting under way now in that area. First major change will be the new De Zavala Elementary School that will be constructed close to the current facility.

Housing in that area is the next major objective, he related, and the Mexican-American Advisory Committee is playing a key role to seeing that accomplished. "They have started on a proposed housing program using the (old De Zavala) school as a key feature."

An auditorium for Midland is being pursued by a group of private citizens and the city is working on acquiring necessary downtown land, Priddy said.

New district manager of Southwestern Bell, Sam Ogletree, was introduced to the board. In his status report, Ogletree noted that the phone company is "ready to put everything underground and cover it up and fix the streets. We hope to get the streets fixed by the end of January."

He said that Midland's five year budget and project projection is being used up in one year and that Bell Telephone is trying to come up with another five-year projection.

BILLINGSLEY, IN LOOKING AT the city's economy over the past year, noted that residential building permits are more than double this year over that of last year even in the face of high interest rates. Postal receipts are up by 32 percent and bank deposits have jumped more than 40 percent in the past year.

"In the last three to five years, Midland has averaged 3.5 to 5 percent population growth," Billingsley said. "This year, the labor force has increased 14 percent and the job growth has been 8 percent, and we're talking about solid jobs."

Parker Humes, president of the Midland Independent School District board of trustees, noted that by 1985-86 the school enrollment will have jumped by 43 percent, according to a recent study. That means the number of public school students will go from 18,000 to 24,000, he said.

With this 43 percent increase expected in four years, Humes said he anticipates the school district will propose another bond issue this spring. One was passed last spring for construction of two new elementary schools and additions to both high schools.

INTRODUCED AS A new chamber employee was Dode Devore, who will be replacing Jan Reeder as director of the convention and visitors' bureau. Her new job entails being in charge of attracting and coordinating meetings and conventions held in Midland.

Ms. Devore previously worked as director of resort sales for the Angel Fire Corporation in Angel Fire, N.M.

Area churches plan special services

Many area churches are observing this religious holiday by conducting special Christmas services beginning today. Below is a listing of times and places of some of the special services.

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas St., will hold its annual Candlelight Service, with carols, handbells and Christmas thoughts by the Rev. Kenneth Hall, at 7:15 p.m. today.

Cocaine bust city's largest

The alleged theft of a 12-pack of beer early this morning led to the arrest of two men and confiscation of what police say is the largest amount of cocaine in city history.

According to police accounts of the incident, two officers were parked across from Buck's Country Store on FM 868 about 2:30 a.m. today when they saw two men leave the store in a 1980 Oldsmobile at a high rate of speed.

A store employee said one of the men had stolen a 12-pack of Budweiser, which police said they found in the car when it was later stopped near the intersection of 868 and North Big Spring Street.

Police said they also discovered two loaded pistols, narcotics paraphernalia and more than six ounces of cocaine with an estimated street value of about $25,000.

The suspects, a 27-year-old Lubbock man and a man who gave a New York City address, were in the city jail this morning and were expected to be formally charged later in the day.

MMH board approves filing for certificate of need

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital District's Board of Directors have approved filing a certificate of need with the Texas Health Facilities Commission for a 50-bed chemical dependency facility and recommended that the unit be managed by the hospital.

Favorable comment was given Tuesday at MMH's Board of Trustees and Directors regular monthly meeting concerning the chemical dependency unit.

"We need to be committed to this kind of a project. Are there any questions or comments?", asked Roy Campbell, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

"In spite of the fact that this has been a compressed project, I feel all bases have been touched," Ed Magruder, chairman of the Board of Directors said, referring to the time element involved so that the certificate of need can be considered by the TFHC along with any other applications for a similar facility.

IN NOVEMBER, an Arlington organization filed a certificate of need for a psychiatric hospital which is to include a chemical dependency facility to be constructed at Midland Air Terminal. According to the THFC, if MMH files its certificate of need on time, the two applications will be considered at the same time. One of the THFC's duties is to prevent a duplication of services in this area.

"If we don't do it, someone else will," Magruder said Tuesday, adding that it is the role of the hospital district to provide all areas of health care.

"We should operate it ourselves rather than with a management contract," Dr. Henrie Mast, director, said. "We will have to persuade the public this is proper, but I feel this program should be self dictating and supporting."

Pat Estes, director, was unable to attend the meeting, but Campbell said "Mrs. Estes said she is in favor of the project and is also in favor of staffing the unit ourselves, as opposed to having a contract agreement."

In the Trustees' meeting, Campbell called for a joint session with the directors to consider action on a modification of the source of funds policy and proposed changes in the indigent care policy.

CAMPBELL SAID there is flexibility in the portion of the three sources, patient charges, taxes and contributions, in obtaining the necessary funds for the hospital.

[illegible] objection is a shift toward the hospital standing on its own finances fully. Campbell explained with this modification the patients will have more responsibility in providing the necessary funds for operations, with less reliance on tax sources to fund debt retirement.

The people [illegible] will be asked to pay in the form of rate increases funds for maintenance, repair and replacement, new equipment, modifications and improvements, plant expansions and bad debts.

[illegible] said that since this policy will be a significant change, it will be phased in slowly. In other words, "rates must be reasonable, but [illegible] them, and still be reasonable," Campbell said, referring to comparative hospital costs in Texas.

"WHEN WE HAD the bond issue several years ago, the creation of the district said that the taxpayers would not be called on for anything but indigent care and bricks and mortar," Campbell said. "That's still going. All we're saying here is that they will be called on for indigent care, all right, but less for and maybe not any for bricks and mortar, once we get the new policy working."

He added "each time we expand, for awhile, they may have to fund the expenses during the interim period while they're getting started. But, once the facilities start operating properly the intent here will be to try to have it (the hospital) self funded."

Both boards also agreed to study details in proposing changes in the indigent care policy.

Campbell noted that because of inflation a change is necessary. The proposal includes modifying the levels of income at which a person is qualified for indigent care to be more consistent with the current cost of living in Midland.

ACCORDING TO the policy, it also will provide a schedule that would require no payment if incomes are below a certain level and establish a level of income above which regular charges would be made. For patients having incomes in between, a portion of regular charges would be made up to a maximum amount. The portion and the maximum would be determined by income level and family size.

In the board of directors meeting, the board was asked to consider a request by a former hospital employee to be heard on a personnel matter.

Ted Kerr, attorney for the hospital district, said since this particular matter not only affects the directors, but also the trustees and the administration, it would be advisable that a hearing committee be selected.

Kerr recommended that the committee hear all "facts or evidence" in the matter and report to the directors its recommendations.

It was agreed by the former employee and the directors to have a member from the trustees, administration and directors form the committee.

THE DIRECTORS selected Dr. Mast and Campbell suggested Richard Gibson to represent the trustees.

However, Ray Branson, MMH president, said he was not prepared to select anyone at this time, but he would submit a list.

Moreover, the employee said because of the circumstances he would like to have the opportunity for his attorney to see a list of those people from the hospital staff that would sit on the committee.

The preliminary hearing is tentatively set for sometime after Jan. 1, 1982.

In other board news, November's revenues of $1,752,439 were in excess of the budget by $170,450 and patient days exceeded the budget by 35 days.

Total operating expenses exceeded the budget by $134,873 for November with much of this excess due to salaries and consultant fees exceeding the budget, according to Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance. He explained the salary increases were due to overtime pay because of the shortage of staff.

Bell elected 1982 president of Chamber of Commerce

Ms. [illegible] under a technical customs charge and is being held [illegible] an obvious attempt by the government to extort information [illegible] on an acquaintance who the government wants [illegible] told The Associated Press.

Ms. Barnes said during a court appearance Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Alex H. McGlinchey that she was en route from London to Austin, Texas, to visit relatives when she was arrested at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Monday night.

The complaint alleges Ms. Barnes gave a false currency declaration when she said she was not carrying more than $5,000. Customs agents said they found $5,050 when they examined her briefcase.

David Greenleaf, the district Customs director, said his office had been tipped by another federal agency of Ms. Barnes' probable arrival.

However, he told the Dallas Times Herald that agents did not realize who she was until after she was detained for allegedly making a false currency declaration.

Luke Thompson, a former Green Beret who said he was hired by Wilson to set up a Libyan commando school, told the Times Herald Ms. Barnes was an employee and close associate of Wilson when he first met her in Washington.

Thompson told the newspaper in a telephone interview from Honolulu that later he met Ms. Barnes again in London where she relayed instructions from Wilson.

E. Lawrence Barcella, the federal prosecutor directing the grand jury investigation, told the Times Herald he would not discuss the Wilson and Terpil investigation except to say other aspects of it also are centered in Texas.

One source close to the investigation told the newspaper that when Ms. Barnes was detained by customs officials she was carrying "documentation" pertaining to a Swiss bank account with a $250,000 balance.

Cold front sweeps out Indian summer

Indian summer conditions vanished under the onslaught of a cold front which swept through the Permian Basin Tuesday.

The afternoon high reached only 59 degrees while the mercury dipped to a low of 20 this morning. Those figures compare with the alltime record extremes for the date 79 in 1933 and 13 in 1953.

Continued cold weather is expected tonight, with a low in the lower 20s expected, while Thursday's high should be only in the mid 40s under cloudy skies.

The forecast for Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and the holiday weekend calls for mostly cloudy skies and cool to cold temperatures, according to the National Weather Service.

Police investigate death of Lubbock man

ODESSA — Police here are investigating the death of an unidentified man whose body was discovered in a motel room late Tuesday morning.

Officers said they were called to the Sand & Sage Motel on West Second Street about 11:30 a.m. and found the middle-aged white man dead of an apparent blow to the throat.

He had registered the night before and given a Lubbock address which police have not yet been able to confirm. Justice of the Peace Jimmie Harris has ordered an autopsy.

High winds cause power shortages

High winds were the cause of numerous power shortages that affected some 4,000 Texas Electric Service Co. customers in Midland Tuesday, according to Western Division Customer Service Manager Jack Hilliard.

"Mainly those affected were on (FM) 868, around the Midkiff and Bluebird Lane areas," Hillard said. "We had about 4,000 customers off at one time or another with nobody off for more than 15 minutes."

Hilliard said the high winds affected two feeders, which are lines coming out of a substation. The winds caused the neutral line to slap against the primary line which carries the current, resulting in a "trip", or an instantaneous blackout, he said.

"What happens (when a trip occurs) is there is a time delay of about a minute and then the breakers look down the wire and if everything is OK, it (the electricity) will go back on automatically," Hilliard explained. "If there is a fault, it will trip off and we'll have to turn it back on manually.

"We (the company) actually tripped it ourselves in some instances," Hilliard said. "We didn't want our people up there on the poles with the neutral and the live wire slapping against each other so we tripped it ourselves."

When the electricity was turned off manually the electricians were able to work on the poles without being endangered by live wires in the wind.

Power plant resists independent audit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas and Electric Co. has urged the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to adopt its proposal and spurn Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s plan to audit the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant.

The mammoth utility on Tuesday defended its independent auditing procedure established with consultant Robert L. Cloud Associates, saying it is widely accepted in the industry and federal government.

Following discovery this fall of design flaws that could make Diablo Canyon unsafe in an earthquake, PG&E proposed an extensive audit by three outside experts.

Brown has urged the NRC to halt the utility's audit and proposed, instead, nine firms with no links to PG&E or the commission for a "truly independent audit."

In a letter to NRC chairman Nunzio Palladino, PG&E senior vice president and general counsel Malcom H. Furbush urged the commission to adopt the utility's auditing plan, not the governor's.

Furbish called Brown's suggestion "part of the governor's longstanding game plan to prevent, if possible, and delay as long as possible, in any event, the operation of Diablo Canyon."

The $2.3 billion plant near San Luis Obispo, located three miles from an underwater earthquake fault, won a license for fuel loading in September, but the discovery of design flaws halted the work six days later. The license subsequently was suspended pending an investigation.

Water board awards city limited effluent permit

[illegible] means to dispose of effluent.

"I think this [illegible] to be commended for it," Welch said.

Suessle said that irrigation would not solve the [illegible] problems.

"If the [illegible] be nature," he asked Welch, "is that [illegible] in the public interest to let it happen?"

"It is not," countered Welch. "You should not have ever let that [illegible] emergency sewage situation happen."

Again Suessle asked Welch if it would be in the "public interest" to let the dike break and flood the draw and the city with its waste water.

"It is [illegible] if you do your job [illegible]," Welch said.

WELCH AGREED with the city attorney that the city has "an emergency" situation.

Midland County farmer Alan Spinks and Greenwood Superintendent Jim Warlick were critical of the city's plans for the draw.

Warlick, who cited the booming growth of the Greenwood area, said the flow of the effluent would damage the underground water.

"We're having greater problems than Midland ever thought of having," Warlick said.

Spinks said the draw, which is "like a sponge," would allow for the contamination of the underground water if effluent is pumped down it.

After considering much of testimony, Water Commissioner Lee B.M. Biggart was not favorably moved by the city's measures to dispose of effluent.

"I'M SIMPLY unimpressed with the city's efforts to get more irrigation land," Biggart said. "You're not trying to get rid of this water...even on small tracts."

Among others testifying were Lowe and Assistant City Manager Fred Poe, who said this fall he had made some effort to locate additional agricultural land to irrigate. Though present at the hearings, Mayor G. Thane Akins was not called to testify.

"Clearly," said Biggart, "you're going to have to get some land. I don't really see any urgency on your side of the negotiations" with farmers to bring more land under irrigation.

Late Tuesday morning, just before the commission gave its order, Lowe told the commission that 25 mph winds were whipping water over the dikes.

"It's just a question of how long the dike will stay together."

Water Commissioner Dorsey B. Hardeman, who didn't comment, said he had friends on both sides of the issue.

"It doesn't sound seem like you're trying to stay up with this deal (rising effluent), much less stay ahead of it," McDonald said.

"I, as a commissioner, want to see positive action on the part of Midland to acquire land" to dispose of the effluent and, presumably, not to discharge the treated waste water down Midland Draw. "The city of Midland is a good city and has a lot of power behind it."

Shark may have killed missing surfer

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — A great white shark up to 20 feet long and weighing as much as two tons may have killed a missing surfer, say marine experts who examined a bloodstained surfboard that had an 18-inch chunk bitten off.

Toothmarks in the board indicated the attack was definitely the work of an enormous great white, Dan Miller of the state Department of Fish and Game said Tuesday. The creature might be the largest great white ever recorded on the West Coast, he said.

Surfer Lewis Boren, 25, was listed as missing while blood on his board was analyzed to determine whether it's his, the Monterey County Sheriff's Department said. Last seen Saturday while surfing just north of Pebble Beach, Boren was reported missing when he failed to show up for work Monday. His board and the fragment washed ashore Sunday.

Child abuser gets five years probation

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A confessed child abuser who underwent sterilization in hopes of avoiding prison has been sentenced to five years probation by the judge who suggested sterilization.

Solano Superior Court Judge William Jensen granted probation Tuesday to Melinda Middleton, 20, who pleaded guilty in January to charges of felony child neglect in the death of her 5-month-old daughter, Misty.

Her husband, Victor Middleton, 23, pleaded guilty to one count of misdemeanor child abuse and was placed on probation.

The baby died of neck injuries. After the infant's death, investigators discovered that the couple's 2-year-old son, Anthony, also showed signs of abuse.

The judge indicated at the time that he might give probation to the woman, who was five months pregnant at the time, if she would get an abortion. Later, he ruled she was too close to term for such surgery.

However, Jensen suggested that if Mrs. Middleton underwent sterilization after the birth of her child, he would consider probation rather than a possible four-year jail sentence.

Mrs. Middleton, who gave up her baby for adoption, was sterilized in November.

Escaping the nightmare of military-controlled Poland

By KEN HUDSON
Copley News Service

It was a young Polish soldier, possibly 18 or 19, who told Dennis Bielecki, 31, that he would shoot him if he tried to pass into a military-controlled square in Warsaw last week.

Several times, the uniformed guard armed with a "big gun with a knife on the end of it," repeated the warning that Bielecki would be shot if he went beyond.

"You wouldn't shoot your brother, would you?" asked Bielecki. The soldier stared at him for a few moments and then waved him through.

Bielecki adjusted his shoulder bag, grasped his two suitcases nearly filled with medical books, and trudged on to a hotel where he would spend about eight hours before continuing his trip to freedom.

That was the first of several times during the next 24 hours that the American medical student would taste real fear during his escape from the military takeover of his ancestral homeland.

It had started in Krakow the night before, when the student left the Nicholas Copernicus (Medical) Academy.

Earlier, planning a Christmas visit home to San Diego, he had gone to the police in Krakow to get a visa for the trip.

"The lady took me by the hand and said the visa was good until the 17th — she had extended it by nearly a week, against the rules.

"She told me to use it as soon as possible," he said. "She must have known something was going to happen, but I didn't get the message then."

In the turmoil of Poland's independent Solidarity union battle with the communist government, it was impossible to know for sure what was happening — but it was apparent later to Bielecki that she was trying to give him a message, before the military takeover, he said.

Giving the visa to him earlier than planned could have caused her great trouble, he added.

Polish medical students were being taken into the military whether they wanted to be or not.

His friends and professors in the medical community in Krakow urged him to leave and to take his student records, personal belongings, lecture tapes and notes, everything.

He left on Tuesday — two days after the takeover — carrying his bags three miles to the railroad station because there was no public transportation available.

"I would walk a really short distance and stop and put my bags down. They weigh about 160 pounds. So I would walk a little way, put them down and then pick them up and go on.

"I started at 8 o'clock to catch the train at midnight," he said during an interview at his parents' comfortable condominium.

In Warsaw, a taxi took him to the railroad station. He had a ticket on Pan American, but flights into Poland had already stopped under the military takeover.

Aboard the train that would take him out of Poland through Soviet-controlled East Germany and to Berlin were a group of journalists, some of them American, being recalled from the troubled nation.

On the train, he discovered that the only way to stay was to have a berth space. He didn't have one. He bribed the conductor and there was no attempt to remove him.

A normal seven-hour trip to Berlin turned into 14 hours, and there were frequent checks of passports, visas, exit documents and other permits.

"We were petrified. We didn't know what was going to happen when they checked our passports and documents," he said.

He had the feeling that it was an exodus — a flight away from a troubled land — a Warsaw variation of Howard K. Smith's 1942 book "Last Train From Berlin."

"I felt I had escaped when we went from East Berlin to West Berlin," Bielecki said.

Poland is not the Poland of even 1½ years ago — when he began his medical studies in Krakow.

The people are grim "and they are starving."

There is little to eat except onions and potatoes. Everything else is rationed. There is no social life and if three or more people get together it can be considered an unlawful gathering and all could be arrested.

"That was one of the jokes in the medical group — if you have to stand in line to get something to eat, they can arrest you for being at an unlawful gathering," he said.

Graffiti is more bold than ever "and some of it is pretty good," he added.

The government-controlled television and radio is the No. 1 target in most of the graffiti because of the lies, and the second is the police, he said.

Freedom of speech is nearly a thing of the past in a land that has traditionally guarded that freedom, he said. The black market also is going in full swing.

Bielecki's escape to freedom has also put him in a serious educational situation, and he is not sure just how he is going to solve it.

He cannot go back to Poland as long as martial law exists. Next month, he will attend a special seminar on psychiatric and forensic medicine at George Washington University for a month.

His medical documentation from Krakow rates him as an excellent student and indicates he is well along the road to a specialty in cardiovascular surgery, he explained.

But he adds that he still has five major medical study areas to complete — but he does not know how or where he will go.

Because of his outstanding qualifications in certain areas, he was allowed to develop an individual sequence of studies that is not followed in this country.

"I'm not out for the money — I've always wanted to be a physician — because I want to teach cardiovascular and anatomical surgery, but as it stands right now, after the clinic at George Washington University, I'm out of an education," he said.

Pandas have got a new lease on life

Agence France-Presse

PEKING- The cuddly black and white Chinese panda, threatened with extinction in the 1970s, has gotten a new lease on life, it was reported here Tuesday.

China's panda population, which had slumped dramatically, has now stabalized, the official New China News Agency reported, mainly because of the discovery of a substitute for the favorite food — the arrow bamboo whose disappearance in 1975-76 led to the deaths of more than 150 pandas.

there are about 1,000 pandas living wild in the south and center of China as well as about 60 living in captivity.

Chinese scientists discovered a new type of bamboo that tickled the pandas' palate as well as a type of wheat that could replace bamboo, according to the report.

Other steps that have halted the decline of the panda are better medical care in captivity, as well as artificial insemination. A total of 26 pandas have been born in Chinese zoos since 1963, six of them after aritficial insemination.

Christmas cards: enough to drive you to drink

By FRANK RHOADES
Copley News Service

Go home from one of the 5 o'clock holiday cocktail parties and all you want to do is gulp the chow and hit the Sealy.

I walked in at 7:30 and she was sitting at the dining room table with a ballpoint pen in her hand.

I said: "Why isn't dinner ready?"

She said: "Because I get no help addressing the Christmas cards. Go on to your chair and start snoring."

I noticed a sheet of the new 20-cent postage stamps on the table beside her. Just think about this: Five of those things cost a dollar.

I said: "I hope to gosh you're not sending 150 Christmas cards again this year.'

To hear this dear girl talk, you'd think she was Dale Carnegie. She said: "This year it's 175. We have made 25 new friends this year, largely through me."

I was up-tight, acid washing over the ulcer.

I said: "People who mob up to make me spend $35 for postage stamps are not friends. They are enemies!"

She looked at me over the rim of her glasses. That's the signal she thinks I am ridiculous. If not an outright fool.

I had a good idea and I led her right into it. I said: "How many of the 175 will send us Christmas cards?"

She turned on the freezer. No answer.

I said: "Why don't you wait and send New Year's cards to those who did send us Christmas cards?

Still no answer.

I said: "Tell you what I'll do. I'll draw you a picture of the diaper kid who represents the new year. I know a guy who owns a Xerox machine. He'll run off on postal cards the number you want. He'll do it free and you'll have the whole thing for 13 cents apiece."

She pretended she wasn't listening. Nothing gets to a guy like the old silent treatment. I've had it three days at one stretch.

I looked at some of the Christmas cards that had arrived that day.

The first was from some of those long-time-no-see people who delight in reminding you that there's a lot of mileage on you.

Their card said: "The last time the four of us were together, we were listening to Wayne Newton singing 'Blue Roses for a Blue Lady.'"

That was 15 years ago. Great stuff, wouldn't you say, to bring up here in the happy season?

The next card was signed Homer and Edna. No last name. I suppose they want you to stay up all night trying to figure out who are Homer and Edna. Not me!

The third card was the type that makes me resent the sender. His name isn't printed on it and his handwriting is totally illegible. I threw the card away after the first three words of his long message.

They said: "Framztee motlylpe ptaqm."

Then there was a card from my old pal John Monks in Beverly Hills. For many years he was district sales manager here for Lufthansa airlines. He wrote: "May your new year be rich and rewarding."

How's that for bitter, when you're out $35 for postage stamps?

I needed something to change my attitude. The only thing in the house was a bottle of rum.

I said: "Do we have any pineapple juice?"

She said: "I'm going to tell you that after Jan. 1, when the new drunken driving law goes into effect, all the drinking we do is going to be done here at home. I'm not going to jail for 48 hours because I had wine with dinner."

I thought: "If we both could be locked up somewhere for 48 weeks, maybe I could save what money I've got." But I didn't say it; I went back to looking at the Christmas cards.

I soon found the inevitable: The endless letter that is headed "From Our Family to Your Family at This Glorious Time of the Year."

These things are month-by-month accounts of things that happened all during the year in the families of retired guys who are fascinated by their own writings.

I read briefly and said: "I'm glad I didn't go through life without this bit of vital information."

The old guy had written: "In February, our oldest grandson, Gregory, bought a ukulele."

She said: "That letter is from the nice couple who lived next door to us in the 1960s. They merely felt sorry for you the night you drove through their flower beds."

She's always bringing up old stuff. I skipped the pineapple juice. I took a slug of the rum from the bottle and went to bed.

Cadet dies, seven others injured in training ship fire

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

BUZZARDS BAY, Mass. (AP) — Merchant Marine officials were investigating a smoky fire that killed one Massachusetts Maritime Academy cadet and injured seven other people aboard a docked training ship.

Academy Cmdr. Thomas Lee said ship engineers were changing oil strainers in the engine compartment during routine ship maintenance Tuesday afternoon when a valve apparently broke.

"Hot oil burst out, hit the casing and that's apparently what started the fire" aboard the ship, which recently underwent $13.5 million in repairs, Lee said.

About 45 cadets were aboard the 524-foot vessel, named the Bay State, when the blaze broke out. The fire did no visible damage to the ship's exterior, but sent choking smoke pouring through its midsection.

The dead cadet, found trapped in an upper engine compartment, was burned beyond recognition, school officials said. His name was being withheld until authorities used dental charts to make a positive identification.

"This is a very sad day in the history of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy," said school president John F. Aylmer. He said it was the first such incident in memory at the 90-year-old school.

Aylmer said the investigation would center on the cause of the blaze and the extent of the damage. He declined to estimate the cost of the repairs.

Rick Gurnon, a member of the rescue team, said rescuers tried to use carbon dioxide to put out several blazes discovered aboard the ship, adding: "Once the fire started going, there were lots of small ones to put out."

He and other searchers went beneath decks to look for a fellow cadet feared still aboard. "We found him," he said, "but it was too late."

The ship had just returned to its base on the western end of Cape Cod Saturday morning after a multimillion-dollar renovation in Norfolk, Va. It was being readied for its annual winter training cruise Jan. 8.

The blaze prompted a general alarm to be sounded throughout surrounding Cape Cod communities. An estimated 200 firemen helped bring the blaze under control in about two hours.

Two instructors and five cadets — including one woman — who were aboard the ship when the fire broke out were brought to area hospitals for treatment of smoke inhalation, Aylmer said.

Treatment of Filipinos at ports of entry is 'intolerable situation'

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government today formally protested alleged mistreatment of Filipinos at U.S. ports of entry and asked the State Department to remedy this "intolerable situation."

In a strongly worded diplomatic note read to reporters, Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo said that while he believed the alleged rudeness by U.S. Customs and Immigration officials was not part of official U.S. policy, it has "the same practical effect."

He made the protest more than a week after the National Assembly asked for it in a resolution saying the continuing incidence of maltreatment of Filipinos threatens Philippine-U.S. relations.

Asked to comment, U.S. Embassy spokesman John Foster said, "We take this matter very seriously and have already brought it to the attention of Washington officls, who are looking into it very carefully."

In his protest, Romuloh charged that in many instances Filipinos, including government officials and diplomats, were regarded "ipso facto as undesirables and subjected to indignities such as...stripping them naked, detaining them for several hours and making offensive remarks which no self-respecting individual can accept."

Have a safe holiday!

"Operation Motorcide," the Texas Department of Public Safety's all-out effort to reduce traffic deaths during holiday periods, will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday for the Christmas, 1981, holiday. Already the odds are against motorists for this year's holiday travel, DPS officials say.

The department's unpleasant prediction is that 51 persons will lose their lives on the state's streets and highways before the death count ends at midnight Sunday.

Lt. Jimmie Rhoads with the DPS in Midland noted earlier this week that 4,424 people were killed in traffic accidents in all of 1980, a staggering figure. Even more alarming is the fact that, according to Lt. Rhoads, traffic death figures are running 5 percent above the 1980 figures this year.

If the 5 percent increase in traffic deaths holds true through the 54 hours of "Operation Motorcide," that means more people than live in the West Texas community of Crane will lose their lives in traffic accidents — more than 4,600 people!

Perhaps saddest of all is the fact that many of those highway deaths could be prevented, if motorists would obey a few simple rules like not drinking until they reach their destination, taking frequent rest stops, keeping their speed within or below legal limits and obeying highway signs.

This year the DPS in particular is stressing the use of seatbelts, according to Lt. Rhoads, who noted statistics reveal that only 2 percent of motorists use their belts or harness straps. That's sad because the devices do save lives.

"It won't prevent the accident as such," Lt. Rhoads said, "but it will help prevent injuries or death."

This season as motorists travel to their Christmas destinations, they should wear their seat belts, refrain from drinking and obey the rules of the road. Those simple steps will make it a safer, more enjoyable holiday for us all.

A letter to Santa Claus

In its weekly newsletter to members, St. Mark's United Methodist Church of Midland recently printed an item from its pastor, the Rev. William D. McReynolds.

We thought the item was appropriate for republication at this time of year for the enjoyment of readers. The item follows:

"Do you ever read the letters to Santa Claus? I do and for the most part enjoy the children's letters. Here is one that many of us might write.

Dear Santa,

It has been a long, long time since I have written you.

I have moved from the old home on Happy Street to a house of loneliness and doubt, which stands at the end of Disillusion Avenue.

All of the gloriously bright little baubles that I had in years gone by are now either broken or tarnished and tear-stained.

Please bring me a few of those precious toys that I once had, the shining bubbles of joy, the tinkling bells of cheer that rang in my voice, the candles of faith that shone in my eyes, the frankincense and myrrh of steadfast hope that strengthened my soul and the lode star of universal love that gleamed in my heart.

In the years past I now realize I did not appreciate those priceless treasures or care for them as I should have, but I repent my carelessness and humbly ask you to remember me with another supply this Christmas.

I will hang my enpty heart by the chimney Santa, and please, this is what I want:

Give me a large basket of forgiveness with which to cover up all bitterness and useless brooding, a larger box of forgiveness for those who robbed me of laughter and filled my eyes with tears. Leave me enough of the cement of hope to mend the shattered fragments of joy; tuck in a little song of cheer and please, Santa, leave quite a lot of plain old-fashioned faith, understanding, unselfishness and tolerance that I can share freely with my neighbors."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 23, the 357th day of 1981. There are eight days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 23, 1948, Japan's former Premier Hideki Tojo and six other Japanese World War II leaders were executed in Tokyo.

On this date:

In 1920, the Government of Ireland Act was passed in Britain, mandating separate parliaments for Northern and southern Ireland.

In 1972, Nicaraguan officials reported 10,000 people killed in an earthquake in Managua.

And in 1975, the Central Intelligence Agency chief in Athens, Richard Welch, was killed by gunmen outside his residence.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Cuba, United States complain about the same countries

WASHINGTON — Cuba and the United States seem to share their hemispheric hit list, the list of governments they both want to topple.

Sound strange?

William Giandoni

It wouldn't if you had sat in on many of the hearings in the House of Representatives and the Senate that are concerned with Latin America.

At the moment, most of the discussion has to do with the five Central American countries — Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica and Nicaragua. But in earlier years congressional attention was concentrated on Chile, Argentina, Brazil and others, which also were Cuban targets.

At the moment, the loudest voices, the most persistent questions, the sharpest judgments are those levelled against the little country that is bearing the brunt of the Marxist ideological and guerrilla onslaught in Central America, El Salvador.

Next lower in intensity is the criticism directed against Guatemala, a nation that, as Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders reminded his inquisitors in the Senate, has been fighting Marxist insurgents for over 25 years now.

Honduras, where presidential elections in late November were won by the first civilian since Dr. Ramon Villeda Morales in 1957, is being set up as a future target, presumably because the Communists, who number only 650 according to authoritative estimates, were not on the ballot as such.

Costa Rica, widely acclaimed as the only real democracy in Central America, has escaped unfavorable comment so far, at least from the liberals. The fact that Costa Rica was the principal conduit through which Cuban arms for the Marxist-led Sandinistas flowed during the guerrilla campaign in Nicaragua is a point that would interest conservatives, but they have not made much of it.

It is only a slight exaggeration to say that Nicaragua has been mentioned unfavorably only by Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative Republican from North Carolina who is chairman of the Senate Western Hemisphere Affairs subcommittee.

The rest of the senators and representatives who have spoken out recently on Latin America in Congress seem either not to mention the Nicaraguan Marxist government or to be trying to apologize for its militarization.

The situation is such that Undersecretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle, aggravated by persistent senatorial questioning about human rights violations in El Salvador, inquired of Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., whether he was also concerned about the suppression of freedom in Nicaragua, about closures of the independent newspaper La Prensa, about the Sandinista military buildup, and the like.

As if in reply, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., went on to say that, if he were Cuban defense minister and heard talk of U.S. contingency planning for military action against Cuba, he would feel justified in ordering a military buildup.

In the lower house, Rep. Michael Barnes' Inter-American Affairs subcommittee makes most of the headlines, in Latin America, at least.

Barnes, a Maryland Democrat, professes certain personal regard for Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of the civilian-military junta in El Salvador, but nevertheless insists that the United States should restrict arms and munitions shipments and other military aid that the Salvadoran government needs to withstand the onslaught of the Marxist guerrillas.

Blunter is Rep. Gerry E. Studds, a Massachusetts Democrat and member of Barnes' subcommittee. Studds is frank in his condemnation of Guatemala, which he terms a gross violator of human rights, and insists that U.S. assistance of any sort for Guatemala is illegal.

But not only the countries that can be alleged to violate human rights find their requests meet opposition in the U.S. Congress.

Venezuela, one of South America's two democracies, for example, has asked for the right to buy two dozen supersonic F16 fighter planes.

Sen. Pell objects to that, arguing that oil-rich Venezuela doesn't need such sophisticated weaponry, that if the United States were to make the sale, some years hence, it would escalate the arms race in the Caribbean.

The senator from Rhode Island refuses to be swayed by reminders that it was the Soviet Union, not the United States, that first introduced supersonic military aircraft into the Caribbean area.

What is more, the MiGs that Cuba is currently receiving from the Soviets are said to be a match for the F16s that Venezuela hopes to receive in 1985.

In brief, the senators and representatives who speak out on Latin America are mostly those whose criticisms seem directed at the countries Cuba has targeted.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fishy grant transactions raise suspicions

WASHINGTON — Officials with access to the federal cash register have a suspicious habit of going on a last-minute spending spree when they expect the cash flow to be cut off.

Jack Anderson

The directors of the Community Services Administration, for example, expected to be put out of business by the incoming Republicans last January. So the agency's spending arm, the Office of Economic Development, suddenly began dispensing government largesse with a fine bureaucratic hand — an open hand, that is.

The endangered agency awarded $41.4 million in grants and other expenditures during the entire 1980 fiscal year. In contrast, a startling $18.4 million was handed out during the last two days before the Reagan administration came to power. That was 44 percent of all the grants the agency distributed the year before.

One series of transactions was particularly suspicious. On Jan. 19, one day before the new administration took over, a $400,000 grant was awarded to the Harlem Commonwealth Council.

Two weeks earlier, the associate director, Gerrold Mukai, had authorized the Harlem Commonwealth Council to invest $500,000 in an outfit called the East Coast Development Corp. This was supposed to be used to run a joint venture with another group called the East Los Angeles Community Union.

Mukai's connection to the Los Angeles organization has raised eyebrows at the Justice Department. Government auditors have referred the case to the Justice Department for possible criminal investigation.

The case is a little complicated — as such matters often get — but the upshot is that the East Los Angeles Community Union wound up with $5.7 million in grants from the government agency in the nine days before President Reagan was inaugurated.

Then in April, less than three months after Mukai left his government post, a subsidiary of the Los Angeles group loaned $50,000 to Professional Services Group Inc. — of which Mukai is president and a 50 percent stockholder.

That's not all. The subsidiary of the outfit that had gotten the last-minute grants from Mukai's federal agency purchased $30,500 worth of equipment in March and leased it to Mukai's company and another consulting firm, Minority Enterprise Service Associates (MESA).

An official of the Los Angeles group insisted that both arrangements were subsequently canceled and that his organization had nothing to do with Mukai. He did note that his group has invested $100,000 in MESA but insisted that Mukai "has nothing to do with the company."

Interestingly, however, the minority firm's Utah office says Mukai is still on its board of directors, and Mukai's consulting firm in Reston, Va., still identifies itself on the phone as "PSGI-MESA," as in Professional Services Group Inc.-Minority Enterprise Service Associates Inc. — the two firms with which Mukai has been associated since leaving the taxpayers' payroll.

There's yet another peculiar, eleventh-hour transaction that occured last January. It involved Mukai and his boss, the head of the Community Service Administration, Richard Rios.

On Jan. 19, the day before the Reagan administration took over, Mukai signed a $348,300 grant to the San Jose Development Corp. As it happens, that was just three days after the San Jose group filed its articles of incorporation.

In February, Rios offered the services of his newly founded consulting firm to the San Jose group and received a one-month contract for $3,559. He has since became a high-level bureaucrat in the California state government.

Rios told my office the deal was "all above-board" and had been approved by CSA legal advisers because the work did not involve contact with the federal government.

Footnote: My associate Tony Capaccio twice offered Mukai the opportunity to tell his side of the story. Both times he said "I have no comment," and hung up.

VIENNA WALTZ: To most Americans, Austria is a country of wonderful skiing gemutlichkeit and Strauss waltzes. But to the State Department, Austria's determined neutrality in the East-West conflict is a matter of grave concern, especially where Israeli-Palestinian relations are concerned.

The Austrian regime of Chancellor Bruno Kreisky shocked Foggy Bottom in 1980 by granting full diplomatic recognition of Yassir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

But relations between the Palestinians and the Austrians have cooled dramatically in recent weeks, thanks to apparent PLO involvement in attacks on Austrian citizens. These include the assassination of Heinz Nittel, who was president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, and the bombing of a Jewish synagogue in Vienna. The Israeli Embassy in Vienna was also the target of a bombing attack.

What really outraged Kreisky, though, was the apprehension of two Palestinians at the Vienna airport last summer. They were caught trying to smuggle rifles, submachineguns and ammunition into the country. The Palestinian official representative, Ghazi Hussein, had met the two PLO terrorists at the airport and had tried to get them through customs with his diplomatic passport.

That was too much for Kreisky — especially after he learned that the PLO had him on its hit list. He kicked the PLO representative out. Recently, Arafat sent a letter of apology to Kreisky. But so far, the Austrian chancellor has refused to let the PLO replace its expelled envoy.

WHO'S NEWS?: Whistleblowers in the Housing and Urban Development Department may find that they're whistling in Dixie. At a staff briefing recently, Secretary Sam Pierce was asked about people who may want to blow the whistle on misbehavior or incompetence. "Whistleblowers," said Pierce. "I'm not familiar with the term. You mean squealers?"

ART BUCHWALD

Alligator's decline marks end of an era!

The alligator, once the symbol of good breeding, status, and affluence, is dead. It has been laughed away in recent "preppie" satires, by young people who have no respect for tradition or the establishment which has made this country what it is today.

Art Buchwald

When I was a boy, the one thing I always dreamed of was wearing an alligator on my tennis shirt. In those days you couldn't just go into a store and buy one — you had to be born to it.

The best and brightest wore alligators. It was an unspoken badge of honor reserved for the finest families in America.

The shirts, imported from France, could only be found in the most exclusive stores in the United States, and you had to produce references from three people who owned alligators on their shirts before the salesman was permitted to sell you one.

When you saw a man with an alligator on the left side of his chest (women were forbidden to wear them before World War II), you knew he was somebody. He walked with assurance, ignoring the stares of lesser mortals. On the tennis court he always got his first serve in; his backhand was impeccable. He hit his forehand and ground strokes with the confidence of a person who knew who he was, and what his class stood for.

He was considered by parents as the most eligible catch for their daughter. A young man entitled to wear an alligator would be a winner all his life — and if he wasn't, he would always have a trust fund from his grandfather to get him through the tough times.

Only those educated in our finest prep schools and private colleges dared wear the revered animal.

Those of us who came from the other side of the tracks knew no matter how much wealth we accumulated, or how much fame we achieved, the alligator would never be ours.

This never stopped me from having fantasies about it. I dreamed someday that I would be walking across the campus at the University of Southern California, and some tanned fraternity man, whose father had made it in real estate, would tap me on the shoulder, hand me a green alligator and whisper, "You are now one of us."

It never happened, of course, because in those days people had standards.

No one knows exactly when the symbol of the alligator went downhill. Some blame the French who got greedy and started making more alligator shirts than there were people worthy of wearing them. Others say it came about when the Izod company decided to make them for women.

Still others maintain it happened when the better country clubs relaxed the rules and allowed people to play tennis and golf without wearing an alligator on their shirts.

But one cannot ignore the anti-Vietnam war protests when the affluent youths turned against their parents and replaced the alligator with a clenched fist.

When the elite found out that anyone could buy an alligator tennis shirt, they wanted nothing more to do with the symbol.

Whatever the reason, the alligator is now being sold not only on tennis shirts, but nightgowns, baby blankets, underwear and T-shirts. It is being worn by students who go to community colleges, and even kids who didn't finish high school.

The final blow for the alligator came this year, when anyone at an Ivy League college wearing one was hooted with derision and treated with scorn by his peers.

It's the end of an era for America. So far, the people who were able to prove who they were by the animal they wore have no symbol to replace the alligator. They've lost their identity and, for many, their raison d'etre.

For those of us who dreamed that someday we would play tennis in an alligator shirt, the fantasy has turned to ashes. And with good reason. Sears Roebuck is holding a sale on Alligator Jockey shorts next week.

A federal court Tuesday stripped American citizenship from ex-Nazi Otto von Bolschwing, who served as an advisor to Adolf Eichmann, but allowed the former SS captain to remain in the United States. Von Bolschwing is shown in a Sacramento convelescent home with his lawyer.

Former Nazi loses citizenship, but will stay in U.S.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A federal court on Tuesday stripped U.S. citizenship from a former Nazi SS captain who served as an adviser to Adolf Eichmann, but the court allowed him to stay in the United States because he is ailing.

U.S. District Court Judge Milton Schwartz ordered Otto von Bolschwing, 72, to surrender his naturalization papers, ruling that he lied to authorities when he obtained U.S. citizenship in 1959 in New York.

Federal agents claimed von Bolschwing "devised ways of dealing with the Jews of Europe, including methods of persecution" when he worked as Eichmann's assistant.

But Schwartz, approving an agreement worked out by the defense and federal prosecutors, allowed von Bolschwing to stay in this country, noting that the elderly nursing home patient suffers from an incurable "progressive neurological condition."

In the agreement, von Bolschwing admitted he had been a Nazi Party member, and an officer in the SS and Nazi intelligence service. But he has also claimed he worked for American intelligence during and after World War II, a claim which went unanswered by the government.

Von Bolschwing, who currently receives medical care in a suburban Sacramento nursing home, was not present in court when Schwartz issued the ruling. But his attorney, Arthur Ruthenbeck, said von Bolschwing had seen it.

"We went over it line by line," Ruthenbeck said, "and we discussed each line."

The agreement, which says von Bolschwing "persecuted innocent people in the 1930s and 1940s," also calls for annual medical examinations of von Bolschwing and, if his condition improves, "the government's options remain open" to prosecute again.

But both Ruthenbeck and Rodney Smith of the federal Office of Special Investigations, the official U.S. Nazi-hunting agency, acknowledged that von Bolschwing's health was unlikely to improve.

Have a safe holiday!

"Operation Motorcide," the Texas Department of Public Safety's all-out effort to reduce traffic deaths during holiday periods, will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday for the Christmas, 1981, holiday. Already the odds are against motorists for this year's holiday travel, DPS officials say.

The department's unpleasant prediction is that 51 persons will lose their lives on the state's streets and highways before the death count ends at midnight Sunday.

Lt. Jimmie Rhoads with the DPS in Midland noted earlier this week that 4,424 people were killed in traffic accidents in all of 1980, a staggering figure. Even more alarming is the fact that, according to Lt. Rhoads, traffic death figures are running 5 percent above the 1980 figures this year.

If the 5 percent increase in traffic deaths holds true through the 54 hours of "Operation Motorcide," that means more people than live in the West Texas community of Crane will lose their lives in traffic accidents — more than 4,600 people!

Perhaps saddest of all is the fact that many of those highway deaths could be prevented, if motorists would obey a few simple rules like not drinking until they reach their destination, taking frequent rest stops, keeping their speed within or below legal limits and obeying highway signs.

This year the DPS in particular is stressing the use of seatbelts, according to Lt. Rhoads, who noted statistics reveal that only 2 percent of motorists use their belts or harness straps. That's sad because the devices do save lives.

"It won't prevent the accident as such," Lt. Rhoads said, "but it will help prevent injuries or death."

This season as motorists travel to their Christmas destinations, they should wear their seat belts, refrain from drinking and obey the rules of the road. Those simple steps will make it a safer, more enjoyable holiday for us all.

A letter to Santa Claus

In its weekly newsletter to members, St. Mark's United Methodist Church of Midland recently printed an item from its pastor, the Rev. William D. McReynolds.

We thought the item was appropriate for republication at this time of year for the enjoyment of readers. The item follows:

"Do you ever read the letters to Santa Claus? I do and for the most part enjoy the children's letters. Here is one that many of us might write.

Dear Santa,

It has been a long, long time since I have written you.

I have moved from the old home on Happy Street to a house of loneliness and doubt, which stands at the end of Disillusion Avenue.

All of the gloriously bright little baubles that I had in years gone by are now either broken or tarnished and tear-stained.

Please bring me a few of those precious toys that I once had, the shining bubbles of joy, the tinkling bells of cheer that rang in my voice, the candles of faith that shone in my eyes, the frankincense and myrrh of steadfast hope that strengthened my soul and the lode star of universal love that gleamed in my heart.

In the years past I now realize I did not appreciate those priceless treasures or care for them as I should have, but I repent my carelessness and humbly ask you to remember me with another supply this Christmas.

I will hang my enpty heart by the chimney Santa, and please, this is what I want:

Give me a large basket of forgiveness with which to cover up all bitterness and useless brooding, a larger box of forgiveness for those who robbed me of laughter and filled my eyes with tears. Leave me enough of the cement of hope to mend the shattered fragments of joy; tuck in a little song of cheer and please, Santa, leave quite a lot of plain old-fashioned faith, understanding, unselfishness and tolerance that I can share freely with my neighbors."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 23, the 357th day of 1981. There are eight days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 23, 1948, Japan's former Premier Hideki Tojo and six other Japanese World War II leaders were executed in Tokyo.

On this date:

In 1920, the Government of Ireland Act was passed in Britain, mandating separate parliaments for Northern and southern Ireland.

In 1972, Nicaraguan officials reported 10,000 people killed in an earthquake in Managua.

And in 1975, the Central Intelligence Agency chief in Athens, Richard Welch, was killed by gunmen outside his residence.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fishy grant transactions raise suspicions

WASHINGTON — Officials with access to the federal cash register have a suspicious habit of going on a last-minute spending spree when they expect the cash flow to be cut off.

Jack Anderson

The directors of the Community Services Administration, for example, expected to be put out of business by the incoming Republicans last January. So the agency's spending arm, the Office of Economic Development, suddenly began dispensing government largesse with a fine bureaucratic hand — an open hand, that is.

The endangered agency awarded $41.4 million in grants and other expenditures during the entire 1980 fiscal year. In contrast, a startling $18.4 million was handed out during the last two days before the Reagan administration came to power. That was 44 percent of all the grants the agency distributed the year before.

One series of transactions was particularly suspicious. On Jan. 19, one day before the new administration took over, a $400,000 grant was awarded to the Harlem Commonwealth Council.

Two weeks earlier, the associate director, Gerrold Mukai, had authorized the Harlem Commonwealth Council to invest $500,000 in an outfit called the East Coast Development Corp. This was supposed to be used to run a joint venture with another group called the East Los Angeles Community Union.

Mukai's connection to the Los Angeles organization has raised eyebrows at the Justice Department. Government auditors have referred the case to the Justice Department for possible criminal investigation.

The case is a little complicated — as such matters often get — but the upshot is that the East Los Angeles Community Union wound up with $5.7 million in grants from the government agency in the nine days before President Reagan was inaugurated.

Then in April, less than three months after Mukai left his government post, a subsidiary of the Los Angeles group loaned $50,000 to Professional Services Group Inc. — of which Mukai is president and a 50 percent stockholder.

That's not all. The subsidiary of the outfit that had gotten the last-minute grants from Mukai's federal agency purchased $30,500 worth of equipment in March and leased it to Mukai's company and another consulting firm, Minority Enterprise Service Associates (MESA).

An official of the Los Angeles group insisted that both arrangements were subsequently canceled and that his organization had nothing to do with Mukai. He did note that his group has invested $100,000 in MESA but insisted that Mukai "has nothing to do with the company."

Interestingly, however, the minority firm's Utah office says Mukai is still on its board of directors, and Mukai's consulting firm in Reston, Va., still identifies itself on the phone as "PSGI-MESA," as in Professional Services Group Inc.-Minority Enterprise Service Associates Inc. — the two firms with which Mukai has been associated since leaving the taxpayers' payroll.

There's yet another peculiar, eleventh-hour transaction that occured last January. It involved Mukai and his boss, the head of the Community Service Administration, Richard Rios.

On Jan. 19, the day before the Reagan administration took over, Mukai signed a $348,300 grant to the San Jose Development Corp. As it happens, that was just three days after the San Jose group filed its articles of incorporation.

In February, Rios offered the services of his newly founded consulting firm to the San Jose group and received a one-month contract for $3,559. He has since became a high-level bureaucrat in the California state government.

Rios told my office the deal was "all above-board" and had been approved by CSA legal advisers because the work did not involve contact with the federal government.

Footnote: My associate Tony Capaccio twice offered Mukai the opportunity to tell his side of the story. Both times he said "I have no comment," and hung up.

VIENNA WALTZ: To most Americans, Austria is a country of wonderful skiing gemutlichkeit and Strauss waltzes. But to the State Department, Austria's determined neutrality in the East-West conflict is a matter of grave concern, especially where Israeli-Palestinian relations are concerned.

The Austrian regime of Chancellor Bruno Kreisky shocked Foggy Bottom in 1980 by granting full diplomatic recognition of Yassir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

But relations between the Palestinians and the Austrians have cooled dramatically in recent weeks, thanks to apparent PLO involvement in attacks on Austrian citizens. These include the assassination of Heinz Nittel, who was president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, and the bombing of a Jewish synagogue in Vienna. The Israeli Embassy in Vienna was also the target of a bombing attack.

What really outraged Kreisky, though, was the apprehension of two Palestinians at the Vienna airport last summer. They were caught trying to smuggle rifles, submachineguns and ammunition into the country. The Palestinian official representative, Ghazi Hussein, had met the two PLO terrorists at the airport and had tried to get them through customs with his diplomatic passport.

That was too much for Kreisky — especially after he learned that the PLO had him on its hit list. He kicked the PLO representative out. Recently, Arafat sent a letter of apology to Kreisky. But so far, the Austrian chancellor has refused to let the PLO replace its expelled envoy.

WHO'S NEWS?: Whistleblowers in the Housing and Urban Development Department may find that they're whistling in Dixie. At a staff briefing recently, Secretary Sam Pierce was asked about people who may want to blow the whistle on misbehavior or incompetence. "Whistleblowers," said Pierce. "I'm not familiar with the term. You mean squealers?"

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Cuba, United States complain about the same countries

WASHINGTON — Cuba and the United States seem to share their hemispheric hit list, the list of governments they both want to topple.

Sound strange?

William Giandoni

It wouldn't if you had sat in on many of the hearings in the House of Representatives and the Senate that are concerned with Latin America.

At the moment, most of the discussion has to do with the five Central American countries — Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica and Nicaragua. But in earlier years congressional attention was concentrated on Chile, Argentina, Brazil and others, which also were Cuban targets.

At the moment, the loudest voices, the most persistent questions, the sharpest judgments are those levelled against the little country that is bearing the brunt of the Marxist ideological and guerrilla onslaught in Central America, El Salvador.

Next lower in intensity is the criticism directed against Guatemala, a nation that, as Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders reminded his inquisitors in the Senate, has been fighting Marxist insurgents for over 25 years now.

Honduras, where presidential elections in late November were won by the first civilian since Dr. Ramon Villeda Morales in 1957, is being set up as a future target, presumably because the Communists, who number only 650 according to authoritative estimates, were not on the ballot as such.

Costa Rica, widely acclaimed as the only real democracy in Central America, has escaped unfavorable comment so far, at least from the liberals. The fact that Costa Rica was the principal conduit through which Cuban arms for the Marxist-led Sandinistas flowed during the guerrilla campaign in Nicaragua is a point that would interest conservatives, but they have not made much of it.

It is only a slight exaggeration to say that Nicaragua has been mentioned unfavorably only by Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative Republican from North Carolina who is chairman of the Senate Western Hemisphere Affairs subcommittee.

The rest of the senators and representatives who have spoken out recently on Latin America in Congress seem either not to mention the Nicaraguan Marxist government or to be trying to apologize for its militarization.

The situation is such that Undersecretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle, aggravated by persistent senatorial questioning about human rights violations in El Salvador, inquired of Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., whether he was also concerned about the suppression of freedom in Nicaragua, about closures of the independent newspaper La Prensa, about the Sandinista military buildup, and the like.

As if in reply, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., went on to say that, if he were Cuban defense minister and heard talk of U.S. contingency planning for military action against Cuba, he would feel justified in ordering a military buildup.

In the lower house, Rep. Michael Barnes' Inter-American Affairs subcommittee makes most of the headlines, in Latin America, at least.

Barnes, a Maryland Democrat, professes certain personal regard for Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of the civilian-military junta in El Salvador, but nevertheless insists that the United States should restrict arms and munitions shipments and other military aid that the Salvadoran government needs to withstand the onslaught of the Marxist guerrillas.

Blunter is Rep. Gerry E. Studds, a Massachusetts Democrat and member of Barnes' subcommittee. Studds is frank in his condemnation of Guatemala, which he terms a gross violator of human rights, and insists that U.S. assistance of any sort for Guatemala is illegal.

But not only the countries that can bealleged to violate human rights find their requests meet opposition in the U.S. Congress.

Venezuela, one of South America's two democracies, for example, has asked for the right to buy two dozen supersonic F16 fighter planes.

Sen. Pell objects to that, arguing that oil-rich Venezuela doesn't need such sophisticated weaponry, that if the United States were to make the sale, some years hence, it would escalate the arms race in the Caribbean.

The senator from Rhode Island refuses to be swayed by reminders that it was the Soviet Union, not the United States, that first introduced supersonic military aircraft into the Caribbean area.

What is more, the MiGs that Cuba is currently receiving from the Soviet are said to be a match for the F16s th Venezuela hopes to receive in 1985.

In brief, the senators and represe tives who speak out on Latin Ame are mostly those whose criticisms directed at the countries Cuba ha geted.

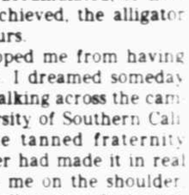
ART BUCHWALD

Alligator's decline marks end of an era!

The alligator, once the symbol of good breeding, status, and affluence, is dead. It has been laughed away in recent "preppie" satires, by young people who have no respect for tradition or the establishment which has made this country what it is today.



Art Buchwald

When I was a boy, the one thing I always dreamed of was wearing an alligator on my tennis shirt. In those days you couldn't just go into a store and buy one — you had to be born to it.

The best and brightest wore alligators. It was an unspoken badge of honor reserved for the finest families in America.

The shirts, imported from France, could only be found in the most exclusive stores in the United States, and you had to produce references from three people who owned alligators on their shirts before the salesman was permitted to sell you one.

When you saw a man with an alligator on the left side of his chest (women were forbidden to wear them before World War II), you knew he was somebody. He walked with assurance, ignoring the stares of lesser mortals. On the tennis court he always got his first serve in; his backhand was impeccable. He hit his forehand and ground strokes with the confidence of a person who knew who he was, and what his class stood for.

He was considered by parents as the most eligible catch for their daughter. A young man entitled to wear an alligator would be a winner all his life — and if he wasn't, he would always have a trust fund from his grandfather to get him through the tough times.

Only those educated in our finest prep schools and private colleges dared wear the revered animal.

Those of us who came from the other side of the tracks knew no matter how much wealth we accumulated, or how much fame we achieved, the alligator would never be ours.

This never stopped me from having fantasies about it. I dreamed someday that I would be walking across the campus at the University of Southern California, and some tanned fraternity man, whose father had made it in real estate, would tap me on the shoulder, hand me a green alligator and whisper, "You are now one of us."

It never happened, of course, because in those days people had standards.

No one knows exactly when the symbol of the alligator went downhill. Some blame the French who got greedy and started making more alligator shirts than there were people worthy of wearing them. Others say it came about when the Izod company decided to make them for women.

Still others maintain it happened when the better country clubs relaxed the rules and allowed people to play tennis and golf without wearing an alligator on their shirts.

But one cannot ignore the anti-Vietnam war protests when the affluent youths turned against their parents and replaced the alligator with a clenched fist.

When the elite found out that anyone could buy an alligator tennis shirt, they wanted nothing more to do with the symbol.

Whatever the reason, the alligator is now being sold not only on tennis shirts, but nightgowns, baby blankets, underwear and T-shirts. It is being worn by students who go to community colleges, and even kids who didn't finish high school.

The final blow for the alligator came this year, when anyone at an Ivy League college wearing one was booted with derision and treated with ra for America. So were able to prove the animal they bol to replace the lost their identity r raison d'etre.

A federal court Tuesday stripped American citizenship from ex-Nazi Otto von Bolschwing, who served as an advisor to Adolf Eichmann but allowed the former SS captain to remain in the United States. Von Bolschwing is shown in a Sacramento convelescent home with his lawyer

Former Nazi loses citizenship, but will stay in U.S.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A federal court on Tuesday stripped U.S. citizenship from a former Nazi SS captain who served as an adviser to Adolf Eichmann, but the court allowed him to stay in the United States because he is ailing.

U.S. District Court Judge Milton Schwartz ordered Otto von Bolschwing, 72, to surrender his naturalization papers, ruling that he lied to authorities when he obtained U.S. citizenship in 1950 in New York.

Federal agents claimed von Bolschwing "devised ways of dealing with the Jews of Europe, including methods of persecution" when he worked as Eichmann's assistant.

But Schwartz, approving an agreement worked out by the defense and federal prosecutors, allowed von Bolschwing to stay in this country, noting that the elderly nursing home patient suffers from an incurable "progressive neurological condition."

In the agreement, von Bolschwing admitted he had been a Nazi Party member and an officer in the SS and Nazi intelligence service. But he has also claimed he worked for American intelligence during and after World War II, a claim which went unanswered by the government.

Von Bolschwing, who currently receives medical care in a suburban Sacramento nursing home, was not present in court when Schwartz issued the ruling. But his attorney, Arthur Ruthenbeck said von Bolschwing had seen it.

"We went over it line by line," Ruthenbeck said, "and we discussed each one."

The agreement, which says von Bolschwing "persecuted innocent people in the 1930s and 1940s," also calls for annual medical examinations of von Bolschwing and, if his condition improves, "the government's options remain open" to prosecute again.

But both Ruthenbeck and Rodney Smith of the federal Office of Special Investigations, the official U.S. Nazi-hunting agency, acknowledged that von Bolschwing's health was unlikely to improve.

Class party not sweet

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The traditional Christmas party observed in most elementary classrooms on the last day of school before the holidays was a little different in one West Elementary School class Tuesday.

According to Barbara Adams, a West fifth grade teacher, the students in her class consumed goodies that were a little more nutritional than the usual selection of cookies, cakes or candy.

Mrs. Adams said the students received chips and dip, fruit punch and only one sweet.

"In the past kids ate the chips and dip in school and carried the cookies home with them," she said. "They really seem to enjoy something besides all sweets."

Bonnie Sullivan, homeroom mother, said the students would also be receiving healthy snacks from the West PTA.

"The PTA has furnished fruits and nuts for the kids," Mrs. Sullivan said. The bags of treats were delivered by Santa.

Principal Michael J. Worley said that due to a district policy, no candy is allowed in the elementary schools.

"Of course Christmas parties have been pretty much of an exception in the past, but this year we're discouraging it. We (the school) are giving pencils as favors this year (instead of candy)," he explained.

Another tradition the class strayed away from this Christmas was that of the exchange of presents between the students.

Mrs. Adams said the decision was made by all of the fifth grade teachers at West. Too many children couldn't afford to buy presents, often leaving some children with hurt feelings, she said.

"The school would end up running out and buying gifts for those students who didn't receive one. We (the fifth grade teachers) felt that money could be spent better elsewhere," she said.

Worley agreed, "There's always some hassle (with the exchange of presents) and there's always somebody getting his feelings hurt. We do exchange presents in the lower (kindergarten through third) grades."

The 28 fifth graders in Mrs. Adams' class didn't seem to mind. With a room full of disco music and mouths full of, well, if not exactly health food, at least not cavity-promoting candy, the students laughed, talked and danced for the final thirty minutes of school this year.

Reagan signs four-year, $11 billion farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-year, $11 billion farm bill which was approved by the House last week by only two votes after a nine-month battle is now law.

President Reagan, saying the legislation "recognizes the importance of the marketplace" and paves the way for a surge in exports, signed the bill in a private ceremony Tuesday.

It seeks to curtail government's influence in farm economics, but supporters called it inadequate and critics labeled it disastrous for some farmers and too generous for others. The bill passed the House, 205-203, last Wednesday with 59 Republicans voting no.

The measure makes it virtually impossible for Reagan to seek to punish the Soviet Union through a selective grain embargo such as that President Jimmy Carter imposed after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Any embargo would have to apply to all products.

Reagan said he was pleased to sign the bill, because it recognizes "both our reliance on the American farmer and the limits of government."

He said the measure's provisions will faciliate a 42 percent increase in agricultural exports by 1984 — a big boost for farmers.

During congressional debate, farm state members from both parties said the measure would bankrupt or impoverish many farmers, and consumer interests condemned provisions aiding peanut and sugar farmers.

THE BILL WILL cost the government at least $3 billion more than Reagan's original proposal, but about $5 billion less than the measure first passed by the House in October.

Its approval represented a legislative victory for Reagan, even though it continues grain and cotton subsidies and peanut marketing quotas, which the administration originally opposed.

The major fight in Congress was over price support levels for such commodities as milk, grains and fibers. Through loans, purchases and direct payments, the government supports those commodity prices to provide farmers with some income security that will keep them providing adequate supplies of low-cost food to consumers even during hard times.

In addition, the bill authorizes a one-year extension of the food-stamp program and continues agricultural research programs and the Food for Peace program.

Almost all of the $11 billion appropriated in the farm bill itself, exclusive of the food stamp program, is for crop supports.

Mrs. Cary Geron, left, and Mrs. Sherman Allenson put the finishing touches on dinner at a recent meeting of the AAUW Couple's Gourmet Group.

Dolmathes to Daiquiri Pie, quesadillas to quiches. Those women who have been planning menus and cooking for the American Association of University Women (AAUW) Couple's Gourmet Group during its 15 years of existence say that they have never repeated a dinner menu.

The popularity of cooperative dinner groups is growing, though they are really no more than the old-fashioned potluck dinner done in a somewhat more sophisticated manner, according to Colleen Scury, group member.

Group meets monthly from September to May, with June turned over to the men for a barbeque. In May, the women sign up to cook three times, hostessing once in her home. Each time four women will be cooking for the entire group.

Mrs. Scury says a generalized schedule might be as follows:

1. At least two weeks before the dinner date, the home hostess and her three helpers will meet to plan the menu. She usually has an idea for a theme. The helpers bring along cookbooks, recipes, clippings and ideas. After they agree on the type of meal, they find recipes for the various courses and put together the menu.

2. Menus for Couple's Gourmet usually consist of two hors d'oeuvres, one hot and one cold, served with wine, punch and beer or soft drinks, soup and/or salad, an entree of either meat, poultry or fish, one or two vegetables, homemade rolls or bread and dessert and coffee.

3. Each woman will cook two things. It is often easier for the home hostess to buy the wine. Liquor stores are helpful as to quantities and recommendations if you are buying foreign wines from the country whose food you are serving.

Each member does her own shopping, keeping a total of expenditures.

4. Tables, chairs, linen, silverware, glasses, etc., are all pooled. The group always has sit-down dinners.

5. Husbands serve as hosts. Dinner is served either from a buffet setting or assembled on plates.

6. After dinner, expenditures are added up and divided among members present and the cooks are reimbursed.

7. Then everyone helps with the cleaning up.

"Dining like this is always a choice, never a chore," Mrs. Scury explains.

For those who might like to try an arrangement like the AAUW Couple's Gourmet Group have, but are a little apprehensive, group members offer some advice.

"First and foremost," states Joan Noel, "forget your fear of cooking for a large group." "Plus," adds Esta Geron, "you're among friends who are patient and always ready to help."

Secondly, "Don't let the thought of a sit-down dinner for 30 have you out looking for a bigger home, most people end up in the smallest corner of a room thoroughly enjoying themselves shoulder to shoulder, " notes Wilma Allenson. "Make do. Card tables, rented or borrowed foling chairs, etc." Margaret Wade rearranged her garage, added garden lattices, lots of greenery and turned it into a Paris cafe, Mrs. Allenson says.

"The most important ingredient is good food, or cuisine, if you prefer," Mrs. Scury says.

Following are some of the recipes from the group's December meal:

OYSTERS CARNAVAL

2 dozen oysters with shells and liquid
1½ large or 2 small onions
1 small clove garlic
½ bay leaf
2 pieces celery
Pinch of thyme
3 tblsp. butter
⅛ cup bread crumbs
2 tblsp. butter
6 strips bacon
6 lemon wedges

Chop oysters and drain, reserving liquid. Mince onions, garlic, bay leaf, thyme and celery. Fry until brown in an iron skillet in 3 tblsp. butter. Add chopped oysters. Moisten ½ cup bread crumbs with oyster liquid and add to mixture in water. Add 2 tblsp. butter and cook until butter is melted. Boil and scrub oyster shells and fill with oyster mixture. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in 375 F. oven until thoroughly heated. Serve at once, garnished with crisp bacon strips and lemon wedges. Serves 6. Can be used as a casserole without shells.

CANTONESE LETTUCE BURGERS

Wash and thoroughly drain leaves of fresh lettuce. Chill and put in separate bowl.

Filling: Slice very thinly one large pork chop and marinate in 1 tblsp. soy sauce, 1 tblsp. wine and 1 teasp sugar.

Slice thinly lengthwise, ½ pound snow peas.

Heat oil and quickly fry peas. Add meat mixture and fry until brown, add ½ cup thinly sliced bamboo shoots. Serve in a bowl. Guests wrap lettuce leaves around the filling. Cooked rice may be added as you roll the leave.

BROILED BEEF TENDERLOIN WITH MUSHROOM STUFFING AND BRANDIED TOMATO GRAVY

1½ cups butter
¾ pound mushrooms, finely chopped
1 4-6-ounce package sliced cooked ham, diced
½ cup minced green onion
½ teasp. salt
¼ teasp. pepper
3 cups white bread cubes
2 tblsp. water
2 ½-pound beef loin tenderloin roasts, center pieces

In a skillet over medium heat, melt butter, add mushrooms, ham, green onions, salt and pepper; cook until vegetables are tender, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add bread cubes and water. Toss gently to mix and set aside. Make a lengthwise cut, about 1½ inches deep along center of each beef roast. Into cut section, spoon half of the mushroom mixture; pack firmly. With a strin, tie each tenderloin securely in several places to hold cut edges together. Preheat broiler. Place roasts, cut side up, on rack in broiling pan; broil for 15 minutes. If necessary, cover stuffing with foil to prevent it from browning. Carefully turn tenderloin, cut side down and broil 15 minutes longer. To serve, place roast on cutting board, let stand 10 minutes. Remove string, slice meat and arrange slices on a warm large platter; garnish. Makes 10 servings.

Brandied Tomato Gravy: Drain 1 8-ounce can tomatoes, reserve liquid. Finely chop tomatoes; set aside. In 1-quart pan over medium heat, melt 4 tblsp. butter. Stir in 2 tblsp. flour until blended, cook 8-10 minutes. Gradually stir in one 13-ounce can beef broth, reserved tomato liquid, 1 tblsp. brandy, ½ teasp. pepper, ½ teasp. meat extract paste; cook, stirring constantly until slightly thickened. Serve in gravy boat with meat.

QUICK CELERY AMANDINE

Slice, on an angle, 4 stalks celery into ½-inch slices.

Saute in butter and ½ teasp. dried chicken bouillon.

Add ¼ cup almonds

GARDEN COLLAGE

3 tblsp. butter
1 clove garlic, pressed
1 medium onion, chopped
1 bell pepper, chopped
1 teasp. salt
1 teasp. seasoning salt
½ cup water
1½ pounds yellow squash, thinly sliced
2 cups fresh corn
2 tomatoes, peeled and diced
Pinch of sugar

In large skillet, melt butter and saute onion, pepper and garlic until soft/ Add squash and cook briefly before stirring in corn, tomatoes and seasonings. Can be stuffed into red peppers or into a buttered 2½-quart casserole. Add water. Bake covered about 1 hour at 350 F. Uncover last 30 minutes to reduce liquid. Serves 8.

DARK SECRET MACAROON BOMBE

2 cups coconut macaroons
1½ cup whole milk
½ cup creme de cacao
4 tblsp. brown sugar
1 pint whipping cream

Soak dried macaroons in milk and creme de cacao for two hours. Whip cream and sweeten with brown sugar. Fold into macaroon mixture; chill for two hours. Serve in small dishes and garnish with one or more of the following dried fruits: Plums, dates, coconut or apricots. Add chopped, dried ginger sparingly.

LIVING TODAY

Keep warm this winter

By SHARON HILLIS

Home Economics

Decided to save money and energy by lowering the thermostat setting — but now your feet are cold? Don't blame the thermostat or your feet or your socks! Attack the situation with a seven-point plan, remembering the thermostat setting is only one of seven factors that influence thermal comfort.

Comfort also depends on clothing, radiant heating, humidity, activities, drafts, each different room and your own physical fitness — all working against each other or together, depending on you.

1. THERMOSTAT SETTING can work for you ONLY IF the area in which the thermostat is actually located has the same conditions as the room(s) you want heated, housing experts tell us. Check each room's temperature. Close off unused rooms to enhance the heating of in-use rooms, if necessary.

2. CLOTHING offers an insulative value, so take advantage of this. Wear layers of relatively thin clothing. Air will be trapped between the layers and warmed by body heat. As you warm up, remove a layer or two. As you cool off, add some.

3. RADIANT HEAT is heat from sun rays or heat that bounces off the bricks in your fireplace. Work where you can get the benefit of this "extra" economical heat.

4. HUMIDITY can undo all the good you've done with other methods of comfort creation, so control it. High humidity — lots of moisture in the house — causes already-cool temperatures to feel even colder.

5. ACTIVITIES generate heat, especially when the large muscles of legs and arms are involved, so stay active.

6. DRAFTS have a cooling effect, of course, so stop them. Locate them and minimize their power or stay out of draft areas.

7. YOUR PHYSICAL FITNESS is the final key — those who are physically fit and active can better adapt to temperature changes than those who are not fit.

Remember, you can control what you wear and what you do. During cold periods, increase your physical activities and change clothing whenever necessary to maintain comfort. If you've followed the seven-point plan, a simple solution to changing comfort problems may be as close as your closet!

Medic alert offers life-saving service

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Will you please pass along to your large readership some facts about Medic Alert, a system of emergency medical identification?

Medic Alert provides an important service, especially for people who have hidden medical conditions, ranging from medication allergies to diabetes, heart problems, hypertension, hemophilia or epilepsy, to name a few.

If a person wearing a Medic Alert emblem is unable to speak or communicate because of accident or sudden illness, the emblem "speaks" for them.

On the back of the emblem is listed that person's special medical problem, an I.D. number and a phone number that can be called collect 24 hours a day from anywhere in the world.

Emergency information available at the answering service can range from the name of a hospital in the immediate area that carries a rare serum, to blood type, type and dose of insulin, next of kin, family physician and whether or not the person is an organ donor.

There are over a million members in the U.S.A., and affiliate organizations exist in 15 foreign countries. Our national chairman is Lorne Greene.

Medic Alert Foundation International is located in Turlock, Calif. 96380. Our phone is 209-668-3333. — JIM FLOOD, DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

DEAR JIM: I have checked out Medic Alert and find it to be legitimate, nonprofit and life-saving. It has demonstrated its value thousands of times in emergency rooms and hospitals across the country. Prepare for a flood (no pun intended) of letters requesting information on how to become a member.

DEAR ABBY: For my 16th birthday, my parents bought me a brand-new bedroom set: a double bed, a chest of drawers, a vanity dressing table and a chair. I am 20 now and I'm being married soon, and I think I am entitled to take my bedroom furniture with me. My parents think my husband and I should buy our own bedroom furniture.

What you do think, Abby? — FAMILY ARGUMENT

DEAR ARGUMENT: Since there is obviously a difference of opinion, accept your parents' decision without further discussion.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Cornering fitted sheets

DEAR HELOISE:

Love your column, also love fitted sheets. Do you know what wears out first on my fitted sheets? Not the center — the corners! I pull, tug, push, and shove to get the sheet on the mattress.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if manufacturers added an extra inch or two of material so that we homemakers wouldn't have to pull the sheet into shreds getting it on the mattress? — Frances J.

I think we all agree it would, as who hasn't had that frustrating problem at one time or another. Hopefully, manufacturers who make these too-snug sheets will listen to us and add that extra inch you requested.

In the meantime, when buying sheets, look for those which have continuous elastic across each end. They're much easier to put on and will last longer.

Also, if you sew you can make the sheets you already have on hand a bit larger by snipping a two- or three-inch vertical slit at each corner, inserting a triangle of fabric, then stitching on a strip of elastic at the corners to make the sheet fit the mattress better.

You'll save fingernails, sheets and, most of all, time, which is at a premium most mornings. Hugs for writing. — Heloise

HIGHCHAIR SEATING

Dear Heloise: My baby son is learning to sit up in a highchair and I was having trouble with him sliding out of the seat.

My sister-in-law suggested putting a rubber jar opener on the seat to help hold him. Worked great!

No matter what he is wearing, he stays put in the chair. — Chris Allen

CLEANING CHAIR ARMS

Dear Heloise: We have wooden arms on our chairs. Over a period of time due to our arms touching them, a sticky film has built up from the oils in our skin.

Would you know how to clean these chairs? I have tried several things but so far nothing works. — Barbara Pappadake

There are a couple of things you might do...

One is to buy a good furniture cleaner (hardware stores carry several brands) and use as directed.

Another is to purchase a fine grade of steel wool. Use 0000. Do not use any that would be coarser, such as 000 or 00. Be sure the package has at least four zeroes to designate the finer grade.

Rub the wood gently with the grain but only until the build-up is removed. Don't rub excessively. Follow with a good furniture polish, then buff to a shine. The arms should be good as new! — Heloise

EASIER DISHWASHING

Dear Heloise: I keep a plastic container three-fourths filled with sudsy water next to the sink. The whole family has been trained to soak their eating utensils in it pending washing.

This keeps food from drying hard on them before you get to washing the little rascals and also organizes dirty knives and forks so they are less likely to wind up in the garbage can.

Works really well for us. — Violet

NO BUTTERFINGERS

Dear Heloise: Moisten fingertips when transferring eggs from the carton to the refrigerator egg tray.

No more slips! — Barbara Zuidema

TO STOP HICCUPS

Dear Heloise: For people who can't quit hiccuping, a half-teaspoon or so of peanut butter works every time for me.

Thanks to my dad for that tip! — Cory Sisk

I had to try this to believe it. Even though it was like turning off a switch because my hiccups stopped immediately, I had a hard time convincing myself it had actually happened.

You be the judge, though. Try it the next time those pesky hiccups start. Hope you'll be as pleasantly surprised as I was. — Heloise

Send a super problem-solving hint to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Tx. 78216 today. She can't answer your letter personally but she'll be reading it with lovin' care, looking for handy, dandy hints to use in her column.

Select pets with care

Christmas is nearly here and many people succumb to last-minute pleadings of youngsters and buy them pets for Christmas. That may not be a good idea, reports the Humane Society of the United States.

A new pet is a full-time commitment during the first weeks. The chaos, confusion and bustle of the holidays can shortchange both the animal and its new owner, the organization says.

The best time to get a puppy or kitten is in the spring when housebreaking is easiest.

But if you feel you must get a pet for Christmas, arrange to bring it home a day or two after the holiday, when the pace has slowed and you can give the animal the attention it nees.

Remember, pet ownership is a serious commitment so it is best not to aquire one on impulse.

Holiday brighteners potential poison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traditional decorations such as poinsettias and holly add color and joy to the holidays, but be wary; they are also potential poisons if eaten by children or pets.

"As decorations, these and other holiday plants and accessories are harmless and enjoyable. But if swallowed they can cause nausea, vomiting and sometimes diarrhea," warned Dr. Robert Raffauf of Northeastern University in Boston.

Mistletoe and yew berries can cause abdominal pain, hypertension and, if eaten in a large quantity, cardiovascular collapse, he said. If a child has eaten several berries, the usual treatment includes giving the child a preparation of ipecac to induce vomiting.

Adominal discomfort and nausea can be caused by swallowing any part of the poinsettia, and the sap from the plant's leaves irritates the skin of some people, Raffauf said.

While bayberries and pine needles are not usually considered poisonous, they can irritte the stomach if eaten, he added.

Historic documents

Historians, decorators or people who just like old documents may be interested in reproductions of our nation's historic papers.

Available for $1.75 each are poster facsimilies of the Declaration of Independence, Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

They can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402.

For the Declaration of Independence order stock number 022-002-00024-4; the Constitution is 022-002-0023-6; and the number to order the Bill of Rights is 022-002-00022-8.

Fire safety

Here are some winter fire safety hints from the Federal Emergency Management Agency:

—Be sure room heaters are in good condition; they need frequent checkups and cleaning. A dirty room heater is a critical fire hazard.

—Use only the correct fuel for each heater.

—Keep gasoline, kerosene and other flammable liquids stored outside the home at all times.

—Maintain adequate clearance distances round heaters and heating stoves at all times. Surrounding walls should not become too hot for your hand.

Really rolling

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — In 1881 a cigarette-making machine produced 120,000 cigarettes a day. That was the equivalent of 40 expert hand rollers working 12 hours.

Now, a century later, R. J. Reynolds has machines capable of producing the same amount of cigarettes in 20 minutes. The machines are rated at 6,000 cigarettes per minute.

Upgrading the home environment

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

With money tight and interest rates up, upgrading the home environment is more likely than ever to be a do-it-yourself job.

This helps explain why home furnishings products which offer economies by giving people a chance to do the work themselves are enjoying an increase in popularity at present. Unpainted and inexpensive self-constructed furniture and home furnishings kits are some examples.

Yet another home furnishings product that seems to be in greater demand is wallcoverings, particularly the fabric-backed kind which many people put up themselves.

Recently, a wallcoverings industry market study indicated that nationally about 16 percent of all American families purchased wallcoverings in 1980. Altogether, 126 million rolls were sold — about 78 percent of them for residential use.

Economy was not, strictly speaking, the reason for their purchase. At an average of slightly over $9.50 a roll, it is more expensive to wallpaper a room than to paint it, although manufacturers say the wallcoverings last longer than paint and are therefore just as economical.

However, perceived value certainly played a role in the choice. The industry has been making a persuasive case for the utility and beauty of its products and their contribution to the good looks of the home.

Reorganizing wallcoverings pattern books so that related colors and patterns are grouped together with photos of the pattern installed in a room and decorating ideas has helped whet the consumer's interest.

In addition, coordinating wallcoverings to other home furnishings products — such as fabric, curtains, bed and bath linens — has also created interest. Today, according to one manufacturing executive, a sample book that did not include coordinating fabric would almost certainly be returned by the retailer.

Recently, Sanitas introduced a sample book that ties in with a line of coordinating domestics from Cannon Mills. In so doing, the company became one of an ever-increasing number of mass producers offering coordination formerly available only by custom ordering.

According to Sanitas president John Orsak, his firm chose to tie in with a domestics manufacturer partly because statistics indicate the bedroom and bath are among the most likely candidates for wallcoverings. Altogether, about 52 percent of all wallcoverings purchases are used in these rooms. The kitchen accounts for another 26 percent of demand.

Industry figures for 1980 reveal the average purchaser is an individual 40 years old or younger, with a family income of $20,000 or more. Purchases are greatest in New England and least prevalent in the South. Individuals living in cities with 500,000 or more in population are more likely to buy wallpaper than those from smaller towns and rural areas.

Consumers have a large choice of what to buy. At any given time, there are about 1,800 sample books on the market. Each sample book has a shelf life of from two to three years.

At least 500 new books are printed each year and some 22,000 dealers may stock from 300 to 500 sample books. Some large retailers may stock 1,000 or more books.

Not everyone who buys wallcoverings is planning to do the installing, but it has been estimated that 80 percent of purchasers will hang their own wallpaper. The do-it-yourself market has encouraged development of such products as pre-pasted wallpapers and simplified, less messy adhesives and applications. In addition, there are more retailers keeping more patterns in stock to accommodate do-it-yourselfers who don't want to wait several weeks to receive their purchase.

Despite what some people have interpreted as a growth of demand for wallcoverings, the United States has a long way to go to catch up with European consumers. Orsak estimated that for every roll of wallcoverings sold here, six are sold in western Europe.

He sees this situation as an opportunity not a drawback.

"We've just got to convince American homemakers to try our product," he says. "It's been shown that once people take that first step and try some wallcoverings, they will continue to do so."

Integrity & efficiency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administrative error or fraud in government programs is the target of an expanded program of computer technology being set up by the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, says a computer-information journal.

According to MIS Week, the program is expected to provide a more thorough, cheaper and faster method than now used to detect flaws in the 60 or so federal assistance and benefit programs accounting for about $81 billion in expenditures annually.

One test program in Tennessee this year detected $3.7 million in overpayments in the food stamp program alone, the publication reported. The test was conducted by the U.S. Agriculture Department.

'New dawn emerging out of darkness of past'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third installment of a four-part Christmas series about the Middle East, that prodigious cradle of modern civilization, of most of its religious heritages, of the beacon of Christianity, Jesus, of a successive clash of empires and of present conflicts that menace the world.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The river flows unceasingly, ebbing and rising, ever renewing its bordering soil like some finger of eternity. The Nile is the lifeline of Egypt, oldest of all the earth's nations. "The river speaks of God," the recently slain president Anwar Sadat once remarked as he strolled its banks. "Of immortality."

Out of that timeless land, out of its primal depth in the long haul of humanity, there once came a wandering band of alien slaves who raised an ensign to one, omnipresent God and who bequeathed their monotheism to much of the world beyond their Judaism, through Christianity and Islam.

Out of that ancient country, which has existed ever since the dawn of history and which in a dangerous period for the modern world in the Middle East had seemed a long-hoped-for key to peace, there came a child who grew to stand for utmost peace and who has been regarded by millions since as the very expression of God within humankind.

"Out of Egypt have I called my son," Matthew 2:15 says of Jesus, echoing God's message through olden Jewish prophets.

JESUS AS A CHILD was sheltered in Egypt, taken there by Joseph and Mary to escape Herod's massacre of children in Bethlehem. It had been a long, difficult journey on foot through desert and rocky hills, through blistering days and chill nights. How long they remained there, fugitives in a strange land, is not specified, but indications are it was a struggling but short period.

Egypt then, like the entire Mediterranean world, was under the heel of Rome. The last Egyptian ruler, the queen Cleopatra, had used her wiles first on Rome's Julius Caesar and then on Mark Antony to maintain her country's sovereignty. But after defeat in the naval battle of Actium, she took her own life in 30 B.C., rather than become Rome's vassal.

In previous centuries, however, and in modern times, Egypt has occupied an eminent position in the Middle East, once as a vast empire, for centuries as an intellectual center with its influential library of ancient Alexandria and early advances in geometry, astronomy, literature and philosophy — and recently as a champion of peace in an explosive region of the world.

"A new dawn is emerging out of the darkness of the past," said the trailblazer of that quest for peace, Sadat, at the signing of a treaty with Israel March 26, 1979, at the White House in company of Israel's President Menachem Begin and then U.S. President Jimmy Carter.

"Let us work together until the day comes when they beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks," said Sadat, a devout Moslem, paraphrasing the Jewish prophet Isaiah.

BUT AS THE TWO countries labored to implement their accords, amid bitter denunciations by most other Arab states, the intrepid Sadat, who shunned a protective vest, was shot down last Oct. 6 as he reviewed his troops in Cairo. Four soldiers leaped from a truck, heading toward him. As he tentatively raised his hand to salute them, they riddled him with machinegun fire and bursting grenades.

"We shake the hand that fired the bullets," said an aide to Yasir Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization which had long carried out terrorist attacks against Israel. Libyans, and Palestinian guerrillas and Syrian troops in Lebanon on Israel's border celebrated, firing their guns in the air in wild jubilation. While leaders of the West and Israel mourned, only three smaller Arab countries among 21 publicly deplored the assassination.

But it cast a dark shadow on that catalytic Middle East, embroiled for three decades in bitter hostilities and recurrent shooting wars both between Arab states and Israel and between varying Arab states, while the U.S. and the Soviet Union maneuvered for influence in a region distinctively rich with the world's civilizing roots, its coveted oil and fateful portents.

Long ago, in another tangled and colliding time, Egypt was shaken by an uprising of Jewish slaves, who finally broke free to build a nation of their own and to endow the world with its most honored, oldest book, the Bible, and a magnetizing decendant, Jesus.

The early patriarch of that lineage, Jacob, had moved to Egypt with his people around 1650 B.C. because of famine in Canaan where his grandfather Abraham had settled them long before. When they emigrated to Egypt, it was ruled by a Semitic dynasty of pharaohs, the Hyksos, who previously had made one of Jacob's sons, Joseph, the manager of its economy. He had been brought there earlier as a slave sold by his jealous brothers, but became the country's grand vizier in charge of royal stores.

CONSEQUENTLY, FOR a time, the Jewish immigrants received favored, benevolent treatment, settling in the northeastern Delta area, the "land of Goshen," living comfortably with their flocks of sheep and goats. But Egypt's regime and policies changed, with the Hyksos expelled by Pharaoh Ahmose I about 1570 B.C., starting a new kingdom that within a century ruled an empire including much of the Middle East.

It was a time of mighty pharaohs, kings considered gods, of Thutmos; Ikhnaton, Queen Nefertiti, Tutankhamen and tombs of the Valley of the Kings, of vast building, majestic monuments, sacred totems and a polytheism of animal-like gods, of temples, tall statuary and rising pyramids. Imperial power enslaved the Jews for toil in work gangs, their "house of bondage," brutally driven and whipped by taskmasters.

"Let my people go," demanded Moses. He had slain a cruel overseer and, in those mystical, biblically described experiences, had yielded to God's persistent summons and heroically challenged Pharaoh Ramses II.

After more than 400 years in Egypt, most of that time in slavery, the Jews broke free about 1220 B.C. in the world's first victorious struggle for human liberty. Amazingly, they circumvented the world's then mightiest power. Its armored cavalry and chariots pursued them but sank in a tidal wave after Abraham's children were safely across a swampy lake zone, the "Sea of Reeds," north of the Suez gulf, saved from disaster.

"Sing to the Lord, for he has triumphed gloriously," they sang, a hymn that long afterward was echoed by Mary when pregnant with Jesus. "The Lord ... has scattered the proud...He has put down the mighty from their thrones and exalted those of low degree...He has helped his servant Israel."

ITS PEOPLE TREKKED into the "Wilderness of Shur" on the north of the Sinai peninsula, but instead of heading along the usual coastal route toward Canaan, risking Egyptian outposts, they swung southward, plunging into a trackless, isolated wasteland of desert, scrub brush, jagged peaks, heat, dust, desolation and rare oases.

Attacked by fierce desert tribes, enduring hardship, hunger and sometimes despair, the Israelites trudged into the forbidding highlands of the peninsula's southern tip, a wild, spectacular region of multicolored granite hills, ravines and immense silence, where little lives.

Suddenly before them stretched an open plain beyond which rose in awe-inspiring majesty a red granite, 2,600-foot peak, Mount Sinai. There in Egypt, in the height of that mountain, amid the wind, lightning and fire described in Scripture, God gave Moses the Ten Commandments, a basis to civilized law ever since.

Eventually the Israelites reached the land of Moab in modern Jordan. There, Moses stood on Mount Nebo, his gaze taking in the rolling land of his forebear Abraham toward the sea and the green valley of the Jordan as far north as the eye could see.

His people had spent 40 years in reaching that land and Moses, by then an old man, never got to enter it, but his people did. They, like Jesus long afterward, had come out of Egypt, that nation of deepest antiquity, that kingdom of pharaohs and monumental accouterments for death.

MARY, JOSEPH AND the young boy, Jesus, had later lived there, probably about a year, before hearing that the murderous, sick King Herod had died in 4 B.C. They returned home to the rustic tranquility of Nazareth in Galilee.

It was then ruled, through satraps, by the vast Roman empire. Egypt, after the flight of the Jews, had come under Assyrian power by the ninth century B.C., then successively under Nebuchadnezzar's Babylonia, Persia and Greece. There followed 200 years under Egypt's Ptolemy dynasty ending with Cleopatra in 30 B.C.

Egypt then became a province of Rome and its eastern Byzantine rule until the Islamic surge out of Arabia in the seventh century A.D. swelled across Africa and southern Europe to France. That huge empire, shaken by the Crusades, declined in the 11th century A.D.

The Ottoman Turks swallowed up much of the Middle East in the 1500s, including Egypt. But in the 19th century, Great Britain's forces moved into Egypt to crush an uprising, making Egypt a virtual possession of Britain until it terminated its protectorate in 1922, restoring independence to Egypt, now a nation of 43 million.

Under Gamal Abdel Nasser, it had close ties with the Soviet Union, and in league with Syria and Jordan went to war with Israel in 1967, but they were swiftly, in six days, beaten. Egypt lost the Sinai and Syria the heights overlooking Galilee. Jordan lost the West Bank of the Jordan river.

SADAT CAME TO POWER in 1971, realigning Egypt with the West. But Egypt and Syria launched a surprise attack on Israel Oct. 6, 1973, the Jewish Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, and at first made headway. Israel reeled, but recouped, counterattacked and drove back the invaders, holding its 1967 lines.

Thereafter, the contemplative, pipe-smoking Sadat sprang his bold overture, his world-stunning, emotional 1977 "sacred mission" to Jerusalem, embracing former foes, shattering three decades of solid Arab rejection of Israel. Sadat and Israel's Begin pledged to pursue a permanent peace.

They huddled for 13 days the next year with President Carter at Camp David in the hills of Maryland, building their framework for settlement, principles embodied in a peace treaty signed in 1979 in Washington.

But its promise was plunged into a midnight interval after Sadat's slaying in October 1981. "A man of peace in a time of violence," President Reagan said of him. "In a world filled with hatred, he was a man of hope."

Sadat's successor, Hosni Mubarak, initially vowed to stick to Sadat's course "without any deviation, the course of peace." But Egypt was declared in a state of emergency for the ensuing year, convulsed with massive arrests, sporadic violence and disorders. Other Arab leaders, particularly in belligerent Libya, in Syria, Iraq and Arafat's PLO, blasted further negotiations, demanding Arab solidarity against Israel.

A TIME OF HOPE had given way to a time of tense, sometimes jolting, uncertainties and recurrent violence. So had the time of Jesus' coming, at first joyously hopeful with adoring Magi and heavenly choirs singing "peace on earth, good will to men," given way to fears, massacre, flight and dislocations before his "good news" unfolded.

Argentina's Galtieri is pro-US and anti-Marxist

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — There may not have been any cheering in the U.S. capital as Gen. Leopoldo Fortunato Galtieri assumed the presidency of Argentina, but there were probably a few sighs of relief.

For Galtieri is known and respected in military and intelligence circles here for being pro-United States and anti-Marxist.

At a time, as now, when the White House has become aware of the threats that Soviet-Cuban expansionism poses to Atlantic sea lanes, in the Florida straits area and around Africa, it is deemed reassuring to have a man of Galtieri's caliber governing Argentina. Most of Argentina's 3,000-mile-long coastline is on the South Atlantic.

The quiet approval given Galtieri should not be considered a reflection on his predecessor, Gen. Roberto Viola.

But Viola's health failed him after about eight months in the presidency, and the governing military junta, composed of the chiefs of the three armed services, felt it had to remove him and designate Gen. Galtieri in his place.

Viola's abbreviated term was a no-nonsense period. No violent political opposition was tolerated. But with the economy in a precipitous decline, as indicated by an exchange rate of nearly 11,000 pesos to the dollar, and Viola's health problems keeping him from dedicating full time and energy to the nation's affairs, the armed forces' chiefs decided a firmer, steadier hand was needed.

Galtieri, a vigorous 55-year-old career army engineer, commander in chief of the army, sought, and got, the job.

Considered an indication of the strength of his confidence of support within the armed forces and even in some political circles is the fact that Galtieri insisted on retaining his post as army chief along with the presidency.

Since March 24, 1976, when the military took power in a bloodless coup that removed Juan Domingo Peron's widow from the presidency, none of the generals who have been president has been allowed to retain command of the army.

Gen. Galtieri's decision to name Roberto Alemann to the key post of economy minister reportedly encouraged Argentine and foreign businessmen.

His theory for success: Write a book about it

By MARK SAUER

So you've finished the film that will make "Gone With The Wind" look like a "B" movie and it's based on your suspense novel that Robert Ludlum wishes he were good enough to write, right?

Trouble is, you can't seem to get anyone interested besides Mom, Aunt Scarlett and your parish priest.

Alan Gadney says that's the age-old problem facing any aspiring writer, filmmaker or journalist. The solution, he says, is to add the title "award-winning" to your name and watch people take notice.

That's just what Gadney did. While a film student at the University of Southern California, Gadney wrote, directed, edited and co-produced a one-hour color film called "West Texas."

"It dealt with the experiences of a young girl on the frontier and it was good, everyone liked it. But what do you do with a student film?" he asks.

Insurance charts aren't blueprints

Dear Dr. Solomon: I come pretty close to the weight for my height listed on those charts distributed by insurance companies, yet my doctor tells me I should lose a few more pounds. Aren't those charts accurate? — Stuart, Santa Fe, N.M.

Dear Stuart: A person is generally considered overweight if his or her weight is more than 10 percent above the upper limit of normal listed on the chart and obese when his or her weight exceeds 20 percent. However, the individual's muscular development must also be taken into account.

A football player may be 20 percent above his normal weight but not have any excess fat. However, a completely sedentary person may fall within normal limits on the chart, but still have excess fat. The chart should be used as a guide, not as a blueprint that cannot be changed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I want to thank you for a practical piece of advice that may literally turn out to be a lifesaver. My father is 86 years old, and for a while he seemed to have lost all interest in eating. After reading an item in your column, I took him to my dentist who found that his dentures did not fit properly. After my father was fitted with a new set of dentures, his appetite returned to normal. Thanks again. — Mrs. B.R., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mrs. R.: Thank you for your letter. I should point out that there are many possible reasons for poor nutrition among elderly people, some of which are subject to manipulation. For example, an elderly person may not be eating properly because he or she does not live near a food store, or because of a lack of cooking facilities in the home.

However, it is well to bear in mind that older people are also subject to other than environmental factors. They may have an impaired ability to chew or to salivate, thus making eating more difficult. In addition, their sense of taste and smell may diminish with age, so that food simply is not that appetizing to them.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife and I are planning to follow the high-alkaline diet outlined in your latest book. But wouldn't I be able to consume more calories than my wife since I am taller and heavier? — Vito, Flagstaff, Ariz.

Dear Vito: The 14-day diet outlined in my book "Stop Smoking, Lose Weight," provides from 1,300 to 1,400 calories a day. Your wife can follow the diet as presented in the book. If you are not overweight, you can add one ounce of meat and one fruit each day, a total of about 110 additional calories. If you are overweight, however, stick, to the prescribed diet, so you will lose weight as you stop smoking.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm supposed to be on a fat-free diet for a while. I'm also in the habit of having some wine before I go to bed at night. Do I have to give up the wine during the time I'm on this diet? — Murray, Great Neck, N.Y.

Dear Murray: You don't indicate the purpose of your diet, but I can tell you that there is almost no fat in most of the commonly used alcoholic beverages.

Embassy worker dug out alive

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thirty-five bodies have been recovered from rubble of the bombed Iraqi Embassy, and an embassy kitchen attendant who survived on chocolate bars was dug out alive after 174 hours, police said today.

A police spokesman, who declined to be named in compliance with Lebanese government rules, said 20 more victims were believed still buried in the ruins of the five-story building that was blown up Dec. 15.

Among those are ambassador Abdulrazzak Lafta and his senior aides, the spokesman said.

The survivor was identified as Mohammad Abbas Flayeh, 30, who was in the embassy's ground floor when the blast demolished the building. He was pulled out by civil defense rescuers Tuesday.

"I spent eight days, eight hours and 45 minutes beneath the rubble and I was very depressed," Flayeh said in an interview screened by Lebanon's state television as he was taken by ambulance to a Beirut hospital.

He laughed and wept as he told his TV interviewer how he survived, eating chocolate bars from a box he found next to him in the rubble and quenching his thirst by water that leaked from the embassy's storage tank.

The predominantly Moslem west Beirut area has been shaken by two car-bomb explosions that killed 13 people, including five policemen, since the embassy blast.

Police patrols used bomb-sniffing German shepherd dogs for the second day today on the main traffic intersection in the capital in efforts to stop the wave of car bombing.

Police spokesmen had no information as to who might be behind the bombings.

The embassy bombing and two car blasts brought to 211 the number of people killed in massive bombings in Beirut as well as northern and southern Lebanese cities since Sept. 17.

Guerrillas attack El Salvadoran port

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas held the port city of La Union for at least an hour Tuesday before government troops forced them to flee, a military spokesman said.

The spokesmen, who asked not to be named, said an undetermined number of guerrillas, some of them armed with Chinese-made rocket-grenades, attacked the city late Monday. They withdrew Tuesday morning after troops loyal to the ruling junta were rushed in from outlying areas to drive them out.

Defense Ministry sources in the capital said the attack on La Union may have been designed as a cover for the landing of boats carrying arms for the guerrillas.

With the fighting going on in the city, boats might have slipped into the area and been unloaded without being noticed by port authorities, the sources said.

La Union, located about 118 miles southeast of the capital, is on the Gulf of Fonseca, the waterway separating El Salvador from neighboring Nicaragua.

Salvadoran government spokesmen have accused Nicaragua's leftist government of allowing Nicaraguan territory to be used as a shipping point for Soviet-bloc arms from Cuba.

The Salvadoran guerrillas are fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta. Human rights and church groups estimate more than 32,000 people have been killed in political violence since the junta took power in October 1979.

Pope says Polish crisis threatens world peace

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said Tuesday that the crises in Poland and elsewhere posed serious threats to world peace, and signalled his concern for Solidarity leader Lech Walesa.

Walesa, head of Poland's suspended independent union, has been held by Polish authorities since marial law was declared Dec. 13.

The Polish-born pontiff called for the "mutual collaboration" of Polish authorities and citizens of the country to work out a peaceful solution to the current turmoil, based on full respect for civil and religious liberty.

The pope's statements on Poland were contained in his traditional year-end review of the church and the world, delivered to an audience of cardinals and Vatican officials in the Paul VI auditorium.

Before meeting with the cardinals, the pope held long talks on the Polish crisis with an emissary of Poland's Roman Catholic bishops, who would be expected to play a major role in any settlement.

The Vatican said it was the pope's first direct contact with the church in his native country since martial law was declared. Two Vatican emissaries were admitted to Poland last weekend.

In the wide-ranging speech in Italian, the pope deplored the "mad destabilizing" tactics of international terrorism, noting that he, along with Presidents Reagan and Anwar Sadat of Egypt had been targets of attacks during the year. Sadat was assassinated on Oct. 6 in Cairo, Reagan was shot March 30 in Washington, and the pope was wounded by a Turkish gunman on May 13.

In a section devoted to work, the pontiff recalled "with emotion" his meeting with Walsea at the Vatican Jan. 15. The pope at the time gave a strong endorsement to the independent labor movement in Poland, coupling his praise with a plea for caution and moderation in its demands.

He declared that the Roman Catholic Church "is on the side of workers."

The pope spoke of peace, singling out Poland, Central America, the Middle East and Northern Ireland.

"Once again I implore that my country, already so tried by war during its tormented history, may be spared further suffering. I entrust to the Madonna the situation which has been set by the declaration of martial law

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Christmas Eve birthdays are celebrated by a wide variety of celebrities blessed with talent, including Ava Gardner, journalist I. F. Stone, painter Pierre Soulages, American folk singer "Leadbelly" (Huddie Ledbetter), choreographer Robert Joffrey (Ronald Reagan Jr. dances with one of his ballet companies), and the late Howard Hughes. You will spread a lot of good this year by standing up for your beliefs and speaking out about your conservative views. Those involved in politics should gain ground. New financial success is featured. Your exceptional staying power makes you a strong leader in business. You are definitely a survivor! Romance often takes a back seat to career.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Forget business affairs today and concentrate on personal affairs. Christmas spirit is everywhere! Use discretion at office parties. Staying at home can be fun.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exercise patience with family members who are difficult or demanding. Entertain friends, loved ones at home. Postpone signing agreements until after the first of the year.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A difficult relative will be in unusually good spirits. Dismiss all thoughts of business. Postpone signing documents. A midnight church service will put you in a reflective mood.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Change your routine today and mix with people you do not ordinarily see. Younger person shows his or her loyalty; you find a new ally. A gift exchange boosts your spirits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A casual flirtation could damage a valuable relationship. Use discretion at a pre-holiday party. Own up to mistakes with loved ones. They will be more understanding than you think.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A relationship is tested in a variety of ways. Romance may be difficult and stormy. Patience, tact are your strongest allies. Do not say anything you might later regret.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put any worries aside. A trustworthy friend's advice will come in handy. Romance is happy; a recent attachment will become stronger. Friend or neighbor shares a joyous secret.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Enjoy a quiet day at home or office. Little can be accomplished in the way of financial dealings. Get away early to spend a happy evening with family or friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for last-minute shopping if you give yourself enough time to cope with the crowds. Balance work with holiday socializing. Consider loved one's wishes in accepting or rejecting invitation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Today's surprises are happy ones. Friends and family members are in a holiday mood. Large gatherings can be especially enjoyable if children are involved. Take mate into your confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Include all family members in your preparations for Christmas. Last-minute details are easier to handle than you' anticipated. Romance makes heavy demands on your time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on your share of the Christmas preparations. Some advance baking, cooking could make things easier tomorrow. Parents will be especially busy this evening. Lend a hand.

When an expert makes those seemingly amazing plays, he often does not really know the lie of the cards. He has simply analyzed the hand, decided on his priorities and adopted a line that will serve his purpose.

East's preempt left South with a difficult bid to make. His values suggested a takeout double, but he was not sure that he would be able to handle the subsequent auction. So he chose a jump to four hearts, even though his suit was a trifle weak for that action. With a goodly part of his values in the enemy suit, North was not constrained to move.

West led his top diamond. East won the ten and made the excellent shift to a spade. When delcarer won the king, he realized that he was in danger of losing a trick in each suit. He could avoid that by establishing the club suit for a spade discard.

To accomplish that goal, he had to guard against two things – East gaining the lead before the clubs were established, and an early club ruff. That meant that he had to draw trumps and hope that West had the long trump – not unlikely in view of East's preempt.

After winning the spade, declarer played ace, king and another heart. He was delighted to find that the suit split 3-2 and that it was indeed West who had held three trumps. Had West continued to attack spades, declarer intended putting up dummy's jack, so West was forced to exit with another suit. He selected his remaining diamond, and declarer ruffed.

Now clubs had to be set up. Declarer cashed the king and led a low club. Had West followed low to the second club, declarer would have inserted the ten from dummy – if East had a second club it meant that the suit had broken and declarer would obtain his spade discard. But West made the fine play of splitting his honors. Declarer had an elegant riposte – he allowed West to win the jack! When East showed out on this trick, declarer had a marked finesse in clubs to bring in the suit, and his spade loser vanished.

Judge receives mail concerning creationism trial

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Letters from third graders and a chart of how God put the universe together are among the items sent to the federal judge who is to decide whether Arkansas' creation-science law is constitutional.

Except for the packet of letters from his old hometown of Malvern and the elaborate chart, most of the materials will be ignored by Judge William Overton. He answered the pupils' letters non-committally and said he found the chart interesting.

Few of the Malvern third-graders offered opinions for or against the law. A couple seemed to favor it; a couple seemed to oppose it. Several said they believed Overton would make the right decision.

The most common theme of the children's letters was that the youngsters didn't know what the issue was about. "I don't understand it, but I'm sure you do," one pupil wrote.

Overton is to rule on a lawsuit, filed by the American Civil Liberties Union, that challenges the law's constitutionality. The statute requires public schools teaching evolution to teach creationism as well, beginning in the fall of 1982.

Creationists say a supernatural force formed the world suddenly and relatively recently. The ACLU says the law, which forbids the use of religious writings in the classroom, violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

The trial of the lawsuit ended Friday.

In his closing remarks, Overton told the public not to send him any more letters because that wasn't a proper way to present evidence or material to a judge in a lawsuit. But his plea didn't stop the mail.

An English professor at Indiana University sent a copy of a book he had edited called "A Critical Edition of Darwin." The professor pointed out sections that might apply to the creationist argument and hinted that he was available to explain Darwinian thought.

A New York man said Overton had been quoted as being puzzled over some testimony. "The reason for your puzzlement is that both the plaintiffs' and the defendants' witnesses have been giving you a big pile of glop as to what science is all about," the New Yorker said. He volunteered to come and explain it all.

One letter said it was inspired and commanded by God the Holy Spirit to be written to Overton. The letter used such language as, "This is what I God from Heaven have to say to you and the people of the world." The letter gave no final order on how to dispose of the case.

Most writers supported the law and labeled the ACLU as atheistic, communistic, humanistic and anti-Christian. Many said they thought evolution and creation-science should be taught.

"Any fair-minded person could not deny that creation-science must receive the same treatment" as evolution, one letter said.

A Fort Smith couple, however, wrote that they opposed the teaching of evolution. "Let's take a stand for creation," the letter said. "I don't want lies taught to my children"

Couple expects triplets but has quadruplets

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Terri and Kenneth Arnold were ready for the triplets the doctor told them to expect, and they carefully chose names for their three newborn sons.

But Mrs. Arnold surprised everyone by having quaduplets Tuesday.

"I didn't believe it until I saw the fourth baby. I watched it all," Arnold said.

He said his 21-year-old wife "was very happy" after delivering the four by Caesarean section at United Hospital.

"We've just named three of them: Joshua, Justin and Joel. We weren't planning on a fourth," he said.

The babies, premature by six weeks, were put in an intensive care nursery, where they were "doing very well so far," Dr. Steven McDonough said.

Two of the boys weighed 4 pounds, 13 ounces; another weighed 4 pounds, 8 ounces; and the fourth weighed 8 pounds, 6 ounces.

Mrs. Arnold also was "doing very well," McDonough said.

Early in Mrs. Arnold's pregnancy, the couple believed there would be just one child and told Mrs. Arnold's 5-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, April, to expect a sister or brother soon.

Then Mrs. Arnold's doctor said "there would be three, and it took us two months to explain that to April," Arnold said. "And now there's four, so it's going to be difficult to try tell her where the last one came from."

The couple also have a 10-month-old son, Kenneth Arnold III.

Arnold, 25, a senior in business administration at the University of North Dakota, said his wife didn't take fertility drugs and said multiple births were not uncommon "on my side of the family. Every other generation has had twins."

Mrs. Arnold's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Blake of Cape Canaveral, Fla., were informed by phone of the quadruplets.

"I told them to sit down before I told them," Arnold said. "Then her mother started crying. She was happy.

"That's what she'd prayed for — all boys. But not that many."

Americans abandon trips to Mexican gas pumps

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Increased prices for Mexican gasoline have caused some Americans to abandon their weekly drives across the border to fill up their tanks.

"No more for me, especially with the traffic at the international bridge," Garth Jenkins of Brownsville, Texas, said Tuesday when faced with doubled prices for regular gasoline at Pemex stations.

Jenkins is one of thousands of Americans who regularly cross the Rio Grande into Mexico to pump their cars with inexpensive fuel from Pemex, the Mexican petroleum monopoly.

Pemex officials decided Americans were getting too much of a good thing and taking supplies away from Mexican vehicles. The monopoly announced Monday increased prices for gasoline and diesel in a conservation move.

Costs rose from 38 cents a gallon for regular to 82 cents and a hike in unleaded gas from 97 cents to $1.36 a gallon.

Prices for self-service regular and unleaded gas in Brownsville generally start at $1.19 and $1.25 a gallon, respectively.

Diesel remained a relative bargain in Mexico even after prices jumped from 14 cents a gallon to 34 cents, compared to $1.19 a gallon across the border in Texas.

Americans living along the U.S.-Mexico border began flocking to Pemex stations several years ago when prices at U.S. pumps began their drastic rise.

Last year, Pemex stations began limiting cars with U.S. plates to purchases of 100 pesos, or $4, in a similar effort to conserve fuel for Mexican vehicles.

"Ever since gas went to $1 a gallon (in the states) I've been buying here," Jenkins said. "They cut us down to 100 pesos and I tried to bribe the guy, you know the 'mordida,' but he wouldn't accept it last time, which was unusual. Yet he told me to drive around the block and come back a second time."

Another waiting for gas Tuesday was Pete Blanco Jr. of Brownsville.

"I think if it keeps on going up, I'll just go ahead and put it (gas) in over there (Texas)," he said.

Blanco said he had been buying Mexican gas about 1½ years.

Problems were compounded Tuesday at the Pemex station where Blanco and Jenkins waited. A power outage idled the gas pumps and lines backed up for blocks at the station nearest the two international bridges leading from Brownsville.

Holiday traffic and several stalled cars in the 82-degree weather spelled a 45-minute delay in crossing the international boundary into the United States.

A Brownsville resident, who declined to give his name, said he had been waiting four hours.

Deregulation would make credit unions competitive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to remove interest rate ceilings on savers' accounts in federally regulated credit unions is attracting mostly favorable response.

Some spokesmen for the nation's credit unions, however, are expressing hope that such a change will be handled cautiously.

"I think it's an excellent idea," said Donald Beall, general manager of the 20,000 member-NASA Federal Credit Union in the Washington area.

With deregulation, Beall predicted, credit unions would be competitive with other financial institutions and "pay the highest we can pay." Credit unions, he said, "will find their level in the marketplace."

Thomas Ryan, manager of the Albuquerque, N.M., Bell Federal Credit Union, agreed. But he expressed concern that while most credit unions are sophisticated enough to handle deregulation, some smaller ones aren't.

Woman marries man with mutliple personalities

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The woman who married Billy Milligan in a psychiatric hospital where he is confined says she has met and dealt with most or all of Milligan's multiple personalities.

Milligan, 26, and Tanda Kaye Bartley, 21, were married Tuesday at the Central Ohio Psychiatric Hospital. Milligan was found innocent by reason of insanity in 1978 of rape, robbery and kidnap charges.

At that time, a Franklin County judge accepted a report that Milligan had 10 personalities. An Ohio University professor, Daniel Keyes, has written a book that says Milligan has 24 personalities.

Mrs. Milligan said if she had judged Milligan by what she read, 'I'd never have married him. But I've dealt with the different personalities. I know all of them. They know me. I've encountered probably all of them."

She said she deals with different personalities, "on their level, depending on the age and mentality."

NEW YORK (AP) — Alexei Semyonov says he fears his stepfather, Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov, may face revenge from the Soviet Union if West forgets his plight.

Sakharov went on a hunger strike to secure freedom from the Soviet Union for his daughter-in-law, Liza Alexeyeva. She joined Semyonov, 25, in Boston for the first time Sunday. They were married by proxy in June.

"If they (Soviet authorities) feel the pressure from the West is dying, they will try revenge" and "make life more miserable than it was before" for Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, he said at a news conference in New York Tuesday.

Soviet officials had refused to allow Miss Alexeyeva, 26, to emigrate. Sakharov and Mrs. Bonner went on a 17-day hunger strike that ended when Soviet officials allowed Miss Alexeyeva to leave.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig made his debut as a stand-up comic during a speech at Washington's Touchdown Club, and he wasn't even penalized for quipping.

"If this had been an awards luncheon for someone who had mastered the English language it might have been appropriate," Haig said during the awards lunch Tuesday for Washington Redskins running back Joe Washington. "It is true that Haig-speak has become a rather notorious form of communication."

Haig continued his "routine" before the football players:

He offered sympathy for the Redskins, who lost their first five games this year. "I used to think that the editorial writers were the meanest, most vicious people in Washington," he said. "But along about our fifth game it occurred to me that ... hell hath no fury like a sports writer whose Super Bowl prediction goes zero-for-five."

•

LONDON (AP) — A pen-and-ink doodle by slain former Beatle John Lennon sold for $15,200. George Harrison's 12-string guitar went for $5,700. And a Chappell upright piano once owned by Paul McCartney took the top bid of $17,100.

The sales were made when Sotheby's auction house, normally the austere preserve of Old Masters, held its first rock 'n' roll auction Tuesday.

Also sold were rare tapes of guitarist Jimi Hendrix, a bronze bust of Elvis Presley, lyrics notebooks penned by Fleetwood Mac and a Ford Model T owned by John Bonham of Led Zeppelin.

But Beatles memorabilia predominated, and brought the highest prices.

"I was amazed at the prices," saidd former Beatles manager Alan Williams. "I just couldn't afford to buy anything."

Reagan to keep Head Start program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, keeping a promise to protect Project Head Start under his so-called social "safety net", is rejecting a proposal that supporters of the popular pre-school program said was aimed at killing it, administration sources say.

Budget director David Stockman, according to reports leaked several weeks ago, had proposed putting the widely supported program into one of the "block grants" to the states over the next four years and cutting its fiscal 1983 funds to $780 million.

Reagan spent the last two weeks hearing Cabinet secretaries appeal Stockman's proposals for another round of budget cuts. White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the president would complete decisions on most cuts by today.

But a source familiar with the decision said Tuesday that Reagan already has decided to keep Head Start intact and that it will get "about" the same next year as in fiscal 1982 — about $912 million.

The administration sources, who asked not to be identified, said the president also is sparing the government's chief urban development programs from Stockman's budget ax, following protests from state and local officials who feared the loss of nearly $4 billion a year in federal aid.

Among those opposing Stockman's proposed changes for Head Start was Richard S. Schweiker, secretary of Health and Human Services.

"WE HAVE DEVELOPED alternative proposals which we believe are sounder ... and more likely to succeed in Congress," Schweicker said in a Dec. 4 letter to Stockman. "I believe the president appropriately placed Head Start as one of the 'safety net' programs," he added.

Opposition to Stockman's plan also surfaced in congressional offices. One House human resources subcommittee staff member, who asked not to be identified, said last week, "My guess is this subcommittee and the full committee (Education and Labor) will probably be very strongly opposed to it.

"The idea of basically phasing the program out and killing it is not only surprising but raises questions about whether you can trust the safety net," the staff member said.

The General Accounting Office gave Head Start a positive review last summer, and the program's effectiveness has been demonstrated in several studies of children who have participated since it began during the Johnson administration.

According to the administration sources, Reagan also has decided to keep Community Development Block Grants program and Urban Development Action Grants — known as UDAG — operating at an annual budget of $3.8 billion for 1983 and 1984.

Stockman wanted to slash the HUD programs to $2.6 billion in the current fiscal year, $1.3 billion for 1983 and zero in 1984.

Controller grades said altered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel said Tuesday "there is absolutely no doubt that grades were changed" on tests given air traffic controller trainees at the Federal Aviation Administration Academy in Oklahoma City.

In releasing a staff report, Chairman William D. Ford, D-Mich., of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, said he was requesting a full-scale investigation into the episode by the Department of Transportation.

"I have directed the staff to make available to you all material they have developed as part of the (congressional) investigation so that if there is any potential criminal liability, an investigation may be conducted as expeditiously as possible," the Michigan Democrat told Smith in a letter.

In a separate letter to Joseph P. Welsch, Department of Transportation inspector general, Ford said the committee staff "has concluded there is substantial evidence that the records of 14 students were altered so these students would pass."

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

In 1897, the old New York Sun asked Francis P. Church, its veteran news editor, to answer a letter the newspaper had received from eight-year-old Virginia O'Hanlon, asking if her friends were right in telling her there was no Santa Claus.

Here is his classic reply.

"Dear Virginia,

Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. They think that nothing can be that is not comprehensible to their little minds.

All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant in his intellect as compared with the boundless world about him as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist. And you know they abound and give your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias.

There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We would have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus.

The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders that there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle to see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart.

Only faith, fancy, poetry, love and romance can push aside the curtain and picture the supreme beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

Six wildcats scheduled, one finaled

Six wildcat projects are slated for drilling in West Texas. Estoril Producing of Mildand has completed a wildcat oil well in Borden County.

BORDEN PAIR

Getty Oil Co., Midland, will drill the No. 1-13-32 Clayton Ranch, a 9,600-foot wildcat, eight miles southwest of Gail.

The project spots 660 feet from the north, and 2,310 feet from the west line of section 13, block 32, T-4-N, T&PRR survey.

The drillsite is 5/8 of a mile south of the Fusselman discovery No. 1-12 Clayton Ranch and another Getty well, the No. 2-12 Clayton Ranch, which was at 9,500 feet and testing at last report.

••••

Estoril Producing Corp., Midland, will dig the 8,400-foot wildcat No. 2 Sterlihng Williams 10 miles east of Gail.

The site is approximately 1,000 feet southeast of the Bakke No. 1-A Williams, abandoned Sept. 18, 1959 at 8,231 feet. It is about 700 feet east-northeast of Estoril's own No. 1 Sterling Williams, for which a completion report appears below.

GAINES WILDCATS

Richard Gunther Co., Midland, and Midwest Esploration Inc. will drill a 12,800-foot wildcat, No. 1 Bauorisett Farms, 15 miles southeast of Seminole.

The stake is 660 feet from the south, and 1980 feet from the west line of labor 2, league 300, Terry CSL.

The site is 3/4 of a mile northeast of Cities Service's No. 1-A Pruett, abandoned June 15, 1965 at 12,706 feet.

••••

Davis Oil Co., Houston, plans to drill a 13,500-foot wildcat, the No. 1 R.S. Brennand Estate, 20 miles southeast of Seminole.

The reported location is 1,516 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 26, block A-19, PSL survey. However, we were unable to spot this project using this location.

LYNN SEARCHER

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Mears, a 10,400-foot wildcat, 11 miles north of Tahoka.

The drillsite is 467 feet from the south, and 1550 feet from the west line of section 5, block D-23, PSL survey.

The project will be drilled 5/8 of a mile northeast of Amoco's No. 1 Zant, abandoned April 23, 1976 at 10,350 feet.

TERRY VENTURE

American Quasar Petroleum, Midland, will be drilling the No. 1-92 Ramseur, a 12,000-footer, six miles southeast of Brownfield.

They will test for Brownfield, South production at 10,700 feet, and for the Fusselman at 12,000.

BORDEN COMPLETION

Estoril Producing Corp., Midland has completed the wildcat No. 1 Sterling Williams as an oil well.

The hole was bored to 8,400 feet, plugged back to 4,030 feet, and completed through perforations between 3,954 and 3,960 feet. It's cased with 4 1/2-inch set at 4,920 feet.

After treatment with 2,500 gallons of acid, the well tested 164 barrels of 31.4 gravity oil daily and five barrels of water through a 16/64-inch choke. The gas/oil ratio is 495 to 1.

The wellsite is in section 232, block 97, H&TC survey.

Mexico gas price rise boosts sales at U.S. stations

By JESUS RANGEL
Copley News Service

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. — Gas station operators here reported a dramatic increase in sales yesterday (Tuesday) as a result of Mexico's decision to more than double the price of regular gasoline and to increase prices on unleaded and diesel gasoline.

The increase in prices — made to discourage consumption among residents and to keep Americans from crossing the border to buy gas — was announced about the same time that price boosts on milk and cigarettes were also made.

The government decisions brought an outcry from Mexican citizens and from the country's labor unions, who immediately demanded an emergency increase in minimum wages to offset the higher fuel and food costs.

Announced late Monday night by Pemex, Mexico's oil monopoly, the new prices took effect immediately. Regular gasoline increased from 38 cents to $1.02 a gallon. The price of unleaded gas went up from 97 cents to $1.46 a gallon. Diesel, which was selling for 14 cents a gallon, jumped to 36.4 cents.

The new prices produced some confusion and panic among nearby Tijuana, Mexico, gas station operators, some of whom closed down early Monday night to save their current fuel supplies to sell at a higher price.

There was evidence that some Tijuana station operators had increased their prices to more than what was announced, despite the new nationwide prices.

One station on was selling unleaded for $1.60 a gallon.

It is still too early to tell what effect the increase will have on long-term sales in service stations along the border, but indications yesterday (Tuesday) were that American dealers are now better able to compete with Mexican gasoline prices.

Price differences have in the past lured many U.S. border residents to Mexico.

"I don't really know why, but our business is booming today," said Ted Gantz, operator of Border Texaco in San Ysidro, Calif., on the American side of the border. "Just roughly, I sold 600 more gallons from 7 to 3 p.m. than I usually do. Whether it will keep up I don't know."

Tom Molatt, manager of Tom's Arco, also near the border in San Ysidro, said many of his customers were from Tijuana, indicating that gas stations here will likely start serving more motorists from Baja California.

Jose Andres Oteyza, federal resources and development secretary, said at a news conference in Mexico City that the price of premium gasoline was raised to about the same as in the United States, though it is still much lower than in Europe.

He said that regular gasoline and diesel prices will continue to be much lower in Mexico than in the United States.

Oteyza estimated that 90 percent of all Super gasoline is sold to Americans, who bring their gas-guzzlers when they move to Mexico or drive across the border regularly for fill-ups.

"We are going to close the breach, but not totally," he said.

Pemex Director Julio Rodolfo Moctezuma Cid said gasoline consumption is increasing annually at about 14 percent in Mexico, which refines 300,000 barrels of oil a day. In the border areas, however, the increase is 30 percent a year, he said.

At its current consumption rate, Mexico would be required to either import gasoline or build a new $500 million refinery every two years, Moctezuma Cid said. A refinery, he said, "takes about four years to build, to put into service, in such a way that the rate of demand would go much faster than the building process."

In addition to gasoline, the government also increased the price of milk and cigarettes, leading Mexican consumers to accuse the government of giving them a "bitter Christmas."

The Commerce Ministry announced that milk would now cost $2.12 a gallon, compared with the $1.64 it cost previously, and cigarettes went up 33 percent to 78 cents a pack.

"The government really stuck it to us," said Antonio Hernandez, a Mexico City salesman and one of hundreds of citizens who jammed the telephone switchboards of radio and television stations to register their complaints.

"This is going to be a bitter Christmas," said one worker who called a Mexico City radio station. "We will have to give children milk with an eye-dropper."

"The bureaucrats, who get paid better than the rest of us anyway, won't feel this because they get vouchers for their gasoline and they drive around in government cars," complained Angel Moreno, an office worker.

The price boosts are expected to reignite Mexico's volatile inflation rate, which had moderated this year to about 28 percent, following a 31 percent leap in 1980.

The Labor Congress, a confederation of Mexican unions, demanded an emergency increase in minimum wages to counter an expected round of price increases by industries that use the fuel.

Coal pipeline company to sell Missouri River water

By DAVID EGNER
Associated Press Writer

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — South Dakota has reached agreement with a coal pipeline company to sell water from the rambling Missouri River — a contract that could earn the state about $1.4 billion in the next 50 years.

The pact, reached Tuesday night after months of negotiations, would allow the Energy Transportation Systems Inc. to buy up to 16.3 billion gallons of Missouri River water a year.

Gov. Bill Janklow and representatives of the San Francisco-based ETSI scheduled a signing ceremony in Rapid City today.

Janklow said "there will be no big surprises" in the final contract, which he said is nearly identical to the water sale as authorized by a special session of the Legislature on Sept. 24.

Even after a contract is signed, it won't be final until it also wins approval from the state Water Management Board after a public hearing in January.

"It's a good year-end, it really is," a weary-looking Janklow said after emerging from final, secret contract talks in his office.

The contract includes a provision barring ETSI from using underground water from the Madison Formation aquifer unless water from the Oahe Reservoir near Pierre is unavailable, Janklow said.

The Madison is an important source of water for southwestern South Dakota and adjoining portions of Wyoming and Nebraska.

The ETSI deal has drawn criticism from officials in several downstream states who fear it establishes a dangerous precedent of selling Missouri River water for use outside the basin area.

Janklow has dismissed those complaints, saying the ETSI deal is a one-time sale involving a relatively small amount of water.

The Missouri, the second-longest U.S. river, behind the Mississippi, stretches for 2,546 miles and drains water from 10 states.

In addition, ETSI needs a federal contract for the water sale. U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt, who will make the final decision on that contract, has said he supports the ETSI deal.

ND Resources to sell subsidiary

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — ND Resources, Inc., of Phoenix said Tuesday it has agreed to sell its wholly owned oil drilling and production subsidiary to Olympic Resources, Inc., of Reading, Mass., for $2.2 million.

ND Resources President Herbert W. Reynolds said his firm accepted an initial payment of $250,000 with the understanding that the sale of Diamond Back Drilling & Supply, Inc., of Rangley, Colo., will be completed by Dec. 31.

The sale will permit ND Resources to concentrate on its Texas oil programs, Reynolds said. He also said proceeds from the sale will allow development of other properties now under construction. He didn't idenntify those properties.

The Phoenix company's operations include coal production and processing in eastern Kentucky, drilling and development of oil and gas in Texas and uranium exploration and management in Wyoming and Colorado.

IS IT BUNK...

That newspaper readers are Something Special?

NOT AT ALL!

But don't take Our word for it...

TAKE THE WORD OF

Dr. S.S. Talbert, Chairman, Journalism Department, University of Mississipi.

Here are his findings after considerable research:

WHO IS THE READER OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING?

- He is likely to be more intelli... than people who respond to other advertising.
- He is likely to have more mon... other people.
- She is over 80% of the wome... shopping.
- He is nearly every man consi... of any major appliance.
- If she is older she looks for a... and parties.
- If she is a teenager, she sets th... fire.
- The newspaper reader is some one looking for a house to rent, or someone trying to find renters for his house.
- He or she is the whole comm... wants and needs.

Yes, Newspaper Advertising IS Different...

BECAUSE NEWSPAPER READERS ARE BETTER SALES PROSPECTS

If You Know What An Owner/Operator Is...

You Know It's Worth $2,500 To Become One.

The only thing stopping a lot of good truckers from becoming owner/operators is the tractor cost. That's why Aero-Mayflower developed a new tractor lease program. It's a way for owner operators to get started. All it takes to begin is $2,500. As an owner operator with Mayflower you'll get:

1. 56% of the line haul ($560 out of every $1,000.)
2. If the fuel goes up, so does your fuel surcharge.
3. Training (if you need it) at our expense.
4. Your own business with a very successful company behind you.

We'd like to tell you more. Call 1-800-428-1220 (in INDIANA call 1-800-382-1212) between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Brooks, Murry prove too much for Lee Rebels

Andrews sends Lee down to third straight defeat, 88-74

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — If the Midland Lee hit squad had broken the legs of Mike Murry and Keith Brooks prior to Tuesday's basketball game here, the Rebels could have beaten the Andrews Mustangs by a 74-20 margin.

Since the hit squad is already on Christmas vacation, Murry and Brooks had all four legs and two sets of shooting eyes in tact, not to mention 68 points between them as the Mustangs sent Lee to its third straight loss, 88-74.

Murry hit for 36 points while Brooks came up short with only 32. The rest of the Mustangs had only 20 points between them. So, the 14-1 Mustangs keep on rolling while Lee is suffering through its worst losing streak of the year with unbeaten Carlsbad, N.M., next on the schedule at 3:30 p.m. Monday in the Clovis, N.M., tournament.

Murry hit 26 of his 36 points in the second half to pass Brooks, who had 18 in the first half. Murry had 18 in the final period alone. Needless to say, it was a one-two punch the 9-5 Rebs couldn't handle.

BROOKS HIT 13 of 18 shots from the floor and six of eight from the charity stripe while Murry hit eight of nine free throws blitzed the net with his line drive jumpers.

"Andrews is a very quick and is one of the best teams in the area. Brooks is a super shooter and he showed he could go over our big man (Kenneth Brown)" Lee coach Paul Stueckler said. "Despite the way things went, I saw some things I liked in the game. We got through their press well at times and (Barry) Blackwell is getting into the grove with his shooting. (Kenneth) Brown is also taking the ball to the hoop much stronger."

Mustang mentor Frank Bice seemed to take the game in stride, maybe because he has seen the dynamic duo in action 15 times this season. "Well, I'll take my two guys just about anytime. I'm proud of our kids, but I don't think Lee ever really got it going. Lee did better against our press than anyone this year and our press wasn't flashy, but I think it did make a big difference when we broke to a 14 point lead in the third quarter.

"I saw Lee play in the Midland tournament and I thought they were a very good team. I don't know, but I think I saw some new faces out there," Bice said.

AND NEW faces there were. Alvin Dunson, who entered the game with a 15.8 points per game average, played sparingly and Olen Smith did not make the trip due to "personal problems".

"I started Steve Cherryhomes because I thought it would give us better defense and Alvin didn't have a good tournament in Lubbock over the weekend. Steve has started for us some this year. Olen is still with the team, but he didn't make this trip," Stueckler said.

Dunson did say before the game that he missed Monday's workout and would not start. He did end up with 10 points, eight in the second half.

While Brooks and Murry were putting on their shooting exhibition, Lee's Andre Van Buren was matching the Mustang duo pretty well until he fouled out with 4:39 left in the game. Van Buren ended up with 27 points with 17 in the first half and eight in the third quarter. Van Buren entered the game with an 18 point average.

In fact, it was foul trouble that probably kept the Rebels from their real attack plans. Randy Pepper, Cherryhomes and Brown all had three fouls in the first half. Pepper and Brown joined Van Buren on the bench with five fouls in the fourth period and had to see a lot of bench time.

Lee led only once in the game when Barry Blackwell, who hit a season high 16 points to impress Stueckler, hit a bomb to open the game. The contest was tied six times before Andrews broke open a 14-14 game and led by 11 at 35-24 with 2:30 left before the half. Lee came back to trim the margin to 37-31 at the half. Van Buren and Blackwell kept Lee in the game as the two combined for 27 of Lee's 31 first half points.

IT WAS the third period when things really got away from Lee. Murry got hot in the third period and Andrews led by 16 points with 40 seconds left in the third period. Brown had 10 of his 14 points in the fourth period before fouling out while Dunson and Blackwell each had six points to cut the Mustang lead to seven points with 2:29 left in the game, but another Brooks-Murry spurt put it away for the final 14-point margin.

Lee also dropped the junior varsity tilt, 61-50, as Floyd Cornejo led Andrews wth 20 points and Mark Templeton had 16. Tod Brown led Lee with 16 and Billy Sewell added 12.

Andrews goes back into action Tuesday against Brownfield and returns to District 2-AAAA action Jan. 5 in Lamesa. "That's the big shootout. Lamesa beat us in the Denver City tournament. The Spencer kid at Lamesa is one of the best all-around players I've seen," Bice said.

But someone must tell Bice that the grass can't be much greener than what he has in his own backyard. Lee will testify that Murry and Brooks can turn out the lights and sing with the Fat Lady.

John Henry (8) with Willie Shoemaker in the irons, shows the form that won the often-sold, one-time claimer, Horse of the Year honors. John Henry broke the $3 million barrier in earnings this year to win the year-ending honors to go along with two other Eclipse Awards.

John Henry's journey ends as Horse of the Year for '81

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y. (AP) — Sam Rubin was in the market for $25,000 horse back in 1978. So he bought John Henry, an $1,100 yearling who already had been sold for $2,200, $7,500 $10,000. Today, John Henry is Horse of the Year for 1981.

The 6-year-old gelding, who became the first race horse to earn $3 million in a career and won eight of 10 starts this year, was the first unanimous selection for Horse of the Year in the 11-year history of the Eclipse Awards.

It was announced Monday that John Henry received all 191 votes in balloting by members of the National Turf Writers Association, writers and editors of the Daily Racing Form and racing secretaries for the member tracks of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations.

John Henry, who races for the Dotsam Stable of Mr. and Mrs. Rubin, also was voted grass course champion and best horse or gelding 4 years old or older. Only three other thoroughbreds — Ack Ack, Forego and Secretariat — won three Eclipse Awards in the same year.

A first-place choice of each of the organizations involved in the balloting was worth 10 points, and John Henry got the maximum 30 points in each the grass and older-horse categories.

Each of other winners, except best steeplechaser, also received 30 points. They were Deputy Minister, 2-year-old colt; Before Dawn, 2-year-old filly; Kentucky Derby winner Pleasant Colony, 3-year-old colt; Wayward Lass, 3-year-old filly; Relaxing, older filly or mare; De La Rose, female turf horse, and Guilty Conscience, sprinter.

Zaccio was chosen as steeplechase champion by six-member committee.

In recording eight wins and two fourths in 1981, John Henry set a single-year earnings record $1,798,030 and finished the year with $3,022,810. The record was $2,781,607 by Secretariat who retired at end of 1980 when he was Horse of the Year.

Most of John Henry's success has come on the grass where he has posted 21 wins, eight seconds and three thirds in 35 career starts, and this year earned $1,181,580 on six wins and a fourth in seven races, including the Arlington Million at Arlington Park, a victory that was worth $600,00.

But the son of Ole Bob Bowers-Once Double proved he can win big races on the dirt, too, this year winning the Santa Anita Handicap under Laffit Pincay, who rode him in his first five starts and the Jockey Club Gold Cup under Bill Shoemaker, who rode him in his last five starts. He was trained by Ron McAnally in the West and by Lefty Nickerson in the East.

Fouts' NFLPA union troubles not over

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts is a paid-up member of the National Football League Players' Association — thanks to a couple of Charger fans — his problems with the union are not over.

The NFLPA planned to file charges today with the National Labor Relations Board, claiming the Chargers ignored the league's bargaining agreement with its players in allowing Fouts to play despite his refusal to pay $1,122 in union dues. The league's contract with the NFLPA, which expires at the end of the playoffs, requires each player to pay dues.

Dick Berthelson, an attorney for the NFLPA, said Tuesday that the union would file its charges with the NLRB's Region II office in New York, claiming "the Chargers' refusal to comply with the bargaining agreement is a violation of the National Labor Relations Board Act."

The union had demanded that Chargers' owner Eugene Klein suspend Fouts, one of the NFL's best passers, for the team's final game Monday night. But four days before the game, the two Chargers' fans paid the dues, and the union's executive director, Ed Garvey, accepted the money. Garvey warned that some action would be taken against the Chargers, who won that game over Oakland to clinch the American Conference West title. Fouts played the entire game.

That action will name as co-respondents Klein and the NFL's Management Council, which serves as the league's bargaining agent, Berthelson said.

"Filing the charges with the NLRB gives notice to the employees that the conduct in question violated the bargaining agreement," Berthelson said. "The credibility of the union's security clause now and in the future cannot be ignored in the manner in which the Chargers choose to ignore it."

Landry likes Dallas defense

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry says Tampa Bay has the hardest hitting defense in the National Football League, but he wouldn't trade for them to replace his Cowboys.

"On performance, I would stack our defense up against anybody," Landry said Tuesday. "The bottom line is giving up points and that's where we have played well."

In the last seven weeks, the Cowboys have yielded only an average of 13 points per game.

Tampa Bay visits the Cowboys at noon Jan. 2 in a National Conference divisional playoff clash. The Buccaneers won the NFC Central while Dallas was champion of the NFC East.

"Tampa Bay is a lot better than the team we played last year," said Landry. "Their quarterback (Doug Williams) and their receivers are excellent.

"Right now they are in the same mold as San Francisco and the (New York) Giants. Tampa Bay probably has the hardest hitting defensive team in the league."

Landry said Williams had "looked very impressive in films. Tampa Bay has been scoring some points."

On another point, he said he didn't feel the homefield advantage was as distinct in the playoffs as it is during the regular season.

"Good teams tend to play good on the road during playoff games because they are concentrating," said Landry. "The homefield advantage is just not as important in the playoffs. Of course, you feel a little better if you are home but it's just not that important."

Erhardt, staff fired by Pats

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Ron Erhardt and his assistant coaches were the first to go. But they probably won't be the last as the New England Patriots try to regroup after a disastrous National Football League season.

Erhardt and his eight-man staff were fired Tuesday in the wake of the team's 2-14 record, the worst in it's history. New England shared the poorest record in the NFL with Baltimore, to whom the Pats lost twice.

Patriots' owner Billy Sullivan cited the team's poor record and the loss of fans and fan enthusiasm as key factors in his decision to oust Erhardt, whose contract was to expire in April. Assistants Jim Ringo, Fritz Shurmur, Raymond Berry, Rick Lantz, Bobby Grier, Babe Parilli, Gino Cappelletti and Dick Roach also were dismissed.

AND SULLIVAN, who hired Erhardt after Chuck Fairbanks went to the University of Colorado, said there will be more departures.

A new coach is "absolutely not" enough to bring back the crowds, Sullivan said.

"We've got to make some trades, dramatic trades, not trades for cosmetic purposes but trades that will perceptibly help us," Sullivan said. "We've got to draft very aggressively and, if necessary, make trades to get additional draft choices.

Sullivan said some "rather radical changes" are needed in the 45-man squad if the team hopes to improve its fan appeal.

New England's home attendance this season was 414,561, the lowest since 1976, two years before NFL teams switched from seven to eight home games a season.

Sullivan said he expects the team to break even financially, although revenues will be about $1 million below projections.

"The fan support not only eroded here" but on the road as well, Sullivan said. "It wasn't merely the dwindling crowds here but the lack of enthusiasm."

NO SUCCESSOR to the 49-year-old Erhardt was named, although several possible candidates have been mentioned in newspaper reports.

They include college coaches Johnny Majors of Tennessee, Don James of Washington, Joe Paterno of Penn State, Johnny Robinson of Southern California, Darryl Rogers of Arizona State and Ron Meyer of Southern Methodist; NFL assistants Marion Campbell and Fred Bruney of Philadelphia and Dan Henning of Washington, and Hugh Campbell, coach of the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

Sullivan said the team is seeking a tougher disciplinarian than Erhardt, whom he described as "too nice a guy."

He added that "the old theory that you spare the rod and you spoil the child is still true."

"Everyone has his way of doing things," the affable Erhardt said. "It apparently was all right when we were 9-7, 10-6 (in his first two years as head coach). It's too bad that's the way he feels. I don't think that (his approach to discipline) had anything to do with it."

Erhardt said he met with Sullivan for about 40 minutes Tuesday morning "but I didn't find out that I had been fired for 15 minutes."

SULLIVAN HAD planned to withhold the news from Erhardt until after the holiday season. But the coach told him Monday that he wanted to know as soon as a decision is made so that he and his assistants could seek other jobs. Sullivan said he made his decision Monday night.

Erhardt, who became a co-coach when Fairbanks was suspended prior to the final game of the 1978 season, said he already has had three NFL job feelers.

The Patriots had made the playoffs in two of the three years before Erhardt took over as coach in 1979.

The Patriots never reached the playoffs under Erhardt, although they were eliminated on the last day of the 1980 season. They ended the 1981 season with nine straight losses, tying a team record. But only two of their 14 setbacks were by more than 10 points.

Sullivan said that he didn't know if it was accurate to call Erhardt "a scapegoat," but that "you can't fire every one of the players."

"If, in our lineup next year, we can see seven new faces, five of which would be vast improvements over what we have, I'd say we'd be in the thick of the fight," said Sullivan.

Kush runs into trouble in Canada

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Kush may have been hired as head coach of the Baltimore Colts, but he may have trouble securing a release from his three-year contract with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League.

Hamilton General Manager Joe Zuger was quoted in Tuesday's Evening Sun here as saying that Kush "was under contract to us, and the Colts had no right to contact him without going through the proper channels."

Zuger, CFL Commissioner Jake Gaudaur and Ralph Sazio, general manager of the Toronto Argonauts said they would oppose any plans to break Kush's contract, the newspaper said.

Kush was in Baltimore Monday for an announcement by the National Football League club's officials that he had been signed to a five-year contract to succeed Mike McCormack.

In explaining how he was able to get out of the last two years of his three-year contract with Hamilton, Kush told reporters there was an escape clause in his pact, permitting him to terminate it.

According to the Evening Sun, Kush hedged on that comment when contacted in Phoenix Tuesday, saying "I thought there was a clause."

But Sazio, who was Hamilton's general manager when Kush was signed, disagreed.

"I would never have that in a contract. That would be insane," he was quoted as saying.

The newspaper said, however, that Tiger-Cats owner Harold Ballard apparently had agreed to release Kush from the remaining two years of the contract.

While unhappy about the Colts signing Kush, who coached at Arizona State University for 22 years and was fired following accusations that he had slapped a player, Ballard said he was not contemplating any legal action.

"I told him (Kush) I thought we had a contract and he said sure we did but he said something about us having a verbal agreement where he could leave," said Ballard.

Zuger contended Hamilton should receive something if Kush would be released from his contract to enable him to go to the Colts.

"We have got to be entitled to some kind of compensation," he said. "It certainly would be nice to talk to Frank one of these days. I'd like to talk to him about his...ethics."

SWC struggles to 4-0

By The Associated Press

It wasn't easy, but the Southwest Conference went 4-0 against non-conference basketball competition Tuesday night.

Only the unbeaten Texas Longhorns had a comfortable final margin as Arkansas, Texas Christian and Southern Methodist had to struggle a bit for their victories.

The Longhorns took an 82-56 decision over Drake of the Missouri Valley Conference, unbeaten Arkansas had to come from behind to beat Southern Mississippi, 63-54, Texas Christian edged Texas-San Antonio, 55-51, and SMU needed overtime to beat Texas Wesleyan, 87-78.

Lasalle Thompson scored 21 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as the Longhorns remained undefeated with an 82-56 romp over Drake. Mike Wacker added 16 points and 12 rebounds for Texas.

Texas, now 7-0, grabbed a 39-29 halftime lead and increased the margin to 15 points in the second half. Drake came back in the second half and pulled to within six points with 12:23 remaining when Tony Watson hit a short jumper.

Scott Hastings scored 21 points to lead the sixth-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks to a 63-54 victory over Southern Mississippi. Arkansas remained unbeaten after seven games.

Darrell Walker was the only other Razorback in double figures with 10 points.

Joe Dawson led the Golden Eagles with 18, Curtis Green had 12 aand Edger Eason added 10.

Southern Mississippi, 5-4, grabbed an 18-8 lead early in the first half, but the Razorbacks stormed back from their biggest deficit of the season to tie the game at 24 at halftime. Brad Friess scored early in the second half to give Arkansas a 26-24 lead and the Razorbacks never trailed again.

Joe Stephen and Doug Arnold scored 16 points each to lead Texas Christian to a 55-51 victory over Texas-San Antonio in a game that left TCU coach Jim Killingsworth sounding like a coach who had just lost a game.

"I don't know what's wrong with us. We do a great job early to get a big lead and then we just self-destruct," Killingsworth said, "I think we have suicidal tendencies."

TCU is now 5-3 while Texas-San Antonio dropped to 3-7.

It took a 10-foot baseline jumper by Dave Piehler to send the game into overtime as Southern Methodist edged Texas Wesleyan, 87-78.

Piehler's shot tied the game at 73 and the Mustangs outscored Texas Wesleyan, 14-5, in overtime.

Jon Koncak and John Addison scored 22 points each for SMU. Five of Addison's points came in the overtime period.

SMU is now 4-5 while Texas Wesleyan is 3-11.

Caldwell Jones leads 76ers to victory

By The Associated Press

By any measure, it was one of Caldwell Jones' finest games in the National Basketball Association.

The substitute center led the Philadelphia 76ers with his season-high 20 points. When the chips were down in the crucial fourth quarter and the New York Knicks led by one, 84-83, Jones scored 11 straight points in 2 minutes, 50 seconds.

His 12 rebounds were the most for any player. He played a grueling 37 minutes, only one less than Julius Erving. From the foul line, he was perfect: 10 for 10. Jones also made two steals and only the Knicks' fleet Michael Ray Richardson had more.

And when it was over, the 76ers had a 112-105 victory Tuesday night.

"I tried to be a factor on the offensive boards," said the lanky seven-footer. "I tried to put forth a great effort. I think it was a greater effort than normally. I had the challenge of opposing the Knicks' big rebounders so I had to be prepared mentally."

Jones, whose average was only eight points a game and whose previous high this season was 13, characterized his effort as "only fair."

In other NBA action, it was Denver 121, Houston 109; Los Angeles 124, Portland 110; Kansas City 106, Milwaukee 101; Boston 120, Cleveland 116; Indiana 92, Atlanta 88; Detroit 106, Dallas 98 and Chicago 92, Washington 90.

Jones started his string when the Knicks took the lead for the first time since the first minute of play, 84-83, with 10 minutes left. Three of Jones' points came from two technical fouls called against Richardson, who was ejected from the game.

With Philadelphia leading 89-88 following a dunk by New York's Bill Cartwright, who had 19 points, the 76ers ran off 13 straight points in 2¼ minutes to make the score 102-88 and put the game away for all intents and purposes. Erving added 19 points for Philadelphia while Randy Smith scored his season high for the Knicks with 26.

Nuggets 121, Rockets 109

Alex English scored 30 points as Denver defeated Houston. Denver led by only three points, 83-80, entering the final quarter.

But English scored 12 points and Glen Gondrezick and Ken Higgs each added three baskets as Denver outscored Houston 38-29 in the final quarter.

Lakers 124, Trail Blazers 110

Norm Nixon and three other Los Angeles players totaled 97 points as the Lakers beat Portland.

Nixon led all scorers with 27 points followed by teammates Mike Cooper with 26, Jamaal Wilkes with 24 and Earvin "Magic" Johnson with 20.

Kings 106, Bucks 101

Reggie King scored 23 points and Mike Woodson 21 to lead Kansas City past Milwaukee. Behind their two high scorers, the Kings opened a 16-point lead in the second quarter and held off a late surge by the Bucks behind Sidney Moncrief, who wound up with 19 points.

Celtics 120, Cavaliers 116

Larry Bird scored a season-high 36 points, including a long jumper with 1:20 left that gave Boston the lead for good. It was the seventh straight defeat for the Cavaliers, who have now lost 19 of their last 21 games.

Mike Mitchell, who led Cleveland with 31 points, hit two free throws with 1:52 left to tie the score 116-116. Bird, who also had seven rebounds and seven assists, then sank his jumper from the top of the circle and the Celtics later iced the victory when Robert Parish scored on a rebound of his own blocked shot with eight seconds left.

Pacers 92, Hawks 88

Herb Williams scored a season-high 26 points and Johnny Davis added 20 as Indiana came from behind to defeat Atlanta. The Pacers trailed 71-60 with 1:38 left in the third quarter and were down by eight, 86-78, after Atlanta's Steve Hawes made a layup with 4:52 to play.

Pistons 106, Mavericks 98

Kelly Tripucka scored 18 second-half points to rally Detroit past Dallas. The Pistons, who trailed by as many as 13 points in the first half, took the lead for the first time three minutes into the third quarter on a 15-3 scoring binge.

Detroit's second-half spurt was aided by Terry Tyler's 15 points. Tripucka, the first-round draft choice from Notre Dame, was the game's high scorer with 27 points, while Tyler finished with 20 and Phil Hubbard, 16.

Bulls 92, Bullets 90

Ricky Sobers hit a 20-foot jump shot with two seconds left to lift Chicago over Washington.

Ricky Sobers led the Bulls with 14 points, while Artis Gilmore, David Greenwood and Theus each scored 12. Greg Ballard paced Washington with 32 points.

Thompson joins Longhorn staff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Coach Ronnie Thompson of Port Arthur Jefferson, whose last two teams compiled a 24-1-1 record, will join the Texas Longhorn football coaching staff, it was reported today.

The Austin American-Statesman said the hiring of Thompson, who was here Tuesday watching Texas work out for the Cotton Bowl, will be announced at 5 p.m. today.

Thompson was a halfback at Jefferson when Fred Akers, now head coach at Texas, was a Jefferson assistant coach in 1961.

Four of Thompson's 1980 players at Jefferson are Longhorn freshmen this year, and one of his current seniors — defensive end Johnny "Kip" Cooper — is considered a blue-chip prospect.

Top players set for meet

TORONTO (AP) — The top four tennis players in the world will be competing in the $350,000 Molson Challenge from Feb. 2-7, says tournament director Andrzej Kepinski.

Americans John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina — numbers one through four in the world rankings — will be vying for the $125,000 first prize in the eight-man, round-robin tournament, Kepinski said Tuesday.

They will be joined by one other Top 10 player — 10th-ranked Peter McNamara of Australia. Also competing will be Americans Eliot Teltscher and Vitas Gerulaitis, the defending champion, and Italian Adriano Panatta.

Lee girls win streak to five

ALPINE — The Midland Lee girls basketball team ran their winning streak to five games here Tuesday night with a sound 59-45 win over the Alpine Fightin' Bucks.

Yshun King and Rozena McCabe led the Rebel charge with 13 points each and were the only Rebels in double figures. YoYo Goodley and Shun Harris each had eight points.

Alpine's Abby Portillo led all scorers with 15 points while Cerdine Gallegos added 13.

"We had a lot of fun, but at this time of year, I think it is hard to get full concentration," Lee coach Shirley Stephenson said.

The Rebels jumped to a 17-8 first quarter lead and led 32-18 at the half to all but seal the victory early.

Lee will be back in action Monday in the Slaton 16-team tournament and then open District 5-5A play against cross town rival Midland High on Jan. 2 at Chaparral Center in an 8 p.m. contest. In Slaton Monday, the Rebs will face Levelland at noon in first round action.

Lee is now 10-4 on the year after starting the season with a 5-4 mark.

Midland Lee (59): Duran, 0-0-4-0; Goodley, 3-2-2-8; Matson, 0-0-2-0; Belknap, 2-0-1-4; Farias, 0-4-0-4; McCabe, 6-1-2-13; McGaha, 2-3-0-7; Gavia, 0-0-2-0; King, 6-1-2-13; Harris, 4-0-2-8; Belden, 0-0-1-0; Dwyer, 1-0-1-2. Totals: 24-11-19—59.

Collins may be Yankee soon

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Collins might be a New York Yankee very soon. What position he plays might depend on another free-agent outfielder: Reggie Jackson.

Collins, who played out his contract with the Cincinnati Reds last season, has been the object of Yankee owner George Steinbrenner's interest. Steinbrenner indicated Tuesday that he expects to sign Collins.

"We're very hopeful because he fits right in to certain things we're trying to do with the ball club," said Steinbrenner. "The first five men in our lineup will be speedballs."

Presumably, Steinbrenner figures that Collins, who stole 79 bases in 1980 and 26 last season, will be one of those five players.

"We're not going to be the old, put-one-out-of-the-park, big-inning team," added Steinbrenner. "It's not just the long ball that puts them in the seats anymore. A running team is the toughest thing on an opposing pitcher and it's exciting."

Collins, drafted by the Yankees in the re-entry draft last month, has said he feels he could make his biggest contribution to the Yankees as a first baseman. If the Yankees re-sign Jackson, it would not leave much playing time for Collins in the outfield, where he is considered only adequate.

Hoyas, Hilltoppers exchange best shots

By The Associated Press

The Georgetown Hoyas and the Western Kentucky Hilltopers gave it their best shots — and some shots were harder that others.

"It was more like a pro game than a college affair," said Western Kentucky Coach Clem Haskins after Tuesday night's fight-punctuated, 64-45 loss to 17th-ranked Georgetown.

The rough game was halted in the second half when the Hilltoppers' Percy White threw a punch after Georgetown's Fred Brown had wrapped his arms around White's head. At the final buzzer, Western Kentucky's Bobby Jones was knocked to the floor by a punch after he had grabbed Georgetown's Pat Ewing.

Eric Floyd led the Hoyas with 22 points, including 14 in the second half as Georgetown won its seventh straight game and eighth in 10 outings.

Top Ten

Scott Hastings scored 21 points to pace Arkansas' conquest of Southern Mississippi. The victory was the seventh straight for the undefeated Razorbacks.

Quintin Dailey's 12-foot jump shot with 2½ minutes remaining in overtime sent San Francisco ahead to stay over New Orleans. Dailey, the Dons' star guard who finished the game with 28 points, made two straight baskets as USF came back to gain a 72-72 tie before the end of regulation time.

Dailey then broke a 77-77 tie with his shot from the baseline midway in the overtime, and he made two free throws to stretch the San Francisco lead to 81-77. Forward John Hegwood, who led USF with 29 points, put in two more free throws to boost the unbeaten Dons into a six-point lead and sew up their eighth victory of the season.

In other action, No. 20 Villanova hammered Pace 121-64.

Second Ten

Terry Cummings scored a season-high 27 points and Bernard Randolph added 15 to lead DePaul over Maine. Cummings, who left the floor with 6:50 left, also was a standout on defense as he and Randolph held Maine's high-scoring Clay Pickering to eight points. Pickering had been averaging 18 points a game for the Black Bears.

Center Greg Stewart and guard Mike Anderson each scored 18 points as Tulsa outpaced Florida Southern. The defense-minded Golden Hurricane, now 7-1, set a team record with 20 steals from the Moccasins, who managed only 15 shots from the field in the first half.

Florida Southern's John Ebeling started the contest with a per-game average of 31 points, but managed only 23, making 15 of them on free throws. The defending NCAA Division II champions are now 3-3.

Oliver Robinson scored a game-high 18 points to lead Alabama-Birmingham over Cal State-Chico. The Blazers pulled ahead early and never trailed, cruising to a 48-34 halftime lead.

Stewart Granger and Ed Pinckney triggered a first-half surge as Villanova trounced Pace. Pace took a 10-8 lead three minutes into the game before Granger and Pinckney sparked a 45-6 barrage that buried the Setters. Villanova led 61-29 at halftime.

Unranked Teams

Elsewhere, Jacques Tuz scored 21 points and Colorado hit seven of eight free throws in the last 1:49 as the Buffaloes beat Nevada-Las Vegas 65-59 to win the sixth annual Rebel Roundup Tournament. Ken Green scored 29 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Nevada-Reno to the championship of its own Wolf Pack Classic with a 91-76 victory over St. Mary's.

Also, Tim Cain scored a career-high 28 points and John Leonard added 20 to lead Manhattan to an 82-77 victory over Harvard; Kenny Stancell had a career-high 20 rebounds to go with 27 points as he led Virginia Commonwealth to a 61-55 victory over Old Dominion; Vince Taylor, Chip Engelland and Tom Emma combined for 55 points to pace Duke to a 70-57 victory over East Carolina.

OU will overcome lack of fans and practice says Switzer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer believes his team will overcome a lack of fans and practice when it meets Houston on Saturday in the Sun Bowl.

"They've looked at Houston on film enough that I think they'll be up for them," Switzer said Tuesday. "They want to play in a bowl game and they want to play."

OKALHOMA RECENTLY returned unsold tickets to the Sun Bowl because they weren't snatched up by fans. After a disappointing 6-4-1 season, the Sun Bowl bid was virtually the only bowl offer for the Sooners. But Switzer downplayed the disappointment.

"Part of it is that the Sun Bowl comes during the Christmas holidays which is a difficult period for people go away," he said. "For that matter, Oklahoma fans haven't been going to the Orange Bowl in the last couple of years. Maybe they're poor."

The Orange Bowl, Oklahoma's preference, came up in Switzer's conversation several times Tuesday after his team arrived in El Paso. He complained that he always has a week to practice between final exams and the Orange Bowl games, but will have only three practices before the Sun Bowl.

COUGAR COACH Bill Yeoman said his team had concentrated on defending the wishbone offense it will face in the nationally televised bowl game.

A cold wind whipped through the Sun Bowl Tuesday morning as the Cougars worked on their passing game and went through basic drills.

It was clear that the Sun Bowl had not been foremost on the Cougars' minds during the season. Some of the players ran onto the field in practice jerseys that said "Think Cotton" on the back. Coaches had the players turn the jerseys inside out for the rest of the practice.

Switzer said Tuesday that shutting down the Houston offense, especially the running and passing of quarterback Lionel Wilson, would be the key to the game.

"Houston has one of the most explosive offensive teams in football," Switzer said. "The key would be to keep them from getting the big play."

SWITZER HAD good news on his own quarterback situation because Darrell Shepard, who missed the final game of the season with an injury, will start against the Cougars.

He said Shepard, a senior from Odessa, Texas, and junior Kelly Phelps both will see action Satuday.

"It depends on how the game's going and where we are," Switzer said. "But I'm glad I've got two quarterbacks."

BANCROFT HOSTS ANNUAL AWARDS DAY

Bancroft Paper Company, Inc., a Louisiana based corporation, hosted its 17th Annual Awards Day at the Civic Center in West Monroe, Louisiana on November 14, 1981.

Among those honored at this year's ceremony were Jim McLaughlin and Ronnie Beard of Bancroft's Midland Division.

Mclaughlin was first runner-up to the T.O. Bancroft Cup, the highest management award in the company. He joined Bancroft as a salesman in November of 1976 and was promoted to General Manager of the Midland Division in May of 1979.

Beard was recipient of a Silver Cup, Bancroft's Professional Salesman's Performance Award. To receive this award, a salesman must achieve a perfect performance in two of four quarters during the year. In addition, Beard was named winner of the 1981 Grand Prize, the greatest individual honor for sales achievement in the company. This is truly a unique and brilliant accomplishment, since Beard competed with salesman from twenty-five other Bancroft divisions to win this coveted distinction.

MHS CHATTER

Midland High filled with Christmas spirit

By DEBORAH MASHBURN
JENNIFER RAMSEY and DARA PERRY

Christmas spirit is in the air at MHS. Parties, special activities and decorated doors are easily found. VOE and Foreign Languages both had their parties Dec. 15. Attendance was exceptional for both organizations. The JETS held their party on Dec. 17.

Packbacker Squad Leaders had a Secret Santa gift exchange, ending with a dinner at Cody's. On Dec. 17 Choir held its annual Christmas Concert. It was followed by refreshments in the cafeteria.

There was a school-wide door decorating contest. Students decorated third period class doors in hopes of winning the grand prize, a Coke party.

Seniors — Registration deadline for the Feb. 20 ACT test is Jan. 22. Seniors should fill out a counselor information form. If you haven't, please see Mrs. Cobb.

Diploma information forms will be filled out soon. If you have not already started the college application process, you should begin right away.

On the sports scene, our champion Roundballers took the Tall City Tournament crown for the second year in a row. MHS defeated El Paso Parkland in the first round of play, 84-41. MHS then went on to the semi-finals where they met El Paso Bel Air and won 63-48. The Bulldogs gained a spot in the finals, where they played a thriller against cross-town rival Lee, beating them 63-58. Don Sharnowski was named to the All-Tournament team and Most Valuable Player of the tournament went to teammate Preston Robertson. Congratulations guys!

Seasonal game point averages for the Roundballers are Robertson at 21.4; Sharnowski, 14.7 and Raymond Parker, 12.7.

Boys JVs were defeated 63-58 by the Ector Eagles. They turned the score around in their next game to down Dixie 75-51.

Lady Roundballers have expanded their record to 9-7. They have been victorious over the Sweetwater Mustangs, 56-34, and over the Pecos Eagles, 43-26.

JV Girls hold a fantastic 3-0 record. They have beaten Abernathy, Sweetwater and Pecos.

Splashing on, the girl swimmers came back from San Angelo victorious. The boys brought home a fifth place finish.

We hope that everyone has a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Airlines in for troubles during Christmas season

By ROBERT E. DALLOS
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Despite airport traffic jams, long lines at ticket counters, and the usual mass confusion caused by air travelers all trying to reach their holiday destinations at the same time, many of the nation's financially-ailing airlines are not reaping their traditional Christmas bounties.

"We may be flying many people," said Charles Novak, a spokesman for United Airlines, the nation's largest, "but we're not taking in the dollars."

"I would classify this season as somewhat soft," said David B. Kunstler, vice president of sales and marketing for Eastern Airlines. "I wouldn't go as far as saying it is bleak, however."

There are several reasons why the airlines' holiday business will not be quite as brisk this year. The current economic recession has caused passenger traffic to either decline slightly or remain flat compared with the same period a year ago. The air traffic controllers strike has resulted in as much as a 15 percent reduction in flights for some carriers and has prevented the airlines from adding extra flights for the holiday crunch. And the passengers who are flying are spending less this year as more and more of them are taking advantage of discount fares.

TO MAKE matters worse for the airlines, many passengers have been making several reservations on different flights, and then failing to cancel those they do not use. As a result, some flights have been fully reserved for weeks, forcing the airlines to turn away potential passengers while flying partially-empty planes because many passengers with reservations do not show up for the flight.

"The no-shows hurt the whole industry," said Larry G.Anderson, vice president of sales at Capitol Airways. "They can hurt the profit margins for the entire year. The Christmas season is the last big push of the year. It is a tremendous period and you want to maximize it."

The problem leads to a vicious circle. To fight such no-shows, the carriers are overbooking even more heavily this Christmas season than in past years. But the more the airlines overbook, the more it encourages travelers worried about being bumped to make multiple reservations to insure reaching their destinations.

"WE ARE encouraging them to go standby," said United's Novak. "Because there are a lot of seats out there, their chances of getting on the flight they want are good."

Yet dozens of passengers at Los Angeles International Airport say they have been turned away from flight after flight after trying to get a standby seat. Others have been bumped from flights, forcing the airlines to buy tickets on other flights for the harried passengers.

"The no-show problem is as traditional as turkey at Christmas," one airline official said. TWA says its normal no-show rate is about 20 percent, which doubles during holiday periods, running about 40 percent during the five-day Thanksgiving holiday period. "It's business you often don't really recover," a TWA spokesman said.

But some industry spokesmen think the holiday problems have been exaggerated. "Christmas is the one time of the year that people save up for," said David Frailey, spokesman for American Airlines. "They'll make that trip to the family Christmas gathering no matter how bad things are."

MOST AIRLINES, however, are complaining about the failure of air traffic to meet expectations. TWA's bookings are off three percent and other carriers said business has been slower than expected.

"Rather than looking at the 10 percent (extra) which we would like to see," says Eastern's Kunstler, "we're looking at something that is more or less flat. The economic conditions are apparently affecting the 10 percent of people who are the marginal travelers."

"We haven't had the demand out there thus far this year," said Novak. "There's just not going to be as much gravy."

While consumers benefit from the discount fares spawned by intense competition on popular routes, the discount wars are hurting the airlines' efforts to recover from their financial woes.

"During the past year pricing wars have become more intense than anticipated," said George W. James, a senior vice-president of the Air Transport Association of America, the industry trade group. During the third quarter of 1981, he said, 71 percent of domestic coach travel involved discount tickets and the average fare reduction was 47 percent off the full price. A year ago, he said, 61 percent of coach travel was on discount tickets at an average fare reduction of 43 percent.

WHILE MANY airlines are complaining, however, others are expressing optimism about the holiday period. A Pan Am spokesman said more than 85 percent of its seats were occupied last weekend. Western Airlines said its planes were three-quarters full last weekend.

But several industry leaders are facing a dilemma. "Our yields are declining because we don't receive as much per passenger mile as we used to," said United's Novak. "The discounts we've been offering have not generated the traffic necessary to justify them."

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

How to tell if potential suicide callers serious

By KENNETH H. WOLF, MSSW, SP

Suicide prevention hotlines are in existence in most major cities. These are generally 24-hour per day services each day of the year. They are staffed by trained volunteers or, less often, by mental health professionals. Such services begin by looking for clues that the person is considering suicide and by evaluating the degree of stress in the person's life.

Almost everyone considering suicide does leave general or quite specific clues that can be spotted by family, friends or suicide prevention services if everyone knows what to look for. Sometimes these clues are quite evident and other times quite subtle. The decision to take one's life usually comes after a considerable period of deliberation, even though the act may seem unpredicted and impulsive to others. Once the decision is made, the person seems to "act differently." He may become more withdrawn, reduce his eating, have sleep disturbances, withdraw from usual social interactions, draw up his will, begin to give away valued possessions, speak as if there is no future for him, or act like he is going on a long trip. Although these are definite clues to suicide, they do not establish how close someone is to the act.

At a major suicide prevention center, 10 percent of the callers are judged to be moderately to seriously suicidal. Of this 10 percent, one out of six callers is judged to be on the verge of death. Most other calls are sincere and come from people in distress who are not seriously suicidal. Such suicide prevention services begin all calls by attempting to judge the "degree of lethality" of the caller. This is done by an assessment of age, sex, living situation, marital status, life style, degree of stress, past attempts and any specific plans and means of suicide.

If the situation is judged to be very serious with a specific suicidal plan and the means at hand to implement it, the staff of the suicide prevention center is concerned with doing what they can to save the life of the caller, not with solving his problems or remaking his personality. The staff member attempts to establish communication and rapport with the caller. The ultimate goal of the service is to defuse the immediate situation and to link the caller with the ongoing treatment services which he needs.

A suicidal crisis can be recognized by family and friends prior to the point when the person is ready to implement his plan. When such a situation is recognized there is a tendency on the part of families to deny the reality of the situation. Such denial of what one notices is quite dangerous in that intervention and treatment are delayed. If the signs of suicide are recognized, the person should be urged to seek help. If he refuses, the family should seek professional advice on how the situation should be handled. In Midland, suicide prevention and crisis intervention services are available through the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center, 683-5591, 24 hours per day.

Phillips' Old Guard is special squadron

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — You've probably seen that tall, black Army officer in news photos and on television at VIP ceremonies at the White House and Pentagon and wondered who he was.

Wonder no more. He's Col. Don Phillips, 47, commander of the famous 3d U.S. Infantry (Old Guard), the Army's official ceremonial unit and escort to the president.

He and his 1,060-member outfit have stood tall — most of them are six-footers although the permitted height ranges from 5 feet 8 inches to 6 feet 4 — at numerous "state arrivals" on the White House lawn in the last year and a half.

They have been reviewed by Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, Britain's prime minister; Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany; the late President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, to name a few.

Phillips, who looks taller than his 6 feet 2 because of his lithe build, said he hasn't had much heavy conversation with the VIPs he has helped "arrive" at the White House and Pentagon.

"I tell them what we're doing in the ceremony," he said, drawing on one of the 30 cigarettes he smokes per day. "For example, I will say that the 56 flags the Old Guard carries belong to our 50 states and six territories.

"They express their appreciation and usually say how well the troops looked."

The colonel said President Reagan and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger show their appreciation with a nod or a wink or a simple "thank you, colonel."

Phillips impresses on his troops the fact that they are representing the Army at these noteworthy functions.

"I tell them that the impression these visiting leaders take away from those formations is the impression they will have of our whole Army," he said.

Phillips, who was born in Shreveport, La., and brought up in Los Angeles, is extremely proud of his personnel, which include females.

"They're handpicked volunteers," he noted. "Every one we recruit must be a high school graduate or equivalent and have a clean background; we don't accept anyone with a police record."

The Old Guard has its own recruiting team that covers the continental U.S. and also goes to South Korea and West Germany looking for candidates. Most of the new recruits have just completed basic training, but mid-careerists, such as platoon sergeants, are also needed to replace those whose tours are up.

The normal Old Guard tour is for 30 months, but may run anywhere from 24 to 36.

It is not all state arrivals, full-honors funerals and inaugurations for the Old Guard. Its members must keep up their Army skills.

The colonel said that 455 of his lower enlisted ranks recently completed individual qualification testing with an average of 91, and 85 scored 100. The testing included rifle and anti-tank weapon firing, physical conditioning, first aid and maintenance and use of their weapons, he said.

"Now they are starting squad, platoon and company level training," he said. "This is done at Army posts in Virginia and Maryland, for the most part, but Old Guard units have gone to Panama for jungle warfare training in recent months."

Not every member of the Old Guard participates in each ceremony, although just about everyone did for President Reagan's inaugural last January.

"We marched in review at the Capitol," Phillips said. "Then, as his escort, we preceded the president down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House."

The inaugural and most of the state arrivals have honor units from each of the four services and sometimes from the Coast Guard, too. As the Army is the senior service, Phillips is in overall command of the participating military personnel.

A decorated veteran of the Vietnam War, Phillips was commissioned through the Reserve Officers Training Corps at San Jose State University in California.

'Rapid deployment force' is misnomer

By KIP COOPER
Copley News Service

The commandant of the Marine Corps characterizes the Rapid Deployment Force (RDF) as a misnomer, promising something that is not there.

"The term RDF was created out of whole cloth to satisfy political requirements to give the image that we had forces with the capability for rapid response to deal with issues distant from our shores," Gen. Robert Barrow said in an interview.

Barrow said he was not suggesting that the RDF — which would draw on units from all branches of the military — be called the "slow deployment force."

However, Barrow was suggesting that the Marines should be used to spearhead a forced U.S. military entry into a hostile situation because it can deploy air, land and sea units from within its own ranks.

The Marines could be followed by whatever armed forces would be necessary to carry out battle objectives.

"We don't have to worry about everybody getting there at the same time or nearly simultaneously," Barrow said. "I've been in three wars and I have yet to see a crowded battlefield."

"I just don't understand why we have such things as a Rapid Deployment Force that includes the Marine Corps but does not exploit it to its fullest," Barrow said.

"We in the Marine Corps are as representative of a Rapid Deployment Force as we can possibly be," the four-star general said. "We are major players and our major emphasis is on forcible entry," the general said.

Barrow said it is all right to talk about rapid deployment in terms of sending small formations somewhere rapidly by air.

Try Federal Express if you haven't mailed for Christmas

By MARK SAUER
Copley News Service

If you still haven't mailed that Christmas package to the folks back home in Peoria, the Postal Service says, don't despair — just send it by Express Mail.

It will cost a little more, but the purpose of Express Mail is to get any item weighing 70 pounds or less delivered overnight.

Packages weighing up to two pounds can be delivered anywhere in the Express Mail system by 3 p.m. the next day for $9.35.

Or cut the cost to $5.85 for the same package by having someone on the other end agree to pick it up at their nearest post office designated to handle Express Mail. In that case, pick-up can be made after 10 a.m.

(Check with your local post office to be sure your destination is part of the Express Mail system).

Another mail matter — your friendly postman has been reminded by his superiors that regulations prevent him from requesting or accepting gratuities from customers at this time of year.

It's right there in the Postal Service's Code of Ethical Conduct. The idea is to "prevent a conflict of interest or the appearance of such a conflict on the part of a Postal Service employee.

New National Smoker Study:

Toughest Smoker Tests Ever!

Landmark smoker study provides new evidence supporting MERIT as proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

Just released—results of rigorous new smoker research conducted by MERIT.

The conclusion: In extensive tests comparing taste and tar combined, MERIT is the clear choice over leading higher tar brands.

MERIT Remains Unbeaten.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

In the second part of this extensive new study, former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
