Disaster status sought for drought area

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While the Midland County commissioners are calling on Texas Gov. Mark White to declare Midland County a "disaster area" due to the drought, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower is asking President Reagan to deem a 27-county West Texas area a national disaster.

"We're all interested in the recovery of this area," Midland County Judge Bill Ahders said Tuesday.

"The drought has been devastating to area farmers and ranchers," Ahders noted in a letter to White.

Meanwhile, Hightower, who was in Midland last week to hear of area farmers' and ranchers' plight during the drought, is asking the president to declare the area, which is threatening to turn into "a new dust bowl," a national disaster.

"This is no little, isolated problem, since these 27 counties cover an area larger than the state of Pennsylvania," Hightgwer said of the 10-month-long drought which farmers and ranchers have likened to the onset of the seven-year drought of the 1950s.

"This drought is wrecking an agricultural economy that produces sales of a half million dollars in a normal year.

In Midland County alone, gross agricultural income averages $11 million a year gver a 10-year-period. The recent high was $17.5 million in the 1979 bumper-crop year; the low was $6.7 million in 1971.

The county's mainstay crop is cotton. Last year, the county's 180 farmers planted 33,081 acres an cotton and netted 23,795 bales. This year, noted Midland County Agent Earnest Kiker, the drought and the federal payment-in-kind (PIK) program have reduced the acreage planted in cotton to 4,000.

Of the cotton planted, only irrigated acres are surviving, and some of the 4,000 acres have had to be replanted.

On Tuesday, Hightower dispatched a letter to the governor requesting that he "set the wheels in motion to achieve a disaster-area designation" from the president.

Such designation would provide farmers and rachers low-interest loans from the Farmers Home Administration and Small Business Administration. Some producers, however, say they can't even afford another loan no matter how low the interest rates might be.

The drought reduced the number of cropland producers in Midland County from 180 last year to 123 this year, according to Kiker. The number of livestock producers is stable at 67.

Texas Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring called the drougt "severe" at an Austin news conference in which Hightower announced his measures to declare much of West Texas a disaster area.

Hightower has called on U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block to activate the federal Emergency Feed Grain Program, which would help defray cost of feeding livestock in the drought area where grass is inadequate for grazing.

"The ranchers are having to haul water and feed their livestock, because there's no grass left on the range," Hightower saad.

Though farmers have lost hope of making a 1983 crop, some farmers are planting cotton anyway, since the 1981 Farm Bill requires then to plant a crop to qualify for deficiency payments under the price-support loan program.

Unemployment rising

Odessa's figure reaches new high

Unemployment inched upward slightly in Midland during the month of May while it rose to an all-time high in Odessa.

The labor force declined in both cities, however, as people have continued to leave the Permian Basin in the last few months in search of greener pastures.

The jobless rate in Midland increased from 5.6 to 5.7 in May according to preliminary figures released by the Texas Employment Commission. A year ago in May it was 4.8 percent.

Statistics show that from a labor force of 64,500 people, 3,700 were out of work in Midland in May, compared to a labor pool of 64,700 in April with 3,600 unemployed.

The Odessa job picture looked worse last month. Unemployment rose from 9.4 percent to 9.7, an all-time high. A year ago in May the rate was 4.9 percent.

"Let's face it, we need some oil activity real badly," said Ed Miller, manager of the Midland TEC office. "I understand some of the service companies in Odessa have begun calling back a few people, but not enough to show up in the figures yet."

Miller said he advocates diversifying Midland's economy so the city's job outlook will not be so dependent on one industry. He cited the positive effects of companies such as Southwestern Bell, Texas Instruments and Teraco, a Midand manufacturer.

Miller said at least half of Midland's 3,700 people listed as unemployed in May are office workers and professionals like geologists and accountants. While many clerical workers also have lost their jobs, they tend to find new work sooner than do professionals, he added.

In May 1,089 individuals filed for continued unemployment benefits. That figure has dropped some, indicating to Miller that some people out of work have left Midland. The previous month, 1,130 people filed for continued claims.

The number of people filing first time claims has also dropped some, Miller said. In May, 491 filed for the first time, versus 563 in April.

The unemployment rate in June may increase, he warned, due to students seeking jobs.

In Texas, the jobless rate was lowest in Bryan-College Station, where 3.9 percent of the work force was unemployed. Austin was close behind at 4.0 percent. Houston recorded 9.4 percent unemployed in May. Dallas remained at 5.3 percent for the second month in a row.

The statewide rate was 8.0 percent. Nationally, 9.8 percent of the work force was unemployed in May (10.1 percent on a seasonallly adjusted basis.)

American journalists killed

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Two American journalists were killed by artillery fire while driving on an isolated road along the Honduras-Nicaragua border, the State Department said today. Honduras blamed Nicaraguan soldiers for the attack.

Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica said the bodies of Dial Torgerson, Los Angeles Times bureau chief for Mexico and Central America, and free-lance photographer Richard Cross, on assignment for U.S. News & World Report, were being brought by car to the capital and would arrive today after an eight-hour drive.

Anita Stockman, a State Department spokeswoman in Washington, confirmed today that Torgerson and Cross were killed Tuesday evening.

President Reagan was informed of the incident about 10:30 p.m. EDT and said he "deeply regrets the loss of life of two outstanding journalists who were carrying out their professional responsibilities in a very difficult situation," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

He added, "The president joins with all who believe in a free press in paying tribute to these professionals who were the tragic and unfortunate victims of conflict."

Heavy rifle fire along the the Nicaraguan border prevented Honduran troops from recovering the bodies immediately, but they did so after nightfall, Paz Barnica said. He said the information from the border zone came from a "definitive report from military intelligence."

Paz Barnica said Torgersen, Cross and their Honduran driver, who he identified as 27-year-old Jose Herrera, were killed around 5 p.m. EDT Tuesday by anti-tank fire from Nicaraguan troops across the border. However, The Los Angeles Times said it had been told by Honduran officials that the driver may have survived and another man killed.

The Honduran government sent an immediate protest note to Nicaragua, Paz Barnica said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

He said an anti-tank shell shattered the rented automobile Cross and Torgerson were riding in on a stretch of dirt road a few yards from the Nicaraguan border.

Midland landman fighting mass appraisal

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland landman C.L. "Clem" Ware says he has "no problem with paying taxes. I have no problem if the values are real."

But what disturbs Ware is the often site-unseen values placed on personal property by appraisers of the Midland County Appraisal District.

"So how in the hell can you come up with a fair deal," asked Ware, a landman and real-estate broker who has seen Midland go from boom to bust again and again since 1949. "I want an honest shake."

"You can't eyeball a house and tell how many square feet are in it," he said. "There should be some physical contact on property if you're going to make an appraisal.

"They're overchargang some people and undercharging others."

Ware's bout with the appraisal district came after he received a tax bill on office furniture where he works. He doesn't own it; his company, Fluor Oil and Gas Corp., does.

The bill was for $45 on furniture and fixtures valued at $2,920, he said.

Ware said he "hot-footed it" to the appraisal district headquarters at Dellwood Mall and confronted an appraiser, Bill Fetterly.

"HE VERY QUICKLY corrected my deal," said Ware. "He just deleted it."

Ware said he is disturbed over the appraisers' estimating values without seeing the property and incorrectly billing taxpayers, such as he. He said the appraiser got his name from the building directory and apparently assumed that Ware should pay taxes on the furniture and fixtures but without seeing the inside of the office and ascertaining ownership.

"To me, that's frightening," he said. "That's getting awfully close to malfeasance."

"The (appraisal) technique is exact," Ware said. "Their (the district's) approach to it is much less than satisfactory. I'd flunk them if they were students of mine."

But Chief Appraisal Roland Wilkinson, who's tantamount to the appraisal professor in this case, wouldn't.

However, Wilkinson did acknowledge that his eight appraisers, who don't see inside most Midland offices, generally use a $3-a-square-foot measure in affixing values to office furniture and fixtures.

"We try to determine, to the best of our ability and knowledge, the number of occupied square feet in each office in Midland," he said.

WHAT WILKINSON describes as the "the ideal situation and the most equitable" would be for the appraiser to make a "fee appraisal" of each office and to note the "make and model of every piece" of furniture and equipment in each office.

"But that becomes impossible. I don't believe the taxpayers of Midland County could afford to staff that effort. There's no way we could do it."

But what Wilkinson does, by law, is to ask for a rendition of office furniture and fixtures from the building owner or lessor.

Midland's office space totals 5.5 million square feet, according to a June survey by the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Wilkinson cited a law, in the Texas Property Tax Laws (the tax code), which requires a person to "file a report listing the name and address of each owner of property that is in his possession of management" if the chief appraiser requests it. Wilkinson does.

In addition, he asks for square footage of the leases, though the tax code does not require that be furnished to the district.

Such information is confidential, said Wilkinson, since "some people could used that if direct competition" in setting lease rates. "They could under cut."

UNLIKE MIDLAND, the Lubbock County Appraisal District inventories each office and has since the 1960s.

"Generally speaking, it's to their (the taxpayers') benefit."

Wilkinson said he may, in about two years, implement an office-inventory program. Before that, however, his pressing need is to get the real estate assessment "uniform and equitable." Real estate accounts for about $2.5 billion of the couftqwade tax base of $3.6 billion. The balance is on personal property — from drilling rigs and airplanes to office desks and typewriters.

While most business offices are assessed at $3 a square foot, medical facilities, for example, are approaced differently.

Journalist safe in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — A correspondent erroneously reported killed along with two other U.S. journalists in fighting near the Honduran-Nicaraguan border said he was safe in Miami hours before the attack occurred.

"One, I'm alive and two, I don't know about any of the other people who are not alive," said Time magazine reporter William McWhirter, who arrived Monday night.

"The cause and attribution is such a complete mystery," McWhirter said today in a telephone interview. "I can't celebrate anything until we find out who else is involved."

McWhirter was one of four people reported dead by Honduran Foreign Ministry spokesman Ricardo Flores earlier Tuesday.

Honduran officials later said the attack killed three people: Richard Cross, a free-lance photographer on assignment for U.S. News & World Report; Dial Torgerson, Central American bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times, and Jose Herrera, 27, a Honduran who was driving their rented car when it was hat bq anti-tank grenades.

McWhirter said he knew something was wrong even before he learned of the killings because there were "enough cop cars and friends in front of my house tonight to complete a whole wake."

A secretary for Time's Caribbean bureau in Miami said late Tuesday that EcWharter was alive and had flown into the city the previous night. The Honduran government later said their earlier report that McWhirter was dead was incorrect.

McWhirter told The Associated Press today that he flew to Miami because he had finished gathering information for a Time story, then spent Tuesday writing the article.

He said he had completed the story and learned of his reported death after driving home following a tennis game and a late dinner.

McWhirter said he was not with any of the people who were listed dead by the Foreign Ministry.

"We went into Nicaragua and we covered the guerrilla bases there, and then we were told to leave because it was under siege," he said. "We did just that and we crossed back over the mountains, got home, and flew back here to file my story."

He was asked to leave by the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, a Honduran-based group that is fighting the leftist Sandinista government, he said.

"We arrived there Friday and left Saturday," McWhirter said, "and I filed my story tonight (Tuesday)."

Defector says Nicaragua getting planes, Soviet air defense system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaragua is moving toward full membership in the "international communist movement" and is acquiring a Soviet air defense system along with 80 MiG fighter planes, a Nicaraguan defector says.

Miguel Bolanos Hunter, a former official of Nicaraguan state security, told reporters Tuesday the Sandinista government is reneging on plans to institute democracy and instead is working to neutralize opposition political parties, labor unions and the church.

His face partially hidden by dark glasses, the one-time Sandinista guerrilla fighter confirmed many of the allegations the Reagan administration has made about the Nicaraguan government over the past 2½ years. The administration claims often have been received with skepticism.

Bolanos' comments appeared to represent an intelligence windfall for the administration and, indeed, te State Department helped to arrafge the Tuesday news conference as well as an interview several days ago with The Washington Post.

Bolanos, who has an American mother and a Nicaraguan father, said the truth of his allegations was confirmed when he passed a lie detector test given by U¢S¢ government officials.

He outlined the sequence of events that prompted him to abandon his role as a trusted Sandinista functionary and to defect aboard an airplane he hijacked to Costa Rica six weeks ago.

Bolanos said:

— Sandinista claims of an American-sponsored plot to poison Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto were a complete fabrication. The allegations led to the expulsion of three U.S. diplomats earlier this month and the counter-expudsaon of 21 Nicaraguan consular officers by the Reagan administration.

— Nicaraguan state security orchestrated the heckling of Pope John Paul II during his visit to Nicaragua in March. Catholics who tried to show their support for the Pope were threatened by Nicaragua's chief of security, Lenin Cerna, who was carrying a rifle.

— A Navy admiral explained in detail to Bolanos the land, sea and air operations that Nicaragua has been using to transport weaponry and other equipment to Salvadoran rebels.

Speaking softly in English with occasional help from an interpreter, Bolanos, 24, also discussed Soviet and Cuban military activities in Nicaragua.

He said the Sandinista armed forces are constructing two sites for Soviet surface-to-air missiles. One, at Managua's international airport, already is completed and the other, located some 12 miles from the capital, will be ready shortly, he said.

He did not say whether the missiles themselves have been deployed. American officials said they could not substantiate Bolanos' information but added the possibility of such activity has been discussed here.

Shuttle initiates satellite maneuvers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — American astronauts dropped a West German satellite into free-floating orbit today and began chase-and-capture maneuvers to prove the shuttle's usefulness in repairing or retrieving crippled spacecraft.

In a day-long celestial ballet, mission specialists John Fabian and Sally K. Ride were using the 50-foot-long arm to lift the Shuttle Pallet Satellite (SPAS) into space, recapture it, and restow it for Friday's return to Florida.

Fabian, working from control panels on the shuttle flight deck, sent the robot arm to pick up the scientific satellite and release it into space.

"That SPAS is a nice flying little vehicle," said shuttle commander Robert Crappef as te craft moved away from Challenger 180 miles above Earth.

Crippen and Rick Hauck were flying rendezvous with the SPAS from 1,000 feet away. Cameras aboard the satellite provided Mission Control with first-ever views of a shuttle as it maneuvered an space against a brilliant backdrop of a blue, sunlit Earth.

"Beautiful living color," the control center told the crew. A spokesman said, "There were lots of oohs and ahs" in Mission Control.

Challenger cameras relayed pictures of the satedlate, stable in space, its running lights shining brightly. "It's spectacular," Hauck reported. "We've got five very happy people up here."

The rendezvous tests are a major milestone in the use of the shuttle as a working vehicle. The ability to plucc an object from orbit will be crucial when shuttles are sent aloft for satellite repair missions.

The first such mission is set for April 1984, on the shuttle's 13th mission, when Crippen will head a team of astronauts to repair the Solar Maxamum Sateldite that failed after three fuses blew on its control system soon after launch in 1980. The plan is for Crippen's crew to bring the satellite into the cargo bay, replace the control system and return the satellite to space.

For todaq's test, NASASs seventh shuttle crew arose an hour early — about 10:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday — to test the 3,300 pound SPAS. "The team is refueled and rarin' to go," a controller told commander Crippen.

Crippen, who'll guide Challenger to its first Florida landang, peered down on rain-swept Cape Canaveral Tuesday and asked how the weather was shaping up for the 6:53 a.m. EDT Friday touchdown.

"We're still looking at it for Friday, hoping it will clear out," said Mission Contrgl. "We're not real sure yet.S' T'GK$ eaybe we can stay til Saturday," said Crippen. "Or Sunday," added Ms. Ride. In the event of bad weather, the shuttle could orbit at least until Sunday, or it could be landed at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

SPAS carries six scientific experiments for the West German government, two for the European Space Agency and three NASA cameras.

The satellite's German manufacturer bartered with the American space agency and got a bargain; by allowing NASA to use the satellite for deployment and retrieval practice, the United States is picking up $9 million of the $13 million development, production and launch costs. The SPAS is designed to be used on five flights.

A computer on the satellite overheated Tuesday after the SPAS had been operating seven experiments more than 24 hours in sunlight. Crippen turned the shuttle belly-up — placing the cargo in the cold shadows, but that overchilled one of the instruments. He then was directed to point Challenger toward Earth — a position in which it alternates between daylight and darkness.

The position changes worked, but barely. The decision on whether to let the satellite operate independently in space was "a very close one," said a NASA spokesman. He said temperatures aboard the craft hit 101 degrees, just one degree below "red line."

State, federal disaster status sought for drought-stricken area

"They don't want to plant," Hightower said, "because they know as soon as they loosen up the soil, it's going to blow away, but they're desperate. Those deficiency payments may be the only income many of them have this year."

West Texas farmers and ranchers have described the drought area as the worst they've experienced since the "killer drought that devastated the region in the 1950s," Hightower said.

The drought area includes the counties of Midland, Dawson, Andrews, Martin, Howard, Mitchell, Nolan, Coke, Glasscock, Ector, Winkler, Loving, Irion, Reagan, Upton, Crane, Ward, Schleicher, Sutton, Crockett, Terrell, Pecos, Reeves, Culberson, Jeff Davis, Brewster and Presidio.

"If this was happening in Dallas or Houston, there already would have been a national disaster," Hightower said. "Sometimes the far-reaching areas of the state don't get attention."

In stressing the severity of the drought, the Midland County Commissioners' Court has drafted a resolution requesting the governor to declare Midland County a disaster area. In addition, the resolution asks Block to initiate the "drought feed program and implement any measure at his disposal to assist farmers and ranchers whose livelihood has been threatened by the drought."

"Ranchers and farmers have been forced to feed livestock long past the normal feeding period, causing adverse economic conditions," states the resolution.

"Extreme damage to the land has occurred, and long-term environmental damage will result, causing the family ranch or family farm to be endangered."

"We try to visit individual doctor offices," Wilkinson said. "Of course, we run into insurmountable problems. It certainly wouldn't be right for us to impose on a doctor when he's got patients stacked up in is office. Te last thing he's got time for is the tax appraiser."

Even physicians' offices are appraised differently, he noted. "Obviously, there's a difference between a radiologist's and a general practitioner's office."

Were the appraisal district to make a spot inventory of real and personal property through Midland County, the work hours to do so would total 191,000. Based on an eight-hour day, those hours would convert to 23,875 days, which, based on 252 working days in a year, would require 94 years for one man, 13½ years for his eight appraisers but only one year to complete were his appraisal staff increased by 100 to 108.

"THAT'S EXACTLY why every appraisal district in the state of Texas has to apply the mass-appraisal tecnique," Wilkinson said. He said his office's $3-per-square-foot guidlines is somewhat lower than that of other appraisal districts.

Though Wilkinson now does not have the staff, the Texas tax code says the chief appraiser or his representative "may enter the premises of a business, trade or profession and inspect the property to determine the existence and market value of tangible personal property used for the production of income."

Wilkinson said he would not insist on inspecting the office of an inhospitable tenant or owner.

"If the guy levels a shotgun or a verbal barrage and denies entry, we do not try to get a court order," he said. "We try to do the best that we can." Often, that equates to the mass-appraisal techniques — the $3-square-foot route.

Earlier, said Wilkinson, the Texas Legislature's intent had been to permit each businessman to render his own personal business property for taxation purposes.

"But, you have some who would do it and some that wouldn't, and that in itself would lead to inequity."

Wilkinson noted that those who do not cooperate with the appraisal district "penalize the other taxpayers who do meet the guidelines." In cases where the owner or tenant does not permit entry for inspection and if the appraiser has reasonable knowledge the taxpayer is trying to conceal property, then the appraiser's assessment may "reflect the highest value base on comparable offices."

But Wilkinson said he is opposed to mandatory inspection. The tax code does not address any mandatory inspection of homesteads and private residences.

"You're moving into a police state.And there no way this person would subscribe to that type of government.

"This is not a police-state office. We do not used heavy-handed techniques or make unreasonable demands.... I've got to try to be as equitable and as fair as I can be."

Still, Wilkinson noted the three most critical factors in appraising for ad valorem taxes: "It's 'discovery, discovery, discovery.' It's a most difficult job."

Midland employers predict three-month decline in hiring

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Midland's employment picture will be somewhat cloudy in the third quarter when compared to jobs growth predicted in the rest of Texas and the region, according to results of two polls conducted recently.

Employers in the Midland area predict a decline in hiring additional staff for the next three months, according to a quarterly Employment Outlook Survey conducted by Manpower Inc.

The number of employers who say they plan to keep their staff levels steady has increased from a year ago at this time, the survey said.

"Overall, 20 percent of the area employers polled plan to hire additional workers during the third quarter of 1983, down from the 30 percent with similar intentions one year ago," said Wally Richman, owner of Midland's Manpower office.

Midland area results continue to lag behind those reported nationally and regionally, according to the Manpower survey, held the last two weeks in May.

"Midland has always done better than the national average before, I would say, but everybody said the recession would hit us sooner or later," said Pam Phillips, manager of the Midland office.

In the last two weeks, Aminoil U.S.A., Coquina Oil Corporation and Dowell experienced further layoffs from their Midland operations.

The Manpower survey showed that 7 percent of Midland employers contacted expect staff reductions next quarter, compared to 10 percent polled a year ago at this time.

A majority of employers — 73 percent — plan no change in staff levels, preferring to play it conservatively. This is an increase from last year when results showed 60 percent planned to keep their staff levels steady.

Midland Manpower routinely contacts 30 major businesses from various segments of the economy — wholesale and retail trade, service, finance, manufacturing, mining — for the local survey.

Area job opportunities were predicted in durable goods manufacture, wholesale and retail trade, educational institutions and public administration.

The outlook is stable in other employment sectors, the survey said.

Although two out of three Texas business executives polled recently expect sales and profits to climb during the next quarter, half of the respondents said the job picture will remain flat.

Half of the 300 executives contacted by the Texas Association of Business said employment at their place of business would remain static through September.

One out of six said the work force would actually decrease, according to the TAB poll.

The Midland job situation appears to be worse than in the rest of Texas because the local economy is tied more closely to the depressed oil industry.

For the second quarter in a row, employers nationwide are predicting hiring increases in the third quarter, according to the Manpower survey of 11,190 employers in 348 U.S. cities.

Lufkin resident lives, breathes 'heady' atmosphere of hobby

LUFKIN (AP) — Barney Bradshaw buys, sells and sometimes breathes books.

Old books are stacked in the garage and an extra bedroom, or carefully shelved in the den and living room of the 74-year-old Lufkin house he shares with his wife of 46 years.

But there is one book in particular that the soft-spoken rare-book dealer would like to sell: a Genevan, or "Breeches," Bible that was printed in London more than 375 years ago.

Bradshaw, who has been collecting books for 30 years, immediately imparts this trick of the trade and a tip for novices. If a dealer tells you a book is bound in leather, smell it. Demonstrating with his nose literally in the book, Bradshaw said leather will carry a stronger, muskier scent than imitation bindings. Some might call it the "breathe before you buy" method of selecting books.

The "Breeches" Bible, published in 1608, will go for $400. It got its name from a passage in Genesis in which Adam and Eve discover their nakedness. "They sewed fig leaves together and made themselves breeches" is the way the ancient book renders the passage.

Most subsequent versions of the Bible, including the King James, which replaced the Genevan Bible, say Adam and Eve made aprons from the fig leaves.

The Genevan Bible first was published in 1560, and lasted through 140 editions and more than 80 years, making it an extremely popular Bible for the period.

The centuries-old relic, which is several inches thick, is in good shape. It has been rebound in leather in the last century or so, Bradshaw estimates.

Bradshaw says he will sell any of the thousand or so books he owns, but his wife Evalyn disagrees. "He hates to part with them. He wants to find a new, kind, loving home for the books, particularly the Genevan Bible," she said.

Barney Bradshaw, 74, poses in his Lufkin home with a portion of the book collection which he has been accumulating for 30 years.

She readily admits to a lack of enthusiasm for her husband's hobby, although she taught reading clinics in the Lufkin schools for 20 years.

But that doesn't dampen his enthusiasm. He happily jumps from one volume to another, explaining the history of the book or giving tidbits about the author.

Hispanics plan voter registration drive

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The nation's Hispanic leaders plan an expensive campaign to register 1 million more Hispanic voters across the country for "crucial" political clout in the 1984 presidential election.

The leaders met here Tuesday and issued a "call to action" to Hispanics to register and then hold politicians accountable with their collective voting power.

"This is probably one of the most important things that ever happened in the Hispanic community," said Raul Yzaguirre of Washington D.C., president of the National Council of La Raza.

Currently, 3.4 million of the nation's registered voters are of Hispanic descent.

Another 1 million would increase voter registration among Hispanic citizens to 65 percent, up from the current 52 percent.

One Hispanic leader pointed out a problem that he said underscored the necessity of the registration drive — almost a third of the Hispanic community is ineligible to vote.

"About 30 percent of our population can't vote because they're resident aliens and not citizens," said Willie Velasquez, director of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project.

The percentage of Hispanics currently registered drops to 37 percent if the resident aliens are taken into account, he said.

Much of the $2 million voter drive simply will be volunteers going door-to-door in 185 U.S. cities, according to Ruben Valdez, director of Colorado's Department of Labor.

"We have huge and lofty goals, but reachable goals," Valdez said. "We need the inclusion of many, many groups in this country."

"I cannot think of an endeavor more important to the nation. Voter registration (among Hispanics) needs to be increased."

— Henry Cisneros, mayor of San Antonio

He and others stressed the drive was non-partisan, but conceded that most Hispanics vote Democratic.

Hispanic leaders will kick off the drive with an August fundraiser in San Antonio, where they hope to supplement the $1.4 million already raised.

U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya and Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt — all Democrats — already have agreed to attend, Valdez said.

Vice President George Bush, a Republican, has been invited but has not yet responded, he said.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city, called the drive of "extreme importance."

"I cannot think of an endeavor more important to the nation," Cisneros said. "Voter registration (among Hispanics) needs to be increased."

Valesquez predicted that Mexican-Americans will be the "swing vote" in California and Texas alone during the 1984 presidential election.

Adding 1 million Hispanics voters would make courting the Hispanic community that much more "crucial," he said.

"We can do it," Velasquez said. "It can be done and it will be done."

Fort Worth to require smoke detectors

FORT WORTH (AP) — Acting in the wake of a fire that killed five people and injured 34, the City Council has endorsed a fire code change mandating smoke detectors in all Fort Worth hotels, motels and apartments.

Tuesday's action came several hours after a guest at the Ramada Inn Central told fire officials that an unidentified couple had reported smelling something burning before the discovery of the fire at the motel June 14.

Officials also said Tuesday that they may never know exactly how the fire started, although arson is suspected.

The council-directed the city staff to immediately begin work on a retroactive smoke detector requirement.

The hotel fire left the council "no choice" but to make detectors mandatory as soon as possible, said Councilman Bert Williams.

The proposed change would require detectors in apartments and in guest rooms of all motels and hotels, regardless of when they were built.

Currently, city code only requires detectors in buildings and homes constructed after 1976, when a code revision first made smoke detectors a requirement.

The two-story Ramada wing that was gutted June 14 was built before 1976 and had no smoke detectors, fire officials said.

George Walker, of Huntington Beach, Calif., a guest at the hotel, said he talked with a couple at the hotel that reported smelling something burning two hours before the fire was reported, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Walker told the Star-Telegram that he talked with a man and a woman while being treated for cuts and bruises sustained during a jump from a second-story window.

"They said they smelled something peculiar. They said it was a really bad smell, a peculiar, bad smell," possibly something burning, Walker said. He said the couple told him the smell had a chemical odor and "was almost nauseating."

Investigators would try to determine the couple's identity, said arson Lt. Bob Frazier.

Arson Capt. W.E. Durkin said Tuesday that investigators may never know exactly how the fire started, but he said he strongly suspects that it was intentionally set.

Undercover operation breaks up 'hooker hangout' at truckstop

EL PASO (AP) — A "hooker hangout" has been broken up at an El Paso truckstop with the arrests of eight people, including two suspected prostitutes and an alleged pimp, police say.

The undercover operation netted the arrests of eight suspects at Petro's Truckstop off Interstate 10 just east of this city of 480,000, El Paso Det. Freddie Bonilla said Tuesday.

Arrested on prostitution charges were Rachel Copeland, 28, of Menton, Calif., and Theresa Bryant, 19, of Tampa, Fla. Ronald Carr, 23, also of Menton, was arrested on charges of promotion of prostitution in connection with Ms. Copeland, Bonilla said. Each is being held in lieu of $1,500 bond.

Alfred Reeves, 55, of Dunn, N.C., also was arrested and charged with soliciting sex from a female undercover officer who had set up a mobile home at the truckstop. Truckstop owners recently had complained about an increase in sex and drug trafficking at the truckstop, police said.

"(Truckstop officials) told us there were hookers all over the place," Sgt. Gary Gabbert said.

East Texas jail escapee recaptured

LONGVIEW (AP) — A Gregg County sheriff's deputy who was showing a jail escapee's picture to a woman captured the inmate after he spotted the man riding by in a car, authorities said.

Edward Darnell Moore, 22, of Gilmer, was back in the Upshur County Jail today after being charged with escape.

Moore, who was being held on capital murder and aggravated robbery charges, escaped Sunday night through a shower window, invesitgators said.

Sheriff's deputies in Gilmer said Moore used a hacksaw to cut through a screen over the window and then melted away the plexiglass window with some burning paper.

Newborn's case to be reviewed

LUBBOCK (AP) — The district attorney's office will review the case of a newborn girl found abandoned inside a car, authorities said.

The child, whose temperature was 94 degrees when found, "is doing great," Dr. Thelma Quan of Lubbock General Hospital said Tuesday.

Leroy Cupp told police he was awakened at 4:30 a.m. Sunday by what sounded like a baby crying. He said he checked around his house and found nothing. But he said about 9 a.m. he heard the cry again and found the infant inside his car.

Police said the baby was lying on a sheet and was coughing up blood. The placenta was still attached.

The baby's 18-year-old mother was found a few blocks away by police and taken to Lubbock General, where she was in good condition Tuesday.

Sheriff may get 30 days in jail

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County Sheriff Don Byrd should be given a 30-day jail sentence, probated for one year, and a $400 fine if he pleads guilty to a driving while intoxicated charge, prosecutors have recommended.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Burham said during a brief court hearing on Tuesday the offer was made to Byrd's attorney Doug Mulder and prosecutors were waiting for a response.

Mulder would not say whether Byrd would accept the plea offer or request a trial on the charges

Byrd has not entered any plea in the charges stemming from a April 17 traffic accident in University Park.

Mulder said he would make an announcement at the sheriff's pre-trial hearing on July 12.

Body of fourth drowned child found

FREEPORT (AP) — Matagorda County authorities found the body of the fourth child who drowned while on a Father's Day picnic.

The body of Darrin Duhart, 13, of Houston, was found Tuesday morning on Sargent Beach in Matagorda County, about seven miles from where he and three others had been swimming in turbulent waters Sunday morning.

On Monday, Brazoria County sheriff's officers found the bodies of Darrin's brother, Anthony Duhart, 12; and cousins Patrick Lynn Oliver, 9, of Simonton, and Carrie S. Henry, 9 of Houston.

A fifth child, Charlotte Lavine Henry, 14, Carrie's sister, was rescued and was listed in fair condition Tuesday in the intensive care unit of Houston's Ben Taub Hospital.

The children had been on a picnic with some other family members. They had been playing in the water where the river empties into the Gulf of Mexico in western Brazoria County.

Mayor says town lacks funds in budget to pay for marshal

GRAFORD (AP) — With only 495 residents, Graford is not a big town. But city residents say it's big enough to need a marshal even though Mayor Audrey Altum says it simply cannot afford one.

School board member Harry Sain claims some residents, aware that no one is minding the store, are running wild, breaking windows and drag racing along the town's main street.

Crime in this community 60 miles west of Fort Worth, he said, is up.

"The bulk of the crime is from peole who live here," he said. "They're locals. They know they can get away with just about anything since there is no law enforcement."

Sain obtained in March about 100 signatures on a petition and gave it to the city council. It asks they hire a marshal.

"We have no law enforcement whatsoever," Sain said. "We have a big drug problem, but we have other crime, too, such as thievery, vandalism and speeding."

Mrs. Altum said the only way Graford is going to get a marshal is if someone volunteers for the job. The city's budget, she said, is already stretched trying to pay for a new water system.

"What we're looking at is a salary, a car, radar, the whole bit," she said. "We simply cannot afford that."

"What it boils down to," she said, "is that this city's law enforcement depends on if we get someone to volunteer."

Sain is also complaining that Palo Pinto County Sheriff John Turpin, who is supposed to be protecting Graford, is not doing the job since Graford does not have a full time deputy.

"We felt like the sheriff wasn't giving us any protection because the other towns in the county had a deputy and we didn't," Sain said. "The sheriff said he had been protecting us and we were just unaware of it, but we knew better than that."

Six sentenced for smuggling aliens

HOUSTON (AP) — Six Mexicans involved in a large-scale smuggling operation have been sentenced on charges of conspiring to harbor and conceal illegal aliens.

The six were accused of operating a "drop house" near downtown Houston and of holding the illegal aliens under armed guard until relatives paid a fee for having them smuggled into the United States.

All pleaded guilty to the charges and were sentenced by U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling.

At the time of the investigation, prosecutors estimated, at least 69 illegal aliens were being held at the house.

The case was uncovered when a Houston woman, Mary Jane Paramo, reported to U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service agents that Mexican nationals had threatened to kill her husband, who had been smuggled into the country, unless she paid them $250.

Mrs. Paramo said the smugglers had charged $450 to bring her husband to Houston, but she said she could only raise $200.

Walker County commissioners balk at paying for inmates' trials

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Walker County commissioners, in a vote the county judge says was more symbol than substance, have passed a resolution refusing to pay for future trials of Texas prison inmates moved to another county.

County Judge Ralph Davis said the commissioners are concerned about the trials mounting financial burden on the taxpayers and are irked at the Legislature's failure to pass a bill requiring the state to pay for trials of Texas Department of Corrections imates.

"There is a problem here...We're damn tired of it," the commissioners said in the resolution.

But Davis said the resolution is not binding and he doubted the county could legally refuse to pay for trials moved on a change of venue.

If the commissioners refused, he said, they could be held in contempt of court.

Davis said the commissioners were urging prosecutors to seek financing for inmate trials. He added that a tax increase had been levied on Walker County residents to pay for the capital murder trial of Eroy Brown.

Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo gets underway

BIG SPRING (AP) — The 50th edition of the Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo gets underway today with a slate of events including the traditional rodeo fair, a fiddlers contest, the crowning of the rodeo queen and nightly dances.

Larry Mahan, six-time all round world champion cowboy, and Toots Mansfield, seven-time world champion calf roper, will be the grand marshal for the 50th anniversary of the state's second oldest rodeo, which runs through Saturday.

Big Spring residents wrote a melodrama, "How to Break a Bronco," to mark the occasion, and also a song, "Rodeo Gold."

On Thursday, the Rodeo Association will honor its president and only surviving original member, 82-year-old Charlie Creighton.

Despite the hoopla, officials hope this year's rodeo promises to be more subdued than the one held in 1949.

Former prison guard convicted of murder

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A former prison guard convicted of murdering 13 people — including five of his own children — "deserves to die," said the lone survivor of the massacre as jurors prepared to consider the death penalty.

A Luzerne County jury on Tuesday found George Banks guilty of 12 counts of first-degree murder for the deliberate, premeditated slayings of his children, ranging in age from 1 to 6, their four mothers and three others related to a former girlfriend.

County Judge Patrick Toole ordered a death penalty hearing to start today, Banks' 41st birthday. Under state law, first-degree murder convictions require the jury to fix the sentence of either life imprisonment or death.

Banks was also convicted of third-degree murder for the death of Raymond Hall, 24, a bystander gunned down in the street after Banks shot eight of the victims in his Wilkes-Barre home on Sept. 25. The third-degree conviction means the jury felt the death was not premeditated.

THE PANEL rejected defense arguments that Banks was mentally ill and should be found innocent by reason of insanity.

Banks, who had been a guard at the State Correctional Institution at Camp Hill, said before his trial that he would die on June 22, his 41st birthday.

Banks, the illegitimate son of a black father and a white mother, testified that his actions were "the culminations of 40 years of racist hatred."

His attorneys had argued that Banks was driven to murder by delusions of impending racial wars and fears of the racial abuse his children might suffer. The four women who bore his five murdered children were white.

Five psychiatrists, three testifying for the defense and two for the prosecution, agreed that Banks was paranoid. But the prosecution psychiatrists said his mental illness did not prevent him from knowing what he was doing at the time of the killings.

BANKS ALSO was convicted of the attempted murder of James Olson, who was shot in the chest while standing next to Hall in the street; two counts of recklessly endangering a life; two counts of robbery and one count of auto theft.

Olson, the lone survivor of the massacre, said Banks got what he deserved.

"He deserves to die," said Olson. "I hope it (the jury) gives Banks the death penalty because it's justified for what he did to me, my buddy and to those kids."

District Attorney Robert Gillespie Jr., who has said he will seek a death sentence, declined comment on the verdicts under a gag order imposed by the judge, forbidding public comment until the jury is discharged.

George Banks, at left in handcuffs, is being led from the Luzerne (Pa.) County Courthouse Tuesday following his conviction in the shooting deaths of 13 people, including five of his children, in Wilkes-Barre last September. He is being escorted by Sheriff Frank J. Jagodinski, front; and sheriff's deputies Myron Galaida, rear and John Pavidus, right. They are taking Banks back to the Luzerne County Prison.

Defense attorneys Al Flora Jr. and Basil Russin looked glum as they left the courthouse.

The jury returned the verdict after five hours in a trial that took nearly 14 days, with testimony from 86 witnesses, 58 for the prosecution.

BANKS, TESTIFYING in his own defense over the objections of his three court-appointed lawyers, admitted shooting the victims, but he denied killing them all.

"I am not responsible for at least nine of the deaths," Banks said, claiming that police, the district attorney, the mayor and the judge were conspiring to make him a scapegoat. He insisted police had killed some of the victims.

The jury was chosen last month in Pittsburgh, 300 miles away, on orders of the state Supreme Court to ensure a panel free from bias.

Texan may lose $25,000 suit

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A federal judge has rejected a jury's award of $25,000 to a Nederland, Texas, man who sued a motel chain claiming he injured his neck after walking in on a "skimpily clad" woman in a motel room.

U.S. District Judge E. Gordon West ordered a new trial of the claim by James L. Hardy Jr. against Days Inns of America, Inc., a motel chain based in Atlanta, Ga. West, a visiting judge from Louisiana who heard the trial in Chattanooga, ruled that the evidence presented to the jury did not support its April 5 verdict in favor of Hardy.

Tom Wyatt, the Chattanooga lawyer who represented Hardy, said Tuesday he intends to appeal West's ruling to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio. Wyatt said he was preparing a letter Tuesday to inform Hardy that his $25,000 jury verdict had been wiped out.

"My comment is that I thought the jury was correct in its reasoning and Judge West's decision that the jury verdict was unforeseeable was incorrect," Wyatt said. "We do intend to appeal."

West ruled that to find a defendant liable for negligence, Tennessee law requires that the harm which befalls the plaintiff must have been a foreseeable result of the defendant's negligence.

"The evidence presented in this case did not sufficiently support a finding by the jury in favor of the plaintiff in this regard," West wrote in his two-page ruling.

Phillip Fleissner, lawyer for Days Inns, said, "Obviously, we're pleased with the new trial...It does indicate his disfavor with the verdict."

Fleissner had asked West, after the verdict was returned, to review the case, disregard the jury's verdict and dismiss Hardy's claim. West declined to dismiss the case, but ordered that it be scheduled for a new trial.

Hardy, 56, had originally sued Days Inns for $150,000 in damages over the July 1981 incident at the company's motel in East Ridge, a Chattanooga suburb. He accused the company of negligence for giving him a key to the wrong room, leading him to walk into the room and see the "skimpily clad" woman on a couch. He claims he was carrying heavy luggage and jerked his neck as he turned to leave the room, permanently injuring his neck, incurring medical expenses for treatment and missing time from his job as utility dispatcher for Gulf Oil Co.

Hardy's wife, Alma H. Hardy, had also sued the motel chain for punitive damages and alleged loss of her husband's companionship. But U.S. Magistrate Roger Dickson dismissed her claim, saying Hardy's complaint failed to support those allegations.

Days Inns denies Hardy's claims that it was negligent, and also says it could not have reasonably been expected to foresee the incident he claims happened.

Hardy's mother and sister were traveling with him when the alleged encounter occurred, but they had gone into a separate room at the motel. The "skimpily clad" woman has not been publicly identified and Hardy says he never found out who she was.

He says he began suffering severe pains the morning after the incident, and he later had a ruptured cervical disc removed from his spine.

Oldest employee turns 90

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Ann Deegan plans to spend her birthday where she spends every other weekday — at work. Even if she is turning 90 today.

"I don't mind working," says Mrs. Deegan, who has worked for the past two years in the Office of Public Affairs for Westchester County executive Andrew O'Rourke. "I'd rather work any time than stay home."

Her co-workers thought this birthday warranted a special celebration. So they held one, complete with gifts, cake and a trick candle, a day early on Tuesday.

"You are certainly one of the most energetic and warm-hearted people here." said O'Rourke. "You are, we believe, the oldest county employee."

Widower to receive benefits

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A widower is entitled to workers' compensation benefits because his wife died of "shock and upset" after being robbed while working, a state appeals court has ruled.

The District Court of Appeal ordered Tuesday that Harry Popiel must be paid widower's benefits by his late wife's employer, the Broward County School Board.

The board had rejected Popiel's earlier claims on Ida Popiel's widower's benefits, saying she died of a heart attack, and such attacks are only covered when they result from unusual physical strain.

'Sex-slave' killer sentenced to die

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Convicted "sex-slave" killer Gerald Gallego has been sentenced to die in the gas chamber by a judge who said facts in the case wiped out any "charitable thoughts this court may have."

Contra Costa Superior Court Judge Norman Spellberg imposed the death sentence Tuesday, following the recommendations of a seven-woman, five man jury.

Gallego, 36, was convicted April 11 in the kidnap-murders of Sacramento State University sweethearts Craig Miller, 22, and Mary Beth Sowers, 21.

North Carolina official surrenders

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has surrendered to Wake County authorities on bribery and conspiracy charges, and Democratic state Sen. R.C. Soles was indicted in an alleged vote-buying scheme and on a bribery charge.

Green, surrendered Tuesday, one day after a grand jury indicted him on charges of accepting a $2,000 bribe and conspiring to take bribes up to $10,000 a month. He was released in his attorney's custody and made no comment on the charges.

Soles, accused of conspiring to interfere with commerce by extortion and making false statements to a grand jury, said Tuesday he didn't know enough about the indictments to comment.

Passengers can see taped programs

NEW YORK (AP) — Passengers on about 100 American Airlines flights will be able to watch the CBS "Early Morning News," under a new plan to broadcast taped programs on airliners each weekday.

CBS Broadcast International said Tuesday that the daily, 30-minute feed will be delivered by satellite to American installations at five airports — New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Francisco — to be shown on flights beginning at 9 a.m. EDT.

The network said it will sell advertising for the in-flight "Early Morning News" to replace the commercials broadcast on CBS stations.

PSU researcher clones cotton

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — A technique for cotton "cloning" that enabled researchers to grow cotton plants from individual cells could help make the plants more resistant to pesticides and disease.

A paper describing the research was released simultaneously Tuesday by researchers at Pennsylvania State University and by researcher Gayle Davidonis at a meeting of the Plant Growth Regulatory Society of America in East Lansing, Mich.

Cotton plants were regenerated from cellular structure known as callus tissue, which can be obtained from any part of a mature plant or seedling. The cultures require only shelf space with little or no light, the researchers said.

Man marries before going to prison

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A 27-year-old butcher exchanged wedding vows with his sweetheart in a judge's chambers — and then was handcuffed and led away to serve up to six years in prison for armed bank robbery.

The defendant, Christopher Monelt, and his bride, Christina Kempton, wept throughout Tuesday's 20-minute wedding ceremony, which was performed by Nassau County Judge Marvin Goodman, who also sentenced the groom.

When the couple, both from the Long Island community of Freeport, decided to get married, the judge postponed Monelt's sentencing date so they could have blood tests taken and get a marriage license.

Lake with no name may dry up

Record precipitation creates lake

WENDOVER, Utah (AP) — A huge, briny lake has formed on the white salt flats of western Utah, a throwback to the inland sea that was prehistoric Lake Bonneville, but scientists don't know how deep it is or how long it will last.

The lake is one of two new bodies of water created on the bed of the ancient lake after 18 months of heavy rain and snowfall in Utah. Geologists and long-time desert residents say they've never seen anything like it.

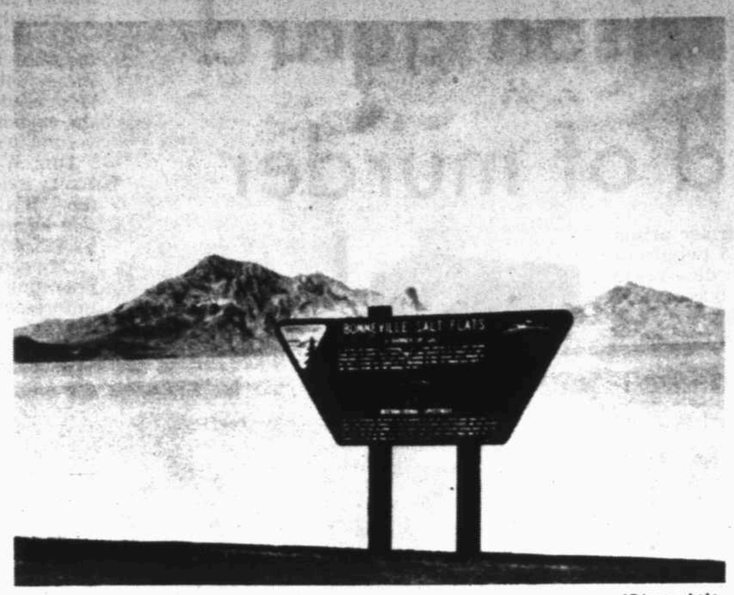

"I've been here 23 years and have never seen water like this in the desert," Richard Dixon, owner of the Bonneville Speedway Museum in Wendover, said recently.

The new lake has no name. It wasn't there last year and may not be there next year. It stretches into one of the west's most isolated areas and its exact size and depth are unknown.

Although heavy in salt content, the lake does support life. Minute brine shrimp, which also thrive in the highly saline waters of the Great Salt Lake to the east, paddle about in its steel-grey waters.

The lake, which laps against Interstate 80 about five miles east of this city on the Utah-Nevada border, is in an area where patches of standing water are common in the spring before evaporating in the summer heat, leaving a hard and virtually level salt plain.

But National Weather Service satellite photos this spring showed the new body of water stretching across the level salt beds in roughly a right triangle, its longest side about 25 miles.

AP Laserphoto

Under this lake, which for a while was the second largest in Utah, lies the Bonneville Speedway. The lake with no name wasn't here last year and may not be next year. It was created by the record precipitation that has brought mudslides and floods to the state.

In a May 23 satellite photo, the lake appeared larger than Utah Lake, a 25-mile long, 10-mile wide freshwater lake near Provo, 40 miles south of Salt Lake City.

That would make it Utah's second largest body of water, behind the 55-mile-long Great Salt Lake.

"The lake is something new for us," said J. Wallace Gwynn, of the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey. "We haven't studied it much and I don't know of anyone who has. I can't remember that much water ever collecting out in the desert. This has to be the first in a long time."

A hundred miles to the south, water also stands two to three feet deep on 80 percent of the Sevier Dry Lake bed, Gwynn said.

In a normal spring, up to a foot of water might cover the 20-mile by 5-mile bed before evaporating. But this year, water may remain all summer, he said.

Both Sevier Dry Lake and the new, nameless lake are on the floor of Lake Bonneville, which covered most of Utah and parts of Idaho and Nevada 20,000 years ago.

Great Salt Lake and Utah Lake are remnants of the vast ancient inland sea.

Although the new lake has inundated Bonneville Speedway, the site of hundreds of land speed record attempts, Dixon thinks it ultimately will be for the best.

"I think when the lake evaporates it will leave the racing track in the best condition ever," he said. Where the water has receded, "it has left a solid, thick layer of salt that will be perfect for racing."

Denver has first Hispanic mayor

DENVER (AP) — Young people cruised the streets shouting "Chicano Power!" after the election of Federico Pena as the Mile High City's first new mayor in 14 years and its first Hispanic mayor ever.

With all 390 precincts reporting in Tuesday's non-partisan election, Pena had 79,453 votes, or 51.4 percent, to former district attorney and fellow Democrat Dale Tooley's 75,043 votes, or 48.6 percent.

Election Commissioner F.J. Serafini said the 71.4 percent voter turnout was the heaviest for any Denver election.

"I feel wonderful," grinned the 36-year-old Pena after the victory that made him Denver's first Hispanic mayor.

Tooley, 49, and 73-year-old incumbent Mayor Bill McNichols — who was defeated in the May 17 primary — both showed up at Pena's victory celebration soon after the votes were totaled.

Several thousand supporters crowded into Currigan Hall to cheer Pena, while on Denver's historic Larimer Street, young people cruised their cars slowly, shouting "Chicano Power!"

"This entire process...was a credit to Denver," said Tooley, after losing his third mayoral bid. He promised to support Pena's administration with "high enthusiasm."

Pena, who takes office July 1, said the civility he and Tooley had shown had "created a new standard in politics."

The campaign also showed, Pena said, that "Denver is not Chicago. Race was never an issue, and the people of Denver must be proud of that."

Pena's victory was the latest example of Hispanic gains in urban power. Maurice Ferre has been mayor of Miami since 1973, Bob Martinez in Tampa, Fla., since 1979, Henry Cisneros in San Antonio since 1981, and Louis Montano of Santa Fe, N.M., since 1982.

In an interview with a Denver television station after Pena's victory, Cisneros said the increasing number of Hispanic political leaders from the Sunbelt states shows that the region is growing "in opportunities and influence in the nation."

Pena spent about $500,000 to Tooley's $700,000, campaign reports show.

The five-week runoff campaign, which had focused on the issues of crime, pollution and where to locate a badly needed new airport, ended abruptly Saturday when Tooley's 72-year-old mother was hospitalized in serious condition with a heart attack.

Tooley canceled everything to be by her side, and Pena also refused further public appearances. She remained in serious condition today at Porter Medical Center.

Pena grew up in Brownsville, Texas, and has been in Denver since 1973. As a lawyer in the early 1970s, Pena fought for Mexican-American educational rights. Later, during his two terms in the Colorado House of Representatives, he helped write the nation's first bilingual-bicultural law, which requires many school districts to offer courses in Hispanic culture and courses in Spanish.

McNichols led Denver during the unprecedented building boom tied to the West's energy development of the 1970s.

But over the past few years some of McNichols' appointees were tied to questionable or criminal dealings. "Mayor Bill," as he liked to be known, remained personally unscathed.

President Ronald Reagan stands by while Prime Minister Felipe Gonzales of Spain makes a departure statement at the White House Tuesday after they completed their meetings.

Prime minister: Spain committed to NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez has assured the Reagan administration that his Socialist government is firmly committed to the Western alliance despite fears Spain will drop its year-old membership in NATO.

Gonzalez also told President Reagan on Tuesday that Spain stands ready to use its historic and cultural ties to the Spanish-speaking world, coupled with the example of its own successful transition from dictatorship, to nudge Latin America toward democracy.

The Spanish Socialist and the American conservative repeatedly underlined the closeness of the traditional ties between their two nations and the cordiality of their own encounter in an apparent attempt to confirm that their governments can work together.

Gonzalez, nearing the end of his three-day visit here, pays a courtesy call today on members of the Organization of American states, addresses the National Press Club, and confers with members of the House and Senate foreign affairs committees.

At the White House, Gonzalez reasserted his government's campaign to end its economic isolation by becoming a full member of the European Common Market.

And at the conclusion of his meeting with Reagan he left no doubt that Socialist Spain remains loyal to the West and values its ties to Washington.

"Spain is a Western country," Gonzalez told Reagan. "Nothing is more logical than its wish to integrate into the Western world and cooperate with the Western world in a common destiny."

Spain joined NATO just last year under the previous centrist government.

But Gonzalez, elected after a campaign in which his party pledged to re-examine that decision, has frozen Spain's military integration into the alliance, saying the issue eventually will be decided by a national referendum.

A senior U.S. official, who briefed reporters on the meeting on the condition he not be identified by name, said Reagan told Gonzalez it is "absolutely up to the Spanish government and people" to decide whether to stay in NATO.

At the same time, he said Reagan made clear the United States prefers that Spain not change its status as NATO's 16th member.

Gonzalez was strongly critical of U.S. policy in Central America during a recent tour of four Latin American nations.

De La Madrid wants arms freeze

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

MEXICO CITY — A freeze on the supply of arms to all conflicting sides in Central America and a negotiated political settlement between the governments and revolutionary leaders is seen by Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid as the best way to avert a regional war in the area that could lead to American military intervention and a superpower confrontation.

de la Madrid

The new Mexican leader is striving to achieve these two objectives through the Cantadora group, composed of Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama. This group, named after the once pearl-rich Panamanian island on which it first met, is trying to persuade the government and revolutionary leaders in Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador to meet to discuss a political settlement. The Cantadora group has been talking with representatives of both sides and President de la Madrid thinks some progress is being made.

In an exclusive interview with William Randolph Hearst, Jr., Editor-in-Chief of the Hearst Newspapers, and this writer, the president said there was "high risk" of a regional war if negotiated settlements are not reached in the near future.

Fearing such a war could lead to American military intervention, de la Madrid warned "a war in Central America would poison the atmosphere between the United States and Latin America."

CONTRARY TO THE widespread impression in Latin America that President Reagan is seeking a military solution of the poitical problems in El Salvador and Nicaragua, President de la Madrid said:

"I do not believe that. I can see that the American government wishes to find a peaceful solution. The proposal made by Mexico and by the Cantadora group is to reach a disarmament agreement in Central America. In order to do so, the first thing that has to be done is to freeze the purchase and delivery of arms."

The Mexican leader does not favor a Latin American peace-keeping force to make sure such a freeze would be effective. Nor does he favor having the Organization of American States assign observers. Asked how he thought compliance could be monitored, he said by regional diplomatic observers.

"Recently Mexico formed part of a diplomatic group to observe border problems between Nicaragua and Costa Rica," he added. "The work done by this group was positive for both countries. The tension in the relationship between Nicaragua and Costa Rica diminished."

It seems highly unlikely the Communist-oriented Sandinista dictatorship in Nicaragua or the leftist revolutionary forces in El Salvador would respect an arms freeze unless a political settlement was first reached with the opposing side. The Salvadoran rebel leaders want power-sharing in a coalition government before scheduled elections in December. The Salvadoran government, strongly supported by the Reagan administration, opposes pre-election power-sharing with the extreme leftists, primarily because of the Nicaraguan experience.

FOLLOWING THE American-pressured overthrow of the rightist Somoza dictatorship in Nicaragua, elections led to a coalition government composed of the Sandinistas and moderates. The Sandinistas soon forced the moderates out, joined the Soviet-Cuban bloc, became bitterly anti-American, and pledged to foster establishment of Communist regimes throughout Central America. That is what Reagan wants to avoid. The Mexican President professes to understand this. However, he has what American diplomats consider a naive belief that if there is no foreign interference, the Marxist-oriented leftists, extreme rightists and moderates will achieve a political settlement that will prevent Central America from coming under Soviet-Cuban control. Furthermore, de la Madrid tends to discount reports of large-scale Soviet-Cuban support of leftist revolutionary forces in Central America, despite what the State Department considers incontrovertible proof of it.

"For us, the Central American conflict is rooted in the economic and social situation of those countries," he said. "They are seeking to modernize their political system and transform their economic and social reality.

"We believe in a peacedul solution to controversy and in the need of each country to find its own solution without foreign interference."

Q. How can they find their own solution when there is foreign interference?

A. "We are opposed to all types of interference."

Q. If a Latin American peacekeeping force was invited by the government of El Salvador to help maintain order and prevent terrorist attacks on voters during the electoral process, would that help bring about a peaceful solution?

A. "Mexico believes the solution is not to be found only in purely political processes. Last year elections were held in El Salvador and the government cannot govern. A real political negotiation and open dialogue among all parties is necessary. There is no kind of foreign support that can substitute for the real will of the people in each region. The Cantadora group is making efforts to get the conflicting parties to dialogue among themselves to find a negotiated solution. Up to now, there has been no generalized war and through our efforts, all countries have sat around the conference table. Up to now, we have had the respect of all countries for what we are trying to do."

Queen will outline legislative program

LONDON (AP) — Fresh from its general election triumph, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government today unveils its legislative program for the next 18 months as the new Parliament convenes.

Members of Mrs. Thatcher's administration met Tuesday night for the traditional dinner with the prime minister at her official Downing Street residence to hear details of the speech Queen Elizabeth II will read to Parliament when she opens the new session.

The speech, in which the monarch outlines the government's program for the new parliamentary session, is written for her by the Cabinet.

Political commentators predicted it will contain few suprises despite the vastly increased majority in the House of Commons that the Conservative Party won in the June 9 general election.

The Daily Telegraph predicted that the speech will signify "business as usual" with no relaxation in the government's tight money policies that have reduced the annual rate of inflation to 3.7 percent — a 15-year-low — but helped push unemployment to a near record 3.04 million or 12.8 percent.

Soviets steal secrets, yearbook says

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union is using stolen technical secrets to help catch up with the West in developing high-technology weapons and communications systems, the editor of Jane's Military Communications yearbook says.

"The irony of the situation is that the more advanced and sophisticated Western electronic hardware becomes, the easier it becomes for the Soviet Union to acquire it," editor Bob Raggett wrote in the new edition of the authoritative annual published Tuesday.

He said the Soviets are buying sophisticated Western commercial equipment that can be used by the military and acquiring classified circuitry through clandestine deals with Western entrepreneurs.

"Recent evidence has shown a great increase in illegal dealing," he wrote. "The situation appears to be that the Soviet Union can acquire almost any electronic hardware it wants provided it is prepared to pay the right price."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Junk foods high in calories, salt

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard over and over that junk food is no good. But can you give me one reason for what makes junk food, junk? — Arlene, Easton, Pa.

Dear Arlene: I'll give you three: Junk foods generally are high in calories, and have a very high salt content. This makes such foods particularly bad for people who are trying to maintain their weight or to reduce, and for those with an elevated blood pressure.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had a physical recently and my doctor told me that my blood glucose was a little high. Can this be controlled if I cut down on the amount of sugar I use? I don't use an artificial sweetener now but I could switch to one if it would do any good. — Anna, Macon, Ga.

Dear Anna: A person's blood glucose level is an indication of the amount of glucose absorbed from the ingestion of all foods, and converted by the liver. It is not just a measure of the sugar you eat. Glucose derived from carbohydrates, protein and fats is taken up by the bloodstream. Some is used for energy while the remainder is stored in the body as fat. However, if you cut down on the sugar you eat it is very likely that your high blood sugar may drop a bit.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't see why you are so critical of starch blockers. It makes sense to me that if a person can avoid absorbing calories from the starch in foods, that person will lose weight. It would also allow a person to eat a lot of foods that would otherwise have to be omitted from the diet. I would think that doctors would be recommending starch blockers to their patients who should lose weight. — Kim, Detroit

Dear Kim: You make a very rapid transition from "if" to accepting the claims for starch blockers as a fact. The fact is, however, that the so-called starch blockers do not prevent the absorption of calories form starchy foods.

In one study, a group of healthy subjects were given starch blocker tablets after they ate a high-starch meal. Another group were given a placebo after they ate a similar meal. Calorie excretion was determined to be the same in both groups. If the starch blockers had worked, as you suggest they do, calorie excretion would have been higher among those who took the starch blocker tablets.

Engineers flush with success of toilet for space shuttle

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — It took $3 million, the work of some heroic Army nurses, and years of engineering to develop a powder room for the space shuttle astronauts.

Basic human needs that are served easily by ordinary plumbing on Earth present serious problems in the weightlessness of space and it took a major engineering effort by NASA to find solutions.

On Earth, gravity helps separate wastes from the body and allows water to carry it away. But in space, there is zero gravity and the waste material must be contained to prevent it from drifting free in the cabin.

During Gemini and Apollo programs, astronauts used bags and tubes to take care of functions in the small, cramped capsules. The astronauts hated the system and avoided its use. Some experienced psychic constipation that later required medical attention.

"At the end of the Apollo program, we realized we needed something similar to the facility in your home," said Hank Rotter, a NASA expert on crew systems aboard the space shuttle.

Several toilet designs were built by contractors and the most promising was flown aboard Skylab. That system was too large for the shuttle.

A new system was built, but it had to be tested in weightlessness.

The toilet was installed in an airplane that can fly a path that produces a few seconds of weightlessness.

A group of Army nurses volunteered for the critical tests. In those few seconds of weightlessness, a camera recorded the tests for engineering studies.

"That was heroic duty," Rotter said. "They were a good group of ladies."

Those tests cleared the use of the toilet for the shuttle. Except for some minor problems, it has worked well. The current flight is the first with a woman aboard the shuttle, but Rotter said the system functions with only minor differences for both genders.

In prisons, clubs, 6 million step to the beat

NEW YORK (AP) — The inmates of the Washington state women's prison do it. Most of Nancy Reagan's staff does it. Former Defense Secretary Harold Brown tried it, but dropped out.

It's sweaty. It's addicting. It's "foudroyant."

In French, that's dazzling.

In hundreds of American cities, in suburban basements and exclusive health clubs, an estimated 6 million Americans strut, skip, stretch and touch their toes, sometimes seven days a week at considerable expense, to the beat of throbbing pop music, until the sweat soaks their T-shirts and their pulse rates soar and they feel the "burn."

And then they come back for more.

"It's an addiction — a good one, though," Nancy Mukamal said after she and two dozen other women had finished punching and dancing their way through a song from the movie "Rocky III" in a church gymnasium on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

Ms. Mukamal goes up to four times a week to her aerobics dancing class, which is run according to principles established in 1969 by the originator of aerobic dance, a former cheerleader named Jacki Sorensen. Mrs. Sorensen was the wife of a B-52 pilot stationed in Puerto Rico when she created an exercise program by combining dancing and the work of Dr. Kenneth Cooper, author of "Aerobics."

The program was tried at YMCAs in New Jersey and spread through the nation in many forms and under many names: Jazzercise, Dancercise, Dance Aerobics, Aerobix Joy, Aerobics in Action, Dance Fitness, Fitness in Tempo, Fitness Fantasia.

Then came Jane Fonda's Workout Book, which describes a combination of aerobic dance and strength-building exercises. It has been on the New York Times best-seller list for 69 weeks.

"Up, up, up," said C. Carson Conrad, executive director of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, when asked about the popularity of what the council classifies as "rhythmical jazz dance."

"My wife and everybody else gets in it," he said.

Conrad, who estimated that 6 million Americans do some kind of aerobic dance exercise, said most devotees are women, although some teachers report having a few men in their classes.

Sessions tend to be extremely hard work, and newcomers, male or female, are invariably sore the day after their first sessions.

Once a week about 10 women from Mrs. Reagan's staff leave the East Wing of the White House after work and walk through the corridors in their leotards to a fifth-floor hallway of an adjacent federal office building.

They work out to the beat from a record player and come back "all icked up," said Dodie Kazanjian, the first lady's deputy press secretary.

Their teacher is Lisa Dobloug, whose Saga Club in Washington's Georgetown section is frequented by many prominent Washingtonians, including Brown.

Office to argue against parole for police officer

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles district attorney's office today will try to block parole for a former police officer convicted of murdering his wife and his girlfriend's husband in a plot to collect on their life insurance policies.

Deputy District Attorney Steven Sowders is expected to argue against the possible release of Paul S. Perveler at a meeting with the state Board of Prison Terms in Sacramento.

Perveler, who was a Los Angeles policeman, has been given an Aug. 6, 1985, parole date, but could be released as early as next August.

Perveler's case was the inspiration for the best-selling 1978 novel, "Till Death Us Do Part." Subtitled "A True Murder Mystery," the book was a fictional account of two lovers who murdered their spouses and attempted to kill others in a scheme to obtain tens of thousands of dollars in insurance money. Written by Vincent Bugliosi, the former Los Angeles district attorney who successfully prosecuted Perveler and his girlfriend, Kristina Cromwell, the novel contained outtakes from the actual transcripts of what was known as the "Kill For Profit" trial.

Perveler was convicted in 1969 for the 1968 murder of his bride of 50 days, Cheryl Perveler, and for the 1966 slaying of Cromwell's 27-year-old husband, Marlin Cromwell.

He was also convicted of attempted murder for a 1966 assault on his first wife, Lela Perveler.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, June 23, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Playwright Jean Annouilh, country singer June Carter Cash and choreographer Bob Fosse celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: The French Empress Josephine de Beauharnais and American humorist Irvin S. Cobb. Delays will test your patience in the months ahead. The way you handle these temporary setbacks determines how well you do financially. The business picture looks brighter after September. Examine the old documents and furniture you find in an attic or basement. Those who are in college or just starting out in business have wonderful luck. An up-and-down romance leaves you feeling drained. Your recovery will be quicker than you think.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Necessity could fire your ambitions. Once you make an important decision, refuse to look back. Others endorse your plans. Try not to expect too much from a blind date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Getting your hopes up too high could result in a letdown. The news from an absent friend is encouraging. Be direct with family members. Hire experts to help you showcase your talents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be prepared for opposition to your plans. Obligations must come before pleasure. Schedule quiet activities for children. Others welcome your suggestions. Take the initiative in planning tonight's entertainment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A community or civic event demands a lot of your time and attention. Mate may not understand. Guard against extravagance. Take care of business by phone to eliminate expensive travel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You need to promote your assets if job-hunting or trying to improve your investments. Emphasize diversity when making entertainment plans for the weekend. Find things the whole family can do together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep your plans to yourself. A phone call saves you time and effort. Family members should be in a happy mood. Take a more practical approach to financial matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do something to secure your financial future. You could feel a sudden urge to travel. Someone who is a bit eccentric plays a major role in your affairs now. Show more initiative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Return phone calls promptly to avoid losing out on a good deal. Secret transactions can be successfully concluded. Compromise must be made if a new relationship is to work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A domestic matter is a source of irritation. Take things nice and easy until more information is available. Exercise small economies so that you can build up your savings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your mental powers are at their peak today. Communicate with a prominent person who can help you promote pet projects. Reading and research put you ahead of the competition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not try to put any new plans into action today. If your friends seem sensitive, give them plenty of space. Seek the company of those who share your intellectual interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Distractions make it difficult for you to fulfill a promise to loved one. A budget revision averts a confrontation with mate or family members.

New news channel on the rise

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — After a year of broadcasting news 24 hours a day, Satellite News Channels is rising meteorically in the ranks of the news industry, although advertising isn't as far off the ground, its executives say.

The cable television service has become a recognized news source and the number of regular viewers is growing, the officials say. However, they concede advertising revenues may not pick up substantially until 1984.

Satellite News Channels was launched June 21, 1982 as a joint venture of Westinghouse's Group W Satellite Communications and ABC Video Enterprises. It became the first major competitor with Ted Turner's Cable News Network, which began service in June 1980.

The newer cable network is substantially behind CNN in the number of households reached — 6.5 million for SNC compared with about 19 million for CNN. But Lloyd Werner, senior vice president for sales and affiliate relations for Group W, says viewership has more than doubled for SNC, which was announced about 22 months ago.

"The competitors were saying we would not make it," Werner says. SNC's backers were proposing new technology and a new satellite for the system, and faced stiff competition for the limited channel space which cable operators could offer.

But SNC was hooked into 2.4 million households when it fed its first story on the impending birth of Britain's Prince William last year.

"When the service went up, the reaction was far better than we thought it would be," Werner recalls. "Operators called in and said, 'Gee, it looks real good.'"

News executives at SNC are more pleased with their product a year later. The network offers an 18-minute news package with hourly regional broadcasts from 25 affiliated stations. About 400 people work in its news operations in the main studios in Stamford and in Washington.

SNC's president, S. William Scott, says he expected the network would establish itself as a major news source in about 18 months, but that goal was reached within its first six months.

He says he believes people are drawn to the network because they can see "news in the making," whether that is through broadcasting a news event live or by hearing a newswriter report on a story to that hour's anchor.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

When you have a trick to lose, it is usually right to concede it as soon as you can do so safely. Later may be too late.

After his featherweight opening, South simply rebid his clubs at every opportunity. With his great playing strength and control of every suit, North elected to gamble on a slam.

West led the king of hearts and ruffed in dummy. Declarer decided that the fate of his contract hinged on bringing in the trump suit without a loser. He cashed the king and led the jack. When East failed to follow, declarer rose with the ace and tried to run diamonds. Unfortunately, West was able to ruff the third diamond, and he cashed a heart and the trump queen for down two.

Declarer can afford to lose a trump trick and still make his contract, provided he does not relinquish control of the heart suit. That can all be accomplished with a simple safety play.

After ruffing the king of hearts at trick one, declarer should lead the jack of trumps from dummy and pass it. That wil guarantee the contract as long as trumps are no worse than 3-1.

As the cards lie, West wins the queen of trumps, but he cannot harm declarer. If he continues with hearts, declarer ruffs in dummy, enters his hand with the ace of diamonds and draws the outstanding trumps. Declarer can then overtake the queen of diamonds and take all the discards he needs on dummy's diamonds. No other defense is more effective — the contract is always secure.

Back to Austin

Gov. Mark White is acting responsibly by calling legislators back to the state capitol today to consider a couple of important measures they didn't complete in the regular session which ended May 30.

House Speaker Gib Lewis has estimated this special session will take no more than 10 days at the most. What legislators will be considering is a bill extending the life of the Texas Employment Commission and one bringing state brucellosis controls in line with federal standards. Both of those subjects are legitimate reasons for a special session. They really should have been resolved before the regular session adjourned last month, but there were other things to do.

What's more the governor has said he'll call yet another special session after the current one ends if it's necessary to consider teacher pay raises and other education improvements now being studied by a select committee. That, too, is a legitimate reason for calling a special session. Overall, the education system has been suffering deterioration in recent years and attention is needed to remedy the situation. Properly identifying education's problem and taking the correct steps to put education back in Texas' classrooms will be a heavy task for legislators, but one they must perform if the trend in the educational system is to be reversed.

We don't mean merely throwing money at the problem, either. That's part of the educational dilemma, but it certainly isn't the whole ball of wax.

The unemployed. Diseased cattle. Teachers. These simply constitute further evidence that Texas is a large, diversified state that already has grown to the point at which legislators can't meet once every two years for 140 days and take care of all the state's needs.

That's worth thinking about during the current special session and the next one or two.

So goes the economy

Scarcely a day goes by without additional evidence that this nation's economic recovery is alive and healthy, and here to stay.

The latest good news is about housing. It has long been an economic truism that as the building of houses goes, so goes the economy. One does not have to be an economist to understand why. When cellars are dug, men are put to work. When frames are built, paint is put on, and rugs are laid, factories have to rev up their machines and unemployment comes down. Retail sales inevitably push upward.

So the best news about the economy as the mid-June week ended was that housing starts in the month of May were the highest since the month of September in 1979. The United States Commerce Department tells us that work began in this period at an annual pace of 1,791,000 units. That is a 19.1 percent jump from the pace in the previous month of April.

That's a lot of houses, and a lot of houses means more employment, more sales and a healthier economy.

When the economic recovery started, last December, many skeptics were not hesitant to express their skepticism. But they watched it continue into January and February. Then the upward trends in March and April began to convince the gloomiest of skeptics.

Now this news about housebuilding in May is real frosting on the economic cake. It's welcome news to all of us.

Another View:

Fair housing issue

In a welcome announcement, the administration has now said it will address the high-priority civil rights issue of enforcing the 15-year-old law against discrimination in housing sales and rentals.

Under that law, complaints are subject to conciliation by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. But if conciliation fails, private individuals must bring their own lawsuits in court to enforce their rights. The Justice Department can sue only violators who engage in a widespread pattern or practice of discrimination.

It has been clear for some time that this enforcement mechanism is ineffective. Congress in the past has considered but not enacted remedial legislation.

Last month Sen. Charles Mathias and 37 cosponsors introduced a bill with the backing of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. Now HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. has released details of a forthcoming administration bill.

Both proposals provide a new enforcement mechanism for individuals whose rights have been violated. Both would continue to refer cases to state agencies where appropriate. Both look to conciliation as a first step.

Under either bill, a plaintiff could apply for a temporary restraining order to prevent the sale or rental of the housing in question during adjudication of the claim. Mathias proposes civil penalties of up to $10,000 on a first offense; the administration bill allows a $50,000 penalty in such circumstances.

The major difference between the two bills is the method of enforcement. The Mathias bill authorizes administrative law judges to receive complaints and issue orders. Their decisions would be reviewable first by a new Fair Housing Review Commission and eventually by federal courts of appeals.

Civil rights groups believe that this kind of specialized administrative enforcement is faster than court suits. The administration disagrees: the bill Pierce describes would have the Justice Department bring suit in federal court on behalf of individuals when the HUD secretary so recommends.

The essential element, though, is in both bills: the burden of enforcement is on the government rather than on the individual victim.

Administration action on fair housing is not only appropriate and right, it is politically smart. No less so is a recent announcement by Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds that he will tour Mississippi with black leaders to investigate possible violations of the Voting Rights Act.

Steps like these counter the widely held belief that this administration has been at best indifferent to civil-rights concerns that affect not only minorities, but the general perception of American society as just and fair.

ART BUCHWALD

Past haunts people at reunions!

News Item — Dr. Jack Sparacino, a psychologist, did a survey on high school and college class reunions and came to the conclusion the difference between people who attended them and those that did not return wasn't based on the status they hold today, but the past status they held in school.

Art Buchwald

"Herman, darling, are you going to your high school's 30th-year reunion?"

"Why should I? They'll only start calling me 'Inky Squid.'"

"Is that what they called you in school?"

"Yeh, except for George Hankoff. He called me 'Squishy Squid.'"

"But that was years ago. You now own the largest land development company in the United States."

"That won't cut any ice with Billy Mahler. He'll still step on my foot and say it was an accident."

"You know you're exaggerating. I'm sure they'd love to see you. After all, you're the chairman of the board of a Hollywood motion picture company, and you're probably the only one who married a movie star."

"Maybe so, but I'll bet you Susan Butler still won't dance with me."

"Who is Susan Butler?"

"She was our high school's leading pom-pom girl. She used to stand on Bob Markay's shoulders and yell 'DEEEEEEE FENSE' whenever the other team was threatening to score. One time I asked her to go to a prom with me and she said, 'I don't dance with Inky Squids.'"

"Maybe she'll change her tune when you arrive at the airport in your private Lear jet."

"Milton Steiglitz will just laugh and say, 'Who would have thought that stupid Inky, with his shirttail always out, would own his own airplane? It shows you what a mess this country is really in!'"

"You're making those things up, Herman. After all, you're probably the only one in your class who has a university library named after him."

"Milton never forgave me for dropping a fly ball in the ninth inning to rob him of a no-hit game."

"I never knew you played baseball on the high school team."

"I didn't. It was a sandlot game in Hollis Woods, around the corner from where I lived."

"But now you own a National Baseball League team. Milton will certainly be impressed with that."

"It won't give him back his no-hit ball game."

"Well, it's no big deal to me if you go or not. I won't know anybody there anyway."

"You're lucky. I wouldn't want you to meet Gunner Morgan. Every day he'd go through my lunch bag and take out anything that tickled his fancy. I don't think I ever ate one of my mother's brownies the whole time I was in high school."

"It would be fun to spring on him that you now own 2,150 chocolate chip cookie franchises in the country."

"Gunner would probably find some way of taking them away from me."

"Isn't there anybody in the class that was nice?"

"Fern Haggerty never called me Squid."

"Well, you'll be glad to see her."

"Yeh, but she was built like the Goodyear blimp, and everyone in the class thought because she didn't call me Squid, there was something serious going on between us. If I see her at the class reunion and I'm nice to her, they'll think there's still something going on between us."

"Maybe Fern went on Weight Watchers. After all, that was 30 years ago. She may be a very beautiful woman now."

"If she is, she probably won't talk to me, and if she does, she'll probably call me Squid."

"So I take it you're not going to the reunion."

"Not if Arnie Krasner is going to be there."

"All right, what was your relationship with Arnie Krasner?"

"He was my best friend until he told everyone in class I slept on a rubber sheet."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Officials fear Khomeini death

WASHINGTON — America's military strategists have a recurring nightmare that comes closer to reality with every passing day. It has to do with Iran, which dominates the Persian Gulf. The latter is the heart that pumps the Middle East's oil to the industrial nations of the West.

Jack Anderson

Here's the "worst-case scenario" that has the strategists shuddering: The 84-year-old Iranian ruler, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, finally succumbs to the ravages of age. His death plunges Iran into chaos.

The most disciplined underground group — the communist Tudeh party — sets up a government and calls upon the Soviet Union to help stabilize the country. Within days, Russian tanks surge across the Araxes River into northwestern Iran. From Soviet Turkmenia and Afghanistan in the northeast other Red Army columns race for the Strait of Hormuz — the narrow channels through which the oil tankers must pass.

Now the nightmare is just beginning. President Reagan cannot permit the Russians to grab control of the free world's oil. Indeed, Washington has already served notice that U.S. forces will defend our "vital interests" in the Persian Gulf area. But conventional forces couldn't possibly stop the Soviet onslaught. This could be accomplished only with nuclear weapons.

How real is this strategic nightmare? Would the Kremlin dare to risk World War III even for the prize of Persian Gulf oil? Consider these points, which have been raised in Pentagon strategy sessions:

— The Soviets enacted a similar scenario in Afghanistan. In a secret analysis, the Joint Chiefs of Staff warn: "The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in late 1979 demonstrated a willingness to apply direct military force to achieve political objectives."

— Intelligence reports claim that Yuri Andropov won his ascendancy in the Kremlin with the strong support of the Soviet military. The Red Army marshals now have more influence than they have ever wielded in party councils, which make military solutions more likely than ever.

— The Russians can invoke a legal technicality to justify an invasion: a 1921 treaty that gives them the right to intervene in Iranian affairs. Though Khomeini abrogated the treaty in 1979, the Soviets never recognized his unilateral announcement.

— The Soviets could cite historical precedent. During World War II, the Soviet Union and Great Britain "invaded" Iran and divided it into northern and southern spheres of influence. The United States not only endorsed the action but later sent its own troops into Iran. The military occupation lasted until 1946. The Soviets' reluctant withdrawal marked one of the few times the Kremlin has pulled its forces out of occupied territory.

— But the most sobering argument is the presence of 26 Soviet divisions near the Iranian border. They're definitely not border guards and customs officers. They include elite units and sophisticated weapons capable of a full-scale military assault. They are ready to roll.

How would a Soviet invasion of Iran begin? Some 250,000 ground troops, moving behind an awesome battle line of tanks, would lunge across the border. "But any serious aggression could well be spearheaded by first-category airborne divisions," one secret report suggests.

That would require Soviet control of the air. According to U.S. intelligence estimates, the Russians have about 550 fixed-wing aircraft and 500 helicopters in the border region right now.

More significantly, according to another report, "the Soviets have established command and control capability necessary to conduct large-scale military operations (in Iran)." And their 29 fighting ships in the Indian Ocean would pose a serious threat to our sea lines.

The Joint Chiefs estimate that it would take the Kremlin 30 days to mount and sustain a full-scale invasion of Iran. But they warn that an initial attack could be kicked off on much shorter notice: "Four to seven selected Soviet divisions could commence a limited attack into Iran's northwestern and northeastern border areas after a preparation period of about 10 days."

There's no doubt at the Pentagon — or in the Kremlin — that the Russians have the military might to barrel through Iran to the Persian Gulf. Understating it nicely, the Joint Chiefs warn that the Russian invasion force "would possess numerical advantages in both personnel and equipment over U.S. forces."

Of small comfort, one secret intelligence analysis lists some "serious obstacles" the Soviet invaders would encounter: "Iran's harsh environment and rugged terrain, with limited access routes through the Alborz and Zagros mountains to the Gulf area, could create chokepoints, impede Soviet troops progress and canalize Soviet forces, making them vulnerable to interdiction."

How likely is the nuclear fuse to be ignited by events in Iran? Worried strategists in Washington still count on sanity to prevail. They hold grimly to the belief that the more cautious elements on both sides will control the levers and somehow muddle through without Armageddon.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Latin mood favors Sandinistas

WASHINGTON — Few governments in Latin America are really friendly toward the United States.

William Giandoni

Their people may be, but from Mexico to Argentina and Chile, virtually every government can come up with what it considers a valid reason for not trusting Washington, whether Democrats or Republicans have the presidency or control Congress.

Mexico has the longest list of complaints, dating back to the middle of the 1800s when the United States took what are now the states of California, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and others, and continuing right up to present-day trade restrictions.

Both Colombia and Panama can rationalize their disinclination to give the United States the benefit of the doubt by hearkening back to the independence of Panama from Colombia, and to the history of U.S.-Panama relations during and after construction of the Panama Canal.

Even Venezuela sometimes blames its lopsided development on the U.S. oil companies that dominated the profitable Venezuelan petroleum industry until 1976, when it was nationalized.

It may be hard for Americans to comprehend the resentment against the United States that occasionally surfaces in the other American republics, but it is a fact.

Nevertheless, critics of and apologists for present U.S. policy in Central America say they are pinning their hopes on the efforts of "the Contadora Group," the four Latin American nations that have been studying Central America's problems since January 1983.

The four — Mexico, Colombia, Panama and Venezuela — met then on Contadora Island in the Gulf of Panama to try to bring peace to Central America. The United States says that Nicaragua, where Marxist-led Sandinistas are in control, is to blame and that, with the help and at the urging of Cuba and the Soviet Union, the Sandinistas are trying to export their revolution outside their frontiers. The Contadora Group seems to feel that Marxist subversion is not the prime cause of the problems in El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica, but rather that social and economic inequities are responsible.

Although the foreign ministers of the Contadora countries have engaged in several flights of shuttle diplomacy, not much seems to have been accomplished.

There was a flurry of activity after Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge suggested the four might form a Central American peace force made up of soldiers from their armies, and post it along the Costa Rica-Nicaragua border.

Monge claimed, with reason, that his little country, which has no army, could not patrol its own frontier region to make sure that Nicaraguan exiles not make forays from Costa Rica into their own country, or that the Sandinistas not invade Costa Rica in hot pursuit of the guerrillas led by former Sandinista hero Eden Pastora.

The Contadora four responded by dispatching a few observers to study the situation and compile another report.

At about that juncture, Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, who recently visited all the Contadora countries, appeared on the scene and voiced support for their efforts to find a non-violent solution to the Central American crisis.

Gonzalez can hardly be considered an impartial observer. Before his election last October he was active as chairman of the Socialist International's Committee in Solidarity with the Sandinista Revolution.

During his visit to Panama, Gonzalez denied reports that he would act as the Contadora Group's "spokesman," but said that he would "mention Spain's concern," along with information he received from the heads of state of the four countries to President Reagan.

Gonzalez was also asked whether the situation in Central America is the result of the "classic East-West confrontation."

The Spanish Socialist leader replied that "to say that the Central American problem is a confrontation between communism and democracy is to try to draw a smoke screen over Sandino's reality." Then Gonzalez added cryptically, "I am not referring to Sandinism."

That last is a reflection of the concern of the Socialist International over the Sandinistas' failure to live up to the principles of the Nicaraguan revolution four years ago, including prompt elections, political pluralism, freedom of the press and the like.

However, as former Costa Rican Foreign Minister Gonzalo Facio has been insisting, the Contadora Group is made up of governments that tend to sympathize more with the Sandinistas than with the United States.

Woman with fluctuating temperature becomes living lab

Marcia Cates

CHATHAM, Va. (AP) — Marcia Cates, a 42-year-old woman whose body temperature can fluctuate from chills to fever without her being aware of it, has become a living laboratory for NASA researchers.

Her rare problem, which developed after surgery in 1980 on a brain aneurysm, is providing the National Aeronautics and Space Administration with data on body temperature extremes that may be applied to space shuttle astronauts.

Sensors attached to Mrs. Cates' body monitor her temperature and body activity around the clock. The information is collected in a Vitalog, a NASA device carried in a blue pouch on her belt.

Mrs. Cates has been wearing the device since May 16, and every day the data is fed into a donated home computer for later transfer to NASA researchers.

Dr. Bill Williams, who works for the Thermophysiology Laboratory at NASA's Ames Research Center in California, said Mrs. Cates' case may be useful in studies of the coordination of heart rate, blood pressure and temperature of astronauts aboard future shuttle flights.

"What Marcia experiences is an extreme case of desynchronosis," Williams said in a telephone interview from Corvallis, Ore., where he is temporarily working for the Environmental Protection Agency. "There's no coordination between her blood pressure and heart rate, for example. All of her control systems seem to be running free, things that are very tightly correlated in others.

"Astronauts may have some level of desynchronosis," he said.

The difference is that astronauts may suffer the problem because of space travel, while the cause of Mrs. Cates' problem isn't clearly understood, Williams said.

"She does not know when she is cold, she does not know when she is hot. She can absorb heat like a rock and get hotter and hotter," Williams said. "Basically, the wires are not there. Her thermostat — the hypothalmus — is hanging on the wall but there are no wires on it...no signals to the body."

Normal human body temperature is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, but can fluctuate half a degree routinely.

Cates said he noticed the temperature problem one day after his wife underwent surgery to repair a ruptured blood vessel in her brain. He tried to take her temperature, but it wouldn't register on an ordinary thermometer.

Records indicate Mrs. Cates' temperature dropped as low as 88.2 degrees Fahrenheit during a short walk Jan. 6, 1982. Her temperature climbed to 102 degrees in March as she stood in her kitchen after a brief period outside.

The only clues for her family to watch for are loss of mental acuity and changes in blood pressure. If her temperature drops too low, it can be raised with a 103-degree bath or an electric blanket. It also can be raised or lowered by dressing her in a special suit developed for NASA.

The suit is a mesh garment composed of pants, vest and hat. In each part there are tubes that carry heated or cooled distilled water to body areas quickly for emergency temperature stabilization. It doesn't fit skintight like a diver's suit, but wraps around for a loose fit.

Mrs. Cates once managed a uniform rental business in Chatham. Now she spends carefully restricted days in her Victorian house on Main Street of this small southern Virginia town. Her husband quit his construction supervisor's job to care for her.

They live on donations, coordinated through the Pittsylvania County Red Cross. An anonymous benefactor helps pay daily living expenses.

Cates was referred to Williams after he saw a television program about NASA research on body temperature and called a local television station. The two men haven't met, but hold coast-to-coast telephone consultations almost daily.

Agents, aliens 'walk the line'

DEL RIO (AP) — The land along the Rio Grande is another country.

On the surface, the border is a tranquil place, praised in story and song for its balmy weather and slow-moving lifestyle. It is that call that brings thousands of Northerners flocking to the border every winter.

But the border sings a special siren song for others.

Hundreds of thousands of Mexicans and Central and South Americans breach the border every month, seeking American jobs, money and freedom.

To the Border Patrol agents who must enforce immigration laws, the border is a combat zone.

The border's uniqueness never is more clearly defined than during Linewatch, a special Border Patrol operation carried out the night of the full moon to stop illegal aliens at the point of entry.

Linewatch starts in the high canebrakes along the Rio Grande an hour before sunset.

Voices sound from across the river and water is lapping at the shore. Through a break in the cane thicket, the Mexico side of the river is in clear view.

Several cars are parked in the shallow water as their owners wash them.

But Carpenter, patrol agent in charge of the Del Rio Border Patrol station, points and says in a low voice, "Some of them will be swimming and then a group will break off from the rest and try to cross."

As if acting on Carpenter's words, the first alert comes from upriver.

"They're coming out," he said, pointing to an inner tube near the International Bridge being slowly piloted toward the middle of the river. "I don't know if they're fishing or not.

"Yeah, they're crossing one," he said. "He'll come out right under the bridge."

The tube and its two occupants moves out of sight. It reappears 20 minutes later with only one passenger, laboriously returning to the Mexico side.

In a few minutes, four people wade into the water and crowd into the inner tube, causing it to sink out of sight.

The late afternoon is gradually fading toward evening. The sky above the bridge is a canvas of breathtaking pastels.

"I don't know if he'll be able to fight that current," Carpenter said.

"It looks like the current's got them," replies Jack Richardson, chief patrol agent for the Del Rio sector.

The inner tube drifts toward the agents. It is a pitiful sight. The four passengers are struggling against the current, and the tube is completely submerged.

Spanish music drifts across the water. The sky gets darker and darker. An engine starts. The sound is clear over the water.

The river flows on, undisturbed by the human conflicts on its banks. It is a narrow band of water, but tonight it seems very, very wide.

The agents stand quietly in the cane. As the inner tube nears his side of the river, Carpenter begins a stealthy trip to its estimated point of contact. The river bank is hidden by tall cane.

It is almost night. Carpenter's dark green uniform is hard to see as evening deepens. He reappears in chest-high grass 40 yards upstream, closer to the bridge. He shrugs.

Richardson gestures toward the river. Neither the tube nor its occupants have reappeared.

The long period of waiting begins. Cars and trucks rumble across the bridge, perhaps a quarter of a mile from where the Border Patrol agents are concealed in the cane, a quarter of a mile from a Mexico and a United States they will never see.

In an hour or so, the pair splits again. This time, Richardson walks toward the bridge. The five aliens still have not made a move, but the chief patrol agent makes three other arrests — young men who walked across the bridge and climbed a barbed wire fence.

Negotiations on channel islands stalled

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Four years after Pope John Paul II helped avert war between Argentina and Chile, Vatican-sponsored talks on territorial rights at the tip of South America are reported deadlocked.

At issue are 10 barren islands in the Beagle Channel, which connects the Pacific and Atlantic oceans — an area believed to contain oil deposits.

"We still meet regularly, but it is impossible to say how, when or who will make a significant move toward real progress," a source in one of the parties involved said. He declined to be identified either by name or nationality.

The papal mediation effort is unprecedented in modern times. Negotiations to settle the dispute have been dragging on since 1980 and the only visible sign they are still alive is the sight of black cars bearing diplomatic plates parked for hours in front of the gates of a Vatican villa.

What is actually discussed inside remains unknown because of a news blackout imposed by the pope, who was the first pontiff to intervene in a territorial dispute since Pope Leo XIII stepped into a Spanish-German dispute over the Caroline Islands in the Pacific in 1885.

However, the worst-kept Latin American secret in Rome is that the Vatican's aim of getting neighboring Argentina and Chile to sign a pact banning a military solution to their nearly century-old dispute seems as remote as ever.

The dispute led to a massive military buildup in both countries throughout the last decade and pushed Argentina and Chile to the brink of war in late 1978.

After the pope defused the tension by offering his personal mediation in January 1979, both countries set up two "super embassies" in Rome manned by senior officials from their foreign services.

New political situations in both military-run countries, plus the death of a top Vatican negotiator early this year, have brought the search for a solution to a standstill, diplomatic sources say.

"Today it is impossible to even hint how long it will take before an agreement is signed," said a senior Argentine diplomat who asked not to be named. "Frankly, I think we just have to hope for a magic moment to close this matter."

The Chileans claim Argentina missed one "magic moment" when it balked at a proposal John Paul sent to Buenos Aires and Santiago on Dec. 12, 1980, and which Chile accepted.

Under that proposal, according to press reports, Chile would get all the disputed islands. Argentina was said to have been satisfied in principle because the proposal upheld a 1893 agreement limiting Chile's offshore claims to the Pacific and Argentina's to the Atlantic.

But the reports said Argentina was bothered by the idea of joint ventures, also included in the proposal, that would compromise its "theoretically exclusive rights" on the Atlantic side of Cape Horn.

The Vatican has reportedly been asked by Argentina to specify that boundaries in the proposed agreement cannot be extended south to Antarctica, where Argentina, against Chile's objection, claims a slice of territory on the Pacific side of the continent.

The pope would like the two countries to sign an agreement banning the threat of the use of force to settle the dispute while negotiations are under way.

Nations revive nuclear-free zone idea

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sweden and Finland have revived a 20-year-old idea of banning nuclear weapons from Europe's Nordic region, but it seems no closer to acceptance than before.

The Soviet Union has endorsed a Nordic nuclear-free zone ever since it was first proposed May 27, 1963, by former President Urho Kekkonen of Finland.

The Soviets did so again early in June during a visit to Moscow by Kekkonen's successor, Mauno Koivisto, a few days after Prime Minister Olof Palme of Sweden revived the proposal in a speech at Helsinki, the Finnish capital.

Soviet leader Yuri Andropov indicated the Kremlin is willing to discuss withdrawing its nuclear weapons from the Baltic sea if the Nordic nations — Sweden and Finland along with NATO members Norway and Denmark — would sign formal documents to keep nuclear arms out of the area.

As has happened before, however, the United States rejected the idea. Secretary of State George P. Shultz told a Paris news conference there was nothing new in a Soviet suggestion that "other people be nuclear-free but not themselves."

The United States is concerned that debate on nuclear-free zones in Europe will divert attention from efforts to reduce nuclear and conventional forces in Europe at negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland, and Vienna, Austria.

A State Department statement has said the United States and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies "have consistently found that such proposals are not realistic or effective."

Although Palme termed Andropov's statement "positive and a step forward," other Western analysts were, like Shultz, less positive.

Foreign Minister Uffe Ellemann-Jensen of Denmark said it was interesting but needs elaboration.

Robert Elliot, an officer at London's International Institute for Strategic Studies, commented: "There is no mention made of a firm commitment by the Soviets to reduce the nuclear stocks in such areas as Murmansk and the Baltic, nor of any area in the Soviet Union where such arms would be restricted."

Andropov's statement was an apparent response to Palme's attempt to revive the nuclear-free zone idea.

Oregon Pharmacist's

Wrinkle Cream Great . . . But Scarce!

By CELIA DAVIS
Beauty Consultant

I found some, thank goodness!

Everyone has been raving about the new EB5 Wrinkle Cream, developed by an Oregon pharmacist, Robert Heldfond, who worked on this exciting aid since pharmacy school.

I was dying to see what it would do for me and I was thrilled with the results. I could actually see and feel the difference almost overnight, but the amazing results appeared in about 3 weeks . . . and ever since then I continue to look younger and better.

EB5 Wrinkle Cream is not just a temporary aid and its results are natural, for it contains natural-source ingredients, including LiProgen, collagen and lipoproteins, Vitamins E and B5, Vitamins A and D and other fine aids in a penetrating, greaseless base.

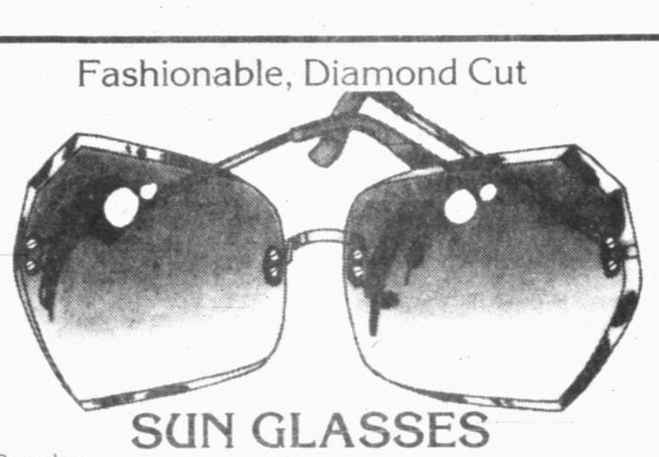

Also my friends ranging from 40 to 70 years old are all praising EB5 Wrinkle Cream . . . one says her husband has fallen in love with her all over again . . . others say their friends ask them what they are doing to their "old" skin that makes them look so much younger!

Best of all, EB5 Wrinkle Cream is really not expensive for it lasts for many months . . . and guess what . . . it can be used for everything so you need no other cream with it . . . it is an eye cream, a moisturizer, a throat cream, a makeup base . . . plus a wrinkle cream . . . so it is actually 5 creams in 1 jar. What a savings!

Hurry! If you can find some EB5 Wrinkle Cream buy it. Don't wait . . . your wrinkles won't!

Note: EB5 Wrinkle Cream is available in limited quantity in Midland at Dunlaps. Phone 694-8888 while supply lasts or go in and ask any cosmetician about EB5 Wrinkle Cream.

Midland edges Beaumont, 8-7

BEAUMONT — The Midland Cubs evened their record at 1-1 in the second half of the Texas League race with an 8-7 win over Beaumont here Tuesday night.

Tom Lombarski and Carlos Lezcano hit solo homers for Midland while helping Jim Wright improved his record to 3-1.

The Cubs' victory, combined with El Paso's 18-3 loss to San Antonio, created a four-way tie in the western division with all four teams at 1-1.

Midland sent nine men to the plate during a five-run fifth. Beaumont held a three-run lead going into the decisive inning before the Cubs picked up six hits including five in a row.

Lombarski's blast came in the seventh, traveling over the 25-foot centerfield fence at the 380-foot mark. It was his ninth round tripper of the season.

Mark Parent and James Steels had solo shots for the Gators.

Steels had a single, two doubles and a stolen base to compliment his home run.

Beaumont's Willie Hardwick, 3-1, was the loser.

In the East, Shreveport beat Tulsa 6-2 and Jackson defeated Arkansas 6-1.

attack with a three-run homer and a double.

Bob Gendron, 5-6, was the winning pitcher for the Captains. Billy Taylor, 2-2, took the loss.

Jackson's Phil Huffman, 3-3, pitched eight innings and struck out six.

1925 — Kiki Cuyler and Pie Traynor of the Pirates each hit a grand slam homer and Max Carey had a pair of hits in each the first and eighth innings of Pittsburgh's 24-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

1947 — Ewell Blackwell came the closest of any major league pitcher to duplicating Johnny Vander Meer's record of two consecutive no-hitters, when he lost his bid for a second straight when Eddie Stanky of the Brooklyn Dodgers singled with one out in the ninth inning. Blackwell, whose no-hitter came against the Boston Braves, finished the game with a 2-hitter and a 4-0 victory to salvage a split of a doubleheader.

1982 — Pete Rose singled to right-center field against Dave LaPoint in the sixth inning of the Philadelphia Phillies' 7-5 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals at Busch Memorial Stadium for his 3,771st hit, tying Hank Aaron for second place on all-time career hit list.

Ivan Lendl used a strong serve-and-volley game to defeat Bernie Mitton and win his first match at Wimbledon in three years.

Wimbledon: Ageless battle

Lendl looks strong in opening round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When Billie Jean King captured her first Wimbledon title in 1961, Jimmy Connors was just 9 years old and Chris Evert Lloyd two years younger.

Connors, now 30, is attempting to defend his All-England Lawn Tennis Championships title here on the fabled grass courts, while the 28-year-old Lloyd is going after her fourth consecutive Grand Slam tournament crown.

King, meanwhile, is still following her serve to the net, putting away volleys and many of her younger opponents as she tries to increase her Wimbledon record of titles to 21.

"Chris and Martina (Navratilova, the defending women's champion) have earned the right to be the favorites here, but I know I have prepared myself as best I can," said King, a winner on opening day. "In fact, I was ready to play last week."

Last year, King delighted the crowds — many of whom were around to see her collect the women's doubles title in 1961 — as she reached the semifinals before being ousted by Lloyd.

The woman who replaced King as queen of tennis, Lloyd still is wary of the "Old Lady" of the tour.

"I think she is a threat on grass," said Lloyd. "They say she is in better shape and a good frame of mind.

"I think she could do some damage. But she's in my quarter (of the draw), so I hope not. But her game is suited for grass."

Like King, Connors has returned to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs. He first won here in 1974, then gained his second title last year.

"I have to work harder now that I am older," Connors said. "It takes two hours of hard work to discipline myself instead of one hour. I am working harder, but I enjoy it more."

All three were to play second-round matches today, King taking on Beth Herr, Lloyd meeting Marcella Mesker of the Netherlands and Connors playing Wally Masur of Australia.

Lloyd and Navratilova breezed past their opening-round foes, Lloyd taking just 55 minutes and Navratilova an astounding 32 minutes.

Second seeded, Lloyd stopped fellow American Alycia Moulton 6-2, 6-1. The top-seeded Navratilova, who has lost just four matches since the beginning of 1982, crushed South African Beverly Mould 6-1, 6-0.

Fourth-seeded Tracy Austin was Tuesday's major casualty, never taking the court. The two-time U.S. Open champion withdrew prior to her first-round match because of a pulled back muscle.

Another seed, No.6 Bettina Bunge of West Germany, was upset by Christiane Jolissaint of Switzerland 3-6, 7-6, 11-9.

Capturing their first-round matches, all in straight sets, were third seeded Andrea Jaeger, No.7 Wendy Turnbull of Australia, No.8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No.9 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany, No.12 Virginia Ruzici of Romania, No.13 Jo Durie of Britain, No.14 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary and No.16 Claudia Kohde of West Germany.

In the men's draw, Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, making his first appearance at Wimbledon in two years, hammered Bernie Mitton of South Africa 7-6, 6-1, 6-0, while No.8 Vitas Gerulaitis outlasted Ramesh Krishnan of India 5-7, 7-5, 7-6, 5-7, 6-3 in a battle that took 3½ hours.

Also a first-round winner was No.11 Johan Kriek, who stopped Sammy Giammalva 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

Lendl, who refused to enter Wimbledon a year ago because, he said, he couldn't get enough practice time on grass, said that was no problem this year.

"I've been practicing a lot on the surface and working on my footwork," he said after his straight-set victory. "I played really well. The court was very true and I had no problems."

After a close first set, in which he played his usual baseline game, Lendl began the serve-and-volley tactics that are the hallmark of grass court tennis.

ACU alumni get review of victorious year in sports

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

"The Lone Star conference has to be the best overall NAAA Division II conference in the nation and we are proud to be a part of that," Abilene Christian University assistant athletic director Jerpy Mullins told ACU's Permial Basin alumni Tuesday night.

ACU athletic backers held their annual alumni meeting at Golf Course Church of Christ Tuesday with four members of the ACU athletic staff on hand.

"Our conference won three national titles this school year," Mullins said. "I think that shows you what kind of conference we are in.

"We (ACU) won the NCAA Division II track championship for the second year in a row. Southwest Texas won the national football crown and men's golf title also. In football, we placed second with a 6-4-1 record and lost to Southwest Texas by one point when we failed to convert a two-point play. But we were proud that coach Ted Sitton went for the two points."

Sitton lightly replied, "Well, I didn't run with the ball or we would have scored."

Sitton is optimistic about the upcoming football season, but sees another tough uphill battle.

"Southwest Texas has been picked to win the conference again and Stephen F. Austin is picked second and us third. But I see five teams at least that could win it," Sitton said. "We have five super starters back from last year and six of our starters were walk-ons."

Jerry Mullins

Ted Sitton

Burl McCoy

Sitton has two all-conference players back in linebacker Mike Funderberg of Breckenridge and offensive tackle Dan Remsberg of Temple, an all-conference choice as a sophomore.

Sitton is hoping that tailback Lenbia Kinsler can play a full year this time around. He missed four games for ACU, but still led the conference in scoring. Walkon safety Mark Jackson of Amarillo Tascosa is considered another great prospect and former Abilene High great Loyal Proffitt returns at quarterback as a junior.

Don Hood, ACU track coach, was unable to attend this year's meeting, but the feeling is that he will again be a track power. Three of Hood's returning veterans are Midland products. The former Midland Lee sprint brother tandem of Arthur and Darrin Williams will be back. Arthur will be a junior and Darrin a sophomore and both run on the 1600 meter relay team. ACU also has senior-to-be David Simmons in the discus, hammer and shot put. Simmons won a state discus championship at Midland High.

Women's basketball and track coach Burl McCoy was also at the meeting with a smile since he won two Lone Star titles. He was named coach of the year in two sports and "I don't think that has ever happened before," Mullins said.

"We won 31 basketball games in 81-82, but lost nine seniors. It wasn't even supposed to be a rebuilding year, it was a starting over year for us," McCoy said. "By the end of the year we were a good team and went unbeaten in conference play. In track, I think we left our mental state at the conference track meet where we scored 230 points to win the title. Angelo State was second with 116 points and we ended up 13th in the nation overall."

Jerry Wilson, Sitton's defensive coordinator, gave reports on the men's 14-14 basketball team along with golf and tennis reports. Wilson has been at ACU since 1966 when he left Big Spring to play for ACU. Wilson played high school ball with Lee assistant football coach Van Tom Whatley.

'Ropes' Russell plays short, carries big stick

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It was the ninth inning and the game was hardly on the line. Or, so the Reds' pitcher thought.

The Reds had a 2-1 lead, there was a runner on base and two out for the Dodgers. And the batter was Bill Russell. Only Bill Russell. Pitcher Ben Hayes knew what to expect. Bill Russell would just try to punch the ball some place safe, hit it where they ain't, as Willie Keeler advised, just try to move the runner around into scoring position.

Pitcher Hayes studied the choke grip, the short swing, the foot shift and figured he would fool Russell, give him an inside, high pitch he couldn't possibly slap into right field.

Russell couldn't. The strategy worked fine. So he slapped it into the left-field seats instead. He hit it where they'll never be, as Babe Ruth advised.

For pitcher Hayes, that was a little like getting bit by your pet canary, assaulted by a man wearing a Roman collar. Bill Russell is not your basic Sultan of Swat, not your every day fence buster. Billy hits a home run only ever eon or so. I mean, shoot! He's hit four now since 1980. That was his first of 1983. Most of his home runs have a 60-40 chance of going foul anyway and the 46 he's hit in his big league career probably wouldn't make two of Babe Ruth's laid end to end.

Still, it won the game for the Dodgers. Lots of Bill Russell's hits do. One of them won a pennant once, a more typical Bill Russell hit, a soft line drive to center no one could reach in the playoffs against the Phils in 1978.

The year before, in a crucial playoff game, after Davalillo, Mota and Lopes had hit with two out in the ninth, Russell bounced a single to center for the old ball game and, ultimately, the old gonfalon, too.

When you think of "old pros" in the big leagues, you usually think of blue-bearded, tobacco-chewing loudmouths who go around spitting on your shoes, bawling out rookies, demanding privileges, quarreling with the manager and having an entourage of guys who open doors for them, carry their bats, hand them their shoes and treat them like royalty.

With Billy Russell, everyone treats him as if he were a rookie. Because he lets them. He's polite to the point of shyness, he's the only guy in the game who can still blush after 14 years in the big time, he calls everybody "Sir" or "Maam," he takes off his hat in elevators and he would be the kind of kid who shows up in class with his face scrubbed, his shoes shined, homework done and an apple for the teacher.

In fact, he was kind of a manager's pet when Walt Alston ran the Dodgers. Alston always smiled when discussing Bill Russell although he could control his emotions pretty well when discussing the rest of the lineup.

It's hard to believe Bill Russell is the oldest in point of service on the Dodgers. He doesn't act the part. Or even look it. Or sound it. He has the twang of Kansas in his speech, the dry, cornfield rattle of a guy you'd want to sell a tin watch or the Brooklyn Bridge to.

It's an axiom of baseball that no team can be successful without a steady, dependable, able, unflappable guy in the center of the infield, and Bill Russell has been there on four pennant winners.

It's also an axiom of baseball that shortstops get noticed only when they do something wrong. Only four of them ever got elected by the writers to the Hall of Fame. They wrote poems about Joe Tinker but the veterans committee, otherwise known as the oversight committee or the panel for the overlooked, had to shoe-horn him in.

Bill Russell is no exception to the to-hell-with-the-shortstop rule. Ask three people what they remember about Bill Russell in the 1978 World Series and all three will remember that he hit Reggie Jackson in the hip with a double-play ball in the pivotal fourth game, a play that may have blown the Series for the Dodgers but also a play in which the umps may have blown it for them. Like, did Russell's throw hit Reggie or did Reggie hit Russell's throw? What they do know is, had L.A. won, Bill Russell would have been MVP of the Series. He only batted .423 in it.

On the whole, Bill Russell accepts the role of the little man who isn't there and hasn't been there for 14 years. To be sure, he's made 300 errors, but it is an axiom of baseball that only the good shortstops get to enough balls to roll up that many bobbles. Or didn't you know that the great Honus Wagner made the most errors in the National League, 676, and Donie Bush, the American League, 689? Guys win fielding championships by never getting to balls on time.

His nickname on the club is Ropes. For an interesting reason. When he first came up to the club with hum of the prairies on his tips and hair the color of straw, the veterans of the club — Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Len Gabrielson — wanted to take the rook out to "show him the ropes." When they couldn't do it, they dubbed him Ropes Russell.

"I was shy then, I'm shy now," says Ropes. "I never did learn the ropes."

Ropes likes it that way. It's not likely he will become the fifth shortstop elected to the Hall of Fame. But it's entirely likely that pitchers will continue to think they can get away with an inside fastball, high but hittable, with the game on the line. Russell knows those ropes.

NBA expands playoff system

NEW YORK (AP) — The best-of-three miniseries that frightened good teams and gave upset hopes to mediocre ones is being scrapped by the National Basketball Association.

The NBA's Board of Governors voted Tuesday to expand the playoffs from 12 to 16 teams and make the opening-round series best-of-five instead of best-of-three. Another effect of the vote is that the four division champions now will have to play in the first round rather than receive a bye.

Jerry Colangelo, general manager of the Phoenix Suns and chairman of a special committee appointed by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien to recommend improvements in the league, announced the changes after the summer meeting of the Board of Governors.

Colangelo said there were two other major changes approved by the board.

One is that no NBA team will be allowed to make transactions that would leave it with no first-round draft choice for two consecutive years. Another change limits cash transactions to $300,000 between Dec. 15 and the end of the season each year.

Colangelo said the main reason for the change in the playoff format was economic.

Angels, Orange Crush post wins in LL play

Dorey Thompson pitched shutout ball and hit a home run to lead the Mid City Angels to a 4-0 win over the Eastern Optomist in the American Little League City Championship playoff tournament at Sparks Park.

The Angels will take their 2-0 mark against the Tower Diablos (1-0) in the winners bracket today.

Brad Taylor doubled and Shawn Savas tripled for the Angels.

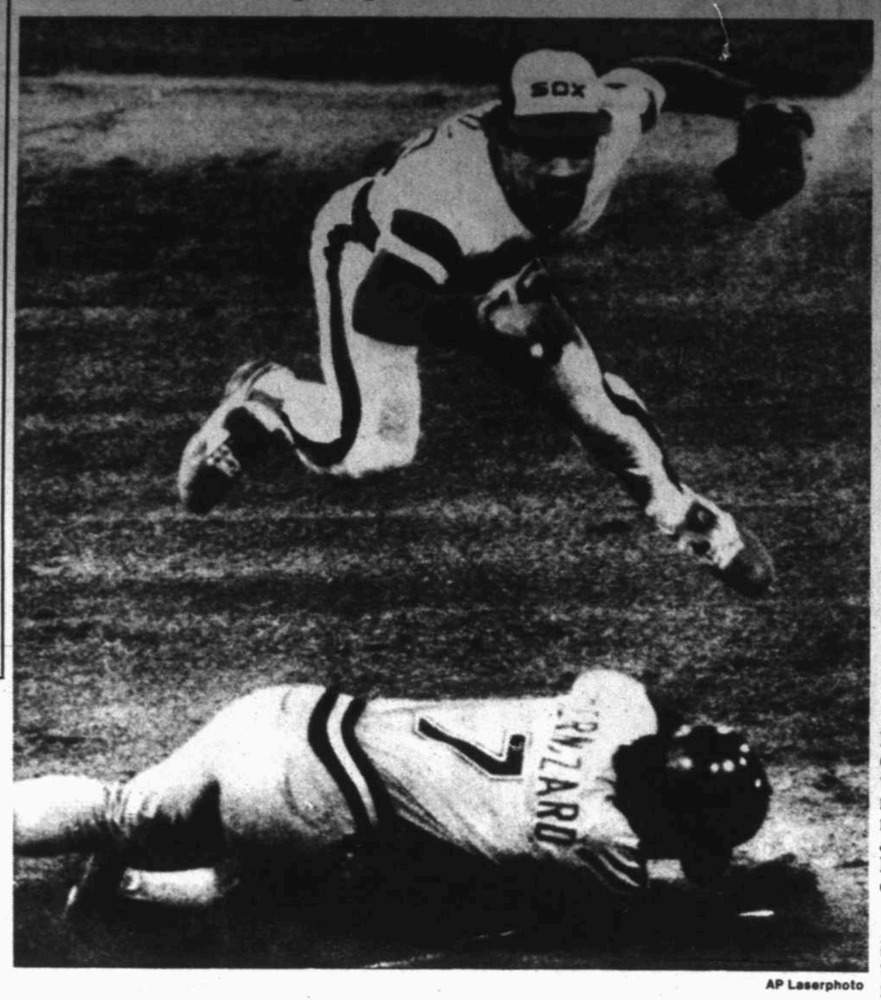

In the losers bracket, Western Orange Crush squeezed by the North Central Braves 4-3.

The loss eliminated the Braves from the double elimination tournament while Orange Crush evened its record at 1-1.

Steve Marlow was the winner while Tommy Mason suffered the loss. Jason Stone of the Braves had the games only extra base hit, a double.

The Western Little League representatives will face Eastern Optomist (0-1) today.

By The Associated Press

Home run hitters like Gary Roenicke and Cliff Johnson usually know when they have unloaded a dinger, but sometimes they're not so sure.

They each slammed two homers Tuesday night, accounting for four runs, and then expressed surprise over one of the long balls.

"I was surprised as anybody that the second homer went out," Roenicke said of his eighth-inning blast off New York's Shane Rawley which snapped a 2-2 tie and powered the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-2 victory over the Yankees. "I didn't think it was going out until I saw (center fielder Jerry) Mumphrey go up against the fence and then not come down with the ball. It was a fastball out over the plate. "I said, 'I wish I had pulled it more.'"

There was no doubt about Roenicke's two-homer in the fourth, a blast deep into the left field bleachers.

Johnson, who hit a tape-measure shot with the bases empty in the sixth inning, drilled a three-run homer in the first off Minnesota's Bryan Oelkers as the Toronto Blue Jays whipped the Twins 8-3.

"I was kind of surprised on the first one," he said. "I didn't think it had the height to go out."

Blue Jays 8, Twins 3

Johnson's four RBIs and three by Garth Iorg helped rookie pitcher Jim Acker record his first major league victory. Acker, who was making his first start after 14 relief appearances, was touched for one run and two hits in five innings. Roy Lee Jackson and Randy Moffitt protected the Blue Jays' third consecutive victory and eighth in their last 10 games.

Rangers 3, Angels 2

Larry Parrish drove in two runs with a homer and double and Danny Darwin scattered eight hits in 7 1-3 innings before needing help from Dave Schmidt. Singles by Buddy Bell and Parrish and George Wright's double gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning. Wayne Tolleson singled and Parrish doubled him home in the fifth and Parrish hit his 12th home run of the season to give the Rangers a 3-1 lead in the seventh.

AL Roundup

Royals 4, A's 2

Rookie Cliff Pastornicky belted a two-run homer and Frank White drove in a run for the 10th consecutive game to back the eight-hit pitching of Paul Splittorff and Dan Quisenberry. Pastornicky, whose first major league hit was a three-run homer on Sunday, slammed a pitch from Steve McCatty into the left-field seats to give the Royals a 2-0 lead in the second inning.

Indians 3, Red Sox 1

Gorman Thomas drilled his second double of the game, a two-out, two-run bases-loaded shot in the eighth inning, to snap a tie. The Indians loaded the bases off Bruce Hurst, who lost his fifth consecutive start, when Alan Bannister singled and one out later Mike Hargrove and Andre Thornton walked. Luis Aponte replaced Hurst and surrendered the game-winning double to Thomas, who also doubled in the second inning and scored on Toby Harrah's single. Winner Bert Blyleven gave up 10 hits but notched his third complete game.

Brewers 10, Tigers 3

Moose Haas scattered eight hits and Cecil Cooper hit a two-run homer as Milwaukee snapped a four-game losing streak. Besides Cooper's homer, which highlighted a four-run ninth, Ned Yost, Charlie Moore and Jim Gantner drove in two runs apiece for the Brewers.

White Sox 4, Mariners 2

Carlton Fisk and Harold Baines smashed consecutive solo home runs off Bob Stoddard with two out in the seventh inning Tuesday night to give Chicago its third consecutive triumph. Richard Dotson limited Seattle to six hits before giving way to Juan Agosto in the eighth. Seattle has lost five games in a row.

Ayala draws 35-year sentence

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — The Superior Court judge who ordered Tony Ayala Jr. to spend a minimum of 15 years behind bars for a sexual assault described the former top-ranked boxer as "a threat to women."

Judge Amos C. Saunders, pronouncing the sentence Tuesday, painted a protrait a young man who was unable to control the impulses that led to the destruction of a once-promising career.

"The future was his," Saunders said. "Unfortunately, underneath that handsome exterior there seems to be another Antonio Ayala."

Ayala was convicted of charges of sexually assaulting a woman who lived in his West Paterson apartment complex and threatening her roommate with a knife.

"The circumstances of this crime are certainly one of extreme violence and depravity," Saunders said.

The judge noted that the crime occurred on the victim's birthday and that "for the rest of her life, whenever she celebrates her birthday, she will remember that night of terror."

Ayala, who received a 35-year sentence with a 15-year minimum, threaded his way through a crush of photographers on his way to the courtroom. He was silent during the sentencing and frequently wiped tears from his eyes with his handcuffed hands.

His girlfriend, Lisa, as well as the victim and her parents, sat quietly behind him during the proceeding.

Referring to an earlier sexual assault conviction, Saunders said: "Mr. Ayala is a definite threat to society and especially the women in our society."

The 20-year-old boxer was found guilty April 13 of all six counts against him and faced a maximum term of 50 years. Ayala's lawyers say they will appeal the conviction and sentence.

When he was arrested Jan. 1, Ayala was on the verge of a World Boxing Association title fight against Davey Moore, who was then the junior middleweight champion.

Baker burns Lollar's no-hit effort

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Padres are still waiting for a no-hitter, despite the best efforts of Tim Lollar.

Lollar had Dodger Stadium buzzing Tuesday night as he breezed through six innings by holding Los Angeles hitless. Then, with one out in the seventh, Dusty Baker broke the spell with a clean single to left.

And, after Bill Russell led off the ninth with another single, Luis DeLeon came on to retire the side in order as the Padres beat the Dodgers 2-0.

"Pitchilg a no-hitter is not the foremost thing on my mind," Lollar said. "I'm not saying I wouldn't want one, but the main thing is to help the club."

Meanwhile, the Padres — who came into existence in 1969 — and the New York Mets remain the only teams in the Lational League that have not produced no-hitters.

Lollar, 3-4, struck out six, walked three and knocked in the game's first run with a fifth-inning sacrifice fly.

Tje 27-year-old left-hander, bothered by elbow problems earlier in the year, had pitched effectively against Cincinnati in his last outing.

"In the past, I wasn't healthy," Lollar said. "It wasn't the real me. I had a lot of pain in my arm. I look at these two starts as a new beginning.

"I was tired going into the ninth inning," he said. "That's been strange territor for me this year."

Added San Diego Manager Dick Williams: "He threw great. (Catcher Terry) Kennedy came to me in the seventh and thought he was losing a little."

Garry Templeton singled in an unearned run in the sixth against Los Angeles starter Alejandro Pena, now 6-1.

The victory was San Diego's fourth in a row. Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda, who dropped Baker from third to fifth in the lineup, was left looking for other ways to break his team's recent hitting slump.

"I'm not saying he didn't pitch a great game, but right now we make anyone look good," Lasorda said.

NL Roundup

Cardinals 6, Mets 0

Neil Allen, traded to St. Louis last week, shackled his former team on four hits through eight innings. Allen, who was dealt along with pitcher Rick Ownbey for first baseman Keith Hernandez, raised his record to 3-7.

"I think it was more important to perform well for the St. Louis fans than for the New York fans," Allen said. "I know how popular Keith was there. They were pretty upset by the trade. And rightly so. But now they know I'm not so bad, either."

Allen also laid down a suicide squeeze bunt for his first major-league run batted in.

St. Louis reliever Doug Bair came on to retire the Mets in order in the ninth. After the game, Bair was sent to the Detroit Tigers for a player to be named later.

Rookie Andy Van Slyke, recently called up from the minors, hit his first big-league homer and George Hendrick drove in two other St. Louis runs.

Pirates 8, Cubs 4

Mike Easler and Jason Thompson provided the offensive spark to help Rick Rhoden, 4-7, struggle to an 11-hit complete game. Easler doubled twice and drote in three runs while Thompson went 3-for-3 and knocked in two runs.

The Pirates picked on Chicago's Dickie Noles, 0-3, who was making his first start since the opening week of the season. He was on the disabled list from April 12 to June 4 while taking part in an alcohol rehabilitation program.

Pittsburgh, which swept a doubleheader from the Cubs Monday, has now won three in a row, its longest victory streak since opening the season with five straight wins.

Astros 5, Braves 0

Mike Scott needed just 81 pitches in tossing a six-hitter. Scott, 3-3, faced only 29 batters in handing Atlanta its fifth loss in six games.

Ray Knight went 4-for-4 with two doubles for Houston.

Phil Garner gave the Astros a 1-0 lead in the first inning with his ninth homer, off loser Phil Niekro, 2-6. Houston added two runs in fifth and two more in the eighth.

Phillies 8-4, Expos 1-5

Andre Dawson's leadoff homer in the bottom of the 12th inning salvaged a doubleheader split for Montreal.

Philadelphia won the opener behind Joe Morgan's two-run homer and solo shots by Mike Schmidt and Gapy Matthews.

In the second game, Schmidt blasted a two-run homer, his 14th, to give the Phillies a 3-1 lead in the sixth.

Gary Carter's two-run triple put the Expos ahead 4-3 after eight innings, but Morgan's RBI single in the ninth sent the game into extra innings.

Dawson's 13th homer came on the second pitch of the game thrown by Porfi Altamirano, 1-3.

Reds 6, Giants 5

Paul Householder singled with one out in the top of the 16th, moved to second on rookie Nick Esasky's hit and scored on Ron Oester's single to end the five-hour, 10-minute marathon.

The Reds put runners in scoring position with less than two outs in eight of the last 10 innings.

Both team scored a run in the 14th, and each team used six pitchers.

BOWLING BEAT

By RANDY ISENBERG

Newcomer rolls consecutive 600's

Randy Higgins has been bowling only 18 months, but he is already proving himself to be one of the area's up and coming young bowlers.

Higgins exploded for a 265 game and 683 series in the Civic Summer League last week and that was an improvement on his 253 game and 645 series the night before in the Busy Men's League. He started the week with games of 246 and 213 for a 641 series in the Gutter Club Mixed.

Jimmy Smith, Midland's shoe merchant, exhibited exemplary skill in the Big Sky Mixed league with a 246 game enroute to a 674 series. Cecil Craft, rolling in the Rock 'N Roll Senior Citizen's League, hammered out a 201 game to start the month of June.

Christine Rodriquez led all the women bowlers with a 202 game and 570 series.

Rock 'N Roll: Cecil Craft 201, Woody Bailey 196, Bertha Welch 185. Civic Commercial Men: Randy Higgins 265-683, Tito Velasco 235-636, Rick Garcia 229-592, David Vickery 228, Sonny Poole 226-616, Ron Moore 626. Koffee Kup: Karen Green 535, Phyllis Maxwell 208-516. Friday Nighters: Victor Armendariz 204. TGIF: Mitch Mitchell 227-618, Dave Kelley 201-566, Mike Edwards 218, Tim Michaelson 213. Ladies Nite Out: Judy Van 207-528, Jan Jenkins 512. Merry Mixers: Larry Miner 236-641, Sergio Rendon 591, Leo Rodriquez 206-568, Terry Donathan 205-576, John Whitmore 575, Junior Perales 214, W.E Stewart 211. Ortloff: Jim Brent 584-216, Ben Carroll 554-202, Lavon Crockett 535. Petroleum National Men: Rick Daughtrey 247-654, Ken Hostetter 239-641, Randy Higgins 634, Mike Northrup 237-625, David Rich 599, Brent Gallagher 243, Bob Love 234. Midweek Break: Leo Rodriquez 245-641, Breck Adkins 223-637, Gene Hensiee 241-582, L.J. League will not discipline Martin

By The Associated Press

American League President Lee MacPhail said today he would take no disciplinary action against Billy Martin following the New York Yankee manager's run-in last Friday night with a New York Times researcher. "Based on the information we have been able to gather, I must hold that there is no cause for serious disciplinary action against Mr. Martin," said MacPhail. MacPhail talked to a number of witnesses to the confrontation between Martin and the researcher, Deborah Henschel. "This includes a reporter, a photographer, a trainer, several players, and a coach," he said. "Each individual confirms that Martin's statements were basically as he reported them."

Tennis

Twenty top tennis stars, headed by John McEnroe, called for the year's suspension on Guillermo Vilas to be squashed. The players issued a statement declaring that the Argentinian left-hander had been unfairly fined and suspended by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council (MIPTC). The council took action against Vilas two weeks ago, alleging that he had accepted illegal appearance money to play in a tournament in Rotterdam this Spring. He was fined $20,000 and banned from the tournament circuit for a year...

False report spurs panic about AIDS

Hearst Feature Service

A report that a Los Angeles hospital had canceled cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes to prevent the possible spread of AIDS set off shock waves in the medical community across the country last week.

The hospital, Arcadia Methodist, quickly denied the report, but the reverberations didn't stop.

In New York, that state's largest association of funeral directors recommended that its members refuse to embalm victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, until the government issues guidelines on safe handling of corpses.

These two reports typify the climate of panic that's developed around AIDS, notably in cities most affected by the epidemic: New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"There is some hysteria out there, particularly among those in the non-health fields," said a Los Angeles local hospital official late last week. And as a result, doctors are now having to take unusual measures to defuse the public's fears.

Within hours of the Arcadia Methodist incident, the American Red Cross and American Heart Association had to send a message to reassure the public that CPR training or practice involved no threat of catching the disease.

"The public can be assured that we are aware of no risk of disease transmission such as hepatitis and AIDS to CPR course participants," Robert Wick, a vice president of the Red Cross, said in a prepared statement.

And Dr. Sue Wasp-Shasha, director of education at Arcadia Methodist, announced the hospital had "modified" its CPR course — including the use of cellophane to cover the mouth surface of mannequins used for training — as further protection against AIDS.

In New York, declaring that the "public health threat should not be underestimated," Randall Archibald, executive director of the New York State Funeral Director's Association urged members to place the remains of AIDS victims in sealed pouches and permanently closed caskets or containers.

"We're urging caution to try to forestall some kind of potential health threat to the general population," Archibald said.

The panic over AIDS has increased despite evidence that the disease is for the most part limited to certain populations — gay men, Haitian immigrants, intravenous drug users — and can't be spread through casual contact.

In San Francisco, for instance, police officers and firefighters have asked for masks and gloves to avoid contamination in gay areas of the city, while in Coronado, the fire department suspended a lifesaving class because of fears that the disease could be transmitted through oral contact with mannequins used to practice CPR.

In this charged atmosphere, the intitial report that Arcadia Methodist was discontinuing CPR classes because of AIDS set off a chain reaction that finally ended with the statement issued by the Red Cross and AHA.

"This never would have happened if AIDS had not been mentioned," said Wasp-Shasha who said her office was besieged with calls from the media about the report.

She said the hospital had decided to modify its CPR procedures after "some concern was expressed by members of the hospital staff."

At a press conference, Dr. Marshall Rockwell, president of the Los Angeles CPR consortium, urged hospitals to modify their sterilizing techniques in a manner similar to those adopted by Arcadia Methodist.

These included switching from alcohol to a dilute bleach solution to cleanse the mannequin's mouth and providing participants with cellophane for added protection.

But Rockwell emphasized that there is no known case of anyone contracting AIDS through use of lifesaving techniques. He said:

"There is danger the public is overreacting...This is part of a general phenomenon. We're seeing a lot of fear throughout the community."

The New York funeral director's recommendations were the first warnings issued to morticians regarding the corpses of AIDS victims. The association said morticians should not embalm AIDS victims for 60 days so the Center for Disease Control could come up with new guidelines.

But Ron Roy, a leader of the California Funeral Directors Association, said his group did not plan to issue any similar recommendations.

Firm claims it's cloned AID-related gene

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A year-old biotechnology company says it has successfully cloned a gene that may lead to a possible treatment for the mysterious disease AIDS.

The development was made by Quidel, a genetic engineering firm based in San Diego's La Jolla section, the San Diego Union reported Saturday.

"If we get the ideal of ideals — if everything goes smoothly — I would think it's feasible to consider clinical trials by late 1983 or early 1984," said Dr. David Katz, chairman of Quidel.

Katz said the gene contains the code to make a cell produce "T cell growth factor" or Interleukin-2, one of a class of proteins known as lymphokines. The proteins are produced by white blood cells and "perform a variety of functions in regulating immunity against foreign substances and abnormal host cells."

If the gene can be used to induce a strain of bacteria to produce the protein in large quantities, it could be administered to AIDS victims to boost their immune systems, said Katz.

June perfect month for decontrol

By WARREN T. BROOKES

OPINION

I know. I know. Natural gas is hardly a subject for June. It's too late to worry about heating bills — and too cool to worry about air-conditioning costs.

Yet that is precisely why this is the perfect time for Congress to decontrol the price of all natural gas.

Not only are domestic supplies in glut, but the world energy market, especially oil, is under such heavy downward price pressure, OPEC is giving signs of cracking up altogether.

By de-controlling natural gas, now, Congress could deal a potentially fatal blow to OPEC, and still leave the market place time to sort out nearly 30 years of price-control distortions, without doing excessive damage to the consumer.

Yet Congress, in its infinite dumbness, is now considering a bill (Heinz-Addabo) that would simply perpetuate the present control mess, and do so in the face of two obvious facts:

FIRST, NATURAL gas is the only major commodity in America today still under Federal price controls — and it is the only commodity whose price is still soaring, while reserves are falling!

Second, the greatest economic success of both the Carter and Reagan administrations was the de-regulation of oil.

Congress needs to be reminded that since domestic crude oil was finally de-regulated on January 28, 1981, the world spot price has fallen from $38 a barrell to $29 a barrel, the price of gasoline from $1.29 a gallon to $1.19 (even with a new 5 cent tax), and the wholesale price of No.2 heating oil from 96 cents to 79 cents.

There is now general agreement that the price of oil could easily fall to the $20-25 per barel range if Congress would just stop depressing gas supplies by holding down the "old" gas prices.

To understand why, remember that natural gas is simply one part of a total interchangeable energy market. To the degree that regulation holds down the supply of gas (by depressing some prices below market level), the supply of all energy is depressed. Thus a tighter supply of any one energy form puts upward price pressure on all energy forms.

LET US SUPPOSE for example, that some Congressional ideologues decided that orange growers with old established groves were making too much money on their "old" oranges.

So, to "protect the consumer" from high prices, the government puts a 30 percent lower ceiling on "old" orange prices than the market might allow, but no controls on "new oranges."

What would happen? You guessed it. Producers with "old" orange groves would shift their effort and money to planting and developing new ones, even as production of "old oranges" dropped.

Since "new" oranges would be scarce for a while, and more costly, they would command a very high price, even as total supplies were curtailed. So the average price of oranges would rise.

Ludricrous you say? Consider natural gas, where more than 12,000 producers have their choice of selling the same basic product at prices from 30 cents per thousand cubic feet (MCF), to more than $9, depending on whether they are willing to go on tapping and pumping "old" regulated gas fields, or spending money to drill for "deep" (below 15,000 feet) gas in "new" fields.

WHAT WOULD you do? You'd go hellbent to produce the "new gas," and you'd find a way to slow down the production and development of your old and shallow gas fields. (Remember, if you plan to stay in business, every MCF of $2.50 controlled "old gas" you sell must ultimately be replaced by $6 and up "new gas.")

The result: The total supply of natural gas will continue to decline as "old wells" are shut in, and old fields not developed, even as the average price soars, as utilities are forced to purchase more and more new "deep gas," and more and more expensive forms such as synthetic (SNG) or imported liquified (LNG).

Yet, whay would happen if all natural gas were de-regulated? The answer seems obvious. Since over 60 percent of all gas is used by industry or utilities who can easily switch to oil, the average price of all gas could never stay higher than oil.

Since it is a lot cheaper to develop and pump shallow fields than to drill deep new wells, a huge supply of "old gas" would come on the market, as its price was allowed to rise from the $2.50 per MCF average to the wholesale price of oil equivalent (about $5.68), while the price of "new gas" and imports and synthetics would suddenly be driven down in the face of this new competition.

Within a short time, we'd have lower energy prices for both oil and gas users as the total energy market supply was expanded. Doesn't anyone in Washington understand this?

Moonlight aplenty near High Sky?

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

It is possible Midland County has a new, major oilfield with the discovery of the Moonlight field.

Seismic subsurface mapping near the High Sky Girls' Ranch, six miles northwest of Midland, led Anschutz Corporation to make a 13,325-foot well in a wildcat location — at what is now designated Moonlight Field.

This Ellenburger well flow-tested for 24 hours at 268 thousand cubic feet of gas and 425 barrels of oil.

The dicovery well is the No. 13-22 Butler. At first it was called 12-22 Butler, then its location was changed. It is located 954 feet from south and 702 from west line of section 22, block 40, township 1S, T&P Railroad survey.

The new discovery and associated development may create a major producing area when testing is complete. This will be the first commercial oil production in the immediate area.

Two confirmation wells are in the process of being tested for production now, the Scharbauer 3-27 and the Fasken 10-21. The Scharbauer well has been testing for a few days at total depth, 13,336 feet. The Fasken well had a drill stem test performed at about the same depth on Tuesday.

The 52.3 degree gravity oil is flowing through 5 1/2-inch casing with a 12/64 inch choke. Casing was set at 13,301 feet and perforations went from that level down to 13,325 feet.

Wolfcamp was found at the 7,810-foot level and Pennsylvanian formation at 8,160 feet.

Anschutz operates the well, and Verna Drilling of Odessa was drilling contractor.

The David Fasken Estate has an interest in production.

Louis Scofield, geophysicist, is Anschutz' local manager and is responsible for the operation. Glen Westall of Midland is consulting engineer for the project.

In Midland for one and a half years, Anschutz Corp. is a closely-held company, said spokesman Steve Converse. The company also keeps offices in other major oil-producing areas.

Watt may get money with strings attached

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation giving Interior Secretary James G. Watt his 1984 operating budget is on its way to the House floor with a long list of restrictions on how Watt can spend the money.

The Democratic-controlled House Appropriations Committee approved the bill Tuesday after adding two final restrictions — prohibitions on offshore oil leasing on parts of the Florida and Southern California coasts.

Those restrictions joined other prohibitions already in the $8.1 billion Interior Department appropriations bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Other provisions include limits on sale of coal mining rights on public lands in the West; prohibitions on oil and natural gas leasing in wilderness areas; and more offshore oil limitations.

Most of the restrictions were adopted without debate and without opposition. Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., a senior Republican on the panel, warned that the bill could face a veto for being too expensive, but he did not mention the Watt restrictions.

McDade sought unsuccessfully to trim the bill by $300 million, saying that would make it acceptable to the White House.

The wilderness leasing prohibition continues an existing ban, as do provisions limiting offshore oil leasing along the northern California coast and near the Georges Bank off Massachusetts.

The coal leasing restriction was prompted by studies released this spring alleging that the nation's largest coal sale — in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming — netted $60 million to $100 million less than fair market value.

The prohibition bars Watt from future coal sales until an independent commission reports on how to get top dollar in such resource sales. It was adopted by the Appropriations Committee without debate.

The restrictions added to the bill Tuesday were proposed by Rep. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., chairman of the panel's subcommittee on the interior.

The California prohibition bars Watt from selling drilling rights near Santa Monica and San Diego, as well as in the Channel Islands National Marine Sanctuary and the Santa Barbara Channel Ecological Preserve. Drilling rights in the region had been scheduled for sale next February.

The Florida prohibition affects the state's Gulf Coast south from the Big Bend region, including a blanket ban on drilling near Everglades National Park. Drilling rights for the area had been scheduled for sale this November.

The state has argued that more research is needed on the effect on marine life of offshore oil drilling.

The prohibition passed on voice vote after Yates agreed to limit it to the the lease sale itself, not studies of the areas. The same restriction then was applied to the Florida sale without debate.

Electric utilities hoarding excise tax take, environmentalists say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's electric utilities collected an average $50 in federal excise taxes from each of their customers in 1981 that was never turned over to the Internal Revenue Service, according to a group that monitors the industry.

The Environmental Action Foundation said the nation's 100 largest electric utilities charged their customers for $5 billion in federal taxes during the year but paid only $1.3 billion to the IRS by claiming accelerated depreciation and investment tax credits.

"For every dollar the utilities actually pay to the government, they get to keep about $3," Richard Morgan, an economist with the Washington-based foundation said Tuesday. "Some of the utility's tax savings are gradually passed through to ratepayers, but the process can take up to 40 years."

Morgan said the study by the foundation, which is a frequent critic of the utility industry, was based on figures in annual reports submitted by the 100 companies to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

He quoted unpublished Energy Department figures which he said show that the electric utility industry now has accumulated about $25 billion in deferred tax accounts because of a 1969 law forbidding state utility commissions from halting what Morgan called tax overcharges.

Richard Braatz, a spokesman for the industry's Edison Electric Institute, said the deferred taxes are used only to accumulate capital for building new power plants and do not go into a company's earnings.

Braatz said the accelerated depreciation exemptions and income tax credits aimed at stimulating capital formation for industrial development are no greater for the utility industry than other private companies.

"Every dollar of deferred taxes we get, that's one less dollar we have to go out and borrow," he said. "That lower cost of capital is reflected in lower rates to our customers. Electric rates would be much higher today if we didn't have the benefit of deferred taxes through the 1970s."

Ruth Caplan, a lobbyist for Environmental Action Inc., which is affiliated with the foundation, said her group is seeking legislation that would give state regulatory agencies the authority to require utilities to pass any tax savings back to their customers as they occur.

"That way customers would not be charged for taxes until utilities actually paid them," she said.

The foundation's study said the Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago, with the nation's largest nuclear power plant construction program, had the largest "tax overcharge" in 1981, billing its customers for $208 million in federal income taxes but paying only $12 million to the IRS.

Seventeen of the 100 largest electric utilities reported paying no federal income taxes in 1981, the foundation said. As an example, it cited Public Service Co. of Oklahoma, which claimed a $22.4 million tax refund in 1981 though it reported billing its customers for $25.4 million in federal taxes.

Explosion kills seven

McCLURE, Va. (AP) — An underground mine explosion in southwestern Virginia killed seven coal miners and injured three others, a spokeswoman for the Clinchfield Coal Co. said today.

The explosion at the company's McClure No. 1 mine in Dickenson County occurred at 10:15 p.m. Tuesday, spokeswoman Susan Copeland said.

"Approximately 84 employees were underground at the time of the explosion," said Ms. Copeland. "Of the 84, 74 came to the surface uninjured.

"Ten employees were working in the accident area at the time of the explosion."

Key committee OKs lease sale ban

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Bowing to the wishes of California representatives, a key congressional committee Tuesday approved a temporary ban on the sale of new federal oil leases off the coast of Southern California.

With only one dissent, the House Appropriations Committee voted to prohibit the Department of the Interior from selling any oil leases near Southern California shores as part of its planned auctions next February. The ban would generally affect federally owned tracts within 20 miles of the shoreline.

A moratorium on new "near shore" leasing off Southern California has been sought by many California House members and by the state's two senators, Democrat Alan Cranston and Republican Pete Wilson. If the committee's action is approved by the full House and the Senate, close-in leasing would be forbidden from Point Conception south to the Mexican border, including all of Santa Monica Bay.

Specifically, the appropriations panel amended the Department of the Interior's fiscal 1984 budget to provide that no funds could be used to sell "near shore" leases as part of its Federal Lease Sale 80 in February. Because 41 of 42 committee members approved the amendment on a bipartisan basis, proponents said they expected the full House to agree.

The ban would run until Oct. 1, 1984, which advocates said was sufficieny aconsider several pieces oflegislation calling for a much longer moratorium.

Department of the Interior officials refused to comment on the House action but noted that the Republican-controlled Senate had sometimes reversed House moves that were opposed to the policies of Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt. The controversial Watt has proposed a five-year program to open up 1 billion acres of federal offshore waters for oil and gas development.

Besides the California ban, committee members voted to rule out oil leasing in parts of the Florida Gulf Coast where Florida officials contend more scientific data should be obtained to determine the impact of drilling on fish life. That lease sale is scheduled for November.

Rep. Sidney R. Yates, D-Ill., chairman of the Interior appropriations subcommittee and sponsor of both prohibitions, said the California ban had been sought by 23 California congressmen as protection for "particularly sensitive environmental zones."

IPAA says tax repeal could produce jobs

WASHINGTON (SWN) — Repeal of the "Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax" could result in the employment of as many as 45,000 people and significantly revitilize the economic health of the domestic petroleum industry and consequently the nation, according to statistics released by the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Based on statistics developed by the association, elimination of the tax could free up substantial amounts of revenue and create a significant burst of new activity in domestic petroleum exploration and production.

The IPAA estimates show that between now and 1991, when the "tax" is due to expire, nearly 100,000 additional wells could be drilled utilizing 4,600 rigs.

This would result in the employment of at least 15,000 people directly on drilling rigs (15 to a rig estimated) and nearly triple that number in service and other related industries.

"The domestic petroleum industry is in the doldrums," said Lloyd N. Unsell, executive vice president of the national trade association representing America's 15,000 independent oil and natural gas producers.

"The rig count is half of what it was two years ago, unemployment is very high and investment money is hard to come by. We believe the "windfall profit" tax has taken a substantial toll on this industry and these numbers prove eradication of the tax could spur new growth in this industry and simultaneously help revitalize the national economy.

"This is just another example of how excessive and unfair taxes destroy economic incentive and initiative," the IPAA official added.

IPAA's figures are based on Treasury Department estimates that the tax will result in $75 billion in revenues, not the $227 billion originally forecast when the tax was enacted in 1980.

It is estimated the tax will bring in $8 billion this year with a total of some $50 billion yet to be collected by 1991 based on current oil prices.

Unsell explained this is money which would be reinvested in new exploration and production and help backout a substantial amount of imported oil.

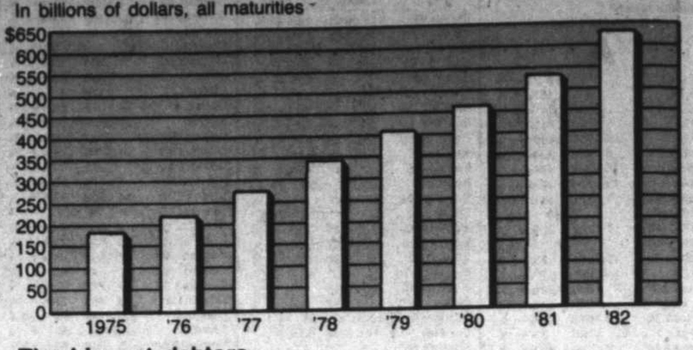

He noted that although the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the "tax" it is having a profound negative effect on the industry and is the country's energy future.

Unsell said IPAA will continue to work actively for the early end of the "tax" or at a minimum significant relief from it.

Mitchell tells gas group to get act together

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (SWN) — "If we don't get our act together, we're going to be right back in trouble in two to three years," energy expert George P. Mitchell today told members of the American Gas Association.

Speaking at the association's executive conference here, Mitchell said a cooperative spirit among all elements of the gas industry — producers, transporters and distributors — is needed to avert a shortage such as that of the late 1970s.

He said a priority of the industry should be a united effort to end federal regulation of natural gas prices.

"Twenty-nine years of price controls have provided ample evidence that regulation is neither in the public's nor our industry's interest," he stated.

Mitchell said the U.S. consumers' cheapest source of gas for the next two to three decades will be domestic exploration and development. "You hear a lot of talk about coal gasification, liquefied natural gas, imported gas and Arctic gas, but the most economical gas for many years will come from geologic basins in and along the shores of the lower 48 states."

Natural gas has a special role in the nation's energy future, Mitchell said, because it is more easily found and produced than oil. Since it is a clean-burning fuel, natural gas in many applications is a highly desirable substitute for coal and imported oil, he said. Mitchell added that coal still has serious environmental problems to overcome.

The current surplus of natural gas and reduced demand for oil have masked U.S. dependence on foreign energy supplies and the accompanying economic and military vulnerability, Mitchell warned. He predicted that with economic recovery, imports of oil will rebound to more than seven million barrels a day from the current level of less than five million.

"We must more fully develop our own resources — gas, oil, coal and other fuels — in order to provide insulation from the possible disastrous effects of political unrest in the Middle East and other areas," he stated.

"The country has the geologic resources and the technical know-how to become reasonably self-sufficient in energy within 10 to 20 years," Mitchell said, "but what we need is a national commitment to become energy independent."

Mitchell is president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., a large independent producer of gas and oil based in The Woodlands, Texas, a new community near Houston.

High car prices foreseen

DETROIT (AP) — Auto analysts say they expect U.S. carmakers to try to boost profits by raising prices on large, luxury autos in the fall, but the companies also should keep prices on smaller cars nearly unchanged.

Large-car prices should rise by at least $200, resulting in an overall price increase of about 2 percent for 1984 models, the analysts said Tuesday.

Small-car prices will remain steady because demand for those vehicles has fallen as gasoline prices have stabilized, said Philip K. Fricke, analyst at Goldman, Sachs & Co. in New York.

Also, automakers' profits of $970.3 million in the first quarter of this year — due in part from sales of the profitable large, luxury cars — should help the companies subsidize lower prices for small cars, said Arthur Davis, analyst at Prescott, Ball & Turben of Cleveland, Ohio.

The earnings were the best for a first quarter since 1979, when the companies made $1.83 billion.

In contrast, just four years ago when gasoline prices were skyrocketing and there were lines at fuel pumps, strong small-car demand prompted price increases of 9 percent or 10 percent on those models.

"New car prices between 1978 and 1982 in this country went up at least 40 percent ... and it was heavily focused on small cars," said Donald DeScenza, analyst at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette in New York.

"But the small car share of the market has dropped, from 63 percent in 1981 to now about 52 percent or 53 percent," he said.

Americans buying business books in batches

By The Los Angles Times-Washington Post News Service

Something is happening to the best-seller lists that track Americans' reading appetites: Mainstream readers are buying amazing numbers of books with business and economic themes.

What is more, business-oriented books held the top four slots on this week's New York Times' non-fiction best-seller list and the top three places on the Los Angeles Times' list. And the books are not flashes in the pan — three have been best sellers more than 23 weeks.

The popularity of such volumes as No. 1 "In Search of Excellence," by Thomas J. Peters and Robert H. Waterman Jr. (Harper & Row Publishers Inc.) instead of the Che Guevara-diet-and-sabotage genre heralds a return to the market among non-professionals interested in business and economic topics. The people buying those books are not Harvard MBAs, and the books are written in plain English.

"The One Minute Manager," a slim offering from William Morrow & Co. by Kenneth Blanchard and Spencer Johnson, is a parable-like guide to being a more effective manager through such devices as one-minute praisings, one-minute reprimands and one-minute goals. It threatens to become the "Little Red Book" of capitalism. The volume held the No. 2 spot and has been on the roster for 38 weeks.

"Megatrends," by John Naisbitt (Warner Books), was No. 3 and has been a best seller for 32 weeks. The book deals with how a variety of socio-economic patterns are likely to shift radically in the United States as the country makes the transition from the Industrial Age to one of service and information.

Although books on how to make money always have been popular, the impact of Robert G. Allen's "Creating Wealth" (Simon & Schuster), No. 4 on the New York list and No. 6 on the Los Angeles tally, appears to be a runaway phenomenon.

The recession made many Americans painfully aware of how business and economics affected their fortunes, and they wanted to know how business works and maybe a glimpse of the economic future.

Indeed, the last time business or economic titles were on the best-seller list, according to one publishing executive, they tended to offer advice on riding out the then-impending recession.

There are no hard percentages on the share of trade books dealing with business and economic themes, as the hardcover volumes are known to distinguish them from paperbacks, but officials of several New York publishers agreed the market share is growing.

Louisiana State takes an interest in geology

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana's dependency on oil and natural gas taxes makes its state university a natural base for a world class geology department, the chancellor of Louisiana State University said Monday.

Yet, said Chancellor James Wharton, universities in other oil-rich states like Texas and Oklahoma have geology departments superior to LSU's — the only Louisiana university that offers a doctorate in the science of extracting minerals from Earth.

"That's a unique position for a state as dependent on oil and gas as we are," said Wharton.

He noted in an interview that oil and gas accounted for more than half of Louisiana's tax base last year, even though production was down sharply — a far greater percentage than mineral tax revenues in either Texas or Oklahoma.

Yet, he said, the LSU geology department has fewer faculty members than either state.

While LSU's geology department has 16 tenured faculty members, Wharton said it needs at least 36.

Therefore, LSU has designated Earth sciences as a No. 1 priority in its development plans, Wharton said.

A first step, said Wharton, was appointment of Lyle McGinnis, chairman of the Department of Geology at the University of Illinois, as the new chairman of LSU's geology department, effective this fall.

In addition, he said:

—The state has approved $10 million for construction of the new Geology Building Annex.

—A $500,000 endowment for a distinguished chair professorship in the department has been given to LSU by the Charles T. McCord Jr. family of Texas.

—Plans are now proceeding for a core library to display drilling core samples from all over the state.

Alabaman crowned Junior Miss

Ashmore

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The first Alabama contestant to be crowned America's Junior Miss says she "was shocked to death" to win, and she plans to use her $32,600 in scholarship prizes to study physical therapy.

Stephanie Kay Ashmore, 18, of Muscle Shoals, was named America's Junior Miss of 1983 at the pageant Tuesday night in a show hosted by actor Michael Landon and televised nationally by CBS.

Fifty-two high school seniors representing each state, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia vied for the title in the 26-year-old contest. Judges rated the women on fitness, poise and appearance, scholastic achievement, creative and performing arts and responses to a personal interview.

Miss Ashmore, whose $25,000 first-prize scholarship was augmented by other prizes and a win in the physical fitness category, said she plans to study physical therapy at Mississippi State University in the fall.

"I was shocked to death. I can't believe it," she said.

Colorado Junior Miss Debbie Riecks, of Aurora, was first runner-up and also winner of the scholastic achievement category, while Utah's Elayne Wells, of Salt Lake City, was second runner-up.

Miss Riecks won a $10,000 scholarship while Miss Wells was awarded $7,000 in scholarship money.

Other finalists were Oregon's Jane Yedinak, of Eugene, and Georgia's Brenda Baisden, of Brunswick.

Florida's Maria Camargo, of Miami, won top honors in poise and appearance and Tennessee's Julie Vaughn, of Cookeville, won the Spirit of Junior Miss, voted by the contestants.

Illinois' Junior Miss, Amy Conrady, garnered top honors in creative and performing arts with a harp solo.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Singer Danny Scholl, 61, who sang the lead in "Call Me Mister" on Broadway and appeared with Phil Silvers in "Top Banana," died at Veterans Hospital on Tuesday.

Scholl, who survived four strokes and throat cancer, was injured Sunday when his wheelchair fell backward off the ramp on his van.

Scholl, whose album, "No Man Is An Island," was recently released, was in the midst of a comeback when he had the accident.

REDDING, Calif. (AP) — Country-western singer Merle Haggard can continue to keep his $83,000 houseboat on Shasta Lake, but he'll have to do away with three feet of it. The boat is too wide.

A catwalk extends its overall width to 18 feet while the limit for the lake is 15.

Regional Forester Zane Smith has ruled the 46-year-old singer can use the catwalk only when the boat is at anchor, and not when it's in operation.

The ruling, released Monday, upholds a decision by Shasta-Trinity National Forest Supervisor Barney Coster.

Haggard, who is part owner of the Silverthorn Resort on Shasta Lake and has mentioned the lake in his songs, was given 60 days to bring the catwalk within line.

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — Retired U.S. Marshall Wayne B. Colburn, who commanded the 71-day standoff against 300 Indians and supporters at Wounded Knee, S.D., in 1973, died Sunday at his home at age 76.

Como

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Perry Como, at a party saluting him for 50 years in show business, said he's been asked thousands of times if he was ever really a barber, and the answer is "yes."

"Any of you who don't believe it, get me some barber tools and I'll show you," he told the guests at the RCA get-together Tuesday at the Rainbow Grill.

Robert Summer, president of RCA Records, said the easy-going crooner has sold 100 million records worldwide. Como, 71, replied, "Did I really sell 100 million records? Where did the money go?" He added genially, "I got most of it."

RCA Records signed him to a contract on June 17, 1943.

"Fifty years in show biz? Forty years with RCA? It's Just Impossible," sang Marvin Hamlisch. "They signed him up when he was Sweet 16."

Going on with a medley of Como hits, with new lyrics, Hamlish warbled, "His contract, how long is it binding? Till the end of time."

And, referring to Como's relaxed manner, Hamlisch also sang, "We celebrate a man tonight, doesn't know the meaning of uptight." Como's wife Roselle, their son David and his wife Judy, and granddaughter Melanie, daughter of their son Ronald, were at the party. And President Reagan sent the singer a letter calling him "virtually an American institution."

The Comos, celebrating their golden wedding anniversary July 31, also have a daughter and 10 more grandchildren.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The district attorney's office has rejected assault charges prepared by the sheriff's department against country singer Moe Bandy.

Bandy was accused of attacking a deputy patrolman who came to his house after finding the singer's daughter running down the road, hysterically crying.

The patrolman, Roland H. Aylesworth, contends Bandy's wife gave him permission to enter the home.

The district attorney's office, however, told Bexar County Sheriff Joe Neaves on Tuesday that Aylesworth "had no reason to be in the house."

Bandy has refused comment on his Thursday arrest, but scheduled a press conference for this afternoon.

His attorney, Stanley Bernstein, said Tuesday that Bandy's wife "absolutely did not" give Aylesworth permission to enter the house.

"She told him just the opposite," Bernstein said.

He did not deny Bandy scuffled with Aylesworth.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch says his Lincoln seems like a "circus car" when a lot of people get out of it, so now he's getting a stretch limousine.

The mayor, who last month said he deserves a raise, said Tuesday he also deserves the bigger automobile.

Koch, who makes $80,000 a year, said the Lincoln Towr Car is too cramped for the numerous people who ride in it.

"You've been at events with me," he told reporters, "and you've seen people getting out of the car like it was a circus car, with seven people getting out of it."

A new mayoral limo is being "stretched" now, said Koch, who added, "I can't wait." He said it would cost about the same as his current car, which the city leases for almost $3,000 a year.

Effects man's testimony crucial

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — A key special-effects man on the "Twilight Zone" set was granted immunity from prosecution by the Los Angeles County district attorney's office in exchange for testimony that helped produce the five grand jury indictments returned last week.

Sources said prosecutors gave immunity to special-effects technician James Camomile. He is the "Twilight Zone" crew member who planted explosive charges in a hut that blew apart directly beneath a helicopter. The helicopter spun to the ground and killed actor Vic Morrow and two children last July 23.

In his statements to National Transportation Safety Board investigators last August, Camomile said he placed the explosives in the hut on direct orders from Paul Stewart, the special-effects crew chief, and that he heard director John Landis express a desire to see the structure blown up.

Camomile's testimony is crucial in the criminal investigation of the "Twilight Zone" helicopter crash because it focuses on who was responsible for the placement of the explosives in the hut – a vital element in the pattern of "gross negligence" prosecutors are apparently trying to construct in developing an involuntary manslaughter case.

Attorneys for Landis and Stewart have confirmed that their clients have been indicted in connection with the "Twilight Zone" crash and that they both are facing involuntary manslaughter charges. Others indicted so far include helicopter pilot Dorcey Wingo, associate producer George Folsey Jr. and unit production manager Dan Allingham. All will be arraigned Friday in Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Camomile's attorney, Howard Swainston, citing admonitions given by grand jury Foreman Joseph Healy that the proceedings of the five-day hearings be kept secret, refused to confirm that his client was granted immunity. But he did say that Camomile was subpoenaed "and he did testify."

"The result of the indictments have come as a surprise and a disappointing shock to everybody," said Swainston, who also is representing Stewart. "I think Jim's (Camomile) a pretty sensitive guy and he feels real bad about Paul's (Stewart) position. And the others', too."

Camomile was unavailable for comment last night.

Under questioning from NTSB investigators last August, Camomile said he inserted a 6-ounce special-effects bomb into a 12-inch sawdust-and-gasoline-filled mortar pan that he placed under a bamboo floor in what investigators termed "the fatal number four hut" on the "Twilight Zone" set.

Authorities found an 18-inch mortar pan under the floor and experts testified that the blast had to be at least twice the size of the bomb Camomile said he placed inside the hut.

Asked by NTSB investigators who designated where the explosives were to be placed, Camomile said, "Paul Stewart makes the decision of where to put them."

Camomile later added that "the director would tell him what he would like and he (Stewart) does the best he can to spot them to camera and to make everybody happy."

He said that the only discussions that he was aware of between Landis and Stewart regarding the placement of the explosives involved those placed in the hut that led to the crash in which Morrow, 53, Myca Dihn Le, 7, and Renee Shinn Chen, 6, were killed.

NPR rides out staff shakeup

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Public Radio, already reeling from a huge budget deficit and the resignation of its president, has ousted its board chairman and accepted the resignation of its chief financial officer.

Myron Jones, 52, the president of an Albuquerque, N.M., consulting firm known as Indian Education Training Inc., was dismissed Tuesday after just eight months as chairman when he refused to voluntarily step down.

After losing a vote of confidence as chairman, Jones resigned from the board entirely.

His departure followed an extraordinary six-hour meeting behind closed doors that also saw the resignation of Arthur M. Roberts as NPR's chief financial officer; the announcement by Wallace Smith, the general manager of KUSC-FM in Los Angeles, that he would resign from the board this fall, and an internal reorganization that forced the resignation of the chairman of the board's finance committee — Steven K. Meuche, the general manager of WKAR-AM-FM in East Lansing, Mich.

So serious was the internal dissension that the board failed to complete a review of NPR's finances, the stated purpose of Tuesday's special meeting. The board subsequently announced it would extend its meeting to Wednesday to consider the results of a still confidential audit that predicts how bad NPR's deficit will be by the end of the current fiscal year.

The organization has already released an independent audit that shows its deficit totaled $6.5 million after the first seven months of this fiscal year. It was Jones who told reporters last week when that audit was released that NPR was "wounded, but not mortally wounded," and that he intended to remain in his post to help guide its recovery.

The unexpected shakeup was seen as further evidence that NPR is placing its survival solely in the hands of Ronald C. Bornstein, a Wisconsin public broadcaster who was brought in last month as temporary president to save the organization.

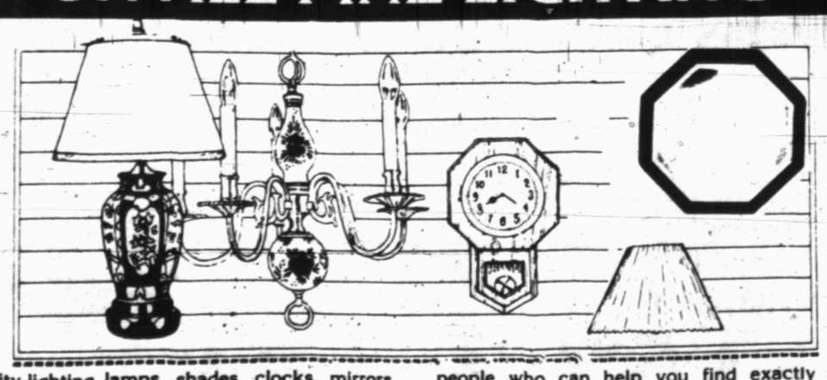

According to Jones, it was Bornstein who called on him to resign the chairmanship Tuesday on grounds he was viewed as part of the "old guard" that led NPR into its budget morass and thus was jeopardizing NPR's chances of raising additional funds and securing assistance from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Bornstein and Donald P. Mullally, the general manager of WILL-AM-FM in Urbana, Ill., who was elected temporary board chairman, both declined Tuesday to discuss details of the board debate.

NPR still faces a congressional inquiry about the way it has handled its finances; it needed a loan to meet a May payroll; it owes more than $650,000 in delinquent state and federal payroll taxes, and it still has no comprehensive bailout plan in place to guide its recovery.

The organization has also experienced the resignations of president Frank Mankiewicz; executive vice president Thomas C. Warnock, and news chief Barbara Cohen. The organization has dismissed 139 employees since mid-March and those who remain — particularly in NPR's award-winning news division — feel Bornstein has slashed employment to such an extent that the quality of programming is deteriorating.

Official accused of taking bribe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, accused of taking a $2,000 bribe from an FBI undercover agent and conspiring to receive $10,000 a month, told supporters, "I have not let you down" and said he still intends to run for governor.

An indictment Monday accused Green and a friend, Clarkton businessmen Howard F. Watts, of conspiring to take bribes from undercover FBI agent Robert Drdak, who was posing as a Detroit investor who needed help in getting a liquor license.

The indictment against Green, expected to be a 1984 Democratic candidate for governor, was handed up by the Wake County grand jury. It alleged the money was in exchange for supplying information on investigations of liquor and tax violations and influencing inquiries into labor, liquor and tax violations.

Green, the state's first two-term lieutenant governor and a former state representative, talked about the weather when confronted by reporters afterward. An aide said he would have no comment on the charges.

But during a closed-door meeting of political supporters later in the day, reporters overheard Green say: "None of us know what this will bring. But I stand ready to take whatever appropriate action. I have not let you down and don't ever intend to.

"In the next few months ... I intend to announce that I'm a candidate for governor," Green said. "I promise a campaign that will get the most out of every dollar spent."

Green has not said whether he will resign as lieutenant governor. Arlene Pulley, Green's former campaign manager, said she would have no comment on the subject.

"They're treating him just like they treated (former President Richard) Nixon, trying to hound him out of office," said state Rep. J. Reid Poovey, a Republican.

"I'm 110 percent behind him and then some," said Senate Pro Tem Craig Lawing, a Democrat and one of Green's staunchest backers.

Green is the 36th person and the sixth public figure to be indicted in a federal probe known as "Colcor," which focused on corruption in Columbus County in southeast North Carolina.

The Colcor investigation, begun in 1980, has resulted in indictments against a district court judge, a state representative, a state senator, a county commissioner and a police chief.

Based on testimony from Drdak and State Bureau of Investigation agent Bill Dowdy, the indictment charged Green received a $2,000 bribe in April 1982 in the form of a cashier's check from City National Bank of Detroit.

The indictments also accused both Green and Watts of conspiring to influence the state Alcohol Beverage Control commission, the Department of Revenue and other agencies in the procurement of permits and licenses.

Green also is accused of agreeing around March 1982 to receive $10,000 each month from Drdak to influence the same agencies.

In transcripts of taped conversations, Green told Drdak that he could give Green money by falsifying contribution reports. But Green also said he would not "sacrifice my principles for $1,000 a month or $10,000 a month, or whatever the figure is."

Last year Green acknowledged that he met in January 1982 with a man who identified himself as Thomas "Doc" Ryan, later identified as Drdak. Green said he feared Drdak tried to entrap him with a $2,000 check given as a "campaign contribution," so he returned the money and reported Drdak's visits to the State Bureau of Investigation.

Doctors debate merits of boxing

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's doctors gave boxing a workout in an American Medical Association debate that centered on the dangers of the so-called "Sweet Science" and proposals to curb the sport.

"I would like to see boxing banned," said Dr. William F. Dowda, an Atlanta physician and AMA trustee who spoke Monday in favor of an anti-boxing resolution proposed to the 351 members of the AMA's house of delegates, its policymaking body.

The issue is one of more than 150 being considered this week during the AMA's annual meeting, a session which this year is scheduled to include a Thursday speech by President Reagan.

The boxing proposal encourages elimination of the sport from amateur, scholastic, intercollegiate and government athletic programs. It also calls on the AMA to publicize the dangers of boxing and develop model legislation to "curtail utilization of boxing as a public spectacle."

The resolution would move the AMA beyond the moderate stance adopted last summer that proposed methods to make the sport safer, and would undercut such programs as the Golden Gloves and Olympic boxing.

"Any sport whose objective is to injure another human being is an abomination," Dowda said during a committee session Monday. "There's absolutely no moral justification for a sport that condones a brain concussion."

The resolution follows a recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association that said repeated blows to the head can cause brain damage. The report said damage can come early in a fighter's career, but that the severity depends on the number of blows.

Concern about boxing grew last year when South Korean Duk Koo Kim died of head injuries after a World Boxing Association lightweight championship fight with Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini.

Dr. Russell Patterson, chairman of the American Association of Neurological Surgeons, noted Monday that that chronic brain injury in boxing is "dose-related," and said the incidence of brain damage "is not a problem" among amateur fighters who have been examined.

Patterson also pointed to a study at 11 Eastern colleges that showed the incidence of accumulated head damage in football was at least as high as in boxing.

Thousands demonstrate against weapons

With sit-ins in California, speeches in New York and civil disobedience across the nation, prompting more than 1,400 arrests, thousands of Americans rallied against nuclear arms as part of a week-long international protest.

One organizer of the widespread protests Monday said the mass arrests may help the disarmament cause.

"Once you get arrested, it changes you and you are more committed to the movement," said Joanne Sheehan, who helped organize protests in Connecticut and claims to have been arrested 12 times in six years of anti-atomic activism. "It does have a kind of snowball effect."

At the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory about 45 miles southeast of San Francisco, 1,028 people were taken into custody as they lay down in the streets to try to prevent defense workers from reaching their jobs.

"It's a moral question for me," said Gary Ost, one of about 2,500 demonstrators at the weapons research lab. "I just think we're perilously close to committing the greatest act of murder the world has ever known."

Hinckley's defense still supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal judge who presided over the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr. for shooting President Reagan says he was surprised at the verdict of innocent by reason of insanity, but still believes the insanity defense should remain basically as is.

The jury verdict, handed down a year ago today, touched off a national furor as critics noted that Hinckley had not denied shooting Reagan.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who presided over the two-month trial, wrote over the weekend in The Washington Post that "as I read the verdict, my own reaction was one of surprise."

Noting the widespread criticism of the insanity defense, Parker said that "in the year since the Hinckley verdict, those initial reactions have subsided. Happily, the country has not made drastic changes in the insanity defense. In my opinion, there is no justification for doing so."

More than 40 bills were introduced in Congress to change the laws relating to insanity defenses and at least 21 state legislatures have considered proposals. Eight states have adopted a "guilty but mentally ill" provision which permits a defendant to be given psychiatric care and then put into a prison after he is judged cured.

While the Judiciary Committees in the House and Senate try to come up with a single bill, the 28-year-old Hinckley remains at St. Elizabeths Hospital, the federal mental institution in the District of Columbia where he was sent after the verdict.

Hinckley is eligible for a court hearing every six months at which he can claim that he is sane and try to win his release. His lawyer, Vincent J. Fuller, says there are no plans for such an appeal.

Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity in the March 30, 1981 shooting of Reagan, presidential press secretary James Brady, District policeman Thomas Delahanty, and Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy.

The prosecution had the job of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that Hinckley was not insane and knew right from wrong when he opened fire.

Blacks' wealth about one-third of whites

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wealth of black families in the United States averages about one-third the holdings of white families, according to a new study.

A report released Monday by the Joint Center for Political Studies, based on Census Bureau data, said that although blacks make up 12 percent of the nation's households, they hold about 4 percent of the combined wealth of blacks and whites.

Figures compiled by the center, a non-profit, non-partisan political research group, showed that blacks held $211 billion in personal wealth compared to $4.875 trillion held by whites in 1979.

"The income of whites was about 1.7 times that of blacks, but the wealth of whites was almost three times that of blacks," said William P. O'Hare, a senior research associate who conducted the study.

The 1979 median income for black households was $10,133 while household income among whites was $17,259. However, the wealth of black households averaged $24,608 compared to $68,891 for whites, the study reported.

In assessing the wealth of households, the study considered the amount of equity in homes, vehicles, rental property, businesses, farms and other financial assets.

O'Hare said family wealth was an often-overlooked measure of economic well-being, because most researchers consider only median income.

Even if the gap in personal income between blacks and whites was closed, O'Hare said, the disparity in wealth could be expected to linger. Over the past two decades, blacks on average have earned about 60 percent of the median income of whites.

The study indicated that blacks have made some progress toward economic parity. In 1967, the average wealth of white families was $20,153 compared to $3,779 for black families. That means black families had wealth of 19 cents for every $1 of wealth held by white families in 1967, compared to 36 cents for every $1 in 1979.

Equity in a home accounted for 46 percent of the wealth of black families, compared to 32 percent of the wealth of white families. Twenty-one percent of black wealth was in rental property, while only 15 percent of white family wealth was accounted for that way.

O'Hare noted that "white families are using their wealth to expand their wealth, while blacks are forced to invest a larger portion of their income in 'survival' assets such as homes, cars and household goods."

Only 7 percent of wealth among black households was in cash, checking accounts, savings accounts, savings bonds, stocks, loans, certificates of deposit, mutual funds and similar investments. By contrast, 28 percent of white families' wealth fell into this category.

Equity in farms or businesses accounted for 13 percent of the wealth of whites, but only 4 percent of the wealth of blacks.

Report: EPA study premature because of 'critical flaws'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government study indicating people could safely return to their abandoned homes near Love Canal was premature because it contained "critical flaws," according to a congressional report released today.

The design of the study by the Environmental Protection Agency was "inadequate to detect the true level and pattern of toxic chemical contamination that might exist" in a group of 400 abandoned homes near the chemical dump site in Niagara Falls, N.Y., the Office of Technology Assessment concluded.

The OTA review was requested by Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y., who represents Niagara Falls, and by Sens. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.

A recent draft, not expected to differ from today's final version, was circulated to reporters Monday.

The site, formerly owned by the Hooker Chemical Co., was used to dispose of 21,800 tons of chemical wastes between 1942 and 1953. It was then sealed, and a neighborhood grew up around it.

More than 230 homes in the first two rings of buildings around Love Canal were evacuated after unexplained illnesses prompted the state to declare an emergency at the site in 1978.

After a 1980 study found chromosome damage among other nearby residents, the Carter administration extended the emergency to 400 homes in the third ring around the dump. Their residents were then evacuated.

Those 400 homes are the focus of the current controversy. The buildings were sold to the Love Canal Revitalization Agency in 1980, and the agency wants to bring people back to the neighborhood.

Last year, 18 months behind schedule, EPA reported that four months of sampling in 1980 showed chemical contamination around the 400 homes was generally no worse than in control areas elsewhere in the country.

However, the congressional report said: "With available information it is not possible to conclude either that unsafe levels of toxic contamination exist or that they do not exist in the EDA (emergency declaration area)."

"There remains a need to demonstrate more unequivocally that the EDA is safe immediately and over the long term for human habitation. If that cannot be done, it may be necessary to accept the original presumption that the area is not habitable," it said.

D'Amato said he spoke Monday to EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus about the report.

"There is a spirit of cooperation," D'Amato said. "He has indicated to me they will analyze the OTA report as quickly as they possibly can. If they find there are problem areas they will address them. They are not looking to duck responsibility or take any shortcuts."

Moynihan issued a statement through his spokesman, Mike McCurry, saying the report "tells us that the EPA study was not the last word on habitability. That was what we needed to know, but now we must learn more."

Spokesmen for EPA and the state Health Department declined comment, saying their agencies had not seen the new report.

Army: War games show troops not combat ready

FORT IRWIN, Calif. (AP) — U.S. troops performed poorly over two years of desert war games in California and were easily defeated by mock Soviet combat forces, according to an Army assessment.

The Army troops showed a "significant shortfall in important go-to-war skills," according to an analysis of the first two years of operation of the National Training Center, a sophisticated Army war games facility in the Mojave Desert near Barstow, Calif.

The 45-page analysis was written by an observer team from the Army Forces Command at Fort McPherson, Ga., which oversees the desert training. A report on the analysis, obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, was published today by The Sun, a San Bernardino newspaper.

The report is based on mock battles and live-fire exercises involving infantry, armor, artillery, combat support and service troops from bases across the United States.

"There is a lack of demonstrated tank crew and anti-tank gunners' capability to kill targets," the report said. For example, during one daytime exercise, crews fired 682 rounds and hit 62 targets. Only 26 hits would have destroyed an enemy tank, the report said.

Observers also found that soldiers wasted ammunition and gave away secrets. Many couldn't read maps. If weapons had been loaded with live ammunition during mock battles, the troops would have killed many of their own men, officials said.

The Army general who approved release of the report said it was written to point out shortcomings, not satisfactory performances.

"Our focus is on what commanders need to improve," said Brig. Gen. John Kirk, director of Army training. There have been some improvements since the report's information was gathered, he said, and problems will be studied more to correct them.

The center, on 1,000 square miles of mesquite-covered land about 100 miles east of Los Angeles, has at its heart a $67 million computerized war-games monitoring system. The largest mock Soviet force ever assembled by the United States — 1,200 men — also is based there.

The site has been used for military maneuvers and war games for 32 years. Observations on which the report was based were collected during the period from October 1980, when the National Training Center opened, to November 1982.

According to the report, training units failed to show they understood how fast enemy formations attacked, consistently losing the mobility advantage. Momentum usually stopped after contact was made, resulting in heavy losses, the report said.

Heat puts justice on back burner

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It's been a hot time at the Bernalillo County Courthouse. So hot, in fact, that jury trials for the next two weeks have been suspended.

Since a pump in the air conditioning system in the Albuquerque courthouse broke down three weeks ago, temperatures inside have been rising to above 90 degrees.

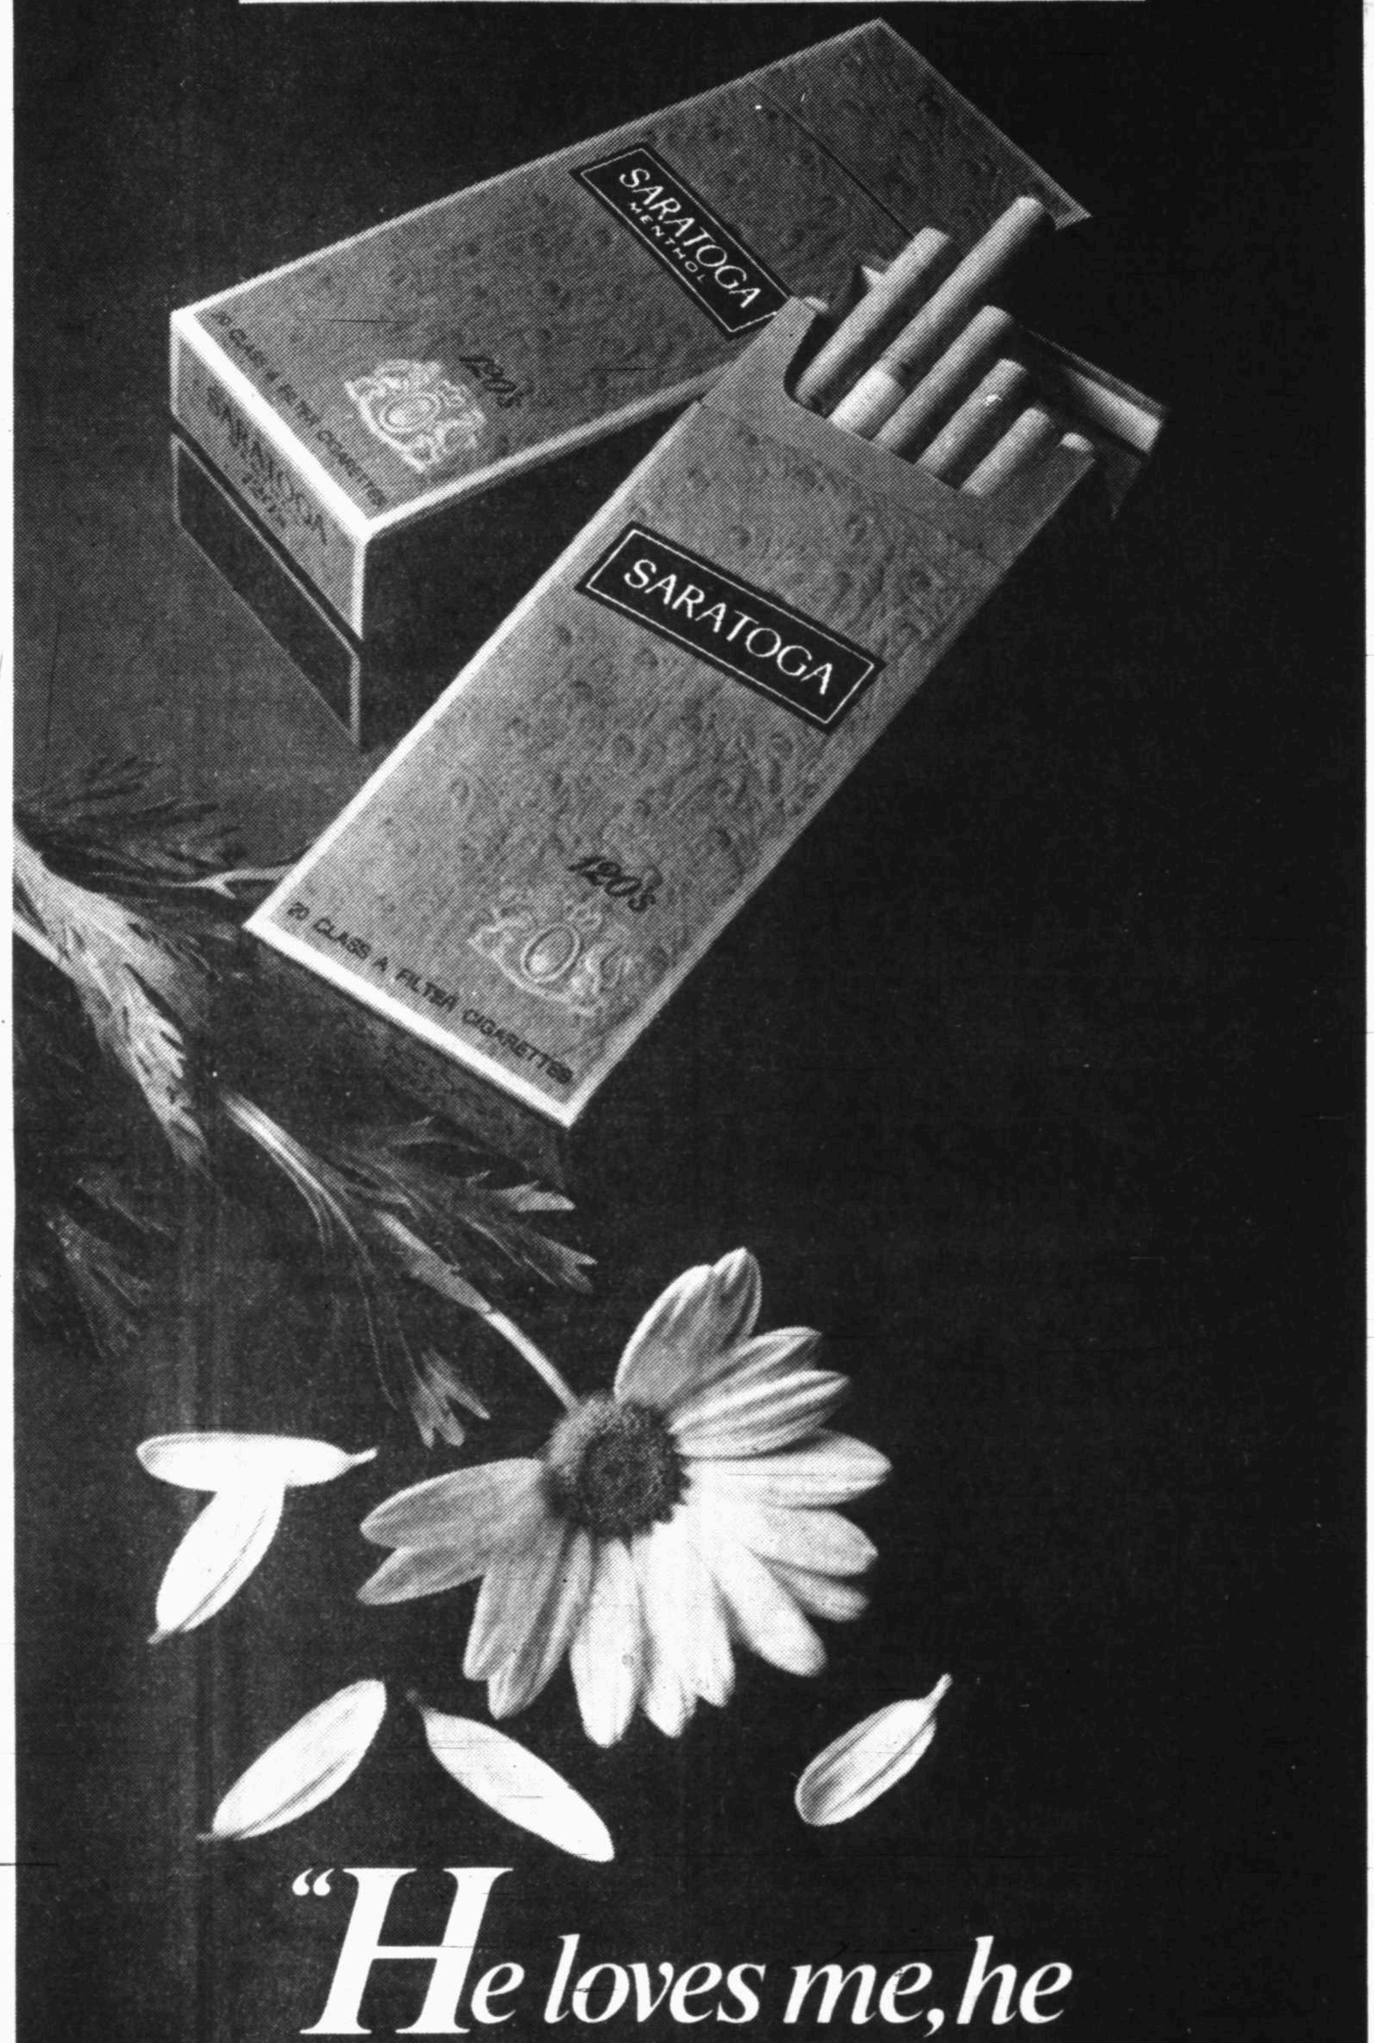

The district judges decided Monday to suspend jury trials until after the air conditioning is fixed.

"We've decided that it's an emergency situation," said District Judge Patricia Madrid. "We do not think we can subject the citizens to these kinds of conditions."

Any trials already under way will be moved to another court building or to courtrooms with windows, Ms. Madrid said. The judges also decided to relax the dress code for lawyers and court employees for any hearings that must occur before the repairs are completed.

Firemen do more than fight fires

Primary duties 'to rescue lives, then save property'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A fireman. More than likely this is one of the top three professions almost any small boy — and today some girls — answer as what they'd most like to become.

Firemen learn to do their job under the strain of great danger, fatigue and excitement. They are taught the importance of teamwork — working together quickly and efficiently to do the job successfully.

And this week they get a special pat on the back as city officials declare this "Firemen Appreciation Week" in Midland.

But fire fighting is not all firemen do. In most communities they enforce fire regulations and carry out safety programs that help prevent fires. They aid persons during tornadoes, floods, car wrecks and dozens of other kinds of disasters and accidents.

"Our primary duty is to rescue lives, then save property," said Midland Deputy Fire Chief James Roberts. "To do these duties a fireman needs a lot of training."

Roberts said a fireman has 340 classroom training hours within the first year, including practical application. Also, there are stringent state requirements.

"We feel we get a certain type of person," Roberts said. "We are a service organization. We are here to help you. If no one else can help you, we can."

Although Roberts commented "most of us go into this, until we can find something better to do," he added it's easy to get hooked on the profession.

"I know. I did 23 years ago," said the deputy chief. "And there's not much turnover here."

A physical and written test determines employment in the fire department.

"You're a rookie for six months," Roberts said. "Then, you're a fire fighter. In one year, a person is eligible for driver. After two years as a driver, you're eligible for captain."

Because the fire department also runs the ambulance service, firemen are encouraged to have emergency medical technician training. In the future, Roberts said it will be a requirement. All of the department's EMTs and paramedics are firefighters.

The Midland Fire Department has three shifts of firemen working 24 hours. During the shifts, the firemen are responsible for maintaining the station house.

"We do all the station maintainance," Roberts said. "We're our own janitors. People riding by who admire the pretty yard can believe that doesn't just happen. It's done with a lot of sweat.

"Also, the men learn how to cook. I've been told many times I'd make a good wife," Roberts said, chuckling.

In addition, the firemen have daily classes to "brush up" on street and hydrant locations. They also make drawings of the buildings to become familiar with the structure in case of a fire.

In Midland, one of the busiest days is the Fourth of July. Roberts said a couple of years ago the Midland firemen responded to 67 calls in four hours.

"We're overwhelmed with the problem of fireworks," Roberts said, explaining that although fireworks are illegal in the city, it's difficult to police the use of them on the Fourth of July.

"We hire off-duty firemen to help during the holiday," he said, adding that with the lack of rain this year, grass fires could increase.

Besides all these duties, many fire departments find time to become involved in community activities.

After fighting 523 fires and responding to 1,418 ambulance calls this year, Midland firemen donated their off-duty time to raise $6,746.47 for muscular dystrophy this month.

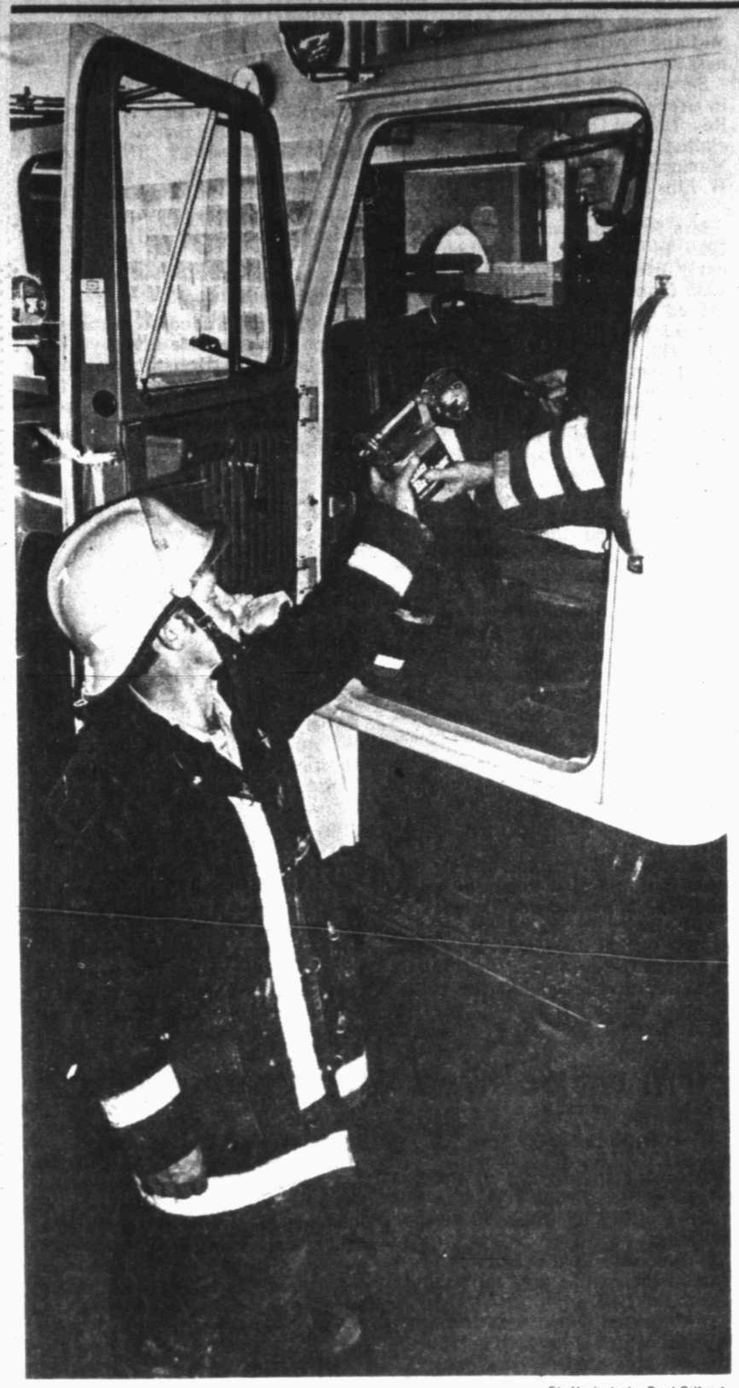

Roberts said this was the second year the department joined the fund-raising efforts for muscular dystrophy.

"This year I came up with an idea to have competition between the two off-duty shifts," Roberts said.

As a result, "C" shift won, collecting $4,188.07 at Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue. "A" shift, which manned Cuthbert Avenue and Andrews Highway, collected $2,558.07.

To show his appreciation and have others aware of the fire department's efforts, Mayor G. Thane Akins proclaimed this week as "Firemen Appreciation Week."

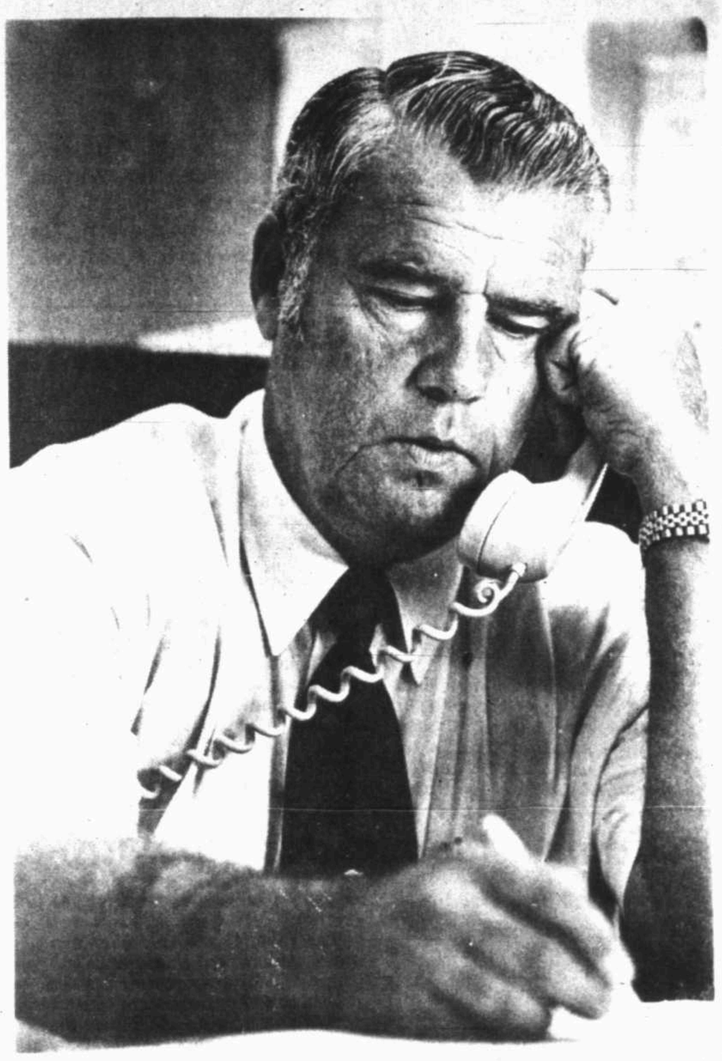

Akins acknowledged the firefighters for "placing their lives in jeopardy and risking bodily injury on a recurring basis in their efforts to save life and property within the city and...the firemen, through their unselfish partnership with the Muscular Dystrophy Association in 1982 and 1983, have helped tens of thousands of children and adults in the fight against 40 neuromuscular diseases."

McCamey students study the past

Jim Collett

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — Pick 'em young, pick 'em bright. Within the night past, they'll find tomorrow's light.

It's a paraphrased axiom well-known among history academicians, who continually prod youth to research bygone events in order to plot a course into the future.

For a couple of generations now, history teachers in McCamey High School have been doing just that through the medium of Junior Historians, Chapter 76, the top-rated chapter in the state this year.

"I've had a lot of good kids," said Jim Collett, history teacher and chapter sponsor. "We have a tradition here that they are well made aware of."

That tradition began shortly after the establishment of the Junior Historians as an offspring of Texas State Historical Association in the 1940s. Then-MHS history teacher N. Ethie Eagleton initiated the chapter and helped it soar to the heights during the next two decades, as students found a lore-rich area at their fingertips awaiting research. Under her tutelage, they studied the land of the Pecos, Horsehead Crossing, Castle Gap.

No one was left in her stead upon her retirement, however, and the chapter lapsed into dormancy. It was reactivated in the early 1970s, and with the arrival of Collett in 1976 it again became noted throughout the state.

"When I was hired, part of my job was to keep it going," said Collett. "We do it here as a voluntary club. We have about 40 students...It usually comes down to a president and a few officers who ramrod it...It's mainly to encourage an interest in and work on local history...to develop the history of your own area. And most of the papers that are written are on local subjects."

Chapter activities include field trips to such historical locales as the ghost town of Upland, work with Mendoza Trail Museum, and research papers on varying topics which then are entered in the state contest.

MC trustees appoint firm to draw up plans

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Plans for a $1.7 million Health Sciences Building pushed ahead when trustees of Midland College appointed an architectural firm to draw up plans for the project during a regular meeting Tuesday.

Financing would be possible through a $1.5 million revenue bond issue, which does not call for approval by voters, according to Bob Phillips, MC vice president of fiscal affairs.

The bond would include fees generated by the college, such as building and tuition fees, he said. The remaining $200,000 could come from an available $150,000, an excess in the budget or donations through the foundation.

"I feel like the need is well established," MC President Dr. Jess H. Parrish said. "We can't afford to gamble much longer with the growing trends as they are. I just feel it's something we ought to do."

Contact hours during the 1982-83 academic year increased by 27 percent, Parrish said. Summer session enrollments have increased 12 percent from last year.

Dr. Richard Holmes, dean of occupational and technical studies, conducted a space utilization study during the past year. The study included in-house surveys, manpower needs, community opinions and surveys of other colleges.

Campus buildings are used between 8 and 90 percent of the time, Holmes said, explaining "we have some real problems (with overcrowding) early in the morning and in the evenings."

"I think the need has been established — both the current need and the projected need," Parrish said.

About 400 students are projected to use the new building, which should be occupied about 50 percent of the time, Parrish said.

"Really, 80 percent will be more like it because of the time spent in laboratories and clinics is more than that of other divisions," Parrish said.

The building, to be located northwest and adjacent to the Science Building, represents the first of a three-phase Health Sciences Building project drawn in a master plan in 1973, according to Terry Harden, representative of the architectural, engineering and planning firm of Geren Associates-CRS.

MC chairman named assistant to president

Dr. Hosni A. Nabi, Midland College scientific studies division chairman, has been appointed to the post of assistant to the president effective Sept. 1.

The appointment was announced during a regular board meeting of the Midland College Board of Trustees Tuesday.

A faculty member and administrator at Midland College since 1971, Nabi replaces Dr. David Norton, whose retirement is effective Aug. 31. Norton has been employed at the college since 1974.

"During his 12 years at Midland College, Dr. Nabi has demonstrated outstanding effectiveness as a classroom teacher and as an administrator," said Dr. Jess Parrish, college president. "He has excellent rapport with the faculty members, not just in his division but throughout the campus. He is well-known and respected in the community."

Dr. Hosni A. Nabi

Nabi also will continue to teach one biology class each semester, Parrish said.

MC trustees approve salary increase, budget

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 9 percent average increase in faculty and staff salaries and the preliminary budget for the fiscal year ending August 1984 were approved Tuesday during a regular meeting of the Midland College Board of Trustees.

Expenditures, which included the increase in salaries as well as 10 new teaching positions, were cushioned by $40,660 for the 1982-83 year and balanced for the 1983-84 year.

In other action, trustees approved an annual donation to the Human Relations Council and a depository contract.

Estimated income for the 1982-83 year was $8,433,551, while expenditures totalled $8,392,892. Figures for income and expenditures for the 1983-84 year were $9,432,599.

"I'm proud of it," Dr. Jess Parrish, MC president, said. "I think it's adequate but it still meets the needs of the staff and faculty."

According to Parrish, the increase in student enrollment helped keep the preliminary budget balanced.

"We've been blessed with a growth of 27 percent in contact hours," he said. "It's still continuing to show because the summer enrollment is a 12 percent increase over last summer."

The 9 percent average increase in salaries will be built into the merit and faculty salary schedules, said Trustee William D. Kleine of the salary committee.

"We feel the salaries at Midland College have been behind the area during the times of high inflation we've been through," Kleine said. "The increase is needed to keep us up to the standards of other community colleges."

The preliminary budget also called for additions of staff members in physical education, music, mathematics and chemistry, English, real estate, business, data processing, fire science, Associate Degree Nursing, respiratory therapy and electricity.

Medal of Honor recipient presented with stamp

In 1952, Midlander George O'Brien was awarded the nation's highest military honor — the Medal of Honor.

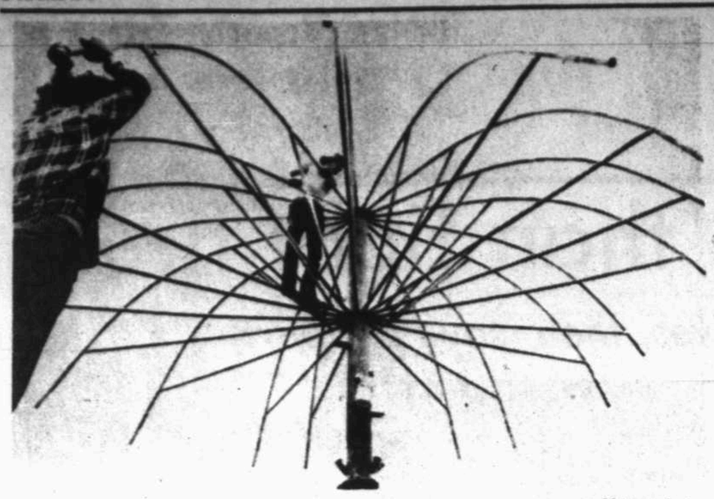

On Tuesay, Bill Williams, postmaster Midland, presented O'Brien with a new postal stamp commemorating the medal.

The stamps, designed for Medal of Honor recipients throughout the United States, were officially issued June 7. The Medal of Honor is given by Congress for risk of life in combat beyond the call of duty.

O'Brien, who is a 22-year Midland resident and a geologist, was modest when recalling his valor.

"I guess I was at the right place at the wrong time," he said, explaining that as lieutenant in the Marines he led his platoon and recovered an area in Korea known as the "hook."

During the postal stamp presentation, Williams said the stamp symbolized that patriotism is still alive and thanked O'Brien for the honor he gave his country.

DEATHS

Bobbie Green

Services for the Rev. Bobbie Green, 68, of 306 E. Dormard, will be at 2:30 p.m. Friday at Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church with the Rev. C.L. Boyd officiating. Burial will be at Fairview Cemetery, directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Green died Tuesday in a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born March 20, 1915, in Mount Pleasant. He had been a resident of Midland for the past 32 years. He married Dearphine Hollins in 1941, in Gilmer. He was pastor of Good Sheperd A.M.E. Church in Fort Stockton, and St. Matthews A.M.E. Church for eight years, commuting from Midland. He served as associate minister of Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church and was former pastor of St. Paul C.M.E. Church for the past year.

Survivors include his wife of Midland; a daughter, Sherry M. Powdrell of Houston; a son, Bobbie Green Jr. of Midland; a brother, the Rev. Walter Green of Roswell, N.M.; a sister, Thelma Byrd of Midland; seven grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be the Rev. Woodrow Bailey, the Rev. John F. Campbell, the Rev. Rase Gowans, the Rev. Willie S. Henry, the Rev. C.S. Johnson and the Rev. F.W. Johnson.

Honorary pallbearers will be the ministers of the Northwest Texas Conference and Brotherhood of Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church and St. Paul C.M.E. Church.

Rad Mitchell

Services for Rad Mitchell, 54, of rural Midland, are pending at Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mitchell died Monday in a Denver, Colo., hospital, of a heart attack while in Colorado on business.

He was born April 5, 1929, in Woodline. He spent his early life at the Methodist Home in Waco and attended Tarleton State College. He entered the U.S. Army and was stationed in Germany for most of his enlistment. After discharge he returned to Waco. He moved to Midland in 1956 and was employed by Southwestern Drug Company and then by Sandoz Inc. Pharmaceuticals. He married Oneada Robertson April 1, 1960, in Odessa. He was a member of the Cottonflat Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife of Midland; a son, Jesse Buchanan of Midland; a daughter, Doris Swinney of Odessa; a brother, Jack Mitchell of Fort Worth; two sisters, Millie Lou Pillow of Houston, and Ruby Bagderley of Cameron; four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Edith L. Schindler

Edith Leona Schindler, 63, 3307 Thomas St., died early today in a Midland hospital after a short illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Friday in Grace Lutheran Church with the Rev. Donald Hafemann, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Schindler was born March 12, 1920, in McGregor. She spent her early life in Waco, graduating in 1938 from Waco High School. She moved to San Antonio in 1942 after her marriage to W.J. Schindler Feb. 14, 1942, in Waco. They moved to San Diego, Calif., and then back to Waco. In 1951 they returned to San Antonio. They moved to Brownsville and then in 1954 to Midland. In 1978 they moved to El Paso and returned to Midland in 1981.

Mrs. Schindler was a member of Grace Lutheran Church, the Senior Citizens and a past member of the church women's organization.

Survivors include her husband; three daughters, Patrice Lynn Allen, Beth Ann Wilson and Lori Elaine Schindler, all of Midland; three sisters, Marcine Smith of Waco, Edwina Bryant of San Antonio and Norma Fussell of Austin; and seven grandchildren.

Policeman awaits trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A leader of a new organization of Harris County reserve officers is awaiting trial on extortion charges, officials say.

Gayland W. Hooper, a reserve constable lieutenant, helped found the Harris County Peace Officers' Association last week, after District Attorney John B. Holmes announced plans to enforce a law prohibiting volunteer reserve officers from working security jobs. The group aims to maintain the officers' right to work extra jobs.

Hooper, 35, is accused of threatening to kill the wife and 6-year-old daughter of a Houston marketing executive. He was suspended from duty and freed on $10,000 bond in March after being charged in March wis ago with extortion.

Death ruled accidental pending autopsy results

The death of a Midland minister found asphixiated Tuesday afternoon has been tentatively ruled accidental, pending the results of an autopsy ordered by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

The body of the Rev. Gary Haaland, 41, pastor of Midland Lutheran Church, 2711 W. Michigan Ave., was discovered slumped into a garden hose, which was suspended from a rafter of a small shed behind his house at 4911 Heather in Saddle Club South.

Police said they were called to the residence at 2:45 p.m. Tuesday by a church member who had gone to check on Haaland's welfare after he failed to show up for a church meeting. Haaland's wife and two children were visiting relatives in another state, according to Judge Sprayberry.

Sprayberry said it appeared Haaland had been dead 24 to 36 hours when his body was found.

Services are pending at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Former high school pitcher indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — A former star pitcher for Tomball High School has been indicted on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the traffic deaths of a cheerleader and another teen-ager.

Marcus Sebesta is accused of being drunk and acting recklessly when his car swerved into a lane of oncoming traffic and hit another car on country road outside of Tomball, killing two teen-agers and injuring seven other young people.

Harris County grand jurors indicted Sebesta on involuntary manslaughter charges Tuesday in the April 12 deaths of Marlana Polansky, 17, and Jose Salud Garcia, 18, of Mexico. Gracia was driving the other car, and Miss Polansky was a passenger in Sebesta's vehicle.

Sebesta, who was released on $5,000 bond, also was severely injured in the accident.

Maximum punishment for involuntary manslaughter is 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Notary course sponsored

Insurance Women of Midland and Insurance Women of Odessa are sponsoring a three-hour course designed for notary publics June 29.

This course will be a comprehensive study of the duties and responsibilities of being a notary public.

Two sessions are planned — one from 9 a.m. to noon and the other from 1 to 4 p.m. Both will be at the Safety International Building at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Cost is $10. Reservations should be made by June 27 by telephoning Sue Johnson in Midland, 682-5665, or Tony Wallum in Odessa, 362-0431.

Coffee breaks will be provided. Participants should bring a pen or pencil and a note pad. Study materials will be provided.

"Short of proofreading or grammar, it's their work," he said. "We had five papers place last year, which (state officials) said was just about a record for one chapter. Usually we have one or two a year."

Chapter members also present slide shows on historical sites to organizations and build models or construct maps. Several students have had articles published in the Junior Historian.

"In addition," said Collet, "The chapter submits a report of their activities (to the state organization), showing what you've done to encourage history in your area, what you've done to encourage other chapters...In 1980 we were named the outstanding chapter, and this year it was divided between Jefferson and McCamey. Most other years we stay up there in the top five or six chapters."

Collett, who was raised in Sheffield and holds a master's degree in history from The University of Texas at Austin, feels privileged to work with the chapter.

"I do get paid to do what I like to do, and a lot of people don't get to do that," he said.

The diversity of the state allows for a wide variety of emphases by Junior Historians chapters, he said.

"There's very little state control as far as you have to do this or that," he explained. "They encourage you to do your own thing in your own area...Some chapters even do folk dances...Jefferson is probably one of the most prominent chapters. They're known over the nation. They've done some historic preservation and they do a musical every summer."

Because no other Junior Historian chapters lie in McCamey's proximity, Chapter 76 seldom has much interplay with associate chapters. But that may be an attribute.

"In big cities they may have six or eight or ten in one town," he said. "We've found that many of the big schools have chapters but they really don't seem to be able to produce more than we do because of the type of students."

Collett leaned back in his chair in the history room and smiled broadly. "We've been real proud."

Science chairman named assistant to president

A native of Egypt, Nabi received his bachelor of science degree from Cairo University and was employed as a bacteriologist at Egypt's National Research Center.

He came to the United States in 1961 to attend graduate school at Louisiana State University. He earned his master of science and doctorate degrees and also served as a graduate assistant at LSU.

Following graduate studies, Nabi returned to Egypt for three years, where he was employed as a geneticist by the Department of Agriculture.

He then worked in Lamesa for three years as a plant geneticist for a seed company. During this time, he developed new strains of cotton, which continue to be grown in the United States.

Nabi became a part-time instructor at Midland College in 1970 and taught for both Midland College and Odessa College in 1971, before coming to Midland College on a full-time basis. He later was head of MC's science department and was appointed chairman of the scientific studies division in 1977.

"Dr. Nabi is well-known throughout the state for his teaching methods and the number of students he has prepared for professional degrees in medicine, dentistry, veterinary science and nursing," Parrish said.

Applicants for the position of scientific studies division chairman currently are being reviewed.

Firm appointed to draw up plans

According to Director of Public Relations H.A. Tuck, the 21,640-square-foot facility would house the following:

— Associate Degree Nursing program, which will enter its second year in fall 1983.

— Licensed Vocational Nursing program, which is expanding from a one-year program to a two-year program beginning in fall 1983.

— Child Care and Development, "already established to a small extent."

— Radiologic Technology, a proposed program, "at least two years away. We have to demonstrate need and survey" to have it approved by the Texas Education Agency.

Also to be included in the building is a 2,000-square-foot demonstration and lecture room, designed to hold 100 persons. An office area, housing offices for program directors and faculty, a faculty conference room, secretarial and reception areas, work rooms and storage areas, also is included in the first phase building.

"We're way ahead of the game," Parrish said, explaining educational goals and objectives already had been defined.

"We should be able to go out for bids in early, early '84," he said, adding the building should be ready for occupancy by fall of 1985 at the latest.

Midlanders honored at district conference

The Uptown Chapter of the Business and Professional Women's Club was represented the organization's State Convention recently held in Fort Worth. Three Uptown members, Kathy Atkin, Bobbie Salgado and Vicki Oswalt were honored at the District Eight Conference competed at the convention.

Kathy Atkin was chosen "Woman of the Year" at district. She is employed as assistant vice president and director of marketing by Texas American Bank/Midland. She has served on the Board of Directors and as president-elect of the Uptown Club. In 1982, she received first place in the Individual Development Program state competition.

Bobbie Salgado won first place at district this year in the IDP speech contest. She was required to participate in a written test on the Business and Professional Women's Club, deliver a two-minute impromptu speech and a five-minute prepared speech. Her topic for the district conference was "Career Gratification." Her topic for the State Convention was "Women and Politics." She is employed by Texas American Bank/Midland as a management candidate.

Vicki Oswalt was awarded first place in the "Young Career Women" competition. The YCW competition includes a round table discussion on current topics, a personal interview and a three-minute prepared speech. She is employed by Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Company as a senior supervisor.

The activities and programs of the Business and Professional Women's Club are designed to help working women become valued members of the community through personal and professional growth.

Membership in the group is open to all women who are actively engaged in business. For more infromation contact Sam Guyton at 686-0736.

Make old, new martinis

ORIGINAL MARTINEZ COCKTAIL

(As invented by Jerry Thomas, Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, 1862):

Fill a shaker with ice cubes and add:
— Dash of bitters.
— Two dashes of maraschino syrup.
— A half glass of Old Tom Cordial Gin (sweetened).
— Half glass of Italian vermouth (bittersweet).

Shake vigorously then serve in stemmed glass with slice of lemon.

THE PERFECT MARTINI

(First Prize — 1978 Martini Festival)

Fill pitcher with ice cubes and add:
— 1 1/2 ounces of Gordon's Gin.
— Two drops of Triple-Dry Noilly Prat Vermouth.

Stir gently, five or six swirls (don't bruise it), pour into stemmed glass that has been chilled by spinning in chopped ice and add a green olive.

Girls want traditional life

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Helen Faust was stunned when she learned results of a survey of teen-age girls at a private school on Philadelphia's Main Line.

"The girls expected to get married someday and have a big house on a farm with horses and the whole bit," she said. "Oh, some thought they'd have a career of some sort, but they considered careers incidental."

Ms. Faust was saddened, too. It's evidence, she said, that the question "Girls: Are We Failing Them?" can only be answered "yes."

That question is the focus of Ms. Faust's 128-page report to the Girls' Coalition of Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Young women, she found, still suffer from the aptly named Cinderella complex; they still believe Prince Charming will make them live happily ever after. They don't believe they'll have to work for a living.

"But the average woman who marries winds up working for 28 years," said Ms. Faust, a member of the Mayor's Commission for Women in Philadelphia. "Unmarried women work an average 40 years. We say, since most women do have to work, why not have girls plan for jobs that are rewarding both financially and emotionally?"

English chef mingles international cuisines

By The Associated Press

A soft-spoken young English chef with a broad background in international cookery is running the kitchens of a hotel in New Jersey, intermingling the cuisines of a half a dozen nations.

At the age of 29, Brian Tossell directs a staff of 75 at the Parsippany Hilton, preparing everything from suppers for two to huge banquets and elaborate buffets highlighted by giant ice sculptures.

"How did I become an executive chef? I first received training at a catering school in Devonshire, where I was born," says Tossell. "Then I served as an apprentice at a hotel in Switzerland where I became acquainted not only with Swiss cookery but German, French and Italian as well."

In London, he learned Indian cuisine and in Washington, D.C., our American specialties.

At his present post in Parsippany, Tossell likes to combine various national cuisines in the same meal.

"I like French cuisine the best," Tossell says, "because of its novel characteristics and the fact that today it is moving away from all those rich dishes. German cuisine I like for its fine meat sauces and Italian fare for its seafood specialties."

Many people have a misconception of Indian cooking, he says, especially the seasoning which they associate with the curry powder Americans buy in stores. In India, there is no such prepared powder but up to 50 different spices are combined to prepare this seasoning.

Tossell has become a master at preparing the traditional specialties of various countries. He has also tried his hand at different forms of nouvelle cuisine, a form of cookery which shies away from the highly spiced dishes as a rule. Through experimenting, he has discovered that many patrons prefer a mixture of foreign cooking styles to purely ethnic dishes.

Antique drink father of martini

Hearst Feature Service

The Martinez Cocktail, forgotten father of the dry martini, will return to its birthplace — San Francisco.

Edward W. Moose, proprietor of a popular North Beach refreshment stand, vowed he would resurrect the antique drink to celebrate a ruling on June 7 by the remarkably unofficial Court of Historical Review and Appeal.

Superior Court Judge Daniel Hanlon, berobed behind the bar of justice, took an appreciative sip of Plaintiff's Exhibit 1. A bit sweet, he said, but not bad.

Then Hanlon ruled the martini hadn't been invented in Martinez or New York or Italy or England or, as one witness argued, in 17th-century Ireland.

No sir. Beyond a reasonable doubt, he declared, the first martini had been poured in San Francisco in 1862.

Then he knocked back Exhibit 2.

But across San Francisco Bay in Martinez, which has its own legends, barkeep Vince Amato took umbrage.

"It's a put-up job," he said.

Amato asserts martinis were born in Martinez. It's a plausible claim. After all, no other community has sponsored a Martini Festival. No other town has endorsed a Martini Navy of yachtsmen with their own flag, a cocktail glass rampant on a field of azure.

Neither project has survived.

"Everyone got ripped " said a longtime observer, wisely choosing anonymity. "But we still feel the martini was invented here."

"We should have our own judge rule on this," Amato said. "We've got one at the bar right now, swilling martinis."

He paused.

"We'll file an appeal."

This may set a precedent for the Court of Historical Review and Appeals, a lunch-hour diversion with no official standing. Nobody has ever appealed a ruling, probably because most of its subjects are dead and gone.

The martini proceedings included expert testimony by Dr. Mervyn Silverman, director of the San Francisco Health Department. He said gin had been invented 300 years ago by a colleague, Franciscus Dele Boe Sylvius. The Flemish physician mixed grain alcohol with juniper berries in 1672 as a possible cure for vitamin C deficiencies.

"I might add that it did little for scurvy," he said. "But after a while, people didn't seem to mind."

Bernard Averbuch, (cq) president of San Francisco Boosters, solemnly argued that the martini was an Irish-Italian creation of the 17th century.

He said a Papal Nuncio came to Kilkenny and urged the local rebels to drink Italian wine. Instead, they politely mixed a few drops of wine with poteen, the Irish version of white lightning. A jar of it prompted the gasping prelate to consider death or, as Averbuch quoted him "Morte! Mortini!"

The Mortini Version was summarily rejected by Judge Hanlon.

He also dismissed conjectures that the cocktail had been originated by the Italian makers of vermouth. And nobody even mentioned the English argument that the drink — also known as a "silver bullet" — had been named for the Martini-Henry rifle. It has a famous kick.

Instead, the judge swung toward the version described by Stephen Dobbs, a history professor at San Francisco State University.

On an otherwise ordinary day in 1962, he said, an imaginative barman named Jerry Thomas experimented with concoctions behind the plank at the old Occidental Hotel on the waterfront. To a customer about to embark by ferryboat for the seat of Contra Costa County, Thomas is said to have murmured, "Here is a new drink I have invented for your trip. We will call it the Martinez."

Thomas departed in 1865 for New York City, where he published "Jerry Thomas's Bartender's Guide" in 1887. It defined the Martinez Cocktail as equal parts of Italian vermouth and Old Tom Cordial Gin, an English liquor named for a tomcat that fell into the vat.

Although testimony was missing from Martinez loyalists, local historian Nina McLeod Ritch had declared years ago that the first martini had been mixed in 1865 by a French-born bartender, Julio Richelieu.

A miner headed for San Francisco stopped off at Richelieu's tavern, the same site now occupied by Amato's. Richelieu poured him a bottle of Jesse Moore whiskey, charging extra for the empty bottle. The miner paid with a nugget, then said, "don't you think I ought to get something extra for all that gold?"

Child interprets foreign cooking terms used in recipes

Hearst Feature Service

French is the language of cooking, says Julia Child, just as English is the language of golf. To prove it, at the recent American Institute of Wine and Food symposium in San Francisco, she read this sentence from a French-language newspaper about a golf match: "Le golfer stroked le putt sur le green dans le cup."

The point is that this is no more absurd than an "English" recipe that might read: "Saute the onions, then add the julienne of celery and the broth; season it with fines herbes, simmer the mixture until the celery is tender and thicken it with beurre manie." All those French terms are about as familiar to experienced American cooks as "golfer," "putt," "green" and "cup" are to experienced French golfers. But to the rest of civilization, they might as well be Greek (a culture which, incidentally, gives us phyllo, feta and moussaka).

Child is right. As anyone who reads recipes can attest, the prime language of cooking terms is French, and you won't be able to get past the first chapter of most cookbooks without it. Fortunately, most cookbooks thoughtfully provide a glossary.

Why use foreign words? As Child points out, it saves time and space. You could say "saute" or you could say "fry in a small amount of fat, keeping the food in motion." You could say "julienne" or you could say "cut in thin strips about the size and shape of matchsticks or toothpicks." Until we come up with English terms as accurate, concise and descriptive as the French, every American recipe will have a certain gallic touch, even if it is semantic.

To save time and effort looking up the definitions, here is a compendium of commonly-encountered French cooking terms, those that have entered the American culinary lexicon.

Bain marie (banh ma-RHEE): What does "Mary's bath" have to do with a double boiler, which is essentially what we are talking about here? Experts disagree on the original source, but in cooking, a bain marie is any device that disperses heat gently and evenly by surrounding the bottom and sides of the cooking vessel with water. When custard cups bake in a pan partially filled with water, they're baking in a bain marie.

Beurre Manie (buhr mahn-YAYH): Literally, "kneaded butter," it is equal quantitites of flour and softened butter mashed together. Added to hot liquids, it quickly cooks into a thickened sauce. It must be cooked for several minutes to dissipate the flour taste. (See Roux).

Bouquet Garni (bo-kay garh-NEE): A bunch of herbs and plants tied together (into a "bouquet") and dropped into a simmering soup of stew to flavor it. The theory is that you can then dish it out and it doesn't color or cloud the liquid much. Traditionally, the components include parsley, thyme and bay leaf, often tied together with pieces of celery. Chervil, basil, tarragon, rosemary or sage also may be used, depending on the recipe. Cheesecloth is usually used to hold it all together.

Chiffonade (SHEE-fo-NAHD): When you cut leaves (spinach, sorrel, lettuce, etc.) crosswise into itty-bitty strips, you have a chiffonade. If you make the same sort of thing from something more substantial, like leeks or carrots, it's called julienne (defined below).

A pecan filling scented with rose and orange flower waters in folds of phyllo pastry crowned with ice cream is a return to old-style European elegance. See "Mediterranean Coolers" below.

Chinoise (shee-NWAHZ): A wire strainer in the shape of a cone used for straining purees. Soups and purees pressed through a chinoise are smoother than those left unstrained. The shape works better for this purpose than the traditional dome-shaped wire strainer because you can use a pestle in it. It's called a chinoise because it resembles a Chinese hat.

Confit (konh-FEEH): A method of preservation in which poultry is fried slowly in its own fat, then stored sealed in the same fat. The meat ages and tenderizes. It is usually made from goose or duck, which have enough fat to do this sort of thing, and reheated in some of its own fat to crisp. Duck or goose preserved this way, also known as potted, is also used in traditional recipes for cassoulet.

Court Bouillon (KOOH boo-YOHNH): A cooking liquid usually made on the spot from water and aromatic vegetables (such as onion, garlic, celery, carrot, bay leaf), usually with a spritz or two of lemon, vinegar, wine or something acidic. It is the recommended poaching medium for fish, but it is seldom used in a sauce for the finished dish. (See Fumet.)

Deglacer (DAY-glah-SAYH): Often translated as "deglaze," this is a useful process for making quick sauces from the pan drippings of roasted or sauteed foods. The fat is poured off, and liquid (such as stock, wine or water) is boiled in the pan to dissolve the browned bits. This flavorful liquid can then be (a) served as a sort of thin gravy, (b) enriched with cream or butter to make a sauce or (c) added to an existing sauce to enrich it and tie its flavor to the dish.

Duxelles (deewk-SELL): The French name sounds a lot better than the translation -- "mushroom hash" -- but that's what it is. Finely chopped mushrooms are cooked slowly in butter with finely chopped shallots and sometimes onions until everything is dry and concentrated. A spoonful of duxelles flavors a sauce, a stuffing, an omelet, a soup. The name was given to it by its inventor, La Varenne, who came up with the idea while working in the kitchen of the Marquis d'Uxelles. That's OK. It might have been King Louis, and then what would we put on shrimp salad?

Fines Herbes (feenz-EHRB): Mixed chopped herbs added to soups, salad dressings, stews, omelets, etc., usually consisting of parsley, chervil, chives and often tarragon.

Fumet (feew-MAYH): Fish broth, usually made from fish bones, lemon slices, aromatic vegetables and water. It is used as a cooking medium, but more often as a base for fish sauces or soups.

Gratin (grhah-TANH): A method of cooking in which food is baked with a topping that comes out crunchy. Usually, it is vegetables or fish topped with buttered bread crumbs or cheese or both and run under a flame to brown the surface. The oval-shaped dish or shallow pan usually used for this is also called a gratin, and the preparation is listed on menus as something "au gratin."

Mirepoix (MEE-rh'PWAH): Diced carrots, onions, celery and bacon (or ham) stewn together, usually flavored with bay leaf and thyme and used as an aromatic base for roasting meat, poultry or fish. If the vegetables are cut into bigger cubes, it's called a brunoise.

MEDITERRANEAN COOLERS

1 16-oz. package phyllo dough (also spelled fillo)
1/4 to 1/3 cup clarified butter
2 cups finely chopped pecans
2 tablespoons rose water
2 tablespoons orange flower water
1/3 cup clarified butter
1/2 cup sugar
1 quart pralines 'n cream ice cream

For each serving, lightly brush the top of a sheet of phyllo dough with clarified butter. (Be sure to carefully cover remaining dough to avoid drying.) If dough is extra thin, lay a second sheet on top of first and repeat process, butter again. Cut buttered sheet(s) into 8 x 8-inch squares. The number of squares obtained from a full sheet of dough will vary with brand used. Fold corners of each 8 x 8-inch square into center to form a 6 x 6-inch square.* For each serving, fit four, folded squares into an individual tart pan or 6-ounce custard cup so that corners extend from pan at different angles, creating the appearance of a flower blossom. Repeat process seven more times. Dough blossoms may be frozen and then carefully wrapped to be baked later, if desired.

In a small bowl, combine pecans, rose water, orange flower water and 1/4 cup of the clarified butter. Add sugar and mix well. Press 1/8 of pecan mixture gently into the bottom and up around sides of each phyllo dough blossom. Bake at 325-F for 18-23 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from oven and cool to lukewarm (cups sould be rewarmed in a low oven for a few minutes if cold). Top each phyllo dough cup (blossom) with a large scoop of ice cream. Serve immediately. Makes 8 servings.

Strawberry sandwiches

Strawberry ice cream sandwiches are a quick and easy-to-make summertime snack for youngsters.

1 pint brick-type strawberry ice cream
1 tablespoon strawberry preserves
12 graham crackers

Cut ice cream into six slices. Spread strawberry preserves on one side each of 12 graham crackers.

Place ice cream on preserve side of 6 crackers; top with remaining crackers and preserve facing ice cream. Freeze until firm. For use later, wrap individually in foil and store in freezer up to a month. Makes six sandwiches.

Vanilla fudge

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

3 cups sugar
¾ cup milk
¾ cup heavy cream
¼ cup light corn syrup
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons vanilla
½ cup coarsely chopped nuts

Butter an 8 by 8 by 2-inch pan. In a heavy 3-quart saucepan stir together sugar, milk, cream, corn syrup and butter. Stirring constantly, cook over mediuim heat until mixture boils. Stirring occasionally, cook until temperature reaches 238 degrees on a candy thermometer or until a small amount of mixture dropped into a large bowl of very cold water forms a soft ball that flattens on removal from water. Remove from heat. Do not stir. Cool to lukewarm (110 degrees). Add vanilla; beat until fudge begins to thicken and lose its gloss. Stir in nuts. Quickly pour into prepared pan. Cool.

DEAR ABBY

She likes her name

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem petty to some, but it bothers me a great deal.

My name is "Barbara" – not "Barb" or "Barbie" – and Barbara is the way I want to be addressed. I suppose the problem is that I do not hesitate to tell those who call me "Barb" or "Barbie" that I prefer to be called "Barbara."

I have a friend who tells me that when I insist on being called "Barbara," I come off as haughty and arrogant, which drives people (especially men) away. She says I should try to overcome this "psychological hang-up" because it creates a negative impression.

I can't help it. I hate being called "Barbie" – or worse yet, "Barb" – so why should I put up with it?

I can't hang a sign around my neck. What do you think? – CALL ME BARBARA

DEAR BARBARA: It's perfectly all right to let people know that you prefer to be called "Barbara," but do so diplomatically (without "barbs"). And if someone should slip, don't make a big deal out of it. A rose by any other name is still fraught with thorns.

DEAR ABBY: For my wife's 40th birthday, the girls in her office gave her a sleepshirt with Tom Selleck's face on it.

She thought it was a terrific gift, but I told her no way would I sleep with Tom Selleck, so if she wanted to sleep with him she could forget me.

She thought I was kidding, but when she realized I was serious she stuck "Tom" away in a drawer, but she's still sulking about it.

Care to comment? – JOE IN CLOVIS, N.M.

DEAR JOE: Don't get mad – get even. Find a sleepshirt with Morgan Fairchild's face on it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 62 and retired; I'm 55 and still work outside the home. Whenever I start making plans (once a year) to visit my parents for 10 days, he starts the old routine, complaining about headaches, stomach pains, etc. Then he sulks and acts hurt until I feel so guilty I hate to leave him.

In our 38 years of marriage, every time we have visited my parents together it has been a disaster. He does not get along with them, and they have never cared much for him. He doesn't even want to visit his own parents or our children who live in another state. He hates to travel and says if they want to see him, they can come here.

He keeps telling me that I am the only person who means anything to him and he thinks I should feel the same about him. I can't make him understand that I am not choosing my parents over him, I just need to see them once a year – especially now that they're elderly.

Please give me some encouraging advice, Abby. – FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: You have no reason to feel guilty. Your husband is not incapacitated, nor is he "ill." He sounds like a spoiled, selfish child.

If this has been going on for 38 years, he's not apt to change, so if you are really plagued with guilt for leaving him, counseling could help you overcome these inappropriate feelings. A local mental health clinic offers this help

Fish steaks to grill outdoors

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you aren't already accustomed to grilling fish outdoors, this summer you may want to try doing so. To encourage you here are some points to bear in mind.

Fish has nutritional advantages: it offers excellent protein and its fat is on the unsaturated side. It is also appealing because often one variety may be substituted for another. You can use what is thrifty in your area. Many underutilized or less commonly used varieties are available at less cost than standard varieties; the former are comparatively inexpensive — and delicious.

Here is a recipe, concocted by a friend of ours, for grilling swordfish steaks. If you substitute another variety for the swordfish, make sure the steaks are firm-fleshed and about 1-inch thick so they will not overcook or be too tender to turn on the grill. The donor of this recipe cooked the steaks about 5 inches from medium-hot coals and the method brought good results.

LUCY'S FISH GRILL

4 swordfish steaks (or a similar variety), each 6 to 8 ounces and about 1 inch thick
2 large limes
½ cup dry vermouth
2 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons soy sauce
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground ginger

Rinse steaks in cold water; pat dry on paper towels.

Trim 1 end from 1 lime and discard; cut 4 thin crosswise slices from the cut end of the lime; wrap slices in saran and refrigerate. Ream the cut lime and the remaining lime to extract 3 to 4 tablespoons juice.

In a plastic bag or shallow dish, stir together the lime juice, vermouth, oil, soy sauce, salt and ginger. Add the fish steaks and turn to coat them with this marinade. Seal bag or tightly cover dish and refrigerate, turning steaks once, for about 1 hour. Remove steaks, reserving marinade.

Grill steaks about 5 inches from medium-hot coals for about 5 minutes, brushing with reserved marinade. Turn with a broad metal spatula; continue to grill and brush with marinade until steaks are still firm but flake easily — 5 to 7 minutes longer. Garnish with lime slices and parsley sprigs.

Makes 4 servings.

Tuna, fruit lunch combo

CURRIED TUNA ON THE HALF SHELL

2 grapfruit, halved
1 seven-ounce can of tuna, drained and flaked
¼ cup finely chopped celery
1 green onion, sliced
½ tsp. curry powder
Dash salt
Dash pepper
¼ cup mayonnaise

Condiments: raisins, coconut, nuts, chutney (optional)

Loosen segments of grapefruit halves; chill. In bowl, mix tuna, celery, onion, seasonings and mayonnaise. Chill. At serving time arrange grapefruit halves on luncheon plates. Top each with a scoop of curried tuna salad. Offer condiments to sprinkle on top. Makes four servings.

Omelet has cheese taste

BAKED CHEESE OMELET

3 slices bacon, cut up
1 cup water
½ cup milk
1 envelope (1 ¾ oz.) au gratin sauce mix for potato casseroles
8 eggs
½ cup frozen peas

Cook bacon until crisp in medium-size saucpan, saving 2 tablespoons drippings. Set aside bacon. Add water, milk, and sauce mix to drippings in pan; heat to boiling, stirring frequently. Beat eggs 1 to 2 minutes with electric mixer. Gradually beat in ½ cup of the hot sauce. Stir in bacon. Pour into well-buttered 1-quart casserole. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes, until puffed and set. While omelet is baking, add peas to remaining sauce and heat 5 minutes, until peas are tender, stirring occassionally. Serve omelet with sauce. Makes 6 servings.

French cuisine cooks quickly in microwave

Copley News Service

French cuisine affords one of the finest experiences your palate can savor, as the French will readily verify. The rich sauces and elaborate fare typical of classic French cuisine are not the standard items found on French dinner tables, however, as fewer than 1 percent of the dishes regularly eaten in France are prepared in the classic manner.

There has been a long-standing fallacy that French cuisine is a national cuisine but, in reality, each region specializes in its own favorite ingredients and cooking methods. The delightful dishes of France are as regionally distinctive as are those of the Chinese.

One of the finest regions for delicious cuisine is the area of Burgundy and Lyons. It is here that the city of Dijon (ah, that mustard!) lies and from whence come the famous Burgundian wines. Boeuf Bourguignonne (much easier to eat than it is to spell) and escargot (perhaps easier to spell than to eat) also come from this region.

The next time you nurse your Perrier a la lemon twist and muse on what fine French dish you'll partake of tonight, remember that there is a definite regional history behind that creation. And a distinct birthplace unlike any other in the world. Bon appetit and happy microwaving!

FRENCH ONION SOUP

3 tbsps. butter or margarine
3 large onions, thinly sliced
2 (10½ oz.) cans beef broth
1 soup can water
One-third cup white wine
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
2 slices French bread, toasted
Garlic powder to taste
1 cup Swiss cheese, grated

Microwave butter 45 seconds in 3-quart casserole. Add onions, cover and micowave 20 minutes, stirring after 10 minutes. Stir in beef broth, water, white wine, Worcestershire sauce and pepper. Cover with glass lid. Microwave for 8 minutes, stirring after 4 minutes.

Lightly sprinkle garlic powder on toasted bread. Place ½ slice in four soup bowls, ladle soup over toast. Sprinkle with cheese. Microwave about 1 minute until cheese melts. Serve hot. Serves 4.

CHICKEN CORDON BLEU

2 whole chicken breasts (about 10 oz. each)
¼ lb. Swiss or Gruyere cheese, thinly sliced
¼ lb. ham, thinly sliced
¼ cup flour
1 egg, beaten
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tbsps. butter or margarine

Cut chicken breasts in half. Remove skin and bone. Flatten by placing betwen wax paper and pounding with mallet or heavy skillet. Remove wax paper. Arrange a slice of cheese and slice of ham on each chicken piece. Fold short sides of chicken over filling, roll from wide side. Secure with toothpick.

Dredge chicken rolls in flour, dip in egg and coat with bread crumbs, pressing crumbs firmly into chicken.

Arrange chicken rolls in 7x11-inch glass baking dish. Dot with butter and cover with wax paper. Microwave 6 to 7 minutes until chicken is firm and juices run clear. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serves 4.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

Happiness for convalescents brought by pets

By SUSAN OKULA
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The residents and staff of the New Haven Convalescent Center make a lot of detours to say hello to Lucy, a brown-haired, 10-week-old puppy.

Her yips and high-pitched growls often punctuate the conversations and card-playing remarks of patients in the home's first-floor solarium, where Lucy spends much of her time in a playpen.

Nurses cuddle her during breaks, while other staff members take her for walks. But Lucy, who is part Labrador retriever, is really there for the patients and is the latest addition to the center's experiment with pet therapy.

The convalescent center is also home to two gerbils (Chip and Dale), a rabbit (Sheba), a guinea pig (Miss Piggy) and a parakeet (Dudley). Center workers hope the animals will bring more happiness into the lives of the 89 people who live there.

Pet therapy is an "up and coming" trend in homes for the elderly, says New Haven Convalescent Home administrator Susan Sandel.

"The therapy is the involvement with the animals," says Margaret Waltrip, the center's activities director.

The animals do make a difference for some patients. Home workers cite the case of an 88-year-old resident who rarely socialized with others. But when Miss Piggy arrived, they say, the woman formed a bond with the animal.

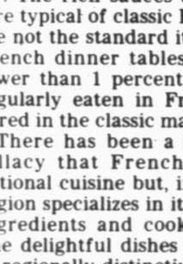

Another resident, 40-year-old Jerome Jordan, has become the caretaker for Sheba, the rabbit. During a recent fire alarm, Jordan, who is confined to a wheelchair scooped up the 10-pound black rabbit before leaving the building.

"When they brought Sheba here, she was three months old," Jordan said. "Ever since then, I've been taking care of her. I feed her, I let her run around."

Jordan and Ms. Waltrip recently taught Sheba to jump through a hoop.

"The person who takes care of the rabbit is taking care of someone else instead of being cared for," Ms. Waltrip said.

Ms. Sandel says animals first came to the center about a year ago and the trend has spread to several other nursing homes in the state. Since Connecticut does not have any laws governing pets in convalescent centers, she said the decision over whether to have animals lies mostly with the homes' administrators.

"Artichoke rice" is an elegant side dish to be served with grilled steaks. See recipe.

Add onion, bay leaf for perfect artichoke

STEAMED ARTICHOKES

4 fresh artichokes, about 4 inches in diameter
1 lemon water
1 large onion
1 bay leaf
½ teapoon salt
½ cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice

Prepare artichokes by cutting off stems even with base; peel stems ad reserve. Break off small leaves at base and discard. Cut 1-inch off top, straight across. With scissors, snip off tip of each leaf.

Holding artichoke upright, run under cold water, spreading leaves apart. Rub all cut surfaces with lemon to prevent discoloration. Place steamer basket in large kettle or Dutch oven.

Add 1-inch water. Place onion and bay leaf in steamer basket. Arrange artichokes and stems close together in one layer over onion. Sprinkle with salt. Bring water to a boil. Reduce heat to simmer. Cover steamer tightly. Simmer, checking water level so steamer does not boil dry. Steam 40 to 50 minutes or until base or artichokes are tender when pierced.

In a small saucepan melt butter, add lemon juice. To eat, dip artichoke leaves in lemon butter and draw leaves between the teeth, eating only the tender part. Dip sliced-stems into lemon butter.

Singles find difficulty in cooking for one

Copley News Service

It seems that there are more people living alone these days than ever before. These singles are sometimes moved to curse their kitchen cupboards, not to mention the refrigerator, because of the difficulty of cooking for one.

Most recipes are planned to serve around four people — but what if there aren't four of you? And even if there are, you might find yourself the only vegetarian in the house — and that usually means at least an occasional separate meal.

Freezing in one-serving portions is a great way for the lone diner to survive, and it prevents waste of leftovers. No one wants to eat the same entree three nights in a row. (If it's a four-serving recipe, you'll be throwing it out by the fourth night!) Just eat one portion, freeze the rest in individual packets and defrost again at a later date. By then you'll be ready to have it again and your dinner for one will be ready in a jiffy.

Single diners should be especially careful of nutrition — it's easier for them than for anyone else to just forget about eating. Why go to the trouble if it's only you? Because your body and health and happy outlook depend on it. Be nice to yourself: Set an attractive table for one and light a candle or two.

ZUCCHINI PARMESAN

1 medium zucchini
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 small garlic clove, minced
⅛ tsp. salt
Dash oregano
Dash basil
1 tbsp. water
2 tbsps. grated Parmesan cheese

Wash and cut zucchini into ⅛-inch-thick slices. Heat oil over medium hea in small skillet; stir in minced garlic and saute for 1 minute. Add zucchini, salt, oregano and basil. Stir-fry until zucchini is almost translucent; add tablespoon of water, cover and steam for 30 seconds. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Serves 1.

BAKED APPLE

2 tbsps. honey
¼ tsp. cinnamon
Dash nutmeg
1 tbsp. butter, cut into small pieces
1 large baking apple
2 tbsps. water
Cream ~~or half-and-half~~, if desired

Preheat oven to 350 F. Mix together honey, cinnamon, nutmeg and buttr. Remove core and peel top one-third of apple. Place apple in ovenproof custard cup. Fill apple with honey mixture. Sprinkle water over top and bake 40 to 60 minutes until apple is tender. Baste top occasionally with juices. Serve warm with cream or half-and-half if desired. Serves 1.

COTTAGE CHEESE PANCAKES

1 egg
¼ cup cottage cheese
1½ tbsps. whole wheat flour
1½ tsps. wheat germ
1 tsp. oil
Pinch salt
Vegetable oil for griddle

Separate egg, placing white and yolk in two small bowls. Beat egg white ntil it forms soft peaks; set aside. Combine egg yolk with cottage cheese, whole wheat flour, wheat germ, 1 teaspoon oil and salt. Beat well until smooth. Stir in beaten egg white a little at a time.

Heat griddle or skillet over medium heat (about 375 F). Drop pancake batter by spoonfuls onto hot griddle and spread with back of spoon into 3-inch circles. When edges begin to bubble, turn with spatula and brown other side. Serve with butter and honey. Makes four to five 3-inch pancakes.

Artichoke hearts used to spice rice side dish

ARTICHOKE RICE

7-oz. rice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup sliced green onions, including tops
1/2 teaspoon Beau Monde seasoning
14-oz. can artichoke hearts, drained and chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Cook rice according to package directions. Melt butter in large skillet, add mushrooms, green onions and Beau Monde seasoning. Saute until mushrooms are tender. Add mushroom mixture and remaining ingredients to cooked rice. Mix well and heat through. Makes 6-8 servings.

Question about barbeques burns

By JOHN SINOR
Copley News Service

Summer has arrived and with it has come the giving up of burnt offerings to the season's great god — Barbecue. I expect to be standing at the evening altar several times myself.

In the mail last week I received a public opinion survey from the Merit Corp. announcing that 64 percent of the nation believes men are better cooks at the outdoor barbecue.

Only 21 percent think women are better at the job. While 15 percent had no opinion on the subject.

I am probably with the 15 percent since I expect they did not give an answer because they thought the question was silly in the first place.

I mean, why make a national survey on the question in the first place? And why is it made by a company that manufactures cigarettes?

To encourage barbecuing? Maybe to get you used to smoke?

If the survey had been made by a firm that produced those cutesy barbecue aprons, it might have made some sense.

After the survey, the marketing director could say, "~~OK, from now on~~ we make 64 percent of our aprons in men's sizes, 24 percent in women's sizes, and skip the other 15 percent."

The exact question asked by the company over the phone was: "When it comes to cooking on a grill at a backyard barbecue, who do you think is generally the better cook — a male or female?"

Notice that backyard barbecue?

What about people who cook on sideyard barbecues, or at parks, ~~or at the beach~~, or on a houseboat, or at a lake, or on the roof of their New York apartment building?

My barbecue is on my sundeck, which faces the same direction as my front door. Does that count, too.

The whole nation was not really asked. Some 1,205 adults living in homes with telephones were asked.

However, the Merit people say: "Based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent certainty that the accuracy of the results is within plus or minus three percentage points of what the result would have been had the entire adult population living in telephone households been polled."

See how serious they take this burning question?

I say with 95 percent certainty that those survey people could have made better use of their time.

I also doubt that men are better at the barbecue. Although I am sure the men voted for themselves and so did most of the women.

Show me a woman who doesn't enjoy having her dinner cooked for her and I'll show you an odd cookie.

Summer entertaining needs simple, elegant buffet

Summer entertaining can be fun and easy with this buffet of prepare-ahead dishes. Pictured (clockwise) are a pitcher of fruity Golden Sangria, a loaf of veal pate maison garnished with onions and toast points, a platter of raw vegetables and shrimp with tapenade and avocado mousse dips, and a cool omelet to be served in attractive wedges and garnished with tomatoes.

Summer is traditionally a time for outdoor entertaining. Even people who have been antisocial all year clean off the porch, bring out the picnic table and invite friends over for informal gatherings, casual food and good conversation.

Summer entertaining never goes out of style, but styles in summer entertaining do change from year to year. The resurgence of interest in simple, well-prepared gourmet food means that this year, summer parties will lace casual with elegant and simplicity with chic for easy outdoor gatherings with a touch of class.

Casual but elegant summer entertaining doesn't have to be complex or expensive. Try choosing a simple theme that can serve as the party's focal point. The recipes that follow all have in common the fact that they are prepared with cognac.

VEAL PATE MAISON

1 lb. ground veal
1 lb. bulk pork sausage
1 lb. ground smoked ham
12 oz. smoked ham, cut into ½-inch cubes
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, chopped
3 tsps. salt
½ tsp. pepper
2 tsps. fine herbes
1 tsp. thyme
3 eggs
¾ cup cognac

Combine all ingredients and mix until well blended. Pack mixture tightly into a greased 10x4x3 loaf pan. Place pan on larger, shallow pan to catch drippings. Bake in preheated 350 F. oven for 1¼ hours. Cool in pan, wrap in foil and chill for several hours. Loosen sides of loaf from pan, remove and place on serving platter. Serve garnished with thin onion rings. Cut into thin slices and serve with toast points. Serves 10 to 12.

COOL OMELET

12 eggs
2 tsps. salt
½ cup cognac
10 oz. sharp cheddar cheese, shredded
⅓ cup butter
2 red onions
3 ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
Finely chopped salted tomatoes
Finely chopped parsley

Beat eggs with salt and cognac. Fold in half of the cheese. In a 12-inch non-stick skillet, heat butter and saute the onions, tomatoes and pepper until thick, about 10 minutes. Pour the egg mixture into skillet and cook with stirring until eggs are browned underneath. Sprinkle eggs with remaining cheese and place under broiler. Broil until eggs are firm and cheese is lightly browned. Let eggs cool in pan, then slide out of pan onto serving platter. Cut into thin wedges and serve at room temperature to 10-12 persons.

TAPENADE

2 seven-ounce cans of tuna in oil, drained
1 cup pitted black olives
1 two-ounce can of anchovy fillets
1 cup olive oil
⅓ cup cognac
2 tbsps. drained capers
1 clove garlic

Combine all ingredients in a blender and process until smooth. Pour into a serving bowl. Serve with raw vegetables for dipping: diagonal thin carrot slices, tomato wedges, zucchini slices, diagonal celery slices and red pepper slices.

AVOCADO MOUSSE

4 medium-sized ripe avocados, peeled and seeded
Juice of 2 limes
1 eight-ounce package of cream cheese
½ cup heavy cream
3 tbsps. cognac
1 small jalapeno pepper
Small cooked, shelled and deveined shrimp

Combine all ingredients except shrimp in a blender and process until smooth. Scrape into a serving bowl and season to taste with salt. Garnish with lime wedges. Use shrimp for dipping.

GOLDEN SANGRIA

2 bottles (4/5 of a quart each) sauterne, chilled
1 cup cognac
⅓ cup sugar
2 cups orange juice, chilled
1 cup pineapple chunks
2 peaches, peeled, pitted and sliced
1 orange, sliced
1 lemon, sliced
1 lime, sliced
2 cups club soda, chilled
Ice cubes

In a 4-quart pitcher, mix sauterne, cognac, sugar and orange juice. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Add fruit. Let chill until ready to serve. At last minute add club soda and ice cubes. Stir until icy cold and serve in tall glasses to 10-12 persons.

Berry sauce better

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Copycatting a product marketed in a food specialty shop is worthwhile when you can better it and make it economically.

This is exactly what happened recently. A friend of ours paid $4.50 for about a half-pint of Berry Sauce. When she copycatted the recipe, her sauce was immensely better in flavor, color and texture than the original — and the cost was about $2.25 for a half-pint. Her recipe makes four half-pint jars that may be given as gifts or served to guests in your own home.

Here is the recipe for this homemade delight. We recommend it unequivocally. It's delightful as a topping for ice cream, baked custard, creamy rice or bread pudding.

COPYCAT TWO-BERRY SAUCE

1 pint fully ripe strawberries
2 ten-ounce packages frozen red raspberries in syrup, thawed
¾ cup light corn syrup
½ cup sugar
½ cup creme de cassis
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Rinse and hull strawberries; finely chop; measure 1 and 1-3rd cups. Lightly crush raspberries in their syrup.

In a 5-quart non-corrosive saucepot stir together strawberries, raspberries, corn syrup, sugar, cassis and lemon juice. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, bring to a boil; boil gently, stirring occasionally, until mixture thickens slightly — 30 minutes.

Pour a small amount of the boiling mixture onto a small cold plate. Place in the freezer for a few minutes. Mixture should have a topping-like consistency — if it does, remove from heat; if not, continue cooking until it does.

Ladle into clean hot ½-pint jars leaving ¼-inch headspace. Wipe top edge of jars with a damp towel. Seal according to jar manufacturer's directions. Process in a boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Cool jars on wire racks or folded towel. Store in a cool place. If unprocessed, store in refrigerator and use within 2 weeks.

Makes about four ½-pint jars.

Orange bread

1 package dry yeast
¼ cup warm water (110 to 115 degrees)
⅔ cup orange juice
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter, soft
2 tablespoons finely grated orange rind
2½ cups (about) unbleached flour

In a large bowl, sprinkle yeast over water and let stand until dissolved. Stir in orange juice, sugar, salt, butter and orange rind; gradually stir in enough flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on a prepared board or pastry cloth; knead until smooth and elastic. Place in a buttered bowl; turn to butter top. Cover bowl; let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — 1 to 2 hours. Punch down; knead for 5 minutes. Shape into a loaf; place in a buttered 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Cover; let rise in warm place about 1 hour. Bake in a preheated 375-degree for 35 to 45 minutes. —(AP)

U.S. shoppers smarter

By PAMELA S. LEVEN
Hearst Feature Service

The smart shopper will have new status in the 1980s, according to the opinion people, Yankelovich, Skelly & White.

"Being a smart shopper won't be considered tacky," insisted Sender Hoffman, Yankelovich senior vice president.

Hoffman says that the consumer who knows he or she doesn't ever have to pay list price for appliances will be typical of the smarter, older, more educated shopper of the 1980s.

The 1970s social agenda of personal fulfillment has given way to the economic realities of the 1980s and the rest of the decade will be characterized by consumers melding the two, said Hoffman.

"People are going to think, spend and act more strategically," he noted.

Yankelovich conducts annual in-depth studies of American consumers by interviewing more than 2,500 adults from all economic levels and geographic areas.

The company then interprets the data to determine the beliefs, attitudes and values that shape the consumer's view of the world.

"It's clear to us that we've entered a new era," Hoffman said. "We're seeing a new consumer."

In addition to being older and better educated than the typical target group of shoppers a decade ago, consumers will also be marked by a new attitude.

No longer does everyone share the "classical, traditional American optimism" that "next year will be better" or that people will have better lives or make more money than their parents and grandparents.

The "fix-everything optimism," the idea that no problem is insurmountable, is also gone, Hoffman reported.

But while some Americans seemed to have lowered their expectations, many others have come to expect excellence in narrow areas.

He noted that Americans have recently overcome their doubts that "we're not as good as the Japanese." Such people now are thinking: "Yes, we can make a quality car," he said.

Because of these attitudes, American consumers are taking a "cost effective approach to living their lives," he said.

Many people are re-evaluating the products that offer convenience over price.

For example, they are not buying on impulse. By setting purchasing priorities based on their time and money and a product's quality, consumers are proving that "the ad hoc life-styles of the '70s don't work anymore."

Some things have not changed, Hoffman noted.

Americans still have a firm commitment to health and fitness.

They also have an abhorrence of involuntary exposure to social health dangers such as smoking, "villains in foods" and drunken drivers, he said.

There will also be no backing away from the gains that women have made in society, Hoffman said.

Eighteen people killed in collision

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Eighteen people were killed and 20 others were injured when a passenger bus collided with a truck on a highway in northeastern Thailand, a highway police officer said today.

The accident occurred Tuesday in Nakhon Ratchasima province, 143 miles northeast of Bangkok, when a bus carrying 40 passengers tried to overtake another vehicle and slammed into the oncoming truck, the officer said.

Man lies in coal pit for 15 days

PEKING (AP) — A Chinese man who fell into a 75-foot-deep coal pit was rescued after lying injured for 15 days with only a little rain water to drink, the China Daily reported today.

Zhuo Guo-En, 22, of Jiangshan in Zhejiang province, fell into the abandoned pit May 19 while on his way to another village and was discovered by three cowherds June 2, the English-language newspaper said.

It said Zhou, who tried several times to climb out but fell down again, was suffering from hunger, minor injuries and fright when he finally was pulled out.

Judge explains defendant's release

LONDON (AP) — In an unusual move, a criminal court judge has explained publicly why he released on probation a man who admitted to hundreds of sexual offenses against boys.

Judge David Tudor Price, whose judicial order caused a public uproar, said Tuesday at Old Bailey Central Criminal Court: "The man described as a sex monster in newspaper articles this morning was, according to reports to the court, a pathetically inadequate and immature personality, with a history of epilepsy and suicidal tendencies."

Tudor Price said he was faced with a choice of sending defendant David Bosley, 34, to prison for many years or allowing him to return to the community to receive hormone treatment, which doctors said would eliminate his sexual urges.

Second nuclear plant planned

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The South African government, which critics claim has developed a nuclear bomb, says it plans to build a second nuclear research center on the country's southern coast.

J.W.L. De Villiers, chairman of the South African Atomic Energy Corp., said Wednesday the plant will be built 27 miles west of Mossel Bay and will employ up to 300 people.

De Villiers said the existing Pelindaba facility north of Johannesburg is not large enough to handle the country's plans for expanding nuclear research.

Crowd observes first day of summer

SALISBURY, England (AP) — An estimated 1,000 people barged into the inner circle of the 4,000-year-old Stonehenge to observe the first day of summer, police said, but the stone monument was not damaged.

Police said the intruders clambered over a security fence onto the monument grounds Tuesday and declared the site sacred. They left after police asked them to.

The Stonehenge — two rings of 72 giant stones in Salisbury Plain, about 60 miles west of London — is surrounded by a fence because of fears of damage to the ancient monument. The exact origin of the prehistoric monument has never been determined, although it is thought to have some astronomical or religious signficance.

Paratroopers prefer Beirut to Sinai

SHARM EL-SHEIKH, Egypt (AP) — Many American paratroopers serving in the peacekeeping force between Egypt and Israel say they would rather be dodging bullets with the U.S. Marines in Beirut, than sitting in the Sinai.

"Most definitely," said Pvt. Armando Marini, 21, of Miami, manning an observation post overlooking the tranquil Straits of Tiran and the Saudi Arabian coast at the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula.

In 14 months in the Sinai, the 1,200-man U.S. contingent has not seen a shot fired in anger. Some officers privately grumble their men are getting rusty standing "guard duty." Enlisted men envy the attention the Beirut Marines get back home.

Most officers are philosophical about the limitations of the mission. "What we have dropped in how-to-kill skills, we have gained in getting to know each other and working together," said Lt. Ivan Welch, 27, of Roswell, N.M.

THREE AMERICAN observers have died in the Sinai, all in accidents. One died while scuba diving, one was killed in a truck crash and the third when his vehicle detonated a land mine.

Lt. Gen. Fredrik V. Bull-Hansen, the Norwegian commander of the 11-nation multi-national force and observers, said most of the treaty violations reported by the peacekeepers in the restricted military zone they monitor on both sides of the Egyptian-Israeli border also have been accidents.

Most were misunderstandings such as an Israeli jet straying into Egyptian airspace or an Egyptian army truck wandering into the MFO-controlled zone along the border.

The job of the MFO is to report such violations to the three signers of the Camp David accords — Egypt, Israel and the United States — which equally share the annual $100 million cost of the peacekeeping force. Under the treaty, the MFO will stay until Egypt and Israel decide they do not need it.

Bull-Hansen said the number of violations has been decreasing since the mission began with Israel's evacuation of the Sinai on April 25, 1982.

COL. RALPH Newman of Fayetteville, N.C., commander of the 800-man battalion task force from the Army's 82nd Airborne Division based at Fort Bragg, N.C., said he has kept his men alert by requiring them to report everything they see, even Bedouins passing by with camel herds.

Staff Sergeant Thomas Camarde, 24, of Hinton, W.Va., right, and Private Jeff Semantel, 21, of Hillsboro, Oregon, are on duty at a U.S.-manned observation post which is part of the Multi-National Force and Obervers. The post overlooks the Straits of Tiran at the mouth of the Gulf of Aqaba and the Red Sea. The radar dish is for monitoring traffic in the straits at night.

The Americans patrol a 140-mile-long, 25- to 40-mile wide strip on the Gulf of Aqaba and contribute a 350-man logistics support unit and 25 civilian observers to the 2,600-man MFO. They serve for six-month periods. Another 4,000 Americans work for the civilian contractor that provides support services.

There is no way for them to get bored "by the time they do the housekeeping, operate the radio 24 hours a day, do guard duty 24 hours a day, cook, man the observation posts, do their one hour of physical training and three hours of classroom training a day," said Newman.

The posts, surrounded by barbed wire and sandbagged bunkers, consist of a couple of pre-fabricated housing units, two big black water tanks on an elevated platform and a guardhouse at the entrance.

Some are on the sandy beaches of the Red Sea, some are in the middle of live minefields, some are on rocky mountain peaks accessible only by helicopter and one, at the foot of a box canyon where the temperature reaches 115-degrees, is called "Lost Valley — the last place on Earth."

SITTING IN A camouflaged position on a rocky point overlooking the bay here, Pvt. Dan Hochuli, 19, of North Andover, Mass., said: "We're not allowed to read on guard duty, so it gets boring. Sometimes if it's a little too slow, I do some push-ups or sit-ups to stay awake."

While not on observation duty, their Egyptian hosts allow the Mofos, as they call themselves, to train in platoon-sized units of 30-40 men with their M-16 rifles and M-60 machine guns.

They also fire .81 millimeter non-explosive practice mortar rounds. The heaviest weapon they have is a shoulder-fired anti-tank rocket.

At a desert school, they practice survival skills such as distilling moisture from the air into a hole dug in the desert floor, mountaineering and land navigation. They rappel down cliffs and from red-and-white UH-1H helicopters or leap 30 feet from the helicopters into the Red Sea and swim ashore.

The 82nd is one of the divisions committed to the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force, which Washington says will intervene to protect vital U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf and Arabian Peninsula oilfields.

THE AMERICANS live in air-conditioned housing overlooking the Tiran Straits. Nearby facilities include a supermarket with American goods, a gym, tennis courts and a beach. The post boxing team is training for a match with the Fiji battalion.

Newman said an intra-battalion boxing match recently was much more popular than a visit and show by the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders.

"Between sex and violence, violence has definitely got it with this bunch," said Welch.

Details of arms-sale fraud, kidnapping revealed at trial

LONDON (AP) — British police have thwarted a bid to swindle the Iranian government out of $52 million in an arms-sale fraud, according to information revealed at Old Bailey Central Criminal Court.

Judge Sir Leslie Boreham said Tuesday that Scotland Yard anti-terrorist officers acted "in the nick of time" to stop the plot by Iranian businessman Benham Nodjoumi and to free two kidnapped Iranian diplomats and an Iranian banker held in London as part of the conspiracy.

Nodjoumi, 37, was sentenced by the judge Monday to 20 years in prison after being convicted of conspiracy to defraud and of assaulting and unlawfully imprisoning the diplomats and the banker. He pleaded innocent on all charges.

The judge had banned news coverage of the case until after the trial of three of Nodjoumi's British accomplices. That meant that details of the plot were not revealed until Tuesday.

NODJOUMI'S LAWYER, Charles Conway, told the court the Iranian businessman now was terrified that Ayatollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary Islamic leader, might try to exact revenge of his own.

Nodjoumi, whose sentence can be cut by up to a third for good behavior in prison, has been ordered to be deported to Iran when he has served his time in Britain.

Detective Chief Superintendent John Pole, who led the Scotland Yard operation, and other prosecution witnesses told the court that the plot stemmed from a highly secretive attempt by the Iranians in mid-1981 to break an American arms embargo.

They said the Iranians sought to buy through Europe 8,000 modern anti-tank Tow guided missiles for use in the Gulf war against Iraq and have them secretly shipped to Iran under phoney descriptions as graphotype machines and scrambler equipment.

They said Nodjoumi, a former informer in Savak, the Iranian secret police force of the late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, pretended he and associates could supply the missiles in a secret deal. The Shah was overthrown in a revolution led by Khomeini in 1979.

IN FACT, the prosecution alleged, Nadjoumi planned to provide the Iranians with 34 crates of useless machinery and escape with the money payable at a Swiss bank.

Prosecutor Henry Pownall said Nadjoumi and a gang of European criminals he recruited kidnapped two Iranian diplomats and an Iranian banker in London and three Iranian army colonels in Antwerp who had been sent to Europe to authenticate the missile deal.

Under the deal set up with Iran, Nodjoumi undertook to deliver the goods to Antwerp where they were to be inspected by the colonels before being loaded on to a ship. Signatures of the colonels were to be authenticated by the Iranian embassy in London.

Instead, Nodjoumi, posing as one of the colonels, carried out the so-called inspection, Pownall said. Signatures on the certificate of inspection were forged, together with the Iranian embassy seal.

Some 15 hours before Nodjoumi was due to have a bankers draft transferred to a Swiss bank account, armed police raided the London apartments where the captives were being held. Within a few hours, the men holding the colonels in Antwerp learned the operation had aborted and freed their captives unharmed, Pownall said.

Police clash with youths

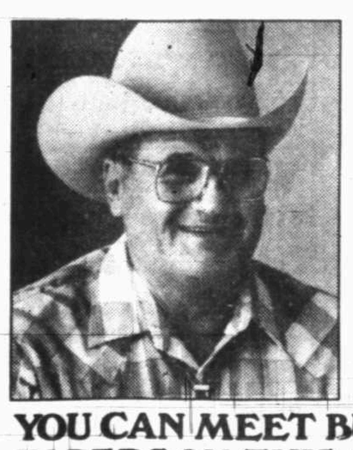

BRISTOL, England (AP) — One police officer was hospitalized, 12 others were slightly injured and six police vehicles were damaged in a clash between police and rock-throwing black youths, a police spokesman said today.

He said the fighting erupted late Tuesday night in the St. Paul's district, a nonwhite area of this port city where more than $1.5 million in damage was caused during 1981 street riots.

Police said the latest disruption began when two officers arrested a man suspected of a traffic offense and then were surrounded by about 50 youths who tried to free him.

Other officers arriving to give assistance had to use riot shields when they came under attack.

Two men were arrested during the fighting.

1 YEAR NO SWEAT WARRANTY

If Air Conditioning doesn't have it here it probably doesn't have it.

Gas Air Conditioning Has It!

No other air conditioner has a warranty like a gas air conditioner because no other air conditioner is built like a gas air conditioner.

Gas air conditioning has fewer moving parts and no compressor to wear out or break down. This means less wear and tear and lower maintenance costs.

That's why gas air conditioning is so dependable and why it has a warranty that's twice as long as other types of units . . . a full 10 years!

Find out more about the air conditioning that's backed by the best warranty available. Call Energas today for a free cooling survey and cost estimate. There's no obligation.

Remember, all air conditioning was not created equal. And we have the paper to prove it!

Manufacturer's limited warranty covers all defects in materials and workmanship on the sealed refrigeration unit for ten years from the date of installation of the air conditioner when it is installed in a single family residence. All other parts are warranted for one year from date of installation.

Superintendent pf Leonia, N.J., public schools, Dr. Charles Murphy, holds a letter used to solicit students from nearby communities to attend the Leonia school system. Dwindling enrollment has caused this unusual recruitment drive.

Schools solicit wealthy students

LEONIA, N.J. (AP) — A mail campaign to draw wealthy, tuition-paying students to Leonia public schools has angered educators in neighboring towns, who say the plan will upset the racial balance of their schools.

But school officials who designed the plan say it should bring money into the Leonia district, helping offset the loss of state aid when enrollments declined.

"We did not see ourselves as pirates," said Johanna Meskill, president of the Leonia board of education. "We may have to do some fence-mending with our neighboring districts, but it was not our intention to lure their students."

Instead, the effort was aimed at parents in wealthy northern New Jersey enclaves who otherwise would send their children to private schools.

"Compared to private schools, we offer a very good education at a lesser cost," Mrs. Meskill said Tuesday.

"If you've got a good product, why not sell it," said Superintendent Charles Murphy. "We've always accepted outside students. It's just the advertising that's different."

Last month, Murphy wrote parents in predominantly white, affluent sections of Englewood, Cliffside Park and Englewood Cliffs, inviting them to consider enrolling their children in a school system that sends 75 percent of its students to college, with many attending Ivy League schools.

"Are you interested in a relatively inexpensive private school education for your youngster in a small school setting? If you are, the Leonia school district might be the place for your youngster," the letter said.

It also boasted of small classes, sophisticated computer courses, advance placement programs and outstanding athletic facilities.

Administrators in the targeted districts, which would lose state aid for every student who drops out, complained that public schools should not compete for students. And they said they resented Leonia's claims of academic superiority.

The outcry was particularly sharp in Englewood and Englewood Cliffs, where authorities are trying to maintain a racial balance at Dwight Morrow High School, which is 66 percent black in a community where about half of all white students go to private schools. A 1980 U.S. housing census noted that 53.3 percent of Englewood and 88.9 percent of Englewood Cliffs are white.

"The source of the annoyance was...they did not canvass the whole district, which implies black-white issues," said Englewood schools superintendent Phillip Leahy. "It smacks of trying to play on a issue knowingly or unknowingly."

"All they are doing is stirring ill will and animosity without doing anything beneficial for the school district," said Paul A. Shelly, the Paramus school superintendent.

Leonia's student population has dropped by 300 to 1,300 over the last few years. Facing the prospect of cutting staff and eliminating some specialized courses that attracted few students but enhanced the reputation of the district, the Leonia school district decided to look for more students.

Leonia school officials said the tuition for out-of-town students — ranging from $1,300 to $4,000 — costs about $2,000 to $4,000 less than at some of the region's prestigious private schools.

About 30 parents have taken the district's invitation for more information and a tour of the school buildings, officials said.

But Leonia resident Shari Weiss said she would be surprised if many parents accepted the invitation.

"I think people who want to send kids to private schools are going to do it anyway," she said.

Democrats criticize education record

Bell praises Reagan's record

AP Laserphoto

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., left, and Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., during a meeting Tuesday of a House task force on education and employment display a report card on President Reagan's job on budget money for education.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan should be given credit for bringing education to the forefront of the nation's attention and for compromising with Congress on proposed funding cuts, says Education Secretary T.H. Bell.

That was his response Tuesday as Democrats led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy slashed away at the president's record on education — a subject Reagan is attempting to use for himself as the 1984 election gets closer.

Kennedy accused Reagan of claiming falsely to represent educational interests while pursuing "a scorched earth policy on education." He said the president is leading "the most anti-education administration in our history."

But Bell declared: "We ought to be praising the president because he is talking around the country about the problems of U.S. education."

And he said that while Reagan has proposed cuts in funding for education, he has compromised with Congress on these. Furthermore, Bell said, despite the proposed cuts, spending on education has risen during the Reagan administration.

The scene was a congressional hearing room where a House Budget Committee task force was examining education quality and federal policy.

Kennedy noted that Reagan had declared "education is a top priority" after the National Commission on Excellence in Education issued its report several weeks ago saying the nation's schools are awash in a tide of mediocrity.

"For all of us who have spent the past two years opposing the administration's scorched earth policy on education, the sudden new rhetoric emanating from the White House has a welcome — if very hollow — ring," said the Massachusetts Democrat.

"Perhaps, if there is a silver lining to the present controversy, it is that President Reagan has finally sent (Office of Management and Budget Director) David Stockman to the principal's office — and we have seen the last of the administration's harsh proposals for deep cuts in federal education programs."

Bell acknowledged that the administration proposed a cut in funds for vocational and adult education. But he said it also had proposed a 60 percent increase in the college work-study program.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. joined the criticism, saying in a statement to the panel that "despite the administration's claims, President Reagan has not made education a high priority."

He noted that the president's major education proposal is merit pay for teachers, an idea he said was worth exploring.

"But in making the case for merit pay for teachers, the president seems to be putting all the blame for our education problems on the teachers," O'Neill said, whereas the problems are with the educational system as a whole.

O'Neill said changes in the Guaranteed Student Loan program caused the volume of these loans to drop 15 percent to 20 percent between the 1981-82 school year and last year.

Dr. Kenneth G. Ryder, president of Northeastern University, told the panel there appears to have been a subtle shift of college financial aid toward higher income students between 1974 and 1981.

He based his statement on data gathered by the subcommittee on sources of funds of the National Commission on Student Financial Assistance, of which he is chairman.

He said that removing the income cap on eligibility for the Guaranteed Student Loan program resulted in a sharp increase in program participation by higher income students.

President Reagan has asked Congress to change eligibility rules for the program so that all applicants have to prove need.

Bison attacks Yellowstone visitors

2,000-pound animal will be killed

"The bison picked her up with his head and threw her approximately 10 feet... The bison caught... with his horns and inflicted deep lacerations from hip to ankle."

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A 2,000-pound bison that injured two tourists in separate attacks when they approached it too closely probably will have to be destroyed, officials say.

Joan Anzelmo, a park spokeswoman, said the attacks occurred Sunday and Tuesday at the Madison Campgrounds, 14 miles inside the park's West Entrance.

Anne Heuser, 53, from West Germany, was charged by the animal Sunday as she passed within 10 feet of the bison on a footpath, Ms. Anzelmo said.

"The bison picked her up with his head and threw her approximately 10 feet," she said. "Other visitors distracted the bison while Mrs. Heuser was helped away from the area."

The woman was taken to an Ashton, Idaho, hospital for treatment of a broken wrist and bruised ribs, Ms. Anzelmo said.

A Colorado man was injured by the same bison Tuesday night after approaching it to take its picture, officials said.

Melvin Dietz, 46, of Littleton, was photographing the bison from about 20 yards away when it began to charge, Ms. Anzelmo said.

"Dietz backed up and the bison stopped. Dietz resumed taking photos of the animal and it began to charge again."

The bison caught Dietz with his horns and inflicted deep lacerations "from hip to ankle," Ms. Anzelmo said.

Rangers tried to tranquilize the animal Tuesday so they could transfer it to a more remote section of the park. The drug only made the bison angry, leading rangers to believe they probably would have to destroy it, Ms. Anzelmo said.

"We have to keep the safety of visitors in mind first," she said.

Despite warnings, tourists frequently forget animals in the park are wild and can be dangerous if approached, she said.

"In this case, the visitors were just way too close to the animal," she said. "Those people are lucky."

In another confrontation Tuesday between a human and an animal, Robert Bramble, 26, of Arlington, Va., suffered puncture wounds and lacerations on an arm and leg when attacked by a large bear, probably a grizzly, park officials said.

Bramble was hiking alone when he encountered three bears, Ms. Anzelmo said. One bear charged Bramble, injuring him, she said. Park workers were looking for the bears.

Yellowstone National Park, the nation's oldest and largest national park, spans about 3,452 square miles in northwestern Wyoming and sections of Montana and Idaho.

Figures on animal attacks at Yellowstone were not available early today, but a park spokesman said such attacks are "not a frequent occurrence."

State may have to repay

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York State should be forced to return nearly $32 million in federal welfare funds because New York City made improper payments to landlords, utilities and other creditors, a federal audit says.

The report by the Department of Health and Human Services, alleges that the city did not follow rules which govern the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program.

AFDC money is usually paid in cash to parents or guardians of children in poor homes. In certain circumstances, federal law allows welfare agencies to make the payments directly to creditors if such payments are in the child's interest.

Madagascar poor

The latest statistics show that Madagascar, with a per capita gross national product of $330 in 1980, is one of the world's poorest countries.

Absence of pachyderms ruins opening of museum

WESTMINSTER, Calif. (AP) — It's bad enough that well-publicized invitations to the Queen of England were virtually ignored, but now this Orange County city can't even attract a couple of elephants for a day proclaimed on their behalf.

Earlier this year, city officials tried to get the queen to visit the city, citing its British name. But the royal entourage passed them by in February, sending only some British sailors instead.

So Westminster tried something else. It dreamed up having the country's first elephant museum.

The city proclaimed last Saturday "Elephant Day" and scheduled a festival to help raise funds and enthusiasm for the museum.

A retired California State Dominguez Hills professor donated the artifacts, while the city donated $5,000 and provided a former school auditorium to house displays.

Dr. Jack Adams, an expert in animal psychology who donated the animal artifacts, had arranged with a Riverside elephant owner to rent two female elephants for the day.

But as Saturday rolled around, the owner decided not to go through with the bargain, Adams said.

Without the pachyderms, attendance at the fundraiser was sparse — probably never more than a hundred at one time. "That was the whole thing, to have live elephants here to ride," Adams lamented.

Common sense, emotional balance can save marriage

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Here is a fascinating marriage story that is worth reading. It interestingly demonstrates what common sense and level headedness can accomplish.

Peale

In World War II, many marriages underwent severe strains when there were long separations, wives alone at home, soldier-husbands far away overseas. In one fairly typical case, a young husband stationed in England fell in love with an American Red Cross girl who was also stationed there. When the war ended, the soldier came back to his wife and told her that he was sorry, but he had met another girl, they had fallen in love, they were sure they were made for each other. He said he felt very badly about the way things had worked out, especially since he and his wife had two small children born before the war, but he wanted his wife to give him a divorce. He was sure that, under the circumstances, she would.

But the wife had had a Quaker upbringing, which meant that she had a quiet inner strength. She did not panic. She did not fly into a jealous rage. She told her husband that she knew him better than he knew himself. He was, she said, basically a good father and a good husband. That side of him would reassert itself someday. Until that day, she would simply wait. She would not give him a divorce.

The husband argued, he pleaded, he told the wife that he no longer loved her, that he loved the Red Cross girl. He said that by refusing to let him go, he was making them all miserable. He added that, being young and attractive, his wife would undoubtedly marry again. She replied that she already had a marriage. It was going through a difficult period, she admitted, but sooner or later it would come out the other side stronger than before. She could see that day clearly in her mind. She visualized the two of them going on with their lives raising their children, and perhaps having more. She imaged them in love again, this whole dark interlude forgotten. She said serenely that she believed this was God's plan for them. Therefore, she would not give him a divorce.

The husband departed, angry and frustrated. He went back to the Red Cross girl, who was waiting for him in her hometown. He told her that his wife would eventually stop being so stubborn. It was just a matter of time. He was in a difficult and humiliating position. All they had to do was wait.

So they waited. And waited. And waited. And gradually it became apparent to the Red Cross girl that she was the one who was in the humiliating position. Finally she told the husband that she was tired of waiting for the stubborn wife to step aside. The glamour was gone from their situation. She wanted a husband of her own, not a man anchored to another woman. She told him to get lost.

By this time the husband was beginning to have second thoughts himself. As his wife had said, there was a part of him that recognized his obligations to her and his children. And he also became increasingly conscious of deep emotional ties that he knew existed. He was impressed that his wife was really a great woman. Finally, sheepishly and contritely, he came back home. His wife welcomed him quietly. She was not surprised. It was all working out just the way she had imaged it. There were no recriminations. She took him back. And that marriage went forward successfully, saved by the emotional balance and good sense of a real woman who imaged her way through an ugly situation and came out triumphantly on the other side.

School graduates nine sets of twins

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — Everyone was doubly happy Tuesday at John F. Kennedy High School as nine sets of twins lined up to get their diplomas.

"It is quite confusing," said Principal John Hoagland who had the job of making sure the right twin got the right document. "I'm sure it's a lot easier for a classroom teacher who would see them every day in the same setting. But if you only see them periodically, as is my situation, it's confusing."

The twins said they were looking forward to graduation, but will miss the notoriety associated with their numbers.

"It's not going to be the group anymore," said one, Anthony Magaletta. "We're going to lose our importance."

Twin Renee Brown said there were three sets of twins in one class at times, but, "Sometimes they'll separate us in classes so they don't confuse us."

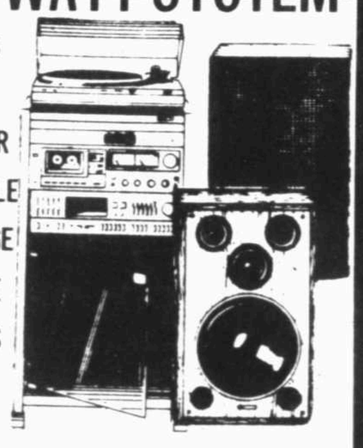

Michele Brown said the seven sets of identical twins and the two sets of fraternal twins in the class of 306 were the result of "a twin baby boom," but twin Janice Petroski said they were just "lucky."

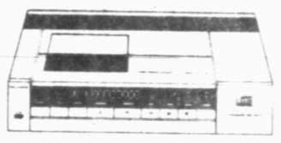

The twins interviewed said there was friendship but no romance among the pairs. And Renee Brown said all nine sets did not become friendly until this year, when they were photographed together for the school yearbook.

Patti Breining noted that most members of the group will go their separate ways after graduation and the coincidence that brought them together is likely to be remembered only at reunions.

South Texas oil hub suffers through another industry slump

ALICE, Texas (AP) — The energy business rollercoaster once again has plunged this South Texas oil and gas center into economic hard times, but those who've been down before say they've mastered the ride.

The industry's sudden slump early last year has hurt everyone, they say, but especially the amateurs who flocked to Alice to make a quick buck during the boom years of 1980 and 1981.

"I'd say history will show this is the worst time our industry has faced, and a lot of that is the speed at which it happened," said Burt Harkins, president of Harkins and Co. oil and gas drillers and contractors.

But Harkins, who has been in the business 38 years, said, "We know what it takes to survive in this time and we've taken the cost-cutting measures necessary, many of which we learned in the recessions of years ago."

Still, many drilling rigs sit idle as businesses wait for demand for their products to catch up with the oversupply.

Laborers who traveled up to 200 miles from Alice to work in the oil patches also have been left jobless or underemployed, while the rig service and supply businesses centered here are left with little to service or supply.

"Until this hit, if you lived in Alice, Texas, and were physically able to work, you could find a job," said Lowell Hunt, Southwest Energy Exposition board chairman and publisher of the Alice Echo-News.

"You could make $10 to $12 an hour and all the overtime you could handle," he said.

Now, the city's 10.1 percent unemployment rate, up from 4.9 percent in July 1981, "is the highest Alice has ever experienced," said Ralph Gomez, Alice Chamber of Commerce executive vice president.

Meanwhile, the city's share of retail sale tax revenues has slipped by 30 percent, while several businesses in the this town of 21,000 have failed.

Some say the unemployment figure probably would be higher if so many people had not left the area.

"A lot of people just flat moved off," Hunt said.

Commercial business loans at First City Bank are down 11 percent from last year, an indication that all is not well in the city, said Steve Hipes, executive vice president.

The oil business, according to Hunt, "has had a lot of ups and downs over the years but, according to the people in the patch, not this far down."

"Right now it's grim," said Gomez. "It's not something that Alice is used to so there's a tremendous amount of adjusting that has to be done. There's going to be a considerable amount of belt-tightening over the next year."

But, says Gomez, people who say these are the worst times ever for Alice "are comparing it to '80-'81 when (the energy business) had never been so good."

For example, the city's sales tax revenues, "which are tied directly to the oil fields," jumped 111 percent between 1979 and 1981, Gomez said.

"During the time of plenty, there was a lot of spending going on," he said.

Paul Hofmeier, manager of the local TG&Y store, said "big-ticket items" like television sets and stereos used to go to 16-year-olds who were looking for ways to spend the money they made in the oil fields.

That's not the case now, he said.

Experienced oilmen say the fly-by-night businessmen who jumped hastily onto the oil boom bandwagon three years ago are back where they should be.

"The shoe clerks that got into the business have disappeared because they didn't know it was cyclical," Harkins said. "They thought it was only straight up to the golden gates of the energy Fort Knox."

"Those that started late got caught with borrowed captial," said H.S. Shanks Jr., owner of H.S. Shanks and Son natural gas pipeline firm.

In most cases, financially responsible people generally are able to weather this thing because they do not overextend themselves when times are good," Hipes said.

Arguments summed up in murder case

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A prosecutor asked jurors to show courage by returning first-degree murder verdicts against a former prison guard accused of killing 13 people, but the defense claimed the man was insane, "a robot" pulling the trigger.

The case against George Banks goes to the jury today.

"The law demands justice," District Attorney Robert Gillespie Jr. said Monday in a closing argument.

"I ask no sympathy for the victims, but at the same time I ask for no sympathy for the defendant," he said. "Display your courage, and return guilty verdicts."

Al Flora Jr., speaking for the three court-appointed defense lawyers, urged compassion for the 40-year-old black defendant, charged with killing his five children, their four white mothers and four others in a pre-dawn shooting rampage last Sept. 25.

"He was a robot when he was pulling that trigger," Flora said. "He couldn't distinguish between right or wrong. He didn't understand the nature and quality of his acts."

Luzerne County Judge Patrick Toole told the jury of eight women and four men after the lawyers' summations that they should "maintain the spirit of impartiality" and avoid drawing any conclusions until he gives them his instructions on the law.

Midland student wins UIL award

Carol Neal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neal of 3600 Imperial, was named Outstanding Soloist at the University Interscholastic League Texas State Solo and Ensemble Contest in Austin. The annual state meet hosts 12,000 Texas high school band, vocal and orchestra soloists and ensembles. Each of the 13 judges chooses one outstanding performer.

Miss Neal, a 1983 graduate of Lee High School, was a member of the Lee High School band. She also was a member of the LHS orchestra and was named 1983 Orchestra Sweetheart.

She was recipient of the John Philip Sousa award and the United States Achievement Academy Band Award.

She was selected to the All-State Symphony Orchestra, All-State Band, All-Region Orchestra and All-Region Band.

She has received nine region solo and ensemble medals and four UIL state solo and ensemble medals.

She privately studied flute under Martha Davison in addition to the direction of LHS band director Randy Storie.

Draper plans to stay as House speaker

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Declaring he is being framed, House Speaker Dan Draper has asked his colleagues not to be "a party to a lynch mob" and try to punish him before his trial on vote fraud charges.

In a speech on the House floor Monday, Draper announced he plans to continue his duties as speaker despite a federal grand jury indictment returned against him last week in Muskogee.

He said he is innocent and is confident of being "totally vindicated."

Meanwhile, whether a Democratic caucus would be held to consider a move against Draper remained in doubt as the 39th Oklahoma Legislature headed into its final three days.

Rep. Howard Cotner, D-Altus, said he was not satisifed with Draper's statements and wanted a caucus to be held to request him to either resign or step aside temporarily.

But Rep. Robert Henry, caucus chairman, said he had not received enough interest from members to warrant calling a caucus.

Henry, D-Shawnee, said "one or two" House members had approached him about a meeting of Democrats but he felt "what was said today (Monday) cooled the desire that some had for a caucus."

Draper said he made the decision to continue in the post "knowing that there are members of this body who would do anything to see me removed. I hope the majority ... won't be a party to a lynch mob."

The Stillwater Democrat said his indictment Thursday came as no surprise because he had been told by sources in Muskogee that federal prosecutors "were attempting their best to frame me."

Draper, Rep. Joe Fitzgibbon, D-Miami, Barney Girdner and Faye Newton, both of Sallisaw, were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges alleging voter fraud in a Sept. 21 Adair County legislative runoff in which Draper's father was an unsuccessful candidate.

The speaker is accused of one count of conspiracy and nine counts of mail fraud. Fitzgibbon is accused of one conspiracy count and nine mail fraud counts.

Draper told his colleagues he considered all options, including stepping aside temporarily, and concluded it would be best to remain in office.

He noted there are only three days left in the legislative session and said taking leave from the post after adjournment would be "illogical."

Rep. Cal Hobson, D-Lexington, a Draper ally, said he thought the speaker "took appropriate action."

But Rep. David Riggs, Tulsa Democrat who has announced he will run for speaker next year, said he had hoped Draper would have stepped aside temporarily "to solve a big problem for the membership."

Riggs added, however, that he did not favor any ouster action because that "is tantamount to impeachment before a trial."

Draper said he felt giving up his duties, even temporarily, would be considered by some as an admission of guilt and would set a bad precedent.

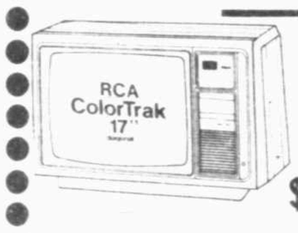

In the past, he said, officials who have been victims of "political prosecution and persecution" had made decisions to stay in office and were subsequently vindicated.

Houston businessman writes book on Hitler's art

CLUTE (AP) —History, believes Billy Price, should be complete and accurate above all else, "or why study it at all?"

That belief is one reason Price, a Houston businessman with a ranch in West Columbia, has spent the last six years putting together a book about Adolf Hitler's artwork, called "Adolf Hitler as Painter and Designer."

The book, already released in German, will be available in English sometime this summer.

Price's interest in Hitler and his art, a topic never before covered so extensively, stems from his education at a military academy and a lifelong fascination with World War II, he said.

"When I went to military school, we were in the age group where we were taught that we were to fight the Germans and we had to learn everything we could about them," said Price, 53, president of Price Compressor Co., Inc.

"So I became fascinated by Hitler, how he came to power, how he got his grip on mankind. That era of history has always fascinated me," he said.

PRICE SPENT two years in Germany during the Korean War, at which time he began to collect Hitler's artwork.

"I realized this was a subject that had never been covered thoroughly, that people always passed him over as being a poor artist. At first, I tried to hire someone to write the book for me, but most people didn't think there was enough material for a book. So I did it myself."

The 252-page book contains 825 paintings and drawings done by Hitler.

Because of the anti-Hitler sentiment in this country, Price has not yet found an American publisher to distribute his book.

"The book does not contain three words: 'Nazi,' 'Jew,' or 'politics.' And it does not say that Hitler was a good or bad artist...I said only one thing. This art was done by Hitler. It's true and authentic. You can make your own judgment," he said.

"Art was all he cared about — every day of his life, he mentioned something about art...While he was in office, everything he said was written down and transcribed, that's why we know that.

"HE ALWAYS said politics had interrupted his art career. He said when the war was over, he hoped to return to art, his main love...Yet in the history books, they never mention his artwork," Price said.

In addition to the 825 paintings and copies included in Price's book, there exist another 1,000 paintings not included because the owners didn't want them used. Authenticated Hitler works sell for $50,000-$700,000 today, Price said.

The works in Price's book were authenticated by two men to whom the book is dedicated: Peter Jahn, an art authority employed by the Nazis during Hitler's regime to document the dictator's art for German archives; and August Priesack, a Munich professor and authority who had to verify Hitler's handwriting and signatures on the paintings Jahn uncovered.

The paintings included in Price's book are not controversial. Hitler preferred drawing buildings and landscapes to people; the few figures he did draw are not in proper perspective.

TWENTY-FOUR paintings in the book belong to Price and are worth about $4 million. Price also owns four silver settings designed by Hitler for personal use and the eagle/swastika sculpture on which the Nazi emblem was modeled.

"Hitler designed all the dishes he used," Price said, "the uniforms for his men, all the medals they were awarded, the banners, the flags — he sketched them and designed them all. All the historic standards of that era were designed by Hitler."

The book is banned in Germany because the government claims Price does not have the copyrights to publish Hitler's work; the government owns it.

Price, who is suing the German government over the book banning, says that when Hitler died, his personal effects — his artwork — became the property of his sister Paula, who sold those rights to a Swiss man cooperating with Price in publication.

Politicians lecture voters on educational issues

By WALTER R. MEARS

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the time politicians begin warning that one issue or another should not become a political football, it already is. President Reagan and his Democratic critics are demonstrating that almost daily in the scrimmage over education.

The issue involves money, priorities and control in an area of concern to virtually every American voter. That would seem to make it the perfect topic for serious, substantive debate in the campaign for the White House.

It certainly will be a topic. Reagan and his would-be Democratic challengers already have seized the issue. How substantive the debate is another question.

Even as Reagan reissued the "political football" slogan, he told parents to start pressing the federal government for action — for a return to basics and old-fashioned American values in the schoolhouse.

"Send a message to Washington, D.C., and make it loud and clear," the president told the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in Albuquerque, N.M. "Tell them you want the basics back in your schools and the parents back in charge; tell them education must never become a political football because your children come first."

At the same time, Democratic presidential candidates were criticizing the administration and demanding that more federal money be put into public education.

For example, Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale proposes $11 billion in additional federal aid for education, $4.5 billion of it to be allocated by local school authorities. Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said every American teacher should get a $5,000-a-year pay raise financed by Washington. He estimated the cost at $14 billion a year.

Reagan opposes increased federal aid or involvement, contending that the schools were better before Washington got involved in the first place. He says the quality of public education suffered for the federal control that went with federal money.

The education issue has been there all along; public opinion analysts see it as a major topic of voter concern over the next decade. It became a prime topic of political debate after the National Commission on Excellence in Education issued a report that included calls for a longer school year, stricter curricula, and merit pay for outstanding teachers.

Reagan said he backed the entire report. The administration has not suggested how such steps should be financed.

The president is pushed hard on the merit pay proposal, which is opposed by the 1.6 million-member National Education Association, the largest teachers union. The NEA has been an influential force in Democratic presidential politics, and Mondale is courting its support in 1984.

Trees may emit chemical warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trees may warn each other of attacks by insects or disease by emitting a special chemical from their pest-ravaged leaves, according to preliminary evidence gathered by two researchers.

The two University of Washington researchers say their findings, if confirmed, could significantly change the understanding of trees' behavior, particularly in light of recent discoveries about how trees combat insects and disease.

Changes in the chemical composition of leaves by trees to ward off insects or diseases was discovered in sugar maples and oaks by a group of New Hampshire researchers last year.

The nutritional content of Sitka willow leaves also changed in trees that had suffered damage by western tent caterpillars and fall webworms, according to a report by the two Washington researchers, David F. Rhoades and Gordon H. Orians.

Medicare certifies home care agency

We Care Home Health Agency has received Medicare certification, according to Billie Ruppe.

Ms. Ruppe, a registered nurse and president of the agency, said the certification period is for a year. In Texas the federal Medicare program is administered by the state Department of Health, which serves as the official accrediting body.

According to Ms. Ruppe, a new agency can receive Medicare reimbursement payments only after proof can be shown that it is operating in compliance with state and federal laws. Yearly accreditation is mandatory for continued operation as a Medicare provider.

Sailors stride down a sidewalk in Key West, Fla., Tuesday, headed for pay phones, bars and restaurants as they begin liberty. They are among 2,200 Navy personnel and 1,800 Marines from the multinational peacekeeping force recently pulled out of Beirut.

Invasion 'Key' word for troops on liberty

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — After four months of keeping the peace in Lebanon, 4,000 U.S. troops came ashore on this subtropical island for some well-deserved liberty, including drinks, pizza and calls to the folks at home.

A 2½-week voyage across the Atlantic ended when five U.S. Navy ships carrying about 1,800 Marines and 2,200 sailors anchored off Florida's southernmost point at daybreak Tuesday.

Shortly after stepping ashore, Marine Cpl. Johnny LeFevers of Pineville, Ky., said his priority was to "find a drink." He added that he missed women most during the peacekeeping assignment in Lebanon.

"It was a bad situation over there. My personal opinion is it ain't going to get resolved. The only ones keeping peace are the Israelis," the 21-year-old serviceman said.

He and his service mates are being allowed ashore in groups of 1,500 each day until Thursday.

The servicemen had been in Lebanon as part of the Mideast peacekeeping forces since Feb. 14. They were replaced with fresh troops May 30.

Many of the first leathernecks ashore raced to pay telephones on the docks at Harry S. Truman Annex to call wives and families. Others headed for popular bars like Sloppy Joe's and Capt. Tony's Saloon.

Marine Pfc. James Cyrus, 20, of Columbus, Ohio, said he first wanted to call his mother and then get a pizza.

"Over there they have war — it's fighting every night," Cyrus said. "Over here you don't have to worry about it."

But rest and relaxation is only part of the duty for at least 1,400 of the troops — mostly high-level officers — who will participate in exercises aimed at simulating an evacuation of American civilians out of the Caribbean Islands, said Rear Adm. Ralph R. Hedges.

A Navy spokesman said the servicemens' visit would contribute $100,000 to the local economy, while the Greater Key West Chamber of Commerce estimated the figure at $400,000.

For many local residents, the visit was like old times, since this town, the southernmost in the contiguous United States, once had an active military role — particularly during World War II and the Cuban missile crisis 21 years ago.

"When I opened this bar 22 years ago, this is what the town was, military," said Tony Tarracino, owner of Capt. Tony's. "To watch these kids come in again is like a shot in arm. It's like being reborn."

Arms race 'crucial' this year

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The arms race could reach a "point of no return" this year if the superpowers' negotiations stay deadlocked and U.S. nuclear missiles are put in Western Europe, an international armament watchdog group warned today.

The Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, in its annual report, based its pessimism in part on the arms buildup sought by the Reagan administration.

"In the history of weapons procurement and deployment, certain years mark a new stage in the process of military confrontation. 1983 is such a year," the institute said.

"Once new deployments have been made, they are rarely reversed. They usually prgve to be 'points of no return.'"

Arms control progress could be set back "for a lengthy period" if current negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union fail and 572 U.S-built nuclear Pershing 2 and cruise missales join the NATO arsenal at the end gf the year, the report said.

But if the talks succeed, "the way will be open for progress towards more radical reductions in weapon numbers," the institute said.
