Joblessness 'holding'

By PETE YOST
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON — The nation's civilian unemployment rate held at 7.3 percent in May for the fourth straight month, the longest stagnant period in at least 14 years, the Labor Department reported today.

Manufacturing employment fell by 28,000, the fifth straight monthly decline. Since the start of the year, some 163,000 manufacturing jobs have been lost.

But the economy overall created 345,000 jobs in May, with virtually all the gain in the services sector. Some 111,000 of those jobs were health- or business-related.

At the same time, the overall unemployment rate amoung young men, traditionally one of the strongest labor pools for manufacturing, was up. The jobless rate for those aged 20-24 rose 1.2 percentrage points to 12.5 percent.

And for teen-agers, the rate rose from 17.7 to 18.9 percent, due primarily to rising joblessness among college-age youths.

A Labor Department check of records going back to 1971 showed no period when unemployment had stayed the same for four months running. However, department analysts say there have been numerous times in that period when the labor picture has been relatively stagnant.

Indeed, civilian joblessness has been moving in the narrow range of 7.1 percent to 7.5 percent for the last year.

The number of unemployed Americans totaled 8.4 million in May, the level that has held since February.

Construction employment rose by 30,000 while the weakest segments of manufacturing, electrical equipment and clothing, fell by 24,000.

After 30 months of the economic recovery, manufacturing has regained only about 60 percent of the jobs lost during the 1981-82 recession, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said in congresional testimony today.

In fact, employment levels in six industries are below what they were during the recession. Those industries are steel, tobacco, textiles, chemicals, leather and petroleum and coal.

The predominant job growth during the recovery has been in service industries, Ms. Norwood noted. "Since May of last year, nearly nine out of every 10 new jobs have been in that sector," she told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Today's report showed these unemployment rates for May:

—Adult men, 6.1 percent, down from 6.3 percent.

—Adult women, 6.9 percent, up from 6.8 percent.

—Teen-agers, 18.9 percent, up from 17.7 percent.

—Whites, 6.2 percent, down from 6.3 percent.

—Blacks, 15.6 percent, up from 15.3 percent.

—Hispanics, 10.7 percent, up from 10.3 percent.

An alternate unemployment rate, combining the 115.3 million-member civilian labor force with the roughly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, also stayed the same, at 7.2 percent.

The civilian rate hit a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in November 1982, dropped to 7.2 percent in June, then went up before falling to 7.1 percent in November, the low point since the recession.

Some 11.9 million people were out of work when the rate hit that post-Depression peak.

In the 30 months of recovery through May, the number of jobless people has been cut by 3.5 million and the jobless rate has declined 3.4 percentage points.

In all, some 106.9 million civilians held jobs last month, a slight gain.

Some economists are concerned that manufacturing employment could drift downward even further in the next few months and that the jobless rate will continue to hang in a narrow range above 7 percent.

A 7 percent-plus unemployment figure at this stage in the economic recovery is high by historical standards.

Average American earns three-fourths of income

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Americans receive an average of about one-tenth of their income from government programs, more than three-quarters of their money is obtained the old fashioned way — they earn it.

A new Census Bureau report shows government programs constitute the second largest source of income for American households, trailing earnings but ahead of such things as interest, dividends and private pension payments.

On average, the report said, of every $100 received by the an American household, $77.50 is from wages or salary.

In addition, it said, $10.70 is from government programs, $7.70 from interest, dividends and property rent; $1.50 from company and union pensions, 80 cents from such things as child support and alimony, and $1.80 from miscellaneous other sources.

The financial impact of government programs, as expected, varied dramatically according to the average income of a household.

For example, households averaging under $7,200 a year received more than half of their income from government programs, while those receiving $60,000 or more obtained only 2.5 percent of it from the government.

The study of economic characteristics of households estimated that the nation's 84 million households had average monthly incomes of $2,261 in the second quarter of last year.

Men killed in separate incidents

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Two Midland men were shot to death in unrelated incidents overnight, and suspects in both murders were in custody this morning, according to reports from the Midland County Sheriff's Office and the Midland Police Department.

Jerry Dale Inskeep, 28, was found dead in his mobile home in southeast Midland County about 10:45 p.m Thursday after a neighbor heard gunshots and called the Sheriff's Office.

Inskeep had been shot in the head with a high-powered rifle, apparently after a domestic dispute, according to reports. A 23-year-old Midland woman arrested at the scene was being held in Midland County Jail this morning, and murder charges were expected to be filed against her later today.

Inskeep's body was found in the living room of a mobile home at space five of the Henley Mobile Home Park near the intersection of County Road 140E and County Road 715. He was employed by Saxon Oil as a pumper, according to reports.

At 12:55 this morning, Midland police heard shots near the intersection of Lee Street and Illinois Avenue, just east of downtown. After a half-hour search of the area they found the body of 23-year-old Donald Ray Holloway lying about 10 feet from the railroad tracks near the 900 block of Front Street. Holloway, 307 S. Lamesa Rd., had been shot more than once, according to police.

At about 3 a.m., police arrested a 41-year-old Midland man at an apartment in the 200 block of South Jefferson Street. The man was being held in city jail this morning, and was expected to be charged with Holloway's murder later today.

The shooting apparently followed an argument between the two men, according to police.

Holloway and Inskeep were both pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Robert O. Pine.

Two feared drowned in Texas flooding

Associated Press

Two persons were missing and feared drowned in the wake of flash flooding following heavy rains that drenched a vast area of Texas, sending water over roads and families fleeing from rising flood waters.

A boy was missing and feared drowned after he vanished while playing in a rain-swollen creek in Wichita Falls and a 19-year-old youth disappeared while walking along a spillway in North Central Texas.

Police were to resume their search today for Paul Delaney, 12, who apparently drowned while playing with another boy in a creek in Wichita Falls Thursday evening.

The boys were floating on an innertube when Delaney was caught in the current, the Wichita Falls Times-Record-News reported today.

About 30 miles southwest of Wichita Falls, authorites planned to resume their search today for Steve Bitner, 19, of Archer City. Bitner was walking across the Lake Kickapoo spillway when he was swept into the pool below Thursday night, Archer County authorities said.

Creeks in Wichita Falls spilled over their banks Thursday afternoon forcing some residents from their homes.

James Manning, Red Cross disaster action team coordinator, said at least 30 people had signed in at the city's Red Cross shelter Thursday night, and more are expected as floodwaters continue to rise.

In the Texas Hill Country, residents were rescued from rooftops and others were pulled from vehicles at low-water crossings after torrential downpours flooded the area Thursday.

Heavy rains, some totaling 16 inches, were reported Thursday in parts of the Hill Country, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

Mobile homes near Wimberley were swept away by the Blanco River, and several vehicles were washed off roadways in Hays, Comal and Blanco counties, where the heaviest rainfall was recorded.

In San Antonio, a wildlife rehabilitation compound was heavily damaged by floods, and 20 to 40 animals were killed.

By Thursday evening, most creeks and rivers were again within their banks, but parts of Bulverde, 20 miles west of New Braunfels, were still isolated by receding floodwaters from the Cibolo Creek.

Texas National Guard troops on maneuvers near Bulverde rescued five residents from rooftops. A helicopter carrying a television press crew was used to rescue two sanitation workers whose truck was being swept away by floodwaters in Comal County near the Bexar County line.

Among those rescued was Lillian Conrey, who sang and discussed Bible scriptures with her two sons as they waited for help Thursday morning atop their home near the confluence of Cibolo and Indian creeks.

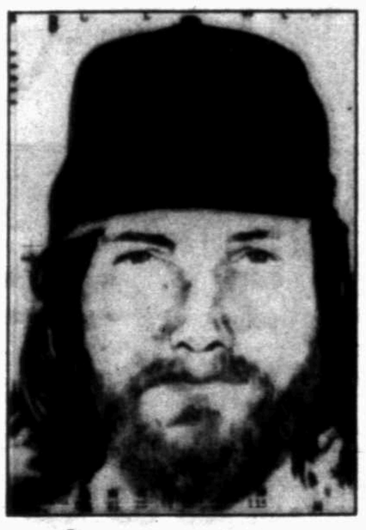
"We sat there with our umbrellas, our cat, and a ski belt on our dog," Conrey told the American-Statesman. "It was like being on an island in the middle of the lake, but not as fun."

The greatest amounts of rain hit south Blanco and western Comal counties near Twin Sisters, Spring Branch, and Bulverde.

Blanco County officials rescued a husband and wife after their vehicles were sucked into rushing waters that had broken the banks of the Little Blanco River, said Mark McMain, chief of the Blanco Volunteer Fire Department.

McMain said the couple, Fred and Louise Mullikin, was found clinging to a gate.

Hays County Sheriff Alfard Hohman said an Austin resident driving over the Five-Mile Dam on the Blanco River between San Marcos and Kyle was swept away in the fast-moving currents.



Odessa police and the FBI late Thursday afternoon released this composite picture of the man sought in connection with Thursday's daring noontime robbery of Odessa's Interfirst Motor Bank. Late this morning, the man was still being sought.

Lone gunman sought in Odessa bank robbery

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A lone gunman shortly after noon Thursday held up the teller of the motor bank walkup facility of InterFirst Bank here and left with an undisclosed amount of money.

According to Detective Lt. Marvin Crumrine, Odessa police and the FBI are cooperating in the investigation.

Based on information gathered by police and federal investigators, the man being sought, who may be accompanied by a woman, is variously described as having dirty blond to graying or reddish blond collar-length hair, a bushy moustache, and unshaven for about a week, with a scraggly beard. The suspect was initially described as shabbily dressed, wearing a brown jacket and a burnt orange colored baseball-type cap, with "Petco Fishing and Rental Tool" written on it. The cap later was found by investigating officers, according to Midland FBI agent in charge, Ron Butler.

Information gathered from witnesses, Butler said this morning, indicates the suspect is about 30 to 35 years old, five feet six to five feet 11 inches tall, weighing from 130 to 150 pounds. Butler also said the man may have been wearing a white T-shirt and blue jeans, instead of the brown jacket initially reported.

A news release issued late Thursday afternoon by Lt. Crumrine said the man approached the teller window of the walkup portion of the motor bank facility at East 7th Street and Jackson about 12:05 p.m., displayed a small caliber nickle-plated handgun and demanded money from the teller.

Former, current JP employees charged with misapplying funds

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — One former and a current employee of the Justices of the Peace office here were charged Thursday afternoon after sealed indictments were handed down Wednesday by an Ector County grand jury, ending more than three years of a Texas Rangers investigation of the office.

Late Thursday afternoon, a former employee, Audelia Sturgeon, 34, of 612 S. Crane, was arrested by sheriff's deputies and arraigned on a charge of misapplication of funds. The amount of money specified in the indictment was $175 and the misapplication allegedly occurred on or about May 5, 1982. Ms. Sturgeon was released on a $2,500 personal recognizance bond set by 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater after the indictments were returned Wednesday.

The second woman named in an indictment is 25-year-old Lupe Frances Rios, 1520 N. Sam Houston, who surrendered to authorities late Thursday afternoon. She also was arraigned on a charge of misapplication of funds and released on a $2,500 personal recognizance bond.

Du Pont's new process eliminates need to store, ship deadly chemical

LA PORTE (AP) — Du Pont Co. announced it is producing an insecticide using a new process that will eliminate the shipment and storage of methyl isocyanate, a lethal element that leaked from a plant in India and killed more than 2,000 people.

"We have made what was already a safe process even safer," said R.D. Stewart, manager of Du Pont's La Porte plant, the only U.S. facility where the insecticide Lannate is produced.

The original process used to manufacture Lannate required the shipment of a tank car of methyl isocyanate, or MIC, each week, Stewart said Thursday. He said MIC was shipped to the plant in specially built rail cars from the Union Carbide plant in Institute, W.Va.

MIC is the lethal element that killed hundreds in December when it leaked from a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India.

"At any one time we were storing approximately 250,000 pounds of MIC in above-ground, stainless steel tanks," Stewart said. "With our new process, we have eliminated the need to transport and store MIC."

Lannate, used by farmers worldwide to protect about 70 types of crops against as many as 125 different insects, now is being made by a process that involves a continuous, "close-coupled" system that produces MIC as a chemical intermediate that is instantly consumed, Stewart said.

The Du Pont Company's La Porte plant started up its new Lannate chemical manufacturing unit less than five months after construction began. It continuously produces methyl isocyanate, which is immediately made into methomyl, the active ingredient in Lannate.

AP Laserphoto

The MIC is not isolated as a separate raw material, but is converted into Lannate insecticide as it is produced, he said.

There is never more than two pounds of MIC in existence at the plant at one time, Stewart said.

Using the new system, air and the chemical compound monomethyl formamide flow into a reactor, where they are combined in a chemical reaction that produces MIC and water.

The water is removed and the MIC flows to another reactor through a seamless, stainless steel pipe. There, the MIC is consumed in a chemical process which produces Lannate. There is no MIC in the final product.

Stewart said scientists have been working since 1977 to develop the new system. It was perfected shortly before the Bhopal accident at a cost of about $15 million, he said.

Rates of private lines used by radio stations rise dramatically

WACO (AP) — Many Texas radio station managers and chief engineers have received a surprise this week in the mail — learning that their telephone bills for private transmission lines have increased 500 to 1,000 percent.

In addition, the stations were being billed for three months at one time, instead of one month, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported.

Private, or "dedicated" telephone lines, are used by radio stations to broadcast events ranging from church worship services on Sunday to athletic and news events.

The stations also subscribe to news services, including The Associated Press, over the wires.

Most television stations are not affected because they have satellite receivers to bypass telephone lines.

Although most of the radio stations said they had no prior warning of the rate increase, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. maintains it sent a letter dated April 26 for billing that started April 1, the Tribune-Herald reported.

The Federal Communications Commission requires that customers be notified in advance of rate increases. However, the company does not have to notify the customer of the size of the increase.

Judy Lancaster, business director of Waco's KBBW, was shocked to find a bill Monday that she said was a huge increase over previous rates for those lines.

"And it's for 2.8 months of service," she said. "Normally, the bill runs $164.90 a month. This one is for $1,125."

Mrs. Lancaster also said the station had not been notified of the rate increase.

"Every radio station relies on these lines," she said. "We will have to either quit using these or pass it (the cost) on to the consumer."

"My feeling is they could have been specific," said Dave Fricker, chief engineer for six radio stations in Central Texas. "The notification came after the billing started. It might be legal, but it's not ethical. Since the phone company has the wires in hand, they can unplug you."

Fricker is chief engineer for WACO, KHOO, KRZI, KNFO, KIXS and KIIZ.

Music commission finds 'home with the armadillos'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Music Commission began Texas's newest state agency with the signature of Gov. Mark White on a bill passed by the recent Legislature.

Afterwards, White joined Austin country singer Gary P. Nunn in a few bars of "London Homesick Blues."

The commission was created to promote all types of music in Texas, from symphony to jazz.

"This is the kind of bill I like to see come across my desk — it doesn't cost the state a single penny," White said Thursday. "The Texas Music Commission will be funded by a private non-profit foundation."

White said Texans are the biggest buyers of music in the nation.

"More money is spent on commercial music in Texas than in any other state," he said. "Texas is a strong market because of its astronomical growth, wide open spaces that create a market for the state's 600 radio stations and because of the cultural diversity of its citizens."

The governor said he has heard that "when this bill was being discussed in the Legislature, that it was an attempt to bring Nashville to Texas."

"Well, what's wrong with that?" White asked.

Officer: Man said he was Quintero's friend

HOUSTON (AP) — A 43-year-old Houston man bragged during a drug deal with an undercover officer that he is an associate of Rafael Caro-Quintero, who is accused in the death of a federal drug agent, the officer testified.

During the $1 million drug deal, Carlos Ivan Orozco boasted that he distrubutes cocaine in the United States for the "Quintero cartel," Michael Spasaro, an officer with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, said Wednesday.

Rafael Caro-Quintero has been charged by Mexican authorities in the February abduction and killing of DEA agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and pilot Alfredo Zavala.

Court documents allege the Guadalajara-based Quintero gang, led by Caro's uncles, run a Mexican drug network that smuggles cocaine, heroin and marijuana into the United States. They have not been charged with any drug violations.

The cartel has been the subject of a two-year investigation by a Houston-based Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force.

During a hearing Wednesday before U.S. Magistrate Calvin Botley, Spasaro said Orozco agreed to buy nearly seven pounds of cocaine and was making plans to purchase an additional 66 pounds.

Spasaro said that during the negotiations, Orozco discussed the February slaying.

"He said he was personal close friends with two of (Caro's) uncles. We talked about their problems with the killing of the agent and all the heat they're feeling," Spasaro said.

Orozco claimed he was a distributor for a drug gang in Miami.

Federal agents seize $43 million worth of cocaine

HEBBRONVILLE (AP) — Narcotics agents say they have seized the largest amount of cocaine ever in the Rio Grande Valley, an 846-pound, $43 million payload confiscated from a gasoline tanker truck.

"It shows the trend that traditional smuggling routes are no longer coming through south Florida but shifting into Mexico and Texas," U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration Agent Jack Wagner said.

U.S. Border Patrol agents stopped a 55-foot tanker truck at a checkpoint about 6 a.m. Thursday after receiving a tip from U.S. Customs and DEA agents.

The 846 pounds of cocaine and 127 pounds of marijuana, worth some $40,000, were in the tank of the truck, Wagner said. The driver of the truck, Manuel Aleman, 36, of New Braunfels, was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and marijuana, Wagner said.

He said four others, believed to be part of the smuggling operation, were arrested at a ranch near El Sauz, about 15 miles northwest of Rio Grande City, in Starr County.

Reagan's tax overhaul contains controversial ideas

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who in the past has suggested abolishing the corporate income tax and letting the government figure out individuals' tax bills, has incorporated elements of both ideas in his proposal to overhaul the income tax system.

Reagan's unconventional views about the federal income tax system have sparked controversy in the past. But in their present form, the proposals have hardly caused a ripple as Reagan has flown around the country campaigning for a fundamental rewrite of the tax code.

Two years ago, in a panel discussion with a group of corporate executives, Reagan complained that taxing companies' profits and individuals' dividends was really just double taxation of corporate earnings.

"I realize that there will be a great stirring and I'll probably kick myself for having said this," Reagan said, "but when are we all going to have the courage to point out that in our tax structure the corporate tax is very hard to justify its existence?"

Pursued by reporters, Reagan added, "I said it was something that we ought to look at because there isn't really a justification for it."

But when protests began to flood the White House, Reagan quickly backed off, saying he had predicted he would kick himself for raising the issue — and he had.

In the tax plan he presented last week, the president proposed to increase, rather than abolish, revenues from corporate income taxes. But he would add a provision permitting corporations to deduct 10 percent of the dividends they pay stockholders as partial relief from what the White House called "the double taxation of corporate earnings distributed as dividends."

During his re-election campaign last year, Reagan offered another impromptu suggestion that seemed at the time like an even more radical plan for changing the income tax system.

"The government has the nerve to tell the people of this country, 'You figure out how much you owe us — and we can't help you because our people don't understand it either — and if your make a mistake, we'll make you pay a penalty for making the mistake.'"

"We think we ought to be able to send you a bill and tell you what you owe, not the other way around," Reagan said.

James Wetzler, chief economist for Congress' bipartisan Joint Committee on Taxation, said the United States had "no mechanism to collect the tax" if people didn't figure their own bills and mail in what they owed.

And Tom Field, a Washington tax analyst and publisher of the newsletter Tax Notes, said the cost of setting up an office to calculate people's income taxes "would be on the magnitude of the Pentagon budget."

Field also said taxpayers would object to the government's invasion of their privacy, adding that if Reagan "really thought about it, he would recoil at the suggestion."

White House spokesmen refused to explain what Reagan had in mind, and officials speaking on condition they not be identified said they knew of no effort within the administration to flesh out Reagan's idea.

But when Reagan's tax plan "for fairness, growth and simplicity" was published last week, it contained a proposal for what was called a "return-free system" in which the Internal Revenue Service would, "at the election of each eligible taxpayer, compute the taxpayer's liability based on withholding and information reports provided to the Internal Revenue Service currently."

Although the plan at first would be available only to those with the simplest tax situations — single wage earners with uncomplicated financial transactions — the administration predicted that by the mid-1990s it could be extended to more than half of all individual taxpayers.

By calculating how much people owe based on W2 forms and reports of interest and dividend payments already required by the IRS, the administration estimated: "The return-free system would save taxpayers annually approximately 71 million hours in actual return preparation and $1.6 billion in fees paid to professional tax preparers."

The president's proposal noted, however, that it would be up to the taxpayer to decide whether to let the IRS figure out how much he or she owed, "and the taxpayer would be free to challenge the Internal Revenue Service's calculation of tax."

Analysis of skull, bones begins

EMBU, Brazil (AP) — Police have exhumed a body they believe may be that of Josef Mengele, the Nazi doctor known as the "Angel of Death," and have begun the lengthy task of analyzing the skull, bones, and shreds of cloth.

Jose Antonio de Mello, director of the Sao Paulo morgue, held the skull high for hundreds of onlookers to see when the remains were disinterred Thursday at Embu, 17 miles from Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city.

"There are extremely strong indications that we have the man we're looking for here," Federal Police Chief Romeu Tuma said.

Mengele, who would be 74, is accused of sending hundreds of thousands of people, mostly Jews, to their deaths at Auschwitz concentration camp and for his sinister experiments on those who were not sent to the gas chambers.

Prominent Nazi hunters were skeptical of the report.

In New York, Simon Wiesenthal said: "In my opinion, (it's) 99 percent that this body is not the body of Dr. Josef Mengele. When his wife says he's dead, when the family will say he is dead, when his lawyer says he's dead, I will believe it."

Paris lawyer Serge Klarfeld said: "If Mengele were dead, his family would be in a hurry to make it known in order to settle an important inheritance and the German courts would be immediately aware."

Menachem Russek, head of the Israel police war crimes unit, said in a radio interview today he was convinced the report was false.

Frankfurt lawyer Fritz Steinacker, who represents Mengele's family, said: "I represent Mengele's interests, but all I know about his alleged death is what I read in the newspapers."

Hans Eberhard Klein, a West German prosecutor taking part in the search for Mengele, said today that the search will continue "as long as there is no positive and sure ascertainment of what happened to Josef Mengele."

He said three West German criminal experts who flew to Brazil Tuesday took along Mengele's dental records, "probably taken by an SS doctor in Auschwitz in 1938."

"But it's still too little (for identification)," Klein said, adding that authorities had no records of Mengele's bone structure.

Heinz Haneisen, chief prosecutor in charge of West Germany's search for Mengele, had said Thursday that no dental records existed. There was no immediate explanation for the apparent discrepancy.

Brazilian police said they were led to a weed-covered grave in Embu by information from West German investigators. Gino Carita, former administrator of the cemetery, told The Associated Press that a man he knew as Wolfgang Gerhard was buried there in the same grave as his mother, Friderieke Gerhard. The gravestone bears only her name.

Haneisen said in Frankfurt a review of files turned up clues that led to Guenzberg, Mengele's hometown in Bavaria. Police seized documents there that led them to Brazil, he said.

Bone and skull fragments removed from a Brazilian grave have stirred strong reaction, with some affirming and some denying they are proof of Jospeph Mengele's death.

Nazi hunter Wiesenthal has 'doubts'

NEW YORK (AP) — Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal refuses to believe that a body exhumed in Brazil is that of war criminal Josef Mengele, the infamous "Angel of Death" of the Auschwitz concentration camp.

"In my opinion, (it's) 99 percent that this body is not the body of Dr. Josef Mengele," Wiesenthal said Thursday, arriving from Vienna for a 10-day visit in the United States.

"When his wife says he's dead, when the family will say he is dead, when his lawyer says he's dead, I will believe it," he said. "I have real doubts.

"Why? Because for the family, (it) will be a salvation when they can say Dr. Mengele is dead because they had so many troubles. When the family will say, 'Yes we know he is dead, I will believe it.'"

Wiesenthal and other Nazi hunters said the Brazilian report may be an attempt to throw off trackers off the scent of the infamous "Angel of Death," who is wanted for World War II atrocities at the Auschwitz death camp.

"I don't believe it. I don't believe it. The whole matter can be a fabrication from his friends," Wiesenthal said.

"We have received a number of false informations from former Nazis or from their sympathizers ... not only with Mengele, but with other Nazis when it is known that we are looking for them," Wiesenthal said.

He said he believed Mengele, who would be 74, was still alive in Paraguay.

"Why Paraguay? Because for 31 years (there has been) no revolution in this country ... (and it has) a big German population, a big Arab colony and only a very, very small number of Jews live there," he said.

Police in Embu, Brazil, exhumed a body Thursday they believe is Mengele's, but authorities said it could take at least two weeks to identify the remains, reportedly those of a man who drowned in 1979.

Associates of Wiesenthal in tracking down Nazi war criminals said they also were "extremely skeptical" the body found in Brazil was Mengele's.

Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, said the report conflicted with other leads. Hier, in a telephone interview, said "credible information" has placed Mengele at various locations since 1979.

Among those leads, said Rabbi Abraham Cooper, assistant dean of the center, were reports from "serious and credible sources" indicating Mengele has been seen alive in South America.

Cooper, in Los Angeles, said he had "information from Germany that immediate relatives of Mengele had telephone contact with him within the last 10 months."

Israeli police official doesn't believe reports Mengele dead

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The head of the Israeli police war crimes unit said today he believed reports that Nazi doctor Josef Mengele drowned in Brazil six years ago are untrue.

"I don't take these things seriously. I am convinced it's not true," said Menachem Russek, head of the unit that compiles testimony about Nazi war criminals.

Russek said in an Israel Army Radio interview that there had been previous reports of Mengele's death, and that none of them had been confirmed.

A spokesman for the Justice Ministry, which is in charge of Israel's efforts to trace Mengele and bring him to trial, refused to comment on the report.

Russek joined other leading Nazi hunters who expressed doubt over reports that Mengele's body may have been found.

Police in Brazil on Thursday exhumed a body they said they believed was Mengele's. They said he drowned in February 1979 and was buried under an assumed name.

Baby animals drown as flood damages refuge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Heavy rains washed out a wildlife rehabilitation compound here killing several baby animals and causing an estimated $100,000 worth of damage, a spokeswoman said.

"We lost literally everything," said Pat Rogers, media coordinator for the Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation Inc., in northest San Antonio.

The compound's new nursery was swept away by flood waters from a rain-swollen creek late Wednesday night, Ms. Rogers said Thursday. Equipment, cages, the entire food supply and records were destroyed or washed away.

Flash floods swept the Lone Star State on Wednesday after torrential downpours dumped several inches of rain in just a few hours. Mobile homes were swept into a river in Hays County, while thunderstorms swelled creeks and rivers in the Austin area.

About 200 animals were at the wildlife compound when flood waters hit the refuge Wednesday night. Ms. Rogers said 20 to 40 of them were killed, including baby opossums, foxes, fawns and a baby skunk all housed in the nursery.

"We lost a lot of the babies that we had," she said. "Most of the babies are dead that we know of. There are a few that are missing."

The seven-year old compound offers refuge to wild animals unable to live in their natural habitat, and others are rehabilitated so they can return to the wild.

Most of the rescued animals were taken to another compound, while two cougars and a jaguar were being housed at the San Antonio Zoo's health center, she said.

A creek near the compound started overflowing about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, and overflowed again Thursday about noon, she said.

Damage to the compound is in excess of $100,000, she said.

Volunteers worked through the night trying to rescue all the animals. Some that could fend for themselves were released, but Ms. Rogers said no dangerous animals were set free.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning Thursday afternoon for Bastrop, Caldwell, Hays, Bexar, Comal and Guadalupe counties.

The heaviest rains were reported to be in Comal County in the Hill Country, and several roads in the Hill Country were closed due to high water.

More than seven inches of rain fell at Denison in North Texas before the storms cleared out and moved east Thursday. Up to five inches of rain fell late Wednesday and early Thursday in the area just north of San Antonio, and another 1.5 inches fell at San Antonio International Airport in an hour's time Thursday afternoon.

INCOME

Households maintained by an individual aged 65 or over averaged $1,440 per month, the study said, but the 6.4 million elderly women living alone averaged only $780 a month. Monthly Social Security payments averaged $560 for the 23.5 million recipient households.

The Census study found that white households averaged $2,356 a month, compared to $1,480 for blacks and $1,735 for Hispanic households.

Households headed by a woman, with no husband present and including children under age 18, had average income of $1,130 a month.

Government assistance programs based on income provided aid to 13.6 percent of white households, the study said, 44.1 percent of blacks and 36.2 percent of Hispanics.

Social Security was by far the most important government source of income reported, providing $7 of the $10.70 attributed to government sources per $100 income in the average household.

Other programs listed included federal government pensions, 80 cents; state and local government pensions, 80 cents; military pensions, 70 cents; Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other cash assistance, 60 cents; Veterans Administration, 40 cents; Supplemental Security Income, 40 cents.

Those are averages, and it is unlikely any particular family received income from all listed sources in those proportions.

The report is based on a sample study of 20,000 families conducted by the Census Bureau and is part of a continuing series of studies known as the Survey of Income and Program Participation.

While the average of all households was for earnings to provide $77.50 of every $100 in income, earnings amounted to only $20.40 per $100 for families with total income under $7,200 a year, the report said.

Those low-income households received $68.20 from government sources, $7.70 from non-government sources such as company or union pensions, and $3.70 miscellaneous sources.

The share of income provided by earnings rises steadily, and that from government programs declines, as total income level rises.

For example, in the $24,000 to $36,000 income bracket, $100 in household income was generally divided into $82.80 from earnings, $8.50 from government programs, $7.20 from non-government sources and $1.50 miscellaneous.

That group's non-government sources included $5.20 from interest and dividends, up from $3.70 for the lowest income group.

Moving up to households with income ranging from $48,000 to $60,000 annually, earnings comprise $87.10 of every $100 while government programs provide only $4.30. These households receive $7.50 from non-government sources, including $6.30 from interest and dividends.

ROBBERY

The teller, who was not identified, handed an undisclosed amount of money to the armed man and he ran in a southeasterly direction away from the drive-in bank.

Subsequent information released by authorities indicates the woman believed accompanying the holdup man may be named either Linda or Gail and that a white and red 1959 Chevrolet pickup in bad condition or, possibly, a pink to light pink Ford LTD may have been involved in the bank holdup.

According to the FBI's Butler, the man sought as a suspect in the aggravated robbery may have been named "Taylor or Tyler."

Crumrine asked that anyone having information concerning the suspect should notify Odessa police or the FBI office in Midland.

Millions spent to finish condos

DALLAS (AP) — The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. has spent $10 million to complete unfinished condominium projects stranded by the collapse of a Mesquite savings and loan association, government officials say.

An FSLIC spokesman in Washington said the agency expects to spend another $15 million to finish the 2,900 condominiums, which were financed by Empire Savings & Loan Association of Mesquite along Interstate 30 in eastern Dallas County.

The agency began taking control of Empire-financed properties through foreclosure sales that began June 5, 1984.

The FSLIC was appointed as the receiver for Empire when the association was closed March 14, 1984, for "unsafe and unsound" lending practices in the financing of thousands of condominiums.

Empire had about $340 million in loans on its books when it was closed, FSLIC spokesman Doug Green said.

CHARGES

The indictment against her alleges she misapplied $160 in funds from the Justices of the Peace office accounts.

Alleged shortages were discovered in the JP offices from the latter part of 1981 to the early part of 1982. An investigation was initiated by the Ector County sheriff's office but was subsequently turned over to the Texas Rangers.

A former justice of the peace has indicated the discovered shortages involved several thousand dollars, but the indictments returned by the grand jury do not reflect this. As yet, there has been no explanation as to why the investigation took so long.

Gorilla's hospital visit reveals blockage

DALLAS (AP) — When motherhood eluded Demba the gorilla after three years of mating, zoo officials checked her into a human hospital to find out why.

The diagnosis: blockage in the Fallopian tubes, which carry the egg from the ovaries to the uterus, was prohibiting conception despite the attentions of her mate, Fubo.

A team of medical specialists spent almost two hours Thursday examining the reproductive system of the 14-year-old, 200-pound ape. Their diagnosis was bad news for Dallas Zoo officials, said zoo spokesman Bill Stewart.

"The staff has to go back to the drawing board to discuss our alternatives, if there are any," Stewart said. He said it was not clear if the problem could be remedied.

"There are only a few thousand gorillas left in Africa and their natural habitats are shrinking rapidly."

The animal is on the endangered species list and the number of gorillas born in captivity is declining by about 5 percent to 10 percent a year, he said.

Demba has lived for the past three years with Fubo, who has been on loan for breeding from Cheyenne Zoo in Colorado Springs, Colo. But their efforts at producing a family had been fruitless.

After being sedated Thursday, Demba was transported with a park police escort from the Dallas Zoo and then wheeled on a stretcher into a ground floor entrance of Parkland Memorial Hospital.

During the procedure, known as a hysterosalpingogram, dye is injected into the Fallopian tubes. If the dye spills into the pelvic area, the tubes are open. If not, the tubes are blocked and the patient is unable to conceive.

Tubal blockage is usually the reason most human females cannot conceive, said Dr. George Curry, chief of diagnostic radiology at the hospital.

Agriculture department closes 10 grain elevators

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten Panhandle grain elevators, including two that were short on grain, have been closed by the Texas Department of Agriculture, an agency official said Thursday.

No grain will be permitted to move in or out of the Oles Grain Co., elevators without state approval, said Darrell Ketchum, the agriculture department's director of grain warehouse licensing.

Oles elevators in Spearman and Perryton were between 8 and 10 percent short of the grain reportedly in storage, he said. The other eight elevators were shut down because owner David Oles did not have the required licensing bond, Ketchum said.

The company must post a $500,000 bond to cover any losses in the licensing year that began June 1.

Ketchum also said creditors filed involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against the company Wednesday in federal court in Lubbock.

Teachers' tests discussed

AUSTIN (AP) — Final arrangements for basic reading and writing tests to be taken next spring by about 210,000 Texas public school teachers and administrators are on the agenda today for a committee of the State Board of Education.

The 15-member board will vote on the Committee for Personnel's recommendations Saturday.

The major school reform act passed by the 1984 special session of the Legislature requires all teachers and local administrators to pass a basic skills test by June 30, 1986.

The tests are expected to be administered for the first time on three dates in March and again in May of 1986.

The Committee for Students has scheduled a public hearing on proposed changes in time allocations for teaching specific subjects in grades 4 through 6.

Films banned from schools

VIDOR (AP) — After a flap over "R"-rated films, school board members in this small Southeast Texas community changed a new teaching materials policy Thursday.

The revised rule bans movies rated "R" or "PG" from the classroom.

The policy also says the principal must select supplemental classroom materials such as movies on the basis of suitability, relevance and educational value.

The change was made after a two former school board candidates complained that Vidor Junior High School students had been shown pornographic films.

The former candidates objected specifically to screenings of "Whose Life Is It Anyway," "Clash of the Titans" and "Growing Up Stoned."

TV copter rescues men

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A helicopter rescued two men from the top of a garbage truck stranded in a rain-swollen creek Thursday.

The men were spotted by a crew from KSAT-TV on a farm road in Comal County near the Bexar County line, said KSAT-TV reporter Paul Venema.

Venema said a helicopter carrying a second television crew was called in to rescue the stranded men. He said helicopter pilot Steve Tanner lowered the craft between power lines and trees to get to the two men.

Lufkin reporter trails can-tab rumor to Ohio

LUFKIN (AP) — After Robbie Click heard a sad story about an Amarillo girl who had kidney disease, she pulled out a coffee can and began saving her aluminum can tabs.

The Lufkin woman had heard that an Amarillo bank was donating one minute of time on a dialysis machine for every tab turned in.

Mrs. Click spread the word. Soon the Lufkin schools maintenance and food service departments were doing their part, as well as workers and students at Stephen F. Austin State University in nearby Nacogdoches.

The catch was no one knew where to send the tabs.

Neither did anyone in Amarillo. They had never heard the story.

Was the story Mrs. Click heard just a rumor?

Lufkin Daily News city editor Phil Latham decided to find out. He followed the tab trail across Texas to Ohio, where a man is actually collecting can tabs in hopes of raising money for his fiancee's kidney dialysis treatments by taking the tabs to recycling centers.

The man, Mark Simons of Batavia, Ohio, says he has "tons" of tabs.

"I don't believe this," Simons said. "How in the world could people in Texas have heard about this?"

Latham picked up the trail in Pasadena, where Mildred Williams had made an announcement at a camper club meeting attended by Mrs. Click.

"It's not Amarillo," she said. "It's a little girl in Dumas. It's a bank in Dumas that will pay for one minute of time for each ring tab given."

But no one in Dumas could tell Latham about the charity effort.

Weston Futrell, president of Dumas' First State Bank, confirmed that his ring tabs went in the trash.

Mrs. Williams said she heard the story at a state meeting of the National Campers and Hikers Association at Lake Palestine earlier this year. The announcement was made so that campers from all over Texas would begin saving tabs for minutes of dialysis.

Since that time, the Williams, who have a large box of their own full of tabs, have been making the announcement everywhere they go.

Mrs. Williams was getting ready to address her full box to Orin and Wanda Rehkoph of Dumas.

The Rehkoph connection produced information that the patient, supposedly named Glenda and 19 years old, was now in Ohio, but had once belonged to the Sunray Church of Christ, where F.I. Stanley is pastor.

Stanley had heard of the drive, and he sent Latham to Randy Quirk, who said she and her husband have sent thousands of tabs to Ohio, also under the belief that each tab bought a minute of time on the dialysis machine.

The Quirks Ohio connection was Kathy and Mark Taylor, who live in Oxford.

Mrs. Taylor acknowledged receiving the Texas tabs, and even admitted being the one who transmitted the drive to Texas when she was visiting Sunray, her hometown.

"I just give them to Donna Layman," she said. "I think it's a friend of her family who is getting the dialysis."

Miss Layman, a softball coach and health teacher at Valley View High School in Germantown, Ohio, said the ring tabs she gets go to her sister-in-law Toni Layman, who gives them to her brother

Toni Layman, who lives in Mount Orab, Ohio, knew a little more.

"We're collecting them for my brother's girlfriend who lives in Cincinnati," she said. "Her name is Linda something."

Her brother is Mark Simons, who works at a beer distributorship in Batavia, Ohio.

The tabs stop at Simons

"I have tons of these things," he said, "and I can't find anywhere to turn them in."

As many as he has, he said he never knew how many people were helping his fianceee.

"I never dreamed this," he said. "I never thought people in Texas would hear about this and start a drive."

Dallas prepares for deluge of Southern Baptists

DALLAS (AP) — Hotel bartenders are stocking up on non-alcoholic drinks and Christian bookstores are discounting the price of Bibles as Dallas prepares for 40,000 Southern Baptists who come to town for their annual convention next week.

Amid an expected fight between fundamentalist and moderate factions within the denomination, guests are expected to spend at least $4.7 million during the three-day session, the Dallas Chamber of Commerce predicts.

"The Baptists are going to dump a lot of money on Dallas," said Dan Martin, news director for the Baptist Press, official news service for the Southern Baptist Convention in Nashville, Tenn.

The session which begins Tuesday should bring 32,000 "messengers" or voting delegates to Dallas and another 8,000 to 12,000 guests.

Although the convention is still several days away, hundreds of visitors are expected to trickle into the city this weekend for numerous related meetings, including one for women in the ministry.

A key issue facing the denomination will be the election of the SBC president. The fundamentalist incumbent, the Rev. Charles Stanley of Atlanta, will be pitted against the moderate's candidate, the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo.

A spokesman for the chamber's Convention and Visitor's Bureau said 6,100 hotel rooms in the city have been booked. In addition, hotel bartenders are stocking up on non-alcoholic drinks and planning "dessert bars."

Grenada who?

Americans, perhaps unlike any other nationality in the world, can learn of an obscure corner of the world faster and forget it quicker than any other people.

Take Grenada, for example. Remember Grenada? That's the tiny island nation off the coast of, er, oh you know, down near South America to which President Reagan sent invasion troops in September 1982. Or was it October 1983?

Well, anyway, you get the point which is, of course, that Americans don't linger on topics that don't affect them and their way of life personally.

Now there's a reason for thinking about Grenada again — briefly, at least. After the American troops stormed the island to protect American students in, yes it was October 1983, most Americans probably were under the impression that the troops had quickly left the island. President Reagan had even announced a month after the invasion that all combat personnel would be home by Dec. 23 that year.

That left on the island about 300 non-combat personnel, mostly military policemen. They've been there ever since.

But now all that is ending and, according to a Pentagon spokesman, the last American forces will leave Grenada around the middle of this month. The pullout began in mid-April, with about 40 troops departing the island every 10 days to two weeks.

Not surprisingly, many of the Grenadians don't want to see the Americans leave. Grenada has expressed a desire that the Americans remain there ãwhile longer.

That's understandable. The imminent danger present that led to the invasion of Grenada was substantiated by various documents and military materials confiscated there which justified the move. It's obvious the Grenadians don't want to be brought under the yoke of authoritarian rule.

And it's obvious they won't be. When Vice President George Bush visited Grenada last March, he pledged that the United States "will not sit idly by and allow Grenada to be threatened."

Americans do forget obscure places easily, but as Vice President Bush says, Grenada should rest assured that the evidence found on the island a year and a half ago ensures Americans won't forget the island any time soon. Too much is at stake.

Views on Reagan's taxation reform plan

Another View:

It's a sneak attack

President Reagan, usually open and honorable in battle, seems suddenly to be acting like a sneak. The issue is public financing of presidential campaigns, a system that has given him $90 million and given the nation a successful reform. The system has been accepted by candidates, Congress and the public. Yet Reagan doesn't like it and is trying, under cover of tax reform, to slit its throat.

Public financing, which includes the $1 checkoff that taxpayers can mark on their tax returns, has demonstrably improved presidential campaigns. Perhaps alterations are in order after the experiences of 1976, 1980 and 1984. If so, let there be clear complaints and open debate.

The checkoff is the principal issue. It permits taxpayers to authorize that $1 of their annual tax payments go into a fund for presidential campaigns. About a third of those who owe taxes contribute. The checkoff is part of a system created in reaction to CREEP, Richard Nixon's Committee to Re-elect the President. When private financing was the only way, CREEP attracted a parade of corporate couriers bearing briefcases of cash. Under the reform law, the federal government matches small contributions to presidential primary candidates, up to $10.1 million in 1984. For the general election, nominees receive full funding — $40.4 million each in 1984.

The Reagan tax plan would abolish the checkoff fund, and also repeal another measure, enacted in 1971 to stimulate public participation: a tax credit of up to $50 for campaign contributions. The administration is probably right in thinking that this credit does little to encourage contributions. Only 6 percent of taxpayers claim it. The advantages of the checkoff, however, are clear. One is participation. Treasury purists hate loading up Form 1040 with anything extraneous, yet tax returns and presidential elections are two facets of the federal government that involve every citizen.

A still-better argument for the checkoff and public campaign financing is that they eliminate the need for private financing. Republicans are no doubt correct that public financing benefits Democrats more. Democrats do have more trouble attracting those corporate couriers with their stuffed briefcases. But so what?

Why is a system that depends on such briefcases good for the nation? What's good about a system that forces candidates of both parties to fawn over big contributors? Wasn't it Reagan who, in 1984, so regularly reviled "special interests"? Public financing confers on presidential candidates the freedom not to grovel.

You need not be a Democrat to prize a system that gives the nominees enough money to get their message across to the country. You'd think that Reagan would gladly preserve a financing system under which he had just won 49 states. But if he must oppose it, let the fight be open. A tax package is the wrong place, and stealth is the wrong way to revise campaign and election law.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, June 7, the 158th day of 1985. There are 207 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

June 7, 1769 is recognized by Kentucky's Historical Society as the probable date that frontiersman Daniel Boone first began to explore the present-day Bluegrass State.

On this date:

In 1654, Louis XIV was crowned King of France in Rheims.

In 1776, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia proposed to the Continental Congress a resolution calling for a Declaration of Independence.

In 1864, Abraham Lincoln was renominated for president at his party's convention in Baltimore.

In 1948, the Communists completed their takeover of Czechoslovakia with the resignation of President Eduard Benes.

In 1968, a grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Sirhan Sirhan for the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy.

In 1981, Israeli military planes destroyed a nuclear power plant in Iraq.

CHARLEY REESE

Reagan tax plan a start

President Reagan's tax plan is not quite the American Revolution he says it is, but it is a good beginning and it is politically feasible.

Charley Reese

Basically, he has proposed eliminating about $50 billion in deductions in exchange for lower rates and greater simplification. If passed intact, it would be roughly revenue neutral. It would yield the same total of revenue by making some pay less and others more and by including some who now pay nothing.

Congress naturally will not enact the plan without making changes. This is okay. The tax code is the province of Congress, not the President. Moreover, legislation is always a product of compromise and tradeoffs. It ever has been and always will be.

People who devise pure solutions and insist they be adopted intact are really just well-meaning cranks who know nothing about the real world and how it operates. There's no point in wasting your time talking to them.

The political battle in Congress can be summed up in one sentence. Those who benefit from certain deductions or credits will try their best to keep them. The success or failure of the tax simplification concept will be determined by how many of these pressures the Congress can resist.

While I support the idea of a simpler, fairer tax code, I have to point out that there is a bit of political distraction being played by both the President and the Congress. They have embraced this idea of tax simplification in part becdause it is much easier than dealing with the more difficult issue of government spending.

Bear in mind that the principal impact government has on the economy is how much money it takes out of private hands, and how much more it spends on credit.

If the problem is that the government is taking in $700 billion and borrowing $200 billion more, then it makes no difference really if it takes the $700 billion with a fair, simple tax code or a complex, unfair tax code. The overall effect on the economy is the same.

So while tax simplification is a good thing, it is less important than reducing overall government spending. So long as the government is committed to such a high level of spending it will, of necessity, find ways to extract the money from our pockets.

Keep in mind, too, that what is at issue is only the income tax. In addition to incomes and estates, the federal government levies a variety of hidden taxes. Manufacturers' excise tax on automobiles range from $500 per car to $2,650 per car depending on gas mileage. Gasoline is taxed at nine cents a gallon; gasahol at four cents. Tires are taxed as are coal, firearms, fishing equipment, bows, certain occupations, diesel fuel, aviation fuel, telephone and teletypewriter service, airline tickets, inland waterways users' fuel, freight, trucks and truck parts, deep seabed mineral removal, petroleum, chemicals, hazardous wastes, foreign insurance policies, wagering, liquor, imported perfumes, and tobacco products. Don't forget the self-employment tax, and unemployment tax. The Lord only knows what else.

For most Americans, their only source of income is their labor and every tax, federal, state or local, is a taking of the fruits of our labor. Some taxes are always necessary, but what we must do is re-orient our thinking so that we are as careful about what we allow government to spend as we are about spending directly. In either case, it is we who are spending.

JACK ANDERSON

No ceasefire in media war

WASHINGTON — The revolving door through which some reporters leave for big government jobs — and later return to the media — can be a tricky apparatus, and every so often someone gets his foot caught.

Jack Anderson

That's what happened to Leslie Gelb, who went back to work at The New York Times after serving two years as director of the State Department's bureau of politico-military affairs. Gelb's predicament raises interesting questions about this continuing traffic between the world of government secrets and a profession that is supposed to dig them out.

Could a former government official take advantage of his clout when he becomes a reporter again? Sure. Did Gelb? No.

In fact, his brief State Department career cost him a story. But that didn't keep some people — including, apparently, the State Department's current politico-military director, Lt. Gen. John T. Chain Jr. — from suspecting that Gelb had traded improperly on his former position for a story he wrote Feb. 13 on U.S. nuclear contingency plans.

The Times story was based on a top-secret White House document that had already surfaced abroad and caused a brief furor in the foreign press. It revealed that the United States had contingency plans for deploying nuclear weapons in Bermuda, Canada, Iceland and Puerto Rico — but had neglected to tell the governments involved.

But the top-secret document was dated 1975, two years before Gelb's tenure in Foggy Bottom. Chain, who had reportedly been getting some ribbing about the story, ordered his staff not to talk to Gelb. And in a fit of pique, Chain removed Gelb's picture from the wall featuring photographs of past directors and put this notice in its place:

"Removed for Cause. The P.M. Director, 1977-1979, did willingly, willfully and knowingly publish, 1985, classified information the release of which is harmful and damaging to the country."

Chain didn't name Gelb, nor did he say that Gelb had seen the document during his two-year tour at State. But the implication was clear.

The accusation was outrageous, of course, and after a time Chain and Gelb reconciled.

In fact, there had never been any reason for Chain to suspect his predecessor. Ethics aside, why would Gelb have waited more than five years to write a story he had learned in his official capacity?

Gelb obtained the 1975 document from another source — and was astonished to realize that no one had apparently seen fit to disclose its diplomatically delicate contents to the State Department bureau most obviously concerned.

Gelb couldn't recall ever having seen the document during his two years at State. Just to make sure, though, he called friends in his old office and was assured that they were unaware of the document and the policy it described.

For the determinedly scrupulous Gelb, the knowledge that key officials in the State Department had been left in the dark all these years was something he could not ethically write about, since it stemmed directly from the two years he had worked for the government. So he didn't include the information in his story.

Former government employees are forbidden to divulge secrets they learned in their jobs. This time, a meticulous reporter apparently decided he couldn't reveal that, while he was a government muck-a-muck, he hadn't been told a secret that he should have been told.

The mind reels.

Mexican restaurant owner considers retiring after 34 years

By EDNA GUNDERSEN

EL PASO (AP) — After 34 years in the restaurant business, Guillermo "Memo" Avila, 55, is considering retirement.

Make that semi-retirement.

"I'll still be around to help," Avila said, "but I'm cutting back on my hours. Eventually, I'll turn over the restaurant to my children."

The owner of Leo's Mexican Foods has enjoyed a long and prosperous career in a family business that includes nine other restaurants.

And his success has not gone unnoticed.

Avila recently was inducted into the Texas Restaurant Association's Hall of Honor. Only one other El Pasoan, the late Leon Gillespie, has received the honor, and that was posthumous.

Avila, who has been a member of the association 33 years, was one of several nominees submitted by the group's 22 chapters across the state. From those, a state-level committee selected two veteran restaurateurs. In 1980, the association named Avila Outstanding Restaurateur.

These awards signify quite a climb since his boyhood days as a grocery sacker. Avila, a native El Pasoan, began working at the age of 7 in his father's grocery store.

"I used to come home from school and help my dad stock or sweep," Avila said. "It was a small neighborhood, so we delivered groceries, too."

Avila graduated from El Paso Technical High School and attended the College of Mines for one year. He says he quit during World War II to help his father, Evaristo Avila, in the grocery. But the elder Avila remembers that his son never exhibited academic ambitions: "When he was young, Memo said, 'I don't want to go to college, Dad. I can make more money selling peanuts downtown.'"

Avila agreed that he saw little use for a college diploma.

"I always knew I'd have my own business," he said. "I needed to work, not go to school."

The Leo's empire grew out of Leo's Finer Foods, a modest restaurant established in 1946 by Avila's uncles, Leo Collins and Willie Terrazas. The eatery served all types of food, but specialized in Mexican cuisine.

At the age of 21, Avila and his father bought Leo's Finer Foods. The business thrived and Avila attributed the success to father-son harmony.

"My dad and I were partners," Avila said. "We've always gotten along. I don't think we ever had one problem between us."

"Working in the grocery store helped me quite a bit," he said. "I did the buying, I cut the meat. I had a little experience. My dad was already in his 50s then, and he didn't want to learn anything new. He said, 'I never want to learn how to cook.' So I stayed in the kitchen."

About 23 years ago, Avila bought out his father's share of the restaurant. And 13 years ago, he built the larger location a few blocks away. The family venture mushroomed. Today, the business Collins and Terrazas formed has multiplied into 10 restaurants: five Leo's locations, Arnold's, Avila's, La Terraza and Munch a Lunch, as well as Sergio's in Ruidoso, N.M.

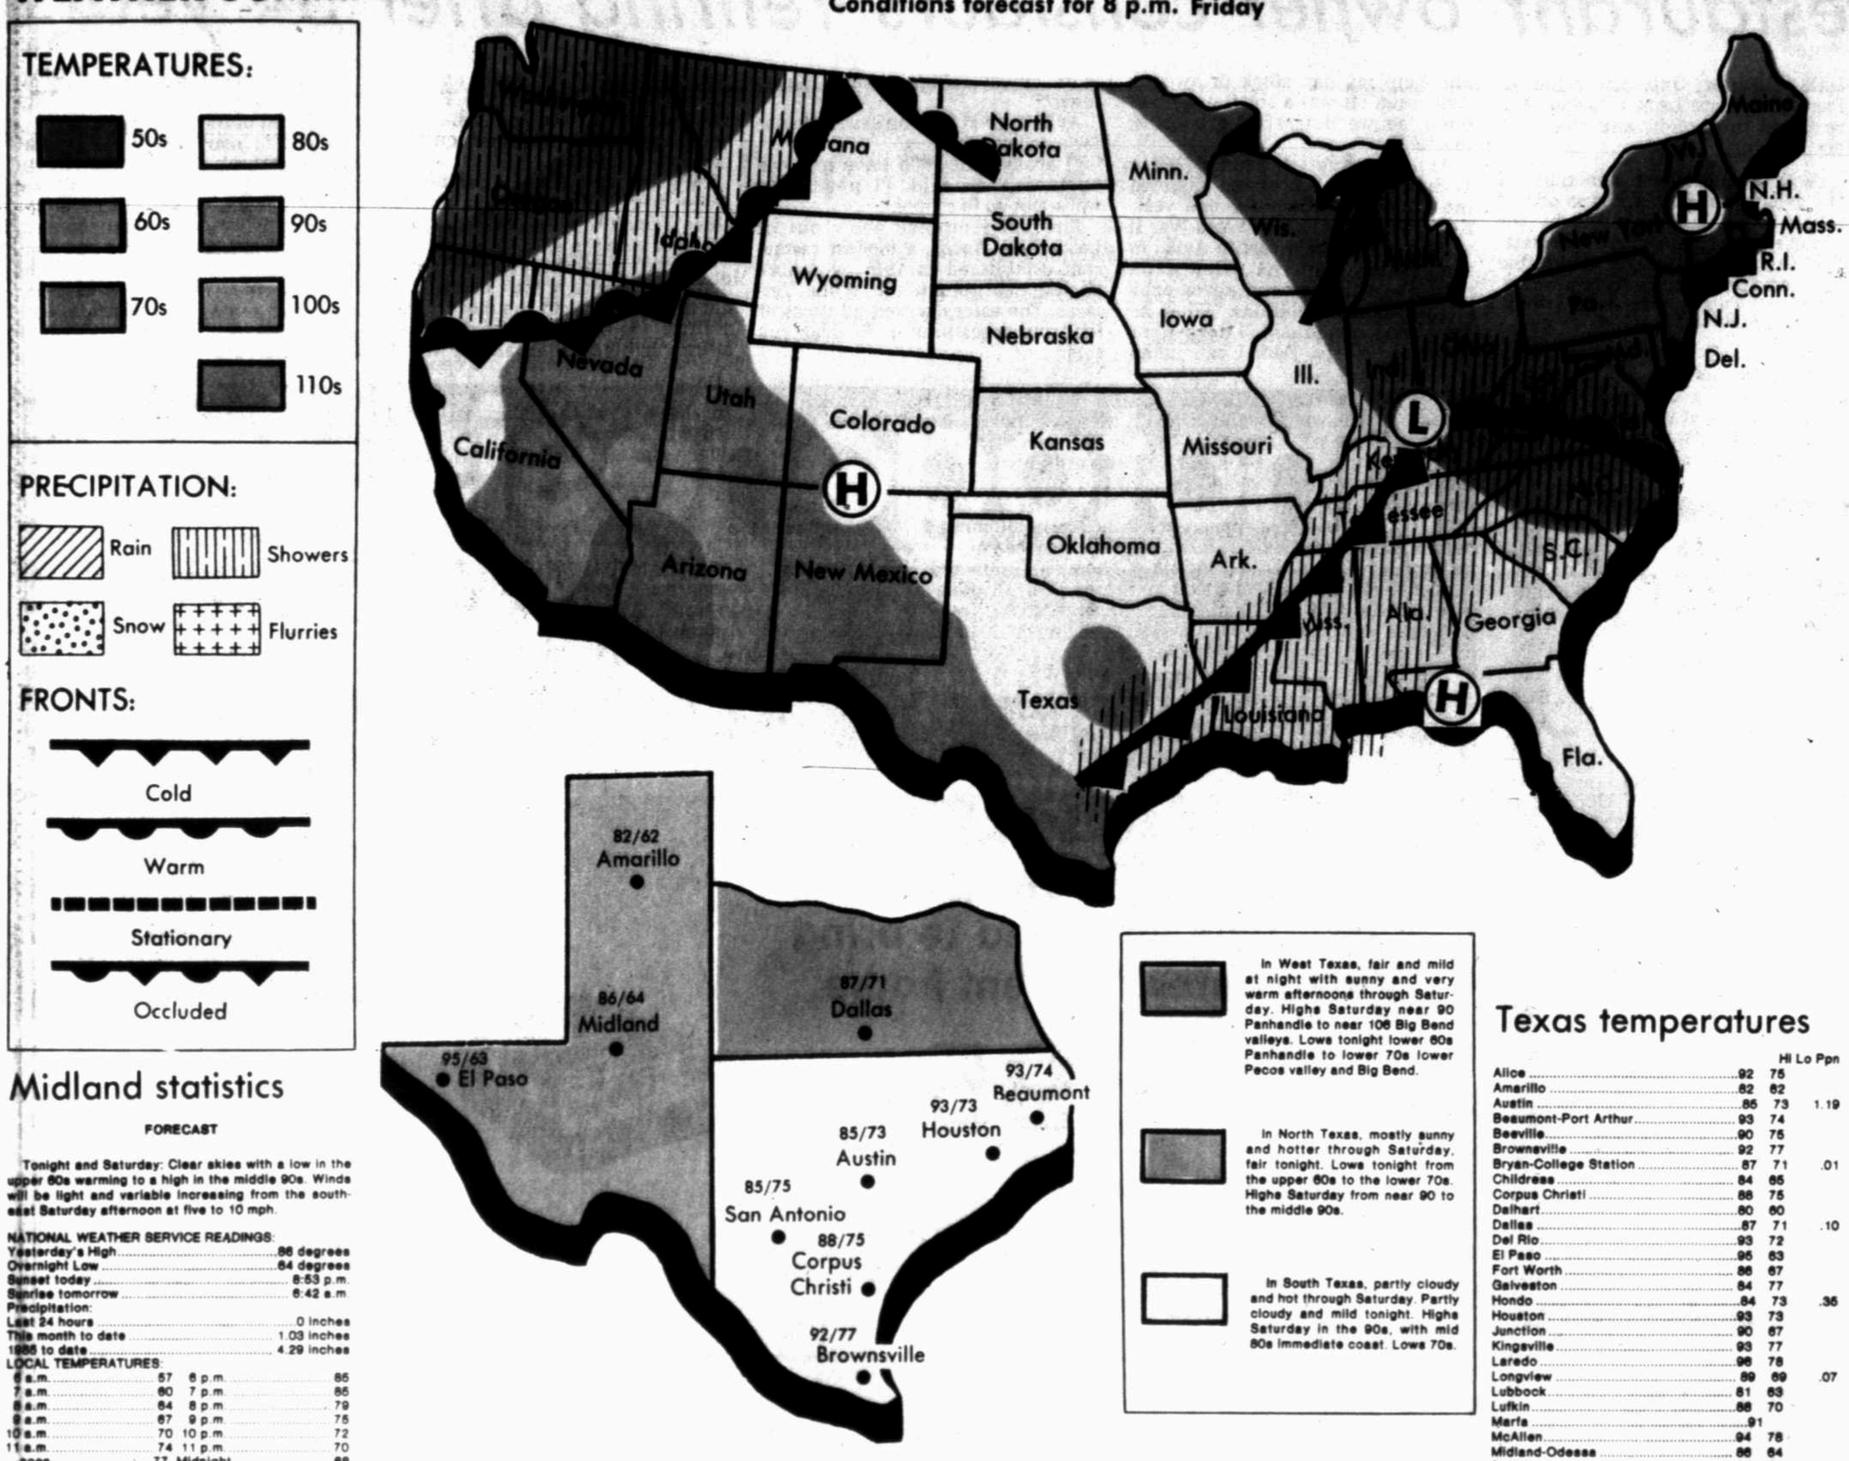
WEATHER SUMMARY



Clear skies due in Basin this weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders will get a chance to soak up some sun this weekend as clear skies and warm temperatures are forecast for the Permian Basin area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for clear skies through Saturday with a low in the upper 60s tonight warming to a high in the middle 90s Saturday. Winds will be light becoming southeasterly at five to 10 mph Saturday afternoon.

Thursday's high of 86 was 18 degrees below the record set in 1964. This morning's low was 16 degrees above the record of 48 set in 1983.

STATE

The National Weather Service said early today that the heavy rain has ended and skies were clear over much of North Texas and West Texas.

Clearing weather followed the departure of an upper level trough of low pressure that triggered the flood producing rain before moving eastward out of the state.

Forecasts called for widely scattered thunderstorms today in Northeast Texas and clear to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures statewide.

Highs were to range from the upper 80s in North Texas to near 106 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Saturday will be slightly warmer, mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s across all of the state. Extremes ranged from 63 at Amarillo to 79 at Brownsville.

Other readings around the state early today included 67 at Wichita Falls, 68 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 72 at Waco, 74 at Austin, 76 at San Antonio, 75 at Corpus Christi, 64 at San Angelo, 66 at Lubbock, 64 at Midland and 69 at El Paso.

NATION

New England was cool and clear today while a heat wave dominated the South and thunderstorms were widespread across the nation's heartland.

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered across Arkansas, southern Missouri, southern Illinois, the lower Ohio Valley and the Tennessee Valley.

Thunderstorms rumbled along coastal sections of Florida and the Carolinas.

Rain was widespread from the northern Pacific Coast to northwest Montana.

DeSoto eliminates Andrews from 4A playoffs, 5-2

AUSTIN (AP) — DeSoto, using a four-run fifth inning, defeated Andrews 5-2 Thursday to advance to the Class 4A UIL state baseball final against New Braunfels Canyon, a 10-7 winner over Jasper.

Game time was set for 1:30 pm at Disch-Falk field.

The DeSoto-Canyon game is a rematch of last year's semifinal game which DeSoto won 4-0. DeSoto went on to lose the title game to Austin Westlake. This marks the third straight year DeSoto has been in the state finals.

The big inning for DeSoto began when Andrews pitcher Shay Morris walked Jimmy Pogue. Doug Motl ran for Pogue and scored on Donald Porter's double. Boyd Jackson came in to pinch run for Porter and scored on Michael Vinsen's single. Vinsen took third on an error and came home courtesy of Noria Townsel's single.

Andrews struck for one run in the first when Jeff Tidwell singled in Chris Upton. Andrews knocked out DeSoto starter Vinsen with a run in the second when Danny Neighbors tripled and scored on Carlon Branson's single.

But from then on it was all DeSoto. Steve Foster came on in relief for Vinsen in the second and held Andrews to just one hit while striking out seven.

GREG KOBZA'S two-run homer in the fourth inning lead Victoria Stroman to a 6-3 victory over North Garland and led the Raiders into the class 5A title game against Pasadena Rayburn.

The two teams will square off at 7:30 p.m. today at Disch-Falk Field.

It was an all-around solid effort for Stroman as Wrennie Wickliffe scattered six hits and struck out 10, before giving way to Michael Yates with two out in the ninth. This will be the Raiders first ever appearance in a title game.

After Tony Valle's run-scoring single gave North Garland a 1-0 lead in the top of the first, Stroman relied on defense and speed for the win. Manuel Rodriquez reached on a fielder's choice after Kobza's home run, stole second, his 40th swipe of the year, and scored on Manuel Alvarado's single to send the Raiders up 5-1.

North Garland put some pressure on Wickliffe in the sixth when Kevin Nicholson drove in two runs with a double, but worked his way out of the jam.

PASADENA RAYBURN, behind the strong pitching of Bruce Aguilar and a three-run homer from Cory Thompson, downed Lubbock Monterey 8-2 to advance into the championship game.

Rayburn, in its first trip ever to the state tournament, jumped on Monterey starter Mike Eckles for three runs in the first inning. John Schelson and Bubba Augustine led off with singles and scored on Aguilar's long fly ball that was dropped by Doug Welch.

Rayburn iced the game in the third when Aguilar got on with a fielder's choice, Steve Meek singled and Thompson hit his home run to left.

CANYON SEEMED on its way to a comfortable blowout, until Jasper scored four in the sixth to close the gap to 8-7. The big blow for Jasper came on Mike Davis' two-run single scoring Jeff Burrell and Steve Spencer.

Canyon hit Jasper starter Spencer for four runs in the first on six consecutive hits. Run scoring singles by Bret Cappleman, Gary Edwards and Scott Wagner put the Cougars up 4-0. It appeared they put the game out of reach with four more in the third as Cappleman brought in two more runs with another single.

Cappleman then sealed the game in the sixth with a towering home run over the leftfield wall to score Brad Campbell and give Canyon the final 10-7 margin. All told, Cappleman was 4-4, with five RBI's and two runs scored.

Streaking Blue Jays nip Tigers in 12th inning, 2-0

Associated Press

Toronto's Buck Martinez didn't figure to get into the game, while teammate Jimmy Key was just hoping to stay there long enough to reap the benefits of what he had sown.

It worked out beautifully for Martinez, whose two-run homer in the 12th inning Thursday night lifted the Blue Jays to a 2-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers, who had been held hitless through eight innings by Key.

"It was only by a funny set of circumstances that I got into the game in the first place," said Martinez, who hit a breaking ball off reliever Aurelio Lopez to give the Blue Jays their 14th victory in 16 games and widen their lead in the American League East to 5½ games over idle Baltimore.

Martinez entered the game in the 11th after starting catcher Ernie Whitt was removed for pinch-runner Manny Lee who reached base an inning earlier on an error by Lou Whitaker.

'If Whitaker doesn't make that error . . . I don't get into the game," Martinez explained. "I knew Lopez had a good fastball and I went up there looking for one but after he got two strikes on me with some pretty good fastballs I was looking for anything."

Key, who worked the first 10 innings, lost a bid for a no-hitter when Tom singled to start the ninth. Key left with a two-hitter.

"I was kind of disappointed for the moment, but with the game still tied 0-0 I knew I had to keep concentrating," Key said. "I kind of pride myself on not letting things bother me.

"When you pitch 10 shutout innings you think you should have a win but I'm not going to let it affect me. I'll get my share of wins along the way."

Baseball Roundup

Lopez, 0-4, hit George Bell leading off the 12th. One out later, Martinez hit his fourth homer of the season, to left field.

White Sox 4, Rangers 3

Slumping Ron Kittle, who says he has been known to hit a homer now and then, hit a three-run shot to break a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning and end an eight-game Chicago road losing streak.

"Kittle was consistent tonight," said White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa. "Two walks and the dinger."

Kittle's homer broke an 0-for-11 slump. He has six homers among his 15 hits this season. He led the White Sox in home runs with 32 in 1984 and 35 in 1983.

The homer made a winner of Floyd Bannister, 4-4, who worked 5 1-3 innings. Bob James worked the final two innings of the game, delayed more than an hour by rain, to collect his 11th save.

Brewers 5, Yankees 1

Milwaukee's Danny Darwin flattened New York with a three-hitter and shrugged it off as just another night at the office.

"You can't pitch to one team differently than another," said Darwin, who struck out six and walked one in improving to 5-4.

"You have to go out there and pitch your own game. You've got enough to do without trying to approach teams differently."

The only New York run off Darwin came in the fifth inning on Don Baylor's 10th homer.

Arkansas, Oklahoma State claim CWS victories

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jeff King said pregame talks from Coach Norm DeBriyn and past and present players were enough to awaken sleeping Arkansas bats in the NCAA College World Series losers' bracket.

The fourth-ranked Razorbacks pounded out 12 hits, four from King, in a 10-4 whipping of top-ranked Stanford Thursday night. In the second contest, the noisy bats of Miami and Oklahoma State were nearly put to sleep in a 2-1 victory for Miami.

Arkansas' offense had been relatively silent in its first two games of the CWS. A 1-0 win in 14 innings in the first game last Friday was followed by a 5-4 loss to Mississippi State Monday night.

"We had a team meeting before the game and it woke me up, and I think it woke the whole team up," said King, who belted his 17th homer of the year with nobody on in the seventh inning Thursday.

Mark Jackson hit a three-run homer in the fifth to stake the 51-14 Razorbacks to an 8-1 lead. Arkansas scored five runs in the fourth on six hits and an error off Stanford starter Jeff Ballard, 14-4.

"Coach told us it was a privilege to be here and if we could win a couple more games we could play for the championship. Then (relief pitcher Tim) Deitz spoke and said a player from the 1979 team called and said he could tell by watching us we were flat. So he said we'd better get going and get excited."

The player from Arkansas' 1979 CWS team that finished second was Mark Brumble.

The talk apparently worked and sent Stanford home with a 47-15 record. Kevin Campbell, 10-5, picked up the win for Arkansas.

Arkansas advances to Saturday's elimination round against Texas, which will play 50-13 Mississippi State in the winners' bracket finale Friday night. The Razorbacks have won four of five regular-season meetings with the 62-12, third-ranked Longhorns.

Miami's Kevin Sheary and Ric Raether combined for a four-hitter in sidelining second-ranked Oklahoma State.

Sheary, now 6-4, allowed only one run, a Carlos Diaz homer to right-center in the fifth, while Raether picked up his 20th save on the season to shut the door on the power-hitting Cowboys through the final two innings.

Chris Magno provided the game-winner with a two-out single with two runners on in the eighth. Rick Richardi provided the earlier run with a leadoff triple in the sixth and scored on an infield error.

"It was a little bit away. I was choking up, just trying to make contact," Magno said of his two-out single to bring home Calvin James with the game-winning run.

Asked if he ever expected a 2-1 game from the slugging teams, Miami Coach Ron Fraser said, "That never entered my mind. It was just a question of trying to get a good game out of Sheary. We just wanted him to keep it close for Raether."

Raether opened the ninth against Oklahoma State's record-setting slugger Pete Incaviglia and struck out the Cowboy junior.

"I figured if we were going to get beat, we were going to get beat with our best," Fraser said of the Raether-Incaviglia showdown.

"I got Incaviglia on a curve," said Raether, who also struck out pinch-hitter Bryan Kostishion for the last out of the game.

"There's a lot of ifs and buts in a game like this," said Oklahoma State Coach Gary Ward. "We gave it a great effort. I feel completely exhausted, completely drained."

The Cowboys go home with a 58-16 record, while Miami takes its 61-16 record into Saturday's contest with Mississippi State.

Game-time Saturday depends on the outcome of tonight's Mississippi State-Texas winners bracket finale. The winner Friday plays in the 7:10 p.m. game Saturday and the loser plays at 4:10.

Friday's winner also earns an automatic berth in the championship game, either Sunday or Monday. Should Friday's winner lose Saturday, the title contest will be Monday night with Saturday's winners playing off for a chance at college baseball's championship.

So much for 2-3-2 advantage

Tonight's game won't be the last game of the NBA championship playoff after all.

After gaining a split in Boston and following with another Georgia Tech-Cumberland type rout in Inglewood, it appeared all over but the Lakers' victory parade. The long-denied Lakers seemed to be in firm command. Not only had Boston been beaten twice, but the Celtics were in the same confused state of disorder as the 33rd Mass., arms stacked and sitting down to mess, was the evening Stonewall burst out of the dense woods at Chancellorsville.

What's more, the doomsayers were contending the new 2-3-2 playoff schedule virtually assured Los Angeles of victory in the series without really ever having to sweat.

The theory was that the change in home-team format from 2-2-1-1-1 was definitely to the Lakers' advantage.

POPPYCOCK! The Celtics had every opportunity to assure a return to Boston. All they had to do was sweep the first two games at home, only someone forgot to turn up the thermostat that second game at the Garden.

But it has been a strange playoff throughout. The feeling here was that Boston-Philadelphia was for the championship and what ever came after was for show.

Well, the Celtic-76er rivalry obviously wasn't what it used to be.

And now the championship series, the storied title rivalry that has seen Boston go eight-for-eight. Three blowouts in three games until Wednesday's crucial game, the game that came down to Dennis Johnson's net-jumper from way out as time was running out to win it for the Celtics and change the tan on this series from Marina Del Ray to Cape Cod.

Regardless of what happens tonight, they return to Boston Sunday and I suppose it will now be said that the 2-3-2 forumula is to the Celtics' advantage. Again, Poppycock. The Lakers, like Boston, had their opportunity to sweep at home, but failed to RSVP to the invitation.

Besides, it has always been a mystery here as to why the NBA persisted in its 2-2-1-1-1 format when baseball's World Series 2-3-2 made so much more sense, saving a lot of travel wear and tear on the players.

THE BEST thing about Wednesday's game is that it was the kind of prime time show the NBA would like for all of its championship series games. Until Wednesday, the games had done little to enhance the NBA's image, although it was great for other networks as viewers fled the listing ship.

They say Larry Bird has been playing hurt and isn't the same guy who was named the league's MVP again. However, in the fourth quarter, with the Lakers seemingly home free for a 3-1 series edge, he took charge of the game like a Bobby Orr.

Still, despite Bird's heroics, it seemed appropriate that Johnson should sink the game winner. He might not be the straw that stirs the drink, but he was the glue that held the Celtics together for three periods. He deserved that last shot, although the strategy was for Bird to take it.

HOWEVER, the most amazing figure in this series has been the big guy with the beard and balding dome who checks his cane at the scorer's table when he comes into the game. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is doing things in this series, even in Wednesday's loss, that 38-year-olds aren't supposed to do in a young man's game. Come to think of it, not even young men like Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon do.

If there is a chink in the Laker's armor, it's Kareem's age. Can he come up with two more games like his last three?

As for the Celtics, the outside marksmanship is the key. Led by Scott Wedman's 11-for-11 in the first game, the Celtics routed the Lakers, as they should have with the kind of shooting. It's critical for Boston to keep the Lakers' defense honest.

Last year, many thought the Lakers were the better team, although the Celtics won by sheer determination.

This year it's all even but the suspicion is that the Celtics still must blend more ingredients for success than do the Lakers.

Yet, it's essential that Los Angeles win tonight. Sunday it's Boston and that thermostat.

Two-point slaughter gives Boston new life

In the Inglewood Forum Wednesday night, the Boston Celtics slaughtered the Los Angeles Lakers, 107-105.

It was one of the great wipeouts of history. It will rank with the Chicago Bears' 73-0 rout of the Redskins in 1941, the 18-4 game the Yankees once won in a World Series, the Dempsey-Willard fight.

"Wait just a darn minute!" you want to say? "Since when is a 20-foot shot going in at the buzzer a wipeout?"

Well, it's all a matter of perspective. Wipeouts come in funny forms. Once, in a football game in Georgia, a Southern writer, it may have been Furman Bisher, wrote: "Georgia Tech crushed Notre Dame here today, 3-3."

It was a tellingly accurate observation. So was the conclusion that the Bostons slaughtered the Los Angeleses by two points. Because those two loom as 200.

Here was the situation in Game 4 of the NBA championship series: The Lakers had just drubbed -- really - the Boston Celtics by 25 easy points in Game 3. The Celtics' Larry Bird, one of the top three basketball players who ever lived, quite clearly was not himself. He was some stone-fingered impostor who threw the ball around like it was an anvil. The real Bird, you see, could sink a soap bubble.

So, it all looked as easy as stomping crickets to the Lakers. All they had to do was roll over the prostrate Celtics in Games 4 and 5 and the series would end in L.A., and they would not have to go back to the (ugh!) parquets of Boston Garden.

It wasn't going to be a game, it was going to be a revue, choreographed by Magic Johnson and his flying feet. Bojangles does basketball. A day in the park for Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and the rest of the guys in the purple suits.

Look, the Celtics don't have any bench. The Lakers are all bench. The Celtics can't penetrate. The Lakers go down the middle like it was an on-ramp to the Hollywood Freeway.

The Celtics were through. They looked like five guys in a haunted house. They were trying to look over both shoulders at once. Jack Nicholson was looking at them with that wicked snake-eyes grin. Kevin McHale was just hoping that he wouldn't be put under arrest and was checking the capital punishment statutes in this state. Robert Parish apparently hadn't made the trip.

Everywhere the Lakers looked, there were championship rings, the Johnny Carson show, the keys to the city, a ride down Broadway. They were like the Austrian cavalry. It seemed a shame they had to go to war.

As you know, Hollywood doesn't deal in sad endings and this one looked as safe as a Roy Rogers movie. The Lakers would get the girl, the horse, the ring, save the farm and everything.

Well, they got an ending that didn't leave a dry eye in the house. It made Stella Dallas look like a musical comedy. They got an ending right out of an Italian movie. They got an ending that was a combination of John Wayne getting shot, Little Eva dying and the bridge of San Luis Rey breaking. A disaster movie. Fire on the 84th floor.

The Lakers made this one tiny, minor mistake. They took this quiet, freckle-faced young man, No. 3 on your programs, and threw him right out of the calculations.

Dennis Wayne Johnson, they figured, was no real factor in these proceedings. He was a spear-carrier, a supernumerary whose main job was to push the ball upcourt for the Celtics and then get the hell out of the way while the real powers took over.

D.J., as they called him, had seen better days. He was doing everything by memory. Boston backcourts had seen guys like Cousy, Ramsey, Sharman, K.C. Jones, Sam Jones and Jo Jo White, and D.J. was supposed to be long past those kinds of performances.

With 19 seconds to go Wednesday night, everybody in the United States of America knew what was going to happen. The score was tied at 105 and the Celtics had the ball.

Nobody paid the slightest attention to D.J. as he trundled the ball toward the enemy basket, least of all the Lakers. He was just a courier, a messenger. The ball had Larry Bird's name on it. D.J. had to deliver it.

He got the ball to Bird with seven seconds on the clock. It wasn't easy because the Bird was surrounded by Lakers but D.J. is an expert at ball smuggling.

Dennis Johnson suddenly found himself standing all alone in front of the basket with time on his hands, no one to talk to. He could have brought a book.

The Lakers must have figured that he was waiting for a bus because they paid no attention to him.

But, with four seconds to go, Larry Bird suddenly lateraled the ball to him like a bank robber getting rid of the loot in a chase.

Dennis Johnson was never so open in his life. He casually dropped the ball through the hoop at the buzzer. For the Lakers, it may be like dropping the cyanide tablet in the acid. It was the biggest two points of the series, maybe of the season.

The Lakers suddenly realized that that was the 11th basket of the game, the 26th and 27th points from the man everybody had forgotten. He had very quietly wiped them out in their sleep.

Because, if the series which now has to go back to Boston, ends in another Laker humiliation in the Hub, as so many have before, those two points will be every bit as big as the 73 scored by the Bears, the 18 by the Yanks, or any 100 ever scored by Wilt Chamberlain.

Sometimes, two points can be infinity.

Lakers scoff at Celtics close-game winning mystique

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers scoff at the notion that it's fate, mystique or luck that always wins close games for the Boston Celtics.

"I've dumped the theory of Celtic Mystique," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said Thursday after practice for tonight's Game 5 of the National Basketball Association championship series. "I like to deal in reality, facts and basic fundamentals."

"I have no feeling that the fates are against us," Earvin "Magic" Johnson said. "I don't think there's anything to that."

The Celtics revived the idea that they have some kind of special aura surrounding them in close games on Wednesday night when they evened the best-of-seven series at 2-2 with a 107-105 victory.

Boston guard Dennis Johnson swished a game-winning jumper as time expired, breaking a 105-105 tie. The shot was reminiscent of past heroics, by Sam Jones and Don Nelson in the 1969 finals and by Gerald Henderson last year, which gave the Celtics crucial victories over the Lakers.

"I believe in a Celtic Mystique," said President Red Auerbach, coach of the team for nine of its 15 NBA championships. "There's no source to it, it's just there."

"I'm not sure if the Celtics have mystique, but they have pride," Coach K.C. Jones said. "The Lakers have pride, too, but the Celtic amily pride is something that started with Bill Russell and continued on through the years. When it comes down to clutch time, you just need a break to win."

"We pride ourselves on not doing things that lose the game for you at the end," Celtics forward Larry Bird said. "We make good passes and don't turn the ball over. All we want when we're on the road is to have the ball with a tie game. That's all we ask for."

When Johnson's high-arching jumper ripped the net Wednesday, it ended Los Angeles' opportunity to win the NBA title without having to return to Boston Garden, where the Celtics have never lost the last game of a championship series.

"The main thing about that shot is that now we know we're going back to Boston," Jones said.

Games 6 and 7 are scheduled for Sunday and Tuesday at Boston Garden.

"We're looking to win Friday night and go back to Boston ahead 3-2," Riley said. "If we can't win one out of two there, I don't think we deserve it."

Riley said the Celtics' reputation for winning close games is a bit overblown.

"They've won a lot of close games in which there was a lot of national exposure," Riley said, "but we won 62 games in the regular season and a lot of those were close. They're confident they can win at the end, but so are we."

The Lakers insist that there will be no psychological fallout from Wednesday's heartbreaking loss — "It's amazing how teams of high quality are stimulated by adversity," Riley said — but the tendency to wonder about Celtics' heroics is strong.

"The Celtics always seem to win the close games," the Lakers' Michael Cooper said. "It would be nice to win one of these close ones. I don't know what it is."

Gonzalez fighting long odds

Rookie shares Westchester lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — The odds, it would appear, are stacked against Ernie Gonzalez, who finds himself in a share of the first-round lead in the $500,000 Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic.

First of all, he's a rookie. And it is becoming increasingly difficult for a first-year man to win on the PGA Tour.

Then there's his record. He's made the cut in only two of 10 starts this season, hasn't finished higher than 62nd in his brief career, and has earnings of $1,704.

And, too, there's a third factor. Gonzalez is a member of a rare breed among pro golfers. He's a lefty. And that makes the odds even longer. The last time a left-handed player won on the American tour was in 1974, 11 years ago, when Bob Charles of New Zealand took the Greater Greensboro Open.

Gonzalez, whose 5-under-par 66 tied him with veteran George Burns, was quick to admit that "it's quite a surprise to be leading, particularly considering the way I played."

"I hit it all over the place," Gonzalez said. He said he was so far off line at times "that it turned out perfect, driving into the areas where the gallery had tramped down the rough." He came out of the deep rough, from behind trees and over traps to make two birdies, and scored two others when he holed out from the fringe.

"The putter worked real good. I made a lot of 5-6 footers for par," he said.

Burns also relied on his putter. He one-putted 12 times in compiling his best round of the year.

"My putter sort of left me for a couple of months, but today they all started to go in," Burns said after taking only 30 strokes over the back nine at the Westchester Country Club course in suburban New York. "My driving was better. My iron game was not that bad. But it was my putter that really saved me."

Woody Blackburn completed a 67 with a birdie on the final hole and was one shot off the pace.

Calvin Peete, a two-time winner already this season, was in a group at 68, three under par, with Don Pooley, Australian Wayne Grady, Mark Wiebe and rookie John DeForest.

Defending champion Scott Simpson had a 74 and Fuzzy Zoeller, who will defend his U.S. Open title next week, finished bogey-bogey for a 73.

Burns, winner of two titles in an 11-year tour career, one-putted seven times over his front side, including birdie efforts of 15, 20 and 25 feet. He made another 15-footer for birdie on his last hole, and scored his only bogey on a 3-putt.

Despite his erratic action off the tee, Gonzalez found himself within two strokes of the lead with three holes to play, and got a share of the top spot with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 16th and a 15-footer on the 17th.

Mets edge Drillers in 10th, 8-7

Texas League

Stanley Jefferson singled home Marlin McPhail with the winning run in the 10th inning as the Jackson Mets took an 8-7 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

In other action Thursday night, Shreveport edged Arkansas, 9-8, in 10 innings and Beaumont slipped past El Paso, 5-4. Midland's scheduled game at San Antonio was postponed for the second night in a row because of rain.

McPhail had reached on an error, was sacrificed to second and advanced to third on a ground ball out.

Barry Lyons had a three-run bases loaded single and a two-run homer for Jackson.

Jamie Doughty had a three-run homer for the Drillers.

Joe Graves, 2-4, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Tony Hudson, 5-2.

A six-run outburst after two were out in the ninth inning helped the Shreveport Captains tie the game and send it into extra innings in their 9-8 victory over the Arkansas Travelers.

Doubles by Mike Aldrete and Alan Cockrell sparked the ninth inning Shreveport rally.

Matt Nokes doubled to open the 10th inning for Shreveport, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored the winning run on a single by Tom Francis.

Steve Stanicek had a two-run homer fopr Arkansas.

Kurt Mattson and Mike Rhodes must have thought the scene was familiar in Thursday night's game. Mattson, 5-3, was also the winning pitcher in Wednesday night's Arkansas-Shreveport game. And Rhodes, 0-2, was the losing hurler in both games.

Hart edges Klein in seniors championship playoff

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Hart of Cedarhurst, N.Y. shot a 3-over-par 75 Thursday to defeat Maj. Gen. John W. Klein of Houston by one stroke in a playoff for the U.S. Seniors Golf Association championship at the Apawamis Club.

Klein, a retired Air Force officer who won the title in 1983, missed a four-foot par putt on the 18th hole and settled for a bogey 5 after Hart had recorded a par.

FIRST BASE

WORK WITH A BASE

As you practice for first base, you must always work with a base, or some imitation of a base. You must get used to working around a base, and always be conscious of where you are in relation to the base. Your big job at first base is getting to the bag to take a throw and you have to develop a sixth sense for the location of that bag, so you never have to flail around wildly looking for it.
Your very first move, on every batted ball, unless you are actually involved in fielding it, is to get to the bag. Run for the bag fast. Maybe the runner is slow and the play is easy. But you be on the bag ahead of time.

PROVIDE A TARGET

Tell yourself that every throw is going to be a bad one, then you will never be taken by surprise. Stand with your knees bent, holding your glove up for a target, and ready to move in any direction, to stretch to the ball, to dig it out of the dirt, or to take a throw over your head. But give the fielder a target.
Don't get yourself into a stretch position before the ball is thrown. It may be a wild throw and you will have a hard time recovering and getting after it.

FIELDING GROUND BALLS AND POP FLYS

When a ground ball or pop fly is hit down your way, you have to leave the covering of the bag to somebody else and go after the ball. Don't hesitate to range to your right freely after ground balls. Cover all the ground you can on that side, as long as you feel you have a good chance for the ball. Don't play the wooden Indian and stand and watch ground balls hop through the hole while you tell yourself the second baseman will get them. Anything you can reach on that side is yours.
You do not often have as good a shot at a short outfield fly as the second baseman or the right fielder may have, because you will probably have to turn your back on the ball. But go after such balls until you are called off, and if you know you can catch the ball, yell for it and wave the other players off.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

If we harp on the subject of counting, it is because so many hands involve no more than the ability to count to 13. We were surprised at how many declarers failed to bring home their four heart contract on this hand.

We are ambivalent about East's decision to open three clubs in first seat with near opening bid values. That got passed round to North, who had the perfect hand for a balancing double. South's jump to four hearts closed the auction.

Declarer ruffed the second round of clubs in dummy, came to hand with the ace of spades and ruffed another club on the table. When the ace of trumps felled the queen, declarer realized that he was probably going to have to lose two trump tricks. Under the illusion that he needed the diamond finesse for his 10th trick, declarer crossed to the king of diamonds and hooked the jack. East produced the queen for down one.

Had declarer paused to count his tricks, he might have found the winning line. He had four tricks in the side suits, so he needed six trump tricks to fulfill his game. If he could score two club ruffs in dummy and two spade ruffs in hand, he was home.

After dropping the queen of hearts, declarer should cash the king of spades and ruff a spade. To make sure that he can't be tucked back into his hand with a trump, declarer should cash the king of trumps before crossing to the ace of diamonds. West has shown up with four hearts, three clubs, three spades and one diamond. If his remaining cards are a spade and two diamonds, declarer can make the contract by ruffing a spade and cashing the high diamond. But even if West has no more spades and two diamonds, the contract is secure. Declarer ruffs the spade and West can overruff, but sooner or later he must lead a diamond into declarer's K-10 tenace to allow declarer to sneak home.

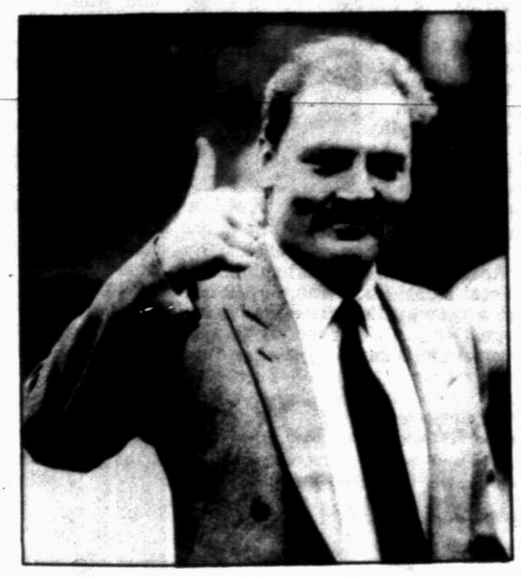
Freed Keach wants to fight drug abuse



Stacy Keach

READING, England (AP) — American actor Stacy Keach, freed today after serving six months of a nine-month prison term for cocaine smuggling, said he hoped to help others fight drug abuse.

The star of the TV show "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" gave a thumbs-up sign to about 100 reporters and cameramen waiting in a steady drizzle, and said:

"It feels great to be free. I made a mistake. I have paid for it." Keach received the standard one-third off his sentence for good behavior, said David Gerrie, his publicist.

"Thank God I am alive and standing on this side of the wall. The past six months have been a painful education," Keach said.

He added, "Now, however, I am looking forward to getting home to America to continuing my work as an actor and helping others in the fight against drug abuse." He did not elaborate.

Keach, 44, was arrested at London's Heathrow Airport on April 4, 1984, carrying 1.3 ounces of cocaine. Also arrested was his secretary, Deborah Steele, 41, who had a small quantity in her pocket.

At his trial, Keach told a judge he had been addicted to cocaine since January of last year, using the drug "as a means of trying to alleviate exhaustion."

The judge sentenced Keach to nine months in prison, while Ms. Steele was sentenced to three months, but waslater granted a suspended sentence.

In the medium-security prison, Keach wrote a book and is looking for a publisher, Gerrie said.

He also has been making plans to marry Polish-born actress Malgosia Tomassi, 28, after his divorce from actress Jill Donohue becomes final.

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Samuel and Patricia Frustaci kept a vigil at the crib of one of their four surviving septuplets, Bonnie Marie, after her tiny, 16-day-old brother, James Martin, died in his parents' arms.

Three other Frustaci infants remained in critical but stable condition at Childrens Hospital, where doctors said they were encouraged by their progress.

The father, saying Bonnie Marie "was hanging on by a thread," wept Thursday as he told reporters how James Martin battled for life.

Frustaci said the small baby was "a fighter" like the infant nicknamed "Peanut," 1-pound David Anthony, who died May 24.

Another of the seven children born 12 weeks early to the Riverside couple, Christina Elizabeth, was dead at birth.

The other three septuplets, Patricia Ann, Stephen Earl and Richard Charles, make progress every day and are gaining weight, doctors said. The infants, delivered by Caesarean section May 21, were using ventilators to breathe.

Hospital officials said Samuel and Patricia Frustaci were taking turns sitting by their perilously ill daughter Thursday night.

"Baby Bonnie is still fighting for life with only a very, very small chance of survival," said Dr. Carrie Worcester, director of newborn intensive care at Childrens Hospital.

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Rock star Kenny Loggins will donate his services at a concert in Erie on Sunday to help the victims of last week's tornadoes, a promoter says.

Ed Traversari, promoter of the concert, said Thursday that Loggins will donate his fee to the American Red Cross. The sum could exceed $20,000, depending on ticket sales.

Loggins, who had been scheduled to appear for some time, told Traversari he had heard about the tornadoes and wanted to know how he could help the victims. Last week's tornadoes killed 64 people in Pennsylvania, 12 in Ohio and 12 in Ontario, Canada.

Traversari said about 3,000 of the center's 7,000 seats have been sold.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rona Barrett says she's looking forward to her return to television this September as senior correspondent for "Entertainment Tonight."

Miss Barrett, who pioneered entertainment reporting on television in 1966, also will do interviews for "Entertainment This Week" and the new show "America," it was announced Thursday.

It will be her first regular stint on television since she departed NBC's "Tomorrow Coast to Coast" in 1982 after a dispute with host Tom Snyder.

"I've been getting my feet wet doing my daily broadcast for Mutual Radio," Ms. Barrett. "I think I'll get right back into it."

She said her duties on the satellite-syndicated "Entertainment Tonight" will include at least three reports a week and breaking news stories plus a major interview for the weekend show.

"Entertainment Tonight," a daily half-hour newscast on the entertainment industry produced by Paramount Domestic Television, has been on the air since 1981. "America," also from Paramount, will debut in the fall with Sarah Purcell, Stuart Damon and McLean Stevenson as hosts.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Boxing great Archie Moore slipped some nasty punches during his 29-year career, but a swarm of bees put the former light heavyweight champ down for the count.

"I've never been defeated like this before," said Moore, 72, who was released from the hospital Thursday after being treated for about 50 bee stings. "For the first few days, I couldn't remember a thing."

Moore, an amateur beekeeper, was stung last Friday when one of the hives in the back yard of his southeast San Diego home broke open as he went to move it.

"The bees were very disturbed," Moore says. "I think they thought I wanted to fight them. They cloaked me. When I was running from them, it looked like I was wearing a robe."

Moore fought 231 times from 1936 to 1965, winning 196 bouts, including 143 by knockout. He won the light heavyweight title in 1952 and held it for nearly a decade.

Democrats questioning central point of tax overhaul plan

O'Neill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, says he is not convinced President Reagan is correct in trying to eliminate the federal tax deduction allowed for state and local taxes.

That provision is a central element of Reagan's plan for overhauling the federal income tax. And, at $40 billion a year by 1990, it is one of the largest sources of revenue in the president's package.

Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said reporters Thursday he still is not persuaded it would be wise to disallow the deduction, which is used by more people than any other in the tax code. Almost 35 million couples and individuals deducted over $100 billion in state, city and county taxes when they filed their federal returns in 1984.

Rostenkowski said he has invited New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, an outspoken opponent of repeal, to appear before the Ways and Means Committee and explain why the provision should remain. The White House says the deduction is a subsidy for fewer than a dozen high-tax states.

Testifying Thursday before a Ways and Means subcommittee, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said that under Reagan's proposal, "the working poor will still be paying more taxes than they did before he took office." He urged additional benefits for those Americans.

O'Neill said it will be difficult for Congress to complete work on a tax bill this year, as Republican leaders have urged. But he said lawmakers should be able to finish the task before the 99th Congress ends in January 1987.

Meanwhile, Rostenkowski acknowledged several Democrats are discussing ways of shifting some of the plan's benefits away from upper-income Americans. One way, said Rostenkowski, would be to create a new tax bracket for the wealthy.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a member of the committee, said that if a fourth bracket were added atop the three Reagan recommended, "it may be the way to go to adjust what the president wants to make it more progressive."

Present law has 15 tax rates and brackets for single people and 14 for couples. They range from 11 percent to 50 percent. Reagan wants to lower the rates and compress them into three brackets for all taxpayers: 15 percent, 25 percent and 35 percent.

Some critics say that would produce huge tax cuts for people with incomes above $250,000 a year and are proposing that a fourth bracket, perhaps 40 percent, apply to the highest income earners.

Under the president's plan, the 35 percent rate would apply only to taxable income — after subtracting deductions and exemptions — of $42,000 or more for single people and $70,000 or more for couples.

Reagan proposes to pay for those rate cuts, higher personal exemptions and lower corporate rates by eliminating or shrinking several deductions.

Rostenkowski said that Reagan, in drafting his own tax proposal, gave up far too much from the plan recommended by the Treasury Department last November. The administration abandoned the November proposal after concluding it had no chance of being passed by Congress.

Senate OKs $38 million for Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate has approved a plan to resume U.S. support for rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government by providing $38 million in non-lethal aid over the next 18 months.

After a 55-42 vote for the aid Thursday, one of its sponsors, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., refused to rule out the possibility that the money could be used for defensive radar or CIA helicopter flights into Nicaragua to ferry supplies to the rebels.

As to exactly how the aid could be used, Nunn said the Reagan administration and Congress would have to work out the "precise understanding behind closed doors." He said if the CIA abused the rules, any congressional consensus supporting the aid "would fall apart."

Liberal Senate Democrats tried unsuccessfully Thursday to place tight restrictions on any new aid to the Contras and to bar use of U.S. combat forces in Nicaragua. Similar efforts were expected today as the Senate continues work on a two-year State Department authorization bill totalling $5.6 billion.

President Reagan praised Thursday's Senate action as "a display of bipartisan concern for the people of Central America and our own national security."

However, the Nicaraguan Embassy condemned the move as "an escalation of U.S. involvement and a major step down the road to interjection of U.S. combat troops. It will prolong the bloodshed in Nicaragua..."

The aid plan, passed by a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats, would repeal a strict prohibition against U.S. support for military action inside Nicaragua, but would bar spending on guns, bullets and lethal weapons. Nunn said military training would also be prohibited.

It would provide $14 million in non-lethal aid to the rebels, known as Contras, this year and $24 million next year. The money could be used for food, clothing, medicines and transportation, possibly funneled through the CIA.

The Democrat-controlled House, which has led opposition to aiding the Contras, is expected to vote on a similar proposal next week.

In supporting the aid plan, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "We should not be embarrassed to support forces that are struggling against Marxism and for democracy."

Nunn said the new assistance would show the United States "stands with those who favor democracy" in Nicaragua. But he added it would also encourage resolving the country's internal disputes peacefully.

The plan contains language urging progress toward a negotiated settlement in the region, and would suspend U.S. economic sanctions if the Sandinista government agrees to a cease-fire and to open negotiations with the rebels.

The measure also calls on the Contras to purge their ranks of any individuals who have engaged in human rights abuses. Also, if negotiations fail, Reagan could ask speedy action to resume military aid.

The CIA supported and trained the Contras from December 1981 until last year when Congress, angered over the CIA-directed mining of Nicaragua's harbors, cut off assistance and enacted legislation last October barring aid that "would have the effect of supporting, directly or indirectly, military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua."

That provision, known as the Boland amendment for its sponsor, Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., would be repealed by the Senate bill.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said, "this is nothing more than logistical support for the Contras' war against the government of Nicaragua, and I do not believe that the United States...should be in the business of overthrowing governments."

Reagan, in a statement released by the White House, said the Senate amendment would "provide support for the freedom fighters who are struggling for liberty and democracy in Nicaragua. The Senate has seen that their struggle is ours — that they need and deserve the help of the American people."

He urged the House "to join with the Senate in sending a signal to both the Sandinistas and to the struggling Nicaraguan democratic opposition: The only resolution to the tragedy in Nicaragua is the same course which the Congress has supported in El Salvador — that of democracy, reconciliation and liberty."

Skelton's lawyer files motion for new trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The attorney for convicted killer John Skelton Thursday filed a belated "second motion" seeking a new trial for the 55-year-old former Odessa businessman. In his motion he contends the Ector County District Attorney's office failed to disclose specific evidence that might have raised reasonable doubt as to Skelton's guilt in the April 1982 bomb death of 46-year-old Joe Lee Neal, a former business associate of Skelton's.

In filing the motion for a new trial in 161st District Court, David Botsford of Austin attached an affidavit signed by Bob Byard, who states he saw a man, near what Byard believed to be Neal's pickup the night before Neal was killed, and another man in the area acting suspiciously.

Byard's affidavit relates that he had gone to Furr's Cafeteria, across the street from Neal's Brentwood Drive home, to pick up some food for his family.

AS HE PULLED into the parking lot, he says, he saw an empty parking space beside a two-tone red pickup, but it was parked at such an angle he had to go around to come in at the same angle to park beside it. Before he could do so, Byard states, a large white pickup pulled in behind the red pickup, blocking the space he wanted.

He found another parking space and went into the cafeteria. As he came out with his food, he said he saw a man standing near the newspaper machine looking toward the red pickup. Byard said he started to walk toward his car when he heard someone yell, "Hey, you." As the man moved toward him, Byard thought he probably wanted to ask directions, but instead the man asked if it had rained in Odessa in the past 24 hours. Byard said it hadn't.

He quotes the man as saying, "We came through Marfa on our way here to do a job and we spent all day in Marfa getting ready to come here." As the man talked, he kept looking in the general direction of the red pickup. Byard claims he got curious, since the conversation seemed strange, and turned around to look at the pickup.

"All of a sudden," he says, "a man appeared next to the driver's side of the two-toned red pickup, like he just stood up from bending down next to it. That man looked down and brushed off his clothes, then glanced in both directions," Byard stated.

IN THE AFFIDAVIT Byard stated the man near the pickup got into an older model car next to Byard's and, when Byard turned back to talk to the other man, he had disappeared.

According to Byard, these incidents occurred "shortly after 8 p.m. on the evening of Friday, April 23, 1982." The next morning he learned from a neighbor, he says, of the explosion at Furr's Cafeteria. But what he had seen the night before "didn't immediately register until he (the neighbor) said a pickup was blown up. I then concluded that what I had seen the evening before the explosion was indeed important since it was the same location as the two-toned red pickup I had seen on the Friday evening," said Byard.

He was very concerned about getting involved, he said. It was two or three weeks later that he decided to do something and called the FBI office in Midland, he added. But someone at the FBI office told him Odessa police already had a suspect and there was nothing to be concerned about.

Due to this assurance, he said, he didn't call Odessa police with the information until nearly 13 months later, as Skelton's trial was about to begin and he saw Skelton's picture and realized Skelton was not one of the men he saw acting suspiciously the night before Neal was killed.

"A DAY OR two before the trial," Byard says he went to the Odessa police station and talked to a woman he believes worked with Detective Lt. Jerry Smith, then a sergeant. She kept asking him about the color of the pickup that had blocked him from the parking space next to the two-tone red truck, Byard says. "She kept asking if it was blue and I kept telling her it was white, but she kept wanting to know if I could be wrong about the color."

Once she became convinced he was positive about the color, she didn't seem interested in the truck or in the description of the two men he had seen. She took his name, address and phone number, saying the detective would contact him. But Byard was never contacted, he stated.

Skelton's trial on a charge of capital murder began June 6, 1983, and ended July 8 after a a 161st District Court jury found Skelton guilty and assessed him the death penalty.

Byard says he attended a few days of the trial, but it wasn't until late December 1984 that he decided what he had seen should be related to Skelton's attorney. He contacted Cliff Hardwick in January 1985.

THE NEXT contact was with Botsford, Skelton's new attorney, who asked him to describe what he had seen in an affidavit. There was more delay because his wife, Byard's said, "had been ill and very nervous and didn't want him to get involved." His affidavit was finally made and notarized June 4 of this year.

Botsford contends Skelton is entitled to a new trial because, despite repeated defense requests and judicial orders prior to Skelton's trial, the Ector County District Attorney's Office failed to hand over any exculpatory evidence which might have created a reasonable doubt. Therefore, Skelton's right to due process under the state and federal constitutions were violated, the attorney charges.

Citing several precedents in such matters, Botsford further argues, "The State's action in failing to disclose the information is critical in light of the rigorous attack leveled at defendant's alibi defense at trial."

Botsford contends that "regardless of whether the Odessa Police Department informed the Ector County District Attorney of the substance of the signatory's (Byard's) oral statement, the Ector County District Attorney was, at minimum, in constructive possession of the exculpatory information and legally suppressed said exculpatory material."

Botsford asked 161st District Court Judge Tryon Lewis to hold a hearing on Skelton's second motion for a new trial, consider Byard's affidavit and enter an order setting aside Skelton's conviction or, in the event that is denied, order the record of the hearing transmitted to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for the appeal pending before that court.

Subsequent to Skelton's conviction and death sentence for the murder of Neal, he was indicted by the Ector County grand jury on four counts of capital solicitation of murder.

During a pre-trial hearing in 70th District Court Wednesday, Judge Gene Ater, who earlier moved that trial to Fort Worth on a change of venue, rejected Botsford's motions to quash the murder-for-hire indictments or dismiss the charges against Skelton. Ater tentatively set the trial for the week of Aug. 5 in Fort Worth and Skelton will face separate trials on each of the four charges because he and his attorney would not agree to consolidation.

Reform bill doubles summer school size

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

In the words of former rock singer Alice Cooper, "School's Out for Summer."

But the more than 500 Midland students attending summer courses this season are singing songs more akin to "We don't need no education...Teacher, leave us kids alone."

So, blame it on House Bill 72, Midland Independent School District officials say.

The massive education reform is being held responsible for more than doubling Midland summer school enrollment this year, denying students the freedom of enjoying relaxing afternoons at neighborhood swimming pools and other seasonal activities.

Final enrollment figures, released this week, show more that 500 elementary and secondary students are enrolled in first semester summer school courses and second semester numbers are expected to be equally high.

"It's just about the largest enrollment we've ever had during summer school," Bowie Elementary School principal Larry Wilkenson said.

Elementary summer school enrollment topped 200 — 50 more students than the reported 150 attending in 1984.

Secondary summer school principal Neil Richmond said the district has seen a significant increase in enrollment for students in grades 7-9.

"The enrollment is just about double what it was last year and we're seeing higher than normal figures at the seventh, eighth and ninth grade level," he said.

To compensate, MISD expanded its course offerings for the 1985 summer session as the result of changes mandated by the bill, according to Maridell Fryar, director of secondary education.

House Bill 72 — a sweeping education reform package passed during a special legislative session in 1984 — specifies that students may not receive credit or be promoted if he/she fails to maintain a grade point average of 70 on a scale of 100.

The bill also instituted statewide changes in curriculum standards as well as grading requirements in an effort "to get back to the basics."

The added requirements were expected to result in more student failures, thus a larger summer school enrollment, according to Mrs. Fryar.

To compensate, MISD expanded its summer school program to include not only "basic skills courses" but also its elective classes, she said.

Courses offered include English, mathematics, social studies and science, vocabulary development, reading and physical education.

First semester classes began Monday at Bowie Elementary School for all elementary students. Secondary students also reported for class Monday at Lee High School. Second semester classes will begin July 2 and continue through Aug. 1.

Cost is $70 per course per semester or $140 per full credit. Times are from 8-11:50 a.m. and 1-5 p.m.

Elementary schools meet 8-9:50 a.m. and 10-11:50 a.m. and the cost is $65 for a two-hour class period, including individualized instruction in reading, language arts and mathematics.

In addition, a preschool program to benefit children with limited English language skills and/or those who are economically disadvantaged is scheduled from 8-11 a.m. July 1-Aug. 23 at DeZavala Annex. To participate, a student must be at least 5 years old by Sept. 1 and have difficulty in speaking or comprehending English. The program will concentrate on English language arts and preparation for the school environment. Transportation will not be provided. This preschool class is free.

MISD also offers multiple driver education classes in four summer sessions.

Session I, now under way, will continue through June 21. Session II will meet from 7-9 a.m., 9-11 am., 11 aa.m.-1 p.m., 1- 3 p.m. or 3-5 p.m. June 3-25. Session III will meet from 7-9 p.m., 9-11 a.m., 11 a.m.-1 p.m., 1-3 p.m. or 3-5 p.m. June 27-July 18. SessionIV will meet from 8-10 a.m. or 10 a.m.-noon July 29-Aug. 16.

Behind the wheel instruction is divided into five sessions. Session A, now under way, will begin Monday and continue through June 22. Session B will be June 24-July 6. Session C will be July 8-20. Session D will be July 22-Aug. 3 and Session E will be Aug. 5-17.

Behind the wheel instruction for sessions A, B, C and D will be from 7-8:30 a.m., 8:30-10 a.m., 10-11:30 a.m., 10-11:30 a.m. or 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Behind the wheel instruction for Session E will be from 6:30-8 a.m., 8-9:30 a.m., 10:15-11:45 a.m. or noon-1:30 p.m.

To be eligible for driver education, students must be at least 15 years old before the first day of classroom instruction.

Cement mixer stolen from site

From Staff Reports

A $4,600 cement mixer and 80 bags of mortar worth a total of $480 were stolen from a construction site at Lee Freshman High School, 1400 E. Oak, according to police reports.

Employees of Roark's of Midland Inc., 1001 W. Louisiana, told police the items were taken sometime between 9:30 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday.

Several storage units at Loop 250 and Midland Drive were broken into Thursday and computer equipment and various tools worth a total of $1,789 were taken, reports said.

George Johnson told police the burglary occurred sometime between noon and 6:11 p.m.

Clyde Blake, 1604, N. Edwards, reported the theft of jewelry worth $1,000 and a $150 revolver. The burglary occurred sometime between 2:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. Thursday, reports said.

A $1,200 cattle guard was reported stolen by John Midkiff, 4407 Dalton, who told sheriff's deputies the cattle guard was taken from his ranch in south Midland County between six and eight weeks ago.

The Kleen Kar Wash, 4826 Billingsley, reported the burglary of $448 in currency from a bank bag on the premises. The burglary occurred sometime between Sunday and Monday, and there was no sign of forced entry, according to reports.

A box with tools worth about $800 was reported stolen from a 1974 Ford pickup. Gary Lee Hale of Stanton told police he parked the pickup at the Sierra Paseo Apartments, 3417 N. Midland, at about 3 a.m. Wednesday, and found the tools missing about 10 a.m.

Schools get $5.1 million for asbestos cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Schools in Houston and San Angelo were awarded a total of more than $5.1 million in federal money for cleanup of asbestos, but a Texas health official says there are uncounted others that did not even apply for the grants.

Alta Loma Elementary School in San Angelo was awaded $21,600 in loans and a $3,298 grant. The rest, in loans, was for 19 schools in Houston.

Only Ohio, with $8.3 million, received more than Texas out of the $45 million available this year under the Asbestos School Hazard Abatement Act of 1984.

Asbestos, a fire-retardant insulator, has been shown to cause cancer when its particles are inhaled. Once widely used, it was phased out in the 1960s and EPA banned it in the mid-1970s.

In the Texas schools that were awarded money, the asbestos had been sprayed on the ceilings of classrooms, gymnasiums, auditoriums, libraries, halls and cafeterias, the EPA said.

Jerry Lauderdale, administrator of the occupational health program at the Texas Department of Health, said Texas school districts submitted requests for cleanup at 169 schools.

"That is certainly not all of them (schools with asbestos) in Texas," Lauderdale said Thursday. "It's probably a small percent."

John Moore, EPA's assistant administrator for pesticides and toxic substances, said the money was divided up among "schools with the greatest financial need and most potential for asbestos hazard."

Moore said EPA is urging schools that did not receive grants this time around to try to deal with their asbestos problems on their own and not wait for federal funds.

EPA is supposed to receive $600 million more in the next seven years for the program, but Moore said there is no guarantee Congress will appropriate any more money.

There are no state funds available for the cleanup, Lauderdale said.

Lauderdale said the federal money was offered as an enticement to schools to come forward and evaluate their asbestos problems.

State health officials have not been able to inspect more than a few of the schools, said Lauderdale. He said it was his opinion that the EPA never gave state officials adequate guidelines for inspecting schools.

But Moore said EPA would be "making our technical expertise available to state and local governments to help them evaluate and select appropriate remedies for asbestos in the remaining schools."

White signs bill raising drinking age to 21

AUSTIN (AP) — In hopes of saving lives and of getting the state more highway funds, Gov. Mark White has signed into law a bill that would raise the drinking age in Texas from 19 to 21.

White also said Thursday he would sign another measure that not only would raise the drinking age to 21 but would provide maximum penalities for anyone driving drunk with an open container of alcoholic beverage in a car or pickup.

In 1984, Congress enacted federal legislation to withhold highway funds from states that do not raise their drinking age to 21 in an effort to decrease highway deaths.

The bill signed Thursday, sponsored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, would become effective Sept. 1, 1986, only if the federal law has not been changed. The drinking age would revert back to 19 if the federal law is held invalid.

White told a crowd in his reception room he was signing the increase in the drinking age "fully aware of the strong feeling on both sides of this issue, but I am convinced that the drinking age should be raised for several reasons.

"First and foremost, there is evidence that raising the drinking age would reduce the number of alcohol-related deaths on Texas highways.

"Second, I think this bill puts Texas into compliance with the congressional mandate and guarantees that more than $100 million in highway funds will flow to Texas in the next two fiscal years."

Prisoner in stable condition after stabbing, TDC says

ROSHARON (AP) — A prisoner was in stable condition after he was attacked in what officials say is the 120th stabbing in a Texas prison this year.

Johnny Harris, 28, was in the Texas Department of Corrections hospital in Galveston after another Ramsey 3 Unit inmate allegedly stabbed him with a knife made from scissors, TDC spokesman Charles Brown said Thursday.

A 27-year-old suspect, serving 15 years for burglary and drug convictions in Bexar County, told investigators Harris made sexual advances in the shower and at the dormitory where they lived, Brown said.

Harris is serving five years for a Harris County conviction of aggravated assault, Brown said.

So far this year, there have been 120 non-fatal stabbings and 12 fatal knifings within the nation's second largest prison system. A female TDC employee was stabbed to death earier this week.

In an unrelated incident Wednesday, three inmates were indicted by a Brazoria County grand jury in Angleton on charges of assaulting prison guards.

Pedro Ancira, 28, serving 25 years for a Caldwell County burglary conviction, was charged with aggravated assault in the Feb. 10 stabbing of David Connery, a guard at the Retrieve Unit near Angleton.

Trailways celebrates 'runaway' anniversary

By SUZANNE GAMBOA

DALLAS (AP) — Tina Lane ran away from her Indianapolis home at age 16 to Florida, only to end up working in a fast food restaurant earning $60 to $80 a week.

Tired of working nine-hour days to make ends meet, Tina returned home six months later despite her inability to afford bus fare. She is one of 4,000 runaways who in the last year were able to take an all-expense-paid bus trip back home.

Since June 7, 1984, Dallas-based Trailways Inc. has been helping wayward teens return home by providing a free ticket to their destination. The company transports an average of 14 runaways a day back home.

"I'd probably still be working to earn bus fare home," Tina said.

Troy Slover, 17, headed toward Florida with a friend unaware that the van the two were driving had been stolen.

"I wanted to go across the states and see how the world was," he said. "I got tired of home."

Later police arrested Troy and his friend in Arizona. He was sent to a juvenile center there, but police contacted his father in Sacramento, Calif., and offered Troy a free ticket home.

"I was trying to figure out how I was going to get home without money," he said. "They came and got me at the center and told me about the ticket. When I got off the bus in Sacramento, I ran straight for my dad."

The parent-child reunions are the result of Trailways' "Operation: Home Free," which is celebrating its first anniversary today.

Trailways spokesman Roger Rydell said the program is a community relations project that has had a "dynamic impact" and possibly is the first comprehensive nationwide program to assit missing children.

The idea was fostered by a Bridgewater, N.J., police captain who had spent 15 years working with runaways.

Capt. Richard Voorhees, 47, said he came up with the idea after he attended a conference that featured John Walsh, father of Adam Walsh, whose death was the basis for the television movie "Adam."

"He blasted the police," the 25-year police veteran said. "He said we weren't taking reports of missing children seriously. We were treating them as routine calls."

Three days after writing Trailways urging them to help design a comprehensive plan to assist runaways, Voorhees said he received an enthusiastic response from the bus line.

"We were looking for a community project two Christmases ago. We came up with the idea of assisting runaways but we had some problems, so the idea got shelved," Rydell said.

The biggest obstacle was finding a way to confirm children as runaways, Rydell said. But Voorhees introduced the transportation line to the International Asssociation of Chiefs of Police, which maintains a national registry of persons reported missing.

Within 4 weeks, Rydell said, Trailways launched "Operation: Home Free."

"This is an example of what the private sector can do to address social needs," he said.

Rydell said runaways using the program have come from varying socio-economic backgrounds with the average runaway being about 14 years old and with California, the Southwest and Florida as popular spots for runaways.

"It's an issue that knows no socio-economic boundaries," Rydell said.

Houston members of the Sikh Association of America march through downtown Houston Thursday. The Sikhs were protesting the policies of Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. They plan to march again when Gandhi visits Houston next week. Mounted policeman Steven Fingerhut keeps a watch over the march.

Houston police plan tight security for march

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police say security will be tight at a march by the Sikh Association of America during the upcoming visit of Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Gandhi is scheduled to fly to Houston from Washington June 15 with Vice President George Bush.

A month ago, the FBI announced it had aborted a Sikh plot to assassinate Gandhi during his U.S. visit.

The Sikh association asked police for extra protection during their march.

Capt. Sam Nuchia, head of the Houston Police Department's Criminal Intelligence Division, said extra security measures were planned for the Sikh march — but not because of the request.

"We would not base our police presence on a request, but on our own evaluation of security or traffic problems that these things might involve," Nuchia said.

During his one-day visit, Gandhi is expected to tour the Johnson Space Center, have lunch with Mayor Kathy Whitmire and attend a reception given by Indians living in the Houston area, said Maryke Cramerus, deputy director of the Houston International Protocol Alliance.

"Every possible precaution is being taken," Cramerus said.

Fifth grade successfully lobbies city council

By JO ANN MITCHELL

STINNETT, Texas (AP) — If you don't think the average citizen has any input into city council actions, don't tell that to the fifth grade English classes at Stinnett Elementary School.

But then maybe we're not dealing with average kids.

They turned a lesson on letter writing into a campaign that ended with the Stinnett City Council restoring the city park.

The city installed new playground eqiupment and renovated the restrooms. A new paint job went on the old playground equipment. Bushy trees were cut down near the tennis courts, and the fence around the tennis courts was repaired. More dumpsters have also been placed at the park because of the students' suggestions.

The council plans to install a 24-by-40-foot, open-air building that may be used for picnics, family reunions and concerts. It will be wired with electricity for lights and public-address systems.

It didn't end there.

The kids made posters and also explained to the rest of the elementary school students what the city had done to the park. They asked for their help in keeping the park in good condition.

Out of the 55 students in the two classes, 10 were selected to attend a City Council meeting and they read their letters to the council.

"Since we had just elected a president this year, I decided to let the students pick them by secret ballot," said their teacher Betty Blankenship. "I wasn't about the pick them."

The elected students then reported to their other classmates, and Ms. Blankenship said the students asked a lot of questons about the council meeting.

Stinnett Mayor Ronnie Griffin received letters from all the students, and he said they did have a large part in the council's decision to make the changes.

Griffin did an unusual thing for a man busy in government and in his job at Panhandle Eastern. He called every student personally to talk about the letter he had received.

"When the students visited our meeting," Griffin said, "the council told them we would do the repairs, but they would have to do their part. The restrooms had been damaged by vandalism, and if we fixed them up, they must help us keep them in good shape."

The city now leaves the restrooms open during the day, but locked at night because that's when the vandalism occurred, Griffin said.

He thought most of the student's suggestions were good, but several went a little too far, he said. One student asked for a park ranger. Another wanted a summer recreation program.

"Our budget can't include that expense, even though we would like to have one," he said.

He said they stressed to the children that the park is owned by the city, and it's their tax dollars that are being used to repair it.

"We asked them to report vandalism to the police department. Chief (Utah) Bentley may be swamped all summer, with the kids' enthusiasm," he said.

The students had individual contributions to make:

Brooke Hemley thanked the council for being considerate enough to spend money on them. Vicki Williams said if she saw anybody littering in the park she would report it immediately. Kyla Hertel said she would pick up food and trash thrown down, and she would also like to get the shoe polish off the slide and picnic tables.

Marsha Cullon said she thinks they can all keep the park cleaned up when the city is finished. Jennifer Jeffress thanked the city for starting a new building so they wouldn't be so hot this summer. Brian Stone said he hoped the restrooms could stay clean and nice for at least a couple of years. Brad Jett said he thought it was a good idea that the city was reopening the restrooms after all the trouble they'd been through with them.

Dena Bremer said now they won't have to drive home just to use the restroom.

Ms. Blankenship said, that at the council meeting, some men offered to provide pipe and volunteered to clean the park.

Aggressive GOP drive nets Abilene state representative

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans' aggressive recruiting drive paid off again today with three-term state Rep. Gary Thompson's announcement that he is now a Republican.

The Abilene lawmaker had made it clear throughout the recently ended legislative session that he was done with the Democrats.

"Today, sadly, the national Democratic Party is the party of Jimmy Carter, Walter Mondale, Geraldine Ferraro and Jesse Jackson. It is the party whose principal thrust has become a concentration of power at the national level in domestic policy and retreat internationally," Thompson said.

He was joined at the news conference by state GOP Chairman George Strake and recent GOP convert Kent Hance, a probable Republican contender for governor in 1986.

Thompson, chairman of the Abilene Christian University government department, said party-switching had been on his mind since 1972, when the Democrats nominated George McGovern for president.

> (The Republicans') "economic program of growth and opportunity is the answer to this country's economic problems."
>
> — Abilene State Rep. Gary Thompson

The Republicans' "economic program of growth and opportunity is the answer to this country's economic problems," said Thompson.

"Its philosophy with respect to the grave moral issues of the day — abortion, prayer in schools, homosexual rights — accord with my own views," he said.

White: Homes could be located in industrial areas

AUSTIN (AP) — One option for overcoming neighborhood opposition to group homes for the retarded might be to put them in industrial rather than residential areas, Gov. Mark White says.

"You don't just go out there and move them in next door to a stable neighborhood in which it would tend to diminish property values or endanger the stability of the neighborhood," White said.

"Possibly an industrial section of the community might be an area where they can be placed," he said.

White's comments during a Thursday news conference followed questions about a federal judge who Wednesday said it was "abundantly clear" Texas has failed to comply with his 2-year-old order to find community homes for some residents of state schools.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ordered the state to find homes for 279 retarded people by September 1986.

The governor said the state has time and money to meet that order.

Finding locations for homes to house small groups of retarded people often has been difficult, with opposition from neighborhoods and sometimes city officials.

The Legislature this year approved legislation that would keep cities from using zoning and property laws to prohibit group homes for the disabled.

About six hours after his news conference, aide Janis Monger said White will sign the bill.

White noted that El Paso has been successful in locating a "restitution center" — housing criminals who are working to repay victims — in an industrial area.

El Paso board wants airport security firm replaced

EL PASO (AP) — A city advisory board has recommended replacing the airport's security company after its employees secretly placed a dummy hand grenade in a passenger's purse during a monitoring test.

The city's airport board passed a motion 4-1 Wednesday suggesting that the El Paso City Council direct the airlines at the El Paso International Airport to terminate a contract with Burns International Security.

Board members said the company let its employees violate a written policy that says only consenting passengers will be used in security tests.

On Saturday, a San Antonio man complained that a dummy grenade was put in his wife's purse at an airport checkpoint to test the guard's alertness.

Ken Bryce, a 29-year-old medical student returning to San Antonio with his wife and child, spotted the grenade in a side pocket of the purse as it passed through an X-ray machine at the checkpoint.

Bryce said he snatched the grenade and was going to throw it away from his family when a security guard grabbed his hand and told him it was just a test.

Airport Manager George Perry said a letter of apology has been sent to the Bryces.

The advisory board said it still questioned the reliability of the security company even though Burns officials have said unwitting passengers no longer will be used in security checks.

Murky loch still mysterious

Copley News Service

You probably don't believe in the Loch Ness Monster. Still, let's see you try to do this. ....

— Stand on the shore of this rugged, moody, 23-mile-long mountain lake and gaze across to where the hills rise steeply on the other side. ...

— Stop to picnic on a bluff 700 feet above the water. Watch the fishing boats creep along the edges of the loch; watch the breezes dance and turn in the canyon below you, making sudden, unexpected rollings on the water. ...

— Or ride the small white passenger boat that churns along the narrow loch, and see the shore change from green, sheep-speckled fields to heather-painted hillsides to near-vertical granite cliffs. ...

Let's see you do those things, you skeptic, without half-hoping, without half-expecting that Nessie's three-humped back or dinosaur neck will suddenly rise from a churning patch of water before your widening eyes.

There are few visitors, skeptical or not, who survey Loch Ness with their cameras tucked somewhere out of reach.

You probably don't believe in Nessie, and you'll probably not see it — although thousands say they have — if you visit this uncrowded, little-developed spot. But if you'll settle for stark mountain scenery, come anyway.

Drive the roads — sparsely traveled, good, but sometimes narrow — through hills rich in heather and evergreens. Dip down along the shores of an endless chain of lochs. Raise your eyes to the snowy mountains not far away.

Pass a couple zillion grazing sheep and an occasional white farmhouse with venerable stone outbuildings and ancient stone fences. Drive slowly and watch for deer and pheasant, as well as for horses, cows and sheep.

And be patient with the shutterbug in the group who'll want to stop every few hundred feet to add another stone bridge, rippling stream or mountain vista to his or her collection.

You probably wouldn't believe in Nessie even if you talked with those who think they've seen it. Still, it's a grand topic of conversation for residents and visitors around the loch.

Listen to Anthony Harmsworth, curator of the Loch Ness Monster Exhibition at Drumnadrochit — a good place to visit, even for skeptics; it's only 15 miles by good road from Inverness:

"Once I saw something," Harmsworth recalls. "I can't say it was a monster."

He and his wife were walking their dogs one Sunday near the loch, when something about 2 feet wide briefly rose, perhaps 5 feet, out of the water, then vanished.

"I don't know what it was," he says. "I can't say it was an animal. I can only say I saw something unusual."

Or listen to Dr. J.A. MacLean, retired director of education for Inverness-shire, who remembers driving beside the loch with his 10-year-old granddaughter in 1952:

They saw a trawler in the water and the child said, "That's a boat — but what's that over yonder?" he recalls. "It was something leaving a wake. By the time I could stop, it had gone down.

"I said, 'Now, Joan, don't let us tell anybody but the family, because otherwise the press will be at our door taking photographs of us and we don't want that.

"A week later, Joan said: 'The Monros think it's nonsense that we saw the monster.'

"But six months later, Joan came home and reported: 'The Munros saw the monster for half an hour last Sunday.'"

Or listen to Alan Scott, long a journalist in the Highlands and now chief press officer for the region's energetic development board:

He was fishing alone on the loch one morning in 1976. "It was flat calm. There wasn't a ripple on the water. There was not a cloud in the sky."

Across the loch, near ruined Urhuquart Castle, "there was this object sitting in the water, just a hump. It wasn't moving.

"I watched it for about five minutes. Suddenly it increased to four or five times its height and got broader at the base. Then it went down and the water just boiled."

Scott has been a believer since his newspaper days when he interviewed dozens of people who had reported sightings on the loch.

"Very quickly," he says, "you came to know the ones who were serious. I talked to too many sane, sensible people who were not thrown off by ripples or logs or otters or any other thing."

Agrees Harmsworth: "There's lot of people who are a lot of rotten liars."

You probably still don't believe in Nessie, but you're invited anyway to join the scientific team that is methodically scouring the loch in search of it.

They've largely given up on surface observations (the loch's too big; Nessie's appearances too rare) and on underwater photography (the depths are murky with suspended particles of peat) and are concentrating on fixed and boat-borne sonar.

During the summer-long search, volunteers help man the sonar stations, collect water samples, chart the bottom of the loch and handle other chores.

Volunteers needn't be scientists, says Harmsworth, who doubles as treasurer of the project. "They can be anything, anything at all. A garage mechanic could come along and do it. In fact, they might be more useful than some others."

Volunteers are asked to pay for their food and shelter, to stay for at least a week and to make their own way to the loch. It's only a short drive from Inverness, which in turn is just a one and one-half hour flight from London's Heathrow and Gatwick airports.

Information on the project — and the monster — is available from Loch Ness Monster Exhibition, Box 1, Loch Ness Centre, Drumnadrochit, Inverness-shire.

Does Harmsworth worry that the investigators will conclude there is no Loch Ness monster, thus putting himself and his center out of business?

"Whether there's a monster or not," he says, "our position is, people will still want to know about it."

Legends of vampires linked to rare disease

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Have a little sympathy for Count Dracula and the Wolf Man. They were bloodthirsty, but it may not have been their fault.

A Canadian chemist reports that the film vampires and werewolves popularized by Bela Lugosi and Lon Chaney Jr. may have been based on real victims of a rare group of genetic disorders.

"The folk mythology may have had some truth," said David Dolphin of the University of British Columbia. The diseases, known as porphyrias, are associated with a malfunction in the biochemical production of heme, the red pigment in blood.

Victims of the diseases are extremely sensitive to the sun and accumulate chemicals called porphyrins that can transform oxygen into a toxic substance that destroys skin tissue. The result, said Dolphin, can be devastating: Skin lesions may be "so severe that the nose and fingers may be destroyed;" as the gums degenerate, the teeth become prominent and fang-like, and "the unfortunate individuals who suffer from this disease may become very hairy."

"Imagine, if you will, the manner in which an individual in the Middle Ages would have been received if they only went out at night. ... They would have an animal look about them, being hairy, large of tooth and badly disfigured. It has been suggested, and it seems more than likely, that such people might well have been considered werewolves," Dolphin told a chemistry session here at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The story, however, goes beyond werewolves to vampires," said Dolphin, who studies the body's heme proteins.

Today, the rare and incurable disorder, carried but not always expressed by about one in 200,000 individuals, can be treated in part by avoiding sunlight or receiving heme injections that can alleviate some of the symptoms, Dolphin said.

"Since in the Middle Ages an injection of the red pigment of blood would not be possible," Dolphin said, "what else might take its place? If a large amount of blood were to be drunk, then the heme in it, if it passes through the stomach wall to the blood stream, would serve the same purpose."

"It is our contention that blood-drinking vampires were in fact victims of porphyria trying to alleviate the symptoms of their dreadful disease. The folklore concerning the nocturnal behavior of vampires would, of course, be consistent with their photosensitivity," he said.

Legends about vampires suggest that their victims turn into vampires as well. "That's also explicable," Dolphin said.

Long ago, less travel and more inbreeding might have made porphyrias more common in some parts of the world. But those who carry the gene for the disease do not always show symptoms, which may be triggered by stress.

Today, attacks may be triggered by alcohol or drugs. In the past, if one porphyria victim bit another carrier of the disease, blood loss could have triggered it, Dolphin said.

He also cited a chemical basis for the legend about sleeping with a wreath of garlic around the neck to ward off vampires.

Liver functioning involves chemicals known as cytochromes P-450 that also contain heme. They help rid the body of waste, but some drugs and chemicals can destroy liver heme functioning. A key component of garlic can do the same thing, Dolphin said.

For a porphyria victim, he said, this "could make the symptoms of the disease much worse, painful and even fatal. Can you imagine a more powerful 'talisman' against vampires than this?"

In its most severe form, porphyria also can bring on severe nervous attacks and mental illness. Dolphin noted that King George III, who suffered from attacks of delirium, is thought by many to have been a victim of porphyria. He died in 1820 at the age of 81.

There are few severely ill victims of the disease today, but Dolphin showed a recent photograph of a 40-year-old American sufferer with a shrunken face and vampire-like teeth.

Smoking reduces blood in brain

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

People can increase blood flow to the brain by quitting cigarette smoking, even if they have smoked for 30 years or more, a new study concludes.

"Evidence suggests that nicotine and possible other constituents of cigarette smoke promote arterial vasoconstriction," or narrowing of arteries, reports Robert L. Rogers in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Rogers and other researchers at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston studied 268 volunteers with an average age of 60-some nonsmokers, some smokers, and some who had quit.

Those who had never smoked had the best blood flow to the brain, measured by tracing tiny particles of xenon the subjects inhaled.

Those who quit smoking had uniformly better blood flow than those who continued to smoke.

Hearing loss studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hearing loss can be slow and subtle over time, but in most cases it can be dealt with effectively once detected.

For persons aged 55 and over, in fact, it is not unusual to have at least some hearing loss, reports the American Association of Retired Persons.

To help people detect the signs of a problem and consider ways of dealing with it, the association has published a new booklet, "Have You Heard: Hearing Loss and Aging."

A copy of the booklet can be obtained, at no charge, by writing to AARP, Fulfillment Section, 1909 K. St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20049.

The first signs of hearing loss may be straining to hear, and constantly asking people to repeat things, the booklet says. It includes a series of simple checks to determine if hearing is impaired — such as listening to the sound of a watch.

The causes of hearing loss are discussed, as well as some suggested questions to ask a doctor if one is needed.

Finally, if a hearing aid is necessary, the different kinds are discussed and a list of organizations and other sources of information is included.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed but generally higher in early European trading on today. Gold prices rose.

Currency dealers said the market was quiet ahead of the scheduled release later today of the U.S. May unemployment figures.

"If the unemployment figure is worse than expected, it could move the dollar lower," said one Frankfurt dealer.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar eased to close the week at 248.60 yen, down from late Thursday's 248.90, and nearly 3 yen lower than last Friday's 251.78. The dollar was quoted later in Europe at 248.92 yen.

The British pound cost $1.2725, slightly more expensive than $1.2722 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at $315.75 bid an ounce, down from $316.00 at the close Thursday, and it eased in later trading. London's five major bullion houses set the midmorning "fixing" at $315.00.

In Zurich, gold opened at $315.70 bid, up from $315.50 late Thursday, but eased around 10 cents later.

In Hong Kong, gold closed at $316.19 bid, up 34 cents from Thursday's close.

Silver was quoted in London at $6.16 bid an ounce, compared with $6.14 on late Thursday.

InterNorth clears way for HNG acquisition

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — InterNorth has reached an agreement with the Federal Trade Commission over its proposed acquisition of Houston Natural Gas Corp., company officials said.

The agreement removes a major obstacle to the proposed $2.3 billion purchase of the Texas company.

"We are pleased to be in the position to successfully close the tender offer for HNG's shares," InterNorth Chairman Sam Segnar said in a printed statement released Thursday.

Omaha-based InterNorth also said that shareholders had tendered 18,723,021 shares of HNG's stock to InterNorth by 5 p.m. EDT Wednesday. That is 58 percent of the Texas firm's shares.

InterNorth had said that to proceed with the acquisition, it needed at least 16.5 million shares, 50 percent of the total by 5 p.m. EDT today, when the $70-per-share tender offer expires.

InterNorth spokesman Randy Blauvelt said the company expects to conclude the acquisition in July.

The FTC, which reviews mergers under federal antitrust laws, twice had requested information on the acquisition proposal. InterNorth said the agreement with the FTC ends the period under which the agency could object to the acquisition plan.

It calls for the combined company, proposed to be named HNG InterNorth, to sell four holdings within the next year. Those include:

— InterNorth's 50 percent interest in the Valero Energy Corp. InterNorth earlier had agreed to that sale in a settlement of lawsuits with Valero.

— HNG's Llano Inc. pipeline, a 580-mile line that gathers natural gas in southeast New Mexico.

— HNG's 25 percent interest in the Red River Pipeline System, a 360-mile line inside Texas.

— One-half of HNG's stock in Oasis Pipeline Co., a 523-mile line inside Texas.

Blauvelt said the FTC sought the sales to avoid the possible lessening ot competition resulting from InterNorth's HNG purchase by ensuring that the pipelines will continue to compete with HNG InterNorth.

The pipelines are connected to the Permian and Anadarko gas-producing regions, InterNorth said.

"The selling of the pipeline facilities will have no substantial effect on the gas purchasing, transportation of marketing ability of the combined company," HNG Chairman Kenneth L. Lay said in a printed statement.

Lay will be president and chief executive of the combined company and head of Houston Natural Cas, which will keep its headquarters in Houston.

InterNorth said it has accepted for payment all shares tendered so far.

Stock market hits new high as retail sales mixed

Associated Press

The sluggish U.S. economy that apparently contributed to the mixed sales results reported by the nation's largest retailers for May also led to a sharp decline in interest rates, giving a boost to the stock market, analysts say.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 6.72 on Thursday to a new peak of 1,327.28, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index of all its listed common shares gained 0.45 to a new high of 110.69.

The Census Bureau said Thursday that government programs provide more than $1 out of every $10 received by Americans as income. But it said the individual impact of those programs, as expected, varies dramatically according to income.

Among the major retailers, industry leader Sears, Roebuck & Co. said its May sales dipped 1.3 percent from a year earlier, a period when sales were strong for most of the industry.

Third-ranked J.C. Penney Co. said its May sales fell 1.8 percent, but K mart Corp., ranked second, said sales for those stores at least a year old edged up 3.2 percent.

"In general, the May sales reports were disappointing and in our opinion reflected the continued slowing economic environment," said Jeffrey Feiner of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Feiner and other analysts said they detected signs of slowing consumer spending, which they said might reflect a decline in consumers' confidence about the economy.

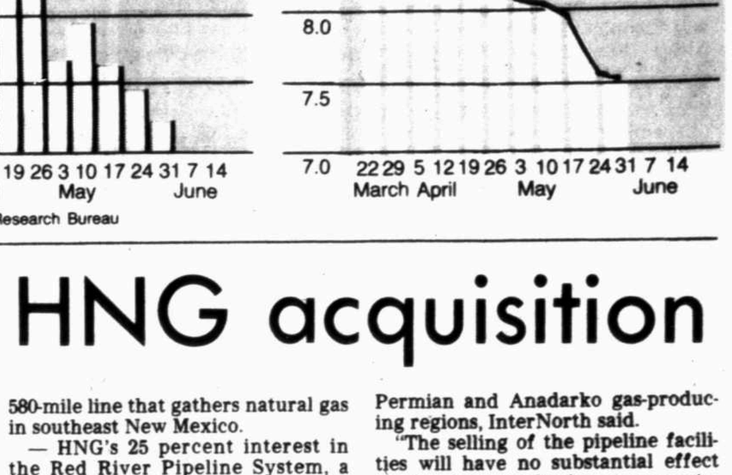
There is speculation on Wall Street that the Federal Reserve will take additional action to drive interest rates lower in an effort to further stimulate the economy.

The Fed tries to promote sustained, moderate growth in the economy without making money so available that it drives up inflation. But credit analysts said that even though the money supply is growing faster than the Fed might like, the central bank likely would concentrate on the weak economy.

The Fed reported that the nation's basic money supply — which represents funds readily available for spending — jumped $2.6 billion in late May, an increase about $1 billion higher than what observers had expected. But because Wall Street believes the Fed is preoccupied with the economy, the report caused barely a ripple in the money markets, analysts said.

In its income report, the Census Bureau said the nation's more than 84 million households had average monthly incomes of $2,261 in the second quarter of last year. The largest share came from earnings, including wages, salary or income from self-employment, but government programs provided the second-largest share, averaging $10.70 out of every $100 received as income.

Social Security was by far the most important government source of income reported, providing $7 of the $10.70 attributed to government sources. Other programs listed included federal government pensions, 80 cents; state and local government pensions, 80 cents; military pensions, 70 cents; Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other cash assistance, 60 cents; Veterans Administration, 40 cents; and Supplemental Security Income, 40 cents of every $100.



GM officials see electronics as auto industry's 'new frontier'

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s willingness to spend $5 billion for Hughes Aircraft Co. can be explained by looking under the hood of a new car.

"The cost of computers and electronics will be $1,200 a car by 1990 compared with $500 today. I think GM wants to make sure it has the right pieces," said Arthur Davis, an auto industry analyst.

GM Chairman Roger B. Smith announced Wednesday his company was the winner in the nationwide blind bidding for Hughes, offering $2.7 billion cash and more than $2.3 billion in stock for the defense electronics specialist.

GM's biggest domestic rival, Ford Motor Co., and Boeing Co. also were prime bidders.

Thomas O'Grady, a senior director of the research firm Chase Automotive Services, said GM went for Hughes as a way to improve its electronics quickly in the face of mounting competition from imported Japanese cars, which carry a significant cost advantage and are growing in sophistication.

Aerospace, O'Grady said, "has been geared toward high tech for a long time because of competition and investment funding from the government." For that reason, he expects Ford to shop for another aerospace partner.

"The Japanese have the lead in automotive electronics," said John Hammond, senior economist and automotive industry analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "They were already leading in automotive design."

Roger B. Smith

Automakers today are using computers and miniature electronics systems for precise control of emissions and gasoline use on fuel-injected engines. Use of electronics in transmissions and for exotic options such as satellite navigation systems are coming.

"I think we've made the major developments already in terms of road handling and safety and emissions and fuel economy and the big thing left is electronics," Smith said at the New York news conference where the winning bid was announced. "It's the new frontier."

GM also may as the automaker steps up its use of robots and automated machines and the mating of those systems with computers.

GM's most advanced system has its debut this fall when its new assembly plant opens in Detroit. There, a microchip bearing a customer's order for, say, a red Buick Riviera with an assortment of options, will be attached to the raw metal shell of the car. As the car body moves through the assembly plant, computers will read the chip's message and apply the appropriate paint and fetch the right parts for that car.

The system is so sophisticated that, if the car is to have two-tone paint, a computer will route the car off the assembly line and back through the paint shop, where robots will read the chip again and apply the second paint color.

Parts suppliers at GM divisions and outside companies will be tapped into the same computers to get their orders.

That kind of technology has been made possible by GM's $2.5 billion acquisition last fall of Electronic Data Systems Corp., a giant computer services company that also is handling GM's big data processing chores, from computer design of cars to handling the health care claims of 750,000 employees worldwide.

Bethlehem Steel completes sales force restructuring

From Staff Reports

Bethlehem Steel Supply Division has completed a major restructuring of its sales force at six locations.

According to Bethlehelm, an unspecified number of employees were laid off or asked to take early retirement at sales offices in Houston, Dallas, Midland, Tulsa, Denver and New Orleans, in an effort to streamline the firm and position it in the market as it exists today, rather than four years ago. It is thought that most of the employees laid off or taking early retirement were in the uppler management levels.

Bethlehelm, which is expected to detail the restructuring in a press release later this week said the move was to centralize operations and utilize product specialists in the areas of tubulars, machinery and general supplies, but no stores will be closed and operations will not be curtailed.

Said a company spokesman: "Bethlehelm is not in trouble. We just needed to get more profitable by getting leaner and more effecient — just as a number of the major oil companies have done in the last few years."

E.F. Hutton officials subpoenaed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top officials of E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc. were subpoenaed by a House Judiciary subcommittee to testify at a June 19 hearing on the company's $4.35 billion fraudulent check-writing scheme.

The subcommittee on crime, in a series of unanimous voice votes Thursday, also subpoenaed documents from Hutton and records of banks that were defrauded by the brokerage firm.

Hutton pleaded guilty May 2 to 2,000 felony counts of mail and wire fraud resulting from the scheme to intentionally write checks in excess of funds on deposit at more than 400 U.S. commercial banks. Hutton also agreed to pay a $2 million fine.

No individuals were named in the Justice Department's criminal information, nor was the firm's parent company, E.F. Hutton Group Inc.

The subpoenas seek the appearance June 19 of Thomas Lynch, vice chairman of E.F. Hutton Group; Roger Fomon, E.F. Hutton Group's chairman; Thomas Moreley, identified on the subpoena as a "money mobilizer" for E.F. Hutton & Co.; and Michael Castellano, comptroller of E.F. Hutton & Co.

Nuclear project partners postpone Brown & Root suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The four partners in the South Texas Nuclear Project considered suing Brown & Root Inc., the former builder, in mid-1979 for problems at the project, but held off taking legal action for 2½ years, court documents indicate.

Legal representatives of the partners — Houston Lighting & Power Co., Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi, and the cities of San Antonio and Austin — met in July 1979 to discuss a possible suit against Brown & Root, according to a confidential memo, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

"Management Committee wants to explore possible lawsuits against B&R," the memo said, referring to officials of the four partners. "Simultaneously do not want to rock boat of project team."

The memo, dated July 30, 1979, was written by Ron Stinson, an official of the consulting firm of Management Analysis Corp., which had been hired to study the performance of Brown & Root and Houston Lighting & Power at the project. The firm was also asked to pull together information that could have been used in determining whether to file a suit.

The partners took no action until December 1981, when they sued Brown & Root and its parent firm, the Halliburton Co. for breach of contract. The suit was filed after Brown & Root quit as builder. The partners sought more than $6 billion in damages from cost overruns and construction delays at the project being built near Bay City.

The memo is among the millions of pages of documents compiled in the lawsuit and made public last week by state District Judge G.P. Hardy Jr. of Matagorda County. Hardy lifted his order that had kept the documents under seal after all of the parties, except Austin, announced they had agreed to a $750 million settlement. Austin owns 16 percent of the project and has been given time to decide whether to join the settlement.

Other court papers indicate that officals of Brown & Root and the Houston utility were worried as early as 1979 about getting sued over problems at the project, the American-Statesman said.

In a sworn statement, Joseph Munisteri, a former Brown & Root vice president, said he asked Houston Lighting & Power official George Oprea in May 1979 whether the utility was planning to sue. Munisteri said he was worried that the threat of a suit would hurt morale. Oprea, who was senior vice president in charge of the project, said the utility would not sue "as long as you give me the best people you have in Brown & Root."

Munisteri also indicated that Oprea, who has since retired, was worried about the partners suing Houston Lighting & Power. He said he questioned Oprea in the summer of 1979 after an official of the Houston utility went over his head to complain about progress at the project. Munisteri quoted Oprea as saying: "Our lawyers told us we had to do it to protect ourselves."

Austin sued Houston Lighting & Power in January 1983 on charges of misrepresentation and mismanagement. No hearings have been held on that suit.

Donoghue's Money Fund Averages (TM)
(Averages for all 262 taxable funds)		47	7.47	7.75
30-day average yield 7.66

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 262 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 decreased $1.6 billion to $201.2 billion during the week ended June 4, 1985. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 7.47 percent from 7.55 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 7.66 percent from 7.73 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity increased two days to 47 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "This week's average maturity lengthened from 45 to 47 days indicating that money fund managers expect further declines in short-term interest rates. After four consecutive weeks of increases, taxable money fund assets decreased by $1.6 billion. The outflow was primarily from institutional funds. Pension fund managers may be moving some of their accounts to the equity market to take advantage of the recent bullish trend."

Nuclear commission begins 24-hour monitoring of Three Mile Island

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — The Three Mile Island nuclear plant, poised to reopen after a six-year shutdown, will suffer glitches as it ascends to full power, but the chances of another accident are remote, plant and government officials say.

"There will be equipment malfunctions. There will be delays," said Philip Clark, president of plant operator GPU Nuclear Corp. "We recognize that it is a long time since our people have actually operated the plant at power."

"We don't expect an error-free, perfect startup," said Thomas Murley, regional administrator of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

GPU Nuclear announced Thursday that unless a court steps in, the company will begin an atomic chain reaction at Unit 1 on Tuesday, and gradually bring the plant to full power by mid-September.

In a preliminary step towards restart next week, plant technicians planned to bring Unit 1 up to operating temperature and pressure sometime this morning, said TMI spokesman Gordon Tomb.

The process — which does not involve turning on the reactor itself — uses four 9,000-horsepower coolant pumps to build heat and pressure and has been done four times since 1981.

The facility was already shut down when the adjacent Unit 2 was crippled in the worst accident in U.S. commercial nuclear history on March 28, 1979.

No other reactor has reopened after such a long hiatus, Murley said at a news conference.

"One expects that the operators might have gotten rusty," he said. "There's a substantial amount of equipment that has not been tested for years."

Murley said he expected a series of "unusual events" — the least serious category of nuclear emergency — and automatic reactor shutdowns during the three months planned to bring the plant to full power.

But Clark and Murley expressed confidence that the plant can be operated safely and that the chances of the 1979 episode repeating itself are slim because of the lessons learned.

"You can't make flat, categorical statements that something will never happen," Clark said. But any kind of accident is "far less likely than it was before," he said.

"We've satisfied ourselves as best we can, short of operation, that this plant is ready to go," Murley said. "We've learned our lessons. The utility's learned its lessons."

Ellyn Weiss, counsel for the Union of Concerned Scientists, said the likelihood of another accident is the motivation for the group's efforts to block the restart.

"We do firmly believe that the probability of an accident at Three Mile Island is significantly greater than the probability of an accident at other plants," she said.

Her group, the state of Pennsylvania and others, saying the NRC did not sufficiently investigate GPU Nuclear's management integrity, have asked the 3rd U.S. Circuit Curt of Appeals to stay last week's NRC decision allowing Unit 1 to start up.

The NRC told the court in a 139-page document filed Thursday that the agency had "conducted the most comprehensive NRC adjudicatory proceeding likely ever held."

The commission said the risk of an immediate accident at the plant was "so low that it cannot amount to irreparable injury for purposes of a stay."

Also Thurday, the NRC began round-the-clock monitoring of the plant, which will continue for two to three weeks, followed by 16-hour and then 12-hour coverage, Murley said. At most nuclear plant starts, 24-hour coverage lasts about a week, he said.

Judge rules against non-smiling employee

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal judge says American Airlines had the right to fire a flight attendant because he did not smile enough at airline passengers.

U.S. District Judge Robert O. Belew Jr. ruled Thursday against Robert W. Cox, 38, of Keller, who sued the airline in 1981 for alleged sex discrimination before his probation as a flight attendant had ended.

Cox, who worked for the airline from November 1974 to April 1975, claimed in his suit that he was a good employee and met all requirements of the job except for the smile. He sought reinstatement as an American employee and back wages.

Belew said he was upholding American's policy of requiring a "friendly facial expression" because it is is essential in the competitive airline industry.

Belew said Cox was ired for violating company policy, not because of sex discrimination.

In his ruling, the judge noted that American Airlines has continued to hire and train male flight attendants.

One of Cox's supervisors wrote following a flight, "Smiling is an integral part of the job, so concentrate on a friendly facial expression."

The supervisor also said Cox did not start conversations with passengers. Court papers show that Cox responded that he needed "more discretion on when to smile at male passengers, but that he would strive to smile more."

The ruling returned Thursday followed a one-day trial on the suit Feb. 25.

Houston Lighting & Power to make refund

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. will be refunding $145 million to its customers this summer because of lower-than-expected prices for natural gas and a renegotiated coal supply contract, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

The newspaper reported that the refund, likely to be made in the form of a credit on monthly bills, will amount to about $30 for residential customers.

Utility spokesman Graham Painter would not comment on the refund, although the power company had indicated earlier that one would be coming in the summer.

The utility and Gov. Mark White were to hold a joint news conference later today at a Houston Lighting & Power Co. plant where details of the refund were expected to be released.

The refund would offset most of a $168.2 million rate increase the utility won in January. A similar refund was made last year when the utility returned $72 million to its users in the form of credits on electric bills in August and September, when customers traditionally face their highest bills because of heavy air conditioning usage.

In March, HL&P said its coal costs would be trimmed by $60 million thanks to a new agreement with Burlington Northern and Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe railroads.

In addition, natural gas rates paid by the utility have fallen by 8 percent. Although Houston Lighting & Power had anticipated higher gas prices this year, the soft gas market has meant lower prices than expected.

The utility uses natural gas and coal to fuel its electric generating plants.

Coal mining up from 1983

AUSTIN (AP) — Coal production by surface mining in Texas increased by 2,358,301 tons from 1983 to 1984, the Railroad Commission reported Thursday. The commission said production last year totaled 41,283,698 tons.

Panola County reported the highest production with 11,524,714 tons, and Titus County ranked second with 9,468,620 tons, the commission said.

Navy makes list of gifts from General Dynamics

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Navy has released a detailed accounting of more than $67,628 in gifts given by the General Dynamics Corp. to Adm. Hyman Rickover over 16 years.

The list of gifts, which Rickover received from 1961 to 1977 while he — as the Navy's director of nuclear submarines — oversaw billions of dollars of construction at General Dynamics' Electric Boat division, was disclosed in the investigative report of the Navy's Ad Hoc Gratuities Board.

Based on the board's findings, Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. fined General Dynamics $676,283 on May 21 and censured the admiral, who retired in 1981. Lehman said then that many of the gifts had been "suggested, encouraged and even demanded" by Rickover. On Monday the Navy announced that the company had agreed to pay the penalty.

The report disclosed a long pattern of giving what Navy investigators called "bizarre trinkets" to Rickover, much of it carried out with the knowledge of senior General Dynamics executives.

"Why, repeatedly over such a long period of years, did General Dynamics shower Admiral Rickover with these bizarre trinkets?" the report asked. "The record convinces us that senior managers of General Dynamics considered that providing these gratuities was in the best interests of the corporation."

The list of gifts was:

A pair of earrings and a jade pendant valued at $1,125, plus the cost of sending a company employee to deliver the jewelry to Rickover, estimated at $144.73.

Two wooden mailboxes constructed in an Electric Boat shop and delivered to Rickover's fiancee; estimated cost $385.40.

Twelve fruit knives with water buffalo horn handles fashioned by the Electric Boat shop based on a sample provided by Rickover; estimated cost $112.07.

Jewelry repair services provided by Electric Boat employees; estimated cost $144.73.

Dry cleaning and pressing of Rickover's civilian suits during sea trials; $1,871.

Chauffeur services, including driving Rickover and his son from a New England boy's camp; estimated cost $16,387.13.

A used set of Encyclopedia Britannica packaged by Electric Boat and delivered to Rickover; cost $444.73.

Eleven combination hotplate and bain-maries, kitchen devices in which one vessel is placed within another for cooking or warming; estimated cost $474.73.

Twelve shower curtains of a style Rickover had admired in a hotel; $288.73.

Twelve teak or mahogany boxes for storing research papers; $868.38.

An assortment of food and other amenities supplied for Rickover's use during sea trials, including fresh fish, books, fruit, electric toothbrushes, and candy; $12,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices headed lower today as interest rates jumped in the credit markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which hit record highs Wednesday and Thursday, dropped 5.48 to 1,321.80 by noontime today on Wall Street.

Losers held a 8-5 lead over gainers in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that the civilian unemployment rate held steady at 7.3 percent in May.

Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell by $15 to $20 for every $1,000 in face value.

Rates on short-term Treasury bills rose as much as 23 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

What do you mean by 'insured' funds?

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My sister has a large sum to invest and is getting "expert" advice from friends. I use the word "expert" very loosely. Her friends tell her not to invest in any tax-free mutual fund, unless it is insured.

I disagree. I invest in an uninsured tax-free mutual fund and am very happy with the results. What do you say?

Doyle

A. Find out exactly what your sister's friends mean by "insured" tax-free mutual funds. There are no such things.

A tax-free mutual fund invests in "municipal" debt securities, issued by states and their political subdivisions. Those securities pay interest that is not subject to federal income tax. The mutual fund collects that interest and, after deducting its operating expenses, passes the money along to fund shareholders — also tax free.

There are two basic types of tax-free mutual funds.

One invests in long-term municipal bonds, which pay interest lower than the interest on taxable bonds. As a result, the yield to shareholders in that type of fund is lower than the yield to shareholders of a fund holding corporate bonds. Because the market prices of long-term municipal bonds rise and fall — going in the opposite direction of interest rates — the share values of mutual funds holding long-term municipals also go up and down.

Some tax-free mutual funds invest only in insured municipal bonds. That insurance, provided by private companies, guarantees the interest payments and that the face amount of the bonds will be paid when the bonds mature.

It does not protect against the "market risk" of fluctuating bond prices and the corresponding changes in share values of a mutual fund holding municipal bonds. If your sister invests in that type of fund and later redeems her shares, she might have a profit or a loss.

The other type is the tax-free money market mutual fund, which invests in short-term municipal debt securities. This kind of fund uses accounting methods that keep its share value constant — at $1, in most such funds — and provides an even lower yield. That's because short-term debt securities pay lower interest than long-term bonds.

However, no one has ever lost any money in tax-free money market mutual funds. Shares can always be redeemed at the price paid when they were purchased.

It boils down to this. If your sister invests in a tax-free mutual fund holding long-term municipal bonds, she'll get a reasonably high yield but will take on some risk. If she chooses a tax-free money market mutual fund, she'll get a lower yield and have no real risk.

• • •

Q. You stated that money market mutual funds are "virtually risk free." Does this mean that money market mutual funds are guaranteed up to $100,000? I am referring to money market mutual funds issued by banks and savings and loan associations.

A. Then, you're not referring to money market mutual funds. Banks and S&Ls do not issue money market mutual funds. They are prohibited from doing so.

Banks and S&Ls have money market deposit accounts, which are deposit accounts — not mutual funds. Along with other deposits covered by either the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. or the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. they are rock-solid safe up to $100,000.

Money market mutual funds, which are investment companies, have neither FDIC nor FSLIC coverage. However, there has been just one case in which money market mutual fund investors lost money — and that was only seven cents on the dollar.

• • •

Q. I have been getting the run-around from the people who manage the "growth" mutual fund in which I have put money. They won't tell me if my investment is insured. What's the answer?

A. It's not. When you invest in that kind of mutual fund, you own shares representing indirect ownership in the stocks the fund holds. The value of your shares rises or falls in line with the prices of the fund's investments.

A growth mutual fund invests in stocks that are expected to rise in value. That expectation might or might not pan out. Summed up, you've taken on risk, in hopes of financial reward.

West Texas cotton plagued by rains, grasshoppers

AGRICULTURE

The weather has been varied over our area during the last two weeks. Temperatures were at or over 100 degrees several days last week. However, two weeks ago, low temperatures reached as low as the 40s for several nights. Thunderstorms and hail have been the rule for Midland County the last two weeks.

Most Far West Texas cotton is up and growing. Growth stages range from the cotyledon stage to squaring. Hail and cool weather have caused crop delays in the Far West. In the sandy lands of the lower High Plains counties, sudden heavy rains have "washed in" some plantings and hail has destroyed many stands. Some damage due to blowing sand has occurred and in irrigated areas, some seedling damage has occurred by salt (left by irrigation water) being splashed by showers onto cotton seedlings.

Jumbo grasshoppers are still plaguing cotton from Big Lake through Garden City and St. Lawrence up to the Big Spring Area. Farmers are fighting them successfully with aerial and ground rig applications.

Alfalfa is growing well across Midland county. The biggest problem at present is not the pests, but the price. With hay prices in the $90 per ton range, most growers are wishing they could sell 1985 hay at 1984 prices.

Virtually everyone is involved in forestry — at last urban forestry. Urban forestry is the management of trees in areas where man has significantly affected the "natural" ecosystem by his structures or manipulations. This includes large cities, small communities and even areas outside of municipal boundaries.

Everyone should be interested in urban forestry since trees provide many benefits. In the summer, trees help moderate temperatures by controlling solar radiation. They also aid in moderating air temperatures through evapotranspiration (water vapor evaporating from leaves). For example, a large tree with sufficient soil moisture can give off about 88 gallons of water in one day. This is comparable to five room-size air conditioners.

In the winter, trees reduce wind velocity and create sheltered zones. Proper planting of shelter belts can reduce windspeeds by 50 percent for distances up to 20 times the height of the tallest trees.

When planted close to a house on the prevailing wind side, conifers (cone-bearing evergreen trees and shrubs) create a "dead air space" that can reduce heat loss from the house. In northern areas, this can mean a 23 percent fuel savings.

Many communities in the northeastern and midwestern United States have had active forestry programs for years, but Texas town officials are just now realizing the advantages of trees. However, tree planting programs may prove to be a future burden if little consideration is given to future maintenance problems, drought resistance, size and adaptability to the planting site.

Canadian report supporting U.S. trade ignores farmers' protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a time when some Americans appear ready to launch a trade war with Canada to protect livestock producers from imports, the Canadian embassy here has distributed a report telling how important two-way trade is to the United States.

Some states, including Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, recently moved to ban imports of Canadian livestock and meat on grounds it could contain illegal traces of antibiotics.

In South Dakota, for example, Gov. Bill Janklow ordered the state's highway patrol to set up checkpoints to keep watch for shipments of livestock and meat from Canada.

The federal government recently imposed countervailing duties on imports of Canadian hogs and pork, which have been shipped into the U.S. market in increasing numbers in recent years. American pork producers protest that the imports drive down prices.

No mention of the unrest among U.S. farmers is included in the currentissue of Canada Today magazine, which promotesa long, peaceful and profitable relationship between the two North American neighbors. Agricultural trade is not singled out, however.

Last year, the report said, Canada and the United States exchanged $118.6 billion (U.S. value) worth of goods, most of it free of tariffs.

"The United States sells more to the province of Ontario than it does to Japan or to all of Western Europe," the report said. "And Canada sells more to the United States than it does to the rest of the world."

According to the Agriculture Department, U.S. farm exports to Canada in 1984 were worth more than $1.96 billion, up 6 percent from calendar 1983. Imports of Canadian agricultural products, meanwhile, jumped 23 percent last year to almost $1.85 billion.

The U.S. farm trade surplus, in other words, was about $116 million. Only five years ago the U.S. margin was $850 million.

"This narrowing U.S. surplus coincides with a steady erosion in the value of the Canadian dollar," the department's Economic Research Service said in an export review. "If present trends continue, the United States could become a net agricultural importer from Canada in 1985."

The Canadian magazine's report said that more than 80 percent of total trade between the two countries will be either duty-free or taxed less than 5 percent.

"We live, however, in a time of increasing global competition, and the continuation of the free flow is a matter of great concern to both countries," the report said.

Block: Wheat first of many farm exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Firing the first shot from its new farm export weapon, the United States has announced a million-ton subsidized sale of wheat to Algeria.

Agriculture Secretary John Block announced the sale this week as the first transaction under what could total $2 billion in export subsidies over the next three years.

Block said the sale would add $117 million to American farm exports this year and would strike back at what the United States considers unfair subsidies which the European Economic Community has used to steal U.S. customers, especially in the Mediterranean region.

"We have found our back to the wall, and we are prepared to go out and compete and play some hardball if we have to," Block said in announcing the sale, which represents one-third of Algeria's annual wheat import needs. "It is a risky, yet necessary step."

The U.S. share of the Algerian wheat market dropped from 41 percent in 1979-80 to 16 percent five years later. During the same period EEC exports to that country grew from 29 percent to 59 percent.

"The world must realize that the American farmer has lost 25 percent of our export markets in the last five years," Block said."That is economically nothing short of intolerable, and politically it is intolerable."

Block said the sale would be limited to non-durum wheat, the kind used to make bread.

Currently, Block is finishing six days of meetings with agriculture officials in the Netherlands, Belgium and France. He has said the EEC will be one of the primary targets of the new program, known as export PIK, or payment in kind.

Besides restoring U.S. market share abroad, Block said, export PIK is intended as leverage to bring other agricultural exporters to the bargaining table to work on "some international rules of order" to govern farm trade.

Under the export program, the government will give away federally owned commodities acquired under price support programs to exporters who complete sales to countries periodically targeted by the U.S. government.

The amount of the commodity given away will depend on competing bids submitted by exporting companies. Presumably, the government subsidy would be passed through to the ultimate purchaser to bring down the overall price of the deal, but the department has not yet specified exactly how that part of the program will work.

House stops Block's vote on farm quotas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved and sent to the Senate legislation barring Agriculture Secretary John Block from holding a July vote among the nation's wheat producers on whether to institute strict production quotas for 1986.

On a voice vote, the House moved this week to require Block to postpone the vote now scheduled for July 19-26. In the Senate, the Agriculture Committee has approved a similar bill, but with softer language giving Block discretion to put off the vote, not requiring him to do so.

Current farm law expires Sept. 30. If no law is written by then to replace it, policy would revert to a largely outdated law passed in 1938. That law requires farmer referendums on whether to impose acreage controls and marketing quotas on certain commodities, of which wheat is the first to be planted.

Funding drained for 31 water projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, by a one-vote margin, has eliminated 31 Corps of Engineers water projects, cleaning out a traditional pork barrel that critics say has put political connections before a project's merits.

The dams and harbor deepenings were slashed Thursday on a 203-202 vote from a fiscal 1985 supplemental spending bill as insurgents led by Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., hung defeat on one of the House's most powerful old-guarders, Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

"It was a fight between the old way of doing things and the new," said Edgar, one of a group of younger House members who say that a project's merits, not a representative's influence, should be the prime consideration.

The insurgents took aim on 31 corps projects that had been approved by Whitten's panel but had not been authorized by the Public Works and Transportation Committee, as required by the congressional budget process.

Left in the bill were funds to begin 31 other corps projects that have been endorsed by Public Works and four Bureau of Reclamation projects previously authorized by the House Interior Committee.

During the debate, Whitten attempted to shift the focus of the battle to make the fight appear to be between Congress and the Reagan administration's budget office, which supported only five of the deleted projects.

"Are we going to let a budget office determine what projects we have?" Whitten said. "The time has come for Congress to speak out. When did it get to be bad to look after your own country?"

A foe of the scuttled projects, Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., called the debate "our annual performance of rolling out the (pork) barrel."

Rep. Joe Skeen, R-N.M., countered with, "One man's pork barrel is another man's priority."

Edgar's amendment, supported by Public Works committee leaders, cut the spending proposed by Whitten from $150 million to $50 million, which Edgar says is enough to get the approved projects under way.

The action left the estimated completion cost of the surviving projects at about $1.5 billion. The future price tag for Whitten's package was about $4.12 billion.

Thursday's tussle was another chapter in a congressional stalemate that has resulted in no new water project starts being voted into law by Congress since 1976.

The long fight has pitted people like Edgar against a traditional system that has often seen projects approved in part because members were on the right committees or were friends with people who were.

The younger members are pushing for a law that will require projects to be approved on the basis of need and with a greater share of costs being paid by areas directly benefiting. The House passed a bill to do this last year, but it died in the Senate.

Edgar said Thursday's vote was the House's way of saying, "Let's get our system in order so that only the worthy projects get through."

He conceded, however, that the victory could unravel later this year after the Senate passes its own supplemental appropriations bill and the matter reaches a joint conference committee, which could attempt to restore any or all of the chopped projects.

"It may be a short snapshot. It may not be a long-term trend," Edgar said.

But Jill Lancelot, director of congressional affairs for the National Taxpayers Union, called the House vote "significant."

"It took some of the fat out of the pork," she said. "It shows that Congress hopefully is getting serious about cutting the deficit and getting rid of the boondoggles."

Two Texas projects dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following is a list of Corps of Engineers water projects in Texas originally contained in the fiscal 1985 supplemental appropriations bill debated by the House on Thursday.

A "D" following the dollar figure means that the project was not authorized under the congressional budget process and was deleted from the bill by a 203-202 vote. Funding for projects without the "D" was voted by the House. The dollar figures are the estimated costs of eventually completing projects.

TEXAS

Clear Creek, flood control, $94.8 million.
Colorado River and tributaries at Austin, flood control, $14.6 million. D.
Freeport Harbor, jetty and deep draft navigation, $91.6 million.
Lake Wichita Creek, flood control, $17.8 million. D.
Town Bluff, hydroelectric construction, $20 million.

Espionage blamed on loose security clearance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Espionage will become a bigger problem for the U.S. government unless its system for issuing security clearances is improved, a leading Senate expert on national security has warned.

"We're being overwhelmed by numbers," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who explained that the 4.2 million people holding various clearances is so large that only the most cursory types of background checks often are made.

Nunn and Sen. William Roth, R-Del., issued a report Thursday by the Senate Permanent Committee on Investigations that calls for cutting in half within two years the number of people with clearances.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the Pentagon would reduce the number of people who have access to secret information, but he did not say how much of a reduction was planned.

"The numbers of people who have clearances is too large and we are going to cut that down," Weinberger said in the interview published in today's edition of the New York Times.

The Senate panel's,report also recommends classifying fewer documents and making more intensive background checks and regular reinvestigations of people holding secret and top secret clearances.

But Nunn said that even if all the panel's recommendations are followed, that's no guarantee that future spies will be stopped.

"We can't look at the Walker case and say that we're going to prevent every type of case like this in the future," Nunn said, referring to recent arrests in an alleged Navy family spy ring.

"But if we don't make some of these changes, then what we've seen in recent months will be very small compared to what we will see," he warned.

Nunn said the Navy doesn't even have a record in Washington that Michael Walker, one of the men arrested in the case, had a security clearance.

That is because no central record keeping office exists and 3,000 different Navy offices around the world can grant the clearances, Nunn said.

Walker's clearance may be aboard the aircraft carrier Nimitz where he was arrested, but "that information is not available and may not be available until the ship comes back," Nunn said.

Reinvestigations should be increased because "studies have shown that rarely do people enter federal service intending to commit espionage," Nunn said. "It is usually after they have been on the job for a time that, for a variety of reasons, they become vulnerable to Soviet recruitment attempts."

Nunn and Roth said 4.2 million Americans have clearances of one type or another and that figure is too high for effective checks to be made to determine qualifications.

NATION IN BRIEF

School board head calls gay school a 'lighthouse'

NEW YORK (AP) — The opening of the nation's first public high school for homosexuals has stirred a debate over whether gay teen-agers are helped or hindered in a segregated school setting.

"It's an act of compassion on the part of the school board. New York will be a lighthouse school district that will be watched by educators around the country," said Tom Shannon, executive director of the National School Boards Association in Reston, Va.

A more skeptical view was expressed by Sandra Feldman, executive director of the United Federation of Teachers, the union representing New York City teachers, who said it's unclear whether teens should be regarded as confirmed homosexuals.

The school opened in April in a Greenwich Village church, serving 20 homosexual teen-agers — 14 boys and six girls ranging from 14 to 19 years old. Most had either dropped out of regular high schools or were chronic truants.

Gramm wants truck law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though the Department of Transportation has agreed to change its interpretation of a new motor safety law, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm wants the law amended to make sure Mexican truckers will be able to cross the border.

Gramm said the DOT erred when it interpreted the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984, which goes into effect this summer, as barring all Mexican trucks carrying non-agricultural products. They account for 90 percent of border truck traffic, said Gramm.

Jury out on Von Bulow

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — After six weeks of testimony from 42 witnesses in the attempted murder retrial of Claus von Bulow, both the prosecution and defense asked jurors to consider the "black bag" in their deliberations.

The jury was to get the case today after final instructions from Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande.

The black vinyl calculator case, assistant Attorney General Marc DeSisto contends, held insulin and hypodermic syringes that the Danish-born socialite twice used to induce comas in his wife, utilities heiress Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, 53, in 1979 and 1980.

"Can you see it?" DeSisto asked during his 75-minute closing argument Thursday, holding up the bag and urging the panel to visualize von Bulow loading a needle with with the surgar-regulating hormone and injecting his wife.

But defense lawyer Thomas P. Puccio, in his two-hour closing, asked jurors to dismiss the black bag, saying the state had never proved the bag was von Bulow's or that it had contained insulin.

Rather opposed to criticism used for political ends

Hearst News Service

ENTERTAINMENT

Dan Rather

Dan Rather believes people have every right to scrutinize news stories and criticize his journalism. But it's another thing when the criticism is just a guise for political propaganda.

"It's important for us to acknowledge it when we've done a poor job," said the CBS-TV news anchorman. "But we need to speak up and point out what is, as opposed to what appears to be."

The CBS image in general and that of Rather in particular have been under continuous attack lately from the right, especially from conservative Sen. Jesse Helms and Cable News Network owner Ted Turner, who've been sounding off about taking over CBS and replacing Rather.

Members of Fairness in Media, the right-wing group backing takeover efforts, claim the "offenses" of the other two networks pale in comparison with those of CBS. They charged Rather with going "too easy" on Fidel Castro in a recent interview. And they chastized Rather for being the only network anchor not to personally cover President Reagan's speech at Bitburg.

Rather called "completely fair" a recent Washington Post column blasting CBS' decision not to send him to Bitburg.

"Don't misunderstand me," he said. "It was a tough call, falling under the heading you-can't-be-everywhere-at-once (Charles Kuralt handled the Bitburg speech, while Rather attended a CBS News reunion). I think they (his bosses) made the right decision. But it was fair criticism."

Not so the Castro interview, Rather said.

"The fact of the matter is, the Castro interview was a tough interview. I asked Castro questions nobody else had asked him. He didn't like the interview, and he didn't like the questions I asked."

Rather said the criticism that he was too soft on Castro started as a political propaganda campaign by people who said, in effect, "Here is a chance to tar CBS and to tar Dan Rather. If he is going to interview Fidel Castro, we're going to make him pay a price.'

"I don't think anyone in this country, be they conservative, liberal or mugwump, wants a new era of McCarthyism. I don't think we're in one, but we are seeing some elements of one. All I ask of people who read that kind of criticism is, keep in mind the possibility that that's what we have at work here."

Rather says Americans have become too wise about television, particularly TV news, to be taken in for long.

"They have a very good — I'll clean it up and say bullfeathers — detector. If you want to see an American's neck swell, try to tell him where to line up or what to think, or try to convince him of some partisan political ploy while dressing it up as news," he said.

A recent U.S. News and World Report poll says that a wide majority of Americans trust network news and want to see no change in who controls it. The poll also shows Rather ranks second only to Walter Cronkite as the most trusted man on television. Rather said he's pleased.

"Nothing is more important to us than our reputation for accuracy and fairness, nothing," he said. But he said trust has to be earned every day, and he doesn't flatter himself that his name is up there because of what he has done so much as what CBS has done for 50 years.

Despite attacks and weeks spent testifying in court, Rather says he has not felt under siege this past year. Any reporter worthy of the name must be able to take the heat, he said. And while he's sometimes been frustrated that "other things" have deflected his attention from his duties, he said that, corny as it may sound, he's so blessed and lucky to have his job he doesn't spend much time sulking or pouting.

"I don't want this to sound self-serving, but the fact of the matter is we (CBS) lead, and when you lead you're going to take more of the heat than those who don't."

Rather regrets that it's in the nature of TV that sometimes the persona of the anchorman is overblown. With few exceptions, he said experienced newspeople keep a fix on the fact that the news is the news, and the people who bring it to the public are not. People who let stardom get out of hand, he said, are either "not very experienced or people who have some deep problems they are trying to solve with extra doses of ego."

Despite the name-calling from Fairness in Media, Rather said he doesn't worry that the public is trying to pin labels on him or his coverage.

"Conservative and liberal — those words don't mean very much any more. They (the viewers) want to know, can this guy be trusted? Does this man care about what he's saying? Does he know what he's talking about? If the answers to those questions are positive, I don't think they attach any political labels."

Stallone says God, United Artists have been good to him

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — They call him Sly, which is a lot easier than his real name and more in keeping with the hard-muscled screen persona of Sylvester Stallone.

"Being named Sylvester was a burden for a kid growing up," he sighs. "I was in school at the height of the 'Sylvester and Tweedie Bird' cartoons, and my name was an automatic fistfight at any school I attended.

"I changed to Mike for about eight years, just to avoid the hassle. When I went to New York to be an actor, I figured that if Humphrey Bogart could make it with the name of Humphrey, I had a chance with Sylvester."

The only person close to him who still calls the actor Sylvester is his girlfriend, Brigitte Nielsen, who co-stars with Stallone in "Rocky IV."

"I told her, 'If you want to bother with all those syllables, go ahead,'" said Stallone.

The Stallone house is on a shady street a few blocks north of Sunset Boulevard in Pacific Palisades, not far from where President and Mrs. Reagan used to live. However, don't plan on dropping in; the place is surrounded by an 8-foot brick wall topped by a row of spikes. The gabled French villa is magnificently furnished and decorated with huge paintings, modern and classical, including a full-length portrait of Stallone as Rocky.

"God has been good to me," the actor smiled, "and so has United Artists." His salary as writer, director and star of "Rocky IV" was $15 million.

"Everything is relative, and everyone will do all right," he philosophized. "Even if 'IV' does half as well as 'III', it will show a profit on its cost of $32 million. 'Rocky' made $108 million in rentals (actual return to the studio, not theater gross), 'II' made $80 million, 'III' made $130 million."

He recalled his own earnings from the first film: $620 a week — $340 take-home — as an actor, $8,000 for the script.

Sylvester Stallone in person is a surprise. First of all, his size — at 5 feet, 10 inches he seems less commanding than he does in the ring as Rocky. His conversation isn't what one expects, either. He's witty, articulate, even intellectual.

"People think of me as being raised in the gutters of New York," he said, "but I also spent a lot of my time in a nice background in the South. It's just that in films I've been called on to use my New Yorkese."

He plans to draw on his Southern background for what he hopes will be his next movie: the life of Edgar Allan Poe. That's right, Sylvester Stallone as the dark poet.

"It's my first script and probably my best," he said.

"I'm considered a physical filmmaker, and I suppose I am. I don't suppose I am, I know I am. But I'm really a writer; that's the basis of all my creative endeavor. I sincerely believe I could portray someone who is passionately intellectual."

For the Poe film, Stallone said he would lower his top-form 175 pounds to his weight as a war prisoner in 1981's "Victory." Transforming his body to fit his film roles has become a consistent and punishing routine.

Now 38, even he is sensing that he may be pushing his limits. He recently was forced to take a three-week break in filming "Rocky IV" when boxing blows caused his heart to bleed.

The toughest film, he said, was "Rambo: First Blood Part II." In "First Blood," Stallone played a disgruntled Vietnam War veteran who staged a one-man resistance against the authorities. Now he's back, hired by the CIA to rescue POWs in Vietnam.

Reviews for "Rambo" have been mixed, some critics praising it as an allegory, others deploring its violence.

Stallone recalled of the Acapulco location: "The heat was 110 degrees, and I was running all day, then working out until after midnight. I was consuming 12,000 calories a day and still losing weight. If I ate like that under normal conditions, I'd end up weighing 250 pounds."

He admitted that he pushed himself hard, perhaps too hard.

"It can become dangerous, and usually between pictures I can eat like a normal person for two months," he said. "But I haven't stopped this routine for 2½ years.

"Am I having any fun? The answer is no. But it's not enough just to be happy in this world."

What is important, he said, is to face a challenge and conquer it. Like Rocky. Like Rambo.

Montalban has time to read, have social life

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — After seven years of making fictional characters' dreams come true on "Fantasy Island," Ricardo Montalban is realizing his own dream. He's relaxing, reading and enjoying a social life without being under financial pressure.

It was "Fantasy Island" that made this fantasy a reality because, as Montalban is the first to say, his career before the series had been checkered. He had, upon occasion, found time to relax, read and enjoy a social life — but not by his own choosing. His leisure was more often a matter of no suitable job offers than of personal decision. Now, however, he's able to enjoy the luxury of not working through choice.

"After seven years on television," he says, "I thought it was time not only to give myself a rest but to give the public a rest. The public had seen me every week for so long I thought perhaps it might get tired of me unless I took a year or two off. Fortunately, I can afford to do that now.

"Oh, yes, I've been offered guest roles and a television movie, but I'm giving myself free time in which to see old friends I've neglected and to be with my family."

Yet, in spite of this resolve, Montalban will appear on television Wednesday as part of a special production: "The Kraft All-Star Salute to Ford's Theater." A command performance for President and Mrs. Reagan, the show will feature top talent demonstrating popular art forms, including opera, dance, popular and rock music, comedy and magic.

Montalban, who will narrate historical segments, is keen about participating because of the Ford's Theater's significant place in American history and culture.

"It hasn't been easy to maintain my career...In Hollywood, if you have a foreign-sounding name or a trace of an accent you are put into a pigeonhole.

"Fortunately, my character on 'Fantasy Island' was a man of mystery. He had no particular ethnic background. So I was accepted as Mr. Roarke."

While he is a modest man, Montalban has to admit that he gets a large quantity of fan mail that's "very flattering."

"I don't think it's my physical attributes people find acceptable so much as my attitude," he says. "And I owe that to my parents. I was brought up with certain behavior instilled in me. I was taught to look at ladies with the eyes of a gentleman."

In an age when the very term "lady" is an affront to some of the feminine sex, Montalban's instinctive courtliness might be more of a liability than an asset.

"I was taught that good manners are simply an extension of the love you should feel for your neighbor. By practicing them, you are only doing little acts of kindness because you care about your fellowman. And, yes, I would open a door for a man."

Israelis celebrating pullout from Lebanon

AP Laserphoto

An Israeli soldier and his friend share a toast at a celebration honoring the withdrawal from Lebanon.

ACHZIV, Israel (AP) — Hundreds of Israeli soldiers clapped and sang to the sound of folk music, celebrating their pullout from Lebanon three years to the day after the controversial and costly invasion began.

Maj. Gen. Ori Orr, commander of Israeli troops in Lebanon, told the jubilant soldiers Thursday that, "This party marks the end of a chapter, but not the end of a period. The period will only end when there is quiet on the northern border."

"Many people think our problems have been solved, but I want you to know that our work is by no means over," Orr said.

He told The Associated Press the operation to pull Israeli troops out of south Lebanon, which had begun Feb. 16, had been completed.

"The withdrawal is actually over, but some troops will continue to go in and out," Orr said during the celebration in a seafront park 2½ miles from the border.

The celebration marked the end of an invasion that became the first of Israel's six wars to shatter the national consensus.

Initially, most Israelis favored the push to destroy Palestinian bases in southern Lebanon, believing it would be a short-lived military operation.

But within weeks, the first demonstration against the war had been held. As the operation spread all the way to Beirut many Israelis felt the government had lied to them and Israel drew harsh international criticism.

Orr said Israeli troops would continue to provide support for the South Lebanon Army, a Christian-dominated militia of about 2,000 men trained by Israel. More than 25,000 Israeli soldiers were in Lebanon at the height of the war.

The Lebanese Shiite Moslem militia Amal has kept to an unwritten understanding that it would not attack Israel or the border security zone from territories evacuated by the Israeli army.

Syria, Lebanon agree to 'strike force'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Factional fighting claimed eight lives in Beirut today and a newspaper reported that Syria and Lebanon had agreed to form a 5,000-man "strike force" to restore peace in the Lebanese capital.

"The main task of the strike force would be to consolidate security in greater Beirut, dismantle the Green Line and collect the heavy weapons from all rival militias and parties," Cabinet minister Joseph Hashem was quoted as telling the Daily Star independent newspaper.

The Green Line cuts Beirut into mostly Christian and Moslem sides. It has been the scene of almost daily fighting for years.

In the northern port of Tripoli, police said the pro-Syrian "Arabian Knights" militia battled through the night with grenades and mortars against the fundamentalist "Islamic Unification" movement, which backs the Palestinians. They said six people were killed and 25 wounded.

Shiite Moslem forces and Palestinian guerrillas exchanged sporadic gunfire and rocket-propelled grenades in Beirut's besieged refugee camps of Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh. Police said two people were killed and 15 others wounded.

This raised the known toll from battles for the camps to at least 518 killed and 2,135 injured since the Amal Shiite forces attacked the Palestinian shantytowns in mid-May to prevent guerrillas from rebuilding the power base they maintained before Israel invaded in 1982.

"The main task of the strike force would be to consolidate security in greater Beirut, dismantle the Green Line and collect the heavy weapons from all rival militias and parties."

— Joseph Hashem, Cabinet minister

The Shiite militias, supported in their assaults by the mainly Shiite 6th Brigade of the fractured Lebanese army, fear a rebirth of Palestinian forces could bring bloody reprisals from Israel.

But Justice Minister Nabih Berri, leader of the dominant Shiite Amal militia, has signalled willingness to make peace with the Palestinians if Israel maintains troops in south Lebanon.

Israel said it completed its withdrawal from Lebanon on Thursday, but left behind a token force of several hundred troops.

Berri, the justice minister, was quoted by the new Beirut newspaper al-Hakika as saying that if Israeli soldiers remained, the Shiites would need to ally with the Palestinians to strike at the troops.

NATO talks lend no endorsement

ESTORIL, Portugal (AP) — In a setback for U.S. arms control strategy, NATO foreign ministers concluded a two-day conference today without endorsing President Reagan's controversial "Star Wars" initiative.

The French and Danes balked at formally endorsing research into a space-based anti-missile system, and the final statement failed to put the North Atlantic Treaty Organization squarely behind one of the key elements of Reagan's defense policy.

Britain's Lord Carrington, NATO secretary-general, said at a news conference that the United States sought endorsement for the Star Wars research. "We didn't have a row," he said, but he added that France and Denmark opposed other allies on the topic.

Some allies believe "if you mention research it commits you to the future and to deployment," Carrington said. The research is so complicated that deployment is not envisioned until the next decade.

The NATO ministers welcomed U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva on strategic and intermediate range weapons, as well as on "defense and space systems."

"These negotiations are intended to work out between the two countries effective agreements aimed at preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on earth, at limiting and reducing nuclear arms, and at strengthening strategic stability," the statment said.

"We strongly support U.S. efforts in all three areas of negotiation, and we call on the Soviet Union to adopt a positive approach," it said.

U.S. and French officials had said in advance that no endorsement of the research effort, known as the Strategic Defense Initiative would be forthcoming.

At a news conference after the statement was issued, British Foreign Secretary Goeffrey Howe said, "One would have been happier if there had been a full endorsement" of the $26 billion research project.

"It's no secret that there were various attitudes about the longer-term implications of this," he said.

WORLD in brief

Sikh 'martyrs' praised

AGWAN-KHURD, India (AP) — To most Indians, the two Sikhs accused of assassinating Indira Gandhi are evil incarnate. But in Sikh-dominated Punjab state, they are extolled by radical youths as martyrs, praised by neighbors as God-fearing and adored by their parents.

Satwant Singh, the surviving 22-year-old accused in the slaying, is remembered in this tiny northern hamlet as encouraging children to study hard so they could rise above poverty and join the police or the army.

Beant Singh, who the government alleged was the mastermind in the Oct. 31, 1984, assassination, was killed by commandos. He is remembered in his village of Maloya near Chandigarh as quiet and reserved. He never mentioned he was one of Mrs. Gandhi's most trusted guards.

Satwant Singh, also a security guard, is on trial for murder and conspiracy along with two other Sikhs, Beant Singh's uncle and a policeman charged with conspiracy in the slaying.

Funds for Bhopal sought

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two top Indian officials left for the United States today to discuss an out-of-court settlement with the Union Carbide Corp. for victims of last year's Bhopal gas disaster, officials said.

Law Minister Asoke Sen and Attorney General K. Parasaran are scheduled to hold talks in New York with Carbide officials, possibly including Warren Anderson, chairman of the multinational, a ministry official said.

Methyl isocyanate gas leaked from the company's pesticide plant last Dec. 3, killing more than 2,000 people and injuring thousands of others.

Agca testifies again

ROME (AP) — The man who shot and seriously wounded Pope John Paul II four years ago testified today that his personal motive for the attack was to draw the West's attention to problems of the Third World.

Mehmet Ali Agca testified for the third day today in the trial of three Bulgarians and four Turks charged with complicity in the assassination attempt. Agca claims they were involved with him in a conspiracy to kill the pope.

He was not asked about his claims that he was offered a large sum of money to kill the pope or about the alleged conspiracy.

Iraqi warplanes attack

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi warplanes attacked several Iranian cities overnight, including the capital Tehran, war reports said.

The Iraqi military spokesman said his country would "continue to launch fierce attacks deep inside Iran until the leaders of the aggression (Iranian leaders) accept a total end to the war."

Iraq said its warplanes launched three "devastating raids" on Tehran. Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said the first raid succeeded in firing rockets into residential areas, but the second was thwarted by anti-aircraft fire.
